BAKER LAKE, Northwest Territories (AP) - A Canadian-American search team struggled through waist-high snow Sunday to the edge of a crater nearly 10 feet across in the ice on the Thelon River and found wreckage from a runaway Soviet nuclear satellite.

Lt. Col. Donald Davidson of the Canadian Armed Forces told a news conference early today that tubing and a perforated metal canister were found protruding from the ice. Paul Murda, leader of a five-man U.S. scientific crew, said the canister was "sort of like a cylinder that got smashed" while the tubing "looks like structural tubing.'

"Something has really gone through that ice at a high speed," said Davidson. "This is all that's left sticking out, or maybe separate pieces. We don't know. We didn't pull it apart." A Chinook helicopter took the 13-member crew from Baker Lake to the crater 180 miles to the southwest after it was found by two of the six members of a Canadian-American team wintering in the area on a wildlife survey for the Northwest Territories government.

The debris from the nuclear powered Cosmos-954 satellite that fell from orbit last Tuesday was found eight miles northeast of the landing strip at Warden's Grove, a weather outpost in the Dubawnt Lake area 1,000 miles north of the North Dakota

Davidson said the two men made a sled trip up the Thelon River Saturday and encountered the crater on

He said one of the two men touched the metal with a gloved hand. Both men were flown Sunday to University Hospital in Edmonton for tests, while the other four were flown to a hospital in Yellowknife. The team consists of five Americans and one Canadian.

Davidson said the search team talked with the wildlife surveyors at their camp and then went up again in the helicopter. Using detection equip-ment, they located a source of radiation about eight miles from the camp.

The helicopter landed on a rock outcropping about 1,000 yards from the site. The team moved forward on foot through deep snow, taking continuous radiation readings.

'We kept moving forward and didn't find any (excessive radiation) and we were able to go right up to the edge of the crater." Davidson reported.

A crater nearly 10 feet across had been blasted in the ice by the heat of the object. About a foot and a half of water had refrozen in it. Around it were 50 to 100 puncture marks which Davidson said may have been made by pieces of metal or by ice thrown up from the impact.

"It's quite possible there's something under there but we couldn't see it." he said. Tom Crites, a U.S. health physicist, and Davidson reached the crater first. Next came Murda and Pvt. Mona Wilson, a female member of the Canadian Forces nuclear accident survey team.

The team was on the site for about two hours, returning to Baker Lake about three hours after dusk. Meanwhile, a team of paratroopers were sent for to cordon off the crater.

Prison inmates ask transfers

NEW WESTMINSTER, British Columbia (AP) - Inmates holding seven women and three men hostage today at the British Columbia Penitentiary met face-to-face with Royal Canadian Mounted Police negotiators and demanded tranfers to

The meeting late Sunday came more than 30 hours after the incident began. Earlier bargaining was done on the telephone.

"I think some of them are anxious to bring this down as soon as possible," said RCMP Inspector Roy Pickell after the 45-minute session with the inmates. No reason was given for the tranfer demand, but one observer said continual unrest at the 100-year-old prison stems from inmate anger at conditions there. This was the 13th such incident at the prison since 1963, giving the "B.C.

Pen" the reputation of being the worst meeting. Thirteen hostages were taken originally - two inmates, a male visitor and 10 women visitors. Three women have been released in exchange for food, cigarettes, coffee and drugs.

The prisoners claimed to be armed with a pistol and two grenades, but officials could not confirm this.

Banquet's entertainer missed few funnybones

ANDREWS - After-dinner speakers who labor more at trying to entertain than to impart a message have a task they hope folks will laugh over . . . not about.

Kenneth Wyatt is one such. The other day, he came from his small Panhandle town of Tulia to the larger town of Andrews to tell preacher jokes, fat-women jokes, school-days jokes and so-called country jokes in a "worked-at" corny fashion.

Wyatt was adorned in a vested, pinstripe gray suit, which seemed a mismatch for his style of humor. It was rustic.

He's an educated fellow, a Western artist, who came to the Andrews County Chamber of Commerce annual banquet to make a dollar or two with his hick-man act and to show off his art works.

His forte is West Texas realism that is bent more toward picture-postcard scenes than toward personalities and characters. He told lots and lots of preacher jokes possibly because he was one - a preacher.

'Since I finished preaching, I've had lots of time to read the Bible." he said, as he turned to Methodist minister Keith Wiseman, who was up on the stage with him.

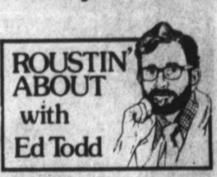

He joked about a school boy named Joe. Now, he said, Joe was so wise, so intelligent and so smart that everybody in class "hated him.

Ask Joe "What do you know?" and he'd reply "I know everything. Once, Wyatt made a political joke. The victim was Bob Bergland, President Carter's secretary of "I read in the paper the other day Back when he was just a boy, Wyatt said he learned from his father that "There's no such thing as a fat woman, You'll find that some are the locker room door: "It's not whether you win or lose. It's how you play the game that counts." Not much truth in it, but it's a good saying," Wyatt said. Wyatt even had a doctor joke to impart. The physician, determining that the patient had the flu, offered his "You've got to stay away from pigeons and mailmen. You know," Wyatt said, "they're both carriers."

He came up with another preacher joke. His punch line was this: "Every preacher knows it's just as important where you've been as where you're After he just about worn himself out deserve those rewards. "They just want dessert. We've got lot of dessert eaters in this world,"

Wyatt said. At last, ex-preacher Wyatt got wound down and sat down.

And emcee James Roberts, who had told the evening's first political joke, dismissed the 350-to-400

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Texas congressman wants to dangle U.S. foreign aid in front of the South Korean government, hoping to insure the presence of Korean businessman Tongsun Park before a congressional investigating committee.

Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Texas, told President Carter and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. he was planning to offer an amendment to the budget to delete all "major funds destined for South Korea," including more than $800 million in military equipment scheduled to be left in South Korea after the 2nd Infantry Divison is withdrawn.

Don Jo for interrogation. The committee is investigating alleged efforts by Park and others to buy influence in Congress with money, gifts and favors. Mattox' letter-writing campaign came a week after Jaworski met with members of the freshman Democratic caucus. Jaworski reported on the roadblocks to the congressional investigation put up by the Korean government, Mattox said.

"In light of this contingency, I am proposing that the next armed services authorization bill contain provisions stipulating that the 2nd Infantry Divison of the U.S. Army will not leave any equipment or supplies to the South Korean government when it makes its scheduled withdrawal unless that government complies with our request for full cooperation." Mattox noted the equipment includes "helicopters, tanks, field artillery, troop transports and other valuable, modern military hard-

'That is up to Egypt," Israeli cabinet secretary Aryeh Naor said Sunday. "It wasn't Israel that broke off the talks. As negotiations get under way again, U.S. mediator Alfred Atherton took a proposed blueprint for Arab-

Israeli peace to Cairo. Atherton, an assistant secretary of state, wants Egypt's reaction to an Israeli draft of a joint statement of principles that would provide guidelines for future negotiations.

Atherton is to return to Washington in the middle of the week, to report to President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance before President Anwar Sadat arrives for his weekend meeting with Carter.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman was expected to follow Atherton to Cairo in a day or two following the decision of the Israeli cabinet Sunday to resume his negotiations with Egyptian Defense Minister Mohamed Abdel Ghany Gamassy.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a copyrighted interview with U.S. News & World Report, charged the Egyptians reneged on a promise made by Sadat during his visit to Jerusalem to demilitarize most of the Sinai Peninsula.

Begin said the demilitarized lines presented by Egypt in the subsequent talks "would permit the bulk of the Sinai to remilitarize," endangering Israel's borders.

Bergland's remarks renew debate on braceros plan

By FRANK del OLMO The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - Due to a misunderstanding of remarks made by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland in Mexico City last week, many Mexicans think the United States wants 3 miliion braceros.

Carter administration officials, including Bergland, are trying to clear up the misunderstanding. But some administration sources fear that the flap has already set back efforts to get Mexico's cooperation in controlling illegal immigration.

Administration officials said Sunday they still hope to rectify any damage that may have been done when the Mexican press reported that Bergland favored a new bracero program - one which would bring 3 million Mexican farm laborers into the United States.

Odessan wins spot in contest

An Odessa cellist was one of six winners in the 16th annual National Young Artist Competition which ended Saturday night in Midland.

Victoria H. Parr, 25, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Parr of Odessa, was among six winners selected in the college and secondary divisions. She competed in the college strings division. She is a graduate student at State University of New York, where she studies under Bernard Greenhouse. Miss Parr won the Southern Methodist University Concerto Competition in 1972 and the Rome Festival Orchestra Competition in 1974.

Four of the six winners were designated performing winners and will play in concert this spring with the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale. They are violinist Felicia Moye of Westbury, N. Y., who competed in the secondary division; Kenneth Carroll, a baritone who was winner in the college division; Robert Yelvington, a floutist in the college division, and Tom Dickinson, a pianist in the college division.

The sixth winner was secondary student Barlow Bradford, a pianist, of Miss Moye, 16, is studying in New York with Margaret Pardee at the Meadowmount School of Music and Ivan Galamian at the Julliard Precollege Division. In 1976, she won first prize for strings in the Great Neck Symphony Young Musicians Audition in 1976 and has played recitals in that area, as well as Houston and New York. Yelvington is under full academic scholarship at the University of New Mexico and has a double major in applied music and French. He has been a participant in the Marcel Moyse Flute Seminars at Brattleboro, Vt., in 1975 and 1977.

Carroll, who attends The University of Texas School of Law, won first place in the graduate men's division of the 1977 National Association of Teachers of Singing. He was a finalist in the Shreveport Symphony Contest in 1976. He has performed at the University of Texas Opera Theater, with the East Texas State University Opera Ensemble and in various choral groups and musical comedy Dickinson, a piano student at Yale College, currently studies under Donald Currier in the Yale School of Music. He has attended many summer programs and is scheduled to solo with the Yale Symphony in March 1978 when he will play the Barber Concerto.

Mexico's most influential daily newspaper, Excelsior, carried the Bergland press conference on page 1 with a large headline.

Even at the peak of the original bracero program, which ran from 1943 until 1965, no more than 400,000 Mexican farm laborers entered the United States to work in any one year. A source in Washington said that U.S. Embassy officials in Mexico City

"came unglued" when they saw the Mexican newspaper articles, and immediately informed the White House. Bergland was ordered to clarify his remarks and did so Saturday on the last stop of his visit at the agricultural city of Culiacan, in northern Mexico. Sources in Mexico City said Bergland told reporters in Culiacan that his remark about 3 million workers had been misunderstood, but that he did not preclude the possibility of a new bracero program. Excelsion carried the second story Sunday. Efforts to contact Bergland for comment Sunday were unsuccessful. The incident has unsettled White House policy planners who have been trying to bury proposals for a new bracero program once and for all.

Was pump primed?

The drop in the national unemployment rate to 6.4 percent is good news, certainly. The question is what are we to make of it? President Carter, for example, is making too much of it.

"I think the slow impact of the programs we put into effect, that was disappointing for a while, is beginning to show up," Mr. Carter said recently.

One wonders whether Mr. Carter would have us think that the $14 billion he poured into public jobs creation schemes the largest amount for that purpose in American history are taking hold. And this result, despite the evidence acknowledged by the Carter administration in December that much of the funding has had little effect.

During the last year of the Ford administration, the unemployment rate dropped a full percentage point, and it did so without Mr. Ford's spilling billions of dollars into public jobs.

It is expected that the natural recuperative juices of the economy were at work then, and they probably have been this past year also. Whatever, it is difficult to discern the effect of government policy on the unemployment rate, although politicians obviously are more adroit at this than others.

The decline in the unemployment rate will influence the government's economic policy, and it is here also that the President is off-target. Consider this exchange between Mr. Carter and Charles Schultz, his chief economic adviser. Mr. Carter asked whether, because of the new unemployment figure, it still was necessary to cut taxes by $25 billion. Mr. Schultz replied: "The point was always (that) the tax cut was not to rescue an economy that was on the verge of recession or stagnation but to keep it going in the future."

The exchange indicates that Mr. Carter and Mr. Schultz are engaged in the business of trying to fix the economy so that it will perform in the short-term.

But clearly, it is the long-term that needs thinking about. The economy may seem all right on the surface, and indeed the decline in the unemployment rate reinforces the impression. eneath the surface, however, are cracks. Business is undercapitalized. Business is overregulated. Business and individuals are taxed without representation - via the hidden tax of inflation.

These cracks certainly should be repaired now. One way to repair some of them would be to modify both the size and the shape of the proposed tax cut. Congress should increase the total amount of the cut, and it should give more money back to middle and upperincome earners, and to business, than President Carter has proposed.

We believe that Congress should do these things, since Congress seems the only institution now capable of considering them with any empathy.

The administration apparently feels that the latest unemployment figure only confirms its economic thinking.

Meanwhile, the shocking unemployment rates, nationwide, afflicting blacks and Mexican Americans are all but ignored in this self-congratulation in Washington.

Clearly, the nation's business and government must, somehow, form a more effective partnership to bring these citizens into full production.

One somehow is led to wonder whether or not President Carter and his advisers fully understand the problem. This is a matter of tremendous importance.

CHARLEY REESE:

Red bureaucracies intent on acquisition of world

By CHARLEY REESE un Beit Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. - Lev Navrozov is Russian engineer, intellectual, writer, and linguist. His mind fairly glows with its brilliance. Yet he is telling Americans essentially the same thing they have been hearing for years from the "little old ladies in tennis shoes.'

Do not trust the Soviet Union. Fight or you are doomed. Above all, do not trust your own bureaucracies (State Department, White House and CIA). "If you relegate your destiny to your bureaucracies, you are doomed. have not seen an American bureaucracy that is as efficient as a Soviet bureaucracy. The CIA has been deceiving you for 10 years; not because they are evil, but because they don't know anything about the Soviet Union.

"Your president must rely on his experts and if they don't know anything, then he is blind. In the Soviet Union, we stop listening to Soviet propaganda about the age of nine, but when I come to this country, I hear all your Soviet experts parroting Soviet propaganda.

Navrozov likens Detente and Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties to the Maginot Line, the series of fortresses and tank traps the French built following World War I.

"In 1936, even a child knew that the Maginot Line was useless. You could fly over it or go around it, yet even the most sophisticated leaders of France, a nation famous for its science and philosophy, put their faith in it.

"Ten years from now, if the West survives, you will look back and know what a child could tell you today: that Detente and SALT treaties are childish delusions. The Soviet bureaucracies are intent on acquisition of the world and they are highly motivated.

'You must develop an art and a science of survival or the end is a foregone conclusion. Four hundred years ago, medicine did not exist, What existed was mostly quackery. Your foreign policy and diplomacy today is in the same position of medicine 400 years ago — it is mostly quackery.

"Only when people became interested in staying alive did medicine develop into an art and a science and only if the people of the West are interested in remaining free can there develop an art and science of survival.

Navrozov said socialism appeals to some people because they are stupid and to others because they are envious and hate anyone who is better off than they are.

"It is a quirk of human nature that some people will consent to paying thousands of dollars in taxes so long as they are allowed to keep a few dollars in their pockets. There are others to whom merely the destruction of people with more money than they have is a goal in itself even if in destroying the rich, they also put themselves into a worse

But, he added, socialism is a failure and does not deliver what it promises.

"If these Utopias worked, then it would be simple. The Utopians would set one up and in a free competition with other systems, the people would see that it was the better system and flock to it. They never do this because the Utopians know their system does not work and therefore the first thing they do is try to eliminate the other systems by force."

Navrozov, who escaped with his family about five years ago, believes that the greatness of the West lies in its people, not in its governments. He believes that the hope of survival lies in the private actions of private citizens.

I wonder how many more refugees from Communist tyranny will have to arrive and tell us the same thing before we will finally get it through our noggins it is the last quarter of the game and our side of the scoreboard is a nest of goose eggs.

Navrozov is right. Only when plain Americans get riled up enough to heave out of office the appeasers, apologists and dummies and replace them with realists will we stand even a chance of winning the war with Soviet Union. Navrozov and the others must feel like the man who escapes from prison only to discover that he has sought refuge in an insane asylum.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Charges beset OMBE director

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - Randolph T. Blackwell, a veteran of the civil rights movement who once shared a dream with the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., nightmare of bureaucratic bumbling. It could end in possible scandal.

In his younger days, the 50-year-old head of the government's minority business program risked his life at the hands of night-riding Ku Kluxers for instructing fellow blacks in the South how to register and vote for the first time in their lives.

He was a trusted lieutenant and intimate friend of King and Medgar Evers before they became victims of assassination. Hundreds of Blackwell's former students at small black colleges in Alabama and North Carolina were fired by his zeal to become disciples of the "We Shall Overcome" movement that broke down racial barriers in the South.

But today, unfortunately, Blackwell is beset by charges of maladministration, ineptitude, squandering and perhaps wrongdoing as director of the Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE). He came to Washington last May as a Carter showcase appointee assigned to get OMBE back on the track after scandal-tainted; do-nothing years under the Richard Nixon and Gerald Blackwell suddenly found himself in charge of a multimillion-dollar federal program to foster business opportunities for blacks and other minorities. His performance as a leader has been a flop, according to sources within the agency.

They tell of Blackwell haphazardly handing out questionable grants to applicants. They report administrative chaos within the agency. The morale of the professional staff, they say, has been all but destroyed by the director's free-wheeling ways.

These are not the charges of disgruntled whites. Blackwell's most severe critics are blacks, Chicanos and past admirers of his courageous contribution to the freedom cause. One trusted source shook his head in dismay and said: "He's a good man in the wrong job."
That Blackwell was being thrown into a job that was over his head should have been known to Commerce Sec.Kreps prior to his appointment. We have in hand secret Commerce Department audits made before he became OMBE chief, showing that he seriously mismanaged an approximate $150,000 contract financed by the same agency. Indeed, only $9,816 of $163,460 claimed under the contract was allowable, the auditors determin-

The auditors found that Southern Rural, Inc., a self-help program headed by Blackwell after King's death, had submitted unallowable cost charges for government payment, including overpayments to Blackwell for salary. The organization eventually settled the case by agreeing to pay more than $19,000 back to the govern-political insider). That meant pacifying Rep. Donald Fraser, who the appointment, during a private meeting the previous Wednesday night. With Fraser certain to be op-

One point of agreement in the once monolithic DFL: Perpich should name Muriel, and not just to avoid conflict. In his last days, tears appeared in Humphrey's eyes when he talked of undone work — including Farmer-Labor (DFL) party.

It's small wonder he has had problems handling a $50 million federal budget. A confidential task force report says that 15 government grants totaling $1.5 million were approved proper legal review. The report also cites several other irregularities. Blackwell authorized a $54,000 handout, for example, for a rabbit-breeding experiment. Yet Blackwell's brother Edgar was one of the sponsors until he was advised pointedly to drop his name from the project. The rabbit grant was "not carefully thought out," said one source. "It was a hare-brained scheme." Blackwell also gave $600,000 to the Booker T. Washington Foundation for a communications center, despite a confidential warning that the group had already squandered over $3 million in OMBE money and had "performed very poorly." In a flipflop, Blackwell first agreed to suspend the grant, then reversed himself

The stocky, dapperly dressed OMBE chief started out low-key. The discrepancies raised in the audit of Southern Rural, he said, were simply bookkeeping and clerical matters.

He quickly recalled that he and other administrators often gave money out of their own pockets to poverty-stricken people. Blackwell said he sometimes gave "as much as one-third of my salary.'

Turning to his supervision of OMBE, Blackwell acknowledged he sometimes cuts corners in clearing OMBE grants and contracts. But this, he insisted, is to get money in time to programs and people who desperately need it.

Anger began to clash in reaction to charges by professional bureaucrats that he was throwing money away on hare-brained schemes. "I'm more sensitive than those cats," he told Cohn. "It's an insult to me."

Pacing his executive office and gesturing with huge hands, Blackwell argued that as a former pioneer innovator of private projects operating on a shoestring, he was unlikely to waste money intended to help the

INSIDE REPORT:

The diplomatic 'beef' of U.S. embassy in Tokyo

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While trade negotiator Robert Strauss was talking Japan into admitting more American beef imports, the U.S. embassy in Tokyo was privately bemoaning pressure put on the Japanese by U.S. Senators.

The pattern of hand-wringing by U.S. diplomats whenever a squeeze is applied to a foreign government is clearly evidenced in a confidential Jan. 7 telegram from the Tokyo embassy to the State Department. To the men around Strauss, this typifies what they have had to put up with in negotiations.

At issue was Japan's present 1,000-ton annual limit on U.S. beef imports. When Strauss proposed a 10,000-ton quota, the Japanese government came back with a 3,000-ton counter-offer viewed as unsatisfactory by any standard. Visiting in Japan, two Republican Senators from beef-producing states, Clifford Hansen of Wyoming and Carl Curtis of Nebraska, told a Tokyo press conference Jan. 6 that the Japanese response was "totally unacceptable" and "should never be accepted by Strauss."

That produced shivers of fright at the American embassy. On Jan. 7, a telegram signed by William C. Sherman. No. 2 man in the embassy.

"Embassy fears such statements create the air of confrontation and U.S. dictation which will remove any chance of our getting substantial improvement in Japanese agricultural offers. These are personal views of Senators and we believe GOJ (government of Japan) recognizes them as such."

Whatever the Japanese recognize the Senators clearly did not "remove any chance" of a better deal. Arriving in Japan Jan. 11, Strauss negotiated a 10,000-ton worldwide quota on high-grade beef imports. Argentina may send a few steaks to Japan, but nearly all of that quota will be supplied by American cattlemen.

U.S.-SAUDI CRISIS? President Carter's promise to sell Saudi Arabia 80 F-15 fighter aircraft, the best the U.S. has, is confronting a politically orchestrated effort in Congrest to kill the sale or at least cut

If Egyptian-Israeli peace talks can be put back together, the President might defeat the move to block the sale. But if the talks continue downhill Congress will harden against selling weapons to Arabs. That is true despite Saudi help in holding down the price of world oil and despite the fact that Saudi Arabia has now become by far the largest oil exporter to the U.S.

Israel's supporters on Capitol Hill fear the F-15s might be used against Israel in any future Mideast war. "Israel is really worried about the sale," a Senate strategist for the Israelis told us. Past opposition has cut back other U.S. arms sales to Arab countries, including Saudi

This time, administration officials are concerned about reaction in the oil kingdom if the Carter pledge cannot be fulfilled. The Saudis regard it as "a point of honor," one official told us, to receive the top-rated aircraft that would give them a small fraction of U.S. airpower supplied to

A footnote: Israel is quietly lob-bying for an extra $500 million in U.S. aid in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. Although President Carter decided not to put the extra money in his budget message to Congress, White House aides doubt Congress could resist voting most of it on top of the regular annual $1.8 billion in aid.

SEN. MURIEL HUMPHREY

Contrary to published reports that Muriel Humphrey resisted the invasion of privacy that would come with serving in the Senate, the real reason for the delay in her appointment to fill Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's seat the rest of the year Humphrey's seat the rest of the year was Minnesota politics.

go slow; gain small

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market posted a small gain in slow trading today while Wall Street awaited some expected bad news on the nation's balance of trade.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.73 at 765.85. Gainers outnumbered losers by better than a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government was due to report today on the nation's imports and exports for December and 1977 as a

Robert Strauss, President Carter's chief trade negotiator, said over the weekend the trade deficit for the year would be about $30 billion, five times bigger than the 1976 deficit

But his estimate was in line with others made some time ago, and brokers said some traders were buying on the belief that the market had already taken the news well into

Analysts also were looking toward Carter's news conference later today to see if he had anything special to say about the trade-deficit situation, which has been cited as a primary reason for recent weakness in the dollar in foreign exchange.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. announced today it has settled out of court a lawsuit by Oleta Gravitt Dixon over company benefits she claimed were owed to her. Mrs. Dixon was the wife of the late

T. O. Gravitt, who was the top Southwestern Bell executive in Texas when he committed suicide at his Dallas home in October 1974. She has since remarried and now James Barden, general attorney for Southwestern Bell, said the payment to Mrs. Dixon includes $30,282 in pension that accrued during more than than two years of litigation. The company also will pay $45,000 in legal costs to Mrs. Dixon.

Barden said the pension expense is provided under the company's benefit plan and the legal costs will be borne by the company and not passed on to telephone customers.

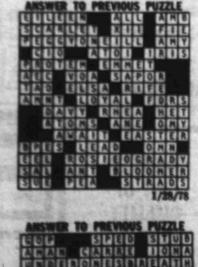

Sentence handed out

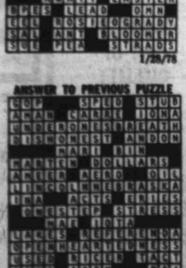

BIG SPRING - A 28-year-old man Friday received an eight-year probated sentence after being convicted Thursday in 118th District Court in Big Spring of involuntary manslaughter charges. Domingo Rios was found guilty in the automobile collision death of Maurine Ringener, 45, on May 14, 1977. Rios' work and military service records, including a Silver Star decoration, were introduced into evidence during the sentencing phase of the trial.

Latest legal trends may bring attorneys, consumers together

By DON McLEOD

WASHINGTON (AP) - A quiet revolution is brewing in the confines of the staid legal profession. Lawyers are coming out to where the people

This new approach promises cheaper legal services and more help for the average citizen, who often suffers because he needs a lawyer but for various reasons fails to consult Neighborhood lawyers who live and work among their freinds and neighbors, something which for the most part went out with buggy whips, may be coming back.

Storefront legal clinics, which post their prices up front and cater to the common man's problems, are cropping up

And millions of Americans are covered by the new legal insurance plans which guarantee services of a lawyer, or at least reduced rates, in return for pre-paid premiums or membership fees.

The trend is just a beginning toward breaking down traditional barriers between lawyers and most of the public. Twothirds of those people questioned in a recent study by the American Bar Association had never seen a lawyer or had consulted one just once.

Studies indicate that a lot of people fear lawyers and think that they will be fleeced if they hire one. The ABA survey found that 62 percent of the public thinks lawyers charge more than they are worth.

The Yellow Pages list nothing more than each lawyer's name, address and telephone number. Most consumers are unaware that more informative legal directories exist.

Consumer groups figure people lose millions of dollars each year by not getting legal advice, say, on redress of small frauds, a costly contract imprudently signed, a contract unfulfilled by the seller.

Meantime law schools are churning out 30,000 graduates a year and legal jobs are available for only slightly more than half of them, the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates.

"A lot of lawyers are starving while there are people who need their services and can't get them," says Sandy Dement, executive director of the National Resource Center for Consumers of Legal Services. 'There's no mechanism to bring them together." The prevailing distribution system is the law firm, anything from one lawyer to several hundred. It depends almost entirely on reputation and word-of-mouth reference for business. Until very recently, an unknown young lawyer trying to set up shop on his own was allowed to do nothing to draw business except beg established colleagues for referrals and leftover piecework. He couldn't reduce fees to draw clients. About the only way to acquire reputation and public exposure was to run for political office. But over the past three years traditional restrictions have given way, despite strong resistance from the legal establishment.

The first break came in 1975. The Supreme Court ruled that fixed minimum fee scales imposed by bar associations were illegal That enabled a lawyer to offer more attractive rates, but he had no way of telling the public. Advertising was banned by the bar in 1908 to restore some dignity and discipline to a profession whose members in that era hawked their services with all the zest - and often the scruples - of a sideshow barker.

A new generation of lawyers saw the ban not as consumer protection but as an establishment effort to avoid competition. They argued the prohibition was an unconstitutional abridgment of their right to free speech. Last June 27, in a 5-4 decision, the Supreme Court agreed.

That development cleared the way for a bold new approach to delivering legal services, through the legal clinic especially. Legal clinics need the volume that only advertising can generate, and they have tripled since last spring to about 60. The number is

"Many comparatively simple matters can well be handled by lawyers through the clinic method. says William Spann of Atlanta president of the American Bar Association. "This (method) probably will prove more effective and less expensive because they'll be streamlined to handle this type of matter."

The Supreme Court's advertising decision resulted from charges brought by the Arizona bar against John Bates and Van O'Steen, two young lawyers who opened a clinic in Phoenix about three years ago.

Bates and O'Steen wanted to provide quality legal service to people of moderate income by charging low fees, but they knew they could do it only with a volume business. They estimate a clinic must advertise at least once a month to draw enough

An ad placed in the Arizona Republic early last year drew the disapproval of the state bar and the Arizona Supreme Court, which wanted to suspend the two from practice before the U.S. Supreme Court rescued them.

The breakthrough on advertising promises another possibility in legal services, the return of the neighborhood lawyer,

A recent survey conducted by George Washington University showed that many young lawyers want to advertise, largely because it would help them establish independnt

'There's no way to open up an office around the corner off Main Street if the people don't know you're there," says Miss Dement. "Now a lawyer can probably do that. "He might put out a flyer in the neighborhood, 'Drop in for coffee. Do you have a will? You probably should It'll only cost you $25,' "she says. "He might put an ad in the little county newspaper.' The other major development in legal services is insurance. Already about 2 million people are covered by prepaid legal service plans and at least 2 million more participate in group legal arrangements.

The Resource Center estimates there are at least 300 comprehensive group legal insurance plans and another 5,000 to 6,000 plans providing partial or specialized service.

These range from the new coverage which the United Auto Workers announced for about 150,000 Chrysler employees to a plan by the Amalgamated Transit Union in Toledo to defend member bus drivers against traffic tickets.

There are two main types of group plans. One is similar to health insurance. Members pay about $40 to $90 a year and are insured for their legal needs. Coverage varies, based on premiums paid.

The second type requires no prepaid premiums although there may be a membership fee. Such an organization retains lawyers who agree to serve its members at specified rates, usually below normal.

The labor unions pioneered this approach, and many union contracts now contain legal services provisions along with hospitalization and pension funds. In 1976 the federal tax code was amended to exempt premiums paid for legal insurance and benefits paid under the plans.

The absorbed interest of the profession right now, however, centers on the implications of the Supreme Court's advertising decision. In lifting the blanket ban, the court left it to the legal profession and individual states to guard against

Standard Oil outlines facts on U.S. energy

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following information on the energy situation in America is reprinted from a Standard Oil Co. of California publication being distributed nationwide by the com-

Oil and natural gas, which have fueled America's economic growth for generations, currently supply three-fouths of the nation's energy requirements.

Moreover, in the next two decades, oil and natural gas will continue to be the mainstay resources on which the

> ENERGY OIL & GAS

U.S. must rely for its energy needs. Alternate energy sources such as coal and nuclear power must be developed, but cannot be counted on to reverse the U.S.'s heavy dependence on oil and gas until well into the

Other energy sources, such as solar, may achieve major importance - but not before the year 2000.

However, America now finds itself in a dilemma The nation has become increasingly dependent on oil imports because domestic petroleum supplies have been shrinking while consumption has continued to grow.

Today, the U.S. imports about 45 percent of the oil it uses - which has created a severe economic drain on balance of payments. Even the new production from Alaska's North Slope will only temporarily halt the rise of oil imports.

However, reliance on foreign sources can be limited by accelerated development of domestic petroleum and other energy resources, coupled with a well-conceived program of energy conservation.

The only alternatives to the urgent development of domestic petroleum and other conventional fuels - coal and nuclear power — in the im-mediate future are either a greater dependence on foreign oil or reductions in the energy supplies availabe to support the growth of the American economy, employment and its standard of living.

The nation is using up its proved petroleum reserves faster than new supplies are being found. Existing domestic oil and gas fields are being

And many promising sources of oil and gas cannot be economically developed under current controlled price structures.

This trend of declining domestic reserves is nothing new.

Since 1970, U.S. proved reserves of crude oil have fallen off at the rate of more than 1 billion barrels per year. For every 10 barrels produced, fewer than six barrels of proved reserves have been added from new discoveries, extensions and revisions.

U.S. oil consumption has increased 19 percent while production has decreased 16 percent in the years 1970-76: Even including the huge Prudhoe Bay discovery on Alaska's North Slope, total U.S. proved oil reserves are below where they were 10 years ago.

Domestic production today is meeting only 53 percent of the nation's oil product requirements.

According to the American Petroleum Institute, 1976 was a bad year for reserves. Approximately 1.1 billion barrels of reserves were added during 1976 from new discoveries, extensions and revisions - but these were significantly offset by 2.8 billion barrels of production. As a result, proved crude oil reserves dropped in 1976 to an estimated 30.9 billion barrels.

Not included in crude oil reserves are proved natural gas liquids reserves. During 1976, they actually increased slightly, from 6.3 to 6.4 billion barrels. However, this reserve id down 2.2 billion barrels of 26 per-cent from the 1967 high of 8.6 billion Proved U.S. natural gas reserves have declined each year since 1967 except for 1970 when the still undeliverable gas in the Prudhoe Bay field was added.

This decline results primarily from federal controls on the wellhead price of natural gas sold in intestate commerce.

These contols have persistently kept the price at unrealistic low levels. As a result, demand was stimulated while the effort to develop new supplies was depressed. Demand for other fuels such as oil and coal also was dampened as consumers shifted to natural gas - the nation's most underpriced and oversold fuel. Lacking the incentives to search for and develop new supplies, many producers left the business, turned their attention to other investments or concentrated on sales in the unregulated intrastate market.

The predictable result: beginning 1968, natural gas production began to exceed new reserves added (excluding Prudhoe Bay.) After peaking in 1973, U.S. natural gas production has steadily declined.

Proved natural gas reserves con-tinued to drop in 1976. They declined 12 trillion cubic feet to an estimated 216 trillion cubic feet, as reported by the American Gas Association. This represents only 11 years of production at the 1976 level — only 10 years if the currently undeveloped Arctic Alaska reserves are excluded. Such declines in proved reserves could lead to the incorrect assumption that little oil and gas remains to be found and developed in the U.S.

Nothing could be further from the

The fact is - there are large undiscovered resources of oil and gas yet to be found in the Continental U.S., Alaska and the Outer Continental

Today's pessimism about the future of domestic oil and natural gas production has many precedents in history, dating back to the 19th cen-

For example: The U.S. Geological Survey declared there is "little or no chance for oil in Kansas or Texas" in

In 1914, a U.S. Bureau of Mines official forecast "a total future production of only 5.7 billion barrels." In 1920, the USGS director said that the peak in domestic production was almost reached. In 1939, Interior Department radio broadcasts warned that the U.S. oil supply would last "only 13 years."

In 1949, the Secretary of Interior stated that the "end of the U.S. oil supply was almost in sight."

Today the federal government is voicing similarly dire predictions. But such predictions are dead wrong, says the American Petroleum Institute and the USGS. It is granted

Promotion announced

GRANDFALLS - Donald Wayne Posey of Grandfalls has been promoted to general manager of operations for KontrolKem Division of McGee Chemical Service, Inc., reports Joe McGee, executive vice president.

Posey was district sales manager before his promotion. His responsibilities include com-panywide supervision of truck treating and personnel, and plant operations.

Nevertheless, there is considerably more to be found. And the petroleum industry is prepared to do just that - given the proper incentives. There are tremendous amounts of oil in the ground in existing fields that are not presently economically recoverable. They are not now recoverable because the costs of production primarily through enhanced recover processes — cannot be justified at current controlled crude prices.

Geologists are convinced there are large resources of oil and natural gas still to be found in the U.S.

Torres decides to decline GOMA position

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — For State Rep. Ruben Torres it was a case of thanks, but no thanks. The Brownsville Democrat Sunday said he opted to turn down the directorship of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA) because it might prove "embarrassing" to Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who ap-

Americans use courts system

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer An increasing number of Americans are taking their complaints to small claims courts, but there are indications that the system designed to help them does not always work.

Small claims courts are used to handle such things as landlord-tenant conflicts and business-consumer disputes over goods and services. The atmosphere is informal; you present your own case to a judge. You usually do not need a lawyer and, in some areas, may be prohibited from using one. There is no jury.

A two-year study of 15 small claims courts, reported in a recent issue of the American Bar Association publication Judge's Journal, found that the courts are meeting the goal of providing speedy and inexpensive justice. But the authors of the report also found serious deficiencies.

Steven Weller and John Ruhnka said the cost to individuals could be cut through more efficient scheduling of cases so people who use the court spend as little time as possible away from their regular

They also said more active participation by judges would lower costs by making attorneys unnecessary at trial in most small claims cases. Weller and Ruhnka said that lawyers' roles should be limited to presenting additional points of law or evidence at the end of a case. All questioning of witnesses should be done by judges, they said.

"This could retain the benefits of attorney participation in more complex cases, while avoiding the potential for an attorney to harass an opposing witness or party," the two men said. Other suggestions in their report include bringing judges up to date on new developments in federal and state consumer protection laws and getting the courts more involved in collection of judgments.

The lack of follow-up action by the court to make sure that judgments are paid is one of the most frequent criticisms of existing laws on small claims

A limited study by the New York Public Interest Research Group of judgments awarded in one borough of New York City found that over 43 percent of the individuals who had won their cases never

A collection provision is included in the "Model Consumer Justice Act" proposed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States which has called for a complete overhaul of small claims courts.

The chamber made its proposal 18 months ago. A spokeswoman for the 60,000-member business organization said recently there had been some progress, although there is still a long way to go. She said Arkansas and Kentucky had passed small claims legislation in 1977 along the lines of that recommended by the chamber. A similar bill is pending in New Mexico and the spokeswoman said she hoped more states would act this year.

His decision came only four days after he told Briscoe's office he would take the reins of a job that has become a statewide local point because of alleged corruption and internal strife.

Torres first announced his decision to decline the position to the Brownsville Herald. The newspaper, in its Sunday editions, said the legislator issued a statement following an interview that dealt with Torres' business relationship with Robert Massey.

Massey, also a Brownsville resident, has been indicted on charges of felony theft. The indictment came after a court of inquiry in this South Texas city launched a probe into alleged misuses of federal Manpower funds by some organizations with

Prosecutor got 'cold shoulder'

DALLAS (AP) - In the hectic days immediately following President John Kennedy's assassination, memos composed by a then-assistant U.S. attorney claim federal prosecutors received a "cold shoulder" when trying to get information from the FBI about the murder.

The attorney, identified by the Dallas Morning News in a copyrighted Sunday story as Tim Timmons Jr., attributed the alleged freeze-out to tension between U.S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

One memo indicates the slowdown in the flow of information Timmons received from the local FBI began after agents here received a call from Hoover.

However, G. Gordon Shanklin, then-head of the Dallas FBI office, said Sunday night he received no such orders from Hoover.

"I know nothing about that," he said. "Of course, things were really moving in those days and I think you could see that we wouldn't want to put something out before we really had something.

At the time of the assassination, Timmons was assigned as liaison between the FBI and U.S. Attorney Barefoot Sanders. He said for two days following the shooting, he had access to all FBI data coming into the office.

However, on the third day, accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald was shot down by nightclub owner Jack Ruby. Timmons' memos state Hoover called the Dallas FBI office the same day and orders were given to bar him from the office.

'Although I wasn't present when the call came in, I was advised by other agents that Shank (Shanklin) got the call from Hoover," Timmons said late Sun-

Despite the slowdown, Timmons said he thought the FBI investigation was conducted properly. He especially had high praise for Shanklin and the local

In his statement, Torres cited "innuendos . . . raised by the press" and the possibility of "guilt by association" as reasons for declining the GOMA job. He also mentioned family reasons as another factor in declining the position.

Free, easy attitude brings problems tomorrow

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lifestyles have changed in the past several years and more teen-agers are sexually active today. This six-part series examines the problems associated with that sexuality.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

"If it feels good, do it."
"Do it in a pickup."
"Cowboys make better lovers."

"Swimmers have a better stroke." 'Long distance runners do it

Bumper stickers with messages such as these can be seen on vehicles almost anywhere in the country, or in Midland. And the message is the same-sex.

It also reflects the general attitude of teen-agers toward sex-do it now and don't worry about it temerrew.

While the teen-agers are "doing it if it feels good," they are setting themselves up for numerous medical problems in the tomorrows to come.

The only way for a teen-ager to avoid facing medical problems is to avoid having sexual intercourse. But, more than 11 million teen-agers in the United States are not taking that route. As a result, more girls at a younger age are forced to become involved with possible medical problems involved with birth control or a pregnancy, whether or not she carries the baby to term or ter-

The girl is not alone in her medical problems. There is a big one facing both sexes and that is venereal

The medical problems are the same for all teen-aged girls, whether or not they are married, according to Al Moran, executive vice president of Planned Parenthood in New York

Speaking at the Regional Conference on Teen-agers and Family Planning in Kansas City, Mo., Moran said the New York Times had published a story which reported that 30 percent of all births one year in that city are illegitimate.

Differentiating between married and unmarried when it comes to a teen-aged girl who is pregnant makes difference, Moran said. "The and gives birth is irrelevant. That doesn't deal with whether the infant will die or go through life with physical impairments because of the young age at which she bore him. The implication is what that birth will do to that young mother," he said.

Returning to doctor

One of the first problems comes with getting the teen-ager back into the health care system, Dr. James Humphreys, a Midland physician, said. As a child, they visit the doctor regularly for immunizations and with the normal childhood diseases. But, once they get past that stage, physicians seldom see the children until they are adults, Humphreys said, or until the teen-aged girl becomes pregnant.

To get back under a doctor's care, the girl often returns to the health care system through her family doctor or through a doctor the girl's mother uses. Getting proper health care is necessary to avoid medical problems which could develop during a teen-ager's pregnancy.

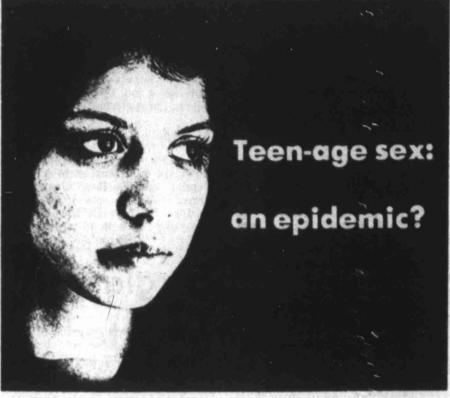

According to "11 Million Teenagers," a publication compiled by the Alan Guttmacher Institute, maternal death risk for the young teen-ager under the age of 15 is 60 percent higher than for a woman in her 20s. For the 15 to 19 year-olds, the risk is 13 percent higher.

Other statistics show the mother age 15 to 19 is twice as likely to die from hemorrhage and miscarriage and 1.5 times more likely to die from toxemia. Mothers under the age of 15 are 3.5 times more likely to die from toxemia.

Toxemia, or an abnormal condition associated with the presence of toxic substances in the blood, is cited "as a 'special hazard' of pregnancy among the very young because of lack of development of the endocrine system, emotional stress of such early pregnancies, poor diet and inadequate prenatal care," in "11 Million Teen-agers."

Risk to unborn child

Adding to the medical problems are risks to the unborn child. The booklet reports that babies of young teens are two to three times more likely to die in the first year. "About 6 percent of first babies born to girls under age 15 died in their first year." Babies born to 15-year-olds are two times more likely to die than babies born to mothers aged 20 to 24. A report prepared by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission states that "26 percent of all low-birth weight babies are born to adolescent mothers. Low birth weight is a major cause of infant mortality. Babies with low birth weight also suffer more illnesses, growth failure and physical handicaps than normal weight babies.

"The report also notes that premature births in this region number 489, a rate of 8.24 per 1,000 births, which is higher than Texas' premature birth rate of 7.80.

Getting adequate prenatal care helps in avoiding risks to the mother and child. But, the problem comes in getting the teen-ager back into the health care system

In the PBRPC report, the probability of babies being born in Texas without prenatal care is listed as 31/2 times greater for illegitimate babies than for other infants

"The unmarried mother faces obstacles in receiving adequate health care because she may be reluctant to seek help," the report states.

A graph in the publication shows that 39 babies were born in 1975 to women in Midland County who had received no prenatal care, or 3.4 percent of all births in the county that year. Another 62 were born to mothers who received no prenatal care until the seventh to ninth month of pregnancy. This accounted for 5.4 percent of the births.

While pregnancies among teenagers have been going up, so have the number of abortions. In times past, the cost of abortions could not be afforded by many citizens. Until the cutoff of Medicaid funds, more and more people were turning to abortion as a way out of an unwanted pregnancy. But, not even all the wealthy teens obtain abortions today, noted Molly Whittington with the Midland office of the Department of Human Resources.

"Sometimes the girl does not know she is pregnant until it's too late for an abortion. Or, the girl fails to tell her soon," she said parents about her pregnancy until it is too late for the girl to do anything but carry the baby to term," the social services director said.

Midland physicians perform few abortions, according to Dr. Humphreys who estimated the most as being about 20. The reason is that no Midland doctor is equipped in his or her office to perform an abortion, and they must be done in the hospital, which raises the cost of the procedure.

Two doctors in Odessa can do the abortions in their office, and there also is a clinic in Lubbock, Dr. Humphreys noted.

A report on legal abortions in the country compiled by Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc. shows in Texas 17,340 abortions were performed in 1973; 37,710 in 1974, and 51,210 in 1975.

If performed in the first trimester, or three months, there is little risk of complications. "The risk increases with the length of the pregnancy," Dr. Humphreys said. "After the first three months, the risk of complications with hemorrhage or infection goes up to almost 25 percent."

Even if the girl decides to use contraceptives, there sometimes are health risks involved.

One risk voiced at the regional conference in Kansas City is that if a young teen starts on birth control pills, her bone growth stops at that point.

Theoretically, that can be true, Dr. Humphreys said. But, by the time most teens become sexually active to want the pill, they have achieved their full bone growth.

Many times the pill is not what the teen-ager needs, Dr. Humphreys said. If the girl goes in for birth control pills and she is having sexual intercourse only three or four times a month, the pill is like overkill. "There are other methods of birth control and they need to know this," the doctor said.

Mildred Ford with the Midland office of Planned Parenthood also said she has not given contraceptives to some girls who have requested

"I have sent them away without any contraceptives if the examination and talk showed they are not sexually active and are not planning on it

Despite all the precautions the girl may take, there still is one health hazard which both she and her partner face-venereal disease. According to health officials, Midland has its fair share of the disease.

VD rate high

"The VD rate is very high in Midland," Mrs. Ford said. "We find at least three cases a week in our clinic, and sometimes it is three in one

In 1976, Midland County reported 522 cases of gonorrhea and 25 cases of syphilis, according to the Texas Department of Health Resources. This was more than Ector County. with 493 cases of gonorrhea and 10 cases of syphilis.

For the period Jan. 1 through Oct. 8, 1977, Midland had reported 368 cases of gonorrhea and 17 syphilis cases.

Breaking it down by months star-ting with last July, Midland had 53 cases of gonorrhea, no syphilis; August- 49 gonorrhea, one syphilis; September-41 gonorrhea, no syphilis; October-15 gonorrhea, one syphilis, and November-75 gonorrhea and five syphilis.

These figures, though, do not give the full picture of the number of VD cases in the county. While the Midland City-County Health Department treats more than 97 percent of the area cases reported to the state, this is maybe 25 percent of the total number of cases in the county, Dr. Humphreys noted.

While the state recognizes only five types of VD, there are more than 100 types. The most common form is herpes progenitalis, not gonorrhea as some people think, according to Dr. Stuart I. Draper, director of Midland, Ector, Howard and Andrews counties health departments.

'With the free and easy society, you would be surprised how little some people know about it (VD)," Dr. Draper said.

Pregnancy, toxemia, abortion, venereal disease. How many teenagers consider these health problems they may be facing tomorrow at the same time they are "doing it if it feels

Woman tells her secret to 'style

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - For so many years so many friends have told Lyn Revson she has style that finally she acknowledged that maybe they were right. At that point, with encouragement from her good friend Lee Guber, the theatrical producer and Barbara Walters' former husband, she set about recording that "style" and how she acquired it.

The result, less than a year later, is a book called "Lyn Revson's World of Style - How to Join It and Live It" published by Wyden Books. It's a howto book, but this one is stylish. "Certainly I think that I have my own very personal Lyn way of running my life, and I know that my way works for me and the people I value. There's nothing complicated or mysterious about my way, because I'm not a complicated or mysterious person. In all areas of my life - in fashion, beauty, entertaining, traveling, running a home, and just about everything else - I always tried to find the simplest, best, most direct way of getting things done," Mrs. Revson writes on page 1 of her first book. To illustrate her point, the photo on the dust jacket shows Lyn with every freckle showing, her windblown, "sand in my teeth," as photographed by her friend Richard Avedon at her favorite time of the day, sunset, at Jones Beach on Long Island, N.Y.

The book, she says, represents her personal philosophy, which is "using your head and making the most of what you have, then melting and immersing yourself in the present situation and enjoying and learning

"It's worked well for me," she tells her readers, "and I pass it along to

If you follow the chronicles of the socially active around the world, you probably first became aware of Lyn when she became Mrs. Charles Revson, the wife of the aggressive, volatile late cosmetics tycoon. That's when her personal style bloomed and Lyn Revson became a celebrity, the beloved of the paparazzi and the columnists. Lyn lived in a sumptuous apartment that had once belonged to her husband's cosmetics rival, Helena Rubenstein. She played hostess to her friends (and his business associates) during the season aboard the Revson yacht, did needlepoint that was then the "in" busywork, went everywhere the Beautiful People go.

But her style had been set way earlier. She seems to have been born with the right determination, discipline and drive. Even before the Revson money allowed her to become the late Norman Norell's best customer (she recently donated 150 Norells to two New York museums), the girl from the Bronx preferred to buy the most expensive dress she could afford even if she had to wear it again and again. Early in her life she discovered long hair was more becoming to her and she's kept it that way. Years ago she decided her legs were good and a daytime hem 19 inches from the floor (midknee for her) showed them off. No fashion dictator could then budge her decision. Her social problems have always been solved with good common sense and consideration for others. She taught her three children to pick up their toys, never expect servants to do things for them.

Not too long ago Lyn was on the road promoting her book. Los Angeles was one of the last stops and she admitted it was hard work. "But I like it to be hard," she added with relish. "I'm an upbeat person. I'm happy," she says during her nonstop conversational marathon. It must be true because there seems to be no rancor over her divorce from Revson, which had tongues wagging in Beautiful People circles for months. According to one story, on their 10th anniversary Revson gave her a diamond bracelet and that afternoon his attorney phoned to tell her Revson wanted a divorce. Lyn's only comment is that she made progress with that marriage. "It lasted 10 years. My first ended after 9. I was married at 17 and a half. Genius...huh?"

Her first husband was Kenneth Sheresky who's "in the restaurant business" and is the father of her three children. They're still friends.

The children are grown and well on their way with their mother's blessings. She's always told them to "do things for themselves...not for

After her divorce Lyn moved into an upper Eastside New York apartment. She has a staff of two but "there's always something to do."

And "my girl tells me I work harder than she does." The life-style is still comfortable, but now the living is easier and more relaxed.

She gives money to certain charities and causes, does much more for ones that touch her deeply. "I work for Gov. Hugh Carey and Robert Wagner Jr." (Wagner's father and stepmother are Lyn's good friends.) "Other than that, everything else is for children, I love working with them." But her forte is really fund raising. "I don't ask often, but when I do I ask big. And when my name is on something I work."

first dinner-dance benefit in 1963. It raised $300,000. Last year she was ticket cochairman for the event that took in $1 million.

She chaired Lenox Hill Hospital's

"This year I'm raising money for an auditorium at New York University and soon I'm taking on Phoenix House, a drug rehabilitation program for youngsters."

In spite of two failed marriages, her book ends on a note of hope on that subject: "I believe that a man and a woman can be happy in marriage. I believe there can be love and fidelity and trust between them. It takes work and concentration but it is possible." Would Lyn try it again? The answer is a definite "Yes."

DEAR ABBY: Re: the secretary whose boss asked her to return (on her lunch hour) a girdle his wife had purchased. The secretary was humiliated because, after standing in line for a long time, she was informed that undergarments were not returnable. You should have told that secretary that if her boss ever asked her to return anything again, she should tell him that her lunch hours were already taken up with her own errands, but she would be glad to accommodate his wife ON COM-PANY TIME. If the boss allowed her to do so

(which is extremely doubtful), the secretary should take her sweet time to perform the errand. I assure you, that would be the last time the boss would ask his secretary to return anything.-ALOHA IN HANALEI,

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent

HARTFORD, CONN. (AP) - In one of those less than landmark decisions, but one that could point the way our society is headed, the Connecticut Superior Court has ruled that giving someone the "digitus impudicus" legal lingo for "the finger" - is not punishable as an obscenity.

The case involved a high school student, not necessarily a Latin scholar, who wiped off the rear window of a school bus to deliver an upraised middle finger to a state trooper pulled up behind at an intersection.

Smokey saw red even after the driver started up and turned off his flashing red lights. He turned on his siren, pulled the bus over to the side of the road and made a collar, as they say down at headquarters, of the finger gesticulator who had been fingered by his classmates.

The Court of Common Pleas convicted the youth of having made an obscene gesture. On appeal, the Superior Court overturned the decision unanimously, ruling that an obscene gesture had to be "erotic...and appeal to purient interest in sex," while the finger at most could only arouse anger, not "sexual desire."

"Digitus impudicus" is Latin for lewd finger and reputed to have been the doomed gladiators' answer to Nero's thumbs down. The learned judges, however, noted that it was a disrespectful gesture of even more ancient origin, citing the case of Diogenes, the fourth century B.C. cynic, who gave a digital uplift to the great orator Demosthenes.

This put him almost two and a quarter milleniums ahead of Nelson D. Rockefeller, who similarly signaled his disapproval of platform oratory at the Republican convention in Kansas City a while back.

In England the upraised middle digit is known as the "Harvey Smith." after the great equestrian star of the same name who saluted the judges at a horse show with what ever after he insisted was a victory sign. A royal connotation also attaches itself to this imperious if not imperial gesture' since Price Philip, Prince Charles and Princess Anne have all been thought to have greeted their subjects, especially photographers of the realm, with it on ceremonious occa-

Others associate the upraised middle finger with the game of tennis, a championship gesture favored by Jimmy Connors and Illie Nastase to signify their total unconcern for the pronouncements of the line judges.

Often it is followed by rude noises from the gallery, which in turn is treated to further pantomine from the stars in the center court. At Wimbledon such scenes are rarely followed by cries of "good show, old

During the 1973 Yom Kippur War, Israeli paratroopers down on the Suez Canal front devised a double digital affront to their Egyptian enemies on the opposite bank. The ritual called for holding aloft the middle finger in vertical thrusts and then in horizontal jabs, followed by the instructions, in Hebrew: "that's for you, and that's for your camel.'

The law is always a complex entity, and the Connecticut Superior Court decision fails to shed any light on whether the umpires erred in tossing Ted Williams out of a game one day up in Boston. More than a finger was

The Splendid Splinter had struck out with the bases loaded, an outrage that was greeted with an avalanche of boos and seat cushions from the Fenway Park bleacherites. According to the evidence delivered by Red Smith, the world's most literate sports writer, "Williams responded with an ancient Roman gesture, reminiscent of a man with a particularly pesky mosquito in the crook of his elbow, that included everyone from home plate to the right field foul flag." The umpires signaled him to the showers with wagging thumbs reminiscent of hysterical hitchhikers.

In Sicily, where the Godfather was baptized, the body language so eloquently spoken by Williams is credited with keeping down unemployment among the island's gravediggers. Boston, the Hub of American culture, responded on that historic occasion with words unknown to Longfellow and Emerson until Mark Twain arrived fresh from the mining creeks. Or was it from Hartford, where Twain later lived, not far from the courthouse? Anyhow, Twain would have had no trouble understanding what Ted Williams was trying to convey above the din.

For all its fine Latin and deep scholarship into the Diogenes version of the silent raspberry, the Connecticut Superior court has yet to take a stand on what freedoms are at stake when a proponent, face to face with a deponent, attaches the tip of his thumb to the end of his (own) nose and begins playing the William Tell Overture on an imaginary flugel horn. Chief Justice Oliver Wendell ting?-V.M. Holmes, in a classic case, ruled that 'the freedom of your fist ends where Other antiseptics are not my nose begins." Perhaps it is time for the high court to consider wounds any more. They guidelines for determining justice in may cause an allergic was allergic to chocolate cases where both nose and fist (with reaction. A number of inpointed thumb) are property of the offending party. The moving finger writes but often says more when its message is conveyed in sign language.

'Digitus impudicus' Presidents lack budget control By WALTER R. MEARS be controlled to give any president a real handle on stood a chance in Congress.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Tucked away in President Carter's budget is the rather plaintive observation that most of it really isn't his at all because of spending commitments he couldn't change.

The administration is trying to figure out how to grasp more of the levers on the federal spending machine, a task that has defied presidents before.

Despite their efforts, the share of the federal budget mandated by law and by contract has increased steadily.

According to the administration, 74.9 percent of Carter's $500.2 billion budget was legally committed before he could apply his own spending priorities. In addition, there are expenditures which Congress is certain to renew, and that puts a far larger share of government dollars beyond the reach of administration budget draftsmen. James T. McIntyre Jr., Carter's budget director, estimates that there is really only about $20 billion on which the president has free rein.

The rest, he figures, is subject to old commitments or the certain knowledge that Congress will make new ones. For example, Carter can adjust the defense budget, but the bulk of it is locked in, certain to be renewed every year.

The prior commitments include continuing programs, like the $108 billion for Social Security. existing contracts and $40 billion interest on the national debt. According to the administration, this year's figures indicate "that the relatively uncontrollable portion of the budget will continue to represent 75 percent to 80 percent of the total." 'Without legislation to restrain the growth in such programs, attempts to control total budget outlays fall on an increasingly smaller portion of the budget," the Carter budget warns. But the administration has not offered any major proposals to curb the programs that make spending automatic. One official said there really isn't much that can be done except to chip away at the total.

Carter is instituting a longrange budget planning system he hopes will provide greater control in the future. "With a longer planning horizon, the options for changing both the scope and direction of federal programs can be expanded substantially," his

"If we decided today we needed another power plant, these kids would be in college before it could be ready."

"Most people are surprised to learn how long it takes to build an electric generating plant.

It takes about eight years to locate and purchase the right site, order equipment, plan and build a lignite-fueled power plant, obtain approvals from all regulatory agencies, and then test the plant's operation carefully. It takes even longer for a nudear-fueled plant — 10 to 12 years.

Red Cross to start courses Wednesday

The Midland Red Cross is offering several courses in first aid and caropulmonary resuscitation beginning Wednesday.

Filmed first aid, standard first aid and personal safety, advanced first aid and emergency care and car-diopulmonary resuscitation courses

The filmed first aid and CPR courses are designed so that if a per-son misses the two-hour session for which he registered, he may attend another session that week and receive credit and finish the course.

Filmed first aid will be offered as follows. On Mondays for four weeks beginning Feb. 6 there will be classes 9 to 11 a.m., 1 to 3 p.m., and 7 to 9 p. m. The same courses will be taught on Thursdays from 1 to 3 p. m. beginning Feb. 9, and on Fridays from 9 to 11 a.m. beginning Feb. 10

A special session will be held from 9:30 a. m. to 1:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 7 and 8.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation will be offered from 7 to 9 p. m. on Tuesdays beginning Feb. 7, from 9 to 11 a.m. on Thursdays beginning Feb. 2, and from 1 to 3 p. m. on Fridays beginning Feb. 3.

Standard first aid and personal safety will be offered from 7 to 10 p.m. on Wednesdays from Feb. 1 to

All of the above courses will be taught at the chapter house, 2306 Elizabeth St.

Advanced first aid and emergency care will be taught on Monday and Friday nights beginning Feb. 3, from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m., at the Central Fire Station Training Room. One session will be conducted at the Midland High School swimming pool.

These courses are open to the public. There is no charge for instruction, but textbooks must be pur-chased. For more information call Red Cross at 684-6161.

Strange coup foils defensive maneuver

Many years ago Ely Culbertson called a certain bridge play "The Coup Without a Name." Later bridge writers have called it the Scissors Coup because it cuts communication between the opponents.

ANSWER: Pass. You have an op-tional opening bid, but should pass because your long suit is a minor and because too much of your strength is in the form of jacks. Change both jacks to low cards and give yourself A-Q instead of A-10 of spades, and you would open bidding with one club.

Job system 'bureaucratic mess'

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal personnel system is delaying Social Security disability payments to sick and jobless workers, impeding the war on highway deaths, inflating the government payroll and protecting goof-offs from being fired.

It once ordered about $5,000 in back pay for a postal worker who was fired for shooting a colleague in the stomach at a Manhattan post office. It sent a Commerce Department manager through a 21month-long maze of paperwork to fire an $8,000-ayear secretary who consistently failed to show up for work and who lied about having doctors' appointments.

It pays its blue-collar workers an average of 8 percent more than their counterparts in private enterprise, by the government's reasoning. But it pays its top managers thousands of dollars a year ess than many could earn in similar corporate jobs.

It rates 98 percent of its white-collar employees "satisfactory" and most of the rest "outstanding," and it gives periodic merit raises to 99.3 percent of them (in addition to yearly raises to compensate for

In short, according to top federal executives interviewed by The Associated Press, the system isn't working the way it is supposed to work.

The civil service system was originally set up in 1883 to protect the public from the historic abuses of the spoils system, in which the victorious political party awarded federal jobs to its own members as the spoils of victory."

In theory, the present system provides a corps of non-partisan, professional workers selected and promoted on the basis of merit and paid at levels comparable to private industry.

The president and his assistants are allowed to put political appointees in the top 2,200 or so policymaking jobs, where they can be fired at will. The bulk of the remaining 2.8 million civilians in the executive branch enjoy something approaching lifetime tenure, and are supposed to run the government in accordance with policies set at the

So much for theory. Throughout the federal government, in case after case, managers say they keep inefficient employees on the public payroll rather than firing them because civil service rules make it too difficult. Result: taxpayers support the inefficient ones while their work falls on thhe shoulders of colleagues, whose own morale sometimes suffers. It is so difficult to fire or discipline a federal employee for laziness or inefficiency that Leonard Reed, a 24-year veteran of the civil service, called the federal government "the incompetent's best friend" in an article in the Washington Monthly magazine.

A former Washington journalist who recently accepted a federal management post said: "It is just a whole lot worse than I thought. I always thought that the number of drones was about the same in the public sector as in the private. I no longer think so." "It's a real impediment," said the official, who asked not to be named. "I have repeatedly asked my very best career people, and I have some real winners, 'How can I get rid of X?' They all say, 'You won't live that long.

Federal managers often find it easier to transfer, gnore or even promote inefficient employees than to fire them. Others find the rules make it easier to eliminate a persons' job, and them with it, than to fire them outright. Tales regularly surface of federal shunted into do-nothing jobs just to get them out of

The appeals system, elaborate as it is, doesn't completely guard against improper political hirings or improper firings of "whistle-blowers" who embarass their bosses by publicizing waste or other abuses in their agency. Employee unions say it is too easy to fire someone for minor rules infractions.

President Carter feels that unless changes are made he cannot hope to fulfill his campaign promise to make the federal government more efficent.

"Even the best-organized government will only be as effective as the people who carry out its policies," he said in his State of the Union address to Congress.

There are a host of other complaints about the "For this reason, I consider civil service reform to be absolutely vital.

The president probably can count on widespread public support for civil service changes. Polls indicate most Americans believe federal employees are overpaid, underworked and virtually impossible Says the president's chief political poll-taker Patrick Cadell: "The feeling about efficiency in government is really a strong one. ... I suspect there is very good support for an initiative in that area."

Jay Haas earns golf rest on Mondays

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Married life will be a little simpler for Jay Haas. It's never really easy for the touring golf pros, who follow a gypsy existence in an endless series of

But it is easier when you can plan your schedule. And bright, 24-year-old Jay Haas, who plans to be married next winter, solved a lot of problems and potential problems with his frontrunning victory in the Andy Williams-

San Diego Open. The victory, the first in his brief. two-year tour career, was worth $40,000 from the total purse of $200,000 and carried some other very important dividends. It lifts him out of the ranks of qualifiers for 12 months. And, with assured appearances in the Masters and Tournament of Champions, virtually assures him of a spot in this year's top 60 money winners and an exemption for all of 1979.

"You really can't appreciate how much that means," said Haas, a former national collegiate champion from Wake Forest. "You can plan your schedule. You can take some time off without losing your exemption for the next tournament. You don't have to worry about being somewhere on Monday to qualify. "I can't begin to tell you how important this is to me "Almost anybody out here (on the tour) will tell you that the exemption is the most important thing you can have.

He nailed it down with a front-running final round of 2-under-par 70 that made him a 3-stroke winner at 278, 10 shots under par on the 7.047yard South course at Torrey Pines.

Tanner's exercise fails

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — So much for running and jumping, bicycling and practicing six hours a day. You need more than that to beat Jimmy Connors for a tennis championship.

Showing how vastly their approaches to the game differ, the irrepressible Connors downed Roscoe Tanner 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 Sunday in the $225,000 U.S. Pro Indoor tennis tournament.

The 26-year-old Tanner talked all week about his austere six-week training grind under the direction of former U.S. Davis Cup captain Dennis Ralston. Tanner had felt that it made him stronger, more disciplined, ready for the likes of Connors. He played well all week even knocking out Sweden's Bjorn Borg - until Sunday. Connors simply stroked his fellow Californian into submission in straight sets of the best-of-five final for the $35,000 first prize. Not even Tanner's big serve — he had 16 aces against Connors - could save him.

The 25-year-old Connors didn't knock Tanner's training grind.

"Some guys need that type of thing. I'm sure," said the topseeded Connors. "Myself, I don't. I get more out of a twoout-of-three set practice match. I run and jump a little. But too much and you leave your game behind you.

"I need competition. The more I play the better I play. I could go out and play with my Mom and do just as good. She just hits balls out of a basket to me," Connors declared. "I just play my game until death do us part. Tanner, of course, had nothing to be ashamed of for his week's work. He eliminated Syd Ball, Zeljko Franulovic, Ilie Nastase, Eddie Dibbs and Borg enroute to a confrontation with Connors. He left with a $17,500 runner-up check.

The 26-year-old Tanner felt, however, that his earlier opposition set him up for Connors. Nastase, Dibbs and Borg hit with a lot of topspin, a slower ball that gave Tanner time to make adjustments.

"Jimmy hits the ball hard and straight at you," Tanner explained. "As a result I was late on a lot of shots. I have to get quicker. He (Connors) played well. But that's what makes him the toughest guy in the world to beat.

Connors noted that Tanner didn't play as well Sunday as he had the rest

Irish slug Terps, 69-54

By The Associated Press

It was just like the Atlantic Coast Conference, Lefty Driesell said - a lot of crowd noise, television, a tough opponent and some familiar faces. The Maryland coach took everything in stride, except the final "It's been a while since I've been beaten like this," he said, "and it's hard for me to accept it. WHAT DRIESELL had to swallow Sunday was a 69-54 beating from

Notre Dame, the nation's fifth-ranked college basketball team. "I don't have much to say except we got beaten by a much better team." said the Maryland coach, who has reason to be tight-lipped these days. The addition of the heralded Albert King theoretically gave Driesell one of the strongest teams in the ACC this year. But his Terps have truly been turtles so far, losing six games in their last eight starts, many of them to conference opponents. IT DOESN'T help his ego, either, to play teams like Notre Dame in nonconference games.

"Maryland has a lot of talent," pointed out Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "They are like us a month ago, they need that big win. They just have to beat somebody good.

Phelps referred to Notre Dame's slump in December during which the Fighting Irish lost to Indiana, Kentucky and San Francisco in a four-

AMONG THE Maryland-killers in Notre Dame's noisy, jampacked Athletic Convocation Center was freshman Tracy Jackson, who scored 11 points in a reserve role. Jackson, an acquaintance of Driesell's from Maryland who was once recruited by the Terp coach, was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

Notre Dame was the only ranked team to play Sunday. On Saturday, second-ranked Marquette was beaten 68-64 by Chicago of Loyola, keying a tough day for Top Twenty teams.

Ninth-ranked Providence, 10thranked Syracuse and No. 13 Indiana State also lost. Providence was beaten by No. 19 DePaul 78-68, Syracuse lost a 77-73 decision to Rutgers and Indiana State fell to Creighton 72-64.

ELSEWHERE, No. 3 North Carolina routed Clemson 98-64; No. 4 Arkansas defeated Texas Tech 54-49; No. 6 UCLA whipped Southern Cal 83-71; No. 7 Michigan State outscored Ohio State 70-60 and No. 8 Kansas walloped Colorado 85-56. Also, No. 11 Duke beat East Carolina 105-82; No. 14 New Mexico outscored Utah 113-89; No. 15 Texas edged SMU 85-80; 16th-ranked Georgetown crushed New England College 80-30; No. 18 Virginia defeated North Carolina State 81-73 in overtime and No. 20 Illinois State overcame Southern Illinois-

Edwardsville 80-73. Top-ranked Kentucky's game with Tennessee and 12th-ranked Louisville's contest with Nevada-Las Vegas were postponed by bad weather. Maryland trailed by only 31-28 at halftime of the nationally televised game, but the Irish held the Terrapins to one field goal and one free throw in the first seven minutes of the second half, and their lead mushroomed to 18

"I thought defensively this was the best we've played all year," said Phelps. Andre Wakefield's 25 points led

Loyola of Chicago past Marquette. The Warriors lost a golden opportuni-ty to take over the No. 1 spot in the wake of Kentucky's loss to Alabama last Monday night JOE PONSETTO and Dave Corzine each scored 18 points to lead DePaul over Providence. Abdel Anderson and Hollis Copeland scored 17 apiece and Tom Brown contributed timely foul shooting to lead Rutgers past Syracuse. "I've always worked hard on free throws, I'm confident under pressure," said Brown, who hit 13 of 13 from the foul line in the second half. Rick Apke scored 21 points and pulled down 15 rebounds to rally Creighton past Indiana State.

"We're going to shake things up ... we have no choice," said Indiana State Coach Bob King after losing his fourth straight game. "We've got to try some different people who might help us offensively in support of Larry (Bird) and Harry (Morgan)."

PHIL FORD scored 17 points and became the all-time leading scorer in North Carolina history as the Tar Heels defeated Clemson. Ford moved ahead of Lennie Rosenbluth with 2,051 points and also became the ACC's No. 5 all-time scorer.

Ron Brewer's 21 points led Arkansas over Texas Tech in a game characterized by strong defense. Greg Kelser sank all seven of his shots in the second half and finished with 21 points to pace Michigan State over Ohio State.

Roy Hamilton scored 20 points as UCLA beat Southern Cal for the 16th straight time. The Trojans haven't beaten the Bruins in basketball since Ken Koenig's 16 points, plus a ferocious defense, led Kansas over Big Eight rival Colorado. Duke beat East Carolina as Jim Spanarkel scored 31 points and Eugene Banks 28.

MARVIN JOHNSON scored 23 points and four other New Mexico players hit double figures as the Lobos crushed Utah in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Carner secures Triple Crown

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) -Many of the 16 golfers who played in the $105,000 Triple Crown Match Play Championship did not like the headtohead format of the event, but JoAnne Carner didn't mind it a bit.

Carner, who picked up the winner's check of $21,000 after Sunday's final match, had a very positive opinion about the match play format - the first of its kind staged by the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

"I love it," the grinning Carner said after beating Sandra Palmer 1-up in a thrilling finish to the four-day tournament. "I'm going to stay up all night trying to talk David Foster into having more match play tournaments.

Foster is chairman of the board of the Colgate-Palmolive Co., which sponsors a number of LPGA tournaments, including the Triple Crown.

Palmer, who missed a 13-foot par putt on the 18th hole Sunday, then watched as Carner made a threefooter for the victory, said that she still likes match play, and added she was happy just to be in the tournament.

Palmer was an alternate for the original Triple Crown field, but was invited to participate when Carol Mann - recovering from an operation - withdrew. Palmer collected $14,000 for finishing second. Carner had a one-up lead after two holes, but Palmer moved ahead by one when she parred the third and fourth holes while Carner took bogeys

Carner tied the match on No.9, however, sinking her par putt for a five, while Palmer settled for a six. Palmer edged ahead again on No.11 with a birdie four, but Carner came back and tied the match with a birdie on No.12. Palmer again moved one-up with a birdie on the 16th hole, and seemed to have the match in hand. But she missed a short birdie putt on No.17, and Carner made a similar putt, tying the match.

Palmer's third shot on the par five 18th hole was short and on the fringe and her lag left her the 13-footer she couldn't make. Carner's approach on the final hole also was short, but close enough to the green to allow her to putt near the hole for a virtual tap-in.

Sally Little won third-place money of $10,000 Sunday with a birdle three after she and Sandra Post finished even through 18 holes. On the first extra hole, the par four 10th, Little hit her approach next to the pin and sank the putt for the victory over Post, who collected $8,000 for finishing fourth.

In Sunday's lower bracket matches, Donna Caponi Young downed Pat Bradley 5 and 4, and Jane Blalock defeated Debbie Austin 3 and 2. Young, Blalock and Bradley all finished with $5,000 total earnings for the tournament, while Austin received $4,000.

Carner, who advanced to the showdown with Palmer by defeating Austin, Nancy Lopez and Post, got her second biggest LPGA payday. She had won $21,500 here last year with a second-place finish in the Winners Circle tournament.

Navratilova wins one

Navratilova played excellent tennis on her way to a victory Sunday in a $100,000 women' tennis tournament. but she said things might have been different if Chris Evert or Evonne Goolagong had been around.

"Maybe I wouldn't have a streak if Chris or Evonne were here," said the 21-year-old Navratilova Sunday after whipping Rosemary Casals 6-3, 6-2 to win the tournament championship and the $20,000 first prize here.

The triumph was the 15th singles win in a row for Navratilova, who was seeded second in the tournament and had few problems in disposing of the fifth-seeded Casals in a 65-minute match.

A crowd of 5,130 watched as the 29year-old Casals of Sausalito, Calif., was able to break Navratilova's service only once.

"Martina played a better game," said Casals. "When somebody comes in like a blanket as she did, I didn't have a chance to push her.' Navratilova, who had never won a tournament in Los Angeles, earned $20,000 while Casals collected $10,500.

"I've always been up against Chris before and since she's not here I won," said Navratilova, the Czech player who lives in Dallas now. Evert is taking a vacation from tennis during the winter and Goolagong withdrew shortly before the event began with a foot injury.

In a single-set match for third place, Greer Stevens defeated Marise Kruger 6-3 in a battle of unseeded South Africans. Stevens won $6,300 while Kruger collected $5,500.

In the doubles final, the team of Betty Stove and Virginia Wade downed Stevens and Pam Teeguarden 6-3, 6-2. The winners split $5,200 while the losers divided $2,600.

The tournament was sponsored by Virginia Slims. The women's tour moved to Chicago for another $100,000

The Americans have never won the U.S.-Soviet series, which began in 1969 and alternates between Moscow and Las Vegas, Nev. The U.S. team will box Tuesday in Donetsk, the Ukraine, and Friday in Alma Ata in Soviet central Asia.

Stram, the latest coach to be fired by the hapless National Football League

Early speculation centered on Dick Nolan, a former San Francisco 49ers head coach who was made defensive coordinator for the Saints last year after starting the season as linebacker coach.

Harry Hulmes, the team's vice resident for administration, con-irmed that Nolan was a top candidate for the job, but he said several others were being considered.

Hulmes said one of those would be George Allen, recently fired as coach of the Washington Redskins. "I'd listen," Allen said. "but I haven't been contacted."

Stram got the news from Hulmes and Eddie Jones, another vice president. Hulmes said Mecom wasn't present because "John doesn't like to do these things."

Stram's son, Stu, a sophomore quarterback at the University of Louisville, said Mecom shouldn't have sent his aides — "you would think he would be man enough to tell him to his face."

John Havlicek of the Boston Celtics waits for a chance to play Sunday shortly after announcing that he will retire following his 16th NBA season this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Havlicek to quit court

BOSTON (AP) - John Havlicek refuses to go out a loser, despite the nightmare that envelopes the Boston Celtics, once the most successful team in the National Basketball Association.

'The career I've had has been one of happiness," said Havlicek Sunday. 'Everything a player could accomplish, I've done.'

One of the winningest professional athletes in history, Havlicek announced his retirement from the NBA at the end of his this, his 16th season. He continued to predict playoff prospects for Boston, despite the Celtics' shocking inability to win even half their games.

But Havlicek's retirement announcement was spoiled by the Golden State Warriors, who embarrassed the once-dominant Bostonians 99-88, the Celtics' 30th loss Typically, Havlicek - who will be 38 in April, played 42 minutes, as if he were still a young man. He scored 12 points.

"I won't go out with something sad," said the forward-guard, who has set an NBA record for durability that may never be broken. He has played in a record 1,232 regular season NBA games.
