Storm Reneges On Heavy Snow Threat

By DEAN GLAZE
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

A CHILLING winter storm which promised to blanket an already icy South Plains with snow apparently lost its breath on the way and left only token amounts across the area Friday. Little more is anticipated today.

The winter storm watch for West Texas has been changed to a travel advisory for tonight, with intermittent periods of snow forecast to end by this evening. Additional accumulations of generally an inch or less are expected.

Weathermen indicated some clearing could begin by late this afternoon. The temperature should reach the upper 20s today and dip into the low teens again tonight. Probability of snow is 20 percent today and less than 20 percent tonight.

Warmup Due Sunday

The thermometer should rise above the unfamiliar 32-degree mark Sunday. The temperature in Lubbock has been below freezing since 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Area residents can plan to hang up the coats and gloves for a few days, at least. Sunday's warming trend should find the mercury bursting into the upper 30s. By Monday, 50-degree weather can be expected, and readings should climb into the 60s by Wednesday.

Travel warnings have been issued for West Texas today as a dome of arctic air continues to influence the area. A series of weak upper level disturbances should continue the threat of snowfall over much of the area, especially from the South Plains southward.

Snowfalls Minimal

Brownfield residents reported two inches of the white stuff covered the ground Friday. Post, Lamesa, Sundown, Slaton and Tahoka all reported an inch. Reports of only a few flakes were quite common across the South Plains, with Muleshoe, Petersburg, Springlake, Spur, Abernathy, Farwell and Matador indicating extremely light snowfall.

Most highways across the South Plains were hazardous because of icy patches, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety indicated.

The storm that deposited so little moisture here is expected to intensify today and leave from one to three inches of snow across North Texas by late today. The additional precipitation should create hazardous driving conditions. Radar indicated snow in the Dallas-Fort Worth area early Friday evening.

Chill Stretches To Gulf

Tyler, Sherman, Abilene, San Angelo, Kerrville, Lampasas and Beaumont also were receiving snow early Friday night. Icy road conditions were reported from Texarkana to Houston.

A few snowflakes were reported in Galveston Bay Thursday, and the city of Galveston was dusted with snow Friday.

"We've had a few flakes off and on but no accumulation. It doesn't amount to anything. But it is the first time in five years," said Tom Kirkpatrick of the National Weather Service in Galveston. It last snowed in Galveston on Jan. 11, 1973.

Crystal City, without natural gas since late summer, when LoVaca Gathering Co. cut off its supply for non-payment of bills, was experiencing additional hardship. Jesse Salas, director of the Zavala County Economic Development Corp., said his agency has distributed more than 600 military-type wood stoves as an interim measure because city plans to install propane systems in low income houses were stalled by red tape.

"There are presently applications for 300 or 400 more wood stoves," Salas said. "I would say a large number of families have been ill. The housing project is in disarray," Salas said; "a lot of the old people there are not warm enough. You can give them an electric heater, but with this kind of cold you almost have to sit on top of them to keep warm."

At least one weather-related death was reported Friday. Williard V. Armstrong Jr., 18, of Paris died Thursday when an inflated innertube he and other youths were using as a makeshift sled went down an icy highway embankment and under the wheels of a large tractor-trailer truck in the Northeast Texas city. Police said another youth jumped clear, attempting unsuccessfully to drag Armstrong with him out of the truck's path. A justice of the peace ruled the death accidental.

In Dallas and Fort Worth, schools were closed for the second consecutive day.

The National Weather Service said the unusual frequency of winter storms in Texas this month could be blamed on a high pressure ridge along the west coast of Canada and the Pacific Northwest that was altering the normal weather pattern. "At the upper levels of the atmosphere the jet streams during the winter normally move across the northern and central portions of the United States," the weather service said.

But because of the high pressure blocking the jet stream "the weather patterns are forced to make an end play around the southern Rockies."

"The current extended 10-day forecast indicates this weather pattern will continue to steer the winter storms across the southern Rockies into Texas," he said.

Snow, Ice Bury East Coast; Cities Become Ghost Towns

By The Associated Press

A BITTER SHROUD of snow and ice buried the East Coast on Friday, halting travel, marooning thousands, turning cities into ghost towns and everyone into pit-neers.

The blizzard that began Thursday night was the worst blast of the winter and the third of a rapid-fire series of storms to batter the region in eight days.

While Floridians were mopping up after a flurry of tornadoes, rock salt and snow shovels up north were worth their weight in gold, and snow shoes and skis were an ideal mode of transit.

Foot Of Snow

More than a foot of paralyzing snow fell overnight from Maryland to Maine and inland to Ohio and Kentucky. Cincinnati had a record 16 inches in 24 hours. The National Weather Service predicted the snow would turn to sleet and freezing rain and continue into the weekend. Flooding was feared.

Transportation was stalled throughout the region: Airports, roads and highways were blocked and closed, motorists were stranded; train service was curtailed or halted; buses were scarce.

Business was almost at a standstill: Bank holidays were declared, stores and government offices were closed.

Schools Empty

Schools were empty and the region was plagued by power blackouts, collapsed roofs and a sense of helplessness.

For millions, it was a snow-enforced vacation as emergencies were declared in New York City, Rhode Island, Harrisburg, Pa., and elsewhere. Everywhere people were ordered to stay off roads and out of cities and to hole up where they could.

Iceicles Feared

Officials feared that growing, dagger-like iceicles would plunge from skyscrapers, and the spectacular new Citicorp building on East 54th street posed a bizarre hazard.

The street was closed because a one-ton sheet of ice was poised on the north side of the roof which had been built as an experimental solar tower. It was feared the ice could slide off and crush pedestrians and motorists.

The storm eroded the nation's business, as commodities trading was halted at all New York exchanges. The New York and American stock exchanges opened late at noon.

"This is one of the worst storms I've seen in 22 years," said Rocco DeLuca, assistant director of the Rhode Island Transportation Department. The Rhode Island General Assembly canceled its session and the state lottery canceled its drawing.

At least three storm-related deaths were reported, including a Louisville boy who died of carbon monoxide poisoning when his mother's car got stuck in a snow drift.

In Boston harbor, fierce winds tore a freighter from its anchorage and shoved it aground. Tugboats battled to dislodge it but failed.

Sadat Rebuffs U.S. Appeals To Revive Jerusalem Talks

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat rejected American efforts Friday to revive the Jerusalem peace talks and denounced Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's "arrogant way" of negotiating.

Sadat's tough words came after a 90-minute meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. In Israel, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan reacted by accusing the Egyptian president of making "absurd demands" on Israel and warned, "Maybe there will be no peace talks."

President Carter told reporters in Atlanta, Ga., the breakdown in the political meetings was "very serious," but he predicted parallel Egyptian-Israeli military talks in Cairo would resume.

Carter, in Atlanta for a Democratic Party fund-raising function, gave no date for reconvening the military negotiations, but said: "They are planning to go ahead with military talks. We hope there won't be anything other than a brief interruption in the political talks."

Egypt Not Informed

ABC News quoted highly placed sources as saying that during the brief Jerusalem peace meeting Israel had agreed to "the right of the Palestinians to participate in the determination of their future," but Foreign Minister Mohammad Kamel did not have time to inform Sadat of this concession before being recalled to Cairo.

The network also quoted the sources as saying Sadat's decision to recall his foreign minister may have been made before Kamel left Egypt for the talks.

Sadat met with Vance at the presidential palace on the banks of the Nile 15 miles north of Cairo.

"Door Not Closed"

Facing reporters afterward, he said: "Whenever Israel agrees to the principles not to tread on other's land or sovereignty, everything can be resumed again. The door to peace is not closed."

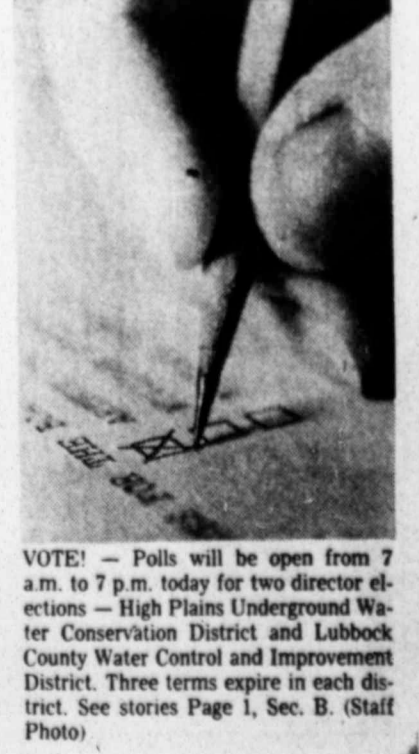

Sadat said Israeli insistence on keeping Jewish settlements in the Sinai Peninsula and other occupied Arab lands were "a joke" and said Israel must abandon such an idea before peace talks can continue.

Dayan, interviewed on Israeli television, praised American peacemaking efforts in the Mideast as crucial and constructive but said that if Sadat does not compromise on his demands: "It looks like deadlock."

GOP Attorney Quits Under Fire, Rejects Lame Duck Status

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Marston, the Republican U.S. attorney from Philadelphia, resigned Friday rather than accept lame duck status forced on him by an attorney general determined to fire him as soon as a replacement can be found.

"I guess that's the end," said Marston, after emerging from a two-hour meeting with Attorney General Griffin Bell at the Justice Department. He said he would vacate the prosecutor's office on Monday and suggested that his top deputy take over temporarily.

Marston told reporters that Bell told him the Carter administration's decision to fire him "is final."

Not To Reconsider

"He indicated he is not inclined to reconsider," Marston said. Marston said the attorney general told him, he never considered allowing him to finish his four-year term, which has 2 1/2 years to go.

In a brief statement, Bell substantiated Marston's account of the meeting. Bell said he asked Marston to remain on the job until he could find a replacement "at least Mr. Marston's equal in ability, character and integrity."

"It was agreed that the Philadelphia office of the United States attorney will pursue all pending investigations with vigor," Bell said. "There will be no letup in the present approach or attitude toward public corruption."

"Grave Questions"

Marston said he was "very disappointed" and that he felt the controversy "raised very grave questions" because of the role of Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., in pressing for his removal.

President Carter has said he urged Bell to "expedite" Marston's ouster after receiving a call from Eilberg, who is said by sources in Philadelphia and the Justice Department to be involved in a criminal investigation by Marston's office.

In Atlanta, White House press secretary Jody Powell said it appeared that the attorney general was given no choice in the matter of firing Marston.

Offer Rejected

Powell said Bell had offered Marston a chance to stay on until it was determined whether his ouster would affect ongoing investigations, but Marston turned down the offer.

The press secretary said he did not know whether Bell consulted with the president before taking action on the Marston question or acted on his own.

Marston told reporters in a corridor outside Bell's office that the attorney general offered to keep him on for about three months, until a replacement was found.

"I respectfully declined," Marston said. "I don't want to be a lame duck. I've been crippled by the events of the last few weeks."

Marston, 35, who has been in office about 18 months, said he would recommend that the Justice department name Kirk Karaszewicz, his top deputy, as his temporary successor.

Benjamin Civiletti, head of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, will go to Philadelphia on Monday to help in the transition, he said.

Marston denied that he is running for any elective office. And he said that Bell, in explaining his firing, "did not express any dissatisfaction with my work."

Referring to Eilberg, Marston said, "See GOP ATTORNEY Page 14"

Daniel Would Speed Operation Of Attorney General's Office

By PAT PATRICK
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

PRICE DANIEL JR. wants to speed up "nuts and bolts" workings of the state attorney general's office so citizens and agencies requesting opinions get them quicker.

The office now is averaging one request a day for opinions, and generally it takes about three months for responses, he said on a Lubbock campaign swing Friday.

"In Texas, an attorney general's opinion carries weight second only to an appellate court decision ... these opinions must be made quicker ... many times the requests are about something where you need an answer right now, it's going to affect something that's happening just a few days away."

"And they must be made without regard to politics, with the highest ethics," Daniel said.

Like his Democratic primary opponent Mark White, Daniel promised to go to court against President Carter's energy package if it "seeks to intervene or to regulate or to distribute or to price our purely intrastate gas."

Daniel noted he has successfully fought federal government intervention in the past. He said he handled a case as a private attorney challenging an attempt by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to regulate the development and sale of lots in city subdivisions.

Daniel also agreed with another stand by former secretary of state White — that agricultural land should be taxed according to its productivity, not its market value. Restructuring the state's property tax system is one way farmers struggling with economic problems can be helped locally, he said.

Daniel stated that under Texas law, the attorney general has "little power" in fighting criminal activity. "Prosecution and indictment are left up to the local district attorney and grand jury."

"But I have been trying to devise a way to fight criminal activity that extends beyond one district attorney's and grand jury's jurisdiction, such as organized crime and drug activity or where one DA just refuses to do something."

He recalled that his father, former attorney general, governor and now a Texas Supreme Court justice, once proposed state grand juries.

The idea was battled by local district attorneys who feared a

1977's Weather Marred By Droughts, Floods, Bitter Cold, Snowfalls

By NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

WASHINGTON — From the parched croplands of California to the snow-choked streets of Buffalo, N.Y., 1977 will be remembered as the year the weather went haywire.

The winter alone cost the nation $3 billion in economic growth and $5 billion in increased fuel use, Commerce Department analysts estimate.

From Philadelphia to Peoria, January was the coldest month ever. Temperatures in the Ohio River Basin set a string of records: minus 25 in Cincinnati, minus 21 in Evansville, Ind., and minus 17 in Pittsburgh. The cold froze 200,000 workers out of jobs when natural gas shortages closed down businesses.

The cold gripped much of the South; the mercury dipped to 1 below in Huntsville, Ala., 6 above in Jackson, Miss., and a ridiculous 10 in Pensacola, Fla. The frosty weather meant millions of dollars in losses for Florida citrus, vegetable, and tourism industries.

Along with record-setting cold came firsts in snowfall. On Jan. 31 snow rested on part of every state of the contiguous 48 for the first time on record, writes

Thomas Y. Canby in the National Geographic. Never had snow fallen as far south as Miami, and never in 10 years of satellite observation had it covered so much of the Northern Hemisphere.

In Miami and Palm Beach, January sunseekers stared in disbelief at the lakes floating down. In Buffalo it snowed for five straight days. By season's end, 200 inches had fallen there.

"The blizzard hit while I was returning from a trip out of the city," a 65-year-old Buffalo cabbie said. "I made it to a jam-packed pizzeria and stood up all night next to the oven. Next day I reached a firehouse, where I could sleep on the floor. The third day I got home."

While the East snowed, the West cried out for more snow. Lack of snowfall in the Rockies closed ski resort after resort in Colorado, adding up to a $78 million loss for the ski industry. Bears in Alaska came out of hibernation in the balmy winter, and Anchorage schools canceled hockey games because of slush.

For California, still suffering the effects of two years of drought, 1977 was a record-shatterer. Snowpack in the Sierra Nevada, which provides much of the water for the state's $9 billion agricultural industry, was only a quarter of normal. The snow shortage spelled a billion-dollar loss for farmers, set the stage for a summer of forest fires, and brought water rationing as a way of life.

As a dry spring turned to an abnormally hot and dry summer, much of the nation was drought stricken. By mid-July parts of 35 states had been placed on the federal emergency drought list.

Eastern South Dakota was drier than in the dust bowl days, and howling winds scoured clouds of dust from winter wheat fields in Texas, Oklahoma, and eastern Colorado, killing livestock.

But when it did rain in 1977, it poured. A 24-hour deluge in Kansas City took the lives of 25 persons in a freak occurrence described by the National Weather Service as probable once every 1,000 years. And the third major flood in 100 years in Johnstown, Pa., killed 75.

Only tornadoes and hurricanes, the traditional headline-grabbers, kept a low profile. It was an off year for tornadoes, and there were only five hurricanes, compared with an average of seven.

Lubbock and vicinity: High today in upper 20s with a 20 percent chance of snow accumulations up to one inch. Low tonight in the lower teens. Hazardous driving conditions because of the considerable cloudiness and intermittent snow flurries.

Administration Seeks Labor, Business Help On Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation clipped nearly 7 cents from every American's dollar in 1977 and President Carter said Friday only voluntary restraint by business and labor will slow price increases this year.

Year-end figures from the Labor Department showed consumer prices rose 0.4 percent in December and brought the total increase for the year to 6.8 percent — 2 percent more than in 1976.

The acceleration of inflation last year, although in line with administration forecasts, reflected higher food prices last winter.

But as the year drew to a close, consumer prices were rising at a more encouraging pace — a 4.6 percent annual rate in contrast to the 10 percent rate in the first quarter.

In December, grocery prices rose only 0.1 percent. The administration is expecting inflation to continue at a rate of between 6 and 7 percent in 1978, with the average family's food budget increasing 4 to 6 percent.

Carter's new anti-inflation program, outlined to Congress Friday, is designed to get labor unions and businesses to accept smaller increases in wages and prices in order to reduce inflation by one-half percent a year.

The 6.8 percent jump in consumer prices during Carter's first year in office was up from 4.8 percent the previous year, but compared favorably with increases of 7 percent in 1975 and 12.2 percent in 1974.

Last month, the consumer price index stood at 186.1, meaning that a marketbasket of goods and services selling for $100 in the 1967 base period now cost $186.10.

The index is based on a monthly survey of more than 400 items sold in some 18,000 retail outlets and reflects the spending patterns of urban wage and clerical workers who make up about 40 percent of the population.

Beginning next month, the Labor Department will issue a broader consumer price index to reflect the buying habits of about 60 percent of the population.

Despite the inflation, the department said the purchasing power of the average worker's paycheck increased 3.4 percent last year, largely because of a change in the federal income tax structure. However, real earnings — take home pay adjusted for taxes and inflation — declined 0.3 percent last month.

The seasonally adjusted 0.4 percent increase in consumer prices in December followed a 0.5 percent rise the previous month and monthly increases of 0.3 percent in August, September and October.

A nearly 13 percent drop in egg prices and declines for poultry, dairy products, and coffee held down the rise in grocery costs. Non-food commodities increased 0.5 percent. Higher medical fees were largely to blame.

Female Police Cadets Win Reinstatement Bid

DETROIT (AP) — Two women police cadets fired in 1976 by Livonia officials because they refused to cut their waist-length hair must be reinstated and paid about $15,000 in back pay each, a Wayne County judge has ruled.

Livonia policy said only that officers must wear their hair above their collars and made no mention of cutting it. Wayne County Circuit Judge Joseph B. Sullivan said in ordering reinstatement of the women after a court hearing Thursday. The cadets, Debra Owens and Kathleen Sullivan, were fired in June 1976.

American playwright Eugene O'Neil died in 1953.

Over the year, food prices rose 8 percent — up sharply from a 0.6 percent increase in 1976. The Labor Department attributed much of the higher prices to the effects of last winter's severe weather on crops and food supplies.

Prices of services last year, including medical care, rent and transportation, increased 7.9 percent, compared with 7.3 percent in 1976. Non-food commodities rose 4.9 percent, less than the 5.1 percent increase the previous year.

Prices for new cars, fuel oil and gasoline increased more in 1977 than in 1976, the government said. Used car prices declined last year following a sharp increase the previous year.

Third Hughes Aide Forfeits Opportunity For Inheritance

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A third personal aide who believes the Mormon will is not the valid last testament of Howard Hughes picked up a pen in court Friday and signed away any inheritance he might have under the document.

James Rickard, who served as a personal aide to the reclusive multi-millionaire from 1972 through Hughes' death in April 1976, was the latest person to back up his belief with a renounced claim in the court fight over the hand-written, three-page document.

The waiver was presented to Rickard by Los Angeles attorney Harold Rhoden, who is trying to convince a Clark County District Court jury that Hughes did write the Mormon Will.

Hughes' relatives, virtually unmentioned in the purported will, claim the document is forged. Rhoden represents former Hughes' aide Noah Dietrich, whom the will names executor of the Hughes estate.

On Friday, Rhoden continued his efforts to discredit the testimony of Rickard and other aides who constantly took care of Hughes for many years.

Rhoden is also trying to show the aides really didn't care much about Hughes and were only waiting around for Hughes to die so they could inherit a portion of his money.

Each time Rhoden has put the waiver on the witness stand in front of an aide, the aide has signed. According to the waivers, each aide could be giving up as much as $10 million after taxes if the will is declared genuine by the jury.

While former aides John Holmes and Clarence Waldron signed the waiver rather quickly, Rickard paused thoughtfully for nearly a minute, then asked presiding judge Keith Hayes:

"Your honor, is this a highly irregular procedure?"

"Yes sir," Hayes replied.

"And you have no objections," Rickard asked the judge.

"It's your decision," Hayes replied.

"Well, I want my testimony to stand, so I'll sign it," Rickard said, then affixed his signature in black ink from a felt pen.

"This is almost like having to sign my name in blood...or my testimony isn't any good," Rickard said.

On each occasion, attorneys representing Hughes' relatives have objected to Rhoden's tactic, calling it improper and inappropriate.

A witness shouldn't be forced to cut out his tongue to prove he's telling the truth...or walk on hot coals like they did in the 15th century," said Paul Freese, Los Angeles, who represent relatives on Hughes' father's side of the family.

Heavy Planting Expected In Spite Of Farm Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's chief economist said Friday growers of 12 major crops intend to plant more than the government expected despite a nationwide farm strike.

Howard Hjort, economics division director, said the statistics from states accounting for 95 percent of the crops involved contain nothing to indicate the strike has had an effect nationally.

Several thousand farmers have been in Washington since Wednesday lobbying for higher prices.

Hjort said he expected plantings to be down 1 percent, but as of Jan. 1, when the sample was taken, farmers said they would plant about as much as they did in 1976, or about 5.2 million acres less than last year.

Earlier, several key office holders indicated that the strike may be improving the climate for more government farm aid, but specific proposals were still being rebuffed.

About 200 of the 3,000 or more protesters here for a week of rallies and lobbying left a "tractorcade" from the Capitol to the Agriculture Department and back and tried for the second day to occupy Secretary Bob Bergland's outer office. But guards were posted at the doors and did not allow the demonstrators to enter.

Bergland, escorted by three bodyguards, met earlier with about 200 demonstrators for 75 minutes at the Capitol before flying to Atlanta for a Democratic fund-raising dinner.

"I thought the meeting was very worthwhile," said Bergland, who urged the farmers to use existing programs to solve problems of low prices and said he shared their concern about saving family farms.

Meanwhile, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the ranking Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee, hosted a meeting with midwestern strikers. Rep. John W. Jenrette Jr. and others in South Carolina's congressional delegation held one for Southerners.

In his State of the Union address Thursday night, President Carter said, "It's incumbent on us to monitor very carefully the farm situation and continue to work harmoniously there is hope for new farm legislation." But Bergland and Carter have said repeatedly that they want to give last year's changes in farm programs and large boosts in price supports and income supplements a chance to work.

Greg Shuler of Springfield, Colo., where the strike-leading American Agriculture Movement is based, said: "The president didn't offer any solution to our problems, only the recognition that they did exist."

On that basis, he said, "it's somewhat encouraging. Only time will tell what further action he will take."

Bergland said he would use all of his authority to improve the farm economy but would not exceed that authority, seek new laws or break his farm-program budget, expected to be about $5 billion this year.

And he warned the demonstrators: "Don't blow it! That's very important. All of American agriculture will be judged by what you do... As long as you stay within the law, the American Agriculture Movement is a spectacular success from a public relations standpoint, but don't block highways, don't tear up the town."

Local newspapers have carried extensive stories concerning complaints of traffic tie-ups and rowdiness related to the protest.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., told the strikers that they "have been a powerful tool of persuasion that should improve the climate for agricultural legislation."

But he said the 1977 farm bill, which the strikers consider inadequate, "was the strongest we can get."

The strikers are seeking "100 percent parity" — the buying power farmers had in 1910-14 when farm costs and prices were in fair balance. They disagree over whether the government should assure it with subsidies or whether buyers should be forced to pay the price.

That demand — coupled with the strikers' calls for less government involvement in farm markets — is logically inconsistent, politically impossible now and unprecedented in U.S. law, Foley said.

AN EDITORIAL:

Sen. Bentsen Misses Boat

SEN LLOYD Bentsen, D-Texas, was well aware ahead of time that his announcement supporting the Panama Canal treaties would stir a furor among those in his home-state. With that knowledge, he will not be surprised at what follows from a large number of his constituents. Bentsen predicated his backing for the Panama Pacts on "the understanding that both the U.S. and Panama would sign an agreement guaranteeing this nation's right to protect the Canal Zone."

THE SENATOR qualified his final decision, however, not only on that basis but on several other factors which we find most disturbing. Sen Bentsen returned at midweek from a visit to the Panama Canal Zone, where he held personal talks with Panamanian Dictator Gen Omar Torrijos.

It was during one such meeting, the senator told this newspaper, that Gen Torrijos gave him his word that he would accept the amendment regarding U.S. rights to defend the canal and for priority use of American vessels during an emergency.

Sen Bentsen says he will incorporate such language, essentially the Oct. 14, 1977 "communiqué" which followed a meeting of Gen Torrijos and President Carter, into the treaty language.

IN REACHING this conclusion Sen Bentsen was quoted as saying that he had made

AN EDITORIAL:

Call This 'Dump' Paradise?

THE U.S. Postal Service on Friday issued two stamps to commemorate Captain James Cook's discovery of Hawaii, amid indications of trouble in the island paradise.

Two stamps were issued together—a 50-cent stamp sheet containing 25 stamps that are portraits of Cook, a British explorer, and 25 stamps containing a drawing of Cook's ship "Resolution."

During his 1778 voyage, Cook landed at Waimea on the island of Kauai. He then traveled to the west coast of North America and then north to the Aleutian Islands.

THE TROPICAL island Eden that Cook discovered, however, has begun to lose some of its glamor in recent years.

The pace of development has threatened the Hawaiian environment, the economy has turned sour, and scandals have rocked the political structure.

Hawaiian environmentalists have worked to prevent the kind of commercial development that turned Waikiki Beach into a strip of high-rise hotels and low-life honky-tonks. According to them, the effort to save the natural beauty of the island means a redirection of the economy away from tourism, Hawaii's biggest moneymaker and employer.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Canal Good As Gone; Send Money—Reagan

WASHINGTON—A few days back I wrote about the problem of direct-mail appeals for political and other causes, and the need to insure that money given in response to such appeals will go for the purpose advertised.

A notable example of this problem has emerged from the respectable confines of the Republican National Committee (RNC).

The RNC has raised a ton of money on the issue of the Panama Canal—an estimated net of $700,000, to be specific.

These funds have been given in response to a hard-hitting letter, signed by former Gov. Ronald Reagan, urging an all-out effort to defeat the Panama Canal treaties now before the senate.

"UNLESS YOU AND I act now," says this missive written on RNC letterhead, "one of the most vital shipping and defense waterways will be in the complete control of the anti-American, pro-Marxist dictator, General Torrijos. Believe me, without your support, the Canal is as good as gone. Please send the most generous contribution you can afford."

Contributors to this appeal are asked to sign a form addressed to Reagan, pledging money to the RNC and saying "I agree with you that surrender of our Canal to Panama's pro-Marxist dictator Omar Torrijos is a potential disaster for America from a political, military and economic standpoint."

"I want to help you and chairman Bill Brock in your nationwide campaign today to alert Americans to this dangerous treaty and to generate millions of endorsement petitions for your views in order to defeat pro-treaty liberal Democrats at the ballot box on election day."

All of which sounds very well, but raises the interesting question of what the RNC is actually doing with the money raised.

THIS ISSUE CAME to the forefront a few days back when Reagan and Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., who heads up the Reagan-connected Citizens for the Republic, sought to enlist the cooperation of the RNC in an effort to oppose the treaties.

his decision after leaders from Central American countries near Panama had advised him of the "alternatives" Panama had if the U.S. did not ratify the treaty.

"I do not dismiss lightly the possibility that Panama might turn to the Soviet Union and Cuba to build a new sea level canal if the treaties are rejected," Bentsen said.

He also foresaw the danger of Panamanian uprisings and loss of U.S. stature or worse in the Caribbean if the treaties are rejected.

FRANKLY, WE are not as surprised by Sen. Bentsen's decision as we are his reasoning. If indeed we are at a point where we can't defend the canal now against a takeover, then we certainly can't do so after pulling out.

If Panama would be inclined to turn to Cuba and Russia for help in building a new canal, then it would be to its advantage to do so regardless of what we might do.

However, on the surface this argument is so spurious we are amazed that a man of Sen. Bentsen's stature would advance it.

In this case, Sen. Bentsen is not voting the views of his constituents but of one man—himself. He also is helping further the picture of Uncle Sam as a weak giant which can't or won't stand up for its rights anywhere in the world. And that is tragic for the American people who still believe in freedom and a strong America.

'You Must Admit—He's Lighter Than Before'

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

It's 1980 Or Never

WASHINGTON—Shortly after attending a secret meeting of the Reagan inner circle in Los Angeles Dec. 20, one of Ronald Reagan's top political operatives began spreading a message that over the ensuing four weeks has upset all previous Republican calculations. "I wouldn't have thought it possible," the operative informed a fellow Republican politician, "but believe me, this guy is running." This is no isolated judgment. The new belief that Reagan is more likely than not to make a third try for President in 1980 at age 69 is generally shared not only by those attending the Dec. 20 meeting but also others in Reagan's confidence. That reverses the conventional wisdom of the past year, shattering preconceptions of 1980 presidential politics.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

The Giant Lives On

POPE PAUL VI has lifted the excommunication penalty for Roman Catholics who remarry after divorce. Existing only in the United States, the penalty was imposed in 1884 by the Plenary Council of Baltimore. "Aggiornamento" is an Italian word meaning "catching up with today." There are nearly 541 million Roman Catholics in the world. Pope Paul's fundamental problem is how to hold fast to mankind's elevation through the authority of the church while at the same time modifying the Church's methods in a gradual "aggiornamento." His Holiness confronts the critical dilemma of hierarchy, the traditional authority of the Pope himself, the nuncios, cardinals and bishops, and how they arrive at that authority.

THE POPE STILL faces the late Belgian Cardinal Suenes' movement advocating that a "Copernican revolution" should upend the Church's hierarchical pyramid and the organized clerical protests in France. These protests boiled over at the 1968 consecration of the late Jean Cardinal Daniélou, an "immortal" of the Academic Francaise. Nearly 100 European bishops met at Chur, Switzerland, to discuss the problem of bishops. These bishops and the Pope alike are still bombarded by anti-hierarchy petitions of more than 100 rebel priests. A phalanx of Dutch priests challenged compulsory clerical celibacy, of which you find outcroppings in our country. More than 10,000 priests have asked to be released from their celibacy vows.

MOREOVER, THERE are revolts against Pope Paul's most criticized act—His Holiness' condemnation of all but the rhythm method of birth control. And so it goes. Tragically, in this turmoil at least 7,000 of the 70,000 priests in Italy alone have left the priesthood. In the Western countries, the number of trained seminarians (priests) has declined in only a few years from 167,000 to 147,000. Pope Pius told World Vocation Day pilgrims while blessing them in St. Peter's Square: "Without priests and nuns, how can the Church carry out its mission?"

THE ROMAN Catholic Church is the indestructible giant. The history of European civilization is a long cycle of rising and decaying cultures and beliefs with periods of darkness intervening. What if St. Paul had never undergone the experience on the Damascus road? Except for St. Paul, what might Christianity have been like? Europe's Dark Age covered about 700 years, between the 5th and 12th centuries. Nevertheless, from the ancient dynasties to Charles VII with Joan of Arc, Popes survived, the Church survived. Can we imagine such an acoustic of time as the Papacy? Paint cracks, canvas decays. Two thousand years. Who can conceive of anything so prodigious?

If Reagan runs, other conservative aspirants can abandon hope. Chances dwindle for a new Republican face opposing President Carter.

REAGAN MIGHT confront a comparatively uncluttered path to the nomination, even though he would be the oldest presidential nominee in history, unless his candidacy caused Gerald Ford to renew their 1976 death struggle.

Reagan will not decide until after the 1978 election, and he will not run then if convinced that challenging Jimmy Carter would be hopeless.

But the situation today is the reverse of what it was prior to 1976. While advisers then begged a reluctant Reagan to run, Reagan today shows more enthusiasm than most members of his inner circle.

That inner circle met at Reagan's Pacific Palisades home Dec. 20, ostensibly to discuss operations of the Reagan Citizens for the Republic (CFTR).

Besides Reagan and his wife, Nancy, his day-to-day advisers were there, Lyn Nofziger, director of CFTR, San Diego lawyer Ed Meese, attorney for CFTR, and Pete Hannaford, who with partner Mike Deaver (absent because of a cold) manages Reagan's lecturing and journalistic enterprises.

COMING WEST from Washington for the meeting were 1976 Reagan campaign aides John Sears, Jim Lake and Dave Keene. Also on hand were Dr. Martin Anderson of Stanford University and Holmes Tuttle, millionaire Los Angeles auto dealer and longtime Reagan fund-raiser. In 1975, many of them—especially Nofziger and Sears—were talking Reagan into the 1976 race. But now some have been giving informal advice to other hopefuls—Sears to Sen. Howard Baker, Nofziger to Sen. Robert Dole, Keene to ex-Treasurer Sec. William Simon.

Several of those present felt Reagan should play elder statesman while getting rich on his lecture fees.

BY THE TIME the meeting ended, these attitudes had been modified substantially. Nothing specific was said, but nobody could mistake Reagan's desire for a last try.

The mere fact that Reagan hinted he has been thinking of dropping his much-criticized $5,000 speaking fee for political events (though he has not yet decided) revealed what was on his mind.

Although there are Reaganites (notably Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, his 1976 national chairman) who actively urge a 1980 candidacy, Reagan's new willingness encounters private doubts even among the inner circle.

Despite his physical and mental vigor, some have misgivings about his age and others dread a repetition of the anti-Reagan onslaught by "establishment" Republicans.

They know one sure way to cool Reagan's ardor: convince him and, more important, Mrs. Reagan that another race would be "embarrassing"—bringing annihilation by Jimmy Carter in the general election.

SO, TWO CRITICAL questions: Is there any other Republican who could run a better race against Carter? Would Reagan be a sure loser in November?

Since within the Reagan circle the answer is no, there is no inclination of those at Pacific Palisades—no matter how unenthusiastic some may be—to argue with Reagan.

To a man, those present Dec. 20 are ready to enroll again. Other conservatives whom the Reaganites are now advising—especially Bob Dole—would not likely compete against Reagan.

Howard Baker might oppose him, but Sears has made clear since the Pacific Palisades meeting that his first commitment is to Reagan.

The principal obstruction against Reagan's unimpeded path to the nomination might be Jerry Ford's private pledge to run for President again if needed to stop Reagan.

The bloody prospect of a Ford-Reagan rematch is the principal reason why the news from Reagan's intimates is not universally cheered even by conservative Republicans.

Tenderfoot: "Why are hurricanes named after girls?"
Meteorologist: "Because they're spinsters."

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Sam Did It To Us

THE CHRISTMAS BILLS are rolling in and you're discovering that you got carried away by the holiday unrelenting and spent too much. And you blame yourself for not shopping around for lower prices.

Well, don't. This is one you can blame on that little old inflation machine, the U.S. government itself.

Uncle Sam is the real reason it cost you more to play Santa this year. Especially if your bag contained shoes, television sets, a new automobile, candy canes or anything sold by department store elves.

You bet your credit cards prices were higher, and the reason they were higher is the President's determination to redeem those fancy campaign promises.

Carter says he wants to get the inflation rate down to four per cent by the end of his first term. But he'll never make it the way he's going now.

CONGRESS SAYS it's against inflation, too. You'd never guess it by some of its recent bills. The most flagrant reason everything costs more is, of course, the government's cute way with money.

Whenever it runs out, in effect, it calls the mint, which cranks up its money machine, and before you can say "red ink" the greenbacks are on the street, boosting the amount of money in circulation and weakening the buying power of your dollar.

Carter says he's going to fix that with a tax cut this year. But this may do exactly the opposite of what he has in mind. In 1976, it cost business $7.8 billion to comply with energy and environmental rules.

That's on top of the $5 billion it spent to follow regulations on consumer health and safety—the $4 billion for job safety and working-condition measures, and the $1.1 billion to comply with regulations on financial transactions.

ADD IN ALL THE other major categories: and the total cost came to $65.5 billion. Which, as if you didn't know, was promptly passed along to the consumer.

Then there's what Uncle Sam has to pay to make sure everybody follows the rules. That's another $3.2 billion. And that's passed along to you in your tax bill.

Television sets, stereos, lawn mowers, food processors, refrigerators, cars and anything else that contains steel cost more because Carter played early Santa to the sick steel industry.

His gift was a block on low-priced foreign steel, mostly from Western Europe and Japan, leaving customers no choice but to buy merchandise made from the more expensive U.S. product.

Your holiday egg nog cost more because Congress listened to the dairy lobby and then hiked the minimum price of milk, which immediately increased supermarket prices by six cents a gallon.

NEXT TO BE HEARD from was the shoe industry, which was hurting from the popularity of cheaper foreign footwear. Ditto with TV manufacturers. So Carter negotiated a reduction of imports and now we have to buy the more expensive (and not always better-made) home-grown stuff.

Then the sugar people paid a call to Washington and wangled not only a cut in sugar imports but an increase in tariffs and there went cheap candy canes. Filling your sweet tooth now will cost you 15 per cent more.

If you have anything left, that is, after you pay the increase in Social Security taxes. That's a double whammy because employers have to pay more, too, plus a higher minimum wage (which bumps up other wages), and all these increases have to show up on your price tag.

Then there's the notorious "energy package." How it will turn out is Carter's own current cliff-hanger, but sure as oil made rich Arabs, it's going to cost us more to keep warm or cool or on the move.

AND THE GOVERNMENT still has to do something about the farmers. Maybe not what it will take to make them happy, but enough to make check-out time at the supermarket a little more painful.

Congress rants on about higher prices and then turns around and raises same to keep its own "businesses" alive.

As for the federal debt, it's inflationary in more ways than one. First, it has ballooned to more than $700 billion. This puts more money into circulation, which means more dollars are around to compete for whatever's up for sale.

Administration officials admit they're guilty of heating up inflation, all right, but they insist they can't help it, mercy, no, it's a matter of "political reality."

I guess I don't have to tell you what consumers call that.

...Pass It On

BRIGHT MINDS worldwide still theorize about how migrating birds unerringly find their destinations. But contrary to widespread belief, the eyesight of those birds may have nothing to do with it.

Otherwise, how do you explain the fact that they get where they're going, even when fitted with opaque contact lenses to blind them temporarily. The experimenters have done that, too.

Am now advised the wise matador probably cleans the blood off his suit of lights by scrubbing it with meat tenderizer, which is said to work in a dandy manner to scour up such stains. Fascinating, if factual.

Nemesis was the Greek goddess of fate who punished people who showed the symptoms of an overdose of pride. She's the lady you meet when you meet your nemesis.

Huge Chicago FBI Operation Revealed

CHICAGO (AP) — The FBI in Chicago paid $2.5 million to recruit an army of more than 5,000 spies who informed on Chicago area residents and organizations between 1966 and 1976, court records showed Friday.

During the same period, the FBI opened files on about 27,900 individuals and organizations it regarded as possible security risks or extremists, the documents showed.

The spying operation is the largest by the FBI disclosed to date. Last September the FBI said it had paid more than $1.6 million to 300 volunteer informers who spied on the Socialist Workers Party from 1960 through 1976. In that case, the FBI also acknowledged using more than 1,000 other informers; it provided no information, however, on how much it paid those spies.

The documents in the Chicago case also acknowledged an FBI break-in of the offices of the Chicago Committee to Defend the Bill of Rights. A list of financial contributors was taken and dossiers were subsequently started on 46 of the persons whose names appeared on the list, the committee said.

The Committee to Defend the Bill of Rights was formed during the McCarthy era to oppose government repression and most recently has campaigned against government spying.

The FBI office in Chicago refused comment on the documents.

The names of the informants and the targets of the spies were not made public. The documents were made public in response to written questions that Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland of U.S. District Court ordered the FBI to answer in a suit brought by the American Civil Liberties Union, which alleges illegal government activity.

Between January 1966 and November 1976 the FBI's Chicago office used 5,145 informants and confidential sources who had not been used previously, the documents said.

Of the $2.5 million paid to the informants, about $2.1 million was paid to persons who provided information about possible security risks — individuals and groups who were defined by the FBI as not necessarily violent but who may have espoused controversial or unpopular ideas, such as opposition to the Vietnam war.

About $400,000 was paid to informants in "extremist" cases which Richard Gutman, an attorney and a spokesman for the Bill of Rights Committee, said involved mainly blacks, Latins and white hate groups.

"The overwhelming majority of the spying was political spying," Gutman said.

The break-in of the Bill of Rights committee's offices is believed to be the first substantiated FBI burglary in Chicago.

In January 1966, special Agent Emil L. Schroeder and other unidentified agents obtained the list of the committee's contributions "as a result of surreptitious entry," the documents said.

The FBI made the admission in response to a question dealing with burglary and so-called "black bag" jobs. The FBI has also answered similar questions from the Alliance to End Repression, a local organization active in combating police surveillance which also has a spying suit pending. The agency's answers to those questions have not yet been made available. Gutman, who is also the attorney for the Alliance, said he expects additional admission of FBI burglaries.

"The massiveness of the political spying and the fact that the FBI freely used illegal methods, that it felt itself above the law and felt it could break into offices whenever it wanted is a very frightening fact," Gutman said.

Rachel Rosen, director of the Bill of Rights Committee, said the group was "outraged" when it learned of the break-

Australian 'Prince' Jailed For Refusal

GERALDTON, Australia (AP) — "Prince" Leonard, who claims his farm in western Australia is the independent Hutt River Province and he's the ruler of it, spent a night in jail after refusing to pay a $4 fine.

The 52-year-old farmer, whose name is Leonard George Casley, seceded from the rest of Australia in 1970 and has carried on a running battle with the government ever since. He was fined for refusing to file an income tax return. His son

Wayne paid up the next morning and got him out of jail.

Carter Hoping Tax Cut Will Boost Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter asked Congress Friday for a $25-billion tax cut to sustain economic growth and called on workers and business to hold down wage and price increases in an effort to control inflation this year.

The tax cut, aimed mainly at offsetting increased Social Security taxes, would become effective on Oct. 1 and benefit 96 percent of all taxpayers. A four-member family earning $15,000 a year would realize a tax reduction of $258, or nearly 20 percent.

By 1980, Carter advisers predict, the tax cut would result in creation of nearly one million jobs. And if the economy needs them, the president promised, he will consider proposing additional tax cuts in the future.

In a report that offered no bold new proposals, Carter followed the tradition of his predecessors by painting a generally rosy picture of the economy.

But the nation cannot be satisfied so long as high unemployment continues among women, minorities and older Americans, farm incomes drop and businesses remain hesitant about long-term investment, he added.

"The problems we face today are more complex and difficult than those of an earlier era," Carter said in the written report. "We cannot concentrate just on inflation, or just on unemployment, or just on deficits in the federal budget or our international payments."

The president abandoned an earlier goal of reducing inflation to 4 percent, settling instead for a reduction of one-half percentage point per year. And he appeared to concede it would take a minor economic miracle to meet his pledge of balancing the federal budget by 1981.

He vowed to keep a tight rein on federal spending, promised that government regulation would not be allowed to worsen inflation, and called for creation of a grain reserve of up to 35 million metric tons to protect consumers from sudden and dramatic food-price increases. But the burden of battling persistent inflation will fall on workers and their bosses, he said.

"This program is based on the initial presumption that prices and wages in each industry should rise significantly less in 1978 than they did on average during the past two years," Carter said.

AFL-CIO President George Meany all but rejected the anti-inflation program, saying Carter's proposal implies guidelines which Meany called "a step down the road toward controls."

The program, as sketched out for reporters by Carter's chief economic adviser, Charles L. Schultze, will amount to a good dose of gentle persuasion — perhaps something short of the tough "jaw-boning" of major industries and unions attempted in past years.

"We would like very much to assert the public interest," Schultze said. "We think we are going to get cooperation. It's in the interest of the American people."

The key aim of his economic plan, Carter said, is to reduce unemployment from the current rate of 6.4 percent of the labor force to 6.1 percent by the end of the year and to 5.5 percent by the end of 1979.

And the principal weapon for reaching that goal is the tax cut. Details of the tax reduction will be spelled out on Saturday, but here are the basics:

— Individual income taxes would be reduced, starting Oct. 1, by $24 billion a year. This would be accomplished mainly by reducing tax rates and by replacing the existing $750-per-person exemption and the $35-per-person tax credit with a new $240-per-person credit. Benefits would be targeted on low- and middle-income families.

— This would be partially offset by a $7-billion increase in individual taxes — what Carter and his advisers called "tax reform." This likely would include eliminating the deduction for state and local gasoline taxes and sales taxes and perhaps reducing deductions for medical expenses.

— A $2-billion cut in the excise tax on telephone service, and a reduction in the federal unemployment-insurance tax on employers.

— An $8-billion reduction in business taxes, mainly by gradually cutting the corporate tax rate from the current 48 percent to 44 percent, and by liberalizing and making permanent the current 10-percent investment tax credit.

— On the other hand, business taxes would be increased by more than $2 billion a year. One of these "reforms" is sure to be a reduction in the deduction allowed for business entertaining and the "two-martini lunch."

The net result of the changes would be a $25-billion-a-year tax cut.

The president proposed to continue 725,000 public-service jobs through 1979 and said he will ask Congress later for a $400-million program of private jobs for youth and the disadvantaged.

In another effort to cut into heavy unemployment among the young, he asked for full funding for 166,000 jobs already authorized by Congress and proposed an additional 13,000 employment and training positions in the Job Corps.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, disagreed with some parts of the Carter tax package but said as a whole the program "provides significant relief to the middle-income brackets and important capital-formation stimulus for the business sector."

He promised his committee will consider the recommendations as quickly as possible.

Meany said the AFL-CIO and its affiliates would be willing to meet with administration officials to discuss inflation and any other problems of "mutual concern." But he added in a statement:

"We cannot and will not, however, support the proposition that government should define the terms and results of collective bargaining through any variation of guidelines, generalized or industry by industry. We are concerned that the administration approach, proposing a two-year average base period for 'deceleration,' appears to lead in that direction."

Meany said wages have not been the source of inflation in recent years and expressed disappointment that Carter's economic report "ignored the impact of high interest rates" on inflation.

Without the support of either labor or business, the voluntary anti-inflation proposal would have little chance for success.

Senator Sparkman Decides To Retire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Sparkman of Alabama, the Democratic candidate for vice president in 1952, told his Senate colleagues Friday that he has decided against running for re-election this year.

He said he will be 79 years old at the end of his present term on Jan. 3, 1979, and will have served in Congress for 42 years.

"They have been great years," Sparkman said. "I have thoroughly enjoyed my work."

Sparkman had distributed in advance for use in Sunday newspapers an announcement that he would not seek another six-year Senate term. However, the announcement appeared in print Friday and several senators rose to praise his record in the House and Senate.

After remarks by his Democratic colleague from Alabama, Sen. James B. Allen, and others, Sparkman said he wanted to say a few words in appreciation of the "good things" they had to say.

Sparkman said that while he had not formally announced his decision to retire, he had let a few friends know about it. He added he had "no regrets" that it had become known.

Sparkman's retirement brings to seven the number of living senators who have announced they will not run for another term in this year's elections. Two are Democrats and five are Republicans.

He gave no reasons for his decision to retire, but noted that he had served in the Senate longer than any other person from Alabama.

There has been speculation that Alabama Gov. George Wallace will seek Sparkman's Senate seat.

In his Senate remarks, Allen commended Sparkman for "a great record" and added that he felt Sparkman could have been elected to a new Senate term if he had chosen to run.

Allen also expressed appreciation for the help his senior colleague had given him when he first came to the Senate.

"We've never had a cross word in my nine years in the Senate," Allen said as Sparkman smiled and nodded agreement.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., William Scott, R-Va., and Charles Percy, R-Ill., were others in the chamber who joined in praising Sparkman.

Kennedy said Sparkman had been "in the vanguard of every important housing act passed by Congress," helping millions of people realize the dream of becoming home owners. "He is Mr. Housing to the American people," Kennedy said.

Sparkman is chairman of the Senate

Foreign Relations Committee and is presiding over hearings on the Panama Canal treaty. He formerly was chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

Snowstorm Thins Ranks On Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the worst snowstorms in years thinned the ranks of Wall Street commuters, shortened the hours of stock trading and closed down or crippled other business operations Friday in the nation's financial center.

The New York Stock Exchange and the American Stock Exchange did not open until noon, two hours later than normal. When they did open, trading was very light. Even after the delay, volume on the Big Board came to only 3 million shares in the first hour, less than half the volume of the regular opening hour of the previous day. Because of the extent of economic news out of Washington, volume normally would have been heavy.

The regional stock exchange in Philadelphia and the Boston Stock Exchange also declared late openings because of manpower shortages created by the East Coast storm. But regional exchanges in Chicago, Cincinnati and San Francisco followed normal hours.

The National Association of Securities Dealers, which governs over-the-counter trading, declared no special hours of operation, but said some East Coast brokerage houses might not be able to conduct business.

The major New York commodity exchanges, where brokers buy and sell contracts for future delivery of coffee, cocoa and other commodities, never did open in New York because a foot of snow prevented many workers from reaching their offices. But the Chicago Board of Trade and Mercantile Exchange, also in Chicago, functioned normally.

Businesses and corporate headquarters in New York were closed or functioning only with limited staffs. Gov. Hugh L. Carey declared a "bank holiday" throughout the state, which gave banks the option of closing all or part of their operations. Although some branches were closed, major New York City banks continued operations at a reduced level, according to the New York Clearing House Association.

"Manpower was the major concern this morning," said a spokesman at the NYSE. "But some straggled in and we were able to open at noon."

The NYSE also drew on office workers to fill in at clerical duties on the trading floor, said Chuck Storer, spokesman for the exchange.

The Amex, with similar problems, estimated that by early afternoon about 60 percent of the normal complement of 250 workers were manning the trading floor.

At the Amex and other exchanges, which trade in stock options as well as stocks, the snow problems probably left some investors particularly nervous moments because it came on the last day for trading January options before they expire.

Options represent contracts to buy or sell securities at a stated price within a fixed period of time. An options holder, who could profit by selling it today, would have been forced into exercising the options, or fulfilling the terms of the agreement, had the markets not opened.

Commenting on that prospect, Arnold Staloff, executive vice president of the regional Philadelphia Exchange, had said, "Substantial losses could be involved. I wouldn't want to suggest who would be responsible for that. Maybe Mother Nature."

The Chicago Board Options Exchange, the nation's largest options exchange, and the Options Clearing Corp. followed generally normal schedules although the CBOE said it was closing trading on expiring options at 2 p.m. but would continue trading on others until 3 p.m.

In the bond market, some traders began heading home around noon and an association of government bond dealers announced it was declaring operations closed about two hours ahead of normal. By early afternoon, one spokesman for government bond dealers estimated volume at only about 10 percent of normal.

The Amex originally planned to open at noon, changed that to 11 a.m. then switched back to a noon-opening. The NYSE and Amex both also announced plans to close an hour earlier than normal, at 3 p.m. But when the hour neared, they announced that trading would end at the normal 4 p.m. time.

The delayed stock trading start and hampered operations was neither a first nor a worst for Wall Street.

Last July 14, both major stock exchanges and almost all other financial activity came to a halt when a massive power failure blacked out New York City.

The NYSE says the exchange previously closed an hour early in August of 1976 because of Hurricane Belle and opened just over an hour late the following February because of snow.

Hospital Pamphlet Haunts Director

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"When you work on a tight deadline, you always worry about the little things that will come back to haunt you," said David Butler, community relations director for the Lubbock County Hospital District.

He should know. Butler has been harried lately with receptions, tours and other chores for the Feb. 1 opening of the county's Health Sciences Center Hospital. Among his duties: getting information pamphlets ready for patients.

One of those brochures — titled "Obstetrical pre-admissions" — may well be haunting Butler. And raising the eyebrows of mothers-to-be.

It begins innocently enough. "We are happy that you have chosen us to assist you in the birth of your baby. Our hospital provides the most modern equipment and facilities, all developed for the well-being and comfort of both mother and child."

The pamphlet then provides information on financial arrangements, what patients should bring, visiting hours and the like, and includes a pre-admissions form patients may fill out.

Except for such items as "husband participation" and baby photos, the obstetrical brochure is much like the pre-admissions pamphlets for other types of hospital patients — perhaps too much so.

The obstetrical pre-admissions form asks the patient for routine biographical data, including name, address, occupation and next-of-kin; financial information, such as the patient's insurance company; and the general medical condition of the mother-to-be.

An item in that third category requests: "If accident, give date, time and place."

Butler admits that tidbit, while appropriate for other kinds of patients, shouldn't apply to obstetrical cases. "Somehow it just slipped in there," he said.

He said he has printed a six-month supply of the obstetrical pamphlets. And part of that six months, no doubt, will be spent crossing out that one item on the obstetrical pre-admissions form, Butler said.

Nebraska Corrections Director Objects To Prison Visit Bill

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Nebraska Corrections Director Joe Vitek could be looking for a new line of work if the legislature approves a bill he says could open the door to "sex on demand" for state prison convicts.

Vitek said Friday he was still reviewing the bill, which would require prison officials to establish rules and facilities for "periodic, extended or overnight visits by a spouse or friend with a confined person."

Vitek said the bill failed to define "spouse or friend."

"If this bill encourages adultery, fornication and homosexual sodomy, I will oppose it," Vitek said. "I don't think I could in good conscience institute that."

"If forced to do so by law, I would have to make a grave moral decision about staying in that kind of employment."

Vitek, a former prison warden, said a warden's job involves wearing "a lot of different hats, but one hat I will never wear is that of a madam."

At present, Vitek said, conjugal visits of a sort are allowed through the prison's furlough program.

Vitek said the furlough program provided a better atmosphere for sex than inside-the-walls conjugal visits, which he termed "grotesque and degrading to both the marriage state and the sex act."

He said more provisions for family visits would probably be made during the next 10 years as plans for new prison facilities progress.

"But if that happens, I think it ought to encourage family happenings, not sex happenings," Vitek said.

"It wouldn't have to be a Holiday Inn, but if we could provide a place where a prisoner's family could come in, maybe prepare a meal, watch television or play Monopoly, and they have a private place for kids to sleep, it would do a lot more for the family than a row of little red shacks."

Airline Official Overpowers Hijacker

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The chairman of Pakistan International Airlines overpowered a masked hijacker who was holding 22 passengers aboard the plane at Karachi airport Saturday, a PIA spokesman said.

The hijacker, who said he commanded the plane to obtain cancer treatment in India, fired his pistol during the tussle and wounded PIA Chairman Nur Khan in the hip. Then the crew and passengers set upon the hijacker and beat him before he was dragged from the aircraft, the spokesman said.

Khan, who had boarded the plane to negotiate with the hijacker, was taken to a hospital. There was no immediate report on his condition. No injuries were reported among the freed hostages.

The hijacker told police he was a Pakistani army deserter from the engineering corps. He took over the twin-engine Fokker 27 turboprop on a domestic flight Friday morning and ordered it to India, but allowed the pilot to land here for refueling.

Salim Lakhani, a hostage aboard the aircraft, said Khan had completed his talks with the hijacker and turned to leave, but suddenly turned and jumped on the gunman.

The hijacker was dragged from the plane after the beating, at about 2 a.m. local time (4 p.m. EST Friday). Officials said the bombs he claimed he was carrying were fakes.

The hijacker said he was a Punjabi whose original name was Nazir Mohammad. He said he had adopted the name of Aslam Khan and was working in a hotel in Sukkur.

He released 19 of the 41 passengers and crew members during earlier negotiations. Besides the demand for money to finance his cancer treatment — Radio Pakistan said he wanted $2 million — he asked for safe passage to India, officials said. He said he planned to hold the plane and the hostages until banks opened Saturday morning.

A masked hijacker demanding money for cancer treatment held 22 hostages aboard a Pakistani airliner at Karachi airport Friday, saying he would hold out until banks open Saturday morning, officials reported.

The hijacker, who officials said was armed with a pistol, commandeered the Pakistan International Airlines turboprop on a domestic flight Friday morning, ordered it to India but allowed the pilot to land here for refueling.

He released 19 of the 41 other passengers and crew members during negotiations here, but then refused to free the rest, officials said. Besides the demand for money — Radio Pakistan said he wanted $2 million — he asked for safe passage to India, officials said.

Nur Khan, chairman of airline, said all the women passengers and two children had been released from the twin-engine Fokker 27.

The plane was parked in a remote corner of Karachi International Airport and negotiations with the hijacker, apparently a Pakistani, were continuing Friday night.

Khan offered to exchange himself for the remaining passengers held hostage but the hijacker refused, officials said. The hijacker allowed a PIA catering crew to board the plane with food and water, however.

Officials said that soon after the plane landed here, the gunman sent a message to authorities in Urdu, the Pakistani national language, saying he had no political motives and was not a terrorist. They said he told them he had cancer and needed money for medical treatment.

Khan said the hijacker was told the money could not be raised because banks were closed. Friday is the Moslem day of worship. The hijacker then said he would not release the remaining hostages until the money is delivered Saturday morning, officials said.

"The hijacker is not a terrorist," Khan said. "The hijacker is suffering from cancer and he wanted to go abroad for treatment."

Taller grass provides more food for deeper rooting if deep-watering is practiced.

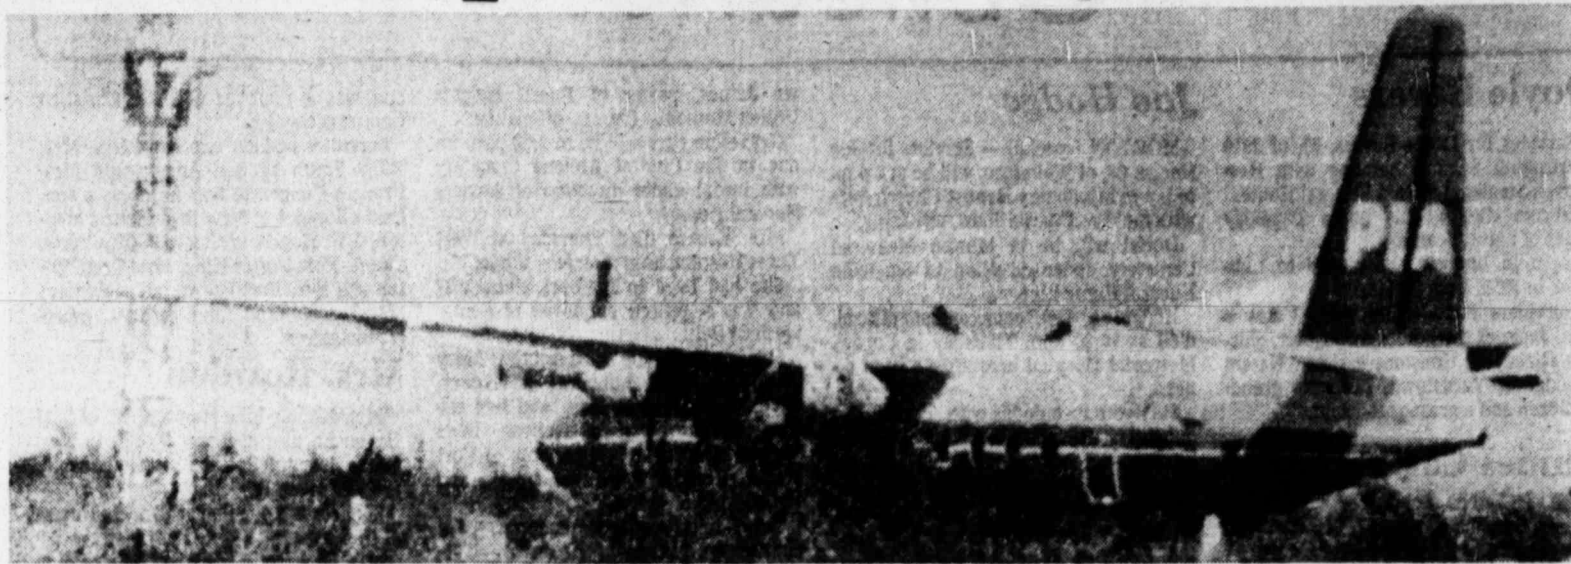

Haji Abdul Ghani, 68, one of the freed hostages, said the hijacker burst into the cockpit of the plane shortly after it took off from Sukkur in central Pakistan on a 300-mile flight to Karachi about 9:45 a.m. Friday morning (11:45 p.m. EST Thursday).

After talking with the pilot, the hijacker emerged from the cockpit and, holding a revolver, warned passengers not to move, Ghani said.

Ghani said the hijacker appeared to be a Pakistani about 30 years old. "He is wearing Pakistani dress, baggy trousers and long shirt," Ghani said. "He was speaking only Urdu."

Khan told reporters the gunman ordered the pilot to fly to Bombay, India. When the pilot told him the plane did not have enough fuel to reach India, the hijacker allowed him to land the plane at Karachi.

Khan said that in his negotiations his statements were being relayed to the gunman by the pilot.

Parents Check School Behavior

MIAMI (AP) — Violence and crime have nosedived in five high schools now that kids know parents are watching in a program designed to make schools safer by using parents as counselors, school officials say.

"From 1975 through 1977, our school had the highest number of violent acts in the county," says Matthew Lawrence, assistant principal at Miami Central Senior High. "This year, the figures have been reduced drastically."

The parent-counselor program, three months old, was conceived by Sam Moncur, director of the local Opportunity Industrialization Center, a jobs training program.

Moncur came up with the "Safe Schools" program in response to protests from parents over the beating of a high school girl last year at Miami Beach Senior High.

"Those people were talking about putting attack dogs in the schools and on the school buses," he says. "I had to do something."

"I am convinced that a lot of the disruptive behavior in the schools goes on because the kids think the parents don't know about it," says Moncur.

"Once a youngster told me he gets the mail at his house before anyone else does. If a letter from the school comes he destroys it before his parents get home."

The federally funded effort pays 22 parents $3.75 an hour to be counselors in live trouble spots. They ride school buses, check on students who are repeatedly

British Government Cancels Car Order

LONDON (AP) — The British government has canceled a $1.6 million sale of armored cars to El Salvador "because of the situation in Central America," the Foreign Office announced after considerable criticism. The three Ferret scout cars and 12 Saladin armored vehicles with 76mm cannon were to have been shipped in a few days.

The sale had been criticized by fighters for human rights, including Cardinal Basil Hume, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Westminster, who protested sending such equipment to a regime known for "arbitrary arrests, torture and killings."

late, counsel students, visit homes, arrange for parents to go to school for conferences and pick them up if necessary.

"We don't hire the parents to be security monitors," says Carol Young, coordinator of the program. "We want them to be able to create a kind of Big Brother-Big Sister relationship between themselves and the students."

Despite the program's newness, school officials say it has had a "profound effect" on the teen-agers.

Lawrence of Central Senior High says that in the 1975-76 school year, the high school had 70 robberies and larcenies, 27 thefts of school property, seven assaults on school staff members, 46 assaults on students and 52 burglaries. He said there has been a sharp drop in those incidents — and resulting suspensions of students — this school year.

"Our suspensions for those kinds of acts are not one-third of what they were. I'm sure the fact that kids see their parents out here on a day-to-day basis has a lot to do with it," Lawrence said.

He recalled a particular problem he had in being able to deal with a student with a chronic truancy problem.

"I didn't really get to this kid," he said. "I'd ask why he cut class, he'd answer 'I don't know.'"

Frustrated, Lawrence turned the student over to a parent-counselor. "She said, 'I'm a mother and I have children here, too,'" Lawrence said. "The kid opened up and said, 'Mathematics is too hard for me.' He was just embarrassed to go to class."

Officials say the program also provides meaningful jobs for the unemployed. To be eligible as a parent-counselor, a person must have been out of work at least three months.

James Miller, a guidance counselor at Central High, says the program is "worth every penny."

"Often we look at the use of federal funds as a throw-away of money. Not so with this program."

Police Continuing Probe Of Robberies

Lubbock detectives Friday were continuing to probe two robberies reported during the early-morning hours.

Wayman Lee Ralls, the attendant at Walt's Service Station at E. 19th Street and Quirt Avenue, said he had just finished waiting on a customer, when a young man drove into the driveway about 3 a.m.

According to the 45-year-old clerk, as the stranger entered the business he produced a chrome-plated pistol and began taking all the bills and change from the register.

After the bandit stuffed his pockets with the cash, he opened a nearby drawer and removed a .38-caliber pistol.

Ralls told police the robber left in a dark-colored car in a westward direction.

In addition to the $150 gun, the take reportedly included $140 cash.

About two hours earlier, a 25-year-old Lubbock man walked up to a police patrol car at Broadway and Avenue F and said he had been robbed of $300 cash.

According to reports, however, the "victim" appeared intoxicated, and was unable to provide officers with details of the alleged incident.

Meanwhile, cold, wintry weather apparently has failed to stem the flow of hot goods in the city as burglars keep coming back for more.

Charles Burrell of 1926 E. Baylor St. said someone broke into a trailer belonging to Nunn Electric Co., 4302 Locust Ave., sometime Thursday or Friday, then hauled away seven televisions and a microwave oven. The new merchandise was valued at more than $2,000, according to the manager.

Concepcion Ibarra of 2925 E. Auburn St. said someone entered his home Friday and stole several articles of jewelry, a radio and television. Ibarra set his loss at about $200.

Whoever tossed a brick through the glass door at Gulf Coast Fish and Shrimp, 4903 Memphis Ave., late Thursday or early Friday caused about $200 damage.

Once inside, the intruders picked up a calculator, a handgun and about $125 in cash, according to manager Dennis Robinson.

An off-duty policeman, on his way home following a court appearance, foiled two alleged burglary attempts and a car theft Friday with quick action.

A neighbor who phoned police said she was not sure but thought there might be a burglary in progress at 3413 23rd St., the home of Archie Allen, a professor who was out of his residence at the time.

Officer Rick Olfutt, who was near when the call was put out by a department dispatcher, arrived on the scene and was instrumental in ruining the "fun" of three Coronado High School truants.

Olfutt, along with officers Bobby Westmoreland, Tom Smallwood, Randy McGuire and rookie patrolman Tim Smith, arrested three youngsters during the ensuing investigation. Two of the boys, aged 16, were apprehended near the scene and a third, 15, was captured sometime later.

One of the youngsters reportedly is the son of a Lubbock County deputy and has been handled by the department before.

All three of the suspects were transported to the juvenile probation office.

Obituary Briefs

Services for Raymond H. Hill, 78, of Snyder will be at 2 p.m. today in First United Methodist Church at Snyder. Burial will be in Snyder Cemetery under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home. Hill died Thursday.

Services for Odell Johnson Sr., 65, of Lamesa, will be at 2 p.m. today in Prayer House Church of God in Christ No. 2 at Lamesa. Burial will be in Lamesa Cemetery under direction of Branon Funeral Home. Johnson died Wednesday.

Services for Mrs. Lillius Ruth McJimsey, 59, of Silverton will be at 2 p.m. today in the First Baptist Church at Silverton. Mrs. McJimsey died Wednesday.

Services for Will T. Stramler, 68, of 6204 Knoxville Drive, will be at 11 a.m. today in Broadway Church of Christ. Burial will be in City of Lubbock Cemetery under direction of Sanders Funeral Home. Stramler died Thursday.

A fire at 11:37 a.m. Friday caused between $100 and $1,000 damage to the contents of a home at 2906 E. 2nd St., occupied by the Francisco Tijerina family. The blaze reportedly broke out while a child was playing with matches. There were no injuries.

Soviet death sentences are carried out by firing squad.

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court has sentenced to death a drunken driver who killed eight persons when he crashed his truck into a Moscow street crowd last June, it was reported Friday.

The trade union newspaper Trud said the court ruled that the driver, Valentin Shimko, had been drinking port wine all day before he drove his truck at about 55 miles an hour on the main road and deliberately turned it into the crowd.

Soviet death sentences are carried out by firing squad.

Several pearls, valued at $625, were reported stolen from Stephanie Windham of 7802 Kenosha Ave. sometime Thursday. The jewels were in a case in the victim's bedroom; reports indicate.

An eight-track tape deck worth about $400 was taken from Joan Sanders' vehicle Friday while it was parked in a lot at 6025 Ave. A.

W.C. Bates of 6603 Joliet Drive said someone broke into the Two Guy's Store, 2507 Clovis Rd., Friday and stole about $200 worth of cigarettes and caused $100 damage to a plate glass door.

About $45 in change was taken from Roy Lee Dunlap's 166 Elkhart Ave. apartment sometime Thursday, after burglars apparently gained access through a window about $15 worth of dimes and $30 in quarters changed hands as a result of the break-in, Dunlap said.

James Lee Williams, 18, a student and athlete at Lubbock High School, has been found innocent of a theft charge.

It took a jury in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th Dist. Court only 27 minutes to return the acquittal.

Williams, of 108 Hub Homes, had been charged in connection with the theft of four hubcaps. The hubcaps were allegedly stolen July 21 or July 22, 1976, from a Fort Worth man who was staying at an Avenue Q motel.

The complainant indicated the hubcaps were stolen either the night of July 21 or the early morning hours of July 22.

Police Cpl. Larry Downey testified that as he was riding in the 300-block of Avenue E on the morning of July 23, 1976, his patrol car was blocked by an auto parked at an angle.

The officer said a passenger in the car, who was identified as Williams, at first got out of the auto, then jumped back inside it.

He said the driver then drove away.

According to testimony, police followed the vehicle, stopping it in the 300-block of Avenue H.

Downey said when he asked the driver for his license, he noticed four hubcaps in the back seat. The witness said he inspected one of the hubcaps, and found the complainant's

Q. I am a young professional, single, who can invest about $1,000 a year. I want "riskless" securities, which I imagine, limits me to Treasury bonds.

A. There is no "riskless" investment. But if you are thinking of protecting the number of dollars you put into this venture, Treasury bonds and well-insured savings accounts would certainly be answers.

I wouldn't attempt to put $1,000 at a time into Treasury bonds. You could, of course, buy E bonds which grow at the rate of 6 percent and, also important, would provide a tax deferrable nest egg. There are also "money fund" types of mutuals which would re-invest your money in Treasury and bank debt.

But, unless you dismiss the problem of inflation for the remainder of a long lifetime, I would urge you to consider some common shares.

Q. I bought 200 shares of U.S. Steel last Aug. 3. I didn't get the certificates until Sept. 22. In the interim, Steel declared a dividend of 35 cents payable to shareholders of record Aug. 5. I did not get the dividend because, the broker said, the "ex-dividend" date was Aug. 1.

A. It was. The stock traded "ex" the dividend on Aug. 1 which meant that when you bought the stock Aug. 3, the dividend was already "off" the stock. It went to the investor who held the stock at the market closing the day before Aug. 1.

When you bought on Aug. 3 you did NOT become a holder of record on the books of the company by Aug. 5. It requires 5 days.

Q. I am a single man, 57, who plans to retire at 65. I am in a 33-40 percent income tax bracket now, so want no additional income, but am reluctant to add to the growth stocks I already hold. Any ideas?

A. Since you now have substantial sums riding on growth stocks, you could tax shelter your additional investable funds in highest grade tax-exempts of your state which will mature when you retire.

If you buy such bonds at a discount, select issues which will mature and show you a capital gain in the first year that you have no taxable salary.

Q. I have just sold my business and have a substantial sum to invest for one year, but would like tax protection.

A. I must assume you have a valid reason for that one year tax protection, although I must warn you that buying corporate bonds or tax-exempts for one year, either directly, or via a unit trust or a mutual fund means you are assuming market price risks.

Q. We have invested in single family dwellings for our retirement but we find we can't get sufficient rents to carry the properties and can't evict non-paying tenants. We'd like to liquidate and get into some other form of retirement.

A. I have had several complaints about managing one-family houses for profit and have no formula for doing so. But if the project is not yielding as much as you can get without having all this management trouble, it seems to me liquidation and reinvestment in income-type securities is indicated.

Q. We've bought some multiple dwellings at a good price. We could sell part at a profit, but have been urged to hold on "for tax purposes." What is meant by that?

A. Rental real estate provides considerable tax shelter since taxable income may be offset by depreciation. In that way, current income — ordinarily taxable at full rates — is ultimately translated into capital gain, taxable at lower rates.

U.S., Israel Sharing Integration Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Israeli educators exchanged views Friday on the common problems both countries face in integrating their public schools.

The integration issue in Israel involves not Arab and Israeli school children, but the new, poor Jewish immigrants from North Africa and Asia who lack the cultural advantages that past Jewish immigrants brought from Europe.

Fifty-five educators attended the two-day conference sponsored jointly by the U.S. Office of Education and the National Council of Jewish Women's Research Institute at Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Experts said studies in both countries have shown that bringing disadvantaged children into the classroom has not impaired the education of more affluent students. But neither does integration by itself boost the scholastic achievements of either group, the educators agreed.

They discussed ways to promote the positive mixing of different racial and ethnic groups, while maintaining and improving educational achievement.

John I. Goodlad, dean of UCLA's Graduate School of Education, said integration has worked best in those American schools where the entire community has accepted the intermixing of the races as a positive goal in education.

Teachers who strive to eliminate any vestiges of discrimination in both the way they teach and their materials have achieved the best scholastic results, he added.

An estimated 45 percent of Israel's school population is considered disadvantaged. In the past, 50 percent of the children have come from advantaged European groups, Goodlad said.

A future meeting on the issue is planned in Jerusalem. American and Israeli educators have held several conferences since 1970, but this was the first on integration.

Sadat 'Tough Speech' Expected Today

Vance insisted that the future of Egyptian-Israeli peace talks was not "dead" and told American reporters: "It's obvious we've hit a bump in the road."

Sadat said he opposes any immediate resumption of the Jerusalem negotiations, which collapsed after two days Wednesday when Egypt recalled its foreign minister in an abrupt move.

"There should be in this moment a whole re-evaluation. Let's try to find the proper approach again," said the Egyptian leader, who will address his parliament today in what U.S. officials said they expect to be a "tough speech."

Summit Hinted

Egyptian sources here indicated Sadat may call for a three-way summit in Washington with President Carter and Begin. But Carter told White House reporters he knew of no such meeting, and a senior U.S. official traveling with Vance said the idea was never mentioned in the meeting with Sadat.

There also was speculation that Sadat, noted for his shock approach to diplomacy, may offer his resignation in view of the severe setbacks to his peace initiative. After his historic visit to Jerusalem on Nov. 19-21, Sadat said he would resign if his peace effort proved a failure.

Sadat Laughs

Asked about it Friday, he broke into laughter and retorted: "Wait until you hear my speech!"

After having lunch with Sadat, Vance flew to Ankara, Turkey, to turn his attention to U.S.-Turkish relations and the troublesome Cyprus issue in talks with Premier Bulent Ecevit on Friday night. The secretary plans to return to Washington Sunday after a stop in Greece.

The only concrete agreement that emerged from the Vance-Sadat encounter was that the United States and Egypt will keep "in close contact" on future Middle East developments. Sadat also reaffirmed he would permit resumption of Egyptian-Israeli military negotiations in Cairo on Israeli withdrawal from the occupied Sinai Peninsula.

Israel Undecided

Israel has not yet decided whether to resume the military talks, which are less important than the political talks in Jerusalem. The Israeli cabinet is to make a decision at a meeting Sunday.

In other developments Friday, Kuwait announced plans to launch a joint campaign with Saudi Arabia to reconcile Sadat with Arab hard-liners opposed to his recent peace overtures with Israel. The two conservative oil-rich nations have tried to remain neutral in the dispute.

Pro-Libyan press reports from Beirut quoted Libyan leader Col. Moammar

Khadafy as saying Sadat has a secret plan to attack Israel and that Libya would be willing to supply Egypt with hundreds of tanks for such an effort. But Western observers in Beirut said the claim may have been another in Libya's attempts to sow distrust between Jerusalem and Cairo.

The Palestinian issue has proved to be the major stumbling block in the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations. Israel has proposed "self-rule" for the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip, but under a continued Israeli military presence. Egypt demands "self-determination" for the Palestinians and complete Israeli withdrawal from the occupied territories.

Sadat criticized Israel anew Friday for wanting to maintain more than 20 Jewish settlements on the eastern rim of the Sinai Peninsula. He said Dayan's insistence on "mutual concessions" by both Egypt and Israel obviously does not apply to the Sinai territory.

"But really, what really bothers me," Sadat told reporters, "is this whole approach to peace being twisted."

"The reason I'm going is because a congressman called a president when he didn't even have a candidate" to suggest as the new U.S. attorney in the eastern district of Pennsylvania.

"I don't accept that," Marston said. "We had a system in Philadelphia and I didn't accept it. I removed politics from criminal justice in Philadelphia."

Marston said that "every major political corruption case (in his office) has been crippled" because every defense attorney wants to see who his replacement will be.

To Continue Probe

But he said Bell pledged to continue the probe of a $65 million addition to Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia. Government funding of the hospital reportedly is the focus of the investigation involving Eilberg and another Democratic congressman from Pennsylvania, Daniel Flood.

Marston said Civiletti will convey to Marston's staff Bell's commitment to pursue the investigation and will ask Marston's four assistants to remain in office.

The controversy attracted national attention after Carter told a news conference last week that he contacted Bell in November at Eilberg's behest, seeking to expedite the replacement of Marston.

Decided Earlier

Bell said he had made the decision to fire Marston at least six months earlier but hadn't gotten around to finding a replacement.

The administration denied having any knowledge that Eilberg was under investigation by Marston's office.

An aide to Eilberg confirmed on Thursday that the records of the congressman's law firm had been subpoenaed on Dec. 16 and that Eilberg had hired a prominent criminal lawyer in Philadelphia to represent him.

There have been charges from some members of Congress that the Carter administration was playing politics with law enforcement and might even be engaged in a coverup.

Review Asked

The latest blast came Friday from Rep. Ron Mazzoli, D-Ky., who sent a telegram to Carter in which he said he would urge the House Judiciary Committee "to examine this matter thoroughly as a phase of its review of the budget and operations of the Justice Department."

Bell sent three Justice Department officials to Philadelphia last weekend to determine the status of investigations by Marston's office. When the investigators returned to Washington, Justice Department sources confirmed for the first time that Eilberg and Flood were under investigation.

Bell offered to keep Marston on for a time if it was decided his services were needed for ongoing investigations. Marston had said that alternative was unacceptable.

Most Replaced

The administration has replaced most of the 94 U.S. attorneys since taking office a year ago. It has portrayed Marston as a capable administrator but a lawyer lacking in trial experience.

Justice Department officials have said privately they believe Marston has claimed credit for investigative ground work done before he took office.

Marston is a former aide to Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa. Meanwhile, Schweiker told a news conference that with the firing of Marston, "the president and attorney general have put the White House seal of approval on a sordid plot to purge an effective prosecutor because he did the honest job he swore to do."

Asked if he were accusing Carter and Bell of trying to stop an investigation, he replied, "I certainly am. What hope is there of restoring trust in government if an American president who cloaks himself in robes of purity not only tolerates but participates in such dirty business?"

GOP Rejects Black Leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans turned down a chance to elect their first black co-chairman Friday but gave civil rights leader Jesse Jackson a standing ovation after he accused them of abandoning blacks for 20 years.

The unusual combination of events occurred at a Republican National Committee meeting preceding a gala dinner honoring the 25th anniversary of Dwight D. Eisenhower's inauguration as president.

The co-chairman race pitted Gloria Tootle, a black conservative who seconded Ronald Reagan's presidential bid in 1976, against Mary Crisp, the incumbent co-chairman who was a Gerald Ford delegate. But the vote failed to develop fully into a contest between "new right" and "old guard" Republicans.

Jackson, a registered Democrat, who said he has no intention of switching, nevertheless was warmly applauded when he told the Republicans they might not have lost the White House if they had paid more attention to blacks. He suggested blacks might be receptive to GOP openings.

Mrs. Tootle, a New York lawyer, got only 37 votes.

A commercial fishing boat sank in rough seas off Portsmouth, N.H., after the Coast Guard rescued its four crew members.

Thousands of National Guard troops were called in around the region to help with snow removal. And in Ohio, Gov. James A. Rhodes ordered the 18,000 Guardsmen to stand by to help dig out several counties and they were taking food and fuel into some areas.

Communities declared themselves closed. All non-emergency traffic was turned back from New Brunswick, N.J.

The entire state of West Virginia was a battle zone for the elements. "The streets are just vacant. It's like a ghost town, a big, white ghost town," said Wally Warden, editor of the Williamson Daily News.

Passengers Stranded

About 100 airline passengers spent Thursday night in buses and in the terminal at Kanawha Airport. "We've had no food and no place to rest our heads. We're so tired and irritable we don't even know what's happening," said Mrs. Ellen Poynter of South Charleston.

On the ice-clogged Ohio River, the city of Cincinnati was running out of salt. Both Kentucky and Tennessee had already been buried for the last week and the new storm meant increasing hardship.

In Louisville, blood bank supplies were running low. In snow-clogged Memphis, Tenn., garbage remained uncollected.

Up to 15 inches blanketed parts of Pennsylvania, and schools, airports, public buildings and stores were closed virtually everywhere. Tow trucks worked nonstop to rescue stranded motorists near Philadelphia.

"The plows are working but they can't get ahead of the game," said a trooper at the Belmont barracks in Philadelphia. "There's a lot of people stranded."

The most dramatic state of emergency was declared in New York City which sagged under more than 12 inches of new snow and braced against 40 mph winds. Up to 20 inches of snow were predicted.

All city schools were closed. Kennedy, LaGuardia and Newark airports were shut down. Mass transit moved at a crawl if it moved at all.

Trains Shut Down

The Long Island Rail Road which carries more than 100,000 commuters to New York City each day, was shut down shortly after 8 a.m. and officials began trying to return passengers to their homes. The Long Island Expressway was closed and littered with stranded cars.

New York Mayor Edward Koch canceled part of his schedule and went to a wedding instead, saying "Anybody who wants to get married on a day like this deserves it."

In upstate New York on the banks of Lake Ontario, the city of Oswego was buried under 56 inches of snow in the last five days. But Mayor John Fitzgibbons said he wasn't worried.

"The people are used to it here. Everything is open and it's business as usual. We're here with our sense of humor."

But there was a serious salt shortage in Rome, N.Y., where there were only 30 tons on hand in a city that usually uses 3,000 tons a winter.

In southeast New York the heavy snowfall collapsed a 20-foot section of domed roof at a bowling alley in Orange County, but no injuries were reported. Part of a roof collapsed at the Itel Corp. plant at Henrietta, near Rochester, N.Y.

City School Officials Offer New Views On Space In Classrooms

By JEFF SOUTH

School officials Friday entered new evidence disputing Justice Department contentions that Lubbock has ample classroom space without building new facilities south of Loop 289.

The Lubbock Independent School District bolstered its argument that new schools are needed — and that busing would be only a "stopgap measure" — by quoting parts of a deposition given by Dr. Raymond L. Bynum, the Texas Education Agency's associate commissioner for finance, to the Justice Department.

The department has not offered that deposition into evidence, but school attorneys Tom Johnson and Charles Cobb say they will do so because the document "fully supports the district's position" in Lubbock's construction-desegregation case.

"The Lubbock Independent School District has consistently taken the position that there is a need for the proposed schools to be built. The government said there is no need because there is capacity elsewhere in other facilities within the system," school officials told U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward in a brief.

The Justice Department put on only one witness, Dr. John Bell of the U.S. Office for Civil Rights, to support its argument that Lubbock has ample school capacity, the brief noted.

And with Bynum's deposition, the brief added, "that witness' testimony has been shown to be incorrect on two significant grounds — pupil-teacher ratio and the concept of capacity."

Figures on capacity are important for several reasons, among them: "The issue of new schools. The district says it is running out of space and must build new facilities south of Loop 289, a predominantly white residential area. The Justice Department retorts there is ample space in inner-city and east side schools to accommodate the south side overflow."

"The Justice Department's push for a systemwide desegregation plan. The department argues there is adequate space in existing schools to not only relieve overcrowding but to desegregate students. The district replies that busing would be only a stopgap remedy."

Friday's brief supports the district's position that Lubbock is running out of school space. The brief quotes Bynum as saying that under Texas's new public education law, Lubbock may assign an average of only 25 students per elementary classroom — not the 28 students used in the Justice Department's calculations.

Bynum also said, according to the brief, that school capacity should be con-puted on the basis of programs — so that classrooms used for physical education, special education and remedial projects should not be counted.

The Justice Department had based its figures on the district's total physical capacity. The department said that if Lubbock's elementary students were evenly distributed through busing, the district still would have 5,300 seats available for growth.

The district maintains that if busing were used for an even student distribution, there would be only about 200 seats left for future growth — an unacceptably low figure.

Daniel Pledges Speeded Opinion Request Action

usurpation of their power and creation of possibly evil centralized power, he said.

Daniel said he had not yet come up with a plan of his own.

The 36-year-old former state representative said he will stress "openness in government" and reminded listeners that it was while he was speaker of the house that the legislature passed reform acts including:

An ethics and public financial disclosure act, a campaign finance disclosure bill, the open records act, a measure to put teeth in the open meetings law and a lobbyist registration and control measure.

The open records act needs more work, he said.

Daniel suggested some form of criminal penalty for a state official who refuses to comply with attorney general's rulings that information is public record.

Now, he said, a citizen or newspaper must sue to get information out of a balking official, even if the attorney general has issued an opinion in the requestor's favor.

Daniel noted that before Christmas, polls and political analysts were forecasting his victory over White in May. "That's causing me a great deal of concern, because that's a good way to for campaigns to be lost — getting complacent."

He discounted White's continuing theme that his position in the polls is based on voter confusion — people seeing the name and thinking immediately of his famous father.

"The polls ask clearly, 'Do you know Price Daniel Jr.?'"

"I have name recognition of my own from three times in the House, from a term as Speaker of the House and as president of the Texas Constitutional Convention (in 1974)," Daniel stated.

"I'm proud of my father's name and record and contributions to this state...but my race is based on my record and what I've done."

PRICE DANIEL JR.

On the Equal Rights Amendment — an issue that appears more volatile in West Texas than other parts of the state — Daniel pointed out he voted for the ERA as a legislator and still supports it.

"I'm a strong advocate for equal rights of all citizens of this country. I have a strong record on all minorities. I was the first speaker to give women, Republicans, blacks, Mexican-Americans a chance in the House..."

"I took the attitude, 'Every representative represents about 75,000 people. Why should those 75,000 people be denied representation just because their representative was a black or a woman or a Mexican-American?'"

Daniel said he doesn't think the ERA will present itself as a legal question for him if he becomes attorney general. Possible rescission of Texas' ratification "is a federal matter and I wouldn't have to address that," he said.

White Woman's Darker Skin Brings Apartheid

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — A 44-year-old white woman has been ordered off "whites only" buses, been mistaken for a black maid and has seen her family break up because her skin has turned progressively darker in recent years.

Rita Hoefling says she is shunned by friends and society and her husband and son have left her because of the condition.

"Now I know what apartheid is like at its worst," she said in an interview published in the Johannesburg Star.

Mrs. Hoefling's skin color started to change in 1974 when doctors examining her discovered she had a brain tumor. An operation to remove the tumor was regarded as risky because she had undergone an adrenal gland operation in 1969 and also had had cobalt radiation treatment that weakened her, the newspaper said.

She takes hydrocortisone drugs every day to keep alive after the removal of two adrenal glands. It was not clear whether the drugs or tumor or some other factor caused the darkening of her skin.

"I'm ready to scream," she said in the interview. "I cannot even begin to count the number of times I've been ordered off buses by conductors, saying that coloreds (persons of mixed race) were not allowed on."

She said she has been issued a special card she has to show bus drivers to prove she is white.

"But even that doesn't help and leads to terribly embarrassing situations," she said. "This week I got on a bus coming from Groote Schuur hospital where I have a job as an unpaid voluntary worker and the driver told me to get off. He said he was not interested in my special card."

She said her 16-year-old daughter, who attends school in suburban Garden not far from their home, came home in tears recently because she had been ordered off a "whites only" bus whose driver recognized her from times she had accompanied her mother on the same route.

Mrs. Hoefling said her son had gone to Durban and she had not seen him in four years "because he was embarrassed at the change in his mother. My husband left me in April last year."

She said a door-to-door salesman asked her to see the "madam."

"When I told him it was my house he said he did not like sarcastic maids," Mrs. Hoefling said.

She said it is likely she will get even darker in the future.

"In the meantime, I've found it impossible to get a steady job because of this business."

The white-owned newspaper for blacks in Johannesburg, the Post, deplored Mrs. Hoefling's situation in an editorial Friday under the headline, "A Very Sick Society."

"Little wonder that people all over the world place so little faith in a country which claims that it is moving away from racial discrimination," it said.

"If only all whites could experience the agonies of Mrs. Hoefling how quickly the situation would change in this country."

Citizens Seeking Probe Of Police Operations

A-J Correspondent

DIMMITT — A group of 200 or more Dimmitt residents Friday requested the Castro County Commissioners Court, Dimmitt City Commission and two media representatives to investigate the conduct and practices of the Castro County Sheriff's Office and the Dimmitt Police Department.

The joint investigating committee is to study complaints of non-cooperation between the two law enforcement agencies which share dispatchers, radio equipment and jail facilities.

Friday's meeting followed the resignation of Dimmitt Police Chief Joe Ben Mitchell earlier in the week. Mitchell said in resigning that "it is now impossible to coordinate any investigation or enforcement efforts between the two agencies operating in Dimmitt-Castro County."

Mitchell was the second Dimmitt police chief to resign within six months. His predecessor, David Slaughter, also cited a lack of cooperation from the Castro County Sheriff's Office as his reason for resigning in October.

Castro County Sheriff Granville Martin has not publicly answered the charges from either of the resigned police chiefs.

Mitchell's resignation this week prompted an editorial from KDHN Radio in Dimmitt, calling for the city and county governing bodies to meet jointly and appoint a citizen's committee to investigate the law enforcement situation.

In his editorial, KDHN owner-manager

Jerry Marvin said that "Evidence indicates an existing problem with law enforcement in our community and our county" which "affects the health and welfare of all our citizens," and called for the city and county commissions to meet jointly and create "an unbiased citizen's committee... charged with investigating thoroughly the conduct of the Castro County Sheriff's Office and the Dimmitt Police Department."

In response to Marvin's editorial, Castro County Judge Weldon Bradley and Dimmitt Mayor Elmer Youts called a public meeting for 4 p.m. Friday. The district courtroom had an overflow crowd before the meeting started, and more stood in the hallway outside.

All law officers and their wives present were asked to leave the meeting after a vote.

In a letter to the city and county governing boards, B.M. and Don Nelson, co-publishers of the Castro County News, said the law enforcement situation "is affecting our people's trust in their law enforcement officials," and added that the conflict "could, if left unresolved, have an adverse effect on the safety of our people and the administration of civil and criminal justice in our county."

The newspaper urged an investigation either by an appointed citizen's committee or by the Castro County grand jury.

Marvin submitted a list of 10 basic questions which he said deserved answers, ranging from city-county agreements on the use of common equipment and facilities to rumors of a lack of back up support between the two agencies.

After a lengthy discussion, city and county commissioners who were polled for their opinion, said they would favor creation of a citizen's committee but felt it should have the authority to call in a professional investigator or legal counsel.

After consulting with city attorney Jack Edwards and county District Attorney

Jimmy Davis, the crowd approved a motion by Mrs. Tina Rawlings to have the city and county governing boards themselves investigate the situation and call in a professional investigator if necessary and then decide from the evidence collected whether to request the county District Attorney to impanel the grand jury.

Upon Edwards' motion, Don Nelson and Marvin were added to the joint study committee "to provide the public with reports on the results of the investigation through the newspaper and radio station."

The joint fact finding committee will hold its first meeting at 2 p.m. Monday in the Castro County Commissioners Court room.

Hawkins Murder Trial Site Moved To Lubbock

The capital murder trial of Samuel Christopher Hawkins III, accused of slaying a pregnant Borger housewife, has been moved here on a change of venue.

Dist. Judge Richard Countiss of Spearman ordered the trial moved from Hutchinson County because of heavy publicity surrounding the case. Jury selection is expected to begin Feb. 13 in 99th District Court. Countiss will preside at the trial.

Hawkins, 33, an Amarillo butcher, is charged with the May 3, 1977, stabbing death of Mrs. Abbe Rodgers Hamilton, 19, who was six months pregnant when she was slain.

Hawkins has also been indicted for alleged capital murder as the result of the beating death of a 12-year-old Amarillo girl, the girl, Rhonda Ann Keys, was reportedly kidnapped from her home Feb. 3.

The child's body was found in a culvert six days later, her hands tied and a pillowcase over her head.

Hawkins also faces trial in Deaf Smith County for aggravated rape in connection with an attack on a 21-year-old Hereford woman who was beaten and stabbed.

City Man Given Term In Shooting Incident

A 33-year-old Lubbock man has been assessed a two-year probated penitentiary term after being convicted of aggravated assault.

Assessed probation by a jury in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th Dist. Court was Alejandro Rosales McHane of 3406 Ave. K.

McHane was convicted of shooting Nicky Minnick, a security guard at an Amarillo Highway lounge Feb. 14, 1977.

Leonard Moreno, another security guard at the club, said McHane was one of a group who had been requested to leave the premises after an argument.

He said he saw McHane's car drive away, then later heard a shot and saw Minnick fall to the floor.

The defendant testified that he had fired three shots toward the rear of the building, but indicated he did not believe he had hit anyone.

In another case, Gilberto Trevino Rivas, 27, was found innocent by a jury in Judge John McFall's 237th Dist. Court of a possession of heroin charge.

Testimony indicated police executing a warrant Dec. 9, 1976, found heroin under a mattress in a room where guests of the defendant were sleeping.

Eight-Year Term Given In Burglary Hearing

A man convicted of breaking into a Texas Tech University campus policeman's home was assessed an eight-year prison term Friday.

Dist. Judge John R. McFall assessed the punishment to Jose R. Perez, 37, who earlier this month was convicted of the burglary of a habitation offense.

McFall had ordered a pre-sentencing report after jurors convicted Perez.

The defendant, who lived at 2913 Grinnell St. at the time of the offense, was found guilty of breaking into the Wolf-orth home of Porter Knox Johnston Dec. 28, 1976.

Johnston told jurors that he awoke shortly after noon on that date when he heard someone pounding on the front door. He said that he went to answer the door, then heard someone trying to break in the back door.

At that point, Johnston testified, he went back to the bedroom and got a revolver.

Johnston said he returned to find a man he identified as Perez in the living room.

The witness said Perez ran outside and sped away in a car. He said he got the car's license number, and then telephoned a description of the suspect, the car and the car license plate number to authorities.

Deputy Ernest Rector testified that Perez was arrested after a stake-out of his home.

Brilliant Orange Streak Crashes Into Atlantic

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A Florida policeman saw a brilliant orange-and-yellow streak slam into the Atlantic Ocean Friday, and experts believe it was a fireball — a meteor that burned up in the atmosphere.

"It was about the size of a car," said police officer John Johnson, of Tequesta, Fla. He claimed the streak plummeted into the ocean 400 yards offshore from Jupiter Inlet, 20 miles north of here, about 10:30 a.m.

"It had a trail on it about 100 yards long, it was bright yellow," Johnson said. "The meteorite was bright orange."

Several residents of the West Palm

Beach area called authorities to report the sighting.

Dr. Kurt Fredriksson, of the Smithsonian Institution's Division of Meteorites, said in Washington: "What it sounds like is a fireball, a rather spectacular one. That is a meteor, very common, compared to the very rare meteorites, so called when they actually fall to Earth."

Fredriksson said he expected the meteorite Johnson said he saw actually burned up in the atmosphere, and only appeared to hit the water. He also said such a phenomenon would have been visible for 100 miles.

"Usually when you have a fireball like that, it is much farther away than it appears," Fredriksson said. "There are usually shock waves if the meteorite hits anywhere close."

"It would put up an incredible racket — coming in at supersonic velocity almost certainly. It would be worse than the Concorde and be heard for perhaps a hundred miles."

Fredriksson said meteorites are only seen to hit the Earth "four, five, or six times a year." The Smithsonian has the largest collection of meteorites in the world.

Bar Association Discusses Aid Cutoff

Avalanche-Journal Staff
The Lubbock County Bar Association voted Friday to hold a special meeting soon to discuss taking action on a possible United Way cut-off of funds to the Lubbock Legal Aid Society.

The United Way is concerned about possible duplication of services offered by the Legal Aid Society and the federally-funded Lubbock Legal Services, a United Way official said.
The bar association voted to study the issue after Legal Aid Society president Dan Benson and Legal Services staff member Bill Garrett appealed for help at the bar's regular monthly luncheon Friday.

Benson and Garrett assured bar members there is no duplication of services and said that if the Legal Aid Society should go under, legal services to area indigents would be drastically reduced because the federally-funded agency would not be able to handle the caseload.
The Legal Aid Society was formed in 1967, and after the federal agency opened last year, the two split indigent legal work in Lubbock County, Benson and Garrett explained.
Under the division, the Legal Aid Society handles domestic relations cases and the federal agency, others such as consumer affairs, landlord-tenant problems, will probate and administrative cases.
The federal office, which serves Hockley and Hale counties as well, got 1,345 applicants and accepted 62 percent of the cases from February through December, 1977, Garrett said.

The five attorneys working there have an average 100 caseload each, he said.
The Legal Aid Society meanwhile handled about 840 cases last year, Benson said, with the assistance of two private attorneys and students from Benson's Texas Tech University Law School civil litigation class.
In addition Tech staff do all the typing, copying, and other clerical work for the society, he noted.

'Public Relations' Problem
Some bar members suggested that part of the Legal Aid Society's problem may be one of "public relations."
It has an image as a "divorce mill" in some minds, they said.
Benson explained that the "domestic relations" work done there includes much more than representing clients in divorces.
"About 240 of the 840 cases last year involved battered wives — a little over 30 percent," he said.
"Almost always we're talking about little children, without food and clothing and shelter because the father's an alcoholic or abuses them or is just not there."

"So, besides the divorces, there are child custody proceedings — the welfare department may intervene. There are child support payment enforcement problems. We do a lot of work that other United Way agencies might have to pick up if we're gone," Benson said.

Caseload Increase Seen
Garrett said his agency's caseload would increase by about 67 percent if the Legal Aid Society closes.

It would mean a cutback on either domestic relations or our other work, a cutback in services to the poor in Lubbock."

It is important for such service not to be reduced, he appealed.
"You rarely go through a lifetime in our society without some court-related experience," Garrett told bar members.
"But the right to go to court in the past historically has been the right to be able to pay to go to court. And if you can't pay, your rights don't mean much."
"It's all well and good to talk about that we're governed by laws and not by men, but the poor generally feel they are ruled by men, not by laws. It means a lot to them to go into court on an equal footing with the finance company or their landlord or the bank," he said.

Benson told the group it has a chance to put conservative anti-government talk into action in this situation.

"There is a lot of talk in this area, and you've probably taken part in yourselves, that, 'We don't like the federal government getting involved in our lives. We like to do everything locally.'"

"Now is the time to stand up and be counted," he declared.
Since a majority of the Legal Aid Society's board of directors is mandated to come from bar members, the association has effective control over its functions. An endorsement of future funding by the bar association would carry great "clout" with the United Way, Benson said.

Budgets
The Legal Aid Society this year received about $25,000 in funding from United Way and projects it needs about $26,000 next year.

Its total $31,000 budget in 1977 includes $6,000 in free office space donated by the county government.

By comparison, the federally-funded Lubbock Legal Services has a $250,000 budget for its three-county operation.

United Way's Nelda Thompson said Lubbock Legal Aid has been asked to provide a report by Feb. 1 on the indigent legal services situation here.

"The United Way would never drop Legal Aid just to be dropping it. The only thing is, we're very much aware of accountability as far as money is concerned."

"Last year the Legal Services corporation came into Lubbock and so at that time, we raised the question, 'Is Legal Aid still needed with the federal agency providing as much in the way of legal assistance as they do?'"

"If a service can be performed by another agency, then we feel we can't approve duplication of what's being done elsewhere," she said.

Lubbock Legal Aid Society is funded through Oct. 31. The United Way's new fiscal year begins then.

All United Way agencies must have their new budget requests in by April 1.

Motorists May Need Sideways Autos In Michigan Village

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (UPI) — Motorists in this northern Michigan tourist community may soon be on the market for cars that go sideways.

A new city ordinance designed to cut damages on parking meters makes it illegal to back an automobile into any metered parking space.

The City Commission only intended the law to apply to parking lots, but inadvertently worded it so it also applies to curb parking. Such parallel parking, according to traditional driving techniques, almost always requires entering the space in reverse.

The commission decided to adopt the new law because of $1,000 in meter damages caused each year by motorists engaged in angle parking.

But because of the wording, some citizens have interpreted the law to mean that they may not, at any time, shift into reverse while attempting to park.

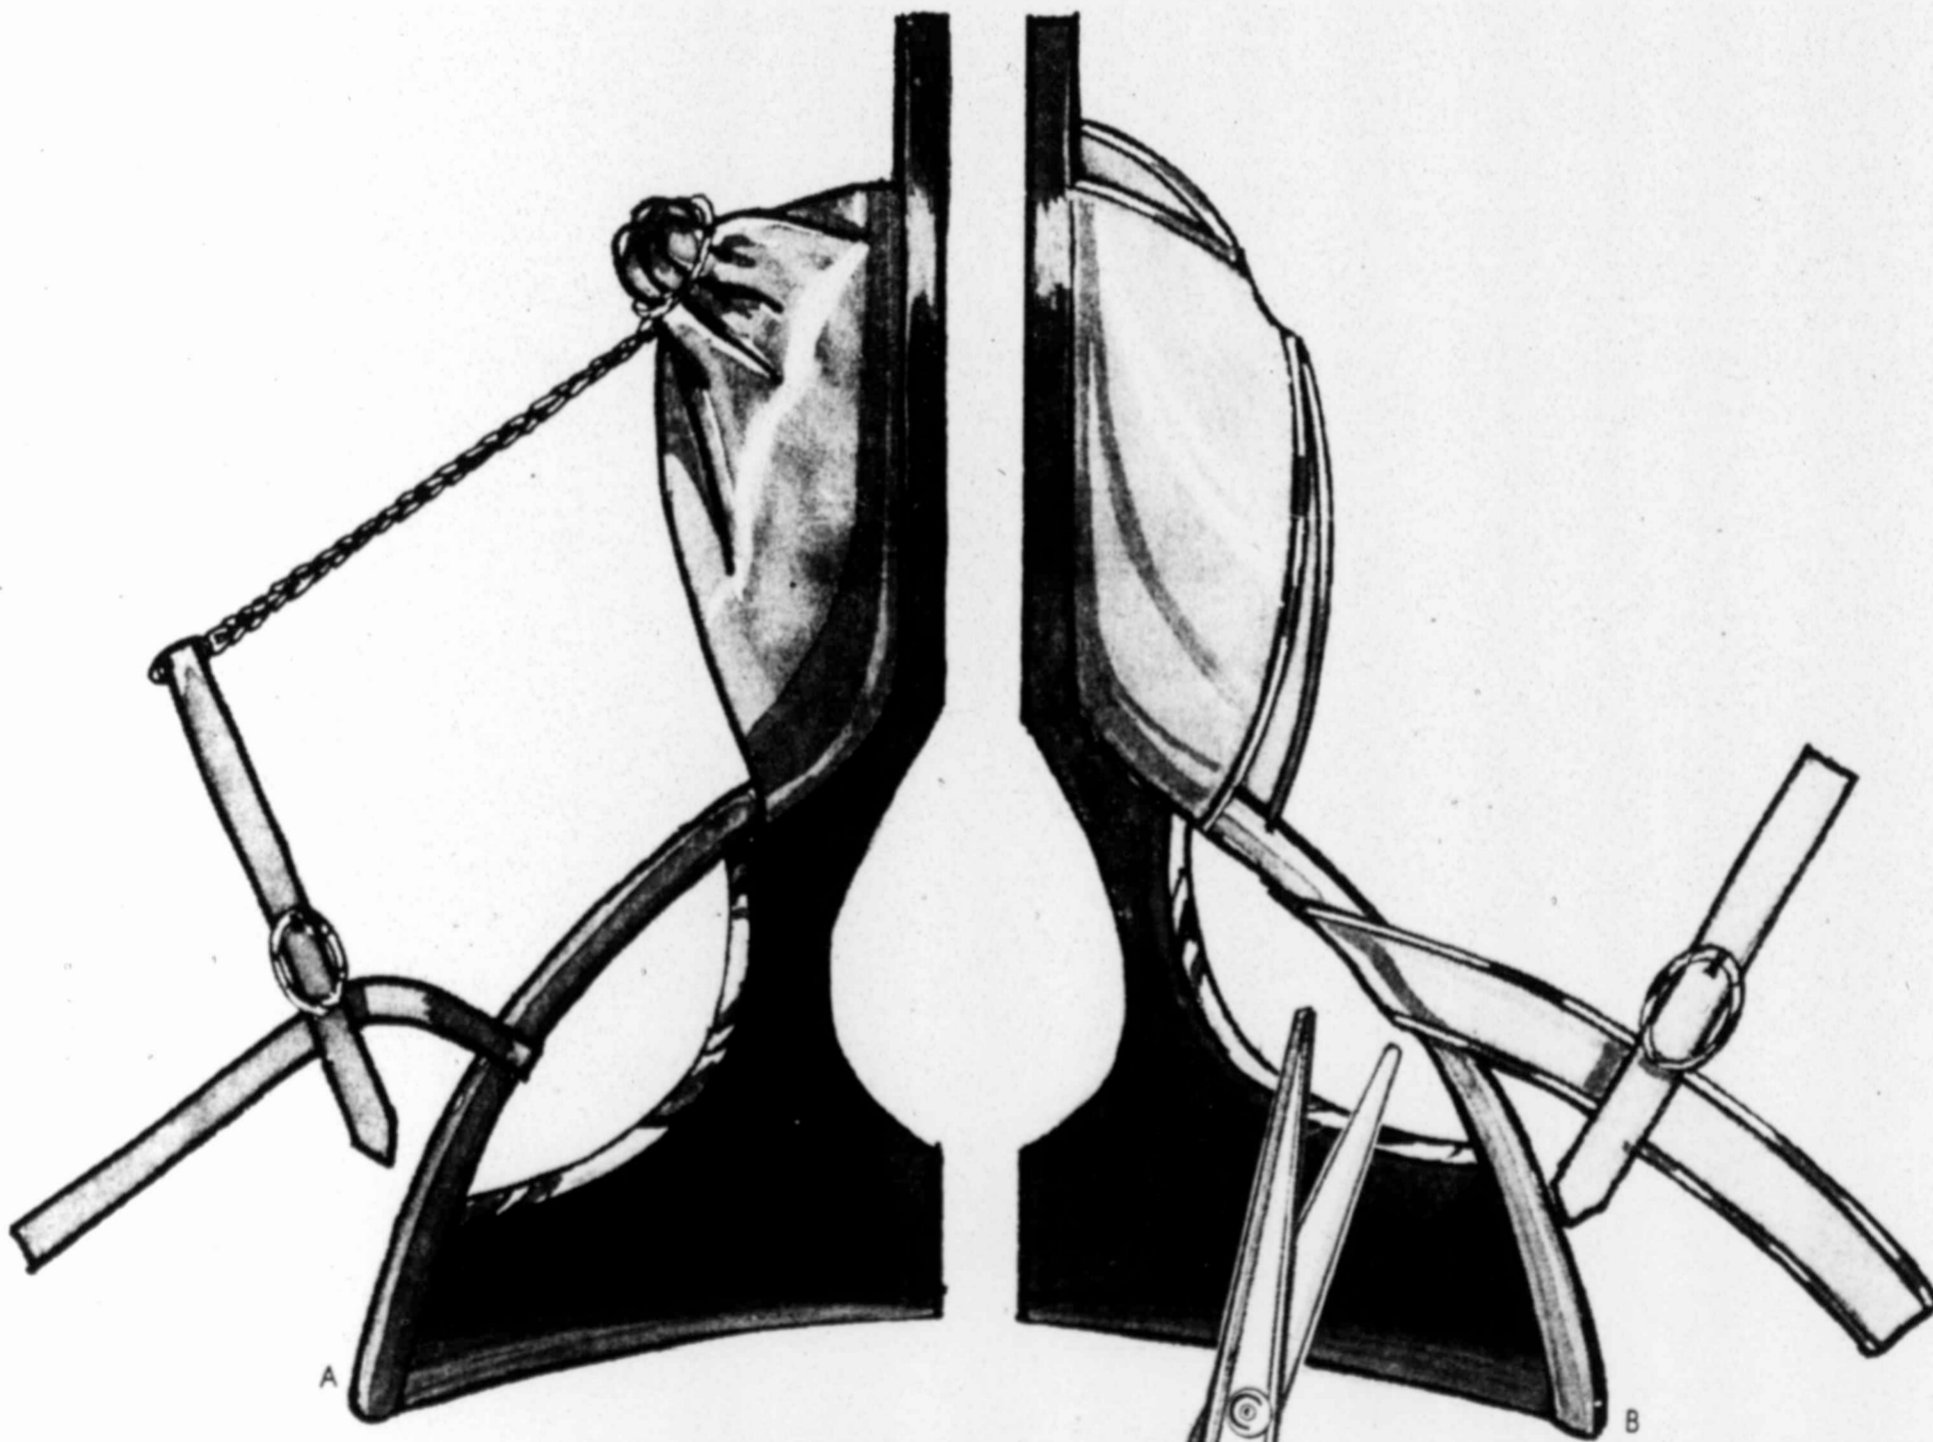

Walter Gendzwil, head of adult education at the Sault's Lake Superior State College, said the law could result in a proliferation of damaged headlights and fenders. He said he is reviewing the need for a course in "driver re-education."

High Plains Water District Sets Election For Leaders

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District had some rough sailing last year. The outcome of the district's election today to fill three expiring terms on the board of directors should determine whether the waves have calmed.

The names of four candidates will be on Saturday's ballot. One of those candidates is the district's former manager, Frank Rayner.

It was Rayner's resignation last August as the district's top employee that caused the 15-county agency to make the news.

Rayner most likely would have been fired as manager if he had not stepped down. The resignation resulted in the former manager's receiving a new contract making him a consultant to the district until September.

That contract has caused some question on whether Rayner would be eligible to take office if elected.

Rayner says he is eligible, but the board's attorney says he feels the former manager could not take the oath of office because of possible conflict of interests.

Both sides cite portions of state law which they say support their cases. However, if Rayner wins the election, the matter probably would have to be settled in court.

Rayner is challenging incumbent Pct. 1 director James P. Mitchell, who represents Lubbock, Crosby and Lynn counties on the board.

Running unopposed are Pct. 2 director Selmer H. Schoenrock, who represents Cochran, Hockley and Lamb counties, and Pct. 5 director Malvin A. Jarboe, representing Floyd and Hale counties.

Incumbent candidates say they want to continue working on a long-range plan which would improve water conservation, and also to improve the district's public education on the resource which is becoming scarce in the South Plains-Panhandle area.

Rayner has based his campaign on the promise to correct the wrongs he said he saw in the district while manager. He says the board is too involved in managing the staff — a job he says he should have had while with the agency.

Several board members have said they wonder how Rayner plans to make such vast changes in the district as a board member when he feels such alterations should be the responsibility of the manager.

All candidates say they feel area residents should take more interest in the district, and they hope for a large voter turnout.

All registered voters residing in the district are eligible to vote. There will be 25 polling places within the three precincts. All will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday.

Polls in Pct. 1 will be located at the Lorenzo Community Center; Wilson Co-op Gin; New Home Co-op Gin; east entrance of the Lubbock County Courthouse; Lubbock Fire Station No. 6 at 35th Street and Indiana Avenue; Wolforth City Hall; County Clubhouse, Slaton; and the

Radio Station To Hold Third Charity 'Opry'

KLLL Radio will hold its third KLLL West Texas Opry at 8 p.m. today at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center theater.

Tickets are on sale at Luskey's, Flipside Records and the Lubbock Music Center. Children under 6 will be admitted free.

The first KLLL West Texas Opry netted approximately $2,000, which was awarded Meals On Wheels. The second earned an additional $2,000 for Girlstown, according to Opry officials. The proceeds from tonight's show will also go toward charity.

Tonight's profits will be donated to the Lubbock chapter of Multiple Sclerosis, to be used for therapeutic equipment. The Lubbock chapter services 134 patients in the area, with 78 of them living in Lubbock.

Performing tonight will be area talents Cecil Caldwell, Tracie House, Sharon Kuziah, Zaida Ellison, the Hazel family, Roma Haley, Clarence Neiman, Texas Gold, Cal Garrett and Susie McGee, Chuck Cusimano, Terri Sue Newman, the West Texas Opry Band and the West Texas Dixieland Band.

LAST MAIL PICKUP — Postmaster Elmer J. Reed, Jr. of Lubbock unveils one of the new decals that will be appearing on mail boxes in the area. The decal will show the time mail must be deposited to get the last Monday to Friday pickup from the box. (Staff Photo)

Mail Pickup Time Decals Displayed

Mail collection boxes in the area will soon begin displaying a new decal that will show the time mail must be deposited to get the last Monday to Friday pickup from the box.

Postmaster Elmer J. Reed said the red, white and blue decal will replace the white star system used to indicate late pickup from the collection box. In addition to the decals, each box will continue to display a collection schedule showing all pickups, including weekdays, Saturday, Sundays and holidays.

Smith Pays Fee For Governor's Race

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Preston Smith of Lubbock Friday paid $1,500 at the state Democratic party headquarters, becoming the first candidate for governor to officially file for the May primary election.

Smith, who is challenging Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Atty. Gen. John Hill in the primary battle, noted that his filing fee came from "the contributions of hundreds of Texans."

"I may not have the huge special interest contributions that my opponents received, but I have the little people of the state," he said.

Smith again predicted he would be in a runoff following the May primary, with either Briscoe or Hill, but the Lubbock businessman did not specify which.

In recent weeks, Smith has stepped up the visibility of his campaign, pointing most of his criticism at increases in state spending during Briscoe's administration. Smith has recommended cutting the state sales tax.

Smith also contends the voters of Texas do not know enough about Hill to favor the attorney general in the race.

Four Contest Seats On District Board

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although past elections have proven otherwise, candidates for Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District posts hope area residents will show some interest in the race by going to the polls today and voting.

Four candidates, two of them incumbents, are vying for three expiring seats on the district's five-member board of directors.

Seeking another two-year term are present directors Cubby B. Key and W.D. "Billy" Sims. Challenging are Joanna Doss and Danny Edwards.

All candidates say they cannot understand why past elections have drawn such poor voter turnouts since the district is the governing body for the county's only complete recreational facility — Buffalo Springs Lake.

Voting is not controlled by precincts and the three persons receiving the most votes will win the election. At least one new member will be added to the policy-making board since longtime director V.G. Browning is not seeking re-election. Among concerns expressed for the lake, Mrs. Doss wants county residents to know they paid for the recreational facility; Edwards said he would work for a better fish spawning program. Key foresees an outdoor theater, and Sims hopes the board continues operating smoothly in assuring lake maintenance and upkeep.

District board members serve staggered two-year terms. Directors R.M. "Max" Wisner and Dale Miller will finish up their present terms next year at which time another election will be held.

Only 162 of the county's 79,000 registered voters went to the polls in last year's race. Such things as apathy, forgetfulness, lack of controversy and the absence of a dominant political figure were given by the candidates as reasons for poor showings at the polls.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and are located at the east entrance of the Lubbock County Courthouse, Lubbock Fire Station No. 6 at 35th Street and Indiana Avenue, Wolforth City Hall and at the community clubhouses in Shallowater, Idalou and Slaton.

All registered voters residing in the county are eligible to vote.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 25-year-old woman with varicose veins. They are not serious yet, and I have no pain, although my legs do ache when I stand or walk for any length of time. Weight is no problem.

I have one child, 9, and I noticed the veins during that pregnancy. Over the years they have spread. My greatest concern is that I do plan to have another child in the future. I'm not pregnant now. Do you advise another pregnancy? Also, what do you think of taking birth-control pills for the past nine years? I am still taking them. — Mrs. B.A.C.

Check with a vascular surgeon (one specializing in blood-vessel problems). Your small veins could be injected now if they are not too extensive and if their appearance is bothering you.

The next pregnancy will probably make them more prominent.

What do your doctors say about the birth-control pills? Some do not allow them for women with varicose veins. I would not. My chief concern is phlebitis (vein inflammation). I suggest you change to another method of contraception.

All I can tell you about another pregnancy is that varicose veins are not a bar to that, at least as you describe your condition.

MRS. CLYDE WILKE

Holmes-Wilke Repeat Vows

Merri Ellen Holmes and Clyde Wayne Wilke were married in a 6:30 p.m. ceremony Friday in St. John's Lutheran Church. The Rev. Bob Zachories officiated.

Honor attendants were Mrs. Judy Patschke, sister of the bride, and Curtis Gickhorn of Wilson.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. B.G. Holmes and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Wilke of Slaton.

The bride was graduated from Roosevelt High School. The bridegroom was graduated from Wilson High School.

After a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M., the couple will live in Lubbock.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 33 and have been having weakness and dizzy spells, a fluttery heart, nausea and headaches along with extreme nervousness at times. A doctor told me he thought I had an overactive thyroid gland. He said he would have to set up a special appointment to run the tests, but I never got the appointment. I am told this condition can enlarge my heart and cause it to burst. Is this true? Please send me your material on hypoglycemia. — Mrs. J.P.

An overactive thyroid gland may cause high blood pressure, overactivity of the heart, and possibly some heart enlargement. But I wouldn't go so far as to say your heart is going to "burst" on you.

You must have had little faith in your doctor not to insist on follow-up tests to find out whether your thyroid is overactive. Your symptoms are consistent with that. They are also consistent with a low blood sugar situation. You'll find that discussed in the material you asked for. For the hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) booklet, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, to cover costs of printing and handling. But don't wait, hoping a booklet is going to solve things. I don't care how long it's been since you saw your doctor. Call and get the appointment you need to check out the thyroid connection, if any. If those tests prove negative, you can then start thinking about the sugar possibility.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been on high blood pressure medicine for about a year now. If I stopped taking it, would my pressure go back up to what it was before I started it? — Mrs. P.A.

Most likely it would. It would, that is, unless you have eliminated other factors causing it or contributing to it. I'm thinking of things like excess weight or excess salt consumption, which are factors you can change. But if the medicine is the only therapy you've been using, then the pressure would probably rise to its old level after stopping it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible that a B-complex vitamin could make one sick? I was taking them for about four days. Ever since I stopped I've felt fine. I am afraid to start them again. — J.L.P.

It's possible, but unlikely. You could be sensitive to a substance in the capsule or tablet coating. Try a different brand or a less concentrated preparation. Brewer's yeast is a good substitute.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Have you ever heard of "pseudomonas"? What causes it and what can be done about it? This person who has it has lost a great amount of weight and doesn't have any appetite. — S.D.G.

It's not a disease but the name of a germ. It can cause a particularly virulent infection. A common site is the urinary tract. Treatment is with antibiotics. This organism can be a stubborn one, and your friend's weight loss is probably due to this long siege.

Extension Agent Gives Tips

Start a trip early in the day before rush-hour traffic to avoid stop-and-go driving, suggests Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"This saves gasoline and covers a surprising number of miles before the 'working people' get stirring," she adds.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing to you so maybe somebody who reads this and thinks price changing and shoplifting is a neat way to get things they can't afford will have a second thought.

I shoplifted a few small things like earrings and lipstick and it was easy. I decided I'd like an expensive coat, so I tried the price-tag-switching trick. Well, I was caught changing the tickets.

It was the most humiliating experience of my life. It seemed like everyone in the whole world was looking at me. I wanted to die. Lucky for me the person who caught me was a nice store detective. He warned what could happen if he reported it. I never dreamed the penalties were so stiff. I don't think anybody does.

Since this was the first time I had ever been caught, he let me off when I promised I would never again do such a thing. And, Ann, I am going to keep that promise. I'm still very much ashamed of myself, but I have learned my lesson. Maybe this letter will keep someone else from trying it. I hope so. — Sixteen And Cured For Life

Dear Sixteen: So do I. And thanks for sharing your humiliation in an effort to spare others the grief.

Dear Ann Landers: I am asking you to print this letter on behalf of all barbers. We are the most abused, underappreciated working people in the world. The public thinks all it takes to be a barber is to learn how to hold a pair of scissors and cut hair. They don't realize we have to spend long hours studying bone structure, muscle networks, bacteriology, skin, hair, scalp and skin diseases, also VD symptoms, chemistry, blood vessels, bookkeeping, shop management and electricity. It burns me up that so many people think barbers are dummies.

Good barbers are always studying what's new. At night after a hard day's work they go to styling classes. They have to be really good at their profession with so many men wanting layered sideburns and well-trimmed moustaches and beards. It's not like the crewcut days when all they had to do was chop, chop, chop.

Please ask the public to treat us with a little more respect. We deserve it. — Long Hours In Ohio

Dear Long Hours: I will You folks out there who think barbers are dummies had better get with it. And now with so many men wearing their hair longer, barbers are having a more difficult time making a living. A little more consideration, please, for the nation's clippers.

Dear Ann Landers: Dr. Lawrence Longo of Loma Linda University compares the vulnerability of the fetus of a smoking mother to the caged canaries that coal miners took underground because these small creatures were far more sensitive than humans to the presence of deadly gas. If there was any gas within miles the canaries collapsed.

Please, Ann, tell pregnant women NOT to smoke. There is now overwhelming evidence that it is truly dangerous for their unborn babies. — Children Have Rights, Too

Dear Friend: I have told them — many times. Thank you for telling them again.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611. COPYRIGHT 1978 FIELD ENTERPRISES, INC.

North had a pretty good hand for his raise of two spades. Not that it was good enough to have jumped to three, but rather that it was good enough so that any game invitation by South would have been promptly accepted.

South didn't invite game. He bid it whereupon North committed one of the most horrible of bridge crimes. He bid five spades.

South passed. He knew that he did not want to be in a slam. He also knew that he didn't want to be in five, but it was too late to do anything about that.

He was unlucky not to make five. If the defense hadn't started by taking two heart tricks everything would have been fine. If the clubs had broken better, South could have discarded two diamonds on long clubs or if the diamond finesse had been on, South could have made the contract by taking it.

All sorts of bad luck, but North had made all that bad luck possible when he trapped his partner by bidding when he should have passed.

 1/2 tsp. black pepper
 1 can (13-1/2 oz.) pineapple tidbits in unsweetened pineapple juice (drain, reserve juice)
 1 large green pepper, cut in 1-inch pieces
 3 cups hot cooked rice
 Cook sausage in 1/2 cup water about 5 minutes. Remove from water and cut in thin slices. Combine sausage and onions in a large skillet. Cook until onions are tender crisp. Stir in catsup, broth, mustard, soy sauce, pepper, pineapple, and 1/2 cup pineapple juice. Simmer about 10 minutes. Add green pepper and cook 5 minutes longer. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Sometime ago I was giving myself a manicure, wishing I had a container so I could heat my lotion like they do in beauty salons, when I realized I did have one! A baby food-warmer left over from keeping the grandbabies!

It has three compartments so I put lotion in one, soapy water in another and plain water in the other. It was super — everything I needed in one place.

One word of caution — this can get too warm. I sit mine close to the plug-in so I can unplug it without getting up. — Helen Reynolds

I think you've latched on to a lulu of a hint, luv. It's absolutely a treasure! — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Ever troubled with loose window shade springs? Instead of using a fork or pliers to tighten them (which might make it too tight), I put the rolled-up shade on the bracket and pull it down, then re-roll by hand. It might take another time or two, but it works.

If the spring is too tight, unroll by hand, replace on the bracket and try it. You may have to unwind it and try again.

I learned these tricks when I worked for a window shade company and had to hang them. — Arthur Moser

Dear Heloise: I love to sew but found a card table in my guest bedroom-sewing room was very unsatisfactory, and it was not always convenient to use the family room table.

It occurred to me to cover the old folding aluminum picnic table with adhesive-backed plastic and now I have the best cutting table I have ever had — plus a handy, attractive picnic table when needed. — Phyllis Anderson

Dear Heloise: The best way I have found to fasten lining paper into drawers or onto shelves is by using double-sided sticky transparent tape — a small piece under each corner and perhaps one in the center, front and back.

After years of thumbtacks or unfastened paper that sludded and rumbled, I find this quick and easy. — Mary DeLafield

A real winner! We love hearing from you, Mary! Please drop in anytime! — Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have not sent this hint in before now because I kept thinking someone else would, but so far I have not seen it, so here goes:

When peeling onions, just keep your mouth shut! No offense, and I do not mean to be nasty!

This is why some say put a match in your mouth or a piece of bread. The only reason this helps is you have to keep your mouth shut to hold any of these in your mouth. — No More Tears

I fry bacon real crisp and crumble it into the yolks. Add a little onion chopped fine, some brown mustard and real mayonnaise.

I'm asked to make these at every gathering — bet you will be too. — Virginia Conaway

'Semi-Tough' Saved By Reynolds' Performance

"Semi-Tough" Screenplay by Walter Bernstein. Based on the novel by Dan Jenkins. Music by Jerry Fielding. Directed by Michael Ritchie. Stars Burt Reynolds, Kris Kristofferson and Jill Clayburgh. Rated R. At Showplace Four.

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Fine Arts Editor

It wasn't that many years ago that people were hanging the "good looks — no talent" placard around Robert Redford's neck, maintaining their idiotic stance even after Redford stunned audiences in "Jeremiah Johnson" and "The Candidate." Common consensus seemed to hold that the thespians were born with either striking features or effective techniques, never both. No doubt that same misguided feeling is what's been keeping Burt Reynolds, the epitome of screen charm and a master at comic timing, hidden away in what he labels "good old boy" roles.

Well, all that may soon come to an end because Reynolds offers his most moving, funny, warm and witty performance ever in "Semi-Tough." And it couldn't have come at a more opportune time since, unfortunately, Michael Ritchie's perverse destruction of the popular Dan Jenkins novel is no doubt one of the more stupid, uneven and ill-conceived films of 1977. If not for Reynolds, it would be a total bust. And it comes close to achieving that stature more than once anyway.

In short, Ritchie came as close as a director can get to blowing a sure fire hit — but Reynolds would not let him do it. The actor's one-to-one rapport still shines through. Burt is once more, in the immortal words of Gene Autrey, back in the saddle again.

From the moment producer David Merrick purchased the rights to the novel, the story was put through the ringer. First it was projected as a Broadway musical, then as the first country and western Broadway musical. Then when everybody decided to make a movie instead, the first screenplay was ditched and another writer was brought in. The National Football League, which sanctioned violent films like "Two Minute Warning" and "Black Sunday," wouldn't give its blessing to the bawdy "Semi-Tough."

Even though NFL officials never read the final script.

But that was par for the course. Merrick didn't like the book and Ritchie only skimmed through it. The actors had loved the book, had indeed signed for a football comedy, only to discover that the producer wanted a love story and the director wished to use the film as a visual statement against the consciousness movements. Football sequences are never emphasized or filmed with any semblance of color or reality. Unforgettable characters like T. J. Lambert, Puddin' Patterson, Hose Manning, Shoat Cooper and Dreamer Tatum have been all but forgotten in this movie. And Shake Tiller has become a bore.

Thank the Lord and Burt Reynolds that we still get the occasional glimpse of the wisecracking, irreverent, country-schooled halfback Billy Clyde Puckett. (Disregard the advertisements labeling him a quarterback.)

The plot is only skin deep, showing us Miami (see, even the team has changed) split end Shake Tiller (Kris Kristofferson) and Billy Clyde both living with good friend Barbara Jane Bookman (Jill Clayburgh), the daughter of team owner Big Ed Bookman (Robert Preston). It's pretty much a platonic relationship, full of expletives and good times, until Barbara and Shake begin to fall in love. Only then does Mama Puckett's child realize he, too, loves Barbara Jane.

And he doesn't want to lose her. Not even to his best friend.

It's a wonderful role for Reynolds since he's allowed to wink and whoop and holler, but also express real emotions. He's simply hilarious when explaining a missing bearskin rug — "T. J. Lambert has it. Came in here the other night and there was a stewardess on it. He just rolled her up like a burrito and took off!" — and shows us the sad, subtle humor of a one-way love with his attempts to impress Barbara Jane by becoming a writer, which to B. C. Puckett means donning a cardigan and smoking a pipe.

But unlike so many of his past films, Reynolds is a feeling human being here, if only for the scene in which Barbara Jane and Shake rush in to tell him of their wedding plans. Playing the scene with semi-jokes, his eyes reveal the truth. The scene, played out to just the right length, is marvelously directed and performed.

So you see, even if Michael Ritchie didn't want to make football frolics the focal point, he very well could still have succeeded with the romantic comedy. But no, he wants to attack Werner Ehrhard and est, so he gives us Bert Convy as Frederick Bismark leading a movement called BEAT (Bismark Energy Attack Training). Ritchie goes so far as to give us over ten minutes straight of BEAT in the latter moments, the sequence inspiring only small catnaps and trips to the concession stand.

It's boring and does not fit in well with the structure of the comedy. But there's more. The distinguished Robert Preston subscribes to moviegenics, a system of creeping and crawling around the office floor which supposedly puts him "in line with gravity." It's an embarrassing scene for the likes of Preston. Then Carl Weathers tells Burt about something called pyramid power, saying, "BEAT is just sensory deprivation jive. Pyramid power is what's in. You expect to beat us with BEAT when we got pyramid power?"

Now that's what I call psyching out the opposing team before the Super Bowl, right?

In other words, Ritchie beats us over the head with BEAT all through the movie, then offers an even more nonsensical scene in which Reynolds is "pelfed" on a massage table by a German woman who believes, "The inside of the nose is the reflection of the personality." More yawns.

EMBARRASSING SCENE — Running back Billy Clyde Puckett (Burt Reynolds), right, visits the office of his boss, played by Robert Preston, only to discover the latter believes that crawling does wonders for your health. It's an embarrassing and stupid scene, especially for such accomplished actors, but the film "Semi-Tough" still offers up more than a few laughs. Rated R, it's showing at Showplace Four.

Flu Epidemic Menaces America

ATLANTA (AP) — Flu has reached epidemic proportions in parts of the United States, and the death toll is mounting, particularly in the East, the Center for Disease Control reported Friday.

Reports from 121 selected cities, upon which the CDC bases its reports, showed 855 fatalities from flu and pneumonia during the week of Jan. 7 — 70 percent above the normal total of 500 for that week in those cities.

Excess deaths, "generally considered attributable to epidemic influenza infections," were reported in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Georgia, Maryland, North Carolina, Florida, Virginia, the District of Columbia and Delaware.

Excess deaths are those exceeding the normal number.

Those states reported substantial, if not widespread, flu since early December, the CDC said.

Widespread flu outbreaks, where flu is reported in counties comprising more than half the state's population, were reported in 13 states last week — Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin.

Sixteen states reported regional outbreaks and the rest reported sporadic outbreaks or did not make reports, said CDC spokesman Don Berreth. Arizona and the Dakotas reported no flu.

This year's flu outbreak — A-Texas and A-Victoria flu — already is more severe than last year, which was a mild year for flu, Berreth said. But it is too early to compare it with the 1975-76 outbreak of A-Victoria flu which took an estimated 20,000 lives or the 1968-69 outbreak of A-Hong Kong flu which killed about 33,000 persons.

Meanwhile, the CDC said that another strain — Russian flu — has been reported for the first time in Great Britain, including 40 cases at a U.S. Air Force base, and in the Philippines.

Financial Plan Unveiled

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch unveiled a four-year city financial plan Friday that would result in a loss of 20,000 municipal jobs through attrition and called for $5 billion in federal financing and federal guarantees for about $2.25 billion in new notes.

Previously this season, Russian flu had been reported only in the Soviet Union, China, Finland, Czechoslovakia and Hong Kong.

The threat that Russian flu could cause an epidemic in this country has prompted some health experts to suggest a large-scale vaccination program like that conducted last year. No solid plans have been made.

Persons under age 24 are said to be most susceptible to Russian flu.

Forty confirmed cases were found among U.S. Air Force personnel in Upper Heyford, England, the CDC said. The outbreak began Jan. 4, peaked during the week of Jan. 9 and has now subsided.

Persons aged 18 to 22 were hit most frequently.

Meanwhile, the Philippines reported its first case of Russian flu, a 21-year-old Manila man who became ill early in December, and there was confirmation that two children in Taipei had come down with the strain. In addition, the Chinese Academy of Medical Sciences in mainland China reported to the World Health Organization that during the latter half of May 1977, an outbreak of Russian flu spread from the northeastern city of Tientsin south to many other areas of China.

Prosecutor Suggests Congressmen Guilty

FOR YOUR WANT ADS CALL 762-8821

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski said Friday some present congressmen are "possibly criminally culpable" in connection with alleged South Korean influence buying.

The special counsel of the House ethics committee said "the number is not large — I can't identify the number" and acknowledged the evidence so far is not conclusive in some cases.

"I would say that in my own judgement we feel that there is guilt on the part of some," Jaworski told House freshman and sophomore Democrats at a briefing.

Newsmen asked Jaworski later if he believes any of the congressmen are guilty of anything more than violating House rules and he replied that "probably in some cases it goes beyond" that.

"They would be possibly criminally culpable," Jaworski said.

Another source said he believes that, at most, five or six present congressmen and about five former congressmen might be subject to disciplinary action if the worst suspicions could be proved.

There would be more if the committee could prove any congressmen took envelopes stuffed with $100 bills allegedly handed out by a former ambassador, the source said.

But he and another source said the committee does not even have names of congressmen who might have accepted the cash.

Jaworski told the junior House Democrats the committee could wrap up its investigation in 60 to 90 days if South Korea would turn over both Tongsun Park, a businessman, and the former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo, for questioning.

He passage of a strong resolution threatening adverse action by Congress against South Korea if it does not cooperate, and Rep. Allen E. Ertel, D-Pa., promised to introduce such a resolution.

Jaworski has repeatedly suggested in recent weeks some sort of retaliation by Congress if South Korea does not cooperate but has never said whether he wants reduction of U.S. aid or some other action.

He said Congress should pass a resolution "saying to South Korea, 'Now look, we're not simply asking you for cooperation. We're telling you: don't expect our cooperation unless you're going to cooperate with us.'

"And the minute that message gets to South Korea so that they understand it and know that you mean it, just then we're going to get the cooperation we seek," Jaworski said.

Tax Fees, Uniforms Deductible

By Ray De Crane

In itemizing deductions on your federal income tax return don't stop in the "Miscellaneous" section after you have entered the amount of your union dues, dues to a professional organization and your safe deposit box rental fee. There is far more that can be claimed here, if it applies in your situation.

Here are among the deductions that can be listed:

The cost of a physical examination that is required by your employer, or a prospective employer.

The cost and upkeep of special work clothing specifically required by your the nature of your occupation and which are not readily adaptable for ordinary street wear. This includes the special uniforms and equipment required by ballplayers, policemen, firemen, letter carriers, jockeys, nurses and faculty members of military schools.

Last In A Series

The cost of a painter's white cap, jacket and bib overalls are not deductible, but protective clothing, including safety shoes and helmets, work gloves, oilskins and rubber boots may be claimed. Uniforms used by air, rail, bus and other transportation employees, if used solely in the course of their employment, may be claimed.

If you are seeking new employment in your present profession, trade or business, the expenditures for typing and printing a resume and the postage charges in mailing the resume to prospective employers are deductible.

Also deductible are employment agency fees incurred in seeking employment in the same trade or business. But if you are seeking employment outside your field, the fees are not deductible, even if you obtain a position.

The cost of trade and professional magazine subscriptions related to your line of work.

Investment counsel fees paid someone for advising you on your investments, but only as they relate to investments that produce a taxable income.

Tax counsel and assistant fees and the cost of tax books you purchase to help you prepare your own tax return.

(NEXT: How to save a tax counsel fee).

South Korean Stopover

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Fifty-three Vietnamese refugees left for resettlement in the United States Friday after a temporary stopover in South Korea under the care of the Red Cross. The travelers were among 163 Vietnamese refugees who landed in South Korea between June and September of last year, most of them arriving by boat. Last fall, 71 of them resettled in France. The remaining 39 have not yet found countries willing to accept them.

State Agency Hears Requests

The Texas Department of Water Resources heard from two parties here Friday who requested amendments to proposed water treatment requirements they say they cannot meet.

In a public hearing, Chester Green, consultant to the City of Brownfield, told department representatives Brownfield's present sewage treatment plant is not capable of purifying waste to the degree TDWR has asked for.

The limitation for effluent concentrations was not to exceed a 30-day average of 30 milligrams of bio-chemical oxygen demand (BOD) per litre. (The greater the demand for the chemical, the less pure the effluent.)

Green and Brownfield City Manager

Jake Geron said the town's present facility could not meet the 30 BOD ceiling and wondered what action would be taken by the department by not complying.

Jerry Kern, who was one of several representing the state agency at the hearing, said the city would not have to fear prosecution as long as it met another provision of the proposed permit which states, "treatment shall be sufficient to prevent nuisance conditions in the irrigation systems."

Green said the quality of the city's treated waste, which feed nearby non-edible crops, does not hamper irrigation of those fields.

Kern did recommend to hearing examiner Phil Paine, who was representing the Texas Water Commission, that the city's proposed permit be amended to allow metering and records of application rates on an annual basis for the overall irrigation operation rather than the original requirement to maintain records for individual fields being irrigated.

Paine said the commission had within 120 days to study applications and recommendations made Friday before decisions needed to be reached.

Brownfield also has applied for a grant to build a new treatment plant which the commission might decide on within the 120-day period.

Green, also representing Plains Co-op Oil Mill, Inc., asked that the commission relax treatment requirements of rainfall runoff from the mill to the 26th Street storm sewer.

Green said that to bring runoff water to the quality the agency is asking for would mean the mill would have to pay about $150,000 to build a treatment plant, and that such a requirement is "unfair" because it is not imposed on adjacent businesses.

However, Dr. Harry Pruett of TDWR, told Paine the requirement is not too stringent, and refused to recommend amending it.

Pruett said the initial inch of the mill's runoff is the most contaminated, and if that could be intercepted Plains Co-op would meet the department's requirement.

Pruett did recommend that the commission allow MBPXL Meat Packers, Corp., at Friona to build a new evaporation pond for additional waste caused by a stepped up hide tanning process at the plant.

Miller Says No To Credit Control Idea

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — G. William Miller, Federal Reserve Board chairman-designate, said Friday that selective credit controls aren't needed now even though they are useful in times of economic crisis.

"We do not have excesses in the economy today, fortunately," Miller told a news conference.

Miller, who previously has been quoted as favoring credit curbs in some instances, said the economy is strong and that he would prefer to avoid using any controls — direct or indirect.

The chairman-designate was on a three-day visit to Yale University.

The Fed is able to control credit by raising requirements for bank reserves and by boosting its charge on loans to member banking institutions. The moves can make borrowing more costly and can help check inflation by slowing expansion of the nation's money supply.

Analysts believe that too-restrictive actions, however, can choke economic expansion by making the cost of capital investment — purchases of new plants and equipment — too high.

The Fed in recent weeks has moved to raise short-term interest rates in an effort to strengthen the dollar by attracting foreign investors in search of high yields.

But Miller declined comment on interest rate matters Thursday, saying "I'm not prepared to say what the right targets should be."

"Obviously if you are going to get inflation down you want to get less money out, but how that works from year to year is still to be decided."

Miller also said while he had not heard President Carter's State of the Union address Thursday, he applauds Carter's $25 billion tax cut plans.

But he said new tax incentives aren't needed to fight inflation, calling such incentives "very complicated and time-consuming."

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that inflation reached a 6.2 percent annual rate in the final quarter of 1977, up sharply from the third quarter's 4.8 percent annual pace.

Miller told reporters he believes a 6 percent rate is "still much too high" and said he agrees with the president that the best way to fight inflation is through expansion of business, which, he noted, means more jobs and modernization of plants and equipment.

Miller described current government job creation programs as "stopgap" and added that any such programs are designed only to "build a bridge to get those people into the private sector as fast as we can."

Asked about who will succeed Arthur Burns on the Federal Reserve Board,

Miller said, "I have no candidates." Burns recently announced his plan to resign from the board as well as from its chairmanship.

Bus Minister Receives Service Award

Terry Bell, one of Broadway Church of Christ's bus ministers, recently received an award for 12 years of service in the bus ministry program of the church.

Bell began working with the program when attending Lubbock Christian College. He later graduated from Texas Tech and the Sunset School of Preaching here.

Bell attributes the start of the ministry to lower socio-economic children to efforts of Bill Banowsky, former Broadway Church of Christ minister.

In 1964, Bible classes were started. They were taught and organized by college students from the Bible Chair. Bell also helped for three years in summer Bible camps for Negro children held at Mackenzie State Park.

The 1970 tornado propelled the Broadway Church of Christ's bus program into expansion. More than 20 families with children in the Saturday morning classes had homes damaged or destroyed by the tornado. During that emergency, the Broadway building became a relief center and many contacts were made with Mexican-American families. Soon after that, the first bus route was begun on Wednesday nights and Sundays.

Three buses now bring 150 children to the church on Wednesday nights. As the Broadway bus program grew, the need was felt to hire a preacher in the Spanish work. Gerardo Garro was hired part-time to try to reach the parents of the children who rode the buses.

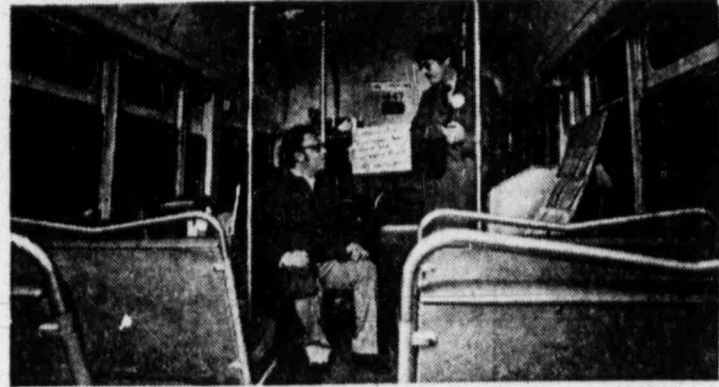

Sunday morning services began, corresponding with the regular worship services of the Broadway congregation. These services replaced the Saturday afternoon classes.

Expansion and growth have been great. After Garro left in 1976, Adelmo Castro has served as full-time minister. He concentrates on working with adults of the Spanish congregation and more than 10 baptisms have resulted from his efforts.

Bell's ministry concentrates on children and teenagers. In his 12 years, size of the congregation to which he brings attendants, has more than doubled. Three bus routes go to area of Arnett Benson, Cherry Point and south of 34th Street and east of Avenue A.

Many college students — more than 200 — have participated in the program since 1965. Many outreach programs have resulted from the hard work of Bell, Castro, and other bus ministers and workers. Singing groups have been organized to go to homes for the elderly during summer months. Home Bible studies are conducted for interested adults and teenagers. Castro has a radio program, heard over a Spanish-speaking Spanish language station. Care is provided to many deserving cases in terms of food, clothing and medical care.

Bell also is involved in coordinating Friday night activities for children, and providing a puppet ministry.

Texas Ministers Set Seminar On Hunger

The Council On Ministries of the Northwest Texas Conference (United Methodist Church) will sponsor a seminar "Hunger: A Dialogue," from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. January 28 in Lubbock's St. John's United Methodist Church.

The seminar is to provide opportunity for district hunger teams to listen to, and exchange ideas, with a spokesman on hunger.

Dr. C. Dean Freudenberger, professor of International Development Studies and Ecumenics at the interfaith Media Center of School of Theology, located at Claremont, Calif., will be speaker and resource person during the day.

He also is director of the Hunger Studies Project of the Center. He is a former United Methodist specialist in rural development and agriculture on both national and international scenes.

Other speakers will include Jeanne Gramstorff of Farnsworth, Tex., a member of the Board of Discipleship of the UMC; Jim Waterfield of Canadian, member of the Episcopacy Committee and Board of Global Ministries of the UMC; and Charles Lutrick of Midland, member of the General Council on Ministries and former minister at St. John's United Methodist Church here.

Action group leaders will include: Darrell Smith of Midland; Charles Evans of Childress; J. Alvis Cooley of Lamesa; and Imogene Price of Lubbock.

CHURCH BRIEFS

"The Coming Invasion Of Israel," a hard-hitting film that is timely today with headlines from the Middle East, will be shown at Lubbock's Trinity Church, located at 7002 Canton Ave., at 7:30 p. m. Jan. 25.

The Women's Fellowship of Faith Baptist Church of Lubbock studied a lesson on "Worry" and held a kitchen shower for the church at its meeting Thursday night. Hostesses Joann Nash and Norma Davis gave devotionals.

A reception honoring Dr. James Brandon, new pastor, and his family, will be held Sunday night at Southcrest Baptist Church. A pinto beans and cornbread supper will be served following the reception.

A Council On Ministries training session will be from 7 p. m. to 8:30 p. m., Jan. 30 at Oakwood United Methodist Church at 58th Street and Avenue W. Members of the councils of churches in the Lubbock District of the United Methodist Church are invited to attend.

"Baptist Men's Day" will be at 7 p. m. Sunday in Fellowship Hall of Lubbock's Calvary Baptist Church. Speaker will be Box Dixon.

"Baptist Men's Day" speaker at Oakwood Baptist Church of Lubbock Sunday will be Jim Walters. A men's choir will be heard at 10:15 a. m. and 6:45 p. m.

A congregational meeting will be held Sunday at Lubbockview Christian Church. The business session was called by J. W. Duckworth, chairman of the Official Board.

Charles Carman, minister of Lubbock's University Christian Church, will be one of the speakers at the first West Texas Mini Preaching and Teaching Convention, scheduled Sunday through next Tuesday at Odessa's Parker Heights Christian Church.

The evangelistic team of the Rev. and Mrs. F. R. McAdams of Martin, Tenn., will lead in a revival at Lubbock's Crestview Assembly of God Church, Sunday through Jan. 29.

French Court Sentences 'World Citizen No. 1'

MULHOUSE, France (AP) — A French court sentenced Garry Davis, self-styled "World Citizen No. 1," to two years in prison and a $1,000 fine Friday for distributing his unofficial "world passports."

The official charge against Davis, who renounced his U.S. citizenship in 1948, was swindling and counterfeiting of passports. Court officials said some 90 complaints were filed against Davis, especially by immigrant workers who believed they had purchased an official document.

Davis has contended his "world passports" are sold mostly to refugees who are unable to procure any official document or even such necessary identification papers as a birth certificate.

The luncheon is for women of the Lubbock Baptist Association. Reservations must be made by Wednesday with Cynthia Thornell.

A style show at Skibell's will follow the luncheon. Special music will be presented by Maria Tolbert, soloist, and Johnny White, pianist.

Bettie Sides is Baptist Women's director of the Lubbock Baptist Association.

Conference Slated At Trinity Church

Hilton Sutton, recognized as an authority in Bible prophecy related to current events and world affairs, will lead a "Winter Prophecy Conference" at Lubbock's Trinity Church, Jan. 29-Feb. 1.

Sutton has studied the Book of Revelations for 20 years and has held prophecy conferences across the nation for five years.

Sutton said: "I take the words of the most accurate new report ever — God's Holy World — and relate to current events and news of the today."

Don Haney will be music director for the conference. He is a graduate of Oral Roberts University and has ministered with the "World Action Singers." He has sung for some of the leading churches in America.

Women's Bank Thriving In Persian Gulf Emirate

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A women's bank has been inaugurated in the oil-rich Persian Gulf emirate of Abu Dhabi and is doing a booming business, the Beirut newspaper Al Anwar reported Friday.

No man, even the new bank's manager, Basil Tewfik, is allowed on the premises. Work is conducted by women employees, Al Anwar said.

Tewfik said women customers were rushing to open saving accounts and rent jewelry vaults. Though Moslem laws in the Persian Gulf countries give a man supreme authority over his wife's affairs, bank employees say the institution guarantees protection of the wife's valuables.

Church Retreat Attracts 200 Methodist Youths, Sponsors

A "Youth Service Fund Retreat" for youths and sponsors of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, in progress here has attracted up to 200 attendants.

The two-day retreat is being held at Red Raider Inn. It opened Friday and will be concluded today.

Activities have included a movie, slide show, clown ministry performance, two dramas, and Johnny Ray Watson, gospel singer, in concert.

"Johnny's style appeals to youth," said the Rev. Tom Nagle, conference youth coordinator.

The youths and sponsors are discussing how Youth Service Fund monies will be spent.

Youths of other denominations were invited, according to Rev. Nagle. The retreat last year at the same place, drew attendance of 180 persons.

Young Sets Meet With Rhodesians

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen will meet with Rhodesian guerrilla leaders in Malta next week to discuss transition to black rule in the African nation, American sources said Thursday night.

Young, head of the United States' U.N. mission, will fly to London Monday and the two will go to Malta on Thursday, now serving as stated supply for the First Church resbyterian Church at Seymour, will be guest speaker.

Hart and his family served 16 years in the mission field in Beirut, Lebanon, be-said the informants, who asked not to be identified.

Officials in London said Owen would meet in Malta soon with Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, whose Patriotic Front movement controls the bulk of the guerrilla forces operating from neighboring black states against Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority government. They gave no date for the meeting.

Pastoral Appointments Announced By Bishop

At a recent Cabinet meeting held in Lubbock, Bishop Alsie H. Carleton of the Northwest Texas-New Mexico Conference of the United Methodist Church, announced several changes in pastoral appointments.

Included were these changes: the Rev. Royce Womack from First UMC, Morton, to associate at St. Luke's UMC, Midland; Rev. William "Bill" McReynolds from St. John's UMC in Santa Fe, N.M., to First UMC, Hereford; Rev. J. B. Sharp from Dalhart Central UMC, to St. John's UMC, Santa Fe; Rev. Bill M. Kent from First UMC Canyon, to Dalhart Central UMC; Rev. Bobby J. McMillan from Friona First UMC, to Canyon First UMC; Rev. James P. Boswell from Wellington First UMC to Friona First UMC; Rev. Thomas H. Thomson from associate at San Jacinto UMC, Amarillo, to Wellington.

And, Rev. Hershel H. Homer from associate at St. Paul UMC, Amarillo, to Elmwood West UMC in Abilene; Rev. Marvin Gregory from associate at First UMC, Plainview, to Morton First UMC; Rev. Douglas Gossett from associate at Hereford First UMC, to Fairmont UMC, Abilene; Rev. James Willborn from Turkey UMC to Kress UMC; Rev. Elroy Wisman from Seminary to Turkey UMC; Rev. Weldon Tucker from Kress UMC, to Wylie UMC, Abilene; Rev. W. L. Armstrong from associate pastor, Lamesa First UMC, to Methodist Home Boy's Ranch at Waco.

Bishop Carleton said the changes at First United Methodist Church at Hereford were occasioned by the retirement of Dr. Jordan Grooms and the change at Fairmont UMC of Abilene by the death of Rev. Ralph Odom. Rev. Bill McReynolds was received by transfer from the New Mexico Annual Conference; and Rev. J. B. Sharp was transferred from the Northwest Texas Annual Conference to the New Mexico Conference. Fair Park UMC at Abilene will be supplied at a later date.

Some of the appointments were effective Jan. 1 and others were made effective Jan. 16.

Admission is free. The public is invited.

Film Relates Story Of Man's Struggle To Keep Singing

"He Restored My Soul," a color motion picture about the dramatic experience of Merrill Womach, will be shown at Lubbock's First Foursquare Church at 3115 2nd St., at 6 p. m. Sunday.

In 1961, Womach was flying alone to Spokane, Wash., to spend Thanksgiving Day with his wife and children. His twin-engine airplane was forced down in a snowstorm at Beaver Marsh, Ore. The next morning, he took off on a slushy runway. Two hundred feet above the trees on takeoff, both engines quit. He tried to get back to the airport, but the plane fell short by 50 yards, and crashed in timber. The explosion of 108 gallons of high test aviation fuel was heard miles away.

Critically burned, Womach crawled to a nearby road, where he was picked up and put in the back seat of a car and hurried to a hospital in Klamath Falls, Ore. Amazingly, he sang all the way. Through more than 50 operations and months of surgery, Womach faced many complications, critical illnesses and impending death. Through it all, he was able to sing and keep singing.

Admission is free. The public is invited.

At a recent Cabinet meeting held in Lubbock, Bishop Alsie H. Carleton of the Northwest Texas-New Mexico Conference of the United Methodist Church, announced several changes in pastoral appointments.

Included were these changes: the Rev. Royce Womack from First UMC, Morton, to associate at St. Luke's UMC, Midland; Rev. William "Bill" McReynolds from St. John's UMC in Santa Fe, N.M., to First UMC, Hereford; Rev. J. B. Sharp from Dalhart Central UMC, to St. John's UMC, Santa Fe; Rev. Bill M. Kent from First UMC Canyon, to Dalhart Central UMC; Rev. Bobby J. McMillan from Friona First UMC, to Canyon First UMC; Rev. James P. Boswell from Wellington First UMC to Friona First UMC; Rev. Thomas H. Thomson from associate at San Jacinto UMC, Amarillo, to Wellington.

And, Rev. Hershel H. Homer from associate at St. Paul UMC, Amarillo, to Elmwood West UMC in Abilene; Rev. Marvin Gregory from associate at First UMC, Plainview, to Morton First UMC; Rev. Douglas Gossett from associate at Hereford First UMC, to Fairmont UMC, Abilene; Rev. James Willborn from Turkey UMC to Kress UMC; Rev. Elroy Wisman from Seminary to Turkey UMC; Rev. Weldon Tucker from Kress UMC, to Wylie UMC, Abilene; Rev. W. L. Armstrong from associate pastor, Lamesa First UMC, to Methodist Home Boy's Ranch at Waco.

Bishop Carleton said the changes at First United Methodist Church at Hereford were occasioned by the retirement of Dr. Jordan Grooms and the change at Fairmont UMC of Abilene by the death of Rev. Ralph Odom. Rev. Bill McReynolds was received by transfer from the New Mexico Annual Conference; and Rev. J. B. Sharp was transferred from the Northwest Texas Annual Conference to the New Mexico Conference. Fair Park UMC at Abilene will be supplied at a later date.

Some of the appointments were effective Jan. 1 and others were made effective Jan. 16.

Admission is free. The public is invited.

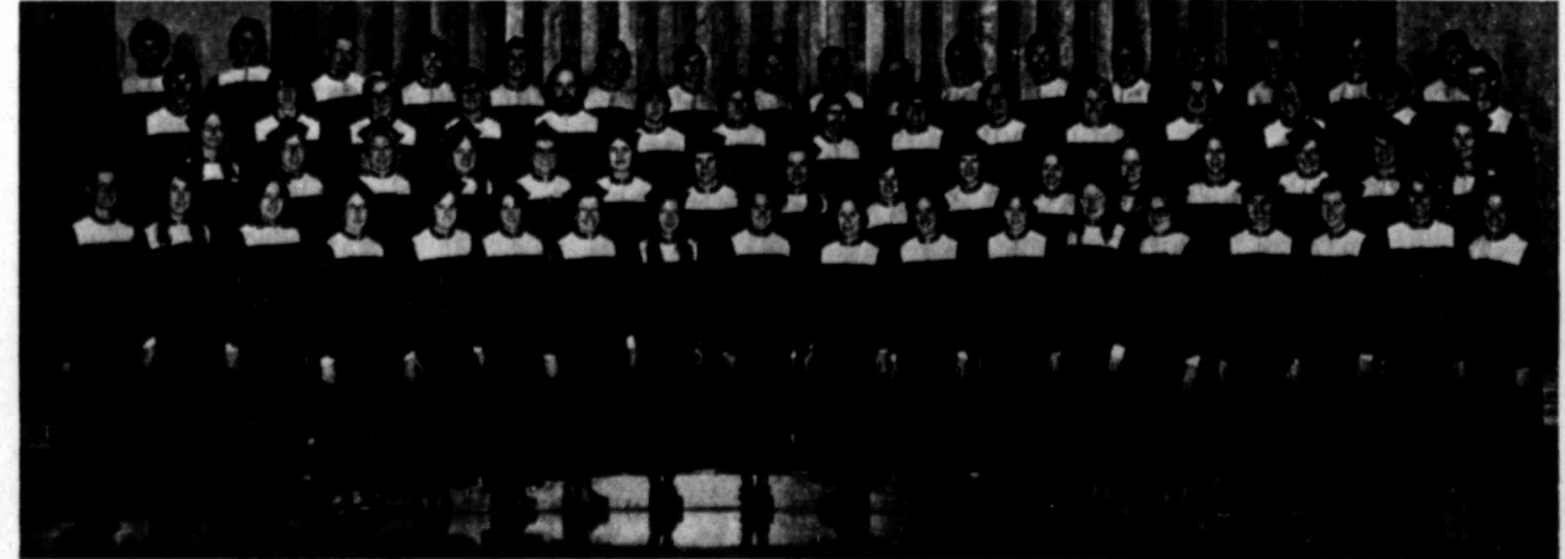

CRUSADE SPEAKER — Hugh Jack Norwood will conduct a "Christ Is Our Answer Crusade" at the New Deal First Baptist Church, Sunday through next Friday. Times for Sunday services will be 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Time for weekday services will be 7:30 p. m. daily. The Norwood family will accompany the evangelist-singer and will join in music and witnessing. The public is invited. Emphasis will be on "The Family."

Hart is listed as missionary to the colleges in Beirut.

LEADERS IN VOTING

In the 1972 Presidential election, some 82 percent of the votes were cast by professional people such as doctors, lawyers and engineers, and 78 percent by farmers, to lead voters with other occupations.

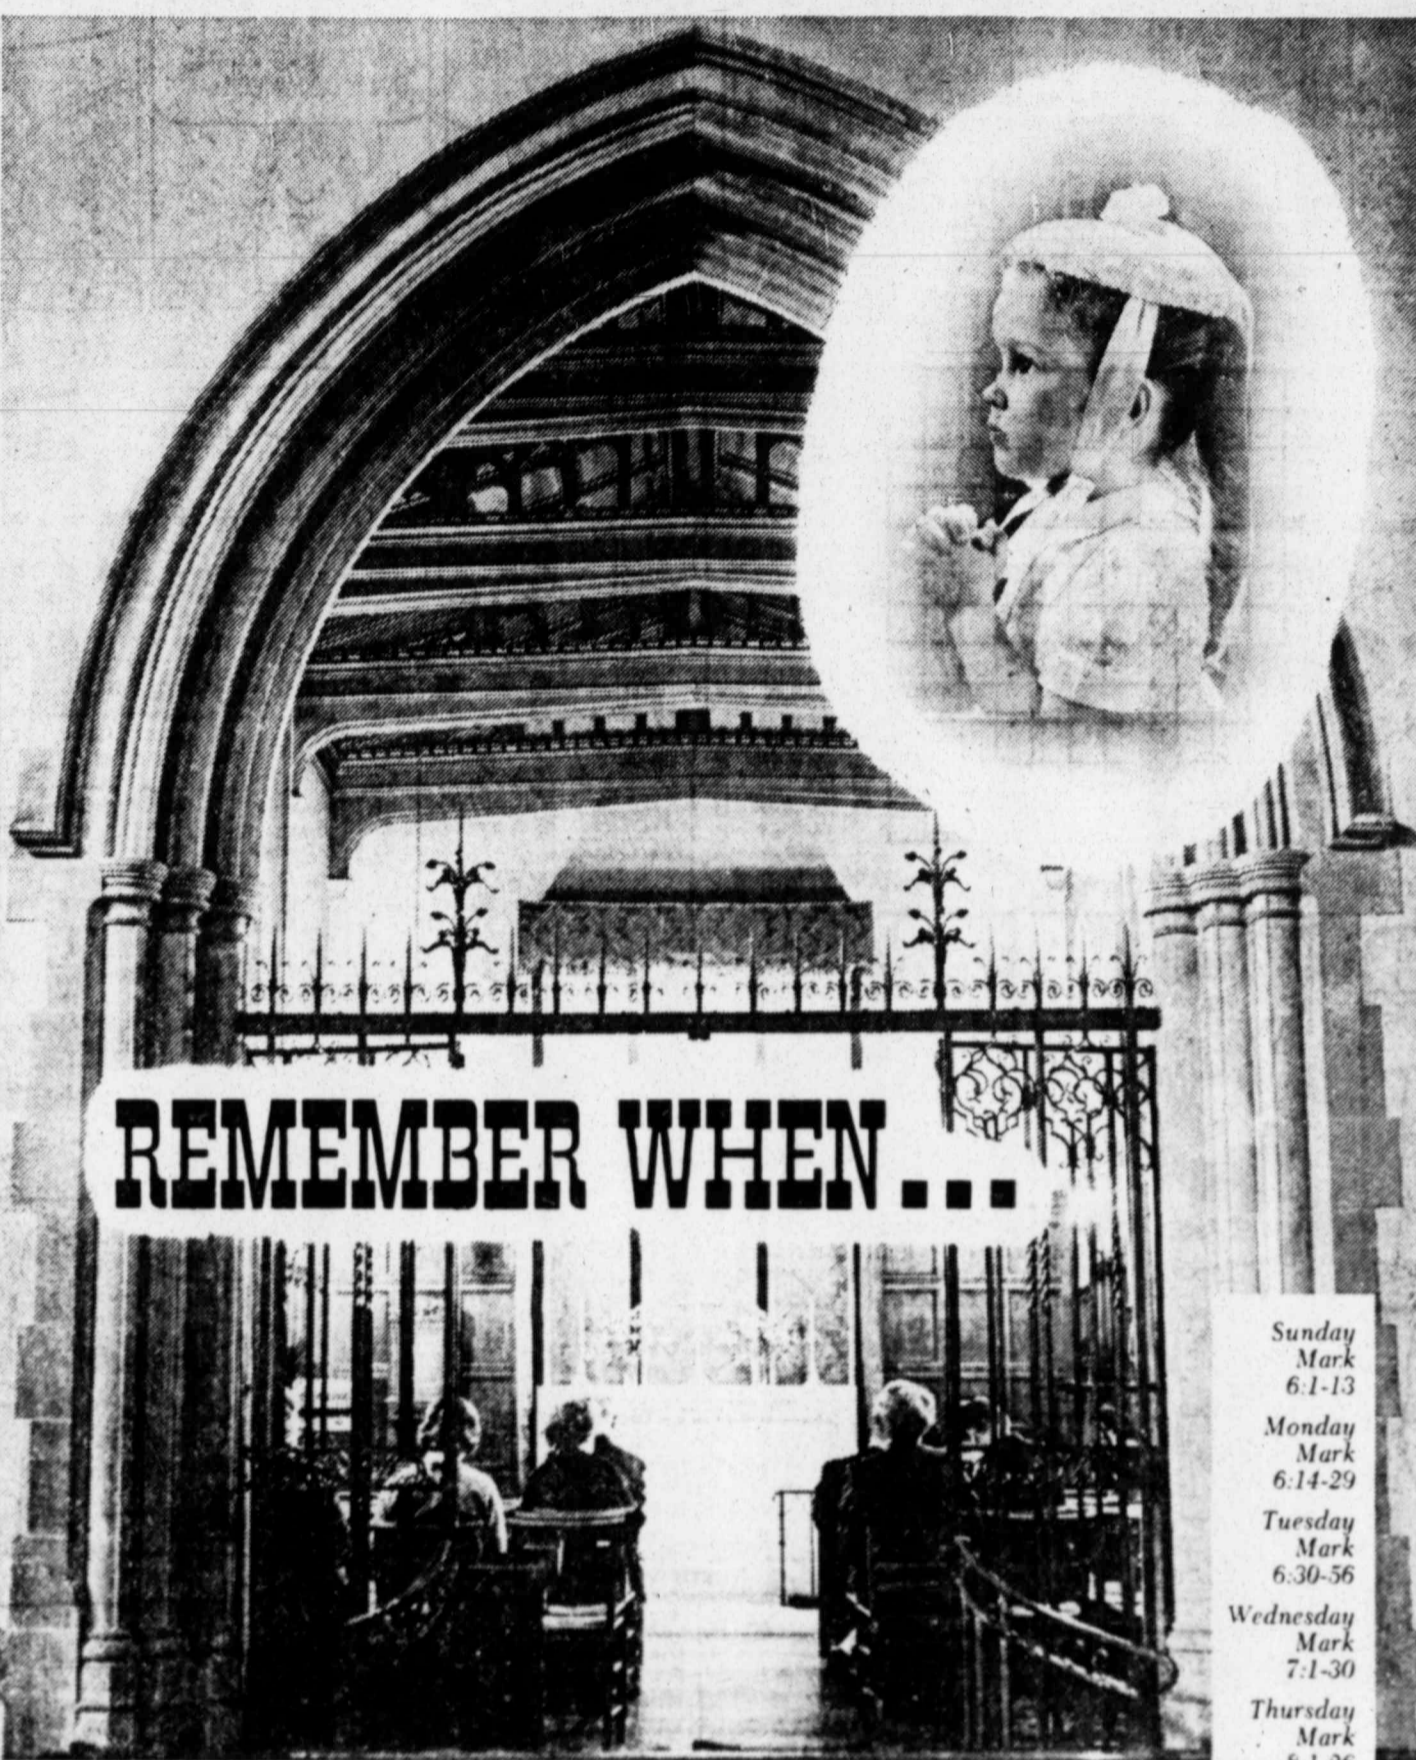

CHOIR CONCERT SCHEDULED HERE — The A Cappella Choir of Concordia Teachers College of Seward, Neb., will be presented in concert at 8 p. m., Monday, in Lubbock's Redeemer Lutheran Church at 22nd Street and Avenue W. The choir is on its winter tour and is presented by Lutheran churches of Lubbock and surrounding area. The 62-member choir will sing a variety of sacred compositions. Assisting will be a brass ensemble, handbells and timpani. The public is invited.

FIND STRENGTH FOR YOUR LIFE — ATTEND CHURCH

REMEMBER WHEN ...

... as a very small child, you trudged off to church tightly holding your mother's hand?

It was quite an event . . . you sat very straight . . . listening intently, wide-eyed . . . perhaps you did fidget a little during the sermon, but you thrilled to the wonderful music of the organ and the choir . . . and you proudly raised your own small voice in singing the hymns.

After the service, surrounded by all the smiling faces, you somehow felt good and happy, deep down inside. Yes, going to church was worthwhile.

Down through the years, you have come to realize, more and more, that your church can play an important part in your life, in the lives of those dear to you and in the life of your community. It can bring a message of goodwill and friendliness, of hope and courage . . . that you can't afford to shut out of your life.

Yes, going to church really is worthwhile.

Seminole Chamber Ceremony Honors 'Citizen Of The Year'

SEMINOLE (Special) — Eva Bennett, 84, who plays in a musical group called "The Hot Shots," was named "Citizen of the Year" last night by the Seminole Area Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Bennett, who moved to Gaines County in a Model T Ford in 1928, has done extensive volunteer work in local nursing homes and hospitals. In between, she oversees her 160 acre farm and belongs to the Live Long and Like It Club.

Incoming chamber president Hylton Nolen was introduced along with the new chamber directors. They are Jim Campbell, Jim Davis, Charles Scott, Charles Squires, Cary Cox, Charlotte McGehee and Johnny Lemmons.

Phil Guerry, new president of the Seminole Chiefs, was also introduced.

Emcee for the evening was Rollie Joe Lamm. Humorist Fay O'Dell, Athletic Director at Perry High School, Perry Okla., was the guest speaker.

Students Sentenced By African Judge

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two young black students have been sentenced to five years imprisonment for trying to get military training abroad to fight against the South African government.

One of the pair, Christopher Hlongwa, 19, said he and other students paid $11.50 to a man who said he would take them to black-ruled Swaziland to be taught to fight. Hlongwa and Gerard Nyembe, 21, were arrested before they got to the border. The magistrate said he gave them the minimum sentence because they had not received any training.

UNION THREATENS DISCIPLINE
PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Teamsters Union says it will discipline truck drivers if they cross picket lines at The Oakland Press.

Forty-one reporters, editors, pressmen and maintenance workers have been on strike since Dec. 29, but the newspaper has continued to publish.

Carter's Economic Proposals Get Slight Nod From Business

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's business community greeted President Carter's economic proposals Friday with mild approval, while expressing skepticism over his suggested voluntary wage and price controls.

Some energy producers, meanwhile, believed they detected a signal in the president's State-of-the-Union message Thursday night that he might be changing his priorities on solutions to the energy crisis. But they said they were awaiting more substantial developments.

"President Carter's general tone on economic issues was positive," said Irving Shapiro, chairman of Du Pont Co. and chairman of the Business Roundtable, a group of high-ranking business executives. "I was impressed with his recognition that many of our problems must be solved by the private sector — that government cannot solve them."

In Detroit, General Motors Chairman Thomas A. Murphy said: "We share the president's confidence for the continued expansion of the national economy in 1978 and beyond."

"Both confidence of the consumer and businessman are essential and the national economy will be served well if all segments of government and our society work toward the president's goal of controlling inflation and balancing the budget."

Business leaders have been saying recently that capital investment, the money used to expand production, needed a federally injected stimulus.

Carter's proposal of $6 billion in net business tax cuts, including reductions in the corporate tax rate and improved incentives for investment, generally was seen Friday as providing that stimulus.

"There's no question that business tax cuts will be very favorable to capital investment," said Alan Greenspan, an economic consultant who was a chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, under the Nixon and Ford administrations. "And that will be a major factor in supporting demand for capital goods."

But some officials said the tax cuts were not deep enough.

"The changes might not result in really large reductions," said Ted Eck, the Chicago-based chief economist for Standard Oil Co. (Indiana). "I think we all, businesses and individuals, would do well if the cuts managed to make up for the increases in the Social Security tax (signed into law earlier by Carter)."

And Walter Hoadley, chief economist of the Bank of America in San Francisco, said Carter's messages amounted to a piecemeal approach.

"Micromentality coming out of Washington is a very serious disease," he said. "We have a confidence crisis, not an economic crisis. The real problem is can we convince people to take risks and move toward expansion?"

Concerning Carter's proposal of voluntary wage and price controls which would involve consultations with federal officials, most business leaders believed the chances of success were slim. And they expressed a certain amount of suspicion.

"Nobody knows exactly what he has in mind until he spells it out," said Greenspan. "But if it's truly voluntary, the question is: What do you do if labor and management don't abide by the controls? Do you forget it or do you push toward mandatory controls?"

Shapiro of Du Pont said the plan "raises the specter of (mandatory) wage-price guidelines, but I am reassured by the president's stated dislike of such controls."

In Atlanta, Larry Gellerstedt, president of Beers Construction Co., said he was "just horribly afraid of any kind of wage and price controls and I'd rather not hear the words mentioned. But in the matter of degrees, I find the voluntary controls much less objectionable than some type of government-imposed wage and price controls."

During the State of the Union speech, Carter listed his priorities for solutions to the energy crisis. The first one mentioned was increased production, and that brought a burst of applause from some members of the audience.

Some oil and gas producers believed Carter's statement was an indication that the administration was reducing its much-criticized emphasis on conservation over increased production.

"That did seem like a signal," said Eck of Standard Oil. "But those are just words. What we need is a new plan. One would think that they might call off some of their dogs in Congress and generally try to cooperate and get something going in the area of compromise."

"Despite what he said, he still seems to feel that he can get by with conservation alone," said David Foster of the Washington-based Natural Gas Supply Committee, a group of 125 gas producers. "We're waiting to see what will happen."

Canal's Profitability Called Very Limited

WASHINGTON (AP) — An economist who has spent 13 years studying the Panama Canal said Friday the waterway's ability to pay for itself is "severely limited" and cannot be predicted beyond 10 years — less than half the transition period for the United States to turn control over to Panama.

Appearing as a witness before the Senate Foreign Relations committee, Ely M. Brandes, of Palo Alto, Calif., said there was a point at which toll increases — which are anticipated by the proposed Panama Canal treaty — would become counterproductive by discouraging use of the canal.

"Many, if not most, users of the canal have alternatives available to them which, in terms of total costs, are not much greater than using the canal," Brandes said. "The fact that the shift to alternatives can occur as a consequence of small increases in tolls indicates that the cost difference between going through the canal and doing the next best thing is very small."

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said he found this a "shocking" statement. "You lend credence to those people who say the canal doesn't matter any more," he told Brandes.

The proposed treaty provides for the canal to continue to pay for itself through increased tolls, but many critics of the pact say it ignores economic realities that will require substantial additional U.S. taxpayer support.

The Carter administration's position is that tax money would be required, but only for "indirect" costs such as early retirement pensions for canal workers, new military construction and other needs.

Spokesmen for U.S. merchant shipping and ports repeated concern, conveyed earlier in a letter to President Carter, that the canal might become "economically dead" if tolls were boosted so high as to divert traffic.

But several representatives of U.S. business interests in Latin America urged Senate ratification of the treaty, saying Panama was committed to private enterprise in its economic development plans and would not endanger the waterway by setting unreasonable tolls.

The testimony came on the next-to-last day of hearings before the Foreign Relations panel begins consideration of the treaty. It is expected to recommend Senate approval with some modifications.

Brandes used the hearing to divulge results of a newly-completed study by his firm, International Research Associates, that was requested by the State Department and the Panama Canal Co.

Religious Agencies Promote Unity Week

By The Associated Press

Howdy stranger, says a bearded sod-buster in overalls. Replies a big-hatted cowpoke in chaps. "We're no longer strangers, brother."

That dialogue between cartoon characters — based on Scripture — is part of the material widely distributed by Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic agencies for use in promoting observance of the 1978 Week of Prayer for Christian Unity.

It began Wednesday, Jan. 18, running to Jan. 25, with joint worship services planned in many communities, special sermons on the theme and published articles analyzing the status of the cause.

A "quiet movement," it's now characterized by the Rev. Kenneth G. Stofft of the Roman Catholic ecumenical commission in Oklahoma City, advancing without the fanfare that attended its earlier phases.

It has undergone some recent "unexpected setbacks" resulting from disputes inside some denominations, says the monthly, the Lutheran.

Yet there is "steady — and sometimes surprising — progress," reports the National Catholic News Service.

"The ecumenical spirit never had it so good," says the Rev. Dr. Martin Marty of the University of Chicago, noting that the main conflicts no longer are between denominations but within them.

Christians of the various traditions now "are quite at ease with each other," he writes in the Christian Century. "You cannot tell the players without their programs and can almost never tell them by their denominational names."

Amid this mixed situation, the rounds of official talks in pursuit of reunited Christianity continued between teams of Roman Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Eastern Orthodox, Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist scholars, among others.

Periodically they report gains in accord in basic belief, most strikingly between Roman Catholics, Episcopalians and Lutherans.

At the same time, "covenants" between local congregations — Catholic and Episcopal and Catholic and Lutheran — spread across the country.

In these covenants, the Catholic and Protestant congregations join in pacts to worship jointly periodically, to work together on common projects, share facilities and educational programs, to deepen mutual understanding, to pray regularly for each other and for reunion of the churches.

At Norfolk, Va., Episcopalians and Roman Catholics formed a joint parish, combining all facets of congregational life except Holy Communion, which remains separate in accord with Catholic law. In Fayetteville, Tenn., St. John's Presbyterian Church and St. Raphael's Catholic Church formed a joint Sunday school.

The increasingly close relationship "has been amazing," says the Rev. Dennis Holly of St. Raphael's.

Simultaneously, the 10 Protestant denominations involved in the Consultation on Church Union seeking reunification formed linked parishes in many places.

"The significance of ecumenical relations may now be located more tangibly in the quiet, though vibrant confines of the local church," Stofft writes in Ecumenical Trends, issued by the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute.

That Catholic center of the Graymoor Friars of the Atonement and the Faith and Order Commission of the National Council of Churches, involving most major Protestant and Orthodox denominations, chose Ephesians 2:13-22 as theme for the unity week observances. It reads:

"For now in Christ Jesus you who once were far off have been brought near. For he is our peace, who has made us both one, and has broken down the dividing wall of hostility. So then you are no longer strangers and sojourners, but you are fellow members of the household of God."

In another of the cartoons issued for the occasion, a mother says, "Jesus wants all men to be one." Responds the frazzled daughter, apparently personifying one of the internally contentious denominations, "I don't even have myself together."

Indonesian Regime Bans Four Major Newspapers

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The Jakarta military command banned four major newspapers Friday but gave no reason for the action, officials of the papers said.

Banned were the respected Harian Kompas, the afternoon Sinar Harapan, the Merdeka and the Moslem Daily Pelita. The officials said the order takes effect Saturday.

There was no immediate comment from the military command.

Observers said the ban may have been connected with recent coverage by the newspapers of anti-government campaigns by student critics of President Suharto and his right-wing regime.

Newspaper officials said they were telephoned by a spokesman for the military command who told them their publishing permits had been withdrawn.

Theoretically, permits are issued and withdrawn by the Information Ministry. The newspaper officials said the military spokesman told them they would receive letters from the ministry officially notifying them of the ban. It was not known how long the ban would be in effect.

Last Thursday, the Harian Kompas and Merdeka both carried reports of an attempt by dissident student leaders to meet with Suharto. Both reported that students warned that Suharto should not run for re-election this year "or blood would flow."

Tech 'Welcomes' Metcalf, Aggies Today

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Shelby Metcalf doesn't have to ask directions to Lubbock Coliseum. Although he gets a very unfriendly welcome when he steps onto the court, he feels right at home in the place.

And the fact that he feels so comfortable there is the reason for the type of welcome he receives. He will be in line for another of those receptions when he leads his Aggie legion onto the Tartan surface this afternoon.

It's the way he has fared in the building which has brought on the receptions, and both he and Tech coach Gerald Myers knows that it's not just another basketball game when the Raiders and Aggies collide here.

They will collide, too, beginning with the throw-in at 3:08 p.m. It's an afternoon affair because of the regional television cameras pointed at the court.

Tech will be entering what Myers calls the tough part of the Raiders' conference schedule, and the Aggies championship.

The Aggies have won six of the last nine games in Lubbock Coliseum, and Tech had to go into overtime to win last year's contest.

Their record indicates the Aggies have been through the SWC gauntlet, facing a murderous row of foes including Baylor, Houston and nationally ranked Arkansas.

Tech, according to Myers, is just starting into its tough stretch, of the Aggies, Houston and Arkansas.

And Metcalf's assessment of his Aggies shouldn't make Myers feel any better.

"We're making progress, we just need some success," said the Aggie coach. "We just weren't ready to play for a while. But, now we have total harmony, are working hard... it's a matter of getting to winning. A win would give us a good boost, for our confidence."

Metcalf said the Aggies began coming together in the second half of the Houston game.

"We played about 15 minutes of good ball (against UH), 20 minutes of good ball against SMU (in a 78-71 comeback win).

And we started out well against Arkansas.

"We're playing with more intensity than in the past."

Myers spoke this week, about the Aggies "presenting a lot of problems for us. They're physical, have great jumping ability. They are a great rebounding team, strong, aggressive. And that (rebounding) is one of our weaknesses."

"We're just not a good rebounding team. The Aggies get a lot of second- and third shots, which we can't let them have and still expect to play well."

"The Aggies are a very physical team," said Myers. "They really go after the ball. They're the most physical team I've seen this year."

The Aggies will come with a lineup which will create problems for Tech in the size department. Only 5-11 David Goff, the point guard, doesn't meet the 6-4 standard of the rest. Metcalf indicated he would use a lineup of 6-6 Jarvis Williams and 6-6 freshman Rynn Wright, 6-4 Karl Godine and 6-7 Willie Foreman on the wings and Goff at the quarterbacking spot.

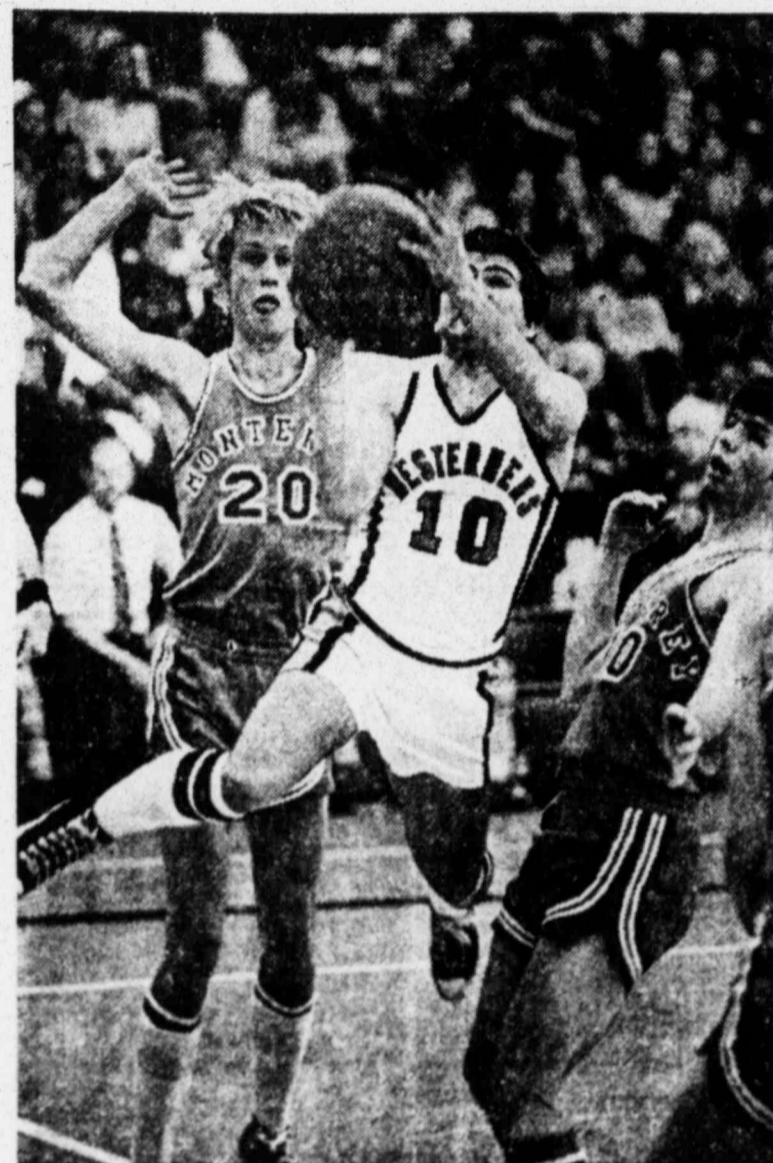

That leaves the team's leading scorer and rebounder, freshman Vernon Smith, to come in at the post.

"Smith and Wright are both good freshmen, and I plan to alternate them unless they clear-cut beat Jarvis (a junior) out," said Metcalf. "I'm starting Rynn because he played well against SMU and we won the ball game, but they're both good players and are very near equal."

Tech's lineup will have 6-9 Joe Baxter at the post, 6-5 Kent Williams and 6-7 Mike Russell at the forwards and 6-3 Mike Edwards and 6-1 Geoff Huston at the guards.

In addition to the television game, three conference games are on the schedule. Houston (3-2) will play host to Rice (1-4) in an intracity battle, TCU (0-4) will go against the Razorbacks (3-1) at Little Rock, and Baylor (1-3) will be at SMU (2-2) in night games. Texas, sporting a 5-0 record, will be off.

Plainsmen Crush LHS 67-54

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

David Davidson says he only played half of a ballgame but the Lubbock High Westerners will never be convinced.

The 6-0 senior co-captain of the Monterey Plainsmen assumed his team's leadership role quite comfortably Friday against the arch-rival Lubbock in the LHS gym. Davidson sank 9 of 11 field goals, 9 of 11 free throws, scored 27 points and played the entire game without committing a foul. Call it a perfect game for the young lad who guided Monterey to a 67-54 victory.

The son of Texas Tech cage aide George Davidson (just bragging on the family a little), received most of the praises from both coaches after his performance.

"I told him after the game, 'You just beat us,' and I meant it," said LHS coach C.E. Carmichael. "I felt like Davidson was the man we couldn't handle. He just ripped us."

Although MHS coach Joe Michalka said "he's (Davidson) capable of playing that way every night," the star guard did figure it was his best game "by a long shot."

And many of Davidson's shots were long shots, too, but most of the Monterey baskets were fired from Michalka's range. The Plainsmen coach strongly advocates his offense working for the good percentage shot and it did just that against LHS. Monterey hit 25 of 38 from the field shots for 66 percent while LHS sank 22 of 58 for 38 percent.

Monterey shot 50 percent or better in every quarter including a staggering 8-for-8 in the final stanza when Lubbock cooked up a comeback.

By midway in the second quarter, the hosts found themselves in a terrible dilemma trailing 21-4. By that time, Monterey was dominating the boards and Lubbock sparkplug Scotty Garcia was leaving the game with three fouls and four or five cases of a bad cold. The 5-4 Westerner guard returned to the game late in the third quarter but committed two quick fouls and finished the night with 8 points.

Lubbock stayed behind 28-15 at half and appeared in critical condition with Garcia hacking and coughing at the bench. But guard Jimmy Mojica and forward James Williams rallied the Westerners back into range with good outside shooting.

"Lubbock High made a great run at us and cut it to six points once or twice late in the game," Monterey's Michalka noted.

But his coaching counterpart differed from that opinion considerably.

"I don't think we were ever in the ballgame," said Carmichael. "When you get down 21-4, it would take an absolute miracle to come back and beat Monterey."

The Plainsmen established this early dominance by scoring 17 straight points while the Westerners failed to score for 9 straight minutes. Each time Lubbock

Dunbar Dumps Snyder In 80-68 Cage Battle

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A person doesn't have to search through a Webster's New World Dictionary of the American Language—college edition and unabridged, of course—to find the exact word to describe Dunbar's 80-68 win over Snyder.

Routine. That's a good one. And Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams seconds that notion with a hardy aye.

"We just wanted to get the first half over with," explained McWilliams, who coached the Panthers to a second-place finish in the first half of District 3-AAA action. "We are ready to start the second half now."

Read a little emphasis into that "now" if you will.

Dunbar, which finished the race with a 5-1 mark, a game behind front runner Estacado — who incidentally ends the first round by hosting Lake View today at 6 p.m. — jumped out in front of the Tigers early and slid home for the win.

"It surprised me the way we were able to lead them (Snyder) so early," McWilliams said. "They are known as a team that starts fast, but not tonight. That is one reason we didn't have any trouble with them."

Not unless someone considers a 23-7 deficit in the first quarter, a fast start, that is.

Dunbar certainly didn't have any "trouble" with Snyder — which concluded first-half play with a 3-3 mark — from the outset of the game, witnessed by a sparse crowd in the DHS gym.

Using the strong inside play of 6-6 postman Billy Don Hardaway, Dunbar built a comfortable 43-30 halftime lead. And that was that, hence and therefore.

Snyder, led by Randy Courtney's 13 points, managed a rally of sorts in the second period by outscoring DHS 23-20. However, the Tigers were never able to overcome the disastrous first quarter which saw them hit only 18 per cent from the field.

Despite the lopsidedness of the score, McWilliams believes some good came out of the game.

"This really gave us a chance to look at everyone on the team," McWilliams said.

Mustangs' King Quits Grid Post

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It almost sounded as if Coronado football coach Don King wanted to hold up his hands and call a long time-out.

The Mustang mentor publicly announced his resignation Friday without any idea of what would lie ahead in his future. There wasn't a hint of bitterness in his voice. Nor a feeling that the young Wichita Falls native really desired to quit his profession altogether. For now, King wanted to pause and evaluate his life.

"I started thinking about it when people started asking me if I was going to keep coaching. Until that time, my life always had been planned out for me to be a coach. Now I don't know if I want to continue," he said.

Ironically, King's contract had been extended through 1980 last fall. In mid-November, the coach denied any interest in leaving the position. During the off-season, that stance changed.

"During the playoffs, I got to looking at things. I thought about it a lot during the holidays. I don't know if I want to be coach until I'm 65. The change has just got to be made now because of the people involved in it. I had to consider my assistant coaches and their families, too. And if I want to stay in coaching, I've got to know that soon, too," King said.

The head coach will remain at the school until his present contract expires in July or until he finds other employment. During this interim, King expects to evaluate and make future plans.

"I've been looking at some interests other than coaching. I felt that if I had the interests, that I needed the time to look at them from a different viewpoint or a different angle," he said. "To keep the program competitive, you have to work hard and you don't have time to stop and evaluate your life."

King also mentioned his personal coaching record had "no bearing on the situation." His three Coronado teams combined for a 10-18-2 mark. His 1975 team finished 2-8 while each of his last two clubs recorded 4-5-1 marks.

"Had there been more wins, the idea might not have been so prevalent on my mind. But I never felt any pressure to resign. I certainly would have liked to have won more. We had our disappointments but there are disappointments in every year. There's not anything more rewarding than coaching football and being associated with the people. There's not anything like it," he said.

King replaced Jimmy Keeling in 1975 at the CHS post after serving as head coach at Kerrville Tivy, a Class AAA school. Prior to that job, he served as an assistant coach at Borger and Abilene Cooper. An all-conference guard for Texas Tech, the 30-year-old King served as a co-captain for the 1968 team and started for coach JT King's squad for two seasons.

A blue-chip high school prospect at Wichita Falls Hirschi, King always intended to coach since his early playing days. His goals upon accepting the CHS job were to "make the program very

Crum New Tar Heel Mentor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Miami of Ohio head football coach Dick Crum will be named head coach at the University of North Carolina, the Associated Press has learned.

Several informed sources confirmed the decision to The AP late Friday afternoon.

An official announcement of Crum's appointment was expected late in the evening. University Chancellor Ferebee Taylor was scheduled to meet with the football team and reveal the decision to them.

Crum, 43, replaces 11-year Tar Heel Coach Bill Dooley, who was the school's winningest coach in history. Dooley resigned to accept a position as head coach and athletic director at Virginia Tech.

Crum becomes the latest Miami coach to leave the school known as the "Cradle of Coaches," because of the number who have succeeded to have successful programs at other schools.

Crum was named to the Miami job in 1974 and compiled a 34-9-2 record at Miami. He guided the Redskins to two consecutive Mid-American Conference titles and victories in the Tangerine Bowl over Georgia and Florida.

Crum's team posted a 10-1 record last year, losing only to South Carolina.

He took over for Bill Mallory at Miami after Mallory resigned to take the head job at Colorado. Crum is a defensive specialist and was defensive coordinator under Mallory before getting the head job.

While a defensive coordinator with Mallory, Miami was the nation's top ranked team in both rushing defense and total defense.

Crum was selected over a number of others being considered for the UNC post, including Jim Donnan, the offensive coordinator of the Tar Heels under Dooley and the person widely considered the leading candidate.

Also interviewed by the selection committee were Furman coach Art Baker, East Carolina Coach Pat Dye, former Tennessee Coach Bill Battle and Pittsburgh Steelers' assistant Bud Carson.

Southern Mississippi Coach Bobby Collins withdrew his name from consideration for the job.

Crum was among the final prospective coaches interviewed, meeting with the committee on Thursday.

Crum is a native of Youngstown, Ohio, and attended Muskingum College before graduating from Mt. Union College in Ohio. He graduated with a degree in mathematics and a minor in physics. He obtained a master's degree from Western Reserve.

Crum's 1975 Miami team finished 10th in the nation in the Associated Press poll, the highest ranking of any Mid-American Conference team in history.

The Redskins went 10-0-1 in Crum's first year as head coach and went 11-1 in 1975, losing only to Michigan State by a 14-13 score. In 1976 Miami plunged to 3-8, but bounced back in 1977 with a 10-1 record, losing only to South Carolina.

Underdog DeJesus Sure Of Win

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Puerto Rican Esteban DeJesus scoffs at the odds which make him a 2-1 underdog for today's lightweight boxing world title decision.

"I'll knock him out," said DeJesus of Panama's slugging Roberto Duran. "It will be good to have just one champion. I'll be happy to be that one champion."

DeJesus holds the World Boxing Council title while Duran has been the World Boxing Association king of the 135-pounders for six years.

The two split their previous meetings, DeJesus winning a non-title bout and handing Duran his only professional loss in 1972.

When DeJesus challenged for the WBA title in 1974, he was stopped by Duran in the 11th round.

I was out of shape for that one," DeJesus said. "I was 26-year-old Puerto Rican claimed. "I took the fight on only 10 days notice and then they told me it was canceled. I lost my concentration."

Duran, also 26, is rated one of the hardest punchers ever to perform in the lightweight division.

His veteran trainer Freddie Brown commented, "I think the only lightweight who hit harder was Lew Jenkins."

"He's one of the best lightweights I've ever seen," continued Brown. "Tony Canzoneri or Barney Ross were the only ones I've seen who might have had a chance to beat him."

Both boxers were expected to reach the weight limit easily when they step on the scales at 8 a.m. today prior to their 2:30 p.m. scheduled 15-rounder at the Sports Pavilion of Caesars Palace for their nationally televised bout determining the undisputed world champion.

A crowd of about 4,800 was expected to be on hand for the fight with seats scaled from $20 to $100.

Television, with CBS beaming the bout, picked up most of the expenses with DeJesus expected to earn $150,000 and Duran about $250,000.

Both boxers predicted knockouts and there were few who would doubt that eventual outcome.

"I know I will knock him out," Duran said. "I don't know which round, but I'm going to get him and I'm not a big mouth like Muhammad Ali."

"Everyone talks about me having trouble making the weight but I always do it and I always win."

Duran has won 60 of his 61 fights and 50 by kayo. His only loss was to DeJesus.

The Puerto Rican WBC champion has won 50 of 53 with 29 by knockout. He lost early in his career to Antonio Gomez in Colombia and then to Duran and Antonio Cervantes when he tried for the world junior welterweight title.

Both Duran and DeJesus say they plan to stay in the lightweight ranks and both appear to be naturals in the 135-pound division.

"Duran is a good fighter," DeJesus commented. "But I will be the only lightweight champion."

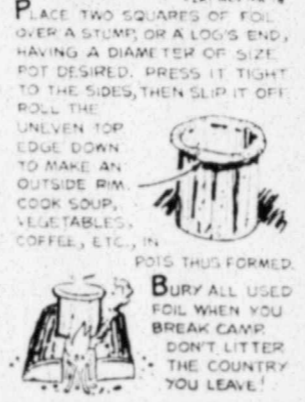

"I have been trying to get this fight with Duran for three years and now I have the opportunity and I'd like to knock him out," continued DeJesus.

"The people in Panama tricked me up in the last fight by saying the fight was canceled. I've been waiting ever since for this chance. I want the one champion of the world to be me."

If the bout goes the full 15 rounds, it will be decided by three judges scoring on the 10-point must system.

SPORTSMAN'S DIGEST

USING ALUMINUM FOIL FOR POTS

Winter Storms Disrupt Nation's Sports Slate

By The Associated Press

Heavy snow caused a major disruption of the winter sports schedule Friday, especially in the East, with teams kept on the ground in the wrong cities and horses kept in their barns at racetracks that were suitable only for Old Dobbin pulling a sleigh.

Four of the nine scheduled National Basketball Association games were postponed hours before their scheduled tip-offs.

The Denver at Buffalo game was called when Denver, which played at Milwaukee Thursday night, was unable to get to Buffalo. Snow also kept the Cavaliers from flying out of Cleveland for their date in Chicago.

The other two NBA postponements were Kansas City at Boston and Seattle at New Jersey. Only emergency vehicles were allowed in and out of Piscataway, N.J., the home of the Nets who have an emergency of their own — a nine-game losing streak.

In college basketball, the George Washington at Villanova game was rescheduled for Sunday afternoon because the home team was stuck in the snow at South Bend, Ind., where Villanova had lost by one point to Notre Dame Thursday night.

The thoroughbreds got two days off at Aqueduct. Not only was Friday's card canceled but today's program, which included two stakes races, also was canceled because of expected high winds.

It was no business as usual at Bowie Race Course in Maryland, where a cancellation occurred for the eight time in the last 10 scheduled cards.

Other racetrack cancellations included Keystone near Philadelphia, Latonia in Kentucky and the Yonkers harness track in New York, Northfield Park in Cleveland and Freehold in New Jersey.

Another college basketball postponement was Michigan at Ohio State.

LCHS, Idalou Split Contests

IDALOU (Special)—The Lubbock Christian High School boys took a 71-51 victory over Idalou Friday night, but Idalou's girls, sparked by Arinda Speer, scored 37 points, took a 68-41 decision from the LCHS girls.

In the girls game, the winners, 13-11, took a 20-8 lead at the end of one quarter and were never threatened. Tammy Wyllie added 12 points for Idalou.

LCHS girls fell to 3-16 because of the loss.

LCHS was led by Lyn Blackman's 17 points and Kelly Meyers' 16.

In the boys' contest, Shawn Williams scored 16 points and Phillip Bellows 14 to lead the LCHS boys to the victory. Dennis Green topped Idalou with 19 points, and Ricky Hobbs added 18.

Idalou led 17-15 at the end of the first quarter, but LCHS outscored the hosts 20-8 in the second quarter to assume a 35-25 halftime advantage, and the Eagles stretched their advantage in the second half.

LCHS is 15-6 for the year, and Idalou is 9-12.

DBC Nudges Chaps 56-54

DALLAS (Special) — Robert Bedford hit a shot with 11 seconds left to lift Dallas Baptist College to a 56-54 win over Lubbock Christian College Friday night.

Tonight, LCC will complete its road trip, playing at Texas Wesleyan College.

LCC led or was tied for the lead throughout the first half and at one time had a 14-5 lead. However, it was 26-all at halftime.

The Chaparrals, who have dropped 25 straight on the road, led for eight minutes and it was close rest of the way. For the game, the score was tied 14 times and the lead changed hands eight times.

Mike Wrinkle hit one of two free shots with 30 seconds left in the game, to put LCC up 54-53. But Bedford's shot boosted the Indians in front 55-54. LCC lost the ball via a turnover and DBC added a point on a free shot for the final margin.

Bedford hit 16 points for the winners, and Clayton Coliz added 15.

Wrinkle, who has missed the last five tilts with an achilles tendon injury, had 11 for the game for LCC, and Lamar Sampy contributed 10.

Turnovers hurt, as LCC lost the ball 27 times, and Dallas Baptist 24 times.

Wayland Grabs Overtime Win

FORT WORTH (Special)—Wayland Baptist College went to a hurry-up offense, and it paid off with a 104-88 overtime win over host Texas Wesleyan College here Friday night. The win left WBC with a 1-0 south zone record, 4-2 in the Texoma Conference.

WBC was down 81-69 with 2:06 left and was behind 73-75 with 66 seconds. But, it scored an astonishing 6 points in five seconds, and Bruce Kimball hit a shot at the buzzer to tie the game at 83. The rest of the way, it was all Wayland.

Gene Strickland scored 28 points for Wayland, and Carl Burson and Kimball had 20 each. Carl Webb hit 27 for TWC, and ex-Frona athlete Dale Cleveland netted 16.

Tonight, WBC plays at Dallas Baptist.

(Continued From Page One) made it into the forecourt it took one shot before MHS grabbed the rebound. And that overlooks the times when Monterey stole the ball on the 1-2-1-1 zone press.

By midway in the second quarter, the fans may have wondered why they braved the snow to watch such a one-sided affair. But Lubbock countered in the second half with a good flurry in each quarter and nearly tied the score at times.

Things became nerve-racking for Monterey when Lubbock scored 9 straight points late in the third quarter and pulled within 6 (42-36). The leading Plainsmen rebounder, Tony Hamby, committed his fourth foul during the stretch and Lubbock's press had forced some Monterey mistakes.

EHS, Queen Games Called

The high school basketball game pitting Estacado and Lake View scheduled for Friday night in the EHS gym has been reset for tonight starting at 6 p.m.

Estacado coach J. Wood said because of poor road conditions between Lubbock and San Angelo the District 3-AAA tilt was postponed.

The game between the Wayland Baptist Flying Queens and Delta State, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed to Feb. 16 because inclement weather prevented the Delta State team from getting to Plainview.

Also, the contest between the Wayland Queen Bees and Panhandle State, originally set for 5:30 p.m. today, has been moved to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

narrowed the deficit to 44-40 with 5:40 to play. But in the next two minutes, MHS made it cozy again (50-40) with a layup by Craig Ehlo, two foul shots by Ehlo and a follow by Ch Perry.

Lubbock threatened again with 1:20 to play, cutting the deficit to 58-52 but Ehlo and Davidson answered with more clutch shooting.

Hamby and Perry followed Davidson in the Monterey score column with 13 and 10 points respectively. Hamby had 13 rebounds for MHS, which led on the boards; 39-21. Mojica and Williams paced Lubbock's scoring with 18 and 16 points respectively.

Monterey, now 2-0 in district and 13-11 for the season, can clinch at least a share of the first-half title in District 4-AAA when it entertains Hereford Tuesday night. LHS, 1-2 and 4-18, draws an open date.

Watson On Top Again In Early Crosby Action

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Confident Tom Watson, who used a victory in this event as the springboard to 1977 Player of the Year honors, slogged and

King

"I wanted to make ninth-graders WANT to come to Coronado and participate in athletics. I feel like we fell short in many ways but I thought we were successful in that regard, too," he said.

With the announcement of King's resignation from the Coronado head football coach's position, an extensive search will begin for his successor, according to Pete Ragus, Lubbock public schools athletic director.

"We will begin taking applications immediately and screening coaches who want the job," Ragus said Friday night.

"We will try to hire the best person for the job and it will take time to make the decision."

Speculation began in the Hub City as to the possible candidates for the job. Monterey head baseball coach Bobby Moegle told the Avalanche-Journal that he had not intended to apply for the job. Moegle, the defensive coordinator for the MHS grid squad, was considered a top hopeful for the job when Jimmy Keeling resigned from the Coronado football job on Jan. 29, 1975.

Other possible candidates for the job are Fabens coach Jack Quarles and Fort Stockton coach John Blocker. Quarles, a successful coach until last season at El Paso Coronado, was interviewed for the head football job in 1976 at Lubbock High. Quarles declined to take the post but reportedly has maintained an interest in coaching in Lubbock. Blocker, who has rebuilt Fort Stockton's sagging program in recent seasons, coached at Freshship High School before taking the Fort Stockton post.

"We would like to name someone as soon as possible but it will take a certain amount of time to screen and interview all of the applicants," Ragus said.

Ragus was privately informed of King's resignation decision on Tuesday. He had not interviewed any prospects for the job as of Friday night.

Owls, Shallowater Pull Class A Upsets

It was a bad night for the No. 1 team in Class A, as Hale Center's furious third-quarter rally toppled Lorenzo 72-62 in the boys' game and Shallowater's last-ditch comeback resulted in a 43-42 overtime triumph over Stanton in the girls' game.

Terry Stanton's short jumper at the buzzer completed Shallowater's comeback during regulation play and she scored four more points in overtime, but it was Jana Hayslip who decided the 5-A contest with a free throw with 14 seconds to play.

Shallowater, ranked No. 4 in the area, clinched a tie for the first-half crown with the win. Miss Stanton scored 16 points. LaDonna Pair had 14 and Miss Hayslip 11. Shallowater was up 11-6 after one quarter but trailed 22-21 at intermission and 34-25 going into the final period.

Despite the fact Heidelberg had 22 points and Bloodworth and Young split 20 more, the Shallowater guard troops of Lynda Blumer, Cindy Jackson, Donna Evans and Robin Truelock permitted only four points in the last quarter and four more in overtime. Shallowater is now 17-7 on the year and Stanton, 1-1 in district, is 21-3.

Hale Center got hot in the third quarter, outscoring Lorenzo, which won the first meeting by 28 points, by a 23-12 margin, taking the lead midway through the quarter and gradually extending it.

Lorenzo was up 18-14 after one period and 34-27 at intermission. Both teams are now 6-1 in district and Hale Center, which had won six straight, is 12-9 and Lorenzo is 14-4 after suffering its first loss this year to a Class A unit.

Junior Ashmore led the Owls with 28 points, including 12 in the telling third quarter. Kevin McCarver had 13 and Steve Carr 12. Edmond Turner had 27 for Lorenzo including 16 the first half but only one the third quarter. Darrell Lawson, who had 12 at intermission, finished with 16 and Guy Morrison with 11.

"HC's girls ran their record to 7-0 in district as LouAnn Davis scored 37 points and Terri Henry 32. Cathy Mankins had 11 for Lorenzo.

Shallowater's boys also won over Stanton by a 47-44 tune as Kenneth Young had 15 points and Rod Warren 12. Morrow had 20 and Smith 12 for Stanton. Both Shallowater teams are 17-7.

District 3-AAAA

Pampa clinched a share of the first-half district championship with a 77-54 thrashing of Amarillo Palo Duro. The win gave Pampa a 3-0 record but the Harvesters must travel to Amarillo High Tuesday night. Tascosa jumped to a big early lead and coasted to a 63-54 win over Amarillo High.

Host Hereford dumped Plainview 75-53, paced by the 31-point effort of Kelly Kitchens. Teammate David Schumacher had 12 more. Greg Jacobs was the only Bulldog in double figures, hitting 18 points.

Hereford is now 1-1 in district, 14-10 for the year, and Plainview fell to 1-2 in the league.

District 4-AAAA

Abilene High clinched the first-half championship by nipping Cooper 51-49. Midland Lee edged Midland High 56-54 in overtime. Odessa Permian clobbered Odessa High 89-63 and the Big Spring-San Angelo game was postponed because of bad weather.

District 5-AAAA

Borger defeated Canyon 60-54 in overtime. Steve Kaitcer led Borger with 20 points. Randy Sluder topped the losers with 22. Borger is 14-7 and 1-1. Canyon is 12-13 and 1-1.

District 1-AAA

David Reynolds pumped in 28 points as unbeaten Perryton ran its record to 3-0. Reynolds had plenty of help, however, as Jeff Connor had 15, Joe Sooter 13 and Tracy Gibson 12. Levelland, now 10-7, 1-2, was sparked by Dale Moore and Ray Grappie with 17 and 10 points, respectively.

Borger defeated Canyon 60-54 in overtime. Steve Kaitcer led Borger with 20 points. Randy Sluder topped the losers with 22. Borger is 14-7 and 1-1. Canyon is 12-13 and 1-1.

District 2-AAA

Pecos (2-1, 6-12) fell from the loop's unbeaten ranks as Ector (2-1, 17-9) breezed to an 84-55 win. The loop's only unbeaten team, Monahans (3-0, 19-4) downed Seminole (1-2, 11-10) 66-59.

The Fort Stockton (0-2, 7-11)-Andrews (0-2, 13-8) game has been set for 6 p.m. today in the AHS gym. The game was postponed because of snow.

District 3-AAA

Host Lamesa defeated Sweetwater 65-54, with Arnold Martinez and Reuben Stuenkel scoring 16 points each. Lamesa is 14-7 and Sweetwater is 1-2.

Lake View Fems Topple Estacado

SAN ANGELO (Special) — San Angelo Lake View used its height advantage to whip Estacado 46-35 in a District 3-AAA girls tilt Friday night.

The visitors led 11-7 after eight minutes of play as Joy Guyton scored five of her 18 points in that stanza. But Kerry Munde countered with 8 of her 16 points in the second quarter as LV went on a 20-7 tear and the game was all but over at intermission.

LV, now 11-10 on the year and 1-0 in district, hit 12 of 13 free shots for the game. Estacado, now 7-13, 0-2, hit only 7 of 16. Donna Davis also had 16 points for Lake View, which dominated the backboards to the tune of 36-17.

Porter, acquired a year ago in a trade with Milwaukee, was signed to a three-year contract. Porter became the Royals' starting catcher last season and batted .275 with 16 home runs and 60 runs batted in.

District 3-A

Farwell took sole possession of the district lead by whipping Bovina 57-44 as Kevin Kelly tallied 16 and Russ Jones 15 for the Steers, now 4-0. Roy Shelby had 14 and Ronnie Cary 10 for Bovina, now 3-1.

Bovina's girls, also 3-1, won 55-48 as Denise Read had 22 and Belinda Shelby 21. Paula Christian led Farwell, now 0-4, with 27.

Vega's boys took a 49-44 triumph over Kress. Randall Galbrith had 14 for Vega. Michael Williams had 20 for Kress. Vega is 1-3 in league play. Kress is 1-3.

In the girls contest, Dawn Harwell scored 21 points to spark Vega to a 50-24 victory. Dorita Hartman scored 10 to lead Kress. Vega is 4-0 in district action. Kress is 1-3.

Initial Track Meet Slated Today At LCC

Some folks may find it hard to believe — with the snow on the ground — but the spring sports season unofficially begins today.

Lubbock Christian College will host its first indoor track meet of the year with the field events slated for a 12:30 p.m. start, followed by the running events at 1 p.m.

Included in today's field are junior college teams from Odessa College, New Mexico Junior College, South Plains College, Southwesterns at Terrell and LCC.

Competing in the high school division are the city's three class AAAA teams — Coronado, Lubbock High and Monterey.

Monterey head track coach Bob Gay said the Plainsmen would be far from ready when the gun sounds to start the races.

"A lot of our kids are going down to Houston to attend a Fellowship of Christian Athletes meeting," Gay said.

Gay pointed out that during the meet last year a couple of Plainsmen pole vaulters were injured.

The Plainsmen will be without the services of high jumpers Chuck Perry and Dudley McMinn. The pair are currently playing basketball.

On the other side of the starting blocks, Coronado coach James Gandy said he would send a full squad — including a junior varsity team — to the meet.

Like the Plainsmen, Gandy said the Mustangs are not in the best of shape.

"We just haven't had a lot of time to workout," Gandy pointed out. "We got in some time before Christmas and a couple of workouts since we've been back."

Heading the list for Coronado is sprinter Archie Moore. Moore, a regional finalist in the 220-yard dash last year, will be entered in the 60-yard dash plus a couple of relay teams today.

SKI

YOU CAN DO IT

Jump Rope to Learn Weight Transfer

Most ski racers agree that one of the most important concepts in ski technique is the ability to transfer your weight quickly in fast, hard turns. The following exercise will help you to master the independent leg and foot coordination that is needed for proper weight transfer. It will also increase your lung capacity and strengthen heart, legs, arms and shoulder muscles.

Start by jumping in the center of the rope, with equal distance between your hands. As you get accustomed to the rope, start to move your feet toward your left hand (1) and then toward your right (2). Continue back and forth feeling the transfer of weight from your left foot to your right foot. Try to feel yourself skiing a field of moguls, keeping your body supple and your weight going from ski to ski. The quicker your feet are, the quicker you'll be able to turn your skis. Start by jumping for 20-30 second intervals, working up to one minute.

Half Of NFC Stars Lack Coach

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — More than half the National Conference all-stars in next Monday night's Pro Bowl game are without a head coach at the moment. And there's nothing wrong with that, they say.

Runningback Walter Payton and cornerback Allan Ellis of the Chicago Bears found themselves without a field boss Thursday when Jack Pardee quit, ostensibly to pursue the vacancy in Washington created by the firing of George Allen, a move which left safety Ken Houston, tight end Jean Fugett and kick returner Eddie Brown of the Redskins coach-less.

Add to that the nine Los Angeles Rams who haven't had a head coach since Chuck Knox quit and went to Buffalo and seven St. Louis Cardinals (technically Don Coryell is still the Cards' field boss, but only technically) and you wind up with 21 of the 40 NFC stars without leaders.

It's been a case of coaching roulette this year with changes in Kansas City, Cleveland, Buffalo, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Detroit, Chicago, Washington and, any moment now, St. Louis — nine of the 28 National Football League teams.

"I think it's only fair that coaches, too, should go out and get what they're worth," Fugett said Friday. "Nobody knows for sure, but it's pretty certain that most coaches are making less than most of their players."

"The game has changed in the last decade. Back before then the game was doing well so the owners were doing well. Not all that much of the profits trickled down to the players and coaches."

"Then some people like John Mackey and other players put themselves on the line and we started getting a fair piece of the pie," Fugett said of the years in which the players union gained strength. "We began getting the opportunity to find out just what we were worth."

"But the coaches were sort of late coming onto the scene. Now it's their turn to find out their value."

Payton agreed, shrugging aside any suggestions that, by changing jobs, coaches were displaying a lack of loyalty. "This is a sport, but it's also a business. It's a job. And all of us — players, coaches, owners — we all want security," Payton said. "I don't question anyone's loyalty. When Jack (Pardee) was our coach he was 100 percent loyal. But he also wanted security. And when he couldn't get what he wanted, he had a perfect right to move on."

"Loyalty is a commitment, a moral obligation," Fugett interjected. "But in this day and age, that commitment is in the form of a contract."

Knox, coaching the NFC stars here, added, "Loyalty is a two-way street. It comes from the players and coaches, but it also has to come from the owner. Just as a player and a coach have to give it everything they've got as long as they're on the team, the owner's got to support his people." It was an apparent swipe at Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom, who voiced displeasure over Knox's performance despite the Rams' 53-15-1 record and five playoff berths in Knox's tenure.

"All these changes are symptomatic of the tremendous pressure coaches face to get their teams into the Super Bowl," Knox said. "It has created an atmosphere in which coaches and teams which don't win the Super Bowl are branded as losers, no matter how great the coach does his job and no matter how much the team wins."

"The teams which win consistently are those with the great organizations right from the top, the ones with the most coaching stability. Consider Dallas, Oakland, Pittsburgh, Miami. All consistent winners. All Super Bowl winners. And that's because they don't change their coaches every few years."

Harold Jackson, the Rams' star wide receiver, expressed some dismay over Knox's departure—and even more dismay over speculation that Allen might be returning to Los Angeles, which he left to take over the Redskins' job seven seasons ago.

Confident Bamberger Manager For Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — George Bamberger, who at age 52 rejected lifetime security as the Baltimore Orioles' highly successful pitching coach, Friday was named manager of the rag-tag Milwaukee Brewers and predicted they soon will be pennant contenders in baseball's powerful American League East Division.

"I'm not conceding a thing. I see no reason why this team can't play better than .500 this year. I think this ball club in the near future will win the pennant," said Bamberger, describing himself as a teacher, motivator and communicator.

"George was our first choice. We asked no one else for permission to talk to anyone else," said Harry Dalton, who succeeded Jim Baumer as Brewers' general manager after a Nov. 19 purge which also cost the jobs of Manager Alex Grammas and player development chief Al Widmar.

"George is a winner," Dalton said. "In 10 years at Baltimore he had 18 pitchers who were 20 game winners and four Cy Young award winners, Jim Palmer three times and Mike Cuellar once. He is a very independent person who I think has leadership qualities and excellent knowledge not only of pitchers, but in handling players."

Bamberger, who had no decisions in 10 games in parts of three seasons as a major league pitcher, takes over a club which had a 67-95 record last season and which never has finished better than 76-86 in its nine year history.

"It is a fine offensive and defensive club," said Bamberger, who has no managerial experience. "The main problem is pitching. It has good pitching, good arms, but the pitchers are inexperienced. I'm confident that once we get them to become pitchers instead of throwers, this ball club can win the pennant."

Dalton on Monday asked Orioles' General Manager Hank Peters for permission to talk with Bamberger, who arrived here

Thursday and was offered the job after a nearly seven-hour interview.

Bamberger signed a two year contract and said he plans semiretirement after it expires.

"I plan after two years to go to Florida, be an instructor in some organization and go fishing," he said. "I'm a family man and I think more of my family than I do of baseball. The only way I won't retire is if my kids are not all settled — I have one daughter married and two at home — or unless things go so well that I see a pennant on the tips of my fingers."

He said that despite the franchise's track record of futility, the Brewers have more talent than they have shown. Their problem, he implied, has been a losing attitude and lack of motivation.

"I can only say that, coming in here as a coach with Baltimore, we honestly felt we should not lose to the Brewers," he said. "We felt that if we stayed close we would win because it seemed the Brewers really didn't care. The attitude seemed to be, 'Put in nine innings and if we lose, we lose.'"

"I know I can get along with players and get the maximum ability out of players," he said. "That's the secret of managing. That's why I think I qualify."

"You can't have two sets of rules, but I think I have the knack of instructing and getting along with players," he said. "I can get on someone's back, but I'll always leave with a good word. That's how you instill confidence."

"Earl Weaver at Baltimore is a tough manager, but he'll get on you one minute and pat you on the back the next," he said. "When the club isn't going good, Earl Weaver is in control of himself, a winning manager. I think of myself like that, a positive thinker."

While most new managers are given free rein to name their own assistants, Bamberger inherits three coaches from the Grammas regime: pitching coach Cal McLish, first base coach Frank Howard and batting instructor Harvey Kuenn. Bamberger said he will name a fourth coach before spring training.

"Cal McLish will be the pitching coach and I will be the manager," Bamberger said. "We'll share our thinking. I'll give him my opinions and he'll give me his. I know each of our coaches very well. I'm honored to have them."

New Plant Books Published

By ELIZABETH MITCHELL
American Library Association

Wondering how to make your holiday poinsettia bloom again next year, or how to keep the gift that was blooming at Christmas from drooping by Easter? Then you need to pick one or more of the abundant new crop of plant books.

Just as you find your horticultural horizons broadening with each new plant you nurture, you're probably also finding that there's ever more you need to know about the intricacies of indoor gardening. But with the recent explosion of interest in houseplants, tomes have been written on the subject. Where should you begin?

The best advice we can offer is to begin at the beginning. If you're like most houseplant fanciers, you'll grab a dictionary-type guide — one of the many alphabetically arranged books you can leaf — pardon the pun — through a photo or drawing of your particular problem plant. Then you'll need a brief profile of the species, try to figure out where you've gone wrong, and return the book to the shelf.

You may be doing you plant a disservice. Avoid the temptation to flip directly to the specific plant write-ups.

Slow down and READ THE INTRODUCTORY MATERIAL. Don't overlook the chapters on equipment and technique. They are filled with important information that can help make your home hebarium a showplace and its inhabitants hardy and healthy.

For instance, did you know that the fluorides in most tapwater are strong enough to turn be leaves of your spider plant brown? Even in Bill Henkin's and Maria Vermiglio's lusciously illustrated "The Plant Book," you won't find this helpful fact in the section on the spider (shlorophyllum comosum). Instead, it's in the valuable chapter on "Water."

Subtitled "A Complete Guide to Healthy House Plants," "The Plant Book" also offers thorough data on soil, pots, potting and repotting, how temperature, air circulation, humidity, natural and artificial light affect plants; plant food and fertilizers; propagation, tools; and administering first aid. In addition to an encyclopedia illustrated with clear drawings of 96 houseplants, "The Plant Book" has a 15-page section of handsome color close-ups.

Another opulently illustrated encyclopedic volume is "The Indoor Garden: The Houseplant Lovers' Complete Companion," a great guide to decorating with plants. Written by decorator-journalist-gardener Cynthia Wickham, it's filled with over 650 color drawings and photos of individual plants and plant filled interiors ranging from bathrooms and kitchens to office buildings.

For green-thumbs apartment dwellers, "Green Things in Small Spaces" is perfect. Though this isn't a showy book — it's backed with the sort of specifics an apartment person needs. Printed in a soothing dark green ink, this book is a cosy companion to curl up with if you're worried by such horticultural horrors as balconies, sliding glass doors, floor-to-ceiling windows and blowing heaters.

The author, Marnie Collins, is identified only as "a freelance writer of indeterminant age, living in Toronto with a husband, a cat, and 153 plants."

If you still persist in the "But I just want to know what's wrong with Ruby Begonia over there by the window" approach, you'll love "Stop Talking to Your Plants and Listen." This delightful compendium of "52 talking plants, their complaints, and how to respond" was cleverly conceived by House Beautiful's Elvin McDonald. On each page, plant drawings, accompanied by cartoon captions, clue you into a specific plant problem. McDonald's solution follows.

There's a schefflera whining, "What I need is a vacation in the sun," a rex begonia moaning, "I stayed on one side for too long and what a sunburn," and an over-fertilized tri-leaf wonder syngonium wailing, "I can't believe you fed me the whole thing!" — and 47 more communicative creepers, bushes and vines.

Remember, plants are living things, and they too can express themselves. And if that doesn't raise your consciousness, heed McDonald's warning: "IT may not be a mortal sin to kill a prayer plant, but, oh, the guilt!"

Landscaping Course Available At Tech

Lubbock area individuals or couples who have always wanted to landscape their homes but didn't know exactly how to go about it will have an unusual opportunity to learn this spring.

The department of park administration and landscape architecture at Texas Tech University is holding registration now for a three-session short course on "Landscaping Your Home."

Classes will meet on Saturdays, April 8, 15, and 22.

Those who take the course will leave with plans they can implement for their own homes.

The cost of the course is $30 for an individual or $30 for a couple. This includes all materials, including a workbook and brochure on plants suitable for the High Plains.

The course is limited to 50 couples or 100 persons. Any home owner is eligible. Others interested may attend but each participant must bring specifications of a real site to be landscaped.

Lawrence B. Zuercher, instructor on the landscape architecture faculty, has organized and will direct the course.

Registration will close the last of February, he said. If fewer than 30 persons apply, the short course will be dropped.

"We expect good attendance, however," Zuercher said. "This type of course has been taught at other universities and has proved very popular."

Classes will be from 1 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m., April 8 and 15, and from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. April 22.

Any who want to register may do so by sending a check for $30 to the Department of Park Administration and Landscape Architecture, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, Tex. 79409. The check should indicate it is for the class and it should be made payable to the department.

Christmas Mailing Hits Record High

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Christmas mail reached a record high of 8.5 billion pieces this season but was handled just as fast as a year ago and at lower cost to the government, says Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar.

Bailar said that the Postal Service achieved this record for the period from Dec. 3 through Dec. 30 in spite of poor weather and budget limits. Nationwide statistics show overnight delivery performance was equal to that of 1976.

Preliminary figures show revenue from domestic mail for the period was up 6 percent, Bailar said.

"Without the overwhelming dedication of our employees we could not have handled this record volume while at the same time reducing work hours by 1 percent," Bailar said in a statement.

Bugs Pose Problem For Houseplant Devotees

By ELVIN McDONALD

"Where do houseplant bugs come from? It's a question I am asked over and over, and one for which there are numerous answers. Just when I thought my collection was clean, a well-meaning friend gave me a glorious Chinese hibiscus in full bloom for Christmas. What I am sure he did not intend to give me along with it were aphids, brown scale, mealybugs and red spider-mites.

As soon as I saw the hibiscus in strong daylight, I knew it was in trouble because there was a sticky residue on the leaf surfaces, an almost-sure sign of insects at work. My immediate treatment, which seems to have worked, consisted of washing the entire plant in a fairly forceful stream of water in the bathtub, then spraying with Ced-o-flora. One and two weeks later, I put it through the same routine.

Unfortunately, new plants are not the only source of insects. They can be carried on clothing or on the wings of what you thought was only a breeze of fresh air. Sometimes insect eggs lie dormant in the soil or on plant parts, until conditions are right for them to emerge in a more active state.

The way I avoid serious insect infestations is to keep in close contact with all of my plants. If leaves or flowers suddenly appear discolored, malformed or damaged in any way, I inspect them with a magnifying glass. In my experience one or more of five insects are usually the problem. They are:

1. Aphids, aphid or plant lice. Size, about 1/16th of an inch long. Color, green, brown or black. They tend to cluster on juicy tip growth and buds. Repeated and forceful sprays of water may get all of them; if not, use Ced-o-flora, pyrethrin, Rotenone or Sevin.

2. Mealybugs. Size, about 1/8th inch long. Color, pinkish or grayish white with a mealy texture. Colonies secrete a cottony residue. Remove as many as possible with sprays of water; allow plant to drain, then examine with magnifying glass. Use a cotton swab dipped in denatured alcohol to remove any adults you can see. If mealybugs persist, spray with Ced-o-flora, malathion, Sevin or a Rotenone-pyrethrin combination.

3. Red spider-mites. Size, almost too small to be seen with the naked eye; look for telltale signs instead, such as yellowed or grayed leaf surfaces, or webs between leaves and stems. The presence of mites suggest that the atmosphere is too hot, dry and stale; correct by lowering temperature, increasing humidity and improving fresh-air circulation. Spray with water every few days for a week or more. If mites persist, use Kelthane, malathion, a Rotenone-pyrethrin combination or Ced-o-flora.

4. Scale. Size, about an eighth of an inch long at maturity and oval. Color, tan to reddish brown. Minor infestations can be brought under control by removal with a cotton swab dipped in denatured alcohol. If serious, spray with Ced-o-flora, malathion or Sevin.

5. White flies. Size, about 1-16th of an inch long, except they rarely stand still long enough to tell; they are literally little white flies. Repeated sprays of water may get them but if not, use malathion, a Rotenone-pyrethrin combination or synthetic pyrethrin (Resemethrin).

If you decide to use a pesticide, buy one labeled specifically for the insect or insects you want to control and be sure to read the small print. I have on my desk 10 different brands of houseplant pesticides, all of which might be mistakenly considered as "all-purpose." Most aren't and don't claim to be; Ced-o-flora, for example, states clearly, "will quickly destroy mealybug, scale, red spider, aphid." In other words, if white flies are the problem, this product is not the answer.

Two of the labels I have been studying are particularly misleading; both say on the front that they are for controlling insects that destroy house plants but on the side, in fine print, I can find only two, aphids and white flies. They promise also to control aster beetles, leaf rollers, leaf hoppers (in the nymph stage), lace bugs, midges, rose chafers, flea beetles, leaf tiers and cucumber beetles—all of which make an impressive looking list for an outdoor garden but worthless if your indoor plants have mealybugs, red spider-mites or scale.

Finally, a word of caution: I find it best to use malathion on begonias, ferns, cacti and other succulents and gesneriads (African violets and gloxinias, for example).

HOUSE CALL

Q. My greenhouse heater went out last night; this morning I found everything frozen. The heat has been restored, but will anything survive?

A. Possibly, if temperatures inside did not fall below 20°F. for long. When this happens, it helps to spray frozen plants with tepid water as soon as the temperature can be brought to above freezing. Cut off parts that are obviously killed, but don't be too hasty in discarding entire plants. Woody things like geranium, fuchsia and lantana may send out new growth along the branches; plants like begonias and impatiens may come back from the roots. It would also be a good idea to install one of the alarm systems available from the makers of home greenhouses.

Q. What causes some of the new leaves on my philodendron and anthurium to break or die inside the sheath just as they are about to emerge?

A. Allowing the soil to become too dry between waterings and lack of humidity. Keep the soil evenly moist to slightly on the dry side and increase the humidity to 40 percent or more.

Tree, Shrub Seeding Requires Alertness

By ELVIN McDONALD

I find it best to place seed orders early, usually within a few days after the catalogs arrive. That way I almost always get exactly the varieties I want and the seeds are on hand when the right time comes to plant them.

Of course, it's too early to start most seeds, even indoors. I find that annual flowers, vegetables and herbs, with a few exceptions, need not be planted until eight to ten weeks before the expected arrival of frost-free weather outdoors. However, some need more time — as much as 12 to 16 weeks — such as wax begonia, browallia, impatiens, fancy large-flowered petunias and geraniums.

Meanwhile, I have found that now is an excellent time for starting a wide variety of trees and shrubs from seeds — an exciting way to begin if you want them for container gardening or bonsai training.

The growing of trees and shrubs from seeds is filled with many unknowns. Probably in no other line of plant propagation will you encounter more of nature's tricks. For example, there are some "two-year" seeds. That is, they mature one year, but germination will not occur for at least a year afterward. Types that may behave like this include dogwood, crotoneaster, hawthorn and some roses.

Some tree and shrub seeds have such a hard coating that it needs to be nicked with a file before planting, or better, pour boiling water over the seeds, let stand overnight, then drain and plant. Give this treatment to acacia, albizia, boxwood, camellia, honeylocust, juniper, redbud and silk tree.

A great majority of tree and shrub seeds need a period of coldness, near freezing, followed by warmth, in order to break dormancy. The natural way to start these is to sow them outdoors in a cold-frame in autumn, or into winter if the weather permits. When warm-ups comes in the spring, germination begins. You can simulate this period of coolness by a process called "stratification." To do this, mix the seeds with moist sand and peat moss in a jar or plastic container and place in your refrigerator or in a temperature range of approximately 33 to 41°F. for the specified period of time (see below), then remove and sow.

A four-month stratification period is recommended for buckeye, butternut, Eastern redbud, hickory, Magnolia grandiflora and black walnut.

Some seeds need to be stratified only two or three months. These include apple, alder, ash, beech, birch, baldcypress, crotoneaster, crab apple, elm, fir, flowering cherry, franklinia, ginkgo, goldenrain tree, hackberry, hawthorn, hemlock, holly, crape-myrtle, ligustrum, lilac, linden, Pacific madrone, maple, nandia, oak, peach, pear, persimmon, pine, poplar, pyracantha, quince, redbud, Russian olive, spruce, sweet gum, tulip-tree, black tupelo and yew.

Still another group requires only a two-month period of storage at 33 to 41°F. before being shown in a warm place for germination. Kinds include cypress, Jack pine, longleaf pine, pitch pine, shortleaf pine and American sycamore.

Another group requires first a period of two to four months at 68 to 80°F., then a period of two to four months at 33 to 41°F., followed by warmth, for germination. Give this treatment to Rocky Mountain juniper, Western juniper, silverbell and trisetree.

Seeds that are surrounded by a pulp need first to have this removed. To do so, soak them in water until the fleshy covering becomes soft; then wash it off, drain and air-dry the seeds before sowing. Kinds that need this treatment include barberry, holly, magnolia, pyracantha, rose and viburnum.

Willow, poplar and some maple seeds are short-lived and need to be planted soon after harvest. White-alder, catalpa, citrus, photinia, podocarpus, sourwood and viburnum also do well when sown as soon as ripe. If oak or chestnut become thoroughly air-dried, they need stratification in order to break dormancy. Camellia seeds ripen from late summer to early fall, depending on climate and variety, and the sooner they are sown afterward, the better.

If you are in doubt about how to start a packet of rare tree or shrub seeds, divide it. Sow half just as you would any common seeds such as marigolds. Stratify the other half for two to four months, then sow them as you did the others.

I sow shrub and tree seeds in bulb pans or standard pots filled with a mixture of equal parts clean, sharp sand and sphagnum peat moss that I have first put through quarter-inch-mesh screen. Cover small seeds to the depth of their own thickness; large ones to twice this amount. Press the surface with the palm of your hand. Set the pots in a basin of water until beads of moisture show at the surface. Remove and allow to drain. Then place inside a plastic bag and position beneath two fluorescent-light tubes burned 14-16 hours daily or in a bright window. Watch for signs of germination. When you see a seedling, remove the plastic. Be sure the growing medium never dries out.

Pots and flats of tree and shrub seedlings can be summered outdoors in a protected place, but again, be sure the growing medium is moist at all times. Seedlings of hardy trees and shrubs may be wintered over a coldframe, and transplanted to nursery rows for growing on the second spring, or into larger containers.

College Coordinators Reject Proposed Pay Increase Plan

AUSTIN (AP) — The College Coordinating Board refused by a 9-3 vote Friday to recommend a 5.5 percent "catchup" pay raise for professors at public colleges and universities.

The board recommended only a 6.4 percent "inflation" increase for fiscal 1979 and 1980.

Paul Teague of Texas City and Tony Bonilla of Corpus Christi vainly pleaded with the board to add the 5.5 percent.

Teague said it would take an 8.2 percent pay hike on top of the 6.4 percent inflation increase to recapture the purchasing power professors had in 1968-69.

"Even though it's costly ($33 million), it's right, it's proper," Teague said.

The board has recommended approximations in recent years that would stretch the educational dollar, he said.

"What have we cut? We've cut salaries of people. That's what we cut. If we're talking about quality education, we're talking about people. We're talking about professors," he said.

The faculty advisory committee recommended the catchup, Teague said, but the board's staff eliminated it before bringing its appropriations recommendations before the full board.

Compromises are made at every step, Teague said. If there is to be no catchup, "then let the Legislature make that decision. If we make the compromise for them, and then they make a further compromise, the poor teachers of Texas lose their position relative to teachers in other states."

Bonilla said only Rice University is mentioned among Texas colleges when the word excellence is used, and Rice is a private school.

Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth was asked to explain the staff's position.

"Speaking against the interests of the faculty is one of the toughest positions I have been put in," Ashworth said.

"It goes with the territory," cracked Chairman Harry Provence.

Texas ranks 13th in appropriations for higher education, and 18th in per capita expenditures on higher education, Ashworth said.

The 6.4 percent inflation pay raise will be "substantially higher than the Legislature appropriated last time (3.4 percent)" and "will be better than improvements that will be made in other states," he said.

The only recommendations above 6.4 percent are for departmental operating expenses and libraries — 3 percent each — to catchup on loss of purchasing power for such things as supplies, books and travel, he said.

Harold Herndon of San Antonio said, "I cannot agree that each teacher deserves 6.4."

Fred Moore of Austin said university administrators should "bite the bullet and upgrade their faculties with the money they have."

Only Teague, Bonilla and Betty Jo Hay of Dallas voted for the catchup increase.

Shantytown Leveled By South Africans

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Government bulldozers flattened the last of 2,000 simple huts Friday and reduced to smoldering rubble a huge illegal shantytown where more than 20,000 black squatters once lived.

By midday, no shacks remained standing in the Unibell shantytown, which covered an area of several square miles some 15 miles north of Cape Town. The area was littered with twisted metal, wooden planks and other debris.

Officials said about 20 percent of the Unibell's original population remained at the site, camping in the open.

Officials from the Cape Peninsula Bantu (black) Affairs Administration Board, which carried out the demolition, said only 600 refugees from the camp had applied for free rail passes to their homelands, the regions assigned to them under the white-minority government's policies of racial separation. Most seeking family passes were women, they said.

The massive clearance project was an attempt to force blacks residing in the area illegally to return to their tribal homelands, mainly Transkei. Most blacks in the Cape area are Xhosa tribesmen and are officially regarded as citizens of Transkei, which gained independence in October 1976.

Under government policy, the country's 19 million blacks are citizens of the "homelands" and can enter white areas only as migrants.

South Africa's population and racial control laws require blacks to have government permission to live and work in white urban areas. Many black men working in the Cape are on single, renewable annual contracts that prohibit them from bringing their families with them.

Most of Unibell's residents were women and children who had come to the camp to live with husbands and fathers working legally in the Cape area.

Agriculture Department Says Large Soybean Crop Probable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers indicate they will cut back slightly on corn plantings this spring but may give a hefty boost to soybeans, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

In its first general look at 1978 harvest potential, the department said surveys on Jan. 1 indicated that farmers may plant 79.3 million acres of corn, a reduction of 2.1 percent from last year.

But soybean plantings could hit a record of 63.1 million acres, an 8 percent increase from 58.3 million in 1977.

A senior department official said the report did not indicate that the nationwide strike called by the American Agriculture Movement has had an impact on 1978 crop planting intentions.

Futures' Discounts Spur Cattle Buying

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 25 points lower to a like amount higher Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange on sales of 7,592 cars.

April and June were off most with the expiring January contract ranging higher. The spot month set a new season's high and reached the highest point since May at $44.25 per hundredweight.

Pre-expiration buying was spurred by discounts of futures to cash along with steady beef demand in the face of a sizeable kill. Later months were down generally on evening-up ahead of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's cattle-on-feed report which was released after trading.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 69 1/4 cents per pound for all weights, a one-week high. Cash cattle were steady to weak with the top at $45.50.

Slaughter was 153,000 head. Monday's arrivals at the six markets are expected to total 20,900 head.

Most comments on the exchange floor following the cattle-on-feed report were neutral for the 23-state figures and leaned a little to the bearish side if the seven-state data is included.

Generally, some outright selling of cattle futures was indicated for Monday's opening but this could be offset if daily statistics turn upward.

The report noted placements of 9.5 million head in the fourth quarter or 109 percent of a year earlier. That was just under the average guess of 109.6 percent and near the low end of the range of 106 to 118 percent.

Marketings at 6 million head were 107 percent of a year ago, near the low end of the spread of 105 to 115 percent but under the average of 109.

The number on feed as of Jan. 1 at 12.8 million, was up 7 percent from last year and just below the average of 107.4, exactly halfway between the 104 to 110 percent span of early guesses.

In the seven states, placements during December at 2 million head were up 16 percent from the previous year, and the number on feed on Jan. 1 at 8.9 million showed a 9 percent gain from the year earlier figure.

Meantime, hog futures rebounded from initial losses of as many as 10 points and closed at highs of the day, up five to 80 points. The nearby contract paced the recovery on a total turnover of 4,805 cars.

The market rose on light hog runs and higher prices after Thursday's fall to lowest levels in more than two weeks. The discount of futures to cash was bullish as was strength in pork products with hams up 12 cents per pound and loins up 20 cents recently.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 1/2 cents at 84 1/2 to 86 cents per pound, f.o.b. river points, a four-week high. Cash hogs were steady to up $2 with the top at $49.25, highest since July.

Slaughter was 266,000 head. The major terminals expect 31,500 head to arrive on Monday.

Pork belly (bacon) futures finished 85 points higher to two lower on a volume of 6,677 turnovers. May was up most, gaining 125 points early, with only the nearby ranging into the loss column.

Light hog runs and higher prices along with strength in hog futures lifted values in Chicago. Initial selling spilled over from the previous session, despite declining storage stocks and forced prices to three-week lows, off 5.65 cents from Tuesday's high.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up one cent at 53 1/2 to 56 1/2 cents.

Faced with rising grain surpluses, the Carter administration has taken steps itself to curb 1978 production, including an acreage set-aside plan for wheat and one tentatively announced for feed grains.

Howard W. Hjort, the department's director of economics, told a news conference that the report showed farmers intend to plant slightly more land to the 12 crops surveyed than had been anticipated.

Asked about the impact of the strike movement, Hjort said, "it would seem that relatively few farmers were planning reductions in excess of the set-aside" program to curb grain output this year.

But Hjort cautioned that the report "is an indicator and an early indicator. That's all it is."

Farmers still have several months before spring planting of major crops and could change their minds before then, he said.

The report did not project how much the 1978 crops may actually produce, only the number of acres farmers said they intend to plant. Another planting survey will be announced by the department on April 13, reflecting how farmers are planning their crops in the spring.

Corn is the most important U.S. farm crop and, as animal feed, is a major ingredient for producing beef, pork, poultry and milk. Soybeans provide high-protein meal to supplement feed and oil used to make many food products.

The survey this year was made only in 34 states. Thus, the acreage reported for corn, soybeans and other crops does not reflect the entire U.S. acreage intended for those commodities.

Bruce Graham, chairman of the Crop Reporting Board, said that the 34 states, however, account for at least 95 percent of the acreage for the various crops included in the survey.

The report also said farmers intend to plant 4.2 million acres of durum wheat this spring, up 31 percent from 3.2 million planted for the 1977 harvest. Producers of other spring-planted wheat said they will plant 13.7 million acres, down 12 percent.

Last month, the department announced that winter wheat farmers planted 48.1 million acres last fall for this year's harvest, a cutback of 14 percent from 1977 plantings.

The department has announced that farmers who want to be assured of full government price support benefits will have to idle land equal to 20 percent of the wheat they intend to have for harvest to 575 points over 1977 loan rates.

Classifying offices graded 2,700 samples. The season's total stood at 2,893,000 bales, compared with 1,679,000 last year. About 2,800 samples were received and approximately 2,600 were carried over as unclassified.

Predominant grades for the week's classings were grade 41 at 27 percent, 32 at 24 percent and grade 42 accounted for 20 percent. Main staple lengths were 30 to 34 at 16 percent, 31 at 34 percent and 32 at 34 percent.

Micronaire remained mostly in the desirable 3.5-4.9 range with about 78 percent of the classings. Twelve percent were higher and 10 percent lower. Six percent of the samples were reduced a grade because of grass and one percent because of bark.

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for quotations equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standard. Prices are for micronaire (mic) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncombed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Commodities

By Mike Stevens

SOYBEANS, THE HAIRY LEGUME, if you remember, became the darling of the speculators several years ago. The plot thickened this past year when the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) tried to put a lid on the Hunt family's soybean holdings.

Other crops included in the Jan. 1 planting survey and their acreages included: — Sorghum 17.2 million acres for harvest in 1978, up 3 percent from 1977; — Oats 17.4 million acres, down 1 percent; — Barley, 10.1 million acres, down less than 1/2 of 1 percent.

—Flaxseed 1.275 million acres, down 16 percent. —Rice 2.48 million acres, up 10 percent; and —Sugarbeets 1.27 million acres, up 5 percent; and —Sunflowers 2.345 million acres, up 2 percent.

Record corn and wheat harvests the past three years have been a mixed blessing. They have provided a huge supply of lower-priced grain for livestock producers and thus have helped slow the rise in retail food prices by triggering expanded output of meat, poultry and milk.

But many farmers, especially wheat and other grain producers who raise crops for the cash market, have been hurt severely by declining commodity market prices.

For example, the department earlier this week reported that the 1977 record corn crop's estimated value was about $12.8 billion, compared with nearly $13.5 billion in 1976 and $14.8 billion in 1975. Those values were based on an average price of $2.02 a bushel last year, $2.15 in 1976 and $2.54 in 1975.

The value of last year's wheat crop was less than $4.7 billion, an average of $2.31 a bushel, compared with nearly $5.9 billion in 1976 when wheat averaged $2.73 a bushel, and more than $7.5 billion when it was $3.56 a bushel.

Meanwhile, the reserve supplies of grain have climbed to their highest levels since the early 1960s.

By June 1, the beginning of the new wheat marketing year, the supply left over from previous harvests is expected to be about 1.2 billion bushels, up from 1.1 billion last June 1 and 664 million bushels on June 1, 1976.

The corn surplus left over Oct. 1 when the 1978-crop marketing year begins will be around 1.2 billion bushels, compared with 879 million last fall and 398 million bushels on Oct. 1, 1976, according to department projections.

Leon New of Lubbock, area agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will discuss reducing irrigation costs.

Discussing growing cotton for profit and the Profit Cotton Program will be James C. Esty, county extension agent in agronomy.

Dr. James Supak of Lubbock, extension cotton specialist, will report on new cotton varieties.

Tom Davison, extension 4-H and youth specialist from College Station, will recommend participants in the 4-H grain sorghum production project and awards program.

Pat Guy, executive director of the Hale County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservator Service, will be the first speaker. He will discuss the new federal farm program.

Marvin Sartin of Lubbock, area extension economist, will talk on corn versus grain sorghum versus cotton and the "pros and cons" of cotton modules.

Dr. John Abernathy, weed research project leader at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock, will discuss controlling perennial and annual weeds, including white weeds and lake weeds. He also will discuss recirculating sprayers.

Jack Bowmer, agronomist and assistant director with the agricultural and environmental science division with the Texas Department of Agriculture at Austin, will speak on the pesticide certification program.

The Plainview Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture and Board of City Development will serve lunch.

The meeting is sponsored by the Hale County Extension Service in cooperation with the Plainview chamber and Board of City Development.

'People Mover' Effectiveness Still In Doubt

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (UPI) — What weighs several tons, costs $128 million and looks like automated ice cubes on wheels?

The answer is Personal Rapid Transit, an experimental "downtown people mover." PRT now operates solely at West Virginia University in Morgantown, but similar computerized systems are in the works for several other American cities.

PRT was conceived 10 years ago by WVU engineering professor Samy Elias as a modest, $18 million solution to traffic congestion in Morgantown. The steep, hilly city of 30,000 has only two major north-south streets.

"There was no room to add extra lanes in a highway any place unless you wanted to tear the town half apart and displace hundreds of people," Elias said. "We even considered putting a special elevated lane above the (Monongahela) river, but it turned out to be an extremely expensive process. Tunneling is also very expensive."

The professor applied for federal funds after finishing his initial feasibility study in 1969. But the government had a bolder vision, and costs skyrocketed as PRT evolved into a demonstration model for the nation.

The ambitious undertaking, still incomplete, has drawn scathing criticism from some quarters. But despite controversy over PRT's cost, efficiency and effectiveness, similar plans have been conditionally approved for Cleveland, Houston, Los Angeles and St. Paul.

However, Cleveland Mayor Dennis Kucinich criticized the $41 million project for his city as too expensive and disruptive and said the money should be used instead for subsidizing bus service.

"Better send it back to Disneyland where it belongs," Kucinich said of PRT.

But Congress has recommended that Baltimore, Miami, Jacksonville, Indianapolis, St. Louis and Norfolk be considered for PRT grants this year.

"PRT is as much an experiment in sociology as in technology," said Dr. Raymond Haas, provost for planning at WVU.

"Lots of people won't ride mass transit. They'd rather take their cars. If you have personal rather than mass transit, will people ride it?"

Haas said people feel more secure in the relatively small, driverless PRT cars, which have only eight seats. He said the computer-operated cars, which run on both ground level and elevated tracks, are small enough to take people to their destinations without making stops.

According to Haas, Morgantown is an ideal experimental site because it has varied weather conditions, eight daily rush hours due to class changes, and a surplus of college age people "who are particularly enamored of their automobiles."

PRT had its problems last winter, Haas conceded, but he insisted "it's showing itself to be a system that people will use and that will provide reliable service."

A daily PRT dependability report compiled by the university shows that for the past six months, PRT has been operating up to standards for 97.5 out of every 100 minutes of operation, Haas said. He predicted the general public will ride PRT in greater numbers with the completion of Phase II, which will add a station at the WVU Medical Center.

Phase I includes stations in downtown Morgantown, the downtown campus and the school's Evansdale Campus. Most of its riders are students, who are assigned $10.50 each semester for PRT whether they use it or not.

"Up until five or six months ago, there was some vocal dislike of PRT. Many students resented the fact that they were paying for something they weren't using," said Ray Betzner, 21, editor of the WVU "Daily Athenaeum."

"When I first came here, I didn't like the system at all because it was extremely inefficient and costly beyond belief," he said.

Betzner, who describes PRT as "a square Volkswagen" or "an ice cube with wheels," called the system "an embarrassment" because it opened four years later than promised.

"It was ridiculed quite a bit for a long time, but some of the stigma attached to it is slowly melting away," he said. "As each senior class with built-in bigotry against the system leaves and new students arrive the feeling is changing. When it's completed, I think it will work."

Perry F. "Buddy" Watson III, president of the WVU student body, expressed mixed feelings about PRT.

"Last year we were really riled up, but it's running well this year," said Watson, 23.

However, he was adamant on the question of whether other cities should adopt similar systems.

"I would not recommend PRT to another town," Watson said. "In the future it will be worthwhile, but there are a lot of inherent problems in it. I personally would not recommend it unless they could bring the cost down. Sixty-three million dollars for Phase I and $63 million for Phase II — that's too much."

Elias admits the Morgantown system is a far cry from his original plan, but he remains loyal to his brainchild and believes it would benefit other cities.

Two Worlds Blend In New Recording

East and West do come together now and then despite Rudyard Kipling's observation that "never the twain shall meet."

The two worlds were converging in the field of music back in the late 19th century, even while Kipling was writing his polarized poetry. And through the years the East has been playing the music of the West.

A good example of East-West affinity is an auspicious recording of Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons" by The New Koto Assembly of Tokyo (Angel S37450).

Vivaldi wrote "The Four Seasons" for a symphony-orchestra to play in a music hall, but only six musicians are involved in this performance.

It would seem that since Vivaldi wanted a large orchestra to convey the broad picture of the changing seasons, a sextet — especially one that plucks strings exclusively — would be unable to find overt and subtle shadings. Not so.

The Tokyo ensemble finds its way through the complexities of the score in an easy manner. And although the instruments are of ancient Asian origin, there are no visions of pagodas or samurai swords. The instruments sound at times as though they are situated in an 18th century drawing room rather than in a Japanese setting.

Audiophiles will be delighted by this recording because, since only six musicians are involved, the sound is realistic in a living room or den, giving a feeling of awareness that cannot be duplicated by a large symphonic group in such confines.

This is The New Koto Ensemble's first recording, with Seichi Mitsuishi conducting and Tomoko Sunazaki appearing as soloist.

Not much more than a year ago, Columbia issued a complete recording of Gustave Charpentier's "Louise," with the celebrated soprano, Ileana Cotrubas, in the title role and Placido Domingo as Julian. Opera lovers were happy to get it as the opera had been sadly neglected.

Now we have another recording of "Louise" (Angel UCL3846). Beverly Sils heads the cast as Louise and Nicolai Gedda is Julian. They are joined by Jose

Van Dam and Mignon Dunn, with Julius Rudel conducting the chorus and orchestra of the Paris Opera.

"Louise" was the only big work by Charpentier to last through the years, even though it does not have a spectacular score.

Speed Traps Possibly Illegal, Author Asserts In New Book

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The next time you are caught in a police radar trap, you might consider asking the officer if his equipment is legal.

You also should make full written notes about the incident — the officer's identification, the type of radar equipment, weather conditions, the locale — and be prepared to use the information in court.

Those are just some of the suggestions Rex Power offers in his book, "How to Beat Police Radar and Do It Legally." (Arco Publishing Co.).

Power plainly does not like the 55 mile per hour speed limit, but he says the situation is being made worse by overzealous police agencies trying to cash in on the lower limit with more speeding fines.

In their rush to use modern technology to nab speeders, some police agencies are overlooking certain legal and technical points that can be used by motorists to avoid speeding raps, Power says.

"The deck is not totally stacked in favor of the police."

Power says his book should not be taken as an invitation to break the law, but argues that motorists are too often intimidated by police radar and accept their tickets without protest. Many careful drivers "are convicted for offenses which they never committed," he says.

One of the author's most intriguing claims is that some of the police radar equipment being used is illegal.

Radar equipment comes under the jurisdiction of the Federal Communications Commission and each radar unit must be licensed by the FCC, but Power says some police departments forget or do not bother to obtain the required licenses.

"If a police force is licensed for 10 radar units and they are operating 20 units the burden of proof as to which units are legal and which are not is on the police. They must prove beyond a shadow of doubt that the unit used on you is legal," Power says.

Bank Suit Lists Comptroller

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Three Milwaukee banks have filed suit in U.S. District Court against the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency and the First Bank System Inc. of Minnesota, challenging the takeover of the former Midland National Bank by a La Crosse subsidiary of the Minnesota firm.

The suit alleges that the comptroller "violated the mandate of national banking laws" because he did not follow Wisconsin law in allowing one of the Milwaukee banks — M&I Marshall and Ilsley — a reasonable time to consider acquiring Midland National.

Marine National Exchange Bank and Heritage Bank of Milwaukee are also filing the suit, which charges that the La Crosse bank — First Bank, N.A. — could not have acquired Midland without significant financial backing from its parent firm, and that the purchase was actually made by the First Bank System.

In that case, the suit says, the First Bank System's purchase of Midland would have required the approval of the Federal Reserve System's Board of Governors.

But it says such approval was not sought, and argues that Wisconsin law prohibits the purchase of state banks by out of state holding firms.

The Milwaukee banks seek a judgment against further operation of Midland National by the La Crosse bank, and a declaration that the purchase of Midland National was illegal.

Comptroller of the Currency John Heimann approved the purchase in July, 1977, saying Midland had "serious asset problems" threatening its survival.

Heimann found that it was proper for the La Crosse bank to purchase Midland because Milwaukee banks lacked "the extraordinary financial and managerial resources" to continue Midland's operation.
