West Texas Drug 'Corridor' Probed

are growing increasingly concerned about a drug trafficking corridor through West Texas that has the potential for corrupting local and county government, says a U.S. attorney.

A 350-mile strip of land stretching from Van Horn to Sanderson, nicknamed by narcotics officers as the Permian Basin corridor, has even caused worry in Washington, said Jamie C. Boyd of San Anto-

Evidence of this concern developed early Saturday when Big Spring authorities said a stolen airplane loaded with 600 pounds of Mexican marijuana made a forced landing in dense fog on Interstate 20 west of Big Spring.

Police said they received a call shortly after 4 a.m. from a passing trucker who sighted the single engine Cessna at a roadside park 12 miles west of Big

So, with the clock ticking down to the 5 p.m. Monday filing deadline for the May 6 primary elections, here is a scorecard on how things stand locally.

Five men are vying to replace retiring U.S. Rep. George Mahon in the 19th Congressional District.

The trafficking corridor, which has developed in recent years, includes Big Bend National Park and the Presidio border entry port. It is one of the least protected thoroughfares along the border for overland and airborne drug smugglers, Boyd said in an interview at his Midland

"Corruption Money"

"The thing that troubles me most of all isn't the health problems caused by the drug flow, but rather the tremendous amount of money available for corruption of public office which is generated through the narcotics business," he said. "One sheriff tells me he was approached and offered a six-figure number if he would lay off a particular road. He said he had heard of other officials who had had similar offers made to them.

"If there's that kind of money spread around, it's going to tell me we ought to make a hard attempt toward enforcment of the narcotics laws," he said.

Reviewed By Agencies Boyd said he and members of President Carter's border agency reorganization team have reviewed the corridor's potential for traffickers and what can be done to stop the drug flow.

Big Bend National Park, a rugged and desolate region that attracts thousands of tourists each year, has developed a reputation as "the place to pick up your load," Boyd said. This has instigated recent talks between Boyd and state and federal officials over how to make the park safer for tourists.

He pointed to recent roadblocks of major arteries cutting out of the park as a reason for the concern. One weekend in November resulted in arrests and seizures of nine persons for felony narcotics possession; eight persons for misdemeanor narcotics possession; two pering: 104 pounds of marijuana; and $10,- 000 believed payment for drugs. "When I see lists of the type of people apprehended there and the type of nefarious things going on and the type of people dealing in trafficking, I would say tourists are not entirely safe. It's an un-

Other diplomatic sources said that if the negotiations are resumed, Israel might acknowledge that Palestinians have "legitimate rights."

Palestinian Dispute
Sadat halted negotiations with Israel on Jan. 18 in a conflict over the Palestinian issue and in a public war of words with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Carter and Sadat met alone for 45 minutes Saturday morning before aides joined them for a lengthier session last-ing one hour and 40 minutes. Carter and Sadat also discussed the Middle East sit-uation over a luncheon of chicken breast and cherry pie.

Although administration officials acknowledged that Sadat was worried about the future of the on-again, offagain negotiations with Israel, a White House press statement said, "President Carter feels the discussions have gone

Instant Notoriety

But one airline representative thinks some of the abortive landings and passengers' inconvenience could have been prevented.

For three days and nights last month, as the pea-soup rolled around as regular as dinnertime, Lubbock gained a short-lived notoriety as the worst city in Texas in which to land a plane.

During those waning days of January, 47 flights were unable to set down at the airport and at least one pilot took a circuitous route over the facility for an hour before giving up and returning to the Dallas/Fort Worth Airport.

Costly For Airlines

Of the 47 overflights, 20 were Continental flights, 12 were Southwest planes, Braniff International had eight and Texas International had eight and Texas International had seven turned away.

HAPPY (AP) - Contrary to its motto, the "town without a frown" is surly. It blames fickle farm prices, unruly fuel bills and a long dry spell. Not to mention governmental bungling. "It's definitely a depressed situation," confided Bob Pulsipher, an unhappy bank official and mayor of this Panhandle hamlet along U.S. 87 north of Lub-"Our farmers are running out of underground water, and they're having to rely on Mother Nature. And she hasn't been too good to us."

Pulsipher's plight, and that of his tiny town of 705, is not uncommon in farm communities across the country, as revealed by the farm strike. But it is more pronounced in this region - below the giant cattle feedlots of the Panhandle and above the rich, productive cottonlands of the South Plains.

"Little towns like ours seem to be slowly drying up," said Pulsipher, 47, who was raised on a farm in northern Utah and settled here 16 years ago. Deserted farms are becoming more commonplace as the economy and can-ankerous Mother Nature conspire to drive men and their dreams away from the land and into the cities.

Health Sciences Center Hospital realized it has an image problem.

Too many people, say Lubbock County Hospital District officials, are interpreting the word county as "charity" or "indigent" - the way it is applied in many other metropolitan county hospitals. J.C. Rickman, chairman of the district's board of managers, found himself fielding telephone queries whether the new health-care institution will accept patients who pay their way.

Rickman's answer: the hospital not only welcomes such patients but desperateneeds them.

'We put so much time and work into getting the facility opened and telling people how excellent it is, we may have neglected to say who can use it," Rickman said.

"It is essential we have paying patients out there. If not, the hospital will become a burden on our taxpayers. It is unrealistic to expect us to operate this hospital strictly as an indigent hospital."

Added Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the hospital district and hospital: "One of the things that enticed me to come here was that this is a community hospital. Our doors are open to anybody. Everyone is welcome.

That philosophy has been evident in the make-up of the new hospital's clientele since Wednesday's opening. The patients, said Rickman, have represented a "good mix" - in two respects.

First, they were in for a "broad range" of services, from surgery and intensive care to obstetrics and neonatal attention.

The patients also constituted a mix with regard to ability to pay for services, Rickman said. While some qualified for taxpayer-financed care under the hospital district's medical indigency program, cases for sale, but apparently they just weren't as good as the free ones.

There are laws against taking the milk cases, if you can imagine posting bond for such a crime. The Texas dairy industry, represented by the Dairy Products Institute of Texas, tried to pass legislation through the 1977 Texas Legislature to provide for deposits on milk cases such as those on soft drink cases. The bill did not pass and now Texas milk plant operators are seeking ways short of legislation to solve the problem.

"We'd give anything if someone would develop a one-way case," said Murphy. Otherwise, retailers, schools and restaurants are being asked to protect the cases by storing them in a safe place until they can picked up, and to honor the cases as dairy equipment and not "just another box.'

Dairy operators are asking the dairy employees servicing the retail outlet to pick up all empty cases at every delivery unless other arrangements are made They are also installing individual route accounting as well as individual customer accounting.

Murphy said he knows most persons don't realize they are taking the property of others and he takes some of the problem in a light-hearted way. Of course, he can afford to; it doesn't cost him a nickel.

high of 70. The National Weather Service looked for high temperatures to range only into the upper 40s today, with another warming trend due Monday. Skies were sunny over most of West Texas and most of East Texas Saturday afternoon, while low clouds prevailed over North Central and Far South Texas. Light drizzle fell at Corpus Christi, and light rainfall was recorded in the Houston and Brownsville areas, with a .32 of an inch of moisture recorded at Browns-Presidio, with a high reading of 74, topped the state's temperature map, while El Paso posted a 72 high reading

Permian Basin Panel To Hear Grant Report

MIDLAND (Special) - Directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission will hear a report from the Regional Development Review Committee on Big Spring's grant application for Title IX implementation at the PBRPC's regular meeting Wednesday in the conference room at the Midland Regional Air Terminal Office Building.

If Big Spring receives the $2.9 million grant, the city plans to institute a program of "Economic Adjustment Strategy" activities to counteract the effects of the closure of Webb Air Force Base.

The proposed project will be for the development of the base as an industrial park with municipal airport facilities, a feature city officials feel should aid in selling" the industrial site to prospective buyers.

bany, N.Y., at 13 below, and Saranac, PBRPC directors also will hear a report from the Human Resources Advisory Committee on the Reeves County Community Council grant application for a renewal grant administration of General Community Programming.

If the grant is approved, Reeves County would use it to support current commun-ity programs, including administrative services for five centers and supportive services for one center, development of training plans for the effectiveness of the board, staff and volunteers, and continued evaluation of program effectiveness. Other items to be considered by the board of directors are the review of project priorities for the Criminal Justice Program Budget, a resolution authorizing the Executive director to contract with the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas for participation by the PBRPC in a burn care demonstration project, and a resolution to approve the Regional Alcoholism Plan to be submitted to the Texas Commission on Alcohol.

Carnival Back To 'Normal'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Carnival staggered onward toward Mardi Gras Saturday. Mayor Moon Landrieu said this year's festivities were just like the good old days before the plague of penniless celebrators began its annual descent on

'We are getting back to normal," Landrieu said.

For Carnival, the two-week spree before Mardi Gras, "normal" means packed hotels, crowded bars, busy restaurants, hard-drinking swarms in the French Quarter

On the great day itself - Feb. 7 this year - "normal" means a million people packed along parade routes for one final fling before Ash Wednesday signals the

To Landrieu, it also means a sharp tapering off of the influx of penniless young wanderers, packing bedrolls on their back, that city and police officials had come to consider a Mardi Gras curse.

Instead of nice clean, free-spending tourists, the youngsters often begged for coins, slept in doorways, affronted well-heeled visitors. Police campaigns against them, though handicapped by civil rights organizations, overtaxed the

All that seems to have ended now, said Landrieu.

It is just as well, because this Carnival has had its own problem. The date for Mardi Gras - French for Fat Tuesday - comes so early this year that Carnival has fallen in a stretch of chill and rainy weather. The long-range forecast for Mardi Gras said it might get up as high as 40 - guaranteeing goose pimples for any maidens who take to cavorting topless in the Quarter, or for those showoffs who like to wear a costume which leaves a bare rear shining bright.

There are 55 big, gaudy parades of Carnival put on by private social groups called krewes (crews). A lot of money and effort goes into them and it takes a lot of weather to stop them.

Nearly all thus far rolled on schedule, and hang the rain. When one krewe canceled, the parade official who had to make the dread announcement wept.

Some processions of tinseled floats had been remarkably quiet, though as the rain did reduce the usual number of brass bands. The Krewe of Hercules was accompanied by just one - a band from Rogersville, Tenn., High School that had come a long distance and was determined to play.

Enthusiastic Crowd Begins Rio Carnival RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) - Fat

King Momo barely made it to his official opening of the Rio Carnival Saturday, and while the "800-member superband" turned out to be a dud, the crowd's enthusiasm more than made up for it.

Momo - a 230-pound radio announcer named Edson Fontana - was to open the festival from the steps of the municipal theater at noon and lead what the city tourist agency said would be an "800member superband" down Rio Branco

But the "superband" turned out to be about 60 off-key musicians and as it moved slowly down the avenue accompanied by scantily clad samba dancers. tourists and journalists milled about asking, "Where's Momo?"

Suddenly Fontana, who won his second straight fat and jolly contest to earn the right to preside over the four-day celebration, scooted from a side street and lowered himself into his electric car shared with the festival princess.

Clad in a red and green sequined suit and sporting a Prince Valiant hairstyle beneath his bejeweled crown, he declared "Death to Sadness," and, fulfilling Carnival tradition, proclaimed "Let Happiness Reign!"

The band, unable to produce the kind of earsplitting din that Carnival demands, deferred to the enthusiastic crowd, which pounded out spicy samba rhythms on garbage can lids, sticks and pepers, shuffling and dancing their way down the avenue before dispersing to local parties and festivals.

Commerce, banks and government offices closed their doors at noon Friday, freeing employees for sunbathing and swimming on a string of crowded beaches where summer temperatures went above 104 degrees. The summit of pre-Carnival activity came late Friday night and early Satur-day when 2,000 well-heeled guests paid up to $250 apiece for dining, dancing, drinking and celebrity watching at a fancy costume ball on a flat-topped hill on the way to Sugarloaf Mountain, one of Rio's most famous landmarks.

The Rio state security department canceled all police force leaves and days off and put a 27,500-member force on duty for the festival. Health authorities set up mobile dispensaries to cope with injuries and accidents.

The festivities culminate in the grand parade of Rio's 10 group One Samba Schools Sunday night and Monday morning, when some 20,000 percussionists, matrons in full flowing dresses and women in postage-stamp sized costumes, swivel and shuffle their way down the city's brand new 800 yard "Sambadrome" in the 14 hour extravaganza that makes Carnival world famous.

Demolition Begins On Atlanta Theater

ATLANTA (AP) - Demolition began Saturday on the Loew's Grand Theater building, scene of the 1939 premiere of "Gone With The Wind." Most of the 86year-old structure had been destroyed by fire last Monday.

A wrecking crew began clearing the debris from the upper floors of the seven-story structure on Peachtree Street. The job is expected to take up to five weeks.

The 2,300-seat theater, closed last summer for lack of business, occupied the back portion of the building and was not heavily damaged by the flames.

Survey Shows Latin Leaders Support Panama Canal Treaty

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The Penama Canal treates, subject of widespread debate in the United States, are a matter of concern as well in Latin America. Here is an Associated Press survey of sew Latin Americans view the proposed treaties urning the waterway ever to Panama.)

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Many leaders and newspapers in Latin American strongly support Panamanian control of the Panama Canal, and suggest that United States prestige in Latin America will plummet if it fails to ratify the canal

Parole-Refusing California Inmate Wins Discharge

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) -Convicted murderer L. Ewing Scott, an urbane 81-yearold financier who for years refused parole, will be freed in March from the vellow walls of San Quentin prison.

Scott will be just discharged - no strings - after baffling state parole officials for years by maintaining that accepting parole would acknowledge guilt for the murder of his wife in 1955. "Hell will freeze over before I ever get out on parole," the irascible Scott said in 1975 after refusing parole despite two decades behind bars.

But Scott, one of the oldest con-victs in the 20,000-inmate California prison system, said in a letter to a reporter he will leave "this damned trap" in March and will go first to nearby San Francisco for a week and then to Los Angeles. He was convicted of murdering his

Although her body was never found, her dentures and eyeglasses were discovered near an incinerator in the backyard of their home.

The California Department of Corrections said Friday Scott's life sentence had been ended and he was free without any of the conditions usually placed on parolees.

The survey by AP correspondents throughout Latin America also shows widespead feelings that:

- Panama has a moral and legal right to the canal and violence may erupt if the treaties aren't ratified by the U.S.

- Panamanians will be able to run the the treaties for the United States to relinguish control

Ratification will end a major obstacle to better relations between the United States and its southern neighbors.

'We Latin Americans would react with great discouragement if this very beautiful effort by President Carter ... were frustrated," said President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico.

President Carter signed the treaties with Panama's leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos, last July but the negotiations began during the administration of President Lyndon B. Johnson and continued through those of Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

"The history of Latin America is the history of its decolonization," Lopez Portillo added. "Any situation that belittles our sovereignty and the possibility of determining our own future is a mat-

America." The canal is not a burning issue in Brazil, Latin America's largest nation. Foreign Ministry officials, who asked to remain anonymous, said the government hoped for "the harmonious resolution of the canal dispute and the implementation of the treaties.'

In Paraguay, Gen. Alfredo Stroessner's government has said it maintains a policy of respect for the right of a people for self determination but declines to comment specifically on the canal issue.

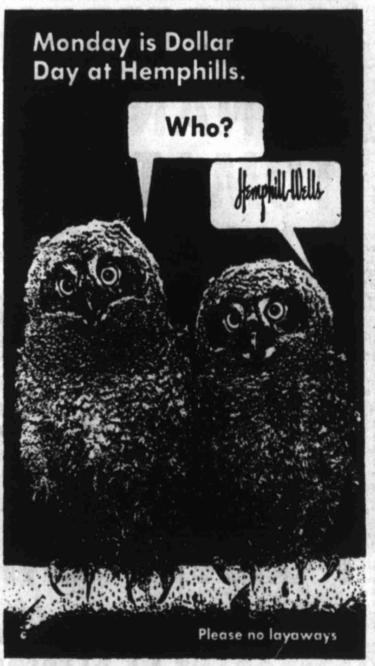

Paraguayan news media described the treaties as an important event for Panama and relations between the United States and Latin America. One newspaper. Ultima Hora, called the treaties the most important international event of

Thus, comments from Washington and elsewhere this past week bode badly for the Carter program.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill predicted that Carter might get 60 percent of Business has given mixed reviews of Carter's overall economic plan, which includes cuts worth more than $10 billion in business-related areas, including a reduction in the corporate income tax rate.

U.S. trade deficit is at a record level.

The proposal would phase out, over three years, the deferral of U.S. taxes on foreign income earned overseas by foreign subsidiaries. It also would gradually eliminate a provision that allows companies to set up a special entity to handle exports with only half subject to taxation.

Elimination of the DISC provision, which stands for domestic international sales corporation, and other foreign reform proposals are designed to increase revenue about $1.1 billion, according to administration estimates.

Even more controversial have been

Even more controversial have been Carter's proposals to scale down business entertainment deductions, also known as his campaign against 'the three martini lunch.' Carter's plan consists of eliminating tax deductions for such items as club dues, hunting lodge trips and cutting to 50 percent the amount that could be deducted for business meals.

Treasury officials estimate that such a move would bring in $1.5 billion in taxes. But the administration faces stiff opposition from a number of groups, among them the National Restaurant Association, which argues that in its industry alone the plan would leave 44,000 of the industry's 8 million workers jobless, threaten states with a loss of $319 million in sales tax revenues annually and force many restaurants to close.

In other business developments this past week:

-The nation's unemployment rate dropped to its lowest level in three years when the Commerce Department an-nounced the figures for January. The 6.3 percent rate was down from 6.4 percent in December, marking its lowest level since October 1974, when it was at 5.9

But there was little improvement among blacks and other minority groups. Among minorities, the unemploym rate for women declined to 10.8 percent from 11.5 percent in December, but rose 0.7 percent for men to 9.8 percent; and also was up 0.7 percent for youths at 38.7

-The U.S. trade deficit for 1977 came to a record $26.72 billion, overwhelming the previous record of $6.38 billion in 1972. The amount of the trade delicit was expected, largely because of huge amounts of foreign oil the United States has purchased. Oil imports in 1977 came to a record at $42.14 billion. Commerce officials see similar deficit problems this year because of the likelihood that America will face another huge bill on oil imports in 1978.

—U.S. Steel Corp. underscored industry problems by announcing a 89 percent drop in its fourth quarter earnings and a 66 percent profit decline for all of 1977. In light of those results, it cut its quarterly dividend to 40 cents a share from 55

U.S. Steel and other domestic steel firms put pressure on the government last year to act on complaints that competition from foreign steelmakers has seriously hurt business. The government is scheduled to implement a price plan for steel imports designed to keep imported products from being sold at unfairly low prices.

-The government's index of leading economic indicators, which is supposed to aid in forecasting trends, rose for the sixth consecutive month, the government-reported. The index moved up 0.1 per-cent in December to 135.3, based on an ndex of 100.

During the last three months the index has increased at an modest average of .05 percent. But, based on those trends, Commerce Department Chief Economist, Courtenay Slater said she expected the economy to grow "at a rather healthy rate over the next few months."

Federal Regulation NEW YORK (AP) - The head of one of the nation's leading credit-rating agencies doesn't want the U.S. governmemt "bumbling its way" into the municipal sector of the bond market. Brenton W. Harries, president of New York-based Standard & Poor's Corp., told a municipal bond seminar in Houston this week that he isn't happy about the municipal disclosure bill recently introduced in the Senate. He said he objects to "the specter of this federal bureaucracy bumbling its way" into "the financing of thousands of reputable (tax-exempt) debt issues." Harries, one of the most outspoken and respected bond market experts, said the bill introduced by Sen. Harrison Williams Jr., D-N.J., would require municipal issuers with outstanding debt of more than $50 million to prepare annual reports in accordance with Securities and Exchange Commission rules. He said he is worried because the bill implies that issuers must publish a statement that would follow any rules or regulations the SEC may prescribe as appropriate or necessary.

Similar phrases appear in "12 places" in the bill, he said, and include "such matters as telling issuers the information they will report and the form the data is to take, including the financial statements and the accounting methods the issuer will use in preparing financial state-

Harries, who questioned whether "the SEC should be empowered to order changes in the accounting methods of the City of Houston or the State of Texas," for example, said the government is intervening in the municipal bond market for two reasons: New York City's recent fiscal crisis, which resulted in thousands of debt holders owning securities of ques-tionable value, and the fact that more individuals are investing in the bond mar-

The proposed rule would require municipal issuers, which have no such requirement, to do nearly the same thing. Citing the fact that there were about 800 corporate new issues and 5,000 municipal sales last year, he said that the proposed rule's requirement would create enough paperwork to bring the tax-exempt market "to a grinding halt."

He added that debt-raising activities of most municipalities-as opposed to corporations-already are restrained by local finance laws. Just because "it didn't work well in New York City" doesn't mean federal intervention should have to be suffered, he said. In the bond market this week, corpo-

Corn, Milo Production Costs Rising

By KAY BELL Avalanche-Journal Staff While most striking farmers across the South Plains are upset with cotton prices, farmers in the region who plant irrigated corn and grain sorghum (milo) have even more problems in meeting crop production costs, according to agricultural agency figures.

Upon first glance at the sets of figures turn rates and projected 1978 production and returns for corn and milo farmers, it appears that farmers should be optimistic about this year's crop.

In 1972, farmers received $2 per hundredweight for milo and an average acre produced 55 hundredweight units, giving the farmer a gross receipt of $110, according to figures compiled by Texas A &M University and the U.S. Department an economist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service here, show a 65 percent increase in the price per hundred-weight for milo, $3.30, and also an in-58, on the average milo farm. From these estimates, a farmer should receive $191

On the surface, it seems that milo farmers should be happy with the 1978 crop as compared to the 1972 production. But the crease in the number of units per acre, per acre for his 1978 milo crop.

paid on the money borrowed as operating capital amounted to $43.83. Add to this figure the combining and hauling expenses once harvesting is completed and the total variable cost comes to $57.58.

And when the fixed operating costs of $37.51 for things such as tractors, irrigation machinery and land rent are added, a milo farmer in 1972 spent approximately $95.09 to produce one acre. His net return on that acre then came to $14.91.

in the costs required to produce one acre

ures show that in 1972 variable preharvest costs such as seed, fertilizer, crop insurance and the interest which must be of irrigated milo.

However, Sartin's figures predict that variable preharvest and harvest costs will increase from $115.23 in 1972 to $172.21 per acre this year. And fixed costs are expected to jump from $37.51 to $80.80 in Taking these price increases into account, the $191.40 an acre for irrigated milo a 1978 farmer should receive doesn't look so appealing. When the total fixed and variable costs of $253.01 - a 166 percent increase in the cost per acre of production over the last six years - are subtracted from what that farmer gets paid for one acre's production, he probably will lose $61.61 per acre if Sartin's figures hold true.

And farmers who plant irrigated corn across the Texas High Plains will lose even more money than milo farmers, according to Sartin's estimates.

In 1972, the A&M-Agriculture Department study shows, a farmer received $1.15 per bushel for the 100 bushels per acre of corn produced, netting that farmer $115 per acre.

Variable costs amounted to $73.77 per acre and fixed costs of $30.45 brought the total expenditure per acre to $104.22. So, on the average, a farmer who planted irrigated corn six years ago made $10.78 per acre on his crop.

But in 1978, even with a 68.6 percent increase in corn prices to $1.95 per bushel and 140 bushels per acre, the $273 per acre a farmer makes on that crop will not be enough to cover production costs, according to Sartin.

Total variable preharvest and harvest costs should jump to $240.21 per acre, Sartin's estimates show, and fixed costs are expected to be $104.61 per acre in 1978. Total costs then will be $344.82 per acre and, if that corn farmer only makes $273 per acre, he will lose $71.82 on each acre of corn he produces.

Farmers may get some relief from their losses in 1978 if U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland approves a government subsidy for farmers' crops.

According to the 1972 study, corn farmers received a federal payment of 32 cents per bushel which, when multiplied by the yield and one-half of the allotment less rent, amounted to $12 per acre. This subsidy brought the farmer's net return to $22.78 profit per acre.

Milo farmers in 1972 were paid 52 cents per hundredweight of grain which came to $9.54 per acre, raising the farmers' net return per acre to a $24.45 profit.

American Agriculture strikers, however, say they do not want the government subsidies, but would rather have higher marketplace prices for their produce. Many of the strikers expect a 1978 subsidy, if approved, to be close to the same level as the 1972 government payments. They say these payments would not substantially decrease the losses they are now experiencing on their farms.

Area Strikers Set Capitol Hill Testimony

Striking South Plains farmers will travel again to the nation's capitol this week to testify before House and Senate Agriculture Committees investigating their complaints about low farm prices and the new national farm

Groups of farmers left the area ear-ly today for Washington to begin preparing testimony to be presented to the House committee this week.

Accompanying the group will be several area agribusinessmen and bankers also scheduled to testify about the national farm economy. Testimony before the House committee began last week and will resume Monday morning.

Also today, Gov. Dolph Briscoe will receive an invitation to address members of the state's American Agriculture Movement in a statewide rally Feb. 10.

Bobby Jackson of the Levelland American Agriculture Moevement office said Briscoe was invited to address the South Texas State Rally in the McAllen High School Auditorium because of his wupport of their demand for 100 parity farm prices.

Old Building Fires Disturb Galveston

GALVESTON (AP) - Four fires within 22 days in and near Galveston's historic downtown Strand area have prompted concern among merchants and historians

The Strand Owners and Merchants Association has pledged $1,600 for tighter security in the area that has numerous century-old buildings.

The Galveston Historical Foundation has pledged $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of any arsonists.

A number of buildings along the Strand have been restored in recent years and others are in varying stages of lanning for restoration. Arson and transients have figured in speculation as to causes of the fires but vestigators have reached no firm con-

The four buildings affected by the fires were within six blocks of each other and vithin short walking distances from the Galveston waterfront ards proposed by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

Dr. Phillip J. Wakelyn told delegates to the Cotton Council's convention here that no research conducted so far has found a way to meet the standard that OSHA is expected to publish later this month or early March

The OSHA's proposed standard calls for a three-phase reduction in dust exposure levels solely through engineering controls within a seven-year period.

Since 1971, a standard of 1.0 milligram of dust per cubic meter of air has been in effect. The proposed OSHA standard would reduce the exposure level to 0.2

Wakelyn said OHSA sources report the final standard will be changed from the proposal but no operations have been to-

Computer Failure Knocks Out Phones

Half of the Lubbock telephones were knocked out of commission for two and one-half hours Saturday morning when Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. suffered a major computer failure.

Jim Goodwin, Southwestern's public relations supervisor, said the electronic switching office computer serving Swift exchanges went down about 7:30 a.m., resulting in loss of service to 35,000 to 40.-000 telephone customers.

Telephones with 792-, 793-, 795-, 797and 799-prefixes were unable to receive or dial calls until about 10 a.m., Goodwin

Bell Telephone Co. laboratory technicians here had help from Western Electric experts who listened to the computer's tones by long-distance telephone and were able to pinpoint the problem source. The experts also were aided by computer printouts.

The telephone company is unsure of the cause of the computer breakdown, Goodwin said.

Research programs have been greatly increased over the past five years, Wakelyn said, as a result of cotton and textile industry efforts. About $3.6 million now is being spent annually in research, funded mainly by Cotton Incorporated, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the National Institute of Occupations Safety and Health. but so far no findings could meet the proposed standard, Wakelyn said. "It is vitally important, therefore, that the final standard OSHA sets is at a practical and reasonable level and applies only to those segments where the needs has been clearly shown," Wakelyn said. "It's also important that the standard be phased in over a long enough period to allow research to solve the prolems. The standard also should provide programs that encompass work practices, medical surveillance, and personal protective equipment where feasible, he said.

Wakelyn also said the industry has demonstrated a determination to solve the problem and is not insensitive to the employees' safety and health. "It is equally clear, however, that the industry faces a very bleak future if it is saddled with unnecessary, unreasonable, or impractical standards," he said.

Rep. George H. Mahon, D-Tex., and Cotton Council President Jack G. Stone will address the convention Monday. The session also will include the industry's economic outlook for 1978.

Secretary of the Department of Interior Cecil D. Andrus will address the convention Tuesday

Two Nabbed After Shooting

Two Lubbock men were in custody following an early-morning shooting Saturday that left a 46-year-old El Paso man in critical condition in a local hospital.

A spokesman at West Texas Hospital said James Wayne Brooks of El Paso was "in improved condition" but was still being treated in the facility's intensive care unit late Saturday.

A 46-year-old suspect and his 36-yearold companion were being held in Lubbock County Jail following the 1:30 a.m. incident.

Witnesses said they were with the victim at a nightspot in the 4800-block of Avenue H and were leaving the club when they heard what sounded like a firecracker go off. Officers arriving on the scene found the victim slumped in a chair about 20 feet north of the entryway and found one of the eventual suspects in a heated argument with another man. A second suspect, described by officers as in a very intoxicated state, later was arrested in the parking lot. Several witnesses reportedly identified two suspects as having caused trouble at the club earlier. Quick response to a reported burglar

The white, brown and green airplane apparently force landed in the Interstate 20 median then "taxied or bounced toward the roadside park" area, Sheriff A.N. Standard said.

Authorities at the scene, who said dense fog prevented the plane from being seen in its position 100 yards from the roadway, found the marijuana and several plastic jugs full of gasoline in the air-plane's cockpit.

A routine check through the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) computer revealed that the plane had been stolen in Fort Collins, Colo., on April 25, 1977, authorities said.

The aircraft was slightly damaged, a Department of Public Safety spokesman said, but the degree of damage indicated that the pilot and any occupants probably escaped uninjured.

The zero visibility ruled out any air search for possible suspects, authorities said, although Standard indicated several other types of searches were being conducted Saturday.

DPS investigators theorized the pilot may have been overcome by gasoline fumes in the cockpit and forced to land quickly, since enough fuel was present to have flown the craft several more miles.

However, Standard said that theory was just that - a theory - and the plane's pilot may have experienced mechanical problems.

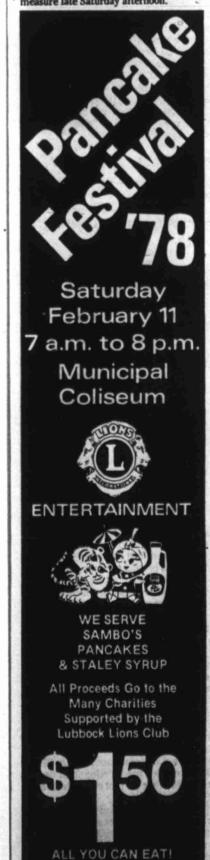

The plane itself is still airworthy, authorities said, and it was taxied the dozen miles back to Big Spring along I-20, Standard said, after lawmen feared the craft might be damaged if it were loaded onto a flatbed truck.

Train Derails Near Abilene

VIEW (AP) - A 72-car freight train carrying flammable chemicals derailed Saturday afternoon and several cars caught fire as it passed through this small West Texas community.

Eleven pieces of rescue and fire fighting equipment and 50 fire fighters were dispatched from Dyess Air Force Base and nearby Abilene moments after the 2:30 p.m. derailment, but no injuries were reported late Saturday night.

Police evacuated about 40 homes on the town's west side as a precautionary measure late Saturday afternoon.

Measles Most Serious Of Common Diseases

MEASLES, ALSO CALLED rubeola (not to be confused with rubella or German measles) red measles, hard measles and 10 day measles, is the most serious of the common childhood diseases, according to a recent Department of Health, Education and Welfare publication on Measles usually strike children over the age of six months. Symptoms are similar to those of a bad cold accompanied by a, temperature that may rise as high as 104 degrees. After the beginning symptoms a blotchy, red rash appears on various parts of the body. The rash gradually fades in seven to ten days.

Complications such as pneumonia, blindness and encephalitis, or inflammation of the brain, may result from the dis-

Pneumonia is the most common side effect, occuring in about three out of every 10 cases. Encephalitis occurs in only one out of every 1,000 cases reported. Officials report that each year there is about one death for every 1,000 cases of measles reported to the Public Health

MEASLES IS TRANSMITTED by breathing particles of the measles virus that an infected person has expelled while coughing, sneezing or talking.

Before the introduction of a vaccine in the early 1960's, the disease struck hundreds of thousands of children each year, resulting in high mortality rates. HEW reports that in 1964, there were 485,083 reported cases in the United States and at least 421 deaths.

Since the introduction of a measles vaccine, there has been a dramatic decline in the number of measles cases reported. In 1974, according to HEW figures, there were only 22,094 cases and 20 deaths reported to the Public Health Service.

Because of recent decline in the number of children being vaccinated against this highly contagious disease, HEW reports there was a slight increase in 1975 in the number of cases. But in 1976 there was a an increase of 62 per cent over the 1975 figure with a total of 41,126 cases reported to the Public Health Service.

Communicable disease experts predict that as many as 60,000 cases would be reported in 1977. The 1977 figures are not

HEW ESTIMATES that at present more than 13 million children, or 30 per cent of all children under the age of 14, have not been vaccinated. The agency also reported that four million of the 13 million unprotected children are four years old or younger. This age group is the most susceptible to the serious complications that measles can produce.

The measles vaccine, first licensed for use in 1963, should be given at 15 months to all healthy children who have never had measles. The vaccine is given in one injection and produces long-lasting, probably lifelong, protection, according to HEW. The vaccine can be given in combination vaccine that protects against rubella and mumps.

One out of every four children who receive the vaccination, according to HEW estimates, will have a minor reaction such as a slight fever or a mild rash. These common reactions occur seven to 18 days after vaccination, and last only a day or two and do no harm to a child.

HEW reported that medical experts are not sure, but suspect, that one out of a million children who get the measles shot could have a serious reaction, such as encephalitis. HEW cautions that parents should be aware of this possibility but not alarmed by it.

Immunization Available For Childhood Diseases

DIPHTHERIA, PERTUSSIS (whooping cough) and tetanus (lockjaw) are serious diseases that usually occur in children, but each, (especially tetanus) can also strike adults, according to a recent Department of Health, Education and Welfare publication on immunizations.

An effective form of vaccine called DPT has been available since the early 1950's. But HEW reports that today nearly 13 million children, or 24 per cent of those under 13 years of age, are inadequately immunized.

Before the turn of the century, 15 out of every 10,000 Americans died of diphtheria each year, according to the HEW report. Through the 1920's, about 150,000 cases occured annually, resulting in about 15,000 deaths.

The disease has declined since the '20s. HEW figures show that in 1960 there were 910 cases, 435 in 1970 and only 146 in Diphtheria is caused by a bacterium that is found in the mouth, throat and nose of an infected person. The germ is passed by tiny droplets of moisture that are expelled by coughing or sneezing. The disease can also be spread by carriers, or people who harbor the bacteria but do not become ill.

DIPHTHERIA USUALLY develops in the throat where a patch of grayish membrane will form. A sore throat, slight fever and chills are also early symptoms. If the membrane continues to grow, it can interfere with swallowing. If it extends to the windpipe, it can block the windpipe, and block passage of air and cause the afflicted person to suffocate.

While diphtheria is a treatable disease, if treatment is not begun in time or is inequate, a powerful toxin may be produced by the diphtheria bacteria and spread throughout the body. The poison can cause paralysis that lasts as long as three or four months, heart failure or broncho-pneumonia. HEW reports that five to 10 per cent of all diphtheria cases more commonly known, is a highly con- jaw, strikes both adults and children with roughly equal frequency, according to

In 1975, the latest year for which complete data is available, there were 102 cases in the U.S., 45 of which were fatal.

Tetanus is caused by a bacterium that is present almost everywhere, but mostly in soil, dust, manure and in the digestive tracts of man and many animals.

Tetanus is not transmitted from one person to another, but is the result of a wound. The wound can be as small as a pinprick, but most often the germs enter the body through a deep puncture wound such as those made by knives and nails. These wounds are difficult to clean adequately, and if the tetanus bacteria is present on the nail or knife, they may remain deep in the wound. The bacteria produce a poison that attacks the body's nervous system.

HEW reports that a person who has not been immunized against tetanus and in whom the infection develops has, at best, a 50-50 chance of surviving.

Symptoms occur first as headache, irritability and musclar stiffness in the jaw and neck. As the poison increases, the jaw, neck and limbs become locked in spasm, the abdominal muscles grow rigid and the body may be wracked by painful

POWERFUL TRANQUILIZERS, antispasmodic drugs and special diets to preserve the patient's strength are the most common forms of treatment. Despite treatment, convulsions may continue or increase in frequency to the point that the patient dies of lack of oxygen, heart failure or simple exhaustion.

The combination DPT vaccine provides a high degree of immunity for a number of years, but this protection must be renewed periodically, throughout life, with booster doses, according to the HEW re-

All healthy infants should receive the DPT vaccine, beginning with a series of three shots, at two, four and six months of age. HEW reports that early immunization is essential as infants have no natural immunity to the deadly diseases, pertussis and tetanus.

A fourth dose of vaccine should be given 12 months after the third dose was administered. A fifth dose is needed when the child is four to six years old, before he or she enters school. From then on, booster doses for diphtheria and tetanus should be given every ten years, throughout life, to maintain protection. Protection for whooping cough shouldn't be necessary as this disease is not usually a threat beyond childhood.

OLDER CHILDREN and adults who have never been immunized should receive a series of shots for diphtheria and tetanus and booster doses every ten years thereafter.

Most children who receive the vaccine will develop a slight fever and be "cranky" in the day or two after taking the DPT shot. Some children will develop soreness and swelling in the area where the shot was given, according to HEW.

HEW reports that about one out of every 7,000 children who receive the shot will have a more serious side effect. A child may cry for several hours or go into shock and turn pale. Still more rarely, about once in every 100,000 doses, encephalitis, inflammation of the brain, or brain damage may occur.

HEW reports that serious reactions are few and far between, and given the deadly seriousness of the diseases that the DPT vaccine prevents, parents have little choice but to make certain that their children are fully protected.

According to the HEW report, as many as one in every seven to nine children with mumps show signs of these complications. However, most patients recover fully and permanent damage, including deafness, rarely occcurs.

IN ONE CASE OUT of every four involving teenage and adult males, mumps can produce a painful inflammation of the testicles. Sterility can also happen, but experts confirm this also is a rarity. Other complications can include in-llammation of the pancreas, thyroid and kidneys and in female patients, inflam-

14 Million U.S. Children Need Immunization Against Rubella

RUBELLA, ALSO CALLED German measles and three-day measles, is a common, usually mild disease of childhood, although it may also affect adults, and outbreaks are common among unvaccinated teen-agers, according to a recent Department of Health, Education and Welfare publication on immunizations.

The disease is spread by the breathing in particles of rubella virus expelled by those who have the disease. Symptoms are mild discomfort, a slight fever for about 24 hours and a rash that appears on the face and neck and lasts for a day or two. For young adults contracting the disease symptoms may also include swollen glands in the back of the neck and some temporary pain and stiffness of the joints.

Though the disease is mild, and recovery is almost always quick and complete, a major danger can be to a woman who contracts rubella in the early stages of her pregnancy. There is a 20 to 25 percent chance of giving birth to a deformed baby, according the the HEW report. The possibility of miscarriage is even greater.

RUBELLA OCCURS ALL over the country each year, with 12,090 cases reported in 1976. The last big epidemic was in 1964 and, according to HEW figures, were born and some 30,000 miscarriages

At present, reports HEW, more than 14 million children, or 35 per cent of all children under 12 years of age, have not been immunized. HEW recommends the vaccine, first used in 1969, should be given to all healthy children after the first birthday. Rubella vaccine is available by itself or in a combination vaccine that also immunizes against measles and mumps.

The vaccine should be given to persons who are not protected against the disease, especially to young girls.

HEW warns that the vaccine should not be given to pregnant women or to women who do not intend to take every precaution against becoming pregnant. It is possible the vaccine may cause the same problems for a pregnant woman that the disease itself can cause.

THE VACCINE CAN produce several side effects HEW reports. One out of every seven children will develop a rash or some swelling in the glands within a week or two following the shot. These effects usually last only a day or two.

One out of every 20 children and as many as one out of four adults who receive the vaccine will have some pain and stiffness of the joints, according to HEW. This condition may develop from two to ten weeks after the shot and lasts for only two or three days.

While serious reactions are extreme rare, experts are unsure why, but one out of every one million children who receive rubella vaccine may have a more serious reaction, such as encephalitis (infla

"Such serious ethical, political and legal issues surround Attorney General Bell's recent conduct at the Justice Department that - by his own rationale for firing David Marston as United States attorney in Philadelphia - the attorney general himself should resign immediately or be summarily discharged by the president," Brock said.

In a statement released by GOP headquarters here, Brock cited Bell's statement at a news conference Friday that Marston was fired because he "had politicized his office." Brock charged that Bell had politicized his office - the na-

A spokesman for the Justice Department said Saturday that Bell was unavailable for comment on Brock's statement. At the White House, a spokesman declined to comment.

During a news conference in Portland. Ore., on Friday, however, Bell said he had considered resigning during the Marston affair because he felt he had let President Carter down by not knowing who was being investigated by Marston when the decision was being made to re-

Strike Violence Continues In Appalachian Coalfields

More violence was reported Saturday in the Appalachian coalfields as striking members of the United Mine Workers continued their assault on non-UMW mining operations.

The latest confrontations in the 61-day nationwide coal strike came one day after UMW member John G. Hull, 32, of Patoka, Ind., was shot to death during a disturbance at a non-union mine at Petersburg, Ind.

In Washington, negotiations between the union and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association were recessed for the weekend. Federal mediators planned to keep in touch with both sides, but the talks, which as late as Friday appeared close to a settlement, apparently lost mo-

For Flu Outbreak

KINGSTON, R.I. (UPI) - When a serious flu outbreak hit the University of Rhode Island, school officials were ready with a remedy - chicken soup.

The school Thursday set up temporary 'soup and juice kitchens" in each dormitory after the flu was reported in 14 out of 19 residential buildings.

Each of the university's three major dining halls were also instructed to keep a kettle of chicken soup "on the back jet" until the flu subsides, said Dining Services Director William Taylor.

One picket tried, but failed, to block the train with his car. Authorities said the man was not charged.

Plant employees scheduled for Saturday's day shift refused to cross the picket line and about 120 overnight workers waited until three busloads of replacements could arrive from Columbus. The Coshocton County Sheriff's Department escorted the bus and warned the strikers that every available deputy had been that every available deputy had been placed on patrol.

Gene Oiler, president of UMW Local 1886 at Pomeroy, said there would be bloodshed if Ohio Gov. James Rhodes used the National Guard to escort shipments of non-UMW coal.

"I'd hate Gov. Rhodes to intervene," Oiler said, "but we'll have to cross that bridge when we come to it."

There has been no indication that Rhodes is considering such a move.

Oiler also said "there's absolutely no way we'll go back to work" if President Carter invokes the Taft-Hartley Act to force miners back to work for an 80-day cooling-off period.

Carter is informing Sadat that the United States can help get the parties together but cannot force a solution, Brzezinski

"What we have to do instead is to convince them (the Egyptians) that although the process is going to be long, there is going to be progress in it," he added. The Associated Press was not invited to the background session at which Brzezinski asked that he not be identified. But the AP obtained an account of the brief-In trying to reduce areas of disagreement, Brzezinski said the administration "on some issues will have to encourage Israel to be more flexible." At the same time, he added, "on others, Egypt will have to be more flexible." Open Conversations

Carter and Sadat began their conversations at dinner Friday night, shortly after the two leaders and their wives arrived by helicopter from the White House.

Joining Carter for the talks Saturday were Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus A. Vance, Brzezinski and others. The Egyptian side included Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel and Ambassador Ashraf Ghorbal.

After their morning talks, Sadat and Carter walked bare-headed in a 12-degree chill along a snow-cleared path, chatting amiably and with their aides trailing by a respectful distance. On either side were snowbanks a foot deep. Sadat Puffs Pipe

Sadat, wearing a black overcoat, puffed on a pipe. Carter wore a hoodless parka. At the start of the talks Friday, Carter emphasized that "obviously the first re-sponsibility is for direct negotiations be-

'legitimate request" for persons to ask their physician to check them into the Health Sciences Center Hospital, as opposed to some other local medical facility, for services

That's a fair request," said Rickman. "It is not unreasonable for a patient to express his preference as to which hospital he'd rather be treated in.

The only prerequisite is that the admitting physician have "privileges" or clearance at the Health Sciences Center Hospital, he added.

Getting that clearance should be no problem inasmuch as most local doctors already are associated with the medical school faculty, and the next step - the actual awarding of privileges by a hospital-medical school committee - is rather routine, Rickman said.

Bosworth said he does not expect every physician in the city to apply for privileges at the Health Sciences Center Hospital. Some doctors may have good reasons - such as the location of their offices or the availability of services at other hospitals - to maintain their practice elsewhere, he said.

But he believes there are advantages at the new hospital that will prompt many physicians to seek privileges there.

That doesn't mean they will move the bulk of their work to the teaching hospital, Bosworth noted. Rather, "this facility makes available to the physician another place to practice," he said.

Advantages to physicians at the hospital, Bosworth said, are:

The teaching environment with "interns, residents, medical school students and people deeply interested in medical education." The practicing community physician not only serves as a role model but learns about advancements in medical technology.

•Use of the latest techniques. As a teaching hospital, "scientific and technical knowledge can be applied within the shortest period of time after its develop-

Many physicians already have been approved for privileges at the Health Sciences Center Hospital. Bosworth suspects many others are "waiting to see the reaction" of their colleagues before

Bosworth said "satisfied customers" will be a large factor in building public support for the teaching hospital and encouraging more doctors to practice there.

"The thing I like most about the new hospital is the friendliness of the staff, their willingness to help," said Rosemary Jenkins of Levelland, whose baby was delivered at the new hospital at 4:53 a.m.

Group Of Undecided Senators Holds Fate Of Canal Treaty

Panama Canal treaty rests with a handful of U.S. senators who refuse to commit themselves in advance of the ratification vote - a contest so close that President Carter may not have a vote to spare.

That conclusion is based an Associated Press questionnaire survey of members of the Senate on the eve of the longawaited canal treaty debate.

It discloses that 41 senators are solidly in favor of the treaty, with another eight leaning toward ratification. Their 49 votes would leave the pact 18 short of the required two-thirds majority - 67 senators, if all 100 are present. Opposition Count

The poll shows 24 senators lined up firmly against the treaty, with another seven leaning toward rejection - only three fewer than the 34 needed to block

tors who say they either haven't made up their minds or are not yet ready to declare their intentions Since most opponents of the pact are believed to have made their views known by now, there is a chance that most of the undecideds will vote yes. But in seeking sufficient votes to ratify the treaty, Carter must deal with a group of about 10 of the Senate's most influential and senior members. Most of them are Democrats who, as chairmen of committees and key subcommittees, exercise great power over the fate of legislation. Prominent Senators Their ranks include such prominent senators as Democrats Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson, both from the state of Washington, and Howard Cannon, D-Nev., William Proxmire, D-Wis., Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., Jennings Randolph, D-W.

Va., and Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. Senate observers suggest that most of these lawmakers may ultimately support the treaty but are not willing to deliver their votes to Carter without possibly getting something in return. The same is true of Sen. Russell Long, D-La., the Senate Finance Committee chairman who has fought the administration on energy tax legislation. Long told the AP he was "leaning against" the treaty, but some observers see him as a potential support-

Due This Week

The treaty is expected to reach the Senate floor this week, with debate beginning immediately after the Lincoln Day recess, and lasting two to five weeks, according to Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, a West Virginia Democrat.

Byrd and his Republican counterpart, Howard Baker of Tennessee, have appealed to their colleagues to support the treaty with amendments recommended

Airport's New Landing Device Of Little Avail

ered Texas by bus. Homer Chapman, Braniff International field services manager, opined that many of the planes forced to overfly the airport could have landed if the facility's Instrument Landing System had been operational. Other airline representatives and airport officials, however, did not concur.

Jim Newsome, assistant aviation director, said the airlines simply wanted a scapegoat for the situation and unjustly selected the airport. Newsome explained that a portion of the instrument system is working, allowing planes to land when the ceiling is at least 300 feet and the visibility at least three fourths of a mile. The system is being replaced with a new system on the north/south runway, he said - work which has been underway since mid-December in conjunction with the extension and resurfacing of the runway.

Although work on the system is complete, it must be flown and checked by Federal Aviation Administration officials before it become operational.

Ironically, that flight has been delayed by the same fog which wreaked havoc with commercial flights.

When airport officials receive that necessary approval, planes will continue to land at the airport until the ceiling drops below 200 feet and the visibility is less than one-half mile.

"That's a difference of 100 feet and one-fourth mile" between the ILS and our present system," Newsome said. 'That's not that great a difference.

The visibility has been less than 500 feet. No one can land anywhere under those circumstances," he said.

That is an opinion echoed by most local airline representatives. Tom O'Donnell, Continental regional director, said some of that airline's flights could have landed with the new system, "but not all of them." "We were hoping they would get it in sooner," O'Donnell said, "but we know their problems. Nobody's dragging their

He blamed the delay on the "government wheels going slow," and said he was regretful, not resentful, that flights had been unable to land.

Ernie Reece, Lubbock manager for Southwest, said the impact of the new system would have been "marginal. The weather was so bad, I doubt it yould have helped."

Bill Greenhill, Texas International customer service representative, said the systemm "would not have made any difference" because the visibility was less than one-fourth mile."

by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The changes would guarantee a U.S. right of priority access to the canal and a right to defend it militarily after the year 2000, when the treaty calls for this country to relinquish the waterway to Pana-

Cautiously Optimistic

Byrd and Baker continue to describe themselves as "cautiously optimistic" about the treaty's prospects. Byrd refused Saturday to estimate the number of votes for and against the treaty. But he said, "It's going to be difficult. It's still an uphill fight but I believe it's winna-

The AP questionnaire asked senators to say whether they would support the treaty with or without the proposed amendments, whether they opposed any treaty or particularly the one now before the Senate, and whether they were truly undecided or simply not ready to say how they intend to vote

Although Carter said again last Wednesday that he does not consider the leadership-backed amendments necessary, only 14 senators told the AP they could support the pact without them. Objections Cited

Among the opponents, seven said they thought there was no need for a new treaty with Panama, and 15 said they thought there should be one, but not the one they are being asked to ratify. Most to be based on fears that the security guarantees are insufficient.

The only member of the Senate who did not respond to the questionnaire or otherwise state his position was Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md. Mathias is generally regarded as pro-treaty, but was listed by the AP as undeclared.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., marked himself down as ready to vote yes, but aides said he might have "new reservations" about it because of financial questions raised in recent days. "We just keep getting shocked and shocked," said a member of Morgan's staff.

Treaty critics have long maintained that the Carter administration is not telling the truth in claiming the treaty would cost U.S. taxpayers nothing. The issue surfaced anew last week when the Senate Armed Services Committee was told that "direct" costs to the United States could run more than $700 million, and that canal tolls, even if boosted sharply, may not be enough to run the canal without help from the U.S. Treasury.

Senate sources say that at least two or three other senators, in addition to Morgan, are expressing misgivings about the financial aspects of the treaty. They also say many senators are angered by the administration's continued insistence that the United States would not take a financial beating because of the pact.

The sources said that staff aides to nearly 40 senators met privately with Carter's congressional liaison officers on Friday. The meeting was described as less than cordial, with the senate aides charging the White House with putting lawmakers "out on a limb" by misleading them on the financial issue. One source said several Senate aides walked out of the meeting, calling a White House spokesman's explanation of the matter a "snow job."

As a result of the Armed Services hearings, the Foreign Relations committee, which earlier reported the treaty to the Senate, is demanding that the White House provide it with more data on the

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., had been expected to endorse the treaty after the hearings by the Armed Services panel. An aide said Hart would have come out for the treaty if the financial issue raised had not generated fresh concern. Hart said the issue raised "whole new questions" and qualified his position as only "leaning in favor" of the pact until he gets satisfactory answers.

Another expected backer, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., put himself in the undecided category even though the security guarantees, which he had indicated in December were his paramount concern,

Happy Folk Aren't Now; Farm Problems Bring Air Of Gloom

And the drought problem, coupled with economic maladies, is likely to have long-range effects on farmers. The average farmer is 57 years old but when he retires, or dies, it is more likely nowadays that his heirs will split up the land and sell it rather than follow in father's foot-

The problem is serious, many-faceted and difficult to grasp, more so for those in the hustle and bustle of big city life and other non-farm areas.

"It's a tremendously complex thing." said the mayor. "But you take a good look at history. The farmers went broke in the 1920s and the rest of the country followed in due time.

"I would be surprised if you didn't find that agriculture controls the national economy. Old Mother Earth is the source of all our raw materials. Without the raw materials, the country can't do anything." Clyde Hancock stared out a window across the frozen, desolate landscape

"It's bad all over. Six or seven months of drought. The wheat's all pretty well dead, and we're going to have some wind erosion when the wind starts to

"I've been farming 35 years and I've never seen anything like this ... I've been through some bad wrecks, some bad droughts, but I'm afraid to put my money in it this year.

"I was never in a situation where expenses were so high that a single year would break me.' Looking fit and fiftyish, Hancock reflects the image of the classic Texas rancher - big, ruggedly handsome, easy going and tough as a $2 t-bone. John Wayne with a pitchfork. "It costs me $130,000 to $140,000 a year just to operate," Hancock disclosed. You put that out and get nothing back, and it'll eat you up ... Sure, it scares me.' He farms 5,000 acres around Happy, and 2,000 of them lie atop an underground water supply. "But we can't afford to pump water because the cost of natural gas is so high.

Normally, Hancock raises wheat, milo and cattle. But there's nothing normal

"We haven't hit a lick since September," he said noting that the last beneficial rain fell in August. "I haven't run a tractor in months.

According to Hancock, that's just as well: "Diesel fuel has gone from 22 cents to 47 cents a gallon and a tractor will burn 100 gallons a day. You pay a hand $3 an hour to run it, so I figure it costs me $100 a day. .

He said he doesn't like to complain about prices, "But everything we buy has gotta go down or the things we sell gotta go up ... It can't stay like it is."

The drought, he said, has simply comounded the other ills. "I'm in the cattle business too, but with the drought, nobody's buying any cattle. We don't have any wheat pasture, so you can't run any cattle," he said.

"It was like this back in the '50s, but costs weren't so out of proportion. You could kinda coast. It costs so much to keep things together now that somebody just starting out couldn't last a year ..

"I worked all this time and got all this land, and I'm not going to sell it. I'm just not gonna do nothing. I'm just gonna sit here until it straightens out." At his office in the First State Bank,

Mayor Pulsipher concludes that while farm overhead is devouring profits and the drought is now critical, the government is the No.1 villain. "Most of the farmers are discouraged over government intervention," he said. "If we'd get less government control and let the free enterprise system work, we might in time pull this thing out. "Some of the regulations contradict others. You can't obey one without breaking another ... I think the people are smart enough that they don't need the government dictating everything they Almost by necessity, many farmers across the plains intend to abandon their wheat crops in favor of cotton, which requires less water.

"While the costs for grain farmers are getting higher and higher, the cotton farmers (in some areas) really aren't hurting that bad," said a non-farmer. But in most cases, fuel costs have tri-ers with ample water supplies cannot afford to run their pumps.

"I think," said Mayor Pulsipher, "you're going to see farmers irrigate only where they have to to save the crop. . You wonder how long they can last.' One farmer said "... we're fighting for this country. When big business takes over farming, well, people haven't seen higher priced food until they see corporate controlled agriculture. Large corporations will not operate at aloss.

For Careful Recovery Try

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Scientists protected by 1,600 pounds of lead shielding and braving minus 40 degree temperatures Saturday prepared to recover a dangerously radioactive chunk of metal from a crashed Soviet spy satellite.

Lt. Col. Bev Totman said that because of the danger, the scientists would "take their time" recovering the fragment — 10 inches long, three inches wide and a half-inch thick — from its landing spot on frozen Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories.

Defense Minister Barnett Danson and 35 reporters outfitted in Arctic clothing by the armed forces flew to the remote site and strained to see the chunk of metal from a rise 200 yards away.

In addition to the dangerous radiation emanating from the fragment, scientists had to contend with the minus 40 degree temperatures and gusty winds that dropped the wind chill factor to minus 100 degrees.

The recovery operation involved plac-ing the fragment inside a custom made, 300-pound lead container surrounded by 1,300 pounds of lead bricks stacked on a

Tass also quoted Sedov as reiterating that Cosmos 954 was built in such a way as to ensure self-destruction on entry into the dense layers of the atmosphere. The satellite's fall from orbit because of depressurization was so fast, the scientist said, that "it may be assumed that the satellite collided in flight with some other object of natural or artificial origin."

Canadian officials also have suggested this possibility.

Fragment Of Satellite Set

Experts said the fragment was giving off 40 times more radiation per hour than the safe dosage permitted for a nuclear worker in an entire year. But the level of radiation fell considerably even at a short distance, they said.

In Moscow, the official Tass news agency Saturday quoted Soviet scientist Leonid Sedov as saying "it may be assumed" the Cosmos 954 satellite crashed in a fiery fall through the atmosphere Jan. 24 after it "collided in flight with some object of natural or artificial origin."

The statement came as Defense Minister Barney Danson was on his way to Fort Reliance, 90 miles east of here, where a 10-inch highly radioactive Cosmos 954 fragment was found on the icy surface of Great Slave Lake.

A 1,600-pound lead-lined container was Spelling Schedules described by Dr. Roger Eaton of Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board as "a major hazard." Scientists say the radioactive fragment could be lethal if held for more than two hours. A U.S.-Canadian search team continued to scour this barren, lightly populated region for more pieces of the nuclearpowered satellite which was carrying a load of 100 pounds of enriched uranium when it fell from orbit and crashed into the earth's atmosphere Jan. 24. Danson said the Canadian government chose not to accept a Soviet offer of help in recovering debris left by Cosmos 954. The Soviet Union has not yet sought the return of the fragments nor acknowledged legal ownership of them, the deense minister added.

But Trudeau assured a high school audience in the British Colombia city of Vernon that Canada won't bear the financial burden of the cleanup alone.

"That's a fair request," said Rickman. 'It is not unreasonable for a patient to express his preference as to which hospital he'd rather be treated in.

The only prerequisite is that the admitting physician have "privileges" or clearance at the Health Sciences Center Hospital, he added.

Getting that clearance should be no problem inasmuch as most local doctors already are associated with the medical school faculty, and the next step - the actual awarding of privileges by a hospital-medical school committee - is rather routine. Rickman said.

Bosworth said he does not expect every physician in the city to apply for privieges at the Health Sciences Center Hospital. Some doctors may have good reasons - such as the location of their offices or the availability of services at other hospitals - to maintain their practice elsewhere, he said.

But he believes there are advantages at the new hospital that will prompt many physicians to seek privileges there. That doesn't mean they will move the bulk of their work to the teaching hospital, Bosworth noted. Rather, "this facility makes available to the physician an-

Panama Canal treaty rests with a handful of U.S. senators who refuse to commit themselves in advance of the ratificationvote - a contest so close that President Carter may not have a vote to spare.

That conclusion is based an Associated Press questionnaire survey of members of the Senate on the eve of the longawaited canal treaty debate.

It discloses that 41 senators are solidly in favor of the treaty, with another eight leaning toward ratification. Their 49 votes would leave the pact 18 short of the required two-thirds majority - 67 senators, if all 100 are present. Opposition Count

The poll shows 24 senators lined up firmly against the treaty, with another seven leaning toward rejection - only three fewer than the 34 needed to block Thus the outcome depends on 20 senators who say they either haven't made up their minds or are not yet ready to declare their intentions. Since most opponents of the pact are believed to have made their views known by now, there is a chance that most of the undecideds will vote yes. But in seeking sufficient votes to ratify the treaty, Carter must deal with a group of about 10 of the Senate's most influential and senior members. Most of them are Democrats who, as chairmen of committees and key subcommittees, exercise great power over the fate of legislation.

Prominent Senators Their ranks include such prominent senators as Democrats Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson, both from the state of Washington, and Howard Cannon, D-Nev., William Proxmire, D-Wis., Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Herman Talmadge, D-Ga.

Senate observers suggest that most of these lawmakers may ultimately support the treaty but are not willing to deliver their votes to Carter without possibly getting something in return. The same is true of Sen. Russell Long, D-La., the Senate Finance Committee chairman who has fought the administration on energy tax legislation. Long told the AP he was 'leaning against" the treaty, but some observers see him as a potential support-

The treaty is expected to reach the Senate floor this week, with debate beginning immediately after the Lincoln Day recess, and lasting two to five weeks, according to Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, a West Virginia Democrat.

Homer Chapman, Braniff International field services manager, opined that many of the planes forced to overfly the airport could have landed if the facility's Instrument Landing System had been operational.

Other airline representatives and airport officials however did not concur. Jim Newsome, assistant aviation director, said the airlines simply wanted a scapegoat for the situation and unjustly selected the airport. Newsome explained that a portion of the instrument system is working, allowing planes to land when the ceiling is at least 300 feet and the visibility at least three fourths of a mile

The system is being replaced with a new system on the north/south runway, he said - work which has been underway since mid-December in conjunction with the extension and resurfacing of the runway.

Although work on the system is complete, it must be flown and checked by Federal Aviation Administration officials before it become operational.

Ironically, that flight has been delayed by the same fog which wreaked havoc with commercial flights.

When airport officials receive that necessary approval, planes will continue to land at the airport until the ceiling drops below 200 feet and the visibility is less than one-half mile. 'That's a difference of 100 feet and one-fourth mile" between the ILS and our present system," Newsome said,

"That's not that great a difference. The visibility has been less than 500 feet. No one can land anywhere under those circumstances," he said. That is an opinion echoed by most local airline representatives.

Tom O'Donnell, Continental regional director, said some of that airline's flights could have landed with the new system, "but not all of them." We were hoping they would get it in himself down as ready to vote yes, but aides said he might have "new reservations" about it because of financial questions raised in recent days. "We just keep getting shocked and shocked," said a member of Morgan's staff. Treaty critics have long maintained that the Carter administration is not telling the truth in claiming the treaty would cost U.S. taxpayers nothing. The issue surfaced anew last week when the Senate Armed Services Committee was told that 'direct" costs to the United States could run more than $700 million, and that canal tolls, even if boosted sharply, may not be enough to run the canal without help from the U.S. Treasury.

Senate sources say that at least two or sary, only 14 senators told the AP they three other senators, in addition to Morgan, are expressing misgivings about the financial aspects of the treaty. nearly 40 senators met privately with Carter's congressional liaison officers on Friday. The meeting was described as less than cordial, with the senate aides charging the White House with putting lawmakers "out on a limb" by misleading them on the financial issue. One source said several Senate aides walked out of the meeting, calling a White House spokesman's explanation of the matter a "snow job."

As a result of the Armed Services hearings, the Foreign Relations committee, which earlier reported the treaty to the Senate, is demanding that the White House provide it with more data on the

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., had been expected to endorse the treaty after the hearings by the Armed Services panel. An aide said Hart would have come out for the treaty if the financial issue raised had not generated fresh concern. Hart said the issue raised "whole new questions" and qualified his position as only 'leaning in favor' of the pact until he gets satisfactory answers.

Another expected backer, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., put himself in the undecided category even though the security guarantees, which he had indicated in December were his paramount concern, appeared certain of acceptance.

thing that has kept us alive." And the drought problem, coupled with economic maladies, is likely to have long-range effects on farmers. The average farmer is 57 years old but when he retires, or dies, it is more likely nowadays that his heirs will split up the land and sell it rather than follow in father's foot-

The problem is serious, many-faceted and difficult to grasp, more so for those in the hustle and bustle of big city life and other non-farm areas.

"It's a tremendously complex thing," said the mayor. "But you take a good look at history. The farmers went broke in the 1920s and the rest of the country followed in due time. "I would be surprised if you didn't find that agriculture controls the national economy. Old Mother Earth is the source of all our raw materials. "Without the raw materials, the country can't do anything. Clyde Hancock stared out a window across the frozen, desolate landscape

'It's bad all over. Six or seven months of drought. The wheat's all pretty well dead, and we're going to have some

"I've been farming 35 years and I've never seen anything like this ... I've been through some bad wrecks, some bad droughts, but I'm afraid to put my money in it this year. "I was never in a situation where expenses were so high that a single year would break me."

Looking fit and fiftyish, Hancock reflects the image of the classic Texas rancher - big, ruggedly handsome, easy going and tough as a $2 t-bone. John Wayne with a pitchfork.

"It costs me $130,000 to $140,000 a year just to operate." Hancock disclosed. You put that out and get nothing back, and it'll eat you up ... Sure, it scares me. He farms 5,000 acres around Happy, and 2,000 of them lie atop an under ground water supply. "But we can't afford to pump water because the cost of natural gas is so high.

Normally, Hancock raises wheat, milo and cattle. But there's nothing normal

"We haven't hit a lick since September," he said noting that the last beneficial rain fell in August. "I haven't run a tractor in months.

According to Hancock, that's just as well: "Diesel fuel has gone from 22 cents to 47 cents a gallon and a tractor will burn 100 gallons a day. You pay a hand $3 an hour to run it, so I figure it costs me

He said he doesn't like to complain about prices, "But everything we buy has gotta go down or the things we sell gotta go up ... It can't stay like it is."

The drought, he said, has simply comounded the other ills. "I'm in the cattle business too, but with the drought, nobody's buying any cattle. We don't have any wheat pasture, so you can't run any cattle," he said.

"It was like this back in the '50s, but costs weren't so out of proportion. You could kinda coast. It costs so much to keep things together now that somebody just starting out couldn't last a year ... "I worked all this time and got all this land, and I'm not going to sell it. I'm just not gonna do nothing. I'm just gonna sit here until it straightens out." At his office in the First State Bank

So far several satellite pieces have been recovered, including one highly radioactive fragment found on the frozen surface of Great Slave Lake.

"It should be pointed out that the termination of the existence of the "Cosmos-954" over the northern part of Canada did not create any danger for the population of the area," Sedov said. The site in the Northwest territories is a remote, sparsely populated region.

Fragment Of Satellite Set For Careful Recovery Try

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Scientists protected by 1,600 pounds of lead shielding and braving minus 40 degree temperatures Saturday prepared to recover a dangerously radioactive chunk of metal from a crashed Soviet spy satellite.

Lt. Col. Bev Totman said that because of the danger, the scientists would "take their time" recovering the fragment — 10 inches long, three inches wide and a halfinch thick — from its landing spot on frozen Great Slave Lake in the Northwest Territories.

Defense Minister Barnett Danson and 35 reporters outfitted in Arctic clothing by the armed forces flew to the remote site and strained to see the chunk of metal from a rise 200 yards away.

In addition to the dangerous radiation emanating from the fragment, scientists had to contend with the minus 40 degree temperatures and gusty winds that dropped the wind chill factor to minus 100 degrees.

The recovery operation involved plac-ing the fragment inside a custom made, 300-pound lead container surrounded by 1,300 pounds of lead bricks stacked on a

The structure then will be lifted into a specially-equipped airplane for the flight to a scientific laboratory in Edmonton.

Experts said the fragment was giving off 40 times more radiation per hour than the safe dosage permitted for a nuclear worker in an entire year. But the level of radiation fell considerably even at a short

In Moscow, the official Tass news agency Saturday quoted Soviet scientist Leonid Sedov as saying "it may be assumed" the Cosmos 954 satellite crashed in a flery fall through the atmosphere Jan. 24 after it "collided in flight with some object of natural or artificial origin."

Plans to recover the Great Slave Lake fragment Friday were delayed when spe-cial equipment to handle the chunk of metal was not ready in time to be sirlift-has done everything it could to prevent the "Cosmos 954 disaster" from damaging its relations with the United States or Canada, a Soviet space scientist was quoted as saying today.

Space scientist Leonid Sedov said in an interview with the Soviet news agency Tass that the nuclear-powered satellite carried no weapons and its uranium load was well within international legal limits.

All available safety measures were taken to ensure that Cosmos 954 would not ations. Once the satellite hit the earth's atmosphere Jan. 24 and broke up over northern Canada, the Soviet Union was quick to cooperate with U.S. and Canadian officials, Sedov sald.

"We have done and continue to do ev-Sedov accused the Western press of making "absurd accusations" about the satellite which could "undermine the basic principles of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer

One sensational allegation, the scientist noted, claimed the satellite was "nearly a flying bomb" or was designed to power a laser gun.

Sedov said the results of the joint U.S.-Canadian search for debris from the satellite has not been made known to the Soviet Union nor has information on the satellite's passage through the atmosus," the scientist said, "since at the final stage of its flight the satellite was outside

Tass also quoted Sedov as reiterating that Cosmos 954 was built in such a way as to ensure self-destruction on entry into the dense layers of the atmosphere. The satellite's fall from orbit because of depressurization was so fast, the scientist said, that "it may be assumed that the satellite collided in flight with some other object of natural or artificial origin."

Canadian officials also have suggested this possibility.

Recovery Costs Key To Debris' Return

ries (AP) - Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said Saturday Canada won't return any debris from the fallen Soviet spy satellite unless the Soviet Union agrees to pay recovery costs, already over

The statement came as Defense Minister Barney Danson was on his way to Fort Reliance, 90 miles east of here, where a 10-inch highly radioactive Cosmos 954 fragment was found on the icy surface of Great Slave Lake.

A 1,600-pound lead-lined container was Spelling Schedules constructed specially to hold the debris, described by Dr. Roger Eaton of Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board as "a major hazard." Scientists say the radioactive fragment could be lethal if held for more than two hours.

A U.S.-Canadian search team continued to scour this barren, lightly populated region for more pieces of the nuclearpowered satellite which was carrying a load of 100 pounds of enriched uranium when it fell from orbit and crashed into the earth's atmosphere Jan. 24.

Danson said the Canadian government chose not to accept a Soviet offer of help in recovering debris left by Cosmos 954. The Soviet Union has not yet sought the return of the fragments nor acknowledged legal ownership of them, the defense minister added.

But Trudeau assured a high school audience in the British Colombia city of Vernon that Canada won't bear the financial burden of the cleanup alone.

Canadian officials say the search already has cost the government more than

So far the Soviet Union has not been told about results of the U.S.-Canadian search for fragments nor about the satellite's passage through the atmosphere, a Soviet space scientist said.

Col. Bev Totham, spokesman for the Canadian Armed Forces in Edmonton, reported that a slightly radioactive fragment was recovered Friday from the Hoarfrost River region.

LCC Pulls 54-51

Upset On ENMU

By WALT MCALEXANDER

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The High School Day throng of 1,500 was the largest to witness a Lubbock
Christian College home basketball tilt of the season, and Saturday's finish left the youngsters buzzing as Edwin Miles popped in both ends of a one-and-one with three seconds left to preserve the Chaparrals' stunning 54-51 upset of Eastern New Mexico.

And it was a matter of the Chaparrals, who now boast only a 3-18 record but have won two straight close encounters, having enough maturity to withstand a world of adversity in the final minutes.

"I'm just so proud of this team," Chap coach Darrell Price said afterwards. "I don't know how they kept their heads up after what we've been through, but they worked extremely hard and that's why we're doing so good-they're still working and working hard."

The Chaps employed a deliberate game, trying to destroy ENMU's running attack, and it worked almost to perfection. That, too, was a surprise-to everyone except Price.
"Naw, I didn't tell them until game-time," he said of his plan. "We've only worked on it a coulpe of times this year, and just for about 30 minutes Friday."

LCC was hot from the foul line, except for the last five minutes. In fact, when Miles stepped to the charity stripe, the Chaps had missed five straight. And that had allowed the Greyhounds to come from a 45-35 deficit with just over seven ened, had an opportunity to tie and take the lead with nine seconds left and James Sydnor at the line. Sydnor's tip with 59 seconds and a layup after a steal had nar-rowed the gap to 1. But he missed the free shots, and Lowell Walker hauled down his 11th rebound of the game, kicking it out to Gary Norris who got it to Miles, who drew the clinching foul.

Mike Kahler had a super effort effort against Bob Kirkley, the nation's leading NAIA scorer with a 32.2-point average. Kirkley got 21, but most on great individ-ual effort, including three buckets after offensive rebounds. He hit only eight of 23 field goal tries and had ten re

The Chaps, who led for the final 20:44, held a 38-34 edge in rebounds. They played the final nine minutes with leading scorer and rebounder Lamar Sampy on the bench via fouls.

"I guess I should have taken him out to rest hin," Price said, "but he was taking (Richard) Hawkins to the hole every tin and we were in a key part of the game."; When Sampy, who scored 11 points, de-parted, the Chaps were up 39-33. ENMU had pulled to within a bucket, at 35-33, with 10:14 left when Kirkley hit a pair of free shots, but Miles connected from the lane, Sampy hit two free shots, and then got a good lane shot 25 seconds before fouling out.

The Chaps, who fommitted only four of their 20 turnovers in the second half, built the lead from the foul line. Don Morris, who hit 8-10 from the bonus stripe the first 15 minutes, missed four straight and the Chaps misfired on seven in a row over the last 5:45 as East-

Mike Wrinkle, who had six boards, got two key rebounds and an important buck-et after a feed from Miles to give the Chaps a 52-47 pad with 2:12 and they were able to hang on.

At intermission, the Chaps led 22-19, but neither team had shot well, LCC 6-19 for 32 per cent and ENMU 9-30 for 39 per cent.

The Chaps jumped off in front and it was 8-3 at the 15:02 mark when Sampy banked home a shot. But at this point ENMU got its running game in gear and the Greyhounds tallied 12 straight points from 14:26 when Kirkley hit until 11:28 when sub Reggie Bell connected to give the visitors a 15-8 edge.

After Sampy countered with one free

After Sampy countered with one free shot and Steve Doudney drove the lane for a bucket to narrow the game to 15-11, Price called time, and the Chaps slowed

Eagles Capture Laurels

ABILENE (Special)—Gary Bowe's Lubbock Christian High School Eagles, using a devastating full-court press, scored 12 points during the final 30 sec-onds to defeat Fort Worth Christian 65-53 here Saturday night and claim the Christian Schools state basketball championship for the second consecutive year.

to the Aggies. "But Coach (Rex) Dockery stayed and kept several of the assistants from coach (Steve) Sloan's staff, " Mullen said. "I visited Tech and liked it. I felt like A&M had pressured me into committing, so I switched to Tech." West, a 6-4, 215-pounder, said he trimmed his list of choices to Baylor and Tech before choosing the Raiders. At this point, conference chan Texas still seems to be faring the best, which is to be expected. However, as reported earlier, several schools are more than holding their own, and the Longhorns are by no means expected to wipe out their rivals. And, as one SWC recruiter remarked, There are so many good prospects around this year that no one is going to come up empty-handed." At this time, all the schools have a rea-it down, trying to get the one-on-one play. That strategy worked, as ENMU ost its momentum completely.

The Chaps drew even at 15 when Miles fed Wrinkle for a shot baseline jumper with 8:30 left and, after Frankie Ortiz picked up a loose ball for a field goal, Norris connected in the lane to knot things at 17.

Miles' seven-footer with 2:52 to go gave the Chaps a 19-17 pad, then Miles popped in two free shots with 44 seconds left to make it 21-19. An offensive goal tending call against Ricky Ely of ENMU resulted in a technical foul on Greyhound coach Sterling Gibson and Morris hit the second of his two free shots

Although ENMU committed only six fouls the first half, five came on shooting attempts by LCC and the Chaps convert-

Kirkley, who had games of 46 and 50 points his last two outings, hit only 5-12 from the field and had 11 points the first 20 minutes, with two buckets coming after he grabbed offensive rebounds, his only boards of the half.

Bowe pointed out that LCHS' win over Abilen Christian (a team that had handed the Eagles two regular season losses) Friday night helped vault them into the finals

"After we did the job on them (ACHS), I told the kids we could go all the way again," Bowe said. "And we did." Bowe, who played his entire squad dur-

Pro Cage Officials Postpone Action About Third Referee

ernors of the National Basketball Association decided Saturday to postpone any action on the proposal to use three referees in each game until its annual meet-

"We had a spirited discussion on the matter of three referees that lasted more than an hour," said Joe Axelson, president of the Kansas City Kings and chairman of the NBA's Competitions Committee. "There were strong feelings on the matter, both pro and con. "Over the next couple of months we'll be talking with the college conferences that are using it, particularly the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Big Ten, and we'll be studying their statistics very

"The matter will definitely be voted on - one way or the other - at the next board meeting in June."

One of the prime arguments in favor of using three referees, rather than the current two-man teams, is that the extra official could help prevent outbreaks of violence during NBA games.

Violence was a prime topic of discussion at Saturday's annual mid-winter meeting of the board of governors, held in conjunction with today's NBA All-Star Game.

The governors also heard an interim report from the violence committee set up by Commissioner Larry O'Brien as an advisory board to help deal with the problem, but no formal action was taken.

On other matters, the governors decided against changing either the schedule pattern or playoff format.

NEW YORK (AP) — Collegians Harvey Glance and Renaldo Nehemiah scored impressive victories Saturday night in the U.S. Olympic Invitational Track and Field meet at Madison Square Garden, while veteran Todd Scully set a world indoor record for the 1,500-meter walk.

Glance, a 20-year-old junior at Auburn, won the 55-meter dash in 6.2 seconds, beating Eugen Ray of East Germany, the world's top-ranked 100-meter sprinter last year. The stocky Glance, an Olympic gold medalist on the U.S. 400-meter relay team and the NCAA 100 and 200-meter champion, took the lead shortly after the start and held off the challenge of Ray, making his American debut.

The first two finishers both were timed in 6.2 seconds, as was third-place finisher Jesse Williams of the University of Richmond, but the result was not that close.

The race was missing two of the nation's top sprinters, Steve Williams of San Diego, who had nipped Ray in a controversial close finish in last year's World Cup meet at Dusseldorf, West Germany, and Dr. Delano Meriwether. Both failed to qualify in heats.

Nehemiah, an 18-year-old freshman at Maryland who set the world indoor record for an eletronically timed 60-yard hurdles race last week, skimmed to victory in the 55-meter hurdles in 7.2.

Roth Captures Second Straight PBA Title

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) -Mark Roth did it again Saturday, coming up with three straight strikes in the 10th frame to win the nationally televised $75,000 Professional Bowlers Association Tournament in Overland Park.

It was the second straight victory for Roth - the top money-winner on the PBA tour - and the third for the Staten Island, N.Y., native in the four events he has entered. The $9,000 first prize gives Roth $39,960 for the year, putting him nearly $26,000 ahead of the pace set by Earl Anthony in 1976 when he won a record $110,000.

The victory also set the stage for a try at a third consecutive triumph for Roth,

One of the most frequent questions skiers ask is, 'Should I face downhill or toward my ski tips during the beginning and nd of a turn?" Actually, both positions can be effectively used in skiing. Which one you choose should depend on the way you ski now and the type of terrain you like to ski. If you have difficulty a) controlling your speed, b) finishing one turn and getting essary quickness to ski moguls and steep terrain effectively, concentrate on finishing turns with the body facing straight down the fall line (A). This will place you in a very powerful coiled position in relation to your skis so that you can twist sily from one turn to the next. While facing downhill increases turning power, it also makes edging more difficult by limiting the amount of knee movement ssible toward the inside of the turn. So. if your problem is a) twisting too much ith your feet so that you frequently slide sideways or b) the inability to get a good edge bite, then ski with your hips and shoulders more closely aligned to your direction of travel (B). Jayhawks' Female Star Counts Out NBA Chance versity of Kansas does not have to worry about its top freshman prospect filing hardship and jumping to the National Basketball Association before that player's scheduled graduation in 1981.

Lynette Woodard would not know where to go even if she wanted to jump. "There's no way a woman could ever play in the NBA," says Woodard. "Kansas can count on me for four years, I'm Jooking forward to playing on the U.S. Olympic team and maybe by the time I get out, they'll have a women's pro gue. That would be kind of fun."

Woodard is a six-foot forward on the Kansas Lady Jayhawks who is averaging 25 points and 15 rebounds per game. She was recruited by more than 100 schools last spring but chose Kansas because of its proximity to her home in Wichita.

Her decision to attend the Big Eight school gave Kansas a major recruiting coup out of Wichita as the Jayhawks also Janded Darnall Valentine, a male high hool All-America who was considered he best prep point guard in the country. Coincidentally, Woodard and Valentine grew up in the same neighborhood and ven honed their talents in pick-up games ainst each other.

"Darnell lived around the corner," says Woodard. "I played with him. I grew up playing with guys. We used to play over at the YMCA all the time. But I haven't played with Darnell in awhile. Our schedules just don't mesh.

Woodard will have to play against the likes of Valentine if she wants any kind of competition - she's obviously not getting any against other women. She could be the best woman player in America since Lucy Harris, the Delta State center who averaged 15 points per game in Mon-treal to help the United States win a silver medal at the 1976 Olympics.

"I think Lynette is as fine a player right now as Lucy wus in her senior year," says Kansas coach Murian Washington. "I could see Lynette averaging 30 points easily. She's undoubtedly the finest freshman in women's basketball right now. I haven't seen any one person who can stop her.

Woodard scored 31 points and was credited with 33 rebounds in Kansas' 76-63 victory over Kansas State last week in the championship game of the second anmual Lady Jayhawk Classic. She has scored more than 30 points six times and has claimed more than 20 rebounds three times in Kansas' first 19 games.

Woodward single-handedly elevated the struggling Kansas women's program into the big time just as Valentine has helped the Jayhawk men's program return to national prominence with weekly appearances this season in the Top 20. "Lynette and Darnell are at least on a par as far as contributions to their respective programs here," said Washington. "And Lynette is still learning. We're trying to devise ways to better utilize her on offense. Her potential is unlimited. "She is very quick and we're looking

He was paid $50,000 for the first fight of his second professional year and the loser received $10,000.

Fernandez, 29, of the Dominican Republic and New York City, is now 28-10-3. He came out swinging in the opening round while Davis started slow, but by the end of the round, Davis showed the awesome hand speed that carried him to a 120-5 amateur record.

The 7th round saw Fernandez land a left hook to Davis' chin but that punch was answered by a series of jabs. Davis finished the bout slowly, knowing that he was far ahead on points

Late Model Class Added Of major interest this year is the addition of a late model stock car class to the program at paved Lubbock Speedway. Cooperative scheduling further enhances the likelihood of strong competition, with late model drivers afforded the opportunity to run at Lubbock on Friday night and at Amarillo's paved Southwest Speedway the following night.

A similar arrangement has been worked out for the street stock car class, with racing on Friday at Lubbock Speedway and at Lubbock Speed Bowl on dirt

Volkswagens Featured Volkswagens, which made their debut on the pavement here late last season, will be a regular nightly feature this year and new construction in Lubbock includes a number of Bugs. Here, again, cooperative scheduling is expected to bring in a number of Amarillo entries and to provide Lubbock drivers with the opportunity to run at dirt Amarillo Speedway on Saturday. Lubbock Speed Bowl also will field a VW class for the first time. Other than the addition of late models to the Lubbock Speedway slate, the other major change will be the switch away from sprint car racing on a weekly basis to a once-a-month format. Hope To Enlarge Field

Mike Cary, who replaces G.W. Elkins at the helm of the southside track, explained that the change was made to cope with the dwindling number of sprinters in this area.

"Last year," Cary said, "we were fielding as few as eight or ten cars, and ending up with less than that in the main after

"This year we're going to have open wheel cars racing on an open competition

Auto Racing Rule Books Available

Persons interested in constructing cars to race at either Lubbock race track may obtain rules information by writing or calling either track manager.

Inquiries regarding Lubbock Speedway (paved) should be directed to Mike Cary, P.O. Box 1381, Lubbock 79408, phone basis which hopefully will bring in some cars from greater distances. And drivers who pull in here to run Friday can go on to race at Amarillo Speedway on Sunday. VW-Rent-A-Car To Debut "Also," Cary added, "we plan one or two special big-purse sprint shows which we hope will bring in some top drivers from other parts of the country. Sprint fans will not see as many races, but there should be some really good ones.'

Volkswagen race fans will find another immick to add to the appeal this year, too, Cary noted.

"We hope to have ready some rental cars - VW race cars that will be available for use by the spectator who has said to himself 'I'd like to try that.' Well, now he - or she - can, really get out there and find out what it feels like."

Pit Paving Scheduled Cary and track owner Don Zahn have in the works a number of improvements to the racing facility. By the time the season opener rolls around in late April the entrance road will have been paved back to the pit gate and the pit area itself will have asphalt in the race car parking area and will have enlarged parking accomodations for tow cars, trucks and trailers. Dirt track fans will find a number of changes at Lubbock Speed Bowl, with of improvements. The addition of an another 500 bleacher seats to the grandstand side heads the major changes, with a new entry gate and more spacious concession stand and area owner Jack Halpain at work on a long list

also are in the works. Track To Get New Clay Top

Halpain also said that an elevated, "preferred parking" area is to be constructed behind the backstretch to enable spectators who like to watch the races from their cars to have a view corresponding to grandstand seating.

The track surface is to get an additional six inches of clay, which will ease track conditioning problems as well as hype car performance and handling.

A number of program changes are in store, too, at the dirt oval southeast of Idalou. The program will be enlarged by addition of the Volkswagen class, and rule changes are expected to speed competiton in the modified stock car class.

Street Stock Rules Unchanged As for the street stocks, those rules will be the same as last year's," Halpain said. "This is still a beginner's kind of racing, and we want to keep it inexpensive and fundamental. We anticipate that drivers who want to stay in racing will move up to the modified class, and we'll keep the street stock division just as it is an area where new drivers can com-

Bonus Looms For West Texas Auto Racing Fans

The "Fifth Wheels," an organization of South Plains Racing Association drivers' wives formed last year, will assume a role in the presentation, taking on publicity chores and publication of a program for each race meet.

Results of the winter's work will become visible in mid-April, when a prerace showing of cars is scheduled at the South Plains Mall.

West Texas was well represented at last weekend's Copper World Classic at Phoenix, and drivers who have appeared before Lubbock fans made a good showing in one of the winter's major auto race

John Foster of Odessa, winner of the July 4 stock car race here last year, drove his Camaro to fifth spot in the 40-lap feature over the Phoenix International Raceway banked mile oval and posted a good performance in one of Bobby Hillin's Formula Ford creations in a 28-mile race over a tricky 1.4-mile, eight-turn road course.

Hillin, head man at Midland-based Longhorn Racing Inc., picked up fourth spot in the formula drive and was a strong competitor in the stock car event. J.D. Hughes of Sundown pushed his '77 Camaro to fifth-quick qualifying at 118.11 and midway in the race was running in third place when he was involved in a crash in the first turn. Hughes lost two laps in the pits trying to correct a result-ing suspension problem and finished

Bobby Marshall of Dallas and Buddy Taylor of Albuquerque, both past competitors here, were in the field for the sprint car 40-lapper, but finished well down in the standings behind winner Chuck Gurney, a U.S. Auto Club stand-

The race meet, conducted under typically sunny Phoenix skies and in 80-degree temperatures, drew a near-capacity crowd, including a number from Lub-

Zahn, forced to abandon plans to compete when parts for his sprint car failed to arrive, hosted a party which included his wife, Ruth; Lee and Syble Brock and Wayne and Barbara Panter.

Brunken, who Hughes's "Sundown Sizzler," was on hand for the winter classic, and Mike Cary and Cary Brunken worked in the Hughes pit crew.

Tech Prof Studies Pheasant Habitat

Dr. Fred S. Guthrey, of Texas Tech's Range and Wildlife Management Faculty, is studying the pheasant's history on the High Plains. Guthrey expects the project to lead to a specific mangement practices plan to improve pheasant habitats and increase their numbers.

Guthrey is interviewing game management officers, biologists, ranchers, hunters and "old timers" familiar with the High Plains, for detailed study of the present status of the pheasant. The results of the interviews will be combined with his review of the literature on the subject. A complete evaluation of pheasant habitat requirements will follow, Guthrey said, leading to specific habitat management programs to encourage pheasant

Game Warden Pratt Retires

William H. Pratf, a 28-year veteran with the law enforcement division of the Parks & Wildlife Department, has retired

Pratt, who has served as district supervisor here since 1975, plans to spend part of his time now hunting and fishing. Pratt was assigned to the Dallas area after attending game warden school school in 1949. He later served in Athens, Lamesa, and Snyder, before being transferred to Lubbock in August, 1965. Patrol work for the P&WD has taken him from the Panhandle to the Rio Grande, east to the Big Thicket of southeast Texas to the Red River.

Duties during the last three years as district supervisor here have included management and operations in 23 counties from Childress to Andrews, with 11 game wardens under his supervision.

Bird Dog Trials Slated At Tahoka

The South Plains Bird Dog and Field Trial Club will host a field trial Feb. 18-19 at the Mel Leslie Ranch, which is located three miles northeast of Tahoka on Highway 400. The public is invited to observe the trials.

Persons interested in entering a dog in any of the events should contact Mrs. Harry Hull at 747-1805 prior to Feb. 17. Other information about field trials or the South Plains Field Trial Club can be obtained by calling Gerald Moore at (806) 998-4620 in Tahoka after 6 p.m.

It may be that the ring-necked pheasant on the High Plains needs more neglect to vested and leaving other areas with brush uncleared to provide adequate cover, nesting grounds and food for pheasants.

After building a sizable flock, the rancher or farmer would then be able to lease land to hunters, bringing profits during a normally unprofitable time of the year, Guthrey said.

For the present, Guthrey said he needs to collect as much data about the present status of pheasants on the High Plains.

Those with information, or interested in helping Guthrey in his study, can contact him at 742-2842.

Fatal Hunting Mishaps Rise

AUSTN (Special)—There were more hunting accidents—both fatal and nonfatal-last year than in 1976, according to the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department. During 1977, P&WD hunter-safety records showed 80 hunting accidents, 17 of them fatal. The previous year, only 63 accidents were reported, 11 of them fatal. Rifles were involved in 38 of last year's mishaps, shotguns in 34 and handguns in eight. Self-inflicted accidents totaled 41 percent, and 20 accidents involved loaded guns and vehicles.

Twenty-nine accidents were classified as "hunter-judgment" causes. In three, the victim moved into the line of fire; in 13, the victim was hit by a shooter swinging on game; in six, the victim was out of sight of the shooter, and in seven, the victim was mistaken for game.

In one accident, both shooter and victim were under the influence of intoxi-

Circuit Draws Entrants By SUGAR FERRIS
GRAND PRAIRIE—Chris Houston, a resident of Cookson, Okla., is a professional in the ever-expanding world of women's sports—angling

Even though at present she is not an all-time money leader or has even come close to the winnings of Ricky Clunn, Roland Martin, Bill Dance or Tom Mann in the sport of bass fishing, how much she has won is not the point.

The incredible thing is that Chris is a woman and can be paid for throwing a worm, or casting a plug and trying to catch a limit of black bass

Chris is only one of the thousands of women anglers across the nation who would-and do-pay for the chance to go fishing. For example, she started competing and won the Bass'n Gal Texas Open crown during the final qualifying round. Not only did she capture the national title, she weighed in a record 16 pounds 21/2 ounces, averaging more than 3 pounds per fish.

After acquiring the National Texas title, Chris wound up with 197 Classic points, assuring her of the Bass'n Gal's Angler of the Year award. She followed that by capturing the world championship title, the Triple Crown of pro bass

Chris, along with 2500 other women across the nation, belongs to the membership of bass-busters who have entered the Bass'n Gal tournament circuit.

All women who like to fish-or who would like to learn to fish-are invited to participate in the pro circuit tours which begin in mid-March every year. Each participant has a chance to win part of the thousands of dollars in cash and merchandise prizes at each tournament. The four Bass'n Gal qualifying tournaments paid more than $10,000 in cash and merchandise last year.

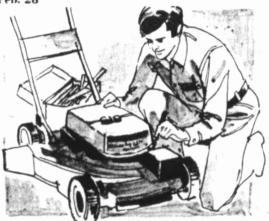

If an angler scores high on the tournament trail, she will qualify for the Bass'n Gal Classic each year. The top 26 qualifiers fish a lakesite that is not announced until shortly before the big event.

Chris is no newcomer to fishing. She has been at it for 15 years, however her competitive fishing was limited to local and regional tournaments because of the 'no-women-allowed" rules until the women's circuit was established. The Bass'n Gal program was created in 1976. In addition to creating a new field for women's sports, both men's and wegnen's fishing circuits have changed to a new policy. Whereas fish catches were presented to local charities, now, after the fish are weighed, they are returned to the lakes alive.

Philly Bullpen Ace Pitching For Muscular Dystrophy

McGraw says he's making the biggest pitch of his life Monday. McGraw, the Philadelphia Phillies' sometimes zany relief pitcher, has organized three of his teammates and unemployed quarterback Roman Gabriel for a 1,300 mile bicycle trip for the benefit of muscular dystrophy.

"This is the greatest off season activity I've had the good fortune to be involved in," McGraw said as he pedaled a 10speed bike around the Phillies' locker

"The most motivating part of this," said McGraw, "is that I'm working for Jerry Lewis' kids."

Lewis, the motion picture, television and night club star, is one of the nation's leaders in the fight to find a cure for muscular dystrophy.

There will be promotions and news conferences all along the route from Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium to the Phillies' spring training base in Clearwater, Fla. The five athletes leave 10 a.m. Monday, and expect to arrive in Clearwater Feb. 22.

"The purpose of our trip is to focus the need for continued research and finding a cure for muscular dystrophy," said

Originally, McGraw and Gabriel were going to jog the 1,300 miles, but Phillies' owner Ruly Carpenter said "no way." When it was decided to use bicycles.

Carpenter gave his blessing after being assured all safety precautions were arranged and that each of the players would pedal just 20 miles per day.

"It's a great cause, and of course, great exposure for baseball," Carpenter said. "I've been assured that at 20 miles a day there is no physical damage, and that it's good for the cardio vascular system."

McGraw said Carpenter and the Phillies' organization are one of the biggest sponsors and boosters of the trip.

"They feel that we've taken all the precautionary measures that we possibly can to make it a safe trip," McGraw said. "Also, we all agree, and after talking to our team doctor and our team trainers, that it will be a great conditioning exer-

Scoring 81 Points 'Just Felt Good'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - "I just felt good," says Freeman Williams of Portland State who fired off 81 points in one game to reach the second-highest total ever scored in a National Collegiate Athletic Association game.
"I felt I could make everything I put up," Williams said after leading the Vikings past Rocky Mountain College 133-110 Friday night.

The total raised Williams' 1977-78 average from 33.95 to 36.2 points per game, five points ahead of his nearest competitor for the NCAA scoring championship. Williams also was the nation's top collegiate scorer last year.

"In the beginning I was going to the basket and that opened up my jump shot later on," said the 6-foot-4 senior. "Everybody was feeding me; I seemed to always be getting the ball on the break."

Williams got the 41 points needed to become the fourth player ever to surpass 3,000 career points with 3:59 left in the first half. Then, he made 10 points in 33 seconds and later ended up with 25 field goals for 37 attempts and a total of 54points in the first half. He made 37 of 56 field goal attempts for the game Williams also holds the fourth and seventh highest point totals for NCAA games at 71 and 66. The 71 was against Southern Oregon last season. The current record was set by Furman's Frank Selvy when he scored 100 points against Newberry in 1954. "He'll go for it," Portland Coach Ken Edwards said at halftime about turning Freeman loose for Selvy's mark. "I didn't tell him what he had and I didn't tell the kids to pass him the ball every time. If it happens, it happens Williams said later that he didn't know he had totaled 54 by the half. He said it would have meant a lot to him to get Selvy's record, "but, I didn't think I would Edwards pulled Williams with 1:30 to go. "If he had been close (to 100 points) I would have pushed it," the coach said.

Judges Announced For Miss Lubbock Pageant

Judges for the 1978 Miss Lubbock Pageant, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 11, in Municipal Auditorium, were announced Saturday by Cecil D. Caldwell, chairman. The panel includes:

•Richard LaBoon, former Lubbock resident now living in Fort Worth, where he is the producer of a weekly televised worship service broadcast to a potential viewing audience of more than two mil-

•Camille Keith of Dallas, assistant vice president for public relations of Southwest Airlines;

•Helen Mashburn of Fort Worth, a member of the board of directors of the Miss Texas Pageant:

•Wendell Mayes Jr. of Austin, president of KNOW in Austin, KCRS and KWMJ in Midland, KCSW at San Marcos/Austin, and KCWM and KVIC, Victoria; and •Jackie Troup Miller of Dallas, a dance instructor.

A dozen contestants will be vying for the 1978 Miss Lubbock crown in swimsuit, evening gown and talent competition. The panel of judges also will interview the finalists. "Everybody Rejoice," from the Broadway musical, "The Wiz," will be the theme of the pageant. Johnny Ray Watson, the Miss Lubbock Dancers and Singers, the Miss Lubbock orchestra - directed by Jim Green - will highlight the show. Debbi Clark will be mistress of ceremonies and a special guest appearance will be made by Liz Lawson Hodel, Miss Lubbock 1975, according to Janis Geddes, the producer.

Careless Drinkers Wasting Water

POMBARD, Ill. (UPI) - People are not aware of how much water they are really using, says Richard Weickart of the Water Quality Association. Besides the eight ounces they drink in each glass of water, there's another 16 ounces that goes for washing and rinsing — a total of 24.

"But that's only the beginning," says Weickart. Pointing out that most house-hold faucets deliver 400 to 600 ounces of water a minute - 50 to 75 glassfuls, he adds, "If you let the water run for 15 seconds before filling your glass, it means you may actually be wasting 15 or 20 glassfuls for every glass you drink. Is it any wonder the average person uses 160 gallons of water a day? They're unaware of how much they're using - and how much they could save by exercising just a little care."

Plans call for a deployment of an array of photovoltaic solar collectors in a field adjacent to the shopping center. The 150kilowatt system would meet about a fifth of the center's total electrical needs, while providing researchers with a major test site for new types of power generation. After the experimental stage, it would remain on line as a working part of the Lea County Electric Cooperative's electrical grid.

The project seeks to apply, on a downto-earth basis, the kind of technology which supplies manned space capsules with electricity. In addition to New Mexico Solar Energy Institute Director R.L. Sanmartin, a number of experts from New Mexico State University are slated for a role in the effort.

Does Well At Theater Center

By WILLIAM D. KERNS

A-J Entertainment Editor
If one can dismiss the odd euphemism here and there - words which seem emotionless when rolling out of the mouths of the sophisticated British any-way — it must be said Lubbock Theatre Centre's production of Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" is extremely good spirited fun for children, who no doubt will be squealing with delight at the gimmicky closing scere.

And thanks especially to a generous serving of ham by the delightful Mickye. Adams, the elder theater-goers are bound to get a kick out of it, too.

The play, like most of Coward's works, makes use of that dreary too, too British household which usually leaves this writer yawning while the rest of the world's critics are in stitches. And things are indeed slow moving at first as we are introduced to Ruth and Charles Condomine, played by Linda Giss-Donahue and Sam

The latter is researching a book about professional charlatans, and has invited his friends Dr. and Mrs. Bradman over to help assist in a seance held by the entirely wacko Madame Arcati (Mickye Ad-

The first act doles out little more than dry martinis and even drier wit until Miss Adams makes her delicious entrance. Greeting her physician as "the man with the gentle hands" and reminiscing a bit. about enjoying her "first ectoplasmic manifestation at the age of five," she transmits an Angela Lansbury-type exhuberance in the part.

Complete with bizarre costumes (courtesy of Marsha Hilton) and frantic trance symptoms - she even stands on a piano bench to address the beyond as though delivering a soliloquy from "Hamlet" Miss Adams is nothing short of a consistent, screaming delight.

But back to the story. Madame Arcati, we quickly learn, is hardly the charlatan and, by the time the first seance is over, Charles'first wife Elvira, who "died young" a scant seven years back and immediately marked herself down for a return visit, has reappeared. Visible only to her husband, she becomes quite the hindrance, especially to the very much alive second wife.

As the tale progresses, we learn Elvira's love is so strong she wishes to kill Charles so that they may drift about in the beyond hand-in-hand together. Alas, her plans go awry and Ruth is killed instead. Both wives are tormenting Charles now, and his efforts to rid himself of the once affectionate nuisances make Act Three one of LTC's most comedic ever.

In truth, "Blithe Spirit" marks a triumphant return for director June Bearden with Lubbock's Little Theater. Everyone must be allowed a clinker, and she has followed her work on the abominable "Abe Lincoln In Illinois" with a comedy boasting sparkling imagination. As for the acting, it's obvious Miss Adams is the one making crime pay by specializing in scene-stealing. As for stars Linda Giss-Donahue and Sam Cornelius, both do much better than one would expect in an amateur production of a Noel Coward play. The first act saw them tense, slipping in and out of accent a few times Friday. However, both improved as the night wore on (Linda Giss-Donahue, especially, as she showed us a side of Ruth that was more catty than sophisticated).

But regardless, recoveries were quick and the play remained great fun. Lord knows few present will remember the mistakes, anyway, after being granted that hilarious grab bag of effects which closes the play. Indeed, the children in the audience were positive the stage was possessed by ghosts at the time... and the rest of us certainly weren't too sure that wasn't indeed the case

And even if I were certain as to how the effects were accomplished, I wouldn't tell. We need our mysteries, our magic, and Lubbock Theatre Centre has exceeded its past potential in-providing us with just that. "Blithe Spirit" will be staged again at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Tickets are still available and can be reserved by calling the LTC box office.

Aikin's Retirement Alters Senate's Makeup

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - While it's still nearly a year before legislators will return to the Capitol for a legislative session - barring, of course, the unlikely event of a special session - one thing already is certain about the 66th Legislature.

The Senate won't - can't - be the

One reason, obviously, is the announce-ment by Paris Sen. A. M. Aikin, Jr., that he's retiring after a career of public service spanning more years that some others legislators, and reporters, have lived.

Aikin's presence in the Senate, and his chairmanship of the budget-writing finance committee, have been political constants which have shaped state government for decades.

Politicians, like nature, traditionally abhor a vacuum, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby should have no lack of candidates willing (and eager) to move into that vacant chairman's spot.

Aikin will continue to serve until his sucessor, whoever that may be (and there are indications quite a few folks in his Northeast Texas districts are considering running) is sworn in.

But the finance committee will have more changes than simply at the top. Sen. Don Adams, Jasper, who resigned to become a legal expert for Gov. Dolph Briscoe (and who's been heading the troubled Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs), was vice chairman of the finance committee.

In fact, at least three of the 13 members definitely will be absent on the committee, whatever else happens - Sen. Max Sherman of Amarillo having resigned last year to become president of West Texas State University at Canyon.

Six others members are up for re-elec-tion, including Sen. Kent Hance, Lubbock, who has decided to campaign for Congress - although his formal filing hasn't been made yet.

Other committee members who face the voters this year are Sens. Chet Brooks, Pasadena; Ray Farabee, Wichita Falls; Bill Meier, Euless; W.E. "Pete" Snelson, Midland; and John Traeger, Se-

At the moment, those five incumbents appear to be likely to be returned (all having indicated they will run), but it is still a long, long time until November.

Members of the finance committee who aren't up for election this year include Sens. Tom Creighton, Mineral Wells; Tati Santieteban, El Paso; Bill Moore, Bryan; and A. R. "Babe" Schwartz, Galveston

While Hobby has the authority to appoint the committees, under certain restrictions, tradition provides for senior members to have first call on some of the "choicer" selections,

Senate rules provide that on committees of 10 or more members, such as finance, at least four members must be retained from the prior session.

Those rules also provide that senators are limited to one chairmanship, and that they cannot serve on more than two of the three major committees: finance, state affairs and jurisprudence.

That creates the possibility of some interesting shuffling around in 1979.

Moore, the most senior member of the Senate after Aikin, is - and for years has been - chairman of state affairs.

Schwartz, who follows Moore in seniority, is chairman of jurisprudence.

Then comes (in seniority) Creighton, who chairs economic development. (Sen. Bill Patman, Ganado, ties Creighton in seniority but doesn't serve on finance.) Obviously, if Moore or Schwartz move

Medical Techniques Questioned

Maternal Stress Affects Fetal Life

By ANNA SHAFF

Pacific News Service On Nov. 8, 1976, a woman who was no longer alive, and a fetus who was not yet alive, began to be sustained by medical technology. The woman, an auto accident victim, had no brain-wave activity; according to the current medical definition of life, she was dead. Her fetus was only 15 weeks old; according to the current defintion of life, it was not yet viable.

One year later, on Nov. 23, 1977, a woman collapsed from an unknown ailment. She was declared "brain dead," but when weak brain activity was discovered, the diagnosis was changed to irreversible brain injury. She was carrying a 17-week-old fetus.

Physicians at Colorado General Hospital in Denver, and later at Victory Memorial Hospital in Brooklyn, came to the same conclusion. They decided to keep the two bodies, one within the other. alive by means of heart machines, respirsonic booms can startle. Dr. Lester Sontag of the Fels Research Institute in Yellow Springs, Ohio, believes that a fetus subjected to persistant loud sounds may have a higher activity level after birth than other infants.

When the mother is experiencing strong emotions, a greater flow of adrenalin reaches the unborn through the placenta, resulting in greater fetal activity.

In fact, during the mother's emotional stress, fetal movements can increase by several hundred percent. Through this kind of hormonal and chemical exchange the mother's prolonged emotional stress can affect the fetus.

The effect may be considerable, traceable even into adulthood. Dr. Sontag, who has veen studying fetal life for over four decades, has found that severe maternal stress during the eighth or ninth months of pregnancy lowers the newborn's birthweight. It can be responsible for excescurs in-utero make it desireable? A century ago there were no car or jet sounds, and perhaps less maternal stress. Thus, which phenomena are potentially harmful; which are necessary for minimal stimulation.? How do we establish experimental standards for our mechanical

Much guidance would no doubt come from a large background of experience with premature and newborn infants. Some answers would already be availa-

Dr. Lee Salk established that piping in rhythmic heartbeat has a very calming effect on the newborn, resulting in less crying and greater weight gain. A pediatric nurse, Mary Neill, decades ago experimented with rocking premature infants, and found that they developed faster than non-rocked infants.

But again, what frequency and intensi-ty are desireable at progressive stages of fetal development? What level of emotional stimulation normally transmitted through the mother's blood chemistry is average, excessive or deficient? And even if this could be determined, would it be provided to the motherless fetus as a nat-ural extract or in synthesized form? If synthesized, could it have unwanted sideeffects?

The possible list of questions is endless. By its very nature, the treatment of these fetuses would be experimental. Potential human lives, for four, five, six months before their natural birth dates, would be subjected to guesswork, to formulas and their fallibility. And were they to survive, what possible physical and emotional scars would they bear?

Some questions, however, do resolve

The first mothertess seus des no 1976, two days after attempts to a its life began. Doctors determined its chances of surviving extra-uterin were minimal, and thus decided to off life-support systems. The fetus, ever, died naturally, before valves turned off. ators and intravenous injections. The fetus was to be nourished by the mothermachine complex for the next four to five weeks. It was then to be removed by Caesarean section and housed in a mechanical surrogate for the next four months.

The ethical problems inherent in subjecting cerebrally non-functioning bodies to such a procedure are staggering. Whether we respond with revulsion or wonderment is a deeply personal matter, rooted in moral and religious convictions.

However, a much more straightforward question arises: Is the womb merely a mechanical shelter whose functions can be replaced by technology? Or is it a complex environment which offers a range of stimulation beyond mere suste-

Alive With Sounds

Contrary to beliefs engendered by literary imagination, the womb is not a quiet, dark retreat. It is a dimly lit, noisy place, which affords relative degrees of physical comfort. Of course, these sensations are perceived in terms of the fetal sense organs. Their stage of development determines the capacity to see, hear, feel, taste and smell.

Fetal response to maternal movement can be felt by the fifth or sixth month. If the mother's activity causes discomfort, she is informed by corresponding internal kicks. When she reclines, the fetus turns onto its side to prevent the grating of spinal columns.

The fetal limbs are becoming active, developing muscle power which will be directly reflected in the amount of movement after birth. Not only does it generate its own activity, it also reacts to outside stimulation. It moves when its scalp is tickled, grasps when its palm is stroked, curls its toes when its sole is

All the familiar innate responses of the newborn are already present. In fact, it also sucks its thumbs, hiccups, and of course, wakes and sleeps.

The womb is alive with a veritable cacophony sounds. The dominant ones are the mother's steady heartbeat and her irregular digestive and bowel noises.

According to Drs. William and Margaret Liley, New Zealand fetal researchers, gas bubbles from champagne or beer sound like rockets to the fetus, since they are heard at their very source.

External noises also penetrate: the mother's voice, music, street and car sive crying, irritability, poor digestion, vomiting and diarrhea.

Further, he has found a relation between quick fetal activity at eight or nine months, and social apprehension at nursery school age (two-to-five years). The children under study hesitated to join groups and experienced anxiety when faced with nurserymates' aggression.

Dr. Sontag also believes that a relationship has been established between beatby-beat fetal heart irregularity at the end of pregnancy and certain behavior patterns in young adulthood: excessive dependency, great achievement strivings, compulsive behavior, and great anxiety over erotic activites. Thus, fetal activity at this eight or nine month period appears to be related to character traits in

Range of Interactions

By examining fetal behavior, therefore, it becomes apparent that the womb is more than just a mechanical habitat - it is a site for a rich range of fetal and maternal interactions. Could an experimental, mechanical womb duplicate all these interactions? If physicians were to assess all considerations, many of the stimuli could no doubt be reproduced in "uterus mechanicus." Laboratory lighting could be varied; sounds of the heartbeat, intestines, bowels, and environmental noises could be piped in; intermttent motion could be provided; even the chemicals and hormones discharged during periods of emotions could occasionally be introduced.

But how much? How much light shift, what degree of environmental noises, what level of chemicals and hormones? What is normal, beneficial?

che-Journal Staff A last-ditch effort by Mother Nature to make January look like winter on the South Plains made that month one of the coldest on record since 1914, according to the National Weather Service.

Buried under a three-inch-plus blanket of snow just before the month ended, South Plains residents endured temperatures averaging more than seven degrees below normal, but forecasters outlining weather conditions for February said the weather patterns that brought those colder temperatures shouldn't change much.

In their January weather summary and February 30-day outlook, NWS spokesmen said January this year marked the precipitation a little above the average.

Maximum temperatures across the region averaged 10.3 degrees below normal, ranging from 1.5 degrees below normal at Morton to 8.7 degrees below normal at Spur. The lowest temperature of the month was 5 degrees above zero at Floydada Jan. 9 and Jan. 18 and at Muleshoe Jan. 25.

The South Plains highest temperature was 76 degrees Jan. 6 in Matador and Paducah. NWS spokesmen blamed the colder temperatures partially on widespread snowstorms that buried some area cities under as much as five inches of fluffy white snowflakes.

Total snowfall for the region ranged from just under 10 inches at Tulia to only traces at Snyder and Big Spring. Tulia reported the most snowfall in one reporting period with 4.5 inches there Jan. 31. Higher snowfall reports included 7.5 inches at Friona, Matador and Muleshoe: 9.5 inches in Silverton and Hereford; and 6.8 inches in Floydada.

Even with all the snow, though, precip-

Average readings were .14 of an inch above normal, ranging from .47 inches above normal at Plains to .28 of an inch below normal at Lamesa. Lubbock reported .59 of an inch of moisture.

From the standpoint of precipitation this month, forecasters are calling for a cold outbreak with snow flurries about every five days. Near normal precipitation readings should be seen this month, but some regions might receive as much as one inch of moisture, forecasters said. Those cold outbreaks, however, will continue to keep temperatures down at least a couple of degrees below normal. Daily maximum temperatures should reach the low 50s, with minimum readings in the low 30s and high 20s most of the month.

The average monthly temperature here last month was 32.1 degrees, according to the National Weather Service. The result of all those wintry, snowy days was "inconsumption, creased consumer Shortes said.

He acknowledged that many consumers have called the company to complain about the costly bills.

But, he added, "for this time of year it's a normal situation. People are using more gas than they think they are."

The gas company had come under fire from the city council in December for a hefty pass-through hike for that month. Council members approved the 11.67 percent increase over November's rate, which put the cost at about $1.16 per mcf. January's adjustment was about $1.15.24

The council also put PNG on notice that it will be held financially liable if any pass-through overcharges are discovered. Pass-through rates will be reviewed during a rate-case hearing, which will be scheduled by the council this year.

City rate analyst Ervin Looney and council members publicly have questioned whether the gas company is profiting from the pass-throughs, which reimburse the company for fuel cost increas-

Looney will scrutinize the rates and justifications to ensure no overcharges were

If all that means nothing in the face of a costly January bill, lower your thermostat and hang in there until next month. The weather service predicts February's monthly temperature average will be a much warmer 43 degrees.

FARMERS GREETINGS

The price of cotton-seed oil in 1976 and the price of cotton ed oil in 1977 was very little difference. The price of cotton sed in 1976 and the price of cotton seed in 1977 was a tre-rendous difference. I believe there is a price fixing by the Oil Mills of the South Plains amounting to a possible fo ifteen dollars a bale deficit to the farmer you have had this loss, may I suggest you write:

BUDDY BARRON

DEAR BUDDY'S Advice to The Homehunter

DEAR BUDDY: I need a 4 bedroom house for under $45,000.00. It doesn't have to be fancy with lots of extras. PLAIN JANE PLAIN JANE: Put a little "fun" in your life, buy this "Fancy" 4 bedroom, 2 bath, with big den and fireplace for only $42,500.00. Hurry DEAR BUDDY: I need to sell my 3 bedroom home it has a livingroom, den and big playroom. We hate to leave beamed ceiling & cozy the neighborhood.

REGRETFUL MOVER REGRETFUL MOVER: You do have good neighbors in Times Square, we won't put out a sign and it should sell quick at $66,000.00. DEAR BUDDY: Does the beautiful house on the corner of 36th and Memphis have a fireplace and WEATHERMAN WEATHERMAN: Yes it does, plus 3 bedrooms to sleep in, formal living room and a kitchen to eet in, for only $42,500.00.

BURT REYNOLDS

Stars Receive Invitation

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Actor Burt Reynolds and actress Sally Field have been invited to address both houses of the Alabama Legislature.

The invitation was extended Thursday in a resolution proposed by state Rep. Ed Robertson of Tuscaloosa, where Reynolds and Miss Field are currently working on the film, "The Hollywood Stuntman."

Robertson said Reynolds could "further his education in acting" if he accepted the invitation because, the legislator told his colleagues, "we've got some pretty good acting going on down here."

Redgrave Aids Protesters

MILAN, Italy (AP) - Vanessa Redgrave, the British actress, spent a cold night in a local factory occupied by laidoff workers Friday and then led a rally to protest unemployment among European youths.

Miss Redgrave said the Milan rally, which included 60 youths from different countries, was part of a wide continental movement backing a united European labor union. Another rally is scheduled for next Sunday in Brussels, and Miss Redgrave said she would attend. During her stopover in Milan, she also met the Socialist mayor of the city, Carlo Tognoli.

She denied that her presence in Milan had anything to do with the premiere of the film, "Julia," in which she costars with Jane Fonda.

"I did not know of such a premiere. I am here as a unionist, also representing interests of British actors," she said before leaving by bus for Belgium.

Knievel was transferred from Wayside Honor Farm Thursday, where he is serving a six-month sentence for beating his former press agent with a baseball bat. He was taken to the County Jail medical facility for a physical examination after complaining of pain, said Sheriff's Deputy

The stuntman has already served a little over 10 weeks of his sentence. He was sent to the honor farm, where he has been assigned to the nursery at the agricultural facility, after he lost work furlough privileges for reporting back to jail

Humphrey Ends Candidacy

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) - State Sen. Hubert H. "Skip" Humphrey III confirmed Friday that he will withdraw as a candidate for Congress in Minnesota's 3rd District and will seek Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party endorsement for attorney general.

Humphrey, 35, repeatedly declined to speculate on whether his mother, U.S. Sen. Muriel Humphrey, also will be on Minnesota's statewide ballot next fall. She was appointed Jan. 25 to succeed her husband, the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who died Jan. 13. A special election will be held in November to fill out the remaining four years of the Humphrey term.

Mrs. Humphrey will be sworn in at 2 p.m. Monday in Washington, with Vice-President Walter F. Mondale administering the oath.

Mrs. Humphrey has not said whether she will serve only until November or will seek election in her own right.

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) - Hamlet, known to many of his fans as "Ireland's greatest lover," has died.

Hamlet was found dead in his stall at Dublin's Milk Board artificial insemination station Friday. He was only 7, which is young for a bull.

Hamlet was recognized as one of Ireland's most prolific sires and had 75,000 offspring scattered around the world. He even figured once in an Irish parliamentary row when it was claimed farmers were being overcharged by the board A board official said Hamlet died of heart failure and added tersely "bulls in his line of work generally do."

Mathematician Views Blizzard

CINCINNATI (AP) - The recent heavy snowfall has brought out the mathematician in Butch March, who recently set out to calulate how much weight there could be in all the snow that fell here in January.

First he went to city hall and found that the total area inside the city limits was 78.088 square miles.

Then he called the National Weather Service and found that 31.5 inches of snow fell in January.

Finally, the 22-year-old architect made a visit to the public library and determined that the average weight of a cubic foot of snow was 15 pounds.

With these standards, he sat down and calculated that the total weight of last month's snowfall was 42,859,067.33 tons. Still not satisfied, March shed a little more light on the subject when he wondered what would happen if all that snow melted at the same time.

The director of the opposition Conservative Party predicted on Saturday that Somoza's decision to proceed with the balloting would lead to violence. Somoza has vowed he will not allow guerrilla attacks, demonstrations or the nationwide strike that began last month to disrupt the balloting.

In one sharp reaction abroad, President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela said he has become "increasingly preoc-cupied by developments in Nicaragua." "I see with admiration the civic attitude demonstrated by the Nicaraguan people in this tough moment of their life, when they are making their demands known in a really admirable manner," he told a news conference in Venezuela on Major newspapers in Mexico called for Somoza to resign, with some editorials predicting civil war if he does not.

In one representative expression of Mexican newspaper opinion, El Sol of Mexico City said: "If Somoza has one little bit of love left for Nicaragua, the best he could do is the leave forever. His stubbornness could cost him dearly."

Possible 'Ripper' Murder Investigated

HUDDERSFIELD, England (AP) - A teen-age girl whose naked body was found mutilated near this town's red light district may be the seventh victim of a modern-day Jack the Ripper, police said Saturday.

More than 100 detectives and uni formed officers were hunting the killer of 18-year-old Helen Rytka after police using tracking dogs on a routine patrol stumbled onto the body in a lumber yard Friday night.

Police said the girl, who had been reported missing Thursday, suffered severe injuries to her head and body. Tests had not yet determined whether she had been sexually assaulted, officials said.

"It is too early yet to say that this young woman is a 'ripper' victim but we obviously have it in mind," said George Oldfield of the West Yorkshire criminal investigation division.

The assistant constable said Miss Rytka had recently moved to this small town 16 miles southwest of Leeds, a major industrial city more than 200 miles northwest of London.

"The Ripper," as he is called by police and the British press, is believed responsible for the deaths of at least five women in the Leeds area during the past 27 months in or around red light districts.

The general strike was called nearly two weeks ago by the Conservative Party and other opponents of the Somoza re-gime. The nation has been in political turmoil since the assassination Jan. 10 of newspaper publisher Pedro Joaquin Cha-morro, a critic of Somoza.

Leaders of the general strike that has virtually paralyzed the country are demanding to know who was behind Chamorro's slaying and have called on the 53-year-old Somoza to quit.

State University researcher is pushing smokers to the wall.

Dr. John J. Horan calls his technique "focus smoking" because his subjects are encouraged to concentrate on tobacco's harmful effects while staring at a plain white wall and puffing their favorite brand.

So far, three dozen persons have tried Horan's eight-session, five-week focus smoking method under laboratory conditions.

tory conditions

Horan claims that, combined with other components of his anti-smoking strategy, the treatment prevents be-tween 50 and 60 percent of the subjects from returning to the nicotine

"When people smoke, they're usually doing something else at the same time that takes their minds off it," said Horan, a counseling psychologist who has been working on smoker therapy for the past three years.

"That's why the blank wall, so they'll start focusing on what smoking is doing to them."

Focus smoking is the most recent component of Horan's anti-smoking strategy which has been tried on almost 200 subjects, including college students and volunteers from this central Pennsylvania community. In focus smoking, subjects smoke steadily and are asked to visualize unpleasant effects of cigarettes.

Therapists are nearby, reminding subjects to concentate on burning throat sensations, bad tastes, head-ache and nausea.

The sessions continue for an average of 14 minutes, during which each patient smokes about 2½ eigarettes.

Horan noted that the success rate for other programs is less than the rate for his program.

Daughter Of Designer Returned By Kidnappers

Victim Safely Returned After Payment Of Money

NEW YORK (AP) - Police said Satur- volved." They declined to disclose day they were searching for at least three men in the abduction of fashion designer Calvin Klein's 11-year-old daughter, who was lured into kidnappers' arms by a former baby sitter.

Marci Klein and her onetime sitter. Christine Ransay, 23, were held by two men for more than nine hours Friday at Miss Ransay's East Side apartment, police said, until Klein delivered a $100,000 ansom to secure his daughter's freedom. Accompanied by Miss Ransay, Marci was released, crying but unharmed, at 5:10 p.m., an hour after a third man picked up the ransom which Klein had dropped among rushing commuters in the Pan Am Building adjacent to Grand Central Terminal. Police said Saturday that Miss Ransay was not being charged and was considered a victim in the kidnapping. They said she was voluntarily helping the investigation. "We are handling this matter cautiously." police said in regard to MisszRansay,

Industrialist Offers Bail For Jailed Cousin

MARSEILLE, France (AP) - German industrialist Gunter Sachs has offered to post bail of about $210,000 for his cousin, Maria Christina von Opel, jailed since last July on drug charges, informed sources said Saturday.

Miss von Opel, 28, a great-granddaughter of German automobile pioneer Adam Opel, was arrested after 3,520 pounds of hashish was found in her villa near the Riveria resort of St. Tropez, police said. A French court has twice refused her lawyers' requests that Miss von Opel be released without bail. She is being held at prison near Cannes pending a pre-trial hearing set for Feb. 10.

SIGNS GOLF AGREEMENT

NBC Sports has signed a new agree-ment with the PGA Tour. The Bob Hope Desert Classic and Joe Garagiola Tucson Open will continue, with others to be ad whether the women knew the kidnappers or was able to provide detailed descriptions of them.

Inspector Robert Pirro, head of the department's 70-man kidnapping task force, was in charge of the investigation. Police declined to elaborate on what leads they were pursuing beyond the fact that they were looking for three men.

Klein, a 35-year-old millionaire who made his fortune designing high-priced casual clothing, went into seclusion with Marci on Saturday. His only child lives with his ex-wife Jayne in Manhattan.

Police said Ms. Ransay told them she was taken prisoner by three men outside her apartment at 4 a.m. Friday, was tied up until 6 a.m. and then was taken to an automobile and "driven around Manhat-

At 7:30 a.m., Marci, en route to an East Side private school, boarded a public bus. Ms. Ransay said she was put out of the automobile, which was following the bus, and boarded shortly after Marci.

Once aboard, she said she told Marci her father was ill and had been admitted to Mt. Sinai Hospital. They took a taxi to Ms. Ransay's apartment building where she said two of the men met them, escorted them to her sixth floor apartment and bound them.

The men left shortly after 6 p.m., she said. She and the child freed themselves and fled the apartment. Klein and police were waiting on the street. Police refused to say whether, or how, the kidnappers threatened Ms. Ransay to persuade her not to flee once she was freed to board the bus. Nor would they say whether the woman notified the bus driver of the kidnapping scheme. All city buses carry two-way radios. Klein learned of his daughter's abduction when the kidnappers called him at about 8:15 a.m. Friday. He contacted the

'Carousel' Keeps Jo Ann Naylor Spinning

By WILLIAM D. KERNS A-J Entertainment Editor

Lubbock sure isn't New York City, and working with amateur actors comes about as close to working with professionals as Tiny Tim comes to resembling Robert Redford, But for New York director-performer Jo Ann Naylor, currently directing the First United Methodist Church production of "Carousel" (slated to be staged Friday and Saturday at the Civic Center theater), the transition has offered its share of fresh and exciting challenges, not to mention a grab bag of nervous fears.

First Methodist music director Gordon McMillan, also acting as producer of "Carousel," has been trying to lure Miss Naylor to the South Plains for some time now. The director explained, "Gordon used to direct musical productions at a church in Phoenix. My parents introduced me to him there. Then, when he came to Lubbock about three years ago, he asked me to come down and work with him.

"But I couldn't make it until now."

Seems she's been keeping busy as a performer, choreographer and director working on off-Broadway, regional theater, dinner theater and television productions. Asked if she'd directed "Carousel" before, she answered, "No, but I've choreographed it. ... The show is not difficult to direct, however. Musicals have a definite style. An endgers and Hammerstein shows have very much a feeling to them.

Miss Naylor insists she'll be handling the show in a "very traditional" manner, but she may be choreographing it somewhat differently. "The dancing may look a little different, but not much," she said. "You go for the same structure, you know. You figure out if you want the dance to look cute or have a plotline. You must also rely on the caliber of people. I think the choreographer needs to know personalities, needs to know the dancers to know what looks

Fact is. Miss Naylor was only able to cast the dancers for the show. McMillan cast the acting roles before she ever arrived in Lubbock. That's not standard procedure for very many productions, but she explained it with, "Mostly, the people Gordon cast are trained voices, not trained actors. That's what Gordon is able to find best. That's what he works with."

Asked how she handles this problem, she said frankly, "With great difficulty. Sometimes you just go as far as you can with what you've got. But you expect limitations even in a professional show. And just let me add here that I think the show will be pretty good. It's better than I expected it would turn out, yet not what it could be.

"I think the play will be tight. It will flow. It will be enjoyable. The people who see it will be moved."

Still, the differences between professional and community productions are many and Miss Naylor did not shy away from discussing them. "Just the experience factor is a major difference," she said. "The things they (community actors) can offer. Once in a while, you find a true talent in the community field, perhaps a professional who has retired but wants to keep his hand in. Such casting makes things easier.

"Another difference is the time factor. Actors must have time to commit themselves to the play. But most here have families, jobs or school - and they see these things as more important. Maybe that's fair. Mind you, you can tell the cast at the beginning that the play will take a great deal of their time. You can tell them that, as community theater, others are depending on them.

"But I don't really know if they see what I mean until they've actually done However, there must be some sort of advantage to working with community theater. Otherwise, why become involved? "My answer to that would have to be an egocentric one," Miss Naylor responded. "But you see, I know I'm showing a lot of people things they've never seen, never learned before. I'm giving them something.

"Also, community theater is not like professional work where it is a job, a business, and you go home when you're through. People here have been excountry dancing for the first time with them. And I played pool for the first "And something that was really thrilling for me: one of the people here has a ranch out at Post. And a week ago I got to go out there and see a call being born. Now that was something! Really gorgeous. I'm afraid I made the poor cow hold still for pictures throughout the entire ordeal."

But if you think it's fun and games on the "Carousel" set, you've got another think coming. Miss Naylor describes herself as a "fairly strict" director who believes, "I was brought up as a dancer, and self-discipline has alway been important to me. I think you must be able to control yourself to know

And though she feels the production is "right on schedule," the fact her group has been granted only two days rehearsal time in the Civic Center theater worries her. "That scares me a lot," she admitted. "It's a financial problem, another community theater problem. You just can't often afford things like renting the half an extra day.

"Money plays a big part in every walk of life, including the theater. We could use the extra time to restage. Some of the set changes, after all, will be handled by the actors themselves. A day or two more at the Civic Center for rehearsals could mean so much."

Still speaking freely, Jo Ann Naylor also said she hoped the show would not be reviewed. Whereas most productions, community and professional, demand the critics attend, Miss Naylor says, "I may not be right. But I don't feel reviewing community theater is fair to the critic, the public or the cast.
"It would be like you (a critic) reviewing my plano playing. I play and I enjoy it — but only as a hobby.

"So much goes into a play: sets, technical work, costumes, lights. These things play a more important role than most people realize. And we have virtually none of these. Reviewing community theater would be like reviewing the third movement of a symphony; it would be incomplete."

Nevertheless, Miss Naylor is not scared of audience reaction. She made that clear by concluding with, "Again, I must say I'm pleasantly surprised, by the much worth seeing, and that's a lot for me to say because I'm your basic blunt person."

By The Way... By HELEN DIXON

If you don't believe that New Year's Eve falls in February, ask any Chinese person. You will be assured that February 7 is Chinese New Year's and the holiday starts off the Year of the Horse. The Sunday before New Year's (today) most 'Chinatowns' have colorful parades so that all will be ready to be happy that it's Chinese New Year's Eve.

Though it seems strange to Americans, the reason the new year begins on different days is because the Chinese observe the lunar year which is based on the waning and the waxing of the moon. This year is the Year of the Horse. This animal has been honored in the years 1906, 1918, 1930, 1942, 1954, 1960 and this year, 1978. Next time the Year of the Horse will be celebrated will be 1990.

By New Year's, the Chinese believe that all debts must be paid and all quarrels made up. (A pretty good idea!) It is also gift-giving time, according to the Chinese who believe that everyone should go home and honor the head of the household. In some households, everyone sits up all night to welcome the dawn and incense is burned to ward off evil spirits.

Did you know that only the small scale country processors and country produ-cers who prepare ham in the old fashioned way are permitted to label their products "country" ham?

"Country" means it was actually produced in the country. Usually such hams are called Smithfield, Virginia, Georgia, Kentucky or Tennessee ham depending on the area in which it was produced. Those hams prepared with the same ingredients as country ham, but produced in an urban area, are labeled "countrystyle" ham.

In the early days of this country, farmers butchered hogs in the fall, covered the ham with salt and injected it with preservatives. The hams hung over green hardwood fires for several weeks which provided low heat and smoked flavor. When the ham was near black and salty, farmers considered them fully cured. Although preserving practices have been considerably refined over the years, the dry cure, slow smoking and a long drying process are still basic to producing coun-

(Centuries ago, pagans buried their choicest cuts of meat - like ham - in the sand by the sea during the winter months. The action of the salt water cured the meat. It was dug up in the spring and roasted over wood fires.)

Today, to make a country "style" ham, a fresh ham is rubbed with a mixture of salt, sugar, black pepper and other curing agents. The ham is then stored at about 40 degrees for about 40 days in barrels to absorb the salt mixture. After the ham is cured, the salt mixture is washed off and the ham smoked for about two days. perature for about 30 days.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis didn't really bring anything new to the White House when she hired a French chef.

As president, one of Thomas Jefferson's first acts was to appoint a chef for the newly built White House - a French chef named Lamaire.

When Jefferson was ambassador to France and serving in Paris, he devoted much of his time to visiting outstanding restaurants and learning the nuances of French cuisine

After returning to America as Washington's secretary of state, Jefferson continued to import French recipes via diplomatic pouch. To him must be credited the popularity of French cooking in America as at both the White House and at Monticello, many French dishes were introduced and dabbling in haute cuisine soon became fashionable.

Behavior Modification' Assists Teacher In Today's Classroom

By JANICE JARVIS Family News Staff

Mention behavior modification, and the term often stirs visions of Pavlov's dog salivating at the ring of the bell. Mention that the technique is widely used in classrooms and a controversy explodes.

Behavior modification, developed by psychologist B.F. Skinner, is not as awesome as the term sounds. It's uses aren't limited to canines and classrooms, but is also used effectively in prisons, mental institutions and schools for the mentally retarded. It has helped handicapped and autistic children, where other methods have failed. Used in the classroom, behavior modification enhances the learning process, according to Dr. Paul Dixon, assistant professor of Education at Texas Tech Iniversity. It can be used to control the classroom environment and at the same time encourage a better performance from stu-More specifically, behavior modification helps teachers look at the positive rather than the negative aspects of the The proctor assistance program for ed-majors at Texas Tech, helps potential teachers learn to use behavior modification to control classroom disrup-

Divided into four laboratories, the class allows students to sample the role of teacher.

During the first laboratory, one education major acts as the teacher as other students 'role play' various behavior problems. One may be the class clown, another hyperactive.

The student-teacher is asked to observe the things in the class that bothered him the most. The goal is to nail down specific problems. "It's not enough to say the class was rowdy," explained Dixon. The studentteacher must explain why the class was rowdy.

Once a teacher establishes which behaviors are disruptive, a variety of methods can be used to encourage behavior change. For instance, to punish a child a teacher can use non-verbal language. A stern look, distance, or a closed posture are symbolic of non-verbal punishment.

If a teacher can discover the reason a child is misbehaving, quite often he can change that behavior, according to Dixon.

verbal, are also used to encourage good behavior. A smile, warmth, or use of the child's name are examples of non-verbal reinforcers that promote a well disciplined class.

Eventually reinforcers such as candy are replaced with social reinforcers such as a pat on the back.

Treating students with respect can then have a chain reaction effect. Teachers who give a good deal of positive reinforcement are often rewarded with a minimum of classroom disruption. Because children become more enthusiastic about class work, teachers are again re-effectively isn't easy. It takes consisten cy, something that many teachers find hard to provide. There are also built-in problems that come with the teaching profession

'We've used punishment for so long to control children, teachers and students have become adversaries," said Dixon. Changing the image takes time.

Breaking long established patterns is difficult. Children already settled into their roles as class clowns, may provoke a teacher with classroom disruptions. The teacher in turn becomes angry and uses punitive means to control the class. As the teacher becomes increasingly punitive, students become resistant

"It then becomes a vicious circle and has a snow-ball effect," said Dixon. New teachers can fight previous methods of discipline used in the classroom. In the past, teachers often told students to write something on the blackboard 100 times as punishment. The end result was often a dislike for writing and association of writing with punishment.

There are times when behavior modification backfires, but in most cases it works effectively. In some instances teachers expecting too much can be disappointed.

Most important, behavior modification can help teachers better control the learning environment, thus freeing instructors to spend more time teaching than disciplining. Relationships improve and students tend to be eager to learn, thus pleasing the teacher.

The term behavior modification may frighten parents, but it's basically nothing more than the power of positive thinking, noted Dixon.

PRUNE SALAD SPARKLE

Let this luscious fruit salad idea add color and freshness to a winter menu. Arrange fresh pear wedges, canned pineapple chunks, avocado slices and firm-ripe persimmon pieces on a lettuce-lined serving plate. Generously scatter about chewy pitted sun-sweetened prunes quartered into strips. Top with slightly sweetened sour cream thinned to drizzle consistency with some of the canned pineapple syrup. So that it's even more tantalizing, zip up the dressing with a little chopped fresh mint leaves or crushed dried flakes, or mint flavoring.

Punch Enlivens Valentine's Day

By TOM HOGE AP Newsfeatures Writer

The advent of Valentine's Day, which floods the mails each year with flowerfashioned cards and heart-shaped candy boxes, calls to mind the history of this sentimental occasion.

To go back a little, the historic feast of Saint Valentine was once enjoyed in lands to comme churchmen of that same name, and it was a grim theme for what has become such a pleasant occasion. According to legend, one was a Roman priest who suffered martyrdom during the reign of Emperor Claudius and the other a Bishop of Terni near Rome who was also martyred.

These somber origins were transformed over the centuries by Christians throughout Europe, and later in the New

In Spain, the day has become a specially festive one. The hosts serve not only food but also sherry, the famed wine of that nation. And since sherry ranges from pale dry fino to oloroso, which is darker and considerably sweeter, many Spanish homes start off the feast with a dry aperitif, go on to a medium-sweet sherry with the tapas - Spanish hors d'oeuvre - and have a full-bodied, creamy dark oloroso, with dessert. Today, a popular way to toast this day, both in Spain and this country, is with a Sherry Sweetheart Punch served well chilled. It is delicious with the Spanish tapas, which come in a dazzling variety. They include smoked salmon bits on toast, caviar on a dollop of sour cream atop a cracker, rolled waferthin bits of roast beef, chilled shellfish, tiny meatballs and, of course, the famous Spanish olives.

Here's a recipe for Sweetheart Punch, which can be stored in the refrigerator if you don't finish it in one evening.

1 quart apple juice 1 bottle of Spanish sherry Juice of one lemon

Helping Develop Language Major Role Of Parents

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) - What's the most important thing a parent can do for his children? Help them develop their ability to use the language, says noted lexicographer William D. Halsey.

Halsey, editorial director of the "Macmillan Dictionary for Children," has been involved as a definer, editor or publisher of nine dictionaries, six encyclopedias and two special handbooks.

"If there was any one gift that I could give a child, to the exclusion of getting straightened," Halsey said, "it would be the ability to use his or her lan-

The fluent use of the language — read ing, writing, and speaking - is important in today's society, Halsey points out. Yet, scores registered by the Scholastic Aptitude Tests taken by one million high school seniors every year have been going down steadily since 1963. Many people are worried about the level of "functional illiteracy" in this coun-reading, writing, speaking and listening, educators agree.

Who is to blame if Johnny still can't read? There are many factors involved, says Halsey, citing two of them. First, he says, children imitate, and in a certain sense, look up to the people who are closest to them when they are young.

"And that's their parents," he said. "So if a parent doesn't think reading is important, why should he expect a child to think reading is important?

Secondly, in teaching, Halsey says, it should be understood that a child is a logical, rational person who expects to be able to use what he learns.

Halsey edited the children's dictionary with the intent of giving youngsters the sense that reading is fun.

For example, a standard dictionary can define "bear" as "a large, plantigrade, omnivorous animal of nocturnal habits.' But the one aimed at children defines bear as "a large, heavy animal with thick, shaggy fur" - and gives a physical de-

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED ALL MY CHILDREN: Ray looted Harlan's house, then planned to loot the Martins' during a medical dinner-dance. Brooke and Ellen were at each other's throats after Brooke called Ellen a cradle-robber because of Mark. Devon defended Ellen. Donna began therapy with Dr. Polk and admitted that her own father tried to molest her. Brooke played up to Tom after he hired her as Erica's temporary replacement, then set another trap for Danny. Nancy told Carolyn that the baby Nancy's carrying is Carl's. Chris was furious that David gave in to Edna's demands. Erica's condition worsened.

ANOTHER WORLD: Liz's daughter Susan returned to town minus her husband from whom she separated. Sven forced Rachel to make a ransom tape to Mac. Vince made a pitch to Angie who said she's only interested in Willis. Greg brought Pat and Olive together in John's room. Olive called him every name in the book but Pat was convinced that he still loved Olive. He later called out for Pat's help. Undercover police investigated the kidnapping after Regine insisted it must be Sven.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Bob got the jitters when Karen took a powder from the hospital. John encouraged Susan to go after Alex, while also pushing Alex toward Kim, who was unaware that Alex has already fallen for her. Annie learned she is not pregnant. Jane laid it on thick to Beau after her husband didn't contest their divorce. Tom investigated Jay's past woman troubles as a possible explanation for Jay's suspicious alibis. Joyce blamed Grant's jealousy as the reason why Dan's not earning top dollar.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Marlena and Fred were rescued from the elevator but not before he was hostile because she tried to psychoanalyze his problems. Larry had Arlo beat up when Arlo threat-ened blackmail. Linda's style was cramped when Bob made David her assistant. Jerri spent the night at Larry's. Kate told Bill she'd never have an affair with a married man. Don was testy on TV when pressed for details of his relationship with Marlena. Patti took an interest in Mike while Mickey assured Maggie that he loves her.

THE DOCTORS: Greta broke the news to Billy that she's pregnant. Luke bailed out Barney with a loan from Doreen. Mike was jealous of Sarah and Colin. Luke went back to work for Doreen but insisted that it's only business this time. Doreen took a shine to Colin.

EDGE OF NIGHT: Steve figured that Vinnie, a demented cop, was the "redhead murderer." Deborah was saved. Denise vowed that Nicole would never get Miles. Raven was jealous that Logan was dating other women. April's surgery was scheduled.

FOR RICHER, FOR POORER: Connie's suicide plot backfired and she was hospitalized. Desmond offered Les a job as office manager and Les swore to lay off the booze. Paco insisted his gang wasn't responsible for the fire that killed Mrs. Quinn's son. Austin discovered Lee pestering Amy. Laurie and Jason shunned Viola's threats to spill the beans unless they broke off their affair.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Lesley caugh Laura lying about spending the night with Scotty in Lee's suite. David dealt with a shyster to supply information on Lamont's condition so they can manipulate Corbin Corp.'s stock. Katie fantasized making love with Mark. Barbara teased and taunted Darren. Peter had Lana tailed so she wouldn't harm Heather. Monica corralled Allan, Jeff learned the truth about Lisa-Lana when he tried to locate Lana's aunt.

GUIDING LIGHT: Bert learned that Bill and Simone have a daughter and he chose the Kincaids over the Bauers. Brandy failed to snare Justin in her web. But she learned that Alan contributed to a conservation group in return for a job for Elizabeth, which Liz doesn't realize was bought. Hillary learned that Bill and Simone were never legally married. Barbara helped Max recover. Georgene toyed with matches while plans for Rita's surprise birthday party were underway. LOVE OF LIFE: Under hypnosis, Arlene remembered that Ian suffered an attack and had fallen down the elevator shaft. She was exonerated and released. Charles offered to turn little Charlie over to Eddie. Mia lit Ben's fires but admitted to Andrew that Ben treats her hot and cold. Rick and Cal promised to reconcile their difference.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Beck recommended Ina's rooming house to Melinda who was released from the sanitorium but turned her back on Dorian. Tony furned that Paul didn't divorce Pat. Paul blamed her for Brian's death. Brad and Samantha panicked when they learned Cathy possesses Naomi's ring which Brad lost at Lana's the night she died. Dorian kicked Karen out after one too many lies

British Authors Warn Women

PARIS (WNS) - A new British paperback bluntly warns women that they don't take enough trouble to make their husbands happy when hubbies are most likely to rebel against a normal happy home life and grab for the nearest girl willing to go to bed, with him.

Say co-authors Anthea Linacre and Derek Bowskill in "The Male Menopause," "It's the time of life when men compare the dreams they had in their youth with the reality of their lives. "They take a look in the mirror, but the image they have of themselves doesn't match up, and then they go off

"It's nice guys who find themselves badly hit. After 20 years building up a home and family they realize there's not much of a reward. They begin to wonder if all that effort is worth it."

Richard was jealous of Marco's interest in Becky but was taken in by Edwin's scheming hard-luck routine. Brad and Jenny returned from their honeymoon and Will loaned him money for his failing health club RYAN'S HOPE: Jill was ready to marry Seneca but then kicked him out after he confessed that Edmund is Frank's child. Liam went gunning for Tom. Faith was torn with indecision about whether to squeal to Pat after Roger informed her that Dee trapped Pat into marriage. Jill found Frank and Rae in an innocent embrace which Jill mistook for passion.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Jo told Greg she found Meredith's scarf near the drawer where she stored the pearls he gave her which were stolen. Carolyn promised to have blood tests taken as soon as Kathy's baby is born, even though Scott insisted he'd accept the child. John, Stephanie and the girls went skiing. Amy was distressed that Bruce has been seeing Donna during Amy's late nights at the hospital. Kathy went into premature labor

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Leslie refused to accept Laurie's excuses for writing the book. Lance read it, then learned how shaken Les is. Sharon Ralston, one of Ron's ex-rape victims, told Ron's lawyer that Ron is a sadistic animal. But Ron insisted he's a changed

Just how good a cook are you? No mater how unfair it may seem, our culinary talents are often judged on the quality of the cakes that we make. You've probably eard many times that "my mother's akes were so light and delicious they nelted in your mouth."

If that is the case, you certainly wouldn't want your cakes to be anything less than perfect. Right? So to help you along in developing your image as a terrific cook, here are some pointers on making good cakes, reasons for cake failures and some of my favorite family reci-

If you make your cakes from scratch, remember the following:

1. Use tested recipes. Even if you're a culinary wizard, don't make up your own

2. Use good ingredients. Fresh eggs, shortening and baking powder are essential. If the recipe calls for cake flour, use it if possible. If not, for each cup of cake flour, substitute one cup of sifted all-purpose flour minus two table-

Clip 'n' Cook

CREAM CHEESE BROWNIES 1 pkg. (4 oz.) sweet cooking chocolate

5 tbsp. butter or margarine 1 pkg. (3 oz.) cream cheese, softened

1/4 cup sugar 1 egg

1 tbsp. all-purpose flour 1/2 tsp. vanilla

2 eggs 3/4 cup sugar

1/2 tsp. double-acting baking powder

1/4 tsp. salt

1/2 cup all-purpose flour 1/2 cup coarsely chopped nuts

1 tsp. vanilla 1/4 tsp. almond extract (optional)

Melt chocolate and 3 tablespoon of the butter in a small saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly. Cool. Blend remaining butter with cheese until softened. Gradually add ¼ cup sugar, beating well. Blend in 1 egg, 1 tablespoon flour and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Set aside.

Beat 2 eggs until thick and light in color. Gradually add ¾ cup sugar, beating until thickened. Add baking powder, salt and 1/2 cup flour. Blend in cooled chocolate mixture, nuts, 1 teaspoon vanilla and the almond extract. Spread about half of the chocolate batter in greased 8-or 9inch square pan. Add cheese mixture, spreading evenly. Top with tablespoonfuls of remaining chocolate batter. Zigzag a spatula through batter to marble. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes, or until top springs back when lightly pressed in center. Cool. Cut into bars or squares. Makes 16-to 20.

3. Measure accurately with standard measuring equipment.

4. Mix carefully and thoroughly. Be sure to cream the shortening and sugar for an adequate amount of time

5. Bake correctly. Stagger the layers on the oven racks and use the right size pans. Bake at the oven temperature recommended in the recipe. The cake is done if it springs back when touched lightly with your finger.

6. Take proper care after baking. Allow it to cool before frosting. Now, if you've tried a recipe and it failed, analyze the reasons why it could have been a disaster. 1. Undersize cakes: not enough baking powder, too hot an oven, too large a pan or overmixing.

2. Fallen cakes: too much shortening, baking powder, soda or sugar; too short a baking time or incorrect temperature.

3. Uneven cakes: uneven oven heat, uneven racks, uneven pan or too stiff a bat-4. Runny cakes: too low oven temperature; too much batter, leavening or sugar or too small a pan.

5. Humped cakes: too much flour or oven too hot at start of baking period.

or sugar, too much flour, over mixing or oven too hot.

7. Soggy cakes: not baking long enough or baked at too low a temperature. 8. Black-bottomed cakes: dark pans cause dark bottoms on cakes, or pan too deep for amount of batter. Now that you know how to mix a cake correctly or discover where you went wrong, why not try one of these two chocolate cakes. The first one has been in my family for at least four generations. Use an icing made with one egg and two squares of melted chocolate with about 1/3 cup melted butter, one box of powdered sugar and enough cream to make the right consistency.

termilk and dry ingredients. Add vanilla. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 15-20 minutes. This recipe is great if you're in a hurry. And believe me, it's delicious!

HOT CHOCOLATE CAKE

Combine 2 cups sugar and 2 cups flour in bowl. Combine 1/2 cup butter, 1/2 cup shortening, 2 squares semi-sweet chocolate and I cup water; bring to boil. Pour over dry ingredients and mix quickly. Add 2 beaten eggs, 1/2 cup buttermilk, 1 tsp. soda and 1 tsp. vanilla. Bake in large loaf pan for 25 minutes at 400 degrees F.

Bake 5 minutes less if using glass pan.

ICING Five minutes before cake is done, begin the icing. Bring to a boil 1/2 cup butter, -2: squares semi-sweet chocolate and 4 tbsps. milk.

Add 1 box powdered sugar, 1 tsp. vanilla, 1/2 cup chopped pecans. Pour icing over hot cake five minutes after cake has been taken out of the oven.

Shimmery molded salads and desserts are refreshing to eat even with wintry temperatures. Here's an idea that's color dotted with sun-sweetened prunes to serve either way. Completely dissolve 1 package (3-ounce) lemon-flavored jello in 1 can (12-ounce) apricot nectar heated to boiling. Add 1/3 cup water and 2 teaspoons lemon juice. Chill until thickened. Fold in 1/3 cup finely chopped prunes, 1/4 cup flaked coconut and a 1-1/2 cup combination of any of the following cut-up fruits: Oranges, pears, apples, bananas, seeded grapes and fruit-flavored yogurt sets it off simply but deliciously.

FDA Seeks Safeguards From Cosmetics Industry

By JILL PAZNIK NEW YORK (WNS) - The Food and

Drug Administration has been very active recently in protecting women from potentially harmful cosmetics. The agency is working to prevent cancer that may be caused by ingredients in many popular cosmetics, such as moisturizers, shampoos and hair dyes. In addition, by the end of 1978, there will be rules to protect women against irritations from bubble baths and eye makeup.

A recent rule makes sure consumers know the ingredients in cosmetics, and another law bans a carcinogenic eyelash

The most important project is to find out how to control nitrosamines. These cause liver cancer in rats and are found in such popular cosmetics as Johnson's Baby Lotion, Noxema, Keri and Nives lotions, Clairol Herbal Essence, Breck, Head and Shoulders and Wella Balsam. They are also found in cured meats and machine lubricants.

"We don't know what to tell customers. We don't know if there is any hazard," said Martin Greif, assistant to the director of Cosmetics Technology. But by the end of 1978, the FDA will have the problem analyzed, he said.

Nitrosamines are a combination of commonly used amines and nitrites. No one knows how the nitrites get into cos-

The amount of the chemical varies. "In some cosmetics there are traces, in others there's a substantial amount. Some scientists say the amounts can be kept low enough for it to have no effect. Others say that where a carcinogen is concerned, there is no level low enough for no effect," said Greif.

Another rule to watch for is a warning on "permanent" hair dyes used by 20 million Americans saying that one ingredient they contain may cause cancer.

The FDA does not have the authority to ban the ingredient, listed on labels as 4 methoxy-m-phenylenediamine, because an old federal courts rule prevents any action except a warning

A National Cancer Institute preliminary report found that the chemical causes cancer when fed to rats and mice. Tests also show the chemical penetrates the skin of animals. It may also penetrate the scalp. But the $250 million hair dye industry says the tests and results are wrong. A final report from the cancer research agency is due in early 1978.

Meanwhile, the FDA wants Congress to pass a law so it can ban unsafe dyes.

The FDA will also make the bathtub safe in 1978. Once thought of as the height of personal pampering, the FDA found irritatng trouble in bubble baths and will demand a warning on the label stating "excessive or prolonged use may cause irritation to skin or urinary tract. Keep out of reach of children."

Nearly 100 cases of irritation have been reported over the last four years. primarily among young girls, Greif said. Several cases of vulvovaginitis, a urinary tract infection, were also reported by consumers and physicians.

The problems arose mainly in children "who tend to remain in bubble baths longer than adults - they play in it and their tissues are more sensitive," Greif said. Good directions and the warning should be enough to avoid these problems, he added.

Another FDA rule will put a stop to the incidence of partial or total blindness caused by bacteria in poorly preserved eye makeup. The rule will demand that manufacturers "use adequate preservatives to protect against contamination during use.

A mascara wand can pick up bacteria on the skin each time a woman uses it. She keeps putting it back in the container "until the preservative system breaks down." If she accidentally scratches her eye, irreversible damage can be caused within 24 hours.

"Should you feel a scrathch on the cornea - you will know because it will hurt seek medical help," Greif advised.

The eye makeup and bubble bath rules are direct results of consumer complaints. Complaints on cosmetics and quiries, FDA, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20852, or to one of 22 district FDA offices. Other recent rules include a ban on trichlorethylene, a carcinogen that was used in false eyelash cleaners. But the amounts were so small there's only a "remote likelihood of injury" for women who used it, according to FDA findings. A new rule makes sure companies claiming to sell hypoallergenic products that are less irritating do some testing to show they are, in fact, less irritating.

Still another rule insists manufacturers list all ingredients in cosmetics. Such listings help those with allergies to avoid certain chemicals and allow consumers to make value comparisons.

Alpha Phi Continues Lollipop Sale

By DALE RAYMAN

"Help Lick Heart Disease" and "Alpha Phi Helping Hearts" are the dual theme of the Lubback Alpha Phi Alumnae and Texas Tech University collegiate chapter's sixth annual Cardiac Aid Lollipop Drive, which continues through Feb. 14.

The heart-shaped red lollipops are prominently displayed in grocery stores, restaurants, businesses and on the Tech campus the two weeks preceding Valentine's Day each year, and sell for 25 cents each.

This year the alumnae and collegiates expect to sell 27,000 lollipops; the proceeds will be used to purchase a portable heart monitor for Methodist Hospital. The machine is used in surgery to detect disorders of heart rhythm and blood pressure.

Margaret Fullerton is alumnae chairman of the drive; Terry Ohman is collegiate chairman. Past donations by Alpha Phi to Methodist Hospital for the prevention or treatment of heart disease include a life-size recording Resusci-Annie, a Datascope monitor, a Normothermia unit and a defibrillator.

Heart projects are the international philanthropy of Alpha Phi sororities. Chapters in the United States and Canada sell 1 million lollipops each year and contribute over $100,000 annually to the American Heart Association, local heart projects and to the Alpha Phi Foundation, which helps fund heart research.

Anyone wishing to purchase the lollipops in bulk should call 799-3922.

The entrance, or foyer, of your home, whether it's large or small, wide or narrow, is where you welcome your guests - and, for that matter, yourself. It's the one room everybody sees — it's the one room everybody has to pass through.

The impression it makes can be lasting. Is it hospitable? Is it useful? Is it pretty?

So many foyers show only the console and mirror arrangement that you would think there is no other way to decorate this very important part of your home.

A good looking nest of tables is one practical and helpful way to substitute for the usual console table - or, you might want to try an elegant slim table that gives you more room and more beauty in your entrance way. Those are just two of the many If a foyer is large enough, it may be used as part of your living area with a small pair of chairs, and when you entertain a large group, it will provide much needed odditional seating.

Once the furniture has been chosen, you can concentrate your energies on finding

Foods May Play Part In Disease Control

The food you eat at meals can be used to assist medicine cure disease. There are countless examples all around you. So let us examine a report just released by the American Medical Association in which food plays a part in disease control.

Saccharin was still on sale at the end of the year, after Congress agreed on legis-lation to postpone a ban on its use for at least 18 months. The Food and Drug Administration had banned the artificial sweetener on the basis of animal tests which indicated it might cause cancer.

The fad diet of the year — a liquid pro-tein substance — was declared hazardous to health by the AMA nutrition unit. The AMA points out that the diet is hazardous unless administered under close supervision of a physician. At the year's end several deaths were being investigated as possibly being related to the liquid prote-in diet.

A dramatic decline in heart disease was noted toward the end of the year. Since any zinc tablets without discussing your 1950 the rate of deaths from heart disease in the United States has dropped 30 per cent. One-third of that reduction has occurred in the last five years. Modifications in life style — giving up sn. king, keeping weight down, regular exercise plus control of high blood pressure are credited for the gain against heart dis-

Massive vitamin overdoses pose a new danger to the American public, the AMA's nutrition expert warns, in the wake of court decisions and congressional actions that have virtually removed all controls from packaging and sale of vitamins. A research report in the Journal of the AMA said that Vitamin C had been tested carefully as a treatment for the common cold, and was found wanting.

The search for a treatment for acne, the plague of adolescents, got a boost during 1977 with a report from Sweden that zinc tablets are sometimes effective against the skin problem. (But don't take intention with your physician).

There have been over 300 improved new medical treatments recently. Lawrence Galton, veteran medical reporter, explains them in his new book "Medical Advances" (Crown, $8.95). A role for soft water in heart attacks and strokes has been suggested by many studies. In Monroe County, Florida, for example, after the local water supply was converted from soft rain to hard well water, heart attack and stroke death rates were halved over a four-year period.

Sand-ravaged mesquite bushes, native grass pastures, barren hills and plains do not easily evoke a sense of beauty in those whose idea of natural wonder is mountain streams and forests, or oceans and beaches. To see the beauty in this semi-arid country frequently demands the love of the native-born West Texan or one who closely associates himself with the area. Marvin C. Armstrong, a local amateur artist, is such a person.

A Lubbock native, Armstrong spent over 25 years traveling throughout the South Plains due to the demands of his profession. Now that he has retired, he has the opportunity and time to express himself through his art. Armstrong is enthusiastic about his work. He still marvels that he is free to paint, " when constantly working, working, working, living that old rat race type of life, you don't have time for anything, you don't even have time to see how beautiful the clouds are. When I finally started trying to, it seemed like a new world opened up to me. I began to see things that I'm sure I never noticed before."

Through his painting, Armstrong's aim is to open up this new world to others. A self-taught artist who has been inspired by the works of artists such as Robert Wood and Porfirio Salinas, Armstrong paints realistic landscapes of the region between Lubbock and San Antonio, including scenes of the hills near Snyder. South Texas ranches, and West Texas native pastures.

Armstrong is prolific and has produced about 40 paintings during the past three years. Many have gone to friends and relatives. One hangs in the office of the president of the Texas Congress of Parent Teachers Association in Austin. Often a painting is done for a particular person, and executed with that person in mind. His contacts, he says, are people who "hear about me and they ask me to paint something."

Armstrong tries to be creative and experimental in his art. Having little textbook education on the subject, he has improvised. One technique he uses involves the use of clay or earth colors in his fore-

"I lay a base of earth and then the grass grows...You back off and look at it, just like a kid looking at clouds - I still look at them that way - I see things in them; faces, shapes, forms - I see it in this. I see an opportunity for a beautiful little ravine here because of the way the paint Armstrong seems concerned that he lacks knowledge of art techniques. He explains, "I'm aware of the fact that I'm not knowledgable about techniques of painting or the fine points of painting...people generally praise my work, but you are not too sure whether or not that's a true feeling.

However, as Dori Watson states in her book The Techniques of Painting, "Beyond the technique used, whatever it may be, lies the idea...No amount of facility with any techniques - or all of them - can supplant this; in painting, as in any other art, superb technique can never take the place of having something Armstrong appears to have something ways lived. "When I paint I just see the country, the Texas country in my mind, or New Mexico country. And since I don't copy, naturally when I start painting, it just comes out a Texas landscape." He says he doesn't depict any particular place in most of his paintings, but just starts painting and "things develop as I go along."

Through the muted and subtle colors of his landscapes, Armstrong tries to convey his idea of nature and create something to which others can relate. He believes that nature uses muted colors to obtain harmony. While "the most important thing in painting is the flow of color, nature does beautiful things with greens

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: This may sound strange, but in the six years my husband and I have been married, we have never had a fight. We've had plenty of disagreements, but we have never settled any of them. When my husband is mad about something, he clams up and sulks. He won't even tell me what's wrong.

won't even teil me what's wrong.

I am as bad as he is. When I'm upset, I get a lump in my throat, tears in my eyes, and I keep quiet. Sometimes I wish we could bring all our complaints out in the open and have a good old-fashioned shouting argument, but I honestly wouldn't know how to start one.

Any suggestions?

Sulker's Wife

Dear Wife: You are wise to want to air your feelings. Allowing unresolved tensions to build up inside can cause one major explosion far more serious than a series of minor blowouts. Few married couples agree on EVERYTHING.

When you're upset, swallow that lump in your throat, let the tears fall where they may and say exactly what you're thinking. Don't attack your mate in anger—simply describe your feelings honestly.

This is sure to provoke some sort of reaction in your husband. He'll either deny or affirm, defend or counterattack, justify or apologize. And before you know it, you'll have a healthy, honest dialogue going.

DEAR ABBY: Why do so many people object to children? I am the mother of three, ages 2,4 and 6, and I take them with me everywhere. If I'm invited somewhere, I always ask if my children are welcome, and if they're not, I don't go.

Children need to be with their parents as much as possible. It assures them that they are loved. Leaving children at home all the time is hard on them. It makes them feel unwanted and insecure.

I am not insulted if I am told my children aren't welcome. I realize that sometimes children are hard to take. Even mine. It requires a lot of love and patience to take your children with you all the time, but they grow up so fast, it's worth it.

I will stick by my beliefs and encourage others to do the same. Am I wrong?

Loves Children

Dear Loves: You ask why so many people object to children. Because, unless they are disciplined and well-behaved, they tend to impose on the rights of others. Children cannot be expected to behave as adults, and to demand that they do puts an impossible and unfair burden on them.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have put up with this nervy couple long enough. They always come at mealtime. Being a well-mannered person, I cannot eat in front of people, so I ask them to join us. And when they do, they eat everything in sight.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

Back in 1969, this writer was earning pocket money working at the Esquire Theater in Dallas. About a block down Oak Lawn was a 7-11 store, the allnight variety which somehow managed to get the early editions of the Sunday newspapers on Saturday night. And not a Saturday went by that I didn't stop and purchase a paper at that 7-11 on my way home around midnight.

My family subscribed to the same newspaper, but there was something the Sunday movie advertisements offered that I just couldn't wait until morning to read about. The sneak previews.

You see, practically every Sunday night saw at least one theater "sneaking" an upcoming release. That is, it would screen a new movie with its current attraction, offering both for a solitary admission price. And back then film distributors and exhibitors knew the meaning of the word "sneak." The curious could open the Sunday pages, knowing they'd be lured only by such vague promises as "a shocking new release from United Artists" or "that all-action man is back" or simply "see a preview of comedy's brightest new hit."

Sneaks were fun back in the '60s, if only for the guessing games played by the movie fanatics before each screening. Sure, some people didn't glance twice at the movie advertisement, but the true fanatic glanced at least that many times and then reached for the latest issue of Boxoffice magazine, a publication which listed each film distributor's coming releases. Monologues followed the lines of: "Well, the theater is showing a Paramount film. Odds are the sneak is also Paramount. Let's see, that company has three films ready for release. But the Jack Lemmon picture is the only comedy.

Then it was mow the lawn, grab the car keys and popcorn money and head for the theater. More often than not, we weren't as smart as we thought. Sneaks were never all that easy to predict. But two features for the price of one fed the thrill regardless.

Film distributors have specific reasons for offering a film as a freebie. At times, everyone is certain the picture is quality product, but the unique variety which needs a pre-sell. Standard advertising may not deliver, whereas advance word-of-mouth publicity may get the message to the masses. Thus the

Other times, films are sneaked to gauge audience reaction before the final cut. Steven Spielberg, for example, sneaked "Close Encounters Of The Third Kind" in Dallas and edited out the closing song of "When You Wish Upon A Star" on the basis of reaction cards filled out by the audience. On the other side of the spectrum, certain independent films sneaked in Dallas in the '60s were actually booed by the audience.

Exhibitors may place a sneak with a film doing "slow" business, so as to draw attention to the current attraction as well. And finally, films may be sneaked for the benefit of certain age groups. If you're playing Woody Allen's "Sleeper," you certainly don't sneak "MacArthur" with it. If you desire an adult audience for your new picture, procedure demands it be sneaked with an R-rated attraction.

Of course, some companies simply prefer to sneak their new product with their current product. 20th Century-Fox with 20th Century-Fox. Columbia with Columbia. After all, why bring in a curious crowd to see your competitor's picture?

Lubbock has been blitzed by an onslaught of sneak previews during the past month or so - though it's hard to call them sneaks without grimacing these days. When the ads read, "See Robby Benson in a sneak preview of 'One On One," and it's accompanied by a display photograph and full credits, Lord knows the mystery is long gone. But the bargain is not. And frankly, Lubbock has not been taking advantage.

The fact is, according to more than one local theater manager, movie-goers in Lubbock aren't even sure how to define a sneak preview. "Lubbock hasn't had many sneaks," says Showplace Four manager Ron Reid, "and it's only been recently that the exhibitors have been putting more pressure on the distributors to help pre-sell a picture."

Both he and Fox Four manager Harold Lieck say they've received phone calls from people asking if the announced sneak preview was "just clips and portions of a movie, or really an entire movie." People have been known to pay to see a sneak, leave, then turn around and pay again to see the regular attraction. No kidding. I was at one local theater where dozens of people waited in the lobby until the regular feature was over, then walked in to see the sneak. Or they would walk out after the current feature, even though the theater manager (Lieck) stood in the aisle reiterating that a different movie was about to be shown at no extra charge.

Some people naturally don't wish to sit through two movies anytime, anywhere, but these happenings are still a shame - especially since many of the walkouts will be back two weeks later when the sneak is booked for its regular

Not too many people have taken advantage of Lubbock's recent sneaks, all of which were announced on the Avalanche-Journal's amusement pages. Jan. 27 saw the Winchester sneak "The Turning Point" early; patrons were al lowed to stay to see "The World's Greatest Lover." That same night the Fox sneaked Henry Winkler's new comedy, "The One And Only," after a showing of "Saturday Night Fever." Just this past Friday night, another duo of theaters sneaked movies. The Cinema West displayed a critically acclaimed double bill by sneaking "Julia" with "Three Women.

And in the sole unannounced sneak, Walt Disney Studios sneaked 'Candleshoe" at Showplace Four with the R-rated "Semi-Tough." It was a blind sneak (no title listed in the movie ads) because Disney wanted to garner an adult audience for "Candleshoe," thinking it to be a picture more for the entire family than just the wee folk. They pulled off the audience-test desired by sneaking it with an adult picture.

Whether the Showplace audience that night wound up pleased or disappointed is not known. Nor is it vital information. The fact remains that a bargain is being offered Lubbock's multitude of movie-goers and, because the product is strange to area consumers, many are missing out on both the fun and the savings. So pass the word. Sneak previews are indeed entire movies. A freebie hooked on to a current attraction. A double feature for one night only. Two for the price of one.

The process of sneaking a film is one of the few which benefits both the film companies and the entertainment-seeking public. Still, I for one have got to admit that the sneaks were more fun when they maintained that aura of mystery, when they drew people to the theater who, no matter how confident their guesses, were never really sure what movie they were going to see until the opening credits lit up the screen.

Yep, those were the days.

. A reminder: The Lubbock Symphony Orchestra is in the midst of a fund drive right now, striving to earn $40,000 in donations while simultaneously preparing for next week's visit by distinguished violinist Eugene Fodor. According to a symphony source, "Even if we have sellouts every night, we wouldn't make enough to break even. Ticket sales will not carry the load. Rising artist fees are the big reason.

Finance chairman for the fund drive is Clem Boverie. Give him a call at the sýmphony office if you'd like to help.

"TEXAS," that musical drama staged every summer at Palo Duro Canyon, is presently casting singers and dancers for its 1978 production. Lubbock auditions will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Feb. 12 in room one of the Texas Tech University music building.

Margaret Harper, publicist with "TEXAS" for many years, called the A-J Wednesday to explain, "We've held our Lubbock auditions over the Christmas holidays the past few seasons. This year, I convinced everybody to hold them during the school session so as to draw an even better response from the wonderful, talented people in Lubbock."

Concerts on the horizon? You bet. Merle Haggard will be at Coldwater Country on Wednesday. St. Elmo's Fire, a dynamite band which has earned quite a large following in this city, will be back Friday and Saturday nights at the Cotton Club. The Charlie Daniels Band will appear Feb. 15 at the Municipal Auditorium. Emerson, Lake & Palmer will be at the Lubbock Coliseum Feb. 19; early ticket purchases are advised for this show. Then on March 10, B. J. Thomas will be at the Lubbock Coliseum, followed in the same hall on

Comic Steve Martin will be back in Lubbock on March 31; he'll be playing to a predicted sellout crowd in the Municipal Auditorium. Kenny Rogers, originally scheduled to play the Coliseum March 12, has cancelled. Promoters will try to find a later date for him here. And some top names are being bandied about for Civic Center shows; some look good, but all remain tentative at this

Finally, another reminder: The Avalanche-Journal is still soliciting readers' opinions as to which 1977 films could be called the best and worst of the year. Lists of the Ten Best and Ten Worst should be mailed to me here at the A-J. My picks and the results of the readers' poll will be printed in the Feb. 19 entertainment section. Look for it.

Ross Turns Ballet Into Brilliant Metaphor In 'The Turning Point'

By WILLIAM D. KERNS A-J Entertainment Editor

DALLAS - Directing one hit movie in any given year is a prestigious enough aclishment. But having two gems to your credit is guaranteed to raise more than a few Hollywood eyebrows, especially when one is a touching cinema masterpiece called "The Turning Point." Manipulating a ballet milieu, a backdrop not seen since "The Red Shoes," director Herbert Ross offers his most personal film, a picture which transcends its dance setting to reveal universal messages about growing up

Exploring Ross' background, one has little trouble discovering the impetus for the film. After all, dance is where Herb Ross began his career, first staging many a Broadway musical and then serving as choreographer for the American Ballet Theater in the 1950s. Two of his ballets, "Caprichos" and "The Maids," are still a part of that distinguished company's repertoire. But if the ballet kept a part of Ross, it must be said the director returned the favor. He took Nora Kaye, the ABT's greatest dramatic ballerina, away from the company by marrying her during an overseas tour. As executive producer of "The Turning Point," Nora Kaye also played a large role in getting the American Ballet Theater — and the film itself — on the screen. A weary-from-traveling Herb Ross explained to the Avalanche-Journal during an interview at Dallas' Fairmont Hotel, "The film's screenplay is by Arthur Laurents.

But Nora and I had discussed the evolution of the story for at least a year. Nora was the motor. It was she who persuaded Arthur to commit to it after we had not been able to arrive at a storyline that was universal enough. She wanted Arthur to help because he was an old friend and had been around the ballet a lot.

'It was also through Nora that we were able to get the American Ballet Theater and all those wonderful dancers; she handled the negotiations. But it was Ross who handled the variant personalities on the set, just as he guided

Peter O'Toole in the remake of "Goodbye Mr. Chips," Woody Allen in "Play It Again, Sam," Barbra Streisand in "The Owl And The Pussycat," George Burns in 'The Sunshine Boys," Nicol Williamson in "The Seven Per Cent Solution" and (his second 1977 hit) Richard Dreyfuss and Marsha Mason in "The Goodbye Girl." No stranger to working with bona fide stars, Ross nevertheless relies on very basic human values and feelings to carry his film. In "The Turning Point," Shirley MacLaine and Anne Bancroft are old friends who, still harboring doubts, meet after an 18-year separation. The former quit the ballet to marry, raise a family and open a dance studio in Oklahoma City. Miss Bancroft chose to stay with the company and, sacrificing all personal commitments, achieve star status. Both are questioning the decisions made at their respective "turning points" as we meet them.

Also playing a major part in the drama is Leslie Browne as Miss MacLaine's daughter, a newcomer to professional ballet who chances into a love affair with a charming Russian dancer played by Mikhail Baryshnikov. Asked if the MacLaine-Bancroft casting was planned from the beginning — considering Miss Bancroft earned Broadway stardom as Gittel in "Two For The Seesaw," only to lose the movie role to Miss MacLaine — Ross said, "We wanted Anne from the start, to be honest. But we were thinking of others for Shirley's role. (Grace Kelly for one; Joanne Woodward for another.) Shirley, however, was very anxious to do . She had grown up in a ballet school.

THE GUIDING LIGHTS - Husband and wife team Herbert Ross, right, and Nora Kaye are the guiding forces behind a moving new film called "The Turning Point." The film uses a ballet environment, obviously born of Miss Kaye's past as a ballerina and Ross' experience as a choreographer. Ross, who directed "The Goodbye Girl" as well as "The Turning Point" in 1977, spoke with A-J entertainment editor William Kerns about the latter film during a press junket in Dallas.

"Her mother was a rehearsal pianist in a ballet school in Washington, and Shirley said she'd always wanted to be a ballet dancer. What happened is she grew too tall. At the age of 13, it became clear she would be too big."

As for Baryshnikov, whose stunning and powerful leaps earned applause both at a Dallas screening room and during the Winchester Theater's Jan. 27 sneak preview, the young Russian ballet idol was determined to do the film from the beginning. "He knew the tone would be elevated because of Nora's involvement," said Ross, "and we in turn knew there's never been anyone who dances as well. And we had to make the movie when we did because you just didn't know if he's break an ankle the next year and never dance again. He was at his peak."

For 19-year-old Leslie Browne, just getting the part was like living a scene from the script. It seems she resided in Phoenix, where her parents also ran a dance school, and ultimately she won a scholarship to George Balanchine's New York City Ballet. She then was awarded a bit part in "The Turning Point" but, when the actress signed to the romantic lead succumbed to illness, Nora Kaye offered Leslie the

Neither Baryshnikov nor Browne, both extremely effective, had prior acting experience. "Not in the conventional sense anyway," Ross explained. "Misha is a brilliant actor in the ballet convention, but I had no idea what Leslie could do. So we tried to surround them with familiar surroundings, the atmosphere in which they work every day. We duplicated. We shot in the ballet studios. So they never felt for

"And finally they got comfortable. They got confident. They are both very intelligent, both very gifted. And finally we got through to them that they didn't have to act with a capital A, that they just had to behave naturally."

One of the aspects which impressed this writer the most was the editing of the film, the cutting of the time progression discussions even more than the dance scenes. Asked to comment, Ross said, "That was very hard. I divided the editing chores. I let Nora supervise the editing of the ballet sequences, and during that time I left to make another movie ('The Goodbye Girl'). It was just easier to stay out of her way. Then I came back to review what she had done and supervise the rest of the picture.

"I also have to say I had an excellent editor in Bill Reynolds."

But Ross was quite eager to discuss the dancing, stating with unchecked enthusi-asm, "The interesting thing is we had a ballet conductor, John Lanchbery, who is the very best. You'll never see dancers elsewhere who are as musical as ours. They are never off beat. They are perfectly phrased. It can never happen in a live per-

Shooting with as many as five cameras, Ross strives for two basic camera angles during the dance scenes (which, by the way, constitute only 30 minutes of the film and conflict in no way with the drama). The first was to offer the subjective experience of what it feels like from the dancer's point of view, the second merely me to give the film audience the best possible seat. But dance is not simply glorified here; Ross also takes time to show the blisters and perspiration, the total dedication

He said, "Ballet is the most grueling discipline in the world. Nobody believes how arguous it is. You simply cannot skip class. It's a constant battle to keep your body supple. Nature is always trying to move your body back; that's why ballet dancers must start at a very young age.

A sterling performance of the more quiet variety is given by Tom Skerritt as Miss MacLaine's husband. Ross is quite taken with the actor, saying, "Tom is such a great talent. He was in 'MASH,' really the best thing in the movie, and then he kind of disappeared here and started making spaghetti westerns just to survive. It's funny, because I was on a plane with Bob Altman (director of 'MASH') lately and he said he was glad I used Tom; he agreed that Tom was the best talent in his film and he said he plans to use him again

One San Antonio critic, though, thought the role appeared shortened. He was right. "There were two scenes of Tom back in Oklahoma," Ross recalled, "involving a subplot of him being unfaithful. I never liked it. I shot it, but I never liked that aspect of his character. So we eliminated it in the final cut. We're telling so many stories in the film; it's hard to give everybody equal time."

Indeed, it is Bancroft and MacLaine who will be remembered, mostly for the film's telling scene in which their hostilities explode to the surface. Bancroft throws her champagne in MacLaine's face, and the ensuing sequence develops into a near brawl. How planned was it? The director revealed, "I refused to rehearse the actual fight. And Shirley kept worrying about hurting Anne. Anne, in turn, kept shouting, 'Hit me! Hit me!'

'I also never rehearsed the throwing of the cham ne. That is, I never told Shir ley when Anne was going to do it. We did the take several times and, when I finally told her to throw the drink, Shirley didn't know it was coming. It made for a nice reaction. ... In the fight, Shirley was worried that the buckle on her pocketbook might cut Anne. We worked that out. And then they fell naturally into that thing of hitting each other on the backsides, like children. That was neither planned nor re-

Nevertheless, a great deal of planning did indeed go into "The Turning Point," a great deal of love and care also — and it all shows. Ross tells us so many stories, but with such feeling it's never fair to label it soap opera. And luckily for all of us, the movie has been well received; Academy Award nominations are assured. As the director said so proudly, "Apparently, people are having an emotional experience when they view this film.

"They seem to be relating to it the way I hoped. They somehow understand that, even though the background of the film is so singular, what we were trying to do was express universal feelings. The ballet can be a wonderful metaphor."

A Profile

(In what could very well be Lubbock's most preatigious rock concert, Emerson, Lake & Palmer will appear at 8 p.m. Peb. 19 in the Lubbock Coliseum. Over the next three Sundays, the Avalanche-Journal will print a profile of each member of the trie — beginning with Keith Emerson today, Greg Lake Peb. 12 and Carl Palmer on the morning of the concert. Tickets for the show are on sale at Al's Music Machine and S&B Music.)

KEITH EMERSON was born in Todmorden Lancashire, England. Both his parents played musical instruments and by the age of 7, weekly piano lessons had become part of his routine. Yet, not unlike most children, Keith was not really into classical music while he was being taught it, although he did develop incredible technique at an early age, even winning piano competitions.

In his teens, though, it was jazz that truly consumed his interest. Attracted by its rebelliousness (a quality that Keith himself would come to epitomize), Emerson began listening to Char-it, he began torealize that the counterpoint he heard in this style was actually very much like the Bach he had leaned years before. Meanwhile, when prodded, other jazz pianists would recommend exploration of the likes of Debussy for developing an ear for im-well as gigging with local jazz bands. As he got more deeply into Getting out the old music books, he worked on the classics from a whole new angle, realizing that Mussorgsky and Parker did have a lot in common after all. The seeds of the EL&P fusion style had been planted.

Meanwhile, the British r&b boom was reaching a peak in the mid-sixties (with Cream the highpoint), and Keith hopped on the bandwagon. After leaving school, he was a bank teller by day, a musician by night. But the

AS A FULL-TIME PLAYER, he first attracted attention in Gary Farr and the T. Bones, enjoying success on the Soho club circuit, including The Marquee. He also played with the VIPs, a band that would later become Spooky Tooth. But the r&b gigs were primarily financial in motivation, and Keith had other ideas about the future. In early 1967, Emerson was recruited for a back-up for American soul singer P.P. Arnold, then working permanently in Europe. Bassist Lee Jackson, also from the T. Bones, came along, and together with guitarist David O'List and drummer Ian Hague, they were known collectively as The Nice. As Hague was replaced by drummer Brian Davison in late '67, The Nice were developing their own indentity.

From the beginning, Keith always seemed to be a part of dramatic activity, as Arnold & The Nice attracted their initial following by exploding a smoke bomb outside their tent at the Windsor Festival.

NO LONGER ANYBODY'S back-up band, before long The Nice parted amicably with, Pat Arnold. Signed to Andrew Oldham's Immediate label, they carved out an experimental, pioneering style that encompassed jazz, pop, classical, blues and rock. Guitarist O'List left after the first LP, the engaging "Thoughts Of Emerlist Davjack," and the group continued to grow as a trio. Ahead of their time, The Nice would not hesitate to play a rocked-up Sibeluis piece one moment and a 12-bar blues the next, an original jazz/classical blend or a re-arranged Dylan song.

Once considered a quiet, reserved sort of fellow, Keith Emmerson underwent a dramatic transformation as The Nice's popularity increased. Charisma Records head Tony Stratton-Smith, a later manager of The Nice, recalls: When they started, Keith started all the leaping about, standing on his Hammond organ, cracking whips and sticking knives into the instrument..." (New York Times, 12/16/73).

TO MANY, "NICE" was hardly an appropriate description

By 1969, the organ-bass-drums combo had proved itself a viable form and the Nice were a major band in Europe, with a large cult following in the U.S. Under Stratton-Smith's guidance (Immediate had folded), the band went on to make a primitive but landmark union of rock band and orchestra in the original "Five Bridges Suite." The group's fifth album, "Elegy" released even as EL&P were already on their way, featured the now-classic interpretation of Bernstein's "America," plus re-arrangements of works by Tchaikovsky, Dylan,

Ahead of their time, The Nice were one of the first to attempt to cut across sylistic barriers and fuse diverse influences. But they were also an initial experiment that ultimately could only go so far. For Keith Emerson, despite the spect at the keyboards, the next musical step had to be made. The union with Greg Lake and Carl Palmer provided the necessary stimulus for the emergence of new ideas. Keith Emerson's devotion to his art is total. Whether seated at the piano for the glistening runs of "Take A Pebble" or flailing away at his synthesizer battery, whether acting as a superb interpreter of themes or painstakingly composing an original piano concerto - in all cases, the commitment is 100 per

Even the one off single,"Honky Tonk Train Blues," released during the recent EL&P hiatus, reflected still another aspect of this complex personality. With the emergence of each new work from the collective brilliance of Emerson, Lake & Palmer, Keith's important place in contemporary music is confirmed over and over Now what was that about being "crazy" to leave The Nice?

"Texas Cradle of Giants," the road show produced by South Plains College to tell the story of the evolution of country music in Texas, will take to the road next month for its second season.

"Texas Cradle of Giants" has a home show scheduled March 11 for Parents Day on the SPC campus and will be followed by road shows May 20 at Lake LBJ, Kingland, and June 24 at 8 p.m. at Coleman Park in Brownfield. A final performance is scheduled July 4 on the SPC campus. Persons wishing to have "Texas Cradle of Giants" come to their town or city for a performance should contact Eddie Trice, dean of college relations at SPC, 894-4921.

"The show evoked memories for so many of us," wrote one woman who attended the program at its Lovington, N.M. stop last summer. "I found myself singing along with the group on songs I recall my parents listening to when I was knee high...It was the best free entertainment I've ever enjoyed," she concluded.

Letters flowed in from other people who had seen the show. "There wasn't a sour note from any of the folks attending the Amarillo concert," said one writer; "the program was very well done; the musicians are doing a great job," said a writer who saw the show at Post; "It was a really super show, fine quality enterexpressed another Lovington

In spite of the success of the show enjoyed last summer, however, there's nearly an all-new cast, script changes, new costumes and some new songs, ac-cording to Helen Roberts, SPC assistant professor of speech who wrote the original script for the show. "The script is currently being adapted to divide the parts into speaking and performing roles in order to let all the performers tell the story, rather than one narrator like we had last summer," said Mrs. Roberts. "The narrative of the story of country music will become more of a dialog."

Explaining why the changes were made, Mrs. Roberts commented, "The singers are all gifted performers and fine speakers as well; there are so many capable people in the cast that we wanted to use them all in speaking roles...We feel the group role of telling the story makes a nice refreshing approach," she added. Cast members in "Texas Cradle of Giants" for 1978 will include one veteran of the performance last summer - John Hartin, director of SPC's county/bluegrass music program who will again sing and perform on the guitar. New cast members will include SPC faculty and students: Dan Hanson, music instructor and sponsor of the Baker's Dozen and Stage Band who will play plano; Tim McCasland, SPC bluegrass instructor who will perform on dobro, banjo and guitar; students Barry Canter of Lorenzo, vocals and instrumentals; Jerry Lawson of Levelland, drums; Randy Ellis of Clovis, N.M. Texas Tech graduate currently a student in SPC's country bluegrass music program on vocals, gui-tar and pedal steel guitar; Rocky Rey-nolds of Lovington, N.M., instrumentals, Jayton and Tonia (TJ) Spears of Lubbock, both vocals. Reynolds and Riley also will double as technicians for the show, and their partners for the skits and dances will be the show's only two women. "Both Leann and Tonia have had several years of musical training," said Mrs. Roberts, "so they will also do some singing with the group. In addition, they will do technical lights are set." Last summer, the show had to wait for cover of darkness to begin because of the slides that were shown during each half. This year the show will be able to start earlier, since slides will be reserved for the second half of the show, said Mrs.

In addition to the regular script Mrs. Roberts is adapting for the two-hour road show, she also is writing a condensed script for a one-and-a-half hour show at SPC. "The road show scipt also will be flexible for both outdoor performances, where we have to watch out for the weather, and indoor shows, which often vary in facilities for space and acoustics," Hartin, who is in charge of the music for the show, has added medlies by Ernest Tubb, Ray Price and Jimmy Rodgsignficant, she said. The vocals to "High Noon" also have been added, along with a song by George Jones, "She Thinks I Still Care," and "Miles and Miles of Texas" for an Asleep at the Wheel number.

A few songs have been deleted.

Rather than the uniform country-western costumes worn last year by the cast, three sets of costumes will be designed for early, honky tonk and progressive Gaugin's turbulent life was no more adventurous than his art career, begun as a leisure time hobby and becoming an all consuming passion.

He spent part of his childhood in Peru. worked as a sailor on merchant ships, as a laborer on the Panama Canal, as a billposter in Paris and, during the happier years of his marriage, as a stockbroker.

His painting drove him to poverty, but also to great art. As his work advanced, he chose radical simplifications of drawings and brilliant, pure, bright colors, an ornamental character of composition and deliberate flatness of planes. He called his style Synthetism.

During his comparatively peaceful years in Brittany, he painted "Breton Peasant Women," "The Yellow Christ" and "Swineherds, Brittany."

But his most noted works were done in his final years in Tahiti and Hiva-Hoa. Of these brilliant paintings one of the most widely known is "Where Do We Come From? What Are We? Where Are We Going?

Ill and threatened with imprisonment as a result of quarrels with local officials, Gauguin died in 1903 at the age of 55.

TV Has Replaced Parent Or Grandparent As Most Tireless Story-Teller In Home

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of 15 articles exploring "Popular Culture: Mirror of American Life." In this article, George Gerbner, Dean of the Annenberg School of Communications at the University of Pennsylvania, discusss the economic interrelationships between the popular culture industries and their publics. This series was written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.)

Copyright 1977-78 by the Regents of the University of California.

By GEORGE GERBNER

POPULAR CVULTURE IS the stories we share every day. Call it news, fiction, education, mythology, or just media, that great and uniquely human process governs much of what we do.

Who is the most prolific and tireless story-teller in your home? It used to be the parent, grandparent, or older sibling. Today in most homes it is television - by far. Television has achieved what all emperors and popes could only dream about: a pulpit in every living room, with a charismatic messenger providing the common ritual of entertainment and information with a central underlying sales message for all.

The story behind this great transformation of society is the story of how we allocate and use our popular cultural resources. Who pays for what to whom? For most of human existence, public story telling was a handicraft process, conducted face-to-face and administered by a priestly or noble hierarchy. Payment for it was extracted in the form of tribute or tithe and justified in terms of cosmic order. Tradition, memorization, incantation, and authoritative interpretation of scriptures ruled the day.

THE INDUSTRIAL and electronic revolutions changed all that. One of the first machines — the printing press — began mechanized story telling and cultural mass production. The Bible could now be put into the hands of ordinary people to interpret as they saw fit, paving the way to the Reformation and the secular state. "Packaged knowledge" could now cross boundaries of status, space, and time and break the bonds of family and caste. The old hierarchy gave way to the new corporate owners and governors of industrial society. Their power rests largely in their freedom to manage the industrialized process of story telling and to build mass markets for mass production through the mass distribution of symbols and advertising messages.

Eventually advertisers replaced nobility, church, and state as the patrons of the most popular of the arts, particularly radio and television.

THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY

neled through them to support corporate aims, sales, and powers.

THE ELECTRONIC wave that gathered strength with radio hit hard with television, engulfing and changing the contours of all aspects of popular culture. The chief characteristics of television are cradle-to-grave and nearly ritualized production; and nonselective use. In addition, most elements of program production are centralized so that news, fiction. drama, documentary, talk, game, and other shows serve the same basic institutional purposes.

The first Amendement to the Constitution, designed to protect the public from an oppressive state government, became the principal shield of the new "private governments" - the three major broadcasting networks and their corporate sponsors - protecting them from public (as well as government) control of programming. Television has become the functional equivalent of preindustrial religion, preaching its corporate message in every home. The modern nexus of power is not Church and State, but Television and State.

HOW DO WE PAY for this?

Advertising costs, which are passed on to the American Consumer, to-tal $36 billion annually—100 times the total gross budget of the United

Some 1,762 daily and over 7,500 weekly newspapers absorb nearly onethird of that amount. Television uses 20 percent of the total, and its share keeps rising, gradually squeezing older media out of the business. Radio now gets less than 7 percent of the total advertising support and magazines less than 6, with outdoor, direct mail, and other outlets accounting

TV programming is run by a few largely anonymous network exectives who regularly assemble over 100 million Americans a day and extract from their pockets over $30 million a day to pay for the advertising that supports the set manufacturers, the repair people, and the electricity needed to run the set.

The power of television enables it to charge an average of $100,000 per prime time commercial minute and up to quarter of a million dollars for a one minute commercial inserted into a movie like "Gone With The Wind " - and advertisers stand in line for the priviledge. Divided by audience size, these astronomical prices add up to an attractive "cost per

TELEVISION ALSO leads popular culture in terms of its concentra-tion. It takes a big network to produce expensive shows and to take big risks. The top 25 network advertisers pay over half of the three major networks' bills, with three giant soap companies alone paying some 14

The rest of the money we spend for popular culture goes for books, movies, records, and sports, all of which now depend on broadcasting for transmission or promotion or both, but most of which — unlike broadcasting itself — can also be bought directly by the consumer.

Advertising-supported media create the bulk of popular culture. But their principal products — the products they sell for profit — are not culture: they are people, called audiences and sold to advertisers for a price. The direct price the public pays for newspapers and magazines covers the cost of delivery. The advertisers pay the rest, but from money that, if not for special legislation, would have gone to the public treasury.

IN OTHER WORDS, the public's own money is used to sell public au diences to the highest bidders. This is done in three principal ways.

1. All broadcasting stations are licensed by the Federal Commit tions Commission to operate the airways in the "public interest, conveni-ence, and necessity" according to the law. In fact, they operate as businesses to make a profit, but the enormously-profitable license to broadcast in the public domain is given away free of charge.

2. The advertising subsidy that supports and guides the cultural industry is extracted through a levy on the price of all advertised goods and services. Some call this private taxation without representation. The tax is hidden in the price of soap; I pay when I wash, not when I watch TV

3. Congress made advertising a tax-deductible business expense, subsidizes the postal rates of printed media, and provides certain advantages

Without these direct contributions from the public treasury, "private" media would not be profitable, and probably could not exist at all

STRIPPED OF mystification, the "new religion" and other forms of mainstream popular culture operate on legislative and market mecha that channel public monies to private corporations to support "cheap" or "free" media as the cultural arms of business and industry. Since the marketing mechanism is concerned not just with popularity but with persuading large audiences to buy the goods and services advertised, the quality and diversity of the cultural service, and its relevance to the needs of many specific publics that make up the total com not, therefore, be the chief criteria of most mass cultural production What of the future?

There are signs of tension and of pressure to loosen the hold of the corporate giants and the networks and to diversify the mainstream of popular culture, especially television. Citizen groups and public organi are demanding interest from all government — private as well as public.

Such broadening and democratization of popular cultural production would have the additional advantage of not selling the same fears, hopes, and styles of life to practically all of the people practically all of the time.

Dramatic Turnaround Noted In New Album By 'Gentle Giant'

A-J Rock Correspondent

Not many people have heard of Gentle Giant. But that never hindered the five-man English group. Gentle Giant has been releasing albums filled with its distinctive sound for several years.

The climax of Giant's innovative but only cultishly popular career came last year with the double live set "Playing The Fool." A drastic turnaround is evident on the followup, a surprisingly good album entitled "The Missing Piece"

Many a Giant fan didn't quite know how to take this album. Some sat back with quiet, but apprehensive approval. Others were terribly disappointed and couldn't imagine even the possibility of listening to "The Missing Piece"

HONKY TONK ACT — Kenny Dale will be appearing at the Honky Tonk Club Monday and Tuesday. There is a cover charge; details are available by calling the club. After recording a single called "Bluest Heartache Of The Year," Dale was signed by Capitol Records as their youngest recording artist. He is 25.

the album. "The Missing Piece" is a departure from Gentle Giant's traditionally folk sounding cosmic rock. It is, in a phrase, rock'n'roll.

Who would have expected the songwriting team of Shulman-Shulman-Minnear to come up with songs like "Two Weeks In Spain" and "Betcha Thought We Couldn't Do It?" Aggressive and rounded guitar licks from Gary Green open "Two Weeks," the song which Giant selected to introduce its new material. The song is ambitious, almost hard rock, but contains a Spanish-influenced bridge which Shulman-Shulman-Minnear slapped in for credibility. It's one of the strangest songs on "The Missing Piece" and is a fitting opening

"Betcha Thought We Couldn't Do It" is obvious from the title alone. The song is Giant's rambunctious way of taunting the listener to consider the possibility that the band's new sound isn't all that bad. Which, indeed, it isn't. The song is a first class hard rocker, complete with Derek Shulman's raspy vocal and Green's fiery lead guitar solo. "The Missing Piece" is not devoid of the Gentle Giant of old. The qualities which Giant fans have come to know and love are still present in its music. Closing track "For Nobody" is certainly exemplary of Giant's typically hightoned vocal give-and-take sessions. Again, we hear Giant daring its listeners with songs which were written with old and new fans in mind.

Another example of Giant's more traditional ways is "Memories Of Old Days," yet another song where the songwriters show their recognition of old and new fans. This time the loyalists are paid tribute with a song which lasts a little more than seven minutes. A barrage of acoustics greet the listener, a characteristic which Giant's long-time fans, and the new ones, can enjoy.

Gentle Giant's new "The Missing Piece" is more like the missing link in the group's circular chain. Somehow light is shed upon a new side of Giant, a side we've never really encountered before. The band's tremendous capabilities are not to be taken for granted.

A dank white piece from a jigsaw puzzle is pictured on the cover. We see a puzzle of Giant's logo on the back cover. A piece is missing from its forehead.

FODOR RETURNS - No doubt the most talked about entertain month has been the awaited return of superb violinist Eugene Fodor to the Civic Center stage with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra. The occasion is slated for 8:15 p.m. Feb. 13 and 14, though the program has not yet been announced. Symphony officials say that tickets still are available to see Fodor both nights but they suggest early ticket purchases. Tickets in three separate price ranges are available at the nony office at 1721 Broadway.

Seasoned Trouper Balsam Says Love For Acting Kept Career Alive

By WILLIAM GLOVER NEW YORK (AP) — Martin Balsam hrs won an Oscar and a Tony, but he doesn't covet them as career boosters.

"They could help a pretty young girl - maybe," but he attributes theatrical longevity to unswervable devotion.

"It has to be love," says the veteran character actor, "because nobody puts a gun to your head and says 'you've got to be an actor."

Balsam's love for acting began at age 15 when he played the villain of "Potboiler," a rather ominously named entrant by his school group in a playground competition.

stage and television appearances since, he's a player almost every showgoer has seen somewhere, sometime.

Now, at age 58, he's using his sharp and mellow emotive skill in "Cold Storage" at Broadway's Lyceum Theater.

"The stage is where I get my booster shots," says the stocky, grizzled performer. "Movies don't give you much chance to inter-relate. They are a calculated risk. Sometimes you settle for less than you

Movies, however, have kept Balsam so busy that he last visited Broadway in 1968 in "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running." A summer back he had a stock workout in "Death of a Sa.esman" and last season tested "Cold Storage" at off-Broadway's American Place Theater.

Critical kudos ensued and several reviewers rated the play better than the 1977 Pulitzer prizewinner of somewhat similar theme, "The Shadow Box."

The drama, by Ronald Ribman, centers on a man terminally ill with cancer, but it artistically triumphs over pathological morbidity.

"It's a very hopeful play," says Balsam. "When I read it first I said 'I'll do it anywhere, even in the subway.'

CHET ATKINS & OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN

Untold millions of their recordings have been sold world-wide, and they have received dozens of major music awards. Miss Newton-John alone has acquired four gold singles ("Let Me Be There," "If You Love Me, Let Me Know," "Have You Never Been Mellow" and "Please, Mister, Please"), three gold albums, three platinum albums and three Grammy awards.

ATKINS HAS BEEN named a member of the Country Music Association's Hall of Fame, while Miss Newton-John was the CMA's controversial Female Vocalist of the Year award winner in 1974. Viewers of the nationally-televised awards show will remember Bill Monroe, the Father of Bluegrass Music, misreading the winner's name as "Oliver" Newton-John.

Not only was Miss Newton-John one of the best looking ladies encountered during my Nashville visit, she was also one of the friendliest, in a town noted for friendly stars. She had the radiant appearance of a person who truly enjoys life and being around other people.

The English-born, Australian-raised singer was accompanied by her manager and boyfriend, Lee Kramer, who was able to be protective without being

THE PURPOSE OF her visit to the county music capital was to film a Christmas television special featuring country artists.

When I asked about a large gold key she was wearing on a long chain, she replied, "It was a gift on my 21st birthday. It represents the door to the key of my life. I'm 29 now.

"What's the key to your extraodinary success?" she was then asked. Miss Newton-John replied, "It's a combination of everything. I've been lucky with songs. A hit record is a combination of a lot of things: A good producer, a good song.'

Not long ago, she told a syndicated columnist: "If there is such a thing as reincarnation, the thing that worries me is I've had such good luck this time, if I did come back again, I could never have it this good."

She talked of just finishing filming the movie, "Grease" with John Travolta of "Welcome Back, Kotter" fame. "He gave me a lot of encouragement and always said I could do it. He is a terrific talent. I'd love to do other movies, and I hope if this one goes well, I will get other offers."

AT ONE POINT, she was asked if she was disappointed her friend, Dolly Parton, failed to get the 1977 Country Music Entertainer of the Year award. "I think (Ronnie) Milsap is very deserving, so it wouldn't be fair to say I preferred Dolly. It's a pity they all couldn't win.

While we were talking, Helen Cornelius (who won the 1977 CMA Duo of the Year award with Jim Ed Brown) came over. "Congratulations to you," Miss Newton-John said shaking Miss Cornelius' hand. "I'm a fan of yours," Miss Cornelius replied. Mary Reeves Davis, formerly married to the late singer Jim Reeves, also came by to say "so pleased to meet you."

A radio reporter asked Olivia if she had any plans to go back to Australia. Currently, she lives in Malibu, Calif., which may explain why Willie Nelson

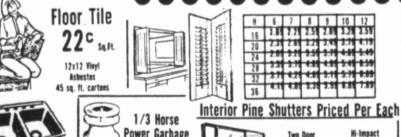

"I have no plans to go back," she replied. "America has been very good to

Currently, considerable energy is consumed in refrigerating, heating, and storing various types of food, Copulos notes. He thinks food irradiation could help alleviate both the drain on hydrocarbon resources and the dangers associated with toxic substances used as preservatives.

Copulos cites the medical use of Plutonium-238 as an example of the benefits

Which could be derived from recycling nuclear wastes. The material has been recognized as an ideal fuel for cardiac pacemakers because of the low penetrating nature of the radiation it emits, and because of its long half-life, he said.

Non-medical uses of plutonium include power for navigation and weather satellites, as well as in communication equipment. For example, the five Lunar monitoring stations which have been transmitting data for as long as seven years, are all powered by plutonium.

The use of Americium-241 in logging oil wells is offered by Copulos as another instance of useful products coming from nuclear fission.

"Currently, there is a worldwide shortage of Americium-241; and as a result, its value has been steadily increasing," he said. It presently sells for around $210

'The costs of energy exploration, development, and transportation are signif-

available only in more remote locations, exploration and development of new fields have become more risky business ventures. The risks include not only technological and economic factors, but also political forces.

To the extent the petroleum industry has become more risky in its operations, Ross said, the net rate of return earned by its investors must increase, other things equal, as compensation for added

'If the industry is to remain viable, atstract needed capital, and increase future oil and gas supplies, levels of profitability must increase over time commensurate with any increases in risk that occur," he

Ross is the author of the "The Profitability of U. S. Petroleum Companies," a

The report is the fifth and final monograph prepared after Gov. Dolph Briscoe asked Texas A&M to analyze President Carter's national energy proposals.

Ross, a professor of finance and former Federal Reserve System financial economist, said the study finds that the petroleum industry's capital needs have increased sharply in recent years, particularly since the mid-1960s but that estimates of future capital needs range wide-

"One authoritative estimate places total capital requirements for oil and gas production and exploration in the free world at $1.3 trillion between 1976 and 1985," Ross said.

He said U. S. energy-related industries have been projected to require as much as $816 billion in new capital between 1977 and 1990.

"Of course, if the United States is to reduce its reliance upon foreign sources of petroleum, even larger amounts of debt and equity capital will be required in order to expand domestic production," he

Ross said that in recent years it was only during the Arab oil embargo period of 1973-74 that the oil industry's rate of return on shareholder equity significantly exceeded that for manufacturing and for

U. S. industry as a whole.
Ross said there is some evidence to suggest the profitability of U. S.-based petroleum firms has been less than adequate in recent years relative to the nation's goal of greater independence from foreign sources of petroleum.

"In order to meet their capital needs and avoid increasing dependence on foreign oil, U. S. petroleum companies would appear to need a return on shareholders' equity from domestic operations of between 14 and 15 percent, approximately equal to average industry earnings in 1974," he said.

While this rate of return was approximately achieved during the embargo period, industry returns during 1975 and 1976 fell substantially below this target

Ross said domestic petroleum firms have relied increasingly upon borrowed funds to meet capital needs during the postwar period.

"Further long-run increases in the industry's debt-to-equity ratio would ap-pear to be necessary without significant increases in profitability if projected capital needs are to be met," he said.

"This increased reliance upon external sources of funds may increase the industry's financial risk and necessitate higher rates of return in order to attract new

Britain's Onshore Oil Reserve Seen As North Sea Supplement

By JAMES R. PEIPERT LONDON (AP) - When Britain began extracting oil from the North Sea with gi-gantic platforms, few people paid much attention to the small grasshopper oil pumps nodding away in fields and gardens around the country. But a big oil find on Christmas Eve at Wytch Farm near the picturesque village of Corfe Castle in Dorset is increasing interest in Britain's onshore oil reserves as a tidy supplement to North Sea oil. It also is worrying environmentalists who fear that an oil boom in the scenic area on England's south coast will drive away migratory birds and the rare Dartford warblers which frequent the marshy inlets of Poole Harbor.

Wytch Farm is Britain's biggest onshore oil reserve discovery so far. Geologists expect oil will be found in commercial quantities at other onshore sites, and the search is on with renewed enthusiasm. But even with Wytch Farm, the onshore reserves are so far just a drop in the bucket compared to the bonanza un-

Britain first discovered oil under its sector of the North Sea in 1969, built massive platforms to stand on the seabed and pump the oil to the surface, and in June, 1975, began bringing it ashore.

Offshore fields currently provide nearly half the oil consumed in Britain and along with coal and nuclear power - are expected to make the country self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

Government figures show that during the first 11 months of 1977, North Sea oil production amounted to 236.3 million barrels. The total for the whole year is expected to be around 259 million bar-

Britain's 13 onshore oil fields, in the East Midlands and Dorset, provide only about 700,000 barrels a year, according to the Department of Energy.

But a department spokesman said of the Wytch Farm site: "The fact remains that it is worth around 30 million pounds ($58.5 million) a year, and 30 million pounds is still a lot of money. The state-owned British Gas Corp., which developed Wytch Farm with British Petroleum, said tentative estimates put the daily output at up to 10,000 barrels. Smaller sites already in production in the area are at Wareham and Kimmer-

Production at Wytch Farm is expected to begin next fall and to reach its peak output of 10,000 barrels a day by the summer or fall of 1979. The well is expected to produce for 15 to 20 years, which means that at current oil prices the value of the Wytch Farm reserves could total $975 million to $1.17 billion at current exchange rates.

"It is looking very nice and we are quite happy with it," commented a British Gas spokesman. "We are obviously going to make money."

British Gas said the Wytch Farm well is currently at a depth of 6,000 feet and may be sunk to 8,000 feet to try to find more

The corporation also plans to spend around 6 million pounds ($11.7 millon) developing 14 other wells around Wytch Farm and the village of Corfe Castle, a cluster of gray-stone buildings whose 1,-100 inhabitants boast of a history going back more than a millenium.

Among the conservation groups that fought the Dorset County Council's decision to give planning permission for the Wytch Farm site was the Poole chapter of Friends of the Earth, and they're not wishing British Gas luck in its search for They're worried about oil seeping into the marshes which provide a haven for the Dartford warbler, grebes, ducks and other birds and which make Poole Harbor a mecca for birdwatchers.

Exploration for oil is under way in the English Channel off Dorset, and prospects for finding it are good because the same strata of rock under Wytch Farm extends under the seabed. Environmentalists fear Swanage, on the coast a few miles from Corfe Castle, will be the terminal for offshore oil installations

Conservationists argued that Britain doesn't need the oil from Wytch Farm because the country is expected to be self-sufficient in petroleum at least until around 1990.

But onshore fields are economically attractive to developers. Oil experts point out that they can be brought to stream at out that they can be brought to stream at the control of $1.95 million to a relatively low cost of $1.95 mi

Wytch Farm, they say, will probably cost around $19.5 million to develop. But it costs something like $975 million to exploit a reasonably sized North Sea oil dis-

Excitement over the find at Wytch Farm has tended to mask the fact that Britain has been producing oil in com-mercial quantities from inland wells for

The 13 wells currently in production are mostly in east-central England in Lin-colnshire, Nottinghamshire and Leicestershire. All are run by British Petroleum and they yield about 2,000 barrels a day.

During the past year or so, 17 operators During the past year or so, 17 operators have been doing seismic research and shallow drilling under licenses issued by the Department of Energy. The licenses allow exploration drilling down to 6,148 feet. This is invariably short of oil-bearing strata, but the drilling gives a hint of the underlying geological structure.

Last month the Department of Energy stepped up the search for underground oil by issuing a further 12 onshore explosion.

Output Established For Seminole Field

AUSTIN (Special) -The Railroad Commission has determined that the most efficient rate (MER) of production for the Seminole (San Andres) field in Gaines County should remain at, 66,000 barrels of Chairman Mack Wallace and commissioners Jon Newton and John H. Poerner acted recently on the recommendation of senior staff engineer George F. Singletary Jr. during the weekly conference on Oil and Gas Division matters.

Singletary conducted an Oct. 12 hearing to review reservoir performance and redetermine the MER of fluid withdrawal from the field. Amerada Hess Corp. and other operators in the field-Atlantic Richfield Co., Mobil Oil Corp. and Exxon Corp.—supported continuation of the present MER.

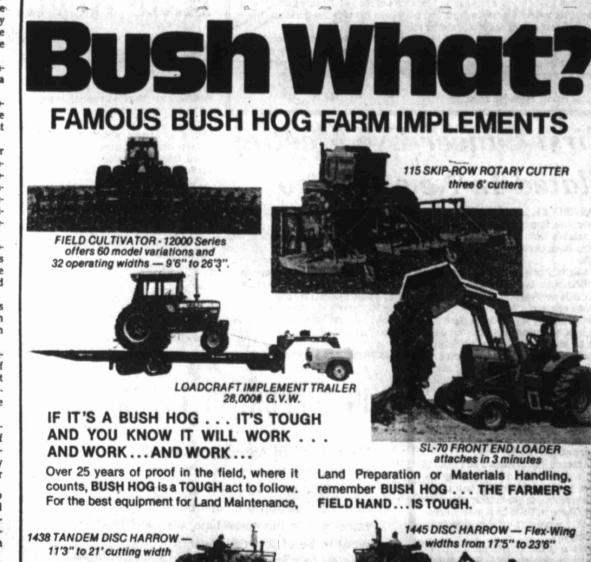

The field was unitized in March, 1969, with an assigned MER of 22,000 barrels of oil daily. Additions to recovery operations since unitization led to the establishment of the current MER in 1975.

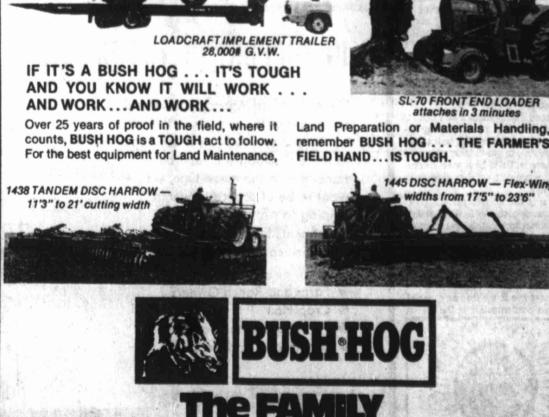

Amerada Hess is the unit operator Since production was esta 1936, Seminole (San Andres) has produced more than 244.8 million barrels of oil. More than 90 percent of the estimated primary reserves have been recovered, leaving approximately 25 million barrels to be produced, Singletary reported in his findings.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) -The livestock situation across the state is coming under more and more the pressure of adverse weather, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agri-

Some cattle have been lost due to the sleet and snow in eastern sections, including young calves, since the winter calving season is at hand. South Texas has been so dry there is no forage, and some ranchers are burning prickly pear to enable cattle to forage on the cactus.

Reports from district extension agents showed the following conditions:

County Agent's Report

> By KEN COOK Lubbock County Agent

IF YOUR GARDEN PERFORMED BELOW expectations last year, or maybe things just didn't grow quite right, a couple of dollars invested in a soil test may be just the solution. A properly prepared and fertilized garden soil is the real key to successful gardening in most areas of Texas.

You can't look at the soil, taste it, smell it, or feel it and tell whether it is properly fertilized or not. You have no way of knowing whether your soil is low in nitrogen, high in phosphate or maybe just right. One sure way to overcome the mystery and avoid the confusion when it comes time to purchase fertilizers is to have your garden soil tested.

Why is it important to know how much phosphorus or nitrogen is in the soil or what the pH of the soil is? The answer is simple. Vegetables don't do well in imporperly fertilized soil, whether it be too fertile or, not fertile enough.

THE SOIL TEST REPORT WILL TELL you the level of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium and magnesium that is available to your garden plants. It will also indicate the pH (acidity or alkalinity) of your garden soil. For the most part, this is all you need to know to properly fertilize your garden soil to help insure a bountiful harvest.

What's the secret to taking a soil sample? There is really no secret and it is really very simple. With a spade or a sharp-shooter, make a hole about a foot deep in the garden soil. Throw out the first spade full of soil. Then from the back of the hole, cut a one-half to 1-inch slice of the soil. Be sure the slice is at least six to seven inches in depth and fairly even in width and thickness. Place this slice of garden soil in a bucket or tub.

Repeat this procedured four, five or even six times in different spots in the ing primarily on the size of the garden. Thoroughly mix the osite of soil from your garden. After mixing, take out about a pint of the soil and mail it to a soils testing laboratory. Texas A&M University provides a soil testing service and soil tests kits with instructions can be obtained from more negative than positive were heard recently in a hearing concerning the federal governments's right to regulate rates charged by auction and stockyard operators to handle livestock.

The hearing was conducted by the Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service which enforces the Packers and Stockyards Act (PSA). It heard from both cattle producers and auction and other market owners.

The PSA was passed in 1921 to oversee livestock marketing activities of both the 'seller" and the marketer, said Harry Williams, director of livstock marketing

He said the PSA sets rates charged by each market.

Harley Custer, manager of the National Livestock Commission Co. in Oklahoma City, was the only one who favored no changes in the PSA's power.

BY DUANE HOWELL

PLANS FOR A "FLEXIBLE PARITY ACT" were announced last week by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Dole plans to introduce a bill which would allow cotton and grain farmers individually to choose target prices based on variable set-asides.

If a wheat farmer chose a 20 percent set-aside, for example, his 1978 target price would be $3 a bushel. The target price would be $3.25 for a 25 percent setaside, $3.50 for 30 percent, $4 for 35 percent, $4.25 for 40 percent, $4.50 for 45 percent, and $5.04 for 50 percent.

For corn, the target price would be $2.10 for a 10 percent set-aside and would rise for voluntary increments until it reached $3.45 per bushel for a 50 percent

COTTON'S TARGET PRICE WOULD BE 54 cents per pound for a 20 percent set-aside and would rise to 84 cents for a 50 percent set-aside.

The target price now set for cotton for 1978 is 52 cents. There is a voluntary reduction option of 20 percent to be assured of full target price coverage but there is no required set-aside.

Farmers who plant as much acreage as they did this year, or more, probably will be eligible under the new program for payments on 85 to 90 percent of their total cotton plantings.

Dole says his flexible target price proposal wouldn't interfere with exports, contribute to foreign production increases, or have an impact on grocery prices.

COSTS TO THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD BE "reasonable," he says, because the scaled down production should result in higher market prices and a 'reasonable level" of deficiency payments.

The plan, Dole says, would require that the individual payment limitation ceiling be raised from the $40,00 now set for 1978 under the 1977 farm act. Examples prepared by Dole's staff indicate the program would result in additional deficiency payments for wheat, feed grain and cotton producers of about $1 billion at an average set-aside of 35 percent. The flexible target price plan is part of a package of measures which Dole said he planned to introduce.

'Sinner's File' Bane Of Drivers In Germany

By EDELGARD SIMON HAMBURG, West Germany (UPI) -Flensburg gets West German drivers coming and going.

West Germany's northernmost city distills half of the rum and a good share of the clear schnapps consumed in the na-

Backgammon

Black owns the doubling cube at 2 and it is his roll. Should he double?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

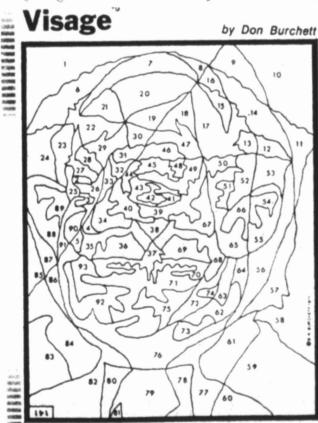

This problem is similar to last week's. Indeed, the Black position is identical. The difference is that this time the White position is not quite as good.

In last week's problem, White was sure to win the game if Black did not bear off both men. Here that is not the case. If Black only succeeds in bearing off one man. White will duplicate that feat if he rolls 1-1, 2-1, 3-1 or 3-2. In other words, White has 29 numbers that will win the game for him, but seven that will lose. Last week, when White had a certain win if Black did not bear off both men, I suggested that Black should double because he was a slight favorite. Therefore, it would seem that, since Black now has even better odds for winning, the double is an even sounder proposition. Right? Wrong! The fact is that if Black doesn't redouble now, he might get two chances to win the game! Assume that Black doubles now and fails to bear off one man. White will promptly redouble, and we have seen that he is better than 4-to-1 favorite to win the game. Since that makes Black a worse 3-to-1 underdog, he cannot accept the double and must concede the game to White. If Black keeps possession of the cube and fails to bear off both men, White must roll. Now, if he should roll one of the seven unlucky numbers, Black will

New Conservation Corps: There's No'Made' Work

GRESHAM, Ore. (UPI) - The terrain's the same. So is the aim.

Otherwise the new Young Adult Conservation Corps is as different from the Depression-era Civilian Conservation Corps as the 1970s are from the 1930s. One of the first units of the YACC is at work in the Columbia Gorge District of the Mount Hood National Forest. Some of its work covers the same ground as work done by the CCC unit from the Zig Zag camp in the Mt. Hood Forest between 1933 and 1942.

The YACCs range in age from 16 to 23 and were out of work when they joined the corps. The CCCs ranged in age from 16 to 24 and were out of work when they joined the corps.

There the similarities end.

The CCCs were all men, many without high school diplomas and some without a complete grade school education. They lived in barracks, wore governblied uniforms and were supervised by regular Army officers.

The YACCs include both men and women and some have completed two years of college. They live at home, provide their own clothes, except for safety gear, and are supervised by U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Manage-

The supervisor of the Columbia Gorge unit is a young career Forest Service employee whose grandfather served in the CCC in Kansas.

Rick Scott, resource assistant in the Columbia Gorge Ranger District and supervisor of the YACC unit there, said one other thing hasn't changed in 40 years: the young people are eager for positions in the corps and are willing to

"They could hardly wait to get to work," John E. Mills, who was a supervisor for the CCC in 1933, recalled in a newspaper interview more than 40 years later.
"When I called one young man to tell him he had the job," Scott said, "I could hear him turn to someone and yell, 'I got it! I got it!'" One 16-year-old boy was riding a bus two hours daily to reach the crew pickup point.

The response has not been quite so overwhelming this year as the response to the opening of the CCC program in 1933, however. Scott said he had 30 applicants for the first 20 positions. In 1933 during the first weeks of the CCC pro-some for several years, in a program that lasted nine years, the YACC expects to have 35,000 for no more than one year each in a three-year program. Enrollees must be unemployed or working only at day-to-day jobs. They may

The CCCs were credited with building 6,000 miles of trails and 9,000 miles of roads in Oregon and Washington. Some sources say little or no work has been done on some of the trails since the CCC built them.

One CCC project was the road to the Bull Run Reservoir, source of Portland's water supply. The first YACC crew is clearing brush in the Bull Run Reserve, the watershed feeding the reservoir.

Among YACC projects will be stonework at various campgrounds, including Tollgate and Camp Creek, and maintenance work at campgrounds.

The CCC program was aimed at providing the jobless youths with some skills and some education as well as a place to live, food and $1 a day. The YACC is aimed at providing only jobs at the minimum wage, currently $2.30 at hour. Mills recalled that 100 young men at the Zig Zag camp obtained grade school diplomas and 300 got high school diplomas during their CCC days. He also recalled that the men were taught a variety of skills.

"They taught me how to work and how to behave," Darrell Hurd, a Tigard, Ore., sheet metal worker, said at a reunion of CCC enrollees a few years ago. Scott has something of that same thing in mind although the new program does not include teaching skills.

"A lot of kids don't have a lot of work experience," he said. "They go ask for jobs and they don't have any experience to report. We hope we can teach them some good work habits and at least give them a good reference when they

Most of the jobs they have do not require many skills. "They are just plain hard work," Scott said. "But there's a trick even to piling slash.

Supervisors for the crews are Forest Service summer employees retained especially for the program. Some crew members also have some summer experience with the Forest Service and serve as assistant crew leaders. Gail Russell, 22, of Portland, has an associate degree in forestry from Mt. Hood Community College in Gresham and has worked for the Forest Service summers since she was a junior in high school. 'My mom read about this program and told me about it," she said. "I'd been out of work for quite a while. I hope to get on with the Forest Service permanently. This is the kind of work I want to do and what I'm trained for

Henry Garcia, a summer work crew foreman for the Forest Service, is foreman of the first YACC crew in the Mt. Hood Forest. "We're glad to have them," he said of the YACC members. But he added, "It's too soon to tell how good they will be. Right now they're new and very anxious and working very Garcia and others in the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management are happy about the YACC program because it will enable the agencies to do a number of things for which no funds had been available before.

NEW YORK (Special) -The construction industry wound up 1977 on a sharply rising trend, according to the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

December's $10.4 billion of newly contracted projects brought the year's total of new construction to a record $139.2 billion-26 percent more than the 1976 total. The final month's value was 48 per cent higher than the previous December amount

George A. Christie, chief economist for F. W. Dodge, said, "Last year the construction industry really put it all together. A plentiful supply of mortgage money sustained the housing boom all the way through 1977. Federal spending gave a boost to public works construction, while general economic expansion supported a solid advance in commercial and industrial building. The result: a 26 percent surge in total construction contracting -the biggest yearly gain in nearly three decades of cyclical ups and downs." The economist cautioned that "Although still further improvement in construction activity is anticipated for 1978, this year's gain is bound to be smaller as the housing cycle passes its peak."

Residential building showed 1977's biggest adv ance, a 39 percent increase for the year to a record $61.4 billion. December's residential building con tracts, at $4.3 billion, were 32 percent ahead of the year-earlier month.

"December brought further evidence that the composition of the housing market is changing, Christie observed. "Apartment units accounted for 31 percent of the latest month's total of new dwelling units, compared with less than 28 percent a year earlier."

Part of the entry walk is shaded by a wooden lattice which is supported by additional free standing walls. A short wall, with ornamental iron above, outlines a planting area in front of

The living room has been located so that there is a wide view towards the street and yet sliding glass doors provide another view and outdoor privacy at the rear of the home. Similar doors open from the family room to the partially roofed patio.

Open planning makes the kitchen-family room a gathering place for youngsters and adults alike — a place where mother can watch the youngsters or visit with drop-in callers while she goes about her work. The eating nook offers a convient place for casual meals. A corner of the family room can be set aside for company dinners.

Railroad Denied Plea To End Some Services

Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co. to discontinue several agency operations in the Lubbock area.

Santa Fe had proposed to discontinue its agency stations at Brownfield, Seagraves, and Levelland, its mobile agency at Lorenzo, Crosbyton, and Ralls, and a dualized agency at Lehman and Whiteface. The railroad sought to replace the duties of the railroad agents involved with the establishment of a computerized regional service center in Lubbock.

Chairman Mack Wallace and commissioners Jon Newton and John H. Poerner acted on the recommendation of Transportation Division examiner Jerry L. Spence during a weekly conference on division matters.

Spence noted that Santa Fe's proposal was the same as several regional service centers established in other areas, but that special problems presented in the Lubbock area were not adequately addressed by the applicant during the hear-

One example presented was the signing of shippers' bills of lading now signed by the agent and taken immediately to the bank by the shipper for proper credit.

Any delay caused by the lack of an onthe-site agent could cause shippers significant loss of interest for the time these credits were not deposited with the bank, Spence said in reporting Santa Fe had no specific proposal for solving the problem.

Spence said that Santa Fe was free to institute the new computerized system without commission approval, provided the current agents remain on duty.

Once the system was proven, the railroad could again request removal of the agency stations.

Texas Plant To Use Cattle Waste To Make Fuel

GUYMON, Okla. (UPI) — A-huge mound of coffee brown rises against the flat land and the prairie wind stirs a flame so clear it is seen only in darkness, signifying a new beginning and end for processing an ancient energy source.

A road slopes gently down rows of fat cattle, their heads buried in troughs of rich silage, and rises to a cluster of buildings and tanks redolent with animal waste. The sign outside reads Calorific Recovery Anaerobic Process, Inc. -CRAP for short.

'This is the first commercialsize plant in the world producing pipeline quality methane gas from cattle manure," said J. M. Samis of Oklahoma City, president of the parent firm, Thermonetics. "There are many little plants, mostly single farm plants in places like India and France. But we are the first to bite the bullet and build this kind of plant.

A plant heavily financed by the federal government will be completed in about a year at Bartow, Fla., Samis said, but it is "one-fifteenth the size of this plant" and will not use waste from the dirt feedlots common to the Midwest.

People's Gas Co. of Chicago buys the Calorific product at $1.94 per million BTU, pumping it into a pipeline only yards away from a flare testifying to its combustible quality. The Oklahoma Panhandle plant is designed to produce enough gas to meet annual heating requirements of 3,500 homes.

Fiber and undigested parts of the manure are chemically treated for feeding back to cattle in a nearby feedlot. Ingredients for another feed high in protein are extracted later and the mineral-rich liquid left at the end of the process may be injected as fertilizer into irrigation systems on surrounding farmland.

The name CRAP was conceived by Samis, his attorney and their wives on a two-hour flight from Chicago after People's Gas agreed to contract for the pro-

"We've had a lot of fun with that," Samis chuckled. "But, seriously, it's very descriptive of what we do. Calorific significes energy, the calorific quality of gas is its energy content. It is recovered from the manure by the anaerobic process. "Of course it has backfired a couple of times. Some peole weren't sure we were for real. One money lender didn't want to lend money to a joke.

"And the Federal Power Commission was sure we were pulling their leg." But the FPC, acting on an application from People's Gas, decided after 16 months the gas produced from manure wus synthetic and non-jurisdictional. Therefore, the gas company could buy it at a price tagged to a reasonable profit for the producer. It is not subject to wellhead taxes or the tiered price structure of natural gas, although chemically identical.

Thermonetics, which operates central energy plants at three University of Texas campuses plus a shopping center and residential development, turned to ly a step toward more significant sources.

'There's not enough manure to be really significant, as far as national needs are concerned," he said. "But some think you can go out and grow a crop and bring it into a plant such as ours and make a meaningful contribution. The technology is available for that now, but the economy isn't,

Manure, by the time we get it into the plant costs about $3 a ton. The cheapest crop is about $20 a ton to get it into the plant.

The cost of gasifying coal is projected at about $25 a ton, Samis said, or about $3.50 to $4.00 per million BTU against the $2 for manure. "We are also looking at gasifying garbage," he said. "It has been estimated there's enough available to supply 10 percent of our needs. Three more manure plants, one of the them double the size of the Guymon facility, are planned for the Hereford and Friona area of Texas. This area, like the Oklahoma Panhandle to the north, has hundreds of thousands of cattle on

Calorific now has contracts with three feedlots - two owned by Ladd Hitch and another by Ralph Grounds - with a combined, one-time capacity exceed

The largest, Hitch's Masterfeeders, has a 72,000 capacity but 77,000 cattle were there during a recent tour. Its pens extend almost to the gas plant and a pond holding runoff from the lot supplies the bacteria for the anaerobic proc-

"The same thing is going on in this pond that goes on in the plant," said G. W. Meckert Jr., an MIT chemical engineer who is Thermonetics' director of systems development.

"In the summer you can stand here and watch the gas bubble to the top," he

Animals in a nearby lot munch contentedly on Calfeed, the nourishment extracted and processed at the start of the gasification process. They appear fat and healthy. The manure provides about 18 percent of the dry matter in their Manure depth in the pens ranges from three to four inches on high ground to 18 inches against the back fence. Color varies from light brown to black. The good stuff is lighter.

"Manure ages and gets darker," Meckert said. "It loses energy and anything lost that way is not available for us to recover. The fresher the better for gas.' A full grown steer will excrete 91/2 to 10 pounds of solid matter a day, Meckert said. Harvested with road graders and front end loaders every four to six months, the manure is stacked on the mound of 4,000 to 4,500 tons near the plant office. The current price is $1 a ton plus handling.

"We're very, very pleased our equipment has performed the way it has,"

Pungent zehyrs waft the aroma throughout the area. People in street clothes are careful where they step or put their hands.

Although nearly all of the components of the system have been in use for years, often in municipal sewage treatment plants, they have not been put together to perform the job done here, Samis said.

The big breakthrough was development of continuous feeding and removal of digested manure. A digester can be simply loaded with organic matter and water and allowed to decompose completely but this is inefficient because methane output peaks and returns to nothing.

"We've struck a well out there," Samis said. "My friends in the oil and gas business say it could be considered a good gas well.'

Waving toward fields of crops and feeding cattle, he said, "what we've got here is a complete life cycle. I don't know how oil and gas was formed but friends in the business say it very well could have been formed this way."

"It's a solar energy plant in a way, energy from the sun grew the crop," he said. "Many people feel this will be the type of solar energy that will be useful. The problem with direct solar energy is storage. Here the energy is stored in the

Jim L. Gaddy of the University of Missouri at Rolla conducted year-long tests using feedlot manure from Guymon to determine what gas yields could be expected from feedlot waste. Dr. Robert E. Hungate, former dean of the department of bacteriology at the University of California at Davis, helped the plant become operational from a microbiology standpoint.

Methane, basically, is produced by bacteria which operate only in an anaerobic environment, or one without free oxygen. In anaerobic digestion, manure is first broken down into simple organic compounds by acid-forming bacteria, then a second group of micro-organisms break down the acids into methane and carbon dioxide

Carbon dioxide and water vapor - and hydrogen sulfide although so far none has appeared at the Guymon plant - are scrubbed from the gas before it goes into the pipeline. It produces a clear, odorless flame.

Whatever the future of manure in the nation's energy scheme, it is important in the immediate area, which sits over the rich Hugoton gas field, Samis said. Feedlots have requested that a certain portion of the gas be reserved for their own needs. Natural gas shortages also have threatened supplies to irrigation systems. The same would apply to similar areas in other states.

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

In a gas crunch they would have a secondary source," he said.

of Business WASHINGTON-Very soon now, the Senate will vote on the so-called "Labor Reform, Act" (S. 1883) - a piece of legislation that is unneeded, unwanted, and unwise. I hope the Senator's votes are more a reflection of their constituents'

The official excuse for this bill is that employers have been thwarting employees' efforts to form unions, therefore it is necessary to make union organizing easier and to increase the penalties for employer intransigence. The real reason is quite different: The unions have not been able to use the threat of government penalties to cow employers into making deals with them over the heads of the

The Voice By RICHARD LESHER

In 1976 (the most recent year for which the figures are available) the unions lost 52 percent of the secret ballot representation elections conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. Furthermore, the unions are also losing a majority of the Decertification elections - that's when workers vote to throw out the union they already have. The number of decertification elections has doubled since 1970, reaching 611 in 1976, and that year the unions lost in 54 percent of them. So, the legislation is not needed (except by the AFL-CIO).

- Only 22 percent of the general public

posal to make union organizing easier does not win majority support. Only one third supported the idea, while almost half (48 percent) think that the present law should not be changed. So this legislation is not wanted.

Is it wise? Not if you're concerned about inflation. Unionization is associated with both higher direct labor costs and lower productivity because of stringent work rules and more frequent work stoppages. Therefore, the proposed labor-law changes could add to cost-push inflationary pressures.

If - as some people expect - the changes caused an additional 12 percentage points of employed workers to be unionized by 1985, the labor costs for each product or service could increase by an average of 7.4 percent

Labor costs for small businesses could increase even more - by 9.3 percent because they are less unionized now and could expect to be organized more rapidly than the average for all business failures and mergers, with a bad effect on both employment and competition.

The burden on the public in general and on small business in particular -would be further worsened by the increased complexity and operating costs of the NLRB itself. . .a seemingly irresistible trend throughout the government today.

Because labor is a major cost in the production of most products and services, the higher labor costs could cause consumer price levels to increase at least 3.6 percent by 1985, adding 0.5 percent to inflation rates each year. The loss of purchasing power for an average family of four could be $1,089 by 1985.

You And Your Income Tax

QUESTION: I am a wage earner with a family to support. Because I have many dependents and my earnings are low, no income tax is withheld from my pay. A friend told me that even though I did not pay anything in, I could still get a refund. This sounds funny to me. Is it true? ANSWER: Your friend is correct. This year, as a result of the new tax law signed by former President Ford in November, 1976, certain persons are entitled to an "Earned Income Credit". In order to be eligible for the credit, your adjusted gross income must be between $4,000 and $8,000, and you must maintain a household for one or more of the following:

(a) an adult disabled dependent; (b) a child who can be claimed as a dependent; and/or

(c) a child who is a student or under age 19 who you are not entitled to

The maximum amount of the credit is $400. You can claim the credit on line 20d of the short form 1040A or line 23c of long form 1040.

QUESTION: Are child support payments deductible?

ANSWER: No, but alimony is. In fact, taxpayers can now deduct alimony from their adjusted gross incomes, rather than as itemized deductions. Although there is no mandatory alimony in the State of Texas, one can voluntarily agree to such an arrangement.

QUESTION: My wife and I were divorced last June. The divorce decree stated that I was to get the exemptions for our two children in exchange for $195 per month child support.

My wife called me the other day and said that she is going to claim the exemptions for the children. Can she do this and get away with it, even though the divorce decree says I'm supposed to get the exemptions?

ANSWER: Your ex-wife is correct. The IRS is not bound by any divorce degree when it comes to the claiming of exemptions. The parent who can prove more than 50 percent of the support is entitled to the exemption.

Under the Tax Reform Act passed last November, the non-custody parent can claim the exemption only if he or she contributes at least $1,200 for each of th children. In your case, you provided only $2,340, or you were $60 short of reaching the contribution necessary to claim the exemptions.

Further instruction concerning filing your 1977 tax return can be obtained by attending the "You and Your Federal Income Tax" program, a public service course jointly sponsored by the Lubbock Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Internal Revenue Service and the Avalanche-Journal. CPAs volunteer their time to assist taxpayers during a twonight informal program to be offered February 7 and 9, 1978, from 7-10 p.m. The course, which provides both instruction and question and answer periods, will teach participants how to fill out the revised tax forms using recent changes in tax law

there is a $1 fee to cover administrative costs. Classes will be held at the following Lubbock locations: Lubbock High School; Atkins Junior High School, Evans Junior High School; Smylie Wilson Junior High School; O.L. Slaton Junior High School and Roosevelt High

Other courses will be held at Littlefield, Floydada and Plainview. Registration will be accepted at the door.

Wallace H. Duncan, writing in the bank's monthly "Review," reports a study in which two econometric models outperformed the stock market in forecasting the economy.

One drawback of the stock market as a leading indicator is that it produces false as well as dependable signals, says Dun-can. Paul Samuelson, a winner of the Nobel Prize in economics, summed this up when he said "the stock market has cor-

Another problem with using the stock market for economic prediction is that the stock market is useful only for shortterm forecasting. In fact, the stock mar-ket provides little useful information beyond a forecast horizon of about six months, Duncan reports.

A better forecasting technique, according to Duncan, is one using a large-scale econometric model of the economy. Such a model contains hundreds of variables -such as the money supply, disposable

Braniff Plans Daily Flights To London

DALLAS (Special) -Braniff International has announced that it will inaugurate daily non-stop flights between Dallas-Fort Worth and London on March 1.

Harding L. Lawrence, Braniff board chairman, made the announcement of the starting date for the first non-stop air service between Dallas-Fort Worth and Europe following the signing by President Carter of the final Civil Aeronautics Board order in the four-year-old Transatlantic route case.

Lawrence said, "We pledge to the people of Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas and the Southwest a successful, reliable daily service at the lowest fares possible. The new non-stop service across the North Atlantic makes Dallas-Fort Worth a true international crossroads and opens up a new interior gateway in the U.S. for the flow of trade and tourism in both directions between Europe and the South-

Braniff has filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board a wide range of lower fares, including a $349 roundtrip standby fare between Dallas-Fort Worth and London, a group 100 fare of $399 roundtrip, an advance purchase excursion fare of $479 roundtrip and a normal economy fare of $784 roundtrip for the new non-

Life In Mine Undergoes Big Change

LONDON (UPI) - Since the Industrial Revolution the coal miner has epitomized the British working class.

Here are two miners: Yesterday: Harold Herd, 83, ill with "The Dust" of coal particles in the lungs, went "down the

"I was paid a shilling (now 8.7 cents) for 10 hours that started before dawn. There was a penny (1.7 cents) on top of this, but it was taken for lamp oil. I loaded nine carts a day and each cart carried 24 hundredweight (total 2,688 pounds) of coal. I worked seven days. Sunday the horses had to be fed."

After World War I Herd was assigned to dig new mines.

"I was lowered on a rope, two yards at a time. I worked with a pick and shovel and waited every second for the sides to cave in. I was a lucky man. I broke my wrist only twice and the gashes never stopped these hands from working."

While Herd was incapacitated, his wife, Maggie, now 73, worked in a cafe nine hours a day six days a week. In 16 years in the cafe she saved 107 pounds ($186).

He speaks French and knows Latin, plays squash and cricket, earns 60 percent more than the national average industrial wage, buys snappy suits, is learning to fly and gets seven weeks off a

"There are just two snags. If you are single and staying at home you don't draw your nine tons of free coal. That's worth 270 pounds ($470) a year. And the other is the panic when a VIP visit is arranged to the pit.

What the outcome will be no one can predict at this point. Whatever it is, it will affect every farmer, consumer and perhaps every nation with which the U.S. trades.

That the nationwide farm protest reached this point is a tribute of sorts to the originally small Colorado-based American Agriculture movement, which at times threatened to get out of hand. Now, the stage has shift- uct at the retail level. ed to the legislative level.

THERE IS NO question but that the its initial goal, that of getting people's atten-

It should be noted that neither Sec. Bergland nor Mr. Carter have shown any great enthusiasm for supporting the farmers' plea for immediate help. In fact, Sec. Bergland has come out against increasing farm supports, arguing that such a move will "travel down the line" to higher grocery prices.

ON THE OTHER hand, there is evidence the farm message is reaching some members of Congress.

Both the House and Senate Agricultural farm problem, starting within the next few

THE BATTLE over what to do about the handle on, without the seemingly easy methplight of the American farmer has now been od of resorting to federal intervention. Compounding the felony, so to speak, is the fact that the government has already injected itself into most facets of the economy, and in some respects left the farmer to fend for himself in an otherwise regulated society.

Idalou Man Says Labor Reform Bill Worthwhile

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Your editorial of Jan. 20 "No Cure For Labor Pains" was so full of half-truths and inaccuracies as to lead to the suspicion that you haven't read any portion of the new Labor Reform Bill, but were only parroting someone else's prejudices. While most of the editorial was simply a shrill attack on labor, even your few attempts to address the facts were, at worst, false and, at best, highly misleading.

You say that "an employer can be ordered to pay double backpay...to any employe who claims can not be altered. The Panama Canal and surhe was discharged because of union activities. What the bill says is that it is against the law for an employer to fire a man primarily because of his union activity and that anytime it can be proven that such has happened, the company will be punished by having to pay double back pay.

If you are implying that employers should be free to fire men solely because they choose to join and work in a union, you confirm your obvious bias against the working man and for big business. You rail that the bill would "allow blacklisting" firms from doing business with the federal gov ernment if found guilty of willfully violating the law." Most people would find it only reasonable that the government would refrain from enriching those businesses that knowingly choose to break the law. As for requiring "employers to give union or gainizers 'equal time' at company expense", this applies only in cases when a company requires its employes to listen to anti-union propaganda while at work.

If an employer doesn't take unfair advantage of his captive audience, he would have no obligation to give equal time to anyone.

Big Labor certainly deserves its share of criticism, but no more so than big business or big government. Efficient, reasonable, well-run unions have done as much for, and are as valuable to the citizens of this country as efficient, reasonable, well-run businesses and governments

Hale Woman Takes Issue On Military Benefit Cuts

day, Jan. 10, 1978, entitled "Defense-Cut Fat, Not Bases

Why is it every time the government wants to 'save' money someone comes up with the suggestion to cut off military, active and retirement, benefits?

In your editorial you would have us believe the salaries and benefits are so great that no young person could refuse such an offer. If this is true why is there no long waiting line at the recruiting

I have not heard of the recruiting officer turning people away who wanted to enlist In fact, most branches of the military have had to lower their standards to meet their quota.

Incidentally, the creation of the all-volunteer force has been less than adequate. The young people who do go in learn a trade and then get out when their initial enlistment is up. Why?

Because after getting in they discover the civilian pay is much better and the other incentives are just not good enough

How about cutting back on Congress? Not too long ago they voted themselves a raise on an average of $14,000 a year (they got another one, quietly, and smaller, of course, later in the year) and then they voted NCO retirees an increase of $20 a month. Their raise of $14,000 was more than the average NCO makes in a year. And have you checked their retirement benefits? Or how about the civil service worker and his benefits? You could "save" a lot of money in that area by just getting rid of the "dead wood" they keep shifting from department to depart-

Stop the military retirement benefits and then sit back and watch the unemployment figures rise. Stop the military retirement benefits and you won't have to worry about which bases to close. You won't have enough manpower to run but just a few. Stop the military retirement benefits and note the caliber of people you have enlisting and then stop and decide if this is who you want defending you and your country. Money paid in salaries and benefits to active and retired military is paying for an insurance policy. One that insures all Americans will have the best personnel possible defending them in any national emergency.

Can we afford the premiums? Can we not afford them? Is this where you want to make the big "saving"? Think about it!

VIRGINIA PAYETTE: Two For TheRoad

THERE'S LESS CB sweet talk with "foxy lafrom highway moving vans these days. Chances are the missus is riding shotgun and hubby keeps his mind on his driving.

When he gets tired, she takes over-all 10 gears and 18 wheels. To slack-jawed bystanders she explains it's easier than lifting sofas and shoving pianos, which she does, too.

In case you haven't changed addresses lately. husband-and-wife teams are the latest wrinkle in the moving business. And for those who can stand all that togetherness, it's better than the stock market for making money. Bekins, for instance, guarantees a minimum annual gross of $43,500 to each of its over-the-road contract couples. But most of them make a lot more than that. "Last year, two couples made over $100,000," says Peter de Wetter, president and chief executive officer (and a former mayor of El Paso). "Four of our teams grossed $80,000, and the majority do better than $50,000.

The beauty of this is that they can bank most of what they earn, since all their living expenses on the road are deductible. It's a great way to build a nest-egg.

IT'S ALSO NOT for everybody, obviously. Any wife who signs on as part of a Mr. and Mrs. moving team pulls her weight, even if it's only 110 pounds.

Not only does she wheel the rig across the country, she's part of the loading team that packs china, crates mirrors and huffs heavy bureaus up and down stairs. She also has to get used to taking her showers in truck stops along the road.

You have to have a lot of gypsy in you, a liking for people and a yen for travel, even if it's only in the high seat of a tractor rig. But some of those sleep-in cabs are pretty fancy.

"It all depends on what they want to spend to fix them up," de Wetter says.

WHO GOES FOR this kind of life? Well, young couples, of course, who haven't started their families yet and who want to save a quick $100,000 in five or six years to finance a home or business of their own. More surprising is the number of older teams whose kids are grown and who can use the money for those goodies they couldn't afford on a retirement income. Any middle-aged woman who's ever waded into spring cleaning, it seems, can learn to hustle a triple dresser into a moving van. It could even be the answer for the no-longeryoung who get squeezed out in a corporate takeover and who find personnel officers aren't panting to hire anybody over 40. If Mama's game, they could wind up in 10 years with a six-digit bank account. And moving furni-

better for Bekins. Husbands don't get restless on long hauls, wives don't worry about what hubby is up to when he's away from home, and customers stop worrying about the bric-a-brac when they see a woman in the crew

THERE HAVE BEEN some problems. Not all marriages can survive the closeness (or one more grand piano), and de Wetter allows as how a few couples have turned in their trailers and headed for divorce courts.

Nevertheless, Bekins is so anxious to expand its of 100 husband-and-wife teams it il do e erything except give them the tractor. And it almost does that

'All they need is a couple of thousand for the down payment," de Wetter explained, "and we'll finance the rest. We pay for the trailer, uniforms, liability insurance, extra license plates, all trailer maintenance and tires, and up to $250 to repaint their cab. We want them to know how to drive and to be in good health, but we don't care if they don't know anything about the moving business. We'll teach them that

And, no matter what you might think after what happened to your antique rocker, it's not on the job training. Recruits sign on for a twomonth session (either in Hillsdale, Ill., or Glendale, Calif.) where they get room and board, $150-a-week salary and a crash, er, thorough course in packing and hauling household goods.

YOU DON'T HAVE to be big and burly. All it takes, says de Wetter, is leverage, dexterity and intelligence. (Personal note: plus a certain hardness of heart that keeps you stoic when the lady of the house goes into hysterics over the bill.) As de Wetter found out himself a while back when he left his executive suite, climbed into a uniform, and signed on as a helper on four jobs between Chicago and Los Angeles. The crew boss knew who he was, but none of the customers did. He got an earful from both directions.

I found out right away that the folks who do the work don't always have the same attitude top management has," he says. "I didn't drop any crockery, but I got a lot of ideas along with the sore muscles.

United Methodist Agency Endorses Move For Fair Pricing Structure For Farmers

MANDAN, N.D. (Special)—Support for U.S. farmers "as they seek to establish a fair and equitable pricing structure for food and other agricultural products," has been urged by leaders of the United Methodist Church's National Network on Town and Country Ministries during a meeting here.

The action is believed to be the first such statement on the issue from any national United Methodist-related agency. It calls upon all United Methodists to support the farmers of the nation so that "those who invest their money, their efforts, their families, and their lives in food production may be assured reasonable economic stability and security in the industry of which they are a part and which is so necessary to the wellThe group expressed no opinion during the late 1977 session on specific efforts, such as the farmer's strike, to improve the pricing structure. Instead, network leaders said, the group chose a "consciousness-raising" approach, calling on church leadership at all levels to "give consideration to the significance of the problem."

Also, according to United Methodist Communications, United Methodist leaders in two major farming areas of the nation have urged consideration for the needs of agricul-

task force voiced support "for fairness and justice to both consumer and producer." In discussing issues relating to appropriate res-ponses to problems of world hunger, and the task force indicated Nebraska agriculture and that of lesser developed countries of the world share such common factors as high costs of production, high capital investments, low return on food produced, and difficulty in keeping channels open for trade which is mutually profitable.

Artist Gives Credit To God For Talent

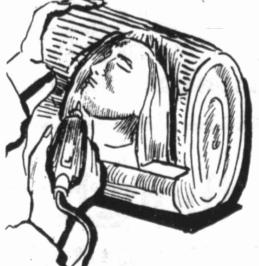

OLYMPIA, Wash. (Special)-For Mary Ann Bigelow, her art and her faith are the expression of the same spirit, although she carves portraits...on wood, marble and even seashells. However, her speciality is driftwood sculpture. She is the artist-in-residence at Olympia's United Methodist Church, where she provides whatever the church needs artistically. In addition, she is a layspeaker, and talks to about 30 groups each year, her main subject being human potential and artistic

"I believe I have a talent given me by God," she told Mike Major for an article in United Methodist Communications releases.

Mrs. Bigelow is a prolific, professional artist, who receives so many commissions she no longer has to show in galleries. She averages three major shows a year, and her work is displayed in countries all over the world

Mrs. Bigelow, who grew up near the Washington (state) coast, always has had a special affinity to driftwood. She chooses a piece of wood for its suggestive qualities, and, using a high-speed electric hand tool, works to allow a face to evolve naturally She seldom carves the rest of the body, leaving that to the imagination of the beholder. Her faces are said to emerge from the wood with a poignantly beautiful, almost Grecian serenity.

In addition to formal artistic works she's done for her church, she's made a series of banners for the liturgical season and currently is doing sketches of each Sunday School student for the church bulletin.

She's always responded to church, P-TA, or ay any other group that needed such things as poster or table decorations. She said she believes in making her art respond to people's real needs. Mrs. Bigelow paradoxically downgrades her own talent in her continual efforts to awaken others to the latent buried creativity within them. Her talks before various church groups rely, naturally, on visual demonstrations. But her intent is not so much to show off her own work, as to encourage other people that they can do something just as good. The Christian artist maintains: "When you ask God for strength, He'll give it to you-not when you' ask for it, but when you need it.'

Parson Tends Flock Of 'Forgotten People'

By JERRY MITCHELL

HICKORY, N.C. (UPI) — For the past 40 years the Rev. Charles A. Keyes has been fighting the bitter winter weather to bring warm clothing and gifts to the 'fortgotten people of Appalachia."

Keyes, known to thousands of people in the mountain hollows as the "Parson of the Hills," said the problems of the sometimes clannish people are little improved since he began his "calling" as a teen-ager.

"There's no end to this thing," said Keyes, 59. "I travel the pig path trails searching for another child or old woman or man that I can be a help to." And it hasn't always been easy to approach some of them, particularly a group of residents on Hell's Mountain in Virginia. "I've had to actually dodge bullets to minister to this group of families," said the gentle preacher with silver hair and gray, bushy eyebrows and mustache. 'You've got to have lots of patience," he said. "Sometimes you want to throw up your hands and say 'God is it worth it? "But if I get one of these children out of 100 to come out of this poverty and come back to help their people I think I've accomplished something," he said.

Keyes collects clothing, food, candy, fruit and toys in the fall and makes several treks into the mountains to deliver the goods to needy families.

He gives the people warm clothing or food and each child receives a "treat bag" of candy and fruit plus nice gifts. "not junk."

Keyes preached to chickens in the back yard of his West Jefferson home as a 5year-old and delivered his first sermon at age 8. Six years later he began preaching on the streets of his hometown where he

He sold peanuts and used profits to buy candy for needy mountain children. "No. 1 in my work is meeting these people's spiritual needs," Keyes said. 'But you can't go in an old cold shack and talk about love and God and get them to listen to you. You've first got to take care of their physical needs.' He flipped through the day's stack of mail containing requests. Keyes will receive more than 2,000 requests this year and will be able to reach about 800 families. Many of the mountain roads are impassable in winter and he continues his Christmas parties until February or March. Education is the key to breaking the cycle that has generation after generation facing the same perils.

There's only one way to remedy ignorance and poverty and that's through education," Keyes said. "Some of the parents are very rebellious about their children having an education."

Julie Back 'On Camera' For TV Special 'One Step Into Spring'

By VERNON SCOTT HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - Julie Andrews popped back in front of camera lenses for the first time in almost three years to star in "One Step Into Spring," a CBS-TV special scheduled for March.

Julie, who makes her home in Gstaad, Switzerland, accompanied her husband, director Blake Edwards, to Hollywood to visit medical specialists (Edwards had a touch of pneumonia) and to look in at their refurbished Malibu beach house.

English-born Julie, slender as a lily and as beautiful as she was in "Mary Poppins," said, "I'm only devoting about 20 percent of my time to my career and 80 percent to my family."

A superstar whose eight movies have earned $275 million at the box office, Julie appears to be thriving in semiretirement. Last year she limited her activities to a three-week concert tour of Japan and taping the TV special.

"I haven't really worked in front of a camera since I did 'Some of My Favorite Things,' a TV show I did with Peter Sellers," Julie said.

Sellers, who is almost a member of the family, often stars in Edwards' movies, one of which, "Revenge of the Pink Panther," is in mid-production now.

That's the word from Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s Department of Finance population research unit, which gathers statistics on such things.

By the year 2000 the median age in California will be 36 - compared with a median age of 29 for Californians in 1975, says Nels Rasmussen, the unit's senior researcher.

Between 1975 and 2000, the over-65 group will increase 63 percent to 3,304,-900, Rasmussen estimates.

And if it seems that there are a lot of people living in California now - clogging the freeways, resorts and the lines at the supermarkets - it's only the begin-

By the year 2000, there will be 8 million more Californians for a total of more than 29.2 million, the state's population experts estimate.

That expected 38 percent increase compares with a 99 percent population explosion in California in the past quarter-century, when the state grew from 10.6 million in 1950 to 21.1 million in 1975.

Most of the growth since 1950 has been in the suburbs within daily commuting distance of California's major cities. In the next quarter-century, more people will choose to live in less urban areas such as the rural mountain counties east of Sacramento and more distant suburban counties like Ventura and Santa Cruz, Rasmussen said.

"I think there is definitely a disenchantment with urban living setting in among a good many people. This generally affects people more so in the age of 55 and above - people who have lived in an urban area and remember, for example, when Los Angeles was not a bad place to live," Rasmussen said.

Balanchine Scores With Another Winner

NEW YORK (UPI) - George Balanchine can produce a ballet to practically any kind of music; but usually the better the music the better the ballet.

For "Ballo della Regina," which was given its official world premiere by Balanchine's New York City Ballet at the State Theater in Lincoln Ceter on Jan. 12, he has gone to Verdi. The combination is a winner.

The music is the ballet music from "Don Carlo," which seldom is used today. The original ballet was vaguely connected with the plot of the opera, and the music therefore is a mixture of the draplotless ballet, providing both dramatic tension and a schematic operatic scenario of solos, duets, enser

Glittering Broadway Musical Productions Grow Into U.S. Fixture

By WILLIAM D. LAPPLER United Press International Broadway musicals have become as much a part of the American way of life as the hot dog, apple pie, jazz and television game shows.

The first efforts were feeble and poorly

The first efforts were feeble and poorly defined and it was not until in the second decade of this century that the Broadway show began to take form.

One of the earliest successes was "Very Good Eddie," a musical comedy with a good book, by Guy Bolton, Jeronse Kern composed the music and several writers came up with the lyrics, including Elsie Janis and P.G. Wodehouse.

"Very Good Eddie" opened in 1815 co.4.

"Very Good Eddie" opened in 1915 and lasted almost a year on Broadway before it went on tour. And then it was forgotten until 1975 when the Goodspeed Opera House revived in it East Haddam, Conn. It was such a success there that it moved to Broadway for another successful run. The original cast recording of the Goodspeed Opera House production of

While only one song became a fixture - and that was "Katy-Did" - the music is fresh and invigorating. This recording features David Christmas, Cynthiu Wells, Charles Repole, Nicholas Wyman, Travis Hudson and Hal Shane, an ideal cast for such a frothy adventure.

Besides "Katy-Did," which for more than 50 years has been a musical back-drop for comic sequences in the movies (Keystone Cops chasing errant comedi-ans or bathing beauties parading on Coney Island), catchy songs are "I've Got to Dance," "If You're a Friend of Mine," 'Wedding Bells Are Calling Me" and

By JOE WING ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — While great-grandmother once took such pre-cautions against blizzards as sewing Jun-ior into long underwear and nailing windows shut, the National Weather Service says more and better steps should be taken, even if this winter doesn't turn out as bad as the last one. A blizzard, incidentally, is defined as a snow storm or snow blown by winds of at least 35 miles an hour; a severe blizzard is one with 45-mile-an-hour winds and temperatures of 10 degrees or less.

Automobile accidents are listed as the leading cause of winter storm deaths, followed in order by heart attacks, freezing, home fires, carbon-monoxide poisoning, falls and the collapse of snow-laden

Latest figures indicate that about a third of the fatalities result from storminduced auto accidents, a fourth from snow shovelers' heart attacks and a tenth from freezing.

In case of heavy snow, says a weather bureau spokesman, you should be capable of depending on your own resources. Take it for granted there may be no electricity, central heating or delivery of groceries - and no way to get to the store.

You should make sure that flashlights and a battery radio are in good operating order and that there is plenty of food in the house, including some that need not be cooked. Have an emergency heating system if possible but check for any fire and smoke hazards that may be presented by fireplaces, stoves and space heat-

Once you can go outside, take it easy lest you overload your heart. Remember that several layers of loose-fitting clothes are warmer than one heavy, tight garment, that mittens are warmer than gloves, and that outerwear is best if hooded and water repellent.

It is even more important than at other times of year to have the family car in good shape — including heater and exhaust system. Should you plan a long trip, prepare for the worst. A storm kit in the car might well include tire chains, tow chain, snow shovel, sack of sand, flashlight, signal light, booster cable, windshield scraper, first aid kit, compass, sleeping bags or blankets, matches, candles, extra clothing, pliers, screwdriver and adjustable wrench - leaving room, one hopes, for passengers and luggage.

If a bad storm catches you on the road, try for shelter at once. Should that be impossible, stay in your car, where rescuers are most likely to find you. Don't try to push your car out of a drift or shovel frantically. And don't walk toward safety unless shelter is nearby and you are absolutely sure you can reach it. Getting lost in a blizzard is about as sure a way to die

Run the motor sparingly while waiting for help and open a car window slightly lest carbon monoxide creep up on you. Presumably you have kept your tank full of gas by stopping frequently at filling

And don't just sit there. Exercise by clapping hands and moving arms and legs

The American sense of humor has come a long way since 1959, Sahlens says, and the only thing audiences won't laugh at now is religion.

His blue eyes twinkling above the green trees knitted into his sweater, Sahlens remembers when the Second City troupe couldn't mention President Eisenhower on stage without eliciting gasps of disapproval. But the taboos of politics, sex and almost every other topic have fallen.

Today, the theater in Chicago's Old Town offers biting satire on any topic from rape to President Carter's energy program. "It's not that we've changed," Sahlens says. "The world has taken a quarter-turn in our direction. "When we started in 1959, Americans didn't dare laugh at certain things because the McCarthy committee had frightened everybody. If you went on stage and just mentioned certain things ... it was very daring, like sex." Those were the times that such comedians as

That closeness and a mutual respect between actors and audience allow Second City to renew itself. Most of the 200 or so cast members who have stayed three to four years with the troupe are between 18 and 35, like the average audience mem-

Sahlens declines to institutionalize Second City's brand of humor or to cling to a formula for success, and his view of the way the club touches people's lives is similarly organic.

Odessa Police Department
People are not aware of the type of lock with which they trust the safety of their family. Approximatley one-half of all homes in the U.S. are equipped with a common spring-latch. This device is the same basic unit that is customarily used in a bathroom lock.

ALl exterior doors should have a good deadbolt with a 1" throw.

Here is a little quiz that you will enjoy taking. Read the questions in the following checklist, and record your answer. After completing the questions, check the answers, and total your score.

1. Do you leave your garage door open on all outside doors you are flirting with danger. Score 15 points if you answered while away from home? (yes) (no) 2. Are exterior doors equipped with a deadbolt lock? (yes) (no) 3. When you leave your home for just a moment, do you lock your doors? (yes) (no) 4. Do you "hide" the key outside of your home? (yes) (no) 5. The you have a way to see who is at 5. Do you have a way to see who is at your door before opening it? (yes) (no) 6.

If you suspected that your home had been broken into, would you investigate before calling the police? (yes) (no).

Answers: 1. This question is worth 5 points, and should have been answered No. 2. If you do not have deadbolt locks

Yes. 3. The answer is Yes. Even the amatuer thief can enter your home, take what he wants, and leave before you can return from the corner market with a loaf of bread. This question is worth 15 points. 4. The truth is you can't hide a key from a thief. So don't try. Your answer is No. It is worth 15 points, 5. It is folly to open a door to a potential attack-er, but that is what you do ever time you open the door, if you answered No. Your Yes answer is worth 5 points. 6. There are two reasons why your answer should be No. First, the thief may still be inside, and second, your entry could disturb valuable evidence. This 5 pointer could save Obviously you cannot be fully protected from a professional thief, or even a determined amateur. However 85 to 90 percent of all thefts and burglaries are a rein five that you will be a victim of burglary this year.

KORCHNOI vs. KARPOV The battle royal in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, took almost two months, as Boris Spassky, an ex-World Champion who has been living in France for the past six months, took on Viktor Korchnoi, another Russian Grandmaster, but one who has decided to leave his native land for

They were playing the final match of the Candidates to determine who would face Russia's World Champion Anatoly Karpov for the world title this spring.

It was a battle of surprises. At the beginning, it looked like a walkaway as Korchnoi raced through to a 71/2-21/2 lead, only 10½ points being needed to win. Then Spassky, like a Russian bear emerg-ing from hibernation, stretched his muscles and threw a scare into his opponent. He won four games in a row-and suddenly the match was 71/2-61/2. The chess world was agog. But then Spassky, a very BENJAMIN Franklin engraved some Colonial-era paper money, he may have designed our first cent, and he's the only non-President who appears on a regularissue U.S. coin.

What called Franklin to mind was a tiny permanent exhibit at First Federal Saving & Loan of Chicago, titled "Coin and Currency From Franklin's Day." You might give it a glance next time you're in Chicago.

Any collection built around Franklin needs a Fugio Cent of 1787, the first United States copper coin.

Some collectors believe Franklin designed this. He did use a similar design, showing a sundial, on some paper currency. He's also credited with the "Mind Your Business" motto. The coin's name comes from the "Fugio" ("I Fly") in the design, meaning that time flies.

Another appropriate item is a Franklin half-dollar. This 90 percent silver coin features the Liberty Bell on the reverse. John Sinnock drew the design early in the 1940's but it wasn't used until 1948.

Most coin and medal collectors have heard of The Franklin Mint, the world's largest private mint. Several FM medals show Franklin portraits, and most of these are attractive.

Another piece that belongs in a Franklin collection is the cent-sized of medal of the Franklin Institute.

You might want two of these, one of the old bronze ones and the current aluminum type. The obverse shows a threequarter view of Franklin's bust, with his name and his dates of birth and death. The reverse pictures the Franklin Institute building, in Philadelphia.

There's a Franklin medal in the Treasury Dept. series of U.S. Mint medals. This was drawn by Sinnock, and shows a portrait very similar to (but not the same as) the one used on the half-dollar. Franklin also appears on some Civil War Tokens. These copper pieces were the size of today's small cent. They were privately made around 1861-64, when private coinage was legal, and came in handy during the war-caused coin shor-

Ralatively few of us can afford to col-lect $100 bills. For those who can, Frank-lin appears on this denomination of U.S. Notes, National Currency, Federal Re-serve Bank Notes, and Federal Reserve

There are other Franklin items you can discover. The only limit to your collec-tion is the limit—if there is any—on your as Spassky was closing the gap. In the 13th game, shown below, Korchnoi just gave his Queen away, something almost unheard of in a game of this importance. After Game 13, Korchnoi, though still leading, threatened to abandon the match unless the organizers excluded the public and removed a demonstration board showing the position after each move (Spassky was using it to plot his strategy.). The board remained, but the first ten rows of seats nearest the battleground were removed, a partial victory for the tense Korchnoi.
