STOCKS SURGE—Clerks on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange place their orders during extremely heavy trading Monday as stock prices soared again for the second straight day of trading. For the busiest day in exchange history volume reached 63.51 million shares after having reached 52.28 million shares Friday. Prior to that the busiest day had been Feb. 20, 1976, when volume hit 44.51 million shares. The Dow Jones average climbed 14.99 points to 810.12. (AP Laserphoto)

House Group Votes To Drop Deductions For Gasoline Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee Monday voted 21-16 to end federal deductions for state and local gasoline taxes, giving President Carter what may be one of his few victories in the fight for a $23.9 billion tax cut-tax reform bill.

Carter then suffered back-to-back defeats as the committee failed by one vote to end similar deductions for state and local sales taxes, and voted 20-17 not to end deductions for nonbusiness personal property such as city taxes on automobiles and boats.

Medical Deductions Studied

The committee next turned to Carter's plan to limit medical and casualty deductions, and while there was some possibility changes would be made in this area, it was almost certain it would not accept his effort to limit deductions to amounts in excess of 10 percent of income.

For those who itemize deductions, if the repeal of the gasoline tax deduction survives the entire legislative process it would mean an average tax increase of $39.

Those who take the standard deduction — most taxpayers — would not be affected.

10-Day Discussion Begins

The committee began its consideration of the bill by scheduling 10 days of discussion and tentative voting on Carter's $10 billion in "reform" measures. At the end of that period, there will be a vote on whether to have any tax cut at all, including Carter's proposed $33.9 billion cut.

(The tax cut would amount to a net $23.9 billion after the revenue-raising "reforms" are subtracted. The figures, which differ from Carter's original revenue estimates, are based on later information.)

Any item voted on during the initial drafting period may be brought up for another vote later.

The votes were so close on both the gasoline tax and sales tax issues that either vote could be reversed, particularly the 1918 vote against ending the sales tax deduction.

More than 24 million taxpayers would be affected by changes in either issue.

Energy Crisis Cited

Those who favored an end to the gasoline tax deduction said it makes no sense to encourage use of gasoline during an energy crisis. Opponents said its repeal would play havoc with at the state level when decisions are made on taxation.

Tax Cuts Threatened

Reps. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, and Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, apparently reflecting the sentiment of many Democrats, served notice they will move to kill all tax cuts after the committee has completed action on all Carter's revenueraising "reforms."

Under the committee schedule laid down by chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., the showdown vote would come May 2 or 3.

"Some of us believe we should not have a tax cut," said Pickle, one of many members worried that it would further fuel inflation.

"A greater reform would be a reduction in our deficit," Vanik added.

Much of the first day of committee sessions was taken up with scheduling and other housekeeping chores, and with a laundry list of issues that committee members want to consider along with Carter's "reforms."

Those issues included changes in cigarette taxes, taxes for black lung benefits and changes in the minimum tax.

"Christmas Tree" Appeal

Ullman urged the committee not to make a "Christmas tree" of the bill, and Pickle said the list of new issues was another argument for simply killing the legislation.

"A certain number of us want our own little piece of sugar or to draw a little piece of blood," Pickle said, warning that the whole drafting process could "run downhill headlong into the creek of confusion."

Under the tentative committee schedule, 10 days of drafting would be devoted the Carter's proposed reforms, beginning with his suggested changes in itemized deductions including an end to the deductions for state and local gasoline taxes, sales taxes and personal property taxes.

One of the most controversial changes — reductions in business entertainment deductions — will not be considered until late this week and early next week.

Mart Sales Soar Again For Busiest Day Ever

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up another sharp gain Monday in an all-out rush of activity that surpassed last Friday's volume record by more than 10 million shares at the New York Stock Exchange.

NYSE trading volume reached 63.51 million shares for the day against Friday's total of 52.28 million, which itself had been considered a remarkable amount.

Before Friday the busiest day in exchange history had amounted to 44.51 million shares, on Feb. 20, 1976.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen almost 9 points last Thursday and 19.92 on Friday, climbed another 14.99 to 810.12.

Additional Buying Attracted

Analysts said the upsurge that began last week tended to feed on itself in early trading, attracting additional buying by investors anxious not to miss out on any further market gains.

The rally has been attributed in large measure to frenetic buying by investing institutions who had built up massive reserves of cash.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner Smith said Monday its latest survey of investing institutions showed money managers holding 17.1 percent of their assets in cash as of mid-March, up from 13.4 percent last December.

Foreign investors also were said to be playing a significant part, with the depressed dollar in the midst of a rally against leading foreign currencies.

Industrial Average Climbs

The Dow Jones industrial average punched cleanly through 800 shortly after the opening, climbing above that level for the first time since early January.

It held onto a gain of some 20 points until the last hour of the session, when the extraordinary rush to buy stocks at last began to subside.

Advances outpaced declines by about a 2-1 ratio on the NYSE, but the spread narrowed considerably from about 5 to 1 at the outset.

The exchange's composite index picked up .75 to 52.69.

Standard Poor's index of 400 industrials was up 1.80 at 104.13, and SP's 500-stock composite index rose 1.53 to 94.45.

Four of the five most active issues on the NYSE chalked up gains of a point or more as of the 4 p.m. close. Three of them—Sears Roebuck, up 1⅛ at 25⅜; Dow Chemical, ahead 1½ at 26, and General Electric, 1½ higher at 49¾—came from the ranks of the big-name issues which have led the rally since last week.

Brokerage Firms Benefit

The fourth was Merrill Lynch stock, up 1⅜ at 18⅝. Other brokerage issues continuing to benefit from encouragement over the booming business on Wall Street included E.F. Hutton, up 1½ at 16¼, and A.G. Edwards, up 1⅜ at 17⅞.

Scott Paper, the volume leader, was up ½ at 14⅜. An 895,000-share block traded at 14¼.

The American Stock Exchange market value index, which has been regularly reaching new highs since 1973 of late, did it again with a 1.06 rise to 135.75.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market also made a new 4½-year high, up .62 at 111.91.

Botulism Cause Believed Found

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

POTATO SALAD served at a Clovis, N.M. country club restaurant may have been one source of botulism responsible for the hospitalization of 31 persons, federal and state health officials said Monday.

The preliminary test results came from the Food and Drug Administration Laboratory in Dallas, but there was considerable disagreement which ingredient in the salad actually produced the potentially lethal toxin.

In Clovis, John Thompson of the New Mexico Environmental Improvement Agency claimed a commercial product in the potato salad was to blame and said the product has been removed from suppliers' shelves by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

Product Not Identified

He refused to identify the product, saying its identification would be the responsibility of the FDA.

Bob Brett, who is conducting the FDA investigation at the Colonial Park Country Club restaurant, confirmed Monday that "as a precautionary measure," the FDA has taken a commercial product out of trade channels nationwide. He, too, declined to name the product.

"We're going at our investigation about 20 hours a day; we're making every possible effort not to let anything slip by," the Albuquerque investigator said, adding he had no idea when the restaurant would be re-opening.

Meanwhile, Mexico state epidemiologist Dr. Jonathan Mann said that the potato salad wouldn't account for all the cases, "especially the early ones."

Other Foods Suspected

"We have not ruled out the possiblity that there may have been more than one food that was contaminated with toxin due to a cross contamination problem —one food contaminating the other," Mann said. "It's an extremely complex situation."

Of the 31 suspected food poisoning cases, seven remained in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital late Monday.

John Garrett, 65, prominent Clovis area farmer-rancher, was reported in critical condition. A hospital spokesman said Garrett's condition had improved to serious early Monday but that by Monday afternoon his condition had reverted back to critical.

Also hospitalized at Methodist in serious condition were Pam Seiler, 28, a Lubbock area resident and Reese Air Force Base employee; Curry County extension agent Billy Dictson, 35, and Wilburn Prince, 49, both of Clovis.

In Serious Condition

Other Clovis residents listed in serious condition at Methodist were Dr. L.W. "Larry" Byous, 57, superintendent of the Clovis schools; Darrell Johnson, 48, an insurance agent; and Maurine Claibourne, 60.

Byous, Johnson and Mrs. Claibourne had been airlifted from Clovis Memorial Hospital to Lubbock early Monday.

Four patients—all reported to be in fair condition late Monday—remained hospitalized at Clovis Memorial with the suspected food poisoning.

They were the Rev. William Green, 47; Reese Cagle, 68; Ray Bauer, 60; and Randy Monroe, 24. All are of Clovis.

Others were being hospitalized in Amarillo, El Paso and Albuquerque. Dr. Mann reported that about 11 of the cases were in critical condition, suffering from

Kidney Transplants Assured By Gift

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE WORDS are so direct, they sound strange — this talk about "harvesting" kidneys, "keeping them viable" and "finding a suitable recipient."

Perhaps the language is a lesson of the trade. Persons in the transplant business don't have time to beat around the bush.

Dr. Richard Lawton of the Texas Tech University School of Medicine is no exception. His pitch for donor kidneys: "If somebody needs them, why bury them?"

On Monday the Health Sciences Center Hospital received a gift that soon will allow Lawton, vice chairman for the school's department of surgery, to perform the first kidney transplants here.

A kidney transport unit — a machine that keeps a harvested kidney viable until it can be shipped to an appropriate recipient — was donated to the county-university hospital by the Alamo chapter of Telephone Pioneers of America, a service organization of retired Southwestern Bell employees.

"This machine will make a big difference in the salvage of kidneys. We're very fortunate to have them donate this $7,000 item," Lawton said.

He said the 80-pound portable unit will allow physicians to "recover two or more kidneys at a time. A kidney can be put on this machine and preserved until it can be transplanted into a local recipient. Or, if it doesn't fit, we can ship it to some other center where there is a suitable recipient."

Designated Transplant Center

The Health Sciences Center Hospital has been designated a regional transplant center by the National Kidney Foundation, on whose executive board Lawton serves. In the next few months, Lawton hopes to start a program for recovering and transplanting kidneys.

Donor kidneys must be carefully matched to recipients according to tissue and other characteristics, hospital officials said. In this respect, the transport unit will be crucial.

"The majority of donor kidneys come from cadavers," Lawton said. "Recovery and preservation is the key to successful transplantation."

Lubbock will be plugged into state and national computers as part of a kidney information and exchange network. Whenever a kidney is recovered from a cadaver here, if it can't be used locally it will be transported elsewhere for transplant.

Lawton said about 35,000 persons in the United States are undergoing dialysis and are candidates for kidney transplants.

Co-Op Seeking Injunction Against LP&L

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SOUTH PLAINS Electric Co-op has asked District Court Judge William Shaver to issue a permanent injunction to prevent Lubbock Power and Light (LP&L) from expanding service into a recently annexed sector in Southwest Lubbock.

In a suit filed late Monday afternoon, the co-op requested the injunction from the 140th District Court judge, contending that it is the only power company authorized by the Public Utility Commission (PUC) to serve the area.

The action is similar to a co-op effort last year to enjoin LP&L from extending service lines into an annexed area south of 82nd Street and east of University Avenue.

The PUC eventually gave both LP&L and the co-op the right to serve the annexed area. But a state district court judge later ordered the City of Lubbock to apply formally for service certification. However, he did not bar the city from ever expanding into the area.

The city has not applied for certification yet.

960 Acres Involved

The land in question in the current injunction suit is about 960 acres bounded by 82nd and 98th streets and by Quaker and Frankford avenues. The area was annexed by the city council last fall.

In its petition, the co-op cites the same reasons for injunctive relief that it did in its earlier suit. The co-op contends in the suit that LP&L's construction of electrical facilities in the annexed area is an "intentional and direct violation" of the Public Utility Regulatory Act.

Violation Claimed

The act gives the PUC sole authority to decide the service territories of power companies. The co-op claims in its suit that the City of Lubbock, by annexing land and then extending service to residents there, violates the PUC's authority.

Unless LP&L construction is stopped,

Absentee Voting Begins In County

ABSENTEE VOTING for the May 6 Democratic and Republican primary elections began Monday at the Lubbock County Courthouse, 904 Broadway St.

A spokesman for the county clerk's office said late Monday that 11 persons had voted absentee during the first day.

Absentee ballots may be cast at the county clerk's office, and at the Slaton branch of the county tax department, through May 2.

County Clerk Frank Guess said his office will be open weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Voters must present their voter registration card to obtain a ballot, Guess said.

The political parties are using punchcard voting machines for the primary elections.

Fire Destroys Child Center Facility Here

WIND-WHIPPED flames destroyed an eastside child development center late Monday as firemen, hampered in their efforts by wire window coverings, fought to keep the blaze from spreading.

Had the inferno erupted only a few hours earlier, about 70 three-and four-year-olds would have been inside the Texas Migrant Council's Center at 600 Ave. D, said a shaken, sobbing Mrs. Beatrice Marian, a center teacher.

There were no reported injuries, though flames at times rolled out windows and doors within inches of firemen and residences nearby.

Puffs of smoke boiling from the wooden structure's roof about 10 p.m. alerted a city policemen and gave firemen the only sign of the inferno inside.

Late Monday, fire department investigators were still at the scene in attempts to keep the blaze from rekindling and to find out what triggered the flames that gutted the two-story structure.

Damage was estimated at more than $1,000 by firemen at the scene, though owner Guadalupe Hernandez said losses would probably exceed $10,000 on the structure alone.

Firemen had not determined the cause or origin of the blaze late Monday. One firemen said it may have ignited in an

AS WHEELS OF JUSTICE MOPE ALONG

Burglary Victim's Losses Compounded

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Paul Flexman has lost about as much trying to testify against the suspected burglar of his home as he did in the original break-in.

The wheels of justice are moving slowly in his case, said Flexman, who has shown up in court seven times to testify without ever reaching the witness stand.

He has lost at least seven days pay to make court appearances, said Flexman, 32, a route salesman. That's in addition to losses from the burglary early this year plus a subsequent break-in at his home.

Three persons were arrested for the first burglary, including two juveniles who admitted their guilt and were turned over to juvenile court. Flexman was listed as a witness at the trial of the adult suspect — Michael Payton.

The victim said he showed up at all seven scheduled court appearances but the case was continued all seven times.

The first two hearings were postponed because the defendant had no attorney. At the third, only Flexman showed up and a warrant was issued for the arrest of Payton, who is now in Marion County Jail.

At subsequent hearings, the arresting policeman was absent. Dectective James Holder said Monday he was present for the first two hearings, then missed three weeks of work due to diabetes. On at least two occasions, he received subpoenas a day after scheduled hearings, the detective said.

Holder said he has doubts about obtaining a conviction anyway because the two juveniles won't testify.

"I have yet to see, in 10 years, the court issue a bench warrant to order a witness to appear in court for this type of case. They don't go through the trouble," he said.

Both Holder and the Marion County Prosecutor's Office said courts normally grant only three postponements to each side.

No prosecuting attorney has been assigned for the next hearing, scheduled

Salinas, Airhart Tangle Over Political 'Trick'

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

District 75-B state Rep. Froy Salinas is using his legislative office for political "gimmicks and tricks," his Democratic opponent has charged.

Jerry Airhart, who opposes Salinas in his bid for re-election, questions why the state representative "waited until election time to return $7,500 to the state from his office allowance.

"This was nothing more than a political gimmick to make himself look good to the voters at a critical time," Airhart said.

Salinas said the allegations were "so absurd I hate to even comment."

Airhart, a 35-year-old accountant and employee of a cotton marketing cooperative also accused Salinas of not disclosing the full extent of spending for his office and staff during the year.

"When fully reported the sum will be the highest of any legislator elected to the Texas House from Lubbock prior to the 65th Legislature," Airhart charged, adding there is "broad-scale waste in Salinas' office.

"His legislative report states 'my staff and I will serve you, the people, in such areas as welfare, food stamps and problems related to the Texas Department of Corrections.' The state pays millions of dollars for social workers to help people with these problems," Airhart said. "Why is Salinas' staff doing it?"

Salinas announced Feb. 28 he was returning about 15 percent of his legislative office budget for 1977 to the state treasury.

The Lubbock insurance man said the release time coincided with the release of exact budget figures from Austin. Salinas said the announcement had to wait until a final computer print-out with the year's expenses became available.

"We got the final tally in the middle of one week and released the figures the following Monday," Salinas said.

"If I had wanted to do it for political reasons, I would have waited until the end of April," he said, adding "I have more political sense than he (Airhart) gives me credit for."

A report by the state auditor placed Salinas in the bottom 30 of 150 representatives. "That means over 120 of the state representatives spent more than I did for office staff," Salinas said.

As for Airhart's allegations that Salinas has not revealed all that he spent for his legislative office and staff, Salinas said he had released the total amount spent.

He said the state audit lists the amount he released and said anyone interested is welcome to view the auditor's report at his office.

Salinas said it is the "obligation of the state representative to help people in dealing with state agencies," and said that usually means referring people to the right state agency.

The "unfounded" charges are simply Airhart "trying to create campaign issues that don't exist.

"He's disillusioned and I don't think he has a chance," Salinas said.

Airhart said he was angry about the way in which Salinas had used public releases to make his state expenditures look conservative.

"I pledge to the people of District 75-B that my office will not be used for political gimmickry," Airhart said. "I said in my announcement for office that I will treat the office with respect and dignity and I intend to do just that on election."

Airhart and Salinas are the Democratic candidates for Lubbock's eastside house seat, while David Hester is the sole Republican contender.

Hearing Postponed In Murder Probe

Kenneth Owen Jaycon's murder trial has been postponed for a week because of the sudden illness of a star witness for the state.

Jaycon, 31, is one of six persons charged in connection with the gangland style Christmas Eve slaying of William Drew Young. The case had been scheduled to go to trial Monday.

It was revealed when the case was called for trial Monday that a chief witness against Jaycon is expected to be Tico Lowrance, 27, also charged with murder in the case.

Prosecutors Jim Darnell and Tom Cannon said Mrs. Lowrance was admitted to a local hospital Sunday night.

Darnell indicated his understanding was that Mrs. Lowrance was undergoing testing Monday to determine the reason for internal bleeding. He requested 99th District Judge Thomas L. Clinton to delay the trial start until next Monday.

Clinton asked if Mrs. Lowrance was a material witness.

"She has also been charged with murder and we feel she is one of the main witnesses against Mr. Jaycon," Darnell answered.

After Clinton agreed to the delay, he set Jaycon's bond at $100,000.

Jaycon, who was the subject of an eight day manhunt by area law enforcement officers after being charged in Young's death, had since his arrest been held in jail without bond.

He was the first defendant here to be denied bail under terms of a new state constitutional amendment, authorizing bail denial to a person charged with a felony committed while he is on bond for an alleged prior felony.

Attempted murder indictments were returned against Jaycon in both 1976 and 1977.

Under amendment provisions, however, persons denied bail in such instances must be tried within 60 days. Since the 60-day limit in Jaycon's case will be reached Wednesday, Clinton went ahead and set the $100,000.

Defense attorney Clifford Brown gave notice Jaycon would file a writ of habeas corpus to reduce the bond amount.

Young, 28, was found in the trunk of his burning car near FM 1585 and Ave. P about 10 p.m. Dec. 24.

Investigators had to wait more than five weeks before a cause of death could be proven to their satisfaction.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled homicide the night of the grisly discovery, originally said the victim died from a stabbing, beating or suffocation. Officials had Young's body exhumed Jan. 23, and autopsy results indicated he had been shot.

The other four persons charged with Young's murder are Homer Lowrance, 37; Jim Gordon, 42; Kenneth Wayne Herndon, 35; and Jan Payne, 26.

The official complaint in the case says investigators have a sworn statement from a former waitress at a 19th Street bar in which the waitress says she opened a side door to the club about 7:30 p.m. Dec. 24 to see two men standing behind Young.

According to the complaint, the witness states Homer and Tico Lowrance, Gordon, Miss Payne and the two men took Young into the back office of the bar. The witness said she heard a gunshot from the office a few minutes later, the complaint says.

Motorcycle Course Near Post Proves Fatal For Two Men; Ruling Delayed

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The bodies of two men were found next to their motorcycles after they failed to show up at the end of a gruelling Enduro motorcycle race Sunday near Post.

The dead men were identified at 31-year-old Ron Paulson of Lincoln, Neb., and 33-year-old Mike Payte of Odessa.

Justice of the Peace Racy Robinson of Post said the bodies had been sent to Lubbock for autopsies, and that he would not make a ruling in the deaths until the tests are complete.

Initial indications, however, from Robinson, lawmen and participants in the race were that the men apparently died from natural causes resulting from the rigors of the race. Conditions during the event, which drew 600 competitors from throughout the nation, were described as punishing.

According to chief deputy Tom Burns of the Garza County Sheriff's Department, Paulson was found face-down in a pool of stagnant water about 5:30 p.m. Sunday. Payte, a veteran Texas Enduro racer, was found about 7:30 a.m. Monday following an all-night search.

Payte's body was found about 2 miles off the course after a 25-member search party had combed the rugged terrain with flashlights during the night.

Paulson was found in another off-the-course area a considerable distance away.

George McMahan, a Lubbock motorcyclist, said the 130.4-mile race spanned 55,000 acres of rugged ranchland south of Post. The course was punctuated by eight check points.

McMahan said the Texas Enduro has been run for more than five years, covering more than a million motorcycle miles, without any serious injuries.

He said Payte made the seventh checkpoint at 124.5 miles and was given water.

"We noticed he was suffering from heat prostration and we encouraged him to quit," McMahan said.

"A while later, the trail crossed a nice road and he followed it to the end. He took off his helmet, gloves and jersey, walked out and lay down."

Several persons attested to the unseasonably hot weather, and, reportedly, many of the riders dropped out early because of the conditions.

High temperature for the day at Post officially was 93 degrees, but participants in the event said it seemed much hotter in the rugged canyon area where the course is located.

"It was awfully hot," noted McMahan. "It was a demanding course and dusty.

"As long as you're riding, you're cooled by evaporation, by the sweat and the wind. Most of the terrain is open and when you go fast over it, you're cooled. But when you get down in the narrow spaces — in the gullies and canyons — the heat just gets to you."

Paulson also apparently made the fatal mistake of stopping.

"It seemed he was trying to quit. He had taken his helmet and gloves off and his sidestand was down," McMahan said.

The cyclist said that Payte, a physical education teacher at Permian High School in Odessa, was an ex-football player, and was leading his motorcycle class in the state.

"A lot of good riders quit early because they knew they had gone beyond their limits with the heat," said McMahan. "It was awfully dusty and when you stop, the temperature seems to go up 15 degrees.

"It was an act of God. We're all in a state of shock over it, but it was unpreventable.

Mercury To Climb As Winds Diminish

Winds which gusted up to 43 mph across the South Plains Monday should diminish by early today, ushering in warmer temperatures and mostly clear skies.

Northwesterly winds, blowing 15 to 20 mph, are expected to bring in a warming trend for the week, raising temperatures from the mid 70s today into the mid 80s by Saturday.

Winds should become westerly at 10 to 15 mph tonight, as the overnight low drops into the low 40s.

Monday, winds swept away chances of precipitation for the South Plains through Wednesday, kicking up dust from Lubbock to Wichita Falls and reducing visiblity to two miles in many of those regions.

The Pacific cold front which subjected West Texans to strong winds and cooler temperatures, created a line of severe thunderstorms east of the front in north central regions of the state. Marble sized hail was reported at Tyler.

Lubbock's high Monday only reached 76, following weekend highs near 90, and a warm overnight low of 57.

Literary Prizes Awarded By Pulitzer Trustees

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Gin Game," a hit Broadway play by Donald L. Coburn about two elderly residents of a nursing home, won the 1978 Pulitzer Prize for drama Monday.

The award for non-fiction went to Carl Sagan for "The Dragons of Eden," subtitled "Speculations on the Evolution of Human Intelligence." This year's awards are for works written in 1977.

Winner of the biography award was Walter Jackson Bate for his "Samuel Johnson" about the English essayist and critic. It was the second Pulitzer for biography for Bate, who won in 1964 for a book on the poet John Keats.

In fiction, James Alan McPherson won for "Elbow Room," a collection of short stories that continued his examination of the American black experience. The volume was a continuation of stories first published as "Hue and Cry."

The Pulitzer Prize, administered by the trustees of Columbia University, amounts to $1,000 in each category and is perhaps the most coveted American award in the arts and journalism.

The "Collected Poems" of Howard Nemerov, professor of English at Washington University in St. Louis, won the Pulitzer for poetry.

The history award went to Alfred D. Chandler Jr., who wrote "The Visible Hand: The Managerial Revolution in American Business."

Michael Colgrass was cited in the music category with his "Deja Vu for Percussion, Quartet and Orchestra," commissioned by the New York Philharmonic and premiered here last October.

Essayist and children's author E.B. White received a special citation for the full body of his work over several decades.

White, 78, is a regular contributor to The New Yorker from his home in North Brooklin, Maine.

The awards were announced Monday at the Graduate School of Journalism by Columbia University President William J. McGill. They were issued on the recommendation of the Advisory Board on the Pulitzer Prizes, which reviews suggestions of various juries.

Both Nemerov, 58, and Bate, a 59-year-old Harvard professor of English, received National Book Awards for the same volumes just last week.

McPherson, 34, of Charlottesville, Va., is an associate professor of English at the University of Virginia.

While a senior at Morris Brown College in Atlanta, the black author won a $1,000 Reader's Digest prize for a short story. McPherson, worked summers as a waiter on railroad dining cars, used the prize money to enter Harvard Law School, from which he graduated in 1963.

Coburn, 39, is an advertising and marketing man from Dallas whose only play had a successful opening on Broadway last October. Starring the husband-and-wife acting team of Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy as a testy couple who reveal their loneliness and weakness while playing gin rummy over several weeks at a nursing home, it is still running.

Sagan, 43, a member of the Cornell University faculty since 1968, is a professor of astronomy and space sciences and directs the Laboratory for Planetary Studies. He is one of the foremost proponents of the possibility of life on other planets.

Colgrass, 45 and a freelance percussionist with such disparate groups as the Modern Jazz Quartet and the Bolshoi Ballet, wrote his New York Philharmonic composition as an exploration of the range of percussion from primitive drumming and bell sounds to jazz. He divides his time between an apartment in Manhattan and Toronto.

Chandler, 59, is a professor of business history at the Harvard Business School. His book also won Columbia University's distinguished Bancroft Prize. He is the author of several books on business history and edited "The Papers of Dwight David Eisenhower: The War Years."

"The Visible Hand" tells of the evolution of the giant industrial corporations, explaining how vital sectors of the American economy are controlled by the "visible hand" of a new class of business managers who are distinct from entrepreneurs or stockholders.

Pupils Prefer Tougher Fundamentalist School

DALLAS (AP) — For 460 of the 1,900 students at Dallas' Carter High School life in the classroom is a little bit tougher. That's the way they wanted it.

The 460 signed "contracts" last September with what is known as the David W. Carter Fundamental High School, an entity within the larger Carter High.

Tighter discipline, a dress code and a promotion system based on accomplishment instead of attendance are required of the students. The school promises to "provide a quality education for every student in a safe and secure environment, respect the rights and responsibilities of all individuals...(and) keep parents informed of the academic progress and conduct of their sons and daughters."

Parents don't get off the hook, either. They're required to confer with teachers and to spend at least two hours each quarter at the school in some kind of volunteer work.

"I thought that putting more work on the kids would make 'em run," said associate principal Leonard Trapp. "But since we began in September, only one has asked to get out.

"In the past, sometimes, if a student showed up and went through the motions he was given a grade." The Fundamental School students must pass minimum requirements in each subject taken before moving on to the next level.

Courses at the school-within-a-school are no different, but classes are more structured and more tests are given.

The dress code bans beltless pants, going without proper "undergarments," unbuttoned shirts, hair rollers, sunglasses, thongs, see-through or tank tops and "suggestive" patches on clothing.

Anyone from the Dallas Independent School District may apply to the school, and entrance is structured along racial and ethnic guidelines. Presently, the ratios are 44 percent black, 44 percent Anglo and 12 percent Mexican-American.

Carter High's student body is approximately 70 percent black.

Superintendent Nolan Estes said the Fundamental School concept is good for those who need a rigid, more sequenced approach to education. "But others need flexibility and different options," he said. "It's an approach of the 1930s and 40s, and still one good approach. But it is not the only approach."

Trapp said he looks forward to the month of May, when he will administer standardized tests to the Fundamental School students to measure progress against tests given last fall.

Guidance counselor Betty Hale likes the results so far. "I've been at Carter for 10 years and can see all the difference in the world in these kids," she said. "They're thinking of long-range goals and have self-discipline."

1977 Journalism Prizes Announced

NEW YORK (AP) — The Philadelphia Inquirer won the 1978 Pulitzer Prize for public service for a 1977 series of articles showing abuses of power by the Philadelphia police.

Gaylord D. Shaw, of The Los Angeles Times, won the prize for national reporting for a series on unsafe structural conditions at the nation's major dams.

The general local reporting prize went to Richard Whitt of The Louisville Courier-Journal for his coverage of a fire that took 164 lives at a supper club in Southgate, Ky., and his subsequent investigation of the lack of enforcement of the state fire code.

Henry Kamm of The New York Times won the award for international reporting for his stories on the Indochina refugees known as the "boat people."

J. Ross Baughman of The Associated Press won the award for feature photography for three photographs he took in guerrilla areas in Rhodesia.

The award for special local reporting went to Anthony R. Dolan of The Stamford (Conn.) Advocate for a series on municipal corruption.

Meg Greenfield, deputy editorial page editor of The Washington Post, received the editorial writing award for selected examples of her work.

Jeffrey K. MacNelly of The Richmond (Va.) News Leader received the editorial cartooning prize based on his work during 1977.

Jim Schweiker of United Press International won the spot news photography award for a photograph of an Indianapolis broker being held hostage at gunpoint.

The other awards were:

Commentary — William Safire, columnist for The New York Times, for his articles on the Bert Lance affair.

Criticism — Walter Kerr, a drama critic of The New York Times, for articles on the theater in 1977 and throughout his long career.

A special citation was awarded to Richard Lee Strout for distinguished commentary from Washington over many years as a staff correspondent for The Christian Science Monitor and contributor to The New Republic.

The Pulitzer Prizes in journalism and the arts were endowed by the late Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the old New York World, and were first given in 1917. They are awarded by the trustees of Columbia University on recommendation of an advisory board.

The Philadelphia Inquirer began a series of front-page articles on the police department which found "a pattern of beatings, threats of violence, intimidation, coercion and knowing disregard for constitutional rights in the interrogation of homicide suspects and witnesses."

Homicide detectives, it said, had "come to accept breaking the law as part of their job," and the paper called for community action, investigation and criminal prosecution.

For four months, two veteran court reporters, Jonathan Neumann and William K. Marimow, reviewed three years of challenged homicide interrogations. A resulting four-part series reviewed the interrogation system, which was described by a former detective as "a return to the middle ages."

Airlines To Offer Even Cheaper Fares

LONDON (AP) — Laker Airways, whose Skytrain service pushed the big airlines to slash the cost of transatlantic tickets, said Monday it will introduce even cheaper fares on some round trips from Britain to the United States and Canada next month.

Laker said it would offer advance booking charter flights to Chicago, Detroit, New York and Montreal for $183 roundtrip and to Los Angeles and San Francisco for $368.

The London-New York round trip with Laker's non-charter Skytrain service costs $257.

The company said the new charter fares were prompted by a decrease this year in the number of travelers from North America to Britain, although with the decline of the U.S. dollar against the British pound, the rate of travel the other way is increasing.

"We like to fly full aircraft both ways," a Laker spokesman said.

Every Day Could Be Sun Day

TO HIS discredit, President Carter repeatedly has offered lip service—but little else—to aid in establishing a high-priority federal program devoted to commercial application of solar power.

In his landmark energy message to Congress, the President called solar energy "the most promising (of the) permanent...renewable and essentially inexhaustible sources of energy for sustained economic growth" in the long term.

BUT CARTER's budget calls for a reduction in solar energy expenditures of $16.3 million—from $389.9 million this year to $373.6 million next year. If the impact of inflation is considered, the budget slash amounts to $42 million.

The proposed figure represents only 3 per cent of the total Department of Energy budget, and it marks the first time solar research and development funds have been cut since the program became part of the federal budget. Carter plans to offer nuclear power 4 1/2 times as much financial support.

The possibility that solar power might some day become a major source of energy for an increasingly desperate nation and world has, of course, already been widely discussed.

But the "official line" promulgated by both the federal government and the commercial energy companies is that solar is not yet technologically advanced, commercially feasible or cost-effective enough to offer broad-scale benefits.

A COALITION of concerned citizens calling itself Solar Action is determined to do something about the lack of money, inspiration and enthusiasm for solar power by celebrating Sun Day on May 3.

Sun Day celebrations will take differing forms in scores of cities and rural communities throughout the country.

One group will climb to the peak of Cadillac Mountain in Maine (the spot where the sun first hits the U.S.) for a sunrise ceremony. In San Diego, there will be sunset church services.

The transition to the solar age could begin right now. "It's technically feasible, economically attractive and environmentally sound" says Solar Action.

All that's needed is a true national commitment to move ahead.

AN EDITORIAL:

It's Reform Time, Frank-ly

THE EXORBITANT amount of stationery and postage consumed by U.S. Rep. Bill D. Burleson, D-Mo., to promote his views on a relatively obscure issue ranks among the more outrageous examples in the seemingly endless saga of congressional abuse of the franking privilege.

Burleson's determined efforts to influence the outcome of a survey on Commodity Futures Trading Commission regulation of "forward contracting" frittered away 133,000 sheets of paper, 19,000 envelopes and $4,560 worth of postage—all paid for by the taxpayers.

FORWARD CONTRACTING is a financial transaction in which a farmer agrees to sell a broker or other buyer a specified amount of his crops at a certain time in the future for a set price.

The CFTC has resisted those suggestions for several years, but late last year Burleson and Rep. Henry L. Bollmon, R-Okla., persuaded the commission to lease a toll-free long distance telephone line that would enable farmers everywhere in the country to register their opinions on the issue.

In a crude effort to influence the outcome of that survey, Burleson authorized a mass printing of four pages of congressional testimony containing his views, the two-page CFTC press release announcing the telephone poll and a "Dear Farmer Friend" letter.

THE ENTIRE package went by first class mail, under Burleson's frank, to 19,000 constituents. But when the results were tabulated, the callers were overwhelmingly opposed to federal regulation—by a margin of more than 6 to 1.

Even more embarrassing for Burleson was the fact that only 41 of the calls came from the entire state of Missouri. In the unlikely event that all 41 were inspired by Burleson's mailing, it cost the public more than $111 per response, in postage costs alone.

Burleson, of course, is hardly alone in his abuse of the frank, and he differs from many of his colleagues on Capitol Hill only in his use of the "free" mailing privilege to promote a pet project rather than a re-election campaign.

MORE THAN four years ago, a civil suit was filed in a federal court in Washington seeking to have the franking privilege declared invalid on the grounds that it unfairly helps to perpetuate incumbency in Congress.

That case has yet to come to trial because the legislators have dragged their feet at every step of the proceedings, according to published reports.

In the interim, there have been phony "reforms" such as a Senate Ethics Committee ruling that a senators' name or the pronoun "I" can appear no more than five times on a page of material mailed out under his frank.

Meanwhile, the bill for franked mail is almost $65 million a year. Isn't it about time to require legislators to buy their own stamps if they insist upon cluttering up the mails with self-serving propaganda?

M. STANTON EVANS:

Left No Longer Senses 'Pulse' Of Electorate

WASHINGTON—There has been copious speculation in recent months about the rise of a "new conservatism" in American politics.

That notion received a test of sorts a few weeks back when Illinois Republican Rep. John B. Anderson was subjected to a vigorous primary challenge from conservative opponent Don Lyons.

Anderson, accused of straying from the conservative reservation, managed to survive—but only, it seems, with the aid of numerous cross-over votes in Democratic precincts.

NOW THE STRENGTH of the "new conservatism" is being submitted to another test, this time in New Jersey. Here the candidates are four-term U.S. Sen. Clifford Case, a mainstay of the liberal Republicans establishment, and conservative challenger Jeffrey Bell, a former staffer to presidential candidate Ronald Reagan and a youthful veteran of conservative causes.

When Bell declared his candidacy last year, not many observers gave him much of a chance.

Case has been an institution in New Jersey, seemingly impervious to challenge and thus receiving none.

Signs are, however, that Case's advancing years (he's 74), his insulation from political change and the steady plugging away of the articulate Bell have combined to turn the June 6 primary into an authentic contest.

BELL IS STILL the underdog, but the political analysts are beginning to say he could just pull it off.

"The fact that New Jersey is in the Northeast and has recently sent liberals to the House and Senate has misled many people from outside the state," says Bell.

"Actually, New Jersey has a record in national elections somewhat more conservative and Republican than average.

"In the five close presidential elections of this century, we went Republican four times, even though the country elected the Republican in just one of those five. This pattern held true in 1976."

In recent years, Bell contends, this latent conservatism has grown even stronger, putting Case's old-fangled New Deal liberalism increasingly out of touch.

"THE TYPICAL VOTER resents the amount of money that is being taken out of his paycheck," Bell says, "and that he's being put into higher tax brackets so that his real income declines despite an increase on paper.

"He resents the fact that by even standard it's far harder to buy a home, far harder to save or borrow money. He dislikes the debasement of education in his children's schools."

As evidence that Case has lost the pulses of the electorate, Bell notes that the ultra-liberal Americans for Democratic Action gave New Jersey's Republican senator a 90 percent rating for 1977, higher than liberal Democratic colleague Harrison Williams.

Bell faults his opponent for voting against the Republican tax-cut plan proposed by Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and Sen. William Roth of Delaware, and criticizes Case for his steadfast support of liberal programs in economics and education.

"WE NEED TO decentralize major functions of government," Bell concludes, "especially welfare and education. The more deeply Washington has gotten into these areas in recent years, the more ineffective our performance in these areas has become.

"As one of the pioneers of the federal role in education in this country and as a strong opponent of attempts to stop busing, racial quotas and full unionization of the teaching profession, Sen. Case has much to answer for in this area."

In short, the Senate contest in New Jersey is a head-on clash between conservative and liberal positions.

Bell still ranks as a long shot, but should he manage to unseat the venerable Case, the "new conservative" cause will take a quantum leap into the headlines.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Sky-High Stakes

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—Eastern Airlines plans for the purchase of 23 European wide-bodied airliners is a deal that not only delivers another stunning blow to the poor old American dollar but raises serious questions of U.S. industrial survival in the world of subsidized foreign exports.

The A-300 Airbus is an excellent plane, but that's not why Eastern is buying it.

Airbus Industries, a Western European combine, made an offer that Eastern chairman Frank Bormann could not refuse.

The price was right because Airbus Industrie is subsidized by the French government, one of its principal owners.

Although the Europeans cannot match the Americans in cost-efficient production of commercial airliners, they are spoon-fed government funds to compete in the world market.

In the case of the Eastern Airlines deal, the French taxpayer enables planes to be sold far below cost.

WHAT MAKES THIS dangerous for the U.S.—and the dollar—is its threat to aerospace exports, one of the last places where Uncle Sam still keeps his head above water in international trade.

This is not the ancient conflict between free trade and protectionism. Rather, the model of Japan, Inc., is being duplicated in Western Europe (France, Inc., in the Airbus deal). Here is a neo-mercantilist system against which American companies are helpless playing by Adam Smith's rules.

Typically, this overpowering problem has not been addressed at policymaking levels of the Carter administration. But almost by accident, it is coming to the attention of worried Congressmen.

A warning signal was sounded at-a House Banking subcommittee hearing March 17 by J. B. L. Pierce, treasurer of the Boeing Co.:

"WE CAN COMPETE with Airbus and the other European aircraft manufacturers on cost and technical merits, but we cannot compete with the national treasuries of France and Germany and other European countries."

Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, a 35-year-old freshman Republican with no aerospace interests in his district, took notice. That very day, Leach wrote the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Stephen Neal of North Carolina, urging a close look at Eastern's French connection:

"We could be witnessing the emergence of a kind of international trade warfare that has nothing to do with economic competition, but rather with the skill of individual governments to establish reverse trade barriers."

Leach, Neal and other Congressmen want to see the fine print of the Eastern deal—a closely guarded secret up to this point. Apart from details, however, the subsidy for each A-300 in the Eastern package is estimated at $10 million.

THE FRENCH SUBSIDY system is revealed by a 1976 French parliamentary report. The government "loan" of $366 million covers half of Airbus production, with repayment indefinitely halted at $2.5 million, or 0.7 per cent.

The report vigorously argues that France's aircraft industry "must be supported by the government."

While Boeing fired the warning signal on Capitol Hill, Lockheed Corp. faces more immediate damage. Eastern's new A-300 will replace Lockheed L-1011 jetliners, which will then go on the used plane market.

But the Airbus also competes with the Boeing 747 and McDonnell-Douglas DC-10. These three companies can and do offer subsidy plums to buyers, but cannot afford the French government's juicy level.

Those A-300 for Eastern are just the beginning. Similar subsidized deals with Allegheny and PSA (Pacific Southwest Airlines) are in the talking stage.

WHAT'S MORE, Airbus sales to U.S. carriers are the breakthrough for cutthroat competition against the Americans with Japan the next target. "The Europeans are pulling out all the stops to win sales in Japan," Aerospace Daily reported last week.

"Aside from normal commercial representation, the governments involved are applying strong pressure on the Japanese government."

The stakes are high. Last year's U.S. aerospace exports totalled $7.6 billion against $732 million in imports.

For commercial aircraft, the export surplus was $2.5 billion in 1977 (down from $3.1 billion in 1976).

ANDREW TULLY:

His Way No Way

WASHINGTON—Perhaps President Carter's staff is too young, too Georgian, too inexperienced. In any case, it too often displays a lack of both judgment and a sense of timing.

The latest example of this provincial juvenilism was the White House request to Congress to pass legislation authorizing the President to double the size of his top personal staff. It came at a time of growing protests over continuing increases in the cost of living and demands that the federal government cut back its spending.

Predictably, then, Carter was rapped on the knuckles. The House defeated his bill, 207 to 188, amid howls of glee from Republicans, who reminded their Democratic colleagues of Carter's campaign pledge to reduce the size of the White House staff.

IT DID THE White House no good to claim that Carter had trimmed his staff by 30 per cent—from 485 to 351 since he took office.

It did no good to argue that there were no immediate plans to increase the staff, that Carter wanted merely "flexibility" in the form of statutory authority to do so in the future if the need arose.

Opponents reasonably pointed out that when any government unit is given authority to grow bigger, it does.

There was the animal cunning of the administration in seeking passage of the bill. The bill was brought up under a procedure that prevented amendments in order to protect the size of the staff increase.

That procedure requires a two-thirds vote for passage, and is usually employed for minor legislation about which there is no controversy.

PHOOEY. THE BILL is big stuff. It would increase from 55 to 100 the number of positions on the President's personal staff at salary levels ranging from $42,500 to $57,500.

It also would authorize hiring unlimited employes below the $42,500 level, an unlimited number of "consultants," and staffs for the wives of the President and Vice President.

At this writing, Carter is still mulling over a cut in the proposed pay raise for government workers and military personnel from 6.5 per cent to 5.5 per cent. A one percent reduction is not enough, not from a President who promised to lower the cost of big government.

INSTEAD, IF IT'S Presidential example Carter is seeking, he could do no better than take the advice of Arthur Burns, who has retired from the chairmanship of the Federal Reserve Board.

Burns proposed a 50 per cent slash in any proposed federal pay raise, and urged Carter, Congress and all Presidential appointees to take a 10 per cent pay cut.

But no. Even as Carter was wandering around South America and Africa, savoring the cheers of the mobs, his little helpers were asking the taxpayers to stand still for legislation that would cost still more money to support the White House.

Love of God is important, but Jimmy Carter seems to have forgotten that Jesus did His preaching in the streets and the fields, not from million-dollar cathedrals, and all His helpers were unpaid volunteers.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

The ERA Dirty Doz

YOU WOULD BE amazed, if you could read my mail, at the evil things the Equal Rights Amendment would do to louse up the lives of ladies everywhere. About the only thing it hasn't been accused of is heating up inflation. (And, now that I've brought it up, just you wait...)

The gist of the angry letters (after my piece on how the backers of ERA plan to fight Phyllis Schlafly's don't-do-it campaign by pretending it isn't there) is that I:

(1) Don't know what I'm talking about;

(2) Haven't read the proposed 27th amendment; and

(3) Owe the opponents equal time.

And so, with some reluctance—because I tend to think ERA does mean equal opportunities and equal pay—I pass along the arguments on the other side. First though, so we'll all know what we're talking about (and to prove that I have read the amendment), let's review the actual wording:

SECTION 1. "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Section 2. "The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article."

Section 3. "This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

That's it. The whole bit. About as controversial, you might think, as motherhood and apple pie. You'd be wrong. It's the mothers and the apple-pie bakers who are most against it.

They contend ERA is unconstitutional, a "dangerous mess of political pottage," and a rip-off to women everywhere. Never mind what the words say, they warn, what they mean is dynamite.

Reading between the lines, they see, among others, the following "dirty dozen" consequences if ERA is ratified:

1. IT WILL LEGALIZE homosexual marriages. "What homosexuals and lesbians have failed to achieve at federal, state and local levels, they are planning to accomplish through ERA."

2. Husbands will no longer have to support their wives.

3. It is a big power-grab by the federal government to take over "jurisdiction of marriage, property rights, divorce, child custody and inheritance."

4. It will make women subject to military combat and warship duty. "Do you really want females fighting in foxholes...young girls tossing grenades at enemy guerrillas...teen-agers in the trenches?"

5. It will deprive women in industry of their legal protections against being involuntarily assigned to heavy lifting and dangerous men's jobs, and make them accept compulsory overtime.

6. IT WILL FORCE women to share public toilets with men.

7. It will give every woman the right to have an abortion at will.

8. It will compel the states to set up taxpayer-financed child-care centers for all children, regardless of need.

9. It will deprive women workers of extra coffee and lunch breaks and bigger restrooms with cots.

10. It's just "an old-fashioned power-grab, all dollied up with a fresh coat of ERA paint, using 'concern for women's rights' as the gimmick to set up a federal dictatorship."

11. It will require police departments to eliminate physical tests and to pass over qualified men so that women will be hired.

12. It will make the women of this country exactly like their sisters in the Soviet Union and Israel. "They will have to work side by side with men, digging ditches, fighting no-win wars, and turning their children over to the state while they work in mines and mills."

AND SO IT GOES. How they manage to draw all these interpretations from "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex" is something only they and Schlafly can explain.

It may not matter anyway. From all reports, it looks like ERA has had it. It still needs three more states to put it over, and there don't seem to be three cooperative legislatures on the horizon.

Then the Schlafly forces can go back to their mimeographs and take on the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972, the Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1974, the Educational Amendment of 1972 and the Civil Rights Act of 1974—all laws that were supposed to guarantee minorities (including women) equal cracks at jobs, salaries and education, but don't seem to.

Which is why ERA got started in the first place.

THREE PARTNERS put together a business firm that required one or another of them to be on the road alternately much of the time. When all three were in town, they decided, each would be a vice president.

But when any one of them was out on a sales trip, that one for the nonce would be the president. Theory was the top title would give leverage in negotiations.

Actually, though, it was their private joke, and they claimed it worked to let them keep on balanced good terms with one another.

Only one out of five murder victims is killed by somebody unknown to said victim. You see what this means, don't you? You're a lot safer hanging around with strangers.

Q. Where'd we get the word 'yankee'?

A. Argument continues over that. But some tracers of word origins contend it came from Jan Kees, a disparaging nickname the New York Dutch used in reference to Connecticut English.

Q. "When did the British government issue postage stamps with paid advertising on them?"

A. In 1881 and 1887. The ads were for Pear's soap were on the gummed sides.

Cotton Official Named

Solon C. Huff, who has been in the cotton business since 1937, was installed as president of the Lubbock Cotton Exchange here Tuesday night at the exchange's annual dinner party at the Hillcrest Country Club.

Huff, elevated from vice president, succeeds Doug Weinman. Randy Canale, who has been in the cotton business since 1965, is the new vice president.

About 200 members and guests attended the dinner party.

Reared on a farm in Mississippi, Huff attended Mississippi State College and came to Lubbock in 1951 with Anderson Clayton & Co. He established his own firm in 1960.

New directors of the exchange are George Clay, Jim Gant, Henry C. Patton, and Helmut Wierzba.

Other directors are J. B. Booth, Walter Grammer, James Murdhough and Weinman. Clyde Day is executive vice president.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

SENS. ROBERT DOLE, R-KAN., and Dick Clark, D-Iowa, have offered new bills aimed at boosting farm price supports.

Dole's measure provides for increasing the target price of 1978 crop wheat to $3.50 a bushel from the present $3.

Administration officials had said, in threatening a veto of broad farm legislation which was defeated in the House last week, that such a wheat target increase was the only step that President Carter might find acceptable.

The Clark measure provides for target price and loan rate increases for wheat and feed grains and a target price boost for cotton.

It calls for a target price of $3.50 and a loan rate of $2.50 for wheat, a corn target of $2.30 and a corn loan of $2.20, and a cotton target of 60 cents a pound.

BOTH DOLE AND CLARK ARE SAID TO HOPE to have the bills taken up Wednesday by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The new moves came shortly after the House soundly defeated a broad farm bill which Carter had pledged to veto if it passed. The vote was an unexpectedly one-sided 268-150.

The new Clark bill is similar to the one which House Agriculture Committee chairman Tom Foley, D-Wash., had tried unsuccessfully to get considered in place of the measure on which the House finally acted or to get it considered after the broad-based bill had been defeated.

Foley's figures were the same as Clark's for wheat and for the cotton target. The proposed spread between the target and loan on corn was wider in the Foley bill, $2.40 and $2.10, and his measure also set a 46-cent loan rate on cotton, up from the present base of 44 cents.

AN AIDE TO FOLEY SAID HE HAS NO serious plans to revive his proposal at this time, largely because he has received no indications that it would be safe from a veto.

But he said other members of the House panel are ready to submit new bills of their own.

Foley, he said, plans to hold a committee meeting this week to assess the situation in light of last week's vote and "see what can be salvaged."

While many members were pausing for that purpose after the stunning defeat of the Senate-passed emergency farm bill, Reuters reported from Washington that there was a widely held feeling that some more moderate bill to aid farmers still could be passed this year.

HOUSE BUDGET COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., who bitterly opposed the earlier bill, was quoted as having told reporters some help may be forthcoming. He said his panel's budget resolution has room to accommodate a "constructive initiative."

Under both the Dole and Clark bills, the affected targets would escalate in 1979, 1980 and 1981 in line with increasing farm production costs.

Neither contains land diversion features, as did the bill defeated last week. But farmers still would have to participate in existing set-aside programs in order to qualify for benefits.

Clark said that "about all we can do now, and about all that will have any hope of being in place in time to help this year, is a simple, straightforward increase in target prices and loan rates."

Dole noted he limited his bill to the wheat target because "this was the top target price level and the only change Secretary (of Agriculture Bob) Bergland could get approved."

Cattle Futures Finish Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures rebounded from early losses of 82 points to finish 42 points higher to 17 points lower on sales of 22,311 cars Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

August was off the most, with nearby April the strongest on a gain of 45 points.

The nearby finished on strength in cash cattle and beef and also on evening up ahead of today's cattle on feed report, which is expected to show increased placements. This would weigh on the deferreds. The nearby was the highest in one week.

Deliveries total 86 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 83½ to 84 cents a pound, highest since July 1975. The six markets expect 15,800 head today.

Cash cattle were steady to up $2, with the best top at $56 per hundredweight, highest since September 1975. The Omaha top was $55. Slaughter was 144,000 head.

Hog futures were lower except for an early gain of 10 points in October and slumped the limit of 150 points before ending 12 to 145 points lower. Nearby June was down the limit on total sales of 6,579 cars.

Much of the selling spilled over from Friday, with a limit loss in the belly pit also exerting pressure. Traders also noted heavy slaughter, which tended to offset reduced hog runs and higher prices as well as lack of deliveries.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures prices collapsed shortly before the close on the Chicago Board of Trade Monday, depressed by selling that stemmed from large-scale farmer sales of the commodity.

Analysts said that a sizeable pickup in farmer selling, which was attributed to improved prices, made local traders nervous about maintaining their positions.

As a result, speculators liquidated contracts in the final moments of trading and soybean prices plummeted about 15 cents in nearby contracts.

Meanwhile, wheat futures scored gains of more than 5 cents a bushel, aided by rumors that China may have bought some bread grain from Canada. A major grain exporter purchased large amounts in the wheat pit.

Corn prices finished unchanged to slightly higher.

An industry publication's forecast that European consumption of meal produced from oil seeds would be disappointingly low this year exerted pressure on soybean meal futures.

At the close, soybeans were 5¼ to 17¼ cents lower, with May contracts quoted at $7.21 a bushel; wheat was 4½ to 7 cents higher, May $3.26¾; corn was unchanged to 1 cent higher, May $2.60¼ and oats were 2½ to 3¾ cents higher, May $1.52½.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 25 cents a bale higher to $2.35 lower Monday.

Futures prices fell back from initial modest advances because traders took profits, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 131 points to 55.25 cents a pound Friday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading was slow Monday on the Lubbock cotton market.

Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was moderate. High Plains growers sold mixed lots at 750 to 1,100 points over loan rates.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations held steady. The base price of grade 41, staple 34, base micronaire, was quoted at 53.10 cents, up 50 points from a week ago.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Survivors include his wife, Clara; two sons, Clyde R., of Midland and James W. of Fort Worth; a daugher, Mrs. Doss Dunlop of Houston; six grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Chamber To Staff Information Booth

To keep city visitors from getting lost before they ever really set foot on Lubbock ground, volunteers of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Monday began staffing an information booth for incomers arriving at the Lubbock International Airport.

Ribbon cutting ceremonies for the booth, located in the passenger waiting area across from gate four at the airport, were conducted Monday.

"The people who will be working the booth will be there to answer questions about the community and to distribute chamber literature about Lubbock," said Mrs. Arnold Maeker, president of the chamber's women's division.

"We want to provide the businessmen and other visitors to the city with any information concerning the city they might need. We'll have maps there to help them locate business offices, hospitals, Texas Tech or any specific places."

The booth will be staffed initially by specially trained members of the Women's Division, but possibly later by chamber members.

Current plans call for the booth to be manned from 9 a.m. until noon and 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Police Complete Robbery Probe

At least one of the city's latest armed robberies can be scratched off the "unsolved" lists police decided Monday after arresting a 28-year-old drive-in restaurant attendant for making a false report.

Officers arrested the man about 12:30 p.m. Sunday at the 1806 Idalou Road restaurant that had reportedly been robbed by a young black man about 11 p.m. Saturday.

That arrest was made, reports indicated, after investigators posing the same questions kept getting different answers about how the incident occurred and what happened to the $63 reportedly taken.

An assortment of crimes occupied the remainder of Lubbock patrolmen's time.

Gilbert Sepeda of 305 Ave. U told officers someone took about $40 and several cans of beer from his automobile parked outside an 8th Street service station between 11:30 p.m. and midnight Saturday.

A 12-hour period at the weekend's close saw four men wounded in separate shooting incidents which reportedly included an armed robbery.

Late Monday, 42-year-old Lonnie Mondine of 1320 E. 17th St. remained in guarded condition in the Health Sciences Center Hospital, while 33-year-old Arturo Alvarado of 4320 Southeast Drive was in serious condition in the same hospital's intensive care unit.

In serious condition in Methodist Hospital were 51-year-old Leroy Adams of 410 Idalou Road with a gunshot wound to the chest and Rogerlio Rodriquez, 29, of 1905 15th St. who suffered a wound in the left side.

Shortly after 1 p.m. Sunday, police found Mondine lying on the porch of his house with his back against the wall. He had reportedly been shot three times.

Police also were looking for a two men who reportedly shot Alvarado during a robbery at his apartment about 9:30 p.m. Sunday.

Officers, who were flagged down by a neighbor, found him lying on a bed inside the door of the building. While ambulance attendants rushed the man to the hospital, another victim told police what had happened.

Isaias Torres, 17, who shares the apartment with Alvarado, said two unknown Mexican-American men came through the unlocked front door of the residence.

The intruders, he said, ordered them to raise their hands and to give them their money. According to reports, Alvarado was shot when he stood up, turned around and put his hand into his pocket.

The other bandit then reportedly took $20 from Alvarado's pocket and Torres handed over an additional $30.

With the sound of the shot, two other men who also share the apartment were awakened, and when they entered the room, the bandits ordered them to hand over their money as well. Torres said one handed over about $200 and the other gave an undetermined amount.

The bandits fled in an unknown direction.

About two hours later, police called to a house in the 800-block of David Avenue found Adams sitting on a couch. The victim, who had been shot in the chest, refused to give officers the name of his assailant, but a woman at the residence said he was wounded in the 3000-block of East Main treet.

About 1 a.m. Monday, Rodriquez walked into Mehodist Hospital's emergency room and told attendants he had a bullet in his side.

Reports indicated he arrived alone at the hospital and was unable to provide much information about how the wound occurred.

Ernest H. Perez of 2012 47th St. said he was out a total $916 after someone broke into his pickup parked at his home Saturday or Sunday.

Reportedly taken in the haul was $300 cash, a $350 diamond ring, a watch, calculator and CB radio.

According to Alice Jo Fortenberry of Route 9, Box 430J, Lubbock, whoever got into her car parked in the 6000-block of Slide Road Saturday night made off with a box containing antique mechanic's hand tools.

Sundown Trustees Schedule Meeting

SUNDOWN (Special) — School trustees will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in the school lunch room here to consider hiring a new attorney for the school system.

Board members voted to call the special session last Thursday after the current board attorney told members he could not advise them in dealings with the contracts of several school officials because of personal reasons.

At that meeting, board members had been scheduled to consider the contracts of Superintendent Dean King and Athleti Director Bill Dendy.

Trustees decided to table that item until a new attorney could be hired and also voted to drop consideration of Dendy's contract from the agenda.

King has come under fire in recent months for several items in his administration of the Sundown school system.

A burglar reportedly stole more than $500 worth of tools from Scott Machine and Tool at 2518 Erskine St. during the weekend. Reports indicated a dead-bolt lock was pried from a front door.

Mastermind Of Airlift Dies At 80

CHATHAM, Mass. (AP) — Gen. Lucius DuBignon Clay, the military man who cracked the Berlin blockade without a fight, will be returned to West Point on Friday for burial.

Clay died at his Cape Cod home late Sunday at age 80. He will be buried Friday at 2 p.m. EST at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., following a memorial service.

A great-grandnephew of Kentucky's Henry Clay and son of another U.S. Senator, Alexander Clay of Georgia, Clay supervised the post-war airlift of supplies to the blockaded city of Berlin in 1948 and 1949.

He also supervised development of the interstate highway system, and had been chairman of the board of General Motors, Allied Chemical and the Chase Manhattan Bank.

After graduating West Point in 1918, he served with the Army Corps of Engineers in Brazil, Panama and the Philippines. During World War II, he became an assistant to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

When a supply bottleneck at Cherbourg threatened to stall the Allied advance through France, Clay quickly got the materiel moving.

Clay then directed occupation policies, and President Harry Truman made him deputy military commander of Germany in 1946 and commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in Europe in 1947.

That set the stage for his most famous exploit — directing the airlift that outfoxed the Soviet Union without hostilities during the early tense years of the Cold War.

On April 1, 1948, in an effort to force England, France and the United States out of their sectors of Berlin, the Soviet Union blocked the land routes to Berlin from western Germany. Clay came up with a round-the-clock airlift that flew 2,343,315 tons of food and coal into the city. The blockade ended Sept. 30, 1949.

Later, Clay helped persuade Eisenhower to seek the 1952 Republican presidential nomination, and Clay became chairman of a committee that developed the Eisenhower administration's $50 billion interstate highway system.

In 1961, as tension again built over the status of Berlin — the Berlin Wall was about to go up — President John F. Kennedy sent Clay and Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson to the city.

Thousands of Berliners cried, "Clay, Clay," as Johnson and Clay rode in a motorcade. Mayor Willy Brandt hailed Clay as the man who had saved West Berlin. A few days later, Kennedy appointed Clay his personal troubleshooter in West Berlin at ambassador's rank.

When he learned of Clay's death, Brandt sent a telegram to U.S. Ambassador Walter Stoessel, calling Clay a "good friend to us for almost 30 years." Berlin's Christian Democratic Union party said postwar history — and Europe and Germany — would have been decisively different if Clay had backed down in 1948.

After retiring from the Army, Clay became a senior partner of Lehman Brothers, New York investment bankers, and an executive of other corporations. He retired from those posts in 1962, but until recently was an active consultant to The Continental Group, formerly the Continental Can Co., of which he had been chairman of the board.

His reputation in business proved useful in 1962, when Attorney General Robert Kennedy asked him to help obtain $2.9 million ransom so Cuba would release men captured at the Bay of Pigs. Clay got $1.9 million from one bank with just his signature as collateral.

Then, in 1963, a movement surfaced to draft Clay as the Republican presidential nominee. It did not succeed.

Clay, who had been born in Marietta, Ga., in 1897, also served as national chairman of the Crusade for Freedom, which established Radio Free Europe and Radio Free Asia.

With Clay at the time of his death were his wife, the former Marjorie McKeown, and two sons, Gen. Lucius D. Clay Jr., of the Air Force, and Army Maj. Gen. Frank B. Clay.

Fairground Fighting Leads To Arrests

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A Sunday brawl on the Howard County Fair Grounds here ended with police putting eight carnival workers behind bars and several Mexican-American residents being treated for minor injuries late Sunday.

The eight workers were arrested about 5:30 p.m. Sunday after five Mexican-American citizens told officers they were attacked at the State Fair Carnival by the fair workers about 12:30 a.m. Sunday.

Big Spring detective George Quintero said the incident apparently began when a worker taunted two Mexican-American youths as they walked through the carnival midway as the fair began to close.

After a few words were exchanged, Quintero said as many as 15 carnival workers joined in an assault on the two boys. The fight, though, spread across the fair grounds, eventually also injuring a 21-year-old woman and three other juveniles.

One victim claimed to have been held down by the workers while others cut him and burned his face with cigarettes. The woman said she was beaten with fists and a hammer.

Quintero said the victims came to the police department early Sunday but refused to file charges or seek medical treatment.

The five injured citizens, though, sought medical attention on their own and returned to file complaints, he said.

After warrants were issued by Justice of the Peace Bob West, the eight men were arrested and the carnival closed.

About 200 Mexican-American residents milled around outside the gates after the arrests, but the demonstration they staged remained peaceful until about 7:30 p.m.

Crime Fighting Plan Revealed

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Saying the same old answers and techniques no longer work, Lubbock criminal district attorney candidate John T. Montford Monday unveiled an eight-point plan designed to combat local crime.

"Over the last four years we have seen crime spread like a disease over Lubbock County," Montford told a group of about 75 supporters at the Koko Palace.

"It has threatened our loved ones and the sanctity of our homes," the candidate said while pledging an "all-out, aggressive" program to curb criminal activities.

As part of the program, Montford zeroed in on repeat offenders. He also proposed creation of a District Attorney's Advisory Commission, composed of citizens, as a sounding board if he is elected to office.

The local attorney, in his mid-30s, is opposing incumbent Alton Griffin in the May 6 Democratic primary. There are no GOP candidates, so the winner of next month's primary battle will assume the role of the county's top prosecutor.

Montford challenged Griffin in 1974 and lost.

Montford's eight-point plan includes:

— Denial of bail to repeat or multiple offenders.

"To defeat crime, we have got to strike at its heart," the candidate said, labeling repeat offenders as one of the top factors in the current crime rate.

"We will concentrate at first on a 30 percent category of known offenders,then we will expand."

Montford noted that a new state constitutional amendment, authorizing bail denial for persons accused of a felony who are on bond for an alleged prior felony and for persons convicted of a prior felony who are accused of using a deadly weapon in the commission of another crime, has been seldom used here.

—Increased use of habitual offender laws, which raise minimum punishments for persons with prior convictions.

—More stringent and consistent probation policies. "On Nov. 18, 1977, when five murder defendants received probated sentences, it probably did more to cause disrespect for the law than anything I can think of," Montford said.

—More consistency in handling juvenile offenders. Montford cited reports of drug problems in local schools and truancy as two problem areas which needed a closer look. "At this stage, more than any other, we must instill respect for the law," he said.

—Better cooperation among local law enforcement agencies and a solution to the current autopsy situation. Montford said he sees a need for greater utilization of forensic evidence, particularly in sex-related offenses.

—Installation of a centralized filing system for processing bad check cases.

—New administrative procedures. Montford proposed hiring a professional with a management background to help oversee office administration. "This will help free lawyers for the courtroom," he said.

—Establishment of the advisory commission to meet monthly with him if he is elected. "At times lawyers lose touch with the problems citizens are concerned with. This commission would be a sounding board of citizens who will say what they think," he said.

The only added cost entailed in the package would be for an office administrator, Montford promised.

The candidate scored his opponent for what he indicated were close ties with some older, established attorneys.

"My opponent says if Montford gets in, the office will turn into a training ground," he said.

"My opponent has a few well-known lawyers supporting him.

"Some, quite frankly, have built a bird's nest on the ground — they know if I get in, everyone is going to go to work."

Montford said after the 8 a.m. news conference that he feels, despite the age differential, he actually has more trial experience than Griffin, who has been the county's chief prosecutor for many years.

"I have participated in around 300 felony jury trials," Montford said.

Local pathologists have virtually quit doing autopsies, and law enforcement agencies have had to use out-of-town medical experts on major cases recently.

Montford said he thought the situation could be remedied with "a little attention and statesmanship."

EARLY EXPLORERS

Norwegian Vikings sailing out of Iceland and Greenland are credited by most scholars with being the first Europeans to discover America, with at least five voyages around 1000 A.D. to areas they called Helluland, Markland and Vinland — possibly Labrador, Nova Scotia or Newfoundland, and New England.

Health Funds Distribution Gets Okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court gave its stamp of legal approval Monday to the federal government's method of giving the states billions of dollars each year for health care.

Returning to the bench after a two-week recess, the court refused to hear a challenge from North Carolina, Nebraska and the American Medical Association aimed at cutting strings attached to the federal health-care dollars.

In other matters, the justices:

—Agreed in a case from Massachusetts to decide whether states may suspend driver's licenses of motorists stopped on drunken driving charges if they refuse to take breath analysis tests.

—Left untouched the order of a federal judge in Michigan that state authorities there pay unemployment benefits to all women seeking compensation for forced, unpaid maternity leaves. The controversial issue remains unresolved in virtually all other states, however.

—Let stand a ruling by the Rhode Island Supreme Court that sharply restricts the state's authority to regulate electric rates within the state. Monday's action could prove significant, even if temporarily, for all states in which power companies are forced to buy electricity from the interstate market.

—Agreed in a case from Texas to decide whether states may prohibit optometrists from doing business under corporate or trade names.

—Agreed to decide whether judges ever may base a convicted criminal defendant's probation on the defendant's ability to pay a fine. The Georgia Supreme Court says they may, but a federal appeals court in New Orleans says they may not.

—Rejected a constitutional challenge by the Miami Herald and the St. Petersburg Times newspapers to a federal judge's efforts to limit news coverage of former Sen. Edward Gurney's 1975 influence peddling trial in Florida.

English Actress Moves Into Hollywood Films

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — There was a time when women with different colored eyes were burned as witches, a state of affairs intolerable to actress Jane Seymour who has one definitely green eye and one very brown eye.

The brown right eye is larger than the green left one and more almond-shaped as well. Both are lovely.

The general configuration of Jane's features, once one is accustomed to her unmatched eyes, is more than pleasing. She is an outright beauty and while Jane's eyes are bewitching, the only witchcraft she practices is on the screen.

Jane displays her charms and talent currently in the BPS "Masterpiece Theatre" sevenpart series based on Charles Dickens' classic, "Our Mutual Friend."

A native of England, Jane starred in the series three years ago in London for the BBC. It is only now getting around to the United States.

Jane preceded "Our Mutual Friend" to this country by a full year. She immigrated to Hollywood two years ago when, after a dozen years as a singer, dancer and actress, she despaired of ever become a movie star in England.

Leaving her native land took a bit of courage. It meant abandoning a thriving career on British stage, television and radio. It also meant separating from her husband, an English businessman from whom she is being divorced.

"I didn't have a job waiting for me in Hollywood," Jane said the other day at Universal Studios. "I had no agent either. My English agent said he wouldn't handle my business affairs if I left London.

"It was an enormous gamble but one I had to take if I wanted to become a film star in the United States. There are a good many repertory groups throughout England, and there are some wonderful things being done on television, but not enough of them.

"When it comes to movies, they simply aren't being made in England except in coproductions with Hollywood financing. When such a film is made, the casting is generally done in Hollywood. So this was the place for me to be.

"Essentially, I came here because I had faith in myself as an actress. What I had to offer for films was more pertinent in Hollywood than in London."

Jane's self-assurance is no pose. She is tremendously poised for a woman of some 26 or 27 years and splendidly educated. She is a trained ballet dancer and an accomplished singer.

She is also something of a linguist, fluent in Dutch (she is part Dutch) and French. More importantly, Jane has an educated ear. She forced herself to speak AmericanEnglish in American patois and idiom.

"It was absolutely neccessary for me to master AmericanEnglish," Jane said. "It's all but impossible to play Englishwomen and work steadily in Hollywood projects. When they want an English actress, they send off to England anyway.

"No other contempoary English actress except Vivien Leigh has been able to convincingly play American women. Not even Jacquiline Bisset.

"I managed to lose my English accent easily. It was either lose it or not work. Now I use an American accent at every opportunity. It is more pleasing to my ear. It's lower in register. Less shrill. I can do a New York accent rather well and a Bostonian accent is quite easy for anyone born in England.

"I learned to speak like a midwesterner when I did the TV movie, 'The Awakening Land.' And now I find that I have sort of a mid-Atlantic accent in my normal speech, not quite American, not quite British."

PEOPLE — PLACES — THINGS

BUSSING A BEAR — This may seem a pretty grisly way of showing you care for your furry friends, but it's Dan Haggerty's way of displaying the close rapport he has with Ben, his pal and co-star on "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams." Haggerty is the 1978 Be Kind to Animals Week chairman, carrying on a tradition which began in 1915. If you have a little critter you'd like to give an extra pat to, May 7-13 is the week to do it, and to show some extra kindness to all living things. (NEA Photo)

Locked Up For Laughs

Ronald Coleman didn't find much humor in "The Prisoner of Zenda," when he starred in it 1937, but now Peter Sellers will try to play the dual roles for laughs in a comedy re-make of Ruritanian swashbuckler.

Filming is scheduled to begin in early June on the picture, which will be at least the fourth going-over the classic Anthony Hope novel has received. The last time "Zenda" was given a lighter side was in a spoof segment of "The Great Race."

Cellmate Has Style

Convicted Watergate Conspirator John Mitchell got a good grade in convict congeniality recently. According to Richard Rasco, a fellow inmate of the federal prison at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama, Mitchell "is sure a man who doesn't hold his nose up and think he is better than anybody else in prison."

While Mitchell helped other convicts with their legal problems, according to Rasco, prison was appearently a lonely place for the former U.S. attorney general.

"I never knew him to have a visitor, but every night he made a telephone call at 8," says the recently released Rasco. "I don't know who he talked to, but he once said he spoke to Nixon and Kissinger at least once a week."

Mitchell was released on medical furlough Dec. 28, and is due back at the minimum security prison this month.

Burns Gets An Easy Role

George Burns will try to keep his successful track record going in movies with "Uncle Bill and the Queen of Hollywood," set to begin shooting in the spring.

The part should be an easy one for Burns. He'll play an ex-vandevillain and radio personality who befriends a runaway 14-year-old girl. The part should be an easy one for Burns since it was in vaudeville that he first made his mark. Jodie Foster is being talked about for the runaway role.

This will only be the 82-year-old Burns fourth major film. He won an Oscar his first big time at bat playing another ex-vaudevillain in "The Sunshine Boys" and can currently be seen as the title character in the box-office smash "Oh, God." He also just completed a role in the musical "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

Actress Enters Business

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — "You know, for years the studios and the press agents projected an image of me as the dumb blonde," says Mamie Van Doren. "This is the other side of me."

Miss Van Doren, who appeared in a string of films such as "High School Confidential" and "Untamed Youth," has opened an antique shop here.

Married thrice — to musician Ray Anthony, baseball player Lee Meyers and oil man Ross A. McClintock, the 44-year-old one-time sex symbol says she doesn't rule out doing it again.

But for now, she's happy with her new business and an occasional nightclub appearance abroad.

"The men are dazzled by well-endowed blondes" in Asia, she noted.

And if there's any doubt about her endowment, Miss Van Doren adds:

"I don't mean it to be cruel, but we call a lot of those silicone ladies the 'bionic women,' sort of created in the laboratory. I come from good Swedish stock and I never needed any outside help."

TEXAS-STYLE OPENING — The fireworks display lighting the sky behind Reunion Tower in downtown Dallas Saturday night was part of an opening day celebration. The geodesic dome contains an observation deck, lounge and restaurant that is entered by elevator rising up the center shaft. The dome is part of a $75 million project that includes a 1,000-room hotel, offices and shopping mall.(AP Laserphoto)

West Germans Braced For Reaction To TV Film

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The West German government, sensitive of its image abroad, finds the television film "Holocaust" and other portrayals of the Nazi era deeply embarrassing. But officials realize they can do little about them except try to stem any anti-German tide.

"This is part of our history, a dark part. There's no sense denying it," said one German official as he thumbed a copy of Gerald Green's book, based on the four-part series he wrote for NBC-TV.

"Years ago we discussed whether there was anything we could do about anti-German films on late shows in the States," he added. "Finally we decided there was nothing."

The influential liberal West German newsmagazine Der Spiegel said West German diplomats in the United States feared the series might lead to "a new anti-German wave" among Americans influenced by the film.

Government sources told The Associated Press that information officers at West German embassies in Washington and elsewhere were briefed on how to respond to questions that may arise from the four episodes.

"We're not really afraid of an anti-German wave as a result of this series," said an official, who asked not to be identified because of his position. "If it had been produced 10 years ago, well perhaps."

Throughout its 29-year history, West Germany has sought to distance itself from the Nazi era and has paid millions in compensation to concentration camp victims, most of them now living in Israel. East Germany has refused to pay individual claims.

A recent public opinion poll by the German magazine Quick found that more than 90 percent of the West German people wanted to forget the Nazi past and hoped the rest of the world would as well. Another poll showed a surprising number of young Germans had never heard of Hitler.

Critics of the Bonn government note that former Nazis have risen to influential posts within West German society, including former Chancellor Kurt Kiesinger and Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of a powerful business association who was killed in a terrorist kidnapping.

In a letter made public by the ruling Social Democrat party last August, former Chancellor Willy Brandt warned his successor Helmut Schmidt of a growth of neo-Nazism in West Germany. Much of the ultra-right extremism is based in groups of World War II veterans and rightist worker groups called "comradeship federations."

Some West German newspapers and magazines published accounts of the "Holocaust" series depicting the plight of Jews in Hitler-dominated Europe before and after World War II. The first episode scored ratings in three key cities — Los Angeles, Chicago and New York — substantially lower than those for the landmark series "Roots."

Der Spiegel noted that the series is sometimes painfully accurate, but faults the film because it does not tell viewers about modern West Germany "which abhors the cruelty of the past and which may in no way be compared with the Nazi Germany of Adolf Hitler."

The Bonn newspaper General-Anzeiger, in a dispatch from Washington entitled "Concentration Camp Horror Between Commercials," accused NBC of detailing the period's brutality so its series would be a hit.

"The television company is in the relentless competition of the 'big three,' in last place in public esteem," the newspaper said.

In Canada, the leader of a German-Canadian group called "Concerned Parents of German Descent" protested the television showing of "Holocaust," saying it was a vehicle for Zionist propaganda.

Ernst Zundel and 30 others demonstrated Sunday outside the office of The Toronto Sun which has been carrying excerpts from Green's book and at a local bookstore where the book was being sold. In Hamilton, 12 persons picketed outside a Canadian television station airing the film.

Some 4,700 West Germans are still under investigation for war crimes, including 14 persons standing trial in Duesseldorf in what may be the country's last major war crimes proceeding. The trial, underway for 28 months, has drawn little attention in the German news media.

Jerry Reed Slates Six Flags Concerts

ARLINGTON (Special) — Jerry Reed, acclaimed as one of the country's most talented and versatile entertainers, Saturday will present two concerts at Six Flags Over Texas.

Reed is known best for his three country hits, "Amos Moses," "When You're Hot, You're Hot" and "East Bound and Down," theme song from the movie "Smokey and the Bandit."

Not only a singer, Reed is also an accomplished songwriter, comedian, actor and guitarist. He first came to broad national attention as a regular televison guest star on "The Glen Campbell Goodtime Hour." In 1972, he hosted his own summer variety show and was honored with a Grammy Award as Top Country Vocalist.

Reed has written almost 300 songs, including hits for some of the biggest names in the industry. His songs have been recorded by such artists as Johnny Cash, Elvis Presley, Tom Jones, Engelbert Humperdink and Glen Campbell.

Movie audiences were first exposed to Reed in "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings," which starred Burt Reynolds. He also appeared with Reynolds in "Gator," and most recently in "Smokey and the Bandit."

Reed will entertain Six Flags' guests in concerts at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. in the Music Mill Theater. The theme park will be open from 10 a.m. until midnight.

Rhodesia Talks Plea Rejected

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen failed Monday to win Rhodesian agreement to negotiate with guerrilla leaders despite their warning that refusal could bring the Soviet and Cuba into Rhodesia's guerrilla war.

Prime Minister Ian Smith, asked after more than five hours of talks if Vance and Owen had convinced him of the benefits of a conference between the current Rhodesian government and the Patriotic Front guerrillas, replied: "I doubt it."

Noisy Demonstrations Erupt

Vance and Owen were twice greeted by noisy demonstrations as they entered and left the site of the talks on the outskirts of the city. Some of the whites in a crowd of 3,000 shouted "go home!" Two white women threw coins at Owen's car and shouted "Judas! Judas!" before they were led away by police.

British sources said the Anglo-American team warned of the danger of greater Soviet and Cuban involvement and said the Rhodesian leaders appeared to begin to appreciate the danger that the conflict could become internationalized.

But the Rhodesian leaders replied that they believe the war, which has claimed more than 10,000 lives, would wind down and that the guerrillas would lay down their arms as a result of the "internal" settlement that brought blacks into a transitional government.

Vance Goes To Cairo

Vance and Owen left Salisbury in separate planes. Vance flew to Cairo for a refueling stop and was to be met by Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel, before proceeding to SALT talks in Moscow. Owen's plane was to refuel in Khartoum, Sudan, on his return to London.

On the way to Rhodesia from the South African capital of Pretoria earlier Monday, a senior official aboard Vance's plane said the secretary would be satisfied if he left Rhodesia with anything other than a flat no on the idea of a new conference.

"We shall continue to work to give all the help we can to trying to find a peaceful solution to the problem of Rhodesia," Vance said after the meeting.

The original Anglo-American plan had been to convene an all-party conference attended both by the "internal" agreement parties and the Patriotic Front April 25 or 26. Vance indicated the target date would not be met, he said:

"The Rhodesians have indicated to us that they wished to take time to reflect seriously upon our proposals. I think that is a fair and proper suggestion on their part."

Owen, who stood beside Vance before a battery of microphones on the lawn of the civil servants' training center where the talks were held, said that what was proposed was "round-table talks at which all the parties could come without precondition."

Object Of Meeting

The object of such a meeting, he said, would be a cease-fire in the escalating guerrilla war, free general elections and the creation of an independent Zimbabwe recognized by the international community.

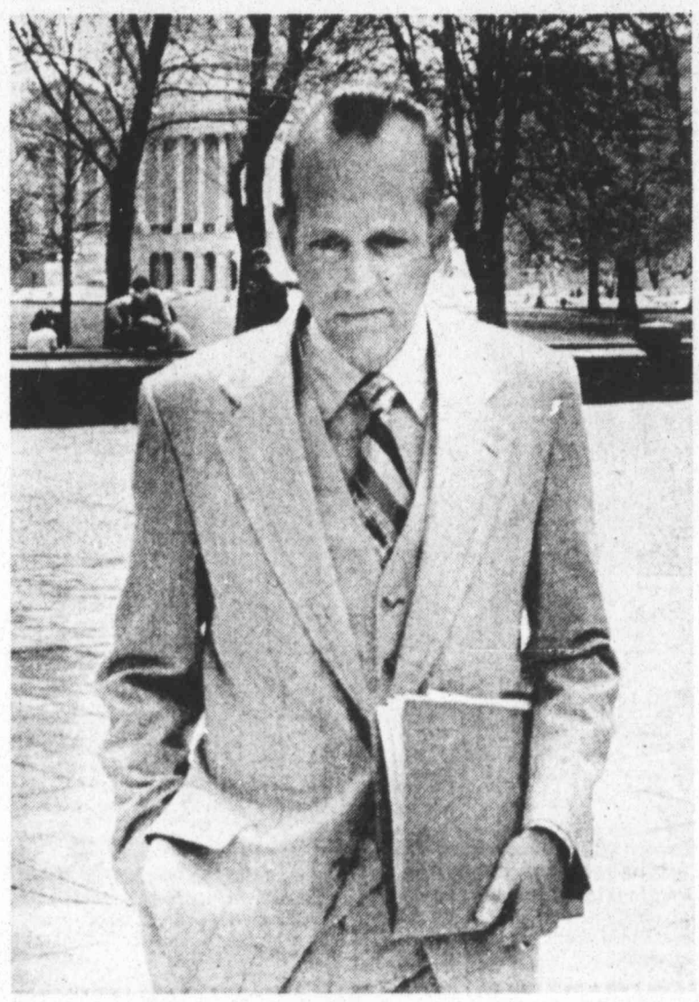
Vance and Owen see their mission to South Africa and Rhodesia as a last-ditch effort to prevent a general civil war in southern Africa. They warned that the alternative would be a wider war that could spread to Zambia or Mozambique and would certainly tempt the Cubans and the Soviets to enter the conflict.

They met Saturday in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, with Patriotic Front leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo and were dismayed to hear a demand that the Front have a two-thirds majority in any new Rhodesian government.

They talked with South African Foreign Minister Roelof Botha in Pretoria on Sunday but failed to win his acceptance of freedom for Nambibia, the former German colony which is ruled by South Africa as South West Africa.

"I think it has been a useful trip," Vance said. "I think progress has been made during the trip. But the road ahead is a very difficult one and...none of us underestimate those difficulties."

The Salisbury talks were with Smith and the three black leaders of the present transitional government — Bishop Muzorewa, Jeremiah Chivru and Ndabiningi Sithole. The black members are scheduled to assume full power at the end of 1978.



SENATOR CONSIDERS—Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., walks toward the Dirksen Senate Office Buiilding in Washington Monday. The issue of ratification of the second Panama Canal treaty may hinge on the success of Senate leaders in convincing DeConcini that a compromise proposal offered by Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., preserves the U.S. right to keep the waterway open. (AP Laserphoto)

Botulism's Source Believed Traced To Potato Salad

paralysis and relying on artificial respiration.

No deaths have been reported in connection with the suspected botulism outbreak, reportedly one of the largest in this century.

In Dallas, FDA spokesman Jerry Henderson said analyses of some 50 foods and components served at the restaurant will not reveal conclusive results until Friday.

Henderson said two of the hospitalized cases had been confirmed as victims of "type A" botulism, a potentially life threatening toxin typically found in canned foods where certain bacteria or their spores have not been eliminated by processing.

FDA officials originally thought a commercial bean salad canned in the Midwest was the source of the sickness, but prelimiary tests results indicated otherwise.

"The injection of the bean salad into mice has not caused any symptoms. But sometimes, if the botulism is present at low levels, it takes more time. It didn't come ringing through like gangbusters," he said Monday. "We can't rule it out though; it requires 72 hours to make a definite statement that botulism is not present."

Six Botulism Types

Henderson said there are six types of botulism, with slight chemical differences between them, but all are deadly.

"There is nothing that we can advise the public of because we simply don't know the causative agent at this time," he said. "We're lucky it was a private club where people signed their names because tracking possible victims was relatively simple."

An estimated 400 persons thought to have eaten at the Clovis restaurant between April 9 and Thursday have been contacted, he added.

The number of persons stricken with botulism was revised downward from 32 to 31 Monday. Dr. Mann said a person who showed symptoms of the poisoning Sunday had only a light illness. He said officials are counting only strong cases.

"No new cases have been reported in the past 48 hours, and I'm hopeful the outbreak may be coming to an end," Dr. Mann said. "It's really an hour by hour thing, but we're getting optimistic."

However, health officers said they are prepared if more cases arise.

State and federal officials remained in Clovis with vials of botulism anti-toxin, airlifted in Sunday from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., should new cases be reported.

Military airplanes also were standing by to evacuate new patients to intensive care units in other parts of New Mexico and West Texas.

The outbreak of botulism, a disease which has a 30 percent mortality rate, was one of the worst in the state's history.

'Holocaust' Tops Day's TV Viewing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first episode of NBC's "Holocaust," a dramatization of Nazi atrocities against the Jews in World War II, outdistanced the other networks in three major cities Sunday but fell short of the viewing records set by ABC's "Roots."

Almost half of all the viewers in New York and slightly less in Chicago and Los Angeles watched the first of four consecutive nightly chapters of the miniseries, according to early Nielsen ratings.

NBC officials had no immediate comment on the initial ratings.

Praise, Complaints Split

The network reported that telephone calls it received in New York and Los Angeles were almost evenly split between praise and complaints. New York had 388 favorable calls and 368 complaints. Los Angeles had 122 favorable calls and 111 complaints, plus another 214 protesting the number of commercial interruptions.

Ten uniformed American Nazis and about 25 civilian sympathizers marched in protest against the series Sunday outside NBC's suburban Burbank headquarters. In New York, about 20 persons identified as belonging to the Ridgewood group of Queens, composed of German-Americans, demonstrated outside NBC's main offices. They carried placards saying "NBC is Anti-Christian." Demonstrations in both cities were without incident.

Plane Tows Banner

A small plane flew over Dodger Stadium during a baseball game in Los Angeles Sunday, towing a banner reading, "Holocaust is a hoax."

In Miami, concentration camp survivors Gerhard and Ursula Maschkowski watched the first chapter at home and relived the nightmare of almost 40 years ago. Afterward, they fell silent until Mrs. Maschkowski said, "It can't happen again. People can't be like that again in one lifetime. I don't think ...."

In Skokie, Ill., Erna Gans also again felt the terror. She said, "Finally people are recognizing the importance of knowledge and what happened during the Holocaust. And instead of silence they're now talking about it, learning about it and maybe will have a lesson from history, instead of forgetting about history."

upstairs room in the north side of the building because firemen found the most intense cell of flames there.

Within minutes after the department's six units arrived, the structure's roof began sagging, virtually ensuring a total loss.

Firemen were hindered in their efforts to control the blaze by protective window coverings designed to keep intruders out of the facility, and eventually were forced to break through the wire devices to enter the building.

Mrs. Marian said the facility was part of the Texas Migrant Council's Headstart program for three, four and five-year-old children in East Lubbock. Where the youngsters would meet today had not been determined late Monday.

Hospital Gift Clears Way For Transplants

Approximately 300 of them are in the South Plains area.

"That means there are now 300 local potential recipients of a kidney transplant. And every year there will be approximately 100 more in the area with kidney failure," Lawton said.

The transport unit has two components — a pump oxygenator and a heat exchanger. The oxygenator pumps the kidney with plasma, albumin or plasmanate and the heat exchanger keeps the kidney at five to seven degrees centigrade — the necessary elements to preserve the organ awaiting transplant.

When implemented, hospital officials say, the kidney transplant program will return many patients to a normal lifestyle and eliminate their dependence on regular kidney dialysis treatments. These treatments can take up to six hours each time and must be performed two to three weekly to eliminate the fluids collected in the body.

There are 55 patients receiving out-patient dialysis at the South Plains Dialysis Center in Lubbock. The Health Sciences Center Hospital performs only in-patient kidney dialysis in a unit located adjacent to the medical intensive care beds.

The telephone employees' club bought the transport unIt through the Texas Panhandle Kidney Foundation. The foundation is based in Amarillo but plans to open an office soon in Lubbock.

The Health Sciences Center Hospital Monday also received another donation — $400 from the Quaker Heights Homeowners Association for the facility's neonatal intensive care-unit.

Truck Accident Spills Propane

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A brake failure sent a tanker truck carrying 800 gallons of liquid propane into a ditch where it overturned Monday, forcing the evacuation of nearly 600 residents and 4,311 pupils from four nearby schools, police said.

The truck driver, David Dorland, 33, of Tampa, was pinned for awhile in the cab, but rescue workers freed him and he was hospitalized in good condition.

Emergency crews worked more than 3½ hours to level the ditch with heavy equipment and hoist the truck to an upright position so it could be towed to Northern Propane Gas Co.

Tampa Electric Co. shut off power in the residential area as Hillsborough County sheriff's deputies and Civil Defense workers evacuated four blocks surrounding the site and the four schools which were about one-half mile away from the accident scene.

Liquid propane is not necessarily lethal to breathe, officials said.

the petition says, the co-op will be "deprived of its legal exclusive right to provide retail electric utility service" in the area. The co-op also could lose customers if LP&L expands, the suit alleges.

In its recent case involving the co-op and PUC certification, the city contended that it has an inherent right to offer service to its residents.

The city council also has decided in the past to purposefully forego application for service certification in a challenge to PUC authority to decide which power companies can serve designated areas.

The PUC sidestepped the issue of whether a city is obligated to offer its citizens service by certifying LP&L, which did not request authorization. At the same time the commission continued the co-op's right to serve the area.

The co-op and Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS), which was denied certification, appealed the PUC decision. A state district court judge upheld the PUC's denial of SPS certification but agreed with the co-op that LP &L should apply formally for authorization.

Panama Students Pelt U.S. Embassy

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Anti-treaty demonstrators hurled bottles of paint at the U.S. Embassy and were scattered by club-swinging national guardsmen on Monday — the eve of the decisive U.S. Senate vote on the Panama Canal treaties.

Panamanians and American residents of the Canal Zone tuned their radios to the wind-up of the Senate debate on the treaties that would turn the waterway over to Panama by the year 2000.

The U.S. Southern Command radio station broadcast warnings Monday telling Canal Zone residents that "persons who must travel into Panama City shoud be alert to avoid crowds."

Foreign Minister Nicolas Gonzalez Revilla appealed for "total unity" of the Panamanian people regardless of the way the Senate votes.

Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos, in an interview with ABC news reporter Barbara Walters, was asked about the reservation by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz, that gives the United States the right to intervene to keep the canal open even$after 2000.

Torrijos, who has refrained from making public statements during the Senate debate, told her, "this is visibly disgusting. I am visibly offended." In the intervew broadcast Monday night, Torrijos also said if the DeConcini reservation wasn't softened or abolished "then this would place us in a very difficult position of unpredictable consequences."

'Dignified' Compromise

But the intervew was held before DeConcini agreed during Senate negotiations Monday to a compromise that would "reaffirm" the U.S. policy against intervention. The Panamanian ambassador to Washington, Gabriel Lewis, reportedly called the compromise "a dignified solution to a difficult problem."

About 100 University of Panama students rallied outside the U.S. Embassy shouting anti-American slogans. They pelted the building with soft drink bottles filled with red, white and blue paint — the national colors of Panama as well as the United States.

Some 30 Panamanian national guardsmen stationed outside the embassy moved forward, tossing tear gas grenades and swinging truncheons. The protesters quickly dispersed.

Coaxing Unsuccessful

The march on the embassy was organized at the university's law school. Protest leaders, using loudspeakers, tried unsuccessfully to coax other students out of classes for the demonstration.

Anti-treaty youths plan another rally for Tuesday evening in a downtown park to coincide with the scheduled Senate vote in Washington.

Students have been among the most vocal opponents of the treaties, contending the canal should be turned over to Panama immediately and without any strings attached.

The government had ordered an unusual three-week delay in the opening of the 1978 school term until Monday, fearing the Senate debate might trigger protest demonstrations.

1964 Clashes

In 1964, clashes between anti-American Panamanian students and U.S. forces in the Canal Zone took 24 lives and led to the long negotiations that produced the proposed canal treaties.

A spokeman for the Panama Canal Co., which operates the waterway, said he had no indications of impending violence if the treaties are rejected. But he said forces in the zone were prepared "for any eventuality."

N-Waste Site Plan Grows 'Hot'

By CARROL W. CAGLE
A-J Correspondent

SANTA FE — The Carter Administration has been busily trying to see if New Mexico would be a good place for — and would accept — a nuclear waste depository. But now it may have to bring Texas officials and citizens in on the process as well.

The U.S. Department of Energy has pinpointed geologic salt formations near Carlsbad as being potentially a safe site for burial of rasdioactive materials created by use of nuclear reactors and the nation's weapons program.

The proposal has developed into a major issue in New Mexico.

It has proponents, including some of the leaders of the Carlsbad business and political community. But it has vocal opponents as well, including some local citizens and statewide environmental groups.

A number of political figures have done their best to duck the issue entirely for the time being because the subject produces intense feelings on both sides. State government hasn't devised any mechanism for saying "yes" or "no" on the final issue, or letting New Mexicans vote on it, if federal officials finally decide the salt beds would be a good place for geologic and technical reasons.

But the administration in Washington is actively pushing ahead with the issue, thus forcing the hand of some who would just as soon ignore the subject.

John O'Leary, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Energy who once headed the New Mexico energy program, has been spending a lot of time in the state, along with a large contingent of aides and top DOE officials.

O'Leary says the plan is in the early study stages now and that "will not do it if it can't be done safely."

He says the Carter Administration is the first to try to come to grips with the difficult subject of what to do with nuclear waste — even though nuclear power has been around 30 years and the "hot" material has been collecting from reactors and bomb development for that long.

O'Leary's collegue, John Deutch, director of the department's Office of Energy, oversaw preparations of a report which stated:

"A majority of independent technical experts have concluded that high-level waste can be safely disposed of in geologic formations."

Some Carlsbad leaders believe enough precautions will be taken so that their community in southeastern New Mexico is not subjected to hazard, now or in the thousands of years to come.

Mayor Walter Gerrells testified at a federal hearing: "We would look with favor on the project as a pilot if tests and studies show no harm to the environment or our citizens." He noted that a wide range of other community organizations shared this judgment, and added that the nuclear wastes do exist and have to be dealt with.

"The problem is not going to go away," he said. "We have to solve it sooner or later."

But the proposal also has strong opposition, including some who say they think the project is called a "pilot" but will inevitably become operational if the Federal department gets a legal foot in the door.

And at the Carlsbad hearing, a representative of the Texas attorney general's office noted the proposed site is close to Texas on both the south and east. We suggested the administration should hold hearings in Texas as well — which would broaden the possibily delay the process further.

State Panel Okays Jail Plans

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Texas Jail Standards Commission has given tentative approval to plans for a new Lubbock County Jail, and architects are moving full speed to advertise for bids on the possible $4 million project in early May.

"They reviewed the drawings and were very complimentary of the work that we had done," said Edwin Stephens of Maeker and Stephens architectural engineering firm in Lubbock. "There were no significant changes. The only thing we were asked to do was put in floor drains in the holding cell area."

Stephens and his partner, Arnold Maeker, now will await a formal letter from the state agency on the plans.

The county will start taking bids if the letter, which is expected within about 10 days, does not require any additional major changes and when the remaining drawings for contractors to base bids on are completed.

Maeker said Monday that May 25 is the target date for the bids to be opened.

Contractors will bid on two alternatives in addition to the full 58,000-square-foot, one-level project east of the existing county jail.

One is to leave off structural support for a second level in the future; the other is to leave a shell in one of the three 90-inmate areas of the jail.

The purpose of the alternatives is to reduce the cost if the full price is more than the county commissioners think the county can afford.

If the full project goes through, there will be the three 90-man areas broken down into 45-man cell blocks of 16 one-man cells, two six-man cells, two eight-man cells and six day rooms.

There will also be a 65-man holding area to bring the jail capacity to 335.

Gary McGrew, Lubbock County Jail administrator, said Monday that the jail had an average of 152 inmates a day in March.

McGrew, Stephens and Maeker went to Austin Friday to go over blueprints with Bob Viterna, assistant to Director Guy Van Cleave of the jail standards commission.

Lubbock County commissioners approved the plans last Monday.

Petroleum Group Schedules Meet

HOBBS, N.M. (Special) -The Southeastern New Mexico Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute has scheduled a meeting at 6:30 p.m. today at the Hobbs Country Club.

Kenneth S. Barnhill Jr. of Gulf Minerals Resources Co. will speak to the group about a New Mexico uranium project.

Barnhill holds a B.S. degree in chemical engineering from New Mexoco State University. He is a member of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

All persons involved in the oil industry and related businesses have been invited to attend the meeting, with API memberships not required, according to the chapter.

Tickets, which will be available at the door, are $4 each.

Magistrate Raps Chaplin Story

CORSIER-SUR-VEVEY, Switzerland (AP) — The magistrate investigating the Charlie Chaplin body-snatching case denied as "absolutely untrue" an American newspaper report Monday that the comedian's wife was informed by the kidnappers weeks ago where the body was hidden.

"Oona Chaplin is and always has been in complete collaboration wih us. If she knew where the body was, she would certainly inform us," said Jean-Daniel Tenthorey, the Swiss magistrate leading the search.

The Los Angeles Herald Examiner quoted a source close to the family as saying Chaplin's body was stolen from his grave in the cemetery of this small Lake Geneva village as "strictly a matter of religion."

James Bacon, a Hollywood reporter for the newspaper, said non-Jewish families whose relatives were buried in the cemetery opposed the presence of Chaplin's body and removed it. Chaplin, who would have been 89 on Sunday, was of Jewish origin but supported the Church of England.

Board Members Disagree On Bus System Costs

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Transit Advisory Board members agreed by consensus Monday that they will have to convince the city council that Lubbock's bus system always will be a money-losing operation.

That opinion, expressed most strongly by board members Bill Dean and Joe Phillips, was voiced as a preview to a planned session with the council next month and in disagreement with another board member's belief that the bus system should be self-sustaining.

In a letter to his board colleagues and city staffers, John Kreiger said he believes the transit operation should break even on costs and that passengers should pay a high enough fare to ensure it. Exceptions he noted are the disabled, elderly or persons needing transportation to welfare assistance.

Kreiger added that if the "general bus-riding populace objected to a business-like fare, the transit system should be tailored to a city-sustained service functioning with compassion to serve those who truly need such transportation and can afford none other."

Phillips, Dean and former chairman Milt Smith took exception to that viewpoint, indicating they do not believe it is realistic to believe the system can become self-supporting.

They said they will attempt to convince the council members of that next month when the board presents to the council a staff technical study detailing the system and recommendations to approve it. The board previewed an outline of the study Monday and will consider adopting the complete version in May.

The transit system in the past has come under fire by council members, who believe the tax subsidy of the operation is too high. Last fiscal year's deficit was about a half-million dollars.

After noting that council members "surely were aware that if they voted for it they were getting into a transit system that was a public service and not a self-supporting operation," Dean said:

"I think they need to be realistic. We have a tax-subsidized program."

Having a self-sustaining operation is a "good concept" but it is not practical, Dean said. "It never will be self-supporting and they might as well forget about that concept," he added.

Phillips agreed, saying the bus system is an essential service that will become more critically needed.

And, he noted, some other city services do not pay their own way, notably parks and the library.

"We need to urge the city council to remember this is as essential as the police or fire department," he said, explaining that for some riders, the bus service means the difference between having a job and going on welfare.

Phillips also said that people who use the services of the police or fire departments do not pay their way. And, he added, he does not believe it is socialistic to provide a similar service in transportation.

"We will have to convince the city council that it's not a temporary thing," Phillips said.

Phillips advocated expanding the bus service. "We plan on parks all over town. We should have the same (planning) with buses," he said.

The transit service should cover all parts of the city, especially if Lubbock continues to sprawl across the plains, he added.

Smith, who completed his term as chairman Monday and who will be succeeded by Kreiger, said he admires the thought of a self-sustaining system but that the "economics probably are questionable."

The Lubbock International Airport, Memorial Civic Center and library are "all subsidized to some extent," he noted. And his personal belief, he added, is that "we're not going to reach the point again where every person pays the full way."

The board members will discuss the issue with council members together with the impact of the technical study, which is an on-going report required by the Urban Mass Transportation Administration. The federal agency subsidizes capital improvements and operating costs for Lubbock's transit system.

The study will recommend slower speeds for routes, full support to the Citizens for Improved Transportation, coordination of private efforts for transportation of the elderly and handicapped and a new bus fleet to replace the current coaches.

Details supporting the recommendations have not been compiled.

WINNING DESIGN — James Carruthers, left, holds the bicycle he designed and built to win a $100 award in a "Hands-on Steel Program" sponsored by the American Iron and Steel Institute. His faculty adviser for the project was Texas Tech University architecture Prof. Robert G. Venn, right. Carruthers is a student in the Division of Architecture.

Tech Students Win Awards

The American Iron and Steel Institute has awarded two $100 prizes to Texas Tech University architecture students James Carruthers and Richard Mullen for the design and execution of special projects using steel.

Carruthers, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Carruthers of 4513 77th St., won in the "Hands-on Steel Program" for his functional design of an extraordinary "ordinary" bicycle.

Although it is termed "ordinary" by tradition, the bicycle has a large front wheel and a small rear wheel. Most of the metal work and the layered wood parts were handmade by Carruthers, but he took the wheel rim to a machine shop for bending.

Carruthers said that he looked at outdated advertisements to get ideas for the design, but the dimensions were his own.

Mullen also won $100 in the sculpture division of the program with his use of steel, stained glass and lighting for a steel rod abstract sculpture. Mullen is from Escondido, Calif.

Weed Control Plan Announced

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Commissioner Jim Lancaster said Monday he plans an "all-out effort" to kill pesky weeds that thwart road maintenance and strangle crops in Lubbock County's northeast Precinct 3.

His proposal would be the county's first large-scale weed control program.

"The situation is drastic. Weeds — especially bindweed and johnson grass — are thriving in the barrow ditches along county roads," Lancaster said.

"This makes keeping up the roads very difficult and costly. And from the barrow ditches, the weeds spread into cropland and even into residential areas. Some farmers tell me that if we could bring the weeds under control, they could put more land back into production," he said.

Lancaster met Monday with Ken Cook, county agricultural extention agent, to discuss the project. Next week, Cook and Lancaster will survey Precinct 3 roads to map out the most troublesome areas.

The commissioner said he hopes to buy the necessary equipment and chemicals so he can begin applying herbicides to his precinct's barrow ditches "as soon as possible," perhaps next month.

"All the people I've talked to wish the program was in operation yesterday," said Lancaster. "They feel this could be one of the most valuable services the county could perform."

In February, Lancaster attended a Texas A&M University conference of county officials. There he learned of successful weed control techniques used by Wharton County and decided to apply them to Lubbock.

Traditionally Lubbock County's weed control efforts have been limited, Lancaster said. Each commissioner usually budgets about $1,000 a year for herbicides and simply allows landowners to use those chemicals to treat barrow ditches along their own property, he said.

Also, Lancaster said, as part of road maintenance, commissioners "pull the barrow ditches" during the summer — that is, run a blade through the trenches to clear out the weeds and promote better drainage.

But pulling the ditches may do more harm than good, Lancaster said.

"You end up scattering seeds (of weeds) from one farm to another. This can make things even worse," he said.

And blading the barrow ditches, when they are thick with weeds, is hard on a road maintainer, he said. In fact, Lancaster estimates that by using herbicides, he can save enough money on the repair of road equipment to pay for the chemicals.

"On top of that, we're going to save on labor. Last summer I pulled the barrow ditches six times. With a weed control program I'll have to pull the ditches only once or twice a year," Lancaster said.

The most troublesome weeds, johnson grass and bindweed, require different herbicides and they must be applied separately, he said. In the process, he said, the herbicides will be killing several other varieties of weed.

Precinct 3 has about 350 miles of county road — and 700 miles of barrow ditches. Lancaster said he will start applying herbicides to the worst spots first.

"With this system, we'll be containing the weeds and killing off the seeds so they won't grow back for a three-or four-year period," he said.

Cook added that the program "must be a cooperative effort" between the county and landowners.

"It is not the county commissioner's job to kill all the weeds in the precinct. The landowner must share this responsibility," Cook said.

Lancaster said the program can be "successful only if we work together. We're going to try to control the weeds within the eight-to 10-foot right-of-way along the roads. The private landowner has got to be interested in controlling the weeds on his own property."

He said landowners can show that cooperation in several ways. Lancaster said he will be asking landowners to sign an agreement allowing his crew to work on barrow ditches lining their property.

"There isn't much risk involved, but there is a small possibility that some of the chemical might drift from the barrow ditches and get into a small section of crop," Lancaster said. Should that happen, he doesn't want the county to be held liable.

Lancaster said precautions will be taken against such accidents by spraying herbicides only when there is little wind and by monitoring the spraying controls.

Cook, who will initiate an educational program in conjunction with Lancaster's weed control efforts, said landowners also will be asked to check weeds on their own property.

State Races Nearing Deadline For Voting

By The Associated Press

Most Texas voters realized two things Monday — it was the deadline for income tax returns and absentee voting began for the May 6 primary elections.

Three weeks remain for one of the hottest governor's races in recent history, in both the Democratic and Republican primaries, plus a crucial Democratic race for U.S. Senate and 10 other statewide contests.

"Even a great many citizens with low to moderate incomes are having to dig up extra money to pay their income taxes," Gov. Dolph Briscoe said in San Antonio while there for the Alamo pilgrimage ceremony.

"Federal taxes have gone out of sight because too many politicians tried to buy votes with promises of big spending for special groups. The same thing will happen on the state level if enough voters favor John Hill's idea that high-spending, pie-in-the-sky promises can be fulfilled without costing them any money," Briscoe said.

Hill met with Texas congressmen in Washington Monday to urge them to rally support for hard-pressed farmers. Hill also sent President Carter a telegram asking him to consider an administrative order to increase target prices and loan rates.

"Even though Congress turned down the emergency farm bill last week, that fact still does not change the seriousness of the problems facing our farmers," Hill said. "The president's opposition is based on fears of inflationary pressures. But our farmers are suffering from inflation's impact on everything they buy to produce their crops, and the president's position forces the farmers to be the fall guy in the whole process."

Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, a Democratic candidate for agriculture commissioner, told a news conference that his main opponent, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, apparently was misusing his state-owned airplane.

"This 30-year bureaucrat has reported the lowest travel expense of any statewide candidate — just $1,100 in this campaign," Hubenak said. "I have spent more than $14,000 for travel in this campaign. In addition, the temporary incumbent, Reagan Brown, has reported spending only $800 for telephone expense — I have spent $3,350.

City Receives Increased State Sales Tax Rebate

The City of Lubbock is following a statewide trend for ever-increasing sales tax rebates, with the city's share this month totaling $375,894.

That figure is $70,904 more than was received for April last year, and it brings the 1978 payments to date to $2,283,829. The city's total rebates this year are 13 percent more than for the same period in 1977.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock, whose office handles the rebates, has announced that the returns for April are up 24 percent over last year.

Rebate checks totaling $20.2 million have been mailed to 899 Texas cities as their share of the local-option one percent sales tax. Last April, $16.2 million was rebated, according to Bullock.

The latest rebates bring collections to date this year to $121.6 million, compared to $105.7 million for the first four months in 1977, Bullock said in a news release.

As usual, the City of Houston received the largest rebate — $4.9 million. Dallas received $2.6 million, followed by San Antonio with $1.2 million and Fort Worth with $852,356.

In addition to its sales tax rebate, the San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority received its first rebate for financing its mass transit system.

The check, totaling $1.4 million, represents collections of an additional one-half cent sales tax authorized by voters in San Antonio and seven neighboring cities, effective last January, for financing the transit systems.

The residents of those cities are the first in the state to authorize the special sales tax levy, which was authorized by the Legislature.

South Plains cities that were sent rebate checks include Abernathy, $1,893; Andrews, $9,082; Aspermont, $991; Big Spring, $35,568; Bovina, $987; Brownfield, $15,171; Childress, $5,101; Coahoma, $775; Colorado City, $6,417; Crosbyton, $554; Dickens, $1,382, and Dimmitt, $7,623.

Also, Floydada, $6,262; Friona, $2,606; Hale Center, $850; Hart, $522; Hereford, $22,450; Lamesa, $8,659; Levelland, $16,146; Littlefield, $15,710; Lockney, $1,603; Lorenzo, $3,900; Memphis, $1,633; Morton, $1,535, and Muleshoe, $5,415.

Also, Odessa, $272,913; Olton, $1,333; Paducah, $1,127; Petersburg, $565; Plainview, $30,938; Post, $3,269; Quitaque, $529; Ralls, $1,160; Seagraves, $1,959; Seminole, $3,667; Silverton, $1,119; Slaton, $4,787; Snyder, $29,294; Spur, $581; Tahoka, $1,502; and Tulia, $5,192.

SPOTLIGHT ON... Family News

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — "Guiding Light" fans have reason to rejoice. Fran Muers, who originiated the much-beloved character of Peggy Fletcher Thorpe in 1966, has returned to the show full-time after a year's absence.

Fran left the serial last spring and headed for Hollywood. Between guest-star stints on nighttime TV series (her most recent was as a hassled heroine on "The Incredible Hulk"), Fran occasionally hopped a plane to Manhattan for a few episodes of "GL." But now she's a regular again after signing a new contract with the soap opera.

Stefan Schnabel (Steve Jackson on "GL") is doing double duty by spending his nights on the off-Broadway stage as vampire-killer Professor Van Helsing in "The Passion of Dracula." William Lyman (ex-Ken Palmer on "Another World") plays the fanged one.

Schnabel has played Dr. Steve on "GL" since 1966 also. He was born in Berlin, the son of pianist Artur Schnabel and concert singer Therese Scgnabel-Behr. The family emigrated to England to escape Hitler's regime, and Stefan worked and studied with the late Tyrone Guthrie, then performed for Orson Welles' Broadway productions of "Julius Caesar" and "Shoemaker's Holiday." The actor has over a thousand TV credits, has taught German on educational TV, and keeps a house near Lake Como in Italy where he mountain-climbs with his wife and three children.

SHORT TAKES:

New to "Another World" is Kathleen Widdoes as Rose Perrini. You may remember Widdoes as one of "The Group" in the movie of that name. Also on "AW," Ray Liotta appears as Joey Perrini, Angie's brother.

A recent arrival to Genoa City on "The Young and The Restless" is Linda Larkin, played by Susan Walden. Place your bets on which male character Linda will sink her hooks into. And remember that Greg Foster hasn't had a lady friend in over two years.

Pittsburghers are well-acquainted with local radio personality Bill Cardille, alias "Chilly Billy." Chilly's daughter, Lori Cardille, portrays "Edge of Night's" Winter Austen, the former orphan girl who was forced by circumstances into becoming a lady of the night. Lori's graduate of Carnegie Mellon drama school in the Steel City and frequent trips to her dad's radio studio spawned her interest in show biz.

Francine York is wrecking havoc in the love lives of sweethearts Don Craig and Marlena Evans on "Days of Our Lives." Francine portrays Lorraine Temple, who claims that Don's the father of her 14-year-old daughter. Lorraine is trying to milk blackmail loot from political candidate Don, but off-screen Francine doesn't have such financial woes. The 5-foot8-inch red-head has worked steadily on nighttime TV series and has appeared in several Jerry Lewis films, including "The Patsy," "The Nutty Professor" and "The Family Jewels." She recently costarred in Irwin Allen's TV movie, "Flood," and to keep the wolves from her door she steady dates Proctor & Gamble heir David Gamble. And Francine isn't even a P&G soap. Good gal.

Susan Lucci (Erica Brent on "All My Children") lost her on-screen love interest when Larry Keith (Nick Davis) left the show. But Erica quickly picked up the pieces with Tom Cudahay while Susan merrily jaunted off to Aspen for a week of skiing with her real-life husband, Helmut Huber.

Nominees in the Daytime Serial category of the annual Writers Guild awards were Gabrielle Upton for "Love of Life," Claire Labine, Paul Avila Mayer and Mary Munisteri for "Ryan's Hope," and, ironically the fall-of-1977 deposed writing staff of "Days of Our Lives": Pat Falken Smith, William Bell, William Rega, Margaret Stewart and Kay Lenard. Tune in Tomorrow to see why the Ryan's Hope writers won the award this year as they have for the past three years...

ELLEN'S APPLE CURD

1 lb. cooking apples
¼ cup water
Juice of ½ lemon
¾ cup sugar
1 large egg, slightly beaten
¼ cup butter, soft

Wash but do not pare or core apples. In the top of a double boiler over direct heat bring the apples, water and lemon juice to a boil; cook gently, stirring occasionally, until very soft. Put through a food mill, discarding residue. Stir in the sugar, egg and butter. Cook over boiling water, stirring constantly, until the texture of thick applesauce. Serve warm "as is" or chill and use as a filling for spongecake shells (baked in Mary Ann pans) or tart shells with a topping of whipped cream. Stores well. Makes about 2 cups.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR GALS:
Hang on to your hats, 'cause I'm coming in with a smash. And it's another way to save money — a problem that plagues us all.

We have received so many letters wanting to know how to take care of good leather purses and shoes. (They're so expensive now, they deserve tender, loving care.)

I asked a consumer education director friend of ours at a large wax company and here is her reply:

"Good leather should always be well cared for. Smooth polished leather (not reptile or suede) needs to have a coat of paste wax once in a while. This keeps it sott, puts a good protective film on it and helps preserve the leather.

"I suggest your housewives use a good paste wax, such as is ordinarily used for floors. They will be amazed at the results. (Caution: Test an inside spot first, such as the fold on the side of the purse, because a few types of leather are so porous they are very easily stained.)

"Paste waxes on leather bags should be applied sparingly to a small area (No more than one side at a time) and polished immediately with a soft cloth while the was is moist.

"Most paste waxes used on floors contain coloring to hide scratches in wood, so this type is only for black, navy blue, brown and other dark-colored purses.

"A few words of caution:

"Use only good quality wax products on shoes and purses, not oily furniture polishes.

"Wax gives a hard, dry finish that resists soil and finger marks. Oily finishes are smeary — catch dust, dirt and finger marks easily.

"Very porous leather (extremely soft with an oily feel and low gloss) could be darkened and stained by polishes. On some of these leathers (such as deerskin moccasins) even natural paste polishes can cause staining. For porous leather, follow recommendations of your shoe dealer."

Now gals, just to test this I got out my old black leather purse. Sure enough the skin did look dry, scratched and soiled.

I dipped a facial tissue in some beige-colored paste floor wax and applied it to the leather. As I rubbed, the tissue became soiled. I reached for a new tissue and continued until that side of the purse was clean and waxed.

Then I buffed it with more clean tissues and the soft original glow and sheen appeared again!

So go grab your purses, gals, and let's give them a new look so that the next time you go somewhere you'll be as proud of yours as I am mine. — Heloise

P.S. And don't forget to wax the handle. You'd be surprised how much accumulated soil you'll find there.

DEAR HELOISE:
If there are children in the family, give them a box of crayons or painting material and turn the children loose to decorate grocery bags with seasonal pictures of plant life, etc.

The bags may then be used to hold trash or used as wastepaper liners for each room.

It is fun for the children and a useful activity. — Mrs. Leona Niles

DEAR HELOISE:
For travelers whose cars do not have center arm rests, use a firm box on which a cushion of foam rubber is fastened to the lid.

Maps, note books, pencils, etc. can be stored in the box.

No more tired arms or shoulders at the end of a day's travel. — Mrs. Ray Pompa

DEAR HELOISE:
I save all my old pierced earrings. Often I lose the backs from my good earrings and I can find a replacement in my supply of old earrings. — Karen B.

DEADLINES

Any information for a daily edition must be in our office two days in advance of publication.

Sunday edition deadlines are 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday for articles with pictures and noon the preceding Wednesday for articles only. Only Friday and Saturday weddings will appear on Sunday; wedding announcements must run within five days of the event.

Engagement announcements must be submitted at least five weeks prior to the wedding date.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My mother and father are still living. My husband has only his mother. On Mother's Day we must spend the entire day with her because, according to him, "Your mother still has your father."

On Father's Day we have to go to the cemetery to visit his father's grave because "your dad is still living."

Do you think it is fair that I have to wait until my mother-in-law dies before I can spend a Mother's Day with my own mother? And is it fair to have to visit my father-in-law's grave instead of going to see my live father?

If I open up my mouth I am called "selfish."

Do you see a solution to this? — Fighting A Lot

Dear Fighting: Go with your husband to see his mother on Mother's Day, but spend only an hour or so, then visit your own mother. Do the same on Father's Day.

It would be ideal if your husband would agree to divide the time so you could be together, but I'm sure he won't — so I'm suggesting this compromise. (P.S. Get it settled NOW because after your parents pass away, you'll be fighting about whose grave to visit.)

Dear Ann: I sent you a letter several weeks ago and signed it "Struck Out." I guess I must have struck out with you because you didn't print it, so I'm trying again. My problem is the "Polaroid Syndrome."

I asked my wife if she would pose in some sexy nighties and lingerie that I bought for ber. Sbe agreed. I swear to you, Ann, the pictures have never left our house and they never will. I took them to add zest to our love life and they did.

Last week I asked my wife to pose again for a new batch of pictures. She said, "No, I've decided it's kinky sex." Then she called me a pervert.

I told her I would write for your opinion so that's what I'm doing — for the second time. Please answer. Our marriage could be at stake. — Two Strikes

Dear Two: Whatever two people do in the bedroom is not perversion, so long as there is mutual agreement and no pain is inflicted. If taking pictures turns you on and the pictures are strictly for you and your wife, I can't see that this is a perversion. A little far-out maybe, but not harmful — and a darned sight better than buying girlie garbage at the newsstands.

Dear Ann Landers: I lost my husband recently and he left very little insurance and several large bills. I don't want to leave my pre-school children home and go to work. They need me more than ever now that they have no father.

I saw an ad that says I can make $80 a week addressing envelopes at home. It sounds good. Is there a catch in it somewhere? How can I find out? — Needy But Wary

Dear N But W: You are wise to be wary. Write for the particulars, then send all tbe information to your Better Business Bureau. Some of the "Make Money at Home" offers are full of fishhooks and booby traps. They try to sell you stationery, equipment, manuals and everything but a kitchen sink. Once you're hooked they inform you that your work doesn't meet their standards and you've been had, honey.

"Aces were made to take kings," remarked West as he played his ace of trumps on South's king at trick two.

"South said nothing as he went about the business of making six spades doubled. The procedure was simple and effective. He ruffed the heart that West led at trick three, cashed his ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond in dummy and led a trump to his queen. Noting that East played the nine, he ruffed a second low diamond to set up the rest of the suit, came to his hand with a club, pulled the last trump and claimed because all his diamonds were now goods.

If West had just let South hold the first trump he would not have had a chance to make that fatuous remark, but he would have been well rewarded when South went down at his slam.

South would have had two ways to play on. He could have led a second trump. This time West would take his ace and lead a third trump to make it impossible for South to ruff two diamonds in dummy.

His other way would have been to leave trumps alone and try to ruff two diamonds. This plan would have failed because East would have been able to overruff the second diamond with the nine.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is acute pancreatitis? Is it curable? What can be done for it? Is there great pain? E.D.W.

The pancreas (PAN-cree-us) is a large gland located behind the stomach. Acute pancreatitis is inflammation of it. When this happens there is sever pain in the mid-abdomen, also fever, vomiting, possibly shock. The gland is important because of its production of insulin, which is essential in the body's use of sugar; also for its pancreative juice, which assists digestion. Thus, the secondary effects of pancreatitis are varied. It is frequently followed by diabetes, for example, because of the disturbance of insulin production.

Acute pancreatitis usually involves the blocking of a duct leading from the gland to the intestines. Stones may be present and there can be a backup of juices and destruction of gland tissue.

Recurrent pancreatitis (the other kind) usually attacks, then subsides, tending to recur after a period of apparent well-being. This condition may result from excessive use of alcohol, gall-bladder disease (especially gallstones) and ailments of the upper intestional tract (used as ulcer).

Conservative treatment can be affective, including complete bed rest, intravenous feeding, narcotics, and suction of stomach contents to keep them at the minimum, needed for nutrition.

If this does not help, surgical removal of the pancreas itself has to be considered, or the gall bladder if that is affected. Avoidance of alcohol is a must along with a careful diet.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Every winter my fingers crack and bleed around the nails. They are painful. I have tried wearing rubber gloves, but this doesn't help. Any suggestions? A.G.A.

You need to begin some private investigation to find a cause. A few suggestions: Use cotton gloves under the rubber ones. Think of house hold chemicals (polishes, detergents, etc.). Try a hand lotion at bedtime to keep the skin soft. Some women have told me nail-polish remover or nail hardener has been the culprit.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband and several others say food should be left out of the refrigerator until it cools. I think it should be refrigerated right away. Can you straighten this out for us, please? M.V.

The main rule is to get food into either the hot or cold stage as rapidly as possible. It is the in-between stage where dangers lie. Of equal importance is keeping it covered when it is standing for any long period. Cover and refrigerate as soon as a meal is finished. This applies particularly to fowl containing dressing, casseroles, meat loaf, or other mixtures. Cooling uncovered outside the refrigerator can allow salmonella, staphylococcus and other organisms to multiply and wreak their havoc. Leftovers are usually cooled sufficiently so that they do not affect the general temperatures inside, if energy-saving is your concern.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am taking prednisone for asthma. A friend tells me it is a bad drug, bad on the liver and bones, and she says if I quit I have to taper off gradually, not all at once. I would like your opinion. I have taken it for more than a year. L.A.

Your friend is correct. After prolonged use, the dosage of prednisone should be tapered off when stopping it. As far as its being a "bad" drug, such blanket statements are meaningless. Prednisone is a powerful, but reliable, drug for the treatment of severe asthma. If it has the desired effect without any undesired ones for you, then it uses make sense. Would your friend still be your friend if you followed his or her advice and then had a whiz-bang attack of asthma?

Ask your doctor about your dosage if you are uneasy. There are other drugs, such as cromolin, which can forestall attacks.

These are not effective in controlling an attack once it has started. Prednisone is.

Camp For Diabetics New To Lubbock

By SALLY LOGUE
Family News Staff

The most important thing a session at camp can do for a diabetic child is to allow him to demonstrate to himself that he can go to camp and have fun despite his diabetes, according to John A. Menchaca, M.D., assistant professor of pediatrics at Texas Tech University School of Medicine (TTUSM).

For the first time, a local camp, to be open June 5-9, will be available for children in the West Texas and Eastern New Mexico area who are between the ages of six and 15.

The camp, located at the Plains Baptist Encampment near Floydada, and under the auspices of the Southwest Rotary Club, will be free to every child attending regardless of ability to pay.

Children may be recommended by physicians, school nurses, Rotarians, members of the American Diabetes Association or other interested adults. Places at the camp have been limited to 60-65 children, depending on staffing. Reservations must be made by May 1 through the Department of Pediatrics, TTUSM.

Dr. Menchaca said often because of the genetic tendency of diabetes, parents feel guilty. "They tend to over-react and become over protective of a child and won't let him do anything by himself.

"This can cause a child to feel over-dependent on the parents. If this continues into adolescenses, it can be dynamite," he said.

"A child, when he reaches the natural point in adolescence and is developing some individuality, the over-dependence on his parents that is carried over from childhood can cause a terrible conflict. The child may react to this conflict by refusing to take his medication or care for himself properly, then we have troubles," he said.

Menchaca emphasized that camping can give the diabetic child a feeling of some independence early in life and defuse a potentially dangerous situation."

During the week in camp the children will be taught the basic principles of how to care for themselves. "They will be taught about their diets, how to give insulin and do their own urine tests. We won't go into any major detail, just give them the basic idea of what's going on," he said.

Menchaca said another improtant function of the camp will be to provide an educational experience for health professionals and interested lay persons.

"The camp will give these people a chance to learn that this is a group of young people who are individuals. None of the children react the same to the same situation.

Menchaca said that a major point is that health professionals and counselors will learn to appreciate this individuality and not sterotype the diabetic child.

Camp counselors will be physical education majors from Texas Tech University. There will be one counselor for every three children at the camp.

All meals and snacks are being planned by nutritionists at TTUSM. Nutritional interns will be on hand during the week long session to supervise meals and snacks.

Another important feature of the camp will be meetings for the parents at the beginning and end of the session. These orientation sessions will be at 11:30 a.m. June 5 and a closing session at 2:30 p.m. June 9.

Members of the social services department at TTUSM will conduct the sessions.

Arden Hawkins, of the Southwest Rotary Club, said the organization became interested in the camp because, "it is a worth while project, and there are none like it in the area."

"This is the first year, and because of that we are limited in the number of places available."

He added that he believes there are some 200-300 children in the area that could benefit and hopes the camp can enlarge and expand to a two week session in the future.

Fashion Experts Favor Silk Blend

By JOANNE SCHREIBER

If you like sewing with silk, you'll love sewing with the new silk blends that will be in fabric stores this spring. A specially coordinated grouping will make it possible for you to make layered outfits using different weights and weaves of pure silk and silk-plus fabrics, all in beautifully blended colors.

A major American silk producer, long famous for its lovely silks, has mixed other fibers with the silk for new fashion impact. A pure silk broadcloth is color-teamed with a skirt-weight material of 60 percent cotton and 40 percent silk, a floating gauze of 80 percent polyester and 20 percent silk and a pebbly crepe of 50 percent silk and 50 percent Qiana. Pure silk reappears in a linen-weave and a set of striped silks, which repeat the soft spring shades of melon, cream, celery green and misty blues.

Not only will these elegant fabrics be available over-the-counter — they have been made into a traveling wardrobe which will be presented in formal fashion shows in top department stores across the country.

Fashion experts have selected patterns which lend themselves to layering, so the whole wardrobe is almost seasonless. The heavier weights are used in handsomely tailored pants suits and shorts suits; the lighter weights are used in gentle tops, dresses and skirts. The hit of the show is a dress-length blouse of pale silk and Qiana crepe de chine, worn with a full flounced skirt of Qiana satin. The blouse may be worn as a short party dress or with the skirt as an evening outfit.

These pure silk and silk-blend fabrics require no special sewing expertise. For the fine fabrics, use fine cotton thread — No. 60, if you can find it. The threads with a polyester core don't work as well. Remember to use a fine, new, sharp needle. And for heavier silks, a No. 50 cotton thread is recommended. Clean both your sewing machine and the bottom of your iron before starting to sew.

The fine fabrics require a little extra caution. Use the small-hole throat plate unless you are using a zigzag stitch. The pressure should be light and provide an even feed; the tension should be loose and well balanced. Sew with 10-12 stitches to the inch, and remember always to test-stitch a swatch before working on your garment.

It is best to mark with tailor tacks, since tracing paper may leave hard-to-remove marks. If your fabric tends to slip as you cut, place the fabric between layers of tissue paper to support and stabilize it.

Though silk is washable, it is not machine-washable or permanent press. It should be hand-washed if the garment is relatively unconstructed. A garment with a lining, or construction details which will make pressing difficult, should always be dry cleaned.

Considering the beauty of these fabrics, they are not exceptionally high priced. They range from about $8 per yard for the cotton and silk to about $12 per yard for the pure silk broadcloth; most are 44-45 inches wide. For 5 yards of lovely silk, you can have a dress which would run a couple of hundred dollars ready-to-wear. You can sew and save plenty — with silk.

HIGHER HEELS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Call it the unisex look or men's styles copying women's: the footwear industry says men will be wearing heels and even a few platform shoes come spring. The Footwear Council also forecasts lighter weight, softer moccasins for men. It said men's slip-ons and tie shoes will have heels up to two and a quarter inches.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I was recently widowed with $40,000 in life insurance. My insurance agent suggested I buy an annuity. My stock broker suggested investments in the market. My banker urged me to buy either Treasury bonds or long-term savings certificates. I need maximum income. What do you suggest?

A. We can take these suggestions one at a time — although the omission of your age from your letter and the lack of other details will prevent any straightout answer.

An annuity could be one source of generous income IF you are old enough — say, 70 or above — and IF you don't care to leave an estate. If you are 55 and want to provide an inheritance for four children an annuity makes no sense at all.

If you are young enough to have to face up to inflation over the years ahead, and have other resources, your broker has a point when he suggests common shares. If this is all the money you have to fall back on, your banker has a point in Treasuries or insured savings certificates.

Q. I have about $1,000 to invest and can save $100 a month. What bonds can I buy for good income?

A. With no indication of your age or financial needs I'm a bit puzzled by your desire for high current income while still adding new money from earnings. However, if you are nearing retirement and wll soon need income, I suggest you consider preferreds which may be bought in far smaller amounts than bonds which are not available on a $100-a-month basis unless you select a mutual fund which invests in bonds.

Q. We are in our 70s with a portfolio of fine stocks, but feel we have too much money tied up in savings — $20,000 at 6½, $12,000 at 5½ and $3,000 in a checking account.

A. I see nothing wrong with 32,000 in savings, but can't understand why at least $25,000 of that isn't earning 7½ or 7¾ percent. Unless you write a lot of checks the $3,000 in that account seems too much, too.

Q. I inherited some H bonds which I want to allocate to my children. I've been told it is a complicated process.

A. By all means ask Savings Bond Information, Treasury Dept., Washington D.C. 20226.

Q. Recently my investment account was transferred to another brokerage firm — without any notice or any request for permission — and I was charged a $65 transfer fee. Is this proper?

A. Not with me, it isn't. No one should move your money around without your permission, and I don't see the fee at all. Get tough!

Q. We want to invest about $10,000 for a new grandchild's college education. We've been considering oil bonds but a broker suggested IBM stock, instead. Or should the money be put into a bank account?

A. If I had a financial section dated March 1996, I could give you a brilliant answer.

Some factors in this open-end equation are fairly well fixed. A child paying no taxes can keep all of that 8½ percent annual bond interest or have the money working 100 percent in a 7½ percent savings account. At that rate, money would double in about 9 to 10 years — and, in the ensuing 9 to 10 years double again.

What $10,000 invested today in IBM stock would be worth in 1996 is a question that could be answered only by the wildest guesswork.

President Carter Returns From Camp David

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter returned here Monday from a meeting at which he said he and his closest advisers "analyzed our problems and failures" and resolved to "do things better" in the future.

Appearing briefly before reporters at the White House, Carter said he found weekend talks at Camp David, Md., with Cabinet secretaries and senior White House aides "very profitable and very helpful for me and, I think, for every member of the Cabinet and the White House staff."

Monday's meeting at the presidential retreat in the Catoctin Mountains was billed as a formal assessment of the first 15 months of the Carter administration. The 3¼-hour session followed a round of smaller and less formal talks at the presidential retreat on Sunday.

Earlier, the president had nothing to say to reporters as he left the helicopter that brought him back to the White House from a long weekend in the mountains. But Rosalynn Carter said, "we had a good weekend."

Press Secretary Jody Powell, a participant in the conferences briefed reporters on the sessions shortly before Carter made his appearance before reporters.

"I felt, and the president felt," said Powell, "that it was a most constructive and productive meeting."

There was a frank discussion of perceived shortcomings and possible ways to improve administration performance, Powell said, adding that the conferees left Camp David "with a renewed sense of common commitment."

Powell predicted similar sessions will "likely be repeated every few months or so."

The White House spokesman announced no changes in administration personnel or procedures, and in fact said he anticipates no changes in the Cabinet or senior White House staff.

However, Powell said some decisions flowing from the Camp David talks will be made known withiin the next few weeks.

Carter met alone with his Cabinet for about an hour Monday morning in a Camp David conference room before senior White House aides joined the group.

Among the participants was Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo, a close Carter friend and unofficial adviser. Powell said Kirbo "basically listened" and likely will convey his thoughts to Carter later.

The president's visit to Camp David was extended two hours Monday, the only day of the formal meetings.

A news blackout was imposed at the isolated presidential resort 60 miles north of Washington.

Carter brought his wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy to the retreat but the other officials, who stayed Sunday night in the camp's cabins, left family members at home.

Monday morning is the normal meeting time for Carter and his Cabinet and aides said jokingly that only the location made this session out of the ordinary.

It came as the administration, continuing to slip in public opinion polls, finds itself in the midst of inflation and energy problems and having difficulty convincing overseas allies that it is on a steady foreign affairs course.

Powell and other administration officials said Sunday the unprecedented sessions were called to carry out "some fine-tuning" of the administration's long-range decision-making procedures and to take stock of accomplishments and difficulties.

The officials said policy-oriented discussions were not likely to occur.

The meeting was the first such gathering since many of the same people got together at St. Simons Island, Ga., three weeks before Inauguration day. It was also the first such mass meeting in memory at Camp David.

More than two dozen officials had breakfast together Monday in the rustic surroundings of the resort run by the Marine Corps and then sat down for the only scheduled session involving all of them.

The president and his family arrived at Camp David late Friday and spent Friday evening and Saturday relaxing, White House aides said.

The only events on Carter's schedule late Monday at the White House were a meeting with California Sen. S.I. Hayakawa on the Panama Canal issue, a session with a citizens group on taxation and a country music show in the evening.

Meany Raps Attempts To Limit Federal, Labor Salary Hikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany Monday criticized President Carter's plan to limit federal salary hikes to 5.5 percent and his attempts to hold industrial wage increases below the recent coal settlement.

Showing little of his usual fire in a speech to a building trades conference, Meany asked Carter to reconsider his decision for a 5.5 percent top on congressionally mandated wage increases for about 3 million federal workers.

Meany also warned the administration not to expected organized labor's cooperation in any government attempt to stop private collective bargaining agreements from matching the recent coal strike settlement.

Federal wage and price officials have called the coal settlement inflationary.

Meany, a former plumber, was the keynote speaker at the opening session of a three-day conference of about 3,000 AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department officials.

He said wage controls for federal workers are "completely unfair" because government employees are not responsible for the high price of energy and other inflationary factors.

Noting a statement Sunday by Barry Bosworth, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, that the government may have to intervene if future labor-management bargaining matches the coal settlement, Meany said:

"That sounds very, very much like government control."

He reminded Carter than some of the coal negotiations took place at the White House.

Meany assailed the council's criticism of the coal pact, saying "no matter what you pay the miners, you don't pay them enough." He said that while coal prices increased 300 percent between 1969-77, miners' wages increased only 80 percent.

Robert Georgine, the building trades president, attacked Labor Department regulations proposed last week to set goals for hiring of women in the construction industry.

Georgine said goals and timetables "are not in the best interest of women," the construction industry, or the country, and suggested continuance of their admission under the same terms and conditions used to admit minorities.

"In the last few years, 19.3 percent of our apprentices have been minorities," Georgine said. "It is this system, with its proven track record of sensational success, that should be used for the admission of women."

District Attorney Promises Probes

HOUSTON (AP)-District Attorney Carol Vance, with an objective of eliminating complaints of "whitewash" and "rubber stamp," said Monday his office will make independent investigations of all slayings by police officers.

Vance said he will continue to rely heavily on investigations by the Houston Police Department's internal affairs division.

"But, from now on, we will do our own, independent investigation as well," he said.

In the past, grand juries usually relied only on written statements given by civilian witnesses to police and on live testimony from police officers.

Vance said prosecutors now will interview the witnesses personally and encourage a grand jury to hear their testimony..

He said the prosecutor assigned to each case also will double check and supplement the police department investigation by making certain all scientific evidence in a case is collected immediately.

He said the prosecutor will make use of a checklist including such evidence as fingerprints, trace metal tests that indicate whether a person could have had a weapon in his hand, and the history of any gun allegedly carried by the victim.

Vance made his announcement after his office had drawn some criticism for its handling of two police shootings.

In 1975, five officers were no-billed in the fatal shooting of Billy Keith Joyvies, 18, Houston, and a patrolman was no-billed in 1977 in the fatal shooting of Randall Webster, 17, Shreveport, La.

A gun found at the scene of Webster's death was later traced to the police property room and a federal grand jury is investigating the possibility it could have been placed there by police. Police investigation records also show no fingerprint or metal tests were taken.

In the Joyvies case, the county grand jury heard no witnesses and the foreman, Frederic Fleming, said he felt the panel acted as a "rubber stamp" after prosecutors recommended the officers be no-billed.

China Buys Second Load Of U.S. Wheat In Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has bought another 400,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat, the second order within a week, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

The two sales represent the first U.S. grain bought by China in four years and there has been speculation that more will be purchased to help meet its food requirements.

"We have no way of knowing the extent to which they'll be in (the U.S. grain market) because they're not signaling anything in advance," Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland told a reporter.

"But we have more than adequate stocks on hand to meet anything they may need," he said.

A week ago, China bought 600,000 tons of U.S. wheat. Thus, with the latest order, China has bought one million tons for delivery through mid-1979.

By comparison, the Soviet Union has bought about 14.7 million tons of U.S. grain, including 3.4 million tons of wheat and 9.3 million tons of corn, for delivery this year.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat. Therefore, the two sales of wheat to China total about 36.7 million bushels.

China normally buys most of its grain from traditional suppliers, Canada and Australia, and turns to the United States when those sources run low.

One objection China has expressed about U.S. wheat resulted from some traces of smut or mold in shipments several years ago. As a result, China wanted a flat guarantee that grain delivered to its ports was free of the contamination.

Bergland said, however, that China has modified its stand and has worked out an arrangement with private exporters to assure that grain meets certain standards when it leaves U.S. ports.

Although China until now has not bought U.S. grain since 1974, it has purchased soybeans and cotton. Prior to that, however, wheat exports to China thrived for several years, rising to five million tons in 1973-74 before dropping to 1.5 million tons in 1974-75 and fading entirely after that.

Officials Discuss Oil Spill Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed federal oil spill liability program should take precedence over state and local laws in key areas to avoid duplication and confusion, administration officials said Monday.

The proposed law would replace all current oil spill laws with a new system for determining liability and financial responsibility and providing compensation for pollution damage. It has been endorsed by the Carter administration.

Under the program, a $200 million fund would be set up to pay for cleanup costs above specified liability limits or for instances where the source of the pollution can't be identified. The fund would be financed by a tax of three cents per barrel of imported crude oil.

The superfund also could be used to pay for damages to natural resources or personal property, and to cover loss of income for persons thrown out of work, such as fishermen.

Under the proposed system, states would be barred from setting up their own oil pollution compensation funds financed by a tax on oil. They also would not be allowed to impose absolute, unlimited liability against a ship or tank owner in the event of a spill.

Alan Butchman, deputy secretary of Transportation, and Thomas Jorling, an assistant administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told a Senate subcommittee they are aware Congress doesn't like to preempt states' rights.

Jorling said, however, that the administration's system is needed "to avoid duplication, conflict and confusion in both state and federal law." He said the administration's measure would not prevent a state from setting safety requirements or performance standards.

On a related matter, Butchman testified that Congress should not enact tanker safety standards tougher than those contained in a recently negotiated international agreement.

"It would be bad faith on our part to come back after a year of negotiations and unilaterally establish higher standards," Butchman told the Senate subcommittee on environmental pollution.

Subcommittee Chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, questioned whether the international standards are sufficient and said, "I am troubled by your feeling that international protocol limits adoption of tougher standards."

STARS AND STRIPES

The first change in the flag of 13 stars and stripes adopted by the Second Continental Congress in 1777 came in 1795 with the addition of Vermont and Kentucky to the Union. Congress passed and President Washington signed an act specifying a flag of 15 alternate red and white stripes and 13 white stars on a blue field. In 1919 Congress established the present basic design — 13 alternate stripes representing the original states and a star for each state, new ones to be added on July 4 following admission of a new state.

Boston Notes Revere's Ride

BOSTON (UPI) — A modern day Paul Revere dressed in cape and tri-cornered hat dodged cars and clattered his way on horseback from Boston's Old North Church to Lexington Monday, in a traditional observance of Patriots Day.

"Revere" was played this year by Lawrence Herman. His ride was followed by a reenactment of the more successful ride of William Dawes Jr., another 1775 war hero.

The Monday holiday commemorates Revere's famous ride on April 19, 1775.

"Dawes" — Ronald E. Breault — began the ride from Boston's Roxbury section with a second cry of "The British are coming," as "Revere" was being captured by the British in Lexington.

The weather was cool and cloudy as eastern Massachusetts residents celebrated the colonial holiday. On Sunday night, the two-lantern signal was made in the Old North Church tower.

John Shelby
John is a straight, honest, fine person. He has a fine special family & a special talent-He is so honest that it shames me. John is a Christian & a very hard working man. He is knowledgeable to an extreme, extent about what's fur sale & will bust his britches for you & then follow through all the way. John is a fine honorable person & I'm so very glad to have him in my Store.

Nelson Parsons
Nelson is a special person to anyone who has ever come in contact with him. He radiates a Christian person. He loves real estate & helping people & I believe he is one of the finest people I have ever met. He isn't a super salesman, but if you want someone to find a special house for you & follow it all the way-Nelson is your man. He don't push & shove, He just helps.

Theda Henniger
Hard workingest Gal in town. Ready, Willin', & Able to help you find what you want. "We got it, can find it, can build or cause it to be built or it just ain't sold". We are pleased & proud to have Theda with us.

Theresa Woodfin
Years (2) in the Real Estate Industry, backed by 28 years of combined experience. If she can't tell you an answer to a question or at least find out, it's just too hard a question. Theresa is a fine professional Realtor & we are so very proud to have her as part of our Store.

Patsy Nicholas
Finest, Sweetest & Friendliest Gal in town. She will work harder for you and be nicer doing it than you can believe. Patsy is special to us & will be to you. "Try her boot on," I think you will be pleased & I'll be proud.

Sandra Summers
Sandra is one of the most conscientious people I know. Big eyed & very sincere in everything She does. She worries a lot & asks a lot of questions & so very much wants to do the right thing for everyone she deals with. She is definitely my kind of folks & will do super for you, if you will give her a chance. We are very proud to have her as a part of our Store.

● "SERENITY OF OPEN SPACE" ●
The outside can be brought into your living area with a wall of glass overlooking the tree studded lot in very private bedrooms. 2 baths, a vine covered contemporary built before it's time with "uncompromising frankness." Pat 799-2016, Bonnie 792-8364.

● "FUTURE CLASSIC" ●
Curving driveway with covered entry surrounded by the greenery and freshness of well maintained landscaping. 3 bedrooms, formal dining and living, basement. Hush school. An image of good design." Jan 799-5024, Margaret 799-6909.

● "ECHO OF THE PAST" ●
Craftsmanship of a superbly built older home. Review the bygone elegance for your own sophisticated living. "Real" marble fireplace in living room, huge dining room, den, bedrooms, and two really large well tiled baths (with atrocious colors, dated but it's built to last "forever"). Estate settlement — priced to sell! Bonnie 792-8364, Cliett 799-6370.

● "SMALL CONTEMPORARY" ●
neat and clean, pretty gold carpet, 3 bedrooms, only $28,500 with reasonable equity and payments under $200.00. Jackie 745-5725, Bob 797-8645.

● "SOOTHING SLATON LIVING" ●
get a breath of fresh air in a comfortable custom-built, older home on a corner lot in west Slaton. Lots of nice trees, room for a garden, brick, fireplace, 2-car garage, under $50,000! Margaret 799-6909, Jackie 745-5725.

● "SLATON 2 BEDROOM" ●
$17,950! Better see this spic and span house before it's gone!! Bonnie 792-8364, Eugene 795-4151.

● "RUSH SCHOOL" ●
3 bedrooms, 2 baths, only $32,500. Immaculately kept family home. Eugene 795-4151, Cliett 799-6370.

● "OPEN AND RESTFUL" ●
styled for contemporary living. Let your free spirit soar in this sunlight-brightened 3 bedroom in Quaker Heights. Jan 799-5024, Cliett 799-6370.

● "FOR REASONS YOU EXPECT" ●
AND a few you didn't consider. YOU must see our new-listing TODAY!!! 4 bedrooms, basement, sewing utility, formal dining-formal living (fireplace). Many cabinets-huge closets. 2 bedrooms up planned for teen activities. Built and designed for the entertaining of friends without a loss of privacy for anyone child or adult!!! New listing by Pat 799-2016, Bonnie 792-8364.

● "FUNCTIONAL IMAGINATION" ●
coupled with superb construction, built by an "old-timer" to last a lifetime. Large formal living, den, storm cellar, lots of storage, 2 ceramic baths, central heat, priced to sell at only $42,950! Only $21.45 SF. Pat 799-2016, Margaret 799-6909.

NOW BUYING A SUBARU IS EVEN MORE TIMELY.

OUR FREE WATCH OFFER

Ordinarily you can tick off dozens of things that make Subaru the best value for your money. Now you can tick off one more.

We'll give you a $100 man's or woman's Bulova watch when you buy any 1978 Subaru, provided it's purchased and delivered between March 1 and April 20, 1978.*

Which means for as little as $3,179 in California, it's $3,347 you'll be getting a front wheel drive Subaru that delivers 41 highway and 31 city miles per gallon. (In California, it's 33 highway and 22 city.) Plus you'll get a great car with rack and pinion steering, power assist front disc brakes, steel belted radial tires and the SEEC-T engine that runs on lower cost regular gas. And a great watch to run along with that great car.

Decision Reserved On Berkowitz

NEW YORK (AP) — A state Supreme Court judge reserved decision Monday following a second competency hearing for David Berkowitz, the suspect in the Son of Sam killings.

The announcement by Justice Joseph R. Corso came after 15 hours of testimony over four days in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, a lower court in New York's judicial system. Corso said he expected to rule later in the week or early next week.

The final witness was Dr. David Abrahamsen, one of four psychiatrists who testified at the hearing. Abrahamsen, hired by Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold, testified last October at the first hearing that Berkowitz, a 24-year-old former postal clerk, is able to understand the charges against him and to assist in his own defense.

The proceedings apply only to the murder of Stacy Moskowitz, the last of the Son of Sam victims.

Berkowitz still faces charges in the Bronx and Queens. In all, he is accused of killing six persons and injuring seven others over a 12-month period in the three boroughs.

Last October state Supreme Court Justice John Starkey found Berkowitz competent for trial. The judge was later removed from the case after he allowed reporters to make tape recordings of Berkowitz' alleged admissions to the crimes in which Berkowitz claimed he killed at the command of blood-thirsty demons.

Corso ordered a new hearing because of the time lapse.

Drilling On Shaft At Caverns Starts

Carlsbad Caverns National Park officials have announced that drilling work on a new utility shaft from the surface into the caverns began Monday.

The project is expected to take from six to eight weeks, and during that time, an area immediately in front (or to the south) of the park visitor center will be barricaded for safety. However, all facilities at the park will remain open.

Coffey Drilling Co. of Albuquerque, N.M., will furnish rigs and other equipment for the job which will be done in two stages. The first stage involves drilling of a 5½-inch pilot hole using a 30-foot truck mounted rig, and the second stage will involve enlargement of the pilot hole to 14 inches, then 20 inches, and finally to 24 inches using a 40-foot rig.

Park officials stated that as much of the work as possible will be scheduled after normal visitor hours to minimize the disruption of normal visitor activities and to reduce the detraction which park visitors may experience. Mufflers also will be used on compressors to reduce noise, and a special foam will be used to reduce dust from drill cuttings.

The work is part of a utilities improvement project.

Work On Neutron Missiles Resumes

AMARILLO (AP) — The Carter administration stance on development of the neutron warhead has the 2,000 employees of the Pantex nuclear assembly plant resuming work on the two weapons targeted to carry neutron warheads.

An administration spokesman told Amarillo Globe-News executive editor Jerry Huff that work on a modified Lance missile and an eight-inch artillery shell will proceed. The spokesman said work will continue so that the weapons would be ready should Carter decide to order production of neutron warheads.

Neutron warheads, sometimes called enhanced radiation warheads, would also be assembled at the plant assembly point for nuclear weapons in the country.

"It will take about 14 months to add different safety features to the Lance and equip it to handle a neutron warhead," the spokesman said. He said the eight-inch artillery shell is 30 months away from production.

Neutron warheads would kill through massive doses of quickly dissipating radiation. Conventional nuclear weapons depend on a combination of blast, heat and radiation.

Their attractiveness is in the area of tank warfare, in which enemy troops could be killed within the tanks in relatively close quarters, with minimum effect on civilian population and buildings.

Because of Russian superiority in tank numbers in Europe, the neutron weapon has been a hot topic in NATO circles. Some allies favor it, and others oppose it.

Pantex contract administrator Paul Wagner said he has yet to receive official word on the Lance and artillery production, but said the plant would be involved if the administration decided to go ahead.

"We built the nuclear warhead non-neutron for the Lance missile and have done design work on the artillery shell," Wagner said.

"Anything not capable of being done by the military would be done at Pantex," he said.

Pantex placed the neutron projects on the shelf last fall pending a decision from President Carter on whether or not to proceed. Carter has delayed that decision.

Men Charged In Assault Cases

Two local men were charged Monday with aggravated assault as the result of weekend shooting incidents.

Charged in separate cases were Herman Slaughter, 33, of 1318 E. 16th St., and Jacinto Herrera, 19, of 2823 Fordham St.

The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $1,500 bond for Slaughter and a bond of $3,000 for Herrera.

Slaughter is accused of the Sunday shooting of Lonnie Charles Mondine, 42, of 1320 E. 17th St. Mondine was termed in guarded condition Monday at the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Officers arrived at Mondine's residence about 1:10 p.m. Sunday to find him lying on a porch. He reportedly sustained multiple gunshot wounds to the abdomen.

According to reports, two witnesses identified Slaughter as the man who shot Mondine. The witnesses indicated Slaughter came to the residence and argued with Mondine about a financial matter.

The suspect was arrested a few minutes later at an East 15th Street address.

Herrera is accused of shooting Greg Potter, a 21-year-old Tech University student, about 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Reports indicated that Potter, of 4405 22nd St., was visiting at a residence in the 2300-block of 14th Street when the group he was with became involved in an argument with two men. The men reportedly stopped in a vehicle in front of the residence.

Reports indicate one of the men produced a revolver and shot Potter in the left shoulder.

Potter was treated and released by a local hospital, police reports say.

Colorado Suspect Charged In Murder

A suspect, taken into custody Monday afternoon in Greeley, Colo., has been charged with a Feb. 24 Lubbock killing.

Named in the murder charge lodged Monday was Carlos Luna Vasquez, 31.

Vasquez is accused of murdering Rafael Herrera Jr., whose bullet-riddled body was found lying outside an East Lubbock lounge.

The suspect was being held in Greeley's Weld County Jail Monday night. First Asst. Dist. Atty. Tom Cannon said authorities would launch extradition procedures, if necessary.

Herrera's body was found shortly after 3 a.m. in the 1100-block of Teak Avenue. The 39-year-old victim was found lying on the pavement outside the club near the intersection of Teak and E. Broadway. He reportedly had been shot several times with a .38-caliber weapon.

Kentucky Official Okays KKK Rally

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan can rally on the grounds of the Jefferson Davis Monument at Fairview in June but won't be allowed near the concrete structure because of repair work, State Parks Commissioner Bruce Montgomery said Monday.

Montgomery said persons are not allowed near the base of the 351-foot-high obelisk monument while repair work is being done because of insurance considerations.

The Ku Klux Klan has announced plans for a rally in Hopkinsville June 3-4, including a ceremony to lay a wreath at the monument 10 miles east of Hopkinsville on U.S. Route 68 and Kentucky Route 80. The 22-acre park is near the Todd County birthplace of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy during the Civil War.

Montgomery said the repair work was begun last year when large chunks of the monument, said to be the tallest cast concrete obelisk in the world and fourth highest monument in the United States, began falling.
