

Tourists Flock To Las Vegas Desert Paradise

By STEPHEN LONGSTREET

Twenty million tourists appear in Las Vegas every year to feed, drink, buy love, and of course to gamble. Their goal is the glittering Strip where the great hotel gambling casinos light up the desert.

The Strip has its dozen or so great hotel casinos in a style that has been called "dice table Baroque": the Desert Inn, the Tropicana, the Stardust, the Dunes, the Hacienda, and others. There are certain things these places have in common: no clocks in view of gamblers, no windows, and few doors leading away from the tables. Gambling is peremptory and absolute. Players are not — called suckers or marks. The most catered to are the high rollers who are big-ply gamblers, or show business, film or TV folk.

Labels Applied To Gamblers, Visitors

A gambler can be labeled as a "dropper" (in industry or big business) or a "no producer" (just a gambler with no other known trade). A note against a hotel file card can also identify him (or her) as one who spends ("puts out") when winning or looped, or a boozier. The oldest tried joke in town is that the tourist has three things to do: drink, gamble, make love.

Actually, some demand fine food. In a few places the food is good (not as good as it was 20 years ago, or as cheap). There are swimming, golfing, and visits to Boulder Dam (somehow no one seems to care to call it Hoover Dam). There are even dance floors. They are, however, very small; they detract from gambling. And of course there are the stage shows, from Frank Sinatra to Ella Fitzgerald to Don Rickles. As one casino boss expressed it, "It's the sugar we trap the flies with."

Some Combine Gambling, Divorce

There is not much else to Las Vegas but the hot desert and harsh winds blowing outside. Some visitors combine gambling with a divorce or a wedding. But the gambling casinos furnish the true reason for Nevada as a solvent state.

For all the natural nonconformity, there are lots of churches and a few Jewish temples in town. The church, more broadminded here, is not above taking a hand in the atmosphere. For years the Catholic Church's Father Richard Anthony Crowley conducted an early morning mass (at 4:30 in the Stardust's Crown Room) for anyone still gambling at that hour, and for the cocktail waitresses, security guards, pit bosses, croupiers, and resident hoods. The good father excused it all by saying, "After all, there was gambling for the Robe at the Foot of the Cross."

Losers Can Get Credit

Losers with a credit rating can get credit. They sign IOUs, or markers, as they're called, to the house. There are also handy pawnshops to issue loans on watches, rings, cameras or portable radios. A missing Motion Picture Academy Oscar was once in pawn of items needed for bodily health: dentures, eyeglasses, hearing aids, trusses and crutches. There was also a rumor of the refusal by one pawnshop to lend money on a glass eye.

Strange things happen to the visitor — to his state of mind — no matter how staid and stern he or she is at home. In Vegas many move into permissive new areas, perhaps long desired. For here is a town built on dice, cards and numbers that calls itself "Liberty Hall." The balance of most repressed sensual desires becomes upset; money, gambling, available sex, food and theater are all there at one's elbow. The atmosphere does not affect just the visitor. The pit bosses, entertainers, band men, waitresses, chefs, busboys, waiters and parking-lot attendants very often squander their pay in gambling. So do many of the star acts.

Psychological Need For Gambling

Nevada almost creates a psychological need for gambling. There is a gambling casino area in the State Prison at Carson City. Here the inmates can play of brass checks, which can be cashed when an inmate leaves the prison. There are tables for 21 and crap shooting as well as a wire service for placing horse race bets on any track in the country. As one guard at the prison put it: "It keeps 'em preoccupied working out systems to beat the cards or the crap table odds."

Eight times a day the Mint Hotel's gambling school (no charge) gives courses in the simpler aspects of roulette, blackjack. There are films, and actual experts demonstrate. Students are given a "Diploma of gambling knowledge" and some chips to play with at the casino. No mention is made of the odds and the house percentages, the actual odds against becoming a big winner.

If there is one visitor that Las Vegas welcomes not only with open arms but with fruit basket in his or her room, fresh drinks and special attention, it is some genius who has worked out another system to beat the house. It is always claimed to be a foolproof system and works absolutely perfectly on paper. No matter — the house never loses at the slots, and the house's favored percentage insures them against great winners.

The visitors pay 80 percent of the state's taxes; without gambling, Nevada would probably go back to the Gila monster and the tumbleweeds, existing merely as a way station for freight trains. The lure may be greed or hope, but it is also that last American wide-open frontier.

Manager Tells Supreme Court Of Wire Tap By Phone Company

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Midland district manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. says he's sure the company wiretapped the home telephone of former executive James Ashley after Ashley was fired in 1974.

Royce F. Brookmole made the statement in a sworn affidavit filed Tuesday with the Texas Supreme Court as part of Ashley's pleadings in a continuing legal battle with Southwestern Bell.

Ashley was fired from his $55,000-a-year job with Southwestern Bell in San Antonio in October 1974.

A state district court jury in December 1976 found that Bell invaded the privacy of Ashley and his wife by wiretapping their home telephone. The court ordered Bell to pay the Ashleys $1 million in damages.

But Bell appealed the verdict and the 11th Court of Civil Appeals in Eastland, Texas, recently reversed the jury finding and nullified the $1 million award. The appeals court said there was insufficient evidence at the trial to support the jury's verdict for Ashley.

Now, Ashley is asking the Texas Supreme Court to overturn the appeals court action and reinstate the jury verdict and damages.

Brookmole's affidavit, disclosed by columnist Paul Thompson of the San Antonio News, is a part of Ashley's appeal to the high court.

In the affidavit, Brookmole says he is an expert on wiretapping.

"I have personally monitored and been monitored on thousands of occasions and I can determine if a telephone is being wiretapped," he states.

Brookmole states that in numerous telephone conversations with Ashley during 1974 and 1975 he detected "positive wiretap symptoms" in the home telephones of both men.

Brookmole, who still works for the telephone company, says Southwestern Bell security chief Edwin McKaskel "personally told me he was wiretapping Mr. Ashley's phone in connection with an investigation for the company."

Brookmole said he told Southwestern Bell lawyers about his knowledge of wiretaps. He said the company lawyers told him he could not be subpoenaed to testify at the December 1976 trial and that "if I appeared at the trial to testify, I would do so at the expense of my job with Southwestern Bell."

Southwestern Bell officials in San Antonio had no immediate comment on Brookmole's statements.

Ashley was fired Oct. 31, 1974, following an internal company investigation. He joined later with the widow of T. O.

Gravitt to file a $29 million libel, slander and wrongful death suit against Southwestern Bell.

Gravitt was the head of Bell in Texas when he committed suicide at his Dallas home Oct. 17, 1974. His family contended in the suit that Bell's investigation drove Gravitt to his death.

A state district court jury in San Antonio last summer found Bell had slandered Ashley and Gravitt, and that the investigation was a "proximate cause" of Gravitt's mental condition at the time of his death. The jury recommended Bell pay $1.5 million damages to each Ashley and Oleta Gravitt Dixon, who remarried after Gravitt's death.

Southwestern Bell is appealing that jury verdict also.

In the earlier wiretapping trial, Ashley alleged that Bell officials bugged his home telephone to learn his legal strategy for the suit he filed with Mrs. Dixon.

C. L. Todd, vice president of the San Antonio Division of Bell, has denied all along any wiretapping by his company.

Henry IV of England was actually crowned king of France, prompting British monarchs through Queen Anne to claim the French crown as a part of their title.

Stay Granted Billy Battie On Death Row

FORT WORTH (AP) — Convicted killer Billy Joe Battie held off the executioner again Tuesday, less than 72 hours before he was scheduled to die by lethal injection.

U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon stayed the Friday morning execution at the request of attorney Joe James Sawyer, who said he entered the case just last week after being asked by the American Civil Liberties Union and the NAACP.

A second stay request in state district court has apparently been dropped. Judge Gordon Gray, who presided over Battie's trial here, said Tuesday afternoon he had not considered the request and didn't anticipate doing so in light of Mahon's ruling.

"The judge (Mahon) granted the stay but he has not set a date for a hearing yet," said Sawyer. "I would imagine it would be a minimum of 30 days before he does so."

Battie, 20, has been sentenced to die on five different occasions since he was convicted of the 1975 murder of a grocery store clerk, who, testimony revealed, was begging for mercy when she was killed by a shotgun blast.

Sawyer and attorney John Brady filed identical petitions with both judges claiming the death penalty was too severe for someone Battie's age. They also said the trial testimony of a psychologist was prejudicial and should not have been used against their client.

Britain's King George VI was the first reigning British monarch to visit the United States.

Prison Site's Purchase Snagged By 'Deadline'

AUSTIN (AP) — The on-again, off-again negotiations to buy a huge South Texas tract for a new state prison site are apparently off — this time maybe for good.

A mysterious April 1 deadline too few state officials apparently knew about passed without any contracts being signed with Big Five Farms Inc. of Edinburg for about 8,000 acres.

Attorney General John Hill said Tuesday his staff is checking to see if the deadline has passed.

However, Frank Westerman, spokesman for Big Five Farms, said "There was a deadline written into the contract, but that's about all I'm going to say on the subject. I imagine we would consider a good faith agreement, but..."

Westerman, obviously angered by reports that the land was once owned by a mystery man with Mafia connections, said he and his partners are now negotiating with a Chicago group that is interested in buying the land for farming purposes.

Ron Taylor, spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections, said there is "no question" in the TDC's mind about obtaining clear title to the land. However, he said a series of questions asked by the three-man approval board, which consists of the governor, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Prison Board Chairman James Windham, must be answered before negotiations can continue.

Jack Gibberson, Armstrong's chief clerk, said Big Five's asking price for the land was $8 million. The deal was initially approved by the Texas Prison Board. However, initial appraisals determined the land and equipment was worth about $7.3 million.

"At the last meeting (of the approval board), the governor said he wanted to find out who had owned the land and Bob (Armstrong) agreed," said Gibberson. "I think they figured since questions had been raised about the prior owner and the fact that this was state money that was going to be spent that the public had a right to know the answers to these questions."

Explorer Burns Frail Reed Craft In Protest

DJIBOUTI (AP) — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl and his international crew burned their reed boat off the coast of this tiny East African nation to protest "unhuman elements in the world of 1978."

They set the torch to their experimental craft Monday when they had been refused permission to land at two Red Sea ports after a five-month voyage.

Ethiopia's military government refused to let the frail craft land at a port in northern Eritrea Province, where rebels are fighting for autonomy, and North Yemen barred their waters to the boat because of "security problems."

The burning ended Heyerdahl's 6,200-mile journey that was to prove ancient Sumarians could have spread their culture throughout Africa and India in similar craft 5,000 years ago.

Qurna, Iraq, last November. Manned by Heyerdahl and a crew of ten men from nine nations, it sailed through the Persian Gulf into the Arabian Sea and Indian Ocean to Pakistan, then to the Horn of Africa. They set fire to the boat about six miles off Djibouti near Musha Island.

In a letter delivered Monday to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, Heyerdahl said the United Nations' ideal of joint cooperation for survival was foremost on the minds of he and his crew.

The letter said all members of the crew were disillusioned upon returning to land.

"Surrounded by military airplanes and warships from the world's most civilized and developed nations, we are denied permission by friendly governments for security reasons to land anywhere but in the tiny and still neutral Republic of Djibouti," it said.

The letter added: "Today we burn our proud ship with sails up and rig and vessel in perfect shape to protest the unhuman elements in the world of 1978." The world, it said, must "wake up to the insane reality of our time which to all of us has been reduced to mere unpleasant headlines in the news."

"We are all irresponsible unless we demand from the responsible decision makers that modern armaments must no longer be made available to the people whose former battle axes and swords our ancestors condemned."

It said the sailors had found a common bond in their cramped vessel by the knowledge that they would sink or survive together. "It has also been a voyage into the future to demonstrate that no space is too restricted for peaceful coexistence of men who work for common survival," the letter said.

Heyerdahl, famed for his Pacific crossing in the Kon-Tiki raft, said the voyage achieved its objectives and proved the ancient people in Mesopotamia, the Indus Valley and Egypt had at their disposal ships that could reach other cultures.

He thanked Waldheim for allowing the boat to sail under the blue and white

United Nations flag. The crew consisted of Heyerdahl and Hans Peter Bohn from Norway; Norman Baker and Norris Brock of the United States; Yuri Senkevitch, Soviet Union; Carlo Mauri, Italy; Toru Suzuki, Japan; Detlef Soitzek, West Germany; German Carrasco, Mexico; Asbjorn Damhus, Denmark, and Rash Naair Salim, Iraq.

Peace Corps Tightens Hiring

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Peace Corps, intent on avoiding the least appearance of impropriety, is reorganizing and tightening its rules barring spies and former spies from its service.

The regulations are aimed at avoiding "providing any credence to charges that the Peace Corps is a front for intelligence activities of the United States government..."

Such charges have been made on occasion by foreign governments, despite the fact that the corps, which provides volunteer services to developing nations, has had a policy of avoiding connections with the intelligence community since it was founded in 1961.

Officials said the restructuring of the rules is not connected with either these charges or recent publicity about improper actions of U.S. intelligence agents abroad.

Currently the Peace Corps has 6,852 volunteers in service in 62 countries.

The new rules list a number of agencies whose former employees are permanently barred from either employment or volunteer work in the Peace Corps, and others whose employees cannot join the corps for at least 10 years.

Also barred from corps service are persons who have engaged in intelligence work for agencies not listed.

The policy is also extended to cover contractors and subcontractors working for the Peace Corps.

For example, the rules bar letting contracts to a firm which "currently is a contractor for an intelligence agency" or "has ever engaged in intelligence or related work."

The new policy also provides means for rejected volunteers and prospective employees to appeal the agency's refusal of their services.

Agencies whose employees are permanently ineligible for Peace Corps employment of volunteer work under the rules include the CIA, Defense Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, National Security Council, Central Intelligence Group, National Reconnaissance Office, Satellite Reconnaissance and the Office of the Director of Central Intellig-

Politics Simmers In Texas

By The Associated Press

Gov. Dolph Briscoe planned a trip to Washington and wrote Texas congressmen Tuesday while opponents accused him of "scare tactics" and neglecting state employees. Briscoe said he would go to Washington today for discussions of a deep-water port off the Texas coast.

Attorney General John Hill accused Briscoe of using "scare tactics" and trying to spread the "big lie" that Hill would raise taxes. Hill told a news conference in San Antonio that he would veto any personal or corporate income tax.

Hill said there would be enough money in the state treasury next year to cover his proposed $1.3 billion increase in spending on education.

He said he thought he would win the May 6 Democratic primary without a runoff.

Former Gov. Preston Smith, the third Democratic candidate, said if he is elected he will submit emergency legislation calling for an immediate 6.8 percent pay increase for state employees.

"Instead of giving our state employees a badly needed 6.8 percent increase in the last legislative session, Briscoe chose to put the huge surplus into his pet projects and donate state employees a token 3.4 percent boost, leaving them far behind the cost of living," Smith said in a statement.

Briscoe urged Congressmen W.R. Poage and Eligio de la Garza "to give all due consideration to fashioning a bill that will give the farmers the help they need in this growing season."

"The farmers do not want a handout. They want a 'way out,'" Briscoe said in a telegram.

Poage and de la Garza are members of the conference committee considering farm legislation.

The governor also announced in a statement that he would meet with Transportation Secretary Brock Adams "to underline our commitment to making a state deepwater port off the coast of Texas a reality."

Another gubernatorial candidate, Republican Bill Clements, talked of going to Washington. Clements planned to "fight like a cornered bear" against an attempt by the federal government to take over control of Texas' intrastate natural gas.

He told the American Petroleum Institute in Houston that the gas regulation issue is "as sensitive an issue as the offshore tidelands" in the 1980s.

U.S. Senate candidate Joe Christie announced four more endorsements, including the El Paso Times and the Tulla Herald.

Carter--Muddling In Africa

PRESIDENT CARTER, whose experiments in foreign policy have landed him in hot water on numerous occasions during his first year in office, may have bought himself more trouble than he can handle on his latest foray.

In a just-completed four-nation journey to Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria and Liberia, the President managed to step on just about everyone's toes, except those of his black Ambassador to the UN, Andrew Young.

For Young, the "good friend" and hand-picked envoy of the President, the trip was "an overwhelming success," a view shared only partially by those various Third World leaders who hosted the Americans.

WHAT SPARKED Amb. Young's effusive praise was the President's revival of pressure for black majority rule in Rhodesia and Namibia (Southwest Africa) and South Africa.

While castigating Russia and Communist Cuba's armed intervention in various parts of the continent, Mr. Carter's main thrust seemed to be for sweeping changes in Rhodesia and South Africa.

In the case of the former, the President formally urged that the recent internal peace agreement reached by Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia and three major black spokesmen inside Rhodesia be more or less shelved, and the whole process started over.

In so doing, Mr. Carter would, with the British, invite the two Marxist Popular Front guerrilla leaders from outside Rhodesia, Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, and representatives of the United Nations to sit down with Smith and the Rhodesian black leaders inside the country, in an effort to hammer out a new agreement.

NEVER MIND that most persons, both black and white inside Rhodesia, seem to accept the recent internal settlement which would have put the blacks in position of power in most offices within a year...

AN EDITORIAL:

Long Life's Price

WE MUST be doing something right. Despite all the stresses and strains of modern life and what seems like the discovery of a new cancer threat nearly every day, people are living longer.

Average life expectancy in the U.S. reached 71.5 years in 1975—an all-time high—according to an annual report just sent to Congress by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

This represents a gain of 1.6 years since 1970.

HEW also reported that the death rate in 1975 was the lowest ever recorded. Significantly, for people over 65, the death rate had decreased by 13 percent since 1950.

If money can buy health, we seem to be doing so: Americans tripled their spending on health care between 1966 and 1976 from $56 billion to $174 billion.

Furthermore, HEW says 89 percent of the general population was "in good or excellent" health...last time it looked, anyway.

ART BUCHWALD:

You're OK Kid, But It's Not Your Fault

WASHINGTON—In the film classic, "On the Waterfront," there is a very poignant scene in the back of a taxi between Marlon Brando and Rod Steiger, who plays his brother.

Brando, a longshoreman, was a boxer, and he blames Steiger, who is mixed up with the mob, for ruining his chances to be a contender by making him throw a fight.

I was reminded of this scene the other day when I was sharing a taxi with two gentlemen I didn't know. They were in the back seat and I was in the front, and they didn't think I was listening to what they were saying. I was.

APPARENTLY, ONE of the men had worked for Nixon in the White House, though now he looked quite scruffy. His leather jacket was torn, he wore no tie and there were holes in his shoes.

The other man, who I found out later was his brother, was well dressed and wore a camel-hair coat and an expensive hat. His name was Charley.

"What's bugging you, kid?" Charley said. "You know damn well what's bugging me. You kept me out of the Watergate scandal and now I don't have a nickel to my name."

"I did it for your own good, Terry," Charley said. "I didn't want you to lose your moral compass."

"I could have had a million dollars by now."

"I KNEW THERE was something fishy going on in the White House with Nixon and his crowd, but when I told you about it you said 'Stay away from it, kid. They're up to their necks in trouble and they're going to pay for it.'"

"I remember that's what you said and like a dummy I listened to you. I turned my back on Watergate and look at me now."

"But kid," said Charley, "I was just trying to

And never mind that it is Communist Russia which has been helping supply, and in some instances, Cuban soldiers helping train Mugabe's and Nkomo's ruthless guerrilla forces attacking Rhodesia from outside...

Despite all this, the President throws his weight behind a plan pushed by Amb. Young, who was never willing from the start to give the internal peace effort a chance.

Not satisfied with joining Amb. Young in placing the U.S. in opposition to the recent Rhodesian peace effort, the President reached out to meddle in even more troubled waters.

Speaking in Liberia, the President wound up his journey with a warning that the Republic of South Africa "could precipitate more serious differences" with the U.S. if it rejected what he termed a reasonable solution for self rule in Namibia (Southwest Africa).

SO, IN ONE week, the President managed to: needle the Venezuelans on oil prices, which was justified; further irritate Brazil with his human rights rhetoric; find little support among African black leaders for his criticism of Russian and Cuban forces in Africa; and lambaste leaders of two white nations who would come nearer standing with America in opposing Communism than all the others put together!

We have no argument with Mr. Carter's efforts at bringing peace and harmony to the world, in doing away with poverty and hunger and installing human rights in the minds and hearts of all.

But, we do take great issue with the manner in which he is going about attempting to achieve such goals.

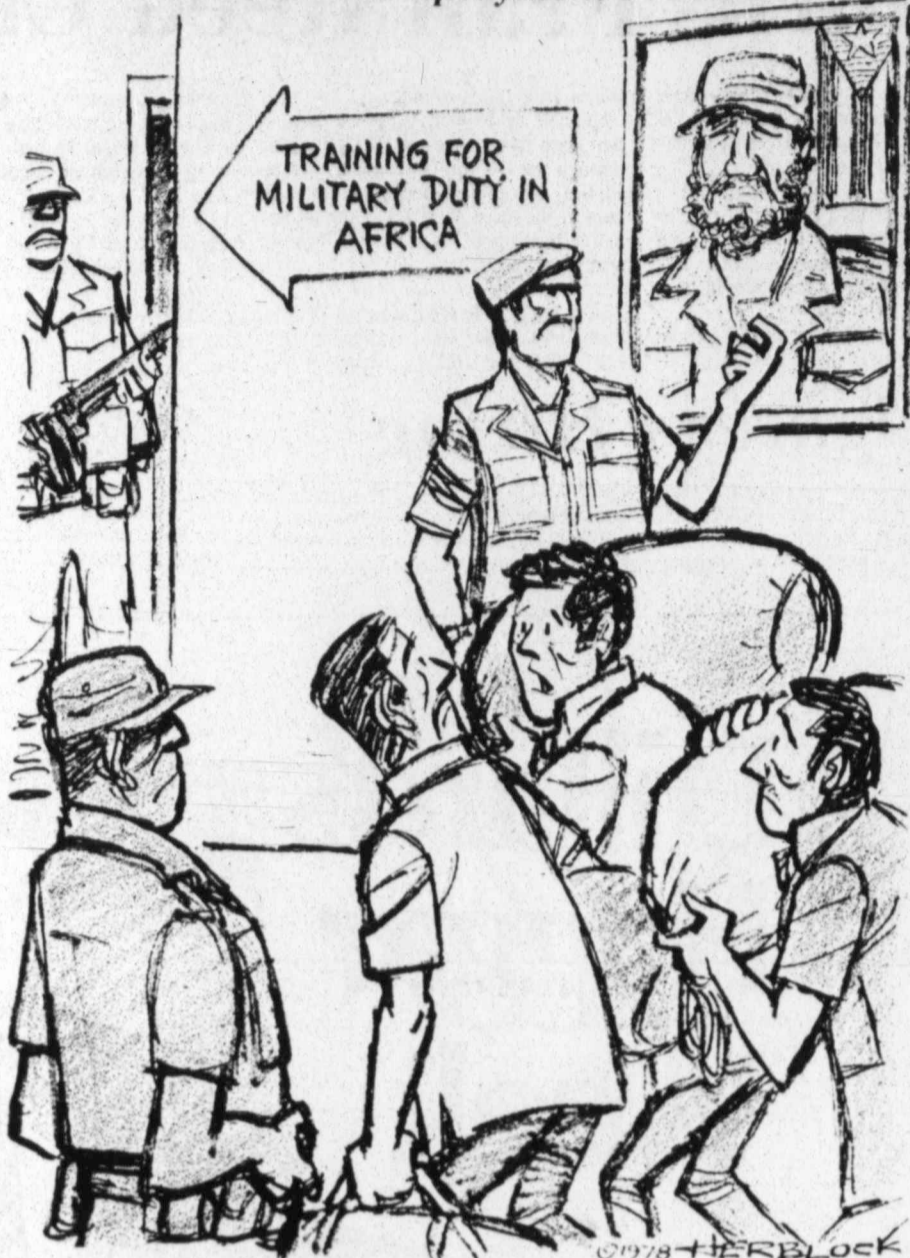

WE FIND IT most ironic that the President would on one hand assail Russian and Cuban intervention in Africa, then in the next breath offer to sit down with two avowed Marxist leaders to shape a new regime in Rhodesia.

By aligning himself on the side of the radicals, and Amb. Young, on Rhodesia, Namibia and South Africa, he only invites more interference from Marxist-backed guerrilla leaders. And in the case of South Africa, he continues to overlook the fact that he is meddling in the internal affairs of a legitimate, viable government, something he nor the American people would tolerate if the situation were reversed.

While on the subject of Mr. Carter's trip, we also are disturbed by the fact that coverage of the trip leaves something to be desired. An American businessman was imprisoned in Nigeria, without charge, only a few hours before the Presidential party arrived in Nigeria, according to some sources. Little was made of the incident, although had it happened in South Africa, there would have been a great hue and cry.

Just for the record, we are not alone in our concern for what many knowledgeable observers feel is a shortsighted policy designed, by accident or otherwise, to aid the Communists in Africa. It is too bad. And, if the President's statements on this trip are any indication, things are going from bad to worse.

'Fidel Certainly Makes Sure We Don't Have An Unemployment Problem'

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

It's Not Funny Now

WASHINGTON—A high-level mission from the militant Marxist state of South Yemen quietly slipped out of Moscow last month with enough new pledges of Soviet military aid to alarm its neighbor, the kingdom of Saudi Arabia—the major source of oil for the industrialized democracies.

What makes this particularly significant, following the new Soviet-Cuban stranglehold on Ethiopia and the Horn of Africa, is the future prospect of Soviet-Cuban direct pressure on the vast Arabian Peninsula.

Real concern over such pressure would have been laughable a few short years ago, but it is laughable no longer in view of U.S. failure to know how to stop the Soviet-Cuban march through Africa.

The seeming impotence of the U.S. to deal with Soviet-Cuba, Inc., in Africa becomes a natural invitation for the Soviet-Cuban marauders to experiment elsewhere.

ALTHOUGH THERE may be no immediate threat to Saudi Arabia or other oil-rich Arabian states on the Persian Gulf, the new Soviet military package for South Yemen is a portent of things to come.

It consists of what might be called Moscow's Grade B, economy-sized package: 50 MiG-21s, of which 15 are believed already delivered; SA (surface to air missiles) 2's, 3's and 7's; plus an unknown number of modern T-62 tanks.

Even if only the Grade B package, these weapons will dwarf what Moscow has previously sent to South Yemen—MiG-17s, T-34 and T-55 tanks.

These earlier weapons have now been dispatched to Ethiopia for the Soviet-Cuba, Inc., war against Somalia.

With 500 to 900 Cubans now in South Yemen (mostly in the capital, the deepwater port of Aden) this tightening Soviet control increases the serious strategic threat to the Western democracies that use oil from the Persian Gulf.

MOST OF THAT OIL goes by tanker from the Gulf to the Red Sea. On one side of the entrance to the Red Sea (which is the gateway to the Suez Canal) is the Soviet-dominated Horn of Africa; on the other, just 35 miles across the Red Sea entrance, Soviet-controlled South Yemen.

Signs of Soviet-inspired political tightening in South Yemen are now too obvious to be in question.

The titular head of the country has recently lost his preeminent position because he attempted to negotiate a political compromise with Saudi Arabia last summer.

Since then he has been slowly eased out of power by the general secretary of the Communist party, a hardline, pro-Soviet loyalist.

For example, when the ruling politburo asked the president what he and the Saudis has discussed after his experimental trip to Riyadh, he refused to respond on grounds that the talks were confidential and that "I am the president."

He began to lose authority immediately and was replaced at the meeting of the anti-Egyptian rejectionist Arab states in Tripoli, following President Anwar Sadat's peace mission to Jerusalem, by the party boss.

THE SOVIET-CUBAN lock on the oil passage into the Red Sea will not be complete until the Ethiopians put down the revolt in the Ethiopian province of Eritrea, a military operation that had to wait until the Somalis had been taken care of.

In that civil war, South Yemen is now a clandestine combatant under Cuban tutelage. It is believed—though not publicized—that a MiG-17 flown by a South Yemeni was shot down over Eritrea and the pilot's body recovered.

Anti-Soviet Arabs further claim that this incident indicates that a full squadron of MiG-17s flown by South Yemeni pilots has probably been active in the conflict between Ethiopia and Eritrea.

SUCH INTERVENTION by Soviet "proxy forces" in local conflicts was a major target of President Carter's March 17 warning at Winston-Salem against Moscow's free-wheeling military policies and the steady growth of Soviet power.

He warned for the first time of what actually became apparent long ago—an erosion of support for U.S.-Soviet detente unless Moscow shows "restraint...in the projection of Soviet or proxy forces to other lands and continents."

Justing from the new weapons program Moscow has just agreed to for South Yemen, it is doubtful that Carter's warning will impose much restraint on the Russians.

Rather, the U.S. may have to take more direct action.

The buildup of a Soviet-Cuban, Inc. military force at the base of the oil-rich Arabian Peninsula and athwart the entrance to the Red Sea cannot be lightly regarded.

A few years ago it would not have been tolerated.

Pop. On A Sign

THOUGHT FOR Today: Time flies. But remember, you're the navigator.

OVERHEARD: Why be surprised to find sinners in church? That's who it's for.

ON PERUSING the paper this week, we noticed the Highway Department is installing new City Limits and other signs over the district.

The signs, larger, green and reflective; are being put up in the district's 17-county region.

When completed, the updated signs, more visible, and in some instances different colors, will conform with the mandates of the 1973 Manual of Uniform Traffic Control Devices. And unless some of them are changed, they also will reflect the wrong population figures. Such is the case involving Lubbock, for instance.

When we glanced at the "sample" City Limits sign for Lubbock, the first thing which hit us was the "Pop. 159,530" figure. It's considerably behind the times...

GEORGE WALL, district highway engineer, just happened to be in the office at the time.

He says the Highway Dept. changes the figures "every two years, if the cities request it." A call to City Hall indicated someone had just forgotten to tell the Highway Dept. Lubbock was growing, even on the highways. The figure, it seems, is the one projected for 1973.

City Mgr. Larry Cunningham and Jim Bertram, head of the Planning Dept., say new figures are being compiled and will be submitted to the City Council, possibly next week, for forwarding to the Highway Dept., which still has time to update the signs.

Bertram says he thinks Lubbock's population might be "around 180,000," but not too long ago, the U.S. Census Bureau came through Texas and reduced the Person-Per-Dwelling figures by a fraction. Using a lower measuring stick, Bertram says the official "guesstimate" for the city now is about 175,000. Some days, in traffic jams, we would set it nearer 200,000!

The City no longer uses the "Chamber of Commerce" approach of counting water meters, phones, etc., but counts residential units, multiplied by about 2.8. Incidentally, Bertram says Lubbock's residential ratio now breaks down to about 50 percent single family homes and 50 percent apartments.

FROM A Friend: My children tell me everything. And I'm a nervous wreck.

SLIDE ROAD Sam Says: Only in America do certain people worry around the clock about the possible infringement of people's rights in South Africa and Rhodesia, while at home they're afraid to walk the streets at night!

IT IS NO secret that the divorce rate in America is going up faster than prices.

What generally isn't noticed, except by those involved and their friends, is that the "deciding-to-call-it-quits" trend is cutting across all age groups.

However, it is those who marry young who still run the greatest risk of splitting in a short time. A recent study revealed that U.S. girls in the 14- to 17 age bracket who marry risk a 72 percent chance of their first marriage ending in a divorce. Those who wed at ages 18 and 19 run a 46 percent risk. The national average for all first marriages now stands at 38 percent.

Incidentally, Lubbock may well have one of the highest divorce rates in the nation, on a per capita basis. There are any number of reasons, including some which most persons likely would give as those which would go against a high divorce rate.

SUCCESS OFTEN depends on the functioning of the glands, the sweat glands.

DIGNITY IS THE capacity to hold back on the tongue what should never have been on the mind in the first place.

WE ARE STILL getting flack from that column quoting Col. William Speir, head of the Department of Public Safety, as wanting to outlaw "fuzz busters."

The "fuzz buster, or radar detector, is a device, for those who may not know, which will alert a driver that a radar unit is somewhere ahead, usually within a radius of a mile.

Noting that Texas' highway death toll had set a new record in 1977, six above the 1973 figure, Col. Speir urged several drastic measures to combat the trend.

Among them were more DPS patrolmen, strict adherence to the 55-mph speed limit, and "outlawing the radar detector..." The colonel was quoted as saying some other states had passed laws saying the "fuzz busters" were illegal.

AS WE NOTED at the time, there was swift reaction, most of it unfavorable.

Now, there has been more. Seems many people regard the radar detectors as personal property and in themselves not a violation of any law. They say that outlawing them would be no different than banning use of the CB for the same purpose.

And in a national television show on the subject the past Sunday, we were told that some 19 states have tried to pass legislation outlawing the detectors but had run into snags.

We can see both sides of the question. In one way, one can argue that the units help drivers beat the law. On the other count, one could argue that, like the CBs, they slow drivers down, at least momentarily.

But, back of it all is the "rights" issue. Even the "right" to kill oneself and others, some might argue...

Writer Wolfe Probes 'Me' Cult

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The new sexual awareness, the women's and minority movements, religious cults, the rush to join the latest in psychotherapy groups — all are part of this decade's preoccupation with the individual.

Writer-journalist Tom Wolfe calls it "The Me Decade." Others refer to it as the new narcissism. Whatever the label, the '70s have ushered in the most intensive era of individualism this country has seen.

And Wolfe, whose essays satirizing all this self-awareness appeared in New York magazine a year ago, said in Lubbock Tuesday he feels the "Me" decade and its trappings are resulting in people being "less concerned with family, marriage, children, or even about having children."

Wolfe, who spoke at Texas Tech Tuesday night, said he feels people now are spending so much energy on perfecting their own lives that their children's lives no longer mean that much.

Taking the women's movement as an example, Wolfe said the movement makes it interesting just to be a woman — "it gives stage value to women."

And men are not far behind, the New York writer said. Books are coming out on the phases of men's psychic and emotional development, Wolfe said, and soon men will find themselves the center of attention.

The current movements and programs toward self-improvement and self-gratification merely allow individuals "to put themselves on stage," Wolfe said.

"Putting 'me' on stage, that is the movement's initial appeal, and that gives it its staying power," he said.

Wolfe allowed that it is good that "people of all sorts are seeing how far they can go with their lives." But the side effects of this intensive introspection has led to an ignoring of the needs of society as a whole, he said.

"All of us believe that what happens after them means something," Wolfe commented. "That is why people take out life insurance policies and make out wills."

But the current preoccupation with only the needs of the self "is an assault on that," he added.

Commission Files Damage Suit

A-J Correspondent
LOVINGTON, N.M. — The New Mexico Oil Conservation Commission has filed suit in district court here seeking $6,000 in damages for storage of an excessive amount of saltwater in an unlined pit in Lea County.

C.E. LaRue and B.N. Muncy, Jr., residents of Eddy County and owners and operators of the Pearsall Queen Unit tank battery and water station, located in Lea County, have been named as defendants in the suit.

The suit alleges that on March 2, field representatives of the commission inspected the emergency pit adjacent to the defendants' tank battery and water station and found a large amount of saltwater in excess of the amount prescribed by the commission order, thereby endangering freshwater. Authority was sought to dispose of the saltwater on an emergency basis, according to commission.

Representatives again visited the pit on March 8, according to the suit, and reported the pit was satisfactorily cleaned up.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Confusion exists on just how you can best attend to various duties. Try to work out a course of action before starting on them. Later, you have considerable energy and are able to see all kinds of interesting things you then are able to do.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Consult with a wise adviser and follow through on suggestions given you. Make this a productive period.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Know what your personal aims are and plan how best to gain them. Then carry through in a positive manner. Join with friends for a delightful time together.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good time to think about civic affairs. A big-wig can be most helpful if you handle this person tactfully.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Think over any changes you want to make in the days ahead and be sure of what you are doing. Making new contacts who can be of assistance to you is wise. Curb your temper.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be more practical now and get affairs handled intelligently instead of being so dramatic. Evenings can be delightful with a loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Meet with partners and make revisions on contracts now and have greater success in the future. Spend only within your budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into all that work ahead of you and derive benefit from it. Take care of health problems. This will raise your spirits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan early the amusements you want most for a later time. Get your talents working nicely so that others will appreciate them, give you the support you need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to please family more and have more harmony. Handle minor matters. Do some entertaining at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Gather data you need in order to gain your finest objectives. Then make out reports, handle correspondence, legal papers, etc.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get right down to financial matters and put new ideas aside for the time being. If you have any doubts, consult an expert and get good advice.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get busy at work ahead of you and show your finest magnetic qualities to bigwigs. Add to prestige, also.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have an uncanny way of understanding others and can help humanity-at-large, so be sure to slant education along such lines, and add psychology to the curricula. Teach to stand up for own rights and not to get pushed around by others, since the nature is gentle here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Boosters Set Craft Sale

The Coronado Boosters Club will be sponsoring an arts and crafts sale Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. in the Coronado High School cafeteria.

Proceeds from the sale will go toward sending the Coronado High School band to state band competition and purchase of new band equipment.

Some 50 to 60 local and regional artists and craftsmen are expected to be represented at the sale.

10th Anniversary Of King's Slaying Observed

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Civil rights hymns from the 1960s rang out again in downtown Memphis on Tuesday as 2,000 people marched on the 10th anniversary of the slaying of Martin Luther King Jr.

Led by a platoon of religious, labor and political figures, the march began under sunny skies at the old Clayborn Temple AME Church where King made his famous "I have been to the mountaintop" speech the night before he was slain.

Singing "We Shall Overcome" and "Amen," the marchers trudged first to the Lorraine Motel, where King was gunned down from a balcony by a sniper's bullet.

Two motorcycle policemen preceded the parade. Police guarded every intersection, but the officers were there only to direct traffic, obviously not expecting the type of disorder that broke out 10 years ago when King led his last march.

The marchers, who were mostly black, numbered only about 700 when they stepped off from the old church. But as they marched down the middle of the streets, they were joined by people from the sidewalks.

B.T. Banks, a city sanitation worker who participated in the strike which brought King to Memphis in 1968, said it was the largest march he has seen here since shortly after King's death.

"I don't care what you do, there are just some people who are just there to be there, just there to be seen and to see who's there," said Banks. "But I think the majority of them are sincere, and that they're there because they want to be there."

After leaving the Lorraine, where about a dozen people had maintained an all-night vigil near the spot where King fell mortally wounded, the marchers walked west to Main Street and then north to the Orpheum Theater.

A group of long-time civil rights figures, including James Farmer, former director of the Congress of Racial Equality, addressed a standing-room-only crowd in the theater.

Among the speakers were Jerry Wurf, head of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Workers. It was a strike by Local 1733 of the AFSCME that brought King to Memphis.

In Gadsden, Ala., about 1,000 people marched in observance of the assassination anniversary and in protest over the police shooting of a black man, Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference was among those taking part in the march to the county courthouse.

The Alabama marchers were calling for the suspension of six policemen involved in the shooting of 27-year-old Collis Madden on Jan. 20.

In Atlanta, Coretta Scott King, the civil rights leader's widow, Martin Luther King Sr. and other members of the family took part in the traditional laying of a floral wreath at King's tomb during a brief ceremony at Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King and his father were copastors.

"We still have much, much yet to do to fully achieve Martin's dream," Mrs. King told about 75 onlookers, about half of them photographers and reporters. "We have made considerable progress in many areas during the last 10 years, but our society today still tolerates human suffering."

Among other observances, the African-American Student Association gathered at Boston University to lay a wreath at a statue of King in front of Marsh Chapel and a candlelight ceremony was scheduled for Tuesday night at the university's law school. King took his doctorate in theology at Boston University in 1955 and met his wife there.

Bishop John H. Burt of the Episcopal Diocese of Cleveland led an ecumenical memorial service in honor of King in that city.

About 200 persons marched about two miles through downtown Syracuse, N.Y., from the Martin Luther King School to the Onondaga County Courthouse, where they heard speakers discuss problems of particular interest to blacks.

Tribal, Oil Officials Seeking End To Protest

MONTEZUMA CREEK, Utah (AP) — Navajo tribal officials and oil company executives met Tuesday to see if they can end a sit-in by about 100 rebellious Indians that has shut down private oil drilling in this corner of the Navajo Reservation for six days.

The protesters have gripes with four oil companies drilling on leased reservation land, and with the Arizona-based tribal leadership.

They say the oil companies are guilty of discrimination in hiring and carelessness about the reservation's environment.

And they complain that money from the leases — millions of dollars a year — should go to individual Indians living in the area rather than to the tribe as a whole.

Tribal leaders from Navajo headquarters in Window Rock, Ariz., met with oil company officials in Phoenix in preparation for negotiations in Utah with the occupiers. A first meeting between Texaco and the protesters was held in Utah Friday.

"We'll be here a year until we get everything straightened out," said Larry Anderson, group spokesman and an American Indian Movement member. "We are taking no more racist, prejudiced attitude from the non-Indians' point of view," he said.

He accused the companies of not hiring enough Indians and of having "no respect for mother Earth, no respect for livestock."

Anderson said 90 percent of the oilfield workers are non-Indians and unemployment among reservation Indians in Utah is 85 percent. A state Indian affairs official said 50 percent to 60 percent of the Utah reservation population is on welfare.

The protesters have demanded in a petition that the companies stop polluting drinking water, clean up oil spills and pay for destroyed livestock.

John Masson, a Texaco spokesman in Denver, said he could not respond because the group had not cited specific incidents.

The unarmed protesters took over a Texaco pumping station in the Aneth oil field Thursday, and set up a roadblock on the only road out, causing the oil companies operating there — Texaco, Superior, Continental and Phillips — to halt operations.

The occupation was peaceful, and the companies have declined to press trespass charges.

"We'll stay here. We've got a nice building, water, lights, everything. We're staying right here until all these things is settled," vowed Calvin Thomas, a spokesman for the occupiers.

The Aneth oil field is in southeastern Utah on a corner of the 16-million-acre Navajo Indian Reservation, which spreads over vast areas of Utah, New Mexico and Arizona.

Five-Year Term Levied In Robbery Conviction

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Karl Edward Anderson Tuesday was assessed a five-year prison term for the brutal aggravated robbery of a service station attendant in April.

The jury in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court, which had found the defendant guilty earlier Tuesday, deliberated an hour and 51 minutes before returning the punishment verdict. When it was announced, Anderson, 18 and reportedly a high school junior, buried his face in his hands.

Assistant Dist. Atty. Cindy Miller had argued that the crime called for a penitentiary sentence.

Defense attorney Phil Brown, saying his client came from a good home and had been badly influenced by peers, requested probation.

Brown produced testimony from a local psychologist that Anderson, of 3308 E. 16th St., would be a "good probation bet."

The defendant's mother testified that her son came from a family of 13 children. Calling the situation "heartbreaking," the witness said she had never before "been inside a courtroom with one of my children."

Anderson was accused of participating in the April 29, 1977, robbery at the 521 Idalou Road service station along with two other men.

Victim Newton D. Rowlett testified he was threatened and slugged during the 11 a.m. incident, and left tied to an air compressor.

The gray-haired Rowlett, 50 at the time, said two men entered the store and that one pulled a gun.

He said the gunman cursed him and threatened to kill him. He said the bandits took his billfold, containing $125, and his coin purse as well as money from the cash register.

Rowlett said a loaded gun was poked in his back and that he was hit once behind the left ear before being tied to the air compressor in a back room.

Anderson was arrested at the David Avenue home of one of the three suspects shortly after the holdup, testimony during the two-day trial indicated.

Police Det. Joe Nevarez said he found the defendant hiding under a pile of clothes beside a bed.

Testimony showed that a loaded automatic pistol was found on a kitchen cabinet of the residence and that $170 was located under a couch.

Detective Harris Clanton said that a billfold and coin purse were later found in a bathtub, and said some papers found had Rowlett's name on them.

Also, the state introduced a statement reportedly taken from the defendant on the day of the robbery in which he admitted being the gunman in the holdup.

PROBLEMS IN THAILAND

BANGKOK (AP) — Thailand, overcrowded with refugees from neighboring Communist countries, is having resettlement problems with its own people. Police say hundreds of villagers are fleeing villages near the Cambodian border because of shelling and raids by Cambodian troops. Some have taken refuge in a Buddhist temple away from the shelling, police said.

Suspected Robber Charged

An aggravated robbery charge was filed Tuesday against a man accused of taking almost $1,000 from the safe at the Smuggler's Inn, 1915 50th St., early Sunday.

Named in the charge was Danny Burst Eoff, 23, of 2139 74th St.

The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $5,000 bond.

A masked, gun-wielding bandit reportedly put $999 in a sack and ordered employees into a vault during the 3 a.m. incident.

But a suspect was captured after two employees called authorities.

Restaurant employee Susan Smith, 22, told officers she had walked out the rear door of the building when a man pointed a pistol at her and demanded that she return inside with him.

The witness said the masked man led her into the dining area where several employees were gathering after work and ordered the group into the cold storage vault.

Assistant manager Michael Earl Sandell said the man made him lead the way to the bar, where the bandit reportedly ordered seven more employees to lie face down on the floor while he and Sandell went into the office and emptied the safe.

After the man had put money in a sack, Sandell said, the robber ordered employees on the barroom floor into the vault, took Sandell's vault key from him and locked the group inside.

Unknown to him, two of the imprisoned workers had called authorities.

Sheriff's Deputy Dean Bohannon was waiting outside and, according to reports, a suspect was arrested after a brief chase.

Also Tuesday, Michael A. Cox, 24, of 5303 21st St., was charged with burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape.

Cox is accused of attacking a woman in her residence about 5 a.m. Saturday. The DA's office recommended a $2,500 bond in that case.

Screams Drive Off Attackers

A 19-year-old Texas Tech coed averted a possible assault early Tuesday, when she apparently frightened away three men with her screams.

The victim, who lives in a complex just east of the university campus, said she had parked on the third floor of her parking garage when three Mexican-American men appeared. One of the men produced a knife, prompting the terrified woman's screams.

With that the men, all dressed in dark clothing, fled leaving the distraught woman unharmed.

Meanwhile, a party held at a salesman's 3002 4th St. apartment early Tuesday ended with the host being robbed.

Jose Duran said seven persons were at his residence having a party when he decided to leave his premises.

Later, upon his return, Duran said he discovered a man carrying his television set away.

Duran told police he asked the man to return the television, but the suspect reportedly produced a .38-caliber weapon and warned, "I have a gun."

Duran said he lost some clothing and the television to the robber, items valued at about $500.

Whoever broke into Julio Trevino's van while it was parked at his 3501 39th St. residence Monday, got away with more than $2,700 worth of musical and sound equipment, as well as some clothing.

John Curd of 8203 Louisvillle Ave. said someone broke into his garage recently and stole about $1,000 worth of sailing equipment, including several sails, a boat seat and the boat's main boom.

And Margaret Stanley of 4913 15th St. said someone recently purloined her lawnmower which had been stored at a shed in the 4200-block of 17th Street.

Billy Watson of Idalou said three men were involved in the theft of about $100 worth of hams from a Furr's Grocery store Tuesday.

One man reportedly grabbed seven hams that had been placed in paper sacks and dashed from the store at 34th Street and Avenue H, before catching a ride with two Mexican-American men.

Elizabeth Braziel of 1728 E. Dartmouth St. said someone broke into her residence Tuesday and took jewelry, guns, a scope for a rifle and about $90 cash. She estimated her loss at $350.

Shanram Radmanesh of 1008-B Ave. T said he lost about $700 worth of personal property recently when burglars made off with his television and stereo.

Reporting stolen wheelcovers Tuesday were Curtis Davis of 2608 E. Auburn St. and James Bricks of Littlefield, who said his $350 wheelcovers were taken from his vehicle while it was at a dealership at 19th Street and Texas Avenue recently.

A Lubbock businessman told police that when he got to his office recently he found the door open and a $73,010 stock certificate missing.

Reports indicated that W.T. Wozencraft of 3713 38th St. is the owner of a business at 3303 67th St., where the reported burglary occurred. According to Wozencraft, someone rifled his desk at the office and made off with the paperwork sometime between 9:45 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

After the complainant notified police Monday, officers reportedly were unable to find any sign of forced entry.

Someone apparently recognized class when he saw it, because an Afghan hound, valued at $2,000, was reported taken from a parked vehicle Monday.

C.L. Eudy said the dog was inside a cage in the back of his van parked at his 2123 23rd St. residence when the alleged crime occurred between 12:30 a.m. and 7 a.m. Monday. The complainant told police he was in charge of the animal, which belongs to an El Paso woman, at the time of the dogsnapping.

H.M. Bourgeois told officers about 50 rough cedar 2x4 boards were stolen from a construction site in the 3100-block of Vicksburg Avenue recently. The haul reportedly was valued at $600.

According to Louis Alvaraz, someone made off with three television sets, together valued at $1,100, from his 3006 3rd

Burial will be in City of Lubbock Cemetery under direction of Henderson Funeral Directors.

The infant was dead at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday on arrival at Health Sciences Center Hospital. Justice of the Peace Chiles Smith ruled the death of natural cause.

Survivors include her parents; five sisters, Isabel, Christina and Margita, all of the home; her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Fred Herrera of Lubbock and her great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Enrique Herrera of Lubbock.

Mrs. L.O. Turner

BROWNFIELD (Special) — Services for Mrs. L.O. (Leona) Turner, 97, of Brownfield, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in First Baptist Church with Rev. Pat Cummings, pastor, officiating, and the Rev. A.J. Franks, retired Baptist minister, assisting.

Burial will be in Terry County Memorial Park under direction of Brownfield Funeral Home.

Mrs. Turner died Tuesday at 4:5 a.m. in Brownfield General Hospital after a short illness.

The Bowie native was raised in Montague County. She married L. Turner in Sunset Dec. 19, 1917 and they moved to Brownfield in 1936. He died Oct. 26, 1946. She was employed in the clothing business before retiring.

She was a Baptist and a member of the Eastern Star.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. James W. (Janelle) Evans of Brownfield; two brothers, Lonnie of Brownfield and Ocie Rhyne of Enfield; and three grandchildren.

Longtime Mine Union Official Dies At 62

WASHINGTON (AP) — Services will be held Thursday for Justin G. McCarthy, chief publicist for the United Mine Workers union for 25 years, who died Sunday of a heart attack, he was 62. McCarthy, a newspaper reporter for 13 years in Chicago before joining the UMW in 1948, died in his sleep at his Arlington, Va., home.

McCarthy worked closely with the late UMW President John L. Lewis as a publicist, writer and editor of the United Mine Workers Journal. After Lewis' retirement in 1960, McCarthy remained as editor of the union newspaper and the UMW's public affairs spokesman until 1973.

Born May 15, 1915, in Chicago, he held a variety of reporting and editing positions in the 1930s with the now defunct

Chicago Daily News. In 1943, he became labor writer for the Chicago Sun, now the Sun-Times.

After leaving the union, he worked for a year as communications director for the Group Health Association of America. He then became an editor of a Washington firm providing editorial services for labor organizations.

Jersey Joe Walcott was 37 when he won the world heavyweight title by knocking out Ezzard Charles on July 18, 1951.

Politics Enliven Academy Award Show

THEIR NIGHT — Richard Dreyfuss and Diane Keaton pose holding awards for best actor and best actress at the Los Angeles Music Center. Dreyfuss won for his role in "The Goodbye Girl" and Miss Keaton was honored for her part in "Annie Hall." (AP Laserphoto)

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The movie stars and the hangers-on danced into the wee hours Tuesday at the Academy Ball — celebrating Oscar's 50th birthday and grumbling about Vanessa Redgrave's political remarks.

While the British star's award for supporting actress in "Julia" was applauded, part of her acceptance speech was booed. The jeering came when she referred to some of those who oppose her politics as "Zionist hoodlums."

"She insulted the Academy; we voted for her performance, not her politics," snapped an actress who declined to be identified.

"When you invite a revolutionary to dinner, you're going to get a speech," reasoned a producer.

Most officials declined to enter the controversy. Howard W. Koch, president of the Academy, refused to comment, preferring to cite audience ratings — "the biggest in Academy history."

Emcee Bob Hope ducked out after the telecast and didn't attend the ball.

An informal poll at the $150-a-plate gala indicated support for writer Paddy Chayefsky's on-camera riposte to Miss Redgrave.

"I'm sick and tired of people exploiting the occasion of the Academy awards (applause) for the propagation of their own personal political propaganda (applause). I would like to suggest to Miss Redgrave that her winning an Academy award is not a pivotal moment in history — does not require a proclamation. A simple

'thank you' would have sufficed."

The New York Post on Tuesday quoted Chayefsky as saying: "She tried to speak to me afterward and I cut her dead. I wanted to say more to the worldwide audience, but the hell with it, why make her the martyr she wants to be?"

And, the Post quoted comedian Alan King as saying, "I am that Zionist hoodlum she was talking about. It's just a pity I wasn't on the platform... I would have gone for the jugular."

Especially for a golden anniversary, the Oscarcast was long — just under three hours. But the film crowd seemed to think that it was one of the best. The glamorous look was back, along with Hollywood's good ole boy, Bob Hope. Judging from the ratings, the home audience liked the show.

ABC, which telecast the show nationwide, said Tuesday that preliminary research from New York, Chicago and Los Angeles indicated that about 70 million people watched the show — the largest audience in the history of the Oscar programs. The show ended shortly before 1 a.m. EST.

The Redgrave imbroglio almost overshadowed the other awards, but not quite. While Woody Allen was tooting a clarinet in a Manhattan pub, he won Oscars for writing and directing "Annie Hall" — but not for his starring role. Richard Dreyfuss, who portrayed an actor on the rise in "The Goodbye Girl," was chosen best actor instead of Allen.

Diane Keaton was best actress for playing an aspiring actress in "Annie Hall," and Allen's comedy was declared best picture of 1977. Jason Robards, as Dashiell Hammett in "Julia," won his second straight supporting-actor Oscar.

Miss Redgrave's award was the first of the Monday night telecast. She pushed the awards off to a controversial start by congratulating the voters for "refusing to be intimidated by the actions of a small bunch of Zionist hoodlums."

She referred to protests of the Jewish Defense League over her pro-Palestinian film documentary which features an interview with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat.

Jane Fonda was quoted on Tuesday in Daily Variety as having refused Miss Redgrave's invitation to join her in filming the documentary, "The Palestinians."

Miss Fonda, who won a best actress Oscar in 1971 for the movie "Kluge," told Variety: "I said it was a mistake for her to be in it. I think Mideast views are highly unrealistic and can lead only to more turmoil."

The politicization of the awards in recent years concerns Academy leaders, but they have found no way to combat it.

In accepting an award for an anti-war documentary in 1974, producer Bert Schneider expressed greetings to the Viet Cong. Bob Hope was so upset that he wrote a disclaimer which Frank Sinatra read on the telecast.

Vegas Bettors Err On Academy Awards

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Bettors who tried to predict Academy Award winners at a bookmaking operation here should have stuck to the horses.

They missed on three of the five major winners at Monday's 50th Oscars show.

The bettors had made Richard Burton a strong 1-2 favorite — a $2 bet wins $1 — to win his first Oscar in eight attempts.

But Richard Dreyfuss, the second favorite at 6-5, walked off with the award. Odds of 6-5 mean that a bet of $5 wins $6.

The bettors also missed when "Annie Hall" was named best picture. They had made "Julia" and "The Turning Point" the favorites, with odds of 6-5 and 8-5 respectively.

And Vanessa Redgrave's best supporting actress Oscar for "Julia" went against strong 3-5 odds for Tuesday Weld for her role in "Looking For Mr. Goodbar."

Presidential Call Cheers John Wayne

BOSTON (AP) — President Carter called one of John Wayne's sons on Tuesday to praise the 70-year-old actor as "a great national asset" and said he was praying for Wayne's recovery from heart surgery, a hospital spokesman said.

Wayne was operated on Monday to replace a faulty heart valve.

Michael said he went to his father's room after the call. "I told my father, and he smiled..." Michael said. "He mouthed, 'Great.'"

Michael said Carter "was very comforting and seemed very concerned about my father's health."

Martin Bander, a spokesman for Massachusetts General Hospital, quoted the president as saying, "John Wayne is a great national asset. If there's anything I can do for him, please let me know. He surprises all of us with his ability to recover. Tell him he is in my thoughts and prayers."

Doctors said they told Wayne he has a 90 percent chance of surviving the operation and resuming his career as the brawling good guy of action movies.

Bander said Wayne was in good spirits Tuesday. "He is continuing to have a routine convalescence," he said.

Doctors removed a tube from Wayne's windpipe that had been inserted to help him breathe while he was under anesthesia during the three-hour operation.

Lesotho, in southern Africa, is a mountainous state, with altitudes ranging from 5,000 feet to 11,000 feet.

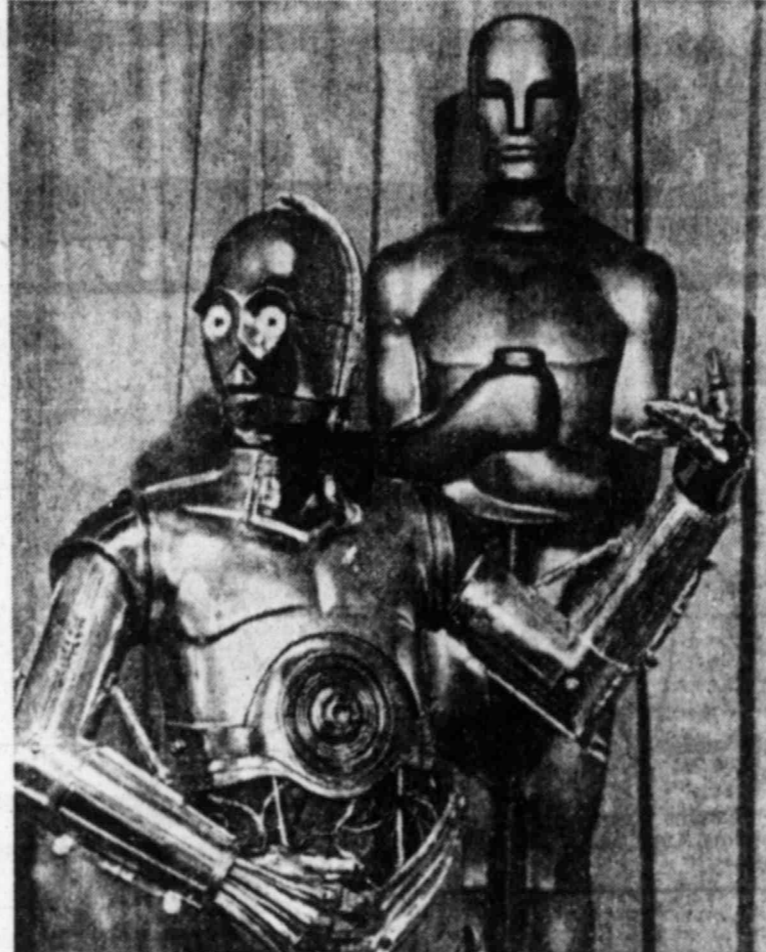

In the two previous years that the Union Plaza Hotel made book on the Oscars, the bettors, who set the final odds by the amount wagered, were wrong only once.

"In essence this was the first year that the public was wrong, with Burton and the picture and the supporting actress," said Jim Brann, publicity director for the hotel. "All the Richard Burton fans are crying in their beer."

Bettors won in the best actress and best supporting actor categories. They had made Jason Robards a strong 4-5 favorite for his role in "Julia," while Diane Keaton had been favored — also at 4-5 — to win an Oscar for best actress in "Looking for Mr. Goodbar."

Brann said betting on this year's Oscars was slower this year than in the previous two years, when the book took in about $20,000 in wagers.

"The handle — the total amount wagered — was down from last year," Brann said. "We don't have a complete figure yet, but it was in the $15,000 area."

Employees Get Stock

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Levi Strauss Co. has distributed $1.7 million of its stock in a program to provide the firm's 37,000 employees with one share of stock for each year of service.

The program got under way Monday, with one share going to each of 8,815 employees who have been with the famous apparel maker for at least five years.

The shares will be awarded in five-year intervals, employees receiving five shares the year of their fifth anniversary, another five on the 10th, and so forth.

Everyone who works for Levi Strauss is eligible except company directors, officers and division presidents.

European Feelings Mixed On New U.S. Weapons

By JURIS KAZA
Pacific News Service

Despite the massive demonstration in Amsterdam this month against European deployment of the neutron bomb, most West European leaders are reluctantly leaning in favor of the newest generation of American developed arms, including the neutron bomb and the cruise missile.

The weapons are needed, in the view of NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns and other West European military experts, to counter Soviet deployment of the medium-range, mobile SS-20 missiles that are capable of striking cities and industry throughout Western Europe.

Because the SS-20s and the shorter range cruise missiles are considered "theater" nuclear weapons, they do not come under the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT). The talks deal only with U.S. and Soviet "strategic" weapons capable of striking each another's heartland.

But to European governments, which do not participate in SALT, the difference between theater and strategic weapons is meaningless. Theater nuclear weapons launched from the Soviet Union can destroy Western Europe as thoroughly as strategic weapons can rain down on American or Russian cities.

Thus, President Carter's hints that he might bring shorter range cruise missiles, which could be armed with the neutron weapon, into the SALT negotiating process have worried West European military planners. They see the weapon as a valid deterrent to the SS-20 missiles. The sophisticated, low-flying, terrain-hugging cruise could find its way to within meters of strategic targets in the western Soviet Union if SS-20s were fired on West Europe.

In fact, the possibility of bringing any theater nuclear weapons into the SALT process raises serious question for Europeans about the credibility of NATO's nuclear deterrent. The Soviet Union has long argued that America's nuclear weapons in Europe, said to number about 7,000, should be included under SALT ceiling because they are capable of striking the Soviet Union.

America hints that the cruise missile may be subjected to SALT limitations has even generated discussions of a European-developed cruise, which would be outside SALT controls since Europe is not a party to SALT.

France, the only independent nuclear power in Western Europe (Britain, also a nuclear power, is constrained as a part of NATO's Nuclear Planning Group), is making plans to triple its nuclear forces by 1990 and might build its own cruise missiles. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said recently that future strategic weapons planning was concentrating on "aerodynamic," or cruise, delivery systems.

Western Europe's active NATO partners have more limited options than France, which withdrew from full military participation in the alliance in 1966. Britain, NATO's only European nuclear power, is expected to reduce its nuclear arsenal due to financial constraints, rather than develop any new systems. And West Germany, one of the few NATO partners that could afford to develop a cruise system, is banned from having nuclear arms.

The American option of bargaining European-based cruise missiles for restrictions on the SS-20 also raises some technical concerns. Since the SS-20s are deployed on mobile launchers, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to verify their actual removal. And sooner or later, the SALT negotiators would be bound to come up against other European-based nuclear weapons that defy the distinction between "tactical" and "strategic." For instance, if all NATO's American-supplied nuclear warheads in Europe were brought under SALT, NATO's tactical nuclear weapon would outnumber the Soviet Union's by about two to one, and thus be subject to a sharp curtailment.

But from the NATO viewpoint there is good reason for this imbalance. The NATO nuclear superiority is intended as a deterrent to the numerically superior Warsaw Pact conventional forces, which have about twice the number of main battle tanks in Europe as NATO has.

NATO Supreme Commander General Alexander Haig is in the process of attempting to increase the alliance's conventional ground forces so that they could halt or blunt a Warsaw Pact ground offensive, thus raising the nuclear threshold. But if the conventional defense fails, Haig said he wants the neutron bomb to fall back on. In purely military terms, NATO commanders see the neutron bomb as the best available battle-field weapon against a tank offensive. Put simply, the bomb's concentrated radiation is deadly to the troop concentrations necessary to wage aggressive, offensive warfare.

However, the fact that the neutron bomb kills living things without shredding or flattening too much of the surroundings — its greatest military asset — is also the main reason it has become a politically sensitive issue in most NATO countries. Some experts here believe the "cleanliness" of the bomb would actually lower the nuclear threshold by making its use more probable.

Simon Hits Policies Of Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — The reason the dollar is slumping drastically around the world is President Carter's inflationary policies and "politics as usual," former Treasury Secretary William Simon said Tuesday.

He said the American government operates under the pretense that a small number of men can run a complex economic system when, in fact, they have never been able to do so.

Simon said the economic and energy problems confronting Carter are part of a continuing demonstration that government's growing intervention into every phase of modern life is an "intellectual fraud."

He said there may be a growing trend toward conservatism in the nation today but individual greed in protecting special interest groups is still a big problem.

"Everybody wants to talk about cutting the national deficit, but nobody wants to talk about cutting out the program that benefits him," he said.

Simon said that despite campaign pledges, Carter "is no different from other politicians" who permit government to grow and to intervene in more areas.

"And more intervention means more chaos," he said. "We must make people aware that more government won't solve government-created problems."

He said businessmen should quit looking to government to solve their problems but "too often they're preoccupied with their next stockholders' meeting instead of the next generation."

Simon was in Atlanta to address the Southeastern LP-Gas Convention and Trade Show.

Extra-Large Letter May Cost More

WASHINGTON (AP) — It probably will cost 26 cents to mail a letter that is unusually large or oddly shaped under an action approved Tuesday by the Postal Service board.

The board approved a request to the independent Postal Rate Commission to place a 13-cent surcharge on oversize letters and cards. The charge would be in addition to the regular rates, now 13 cents for first-class letters and 9 cents for post cards.

The surcharge, which could become effective as early as this summer if approved by the commission, is expected to have its greatest effect on greeting cards, many of which come in unusual sizes.

The board met in Philadelphia and the action was announced in Washington.

The Postal Service estimated that only 1 percent of all envelopes and cards would be subject to the extra charge.

"The surcharge is designed to encourage standard sizes, thereby reducing postal handling costs or to compensate the Postal Service for the extraordinary costs of manually handling oversize and odd-shaped pieces of mail bearing the minimum amounts of postage," the mail agency said in a statement.

Oversize mail is defined as that which is more than 6 1/2 inches high or 11 1/2 inches long or 1/4-inch thick. Also subject to the charge would be odd-sized pieces, with a length of less than 1.3 times the height or more than 2.5 times the height.

In addition to the surcharge on oversize letters and cards, minimum size requirements are scheduled to become effective sometime after Nov. 30. Under those requirements, pieces measuring less than 3 1/2 inches by 5 inches will be non-mailable.

The minimum size requirements were established in July 1976 and manufacturers of picture post cards have had since then to comply with the regulation. The larger size postal cards have been available at post offices since January, Postal Service spokesman Van Seagraves said.

Amtrak Begins Employee Cuts In Economy Move

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Amtrak on Wednesday will begin laying off 134 railroad employees, including police officers, station workers and signalmen, in an attempt to reduce expenses by $5 million in its Northeastern corridor between Boston and Washington.

Lois Morasco, an Amtrak spokeswoman, said the layoffs are needed because of the high cost of operating the railroad during last winter's heavy snows. Amtrak, which is federally subsidized, employs about 8,000 people on the trains it operates in the corridor.

 final rabbit roundup Saturday.
 Rodeo fever hits the Lubbock scene at 3:30 p.m. today with the traditional rodeo parade out Broadway.

Col. Charles Bishop, commander of Reese Air Force Base, is parade marshal, heading up the cavalcade of riding groups, beauties and officials of the American Business Club which sponsors the rodeo to benefit the building fund of Lubbock Boys Club.

The Reese color guard heads up the parade, stepping out just ahead of the Reese commander.
 ABC Rodeo queen Lesli Griffin will pair off with the Red Raider from Texas Tech, Larry Cade, for her journey down the parade route.

Other beauties making the route by horseback will be royalty of the American Association of Sheriffs Poses and Riding Clubs—national queen, Renee Crisp of San Angelo; Region 1 princess, Becky Albers of Abertamy; and District 1 queen, Julie Johnson of Lubbock.

Extra Pay Received By Solons

 one says he is putting his into a charitable fund he is setting up.
 The biggest two-check income goes to Sen. Howard Cannon, who gets $1,072-a-month in regular military pension plus his $57,500 congressional salary, making the Nevada Democrat's annual income from the government $70,369. Cannon was a major general in the Air Force reserve.
 "He feels that he earned his pension regardless of how much he makes, that what you do for a living should not affect your pension," said Cannon press aide Mike Verneti.

The largest second check goes to Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., who receives $1,109 a month from the Veterans Administration. However, Bennett, who contracted polio while fighting in the Philippines and now walks with a brace and a cane, returns the money to the government.
 "I don't feel I need it. I'm drawing such a big income from the government that I don't want to be greedy," Bennett said. "Now, I don't think veterans compensation should be any different if your income is high or low. I just think Congress is paid too much."
 Rep. William F. Nichols, D-Ala., gets a monthly VA pension of $983. He stepped on a land mine in Europe during World War II, costing him the lower part of his left leg, half a lung and paralyzing his right foot.
 "All veterans who suffered severe mental or physical disability—the congressman feels the government owes them something. I'm sure the congressman would give back twice as much as he has gotten (in pensions) if it would restore his leg," said Nichols' press secretary Thomas Eiland.
 Teague, a Texas Democrat, gets a $961 a month military disability pension for the war wound which eventually cost him his leg.
 Dole, the Kansas Republican who was Gerald Ford's running mate in 1976, gets $704 a month, or $8,458 a year. He was critically wounded by a shell fragment in Italy. His right hand and arm are still crippled and he has no feeling in his left hand.
 Also drawing $8,458 annually in military disability pension is Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, who lost his right arm when he fought as a major in the 442nd Central Postal Directory during World War II.

Lubbock Man Slain; Trio Questioned

Detectives were investigating the city's 11th reported homicide of the year Tuesday, following a volley of gunfire at a North Lubbock residence.
 Pronounced dead at the scene was Carlos Arturo Flores, 33, whose last known address was 307 N. Ave. S, the scene of the 8:15 p.m. shooting.
 Three women were taken to police headquarters for questioning, but only one was suspected of firing the shots. Officers indicated the woman alleged to have fired the .38-caliber revolver also might be released following the interrogation.

Witnesses to the shooting said the woman had asked them to come to her home Tuesday to help in repairing a shattered rear door, allegedly kicked down earlier by Flores.
 When the trio arrived, the woman suspected of firing five shots led her companions to a rear bedroom to display other damage Flores allegedly had caused sometime earlier.

At that point, one of the witnesses said, the woman heard a sound in the living room and went there where they saw Flores.
 Flores reportedly walked toward the woman who lives at the house, was pushed backward by her and then fell when the shots were fired.
 Justice of the Peace L. J. Blalack ruled homicide at the scene and the body was transported to Henderson Funeral Home.

Of 11 homicides in the city this year, eight have been confirmed as murders. Another involving a policeman who shot a suspect during an exchange of gunfire.
 The policeman later was no-billed in connection with his incident by a Lubbock grand jury.

Vote Registration To End Thursday

Thursday is the last day to register to vote in the May 6 primary elections.
 Lubbock County Tax Assessor-Collector Russell Hardin said any registration applications postmarked on Thursday will be accepted.
 Voters who have not received yellow voter registration certificates, but still have blue certificates, can vote in the May 6 primary and in any run-off election in June.
 However, they will have to re-register to vote in the November general election.
 Registration applications are available at the Tax Assessor-Collector's office in the County Courthouse and at grocery and convenience stores in Lubbock.

National AASP&RC president Garland Hargis of Fort Worth and Region 1 vice president Sybil Lettowich will accompany them.
 Also parading will be FFA princess Aricka Speer, 4-H Club princess Cindy Sageser and Pioneer 4-H Club queen Karen Cain.
 Riding clubs include San Angelo Saddle Club, Lubbock Saddle Club, Lamb County Sheriff's Posse, Abertamy Riding Club, Floydada Riding Club, Lubbock Ranges Junior Riding Club, Terry County Sheriff's Posse, Scurry County Junior Sheriff's Posse and Cal Farley's Boys Ranch.

Motor Patrol To Parade
 Spicing up the parade will be the Khiva Motor Patrol, Khiva Lubbock Klowns and Khiva Kart Patrol along with rodeo clowns Rick Young and Bunky Boger.

Other groups riding out Broadway will be the state AA basketball champions of Slaton High School, the adventure group of Campfire Girls, Tri-County Cinderella pageant winners, Ridge Range buckboard and stock producer Jiggs Beutler.

Representing the American Business Club will be rodeo chairman Charles Lee and club president Joe Ince.
 The 1978 edition of ABC rodeo will be dedicated to the late Jack Harmon, amateur rodeo performer and longtime ABC Rodeo booster who designed and built the chutes used in the coliseum for ABC and Texas Tech rodeo action.

A special salute this year goes to Paul Willis, a charter member of the Downtown ABC club, who has been president of the club, rodeo chairman several years, president of the Big Hat Club and a lifetime member of the American Business Club.

Clowns To Perform
 Rick Young, the Ragin' Cajun from Ticklaw, La., will be heading up the clown action each night, playing up to the crowd and making his real task, keeping bucking bulls off downed cowboys, look like a part of the fun and games.
 A horse named Kalija and a buffalo named Cody will be helping Bunky Boger, who also joins in the clown act, entertain the crowd with a bit of comedy mixed with outstanding feats for the animal stunt world.
 The rodeo string of Jiggs Beutler of Elk City, Okla., will be back for another ABC show in Lubbock with some of the nation's top bucking stock.
 John Mann of Amarillo, a former member of the Lubbock American Business Club, will be announcer for the four-performance show.
 Tickets are $3, $5, $6 and $6.50.

Park Denies Funds Sought By O'Neill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millionaire rice dealer Tongsun Park told House investigators Tuesday that despite the implications of a report found in Park's home, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill never asked him for campaign contributions.
 Park angrily complained that someone is "trying to zing me," and said, "Who knows who placed that document in my house?"
 And he repeated assertions that while he gave hundreds of thousands of dollars in campaign contributions on request he never did so as an agent of the Korean government. He said he never tried to use his contributions to "twist arms" or buy influence.

The document mentioning O'Neill's alleged request was seized by federal agents in Park's home last year after Park left the country for Korea.

Paid For Parties
 "He never made any request to make any contribution to anyone, including himself," Park said of O'Neill. Park did acknowledge that he paid for birthday parties for the Massachusetts Democrat, including one in 1974 which cost $4,000.

The document found in Park's home is hand-written in the Korean language and purports to be a report to Korean officials recommending that they take certain actions to increase the effectiveness of a visit to Korea of a U.S. congressional delegation. O'Neill headed the group of visiting congressmen.

The unsigned document stated that many of the congressmen on the trip had "contributed decisively" to electing O'Neill as House majority leader.

Document Cited
 "And, therefore, Mr. O'Neill specifically requested us to provide those congressmen with election campaign funds and their wives with necessary expenses," the document said.
 "This will be an ideal opportunity to hand them the funds," it said. "But should it be impossible, we recommend that you pay them in the near future."

Decision Seen Soon
 But, Vance added, "I should think in the not too distant future that we should be able to make a decision."
 It was understood, however, that Carter's tentative decision was relayed to Bonn late last week through Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Genscher's visit was hurriedly arranged in a final effort by the West Germans to persuade Carter to modify his decision.
 State Department officials said privately that Carter probably would make a final decision after his meeting with Genscher but that it would not be announced for several days.
 Supporters of the weapon have said they would prefer that Carter defer any decision rather than rule against production.

Contrary To Advice
 The New York Times, quoting unidentified administration officials, reported Tuesday that Carter had decided against production of the weapon despite contrary advice from most of his senior foreign policy advisers.
 The newspaper said Carter hoped the Soviet Union would respond by showing restraint in deploying new nuclear weapons.

Can't Understand
 "I just can't understand it," he said. "I am at a loss for words. There is absolutely not one iota of truth to any of these things."
 The Massachusetts Democrat said he had no idea where the document came from and, "I don't know why anybody would have put it together."
 O'Neill said he was asked whether he had seen President Park Chung Hee alone during his visit to Korea and said he did not—that the U.S. ambassador was present during the meeting. He said he told President Park he believed his government was being unduly harsh in dealing with dissenters. "I very definitely and directly told him that he was handling them wrongly," the speaker said.
 On another question, O'Neill said that shortly before the 1969 baseball World Series between the Baltimore Orioles and the New York Mets, he told a secretary to give Tongsun Park 10 World Series tickets, which Park paid for. He said he had obtained the tickets from Joe Cronin, American League president, for distribution on a paid basis to House members. He said Park was standing outside his office, and he said, "If we have enough tickets, give him 10 of them."

 Park complained that the federal government violated his rights by searching his home and office and carting away documents.
 In sometimes heated testimony, Park repeatedly denied he had reported to South Korean officials his payments to U.S. congressmen, and said he has no idea how such purported reports got into his house.

Park called former South Korean intelligence director Kim Wyung Wook a liar for publicly testifying last October that Park promised to pay influence payments to congressmen if the intelligence chief would make him Seoul's exclusive rice dealer.

And Park denounced a former employee, Jai Shin Ryu, as an embezzler who should be ignored for testifying that one of the reports to Seoul was lying on a table in Park's house in October, 1972 while Park was there.

"You are doing a superb job of character assassination and trying to eliminate me," Park told Nields. "... I am telling you my side of the story. And you had better make up your mind whether you believe my story or rumors, hearsay or even the so-called intelligence reports."

Park's contributions of campaign funds to members of Congress ended in 1974 when a law was passed barring campaign donations from foreign nationals.

President Restudying Neutron Bomb Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has tentatively decided against production of the neutron bomb, the controversial nuclear weapon designed to defeat a massive Soviet tank attack on Western Europe.
 Carter conferred Tuesday with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who arrived earlier in the day to press his government's support for production of neutron weapons.

"All these questions are subject to consultation within the alliance," Genscher told reporters after a prior meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.
 Vance, who accompanied Genscher to separate meetings with Carter and his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said afterward that Carter had made no decision on the neutron bomb.

Decision Seen Soon
 But, Vance added, "I should think in the not too distant future that we should be able to make a decision."

It was understood, however, that Carter's tentative decision was relayed to Bonn late last week through Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Genscher's visit was hurriedly arranged in a final effort by the West Germans to persuade Carter to modify his decision.

 sure, although Christie noted he favored the "carrot over the stick."
 Christie said he opposed recent Social Security tax hikes, while Krueger said he supported them and voted for them for lack of an alternative.
 All three men said they favored the Equal Rights Amendment and Christie said he favored extending the time allowed for states to ratify the amendment.
 In her remarks to open the council session, Betty Anderson, state league president, praised the work of the organization and urged its members to continue to educate the public.
 She also pledged that the group will continue its national drive for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, which she called the "missing link in our struggle to become a democratic nation."

Mrs. Anderson also said it is time Texans admitted the need for reforms in such diverse fields as property taxes and welfare programs.
 She told the group of 57 statewide delegates and 16 state board members that the league's goals will be decided during today's sessions.

 The group also voted to recommend measures to ensure the safety of children attending Nat Williams Elementary School on 58th Street and Utica Avenue.
 The group voted to designate school zones on Utica Avenue with 20 mph speed signs and a flashing yellow signal. Signs also were recommended setting the speed limit at 20 mph on 58th Street near the elementary school.

Farm Plan Voted By Conferees

 farmer would have a $3.50 target price by staying with the department approach, a $4.25 target for idling 3.5 acres for every 10 planted or a $5.04 target for idling one for every two acres planted. Parity for wheat was $5.15 in mid-March.
 For corn growers, idling 3.5 acres out of 10 planted would mean a $3.05 target and setting aside one for every two would produce a $3.45 target. Parity now is about $3.60 a bushel.
 For cotton, a 35 percent set-aside would give the farmer a 72-cent target while the 50-percent step would produce a target of 84 cents a pound. Parity is about 88 cents.

The conferees said farmers could not obtain both a diversion payment and payments under one of the higher target-price schedules.
 Provisions raising the ceilings on ownership and operating loans and expanding eligibility for rural credit programs were tentatively approved Monday but then dropped from the measure, to be taken up when Bergland's new "economic disaster" credit package is debated.

Also dropped were proposed boosts in the price levels at which stocks would be released from the grain reserves Carter is trying to build as a hedge against shortages, which Hjort described as "the key-stone of our entire program."
 The conferees said farmers could not obtain both a diversion payment and payments under one of the higher target-price schedules.

Panel Votes Cut In Tax

 vals the one submitted by Carter in January.
 The president recommended leaving the Social Security tax increases as they are. But he also proposed cutting income and other taxes by $25 billion in an effort to inject new life into the economy while offsetting Social Security tax increases.
 The Gaiimo proposal is scheduled to be presented today to the House Democratic Caucus, which is trying to establish a party position on revising the Social Security revenue bill.

Because of the steep tax increases provided for in the 1978 Social Security financing legislation, there has been a strong move on Capitol Hill to reduce the tax before the first big jump occurs in 1979.
 Gaiimo said his suggestion is intended to be only a temporary change in Social Security financing that would give Congress time to consider the problem in depth.
 "It would be disastrous to move precipitously in this area with a large cut," he said. "This is a modest proposal, temporary in nature, to give Congress time and avoid rushing."
 As for his overall tax reduction proposal, Gaiimo said he considers Carter's $25 billion tax cut too large, "given the fact we have to increase spending in some areas."
 A cut of $20 billion, he said, would be large enough not to impair efforts to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment.

Haitian Elements Asserting New Freedoms

By PHILIP THREEFOOT
Pacific News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — "Association!" screamed the headline on a weekly newsmagazine after an army officer shot a reveler at the carnival here. Immediately, radio commentators called for swift justice without presuming even the possibility of the innocence of the accused officer.

Anywhere else such press coverage could have been dismissed as ordinary sensationalism. But after 20 years of iron rule by the Duvalier family, the fact that the story was reported at all is a sign that deep changes are taking place in Haiti.

Under pressure from President Carter's human rights campaign, a place struggle between factions of the Duvalier family and new economic pressure caused by the U.S. campaign against illegal aliens, Haiti has moved in directions that would have been unthinkable when Dr. Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier was alive and in charge.

Seven years after succeeding his father, 26-year-old President for Life Jean-Claude Duvalier is attempting to set aside the terror associated with his father's rule and build an image of progress and liberalism. The press has most visibly taken advantage of the new atmosphere.

I recent months newspapers and radio stations have become vocal critics of the government. The weekly magazine, Le Petit Samedi Soir, devoted an entire issue to the fatal clash between the carnival reveler and the army officer. Radio stations give regular reports on shortages and administrative foulups in the long-neglected provinces. On occasion, the media have even documented cases of government corruption, an endemic problem in this Maryland-sized nation of 5.5 million people.

Critics have been careful, however, to avoid attacks on the president and members of his family. In fact, many of the criticisms have been worded to suggest that Jean-Claude does not know about cases of corruption and brutality and that if he did he wouldn't allow them.

The critics are taking advantage of a well-known split within the palace. On one side are the old "Duvalieristes," who oppose liberalization because they fear it will snowball. On the other side stand Jean-Claude and a generation of younger professionals who argue that modernization of the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation is only possible if repression is reduced.

Duvalier had developed the 500-man "Leopard" force to counter the army and the infamous Tonton Macoutes, or militia, who are allied to members of the old guard. He also has attempted to build a personality cult among young Haitians. After his father's death he rarely appeared in a photograph without his mother, Simone Ovide Duvalier, a member of the old guard and a powerful force in the country. During carnival, many celebrants wore "I am Jean-Claudiste" T-shirts with the president's picture — alone — on the front.

Labor has used the new and volatile atmosphere to its advantage. In the past, any organized protest would have meant beatings, arrests, even death. But in quick succession, workers at the country's largest sugar refinery, tourist guides and taxi drivers have taken their grievances to the gates of the National Palace and won concessions from the government.

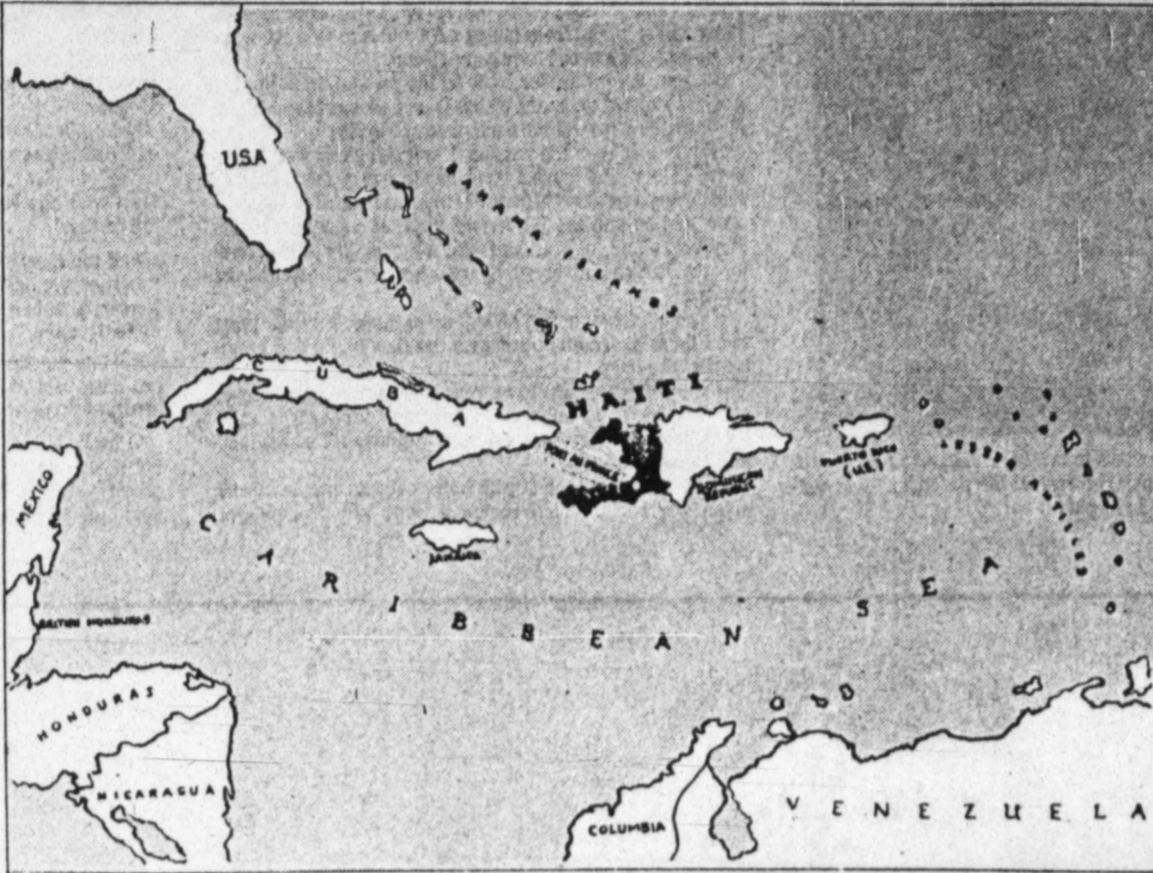

When hospital interns struck over inadequate medical facilities, Jean-Claude made a person appearance to placate the disgruntled demonstrators. In all these cases, there was no evidence of later reprisals.

Most observers attribute the new attitude to a news conference by U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young during a visit to Haiti last year. "When people understand the way the winds are blowing, if they want to go with the winds, they trim their sails accordingly," Young told reporters. A month after his visit, 104 political prisoners were released with a great deal of fanfare.

More profound changes in Haiti's social and political structures may be beyond the direct control of the palace factions, however. After years of isolation, this rugged and beautiful country is literally being opened up. New roads have reduced trips to provincial towns from adventure to routine and made Haiti more attractive to tourists.

But the roads also have made access to Port-au-Prince easier for peasants, who subsisted on a per capita income of $125 a year. The population of the capital city has jumped from 400,000 in 1950 to an estimated one billion. Many of the newcomers are attracted by the factories or the possibility of going on to the United States either legally or illegally.

States. Several banks have built branches in these slum areas just to handle money transfers between New York and Haiti.

According to government figures, probably inflated, 115,000 Haitians work in manufacturing, turning out clothes, baseballs and electronic parts for American consumption. Recently, the government raised the minimum wage in the factories to 25 cents an hour, or about $1.60 a day. A few pay two or three times that figure and have helped build a budding middle class in a country traditionally divided between a wealthy elite and an extremely poor peasant class.

Although for many years Haitians migrated to the United States — an estimated 250,000 live in New York City, and smaller populations are concentrated in Miami, Chicago and Boston — new U.S. pressure against illegals and the realities of a chastened American marketplace have made migration less attractive. In 1970, the Haitian government issued 18,972 visas. In 1974, the last year for which figures are available, the number dropped to 12,938.

Hundreds of the most desperately poor still brave the open ocean in small fishing boats in their efforts to reach the United States. While grinding poverty remains a reality for the vast majority of Haitians, the closing of the escape valve to the United States, the new ambitious working class and the return of younger, educated Haitians with a new mentality all contribute to the pressures on the government of Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Administration May Lift Arms Embargo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is on the verge of a major arms policy shift that could help improve relations with Turkey, but complicate U.S. ties with Greece and Cyprus.

According to published reports, the administration plans to ask Congress to lift the three-year arms embargo against Turkey.

But it will replace a planned four-year, $1 billion U.S. Turkish defense cooperation agreement negotiated by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger with a policy of providing military grants and sales credits on a year-by-year basis.

High administration officials are expected to testify on the issue this week before the House International Relations Committee.

Full implementation of the defense accord has been held up by Congress' unwillingness to rescind the arms embargo. It imposed the embargo in 1974 because the Turks used American equipment in a military offensive in Cyprus in violation of U.S. aid provisions.

Man Hikes To Woo Love

DALY CITY, Calif. (AP) — Eighteen blisters, 350 miles and 32 cans of foot powder later, Kenney Kinsner says nothing will stop him from hiking 1,000 miles to woo the woman he loves. Not even heavy competition.

Kinsner, 50, turned his back on his gas station in the Los Angeles County town of Calabasas and set out March 10 for Medford, Ore., to win the hand of Judy Fay Zin.

"I'm in love with the woman. I'm making this walk to impress on her how much I want her to marry me," Kinsner said during a rest stop Monday in this San Francisco suburb.

He said he met his 30-year-old flame at a singles party in Medford about a year ago and courted her for several months. Both are divorced. Kinsner has six children, and she has one.

"She said she wanted a little time to think about marrying me," he said. Granting her wish, he flew home and promised he'd be back.

"I wanted my return to be very special. I believe in love, and chivalry, and romance ... I imagine no other woman in the country can say that her man would walk a thousand miles to show his love."

Kinsner has had to deal with both footache and heartache in lugging his 32-pound backpack, with seven pounds of roadmaps, about 18 miles a day.

One other thing he's also going to have to deal with is — Chuck.

"I'm Chuck Nelson. I'm Judy's fiance," said the man who answered the phone when a reporter rang up the Zin home Monday.

Nelson, a 37-year-old Oregon state employee, said Kinsner will find when he gets to Medford that Judy has sold her house and plans to take her 11-year-old daughter and leave town with him long before the lovesick walker steps across the border.

And the much-sought-after Judy had this to say: "I'm not totally certain just what's going to happen. But I think when Kenney gets here, it's safe to say things aren't going to be quite the same."

But Kinsner said he's ready to deal with the terrain, the 1,000 miles and even a love triangle. He plans to stroll into Medford about April 22.

"I heard about this guy named Chuck," he said. "But I'm not giving up my walk. As far as I'm concerned, Judy has promised to wait for me ... I plan to keep my faith, and only hope Judy will keep her word."

Bankers Report High First-Quarter Earnings

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock bankers Tuesday reported record first quarter deposits but said this will be a crucial crop year for South Plains agriculture.

Deposits March 31 at the eight Hub City banks were $1,069,610,435, marking the first time the total has been over $1 billion at the end of the first quarter.

The total is down $35 million or 3.2 percent from last Dec. 31 but is $100.6 million or 9.4 percent more than it was last March 31.

Deposits on Dec. 31 totaled $1,104,602,863 and last March 31 were $969,036,680.

An early-year draw on bank accounts by taxes, Christmas debts, farm production costs and other expenses traditionally makes the first-quarter total smaller than at year-end.

Howard Yandell, president of the First National Bank, said loan demand has been heavy at the biggest bank in town.

"We feel that we've had a healthy growth in our deposits, which certainly we would have to have to take care of the increased loan demand that we've had," Yandell said.

First National deposits were $339.1 million at the end of the year and $332.5 million at the end of this quarter.

Yandell said the bank loans increased from $195.3 million at the end of the year to $212.5 million on March 31.

"We have been a little more restrictive than we have in the past," he said. "I think that in most cases we have been able to continue financing our farmers while fully realizing that a lot of them

Yandell said the weather in the South Plains probably will be even more important for farming than commodity prices. Jim Edd Waller, vice chairman of the bankers are generally good but that a good rain and higher farm product prices are sorely needed.

"The outlook for the Lubbock area is, in our opinion, good," Waller said. "It would be better if we could just have some good general rains. We're needing rain badly for our subsoil."

Tommie Stevens, president of Texas Commerce Bank, said the Lubbock construction industry has resumed in full force after being shut down by two months of rough winter weather.

"I think all of the economic indicators have remained very strong this quarter," Stevens said. "We did have some adverse effects in all phases of the construction area because of the weather conditions in January and February, but it appears that in the last 30 days most of those have been recovered."

"That was a pretty trying time for a lot of contractors. I think they had more days off the job this quarter than they had ever had."

Wayne Finnell, president of Lubbock National Bank, said the Lubbock economy "is basically very good" and that strong loan demand indicates good consumer spending, a continuing demand for housing and capital spending by companies to keep up with product demand.

"There is a weakness in spending in the agricultural areas, but this may pick up with improvements in commodity prices," Finnell said.

"The money center banks in West Texas have not experienced the deposit growth, percentage-wise, as in past years due to the poor profit year so many of our farmer friends experienced from their 1977 crops."

"The banks in general had a very good first quarter, and we are confident for the balance of 1978. Our bank experienced its best quarter ever in earnings."

W.L. Collier, president of American State Bank, said a growth in deposits there during the quarter "reflects the continuing prosperity of our customers."

Average College Cost Climb Continues

NEW YORK (AP) — It will cost an average of 6 percent more to go to college next year than it does this year, says a new study which shows that a resident student at a private, four-year college will spend more than $5,000 in the academic year starting in September.

That $5,000 is equivalent to about one-third the median family income in the United States. And it means that even if there is no further inflation — and that is not likely — a freshman who enters a private school this fall and lives on campus will have to pay more than $20,000 for a college education.

The study, released Tuesday, was conducted by the College Scholarship Service of the College Board, a nonprofit organization of schools, educational associations and scholarship agencies. The findings were based on reports from 2,693 colleges and universities.

Costs vary according to the type of institution involved and such factors as whether a student commutes or lives on campus.

The board study showed, for example, that 1978-79 school expenses for a commuting student at a public, four-year college will total $2,604, up 4.8 percent from this year. A student at the same school who lives on campus will spend $3,054, up 5.3 percent from this year.

Other findings of the study include:

—Expenses at private, four-year colleges will average $5,110 for on-campus students, up 6.1 percent from this year, and $4,577 for commuters, up 5.7 percent. The median family income for 1976, the latest year for which figures are available, was $14,960.

—There will be $12.3 billion in public and private financial aid for students during the coming academic year. That does not count possible benefits from congressional and administration proposals to help middle-income families burdened by high education bills.

"Rising costs should not discourage students from considering college attendance, for financial aid is available to help defray costs," said Elizabeth W. Suchar, the scholarship service's director of financial aid services.

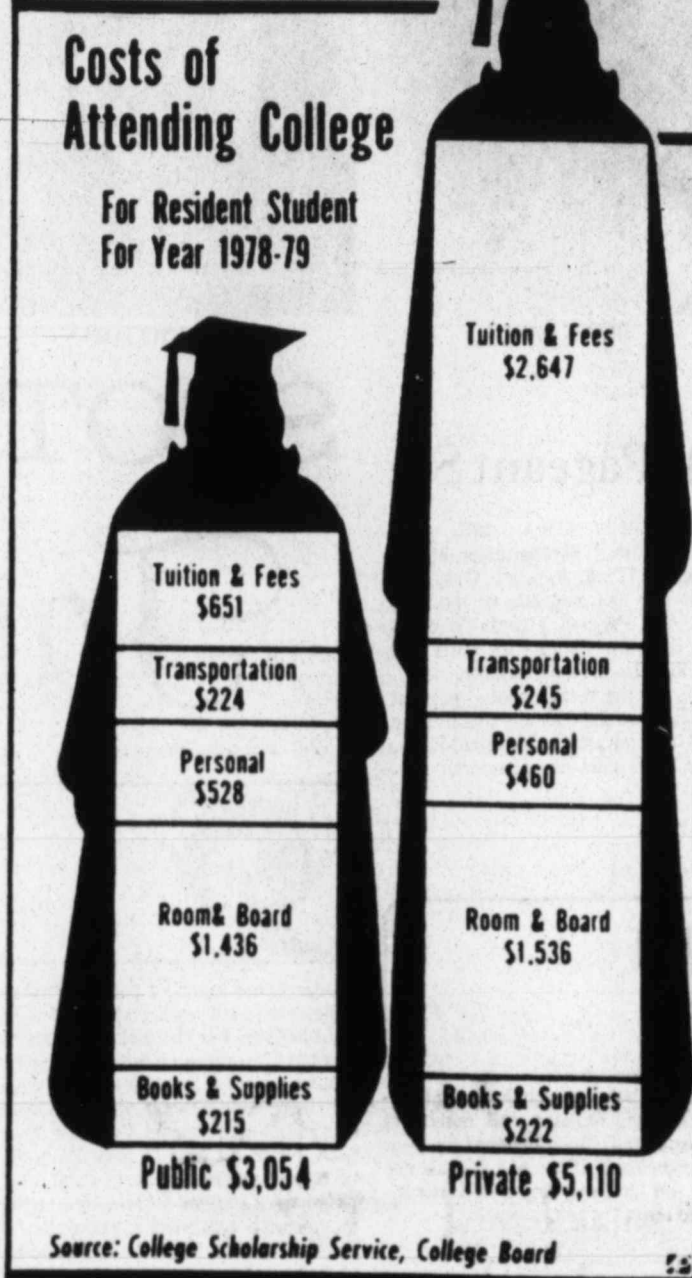

Aid is awarded on the basis of financial need which is determined not only by income, but also by such things as family size and the cost of the college involved. That means families with incomes of up to $30,000 — about twice the median — may be eligible for help at more expensive schools, Mrs. Suchar said.

—The average 6 percent increase reported for the coming year compares with a 4 percent boost from 1976-77 to 1977-78.

—Tuition and fees are the items which vary most from school to school. At private, four-year colleges, tuition and fees for the upcoming academic year will average $2,647, at public, four-year schools, the average is $651 although costs can increase sharply for out-of-state students.

—Dollar amounts for items other than tuition and fees are fairly similar from one college to another. As an average, the College Board says students should plan on budgeting $245 for transportation — including trips home during the year, $210 for books and supplies, $470 for personal expenses and either $890 or $1,440 for room and board, depending on whether they live at home or on campus.

CIA Curbs Warning Issued By Clifford

WASHINGTON (AP) — Clark Clifford, one of the organizers of the CIA, said Tuesday the United States will look "silently" if Congress specifically prohibits the agency from assassinating foreign leaders or overthrowing other governments.

Clifford said, past intelligence abuses can be avoided by a new partnership between the president and Congress in which Congress would be informed in advance of CIA covert operations.

Clifford, a former secretary of defense and adviser to five presidents, testified before the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is considering a new CIA charter. The charter would supply the first broad law to limit CIA activities and would establish procedures for obtaining congressional approval for its operations.

Despite the recent disclosure of widespread abuses by the CIA, including planned assassinations overseas, Clifford said writing specific prohibitions into law "would make us look silly."

If a new law included prohibitions on the violent overthrow of democratic governments, or the assassination of certain foreign officials or the use of disease as a clandestine weapon, Clifford said, "then all activities not prohibited would at least by inference be permitted."

A draft bill before the committee sets out a long list of forbidden CIA actions. But Clifford said, "I hope we are over the emotional period" following disclosures about CIA abuses.

Clifford said certain House and Senate committees should receive written descriptions from the president when covert action is planned. The committees could vote their disapproval of such operations, but the president could go ahead anyway, Clifford said.

Because some nations are dedicated to harming the United States, Clifford said, it is sometimes necessary to violate democratic principal and "do what we have to do."

Although Clifford opposed specific limits on the president's ability to approve covert intelligence operations, he said there have been far too many such CIA-sponsored activities in recent years.

"There are not many covert projects that are related to the security of the country," he said.

In the past, he said, Congress refused to accept a watchdog role over secret intelligence operations and senior CIA officials were given too much power.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 31-year-old male, well-built and considered fairly good-looking. For the last two years my hair has been getting thinner and thinner. I have spent a lot of money on hair creams, pomades, scalp stimulators and every kind of treatment I've seen advertised. Nothing seems to help. I'm afraid I'll be bald within a couple of years.

Last week a friend told me about a hormone cream his cousin is putting on the market. It makes sense to me but I'd like to know what you think. It's a well-known fact that very few women get bald because of their hormonal structure. The cream I'm interested in is made from the female hormones of monkeys, not humans. This means there is no danger that a man who uses it will suddenly get limp in the wrist and end up with a higher voice — if you get what I mean.

I'd like to know if you think this cream will help. — Mr. No Name Who Lives In Medicine Hat

Dear No Name: Yes, the cream will help your friend's cousin. If enough suckers buy it he will get very rich.

Go to a dermatologist and find out if your hair is falling out because of a scalp disease or an emotional problem. (Both are possibilities.) If these are ruled out, accept the fact that you are following a genetic pattern about which you can do very little — unless, of course, you want to go in for a transplant, which does work rather well for some people, under certain conditions.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 14 years old and in the 10th grade. I wanted to look especially nice at a party so I asked my mother if I could shave my legs. She said, "No." I went ahead and shaved them anyway. Honestly, Ann, I had to do it. I looked like a gorilla from the knees down.

Now, one week later the hair seems to be growing in awfully fast. I think I will have to shave again in a week. Please tell me if it is true that the oftener a person shaves the faster the hair will grow back in. I would hate to have to shave my legs every day. Thanks for your help. — Panicked In Pensacola

Dear Pan: Shaving does make hair grow a little faster, but shaving every other week should be often enough. Between times, use a little liquid bleach. Your druggist will suggest a bleach that is safe and non-irritating. Some people prefer hair-removing creams to shaving. Try one and decide which is best for you.

Dear Ann: My husband passed away four months ago. He used to buy a new car every other year, and took great pride in his automobiles. I do not drive.

My next-door neighbor told me it is bad for a car to remain idle. She works downtown and offered to drive my car two days a week to blow out the carbon — or some such thing. I agreed.

For the past three months the woman has been driving herself to work and back, Monday through Friday. She charges the gasoline and oil to my account at the neighborhood station (just as my husband did) and keeps telling me she's doing me a big favor. Any advice? — Little Rock

Dear Rock: Learn to drive or sell the car. The present arrangement makes no sense. You are being taken for a ride.

How young is too young for a child to learn about sex? That's just one thing you'll find in Ann Landers' new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." For your copy send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible.

Matt. 17:9-27, The Living Bible

9 As they were going down the mountain, Jesus commanded them not to tell anyone what they had seen until after He had risen from the dead.

10 His disciples asked, "Why do the Jewish leaders insist Elijah must return before the Messiah comes?"
11 Jesus replied, "They are right. Elijah must come and set everything in order."

12 And, in fact, he has already come, but he wasn't recognized, and was badly mistreated by many. And I, the Son of Mankind, shall also suffer at their hands."

13 Then the disciples realized He was speaking of John the Baptist.

14 When they arrived at the bottom of the hill, a huge crowd was waiting for them. A man came and knelt before Jesus and said,

15 "Sir, have mercy on my son, for he is mentally deranged, and in great trouble, for he often falls into the fire or into the water;

16 So I brought him to Your disciples, but they couldn't cure him."

17 Jesus replied, "Oh, you stubborn, faithless people! How long shall I bear with you? Bring him here to Me."

18 Then Jesus rebuked the demon in the boy and it left him, and from that moment the boy was well.

19 Afterwards the disciples asked Jesus privately, "Why couldn't we cast that demon out?"

20 "Because of your little faith,"

Jesus told them. "For if you had faith even as small as a tiny mustard seed you could say to this mountain, 'Move!' and it would go far away. Nothing would be impossible."

21 But this kind of demon won't leave unless you have prayed and gone without food."

22, 23 One day while they were still in Galilee, Jesus told them, "I am going to be betrayed into the power of those who will kill Me, and on the third day afterwards I will be brought back to life again." And the disciples' hearts were filled with sorrow and dread.

24 On their arrival in Capernaum, the Temple tax collectors came to Peter and asked him, "Doesn't your master pay taxes?"

25 "Of course He does," Peter replied. Then he went into the house to talk to Jesus about it, but before he had a chance to speak, Jesus asked him, "What do you think, Peter? Do kings levy assessments against their own people, or against conquered foreigners?"

26, 27 "Against the foreigners," Peter replied. "Well, then," Jesus said, "the citizens are free! However, we don't want to offend them, so go down to the shore and throw in a line, and open the mouth of the first fish you catch. You will find a coin to cover the taxes for both of us; take it and pay them."

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently I went to a doctor who specializes in weight reduction. Upon my visit I was greeted immediately by a nurse who proceeded to give me a vitamin B-1 shot, explaining that there were certain steps in the breakdown of fat and at the later stages vitamin B-1 would help in dissolving the fat and help avoid the plateau that many dieters suffer from.

I was then led to a room with several other dieting ladies and lectured about the potential dangers in carrying excess weight around. Then I was handed a 650-calorie diet plan and told to eat bran buds or another similar unrefined bran cereal in addition to the diet. A doctor examined my heartbeat, my throat, and my skin.

I was then handed a prescription for Synthroid and was told to take three a day, one at each meal. I was then told to return each week for a vitamin B-1 shot.

The whole thing confused me, since I got no instructions or information as to what my ideal weight should be according to my build, etc. I have no history of thyroid imbalance, and none in my family. No blood tests were taken.

I realize the thyroid is a very touchy little control center and, if upset, can affect the heartbeat. I would appreciate your opinion about this program for weight reduction. I don't want to start this diet unless I have the opinion of another doctor. I am 20, and about 20 pounds overweight. — C.B.

I don't think much of the program, at least from your description. It is seemingly made up chiefly of nonsense, with a bit of potential danger added in. No, you don't want to fool with thyroid medicine strictly for weight reduction, certainly not in your case. Drop this, and look for some sensible diet to shed your 20 pounds. On any 650-calorie diet you would need a full range of vitamin supplements to assure your good health. The B-1 shots are a standard calling card for the Dr. Feelgoods around.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend says that at menopause a woman has a sudden burst of fertility and can have a "change-of-life" or "menopause" baby. I told her this is nonsense. She swears it's true. Your answer, please — Mrs. H.D.

A few definitions are in order. What is "at menopause"? What is "change of life"? And what is meant by "menopause baby?"

Menopause means the ending of menstruation. It occurs usually after age 45-50 and is a gradual affair, with skipped periods or periods of lessened flow. In this setting there may be sporadic ovulation, and thus pregnancy might occur. That might be what your friend means by "sudden burst of fertility."

A woman well into natural menopause will not become pregnant. By that I mean a woman who has had total absence of menstruation for a year or more.

What is called a "menopause baby" (a loose term at best) is one born at some point in the gradual process mentioned above. The odds for this occurring gradually decline past age 40. The best rule is that the woman is potentially fertile until she has had a year of no menstrual periods — if she has reached the age when menopause is expected. Otherwise, she should seek other answers as to why periods have stopped.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last month I missed my period. I thought I was pregnant. The only symptom was nausea. Then last week my period started again. It was three weeks late. The flow was heavier and I had unbearable cramps and a headache that lasted three days. My periods usually last six or seven days.

Should I have a D&C? Someone said I may have had a miscarriage. Is that possible? — Mrs. N.B.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

It sounds incredible, but there are 30 million Americans who can't get to sleep at night.

They toss, turn, grind their teeth and roam around the house fixing drinks, reading books, staring at test patterns on TV and popping pills.

Since the pursuit of sleep has become a real science (there are sleep clinics and even sleep foods) I can no longer remain silent and must speak out. If it helps one man or one woman, I'll feel rewarded.

I am married to the legend of Sleepy Hollow... a man who can fall asleep in the middle of a tax audit. It therefore falls to me as a duty to share with you some of his rules for falling asleep.

1. Stay dressed and upright. One cannot fall asleep in a pair of loose pajamas stretched out on a clean bed with the lights off. My husband's best sleep comes following a large meal when he is propped up in a recliner chair in a vest with the television blaring.

2. Napping aids sleep. No one likes to go to bed tired. I have observed that he naps best through sports events. For some unexplained reason, he wakes up (a) when the score is given and (b) when you think he is asleep and switch the channel to a Doris Day movie.

3. Children aid sleep in the male species. Some men have been known to sleep all through their children's formative years. I have discovered there is nothing to cure a case of insomnia like the voice of a child in the night whining, "I'm thirsty," "I have to potty," "I feel sick."

4. If your husband has trouble nodding off, take him to a social event — a concert, an opera, a school play, or a cocktail party. I have had my husband sack out in a roomful of 200 people in party hats singing, "Hello Dolly." When I pointed out that he snored offkey, he said, "I was not asleep. I was just resting my eyes." (Some men have only to look at a tuxedo and it's like a sedative.)

5. Naturally, everyone doesn't have access to all the sleep-inducing materials at my house, but the other night my mother observed my husband in a chair last asleep over a book, "Look at him," she smiled. "It's nice to see a man who can relax with a book over his chest."

That's easy for Mother to say. She didn't write the book.

By OSWALD JACOBY and ALAN SONTAG

Kathy Wei, one of our greatest women players was headed for a minus score. But this minus would not be a calamity. The game was match point duplicate and every other North-South pair would also get in trouble because of the bad breaks they all were running into.

Then good old West came to her rescue. He doubled her three-diamond bid. Not only did this bid warn his opponents of the bad breaks, it also allowed them to stop at a makeable contract.

Kathy's redouble merely frosted her cake. Of course, she had to play the hand well, but that was just normal.

The opening club lead was won by dummy's ace. Declarer discarded the spade five. She now passed the queen of hearts to West's ace, the preliminary move to establish a cross-ruff.

West switched to a spade. Kathy ducked, allowing East to win with the king. East led the nine of diamonds to cut down the possibilities of the impending cross-ruff. But East was to late. Kathy won the king of diamonds. She cashed the king of hearts, trumped a heart, crossed to the queen of spades, trumped another heart and cashed the ace of spades, discarding a heart from her hand. Now she needed only two more tricks to make the redoubled contract.

Ask the Jacobys

She led a club from dummy and discarded her last heart. West, left with nothing but trumps, had to ruff. He was forced to lead from the Q-J-5 of diamonds into declarer's A-7-6 and, there was no way to prevent Kathy from taking two of the last three tricks.

CAULIFLOWER VEGETABLE SALAD

1 medium cauliflower
1 1/2 tsp. salt, divided
1/2 cup light cider vinegar
3 tbsp. olive or salad oil
1 tbsp. fresh lemon juice
1 clove garlic
1 tsp. finely chopped green pepper
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. dill seed
Dash pepper
1 1/2 cups cooked sliced fresh carrots
1 1/2 cups cooked green beans
1 cup onion rings
Salad greens

Remove outside leaves from cauliflower and wash. Place whole head in saucepan with 1 inch boiling water and 1 1/2 tsp. salt. Bring to boiling without cover and boil 5 minutes. Cover and cook 10 minutes, turning head to cook uniformly. Cauliflower should be cooked only until crisp-tender. Drain.

Combine vinegar, oil, lemon juice, garlic, green pepper, sugar, remaining salt, dill seed and pepper. Pour over cauliflower. Add cooked vegetables and onion rings. Marinate overnight in refrigerator. To serve, place cauliflower in center of serving platter and surround with carrots, beans and onion rings. Garnish with salad greens. Makes 6 servings.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
I've made a discovery which may help someone else. When I found my supply of cookies in the cookie jar had become hard as rocks I was dismayed to find I didn't have an apple to use as a moisturizer.

However, the emptied grapefruit skin from breakfast was on the counter. I cut it into several pieces and buried them among the "rocks."

Within a day or so, every cookie was moist and luscious as though freshly baked.

Why not try it? Those grapefruit skins are too useful to discard. — Dorothy F.

Truer words just haven't been spoken, dear Dorothy. The cookies we tried the skins on were absolutely soft as could be. (Even softened brown sugar!)

And here's another small tip... Did you know the skins are a great moisturizer for something besides cookies, etc.?

The outside of the grapefruit skin, when rubbed on the backs of your hands, makes them feel soft as a whisper. Try it! You'll see!

And if you can't think of anything else to do with the skins, they're great to throw on the compost heap. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
My parents told me something when I was a very young child that I've remembered all my life (guess I'm now what one would call a senior citizen). Namely, that when you bring sunshine into the lives of others, you cannot keep it from brightening your own.

How true I've found this to be down through the years. — Adelaide D.

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:
If you want to remove the kinks from a piece of wire, try this: Just lay the wire over a water pipe or a door knob and pull it back and forth a few times. All the kinks will then be gone. — Paul S.

THIS COLUMN is written for you...the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

Home Canning Book Published In Spanish

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — The 11-million Americans whose mother tongue is Spanish can now buy a Spanish-language edition of a popular home canning book. The publication of a Castilian Spanish edition of the "Ball Blue Book" was announced by Rosemary Martin, manager of direct marketing products for Ball Corp., a leading manufacturer of home food preserving containers and utensils. "Ball Libro Azul" includes more than 150 recipes, and photographs to help clarify technical aspects of home canning and a section on home freezing techniques. All recipe measurements are metric.

Single copies are $2.25 each from Ball Corp., Box 2005, Direct Marketing, Muncie, Ind. 47302.

DEAR HELOISE:
My mother passed this hint on to me many years ago, but apparently (judging from all the drippy cream pitchers I've encountered) few have heard about it.

Put just a smidgen of butter or oleo under the spout and presto — no more drips!

Can be used on other pitchers, too, containing cold liquids. — G. Daniels

DEAR HELOISE:
Last spring, when hunting my garden tools and not being able to find a "digger," I took a small crowbar and found it worked much better than the usual small (cheap) shovel I had.

I was able to accomplish a great deal more leverage and depth with the pointed end, because the tool is so substantial and sharp.

Used it to bury those fertilizer sticks around the trees, scooped weed roots out with a quick flick.

I know other gals are going to benefit from the strength of this "new" garden tool! — Jane

DEAR HELOISE:
When taking your pillow along when traveling, use a brightly colored pillowcase.

The pillow is not as likely to be left behind. — Mrs. V. Marshall

Appeals Court Set For Marshall Suit

The 7th Court of Civil Appeals is expected to rule within several weeks on a Lubbock man's request for reversal of a district court decision upholding the validity of a recent municipal bond election.

The three-judge Amarillo court heard oral arguments in the case Wednesday.

In the suit styled Taxpayers Association of Lubbock versus the City of Lubbock, recent mayoral candidate James Marshall seeks reversal of a 99th District Court ruling that the city's May 21, 1977, bond election is legally valid.

District Judge Thomas Clinton decided last fall that the election and planned bond issuance are valid. His decision was made after the city filed suit seeking validation in response to Marshall's suit asking that the election be declared void.

In his suit, Marshall contends the ordinance calling for the bond election is vague and ambiguous, as are the first two bond propositions that appeared on the ballot.

His brief filed with the appeals court also says the trial court erred in validating

Greek Supporters Rap Arms Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's proposed lifting of a 3-year-old arms embargo against Turkey is drawing fire from Greek supporters, who are expected to intensify their efforts in the days ahead.

There were immediate protests from Greek Cypriots, members of the Greek Parliament and from Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., a staunch advocate of Greece.

Health Center Gives Exercise Figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sedentary Americans tired of seeing their neighbors jog to the tennis court may find solace in a government survey that says most adults don't exercise regularly.

But they are a slim — if not trim — majority.

The National Center for Health Statistics said Tuesday that 51 percent of Americans age 20 or older do not exercise regularly, while 49 percent do.

Some of those in the majority said they participate in sports, but did not exercise regularly.

Tech Plans Accounting Week

"Accounting Emphasis Week" at Texas Tech University April 24-27, will feature guest speakers talking on a broad range of areas in accounting.

The purpose of the annual event is to get students and the community interested in accounting and how it affects the future.

Fred Skousen, CPA and director of the Institute of Professional Accountancy at Brigham Young University, will keynote the week with a luncheon speech, April 24, in the Texas Tech University Center. He will discuss the latest changes in accounting education.

Horace Brock, distinguished professor of accounting at North Texas State University will talk on "The Perils of Petroleum Accounting." He will speak at 7:30 p.m., April 25, at First Federal Plaza, 1300 Broadway.

Energy Solutions War Truce Sought

DENVER (AP) — A Florida environmentalist and a high-ranking government official, two "natural enemies" of increasingly combative oil producers, called at an industry conference Tuesday for a ceasefire in the raging battle over solutions to the energy problem.

"You need to avoid striking moral postures when discussing the issues," Hal Scott, president of the Florida Audubon Society, told about 500 delegates to the American Petroleum Institute's annual production meeting.

"You must express yourselves in an arena as much unlike a religious war as possible. And right now, I'm afraid, it is as though we are in the midst of such a war," said Scott of Maitland, Fla.

Most oil producers believe that inadequate prices allowed by the federal government and a welter of federal regulations are the main causes of the developing energy shortage.

But Scott and Charles Curtis, chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, told the group that it must put that part of the energy debate behind it.

"Your credibility is not helped with statements that you could end the energy problem if only prices were higher and government would get off your back," Scott said. "We all must accept that the days of cheap oil and cheap energy are over."

Said Curtis: "In my opinion, reasonable people can disagree over pricing strategy in the energy debate. But that debate, to be constructive, has to be lowered in velocity... and we must give were almost the same. Persons with higher incomes were more likely to exercise than those with lower incomes. The same survey found a disparity in sports participation among men and women. About 37 percent of women said they took part in one or more sports, but 47 percent of the men did. The rate for both sexes combined was 42 percent.

Swimming led the sports field with 32.5 million adult participants. Following it were bowling 21.9 million, tennis 15 million, softball 12.1 million and golf 11.4 million.

Basketball was next with 10.5 million, then volleyball 8.7 million and baseball 6.7 million. Football was right behind with nearly 6.7 million players.

The survey was based on interviews of 12,000 persons by the statistical branch of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Personnel Strike In Nursing Homes

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of patients at nursing homes in the metropolitan area were under the care of supervisory personnel Tuesday following a walkout by orderlies, aides and other union workers.

The 12,000-member Local 144 of the Service Employees Union called the strike when a 6 a.m. deadline passed without a settlement with the Metropolitan New York Nursing Home Association, representing the independent and non-profit homes. The union president, Peter Ottley, said about 85 homes are covered by the talks, but about 10 would not be struck immediately because of an overlapping contract which had not yet expired at those homes. The homes have a capacity for 20,000 patients but about 8,000 were being cared for elsewhere.

Mark D. Larkin, partner in the firm of Price Waterhouse & Co., will present a "lighthearted look" at the tax problems the public faces today. His talk is titled "Our Forefathers Thought Taxation Without Representation Was Bad."

When Vikings first landed in Iceland and spotted clouds of geothermal steam rising from the area, they named the site Reykjavik, which means "Smoking Bay."

Letter Said From Moro Says Time Running Out

ROME (AP) — Former Premier Aldo Moro, in a letter attributed to him by his terrorist kidnapers, declared Tuesday that time was running out and called for an exchange of prisoners to win his release as "the only possible positive solution."

"May God enlighten you. We hope that you do quickly what is necessary," concluded the letter to leaders of his Christian Democrat party.

Copies of Moro's typewritten and signed letter and a three-page message from the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist group, were made public as Premier Giulio Andreotti was telling Parliament his government was basically in the dark 19 days after the kidnapping took place.

Still, Andreotti said, investigators were following "significant leads."

Moro's letter was the fourth transmitted by his kidnapers since the 61-year-old president of the Christian Democrats was snatched March 16 in an ambush in Rome that killed his five bodyguards.

The latest letter said: "I am a political prisoner placed in an untenable situation by your hasty decision to close any discussion relating to other persons imprisoned in a similar way. Time is flying and unfortunately there is too little."

In the north Italian city of Turin, 15 of the Red Brigades' urban guerrillas are on trial charged with forming an armed band to overthrow the state.

The Christian Democrats, the Communists and three other parties supporting Andreotti's government have ruled out any negotiations with the terrorists to free Moro, a five-time premier. Some politicians have suggested private negotiations by family or friends to try to buy his freedom with ransom money.

Police in Milan, the north's major city, said the text of the new letter was found with a message from the Red Brigades in an automatic ticket vending machine of a subway station. They said the documents were found after the Roman Catholic newspaper Avvenire received a telephone call from an anonymous person.

A copy of the letter and the same message also were found in a trash can on a street in Genoa, a northern port.

The guerrilla message was titled "The Trial of Aldo Moro." The brigades have said he is undergoing a "people's trial," but one of the imprisoned guerrillas shouted in Turin court Monday that his comrades did not "think it necessary to eliminate Moro individually."

Andreotti told the legislators that Moro previously had written three letters from captivity — one to Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga, one to his family and another to his aide.

after the tragic event, are we able to furnish to the chamber certain known facts on those responsible, on the extension of the network of complicity, on the location of the dark place Moro is being held."

It was the government's first public accounting of its efforts to find Moro.

Andreotti thanked those foreign governments that have offered Italy specialized anti-terrorist expertise but, in response to questions from deputies, he said there was no firm evidence of foreign connections with Moro's kidnaping.

The Soviet and Czechoslovak press have accused China of being behind the Moro kidnaping to steer Italy to the political right.

The Soviet Communist Party, in a message Tuesday to the Italian Communist Party, blamed Moro's kidnaping and a wave of terrorist violence in Italy on "adventurous and reactionary forces."

Police, meanwhile, kept up the search for Moro.

Pushing the hunt northward, an estimated 1,000 officers using launches, helicopters and tracking dogs searched houses and caves on the coast of Genoa. South of Turin, police set out at dawn in similar house-to-house searches.

C NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Wednesday, April 5, 1978

Moro suggested a possible exchange for jailed guerrillas in the first letter, but Andreotti said Tuesday that the letter was not "morally attributable to him." Italian medical experts have said the terrorists probably have drugged Moro or are subjecting him to psychological torture. Brigades members have denied this in Turin court.

Contents of the other two letters were not made public.

In his address to the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Parliament, Andreotti said:

"Not even today, nearly three weeks

LoVaca Settlement Backed At Hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — A former railroad commissioner, who helped Austin and San Antonio find gas in the depths of the 1973 energy crunch, Tuesday praised the proposed LoVaca settlement.

William J. Murray, now a private energy consultant, testified before Texas Railroad Commission examiner Tom Hill.

The commission must approve this agreement before the settlement of $1.6 billion in lawsuits against LoVaca Gathering Co. can take effect.

Most LoVaca customers joined in the settlement, which establishes a new, customer-controlled company called Valero Corp. to replace LoVaca as their supplier.

The settlement also calls for LoVaca's parent, Coastal States Gas Corp., to spend $180 million to $230 million in a search for gas that would be sold to the customers below market price.

Major LoVaca customers include the electric generating plants operated by Austin, the Lower Colorado River Authority, San Antonio and Central Power Light, which serves Corpus Christi.

Valero would be completely separate from the Coastal States empire.

"There are substantial advantages in such a separation, not the least of which is the fact that the customers will be able to deal with their supplier on a fresh basis, untainted by past controversies involving the Coastal companies," Murray said.

He departed from the text of his prepared testimony to say the reorganization was "about the most important part of the settlement proposal. . . . The producers would not want to deal with a company that has the problems of LoVaca."

Another benefit to consumers, Murray said, would be the fact that gas found by Coastal's search program would be sold below market price.

MEXICAN HELP ASKED
MEXICO CITY (AP) — The United Nations has asked Mexico to supply troops to the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, the Defense Ministry confirmed Tuesday. A spokesman said the request is under study. About 1,000 soldiers from several nations have arrived in Lebanon. About 3,000 more are expected.

Tests Show Elliptical Tire Safe

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Road tests have shown that a new elliptical tire is safe and can improve gas mileage, Robert E. Mercer, the president of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.'s tire division, said Tuesday.

General Motors Corp. has petitioned the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration for a one-year moratorium on the marketing of elliptical tires in this country.

General Motors said its tests show the tires may be unsafe if mounted inadvertently on some standard-size tire rims. It also said its tests indicated that Goodyear's new tire, hailed as a revolutionary development, provides no significant improvement in gas mileage or ride quality.

Mercer said General Motors tested the 390 millimeter tire on 15-inch wheels, while Goodyear's tests compared it with a 14-inch wheel package.

Goodyear says ellipticals improve gas mileage because they reduce the tires' road resistance by allowing inflation pressure to be increased to a maximum 44 pounds per square inch — about 50 percent higher than that recommended for radial tires.

"We arrived at the 390 millimeter size to be sure there would not be an intermix problem with the conventional rims on the market today," Mercer said in a telephone interview. "Independently, Europe has developed a 390 millimeter wheel aimed at the U.S. market with the same thought in mind."

"We are confident there is no intermix problem, and we will demonstrate this again to the Department of Transportation."

Mercer said General Motors is not in conflict with Goodyear and has made a valid and understandable request to the federal agency.

"But we feel we have sufficient information and a significant opportunity to provide this nation with additional fuel savings," Mercer said.

"The usual price determinations customary in the natural gas industry are not provided for in the (gas search) program," he said.

Industries Interdependent On Water

EDITOR'S NOTE — Water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink... Water is the target of good poetry and bad jokes. There's nothing like it. No one thinks much about it — until it's unavailable. But water is the lifeblood of the Texas economy, rivaling oil and gas in economic importance. This is another in a series of special reports on Texas water.

By MIKE COCHRAN
AUSTIN (AP) — "Water, taken in moderation, can not hurt anyone."

'No Water Projects' Policy Hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ranking Republican on a Senate budget panel said Tuesday that Congress is "restricted if not bound" by President Carter's policy of no new construction of water projects.

"We have to consider not only a bill that can get passed by Congress but one that can be signed by the president," Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., told witnesses who urged inclusion of new dams and other projects in the fiscal 1979 budget.

However, Hatfield added, "I am hopeful we can persuade the president not to reject new starts out of hand. We must convince the president that 'no new starts' is bad policy, that we must take each project and consider it on its merits."

The budget submitted by Carter in January included no new construction starts, but the president indicated some might be recommended after completion of a water policy study, expected to be released by the White House this spring.

Meanwhile, the Senate and House subcommittees on public works appropriations are hearing testimony this week and next on proposed power, reclamation and flood control projects.

Utah Gov. Scott M. Matheson urged the Senate panel to add $15 million to the $37 million recommended by Carter for the Central Utah Project so construction of the Upalco and Uintah projects could be begun.

"All of the necessary steps to begin the projects have been done," Matheson said. "We are ready to throw dirt."

Carl M. Halvorson, president of the Pacific Northwest Waterways Association of Walla Walla, urged the panel to approve funds for new hydroelectric dams in the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. He said hydroelectric generation saves millions of barrels of oil annually.

Roy C. Webster, executive vice president of the association, expressed "serious disappointment with yet another presidential budget which does not contain one new start for water resources."

In a statement submitted to the subcommittee, the association said, "Serious injury will occur in the economic and social environs which are so dependent upon sustained growth unless new starts are programmed to meet the energy and water resource demands of the region."

Woman Sentenced For Escape Role

WINONA, Minn. (AP) — Nancy Brown, 23, was sentenced Tuesday to up to three years in prison for helping her former employer escape jail while he was awaiting trial for hiring a man who killed his wife.

Judge Glenn Kelley of Winona District Court levied the maximum sentence allowable on the charge of aiding in the escape of an accused felon. Mrs. Brown was accused of giving a hacksaw to Donald Howard, who used it to cut a lock from his cell window at Winona County jail last Oct. 22. Howard is now serving a life sentence for first-degree murder and conspiracy.

AGE BILL SIGNING

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter plans to sign into law Thursday a bill to change the mandatory retirement age of most American workers, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., said Tuesday. The ceremony is set for 9:15 a.m. CST in the White House Rose Garden, said Pepper, who was a main force behind the legislation.

Mark Twain.

"A mixture of brandy and water spoils two good things." — A wise old sage.

Water, when compared with more exotic delights, seldom fares better than poor. Devotees of the devil's brew spurn it as an unnecessary evil.

That old scoundrel W. C. Fields cursed it immortally.

So who needs it?

With all due respects to ol' W. C., most everybody needs it, especially in Texas, the nation's third-largest state, with nearly 13 million thirsty residents. Besides drinking it, Texans find water the lifeblood of a complex economy that includes hundreds of water-using industries and a variety of agricultural purposes.

Dr. Herbert Grubb of Austin, one of the state's outstanding authorities on water, talks in charts, graphs and smart, a combination which is not easily understood by everyone. But he makes this point:

"The interdependence among the specialized Texas industries makes it important for Industry A to be concerned about a water supply for Industries B, C and D, since Industry A may depend upon either or all of these other industries for essential production materials and for markets.

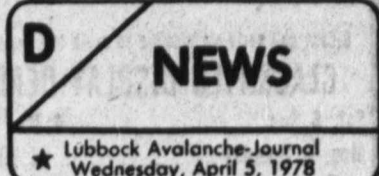

"For example, the retailer of finished foods, such as ground beef for hamburgers, depends upon the supply of beef, which depends upon the supply of grain, which depends upon a supply of irrigation water, fertilizer from the agricultural chemical industry, fuel from the energy industry to pump water, and a large number of inputs that are obtained from manufacturing industries."

In other words, a lot of people need a bunch of water for different reasons, or you can't have a hamburger.

And, as Grubb says:

"This analogy applies to clothing, housing, home furnishings, utilities, energy, transportation, medical services and supplies and all other goods and services produced within Texas and marketed to in-state and out-of-state customers."

Few states have such a diverse economy so dependent upon fresh water supplies. Some 72 percent of the present water use in Texas comes from underground sources, and most is used for irrigation.

Texas produces staggering amounts of grains, meats, cotton and other food and fiber, all requiring water. It is the leading oil and gas producer in America, and again water is essential.

Freshwater inflow into the bays and estuaries of the Texas coast provides the ecological balance for marine finfish and shellfish, the basis for another multimillion dollar industry.

There are nearly 15,000 different manufacturing establishments in Texas, according to Grubb, "and the gross value of output by the 10 major water-using industries totals $17 billion annually."

The heavily industrialized areas in Southeast Texas are the major users, but paper milling, closely related to the East Texas logging and forestry industries, is another heavy user.

"Shortages of water required to produce paper will impact all areas of the state," Grubb said. He offers this example:

"A small shortage of 1,000 acre feet of water would cost an estimated 102 lost jobs, more than a $1 million decrease in income to Texas labor and a $100,000 decrease in taxes to state and local governments."

An acre foot is 325,850 gallons.

Now, the chilling news: Texas now uses some 17.3 million acre feet of water a year, and as its population and industry increase, so do its needs.

But it is now using its ground water at a clip of 12.2 million acre feet per year. Those underground aquifers, however, have a recharge capability of about 5.1 million acre feet.

So the state is using up 7.1 million acre feet of its reserve each year.

Allen White, Grubb's assistant as director of planning and development for the Texas Department of Water Resources, provided this analogy:

"Say you got a savings account and you put $5 million in each year. But somebody takes out $12 million a year. Even if you had $100 million to begin with, you can see what's going to happen if someone takes out $12 million a year. You're going to run out eventually."

The problem, he said, is that "it's just damn hard to get that across to the man on the street."

Paducah Election Results Confirmed

A-J Correspondent
PADUCAH—Former Paducah Mayor V.L. Hutchison has been declared official winner of the mayor's race in Saturday's election.

The action was taken during Monday night's special called meeting of the Paducah City Council.

A canvass of the votes confirmed that Hutchison, who served as mayor from 1958 to 1974, received 234 votes to Wes Polk's 170 votes and Jim Caraway's 156 votes.

Mayor Edward Maxey, who chose not to seek re-election, got 20 write-in votes while Joe Don Brooks received two write-in votes.

Former councilman Walter Liedtke, who captured 362 votes, was certified winner in Place 3 over incumbent Iriess Brooks, who garnered 209 votes.

Incumbent Wesley Gibbs, elected in 1976 to Place 4, was named the winner in that race. Gibbs got 312 votes to his challenger's, Dave Willis, 251 votes.

At one time, Willis, Liedtke and Hutchison had served on the city council during the same period.

Winners will be sworn in at the regular council meeting, slated April 13.

It was the largest turnout of voters in the city's history, according to City Mgr. J.B. Garrett.

Jurist Criticized In Walus Hearings

CHICAGO (AP) — Nine years after he was widely criticized during the Chicago 7 trial, 82-year-old Judge Julius Hoffman is again stirring controversy — this time in the trial of Frank Walus, who could lose his citizenship if it is proven he was a World War II mass murderer.

At one point, the defense attorney accused the judge of falling asleep in court. The judge has threatened the lawyer with contempt citations.

And on Monday — before the defense started its case — Hoffman denied a defense motion for acquittal by saying the government's case "is clear and convincing and unequivocal that the defendant did commit war crimes, was a member of the Gestapo ... and concealed information when he obtained U.S. citizenship."

That prompted the Chicago Sun-Times to report in a news story Tuesday that "Hoffman all but declared him guilty."

At another point, Hoffman expressed exasperation with Walus' halting testimony in both Polish and English — prompting Chicago Tribune columnist Jeff Lyon to describe Hoffman as having an "instinct for weakness (that) is like that of a mosquito seeking warm blood."

Walus, 55, was born in Germany of Polish parents and is charged with lying about alleged activities with the Gestapo when he obtained U.S. citizenship in Chicago in 1970, 11 years after moving to the United States.

To prove he lied on naturalization forms, the prosecution has tried to establish that Walus was a Nazi who helped the German Army kill Jews during the war. If found guilty, he could be deported.

On Tuesday, just before Walus went back to the witness stand, his attorney, Robert Korenkiewicz, told a reporter he was "beginning to get the feel of what happened during the Chicago 7 trial. Not a good feeling."

On Monday, Korenkiewicz had said he had the impression Hoffman had fallen asleep. He shouted to wake the judge and demanded a recess.

The diminutive, white-haired Hoffman left the courtroom, and Korenkiewicz then said: "I am incensed. He takes voluminous notes when the government is up here, then the son of a — strike that — then he falls asleep when I get up here."

Police Apologize To Suspect

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Peter Mark Jones didn't go to work Tuesday.

"He's going to take it easy for a while," said a Boston attorney who represented Jones during the nearly five days he was held by police in connection with the Hillside Strangler case.

The attorney, Albert Johnson, said Jones will wait "to try and see if there is irreparable harm or whether he can continue some kind of normal life in Los Angeles or elsewhere." Jones temporarily left Los Angeles, the attorney said, declining to say where Jones had gone.

"That poor man," said Jones' boss, Pauline Starratt. "I don't know what he wants to do. I didn't press him. He called in this morning and said he wanted to wait a couple of days before deciding whether to come back to work."

For the past year, Jones, 37, has worked at the Beverly Hills Medical Building as an assistant maintenance engineer.

Last Thursday he was booked for investigation of murder in two of the 13 Hillside Strangler killings. He was held while a battery of detectives sorted through a story told by George Shamsak, an acquaintance from Jones' schoolboy days in Boston.

Police said Shamsak recounted details of the killings that could be known only by the killer or police.

On Monday, Jones was freed with an apology from Police Chief Daryl F. Gates.

Applicants Sought For Job Corps

The Texas Employment Commission, 1602 16th St., is recruiting men and women between the ages of 16 and 21 and out of school for the Job Corps.

The Job Corps helps its graduates find jobs they have trained for in their programs through the Texas Employment Commission.

Enrollees from Texas go to Job Corps Centers at San Marcos and McKinney, where basic education skills are improved and training programs in a wide range of vocations are offered. Personal development is encouraged through sports, music, hobbies, student government and recreation.

Anti-Cancer Crusade Kickoff Set

A-J Correspondent
PADUCAH—County judges Roger Holley of Cottle and Lee Roy Dilliard of King have proclaimed April as "Cancer Control Month" in the counties and April 7 as "Cancer Control Day."

Friday at 10 a.m. the Cottle-King unit of American Cancer Society will kick off its annual educational and fund-raising crusade with an informal coffee in the community center.

Admission will be by donation. An educational film on cancer research will be shown by Dave Daly of Wichita Falls, District 13, staff representative.

Mrs. Tilden Armstrong, the new crusade committee chairman, will distribute workers packets and repeat instructions to volunteers with emphasis placed on the drive being completed in April.

She says she will ask workers to complete their assignments by April 15. Mrs. J.J. Gibson Jr. of Guthrie will serve as King County's unit crusader.

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

Telephone Cable Project Slated

Southwestern Bell will begin construction this week on a 1.5 million cable project in south Lubbock, according to division manager Bob Dunbar. "The expected growth in residential section south of Loop 289 will require the additional lines in order to provide quality service to new customers," Dunbar said.

Cable technicians will begin placing cable in existing conduit along Slide Road between 34th and 82nd Streets. New conduit will be poured and cable placed along Slide up to 98th Street. Buried cable also will be placed along 82nd Street between Quaker and Slide.

Construction should not inconvenience the public, Dunbar said. Open trenches will run along the side of the road but will not interfere with traffic.

The project is scheduled for completion in June, 1979.

Guard, CAP Slate Disaster Exercise

Texas State Guard and Civil Air Patrol units in the area will participate in one of 28 disaster preparedness exercises scheduled throughout the state Saturday to make state guard and CAP personnel more responsive to local emergencies.

The local exercise will begin at 1 p.m. with a briefing at the National Guard Armory. Exercises will then proceed at the Z training areas at the Wolforth Field, northwest of Lubbock.

The statewide training program, named "Exercise Home Team," will involve local disaster preparedness agencies to the maximum extent possible.

The area exercise will involve a simulated mid-air crash and coordinated air and ground search operations.

Scouts Get Check From Club

A-J Correspondent
SILVERTON — Mrs. Jerry Baird, president of the Love One Another Study Club, recently presented a check for $1,130 to Boy Scout leaders John McCammon and Mike Long.

The money represents the proceeds from the Christmas greeting page, which was published in the local newspaper.

The money will be used to remodel the local scout hut, to purchase new games and equipment for the scouts and to fund a week-long camping excursion this summer.

Big Spring Construction Brisk

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING—Construction in Big Spring is continuing at a brisk pace, with a $534,000 increase in permits for March of this year over the corresponding period in 1977.

A total of 53 new permits were started last month with an estimated combined cost of $677,413. In March of 1977, only 35 projects were begun, totaling $142,979. This boosts the total construction cost for the year to $3,656,997, dwarfing the $397,164 figure for this time last year.

Boulders To Adorn Howard Campus

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING — Howard College trustees have purchased $13,750 worth of boulders from a central Texas firm to relieve the monotony of the school's 100-acre campus.

Several thousand trees and shrubs also will be planted on the grounds. Funds for the project were donated by anonymous persons.

The trustees will not name their new officers until their next meeting.

Swisher Co-Op Officers Re-Elected

TULIA (Special) — Three directors were re-elected to the board of the Swisher Electric Cooperative at the 38th annual meeting of the organization held recently at the headquarters building here.

Emmet Pittman of Kress, W.D. Inglis of Tulia and Eddie Bryan of Wayside were re-elected to the cooperative's board, and Pittman was re-elected as president of the board. D.T. Northcutt of Silverton was re-elected as vice president and Inglis was re-elected as secretary-treasurer.

Lyle Robinson, cooperative manager, spoke briefly, mentioning that Swisher Electric and 15 other cooperatives are making a feasibility study of building a coal-fired generating plant.

Hopefuls Swamp Local Elections

MARBLE, Colo. (AP) — Nearly one-third of this Colorado mountain town's voting-age residents are running for office in the April 4 town elections.

Marble has 47 residents, and 38 are of voting age, according to Town Clerk Lois Ann McCollum. She says 12 persons are running for municipal office — 10 for the six trustee seats on the town council and two for mayor.

Mrs. McCollum said the number of candidates is one indication the former quarry town is reviving. The town's quarries supplied marble for the Lincoln Memorial in Washington and Denver's main post office. At one time, Marble had a population of 1,500.

A fire had broken out in a 19th floor apartment in another part of the building. Some residents, like this woman made ropes of sheets and blankets to attract firemen. All residents were urged by a loud speaker on a helicopter to stay in their apartments while the fire was quickly brought under control. Seven persons suffered smoke inhalation. (AP Laserphoto)

Bureau Urges Plant Caution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those colorful advertisements may seem to offer a convenient way to add some early springtime to your home, but the Better Business Bureau urge caution when ordering plants by mail.

A fancy name on a plant can be merely aimed at causing confusion, and not all plants can grow in all climates and soils.

The BBB says a good way to recognize false or misleading advertising is to look out for such claims as "grows 20 feet in one year," "supplies bushels of fruit from summer to fall," "produces thousands of exotic blooms in a few weeks," and "grows five types of fruit, all on one branch."

Some advertisements claim plants to be naturally insect and disease proof or able to grow in any soil and climate. Don't fall for these gross exaggerations.

Frequently, BBB says, the ads will push one particular plant, often a very common item with a fancy name. For example the common silver maple may become the "Silver Acer" and the thornless honey-locust the "Flowering Umbrella."

The BBB suggests that if you see an ad for a tree or shrub you're not familiar with, or if the claims seem too good to be true, call a reputable local nursery.

Ask if the advertised plant is in stock and find out its price. They may say there is no such plant, or your climate isn't right, or it's too difficult for an amateur to grow.

And if you do decide to order a plant by mail from one of the many reputable firms in the business, keep a copy of the advertisement along with the name and address of the company for future reference.

Gasoline Leak Cleanup In Oklahoma Continues

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — Workers continued cleanup operations Tuesday to complete removal of about 4,200 gallons of gasoline from Tulip Creek and to prevent the spread of gasoline to a lake that supplies Ardmore with water.

City officials stopped drawing water from Lake Jean Neustadt after a leak in an Atlantic Richfield Co. pipeline allowed the gasoline to enter Tulip Creek last week. But Dwain Farley, director of the state water quality laboratory, said Monday "there doesn't seem to be a significant amount of gasoline in the lake at this time."

MHS Rolls; Moegle Shatters Record

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The whole thing seemed rather secondary to the day's main honoree, and that figures. Bobby Moegle usually takes such things in stride.

The whole thing was that Monterey's baseball coach became the all-time winningest high school baseball coach in Texas history by winning two more games Tuesday at Lowrey Field. But it wasn't a big deal to the 19-year veteran. What mattered to Moegle was his senior pitchers Ron Reeves and Derek Hatfield blanked Coronado by 3-0 and 6-0 scores to start the District 4-AAAA schedule on a smooth note. And records really aren't that important anyway. Sports writers probably invented these things just to throw into a dull story every now and then. So in keeping with this assumed tradition, it is hereby written that Moegle has reached career victory No. 520 to outdistance Houston Reagan's Le Roy Ashmore at 519. The 21-year Houston coach stopped coaching in 1969 after heart problems.

It seems altogether fitting that Moegle broke the record during this district opener for a number of reasons:
1. The games needed a little spice to liven up things a bit.
2. Moegle got to beat his old player and assistant coach (Coronado's head coach John Dudley) for the 21st time in 22 tries.
3. And oh yes, the shutouts.
"I was real pleased with the two shutouts. I really didn't think either of our pitchers was as sharp as he has been.

Getting off to a good start in district is more important than the record though. I really don't care what records I set as long as I don't set the record for most losses," Moegle said.
The Monterey coach felt the two games had very little in common. In the first game, Reeves and Coronado's Gené Segrest waged a close pitching duel in which one error and Segrest's momentary wildness determined the outcome. However in the second game, the Mustangs committed six errors while MHS compiled all their runs in the first three innings. And Coronado did very little to narrow the deficit because Hatfield chunked a one-hitter and encountered very few problems.

Monterey brushed up CHS second-gate pitcher Russell Johnson for 4 runs and four hits in the first inning of the nightcap but the CHS lefty didn't allow an earned run. With two outs in the bottom of the first, Dana Rieger socked a hard grounder to the left side which CHS third baseman Terry Spradling booted. The error placed runners on first and second before Reeves sliced a double near the right field foul line to score Mike Wooten from second.
Rieger advanced to third on Reeves' double and both runners scored when Eric Voyles sliced a single to left on a 2-ball, no-strike pitch. Voyles moved to second

Twins, Mariners Open Baseball Action Tonight

By The Associated Press
Minnesota's Dave Goltz and Glenn Abbott of Seattle will be the starting pitchers and Hall of Famer Joe DiMaggio is scheduled to throw out the first ball tonight when the Twins face the Mariners in the opening game of the 1978 major league baseball season.
Houston and Cincinnati open the National League season on Thursday with J.R. Richard starting for the Astros and Tom Seaver working for the Reds. Seaver has won six opening-day assignments in the last seven years, all of them for the New York Mets. Richard won 18 games last season, four of them against the Reds.
The remaining National League teams open on Friday with other American League openers scheduled throughout the weekend. By Saturday, all 26 major league clubs will be in action.

Goltz, 20-11 in 1977, was one of only three 20-game winners in the American League last season and Abbott, 12-13 last year, emerged as the ace of the expansionist Seattle pitching staff.
Both clubs will have some new faces in their lineups, the Mariners by their own choice and the Twins as a result of the free-agent escape chute.
Seattle will start Bruce Bochte, a free-agent pickup from Cleveland, in left field and John Hale, who has had prior major league shots at Los Angeles and Toronto, in right field.
Minnesota, which lost two top outfielders, Lyman Bostock and Larry Hisle, in the free-agent auction, has replaced them with a pair of rookies. Hosken Powell will lead off and play right field in Manager Gene Mauch's lineup with Willie Norwood batting seventh and playing left field.

Bostock signed with California and Hisle with Milwaukee and both are expected to play major roles with their new teams. The Angels open at home Friday night against Oakland and the Brewers' season begins in Milwaukee Thursday against the Baltimore Orioles.

GONE ARE THE times of heat and humidity in such spots as Vero Beach, Apache Junction, Pompano Beach and Yuma, Ariz. No more eating at the Club Cafe or Pepe's Tasty Taco or out of paper sack from the convenience store next to the motel.
No sir, it's back to the big time of the Brown Derby and Fisherman's Wharf and Sardi's. The hot-stove and grapefruit leagues are history, for the 1977-78 winter. It's The Season, the one that counts, when the more things change, the more they stay the same.
The first of July, Rod Carew, batting .634, talks about his goal of hitting .700 this season. "I'm not doing anything differently. I'm just trying to meet the ball.

But, wait until the last part of August, when the season gets tiring, then we'll talk about .700."
Charlie Finley, faced with red ink in Oakland, hints that he is negotiating with a plantation owner in the South Pacific to sell the Oakland A's and move them to Pago Pago. Bowie Kuhn says he is taking the matter under advisement.

Spinks Presented Belt, Says Ali Next Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — "The only heavy-weight champion," a flack said Tuesday. "The only man to win the title in combat."

Leon Spinks, his two front teeth appearing with him at a news conference, smiled. And agreed.

"Why should I be down," the half-heavyweight champion of the world said of the World Boxing Council's decision to withdraw title recognition from Spinks and bestow it upon Ken Norton.

"They took it away and gave it to somebody on a silver platter," said the conqueror of Muhammad Ali. "I fought for it. It's mine."

"The New York State Athletic Commission recognizes you," said a questioner. "So does the world," said Spinks, who appeared at a news conference to accept the championship belt from The Ring, a boxing publication which joins with the World Boxing Association and others in recognizing Spinks as champion.

Spinks, whose timing in the ring is much better than his timing for personal appearances, was an hour and 15 minutes late and reportedly blew an appearance on a television show in which was to engage in a live telephone hookup with Norton.

Before answering any questions, Spinks told reporters, "I'm gonna fight Muhammad Ali my next title fight ... sometime in September or October."

Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., which has promotional rights to Spinks' next three fights, was in New Orleans and there were indications that the Spinks-Ali rematch would take place in that city in October.

"I don't know where Bob Arum has gone," said Spinks. "The fight will be where I want it to be."

Judge Ed Bell, Spinks' attorney, said Leon "has asked Mr. Arum to look into it (the site of the Ali fight), but Leon will make the decision."

Bell also listed as possible sites St. Louis, Leon's hometown where he was arrested for driving the wrong way on a one-way street and without a license March 19; Las Vegas and Bell's home of Detroit. Wherever it is held, there appears to be a strong move toward holding it in the United States.

On Spinks' other battlefronts, Bell said there will be a hearing April 17 in Las Vegas on Spinks' suit against the WBC action and that he hopes a dispute with Spinks' listed manager, Mitt Barnes — who has been pushed aside by Top Rank in the conduct of Spinks' career — can be settled without litigation. "It depends on him," said Bell. "We're prepared to be reasonable about it."

And while Bell said he is happy with Top Rank's treatment of his client, he did indicate that Top Rank might lose some of its grip on Spinks' fighting affairs.

"I think Leon needs a manager," said Bell. "Certainly Leon needs someone to act in that capacity. I think Leon needs to someone to make hard decision for him in that area."

Blomberg Eyes Return

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — When the wandering free agent who has sold his services elsewhere returns to the playground of his former team, fan reaction in the form of boos and jeers can be ear-splitting.

But that's not what Ron Blomberg expects when the Chicago White Sox help the world champion New York Yankees open their home schedule a week from Thursday.

"They'll be standing up for me," said Blomberg seriously. "No one will boo."

That's putting a lot of faith in the reaction of Yankee fans, who ordinarily are not a very orderly lot.

"The people there think I'm great," Blomberg said. "They should! I gave them everything I had."

That he did for several seasons when he wasn't on the disabled list. But Blomberg spent much of the 1975 season on the disabled list, appeared in only one game in 1976 and saw no service at all in 1977 because of injuries.

Nevertheless, the 29-year-old outfielder-first baseman gained free agent status from the Yankees last season and signed a four-year guaranteed contract with the White Sox for $600,000.

Blomberg, who was claimed by five other teams, said money had nothing to do with his signing with the White Sox. He said he did it because White Sox President Bill Veeck "is a fighter."

One reason Blomberg expects a warm welcome from the fans on his return to New York is because of the letters he keeps receiving.

"How much does one hundred letters a day from New York tell you?" asked Blomberg. "My wife just got back to Chicago from spring training and she said there must be 2,500 letters waiting for me. Almost all are from New York."

Maybe the fans will greet him warmly but if exhibition games are any indication, Blomberg will not get the same reception from his former teammates. In two exhibition games this spring, Yankee pitchers kept throwing around his head.

Blomberg didn't think it was intentional and said he didn't care if that were the case.

"It makes no difference," he said. "That's baseball. I just care about winning. When you think about it, though, I don't know them all that well."

"I've been on the operating table the last two-and-a-half years, not on the field. There's not many guys left from the teams I played on."

Blomberg compiled a .302 average during his career with the Yankees and enjoyed his best season in 1973 when he had a .329 average and followed that with a .311 mark in 1974.

But in 1975 he suffered a shoulder injury and was on the disabled list for three months. He went to spring training in 1976 but underwent surgery for chronic biceps tendinitis after appearing in only one game. In spring training last year, Blomberg crashed into a fence, shattered his left kneecap and again underwent surgery, missing the entire season.

SWC Gains Respect

DALLAS (AP) — The United States of America quit laughing at Southwest Conference basketball in the harsh Winter of 1977.

From the National Invitational Tournament in New York to the Final Four of the NCAA Playoffs in St. Louis, respect replaced snickers — except when Abe Lemons delivered his one-liners.

Lemons-led Texas whipped North Carolina State of the Atlantic Coast Conference to capture the NIT and Arkansas ambushed multi-titled UCLA and glamor independent Notre Dame for third place in the NCAA.

"We had been doing a lot of talking about how much our basketball had improved but it finally reached the point where we had to do something to convince people," said Eddie Sutton of Arkansas.

Sutton, the first SWC coach to capture The Associated Press Coach of the Year laurels, said, "You can't find a person now who hasn't heard of us."

"We made a commitment to basketball," Sutton said of Arkansas, "and people at other institutions saw that football and basketball could be compatible ... The addition of Houston to the conference was great. They had had success over the past decade and that probably helped."

Sutton traced the SWC basketball revival to aggressive out-of-state recruiting and excellent coaching. "We went out and beat out some of the big boys for talent. The coaching has been good."

Sutton cited Lemons, who earned Co-Coach of the Year honors along with Duke's Bill Foster, from the American Basketball Coaches Association.

"Abe gets a lot of ink, but more than anything else he has a good ballclub and he can coach. Texas should be a heavy favorite next year. They get all their top players back."

Sutton figures Houston, Texas Tech, Texas AM, and Southern Methodist will field competitive clubs next year.

The SWC, for the first time in its history, had three basketball teams in the postseason tournaments in 1977. Houston was eliminated in a first-round game against Notre Dame.

Lemons was opening his mail the other day and there was a note from one of his players and a cigar. The cigar was from Red Auerbach, general manager of the National Basketball Association's Boston Celtics.

"The note said 'Auerbach asked me to tell you that this Texas team was the best-coached team he saw all year.'"

Argonauts Sign Ex-Dolphin End

TORONTO (AP) — Don Reese, former Miami Dolphins defensive end now in jail in Miami on a drug trafficking charge, has been signed by the Toronto Argonauts, the Canadian Football League team said Tuesday.

A club spokesman said Reese will join the Argos for the coming season, provided he is released from prison and is permitted to emigrate to Canada.

Reese and former Dolphins defensive tackle Randy Crowder were found guilty last August of trafficking in cocaine.

Get 50¢ a quart for your old oil just for trying gasoline-saving Uniflo.*

And you could also get 16 extra miles per tank of gasoline.

To introduce you to gasoline-saving Uniflo motor oil, your participating Exxon dealer will pay you 50¢ for each quart of oil he drains out when you get this Uniflo Spring Changeover.

And Uniflo could save you much more by cutting your gasoline costs.

After conditioning with Uniflo, a fleet of cars averaged 16 extra miles per tank of gasoline—16 extra miles this same fleet of cars didn't get with a conventional multigrade oil like most people use.

Uniflo isn't a synthetic. It's a golden, natural oil—Exxon's best engine protection ever—with special friction-reducers developed by Exxon research.

By cutting friction between moving parts in the engine, Uniflo saves gasoline. And money.

The Spring oil-change offer at participating Exxon dealers gives you a chance to save even more money. Why not try Uniflo now. Every day you wait could be costing you money.

*With this Uniflo Spring Changeover you get:

Titans Rip Tech 8-3

TULSA (Special)—Oral Roberts erupted for three runs apiece in the sixth and seventh innings Tuesday night to defeat Texas Tech 8-3 in a non-conference baseball game.

The teams play a single game tonight, beginning at 7, with Gary Moyer (4-1) the starting pitcher for Tech.

The Titans, 17-8, led by only 2-1 going into the sixth inning, but came up with three runs in that inning on a two-run single by Lyle Brakenridge and a run-scoring single by Audrie Culbert and then added three more in the seventh, two of those on Culbert's two-run single.

Tech, 20-15, had taken a 1-0 in the top of the third when Scott Leimgruber and John Keller hit back-to-back doubles, but ORU tied it in the bottom of the inning and then went ahead with a fifth-inning run.

The Raiders scored in seventh on Larry Selby's solo home run, his first of the season, and added another run in the ninth on Randy Newton's double and an ensuing sacrifice fly by Brooks Wallace.

TO DEFEND TITLE—Tom Watson, winner of last year's Masters golf tournament, hits out of the sand on the 16th hole Tuesday as he prepared to defend his title in this year's contest. Tournament play begins Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Watson Shuns 'Choker' Label

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — There's a decidedly-different atmosphere at the Masters for Tom Watson this year.

For one thing, the demeaning, distasteful word "choke" is no longer uttered in his presence. That's a very positive thing for the young man who changed his image forever with his thrilling 1977 stretch run against Jack Nicklaus, the springboard that sent him soaring to Player of the Year honors.

But there are a couple of negative factors, too.

"I'm not as excited about the Masters this year because I'm not playing as well now as I was at this time a year ago," Watson said in his customary, candid fashion.

At this time last year he had won twice and collected well over $100,000. He'd come close in several others. And it was his failure to pull out victory in those that, unfairly, had given him the "choker" label.

Ironically, it's those near-misses that are the difference this year. He's won twice and collected well over $100,000. But he really hasn't been close in any others. Even when he was winning the Tucson Open and the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, Watson — his own most severe critic — kept insisting he wasn't playing all that well.

And it's caught up with him in recent weeks. He's missed the cut in two of his last three starts.

"I'm not hitting the ball as solidly as I'd like to," he said. He's concerned, but not worried.

"I haven't lost it. It's just hiding, in there in my swing. All I have to do is search it out."

And he has labored mightily in that search. One of the tour's hardest workers, he has pounded balls for hours on the practice tee. And he came to Augusta early for even more practice.

But he comes into the defense of his green jacket this week — and the possibility of another dramatic confrontation with Nicklaus — with his arsenal somewhat depleted.

"It's not as consistent as I'd like it to be," he said.

His rivalry with Nicklaus, in which he has stamped himself as the heir apparent to Jack's long-time reign as the game's outstanding player, is overblown, Watson said. "It's largely an invention of the press. I've had one great season. Jack has had many. There is no way you can compare us at this time. We can be compared only when both our careers are over."

And he isn't placing any particular emphasis on beating Nicklaus in the annual spring classic that gets underway Thursday on the flowered, gently-rolling hills of the famed Augusta National Golf Club course.

"The object is to win the golf tournament, not beat one man," Watson said.

LHS Drubs Levelland

LEVELLAND (Special)—Lubbock High, sparked by Noel Jaime's grand slam home run and total of seven runs batted in, downed Levelland 15-10 Tuesday.

Levelland, 6-9, led 10-5 after five innings, but Jaime's grand slam narrowed the margin to 10-9 after six frames.

The Westerners, 11-4, then scored six runs in the seventh to take the victory. Jaime had a three-run triple in the rally.

Ernest Day also had a two-run homer in the first inning for Lubbock High.

Johnson, Adami Vie For No. 1 Again

By CARTER CROMWELL, Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As they did for a good part of last season when Rodney Allison was injured, Mark Johnson and Tres Adami are competing for the No. 1 quarterback job at Texas Tech. But they aren't directly in Allison's shadow this spring, and that has to make a difference.

Tech had pinned many of its high hopes last season on Allison, and Johnson and Adami encountered the inevitable comparisons with him when they engineered the team in his absence. And the comparisons became sharper when the Raider offense sputtered without its acknowledged leader.

There are several quarterbacks in the Tech spring camp that are fighting for the top job, but Johnson and Adami, because of their advantage in experience, must be given the edge at this point. Much more is expected to be known after the spring's first scrimmages, set for today and Saturday.

"There's still pressure on us because we're fighting for the No. 1 job," said Adami, who is currently alternating with Johnson on the first team. "I figure it will be better not having to play in Rodney's shadow, though."

Johnson, a junior-to-be, figures that "somebody will be pushing me, no matter what," but admits that last year's comparisons to Allison became tiresome.

"All last year, we heard them. It kind of got me down," he said. "People were always saying 'Wait until Allison gets back.'"

Next year's quarterback will unquestionably be judged against Allison to an extent, but Allison won't be here, and the offense should be different than it was for the last couple of seasons. It will not revolve so much around a single outstanding individual such as Allison.

"We won't be a star team," quarterback and receiver coach Pat Hodgson said.

Adami said, "Everybody will just have to pitch in and work more as a team without Allison. We don't have super people like that."

Johnson agreed, saying, "We weren't as team-oriented on offense last year as much as we'll have to be this year without a standout like Rodney."

Hodgson feels that having what he termed "a no-name offense" may help the club, since one player won't bear the brunt of the burden.

In last year's offense, there was no question that Allison was the big man, THE key, the player that made everything click. Subconsciously, the rest of the offensive team relied too heavily on him to make the big play. When he went out, a void—mentally and physically—was left that couldn't be filled.

Both Adami and Johnson are in much different positions this spring than they were a year ago. They now have legitimate shots at the starting job. Last spring, they couldn't realistically believe they had a chance at beating out Allison.

"I enjoy the competition," Adami said. "It's a real challenge to now be competing for the No. 1 job."

Johnson added, "Everybody knows these first two scrimmages mean a whole lot. The job is really up for grabs."

Tech head coach Rex Dockery said, "We should know a lot more about the quarterbacks after the scrimmages. We'll make some decisions after that. The quarterbacks have been throwing pretty well, but they haven't been under fire yet."

Johnson must improve his passing, and he readily admitted it. "My arm has been bothering me some when I throw, but I'll just have to work that out."

"I also need to improve my efficiency on third-down plays. Last year, I didn't make the needed yardage on the third downs like I should have. I want to be 60 to 70 per cent effective in these situations."

Adami, a good thrower and average runner who had a fine spring in 1977, said he is working mostly on throwing the ball.

"I'm working on taking a shorter drop and setting up quicker. I'm having to get used to these younger players, too. Last year, we had a lot of veterans, so this is a different situation in that regard, too."

Adami was hampered all last season by a bad right ankle and foot, but he said the situation is nearly cleared up now.

"It's still kind of weak, but I can cut on it and do everything else when it's taped up real good."

NOTES: Tech's scrimmage today will begin at 5 p.m., and the team will go onto the field at 4 p.m. The scrimmage will last about 1:15. It will be a controlled scrimmage. Saturday's scrimmage will not be as controlled. "We'll be able to tell more after these two scrimmages," head coach Rex Dockery said.

Starting split end Brian Nelson suffered a sprained right knee Tuesday, the seriousness of which was not immediately known. Nelson was watching a drill when another player backed into him and injured the knee. . . . Sophomore-to-be running back Tim Orr returned to the Tech team Tuesday after announcing last Thursday that he was quitting the squad. The 6-5, 210-pounder is a good prospect, and his departure had dimmed the outlook at running back for Tech, which has serious problems there regarding lack of size and depth. . . .

New Rules Knock Slow Play

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Slow play on the pro golf tour, to be judged and administered by officials bearing stopwatches, could result in drastic action up to and including fines of $1,000 and suspension from tournament competition, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman said Tuesday.

He said he and the Tournament Policy Board — the governing body for the tour — are taking "drastic, stern and immediate action" to improve the pace of play in regular tour events.

The move, he said, follows a lengthy time-study of tour events and subsequent action by the Policy Board setting up rules governing the pace of play.

Slow play, he said, "is a continuing concern. It is a considerable detriment to the tour and the game of golf."

Should players be found to be taking too much time — and he admitted this would be a judgment call by officials who have been issued stopwatches — the first offense would call for a $200 fine.

A second offense in a 12-month period also would bring a $200 fine. A third offense in the 12-month period carries an automatic fine of $1,000 and suspension from three tournaments.

Those penalties, he said, are in addition to — and not necessarily connected with — the assessment of 2 strokes for slow play. "The 2-stroke penalty is a rule of golf," he said. "We do not want to interfere with the rules of golf. This is an additional guideline for the conduct of the tour."

The new rules will go into effect within two weeks, after the tour's membership is informed in writing, Beman said.

"We know that this will be tough to administer, that in many cases it will be judgment calls, that we will be subject to criticism and many complaints, and our avenues of appeal will remain open," Beman said. "But we feel this is necessary for ourselves and the game of golf."

He said an intense effort a couple of years ago to reduce playing time resulted in a reduction of the average round from about 5 to 4 1/2 hours. "In the last couple of years, however, we have lost ground. It's still better than it used to be, but it's unacceptable. The trend must be reversed immediately."

The tour has completed a time study of nine tournaments, starting last year and going through the first five tournaments this season. Some 15,000 strokes were analyzed, Beman said.

He said the study showed that the average time a player took — an average of all players on the tour — was 27 seconds to hit a second shot, 30 seconds for a chip or trap shot, 38 seconds for a first putt, 14 seconds for a second putt.

These figures will be used as guidelines — not inflexible standards — to go into effect within two weeks, after the tour's membership is informed in writing, Beman said.

man said.

The commissioner said slow play is a problem, not only on the tour, but in junior golf, high school and college golf, the amateur game and weekend country club play.

"It goes throughout the game," he said. "As the showcase of the game, we must take steps to correct the situation."

"It takes time and a great deal of money to build a golf course. If we could improve play 20 percent, that means you, at your country club, could provide a place to play for 20 percent more people."

'Blaze' Pegged Top Player

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's like the cherry on the ice cream sundae," Carol Blazejowski of Montclair State enthused in being named winner of the first Margaret Wade Trophy as the nation's outstanding women basketball player.

The 21-year-old, 5-foot-10 senior forward from Cranford, N.J., topped the nation in scoring with a 38.6 average. The Blaze led the New Jersey college to a third-place finish in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national tournament.

Miss Blazejowski received 47 of the 91 votes cast by coaches, sports writers and sports information directors from 10 regions of the AIAW. Anne Meyers of champion UCLA was second in the balloting with 32 votes.

The Wade Trophy was started this season to inaugurate an award equivalent to football's Heisman Trophy. It is named for Margaret Wade of Delta State, the most successful coach in women's college basketball.

"I'm real glad the way everything has turned out," Miss Blazejowski said. "I'm happy women's basketball has blossomed and I'm happy to make a contribution toward that end ... This award caps my season."

She set a women's career record of 3,199 points, second only to Pete Maravich in all-time scoring among male or female college players. Pistol Pete finished with 3,667 points in 1970 after his career at Louisiana State.

NFL Vows To Continue Blackout Lift Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League has informed Congress it will voluntarily continue its policy of lifting television blackouts on sold out home games for the next two seasons.

In letters to the chairmen of the House and Senate communications subcommittees, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said the league will continue to telecast locally, as it has done for the past five years, games that are sold out 72 hours in advance of kickoff.

Rozelle requested House subcommittee chairman Lionel Van Deerin, D-Calif., to urge the Federal Communications Commission "to continue its annual report so that additional meaningful data will be available to provide the Congress with a sound basis for assessing the effects of this policy on professional football."

Despite the letter, the committee intends to go ahead with its plans to hold public hearings in Miami April 28 on legislation to permanently ban TV blackouts on sold out home games. Hearings are also scheduled for Washington sometime in May.

Senate subcommittee chairman Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., also said his panel "will almost certainly conduct hearings on the antiblackout legislation in the near future with a view toward resolving the issue for all sports."

"I'm happy the NFL has agreed to continue the antiblackout plan but this is an issue facing all sports, and obviously Congress is going to have to begin examining some of the legislative proposals and come up with a bill everyone can live with," said Hollings.

Congress passed a three-year law to lift the TV blackouts during the 1973-74-75 seasons. After the law expired, the NFL voluntarily followed the spirit of the measure.

In the wake of indications that the NFL might not continue the policy of televising home games locally, as was the policy before the law was enacted in 1973, several new bills were introduced in Congress, some more stringent than the previous measure.

At the NFL meetings in Palm Springs, Calif., last month, Rozelle said the league did not want a permanent law and also said the club owners were concerned about one bill, introduced by Sen. Robert F. Griffin, R-Mich., which would prohibit local blackouts if the game is sold out 48 hours in advance, instead of 72.

Rep. John Florio, D-N.J., and Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., have introduced a measure on behalf of the Ralph Nader-sponsored sports consumer group, Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports (FANS) which would be even tougher on the NFL.

Not only would it reduce the sellout deadline from 72 to 48 hours prior to gametime, similar to the Griffin bill, but only 95 percent, rather than 100 percent, of the tickets would need to be sold.

The measure also prohibits blackouts of all playoff games and would cut the 75-mile blackout radius, although it is farther in some instances, to 30 miles.

Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., also introduced legislation in January to reinstate the blackout law through 1980 but, at the time, urged Rozelle to continue the policy on a voluntary basis.

"I would much prefer to continue the arrangement which has been in effect for the past two years, than to again set out the basic principle in law," Roger said upon introducing the legislation. "But if the NFL does not agree, then it will be necessary to again bring the Congress into the matter."

Ticket Sales Key To Aeros' Future

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Aeros owners said Tuesday they would not field a team in the World Hockey Association next season, while, at the same time, announcing they were applying for a National Hockey League franchise.

Kenneth Schnitzer, one of five stockholders who purchased the team earlier this season, said the team would either play in the rival NHL or he and his partners would drop the WHA franchise.

Houston hockey fans will have to purchase 7,000 season tickets in the next 30 days if they want to retain the team, Schnitzer said. However, Schnitzer said meeting the season-ticket goal was no assurance the team could obtain a NHL franchise.

"While it will take approximately 10,500 paid admissions per game to support a NHL franchise, we have determined, as owners and investors, that we are willing to take our chances on achieving that average attendance," Schnitzer said.

The Aeros have averaged 5,900 paid attendance per game this season. Two years ago they sold 5,832 season tickets, but figures for this season fell to 3,250.

Schnitzer said the ticket sales campaign must depend a great deal on corporate backing and also on media exposure.

Buyers are being asked to pay down only 10 percent of the ticket price which runs from $4.50 to $10.50 per game. Funds will be held in escrow in the Texas Commerce Bank and will be refunded if sales fail to reach 7,000.

Schnitzer, who also owns the National Basketball Association Houston Rockets and the Area Operating Company, which runs The Summit — where both hockey and basketball are played — said the owners have made an informal application for an NHL franchise.

Asked whether 7,000 was an NFL-established figure, Schnitzer said there were "a lot of sick franchises in the NFL" but added that 7,000 is not a sacred formula.

Schnitzer said he didn't think the ticket campaign — which owners are spending over $100,000 to promote — would adversely affect ticket sales for the WHA playoffs.

"When you've lost as much money as we have this year, those games are not going to make a material difference," he said. Schnitzer also dismissed the possibility that if a NHL bid fails and no one picks up the WHA franchise, a minor league team could be an option.

"I don't think Houstonians are a minor league city," he said.

Although WHA trustees waived any legal recourse against a possible Aeros pull-out when Schnitzer and Josephine Abercrombie became principal owners, Schnitzer said he didn't think other WHA owners would endorse his attempt to move into the NHL.

"We're not trying to drive spikes into the WHA but we are trying to do well for Houston," he said.

Schnitzer said he didn't really have an explanation for the drop in attendance at hockey games. He also said before purchasing the Aeros, he and his partners didn't make any surveys of the market.

Some observers predicted the influx of new residents from Midwestern and Northeastern states into the area would furnish fans for the non-traditional sport.

Schnitzer also admitted that entrance of additional major league sports into the city — like the Houston Hurricane, a North American Soccer League expansion team — cuts into the potential fan market.

Bowler Stands Second

DALLAS (Special) — Lubbockite Lydia Duncan stands second in the Novice Division singles with a 484 total—12 pins behind the leader—after the first weekend of the 41st annual Texoma Women's Bowling Association's State Tournament.

Eighteen-year-old Kathy Kirst of San Antonio rolled a 700 series and Robert Billings of Waco recorded the tournament's high game (258) and high series (670) on opening weekend.

Patty McDonald of Port Comfort rolled a 226 to take the early lead in the Billy Simon Award for Senior Age Citizens.

Two state records tumbled, also, as Cheryl Bodenhamer-Betty Ponder of San Antonio shattered the Class A doubles mark when they combined for a 596-627—1224 to best the two-year old mark. Dee Reed of Orange topped an 11-year-old mark in Class C singles with a 627 as the 148-average bowler had games of 206-191-230 to best the old mark by seven pins Tulia's Carley Cosby ranks third in Class A All-Events with a 1648 total, 51 pins behind the leader.

Mart Stages Quiet Rally

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market staged a quiet rally Tuesday, with a steadier showing by the dollar in foreign exchange supplying some of the spark. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had dropped 10.74 points in the three previous sessions, rose 4.33 to 755.37.

Gainers held a 5-3 advantage over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, and the exchange's composite common-stock index climbed .22 to 49.66.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.13 million shares against 20.23 million Monday.

Brokers noted some encouragement over an upswing by the dollar against several leading foreign currencies. The dollar began to pull out of a steep decline late Monday, thanks to support from the Federal Reserve and West Germany's central bank, and posted some further gains in Tuesday's activity.

Analysts said buyers seemed to be attracted by the recent behavior of the market itself against a background of interest-rate and inflation worries and news of a record U.S. trade deficit.
