

Pearl Harbor Attacked 36 Years Ago, Today

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (UPI) — Thirty-six years ago Wednesday, the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor plunged the United States into World War II. This year, the anniversary of the Dec. 7, 1941, attack will be marked in Hawaii with memorial services, but for most Hawaii residents, the day will be no different from others. In Japan, the anniversary will go largely unnoticed. As an indication of the low-key nature of the observance, Navy Secretary W. Graham Clayton Jr., who was passing through Hawaii on his way to the Far East, did not plan to remain for the ceremony. At Pearl Harbor, two blasts from the naval shipyard whistle will mark the beginning and ending of a minute of silence at 7:55. Veterans groups will make the annual pilgrimage to the memorial above the sunken battleship USS Arizona to lay wreaths. The Army museum at Fort DeRussy will hold a public observance in the afternoon. More than 2,200 persons died when 353 Japanese planes attacked the harbor and nearby military airfields at 7:55 on that Sunday morning. At least 1,100 of them were aboard the Arizona, which was sunk in the harbor. Eighteen ships, including four battleships, were sunk or damaged, and 316 planes were destroyed or damaged. Japan lost fewer than 100 men, 29 planes and five midget submarines. The official U.S. report on the attack said, "The astoundingly disproportionate extent of losses marks the greatest military and naval disaster in our nation's history." The next day, President Franklin D. Roosevelt asked Congress to declare war on Japan. Three days later, the United States also entered the war against Germany. For most Hawaii visitors, it is the Arizona memorial that is the visible reminder of the attack. Six days a week, the Navy conducts free boat tours to the memorial, an alabaster shrine built in 1962 atop the ship's superstructure. More than 1.1 million visitors, ranging from local residents to tourists from Japan, have been to the shrine this year.

Only a rusted portion of the ship's ventilator and mast and the base for the No. 3 gun turret remain above the water line. The ship sits in 38 feet of water and 40 feet of mud, with two red-orange buoys marking its bow and stern, 608 feet apart. A flagpole attached to the Arizona's mast is the only flag the Navy allows to be flown over a decommissioned vessel.

Energy Bill Doubtful This Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate energy conferees are near an agreement on the general outlines of a compromise national energy bill, congressional and administration sources said Tuesday. However, congressional leaders raised doubts that work on the energy bill could be finished until early next year. Although energy conferees remained publicly stalemated and leaders said no overall deals had yet been fashioned, sources said that considerable progress has been made toward agreement in a series of behind-the-scenes negotiating sessions.

Discuss Concessions

Rex Granum, deputy White House press secretary, said Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the top Senate tax conferee, and Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, the leading House negotiator, met with Energy Secretary James Schlesinger on Saturday for "a rather extensive discussion ... of what sort of concessions we might be willing to make."

Granum indicated during the daily White House news briefing that the meeting included discussion of the possibility of Schlesinger allowing newly produced oil to be sold at world market prices.

Ashley said on Capitol Hill that "there's movement. Both sides want a bill, want to do their utmost to develop a bill ... We're exploring several areas (of possible agreement)."

Doubtful This Year

But, Ashley added, "it's going to be very difficult to get a bill this year."

Interviews with key energy conferees, and congressional and administration energy aides pointed toward a compromise bill that would contain the following elements:

— Approval of the crude oil tax, as proposed by Carter and passed by the House, with its revenues to be used as rebates for consumers in 1978 as the administration wants.

— Senate abandonment of its proposal to use revenues from the tax for a trust fund aimed at encouraging the oil and gas industry to develop exotic or difficult-to-produce forms of energy.

— Administration concessions that would lead to higher profits for U.S. oil

FACING THE MEDIA—Rex Dockery, named as Texas Tech's new head football coach Tuesday night, answers a question from a member of the media during a press conference. Dockery has been offensive coordinator at Tech since the 1975 season. He replaces Steve Sloan, who resigned last Thursday to accept a similar position at the

REX DOCKERY was named head coach at Texas Tech University Tuesday night, replacing Steve Sloan who resigned last Thursday to accept a similar position at the University of Mississippi.

Since Sloan's resignation, most of the speculation concerning his successor had surrounded Dockery, Sloan's offensive coordinator, and Texas A&M offensive coordinator Tom Wilson.

Wilson, a former star quarterback and assistant coach at Tech, had been thought by many to be the frontrunner in the race for the job, with Dockery also a strong candidate. However, speculation in some quarters in the last day and a half had shifted away from Wilson and toward Dockery. Tech athletic director J. T. King said that the decision to hire Dockery was made Tuesday morning.

Program Retains Continuity

The fact that Dockery's appointment would enable Tech's football program to retain continuity was a factor in his selection, King said.

In a prepared statement, Tech president Dr. Cecil Mackey said, "He (Dockery) can begin immediately where we are and move ahead quickly. His familiarity with our area, and especially our players and program, is a tremendous asset."

King said the details of Dockery's contract had not been discussed.

"We've been so busy, we haven't even talked about a contract," he said. "We'll talk about that today."

Sloan's annual salary at Tech was $43,000, and he was operating under a 10-year contract which received an annual one-year extension.

To Assemble Staff

Dockery, 35, said his primary objectives now are to assemble a staff and get on the recruiting trail.

"We have to regroup now," Dockery said. "I hope to keep as many of the present staff as possible, and I definitely feel that four or five will stay here. I hope to have a staff put together in seven to 10 days."

"I hope to get into full swing in recruiting quickly. I will start calling prospects tonight. I think we are in the middle of what can be a great recruiting year."

"Before Coach Sloan resigned, I thought we were further along in recruiting than we had ever been. I think we can pick up right where we left off. We might be a little behind now, but we have a month and a half or so left before signing date." The signing date is in early February.

Dockery added that West Texas would be Tech's initial target in recruiting.

He said he would most likely retain the split-back veer offense, which the Raiders have used very successfully the last three seasons.

"I'm pretty sure we'll stay with the split-back veer and the drop-back passing game," he said. "I'm sure I will still have my hands in the offense, but it's predicated to an extent on who we retain from the present staff."

Testimony Due From Park

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The United States and South Korea have reached agreement on having Tongsun Park testify on his alleged influence-buying activities in Washington and are now working on a joint announcement, a highly placed government source said today.

The source said the announcement is likely to be issued late this week or early next, ending weeks of negotiations that have strained U.S.-Korean relations.

The reported accord calls for Park first to be questioned in Seoul by American and South Korean officials, then to testify in the United States in return for an offer of immunity, the source said.

After the joint announcement, American and Korean justice department officials will work out a mutual prosecution assistance agreement to stipulate procedures for questioning Park, he said.

Neighbors Rescue Three Tots From Burning Eastside Home

By PAT TEAGUE

Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 23-YEAR-old Lubbock man climbed into a burning East Lubbock house Tuesday and carried an 11-month-old child to safety moments after two of the youngster's brothers had been rescued by a neighbor.

Jesse Hernandez of 2636 E. Auburn St. had been helping friends two houses down from the fire at 2918 E. Baylor St. when he heard a neighbor screaming.

Running to the burning home, Hernandez was told there was a baby trapped inside. Smashing in a back window, Hernandez climbed inside and snatched the toddler from his bed.

The fire, which broke out at the home of Tim and Wanda Norris, spread quickly from its origin in the kitchen to the living room, trapping three small children alone in the house.

Mrs. Lois Alonzo, 35, of 2919 E. Baylor St., had gone out about 3 p.m. to greet her children as they returned home from school.

"I saw smoke coming from the (Norris home) air conditioner," she said. "Then I smelled something terrible."

Mrs. Alonzo said she ran to the home of Mrs. Josephine Williams at 2917 E. Baylor St., just across the street from the Norris home, to get help.

In the meantime, Mrs. Alonzo said her daughter had notified the fire department.

Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Alonzo returned to the house, where the sound of children screaming could be heard.

"I thought about the kids. I started banging on the door for Tim," Mrs. Williams recalled.

Moments later, the woman said, she crawled into the black interior after kicking open the door.

"That was the only way I could get in," she said.

As she crawled on her knees inside the smoke-choked house, Mrs. Williams said the Norrises' three-year-old son, Bobo, ran by.

"I grabbed him and took him out into the yard," Mrs. Williams said.

Returning to the house where she could hear another child screaming, Mrs. Williams said she called to Ray Lynn Norris, 2, who ran to her in the darkness.

Flames and heat forced her to retreat, Mrs. Williams said, so she left the house knowing a third Norris child remained.

"I was already almost hysterical. I

Area Man To Leave Prison In Mexico

By JEFF SOUTH

Avalanche-Journal Staff

EDDY MIZE, who has spent Christmas the past four years behind the bars of a bleak, often brutal Mexican prison, hopes to celebrate this holiday season with his family in Crosbyton.

Mize is among 126 Americans who will return to the United States later this week under a new prisoner exchange treaty between Mexico and the U.S.

His parents, Pearl and Eldred Mize of Crosbyton, left Lubbock for San Diego, Calif., on Monday to await their son's arrival.

Glad Wish Coming True

"He's wanted to come home so badly all these years," said Jackie Mize, Eddy's brother and a local auto parts dealer. "I'm glad his wish is finally coming true. "This is going to be some Christmas reunion."

The soon-to-be-freed Americans are being held in two Mexico City prisons. The prisoners are being interviewed by U.S. magistrates this week to confirm they voluntarily have chosen to return to the U.S.

Release Uncertain

The group, part of the 235 prisoners tentatively eligible for transfer to the U.S. under the treaty, is to be taken by charter jet Friday and Saturday to the Metropolitan Correctional Institution in San Diego.

There, Eddy will be reunited with his parents. It is not known if he will be eligible for immediate release.

In his early 40s, Mize has been serving a 6 1/2-year sentence for possession of what his parents say was "a very small amount," no more than a few ounces, of cocaine.

Broken Homes Visited By Goodfellows

(Coupon, Page 8, Sec. B)

DO GOODFELLOWS take Christmas to children in "broken" homes?

Chief Goodfellow answered, seriously: "We do. In fact, the broken home is where we are needed most in many cases, like the one in this letter."

"Dear Mr. Goodfellow: This family needs help. It's a broken home. The mother is left with two children—twin girls. The children are in need of everything...The woman has been unable to find employment. She has no one to turn to...The family needs some 'good tidings'..."

(The letter was written by a kindly resident, who is sharing his home with these unfortunate persons until something can be done for them.)

"I'm proud of the Goodfellows who help such families and who will take those 'glad tidings of Merry Christmas' to these folks. And I'm proud of the residents of Lubbock who make it possible with their Goodfellow contributions," Chief Goodfellow said, softly.

Solons Disagree On Abortion Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rejected a House move Tuesday to continue severe restrictions on abortion payments for poor women and offered a more moderate proposal in return as the congressional deadlock over financing abortions continued.

The Senate action by voice vote blocked earlier approval by the House of an interim funding resolution.

Older Persons Vulnerable To Hypothermia

WASHINGTON (AP) — With winter approaching, the National Institute on Aging advised elderly persons Tuesday to keep their homes heated at 65 degrees or higher to avoid a potentially fatal drop in body temperature.

The institute, a federal agency, said 2.3 million Americans aged 65 or older — 10 percent of the nation's elderly — are particularly vulnerable to the condition called accidental hypothermia.

The high-risk group includes persons with diseases of the veins and arteries, hyperthyroidism or those taking phenothiazine drugs. These drugs, which are commonly prescribed for anxiety, nausea or depression, impair the body's response to cold.

The victims of accidental hypothermia do not even shiver as their temperature falls below the normal 98.6 degrees.

Dr. Robert N. Butler, the institute director, explained that the body's heat regulating mechanisms such as shivering often do not work as well among the elderly.

Hypothermia is defined as any body temperature below 95 degrees.

Dr. Robert W. Besdine of Boston, an institute consultant, said death can occur between 80 and 90 degrees and "is the rule below 80."

"This is not from spending a winter night on a park bench or immersion in the winter ocean, which can be fatal to anyone," Besdine told a news briefing.

"These aged people are in danger to exposure to mildly cool environments; some as warm as 65 degrees." Most cases occur in places kept between 50 and 60 degrees, he added.

Last January, President Carter ordered thermostats in federal buildings set at 65 degrees during the day and 55 at night, and he encouraged all Americans to do the same in their homes.

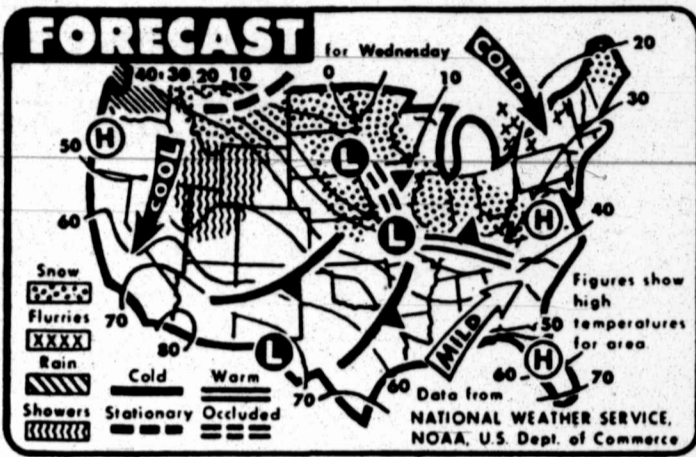

But Butler said that may not be suitable for elderly persons "who are often up at night."

Signs of accidental hypothermia are a cold abdomen, puffy face, slow pulse, low blood pressure and a state of confusion that can lead to a stupor or coma, Besdine said. Such symptoms are commonly misdiagnosed as a stroke, he added.

Once a person's body temperature starts falling, it will continue to drop steadily for hours or days, Besdine said. A victim should be rewarmed slowly by one degree an hour with blankets and hot water bottles, Butler said. Rapid re-warming can aggravate the problem.

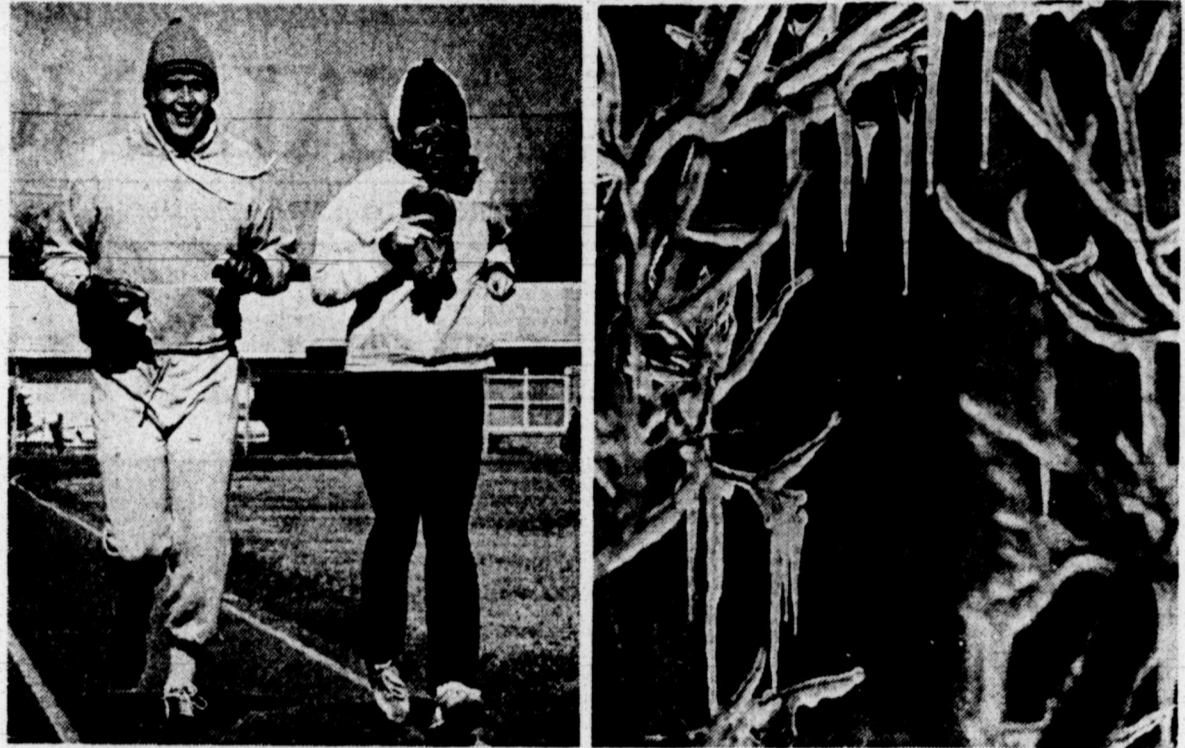

If a person's deep body temperature falls between 90 and 95 degrees, he usually can be rewarmed at home, Besdine said. "But if it's below 90 they belong in the hospital," he said.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for a variety of precipitation over much of the northern part of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

THE NIP OF WINTER — With the holiday season coming up, the weather here Tuesday decided to take a turn for the colder as the mercury barely climbed past the 40-degree mark for the afternoon's high. Across town, signs of the chilly weather were apparent from two bundled up joggers at Monterey High School, left, to icicles on a tree at Maxey Park, right. Winter Weather Returns To Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Winter weather has come back to Alaska — complete with snow, ice, northern lights and inconvenience.

Last year, while record snowfall and cold temperatures paralyzed parts of the lower 48 states, Alaskans experienced one of the warmest winters on record. But it appears that residents of the Last Frontier may regain their reputation for endurance this year.

normal highs in the low 20s; December 1976 was 10 degrees above normal.

The coldest official temperature in Alaska's largest city so far this year was the 10 below zero reading recorded Sunday night. Unofficially, Hansen says, the wind chill factor has brought the "feeling" temperature down as low as 30 below.

The coldest temperature on record for any Dec. 5 is the 23 below recorded in 1944. In 1954, residents basked in the record-high of 51 degrees.

The low temperatures are not limited to the Anchorage area. It was 27 below at Fairbanks and 49 below at Northway on Sunday night. Even Juneau, in the warmer southeastern portion of the state, reported 4 below.

Hansen blamed the cold snap on a high pressure system stalled over Alaska's interior, northwest Canada and Siberia.

"I see nothing at all that's going to warm us up appreciably — at least through the end of the week," Hansen said.

Winter last year wasn't the warmest on record, but it came close. Temperatures averaged 29.3 degrees in Anchorage between October and March. The record was set in 1925-26 with an average of 29.4.

New Cold Front Forecast

Don't put away those gloves and mufflers yet. Although the forecast calls for windy and warm weather today, a fast moving front will bring cold temperatures back to the South Plains Thursday.

The ridge of surface high pressure which kept temperatures to a minimum Tuesday moved to the east, making way for a low pressure front east of the Rockies which should exert its influence today.

43 degrees following an overnight low reading of a chilly 15 degrees.

Today's forecast calls for a high temperature in the mid-60s accompanied by westerly winds from 20 to 30 mph. The gusty winds are expected to produce blowing dust on the South Plains today.

However, temperatures should reach only into the 50s on Thursday as another front blows through the area.

Elsewhere in the state Tuesday weather conditions were cold and dry.

City Jury Finds Garcia Guilty

Demetrio Garcia was found guilty Tuesday of murdering a fellow worker during a Christmas party given to boost employee morale.

It took a jury in Judge Deniz Bevers' 72nd Dist. Court only about 45 minutes to convict Garcia, 27, of murdering Charles Whatley, 22.

Whatley was gunned down Dec. 21, 1974, while attending an informal party for the night shift at the Scott Manufacturing Co., 918 E. 50th St.

The same eight-man, four-woman panel which convicted the defendant was scheduled to assess his punishment after a hearing today.

Garcia — who had part of his right leg amputated as the result of an industrial accident in 1967 — took the witness stand to say he had been taunted by Whatley for no good reason.

The defendant said Whatley had ridiculed him, saying he didn't like "cripples."

The defendant said that, after three confrontations with Whatley during the course of the evening, he went to his home, located a short distance from the manufacturing plant, and got a gun.

"Why did you put the gun in your pocket?" defense attorney Bill Wischkaemper asked.

"To tell the truth, I don't know," the defendant replied. Then he said that his life had been threatened, and indicated he wanted a weapon just in case.

Garcia said that after returning to the company party, he suddenly saw Whatley standing before him in a hallway.

"He pointed at me like this," Garcia said, sticking out his right hand and pointing a finger. The defendant said Whatley's other hand was behind him at a back pocket.

Garcia said Whatley made a death threat and advanced toward him.

"He ran at me like this, so I got my gun and shot him," Garcia stated.

The jury did not buy the self-defense claim.

Earlier witnesses had told Asst. Dist. Atty. Sam Oatman that no weapon was found on the deceased.

Garcia said that after he shot Whatley, Whatley, while leaning down from the impact of the bullet, had apologized for his conduct.

"He leaned down and said 'I'm sorry, the defendant said."

"You shot him in the stomach and he apologized to you?" Oatman asked incredulously. The defendant said that was correct.

According to Garcia, he had originally traded words with another company employee, and that Whatley later came over and asked about the trouble Garcia was having with Whatley's friends.

The defendant said Whatley, during the three separate confrontations, had ridiculed him in vulgar language and threatened his wife.

Each run-in ended somewhat amicably, the defendant related. He said that when he left the plant to go home, he and Whatley had shaken hands and agreed to let bygones be bygones.

Garcia said he had originally gone home to get some cigarettes, and had grabbed the gun as an afterthought.

When asked why he had returned to the plant if trouble were obviously brewing, Garcia explained that he needed to conclude arrangements to borrow a car from a friend since he planned to make a trip the next day.

In final argument, Oatman stressed that, after the arguments, Garcia had gone to obtain a gun. He contended to jurors that action negated any possible self-defense excuse on the defendant's part.

Earlier, former night foreman Harold Don Ross had said the party for the night shift was an informal affair.

"We all got along pretty well," he said. Ross explained the party began about 11 p.m., and that employees were due to take a Christmas vacation the next day.

He indicated that, working an unpopular shift, the party was a part of keeping up the good morale of the reportedly closely knit night group.

Garcia was a day worker, he said.

Ross had testified he heard a report of a shot and looked up to see Garcia holding a revolver. Whatley was later found some distance away from the hallway, in an office area.

Testimony indicated Whatley was shot once in the abdomen and died about 12 hours later.

Teller Chides Carter On Breeder Veto

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Edward Teller, known as the "father of the H-bomb," says President Carter has done only one thing right in the nuclear energy field since taking office — and that may have been for the wrong reasons.

Teller said he agrees with the President's veto of the Clinch River fast breeder reactor project in Tennessee "because it could well be a waste of money."

Teller, who was here visiting friends, earned his nickname in the early 1950s when he persuaded President Truman to proceed with the bomb's development despite advice from other scientists to scrap it.

The Hungarian-born nuclear physicist said Carter's argument that his veto will prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons "is so obviously wrong it's embarrassing, in a way, to be arguing about it."

Plutonium is a heavy form of uranium.

"In Germany, France and Brazil, there's much less and they can't post-pone (reprocessing)," he said. "The President's action tries to tell them what to do, while saying we're being virtuous."

"It looks simply as a selfish motive on our part. It not only makes the French unhappy, but they won't cooperate. It weakens our leadership in the nuclear field and stimulates these countries to do things independently. So instead of slowing down nuclear proliferation, it speeds up proliferation."

Teller said despite international regulations governing reprocessing in major projects there are more than 100 experimental reactors throughout the world exempt from these controls.

"The President has placed nuclear reactors on the bottom of his list," Teller said. "All he has done is encourage extremists in environmental issues who are trying to tie up nuclear energy."

Carter claimed his veto will help halt nuclear arms proliferation by stopping the spread of plutonium, an element used in the production of super bombs. The plutonium is processed by breeder reactors to make more fuel.

Nuclear energy and its development have not flourished under Carter, who "in his younger days had something to do with nuclear energy and should know better," said Teller.

The Stanford University consultant said Carter's argument for the veto is superficial for several reasons. He said reprocessing of plutonium can be prevented in the United States but nowhere else because the United States is the only country with sufficient supplies of uranium to make the reprocessing unnecessary. Airline Boardings Here Continue Record Climb Passengers continued to climb aboard planes at the Lubbock International Airport in record numbers last month as boardings climbed a full 88 percent over November of last year.

Passengers numbering 37,049 flew out of Lubbock last month, compared to the 19,704 who boarded planes in November, 1976.

The total for boardings through November, 331,023, is 77,513 above the total for all of last year, 253,510.

The airline experiencing the most dramatic increase over last November was Continental, with a 13.4 percent rise. However, the November, 1976, figure of 2,903 reflects a pilots' strike during part of that month. That figure rose to 12,002 last month.

Braniff's boardings for the month decreased 5.5 percent from 12,894 last year to 8,300 last month. Texas International reported a 1.2 percent decrease from 3,867 in November, 1976, to 3,451 last month.

The 1976 figures for both airlines also may be distorted because of the Continental strike, because both Braniff and Texas International absorbed the striking airline's passengers.

The November figures bring Continental's boardings for the year to 120,236, a 21.6 percent increase over the 1976 figure of 98,840. Braniff reported a 23.3 percent increase from 98,944 boardings in 1976 to 101,254 this year.

Texas International, the only airline reporting a loss in passengers this year, reported a 2.4 percent decrease in boardings from 32,085 last year to 31,326 in 1977.

Southwest's November boardings of 13,114 bring the airline's total enplanements for the year to 77,240.

Lubbock's 37,049 enplanements last month compare with 19,981 at the Amarillo airport and 32,360 at the Midland-Odessa facility.

Amarillo has boarded 196,257 passengers this year, while Midland-Odessa enplaned 276,356.

The Lubbock Airport Board will be presented these boarding figures at its monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the airport.

Items to be considered include a proposed contract for Executive Limousine Service, which is seeking space to operate from the airport; rental space in the old terminal and a work session with city council set for noon Thursday at City Hall.

Burglars Grab Holiday Gifts

A Lubbock man said intruders jumped the gun on Christmas Tuesday when they entered his home and ransacked it.

John Reed Townes of 2124 17th St., a retired farmer, said someone entered his home and ransacked it before coming across family Christmas presents.

The victim said the burglars ripped into the gifts and made off with an estimated $52 worth of clothing.

Dale Harris of 3420 68th Drive also said thieves put a damper on his Christmas spirit when they broke into a house under construction at 9602 University Ave. over the weekend and stole about $300 worth of carpet.

Meanwhile, Carroll Shanks of 1710 9th St. told police someone broke into his pickup Tuesday morning, then left the scene carrying his attaché case, a calculator, a pen set and several track tapes. The loss, Shanks said, would total $270.

Two young Mexican-American girls reportedly entered a Payless Shoe Store at 421 34th St. Tuesday afternoon and left sporting new shoes. The only problem, store manager Mary Brink told police, was that the youngsters apparently carried the merchandise out under their coats, without having paid for it. The manager said the stolen shoes were worth about $25.

A 69-year-old Lubbock man said he was stabbed by an intruder who walked into his home and demanded his money late Monday.

Lee Dixon of 1012 David Ave. was in satisfactory condition today in St. Mary's Hospital following the 10:40 p.m. incident at his residence.

The victim told officers the man, believed to be about 35 years old, walked through the front door and announced, "I want your money."

According to Dixon, when he refused, he was stabbed in the abdomen. The attacker reportedly then took Dixon's wallet, but when he found it contained no money, dropped it and ran from the back portion of the house.

In recently reported break-ins, Paul Trevino said he knew something was wrong when he arrived at his 2519 Cornell St. home late Monday and found the lights on. He told police whoever kicked in his door made off with $585 worth of goods, including a television, sewing machine and a camera.

Larry Wharton of 2504 42nd St. said he is out $500 after break-in artists got through his door Monday and stole a rifle and television set.

Three "customers" at the Top Dollar Store at 116 N. University Ave. reportedly got away with $160 of the business's money Monday afternoon.

According to reports, as one of the men conveniently dropped a $1 bill at a check-out counter, one of his companions reached over and helped himself to a handful of cash from the opened drawer. The clerk told police one of the men distracted her attention as she picked up the dropped bill.

Police Lack Clues In Shooting Death

Police detectives Tuesday indicated they have a long way to go in investigating the recent slaying of a 24-year-old Lubbock man, found dead at his home late Monday.

Det. Lt. Billy Knox said "we have very little to go on" following the apparent multiple shooting of David Alan Boone of 926 E. Quinn St.

Boone apparently had been dead for several hours when two men said they saw his body sprawled inside the living room about 7:50 p.m. Monday. The victim apparently had been sitting in a platform rocking chair when the shooting occurred.

Investigators originally believed that Boone had died from a shotgun blast. However, police say the man was shot in the left shoulder, throat, through the nostril and right temple with what appear to be a large caliber bullets.

Late Tuesday, police still were seeking the murder weapon.

Services are pending with Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home.

Boone was a native of Victorville, Calif. He had moved to Lubbock in Sept., 1974, from Beatrice, Neb. He graduated from high school in Marysville, Kan., in 1971.

He had been employed with AvTech Aviation about a month.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Boone of Lubbock; three brothers, Gregory, Lawrence, Thomas Eric, all of Lubbock; four sisters, Mrs. Audrey Anne Kate, Mary Katherine, Martha Jeanne and Melissa Boone, all of Lubbock; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs.

Woman With Brain Damage, Unborn Infant Die

NEW YORK (AP) — Rosemarie Maniscalco, kept alive on a respirator since lapsing into a coma two weeks ago, died with her unborn child Tuesday, doctors said.

As far as was known, no effort was made to deliver the fetus. Doctors said the unborn child was only 20 weeks old and that it would have to develop for at least six more weeks to make delivery and survival possible. Mrs. Maniscalco, 27, collapsed with brain damage on Thanksgiving Eve at her Coney Island home. She was taken to Victory Memorial hospital in Brooklyn, where doctors placed her on a life-sustaining respirator and performed a tracheotomy to facilitate breathing. Cause of the brain damage that led to her collapse has not been determined.

Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold was investigating an allegation that Mrs. Maniscalco was beaten by her estranged husband, John. He and other family members denied he had beaten her.

The hospital statement on Mrs. Maniscalco's death said she had suffered "repeated massive incidents of bleeding from her nose, mouth and the area around the tracheotomy opening" all day, and her heart finally stopped beating shortly after noon.

Mrs. Maniscalco left two daughters, Anna Marie, 8, and Liada, 6. The Maniscalco couple had been separated for about three months. However, the husband's brother, Anthony, said the split was intended only to relieve the couple's financial straits by making Rosemarie eligible for welfare.

The Maniscalco family doctor, Wolodymyr Tyschenko, had said of the brain damage, "I am convinced it was spontaneous, internal."

Physicians who treated the woman said she had only minimal brain function and that her brain may have been damaged by a stroke, a hemorrhage, a tumor, some undefined infection or encephalitis.

The district attorney's interest in the case stemmed from a neighbor's reported claim that Mrs. Maniscalco had been beaten by her husband. The neighbor, Lynn Schettina, later denied making any such accusation.

Dr. Thomas LaBarbara, director of Victory Memorial's critical-care unit, said reports of beatings had surfaced as "rumors around the emergency room."

Maniscalco, although denying he beat his wife, said, "We had our arguments. Back in July we had a grand one. She gave me a black eye and I gave her a black eye."

Relatives of Mrs. Maniscalco spent several hours Monday in the district attorney's office. Later a spokesman for that office said they were questioned in an effort to determine Mrs. Maniscalco's "condition on the night of her arrival at the hospital...and what may have caused it."

The spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said subpoenas had been issued in connection with the inquiry, but declined to say whether any grand jury action in the case was planned.

Dr. Milton Wald, Brooklyn medical examiner, said an autopsy would be performed in an effort to learn the cause of the brain damage.

1812 Cannonball Found In Lake

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — A rare, 50-pound, eight-inch cannonball, believed to have been discharged during a skirmish in the War of 1812, has been recovered from the bottom of Lake Champlain.

Arthur Cohn, 28, of Fairfield, said Sunday he was looking through historical records to find more information about the ball that he discovered a week ago, 200 yards from shore.

Cohn said he found the ball in 25 feet of water "purely by accident," while he was teaching a scuba diving lesson in Burlington Harbor to a group of Middlebury College students.

"It looks like if you lit one of the fuses, it would blow up."

San Antonio Woman, 22, Held As Palestinian Spy

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Nine years ago, Terry Flair Fleener tried unsuccessfully to convert to Judaism.

Today, at 22, she languishes in an Israeli prison possibly facing espionage charges. Her family and friends here insist Terry, who once worked as a stewardess for the Kuwait national airlines, is too "tender hearted" to be a Palestinian spy, a terrorist.

She was arrested Oct. '25 when she arrived at Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion Airport and now is being held at Ramla Prison near the Israeli capital.

On Sunday, the attractive Texan was taken before a confidential session of a district court. Her attorney, Felicia Langer, requested and got a trial delay until Jan. 3. The indictment identifying her alleged crime is being kept secret in accordance with Israeli regulations.

Friends of the young woman say her attorney is attempting to help her cope with the fact that she may have to plead guilty and serve a prison term.

A State Department spokesman said Miss Fleener is suspected of intending to photograph Israeli military installations.

But one who refuses to believe the allegations is the woman who raised her at most from infancy, Mrs. Rose Guerrero, Terry's grandmother.

She was interviewed by the Dallas Times Herald Monday.

"She was a very good girl," Mrs. Guerrero said. "Everybody who knows her knows she's innocent. I don't think she was mixed up with the (Arab) guerrillas. But she might have talked to them and told them she was going to Israel. She may have been set up by some of the guerrillas."

She recalled the time when Terry, then 13, began visiting a synagogue near her home. She said the little girl talked to a rabbi about converting to Judaism but was discouraged and soon dropped the idea.

Later, Mrs. Guerrero said, Terry became intensely interested in Middle East affairs. Several of her friends in San Antonio were young Palestinians.

At 17, her Lebanese boyfriend's family gave her a six-week trip to their home in Beirut. She visited the Lebanese capital twice more and finally enrolled at the (American) University of Beirut.

Following a stint as a Kuwait stewardess, she returned to the United States. Last January, she began college classes in San Antonio, where she continued her Middle East studies.

Catherine Edwards, Miss Fleener's political science teacher at the University of Texas at San Antonio, described her as "quite idealistic" and said her sympathies were with the Palestinians in the refugee camps. Dr. Edwards said she plans to testify as a character witness for her former student at the January trial.

Miss Fleener left the United States in early October after working at several parttime and summer jobs in San Antonio and saving her money. Friends said she flew to Cyprus and stayed with a boyfriend she had met on a previous Mideast trip.

"She didn't leave here as a terrorist," said Mrs. Guerrero. "If anything happened, it happened in Cyprus."

After her arrest and long weeks without word, the Israelis relaxed some of the security and a letter from Miss Fleener finally reached her relatives. It said what they wanted to hear, what they believe.

"You have nothing to be ashamed of," she wrote. "I am no terrorist."

Emirates To Back Oil Price Freeze

KUWAIT (AP) — The United Arab Emirates will support Saudi Arabia's proposal to freeze crude oil prices for 1978 at this month's meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Oil Minister Mana Saed Oteiba said.

"We will support Saudi Arabia, even if it stands alone, at the Caracas conference of OPEC," Oteiba told reporters as he arrived here from Iran. He is on a tour of the Persian Gulf oil-producing states.

The 13 members in the OPEC cartel are to meet Dec. 20 in Caracas, Venezuela. Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter.

Court Views Children's Right To Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Children cannot make certain decisions for themselves" and should not be able to legally challenge attempts by their parents or guardians to commit them to a state mental institution, the Supreme Court was told Tuesday.

Douglas Lackey, assistant attorney general of Georgia, argued that full-blown hearings with children being represented by their own lawyers are not necessary protections.

"Georgia's system for handling the commitment of children is clearly a rational decision-making process," Lackey said.

The nation's highest court heard arguments Tuesday in a case a three-judge federal court used to strike down a Georgia law allowing parents to act for children under 18 in seeking treatment for mental illness.

The lower court ruled that children are entitled to due process hearings, with their own attorneys present if they wish, before being committed.

The Supreme Court previously has ruled that adults may not be committed against their will without first receiving hearings but no constitutional right has ever been recognized for children under 18.

Most states have laws similar to the Georgia statute that was declared unconstitutional.

Lackey argued that children in Georgia are not committed for treatment of mental illness merely on parents' request but are also screened by state officials.

A lawyer for two teen-aged boys who spent more than five years at Georgia's Central State Hospital at Milledgeville before suing the state charged, however, that the state screening is "inadequate" to protect the children's rights.

"The traditional way that we protect children (by placing legal responsibility with the parents) is not valid here," John Gromartie Jr. of Gainesville, Ga., contended.

Lower courts ruled and Georgia officials admitted that the two boys would have been better off out of the hospital.

At the heart of the significant legal controversy are two rights — one protecting children from unjust legal actions and one allowing parents or guardians to raise their children as they see fit. Questions from the bench during Tuesday's arguments appeared to show a real reluctance by the justices to interfere with what Justice Potter Stewart called "a parent's right to make decisions for a child."

"Your whole argument makes parents a suspect class," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger told Gromartie at one point.

Lackey claimed that decisions by parents to have their children treated for mental illness cannot be distinguished by law from parental decisions to seek medical treatment for a child.

But Gromartie said that commitment to a mental institution carried with it a "stigma" not attached to hospitalization for a tonsillectomy or other treatment.

The court's decision in the case will be announced sometime before the end of the present term in June.

Man Acquitted Of Murder Charges Here

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Curtis Fair Jr., 45, was found innocent of a murder charge by a jury here Tuesday.

Fair had been charged as a result of the Jan. 9 shooting death of Simon Joe Ward, 29.

The jury in Judge Thomas L. Clinton's 99th Dist. Court returned the acquittal verdict after deliberating two hours and 15 minutes.

The panel acted after hearing evidence from a defense eyewitness, who said Fair had acted in self-defense when he reportedly shot Ward.

In final argument, defense attorney Jack McClendon told the jury there was little doubt his client killed Ward.

"I think he (Fair) shot him (Ward), and I think he died from it," McClendon stated.

McClendon then bore down on Ward's reputation, gleaned from accounts by witnesses.

"What kind of a man do you know Simon Ward was?" McClendon queried.

"You know he was a junkie; you know he was living with a prostitute..."

McClendon then reeled off a list of charges which reportedly had been pressed against Ward, including burglary and aggravated assault on a police officer.

Testimony indicated that Ward was shot after visiting Fair at Fair's apartment. "It was Curtis Fair's home," McClendon said, indicating Ward had initiated the confrontation which ended with his death.

Ward was found by police lying face down in the snow near Fair's apartment at 1605 Ave. D.

According to former policeman Lane Hofer, Fair came up and handed him a defringer pistol when he arrived at the scene.

"He said 'I shot him and I called you,'" Hofer testified.

Testimony indicated there was blood between Fair and Ward because of Ward's common-law wife.

The 25-year-old woman, called as a state witness, had testified that, after Ward allegedly beat her, she had asked Fair to keep Ward away from her.

She indicated that Fair had secured a room for her at a motel, and that she had stayed there for five or six days. She indicated she lived in the room alone during that span.

The woman said that she had reconciled with Ward on a Friday night, about two days before he was shot.

On cross-examination, the woman said that both she and Ward had been addicted to heroin. She admitted she worked as a prostitute during the time she was living with Ward, but said it would be incorrect to refer to him as her procurer.

The witness told McClendon it required much money to finance heroin for both her and Ward.

Defense witness Ernest Jones said he saw the shooting.

According to Jones, Ward had gone to the apartment to visit Fair three or four times during an approximate two-week period preceding the incident.

"Simon had approached Curtis about hiding his woman out, or words to that effect," Jones said in reference to the earlier visits.

Jones said he was in the front room and answered the door. "He (Fair) asked who it was. I told him, and Curtis said to let him in," Jones testified. Jones said Ward told Fair he had learned Fair had been "hiding" the woman.

The witness said Fair retorted that they had already discussed the matter earlier. According to the witness's account, Fair then marched to the door, opened it and ordered Ward to leave the residence.

"He (Ward) said, 'Yeah, I'll get out of your damn house,'" Jones stated.

He said Ward then walked to the door, but suddenly whirled toward Fair with his hands in his pockets.

Dismal Weather Marks Opening Of Coal Strike

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Dismal cold and snow over much of the nation marked the first day of the nationwide coal strike Tuesday as 160,000 miners began the last weeks before Christmas without salaries or medical insurance.

From Virginia to Utah, from Alabama to Illinois, members of the United Mine Workers union struck the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, demanding restored health and pension benefits, higher wages, and the right to local strikes.

UMW President Arnold Miller said the strike would bring "hardships and human tragedy" and said the BCOA was to blame.

"It is now obvious that they never wanted an agreement and that they're trying to break this union," Miller said.

Plans Tour

Miller, who had said he would leave the talks Tuesday for a tour of the coal fields in West Virginia, remained in Washington. It was not known when he might leave.

Although about half of the nation's coal production ceased with the expiration at 12:01 a.m. of the UMW-BCOA contract, no shortages were expected. Major utilities and steel producers reported stockpiles sufficient for about 100 days. Miller has said a three-month strike was likely.

As expected, trustees of the UMW Health and Retirement Funds announced a cutoff in health benefits for about 815,000 miners and retired miners and their dependents. The funds are financed through company-paid royalties on coal production.

Can't Pay Bills

"Effective Dec. 6, 1977, the UMW benefit trusts will not be able to pay bills for any covered medical services," said a hand-printed sign on the wall of a miners' clinic at Cabin Creek, near Charleston.

The trustees also announced that 81,819 retired miners may get reduced pension checks beginning next month while an additional 6,000 pensioners, whose benefits come under a second trust fund, will receive their usual check.

The benefit funds were a major issue in the contract talks which were recessed late Monday. The funds were cut back during the summer, and the trustees blamed the losses on wildcat strikes and inflation. UMW members demanded that the funds be refinanced and benefits restored in full.

Panel Reports Progress On Energy Plan

producers — including steps to allow larger quantities of oil from older wells to qualify for higher prices and to permit newly produced oil to command world market prices sooner than the 1980 date envisioned by the original Carter energy bill.

Continuation of federal price controls on natural gas and extension of these controls to gas used in producing states, although at a slightly higher level than the $1.75 per 1,000 cubic feet sought by the administration.

Sources said many details remain to be worked out and it is still possible that such a compromise could collapse.

Depends On Long

Much reportedly depends on what Long will insist on in exchange for his support for the crude oil tax, which the administration claims is the centerpiece of its energy program.

The tax is aimed at conserving energy by making domestic oil as expensive as imported oil over a three-year period, through a tax that would add seven cents a gallon to gasoline and other petroleum products.

The Senate rejected the tax in favor of more than $40 billion in tax credits for energy production and conservation and also voted that if such a tax were approved, some of its revenues should be earmarked for a trust fund to encourage development of new energy sources.

The miners, who earn an average of $60 a day, also sought a "substantial wage increase" and a limited right-to-strike over local issues. The coal operators wanted the contract to specify penalties against miners who take part in unauthorized strikes.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said both sides agreed to resume the talks Thursday afternoon in Washington.

The UMW-BCOA contract covered 130,000 active miners but an additional 30,000 UMW members were covered by related contracts which also expired.

Dan Fields of the West Virginia Coal Association estimated that nationwide the miners would sacrifice $12 million a day in wages during the strike.

Cold Cuts Picketing

Little picketing was reported in the Appalachian coal fields, where the cold and snow kept outdoor activity to a minimum.

"There's really no reason to picket," Fields said. "Nobody's going to work in a UMW mine anyway. Everybody is staying home, stoking fires and keeping the coffee pot warm."

A few bands of roving pickets stood watch at several non-union mines in Pike County, but no trouble was reported.

Sloan Aide Moves To Grid Helm

Romeo Crennell and Tommy Limbaugh — but later said that those four "have a decision to make" as to staying in Mississippi or returning to Tech. Assistants Bob Patterson and Gary Wyant are now in Mississippi, also.

Sloan and his assistants will return temporarily next week to help with Tech's preparations for its Dec. 23 date with Florida State in the Tangerine Bowl. Full-scale workouts are to begin Dec. 14.

With Dockery's appointment, speculation moved to a replacement for King, who will retire effective Aug. 31, 1978. Indications are that the new athletic director will come from outside the Tech community.

Dr. Glenn Barnett, Tech's vice president for planning, said, "Sloan's resignation came as such a surprise that we had to change our whole thinking, and we haven't done anything since."

"It would be fair to say that Coach Sloan could have had the athletic director's job. He would have been the first choice."

Barnett would not speculate on whether the replacement for King would come from "inside" or "outside," but he said that the search is expected to begin "relatively soon."

"Exactly when is up to president Mackey. It's his appointment, essentially," Barnett added.

Played Offensive Lineman

Dockery, a native of Cleveland, Tenn., where Sloan was raised, was an offensive lineman at Tennessee and received his degree in 1965. After completing his football eligibility there, he was a Volunteer assistant coach in 1964 and 1965.

In 1966, he became head coach at Harritman (Tenn.) High School and followed that with a stint at Morristown (Tenn.) East High School. His four-year record as a high-school head coach was 34-8-2, and his Morristown team advanced into the state playoffs.

He was a full-time assistant at Tennessee in 1970 and 1971, coaching the receivers, became offensive line coach at Georgia Tech in 1972, and moved to Vanderbilt with Sloan in 1973 to coach the receivers.

In 1975, he followed Sloan to Tech and became offensive coordinator. In 1975, Tech led the SWC in total yardage with a 400.3-yard average per game, also a school record. Last season, the Raiders finished third in the league with a 380-yard average.

couldn't get anyone to go in," she said. Hernandez was two doors down helping friends put a transmission in a car when he heard Mrs. Williams screaming.

He ran to the scene.

"They told me there was a baby in there," Hernandez said.

Hernandez said he tried to enter the house through a front window, but was repelled by the heat and flames.

He then ran to the east side of the house, leaped over a fence about six feet high and broke out a window at the rear of the residence.

"I couldn't see anything in there," Hernandez said. "But I heard the baby coughing. I found him in a bed or a cradle," he added.

Firemen had arrived on the scene meanwhile and 11-month-old Gerald Bernard Norris was placed immediately on a fire department resuscitator.

Minutes later, the child appeared to be suffering no ill effects, other than fright, from the fire.

A neighbor said Tim Norris usually left his job about 3 p.m. each day to take his wife to work, then returned to his work at Estacado High School.

The Norrises' fourth child, 6-year-old Pamela Michel, reportedly normally arrived home just after 3 p.m. to take care of the small children until their father arrived.

With his family intact and none of the Christmas presents beneath a melted tree damaged, Tim Norris inspected the heavy damage in his home Tuesday.

The interior appeared to be heavily damaged, with the kitchen area a total loss. The Norrises reportedly spent the night at a relative's home.

A police officer at the scene said he believed Hernandez should be in line for a medal.

"You read so many bad things in the news," he said. "There ought to be room for some good things."

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — Former Central Intelligence Agency employee Philip Agee said Tuesday he wants to appeal an order expelling him from Holland to the Netherlands' highest administrative court.

Man Wrong Whatever Done About Skunk In Garage

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Stanton says he was a law-abiding citizen until the skunk wandered into his garage. Now health officials tell him he's breaking the law by keeping it — and he'd be breaking the law if he let it go.

"I've done everything I can to get rid of it, but I'm blocked in every direction," Stanton, a 45-year-old electrical contractor, said Tuesday at his home on the city's far South Side.

"When they come to serve the citation, my lawyer says: 'Just tell them you are willing to go to court and take the skunk with you for evidence. That should make them think.'"

Stanton said that the skunk appeared in his garage from a nearby field 17 days ago, took up domicile in a boat he keeps there, and began spraying its musk to ward off unwelcome visitors.

Stanton called the Animal Welfare and city's stray pick-up service, but "they wouldn't have a thing to do with it."

"I called the police," he said. "They sat in their squad car. My dogs were barking. The skunk sprayed. The police said they would send a truck to pick it up, but several days passed and no truck came."

State game and wildlife officials said they couldn't handle it, Stanton said. State and city health departments told him he could not let it go because it might carry rabies. The zoo didn't want it.

He even called Mayor Michael Bilandic's complaint department and was turned over to Chicago's rodent control department.

"But they said mice and rats were their bag, not skunks," he said.

Finally, Stanton said, he bought a wire mesh trap about 3 feet long and 16 inches wide — "the kind a skunk could get into, but not out. I baited it with corned beef hash."

The play worked, and a delighted Stanton said he "called all the departments again and told them the skunk was trapped."

"His reward? A state official 'told me I had broken three laws: I brought a trap into the city. It is illegal to trap in the city. I had no license to trap in the state."

"They said no matter what I do now, I would be breaking other laws: It was illegal to keep the skunk. It is illegal to destroy it. It is illegal to let it go because it may carry disease like rabies."

So the skunk is still in the cage. A deodorizing company gave Stanton a bottle of scent that counteracts the musk and makes the garage "smell like a flower garden."

"My seven children want me to keep it as a family pet, even if it's against the law," Stanton said. "They even named it 'Wishbone' because at our Thanksgiving dinner my youngest daughter fed it mashed potatoes and gravy and a meaty, turkey wishbone."

GIFT OF LIFE — Though undamaged Christmas presents sit beneath the melted, artificial Christmas tree at Tim and Wanda Norris' residence Tuesday, the greatest gift given may have been that provided by Jesse Hernandez, right, of 2636 E. Auburn St. The 22-year-old heard the screams of Mrs. Josephine Williams, a neighbor, and responded by pulling 11-month-old Gerald Bernard Norris from the burning house. Moments earlier, Mrs. Williams had crawled into the blackened interior and rescued two other Norris children trapped inside when the blaze broke out about 3:10 p.m. (Staff Photos by Norm Tindell)

Identification Before Jury Gets Murder Trial Go-Ahead

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PROSECUTORS began laying the groundwork which they feel will eventually link Leroy Wayne Green to a 1975 double-slaying, as testimony was launched in Green's capital murder trial here Tuesday.

But what could prove to be a key trial development took place before testimony began.

Green, 21, was indicted for capital murder as the result of the Jan. 12, 1975, shotgun slayings of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Andrew McKay.

The bodies of the elderly couple were found on a lonely snow-covered dirt road off North University Avenue, about four miles from the McKay's rural home.

In a final pretrial matter, presiding Judge William R. Shaver ruled Tuesday that Mrs. Benjamin D. Coffee can later make a courtroom identification of Green before the jury.

Court-appointed defense attorneys Tom Purdom and Byrnie Bass had sought to block such testimony, contending that Mrs. Coffee's identification would not be based on an independent recollection of events, but rather on a picture she had seen at the Sheriff's Department.

Says Suspected Visited

At the hearing, conducted before testimony began, Mrs. Coffee identified Green as one of three men who had visited her home the night the McKays were killed.

Mrs. Coffee, a relative of the McKays, lived only a short distance from them, testimony indicated.

Mrs. Coffee's identification could later prove important, since the state is trying to link tire tracks found outside the Coffee residence with tracks also allegedly seen at the McKay home and near the death scene.

One of the three men who reportedly visited the home, Raymond Sanders, was known to the Coffees, Green and Robert Lee White are alleged by the state to have been the other two visitors.

Sanders and White have already been convicted and assessed life sentences.

Mrs. Coffee later viewed a spread of five pictures at the Sheriff's Department. Bass asked Mrs. Coffee if, after having picked out pictures of Sanders and White, she had had much trouble spotting the third man.

"Not too much, really," the witness answered.

It was brought out that pictures of the three suspects in the case had all been taken on the same date, Jan. 17, 1975.

The dates the pictures were taken were printed in plain view on the photos, testimony showed. The other two pictures — photographs of the men who were not suspects in the case — were taken in August, 1974, and in March, 1972.

Mrs. Coffee assured Bass and Purdom that she had taken no notice of the dates when she identified the pictures.

Bass also brought out that the two remaining mug shots showed a marked difference in contrast with the shots of the three suspects.

Deputy Ernest Rector testified he was present when Mrs. Coffee viewed the picture spread Jan. 24, 1975. He said she took "a few seconds longer" to identify Green's picture than she had taken in picking out the other two shots.

Rector also said Mrs. Coffee had looked back and forth several times from Green's picture to the others, including the pair she had already selected.

"Why was there no lineup — with such a crucial identification?" Bass asked Rector.

"I don't know," Rector stated.

In argument on the pretrial motion to suppress the witness' courtroom identification of Green, Bass argued the pictures had exercised a prejudicial impact.

"She could tell what dates the pictures were made and readily said she could," Bass said.

Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin, handling the lead prosecutor's role for the state, replied that Mrs. Coffee had also said she hadn't even paid any attention to the dates at the time she viewed the spread.

Mrs. Coffee had stated she remembered Green as a man who had leaned up against a certain chair inside her home on the night of Jan. 12.

Griffin said the witness' testimony demonstrated she had independent recollection of the visit without pictures.

After argument, Shaver ruled that the pictures were not unduly suggestive and did not taint any courtroom identification.

Deputy Testifies

The first trial witness, Deputy Alton Hobbs, testified he was called to the death scene about 11:40 p.m. He said a woman later identified as Mrs. McKay was found lying face down on the south edge of the road. He indicated McKay was found lying face down in a snow-covered ditch about 36 feet from his wife.

Hobbs said distinctive tire tracks were found on a roadway at the Coffee residence, near a driveway at the McKay residence and at a spot about 100 yards east of where the bodies were discovered.

Hobbs said tracks were also found by the side of North University Drive, about 200 yards from the dirt road leading to the McKay and Coffee residences.

The deputy said that in his opinion, the tracks were all made by the same pickup truck.

Ponders Future

Mize, who was born and reared in Crosbyton and attended Texas Tech, told his family in a recent letter:

"Truthfully, I don't know how to face up to anything after all the depression here. I guess I'll just have to get out and see how I feel then. Living in such a down place as this, one has to really be strong to think positively about the future. It just doesn't seem to exist when you're in such a low and you can't see out."

"Although I know it will end someday, I can't imagine it or what I'll be like. I feel I've lost the ability to communicate with people, and that limits what I'll be able to do when I get out."

"This place is really taking a toll on our bodies and minds."

POSSIBLE SOLUTIONS TO THE PROBLEM OF worm infestations in the Southwestern crop will be explored Dec. 15 at a meeting sponsored by Cotton Inc. Federal and state specialists and cotton producers themselves will meet at 8 a.m. at the Airport Marina Hotel at Dallas for a daylong exploration of the problem.

THE COTTON INC. BOARD OF DIRECTORS, composed of cotton growers from each cotton-growing state, has given a top priority to expansion of the organization's pest management research activities. The directors earlier this year approved a resolution calling for the task force approach to the worm problem with necessary allocation of funds to carry out the effort.

A TASK FORCE WILL MEET SOON AFTER the Dallas session to review findings from the four meetings and determine where research needs to be increased and what research needs to be initiated to solve the worm problem on a long-range basis.

Next week's meeting will include an examination of the problem in Texas and Oklahoma by producer representatives and extension officials. There also will be talks by private entomologists and a report on new chemical registration. In addition, representatives of the USDA and the two state experiment stations will report on research status on the worm problem. Research plans for the future will be discussed.

Dr. George A. Slater, Cotton Inc. vice president of agricultural research, is coordinating the worm task force. "We hope to determine the reasons for the unusual worm problems on cotton during the past growing season," Slater says, "and from there develop an integrated insect management program using a multi-disciplinary approach."

Santome Death Questioned At Midland Meeting

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING—Ruben Bonilla Jr. of Corpus Christi, state director of the League of United Latin-American Citizens, said Tuesday that Sunday's meeting of the family of Tiburcio Griego Santome with LULAC officials and other concerned Mexican-American citizens in Midland was held in an atmosphere of "fear."

Bonilla said that the Sunday meeting was a "fact-finding mission" suggested by the widow, Maria Santome.

According to Bonilla, at the meeting serious questions concerning the shooting death of Santome in Glasscock County by ex-deputy G. B. Thurwanger, 51, of Stanton, were raised.

"Several of the persons at the meeting had been told they would lose their jobs if they attended," Bonilla said. "At one time, I was told, in answer to a question, 'Even if we knew, we wouldn't tell you because we are afraid.'"

Bonilla said he had contacted two Texas representatives in Austin, Gonzalo Barrientos and Hugo Berlanga, as well as the Austin headquarters of the Texas Rangers and Attorney General John Hill's office in an effort to "clear the air and give the family the opportunity to hear all the facts in the case."

He said that the purpose of the meeting was not to sensationalize the death. "The Texas Rangers do not have a favorable impression in the minds of the Mexican-American community. The pattern of discriminatory behavior in years past has led to the apprehension that there might not be an independent investigation into this incident.

"At no time during the meeting was anything said concerning Glasscock Sheriff Royce Pruitt. He is well-respected. We do not question his motives; we do question the motives of Mr. Thurwanger. We question his past record, Bonilla said."

According to Bonilla, relatives of a Mexican-American who died in Stanton in 1967 made allegations at Sunday's meeting against the ex-deputy.

The two main points Bonilla said he was concerned about was the arrest procedure and that the widow was not notified of the death and was not allowed to view the body until after it was embalmed.

"I believe that the district attorney (Rick Hamby) should examine the facts and then submit the case to a grand jury with a recommendation of murder," Bonilla said. "There can be no self-defense action here."

Santome, 37, died of gunshot wounds suffered in the back seat of Glasscock County Sheriff Royce Pruitt's car, after his Nov. 6 arrest during a festival in the St. Lawrence community. He had been arrested on drunk and disorderly charges.

Reports after the shooting indicated that Santome had produced a knife while the car was in motion, and tried to cut Pruitt and Thurwanger, who was riding with Pruitt.

The report indicated that Thurwanger picked up a 9mm pistol from the console and shot the prisoner. Both Thurwanger and Pruitt suffered minor cuts.

Big Spring Jurist To Retire

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING—District Judge Ralph W. Caton, who earlier this year gained statewide publicity when he said the 55-mph speed limit could be unconstitutional, said Tuesday he won't seek re-election to another term.

Caton, who has served 18 years on the 118th bench in West Texas, said he will be actively retired and continue to serve on his own time. His judicial district covers Glasscock, Howard and Martin counties.

The actual date of his retirement from the bench will be announced sometime next year.

Caton, 52, was appointed by Gov. Price Daniel Jan. 1, 1960. He ran in November of that year for the balance of the term and was elected to full terms in 1962, 1966, 1970 and 1974.

Caton earlier practiced law in Stanton. No one has announced as a candidate for the office.

Students' 'Weekend Fever' Worries Officials

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Student absenteeism in the Lubbock Independent School District is up slightly this year, but what really worries the district's attendance supervisor are the youngsters who turn their weekends into three- or four-day vacations.

Daily attendance among Lubbock's 31,751 public school students is running 95.99 percent, Superintendent Ed Irons told school trustees in his first statistical report for the 1977-78 academic term.

That rate is a fraction behind the pace set for the first part of the previous school year. Then, 96.22 percent of the city's enrolled pupils were showing up for class on a typical day.

"The difference is not enough to cause any great concern," said Bill Parker, the school system's director of pupil personnel. Parker noted there still is plenty of time left in the current scholastic year to make up the deficit.

And even at the 95.99 percent clip, Lubbock's attendance rate remains one of the best in the state, Parker said.

"I've talked with attendance officers of cities all over Texas, and our attendance is as good as any school district's," Parker said.

"I think this speaks well of the attitude of parents in this area toward education. They support their schools and encourage their children to get an education."

While the city's overall attendance rate is good, Parker said schools here continue to experience an inordinate amount of student absenteeism at the beginning and end of each academic week.

Recently, he said, Texas Education Agency officials analyzed the weekly attendance patterns of Lubbock youngsters. They found school attendance here invariably peaks in the middle of the week — Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays — but falls off for Mondays and Fridays, Parker said.

"There is definitely a significant increase in absences on Mondays and Fridays," he said.

The jump in absences is reflected by a drop of a percentage point or two in the district's attendance rates for those particular days. That may not seem like much, but each percentage point decline means about 300 more Lubbock students are staying home from class.

Statistically, Parker noted, absences due to illness should be distributed evenly among weekdays. The roller-coaster pattern of Lubbock school attendance "indicates to us that there may be many other reasons besides illness that are keeping our students home from school," he said.

Some of the Monday and Friday absences may be due to families' taking their children on out-of-town trips for extended weekends, Parker said. Many probably are the result of students' conning their parents into letting them stay home with "a case of the Monday or Friday blabs," he added.

Parker urges parents to be careful in deciding whether to keep their children home from school.

"A sick child should not be in school. But if a child has no visible signs of being sick, and he does not have a significant fever, I would encourage parents to send that student to school," Parker said.

He said a "significant fever" should be a degree or more above normal.

Parker said students who continue to complain of being sick while at school will be checked out in the school clinic. If necessary, parents will be contacted and the youngster will be sent home, he said.

Parker noted that even students with a slight fever might be better off in school than at home. At home, he said, the student might end up playing outside and making his situation worse.

When a child is sick and being kept home, parents should telephone the school and inform the attendance office there, Parker said.

Lubbock Woman Has Tie To Yule Poem

By FRANK COATS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Christmas, traditionally a season of joy, took on a note of poignancy today with the serious illness of a woman who is a unique Lubbock tie to the Yuletide.

Mrs. Lulu Montgomery Moore Quest is now in a Highland Hospital bed. The 91-year-old woman is the last surviving descendant to bear the surname of Dr. Clement Clark Moore, the author of "A Visit from St. Nicholas" — perhaps better known as "Twas the Night Before Christmas."

The Quests are a well-known business family in Lubbock, the founders of A.E. Quest and Sons, Inc., a manufacturer of canvas products. Last Nov. 20 they celebrated their 67th wedding anniversary.

Besides her illustrious great-great-uncle Dr. Moore, Mrs. Quest is also the daughter of George T. Moore, a Confederate soldier. She's a member of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Eastern Star. But it was the relationship to the poet that was always special.

On Christmas Eve in 1822, Dr. Moore, a professor of Greek and Hebrew at the General Theological Seminary in New York City, was sent out by his wife to purchase a turkey for the next day's meal. Finding a nice one for his wife to cook, he made his way home.

On the way back, Moore stopped and talked with a caretaker, Jan Duychink. Duychink was a small man, with a white beard on a round, jovial face and he smoked a short pipe. He entertained Moore with his fanciful tales, and eventually told him of the Dutch legend of St. Nicholas, a fourth century bishop of Myra, who rode through the sky in a horse and a wagon giving food to good children and birch rods to those who had been bad.

The story was familiar to Moore, and it had become a minor part of literature when Washington Irving wrote a story on the good St. Nicholas. But the theologian was an amateur poet, and what he saw in his mind as Duychink recounted the story was the image of St. Nicholas.

He went home, gave the turkey to his wife and went upstairs to write the story he had promised his children earlier. The words came easily, and within an hour he was downstairs before the fire, reading for the first time the account of the magical visit.

A family friend sent the poem in to a newspaper, and the soon-to-be-classic was first published the next year. It didn't appear under his name for a number of years, and did not gain international popularity until Moore's death in 1869, when the famous cartoonist Thomas Nast drew a picture of Moore's St. Nicholas, the image now seen in the face of Santa Claus.

The Quest family always had a great tradition the poem — family members say they memorized it as soon as they were old enough. There is even a handwritten copy of the poem, the original draft, in a family genealogy book, kept under careful lock and key.

JINGLING BELLS—Sleigh bells rigged as Christmas tree ornaments seem to have caught the attention of Linda Blaylock and Debbie Carroll during a shopping spree to find suitable tree trimmings. The two girls may have found what they were searching for, but Lubbock merchants say residents who wait much longer to do their seasonal shopping may not. Sales of trees, trimmings and other gift items are already brisk throughout the city, and, the merchants said, crowded aisles will probably become even worse this week. (Staff Photo by Norm Tindell)

Obesity Seen As Major Industry

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's "war on fat" has burgeoned into a $10 billion a year industry because 70 million overweight Americans are willing to do almost anything to shed some pounds, a new report says.

Frost Sullivan Inc., a New York-based market research firm, said in the 260-page report that Americans are spending more money than ever before on appetite suppressants, anti-obesity prescriptions, reducing pills, diet books, mechanical devices, health spas "and other allied items."

The report said 70 million overweight Americans are spending money to lose weight, that an estimated 50,000 persons die each year "from obesity as a secondary cause" and that women constitute 90 percent of the weight-reducing market.

"The major finding of the study was that it is a $10 billion a year business," Jeffrey Swartz of Frost Sullivan said Tuesday. "I don't think anybody knew it

Old Sailor Doubles As Santa

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — Retired Rear Adm. Chauncey Moore has a fluffy, white beard and rosy, red cheeks, so it's no wonder he is in great demand as Santa Claus.

"I get a big kick out of seeing the kids' eyes light up," Moore, 79, said.

Moore's seasonal career as Santa Claus began 13 years ago when he came back from a gold mining expedition to the mountains of North Carolina with a long, white beard.

A friend talked him into playing Santa for a kindergarten class, and Moore said, "From that start it just mushroomed."

He gets so many requests to be Santa — from schools, civic groups and shopping malls, Moore said, that he's busy "right up until midnight Christmas Eve."

On Christmas day, he trims his beard and just relaxes around his house.

After 36 years in the Navy, Moore retired in 1953. He saw extensive action in the Pacific during World War II, and after retiring was in charge of the old Navy Reserve (mothball) Fleet in Green Cove Springs.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

If kids are growing up too fast these days, you can't put all the blame on television.

A trio of kids in California thought they'd make a little mad money killing ground moles with their "secret formula" and came face to face with bureaucracy.

It reminds me of the woman who wrote me a few years ago from a small town in the Midwest. She was going to stage a garage sale. No big deal...just some stuff that would bring her daughter's bedroom up to health standards once again...a black light that makes things glow in the dark, a guitar slightly warped, several hair dryers, an old record player and an exercise rope (never used).

She was informed she needed a license at the cost of $1.00. The clerk at the town hall told her to see the building inspector. He located her property on the town map and filled out a permit, listing things she could not sell.

She was guided to another office where the document was notarized, and duly warned that she must give the sale on the date listed.

The town building inspector then escorted her to police headquarters where an officer wanted to make sure she realized the license had to be in a conspicuous place. She told him she would put it on the big tree on her front lawn. The officer wanted to know if the tree was indeed on her property or was close enough to the curb to be a town tree because if it was she couldn't use it.

She told him that last winter when a large branch fell down in a storm and she called the police she was told it definitely was her tree.

She figured it would only be a matter of time before the zoning commission came down on her for doing business in a residential area...Food and Drug to inspect her coffee...Price Control for her merchandise...Environmental Protection Agency for campers who parked outside her door all night...Equal Opportunity protesting lack of minorities working the garage...anti-trust suit for her monopoly of her own garage...IRS officers questioning her income...wages to workers plus their Social Security benefits and retirement plan...and the Sierra Club for defacing the tree by nailing a permit to it.

And to think, three kids thought that a "mountain out of a molehill" was just a dumb saying.

PAELLA

1 chicken (about 2 lbs.), cut up salt and pepper
 3 sweet sausages
 1/4 cup butter or margarine
 1 clove garlic, chopped
 1 1/2 cups chicken broth
 1 tsp. saffron threads
 1 cup converted rice
 2 tomatoes, cored and chopped
 1 green pepper, chopped
 2 onions, chopped
 8 to 12 medium shrimp, raw in shell
 8 to 12 small mussels (optional)
 Cooked peas
 Pimiento strips
 Sprinkle chicken pieces with salt and pepper. Remove sausage from casing and crumble sausage meat. In a 12-inch non-stick skillet, cook sausage in butter until sausage is brown and crumbly. Add chicken and cook until chicken is very brown on both sides. Remove chicken pieces and set aside. Add chicken broth, saffron, rice, tomatoes, green pepper and onions to skillet; top with browned chicken pieces. Simmer, stirring occasionally until chicken is tender, rice is cooked and liquid absorbed, about 25 to 30 minutes. Add shrimp and mussels and cook 5 minutes longer. Season to taste with salt and pepper, if necessary. Serve garnished with peas and strips of pimiento. NOTE: If saffron is not available, use saffron-seasoned rice and prepare as above.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About four weeks ago I woke up to find my leg was paining and felt hot. Later it broke out in a rash. Finally it was diagnosed as erysipelas, a bacteria infection. I was given pain pills and also penicillin. Now the rash is gone but the pain continues. Please tell me what erysipelas is and how long before the pain goes away. — Mrs. D.C.

This is a strep infection of the skin, also known as "St. Anthony's fire." It most often breaks out on the face. When it does elsewhere, as on your leg, diagnosis can be missed easily.

The culprits are hemolytic bacteria (they attack the red blood cells). The classic symptoms are as you report — a sudden onset of rash, usually a distinct, raised, red, round or oval patch which is hot to the touch. Chills, fever, sometimes nausea and vomiting follow. It's sometimes mistaken for contact dermatitis, but an examination of the matter (in the pustules) identifies the bacteria.

If detected early and treated (with antibiotics) it usually disappears in from one to two weeks, and the fever disappears with the redness and skin temperature. It is not always evident how the bacteria invade the skin, but it is usually through a wound or an abrasion. Hand to face is a common route, so the patient has to be kept away from others to avoid contact.

Cold compresses usually relieve the itching and pain that can accompany erysipelas (pronounced EH-rih-SIP-e-lus). It is not dangerous unless infections become chronic or if it affects infants, the very old, or the infirm.

Hopefully, by the time you read this it will be only a bad memory. Better treatment of cuts and scratches has made the problem less common in recent years. At one time outbreaks were not uncommon.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like your explanation of an "incarcerated ventral hernia." Is there any way of treating it? I am 75 and obese. — Mrs. C.S.

Let's define some terms briefly. A hernia is a pushing or bulging of tissue through an abnormal opening. The one that most often comes to mind is that of a section of bowel through a weakening in the abdominal membrane. A ventral hernia is one occurring at the site of some abdominal surgery, often because of incomplete healing of tissue following the surgery. An incarcerated hernia is one that is "pinched" in the opening. It's usually fat or bowel.

This usually causes great pain, and the threat of gangrene exists (because blood supply is shut off to the section). In emergencies the patient is placed flat on his back and the hernia gently pushed back into the abdomen. Surgery is essential for correction. Your obesity is very likely a factor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I've been told that the evening meal is important for the person who has hypoglycemia. Why is this so, and what about the other two meals? — J.K.

Well, breakfast is certainly important. It's necessary to "recharge" the system after a night of fasting. However, the evening meal is just as important, and some would say perhaps even more so. A high-protein snack before retiring can provide sufficient protein to take one through the night. Protein is used more slowly by the body.

But every meal is important for the person with low blood sugar. This is why several smaller feedings, with an emphasis on proteins, is recommended. That way the body has an ample and steady supply of the "slower-burning" protein thus avoiding the sharp ups and downs of the blood sugar utilization.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that without a bra the breasts sag and the change is permanent. Others say a bra makes tissues or muscles weaker and that makes the breasts sag. Which is correct? — Ms. C.Y.

Neither. Staying active and exercising the muscles involved (pectoral) will help keep breasts firm. Bras do not support muscles.

Low blood sugar is often the cause of faintness, headaches, visual and emotional disturbances. To learn how it can be identified and brought under control, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of "Help for Hypoglycemia," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Now South led a second club and ducked in dummy for the second time. West held the trick with the nine but now South was home since dummy's three clubs were now good.

Usually safety plays of this type are only made in rubber bridge. This hand was played in a matchpoint game, but the safety play was just as correct or maybe even more correct in that game.

The reason is that South was sure that practically all declarers would be in three notrump and would almost surely make that contract if clubs broke 3-2. Hence, South would just play safe for the contract he was in.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Rev. 6:8B-17, 7:1-3, The Living Bible

They were given control of one-fourth of the earth, to kill with war and famine and disease and wild animals.
 9 And when He broke open the fifth seal, I saw an altar, and underneath it all the souls of those who had been martyred for preaching the Word of God and for being faithful in their witnessing.
 10 They called loudly to the Lord and said, "O Sovereign Lord, holy and true, how long will it be before You judge the people of the earth for what they've done to us? When will You avenge our blood against those living on the earth?"
 11 White robes were given to each of them, and they were told to rest a little longer until their other brothers, fellow servants of Jesus, had been martyred on the earth and joined them.
 12 I watched as He broke the sixth seal, and there was a vast earthquake, and the sun became dark like black cloth, and the moon was blood-red.
 13 Then the stars of heaven appeared to be falling to earth—like green fruit from fig trees buffeted by mighty winds.
 14 And the starry heavens disappeared as though rolled up like a scroll and taken away; and every mountain and island shook and shifted.

 15 The kings of the earth, and world leaders and rich men, and high-ranking military officers, and all men great and small, slave and free, hid themselves in the caves and rocks of the mountains,
 16 And cried to the mountains to crush them. "Fall on us," they pleaded, "and hide us from the face of the one sitting on the throne, and from the anger of the Lamb."
 17 Because the great day of Their anger has come, and who can survive it?" CHAPTER 7

1 Then I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, holding back the four winds from blowing, so that not a leaf rustled in the trees, and the ocean became as smooth as glass.
 2 And I saw another angel coming from the east, carrying the Great Seal of the Living God. And he shouted out to those four angels who had been given power to injure earth and sea,
 3 "Wait! Don't do anything yet—hurt neither earth nor sea nor trees—until we have placed the Seal of God upon the foreheads of His servants."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Today a near-tragedy happened in my home. The whole situation might have been prevented with a little common sense.

"Thanks be to God" it had a happy ending for me!

I am talking about our innocent-looking Christmas tree.

While I was in another room of our house my 2-year-old reached up and took two fragile glass balls off the tree and gave them to my 8-month-old son. He promptly broke them and put them into his mouth.

I rushed him to the hospital and, luckily, he hadn't swallowed any glass shards. (I had cleared his mouth with my finger.) He would have had to be operated on.

And I was told at the hospital that this is not an uncommon occurrence this time of the year, and glass is extremely difficult to find and remove from a child during an operation.

I promptly came home and took down all dangerous ornaments from our tree.

So please, tell parents to look at their tree. Is there anything there that a child can grab and do themselves harm with? Take it down and put it away.

Childproof that tree and have a safe and happy Christmas. — Rose

You are as lovely as your name for sharing this experience with us.

Let's check those ornaments now, because Rose is right. And we might not be as lucky as she. Love and happiness to you all. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise:

I really wanted a watch for Christmas last year, but hated to just come right "out" with it.

Living away from home at the time, I wrote to my parents and was emphatic about not wanting anything, but ended my letter with — click-clock.

They got the message all right. But imagine my surprise when I got a horse! Anyway, I found out the sound of a watch was tick-tock. — Dumbfounded

Dear Heloise:

I have a hint that should help peanut square bakers stand up and cheer.

I discovered that if you cut up your freshly baked cake into squares and freeze them, it makes the cake real easy to handle.

The cake doesn't crumble from all the handling and the nuts and frosting go on in a flash.

Be sure to take out the freezer only the amount you can do in a few minutes, as the cake thaws fast.

This is a simple technique that makes this job fun. — Gail Svavina

Dear Heloise:

For those who enjoy their own string-hung soap in the shower, bore a hole in your bar of soap and tie a string through it.

Winning first were: Mrs. Max Lowmiller and Mrs. Ray Thompson; second, Mrs. Jack DuLaney and Mrs. Elmer Terry and third, Mrs. E.J. Ohmenus and Mrs. J.B. Wilson.

The club will meet again Thursday for a Christmas party at Reese Air Force Base.

QUEENS AND KINGS

The Monterrey Queens and Kings met at 1 p.m. Friday in the Bridge Center.

North-south winners were: first, Mrs. Gerald Lockey and Mrs. F.L. Alexander; second, Rhoda Price and Mrs. L.D. Richardson and third, Bill Wampler and Mike Panayotopolous.

East-west winners were: first, Mrs. J.P. Haliburton and Mrs. Howard Hoffman; second, Mrs. George Maslov and Mrs. Delmer Hayter and third, Reid Townes and Barbara Bassinger.

Hang near tub and enjoy.

It also lets the soap dry out, making the soap last longer, saving your pennies. — M.A.H.

Dear Heloise:

I do not have a garbage disposal, so I keep my food scraps, peelings and coffee grounds in a plastic container and freeze them.

On garbage collection day they drop out of the container, with the help of warm water, in one solid chunk.

This avoids odor in my trash can and eliminates bugs there too. — Wanda Hummel

Fuel Costs To Exceed Last Winter

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

NEW YORK (WNS) — No matter what fuel you use, you're going to pay more for it this winter, more even than last year's record prices. That's the coldest result of new price increases already taking effect on fuel oil, and of further hikes expected or already in effect on natural gas and electricity.

Many U.S. families will find themselves scrambling to meet fuel bills of $50 a week this winter — less, in warmer regions, more in the coldest areas. Typically, fuel bills for the heating season will total $800 to $1,000.

Fuel oil went up 14 per cent nationwide — about a nickel a gallon last heating season. It's up 191 per cent since 1967. The tell-tale clue to higher prices came last summer when the price didn't drop even a little as it usually does in the warm months but actually rose instead.

Fuel oil dealers report two increases from wholesalers this fall totaling almost a cent. Some have raised their own prices to consumers only half a cent for competitive reasons since there's no actual scarcity. Many expect prices will go up a full nickel a gallon before the end of the heating season, depending on the severity of the winter, thus putting the price consumers pay well over 50 cents.

Natural gas went up even more: 20 per cent nationally last year with the index relentlessly posting higher prices every month. More increases are expected with final enactment of the new energy law.

Electricity rates have been moving up less rapidly but steadily.

While no oil shortage is expected — just a shortage of money to pay for it — the gas supply is less certain. No more gas is available than last winter when some regions suffered shortages during the coldest weather, and when some householders who heat with electricity in warmer areas experienced blackouts due to high electricity demand.

The recently created Department of Energy says efforts have been made to increase supplies on hand of natural gas, propane gas and fuel oil, and also to prepare for any temporary localized shortages. The contingency plans, described as stronger and earlier than last year, call for cutbacks in industrial and government use, more imports, electricity sharing through interchanges, and other measures.

The adequacy of supplies, and your own expense, depend to a large extent on the weather. In most areas this winter is expected to be colder than normal but not as severe as last year.

Will you be able to manage fuel bills of $200 a month or so this winter? More families are adopting monthly budget plans, which spread fuel costs over 10 or 12 months. The disadvantage is if the dealer overestimates the monthly payments needed. You then lose interest on the extra amount. You could set up a separate interest-earning savings account for your fuel needs.

It's not too late to take fuel-saving measures. Insulation is in short supply but available if you try a number of building material dealers. The simplest and least-expensive fuel saver is weatherstripping, which typically can save 18 per cent of heat loss.

A number of products recently have been promoted to save fuel and electricity: some are worthwhile, some are not. Among dubious products, Better Business Bureaus say, is a so-called "comfort computer" to be installed on gas or electric furnaces. It is supposed to calculate the amount of fuel needed based on outside temperatures. But your thermostat performs the same function.

"Surge suppressors" also have been sold under various names at prices in the $100 range, but all authorities say they are useless.

Two of the more worthwhile products are clock thermostats and flue dampers. But even these may not be necessary or effective. Their cost would qualify as an energy-saving expense for a tax rebate if that part of the energy bill is finally enacted.

ZUCCHINI FRUIT LOAF

- 3 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp baking soda
- 1 tsp salt
- 1 tsp cinnamon
- 3 eggs
- 2 cups unpeeled grated zucchini (about 2 medium)
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 1 cup corn oil
- 1/2 cup dark corn syrup
- 1 tsp vanilla
- 2 cups coarsely chopped nuts
- 1 cup chopped candied pineapple
- 1/2 cup chopped candied orange rind
- 1/4 cup chopped candied lemon rind

Stir together the flour, baking soda, salt and cinnamon. Beat eggs slightly; add zucchini, sugar, oil, syrup and vanilla; beat to mix well. Add flour mixture; beat to mix well. Stir in the remaining ingredients. Turn into two greased 8 1/2 by 4 1/2 by 2 1/2 inch loaf pans. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 1 and 1/2 hours. Turn out on wire racks and cool. Store in refrigerator. Makes 2 loaves.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Here's something that could have been added to your answer to the mother-in-law who wanted to know how to tell her son's wife to clean up her house. Take it from someone who knows. (I have two sisters-in-law in the same boat.)

Dear Mom: So my house is a mess, is it? Did you forget your son lives here, too?

Those clothes lying on the floor are his, and the smell in the bathroom comes from wet towels he threw in a corner. They were left there until I came home from work.

Why should "Sonny" have to pick up his own things? The only thing he is interested in picking up is a can of beer. That's the way you raised him.

Your house is spotless. Why shouldn't it be? You live by yourself, don't work, and have nothing to do but inspect the homes of the girls who married "your boys." I'm signing this — Hate To See It, Too

Dear Hate To: Thanks for the well-worded blast. She deserved it.

Dear Ann Landers: May I respond to "Sinking," the grieving mother who had lost a child? She inflicted herself on a casual acquaintance who had suffered the same tragedy because, as she put it, "No one else understands. A person has to experience it."

Sixteen months ago, our eight-year-old son died of a brain tumor. I can tell you that losing a child is life's most punishing sorrow. I'm writing to inform that woman (and others) of an organization called "Compassionate Friends." It saved my sanity.

The purpose of Compassionate Friends is to offer support and understanding to any bereaved parent. We have sharing groups where we both talk and listen. At our meetings, "Sinking" will become acquainted with parents whose grief has softened. They have found new hope and the strength for living. Since I don't know where "Sinking" lives, I'm sending the address of the national headquarters. Anyone who wants information about us and our branches should write to Compassionate Friends, P.O. Box 3247, Hialeah, Fla. 33013. — N.C. Of Chicago

Dear N.C.: Many thanks for letting us know about Compassionate Friends. I have checked it out through the Chicago branch in Hinsdale and they do a remarkable job.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

New Fabrics Aid Holiday Gift Makers

By JOANNE SCHRIEBER

NEW YORK (NEA) — Gift-stitchers who enjoy making Christmas gifts and decorations can get Christmas all sewed up with the new line of holiday cut-outs.

These are yard and half-yard panels of crisp polyester and cotton, printed with holiday motifs, which are designed to be cut out, stitched and stuffed with old stockings or fiberfill, to make almost-instant Santas, stockings, and ornaments. The price is right, too.

The stitched Christmas tree ornaments are both durable and decorative. A set of "Children of the World" designs has been added to the line of classic designs and the panels are printed so you can make 22 ornaments from four half-yard panels.

Add your own touches to the ornaments — embroider names on the stockings, add a touch of trim to the toys, or a bit of glitter to the ornaments. This holiday stitching is fast and fun and a great holiday project for youngsters.

Commission Views Safety Plan

Citizens Traffic Commission Tuesday reviewed a traffic safety campaign being promoted by the city government in the wake of 44 traffic fatalities this year. Public Information Officer Vaughn Hendrie, campaign coordinator, told the commission of efforts to make Lubbockites more conscious of driving habits.

Civic groups are being urged to sponsor traffic safety programs, more defensive driving courses are being offered and public service announcements are being broadcast, Hendrie said.

The campaign theme is "Love Your Neighbor," and the goal is no traffic fatalities for the month. Mayor Roy Bass initiated the traffic safety campaign several weeks ago.

Commissioners also voted to study the traffic situation at 32nd Street and Indiana Avenue. In a letter to the group, Mrs. George Tyson complained of the "hazardous" intersection, at which six accidents have occurred this year.

The commission decided to have the Engineering Committee investigate the intersection's traffic situation.

Warship Finds Lost Sailboat

NEW YORK (AP)—A Canadian frigate on routine operations in the Caribbean on Sunday found a sailboat from Baltimore that had been the subject of a 69,000-square-mile Coast Guard search.

A Coast Guard spokesman said all five persons aboard the 41-foot L'Avenir were in good condition. "Just a little lost," when spotted by the Nipigon 59 miles southeast of Bermuda.

The boat had sailed for Bermuda Nov. 20 from a dock near Annapolis, Md., and was reported overdue late last week by D.M. Chrisman, stepfather of one of the persons aboard, Denise Debley, 20, of Columbia, Md. Chrisman called the Coast Guard when his stepdaughter failed to call at a prearranged time.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I am about to invest $75,000 for long-term growth. I've been told to a) put it into the stock market; b) into whole life insurance and c) into real estate. Each advisor spoke from personal prejudice. How can I get some impartial advice on all three media?

A. I can conceive of a tax expert making a choice from among these three different forms of investment, because there are tax advantages and tax liabilities in all of them, but I doubt you will find a single person who is an expert in all three.

Whole life insurance would not offer long-term growth. It is a dollar medium and the results are determined from the beginning. Stocks and real estate can offer growth. But they must, therefore, carry considerable risk of loss as well as the hope of profit. (Any hope of gain must be balanced with risk of loss.)

If you want to now nail down a fixed sum of dollars in 1997 or 2007 you can do so with life insurance, with Treasury bonds, with insured savings accounts. No sweat. Any life insurance agent or banker can tell you to the penny what the $75,000 invested today will amount to in 20 years. But that is not growth. It is compound interest at work—and at today's rates it works pretty well.

If you want that $75,000 to wind up as a fortune beyond the dreams of avarice then you must risk it—in stocks, in real estate, in gold coins, in rare stamps, in antique furniture or whatever "turns you on." All these areas require expertise—not only in making the original selection but in subsequent management.

If you know real estate (or an expert you trust 100 percent) consider that. Real estate has made fortunes—and has brought on bankruptcy. But if you don't know real estate, or any of the other specific fields, you may just have to turn to leading common shares and hope the corporation's management knows what it is doing.

Q. Some of our bonds have been called for redemption. It makes me hesitant to buy more bonds.

A. I don't see why. If you have been careful to avoid bonds selling at a high premium over call price—as I've warned right along—I can't see any great tragedy in being paid anywhere from 100 to 107 or 108 to turn in your bond.

It's true you must then reinvest your funds in today's money market. But your money was working in today's money market anyway, since the bond market is constantly adjusting to the going interest rates for money.

Oddly enough, I find the major cause of hesitancy in buying bonds is that many don't mature for years and therefore, as so many mistakenly believe, "lock up" your funds.

Seems you can't please everyone.

Q. I enclose a stamp so you can reply to the letters I sent you last month.

A. Fine! Now, what was the question?

Q. Is it true that the best time to buy a stock is before it goes ex-dividend and that the best time to sell is after it has gone ex-dividend?

A. No. In a normal market (whatever that is) a stock's quotation will go down to reflect the payment of the dividend. I don't know of any formula which guarantees trading gains based on dividend payments. And certainly not with today's commission rates.

CHAPTER THREE: CLAUS BEGINS A TRIP

Santa And The Pigwidgen

(Synopsis: In the days before there was a Santa Claus, a curse escapes from a mysterious purse and all the children in a village fall asleep. Searching for a way to break the curse, a toymaker named Claus finds a key in the purse.)

By LUCRECE BEALE

Claus stared at the small brass key that clattered from the old black purse.

"Don't touch it!" begged Mrs. Claus. "You may be cursed!"

"Perhaps," said Claus. "On the other hand, it may be the key to the curse that was laid on the children."

He picked up the key and examined it. On its side was printed the single word: "Pigwidgen."

"Pigwidgen?" exclaimed Mrs. Claus. "What could it mean?"

"I don't know," said Claus softly. "but I'm going to find out if I have to travel to the ends of the earth!"

He went to his workshop and packed up all the toys he had made. He loaded another bag with the cookies and cakes and sweetmeats Mrs. Claus had made. He said goodby to Mrs. Claus and set out.

He stopped at the nearest house where a sleeping child lay. He told the parents he was going away and he wanted to leave gifts for all the children. "They'll never see them. They'll never awake," sobbed the mother.

"They were cursed by the wind from the black purse!" groaned the father.

"I will find a way to break the curse," swore Claus. "When the children wake they will find a gift and a cake. If I don't come back, perhaps they will remember Claus."

He went to the child's bed and, not finding anything else to put the gifts in, stuffed them in the child's own stocking and hung it on the bed.

He went to every house in the village until his sacks were empty and no child had been forgotten. Then he took the narrow winding road that led across the mountain range to a distant town. The people there were known to be smart and traveled. He was sure they would know the meaning of the Pigwidgen key.

When he came to the town there were a few people in the streets. All were sorrowful. Claus went up to a man and said, "Why is the town so quiet and the people so sad?"

"Our children have been stricken with a stange malady," replied the man. "They sleep and will not wake."

Then Claus was indeed heavy-hearted. He knew the vapor that had escaped from the black purse had spread across the mountain range and would go on and on until all children evwhere fell asleep.

Claus drew the key from his pocket and asked the man if he had ever heard of Pigwidgen. The man shook his head. Claus searched out another man to ask the same question and got the same reply.

He asked everyone he saw. He knocked on doors. He went in the shops. He went to the schoolteachers and librarians and the doctors and the police.

Claus went to every house in the village...

No one had ever heard of Pigwidgen or had any idea what it meant.

Claus was in despair. Wearily he sank down on a curbstone. An old, old woman sat down beside him.

"I have heard of the Pigwidgen," she crooned.

"Tell me!" cried Claus eagerly. "What do you know?"

"I know what a crooked-legged elf told me a hundred years ago," wheezed the ancient crone.

"What was that?" begged Claus. "Only this I'll say," hissed the old woman. "Forget the Pigwidgen and return to your home."

Court To Determine Hughes' Residence

HOUSTON (UPI) — After months of preparations and thousands of hours' research, trial to determine the legal residence of Howard Hughes opened Tuesday with the reading of deposition testimony given by the reclusive billionaire's aunt.

Annette Gano Lummis, 88, said in her written testimony Hughes was a beautiful baby, a bright boy, loved to play golf and seldom communicated with his family.

Mrs. Lummis also said the last time she saw Hughes was after his famous around-the-world airplane flight in 1938. Her only other contact was a telegram on her 80th birthday.

"He was perfectly beautiful...a charming boy," she said in describing the child Hughes. "He was crazy about golf."

Mrs. Lummis said after the sudden death of Hughes' father — when the boy was 18 — he asked a judge to grant him adult rights.

"He was possessed to be declared an adult," she said.

Texas Attorney General John Hill, who is personally presenting the state's claim to taxes on Hughes' fortune, said in opening remarks he would prove that Hughes always considered himself a Texan.

"It is our position Houston was the preeminent headquarters of Mr. Howard Hughes," Hill told the jury of three men and three women. "He never manifested any intention in his lifetime to abandon Houston as his domicile of origin. He never establishe any permanent home outside Texas."

"We will show he intended to die in Texas or on an airplane on his way to Texas," Hill said.

Hearing Loss Related To Personality Types

Noise-induced hearing loss may be directly related to personality types, according to a recent study by Dr. William K. Ickes, professor of audiology and speech pathology at Texas Tech University.

"The fact that high intensity noise can cause hearing impairment has been known for several years," Ickes said. He became interested in why some persons seem to be affected more by high intensity noise than are others.

Ickes believed that the answer as to why some people have noise susceptible ears might lie in the role of vasoconstriction in noise-induced hearing loss.

Vasoconstriction (contracting blood vessels) is a well known phenomenon and may be caused by any anxiety-producing stimulus which produces autonomic nervous system arousal. Ickes decided to study the effect of noise as a noxious stimulus producing autonomic nerve impulses on vasoconstriction.

The study investigated the relationship of noise and the response of the autonomic nervous system. The experiment was based on research by Rosenman et al. (1964) which related personality types in terms of stress-prone behavior to autonomic nervous responses, including cardiovascular response.

Ickes administered a personality test to more than 300 Texas Tech students and used only the most extreme pattern A and pattern B personality types.

Type A are classified as those with an extreme drive to compete and to achieve, continuously involved in a variety of activities which are restrictive and inspire self-imposed deadlines.

Type B behavior is defined as that at the opposite extreme, or people who are easy going and less stress-prone.

A total of 20 people, five men and five women type A and five men and five women type B personalities, were used in the study.

Ickes raised the question as to whether loud, noxious noise affects pattern A persons differently than pattern B persons, whether noise susceptibility is a factor related to pattern A behavior, and whether measures of stress patterns can be used to predict noise susceptibility.

Each person was subjected to three time periods, a quiet period, the noise period and a second quiet period. A plethysmograph and an oscillating recording pen measured the vasoconstriction during each segment of the test.

Ickes found that there was no significant change in vasoconstriction for pattern B types. Pattern A subjects showed a marked increase in vasoconstriction (decreased blood volume) at the time they were subjected to the noise, and the increase was statistically significant.

In a closer examination Ickes found that there is no significant change in vasoconstriction for female subjects, either pattern A or pattern B, from the first quiet period to the noise period and back to the second quiet period though pattern A females show more vasoconstriction in noise than pattern B females.

Ickes does not question that high intensity noise produces noise-induced hearing loss in any subject, regardless of pattern A or pattern B behavior, but it is the pattern A subjects who seem to be more susceptible to noise.

Ickes said the application of pre-employment tests to differentiate pattern A subjects from pattern B subjects may be a useful determinant for employment in noisy work environments. The efficiency of this procedure should rest on longitudinal studies made over long periods of time, he said.

Ickes was assisted by Julie Espili, research assistant, and Anne Mary Anderson, audiologist. The research report was submitted to "Environment and Behavior" in September, 1977.

DONALD GREEN

Book Signing Party Planned For Historian

Donald E. Green, author of a book delineating the history of agriculture in West Texas as well as the history of agricultural education at Texas Tech University, will be honored Friday at an autograph party at the Ranching Heritage Center.

Green has written "Fifty Years of Service to West Texas Agriculture," which has the subtitle of "A History of Texas Tech University's College of Agricultural Sciences, 1925-1975."

The book has been published by Tech Press and first copies will be available at the autograph party at 3 p.m. in the David M. DeVitt and Mallet Ranch Building at the Ranching Heritage Center of the Museum of Texas Tech University.

The public is invited to the party honoring Green, a historian whose works relate primarily to the history of southwestern agriculture. His "Land of the Underground Rain," a history of Texas High Plains irrigation, was awarded a Texas Institute of Letters prize in 1973.

The central theme of his new book is the close working relationship between the Texas Tech College of Agriculture Sciences and its grassroots constituency, the people and the movements responsible for the realization of the vast potential of West Texas agriculture.

Official To Aid Citizens

A-J Correspondent

BROWNFIELD—State Comptroller Bob Bullock has announced he is sending a representative from his Lubbock office to Brownfield on December 14 to assist local taxpayers and answer questions about state taxes.

Bullock said Enforcement Officer James Chauncey will meet with local taxpayers at the Brownfield Courthouse from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. "If Brownfield area merchants, or anyone else for that matter, have any questions about state taxes or need help in preparing tax forms, Chauncey will be there to assist them," Bullock said.

Bullock pointed out that taxpayers who are unable to meet with his representative can phone in their questions by calling his toll-free tax information number in Austin. That number is 1-800-252-5555.

Brownfield Sets Building Mark

A-J Correspondent

BROWNFIELD—An all-time high in annual construction has been recorded in Brownfield.

Earl Elrod, Building Inspector for Brownfield, reports through the month of November building permits totaled $6,005,229. Nearly half of that total, $3,115,925 has been spent on new homes in Brownfield.

Commercial remodeling permits amounted to $666,500 including $460,000 for remodeling and renovation of the Brownfield Public School system.

The largest amount for a permit this year has been $920,000 for a mall to be built on the Tahoka highway.

According to Elrod, his office has already issued $112,500 in building permits for December.

Through November of 1976, the total construction was listed at $2,753,845.

Cactus Flower On Littlefield Stage

A-J Correspondent

LITTLEFIELD—The fledgling Littlefield Community Theatre will present "Cactus Flower," its third production, at 8 p.m. today, Thursday and Friday in the high school auditorium.

The dramatists, organized in January by Betty Johnson and Linda Utsey, will be directed by the pair in Abe Burrows's Broadway hit comedy.

"We've been fortunate enough to take green actors who've never been on stage before and make near professionals of them," Mrs. Utsey said. "The acting quality is beyond expectation."

"Cactus Flower" is the tale of a young dentist who avoids marriage by telling all his girl friends that he already is married and the father of three young children. Problems arise when his most recent love wants to meet his wife so the wife will not think that she is a homewrecker.

The doctor produces as his wife his nurse, whom he considers an "antiseptic spinster." As the story progresses, the nurse blooms into the "cactus flower."

Those performing in the production are Terri Bell, Jeff Birkelbach, Ann Manning, Carolyn West, Richard Prevatte, Robbie Rudd, Neil West, Linda Utsey, Sandra Lindsey and Adnil Yestu.

Merchants and citizens have supported the theater during its first year, which also produced "Blythe Spirit" and "Death of a Salesman."

Season tickets are available and individual tickets may be purchased at the door. Roden's Drugstore or Moss's Shoe Store.

Labor Department Sues Aviation Firms

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING—The United States Labor Department has initiated a civil suit in Abilene federal district court against Trans Regional Airlines of Big Spring, El Paso Air Transport Co. and Louis Rosenbaum, owner of Trans Regional and president of El Paso Air Transport, alleging unfair labor practices against employees.

The government has indicated it will seek back wages for any employee or former employee of the firms due such pay. The complainant accuses the defendants of working employees more than 40 hours weekly without paying time and a half wages and not maintaining adequate wage-hour records.

Ex-Superintendent Subpoenaed

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING—Mike McKinney, attorney for the Big Spring School District, has subpoenaed Emmett McKenzie, former Big Spring superintendent, to testify in the James Griffin hearing before the Texas Education Agency in Austin Thursday.

Griffin, former Big Spring High basketball coach and a Black, is maintaining that discrimination was the cause behind the Big Spring school board's decision not to retain him in the system.

Griffin's contract was terminated last May.

The hearing was to have been conducted in Austin last month but was postponed until Dec. 8 because Griffin's attorney could not attend.

Among Big Spring residents who will attend the hearing are Supt. Lynn Hise; John Smith, high school principal; Don Robbins, athletic director; William Martin, school administrator; and Jim Bill Little, school board member.

Groups Seek Gifts For Needy

A-J Correspondent

BROWNFIELD—The volunteer firemen and the Goodfellows of Brownfield are now receiving donations of Christmas presents for the needy.

Christmas baskets as well as new, used or repairable toys may be dropped off at the fire station located on the south side of the Brownfield City Hall.

Names will be taken for recipients of the Christmas baskets and toys from December 13 through December 20.

Last year, the Goodfellows and volunteer firemen delivered some 130 gifts to the needy.

The project is sponsored by the Terry County United Way.

Legal Moves Interrupt Child Custody Battle

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Closed door arguments and legal maneuvers preempted a child custody battle scheduled Tuesday between Karen Master and her ex-husband, Walter A. Master.

Mrs. Master, 29, is the live-in girlfriend of millionaire Cullen Davis. She provided Davis his alibi at last month's murder trial in Amarillo where Davis was acquitted of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Davis, 44, and Mrs. Master have lived together since his separation from his wife, Priscilla.

Attorneys for Master Monday filed a petition in Domestic Relations Court Judge Eva Barnes' court discussing Mrs. Master's qualifications as a mother. The attorneys filed a similar petition last week in Judge Joe Eidson's court.

Eidson last week granted Master a temporary restraining order preventing his former wife from taking their children near Davis. However, he later returned custody to Mrs. Master, pending the outcome of Tuesday's hearing.

Lawyers for Mrs. Master contended

Eidson did not have jurisdiction in the custody fight because Judge Barnes handled the original divorce decree and subsequent modifications.

Odell McBrayer, an attorney representing Master, has said he will seek to move the case to Judge Barnes' court to avoid a dispute over jurisdiction.

At issue is who should have custody of Walter Adrian Master III, 9, and Chesley Joseph Master, 6.

The youngsters stayed with their father during Thanksgiving weekend while Mrs. Master and Davis skied in Colorado. The couple returned home and Mrs. Master could not find the children.

McBrayer said he again will seek a temporary order forbidding Mrs. Master from taking the children around Davis.

Realtors Pick New President

The Lubbock Board of Realtors picked Brownie Brownlee as president of the organization at an installation banquet held recently at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, according to Bobby McQueen, banquet director.

Other officers for 1978 included: Darryl Berry, first vice president; Sid Shavor, second vice president; and Jim Riddle, secretary-treasurer.

Don Osborne of the Osborne Co. Realtors was chosen Realtor of the Year for 1977, and Martha Farmer of Roy Middleton Real Estate was named Salesman of the Year.

Wallace Moritz of San Angelo, president-elect of the Texas Association of Realtors, installed the new Lubbock officers. Ted Schuler of Amarillo, regional vice president, also attended the meeting.

Bob Murphey, a Nacogdoches attorney, was guest speaker at the event, and Mayor Roy Bass served as master of ceremonies.

New directors for 1978 include: Glenn Antwine, Harold Chapman, Sonny Arnold, Johnny Gamble, Bobby McQueen, Roy Middleton, Joe Murfee, Christine Nelson, John Walton and Jim Wills.

Obesity Seen As Major Industry

how big it was five years ago.

"Just recently, the war on fat has picked up steam," he said. "People are thinking about health more. You've got the 'fit is in' phenomena, and running, health clubs, things like that are booming."

The report said the over-the-counter weight control market is growing at a rate of 20 percent a year and that its annual volume is $110 million. That figure is expected to exceed $147 million by 1980 and over $194 million by 1985, Swartz said.

"Sales of prescribed, anti-obesity, anorectic pharmaceuticals should surpass the $269 million volume mark by 1985, from $180 million in 1976," the report said.

"The amphetamines, capturing a $26.1 million share of the 1976 market, are expected to produce a mere $10 million by 1985 ... Non-amphetamines are expected to take up the slack, with their sales generating $269 million by 1985 against $68.9 million in 1976."

The non-prescription weight-reducing aid market is increasing fastest because "many people are embarrassed to go to their doctors about overweight problems and would rather buy over-the-counter products," said Swartz.

"The fact is, most people would rather buy these things over-the-counter and 90 percent of these products are now sold in our drug stores, and that makes it super easy to get these.

Carter Discloses Steel Protection Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter disclosed on Tuesday a program to increase production and employment in the hard-pressed American steel industry in upward pressure on domestic prices, but said domestic steel producers could hurt their own cause if they substantially hike prices.

The industry in recent years, including 20,000 in the last few months.

Steel imports have accounted for about 20 percent of domestic consumption so far this year, compared to an average of 13 percent between 1973 and 1976. The rising tide of imports has resulted in widespread production cutbacks and job layoffs in this country.

Solomon agreed that dumping, selling at below local production costs, has been a serious problem. He said the new plan is aimed at stopping dumping, which is illegal, by speeding up legal procedures for dealing with it.

First, the government will establish trigger prices for each major import product, at least 50 in all. This will be based on the cost of producing steel in Japan, the most efficient steel-producing country.

Once this is done, the price of imported steel will be checked against the trigger prices, and special duties will be assessed against lower-priced steel to bring it up to the trigger price level.

The process will take between 60 to 90 days, instead of the approximately 13 months it now takes to process dumping complaints. Foreign producers would still have an opportunity to justify their prices, but they would have the duties assessed when the case is started, rather than after it is decided.

Japanese officials are scheduled to arrive in Washington Wednesday to provide information on their production costs. Solomon said he expects trigger prices to be established by the end of December and that the entire plan will be in operation within 60 days.

The plan will not bar all dumping, however, since European producers, who have higher production costs than the Japanese, can sell at the Japanese price.

The plan does not require congressional approval.

But it encountered some sharp criticism, especially from Republicans, who were briefed in advance along with other members of Congress.

"Never before has the administration labored so long about so much and produced so little," Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., told reporters. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said he didn't think it would help much and branded it "a disaster for the Northeast."

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Wednesday, December 7, 1977

by protecting it from unfair competition from foreign imports.

It was estimated the program could increase current steel employment in the United States by between 18,000 and 35,000.

The program would establish prices below which most imports would not be allowed to sell at unless a special tariff is imposed. It also would provide loan guarantees and other financial help to assist steel producers in modernizing and keeping their plants open.

The program is designed to prevent foreign producers from flooding the U.S. market with steel priced below the cost of production.

The administration did not rule out the possibility that the program could result

"The precise level of import reduction will depend upon the price behavior of the domestic steel companies. The more sharply the domestic firms raise prices, the smaller will be their recapture of the market," said a report to the president by an inter-agency task force.

The 35-page task force report was prepared by Treasury Undersecretary Anthony M. Solomon.

A White House statement said Carter approved of the report's recommendations and felt they would "help revitalize the health of the domestic steel industry."

Solomon told reporters the program, if successful, could return between 18,000 and 35,000 laid-off steelworkers to their jobs. About 130,000 jobs have been lost in

Misleading Mail Rules Tightened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Have you ever opened what you thought was a bill only to discover it was only an advertisement? Such misleading material will be illegal starting Thursday under a new postal service rule.

The regulation tightens requirements for disclaimers designed to make it clear that the item is not a bill. Until now, postal officials said the required notices usually were placed in a manner "little calculated to bring the notice to the recipients of the solicitation."

Under the new rules, the disclaimer will have to be printed in a color contrasting with everything else on the face of the material, and will have to be in at least 30 point type. That means the print must be at least three times larger than normal newspaper printing.

People sending out the ads would not be allowed to include qualifying statements such as "notice required by law." And they would have to print one of two statements on the solicitation:

—One is: "This is a solicitation for an order of goods or services, or both, and not a bill, invoice or statement of account due. You are under no obligation to make any payments on account of this offer unless you accept this offer."

—In the second case the material would simply state "THIS IS NOT A BILL." If this is done, the item would have to also state, in smaller 18-point type, "This is a solicitation. You are under no obligation to pay unless you accept this offer."

Mail solicitations which you believe violate this regulation should be taken to your local post office.

Plastic Bus Windows Okayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of these days when you look out the bus window, you'll be looking through plastic instead of glass.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has announced that plastic will be allowed for use in bus windows, except for the windshield and the windows to the immediate right and left of the driver.

The decision was made, the agency said, to reduce the safety hazards and maintenance problems resulting from deliberate breakage, as plastic is more difficult to break than regular glass.

FTC Prepares Credit Pamphlet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Equal Credit Opportunity Act has been in force for some time, but its details may still be confusing to some.

So, the Federal Trade Commission has prepared a booklet explaining your rights under the law.

Single copies of the booklet, "Equal Credit Opportunity Act," are available without charge from Equal Credit Opportunity Act, Public Reference Branch, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C., 20580.

Assault Victim Sues Knievel

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Television executive Sheldon Saltman has sued daredevil Evel Knievel for hitting him with a baseball bat. The suit does not specify damages for the injuries he said he received.

Saltman's suit, filed Monday in Superior Court, says he suffered a broken wrist and arm in the Sept. 21 incident. Knievel has said he hit the television executive because a book Saltman had written about him insulted his family. The stuntman received a 180-days jail sentence and three years' probation after pleading guilty to the assault.

Hungarians Display Tolerance

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungary paid tribute Tuesday to the Jews living in the country and displayed a measure of tolerance as it officially acknowledged the visit here of Nahum Goldmann, founding president of the World Jewish Congress.

A delegation of the organization headed by Goldmann paid a brief visit to Hungary to attend centenary celebrations of the Budapest Rabbinical Seminary — East Europe's only rabbi training college.

Before his departure Goldmann said he was very happy to have attended "this great event in international Jewish life."

He added it was also gratifying to have been received by Hungarian President Pal Losonczi and to have talked to Imre Miklos, an under-secretary in the government of Premier Gyorgy Lazar.

He said he was pleased to learn of "the freedom and equal rights" of Jews in Hungary.

Drug Trial Rescheduled

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The federal drug trial of George Kirby, the comedian-impressionist, has been rescheduled for Dec. 13. He is charged with selling heroin to an undercover investigator.

The trial originally was to have started Nov. 8, but was continued until Tuesday. The latest postponement was ordered because of conflicts with another trial still in progress.

Kirby, 52, was arrested last May after allegedly attempting to sell about $26,000 worth of heroin to an undercover agent.

Kirby has pleaded innocent to the charges.

Prince Rates High Marks

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles is "certainly the best-dressed young man in the world," and if he weren't heir to the British throne he could have been a highly successful model, Graham Lack, chairman of the Tie Manufacturers Association, said Tuesday.

In contrast, Lack told the association's annual meeting, British men in general dress like "wretched, slovenly yobboos ... and have given Britain the reputation of being a sleazy, run-down nation."

Tech Production In Theater Finals

The American College Theater Festival, staged at Texas Tech University, was but one of the many regional festivals held throughout the southwest. A total of 64 universities participated by staging productions, and judges have narrowed the field to eight finalists which will go to the next stage in Fort Worth.

Those plays making the finals are "Elizabeth I" from Texas Tech University; "Sideshow" from Angelo State University (the Playwriting Awards entry); "Equus" from Eastern New Mexico University; "At The Sweet Gum Bridge" from Oklahoma State University; "Vanities" from the University of Oklahoma; "Biedermann And The Firebugs" from St. Edwards University; "Tartuffe" from the University of Arkansas and "The Runner Stumbles" from Central State University in Oklahoma.

Forty actors and actresses were nominated for the Irene Ryan acting award. Texas Tech University nominees are Donna Dorsett and Matthew Posey, both from "Elizabeth I."

Invention Reduces Background Noises

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Almost every record or tape recording sold today benefits from a noise reduction system patented more than a decade ago by a physicist who was irritated by background "hiss" on his own records.

Dr. Ray Dolby's invention is now used by every major recording studio, it is inside almost every cassette or eight-track tape recorder and it's rapidly becoming an integral part of movie-making.

"Most film sound relies on techniques that haven't changed since the 1930s," says loan Allen, marketing vice president for Dolby Laboratories Inc. "That's the way film sound has always been and because there's a picture there, it tends to make the sound believable. With most movies, if you switched off the picture, you would see how terrible the sound is."

Films are the latest utilization of the Dolby system, which was developed in 1966 for professional recording companies. The technique later was modified for use in home hi-fi units and tape recorders. Soon, Allen says, it will be used to eliminate background noise on videotape.

Dolby developed a way to screen a piece of music to determine what notes might be obscured by the background noise present on any recording tape. This tape noise obliterates silent passages and can hide quiet musical sounds. Bass notes, for example, must be extremely loud to be heard over this background noise.

Before a recording is made, the Dolby system "listens" to the music to find the spots where background noise might be heard when the tape is played later. When it locates these spots, the system increases the volume so that the music overrides the background noise and produces a clear recording. During playback, the system reduces the volume in the same spots, which makes the music come out evenly and without tape "hiss."

There actually are two Dolby systems, the A-type used by professional recording studios and the B-type, which is part of cassette and eight-track tape recorders. Dolby Labs makes and sells only the A-type professional equipment. The company licenses such manufacturers as Sony, Sansui and TEAC to use the B-type system in their tape recorders.

Dolby is a private company and sales figures are not available. But Allen says the company gets about 50 cents for every tape recorder sold with the B-type system and that such fees represent about half the firm's income. The rest comes from the sale of A-type equipment.

 NASHVILLE (AP) — A temporary restraining order was issued Tuesday in Chancery Court, preventing the release of two old record albums featuring Johnny Cash, Carl Perkins and the late Elvis Presley.

The order was issued by Chancellor Ben Cantrell at the request of lawyers for Presley, Cash, Perkins and RCA Records. Presley recorded for RCA.

The lawyers have filed suit to prevent Nashville record producer Shelby Singleton from placing the unreleased albums on the market. Cantrell set a hearing date on the suit for Dec. 14.

The albums, on the Sun label, are called "The Million Dollar Quartet and '1955 Sun Days."

Heartline

HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens of all ages. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or problem, write in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. Senior citizens will receive prompt replies but a stamped, self-addressed envelope must be included with the request. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

Q. I am getting ready to retire and go on Social Security. I have quite a large sum of money in the bank and would like to invest this, yet I do not know about where to invest. Can you give me any tips on what to do? — J.K.

A. Any time you are investing your own money in anything, the first thing to do is investigate the company completely and seek advice from either your lawyer or an investment counselor.

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission recently issued a list of 10 warning signals that investors should be aware of:

- Promises of spectacular returns or profits far exceeding those normally expected.
- Sales approaches from strangers.
- Rumors you hear from friends, neighbors and acquaintances about unusual investment opportunities.

— Telephone calls from strangers, particularly in other cities, trying to persuade you to invest.

— The use of post office box numbers in connection with communications.

— The failure to receive full information about the people involved, the terms of the offering, the financial condition of the enterprise and its prior business record.

— The promise of a solution to all your financial problems.

— Pressure to make quick investment decisions.

— Claims of a new or exotic product or enterprise.

— Claims that you have been selected to get in on the ground floor.

Q. I am 54 years old and have never been married. I am still working but I do not know how much longer I will continue to do so. I would be interested in finding a pen pal if I could find someone in my age group. I am not interested in marriage. Do you think you could help me? — S.K.

A. Heartline has developed a pen pal club exclusively for people over age 50. "Heartline's American 60 Club" has been in existence for over three years and has thousands of members throughout the country. This is not a dating or a match-making club. For complete information and an enrollment card, write, "Heartline's American 60 Club," 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 43081. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Bomb Hoaxers Risk Stiff Punishment

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Bomb hoaxers in South Africa face up to 15 years in prison if they are caught, a police official warned Tuesday. Each phone call has to be investigated and it takes up valuable time, he said.

After explosion of the third bomb in the greater Johannesburg area in 12 days, Brig. H.L. Abbot, commissioner of police for northern Transvaal, said police had received numerous calls from persons who warned them about bombs on their premises. "The law provides for a stiff sentence and these people must take note," Abbott said.

Don't settle for just any size car.

Cordoba

for your comparison to the down-sized GM intermediates. You'll find the '78 Cordoba has significant advantages. Advantages that make '78 Cordoba a remarkable value: A longer wheel base (114.9") and more roominess (380.8 cu. ins.) than Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Olds Cutless Calais, Pontiac Grand Prix or Buick Regal. You'll find '78 Cordoba has more of what you're looking for with so many more features and options that are standard equipment.

The ultimate personal car from Chrysler

Comparison proves its value!

Phonograph Centennial Observed

By The Associated Press

One hundred years ago Tuesday in Menlo Park, N.J., a hand cranked a handle, a stylus scratched a groove and out came a bleary, eerie, world-changing voice that said quite modestly: "Mary had a little lamb."

The talking machine, swaddled in a tin foil cylinder and costing all of $15, was born on Dec. 6, 1877, the child of Thomas Alva Edison.

The inventor later confessed, "I was never so taken aback in my life - I was always afraid of things that worked the first time."

Altered Way Of Life

And work it did. The talking machine has become a $4 billion annual record industry in the United States, and the invention has changed the way the world learns and spends its leisure time.

Its popularity declined somewhat with radio, movies and television, but the talking machine rebounded, and today few American homes are without a phonograph.

In 1878, G. Schirmer of New York prophetically copyrighted a song by H.A.H. von Ograff: "The Song of Mister Phonograph."

Known By Many Names

"My name is Mister Phonograph and I'm not so very old. My Father he's called Edison and I'm worth my weight in gold..."

Over the years the talking machine has been called by many names: the tin foil phonograph, the Edison Home Phonograph, the Victor Talking Machine and His Master's Voice Gramophone.

The little black and white dog listening to the Gramophone horn became a trademark dear to Americans who clustered round their early conical or "exponential" horns to hear Sunday music in the parlor.

Morning Glory Embellished

Today, records have changed from scratchy duplication of reedy voices and vaudeville skits to great ganglia of intricate sound. The delicately painted morning glory horn has become a sophisticated stereophonic amplifier, mainstay of the "home entertainment center."

The talking machine records - first cylinders, then discs - made fortunes for Enrico Caruso, the Beatles and Elvis Presley. Cutting a record has nearly become a synonym for success, and success is measured in golden records.

It has slipped into our speech and coined expressions like "groovy," "broken record," "flip side" and "disc jockeys."

Silence No Longer Golden

The phonograph gave rise to juke boxes and record hops. The juke box, with its parade of records, turned the ice cream fountain into a gathering spot. Where music was available, people could dance.

Today they dance at the discotheque, where the record disc is king.

The same disc could nourish quiet hours and capture on hard rubber or plastic sentiments to be savored again and again. And the silence that once was golden was broken by a record that might become platinum.

Preserver Of Culture

A girl in bobby socks could flop down, listen to love songs on her 45s, and imagine she was somewhere besides her upstairs bedroom with chores to be done.

Talking machine records catch the mood and add the backdrop. Bing Crosby still sings "White Christmas." Lovers still put romantic music on the gramophone.

Records preserve the word and convey culture.

Edison's early talking machine played back the voices of P.T. Barnum and Robert Browning. Brahms played one of his own works into the antique recording horn. Great books, speeches, poems and soliloquies are preserved on black discs.

Link With Home

After World War II, American records appeared around the world and were snatched up by peoples eager for an earful of American jazz.

In Vietnam, GIs wondered what they were listening to back home and they welcomed the soldier who brought a stack of new records back with him from leave.

Robert Altshuler, vice president with CBS records, says 1977 has been the biggest year yet and records are going strong. What began as Edison's novelty has become not a luxury, but a virtual necessity, he says.

"In the days before radio, movies and television the phonograph was the home entertainment," Altshuler said. "Now we have all those things and records are bigger than ever. 'For $4 or $5 you can sit at home and play a record hundreds and hundreds of times. It's still the best entertainment buy.'"

Others occasionally drape seaweed over themselves while they nap so that they won't drift away from the group.

AS ONE COACH TO ANOTHER—Texas Tech athletic director J.T. King visits with his latest head coach, Rex Dockery, right, at Tuesday night's press conference where it was announced that Dockery would succeed Steve Sloan. Texan, N-Damer Agree On Shootout

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Vinson of Notre Dame and Morgan Copeland of Texas met each other face-to-face Monday, a situation that might prevail again come Jan. 2 under entirely different and less friendly circumstances.

The two were among 11 players to be honored Tuesday night as winners of National Football Foundation $1,000 scholar-athlete fellowships. But when top-rated Texas and fifth-ranked Notre Dame square off in the Cotton Bowl the day after New Year's there'll be blood on the moon and perhaps a national college football championship in the balance.

"I'm not going to make any prediction except that it'll be a good game," said Vinson, an offensive guard. "It's got to be the best bowl game."

"I'm sure Bear Bryant's view wouldn't agree with that, and neither would Barry Switzer's. But here you have Texas; the No. 1 team in the nation, against Notre Dame, whose name itself helps to draw big crowds, and I think the winner should be the national champion."

"After all, Texas is No. 1 and they beat Oklahoma and Arkansas. And if someone can beat them, then they more than anyone else will have a more legitimate claim to the national championship."

Copeland, a linebacker, doesn't expect to lose to Notre Dame, but he sided with Vinson anyway.

"I'd have to say you'd probably have a legitimate claim if you beat the No. 1 team," he agreed, "but it's a pretty subjective process."

"I'm glad we're playing a prestigious opponent because this will be a fun game to participate in, the kind of game a kid looks forward all his life to playing in."

If Notre Dame defeats Texas, both will finish with 11-1 records. So will the winner of the No. 3 Oklahoma-No. 6 Arkansas Orange Bowl and possibly second-ranked Alabama, No. 4 Michigan and No. 8 Penn State, as well. Seventh-ranked Kentucky, ineligible for a bowl game, wound up 10-1.

Both Notre Dame and Texas turned things around this season. Texas, coming off an unaccustomed 5-5-1 campaign under Darrell Royal, posted an 11-0 regular season mark with a new coach, Fred Akers, at the helm. The Longhorns are the only major unbeaten team in the country.

"Nobody picked us higher than fourth in the Southwest Conference," Copeland said, "but we'd thought we'd be in the Cotton Bowl, although maybe not as the No. 1 team in the country."

"After all, we had one of the best runningbacks in the nation (Earl Campbell), one of the best defensive tackles (Brad Shearer) and the fastest man on any football field playing flanker (Lam Jones)."

"We had the talent. We just needed to get going in the right direction. The new staff has made a tremendous difference. After one or two games the national championship was on everybody's mind and as each game passed we began to talk about it more and more."

Notre Dame's comeback, according to Vinson, started in the final period of a come-from-behind victory over Purdue following a hard-pressed triumph over injury-riddled Pitt and a shocking loss to Mississippi.

Trailing 24-14, quarterback Joe Montana came off the bench and rallied the Irish to a 31-24 victory. They've been rolling ever since.

"I think the loss to Mississippi may have been good for us," Vinson said. "We hadn't played the caliber of football we were capable of. We expected everyone to lie down and let us walk all over them."

Raider Players Support Dockery As Head Man

By DON HENRY

Executive Sports Editor

Godfrey Turner came looking for the new head football coach.

Just minutes after Rex Dockery was officially presented to a press gathering as the new man to succeed Steve Sloan, Turner popped up in the hallway outside the coaches' offices at the Tech athletic department.

"Sure," said Turner, a wide receiver, when questioned about liking the move. "He's all right. We like him."

Then, he turned, pulled his right arm behind his head and imitated a passer's arm motion. "Whoosh," he said and grinned.

There was little more that needed to be said. The arm motion indicated that Turner felt that Dockery would be throwing the football next fall, and, as a result, Turner would be having an opportunity to be in the same direction with his hands outstretched.

On the opposite of the line, defensive tackle David Hill, from his dorm room, expressed the same approval.

"He's a good choice," said the Seminole native. "No, I'm not surprised, we all felt it would be him or (Tom) Wilson."

"It'll be a continuation of (former coach Steve) Sloan's program. That's an advantage. And, since it's a continuation, we won't have to prove ourselves again, like we would have had to do under a new coaching staff."

"Most of the guys are pleased," commented lineman Bubba Burns. "He's a very smart coach. I'll say this: We'll be the meanest team in the conference."

"Hey, we're pleased, really pleased," exclaimed runningback Sam Bailey. "Glad to see him get it."

"You know, he recruited me (from McKinney), so that (his promotion) really puts a big smile on my face."

Bailey added that he felt the Raiders would have a good offense next year. "I think even better offense than a lot of people think."

Dockery last season successfully recruited Bruce Compton, an outstanding running back from Norman, Okla., who later signed a professional baseball contract. Compton has indicated that he might return to Tech if he is not successful in baseball.

"It would be pretty tough to find a difference between coach Sloan and coach Dockery," Compton said.

Bailey said the players first got an indication of the upcoming announcement at Tuesday's practice. The Raiders returned to light work Tuesday afternoon in preparation for the Dec. 23 Tangerine Bowl. "I just wanted him to get it."

"I just saw—it flashed across the screen," commented defensive back Mike Patterson in learning of the promotion of the offensive coordinator. "I'm pretty well pleased. I really hadn't had any idea who it would be. It took Dan Irons, an all-America Dockery had coached, only a few minutes to hear the news Tuesday night and drift out to the athletic office to congratulate the new head man."

"That's great, just super," was Irons' reaction to the news. "I've been working under him for three years, and not only is he an excellent coach, but he's a great person."

"I have only respect for him. He gets all he can out of the players; they want to give all they can for him."

"He makes things happen. During the game, he tells us to make something happen, don't wait around."

Irons has made three all-America squads this fall, despite being injured part of the season.

Aggies Thrash Sam Houston

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Jarvis Williams flipped in 18 points and Willie Foreman added 17 Tuesday night as the Texas Aggies won their fourth straight nonconference college basketball game, a 95-73 thumping of Sam Houston State.

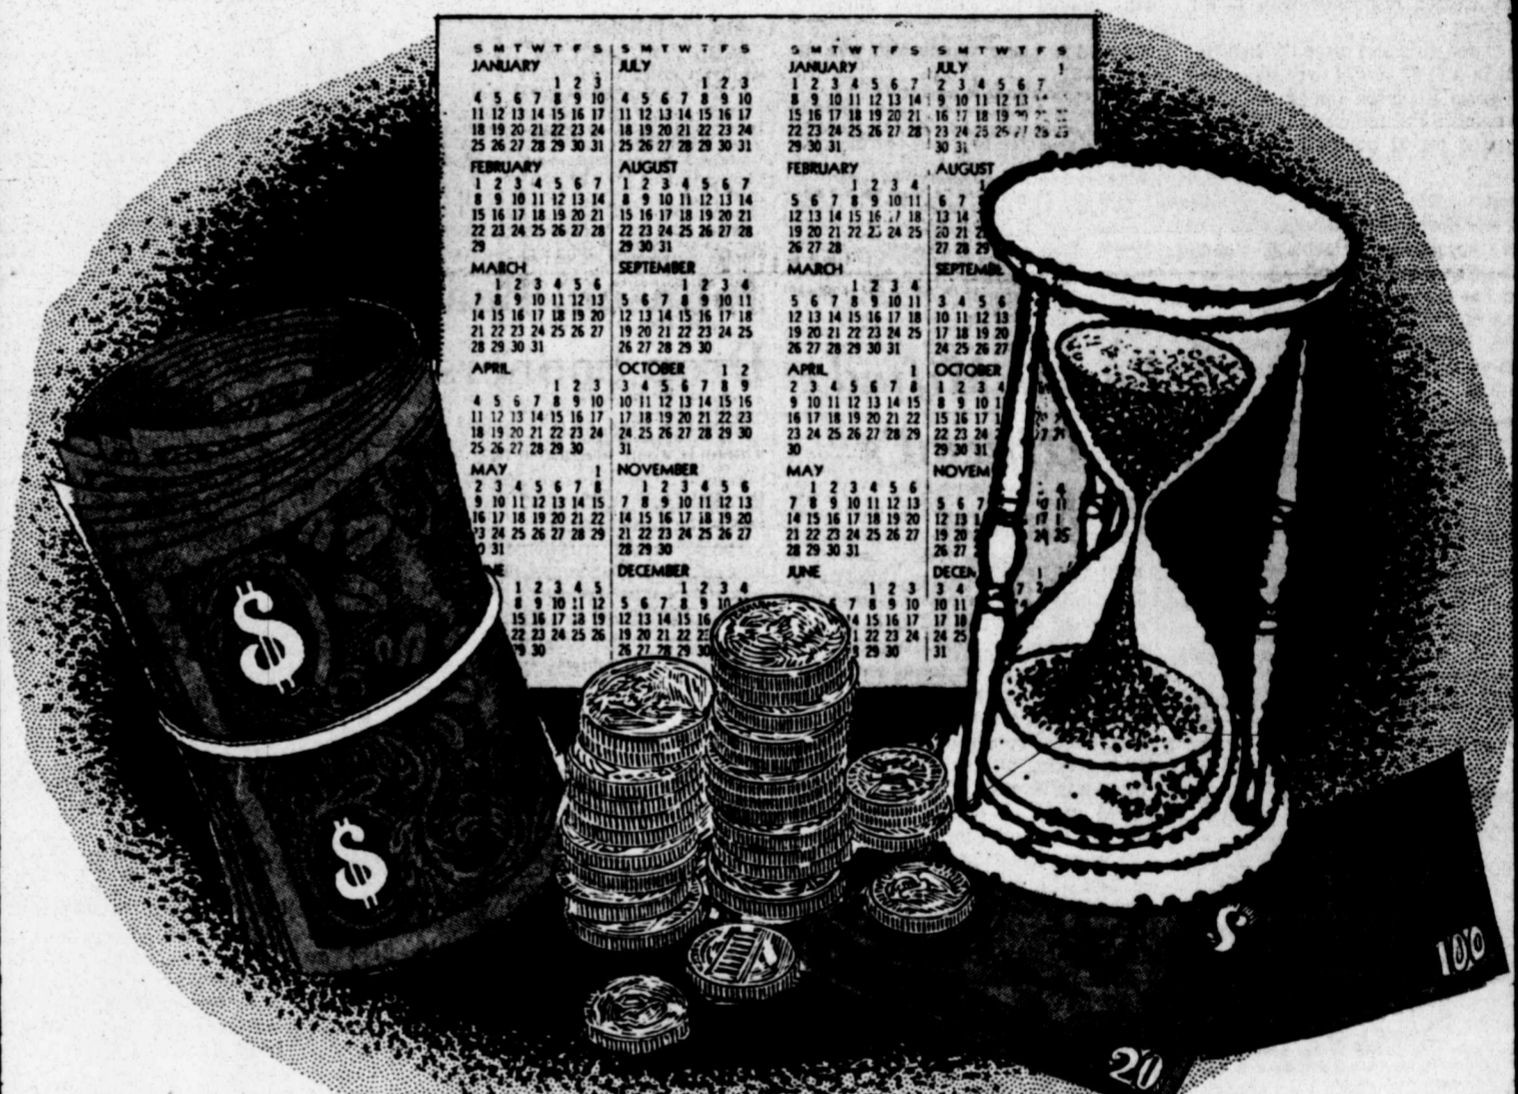

Williams and Foreman led a parade of four Aggies in double figures. Freshman Vernon Smith had 14 and Wally Swanson added 12 for Texas A&M, now 4-0.

Sam Houston State, which dropped to 1-5, was led by Cornell Harrison's 22 points. Mike Thompson added 15 and Alvin Brooks had 10.

Smith had 10 rebounds as the Aggies outrebounced the Bearcats 57-37. The Aggies built up a 45-33 halftime bulge.

Shaver, Bailey Land SP Honors

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
All year long area AA coaches spoke of the power and balance of District 5-AA. And that balance is evident on The Avalanche-Journal All-South Plains team as all seven of that league's teams are represented.

dog mentor A.D. Shaver had to fend off a former pupil — Littlefield's Jerry Blake-ly.
And Tahoka workhorse Clifford Bailey had to weather the antics of Lockney's Danny Clark to snare the player's award. Shaver and the Bulldogs were picked fifth in 5-AA but tied state-ranked Slaton for the top spot and won the playoff honors by virtue of their 9-7 win over the Tigers. Tahoka finished 9-4 and was eliminated by Childress 32-21 last Friday.
Blakely, who played for Shaver at Seagraves way back when, saw his Wildcats, ticketed for a fourth-place finish in the six-team 3-AA, finish in a three-way tie for the title, win a coin flip and then upset Idalou in bidistrict before bowing to Childress in the regional game.

Bailey carried 424 times for 2,404 yards during the season, finishing as No. 6 on the statewide Class AA season ledger, and his 3,528 yards in two years leaves him in 63rd place on the all-time rushing list. His 2,404 yards is the 16th best figure ever recorded by a Texas schoolboy runner.
Clark, playing for a 4-6 team, carried 282 times for 1,730 yards and 20 TDs — nine fewer than Bailey could manage.
Tahoka also supplied linebacker Randy Meeks on the squad. Other 5-AA gridders on the team include Slaton quarterback Steve White, his twin brother Stan, a defensive end; secondaryman Tim Bourn and linebacker Michael Piwonka; Roosevelt center Larry Washington; Freshpunch tackle Freddy Rodriguez; Cooper punter David Martinez; Denver City noseguard Kenneth Harvey, and Post linebacker Randy Baker.
Idalou and Littlefield each had three selections with the Idalou "Cats" supplying runningback Danny Murphy, defensive tackle Kenny Phillips and secondaryman Buckles Bryant. The Littlefield "Cats" had wide receiver Rudolph Smith, guard Ronnie Milligan and placekicker Richard Soria.
Tulia, Friona and Muleshoe each had a pair on the squad. Tulia placed defensive stalwarts Trent Finck and linebacker Alex Vaughn. Friona had offensive linemen Jeff Peak and Koty Kothman and Muleshoe had tight end Marcus Beversdorf and defensive end Mark Washington.
Murphy carried 211 times for 1,388 yards and scored 142 points this fall. Smith caught 20 passes for 350 yards but also stepped in the backfield every now and then and wound up with 1,261 yards rushing on 189 carries.
Beversdorf caught 17 passes for 254 yards and four TDs.
Kothman graded 94 percent on his blocking this year and Peak 90 percent. Milligan was termed "perhaps the best offensive linemen" to come out of Littlefield in a decade, and both Washington and Rodriguez were the top linemen on their teams.

Defensively, the team had four linebackers, two secondarymen, two ends, two tackles and a noseguard.
Finck averaged 15 tackles a game at tackle, had 12 QB sacks, recovered one fumble, caused three fumbles, blocked one punt and blocked one field goal; Kenny Phillips had 68 tackles and was the most consistent Idalou lineman.
End Stan White missed the last three games with a collapsed lung but had 57 tackles, 27 assists and 18 QB sacks before the mishap. His brother Steve hit on 46 of 91 passes for 649 yards and 12 TDs plus carrying 77 times for 644 more yards and five TDs.
Mark Washington, the other defensive end, had 32 big plays among his 86 tackles. Noseguard Harvey had 40 unassisted tackles, 96 assists, had 31 tackles for losses, caused three fumbles, recovered two, blocked three passes and one punt, and had eight QB sacks.
Among the linebackers, Vaughn averaged 20 tackles a game, had eight QB sacks, caused two fumbles, blocked a field goal and caused one interception. Meeks had 112 tackles and 120 assists, recovered four fumbles and picked off three passes. Piwonka had 110 tackles, 68 assists and had one interception. Baker averaged a dozen stops per game.
In the secondary, Bourn had 51 tackles, 31 assists and returned three interceptions for TDs. Bryant managed six stops a game and had five interceptions.
Cooper's Martinez averaged 40.2 yards on his 36 punts with a long boot of 65 and didn't have any blocked. Soria kicked three field goals and 19 of 20 PATs.
Both Meeks and Bailey made the team for a second straight year.

Eastwick, Agent Talk Money At Major League Meetings

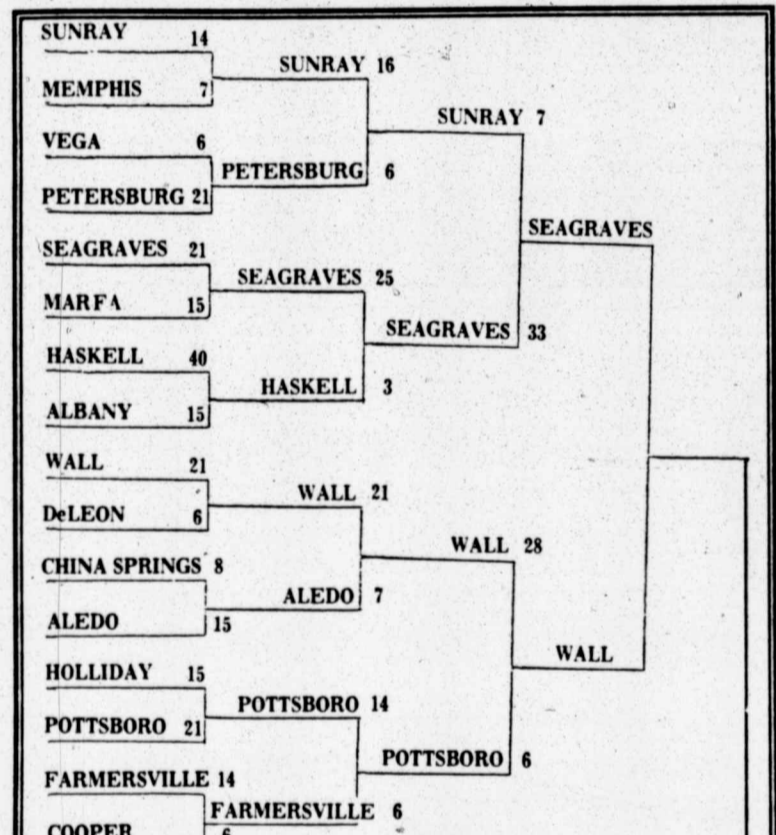

HONOLULU (AP) — Reliever Rawley Eastwick is the next priority on baseball's free agent shopping list, and it seems certain that he will be wrapped up and delivered before the start of the week's major league baseball meetings.
Eastwick was cloistered with agent Jerry Kapstein Tuesday, narrowing down his choice after another Kapstein client, left-hander Ross Grimsley, had signed with the Montreal Expos late Monday night.
The Grimsley agreement was reached via a three-way telephone hookup with the pitcher on vacation in the Bahamas, Kapstein in his Virginia offices, and the Expos here. The pitcher's deal calls for more than $1 million in a six-year agreement.
The Expos came to these meetings with pitching as their No. 1 priority and general manager Charley Fox was happy to come up with Grimsley to fill part of the hurling gap. "We now have three solid pitchers," said Fox. "We really don't need anything else."
The other Expo starters are right-handers Steve Rogers and Wayne Twitchell, and although Fox is satisfied, he wouldn't mind seeing Eastwick in the Expo bullpen as well. "We're still in the ball park on Eastwick," said Fox, hoping that the pitcher's conversation with Kapstein Tuesday would turn Montreal's way following the Grimsley deal.
Meanwhile, trade rumors continued throughout the convention headquarters but so far the talk was just that—talk. The most persistent rumors concerned the Chicago White Sox, who had swung the first deal of the meetings by acquiring slugger Bobby Bonds in a six-players swap with California.
With the addition of Bonds and young Thad Bosley, who came over in the same deal, the Sox' roster lists 10 outfielders. Chicago also drafted first baseman Reggie Sanders, overloading a position that already has Jim Spencer and Lamar Johnson battling for playing time. The rest of the infield is also crowded, and it is likely that some of that depth will be dealt off for some pitching.
"We'll have 55 players in training camp," said manager Bob Lemon. "Get there early."
One of these players will be 18-year-old pitcher Dick Dotson, also acquired in the Bonds trade. He could be the sleeper of the deal. Several farm directors familiar with younger prospects said the teen-aged right-hander has a major league arm.
To get Bonds, Bosley and Dotson, the Sox surrendered catcher Brian Downing and two pitchers, Chris Knapp and Dave Frost.
The Angels had two reasons for making the swap. The first was Bonds' announced intention to play out his contract and become a free agent at the conclusion of the 1978 season—a hassle California did not wish to face. The other was a desire to add pitching depth to a staff that has little behind its two superstars, Frank Tanana and Nolan Ryan.
A host of clubs continued lobby huddles discussing possible deals, but contract status was a major concern every time a player's name entered the talks. The free-agent revolution has altered trade conversation drastically and the repercussions are being felt at these meetings.
In Tuesday's first deal, Toronto acquired a pair of pitchers, left-hander Tom Underwood and minor leaguer Victor Cruz from St. Louis in exchange for reliever Pete Vuckovich and a player to be named later.
Underwood, who was traded by Philadelphia to St. Louis in midseason in the deal that sent outfielder Bake McBride to the Phillies, was 9-11 with a 5.01 earned run average last season. Vuckovich was 7-7 with eight saves for the expansion Blue Jays.
"We feel that Underwood can be one of our starters in 1978," said Pat Gillick, general manager of the Blue Jays. "Down the road, we feel Cruz will also be a big help. We think he could even be coming out of the bullpen for us next season."
Cruz compiled a 3-8 record at Arkansas last season and was assigned to Toronto's Syracuse farm club in the International League.
"Cruz is definitely a future, and he could even be a present," said Bing Devine, general manager of the Cardinals. "But we made this deal because we need help right now."
Earlier Tuesday, minor league clubs held their draft with a few familiar names popping up. Columbus chose pitcher Randy Tate, once a New York Met hopeful. Des Moines chose first baseman Jim Brezeale, once an Atlanta prospect, and Syracuse picked pitcher Gil Rondon, who had a look from Houston. A total of 16 players were selected, nine at the Triple A level for $12,000 each and seven at the Double A level for $4,000.
In another minor transaction, the New York Mets acquired left-hander Kevin Kobel from Milwaukee and assigned him to their Tidewater farm club. Kobel was 12-6 with Spokane last season.

HONOLULU (AP) — Reliever Rawley Eastwick is the next priority on baseball's free agent shopping list, and it seems certain that he will be wrapped up and delivered before the start of the week's major league baseball meetings.
Eastwick was cloistered with agent Jerry Kapstein Tuesday, narrowing down his choice after another Kapstein client, left-hander Ross Grimsley, had signed with the Montreal Expos late Monday night.
The Grimsley agreement was reached via a three-way telephone hookup with the pitcher on vacation in the Bahamas, Kapstein in his Virginia offices, and the Expos here. The pitcher's deal calls for more than $1 million in a six-year agreement.
The Expos came to these meetings with pitching as their No. 1 priority and general manager Charley Fox was happy to come up with Grimsley to fill part of the hurling gap. "We now have three solid pitchers," said Fox. "We really don't need anything else."
The other Expo starters are right-handers Steve Rogers and Wayne Twitchell, and although Fox is satisfied, he wouldn't mind seeing Eastwick in the Expo bullpen as well. "We're still in the ball park on Eastwick," said Fox, hoping that the pitcher's conversation with Kapstein Tuesday would turn Montreal's way following the Grimsley deal.
Meanwhile, trade rumors continued throughout the convention headquarters but so far the talk was just that—talk. The most persistent rumors concerned the Chicago White Sox, who had swung the first deal of the meetings by acquiring slugger Bobby Bonds in a six-players swap with California.
With the addition of Bonds and young Thad Bosley, who came over in the same deal, the Sox' roster lists 10 outfielders. Chicago also drafted first baseman Reggie Sanders, overloading a position that already has Jim Spencer and Lamar Johnson battling for playing time. The rest of the infield is also crowded, and it is likely that some of that depth will be dealt off for some pitching.
"We'll have 55 players in training camp," said manager Bob Lemon. "Get there early."
One of these players will be 18-year-old pitcher Dick Dotson, also acquired in the Bonds trade. He could be the sleeper of the deal. Several farm directors familiar with younger prospects said the teen-aged right-hander has a major league arm.
To get Bonds, Bosley and Dotson, the Sox surrendered catcher Brian Downing and two pitchers, Chris Knapp and Dave Frost.
The Angels had two reasons for making the swap. The first was Bonds' announced intention to play out his contract and become a free agent at the conclusion of the 1978 season—a hassle California did not wish to face. The other was a desire to add pitching depth to a staff that has little behind its two superstars, Frank Tanana and Nolan Ryan.
A host of clubs continued lobby huddles discussing possible deals, but contract status was a major concern every time a player's name entered the talks. The free-agent revolution has altered trade conversation drastically and the repercussions are being felt at these meetings.
In Tuesday's first deal, Toronto acquired a pair of pitchers, left-hander Tom Underwood and minor leaguer Victor Cruz from St. Louis in exchange for reliever Pete Vuckovich and a player to be named later.
Underwood, who was traded by Philadelphia to St. Louis in midseason in the deal that sent outfielder Bake McBride to the Phillies, was 9-11 with a 5.01 earned run average last season. Vuckovich was 7-7 with eight saves for the expansion Blue Jays.
"We feel that Underwood can be one of our starters in 1978," said Pat Gillick, general manager of the Blue Jays. "Down the road, we feel Cruz will also be a big help. We think he could even be coming out of the bullpen for us next season."
Cruz compiled a 3-8 record at Arkansas last season and was assigned to Toronto's Syracuse farm club in the International League.

Mystery Man Rejoins Bullets

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Joe Pace, the Washington Bullets' reserve center, has rejoined the team after a mysterious two-day absence, the National Basketball Association club said Tuesday.
Marc Spalver, a team spokesman, said Bob Ferry, the Bullets' general manager, had contacted Pace Tuesday morning after talking with some of the second-year man's friends.
Pace rejoined the club in Chicago where the Bullets met the Bulls Tuesday night, Spalver said. Further details of the incident were unavailable.
"It's a very strange thing," said Spalver. "The friends were unable to give Bob any idea why Joe took off."
The Bullets said they had been unable to locate Pace since he failed to show up for a team flight from Washington to Cleveland Sunday night.
This was the second time this season that Pace has disappeared. The Bullets said Pace had seemed happy with the team, noting that he already had played more minutes and scored more points this year than in his entire rookie season.
Coach Dick Motta said he wasn't sure how the incident would be handled.

Landry Backs Staubach After Round Of Boos

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas coach Tom Landry, taking note of some Cowboy fans who booed quarterback Roger Staubach last Sunday for throwing two interceptions, said Tuesday too much is expected of the veteran quarterback game after game.

"Roger will acknowledge he's not playing as well as he would like to be playing," said Landry. "He tailed off initially because of an (thumb) injury but there is nothing wrong with him now and he will continue to perform better."

Staubach silenced the boo-birds with a

Monterey Dominates All-4-AAAA

Ten players from Class AAAA quarter-finalist Monterey landed spots on the All-District 4-AAAA football team as selected by the league's coaches.

Plainsman quarterback Ron Reeves was selected Player of the Year, while James Odom was picked Coach of the Year and Plainview runningback Ervin Davis was chosen Sophomore of the Year.

Reeves headed the MHS player list which included split end Eric Voyles, tackle Scott Alford, guard Craig Potts, fullback Robbie McDaniel, linebacker Neal Thomas, defensive tackle Bo Taylor, end-kicker Phil Bruedigam and safeties Greg Iseral and Mike Wooten.

Other local all-district players were Coronado guard Carl Clawson, Lubbock High guard Roy Reyna, CHS runner Mark Butler and LHS runner Ernest Day on the offensive unit. Coronado's tackle Keith Hall was included on the defensive unit.

Midget League Probe Finds Falsification

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A probe of the Midget Football League here has uncovered threats of violence against a family and the chance that birth certificates have been altered so youngsters can remain eligible to play.

The investigation also has resulted in the forfeiture of a championship by an undefeated team in the 95-pound league for 10 and 11-year-olds.

Parks and Recreation Department officials confirmed Tuesday they are looking into allegations that birth certificates of some league players were altered to allow older boys to play.

The issue came to light last weekend during the league's postseason Mayor's Cup playoff, after the undefeated city champions, the Courthouse Knights, qualified for a final playoff game.

A team member's parent protested that ineligible players were on the Knights' roster.

Tournament officials suspended the Knights from further play—for using a youngster too old for the league and another player who lives in Norfolk and thus was ineligible to participate in Virginia Beach.

The team also was forced to forfeit its 11 regular-season and two postseason victories, the city championship, and Mayor's Cup eligibility.

One parent, Mrs. J.A. Cox, said a parent of a team member called her Saturday night asking that she change her son's birth certificate before Sunday's championship game.

Mrs. Cox's son, a team member, turned 13 on Nov. 27.

Mrs. Cox said she refused, and received heated comments from other parents at the Mayor's Cup on Sunday.

The comments turned to threats of violence Sunday night, she said, when a gang of youths, some of whom Mrs. Cox said she recognized as members of the team, came to the Cox home and threatened her son.

touchdown pass to Drew Pearson in the National Conference title-clinching 24-14 victory over Philadelphia last Sunday but was uncharacteristically testy in the dressing room.

He blamed the press for overreacting to the seven interceptions he has thrown in the last four Cowboy games.

"You can't be successful every week and complete 65 percent of your passes. I throw two, and everybody thinks I'm hurt and everything is going wrong," said Staubach.

Landry concluded that the booing and criticism "are the hazards of being a quarterback when you don't perform well. You can't be perfect every week."

The Cowboy coach conceded that Staubach was having technique trouble which was being corrected.

"Roger was having problem setting up," said Landry. "He was drifting away from some basics, and it was changing his delivery. Roger will be there on Dec. 26 (date of the first round NFC playoffs)."

Landry said "I don't know of a quarterback I'd rather have in the playoffs. Roger knows he's not playing well. He's just lost his timing, and that happens to all NFL quarterbacks. We've been studying film and will get it corrected."

Asked the state of the playoff-bound Cowboys, Landry said "Our victories of the last two weeks are significant. I'm not as concerned about our offense as I was this time last year. The team is much better off, and the reason is Tony Dorsett."

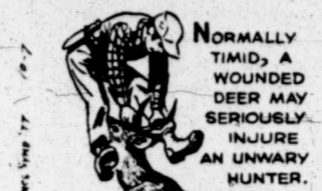

Dorsett was presented his first NFL game ball this week after Sunday's 206-yard day against the Eagles which included an 84-yard touchdown run.

Landry also announced that offensive tackle Rayfield Wright, who has missed all season with a leg injury, will be activated for next Monday night's game against San Francisco.

"We'll give Rayfield some playing time so he can gain confidence in time for the playoffs," said Landry. "He will be used only in a backup role."

The Cowboys can clinch the homefield advantage for the NFC title game — should they get that far — with a victory over San Francisco.

MacAfee Gains Honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken MacAfee, the All-American tight end from Notre Dame and a leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy as college football's outstanding player of the year, also could win two other major awards.

It was announced Tuesday that the 6-foot-4, 250-pound senior was among the top three nominees for the season's outstanding offensive lineman and offensive end awards to be presented by the Downtown Athletic Club in conjunction with the Heisman Trophy. The awards will be presented Thursday night in a nationally televised spectacular.

The hour show, to be televised live from the Grand Ballroom of the New York Hilton Hotel (starting at 10 p.m. EST, over CBS), will honor the Heisman winner and players in six other categories — offensive back, offensive end, offensive lineman, defensive lineman, linebacker and defensive back.

Along with MacAfee, other top Heisman candidates include All-American Earl Campbell of Texas, who led the top-ranked Longhorns to an undefeated season and was the nation's leading rusher with 1,744 yards, and All-American running back Terry Miller of Oklahoma State, the nation's No. 3 ground gainer with 1,680 yards.

Eddins Dismisses Past, Looks Only To Future

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's just like a game of Monopoly, and you get the card that reads "Go Directly To Jail, Do Not Pass Go, Do Not Collect."

Seagraves has been this far before, but no further. And there's only one step further in the Class A playoff system — the state championship game.

Eagle mentor Jim Eddins, at this stage, is not concerned about what happened last year or the year before that.

That (37-7 and 20-14 losses to DeLeon in the semifinals) is past history. Right now, though, he's just as worried as he was during the week leading up to those games.

The reason? The Wall Hawks. Oh, they're not state ranked. In fact, of the four semifinalists—Arp and East Bernard, in addition to Wall and Seagraves —only the Eagles are ranked. And the South Plains unit has been No. 1 for most of the season.

But even that's not sacred. Two years ago Seagraves was No. 1 but lost in Sweetwater to DeLeon 37-7.

"What's happened the last two years doesn't really affect the way we approach this game," Eddins replied. "When you get this far, there's always four good teams left, and you've got to play super for two weeks."

Eddins again praised his offensive backfield, which piled up 332 yards on 61 rushes, just over a 5.0 average, in last week's 33-7 win over Sunray in the quarter-finals.

"It's the same as it's been all year," Eddins explained. "Our backs ran well, but then they should have because our offensive line did an outstanding job opening holes."

And Eddins had words of praise for his defensive unit, which allowed only 140 total yards—112 of that through the air, including 64 on Sunray's TD pass. "Except for that one play, we played excellent defense. And that (the TD pass) was kind of a fluke, but it still counts."

Wall, 13-0, will be bigger than any team, except possibly Marfa, that the Eagles have faced this year, Eddins says. "Their strong point is defense. No one has been able to move the ball on them this year."

"From what we've seen of them, they just line up with people and physically whip them. I don't know their stats, but I know no one has scored much on them."

"I think they'll realize we'll try to control the ball on them. But then, that hasn't been done yet. I feel we've got to try, though."

The Eagles have completed just two of nine passes for 37 yards in the playoffs this year. And to this point they really haven't had to pass, because they've managed 386 yards rushing in a 21-15 win over Marfa, 398 in the 25-3 win over Haskell and the 332 against Sunray.

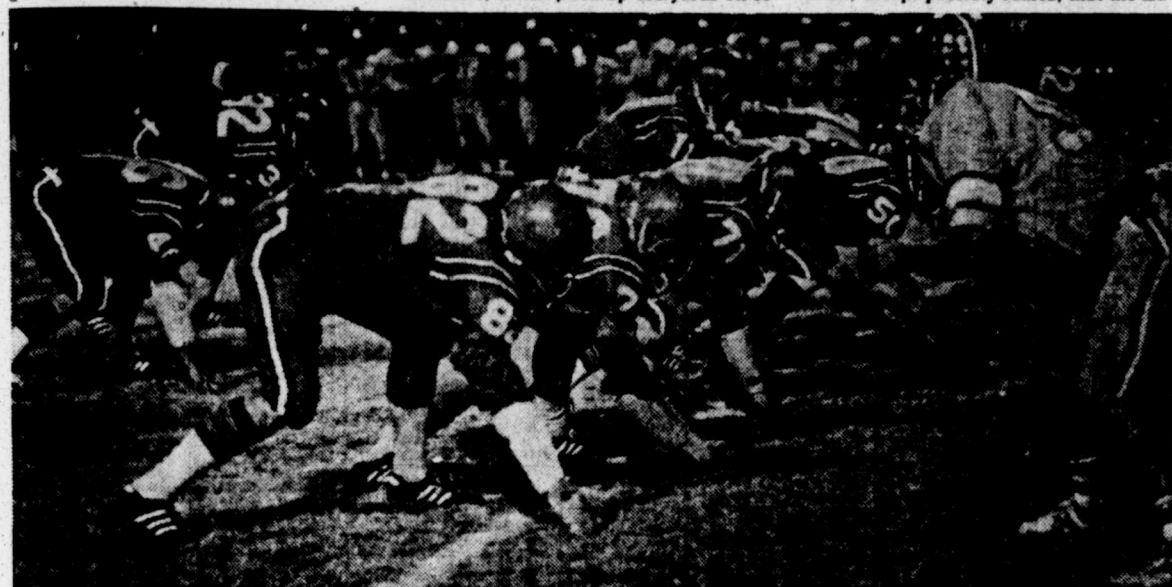

All three backs — Clarence Davis, Mike Hoover and Steve McCormick — have been highly effective in the playoffs playoffs, accounting for 1,074 of the 1,116 rushing yards. Davis has carried 60 times for 468 yards and five TDs, McCormick 54 times for 398 yards and four TDs and Hoover 49 time for 208 and three TDs since the "season season" started.

On the year, Davis now has 175 carries for 1,678 yards, 26 TDs and 16 PATs.

McCormick has 155 carries for 1,381 yards and 22 TDs and Hoover has 883 yards on 158 carries and 13 TDs plus two, 2-point conversions.

Wall and Seagraves clash at 6 p.m. Friday in Snyder—site of the Eagles' 25-3 win over Haskell—and the Arp-East Bernard clash is at the same time in Kyle Field in College Station.

GETTING READY TO GO—Seagraves quarterback Dennis Middleton (11) sets his mates during last Friday's 33-7 quarter-final victory over Sunray at Lowrey Field. Behind Middleton is Clarence Davis (32) and Mike Hoover (46) and the offensive line has, from left, end Wesley Smith (82), tackle Daylan Sellers, guard Whitney Williams, center Tommy McKinzie, guard David Welch and tackle Amadeo Gonzales. Stapleton Next On Firing Line?

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A newspaper ad asks Vanderbilt University officials to fire football coach Fred Pancoast, athletic director Clay Stapleton and athletic business manager Pete Naylor.

"Now, therefore, we respectfully request that Chancellor Alexander Heard remove all the aforementioned people from the Athletic Department and have them replaced with people who will be a credit to the university, students and alumni," said the ad, which appears in the form of a petition and is signed by "Friends of Vanderbilt Athletics." It appeared in The Tennessean.

Responding to the ad, Heard said: "I don't know who the Friends of Vanderbilt are, but I would say they were unfriendly Friends of Vanderbilt, especially to put an ad of that kind in the newspaper at this season of the year when we are in the midst of football recruiting."

Stapleton said a telephone caller Monday threatened his wife and children unless he resigned as athletic director and left Nashville. He reported the call to police, who were instructed by Chief Joe Casey to keep close watch on Stapleton's house.

reference victories in two years.

It said Stapleton "has run the Athletic Department in a manner which reflects discredit and embarrassment to Vanderbilt University, its alumni, students and faculty."

Naylor, the ad said, "has been an embarrassment to the university and has caused ill will and disfavor to be cast on the Athletic Department by the Community and athletes both present and former."

The ad asked for signatures, listed a post office box and asked that copies be sent to Vanderbilt alumni in other cities.

Curto Asks Ring Chiefs' Forgiveness

BOSTON (AP) — Middleweight boxer Vinnie Curto of Boston surfaced Tuesday, 10 weeks after running out on a fight with title contender Marvin Hagler, and asked for another chance.

The contrite Curto, a contender himself until his still-unexplained escape to Seattle, Wash., asked the Massachusetts Boxing Commission to return his license and implored Hagler's camp for a fight.

"Boxing is the only thing I know," he said at the commission offices. "I have to make a living."

Boxing commissioner Joe Wright said the panel will listen to Curto's reasons for running away but will delay giving back his boxing license.

Hagler's co-manager, Pat Petronelli, said, "Curto doesn't fit into our plans right now. Maybe we'll fight him later."

Curto had bragged he would whip Hagler to a pulp Sept. 24 and then disappeared virtually on the eve of the contest. He said Tuesday, "There was a lot of pressure on me. Everything was wrong."

Curto conceded he's been "banned all over the boxing world" and issued an apology to everyone from Hagler to boxing fans.

Boxing Commission chairman Emmanuel Aronis said he hopes Hagler and Curto will fight eventually "because they hate each other's guts."

Said Petronelli, "That's telling it like it is."

Curto and Hagler once trained together.

The lefthanded Hagler, from Brockton, Mass., has a 37-2-1 record with 29 knockouts. He is dubbed "world champion" by the state boxing commission but generally is recognized as a contender.

Hagler plans to fight in a United States boxing tournament sponsored by New York's Madison Square Garden.

On Nov. 26, in Boston, Hagler knocked out top contender Mike Colbert of Portland, Ore. in the 12th round of a scheduled 15-rounder.

Colbert, who suffered multiple jaw fractures from the right hook knockout punch, decided later to quit the ring "while I still have my brains."

Curto's record is 35-4-1, including a 1975 loss by decision to Rodrigo Valdes, generally recognized as the world middleweight champion.

Valdes decided Benny Briscoe in Italy last month to claim the title vacated by the retired Carlos Monzon.

Meddling Solicitor Won't Be Put Off

CONROE (AP) — Some people will go to any length to avoid those telephone callers who want to sell something.

A Montgomery County man who despises such calls recently got even with a persistent woman who kept ringing up and asking for his wife, according to sheriff's deputies.

After several calls, the angry man told the saleswoman he keeps his wife in the cellar and had done so for the past 15 years.

The caller, perhaps used to being dodged, said she still wanted to talk to the wife. A moment later a high, quavering voice came on the line.

"My husband won't allow me to answer any questions," the voice said. "He just said to tell you I'm all right."

Not convinced, the saleswoman asked the man if he really did keep his wife in the cellar.

"That's right," came the reply. And he hung up.

Terrified, the saleswoman called the sheriff's office and reported the conversation.

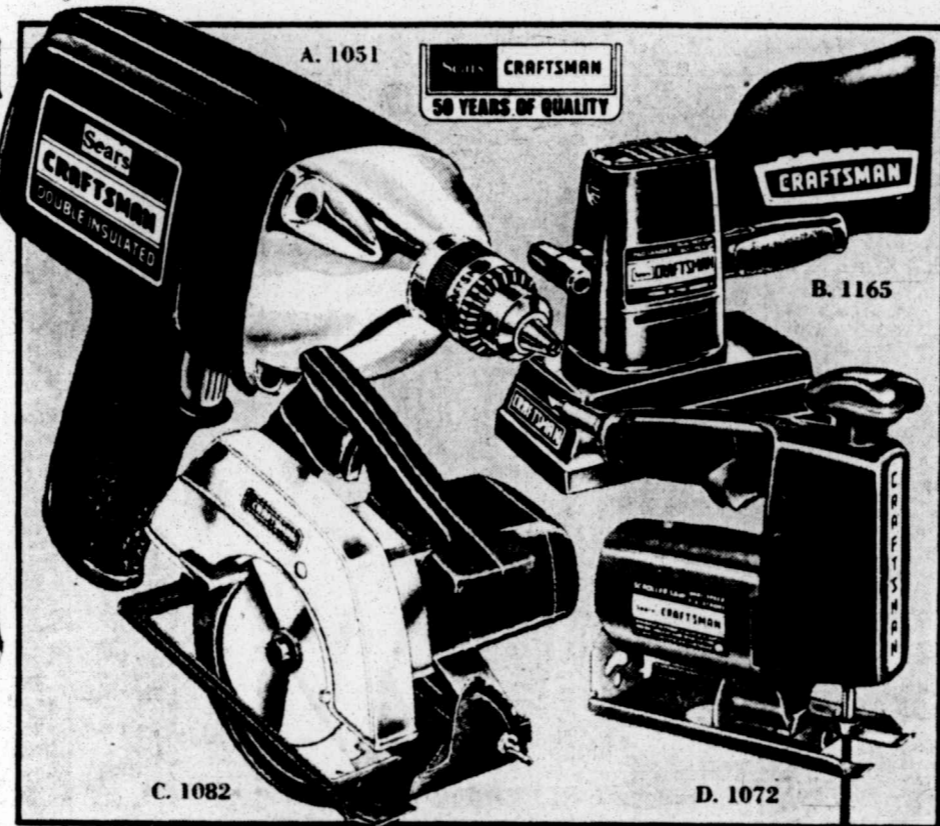

"I didn't think much of it," said Deputy C.M. Joslin, "since I knew there aren't any cellars in this area."

But just on the chance there was something to it, Joslin said he went to the man's home and checked it out.

What he said he found was an elderly fellow who lives alone and hates telephones — and who does a pretty fair imitation of a woman's voice.
