Several Schools In Area Close

A-J News Services
Some schools shut down, absenteeism was high in Lubbock classrooms and school bus schedules were curtailed on many rural routes as the National Weather Service this morning urged motorists to avoid "unnecessary travel" in the South Plains.
A broad section of the South Plains awakened to the season's heaviest snow that camouflaged a treacherous sheet of ice on roadways and bridges.
Snowfall here was measured at 2 inches this morning, and forecasters said an additional 1 to 3 inches was possible before the storm is over. Precipitation is expected to be heaviest in the Panhandle and eastern portions of the South Plains.
Heaviest snow was recorded at Muleshoe, where 3 inches had fallen by early this morning.
Snow, sleet and freezing drizzle covered most of Northwestern Texas and Eastern New Mexico during the night and this morning, and forecasters gave little chance of immediate improvement.
Lubbock police and sheriff's department spokesmen reported relatively few ice-related auto accidents, none of which involved serious injuries.
Commercial airlines said flight schedules at Lubbock International Airport were not disrupted by the weather.
Travelers advisories were extended through Wednesday morning on the South Plains as precipitation continued to bear down on the area. Forecasts indicated the Lubbock area has an 80 percent chance for precipitation today, dropping to 30 percent tonight. Wednesday's odds were placed at 20 percent.
Today's high temperature — predicted to be near freezing — should slide to the upper-20s tonight, then creep toward the upper-30s Wednesday, forecasters reported.
The weather outlook for Thursday through Saturday sets the temperature range from the 20s to the 30s and 40s, accompanied by a chance for light rain and snow flurries.
Lubbock Independent School District officials estimated that absenteeism in classrooms was "at least double" normal numbers in elementary schools and up by one-third in junior and senior high schools.
Among area schools closed today were Roosevelt, Idalou, Lorenzo, Wilson and Spur.
Several others, including Slaton, New Deal, Floydada and Lockney, were open, but canceled their rural bus routes.
Precipitation was widespread across the western and southern portions of the state.
South Texas morning reports included drizzle, rain, snow and sleet, and parts of the Gulf Coast were hit by fog.
Despite the immobilizing precipitation, however, moisture totals remained scant in most areas.
Lubbock's ice and snowfall accounted for only about 18 of an inch of Lubbock's 26-inch moisture total this year.
Easterly-to-southeasterly winds of 10-15 mph were forecast today. Winds of five to 10 mph were expected tonight.
South Plains minimum temperatures recorded during the 24-hour period ending at 8:45 a.m. today ranged mostly in the mid-20s.

Snow depths reported in the area early today included 3 inches at Friona and Olton; 2.5 at Dimmitt; 2 at Crosbyton, Floydada, Levelland, Lubbock and Plainview; and 1.5 at Hereford, Morton and Spur.
A state highway department spokesman said all highways in the area were open. However, he said highways in the Panhandle and those west of Lubbock were extremely hazardous.
Rainshowers were scattered from Florida and southern Georgia across the Gulf

'Upheaval' Predicted By Waters

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Emerging from a two-hour executive session today, school board president Charles Waters said new desegregation requirements laid down by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward may produce a "traumatic upheaval" of the city's public schools.
But Supt. Ed Irons said he hopes the community will "pull together to make the best" of whatever develops.
The board met privately with its attorneys this morning to discuss Woodward's order last week that the Lubbock Independent School District submit a plan by April 1 to increase the racial balance and enrollment of nine predominantly minority campuses on the city's north and east sides.
The schools at issue are Dunbar High, Struggs Junior High and Wheatley, Iles, Martin, Posey, Sanders, Guadalupe and Mahon elementaries.
"We haven't decided anything definitively yet," Waters said. He added the board will reconvene Feb. 13 for another executive meeting to discuss desegregation proposals to be prepared by Irons and his staff.
Though Woodward's order addresses the "nine schools only," Waters said: "You've got to get children from somewhere else (to meet the judge's prescription for a racial mix). We haven't decided where they'll come from. In my opinion, it ought to involve perhaps the whole school district."
Waters said new desegregation proposals are in their "elementary stages," but must be put into specifics before consideration by the board Feb. 13. He said school officials here will explore desegregation efforts of other districts in drafting a plan for Lubbock.
However, the board does not intend to call in an outside consultant — or a citizens' advisory committee — to help formulate a plan, Waters said.
"We (school trustees) are the most concerned."

December Economic Index Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its index designed to signal future economic trends increased by a substantial 0.7 percent in December, pointing to probable strong performance of the economy in the months ahead.
The index was the final significant economic report for 1977 and it conformed with other public and private forecasts for strong economic growth at least until mid-1978.
It was the sixth consecutive monthly increase in the index, which attempts to assess the economic prospect for the future on the basis of the performance of the economy during the previous month. The Composite Index of Leading Indicators, as it is called, stood in December at 135.3 of the 1967 average of 100.
For the entire year, the index advanced 6.1 percent after increasing in all but three of the 12 months of 1977. The 0.7 percent rise in December compared with gains of 0.1 in November and 0.8 in October.
Increases of more than 0.5 percent are considered as pointing to a strong economic performance. The November index was revised upward from the report last month, which had showed it declining by 0.2 percent.
The individual component contributing most to the index's rise in December was a big increase in orders and contracts for plant and equipment. Also showing gains were sales performance, changes in sensitive prices, the money supply and new orders for consumer goods.
These were partially offset by declines in the average work week, changes in cash and other liquid assets, stock prices and building permits. The 10th component available for the December index, the job layoff rate, was unchanged.
Despite the signals of economic gains in early 1978, the administration is not confident about the economic outlook after mid-year, and President Carter's proposed $25-billion tax cuts is intended to insure the economy will keep expanding well into 1979.

Sadat Cites Major Obstacle To Peace

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat declared today the issue of Palestinian self-determination remains the major obstacle in the way of peace with Israel and said "a heavy and difficult job" lies ahead.
"We must find a way or everything will collapse," the Egyptian president said just hours before the resumption of Egyptian-Israeli military talks on an Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula.
Sadat made his remarks to newsmen after meeting with a delegation of American Jews and Christians at his villa in Barrages, about 15 miles north of Cairo. Earlier in the day, Foreign Minister Mohamed Kamel refused to accept an Israeli-American draft of principles for peace.
"There are many points on which we don't see eye to eye," Kamel said after discussing the draft, which could lead to an Arab-Israeli peace treaty, with U.S.

Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Atherton.
Despite his disagreement with some of the Israeli points, Kamel said Egypt is willing to "continue these negotiations, and we hope that with the help and effort of the United States we will eventually reach the comprehensive and lasting peace we are looking for."
The impression conveyed by both Sadat and his foreign minister was that tough bargaining lay ahead with the Israelis, despite Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman's arrival here for renewed military talks with Egyptian War Minister Mohamed Abdel Ghany Gammasy.
Weizman said he hoped to "achieve substantial things, not just talks" when the negotiations begin tonight. They recessed Jan. 13 in stalemate over Israel's insistence on maintaining 20 Jewish settlements in the Sinai even after the peninsula is returned to Egypt.

Egypt abruptly broke off parallel negotiations between Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers in Jerusalem the next week, and there has been no indication when these talks would resume.
Sadat said Egypt would continue to insist on the concept of self-determination — or independence — for the 1.1 million Palestinians living on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip.
The draft declaration of principles, which Atherton worked out with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan in Jerusalem last week, says the Palestinians should "participate in the determination of their future," U.S. and Israeli sources have reported.
This was an American-formulated compromise between Egypt's demand for Palestinian self-determination and Israel's rejection of self-determination before.

Admiral Assails Panama Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics of the Panama Canal treaty charged today that a proposed Senate amendment guaranteeing U.S. passage and defense rights is a "sugar-coated" political maneuver that fails to protect security interests of the United States.
Retired Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate Armed Services Committee the amendment would neither assure this country of priority passage after the year 2000 nor enable the United States to use military force to protect the waterway.

Admiral Assails Panama Treaty

President Carter and Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos signed a communique last Oct. 14 to guarantee the United States priority emergency use of the canal and the right to defend it after the year 2000. The Senate Foreign Relations committee says these guarantees must be made part of the treaty for it to gain the required two-thirds Senate approval for ratification.
"The new amendment now being proposed may solve our domestic political problems, but the big question still unanswered is, what problems will the United States face when she sets about to correct violations of neutrality and what practical actions do we propose to take?" Moorer said.
The admiral said the treaty contains "all kinds of guarantees but no guarantor." He also did not believe the American public would be "deceived" by explanations of treaty supporters that the pact sufficiently protects U.S. interests after the canal is transferred to Panamanian control.
Former Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements, a candidate for governor in Texas, joined Moorer in criticizing the proposed amendment.
Clements said that during his time in the Pentagon, U.S. officials devised a "proper security clause" that protected U.S. interests and that Panama had accepted it.
"Subsequently this clause was eliminated by Mr. Carter, and a weak, ambiguous clause was substituted," Clements said. "A strong unambiguous security clause must be the keystone of any Panama Canal treaty."

Dollins Bids For School Post Here

Claude D. Dollins, a local marriage counselor and part-time Texas Tech University instructor, today announced his bid for a seat on the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees.
Dollins, 37, of 4512 64th St. is the fourth person to announce as a candidate for Place 2 on the board, being vacated by Bob McKelvey. McKelvey, present board vice president, chose not to run for re-election.
Dollins said the board now is being professionally operated, but needs more diversity. He said he could help remedy this by reflecting to the board the "emotional and psychological impact" the trustees' decisions have on the district's students and teachers.
"As a member of the school board, I would practice fiscal responsibility, support the neighborhood school concept and encourage emphasis on basic reading, math and communication skills," Dollins said this morning.
Dollins said he was interested in the overall picture of education. He said two of his concerns are that the district have a continuing evaluation of its priorities, involving input by board members, teachers, parents and students; and better communication within the school system.
Dollins said his experience as a counselor would make him more effective in solving problems facing the district, and gives him a greater sensitivity to the

Medical Experts Predict Russian Flu Epidemic

By CHRIS CONNELL
 WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of medical experts says an epidemic of Russian flu is likely to spread in the United States either this winter or next, and a vaccine can be developed that would be 70 to 90 percent effective in preventing it.

But the experts are less certain about what the federal government's role should be in an inoculation campaign and who should bear the liability for the new flu vaccine.

And, in any event, significant quantities of the vaccine might not be available before December, according to one of the experts.

At an all-day meeting Monday at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the panel of experts from both inside and outside government said children with medical disabilities should be the first to be inoculated against Russian flu; then adults with disabilities; adults 65 or older; those 50 to 65, and finally those under 24.

Persons aged 25 to 50 are expected to have resistance against this strain of A-type flu, which is similar to viruses that swept the world from 1947 to 1950.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., who summoned the experts to the meeting, did not indicate when he would act on their recommendations, but he said he hoped to have the liability question resolved by summer.

In last winter's ill-fated swine flu inoculation campaign, the government assumed liability to assure that enough vaccine would be produced.

Suits have been filed against the government by several hundred people who received swine flu shots in 1976 and then contracted Guillain-Barre syndrome, a paralyzing disease that can be fatal. The swine flu epidemic never occurred; 40 million Americans were inoculated.

"We are not crying wolf. We have a wolf," said Dr. Ivan Bennett Jr., dean and provost of the New York University Medical Center and the panel's chairman.

He said federal subsidies for Russian flu vaccine would be preferable to the government's buying vaccine outright as it did for swine flu. "It's far better to share responsibility with state health departments and local health departments" in administering an inoculation program, he said.

The Russian flu vaccine could either be given separately or in conjunction with vaccines aimed at other strains of flu. Twenty million Americans normally receive flu shots each year.

The Russian flu vaccine will take months to prepare and might not be ready in sufficient quantities until December, according to Dr. June Osborn, a University of Wisconsin medical professor and vice chairperson of the panel.

But she said the Russian flu, which broke out among high school students in Cheyenne, Wyo., earlier this month, is likely to be a problem for years.

Influenza "changes its spots" every 10 years, she noted, and the Russian flu — called H1N1 — may be the pandemic A-type strain for the next decade.

The A-Victoria and A-Texas flus that hit this country last year are now widespread in 15 states may be on the way out, she added.

The experts are calling the Russian flu relatively mild, although it can lay its victims low with headaches and coughs for three days or so.

But Russian doctors have found that only 54 percent of the flu patients hospitalized this winter in Moscow had fever above 102 degrees, compared with 82 percent or more in past epidemics.

Also, the youngsters who are the main target for this flu are far less likely than old people to become seriously ill or die.

And in Russia, although they did not have as high resistance as those aged 25 to 50, the elderly were generally spared in the recent flu epidemic.

The Russians have reported success in treating flu victims with rimantadine, a drug that is still being studied and is not generally available in this country. U.S. officials said a related drug, amantadine, is available that may help persons who cannot tolerate inoculation or are working around flu victims in hospitals or at home.

Dr. William Foege, director of the Center for Disease Control, acknowledged that any influenza vaccine may increase a person's small chances of incurring the Guillain-Barre Syndrome.

But he said only one person among 105,000 gets this syndrome after vaccination, and only one in two million dies from it. The risks of dying from influenza are 1,000 times greater, he said.

Carter Not Planning To Use Taft-Hartley

By United Press International
 President Carter says he has no present plans to invoke the Taft-Hartley Act and order 160,000 United Mine Workers members to halt their eight-week strike and return to work.

But, Carter told a news conference Monday, he has initiated new measures to conserve the nation's dwindling coal supplies.

Carter said the Taft-Hartley Act "only provides for the president to intercede if national security is endangered."

"We certainly have not arrived at that yet," he said.

contract — most of the large and small issues — is in place," he said. "We have an awful lot done. I'm just trying to hold it together."

Government officials said parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania, southern West Virginia and western Maryland may run short of coal in less than 30 days unless the strike is settled or the weather gets warmer.

Horvitz said the administration "will do everything it can to supply those pockets."

In Charleston, W.Va., UMW President Arnold Miller said Monday he was "not very optimistic" about the status of the union's contract negotiations with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Miller said that while tentative agreement was reached on many issues, the talks were stalled on major economic issues, including a wage increase.

However, UMW District 2 President Val Scarton said at Barnesboro, Pa., he was told by top union leaders a contract agreement was likely by the end of the week.

Scarton said union leaders told him the only issue preventing total settlement was the union effort to negotiate payment of miners' medical bills incurred since hospitalization benefits were cut. He said district presidents were asked to remain on 24-hour standby for a possible call to go to Washington to approve a new agreement.

At his news conference, Carter said he and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger decided on some steps to avoid a national coal emergency.

He said these included a cutback of power to the nation's gaseous diffusion plants, which produce atomic fuel and use extremely large amounts of electricity from coal-fired generators.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said he was in touch with union and industry negotiators by telephone in an effort to set up a resumption of the contract talks.

Horvitz said he hoped to resume the talks quickly to preserve agreements already existing on such crucial issues as wildcat strikes and the union's ailing health and pension funds.

ERA Support Called Lacking

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Judy Carter, daughter-in-law of President Jimmy Carter, says the Equal Rights Amendment has not been ratified because support for it has not been shown effectively.

Mrs. Carter, wife of the president's son, Jack, said every call or letter to a legislator is important in a state such as Missouri, where ERA ratification may lose by only a few votes. But legislative leaders in Missouri say the matter will likely not even be considered this year.

Mrs. Carter was scheduled to appear at Springfield, St. Joseph, Maryville, Cape Girardeau and St. Louis today before leaving Missouri.

She said her father, a Georgia state senator, has voted for the ERA the few times it has been before the Georgia Legislature although he heard little support for it.

He has received many calls from persons opposed to the ERA, but only two calls from supporters, she said.

"It takes a lot for him to go down each year and keep voting for the ERA," she told more than 300 persons at a Kansas City church dinner.

Mrs. Carter noted that in at least two states, Indiana and Virginia, voters had "booted out of office" anti-ERA legislators.

Hospital Closes Obstetrics Wing

By CARRIE LINE CURTIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The nursery is almost empty now; the silence broken only by the cries of two newborns.
The halls and rooms of the wing are empty and silent.
The waiting room is no longer full of nervous fathers-to-be or grandparents-to-be.
St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, where almost 12,000 babies have been born in the past seven years, is closing its obstetrics wing as of 7 a.m. Wednesday.
The Wednesday morning closing date coincides with the opening of the obstetrics wing at the new county Health Sciences Center Hospital.
The closing of St. Mary's obstetrics wing ends an era for the facility and the South Plains, but the hospital is looking forward, not back.
According to Sister Maureen, administrator, the hospital already has plans for the wing to be remodeled by Feb. 20.
Plans call for the wing to be renovated as a cardio-vascular ward with private rooms. Following the renovation, the entire second floor of St. Mary's will be devoted to cardiac patients. One wing on the second floor will be for cardiac care patients and the other wing will be for cardiac surgery patients.
The present nursery will be remodeled as a waiting room for relatives of cardiac surgery patients. The delivery rooms will be renovated for ear, eye, nose and throat surgeries. Labor rooms will be remodeled for recovery rooms for outpatient surgery patients.
The former obstetrics wing is being renovated to take care of patients being temporarily housed on the hospital's third floor. On Feb. 22, the facility will open a new rehabilitation center to be located on the present third floor.
More than 11,940 babies have been born at St. Mary's since it moved into facilities at 4000 24th St. in December 1970. The obstetrics wing pioneered such features as fathers in the delivery rooms, childbirth classes and candlelight dinners for the parents.

A majority of the registered nurses on duty at the obstetrics wing had been sent to a nationally-recognized children's hospital in Denver, Colo., to train for a week in the facility's neonatal nursery. A neonatal nursery is designed to care for critically ill newborn babies.
The local facility has cared for critically ill newborns for a number of years.
Sister Maureen said the hospital will probably sell some of the cribs and equipment, although some of the cribs will be retained by the facility. She said the facility has been performing pediatric cardiac surgery more than two years now and the cribs can be used for the babies undergoing cardiac surgery or cardiac catheterization.
St. Mary's also has been performing pediatric cardiac catheterization for three years. The local facility has been approved for pediatric cardiac surgery for more than two years by the Crippled Children's Society of Texas.
According to Alice Bukis, a registered nurse on the obstetrics wing, the smallest baby born at St. Mary's to survive weighed two pounds, 11 ounces. The largest baby weighed more than 12 pounds.
The wing has had as many as three sets of twins at one time in the nursery and some identical twins looked so much alike, it was impossible to tell the difference without the identification tags on the babies. St. Mary's also has had one set of triplets, two girls and a boy, born in the spring of 1973.
Mrs. Bukis said some mothers have had a close race with the stork getting to the hospital. Several have delivered their babies at home and others have delivered their babies on the hospital's parking lot.

NURSERY ALMOST EMPTY — No longer will the nursery of the obstetrics wing at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital echo with the cries of newborn infants. The local hospital is closing its obstetrics wing at 7 a.m. Wednesday and future plans call for remodeling the wing into a cardiovascular ward. The cardiovascular ward is due to open Feb. 20, according to Sister Maureen, hospital administrator. (Staff Photo by Norm Tindell)

Hospital this week. Laura was among the more than 11,940 babies born at the facility since it opened in December 1970. (Staff Photo by Norm Tindell)

Cable Extension Construction Begins

Construction is now underway on a $163,000 cable extension project to extend telephone service between Lubbock and Shallowater, according to Bob Dunbar, Southwestern Bell division manager.
"Anticipated growth between these two cities will require additional facilities to maintain efficient service," Dunbar said.

Noting that there will be some inconvenience to motorists during the construction, Dunbar said a single lane of traffic will be closed on 34th Street near Slide Road and on Slide Road near 19th Street for installation of two manholes.
Installation of the manholes will take two to three weeks, Dunbar said.

Underground cable will be laid from the Swift office at 34th and Quaker to Frankford Avenue and then north to the Clovis Highway.
The entire project should be completed in early March, Dunbar said.

SPS Told To Pay Protection Costs

Southwestern Public Service Co. will have to pick up its own tab for standby fire protection in rural Lubbock County, county commissioners have decided.
The commissioners court has declined to pay a bill submitted by the Shallowater Volunteer Fire Department for watching over utility work done by SPS about 300 feet outside City of Lubbock limits.
Instead, commissioners said, the Shallowater department should seek payment of the $275 bill from the electric utility company.
Commissioners said that while they are willing to pay $275 for each fire put out by the county's volunteer fire fighters, the county should not be responsible for "standby service," in which there is no actual fire.

Attempted Rape Of Local Girl Reported To Lubbock Police

A 16-year-old Lubbock girl told police she was awakened late Saturday by a youth who subsequently tried to rape her.
The victim said she felt someone lying on top of her and holding his hand over her mouth. She also stated that as she began to struggle, the intruder tried to remove her pajamas.
According to reports, the girl managed to break free, but the attacker caught her and pulled her into another bedroom, where he began to beat her. During the struggle, the victim said, she called the suspect by name, but he threatened to kill her if she said anything else.
The girl said that as she continued to fight and scream, other persons came into the room and fought with the attacker.
The Rape Crisis Center was called, and the 14-year-old suspect was taken into custody by juvenile authorities.
In recently reported thefts and burglaries, a money bag containing several hundred dollars reportedly was stolen from the Town and Country Food Store at 1524 50th St. Monday afternoon.

Reports indicated the clerk went into a back room for a short time, and when he returned to the counter, the bag was gone. The employee told police a man was inside the store during the time, but he was unable to provide a description.
As usual, televisions and stereos provided tempting targets for break-in artists in the city.
Reporting such losses were: Marshall Johns of 2623 E. Colgate St., Gloria Torres of 2812 Ave. D, No. 6, Ricky Lynn Cook of 914 44th St. and Joe Lewis Vergare of 1102 42nd St.
Lubbock police were investigating a 33-year-old Lubbock man's complaint that he was beaten in the head with a hammer earlier in the week.
The man told police he called his 79th Street residence that he was attacked by two men at the intersection of 24th St.

and Quirt Ave. about 6:10 p.m. Sunday, but once officers began investigating, they heard a different story.
The man claimed the men opened his car door when he stopped for a traffic light, and then one man hit him with the hammer.
Officers, though, went to a Kent Street address where witnesses to the affair reportedly told them the man was hit in the head because he refused to leave a residence there.
One witness told officers the man came to her home and began arguing. She asked him to leave, and he refused.
Her son, she said, didn't like his answer and struck him with the hammer. He left.
A Kansas businessman told police someone broke the window to his Euco Distributing Co., truck parked at a King Street residence between 4 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday and then took a $100 radar detection device.
Burglars also broke a window to enter the Child Development Center at 602 Ave. D, Maye Constanco told officers. The intruders entered sometime between 7 p.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m. Monday and removed a $600 audio-visual display unit.
Olivia Lester of Mae Simmons Community Center at 23rd Street and Oak Avenue told officers someone took $32 of candy from concession stands there between 10 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Monday.

Atomic Plant Cutback Ordered

By EDWARD K. DeLONG
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy officials say a major power cutback at three plants producing atomic fuel soon will provide enough electricity to meet the needs of almost 2 million people and help avert a new winter energy crisis.
President Carter ordered the temporary reduction in electrical demand at the uranium enrichment plants to ease the double pinch of coal shortages caused by a national mine strike and of fuel shortages caused by the Midwest blizzard.
A spokesman said electricity normally used by the energy-hungry plants in Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio, can be shifted to areas where the need is greatest.
Carter ordered the enrichment plant cutback during a Cabinet meeting Monday morning and announced it in a presidential news conference a few hours later. He gave few details, but described it as a way to help ward off a fuel crisis without invoking the Taft-Hartley Act to force miners back into the mines.
Energy Department sources later said they were preparing to cut total power demand by about 40 percent at the three plants, which produce enriched uranium for atomic reactor fuel. They said it was too early to tell when the reduction would take place.
All three plants use the so-called "gaseous diffusion" process, in which uranium gas is forced through porous membranes to separate the scarce U-235 isotope needed in reactor fuel from the more abundant U-238 isotope.

An energy spokesman said operation of the plants under normal conditions consumes vast amounts of electricity — a total 5,000 megawatts, or enough to serve the needs of 4.4 million people. Much of the energy generated by coal-fired, nuclear and hydroelectric power plants of the Tennessee Valley Authority is used by the three installations.
Department sources said the contemplated 40 percent reduction in demand at the enrichment plants would in effect give TVA an extra 2,000 megawatts of electricity — enough for the normal power needs of 1.74 million people or more — to transfer to areas hit by fuel shortages caused by the coal strike and the blizzard.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Prices Show Slight Advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices followed up on Monday's rally with a moderate advance today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which climbed 8.32 points Monday for its best showing so far in 1978, added another 1.04 to 773.48 by noon today.

Gainers held a 7-4 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The upswing got its start Monday as the government listed a smaller-than-expected U.S. balance of trade deficit for December and 1977 as a whole.

Today the Commerce Department reported that its index of leading economic indicators rose 0.7 percent in December.

It was the sixth consecutive monthly rise in the index, which is designed to signal the likely future course of economic activity.

United Technologies rose 1/4 to 34 1/2 in active trading after a 1 1/2-point gain Monday, when the company reported higher fourth quarter earnings and raised its quarterly dividend from 45 to 50 cents a share.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up .09 at 49.54. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .21 to 121.63.

Volume on the Big Board stepped up to 8.57 billion shares by noon against 6.41 billion at the same point Monday.

Modern Women Series Begins On Public TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Woman Alive" and "Woman" may no longer be made for public TV, but the idea of a series on modern women isn't extinct. In fact, such a series began on public TV this week.
It's "Turnabout," produced by station KQED in San Francisco for $325,000, or roughly what it cost sponsors for a minute's TV time during the last Super Bowl. It has an initial 26-week run.
Each half-hour show, done in news magazine format, has a single theme, such as juggling family life and a career, physical fitness, female fiscal power — or the lack of it — and women in religion.
Purchased by 148 stations, the series is hosted by Jerri Lange, a San Francisco TV figure, journalism teacher and mother of three sons, one of whom plays the barkeep on ABC's "Love Boat."
"Turnabout" sprang from a two-year local series she hosted, "Womantime & Co.," according to Martha Gleasing, a Kansas City, Mo., native who is executive producer of the new venture.

She says the "Womantime & Co." tag was changed when the show went national for two reasons. The first, obviously, was to avoid confusion with the old "Woman" and "Woman Alive" series.
Reason two: The new program is to borrow the title of a commercial series, is not for women only.
"This show has been developed to appeal to men as well," Ms. Gleasing said by phone from the city by the Bay.
While the show's production cost is $325,000, total funding for both production and promotion comes to $412,000, of which $262,000 is from the stations that bought the series, she said.
The $150,000 balance is a grant from the Lane Bryant women's clothing store chain. She says the New York firm also has promised to help tout "Turnabout" in its catalogues and with store posters.

Ms. Gleasing, a Marquette University journalism graduate whose past includes a stint as editor and co-owner of the weekly Seneca Falls Reveille in upstate New York, began as a print journalist.
But she's strongly aware a series such as hers must be visually interesting, should try to be more than a televised radio show.
For that reason, she says, "Turnabout" deliberately avoids the usual talking-heads-in-studio setting of most public affairs series.
"It's all done outside the studio, on location," she said. "Because I really want the feel of the show to be out and around, out in the community."
"So if it's something on children, we shoot in a nursery. If it's religion, we shoot in a church. It's wherever the people are."
Going to where the people are with film and video cameras, she added, greatly helps the impact of the program.
"There's not a show like this on television that really illustrates and shows women doing all these various things," she said. "And that's what I think is really important, that people have an opportunity to have different images in their mind's eye."
"It isn't just talk."

Huge Estates Disappear

GREENWICH, Conn. (UPI) — The large estates of the rich are becoming a thing of the past, victims of rising costs and the new foot-loose life style of the upper class, say realtors in affluent Fairfield County.
With property taxes and maintenance costs on the rise, realtors say estates of 40 acres or more will almost all soon be subdivided into smaller chunks of land.

"About a dozen of these really large estates have been broken up over the last 15 years or so, and I expect that is the trend of the future," said Marjorie Rowe, a realtor specializing in large properties.

Citizenship Slated For Dying Woman

ELIZABETH, N.J. (UPI) — A Cuban woman dying of cancer will become a U.S. citizen this week at a special bedside ceremony.
Superior Court Judge V. William DiBuono has agreed to administer the citizenship oath to Mrs. Senovia de las Nieves Rios in her room at the Beth Israel Medical Center in Newark, N.J.
Mrs. Rios had been scheduled to be sworn in as a citizen earlier this month, but she could not leave the hospital to attend the ceremony.
Union County Clerk Walter Halpin said immigration officials have approved the bedside ceremony.
Officials said Mrs. Rios and her husband came to the United States seven years ago.

B-12 Shots Help Anemia

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR LAMB — I am 71 years old. My doctor tells me I have pernicious anemia and that my stomach does not produce enough folic acid to digest my food. So I have to have a B-12 injection every other week. I would like to know if it is necessary to have a B-12 injection.

Why wouldn't it do just as much good to take B-12 or folic acid tablets orally? My doctor tells me I have to have the shots the rest of my life. Also, what is B-12, is it a vitamin? My blood count is OK now. It's up to where it is supposed to be.

DEAR READER — You shouldn't criticize success and it sounds like your doctor has solved your problem.
Yes, B-12 is a vitamin. It is absorbed from your small intestine into your blood stream with the help of a substance the normal stomach manufactures called "intrinsic factor." If you don't have the intrinsic factor the B-12 cannot be absorbed into your blood stream and you do not get the benefit of it.
Your doctor is telling you that you do not have any intrinsic factor from your stomach. That means that if you take B-12 tablets they still can't be absorbed. The only way to get the B-12 into your body is by injecting it.
Folic acid will help correct an anemia but B-12 deficiencies can cause permanent damage to the spinal cord that folic acid doesn't prevent. That is why folic acid is not an adequate substitute for B-12. To give you more information on your problem I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-5, Bitamin B-12, Folic Acid, Pernicious Anemia. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 71 years old, 5-foot-9 and weigh 160 pounds. My problem is leg cramps. My legs stay cold and numb from the knees down. My two doctors don't seem concerned, but it's a problem. I take Bendryl and quinine, but they don't relieve it. They do help some.
I have "heavy calcification in the lower half of the abdominal aorta and relative dilatation of this segment for a distance of six inches above the bifurcation" according to the doctor's report and "border-line aneurysm."
Do you have any suggestion, medication or doctor that could relieve this condition?

DEAR READER — The quotation from the doctor's report indicates that your leg cramps and cold feet are probably caused by poor circulation — the obstruction to the blood flow to your legs. This is a mechanical defect. You'll get some relief from your medicines, but the basic problem will still be there.
I note you live in Alabama. You have an outstanding cardiovascular unit at the University of Alabama, and you should ask your doctors to refer you there for a complete evaluation. If you have a localized obstruction and the arteries below the obstruction are open you may be able to have a bypass operation. A graft would be put in to route the blood around the obstruction to the open arteries further down in your thigh.
The catch is that those lower arteries must be open enough to carry the blood flow from the detour. If they are badly obstructed then putting in a graft might not be useful at all. In any case, a complete evaluation of the possibility of surgery is in order before deciding what you can do about your leg cramps.

Pentagon Planners Map Reduced Role For Navy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Planning documents approved by Defense Secretary Harold Brown envision a smaller Navy which would pull back from the NATO flanks in case of war and have a reduced role in the Pacific and Indian Oceans, sources said today.

The scenario would call for land-based aircraft to stop Soviet naval forces from entering the Atlantic Ocean from the north, with a similar defense for NATO's southern flank, where U.S. aircraft carriers have traditionally operated in the Mediterranean.

The projections are included in the first "consolidated guidance" documents that have gone to the armed forces for the budget that would start in October 1979. They were drafted by a group of Brown's systems analysts.

The projections have created enough turmoil among Navy supporters to assure they are fully debated by Congress this year, although the budget they deal with will not be introduced for another 12 months. The services also have a chance to offer arguments to Brown.

Without offering specific conclusions on the size or number of aircraft carriers needed in the future — a subject on which the Navy is now completing its own study — the guidance papers are critical of their role.

Sources said the papers contend a U.S. force big enough to stop Soviet ships and planes from entering the Atlantic through the Iceland-Great Britain gap and strike against their bases as well would require at least four "mutually supporting" carriers and escorts. The planners say risk of losses is high.

"If carriers were bought for a NATO war," the papers continue, "there would be no strong rationale for any particular number as long as land-based fighter and early warning aircraft are used to protect sea lines of communications."

They say the "Soviets could attempt to sever our North Atlantic sea lines of communication, although we do not see this as a primary purpose of their general purpose naval forces."

The rationale is already under attack from critics who see destruction of sea lanes to Europe as a main mission for Soviet ships, sources said.

In the south, the papers say, "an alternative to carrier-based task forces in support of the NATO southern flank would be to use land-based aircraft to control the ocean and the air above."

They add that "the fleets of our allies would be more than adequate" to escort convoys in the Mediterranean.

Elsewhere, Japan would have to assume the role of protecting its own shores and keeping its oil lifeline open through the Indian Ocean. It now relies on the United States for part of the first and all of the second.

Sources said the papers envision some expanded but undetailed naval role in the Middle East involving support for a combined Army and Marine force of more than three divisions which would be formed to handle Persian Gulf trouble spots.

Carter Favors Nuclear Ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, warning of possible nuclear disaster, says there should be a "total prohibition" on satellites with nuclear material aboard.

Carter told a news conference Monday he favors an agreement with the Soviet Union banning such satellites until "fail-safe methods" are developed to prevent a recurrence of last week's incident in which a Soviet spy satellite fell in Canada's far northwest.

Soviet embassy officials were not available for comment on Carter's proposal.

A Department of Energy specialist, Theodore Dobry, said that, so far as is known, none of the estimated 4,000 low-flying satellites now in orbit carry radioactive materials.

Carter said with the development of solar power, such satellites are unnecessary.

U.S. officials said last week this country has one nuclear reactor in space that flies so high it will never pose the danger that the Russian satellite did.

Launched in 1965 to determine effectiveness of space power sources and other devices, the satellite should stay aloft at least 4,000 years. By then, the uranium-235 fuel will have burned itself out and will be no threat when it re-enters the earth's atmosphere and burns up.

Carter said, "If we cannot evolve ... fail-safe methods, then I think there ought to be a total prohibition against earth-orbiting satellites," he said.

"I would favor an agreement with the Soviets to prohibit earth-orbiting satellites with atomic radiation material in them," Carter told the news conference.

On his economic policies, Carter cautioned against congressional tampering with his mix of tax, jobs and inflation-fighting proposals.

"To modify one element of a balanced plan can often destroy the balance and can aggravate our economic problems," he said.

Webster Offers New Assurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — William H. Webster, President Carter's nominee to head the FBI, today completed his testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee and vowed to give "everything I have" to the job if his nomination is confirmed.

"If you conclude that I am equal to the great task of leading the bureau in the next decade, I pledge you everything I have in that effort," Webster said in a closing statement.

He was questioned for five hours and 20 minutes on Monday and an additional hour and 10 minutes today.

Webster, questioned earlier in today's hearing about FBI intelligence gathering, promised that as FBI director he would report to the Senate on what he has done to reduce the collection of "irrelevant data" about persons not charged with crimes.

Webster made the pledge in response to a question by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who said the FBI had gathered information about the drinking habits, sex lives and family affairs of members of dissident political groups.

Asked whether he could submit such a report in three or six months, Webster said he would make the report but would like as much time as possible to prepare it.

"Let's make it three months and if that is not adequate, drop me a note and say you would like the additional three months," Metzenbaum said.

Webster nodded his assent to this suggestion.

In a statement submitted to the committee, the public interest group Common Cause said Webster should be questioned at length even though it was obvious that he would be confirmed.

"One or two days of hearings is insufficient to do the job," Common Cause said.

"The fact that the votes for confirmation already exist does not excuse the committee from the duty to examine important questions about Judge Webster's views regarding the operation of the FBI."

"The committee must ask Judge Webster to detail steps he will take to reassure the public that the FBI no longer considers itself above the law," Common Cause said.

Professor Leon Friedman of Hofstra University Law School, speaking for the Committee for Public Justice, urged the senators to push for enactment of "a charter for the FBI that allows it to do the job that it was set up for, namely the investigation of federal crimes."

"It is not enough to assume that the cause it would mean an independent Palestinian state.

"Israel has gone a long way," one Israeli official said of the draft. "We think it can be accepted by Egypt."

The purpose of the declaration was to secure agreement on broad guidelines for an Arab-Israeli peace settlement so that negotiations on the individual issues can proceed. But there was speculation Sadat would try to get modifications from President Carter in their talks at Camp David, Md., this weekend.

Sadat leaves Thursday for Washington. The semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram said he would spend five days in the United States rather than four as originally planned. The paper gave no reason for the extension, but presumably he wants more time for speeches, interviews and television appearances to present his case before the American public.

Meanwhile, the foreign ministers of Algeria, Libya, Syria and South Yemen and envoys from the Palestine Liberation Organization gathered in Algiers today to discuss new ways to thwart Sadat's peace initiative.

The ministers are submitting their draft proposals to their presidents at a "rejection front" summit in the Algerian capital Thursday and Friday. The same group met in Tripoli last November following Sadat's trip to Jerusalem, but the meeting produced no concrete results.

"There seems little they can do except hope Sadat's efforts will collapse of their own accord," one diplomat said.

Panel Picks Dash As Prosecutor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Samuel Dash, the Senate Watergate committee's Democratic counsel, is the first choice recommended by a panel of lawyers to succeed ousted Republican U.S. Attorney David W. Marston of Philadelphia, sources close to the panel say.

Dash was interviewed today by Attorney General Griffin Bell for the job. After the 40-minute meeting with Bell, Dash told reporters: "I was not a candidate and I wasn't an applicant for the position and the position hasn't been offered to me. And until that's the situation, I don't want to comment."

Dash is a former district attorney of Philadelphia and was the author of a critical report about official corruption in Pennsylvania in 1976-1977.

President Carter in a news conference on Monday strongly defended his own role in the firing of Marston, a Republican, who was looking into the activities of two Democratic congressmen.

After the Senate Watergate committee went out of business, Dash went back to teaching law at Georgetown University.

"I teach advanced criminal procedure and professional responsibility, and part of my lectures on professional responsibility is to say don't comment," he said in the hallway outside the attorney general's office.

Bell was to see at least one other of the five persons nominated by a search committee, J. Clayton Undercofler III. Undercofler is a Republican; the other four are Democrats.

Undercofler is a Philadelphia lawyer who served as U.S. attorney by appointment of the federal judges in Philadelphia in May and June 1976, before Marston's appointment. Undercofler pushed to set up a corruption unit in the office and some of the cases that helped make Marston's reputation were started during Undercofler's brief stint in the job.

Bell has not yet scheduled interviews with the other three candidates, and a spokesman for the Justice Department, Robert Havel, said the attorney general does not feel limited to the list provided late last week by the panel of four prominent Philadelphia attorneys, whom Bell asked early this month for advice.

Sources close to the panel, headed by Jerome J. Shestack, said Dash was the panel's first choice to succeed Marston. It could not be learned whether the panel ranked the other four candidates. The panel also included Robert M. Landis, David Berger and Tom A. Masterson. A fifth member, Robert Trescher, resigned several weeks ago.

The sources also said Bell offered Shestack the U.S. attorney's job last June, but Shestack rejected it and urged that Mar-states today. Freezing rain made roads icy through the area, and travel advisories were posted from northern Louisiana into the northwest portion of the Florida panhandle.

Showers extended across Texas and into Arizona. Travel advisories because of freezing rain were out from southwestern Oklahoma across northwestern Texas and the eastern plains of New Mexico. There were travel advisories for snow and blowing snow over the mountains of New Mexico and the San Luis valley of Colorado.

Travel advisories extended over much of Montana today for blowing and drifting snow, as well as an occasional snow shower.

Snow showers continued across the middle Mississippi valley.

Travel advisories also were posted over portions of the central Appalachians, with local accumulations of up to 3 inches likely in the higher elevations.

Skies remained cloudy over the upper Midwest through the central Midwest as well as over much of the East Coast.

There were more bitterly cold temperatures in the Midwest.

Temperatures remained cold over the northern Rockies and in most areas east of the Rockies. Seasonably cool weather was forecast for the remainder of the West.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 24 below zero at Huron, S.D., to 60 at Phoenix, Ariz., and San Nicolas Island, Calif. Monday's high was 71 at Presidio, Texas.

Officials throughout Illinois reported a shortage of rock salt to melt snow and ice on streets and highways. Cook County was out completely and Chicago's supplies were running perilously low. Several sail-laden barges were reported slowly plowing north through the ice floes on the Mississippi River.

Many Chicago stores reported they were sold out of snow blowers and even snow shovels and expected to get no more this year.

"The last time I had anything in here with a handle was Friday at noon," said the owner of a North Side hardware store. "Now? No snow shovels. No coal shovels. I've started selling a lot of dust pans."

In Michigan, the Army Corps of Engineers said there were 45,000 miles of snow-clogged roads that probably will not be cleared for another 19 days — even if there is no more snow. At least 50 school districts were still closed.

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes said Monday the state had suffered at least $64 million in agricultural losses during the blizzard. Snow removal and rescue missions would cost the state $15 to $25 million, he said.

School Plan Under Study

cerned citizens in the school district," he said.

Waters said the district "is not in the business of giving advice to parents at this point." But after a plan is formulated, he said the district may "organize various segments of the community so they will readily, or more readily, accept desegregation."

"I believe there will be many problems. There should be problems. This is a traumatic upheaval of the school system" and may affect "thousands of children," Waters said.

But Irons stressed many other cities in Texas and other states have undergone such changes facing Lubbock. In fact, he said, Lubbock may be the last Texas city its size to be faced with a large-scale desegregation plan.

Irons said he believes "we can pull together to make the best of it." After a specific desegregation plan is formulated, the district's administration and board will "certainly need the community's help to make it work," he said.

Waters said among the "tools available" to accomplish Woodward's instructions are magnet schools — advanced programs placed at predominantly minority campuses to voluntarily attract white students.

"Magnet schools will be considered" as part of Lubbock's new plan, Waters said. The only drawback, he said, is that such programs seem to "work initially, but not in the long run."

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Tuesday, Jan. 31, the 31st day of 1978 with 334 to follow.
The moon is between its last quarter and new phase.
The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.
Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.
American entertainers Eddie Cantor and Gary Moore were born on Jan. 31 — Cantor in 1892 and Moore in 1915.
On this day in history:

In 1950, President Harry Truman said he had ordered development of the hydrogen (thermonuclear) bomb.
In 1958, Explorer 1, the first U.S. earth satellite, was launched from the Cape Canaveral missile test center.
In 1961, Ham, a male chimpanzee, was rocketed into space in test of the Project Mercury capsule later to carry an American astronaut into orbit.
In 1971, with three astronauts aboard, the Apollo 14 spacecraft blasted off for the moon.
A thought for the day:
In a 1.45 message to Congress on atomic energy, President Truman said, "The release of atomic energy constitutes a new force too revolutionary to consider in the framework of old ideas."

Many Civil War ironclad ships, like the Monitor and Cairo, were built with sloping sides to make it easier for bullets to ricochet off the armor plating.

Pony Rescued From Basement

By GAYLE FISHER
SODA SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Coco the pony is finally headed for a three-acre apple orchard near Sacramento after being stranded in a hotel basement for two months.
The problem began when three of Maggie Littenstein's daughters led the pony into the basement through a large ground-level entrance last Thanksgiving to shelter him from the snow.
But it snowed for 21 straight days, piling a 30-foot drift against the basement door.
Coco could have walked up the stairs and out a lobby door anytime he wanted to. But he didn't want to. And the Littensteins couldn't think of any way to make him.
They tried pleading, pulling, pushing and even starving him for a few days in hopes he would be enticed upstairs by fresh apples.

Nothing worked.
So last weekend they resorted to what Mrs. Littenstein acknowledged turned out to be a deceptively simple solution.
Six strong volunteers carried Coco up the stairs after a veterinarian had given him a shot to make him take a nap.
"It looked pretty silly, but it was really easy," said Mrs. Littenstein, owner of the Soda Springs Hotel. "We thought the horse weighed more than it did."
"It must have looked funny to all the customers. The horse was going out the front door while people were arriving here for brunch."
Coco had been a problem for the Littensteins even before he got stranded in the basement.
For one thing he had a habit of crawling out of the corral on his belly and eating other people's grain. He also enjoyed eating the unguarded lunches of cross-country skiers.

The Littensteins had already decided to give Coco away, but their truck broke down and he had to stay a little longer. Then came the snows and what was to be the temporary basement refuge from the weather.
Health authorities threatened to have Mrs. Littenstein arrested when they got wind of the situation because it's illegal to keep a horse in a hotel.
"We didn't like having the horse in there either" she said. "We had to 'Pine Sol' the place four times a day to get rid of the smell."

Hospital Ready For Patients

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
If weekend tours are any indication, business Wednesday at the new Health Sciences Center Hospital may well surpass administrators' expectations. Stanley, who has served on the hospital district's board of managers since its inception in 1969.

What's more, Stanley said, "We're going to offer a quality of medical care that matches the beauty and sophistication of the facility itself."

An estimated 3,000 persons took up the Lubbock County Hospital District's invitation to tour the deluxe facility Saturday and Sunday, despite bad weather.

The $23 million, 245-bed project, the primary teaching hospital for the Texas Tech University School of Medicine, will begin admitting patients Wednesday at 7 a.m.

Hospital administrators have been predicting an average daily occupancy for the first month of about 40 beds. But in light of the public's weekend response — and the enthusiasm of physicians who toured the medical facility earlier — business may pick up even faster.

"This facility is simply magnificent. Once that message gets out to the community, and I think it already has to a great degree, we shouldn't have any problem building up census," said Joe

"I mean, the technology is great; it's mindboggling the things the equipment here can do. But what makes a hospital is people. And I feel we've got good, caring people."

Stanley said there may be a psychological advantage to entering a hospital where "the patients are also your owners." The 300,000-square-foot facility belongs to the people of Lubbock County, whose taxes are paying for the project, he noted.

During dedication ceremonies, board chairman J.C. Rickman said much the same thing, with a touch of humor: "Citizens of Lubbock County, this is your facility. We're proud to show you what you own — along with the people who hold the revenue bonds."

The four-story project will open as a full-service hospital from the very start Wednesday. All departments will be staffed, including an around-the-clock emergency room.

About 115 beds will be available initially. As of Monday, the hospital's work force totaled 481 employees.

Hospital officials said five patients already have preregistered to enter the hospital for such services as surgery on Wednesday.

Officials conducting tours over the weekend said the new hospital's surgical department offers several features unique to Lubbock.

The surgical suite consists of seven operating rooms.

Two are extremely large units to accommodate teams performing complex operations, such as cardiac surgery. Another room is specially set up to provide immediate care of patients with multiple life-threatening injuries.

A unit for orthopedic surgery contains a "laminar air flow system," which filters and recycles the room's air six times a minute — removing all organisms and particles of two microns or larger.

This system greatly reduces the chance of wound infections during an operation.

The teaching facility also will be the first here to perform kidney and other organ transplants.

In addition, the new hospital has an "in and out" surgical suite for ambulatory surgery. This section will permit many surgical procedures which otherwise require one or two days of hospitalization to be offered on a purely outpatient basis — at a savings to patients.

Surgical faculty teams of the Texas Tech University medical school will offer special techniques in the care of infants and children, microsurgery, burn therapy and treatment of cancer using surgery, immunotherapy and chemotherapy.

The surgical department also contains two rooms equipped with sophisticated X-ray units for the detection of abnormalities in the kidneys and urinary tract.

Pathologist To Run For School Post

Dr. John Ray Jr., a local pathologist, Monday announced his candidacy for the Lubbock Independent School District board of trustees.

Ray, 51, of 3024 56th St., filed for Place 1, being vacated by board secretary Joan Ervin. The only other candidate in that race so far is Lynn Stafford.

"I am seeking this place not as an authority experienced in education, but as a concerned and interested parent. I believe I can make a worthwhile contribution," said Ray, who has been in private practice here for 15 years.

"I am aware of the multiple problems facing our public school system today and feel that parents must stay abreast of current events affecting the education of our children," he added.

An associate clinical professor in dermatopathology at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine, Ray stated: "I feel the student is the most important person in our public school system and any decisions and-or discussions must focus on this fact. I would be especially interested in their overall well-being, health and welfare in general."

Such goals, Ray said, "can best be served by a sensible application of old-fashioned discipline mixed with a serious concern for turning out a well-rounded and total person from our public schools."

Ray and his wife Betty have three daughters who were graduated from Monterey High School. Their son, John Ray III, is a junior at Monterey.

"I think that it is in the schools that we must offer our students not only an education but friendship, understanding and guidance," Ray said in a prepared statement.

"We can do all of this with concern for the taxpayer and the patient," he said.

A native of Camden, N.J., Ray did his undergraduate work at Hampden Sydney College in Virginia and received his medical degree in 1949 from the Medical College of Virginia at Richmond.

He spent several years on assignment as a physician in the U.S. Army before coming to Lubbock in 1962.

Ray is a member of numerous professional medical associations.

He named Jimmy Stringer as his campaign treasurer and James Tarlton as campaign manager.

Gary Sutton, a spokesman for the association following a Monday meeting, said the group is also seeking the removal of all members of the Amarillo civil service commission.

Chief Lee Spradlin recently ordered six officers suspended for up to 12 days for cohabitating with members of the opposite sex. The suspensions were upheld by the civil service commission.

Crewmen Escape Injury In Crash

Dean Of Texas Senate Retiring

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe paid tribute to retiring Sen. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris, as a legislator whose leadership, dedication and integrity made him "a true representative of the people."

Aikin, 72, said Monday he would not seek reelection because of increasingly painful and crippling rheumatoid arthritis. He had served longer in the Senate than any senator in history.

"It is characteristic of a man whose heart and lifetime have been allotted primarily to serving others that he would choose this course of action when he feels he can no longer totally fulfill his role," Briscoe said in a statement.

Aikin was first elected to the Texas Legislature in 1933 as a state representative from the East Texas district. After two terms in the House he won election to the Senate in 1937. He co-sponsored the landmark Gilmer-Aikin bill in 1949, which established the public school foundation program.

"During his tenure as a public official, which began in 1933, Senator Aikin held firm to his beliefs of what was right and in the best interest of his constituents and the entire state. . . . Senator Aikin's many contributions to state government, particularly in the field of education, will long be remembered by those who had the opportunity to serve with him in the legislature and by those benefited by his efforts," Briscoe said.

Aikin has been chairman of the two most powerful Senate committees — Finance and State Affairs.

"I love the Senate and know I will miss it," Aikin said in his statement released through his Austin office. "But my health is such that I am afraid that I could not carry my part of the load, and that would not be right."

"Over the past 45 years Texas has had a great record of accomplishment. I am proud to have been part of it."

He said he would continue to serve on the Legislative Budget Board until his term expires next January.

In 1973, the Senate honored Aikin by hanging his portrait in the chamber.

Jury Returns Guilty Ruling

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Former Brownfield businessman John H. Thomas was found guilty by a jury Monday of defrauding the federal government out of approximately $2.5 million in cotton support payments in 1972 and 1973.

In reaching the verdict, jurors apparently agreed with Asst. U.S. Atty. Bob Slough, who characterized Thomas as a behind-the-scenes manipulator.

"Did you ever see a puppet show?" Slough asked in final argument.

"A man puts down the puppets, then he puts down the curtain, and you can't see the man anymore. The joint ventures in this case are the curtain."

"But who is still pulling the strings? Who's running the puppet show?"

The verdict by the seven-woman, five-man jury came at 7:15 p.m. Members had retired to the jury room at 2:20 p.m., but reportedly waited about an hour to begin deliberations as court officials read a voluminous mass of exhibits for their view.

payments from the government.

Testimony indicated that one of two joint ventures leased Gaines County land from Jon-T Farms in 1972 for about $475,000. The other joint venture lease that year was for a consideration of about $1,088,000, testimony indicated.

The crux of the case was whether or not joint venture participants had a "substantive interest" in the leased land and whether or not they were "actively engaged" in farm operations.

Slough was careful throughout the trial not to impugn the motives of joint venturers, most of all of whom testified they had seen participation as an investment opportunity and realized modest profits.

"A puppet doesn't even know it's being manipulated," Slough said at one point.

Testimony from members showed they never exercised any degree of control over the ventures, McRoberts said. He said members never voted on who would join the ventures, did not select the land to be leased and attended few if any meetings.

"Their only duty was to sign the necessary documents to insure that a government check would be issued," McRoberts stated.

Defense attorney Travis Shelton, in an emotional summation, countered that Thomas was a man of vision and integrity who had sought the advice of his Brownfield attorney and of government agriculture officials before embarking on the joint venture plan.

He pointed out that two former Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) officials had testified that in early 1971 a top-echelon ASWS Washington official had told county workers of

The decision capped a hard-fought trial in U.S. District Court here, which began with opening statements by attorneys Jan. 11.

U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward will assess punishment later, after a presentencing report by probation officials.

About 60 persons, mainly friends or associates of the defendant, were in the courtroom during final arguments. Approximately 40 waited during the evening until the verdict was announced.

Thomas, 44, was convicted of 91 counts in the indictment. Corporate co-defendant Jon-T Farms, Inc., was convicted by jurors of 90 counts.

The bulk of the counts against Thomas accused him of willfully and knowingly converting Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) funds to his own use or the use of another and of supplying false information to the government agency.

Prosecutors Slough and Roger McRoberts alleged during the trial that Thomas converted CCC property by causing cotton price support payments totaling about $2.5 million to be allotted to individuals — members of joint farming ventures — who, the government claimed, had no substantive interest in land leased from Jon-T Farms.

Under provisions of the Upland Cotton Program, in effect in 1972 and 1973, there was a $55,000 cotton price support ceiling to individual farmers.

The government contended Thomas evaded the price ceiling through joint venture plans in which participants leased land from Jon-T Farms, a Thomas company.

Testimony showed that individuals signing up as joint venturers invested capital to lease land from the Thomas company and to raise a cotton crop. The individuals then received price support

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: A woman we work with has been married for 18 years, and her husband frequently sends flowers to her at the office for no special occasion. There is always a mushy card with the flowers, telling her how "great" she is and how much he loves and appreciates her.

We wonder why he doesn't send his wife flowers at home so they can both enjoy them?

We have always been a wee bit suspicious of couples who lay on a heavy lovey-dovey number in public, and we wonder if perhaps they aren't going overboard to give the impression that theirs is a super-great marriage, when in fact it's not all that great. Would you say that we were on the right track?

The Other Girls

Dear Girls: Not necessarily. Your co-worker and her husband could have a truly super-great marriage. It's a wise and thoughtful husband who lets others know that he loves and appreciates his wife. When a man publicly compliments his lady (or when a lady publicly compliments her man), the compliment is enhanced.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law taught English in a little country school in Idaho about 40 years ago, so she considers herself an authority on grammar and word usage.

Every time LeRoy gets a letter from his mother she encloses LeRoy's latest letter all marked up with corrections she's made in red pencil. We just laugh and toss it in the wastepaper basket.

LeRoy and I are both college graduates, and we know as much about writing as his mother.

Should we tell her to go jump in the lake?

Had It In Rupert, Idaho

Dear Had It: If you and LeRoy knew as much about writing as his mother, you would tell her to go jump INTO the lake. If one jumps "in" the lake, it indicates that he was already in the water before he jumped.

P.S. I don't want to be picky, but the same rule applies when tossing something "IN" the wastepaper basket.

DEAR ABBY: When I read the small print at the end of your column claiming that you send personal replies to those who send a stamped, addressed envelope, I didn't really believe it. But my life was such a total mess, that I had nothing to lose but the price of two postage stamps, so I took a chance and wrote to you.

Abby, your response changed my life. I went to a marriage counselor as you suggested and found that he was on the same wave length as I! Pow, it happened! After living with the wrong person for 19 years, I am moving in with the marriage counselor. He's Jewish, about my age, and the most intellectually stimulating and wonderfully sympathetic person I've ever met.

I'm off the booze and off the valium forever. My indebtedness is endless.

'Rich Man, Poor Man' Sequel Lacks Absorbing Qualities Of Original Book

By CAROL FELSENTHAL
American Library Assn.

Two talented writers have new novels out this fall — both of which are over-written stories full of overworked characters and themes.

Irwin Shaw's "Beggarmen, Thief" is a sequel to "Rich Man, Poor Man," the novel that sold six million copies and was adapted into a successful ABC mini-series.

In a note to the reader, Shaw makes it clear that there is no connection between this sequel and the television sequel, Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II, which ABC ran last season in order to cash in on the stupendous success of Book I. Under the terms of his contract, Shaw was powerless to prevent ABC's writers from taking the Jordache family fate into their own hands.

While "Beggarmen, Thief" will undoubtedly maintain Shaw's reputation as a best-selling writer, it won't do much for his reputation as a crack storyteller. The Jordaches seem tired and so does the plot.

In fact, the only people who may find the sequel satisfying are those who wept unashamedly in front of their TV sets when Rudy was shot to death at the end of the television version. The book has a completely different — and happier — denouement.

The sequel, which opens in 1968 with Tommy's burial at sea, lacks the qualities that made "Rich Man, Poor Man" such an absorbing tale — the sprawl of three decades and three generations, Rudolph, Tommy and Gretchen Jordache's valiant struggle to survive and surmount their dreary, violent upbringing in a small Hudson River town.

Furthermore, Tommy, "Rich Man, Poor Man's" most compelling character, is dead. Rudy has changed so drastically — from a man devoted to helping himself to a man devoted to helping others — that one suspects Shaw's memory of his original (published in 1970) has grown hazy.

But the crippling weakness of "Beggarmen, Thief" is that it focuses on the younger generation of Jordaches — Billy (Gretchen's son) and Wesley (Tommy's son). The cousins are flat characters — pale reflections of their parents.

Depending on the acuity of your memory, you may find Shaw's devices for reminding you of what happened in "Rich Man, Poor Man" annoying or helpful. But you'll almost certainly find them clumsy. After a while, Rudy's regular reminiscing rambles. And Wesley's literal search for his dead father by crossing the country talking to Tommy's friends and enemies often results in tedious reshapes of "Rich Man, Poor Man."

"Beggarmen, Thief" ends with Rudolph's and Gretchen's futures fixed, while Billy's and Wesley's are still floundering. And the lives of the youngest Jordaches — Tommy's son, born within months of his father's murder, and Rudolph's daughter — are totally unexplored.

Obviously, there's potential for a sequel to the sequel, but not much promise in the possibility. After "Beggarmen, Thief," it's hard to care what happens to the Jordaches.

Philip Roth's new novel, "The Professor of Desire," is also a sequel — well actually it's an antecedent since it focuses on the early years of David Kepesh, last seen as the hero of "The Breast," the bizarre story of a man of mountainous sexual appetites who is finally — and literally — transformed into a mountainous mammary.

In a recent interview, Roth said that he'd tried to write a sequel to "The Breast" but gave up because he couldn't tolerate contemplating his character's

2 ♥ Pass 4 ♠ Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Carding is the language of defense, and East-West cooperated nicely on this deal to defeat South's sound four-heart contract.

Since North held distributional values, he used the Stayman Convention in an effort to locate a 4-4 heart fit. When partner obliged by showing a heart suit, North's hand revalued to 12 points, so he wasted no time in leaping to game.

West could have led either black suit, but his choice of the jack of spades was a prudent selection. In the light of South's one no trump opening bid, a club lead might have proved far too costly. Declarer won in hand and led a trump to the ace and another to West's king. On these two tricks East followed first with the nine of hearts and then with the deuce.

In signalling length in a side suit, the normal procedure is to echo with an even number and play up the line with an odd number. In the trump suit, this is reversed—you might not be able to spare your highest trump if you have only two. Thus East's trump plays indicated that he had started with an odd number of trumps—exactly three.

However, a trump echo is more than just a method of giving count. Most defenders use the echo to show either the ability or the desire to ruff.

West had no problem interpreting his partner's message. From his hand, East could want a ruff in only one suit—clubs. So West shifted to a low club and was gratified and relieved to see his partner ruff with his remaining trump for the second defensive trick. Try as he might, declarer could not escape losing two more tricks—to the ace of diamonds and king of clubs. Down one!

Jane Byrne Fights New Chicago Political Machine

By DAVID SMOTHERS
CHICAGO (UPI) — Mrs. O'Leary was a piker when it came to another Chicago Irishwoman, Jane Byrne.

blaze that bled down most of Chicago in 1871.

chael A. Bilandic. Single-handed, she has forced Bilandic to go on a television news show to deny he is a liar. Because of her, he took a lie test and released results attesting he is not a crook.

Bilandic fired her last month, Mrs. Byrne was Chicago's commissioner of consumer sales at $41,600 a year. Daley put her there. As such, she regulated the city's cab companies.

any Chicago newsman who asked her politely a notarized memorandum detailing what she said were the goods on the taxi deal.

Bilandic brushed her aside, she said, and would pay no attention to the figures.

Optimists, Innocents Major Book Characters

George Carrington walks his dog along the East River, captivated by the sight of a ship bound for open waters. "He raised his head and sniffed, hoping for a breath of the sea, and smelled gasoline fumes instead."

characters and situations. Maxwell's world is inhabited by people who embark on gastronomic, not spiritual, pilgrimages, and who are afflicted not by murder, madness or grave malady, but by disappointments, doubts and defeats. He rarely swerves from the domestic, but the pleasures and horrors he describes are rarely slight.

For 21 years, until he died Jan. 20, 1976, Richard J. Daley ruled Chicago as its mayor and Democratic party boss. He was accused of many things and some of his friends went to jail. But he never got cornered like this.

It appeared a bit of a crisis until Bilandic announced he had negotiated a settlement. A month later, the City Council awarded Checker an 11.8 per cent rate increase and Mrs. Byrne started talking.

At a newspaper's request and expense, she took a lie detector test and, the testers said, passed it. Bilandic took a test of his own, with the same firm, and also got a passing grade.

"After the order came out that I was no longer to talk to the PTC, I went to U.S. Attorney Thomas Sullivan. I thought 'I'm not taking any chances with these people... I will not be a scapegoat'... I knew I was getting out."

Ray and Ellen Ormsby, touring the French countryside, take the long road back to Paris. They are on a pilgrimage to Perigueux in search of a restaurant passionately praised by American friends. The "elegante salle a manger" described by their friends and by the "Guide Gastronomique" turns out to "look like a hotel coffee shop. There weren't even any tablecloths." The food is good, but not nearly as good as they'd expected.

Although the physical distance between Maxwell's Manhattan and Paul Theroux's Malaysia is mammoth, the psychic distance is minute. The characters in both short story collections wrestle with the feeling of being out of joint with the time.

Bilandic has, and his difficulty is largely because of Jane Byrne. She is a Daley woman. Bilandic is a Daley man. Chicagoans don't know which to believe. Until

She had already talked to the Federal Trade Commission, she said, Daley's direction. Now she went to the U.S. attorney.

But two of the four questions Bilandic answered negatively dealt with whether he had received a bribe. Mrs. Byrne never said he did.

"Mayor Bilandic was not aware I had been cooperating prior to his becoming mayor with the FTC," Mrs. Byrne said. "(At a later meeting) I said 'You know the FTC has that (Bansley and Kiener) report and he looked at me and said 'when did they get it?'"

Dorothy and John Reynolds, also touring the French countryside, return to a hotel they'd visited and loved 18 years earlier. The lovely little hotel now has a new addition, built in the "style" of an American motel. A giant parking lot, packed with cars and sightseeing buses, now blocks the view of the medieval Mont-Saint-Michel Abby. To satiate and stimulate the tourists' hunger for abby ashtrays and paper weights, souvenir shops have obliterated exquisite 500-year-old walled gardens.

Theroux's cast of characters includes a motley lot of aging expatriate Americans and British living in Ayer Hitam (Black Water), a Malaysian town at jungle's and civilization's edge. Relics of another age, they have outlived and outstayed their countries' colonial glory, clinging now to memories and a tacky white man's club.

One charge spun off into another and members of the party apparatus known as "the Chicago machine" began to wonder who was running the place. Chicago Alderman Roman Pucinski, one of the most savvy of them, said, "Like 'Alice In Wonderland,' everything is getting curi-ous and curi-ouser."

"Expose him! Expose him!" Mrs. Byrne says she urged a reporter June 9, the day she said Bilandic started greasing the wheels at a secret meeting at Chicago's little-used Midway Airport.

Characters like these — optimists and innocents stunned, sickened and finally just saddened by change, by shattered hopes, and by unexpected evil — populate "Over By the River," novelist William Maxwell's first collection of short stories. Spanning three decades of his work, most of these stories were published in the "New Yorker," where Maxwell spent forty years as an editor.

An American diplomat, who narrates all the stories, has been dispatched to Ayer Hitam to dismantle the U.S. consulate — also a relic of another age when Americans owned thriving rubber plantations there.

HOAG-HOLLINGSWORTH

Karen Lynn Hoag and Michael James Hollingsworth were honored with an announcement party at 8 p.m. Saturday in the home of the bride-elect's parents.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Keith Hollingsworth, parents of the future bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kee, grandparents of the bride-elect; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil James Hollingsworth and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Portwood, grandparents of the future bridegroom; Mrs. Pearl Portwood and Mrs. Belle Burns, great-grandmothers of the future bridegroom.

The couple plans to be married March 18 in Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

Their focus is on families — on the rough and sometimes impassable road to understanding that father and son, husband and wife, brother and sister stumble along. Maxwell's families are all affluent. They live in Manhattan highrises where they're plagued by disagreeable and domineering servants; in the "perfect" Murray Hill brownstone where they're unhappy amid a clutter of culture and antiques; in middle-class comfort in Draperville, Ill.; on estates in what were once small towns but are now suburbs of New York, with all modern inconveniences transported via the Merritt Parkway.

Public Tours Of Black House Set

In fact, the stories share such similar settings, themes and characters that the collection reads like a loosely-plotted novel. Occasionally characters in one story reappear, several years older, in another.

HERFORD (Special) — The E.B. Black House, will be opened to the public Friday, Saturday and Sunday for the first time in conjunction with the fifth annual L'Allegra Study Club Antique Show and Sale.

In the title story "Over by the River," the secure shell that envelops the Carrington family starts to crack. A neighbor's cook, who used to gaily wave to the girls on their walk to school, jumps to her death in the river. The youngest girl is tormented by dreams that she's being stalked by a vicious lion. While walking the dog, her father sees a woman lying in a doorway. Later, he's awakened by someone crying "Help!" outside his window. He's horrified but catatonic.

The Black house, given to Deaf Smith County in April of 1977 as an annex to the Historical Museum here, has been restored to its original beauty for its debut showing.

Maxwell writes tightly, with rarely a wasted word or incident. He also creates a dramatic tension, remarkable in stories that mainly deal with rather conventional

The antique show and sale will again be headquartered at the Community Center, where antique dealers from five states will have their wares displayed. Jody Skiles is show chairman. L'Allegra Study Club president is Janette Caviness.

Haggerton-Riley Repeat Vows

Sherry Haggerton and Wayne E. Riley were married in a 2 p.m. ceremony Saturday in the Reese Air Force Base Chapel.

Tickets, priced at $1.50, will give the bearer access to the Black house, as well as the antique sale during the three day show. The Black house and the sale at the Community Center will be open from 1-9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 1-6 p.m. Sunday.

Honor attendants were Tammy London and Abe Sandel. Parents of the bride are Mrs. June Benton and Joe Haggerton. Riley is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Riley. The bride attended W.T. White High School in Dallas. The bridegroom attended Cleveland High School. After a wedding trip to St. Louis, Mo., the couple will live in Lubbock.

Proceeds of ticket sales will be contributed by L'Allegra Study Club to the Museum for the purchase of new Ionic columns to replace the original ones on the exterior of the Black house. Each year, L'Allegra members have donated the profits of their antique show for the benefit of the community.

Raiders Slip Past TCU

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor
FORT WORTH — The Raiders ran through airports and they tried harder. But, they didn't finish like Avis. Not Monday night.
It wasn't all a case of getting here.

though, as the Raiders held off a TCU charge for a 58-55 squeaker.
And when the final buzzer sounded, Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers could finally draw a deep breath. It was probably the first big one he had been allowed since early Monday morning.

The victory brought the Raiders' South-west Conference record to 6-3 and 14-6 for the season. It also snapped a two-game losing streak, the only time this year Tech has lost two in a row.

But, for a time, it didn't look as if the Raiders would be in a position to win or lose.

There was this business of getting to TCU's Daniel-Meyer Coliseum. Fog in Lubbock zapped the Monday morning flight which was to bring the team to the Metroplex. A bus was chartered about the time Myers got the word that he probably would be able to get out of the airport.

The team left a 4 p.m., flew to Dallas and walked into the Fort Worth arena at 6:30 p.m. Start of the contest was delayed ten minutes to allow full warmup.

Then there was the matter of the Frogs. Thanks to a slower pace, the Raiders didn't have to exhaust full energy. They moseyed to a 25-22 halftime lead and, thanks to a surge of early-second-half rebounds by Joe Baxter, Tech protected that lead.

And, when Mike Russell hit a free shot with 6:12 left to open a 10-point lead (46-36), it appeared as if the Raiders had things under control.

Appearances can be deceiving, however.

For the Frogs outscored Tech 9-2 during the next two minutes, and when Mike Edwards missed the first of a one-and-one with 3:56, that 46-45 lead didn't look too comfortable. Frankly, it was worse than the fog.

To make it worse, Frog Tim Marion rebounded. But, Tech choked off that threat, regained possession and went into a serious delay game.

Baxter, who finished with 10 points, drilled a jumper from the key with 2:44 left, but Steve Scales nullified that with a jumper from the top of the key with 2:25 remaining. After killing some more clock, Baxter popped from the key as be-

LCC GAME POSTPONED

Lubbock Christian College basketball Coach Darrell Price, after checking road conditions and finding snow falling heavily all the way to Dalhart this morning, called Panhandle State and got tonight's basketball game postponed until Thursday, Feb. 9.

IT'S UP FOR GRABS — Three Monterey girls and two Lubbock High players converge on this rebound effort under the LHS basket Monday night. Rhonda Dunn (44), Jana Field (34) and Janet Mears (14) watch for MHS along with Regina Dudley (13) and Keri Baker of LHS. MHS won 61-24. See Story, Page 4, Sec. D. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

PERKINS

NFL Rules Puzzle Fan

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. I hear rumors that "mean" Joe Green and Jack Lambert had a fistfight. Is this true? If so, who won?

— Ben Jackson, Walkerville, Mont.

Q. What can you tell me about the reported bar-room brawl between John Hicks and Jack Gregory of the Giants?

— Eddie Whitman, Indianapolis, Ind.

A. The Greene vs. Lambert story, for some reason, has persistently come up over the last two seasons. At the first report, Pittsburgh's Lambert made a memorable statement, standing nude in front of his locker. "If I'd had a fight with Joe Greene, don't you think I'd have some mark on my body?"

The Hicks-Gregory battle was for real, but essentially hilarious. They got into fisticuffs in the men's room of the Tattle-Tale, a teeny-bopper joint on New York's East Side. Giants' linebacker Brian Kelley was the peacemaker, and he put Hicks and Gregory into separate cabs and sent them home. Then he remembered something: Hicks and Gregory are roommates. So Kelley jumped into another cab to get to the Hicks-Gregory apartment before they did. The Giants may have a winner yet.

Q. I would like to know how Terry Metcalf made the Pro bowl. He wasn't even one of the top ground gainers, yet Tony Dorsett was and didn't even start until the tenth game.

— Wayne Black, Austin

A. The Pro Bowl squads are decided by vote of the players and coaches, the proviso being you can't vote for a member of your own team. Metcalf is an established star, the MVP of his team, and one of the great all-purpose backs. Impressions are formed early in the season for all-star balloting, and Dorsett was not allowed to start until the last few games. Still, Dorsett was the fifth back in the voting for the Pro Bowl, and for a while it seemed that Metcalf's injury from the Tampa (14th) game would open the door for Tony. Wait till next year.

Q. I would like to know why the NFL doesn't have the two-point conversion and why does the NFL require both feet to be in bounds on a reception. Also, what happened to the four-point field goal from early football? A friend asks, since the NBA said it would experiment with the no-foul-out and three-point field goal last summer, will it be put in next season?

— Pat Nusneck, Louisville, Ky.

A. Originally, the NFL rejected the two-point conversion because it was an invention of the old AFL. Then the sudden death procedure was put in to decide tie games, eliminating the main reason for having two-point options.

The NFL feels that the one-foot-in-bounds rule makes the field 60 yards wide. The four-point field goal was tossed out because it cheapened the value of a touchdown. In those days, guys could dropkick the fat football from 60 yards out.

The NBA may go to the no-foul-out rule, but the three-point field goal is not likely to be included. Like the NFL vs. the AFL, the NBA thought the old ABA three-pointer was a Globetrotter stunt.

Q. I would like to know the ruling on a free ball in pro football. If the team that kicks off for an onside kick which we know must go 10 yards, does the other team have to touch the ball or can the team that kicks it recover it? I say on all kickoffs the same thing is true—the kicking team can recover it, except in the end zone.

— Carl Minguski, Port, Mich.

A. All kickoffs are free balls, as long as they stay in the field of play, including the end zone. The receiving team does not have to touch the ball for the kicking team to claim it. That's why you see kick returners "down" the ball in the end zone. Until this happens, the back Judge does not blow his whistle. There was quite a hassle over this play this season in a Houston-Cincinnati game. Houston claimed the ball in the end zone, but an official mistakenly thought a Cincinnati player had touched it while his foot was out of bounds. Films showed he was never near the ball, and Houston was denied a winning TD.

EHS-DHS Grab City Spotlight

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It may not be the only game in town, but it should be. And for obvious reasons, too.

• The bout pits the city's top two teams. (Or rather for the sake of arguments, the teams with the best won-loss records.)

• A district title could be decided.

• And it pits double arch-rivals, too.

So who are these masked men? Why the Estacado Matadors and the Dunbar Panthers, pray tell. And tonight the dynamic duo squares off in the second and final chapter of "Bombs Over East Lubbock" or "Return of Voit Jack". Meaning there's going to be a whole lot of shooting going on.

The bout tonight is expected to be witnessed by more than 2,000 fans in the EHS gym. In their last meeting a crowd estimated at more than 1,200 crowded in to the DHS gym and an additional 200 fans were turned away at the door.)

Also on tap for tonight, Lubbock High meets Coronado at 7:30 p.m. in a District 4-AAAA game in the CHS gym, Monterey travels to Plainview for another District 4-AAAA contest, the Estacado girls meet the Dunbar fens in the DHS confines and the Lubbock High girls are at Frenship.

The game pitting Lubbock Christian High and Christ the King set for tonight has been postponed until Feb. 7.

The Monterey-Plainview game and Lubbock High-Coronado tilt start the second round in the loop wars for all four clubs.

If tonight's matchup between Dunbar, the defending loop champ and Estacado, is anything like the first then a few sweaty palms might be in order for both coaches, J.J. Wood of Estacado and Joe McWilliams of Dunbar.
