

Many Miners Predict Approval Of Contract

By United Press International

The ouster of UMW President Arnold Miller, whose handling of negotiations in the coal strike has enraged many of his miners, is rapidly becoming as popular a topic in the coal fields as the 106-day-old walkout itself.

Rank-and-file rhetoric against the new contract — up for a Friday ratification vote — ran high Monday, but many of the financially-pinched strikers privately predicted its passage.

"This contract will be ratified 2-1 — but I don't want you to say I said that," said a West Virginia miner who vowed to vote against it himself and asked not to be quoted by name.

"It stinks," said Pennsylvania local president John Secor. "Everybody knows the men will vote for the offer on Good Friday — which is fish day — and anyone who votes 'yes' is nothing but a sucker."

But Indiana local leader William Yockey indicated penury may swing a bigger stick in the Friday vote than gullibility.

"I think that it's going to be a closer vote than on the last one," he said. "We have a lot of men in bad financial shape. Most of 'em's lost $7,000 in wages since we've been on strike, and $3,000 to $5,000 just to live."

In Ohio, Don Nunley wanted the contract passed so the rank and file can get down to what he considers more important business.

"It will pass this time — there's no question about it," he said. "Then we can get together and start taking action against Miller."

Nunley was one of several union leaders at a weekend strategy meeting in Gallipolis, Ohio. He said petitions bearing tens of thousands of signatures supporting a purge of the UMW president have been delivered at the union's Washington headquarters, but that under the union's constitution a recall election could take years.

"But the constitution also says where five districts or more can call a special convention and change the constitution," Nunley said, adding he thinks he can rally "16 or 17 districts — or maybe even all of them" at such a meeting.

Illinois district leader Gene Mitchell was skeptical of the move, though he proclaimed himself no fan of Miller.

"I am not going to get into it at this time," he said. "I am just going to lay back and let them rip. A majority of the ones who voted him (Miller) in are now trying to get rid of him. I have never supported Miller in an election and I never will."

While their leaders worked on an ambush for Miller, rank-and-file miners debated the proposed new contract and hit picket lines at non-union coal operations in Ohio for the first time since their strike became legal again last Friday with expiration of a court back-to-work order.

Someone riddled two coal trucks with gunfire in Kentucky, but there were no injuries.

Farm Bill Approved In Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today voted to raise price supports and income guarantees for grain and cotton farmers by about 20 percent.

The proposal, adopted 58-35, was sponsored by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., as an amendment to an emergency farm bill that orders the Agriculture Department to pay farmers for idling cropland.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, opposed the move as inflationary and budget-busting, but did not take advantage of an opportunity to kill the provision on parliamentary grounds.

Muskie claimed McGovern's proposal could cost $1.9 billion and drive up meat and food prices even more than the rest of the farm bill.

The McGovern amendment would raise the so-called target prices on wheat from $3 a bushel to $3.55, on corn from $2.10 to $2.50 a bushel and on cotton from 52 cents a pound to 70 cents. USDA guarantees farmers an income of that rate by making direct cash payments of the difference between targets and lower market prices.

It would also raise the rate at which USDA loans money on crops from $2.25 a bushel to $2.85 on wheat, from $2 to $2.25 on corn and from 44 cents a pound to 50 cents on cotton.

The Senate set aside its Panama Canal treaty debate today to discuss and vote on the farm legislation.

Although some provisions would aid many more farmers, growers of grain, cotton and soybeans would be the major beneficiaries.

Also, since farm-income programs are geared to production and acreage, the wealthiest third of the farmers would benefit most.

Those farmers are the ones with more than $25,000 a year in gross sales. But also in that category are those with the largest six-figure debts that banks have been reluctant to refinance without prospects for better prices this year.

As debate began today, sponsors of two competing bills told the Senate that farmers have waited long enough and time has run out.

Equally important, since President Carter has veto power, the Cabinet's economic policy council also has scheduled a meeting on farm policy today.

It could decide whether to soften the administration's months-old stand against taking any further measures to boost farm prices.

Both branches of government are understood to be in agreement.

Integration Plan Draws New Blast

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The U.S. Justice Department today filed its objections to the Lubbock Independent School District's proposed desegregation plan.

Federal government attorney Steve Clark said the district's plan would put an undue burden on minority elementary children, leave the lower grades segregated at certain schools and may fail to produce a lasting racial balance at Dunbar High.

At the elementary level, the school board's proposal would involve the closing of Sanders, use of files as a voluntary "magnet" school and a cross-assignment of pupils between predominantly white schools and the five other minority elementary schools cited by Woodward as "constitutional violations."

Under the plan, white students would be bused one semester of their elementary careers, while minority students would be bused up to two years. The years minorities would be reassigned would not be consecutive.

"We object to the high degree of educational instability and to the transportation requirements which minority students would bear under the board's proposal," the Justice Department, plaintiff in the eight-year-old desegregation lawsuit, said in its brief.

"The plan proposed places the burden of desegregation disproportionately on minority children," the brief says.

The department also said minority children would be required by the plan to change schools too often, making it difficult for them to adjust.

"The resulting staccato pattern of school experiences for minority students violates the rule that the burden of school desegregation must be borne equitably by whites and minorities, the brief said.

In addition, the department said, "We do not believe that the law...permits the defendants' exclusion of grades from the desegregation program." The board's plan would keep all white and minority children in their neighborhood schools

Israel Proclaims Full Cease-Fire

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel declared a cease-fire in southern Lebanon today effective at 6 p.m. — 10 a. m. CST.

The minister of defense has instructed the chief of the general staff to effect a cease-fire along the entire front in Lebanon as of 1800 hours today," said the army spokesman's brief announcement.

"As from that hour, the Israeli defense forces will maintain a cease-fire."

The announcement came after a day of scattered shooting between Israeli forces and Palestinian guerrillas around Tyre. But the shooting had died down from previous days.

Seven days ago Israel launched an air, land and sea attack to clear Palestinian guerrillas from the area along its northern border. The operation followed a Palestinian terrorist attack in Israel which killed 35 Israelis.

The Israeli announcement came as Prime Minister Menachem Begin was meeting with President Carter in Washington and as the United Nations tried to work out details of a U.N. peacekeeping force to go into southern Lebanon.

There was no immediate indication if Israel had taken a unilateral action in announcing the cease-fire and whether the Palestine Liberation Organization would go along with an end to hostilities.

The Israeli army claimed to control all of southern Lebanon up to the Litani River, except for a small area around the port city of Tyre.

A token U.N. peacekeeping force was waiting to move in when fighting stopped, but U.N. officials in New York said it could be "weeks or months" before Israel heeded the Security Council's demand to withdraw its troops from Lebanese territory.

Prior to the cease-fire, the Israeli army reported shelling guerrilla positions, but said the level of firing had dropped.

Independent observers in Lebanon said the south was comparatively quiet after intensive Israeli bombardment of Tyre and other guerrilla fallback positions north and south of the Litani on Monday night.

A Palestinian communique issued in Beirut said Israel made two air strikes during the night against guerrilla positions near Tyre and in the Arkoub region, 50 miles to the west in the foothills of Mount Hermon.

Defense Minister Ezer Weisman told a news conference Israel decided not to occupy Tyre.

"We object to the high degree of educational instability and to the transportation requirements which minority students would bear under the board's proposal," the Justice Department, plaintiff in the eight-year-old desegregation lawsuit, said in its brief.

"The plan proposed places the burden of desegregation disproportionately on minority children," the brief says.

The resulting staccato pattern of school experiences for minority students violates the rule that the burden of school desegregation must be borne equitably by whites and minorities, the brief said.

copy Tyre, the Palestinians' chief supply port 12 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border, "for reasons of population and to avoid more destruction."

Associated Press correspondent Aly Mahmoud reported from Tyre that the guerrillas remained in tenuous control of a nine-mile coastal strip, stretching from the Rashidieh refugee camp south of Tyre to the Litani, 15 miles north of the border.

"We don't have the weapons they have. We are outnumbered," Mahmoud Labadi of the Palestine Liberation Organization said.

Guerrilla fighters in Tyre cursed their Arab and Soviet backers for failing to come to their aid. "Tell our treacherous Arab leaders that we wish our guns were turned on them rather than on Israel," one guerrilla shouted from a trench.

Neither Begin nor Carter referred to the many problems separating the two countries as they spoke during a trimmed-down ceremony on the White House south lawn.

Carter did make an unexpected reference to the concept of security guarantees for Israel, which a succession of Israeli governments has insisted on grounds that Israel alone should be responsible for its security.

"Peace can come from a guarantee of security," Carter said. It was not clear whether he had a specific proposal in mind to present to the Israeli leader.

Begin was restrained in his comments. He expressed hope that the spirit of peace negotiations started with Egypt several months ago can be renewed.

Carter was reported in a tough frame of mind for the talks.

The president wants a pledge of an early end to the Israeli military occupation in Lebanon so he can get Begin to focus on the lagging negotiations for a Mideast settlement.

State Department officials said they thought Begin would "cooperate" and they did not expect any problem. However, Begin has concentrated on gaining assurances that the terrorists flushed from Lebanon's "Fatahland" would not return to use the border region as a springboard for attacks on Israel.

Trying to ease Begin's concerns and to avoid a conflict between him and Carter, U.S. officials emphasized that the U.N. peacekeeping contingent would keep unauthorized armed forces out of the area.

Washington (AP) — Public school students expelled or suspended without first receiving hearings are free to sue school officials, but may collect no more than $1, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The justices voted unanimously to overturn a lower court's decision that such students could collect substantial damage awards.

Two years ago, the Supreme Court ruled that students have a constitutional right to a pre-disciplinary hearing when school officials are considering their expulsion or suspension for misconduct.

Today's decision dealt with school officials' liability when they deny that constitutional right.

Robbers Get $1 Million

ST. JOVITE, Quebec (AP) — Four gunmen held up an armored car at a roadside diner early today and made off with "about a million dollars," police said.

It was not known whose money was taken in the robbery, but the armored car is owned by Alliance Securite, a private firm which handles most shipments for the province's credit unions.

A provincial police spokesman in this community about 62 miles north of Montreal said two guards were wounded in the incident.

The guards had stopped at the diner for a snack when the gunmen burst in and fired a shot, the police spokesman said. One of the guards was wounded in the chest and another in the arm. A third guard was beaten when he refused to give the gunmen the keys to the vehicle.

Chicagoan Linked To War Crimes

CHICAGO (AP) — Speaking in Polish, the witness pointed to a South Side factory worker and said that was the Gestapo agent who 36 years ago had shot and killed a ghetto woman who had refused to remove her clothes for him.

"I have very good eyesight," said David Gelbhauer, a 60-year-old locksmith from Batyam, Israel.

Asked if Frank Walus was the man Gelbhauer remembered from the Jewish ghetto in Czestochowa, Poland, he said, "Yes."

Federal prosecutors have charged the 55-year-old Walus in a civil complaint with lying about his past to immigration officials when he became a naturalized citizen in August 1970.

Walus could lose his citizenship and face deportation hearings if U.S. District Judge Julius Hoffman rules in favor of the government, a prosecutor said Monday after opening arguments.

Gelbhauer testified he was a forced laborer at Gestapo headquarters in Czestochowa, and that his jobs there included removing victims of Nazi questioning from interrogation rooms when they were unable to leave on their own. He said he saw Walus there numerous times.

The locksmith, who spoke through a translator, said he also had to pull wagons carrying bodies for burial when Nazis began "liquidating" the ghetto.

He recalled one such incident in October 1942.

Gelbhauer said he was loading bodies onto a wagon when he recognized Walus, dressed in the uniform of an officer of the Gestapo, or Nazi secret police, talking to a woman with two children. He said he heard Walus order the woman to disrobe. When she refused, Gelbhauer said, "He shot her ... through the back of the neck."

Gelbhauer said he turned away, "because I heard those children screaming." He said two more shots rang out. He looked back to see the children lying next to their mother.

Prosecutors said 11 witnesses would swear Walus is the man they saw terrorizing and murdering Jews in Poland.

Defense cross-examination of Gelbhauer had just begun when court adjourned for the day.

During opening statements, Assistant U.S. Attorney John Gubbins said the government would produce witnesses to prove that Walus "did not truthfully and forthrightly" answer questions about his good moral character, his membership in political parties or military groups or his background in terms of criminal activity.

Gubbins contended that Walus helped terrorize Jews in the gettos of Czestochowa and Kielce from 1939 to 1942.

Defense attorney Robert Korenkiewicz said the charges were false and that Walus "was just as much a victim of Nazi atrocities as any of those who will testify for the government."

Korenkiewicz said defense witnesses would testify that Walus was forced to leave his widowed mother and work for the Nazis on farms in Germany and Poland during the time prosecutors allege he was committing atrocities in the two cities.

Korenkiewicz said his search of Nazi war documents have failed to turn up any evidence that Walus was ever a member of the Gestapo or any Nazi terror organization.

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia State Sen. Julian Bond is thinking out loud — very out loud — about his next move, employment-wise.

Bond says he's trying for a network television job after 10 years in politics. But he told reporters he wants to see what's in it for him before he makes any move.

Bond said Monday that he wants "a big salary" from any television job, and that any offer must come before May, when qualifying opens for Georgia's primary elections.

Bond, 38, says his political career has left him "at a level beyond which I cannot rise."

ERA Foe Blasts Critics

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Equal Rights Amendment opponent Phyllis Schlafly says the people who shout her down when she speaks against ERA are against the right to free speech.

She made the comment Monday after doing verbal battle with backers of the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution during an appearance at the University of Rochester.

"I bet everybody who came here neutral will be turned off," she said of the constant interruptions from the audience.

She told the largely male student audience that when they graduate, "if you do," they should thank her for encouraging women to stay home and out of the job market.

Steve Ford Joins Rodeo Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Ford, the 21-year-old son of former President Ford, is riding high in a new job — calf roper and chief public spokesman for a professional rodeo team.

The Los Angeles Rough Riders, one of six rodeo teams on the Major League Rodeo circuit this year, announced signing Ford Monday.

"I feel that the concept of Major League Rodeo will give America's oldest sport the recognition it deserves and will show ... what truly fine athletes today's rodeo performers are," said young Ford, who studied agriculture at Utah State University and animal science at California State Polytechnic University in Pomona.

With comedian-dancer Donald O'Connor as guest star, Miss Rogers, 66, gave a running commentary Monday night on her life in Hollywood and on the stage, showed brief clips from some of her famous films with Fred Astaire and other stars, and sang.

"We love you," one man called from the stalls. "How about dinner Saturday night?" pleaded another admirer as she was given a standing ovation.

Foreman Fighting For Jesus

HOUSTON (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman talks more about Jesus than boxing these days and he says that's the real reason he's coming out of retirement to fight again.

Foreman says he became a "born again" Christian in his dressing room March 17, 1977, shortly after losing to Jimmy Young, and gave up boxing to preach about Jesus.

Foreman, 29, will use the money he earns in the ring to build two churches, one in Los Angeles and another in New York, he said Monday in an interview with the Houston Chronicle.

"I want to call it the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ," Foreman said. "And there won't be a gymnasium attached to them either."

Foreman has not announced any fight dates. Asked if he thought he could again become heavyweight champion, Foreman said "I don't know. Once I get into fighting again, I'm going to train. But I definitely don't have any more hatred in me. If I ever had a killer instinct it's dead now."

Of his calling, Foreman said, "God has not ordained me, but He did give me some bait to catch fish with."

Jet Joins Stork Club

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — When Western Airlines flight 567 left for Los Angeles, there were 83 passengers on board. When it returned to Las Vegas a few minutes later, there were 84.

The newest arrival, a 7-pound girl, was born in the galley section of the Boeing 737 shortly after it left McCarran International Airport Monday morning.

Western said the mother, Mrs. Talal Shaibi, told a flight attendant she was ill shortly after the 7:40 a.m. takeoff. The stewardess located two doctors on the plane who helped Mrs. Shaibi to the rear and delivered the baby.

The plane returned to Las Vegas where an ambulance took Mrs. Shaibi to Sunrise Hospital. Mother and daughter were reported doing well.

New Mexico Man Faces Charges

MONTEAGLE, Tenn. (AP) — The driver of a truck that tumbled 100 feet into a ravine, killing four members of a Louisiana religious sect, is named in a warrant charging him with murder by drunk driving.

Bill Killian, assistant district attorney general, said Monday night that Erwin Schmidt, 51, of Alamogordo, N.M., who was one of 18 persons injured in the wreck the night before, was named in the warrant.

District Attorney General Bill Pope said the charge is the equivalent of second degree murder, which carries a maximum penalty of 10 years to life imprisonment.

Schmidt, one of 22 members of a fundamentalist Louisiana sect traveling in the rented truck, was in satisfactory condition Monday night at Coffee County Hospital in Manchester, Tenn.

Jerry Millsaps of the Tennessee Highway Patrol said Monday night that results of a blood test on Schmidt had not been returned.

The warrant was issued by the Circuit Court in Altamont, the Grundy County seat.

Schmidt's wife, Mary, was among those killed when the truck missed a mountain curve and careened over a steep embankment. Rescue squad members lugged the injured up a heavily wooded hillside before they could be loaded aboard ambulances.

Four were slightly injured and were not hospitalized. The rest of the victims were taken to hospitals in three nearby towns. Some were flown in helicopters to a hospital in Nashville, about 90 miles northwest.

"It was the Lord's will," said Terry Owen, whose wife and three children were among the injured.

Peter Thomas, 25, an evangelist who led the sect, said, "We went onto a soft shoulder. Then there were trees and that was that."

The 12-foot truck was rented in New Orleans on Friday to take the group on a vacation in the mountains, Thomas said.

He said they stopped at Beersheba Springs, about 50 miles northwest of Chattanooga, to look at some property they were interested in buying.

"We saw a flying saucer that night — all of us did," he said. "It was a big ball of fire that came in over the moon and came across the sky before it vanished." Thomas said the saucer was part of a dream in which he was warned of the accident. Other members of the group declined to talk with reporters.

Thomas said the dream isn't over yet and ends with his death.

"Some people blame this on me," he said. "They say this wouldn't have happened if these people hadn't been with me. I expect to be shot very soon, perhaps within a week."

Dead were Jansen Baker, 19, of Luluz, N.M.; his mother, Rosemary, for whom no age was given; Ryan Kollhopp, 2, of Tucson, Ariz., son of Elizabeth Kollhopp, 24, who was injured, and Mrs. Schmidt, about 40.

'Republic' Gets Slogan

KINNEY, Minn. (AP) — The "Republic of Kinney" has a navy, a mayor who makes $15 per council meeting and a slogan: "Filed in Triplicate."

The slogan tells the whole tale of the new country, which declared its independence from the United States last year to protest government red tape. The move provoked hardly a yawn in Washington.

The 12-square-block community located in northeastern Minnesota will begin issuing passports next week. All residents will be eligible to receive the passports, which require only a handshake.

"There won't be any forms to fill out," said James Randall, an attorney for the republic of 600 persons. The Filed in Triplicate slogan will appear on the passports.

Outsiders will qualify for passports if they can meet the requirements. Randall said applicants must appear in person and shake hands with town officials, who will then decide if applicants are honest and deserving of passports.

The republic emerged after the town was overwhelmed by federal red tape in its efforts to get a $186,000 grant for its water and sewer system.

Since seceding, Kinney has received "foreign aid" — a new police cruiser and several cases of pizza from Duluth industrialist Jeno Paulucci.

Randall says there already are two equally qualified applicants for the post of admiral. One lives on an island in Lake Vermillion and the other has a canoe and World War II experience.

Randall notes that the nearby city of St. Cloud hired a cost expert for a $20,000 salary and got $380,000 in public assistance the first year.

Kinney can't afford that kind of money, he said.

Illinois Solon Faces Challenge

CHICAGO (UPI) — One of the hottest races in today's Illinois primary election — the first primary in the nation this year — pits moderate Republican Rep. John Anderson against a tough challenge from the far right.

It is the first real race for Anderson, the No. 3 GOP leader in the House, since he won office 18 years ago. He has had easy re-election ever since, until this year.

Gerald Ford and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger have stumped for him, but Anderson thinks ultra-conservatives trying to regain control of the GOP have made him a prime target.

On the Democratic side, today's election tests whether the strength of the Democratic machine assembled by the late Mayor Richard J. Daley has been maintained since his death.

The Democratic organization, now controlled by a coterie of former Daley aides and associates, has the usual full slate of candidates. But it also has unusually active opposition and the challengers hope to give the machine a major black eye.

Republican Gov. James R. Thompson is unopposed and GOP Sen. Charles H. Percy has a token primary foe. So much of the national interest is centered on Anderson's fight.

"This is kind of a test tube for them," Anderson said, referring to the conservatives working for his defeat. "It's just seven counties in northwest Illinois but if they can win here and win in an early primary ... that obviously is going to give them a lot of clout to use against candidates in the primaries that are coming up."

The results of this election I think will be some gauge of what the future holds for the party in other parts of the country," he said.

Anderson's opponent, Don Lyon, 46, a former evangelical minister of the Open Bible Church in Rockford, has received financial support from several conservative groups such as the Gun Owners of America and the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

Lyon has hit hard at Anderson's support for the proposed Panama Canal treaties, his support of gun control, abortion funding and homosexual rights.

"We fell something should be done to change a map which speaks very liberally and votes very liberally and represents a conservative district," Lyon said. "He (Anderson) used to be conservative ... he has slipped to the left."

The race is close and Anderson says he must have a high voter turnout to capture the GOP nomination. He also is hoping for a crossover vote by Democrats, and absentee ballot requests in Rockford indicated that hope might have some basis.

Official's Future Questioned

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Rhode Island Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy says it's too early to speculate on Lt. Gov. Thomas R. DiLuglio's political future because he needs time to prove he's not involved in the pornography business.

"We never discussed the political ramifications," Garrahy said Monday after a one-hour session with DiLuglio. "This is too serious a matter."

The governor said, "What he has told me is that he has done nothing that is legally or ethically wrong. He's entitled to an opportunity to clear his story entirely."

DiLuglio's troubles began when the Providence Journal-Bulletin reported that he was the sole incorporator of Eagle Productions Ltd., a firm from which police recently confiscated 100 suspected child pornography films.

DiLuglio said he incorporated Eagle for a private law client, Imperial Distributors Inc., a firm believed by federal officials to be distributing pornographic matter throughout the Northeast.

He also said he was paid $4,400 for defending Kenneth Guarino, Imperial's owner, on a gun charge. The fee was paid by Imperial and one of its subsidiaries which allegedly runs adult book stores, DiLuglio said.

During the weekend DiLuglio asked for a complete investigation by Attorney General Griffin Bell and volunteered to appear before a grand jury.

Garrahy refused to say whether he would keep DiLuglio on the ticket for November's election. Last week he announced the two would run as a team for a second term.

DiLuglio said his relationship with Imperial and Guarino was purely professional. In a telegram to Bell, he said his conduct has been "proper, moral, legal, ethical and at all times consistent with the canons of ethics of the state and federal bar."

Polish Woman Circles Globe

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiewicz of Poland has become the first woman to sail around the world alone, covering 28,696 miles in a 31-foot sloop in just under two years, the Polish Yachting Association announced today.

It said she started in Las Palmas, the Canary Islands, on March 23, 1976 and closed the loop in the eastern Atlantic Monday night aboard the "Mazurek," a six-ton sloop with a 15-horsepower auxiliary engine. The sloop was built by her husband.

Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz is now some 1,800 miles from Las Palmas and hopes to reach that harbor in three or four weeks, the association quoted her as radioing.

Among the ports she called at were Bridgetown, Barbados, Cristobal, Balboa, Nuku Hiva, Papeete, Suva, Sydney, Thursday Island, Darwin, Port Louis, Mauritius, Durban and Cape Town, it said.

The Guinness Book of World Records lists another woman as having circumnavigated the globe in 1764, but said she was tagging along disguised as the valet of the real sailor, a M. de Commerson, aboard the vessel "La Bourdesue."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

A Peril Of Profession

'KOREAGATE'S' long arm has stretched into the U.S. Senate and touched a member of the ethics committee responsible for probing allegations of Korean influence-peddling on Capitol Hill.

Texas Sen. John Tower ever so quietly has removed himself from further participation in the committee's investigation of the scandal.

Under rules adopted when the committee was set up last year, any member of the panel who is involved—even tangentially—with the subject of an official inquiry is required to disqualify himself.

TOWER PREVIOUSLY had acknowledged that he attended a number of parties with Tongsun Park and for nine years was a member of the fashionable Georgetown Club in Washington which Park owned.

Tower told nationally syndicated columnists Martha Angle and Robert Walters he had no other involvement with Park and accepted no money, trips, gifts or favors from him.

Tower's involvement, according to the columnists' resource persons, was described as "very minor" and in no way illegal or improper.

Tower is quoted as saying the former commander of Korean forces in Vietnam once gave him a cigarette lighter "comparable to a Zippo" and another official once "gave me a length of cloth which is now a dress belonging to my ex-wife."

ASKED WHY he waited so long to step aside from a probe that has been underway in the committee since last summer, Tower replied that "it just seemed an appropriate time. I offered to do so last summer and was discouraged by other members of the committee."

Like the House committee and its special counsel, Leon Jaworski, the Senate is having a difficult time collecting hard evidence on the extent and scope of the influence-peddling scheme.

Members of Congress who must face voters this year are growing increasingly restive as the investigations drag on inconclusively. Tower, for example, faces a tough re-election battle against his Democratic opponent and possibly an independent.

Although he says he does not expect "Koreagate" to become an issue, Tower acknowledged that it won't help any. He said, "It's just one of the hazards of this business."

Indeed.

Flights In The Face Of Turks

WASHINGTON—The growing lack of will of Western leaders to protect the vital security interests of the free world comes through loud and clear in the unchallenged daily overflights of Soviet aircraft ferrying arms to Ethiopia.

These Russian flights over the southern flank of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) openly violate the air spaces of two important members, Turkey and Greece.

Except for tracking the Soviet aircraft on radar, NATO military units are specifically barred from taking any counter-action to force the Russians to stop the overflight violations.

The Turkish government, which has vigorously protested the air violations to Moscow without success, has been privately discouraged by the big five NATO powers including the U.S. from seeking joint NATO action to stop the overflights.

The Turks feel that they don't have the air power to confront the Russians on their own.

IN THEIR PRIVATE conversations with the Turkish government, the U.S., Great Britain, France, West Germany and Italy have informally taken the position that any joint NATO action would be unwise on the grounds that it would cause a major confrontation with the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact nations.

Instead of meeting this new Soviet threat head on, the five NATO powers have secretly decided to let the Russians violate the air spaces over their southern flank to set up a major advance military operational base in Ethiopia. There is not even going to be a joint diplomatic protest.

The Carter administration already has sent signals to Moscow that there will be no more by the U.S. or its NATO allies to stop the Soviets from turning Ethiopia into a strategic base as long as present Soviet-Ethiopia-Cuban military operations do not extend into Somalia at this time. As a veteran U.S. military officer puts it:

"ALL THE STATE Department statements have conveyed the message that the Soviets can violate NATO air spaces and set up a strategic base in Ethiopia without any fear of counter-action from the West, but that the Soviets must not go any further at this time because public opinion and our Middle East allies will force a reaction."

The tragic decision to do nothing about the Russian overflights is being blamed in NATO circles on the lack of U.S. leadership and the abandonment of the containment policy for one of accommodating and cooperating with the Soviet Union.

This latter policy rules out any direct confrontation with Russia, unless the security of the U.S. and Western Europe is directly threatened. President Carter and his advisers do not regard the overflights as a direct threat.

Some veteran U.S. military-intelligence experts take a different view. The long range, adverse impact of this do nothing policy becomes clear, they stress, when the purpose of the Soviet overflights is carefully examined.

THE PURPOSE IS TO give logistical support to an expeditionary force of 15,000 Soviet-trained Cuban troops in a military action directed by a Soviet general to establish a strategic Russian military base in the Horn of Africa.

When the advance base the Soviets are creating

ONE MAN'S OPINION Kenneth May Opportunity Pounds

LUBBOCK HAS a golden opportunity to cash in on the international tourist trade.

This rather surprising possibility became evident as we visited with British and American experts on the subject in London earlier this month.

All it will take is a bit of preparation and enlightened cultivation of British travel agents. They'll be booking tens of thousands of Britishers aboard Braniff International's daily 747 jet service direct from London to Dallas/Fort Worth.

It's a 40-minute train ride from Victoria Station to Gatwick Airport. A 50-minute flight from D/FW to Lubbock to add a special dimension to Londoners' "Dream Vacation in Texas" would be easily bought.

The magic word is "cowboys."

"TEXAS STILL has a cowboy image and that is what people want to see," one of the speakers at a London press conference said.

Lubbock has the Ranching Heritage Center and a heavy enough sprinkling of cowboy hats and boots on people just walking down the street to serve as a nucleus for tourist promotion.

Throw in a visit to an authentic working ranch and/or a barbecue dinner on the banks of one of the Yellowhouse Canyon lakes—with a cowboy quartet or Mexican-American band for entertainment—and you've given a Britisher a vacation to tell his grandchildren about.

"When an Englishman goes to America, he doesn't want to just sit on a beach somewhere,"

Holmes Alexander:

Wages Of War Is Independence

WASHINGTON—My country 'tis of thee, and I hate to admit we ever lost a war since 1865, when the Confederates were forced to say Uncle Sam.

But there is a school of politicians and commentators who seem to take a contrary delight in American setbacks, and to badmouth the institution of war as an idiot's delight, shorn of all glory and resulting only in the ultimate defeat of the victors.

There are non-Americans who mention the three post-1945 American mishaps with a wisdom they consider much superior to the rest of us.

Most of us believe that John and Robert Kennedy went to the brink in 1961 but made no sound louder than the knocking of their knees.

MANY OF US WERE proud of, devoted to, these brothers, and found it hard to believe that America was losing a war to Communist bandits by shameful default.

It has been many times authenticated that we had at least a 10 to 1 strategic superiority over Castro's sponsor, the boastful Khrushchev, but we threw nothing at Cuba except ransom money and medical supplies.

Yet it was not impossible to hear—it still isn't—that Kennedy deserved praise for his restraint. Under his subsequent regime we descended in strategic power from superiority to sufficiency.

The Cuban fiasco had followed a no-win bout with the midget Korea, at a time when we were a relative giant.

CANDIDATE EISENHOWER picked up the chant "I will go to Korea," meaning "I will settle for a draw."

There were enough Americans who abhorred a 5th New Deal (four by FDR and one by Truman had already galled us) to defeat Adlai Stevenson. He would probably have surrendered the whole Korean peninsula, but we kept one foot in the Asian warzone.

I had the privilege of frequent Oval Office talks with then Commander in Chief, Lyndon Johnson, whom I did not have the impudence to advise. But LBJ hardly ever stopped talking when a pair of knees were near his own.

I can vouch that he feared the chicken-hearted Senate and the brain-washed American people who would not back him up if he marched to Hanoi and risked Russian intervention.

He was never worried about Red China: "They've got troubles enough at home."

But long, long ago, the United States did win a total World War from two of the most villainous nations that ever reared their heads. Our boys whipped the backguards of Germany and Japan, and how the homelinks cheered and loved them for it.

Roger Biver, U.S. Travel Service regional director in London, told us.

"Ranches, horseback riding, moving about is what the Britisher wants to do," he added.

THE NEW BRANIFF service, Biver said, puts a Texas vacation within the range of the average working man in Britain.

"He can spend two weeks in the U.S. for the same as two weeks in Spain," he added, predicting that Britons will spend $300 million in the U.S. this year in addition to transportation.

Travel agents, he said, will arrange for 70 percent of these trips. This both simplifies the challenge of getting side trips to Lubbock included in vacation packages and makes it imperative that the travel agents be cultivated.

Anything that requires a reservation, like a hotel, is impossible to promote unless there is a local representative in London, Biver cautioned.

PROMOTIONAL literature is in short supply and is needed to help promote travel from London to D/FW with a regional side trip, the U.S. Travel Service spokesman said.

This gives Lubbock's Tourism Bureau and Chamber of Commerce an excellent opening to work with the Texas Tourist Development Agency and Braniff to get British visitors here.

Dan Petty, the former assistant city manager here who now heads the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, and I discussed the potential on the flight home.

The Dallas C of C runs that city's tourist and convention bureau. It is bringing groups of British travel agents over to show them what Dallas-Fort Worth and Texas have to offer.

Lubbock could work out a deal with Petty, I believe, to bring the travel agents and writers on out here for a day or two to see what we could offer their clients.

To those of us who live here, Lubbock's and West Texas' tourist attractions are difficult to romanticize.

We forget that the sights we're willing to travel 5,000 miles to see in and around London are taken for granted, in similar fashion, by those who live there.

THE WIDE OPEN spaces "Where The West Is," where you can see 'til tomorrow without a hill or a tree to block your vision, is an excitement for those who've never experienced the thrill.

Irrigated fields of cotton, the Lubbock lake site, the Texas Tech Museum and Food and Fiber exhibit, the Ranching Heritage Center, windmills, ranches—all are highly "promotable" if a little imagination is used.

There are 56 million people in the United Kingdom; one-half million of them came to the U.S. last year. It's predicted that this number will rise dramatically with the opening of direct service by Braniff to Texas.

If Lubbock doesn't get its fair share of these British tourists—and their pounds and shillings—it will be because we failed to open the door to the knock of opportunity.

But, may God forgive us, for the ultranationalists among us! They still believe that we were the culprits of World War II, and that West Germany and Japan are blessed with prosperity while we are being punished with racism, depression, unemployment and crooks in the White House, crooks in Congress, and hell to pay.

I'm going to keep on reading books, magazines and newspaper columns until one happy day when the truth jumps out in print. It ought to be written daily that for close to a decade, we occupied Germany and occupied Japan.

We forced them to viable, capitalistic governments which succeeded mightily because of us. Yes, it does beg for America, once in, to win wars. Ask Japan. Ask Germany.

Sylvia Porter:

We'll All Be Losers In Protection Game

IT'S SCARCELY NEWS to you, an informed newspaper reader, that a bitter battle is now being waged between those who want cheap imports so that we, America's consumers, who buy the imported items can escape a further cost of living pinch, and those who want to cut back on some of these imports so that the jobs of Americans employed in the fields involved can be saved.

It's a basic, familiar conflict—and even after so many years of search for satisfactory solutions, none has really been found.

But now, something new has been added—a nasty twist which might be called "internal protectionism."

In briefest summary, this is an effort by one U.S. industry to stop the growth of another U.S. industry in order to protect its own share of the economic pie.

SHOULD THIS EFFORT be successful, it would replace the consumer as the ultimate deciding force in what products are to be profitably sold to us in the marketplace with a form of government control reminiscent of the guilds of the Middle Ages.

In this sharply different economic scene, political power—not the best performance in the marketplace—would decide the winner.

A far, far cry from the private enterprise system American industry professes to love so much? Yes!

Yet, some business interests which should be better informed are, either in ignorance of its implications or indifference to its impact, advocating it. The real losers can only be you and me.

To name names, this new battle is a spin-off from the continuing squabble over sugar imports and sugar prices.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY'S leaders contend that unlimited imports will bankrupt domestic sources of supply, so that when the next shortage emerges, sugar prices again will skyrocket.

They advocate, therefore, controls on imports in order to even out these swings. Whether this fear is well based or not is beside the point of this report.

What is important is that tacked onto the latest "Sweetener Supply Assurance Act," being promoted by domestic sugar interests, is a new provision which makes it illegal for even domestic producers to make more of any sweetener than the Secretary of Agriculture decides is required by consumers.

The logic is simple: limit competing supplies, raise and maintain prices and keep more of the business for the sugar interests.

IF DOMESTIC SUGAR (mainly sugar beets) would be the winner, the corn farmers and corn processors would be the losers.

Corn, that uniquely American vegetable, early known as maize, produces a dizzying variety of products—ranging from the yellow ears you eat during corn harvest time through industrial adhesives, candies, vinegar, antibiotics, cooking oil, margarine, rust preventives, soap, many others.

If the amount of corn which could be used for sweetening could be limited by political pressure, the beet growers would get more money, the corn farmers would get less.

And America's consumers? We would be hit as always—in the pocketbook.

EVEN WORSE, this could form a precedent for cartelizing the entire American economy.

Once the idea is accepted that the production of domestic industries can be planned for this purpose and in this manner, what is the point of competition at all?

Monopoly makes sense in an economy where the object is to restrict production rather than to spur competition to produce better products, cheaper prices, more jobs.

On top of all this we, as taxpayers, would have to put up the funds for policing the producers and punishing those who commit the "crime" of growing too much or making too many sweet pies.

THERE WOULD BE no discernible limits to this trend once it got underway.

If the aluminum industry had more political clout than, say, plastics or steel, why not restrict the amount of plastics or steel that could be marketed in order to corner more of the consumer's dollar for aluminum?

Or equally easily, if plastics or steel could crowd aluminum into the corner, why not?

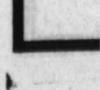

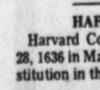

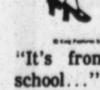

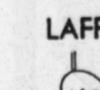

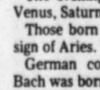

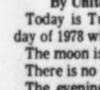

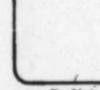

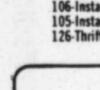

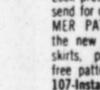

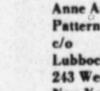

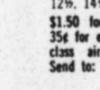

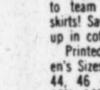

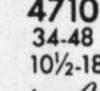

The amount of corruption and distortion of the political process which would occur is easy to imagine. Pitting one domestic industry against another domestic industry has nothing to do with either helping the consumer or keeping jobs in this country.

Who needs "internal protectionism?" I don't—and neither do you.

Senator Plugs Bluegrass Music

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
WASHINGTON (AP) — Was that a commercial heard the other day on non-commercial National Public Radio? Sure enough, the voice was plugging a bluegrass music album featuring such favorites as "Turkey in the Straw," "The Cumberland Gap," "Rye Whiskey" and "Old Joe Clark."

Since that voice belonged to Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and since he's the star of the album, don't expect anyone in Congress to make a fuss about that particular commercial.

An accomplished country fiddler, Byrd got to talking about bluegrass music during a lull in the Panama Canal treaties debate, being broadcast by the radio network.

He had special praise for a local bluegrass program on NPR and recommended that his colleagues relieve the tensions of the canal debate by listening to it.

"I think more people ought to listen to bluegrass and old-time music," said the majority leader. "I think we would all be friendlier with one another and we would smile more often. We would get up in the mornings with a better disposition. We would sleep better at nights."

Unfortunately, Byrd's chief antagonist in the canal debate is not a bluegrass fan. "I have to confess to the distinguished senator," said Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., "that I am not familiar with this program...I am sure that the distinguished senator, being an accomplished musician himself, has better knowledge of the value of music, which has charms to soothe the savage beast and all those qualities."

There's something about St. Patrick's Day that produces such scenes as the presentation of a 25-pound green bagel to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., handed the bagel to O'Neill, who managed to say, while holding his huge green gift, that "somebody this morning gave me an Irish smoked salmon. I'll slice it and have it on this bagel."

When Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., came out of a meeting at which senators were discussing the latest attempt to reach a compromise on natural gas prices, he was besieged by reporters. They crowded around to ask for details of the compromise and its prospects for acceptance.

From the back of the group, a voice kept shouting, "Senator, Senator." Then came this question: "Senator, why don't you spend more time with your constituents?"

Bumpers recognized the voice and replied: "I'd be able to, Mr. Vice President, if you people would stop sending up such crazy legislation that takes all our time."

Until recently, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., thought the giant redwoods were the oldest living things on earth. And he said so in a newsletter mailed to his constituents.

Publisher Todd Watkins read the newsletter and informed Cranston that he was wrong.

According to Watkins, the world's oldest living tree is a 4,500-year-old Bristlecone Pine growing at the 10,000-foot level in the White Mountains of the Inyo National Forest.

Cranston corrected the mistake in a later newsletter and noted that an even older Bristlecone Pine once grew in the same area.

It survived for 4,900 years. And then someone cut it down to find out how old it was.

Officials May Rate Red Wolf Extinct

BEAUMONT (UPI) — Because of the red wolf's unselective sex habits, the government has abandoned efforts to save a natural population in the wilds and may soon declare the "canis rufus" extinct.

"It's just a case of animals not being selective enough in breeding," said Curt Carley, who since 1973 has led the Red Wolf Recovery Program in southeast Texas and southwest Louisiana.

Carley said that 30 years ago, the wolf — larger and with a bigger head and shorter nose than a coyote — roamed the entire south central United States. Then coyotes migrated heavily into the wolf's habitat.

"In other species, it's some problem in the environment or destruction of habitat where you can alter a situation and improve it. In this instance, the animal is literally breeding itself out of existence."

He said it wasn't until 1962 that wildlife experts recognized the red wolf was endangered. It was six years later before there was scientific documentation. It was 1973 before the Endangered Species Act offered help.

Carley suspects it was too late even in 1962. "About 1950 to 1955 would have been the last time you had a sizable population that still would have had a chance to be preserved in the wilds," he said.

He tentatively has recommended to the Red Wolf Recovery Team, his advisory board of naturalists and wildlife experts, that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service declare the red wolf extinct in the wilds.

That doesn't mean the government is giving up completely though.

Teams have scoured the woods for what experts believe are pure red wolves — or at least the purest red wolves available — for a closed breeding and translocation program.

The Tacoma, Wash., zoo is hosting the breeding program and a male and a female have been loosed in the wilds of Bull's Island, South Carolina, to see if they will breed in a wild area where coyotes are absent and predators are few.

One problem in capturing the animals has been determining for sure the animals seized are red wolves, or mostly red wolves.

"The final proof will be seeing if they breed true," Carley said, explaining no undue variety in the litter would support some genetic testing and eye examinations indicating they are red wolves.

He said experts, encouraged by initial zoo breeding results, hope to be able to breed enough red wolves to recreate a population in the wilds.

"Our first four litters were born in captivity (at the zoo) last May and these pups are being examined every three months — we're X-raying, weighing and otherwise tormenting them — to figure out what they are."

About the only thing 15¢ will buy you at a shoe shine stand today is a brush off.

The 10¢ cup of coffee?
You might still find this in remote villages in South America, but even there the price is often hard to swallow.

The Long Distance telephone call?

Today, one still does.

In fact, today's Long Distance rates are cheaper than years ago. A whole lot cheaper.

For example, 84¢* today will buy you a 3-minute call clear across the country, when you dial One-Plus from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. Sunday through Friday.

Or for about the same price you can make a 5-minute call across the country on weekends. (11 p.m. Friday through 5 p.m. Sunday.)

So why not call Long Distance today? It's one of the few treats left where a little money still goes a long way. *Tax not included.

Warm Readings Usher In Spring

A-J News Services
Spring has arrived in Lubbock and the South Plains with above-average temperatures, but no rain is in sight for dry farmland until possibly late this week. Weathermen predicted partly cloudy skies and high temperatures in the middle 70s for today, the second day of spring, and Wednesday. The South Plains agricultural forecast gives a chance of rain for Saturday. Monday high and low temperatures in Lubbock were 79 and 45 and well above the average of 65 and 35.

The low tonight should be in the upper 40s.

Winds were expected to be southeasterly at 10 to 15 miles an hour today and southerly at five to 10 miles an hour tonight, the National Weather Service said.

Spring came in on a strong west wind with a top one-minute wind speed of 28 miles an hour Monday.

Downstate, the high winds turned into heavy rain, lightning and hail. Lightning and hail with some property damage but no injuries were reported at Weatherford, Burleson and Gainesville in North Texas.

The thunderstorms had moved eastward out of the state and into Louisiana and Arkansas this morning, weathermen said.

There was light rain at Texarkana and a thunderstorm in progress at Longview in East Texas, however.

Fog developed along the Gulf Coast, and visibility was reduced to a mile at Beaumont and Brownsville.

Clouds covered the eastern third of Texas and far West Texas.

The rest of the state had mostly fair skies.

Thunder and periods of heavy rain sent dreary weather as far north as Indiana and lower Michigan today.

Temperatures were mild today east of the Rockies.

Most of the clear skies this morning were found in New England, the central Plains and the Rockies. The weather was partly cloudy to clear along the West Coast.

Tributaries of the Missouri River continued to rise. Ice caused wild fluctuations on the Skunk River in Iowa and brought it above flood stage.

Heavy rain overnight caused continued flooding on the Wabash River Basin in Indiana and Illinois. Also in Indiana, flood warnings were issued for the St. Marys and the Maumee rivers.

More rain in Michigan produced flooding on the Raisin River near Monroe.

Some freezing rain fell in Augusta, Maine and Concord, N.H.

Arkansas and southeastern Missouri, with about one-half inch of rain, had the only reported precipitation early today.

Fresno, Calif., had a fraction of an inch of rain.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 16 at Greenville, Maine to 71 in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Two Killed In Shell Explosion

RILEY, Kan. (AP) — The 12-year-old youngster was proudly displaying his latest find from an exploration of the rolling Kansas farmland.

The next moment the 18-inch artillery shell slipped from his hands, struck the floor and exploded with a force that turned a mobile home into a fiery death trap for at least two persons and injured five others.

"I was just sitting on the couch and heard a big explosion," said a woman who lived next to the mobile home. "Everything started falling off the wall. I looked out the window. It was just a matter of seconds."

Federal and local officials today were still investigating the Monday afternoon explosion and fire at the Riley Mobile Home Park in this tiny village on the north edge of the Fort Riley Army installation.

The 12-year-old boy and his 19-year-old brother, a soldier at the fort, were killed in the blast.

"The boy found the shell in a ravine (about 100 yards from the trailer) and had brought it inside to show the family," said Inspector Larry Woodard of the Riley County Police Department.

"They told him to be careful, not to drop it, but just as they were talking, it fell on the floor and detonated."

Police were unable to release the names of the victims but said the soldier's wife, parents, two sisters and young brother were in the trailer. His family had been visiting from Ohio, authorities said.

The father and one sister were listed in stable condition at Memorial Hospital in Manhattan, Kan.

The soldier's wife was taken to the Army hospital at Fort Riley, while another woman was at St. Mary's hospital in Manhattan and one woman was being treated at the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan. Their conditions were not disclosed.

The 12 by 50-foot mobile home was located along U.S. 24, about a mile from the fort. The explosion shattered windows and threw debris into the side of another trailer, but there was no major damage.

Several neighbors rushed to the scene and were able to pull out those still alive. The soldier and his brother were killed instantly.

District Judge Dismisses Suit

U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward Monday dismissed a suit against local court and law enforcement officials filed by Burton Russell Beadle, indicating Beadle should first carry his complaints to state courts.

Beadle, 46, was assessed a 99-year prison term by a jury last November after being convicted of taking part in the Aug. 31, 1976, $66,000 robbery of Wolforth's American Bank of Commerce.

The holdup ranks as the largest bank robbery in Lubbock County history.

Beadle last month filed the federal suit, claiming his civil rights had been violated.

The suit named as defendants judges of all five Lubbock district courts, Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin, Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard and Police Chief J.T. Alley.

In the action, Beadle claimed the officials had violated his rights by refusing to disclose to him prior to trial results of the robbery investigation.

The suit also says Beadle was denied an examining trial by being indicted without a complaint first having been filed and alleges improper testimony was offered before the grand jury.

Woodward's judgment dismissed the case without prejudice to Beadle's right to file a new petition after he has "properly and meaningfully exhausted state remedies."

Beadle had asked that the suit be treated as a class action, and that motion was denied.

Modern Easter Egg Actually Ancient

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The modern Easter egg has actually been around for thousands of years, says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins.

Ancient Persians believed the world was hatched from an egg on the first day of spring. Early Egyptians, Greeks and Romans regarded the egg as a symbol of the universe and a token of spring, fertility and rebirth. Christians in Mesopotamia first used eggs to represent the Resurrection, says Miss Hopkins.

Eggs were consecrated and the shells stained red to simulate Christ's blood. Since then the custom of coloring eggs and exchanging them as Easter gifts has become universal, she explains.

DPS Director Seeks Ban On Detectors

DALLAS (UPI) — The head of the Department of Public Safety has recommended banning radar detectors and hiring more patrolmen to get Texas motorists to adhere to the 55 mph speed limit.

"An increasing number of drivers are making use of the radar detector or fuzz booster to circumvent enforcement of the speed law," Col. Wilson E. Speir said Monday at the annual conference of the Texas Safety Association.

Speir said traffic fatalities related to speed are the most common and statistics show 79 percent of the drivers in Texas exceeded the 55 mph limit.

"The evidence demonstrates that substantial numbers of lives could be saved with only a moderate reduction in the overall speeds we see today," he said.

Speir said speed enforcement by troopers has an impact on the highway death toll, but each of the 1,494 troopers in the highway patrol has 120 miles of highway to patrol and more personnel could enforce the speed limit better.

"By all national standards, the highway patrol service needs to be expanded by approximately 1,500 troopers," he said.

Speir also recommended a mandatory 90-day license suspension for persons convicted of drunken driving. He said Texas law now calls for a one-year license suspension for driving while intoxicated, but said that law is seldom enforced.

Sculptor Tours U.S. Making Monuments

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Five years ago Peter Toth chiseled the final facet of an American Indian sculpture here, climbed into his home on wheels and vowed to sculpt a similar monument to the Indians in all 50 states by the time he was 30.

So far he has completed sculptures in 26 states. He has also acquired a wife, Kathy.

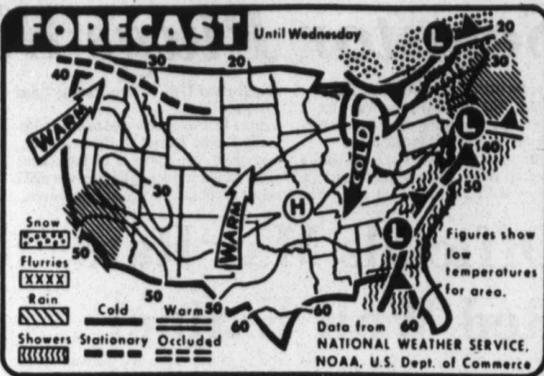

The 29-year-old, self-taught sculptor met her while sculpting a monument in Illinois. He brought her here recently to meet his family and to see the first wood sculpture he carved.

He learned, however, that vandals had sawed the 12-foot-high sculpture in half and carted off the top.

Undaunted, Toth said he and his wife were leaving for California where he was going to carve another monument from a giant sequoia tree near Palm Springs.

Harsh Winter Affects Larger Part Of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The past winter, with its record snowfalls and piercing cold temperatures, was one of the worst in recent history, according to government weather experts.

For most of the country east of the Rocky Mountains, the past season almost equaled — and in some places exceeded — the coldness of the 1976-77 winter, the most severe in at least 50 years in the Northeast and much of the Midwest.

Looking ahead, the weather service has predicted a cooler spring than normal for the Great Plains, the South and the Southeast. For New England, New York, much of the Southwest and California, temperatures are likely to be warmer than normal. Predictions are indeterminate for the rest of the country.

Melting ice and snow in addition to rains are expected to cause flooding problems in parts of country this spring. Flooding hit eastern Nebraska and parts of the Dakotas Monday as ice floes jammed rivers swollen from runoff.

Dr. Donald L. Gilman, chief of the National Weather Service's Long Range Prediction Group, said Monday the cold was more widespread this winter than last, with the area sandwiched between the Rockies and the Mississippi particularly hard hit.

"This year, the big crisis had to do with snowfall," Gilman said. "Perhaps two dozen states had snowfall records set in January. It was a winter noted for storms as well as cold, while the previous one was noted mostly for prolonged low temperatures."

Like most forecasters, Gilman's group missed predicting the severity of the 1976-77 season. But he says they did better this time.

"In the areas where we committed ourselves on temperature, we were 65 percent right and 35 percent wrong," he said. "This equals our 20-year average of being 65 percent right."

The group predicted that the winter in the East and North Central parts of the country would be colder than normal, but not as severe as last year. It also said that the west and southwest would be warmer than normal.

"But we were off in the Southeast, for instance, where we said it would be warmer than normal and it turned out to be much colder," Gilman conceded.

He said the 1976-77 winter led to fuel shortages and high utility bills because it began early, at the end of September, and drained fuel stocks early.

"This year, the stocks were higher than normal to begin with and it wasn't a severe fall," Gilman said. "The cold didn't hit hard until after Christmas and we were in better shape to start with, in terms of fuel availability."

"But January and February were quite cold and even though there was enough fuel, utility bills got very high," he added.

Vatican Says Pope Better

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI "is gradually improving and has no fever" today after a week of the flu, the Vatican announced. It said it was hoped the 80-year-old pontiff could preside at Easter Sunday Mass.

The illness has forced the pope to cancel most of his Easter Week activities. But the Vatican statement said the pontiff's improving condition "allowed him to receive his collaborators."

"Hope is confirmed and reinforced" that the pope will be well by Easter Sunday, the announcement said.

It was the first time in Pope Paul's 15-year reign that he has skipped his usually busy Holy Week activities.

The pope missed Palm Sunday Mass but appeared at his apartment window and gave his usual noon blessing to the crowd in St. Peter's Square.

Rep. Johnson Wins Chili Fete

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Harold "Bizz" Johnson is the winner of the second annual Chili Cook-Off Contest sponsored by the Congressional Wives' Club. He featured a spicy recipe from the Motherlode region near Sonora, Calif. But since Johnson wasn't there to claim the first prize gold trophy Monday, runner-up Rep. Norman Mineta, a fellow California Democrat, got all the cheers. The Japanese-American congressman explained that his special recipe had been handed down from the Samurai, had to be read from right to left and tasted best when eaten with chopsticks. More than 200 guests paid $50 each for the privilege of sampling 12 varieties of chili prepared in multi-gallon batches by lawmakers such as Rep. Lindy Boggs, D-La., and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. Foreign ambassadors, savoring spoonfuls of chili between sips of beer, explained their unique qualifications as chili judges. Iran's Ardeshir Zahedi said that when he was a student in Phoenix, supporting himself by washing dishes in the 1940s, all he ate was chili. Age R. Tammen Bakker, ambassador of The Netherlands, pronounced himself a "real virgin" when it came to chili since he hadn't tasted any since last year's contest. But he figured his inclusion among the ranks of the judges added a European flavor to the event. Hamad Al Madfa, ambassador of the United Arab Emirates, said the spices used in chili were similar to Indian food that he was fond of and that he was looking for a chili with "an aristocratic taste, an aroma, a beautiful touch." Mexican Ambassador Hugo B. Margain figured he was the most qualified of judges and was quite definite about the qualities of a perfect chili. "I'm looking for balance. Not too hot, not too much meat, not too many beans. And the sauce is very important," he said. Margain was so serious about his judging that he had eaten nothing but yogurt at lunch to prepare his palate for the tastings. Last year's winner, Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, who had an extraordinary recipe that included rattlesnake ("It had a special bite to it") decided not to enter this contest. He was resting on his laurels, he said, and preparing "an earthquake chili" for next year's competition. Rep. Charles Rangel said he decided to enter the chili cook-off because he sat next to Pickle on the Ways and Means Committee and thought the rattlesnake chili was so terrible it was ready for a challenge from the chili capital of the world — New York. His recipe which included bean sprouts and onions did not win a prize, however. Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., tied with Mineta for second place with a recipe that included venison, peppers and no beans. Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas, who insisted that all the other chili chefs were impostors, tied for third place with Mrs. Boggs and Sen. Harrison Schmidt, R-N.M. The very merry evening ended with the auctioning of several items, including a door inscribed with autographs of members of Congress. Zahedi bid $1,776, but the door was won by someone from General Dynamics Corp. who made a final bid of $1,812.

FBI Seeks Banker For Embezzlement

CASSOPOLIS, Mich. (AP) — A week ago, Kenneth Rudolph Snyder was a small-town banker respected for his church work. Today, he is the target of a nationwide search by the FBI. Snyder, 48, who vanished March 14 after telling colleagues he was going to visit a sick relative in Chicago, was charged Monday with embezzling $425,000 from a businesswoman in this small southwestern Michigan town. The FBI said Snyder never went to Chicago. "It's a complete shock to most people around here," said Larry Bontrager, editor of the weekly Cassopolis Vigilant. But no one was more shocked than Snyder's minister. "He's one of my best friends," said Ralph VanderWerf, pastor of the Bible Baptist Church in nearby Sumnerville. "I could not have a higher commendation for any man than for Ken Snyder. I believe there's a big untold story." VanderWerf said he thought that charges against Snyder, a mortgage vice president at the Cassopolis branch of Michigan National Bank, were "grossly exaggerated." During the nine years that Snyder and his family have been members of the church, Snyder served as deacon, church treasurer, a Sunday school teacher and lay preacher, the minister said. "It's a tremendous burden and blow to the family to have allegations made that in no way gibe with the man's history," VanderWerf said. He said Snyder's wife and four children, who the banker left behind, were taking the charges hard. The charges stem from the complaint of Levola Tillman, president of Smith Hoist Co. here, that Snyder took $425,000 from her by recording deposits in two false savings passbooks. The passbooks and $50,000 to $60,000 in cash from her safe deposit box were missing Friday when Mrs. Tillman opened the box. Snyder had a key to that box, according to Terry Dillon, an assistant U.S. Attorney in Grand Rapids. Dillon said none of Mrs. Tillman's deposits ever showed up in the bank's records. Mrs. Tillman was promised 8 percent interest on her savings although the legal limit is 5 percent, said the FBI. Authorities said audits showed no other money missing from the bank. "I'd just rather not discuss it at this time," said Mrs. Tillman when contacted by telephone Monday. She said she would not speak with reporters until she had met with her lawyer. She did say, however, that she had known Snyder several years. Dillon said Mrs. Tillman was a customer of Snyder's when he moved to the bank about 18 months ago after managing branch offices of Three Rivers Savings and Loan for 10 or 11 years.

FTC Probes Blue Shield

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doctor control of Blue Shield health insurance plans may reduce competition in the health care field and inflate the cost of medical services, the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission said today. Michael Pertschuk said the FTC is investigating the role of doctors in the 69 Blue Shield plans across the country. Blue Shield plans cover about 40 percent of the population and either pay directly or administer payment of about one-fourth of all money paid to doctors. In 1976 this amounted to nearly $4 billion. "Our investigation ... indicates that most Blue Shield plans are controlled by local medical societies or by other local physician groups ...," Pertschuk said in testimony prepared for a congressional hearing. Such control of payments to physicians raises conflict of interest questions, Pertschuk said. A House investigations subcommittee was opening a series of hearings on Blue Shield and any part it may play in what the subcommittee chairman called "the explosive rise in medical care costs." Blue Shield, providing doctor bill insurance, and its sister organization Blue Cross, insuring hospital bills, in combination represent the largest private health insurer in the country, Pertschuk said.

"The commission (FTC) shares this subcommittee's concern that physician influence over Blue Shield may reduce competition and distort prices, and we will continue to press forward in our efforts to identify and resolve these critical questions," he said. Blue Shield "market power" could be used to limit not only the competition between doctors and other providers of health services such as osteopaths and optometrists, said Pertschuk, but competition among physicians. Blue Shield plans may decide, for instance, not to pay for services performed by certain physicians, such as surgeons, for certain procedures, such as anesthesia, he said. Or a Blue Shield plan might discriminate against competing types of health care like Health Maintenance Organizations, which provide medical services on a prepaid group practice basis, Pertschuk said. A basic issue in the FTC probe is whether doctor-dominated Blue Shield boards should supervise decisions about whom to pay. The subcommittee on oversight and investigations also will hear testimony on whether consumers should have a part in making Blue Shield decisions.

Political Barriers Curb Growth Of Coal Mining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although there is enough coal to last Americans several centuries, its conversion into electrical power needed to produce the nation's food and fiber faces formidable obstacles, says the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association.

About one-half of the electric power generated in the United States is from coal used as a fuel, the association said today. Rural electric co-ops rely even more on coal, with more than 70 percent of their power coming from coal-fired generating plants.

"Roughly half of this amount is produced by rural electric generating and transmitting cooperatives," the association said. "The remainder is purchased from commercial utilities."

The electric power industry over-all used about 446 million tons of coal in 1976. Utility needs are expected to nearly double to 820 million tons annually by 1985 if power producers bring more than 250 new coal-fired units into service as planned.

Coal production in the United States was a little more than 600 million tons last year, the Carter administration has called for a doubling of that production by 1985, the association said in a new issue of "Rural Electrification" published today.

"Despite the fact that increased use of domestically available coal is a cornerstone of our national energy plan, numerous political, economic and environmental considerations have created formidable barriers to any rapid growth in coal mining, transportation and utilization," the report said.

Compliance with environmental regulations "can be staggering" in terms of costs and use of resources, the association said.

For example, the Cheyenne River station being built in Wyoming by Basin Electric Cooperative of Bismarck, N.D., will cost more than $1.24 billion.

"The total environmental control system will total $245 million in identified costs and will add about 25 percent to the over-all capital costs of the plant," the association said.

"However, these figures do not tell the complete story. The plant will consume more than 400,000 tons of coal per year just to operate the environmental system and will consume 350,000 tons of limestone per year and 2,000 acre-feet of water per year in the sulfur dioxide scrubber."

Cotton Growers Set Elections

A businessman director in each of three High Plains counties will be elected to the board of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. (PCG) next week.

Lamb County cotton producers and agronomists will meet at 7:30 a.m. Monday at the Chaparral Restaurant in Littlefield.

A 2 p.m. meeting is scheduled March 29 in the Community Room at the courthouse in Dimmitt for Castro County farmers and businessmen to make their selection.

The Lubbock County election will be at noon on March 30 at Underwood's Cafeteria, 711 34th St. in Lubbock.

Also scheduled at the Castro County meeting will be a discussion of cotton production and marketing practices by Dr. James Supak, area extension agronomist, and Marvin Sartin, extension economist, both of Lubbock.

A PCG staff member will conduct each election, present a brief summary of the group's objectives and activities, and answer questions concerning the commodity organization and its work.

Each of the 25 counties in the Lubbock-based PCG territory has a cotton grower and an agronomist for directors.

Lamb County directors are J. D. Smith of Sudan and Paul Bennett of Littlefield. Charles Axtell of Springlake and Edd C. McLeroy of Dimmitt represent Castro County on the PCG board.

Directors from Lubbock County are W. B. Criswell of Idalou and Jimmie Holder of Lubbock.

Panel May Require Solar Heating Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Solar heating and other non-fossil fuels may be required in all homes financed by the Farmers Home Administration after 1980.

The Agriculture Department said Monday it is developing preliminary home design plans that would include wood and geothermal heating systems.

Assistant Secretary Alex Mercure said the proposal, to be ready in four months, would examine the potential impact on the purchase price of a home.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures prices, after fluctuating nervously throughout the session, finished lower on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Some of the selling was attributed to a pickup in farmer sales of corn and soybeans over the weekend, prompted by sharply higher prices for those commodities.

With little news to stimulate additional buying in the wake of the rapid increases this month, some traders liquidated contracts to take their profits, analysts said.

Trading was delayed 15 minutes at the open, due to bookkeeping problems associated with the heavy volume of business on Friday.

An industry publication, estimating that soybean production in Brazil would exceed 11 million metric tons, said it thought recent assessments of crop damage in that country had been overstated.

A soybean association reported that almost 75 million bushels of soybeans were crushed into soybean oil and meal last month. Although the figure was 10 million bushels less than the crush in January, it was considerably higher than a year ago.

In addition, soybean stocks owned by processors were reported to be 123.5 million bushels—lower than in January and 63.2 million bushels fewer than last year.

The improved performance of the U.S. dollar on foreign money markets also discouraged buying.

Retired Farmer Promotes 54th Annual Fiddlers' Convention

By MONTE PLOTT
UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — J. Pierce Van Hoy, a rotund, white-haired retired farmer in red sneakers, is a most hospitable man. Look out over his land — see the rolling hills, see the 500 portable toilets.

Those cubicles will accommodate thousands of bluegrass music lovers and good-time seekers expected to converge on Van Hoy's farm this weekend for the 54th annual Old Time Fiddlers' Convention.

"It's as country as the wilderness and open plains. It's Americana," Van Hoy, who relishes his role as promoter, says of the three-day festival that begins Thursday.

His father started the affair to raise money for a nearby one-room school. From humble beginnings in 1924 with a few banjo pickers and a listener or two, the convention has caught on in recent years like blue jeans and cowboy boots.

Last year, according to the local sheriff's department and state Highway Patrol, some 125,000 people planted themselves on 500 acres here about 50 miles north of Charlotte.

Scattered about were veteran string music lovers, but most of the fans were too young to remember when, for folks outside the South, "bluegrass" meant merely a hearty vegetation. "The timing in the spring and the setting of the convention is conducive to the young at heart," says Van Hoy, a robust 60 himself. "After you pass 50, you're not going to get Grandma and bivaouac in the woods for three days."

Each Easter weekend this crossroads town of 125, marked by the tiniest dot on the road map, becomes one of the largest population centers in the state.

Tents sprout like spring flowers, a communal spirit settles on the land and the hills echo with bluegrass music.

Big-name musicians are rare, but spirited bands vie for trophies and cash ranging from $25 to $1,000 for the best fiddler. Judging is based on categories such as accurate tuning and "how good does it sound."

No electric instruments are allowed — indeed, there are no electric outlets on the stage of the 12,000-seat amphitheater Van Hoy built two years ago.

At conventions past, the aroma of smoldering marijuana has wafted out of Union Grove. Occasionally a festival has been marked by rowdiness.

Capt. Bill Stamey of the Iredell County Sheriff's Department said he and his 47 deputies have been preparing for nearly a month.

"During the last couple of years, everybody's been pretty good. We used to have a problem with drugs but now it's illegal whiskey. Some of them bring down a little moonshine from the mountains," Stamey said.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — About 800 supporters of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's opposition political party were reported jailed Friday night after a day of political turmoil at Lucknow in north central India.

Female Whale Called Largest Animal Ever

LONDON (UPI) — The biggest animal that ever existed was undoubtedly a female.

Dr. Katherine Ralls of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington says this massive individual was a blue whale.

Blue whales are the biggest things alive and in that species the female tends to be larger than the male. So it follows that the distinction of all-time biggest belongs to a female.

Dr. Ralls was not concerned with this item for the Guinness book of Records when she started a line of research on which she has just reported in the magazine New Scientist. What she was trying to determine was why in some species males are bigger than females and yet in others females are bigger than males.

In other words what advantage does size confer?

Dr. Ralls said most biologists still think Darwin's theory of a century ago that the larger size of males is due to competition for females is adequate and some do not realize that in some species outside their own specialities the females are the larger.

She said that she found families in which the female was larger scattered through about 60 percent of the mammalian orders including bats, rabbits and hares, baleen whales, seals and antelopes. In one extreme case, the South American bat, the male is so much smaller that the sexes were classified as different species for many years.

"It seems that males usually compete for females even in mammals in which females are larger," she said. "This is a novel idea with respect to this group of animals, but there is ample precedent elsewhere in the animal kingdom."

She pointed out that the female guppy is larger than the male but he is nevertheless more brightly colored and aggressive. The small deer, the tik tik, also has bigger females, but the males do the fighting.

"The females in some species may have become larger to be more effective mothers. A bigger mother is often a better mother; that is, a larger female may produce a greater number of surviving offspring."

"A large mother may produce a larger baby with a greater chance of survival, she may enable it to grow more rapidly by providing more or better milk and she may be better at such aspects of maternal care as carrying for or defending her baby."

Tuition Battle Going To Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of tuition grants for middle-income families are looking to the House Rules Committee to block a rival plan allowing tax credits for education costs.

But a Republican sponsor of the rival plan says a preliminary vote Monday almost assures enactment of some form of tax credit.

By a 218-156 vote, the House rejected a White House-backed effort by Democratic leaders to force a vote on the grant program, recommended by President Carter, under terms that would bar a vote on the tax credits.

Disappointed sponsors of the grant program indicated they will take the fight to the rules committee, but probably not until after the Easter recess. That panel could send Carter's bill back to the floor with a prohibition against consideration of any tax-credit amendment.

But the chief sponsor of the tax credits, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., said the fight is all but over. "This virtually assures enactment of tuition tax credits," he said after Monday's vote.

Meanwhile today, a coalition of public education groups announced the start of a nationwide campaign to oppose the tuition tax credit.

The groups, formed as the National Coalition to Save Public Education, said the bill would undermine support for free, public schools and "encourage further segregation of education."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, said tax credits would encourage "rivalries" among private schools set up to cater to special religious or ethnic groups. He said that, "in a very short period of time this country could have the problems that Quebec and Canada have."

Asked about claims that parochial schools do a better job of teaching children, Shanker replied: "They can expel and do expel any student they feel is causing them too much trouble."

Other groups in the coalition are the National Parents-Teachers Association, the American Association of School Administrators, the National School Boards Association, the Council of Chief State School Officers and the American Association of Colleges of Teacher Education.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, has repeatedly urged Congress to reject the tax credit approach to offsetting education costs and to expand existing grant programs to make them available to middle-income families.

Attorney General Griffin Bell said last weekend he thinks the tax credit bill would be ruled unconstitutional on grounds its aid for tuition-paying parents of parochial school pupils violates the Constitution's mandate for separation of church and state.

The grant program would provide tuition aid only for college and vocational students. The tax credit, when fully effective in 1980, would allow a tax credit of up to $500 per student at any college, vocational school or elementary or secondary school that requires a tuition.

Carter and other backers of the grants view them as more effective because they would be based on need. The tuition tax credit would go to rich and poor alike.

Sponsors of the credit say the grants program under current law is marred by fraud and government snooping into the private lives of potential recipients. The tax credit could be accommodated by adding only one line to federal tax forms, they say.

The Senate has voted for tuition credits three times over the past three years, but each time the proposal has been stymied by House leaders.

When it became obvious that the credit was likely to be approved this year, Carter rushed his own proposal to Capitol Hill.

The key part of his plan would extend eligibility for basic educational opportunity grants, now limited to families earning $15,000 a year or less, to those in the $26,000 range.

Under current law, the maximum grant is $1,800 a year, and that is available only to families with very low incomes, such as a family of four earning $6,000 or less with one student in college.

The bill that was before the House is similar to Carter's. It would allow the same $1,800 maximum grant, which would drop gradually as income rises.

In a debate on the issue Monday, a UCLA economics professor contended that a tuition tax credit would cause "a major social revolution" by forcing public schools to do a better job of educating poor children.

Thomas Sowell said working class parents, particularly blacks, now have little choice about where to educate their child.

"Whether that child is taught or untaught, whether that school is safe or unsafe, he has to send his child there. ... (A tax credit) means that he has to be taken seriously by the local bureaucrats," said Sowell. "Without that, he is a captive audience."

But Commissioner of Education Ernest Boyer said the measure runs counter to the administration's attempt to tailor federal aid according to students' needs.

KIDNAPPED BOY RETURNED — Six-year-old Patrick Brosnahan was returned safely to his home on Chicago's Northwest side Monday. Patrick was abducted as he walked to school Monday morning. A ransom of $15,000 was partially paid but was never picked up in the cemetery where it was left by the boy's father, Patrick, a postal clerk. Walking with the child were Alderman Roman Pucinski and a policeman. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge Tells Witness To Watch Language

TYLER (AP) — The daughter of paoled swindler Billie Sol Estes was chastized by a judge Monday when she stepped off the stand in his court and cursed the Mississippi promoter who says Estes and others swindled him out of $1.6 million.

Pam Tedford and six others were denied their motions to quash subpoenas requiring them to testify in the aggravated kidnapping trial of Estes' accuser, 40-year-old Don Trull.

As Mrs. Tedford finished testifying during the hearing to quash her subpoena, she left the stand and muttered an obscenity at Trull and his attorney.

State District Judge Glenn Phillips told Estes' daughter he hopes she enjoys her stay in Smith County, but that if she persisted in such comments, she would enjoy her stay in the Smith County Jail.

Don Trull, 40, is charged with holding Bill Mays, an employee of Tyler financier Billy Pyron, hostage last August in Pyron's office at the Heritage National Bank.

Trull is accused of threatening to burn the office unless he received a car, $10,000 in cash and Pyron's signature on a $775,000 promissory note.

Trull said his actions in the bank resulted from his being swindled by Pyron and Estes, and that he was trying to get his money back. He also denies he held Mays against his will.

Mays was released unharmed when Trull surrendered to police four hours after he splashed gasoline around the office and threatened to ignite it.

Jury selection was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today. Attorneys said it probably will take two to four days to select the jury. Testimony in the trial is expected to begin Monday. The trial was moved to a larger courtroom to accommodate the crowd expected to attend.

Estes, dressed in a blue pinstripe suit, sat with his daughter and his secretary.

Estes, his daughter and more than 70 other persons have been subpoenaed to testify, 55 of them by Trull's attorney, G. Brockette Erwin.

Two armed sheriff's deputies stood at the back of the courtroom, which was almost full because of the number of witnesses subpoenaed. A source said the officers were in the courtroom prevent trouble, since many of the witnesses are bitter enemies.

The judge denied the motions to quash the subpoenas for Mrs. Tedford, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Swofford, Gerald Holcomb, Raymond Ray Cure, Lester O. Berg and their attorney, Jack H. Bryant. They argued the subpoenas should be quashed because they had "no knowledge of transactions subject to Erwin's inquiries."

All witnesses were ordered to be in court at 1:30 p.m. next Tuesday.

Trull said he was taken in a scheme involving non-existent portable steam cleaners — a complaint now under investigation by the FBI, the attorney general's office and the Internal Revenue Service.

Date Scheduled For Reply To City Motion

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward today gave Joseph Lee Green until April 10 to reply to the City of Lubbock's motion for dismissal of the man's police brutality suit.

Green claims in a half-million-dollar damage suit filed against the city that three police officers drugged and beat him after arresting him Feb. 4.

The city Monday filed a motion to dismiss the suit, claiming the statute under which it was filed does not apply to a municipality.

The city also maintains no facts are alleged in Green's suit sufficient to invoke the court's jurisdiction under any other statute not cited by the plaintiff.

And it claims governmental immunity for any acts that may have been committed by individuals.

Green, 19, of 2801 E. 2nd St. claims the police officers used unnecessary force when they arrested him as he was walking along East 2nd Street.

He alleges they drugged him with a shot in the neck and that he did not regain consciousness until he was at the Lubbock County Jail.

The suit says that at the jail the officers dragged him along the floor by the handcuffs which locked his arms behind his back, and that they beat his head on the floor.

Green, who filed the suit as a pauper without an attorney's help, says the alleged beating stopped only when county jail personnel intervened.

Records show he was a patient in a local hospital for several days after the alleged assault.

The alleged incident has been the subject of police department, sheriff department, criminal district attorney's office and Federal Bureau of Investigation probes.

The three officers involved were initially relieved of duty but returned to their jobs after Police Chief J.T. Alley said he found them guilty of no wrongdoing. They maintained they had used necessary force to subdue a violent person who was resisting arrest as a suspect in a reported assault case.

No charges were filed by the district attorney's office against Green in connection with the incident.

Pyron has denied any involvement in the alleged steam-cleaning scheme or subsequent land deals. Trull said the deals were arranged by Estes with Pyron's financing. Estes has declined comment, referring all questions to his attorney, Jack Bryant, who branded Trull "a common felon."

Estes is on parole after serving six years of a 15-year sentence in federal prison after conviction of a massive fraud scheme involving loans obtained through the use of non-existent fertilizer tanks as collateral. Under terms of his parole, he is barred from engaging in any promotional activities.

Erwin filed a motion Monday for discovery, seeking a letter Estes' secretary, Sue Goolsby, signed verifying receipt of a $575,000 payment to Estes from Trull for the purchase of land in Smith County.

Trull said a copy of the letter was in a stack of documents he turned over to Smith County District Attorney A.D. Clark III for safekeeping. The letter was reportedly not among the documents Clark subsequently turned over to the state attorney general's office.

Besides Estes, the witness list is expected to include several West Texas and Tyler businessmen who also claim to have lost money in promotions they said were orchestrated by Estes.

Trull will be prosecuted by assistant district attorneys Tommy Schuler and Tom Dunn.

Parents Say Decision Important

CLEVELAND (AP) — Arthur Krause, whose daughter Allison, 18, was killed by Ohio National Guardsmen at Kent State University in 1970, observed that "the wheels of justice move slowly."

Krause was reacting Monday to word that the Supreme Court had cleared the way for a new trial in a $46 million civil damage lawsuit against Ohio officials.

The court let stand a ruling by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the suit must be heard again because a juror had been threatened during the 1975 trial.

"I hope that it will be an unbiased, free trial," said Krause in an interview from his home in Pittsburgh. "I hope people will look at the facts, not emotion ... that is difficult for people to do."

His feelings were echoed by other parents whose sons and daughters were among the four killed and nine wounded when Guardsmen opened fire at students in an anti-war demonstration.

Florence Schroeder of Lorain, whose 19-year-old son, William, was killed, said, "We hoped it would happen. We believe it's an important cause and that we should do everything we can to see that it doesn't happen again."

Sarah Scheuer of Boardman, a Youngstown suburb, lost a 20-year-old daughter, Sandra Lee. "We'll just hope for the best — that justice will prevail. I think it will be shorter this time; it's really an ordeal for us because it brings back all those different memories," she said.

A trial date as early as September is predicted by Nelson Karl, a Cleveland attorney who represents the parents and students filing suit.

"The new trial should be shorter, perhaps six to seven weeks instead of 15," he said. The original trial lasted 15 weeks.

Gov. James Rhodes continued his eight-year silence about the case, citing pending litigation.

May 4th Coalition spokesman Greg Rambo said the coalition "is gratified that Rhodes' questionable role in the Kent State murders will be put out in the open for the public to witness in this upcoming trial."

China's Great Wall Undergoing Repairs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Great Wall of China, dating back in its present form to the 14th century, is undergoing major repairs, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported Monday.

In a report from Peking, the agency said workmen are fixing the main entrance gate of the 1,500-mile-long wall. It added that a group of foreign tourists reported on Sunday that new blocks have already been inserted on either side of the gate.

Ex-Korean Agent Gives Testimony In Kim Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former agent of the Korean CIA testified today that Hancho C. Kim never told him specifically what Kim had done with $300,000 in cash given him by the agent to use in influencing congressmen.

Hancho Kim is on trial charged with defrauding the United States and with lying to a federal grand jury when he said he never had received a total $600,000 in cash from the KCIA agent, Sang Keun Kim.

S.K. Kim, the government's chief witness, has testified that he delivered $300,000 in $100 bills to Hancho Kim at his home.

"Did Hancho Kim tell you why he was paying congressmen money?" asked prosecutor John T. Kotelly.

S.K. Kim replied through an interpreter: "He said such things not in a direct way. As an example he said he had congressmen make statements favorable to Korea. He also said he had asked that military aid and economic aid to Korea not be reduced."

Among the things that Hancho Kim told him he had accomplished, the former agent testified, was that he had sent a letter to then-President Gerald R. Ford and that he had forwarded a copy of a Congressional Record to General Yang Doo Wan, the director of the KCIA in Seoul.

The witness was not questioned immediately about the letter to Ford or the president's response, if any.

S.K. Kim said Hancho Kim told him he had become close with five members of the House whom he called "the vanguard."

The witness said that Hancho Kim told him he was closest to Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio. There has been other testimony that Guyer and Hancho Kim were acquainted through their common interest in Findlay College in Ohio, of which both were graduates and trustees.

S.K. Kim said Hancho Kim told him that Guyer had made a favorable statement in Congress for South Korea. Then Hancho Kim said he was socializing with other congressmen through Guyer, S.K. Kim.

S.K. Kim said Hancho Kim had told him that "through the courtesy of Congressman Guyer he was able to meet with President Ford. He also said that through Congressman Guyer he met with senators."

S.K. Kim said that when Hancho Kim visited Seoul in May of 1975 the director of the KCIA, Shin Jik Soo, received an honorary doctorate from Findlay College.

On Hancho Kim's next trip to Seoul, the witness said, Kim told him that he had spent "lots of money on the Vanguard group."

S.K. Kim said Hancho Kim told him that $100,000 was spent on the vanguard group. The witness was not asked how the money was spent or the names of the five congressmen in the Vanguard group.

S.K. Kim spoke mostly of the generalities in which Hancho Kim described how he was spending the money brought to him by S.K. Kim.

Other testimony shows the principals in the alleged influence-buying operation had code names like "Catholic Father" and "Provincial Governor." The money came wrapped in thick yellow paper and, naturally, was in $100 bills. Letters began "should be burned after you read."

S.K. Kim testified earlier that he delivered $300,000 to Hancho Kim in September 1974 after receiving $256,000 in a diplomatic pouch, wrapped in thick, yellow paper and the rest from a $100,000 check he had received from Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park.

Kim has denied getting any money from S.K. Kim and his lawyer is expected to challenge the validity of a photostat of a receipt for $300,000 introduced into evidence Monday by Kotelly.

S.K. Kim said Hancho Kim told him that only three other people, all in Seoul, knew of the expensive project to sway congressmen to look favorably upon South Korea.

Hancho Kim said the others were President Park Chung Hee, then-KCIA director Shin Jik Soo, and Yang Doo Wan, a former KCIA station chief in Washington who later became the agency's director.

Government Maps Fight On Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of its new anti-inflation program, the Carter administration plans to speak out against wage and price increases it believes are unjustified, says the administration's chief inflation fighter.

"Private decisions are not completely private when it comes to wages and prices. . . . The government has to be prepared to step in," Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said in an interview Monday.

While the council can't force wage and price rollbacks, Bosworth said it will use all the powers it does have, including public hearings and subpoenas of wage and price information.

Bosworth said the inflationary cycle can be broken only if the government takes a more aggressive public role in wage and price decisions. He said the administration's anti-inflation policy "will not be credible if we're not willing to speak up."

Bosworth, 35, was a senior economist at the Brookings Institution here before Carter named him to the council post.

He acknowledged the program already has a credibility problem because nothing has been done to put it into operation. "On the basis of what they've seen so far, I agree with them (the public) that the program is going to fail."

Bosworth said the president "needs to play a far more visible role than he's been playing," but has been diverted by other problems. He said Carter may make a major speech on inflation soon.

The framework of the program was announced by Carter in January. It is voluntary and aims to reduce the rate of inflation by 0.5 percent a year by convincing unions and companies to hold new wage and price increases to levels at least 1 percent below increases of the last two years.

for kindergarten through second grade.

This exemption, the Justice Department said, would leave the lower grades at Wheatley, Martin, Posey, Guadalupe and Mahon — the elementary schools cited by Woodward as vestiges of unlawful segregation — "completely segregated."

The department said it needs more information on the magnet program proposed for Iles.

The department did not object to the closing of Struggs Junior High or the addition of that facility to Dunbar to make a "magnet complex." But the department warned: "Achievement of desegregation by magnet school programs is exceptionally difficult."

The district should be required to refine the Dunbar proposal and to formulate an "alternative plan" should the magnet school flop, the department said.

The department commended the school board for proposing to relocate the proposed new junior high from southwest of Loop 289 to due south of Loop 289, closer to the Struggs zone, which will be served by the school.

However, the department reiterated its objections to the three elementary schools proposed south of Loop 289, saying the district still hasn't properly studied the effects of that building program on desegregation.

Four hours of debate each have been set aside for the measures chiefly sponsored by Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the panel's ranking minority member.

The thrust of both measures is to cut back this year's production enough to raise market prices by eating away at surpluses.

Either Senate measure would mean that growers of wheat, feed grains, soybeans and cotton could finish the 1977-79 season with net returns between $7.5 billion and $5.7 billion, instead of losing $411 million, the Agriculture Department says.

Israeli troops and tanks seized the approaches to the crusader city from the south, east and northeast. The Israeli navy blockaded the harbor and only the coastal highway to Beirut was still open.

The bulk of the 10,000 guerrillas retreated to fallback positions north of the Litani when the estimated 15,000-25,000 Israeli invaders launched their final offensive over the weekend.

Israel's military chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, said the escape corridor to the north and the Kasmya Bridge over the river were left open "so the people of Tyre won't feel encircled."

The Israeli Cabinet declared Israel would not withdraw from southern Lebanon until it received assurances that the area "will no longer serve as a base for the terrorists and their murderous attacks." Gur said that to be effective, the U.N. peacekeeping unit must keep guerrillas away from the Litani River, Tyre and the border areas.

Lebanon complained to the United Nations about Israeli air and naval bombardments. Its ambassador gave the U.N. a list of "hostile acts" his government said Israel committed since the Security Council's withdrawal resolution was adopted Sunday.

Lt. Gen. Ensis Silasvuo, commander-in-chief of the U.N. peacekeeping forces in the Middle East, flew from Jerusalem to Beirut today to discuss arrangements to deploy peacekeeping units in the south. U.N. sources in New York, however, indicated sizable forces would not be sent in until the fighting stopped.

Casualty figures for the six-day-old invasion varied widely. The Lebanese government reported 1,168 Lebanese and Palestinians killed. The PLO said on Sunday that 144 of its guerrillas had been killed and claimed 450 Israelis killed or wounded. The Israeli command reported 20 deaths among its troops and estimated 400 Palestinians killed.

They said the KGB agents arrested Shelkov on March 14 in his daughter's home in the Soviet central Asian city, where he was living, and searching the premises for hidden manuscripts and other materials.

Mitchell Denies Seeing Korean Payoff Memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell testified today that he never saw a 1971 FBI memo telling him and Henry A. Kissinger that South Korean President Park Chung Hee's aides were involving in giving hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Democratic Party and that Tongsun Park had paid off a congressman.

But Mitchell said he did see another FBI memo quoting U.S. intelligence as saying that aides to former House Speaker Carl Albert and former Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher, D-N.J., "are connected with the Korean Central Intelligence Agency."

"I'm certain I would" remember seeing the letter, partly because of the reference to Korean donations to the Democratic Party, Mitchell told a House international relations subcommittee investigating alleged Korean attempts to buy influence with Congress.

"There is a reference to a president," Mitchell said. "There's a reference to a congressman being bought off. I'm sure I would remember it."

Before Mitchell testified, the subcommittee released FBI memos to Mitchell and Kissinger, including a detailed one dated Nov. 24, 1971.

Kissinger, who at the time was head of the National Security Council under President Richard M. Nixon, has agreed to testify later, said subcommittee Chairman Donald Fraser, D-Minn.

Mitchell was Nixon's first attorney general and later became director of his 1972 re-election campaign. He was convicted of criminal charges in the Watergate cover-up and is on furlough from prison.

Mitchell said he went to Speaker Albert's office and told him of the memo regarding the aide, Suki Park Thomson.

He said Albert replied that Mrs. Thomson was a fine young lady who had been educated in the United States and that the speaker "didn't see any problem."

The subcommittee was told last week that the second congressional aide was Kim Kwang, who was an aide to Gallagher.

But Mitchell said he did not consult with Gallagher because Gallagher was then under investigation, presumably for a local political fund violation for which he was later sent to jail.

A third memo to Mitchell and Kissinger quoted U.S. intelligence as saying a congressman had asked President Park for a campaign contribution and to make Tongsun Park South Korea's exclusive U.S. rice dealer.

Mitchell said he also did not see that memo and said his initials on it were put there by someone else.

Mitchell was asked whether he had ever gotten any information of any other congressman being involved in Korean influence-buying during the time he was attorney general. He replied that he did not.

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, Gen. Alexander Haig, who was a top aide to Kissinger in the National Security Council, avoided saying whether he knew in those years about Korean payoffs to congressmen.

"It would be very inappropriate for me to comment in a public forum on that subject," Haig, now supreme allied commander in Europe, told a news conference.

Haig said he would leave such comments to Kissinger, "who I understand did take some action."

The letters to Kissinger and Mitchell also said that President Park's regime "was directly involved in directing the contribution of several hundred thousand dollars to the Democratic Party."

That and a second letter to the two members of former President Richard M. Nixon's Cabinet also said that two congressional staff aides "are connected with the Korean Central Intelligence Agency."

The letters were sent to Kissinger and Mitchell under the signature of then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

"Park Tongsun has made payments to congressmen (name deleted) with money received in rice deals," a summary of the letters to Mitchell and Kissinger said. "Park Tongsun is acting under KCIA direction but is not a KCIA employee as such."

The letter from Hoover was dated Nov. 24, 1971 and contained a paragraph telling both Kissinger and Mitchell that the source of the information was so sensitive that it was being relayed only to them and could not be passed on even to FBI investigators looking into Tongsun Park's alleged activities.

Park has acknowledged he gave about $750,000 to some 30 congressmen but says he did so only as a foreign businessman and not as an agent trying to buy influence for the South Korean government.

The summary of the Nov. 24 letter said "(name deleted), a congressional staff aide, is under KCIA control." A Sept. 30 letter to Kissinger and Mitchell said two congressional staff aides "are connected with the KCIA."

A former State Department Korea desk chief, Donald Ranard, told the subcommittee last week that intelligence reports indicated Mrs. Thomson and Mrs. Kwang had working relationships with the KCIA.

A third letter from Hoover to Mitchell and Kissinger said an unnamed congressman "who had previously sought election campaign contributions from President Park, told President Park that Park Tongsun should not only be put in overall charge of influence-lobbying efforts in the United States, but should also be named as chief Republic of Korea agent for rice purchases from the U.S."

Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., pleaded guilty last week to conspiring in South Korean influence efforts and getting South Korean officials to make Tongsun Park Seoul's exclusive rice dealer.

in deciding the cases of two suspended Chicago students, ruled they were entitled to sue for substantial damages.

That ruling was overturned by today's decision limiting such damage suits to "nominal damages not to exceed $1" unless the students can prove actual damages such as mental anguish or can prove that the officials acted maliciously.

"We believe that the denial of procedural due process should be actionable for nominal damages without proof of actual injury," Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. wrote for the court.

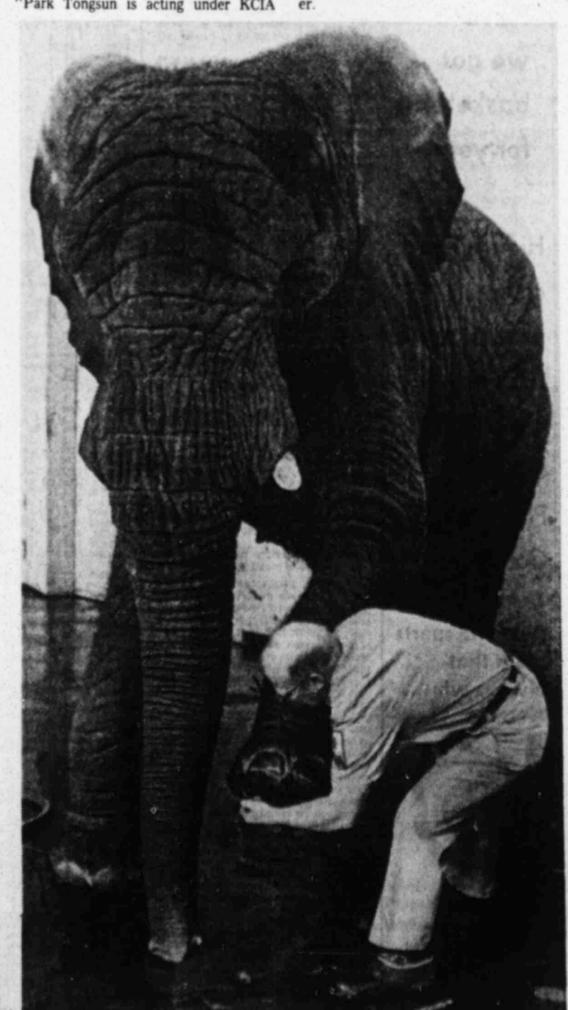

One of the Chicago suits was brought on behalf of Silas Brisco, a sixth-grader suspended from classes at Barton Elementary School for 17 days in 1973 because he wore an earring in violation of school rules.

The other was brought on behalf of Jarius Phipps, a ninth-grader suspended from the Chicago Vocational High School for five days in 1974 for smoking on school property.

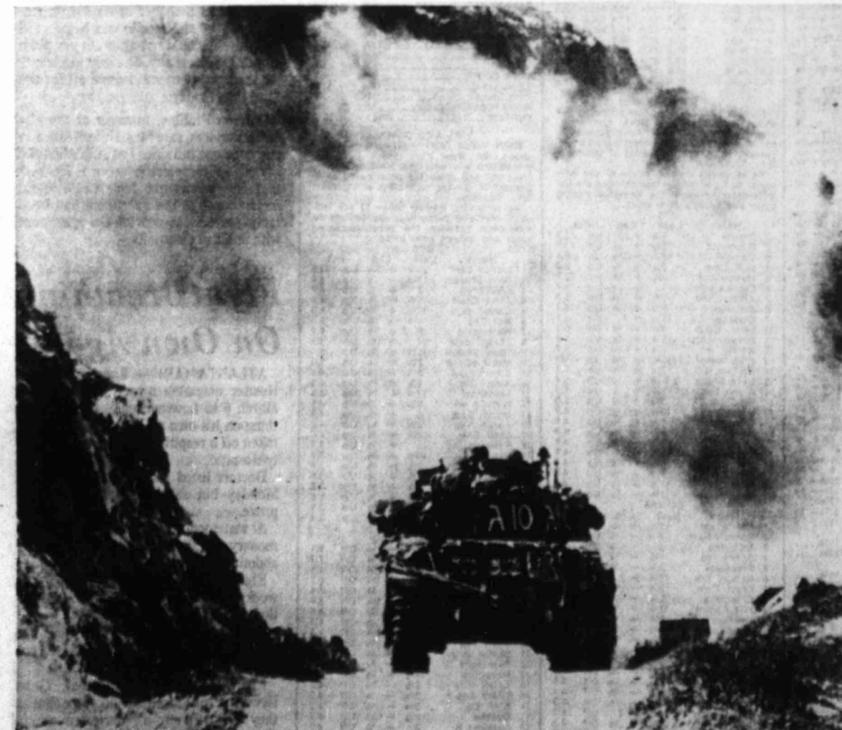

Neither boy was given a pre-suspension hearing.

Brisco's suit against school officials had sought $5,000 and Phipps suit asked $3,000 in damages. Now, neither will be able to collect more than $1 if they cannot prove actual injury.

In another action, the Supreme Court ruled today that criminal trial juries must have at least six members. The justices voted unanimously, for various reasons, to overturn the use of five-member criminal juries in Fulton County, Ga.

Nebraskans Keep Eye On Ice Jam

VALLEY, Neb. (AP) — A huge ice jam clogging the Elkhorn River near its junction with the flood-swollen Platte below Omaha could break up at any time, officials say, sending more rushing water downstream.

Rescuers watched river levels today, poised to evacuate more eastern Nebraskans if water continues to rise. Already 4,000 people have been chased from their homes.

A Douglas County official estimated the flood had already caused at least $250 million in property damages.

Much depended on the ice jam. The National Weather Service said the Platte River had fallen slightly north of the Elkhorn and probably would be back below flood stage by late Wednesday.

A forecaster said that if the ice broke, water backed up behind it would flow toward the towns of Plattsmouth and Louisville and into the Missouri River along the Iowa border.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Civil Defense emergency operations center in Lincoln said the situation had stabilized Monday night and that all evacuations had been completed.

Gov. J.J. Exon said he planned to ask the Legislature today for a multi-million dollar appropriation to meet the flood emergency. He said that once supportive figures were in, he would ask President Carter for a federal disaster declaration.

Exon told volunteers near Fremont, along the Platte northwest of Omaha, that the flood danger in their area soon would be ended.

Further upstream in North Bend, Dodge County Sheriff Richard Wennstedt said he believed the worst of the flooding was over, leaving one person dead and damage in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

He said at least 200 homes in the county were flooded, most of them in North Bend, Ames and on the fringes of Fremont.

He said the most critical point in Dodge County is a dike being built of sandbags west of Fremont near Highway 30.

"If that holds, I think we'll be all right," Wennstedt said.

The single fatality was Emily Hedges, 71, who was found Monday morning in North Bend. She had told rescuers Sunday night she had been through floods since 1944 and wasn't going to leave her home.

All 1,600 residents of Valley were ordered to evacuate Monday, and many were taken by bus to Boys Town west of Omaha. Others were evacuated from towns along a 40-mile stretch of the Platte between North Bend and Ashland.

Officials Study Budgets For Pothole Repairs

By The Associated Press
Potholes in the streets and highways of the northern sections of Texas do more than jar passing vehicles. They also cost money.

State and municipal street and highway officials in affected areas are busily studying budgets to find ways to pay for repairing the damage done this past winter.

The potholes were caused by freezes and thaws that swelled and then contracted the surfaces of the roadways.

Potholes, the most visible reminder of a harsh winter, would not have been so bad if temperatures had hovered on one side or the other of the freezing mark.

Mark Goode, in charge of Texas Highway Department operations, said, "The roadway system in the south was not as severely affected as the north."

"Dallas was as severe if not worse than anything I recall," he said. "All of the north was quite severe."

Hard-pressed Dallas street maintenance supervisor John Murphy, who estimated the cost of pothole repairs at $600,000, said all of the axle-jarring holes should be at least temporarily filled within the next few weeks.

"The problem that really caught the Dallas area was an intense increased number of freeze-thaw cycles. It tore us up," he said. "I've got a gut feeling we had about 30 freeze-thaw cycles."

Ray Carr, an assistant superintendent in Fort Worth, estimated the city has already spent $225,000 for temporary repairs, with work slated to continue into the summer.

"We've got some money set up for repairs such as this. Whether that will cover all of it or not, we haven't determined yet," Carr said.

The smaller cities are scrambling to keep pace with the unexpected dents into their pavements and their budgets.

Trash Dump Turns Into Mountain

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — If South Dakota has Mt. Rushmore, California has a Mt. Trashmore.

It's a huge pile of compacted trash here that rises 100 feet. It began to rise in 1941, and someone dubbed it Mt. Trashmore.

In most places in California, trash is buried in canyons. "But there are no canyons near Fresno, so my dump has become a mountain," said Frank Caglia, 65, who owns a disposal company.

"It can't go much higher," he said. "I plan to begin landscaping the top in a few months. I will transform the dump into a thing of beauty that the people of Fresno will enjoy."

He plans to build a chapel, museum, hotel and restaurant atop it. The museum, he said, will contain among other things his collection of some 200 life-size animated figures.

The Valley, Neb., couple left their home with only the clothes they were wearing. They say they've never seen a disaster like this Platte River flood, which has already forced the evacuation of more than 4,000 people in seven eastern Nebraska counties.

About 25 miles upriver from Valley, 71-year-old widow Emily Hedges was found dead Monday in flood waters near her North Bend home, a day after she refused to evacuate, said the Dodge County sheriff's office. Mrs. Hedges was the only known fatality.

All 1,600 residents of Valley were ordered evacuated Monday by the mayor.

"The sheriff knocked on our door about 9 a.m. He said we had to go," Gilliam recalled tearfully at a Boys Town disaster center. "I told him we wasn't going. He said, 'Yes, you are.' We rode in the back of an open truck."

The Gilliams said they think their house will escape damage because it is on high ground. But Gilliam was worried about his 92-year-old brother who lived nearby, and Mrs. Gilliam was waiting for her two sisters, who also were being taken to Boys Town.

In the 76 years the trolleys ran along the streets of Lisbon, Portugal, from where they were imported, there was never any snow. Now, city crews must repaint and rebuild them after two winters on salted Detroit streets. ## One Man Dies In Jet Fuel Barge Blast

DELAWARE CITY, Del. (AP) — One man was killed and another is presumed dead, but officials say the toll might have been much higher in the explosion of a jet fuel barge at the Getty Oil Co. docks here.

The barge Interstate 19, with the tug Roanoke alongside, was taking on JP4 fuel, and was about half full, when the explosion and fire ripped across the loading dock Monday. The barge had a capacity of 19,000 barrels.

Federal, state and corporate officials offered no clues as to what caused the blast.

Four crewmen were aboard the tug, officials said. The mate of the tug is believed to be the man killed.

"The rest of the people on the tug were OK," said John Newcomb, a spokesman for the Interstate and Ocean Transport Co. of Philadelphia, owner of both vessels. "I think they were having lunch. All inside having lunch — it probably saved their lives," he added.

The tug was damaged topside. U.S. Coast Guard Lt. Tom Morse said the flaming barge drifted away from the dock, ran aground about one mile across the Delaware River channel and broke in half.

"It was terrible," said Judy Holiday, who lives about half a mile from the dock. "It took the bottom of my insides out and it still feels that way."

She said her front door was jarred open by the impact of the blast. The dead man was difficult to identify. Medical authorities were to try for a positive identification today.

Newcomb said the missing man was identified as Steve Lynch, a tankerman on the Interstate 19.

street. We decided we had to get the kids out," said Mrs. Wessling. The water had the "strongest current" she'd ever experienced, she said.

Eight-year-old Tommy and 5-month-old Jessica shared a Red Cross cot with their mother at Boys Town. Jessica slept through most of the ordeal, said Mrs. Wessling.

"We put a sofa on the kitchen table. But I don't think the cars will come out of it," said Mrs. Wessling. "All the old-timers in my block said it's the worst flood in 40 years."

Jerry and Joanne Flood left their home at Timber Lodge Lake near Valley by wading through knee-deep water in their driveway, then made their way to a truck they had moved earlier to high land. Their blue jeans were still wet when they arrived at Boys Town.

The Floods' 8-year-old daughter, Jackie, had spent Sunday night with her grandmother in Valley. She arrived safely at Boys Town late Monday.

Mrs. Flood said there have been "enough jokes about our name" since they arrived at Boys Town. "But I'm afraid I'll be crying when I get back home," she said. "I'm very worried about our house. We don't have flood insurance."

Slow Economic Growth Called Necessary

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The chairman of the board of Exxon Corp. says somewhat slower economic growth will be a necessary part of the adjustment the United States must make to higher energy prices.

"What the world is running out of...is not energy, but cheap energy. We are in a period of transition to a new era of high, and probably rising, energy costs," C.C. Garvin Jr. told the annual meeting of the National Petroleum Refiners Association here Monday.

"Somewhat slower economic growth will necessarily be a part of the adjustment process — at least for a while..." he said.

"No one can really know how the transition period we have entered will turn out — how rapidly scientific and technological progress will bring down costs and develop new sources, how far the link between economic growth and energy growth can be stretched, what new supplies of oil and gas will be discovered in frontier areas," he said.

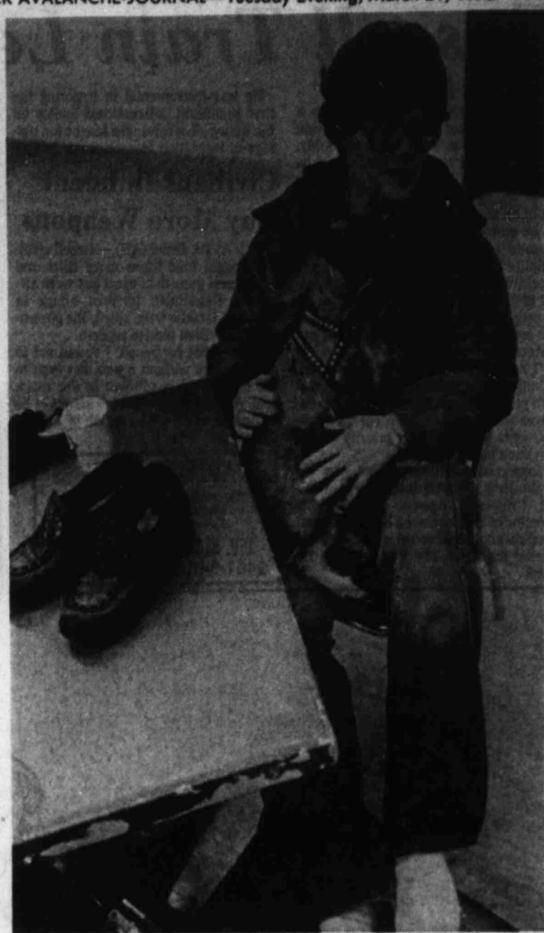

Former President Gerald Ford was to deliver a keynote address at lunch today to the 2,400 refiners attending the meeting. The luncheon and two receptions afterwards are closed to the public and press, but Ford planned a brief news conference for this afternoon.

Garvin, in his speech Monday, also said a national energy policy cannot provide either instant or final solutions, but must create a climate within which the nation can make progress toward solving its energy problems.

"The emphasis should be on getting results," Garvin said.

He said a national energy policy "should cut away the underbrush of unnecessary regulation" and "provide for oil and gas pricing which will restrain consumption while encouraging exploration and production."

Victims Of Burglary Nab, Lose Suspect

Almost $2,000 worth of musical instruments was recovered shortly after an early morning vehicle break-in today. However, the suspected burglar managed to escape his captor-victims minutes later.

Robert Harrison of Alpine told police he noticed the rear window was open and a screen was cut on his van parked in the 2300-block of 9th Street about 3 a.m. When Harrison looked inside the vehicle, he saw a man rummaging through the property.

According to the owner, when he asked the stranger what he was doing, the man ran outside, but Harrison caught up with him and took him to a nearby apartment. While Harrison and a friend went back to see if anything had been taken, the suspect reportedly escaped from another man at the residence.

Reports indicated Harrison found his guitars, valued at $1,970, next to the apartment complex.

In another car burglary, Bryan Ellis Wheeler, a Texas Tech University policeman, of 2801 E. 8th St. said someone stole his badge, $45 cash and some cassette tapes from his vehicle parked in the 2000-block of E. 28th Street Monday.

According to Dewayne Miller of 212-A 37th St., a wedding ring and some camping equipment, altogether valued at $500, was taken by whoever got through a window at his home recently.

An intruder kicked in Larry D. Jones' 2510 Ave. L front door during the past two days and made off with a $250 stereo and a pair of yellow tennis shoes.

Tom Sawyer Dorough, a deliveryman for Hygeia Bottled Water Co., told officers 20 empty 5-gallon water bottles were taken from a truck parked in the 400-block of Avenue U Monday. The haul was valued at $90.

Richard A. Komarek of 2826 62nd St. told police Monday he went to a Marshall Street club Saturday night about 8 p.m. and left about 10 p.m. When he returned to the club Monday morning to pick up his car, however, he found 20 eight-track tapes valued at $100 missing from the vehicle.

A $165 citizens band radio and an eight-track tape system also were reported missing from a car owned by Scot Morgan of 3503 Bangor Drive sometime between 8 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 a.m. Monday while the auto was parked outside his home.

Jesse S. Jimenez of 2109 Emory St., No. 103 told police someone removed a $200 television set from his home between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Sunday. Jimenez gave police the name of a suspect in connection with the burglary.

Burglars also made off with a $450 watch from Audrey Margan's 5759 28th St. home between 10 p.m. Friday and 6 p.m. Saturday, she told officers.

Hill To Fight Bell Request

AUSTIN (UPI) — A federal agency, the state attorney general and six Texas cities have asked the Public Utility Commission for permission to intervene in southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s request for a $214 million rate increase.

Deadline for filing the motions to intervene was 5 p.m. Monday. The Utility Commission has scheduled a hearing for March 28 to determine which of the 17 motions to intervene will be granted.

Attorney General John Hill had announced earlier he planned to seek permission to oppose Bell's request for a $214 million increase, calling the request substantially excessive.

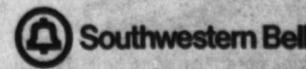

Others filing motions to intervene in the case were the city of Fort Worth, Texas Retailers Association, city of Dallas, city of Waco, Texas Alarm and Signal Association, Texas Association of Telephone Answering Services, Communications Workers of America, city of Houston, town of Highland Park, General Services Administration, Chex Systems, Inc., Sonitrol Systems of San Antonio, Inc., Texas Municipal League, city of Beaumont, city of Austin, and the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas effective April 14, 1978.

It is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish an increase of 11.4 percent in the company's intrastate revenues.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with each affected municipality, and is available for inspection in each of the Company's public business offices.

Russell Train Leading Environmental Crusade

By JAMES PHILLIPS
 WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a year has passed since Russell Train stepped down as the government's Mr. Conservation, a year in which the highly-visible Train disappeared from public view.

But he now is returning to the spotlight as he embarks on a new environmental crusade as the president of the World Wildlife Fund-U.S., one of 25 affiliates of World Wildlife Fund-International, a major global conservation organization. He is prepared to go into battle to protect the earth's flora and fauna, its winds and waters.

"I hope to make a major personal contribution in moving worldwide conservation programs forward. I hope to help catalyze world opinion, help energize governments to give a higher priority to conservation needs," he said.

Conservation battles are not new for Train. He has served as the Environmental Protection Agency administrator, director of the Council on Environmental Quality and undersecretary of Interior during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

He was instrumental in imposing the first significant international quotas on the killing of whales. He fought for passage of legislation to control toxic substances and oil spills. He played a major role in the passage of the National Environmental Policy Act. He sought to regulate ocean dumping.

Civilians In Israel

Buy More Weapons

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli civilians bought four times more rifles and other hand guns than usual last week after the Palestinian terrorist attack in which 35 Israelis were killed, the government television service reports.

"After what happened, I vowed not to go anywhere without a gun, not even to the bathroom," a survivor of the attack said. About 160,000 guns are known to be in private hands in the nation of 3.5 million people.

During the Arab oil embargo and economic recession of 1973 and 1974, Train helped maintain the environmental movement's momentum.

"I think I succeeded at a time when environmental programs were under great threat," he said in a recent interview. Now, the 57-year-old Train hopes to capitalize on his government experience to further protect the environment, especially on an international level.

"I know a great many of the people involved with conservation abroad, and have known them for years. World Wildlife Fund is certainly the major international conservation effort."

And he views the task ahead as substantial.

"I think one would have to assess the international conservation scene as being pretty discouraging at this time. That's not to say a lot hasn't happened. It says there's a lot that needs to be done.

"It seldom is a problem of doing something about saving an animal. We're talking about whole ecosystems, economic development. We're talking about a major political problem."

It's not just saving a species in the Amazon rain forest, he adds. The problem is the destruction of the rain forest — and saving a large section of it.

One of his major tasks will be to increase the public's awareness of the World Wildlife Fund-U.S., which he helped establish in 1961. Among its major functions is the funding of biological research projects. "I would hope the World Wildlife Fund would become a household name."

And he will attempt to raise money for conservation programs, especially from corporations. "I think this is an area that has not been adequately addressed in the past."

And he looks to the future. His government experience at the uppermost levels was "an enormous experience and very rewarding. But eight years is a long time. I think I was ready to leave."

Group Drops Hospital Bid

By JEFF SOUTH

Avalanche-Journal Staff

A Birmingham, Ala.-based management company has dropped its request for government authorization for its proposed Surgical Hospital of Lubbock, state and local health-care officials said Monday.

Brookwood Health Services Inc. declined comment on the disclosure. Nor would the firm say whether its reported action spells the end of its plan to convert the now-vacant Lubbock Medical Center building into a new hospital for out-patient surgery.

Several of the city's existing hospitals had opposed the Brookwood project because, they said, the Lubbock area already has enough hospital beds and the new facility would further dilute the region's supply of nurses and feed inflation of local medical costs.

Brookwood announced late December it had nailed down the purchase of the Medical Center, enveloped in federal bankruptcy proceedings for the past two years, from the building's owners, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and LaSalle National Bank of Chicago.

Even though it has been closed since 1976, the five-year-old Medical Center facility, 4000 22nd Place, currently is licensed by the State of Texas as a 200-bed "chronic care" hospital.

That license, sources close to the project said, made the building particularly valuable because new hospital licenses often are difficult to secure from the Texas Health Facilities Commission. To get a license from scratch, for example, a project must obtain a "certificate of need" — proof from the commission that its facility is needed.

Bypassing the "certificate of need" procedure, Brookwood in January asked the state agency for a "declaratory ruling," authorization to immediately reactivate the Medical Center beds. Brookwood had hoped to renovate the building and reopen it in 1979 as a 147-bed "acute care" hospital primarily for out-patient surgery.

University, Highland, Methodist and St. Mary of the Plains hospitals filed with the state commission documents contesting Brookwood's application for a declaratory ruling.

The Lubbock County Hospital District, which in February opened the county's 245-bed Health Sciences Center Hospital, also expressed its objections to the proposed new surgical facility.

Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and its hospital, said he and hospital attorney Charles Galey were prepared to attend a recent meeting of the commission to protest the application for the Brookwood project.

But, Bosworth told the hospital district's board of managers Monday, "The application has been withdrawn."

He said he does not know why Brookwood dropped its request for state authorization.

Existing hospitals here opposed Brookwood's project because, they maintain, Lubbock is experiencing a critical shortage of medical personnel, especially nurses. Opening a new hospital, they say, would make the problem worse.

Also, the hospitals say the proposed Surgical Hospital may spark a "wage war" — hiking nurses' salaries and hospital rates over the city. Further, they say Lubbock already has an adequate number of hospital beds available.

Administrators of existing hospitals charged that Brookwood was trying to sidestep indepth review of its project by seeking only a declaratory ruling. "The applicant (Brookwood) is attempting to circumvent the proper procedure" of first getting a certificate of need, University Hospital said in its objections.

The current state license for the Medical Center beds expires on March 27. To get a new license, the Brookwood project would have to be reviewed by South Plains Health Systems Inc., a federally funded regional planning agency.

The South Plains agency has indicated it is skeptical of the proposed Surgical Hospital.

The Texas Health Facilities Commission confirmed Monday that Brookwood's application for a declaratory ruling had been withdrawn.

One rumor regarding that action, parties interested in the project say, is that Brookwood failed to get clear title to the Medical Center building from HUD.

One of Brookwood's selling points was that its new hospital would offer out-patient, same-day surgery — a service the firm says has been unavailable here. However, the Health Sciences Center Hospital and other local hospitals say they have indeed been providing such surgery.

Salinas' Offices Open Saturdays

Rep. Froy Salinas announced Monday the legislative office for District 75-A will be open on Saturdays from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. beginning Saturday, at 701 Court Place, "to better serve the needs of the community."

Salinas said the new hours will afford persons unable to communicate with the office during the regular business week an opportunity to discuss their needs or problems with Rep. Salinas or a member of his staff.

Local Candidates Draw For Spots On Ballot

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although it has not been scientifically proved that being first on the ballot improves a candidate's chances of being elected, no one was hoping for last place Monday when Lubbock County executive committees of the Democratic and Republican Parties drew lots to determine the order in which names would appear on the parties' ballots.

In the 19th Congressional race Morris Sheats' name will appear first on the Democratic ballot, followed by that of Kent Hance, while Jim Reese will get the top spot on the Republican ballot, above the names of George Bush and Joe Hickox.

In the 28th Senatorial District race in which five Democrats are competing, the name of Jesse T. George will appear first on the ballot, followed by Delwin Jones, Morris Turner, E.L. Short and Don Workman.

In the race for state representative from District 75-B, the incumbent, Froy

Salinas will appear first on the Democratic ballot followed by that of Jerry Airhart.

Nolan "Buzz" Robnett's name will appear first on the Republican ballot for District 75-A state representative. Jack Chappell's name will be second.

For U.S. Senate in the Democratic primary, Joe Christie's name will head the ballot, followed by Bob Krueger.

Democratic candidates for governor will appear on the ballot in the following order: Dolph Briscoe, Donald Beagle, Preston Smith, Ray Allen Mayo and John Hill.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements garnered the first ballot position, followed by Ray Hutchison and Clarence Thompson.

In the Democratic race for Attorney General, Price Daniel Jr.'s name will appear first, followed by Mark White.

The ballot position for other Democratic races are:

County commissioner, Pet. 2: Coy Biggs, Paul Enger Sr.

District Attorney: John Montford, Alton Griffin.

Justice of the Peace, Pct. 4: Dardenella Williamson, J.B. McAuley, Bobby Max Jones and Jean Holt.

Justice of the Peace, Pct. 1 Place 2: Charles E. Smith, Charles H. Hutchinson. L. Governor: Troy Skates, Bill Hobby, John Hill Westbrook, James L. McNeas Jr.

For Republican County chairman, the name of Ruth Schiermeyer will precede that of L. Dean Krueger.

The county Republican executive committee also placed a resolution on the ballot commending Sen. John Tower for opposing the Panama Canal treaties and urging all senators to vote against ratification of the second treaty.

Both Republican and Democratic county conventions will be held at 2 p.m. May 13 — the Republicans will meet at Smylie Wilson Junior High School and the Democrats will convene at Estacado High School.

Briscoe Expects Easy Victory

Gov. Dolph Briscoe told a crowd of approximately 250 supporters at an airport rally here Monday he expected to "win big" on May 6 and to go on to "build an even greater Texas."

On his eighth airport stop of the day while campaigning for re-election, Briscoe said Texas had "unlimited opportunity for those willing to work" and said he was optimistic about the future of the state.

Briscoe said Texas has the best climate to encourage further industrial investment which would mean additional jobs for Texans in the future.

"Other states have spent and taxed and spent and taxed," Briscoe said, while Texas has gained 250,000 additional industrial jobs during the last five years while he has been in office.

The governor said Texas was on an "economic boom unprecedented in the history of the state," and said he wanted to ensure the boom continues in the years ahead.

"The competition will be keener in years ahead because the states which made the mistake of excessively spending and taxing have realized their mistakes."

Those states will be competing with Texas in the future for industrial development and additional jobs, he said.

Briscoe pointed with pride to the fact that Texas is the only Sunbelt state without a state or corporate income tax and where business income increased 52 percent during his five years in office.

Noting that funding for medical schools in the state had increased some 250 percent during his tenure, Briscoe predicted the Texas Tech University School of Medicine, one of the beneficiaries of the funding, would be "one of the finest medical schools to be found in the United States," and would serve the health needs of the western half of Texas.

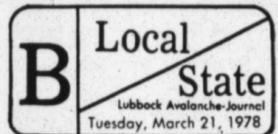

Briscoe never mentioned either Atty. Gen. John Hill or former governor Preston Smith, two of his Democratic opponents.

Range Fires Threaten Texas Areas

By The Associated Press

Firemen at Wichita Falls were hoping for the best today but expecting the worst.

They were joined by firefighters from four other fire departments Monday in battling a range fire that spread along U.S. 277 and U.S. 287 for eight miles from the northern edge of Wichita Falls.

"The weather bureau says the wind should change northerly with a 40 percent humidity, and a very high danger of fire tomorrow," an observer at Wichita Falls said Monday night.

Range fires also plagued several areas of East Texas Monday.

Four businesses were destroyed in a downtown section of Willsboro, in East Texas, in a fire that began at about 8:30 a.m. and raged for two hours.

Two fires broke out within a half hour early Monday at the 50-unit Cove Apartments in the Pleasant Grove section of Dallas. Damage was assessed at $170,000.

Destroyed in Willsboro were East Texas TV Service, East Texas Appliance, Edge Realty and Hornbuckle Gift and Flower Shop. Fire Chief Charles McCarver said the fire began in the real estate office.

"At one point, it threatened the entire west side of the downtown area," McCarver said. The downtown area comprises about seven square blocks. Southerly winds of 15 to 20 miles per hour hampered firemen, he said.

Fire units from Sulphur Springs, Comopickton, Mineola, Quitman, Mount Vernon, Pittsburg and South Franklin helped fight the blaze.

Static sparks from a northbound train were blamed for setting the grass fire that kept firefighters busy Monday in the Wichita Falls area. Several fires were started along the tracks that spread into one big fire.

Several thousand acres of rangeland were in flames as the fire swept on both sides of both U.S. 277 and 287 going northeast and northwest from Wichita Falls toward the Red River and the Oklahoma border.

A lot of residential lots were burned, but no damage was reported to residences.

'Exotic Produce' Gaining Popularity

By JOSEPH ST. AMANT
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A grocer in Harrison, Ark., population 8,867, sells napa cabbage, cooking bananas called plantains, egg roll and wonton wrappers and a crisp Mexican vegetable called jicama.

A large chain supermarket in Des Moines stocks many Chinese vegetables, "things like gobo root, taro root, bean sprouts and gu chow (Chinese mustard)," says assistant produce manager Barry Brauch.

Consumers in Springfield, Mo., buy such exotics as spaghetti squash, tofu (Japanese bean curd), cherimoyas and carambolas (two varieties of tropical fruit).

Spokesmen in the produce industry give Frieda Caplan of Los Angeles much of the credit for the relatively new popularity of exotic fruits and vegetables throughout the United States.

"We've considered the world's major marketer (of fresh fruits and vegetables)," Mrs. Caplan said of her Produce Specialties, Inc.

"The business grosses 'well over' $5 million a year, she said in an interview. "When she can't find what she wants, she persuades farmers and fruit growers to grow things for her company.

"Among old-fashioned favorites whose comeback she is currently promoting are saffron, a root vegetable nicknamed oyster root, and quince, a tree fruit for cooking that looks like a knobby apple with the texture of a pear.

"Her promotional campaigns are aimed at women. Surveys show they make seven of 10 retail purchases in the U.S.

"Consumers have been begging for exotic foods for years," she said. "They're always looking for something different."

"Special management starts trends and newspaper and magazine articles keep them going and growing.

Her packaging also helps. Labels for Frieda's Finest brand produce carry cooking and serving suggestions and recipes.

For example, shallot labels suggest: "If garlic is too harsh for you, or onion too strong, then substitute shallots. Remove outer skin of each clove, then slice, dice, chop or mince, according to the recipe."

Mrs. Caplan urges retailers to use display cards showing food values, to take advantage of the new stress on nutrition and slimness.

"Nutrition is the hottest word on the national market today," she said. "There is a creeping revolution that is leading to a literal explosion of sales in fresh produce. The trend is away from fatty, sugary and over-processed foods."

A 20-year veteran of the produce business, Mrs. Caplan said a few retailers in major cities always have carried exotic produce, but shoppers had to search for the stores.

Some still do. A cooperative wholesale warehouse in Springfield, Mo., with 300 member retailers in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas recently got a phone call from an oriental woman who had moved from Los Angeles to a small town in northeast Missouri. She wanted to know where she could buy fresh oriental produce.

She was referred to a retail market in St. Joseph, Mo., population 72,691, only 90 miles away.

Mrs. Caplan said the popularity of what some call "funny food" began to grow in the 1960s, and really took off seven or eight years ago when a giant supermarket chain began stocking and promoting it.

Her own efforts to stimulate demand include speeches and television appearances. She also sells inexpensive paperback cookbooks by Sybil Henderson on Oriental and Mexican cookery.

She has a full-time adviser to farmers on her staff and a marketing specialist, Cathy Perkins, who says: "Our business is to take something common to one group and sell it to another. For example, fresh black-eyed peas are common in the South. We sell them in Seattle and Minneapolis."

When Frieda Caplan first went into business for herself in the 1960s, kiwi fruit and shitake mushrooms were only grown abroad, in such places as New Zealand and Japan. Now California farmers are beginning to grow them, too, in what could be the start of another trend: foreign produce grown in America.

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Bridge is a simple game. Quite often it requires no more than counting to nine or ten. Yet it is surprising how many find this task impossible.

With all his points in aces and kings, we approve of South's decision to open two no trump. The point count tends to underrate the value of aces and kings and inflate queens and jacks, and in our opinion, South's hand is better than many 22- or 23-pointers we've seen. North checked for a 4-4 major fit, then settled in three no trump when South denied holding a four-card major.

West led the queen of diamonds, and declarer surveyed his prospects. He had eight tricks in high cards, and there was virtually only one suit in which he could develop his ninth, and that was clubs. Declarer made the technically correct play of holding up the ace of diamonds, and held up again when West continued the suit. Declarer won the third diamond and decided to settle the issue without further ado.

He entered dummy with the queen of hearts and ran the jack of clubs. West won the queen and took two more diamond tricks for a one-trick set.

Declarer was guilty of a major crime—inability to count to nine. His line of play was correct if he had to take four club tricks, but with six tricks in the other three suits declarer needed only three club tricks for his contract, provided he could keep West off lead while the third club was being developed.

Instead of taking the club finesse, declarer should have banded down the ace and king of clubs. As the cards lie, the queen of clubs would have dropped and declarer would have come to ten tricks. But had the queen not fallen, the contract would still be safe if East held the lady—declarer could safely afford to lose a club trick to East. Playing off two high clubs simply gave declarer an extra chance. He would make his contract if East held the queen of clubs or if West held the queen guarded no more than once.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My husband hasn't kissed me since November 10, 1975. That's the day we got married. When we went together, Fred was always kind of stingy with his kisses, but he did kiss me occasionally.

Everybody in our family knows how Fred feels about kissing, and they think he's weird.

Yesterday at a family gathering when I went to kiss him (he never kisses me, but sometimes I kiss him), he turned his head away and said, "You know I don't kiss anybody."

His mother said, "Fred, your wife isn't just anybody." He just shrugged his shoulders and said, "I don't like to kiss. So sue me," and that was the end of it.

Abby, I keep myself immaculate, and my mouth is always clean so that can't be it. It doesn't seem natural for a man not to want to kiss his own wife. Believe it or not, we have a good sex life, but he just skips the kissing part and gets right down to business. Outside of that he treats me great and is a terrific guy and I really love him, but should a married woman have to live without kisses? please help me.
NO KISSES IN CONN.

DEAR NO: Your husband is the one who needs the help. He needs professional help to resolve his hang-up about kissing. If he vetoes that, your alternatives are obvious: either resign yourself to a kissless marriage, or kiss off Fred.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has five children from previous marriage. Some of them are married with children of their own, and some still live with their mother.

I am responsible for buying, wrapping and sending all the gifts for their birthdays, Christmas, etc. (He pays for them, and I must say he is not cheap.)

The problem: I am filled up to the gills with his ungrateful children, who never bother calling him to say, "Thank you," "Kiss my foot," or anything else. For all we know, the gifts weren't even received. I know he's hurt, but he insists on sending them presents year after year for every occasion.

Should I continue to buy for my husband's children, should I tell him to do it, or should I buy them all a book on manners?

TIRED OF IT

DEAR TIRED: I Agree, your husband is foolish to continue sending gifts to ingrates, and I don't blame you for balking. But look at it this way — you are doing it for him, not them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 9-year-old girl

SERIOUS IN CHICAGO
DEAR SERIOUS: Pretend that you don't notice him. And when he realize that you aren't noticing HIM, he will wonder why, and will probably begin to notice you. Boys are like that.

Post-Easter Menu Ideas Given

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

The two most plentiful Easter leftovers are among foods that do not freeze well. Ham, like all salty meats, tends to turn rancid during long-term freezer storage. Canned hams become watery and their texture deteriorates.

Cooked egg whites toughen when frozen.

So when your family tires of ham sandwiches and boiled and deviled eggs, try some of these ideas and recipes combining leftovers with other ingredients. Prepare your favorite meat loaf mixture. Place half of it in a lightly oiled loaf pan or rectangular or oval casserole. Slice a thin piece from each end of boiled, shelled eggs and lay them end-to-end on the meat. Leave about one inch clearance at each end of the pan to allow for meat shrinkage during baking. Pat the remaining meat mixture snugly over the tops and sides of the eggs and cook as usual. To serve, slice crosswise so each serving contains a slice of egg in the center.

Halve hard-boiled eggs, and separate whites and yolks. Either grate them a medium texture or force them through a coarse-mesh strainer with the back of the bowl of a wooden spoon. Refrigerate in tightly covered containers and use as a garnish for cooked vegetables or salads.

Or make Polonaise garnish for vegetables. Melt butter or margarine in a small skillet, stir in just enough dry bread crumbs to absorb the fat, then stir in grated yolks and whites. Either use at once or refrigerate tightly covered. Either this or the previous garnish keeps three to four days refrigerated.

Make a variation on oeufs en gelée (jelled eggs) to serve as a first course for a party dinner or a main course for a light lunch. Bring heat-and-serve beef broth to a boil in a small saucepan. While it heats, place one-half cup of defatted chicken broth in a large mixing bowl and sprinkle on one envelope of unflavored gelatin for each two cups of liquid you will be using. (The amount needed depends on the size pan you mold the eggs in.) While the gelatin softens, heat the remaining broth to a boil, then stir it into the softened gelatin until no crystals remain. When steam stops rising, refrigerate the bowl until the mixture is syrupy. The time will depend on the shallowness of the container and your refrigerator's efficiency.

If you don't have small oval metal forms like the French use, choose a metal loaf pan deep enough to hold about half an inch of jelly above and below eggs when they are laid lengthwise. Pour about half an inch of syrupy broth into the container(s) you have chosen and arrange sprigs of either fresh tarragon, fresh parsley or fresh dill at regular intervals. Return container(s) to refrigerator until jelly is almost set but still sticky. Then set eggs on the jelly at regular intervals and cover with remaining syrupy jelly. If it is no longer syrupy enough to pour at this point, return it to the range top and heat slightly. Cover the container(s) and refrigerate until jelly is firm enough to hold its shape when unmolded. If you have used a loaf pan instead of individual molds, unmold the whole thing onto a cutting board and cut into even rectangles with a large, sharp knife—but first heat the blade by holding it under hot water and drying it quickly. Garnish with sprigs of fresh parsley or watercress.

Leftover cooked ham has many possibilities.

Ground in a food grinder or chopped with the steel blade in a food processor, it can be combined with chopped or ground chutney or well-drained pickle relish to make a sandwich or canape spread. Bind with mayonnaise or use enough ham fat to make the mixture spreadable. For canapes, serve it on regular or melba toast or cucumber rings or as a filling for celery sticks.

If the quantity of ground ham is very small, extend it with cooked, skinned, ground chicken or turkey and season with curry or chili powder to make Or chop ham and cooked turkey or chicken coarsely and substitute it for ground beef in your favorite recipe for stuffed bell peppers, onions or cabbage. To make a firm filling for stuffing, bind it with one or more lightly beaten raw eggs.

Cheese and ham casserole is an easy recipe from an out-of-print cookbook, "Take It Easy Before Dinner," by Ruth Langland Holberg, published by Thomas Y. Crowell Co. in 1960.

"This is a Wisconsin standby," the author wrote. "Get it ready in the morning or even the night before."

"You need 2 cups of ground ham, either raw or cooked. Mix it with one-half pound of Wisconsin American cheese cut into tiny bits and half a green pepper also cut fine; minced is even better."

Cook 12 ounces of fine noodles as the label directs. Drain well. Mix the noodles lightly into the ham and cheese. Add 1 cup of sliced mushrooms and 1 can of condensed tomato soup.

Bake 1 hour in a greased casserole in a 350-degree preheated oven. Serves 6 to 8.

If your leftover ham measures about 2 cups when cut in one-fourth inch dice, you can make a 1-quart ham and spinach or ham and parsley mold to serve as an appetizer dinner or the main course for a light lunch or supper.

First, soften 1 envelope plus 1 teaspoon of unflavored gelatin by pouring it into one half cup of defatted, room temperature chicken broth in a large mixing bowl. Use homemade broth or the canned heat-and-serve variety. While gelatin softens, bring contents of 1 thirteen and three-fourths ounces can of heat-and-serve beef broth to a boil. Pour boiling broth into the softened gelatin mixture and stir until no crystals are visible. Add 1 teaspoon of dried tarragon leaves, rubbing them between your palms directly into the broth. Refrigerate this mixture until it becomes syrupy.

Strip stems from 1 cup, packed, of fresh young spinach leaves or 1 large bunch of fresh parsley, preferably the more flavorful Italian variety. Wash greens well in cold water, dry well in a terrycloth towel or salad dryer, and chop finely. You should have about half a cup chopped.

Dice the ham and refrigerate it and the greens until the jelly is ready. Then stir in the ham, greens, 1 tablespoon of chopped fresh or frozen chives (or more to taste) and one-fourth cup of tawny port. Rinse a mold or a clear glass serving dish of at least 1-quart capacity with cold water, drain at once and pour the ham mixture into the container, using a rubber scraper to clean the sides of the bowl and flatten the surface of the mixture in the serving bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate until firmly set. To serve, unmold, or slice or spoon from the bowl onto individual plates. If desired, serve with a sauce made by stirring prepared Dijon-style mustard into mayonnaise. Use 1 to 2 teaspoons of mustard per cup of mayonnaise.

'Nose' Essential In Fragrance Business

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
UPI Life-Style Editor
RAMSEY, N.J. (UPI) — The perfume industry is one business you can't keep your nose out of.

A basic sense of smell — having a "nose" — is essential, particularly if you have ambitions as a perfumer or fragrance evaluator, says James Rogers, Jr., group vice president and director of fragrance and flavor research for Fritzsche-Dodge & Olcott, Inc., New York, a company which traces back to 1798 in this country.

"The nose is much more important than formal education," Rogers said in an interview at his home here. In discussing perfumers, he said, "We've had some who started at compounding, with maybe a high school education."

Compounding is the production end of the industry. "They take somebody else's formula and mix it ... maybe 11,000 pounds in a big tank. They give him the formula, supply him with the raw materials that are checked by a quality control group and tell him how to mix it. He starts off as an apprentice ... works his way up ... smells everything he adds. If he has a good nose, is attentive, wants to work, somebody gives him a break."

"A perfumer is an artist. He must be creative and he has to have a good nose," Rogers said, adding that most of the companies like to train their own people because there is no place outside where they can be trained.

But once he is established, the perfumer's life is not all Chanel No. 5. Problems come in from all kinds of companies all the time, Rogers said.

"Say the finished goods house wants a scent that nobody else has had before — something that smells like, well, steel, perhaps."

According to Rogers, this actually happened a couple of years ago in a search for a "new men's fragrance." "Well, think of a Viking with a sword in his hand..." Rogers said. "It's very difficult. Steel."

The cosmetic house gives the perfumers what they call a profile. "So all the perfumers get together in a room, with banners and pictures on the walls to invoke the proper image, and they're supposed to sit in this atmosphere and be creative."

The perfumers start out with maybe 5,000 raw materials to work with, but whatever formula they concoct, the final choice is all based on smell, Rogers said.

"You have to convince the company, yes, that smells like steel. At least it does to me."

Rogers is co-author with Wayne Dorland of a new book, "The Fragrance and Flavor Industry" (Wayne E. Dorland Co., Box 264 Mendham, N.J. 07945), a popular non-technical history. An anecdote in the book relates how one perfumer used the power of positive smelling to launch his career.

In 1900, a young Corsican, who had adopted the name Francois Coty, offered his first fragrance to an exclusive Parisian merchant. The merchant turned him down. This so angered Coty that he deliberately broke a small bottle of the scent, Rose Jacqueminot, on the main staircase of the shop. The customers, so the story goes, were so taken with the fragrance that they besieged the shop and the owner had to recall Coty and place a substantial order.

A survey quoted in the book shows that fragrance plays a big part in purchases, in what Rogers estimates is a $5 billion business. Of 790 women queried, fragrance was the second most important consideration in their decision on what toilet soap, bath oil or hand cream to buy. The only factor they rated more important was feel or texture.

British Actor Portrays Magician, Ventriloquist

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
 NEW YORK (UPI) — In spite of his reputation as a versatile actor, Anthony Hopkins thought he would be "crazy" to take on the starring role of Corky in the forthcoming movie thriller, "Magic."
 "First of all, I'm British and Corky is an American role," said Hopkins between final filming sessions at the Four Seasons restaurant and on Park Avenue and Central Park South. "Then the role requires the talents of a professional sleight of hand artist and ventriloquist, and I was neither. My wife read the script and agreed I'd be crazy to accept."
 That Hopkins is the star of Joseph E. Levine's 49th film production is proof of the persuasiveness of director Richard Attenborough. The 40-year-old actor had worked under Attenborough's direction in Levine's superfilm, "A Bridge Too Far," in which Hopkins was outstanding as Colonel Frost, and he had faith in the director's assurances that he could master the role.
 "I began working on my American accent, card tricks and ventriloquism while I was still making the film 'International Velvet' last year," said the blue-eyed, boyishly open-faced Hopkins. "I got the accent okay except in some scenes with Fats, the dummy, and those will have to be dubbed. It took me a long time to get the accent right. Actually I'm still working on it."

Hopkins studied with British magician Michael Bailey to perfect card tricks necessary for Corky's night club act, which is notable not for sleight of hand but for the irrepressibly smart aleck Fats. American ventriloquist Dennis Alwood worked with Hopkins and a dummy named Dudley to make the actor into a ventriloquist in a few short months.
 "The card tricks weren't too difficult to master," said Hopkins. "I play the piano and that gives you a lot of finger control and I guess I had a natural ability. Ventriloquism was more difficult. You really don't 'throw' your voice. You practice with a pencil clenched in your teeth, get control of the lip muscles and drop your voice into your throat. They say you that ideally you should start to perfect this skill by the time you are nine years old."
 "Magic is based on the electrifying psychological novel by William Goldman of 'Marathon Man' and 'Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid' fame, who also wrote the 'Magic' screen play. It is set in New York City and the Catskill mountains in upstate New York, but the mountain scenes actually were made on location in Ukiah, Calif., a village 130 miles north of San Francisco where interminable rain added to the chilling atmosphere of the plot. In the small cast are Ann-Margret, Burgess Meredith, and Ed Lauter.

Hopkins' association with Levine, 72-year-old "last tycoon" of the film industry, began with the filming of "The Lion in Winter" in 1967 when Hopkins was playing the role of young Richard the Lionhearted. The actor first worked with Attenborough in the role of David Lloyd George in "Young Winston." Hopkins was appearing in "Equus" in New York when Levine approached him for "A Bridge Too Far."
 "And that, of course, led to 'Magic,' which has been my happiest film experience so far," said Hopkins. "On top of everything else, I got free tuition in two new skills — sleight of hand and ventriloquism. And you know, I learned a strange thing about dummies. Sometimes a dummy will speak for itself. You just don't remember putting the words in its mouth."
 If that seems a little weird, just wait until film is released later this year. It is the crux of the plot.
 As soon as the filming of "Magic" is concluded this week, Hopkins will head back to California to direct and play the title role in Shakespeare's "Hamlet" at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Los Angeles.
 "People tell me I'm crazy to direct and act at the same time, but I say why not have a go at it," he said with a wink. "I like to do crazy things."

Carol Burnett Bids Farewell

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The charwoman perched on her bucket and began to sing.
 "I'm so glad we had this time together," came the familiar theme of the Carol Burnett Show.
 Tears welled up in her eyes and started down her cheeks.
 "I'm feeling oh so blue ... and still the happiness comes through ... comes a time we have to say so long."
 Tugging at her ear, her traditional salute at the end of each show, the red-haired comedian walked to the end of the stage. Turning once to wave at the audience and throw a kiss, she kissed a sleeping guard on the top of his bald head, and was gone.
 After 11 years, 1,500 comedy sketches, 500 musical numbers and spoofs of virtually every old movie, Carol Burnett was calling it quits.
 Miss Burnett taped her final show at CBS Television City Friday night. It will be aired as a two-hour special at 7 p.m. CST March 29. Much of the show is Burnett nostalgia — repeats of sketches from old shows with Harvey Korman, a 10-year veteran of the show, Dick Van Dyke, a regular earlier this season, and several guest stars.
 While sitting on the bucket, Miss Burnett talked to her audience:
 "I have very mixed emotions. This is like graduation. It's a sad time and a happy time."
 "CBS wanted us back, but I think it's classier to leave before you're asked to leave. I'm proud of our show. I'm no dummy. It's time to put it to bed."
 Seated in the audience were such performers as Bernadette Peters, Allen Ludden and his comedian wife Betty White, Roddy McDowall and pioneer movie actress Lillian Gish, who will appear with Carol in the upcoming movie, "A Wedding."

 Jim Nabors, who appeared on each of the season opening shows for 11 years, came later.
 Miss Burnett, whose show was the last surviving to provide live entertainment without electronic gimmicky, says her plans include several specials, another movie and a lot of thought about what else she wants to do in the future.

Writer Claims French Farce Strains Audience's Attention

By WILLIAM GLOVER
 NEW YORK (AP) — Funny-peculiar and then funny-ha-ha things happen in "13 Rue de l'Amour," an average French farce having its first Broadway showing.
 Merry frolic finally erupts with champagne fizz from the production that opened Thursday at the Circle in the Square Theater. But before glee prevails, audience attention is direly strained.
 Some of this is because of the plot pattern, but more is because of the strange casting assortment. On hand is Louis Jourdan, a very Parisian embodiment indeed for what his compatriot Georges Feydeau wrote in 1892.

 There are also several tweedy-toned Britishers present and a very Yankee Doodle youth. The effect is similar to tuning in some of those BBC costume dramas set in old Russia or ancient Rome that are filled with Anglican accents.
 Also to contend with is the very prosaic translation fashioned by Mawby Green and Ed Feilbert. The partners are old hands at hanky-panky adaptations from oola-land, their most widely known being "Pajama Tops."

 Fortunately they and director Basil Langton — an odd recruit for this type of job from a long career in staging operas — have brought along all the tricky, frothy and hilarious story twists that Feydeau invented. Like virtually all of his other 60-plus plays that titillated grandmas, "13 Rue de l'Amour" concerns middle-class morality and bedroom swapping, always naughty and eventually discreet.
 Jourdan portrays a wayward doctor-pot in love with a married lady whose spouse frequently goes off on supposed hunting expeditions. Of course, he is having an affair. Through complications that defy description, everybody eventually ends up on the same evening in the same playful rendezvous.
 Jourdan is comically gallant throughout and, as the lady in the next seat observed, looked awfully cute in the bowler hat and undershorts to which events temporarily reduce him.
 Patricia Elliott, the light of his amour, has some trouble sustaining the spirit of the frolic. Bernard Fox, a Welshman, triumphs finally over that handicap as a spouse at bay. Kathleen Freeman signals the start of amiable antics with a fruity representation of a misplaced concierge from Vienna.
 Zack Brown beautifully decorates activities with art nouveau settings and costumes.
 Once past the first act, 13 Romance Street because an address beguiling indeed to visit.

Priest Suggests Applause From Congregation

CHICAGO (UPI) — Roman Catholic priests need some positive reinforcement, like everyone else and should be applauded for a good sermon, a priest has written.
 Father Henry Fehren suggested in the current issue of U.S. Catholic magazine that congregation members can take an active part in sermons — either by helping prepare them, providing the preacher with reviews, engaging in a dialogue with the preacher or merely applauding.
 "If the preacher senses from the active involvement of the people that he is communicating with them," Fehren wrote, "he surely will make greater efforts to make the sermon better in content, form and effectiveness."
 He said a recent survey in one diocese indicated priests need approval and support "lest their work seem useless or a mere chore."
 One way to encourage the preacher is to applaud, he said. "The idea may seem startling, but it is not new."
 Fehren said some well-known preachers in church history were applauded for their efforts and engaged in quite open dialogues with their audiences.
 A survey of U.S. Catholic subscribers showed 69 percent of those questioned disagreed that applause had no place in church.
 Fehren also suggested that churches could provide cards on which churchgoers would rate the sermon.

Pothole Stirs Mountain Of Trouble For Woman

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Janet Martin's car hit a chuckhole one day last week — then her troubles really began.
 Mrs. Martin, 23, of Cleveland, was driving to a hospital to visit her grandmother Tuesday evening when her car hit a chuckhole on Interstate 77 and blew a tire.
 She pulled over, walked to an emergency roadside telephone and was told by a policeman he couldn't help her.
 Then she flagged down a taxicab and paid $6.50 to reach a regular telephone. She found a police tow truck on the scene when she returned to the car about an hour later.
 "The policeman with the tow truck said I would have to get a release for my car at the Justice Center the next day," she said.
 She went to the Justice Center Wednesday morning, unaware it was open 24 hours a day and she could have gone Tuesday night. She lost four hours from her job while the police thumbed through documents to find papers relating to her car.

 "They didn't even apologize," she said. She paid $25 for the tow, a $6 parking fine and 90 cents to the police for storage of the car in an impoundment lot.
 "I was just sick to my stomach after I went through all that," she said. "It was totally uncalled for."
LARGEST USE OF BUSES
 The largest single use of buses registered in the United States was for school transportation, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. During 1974-75, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan each transported one million or more students.

Critic Raps Efforts By Two New Writers

By WILLIAM GLOVER
NEW YORK (AP) — A couple of dramatic nightmares opened over the weekend, both by new writers trying old surrealistic tricks.

At Broadway's Belasco Theater, the bad news Sunday was "Stages" by Stuart Ostrow, who has been much kinder to audiences previously as the producer of such musicals as "1776" and "Pippin."

At the nearby American Place Theater, a plunge into grisly chaos called "Conjuring an Event" was perpetrated by Richard Nelson, a recruit from regional endeavor.

Deadly parallels could be made, but let each be reviewed separately.

Ostrow actually has put together five unrelated absurdist episodes, linked by having Jack Warden, a most doughty actor, impersonate the main character in each.

The style of "Stages" resembles the satiric abstractions that made Eugene Ionesco a hot favorite of the avant-garde a decade ago, but which through imitation have become old hat. As a deviser of dialogue, Ostrow is less skilled.

The scenes carry portentous titles — "Denial," "Anger," "Bargaining," "Depression" and "Acceptance." In that order they concern a playwright's disastrous opening night; an actor's Kafkaesque appearance before an investigatory tribunal; an odd version of the Beauty and the Beast fable; and neurotic eroticism in a resort hotel. The final episode is the best, a kaleidoscope of urban collapse including King Kong.

Richard Foreman, a leading off-Broadway innovator, has directed hard-working Warden and 13 other nervously uneven players with a sackful of movie gimmicks, vaudeville stunts, sound effects, lighting tricks and push-about sets. Douglas W. Schmidt supplied the scenery, Patricia Zippord the costumes, Pat Collins stage illumination and Stanley Silverman some music.

The whole event, however, is too muddled too often and too complacently arty to be more than a dreadful bore. The producer, no surprise, was the author. "Conjuring an Event" is about a sports writer who no longer is satisfied to be an observer. Through a series of hallucinatory episodes best forgotten he achieves self-induced sublimation that includes fake blood dripping down his shirt.

As is all too frequent at the APT, the David Lloyd Groppman settings, the William Ivey Long costumes and all the other technical credits are far superior to what is being performed.

Michael Cristofer, the actor who won a Pulitzer prize by writing "The Shadow Box," froths and frenzies intently as Nelson's protagonist.

Professor Remedies Plane Stalls

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Howard Chevalier is trying to solve a problem that has plagued pilots since flying began — an inflight stall that is often followed by a spin and a quick plummet to the ground.

Such stalls, according to the Federal Aviation Administration, accounted for 27 percent of the 693 fatal general aircraft accidents last year.

Chevalier, a professor in the aerospace engineering department at Texas A&M University, has spent 10 years working on his solution. And he says he is the only person to develop an anti-stall device and prove its feasibility with funding from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"The problem of airplane stalls has been with us ever since the airplane," he said. "As you increase the angle of attack — the angle at which the airplane faces relative to the air approaching it — your speed is reduced. At some point, the air flow will separate and at that time, the airplane pitches down because of the loss in lift."

"It's not anything unusual, you teach a person learning to fly how to recover from that type of situation, but many times the pilot doesn't recover."

Chevalier said most light aircraft owners cannot afford the $40,000 system which commercial airlines use to combat stalling. Other types of anti-stall devices, he said, often limit the plane's capabilities.

So, the former NASA research engineer has come up with a simpler system that is independent of the craft's control system.

The system consists of a vane or "spoiler" attached to the plane's control surfaces. An attitude sensing device activates a servomotor which pushes out a small flat plate. As the craft approaches the stall angle, the plate is deployed proportionally to the angle of attack.

This, according to Chevalier, stops the plane from reaching the stall attitude by changing the air flow and also puts force on the pilot's stick, alerting him to the situation.

"This device doesn't alter the control system and it doesn't do anything until the pilot reaches the angle of attack," he said.

Chevalier already has tested his device on two planes and said testing will move to the wind tunnel at Langley Research Center in Virginia by May.

He said his objective is to document the feasibility of his system through research supported by NASA with the possibility of offering his findings to general aircraft manufacturers by the end of next year.

Chevalier, a pilot for 30 years and a research engineer for 22, said he began research in the field when his wife asked him why planes had to stall.

He said he answered, "They don't have to."

Fires Plague Texas Areas

Sheppard Air Force Base helped fight the range fires.

Monday's grass fires in Wichita Falls broke out about noon and were declared under control at 2:30 p.m. Charred railroad ties and rangeland still were smoldering into the night.

A thunderstorm developed Monday over Wichita Falls but spread to the south and east without dropping any moisture on Wichita Falls.

Several thousand acres of timber and range land were burned over the weekend in East Texas. A Texas Forest Service spokesman, Ken Burton in Lufkin, said Monday afternoon that at that particular moment his district offices were reporting at least 27 range fires.

Changes Affect Social Security

New laws passed by Congress in 1977 will affect almost all U.S. workers covered by social security, according to Jim Latimer of the Lubbock Social Security Office.

Changes include the need for higher amounts of wages or self-employment income to gain a quarter of coverage. Quarters of coverage are the means by which the Social Security Administration computes a person's eligibility for payment.

Now, a person must be paid $250 or more in a year to get each quarter of coverage in covered employment. Before 1978, a person had to be paid $50 or more in a quarter to get a quarter of coverage.

Another change provides that the amount of a wife's, husband's widow's mother's, or father's benefit will be reduced by the amount of any governmental pension payable to a person for that month, unless the person, at the time he files for benefits, meets all of the January, 1977, requirements for those benefits and the person is eligible to receive a government pension within the 60-month period beginning with December, 1977.

As in the past, State Workmen's Compensation causes an offset of social security checks to disabled workers and their eligible dependents, in some cases.

The Social Security Office is located at 1205 Texas Avenue, Room 102, Lubbock.

Group Blasts New Prison

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — The Texas Department of Corrections' proposal to buy land to build a new maximum security prison unit in the Lower Rio Grande Valley is being criticized by a prison reform group.

Minnie Loera, state chairperson of Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE), said Monday her group favored community-based rehabilitation centers and halfway houses instead of the large numbers of jail cells.

The TDC announced last week it had reached an agreement to purchase 6,741 acres of the former Monte Cristo Farms near Edinburg in Hidalgo County for $8 million, and was taking an option to buy the remaining 7,851 acres of the farm for another $6 million in the next two years.

Ms. Loera said the jail's proximity to the Mexican border "would be a constant temptation to the inmates to escape." She also said the proposed $50 million project was too expensive and the land purchased for the prison unit would be taken off the Hidalgo County tax rolls.

Ms. Loera also said Hidalgo County residents would eventually have to pay higher taxes to replace the money lost in property taxes because of the tax-free prison lands.

The TDC announced the Valley prison unit would produce a $2 million annual payroll for guards and other personnel. But Mrs. Loera said, "most towns around prisons are poverty-stricken."

City Welcomes Bowling Prexy

C. Dayle Vannoy was given a surprise red carpet welcome at Lubbock International Airport Monday afternoon when he returned home from St. Louis, where he was elected president of the five million-member American Bowling Congress.

Vannoy will officially take the reins of the organization Aug. 1, and inaugural ceremonies will be held at the Lubbock Civic Center on Sept. 16. More than 1000 dignitaries from both the ABC and the Womens International Bowling Congress will be on hand for the affair, which will be sponsored jointly by the Lubbock Mens Bowling Association and the Lubbock Womens Bowling Association.

Vannoy was elected tenth vice president of the ABC in Phoenix in 1970 and has moved up annually to his present position. He will become the third Texan to serve as ABC president. The other two were Connie Wilson of Dallas and the late Clarence Leonard of Houston (1956-57).

Active in the bowling world for 30 years, Vannoy has served as secretary and president of the Lubbock Association, was elected life member and Captain of the Lubbock Men's Association's Hall of Fame.

Vannoy, a Texas Tech graduate, has served as president of the Texas Association and is also a life member and Hall of Famer of that organization. During his term of office as president of the vast ABC, Vannoy expects to travel more than 200,000 miles.

Vannoy's wife, Herbie, was selected to the Lubbock Womens Bowling Association's Hall of Fame last year and the LWBA recently dedicated its City Tournament to their "Yellow Rose."

Vannoy feels his strongest supporters over the years have been his wife, daughters Sharla (and husband Allen Jones) and Vicki (and husband Bennie Nixon) and son Vance.

SONNY ALLEN

Allen Picks Wildcats

DALLAS (AP) — Since Sonny Allen is 0-5 against three of the Final Four in the NCAA basketball playoffs in St. Louis, the Southern Methodist basketball coach qualifies as something of a shell-shocked expert on the possible winner.

His choice? Kentucky.

SMU took a 110-96 thumping at Kentucky in the opening game of the season. The Mustangs later lost to Duke 91-67 in Dallas and to Arkansas three times.

"Kentucky is really a tournament-experienced team," said Allen. "They have four seniors who got to the Final Four as freshmen and lost to UCLA. As sophomores, they won the NIT (National Invitation Tournament) and last year as juniors they got beat in the Eastern Regional finals by North Carolina."

Allen said the Wildcats are "the most physical team in college basketball. And they have that great Kentucky tradition which can be a big factor in tournament play. They've won four national titles."

Arkansas rates a chance from Allen.

"Arkansas is certainly capable because they've won more games than any team in college basketball," said Allen. "They also are tournament experienced but not like Kentucky. They have trouble against the press, but Kentucky is more of a half-court defensive team. Arkansas can handle a half-court press."

Allen said Duke is "playing great basketball even if they are the youngest to make it into the Final Four. They are a big surprise. Nobody expected them to be anything this year. They are a very intelligent team. They are young but smart. They have that enthusiasm and desire."

He added "I've seen Notre Dame so much on television I feel like we've played them. All that TV exposure is like a tournament atmosphere. It should help them."

Digger Uses Frosh But Dislikes Rule

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — "I'm still against the freshman rule," said Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps with an Irish twinkle in his eye. "But, of course, you've got to be a hypocrite by playing the freshmen."

While he opposes the rule which allows college freshmen to play varsity basketball, Phelps by no means straps his first-year men to the bench.

On the contrary, the Notre Dame newcomers played with regularity all season, and it was freshman Kelly Tripucka who spearheaded the Irish sweep through the Midwest Regional and into Saturday's NCAA Final Four at St. Louis.

"By playing the freshmen early we established depth," Phelps said. "Without that depth we wouldn't be in the Final Four."

The other Notre Dame freshmen are guard Stan Wilcox, forwards Tracy Jack-

Raiders To Try Wichita Again

The Wichita State Shockers lived up to their nickname Monday afternoon at the Texas Tech diamond, sweeping a doubleheader from the Red Raiders 14-2 and 9-8.

Tech, dipping to 11-12 for the season, got another chance today and Wednesday in a p.m. twin bill. Wichita State is 7-5-1 after Monday's doubleheader sweep.

The torrid Shocker bats were too much for the Raider pitching corps Monday. Coach Kal Segrist held out most of his frontline hurlers, but it didn't seem to matter as ace reliever Gay Moyer suffered his first defeat in four decisions in the nightcap.

First baseman Bruce Morrison was the biggest thorn in Tech's side. He slugged three home runs and ended with five hits in nine trips for the afternoon. Third baseman Bob Bomerito was no slouch, contributing four base hits and six runs batted in.

Wichita State established its dominance early in the first game, erupting for 10 runs in the opening frame en route to the lopsided win. Tech starter Larry Womble of Plainview allowed only 1 earned run in the frame before Chuck Johnson, a Lubbock Coronado product, relieved with two outs and did a creditable job.

It looked like the second game would be a repeat rout as Wichita State jumped in front 7-3 in the top of the fourth, but the Raiders staged a spirited rally to catch up, and even had an excellent shot at winning it in the seventh.

Down 9-7, John Keller led off with a bunt single. After a lineup and a pair of wild pitches by Dave Waddell, Johnson singled sharply to narrow the gap to 9-8.

Out went Waddell, who had taken over for starter Chuck Linhardt in the first inning, and in came hard-throwing Stan Brown, who whiffed pinch-hitter Mike Farmer on three pitches.

Randy Newton grounded deep in the hole at short and Johnson beat the throw to second to keep the rally going. Second baseman Danny Vestal loaded the bases by walking on four pitches but Rusty Laughlin bounced out sharply to second to end the uprising.

Tech nabbed a 3-0 lead in the first inning even though seven regulars were resting on the bench. Catcher Dan Hejl had an RBI single and Keller knocked in two more with a one-bagger.

Wichita chipped away at Tech starter Steve Whitteon before knocking him out with a 5-run burst in the fourth. With the score tied at 3, Moyers took over and was touched for consecutive 2-run singles by Mike Davis and Bomerito. He didn't give up another hit until the sixth when Davis snapped a 7-7 deadlock with a single, and Morrison's third homer, leading off the seventh, proved the decisive run.

Tech came back in the fourth with a 4-run comeback spearheaded by hits by Steve Elder, Vestal and Kenny Cogdell.

Farmer was the only offensive bright spot for Tech in the opener. The junior designated hitter from Houston hit his first homer of the season with a man on in the first inning and was two-for-three overall.

Tech played with a patched-up infield most of the day. Shortstop Brooks Wallace, who sustained a hand injury at TCU didn't suit up, and regular first baseman Craig Noonan didn't appear until the sixth inning of the second game in a pinch-hitting role. Wallace was six-for-13 and had eight RBIs in the three-game series against the Frogs.

ACC Ponders Inviting Georgia Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech, an independent college football power, apparently will be invited to join the Atlantic Coast Conference sometime this spring. The Atlanta Constitution reported today.

"We have talked with Tech's athletic director, Doug Weaver, earlier this month and we had an excellent meeting with him," the newspaper quoted ACC commissioner Bob James as saying.

"I haven't met with him since early this month, but I think we'll be getting together again," James said.

ACC officials are expected to vote May 16 whether to expand their conference to eight members with Georgia Tech as the eighth. The Constitution said.

A report in the Atlanta Journal Monday said the Tech athletic board is expected to approve the ACC membership at its regular monthly meeting March 30.

Weaver said he would probably be back in touch with ACC officials as early as this weekend.

"I'm sure I'll see Bob James and we'll be talking some more at the NCAA finals this weekend in St. Louis," he said.

Speculation that the former Southeastern Conference member would seek ACC membership began after Tech's application for readmission to the SEC was rejected in December. The SEC voted then not to expand in the near future.

James said Monday it was "highly unlikely" that Georgia Tech would be admitted to the ACC before the end of this month.

He was commenting on a report that quoted an unidentified ACC source as saying, "... Before two weeks is up Tech will be a part of us."

"It could be two weeks, two months or two years," James said. "This thing just seems to blow hot and cold. There's no timetable on it at all."

The seven schools of the Atlantic Coast Conference are Clemson, Duke, Maryland, North Carolina, North Carolina State, Virginia and Wake Forest.

Georgia Tech, while independent in football, participates in Metro 7 Conference basketball and some spring sports.

"We'd be disappointed to lose Georgia Tech, but at the same time, if it's in their best interest to go to the ACC, we wish them well," said Metro 7 commissioner Larry Albus.

Manifesto

should be—to include sport in education, encourage sport in all sectors of society, and respect the independence of sports organizations.

It is a polite way of telling politicians to keep their hands off international sport.

Behind the manifesto, which Olympic representatives have been polishing up for the past four months, is a fear that UNESCO might usurp the traditional authority of the IOC.

UNESCO, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, has a meeting set for Paris in May, and a study of world competitive sport and the dangers encompassing it is on the agenda.

The IOC tripartite commission completed its manifesto in a hurry, in time to send a copy to UNESCO before the Paris meeting.

"Sport is none of UNESCO's business," said Tom Keller, Swiss president of the International Rowing Federation and a member of the tripartite commission.

But other members of the commission took a philosophical view. They said the Olympic movement could not hope to fight UNESCO, which has the backing of world governments, and must try to work alongside it.

Kilianin, asked if the manifesto indicated a radical change of policy, said: "Possibly, but we have never been particularly aloof from politics. In my journeys around the world since I was elected president I have talked more to politicians than to sports organizers. And that perhaps is a sad reflection on the problems facing sport."

Kilianin spoke in the vaguest terms of a proposed world council of sport, which awaits the approval of the full IOC at its annual session at Athens in May. He said he could not foresee how the council might be constituted, but it was possible that political representatives might sit down with members of the Olympic movement.

Olympic sources said the idea of a world council was unlikely to win approval of the IOC, which always has been jealous of its traditional position as the ruling body of the Games.

Longhorns

notes," said Lemons, who admitted in the next sentence that he really hadn't kept any on the Hoyas and it wouldn't have mattered if he had.

"Very frankly," he said, "coaches don't contribute that much to a team's success. If you've got self-motivated people that are talented, that's all you need."

That's what Lemons has on a team which he says rose from the dead after a two-point loss to Houston in the Southwestern Conference playoffs.

"I thought the season was all over for us," he said, referring to the defeat.

It's any comfort to Lemons, the season will be over by tonight. The NIT title will have been decided—not by one-liners, but by action.

Still, there was time for one more opinion.

"When I drive, I always figure the other guy is going to run into me," he said. "It never happens, but that's what I look out for. I'm not a pessimist, I'm not an optimist. I'm a realist."

And the Wolfpack presents a very real threat. North Carolina State, with 7-foot-2 Glenn Sudhop and 6-8 Tiny Pinder up front, will have a definite edge in height.

But they all pay the same price for basketball.

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — The purse for the eighth running of the Golden State Derby, the quarter-horse event scheduled April 23 at Bay Meadows, will be more than $300,000, it was announced. Spencer Childers, president of the Peninsula Horse Racing Association, said Monday the record purse was assured when two owners made their horses supplementary nominees for the 440-yard test for 3-year-olds.

Maravich Tests Knee

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pete Maravich, the National Basketball Association's leading scorer, is expected to see his first action tonight after being sidelined since Jan. 31 with a knee injury.

Maravich practiced with the New Orleans Jazz Monday, limping visibly from time to time and not attempting any of the acrobatics that generally mark his play. But he seemed to gain confidence in the knee as practice wore on, and his play loosened up.

"I'm out of shape. I lost six pounds with the flu, and this is the only work I've had in 52 days," said Maravich. "Otherwise, I'm okay."

Maravich injured his right knee making a behind-the-back, between-the-legs pass against Buffalo. He didn't try anything that fancy in Monday's practice.

In fact, he didn't take a shot until midway through the workout, and that was a layup. After that, he took his shots when he was open, bounce-passed or chest-passed to his teammates and generally played well within himself.

He got back quickly on defense and slid in either direction without apparent pain.

Jazz coach Elgin Baylor said he planned to start Maravich against the New Jersey Nets tonight, if nothing untoward happened to the tender right knee in a brief warmup practice scheduled for this morning.

"I'd rather start him and find out right away," said Baylor.

Busby Bidding For Comeback After Injuries

By HAL BOCK
FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The words are frightening enough to send shivers down the spine of any pitcher who hears them.

Herzog and the rest of the Royals are rooting hard for Busby to make it all the way back. They remember the young pitcher who won 56 games in three full seasons with an arm that looked like they would build the franchise around it.

Herzog used him for two shutout innings against Cincinnati and then he went three against the Chicago White Sox. Busby is due to pitch again Wednesday when the Royals face St. Louis.

But Busby refused to give up. He underwent knee surgery and worked hard all winter getting in shape for one more go-round. "I wanted to try again," he said.

Reporters Visit Phnom Penh

By IVAN STEFANOVIC
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The national bank building is a mass of rubble, the national library is a storehouse for furniture, and swallows nest in the ventilation ducts of the abandoned post office in Phnom Penh, Yugoslav journalists report from Cambodia.

These are some of the results of the "squaring of accounts with the imperialist, colonialist and neo-colonialist heritage in culture" in Cambodia's capital since the Khmer Rouge took control in 1975.

The Yugoslavs are the first foreign press group admitted by the Cambodian Communists. Their two-week tour ended Monday.

Premier Pol Pot told them that millions of city dwellers were resettled in the countryside to counter American sabotage plans, the official news agency Tan-jug reported.

"American imperialists had prepared a plan, together with their local lackeys, to create for us, immediately after our entry in Phnom Penh, economic, military and political problems, with the aim of destroying our revolution," Pol Pot said.

"By transferring the population from towns to villages all the risks were avoided."

A reporter from Politika, the Belgrade daily, said once-bustling Phnom Penh, which teemed with 2 million people during the war, was now a bureaucratic center with an estimated population of 20,000 officials, factory workers and their families. But the government says the population is 200,000 for the city and surroundings.

With traffic confined to pedestrians and an occasional bicyclist, all traffic signs have been painted over in white and traffic lights are idle.

The national bank was blasted into rubble two days after the Communist takeover, the result of alleged enemy diversion, Politika reported.

"The bank safes are still under heaps of bricks, but officials do not give the impression that they care much whether they are full or empty. The latter is more likely, but Cambodia has abolished money as a means of payment."

Esso, Caltex and Shell signs are intact in the cities, and some are wrapped in plastic for protection. But no gasoline is on sale.

Phnom Penh's post office is closed with the shutters pulled down. "There is no public mail system operating with other countries," Politika said.

Except for the Chinese, all foreign embassies — North Korea, Romania, Albania, Cuba, Egypt, Lao and Yugoslavia — are located on a single street. The embassies have no telephone linkup with the foreign ministry.

A diplomatic canteen is open twice a week for foreigners and sells Scotch whisky, French wines and American butter for U.S. dollars.

The market place is planted in cabbage. Food is distributed to officials and military personnel through a network invisible to visitors.

Lights turn on in every fifth or sixth house at night. Some buildings still have television aerials, but there is no television. The government radio, The Voice of Democratic Kampuchea, broadcasts news, government orders, commentaries and "revolutionary" music. Kampuchea is the official name of Cambodia.

A four-page newspaper, The Revolution, is issued three times a month.

"After all the sacrifices suffered by the Cambodian people, resettlement seemed an additional and very high price for revolution," the Politika correspondent commented.

He said the new regime explained it carried out the resettlement program so that Cambodian society would be based on "the egalitarian village cooperative, without commodity-financial links."

Other reasons advanced by officials included the difficulty of providing the cities with food, destruction of the U.S. intelligence network and eradication of urban crime, black-market speculation and prostitution.

Three Blacks Join Ian Smith On Nation's Executive Panel

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Three black moderate leaders were sworn in today to join Prime Minister Ian Smith at the head of the transitional government to shepherd Rhodesia to black rule by the end of the year.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau took an oath of allegiance to Rhodesia and its laws at a 45-minute luncheon ceremony at Independence, Smith's suburban residence. The proceedings were closed to reporters.

Smith remains bound by the oath he took when he was returned as prime minister following national elections last fall in which only white Rhodesian citizens voted.

The four men make up the policymaking Executive Council of the new government outlined in the constitutional settlement agreement signed 17 days ago.

The new council was to hold its first meeting later today and begin work on its first major task, appointment of a second-level ministerial council to handle the day-to-day administration of the government. Each ministry will be headed jointly by a black and a white.

Government sources said that Smith would meet tonight with a party of 31 prominent touring American business executives who will make an overnight side trip to Salisbury while visiting South Africa. The group includes George W. Ball of Lehman Bros., a former undersecretary of state, and former Xerox chairman Sol Linowitz, who helped negotiate the new Panama Canal treaties.

Once the full transitional government has been set up, it will start to draft the constitution for Zimbabwe, the future black-ruled Rhodesia, and to organize elections on the principle of universal suffrage that will choose the country's first parliament with a black majority.

Despite the 3 to 1 black majority on the Executive Council, decisions must be unanimous, giving each leader a veto.

Smith also will continue as prime minister in name, and the existing white-dominated Parliament will be convened from time to time to legislate decisions of the transitional government.

The plan has been rejected by guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who demand that the government be turned over to them and who have pledged to step up their 5-year-old war against white rule.

Young Says Peace Plan For Rhodesia 'Urgent'

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Andrew Young, America's ambassador to the United Nations, said today the United States feels "a sense of urgency" to push the British-American peace plan for Rhodesia and prevent a decade of confusion there.

Arriving on the first leg of a southern African trip, Young told reporters: "We've been very true in the United States to the Anglo-American proposals."

"There have been difficulties, but the difficulties of late, including the internal settlement, bring a sense of urgency where we feel we must move forward together or face a decade of confusion that does nobody any good."

Young went from the airport to the outside home of President Julius Nyerere for a round of talks.

Nyerere, the influential chairman of the frontline group of black-ruled African nations which border Rhodesia, has been urging the United States and Britain to step up their efforts to implement the British-American plan as a substitute for the Salisbury agreement signed by Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black moderates.

Government sources said Nyerere would seek assurances from Young that the Carter administration would not accept the Salisbury pact, which calls for black majority rule in Rhodesia by the end of the year, because it excludes black nationalist guerrillas who have been waging a war to oust Smith's white regime.

Britain and the United States are trying to arrange a new constitutional conference to bring Nkomo and Mugabe into negotiations with Smith and the three local black leaders, but so far neither group has shown any inclination to compromise. U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young arrived in Tanzania today to try to enlist President Julius Nyerere's support for the expanded negotiations. He also will visit President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, in whose country Nkomo and his guerrillas are based.

Britain and the United States have warned that the Salisbury agreement will not win international recognition without the backing of Nkomo and Mugabe, who are supported by most of the black African governments.

Muzorewa, Sithole and Chirau have urged Nkomo and Mugabe to take part in the elections that are planned because they believe the guerrilla leaders have the support of no more than 20 percent of the country's 6.7 million blacks.

Korea To Buy U.S. Reactors

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea has decided to go ahead with a $1 billion order for American nuclear reactors as originally planned, the Korean Electric Co. said today.

A spokesman said the state-run utility was in the process of drafting a contract with Westinghouse Electric Corp. for the order.

The national utility was about to sign a contract with Westinghouse for the two reactors a few weeks ago when Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., implied delay in approving a U.S. Export-Import Bank loan to finance the sale.

Stevenson, chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee and a member of the Senate Banking Committee, reportedly said he would stall the planned loan until Seoul cooperated in making available requested testimony from Korean officials on the influence-buying scandal in Capitol Hill.

Stevenson said he was in southern Africa because "we now face what is a very critical juncture, both in Rhodesia and Namibia. As we begin to reassess what we've done last year and what we will do next year, it just seemed appropriate to come and confer with African leaders."

The Seoul government, however, countered with a warning that it would turn to another country for the reactors.

The State Department, to resolve the matter, subsequently assured Seoul of its full support for financing the nuclear deal while issuing a statement that the loan issue and Korean testimony before Congress should be discussed on their separate merits.

The spokesman for the Korean Electric Co., apparently referring to the State Department's assurance, said, "We have reason to be optimistic about getting the loan."

RRC Approves Bid For Storage Unit

AUSTIN (AP) — The railroad commission Monday approved an application by Continental Oil Co. to develop an underground storage facility in Chambers County that will hold 1.5 million barrels of liquid hydrocarbons.

The company plans to store ethane and ethylene in the cavern in the Barbers Hill Field in Mont Belvieu. The cavern will be at least 2,250 feet below the surface.

The commission said Conoco wants to drill two storage wells on 91 acres, with provisions for developing 17 additional wells.

Oil Cleanup Delayed By Weather

BREST, France (AP) — Salvage experts say it will be at least four or five days before they can start pumping oil from the wrecked American supertanker Amoco Cadiz.

The vessel already has spilled at least 14.7 million gallons of crude oil onto an 80-mile stretch of the Brittany coast and the rich fishing grounds off it after running on the rocks early Friday in a storm when its towline broke. Reporters who approached the wreck Sunday reported oil was continuing to flow from it.

The tanker was carrying a total of 67.6 million gallons of oil in its 15 tanks, and so far officials do not know how many of them were broken.

French authorities and salvage officials said no divers had inspected the wreck or attempted underwater repairs yet. Divers were to start work today to chart the rocks in the neighborhood of the wreck so other tankers might be brought alongside to unload the remaining oil.

But bad weather was blowing up, and gale winds were predicted by today. The most optimistic estimates said pumping was not expected to start for at least four to five days.

The captains of the tanker and of the German tug Pacific, which took it in tow Thursday after its steering gear failed, were under detention ashore and being questioned by French investigators.

Harry Rinkema of Chicago, Amoco International's vice-president for marine transportation, indicated that a dispute over the payment terms of the tow may have delayed the unsuccessful towing operation Thursday night while the storm got worse.

"We are afraid there is a controversy," said Rinkema, adding there "may have been a discussion over the towing contract" during the critical period.

Another Amoco official said that the tug had a secure line on the tanker for three hours Thursday, but he refused to say whether the tanker was being towed away from the danger area during that time.

Another argument continued in Brest over the actions of French authorities during the hours before the tanker grounded. A French navy spokesman said officials were told by the tanker that it was under tow and needed no assistance. But he added the only official watch on the situation was from shore-based stations.

Soviets, U.S. Start Exchange Program

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Soviet anthropologists were at the University of Kansas here recently, laying the groundwork for an information exchange program between the Soviet Union and the United States.

The program would allow aging and longevity researchers in both countries to coordinate their efforts and to standardize methods of measurement and investigation.

The Soviet research team, composed of about 40 investigators, has already received funding for the project from its government.

Nationalist China Names New Leader

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's elder son and political heir, was elected president of Nationalist China today, continuing the rule his father established 47 years ago.

More than 100,000 supporters massed in City Hall Plaza set off firecrackers and started dragon dances in the rain.

The voting was done by the National Assembly, sitting at an electoral college. Chiang, the nominee and chairman of his father's Kuomintang party, was the only candidate and got 1,184 of the 1,205 secret ballots. The other 21 were ruled invalid.

Firecrackers began exploding in various parts of Taipei when the government radio announced that the vote for Chiang had passed 624, half the total assembly membership.

The final result was announced to a crowd of more than 100,000 massed in City Hall Plaza in the rain. There were more firecrackers and dragon dances throughout the city.

Chiang, now 68, took the reins of the Kuomintang on the death of his father three years ago, but at that time the presidency went to Vice President Yen Chia-kan, whose term expires May 20.

Chiang's running mate, Shieh Tun-min, will be elected vice president Wednesday. He is the governor of Taiwan province and the first native Taiwanese to get such a high post.

After being educated in Moscow, Chiang Ching-kuo was groomed for more than 20 years to succeed his father.

After the Nationalist retreat from the mainland in 1949, he was put in charge of the defense ministry's general political welfare department and set up a system of political commissars for the armed forces patterned on the Soviet army.

He was defense minister from 1965 to 1969, vice premier from 1969 to 1972 and became premier in 1972.

Unlike his aloof father, he traveled about Taiwan frequently and mingled extensively with the public. This visibility, coupled with his government's successful economic and social programs, won him a great deal of popularity among the 17 million people of the island.

Chiang and his Russian wife, Fiana, have three sons and a daughter. His younger brother, Gen. Chiang Wego, 61, is president of the Armed Forces University. He was educated in Germany.

Former Sea Captain Working On Farm

DUVALL, Wash. (AP) — Ten years ago, Captain Charlie Larsen skipped a telephone cable ship. Today, he commands a tractor and a herd of cows.

"This is new work for me, but I like it," says Larsen, 81. "Ten years ago I got canned as a sea captain. What for? Because they found out that I was 71 years old."

"They sent me ashore, grounded me. Only a politician can work past 70."

Larsen headed inland to this small town 20 miles northeast of Seattle where his son, also named Charlie and now a bus driver, had a dairy farm.

Living in a rented, wooden-framed white house with a sign "Capt. Charlie Larsen" dangling from the front porch, Larsen works as a handyman for two nearby dairymen.

He says he doesn't really need to work, with a Social Security check and Civil Service pension coming in every month. But he believes working has kept him alive this long — and it keeps his mind off the sea.

"I spent my whole life at sea — 56 years of it. Was in World War I and World War II, too. Served on many ships and sailed all the oceans and seas," he says.

He was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1896, he says, shoving a pinch of Copenhagen snuff into his mouth.

"I've been chewing this stuff since I was in grade school. Never went past the sixth grade. Few did. Only the rich went to high school," he remembers.

"In 1910, when I was 14, I went to sea in sailing ships. My monthly pay was ten kroners (about $2)."

During World War II, he left the merchant service for the Navy.

"On the night of August 9, 1942, we were steaming near Guadalcanal. There were four cruisers in our group, the Vincennes (my ship), Quincy, Astoria and the Australian cruiser Canberra. We were ambushed and sunk by the Japanese."

"I was one of not too many survivors. I had heard that five days earlier not too far away, another ship had been sunk."

"Another incident took place during a storm off Alaska. I was tossed overboard. Fortunately a crewman saw me."

"Not having a line handy, he threw a wire cable to me. It hit me on the head and nearly knocked me out. Finally someone fished me out with a boathook."

Major Events Influenced Most Inmates

CHICAGO (UPI) — A study of prison inmates shows a significant number underwent major events that changed their lives in the year before they were imprisoned.

Events ranged from the death of a spouse, loss of a job or breakup of a marriage to trouble on the job, financial difficulties, arguments within the family, personal injuries or illness.

The researchers questioned 176 male inmates of McNeil Island federal prison in Washington and a state penitentiary at Walla Walla, Wash., about events that had occurred in the year or so before they were jailed.

They concluded that too many stressful life events could drive a person to crime.

The study, published in the current edition of Archives of General Psychiatry, found prisoners were less stable and more mobile than a control group. In addition, prisoners had changed careers more often than the control group, had been fired more often and had a greater incidence of money problems.

"The life history of convicted felons reveals that social and economic forces have played an important part in influencing their careers," said the study, released during the weekend. "But it is also clear that social, economic and racial forces are not the only answer, for only a small fraction of those so exposed become criminals and there are criminals who have not known poverty, racism and social limitations," the study said.

Foreign Investments Increase

By MICHAEL L. GECZI
NEW YORK (AP) — The open-door policy of the United States toward investments from abroad already is reaping large dividends. But even bigger and better benefits may be in the offing.

In the past five years, direct foreign investments in this country have more than doubled to $30 billion, according to a new report compiled by Bank of America, the San Francisco-based institution that is the nation's largest commercial bank.

Of the $30 billion invested in 1976, about 41.6 percent was concentrated in manufacturing, the report noted, and nearly 20 percent was invested in petroleum operations. The largest investors were the Netherlands, Canada and the United Kingdom, each with roughly one-fifth of the total.

Though the growth has been substantial, there appears to be a great deal of room left for future investments. Foreign-owned businesses accounted for less than 2 percent of the United States' gross national product in 1976, according to a study by The Conference Board, a New York business-research firm.

Survey Studies Crime Reports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Justice Department study found that a typical crime victim took more than six minutes to call police — thereby reducing chances an arrest would be made.

A year ago my cholesterol was 240. After a few months on a very strict 1000-calorie, low cholesterol diet and losing 22 pounds with the diet and exercise my count was 250. Since then I have kept my cholesterol intake quite low, but have gained back 12 of the 22 pounds I lost. I eat very little meat, pork about once a month and steak about once a week with fish and chicken once a day in small amounts.

I don't use saturated fats and use only corn oil and polyunsaturated margarines. After a year of this my count was 255. Could you give me some information on how serious this is? What are my chances of a complication such as a stroke or a heart attack? What do you suggest I try next?

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am interested in your opinion of the benefits of honey to the general health of a body, and especially the part which honey may play in developing a stronger and healthier heart. I have heard of various benefits that are derived from the consumption of honey, but I would like a medical opinion of its value.

Bank of America cites three reasons for this rather modest showing. "Companies based abroad frequently have cited labor costs, taxes, and the sheer size of the U.S. market economy as factors that have restrained them from pursuing the advantages of direct investment here," the report states.

These disadvantages have leveled off in recent years, the bank says, leading to the conclusion that investments will continue to increase, possibly at a faster pace. In addition, it says, the United States will be aided by two other factors:

—More earnings for investments are being generated by continued economic recovery abroad.

—Merger activity has grown sharply in both Europe and Japan, thus creating companies that have both the financial expertise and capital to invest in the United States.

Though the impact of the investment has been relatively modest, the report says that the United States already has benefited in a variety of ways, including:

—The creation of about 1.1 million U.S. jobs and $11.4 billion in additional wages by the end of 1974.

—The generating of technological and product improvements helped along by new methods and processes from abroad.

"The general attitude of the United States toward direct investment from abroad is one of friendliness and invitation," Bank of America says. "There are at least 14,000 local industrial organizations supported by state or local government that actively promote investment."

The United States exhibits that friendliness in some of the ways it seeks to recruit investment. A good example is the group of financial incentives Pennsylvania offered Volkswagenwerk AG of West Germany when the auto maker was looking for a spot to locate its U.S. plant.

Among the incentives offered were a $6 million loan from two state retirement funds at 8.5 percent annual interest, and a $40 million loan from the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority that financed the purchase of the existing site. Under the agreement, VW pays interest of 1.75 percent annually on the loan for 20 years and 8 percent for the last 10 years.

Test Results Vary

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 48-year-old woman. I'm a teacher and do not smoke or drink. I exercise by riding my bike a mile a day and have no real mental stress.

A year ago my cholesterol was 240. After a few months on a very strict 1000-calorie, low cholesterol diet and losing 22 pounds with the diet and exercise my count was 250. ods might be closer to 220, which means a minimal risk for a woman with normal blood pressure who doesn't smoke.

You are following the right pattern in general with your diet, but you should try to stay lean and avoid increasing your fat deposits for a large number of health reasons.

Those variations in your cholesterol levels are all within the range that you might expect with different tests.

To give you a summary of what diet you should be following I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am interested in your opinion of the benefits of honey to the general health of a body, and especially the part which honey may play in developing a stronger and healthier heart. I have heard of various benefits that are derived from the consumption of honey, but I would like a medical opinion of its value.

DEAR READER — Special health benefits from honey are folklore and not facts. The simple truth is that honey contains no significant amounts of vitamins or minerals. It is almost all sugar and water. The sugar in honey is fructose and glucose. The only difference in the honey sugar and table sugar is that fructose and glucose are chemically combined in table sugar. This is changed in the small intestine where enzymes convert table sugar to the same single sugars, fructose and glucose, that are naturally in honey.

Honey contains a carcinogen, meaning it may stimulate the formation of cancer, although there are no identified cases of cancer from the use of honey. Dr. Thomas H. Jukes cited this in a recent review in the New England Journal of Medicine (August 25, 1977) and the original report was from Science. The carcinogen comes from the pollen used in making honey.

So honey, a natural food, like some other food substances of so-called synthetic origin, is not completely perfect. Honey is no different in this regard than sugar. When calories have to be limited all sweets need to be limited.
