

Military Response To Crisis In Mideast Worries Planners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense planners are uncertain whether U.S. military forces could deal effectively with a crisis in the oil-producing Persian Gulf region, it was disclosed Friday in a secret document.

"We are as yet unsure of the utility of U.S. military power in Persian Gulf contingencies," the planners said in a thick document which Defense Secretary Harold Brown sent to the armed services to guide them in planning budgets for the next five years.

They proposed organizing a special force made up of two reinforced Army divisions and a Marine division, plus its air wing, to be ready for emergencies in the Persian Gulf and possibly other areas vital to the United States, apart from Western Europe.

Military officers said the problem of airlifting such a force, which could number up to 100,000 men, and sustaining such a force in battle in an area far from the United States and remote from U.S. bases in Western Europe is a staggering one.

In broad scope, the planning document follows the lines of defense policy spelled out by President Carter and Brown in the $115.2 billion fiscal 1979 defense spending budget sent to Congress last Monday. Under longstanding Pentagon practice, the services are required to plan five years ahead and are always given guidelines by the defense secretary.

The keystone of U.S. military policy, apart from its strategic nuclear striking forces designed to deter a Soviet attack on the United States, is defense of Western Europe. The new budget emphasizes strengthening U.S. forces to enable them to counter heavy Russian-led Warsaw Pact armies and air forces facing Western Europe.

"We face an incredibly strong and growing military power in the East," the planning document said.

"Our near-term objective is to assure that NATO could not be overwhelmed in the first weeks of a blitzkrieg war, and we will invest and spend our resources preferentially to that end."

The planners made it clear that the Carter administration continues the policy, developed in the Nixon administration, to build conventional forces necessary to fight what is called one and a half wars — that is, a major war in Europe and, simultaneously, a smaller war in another area of major U.S. interest.

Noting this, the planners said that "events in the Persian Gulf could soften the glue that binds the (North Atlantic) Alliance as surely as could an imbalance of military forces across the inter-German border."

They asserted that the United States must be able to fight in areas other than Western Europe because Soviet threats to U.S. interests and Russian ability to project force are both increasing.

At another point, the planning document said that "our land forces should continue to be sized to stabilize a Persian Gulf situation involving both local forces and some Soviet forces" as well as to "deploy sufficient forces to Europe to prevent major loss of territory or eventually to restore prewar boundaries."

Military officers point out that the United States is short by about 50 percent in the amount of heavy cargo-carrying airlift that would be necessary to haul the tanks, artillery and other gear required by deploying divisions.

For a major U.S. force to be able to land and go into action, they said, the United States would have to be assured of friendly bases in the Persian Gulf area. Iran and Saudi Arabia are closely associated with the United States, which is a major supplier of their weapons.

Nonetheless, military strategists foresee situations in which either or both Saudi Arabia and Iran could be battlegrounds in a Soviet-led attack. The Persian Gulf lies within the range of much of Russia's tactical air power.

OLD AND NEW — A conventional windmill stands in the foreground in Clayton, N.M., near the futuristic wind turbine which soon will generate up to 15 percent of Clayton's electrical power. The turbine, which will be hooked into the town's utility system Saturday, is powered by wind turning its two aluminum blades which span 125 feet, tip to tip. The windmill is actually about one third the height of the wind turbine. (AP Laserphoto)

Town Begins Operation Of Wind-Driven Turbine

CLAYTON, N.M. (AP) — Wind will generate up to 15 percent of Clayton's electrical power beginning Saturday, after dedication of the first wind turbine hooked into an American community's utility system in a federal pilot program.

The dedication begins a two-year test of the wind turbine generator to determine performance and economics of such a system connected to a conventional power plant.

The turbine will be powered by wind turning what looks like a propeller with two aluminum blades reaching 125 feet tip to tip, atop a 180-foot tower.

It will generate 200 kilowatts at a rated operating speed of about 19 mph — enough to supply the needs of about 60 homes.

Aides Complete Course

A-J Correspondent
CHILDRESS — Twelve Childress residents recently completed a nurse's aide course here.

The 48-hour course was sponsored by the Texas State Technical Institute through the Childress Community Action Center. The graduates received certificates and pins during a recent program.

Those completing the course were Annie Ruth Jeter, Mary Howard, Mildred Hunter, Odell Rasco, Virginia Crow, Patsy Davis, Earnie Anderson, Erma Johnson, Marie Grenett, Shirley Cornish, Lupe Gonzales and Mae Pipes.

Mrs. Maxine Baker, coordinator of the program, said another class is now in the planning stages. Interested persons may call her at the Community Action Center, Mrs. Baker said.

City Manager Robert Johnston said residents of this community of 3,000 in northeast New Mexico were "rather excited" about the project.

The local newspaper, the Union County Leader, said the event was the biggest happening in the community since the hanging of outlaw Black Jack Ketchum in 1901.

The machine was built for the Department of Energy under direction of the NASA Lewis Research Center in Cleveland.

The wind turbine's blades are designed to rotate and produce power when winds reach eight miles an hour 30 feet above ground level. The machine reaches full power output between 18 and 20 mph. It shuts off automatically in winds stronger than 35 mph, to protect the equipment.

Clayton's machine is the first of three pilot projects planned by the Department of Energy and the national space agency. The others will be at Block Island, R.I., and Culebra Island, Puerto Rico. A 2,000 kilowatt turbine is planned for Boone, N.C., later this year.

Torres Death Case Trial Continues

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston policeman Carless Elliott testified Friday he heard a former city officer say, "Let's see if a wetback can swim" shortly before there was a splash and a young Mexican-American went into the muddy waters of Buffalo Bayou.

Rookie policeman Carless E. Elliott said he was "real scared and upset" by the death of the man held in police custody "and I am still scared."

Defense attorneys made an attempt to require U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling to read the testimony given by Elliott before a state grand jury and compare it with what he has said in the federal court trial.

Sterling said he wanted to read the testimony, but later changed his mind.

The defense was attempting to discredit the testimony given by Elliott before the 7-man, 5-women jury, which is attempting to determine if four former policemen had violated the civil rights of Joe Campos Torres, a 23-year-old laborer and a serviceman who had been discharged for his drinking habit.

Another officer allegedly involved in the death of Torres — Glenn Brinkmeyer — was expected to testify later for the prosecution. Elliott said the incident bothered him so much that he eventually revealed the details to his father, a veteran Houston police officer.

In earlier testimony, Elliott said five former policemen verbally abused Torres last May and that he stepped away "trying not to look."

Elliott said he was present along with the four defendants and another officer when Torres was beaten and allegedly pushed into Buffalo Bayou.

The body of Torres was found on the morning of May 8 in the muddy stream that flows through a section of downtown Houston. Torres had been arrested three days earlier during a disturbance in a tavern.

Charged with violation of civil rights are former officers Terry Denson, 27, Stephen Orlando, 21, James Janish, 22, and Louis Kinney, 27.

All were dismissed from the Houston police department after the Torres death.

Denson and Orlando were convicted of negligent homicide, a misdemeanor, and given one-year probation during a state court trial last October.

Youth Home Battle Reopened By Court

KERRVILLE (AP) — A state district judge ordered state welfare officials Friday to inspect conditions at evangelist Lester Roloff's Anchor Home for Boys in Zapata, thus reopening Roloff's past legal battles with the state.

Indiana Avenue Construction Set

Construction to widen Indiana Avenue north of 50th Street is expected to begin Monday morning, causing minor disruption of the traffic flow for at least 10 days.

Work crews will remove the curbs and gutters along the west side of Indiana Avenue between 49th and 50th streets.

During construction, southbound traffic will be restricted to one through lane and one optional left-turn through lane.

When construction is finished, right-turn lanes will have been added off 50th Street north of Indiana Avenue. Double left-turn lanes will be provided off 50th Street in both directions along Indiana Avenue.

The work is part of the city's comprehensive intersection revamping program, and will cost about $85,000.

Roloff, who operates three unlicensed South Texas homes for girls and boys, has gotten court injunctions on some occasions in the past to stop state welfare officials from inspecting his homes.

Friday's order by State District Judge Murray Jordan stemmed from a custody hearing for two Arizona youths who ran away from the Zapata facility last week after claiming they had been beaten.

Jordan ordered the Texas Department of Human Resources to continue temporary custody of the two youths, ages 15 and 16, and ordered welfare officials to coordinate with Arizona officials and conduct a social study into the youths' backgrounds.

"We will check with our attorneys and the attorney general's office prior to an investigation," said Human Resources spokesman Ron Gosson, who noted that state welfare officials have not yet been allowed to make a complete inspection of any of Roloff's facilities.

Oil Official Seeks Less Federal Regulation

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Proposed federal legislation on offshore exploration for oil and gas would further delay searches for the critically needed fuels and might force small petroleum companies to withdraw from competition, a leading industry official said Friday.

Wilson Laird, director of exploration for the American Petroleum Institute, said in remarks prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the Virginia section of the American Society of Civil Engineers that offshore exploration already is being increasingly delayed by court and regulatory actions.

"In addition, Congress is considering legislative changes in the OCS (Outer Continental Shelf) Lands Act which could have profoundly adverse effects on offshore operations," Wilson said.

He estimated that under the proposals, three to six years would be added to the time necessary to develop offshore oil and gas fields, "a time frame that already requires three to 10 years to bring a field into full production.

The proposed legislation "would impose unreasonable and unwarranted operating conditions, conditions which could force a number of companies—particularly smaller firms—to abandon the search offshore," he said.

The Senate already has passed, and the House is considering, proposals that supporters say would increase federal revenues from leases of offshore sites and would give states more control over offshore development, especially in environmental matters.

But the feature that most upsets the oil industry is one that would encourage the U.S. Department of Interior to drill its own test wells.

"This could be more political pressure than the secretary of Interior could resist," said Frank Bedell of the Virginia Petroleum Council. "We see it as a first step toward nationalization of the oil industry."

The proposals are generally supported by environmentalists, some of whom are hoping to delay a sale of leases off Massachusetts—scheduled for Tuesday—at least until action is completed in Congress.

Laird said that 16 percent of the United States' domestic oil and 20 percent of its gas come from offshore wells, and additional supplies from those sources are needed to avoid a further dependence on foreign supplies.

Almost half the oil used in the United States last year came from overseas.

"I find it distressing, indeed astonishing that an administration which repeatedly has proclaimed the need to expand domestic energy production could at the same time support this proposal," he said.

"It should be obvious to everyone that we simply cannot long continue this high-risk level of oil imports," Laird said. "We must develop domestic energy sources with all deliberate speed, within the framework of sound economic and environmental considerations."

Oil Industry Sees Best Drilling Year

HOUSTON (AP) — A trade publication forecast Friday the domestic petroleum industry will drill 48,429 wells this year compared with 46,106 last year.

World Oil also expects the industry to drill 235.2 million feet of hole compared with last year's 222.1 million.

William Dudley, publisher, said attainment of the forecasts would make 1978 the best drilling year in terms of well completions since 1959 and the best in terms of footage since 1956.

Dudley said drilling activity over the past four years, and particularly last year, increased at a rate parallel to the availability of rigs and related equipment.

"Off-voiced worry during this period about increasing politically inspired interference in industry affairs in the form of a myriad of new federal rules, regulations, restrictions and taxes has obviously had little tangible effect as far as overall drilling is concerned," Dudley said.

"Indeed, it is difficult to imagine that very much more could have been accomplished, even in a regulatory-free climate. Virtually all equipment able to work has been working."

Dudley said the drilling boom is clearly attributed to increases in oil and gas prices since 1973 "and the faith — some consider it blind — that these escalations are going to continue until world market levels are attained."

"If gas prices are finally established at or near present Texas intrastate levels and provisions are made for periodic boosts, and if new oil prices continue to rise as prescribed by law, we can expect a continuation of the present upward trend in drilling," he said.

Dudley said there appears to be adequate investment capital and geologic prospects available to support 1978 activity although rapidly rising long-term corporate debt is of growing concern and the quality of wildcat prospects has been declining.

Carter Planning Farmer Meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Faced with mounting unrest among members of a farm strike movement who are demanding action to raise farm prices, President Carter is planning several meetings soon to discuss the problem. Carter met over a hastily scheduled lunch for an hour Friday with Chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., of the Senate Agriculture Committee. White House officials said only that the pair discussed farm problems. But other sources said Carter will meet Tuesday with 18 members of the Midwestern Governors Conference, at the request of North Dakota's Gov. Arthur Link, to discuss efforts to help the farm economy. Officials said Carter is also planning to meet soon — probably by mid-February — with farm organization leaders, including spokesmen for the American Agriculture farm strike movement. White House spokesmen gave no details of Carter's talk with Talmadge Friday. The Georgia senator had earlier called on the administration to use existing legal powers to pump $7.5 billion into the farm economy by such steps as a $3.5 billion payment to farmers for voluntarily idling up to 50 million acres of grain and cotton land. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland rejected virtually all of Talmadge's proposals last Tuesday.

Real Estate Appraiser Gains Recognition

The Governing Council of American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers has awarded the RM (Residential Member) designation to Lubbock real estate appraiser Merle N. Blosser, associate of Harris and Cantrell Appraisal Company. The designation was inaugurated in 1968 to recognize appraisers with skill and experience in appraising single family residential property.

Blosser has five years of real estate appraisal experience. He has passed three technical courses and examination of the institute, submitted two acceptable single family demonstration appraisal reports, and had favorable recommendations of other member appraisers familiar with his work.

Merle Blosser is a 1971 graduate of Texas Tech University with bachelor of arts degrees in industrial management and marketing. He has appraised residential, commercial and income producing properties in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

Membership in the Appraisal Institute, founded in 1932, is limited to professional designated appraisers.

Except for members employed by government agencies or educational or financial institutions, a member must be a member of a local realtor board of the National Association of Realtors.

The institute also awards the MAI designation (Member of the Appraisal Institute) which is awarded to appraisers qualified to evaluate all types of real property.

Witness Tells Of Mormon Will

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Alaskan contractor LeVane Forsythe described Friday how he met secretly with Howard Hughes and obtained what has now come to be known as the Mormon will from the eccentric multi-millionaire. Forsythe, testifying through a deposition in the trial to determine the will's

Hughes Aide Gives Testimony In Texas Residence Probe

HOUSTON (UPI) — A former aide to the late Howard Hughes testified Friday he never heard the wandering tycoon say he wanted to return to Texas.

Jack Real, now senior vice president of the Hughes holding company known as Summa Corp., said he once heard Hughes say he considered himself a resident of Nevada.

Real testified in Harris County Probate Court, where the State of Texas is trying to prove Hughes was a Texan so the state can collect millions of dollars in inheritance taxes.

Hughes relatives and Summa contend Hughes, who was born in Ouston but lived in a dozen places around the world as an adult, was not legally a Texan.

Hughes died at age 70 April 5, 1976, aboard a medical emergency flight from Acapulco to Houston, where he also is buried. Court battles over his estate are underway in Nevada and Texas.

The Texas trial began last November and has featured more written, recorded and film evidence — including the playing of some movies Hughes made in California — than live testimony.

validity, claims to have handled about 50 confidential missions for Hughes during a 25-year period.

He said they included delivery of cash to a number of California politicians and along with delivery of the will to Melvin Dummar, a former Utah service station operator.

Forsythe's 1,500-page deposition is being read to a Clark County District Court jury which will decide if Hughes actually penned the three-page, handwritten document which names Dummar a beneficiary and former Hughes advisor Noah Dietrich as executor of the vast estate.

Dietrich and his attorney, Harold Rhoden, want to have the will declared genuine, while Hughes' relatives, largely unmentioned, claim it is a forgery.

No evidence has been yet introduced to corroborate Forsythe's story, and the personal aides who cared for Hughes have testified they never heard of, or saw, Forsythe.

Forsythe has refused to travel to Las Vegas to give live testimony, and the attorneys involved say it would be futile to subpoena the Alaskan.

In his deposition, taken last year, Forsythe said he obtained the will and delivery instructions from Hughes during a secret meeting at the Bayshore Inn in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Forsythe said the meeting occurred in a hotel room on the 17th or 19th floor of the hotel in early August 1972.

Hughes was living at the hotel then, but on the 20th floor, according to the aides, and never left his living quarters the entire time he resided in the hotel.

But Forsythe said his association with Hughes was top secret and that no one in the Hughes organization knew of it.

"He (Hughes) didn't want me to discuss what I was doing with anyone in the organization," said Forsythe's deposition.

Forsythe said he and Hughes were the only ones in the room when Hughes asked him to keep a large brown envelope which contained instructions to be followed after Hughes' death.

"I don't want nobody to know that you've got this package," Forsythe quoted Hughes as saying.

Civil Rights Plan Draws Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Carter administration plan to replace state advisory committees to the Civil Rights Commission with regional panels is "silly and shortsighted," says the chairman of the Virginia state advisory committee.

Ruth Harvey Charity told a Senate subcommittee Thursday that creation of regional panels in the place of state bodies would complicate communications and transportation. But commission staff director William L. Taylor said the change, suggested originally by the Office of Management and Budget, would allow the creation of local and state bodies within the regional framework.

Chemical Dangers Observed In Average American Homes

Warning: Your home may be hazardous to your health.

That's the word from The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a nonprofit, Washington-based research organization, which says that the typical American household is polluted by dangerous chemicals and poisons.

Scientists and other staff members at the center have prepared a guide on some of the more common dangers posed by chemicals found around the home. They offer advice on possible alternatives and ways to cut the risks.

"We tried to be positive," said Albert J. Fritsch, codirector of the center and general editor of "The Household Pollutants Guide," which will be published next month. He said the book explains that you don't have to eliminate all chemicals or other potentially dangerous items.

"It's more a question of prudence," he said. "We try to get the public to say not 'Yes' or 'No,' but 'I will use this only to a certain extent.'"

Knowledge and care are the keys to safety. Parts of some plants may be poisonous if eaten, but that doesn't mean you have to give up greenery. Just take the time to learn which plants pose a threat and choose other varieties, particularly if you have young children around the house.

Fritsch said the book stresses that there are different degrees of toxicity and distinguishes among four types of materials: those which are extremely poisonous and should never be used; those which are highly poisonous and should be used with precautions; those which are moderately toxic and should be used only when substitutes are not readily available; and those which are only slightly toxic and can be used safely as long as you do not overdo it.

Fritsch said simplifying your lifestyle to take advantage of the information in the book does not necessarily mean lowering your standard of living. "I use well over 90 percent of the suggestions," he said, "and I live a good life."

The center also has campaigned against chemicals in the environment and in the American diet. For the past three years, the group has sponsored a nationwide "Food Day" program to alert people to what center scientists say is the danger of junk food.

Now they have turned a similar critical eye on the home. The introduction to the book notes that there has been a growing awareness in recent years of ecology, pollution and occupational hazards. At the same time, the authors say, people have tended to ignore the dangers in the home which is where the average American spends 55 percent of his or her time.

"The home still remains beyond the consideration of many environmentalists," the introduction says, despite the fact that "more chemicals are found in the average home (today) than in chemical laboratories of a century ago."

According to the book's authors, "Danger lies in not only the variety, but the sheer quantity of chemicals used in the home. A few drops of a solvent may do little harm, but an open can evaporating over a period of time may be fatal to inhabitants."

The problems are made worse when products are used in enclosed spaces. Vapors from one material may linger and interact with another to produce a toxic effect. Lack of ventilation compounds the trouble.

The first step in making your home a safer place is learning where the danger lies. Make a rough floor plan of the house and go through your home carefully to see how many pollutants you have.

There are two types of pollutants — potential and actual. "An unopened can of toxic material is a potential pollutant, whereas an open one is an actual hazard," the guide says.

The center guide lists potential pollutants from A — aerosol sprays — to Z — zoological waste and disease. It includes building materials, clothing and fabric care products, furniture and floor polishes, insecticides and pesticides, kitchen and laundry products, oven cleaners, plastics, plants, solvents and metals.

Whenever you find a pollutant, mark it down on your floor plan. You may be surprised at the total. Fritsch said that over the course of the year, the average home will contain 45 aerosol sprays which could, under some conditions, be dangerous.

Once you know what you have on hand, you can go through the list. Some items may be unnecessary. Others may be old and need replacement. Still others may need to be stored differently. No matter what you keep, you should make sure you read the instructions carefully before using. If rubber gloves are recommended, use them. If the label says one-quarter of a cup of detergent is needed, don't add half a cup. And keep all chemicals out of the reach of young children.

Nearly 3,000 years ago, the Egyptians and Assyrians trained cheetahs to hunt, and the practice continued until modern times in India, says National Geographic.

Flu Vaccine Unlikely Before Disease Arrives

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major manufacturer of influenza vaccines said Friday his firm will begin production of Russian flu vaccine next week, but the shots won't be ready before the end of the present flu season.

The government's confirmation on Thursday that Russian flu has broken out in Wyoming raised fears that an epidemic could sweep the country this spring with no vaccine available to protect even the elderly and chronically ill for whom influenza can be fatal.

"We are going to start annual production next Friday," said a spokesman for Merck Sharp Dohm in West Point, Pa., "but it is not possible to have a vaccine in any quantity before June or July."

The flu season normally runs its course before May.

The Merck spokesman, Richard C. Bostwick, said his company is proceeding on the assumption that the government will ask industry to produce a vaccine containing protection against the new Russian strain for the flu season beginning this fall.

"We're expecting A-USSR (the Russian flu), perhaps in combination with A-Texas, B-Hong Kong or both," Bostwick said.

Soprano Cancels Show

MILAN, Italy (AP) — American soprano Shirley Verrett, blaming poor health, flew home and gave up her scheduled performance in Verdi's "Un Ballo in Maschera" (A Masked Ball) to be telecast to 15 countries from La Scala next Tuesday.

The A-Texas flu strain already has reached epidemic proportions in the United States this year, and the Hong Kong has plagued the nation's children for the past several years. Experts disagree on whether the two strains will have died out by next season.

Representatives from the medical and scientific communities, consumer groups and industry will meet in Washington on Monday to advise Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. on how to prepare for the upcoming flu season.

A decision is expected soon after that on what vaccine the government wants produced, how many doses, who should receive it and whether the government or private sector will accept responsibility for liability claims resulting from inoculations.

A spokesman for the nation's largest single producer of flu vaccine, Parke, Davis Co. of Detroit, said Friday the firm is working to develop a vaccine to protect against Russian flu but is still "in a very preliminary stage."

Gordon F. Goyette Jr., said Parke Davis expects to begin injecting fertilized chicken eggs with the Russian flu virus during the first week of February.

"It takes about three to four months from that point before even the first batch can be completed, and there's no way to hurry it up," Goyette said.

"The companies grow the virus in the eggs, harvest it, kill it and manufacture the vaccine from the virus."

Flu experts attending a planning session at the National Institutes of Health two weeks ago said that if the Russian flu arrives in the United States within two or three weeks it could cause a major new epidemic in the country before this season is over.

But officials of the government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, still wary after last year's abortive swine flu campaign, say there is no way to know at this point whether the new virus will spread in epidemic proportions in the next few weeks.

"The swine virus taught us that what we know best about flu is that it is unpredictable," said one CDC scientist who asked not to be identified. "Our theories about how flu viruses change already have been upset by the mere appearance of the Soviet strain, and we just can't know what it will do next."

The 75 experts at the NIH meeting earlier this month were able to agree that Russian flu would probably strike the nation this season or next, but they weren't willing to go on record with even an educated guess of which it would be.

TEN PINS' FALLING

Yet only a few had been struck! Success is not simply reaching one's aim. A bowler knows how much depends on the right "action" once the ball hits that first pin. Religion doesn't guarantee worldly success. The people who are in church every Sunday share their neighbor's hopes and dreams. But they are learning to cherish values which will make firmer their aims. They are challenged by a faith which teaches men to use constructively every achievement. The Church can help you cultivate religious convictions which will influence how you live on the way to your goals . . . and what you become when you reach them.

1968 Saw Beginning Of School Dispute

The following is a chronology of developments in the Lubbock Independent School District desegregation case:

November, 1968 — The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare charges the district with maintaining segregated schools. HEW recommends a plan for closing some schools and reassigning students. School officials reject the proposal.

October, 1969 — School officials defend their student assignment policies and neighborhood school concept at an HEW administrative hearing. HEW civil rights team reiterates previous charges, urging federal aid to Lubbock schools be curtailed.

Declared In Compliance
June, 1970 — Hearings examiner rejects the HEW team's argument and declares that the school system is in compliance with the law.

August, 1970 — The U.S. Justice Department files suit against Lubbock schools. U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward orders implementation of a limited version of the HEW plan, affecting east side secondary schools and no elementary schools. Woodward retains indefinite jurisdiction in the case.

March, 1971 — At the Justice Department's request, Woodward tells school officials to expedite the desegregation of faculty.

Changes Approved
1971-77 — School officials file annual reports with Woodward and the Justice Department on student and faculty assignment. Periodically the district requests minor changes in attendance zones and permission to build such facilities as Mahon, Williams and Ballenger schools. The department presents no objections and Woodward approves the zone changes and construction plans. The Texas Education Agency yearly informs the court that although there are racially identifiable schools in Lubbock, the district is complying with Woodward's 1970 order.

March, 1977 — Following the passage of an $11.9 million bond program, school officials ask Woodward for permission on several projects, including construction of five new schools in predominantly white areas outside Loop 289.

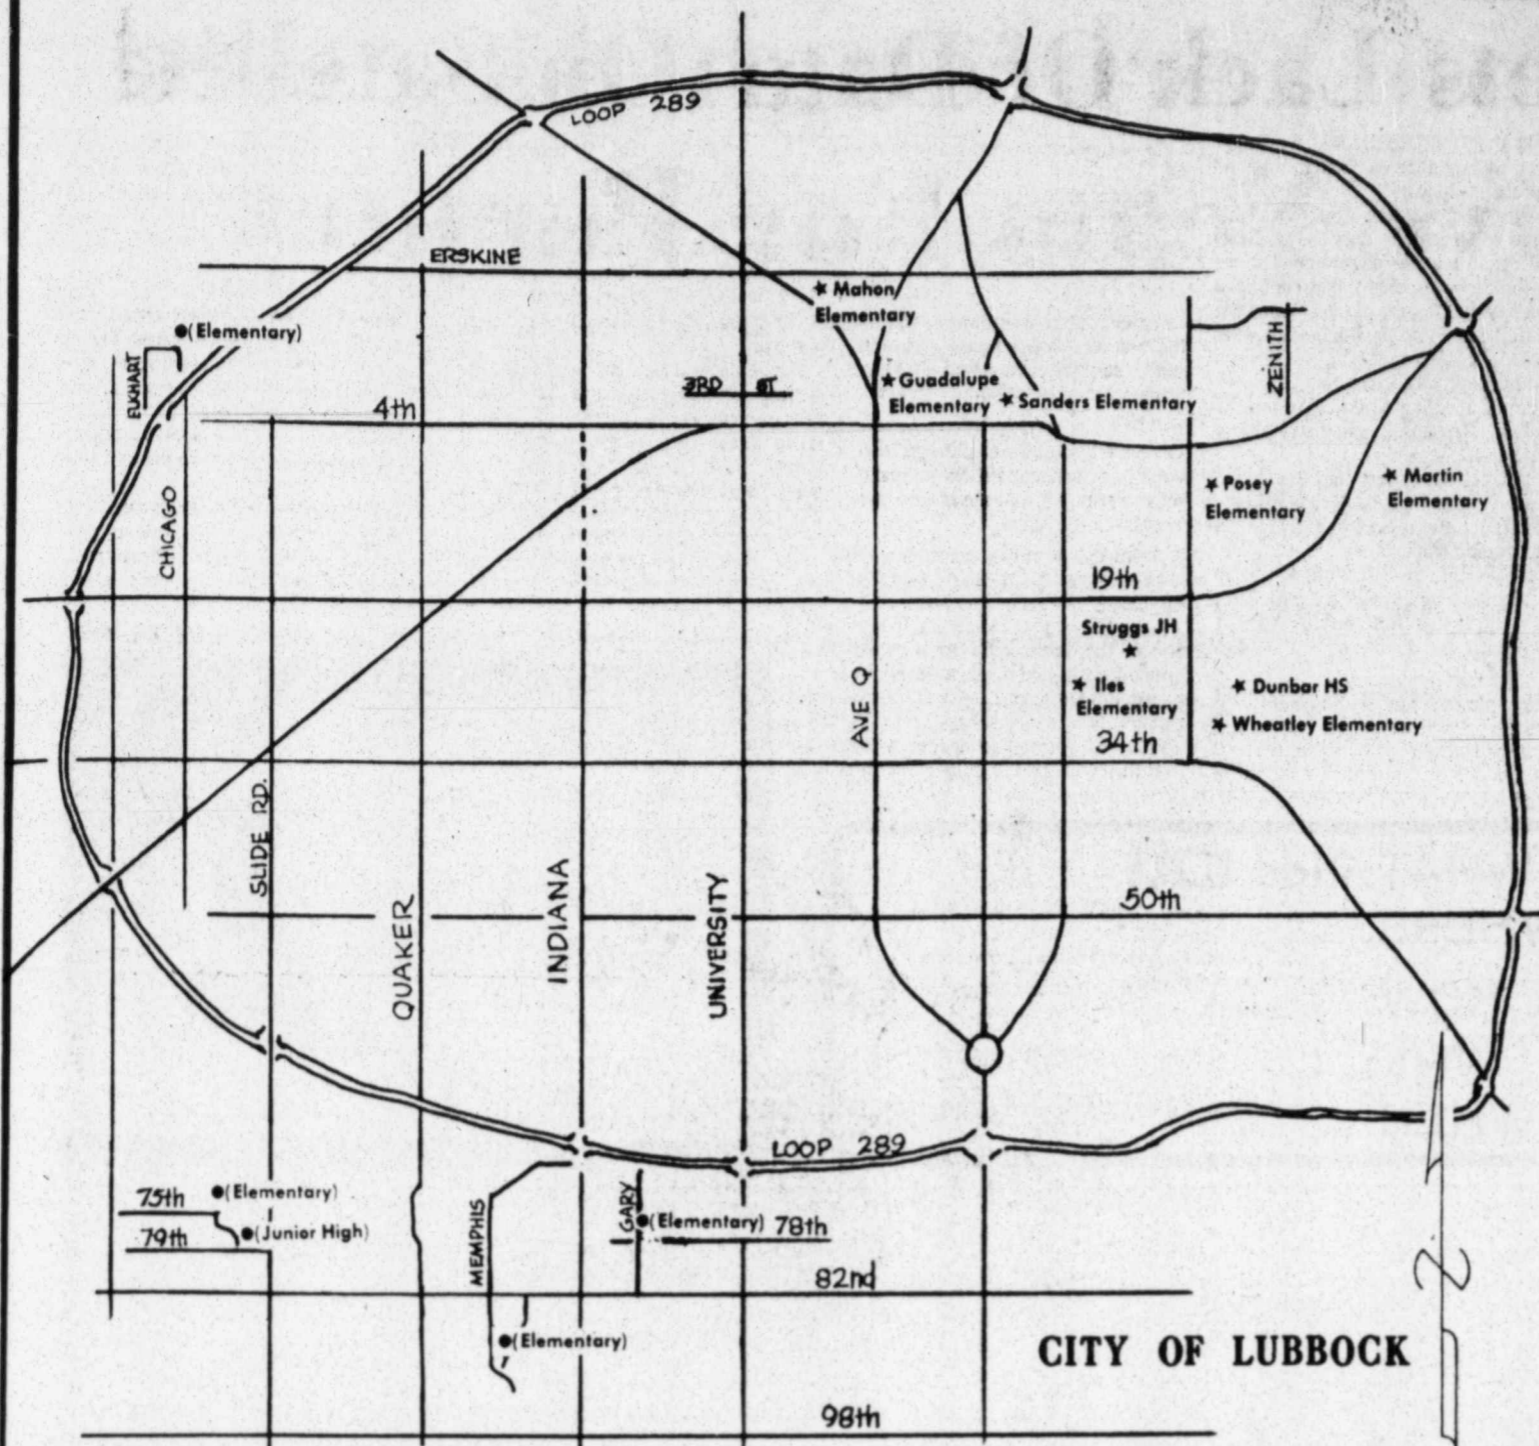

Building Ban Asked
April, 1977 — The Justice Department asks Woodward to block the building program, saying school officials should consider alternatives which would enhance desegregation. Also, the department requests that the district be required to implement a systemwide desegregation plan.

November-December, 1977 — School officials present their case for new facilities. The Justice Department details its allegations of widespread racial discrimination by the district. The district makes a rebuttal.

Jan. 27, 1978 — Woodward gives school officials two months to propose a plan to desegregate nine high-minority, under-enrolled schools, including seven elementaries, on the city's east and north sides. New construction is held in abeyance until that plan is formulated. Attorneys consider the order a compromise between the district's position and the Justice Department's demands for a systemwide plan.

LUBBOCK SCHOOLS AFFECTED — Stars represent the nine schools U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward ordered school officials to desegregate. He also wants their enrollments increased, but he left it up to school authorities to propose solutions.

The dots represent proposed sites for new schools Woodward has held in abeyance. He said he will not rule on the issue of new construction until a desegregation plan is formulated.

Court Orders School Desegregation Plan

these situations where someone is 100 percent right. The law is amenable."
Woodward's decision could be appealed to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. But Gurwin said the department would plan no such action until after Lubbock's new desegregation program is formulated.
Of the nine schools cited by Woodward, all but Mahon also were found by the judge in 1970 to be remnants of illegal segregation. Under the desegregation doctrine of the time, he left the elementary schools alone and simply ordered expansion of the Dunbar and Struggs attendance zones to include more whites.
Lubbock is in its eighth year under that previous order. Because of the 1970 action, about 300 east side secondary students are being bused, according to school district estimates.
In Friday's 38-page opinion, however, Woodward said the 1970 remedy did not go far enough. The number of whites who showed up at Dunbar and Struggs fell "far short" of projections, and subsequent white flight has further eroded the old integration plan, he said.

Also, the doctrine exempting elementary schools from such a plan "is no longer applicable" in light of more recent court decisions, Woodward said.
The opinion may mean a more extensive remedy than merely enlarging attendance zones will be required to "cure the constitutional violations" at the nine cited schools. School officials would not speculate on the prospect of further busing.
However, school authorities have been working on alternatives to forced busing. One idea is to place advanced academic programs at Dunbar, making the school a "magnet" for the voluntary transfer of whites from other high schools.
Over the years, the district also has considered closing one or more of the under-enrolled schools in question and dispersing students that way. For instance, school officials have studied the possibility of phasing out Sanders, with just 143 students, because a new interstate highway is expected to run through that northside campus.

Woodward found 22 of the city's public schools to be "racially identifiable," with minority enrollments at each exceeding 70 percent.
He said 13 of these schools "did not result in any degree from any discriminatory act or segregative intent on the part of the defendants." Concentrations of black and Mexican-American students there were produced "solely from a changing population for which the school authorities were not in any way responsible," Woodward said.
But the remaining nine schools are different. They were part of a "fixed policy" to segregate minorities years ago, Woodward said.
And even after the U.S. Supreme Court in 1954 outlawed such segregation, the school district "gerrymandered" attendance zones to continue keeping the races apart, he said.
Woodward said local school authorities are "much better equipped than the court to prepare the details of any remedial plan" for the nine schools.
He stressed, however, that "care should be taken...that the burden of carrying out any plan will not be a disproportionate burden on any race."
Each school should "reflect the racial makeup" of the district as a whole — an "impossible ideal to accomplish," Woodward said. He said he would settle for less provided that the district's plan "will have some reasonable assurance of continued as well as initial success."
Woodward told the district to study the effect of proposed new construction "on the racial makeup in the Lubbock school system... It may very well be that this new construction will be a useful 'tool' in implementing desegregation of the schools in question."

Compromise Viewed By Most Officials

Here's a sampling of what attorneys, school officials and others had to say about the opinion issued Friday by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward:
Steve Gurwin, U.S. Justice Department attorney: "The school board claimed no segregation and we claimed the opposite. Neither side got entirely what it wanted. Neither got the edge."
Gurwin said the case is "essentially the school board's now. The judge is requiring the schools to be desegregated, but he didn't say how." Possible appeals will wait until a final desegregation plan for the nine schools cited by Woodward is ordered, he said.
Johnson, Waters Mum
Tom Johnson, school attorney, as he left Woodward's courtroom: "One reason he (the judge) had that session in there now was to keep people from talking."
Charles Waters, school board president: "I have no initial reaction. I'm a lawyer. I know better than to comment."
Waters said the school board will convene in executive session Tuesday to study the ramifications of Woodward's opinion. As for possible desegregation plans, he said: "We've been thinking about it but not acting on it. We couldn't set about on a desegregation plan until the judge spoke. We have no plans in hand now. The judge points out in his decision exactly what he wants accomplished."
— JEFF SOUTH

Robert Thomas, president of the Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association: "Most of us are relieved — and surprised. We hadn't expected quite as lenient a ruling. It's a relief to know we don't have to look at a total citywide busing program."
"I'm glad Judge Woodward gave the district the opportunity to work out a solution for ourselves."
Tom Burtis, public relations chairman and education committee member for the local NAACP: "Frankly I'm concerned. If the school district implements a plan that addresses just these nine schools, and ignores most of the predominantly white schools in the district, the process of white flight and resegregation will start all over again."
"Don't Panic," Parents Told
"Within three or four years, we might be right back where we started from."
Burtis said he still advocates a "systemwide remedy" so that each school in the city reflects a racial balance. That kind of plan, he said, eliminates the incentive for white families trying to escape integrated schools.
Elsie Smith, president of the Lubbock City Council of Parents and Teachers: "My advice to parents is, don't panic. Let's let the school system — our elected officials — call the shots. We need to be calm and rational about the situation. We can't lose our heads over it."
— JEFF SOUTH

Busing Fears

dawn hours and in the evening. It's a waste of time."
Mrs. John Blair of 4417 55th St. said her family would move if their sixth- and third-grade children were to be bused. "I don't mind blacks coming over here but if our kids had to be bused, we would move out of the city."
Her husband works in construction and the possibility of moving is no idle threat, she indicated.
Likewise Janice Adams of 4702 60th St. vowed, "If we have to move from Lubbock to keep our kids from being bused, we'll do it."
The Adamses are owners of a business here and have a youngster enrolled in the second grade.
Sherry Mitchell of 4421 77th St. suggested the Lubbock school system adopt Garland's system. "Students there can choose the schools they go to and the Justice Department can't do anything about that," she said.
Her second-grade child may go into a private school if not allowed to continue at his present school.

Key Issues In Ruling

What about the proposed new schools?
Woodward delayed any decision on the proposed construction and renovation of schools until a new desegregation plan is submitted to the court. He asked school officials to look at using new construction to enhance desegregation.
What happens now?
School officials have until April 1 to propose a new desegregation plan for Woodward's consideration. Woodward wants such a plan implemented with the start of the 1978-79 school year. If he disagrees with the district's proposal, Woodward could formulate a plan of his own. Any plan ordered by the judge could be appealed to a higher court by the Justice Department or school district.

Carter Raps Soviets Lack Of Data On Satellite

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter criticized the Soviet Union on Friday for not supplying the United States with more information about the failing nuclear-powered spy satellite that crashed into the Earth's atmosphere Tuesday morning.

But, he conceded that Soviet officials gave the United States "about what we would have given them under a similar circumstance."

The president's comments — his first on the record about the satellite — were in contrast to the warm words of his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski. Carter's aide went out of his way, in announcing the satellite problem Tuesday, to praise Soviet cooperation with U.S. officials.

"In retrospect, it may be that the Soviets could have given us more information," the president told a group of newspaper editors and two directors of the American Press Institute interviewing him at the White House.

"I can't say whether they gave us all the facts. But I think it was handled properly; certainly by us," Carter said.

The president and his press secretary said it was likely that questions raised by the satellite failure would be brought up in diplomatic discussions with the Soviets.

Asked whether he was satisfied with the assistance the Soviet embassy has given to the administration, the president said: "That is hard to say. I made the decision myself to contact the Soviets. We ... told them unofficially that we would not try to capitalize on their misfortune in a propaganda way."

The problem with the satellite was discovered in December. On Jan. 12, Brzezinski began a series of communications with the Soviet Embassy that continued through early Tuesday morning when the satellite rushed into the atmosphere over northern Canada.

The incident was brought up at an early-morning meeting Friday between the president, Brzezinski, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

Carter told the editors that the United States monitored the satellite constantly and shared with the Soviets estimates on when it would come down.

The Russians, in turn, "did tell us in general what kind of reactor it was. They told us that their best estimate was it would burn as it entered the atmosphere," he said.

The president said he had "a difficult decision to make in how much publicity to bring to this satellite because it is almost impossible to let people know the facts without the threat being exaggerated."

Carter said the question of safeguards in space "is something that we have not yet addressed with the Soviets, but I am sure it is something that we will address."

Carter said it was time to re-examine the question of atomic explosions in space, prohibited under a longstanding treaty.

"I believe that this recent incident with the Soviet satellite has shown that we don't have an adequate guaranteed safety requirement on nuclear fuel in space," he said.

"I think that we now are in the process of deciding what we can do to minimize this danger from space," he said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said that the satellite's failure will be brought up in diplomatic discussions between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"It's safe for you to assume a matter like this will be the subject of discussions," Powell said. "It will be discussed with us and the Soviets."

But Powell said at the daily White House news briefing that he did not know what form the discussions would take, when they would take place, or what specifically would be considered.

Since Tuesday, Canadian and U.S. experts have made aerial and ground searches for debris from the satellite, which had been believed to be causing a patch of "extremely dangerous" radiation in north central Canada.

But on Friday scientists said the radioactive readings were not caused by a man-made substance after all.

"It is unlikely there is anything on the ground" from the downed satellite, Admiral R.H. Falls, chief of Canadian defense staff, told reporters at a briefing.

Airborne sweeps of the area where the Cosmos satellite fell from space have turned up radioactive readings in five areas, Falls said, and at least one reading was caused by an outcropping of natural uranium.

Falls said the analysis of the radioactive readings established Friday afternoon that they were not from man-made substances.

Donald Jamieson, Canada's external affairs minister, has said the Soviet Union has offered to provide any technical assistance necessary to contain any radioactive debris found. There has been no indication the Canadian government would accept the offer.

But Jamieson said his government would seek international talks to develop safeguards for such nuclear-powered satellites.

Foreign Firms Sought For Texas Plant Sites

AUSTIN (UPI) — The state is doing all it can to encourage European industries to consider Texas as a location for their foreign plants, Texas Industrial Commission Executive Director James Harwell said Friday.

Harwell told the commission during its quarterly meeting that West Germany has been selected as the target for a two-week reverse investment mission in late February.

Harwell said more than 5,000 major German manufacturers have been contacted and those interested in a Texas location have been invited to talk to the 12 industrial developers comprising the Texas mission.

"To date we've had 27 companies show a definite interest in locating a manufacturing plant in Texas and we haven't even left the country," he said.

"More than 20 other states presently have overseas offices working with these firms on a day-to-day basis. We are hoping to get positive results in two weeks."

Harwell said there is as much opportunity for gaining plant locations from overseas companies as there is from American-based plants relocating or expanding overseas.

"We intend to do all we can to see that Texas gets its fair share of these foreign locations," he said.

A delinquent tax drive by the city-school tax office, using the city's in-house computer system, was authorized Friday by the Lubbock Independent School District Board of Trustees.

The proposal, said board vice president Bob McKelvy, will allow tax suits to be filed "just as quickly as the computer can spit them out."

The trustees also decided that summer vacation for Lubbock's 32,000 public school students will end a week before Labor Day — even though some school trustees say such an early start of classes is inconvenient for parents and uncomfortable for children.

On a split vote today, the board set Aug. 29 as the first class day for the 1978-79 school term. Trustees had wanted to begin classes after Labor Day (Sept. 4) but found that delay would have reduced students' Christmas break by nearly a week.

Also at its monthly meeting, the board: —Agreed to lease Lubbock County's new punch-card voting machines for the April 1 board election, which Supt. Ed Irons had proposed be held with paper ballots, will be consolidated with Lubbock City Council voting.

—Voted to keep elementary school libraries open for summer programs through Aug. 11, instead of July 14 as originally proposed. The board also approved opening the city's junior high school gymnasiums for student and adult activities for three nights a week during the 1978 summer.

School calendars have been a controversial topic in Lubbock, where classes traditionally have started before Labor Day because of state requirements for 180 student days and 10 teacher in-service workdays each academic year.

For the 1977-78 year, the state legislature reduced the number of class days to 175, and for next year, teacher workdays will be cut to just eight.

The school board had hoped those state-mandated changes would give the district an opportunity to delay the start of classes until after Labor Day. Such a delay, they felt, would relieve students of having to attend classrooms which are not air-conditioned during hot August days, reduce pre-Labor Day attendance problems for still vacationing families and better coincide with the Texas Tech University calendar.

Irons devised a public school calendar to meet the requirements for a post-Labor Day start by opening classes on Sept. 5. But his Administrative Council, Lubbock Educators Association and Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association recommended an alternative, beginning classes a week before Labor Day on Aug. 29.

They said a pre-Labor Day start would allow students two weeks, rather than one, for Christmas vacation; allow for a "more orderly end of the year for graduation and other senior activities"; and get the first grading quarter completed before the Thanksgiving break.

The proposal also gives students an extra day's rest at the end of the year before summer school classes begin.

On a 4-2 vote (board secretary Joan Ervin was ill and could not attend), trustees approved Irons' recommendation. Board members Giles "Buddy" Forbes and Monte Hasie dissented, saying schools should not start until after Labor Day even if Christmas vacation must be shortened.

The swing vote was Harold Harriger's. He strongly advocated a post-Labor Day start of classes — even to the point of suggesting teacher workdays be held on Saturdays during the year — but eventually sided with the majority on an Aug. 29 opening day.

Under the approved calendar, teachers are to report Aug. 23. Christmas vacation is scheduled Dec. 20 through Jan. 2.

Irons had recommended that the school district stay with paper ballots for its April 1 election, even though the city will be using a punch-card system. Changing voting media, Irons said, would require going through the U.S. Justice Department — something he wanted to avoid.

The city, however, urged the school board to use punch-card machines, saying the district could save about $1,200 with that system. Irons said the savings would be only about $173.

The board voted unanimously to go with the punch-card system. Board president Charles Waters said he doubts the Justice Department, which has the final say in election matters under the federal Voting Rights Act, will object.

"Paper ballots are so archaic they ought to be objecting to paper ballots," Waters said. He added: "I'd certainly hate the schools to be behind the county and city" in its election procedures.

School Trustee Election Set

Three candidates, including previously unannounced Donna Muldrew, filed for school board posts Friday. And incumbent Place 1 board secretary Joan Ervin disclosed she will not seek re-election.

The flurry of developments came as Lubbock Independent School District trustees officially set the election for April 1.

Lynn Stafford, an ex-teacher and now part-time secretary and community volunteer, was alone in filing for Place 1.

Place 2, being vacated by board vice president Bob McKelvy, drew two candidates — attorney Brad Crawford, who had announced his campaign intentions Thursday, and Mrs. Muldrew, who taught two years at Estacado High School and is now an instructor in the division of architecture at Texas Tech University.

"My candidacy for a position on the board of trustees is evidence of my desire to help provide our children with the best education possible," Mrs. Muldrew, 36, of 5702 77th St., said in a prepared statement.

"In order to make sound policies, there needs to be a diversity of interests, abilities and viewpoints represented on the board. At this time, the viewpoints of a mother and educator are needed to bring about a healthy balance," she said.

Mrs. Ervin, an executive secretary for IBM and the first black elected to the board, was ill and unable to attend today's session. But she told The Avalanche-Journal in a telephone interview:

"I don't plan to seek re-election to the school trusteeship. I don't, however, intend this to end my political career."

Mrs. Ervin, active in various church and community activities, said it is "quite possible" she will run for some other office. A decision on that may be made in the "near future," she said.

"I just feel that having served eight years (on the school board), it's time for new blood and new ideas," Mrs. Ervin said. "I don't feel we (long-time incumbents) should totally monopolize" the same offices term after term.

Mrs. Ervin said she has "thoroughly enjoyed my eight years of service" on the See THREE Page 12

Page Files Justice Post Candidacy

Former state representative candidate Lee Page Friday filed papers in the county clerk's office announcing his intention to run for Justice of the Peace Pct. 1, Place 2.

The post currently is held by Charles Smith, who has not yet made his coming political plans known.

Page ran as a Republican in 1976 for the District 75-B state House seat won by Democrat Froy Salinas.

He said today he is switching parties and will seek the JP job as a Democrat. Page, 31, of 3105-B 33rd St., declined to comment on his reasons for the move from the GOP to the Democratic side of the fence.

He said his decision to run for justice of the peace is "a combination of many things."

"I was going to sit this one (election year) out. But I have been contacted by a number of Democrats in the past few weeks asking me to run," he said.

"A number of people felt it is time to start a trend of having younger people run for justice of the peace. Most of the JPs in the past have been retired people or people of that age," Page said.

He said his decision to run was not based on any personal feelings about the incumbent.

Page is a former Texas Tech University student who was in the U.S. Navy three and one-half years and served a year with the Marines in Vietnam.

He has been a chairman of the Independent Cattlemen's Association, and is a former agribusinessman.

Currently, he said, he is advertising manager of "Living for Lubbock" magazine and also is employed at the Aztec Nuevo Restaurant.

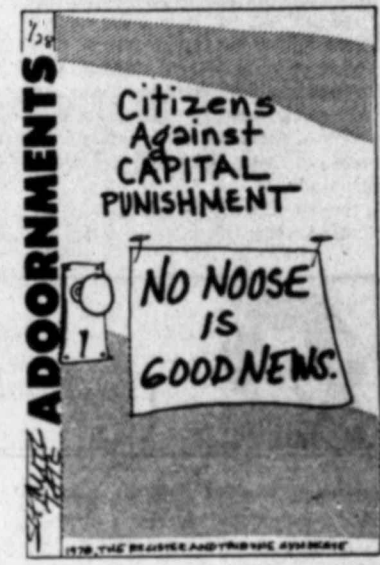

In papers filed in the county clerk's office, he designated Alan Black of 3110 33rd St. as his campaign treasurer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saving up heat from summer months to use as fuel to warm the house in the winter is the concept behind the Annual Cycle Energy System (ACES) house, the National Geographic Society reports.

COMPLETE STOCK MARKET INDEX

Stock Market Closes Mixed
NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Friday, drifting through a sluggish session after its sharp decline the day before.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 9.10 points to a new 33-month low on Thursday, managed a 78 gain to 764.12.

That left the average with a 12.82 decline for the week, and a net loss of 67.05 points over the first four weeks of 1978.

Declines outnumbered advances by about a 4-3 spread in the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange, and the exchange's composite index edged .01 to 49.06.

Volume on the Big Board slowed to 17.60 million shares from 19.60 million Thursday.

Analysts noted some relief over the Federal Reserve's weekly statistical report at the close on Thursday.

Fearsome Threesome Set For Hub Visit

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Gerald Myers knows the problem he faces; it's as simple as A-B-C:

A... Marvin Delph.
B... Ron Brewer.
C... Sidney Moncrief.

And the problem can be put off no longer.

The threesome—more fearsome than the Three Musketeers, capable of creating more havoc than the Marx Brothers, able to show more speed than the Triple Crown but in no way akin to the Three Stooges—will lead the nationally ranked Arkansas delegation into Lubbock Coliseum tonight.

And, prospects are for an awaiting throng of capacity proportions when the Razorbacks and Texas Tech collide at 7:30 p.m. Lubbock Coliseum has a listed capacity of 10,000, and every seat could be filled to see this battle for contention in the Southwest Conference.

Moncrief, Brewer and Delph led the Razorbacks to the Southwest Conference championship a year ago, the first time in more than two decades that a team had waded through the league schedule without a loss.

Arkansas has one rip in its britches, Tech two, and the winner will have the better chance of overtaking Texas in the battle for the championship hardware.

And to have a chance to keep its home winning streak intact—its last loss here was to Arkansas last season—Tech must stop the threesome.

"They're three super players that we'll have trouble matching up with," Myers admitted Friday. "We can match up with two of them, but the third will be the problem.

"We'll have to use a smaller guard on one of them, and no matter who it is, it'll be a mismatch. They all have speed, quickness and size," said Myers. "They're all 6-4, which will create a problem. When we put a guard (6-1 Geoff Huston) on one of them, we're giving away three inches."

Moncrief, Brewer and Delph are hitting 18, 17 and 16 points, respectively, an indication of the troubles others have had with them. And Myers only has to remember last year here to shudder. Tech had commanded the lead late in the game only to see the Razorbacks tie it, then Brewer drilled a 27-footer from the right side with just four seconds to go to put the invaders up. They added a free throw for the 41-38 final count.

"I'm sure it will be a fairly low-scoring game, maybe not as low as last year," said Myers. "Probably in the 60's. But, for us, the key is defending them. We have to hold those guys down."

Arkansas plays with five, however, with the two inside men being 6-7 Jim Counce and 6-11 Steve Schall, with Schall picking up 11 points a game.

Arkansas arrives with a 6-1 conference record, as well as the No. 4 spot in national rankings. Tech is 5-2 in conference, following the 84-71 thumping at the University of Houston last Wednesday.

"That came on the heels of the Raiders' solid 71-58 win over A&M. And maybe that Aggie win had something to do with the poor performance at Houston, Myers mused.

"We could have been a little competitive, people talking about how good we looked on television (against A&M).

"We were a little down (in workouts) after the Houston game, but our guys realize they can't dwell on a loss."

"We're going to that situation where we have to play physically, with strong determination. I know Arkansas has lost one game and has had some close games (beating Baylor in overtime last Monday). But, anybody that can beat Houston by 20 (to open conference Jan. 8), they're the fourth best in the country as far as I'm concerned."

Myers will continue to work with the lineup of Huston and 6-3 Mike Edwards outside, 6-5 Kent Williams and 6-7 Mike Russell at forwards and 6-9 Joe Baxter at center.

Also today, Rice will play at A&M in an afternoon, televised contest, with Texas going to Dallas to play SMU and TCU playing Baylor in Waco in night games.

Tech Women Take On Fourth Rated Queens

The Texas Tech women's basketball team will try to average one of its three losses this season when it hosts Wayland Baptist's Flying Queens at 4:30 p.m. in Lubbock Coliseum.

The Flying Queens, ranked fourth in the nation with a 14-2 record, dealt Tech a 95-43 defeat in Plainview Jan. 19. The snapped an 11-game winning streak for Tech, which is 20-3 for the and rated fourth among women's cage teams in Texas.

Tech coach Gay Benson believes her team will put on a better performance against Wayland this time.

"Our players knew Wayland is super, and we were just higher than a kite," she said. "You can't play basketball when you're up tight like that. They had a band and a large crowd there, and we're not used to that either."

"I think we should be more down to earth this time. The players realize their mistake and should be more ready to play."

Benson believes Wayland is better than it has been in the previous few years, although it consistently has fine teams.

"They're better than they've been in a long time. They aren't just one team deep. They've got 10 or 12 players that can play, and they have good all-around ability. They're a real well-balanced club."

Wayland, which was ranked No. 1 in the nation until suffering consecutive losses at the hands of second-ranked North Carolina State and 10th-rated Montclair (N.J.) State, is led in scoring by Jill Rankin's 13.2 average. However, all five starters are scoring in double figures, attesting to the Queens' balanced attack.

Marie Kocurek is averaging 13.6 points a game, while Kathy Harston has an 11.8

norm, Breena Caldwell an 11.3 and Valerie Goodwin a 10.2.

D'Lynn Brown, a sophomore, leads Tech in scoring with an 11.2 average, followed by Karla Schuette (9.6) and Marilyn Payton (9.5).

Benson, in her initial year as Tech coach, has naturally been pleased with the team's performance.

"I hadn't watched much college ball when I was coaching in high school (Slaton), so I didn't know exactly what to expect. But I had a personal goal of winning 65 to 70 per cent of our games this year and being 13-2 at the Christmas break, which we hit on the nose."

"Our team has two or three times as much confidence now as it did at the beginning of the season."

Benson has been disappointed with the team's outside shooting this season, but says it has played pretty sound defense, "and that's probably our best asset right now."

Midwestern Cagers Bop Chaparrals In 97-82 Tilt

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Midwestern State's deadeye band of Indians penned Chapter 18 in Lubbock Christian College's manual of "How To Lose A Game" Friday night.

The Chaparrals matched the taller visitors' field goal for field goal—well, almost, trailing only by one in that department.

Still, Coach Darrell Price and the Chaparral faithful saw LCC's losing streak stretched to 15 games as Midwestern put on a spurt at the 15 minute mark of the game to break open a close contest and take a 97-82 Texoma Conference decision.

Now 1-18, the Chaps will attempt to get that first long-awaited victory of 1978 tonight when they host College of Santa Fe, which lost a 100-88 decision to Eastern New Mexico Friday, at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Friday, it seemed that the Indians camped on the foul line in the whistle-infected contest. And a check of the records showed they did, hitting 27 of 34 bonus tries, including 21 of their first 22 attempts.

Although LCC committed only four more infractions—30-26—the Chaps received only 20 tries at the charity stripe and visited that spot just six times in the last half.

The Chaps, who are now 0-8 in TAC play and 0-3 in South Zone action of District 8 (NAIA), never led and managed just one tie—that at 44.

That, however, is not to say the game wasn't close for the first 25 plus minutes. It was. Midwestern tried to blow the game open in the first half, but LCC twice came from eight points back to cut the gap to three, but the Indians opened a seven-point advantage (46-39) at intermission.

LCC made a serious bid to take the lead at the beginning of the second half, cutting it to 49-45 when Lamar Sampy hit his third straight baseline jumper with 18:11 left.

And when Brian Fortner connected from the lane with 15:32 left, the Chaps trailed only 52-51.

But there the roof fell in. Henry Crawford and Bo Lanter combined for seven points as the Tribe ran off eight straight

Mutual Nabs SWC Rights

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference awarded the exclusive radio broadcast rights to SWC football games to the Mutual Broadcasting System on Friday, ending the Exxon Network's 44-season domination of the rights.

Mutual reportedly obtained a five-year contract for more than $1 million. The agreement guarantees the SWC of more widespread coverage area.

Exxon had limited its broadcasts to the Texas and a few stations in New Mexico and Arkansas, while Mutual plans to carry the games via more than 250 stations into a nine-state region including Arkansas, Arizona, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas.

In addition, several SWC games will be carried nationwide throughout the season in conjunction with Mutual's 11 Notre Dame games and four "wild card" games.

Mutual had earlier obtained exclusive radio broadcast rights to the Dallas Cowboys games and plans to broadcast them into the same nine-state area.

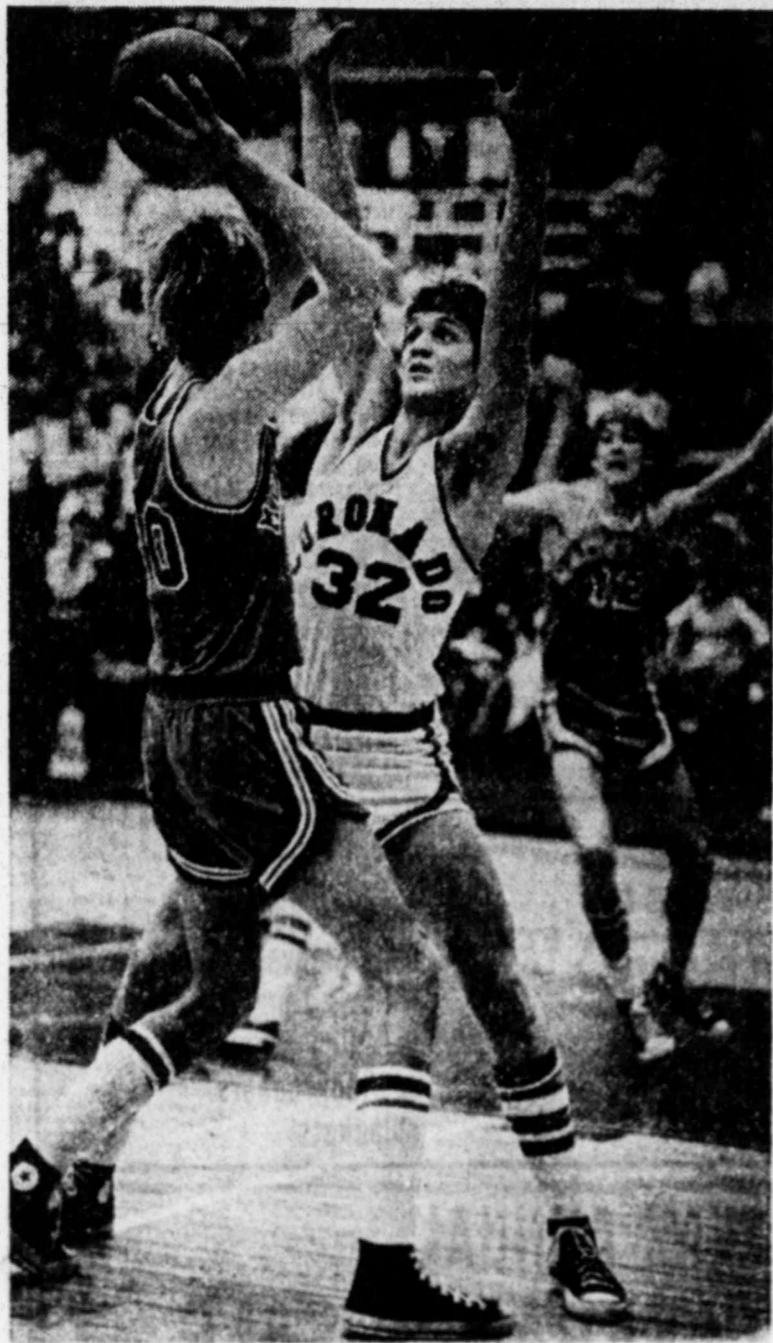

During the first three years of the SWC agreement, however, Mutual will not broadcast Arkansas games in the state of Arkansas, allowing the school to honor its contract with the Arkansas Radio Network.

The ARN is separate from Exxon's network that included the other eight SWC schools.

Mutual officials said the network might present additional SWC programming, including basketball games and might broadcast selected football games on a tape-delayed television basis.

MHS Dumps Coronado

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Either Monterey's basketball team won the track meet or Monterey's track team won the basketball game. Take your pick, the Plainsmen runners were the winners.

And these guys are under the supervision of the same old coach Joe Michalka who earned the reputation of coaching a tempo that's slower than Heinz Ketchup. But Friday night in the Coronado gym with the District 4-AAAA first-half cage honors at stake, Monterey was running Coronado ragged in the first quarter and was capturing a 56-48 victory. Well, it's probably not Michalka's style to move so fast, but the veteran coach doesn't own any 6-5, 250-pound trees as he possessed in his gray-haired days. This latest Plainsmen team contains players who look thin enough to pass as No. 2 lead pencils. They have to run just to keep away from the contact.

Monterey didn't begin this season the way it started Friday night's Coronado game. MHS owned a 6-8 season slate in mid-December. Now, the Plainsmen have won five in a row (their longest winning streak) and eight of the last nine, plus the first-half district title.

"People don't realize the schedule we play isn't a patsy schedule. Consequently, the people wondered what was wrong with Monterey for awhile. But we had three starters who played JV ball last year and they've needed time... You might call it pressure maturity, I guess," the MHS coach said.

Michalka felt his running game went a long way in deciding his team's latest triumph. The late-arriving official allowed the large gathering of spectators enough time to sit down and watch Monterey start running. By the end of the first quarter, the Plainsmen had run up a 14-4 lead. The hosts cut the margin to 6 points with less than two minutes to play but MHS never tossed in its cards.

"We didn't fold like we would early in the year. I thought we kept control of the game and got on the boards real well," Michalka said.

Meanwhile, Coronado coach Jimmy Fullerton agreed that Monterey's 28-19 rebound edge meant a lot but added his Mustangs lingered through a costly cold spell at the start of the night. Coronado was two for 11 from the field in the first quarter but finished with 20 of 49 field goals. Monterey opened the first stanza 7 of 13 and finished above 50 percent again (21 of 38).

"We couldn't get anything to fall early. But you have to give credit to Monterey. They withstood the pressure and hit the free throws that counted," said Fullerton, who never would alibi about the absence of senior guard Mike Higgins from the CHS starting lineup.

Higgins' replacement, John Biddle, hit six of 11 from the field for 12 points. Eight of those 12 came in the second quarter when Coronado tried to keep the margin close. Biddle's shot from the left corner before the buzzer narrowed the deficit to 27-20 at halftime.

Monterey never seemed in great danger after the first quarter, though. During those early minutes, 6-5 postman Chuck Perry canned three buckets from short range, forward Craig Ehlo added two short shots while captains David Davidson and Tony Hamby each sank one baseline jump shot apiece.

The Plainsmen seemed most effective by beating Coronado's 1-3-1 zone defense down the floor while Monterey's 2-3 zone stymied Coronado's inside game badly. One obvious example of Coronado's short-range problems was 6-4 post Steve Ahlenius, who failed to score after collecting 23 points Tuesday night at Plainview.

Davidson and Ehlo topped all scorers with 18 and 15 points, respectively. Forward Bill Shockley paced the Mustangs with 14, including 8 valuable points in Coronado's fourth-quarter rally.

CHS trailed 52-46 after Shockley's short bank shot with 1:20 to play. But the pressing Mustangs fouled Ehlo in the backcourt with 1:01 left and the junior canned two foul shots to increase the lead to eight.

Monterey finishes the first half 4-0 and 15-11 while CHS ends the half 2-2 and 8-16 overall.

Estacado Waltzes Past Brownfield Unit 103-56

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Let's put it this way: Chances are you wouldn't want your sister to marry the Estacado offense.

And for a good reason, too. Shoot, they're a bunch of ruffians. Just ask the Brownfield Cubs.

What started as just another Estacado win, turned out to be cruel and unusual punishment for the Cubs during the District 3-AAA matchup Friday night in the EHS gym with the Matadors.

When it was all said and done and the Matadors had put up the last of their 98 shots, Estacado had come out on top 103-56.

Estacado coach J.J. Wood, no stranger when it comes to turning a phrase, leaned back in a metal chair after the romp and explained things like this: "Every now and then a team just has one of those games where everything goes right. We had ours tonight. It is sort of contagious, I guess."

No doubt the EHS mentor wishes the "hot streak" will continue through next Tuesday night when the Mats meet Crosstown rival Dunbar for what could be the key game in the loop chase.

Estacado upped its season record to 21-2 and is 1-0 in second-half play. Brownfield fell to 4-18 for the year and 0-2 in the loop's wars.

For Estacado, Willie Powell, who collected four superb dunk shots along the way, wound up with 33 points to lead all scorers. The 6-3 leaper canned 15 points in the fourth period which saw the Matadors score 30 tallies.

The Matadors had little trouble opening up the game early on the outmanned Cubs and held a comfortable 47-24 advantage at the halftime break. In the second half, EHS outpointed its guests 56-32. (Twelve of Brownfield's 32 second-half points were collected at the foul line.)

In fact, the only place the Cubs did dominate Estacado at was the line where they connected on 14 points, compared to four for EHS. Estacado canned four of those free throws during the third period.

While the Estacado offense was commanding authority on its end of the court, the defense was doing the same on the opposite side of the gym.

A swarming Matador defense forced the Cubs into so many turnovers that Mama Pepperidge would have been a might jealous. In all, the Cubs, who had trouble even handling the ball, turned it over 29 times. Estacado also showed its superior jumping ability by collecting six blocks to go along with 61 rebounds.

"The thing that impressed me was the way we were able to move the ball inside so easily on them," Wood explained. "A lot of times we were so wide open it was frightening."

Of the 49 buckets hit by Estacado, 18 were of the layup type. The others were from the air, 20 feet and beyond.

Hitting in double figures for EHS were Mike Chatham with 15 points, Alvin Harris with 12, and Dewey Turner and Freddie Ivory, both with 10 points.

Pacing Brownfield was Kerry Cranfill's 20 points.

Havlicek To Retire

BOSTON (AP)—John Havlicek, one of the greatest players in National Basketball Association history in 16 years with the Boston Celtics, is expected to announce Sunday his retirement at the end of the current season, The Associated Press learned Friday night.

The Celtics announced a news conference will be held Sunday before an afternoon game with the Golden State Warriors, but all front office staffers refused to hint at the nature of the announcement.

Cooper Girls Trip Dunbar

Cooper girls, paced by Cinda Ethridge's 20 points, dropped Dunbar 55-34 Friday night.

Wanda Young netted 17 for Dunbar.

Cooper grabbed a 14-9 lead after the first period and held a 34-23 advantage at the intermission.

Cooper improved its record to 11-14, and Dunbar is still winless for the season.

points—Sampy was on the bench during this time—and led 60-51 with 13:59 left.

Sampy halted the streak at 13:43 after returning to the game, but the Chaps could come no closer than 12 in the final 13 minutes.

Despite the fact the Chaps allowed 97 points, they played good defense. Midwestern hit 51 per cent from the floor (35-68) and the Indians' hit from every possible angle and with any number of Chaps hanging on them.

Things got so frustrating for LCC, that Sampy even misfired when, all alone on a fast break, he tried for a dunk and saw the ball bounce off the front rim.

Sampy, who has been out of double figures just twice in 19 games, hit 10 of 16 field goal attempts and led the Chaps with seven rebounds and 21 points.

Nat Lunn, despite playing only 12 minutes, snared seven rebounds. Although Midwestern did not have a player disqualified, six Indians drew four fouls and one time all five Tribesmen on the floor were one whistle away from drawing bench duty.

Crawford scored his points in bunches, as did Lanter. Lanter, a reserve guard until last Monday, hit 9 of 16 from the field, had four assists and four steals for his second straight 24-point game.

Crawford, who hit 10 of 17 from the field and pulled in six rebounds, had 27 points, including two spectacular dunks—the first on one of the Tribe's 17 offensive rebounds and the other on a fast break layup with 3:11 remaining.

The Indians take on Wayland Baptist tonight in another league encounter.

New Mark Set In High Jump

NEW YORK (AP)—Diminutive Franklin Jacobs, the confident Fairleigh Dickinson University sophomore, broke the world indoor high jump record Friday night, leaping 7 feet, 7¼ inches in the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

The 5-foot-8, 150-pound Jacobs, who had promised before the meet that he would smash the indoor mark of 7-7 set two weeks ago by Greg Joy of Canada at College Park, Md., kept his word. On his third and final attempt at 7-7¼ he cleared the bar to the cheers of a capacity crowd of 18,118.

The record represented a jump of 23¼ inches above Jacobs' head, an incredible feat.

The world outdoor record is 7-7¾ set last year by Vladimir Yaschenko of the Soviet Union in a junior meet against the United States team at Richmond, Va.

Jay Haas Pulls Ahead In San Diego Golf Play

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jay Haas, a 24-year-old former national collegiate champion, splashed a gaudy string of 10 threes on his card, finished with an 8-under-par 64 and established a 3-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $200,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

"Now that looks real pretty," said Haas, who won the NCAA national championship at Wake Forest in 1975.

"They key to my round was that the greens were holding a little better and I made a lot of putts," said the slender Haas, who collected $32,000 as a tour rookie last season.

Haas, who was tutored in the game by his uncle, former Masters champ Bob Goalby, compiled a 36-hole total of 136, 8 under par. He matched par 72 Thursday in his first round over the 7,047-yard South course, then mastered the shorter, easier, 6,667-yard North course with a 30 on the back nine that included a string of four consecutive birdies.

The final two rounds will be played on the South course only.

Lanky Andy North, who scored his first tour victory in the Westchester Classic last year, Gary McCord and Jack Spradlin shared second at 139. North had a 66, McCord 68 and Spradlin matched par 72 in mild, humid, hazy weather.

First round leader Mark Pfeil slipped to a 74 and was tied at 140 with Doug Tewell and Fuzzy Zoeller. The hard-hitting Zoeller shot 70, Tewell 71.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner already this season and the defending champion here, managed a 71. Although he hasn't played well, by his standards, and insists he's having driving difficulties, he's in solid contention at 143, 7 shots off the pace.

Johnny Miller had the same total after a 72.

Miller Barber, a winner at Phoenix two weeks ago, withdrew. Barber said he suffered torn rib muscles in a fall on ice at his home in Sherman last week.

Haas' fifth place finish in the U.S. Open last year was his best as a pro and the 64, his best round on the tour, gave him his first lead.

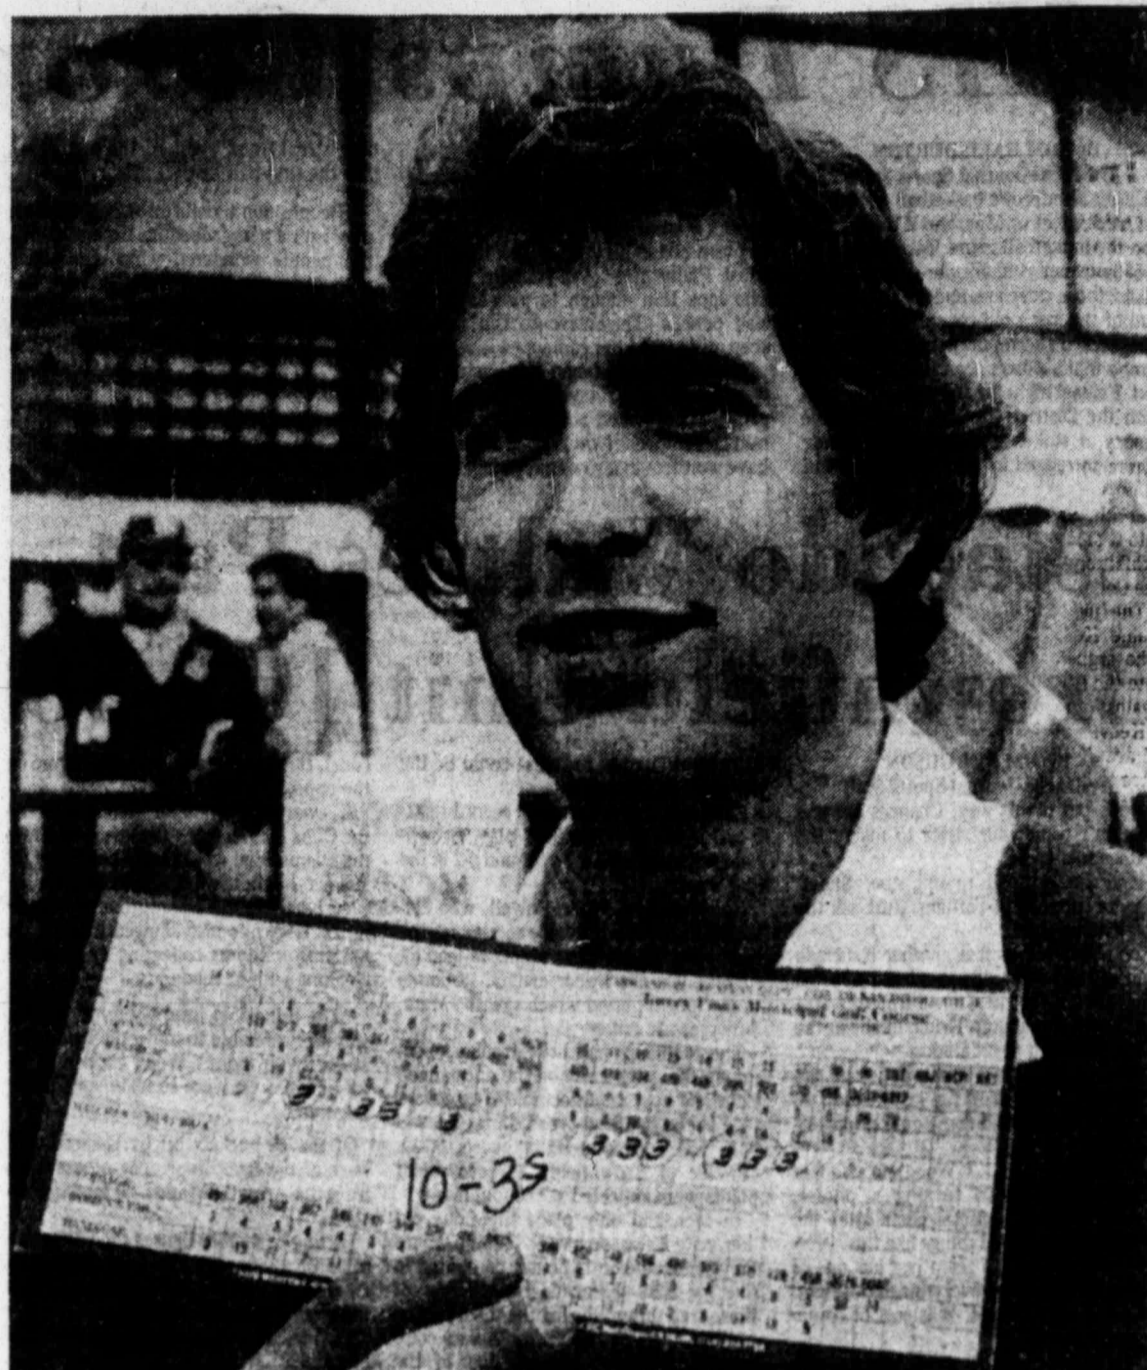

"Really, I was just thinking about making the cut" for the last two rounds, he said — and his start didn't give him any confidence.

From just in front of the green, he dumped his third shot in a bunker on the par-5 first hole and had to get it up and down for a par "on an easy hole where everybody else is gonna make birdie. I'm thinking, uh-oh, it's gonna be a struggle today."

But he holed putts of 18, 25 and 20 feet to go 3 under par through the 11th.

He stormed in front with a string of four consecutive birdies, beginning on the 13th. The first two came on putts of eight to 10 feet. The next two came after approach shots stopped only three to four feet from the cup.

Haas stretched the advantage on the final hole, reaching the par 5 with a 4-wood second shot and then 2-putting for birdie.

NEW LEADER—Jay Haas, who only shot even par during the first round in the San Diego Open, shows off a scorecard marking the 10 threes he shot Friday to put him in the lead with an 8-under-par 64. Haas won the NCAA national championship at Wake Forest in 1975. (AP Laserphoto)

Mutual

from Rice, will be broadcast nationwide on the Mutual system, officials said.

"This is going to be the most ambitious and wide-spread media project undertaken by a group of colleges in the United States," said Mutual President C. Edward Little.

There are more than 780 stations across the nation in the Mutual system.

The agreement would mean an estimated $22,000 per year for the nine SWC schools, compared with the $15,000 each school received from Exxon in 1977.

SWC officials indicated the increased ranged for SWC broadcasts, not the extra money, was the primary reason for rejecting the bid this year from Exxon, which began broadcasting SWC football games in 1934.

Carner Stops Lopez Attempt

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — JoAnne Carner, a seven-year veteran on the Ladies Professional Golf Association circuit, came back from a two-hole deficit through 12 holes Friday to top tour rookie Nancy Lopez of Roswell, 1-up in the $105,000 Triple Crown match play championship.

Carner, a long-driving 38-year-old with 19 LPGA victories to her credit, moved to within one of Lopez on the 14th when she sank a par putt and Lopez took a bogey four. Carner evened the match with a birdie three on No. 15, then moved ahead with a par on 16, while Lopez had another bogey.

The two matched bogey fours on the 17th then parred the final hole of the second round at Mission Hills Country Club.

Also advancing to today's semifinals were Sandra Post, a 1-up winner over Pat Bradley; Sandra Palmer, who defeated Silvia Bertolaccini 3 and 2, and Sally Little, a 4 and 3 victor over Amy Alcott.

Carner is one of the favorites in the Triple Crown — the LPGA's only match play event — because of her aggressive style of play, and she said she likes the format.

"I enjoy it because it is so nerve-wracking," she said. "You sort of have to play with the flow, know when you have to hit a good shot."

Carner admitted she got a little nervous after taking a close look at her 21-year-old opponent late in their match.

"I looked over at Nancy and she wasn't nervous at all, not shaking or anything," Carner said. "Then I started having trouble swallowing."

Carner said that trailing by two going into the 13th hole, she had a little chat with her ball.

"I said, 'Hey, you'd better get moving or we're going to be out of this.'"

Sixteen golfers qualified for the Triple Crown which matches the top point winners in the Winners Circle, European Open and Far East Open. The two survivors of today's third round will play Sunday for the $21,000 first prize with the loser getting $14,000.

Matches were extremely close in the consolation bracket Friday, as the winners all scored 1-up victories.

Debbie Austin defeated Judy Rankin, Jane Bialock downed Jan Stephenson, Donna Caponi Young topped Kathy Whitworth and Kathy McMullen defeated Mary Mills.

The consolation losers are through for the tournament, while the rest of the bracket will be whittled to the two finalists who will compete Sunday for a consolation of $6,000.

The tournament is sponsored by the Colgate-Pomolive Company.

Harris Named Man Of Year

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Franco Harris will be honored Sunday night at the annual Dapper Dan Banquet as Man of the Year for his performance on the football field and his participation in community programs.

A host of other familiar athletes from football, baseball, basketball and hockey are also scheduled to attend the annual fete, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

The banquet was the idea of the late Al Abrams, former Post-Gazette sports editor, who died last year. Abrams' widow will be honored Sunday night.

The toastmaster — in many previous years performed by former Pittsburgh Pirate broadcaster Bob Prince — will be actor-broadcaster Regge Cordic.

Harris was selected as Man of the Year by writers and broadcasters.
