Lawmakers Okay Plan On Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress, weary of dissension from a four-month-long dispute, came to terms Wednesday on when the government will pay for poor women's abortions.

The House-Senate agreement was in time to avert pre-Christmas pay cuts for more than a quarter of a million federal employees whose agencies were on the verge of running out of money for the third time this year.

On a voice vote, the Senate went along with a House proposal outlining the conditions for Medicaid-funded abortions during the remainder of the fiscal year.

Terms Agreed

The Senate agreed to a House-passed measure requiring two physicians to certify that a woman would suffer serious, long-lasting physical health damage from a full-term pregnancy before the federal government would pay for an abortion.

The House approved it earlier on a 181 to 167 vote.

The legislation must now be signed by President Carter.

Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., said he reluctantly presented the House proposal to the Senate.

He said the Senate's concern throughout the unusually long fight has been about "what is the most humane thing to do."

"Lot Of Gray"

"We've had deep respect for the views of people on the other side (of the issue)," he said. "There was no black or white on this thing. There was a lot of gray."

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who has led the fight for more permissive abortion payments language, described the compromise as discriminatory.

"We'll have to live with it at least until next year when I'm sure this issue will be back with us again," he said.

Despite his reservations, Brooke said the language does provide "better coverage for poor, indigent women who need abortions" than a provision adopted last year. That allowed abortion payments only when a woman might die because of a pregnancy.

The disagreement over abortion payments has delayed passage of a $60.2 billion bill.

WINTRY FACE—Heavy snow for the second day in a row formed this face on the binoculars at one of the gift shops on the Mohawk Trail in Florida, Mass. Midlands Raked By New Storm

By United Press International

A NEW wintry storm — packing the threat of a blizzard — gathered icy strength on the northern Plains Wednesday.

The Mississippi River froze bank to bank, immobilized by frigid temperatures and a wind chill factor that at one time reached nearly 70 below zero. Ice built up so rapidly on the northern Great Lakes it threatened to shackle shipping.

Six-foot-high drifts blocked roads and closed schools in Pennsylvania. Travelers going nowhere on Indiana's clogged highways were housed in National Guard armories for the second consecutive day.

It was so cold in the midlands that the No. 1 topic for millions of persons was whether the miserable winter of 1976-77 was making a comeback even before the official debut of the winter of 1977-78.

Area To Be Colder

Bitter wintry blasts, though not quite the same kind, are expected to reach the South Plains later today, sending temperatures plunging and gritty winds whirling for another dusty day.

Though snow and rain aren't in store for most South Plains residents, an arctic cold front stemming from the low pressure system over Northern Colorado should push through the Panhandle early today and begin drifting across the South Plains by late this afternoon.

As it moves, temperatures should quickly fall from the afternoon high expected in the middle 60s to a chillier, nighttime low near 20. High temperatures Friday shouldn't be much warmer than 40, weathermen said.

Winds, as usual this season, should rip through the area at speeds ranging from 15 to 25 mph, and frequent gusts to even higher speeds will probably kick up dust as the day progresses.

Temperatures should begin an upward trend in the Lubbock area on Saturday, however, picking back up to near 50. By Monday, temperatures should again be near 70 degrees.

The bitter cold surged over most of the East and deep into the South. A 5-above-zero temperature at Asheville, N.C., was the coldest ever recorded there in December. Readings were around freezing — but not low enough to damage the fruit crop — in Florida's citrus country and well below the freezing mark in northern Florida.

The National Weather Service hoisted "severe blizzard" warnings in western North Dakota, where heavy, blowing snow swept the flatlands. Winter storm warnings were up elsewhere in the Dakotas.

"This storm," the weather bureau said, "has the potential for being a real troublemaker for all travelers and people with

Conferees Approve 'Gas-Guzzler' Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-House conference committee tentatively agreed Wednesday to impose a tax on so-called "gas-guzzling" cars and to retain the present income tax deduction allowed for state and local gasoline taxes.

The action, which is still subject to ratification by a second panel, represents the first major agreement reached by negotiators who are considering the tax aspects of President Carter's energy program.

But the breakthrough on the automobile tax does not necessarily mean the conferees are any closer to approval of a crude oil tax, which is the most important part of the Carter package, or a tax on industries that continue to burn oil or natural gas when they could switch to coal.

Mileage Taxes Cited

Under the "gas-guzzler" agreement, the purchaser of a 1979 model car that gets between 14 miles per gallon and 15 mpg would pay a tax of $200. On 1980 models, the tax would range from $200 on cars that get 16 mpg to $650 on cars that get less than 13 mpg.

The tax and the minimum mileage standard would rise gradually until 1985. In that year, the tax would range from $400 on a model getting between 22.5 mpg and 23.5 mpg to $3,850 on cars that get under 12.5 mpg.

The compromise "gas-guzzler" tax is almost identical to that approved by the House. As their part of the bargain, the House conferees agreed to drop their insistence that the federal income-tax deduction allowed for state and local gasoline taxes be repealed.

Gasoline Tax Break

Repeat, which is opposed by the Senate, would have meant a tax increase next year for about 19 million couples or individuals who itemize deductions and claim the tax break for gasoline taxes.

Before the agreement can be considered final, a second conference committee, which is considering non-tax matters, must drop a Senate-passed ban on the sale of inefficient cars.

Sen. Howard Mützenbaum, D-Ohio, chief sponsor of the ban, claimed he has the votes in the second committee to retain the ban.

Senate members of that second panel temporarily broke off negotiations on natural gas prices with their House counterparts, claiming a compromise on that volatile issue appears hopeless until the senators can agree among themselves.

As the energy tax conferees struggled to resolve major energy issues, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate delegation, accused the Carter administration of refusing to move toward compromise.

"I haven't heard anything useful the administration has come up with so far," Long complained to reporters. "I'm afraid they are wedded to the House bill."

Noting that Carter delayed a scheduled foreign tour in order to keep contact with the energy conferees, Long said, "It might help for the president to go ahead and take his trip — and take his bureaucracy with him."

The Carter administration has made no secret of its preference for the House-passed energy bill, which includes a version of three taxes proposed by Carter. By contrast, the Senate measure contains a skeleton of only one of the taxes, relying instead on $40 billion worth of tax incentives to encourage energy conservation and increased fuel production.

Long is looking for greater production incentives and says the administration has offered nothing acceptable.

The Senate conferees offer to compromise on a tax on gas-guzzling cars provided the first indication that the tax panel might be able to agree on something.

Ehrlichman Parole Set Next April

WASHINGTON (AP) — John D. Ehrlichman learned Wednesday that his Watergate imprisonment will end after 1 1/2 years, the third longest stretch for anyone caught up in the scandal that ended Richard Nixon's presidency.

The U.S. Parole Commission set April 27, 1978, as the release date for Ehrlichman, once No. 2 man on the Nixon White House staff.

In an unrelated case, the commission ordered former Oklahoma Gov. David Hall released from the same Arizona prison next May 22.

Ehrlichman was told of the commission's decision at 8:35 a.m. CST when he finished work in the power plant at Swift Trail Prison.

No Interviews

"At the time I asked him did he still wish to stand by his decision not to talk with the press or grant interviews. He said he did," said Ben Brown, the acting warden who gave Ehrlichman the news in the dormitory.

"I asked, 'Any comment for the media as a result of this decision?' and he said 'none.' I asked him what was his reaction for release and he said, 'None.'"

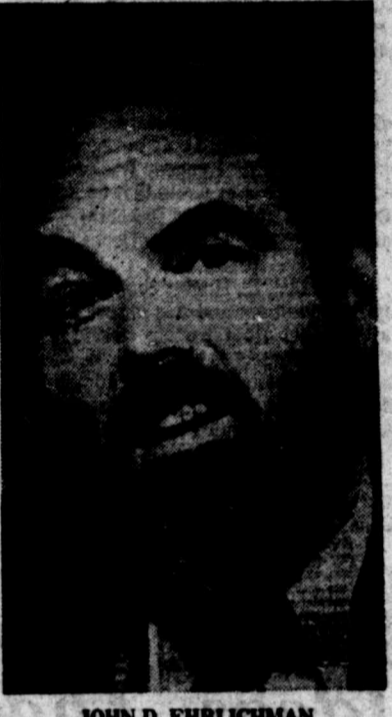

Throughout his imprisonment, Ehrlichman has refused to grant interviews, a point his lawyer cited in successful efforts to get his sentences reduced. The 52-year-old Ehrlichman, serving concurrent terms for two convictions, was eligible for parole on Oct. 27 when he completed one year in prison.

The parole commission does not reveal the basis for any decision. Ehrlichman's lawyer, Stuart Stiller, said, "He got the highest marks as a prisoner, but they went on the severity of the offense and said he should be in 18 months."

Stiller refused to say if his client was disappointed. But he said, "We're happy to know the exact date when he's going to get out."

Of the 25 men who went to prison, only the high command of the Watergate burglary served sentences longer than 1 1/2 years. G. Gordon Liddy, who planned the break-in, was imprisoned 52 months. E. Howard Hunt, his lieutenant and recruit.

'Of Course' Groups Aid Goodfellows

(Coupon, Page 8, Sec. B)

DO GROUPS or organizations contribute to the Goodfellows' Christmas program?

"Of course," Chief Goodfellow beamed as he said it, and added: "service clubs, church school classes, fraternal orders, civic groups, school classes and rooms, and other types—we appreciate them all."

And so do the children of Lubbock appreciate the group contributions that help them have a Merrier Christmas than expected.

So, if your club or organization, company or church unit, has a contribution to make to the 1977 Goodfellows, mail it to: Chief Goodfellow, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tex., 79408.

And please hurry, if possible. Time is growing short.

And by the way, if you know a child in Lubbock that might miss Christmas if the Goodfellows miss him, send along the name, address, age, and other information on an official Goodfellow coupon like the one in this edition. And mail to the same address as the contribution.

Below is a list of recent contributions:

Questions By Readers May Go Unanswered

BOSTON (UPI) — Readers of newspaper public service "action lines" around the country make some odd requests, to judge by one survey.

The Boston Globe has compiled a list of some of the most difficult questions asked by readers this year.

Among those it reported:

- How would you estimate the age of a coin that has the date 1797 on it?
- What is the attitude of Las Vegas, Nev.?
- My late husband served time in the brig at the Navy Yard in Charleston, S.C., sometime in 1945 and 1946. I would like the names and addresses of the guys who were in there with him.
- This year they didn't send me what I ordered, just like they didn't send me what I ordered last year. Why did they cash my check if they weren't going to send me anything?
- I'm a 10-year-old and I'd like to know who determines what is a dirty word and what isn't?
- Would you please send me the name of the town where people say it isn't safe to be out on the streets after sundown? I don't want to visit there.
- Where does the weight go when you lose it?
- Why does the Navy have rear admirals and not front ones?
- Is there really a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow? If so, which end?
- Where do the native-born of Florida go to die? Every day in the obituaries, the deceased are born elsewhere.
- I really need some advice on how to get a girl. I am in a bad slump right now.
- I once read where a man got pregnant. I was wondering if this could be true and, if so, did he ever have the child? I'm worried because I think I might be.
- The names of the questioners were not listed, but The Globe said: "If you happen to know the answer to any of them, please let us know and we'll forward them."
- "And if there is a moral to this list of questions, it is this: Sometimes when you seek you might not always find," it added.

Murder Suspect's Account Bared

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LEROY GREEN admitted in a signed statement read to jurors Wednesday that he was present when Mr. and Mrs. Warren Andrew McKay were shotgunned to death on a lonely, snow-covered dirt road north of Lubbock.

But Green — on trial for his life in connection with the execution style slayings of the elderly couple — said two companions were the actual triggermen.

According to the statement, Green was urged to shoot the McKays by Raymond Sanders, his brother-in-law.

"I told him that I did not have any shells, I asked Raymond where are the shells, then Raymond took the shotgun away from me," the document reads.

"I turned around and then I heard a shot and then another and another. It was three shots altogether that I heard," it continued.

At the conclusion of the statement, Green, 21, pinned the blame on Sanders and Robert Lee White, Green's half-brother, as the ones who killed the McKays. Both men already have been convicted and assessed life sentences.

The document indicated the trio robbed the McKays, who reportedly were acquainted with Sanders.

The McKays, both of whom had worked at Texas Tech University, were killed Jan. 12, 1975.

The bodies of McKay, 64, and his wife Odessa, 55, were discovered by a passing motorist on the snowy dirt road about three miles northwest of New Deal and about four miles north of the couple's recently purchased home.

McKay's body was partially concealed in a snow-filled barrow ditch. He had been shot behind the left ear and in the back. Mrs. McKay lay near the edge of the road about 30 feet away. She had been shot behind the right ear.

Green, on trial in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th Dist. Court, was indicted for the alleged capital murder of Warren McKay.

Green's statement was taken down by law enforcement officers after his arrest three days after the shootings. It was read aloud to the seven-woman, five-man jury by Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin.

According to the statement, Green was visited in the late afternoon by Sanders, along with Sanders' wife and two children. White also was allegedly there.

Scenario Revealed

According to the statement, here is the rest of the scenario leading up to the killings:

- Sanders got two shotguns and put them in a pickup he was driving. The three men left and drove to the McKay home where Sanders noticed a strange vehicle.
- The three then drove up a hill to another house, and visited a man and a woman there. After some conversation, the woman told the trio that she and her husband had no money. According to Green's statement, one of his two companions opined that it would not be worth "ripping them off."
- The trio then waited until the strange vehicle left the McKay home. Then, according to the statement, they drove up and were met by McKay outside the house.

- White pulled a shotgun out of the pickup at pointed it at McKay. The statement says Green then got the other shotgun, but the defendant said that gun was not loaded.
- Testimony Continues
- White took McKay's wallet and gave it to Green. The statement said Green handed the wallet back to McKay. Other testimony indicated an empty wallet was found on McKay's body.
- The statement implies that Mrs. McKay joined the group at some juncture. Both Sanders and Green assured the McKays they would not be harmed. Mrs. McKay asked if she could put on a

Files Reveal FBI Assassination Probe

By The Associated Press

Two weeks after John F. Kennedy's death, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin but he wondered whether Oswald had help from secret conspirators in Cuba, according to FBI files released Wednesday.

The documents show Hoover had concluded within hours after Kennedy's death that Oswald fired the fatal bullets. But the agency later obtained letters written to Oswald from Cuba, and those messages raised the perplexing conspiracy questions which linger to this day.

Documents Prompt Second Thoughts

The mountain of material offers fresh clues about Hoover's suspicions of a conspiracy, but does not reveal how he resolved them. It will take historians and researchers months or even years to evaluate this batch of FBI files and more yet to come.

Hoover, of course, was hardly alone in pondering the possibility of a Cuban connection. Oswald had spoken of his admiration for Cuban chief of state Fidel Castro and he had distributed pro-Castro leaflets in New Orleans.

Castro has denied that Cuba was involved in the assassination in any way. The Warren Commission concluded after its investigation of the case that there was no evidence of any Cuban government role in Kennedy's death.

FBI Image Concerned Hoover

While the documents indicated that Hoover pondered the possibility of a conspiracy, preliminary examination of the FBI files turned up nothing to disprove the Warren Commission's finding that Oswald acted alone.

The files released Wednesday show that Hoover was anxious to find out who had killed Kennedy, and portray him as deeply concerned about protecting the FBI's image. The documents show that Hoover went to great lengths to counteract criticism of the bureau.

Files Enhance Assassination Drama

The 40,001 pages of files, weighing nearly a half ton, offer a rich tapestry of the tragedy and drama rippling from the gunfire in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. The FBI released the documents, half of its total file on the Kennedy assassination, to comply with requests under the Freedom of Information Act. The other 40,000 pages are due for release in January.

The memos include confidential reports passed among the highest officials of the government. And they include letters from ordinary citizens expressing outrage and sorrow and, in some cases, intense hatred of the Kennedy family. Some documents were censored to delete material classified secret or otherwise exempt from disclosure.

Inside Operations Revealed

The material may be of greatest value for what it shows about the inside operations of the FBI as the bureau handled one of its most important missions ever. It is a picture that has emerged only in vague outline until now.

Two hours after Kennedy was pronounced dead in a Dallas hospital at 2 p.m. EST on Nov. 22, Hoover wrote that he had told the president's brother, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, that Oswald was the assassin and that he had been apprehended near the Texas School Book Depository where the shots were fired.

Unresolved Questions

But on Dec. 12, Hoover confided to his chief aides that he was troubled by the conspiracy questions and was unsure how to resolve them. Reporting on a conversation with a caller, Hoover wrote, "I said I personally believe Oswald was the assassin; that the second aspect as to whether he was the only man gives me great concern; that we have several letters... written to him from Cuba referring to the job he was going to do, his good marksmanship and stating when it was all over, he would be brought back to Cuba and presented to the chief."

FBI/CIA Functions

Hoover continued, "We do not know if the chief was Castro and cannot make an investigation because we have no intelligence operation in Cuba." The reference was to Cuban chief of state Fidel Castro.

The FBI is restricted to domestic operations, and the CIA gathers intelligence abroad. It was not clear whether Hoover meant to imply that the CIA, as well as the FBI, had no operations in Cuba. During this period, the FBI maintained liaison with the CIA although Hoover later severed the relationship.

The memo was Hoover's report of his discussion that day with Lee Rankin, the Warren Commission's general counsel, who had called to make arrangements for dealing with the FBI during the commission probe. The Warren Commission later concluded that Oswald was the assassin and that he acted alone.

Because of the letters to Oswald from Cuba and the difficulty in checking their validity, Hoover said, "I urged strongly that we not reach (the) conclusion Oswald was the only man."

Significant Letter

One of the Cuban letters illustrates the problem. It was written in Spanish and mailed from Havana to Oswald in Dallas. It was dated 12 days before the assassination, but postmarked six days after Kennedy was killed. The fact that it was postmarked long after news of the assassination had spread worldwide suggests that it might have been the work of a headline-seeker.

FBI officials apparently found it impossible to judge what to make of the message. As the agents translated it, the letter referred to Oswald as "Friend Lee" and said, "After the affair, I am going to recommend much to the chief... I told him you could put out a candle at 50 meters... Leave nothing that could lead to your trail and when you receive my letters, destroy them as always. After the affair, I will send you the money and we will see each other in Miami as always." It was signed Pedro Charles.

Investigators Pressured?

Some of the FBI memos suggest that Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, then the deputy attorney general, was pressuring the bureau for a prompt public announcement that Oswald, acting alone, was the assassin.

Three days after the assassination, Katzenbach wrote the FBI to express concern about the growing rumors of conspiracy and said it was important to satisfy the public that Oswald was the assassin and that there were no conspirators still at large.

Referring to the pressure from Katzenbach, Hoover aide Courtney Evans wrote that there's "no doubt" Oswald had fired the gun.

"The problem is to show motive," Evans continued. "A matter of this magnitude cannot be fully investigated in a week's time." In a scribbled notation, Hoover asked, "Just how long do you estimate it will take. It seems to me we have the basic facts now." At this point, Hoover apparently was not seriously concerned about the conspiracy questions.

Defense Of The Agency

The documents offer ample evidence of Hoover's well-known penchant for protecting the bureau from even a breath of criticism. Several citizens wrote to suggest that sloppy FBI security was responsible for the deaths of Kennedy and Oswald, who was shot in the Dallas police station by Jack Ruby.

Hoover whipped out tart letters pointing out that the Secret Service, not the FBI, was in charge of presidential protection and that Oswald was in the custody of the Dallas police, not the Hoover G-men, at the time he was slain.

Vast, Diverse Material

From the instant the shots slammed into the presidential motorcade, the FBI was awash with telephone calls, telegrams and letters from citizens offering theories, bar-room gossip, accusations against drunken husbands and despised in-laws. A few were dismissed out of hand as the work of cranks and the unstable, but most got at least a cursory investigation, the documents show.

FBI agents spent about 18 months screening the documents for release. Copying machines ran for hours to reproduce the material to place in two reading rooms at bureau headquarters. One is reserved for news reporters, and the other is open to the public. The material may be reviewed there without charge.

Anyone willing to pay the 10-cents-a-page copying fee — a total of $4,000.10 for the first batch of documents — may obtain a set of his own. Several news organizations, including the Associated Press, put up the money.

But the law allows an agency to waive the fee when disclosure of the material is considered to be in the public interest. So those who paid could appeal the fees to the Justice Department, which has authority to overrule the FBI decision.

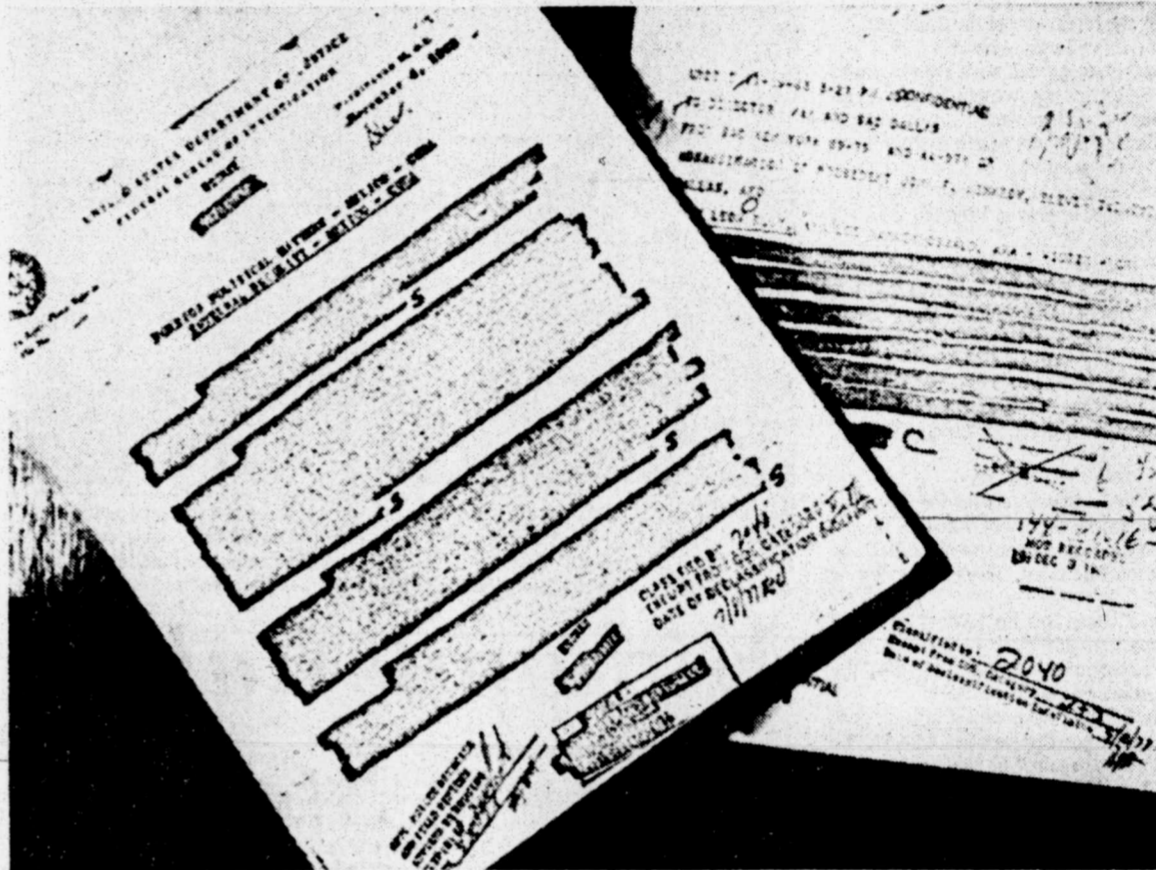

SAC Facility Visit Slated By Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale will fly to the Strategic Air Command base in Omaha today aboard an Air Force jet used as a flying command center. White House press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday.

The Air Force Boeing 747 is the aircraft President Carter used for his first flight home to Georgia after becoming president.

Powell said that Mondale will stop in Omaha to inspect the Strategic Air Command facilities at Offutt AFB on his way to Los Angeles for a speech Friday to the AFL-CIO national convention. During the rest of his trip to California, Oregon and Washington, Carter will fly aboard a smaller Air Force jet.

The vice president will be accompanied to Omaha by Deputy Secretary of Defense Charles Duncan and Air Force General George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

FILES DO NOT SHOW EVERYTHING—These are two pages from the 40,000 released Wednesday by the FBI relating to the investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Heavy censorship shows as officials say no files are being withheld although many words and paragraphs have been deleted because they are classified as secret or are otherwise exempt from disclosure. Ideas, Theories Swamped FBI After Kennedy Assassination

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Michigan man telephoned FBI headquarters to say the Russians had paid five men to kill John F. Kennedy. An agent investigated. He duly reported two empty whiskey bottles next to the man's bed and the man's inability to climb out of it.

A mental patient said he had information about John F. Kennedy's assassination. Agents interviewed him. Turned out the Secret Service had interviewed him earlier. Surprise: The man's stories did not match.

One woman suggested that agents investigate graffiti on a bathroom wall at a Maryland restaurant. Another woman said the president's murder was a conspiracy. And she passed on a tip: her husband might have been in on it.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover complained at one point that "the ambassador in Mexico is acting like a Sherlock Holmes." At another point, a citizen sent in a $20 reward to help find the assassin. Hoover sent it back.

An artist sent the director a two-page letter about his theory on the assassination — and offered to paint his portrait in the bargain. Hoover politely declined.

Files on the Kennedy assassination made public Wednesday by the FBI show Hoover and his agents received offers of all kinds of help in their efforts to find out what was behind the killing.

The offers came in telegrams, phone calls and letters containing tips from neighbors, hunches suggested by friends, conversations overheard by telephone operators and linemen — even poetry and bar talk.

One letter was slipped under the door of an agent's home. The FBI thought some of these offers weren't worth a second glance. But the files show the bureau thought others were.

"Examine contents of suspect Oswald stomach and intestines for traces of chicken," wired a California man. In another telegram, a New York man said: "Suggest analysis of feces of suspect Oswald Harvey (sic) for traces of chicken."

The concern about chicken seems to have been prompted by the discovery of chicken bones near the spot where investigators said Oswald was standing when he shot at Kennedy.

Oswald's "void" was examined. The files don't show whether analysts found any chicken — or sugar, which a magazine editor suggested was the problem.

One square mile is equivalent to 2.6 square kilometers in the metric system.

Perhaps, the editor suggested, Oswald was "a sugar drunkard like Hitler."

A Long Island woman blamed Kennedy's killing on television. An Atlanta man said Zionists were at fault.

A couple from New York City blamed Hoover himself. "Where were you?" they demanded.

Hoover replied: "I am disturbed by your unfounded accusation of negligence and feel it necessary to inform you that the protection of the president... is the responsibility of the Secret Service."

The FBI questioned several drunks who said they shot the president. All disavowed their "confessions" when they sobered up.

Agents investigated a man overheard to have told others: "The best news I could hear would be that two of the Kennedys were killed in an airplane crash while going to the funeral of the third Kennedy."

A woman in an Akron, Ohio, bar said Oswald was there but refused to dance with her. However, she added, a man named Mr. Ruby or Jack Rubenstein did dance with her — twice.

Ruby, a Dallas nightclub owner, shot Oswald to death at the Dallas police station. Agents checked the Akron woman's story.

They saw fit to investigate this tip, too: An El Campo woman who disagreed with her uncle's approval of Kennedy's policies sent him a wire. "Thank God, you did it," she said. Agents hunted the woman down. She admitted it was a tasteless joke.

But the agents interrogated her anyway — for days.

FBI Sought To Limit Ability Of Warren Commission Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late J. Edgar Hoover and other top FBI officials lobbied intensively to limit the ability of the Warren Commission to investigate the assassination of John F. Kennedy, according to FBI documents made public Wednesday.

The FBI succeeded in quashing the appointment of Warren Olney as chief counsel to the commission and at the urging of President Johnson also tried to convince editors of the Washington Post not to run an editorial advocating creation of a presidential commission to investigate the assassination.

FBI documents also detail the desire within the bureau to limit the size of the commission's investigative staff.

Hoover's hostility to the Warren Commission has been noted in numerous reports in recent years, including that of the Senate select committee that investigated intelligence abuses. In its report issued in 1976, the committee said:

"The evidence suggests that during the Warren Commission investigation top FBI officials were continually concerned with protecting the bureau's reputation and avoiding any criticism for not fulfilling investigative responsibilities. Director Hoover, himself, perceived the Warren Commission as an adversary."

Among the 40,001 pages of FBI documents released in response to Freedom of Information Act requests, are repeated references to tension between the bureau and the commission.

President Lyndon B. Johnson announced on Nov. 29, 1963, one week after the assassination, the creation of the high-level commission to investigate the killing.

Two days before Johnson's announcement, FBI officials were closely watching developments.

In a memo to A. H. Belmont, a high FBI executive, FBI official C. A. Evans relayed information that Abe Fortas, a Washington lawyer and close friend of Johnson, had advised the president against creation of a special commission.

"Fortas' argument to Johnson was that for the president to announce the formation of a such a commission would merely suggest that there was evidence of something other than Oswald alone killing Kennedy and thus building up public speculation," wrote Evans.

"Fortas' second argument to President Johnson," he continued "was that the formation of such a commission would cause a reflection on the FBI. Fortas, of course, is no friend of the bureau and there would appear some obvious, underhanded motive in his using us in his argument, although we don't know what this is."

At this point, Hoover wrote in long-hand: "Certainly something sinister here."

After the formation of the Warren Commission, FBI officials lobbied to block the appointment of Warren Olney, a former assistant attorney general, as general counsel to the panel. Cooperating with the FBI on the effort was Deputy Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach.

Cartha DeLoach, an assistant director of the FBI, wrote a memo to John Mohr, another top FBI official, on Dec. 6, 1963, and said that Katzenbach had told him Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La., was cooperating "and he thought he was going to be successful in getting Olney's name removed from consideration."

Boggs, who was House majority leader, was a member of the Warren Commission. Years later, the congressman, who was killed in a plane crash, feuded publicly with Hoover.

The next day, DeLoach wrote to Mohr that Katzenbach believed Olney "had definitely been 'dumped.'"

Former Solicitor General J. Lee Rankin was named general counsel to the Warren Commission and wasn't long before he clashed with Hoover.

Rankin complained to Hoover in a letter dated Feb. 20, 1964, that the FBI had omitted pertinent information in some of its reports. Hoover replied a week later that "I feel that our reporting procedures in this matter are completely logical and sound."

Belmont noted in a memo in December 1963, that "Rankin is considering an investigative staff to conduct additional investigation. Frankly, I think Rankin should be discouraged from having an investigative staff."

A request from the commission that the FBI turn over firearms evidence to Defense Department experts at Aberdeen, Md., Proving Ground, prompted a handwritten comment on an FBI memo that "it is obvious the commission does not have confidence in our laboratory."

FBI and Justice Department officials also were concerned about plans in Texas to create a state commission to investigate the assassination.

A DeLoach memo dated Dec. 6, 1963, noted that Katzenbach intervened with Waggoner Carr, Texas attorney general, and Leon Jaworski, the immediate past president of the Texas Bar Association, to kill the state probe.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

JACQUELINE KENNEDY

News Media Worried Hoover

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI documents released Wednesday show former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was extremely concerned about news coverage of the investigation of the Kennedy assassination.

Hoover's concern was reflected in efforts to sway editorial opinion and efforts to find unnamed sources in news stories.

The FBI documents, which relate to the bureau's investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, revealed Hoover made an effort to persuade the Washington Post not to run an editorial and that the FBI thought its "many friends" in the news media could be used to put the agency in the best light or to attack its enemies.

Many contacts between journalists and the FBI are detailed in the 40,001 pages of documents, from newsmen providing tips to the FBI to the FBI probing for a journalist's sources.

"I thought no one knew this outside of FBI," Hoover wrote on a copy of one news story dated Dec. 3, 1963. "Certainly someone is doing too much talking."

Hoover said in a memo three days after the assassination that President Lyndon B. Johnson was upset by a possible Washington Post editorial calling for a presidential commission to investigate the Kennedy assassination. The memo said Johnson had asked Hoover to try to stop publication of the editorial.

"He asked if I could dissuade the Post from carrying the editorial and I told him, frankly, that I seldom read the paper, but would get word as to what is being done," the Hoover memo said.

Hoover started a memo dated about an hour later that day, Nov. 25, 1963, this way:

"I called Deputy Attorney General Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach and advised him we had killed the editorial in the Post."

But later in the memo, Hoover says another conversation with Alfred Friendly, vice president and managing editor of the Post, later revealed that Russell Wiggins, editor of the Post, had refused to make a commitment that the newspaper would not run such an editorial.

Mysterious Letter Mailed To Killer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following is the English text of a letter written in Spanish and addressed to "Lee Harvey Oswald, Mail Office, Dallas, Texas, U.S.A." The letter was dated Nov. 10, 1963, or 12 days before the Nov. 22 assassination of John F. Kennedy. It was postmarked La Habana, Cuba, Nov. 28.

The letter follows:

Friend Lee:
Miami. The Spanish books that you took from the hotel and I have hardly anything. I told you of the man who was thinking of visiting here shortly and you ought to close the business as soon as possible, like I told you before in Miami. I recommend much prudence and do not be foolish with the money I gave you. So I hope you will not defraud me and that our dreams will be realized. After the affair I am going to recommend much to the chief that he certainly will have much interest in knowing you as they need men like you. I told him you could put out a candle at 50 meters and he did not want to believe me, but I made him believe it because I saw you with my own eyes and the chief was astonished. Good Lee, practice your Spanish for when you come to Habana for Habana is the land of the free, of the beautiful women and the rich Habana tobacco. Don't forget to do all I told you to the very letter and leave nothing that could lead to your trail and when you receive my letters destroy them as always. After the affair I will send you the money and we will see each other in Miami where always.

Sincerely always Pedro Charles

JACK RUBY

LEE HARVEY OSWALD

Murder Of Oswald Deepens Mystery

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jack Ruby fired a single shot from his three-year-old pistol, fatally wounding Lee Harvey Oswald, and turned to one of the police he liked to count as friends.

"Somebody had to do it. You all couldn't do it," he told one officer. "I hope I killed the (expletive deleted)," he told another.

These events were detailed in FBI documents released Wednesday.

In a nationwide search that followed, according to the documents, hundreds of scraps of information about Ruby's character and past came to light — but none to contradict Ruby's own claim he acted alone and for purely emotional reasons.

Scores of times in the files on Ruby the sentence appears, "(Name of person interviewed) did not know Lee Harvey Oswald and has no knowledge of any connection between Ruby and Oswald."

Ruby had reacted intensely to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The FBI notes on his interrogation say "Ruby states he was in a highly emotional state because of the president's assassination, had not known Oswald, conspired with no one."

Ruby closed his two night clubs after Kennedy's death "because he was ashamed that anyone would want to participate in dancing... after the assassination."

The FBI interviewed childhood chums, gamblers, underworld figures, prostitutes, strippers, "perverts," "pimps," a "fence," and a croupier, hoping to learn whether Ruby was any more than he appeared to be: a small-time operator who admired the president and liked police.

Jack Leon Ruby was born Jack Rubenstein in Chicago on March 25, 1911, later nicknamed "Sparky," attended second year of high school, had his name legally changed.

"Numerous persons including relatives state Ruby highly emotional; associates and employees state he is impulsive, high tempered, has resorted to violence on several occasions without provocation, suspected of homosexuality," said one memo.

Ruby's father was a "neighborhood drunk," one Chicago source told the FBI. Ruby made his living "scalping" tickets to sports events or selling punch boards.

He was an "extremely stubborn person," or a "publicity hound," according to acquaintances.

"Ruby would do anything for a buck," one said. "Ruby dropped out of sight in Chicago in 1948, no one missing him."

Ruby was scrupulous in keeping his two Dallas night clubs respectable, and was not connected with gambling, bookmaking or other illegal activity, the report said.

Ruby made friends with the Dallas police on the night club beat and often brought sandwiches to the police headquarters for the officers.

On Nov. 24, wearing a gray hat, a charcoal brown suit, black shoes, white shirt and charcoal black tie, he strolled into the basement of Dallas City Hall and shot Oswald with the .38 caliber pistol he always carried to fend off robbers.

AN EDITORIAL:

'Noise' Helps Hospital Rules

A CHORUS OF well-founded objections that proposed health planning guidelines posed a threat to South Plains area hospitals apparently has struck a responsive chord in Washington. Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he received assurances from the Carter administration this week that the onerous guidelines will be re-written before they go into effect.

AN EDITORIAL:

What Did You Say, Mon Ami?

LIKE A bone that is stronger for having been broken, a nation that has gone through a civil war can be more united than it was before. But wherever the conquerors or the treaty makers have drawn a political line around peoples speaking different languages, there are found some of history's most ancient and most insoluble enmities.

Cosell Welcome As Fly Floating In Cold Soup

WASHINGTON—The role that Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters and John Chancellor played in the Sadat-Begin talks in Jerusalem cannot be underestimated. It might have been different, though, if Roone Arledge, the president of ABC News, had chosen to have Howard Cosell conduct the interview between the two men instead of Barbara Walters.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Carter's Biggest 'If'

WASHINGTON—After four days of extraordinary diplomacy conducted largely behind the scenes, President Carter has turned a corner in his efforts to limit the damage of the split in the Arab world, retaining the U.S. option for an overall Arab-Israeli settlement.

Lend 'Em An Ear...

WASHINGTON—"I wish I could find out how much time Johnny should spend on his homework," said my friend O'Hara-Polewicz. "Why don't you ask his teacher?" I inquired. "I did," he replied. "Three weeks ago, I'm still waiting for an answer from the school's spokesperson. Johnny's teacher said she was not authorized to discuss school policies with parents."

WELL, TIME

marches on. How are things otherwise? "Oh, mixed. For instance, it took me only a week to find out how much it would cost to get a lubrication and oil-change job for my car. But I confess that was because I've got a friend at the oil company who bows every week with the gas station's spokesperson."

JAY HARRIS:

Test For Survival

THE TEXAS OFFICE of Traffic Safety has launched a campaign for the Holidays and Year-End which every motorist in the state should read. Since Lubbock residents have chafed up the worst death toll on city streets yet, the series of announcements ought to be must reading for all of us.

SO, YOU think you're a good driver. "Well, here's a little challenge for you. A test. A chance to prove what you know. And what you don't know. Odds are, you won't know all the answers. And odds are, the mistakes you make now will keep you from making the mistake later."

- 1. SPEED DIFFERENTIAL (the difference in speeds between vehicles, traveling the same direction on the same roadway) is a major factor in highway accidents. A safe driver should: A. Drive slightly faster than other vehicles, to avoid the pack. B. Drive slower than most cars to give yourself extra room. C. Drive with the traffic. "go with the flow."

Nothing is certain in the Arab Middle East. But the studied refusal of Syrian President Hafez Assad to link his future to Libya, Iraq and other radical Arab regimes holds the door open for a political breakthrough going beyond a separate Egypt-Israel peace.

SECRET plans were afoot earlier this month for Sec. of State Cyrus Vance to make a sudden, dramatic shuttle to the Middle East.

But the time needed to catch Assad's coattails before they disappeared into the Kremlin forced an embarrassing stall in Carter's Mideast policies. That stall cost him valuable political support at home and the private fury of Egyptian leaders in Cairo.

STATISTICS SHOW that safety belts are worn more often on long trips at higher speeds than for errands around town.

- 9. STATISTICS SHOW that safety belts are worn more often on long trips at higher speeds than for errands around town. Statistics also show that: A. Most accidents happen on highways during trips. B. Most accidents occur at low speed with in a few miles of the driver's home. C. The accident rate is about the same for both situations.

NOW FOR THE moment of truth. Here are the answers as given by the Texas Office of Traffic Safety...

- 1. C. 2. B. 3. A. 4. C. 5. B. 6. D. 7. B. 8. C. 9. B. And so how did you do? Six or fewer right means you or whoever took the test have some big problems. And equally bad, it means so do the rest of us.

L.M. BOYD:

The big book at hand says our word "blimp" came from "the sound made by striking the gas bag with the thumb." It says further that our word "dirigible" came from the Latin word meaning "steerable." But a scholarly client insists that both were derived from Navy terms: "Class B-Limp" and "Class D-Rigid." Who's right?

PEARL HARBOR REMEMBERED — A Navy-Marine Corps honor guard raises the American flag Wednesday during ceremonies at the USS Arizona Memorial in Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, Hawaii. Representatives of veterans, patriotic and civic associations presented wreaths during the brief ceremonies marking the 36th anniversary of the Japanese attack on the naval base. (AP Laserphoto)

Post-Pearl Attack Recalled

HONOLULU (AP) — American warplanes strafed four fishing boats manned by crewmen of Japanese ancestry in Hawaiian waters the day after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, killing six civilians, surviving crewmen have claimed.

Wednesday's Honolulu Star-Bulletin said two of the survivors, Seiki Arakaki and Sannosuke Onishi, identified the planes that attacked them on Dec. 8, 1941 — 36 years ago Thursday — as P-40 Warhawks.

All four of the sampan-design fishing boats were based at Kewalo Basin, near downtown Honolulu, they said, and none carried a flag. Most of the crewmen on the boats were American citizens.

Arakaki, 57, of Honolulu, said he was a crewman aboard the sampan Kiho Maru, which had been fishing off Oahu's leeward coast since Dec. 4. He said the crew realized "something was happening" on Dec. 7 when it saw columns of smoke coming from Pearl Harbor that morning and saw the island in darkness that night.

The sampan did not have a radio, Arakaki said, and did not learn of the attack until another sampan pulled alongside and delivered the news later that night.

The Kiho Maru met three other sampans the next morning and all four headed toward Kewalo Basin.

"All of a sudden, there were four or five army P-40s flying over us," Arakaki said. "Each picked out a target and attacked."

The sampans were about two miles off Barber's Point, about 10 miles west of Pearl Harbor, at the time of the incident, he said.

Nine crewmen survived the mid-morning attack, but most were wounded. All but three since have died.

After the planes attacked, a destroyer arrived on the scene and dispatched launches to tow the sampans, with the dead and wounded, back to Kewalo Basin, the survivors said.

They were taken to a civilian hospital, where the wounded were kept under armed guard.

"We were questioned. They asked us 'What were you doing out there, helping Japanese submarines?'" said Arakaki.

Both Arakaki and Onishi said they were told that U.S. authorities found "enemy bullets" on their sampans.

"I knew otherwise, but I couldn't say anything," Arakaki said.

Several of the victims' families later petitioned the U.S. government for compensation, the Star-Bulletin said. In 1967, 26 years after the incident, the widow of the Kiho Maru skipper received $8,000.

Takumi received about $2,500 and proceeds from the sale of fish that was in his boat on the day of the attack. Onishi said he received nothing because he was an alien and was told he had no claim.

Onishi, 78, said he bears no grudge about the attack.

"I look at it this way — I thank my God that I'm still alive," he said.

Arakaki said he served in the U.S. Army but was unable to get a job at Pearl Harbor after the war.

"At that time I felt that if I had a gun I would have shot somebody," he said. "But at this moment, I have no feelings."

Pearl Harbor Background Topic Of Book By Professor At A&M

DALLAS (UPI) — Wednesday was the 36th anniversary of Pearl Harbor, the worst blow ever suffered by the U.S. Navy and the center of a political controversy which may have set a record for length.

Martin V. Melosi, an assistant history professor at Texas A&M University, tells about the political controversy that the Japanese sneak attack set off in a new book, "The Shadow of Pearl Harbor," published by the Texas A&M Press.

While Melosi does not come up with anything new, having the facts gathered between the covers of a book instead of being scattered in newspapers from December 1941 to July 1946, and after, gives the Pearl Harbor controversy a new impact.

July 1946 was when a joint congressional committee finally reported to Congress on what it thought happened at Pearl.

The essence of the controversy was this: long before Pearl Harbor, the United States broke the Japanese codes. Critics of President Franklin D. Roosevelt charged that the message giving the final go-ahead for the attack was received and decoded in Washington Dec. 4, 1941.

Therefore, they contended that somebody in Washington knew the Japanese were going to attack three days before they did. Some critics even went ahead and said it: that Roosevelt knew about the attack but let the Japanese go ahead and make it to bring a unified United States into the war.

Melosi makes the point that Americans were much less unified on going to war to help Britain, France and Russia before Pearl Harbor than is commonly thought.

In any case, the Japanese, striking without opposition, caused the United States more than 3,000 casualties, sank or badly damaged five battleships and destroyed nearly every American plane in the Pacific.

With the war over, there was no reason to delay a public investigation and Republicans demanded that Congress get on with it. Roosevelt was dead by then and Harry Truman was president.

"Democratic supporters of the Roosevelt administration and its foreign policy were apprehensive about further probing into the Pearl Harbor matter and remained quite willing to adhere to the administration view that local Hawaiian commanders should bear the guilt for America's lack of vigilance," Melosi writes.

"Republican critics of Roosevelt, on the other hand, saw the new investigation as a unique opportunity to challenge the Democratic hierarchy's claims of innocence and possibly garner some political advantage for the future."

On the first day of a long and tempestuous hearing, the joint committee's counsel confirmed that the government had broken the Japanese codes. Melosi says this indicated that as far back as mid-summer, 1941, the government knew Japan's basic war plans.

Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, former commander of the Military Intelligence Service, indicated to the committee that a great deal of information gathered from the broken codes was withheld from the Hawaiian military commanders for fear the Japanese would learn about the broken codes.

In the end, the congressional investigation cleared up little if anything. The committee failed even to agree on a single report and issued two — a majority report and a minority report.

The majority report reflected what an Army Pearl Harbor Board and a Navy Court of Inquiry had reported earlier — that the commanders at Pearl Harbor, Adm. Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, had let themselves be caught asleep.

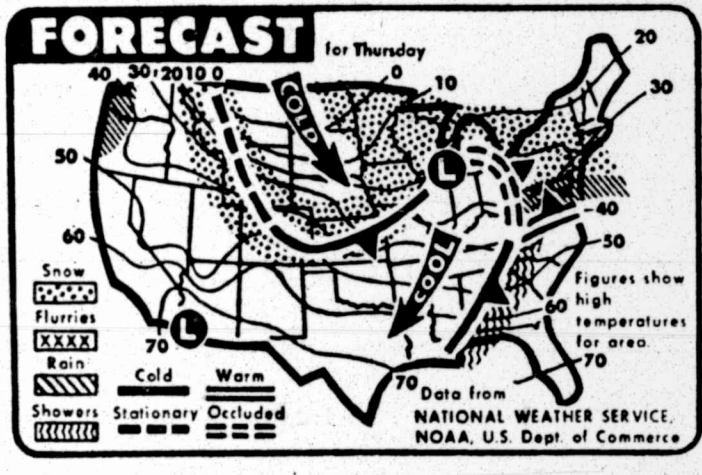

The minority report singled out Roosevelt, Secretary of War Henry Stimson, Navy Secretary Frank Knox, Chief of Staff George C. Marshall and Chief of Naval Operations Harold C. Stark, as well as Kimmel and Short, for criticism by name.

But the minority report avoided extreme condemnation and did not touch on the question of whether Roosevelt deliberately exposed the fleet.

Hill Argues Gas Lease Case Before High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Attorney General John Hill urged the U.S. Supreme Court Wednesday to oppose a federal ruling which would require more Texas natural gas to be sold out of state.

Hill argued for the state in opposition to a Federal Power Commission ruling which says leased gas, once assigned to interstate trade, cannot be sold intrastate even if the old lease expires.

Hill asked the Supreme Court either to uphold a lower court decision which overturned the FPC ruling or to apply the FPC position only to relatively rare fixed-term leases.

property to El Paso, which shipped it through an interstate pipeline to California. To do so, Gulf obtained an FPC certificate, dedicating the gas to interstate trade.

twell asked the court to uphold the appeals court. "You can't sell what you never owned. You can't dedicate what you never owned," Attwell said.

plomers. Some of them might have found a little gas in one corner of a tract, sold it in interstate commerce, and then let the lease expire when the well petered out, he said.

Court Okays Phone Rate-Making Policy

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. failed Wednesday to convince the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals that the Texas Public Utility Commission's telephone rate-making formula is illegal.

preciation, should be the base, and they upheld it. They upheld exactly what we said," Erwin said.

Specifically, the case involves the Southland Royalty Co. and El Paso Gas Co. and whether the natural gas under the Waddell Ranch in West Texas will go into interstate or intrastate commerce.

In 1975, Gulf's lease expired and control over the mineral rights reverted to Southland and the other owners. Southland decided to sell the gas in the more lucrative intrastate market.

Justice Department attorney Stephen R. Barnett argued that the FPC had the authority and responsibility to protect the interstate supply.

In the intervening years, a new leaseholder might find another gas field via a different well on the same tract, Hill argued. If the FPC position prevails, the new gas discoverer would be bound to sell that gas in interstate commerce, he said.

John Hayes, a Bell vice president in Dallas, said the company had not decided whether to appeal to the Texas Supreme Court.

He said the appeals court decision "shoots down the whole Bell case (against the PUC rates) unless they can prove the whole amount is confiscatory — not the method but the total dollars."

The case began in 1925, when Gulf Oil Corp. signed a 50-year lease to the oil and gas under the Waddell Ranch. In the intervening years, the ranch owners sold the ownership of the mineral rights to a number of buyers, the largest of which was Southland.

El Paso protested to the FPC, supported by the state of California, which said it stood to lose 43 million cubic feet of gas per day. The FPC ruled in their favor, ordering Southland to sell the gas interstate.

Hill said the high court's decision would not be critical for Texas if applied only to fixed-term leases, which lost favor after the 1920s and are now relatively rare. Newer leases generally run until the lessee stops producing gas.

Moreover, Hill said the various leases and dedications might not be recorded and available to title searchers. Thus, if the FPC prevails, Texas landowners and leaseholders might not be able to know what encumbrances exist on their land and mineral rights, he said.

The appeals court denied Bell's request for a stay of rates set by the commission.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the FPC, saying that Gulf could only dedicate what it owned — the gas produced during the 50-year term of the lease.

But Hill said a broader ruling in favor of the FPC could cause serious harm to Texas.

That, Hill said, probably would lead to less incentive to explore for gas and ultimately hurt the country.

Final '78 Effort Due Friday On Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conferees on the stalled legislation to keep the Social Security system solvent will meet Friday for a final effort to fashion a bill this year.

The Senate and House each passed a bill steeply raising payroll taxes to overcome the deficits the system has been running since 1975.

But the two measures differ significantly, with the Senate version placing more of the additional tax burden on employers than employees. The House bill ultimately would abolish the limit on the amount retired persons could earn without benefit reduction. The Senate bill would increase the earnings limit.

The leaders of the House-Senate conference committee, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., met Wednesday. It was understood they agreed to try to strip the legislation to essentials that could be agreed on in one day. If this proves impossible, the bill probably will go over to next year.

However, there reportedly was heavy pressure both from the White House and congressional leadership to enact a bill before adjournment to allay fears of pensioners that the system might go broke.

Congressional leaders were said to be especially anxious to have enactment of a Social Security bill on Congress' record because chances of finishing work on the energy program are dimming.

With Christmas approaching, leaders were working toward adjournment for the year in about a week, although conferees on the energy legislation might continue working.

Mayor Of Albany Undergoes Surgery

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Albany Mayor Erastus Corning II underwent surgery Wednesday to have an artificial hip joint installed, and was reported recovering in good condition.

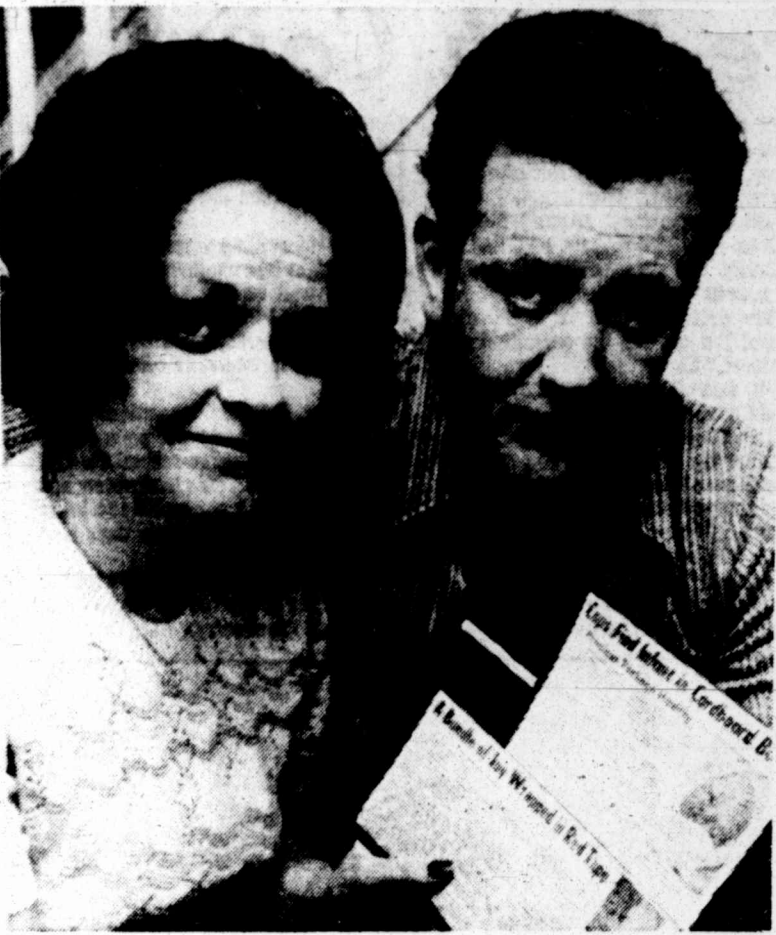

Corning, 68, had the ball and socket installed at the Albany Medical Center Hospital. He had been suffering from arthritis.

First elected in 1941, the Democrat is believed to be the nation's longest-serving mayor. He was handily re-elected to a 10th term in the overwhelmingly Democratic city of 113,000 Nov. 8.

Couple Seeks Abandoned Baby

TRYING TO ADOPT FOUNDLING — New York police officer Charles Larkin and his wife, Julia, pose in their home in the Forrest Hills section of New York City Wednesday with clipping about their effort to adopt an infant, now at New York's Wyckoff Heights Hospital. The baby was found abandoned in a cardboard box Monday. Among the group of police who found the box was Larkin, who is childless. (AP Laser-photo)

NEW YORK (AP) — Julia Larkin sits amid her collection of figurines of children and waits. She can only hope she will be able to adopt the baby her policeman husband's unit found abandoned in an apartment house vestibule.

Charles and Julia Larkin met at a dance at a Roman Catholic club, were married in 1966 and began to plan for children. "I didn't go to work. I stayed home and hoped," she explained Wednesday at the couple's small, comfortably furnished home.

Julia, 31, and Charles, 38, are still waiting, now for a call from New York City's Special Services for Children Agency. Mrs. Larkin has been to doctors and adoption agencies in hopes of having a child.

Physical Problem

The doctors first told her, "Go home and try again." Then she found a fertility clinic through a magazine article, and there were visits to hospitals for tests. The news was not good.

"My Fallopian tubes are not right," she explained frankly, sadly. The adoption agencies did not offer encouragement in an age when contraception and abortion have greatly reduced the number of children up for adoption.

The New York Welfare Department estimates 700 children are available for adoption in the state. Others, perhaps 4,000 or more, are in various legal stages on the road to adoption. New York state has a population of more than 18 million.

Married At Wrong Time?

Of children available, many are of minority backgrounds, handicapped or older. The Larkins, Roman Catholic, both born in the New York City borough of Queens where they still live, wanted a white baby.

"We were married at the wrong time," Mrs. Larkin said, fingering a tiny silver medal on a chain around her neck, a medal bearing the likeness of St. Gerard, the patron saint of motherhood.

"Nowadays you see ads for abortion but not adoption," she said. She once wrote to an agency in Ireland after an aunt there sent a newspaper ad saying children were available in the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic country. No, said the agency. It would not allow children to be adopted outside the Republic of Ireland.

Abandoned Baby Call

"We went to the adoption agency years ago and we had pretty much given up hope," her husband said.

Last Friday, the hopelessness faded in an afternoon of coincidences. Larkin's partner was out ill and he had been assigned as his sergeant's driver. It was the sergeant who went, with Larkin at the wheel, when a call came in about the abandoned baby.

Two other policemen arrived at the two-story building too, and Larkin got only a glimpse of the baby girl, a day or two old, wrapped in a pink blanket and left in a cardboard box, before she was rushed to Wyckoff Heights Hospital in Brooklyn.

At his station house, the news came from the hospital. The baby girl, 7 pounds, 10½ ounces, was healthy though hungry.

A detective, then a captain suggested what Larkin was afraid to think: that he and Julia should try to adopt the tiny infant.

"Everybody who knows us knows we've wanted to have children for ... well, for 11 years," Mrs. Larkin said.

He mentioned it to Julia that night. Nothing like it had happened in his 14 years as a policeman. He had shot a man once who came at him with a knife. He had been hit over the head at a demonstration. Several times he had suffered smoke inhalation.

Now, just weeks before Christmas, the baby...

Larkin was afraid. Maybe the mother would have second thoughts and show up. "She left it in a vestibule," he mused. "She didn't leave it in Mrs. Larkin wanted the child right away." "I didn't hesitate on that," she said, but added she, too, was afraid to get her hopes up.

U-2 Jet Crash Kills Five In Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An American U-2 reconnaissance jet, taking off on a Middle East peacekeeping mission, crashed into a building at a British air base on Cyprus and exploded Wednesday, killing the American pilot and four persons on the ground.

Four Cypriot civilians died and seven British and Cypriot military personnel and civilians were injured when the craft hit the operations and air control center at the Akrotiri air base and set it ablaze, a British military spokesman said. A British civilian was reported in serious condition.

A Strategic Air Command spokesman identified the pilot as Capt. Robert A. Henderson, 32, from Marysville, Calif. He said Henderson was assigned to the Ninth Strategic Reconnaissance Wing, which is based at Beale Air Force Base in California. Henderson was born in Ada, Okla.

The four dead Cypriot civilians were employed at the base on Cyprus' southern coast, the spokesman said. The high-altitude U-2, which gained notoriety as a "spy plane" with the Francis Gary Powers flight over the Soviet Union during the Cold War, was leaving for its daily reconnaissance flight over Egyptian and Israeli lines in the Sinai peninsula, 250 miles to the south.

"The plane sped down the runway, took off, appeared unable to gain altitude and then swerved and crashed into the operations building on the side of the runway," said one witness, a Cypriot base employee.

"After the jet hit the building there was a terrific explosion and the whole area was engulfed in flames," he added.

Firemen battled for more than three hours to control the blaze, which hampered rescue operations. Clouds of black smoke were visible in Limassol, eight miles away.

The victims on the ground were on duty at the time of the crash, shortly before 7 a.m. (midnight EST.) There was no immediate indication what caused the crash, the British spokesman said.

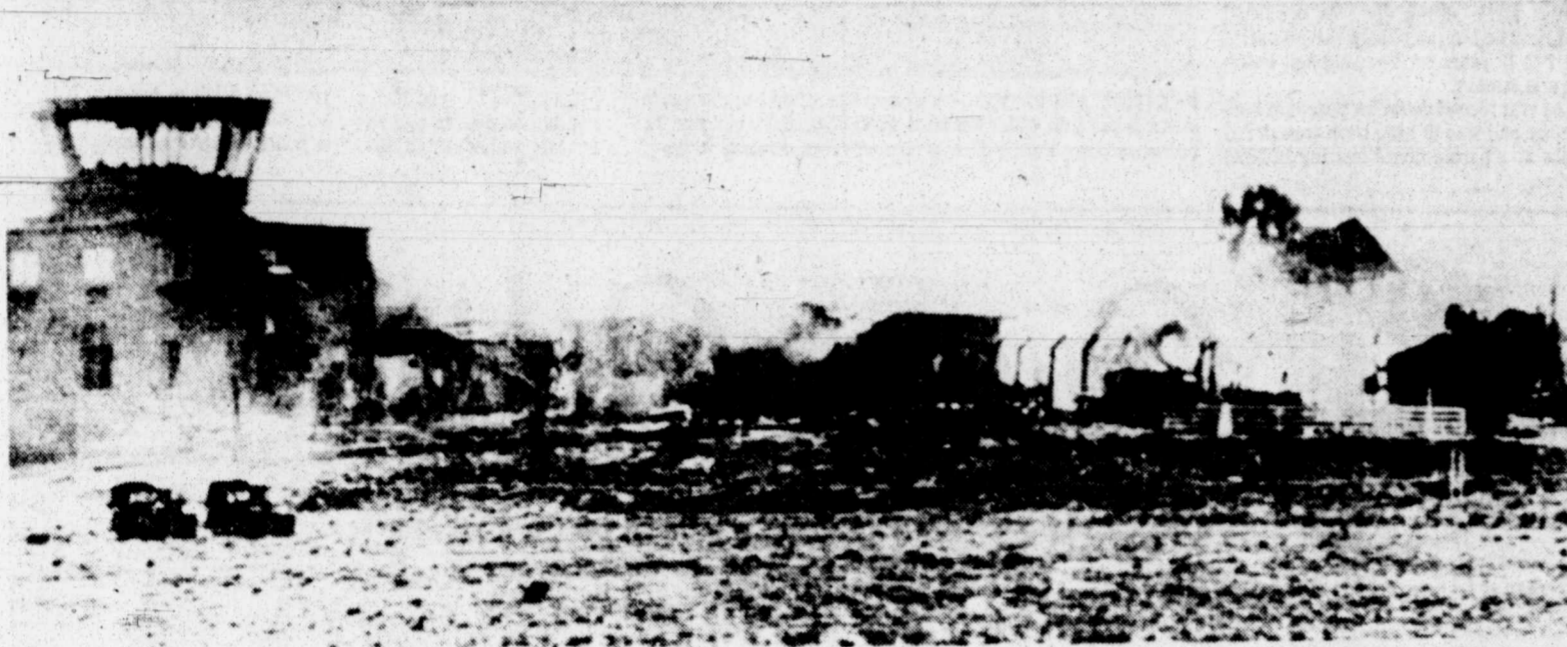

Last week, dynamite explosions caused slight damage to electrical and water installations at three other British bases on Cyprus. The attacks followed threats by the EOKA-B underground movement, which favors union of Cyprus with Greece and was seeking to block extradition of one of its members from Britain to face a murder charge on Cyprus.

The U-2 was based at Akrotiri to fulfill a U.S. commitment to oversee the Egyptian-Israeli disengagement accord worked out by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger after the 1973 Middle East war. All parties involved had agreed to the reconnaissance operation.

The U-2, a single-engine plane with extra-long wing span, is one of the few aircraft using the base — Britain's largest overseas — since Royal Air Force bombers and fighter support squadrons were withdrawn last year. The withdrawal was in line with a British government decision to curtail overseas defense spending.

Existence of the then-secret U-2 was revealed in 1960, when one of the craft, piloted by the late Francis Gary Powers, was shot down during a spy mission over the Soviet Union. The incident prompted the Russians to cancel a scheduled meeting between President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Man Receives 20-Year Sentence For Murder

A man convicted of murdering a fellow worker during a company Christmas party was handed a 20-year prison term by a jury here Wednesday.

The term was assessed Demetrio Garcia, 27.

Garcia was found guilty Tuesday by a jury in Judge Denzil Bevers' 72nd Dist. Court of gunning down Charles Whatley, 22, on Dec. 21, 1974.

The shooting took place at the Scott Manufacturing Company, 918 E. 50th St.

Both men were attending a night shift party to boost employee morale, testimony indicated.

Garcia, who had a portion of his right leg amputated as the result of an industrial accident in 1967 — took the stand during the trial. He admitted shooting Whatley, but said he was acting in self-defense.

The defendant claimed he had three run-ins with Whatley during the party, and that Whatley had taunted him about being a "cripple." Garcia also claimed Whatley had threatened to kill him and made a vulgar reference about his wife.

According to the defendant, all the run-ins ended relatively amicably. But, he said, he went home and got a gun in case there was further trouble.

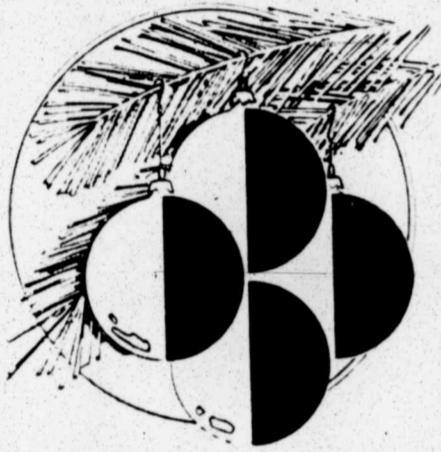

Garcia said that, after returning to the party on the company premises, he shot Whatley.

He said Whatley had made a death threat and advanced toward him, with a hand behind him at a back pocket, before he pulled the trigger.

Testimony indicated no weapon was found on the deceased.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Sam Oatman argued to jurors that Garcia's action in going home and getting a gun negated the validity of any self-defense claim.

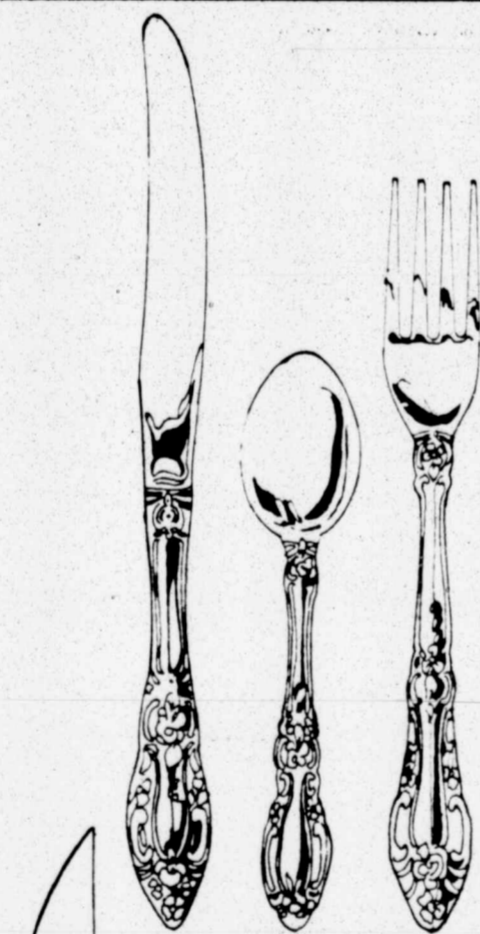

Defense attorney Bill Wischaemper had requested probation for his client.

Fugitive Joan Little Captured In Brooklyn

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fugitive Joan Little, a black woman acquitted two years ago in the icepick slaying of a white North Carolina prison guard who she said tried to rape her, was recaptured Wednesday after refusing a friend's plea to give herself up.

Miss Little, who became a feminist symbol during her celebrated 1975 murder trial, was arrested with a companion at 2 a.m. after leading police officers on a high-speed auto chase through the streets of Brooklyn. One of the officers received minor injuries when the two cars collided during the chase.

At her arraignment before Brooklyn Criminal Court Judge William Suglaia, Miss Little was ordered held without bail pending an extradition hearing in 30 days. Suglaia also set $5,000 bail for Miss Little and her companion on a variety of state charges.

Police officials said Miss Little's companion, George McRae, 29, of Brooklyn earlier had threatened a man with a gun at Kennedy Airport.

Police said the man, identified through sources as Vernell Muhammad, claimed to be Miss Little's fiancé and said he had come to New York to plead with her to return to North Carolina, where she escaped from jail Oct. 15.

When she refused, police said, Muhammad provided police with the license plate of the car in which she and McRae rode.

Muhammad, who returned to North Carolina Wednesday morning, told UPI in Raleigh that he flew into New York Tuesday night and was met at Kennedy Airport by Miss Little and McRae.

"She introduced me to a man called 'Duck,'" Muhammad said, referring to McRae. He said that when he pleaded with Miss Little to give herself up, McRae "told me he didn't mind going to prison. He told me he didn't mind going to jail. He told me nobody was going to take Joan back to North Carolina."

"Joan seemed like she was afraid of him. She wouldn't really answer me. I've been knowing her for over a year now and I've never known her to show fear like that before."

Muhammad said McRae reached for a gun in his belt at one point, but he slammed the car door and ran back to the airport terminal and telephoned police.

Attorney William Kunstler, who attended Miss Little's murder trial but was ejected from the courtroom after one day, said he planned to fight extradition. "It would be dangerous for her to go back. She doesn't have a chance in North Carolina," Kunstler said.

In addition to the fugitive charge, Miss Little was charged with assault, reckless endangerment and criminal mischief. McRae was charged with third degree assault, reckless endangerment, leaving the scene of an accident, possession of heroin and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Miss Little, who escaped from the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women in Raleigh by climbing a fence, gained national attention for the icepick killing of Clarence Allgood, a white jailer in Beaufort County, who she said tried to rape her.

Miss Little eventually was acquitted and returned to jail, where she was serving 7-to-10 years for breaking and entering and larceny.

She was turned down for parole in September and was to have been considered again at a parole board hearing in November.

Childress, Railroad Debate Paving Work

A-J Correspondent
CHILDRESS — Negotiations are underway between officials of the City of Childress and the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad concerning a controversial street paving project here.

A controversy surfaced here after highway department officials approved paving a short section of 5th street. There is a railroad crossing on the street, one of few in the downtown area. Many residents of southwest Childress use the crossing to reach shopping areas, and are in favor of having the dirt street paved.

However, the street is adjacent to the FW&D switching yards, and railroad officials voiced opposition to the proposal, fearing an increase in traffic would result in accidents at the crossing. A spokesman for the railroad said that in the future as many as one train per hour may go through the crossing. Already one lawsuit has been filed against FW&D regarding an accident that occurred several years ago at the site, the spokesman said.

At a recent city council meeting, the spokesman said it appeared likely that the FW&D would move its railroad shop from Childress to Fort Worth if the crossing is paved. The shop employs more than 100 persons.

However, Galligan said that during the Fort Worth negotiations Bill Hooks, A FW&D vice president, reassured the Childress officials that the shop will stay here. He also indicated that representative of FW&D will be in Childress in the near future to study the matter in greater depth.

City Manager David Galligan, who is heading a local group in negotiations with the FW&D, explained that railroad officials are concerned about safety, and Childress officials and residents who favor the paving say the crossing is needed for emergency use by fire, police and ambulance service vehicles if other crossings are being used by trains.

"It was agreed that the railroad believes that the fewer the crossings the better," Galligan summarized, "but it was also brought out by city officials that the federal funds for the proposed project would have to be let during the current fiscal year."

The city manager said negotiations are expected to be completed and a final decision made by Dec. 16.

ERA Foe Schlafly Won't Make Race

CHICAGO (AP) — Equal Rights Amendment opponent Phyllis Schlafly said Wednesday she will not run against Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., in the March 21 Republican primary.

Mrs. Schlafly said at a news conference that a primary run against Percy would cost $1.5 million — "simply too much money for my supporters to spend for one minority vote in the U.S. Senate."

St. Mary's Names Spate Of Hospital Officials

St. Mary's Hospital has named long-time cattleman and First National Bank director Tom B. Simmons Jr. to head its board of directors.

The announcement of Simmons' appointment came Wednesday afternoon — along with the names of five additional appointments to the board and a medical director to head the hospital's new 26,675-square-foot rehabilitation unit, nearly ready for occupancy.

New board members named were Howard Yandell, president of First National Bank here; L. Edwin Smith, a local certified public accountant; Raymond Pickering, with American State Bank; Sister Redempta Girard and Sister Jeanne Bird, both of the Sister's of St. Joseph.

Board veteran Jesse Mattox was named vice president of the board, and H.A. Padgett Jr., former acting board chairman, was named secretary. L. Edwin Smith was appointed treasurer.

Simmons' appointment as chairman to the 18-member board follows the chairmanship of Padgett who filled the position following the death of former chairman Robert L. Snyder.

Dr. Chittur Ananthkrishnan, an assistant professor of orthopedic surgery and physical medicine and rehabilitation at the Texas Tech medical school, has been chosen to head St. Mary's new rehabilitation unit, scheduled for formal opening in February.

Hospital spokesmen said the unit will employ occupational, speech and physical therapists.

The 32-year-old Ananthkrishnan came to the Texas Tech medical school from the University of Colorado in Denver. He received his MD degree from the Christian Medical College in Punjab, India, and continued his postgraduate medical studies in the United States and Canada.

Hospital spokesmen said they expect the 30-bed rehabilitation unit will have reached its full patient load in three to six months.

Women Admit Slayings, Get Probated Sentences

Genevieve Moore Johnson, who admitted walking into an East Lubbock pool hall and shooting a man to death, has been assessed a seven-year probated sentence after pleading guilty to murder.

She was one of two persons to receive probated sentences after pleading guilty to murder before 237th Dist. Judge John R. McFall.

Miss Johnson, 23, pleaded guilty to killing Carl Eugene Cook, 32, about 1 a.m. Jan. 16.

According to stipulated testimony from witnesses, the defendant walked into the pool hall at 3013 E. Main St. carrying a single-barrel shotgun.

Witnesses said the defendant shot Cook as he sat near a jukebox.

Police reports indicated the blast penetrated Cook's upper left arm and chest. He was dead on arrival at a local hospital.

Stipulated testimony by the defendant was introduced in which she admitted intentionally and knowingly causing Cook's death.

The testimony indicated that Cook shortly before the incident had threatened the defendant's life by placing a handgun to her head.

In another case, Mrs. Willie Lee Gaines, 48, of 1028 E. 29th St., was assessed a seven-year probated sentence after pleading guilty to murder in connection with the shooting death of Curtis Shedrick.

In stipulated testimony, the defendant said she had been living with Shedrick for about two years when she shot him Nov. 9, 1975.

She said she had been arguing with Shedrick over one of her grandchildren, a baby. She said she shot Shedrick after he began quarreling about the baby with her daughter.

The defendant said in the testimony that she took Shedrick to a hospital Nov. 12, 1975, after he had begun running a fever.

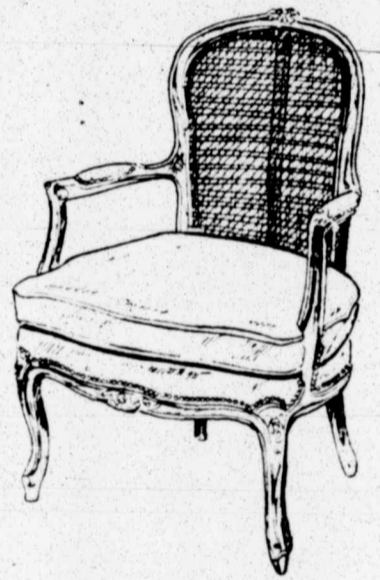

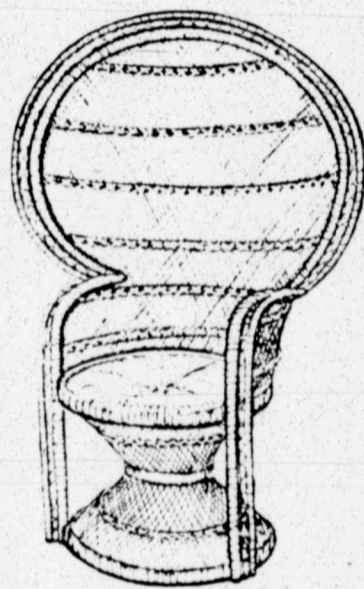

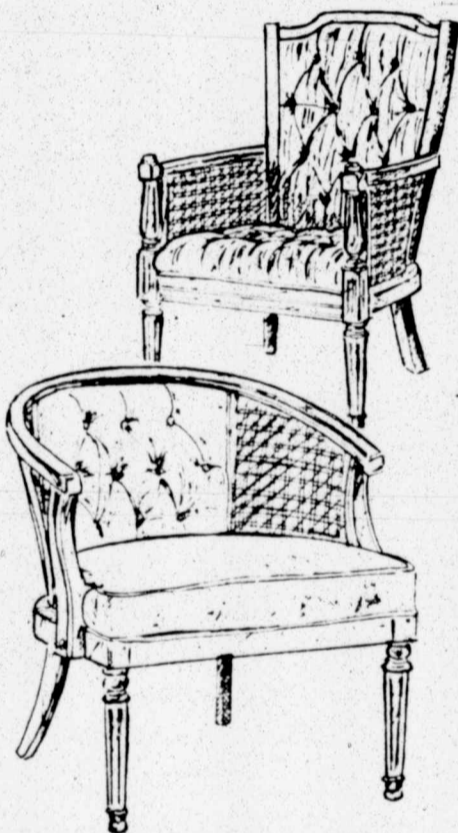

Shedrick died Jan. 29, 1976, and an autopsy reportedly revealed the death as occurring from complications arising from a gunshot wound to the neck.

The two pleas were among 30 taken in McFall's 237th Dist. Court.

Swine Flu Vaccination Results In Lawsuit

DENVER (AP)—A man confined to a wheelchair and barely able to speak has filed a $2 million negligence suit against the federal government, claiming he suffered permanent brain damage after receiving a swine-flu shot. Scott Heath, 26, a Harvard University graduate, had just started a career as a commercial artist in Denver at the time he took the shot Nov. 10, 1976. Two weeks later, he was in Denver General Hospital and had to undergo extensive brain surgery. In a complaint filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court here, Heath said that since Nov. 28, 1976, he has not been able to walk, work or "normally converse." Heath claimed his injuries were a result of negligence on the part of the federal government, which he said was responsible for the development of the swine-flu vaccination program and administration of the vaccinations. Millions of Americans received the shots last fall until the program was suspended after reports of a usually rare paralysis occurring among persons who had been inoculated. There were no outbreaks of swine flu. Heath claimed in his suit that the government failed to sufficiently research the drug used in the vaccinations and failed to use reasonable care in the drug's testing, manufacturing, inspection and administration. He further alleged that the government went ahead with the program despite knowing "there was little likelihood of a swine flu outbreak."

...in labor unions

Of the 23 million men and women who are members of U.S. labor unions and employee associations, more than three-fourths belong to unions affiliated with the AFL-CIO. Yet three largest union are independents. According to the World Almanac, the leading U.S. unions, with their most recent membership figures, are:

Union	Members
Intl Brotherhood of Teamsters	1,854,659
United Auto Workers	1,393,501
National Education Assn	1,165,617
United Steelworkers of Amer.	960,000
Intl Brotherhood of Electrical Workers	815,000
Amer. Fed. of State, County & Municipal Employees	679,000

United Brotherhood of Carpenters	650,000
Intl. Assoc. of Machinists	630,000
Retail Clerks Intl. Assn.	620,000
Service Employees Intl. Union	507,000

About 70 million American workers do not belong to any union.

...in publishing

If you don't have it in you to write the great American novel, you might consider producing the great American economics or sociology text. According to Publishers Weekly, more different books were published last year on sociology and economics than any other topic. Here are 1976's most popular book topics and the total number of new titles and new editions published on each:

Topic	Titles
Sociology-economics	5,960
Fiction	3,458
Science	2,342
Juveniles	2,210
Medicine	2,128
History	1,934
Religion	1,748
Biography	1,714
Technology	1,489
Literature	1,405
Art	1,396
Poetry-drama	1,307

In all, some 35,141 different books were printed in 1976.

...in boats

Perhaps there's little Sir Francis Drake or John Paul Jones in all of us. That might account for the growing popularity of recreational boating in the U.S. According to the Boating Industry Association, sales of new boats, motors and trailers reached a new high of $2.66 billion for the 1976-77 model year.

Here's how those sales broke down by category:

Outboard motors	$591 million
Outboard boats	393 million
Inboard boats	422 million
Stern-drive boats	702 million
Sailboats	300 million
Deck boats	36 million
Houseboats	36 million
Canoes	24 million
Rowboats, dinghies, inflatable boats	35 million
Boat trailers	125 million

...on Broadway

Theater goers have ignored the critics — and ticket prices of up to $25 each — to flock to Liza Minnelli's new musical, "The Act." According to Variety, the top grossing shows currently playing on Broadway are:

1. "The Act" (Liza Minnelli)
2. "The King and I" (Yul Brynner)
3. "The Wiz"
4. "Man of La Mancha"
5. "Annie"
6. "Sly Fox" (Robert Preston)
7. "Bubbling Brown Sugar"
8. "Dracula" (Frank Langella)
9. "The Merchant"
10. "The Shadow Box"
11. "I Love My Wife"
12. "Side By Side By Sondheim"
13. "Golda" (Anne Bancroft)
14. "Miss Margarida's Way" (Estells Parsons)
15. "The Magic Show"

Making a strong showing on the road were Mary Martin's "Do You Turn Somersaults" in Chicago, Debbie Reynolds' "Annie Get Your Gun" revival in Miami Beach and Robert Vaughn's "F.D.R." in Washington. All three plays are Broadway bound.

...in commercial banks

Next time you proudly head for the bank with a deposit of 10 to 20 bucks, consider that 101 U.S. commercial banks boasted deposits of more than $1 billion this year. According to The World Almanac, 11 banks had deposits of more than $10 billion each. Those banks, with their June 30, 1977 deposits, are:

Bank	Deposits (billions)
1. Bank of America, San Francisco	$60.9
2. Citibank, New York	53.6
3. Chase Manhattan Bank, New York	38.7
4. Manufacturers Hanover	25.9
5. Morgan Guaranty, New York	21.8
6. Chemical Bank, New York	21.6
7. Banker Trust, New York	16.3
8. Continental Illinois, Chicago	16.1
9. First National Bank, Chicago	15.1
10. Security Pacific, Los Angeles	13.9
11. Wells Fargo Bank, San Francisco	11.3

The Bank of America's $60 billion in deposits equals the combined gross domestic products of Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. Even Wells Fargo holds as much wealth as is produced each year in the central African countries of Zaire, Zambia, Tanzania, Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi and the Congo put together.

...in eating out

Americans eat one meal in three away from home. And food service industry sources believe the ratio will soon increase to one meal in two.

Here are more facts about the food service industry — which includes everything from posh French restaurants to hospital diet kitchens — from Institutions-Volume Feeding magazine.

- The U.S. has about 600,000 food service outlets.
- About 45 billion meals were served away from home last year. Commercial restaurants served 10 million of those meals.
- Food service industry sales tallied $85.6 billion in 1976, up 13.6 percent over the previous year. That gave the industry the greatest sales gain of any major retail group — including retail grocery outlets.

Hobbs Readies Santa Parade

A—J Correspondent

HOBBS — Christmas in the Southwest is the theme for the annual Hobbs Jaycees Santa Claus parade set for Dec. 17.

According to parade chairman Jim Marsh, $600 in prizes will be awarded for floats that support the parade theme in either the religious or holiday season categories.

First-, second- and third-place prizes in both categories will be $150, $100 and $50, respectively.

The annual event will begin at 2:30 p.m. at Grimes and Broadway and proceed east to Morris Street.

Floats and walking units will drop out of the parade at this point, with Santa Claus continuing in a Hobbs fire engine to Bel Aire Shopping Center, the K-Mart-Albertson parking lot, Gibson Discount Center parking lot and the Broadmoor Shopping Center.

Entry deadline for participation in the parade is 5 p.m. Monday.

Ropes Schools Set Christmas Concert

ROPEVILLE (Special)—The Ropes music department of Ropes public schools will present its annual Christmas concert at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the school auditorium.

Performing groups will include the fourth grade music class, the fifth grade beginning band, the Ropes Junior High Eagle band and the Ropes High School Big Green band.

Also included in the program will be the announcement of honorary Eagle Band memberships and a showing of the film made during the 1977 University Interscholastic League marching contest.

Air Authority Laments Passing Of B-1 Bomber

LONDON (AP) — President Carter's decision to scrap the B-1 strategic bomber may have helped sow the seeds of Western defeat if World War III breaks out, the editor of "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" writes in a preface to the 1977-78 edition.

The rejection of the bomber, which Carter considered too costly, may endanger the military balance that has enabled the big powers to live with each other for a generation, John W.R. Taylor wrote in the authoritative annual. The new edition, in 900 pages, was published Thursday by Jane's Yearbooks of London.

Soviet leaders "must be surprised beyond belief that the U.S. president has disposed of the B-1 without asking any Soviet concession in return," Taylor wrote.

"If our planet is subjected one day to the unimaginable horrors of a third world war, 1977 might be recorded as the year in which the seeds of defeat for the Western powers were sown," he wrote.

Carter decided earlier this year to end the B-1 program, after four test planes had been built, and said the U.S. military should rely on the older B-52s and the cruise missile.

The Senate then voted to cut off funds for new B-1s, but the House voted Tuesday to appropriate money for two more test planes. The Senate must now vote again on the issue.

Taylor, criticized the cruise missiles, which travel slower than the speed of sound, are incapable of jamming enemy defense radar and are intended primarily for use against undefended targets.

Only one military leader in history has put his confidence in one such weapon — Adolf Hitler — and his V-1 flying bombs gave Britain little difficulty in World War II, wrote Taylor, a world aviation authority.

Carter's unilateral action probably was the reason the Soviets did not stage their usual display of air power at celebrations marking the 60th anniversary of the October Revolution, Taylor suggested.

Listing the current powerful array of Soviet aircraft, he wrote: "Such a sight could well have made the United States regret that it had been so hasty in cancelling B-1 production."

He said perhaps only Western Europeans, living within range of the Soviet Tupolev "Backfire" bomber and Sukhoi Su-19 attack plane, feel strongly apprehensive when those aircraft are ranged alongside the Soviet missile force. That includes about 1,400 intercontinental ballistic missiles, 600 intermediate and medium range missiles, 950 submarine-launched missiles, and 200 older long-range bombers, "each capable of annihilating a city in a second of time," Taylor wrote.

He said the United States did not need to base its B-1 decision on a full fleet of 244, estimated initial cost $28 billion.

"Even 100 B-1s would have compelled the Soviet Union to expend huge sums of money and immense effort on developing, producing and maintaining defenses against air attack," Taylor wrote.

The United States also is delaying replacement of its interceptors and other aircraft, while the Soviet Union has given its squadrons a 500 percent increase in both radius of action and weapon load within a decade, the editor warned.

"At the same time, the amount of advance warning of an impending attack that NATO units can expect, even on the basis of highly efficient monitoring, has diminished from an estimated 30 days to four or five days," Taylor wrote.

Taylor suggested the Americans and Soviets agree to reduce the capacity of their nuclear weapons from the ability to kill each other four times over to three times, then two.

Every year, he reported, new weapons of horror are being planned.

"During the past year there have been repeated references in the press to America's neutron bomb, described as the ideal 'collateral' weapon, which eliminates men but leaves property and equipment intact," Taylor stated.

"The USSR, we are told, can match this with B-gas, which swats men like flies sprayed with DDT, by destroying their nervous system. Then there are embryonic 'death rays' based on laser technology and other weapons of equally horrific kinds, straight out of the pages of science fiction but becoming feasible."

FUNDS FOR TWO OKAYED — The House of Representatives has approved production of two more B-1 bombers (above) at a cost of $462 million and has sent the measure to the Senate, which earlier voted to cancel the money for the project. President Carter has voiced his opposition to the program. (AP Laserphoto)

House B-1 Funding Assailed By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House decision this week to continue funds for two B-1 bombers amounts to "pouring half a billion dollars down a rat hole," the White House said Wednesday.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, using wording specifically approved by President Carter, said the 191-166 vote Tuesday in which the House reversed its previous stance on the B-1 was "clearly a disappointment" to Carter. The President wants to halt all funding for the aircraft.

Powell said the $462 million approved by the House for building the fifth and sixth B-1 aircraft "could be spent on a weapons system that contributes to the nation's defense."

Congress at one time appropriated money for the two aircraft and later, at Carter's urging, decided to cut off production money for future B-1s. Four research and development models have been built.

The plane's supporters say limited production of the manned bomber should continue if only as a bargaining chip in disarmament talks with the Soviet Union.

The Senate had rejected the production money, which is part of a $7.8 billion appropriations bill. Now the Senate must take a second vote on the issue.

Powell was speaking at the daily White House news briefing. He said Carter "expects and hopes the Senate will maintain its position, that the funds will be deappropriated, and the House, with more members present and voting, will return to its previous position" of opposing spending for the B-1.

"Since the B-1 bomber will not be part of our military inventory, to build two more airplanes would simply amount to pouring half a billion dollars down a rat hole," Powell said, stating that Carter had approved his phrasing.

Powell also said that the controversy over the supplemental appropriations bill containing the B-1 funds was delaying final approval of funding for the cruise missile: $1.4 billion for drought assistance for farmers, and $4 billion in local sewer and water projects. All are included in the legislation.

New Energy Bill Drops Breeder Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed a new version of a $6 billion energy bill Wednesday, dropping authorization for spending $80 million on the nuclear breeder reactor project that President Carter had vetoed.

By voice vote, the House sent the measure to the Senate.

Project supporters are counting on passage of a separate appropriations bill to provide the $80 million to keep reactor development on schedule.

The energy authorization bill sets terms for several new programs, including an ambitious federal effort to back loans for projects aimed at producing gas from coal and oil from shale.

Each project would have to be approved by the Department of Energy and Congress before taxpayer money could be used to back up construction loans. No limits are set in the bill, but estimates run as high as $6 billion for developing a synthetic fuel industry.

Statement Links Suspect To Scene Of Double Murder

coat and some shoes. The statement says Sanders said at about this point "you are just going down the street."
—Green asked Sanders where they were going with "these damn people." Sanders drove the pickup truck while Green lay down in the back of the truck with the McKays. Green said he helped McKay get out of the truck when it finally halted. The McKays started to walk away.
It was at this point, according to Green's statement, that Sanders urged him to shoot.
Raymond told me what are you going to do go ahead and shoot them," the statement reads. The statement then says that Green told Sanders he had no shells.
Green's statement says he later divided up money taken with the other two men.

Other testimony revealed that lawmen began searching for Sanders after interviewing Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin D. Coffey, relatives of the McKays who lived only a short distance away.
Texas Ranger Frank Horger testified Wednesday that a search of the garage at Sanders' Hale County residence produced two shotguns, secreted in an attic.
Other evidence introduced into evidence by Griffin during the two days of testimony has included photographs of tire tracks.
Sheriff's Deputy Alton Hobbs testified the photos were taken of distinctive tracks found at the Coffee residence, at the side of North University Avenue about 200 yards from the road leading to the McKay and Coffee residences and at a spot about 100 yards east of where the bodies were discovered.
Hobbs also testified that similar tracks were found at the McKay residence, but said they were destroyed before photographs could be taken.
The deputy stated that in his opinion the tracks were all made by the same vehicle. He said a comparison indicated to him the tracks were made by a pickup belonging to farmer Lyndall Myatt.

Access To Truck

Myatt testified that Sanders worked for him at the time of the slayings, and had free access to the truck.
Testimony indicated that Sanders was arrested shortly after the Jan. 14 garage search, and that a warrant was issued for Green's arrest later that night.
At Griffin's questioning, Texas Ranger Tommy Walker and former Deputy P.R. Wilbanks said they arrested Green at his 2610-C Weber Dr. residence about 2:30 a.m. Jan. 15.
The men stated they knocked loudly and received no answer.
"I kicked the door twice with my feet in an effort to kick it open," Walker said. "Deputy Wilbanks then kicked the door open."
The witnesses said they entered the residence carrying shotguns and apprehended Green as he lay in bed.

Led From Residence

The officers said they escorted Green from the apartment in handcuffs. They said they did not give him time to get dressed, and that he was clad only in shorts and an undershirt.
Wilbanks and Walker both said that Green was given an opportunity to put on some pants and a shirt outside, with the clothing apparently being obtained by one of Green's relatives.
Horger, Hobbs and Deputy Ernest Reecer testified they interrogated Green at the county jail. They said he was properly advised of his constitutional rights against self-incrimination before he made the statement.
On cross-examination, court-appointed defense attorney Tom Purdom chided Hobbs about the failure of officers to adequately safeguard the tire tracks allegedly found at the McKay home.
Nothing To Show
"You took no pictures or made no plaster casts?" Purdom asked Hobbs. "You really have nothing to show any tracks were there, do you?" he continued. Hobbs agreed he had nothing to show.
But Purdom reserved most of his fire-power for suggesting that Green was improperly treated during his arrest and that his rights were not observed when he made his statement.
"Did you take Leroy Green before a magistrate?" Purdom quizzed. He then indicated to jurors that a justice of the peace had been present at the jail the morning Green was arrested and gave the statement.
Purdom also noted that Green had been booked in at about 3:45 a.m. and that the statement had not been signed until 7:45.
"You look that jury in the eye and tell them it took four hours," Purdom challenged Horger.
Horger said he could do so. Officers said the statement was first given orally by Green, then taken down in longhand. After that, it was typed, they said.
Testimony was to resume at approximately 9 a.m. today.

Grace reportedly possessed medication for the problem.
Stevens said late Wednesday "We're kind of at loose ends now," and he appealed to the news media for help in locating the woman.
Mrs. Grace reportedly wore a brown pantsuit and a white "derby-looking" cap that came down over her ears" when she left Anton Tuesday morning.
The license number of her vehicle is AZJ 60 Stevens said.
Anyone with knowledge of Mrs. Grace's whereabouts is urged to notify authorities in either Lubbock, Lamb or Hockley counties.

Medical Transfer Provision Eased

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress gave final passage Wednesday to a bill easing the current requirement that U.S. medical schools accept American students transferring from foreign medical schools or lose federal money.
The bill was approved 344-0 and sent to the president for his expected signature.
The measure would change the present law, passed in 1976, which some American medical schools contend infringes on their academic freedom.
Several top medical schools, including Yale, Duke, Stanford, Johns Hopkins, Case-Western Reserve and the University of Chicago, have said they would give up federal funds rather than let the government dictate how many American students they must take in from foreign medical institutions.
Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., who is also a medical doctor, said some foreign schools have a questionable reputation for training their students.

Outdoor activities in the Upper Midwest by late tonight and Thursday.
It was the fourth storm of the week to move out of the Rockies.
Ten towboats and about 80 barges were immobilized by a 5-mile-long ice buildup on the Mississippi near Guttenberg, Iowa.
"It would be like trying to drive a car through a road full of snow," said Burnell Renitz, lockmaster at Lock Dam 10.
Temperatures on the Plains plunged to 20 below zero at Cut Bank, Mont., and the nighttime wind chill there was 80 below. Wisconsin had morning readings of 15 below. Rockford in northern Illinois a record 11 below. Cincinnati a record 3 below. Even Biloxi, Miss., on the usually balmy Gulf Coast, had a freezing 31.
Schools closed throughout the cold and snow belt. Hundreds of trolley passengers in Pittsburgh were stranded when an overhead power line snapped in 7-degree temperatures.
At Indianapolis, U.S. weather forecasters Bob Bunting sized up foot-deep snows and harsh cold and guessed gloomily this winter may be as severe as the last.
"When we get a heavy snow cover this early in the season... we tend to predict a long cold spell. It takes an awful lot of heat to melt that snow so a warmup can begin."
But in frosted St. Louis, not snow nor sleet nor dark of night stayed diaper service deliveries in their appointed rounds.
"We are aware of our customers' problems," said Lillian Nienhaus of General Diaper Service. "And if the drivers have to stay on the road until 11 at night, they'll make it. It's pretty hard to explain a heavy snowfall to a wet baby."

Stennis Seeks B-1 Rejection

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., said Wednesday he will move to have the Senate reject a House bill to build two more B-1 bombers.
Stennis, chairman of the Senate defense appropriations subcommittee, said he would delay his motion on the B-1 until the Senate returns for business in 10 days.
"This leaves the B-1 on the table, so to speak," Stennis told the Senate.
By voice vote the Senate accepted all but the B-1 bomber provision in a compromise bill which appropriates some $7.8 billion for a range of federal programs.
Stennis said he wants another House-Senate conference committee convened to reconcile the B-1 issue. The delay, however, has the effect of holding up the funds for the other programs.
House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. told reporters earlier Wednesday that the issue may not be resolved until next year. There is no emergency need for the funds, the speaker said.
The bill would provide $80 million to keep the nuclear breeder reactor program on schedule despite Carter's opposition. The president has not said publicly whether he would sign the bill when Congress passed it.
Other sections in the bill would appropriate $4 billion in federal sewage treatment grants, $1.4 billion for drought and disaster relief programs of the Small Business Administration, and $18 million to keep passenger trains of money-losing Amtrak on their present routes and schedules through this winter.

Truman's Sister Reported Better

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—The 88-year-old sister of the late President Harry S. Truman was reported "doing much better" Wednesday at Research Medical Center, where she is hospitalized suffering from a stroke.
The condition of Mary Jane Truman was upgraded to "fair," and a hospital spokesman, Gordon Thompson, said Miss Truman might be moved out of the hospital's critical care unit by today.
Miss Truman was reported in critical condition when she entered the hospital Monday.

Limousine Service Bid Turned Down By Airport Board

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
An impassioned plea by a cab company representative apparently convinced the Lubbock Airport Board Wednesday not to approve a bid for airport limousine service by Executive Limousine Service.
Nick Lanotte, a representative of Brazos, Inc., which operates cabs and limousines at the airport, told board members Executive Limousine Service would not only be competition for current operations, but would be "cut-rate" competition at that.
Of the proposed contract with the fledgling company, Lanotte said "it's not feasible. It's not proved (the service) will offer the public convenience and is a necessity."
Protests Proposed Fee
The cab company representative particularly objected to a proposed $6 fare. Executive Limousine Service planned to charge regardless of destination.
Board member Fred Timberlake expressed the general sentiment of the board when he said, "I'm not at all sold on the need for the proposal."
Timberlake said he was "on the fence" about the proposal since he said he "believes in free enterprise, including the right to go broke."
But apparently the airport board has not heard the end of Executive Limousine Service.
David Bass, attorney for the company, said the partners were disappointed at the action and added, "We plan to regroup and see what options are open to us."
Possible Appeal Seen
Bass included in those options a possible appeal of the decision to the city council.
"I'm disappointed to think the board would deny even a trial period to a new business which would serve the needs of the airport," Bass said.
The attorney said the board's decision was "based on feeling rather than fact."
"We've given the board everything they've asked for, except a crystal ball. We've been very patient and very conciliatory," he said.
Bass said the board's decision served notice "not to try to rock the business boat out here (at the airport)."
Board members late Wednesday were still considering rental space in the old airport terminal building and a work session scheduled for noon today with the city council.

Energy Conferees Gain Compromise

That ray of hope appeared as the committee met for the 11th time.
The House, in passing its energy bill, approved a modified version of Carter's proposed tax on thirsty cars. The Senate rejected that approach but voted an outright ban on their production, starting in 1980 with those that get less than 16 mpg. Under that proposal the manufacture of cars getting less than 21 mpg would be banned by 1985.
Meanwhile, conferees on natural gas decided to spend the rest of the day caucusing behind closed doors for what Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., called "some horse-trading" to try to break a 9-9 Senate deadlock.
"Our sitting here with the House only exacerbates a difficult situation," Weicker said. "We should separate ourselves from this conference and sit down with each other."
Senators Divided
Senate members of the bargaining unit are evenly divided between Carter's proposal for keeping price controls on natural gas—backed by a majority of the House conferees—and a rival, industry-supported deregulation plan which passed the Senate.
House conferee Rep. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., warned senators that his side would balk at any agreement that makes too many concessions to gas producers—and might even prefer having no bill at all.
"If we don't get a bill, it's not going to break the hearts of many in the House of Representatives," Moffett said.

Natural Gas Prices

Failure to enact a measure would leave the federally regulated price of $1.46 per 1,000 cubic feet. Carter's plan would raise this level to $1.75 while also extending controls to now-unregulated markets within gas-producing states like Louisiana and Texas.
In a related energy issue, Metzger said he's ready to mount a drive to reject Carter's plan for a crude oil tax if the president permits the price of newly discovered oil to rise quickly to world levels.

Solons End Dispute On Abortion Plan, Okay Pay Funding

lion appropriations bill which was to provide funding for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare along with 10 smaller agencies during fiscal year 1978.
The abortion issue was the last remaining area of disagreement on the legislation. The two interim funding measures that Congress has passed since Oct. 1 to insure agency funding have authorized spending at the fiscal 1978 rate, so the agencies have not been losing money by the delay.
The interim funding resolution was needed by today to ensure full pre-Christmas checks for employees affected.
Money Delayed
The abortion dispute has delayed enactment of a $60.2 billion funding authorization for the agencies. Without an interim funding authorization the employees would receive only one week's pay instead of two.
Earlier, the House voted 178 to 171 against a Senate proposal that would have ended the four-month-long impasse.
It called for abortion payments when a woman might die because of a full-term pregnancy, in cases of rape or incest which are reported promptly to law enforcement or public health officials and where a woman might suffer serious, long-lasting physical health damage.
The proposal was similar to two others that already had been rejected by the House. One of those rejections occurred on Tuesday.
Offered Reluctantly
The amendment the House finally agreed to, offered reluctantly by Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., added a requirement that two physicians certify that a woman would suffer serious, long-lasting physical health damage because of a pregnancy before she could become eligible for a federally funded abortion.
"It's the best we can do under the circumstances," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman George Mahon of Lubbock.
Michel pointed out that requiring certification would add to the cost of the amendment and would not necessarily reduce fraud. But he said the change might be enough to end the impasse.
Medicaid Payments
The abortion question is entangling some federal employees' paychecks because the bill that funds HEW, Labor and the other agencies also pays for the Medicaid program, the government's primary means of funding poor women's abortions.
An interim resolution providing funding for the District of Columbia and pay for its 35,000 employees is paired with the Labor-Hew matter.
Earlier, Mahon said every member

Administration officials have said the administration is considering such a move in exchange for congressional approval of the crude oil tax, passed by the House but rejected by the Senate.
However, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday that Carter pledged last April to allow this price to rise and that this pledge was made as part of the comprehensive energy plan. The remark appeared to be a veiled hint that the administration would be reluctant to grant the price increase if Congress fails to approve a comprehensive plan.

"I think that's absurd," said Metzger of the price rise. "If that's the kind of ransom the administration is prepared to pay the oil industry, I'm ready to make an all-out effort to defeat the crude oil tax."
Meanwhile, House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona accused congressional Democrats of trying to force "a year-end compromise on a bad energy bill in order to save face for President Carter."
"The best Christmas present the 95th Congress could give the American taxpayer is to adjourn," Rhodes said.

Woman, 101, Progeny Praise Lemon Juice

DALLAS (AP)—Just about all of Rebecca Topletz' descendants, including six children, 19 grandchildren, 33 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren, drink an elixir of lemon juice every morning.
Mrs. Topletz says it's good for them and nobody argues with her, especially not today when she celebrates her 101st birthday.
"I take two tablespoons of lemon juice in a cup of hot water every morning. I drink it first thing," said Mrs. Topletz, who has been drinking the potion for 50 or 60 years.
"You should try it," she suggested Wednesday to young reporters at her home. "You'll feel good."
As family members looked on, representatives of a national lemon growers association presented Mrs. Topletz with a case of lemons and an automatic squeezer.
"That's just what I need," she said. "I've been squeezing them by hand."
As the television cameras whirred at the birthday celebration one day early, family members gave their testimony for the magic power of the lemon.
"I started drinking it about 11 years ago," said Abe Levin, a youngster in the family at 84.
"I'm certainly not going to stop now it's working for her," Levin, Mrs. Topletz' son-in-law, said.
Levin's daughter was seconded by Ivy Rabinowitz, Mrs. Topletz' 72-year-old daughter, and Mrs. Max Saffir, an 84-year-old daughter.
Mrs. Topletz takes no medicine, her daughters said. Just some vitamins and the morning ration of lemon juice.
She said she picked up the citrus habit from an aunt who lived to a ripe old age in Poland. Mrs. Topletz came to the United States from Bialystok in eastern Poland when she was 15.
After a few years in East Texas she came to Dallas in 1907.
"The good Lord has been mighty good to me. I do the best I can," she said as one of her children pinned a birthday orchid on her.
She said she manages fairly well and can take care of herself.
"I used to have a woman who came out and helped me. But she made such a mess in the kitchen I had to clean up after her," she said.
The Topletz lemon tradition spans several generations. Great-grandson Michael Levin, who was excused from school to attend the birthday celebration, said he hasn't picked up the morning lemon mix routine, but he does like lemon drops.

who has endorsed any proposal on the subject in the House and Senate has voted for abortion.
"Everyone has voted for abortion in some form," he said. "It's a matter of the degree of abortion."
He described the Senate's proposal as "the farthest the Senate has gone toward making a compromise."
"If the House has made any compromise, I'm not aware of it," he added.
Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., objected to the way in which the Senate proposal was presented to the House. A decision by the Rules Committee, which was endorsed by the members, meant there was no opportunity to amend or modify the proposal.

ter of the men who carried out the burglary, was locked up 32 months.
When Ehrlichman is freed, the only Watergate convicts remaining in prison will be his co-defendants in the cover-up trial, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and former White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman.
Prisoners in minimum security institutions are allowed some furloughs. Haldeman will leave the institution at Lamont, Calif., Dec. 21-27 to be with his family for Christmas. Ehrlichman has applied for a Christmas furlough, but Brown said no decision has been reached.
Mitchell, who has asked for early release from prison for health reasons, has not applied for a Christmas furlough, according to James Fleagle, acting superintendent at the Maxwell AFB prison.
Ehrlichman, Haldeman and Mitchell were convicted New Year's Day, 1975, of trying to hide White House involvement in the Watergate burglary and then lying about it under oath. Each received a 2 1/2-8-year sentence, later cut to one to four years.
Earlier, Ehrlichman was convicted of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Lewis Fielding, a California psychiatrist who had been treating Pentagon Papers leaker Daniel Ellsberg. He received a sentence of 20 months to 5 years. That, too, was cut.
As domestic counselor, Ehrlichman had jurisdiction over the White House plumbers, so-called because their mission was to plug leaks of secrets. Liddy and Hunt planned that burglary, too, and were in Beverly Hills to supervise the mission, which proved unproductive.

Swap Evokes Mixed Emotions

MEXICO CITY (AP) — James Ridley Douglas is 27 years old, has spent four years and three months in Mexican jails and found out this week he will be home for Christmas, a free man.

"I'm depressed and I don't know what to do with my life," Douglas said Wednesday at the Santa Marta prison here.

"I'm afraid I'm going home for Christmas, but I'm not exactly returning home as a war hero," Douglas said.

Authorities allowed reporters to talk Wednesday with Americans at Santa Marta and the nearby Los Reyes women's prison who are returning to the United States this week under the prisoner exchange treaty between the United States and Mexico.

Douglas, of Austin, Texas, is serving a seven-year sentence for smuggling a kilogram — 2.2 grams — of cocaine into Mexico that he allegedly intended to sell in the United States.

Douglas is among 60 of the 234 Americans eligible for transfer who will be released a few days after returning to the United States. Prisoners not eligible for immediate release will be given parole hearings.

He said his excitement and happiness at leaving was dampened because several of his closest friends did not qualify for the transfer.

American prisoners earn early release from prison sentences under "good time" laws that reduce their sentences by one day for every day served without breaking prison rules.

The first chartered plane will arrive Friday bringing 38 Mexicans from American prisons to Mexico City. The plane will then take the first load of Americans to the Metropolitan Correctional Institution in San Diego.

Douglas said he and other Americans who have protested prison conditions by hunger strikes and other demonstrations were "playing our role as a bunch of spoiled kids."

"We were supposed to be kids who got off on the wrong track, basically upstanding citizens who made one mistake in their lives and the American government in collusion with the Mexicans had attacked us a little strongly," he said.

"We haven't contributed anything to over-all justice in Mexico or the United States," he said.

Only four of the 26 eligible women at Los Reyes would talk with reporters.

One of them, Brenda Lee Richards, will be coming home with her 18-month old daughter Jennifer, who was born in the prison.

Miss Richards, of Dekalb, Ill., said she has been told she will be eligible for immediate release after arriving in San Diego. She has served four years and three months of a seven-year sentence for cocaine smuggling.

"I just want to get out and start being a mother," she said.

The U.S. embassy said U.S. federal court magistrates would complete their interviews with the eligible prisoners Wednesday or Thursday morning.

"It's virtually certain everyone on the list will be going," a spokesman said.

All 126 prisoners in Mexico City will be flown to San Diego Friday and Saturday. Two other chartered flights will take prisoners from cities in Northern Mexico to the United States Dec. 16-17. A bus will transfer 16 inmates from Tijuana to San Diego Dec. 12.

TO BECOME FREE MAN — James Ridley Douglas of Wichita Falls Texas talks with reporters Monday at the Santa Marta Prison in Mexico City. Douglas found out this week that he will be home for Christmas, a free man. He is one of the 60 out of 235 Americans who will be transferred to the United States that will be released a few days after his return to the U.S. The remainder will be granted parole hearings. UMW President Promises Tough Strike

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Mine workers' president Arnold Miller said Wednesday that the nation's soft coal producers want a one-month strike to drive up prices and weaken the union. But he said they may get a walkout of three to four months instead.

The head of the United Mine Workers union, whose 160,000 members struck Tuesday, said he will skip Thursday's scheduled resumption of talks in Washington, D.C., with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association and send UMW Vice President-elect Sam Church instead.

"There's some doubt there will be anything to talk about," Miller said. "They think that if we have a month-long strike we'll take anything they give us, and they want to drive up the market price of coal."

"If the operators want a three or four-month strike, we'll give it to them," he said. "If they refuse to bargain for the next month, I'm going to make sure they pay for it."

BCOA-President Joseph Brennan had no comment on Miller's charges. "He's not speaking for the record right now," said spokesman Morey Feibusch.

With many utilities and the steel industry having stockpiled enough coal for 100 days, no major shortages were expected for some time. But about 3,500 railroad workers have been furloughed.

Meanwhile, the UMW gained support when non-union mines in several states were shut down by sympathy strikes. UMW pickets braved bitter cold and snow to close others and to persuade non-union truck drivers to quit hauling coal. The temperature plummeted below zero in some areas of Appalachia, stronghold of the UMW, and snow depths reached a foot in higher elevations.

Half the nation's coal production ceased when the strike began at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday after 60 days of fruitless negotiations, and production was cut further by the additional closings in West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio and Maryland.

Federal mediators asked both sides to return to the bargaining table at 3 p.m. Thursday. They are expected to take up the UMW's demand for an increase to $114.36 a day for highest-paid workers over the life of a new three-year contract. The wage ceiling now is $65.36.

The union also has demanded restoration of full health and pension benefits, and a limited right-to-strike over local grievances. The benefits are financed by company-paid royalties on coal production and the trustees of the benefit funds.

they were depleted by wildcat strikes and inflation. The UMW wants another way found to finance the benefits and guarantee payments.

Medical benefits ceased and some pensions were trimmed when the strike began.

Miller said he will not attend any negotiating sessions unless there are indications of substantial progress.

"Our membership is more together now than they ever have been," he said. "They want a contract, but after the first week, the length of the strike doesn't make much difference to them."

Kennedy Selected For Health Board

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Dr. S.M. Kennedy of Lubbock has been named to a three-year term on the Department of Health Tuberculosis Advisory Committee.

Dr. Kennedy was one of 12 appointees announced Tuesday by the department.

Dr. Kennedy, in a statement released here, reported the Texas Lung Association has met with department members concerning goals and objectives regarding state chest hospitals, one area of work for the committee.

He called it "vitaly important" to improve and maintain the hospitals, because experience in other parts of the country shows "tuberculosis is a continuing problem and we must not relax."

"We should think along the lines that we can't treat what we can't find. If found all the cases today, there would be more cases brought into this country," Dr. Kennedy concluded.

State Hospital Association's President Reassured By HEW

AUSTIN (AP) — Ray Hurst, president of the Texas Hospital Association, says he's breathing a whole lot easier after getting assurances from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that it's not about to close any hospitals.

Hurst spent Monday talking with officials of the federal agency about its controversial guidelines for cutting national health care costs. The guidelines had thrown hospital administrators — particularly those from rural areas — into a panic.

Hurst went to Washington with Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who talked with Secretary Joseph Califano of HEW. Hurst spent his time with Hale Champion, undersecretary for health.

"They said over and over, 'We don't want to impose our judgment over that of local and state authorities,'" Hurst said.

Guidelines proposed by HEW under a mandate from Congress to cut hospital costs would have produced frightening results, according to a hospital association survey that had a 66.3 per cent response rate.

Some of the findings:

- 86.8 percent of the hospitals that replied could not meet the guideline requiring an average occupancy rate of 80 percent.
- 84.4 percent of all hospitals could not meet guidelines to keep an obstetrical unit. These were 2,000 babies a year in major cities and 500 in those outside of metropolitan areas with 100,000 or more people.
- Closure of delivery rooms would force pregnant women to travel an average of 51 minutes to reach the closest one that would be left open, the survey showed.
- 34.5 percent fell short of the requirement that to have an open heart surgery unit a hospital would have to do 200 such operations a year.
- What they are telling us, and it remains to be seen whether they will do what they say, is... 'We put those guidelines out because we wanted to know if anything was wrong with them. You've told us. Now we are going to take what you've told us is wrong with them and redo them," Hurst said.

"If they are going to do what they say they are going to do, we are going to be all right. I have no reason not to believe they are going to," he added.

Hurst quoted Champion as saying HEW would respect the judgment of the 12 regional Health Systems Agencies in Texas even when there was a conflict with the guidelines. The HSAs are federally funded planning agencies.

"He said that if that HSA would explain in writing why it wants those (hospital) facilities, those numbers, the secretary will sign off on (approve) it," Hurst said.

The hospital association has feared that HEW might coerce hospitals to meet the guidelines by withholding federal funds — including payment for Medicare and Medicaid patients.

Hurst said Champion told him, "We don't think we have the authority to do that."

In August 1976, a single heat wave killed 3,000 people and 2,000 horses, says National Geographic.

Trio Denies Conspiracy To Kill Golden Eagles

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A ranch foreman, a county official and a former federal government trapper Wednesday denied in court charges they conspired to kill golden eagles from a helicopter in rugged west central Texas.

The three defendants all testified in their own defense in a federal court trial here and character witnesses were called to boost their statements. All three said the star witness for the government prosecution, a 31-year-old helicopter pilot, lied about their involvement in alleged eagle hunting in Real County.

Real County Commissioner Lanny Leinweber, former government predator trapper Andrew Allen and ranch foreman Norman M. Pape are charged with conspiracy to kill eagles and violate airborne hunting laws. Pape and Allen are charged also with killing eagles.

Individually, each of the defendants took the witness stand and said they had never conspired to kill eagles and had never shot at or killed any eagles.

Under cross-examination, Allen testified he had falsified his federal report of activity and expenses on the day he took part in one hunt in Real County.

Leinweber, Allen and Pape all claimed the only purpose of the hunts was to kill bobcats, coyotes and wild hogs, which some ranchers claim prey on their sheep and goats.

Some ranchers also claim the eagles prey on their livestock.

The testimony conflicted with that given earlier by Gerald Heintzelman, the government's key witness, who swore he piloted a helicopter from which the three men hunted for eagles. Heintzelman said only Pape and Allen ever killed any of the birds.

Heintzelman estimated about 70 eagles were killed on separate hunting flights between December 1975 and January 1977.

Heintzelman claimed Leinweber led him and Allen to a ranch where the first hunt began on Dec. 10, 1975. That hunt lasted three days and the pilot said Pape killed several eagles and Allen at least one.

Leinweber said the cost of the airborne hunting was split between the Real County Commissioners Court and the Real County Predator Club, each paying $720. The predator club is composed of ranchers and County Judge W. B. Sansom is president.

Sansom and the other four county commissioners are all ranchers.

Sansom, in a sworn deposition read to the jury Wednesday morning, said killing one coyote on the hunting trip was worth the $720 paid by the county.

Heintzelman and Leinweber agreed at least one coyote was killed on the Dec. 10, 1975 hunt.

Sansom said, however, he'd never heard about or discussed any plans to hunt eagles on the trip which the county helped finance. He denied hearing any complaints from ranchers about eagles.

"There's no use to complain about it if there's a law," Sansom said in the deposition. He said, however, that sheep and goat raisers consider the birds "a menace."

Sansom, 71, who has been county judge since for 41 years, said he had met Leinweber, Allen and Heintzelman before the first hunt and never heard any mention of eagles.

He said he once found a dead golden eagle on his ranch. "I had my Mexican burn it because I thought it might be rabid."

U.S. District Court Judge John H. Wood Jr. presided over the trial.

Conviction on the conspiracy charge carries a maximum five-year prison term and a maximum $10,000 fine. First conviction for killing eagles is a maximum $5,000 fine and up to one year in prison.

Santa's Arrival Was Enough

DOCTOR DENTONS—The baby of the family, dressed in Doctor Dentons, the sleeping suit of the times, clutches a cloth-faced doll as she was photographed on a studio man-in-the-moon for this Christmas card, sent as a greeting more than 60 years ago.

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

Time was when little children didn't see Santa Claus, not at all, ever.

They didn't see him at the market, as they do today, when they went to choose the Thanksgiving turkey. They didn't see him daily thereafter, for almost a month.

They knew what he looked like, though, because of the poem, "A right jolly old elf." So, he was tiny. He smiled alot, so he was friendly. He went up chimneys, so he was magic.

What sort of world was it that had no visible Santa Claus? Well, it was a world without television, without tension. Radio was a novelty.

It was also a frustration, because power packs had to be recharged every two hours, and then about all it brought in was the weather report for the prairie states, or a bass baritone singing "On the Road to Mandalay."

It was a world where Chautauqua tents brought culture with a capital "C" to small Kansas towns, where fathers drove Reos and Overlands and did a lot of tire-changing and swearing, where mothers had foot-treadle sewing machines, curtain stretchers that caught fingers as well as net, and washing machines that were almost, but not quite, automatic. Things lasted. There was no plastic.

It was a world where Christmas gifts were expected to entertain or insture the year 'round. Family games wre dominoes, Parcheesi, checkers, croquet sets.

Children's gifts were sewing sets and tool kits and books: "Pilgrim's Progress" for moral uplift; the Book of Knowledge for education; the first "Oz" books for fantasy. There was plenty of time to read when there was no television.

It never occurred to us even to want to see Santa.

It was enough to know that he would come, that we would hear him arrive on Christmas Day in the morning.

First we would hear sleigh bells, all a-jingle.

Then we would hear mysterious scuffings and rustlings and bumping downstairs.

Finally, wide awake and stock-still under our comforters, we would hear him. He called, "Merry Christmas, you upstairs. Come and see." It his voice sounded like father's just pitched a little deeper, no one questioned.

Neither did we see a Christmas tree until that very minute. Santa had brought it. He had brought the strings of popcorn and cranberries for decorations. He had arranged the gifts on and under the tree.

Nothing was wrapped or boxed, nothing was disguised with tissues and ribbons. Every gift was on display, in candlelight. The effect was magnificent.

This was the moment the children had been waiting for since the first of the month, when Sunday School teachers began to tell about the star, the shepherds, the start of the long journey by three wise men.

There were pageants at the church. One of the smaller children got to lie on a heap of straw.

The most dependable of the older children circled around, and stumbling on long robes and clutching at scratchy tinsel halos, piped their way incertainly into something that sounded like "A Why in Uh Main Sure." Then three big boys, also costumed in things that slopped, sang "We Three Kings of Orry and Tar."

There was excitement at home, too. Mother and the children made popcorn balls, stuffed dates with nuts and invited friends in for taffy pulls. "Wash your hands," ordered mother. "We don't want gray taffy."

We washed our hands, promptly. It was an important part of Being Good. "See how clean my hands are," we would ask, simpering as sweetly as the little angels we hoped we resembled. But somehow the taffy always turned out gray.

There was a ritual to Christmas Eve.

The hired man drove the cutter in from the farm for sleigh rides. The horse wore a halter of sleigh bells, but only the most impudent child would have said, "Are those the bells we will hear tomorrow?" Then everyone went to church.

For the walk through the snowy dusk the children were tugged into overcoats with mittens strung through the sleeves. On their heads were stocking caps, the crowns extending into a long scarf that pulled down over the throat and up over the ear. Mother handed out clean hankerchiefs. "Don't snuffle," she said. We fought to sit next to grandmother, who had peppermint lozenges in her reticule. "Don't wiggle," she said. We wiggled and snuffled.

Once home, the family gathered around the fireplace for prayers and the children, clutching the family pers, asked mother to say the prayer for them, too. We mumbled along with her.

We hung our stockings, real, everyday stockings. The smallest children hung two each, to get even.

The dog and the cats went to bed with the children, ho fumbled impatiently with the buttons on their Doctor Denton sleeping suits, heavy knit garments with feet and drop seats.

In no time came morning, the sound of sleigh bells, the call to come downstairs. We pretended not to see father standing beside the tree. The, when he had extinguished the last candle, came the cue to leap at the tree, to lunge at the stockings.

The dog and cats did likewise and we scolded them.

"You shouldn't be naughty because you were specially blessed," we told the animals.

And so were we, the children of all those years ago, even if we never saw Santa.

Texans' Yule Gift Spending Exceeding That Of Year Ago

By United Press International

More Texans with more money in their pockets are more willing to part with it this Christmas shopping season than last, a survey of the state's retailers indicated.

The state comptroller's office in Austin and the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas are predicting record dollar volume sales, boosted both by inflation and shoppers' enthusiasm to give themselves and their families a "special Christmas."

The spending spree indicates widespread confidence in continued well-being of the state's economy.

City sales tax collections are 22 percent higher than last year, according to the latest figures from the comptroller's office, certain cities — El Paso, Austin and Dallas — are experiencing exceptional increases in retail activity.

The Federal Reserve reported El Paso merchants registered 29 percent higher sales for the week ending Nov. 26 than the same week last year. Austin was 13 percent higher and Dallas 10 percent.

"This increase in retail sales reflects a growing confidence in the Texas shopping economy," the comptroller's office said. "If everything continues as expected, Texas merchants should have one of their best holiday sales seasons yet."

Bill Green, a researcher with the Federal Reserve, said Texas is enjoying increased population and employment and good payrolls.

"It just builds a climate for consumption," he said.

Fast-sellers run the gamut from "big ticket" items to dolls, shirts and "Star Wars" games.

An early cotton harvest in West Texas put money in the pockets of Christmas shoppers.

"The cotton harvest is the biggest factor," said Gary Mull, assistant manager of Dillard's in Lubbock. "We're still dependent on agriculture. November was very, very good."

"Price doesn't seem to be the object. They (shoppers) are really buying what they want. Leathers are selling real well. Fine lines of cosmetics are selling real well."

"We've had very good business in big ticket areas. But people overall are very price conscious."

Abe Donsky, a vice president with Houston Jewelry & Distributing, said sales were 20 percent higher than last year.

"The price of merchandise, where it was $100 last year, it's $120 — inflation," he said. "I think people just have more money to spend..."

"Our biggest item is diamonds, always has been. They're keeping the market scarce on diamonds. We're having a harder time buying this year. When there's a scarcity of an item, people want it."

Sakowitz, one of the state's most prestigious retail outlets, reported excellent post-Thanksgiving sales.

"It all points that we're going to have a very satisfactory Christmas," said Irving Weiner, a Sukowitz vice president. "I'll estimate that it's probably going to be about 12 percent better."

In Austin the manager of a J.C. Penney's store said sales were "considerably better" this year compared with last — 15 percent higher.

"We find they are buying lots of big items, microwave ovens are real big, electronics such as TVs and stereo component systems are real hot. TV games are just phenomenal."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I think I have low potassium. How can one tell if supplements are needed? I've had some leg pain lately, and suspect this. — Mrs. S.R.

You can't tell; only chemical tests can. I get so much mail from readers complaining "I'm low in this, or high in that," often with no more evidence than a symptom which they've heard means an imbalance in this or that vitamin or mineral. With this flimsy "diagnosis," they are then off to the store to load up on pills.

So you have come up with a leg muscle symptom and you read somewhere that this means potassium deficiency. Well, granted, potassium is important in muscle health. But if you are getting a balanced diet you probably are getting all the potassium you need. More than that is too much, and too much can be just as bad as not enough.

There are many other body minerals about which the same can be said. The need is quite minute. In some cases the lack may not result from an inadequate intake, but from how the body uses it. Correction is not always a simple matter of taking supplements, but in correcting the internal cause. Some vitamin freaks should know that in many cases the same applies to those substances as well.

If you are hung up on this potassium idea, then at least find out for sure. As I said, only chemical tests of your blood can tell. If you are using diuretics there could be a connection with potassium loss in urine.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have had a fungus in most of my toenails. The doctor prescribed griseofulvin. I took it for a short while, but stopped because the pills gave me a severe headache. Is there any other way to get rid of the fungus? I am 65 and still active. I work parttime. Does your booklet on nail health cover treatment? — Mrs. M.P.

I hope you've reported the reaction to the medicine. Most people can tolerate it, but some can't. Those sensitive to penicillin may have what is called a "cross sensitivity" to it. To be effective it must be taken for several months, at least, because toenails require a much longer time to grow than fingernails.

You may have to settle for local applications of anti-fungal agent. It may also be necessary to have scrapings of the infected area examined to identify the specific fungus. Some medicines effective against one fungus won't be against another. The booklet you ordered is on the way. Pinpointing the cause of such nail infection is not always a simple matter. The booklet on nails might provide other leads. Others can have a copy by sending 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been drinking a pint of skim milk a day in order to be sure I get the calcium I need. If dairy products contain too much sodium, should a person with heart disease (high blood pressure) drink it? — Mrs. E.T.B.

Cutting down on milk and milk products can lower your salt intake. Skimmed milk contains just a bit more of sodium than whole. But I see no reason you can't work a pint of milk a day into a salt-restricted diet. Prepared foods are particularly high in sodium (salt). You can accomplish most by making the table salt-cellular disappear.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 24 and have two children. After the birth of my last child I noticed air passing from my vagina, especially during exercise. Do you know what might be causing this? I've never heard of it. — S.S.

Sounds like a recto-vaginal fistula, an abnormal passage due to a tear between the rectum and the vagina. It's not that uncommon. You should mention this to your doctor. It can result from pressures of pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could anemia cause a woman to miss her menstrual periods? — Mrs. O.Y.

In some women it might, but the amenorrhea (absence of menstruation) should be investigated anyway.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

A nice way to decorate a Christmas tree is to make pompons of "Heloise" net, using all the different colors one can find.

Placed on the tree as the only decoration, they are lovely.

As different guests come to call, they always admire my tree and each one is asked to choose one as a small present from me.

This is my neighborhood Christmas card. — Edith Kenyon

What a lovely idea, and from a sweet-sounding neighbor, I might add. Bet everyone on the block is glad they have you for one. (Wish I did!) Love — Heloise still his favorite. The game was rubber bridge and back in those early days Dad opened four-card spade suits regularly. West might have tried an immediate seven hearts but West figured that such a bid would get a seven-spade sacrifice against it. Hence, his decision to double. West continued his deceptive tactics by bidding just five and six hearts. Dad fell into the trap and doubled, but West couldn't stand prosperity. He redoubled. North, the late Charles Lockett of St. Louis, passed. He was not a rescuer but Dad was. He rescued himself to six spades and went on to seven after West went to seven hearts. By this time he knew West held 13 red cards.

The play was simple. At least Dad thinks so. He ruffed the diamond lead with the eight (a heart lead would have beaten the hand), led trump, finessed his six, ruffed a diamond high, finessed his nine of trumps, ruffed the last diamond with dummy's last trump, came to his hand with the ace of clubs, cashed his ace-king of trumps and wound up by chucking his losing hearts on long clubs.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — "Blame it on the stars," says Judith Chapman about her recent departure from "As the World Turns" as Natalie Bannon Hughes.

"I'm into astrology. A year and a half ago my chart showed that December of 1977 would be a period of great sweeping changes that are being brought about by the Planet of Revolution which is swirling over most water signs and especially Scorpios," recalls the actress who was born Nov. 15, 1951, in Greenville, S.C. "I was advised, however, that I should be spiritually prepared and have a firm spiritual base before contemplating a move. Now, I realize that I'm ready and I've gotten it together. So, after three years on the serial, I'm moving to California."

Transplanting roots is not a new experience for this daughter of an Air Force general. Judy has lived with her family in army bases around this country, as well as Japan, England, Spain and Korea. The 5-foot-6, 110-pound, blue-eyed brown-haired beauty who groomed for her career while working as a hostess and hatcheck girl in restaurants, speaks several languages, is a musician and is "into" a variety of hobbies including photography.

She possesses a self-admitted aggressive nature when it comes to her career, which began in a Spanish TV commercial at age 14, closely followed by a feature role in a "spaghetti" western. A more recent film appearance in a dual role in "False Face," which changed its title several times resulted in critical accolades, even though the flick never received prominent national exposure. But "ATWT" fans are already aware of Chapman's talent from her multifaceted portrayal of Natalie.

Natalie arrived in Henderson, U.S.A., haunted by a checkered past which she was never able to live down. Her second husband, Tom Hughes, finally gave up on the wench when he learned that she hankered after construction boss Jay Stallings. In recent months Natalie has shifted back and forth in her decision to give Jay and his wife Carol the baby he sired with Natalie. And that's only half of the trouble she's caused.

To my relief and gratitude, the fans I've met admit that they love the character. I've worked hard to give her a complexity so she wouldn't be labeled a stereotypical soap opera villainess. Fans invariably comment that they don't always like the things Natalie does, but they understand the forces that were within her. Natalie was a defensive creature who attacked before she was hurt, and I think most people can identify and sympathize with that, even though it's not justifiable. "I didn't shed any tears at my farewell party," admits Judy. "Not because of any unpleasant feelings. There weren't any. It's just that I feel positive about the time I spent with 'ATWT' which gave me the confidence to try my wings in other areas. For that I'm grateful, not sad."

And so is the "ATWT" audience for Judith Chapman's impeccable performance as Natalie, who, it should be pointed out, will remain in "story limbo" for a possible return in the future. Tune in tomorrow.

You will be interested in the booklet I've edited that includes a short history of "As the World Turns." Get your copy by sending one dollar to: "Tune In Tomorrow," P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Ask for "As the World Turns."

(Send your questions about soap operas to: "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Miss Italy To Miss Beauty Contest

ROME (WNS) — Anna Kankis, who was voted Miss Italy, has been disbarred from the Miss World contest because she is only 15 years old. So has Janice Galea, who is Miss Malta. "According to Miss World rules, a miss is not a miss unless she is between 17 and 24," complains Romeo Velanti, head of a local protest committee. "But Juliet, who was the most famous miss of all time, was younger than this year's Miss Italy. It doesn't make sense."

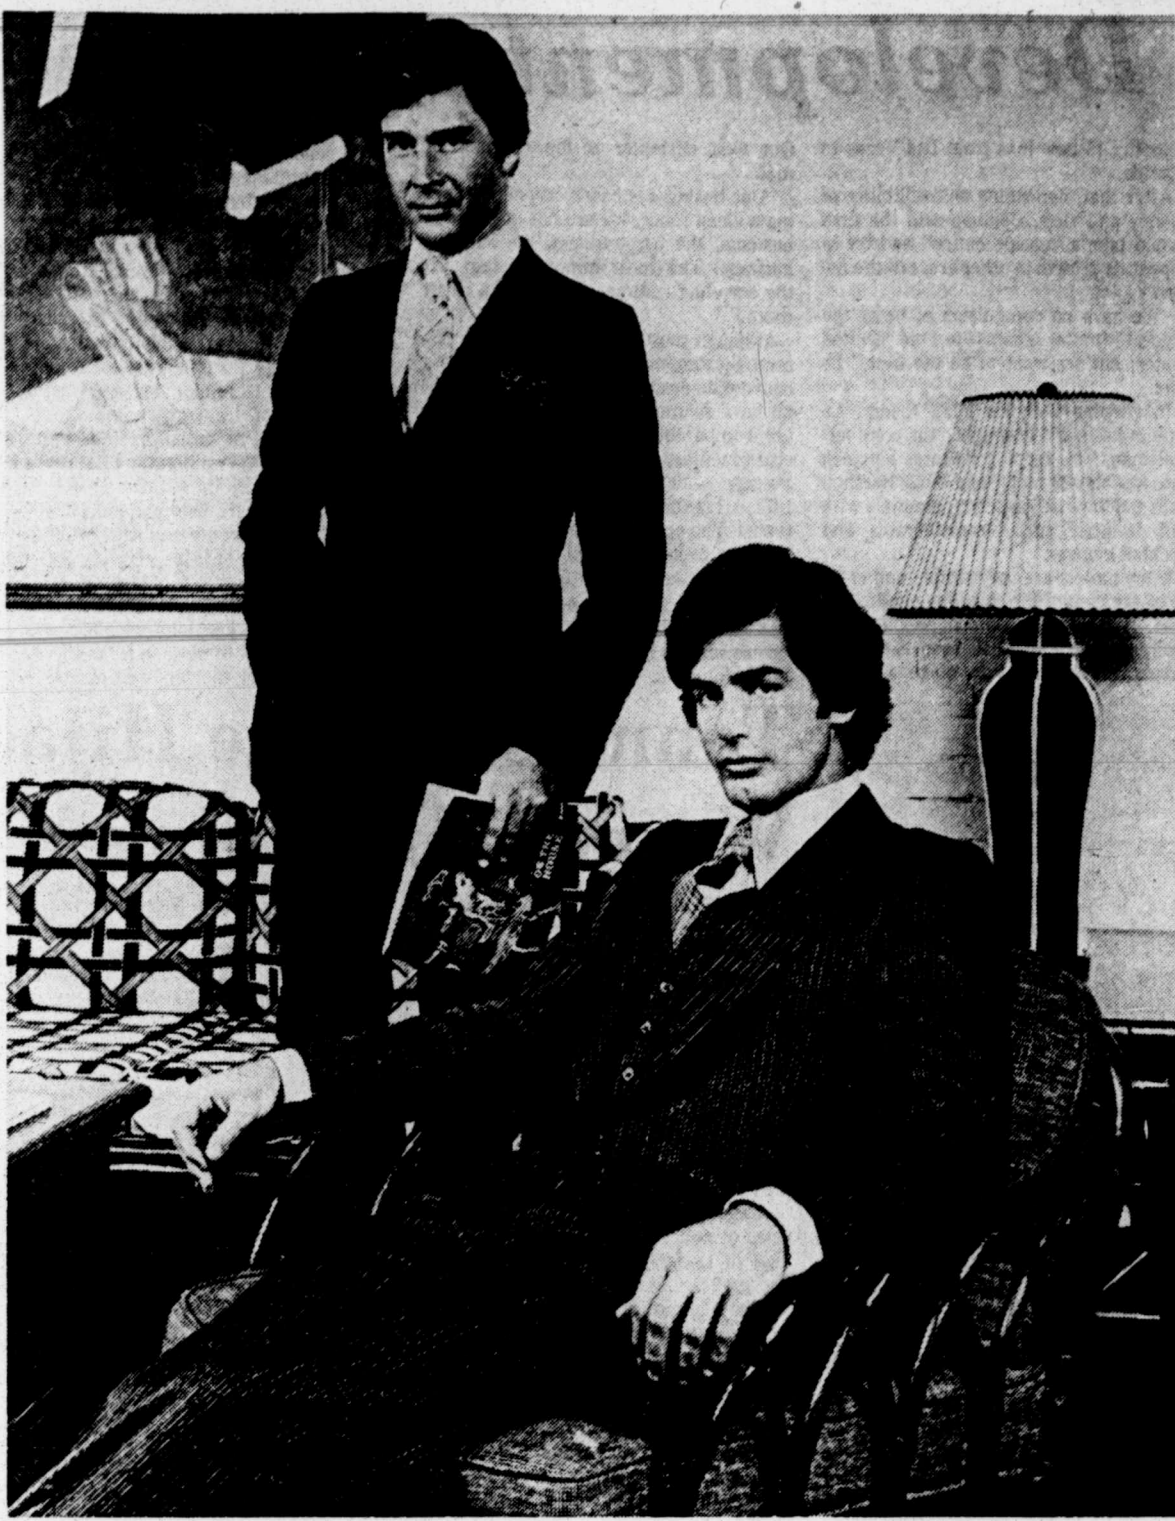

Clip 'n' Cook

PIZZA

2 tbs olive oil
2-2 medium onions, thinly sliced and separated into rings
1 large green pepper, seeded and cut into strips
Bread dough for a 14-inch pizza pan
1 cup thick, well-seasoned tomato sauce
Grated Parmesan cheese
Sliced mozzarella cheese
Drained canned anchovies
Cook the onion and green pepper in the oil only until tender-crisp. Roll out the dough and fit into a well-oiled 14-inch pizza pan. Spread with the tomato sauce and top with the remaining ingredients. Bake on the lowest rack of a pre-heated 500-degree oven until crust is golden-brown — usually 15 to 20 minutes, but the time will depend on the thickness.

Show Business Seminars Aid Aspiring Actresses

By CONNIE GRZELKA
NEW YORK (AP) — In the eyes of their adoring public, the "genius ladies" of the theater, film and television appear to live in little glass boxes, says perky producer Madeline Lee Gilford.

Mrs. Gilford, who began her 50-year career in the performing arts as a child actress, shrugs her shoulders at this notion as she sets out to gently dispel the popular myth that a perpetual aura of goldspun glamour surrounds women in show biz.

To accomplish this, Mrs. Gilford, an actress and casting director as well as the wife of Jack Gilford, the actor, called upon her own experience and her multitude of friends in the business to give "a reality course" at the Womanschool here.

These show business seminars, called "Conversations with Women in Theater, Film and Television," include panel discussions and informal talks with distinguished women in the field. Participants are producers, actresses, critics, TV writers and executives, press agents, technicians, stage managers and camerawomen.

Students in the course range from aspiring young actresses to divorced or widowed women, some of whom once eyed the performing arts from a distance with a well-preserved dream of attempting a comeback, Mrs. Gilford says.

The group often feels awed by the illustrious women on the panels, Mrs. Gilford says. "But I know they're my 'schlep' friends. They've got all sorts of problems — marital and financial — just like anyone else."

"This course isn't the usual guest appearance type as seen on TV interview shows. It's very candid, intimate and professional. The conversations offer an overview of the field."

"By talking to women in the industry, we hope to give them a shortcut," explains the producer, who goes on to look at some of the perils and pleasures that the current state of the art holds for women.

A supporter of the women's movement herself, the 54-year-old Mrs. Gilford, who jokingly describes herself as "more of a suffragette than a feminist," provides this general scorecard of how women in the industry are faring.

Mainstem theater and movie directing still remain "very closed and limited for women," she states, adding that more inroads have been made in major television networks, on the executive, creative and technical levels.

"Careers for men and women just don't move in the same way. A common response to a woman who wishes to direct a production is 'we need someone with more clout, more muscle.' These qualities are thought of as male. They still question female authority."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: As the author of "The Bereaved Parent" I have been inundated with mail from mothers and fathers who have dead children. The correspondence has been particularly heavy at this time of year because of the holiday season. There are many things bereaved parents can do to help alleviate the pain and suffering. Here are some suggestions.

Meet the holidays head on. But make some changes.

If Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners were always late afternoon meals — change the time.

If you are accustomed to celebrating the holidays with only the immediate family present — this year include friends.

Change the seating arrangements at the table.

Open gifts at a different time than before.

Change the menu. Don't serve the traditional dinner.

Be imaginative.

If you have always dined at home and this year receive an invitation to dine with friends — give it a try. If they care enough they will understand some tears — and probably expect them.

Most important, it's pointless to pretend that everything is the same as it was. Your child is dead and that is a fact. It will only create unnecessary sadness for you and the rest of the family if you pretend to be cheerful. Things are NOT the same as before and they never will be again.

Above all, remember you have the right to be happy. You have suffered enough. — Harriet Sarnoff-Schiff

Dear Harriet: On behalf of my readers who have "suffered enough" I want to thank you for your practical advice.

I urge all of you out there who have heavy hearts at his time of year because you have dead children to follow her counsel. Incidentally, the word "dead" may sound crass and cold, but it is much more realistic than saying "the child we lost." An important part of the healing process is to come to terms with the fact that the child is not "lost." The child is dead. So listen to Harriet. She has a dead child and knows what she's talking about.

Dear Ann: The answer you gave to Toodie was wrong. Glasses DO get in the way of kissing! One minute of kissing can mean five minutes of cleaning glasses.

If you're a guy, the problem is even worse because there's makeup as well as smudges to get off.

So here's my answer to Toodie. Girls who want to be kissed should take their glasses off. If a guy is smart, he'll find a safe place to deposit HIS glasses (shirt pocket, car dash). If he is too nervous to make the first move, your girl should do like my girlfriend does. She just reaches up and removes my glasses. It's a lovely signal that I'm gonna get kissed. — Four Eyes In Lubbock

Simplicity Paces Development Of Motel Chain

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Sam Barshop entered the motel business "accidentally" 14 years ago as a sidelight to his family's banana importing company.

Since then the energetic 48-year-old entrepreneur has watched his initial $45,000 loan grow into a regional motel chain whose assets are expected to exceed $100 million next fiscal year.

So far Barshop has not put one dime of his own money in the venture and does not expect to in the future although the regional network of 64 motels with 7,293 rooms in 13 states is now on the threshold of going nationwide and becoming one of the country's leading motel chains.

The success of La Quinta Motor Inns, Inc., according to Barshop, can be attributed to his K.I.S.S. principle — "Keep it Simple, Stupid."

Some observers would term Barshop's operation innovative, but he contends he only has brought a measure of "horse sense" to an industry that has been trying to outgrow its own briches in recent years.

Barshop said he grew tired of getting up at 3 a.m. in the banana business. He and his brother, Philip, decided to dabble in motels and obtained the regional franchise for Rodeway Inns, a mom-pop type chain, "when mortgage money and co-owners were plentiful."

His father, "banana king" Joe Barshop, was not too excited about the motel business and told his sons, "Do what you want. Just don't go to my banks and mess up my credit."

After several years in the business, Barshop and his brother decided to build the first La Quinta Inn just across from HemisFair Plaza in San Antonio to host visitors to the 1968 world's fair. Now La Quinta's Spanish architecture and mounted "Caballero" insignia are familiar across the Southwest and the firm is developing 15 new inns from Las Vegas to Florida.

After that, depending on availability of money and sites, Barshop said the firm would take a "cookie cutter" and try to repeat its growth in other areas of the nation.

"We have no compulsion of being the biggest (motel chain) in the United States, but we want to be the best," he said.

In keeping with his KISS theory, La Quinta has actively sought "the commercial man," by keeping its rates between those of the $8 motel and what Barshop calls the low-rise garden type motels with full facilities such as restaurants and cocktail lounges.

"Our motels are very simple and cater to 95 per cent of the traveling public," he said. "We give a break to all people, especially the commercial men who are breaking their backs to make a living.

Our first customer is the commercial man.

"Our business is based on politely selling a clean room. We are not in the food business, the bar business, the banquet business. The most important thing to the traveling commercial man is a clean room."

Although most La Quinta Inns have no room service, no restaurants, no bars, no convention rooms and small lobbies, they all have swimming pools and the rooms are comparable to those of the bigger chain facilities with color television. The average price of a room was $15.80 in 1977, according to the company's annual report. The occupancy rate in established inns has been 80 percent during the last five years.

Instead of serving food, the company has leased adjacent land to its motels for chains such as Denny's to build and operate restaurants.

The report also shows that during the past five years (La Quinta went public in 1973) revenues have increased at an annual compound rate of 21.3 percent, earnings grew at a 20 percent annual compound rate and return on shareholders equity averaged 21.1 percent.

During fiscal 1977 La Quinta extended its joint venture agreements with the Prudential Life Insurance Co. of America, providing 12 million for new motor inns, $1 million from La Quinta and $1 million from Prudential, increasing to approximately $35 million the total funds committed in the joint venture.

Total assets were listed as $83,242,000 on Aug. 31, 1977, compared with $64,502,000 the same date of 1976.

La Quinta also was a pioneer in solar room and water heating at one of its Dallas inns a year ago, and recently was awarded $559,000 to develop solar energy systems in 11 of the facilities currently under construction, more than any other motel chain. La Quinta will add $513,000 from company funds for the solar projects.

The company also has devised a precast concrete structural shell and bathroom modules in its construction, eliminating many problems of conventional construction and reducing building time to six to nine months, instead of the previous 12 to 18 months. Under the plan, a La Quinta Inn theoretically could be disassembled in one place and rebuilt in another from the same materials.

Barshop has personally selected the sites for the motels, partially on "gut feeling," along major freeways and near airports, again aiming at "the commercial man."

Barshop, a board member of Southwest Airlines which also has shown stellar growth in Texas, said he discovered a "mom-pop" ownership arrangement did

Tennessee Bible Hijack Ring Warned 'Lightning May Strike'

NASHVILLE (AP) — Shocked police in this Bible-belt town said Wednesday they had arrested three members of a ring that stole up to 1,200 Bibles worth an estimated $30,000 and apparently turned some of them over to a "connection" in the North.

Officers said they expected more arrests and had recovered hundreds of the Bibles stolen from the warehouse of Thomas Nelson Publishers, which claims to be the largest publisher of Bibles in the nation.

"Never before to my knowledge in nine years of police work have I heard of this kind of thing," said Police Det. David Leaver, 30.

"I've heard of one or two Bibles being stolen from motel rooms, but this is the first time an organized Bible theft ring has been uncovered that I know of," he said.

"Thou shalt not steal — it's in the Bible. They should have read the Bible. We are in the Bible belt here and things might go pretty rough on them," he said. "They might get struck by lightning."

Officers arrested a Nelson employee Monday night. On Tuesday, two more suspects, one a former employee, were taken into custody and accused of receiving and concealing 1,200 stolen Bibles.

Leaver said authorities were "trying to find out now what their connections were." He said the missing Bibles had shown up in several Northern bookstores.

"They were different colors and kinds, with leather backs," Leaver said. "They were pretty expensive Bibles. They'd be retailed for $19.95 to $39.95. There was $30,000 worth. They had an inside connection at the warehouse."

Leaver and three other officers staked out the warehouse Tuesday night and followed a truck from there to a service station. Leaver told a reporter they saw the Bibles transferred to two pickup trucks and followed them to a trailer park.

County Maps Issued Show Flood-Prone Areas

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Over the objections of the commissioners court, federal officials have just published and issued maps of rural Lubbock County areas they say are flood-prone and should be subject to special development restrictions.

And, the government warns, unless Lubbock County cooperates in enforcing those regulations under the National Flood Insurance Program, federally backed loans will no longer be available for construction or purchase of buildings in the specified areas.

County commissioners oppose the program because they believe the "flood hazard boundary maps" issued by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) are grossly inaccurate.

If the county participates, commissioners fear they will be imposing undue restrictions on some developers and forcing many homeowners to buy flood insurance they really don't need.

County Judge Rod Shaw stated those and other objections in a letter to HUD engineers in July. Shaw had hoped that by declining to approve the preliminary flood hazard maps, the county might get clarification about the program from the federal government.

But HUD's Federal Insurance Administration apparently has ignored the protest. The administration now has declared the preliminary maps official and published several copies of them, dated Nov. 29, 1977, for public distribution.

J. Robert Hunter, chief of the federal insurance division, told Shaw in an accompanying letter Lubbock County has one year from the date of publication to set up a building permits office and regulate rural construction in the HUD-designated flood-prone areas.

The county must do so "or else no federal financial assistance, such as loans, insurance or grants from federal agencies, and no mortgage loans from federally insured or regulated banks or savings and loan associations, will thereafter be available for the acquisition or construction of buildings within these identified special flood hazard areas," Hunter said.

However, Roy Sedwick, a state official assisting HUD in implementing the flood insurance program in Texas, said Tuesday the threat of discontinuation of conventional loans recently has been dropped.

If Lubbock County refuses to participate in the program, only "direct federal loans" — from the Veterans Administration or the Federal Housing Administration, for example — will be curtailed in the marked flood-prone areas, he said.

Still, that would be quite a penalty. Sedwick urges Lubbock County commissioners to go ahead and participate in the flood insurance project. If there are inaccuracies in the floodplain maps, HUD will make corrections, he said.

The National Flood Insurance Program was established to provide flood insurance, unavailable from private carriers, at low-cost, federally subsidized rates, Hunter said.

The insurance is available only to residents in communities that agree to participate by regulating construction in flood-prone areas.

Lubbock County, for example, would have to adopt ordinances to set up a building permits department and develop construction standards for flood-hazard areas. The county would require permits for all new construction and improvements in rural areas and review those permits to determine which would be built in flood zones.

Construction in flood-hazard areas would have to be regulated by county commissioners for proper anchoring, drainage and flood-minimizing building standards. Also, owners would be required to buy the federally subsidized insurance.

Insurance would be optional for persons residing in the designated flood zones prior to implementation of the program. The insurance costs 25 cents per $100 value — or $75 a year on a $30,000 home.

The flood insurance program has worked well in several municipalities, including the City of Lubbock. However, it is relatively new to counties.

Because cities already have building departments and codes, and they cover smaller areas, it is generally easier for cities to implement the flood insurance program.

The state legislature this year passed a law specifically authorizing Texas counties to participate in the program.

Lubbock County commissioners say they see some merits in the program. However, they don't like the idea of setting up a building permits bureaucracy — and they especially oppose the maps by which the program would be administered.

The maps purportedly are calculated on floods expected to happen within a 100-year period. And Lubbock County, with hundreds of playa lakes in unincorporated areas, has many HUD-designated flood zones — some in the path of major residential developments.

Shaw feels the maps are inaccurate, noting that no on-site survey work was done in drafting them. That view is shared by many developers and even the local U.S. Soil Conservation Service office, Shaw said.

The program "is going to hurt the developers of land alleged to be flood-prone when it really isn't," Shaw said.

Sedwick said failure to participate in the program would make Lubbock County ineligible for federal disaster relief should a flood occur, and reduce chances for future federal grants for county projects.

Also, he said commissioners might be held liable for denying the federal flood insurance to persons who want it.

Documents Purport Hughes Residency

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Attorney General's office introduced hundreds of documents Wednesday all aimed at proving that the late Howard Hughes was a legal resident of the state and that his estate should pay at least $100 million in inheritance taxes.

The slow, plodding procedure was the first step by the state in laying the groundwork to prove that the eccentric multimillionaire, despite his travels throughout the world, was always a Texan and never intended his legal home to be anywhere else.

The documents included everything from checks written by Hughes as far back as 1926 to a letter from California to a Houston doctor asking for a cure for dandruff that wouldn't change the color of Hughes's hair.

Texas Attorney General John Hill, who has been carrying the case for the state, was absent Wednesday, appearing before the U.S. Supreme Court on a case involving the sale of natural gas.

The state attorneys and those representing the co-administrators of the vast Hughes estate agreed that the documents could be introduced without witnesses appearing to verify the authenticity of each and every piece of evidence.

This should speed up a trial that is expected to last at least three months.

Among the documents was a letter from Hughes to California tax authorities in which he wrote, "I am a Texan. I always have been and I always will be."

The three-man, three-woman jury is hearing a case similar to one underway in Las Vegas, Nev. Both trials are attempting to settle the legal residence of Hughes and the validity of the so-called Mormon will.

Phone Firms Must Aid Wiretappers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judges have the authority to order telephone companies to help law enforcement agencies' wiretapping efforts, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

Four of the court's nine members disagreed in a spirited dissent, claiming the decision is "at odds with the 200-year history of search warrants in this country."

The four dissenting justices said the decision broadly expanded the power of federal judges to order private individuals and companies to cooperate with the government and to authorize invasions of privacy.

The ruling came in the case of a 1976 court order that forced the New York Telephone Co. to give FBI agents investigating New York City gambling the facilities and technical assistance needed to install a surveillance instrument known as a pen register.

The device attaches to a telephone line and records the outgoing numbers dialed on a particular phone. It does not monitor the contents of the calls and does not record numbers or contents of incoming calls.

The telephone company complied with the court order but challenged the judge's power to compel its cooperation. The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that such orders are not authorized under federal law.

"We agree that the power of the federal courts to impose duties upon third parties is not without limits, unreasonable burdens may not be imposed," Justice Byron R. White said for the court's majority. "We conclude, however, that the order issued here ... was clearly authorized by the All Writs Act and was consistent with the intent of Congress."

A portion of the law White cited says federal courts may issue "all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of their respective jurisdictions and agreeable to the usages and principles of law."

Justice John Paul Stevens, joined by Justices Thurgood Marshall, Potter Stewart and William J. Brennan Jr., sharply disagreed with White's interpretation of the federal law.

Stevens said it should be confined to orders "to enable the court to carry out its functions" — and not to help other government entities.

The majority's decision "provides a sweeping grant of authority entirely without precedent in our nation's history," Stevens said.

The justices voted unanimously that a pen register is not the same as a wiretap to intercept conversations.

However, they split 6-3, with Stewart joining the majority, in deciding that the judge had the power to authorize the pen register's installation without complying with federal procedures covering wiretap warrants.

The majority decided that Congress has authorized federal judges to order such installation because it has never specifically forbidden the practice. The dissenters said "the focus of inquiry should not be whether Congress has prohibited the intrusion but whether Congress has expressly authorized it."

They charged that no specific authorization can be found in federal law.

Joining in all of White's opinion were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William H. Rehnquist, Harry A. Blackmun and Lewis F. Powell Jr.

Supreme Court To Decide Interest Rate Dispute

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court agreed Wednesday to consider what interest rate should have been charged on nearly $10 million in judgments in two Houston and Dallas courts.

In the Houston case, Trinity Portland Cement Division of General Portland Cement Co. won a $2,537,473 eminent domain judgment against Coastal Industrial Water Authority on June 17, 1974.

While the case was on appeal, the legislature raised the interest rate on judgments from 6 to 9 percent, effective Sept. 1, 1975.

Coastal lost its appeal and paid Trinity $2,789,830 in February 1976, a sum based on 6 percent interest from the time of the judgment.

Trinity sued to collect an extra $34,412 in interest, claiming the interest should have run at 9 percent after the new rate went into effect.

The trial court denied the extra interest, but the Houston Court of Civil Appeals said it should have been paid.

The Dallas case involved interest on a $5,071,072 judgment for Darrell Manley and a $2,235,536 judgment for Conway Phillips — both against Sammons Enterprises Inc. in April 1975.

Manley and Phillips obtained a writ from the district clerk providing for 9 percent interest after Sept. 1, and the trial court said the higher rate was proper until the appeal was completed.

The Dallas Court of Civil Appeals overturned that ruling.

The supreme court said it would review both cases.

The high court also said Rita Fleming, the widow of a man badly burned when oxygen ignited in his room at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas, should get a new trial.

Luther Fleming sued the hospital for $150,000 in damages but died in 1975 before the case went to trial. His death, however, came almost two years after he was burned.

Nurses testified Fleming — who was hospitalized with pneumonia and other problems — continually asked for cigarettes but usually was denied them because he was receiving oxygen.

One nurse allegedly lighted a cigarette for him after lunch Oct. 26, 1973, while the oxygen was off. She said she put it in an ashtray after Fleming said he felt bad and wanted to go to bed.

Shortly thereafter, his bed and clothing caught fire and he was severely burned.

The trial court granted the hospital an instructed verdict, but the Dallas Court of Civil Appeals said there were grounds of negligence that should have been decided by a jury.

The supreme court upheld that ruling.

Court Overturns Death Penalty

AUSTIN (AP) — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday reversed a Gatesville death penalty case, an Odessa marijuana conviction and adopted procedural rules for its new three-judge panels.

The appeals court said Richard D. Smith is entitled to a new trial in the April 15, 1972, killing of Travis Russell Durham, whose throat was cut by a burglar.

Juror Leon Franklin Payne was seated over the objection of Smith's lawyers, even though Payne said he would not even consider a life sentence in a murder case.

"I feel very strongly if a person, after pushing (sic) to take somebody's life, he should give his life," Payne said during examination by lawyers.

The appeals court said a defendant is entitled to a jury that will consider the full range of punishments for the crime.

It acknowledged that Payne said under further questioning that he would require the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt each of the points that must be proven to obtain a death verdict.

"The law requires this and in addition requires that each juror consider the full range of punishment applicable to the offense in question," the appeals court said.

Jesse Marion Binnion's marijuana conviction in Odessa was overturned because the trial court refused to allow testimony to impeach the state's key witness.

Binnion received a life sentence — enhanced by two prior convictions — on a charge he sold 14.19 ounces of marijuana for $160 to Jerry Davis, an undercover investigator for the district attorney's office.

Davis testified under cross-examination he had never smoked marijuana and never offered to sell heroin to Binnion.

Court Grants New Appeal

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has sent back to Lamb County the appeal of Marie Toney, convicted of burglary, because her attorney abandoned her case without notice during the appeals process.

Miss Toney was represented by retained counsel at her 1976 trial, when she was convicted and assessed an eight-year sentence.

Although the defense attorney filed a notice of appeal, court records state, her attorney simply left the area without leaving a forwarding address or notifying anyone of his whereabouts before the appeal was heard.

The woman is entitled to file an appeal with "effective assistance of counsel," the court ruled.

In other action, the court upheld the Lubbock County conviction of William Edward Hodges, sentenced to 10 days in jail and a $150 fine for driving while intoxicated.

The court also affirmed the conviction and $100 fine of John Blaylark, convicted in Lubbock county of carrying a handgun.

The trial judge excluded testimony from one defense witness who testified outside the presence of the jury that she had seen Davis do both. Also excluded was testimony of another defense witness who said he saw Davis offer to sell heroin to Binnion.

The high court adopted rules of procedure for its new three-judge panels that voters approved as a means for reducing the nation's largest caseload.

A constitutional amendment adopted last month expands the court from five to nine judges and authorizes the court to sit in three-judge panels in all but death penalty cases.

In addition, the court may sit as a whole on other cases that it thinks warrant consideration by all nine judges.

The three-judge panels will be chosen

Jail Inmate Could Have Hepatitis

DALLAS (UPI) — County jail officials Wednesday said a final diagnosis is expected Thursday on a hepatitis case discovered among inmates which could require the quarantine of 80 prisoners.

"Right now we're about 90 percent sure it's serum hepatitis," said jail director Bob Collins. "Serum hepatitis can be transmitted only through blood — needle tattooing, dope addicts or in a fight if the skin on your hand scratched a tooth of a hepatitis carrier." It doesn't present any great problem.

If the inmate was diagnosed to have infectious hepatitis, "that would require the inoculation of 80-odd inmates who have been in close contact with the one who has it," Collins said.

A Dallas County health official will inspect the jail and issue the final diagnosis early Thursday, Collins said.

The identity of the prisoner suffering from the disease was not released. There are 1,600 prisoners in the jail.

Government Reverses Stand On Job Forms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reversing an earlier stand, the government will soon require persons seeking federal jobs to list sex, race and ethnic background on their application forms.

A spokesman for the Civil Service Commission, which staunchly opposed such requirements in the early 1960s, said "the pendulum has now turned."

The spokesman, Joseph Oglesby, said the information is needed to determine whether federal agencies are meeting goals for employing minorities.

by lot "on or about Dec. 15" each year, then rotated quarterly according to a formula that will make each judge serve with every other judge during the year.

Alcohol Amendments May Be Approved

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Alcoholic beverage sale ordinance amendments may be approved by the Lubbock City Council during a zoning hearing today.

The council, which will meet at 9:30 a.m. in council chambers, will consider passing the amendments on first reading.

The amendments, approved last month by the Planning and Zoning Commission and endorsed by the Lubbock Restaurant Association, are designed to stop bars from masquerading as restaurants. The changes also would make the ordinance constitutional on its face and give the city power to enforce the 60-40 percentage limit on liquor sale profits.

As proposed, the amendments would reduce from 600 feet to 200 feet the distance bars, lounges, nightclubs or private clubs must be separated from each other.

Also, monthly audits of the 60-40 operations that could be demanded by the zoning administrator would replace the current mandatory quarterly audits. Injunctive relief could be sought by the administrator if he believed the 60-40 limits were being violated.

The burden of proving compliance with the limits also would be placed on the person or business holding a mixed alcoholic beverage zoning certificate.

The 60-40 limit provides that no more than 40 percent of an establishment's profits may come from sale of alcohol in order for it to be considered as a restaurant.

The proposed regulations also open the way for any business in the proper zone to sell alcoholic beverages as an incidental use. The change is necessary to make the ordinance constitutional on its face, the city's legal staff says.

The Airport Board will meet with the council at noon to discuss capital improvement projects at the Lubbock International Airport and how to fund the projects.

The board wants money to finance an extension of a taxiway for the east-west runway and for construction of additional parking at the airport.

Development of the old airport terminal also will be discussed.

Representatives of Civic Lubbock, Inc., will appear before the council at 10 a.m. to recommend that $25,000 be appropriated for a tapestry.

The wall hanging, which would be made by a local artist and hung on five 30-foot panels, would be placed in the Memorial Civic Center.

The Civic Lubbock, Inc., board approved the expenditure last week with the stipulation that other money such as donations also could be used to finance the project.

Despite the uncertain status of federal approval of future annexations here, the council will consider passing on second reading an ordinance annexing about 158 acres of land in Southwest Lubbock.

The council last month delayed second and final consideration of the annexation ordinance because it learned the Justice Department may reject the subjoining of land in Southwest Lubbock. The Justice Department has said such annexations

Patient-Monitoring Purchase Rebutted

In a rebuttal to charges of bidding irregularities, the Lubbock County Hospital District says its purchase of an expensive brand of patient-monitoring equipment was "in the best interest" of the county's new teaching hospital.

Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and the new Health Sciences Center Hospital, refuted allegations by local businessman Duane Benschoff that the district squandered $112,000 by buying the higher priced of two "relatively equal" brands of physiological monitoring systems.

In a three-page letter to County Judge Rod Shaw, Bosworth said the two brands in question — Hewlett Packard and American Optical Medical Division — were in fact not equal in quality.

"Expert technical and professional advice" from the hospital district staff and the Texas Tech University School of Medicine faculty indicated that Hewlett Packard, which cost $584,984 to American Optical's $472,664, would be the better buy, Bosworth said.

The physiological monitoring systems are sophisticated machines for charting the vital signs of patients to be served at the county's 245-bed teaching hospital, set to open Feb. 1.

Bosworth said the various brands offered by bidders were evaluated by the district and medical school according to such factors as "presentation of data, ease of use of desired data, reliability and maintainability, and suitability for future expansion and improvement."

Also, he said, evaluators "did not enter into this review with any preconceived ideas as to the eventual vendor, and each set of proposals was carefully reviewed with respect to approximately 19 major points."

On the basis of that review, Hewlett Packard scored a nine out of a possible 10 points, and American Optical rated an eight.

Eventually, the Hewlett Packard bid was reduced to $473,815 by deleting items from the original package, to bring the cost closer to the district's budgeted $403,170. The district's board of managers awarded the bid to Hewlett Packard Oct. 31.

Benschoff, a representative of American Optical, claims the bidding process was slanted in favor of Hewlett Packard.

Nation's Power Structure Still Major Irritant

By LOUIS HARRIS

A striking 58 percent of Americans feel disenchanted with the power structure of the nation. The figure is only a percentage point less than last year, when the Harris Index of Alienation reached its highest level since the index was first recorded in 1966.

Here are the key findings in a recent Harris Survey of 1,498 adults nationwide. They are the key elements in the Alienation Index.

—By 60-35 percent a majority feels that "the people running the country don't really care what happens to you." This is the highest figure ever recorded on this particular issue.

—By 77-20 percent people hold the view that "the rich get richer and the poor get poorer." In 1966, 45 percent of adults shared this view.

—By 61-33 percent Americans feel that "what I think doesn't count much anymore." Eleven years ago, only 37 percent shared this feeling.

—A significant 35 percent of the people say they "feel left out of things going on around them," down from the 40 percent who felt that way in 1976, but far above the 9 percent who shared this sentiment in 1966.

Eleven years ago, 29 percent of the public could be classified as alienated or disenchanted. This number rose to 36 percent in 1969, to 40 percent in 1971, to 49 percent in 1972, then to 55 percent in 1973, 57 percent in 1974, and hit a peak of 59 percent in 1976.

When President Carter was elected, with the solid support of most of the alienated voters in the country, many thought that the level of disenchantment would come down. In fact, 1977 shows no perceptible improvement in the degree of alienation.

Some other findings shed light on the reasons for the widespread feelings of —By 60-33 percent, a majority also feels that "most people with power try to take advantage of people like myself."

—By 76-12 percent, Americans hold the view that "special interests get more from the government than the people do." This deep feeling that there is a double standard for the privileged was reinforced by the disclosures in the Bert Lance case.

—By 65-27 percent, a majority believes that "most elected officials are in politics for all they personally can get out of it for themselves."

—Finally, by 59-31 percent, a majority agrees that "the people running Washington, D. C. are out of touch with the rest of the country." This is down from the 68 percent who felt that way in 1976. But it is still a surprisingly high figure, considering the fact that one of Jimmy Carter's most effective campaign appeals was that the Washington establishment did not reflect the public will. He ran openly against Washington, and won many votes on that platform.

Now that he is in the White House, however, Carter is criticized by a 47-36 percent plurality for "acting as if he is still running for office against Washington, D. C., whereas he is now the top man running things there." In a word, the President is catching it both ways. He is slowly becoming part of a Washington establishment that is still viewed as being "out of touch," and at the same time, he is being criticized for not acting like a man who holds the highest office in the land.

powerlessness and disenchantment:

—By 73-20 percent, Americans feel that "the tax laws are written to help the rich, not the average man." Candidate Carter tapped this sentiment in 1976 by calling the income tax system a "disgrace." However, President Carter has had to postpone his tax reform recommendations until 1978.

Infant Found Dead In Car

GRAPEVINE (AP) — The body of a newborn baby, wrapped in a sheet and placed inside a paper bag, was found Thursday in a car in this Dallas suburb.

Grapevine policeman Don Armstrong said the body was found by two local teenage girls who were on their way to school. The car belonged to one of the girls.

Medical investigator Tommy Harris said a note near the body said:

"Please take care of him. His name is Gary Don and I love him."

Armstrong said the body apparently had not been delivered by a doctor and had been placed in the car shortly after birth.

"It looked like a full-term baby," Harris said.

Tarrant County Medical Examiner Felix Gwozdz was to perform an autopsy on the body Thursday.

Grapevine Police Chief Bill McLain said the baby may not have been alive when it was placed in the car.

"I'm hoping against hope that the baby wasn't put out there and it froze to death," McLain said.

Harris said he could find no evidence of violence on the body.

The police chief said there are no leads concerning who may have left the baby in the car.

"There is nothing to indicate to us that the baby is from Grapevine," McLain said. "The baby could be from anywhere."

Officers said they may have to depend on information from the public in the case.

"We're hoping somebody will come up with information on a woman who was pregnant, is not pregnant now, and doesn't have a baby," McLain said.

Houston Area Claims Growth Title

DALLAS (AP) — If Dallas Metroplex officials were insulted when San Antonio claimed it was bigger than Big D, they are now downright indignant now that Houston officials are bragging that the "Houstoplex" will soon be larger than the Dallas Metroplex.

The latest salvo fired in the state's Great Population War came from the Houston Chamber of Commerce.

Using figures from a private marketing study based on a new people-counting technique, Houston officials are bragging that their area will overtake the Metroplex as Texas' largest metropolitan area by 1981.

The claims come several months after reports that San Antonio has overtaken Dallas as the state's second largest city. Dallas officials reacted by saying they'll wait until the 1980 census to settle the dispute.

But the Metroplex officials are not taking kindly to the Houston claims. Recent publicity releases from the Bayou city boast that the "seven-county Houston-Galveston Standard Consolidated Statistical Area" will reach a population of 2-953,400 in the next four years.

Meanwhile, the releases claim, the "11-county Dallas-Fort Worth Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA)" will be floundering at a mere 2,790,000 population in 1981.

The Houston area already leads the Metroplex in several aspects including total retail sales.

The chamber president said that Dallas still leads in bank deposits, number of million-dollar company headquarters and tourism, among other categories.

$100 Million Complex Begun In Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First steps are being taken to replace Washington's 50-year-old National Press Building and rundown neighboring buildings near the White House with a $100 million complex rivaling contemporary developments in Atlanta, Detroit and San Francisco.

Atlanta architect-developer John C. Portman and the National Press Building Corp. have agreed to build the complex which will include a 1,000 room convention hotel and about 600,000 square feet of office space.

"Assuming all goes well," said National Press Club President Robert E. Farrell, "we are talking about a timetable of three to four years."

This month, the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp. board voted 10-6 to use eminent domain to condemn properties adjacent to the press building as needed for the development. Those rights plus NPC's options to buy the land on which the nearby National Theater and Munsey building stand are crucial to putting together the needed project site two blocks east of the White House.

Portman's desire to build in Washington may be the key to moving the project from "renderings on the back of an envelope" to a 24-hour a day complex anchoring the "old downtown" area of Washington, according to Farrell.

The architect-developer of Atlanta's Peachtree Center, San Francisco's Embarcadero Center and Detroit's new Renaissance Center, Portman has been frustrated in finding a Washington base.

Farrell said about the same time NPC board was thinking its half century old building should be renovated or rebuilt. Portman expressed interest in the same block on 14th Street along Pennsylvania Avenue, part of the traditional presidential inaugural route between the Capitol and the White House.

Portman has signed a letter of intent with the NPC to proceed, with the NPC putting up 20 per cent of the capital and Portman participating in the financing.

"It will be fabulous for this part of town," Farrell said, referring to the area's showpiece brick and stone buildings. "I think it will be a tremendous coup," he said, and should spur the rebuilding or remodeling of the old Willard Hotel, once known as "The Residence of Presidents," but closed for several years.

Portman first became interested in guiding the architecture of entire cities when he came away disappointed from the dedication ceremonies for Brasilia, the planned capital of Brazil, in 1960.

"What an inhuman place," he later wrote. "Nothing but great blocks of buildings arranged in military fashion."

"Older cities, know how badly their designs had evolved, were still better at providing for human needs than Brasilia, whatever the virtues of the architecture. I came to the conclusion that what we needed to do in the United States was to restructure our existing cities, not build new ones."

After that Portman returned to Atlanta and began to expand his newly completed Merchandise Mart into the Peachtree Center which now also boasts two hotels and five office buildings.

Henry Keys, executive director of the National Press Building Corp., said the next step in the development will come next spring when the developers and the Pennsylvania Avenue group try to reach an amicable settlement with the owners of adjacent properties. After that the PADC will call for bids from interested developers.

According to Keys, the press club and Portman hope to obtain a strip of land 325 feet wide and 400 feet long between F and E streets. It has not been decided yet whether the initial construction will involve one or two buildings.

The NPC has a firm commitment from Portman that none of its 375 occupants, 250 of them media tenants, will have to move until new quarters are available, meaning the project will be built around the present building.

The press club hopes to keep media tenants and attract others by offering special facilities such as microwave transmission equipment, television and radio studios for hire and special garages for communications vans. The develop-pers also hope to connect the new complex by tunnel with the nearby Metro Center subway station.

Record Predicted For Auto Recall Figures This Year

DETROIT (AP) — Auto recalls are heading for record levels this year, with nearly 9 million vehicles called back to dealers for repair of possible safety defects since Jan. 1.

That's just short of the record 9.4 million vehicles recalled in 1971, according to figures from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

And with less than a month to go in 1977, the year-to-date total contrasts with just 1.8 million cars, trucks and other vehicles recalled in all of 1975 and 3 million last year.

The government says it sees no trend in this year's figures, and reports that the number of 1977 recall campaigns — 209 — is actually slightly below those in 1975 and 1976.

For no clear reason, the latest recall campaigns have covered more vehicles. Automakers say it's partly a matter of luck — or bad luck — dictated by whether defects turn up in popular or low-sale vehicles.

Joan Claybrook, who was appointed by President Carter to head the safety administration, has begun 25 auto recall investigations this year — compared to just four in 1976.

Still, only one of this year's 209 recall campaigns was directly ordered by the government. The agency claims partial credit for another 40 industry-ordered recalls, while the rest saw no government involvement, said Irv Chor, a consumer affairs specialist at NHTSA.

James G. Vorbes, General Motors vice president for consumer relations, said Mrs. Claybrook figured "somewhat" in this year's recall activity. Discussing the inevitability of defects, he added:

"We've been up and we've been down. We had a recall in 1976. I wasn't in on that one, and I don't plan to be in on the one in the year 2100. But somebody else will be."

GM likes to bring up the recall of some 1916 Buicks whose gasoline tanks were falling off. It supports the industry argument that it was in the safety business long before the NHTSA was created in 1966.

Automakers also note with chagrin that their bookkeeping hasn't kept up with the complexity of the business — usually forcing them to recall far more vehicles than necessary to track down the defective ones.

"It's like working down from the top of a pyramid to the bottom," said a Chrysler Corp executive.

The NHTSA confirms that a relatively small percentage of the 8.96 million vehicles recalled this year contain defects. But Chor cautions motorists against playing the odds that their recalled cars are safe.

"That would be shortsighted," he says. Nonetheless, he said only about 50 percent of the 60 million vehicles recalled since 1966 have been brought back to dealers. Newer models usually show up, but owners of older cars often figure it's not worth it. And nobody knows how many are on the junkheap.

A breakdown this year shows 165 recall campaigns of 8.48 million U.S.-built vehicles and 44 recall orders of 480,000 imports. More than half were pre-1977 models, but exact figures were unavailable.

Surgically Implanted Eye Lenses Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday announced the recall of 52 mislabeled intraocular lenses, including 10 implanted in the eyes of cataract patients in Melbourne, Fla.

The lenses were too strong. A Melbourne eye doctor discovered the error after his patients displayed near-sightedness following implantation of the lenses, the FDA said.

The agency said the In-Trac Intraocular Lenses, made by Surgidez Corp. of Santa Barbara, Calif., were labeled 18.5 to 19 diopter, when their actual strength was 27 diopter.

The FDA said the lenses were distributed in Germany, Texas, North Carolina and Arizona, as well as Florida, but the company reported that all of the non-implanted lenses already have been removed from the market. The firm began the recall on Oct. 25.

"It was all accomplished before it was announced," said Mike Lippman, president of Surgidez. "All of the lenses got back here."

Laser Renders Higher Fidelity

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Don't throw away those scratched or broken records!

A Palo Alto, Calif., electronics technician has invented a record-player that picks up the sound with a thin beam of laser light instead of a needle. It ignores the scratches and plays music with higher fidelity than anything now available.

"My mother used to sing," the technician, William K. Heine, told UPI in an interview. "She sent me a record made at a radio station, but it was broken. I tried to figure out some way to play it."

That was five years ago. Heine now holds a patent for the first laser phonograph and has a working model in his home.

"It's really quite simple," said Heine. "I was interested in lasers, and about the same time I happened to see a photograph of the groove in a record, very highly magnified, showing all its contours."

"It occurred to me that if somebody can take a picture of that, certainly you should be able to somehow get an image back with light."

He traded a camera lens to a friend in exchange for a laser and began experimenting. Pointing the thin light beam — only one fifteen-thousandths of an inch thick — at the groove in a record, he saw a remarkable reflection on the ceiling of the room. It was a long thin arc of light with graph-like variations all along its length.

"I discovered something very unique," said Heine. "When the laser beam shines down on the groove you get what is called a diffraction interference pattern. Light energy gets down in the groove and bounces all around. When it finally comes out of the groove its reflected energy represents the contours of the groove."

The shape of the line of light represents the sound on the record.

In his laser-player, Heine uses two photoelectric cells to convert that pattern of light into electric signals that are, in turn, converted to sound by conventional electronic gear.

Heine was able to play his mother's old recording. Later he demonstrated his machine by breaking a record, Scotch taping it together and playing it for an audience of audio experts.

"It turns out there are all kinds of advantages in doing it this way," he said. "For one thing, there is obviously no wear on the record."

He noted that in a conventional player the stylus rides in the groove and generates sound by bumping along the contour engraved on the walls of this groove. "The forces are tremendous on the tiny indentations and edges in the recording," he said. "You actually distort a record the first time it is played."

Another advantage, he said, is "unlimited frequency response." Most hi-fi systems now in use have a maximum frequency response of about 15,000 vibrations per second. But with light as the medium, the frequency response can go up to two million vibrations per second or more.

A third advantage is that the laser beam, when it hits a scratch on the record or a dust particle, "scatters" the light and this diminishes the sound for about two-thousandths of a second. The effect is that you don't hear the annoying "click click click."

Desegregation Cases Still Off Limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to lift some restrictions on the activities of government-paid lawyers for the poor, while still not allowing them to enter school desegregation or abortion cases.

By a vote of 236-110, the House approved and sent to the Senate a bill extending the life of the Legal Services Corp. for three years and authorizing an appropriation of $205 million for the current fiscal year. This is a two-thirds increase over the previous appropriation.

The bill was a compromise between differing versions passed earlier by the Senate and the House. The Senate version would have repealed the current prohibition against legal services lawyers taking part in desegregation cases.

A House-Senate conference committee accepted the House decision to continue the desegregation ban. It qualified this, however, by saying that as long as they did not go to court about it lawyers would be free to advise poor people about their rights in school integration matters. House backers of the original ban accepted this, saying it merely clarifies what is already in the law.

Both the House and Senate versions continued the existing prohibition against abortion cases.

The compromise version would allow legal services lawyers for the first time to represent juveniles without the consent of their parents. Advocates of the change said it would enable the corporation's lawyers to protect poor children from parental abuse.

The bill also would allow legal services lawyers to represent clients in draft cases arising under the law which expired in 1973, although not necessarily in any cases which might arise under future laws. Current law prohibits them from handling draft cases at all.

While still barring the legal services lawyers from representing criminal defendants in most cases, the bill would allow them to give legal assistance to a person charged with a misdemeanor or lesser offense in an Indian tribal court.

The bill also relaxes restrictions on political activities by the government-paid attorneys. Present law prohibits them from running for any office, whether partisan or not. The bill would continue the ban on running for partisan office, but otherwise would make them subject only to the same restrictions as government employees.

The measure would allow the lawyers to lobby for legislation or regulations affecting the operations of their legal service agencies, but not on matters of concern to poor people in general. Current law prohibits lobbying, except in response to requests.

The bill requires poor people to be appointed to the 11-member board of the corporation, although it does not say how many. It requires that poor people make up at least one third of the boards of local legal services agencies which receive funds from the corporation.

Workers Overcome By Toxic Fumes

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Workers began keeling over at their stations Wednesday morning, and within an hour 1,400 had been evacuated and 76 taken to area hospitals when toxic fumes spread through a toy manufacturing plant here Wednesday. "They were dropping all over the place," said Battalion Chief Robert Forbes.

It was the second such incident in three days at Building Six of the Coleco Industries plant.

Officials at Amsterdam's two hospitals said all of the workers were released, some after being treated with oxygen. The workers had symptoms of nausea, chest pains and difficulty breathing, they said.

Fire officials said they believed the workers were felled by carbon monoxide fumes from gas space heaters, but said an official determination had not yet been made.

Forbes said workers began getting sick on all floors of the five-story plant Wednesday morning.

"We really don't know what's happening here," said Richard Gafola, a company spokesman. "The whole thing is under investigation." He declined further comment.

On Monday, 46 employees were evacuated from the same building after being affected by fumes.

AFL-CIO Proposes Political Action For Upcoming Year

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A report to an AFL-CIO convention opening Thursday boasted that the election of President Carter and other union-backed candidates in 1976 is evidence of unprecedented political clout by organized labor.

The report was issued Wednesday as AFL-CIO President George Meany prepared to convene the federation's 12th biennial convention, where at age 83 he was expected to be re-elected to another two-year term. As usual, there was no opposition to his candidacy.

Politics was just one of several subjects the week-long convention was expected to discuss. Meany's aides said the meeting also would call on Congress to enact protectionist trade legislation and appropriate millions more dollars for economic stimulus.

The convention report said the AFL-CIO's political activity in 1976 "in all respects surpassed previous election year efforts" by organized labor. The AFL-CIO's assessment of its own political clout was particularly notable because labor has already announced it will launch an all out effort to purge unfriendly congressmen in the 1978 election.

The report noted that in 1976 the nation elects a labor-backed president plus 19 of 28 Senate candidates, 262 of 365 House candidates and nine of 14 gubernatorial candidates supported by the AFL-CIO. The report concluded: "The overall winning percentage was 70 percent plus."

The AFL-CIO, normally modest about its ability to elect candidates, did not take all the credit for the election of Carter. The president recently disappointed Meany by declining an invitation to speak at the AFL-CIO convention. The report said labor's efforts "gave a tremendous lift to the labor-endorsed candidate for president and made possible his victory in the major industrial states that provided more than half the electoral votes needed to win."

"It also against all expectations actually increased Democratic strength in Congress — an astonishing result considering the massive Democratic gains of 1974 and the slimness of the presidential victory."

The report said voter registration among union members last year was 80 percent compared to the national average of 70 percent; and at least 70 percent of all union voters chose Carter as compared to 51 percent among the general population.

Despite the show of political clout, labor has obtained only a few of the favors it has been seeking this year from Congress and the White House. The AFL-CIO this week intends to express strong dissatisfaction with current programs designed to solve unemployment and unfair trade competition.

Mom-Pop Station Imperiled

WASHINGTON (AP)—Norman Price, with his wife Marjorie beside him, pleaded with the Federal Communications Commission not to force him to close their "mom and pop"-operated radio station in Rifle, Colo.

They appeared with John Savage, who provided the 10 acres for the station's radio tower, instead of with an attorney because, they said, they couldn't afford one. They said the station already is in debt from fighting the case and they can't get any more loans.

An FCC administrative law judge, Walter C. Miller, denied a license renewal for the station, KWSR, citing a rigged "turkey shoot" contest, failure to operate the emergency warning system properly, false entries in its operating log and misrepresentations to the commission.

Price said he had made mistakes, blaming them on inexperience as a station manager and putting too much faith in his employees. He denied he has made misrepresentations to the FCC and took exceptions to other findings by the judge.

In addition, he said, Miller took "as gospel truth" the word of a disgruntled employee who had been fired, Robert Kelly May.

Price said the station under Oil Shale Broadcasting Co. has two fulltime employees in addition to himself and his wife, who sells advertising, plus some part-timers.

"I have tried, to the best of my ability, to cooperate with the commission in every way possible," he said. "I assure you that Rifle does need and want a radio station."

Savage said that if the station is closed and somebody else comes in to replace the station it probably will be an absentee owner not familiar with the little town, somebody who would be interested mainly in gambling on an oil shale boom in the area.

FCC Chairman Charles Ferris said the commission does not want to deprive Rifle of a radio station but it comes down to a question of a code of conduct for all licensees.

John T. Kelly, speaking for the FCC's Broadcast Bureau, denied that Price's due process rights were violated. In answer to a question by Ferris, he said the rigged contest was sufficient to deny the license.

Much of the hearing revolved around notes taken when two FCC investigators questioned Price. He signed the notes but Savage said they were misleading because they left out the full picture of what Price told the investigators.

Commissioner Margita White wondered whether Price, who has poor eyesight, was able to read the notes which she said were a scribbled "mess."

The FCC met in closed session after the hearing to discuss a decision, which may not be announced for several weeks. The commission could uphold the judge, reverse him or impose a fine of up to $10,000 instead of taking away the license.

If the decision goes against Price, he could appeal for a rehearing or appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals here.

'Son Of Sam' Transfer Denied

NEW YORK (AP) — An impartial jury of 12 persons can be found among Brooklyn's 2.5 million residents for the trial of David R. Berkowitz, accused in the six "Son of Sam" killings, a four-judge panel ruled Wednesday.

Responding to a defense motion for a change of venue, the Appellate Division of state Supreme Court said "given the size and diverse nature" of the borough, a fair trial could be held in Brooklyn despite widespread publicity about the slayings.

The judges however ruled that if defense attorneys' questioning of prospective jurors proved that an impartial panel could not be struck, the trial could be moved.

The decision cleared the way for trial preparations which, barring any other motions, could begin in mid-January. No trial date has been set.

Berkowitz's attorneys, Leon Stern and Ira Jultak, had sought to move the trial upstate, preferably to Sullivan County, saying excessive publicity had ruled out chances for a fair trial in Brooklyn. The lawyers declined to comment on the ruling Wednesday, citing a court-imposed gag order.

Brooklyn's district attorney, Eugene Gold, who opposed the change of venue attempt, commented: "We've believed all along that he could get a fair trial in Brooklyn."

The judges said publicity given the "Son of Sam" case "has not been restricted to Kings County. Indeed, there are few areas of the country where the media have not carried numerous detailed accounts of the matter."

In opposing the defense motion, Gold had submitted clippings from newspapers around the state.

"Under the circumstances, we believe that transferring this case to Sullivan County or any other county in this state would not succeed to any significant degree in mitigating the effects of such publicity," they said.

Hours before the ruling, the New York Post reported that Berkowitz wanted the trial to stay in Brooklyn. Quoting unidentified sources, the newspaper said Berkowitz feels publicity given to his case will not affect the fairness of his trial.

The Brooklyn case pertains to only one of the killings — that of Stacy Moskowitz, the last attributed by police to the so-called "Son of Sam." The five other killings occurred in The Bronx and Queens. Prosecution in those boroughs is being held up pending outcome of the Brooklyn trial.

The lowest price ever recorded for a dozen eggs was in 1897, when they sold for 18.9 cents a dozen, says the Census Bureau.

Commission Okays Plan For Industrial Start

A-J Correspondent
HOBBS — The Hobbs City Commission has given the green light to a proposal from representatives of Amigo Tile Manufacturing Co. to lend its name to an industrial revenue bond proposal that may amount to as much as $1.5 million.

The company proposes to lease a building at Hobbs Industrial Air Park, formerly occupied by a mobile home manufacturing plant. According to Mary Lee Garfield of Washington, D.C., an attorney for the firm and Duane J. Benavides, they will seek to acquire and equip a plant to manufacture architectural concrete roofing tile.

They said that market research indicates a high product acceptance in the southwest and "so a sunbelt location was selected."

Garfield said there are no plants in New Mexico or Texas that manufacture roof tile and Hobbs is in "one of the hottest areas of the country, economically." She adds that required raw materials are available and because of transportation costs the company will have an advantage geographically, over existing producers in California and there will be "no competition in this market area for the product."

Benavides, president of the firm, says the company is already in the process of recruiting a labor force, which initially, will number some 41 persons.

BIGGEST RED CEDAR—This tree, believed to be the world's largest Western red cedar, stands on state land in Jefferson County, Washington. It has received relatively little attention because signs in the Olympic National Park still direct visitors to a lesser tree which held the title until this one was discovered about a year ago. The tree is 178 feet tall and 61 feet in circumference. (AP Laserphoto)

Death Ruled Natural

NEW YORK (AP) — The stroke that killed Rosemarie Maniscalco and her unborn baby girl was caused by a blood vessel that was faulty all her life and not by beatings, the Brooklyn medical examiner said Wednesday.

Dr. Milton Wald said "no evidence of criminality" was found during the autopsy on the 27-year-old mother. If a beating had caused her fatal coma, doctors would have found evidence of it, he added.

The Brooklyn district attorney's office had been questioning relatives and acquaintances of Mrs. Maniscalco because of rumors that she had been beaten.

Wald said he had told Mrs. Maniscalco's estranged husband, John, about the autopsy report. "In ordinary decency, I'm not going to keep that poor man on the hook," Wald said. He added that Maniscalco had "no responses" when he heard the news.

Mrs. Maniscalco, 27, died Tuesday "of what the public considers a stroke," Wald said. But he described it as a "spontaneous intercranial hemorrhage — an explosive, destructive hemorrhage which destroyed the left side of her brain."

He said Mrs. Maniscalco had a weak blood vessel in her brain that "was there since she was born... like a time bomb" that "apparently doesn't kick off until 20 or 30."

He added that such a condition is not uncommon in persons in their middle 20s.

The fetus, Wald said, was "small and doll-like, a well-formed, normal-appearing female infant," about four months and one week old, weighing 2 pounds, 4 ounces and about 7 1/2 inches long.

He said there was a possibility that the baby could have been delivered in "another four or five weeks," but added that "the mother's condition was such that she could never have lived long enough."

He said it would have been futile to try to deliver the baby as its mother was dying.

"It was too young to survive. There was no chance for that baby," he said.

A few minutes before Mrs. Maniscalco died, the fetal heart, which had been beating strongly, no longer could be heard, doctors said.

Mrs. Maniscalco, 27, collapsed Nov. 23 in her apartment on Coney Island, and never regained consciousness. She was sustained on a respirator from the time of her collapse until her death.

The Maniscalcos had been separated for about three months. Maniscalco's brother, Anthony, said the couple had separated so Mrs. Maniscalco would be eligible for welfare.

CHAPTER FOUR: PATRICK TWEEDLEKNEES

Santa And The Pigwidgen

(Synopsis: Claus leaves toys in the stockings of the sleeping children. He sets out to find the Pigwidgen and break the curse. No one can help him until an old woman speaks up.)

By LUCRECE BEALE
Claus leaned over the old woman and gently shook her bony shoulders.

"You've got to tell me what you know!" he cried. "All the children of the land are sleeping because of this Pigwidgen curse."

"A Pigwidgen curse is a fearful thing," wheezed the crone. "That is why you had best go home."

"Who is the Pigwidgen?" asked Claus. "Where does he live? What does he do?"

The old woman closed her eyes. "I don't remember," she whined. "I am very old."

She pressed her lips together and would not say another word.

Claus begged and teased and threatened but the old granny would not speak or open her eyes or even breathe. "She is dead," thought Claus in despair. At that instant the crone's eyes popped open and she cackled. "Ice cream always helps a person to remember."

Claus rushed to an ice cream store and brought back all the ice cream he could carry. The ancient one ate seven quarts in seven different flavors. When the last box was licked clean she said:

"When I was girl a hundred years ago a crooked-legged elf told me about the Pigwidgen. Go to him and he will tell you, too."

"A hundred years ago?" gasped Claus. "Where could I find such a creature now?"

"On the Sopchoppy River Ferry."

"Where is that?"

"When night has come, take the crooked road out of town. When you come to the fork take the middle road to the weeping willow tree. Circle the willow 14 times."

"And then?" cried Claus.

But the old crone's eyes had closed again. Her mouth folded together. No more would she say.

Claus bought all the ice cream he could carry.

Claus left her. He went through the town asking directions to the crooked road. No one had heard of such a road. Nor had anyone heard of the Sopchoppy River Ferry.

Claus waited until dark. Then he walked to the four edges of the town. Nowhere did he see a crooked road. Four times he went to the four edges of the town. On the fourth time when he came to the fourth side the moon had come out and he saw a crooked road where before a straight road had been.

Claus was very tired but he raced down the loony, ziggity-zaggity, yawing, catawampus road. At last he came to a fork. One road branched left and one road branched right. The middle road was not a road at all but only a path laid down by the moon.

Claus followed the path. He ran on until the path was blocked by a giant willow tree. Although it was winter the tree was in full leaf.

Claus circled the tree 14 times. The circle grew wider and larger until he was miles from the tree. When he had counted 14 times he fell on the ground in exhausted sleep.

A glittering light and a blow in the face awakened him. He opened his eyes to find a tiny elf leaning over him and yanking on his hair. The elf waved a flashlight made of fireflies and shouted "Wake up! Wake up!"

"Who are you?" stammered Claus.

"Patrick Tweedleknies," snapped the elf and he gave the astonished Claus a fierce poke in the nose.

Kenneth Curtis Quitting Job As Democratic Party Chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kenneth Curtis is quitting his job as chairman of the Democratic Party but will remain in the post until the White House finds a replacement, President Carter's chief spokesman said Wednesday.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell denied suggestions that Curtis, one of Carter's early supporters, was being forced out by White House staff members, although some involved with political operations at the White House are known to have been dissatisfied with his work.

Powell said he had "never heard the president in public or private ever express any dissatisfaction with Ken Curtis." What is more, he said, anyone in the administration speaking critically of Curtis is "decidedly out of step with the president's views."

Carter handpicked the former Maine governor for the top party job after the 1976 presidential election.

The press secretary, discussing Curtis' decision to leave Washington and return to Maine, said at the daily White House briefing for reporters that the party chairman told Carter on Oct. 13 of his desire to return to his home state early in 1978.

"The president asked that he stay on to allow a replacement to be found and Ken Curtis agreed to do that," Powell said.

"Obviously, we are looking for someone to take that position," he said.

"The decision he made... to go back to Maine was in the context of his original agreement to come" to Washington, the spokesman said. "He came almost out of a favor to the president."

Powell said he knew of no commitment made by Curtis when he accepted the job that he would stay in it either through the 1978 congressional elections or the four years of Carter's elected term.

The press secretary said that he withheld announcing Curtis' decision, hoping to delay making it public until a replacement had been found. He discussed it only after he was asked about it at the briefing.

On Oct. 26, word leaked out that Carter was dissatisfied with Curtis and that the chairman was about to resign. At that time, Powell and his deputy, Rex Gramum, strongly denied Carter was unhappy with the party chairman or that he was about to be fired.

Corporate Bribery Banned In New Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would set fines up to $1 million for corporations that bribe foreign officials was passed unanimously by the House Wednesday and sent to President Carter.

The House vote was 349 to 0. The Senate previously had approved the bill, a combination of measures passed by the two chambers after congressional hearings on allegations that more than 300 firms had made secret and corrupt payments to officials and political parties in Europe, Japan and the Near East.

The $1 million penalty is one of the stiffest in the U.S. criminal code, twice the maximum punishment for corporations found guilty of price fixing.

The measure also provides punishment of up to five years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine for individual corporate officials convicted of bribery.

Another provision is designed to prevent corporations from building up inadequately recorded "slush funds" from which bribes or other questionable payments could be financed.

It would require corporations to keep accurate books and records and to maintain internal accounting controls to make sure transactions are recorded and assets accounted for.

In a separate action, the House approved a $63.75 million authorization for the Securities and Exchange Commission. This also was a compromise version previously passed by the Senate. It now goes to the president.

Press Freedom Bill Confusing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This is a story about how a congressional bill that would have restricted press freedoms became a significant affirmation of the public's right to know.

According to the Constitution: "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech or of the press ..." It is the simplicity of those words that makes any effort to write legislation dealing with excesses complicated and controversial.

Some contend this freedom is limited by the duty to be responsible or accurate or moral. Others contend that the First Amendment cannot be diluted with conditions, especially in the form of restrictive laws.

Alarmed in recent years by a tendency to take press freedom for granted, a number of groups such as the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the American Civil Liberties Union, have been keeping a close watch on congressional action affecting press freedom.

These groups are the lobbyists in this story; the object of their attention is a massive bill that is supposed to revise, reform and modernize the entire federal criminal code. The bill cleared the Senate Judiciary Committee Nov. 2 and is expected to go to the Senate early next year.

Legislation to rewrite the criminal code was introduced in January, 1975, by former Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Mich., and Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark.

The bill, which became known by its number, S-1, went far beyond its stated purpose of codifying, revising and reforming federal criminal law. It included a number of new provisions that immediately drew fire as threats to civil liberties.

Critics attacked a number of sections: expansion of the death penalty, broader government powers for wiretapping or electronic surveillance, a "Watergate defense" excusing federal officials for illegal acts if they believed the conduct "was required or authorized by law" and elimination of the insanity defense in criminal trials.

But the biggest public relations problem of S-1 came from sections touching on press freedom. These became a rallying point for the news media and civil libertarians.

The main objections were provisions that would have extended World War I era espionage laws to cover the press and proposed new curbs on publication of government secrets.

These provisions probably would have prevented publication of the Pentagon Papers, the classified documents on U.S. involvement in Vietnam that were leaked to the press by Daniel Ellsberg. They also could have hampered, if not completely frustrated, press investigations of the Watergate scandal.

Any government official who leaked "national defense information" or "classified information" to a reporter or other unauthorized person could have been prosecuted. Any reporter or publisher obtaining and disclosing secrets to anyone not authorized to receive it also could be prosecuted. Congress and the Executive Branch would have been given broad power to declare what was "classified" and who was "authorized" to have it.

S-1 died in committee when the 94th Congress adjourned but even before its demise, compromise efforts were underway to draft a new recodification bill.

The main architect of the compromise, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., insisted the bill have a new number and less bulk. It also had less controversy over press freedom.

With the provisions expanding espionage to the press removed, much of the press attention and outrage abated. By working with Judiciary Committee conservatives, Kennedy got the revision through with a minimum of trouble.

It won final approval on a 122 vote, opposed only by the very liberal Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and the very conservative Sen. James Allen, D-Ala.

Sources agree that removing the "red flag" to the press successfully neutralized opposition and is the major reason that this version of the criminal code bill has a decent chance of approval in the 95th Congress.

Hate Phone Message Hearing Set Today

HOUSTON (UPI) — A lawyer who resigned from the American Civil Liberties Union board to represent the American Nazi Party will try today to prevent extension of a temporary court order barring a telephone hate message.

"Every minute and second that goes by constitutes a continued violation of their (Nazi) rights to free speech," said Michael Maness, who opposed a local ACLU board vote against representing the party.

The discontinued Nazi message, which a person had to dial a telephone number to hear, called for "war against Jews and other non-whites" and offered a $5,000 bounty for whites killing non-whites in defense of race.

District Judge Richard Millard, acting on a suit filed by local television crusader Marvin Zindler, issued a temporary restraining order Nov. 30 barring continued use of the message.

Maness said that order was "plainly unconstitutional" because it too broadly infringed on constitutional guarantees of freedom of expression.

Monday, the local ACLU board voted 11-5 against a Nazi request for aid. The board heard arguments the message incited violence and therefore was not constitutionally protected. They also heard threats of membership cancellation.

Maness and two other lawyers, who resigned or said they would defy the board's decision by assisting in the case, Gerald Birnberg and Patrick Wiseman, said their position was a matter of civil rights principle.

Maness said he was prepared to take the case to the Texas Supreme Court if necessary. He failed Tuesday in efforts to get another district judge and the 14th Court of Civil Appeals to overturn Millard's order.

The message said: "We are calling for an all-white war against Jews and other nonwhites. I am sure you realize that illegal non-white immigrants have overrun our borders and have made us flee to the suburbs of our cities.

"We are beginning a battle by offering a $5,000 prize for every non-white killed during an attack on a white person."

'Bodily Harm' Issue Important To Trial

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Defense attorneys in the Chowchilla kidnapping trial asked the judge Wednesday to throw out all testimony concerning heat exhaustion, the key element in the prosecution case.

The state is trying to prove that the kidnapping was physically harmful to the 27 victims, and has defined bodily harm as resulting from the heat inside a buried moving van where they were held hostage.

Attorney Edward Merrill, who presented the motion in behalf of all three defendants, said the state had improperly kept secret its plan to introduce testimony on heat illness.

"There was never any evidence of heat exhaustion or claim of heat exhaustion made to the grand jury," Merrill said.

He claimed that the prosecution's tactics had denied the defendants due process by failing to give them full notice of the charges against them.

The three men — James Schoenfeld, 26, Richard Schoenfeld, 23, and Fred Woods, 26 — have admitted staging the bizarre July, 1976, abduction of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver, and face sentences of up to life in jail.

They are on trial for kidnapping with bodily harm, and if convicted could lose the possibility of parole. They say they did no harm to their captives, who were buried alive in the earth-covered moving van for 16 1/2 hours. The kidnap victims escaped by burrowing out.

It was not until the trial started that the prosecution revealed it would deal with the heat in the van.

"When the prosecution realized it could not introduce psychiatric evidence, it went shopping for another theory and came up with this heat-related illness," said attorney Herbert Yanowitz.

Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan took Wednesday's defense motion under submission. He postponed further proceedings until Monday after the defense said it had no witnesses ready to testify.

Torrijos Lifts Martial Law Decrees

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd said Wednesday Panamanian Gen. Omar Torrijos "kept his promise" by lifting martial law decrees, improving chances the Senate will pass the Panama Canal treaties.

"It certainly appears General Torrijos has kept his word" to the senatorial delegation that met with him in Panama last month, Byrd said.

Byrd released a letter from the general announcing the Council of State last Friday repealed an eight-year-old decree referring to "crimes against constitutional order and the state" and part of a later decree "which suspended constitutional guarantees."

The latter repeal allows public meetings in Panama City and Colon.

Torrijos also told Byrd repeal of press restrictions is under consideration pending a statement of views from the Journalists Union.

Byrd said the council's action "certainly treats some of the concerns expressed by the delegation" about freedoms "basic to the concept of the American people as respects human rights."

He said he has not changed his uncommitted position on the treaties as a result, but that "I think it certainly improves prospects for ratification."

Torrijos' letter told Byrd, "I am keeping my word. Please convey this to your colleagues whom I deeply trust."

Capital Spending Shows Major Gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses spent more money on plants and equipment last summer than in any quarter since 1973, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

However, businesses responding to a Commerce Department survey said their increases in capital spending would be smaller through mid-1978.

The Carter administration is counting on businesses' spending on plants and equipment to keep the economic recovery going and to reduce the unemployment rate of about 7 percent.

In the third quarter, businesses spent 41 percent more than in the second quarter on capital goods such as factories and business equipment. The quarterly increase followed three other strong quarters and marked the largest rise since a similar 4.6 percent increase in the first quarter of 1973.

Economists said a 1.8 percent increase in prices contributed to the third quarter figure but that July through September was still a strong period.

The expanded spending in the third quarter was puzzling to some government officials who had sensed a lack of business confidence during a sluggish summer. Capital spending is usually a sign that businesses are willing to take risks by making long-range investments.

The outlook was dampened, however, by businesses' projections of how much they plan to spend in coming months on capital goods. The Commerce Department said the outlook is for a 1.4 percent increase in the fourth quarter this year, 2.7 percent in the first quarter of 1978 and 2.5 percent in the second quarter.

Actual capital spending has far exceeded business projections throughout the year, indicating that businesses may be underestimating their spending in the survey, economists said.

Capital spending for the full year 1977 is expected to total $137 billion, 13.7 percent above 1976, the report said. After adjustment for inflation, the increase would be 8 percent. That falls below the Carter administration's goals of 9 percent increases in real capital spending through 1981.

Capital spending for the first half of 1978 is planned at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $148.1 billion. That is an increase of 4.7 percent from the second

Talkathon Caller Stumps Governor

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — It worked so well for Jimmy Carter that Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy decided to give it a try, but some Rhode Islanders who called in to the talkathon left Garrahy with his head shaking.

One caller Tuesday, Garrahy was told before taking the phone, was a woman named Janet with a question about schools for the retarded.

"Hello, Janet, this is the governor speaking ... Hello?" he said.

"Hello?" came the response.

"Yes, hello, this is Governor Garrahy, Janet. Did you have a question for me? Janet? Did you have a question for me? Janet?"

"Hello?" said Janet.

"This is Governor Garrahy — can I answer a question for you?" said the governor.

Then came Janet's question: "Who is this?" Garrahy fielded 22 calls on nuclear power, the state lottery, taxes, car inspections and tree removal.

Withholding System Reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers are "lending" the government billions of dollars interest-free because more money is being withheld from their paychecks than they will owe in income taxes at the end of the year, the General Accounting Office says.

Of $27 billion refunded to taxpayers during the 1976 fiscal year, nearly all was due to over-withholding on 1975 taxes, the congressional agency said.

For 1973, the last year for which detailed statistics are available, the GAO said, almost 88 percent of all taxpayers subject to withholding were eligible for refunds. An average of $380 too much was withheld from the paychecks of those taxpayers.

The system was particularly hard on low-income workers, the report continued, noting that "about 97 percent of taxpayers earning under $5,000 had too much money withheld."

The GAO said some steps could be taken to bring withholding more closely in line with the amount of tax actually owed. But the agency acknowledged that surveys have shown that taxpayers overwhelmingly prefer having too much withheld, and getting refunds, than having too little taken out and having to make up the difference when they file their returns.

But the GAO was critical of the system that gives the government use of taxpayer funds without returning any interest to the worker.

"Since overpayments are normally refunded in March or April of the following year, taxpayers are denied the use of some of their income for more than a year," the report said. "By the time they receive their refunds, their current taxes are already being withheld."

In comments appended to the report, the Treasury Department said any withholding system "of necessity is a balancing act" between under-withholding and over-withholding. The present system, it said, works well for the large group of workers who have one job and a steady, constant income.

But the Treasury Department agreed with the GAO that a better job could be done in informing workers of how to scale down his withholding if he feels too much is being taken from his paycheck. The department also said it hopes to propose improvements when President Carter's tax revision package goes to Congress next year. Options that Congress might consider, the GAO said, include quick refunds of money that has been withheld from a worker's paycheck if the worker loses his job, paying interest on money refunded to those who have had too much money withheld, or initiating a system that would give taxpayers more latitude in claiming exemptions.

Installment Debts Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers increased their installment debts by $2.63 billion in October, the largest rise since April, the Federal Reserve said Wednesday.

Credit extended for autos was off slightly for the month, but more buyers took out loans using bank credit cards and other loan sources, the agency said.

Newly extended credit rose $620 million in October after declining $40 million the month before. Liquidations rose $350 million to $17.2 billion.

Rising installment credit is considered an important indicator of consumer confidence and can lead to improved business performance.

The $2.63 billion increase was a stronger showing than the $2.35 billion rise in September and was the largest since a $2.66 billion jump in April. A record was set in March, when the increase was $2.97 billion.

Automobile credit outstanding, which includes both new credit and credit paid off, rose $850 million, compared with an increase of $1.1 billion in September.

However, credit for mobile homes rose $44 million, following a $32 million increase in September; home improvements were up $201 million, compared with $143 million in September.

THANKSGIVINGS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Contrary to popular belief, the first Thanksgiving Day in North America was not the one held in 1621 at the Plymouth Colony in Massachusetts, according to Hallmark historian Sally Hopkins. Two earlier Thanksgivings were a 1578 celebration by English fishermen in Newfoundland and a 1607 observance at the Sir John Popham Colony on the Kennebec River in Maine, she reports.

India Cyclone Toll May Hit 13,500

By The Associated Press
The statistics still roll in, enumerating the victims of a cyclone that struck in southeast India on Nov. 19: 8,375 bodies recovered with a final death toll estimated at 13,500, according to N. J. Kamath, spokesman for the Andhra Pradesh state government.
But the real depth of the tragedy can be measured only in the faces of the survivors — 382,742 of whom are homeless, by the latest count.
They are scattered across the countryside seeking new places to live, food to eat and mourning relatives and friends who perished in the winds and raging floods.

Chief Cites Manpower Shortage

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — A recent decision to withdraw four officers from a certification school was reached because of serious manpower problems in the department, Chief of Police Odis Burrows said in an attempt to quell local rumors concerning the matter.

"Despite the rumors that are being tossed about," Burrows said "the taking of the Childress officers out of the certification school in Wichita Falls recently was not done on the spur of the moment but only after careful consideration."

The chief explained that four local police officers began the certification classes, sponsored by Nortex Planning Commission, to comply with state requirements. The school, which started Nov. 7, is a 13-week course with sessions four hours per day.

"This created a man power shortage within the department in obtaining qualified replacements to work while the officers were attending the school," Burrows said.

Each officer was performing police duties several hours per day in addition to the eight hours required to travel to and from Wichita Falls to attend the classes, the chief explained.

"The officers not attending school, as well as myself, were called on to work around the clock," he added.

Burrows said it appeared to him that this type of situation could not continue for 13 weeks and discussed the matter with City Manager David Galligan. A decision was reached to send the officers to a school in Floydada where certification may be obtained in six weeks.

"The course starts Jan. 15 and runs through Feb. 24," Burrows said. "It is a fully accredited certification session through Texas A&M and Texas Tech universities."

Nortex was advised of the city's decision, and the officers were withdrawn from classes and enrolled in the forthcoming sessions at Floydada.

The island of Santorini was born of violent volcanic eruptions that scientist believe were equal to 1,000 atom bombs.

Q. I am an Army man, 25, married, will retire in 15 years. I have a life insurance and savings, no debts, and am able to save a couple hundred a month. Would it be wise for me to buy some low-priced motor or airline stock? I feel I'm in a position to take chances, rather than go for 7 1/2 percent in savings. I intend to keep the stock for a minimum of two years, unless it advances $2 a share first. In the meantime I would get some dividends. Would I have to pay another commission to sell?

A. Any stock deal which results in a profit is a "wise one." Profits are the name of the game. I'd rather make money on Super-Duper Junk Inc. common stock than lose money in IBM or Kodak.

That old bit about "It doesn't matter whether you win or lose; it's how you play the game" is great stuff for prep school, but it doesn't mean a thing if you're trying to build a stake via speculation in stocks.

The disquieting thing about your letter is not that you want to buy $5 stocks but that you think they are a special profit vehicle just because they sell for $5. I haven't found that so. I've known $5 and $3 stocks that have remained at $5 and at $3 for years — give or take a fractional move either way which would have failed to give you a net profit if you sold. It is NOT, necessarily, easier for a $5 stock to go to $6 than for a $50 stock to go to $60. So don't shop by price. If you feel that specific motor company or airline has something going for it buy it. (I can't even find the low-priced chemical stock you mention.)

You are perfectly correct in saying that you can take chances. At 25, you can do anything you please. Win, lose or draw, you can't get hurt too much. But you've got to have something more than a $5 price tag going for anything you buy. An investor who doesn't even understand the stock table figures may properly own A.T. & T. but if you want to speculate with $5 stocks you ought to have some idea of the odds.

Also disconcerting is your arbitrary "selling" limits: "two years or $2 price advance, whichever comes first." (Sounds like an automobile warranty.) I assure you both your time and price limits mean absolutely nothing. In fact, I doubt that a $2 overall price rise would net you the price of a hot lunch. And as for dividends: the two stocks I could locate have paid no dividends for years.

And, yes, you would pay another commission upon selling.

Q. I am 74, retired, and holding 70 shares of IBM I acquired during my working years. We are getting by on Social Security, but could use more income. Should I sell the IBM? A broker said I should buy his firm's bond fund which yields 8 1/2 percent.

A. Since his firm is one of the large reputable ones, I can't see why you shouldn't buy. Presently, your IBM is paying $700 a year. The bonds would pay you more than twice as much. And what you need now is that additional income.

Dollar Takes Beating In European Markets

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar continued its year-long slide on most European money markets Wednesday, while the price of gold advanced.

The dollar's losses were only marginal in quiet trading, with no new developments following a bout of hectic trading in Frankfurt, Zurich, Paris and London Tuesday.

But a Paris dealer said he believed the market was "just taking a breathing space" before downward pressures on the U.S. currency resume in earnest.

At the root of the dollar's troubles is foreign disappointment over U.S. economic progress.

The only bright spot for the U.S. currency Wednesday was Milan. The dollar bounced up against the lira after dropping Tuesday to its lowest level of the year against the Italian currency. It closed at 876.30 lire against 874.45 Tuesday.

Here is how the dollar fared Wednesday in other markets:

Frankfurt—2.1671 West German marks against 2.1782 Tuesday.

Zurich—2.1265 Swiss francs against 2.1280.

Paris—4.8287 French francs against 4.8387.

Amsterdam—2.3490 Dutch guilders against 2.3580.

In London, it cost $1.8255 to buy a British pound compared to $1.8215 Tuesday.

In Zurich, gold closed at $160.37 an ounce against $159.87 Tuesday. In London, Europe's other major bullion center, gold closed at $160.75 against $159.75.

Egypt Retaliates Against Communists

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt ordered the Soviet Union and four Eastern European countries Wednesday to close their consulates and cultural centers outside Cairo, saying Communist agents were trying to foment opposition to President Anwar Sadat's peace initiatives with Israel.

Egyptian officials were not able to say if a deadline had been given but it was expected the facilities would be closed soon.

The decision by the Egyptian cabinet stopped short of a diplomatic break with the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary and Poland and consulates and cultural centers in the capital were not affected. Bulgaria, Romania and Yugoslavia were excluded from the order.

Meanwhile, King Hussein of Jordan attempted to ease the growing tension among Arabs in the Mideast by making a quick trip to Syria Wednesday to try to mediate differences between Sadat and Syrian President Hafez Assad. The King will fly to Cairo today and then go to Saudi Arabia.

Hussein and Assad met privately for five hours and the King is believed to have urged Assad not to carry his opposition to Sadat's peace moves to the point of no return.

Sources in Damascus said the major topic of discussion was the conference which Sadat has scheduled for next Wednesday in Cairo. Only Israel, the United States and the United Nations have accepted invitations to the meeting. Syria has said it will not attend.

Egypt's latest action against the Soviet Union followed a warning over the weekend that the Soviets "can be punished" for their part in instigating the summit in Tripoli, Libya, by radical Arab states. Sadat has blamed the Soviets for encouraging those countries and creating a rift in Arab ranks.

"At a time when Egypt was mobilizing all its efforts to bring peace in the Middle East, the Soviet Union headed a group whose interest was the continuation of the situation of no war and no peace," said Egyptian Prime Minister Mamdouh Saleem in announcing the decision to paralyze.

He said the cabinet decided to close the cultural centers of the Soviet Union, East Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia in Alexandria, Egypt's second-largest city. Also to be closed in Alexandria were the consulates of the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Poland. Other Soviet consulates were to be closed in Port Said and Aswan.

Saleem attacked the declaration issued at the Tripoli meeting, calling it "an intervention in the internal affairs of Egypt." He said it came "in connection with their call to their agents to move against the Egyptian people's unanimous support for Sadat." He did not cite any actual incidents of subversion.

Egypt broke diplomatic relations with Syria, Libya, South Yemen, Iraq and Algeria on Monday after the summit leaders decided to "freeze" their relations with Egypt and boycott Arab League meetings in Cairo. Iraq walked out of the meeting because it favored stiffer measures against Egypt.

Soviet-Egyptian relations have been on a steady decline for five years. Egypt expelled thousands of Soviet advisers in 1972, abrogated a friendship treaty last year, and two months ago stopped cotton shipments and unilaterally postponed repayment of $4 billion in civilian and military debts.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Butros B. Ghali said Hussein's mediation attempt "is a positive step aiming to reinforce Arab unity and affirm that the squabbles among the Arab countries are not as deep as the enemies would like them to be."

Hussein has tried to remain on the fence, refusing to attend the Cairo talk without full Arab participation but praising Sadat for his courage in launching the initiative with Israel. There was speculation in Damascus that Hussein had suggested to Assad that both Syria and Jordan go to the Cairo meeting as observers.

Hussein has good relations with Saudi Arabia, which financially supports Syria and Egypt, and has a political alliance with Syria.

President Carter has not abandoned his goal of resuming talks in Geneva for an overall Mideast peace settlement and he continues to view a separate Egyptian-Israeli peace settlement unfavorably, press secretary Jody Powell said in Washington.

The comment came a day after Sadat said he would negotiate "through to the end" with Israel along if the other Arab nations in the Middle East conflict refused to participate at Geneva.

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin said in London Wednesday he would not be opposed to signing a separate peace with Egypt on the condition it would be a first step to an overall settlement.

He said Israel was not trying to drive a wedge between Israel's Arab neighbors, Egypt, Jordan and Syria. "Of course, if President Sadat reaches the conclusion that our other neighbors will not join us and he suggests to us the signing of a peace treaty, we would not refuse to do so on an understanding that it would be a first stage."

Powell said Carter's position had not changed since he said at a news conference last week that "a separate peace agreement between Egypt and Israel to the exclusion of the other parties is not desirable."

The United States also announced Wednesday it will provide Egypt with $170 million worth of wheat under a new Food for Peace Program agreement.

The U.S. Agriculture Department said the agreement will allow Egypt to buy about 1.5 million metric tons of U.S. wheat, which is about 55 million bushels. The wheat would be delivered through Sept. 30.

Large Deficits Still Plague Postal Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Large deficits that continue to plague the U.S. Postal Service make it more likely that Saturday mail deliveries will be stopped and small post offices closed.

The Postal Service announced that it ran $652 million in the red for the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30. Three months earlier, the financially troubled agency predicted a deficit of $400 million. The Postal Service also increased its estimate of the deficit for the current fiscal year from $554 million to $1.3 billion.

Social Security Change Fails

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes on November 28 and 29, the days immediately following the semirecess that began in early November.

HOUSE
SOCIAL SECURITY Failed, 183 for and 209 against, to insist that the Social Security "earnings limitation" be lifted at age 65. As a result of this vote, House and Senate conferees on HR 9346 are likely to go along with Senate-passed language lifting the limitation at age 70. That will mean that when pensioners reached 70 they can earn as much as they like without having their monthly Social Security entitlement reduced by Uncle Sam. The vote was on a motion to instruct House conferees to insist on the House-passed 65-years-old threshold.

Rep. Bill Archer (R-Tex.), sponsor of the motion, said the earnings limitation at 65 costs society "the service of wise and experienced workers who simply cannot afford to work for substantial pay because, if they do, they will lose their valued Social Security benefits."

Rep. James Burke (D-Mass.), an opponent, said that if Congress lowers the threshold to 65 it "would have to levy tax of $3 billion to $3.5 billion on the business firms of this country...to finance this provision."

Members voting "yea" favored removing the earnings limitation at age 65.

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), Charles Wilson (D-2), James Collins (R-3), Ray Roberts (D-4), Bill Archer (R-7), Jack Hightower (D-13), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Omar Burleson (D-17), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Bob Gammage (D-22), and Abraham Kazen (D-23) and Rep. Manuel Lujan (R-1) voted "yea."

Reps. Jim Mattox (D-5), Bob Eckhardt (D-8), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), James Wright (D-12), John Young (D-14), Barbara Jordan (D-18), George Mahon (D-19) and Dale Milford (D-24) and Rep. Harold Runnels (D-2) voted "nay."

Reps. Olin Teague (D-6), W. R. Poage (D-11), Richard White (D-16) and Robert Krueger (D-21) did not vote.

AMTRAK Voted, 258 for and 138 against, in favor of increasing by $18 million the supplemental appropriation for Amtrak — an amount sufficient to delay until at least March proposed cutbacks in passenger service. Major routes such as the Floridian apparently were given a lease on life by this vote. The vote, on a motion to recommit, came during consideration of the conference report on HR 9375, a fiscal 1978 appropriations bill. It approved $18 million instead of proposed lower increments.

Rep. Albert Gore Jr. (D-Tenn.), a supporter, said: "We need a national rail service for passengers. We can have one if we go about it in an intelligent manner."

Rep. John McFall (D-Calif.), and opponent, said he favored an $8 million rather than $18 million supplemental appropriation. "Now this extra $10 million is not really going to provide the opportunity to restore service that everyone believes will be provided," he said.

Members voting "yea" favored an extra $18 million for Amtrak. Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Poage, Wright, Hightower, de la Garza, Jordan, Gonzalez, Kazen and Lujan voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Roberts, Archer, Young, Burleson, Mahon, Gammage, Milford and Runnels voted "nay."

Teague, White and Krueger did not vote.

ABORTION Approved, 44 for and 21 against, language on federal funding of abortions which was a bit stricter than previous Senate language. This was yet another attempt at compromise with the House, which for months has been taking a harder line against the funding of abortions under Medicaid. This vote was of the conference report on HR 7555, a fiscal 1978 appropriations bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. After it occurred, the House rejected the compromise language.

HAITIANS PROTEST TREATMENT

Rightist Refugees Claim U.S. Asylum Denied

By TOM TIEDE

MIAMI (NEA) — Late last summer a boat bearing 101 Haitian refugees landed at the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba. They told of fierce government repression in their homeland. They spoke of totalitarian brutality. Despite their appeals for asylum, however, U.S. authorities sent all but four home.

The incident received only scant notice in most of America. But it was registered as a most alarming event in Miami's Haitian community. The Haitians believe the deportation of the refugees was another indication that the U.S. policy regarding political asylum is outdated, unfair and cruelly prejudicial.

The criticism is this: while America has historically accepted almost all exiles from Communist states, it is increasingly reluctant to serve as a haven for refugees from right-wing dictatorships. No Cuban refugee has ever been refused, for example, but almost all exiles from friendly Haiti are turned away.

Haitians here say their charge can be verified by a reading of official records. They say it is not just by chance that nine of 10 exiles from leftist states are granted U.S. asylum, while an equal proportion of exiles from such countries as Haiti, Chile and the Philippines are refused all but momentary entry.

Haitians say the imbalance is an entirely arbitrary one. Jean-Bart Rulx of Miami's Haitian Refugee Service says U.S. law forbids bias in the immigration procedure. "Everyone is supposed to be given equal consideration. But that's an illusion. Political and diplomatic considerations are the deciding factors."

The critics cite statistics regarding South Vietnam as an illustration of the alleged discrimination. Prior to the Communist victory there, South Vietnam's exiles were seldom allowed political shelter in the U.S. Since the Communist takeover, though, the U.S. has become haven to more than 150,000 Vietnamese.

Then there is Chile. Thousands of residents have fled that country since the imposition of a military government in 1973. Many of the exiles have asked for asylum in America, and the United Nations has urged all nations to help out; yet the U.S. has granted legal residence status to only a handful of the applicants.

But of all the examples, Haitian activists in Miami say their own nation is the most revealing. According to figures compiled by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, nearly 500 Haitian refugees have landed in Florida in the last three years. Of these, all but about 60 have been shipped back home.

"God only knows what happens to them when they get there," says Jean-Bart Rulx. "We expect some may be killed. That should not be surprising. I myself am a refugee from Haiti, and the reason I left was for my own safety. Four years ago my father disappeared. Just disappeared. That's the way it is on the island."

U.S. officials do not agree that returned Haitians face danger. Edward Sweeney, INS director for this region, says that State Department people sometimes accompany the Haitians home "just to make sure." American authorities who accompanied the Guantanamo exiles to Haiti say the returnees were treated well.

Sweeney says Haiti "is not Russia." He says in fact that "politics have very little to do with the Haitian refugee situation." Sweeney believes most Haitians who come to America are looking for an economic rather than a political haven: "They want work, and that is not a valid reason to allow them residency."

Haitian activists do not deny that exiles are looking for jobs. Raymond Ramirez, who "escaped from Haiti two years ago," says poverty is part of the repression back home: "A common laborer makes less than $1.50 a day. Meanwhile, President Jean-Claude Duvalier lives like a king, with millions in the banks."

President Duvalier is the son of former Haitian despot Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier. The father died in 1971. U.S. authorities believe the son is less of a tyrant; Haitian exiles say Baby Doc is not as overtly savage as was his father, but he still follows the same formula for maintaining permanent power.

Refugees say political debate is not allowed in Haiti. Rulx says the elections are eye-wash. As for Duvalier himself, the exiles tell horror stories of him gleefully driving his car into helpless pedestrians. "Duvalier is as bad as Idi Amin," says Raymond Ramirez. "Would the U.S. send Ugandan refugees back home?"

For some Haitian exiles, Ramirez included, going home is not now even a consideration. Hence they have grouped together to try to force the U.S. to let them stay here.

Communists Cooperate In Filming

BERLIN (AP) — Off-duty American soldiers played Nazi SS men and workers from Turkey were Polish Jews in a television saga filmed here despite problems with politics and potatoes.

West Berlin, with the help of East Germany, starred as the Warsaw Ghetto. "The Berliners don't like to hear this, but it turns out that because of its special problems Berlin is the only European city today that actually looks like the Warsaw of those years," said Pia Arnold, an associate producer for Titus Productions Inc. of New York.

Rail Station Used
One scene, of Jews being shipped to a concentration camp, was filmed next to the Berlin Wall at an unused railroad station. Like all rail facilities, it's owned and run by East Germany.

"They have been very cooperative," said Arnold of the East Germans. "They have been about the easiest of all to deal with. They are interested in having this story told."

The story, of three Jewish families during the Nazi persecution, was shot by Titus as a nine-hour saga titled "Holocaust," which NBC hopes to air in the United States over four nights next spring.

Potatoes Noisy
The station scene was filmed with occasional cries for quiet aimed at a little building nearby where potatoes were being dumped out of bags for sale in West Berlin.

The station is one of several isolated or obscure areas of West Berlin where politics has left standing buildings and grounds from an earlier era. Not far away are the battered tenements of the working class Wedding district, where the movie company is shooting a scene set in the Nazi-organized Jewish ghetto of Warsaw.

To move the shooting from Austria, where the rest of the film was made, producers had to negotiate their way through the legal and bureaucratic tangle that has grown up over the years in a city whose affairs involve two German governments, a city government and the civilian and military governments of the three Western Allies who still theoretically occupy West Berlin.

Real Soldiers Best
Strict controls on weapons movements made it difficult to bring in the rifles carried by soldiers in the movie. The soldiers themselves presented other problems.

"We've found that real soldiers make the best soldiers," says Arnold. "Other people don't handle things properly."

But no West German troops are allowed in West Berlin and neither West German nor Allied commanders were eager to see their men in Nazi uniforms. The solution was to give the roles to U.S. soldiers stationed in West Berlin but on leave or otherwise off duty.

Many Seek Film Work
Before that was worked out, the moviemakers found themselves swamped when they issued a call for extras to play both Nazi guards and Jewish victims. Many of the extras eventually were drawn from the dark-haired, dark-eyed ranks of the Turks and other nationalities in West Berlin's large foreign worker population.

East Germany provided a small train for use in the filming, but there still were some frustrations with the Reichsbahn, the state railroad. "They wanted to turn the train around the other day and it took two and a half hours," says Perry Massey, an NBC program executive watching the filming.

Santa To Appear At Center Party

Santa Claus will be bringing a big bundle of toys to the annual Rodgers Community Center Christmas party Saturday at 2 p.m.

The party, especially for the children of the Arnett-Benson neighborhood, is being sponsored by the United Mexican-American Students and the Social Welfare Club, both organizations at Texas Tech.

The two clubs are gathering donations of toys, fruits and candy for the festivities. Individuals or businesses wishing to make contributions may call David Lopez at 742-7253 or Petra Benavides at 744-7625.

week ended Friday were crude oil 5,696,000 barrels, residual fuel oil 1,078,000, distillate fuel oil 122,000 and others 512,000, a total of 7,408,000 barrels.

California imports were crude oil 694,000 barrels, and products 52,000, a total of 746,000 barrels, for a grand total of 8,154,000.

For the four weeks, daily imports east of California were crude oil 5,202,000 barrels, residual fuel oil 573,000, distillate fuel oil 60,000, and others 212,000, for a total of 6,047,000 barrels.

For the four weeks, California daily imports averaged for crude oil 748,000 barrels, products 83,000, a total of 831,000 barrels, for a grand total of 6,878,000 barrels.

Exxon Studies Earnings View For Long Term

NEW YORK (AP)—Exxon Corp. said Wednesday that increasing oil production on Alaska's North Slope will "make an important contribution to next year's earnings."

Chairman C.C. Garvin Jr. also told oil analysts the company may boost its capital and exploration spending for the next four years and that Exxon should be able to begin drilling off the East Coast by early January.

He didn't predict how 1977 earnings would compare to the $2.64 billion, or $5.90 a share, earned in 1976. As previously reported, earnings in 1977's first nine months were down 5 percent to $1.86 billion, or $4.14 a share, though revenues were up 10 percent to $42.93 billion.

Exxon currently is studying the timing for drilling its first well in its Atlantic leases off the East Coast and expects to have all the government permits needed "to begin our exploration efforts by Jan. 3," he said.

But he cautioned that one factor that could complicate the drilling plans is a pending appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court by New York State's Suffolk County, from a decision upholding the oil leases there.

"The Supreme Court is expected to decide early next year whether it will hear the Suffolk County appeal, and it is possible that we will delay drilling until the court renders its decision," he said.

Garvin said Exxon's capital and exploration spending, announced last year to total $22 billion over the four years through 1980, is "on schedule." Exxon currently is updating its longer-term investment plans, he said, and expects to continue the record level of spending. "In fact," he added, "we anticipated some increase in the level over the next planning period."

Oil Firms To Explore In Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Two U.S. oil firms, Atlantic Richfield Co. and Amerada Hess Corp., signed a contract with the government oil enterprise Wednesday to explore a 300-mile stretch of Chile's continental platform.

The contract calls for an exploration phase of five years with investments in equipment and supplies of about $11 million, then an exploitation period of 30 more years if the exploration is successful.

The area covered in the contract extends south of the island of Chiloe, terminating about 350 miles north of the Straits of Magellan. The state oil enterprise, known as ENAP, is already exploring in the Straits.

Louis F. Favis, a vice president of Atlantic Richfield who came to Chile for the signing, said the exploration conditions would be comparable to those in waters off Alaska and in the North Sea.

Strike Continues In England, Fatal Fires Plague London

LONDON (AP) — An elderly woman and a two-year-old boy died in fires Wednesday, the 23rd day of a national strike by Britain's 33,000 regular firemen, police reported.

The woman, 81-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Charlton, perished in a London fire. The boy died when his family's bungalow near King's Lynn, 100 miles north of London, was destroyed by a fire.

Neighbors rescued the tot's four-year-old brother, police said.

The fatalities raised the number of fire-related deaths since firemen launched their unprecedented strike Nov. 14 to 65, which Home Office officials said was about average for the time of year despite the strike.

Thousands of British troops, mobilized to take over firefighting duties, continued to battle the nation's fires, including a big blaze that erupted early Wednesday at a 28-bedroom hotel in the Clydeside resort of Helensburgh on Scotland's southwest coast.

Officials said the hotel was badly damaged in the pre-dawn fire. No injuries were reported.

Britain's firemen walked off the job when the government refused to meet their demands for a 30 percent pay increase. Firemen earn an average of $115 per week. The government has refused to hike wages more than its 10 percent anti-inflation ceiling.

House Bucking Carter, Senate On B-1 Bombers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is bucking President Carter and the Senate by insisting that $462 million be spent to build two more B-1 bombers.

The House approved the money for construction of a fifth and sixth model of the expensive bomber, even though Carter wants to scrap the project. The Senate has agreed with the president. The issue now goes back to the Senate.

VANCE COMMENTS—Secretary of State Cyrus Vance adjusts his eyeglasses during a news conference Tuesday in Washington. Vance commented on a variety of subjects including his upcoming visit to the Middle East.

Vance Visits NATO On Way To Mideast

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, bound for the Middle East to promote Egypt's peace plan among dubious Arabs, began his diplomatic mission Wednesday with a visit to NATO headquarters.

High U.S. officials said Vance would discuss defense issues with the United States' Atlantic alliance partners before beginning his trip to Israel and five Arab capitals Friday. He also will meet with Greek and Turkish officials on Cyprus.

Vance would not discuss his departure or disclosure that the United States believes a Middle East peace settlement "is possible without a Geneva peace conference."

The peace initiative by Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's acceptance of a peace conference in Cairo next week has begun "an irreversible process," Vance said Tuesday, breaking down "psychological barriers which have impeded progress toward peace in the Middle East for three decades."

"We should seize this opportunity," he said. "We hope others will join it."

Vance said he would put the weight of the United States behind the Israeli-Egyptian talks. He will travel first to Cairo, then visit Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and Saudi Arabia.

Despite the intense interest in Vance's role in Middle East developments, officials accompanying the secretary on his flight from Washington concentrated Wednesday on issues before the NATO meeting.

They said the Carter administration hoped to get a decision from the other NATO allies on possible deployment of the neutron bomb being developed by the United States.

The bomb is only useful as a defensive weapon in Europe, the officials said, and if there is no NATO demand for the weapon the United States probably will not go ahead with the program.

Vance has brought no proposals on the Cyprus problem with him, reporters were told, but he has scheduled meetings with the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey today and hopes the talks will provide hope for progress on the dispute.

Recent statements by Turkish officials have been positive, U.S. officials said, and the United States does not expect that Turkey will impose any ultimatum or expel American forces from the 26 U.S. bases in Turkey.

Begin Says Israel 'Willing' To Ink Separate Egypt Pact

TEL AVIV (AP) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin said Wednesday that Israel is willing to sign a separate peace agreement with Egypt and would not object to excluding the Soviet Union from efforts toward an over-all Mideast settlement.

The Israeli leader also said his government wants to meet with King Hussein of Jordan. "When we talk with King Hussein, we shall make him several offers," Begin told reporters before leaving for Israel after a six-day visit to Britain.

Begin did not elaborate on the offers, which apparently concern Israel's occupation of the West Bank of the Jordan River, seized from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war.

Israeli and Jordanian leaders have not scheduled a meeting. But there was speculation in Damascus, where Hussein met with Syrian President Hafez Assad, that the King suggested both Syria and Jordan attend Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace talks next week in Cairo. Israel has agreed to be there.

"If President Sadat reaches the conclusion that our other neighbors (Syria and Jordan) will not join us and he suggests to us the signing of a peace treaty, we would not refuse to do so on an understanding that it would be a first stage," Begin said.

Begin said the Soviets played a "destructive role" in the region by opposing Sadat's peace initiatives and siding with "the wildest men in the Middle East." He said he was referring to leaders of Libya, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

"If Egypt should suggest to us to have a Geneva Conference without the Soviet Union we shall not object," Begin told an airport news conference after arriving in Tel Aviv.

"What constructive role is there for the Soviets?" he asked rhetorically.

The Israeli leader said prospects for reconvening the Geneva talks, which are cochaired by the Soviet Union and the United States, are good despite Sadat's separate diplomacy with Israel and subsequent moves by Algeria, Iraq, Libya, South Yemen and Syria to isolate the Egyptian leader.

Begin showed no ill effects at either news conference from the stomach upset that forced him to cancel all engagements Tuesday.

At the 40-minute session with reporters in London, he criticized the Common Market countries for their declaration favoring the creation of an independent Palestinian state as part of a Mideast settlement.

"I appeal to the Common Market countries in Europe not to make any more statements or declarations that might affect the peace effort," Begin said.

He said Europeans, more than anyone else, should understand what is at stake.

"Between the Atlantic Ocean and the Volga there is one unlimited cemetery of millions of Jews," he said, cautioning Europeans against doing anything to "endanger the lives of the men, women and children of Israel."

The prime minister also asked Britain to intercede with the Soviet Union on behalf of Jewish prisoners of conscience, saying: "Our people will not rest until every person who wants to leave can do so."

And closer to home, he asked Britain's help in persuading Syrian President Hafez Assad to allow 800 Jewish families living "in permanent fear" to emigrate.

Begin, who once was hunted by the British in Palestine as a guerrilla, thanked Prime Minister James Callaghan and his government for their "wonderful hospitality" during the first official visit to Britain by an Israeli premier.

Hussein's Attempts Fail To Heal Arab Schism

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — King Hussein met for five hours Wednesday with President Hafez Assad, but Damascus radio indicated the Jordanian monarch did not succeed in his bid to mend the Arab rift over how to approach negotiations with Israel.

The radio said Assad rejected "all methods of political and diplomatic action" to reconcile Syria and Egypt, war allies against Israel who now are at odds over Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace overtures to the Jewish state. A continuing search for Arab reconciliation will take Hussein to Cairo and Assad to Saudi Arabia on Thursday. Hussein will visit Saudi Arabia later in the week.

The radio said, "Syria stressed the importance of firmly facing the policy of surrender expressed through the capitulatory visit" by Sadat to Israel Nov. 19-21.

The mission by Hussein, whose nation is the other Arab "confrontation state" bordering Israel, was announced only after it was under way. He flew to a military airport near Damascus and was greeted without ceremony by Assad.

The two leaders went immediately to Assad's residence for five hours of private talks, where Hussein is believed to have urged Assad not to carry opposition to Sadat's peace drive to the point of no return.

There was speculation here that Hussein suggested both Syria and Jordan attend Sadat's peace talks in Cairo, to begin Dec. 14.

Hussein flew back to Amman, his capital, Wednesday evening for an overnight rest before continuing to Cairo, where Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said he would be met by Sadat on Thursday. It said he would then go to Saudi Arabia.

The official Saudi news agency reported from Jidda that Assad would go there Thursday to talk with King Khaled on the Syrian-Egyptian dispute. Sources said Saudi Arabia, chief Arab bankroller of both nations, considers Sadat's peace moves tactically unwise. But the Saudis have refrained from sharp criticism of the Egyptian leader.

Hussein's flight to Damascus preceded by less than 48 hours the Cairo arrival of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who also will visit Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel on a Middle East tour to drum up support for Sadat.

Sources said a major topic of the Assad-Hussein discussion was Sadat's Dec. 14 Cairo conference. Shortly after Sadat's invitation, Israel, the United States and the United Nations agreed to go. But, Jordan said it would attend only if other Arab states did so and Syria said it would not participate.

Instead, Assad took part in an anti-Sadat summit in Tripoli, Libya, last week. Syria, the Palestinian guerrillas and three other hardline Arab states agreed to "freeze" relations with Cairo to protest Sadat's Nov. 19-21 visit to Jerusalem.

Sadat responded Monday by severing diplomatic relations with Syria and the three other countries — Algeria, Libya and South Yemen. Egypt also broke ties with Iraq, which walked out of the Tripoli summit because it favored stiffer measures against Egypt.

While Syrian newspapers called on all Arab leaders to fully implement Tripoli's anti-Sadat declaration, the Jordanian press "deplored the unprecedented deterioration in inter-Arab relations."

Amman papers described Hussein's tour as a "rescue mission" and said "the national duty is to stop the deterioration by a common action."

Hussein has not taken sides in the Egyptian-Syrian dispute. He retains his ties with Egypt, is bound to Syria in a political, military and economic coordination pact and enjoys close ties with Saudi Arabia.

The king worked his way back into the good graces of other Arab leaders after a period of ostracism for his bloody 1970 crackdown on Palestinian guerrillas in Jordan.

Kissing Officer Not Allowed

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Slipping a quick kiss on a lady police officer cost Jimmy Fortner $51.

Fortner, 24, pleaded no contest Tuesday in District Court to a misdemeanor charge of assault and battery.

Officer Perri Burnett said Fortner kissed her as she sat in her police cruiser after stopping his car in October. Charges of running a red light and driving under the influence of alcohol are pending in city court.

A second Tulsa man also faces a misdemeanor charge in a similar kissing incident and is scheduled for trial Monday.

Cordoba
 for your comparison to the down-sized GM intermediates. You'll find the '78 Cordoba has significant advantages. Advantages that make '78 Cordoba a remarkable value. A longer wheel base (114.9") and more roominess (380.8 cu. ins.) than Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Olds Cutless Calais, Pontiac Grand Prix or Buick Regal. You'll find '78 Cordoba has more of what you're looking for with so many more features and options that are standard equipment.
The ultimate personal car from Chrysler

Kenya, Key U.S. Ally In Black Africa, Fears Somali Attack

By ROGER MANN
Pacific News Service

Brandishing bows and arrows and spears and shields, thousands of colorfully dressed Kenyans of the nomadic camel-herding Somali tribe have held loyalty rallies this month in six dusty backwater outposts in the remotest outreaches of Northern Kenya.

There is widespread fear here that Somali — now battling Ethiopia for control of Ethiopia's eastern Ogaden region — will next turn its guns on Kenya, whose vast northeastern desert region is inhabited primarily by ethnic Somali nomads.

Kenya — a key American ally in black Africa — has reportedly played a crucial role in dissuading the U.S. from providing weapons to aid Somalia in its war with Soviet-backed Ethiopia, which has set the Horn of Africa aflame. Somalia, until recently the Soviet Union's stronger ally in Africa, has just cancelled its friendship treaty with the Soviets and closed down Soviet ports and bases there. Somalia's ability to launch an attack on Kenya may depend largely on its success against Ethiopia in the Ogaden. And it may not want to risk Western intervention on the side of Kenya, especially since it is now seeking Western arms after breaking with the Soviet.

But Somalia has not given up its dream of a "Greater Somalia" that would encompass all the estimated four million Somalia-speaking people, now separated by colonial-designated boundaries in Somalia, Ethiopia, Kenya and the new tiny port Republic of Djibouti.

Praising the Kenyan government and lashing out at the expansionist dreams of Somali President Siad Barre's regime, the Somali demonstrators tried to convince their fellow countrymen that if Somalia should attack Kenya, they would not be a fifth column — but instead would eagerly shed blood to help defend Kenya's territorial integrity.

"We're holding these demonstrations because we don't want an Ogaden here in Kenya," said Mohammed Osman Said, a Somali member of the Kenya Parliament from Moyale, an isolated outpost on the Ethiopian border. In July, just across the frontier from Moyale, Mogadishu-backed Somali insurgents began occupying much of Ethiopia's Sidamo Province, touching off the Ogaden War.

From Independence Day in 1963 until 1967, Somalia, which shares a 400-mile border with Kenya, armed and abetted secessionist Kenyan Somali guerrillas in an ill-fated struggle called the Shifta War.

But though their political leaders and economic elites have since rejected the concept of a "Great Somalia," Kenya's 400,000 Somalis — who make up just three percent of the country's population — are nonetheless hard-pressed to prove they are loyal Kenyan citizens.

Because the outbreak of the Shifta War coincided with Kenyan independence, Kenyan Somalis have never been secure or fully accepted by many of their countrymen.

Police harassment of Somalis, long commonplace in Kenya, has increased markedly since the Ogaden War broke out. In Eastleigh, Nairobi's working-class Somali ghetto, club-swinging police have been combing the area almost weekly, detaining up to 100 people at a time in what they describe as "normal house-to-house swoops."

Those who can produce Kenyan identity cards of alien registration certificates are usually released, but anyone without documents suspected of being from Somalia is jailed or fined and then deported. In tolerant Kenya there are thousands of refugees from the Soviet KGB-influenced days of Siad Barre's police state.

Last month Kenya's vice president, Daniel arap Moi, lashed out at Kenyan Somalis, saying that those found to have sympathies with Mogadishu would be expelled. The vice president added that "The government had found it necessary to register Kenyans of the Somali ethnic group to make them easily identifiable by our security force."

On several occasions other high-ranking Kenyans have charged that Somalia is recruiting Kenyan Somalis for the Ogaden War, and Somalis in Nairobi say that if their Kenya identity card lists their clan as Ogaden, inquiring Kenyan policemen will sometimes beat them. Ogaden is one of the largest Somali clans in Kenya as well as in the Ethiopia war zone.

The Kenyan press has also begun identifying by tribe any Somali charge with a crime, which is rarely done with the country's other ethnic groups. "I couldn't print anything favorable about the Somalis now," one Nairobi editor said recently.

But despite the protestations of leading Somali citizens here, the Kenyan government may have good reason to suspect the loyalty of many ethnic Somalis.

According to a former Peace Corps volunteer who spent two years in Kenya's Somali-speaking Wajir District, "With the exception of the politicians, a few rich businessmen and those who live here in Nairobi, I never met one ordinary Somali who wouldn't have preferred to see his land governed from Mogadishu than from Nairobi."

"Kenya doesn't care about us, so why should we care about Kenya? I'm a Somali first," says an uneducated nomad's son who now ekes out a living here as a petty trader.

The lack of a Kenyan identity among the country's Somalis was fostered by the British, who sealed off the predominantly Somali Northern Frontier District (NFD) during colonial times and wouldn't allow anyone to leave or enter the area without a pass. It was actually easier for a Somali from the NFD to visit Mogadishu than Nairobi.

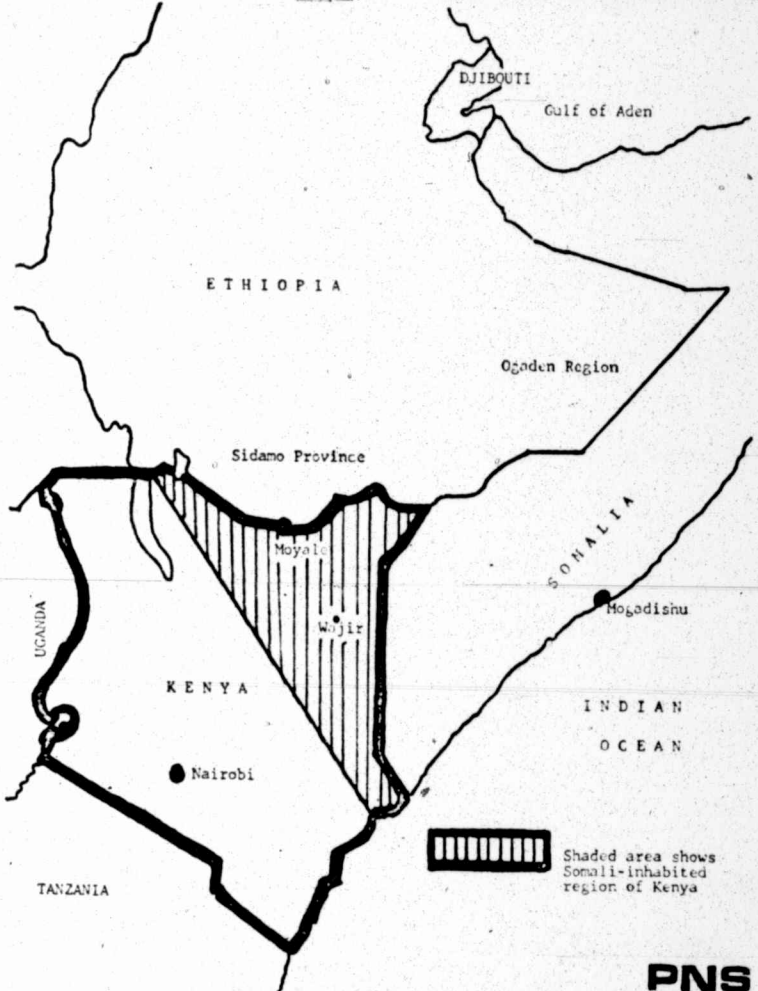

The year before Kenyan independence the British nominated a joint Canadian-Nigerian team to assess the will of Kenya's Somalis, and they reported that 88 percent of the people in the NFD wanted to have grouped the Somalis, a fine-featured Cushitic people, with the other Kenyan tribes, and outside the NFD Somalis were sent to schools, hospitals and prisons set aside for the colony's Asians rather than to those designated for Kenya's other indigenous African peoples.

Kenya's current government may still resent the Somalis' formerly privileged status. If a Somali wants a Kenyan passport, for example, he must fill out the cumbersome form required for those who claim Kenyan citizenship but are not indigenous Africans — namely Europeans, Asians, Arabs and Somalis.

Some unvarnished Somalis who sincerely want to be accepted as ordinary Kenyan citizens partially blame themselves for their plight. As one U.S.-educated Somali civil servant said, "The British used to praise the proud noble Somalis, and we took advantage of our special status instead of suffering the full oppression of our Bantu brothers. Now look. We're still just a bunch of illiterate nomads having a hard time justifying why we should share fully in the fruits of independence."

He added that Kenyan Somalis are so involved in sectional, factional and clan disputes that the community hasn't yet produced any credible leaders who are capable or bold enough to give the country's Somalis any political influence or even a unified voice.

"Between the confusing calls of Mogadishu expansionism, our own lack of leadership and Kenya's increasing persecution, we Somalis are caught in the middle," the civil servant said.

Few Nutrients Found In Test Of Diet Fad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three "well known" brands of liquid protein provided "close to zero actual protein" in tests on laboratory animals, a Food and Drug Administration spokesman said Wednesday.

Rats fed the "extremely poor" quality liquid protein as part of a full, balanced diet stopped growing and lost weight, while rats that received protein from casein, a milk derivative, grew normally, FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said.

The brands were not identified. Pines said the agency believes they were "no worse than any others."

The FDA last week proposed mandatory warning labels on liquid protein products to advise overweight persons not to go on the modified fast without medical supervision. Pines said the agency is looking into reports of 32 deaths and 110 injuries among persons on the diet.

The agency is planning another test in which rats will be fattened and then force-fed only a small amount of liquid protein "to simulate the experience of what these people (on the diet) are going through," Pines said.

Arnold Gans, president of Controlled Drugs Inc., of Port Reading, N.J., a major manufacturer of liquid protein, acknowledged that liquid protein is very low in eight essential amino acids. But he said it is very high in amino acid nitrogen that is needed to preserve lean body mass while losing fat.

Gans, whose firm sells $8 million worth of its E.M.F. formula each year to hospitals, clinics, doctors as well as over-the-counter, said his formula has stood up to tests by independent researchers.

He said the FDA's campaign in recent weeks against liquid protein "has effectively killed over-the-counter sales, which as far as I'm concerned should be killed. This belongs in the hands of the doctors."

"This tragedy of deaths is an error of omission, not commission," said Gans, adding that the dieters need vitamin and mineral supplements as well as regular visits to their physicians.

He said millions of overweight Americans may have been scared away from the diet. They will return to amphetamines and hormone injections to lose weight, "and that is going to be a bigger tragedy," he said.

Pines said the FDA also is "looking at ways to get accurate information on how many people are on this diet, because we don't now know."

Study Shows Aspirin Aids Male Patients

BOSTON (AP) — Aspirin can protect male surgery patients — but not female ones — from forming blood clots in their veins, a common and sometimes fatal complication of hospital care, a new study shows.

Among men who underwent hip surgery, those who took four aspirin tablets a day had only a third as many cases of dislodged blood clots floating through their veins, the study said.

Such clots, common among surgery patients over 40, can be fatal if they become lodged in the lungs. About 47,000 people die from this in the United States each year.

"This is the first rigorous, scientific documentation that aspirin does provide protection against the development of blood clots in a high-risk group of patients," Dr. William H. Harris, who directed the study, said in an interview.

A report on the research, conducted at Massachusetts General Hospital, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute is conducting a study in 30 institutions around the nation to see if aspirin can prevent heart attacks by preventing formation of clots. The study involves 4,500 patients who have already had one heart attack.

In the Massachusetts study, four of 23 men receiving aspirin developed blood clots compared with 14 of 25 men who took inactive, substitute pills called placebos. All the men were over 40, and all had undergone surgery to have their hip joints replaced.

However, the study showed that the aspirin treatment works only for men. Among women, the risk remained the same, whether or not they took aspirin. The doctors could not explain this difference.

None of the patients who took part in the study died from blood clots. Ordinarily, about half the people who have hip surgery develop clots, and Harris said the odds of death from this are about one in 50.

Surgery patients are now sometimes given blood thinning agents to prevent clots, Harris said, but this medicine can also slow healing.

This makes aspirin an important new treatment, he said. "If you can get protection using an uncomplicated and relatively safe medicine that's quite cheap and easy to manage, it's a great advantage."

An editorial in the noted medical journal called the findings "of great interest and potential importance."

He said the surgeon general, Dr. Julius Richmond, is forming a work group from several government health agencies to coordinate research, epidemiology and statistics about liquid protein.

The syrupy liquid is derived from un-cured cowhide, beef tendon or pork skin. The diet started in 1971, but only came in vogue last year when Dr. Robert Linn of Philadelphia popularized it in his book, "The Last Chance Diet."

The book has sold 2.5 million copies. Linn said Wednesday he has supervised 3,000 obese patients on the diet "and never had any type of medical problem of significance. That can't be luck."

Linn said he uses Controlled Drug's formula

Race Record Challenge Described By Runner

By BRUCE MAXWELL
Pacific News Service

It was just 8:30 a.m., but the distant mountains already were shimmering through the heat waves that rose from the floor of Death Valley. As I slapped Tate Miller's hand we exchanged places — he crawled out of the back of our support van and began running. I eased myself onto the mattress he had just vacated.

We had been going through this exchange ritual every half-hour since our 4 a.m. departure from Badwater, a pond of scummy salt water that, at 270 feet below sea level, is the lowest point in the United States. Our destination was the 14,495-foot summit of Mt. Whitney, 144 road and trail miles away.

We planned to continue these relays, leap-frogging across 133 miles that included Death Valley, Panamint Valley, the intervening Panamint Mountains and the Eastern Sierra foothills, until the end of the road at Whitney Portal. From there, we would hike up the 11-mile Mt. Whitney trail together. All of this was to be done against the clock, running continuously from the 4 a.m. start until we both touched the summit plaque.

First Tried In 1973

This race course was first created and run in 1973 by English adventurer Ken Crutchlow and San Franciscan Pax Beale. Their time of 54 hours was the record until September 1974, when Tate and I lowered it by three hours. It was our own record, which had stood for three years, that we were attempting to break.

Why put ourselves through such an ordeal?

For me ego is certainly a factor, but there is more. I find there are insights that come only with complete debilitation, when defensive mechanisms fall by the wayside as exhaustion approaches. And I crave and seek out the few unusual and untried physical exploits and tests that remain in the late 20th century.

But for now, our main concern was to get out of Death Valley before the sun rose high enough to saturate the still air with its August heat. During our half-hour shifts we were covering about 3.3 miles by running a mile every nine minutes and five seconds. We ran on the road as it wound along the eastern side of the valley, following the contours of the mountain flanks that spilled onto the valley floor.

Magnet For Adventurers

Death Valley, the mystique associated with its name is well earned. It has attracted adventurers ever since it claimed the lives of early California settlers searching for a short cut to the gold fields. Looking westward across the valley, I saw miles of flat, dry, cracked mud. Intermittent sagebrush and occasional wooden crosses marking primitive gravesites offered the only respite from the glistening flatness until mountains, rising abruptly, defined the far side of the valley floor.

The temperature was rising as Tate and I continued our relayed running. At 10:23, when we completed the 42 miles to Stovepipe Wells, the ground temperature was 125 degrees. High, wispy cirrus clouds had helped filter the intensity of the sun.

It was my turn to run as we began to leave Death Valley by climbing over 4,956-foot Towne's Pass. My left ankle, broken twice within six months before, began to swell and throb. I made a mental note to take an aspirin along with the open-faced peanut butter and honey sandwich I was eating every other break. These gooey, calorie-rich sandwiches were to be the mainstay of my solid food diet during the run.

The road over the pass seemed to go on forever. Our pace slowed, but neither Tate nor I wanted to be the first to walk. The bond that grows between two people as they share an ordeal does not preclude competition; my ego and competitive drive kept me running as the grade steepened.

The 4,000-foot marker was just ahead as I climbed out of the van to begin another turn. My hands were so cramped I couldn't even squeeze a water-soaked sponge over my head. Knowing I'd never be able to run for my entire half hour, I suggested we begin 15-minute turns. Mercifully, Tate agreed.

A couple of shifts later, we finally made it over the crest. Reverting to half-hour shifts, Tate began to stretch out his stride as the road curved downward onto Panamint Valley. Almost all our hard-earned elevation gain would be lost on the descent. During my shift my right knee, a chronic problem from an old skiing injury, could not take the punishment of descending on the steep asphalt and I was forced to walk.

With Tate running and me running/walking as my knee would allow, we limped onto Panamint Springs at 3:15 p.m., almost four hours ahead of our previous pace. The remainder would be all up hill, up to the summit of Mt. Whitney.

Climbing the meandering road into the Sierra foothills, Tate finally gave up trying to run his entire turn, he began to allow himself the luxury of walking 10 of his 30 minutes. Even though I was walking most of my turn, my condition was deteriorating fast; it was 90 degrees but I was shaking from chills. The cramps had spread from my hands, up my arms, across my shoulders, down my back and into my legs. It was an electrolyte imbalance, but I couldn't tell if I had taken too many potassium and sodium tablets or too few.

I stopped drinking Gatorade and switched to plain water. Nothing helped. I could run for only about 10 minutes before my entire body cramped and I collapsed. The support crew would lift me into the back of the van while Tate got out and began running. He was running/walking his own shift and two-thirds of mine.

Tate, hoping that all I needed was time for my body to regain its electrolyte balance, offered to try to go for two straight hours. It worked. By 9 p.m. I felt much better and was able to take my two-hour turn.

Thus we went through the night, trading off every two hours. A crew member walked ahead of us with a flashlight, clearing the road of snakes and scorpions. While walking, I tried to eat seedless grapes, but threw up. When I tried to drink grapefruit juice and threw that up, I went back to water.

We arrived in Lone Pine just before dawn — only 13 miles to go to Whitney Portals and then 11 miles up the mountain. Jogging past all of the darkened houses, I jealously imagined the inhabitants sleeping in warm, comfortable beds. My agony was incomprehensible to their resting bodies. But reflecting further, I realized that the joy I would feel at the summit was equally incomprehensible. Jealousy became pity and I increased my pace.

After a half-hour rest at Whitney Portals, we began hiking up the mountain at 8:45 a.m. The initial adrenalin-based rush of energy that propelled us up the lower part of the mountain soon dissipated. Fatigue, dizziness, nausea and the increasing altitude slowed our pace.

The 97 switchbacks that led up to the trail crest just below 14,000 feet required many rests. Above that it was a long traverse and then a scramble up loose rock. It was 3:50 p.m. when we staggered up to the summit plaque at 14,495 feet. Thirty-five hours and 50 minutes; we had beaten our record by 15 hours! We slapped hands and fell into embrace.

TRIUMPHANT EXHAUSTION — Runners Tate Miller, right, and Bruce Maxwell rest and savor the satisfaction of reaching the top of Mt. Whitney from a Death Valley start in record time.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned in a mixed and uncertain showing Wednesday in the aftermath of the previous session's steep decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 14.12 on Tuesday for its largest loss in more than four months, managed a 52 gain to 807.43. But losers outnumbered gainers by about a 7-5 spread on the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite common-stock index posted a 0.5 loss to 51.28. Big Board volume totaled 21.77 million shares, down from 23.77 million Tuesday. Analysts said Tuesday's widespread selling pressure let up with the Dow hovering close to the 800 level—a point from which it has rallied on two previous occasions in the last two months. Depressed blue chip issues like Eastman Kodak, which was up 1 at 49 1/2 as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE, seemed to attract some cautious buying interest. But the rest of the market drew little support. In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 102.85, off .12.

New York (AP) — Wednesday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated securities also traded on other markets.

Paul Simon Special Skirts Cliche Formats

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's been a busy year," says Paul Simon, the singer and songwriter who-for variety—filmed a TV special and soon will make a movie.

Simon says he's written the script for the movie — he won't say what it's about — and is composing 10 songs for it. And after that's done, he says, he'll make another concert tour.

The hour-long TV special will be telecast Thursday on NBC at 9 p.m. It's not a one-hour chunk from a two-hour concert, Simon says.

"I'm bored with the concert format," he says. "I've seen so many specials that start where the person is backstage and walks out on stage, with false footage of a big crowd reaction. That's why I parodied it in this special's opening."

"The Paul Simon Special" opens with the star backstage, having a glass of wine he doesn't want poured down his throat by a flaky director. He then walks into a nearly empty hall to a mike set far too high.

"That shot was in the Capitol Theater in Passaic, N.J.," Simon says. "We put an ad in a high school paper for people in the audience. We let about 27 in and scattered them around and we had about 11,000 outside clamoring to get in."

The idea for the special came a year ago while Simon was on vacation in Barbados. Lorne Michaels, producer of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," was there and, of course, they talked a little business.

"We talked about what we would do for a special. We decided we would show the rehearsing and everything leading up to doing a special. Then we set up an antagonist and Chuck was the antagonist."

Charles Grodin, who starred in the movie, "The Heartbreak Kid," plays the director-antagonist, funny in a heavy-handed way. He's the kind of person who wants to call it "The Paul 'Bridge Over Troubled Water' Simon Special" — for the "recognition value," so people will realize which Paul Simon they're talking about.

Art Garfunkel, the clear-voiced half of the popular Simon and Garfunkel team of the last half of the 1960s, is on the special to harmonize on "Old Friends." Right after their breakup, relations were strained, but today the two are, indeed, old friends.

"I think the relationship is now that we can join up from time to time without it putting any pressure on us," Simon says. "It doesn't mean that we will permanently reteam because we won't."

Featured in the NBC special with Simon are the people who toured with him in 1975, the backup musicians, jazz harmonica player Toots Thielmans and the Jessy Dixon Singers.

There are comedy interludes when Simon walks into Chevy Chase's rehearsal studio and Lily Tomlin drops by.

"When you've finished a special," Simon says, "you've made something up that didn't exist before. It was a blank piece of tape and now this is on it. If you're satisfied with your work, it is rewarding. And this is relatively close to our vision of a year ago."

Bull Halts Mail Service

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Neither rain nor cold nor dark of night can stay the faithful postman from his appointed rounds, but a snorting Brahma bull brought the U.S. mail to a temporary halt here Wednesday.

A horned, black Brahma rampaged into a fenced mail loading area about 9 a.m., a refugee from a nearby packing plant.

"I got pretty close to him, with something between me and him," said Joe Carrel, dock supervisor. "But he didn't have any postage on him so I wanted somebody to come and get him and take him back."

"Some guys from the packing plant were trying to catch him, and that bull jumped right up onto the dock," Carrel said, noting the loading dock was more than four feet high.

For some 20 minutes, the bull challenged all comers and refused to budge from the dock, Carrel said, successfully halting operations during one of the post office's busiest periods of the day.

Berle Shares Story

If you find yourself at a party this upcoming holiday season, surrounded by holly and less-than-jolly folk, you might find comfort in this story told by Milton Berle.

For 25 years, Berle shared Christmas time with the late Jack Benny — always the same way.

Every Christmas Day, recalls Berle, a prominent theatrical attorney held open house at his Beverly Hills mansion. And every year the place was packed with wall-to-wall celebrities.

"And every year, around noon," said Berle, "I'd get the same phone call: 'Hello, this is Jack.' 'I'd say, 'Jack who?' and he'd say, 'Jack, Jack Benny.' 'I'd say, 'Oh, I thought it was Jack Oakie.' Then he would say, 'Are you going to the... I'd interrupt with 'You mean the Christmas party?' The answer is yes, and you want me to pick you up, right?"

"To which Jack would say, 'How did you know?"

"Anyhow, I'd pick up Jack and we'd go to this beautiful home. We'd squeeze our way into the front doorway, the maid would start to take our coats and Jack would look around, fingers to cheek in his typical fashion. After milking the moment as only he could, he would turn back to me and say, 'I'm ready to go and say, 'I'm ready (to go) anytime you are."

"But then next year on Christmas Day around noon I'd get the same phone call. Not once did I get to stay at that party."

Test Taking Now Easier

A is for anxiety. Lie in test taking. You know — racing pulse, clammy hands, having your mind go blank the instant you lay eyes on the first question.

Some students, though, are learning to combat these symptoms through a Test Anxiety Program at the Developed by psychology Prof. James D. Papsdorf and the Institute for Human Adjustment, the 10-week program is in its third year.

Through the use of biofeedback, physiological information is relayed back to participants who are wired to a machine. The data tells the students when they are tense, so they can practice relaxation.

Simple enough, but what about those of us who don't have access to a biofeedback machine? The coordinator of the project offers this advice: "One sign of general anxiety is cold hands. If you concentrate on warming your hands, often by thinking about warm activities or places, you can raise the skin temperature and reduce anxiety."

Word Use Discovered

"Okay" and "stop" mean the same thing in Moscow as they do in Missoula, Mont. But to a Soviet TV technician, "motor" doesn't necessarily refer to something found under the hood of a car.

That's what NBC News producer-writer Pat Trese discovered when he went to the Soviet Union with Betty Ford to film a Bolshoi Ballet production of "The Nutcracker," to be aired December 18.

Time requirements ruled out the use of an interpreter during actual taping, so Trese used his hands a lot. But he did manage to work out some cues with the Soviet technicians.

"They taught me that I had to say 'motor,' with the accent, as a cue to roll the tape. They'd indicate the tape had reached recording speed by saying 'okay.' And the tape would keep rolling until I said, 'stop.'"

The one thing they all agreed on as Mrs. Ford's participation made it all possible. "Their high respect for Mrs. Ford became obvious very soon," says Tesse. "America couldn't have sent a better good will ambassador. It was interesting to see how much the members of the crew liked members of the crew liked her. They couldn't do enough for her."

Santa's Entrance Stolen

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Thieves made Santa Claus' job a lot tougher at the James Jones home this year. They stole the chimney.

"We laughed about it," Mrs. Jones said. "It's just one of those things. We tried to think who would want a chimney."

She discovered something was amiss during Monday's snowstorm, when sleet was falling into their furnace room. At first, she said she thought some roofing might have blown off.

Before her husband left for work, he glanced at the roof, then rushed back inside the house and said "the chimney is gone."

On inspection, Jones discovered that the flue and an outer covering of slate were indeed missing. The thief did try to cover up the hole so rain wouldn't fall into the house.

The couple thinks the chimney was stolen some time over the weekend while they were out.

Refund Rule Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has proposed a rule to protect the payments of charter airline passengers.

Charter operators already have to post a bond or set up an escrow account to guarantee repayment if the tour is canceled, but the CAB said provisions of the current rule are weak and may not adequately protect the funds.

Some charter carriers, for example, use funds from escrow accounts to pay debts before the charter is completed, and others substitute securities for cash in the accounts, making it harder to pay refunds.

The rule would also end the practice of travel agents taking their commission immediately after passengers have bought their seats.

Anyone wishing to comment on the rule or make suggestions can do so until Jan. 31 by writing to the CAB, Dockets Section, Washington, D.C., 20428.

Actress Shuns Glamor For Steady Work

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — In 1948 Shelley Winters and Lana Turner tested for the same glamor girl role in a long-forgotten movie.

Lana got the part, Shelley got the message.

Glamor girls get the starring parts. For a time. But it is the character actresses who enjoy longevity.

Since then Shelley has specialized in playing heavy dramatic roles, and a few comic ones too, as the woman who doesn't get the man. In fact, she's fortunate to escape with her life in most films.

Beginning with "A Place In The Sun," in which she lost Montgomery Clift to Elizabeth Taylor, Shelley's roles often have been unsympathetic and often unattractive women.

She thinks it's time for actresses and American women in general to give up the eternal pursuit of youth, face up to maturity and make the most of it.

Shelley looked around at dozens of women enjoying lunch in the patio of the Beverly Hills hotel and said, "Glance around. Every woman in this place is over 40 and they're all trying to look like 22."

"It's not true of the men. Men are allowed to be 50 or 60. But in America it's as if as soon as a woman gets to be 40 she should disappear. When I was 32 I played a woman 45 and I was happy with it.

"George Stevens, who directed 'A Place In The Sun,' told me I'd have a longer career if I played my own age or older. And it's true. In every picture there's one gorgeous doll but there are four other parts.

"Stevens cast me for the mother in 'The Diary of Anne Frank,' another role in which I played a woman many years older than myself.

"In 'Grand Bolita Mista,' my latest picture made in Italy, I play a 60-year-old witch. And you ought to be me in the new Disney movie, 'Pete's Dragon.' I spend most of the picture covered with mud.

"The actresses I started out with wouldn't think of playing those sort of roles.

"They get their faces lifted and try to cling to the image of youth. What they don't seem to realize is that there is a fresh supply of 25-year-olds coming along every year.

"That's what killed Marilyn Monroe. Marilyn at 36 was being told how great and young she looked. We were practically the same age. But what would have happened to her after she was 40?

"Sooner or later your bosom falls, unless you get an operation. That's the kind of terrible thing a lot of actresses go through. A lot of them die, accidentally or on purpose. To them it's death to get older.

"Trying to be young shortens their careers and their lives. With health and luck you get older. There's no crime in that.

"I'm trying to change the old attitudes by playing all these interesting and funny older women. In Europe it's different with Simone Signoret and Jeanne Moreau. They still get the best parts.

"Sure I'd like to be 25 pounds lighter. I'm not. But I try to be as attractive as I can. I'm doing okay, and a lot of men don't like skinny girls anyway.

"Older women feel compelled to look younger to compete. But they shouldn't have this terrible need for youth. A woman's wrinkles can be just as interesting and beautiful as a man's."

Shelley said she began her career at Universal playing "sexpots" in "The South Sea Sinner" and "Winchester 73."

She played her first older role at age 25, the unsympathetic 32-year-old married woman in the original "Great Gatsby" with Alan Ladd.

"I played a lot of victims after that," she said. "I've looked for those kind of roles because I was good at them and they made some social comment.

"God knows how many times I've been killed in dramatic parts. Ronald Colman strangled me in 'A Double Life.' I was drowned in 'A Place in the Sun.' In 'Lolita' James Mason ran over me with a car. I got hit by a car in 'Gatsby.' 'I fell off a cliff in 'Take One False Step.' In 'Bloody Mama' I was shot by the FBI. I've been knifed but I don't think I've ever been electrocuted.

"They try to kill me off in 'Pete's Dragon' but I survive."

Shelley is many pounds overweight, but she makes no attempt to disguise the added poundage. Neither does she wear a speck of makeup when she's not working.

"I didn't try to lose weight for 'Pete's Dragon,'" she said. "The picture is so good my phone has been ringing every day with offers to play more funny character parts.

"It's like being rediscovered every few years."

Shelley looks forward to steady work for many years to come. Like fine wine and good cheese, she contends, actress Winters improves with age.

Darby O'Gill Found Bond

It was Sean Connery's role in Walt Disney's "Darby O'Gill and the Little People" that eventually won him the James Bond parts which have made him so famous. The film is playing at Showplace Four in Lubbock.

Albert Broccoli, coproducer of the James Bond pictures, was his discoverer.

"We were looking at all the film we could lay our hands on featuring new actors," Broccoli says. "One of the pictures was 'Darby O'Gill.' When I saw Connery in that I thought we had our man. But to make sure I sent for my wife, Dana."

When Mrs. Broccoli looked at the film she was adamant.

"Well, that is James Bond," she said, and her opinion clinched the decision to get Connery for the role. The scene was 1962 in the Goldwyn Studio.

"Darby O'Gill" is the live-action tale of an Irish storyteller who lives with the leprechauns and comes off second best. Connery played a starring role as Michael McBride, the young man who comes along to take Darby's job as caretaker of a grand estate and wins the hand of his daughter, too.

In color by Technicolor, "Darby O'Gill and the Little People" stars Albert Sharpe, Janet Munro, Connery and Jimmy O'Dea, with Kieron Moore, Estelle Winwood and Walter Fitzgerald. Directed by Robert Stevenson, rerelease is by Buena Vista.

Graphic Art Show Set At Big Spring

BIG SPRING (Special) — The second annual heritage museum graphic art show will be held here Saturday and Sunday. This is the largest show of its kind in West Texas, according to Mrs. Gerri Atwell, museum curator.

Mrs. Mary Nell Mansfield, museum president, announced that the artists' work this year will include a set of four Charles Russell prints not previously shown. They are from the Fred Renner collection.

Outstanding graphics from such artists as Peter Hurd, James Boren, Tom Lovell, James Bama, Frank McCarthy and many others will be shown.

The prints will be for sale. Many of the artists are members of the Cowboy Artist of America Association, which has won the Franklin Mint Award for great Western art.

Duty-Free Status Attracts Investors South Of Border

JUAREZ, Mexico (UPI) — At the foot of the Bridge of Americas, a six-lane boulevard veers south along the Rio Grande. Two miles downriver, amid adobe shacks, shops and a church, is a sparkling modern one-story office building. The cluttered back office in that building, which stands out like a healthy thumb among four washed fingers, belongs to a husky ex-Army officer whose business card reads: "William L. Mitchell — Marketing." Mitchell solicits business for the Bermudez Industrial Park, located two miles away on the outskirts of this city of 600,000. Well-known firms like RCA and Sylvania are part of the 350-acre cluster. The park is the focal point of a program called "twin plant," under which American or foreign made parts are shipped to assembly points in Mexican cities and then shipped back into the United States for sale. Advertising literature offers the attraction of cheaper and plentiful Mexican labor, adding that Mexico is fulfilling its aim to raise living standards by providing middle class jobs and obtaining taxes through industrialization. American and foreign firms coming into Mexico pay no duty on imports of machinery and raw materials and only low duty on finished or semifinished products as they are shipped out. Key rules are that the "inbond" products must be exported out of Mexico to world markets that do not violate its trade agreements and that the products do not remain in the country longer than a specified period. Companies cannot stockpile large surpluses of parts and so have generated warehouse business in American border cities, Mitchell said. A firm operating in Mexico need not necessarily have a sister plant directly across the border either. Many assembly plants are supplied by 100-200 suppliers located across the United States. Mitchell said transportation costs are lower and shipment is faster than if the firm located in an Asian nation. Although the "in-bond" projects occur all along the border, Juarez and its sister city, El Paso, Texas, are unique in their large size. The economic impact on the area is substantial. Mitchell said in 1976 a minimum of $158 million in direct expenditures and services was generated in the region by the "in-bond" industries, and Mexican workers spent 29 percent of their income — or $29 million — in El Paso. Currently, there are 24 plants in the Bermudez Park, but another five are expected by the end of next year, said Mitchell. "Basically what we're trying to do is provide jobs for people out of work," he said. Employees get paid for 56 hours a week, and work only 48 hours. But the minimum wage in Mexico is about $1 an hour, and the take home pay is 63 cents, said Mitchell. But, he said, social security benefits provided the employees cover far more medical expenses than in the United States. He said three jobs are provided in the United States parts manufacturers for every one in Mexico, and presumably reduce the number of illegal aliens entering the United States. In June, about 25,000 persons were employed by the Juarez plants, and another 780 worked on the El Paso side. "American consumers benefit by buying at lower prices," he said.

LOOK UP—Workmen assemble a four-sided scoreboard which is being installed in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. The gigantic scoreboard, which will have the capabilities to flash commercial and informative messages, is expected to be installed and ready for tonight's basketball game between Texas Tech and the Athletes in Action team. The equipment will hang above the court and take the place of the three scoreboard currently located on the north, south and west sides of the Coliseum. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

Tech, 'Athletes' Vie In Undefeated Battle

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Exhibition, according to the book of words, is "a thing shown before a court as evidence."

Maybe that isn't exactly what is known in the basketball—or sports—world as an exhibition. Usually, in the sports sense, it's a game, but a game which never sees the light of daytime records.

Win an exhibition game, and you can brag about it; lose, you chalk it up to experience, and it's not tied to your record.

Texas Tech's basketballers are unbeaten for four games. So are the Athletes in Action. They tangle tonight at 7:30 in Lubbock Coliseum in an exhibition which counts not in the university's record book but which will be a test of major proportions.

"This isn't just a bunch of guys they've picked up off the streets," warned Raider coach Gerald Myers.

And, the AIA record reveals such. This spiritual-oriented organization whose team is made up of former collegiate performers currently stands 12-0 for the season, and over two years now, it has won 28 straight decisions from college and university teams.

Tuesday night, AIA defeated Colorado State 69-56. And some of its victories the past couple of years have come over San Francisco—at the time it was No. 1 in the collegiate world a year ago—Maryland (last week), Nevada-Las Vegas, Oregon, and Ohio State.

AIA also whipped the Russian National team 93-84.

"Man, they are big," sighed Myers. "Ralph Drollinger (UCLA ex) is 7-2, Ed Gregg (Utah State) plays behind Drollinger and he's seven feet. Then, Irvin Kiffin (Oklahoma Baptist) is behind them, and he's 6-9."

Alonzo Bradley (6-7 from Texas Southern) was drafted by the pros but wasn't able to reach a money agreement and is playing. He led Texas Southern to the NAIA championship. Bradley may be the best player they have."

Exhibition or no, the game will not go into the Raiders' record book, but Myers See RED RAIDERS Page 2

Weary Dockery Needs More Hours In Day

By CARTER CROMWELL

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The sign on the door read "Steve Sloan, Head Football Coach," but it was sleepy-eyed Rex Dockery who opened the door and surveyed the situation.

He saw waiting for him two media representatives, three players and three well-wishers desiring to shake his hand. All the telephone lines were busy and had been for quite some time. On his desk lay messages from 31 persons asking him to call them back. Already, he had returned several calls.

"I think I need another cup of coffee," Texas Tech's new head football coach said rather wearily.

Matters have indeed moved quickly for Dockery since last Thursday. That afternoon, Steve Sloan resigned, and Dockery applied for the vacated Tech head coaching post. Then he was then out of town for three days because of the death of his father-in-law. Not long after he returned, his pace quickened when he learned that he had been hired to replace Sloan.

"I've been so busy the last 24 hours that I haven't had time to feel the impact of anything yet," said the 35-year-old Dockery, who had been Sloan's offensive coordinator. "I got to bed at 12:30 last night and woke up at 4."

"It's a lot of work recruiting and trying to put a staff together, and we've got to get moving."

At Tech, the good-natured Dockery is following the outgoing, immensely popular Sloan, and one reason given for Dockery's hiring was that the football program is expected to retain some continuity with him as coach. However, Dockery will be Dockery. He will not try to emulate Sloan.

"I'm sure we'll do a lot of things similar to the way Steve did them," he said. "We'll probably use basically the same offensive and defensive schemes, the same weight program and the same off-season program."

"But I'll run the program as I see fit. I've always believed a coach should be himself. You have to be your own personality."

He supported the "continuity" theory, though. "I know the players and capabilities of most of them well. I know the people in the community who are critical in helping us recruit athletes. This all should help."

He is the boss now, instead of one of the boys, but he doesn't foresee problems in making the transition.

"I don't believe it will be a great adjustment. As a coordinator, I was in charge of some things. This will just be more responsibility. It's part of maturing as a person and as a coach."

This is the first head coaching job for Dockery, and he hadn't applied for one before this year, although he applied for the vacant Virginia Tech post two days prior to Sloan's unexpected resignation.

"I feel very fortunate to have this opportunity," he said. "Most assistants strive to become head coaches and that's always been my goal, but you have to get up to bat first. I just had to work hard and try and be ready when the time came. I just happened to be in the right place at the right time."

The trend is toward hiring younger men as head coaches, and Dockery's 35 years didn't put him at a disadvantage.

"I'm not at the age where I had to worry about my age hurting me."

Dockery's road to the Tech head coaching job began long ago in Tennessee. Dockery and Sloan grew up together in Cleveland, Tenn., near Chattanooga, and attended school together for a number of years until Dockery—two years Sloan's senior—made his way to the University of Tennessee and Sloan later went to Alabama.

It was at Tennessee that Dockery's interest in coaching rose dramatically. An offensive guard for the Volunteers, he began helping his high school coach during the spring and the late summer.

"I enjoyed working with those kids," he said. "I had a business major at the time, but I realized then that coaching was important to me, and I changed my major."

"I stayed on a year at Tennessee to finish up my degree work and was a graduate assistant. The next year, I did the same thing. I thought it was a good opportunity for me to see if I really wanted to be a coach. I worked with the defense one year and with the offense the other."

Then came four years of head coaching coaching in the Tennessee high school ranks at Morristown and Harriman, and he compiled a 34-8-2 record, making the state playoffs once.

"I was involved with offense and defense in high school because we only had four coaches. Actually, I was probably more defense-oriented then."

He returned to the collegiate ranks in 1970 as receiver coach at Tennessee and moved to Georgia Tech as offensive line coach in 1972 and to Vanderbilt with Sloan in 1973 to coach the receivers. In January 1975, he followed Sloan to Lubbock to become offensive coordinator.

The recruiting in Texas was the biggest adjustment he had to make.

"I wasn't familiar with the area, the high school coaches or the strengths and weaknesses of the schools we were competing against. And we didn't know much about our players, so made it tougher to decide what our recruiting needs were."

The much-later signing date made a difference, too. We had always signed in December in the Southeastern Conference. Here, it's in early February.

The lifelong resident of the Southeast faced adjustment—the West Texas wind and sand. The day Dockery and his family flew into Lubbock was the day a severe sandstorm arose.

"I'm thankful for all the pretty days we have out here," he said, "but I'll never forget that day. We got off the plane (at the old airport) and the clothes bags we had over our shoulders just went straight up in the air because of the wind. That had never happened to us."

Now, it appears that he'll have to deal with the wind a while longer.

"My Company just discontinued our retirement plan. No panic. I'm going to 'roll-over' my retirement cash into an LNB/IRA."

If your company discontinues your retirement plan, you have up to 60 days to "roll-over" (transfer) your money into an Individual Retirement Account.

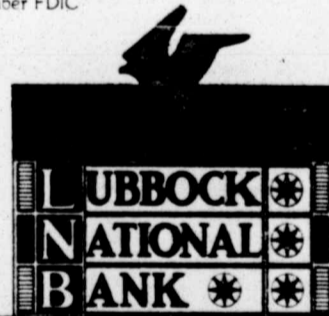

You pay no taxes now and your dollars start earning 7 3/4% for an effective annual yield of 8.057%. Also, if you leave a company and take your retirement cash with you, you're going to have to pay taxes on the money your company contributed. But, if you "roll-over" your retirement cash into an IRA, your nest egg is protected from taxes until you retire—when your taxes will probably be a lot lower.

In an LNB/IRA, your dollars start earning 7 3/4% interest which results in 8.057% effective annual yield.

IRA was a good deal last year. This year it's even better. For everybody.

Wilson Disappointed, To Continue Search

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Tom Wilson stood in the lobby of the Texas Tech athletic office Wednesday morning, nattily dressed in a tasteful sport jacket, beige slacks and bright yellow shirt. His mood, though, was quite, quite, blue.

Wilson, Texas A&M's offensive coordinator and a former all-SWC quarterback and assistant coach at Tech, had been thought by many to be the leading candidate to replace Steve Sloan as Raider head coach since the latter resigned last Thursday.

But matters didn't follow that course. Tuesday, Tech decided to hire Sloan's offensive coordinator, Rex Dockery, and announced the move that night. Wilson, currently on a recruiting swing through West Texas, said he first learned of the decision Tuesday morning.

"Not getting the job is one of the most bitter disappointments I've had," Wilson said quietly. "I've got a lot of great memories of Tech, but this hurts. All my direction—every step I've taken—for the past 11 years was to come back here as head coach."

"I haven't applied for a head coaching job the past year and a half, because I wanted this one. It was my ultimate goal. I decided to stay put and take my shot at this one when it came along."

The hiring of Dockery over Wilson greatly surprised people across the state, except most of those in Lubbock. Wilson was as surprised as anyone.

"I thought I had the job," Wilson said quietly. "I don't understand what happened. I don't know if I'll ever get the full story. I like Rex, and I think he'll do a great job here, but I thought I was qualified."

Wilson came to Tech in 1962 as a "barely 5-11, 135-pound" quarterback that few colleges were interested in, but he became all-conference and etched his name into the Tech record books. He was a Raider assistant from 1967 until Jim Carlen resigned after the 1974 season. Wilson was in the race then for the head coaching post that eventually went to Sloan.

"It wasn't as disappointing when I didn't get the job in 1974, considering the situation at the time and the fact that they wanted someone who had had experience at another college."

Wilson's chances then were lessened because the prevailing feeling was to hire a head coach and bring in an entirely new staff.

Wilson went to A&M then as offensive coordinator for Emory Bellard. Reports have circulated that Bellard and Wilson have clashed over Bellard's use of the conservative wishbone attack, but Wilson denied these rumors.

TOM WILSON

"A lot of people have talked about Emory and I, but we're fine. I guess that started when I first went down there, and they didn't change from the wishbone to the I."

"But I didn't make any comment. My philosophy of offense is different from Emory's, but he's the head coach. There hasn't been any conflict whatsoever between us."

Wilson said that the exposure to a different system has helped him. The Raiders used the I-formation extensively when he was at Tech.

"I never hurts to learn another side of things. Emory is a master at the running game and blocking situations."

With his chances for the Tech job gone, Wilson will stay at A&M longer, but the 33-year-old Corsicana product still has his eyes on a head coaching post. He's certainly still young enough for that to not a factor against him.

"Right now, I plan on coaching at A&M and doing as good a job as I possibly can. But I still want to be a head coach, certainly. It's just a matter of time. I'm going to have to re-evaluate things and set another goal, but I don't know yet what it will be."

"Perhaps this will all work out for the best in the long run, but it's hard to visualize things that way now."

Campbell, Others Await Naming Of Heisman

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
NEW YORK (AP) — For your winter television viewing, the Heisman Hour makes its TV debut from the Grand Ballroom of the New York Hilton Hotel tonight, with runningback Earl Campbell of the University of Texas expected to be the special guest star.

This Heisman Hour is not to be confused with the Heisman Halltime, which had an unsuccessful one-night stand in 1971 when the Heisman Trophy winner was announced on national television during intermission of the Georgia-Georgia Tech game.

The winner that time was Auburn quarterback Pat Sullivan, although there was a slight miscalculation and the studio star was Cornell runningback Ed Marinaro.

But such a hue and cry arose that the Downtown Athletic Club, sponsor of the Heisman Trophy—which goes to the athlete who is voted by some 1,050 media representatives as the nation's top collegiate football player—returned to its accustomed procedure of announcing the winner at a news conference and making the formal presentation at a black-tie dinner a week or so later.

The dinner is scheduled for tonight, but the winner hasn't been announced yet. If you're interested, tune in to CBS-TV at 9 p.m. CST and sometime in the following hour—probably as close to 10 o'clock as possible leaving time for an acceptance speech—you'll find out who walks off with the 1977 Heisman.

Runs off is more like it, since more often than not since the award had its inception in 1935 the winner has been a runningback like Tony Dorsett of Pitt in 1976, Archie Griffin of Ohio State in 1974 and 1975—the only two-time winner—John Cappelletti of Penn State in 1973 and... well, you get the picture.

Tonight's picture will include six new presentations known as the Downtown Athletic Club Awards. They will go to players voted tops as an offensive end, offensive lineman, offensive back, defensive lineman, linebacker and defensive back.

Oops, time out for a slight correction. The official ballot asks the electors to vote for a "runningback," not an offensive back. No mention is made of a quarterback so there will be none among the 18 invitees—three in each category—the Downtown A.C. hopes to have on hand.

Here are the players expected to serve as Campbell's supporting cast:

Offensive ends— Wes Chandler, Florida; Ken MacAfee, Notre Dame; Ozzie Newsome, Alabama

Offensive backs— Tom Cousineau, Ohio State; Jerry Robinson, UCLA; Gary Spani, Kansas State.

Defensive backs— Luther Bradley, Notre Dame; Zac Henderson, Oklahoma; Dennis Thurman, Southern California.

Quarterbacks— What's a quarterback? Defensive linemen— Ross Browner, Notre Dame; Brad Shearer, Texas; Art Stull, Kentucky.

Linebackers— Tom Cousineau, Ohio State; Jerry Robinson, UCLA; Gary Spani, Kansas State.

Defensive backs— Luther Bradley, Notre Dame; Zac Henderson, Oklahoma; Dennis Thurman, Southern California.

The accounting firm of Harris, Kerr, Forster & Co., which tabulated the votes, said the top three Heisman Trophy finishers are among that group.

On with the show!

Sands Seeks Third Tournament Crown

Sands is the only school with more than one championship trophy from a tournament in its award section for the 1977 season, and the Mustangs go gunning for title No. 3 today in the Sterling City Tournament.

Both Sands boys and girls triumphed at the Gano Tubb Memorial in Levelland and the New Home Tournament.

Sands' boys are unbeaten in 13 tries, and the girls have won 14 in a row after dropping their season opener.

In addition to the Sterling City affair, meets are on tap in Ropesville, Idalou, Paducah, Denver City, Sudan, Greenwood, Springlake-Earth, Ralls, Tulia, Snyder and Levelland starting today. The Amarillo Tournament opens its two-day run Friday.

Perhaps the strongest boys field is at Ralls, where Lubbock Christian is unbeaten. Jayton and Crosbyton have just one loss each and Littlefield has lost just twice. And, ironically, those four teams are paired in the opening round.

The Jayton girls, off to a 16-1 start, are the favorites in their division.

Elsewhere, the favorites are: Ropesville—Winner of today's Spade-Dawson boys game will assume the favorite's role, and Whiteface's girls will be the pick.

Idalou—The host girls are 7-1 and the pick, but the boys end could be a fight between AA Roosevelt, Frenship and the host team plus Shallowater, which is 6-1.

Paducah—Winner of the Motley County-Paducah first-round boys game will be favorite along with the Valley girls.

Denver City—Defending Class AA champ Morton has drawn the nod again. The Indians have won this meet the past 10 years.

Sudan—New Home, which finished as runner-up in both ends of its own tournament last week, ranks as favorites in both divisions.

Greenwood—The host boys are 11-1, and the pride of its division. Klondike will likely battle Class A Rankin for the girls honors.

Springlake-Earth—Silverton's boys and Hale Center's girls are favorites.

Whitharral—The hosts, which won the Anton tournament last week, will again have to get past Anton in the boys division.

Tulia—Most observers think that all Canyon has to do to receive the girls championship trophy is show up, and another outcome would be an upset of major proportions. The Slaton boys are favored there.

Snyder—This meet has drawn 16 teams, with Midland, Estacado and San Angelo heading the list of favorites.

Levelland—This round-robin affair has Dunbar the favorite in the boys division and the hosts in the girls.

Amarillo—El Paso Bowie rates the pick in this boys-only meet.

Martin Makes Plans To Snub Angels' Ryan

HONOLULU (AP) — Billy Martin has given California Angels pitcher Nolan Ryan a suggestion for next summer's major league All-Star break — make early reservations in Laguna Beach.

Ryan was upset when he was not picked initially to the American League roster this past season, then said no when Martin later added him to the squad. Ryan spent the All-Star break with his family on the beach at Laguna, a short drive from Anaheim.

"I want you to print this," Martin told a reporter at baseball's winter meetings. "I won't pick Ryan if he's won 40 games by the All-Star break. He can kiss my petunia."

Martin, the manager of the World Champion New York Yankees, will again guide the American League squad in the 1978 All-Star game in San Diego. This past season, he originally picked Ryan's teammate, Frank Tanana, to the AL team, but Tanana was sidelined by an arm injury.

Martin then picked Ryan and said he would start against the National League, but Ryan refused to play.

Chandler Named For E-W Contest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Florida wide receiver Wes Chandler, a second-team all-America selection of The Associated Press, was among the players added Wednesday to the East team for the 53rd East-West football game.

Rip Engle, the former Penn State coach who serves as East team selection chairman, completed the 30-man team with the selection of 13 players from Southern schools.

Others joining the squad for the Dec. 31 game at Stanford Stadium included offensive linemen Larry Tearry of Wake Forest, Mike Sandusky of Duke, Eric Laakso of Tulane, George Collins of Georgia and Amos Fowler of Southern Mississippi. Tight end Reese McCall of Auburn, wide receivers Martin Cox of Vanderbilt and Jerrold McRae of Tennessee State.

Wealthy Yanks Obtain Atlanta's Messersmith

HONOLULU (AP) — The New York Yankees have obtained pitcher Andy Messersmith from the Atlanta Braves for $100,000, The Associated Press learned Wednesday night.

The deal requires his approval of the man who revolutionized baseball by playing out his option and successfully testing the reserve clause two years ago.

Messersmith came close to becoming a member of the Yankees in 1976 after his free agency was upheld by baseball arbitrator Peter Seitz and two federal courts. But the deal fell through as the right-hander subsequently signed a $1 million agreement with the Braves.

Messersmith, 32, was 11-11 with the Braves in 1976, but suffered through an injury-plagued 5-4 season in 1977, appearing in only 16 games.

He underwent elbow surgery late in the season and had instructions not to pick up a baseball until after Jan. 1, 1978.

During his career, Messersmith, who also had pitched for California and the Los Angeles Dodgers, has won 128 games and lost 92 in 10 seasons.

Announcement of the transaction between the Yankees and Braves climaxed day-long negotiations, with Atlanta reportedly offering outfielder Gary Matthews, a free agent signee last winter, in exchange for various combinations of Yankee players.

At one point, the conversations were being held in the middle of the lobby with Atlanta owner Ted Turner a lively participant.

Turner said he had been unable to reach the pitcher in his Corona del Mar, Calif., home.

"But his girl friend seemed happy about it," said the Braves' owner.

Howe Reaches Milestone

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gordie Howe scored the 1,000th goal of his professional career Wednesday night, giving the New England Whalers a 1-0 lead over the Birmingham Bulls just 1:16 into the match.

Howe, who scored his 999th goal Nov. 10 against the Edmonton Oilers, got the puck behind the Birmingham net on a power play and tucked it past the goalie.

The 49-year-old Howe is now in his 30th season in the pro ranks.

Turner said he expects no problem in getting Messersmith to approve the deal. However, the pitcher parted angrily from the Yankees when their negotiations broke down in March, 1976.

"Andy said he wanted to go a contender," said Turner. "We sent him to the world champions. I do my best to make my players happy."

Atlanta was reported close to two other deals — one with Los Angeles involving catcher Biff Pocoroba and Dodger pitcher Rick Rhoden and the other which would send first baseman Willie Montanez to Texas in exchange for three players.

Earlier, the Baltimore Orioles completed two deals in rapid succession, first sending left-hander Rudy May to the Montreal Expos in a six-player swap that brought the Orioles relievers Don Stanhouse and Joe Kerrigan, and then in a three-player swap with Seattle in which Baltimore got outfielder Carlos Lopez and pitcher Tommy Moore.

Besides May, who was 18-14 with a 3.61 earned run average last season, the Expos obtained two minor league pitchers — right-handers Bryan Smith and Randy Miller.

Miller was 2-5 in 61 games at Rochester of the International League with 13 saves and a 3.54 ERA. Smith, 22, was 15-11, with a 2.75 ERA with Charlotte of the Southern League.

In exchange, the Orioles got two relief specialists, Stanhouse, who was 10-10 with 10 saves and a 3.42 ERA in 17 games. Kerrigan was 3-5 with 11 saves and a 3.24 ERA in 66 games. In addition, Baltimore got outfielder Gary Roenicke, who batted .321 at Denver in the American Association last year.

The deal with the Mariners sent pitcher Mike Parrott, who was 15-7 with a 3.42 ERA at Rochester, to Seattle in exchange for outfielder Carlos Lopez and pitcher Tommy Moore. Lopez batted .283 with eight homers and 34 RBI with the Mariners and Moore was 2-1 with a 4.91 ERA.

Cougars Cruise Past TLC

HOUSTON (AP) — Mike Schultz scored 24 points and Charles Thompson added 19 to lead unbeaten Houston to an easy 118-69 college basketball victory over Texas Lutheran College Wednesday night.

All 14 players who saw action for Houston scored as the Cougars boosted their season mark to 4-0.

After Texas Lutheran managed a 12-12 tie early in the second half, the Cougars outscored the Bulldogs 28-7 during the next eight minutes.

Houston moved to a 60-38 halftime lead and led by as much as 40 points much of the second half. Schultz' dunk with 4:51 left gave the Cougars a 48-point margin at 108-60.

Dennis Tealer with 16 points led Texas Lutheran. Mike Jones added 15 points for the Bulldogs, now 2-4.

Krivacs Guides UT

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Led by Jim Krivacs, who scored 42 points, Texas overwhelmed Oklahoma State 108-87 in college basketball Wednesday night.

The Longhorn guard scored 29 points in the second half. His 42 total points was the third highest single game total in Texas University history. Krivacs hit 17 of 38 field goals and 8 of 10 free throws.

Krivacs dominated the second half and at one point tallied 18 of 24 Longhorn points midway through the final half.

The Texas total of 108 was the highest score ever earned against Oklahoma State.

Texas raised its record to 4-1 on the season, while Oklahoma State dipped to 3-1.

Tech Assistant Seeks Position

Bob Patterson, Texas Tech defensive line coach the past three seasons, will interview today for the athletic director's post at Murray (Ky.) State.

Patterson, an assistant at Tech under the recently resigned Steve Sloan, will most likely join Sloan's new staff at Mississippi if he doesn't get the Murray State job. Sources indicate, however, that there is a chance that Patterson might return to Tech as part of new coach Rex Dockery's staff.

Dockery said Tuesday night that he expects to have his staff assembled in "seven to 10 days." Possibly four or five members of Sloan's staff will remain at Tech.

As reported Monday in the Avalanche-Journal, defensive coordinator Bill Parcells is strongly in the running for the head coaching job at Air Force.

Sloan assistants Mike Pope, John Cropp, Tommy Limbaugh and Romeo Crennel accompanied Sloan to Mississippi.

Tech Fem Cagers Face Two Games

ABILENE (Special)—Texas Tech's women's basketball team will battle Abilene Christian here tonight and will close its fall season with a 3 p.m. contest Saturday against New Mexico State at the Tech Women's Gym.

Tech, 11-2, is averaging 77 points per game, while its opponents are averaging just 56. Karla Schuette and D'Lynn Brown are averaging 13 points a game for the Raiders, while Rosemary Scott has a 10-point norm.

"Our season is going basically as I expected," Tech coach Gay Benson said. "If we win against ACU and NMSU, I believe we will have progressed nicely."

New Mexico State will have a 5-2 record going into its game with Tech.

After the NMSU contest, Tech will take a break until Jan. 4 when it will resume practice. Its first game in the spring semester will be Jan. 11 versus North Texas State.

Plano To Arrive After Playing In Record Tilt

By DAVID R. HOLLAND
Special Correspondent
PLANO — In the Texas Stadium press box following Plano's shocking 29-28 come-from-behind victory over Highland Park last Saturday, Odessa Permian coach John Wilkins displayed his excitement when the coin toss landed "tails" and Saturday's Class AAAA semifinal contest was awarded to Texas Tech's Jones Stadium.

Plano naturally wanted the Dallas Cowboys' home again, but you didn't see Wildcat coach Tom Kimbrough moping about. His team had just staged one of the incredible rallies in Texas schoolboy history, coming from a 28-0 third-quarter deficit to victory with only 33 seconds left on the old flea-flicker.

Kimbrough was indeed happy to be around. Plenty of folks witnessed the classic, including Permian's Wilkins, who made it just after kickoff. An all-time Texas high school gross gate was recorded for the game that drew 35,702 fans.

A total gate of $122,913.50 was written into the books of which Highland Park and Plano each received about $45,000 and the UIL took 10 percent. The rest was divided for rental of the stadium and miscellaneous expenses.

Hotel Rates Stabilized At Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Hotel and motel owners here would be prohibited from raising their room rates by more than 25 percent before the annual Masters Golf Tournament under a policy approved by the Richmond County Commission.

The commission adopted the policy during a meeting on Tuesday. The issue arose with no previous announcement.

Some observers said lodging costs are often doubled during the Masters competition by some hotel and motel owners in the area.

Under the new policy, hotel and motel owners must file a schedule of their room rates with the clerk of Superior Court any 30 days before the tournament, and "no rate shall be increased by more than 25 percent of the average room rate for a 30-day period immediately preceding the time during which any major professional golf tournament is scheduled."

Tidwell Steps Down At Sam Houston

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Billy Tidwell, 47, head football coach at Sam Houston State University the past four seasons, resigned Wednesday.

He compiled an 11-30-1 record but will now devote his fulltime duties as athletic director—a dual role he served since taking over in 1974.

Tidwell was an assistant coach at Sam Houston State from 1956-66 during which the Bearkats won three Lone Star Conference championships and the 1964 NAIA crown.

A five-member committee has been appointed by university President Elliott T. Bowers to handle applications for the vacant position.

Plano hasn't had a losing season since 1954, but this year the team hadn't gained much respect. The Wildcats came from behind in four games, winning in the closing moments and in one instance, tying. That was to No. 1-ranked Sherman, and it enabled Kimbrough's team to enter the playoffs with an edge on penetrations.

"This team has done similar things all year," said Kimbrough, in his second year as head coach, "but this had to beat it all."

At halftime with the Scots in command 21-0, Wilkins noted the awesome Scots, unbeaten in 12 tries. "It ought to be illegal for us to play Highland Park," he semi-joked.

Whereas Highland Park was noted for its finesse, size, execution and passing game, Plano is not known to be flashy, and both teams agree the similarities are amazing.

Later Wilkins watched as Plano mounted a comeback that no one took seriously until Carl Smith intercepted an option pitchout and rambled 64 yards to close the gap to 28-21.

Even after losing the ball on interceptions twice and a third time on a fumble, the Wildcats, 11-1-1, refused to fold. With only 1:14 remaining, Plano took over 80 yards from victory.

On first down the Wildcats tried the flea-flicker, but Steve Haynes dropped the lateral from quarterback Steve Ulmer. Three plays later, with only 33 seconds, they tried it again, and Perry Haynes was all alone for the 61-yard scoring play. Ulmer ran over for the 2-point conversion untouched.

"We were just glad Highland Park didn't notice how wide open Perry was on the first try," said Kimbrough. "We were just keeping our fingers crossed."

Plano has compiled a 218-76-9 record since 1950, including Class AA state championships in 1965 and 1967 and the AAA title in 1971.

PGA To Accept Women

SEATTLE (AP) — The Professional Golf Association has voted to accept women into its apprentice program, paving the way for full membership in the PGA.

A PGA spokeswoman said Wednesday the action may lead to competition between men and women on the golf circuit, "but not right away."

Any woman golfer, 18 years or older, can apply immediately to be admitted to the PGA apprentice program, the association said in a release.

The action was taken Wednesday during the PGA's 61st annual meeting here. It stemmed from a request by the Ladies Professional Golf Association, asking for a closer working relationship between the two organizations.

"The PGA of America took a giant step in world golf today," said PGA President Donald E. Padgett. "The action by the PGA executive committee was a significant and progressive move that will benefit our association, the Ladies Professional Golf Association and the entire spectrum of golf."

Barnes Considers Free Agent Status

BUFFALO (AP) — Marvin Barnes "may very well become a free agent," his attorney told the Associated Press Wednesday.

Barnes, a multi-talented and multi-touted forward obtained by the Buffalo Braves in a trade with the Detroit Pistons two weeks ago, was suspended Tuesday. He had missed two practices and a spokesman said he needs time to clarify some contractual problems dating back to his original contract with the St. Louis Spirits four years ago.

Les Hudson, a Detroit attorney who represents Barnes, said, "From the information we have, substantial portions of the contract he originally signed with the St. Louis Spirits have not been fulfilled."

Marvin wants to play in Buffalo, but he felt that he could not play until his contract problems are clarified. "We always advise our players to honor their contracts if that's feasible. But the general consensus is that something has gone wrong."

"There is the possibility of arbitration and in my opinion, he would probably become a free agent," Hudson said.

Braves' Owner John Y. Brown replied, "There's no basis for that. We have a valid contract with him. If there are any problems Detroit would be responsible."

Pistons' general manager Bob Kauffman said, "To the best of my knowledge all things due to Marvin Barnes by the St. Louis Spirits were taken care of. When we took over his contract we saw no legal problems."

"Now, Buffalo, in the flow-through process, assumes the remains of the contract," Kauffman said.

Kauffman said Barnes had "threatened to do all these things" when with the Pistons, but the matter was resolved after legal counseling. However, he added that Barnes now has new attorneys and "he may have gotten new legal opinions."

Kauffman added that he thinks "Marvin is putting his contract in serious jeopardy. He's treading on some real thin ice legally."

Donald Shupak, a former part-owner of the defunct Spirits, said, "The Spirits don't owe anybody any money ever, and I think I can say that for the Pistons and the Braves as well."

"My accountants documented it twice for Marvin's prior accountants and for both the NBA and ABA before the merger. I would be perfectly happy to document again," Shupak said.

Hudson said he and colleague Ed Bell are planning a press conference to explain Barnes' side, but had no further comment "since it may become part of a lawsuit."

Brown blames Barnes' many past agents for his legal problems.

"That's what's wrong in pro sports. Marvin has some quite serious financial problems and a lot of it came from his agents. The agents he's had have hit him up pretty heavy, and he may feel he's playing for nothing with all his creditors."

"I frankly would rather Marvin not come in here on the team until he's ready to settle down. He's been taken down the path many times, and he's going to have to learn that he can make decisions for himself," Brown said.

Kauffman noted, "John Brown can afford to be without Marvin's services more than Marvin can afford to sit out."

Texanettes Entertain Panola JC

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

If South Plains College's Texanettes can just survive the next three days, coach Gayle Nicholas feels her squad will be well on its way to repeating as Western Junior College Conference champions.

SPC entertains defending national champion Panola tonight and then faces Howard College in a key conference match-up Saturday.

The Texanettes have already battled back from such happenings as:
 • Losing 5-10 Cheryl Rogers of Abernathy, last year's third-leading scorer, to cartilage surgery after only four games;
 • Having one award winner decide not to return to school after getting married;
 • Having one freshman recruit break a leg during the summer.

"Yes," explains the coach, "we're doing very well (9-2 including 2-0 in conference play) considering all the problems we've had."

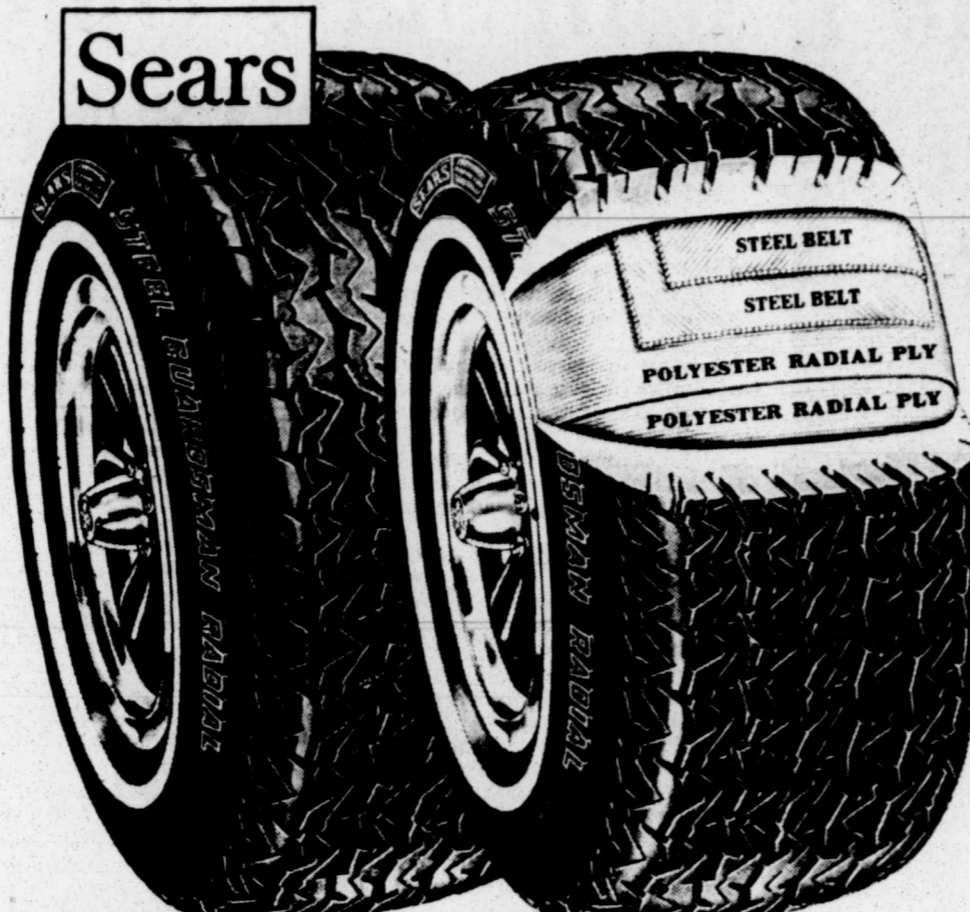

"Donnette (Marble, 5-10, from Floydada, the leading scorer on a team that finished fifth in the nation last year) is hampered by a bad ankle and turned it again against Odessa Monday (in a 62-53) win. I just hope nothing else happens."

SPC will have Miss Marble, 5-5 sophomore Brenda Ward of Cooper, 5-9 frosh Beverly Baker of Lockney, 5-8 sophomore Lorie Davis, and 5-11 freshman Mary Easley of Duncanville in the starting lineup tonight.

ONE AGAINST THE WORLD?—Seagraves runningback Steve McCormick appears to be the only Eagle on the field Friday as the nine Sunray Bobcats walk away after bringing him down. McCormick carried 17 times for 121 yards and three TDs in the 33-7 win. Seagraves faces Wall at 8 p.m. Friday in Snyder in the Class A semifinals. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Wall Stays On Ground En Route To Semifinals

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Like Seagraves, Wall has had a good run of athletes the last three years, twice winning the 9-A title outright and sharing it last year, but not advancing in the playoffs.

And, as any good playoff team, defense has been the rallying point this year. "The kids have really played good defense all year long," points out head coach Warren Townley, who is quick to add, "and we've got to do it again this Friday because Seagraves is sure impressive."

Wall's not bad, either, as it outscored its district competition 199-3, with only Big Lake preventing a whitewash.

Prior to this year, Wall's only playoff experience as a Class A team was a 12-0 bidistrict loss to DeLeon in 1975, the year DeLeon beat Seagraves 37-7 en route to the state title.

"Most of our kids were sophomores on that team and most have been starting for three years," Townley says.

Wall only throws "six to eight times a game" so that leaves the backs to chalk up most of the yardage.

Halback Barry Brodnax has carried 144 times for 791 yards to lead the parade, but reserve halfback Danny Herrera had 725 yards on 142 carries, 190-pound tailback Clayton Weishuhn 725 yards and 12 TDs on 112 totes and 240-pound fullback

Roger Strube 664 yards and 10 TDs on 131 tries. Reserve tailback Mark Hirt had 344 yards on 49 tries and has eight TDs. Quarterback George Sharkley has 71 carries for 131 yards.

But, oh that defense. No team has scored more than 8 points on the Hawks, and that was Jim Ned in the third game of the season. DeLeon managed only 5 in bidistrict. Aledo 7 in regional and Pottsboro 6 in quarter-finals.

Plus, no team has rushed for more than 100 yards against Wall this year and of the six TDs allowed this year, only three have been on the ground.

DeLeon managed only 38 yards rushing. Aledo 102 and Pottsboro 125 plus that trio combined for less than 200 yards passing.

Wall has a passing attack, as Sharkley has hit 21 of 70 for 406 yards and seven TDs, with split end Mike Cannon latching onto seven for 242 yards and four scores. Clayton Weishuhn is the defensive leader, too, averaging 11 tackles from his middle linebacker berth.

Both Wall and Seagraves will take perfect 13-0 marks to Snyder for their 8 p.m. semifinal matchup Friday. The other semifinal matches 11-2 Arp against 12-1 East Bernard at 8 p.m. Friday in College Station.

TRACKSTER HONORED

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — Rosemarie Ackermann, East Germany's record breaking high jumper, has been selected the outstanding woman track and field performer of the year by Track and Field News. Voters who determined the winner of the publications annual award, announced Tuesday, gave Ackermann a perfect 230 points. She cleared the "magic" barrier of 2 meters (6 feet, 6 1/2 inches) and won at the year's two biggest meets, the European and World Cups.

CHS Dominates Team

Three members of Coronado's district champion volleyball team were selected to the first team District 4-AAAA volleyball squad announced Wednesday. Ruth Cummings, Ida Garcia and Lisa Goodman represented CHS on the first team along with Kenna Cantrell of Monterey, Mary Sue Stiles of Monterey and Mary Jones of Lubbock High.

Second-team members are Tony Mendiaz and Anna Wilson of Hereford, Shanna Igo of Plainview, Linda Morin and Era Estrada of Lubbock High and Jan Williamson of Coronado.

Pet Fans Seek Hermit Crabs

National Geographic Service

WASHINGTON—Move over, pet rocks. Hermit crabs are here.

Terrestrial hermit crabs are the latest in sedate pets, store owners say. Found in South and Central America and the Florida Keys, they have become big sellers at pet shops and even department stores in the United States. Most of the crabs end up in terrariums.

As one sales pitch goes:

"hermit crabs are clean, hardy, eat little, and won't reproduce in captivity. They are active, whimsical, and have a cute walk."

"I think they're kind of cute, but some varieties are uglier than sin," said Pete Lieber of the Great American Crab Company, which sells 25,000 hermit crabs a week in the United States and Canada.

Sales of hermit crabs have climbed in the last year; one company that began selling them eight months ago now imports 1.2 million a month. Proud owners also supply their pets with crab chow, crab leashes, and for the active crab, exercise kits.

The hermit crab craze has some environmentalists and biologist worried, reports the National Geographic Society. Land hermit crab populations appear to be declining, especially in the Florida Keys.

"Nobody really know how many hermit crabs there are, but if you're importing 1.2 million a month, you're going to make a dent in the population," said a biologist at Florida International University in Miami.

Scientists, environmentalists, industry executives, and government officials recently got together at a symposium in Florida entitled: "Hermit Crabs as Pets: To Be Or Not To Be." Most participants agreed that more must be learned about the land hermit crab and it numbers before the pet industry can be regulated.

But not everyone believes the hermit crab business needs regulating.

"We get a nice harmless business going here and they want to go and spoil it," moaned an executive of the largest hermit crab importer.

Like other crabs and shrimp, hermit crabs have five pairs of legs. The first two legs have pinchers, which are used for eating and as weapons. Promoters say that if the pets are handled gently, their pinchers pose little hazard for people.

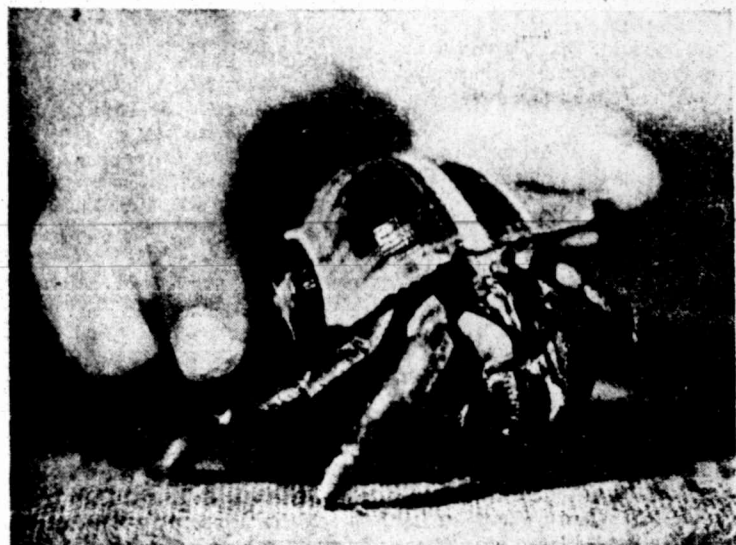

"I've handled tens of thousands of them and I've only been pinched twice," Lieber of the crab company said.

For a hermit crab, home is where the fit is. Possessing no shell of their own, they spend a good part of their lives "house hunting," trying out shells that have been cast aside by mollusks, usually snails.

Finding a properly fitting shell can be a matter of life and death. To protect its soft abdomen from exposure to hot dry air, a hermit crab will evict and even kill another crab to get its shell. Other times hermit crabs willingly exchange abodes, and occasionally a large group assembles to swap shells in musical chairs fashion.

Hermit crab salesmen take advantage of the shell game by coaxing crabs into trading the shells they picked up on the beach for more colorful one.

"You can dress up your crabs any way you like," Lieber said.

STRANGE LOOKING PET—Ten legs, eyes on moveable stalks, and a borrowed shell add up to a strange looking pet. But hermit crabs make good ones, their owners say. Although terrestrial hermit crabs eat little, they must have access to water to keep their gills moist. (Photo Courtesy National Geographic)
