113 Aboard Missing Airliner

WASHINGTON (AP) — A South Korean jetliner, carrying 113 persons and reported missing over the polar ice cap, entered Soviet air space and was forced down by Soviet military jets, official sources said Thursday night.

Administration and Pentagon officials, who asked not to be named, said Thursday night that based on radar tracking they "have reason to believe" the plane had entered Soviet air space and was on the ground in a remote corner of Russia.

Asked if the plane was forced or shot down, one Defense Department official said, "I don't think we know enough to say."

Another official said the two most likely alternatives were either an accident or Soviet action to force the plane to the ground. However, one source said later that the jetliner was forced down by Soviet jets.

The airliner was en route to South Korea from Paris with a refueling stop in Anchorage, Alaska, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

One government official said all countries in the vicinity of the aircraft's route had been asked for information, including the Soviet Union.

"We're cooperating closely with the Koreans," he said, noting that the Soviet Union and South Korea do not maintain diplomatic relations.

Information Lacking
The officials said they had no word on possible casualties, damage to the plane or whether any Americans were aboard.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post quoted unnamed officials as saying that Soviet jets scrambled to meet the Boeing 707 as it entered Russian air space and forced it down on a frozen lake near Finland and the Arctic Circle.

Canadian Air Force planes had launched a search in the Northwest Territories for the missing Boeing 707.

A Korean Airlines official in Anchorage said an emergency locator beacon signal had been picked up, but the official was unable to give the location. The airline cautioned that the source of the signal was unknown.

To Retrace Route
The Canadian planes would retrace the 707's scheduled route, officials said, and search electronically even after dark if necessary. They will drop parachutists if the plane is found.

In Seoul, the airline said there were 61 foreigners among the passengers, 48 of them Japanese. There was no word on whether any Americans were aboard.

The airline official in Anchorage, who asked not to be named, said, "They may have set down on some remote Canadian field. I hope that's it. I know a lot of those people and my heart is with them."

The plane was scheduled to stop in Anchorage to refuel at 10:30 a.m. AST (2:30 p.m. CST) for refueling. It had been heard from almost four hours earlier by amateur radio operators in Canada. The pilot radioed that he was near the Alert station of Canadian Forces on Ellesmere Island, Northwest Territories, the FAA said.

Korean Airlines said the plane's descent was reported at 10:30 a.m. AST. See KOREAN Page 16

Mayor Lifts Rail Blockade Protesting Bad Tracks

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Mayor Joe Smitherman, who barred two Louisville & Nashville Railroad trains from passing through town because of a series of derailments that he blamed on bad tracks, relented Thursday after the company promised to make repairs.

He had said the yard tracks were so badly in need of repair that they could cause "a disaster from which this town would never recover."

New Ultimatum Given On Moro

ROME (AP) — After a frantic three-day hunt by divers, skiers and soldiers for Aldo Moro's body, a Rome newspaper Thursday received a snapshot of the kidnapped former premier in apparent good health. But with it was a communique vowing to kill him if the government does not agree to free "communist prisoners" by Saturday.

Investigators were not sure of the authenticity of the black-and-white Polaroid photo, which showed the 61-year-old politician in shirtsleeves, shaven and seemingly in better condition than in a previous picture released a month ago.

Sundown's Trustees Reconsider

SUNDOWN — Contracts for five school teachers here were renewed Thursday six weeks after school trustees had decided the contracts would be terminated.

Search Called Off
After the photo was made public, authorities immediately called off the search of a mountain lake northeast of Rome where an earlier message said Moro's body had been dumped. They did find a dead man in the icy waters Thursday, but it turned out to be a missing shepherd.

Police Chief's Son Held In Shootings

GALVESTON (AP) — The son of the Galveston police chief was charged Thursday with the shooting of two rookie officers after a barroom brawl.

Message Debunked
The statement received Thursday by the Rome daily Il Messaggero dismissed as "fake and provocative" a purported Red Brigade message Tuesday saying Moro had been "executed." Authorities already had begun doubting its authenticity.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Wayne Monagan got arrested Thursday for assault with a greasy french fry.

Moro "Condemned"
A communique last Saturday declared that Moro, president of the Christian Democrat Party, had been condemned at a "people's trial" because of the party's "anti-proletariat" policies.

THE FORMER chairman of the board of Slaton Savings and Loan Association and a co-defendant have been indicted by a federal grand jury for allegedly conspiring to embezzle and misapply funds.

sources of the Slaton financial institution was in effect from approximately June-September, 1973, according to the indictment.

The indictment returned by grand jurors here late Thursday accuses the two of conspiring to profit from association transactions and loans and of intentionally overvaluing land in order to influence the association to make loans.

The government charges that Ford was connected with the savings and loan and acted as its agent while at the same time being connected with Bay Tree Investments, Inc.

Shares of Slaton Savings and Loan Association stock were allegedly offered as collateral for the loan, the indictment says.

On Aug. 23, Ford and Miller caused the association to convey the Lubbock property to Bay Tree and caused it to loan Bay Tree the $500,000 for the purchase.

On about the same date, the defendants caused the association to sell a participation in the Bay Tree loan to the Franklin Bank of Houston.

On or about Aug. 28, Ford allegedly received $94,000 of the proceeds of the association loan to Bay Tree in the form of a check from Bay Tree payable to Bankers Financial Services, Inc.

On March 2 the board had voted not to renew the teachers' contracts based on King's recommendation.

On about the same date, the defendants caused the association to sell a participation in the Bay Tree loan to the Franklin Bank of Houston.

Blasts Kill Four At Cleburne

CLEBURNE (AP) — Two massive explosions leveled a building at a munitions plant here Thursday afternoon, killing the four employees who were inside and throwing portions of their bodies an estimated 400 yards, authorities said.

Building Leveled
"It totally leveled the place," said ambulance attendant Gary Lackey. Witnesses said foliage was stripped from nearby trees, while roofs were caved in and windows broken in houses 200 yards away.

Sets Grass Fires
The explosion set off a series of grass fires in the area that hampered immediate rescue attempts, Samanie said. He said authorities had feared other explosions because of explosive chemicals stored in surrounding buildings in the 430-acre complex.

Cleburne Fire Chief Red McVicker said the first explosion came at 4:35 p.m. and was followed by another one five minutes later.

Farmer Bob Bransom, who was taking his plane out of a hangar about eight miles away at the time of the blast, said, "I thought somebody had hit the hangar."

Woman Wants Crime Records Erased

ORANGE (AP) — A hearing, believed to be the first of its kind in Texas, has been set for today in state district court here on a petition calling for "expunction" (erasure) of a local woman's 1974 criminal record, including all accounts from four area newspapers and media files at the Orange Public Library.

Named in the petition are the Orange Leader, the Port Arthur News, the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal and an advertising newspaper distributed free of charge.

Orange County Attorney Jim Beardon said he will contest the petition, adding that he does not believe the law, which was passed in August 1977 and allows erasure of court records, applies to media accounts.

Linda Smith, through attorney Charles Sexton, initiated the request. In the petition, Sexton said his client has had her car insurance canceled by two companies "when they learned she had been arrested for marijuana possession..." He also said she is enrolling in a real estate course next month "and she would like to have a clear record."

The petition stems from a Sept. 18, 1974, incident when Mrs. Smith and her former husband, James Keith Smith, were arrested and charged with possession of 54 pounds of marijuana.

On Feb. 20, 1975, James Smith was arrested for the murders of a West Orange couple. He pleaded guilty and is now serving two concurrent life terms. Mrs. Smith's possession charge was not dropped until March 10, 1977.

"There was no reason to pursue (marijuana) charges against James Smith after he was sent to prison," said Beardon, adding that the marijuana case against Mrs. Smith was weaker since she was only a passenger in the car where the illegal weed was found.

He declined to comment when asked why he delayed dropping the possession charge against the woman.

Orange Leader publisher Jimmy Quigley termed involvement of members of the news media in the petition "a matter of grave concern to this newspaper and all others in Texas."

He said, "Any legal precedent that could lead to a series of court orders for expunction of such material from original file copies or microfilmed newspaper files would be disastrous."

"Because of the technical problems involved, it would mean the destruction of irreplaceable files involving many subject areas of vital importance to the newspapers as well as to individuals and organizations engaged in historical research."

Houston Police Leader Fired, Facing Criminal Charges

HOUSTON (AP) — Assistant Police Chief Carrol M. Lynn, the highest-ranking Houston police officer to ever face criminal charges, was fired Thursday about 10 days after being charged with obstruction of justice in an alleged extortion plot.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said he offered Lynn the opportunity to resign. When he refused, Caldwell fired the assistant chief, who once served briefly as head of the police department in the nation's fifth largest city.

Lynn, 45, was arraigned last Monday before U.S. Magistrate Lingo Platter, following a lengthy investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Conviction of the charge carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In an affidavit filed by the FBI, Lynn was accused of telling a former Houston businessman, James Vincent Holden, that he could arrange to have certain charges dismissed for a fee of $45,000.

Holden was accused of violating the sections of the Securities and Exchange Commission laws and of mail fraud.

Chief Caldwell said Thursday, "The indefinite suspension papers are based essentially on the facts filed before the U.S. Magistrate on April 17."

An indefinite suspension is the same as being fired.

Previously, Lynn had been on suspension with full pay.

The FBI affidavit said Lynn had told Holden and his attorney, Gerald Birnberg, that money could be sent to Leonel Castillo, now commissioner of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, who would "put the fix in through U.S. Attorney Tony Canales."

The affidavit said, "It was related by Lynn that Canales owed Castillo a political favor in that Castillo had gotten Canales appointed U.S. Attorney through Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen."

The FBI report also said Holden made two payments to Lynn, totaling $26,000, but that $25,000 had been recovered.

An FBI spokesman said earlier there is no evidence that Castillo or Canales had any knowledge of or were involved in the alleged scheme.

Castillo said, "The whole thing is preposterous. Lynn tried to use my name and Canales' as evidence that he could deliver."

The Houston police department has been the target of three investigations in recent months.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is predicted for New England today, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Brisk Winds Again To Prevail Today

Blowing dust could invade the South Plains today as southerly winds at 20 to 30 mph under partly cloudy skies continue to shove a low pressure system across West Texas.

In Lubbock temperatures should reach near 80 today before dipping into the mid 50s tonight and returning to the mid 70s Saturday.

A cooling trend will lower the mercury in the Lubbock area Saturday through Tuesday to the mid 60s and lower 70s and keep overnight lows near 50.

While forecasters predict dry weather for Lubbock through Tuesday, widely scattered thunderstorms are expected to invade eastern and southeastern portions of the state today.

Mostly clear skies prevailed over most of Texas Thursday, although some cloudiness did persist along the coastal regions of the state.

Winds gusted up to 30 mph in some areas of the state Thursday, although most places reported breezes at 5 to 15 mph.

Temperatures across the Lone Star state were mostly in the 70s and 80s with readings of 85 at Wink and 64 at Galveston for the 4 p.m. extremes.

Lubbock's high Thursday was 77 following a cool morning low of 41. Temperatures had not climbed out of the 40s by sunrise and remained in the mid 60s at noon.

Forecasters also are predicting cooler than average temperatures for most of the rest of the nation today following frost warnings early this morning from the northern and central Rockies eastward to the Appalachians as far south as the Tennessee Valley.

Rain may fall over portions of the U.S. extending from the Pacific northwest across the northern and central Plateau and into the northern and central Rockies.

Former FBI Director Gray Pleads Innocent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five blocks from where J. Edgar Hoover reigned so long over the FBI, his short-term successor pleaded innocent Thursday to charges of trampling the civil rights of Americans while searching for radical bombers.

"Not guilty," said L. Patrick Gray III to the accusation that he conspired with two other top FBI officials to injure and oppress citizens of the United States.

"Not guilty," said W. Mark Felt, a former acting associate director. "Not guilty," said Edward S. Miller, former assistant director of the domestic intelligence division.

Later, the former G-Men were taken to the U.S. marshal's office for processing. Mug shots were made, front and side, each man was assigned a number and fingerprints were taken to be sent later to the FBI's central files.

As the three were arraigned before U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey, about 500 current and former FBI agents massed in front of the courthouse to show support for their former chieftains.

They displayed no signs and there were only two short speeches, but vigorous applause greeted each of the defendants as he entered and left the building.

"All I can say is God bless everyone," said Felt, his eyes misting, after he and his wife made their way through the crowd. The bald, craggy-faced Gray, who was acting director of the FBI for only a year, appeared moved, but he said nothing.

In court, the three stood mute, except for proclaiming their innocence in firm voice. As their lawyers spoke with the judge, the defendants stood with their hands clasped behind their backs.

"We come not in bitterness, but in profound sorrow that this day has come to pass," Ed Morgan, speaking for the Society of Former Special Agents, said outside. "Your lifetime of dedication to law enforcement, to the cause of justice and to the security of this land bespeaks your character."

The defendants were released without bond. No trial date was set. They will next appear in court May 12 for pre-trial motions.

Gray, Felt and Miller are charged with unlawfully ordering break-ins of private homes while the bureau was trying to locate members of the radical Weather Underground between December 1972 and May 1973.

The indictment listed eight persons in the New York area, relatives and acquaintances of Weathermen, whose homes were burglarized.

Conviction on the single count of conspiracy to violate the civil rights of citizens of the United States carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and $10,000.

Gray, a former submariner, was appointed acting director of the FBI by Richard M. Nixon after Hoover's death in May 1972. Gray became the first man other than Hoover to head the bureau.

His nomination to be permanent director was withdrawn after Gray admitted burning documents from the White House safe of Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

In announcing the indictments April 10, Attorney General Griffin B. Bell said he decided that criminal prosecution should be brought at the highest level of authority.

The announcement was coupled with the dismissal of charges against a former lower-level FBI agent in New York, John Kearney.

Standing on the steps of the courthouse, which is halfway between the FBI building and the Capitol, agent Patrick J. Connor of New York City said that "by our presence you may be assured that every man and woman of this bureau stands behind you."

Connor said that had the crowd been there on the morning of March 1, 1971, "we would have been minutes away from a shattering explosion caused by a bomb which was placed in the Capitol building."

The bombing, he said, "was perpetrated by a terrorist organization calling itself the Weathermen."

Panel To Hear Airline Bid To Extend Service

AUSTIN (AP) — A hearing date of June 5 was set Thursday for the application of Southwest Airlines to extend its service to Amarillo and Beaumont-Port Arthur.

The Texas Aeronautics Commission said Southwest has asked authority to operate scheduled flights for passengers and cargo between Amarillo and Dallas, Austin, Houston, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Harlingen and Beaumont-Port Arthur, and between Beaumont-Port Arthur and Dallas, Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and El Paso.

The commission said Southwest proposes to schedule nonstop flights between Amarillo-Dallas and Beaumont-Port Arthur-Dallas with single plane and connecting service between Amarillo-Austin and Amarillo-Houston. The remaining markets would be served initially by connecting service on Southwest.

The application said that as markets develop, Southwest proposed to inaugurate additional nonstop service.

Senate Passes Bill Seeking Court Order For Wiretapping

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Thursday to require the federal government to get a court order before electronically bugging or wiretapping anybody, even a foreign spy, within the United States.

The measure, supported by President Carter, was approved 95-1 with Sen. William Scott, R-Va., casting the only vote against it. It now goes to the House.

The bill is one of several recommended by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence to put restraints on the activities of intelligence agencies.

The measure extends to the foreign intelligence gathering field the requirement that a warrant be obtained before electronic surveillance is conducted.

That requirement already applies in criminal investigations and investigations of domestic organizations believed to be a threat to security.

The Supreme Court has never ruled, however, on whether a warrant must also be obtained before placing wiretaps or bugs to find out what foreign agents are up to.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said the bill would "fill one of the last remaining loopholes in the laws governing wiretapping and other electronic surveillance in the United States."

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the intelligence committee, said the measure forecloses any claim by a president that he has "inherent power" to order such wiretaps because of his constitutional duty to conduct foreign affairs.

Unlike a measure that was considered but not passed two years ago, the bill would require proof of potential criminal conduct before a wiretap order could be obtained. In the case of foreign powers and foreign officials, however, less proof would be required than in the case of an American citizen.

Local Robbery Suspect Faces Added Charges

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The man charged with robbing the Smuggler's Inn here earlier this month remained in Lubbock County Jail Thursday in lieu of $100,000 bond after it was learned he has been accused of similar incidents in other Texas cities.

Danny Burtist Eoff, 23, of 2130 74th St. was arrested at his home late Tuesday on a felony warrant from El Paso. He has been charged with the aggravated robbery there earlier this year of the Nantucket Lobster Trap Restaurant in which he allegedly got over $1,900.

Ironically, Eoff was out of jail on an appeal bond after a Midland jury found him guilty of aggravated robbery last summer. The suspect had been accused of robbing the Sonic Drive-In Restaurant of $991 in that city on April 7, 1977.

He reportedly had been sentenced to 15 years following his conviction.

Eoff was arrested here on April 2 of this year after a masked gunman made off with $999 from the 1915 50th St. Smuggler's Inn.

In that incident, the robber reportedly confronted an employee leaving the building about 3 a.m. and ordered her back inside the business. The witness said the masked man led her into the dining area where several employees were gathered after work and ordered them into a cold-storage vault.

Assistant manager Michael Earl Sandell said the man made him lead the way to the bar, where the bandit reportedly ordered seven more employees to lie face-down on the floor as he and Sandell went into the office and emptied the safe.

After the man had put money in a sack, the robber ordered employees on the bar-room floor into the vault, which he then locked.

Unknown to the bandit, two of the imprisoned workers had called authorities. Sheriff's Deputy Dean Bohannon was waiting outside and the suspect was arrested after a brief chase.

The bill authorizes the chief justice to designate seven U.S. district judges who would be authorized to grant warrants for electronic surveillance for foreign intelligence purposes.

The chief justice also would name a special three-judge court, drawn from the judges of the U.S. circuit courts of appeals, to hear appeals from such decisions.

Applications would have to be made by the attorney general with the authority of the president. Wiretaps or bugs on American citizens or foreign visitors would be limited to 90 days. A wiretap on an embassy or other official foreign establishment could be authorized for up to a year.

Deed Done--Now Hear This

IN THE WAKE of the Senate's razor-thin vote approving the second and final of the two Panama Canal treaties, all sorts of conclusions are being drawn.

In the final analysis, it may well be years before "the whole score" is in on what has happened and the effects the pacts will have on immediate and long-range U.S. policy, reaction abroad, from both friend and foe, and of course on the Canal operations.

Predictably, those who favored the treaties saw the 68 to 32 squeaker count, as President Carter termed it, "A beautiful vote." Those who opposed it reiterated fears of things to come.

BUT, IT WAS left to Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., to perhaps best sum it up in the minds of millions of plain Americans:

"We have lost more than a great waterway," Sen. Dole said, "We have lost an effort to prove that American opinion still counts for something in the White House and in the United States Senate."

Although there are many reasons why the Panama pacts should have been rejected, it is this disturbing element of the whole fiasco that eats at the guts of millions.

They have been made to feel that what they think, how they are represented in the highest councils of government no longer counts.

THE PRESIDENT, and even Texas' own Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, have argued that in this case they, in effect, know better than the folks who put them in office.

Blithely ignoring the fact that they, and others, pledged to "carry out the wishes" of the constituents whose votes they sought while campaigning, both Mr. Carter and Sen. Bentsen, plus the 67 other Senators who voted for the treaties "did it their way."

For this, they may learn that the voters have long memories the next time each and every one comes up for re-election.

AN EDITORIAL:

Hobby's The One

TEXAS DEMOCRATS have a clear choice in the May 6 primary for lieutenant governor: incumbent Bill Hobby.

Hobby has three opponents but, even this late in the campaign, few Texans could name even one of them.

That in itself testifies to the esteem in which Hobby is held: no one with a statewide political reputation wanted to challenge him.

And for good reason. Scion of a Houston newspaper and political family, Hobby has built a solid record of achievement in his six years as lieutenant governor.

As presiding officer of the Texas Senate, Hobby has been fair to all points of view even while exerting leadership to pass a progressive legislative program within the limits of available state revenues.

On his record, Bill Hobby gets The Avalanche-Journal's endorsement for his party's nomination to a new term as lieutenant governor.

M. STANTON EVANS:

No Inducement Needed To Debauch Currency

WASHINGTON—Despite the stated enthusiasm of the Carter administration for federal tax reform, there is one kind of correction in the national taxing system that seldom gets official mention: The idea of indexing federal tax rates to inflation.

That such a reform is overdue is obvious from the recent record. Inflation by itself, or progressive taxation by itself, would each be bad enough.

But put the two together, and the combined potential for public mayhem is appalling.

AS COST-OF-living adjustments push money wages constantly upward (while actual purchasing power increases little, if any), the taxpayer is nudged into higher and higher income brackets—and that means ever-higher tax rates.

One academic study tells us that federal tax receipts were increased by $16 billion between 1973 and 1974, simply through the impact of inflation.

Casting our economic horoscope for 1979-83, the Joint Committee on Taxation surmises that added taxes imposed by way of inflationary bumping will total $58.7 billion.

ROUND IT OFF, as Donald J. Senese has done in a recent study for the Heritage Foundation, and it appears that every 10 percentage points of inflation may be expected to trigger a 14 or 15 percent increase in taxes.

As a result, notes Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., "taxes have tripled for a typical family, (increasing) from $2,276 in 1967 to an estimated $6,333 in 1978."

"A median family will pay an estimated 37.3 percent of the annual family income in taxes this year, compared with 28.9 percent a decade ago,

AS FOR THE impact of the Panama "giveaway" itself, we may have to wait a few weeks, months or even years.

But in the minds of close observers of the international situation and the workings of Communism, there is little doubt but that the U.S. faces trouble long before the year 2000 deadline for completely turning over the Canal to Panama arrives.

As if to confirm this fear, plus the warnings of those who opposed the treaties, Panamanian Dictator and Gen. Omar Torrijos boasted only hours after the treaties were approved that if they had been rejected his troops would have made the Canal inoperable by morning.

Then as if to add insult to his threat, he also warned that if the United States ever sends troops into his country to protect the Canal—as the treaty specifically allows—they will find the waterway destroyed.

IN VIEW OF such arrogance, President Carter should refuse to sign the treaties until Gen. Torrijos retracts the statement.

Should he sign the treaties with this public statement refuting a key part of the pacts, then Mr. Carter should summarily be charged with violating the letter as well as the spirit of the treaties and be held accountable before the Senate.

While Mr. Carter and Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd were hailing the treaty as a "victory for America," one of the most active foes of the pact, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, warned:

"The United States Senate has made a serious mistake which it—and the American people—will live to regret.

"I foresee agitation in Panama for further changes in the treaty," said Garn, "and a faster canal turnover than is currently provided." Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., another leading opponent, said: "The Senate failed to reject a treaty the people didn't want. It's that simple."

TO US, THERE is more involved as it relates to the "image" of the U.S., the "image" which Sen. Bentsen and Mr. Carter made such a big issue.

Instead of enhancing America's stature among Latin and South America and Third World nations, we see it as one more step toward painting the U.S. as a weak giant, giving ground on every front before the onslaught of Communism.

Time and again, this administration, as well as some in previous ones for that matter, have "given in" to those who are in bed with the Communists or to Moscow itself.

Let the record show that Mr. Carter has done little—except talk, and that only lately—about Cuban and Russian armed intrusions in Africa, that he has put the U.S. in a weak position by killing the B1 bomber program, cutting down Naval strength, cutting back on the Cruise Missile range and most recently delaying manufacture and deployment of the neutron bomb.

The Panama "giveaway" not only may come home to haunt the President and the likes of Sen. Bentsen politically, but the American people in more serious and deadly ways.

all as a result of the steeply graduated, or progressive tax rates...

The inflationary bonus that flows to Washington through this quirk in the law explains the lack of interest in reforming it.

If the feds need any further inducement to debauch the currency (which they don't), this feature of existing law would obviously provide it.

All the more reason, of course, that a true reform should be adopted. Fortunately, there are numerous congressmen who are conscious of the inequity, and have introduced appropriate legislation.

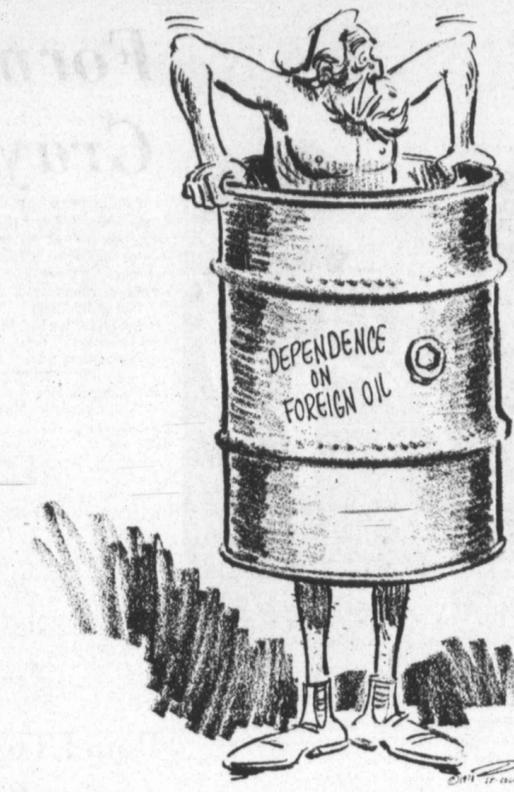

The major common feature of such bills is a requirement that federal tax brackets be adjusted upward to account for the annual increase in the Consumer Price Index, so that taxpayers aren't forced to pay a higher rate simply because of nominal increases of money income.

MOST OF THE bills also require that the rise in the CPI be computed into the standard deduction and personal exemption in the federal income tax, that capital gains be computed only on real increases in value, and that depreciation schedules make realistic allowance for augmented replacement costs.

Ohio's Rep. Gradison, who has been pushing especially hard for indexation, illustrates the value of such a reform to a hypothetical wage-earner with a 1977 taxable income of $10,000.

"By the year 1986," Gradison says, "assuming a six percent yearly inflation rate, he will have paid an additional $1,166 merely because rising prices have forced him into higher tax brackets."

Indexing will deprive the feds of that amount of money, and keep it in the hands of the average taxpayer. That's the kind of tax reform we really need.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

A Jawboner Boner

WASHINGTON—A clue to future administration strategy against inflation is the fact that Robert S. Strauss was named President Carter's jawboner-in-chief without the advice and consent of an understandably miffed Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

Blumenthal thought the notion of an anti-inflation "czar" had been killed by the President two weeks earlier. What he did not know was that the influential circle of non-economists now advising Carter on economic policy—Vice President Walter F. Mondale plus senior White House aides—at the 11th hour talked the President into naming Strauss "special counselor on inflation."

That Strauss's main task will be jawboning against higher prices and wages underlines Carter's intention: talk inflation to death—a dubious strategy in the opinion of many economists, including Blumenthal.

ANDREW TULLY:

Firm As Dishrag

WASHINGTON—All right, President Carter now has what "he" calls an anti-inflation program. He talks like a man who would seriously consider a proposal to empty the Atlantic Ocean with a teaspoon.

Carter's problem is that he doesn't realize leadership entails willingness to make some people mad. A war on inflation would be made to work by a Harry Truman or an Ike Eisenhower, both of whom had the guts of a rock star when the chips were down. HST and Ike wanted to be loved, too. But that's all Jimmy Carter wants.

His decision to limit an October pay raise for federal workers, and the military to 5.5 per cent instead of 6.5 per cent is an indication of his tendency to ward off mass sulking in special-interest tents. He says he wants the government to set an example to the private sector. But the example he proposes is pure dishwater.

CARTER'S 5.5 PER cent raise limit will cost the 300,000 federal white-collar workers in the Washington area an average of only $3.96 a week. The cost will be lower nationally because the average pay is lower than the Washington area's annual average of $20,570.

I refuse to be impressed. With inflation flooding the Republic, Carter has put not a finger, but a toothpick, in the dike.

The labor barons in the bureaucracy are sore, of course. They'd be sore if Carter chipped a nickel off their fief's annual income.

If you can do so without wretching, consider the reaction of Kenneth Blaylock, president of the 300,000-member American Federation of Government Employees union.

BLAYLOCK FINDS the idea of "mandatory wage controls for civil servants disgusting." He threatens work slowdowns by AFGE members in service, safety and support jobs.

Kenneth Lyons, president of the National Association of Government Employees, says the President is offering "peanuts" to the feds. "Peanuts?"

Both these barons say the pay raise cut would not stop inflation. They're right, but only because the reduction isn't big enough to impress Big Labor and Big Business.

What the country needs is a President with thechutzpah to demand more than merely a symbolic attack on the high price of shin meat.

THERE IS a widespread impression that the 7 percent salary contribution by federal employees pays for half their pensions, an equal 7 per cent contribution by government agencies pays for the rest. Ha!

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., hardly a fascist reactionary, has come up with the figures that set the record straight. Nelson quotes the Civil Service's chief actuary as reporting that costs in fiscal 1977 amounted to 29.3 cents for each dollar of salary paid out by the government.

Employees contributed 7 cents and the government the remaining 22.3 cents. The retirement system received $15 billion in contributions from employees and government last year, but only $2.9 billion came from employees.

Meanwhile, Social Security costs for non-government workers are split 50-50 between employer and employee, with no help from Treasury's general revenues. Your Honor, I rest the taxpayers' case.

JAY HARRIS:

The Gap Theory...

THOUGHT FOR Today: When you shoot an arrow of truth, dip its point in honey.

OVERHEARD: If we all obeyed the Ten Commandments, there wouldn't be any need for new jails.

AFTER THE recent Stock Market surge, a dyed-in-the-wool-over-his-eyes Democrat asked if we were going to give President Carter credit for it.

Our answer was "No, and he can't be totally blamed for the year-long slide, although he contributed to part of it."

The truth of the matter is that the Stock Market's troubles, as well as the nation's, aren't over yet. While the psychology has changed, the basics are still around. For those who follow such things, and millions do, the unprecedented "April Rally" has been something of a puzzle.

According to some "experts," the turnaround came because stock prices had got so low that despite the news—economic, political and otherwise—there were bargains galore. Too, the institutions, which control the market, saw some hopeful signs on the horizon, a slowing in the money supply, a firming of the dollar abroad, indications the administration is worrying about inflation...

FOR THE "little guy," and big one too for that matter, it was a case of not missing the boat, covering shorts or following the herd.

Actually, the market no longer is a small investor's playpen. True, many individuals still "play the market," including hundreds in this area. But, for the most part, it is a guessing game dictated by the institutions.

So, is the recent turnaround for real or not? Do the money boys believe there's a new day dawning in Washington? The answer, according to The Wall Street Journal, is qualified.

While the "climate" has changed somewhat, the truth is that inflation hasn't gone away, the danger of higher interest rates is still around and the administration's vacillation on major policy matters continues. So much for the politics of it.

For those who study such things, there also is the "gap" theory. That is, when the market jumps, rising or going down, in such a manner that it creates a gap between two days' closing and opening, then history shows that sooner or later, the gap is filled. For what it's worth, and don't bet the family jewels on it, the latest Wall Street explosion created a "gap" around 780. Will the market fill it? What does your broker say?

SLIDE ROAD SAM Says: Middle age is when you go all out, you end up all in.

MANY POLITICIANS are like modern art. Nobody is quite sure what they represent.

SPEAKING OF the voting game, the big wind-up will be getting underway soon.

With less than three weeks to go before the May 6 primary showdown, most candidates soon will go all out to get in the last word with advertising blitzes.

Hopefully, most of them will take the opportunity to get down to the nitty-gritty and enumerate more specifically than some have thus far what they really stand for, what their philosophical approach to government is, and how they will respond to this area's wishes.

In choosing "the person who," the citizen still has time to do some research for himself. Ask the candidate if possible about specific issues. Ask those who know them best, friends, neighbors, business acquaintances. Look at who is supporting and working in various campaigns. That says a lot...

Then, go vote, if you are sure you know what you are doing. All the talk in the world means nothing unless you cast a ballot, an intelligent ballot.

RAPID TRANSIT: What everybody wants everybody else to ride on.

MACK MCGINNIS says if there is no life on other planets, it may be because their scientists were a little more advanced than ours.

COMMUNICATION IS the key to what makes things tick.

And, if you've sometimes had the feeling you aren't "getting through" to someone, chances are you were right. According to a recent item in the Reader's Digest, people of different types often get their wires crossed.

But, psychologist Paul Mok claims you can bridge the communications gap if you recognize and deal with the other person's style. Mok says there are four basic personalities: The Thinker, the Feeler, the Intuit and the Sensor.

Thinkers, he says, are orderly, structured and sensible. If you're not a Thinker, you may find them rigid, dogmatic, and boring. If you want to reach a Thinker, Mok advises an unhurried, logical and analytic approach.

WHAT HAPPENS when a Thinker has to work with a Feeler?

You'd be wise to remember that Feelers are emotional, spontaneous, warm and friendly, he says. Appeal to those qualities and things should mesh.

Intuitors are the inventors, planners and artists of the world, it says here. They often are erratic and tend to get impatient if you don't immediately see their point. To "get along" with this type, try to present the broad picture. Words like "new," "creative," "idealistic" turn them on.

Finally, there is the Sensor, a goal-oriented person who likes nothing more than to get the job done. He tends to plunge into things precipitously. But he's loyal. To the Sensor, the key is the payoff.

Of course, the real key is to find out what sort of person we ourselves are. One of the big problems in the world is that many people don't even know themselves. And that's a real communications gap!

Griffin Feels Record Ranks With State's Best

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin Thursday defended his record, saying he challenged anyone to show him a more efficient prosecutory operation in the state.

"There may be some smaller areas where they stay current. But give me the courts and I will stay current too," Griffin said.

At one point, however, during a wide-ranging interview with an editorial board of The Avalanche-Journal, Griffin agreed that the local crime rate is getting to a point where it is "intolerable."

He blamed permissive jury verdicts in large part for the problem.

The silver-haired Griffin, a veteran incumbent, is being challenged by local attorney John T. Montford in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Also during the interview, Griffin criticized investigation of some cases by local law enforcement agencies, said flatly he has "no confidence" in the federal Drug Enforcement Administration and branded Montford's proposal of an administrator for the office as ridiculous.

"In 1972, there were 42 jury cases tried in the district courts," Griffin said in defending his record.

He said that in contrast there were 113 jury cases heard in the district courts last year, and approximately 46 so far this year.

When asked if the crime rate were becoming intolerable in Lubbock, Griffin said, "Yes. And I would like to get better support from the citizens on jury verdicts."

The DA said that while he was in San Angelo and Wichita Falls prosecuting capital cases, his office in Lubbock tried 18 cases.

"While there, our office tried 18 cases and got 14 convictions — and juries probated eight of the cases," Griffin said.

"These are cases where we had not offered probation."

Montford has indicated there is a possible drug problem in local schools and said there should be tougher prosecution in drug cases.

Griffin said his original policy had been never to offer probation in a felony drug case. "We went for a year, and every conviction we got was probated," he said.

As a general rule of thumb, Griffin said, plea bargaining offers by his office are based on what juries have usually given in similar cases.

"Based on what juries would do, we take a little off," Griffin said.

Normally, according to Griffin, juries in such cases as burglaries and thefts will probate young, first-time offenders. Griffin said the minimum penalty for those offenses is two years, and the office usually offers a year above the minimum, or three-year probations.

"There has got to be some system to get guilty pleas," Griffin said. He explained that more than 900 indictments have been returned to Lubbock courts in each of the past two years and that there are only approximately 80 trial weeks available each year. "We are lucky if we get two trials per week," Griffin said, indicating plea bargaining is a mathematical necessity.

"Ninety per cent of our offers are 'take it or leave it,'" he said.

"I have never offered probation on armed robberies," Griffin said.

His opponent has criticized probation offers to some murder defendants. Griffin responded that murder probations were restricted chiefly to domestic incidents and killings resulting from bar-room altercations.

"The biggest percentage of those tried before a jury would turn out just like the one today (an acquittal of murder defendant Charlie Jordan Jr.)," Griffin said. "Either probation, or not guilty."

Griffin had some sharp words for some local law enforcement efforts.

"I have no confidence in the DEA," he said. Griffin said he had seen the agency "pass over other crimes, burglaries, assaults" in order not to interfere with what informants said would be major drug transactions. Griffin indicated the transactions usually never materialized.

Montford has stressed greater cooperation between the DA's office and police, suggesting that new prosecutors ride with officers to learn first-hand of problems in the field. Griffin said police and deputies need better training and discipline.

Saying he did not mean to "tar all" officers with a "broad brush," Griffin indicated officers need more training in what is necessary to prepare a case for the courtroom.

As an example, he cited the 1975 slayings of Warren and Odessa McKay. Sheriff's deputies said vehicle tracks were found outside the McKay residence when they arrived there the night of the killings, but the evidence, according to Griffin, was not properly safeguarded. The tracks were gone when deputies returned the next morning.

Griffin also cited friction between various law enforcement agencies as a continuing problem.

Montford Mounting Aggressive Campaign

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Like love, John Montford hopes running for criminal district attorney is easier the second time around.

Second to incumbent Alton Griffin with 48 percent of the vote four years ago, Montford is out-spending the incumbent Griffin 2 to 1 this time and is running a campaign as aggressive as he promises his administration will be if he wins the May 6 Democratic primary.

There is not a Republican candidate for the office.

Recent campaign expense reports show Montford having spent about $18,000 and Griffin about half that much in their campaigns.

In an interview with Avalanche-Journal executives, the Lubbock attorney listed several things he said he would do differently than Griffin.

He promised 1) to seek the denial of bond more often for multiple offenders, 2) to seek the immediate revocation of probation rather than let revocations be delayed parallel to new charges, 3) develop better cooperation between the district attorney's office and law enforcement agencies and 4) be more aggressive against the drug problem in Lubbock.

He remarked several times during the interview that he considers himself "an even-tempered person," and he was asked if he thought Griffin sometimes has difficulty controlling his temper.

"Yes, I do," he said, "and I think it takes away from the dignity of the office and the rationality of some decisions."

Although none of the interview was off the record, he asked later that the statement not be used because it might alter the nature of his campaign.

Montford criticized Griffin for infrequently prosecuting drug cases and said his contacts with the public during the campaign have implied a serious drug problem in the schools.

"I don't know if it's hard narcotics, but there may be a lot of marijuana floating around, even in the junior highs," he said.

Asked why he thinks the crime rate in Lubbock is increasing, he said, "I don't think we have a reputation for being tough."

Judges would give stiffer sentences if the district attorney pushed for them, he said, and an increased court load at first as more defendants refused to plead guilty would ease later.

"I think if we hit a few cases hard at first, the other cases will fall into line on a higher scale," he said.

Other changes Montford said he would make would be to hire a full-time office administrator at about $16,000 a year, to have new assistants spend two weeks riding with police before they start prosecuting cases and to spend more time in court than Griffin does.

Aside from the administrator, the only new expense his election would bring to the office, he said, would be for more extensive laboratory tests in the preparation of rape cases.

Montford also promised to keep the office open to the public.

Information might be withheld on serious cases as they are developing, he said, adding, "But as far as anything else is concerned, I think you've got to remember who you're working for. I feel like if I have anything to hide, I'm not doing my job."

Seminar Set

The Democratic Party will sponsor a voter participation seminar at 5 p.m. Sunday at New Hope Baptist Church, 2002 Birch St.

The meeting is designed to explain how to use voting machines and to encourage participation in precinct, county, state and national party conventions.

Narcotics Warrants Trail 90-Day Probe

MIDLAND (Special) — An undercover narcotic agent's three-month stint on the streets of Midland and Odessa ended Thursday with charges being filed against 33 area residents on 56 different narcotic violations.

Sheriff's deputies in Midland and Ector Counties late Thursday still were seeking some of the defendants named in warrants issued about 1 p.m. Wednesday on the basis of the Department of Public Safety agent's investigation.

All 56 charges were for delivery of controlled substances including LSD, marijuana, cocaine, peyote, amphetamines, methamphetamines, phenylcyclidine and tetrahydrocannabinol, according to Midland Narcotic Division Capt. Bob Joseph.

The warrants were issued for 24 persons on 38 charges in Odessa and for nine persons on 18 charges in Midland, he said.

Joseph said the arrests were the result of an undercover investigation by the DPS narcotics officer with the aid of two other DPS officers, the Ector County Sheriff's Office the Midland County Sheriff's Office and the district attorneys in both counties.

Most of the cases were unrelated, he said, with the arrests being made at the same time simply because the investigation was being closed.

Joseph said some of those persons arrested had previous criminal records, but some were new faces to the officers.

Among those arrested were an Odessa College music professor and at least one owner of an Ector County bonding company.

The music professor, Charles Edward Baxley, was being held on $300,000 bond set after his arraignment on three counts of delivery of LSD. Odessa College President Phillip Speegle said Baxley would be suspended.

Joseph said most of the alleged drug sales had occurred off of the college campus, and most of the violations were for sales of small amounts.

One man late Thursday still was being sought, however, for delivery of 1,000 doses of LSD valued at about $3,000 in street sales, Joseph said.

Authorities said in most of the incidents the alleged sales were made to the undercover agent in the three months he was assigned to the "street detail" of the narcotics division.

Joseph said officers at least hoped the arrests would stop or slow the flow of narcotics into the cities, but because those arrested were not major suppliers, he added, "I'm sure we hurt, but there's no way of knowing whether you've wiped the problem out for now or not. You really can't be sure until you make the next arrest, and then you'll know you haven't."

16 "Yes," Jesus replied. "Didn't you ever read the Scriptures? For they say, 'Even little babies shall praise Him!'"

17 Then He returned to Bethany, where He stayed overnight.

18 In the morning, as He was returning to Jerusalem, He was hungry.

19 And noticed a fig tree beside the road. He went over to see if there were any figs, but there were only leaves. Then He said to it, "Never bear fruit again!" And soon the fig tree withered up.

20 The disciples were utterly amazed and asked, "How did the fig tree wither so quickly?"

21 Then Jesus told them, "Truly, if you have faith, and don't doubt, you can do things like this and much more. You can even say to this Mount of Olives, 'Move over into the ocean,' and it will.

22 You can get anything—anything you ask for in prayer—if you believe."

23 When He had returned to the Temple and was teaching, the chief priests and other Jewish leaders came up to Him and demanded to know by whose authority He had thrown out the merchants the day before.

24 "I'll tell you if you answer one question first," Jesus replied.

25 "Was John the Baptist sent from God, or not?" They talked it over among themselves. "If we say, 'From God,' they said, 'then He will ask why we didn't believe what John said.'

26 And if we deny that God sent him, we'll be mobbed, for the crowd all think he was a prophet."

27 So they finally replied, "We don't know!" And Jesus said, "Then I won't answer your question either."

28 But what do you think about this? A man with two sons told the older boy, 'Son, go out and work on the farm today.'

29 'I won't,' he answered, but later he changed his mind and went.

30 Then the father told the youngest, 'You go!' and he said 'Yes, sir, I will.' But he didn't.

31 Which of the two was obeying his father?" They replied, "The first, of course." Then, Jesus explained His meaning: "Surely evil men and prostitutes will get into the Kingdom before you do."

32 For John the Baptist told you to repent and turn to God, and you wouldn't, while very evil men and prostitutes did. And even when you saw this happening, you refused to repent, and so you couldn't believe.

Police Investigating Alleged Extortion Try

Lubbock police Thursday were investigating another spate of local crime that included a reported armed robbery, a pair of aggravated assaults and a reported attempt by two young men to extort money from an elderly, crutch-bound man.

Leland Kelly of 3212 23rd St., told police he'd just driven up to a club in the 900-block of Idalou Road minutes before midnight Wednesday, when a black man believed to be 26 to 35 years old, approached brandishing a .38-caliber weapon.

Kelly said the suspect made off with $250 in the city's 92nd reported holdup of the year.

A 20-year-old curb builder said he was dancing at a club in the 700-block of Broadway early Thursday when he accidentally bumped another man.

The second dancer reportedly exchanged words with the victim, then reportedly purposely "bumped" the victim as he made his way to a nearby table.

At that point, words again were exchanged, and the suspect reportedly threw a glass at the 20-year-old. The victim reportedly put his hand up defensively and was cut when he blocked the glass with his arm.

Yet another reveler was injured early Thursday at still another nightclub when he, too, was hit by a flying glass missile.

The 23-year-old victim reportedly was at a club in the 2400-block of 4th Street just after midnight when his brother became involved in a fight.

As the two combatants struggled, the victim tried to pull one of the men away. At that point, someone apparently threw a bottle at the victim, who was struck beneath his left eye. The wound required several stitches, the man told police.

Meanwhile, Rudy Alvarez of 2509 2nd Place said he had just returned to his apartment about 11:10 a.m. Thursday, when two young Mexican-American men threw open his door, walked through and began shaking Alvarez down for money.

The victim, who wears a cast on his left leg, said he told the men he had no money, but was shook and thrown to the floor anyway.

Alvarez said his shirt was torn during the fracas, but the suspects escaped without any money.

Mrs. Aline Wideman of 3702 46th St. said someone entered her garage recently, then used a pair of hedge clippers to pry their way into her home.

The intruders stole about 36 items, most of it jewelry, she said. The property was valued at more than $300.

Walter Grammer lost $500 worth of property to burglars Thursday, when someone stole his color television from his residence at 1615 16th St.

A set of bed springs, a mattress, some curtains and a table, valued together at $1,000, reportedly were stolen from an apartment recently, according to J. N. Sikes of 3204 45th St.

Delber Girard of 6801 19th St. said someone broke into a mobile home at 6615 W. 19th St. Wednesday and stole a refrigerator, stove, couch and lamps, all valued at $800.

Kenneth Keneda of 4822 7th St. reported the theft of a $320 microwave oven by burglars who recently broke into an unoccupied house at 3413 95th St.

As James Jones, a teacher at Estacado High School, was attempting to break up a tussle between a group of girls Thursday morning, someone stole a $150 stopwatch the teacher had on his arm.

Reporting a stole bike recently was Betsy Sadler of 3501 57th St., who said her son's cycle was taken from the Evans Junior High School yard at 4211 56th St.

A 23-year-old Lubbock man was arrested Wednesday after he allegedly concealed stolen goods in a car's engine.

The property, $305 cash, $200 worth of jewelry and an $80 revolver, reportedly was stolen from the 306 E. 37th St. home of Ray Munoz Jr. sometime between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday. The complainant told officers he came home to discover a window broken and the goods missing.

Police subsequently received information on a possible suspect, who was arrested about 6:35 p.m. on Avenue T.

The man reportedly had put the money in a car's air cleaner and the jewelry, wrapped in a rag, under the hood next to the battery.

Mrs. Neal Duke of 1717 Norfolk Ave., No. 1480, said a $3,500 diamond and ruby ring was stolen from her home recently. Reports indicated there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment.

According to Mary Elvin Cole, burglars got through a door at her 1523 27th St. residence Wednesday and made off with $636 worth of firearms.

Dayan To Visit U.S. Next Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department confirmed Thursday that Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan will visit the United States late next week for consultations on ways to resume the stalled Middle East peace negotiations.

Department press officer Thomas Reston said Dayan's visit will result in the curtailment of the Middle East mediation effort by Ambassador-at-large Alfred Atherton, who is due to arrive in Egypt on Friday.

Atherton had planned to move on to Israel after spending several days in Egypt, but will return to Washington instead to be present for Dayan's consultations, Reston said.

He denied an Israeli newspaper report that Israel has informed the United States it has decided to reject the U.S. proposal to resume Atherton's mediation efforts.

Atherton returned here in early March after spending several weeks traveling to various Middle East capitals attempting to break the impasse in the peace process.

Pimentos Analyzed For Botulism Toxin

Dallas health specialists late Thursday were analyzing a case of pimentos that may be implicated in the recent illness of more than 30 persons hospitalized after eating what investigators believe was botulism-contaminated food at a Clovis, N.M., restaurant.

Jerry Henderson, Food and Drug Administration spokesman in Dallas, said the pimentos, believed to be from Albuquerque, were reportedly the same kind used in making a potato salad at the Clovis Colonial Park Country Club restaurant between April 9 and 13. Potato salad served at the restaurant on April 12 and 13 has been found to be contaminated with the botulism toxin.

"The pimentos sort of represent an unknown, and we want to plug that gap in our knowledge," Henderson said. "We have reason to believe that they were an ingredient in the potato salad. We know that's contaminated, and we are just trying to find out why."

He emphasized that the testing of the pimentos was a precautionary move.

"We are not even certain that this was the type used. We're just checking pimentos in general," he said, adding that it would probably be Sunday before tests results on the pimentos will be known.

FDA investigators Thursday were also scouring Clovis area food warehouses for pimentos that might have been sold to the country club, Henderson said.

State and federal officials Wednesday had sorted through the Clovis city dump for containers which had held the pimentos. But their attempts to find the discarded containers proved futile.

"We still remain optimistic about finding something, but as time goes on, chances diminish," Henderson said.

"If we don't find it, you can probably assume that it was a single item, very localized and hopefully that will be the end of it," he added. "The fact that there have been no more cases appears to bear that out."

Jon Thompson, regional state health officer at Clovis, said Thursday that the majority of the food poisoning victims still in hospitals in New Mexico and West Texas were "at least stabilizing or recovering."

At one time, 33 persons had been hospitalized following the suspected contamination outbreak. But, no deaths have been reported in connection with the incident.

In Lubbock, a Methodist Hospital spokeswoman said that 28-year-old Pam Seiler, a Lubbock-area resident and Reese Air Force Base employee, had been discharged from the hospital Thursday. Mrs. Seiler was one of seven persons admitted to Methodist following the Clovis outbreak.

Another of those patients, John Garrett, 65, a Clovis area farmer-rancher, remained at Methodist's critical list Thursday.

Maurine Claibourne, 60, of Clovis, was listed in serious condition at the Lubbock hospital.

The remaining four patients — Wilburn Prince, 49; Dr. L.W. "Larry" Byous, 57, superintendent of the Clovis schools; Darrell Johnson, 48, an insurance agent; and Billy Dietson, 35, all of Clovis — Thursday were listed in satisfactory condition at Methodist.

Thompson said he planned to meet this week with the restaurant's management to discuss re-opening the facility. The restaurant closed voluntarily after the outbreak was reported last weekend.

"This wasn't their fault in terms of sanitation or management practices," he said Thursday. "They just got a bad something that had botulism in it. We intend to get them back on their feet as soon as possible."

Investigators have said they are uncertain how the potato salad may have been contaminated, but apparently have attempted to determine if cross-contamination from some other food source or food-related equipment might be involved.

Services for Mrs. Qualls will be at 3 p.m. Saturday in Turkey Church of Christ with Jack Hutton, minister, officiating.

Congressmen Say Chances Slim For Full Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressmen told President Carter Thursday his chances of getting Americans a full $23.9 billion tax cut this year are slim, and a Carter aide said the nation might suffer recession if Congress fails to act at all.

"The president feels his targets for cuts are about right, but I think they are a little high," Chairman Al Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee told reporters after he and other committee members spent 45 minutes with Carter.

The president has proposed tax cuts of $23.9 billion effective Oct. 1, along with a series of changes in the tax system.

Ullman told White House reporters he favored a cut of "about $20 billion," but revised that figure to $15 billion when he returned to Capitol Hill.

"The president is staying with his figure," Ullman said.

"We came to no final conclusions," he added, saying he would meet with Vice President Walter Mondale and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal to work on a compromise.

The bill, Ullman told Capitol Hill reporters, "obviously will be quite a bit different from what he (Carter) wanted."

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Carter "sees no reason to alter his tax cut proposal" despite the opposition in Ullman's committee.

"The fact is," Powell said, "the dominant opinion is that we do face the prospect of a pause in the economy or a recession if we do not act."

After the Carter meeting, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said he felt Carter would work with the panel "to develop a package that can be salvaged."

But Rostenkowski agreed with Ullman the full Carter package had little if any chance of passage.

The committee, now in its fourth day of drafting the bill, has given Carter little of what he wanted in tax cut size or in revision of the tax codes.

Congressional sources said there is a possibility the committee will vote next week simply to kill the bill.

"Generally the report he got on tax reform was not encouraging," Powell said. Powell said "night club owners and yacht salesmen" had effectively coordinated their efforts to beat some of the tax revision measures aimed at curtailing business entertainment tax breaks.

Oil Import Figures Show Cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Energy Department issued welcome figures Thursday showing total U.S. petroleum imports dropped 14.3 percent in the first quarter of 1978 and imports of refined products — mainly heating oil — plunged by 21.6 percent.

A department spokesman said the reduced reliance on foreign oil, largely the result of less winter consumption and the surge of domestic oil through the Alaska pipeline, came as "no big surprise."

Industry sources forecast another decline in the second quarter of 1978, a prediction supported by early April figures.

The first-quarter decline to an average 8 million barrels a day of imported oil was significant because the cost of foreign oil is considered by many experts to be the single largest factor behind the unfavorable U.S. trade balance and the weakness of the dollar in world money markets.

But import levels for the first quarter remained 20.2 percent above the 6.5 million average in the same period two years ago, reflecting the nation's general trend toward heavier reliance on foreign oil.

The Petroleum Industry Research Foundation predicted import levels for the whole of 1978 would be only about 5 percent below the 1977 level.

Energy Department figures showed the United States imported an average 8,001 million barrels a day of crude oil and refined products during the first three months of 1978. That was 14.27 percent below the 9,332 million average in the same period a year ago.

Imports of crude oil alone averaged 5.79 million barrels, down 11.1 percent from the 6.52 million for the first quarter of 1977.

Refined product imports averaged 2,204 million barrels a day, the department said, down 21.6 percent from the 2,812 average a year earlier.

Totals from the latest Energy Department report on imports — a four-week average through April 7, showed an 11.7 percent decline from the same four weeks in 1977.

A department spokesman said the largest single factor behind the first-quarter reduction was the weather. Extremely bitter weather in December and January a year ago caused a sharp depletion of petroleum stocks, which were replenished with unusually large imports in the early months of 1977, he said.

By contrast, the spokesman said, this past winter was less severe and petroleum stocks were in better condition when the winter began.

The second major factor, the spokesman said, is the Alaska pipeline, now providing 1.2 million barrels a day of domestic oil unavailable last year.

Police Investigating Alleged Extortion Try

Lubbock police Thursday were investigating another spate of local crime that included a reported armed robbery, a pair of aggravated assaults and a reported attempt by two young men to extort money from an elderly, crutch-bound man.

Leland Kelly of 3212 23rd St., told police he'd just driven up to a club in the 900-block of Idalou Road minutes before midnight Wednesday, when a black man believed to be 26 to 35 years old, approached brandishing a .38-caliber weapon.

Kelly said the suspect made off with $250 in the city's 92nd reported holdup of the year.

A 20-year-old curb builder said he was dancing at a club in the 700-block of Broadway early Thursday when he accidentally bumped another man.

The second dancer reportedly exchanged words with the victim, then reportedly purposely "bumped" the victim as he made his way to a nearby table.

At that point, words again were exchanged, and the suspect reportedly threw a glass at the 20-year-old. The victim reportedly put his hand up defensively and was cut when he blocked the glass with his arm.

Yet another reveler was injured early Thursday at still another nightclub when he, too, was hit by a flying glass missile.

The 23-year-old victim reportedly was at a club in the 2400-block of 4th Street just after midnight when his brother became involved in a fight.

As the two combatants struggled, the victim tried to pull one of the men away. At that point, someone apparently threw a bottle at the victim, who was struck beneath his left eye. The wound required several stitches, the man told police.

Meanwhile, Rudy Alvarez of 2509 2nd Place said he had just returned to his apartment about 11:10 a.m. Thursday, when two young Mexican-American men threw open his door, walked through and began shaking Alvarez down for money.

The victim, who wears a cast on his left leg, said he told the men he had no money, but was shook and thrown to the floor anyway.

Alvarez said his shirt was torn during the fracas, but the suspects escaped without any money.

Mrs. Aline Wideman of 3702 46th St. said someone entered her garage recently, then used a pair of hedge clippers to pry their way into her home.

The intruders stole about 36 items, most of it jewelry, she said. The property was valued at more than $300.

Walter Grammer lost $500 worth of property to burglars Thursday, when someone stole his color television from his residence at 1615 16th St.

A set of bed springs, a mattress, some curtains and a table, valued together at $1,000, reportedly were stolen from an apartment recently, according to J. N. Sikes of 3204 45th St.

Delber Grammer of 6801 19th St. said someone broke into a mobile home at 6615 W. 19th St. Wednesday and stole a refrigerator, stove, couch and lamps, all valued at $800.

Kenneth Keneda of 4822 7th St. reported the theft of a $320 microwave oven by burglars who recently broke into an unoccupied house at 3413 95th St.

As James Jones, a teacher at Estacado High School, was attempting to break up a tussle between a group of girls Thursday morning, someone stole a $150 stopwatch the teacher had on his arm.

Reporting a stolen bike recently was Betsy Sadler of 3501 57th St., who said her son's cycle was taken from the Evans Junior High School yard at 4211 58th St.

A 23-year-old Lubbock man was arrested Wednesday after he allegedly concealed stolen goods in a car's engine.

The property, $305 cash, $200 worth of jewelry and an $80 revolver, reportedly was stolen from the 306 E. 37th St. home of Ray Munoz Jr. sometime between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday. The complainant told officers he came home to discover a window broken and the goods missing.

Police subsequently received information on a possible suspect, who was arrested about 6:35 p.m. on Avenue T.

The man reportedly had put the money in a car's air cleaner and the jewelry, wrapped in a rag, under the hood next to the battery.

Mrs. Neal Duke of 1717 Norfolk Ave., No. 1480, said a $3,500 diamond and ruby ring was stolen from her home recently. Reports indicated there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment.

According to Mary Elvin Cole, burglars got through a door at her 1523 27th St. residence Wednesday and made off with $636 worth of firearms.

Dayan To Visit U.S. Next Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department confirmed Thursday that Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan will visit the United States late next week for consultations on ways to resume the stalled Middle East peace negotiations.

Department press officer Thomas Reston said Dayan's visit will result in the curtailment of the Middle East mediation effort by Ambassador-at-large Alfred Atherton, who is due to arrive in Egypt on Friday.

Atherton had planned to move on to Israel after spending several days in Egypt, but will return to Washington instead to be present for Dayan's consultations, Reston said.

He denied an Israeli newspaper report that Israel has informed the United States it has decided to reject the U.S. proposal to resume Atherton's mediation efforts.

Atherton returned here in early March after spending several weeks traveling to various Middle East capitals attempting to break the impasse in the peace process.

Pimentos Analyzed For Botulism Toxin

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Dallas health specialists late Thursday were analyzing a case of pimentos that may be implicated in the recent illness of more than 30 persons hospitalized after eating what investigators believe was botulism-contaminated food at a Clovis, N.M., restaurant.

Jerry Henderson, Food and Drug Administration spokesman in Dallas, said the pimentos, believed to be from Albuquerque, were reportedly the same kind used in making a potato salad at the Clovis Colonial Park Country Club restaurant between April 9 and 13. Potato salad served at the restaurant on April 12 and 13 has been found to be contaminated with the botulism toxin.

"The pimentos sort of represent an unknown, and we want to plug that gap in our knowledge," Henderson said. "We have reason to believe that they were an ingredient in the potato salad. We know that's contaminated, and we are just trying to find out why."

He emphasized that the testing of the pimentos was a precautionary move. "We are not even certain that this was the type used. We're just checking pimentos in general," he said, adding that it would probably be Sunday before tests results on the pimentos will be known.

FDA investigators Thursday were also scouring Clovis area food warehouses for pimentos that might have been sold to the country club, Henderson said.

State and federal officials Wednesday had sorted through the Clovis city dump for containers which had held the pimentos. But their attempts to find the discarded containers proved futile.

"We still remain optimistic about finding something, but as time goes on, chances diminish," Henderson said.

"If we don't find it, you can probably assume that it was a single item, very localized and hopefully that will be the end of it," he added. "The fact that there have been no more cases appears to bear that out."

Jon Thompson, regional state health officer at Clovis, said Thursday that the majority of the food poisoning victims still in hospitals in New Mexico and West Texas were "at least stabilizing or recovering."

At one time, 33 persons had been hospitalized following the suspected contamination outbreak. But, no deaths have been reported in connection with the incident.

In Lubbock, a Methodist Hospital spokeswoman said that 28-year-old Pam Seiler, a Lubbock-area resident and Reese Air Force Base employee, had been discharged from the hospital Thursday. Mrs. Seiler was one of seven persons admitted to Methodist following the Clovis outbreak.

Another of those patients, John Garrett, 65, a Clovis area farmer-rancher, remained on Methodist's critical list Thursday.

Maurine Claibourne, 60, of Clovis, was listed in serious condition at the Lubbock hospital.

The remaining four patients — Wilburn Prince, 49; Dr. L.W. "Larry" Byous, 57, superintendent of the Clovis schools; Darrell Johnson, 48, an insurance agent; and Billy Dietson, 35, all of Clovis — Thursday were listed in satisfactory condition at Methodist.

Thompson said he planned to meet this week with the restaurant's management to discuss re-opening the facility. The restaurant closed voluntarily after the outbreak was reported last weekend.

"This wasn't their fault in terms of sanitation or management practices," he said Thursday. "They just got a bad something that had botulism in it. We intend to get them back on their feet as soon as possible."

Investigators have said they are uncertain how the potato salad may have been contaminated, but apparently have attempted to determine if cross-contamination from some other food source or food-related equipment might be involved.

School Bus Collision Kills One, Injures 12

MARKS, Miss. (AP) — A school bus collided with a gravel truck Thursday morning, and a 13-year-old boy was killed, authorities said. Twelve other students were injured.

The accident occurred at 7:10 a.m. in the Quitman County community of Birdie as the bus headed for the elementary and junior high schools in Faleon.

Officials identified the dead youth as Jerry Nettles, 13. His step-brother, Sam Richardson, 8, was sent to Baptist Hospital in Memphis where he was in the pediatrics ward in serious condition.

Eleven other children were treated at Northwest Mississippi Medical Center in Clarksdale, and two of those, Henrietta Williams, 16, and Larry Williams, 14, a brother and sister from Marks, were admitted.

Congressmen Say Chances Slim For Full Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressmen told President Carter Thursday his chances of getting Americans a full $23.9 billion tax cut this year are slim, and a Carter aide said the nation might suffer recession if Congress fails to act at all.

"The president feels his targets for cuts are about right, but I think they are a little high," Chairman Al Ullman of the House Ways and Means Committee told reporters after he and other committee members spent 45 minutes with Carter.

The president has proposed tax cuts of $23.9 billion effective Oct. 1, along with a series of changes in the tax system.

Ullman told White House reporters he favored a cut of "about $20 billion," but revised that figure to $15 billion when he returned to Capitol Hill.

"The president is staying with his figure," Ullman said.

"We came to no final conclusions," he added, saying he would meet with Vice President Walter Mondale and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal to work on a compromise.

The bill, Ullman told Capitol Hill reporters, "obviously will be quite a bit different from what he (Carter) wanted."

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Carter "sees no reason to alter his tax cut proposal" despite the opposition in Ullman's committee.

"The fact is," Powell said, "the dominant opinion is that we do face the prospect of a pause in the economy or a recession if we do not act."

After the Carter meeting, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said he felt Carter would work with the panel "to develop a package that can be salvaged."

But Rostenkowski agreed with Ullman the full Carter package had little if any chance of passage.

The committee, now in its fourth day of drafting the bill, has given Carter little of what he wanted in tax cut size or in revision of the tax codes.

Congressional sources said there is a possibility the committee will vote next week simply to kill the bill.

"Generally the report he got on tax reform was not encouraging," Powell said. Powell said "night club owners and yacht salesmen" had effectively coordinated their efforts to beat some of the tax revision measures aimed at curtailing business entertainment tax breaks.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Energy Department issued welcome figures Thursday showing total U.S. petroleum imports dropped 14.3 percent in the first quarter of 1978 and imports of refined products — mainly heating oil — plunged by 21.6 percent.

A department spokesman said the reduced reliance on foreign oil, largely the result of less winter consumption and the surge of domestic oil through the Alaska pipeline, came as "no big surprise."

Industry sources forecast another decline in the second quarter of 1978, a prediction supported by early April figures.

The first-quarter decline to an average 8 million barrels a day of imported oil was significant because the cost of foreign oil is considered by many experts to be the single largest factor behind the unfavorable U.S. trade balance and the weakness of the dollar in world money markets.

But import levels for the first quarter remained 20.2 percent above the 6.5 million average in the same period two years ago, reflecting the nation's general trend toward heavier reliance on foreign oil.

The Petroleum Industry Research Foundation predicted import levels for the whole of 1978 would be only about 5 percent below the 1977 level.

Energy Department figures showed the United States imported an average 8,001 million barrels a day of crude oil and refined products during the first three months of 1978. That was 14.27 percent below the 9,332 million average in the same period a year ago.

Imports of crude oil alone averaged 5.79 million barrels, down 11.1 percent from the 6.52 million for the first quarter of 1977.

Refined product imports averaged 2,204 million barrels a day, the department said, down 21.6 percent from the 2,812 average a year earlier.

Totals from the latest Energy Department report on imports — a four-week average through April 7, showed an 11.7 percent decline from the same four weeks in 1977.

A department spokesman said the largest single factor behind the first-quarter reduction was the weather. Extremely bitter weather in December and January a year ago caused a sharp depletion of petroleum stocks, which were replenished with unusually large imports in the early months of 1977, he said.

By contrast, the spokesman said, this past winter was less severe and petroleum stocks were in better condition when the winter began.

The second major factor, the spokesman said, is the Alaska pipeline, now providing 1.2 million barrels a day of domestic oil unavailable last year.

Carter Energy Plan Languishes In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a run-down on the status of President Carter's energy program a year after he submitted it to Congress.

Both houses already have acted on the legislation, but it remains bogged down before two House-Senate conference committees trying to reconcile different versions passed by each chamber — one dealing with taxes and the other dealing with the other four sections.

The legislation is divided into five parts: natural gas pricing, energy taxes, coal conversion, energy conservation and electric rate-setting.

Conferees have tentatively agreed to the energy conservation, coal conversion and electric rate-setting sections — relatively minor parts of the energy program — leaving the big issues of natural gas pricing and energy taxes unresolved.

There has been mounting pressure on Congress to break up the legislation and send the first three parts to the president's desk. However, until now the White House has resisted this kind of approach, preferring to keep everything in one package.

NATURAL GAS PRICING
Carter proposed keeping federal price controls on natural gas while lifting the ceiling for newly discovered gas from the present $1.48 per thousand cubic feet to $1.75. He also recommended extending the controls for the first time to gas used within the borders of producing states like Texas and Louisiana.

The administration's legislation also would extend the president's power to move gas around the country to meet shortages in times of emergency, like the 1976-77 winter's severe cold spell. Congress gave him this power last winter, but it has since lapsed.

The House passed the president's proposal but the Senate voted to deregulate newly produced gas — after two years for onshore gas and after five years for offshore gas. Both chambers agreed to extend the emergency powers.

Conferees have been deadlocked over the natural gas section since early December 1977.

Recently, conferees have informally agreed to a compromise that would lift the price controls in 1985 — a measure

Carter says he supports — but many details remain to be worked out, including how much gas would be deregulated and who would pay the higher costs.

ENERGY TAXES
Carter proposed four separate taxes aimed at conserving scarce fuels by making them more expensive.

These included a tax on U.S. crude oil that would add 7 cents a gallon to gasoline and most other petroleum products, with the revenues to be rebated to consumers.

Carter also proposed a tax on cars with poor gas mileage. The revenues would be rebated to purchases of small, efficient cars.

Other taxes included:
—A standby gasoline tax of up to 50 cents a gallon to be imposed in yearly nickel increments if gasoline consumption exceeded specific federal targets.

—A "use" tax on industries burning oil or natural gas which refuse to convert to coal.

Carter also proposed tax credits of up to $400 for home insulation and other energy-conservation measures.

The House killed the standby gasoline tax but passed the other three, although watering down the tax on inefficient cars and killing the part offering rebates to small-car purchasers.

The Senate only approved a version of the industrial use tax on oil and natural gas. And the Senate approved more than $40 billion in tax breaks, many to go to business, to spur energy conservation and production.

Both chambers passed a version of the proposed conservation tax credit.

Energy-tax conferees tentatively approved a version of the tax on inefficient cars but have yet to resolve the other tax aspects of the legislation. And approval of the tax on inefficient cars was conditioned on dropping a Senate-passed ban on the cars from another part of the legislation.

ENERGY CONSERVATION
The administration recommended a variety of programs, ranging from new energy-efficiency standards for home appliances to low-interest loans and grants for home insulation.

The House passed most of these proposals and so did the Senate, although in slightly different versions. The Senate also added to the bill a ban on fuel-inefficient cars, starting in 1980 with cars that go less than 16 miles a gallon.

Conferees tentatively approved compromise legislation containing these elements:

—Utilities would be required to have programs to help consumers better insulate their homes. This assistance, when requested by a homeowner, could include direct loans made by the utility of up to $400, which could be paid back on a customer's monthly heating bill.

—Larger energy conservation and solar energy loans, up to $8,000, would be available to consumers at low, government-subsidized interest rates.

—Direct government grants of up to $800 for home insulation would be available to low-income families, generally those earning less than $7,000 annually. Similar grants also would be available to schools and hospitals.

—The government would be required to set new efficiency standards for most home appliances, ranging from clothes dryers to television sets.

Carter proposed legislation designed to bar new utilities from burning oil and natural gas and to force existing ones, along with industrial plants, to convert to coal over a period of time.

Both chambers passed the major thrust of the president's program, but the Senate version contained looser standards and provided a great number of exemptions. Compromise legislation agreed to by conferees is a middle ground between the House and Senate bills. It would:

—Prohibit oil and natural gas from being used in new power plants and some industrial plants, unless switching to coal would violate environmental laws or if coal was unavailable in the area at reasonable costs.

—Existing plants using fuels could be ordered by the government to convert to coal, with a mandatory ban on the use of natural gas in power plants by 1990.

—No further hookups of outdoor decorative lamps — either for homes or businesses — would be permitted, and existing ones would have to be eliminated by 1982. Gas lamps that provide the only illumination on a street, are needed for safety or which have historic or cultural significance, such as those in the French Quarter of New Orleans, would be exempt from the ban.

ELECTRIC RATE SETTING
The president proposed requiring electric utilities to revamp their rate structures to offer lower rates for electricity used at night or during other "off peak" times and to end the practice under which big industrial users pay less for power as they consume more — unless such so-called "declining block rates" can be justified economically.

The president also proposed giving the Department of Energy the power to intervene in state rate-making cases to challenge rates that do not meet these standards.

The House pretty much approved the president's plan, but the Senate took out most of its teeth, voting to only give the government the power to make recommendations to state regulatory agencies on rate-setting matters. The Senate also approved an amendment to require utilities to offer lower rates to senior citizens.

WAY UP NORTH — Canada is the birthplace of the vast majority of this continent's ducks and geese; Canada alone can provide the additional millions of acres of habitat essential to stabilize North America's waterfowl.

DU WORKS — Benefits from DU's work are not limited to wildlife alone. The projects afford irrigation and flood control to farmers and ranchers in addition to enhancing the aesthetic quality of the land itself.

Ducks Unlimited Achieving Goals

By DALE E. WHITESELL
Executive Vice President
Ducks Unlimited, Inc.

Four decades ago, when North America's natural resources were being abused by both man and nature, waterfowl, in particular, suffered the consequences of a hostile environment. Each year their numbers dwindled closer to extinction.

Born in 1937 amid the insecurity of economic depression and the devastation of a relentless drought, Ducks Unlimited, Inc. made plans to rescue America's neglected ducks and geese. An extensive waterfowl research study, conducted by the More Game Birds in America Foundation, revealed that 70 percent of all waterfowl production on the North American continent originated in Canada.

REALIZING THAT SUITABLE habitat held the key to the success or failure of the waterfowl resource, DU began to restore and rehabilitate wetlands in the vast prairie provinces of Canada.

Instead of purchasing the Canadian land outright, DU has cooperated with Canadian governments and individual land owners to secure free, long-term land leases and easements. Such an arrangement has enabled DU to develop numerous acres of critical habitat without tying up funds in real estate holdings. Out of the $58 million raised throughout its history, DU has made available over $46 million to Canada for wetland development alone, or about 80 cents out of every dollar donated.

Much care is also being directed toward providing suitable wintering habitat for North America's waterfowl. Ducks Unlimited de Mexico (DUMAC) has embarked on a pioneer project to revitalize 15,000 acres of wintering habitat called the Lerma Marshes. These marshes, located west of Mexico City, winter hundreds of thousands of waterfowl each year. DUMAC also has initiated a fundraising campaign in Mexico (where from 10 to 40 million North American waterfowl winter annually) to help bolster habitat restoration efforts throughout the country.

COUPLED WITH THE ACTIVITIES in Canada and Mexico, Ducks Unlimited can truly be considered an international conservation organization, continental in scope.

Since DU is a nonprofit organization, it can do what Federal duck stamp dollars don't — cultivate habitat beyond the borders of the U.S.

Waterfowl neither adhere to geographical boundaries, nor do they respond to the political climates encountered along their migration routes. Because of this, and because of DU's unique ability to reach beyond U.S. borders, North American waterfowl are cared for throughout their continental migrations — something the Federal government and no other conservation organization has been able to accomplish.

Discovery

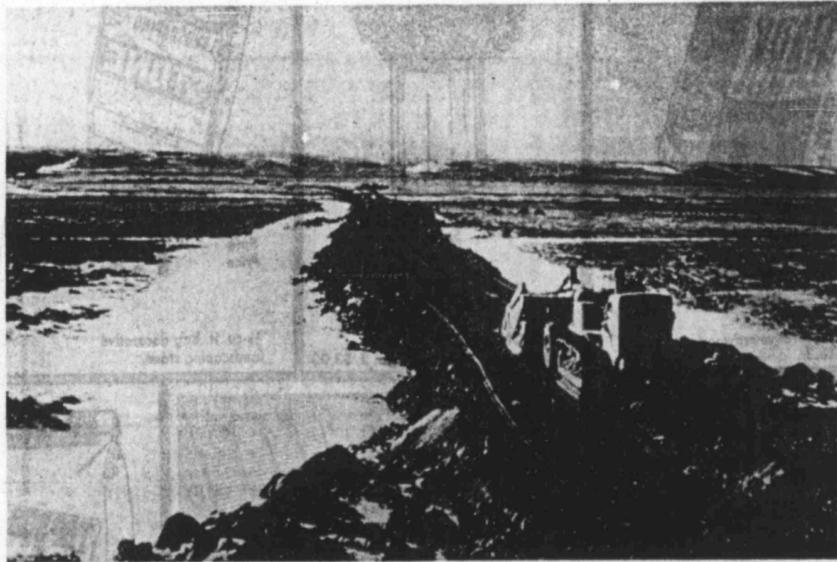

State governments have also joined in DU's continental approach to waterfowl conservation by making dollars available from state duck stamp programs, and specified wildlife funds. These are being used to sponsor various wetland projects throughout Canada, and have enabled DU to reserve hundreds of thousands of acres of prime waterfowl habitat. A total of 15 states have contributed substantial revenue to support various donor projects.

IN CONJUNCTION WITH THESE state contributions and other fundraising activities throughout the U.S., Ducks Unlimited has recently undertaken a five year program to double or triple its current Canadian wetland acreage. In order to accomplish such an ambitious goal, it will be necessary for DU to raise 85 million dollars by the end of 1980.

Since potential habitat areas in Canada, as elsewhere, are quickly diminishing, DU's restoration efforts are even more significant to the livelihood of America's waterfowl resource. DU's success in this decade may very well determine the status of waterfowl populations for decades to come.

Habitat — it's incredible how such a small word can mean so much to North America's wildlife resources. It's also incredible how easily well-intentioned conservationists are sidetracked from the message habitat holds for us all.

Each life, whether plant or animal, is creatively bound by the same elements that bind the whole of the earth. Deny life these elements and life's intricate balance of give and take is distorted or possibly destroyed.

BULLDOZER FOR CONSERVATION — Funds derived from America's sportsmen and conservationists enabled DU to initiate construction of its habitat programs. Levees, dikes and sluice gates stabilize areas from flooding and droughts.

ments that bind the whole of the earth. Deny life these elements and life's intricate balance of give and take is distorted or possibly destroyed. Habitat binds these elements. Habitat is life. Without habitat the question of caring for wildlife resources becomes academic.

DUCKS UNLIMITED HAS BEEN successful over these past four decades because it has steadfastly adhered to its singleness of purpose — habitat restoration. Without such a singular goal, DU's 2.5 million acres of reserved waterfowl habitat would have been compromised by every conservation crisis that evolved, however remotely related to its cause.

Habitat is the denominator we should all have in common. Because if we squabble amongst ourselves about how we should extinguish this environmental brush fire or that one, the habitat that breathes life into all our wildlife will be uncontrollably ablaze with the excessive resource demands of an inefficient modern world. And the seedlings of wildlife conservation we have all carefully planted will be lost forever to progress' relentless pawl.

Any knowledgeable biologist will tell you that wildlife can withstand outbreaks of disease, predation, legal harvesting, etc., if only its habitat is intact.

Why panic when an animal species crosses the threshold onto the endangered species list, when the list itself exists because sufficient habitat does not. Habitat holds the key to this threshold. With it we can unlock the door to a vital wildlife resource; without it we give rise to the need for more zoological gardens.

THIS HABITAT OFFERS other rewards as well. Several hundreds of species of wildlife (furbearers, shorebirds, ruminants, fish, etc.), some on the endangered species list, benefit from DU's wetland restoration efforts. Many of these habitat projects also provide an ample source of water for industrial, agricultural and municipal use, not to mention the esthetic value of a balanced environment.

A fair hunter and owner relationship is important. Even though our society is built on the free enterprise system, it does not follow that free public hunting can sustain wildlife habitat. As a result, the hunting of our free-use conservation ethic, the hunting public has not been compelled to make habitat conservation profitable for private landowners. This is indeed unfortunate since the vast majority of wildlife propagation and hunting takes place on private land.

Simply stated, suitable habitat is the key to an abundant wildlife resource. And so the story continues — After 40 years of faithful service to a resource whose value cannot be measured in seasons past, but in each new spring and fall, Ducks Unlimited stands ready to carry this waterfowl legacy into the future.

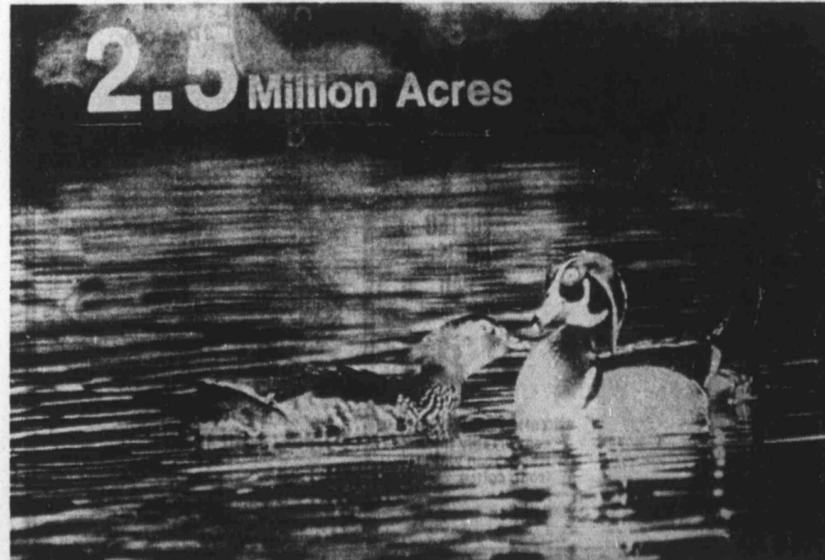

DU's 900-plus nationwide chapter-committees form a sturdy platform from which to build fundraising activities. These hard-working, volunteer committees have helped Ducks Unlimited expand its membership to over 200,000.

The West Texas Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will host its 7th annual banquet Wednesday, 6:30 p.m. at the Koko Palace in Lubbock.

Tickets to the banquet, $25 each, include the membership fee and a subscription to the organization's magazine. Fishing and hunting items will be auctioned and raffled to raise funds for the DU projects.

Tickets are available from John R. Bass (chapter president), at 762-8811; David Whiteside (banquet chairman), 765-6733; Bob Norris or J.C. Rickman, 762-8844.

Ducks Unlimited, Inc., is a private, non-profit membership organization dedicated to the conservation and propagation of North America's waterfowl. All purchases from and donations to DU (including dinner tickets) are tax deductible.

LIVING ROOM — The total number of wetland acreage reserved by Ducks Unlimited now exceeds 2.5 million acres (1.3 million acres of this has been developed) which provide living space for some 300 species of wildlife.

Carter Energy Plan Languishes In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a run-down on the status of President Carter's energy program a year after he submitted it to Congress.

Both houses already have acted on the legislation, but it remains bogged down before two House-Senate conference committees trying to reconcile different versions passed by each chamber — one dealing with taxes and the other dealing with the other four sections.

The legislation is divided into five parts: natural gas pricing, energy taxes, coal conversion, energy conservation and electric rate-setting.

Conferees have tentatively agreed to the energy conservation, coal conversion and electric rate-setting sections — relatively minor parts of the energy program — leaving the big issues of natural gas pricing and energy taxes unresolved.

There has been mounting pressure on Congress to break up the legislation and send the first three parts to the president's desk. However, until now the White House has resisted this kind of approach, preferring to keep everything in one package.

NATURAL GAS PRICING

Carter proposed keeping federal price controls on natural gas while lifting the ceiling for newly discovered gas from the present $1.48 per thousand cubic feet to $1.75. He also recommended extending the controls for the first time to gas used within the borders of producing states like Texas and Louisiana.

The administration's legislation also would extend the president's power to move gas around the country to meet shortages in times of emergency, like the 1976-77 winter's severe cold spell. Congress gave him this power last winter, but it has since lapsed.

The House passed the president's proposal but the Senate voted to deregulate newly produced gas — after two years for onshore gas and after five years for offshore gas. Both chambers agreed to extend the emergency powers.

Conferees have been deadlocked over the natural gas section since early December 1977.

Recently, conferees have informally agreed to a compromise that would lift the price controls in 1985 — a measure

Carter says he supports — but many details remain to be worked out, including how much gas would be deregulated and who would pay the higher costs.

ENERGY TAXES
Carter proposed four separate taxes aimed at conserving scarce fuels by making them more expensive.

These included a tax on U.S. crude oil that would add 7 cents a gallon to gasoline and most other petroleum products, with the revenues to be rebated to consumers.

Carter also proposed a tax on cars with poor gas mileage. The revenues would be rebated to purchases of small, efficient cars.

Other taxes included:
—A standby gasoline tax of up to 50 cents a gallon to be imposed in yearly nickel increments if gasoline consumption exceeded specific federal targets.

—A "use" tax on industries burning oil or natural gas which refuse to convert to coal.

Carter also proposed tax credits of up to $400 for home insulation and other energy-conservation measures.

The House killed the standby gasoline tax but passed the other three, although watering down the tax on inefficient cars and killing the part offering rebates to small-car purchasers.

The Senate only approved a version of the industrial use tax on oil and natural gas. And the Senate approved more than $40 billion in tax breaks, many to go to business, to spur energy conservation and production.

Both chambers passed a version of the proposed conservation tax credit.

Energy-tax conferees tentatively approved a version of the tax on inefficient cars but have yet to resolve the other tax aspects of the legislation. And approval of the tax on inefficient cars was conditioned on dropping a Senate-passed ban on the cars from another part of the legislation.

ENERGY CONSERVATION
The administration recommended a variety of programs, ranging from new energy-efficiency standards for home appliances to low-interest loans and grants for home insulation.

The House passed most of these proposals and so did the Senate, although in slightly different versions. The Senate also added to the bill a ban on fuel-inefficient cars, starting in 1980 with cars that go less than 16 miles a gallon.

Conferees tentatively approved compromise legislation containing these elements:

—Utilities would be required to have programs to help consumers better insulate their homes. This assistance, when requested by a homeowner, could include direct loans made by the utility of up to $400, which could be paid back on a customer's monthly heating bill.

—Larger energy conservation and solar energy loans, up to $8,000, would be available to consumers at low, government-subsidized interest rates.

—Direct government grants of up to $800 for home insulation would be available to low-income families, generally those earning less than $7,000 annually. Similar grants also would be available to schools and hospitals.

—The government would be required to set new efficiency standards for most home appliances, ranging from clothes dryers to television sets.

Carter proposed legislation designed to bar new utilities from burning oil and natural gas and to force existing ones, along with industrial plants, to convert to coal over a period of time.

Both chambers passed the major thrust of the president's program, but the Senate version contained looser standards and provided a great number of exemptions. Compromise legislation agreed to by conferees is a middle ground between the House and Senate bills. It would:

—Prohibit oil and natural gas from being used in new power plants and some industrial plants, unless switching to coal would violate environmental laws or if coal was unavailable in the area at reasonable costs.

—Existing plants using fuels could be ordered by the government to convert to coal, with a mandatory ban on the use of natural gas in power plants by 1990.

—No further hookups of outdoor decorative lamps — either for homes or businesses — would be permitted, and existing ones would have to be eliminated by 1982. Gas lamps that provide the only illumination on a street, are needed for safety or which have historic or cultural significance, such as those in the French Quarter of New Orleans, would be exempt from the ban.

ELECTRIC RATE SETTING

The president proposed requiring electric utilities to revamp their rate structures to offer lower rates for electricity used at night or during their "off peak" times and to end the practice under which big industrial users pay less for power as they consume more — unless such so-called "declining block rates" can be justified economically.

The president also proposed giving the Department of Energy the power to intervene in state rate-making cases to challenge rates that do not meet these standards.

The House pretty much approved the president's plan, but the Senate took out most of its teeth, voting to only give the government the power to make recommendations to state regulatory agencies on rate-setting matters. The Senate also approved an amendment to require utilities to offer lower rates to senior citizens.

Farm Policy Reformer Working Within System

By MARK FRANK
SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — As little as three years ago, Karen Noble Hanson was suspicious of government and testified that federal farm policies "excluded poor people and farm workers."

Today, she is working for change within the system. Her office is in the Syracuse federal building, and her pistachio-green sedan has "U.S. Government" stenciled on it.

The blonde, 34-year-old minister's wife and farm workers' advocate is the first woman to hold the position of regional director of the Farmer's Home Administration, the main rural development arm of the agriculture department. She is in charge of New York and the Virgin Islands.

"The agricultural field used to be closed for women, but there's no reason why women can't now look at these positions," she said.

Appointed Oct. 7, 1977, by Secretary of Agriculture Robert Bergland, Mrs. Hanson sees herself as part of a "new vision and commitment" on the part of the Carter administration.

In her tidy eighth-floor office are symbols of the group for which she's vigorously battled — a hooked rug of an eagle on a green, orange and white background hangs on a wall. It's the United Farm Workers' symbol.

And an autographed picture of UFW leader Cesar Chavez sits atop her bookcase.

"It's odd... I had to make some real decisions about whether I wanted to go work for the government because I'd always been suspicious of it."

But she took the post because of the "new approach in Washington."

Mrs. Hanson testified often in Washington and on the state level against what she terms "the other administrations' failures" in implementing programs to aid the poor.

"They were funding the more well-to-do farmers and ignored everyone else."

Mrs. Hanson, who routinely puts in 17-hour workdays, has a simple, though idealistic goal for her agency. She wants "every federal dollar available to New York state spent out in the community."

"All you have to do is drive through the countryside to see that about 60 percent of our housing is in slum shape. It's devastating," she said.

A Rochester native and daughter of a Xerox Corp. executive, she's committed to improving the quality of life in rural areas for small farmers and migrants.

She's been trying to do that for about 17 years.

After enrolling at Syracuse University as a history major in 1961, she visited and saw conditions in migrant camps and has been the migrants' advocate ever since.

"Their housing was devastating, and there was virtually no education and health care. They were living in a situation that was totally unbelievable for New York," Mrs. Hanson recalled.

So she started to speak out. She left Syracuse after just two years — to have three children by her first marriage — but served on numerous national and statewide farm workers and housing committees.

She earned a University of Rochester bachelor's degree in sociology in 1969 and a master's in 1971, then was hired to head an Agricultural Manpower program for Cornell University after the Ivy League school had been cited for health violations at a migrant camp it operated in Wayne County.

In 1973, she was named head of Program Funding Inc. of Rochester, a state-wide nonprofit organization that serves farm workers and the rural poor. Under her leadership, Program Funding shot from a $200,000 program to a multimillion dollar agency.

She insists the "myth" of living off the land in a rural community is "totally untrue."

And she speaks from practical experience.

She lives in a farmhouse on 12 acres of land in the tiny Yates county town of Middlesex, along with her second husband, The Rev. Thomas L. Hanson, and the couple's four children.

The family is 17 miles from the closest school, 20 miles from the nearest grocery store and 60 miles from work.

"I'm lucky because I have a good job, but how about the people who can't even afford to drive to the store once a week?" she asks.

She hopes a guaranteed loan program will encourage business and industry to locate in the countryside. And she wants "dilapidated" housing improved so that the people living in the country will stay there. The Farmers Home Administration already provides low-interest disaster loans to farmers.

"You'd be amazed at how many people live with outhouses and how many don't have running water in the winter. It's untenable."

Our "crisis-oriented" society has left rural areas without sufficient jobs and housing, she said.

"We haven't had riots out in the country... I hope that isn't needed for lawmakers to see that something has to be done there."

She claims her new position will enable her to retain her commitment to aiding the poor and small farmers.

"I will continue to speak out on the needs for farm workers. Any farmer knows you can't produce a good crop without a solid labor force," she said. "But the workers deserve much better."

Oklahoma Wheat Farmers Face Railroad Car Shortage

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's wheat harvest is just six weeks away and the state's wheat farmers are facing one of the most critical railroad car shortages in history.

Interstate Commerce Commission officials estimated there currently is a shortage of 9,000 to 10,000 boxcars in Oklahoma and the situation is expected to get worse.

As a consequence, farm officials fear the price of wheat will drop drastically. The price in Oklahoma now is higher than in two years, standing in the $2.80 to $2.93 per bushel range after hitting $3 for two days last week.

"I don't see much hope for it to get any better until the first of the year, if then," Hal West, assistant regional operations director for the ICC in Fort Worth, said.

He and railroad officials said the main cause of the shortage is that tremendous amounts of wheat are currently being sold and shipped because the prices are up.

Elevator operators also are trying to clear out storage space so they'll have room when the new harvest begins. If the railroads can't move the grain, the elevators will be overflowing during harvest and wheat will have to be stored on open ground.

At Woodward, an official of the Woodward Co-Op Elevator Association said it had been so long since she had seen a railroad car at her elevator "we've forgotten if they have wheels or not."

Bob Sheik, assistant manager of the Weatherford elevator, said he has received only five cars in the past 35 days.

"We're having to ship a bunch of it (wheat) by truck," Sheik said, explaining that that adds to the cost.

Ed Nix, manager of the Carnegie Grain Elevator, said he is beginning to get some railroad cars now "but we haven't got near, near enough."

In an effort to ease the situation, the ICC ordered railroads to devote 55 to 70 percent of their covered hopper cars to grain shipment, to put cars back into service as soon as they are unloaded and to make repairs to cars immediately.

But several railroad officials said the shortage probably will continue.

Sancap will control the tough broadleaf weeds that escape your preplant.

Preplant herbicides are great for controlling grasses.

But the fact is, they just can't control the stubborn broadleaf weeds that are breaking through cotton here in the South High Plains.

So, if you grow cotton on sandy soils, spray an overlay of Sancap[®] herbicide at planting.

Because Sancap is strong on broadleaf weeds. Strong enough to stop the tough ones that escape your preplant.

COTTON'S FINISHING TOUCH — Cotton Inc.'s fabric dyeing and finishing research is explained by research chemist Dianne O. Luparello to a group of touring West Texas cotton growers. Her listeners include, from the left, Linda Mixon and her husband, Wayne Mixon, general manager of the Ocho Gin Co. of Seminole; Earnest Latham of Brownfield; Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Smith of Seminole; and, in the foreground, Tiny and Dan Newbrough of Andrews.

Cotton Producers On Research Tour

RALEIGH, N.C. (Special) — About 35 West Texas cotton producers got a first-hand look here recently at how the dollars they invest in Cotton Inc. programs are being used in efforts to strengthen cotton's competitive position and earn greater returns to growers.

The producers, from Gaines, Andrews and surrounding counties, came to Cotton Inc.'s modern research center during a Southeastern tour sponsored by the Ocho Gin at Seminole.

During their trip, the group also saw cotton being used at two major textile mills in the Carolinas.

Wayne Mixon, general manager and a part-owner of the Ocho Gin, said the Raleigh research facility was a priority stop on the tour because of the gin's desire to help the producers get a clearer and more complete understanding of Cotton Inc. and its programs.

"In our area, with the unrest in the farm situation, there seems to be a lack of knowledge of the role of Cotton Inc. and the difference between it and the National Cotton Council," he said.

"We do, by the way, support both organizations," he added, "but we felt that it would be good to bring some of the farmers here and let them see the projects that are being carried out by Cotton Inc. to expand markets for cotton and help producers cut their costs."

Cotton Inc. is a private fiber company that "works solely for and is controlled by the nation's cotton producers," officials said. Under federal law, its activities are restricted to research and promotion activities designed to reduce producers' costs and increase cotton's share of fiber markets.

It is a nonpolitical organization prohibited by law from lobbying. Agricultural, textile and economic research and development activities are centered in Raleigh, while headquarters and marketing are in New York City.

All funding for Cotton Inc. comes from the per-bale assessments paid by producers throughout the Cotton Belt. Forty-two cotton producers currently serve on the board of directors. The number is related to the bales produced by states.

Tours through various laboratories and presentations by staff member gave the West Texas producers the latest information as to how Cotton Inc. is working to meet cotton's challenges from seed production through the development of new fabrics and finishing processes.

Mixon said he was particularly impressed with the way Cotton Inc. works directly with textile mills to convince them of the advantages of using more cotton and to provide them with technical assistance in the production and processing of many types of all-cotton and predominantly cotton fabrics.

"I guess we more or less take planting of cotton and the growing of it as our part of the challenge, but we don't have this relationship ourselves with the textile mills," he pointed out. "I feel that we would be lost in this area, and that we do have somebody to handle this end of the business for us."

The Ocho Gin is a producer-owned firm. This past season, it ginned approximately 28,000 bales.

Severe Drought Threat To China Agriculture

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese officials have held urgent meetings to seek ways of preventing a severe drought in four Chinese provinces from killing crops, according to provincial radio broadcasts monitored here. According to broadcasts from Yunnan and Kweichow provinces in the south, Anhwei in the east and Shensi in the northeast, the drought has reached a "crucial point" and more dry weather is forecast for the rest of the month.

"Since the beginning of winter, Kweichow has had no soaking rain for more than 140 days and the drought is extremely serious," Kweichow radio said.

It quoted Su Kang, an official of Kweichow Province, as saying "fighting drought, sowing the crops and protecting the young crops" have been discussed.

The broadcast from Anhwei said the growth of wheat has been affected in that province.

Production of grain in Anhwei "has a bearing not only on the masses' livelihood but also on their contributions to the state..." the broadcast said.

A broadcast said that in Shensi, the area affected by drought is expanding, mainly in large grain and cotton producing areas around Hanchung.

"This not only poses a serious threat to achieving a bumper summer harvest of grain and oil crops, but also affects the sowing of the early autumn and cotton crops," it said.

The broadcast said the Shensi provincial and party committees called on the people to "urgently mobilize, fight a people's war against drought and win a great victory in spring sowing."

Another broadcast from China said it was necessary "to get rid of erroneous ideas such as waiting for rain and instead whip up a mass upsurge in fighting drought."

This is the second consecutive year China has been hit by drought. Chinese officials said last year's drought was the worst since 1949.

Russians Place New U.S. Grain Orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has placed further orders for U.S. grain and soybeans, the Agriculture Department said this week.

Wheat sales totaling 121,958 metric tons — about 4.5 million bushels — were reported for delivery to the Soviet Union by Sept. 30, the end of the second year of a long-term grain purchase agreement.

The department said also that 400,000 tons of soybeans have been sold for export to the Soviet Union during the current soybean marketing year which will end Aug. 31.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

The department said the latest wheat sale raised to about 12.8 million tons the amount of grain the Soviets have bought for delivery in the 1977-78 year of the agreement. This includes about 3.5 million tons of wheat and 9.3 million tons of corn.

Under the agreement, the Soviet Union is committed to buying a minimum of 6 million tons of wheat and corn annually or up to 8 million tons without further consultation with the United States. About the minimum quantity was purchased in the first year, which ended Sept. 30. Soybeans are not included in the grain marketing agreement.

U.S. officials have given Russia permission to buy up to 15 million tons of wheat and corn this year and officials say they expect the full amount will be bought.

The new soybean sale boosted to 797,500 tons the amount of soybeans ordered by the Soviet Union this marketing year.

As customary, identities of the firms involved in the transactions or contract price details were not disclosed.

Brown Confident Of Victory In Ag Commissioner Contest

By ROLAND LINDSEY

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — For the first time in 28 years, John C. White is missing from the Texas Democratic primary ballot, leaving voters to decide between Reagan V. Brown, Rep. Joe Hubenak of Rosenberg and political newcomer Don Sewell of Nocona as the party's nominee for agriculture commissioner.

Brown, a fast talking sociologist appointed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to succeed White, claims to be the easy leader in the campaign for a full term, but Hubenak quickly challenges that contention and says by May 6, the race will be a tossup.

Sewell, a pharmaceutical salesman who travels a 10-state area and campaigns only on weekends, is a longshot who apparently could do no more than force a runoff if the race is as close as Hubenak claims.

But Brown, a former Texas A&M specialist in community development who worked four years on Briscoe's staff, says he will win by the biggest margin of any officeholder in the May 6 vote.

The winner of the Democratic primary is unopposed in November.

He proudly recalls he has made more than 5,000 speeches in his career to various organizations in Texas, and can describe in detail how many of the audiences gave him standing ovations. His office walls are lined with plaques and other awards.

While other candidates for so-called minor statewide offices have complained of problems in raising campaign funds because of the domination of the races for governor and U.S. Senate this year, Brown said he has all the campaign financing he wants. He set a goal of $100,000, and said he easily reached that mark.

"We've been able to raise more money in my race than John White, one of the most astute politicians ever to come out of Texas, was ever able to raise," he said.

Brown has proposed using agricultural products to produce alcohol fuel to aid in the energy crisis, said he supports 100 percent parity if it can be achieved without government supports, and proposed a summer program to transport thousands of children from urban slum areas to work on farms.

Hubenak, best known in the Legislature for his battle against fire ants, is chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee and his campaign literature repeatedly refers to him as the state's "foremost authority on agriculture."

He had sought appointment as agriculture commissioner when White resigned last year, and when Briscoe chose Brown, he announced immediately he would challenge Brown in the 1978 campaign.

Hubenak, operating an active but austere campaign, often drives his own pickup from town to town to campaign and says Brown's association with Briscoe may be the worst thing to happen to his opponent.

"He's running on Gov. Briscoe's coat-tails, and I really don't think that has helped him," Hubenak said.

He chides Brown for repeating the same speeches and stale jokes at every campaign stop, and early in the campaign referred to Brown as a clown.

"You've got to give him credit, he's a good speaker and joke teller, but agriculture is no laughing matter," Hubenak said. "I just need Reagan to make speeches in every community twice. That would make my job a lot easier. I don't think I have to put Reagan down to win, I just need to emphasize qualifications."

Hubenak concedes his name is not a household word in Texas, but discounts ideas the name could be a handicap.

"Hubenak is a name that once you've heard, you'll never forget it. It's not like Smith or Brown or some of those everyday names."

He contends Brown has done nothing as agriculture commissioner except make speeches and distribute thousands of promotional pamphlets, each carrying Brown's name.

"If he wants to be a public speaker, that's what he ought to be doing instead of leaching $43,000 and a King airplane off the state," Hubenak said. "I may not be the most dynamic man in the Legislature, but I don't think anyone can ever say Joe Hubenak hasn't represented agriculture."

"And one thing about Joe Hubenak, he will never sit still in the Department of Agriculture. He may be doing something wrong, but he'll be doing something."

Corn Holdings Reported At Record Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's inventory of grain in storage, bulging from huge harvests the past few years, included a record amount of corn held by farmers and elevators on April 1, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

In a quarterly "grain stocks" report, the department said that 3.84 billion bushels of corn were in storage on April 1, the most on record for this time of year. The April 1 corn stockpile was up 17 percent from a year ago.

Wheat on April 1 totaled 1.52 billion bushels, up about 10 percent from a year ago.

Stockpiles of the four feed grains — corn, oats, barley and sorghum — totaled 119 million metric tons, up 20 percent from April 1 of last year. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Reserves of oats totaled 417 million bushels, up 61 percent from the record low mark last April 1, the report said.

Barley totaled 236 million bushels, up 25 percent; and sorghum grain at 412 million bushels was up 39 percent from a year ago.

The department said that soybean reserves on April 1 totaled 843 million bushels, up 36 percent from a year ago.

Stockpiles of unmilled or rough rice totaled 52.9 million hundredweight, down 23 percent from April 1 of last year. Inventories of milled rice, at 7.57 million hundredweight, were up 33 percent, however.

The quarterly grain stocks report was based on information gathered from about 23,000 farmers and about 9,300 grain storage facilities, officials said.

NATIONAL COTTON COUNCIL PRESIDENT Lon Mann told textile leaders Thursday the industry is waging all-out efforts to prevent serious disruptions in the flow of cotton shipments to domestic mills.

He said the boxcar shortage has caused some congestion at warehouses primarily in the Southwest and South, and the council has urged quick action from the Interstate Commerce Commission to avoid further delays of cotton movement from all parts of the belt.

Mann said ICC chairman A. Daniel O'Neal has promised accelerated action and that top ICC officials will meet this week with the Industrywide Cotton Flow and Shipment Committee to review progress. Officials of the USDA also will participate.

The council president's remarks came in a talk before the Georgia Textile Manufacturers Association.

THE DIFFICULTY FOR BOTH PRODUCERS and textile buyers in planning for the year ahead due to uncertainties in government cotton programs was noted by Mann.

While the April 1 planting intentions report indicated 12.9 million acres of cotton for 1978, the council president pointed out the survey was completed on the same day the administration announced its original paid acreage diversion program.

"I doubt if farmers had time to think through what they would do in response to the diversion program when they replied to the questionnaire," he said, "and then, of course, the program was changed after the questionnaires were in."

Pointing out that USDA now expects plantings of about 12 million acres or a 12 percent reduction from last year, Mann said cotton should be in adequate supply next year because of the more than 5.5-million-bale carryover expected at the season's beginning.

REGARDING THE FINAL COTTON DUST standard which is expected shortly, the council president said the industry realizes the proposed standard has to be moderated at the mill level if cotton is to survive.

"For this reason, we have carefully and methodically laid extensive groundwork in the hearings for any legal challenge that may be necessary," he added.

In addition, Mann pointed out that research on the dust problem has been greatly intensified over the past five years and is now at a $3 million annual level.

"This is all the more reason to believe we can and will meet this critical challenge to our future survival," he said.

THE COUNCIL PRESIDENT EXPRESSED concern about excessive textile and apparel imports and said the cotton industry will continue to work closely with American textile leaders to resolve the problem.

"We're not about to stand idly by and let our government trade away this nation's textile industry — and cotton's most important market," he said.

Mann described the so-called "labor reform bill" as an issue with serious implications "not only for textiles and cotton but for our entire nation."

If the bill becomes law, he said, it could mean a major shift in the country's economic and political systems.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures were depressed by heavy liquidation on the Chicago Board of Trade today, as traders reacted to a stronger dollar.

With little news to influence price trends, analysts attributed across-the-board selling to the government's decision to sell gold in an effort to prop up the dollar.

"The market had a runup on the weakness of the dollar, so it only makes sense that it's under pressure as the dollar strengthens," said an analyst, noting that a more expensive dollar makes grain less attractive to foreign buyers.

Soybean futures were especially hard hit, plunging 26 cents a bushel in the current May delivery. Soybean oil contracts posted daily limit losses of one cent per pound in the four nearest months.

The wet, cold weather in the Midwest tended to offset some of the pressure on corn futures. Farmers have been finding it difficult to prepare muddy fields for planting, analysts said.

Part of the liquidation also stemmed from evening up positions before release of the Agriculture Department's grain stocks report.

At the close, soybeans were 15 1/2 to 26 cents lower, with May contracts quoted at $6.98 a bushel; wheat was 1/2 to 4 1/2 cents lower, May $3.17 1/2; corn was 1 1/2 cents lower to 1/2 cent higher, May $2.56 1/2 and oats were 3/4 to 1 1/2 cents lower, May $1.48 1/2.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 90 cents a bale lower to $1.35 higher Thursday.

Futures prices traded in a narrow range before closing mixed. Trading was featureless, brokers said.

The average price for strict low midling 11-16 inch spot cotton declined 30 points to 55.12 cents a pound Wednesday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Heifers Due Free Vaccine

Texas cattlemen may now have their heifer calves vaccinated with Strain-19 brucellosis vaccine free of charge, says Ed Crawford, assistant Lubbock County agricultural extension agent.

The vaccination program is voluntary and will be conducted through participating, accredited veterinarians. These veterinarians will be able to obtain the brucellosis vaccine free and will be reimbursed for their services from state and federal funds on completing a vaccination chart.

Only eligible female calves will be vaccinated and will be identified by an ear tag and tattoo. Female calves of dairy breeds from two through six months of age and beef breeds two through 10 months are considered eligible.

According to Crawford, all the cattleman has to do is call his local veterinarian and schedule a time for the vaccinations. Of course, the calves should be confined. This new vaccine program does not include vaccinating calves at livestock markets.

There are several benefits from the vaccination program, Crawford says, including: — Properly immunized heifers will be more resistant to the organism causing brucellosis.

— Officially vaccinated calves should sell for higher prices if purchased for replacement.

— The more animals that are vaccinated, the quicker the spread of brucellosis can be controlled, thereby minimizing the threat of quarantine.

To reimburse participating veterinarians, about $450,000 of state and federal funds has been made available for the vaccination program for fiscal year 1978, and addition funds are expected for the fiscal year beginning Sept. 1.

Economy Compounds Farmers' Dilemma

CHICAGO (UPI) — If American farmers were as sharp with their money as they are at raising crops and livestock, they still would be in debt because of prices received in recent years.

That is the conclusion of farmers, bankers and farm groups surveyed by UPI in the Midwest farm belt.

They said the borrowing route has been and remains the only way most farmers can purchase more acreage and vital machinery to increase production. The dilemma of the farmer is underscored by rising costs and declining profits, they said.

The rule of recent years has been — the more a farmer produces the less money he makes.

A big part of the problem is that too many U.S. farmers are too good at what they do. They have succeeded in increasing the supply, decreasing the demand.

Gene Hamilton, chief economist for the American Farm Bureau Federation, called farmer loans in real estate the most critical problem.

"Land has escalated in the last five years," he said, "to levels that can no longer be sustained at today's commodity prices."

Hamilton cited the purchase of a parcel at $2,000 per acre, in which the farmer's down payment comes to half the total price, with a mortgage of 9 percent.

"A farmer in that type of situation ends up being hit with costs that will run at least $90 an acre more than an established farmer whose farm is paid for," he said. "The $90's got to come off the top — and so does the land tax — before he realizes a profit."

Using corn as an example, all other fixed and miscellaneous costs come to about $137.50 per acre on the basis of a 1977 U.S. Department of Agriculture estimate. The land tax and mortgage costs take the breakeven price per bushel of corn up to about $2.50 or more per bushel, a level farmers have seldom realized in the last five years.

There would be little difference if another crop, like soybeans, were substituted. The yield in Illinois averages about 115 bushels of corn per acre to just more than 45 in soybeans.

Questions arise: Where's the profit? Where's the return on a huge investment? At today's prices while the farmers' costs edge ever upward there are no happy answers.

An eight-row corn planter costs $15,000; a new tractor is in the $20,000 to $30,000 range; the farm heavyweight, a combine, runs up to $60,000. The average life span of most machinery is slightly more than six years.

Tillable land sells for as much as $4,500 per acre in the most fertile regions of the Midwest. The average is more like $2,000.

The figures make it easy to understand why sources close to farmers estimate at least 75 percent of the nation's land planters and livestock raisers are in debt in amounts varying from a few thousand dollars to hundreds of thousands.

At face value the investments are sound. They help U.S. farmers outproduce any others in the world.

But therein lies the trouble. Production sometimes is so high it creates a glut condition, forerunner to lower prices.

Bumper-type production has been around more often than not since 1972.

Cattle Market Ends Mixed As Volume Eases

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Live cattle futures closed 65 points lower to 15 higher Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Volume was reduced to about 17,132 contracts. August was off 80 points at one point, while distant April gained 30 in erratic moves.

Rights Cases Cloud Soviet Arms Talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance held two rounds of weapons talks here Thursday with some apparent success, but the human rights issue drew the spotlight away from the meetings.

A Russian woman who has been denied permission to join her American husband in the United States was arrested trying to chain herself to a fence in front of the U.S. Embassy as Vance met in the Kremlin with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. She was released after three hours at a police station.

The U.S. delegation condemned "the forcible action" taken against Mrs. Irina McClellan, 38, for "expressing her views peacefully." The statement was issued with Vance's approval.

agency, refused the use of its facilities to transmit an Associated Press photograph of the incident for distribution internationally, claiming the picture was "unacceptable and politically tendentious." The AP, which has a contractual arrangement with Tass Fotokhronika for such transmission, protested the refusal.

United Press International also lodged a protest after Tass Fotokhronika refused to transmit a UPI picture of the incident.

An American Embassy official protested the refusals to the Soviet Foreign Ministry's press office.

Later, CBS News was prevented from transmitting television footage of the arrest to the United States via satellite. CBS correspondent Bernard Redmont said he was told Soviet technicians reused to permit feeding of the filmed report.

The arrest and suppression of photographs illustrated the interaction between nuclear arms talks and U.S. support for human rights in the Soviet Union.

Vance has brought a list of 10 "hardship" emigration cases, including Mrs. McClellan, to present to the Soviets. She has been separated from her husband for four years. She married Woodford P. McClellan of the University of Virginia while he was in Moscow on an exchange program in 1974. The Soviets have not said why they will not let her and a daughter by a previous marriage join him in the United States.

Conciliatory Note

The weapons talks opened on a conciliatory note, but with no public expectation of a dramatic breakthrough toward a new arms limitation treaty.

For the first time in 3 1/2 years, the Soviets had a high-level military man at the negotiations, indicating hard, technical discussions were in the offing.

He was Gen. Nikolai Ogarkov, chief of the general staff and deputy defense minister. Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev did not attend but U.S. officials said Vance expected him to participate before the talks end Saturday.

Limited To Nuclear

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter Jr. said the day's talks dealt entirely with nuclear weapons. The Middle East and Soviet intervention in Africa were to be dealt with later.

Whether Vance will raise the issue of human rights, a fundamental precept of President Carter's foreign policy, is doubtful. The Americans are said to feel they have made their position clear and want to avoid jeopardizing the SALT talks now.

Vance and Gromyko presented U.S. and Soviet positions on key issues, including U.S. efforts to delay the modernization of major Soviet weapons systems and Soviet attempts to stop the United States from sharing advanced nuclear technology with NATO allies.

"Atmosphere Good"

The second session was characterized by Carter as "more of a dialogue." He said Vance and Gromyko "were negotiating seriously on major items" and that "the atmosphere was good."

A third round was scheduled for this morning.

Gromyko set an upbeat tone in his luncheon speech, saying "so far we can but express the hope that these talks will lead to positive results."

Gromyko said the need to reach agreement "is far greater than in the past." The SALT treaty expired last Oct. 3 but has remained in effect while a new pact is negotiated.

Carter described the first round of talks as "businesslike" with Vance and Gromyko "setting the stage with issues that they see remaining in the SALT negotiations."

Relations Strained

Failure to conclude a new SALT agreement, along with recent Soviet intervention in Africa, have strained relations in recent months.

Analysts say the high stakes make Vance's visit here a turning point in SALT since both sides risk unraveling the negotiating process if the deadlock isn't broken soon.

In London, British Foreign Secretary David Owen said he "would not be surprised" if a SALT accord were reached this summer. He said he based his assessment on information from Vance.

For the Americans, Vance heads a team including chief U.S. arms negotiator Paul C. Warnke and officials from the White House, Pentagon, State Department and U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. The U.S. party arrived Wednesday.

Narrowing Of Gaps

The Americans want to narrow the gaps on drives to:

- Obtain assurances from the Soviets they will stop development of new intercontinental ballistic missiles or modernizing old ones to achieve missile reductions on both superpowers for three years.

- Ensure that the Soviets limit production of their new Backfire bomber and will not base it within easy striking distance of the United States. Brezhnev is reported willing to accept this.

- Softening Soviet demands that the United States not share its technology of the low-flying cruise missiles with NATO allies. The United States maintains NATO allies are entitled to this information.

U.S. and Soviet negotiators in Geneva reportedly have already agreed on most other provisions of a new nuclear arms limitation accord to run until 1985. Warnke said the new treaty was "90 percent complete."

In his testimony Kissinger referred to information contained in one of the Hoover letters that the Blue House was directly involved in giving several hundred thousand dollars to the Democratic Party.

He said he thought it "odd" that such an allegation had not come to either his or Mitchell's attention. And he said it was "inconceivable" that he would have forgotten it had he seen it.

"I find it even more inconceivable that Mr. Mitchell would have done nothing about it," he said. "Given the atmosphere of those times, I find it unusual... that no one referred to information that would have been damaging to the opposition party, especially in an administration that had one or two people who were politically oriented."

TIME WASTED—President Carter talks with reporters and photographers Thursday after telling them that the nation "cannot afford to wait any longer" for a national energy policy. The statement marked the first anniversary of his energy proposals. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter Implores Solons To Pass Energy Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, declaring that "precious time" already has been wasted, implored Congress on Thursday to enact the comprehensive energy program he submitted a year ago.

The president marked the first anniversary of introduction of the legislation by reiterating his belief that the nation "cannot afford to wait any longer." It was the same assertion Carter made in a nationally broadcast address that accompanied his submission of the energy program to lawmakers on April 20, 1977.

"We have wasted 12 months of precious time," Carter said Thursday.

"Where legislation requires firmness, I will continue to be firm. Where compromise is necessary, I will make reasonable compromises. And when it requires a special expression of the nation's interests, I will speak for that interest above the special interests that have hindered our progress so far," he added.

"The American people expect these same qualities from the Congress," the president said in a brief statement delivered in the White House press room.

Although Carter mildly rebuked Congress, he stopped short of threatening it with a unilateral executive decision to impose special import fees on imported oil — a non-legislative option that would be aimed at reducing U.S. reliance on imported oil.

Timing Unknown

Asked how long he would wait for Congress to act before taking executive action on his own, Carter said, "I don't know yet."

One year ago, Carter used a fireside chat to present his energy plan to the American people, describing it as "the moral equivalent of war."

Since then, House and Senate conferees have been unable to resolve major elements of the plan involving natural gas pricing and a proposed wellhead tax on domestically produced crude oil.

Earlier in the day, Carter had telephoned some of the congressional energy negotiators, urging them to work harder for a settlement of the issue.

Continue Negotiations

While Carter pleaded anew for congressional action to end the stalemate, the conferees continued their closed-door negotiations on the most troublesome part of the package — natural gas deregulation. And some of the president's critics staged mock anniversary parties.

The conferees ignored mounting congressional pressure to open the energy bargaining sessions, which are aimed at ending a nearly five-month deadlock on natural gas pricing that has blocked action on the rest of Carter's energy program.

Meanwhile, a small bipartisan group of House members unhappy with the private negotiations began using parliamentary delaying tactics to stall House floor action on unrelated legislation to dramatize the energy impasse.

They slowed things down by calling for repeated roll call votes, demanding members' motions to be subjected in writing and using a variety of other tactics.

Rep. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., one of the chief organizers, said the stalling efforts — which he called "a filibuster" — would be continued until conference sessions are opened to the public and to the press.

He also said Congress should have a chance to pass the less controversial parts of Carter's energy plan which are now being held up by the dispute over the natural gas and energy tax sections.

The tactics were hampering House action on a lobbying disclosure bill, although they fell short of bringing floor action to a halt.

"We'll let them play their games," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

In another development, House Republican leaders lit a candle in a large round piece of pastry at a news conference to ridicule the first anniversary of Carter's war on energy, and a birthday cake was served in a similar observance held by Sens. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., James Abourezk, D-S.D., and John Durkin, D-N.H.

"As you see, we've chosen a doughnut for our birthday cake and put one candle in the hole because that about describes where the nation is today thanks to Mr. Carter's non-energy program," said House Republican Leader John Rhodes at the candle-lighting "ceremony."

The three senators, all members of the House-Senate conference committee who have been excluded from the negotiating sessions, protested the holding of the closed-door hearings.

And Hansen, a conservative who supports deregulation of natural gas prices, called Carter's energy program "the moral equivalent to wishful thinking."

was made public, divers pulled a body from the lake, triggering a brief flurry of excitement. But the dead man was later identified as a 45-year-old shepherd from a nearby town who had been missing for five days after suffering a nervous breakdown.

The new message said Tuesday's communique was manufactured by Andreotti and his "accomplices" as part of a "psychological war" to win the people's sympathy.

Thursday's communique also said: "In the concentration camps of the imperialist state there are hundreds of communist prisoners, condemned to slow death by terms amounting to centuries of imprisonment."

"We struggle for the freedom of the proletariat and an essential part of our political program is freedom for all communists prisoners."

Disclaims Speculation

The message disclaimed press speculation that Moro was being drugged and said he was being treated "scrupulously as a political prisoner and with the rights that this status gives him. Nothing more and nothing less."

The Red Brigades have claimed responsibility for 18 slayings in the past four years, either in ambush or in shoot-out with police. They released four previous kidnappings victims — three industrial executives and a Genoa district attorney.

Moro's wife, Eleonora, and their four children remained in seclusion. Friends said Mrs. Moro had gone into a profound depression since Tuesday's message that her husband had been killed. There have been persistent rumors the family is urging the party and the government to agree to negotiations.

Triggers Controversy

The latest communication and deadline triggered a controversy between hard-liners and a growing number of leading Italians and foreigners urging bargaining to spare Moro's life.

In a petition, members of the Italian Parliament, bishops and intellectuals, including German novelist Heinrich Böll and French Marxist theoretician Roger Garaudy, pressed the Italian government "to commit itself to take necessary formal steps for the liberation of the statesman."

The Christian Democrats also seemed to be divided over the issue. While some held to the no-deal stand, Deputy Secretary Giovanni Galloni said, "We will see. The previous decisions stand until new ones are made."

The Communists have been among the toughest advocates of a no-deal policy.

LBJ Order Gives Nixon Downgraded Plane Ride

GRAND MEADOW, Minn. (UPI) — President Lyndon Johnson had ordered Air Force One to pick up the winner of the 1968 presidential race but sent an old cargo plane instead when Richard Nixon won, a former Air Force officer said Thursday.

Glenn Ellison, a former flight engineer with the 89th Military Airlift Wing, which carries presidents and other VIPs, said Johnson ordered the presidential jet to be sent to pick up the president-elect when it appeared then-Vice President Hubert Humphrey would win in the 1968 election.

But Ellison said Johnson did a turnabout when Nixon turned out the winner. "It was pretty close and for a while it seemed like Humphrey would win," Ellison said in an interview. "Word came from the White House to get Air Force One ready to pick up the president-elect."

"We had it out of the hangar and ready when we got word that Nixon had won," he said. "And we got new orders. They put the president's plane in the hangar and rolled out an old Air Force cargo plane to go for Nixon."

Ellison retired in 1971 and now manages the Grand Meadow airport.

Kissinger Claims He Began Korean Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger testified Thursday that he and President Ford oversaw U.S. intelligence agents in 1975 and launched the investigation of alleged bribery and influence-buying by the South Korean government.

"The whole investigation was started because I turned over a list of names to the attorney general," Kissinger said. "It was information I did not think he possessed."

Kissinger told the House International Relations Committee that until 1975, he had only been aware of lobbying by Korean agents on Capitol Hill and elsewhere in Washington, not allegations of large scale bribery.

However, he said he was aware of a 1971 letter from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover saying that a member of Congress had received payments from South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park.

The former secretary of state, who was then President Nixon's national security adviser, said he had no recollection of having read two other early warnings from Hoover concerning other activities by Park and the Korean government.

The letters were addressed to Kissinger, then director of the National Security Council, and to Attorney General John Mitchell.

Ex-Solon Named

While Kissinger did not identify the member of Congress, committee aides identified him as former Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, D-N.J. Gallagher has declined to talk about his dealings with Park other than to say he did nothing wrong.

Kissinger said he had taken no action in the matter because he assumed it was being dealt with by the FBI, the Justice Department and the CIA. It was not in the jurisdiction of the National Security Council, he added.

Kissinger said the situation changed in February, 1975 when Philip Habib, then an undersecretary of state, "called my attention to some sensitive intelligence reports which indicated there might be some attempts being made to lobby or bribe congressmen."

Watch Ordered

Kissinger said he took the information to Ford, who asked whether it was conclusive. He said Ford was told that it was not and that the president then issued instructions that a watch be kept on the situation.

"Later in the year we received some information which was much more definitive," Kissinger said.

This time he said he and Ford overruled objections from intelligence officers afraid of losing a valuable source and turned the entire matter over to the attorney general for investigation.

After the hearing, Kissinger was asked if the source was inside the Blue House, South Korea's presidential mansion in Seoul. He said it was not but declined to answer any other questions on the subject.

Contributions Cited

In his testimony Kissinger referred to information contained in one of the Hoover letters that the Blue House was directly involved in giving several hundred thousand dollars to the Democratic Party.

He said he thought it "odd" that such an allegation had not come to either his or Mitchell's attention. And he said it was "inconceivable" that he would have forgotten it had he seen it.

"I find it even more inconceivable that Mr. Mitchell would have done nothing about it," he said. "Given the atmosphere of those times, I find it unusual... that no one referred to information that would have been damaging to the opposition party, especially in an administration that had one or two people who were politically oriented."

ination was Seoul, South Korea. The plane was carrying 97 passengers and 16 crew members, the airline said.

In Paris, an Orly Airport duty officer said the plane was delayed 39 minutes at the start of its flight. He said he did not know why.

Major Victor Keating of the Canadian Defense Force in Edmonton, Alberta, said the plane probably would have run out of fuel by 4:30 p.m. CST.

He said the search would concentrate on the area between the Alert station, which is 2,000 miles from Anchorage, and Inuvik, also in the Northwest Territories, 700 miles from Anchorage.

The Alert station is the northernmost point of regular human habitation in North America. It is in an area of jagged mountains and icy fjords.

"The last known position was Alert, so we'll start from there. Presumably he got farther than that," Keating said.

North American Air Defense Command headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo., was asked to play back its radar tapes to determine when the plane disappeared from radar. Keating said, but NORAD said it had no information on the missing plane.

Keating said the plane's last known speed was 600 mph, but it "could have been flying in circles. It could have been disoriented, so it's hard to say how far he could have gotten."

FAA spokesman Cliff Cernick said the plane was reported overdue at 9 a.m. AST (1 p.m. CST), after it failed to make scheduled position reports.

The plane's route would have brought it over Kamukuk on Canada's north coast, then to Fort Yukon, Alaska, and on to Anchorage, Cernick said.

Three Canadian Air Force search and rescue planes, all HC130s, were searching for the plane. Two of the planes were dispatched from Edmonton, Alberta, and one from Trenton, Ontario, Keating said.

He said each of the planes from Edmonton carried 30 rescue personnel with parachutes, snowmobiles, first aid equipment, snowshoes and communication gear.

Canadian search and rescue officials have asked the U.S. Air Force for administrative assistance, said Capt. Richard Hodges at Elmendorf Air Force Base at Anchorage.

The trans-polar air route brings planes close to the North Pole and causes wild deviations in conventional compasses.

Officials here believed that no commercial airliner has ever gone down over the route. Korean Airlines began flying the route in 1975, and is one of at least eight airlines using it.

LIKE SCHEDULES, COLLEGE EXPENSE

Problems Plague Mother Of 10

BUCHANAN, Mich. (UPI) — To Barbara Savoie, the toughest part of having seven children in college at the same time, aside from the $35,000 annual tab, is keeping all their schedules straight.

"I have a big calendar and I write everything down so I know where everybody is," said Mrs. Savoie, mother of 10 children from 13 to 26 years old.

"I keep track of their vacations and their dentist and doctors appointments. That's the hardest part of all this — keeping them straight."

Mrs. Savoie and her husband, Leonard, now spend $35,000 a year to educate their brood.

The collegiate Savoies range in age from 18 to 26. Paul, 23, dropped out and is working while deciding whether he wants to continue engineering studies. Two others are still in high school.

Savoie estimated that, because he sent most of them to private schools before college, he has thrown $250,000 into their schooling so far. But as a vice president and controller of Clark Equipment Co., he earns more than $100,000 a year.

"I'd rather leave them an education than a lot of money," he said. "We don't lavish things on them. I never bought a child a car and never expect to. If they want a fancy stereo, they can get it out of their own money. It's just that I think a father owes his children an education."

SEVENTH STRANGLING VICTIM — Columbus (Ga.) Police Chief Curtis McClung, right, confers with a police detective outside the house where the body of the seventh strangling victim was discovered Thursday. Janet T. Seventh Strangulation Death Pondered In Georgia Town

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — A 61-year-old widowed school teacher was found slain Thursday, apparently the seventh victim of the "stocking strangler" who preys on elderly women living alone in this west Georgia Army town.

The body of Janet T. Cofer, a first grade teacher at Dimon Elementary School, was found inside her locked home by police who were summoned when she failed to show up at the school. She was strangled with a piece of cloth.

The scene of the latest killing to shock this city of 160,000, home of the huge Ft. Benning Army base, was a one-story ranch style brick home in south Columbus, about two miles from the Wynnton neighborhood where six elderly women had been strangled since last September — the last on Feb. 13.

Officers would not say flatly the "stocking strangler" was responsible for the latest slaying, but Chief Curtis McClung said the killer's method of operation resembled that in the other cases.

No suspects have been arrested in the previous six killings, which have struck terror in the quiet middle-class neighborhood, made up mainly of retirees.

The killings have led to a run on gunshops, locksmiths and businesses supplying protective devices. Special police patrols have been set up and the Ku Klux Klan has been making its own patrols, despite local protests.

Mrs. Cofer was last seen alive Wednesday night when she attended choir practice at the Wynnton United Methodist Church, where she was an active member.

Although she had a buzzer linking her home with a neighbor — a tactic adopted by many women who lived alone when the stranglings began, it had not been used. Her pet dog, a dachshund, was killed 10 days earlier when struck by a car.

It had been more than two months since the last previous victim of the stocking strangler, 78-year-old Mildred Borom, was found dead in her home in mid-February. The others killed since the strangler claimed his first victim last Sept. 18 ranged in age from 60 to 89.

Yule Lighting Safety Rules Proposal Due

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission voted Thursday to propose a safety standard for miniature Christmas tree lights to lessen the danger of fire in homes.

The proposed standard, adopted 4-0 with Commissioner Edith Barksdale Sloan abstaining, would affect production of about 30 million to 40 million miniature tree light sets, the commission staff said.

A 1975 survey of Christmas decorative lights concluded that defects such as exposed live electrical conductors in the lights "could very likely lead to hazardous situations."

Incidents reported to the commission include one last Christmas in which a woman suffered second-and third-degree burns to her face and arms when decorative lights ignited an artificial Christmas tree.

The proposed standard will not become final until after a period for public comment; however, it is expected to be in force by next Christmas.

The standard would include requirements for proper wiring to minimize overheating and on size and placement of plug blades. Also proposed are protective devices to prevent the flow of too much electric current which could cause deterioration of light sets.

The proposed standard was written for the commission by the National Consumers League and submitted last November. The regulation when it takes effect will cause a slight rise in production and retail prices of the small sets, the commission staff said.

The miniature lights are defined as those in a circuit of four watts per lamp or less when plugged into a 120-volt source. The commission has no safety standards pending for larger Christmas tree lights.

Of complaints and reports received about tree light incidents during the 1977 Christmas season, about twice as many concerned the miniature lights than the larger sizes, the commission staff said. About 90 percent of the incidents involved fire, melting, smoking or overheating problems, the staff said.

The regulation would apply to both indoor and outdoor miniature lights. Some of the lights flash and some provide a steady light.

Torrijos' Remark Could Impede Canal Transfer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate might have killed the Panama Canal treaties if it had known in advance that Panama leader Omar Torrijos had contingency plans for sabotaging the waterway, an informal survey of senators indicated Thursday.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., who labored hard for approval of the two pacts, said he "might have voted differently" had Torrijos declared his intentions prior to Tuesday's vote on the second agreement.

Shortly after the Senate approved the second treaty by a one-vote margin Tuesday night, Torrijos declared in a nationally televised interview that he was prepared to "liberate" the canal by force if the pacts had been killed.

A defection by Baker prior to the vote could have been enough to defeat the pact, the second of two treaties designed to relinquish U.S. control over the waterway and preserve its neutrality into the 21st century. Baker generally is credited with keeping Republican supporters of the pacts from wavering at the last minute.

On Wednesday, the White House and

State Department minimized the significance of Torrijos' declaration, and Democratic leaders in the House and Senate said they believed the it was intended for home consumption.

Baker told reporters Thursday that he viewed the Torrijos statement as "among the silliest diplomatic gestures I've ever seen." He said Torrijos' comments could have an adverse impact on passage of the legislation necessary to actually implement the treaties.

Both the House and Senate must act on that legislation, which will implement the transfer of the canal and provide the necessary funding.

None of the senators queried would state flatly that they would have voted against the treaty because of the Torrijos statement. But several indicated they had problems with it and, depending on other factors, could have changed the way they voted.

Sen. John Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said "If he (Torrijos) had made the statement before the vote, it undoubtedly would have had a key effect on the Senate vote and I would not have liked it at all."

The Alabama Democrat said it was difficult to tell whether the comments would affect passage of the implementing legislation but said it could have some effect. Allen, too, indicated he believed Torrijos' comments were intended for Panamanian consumption only.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini also indicated that Torrijos' comments would have affected his vote had it come before the Senate action. It was DeConcini's treaty reservation, giving the United States authority to keep the canal open but not intervene in Panamanian affairs, that angered Panamanian officials.

However, DeConcini noted that timing was the important factor. If the statements were made before the vote, it would have been a clear indication that Torrijos was trying to sabotage the treaties, he said.

Since it came after the vote, the Arizona Democrat added, he regarded the statement as a move by Torrijos to save face in Panama, where he has been under intense political pressure on the treaties.

Other senators also indicated they considered the Torrijos comments to be for Panamanian consumption only.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, who was under strong pressure in his home state of Oklahoma to vote against the treaties, declined to comment on whether his affirmative vote would have been changed by the Torrijos statement.

"That's a hypothetical question and the senator doesn't answer hypothetical questions," said Andrew Tenington, the Republican lawmaker's press secretary.

Tenington added that Bellmon thought, and believed other senators thought, that the statement "was made strictly for domestic consumption and it really shouldn't have any effect up here" on passage of the implementing legislation.

One senator who said the statement would not have changed his vote was Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark.

"The vote was too important to the country for him to change," said Bumpers' press secretary, Ken Danforth.

Postal Service, Unions Open Contract Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service and unions representing 554,000 postal workers opened contract talks Thursday in what will be a key test of President Carter's new anti-inflation crusade.

As officials of the unions and the Postal Service gathered here, however, both sides indicated they would bargain only with each other.

Four unions are negotiating a contract with the Postal Service to replace the one that expires July 20. Although strikes by postal workers are illegal, some postal workers staged a wildcat walkout on the East Coast in 1970. Labor and management were refusing to speculate on the possibility of another walkout.

The talks involve the largest single cluster of union workers negotiating a new contract this year, and follows closely the settlement between the United Mine Workers union and the soft coal industry. That settlement, ending a 110-day-old strike, resulted in a 39 percent, three-year wage and benefit increase for coal miners.

There was no immediate comment by union officials on postal salaries sought in the negotiations. According to Postal Service figures, the wages of postal workers this year average $15,877.

The White House Council on Wage and Price Stability last week termed the coal settlement inflationary, and Carter has exhorted business and labor to hold the line on wage and price increases.

Both sides of the postal talks already have been called to meetings with administration officials, and additional White House jawboning is expected.

"With all due respect to our opposite members in postal management, the presence of Jimmy Carter hangs over this table," Emmet Andrews, president of the American Postal Workers, said in his opening statement. Andrews' union is the largest of the four involved in the negotiations.

Carter last week urged unions and industry to hold wage and salary increases "significantly below the average rate for the last two years."

"We do not gladly accept penalties for the irresponsibility of other segments of the American economy. We shall insist upon adequate rewards for the increased productivity of our members without regard to unfair guidelines," Andrews said.

Lonnie L. Johnson, director of the mail handlers division of the Laborers International Union, said, "Postal workers can't be the scapegoats."

Deputy Postmaster General James V. P. Conway, the top Postal Service negotiator, sought to reduce talk of administration pressure on the labor talks.

"Postal management is in complete command, to act for the Postal Service under the mandate of the Postal Reorganization Act in this collective bargaining process, irrespective of any speculation to the contrary," Conway said.

Andrews played down the possibility of a strike.

"I know, of course, that merely voicing the word 'strike' is the quickest path to the headlines," he said. "At the risk of disappointing my friends in the press I would rather stress our faith in the bargaining process."

Joseph Vacca, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, declined to make a public statement. "Opening statements don't matter," he said. "It is closing statements that matter."

Across Washington, a fourth union, the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, opened separate negotiations with postal representatives.

Barry P. Bosworth, director of the wage-price council, met with union leaders Tuesday to outline Carter's anti-inflation program. An earlier meeting was held with representatives of postal management, said Tom Joyce, a spokesman for the council.

While several union participants in the meeting said they made no promises, Joyce said, "There will be further meetings."

High School Students View Body

CLAREMONT, Calif. (UPI) — Claremont High School biology instructor Robert Walker has acquired a human cadaver to give his students a chance to observe first hand what the human body is like — inside and out.

Walker said the addition of the cadaver made the high school the first in the nation to offer on-campus dissection of the human body.

The students aren't allowed to touch the body, but they are given the opportunity to see surgeons dissect the corpse and make comparisons with their own dissections of frogs and cats.

Walker said since the cadaver was brought to the high school laboratory, enrollment in the class has increased tremendously. To discourage the curious or the thrill seeker, students are not allowed to view the cadaver until they have completed a year of prerequisites and a three-week orientation class.

James Martin, associate principal at the school, said the cadaver has "a potential for controversy."

"I had only one inquiry from a parent, who was astonished and seeking more information," Martin said.

The cadaver is that of a 103-year-old man who had willed his body to science. One student, senior Jim Young, said the addition of the human body made the dissections easier to understand.

"The skin and muscles are pointed out after we find muscles in the cats," he said. "It's easier to distinguish when compared to a human."

Walker said the cadaver helps students to maintain "respect" for the human body.

Panel Rejects Zoning Request

The Zoning Board of Adjustment Thursday heeded opposition from a neighborhood organization by denying a request to convert part of a garage into an apartment.

Board members unanimously rejected James Allen's request for a special exception to expand a legal non-conforming use on two lots at 3110 21st St.

Allen proposed converting half of a two-car garage into an apartment. An apartment already exists on the site, which is in a residential zone. Board approval thus is necessary for a change.

Neale Pearson, chairman of the UNIT Neighborhood Association, told the board that some members believe the conversion would set a bad precedent for apartments in the area south of Texas Tech University between University and Indiana avenues.

Some homeowners in the area already have small apartment units adjacent to or behind their residences, Pearson acknowledged. But, he said, the apartments were built before the zoning ordinance was changed.

Zoning administrator Jerrel Northcutt agreed with Pearson's assessment, saying that the city eventually hopes to remove legal non-conforming structures when the use is discontinued.

Opposition by nearby homeowners apparently swayed the board to deny another request.

Sieglinde Stout of 2211 22nd St. asked the board for a special exception to allow her to operate a business in her home. She told the board she wants to raise and sell African violets by special order.

Board members, however, apparently agreed with concerned homeowners that the business would generate additional traffic problems on the thoroughfare. And some homeowners claimed it would set a precedent for additional home occupations.

Mrs. Stout countered that other, unlicensed home-occupations already exist in the neighborhood and that her customers would pick up their plants by appointment only.

But the board voted to reject her request.

Concerned property owners appeared before the board to oppose Larry Gautreaux's request for a parking variance to allow a French restaurant at 2420 Broadway St.

Gautreaux asked for a waiver to allow required parking spaces to be provided on lots not adjacent to his restaurant, which he plans to relocate from 811 University Ave.

Charles Mickey of the nearby Church of Christ Student Center opposed the request, saying the center objects to the precedent for a business serving alcoholic beverages to locate in the neighborhood.

Several other property owners registered concern about increased traffic and parking problems, but the board unanimously agreed to grant Gautreaux's request.

Furr's, Inc., doing business as Handy Hut, won approval for a sign variance at 40th Street and Avenue Q. The sign had been installed several feet from the proper setback location.

Bill McDonald for Winchester Square will be allowed to install a free-standing sign at 50th Street and Indiana Avenue as long as he removes it by 1982, at which time new ordinances become effective for legal non-conforming signs.

Height requirement variances were approved for a sign at 5009 Quaker Ave.

Wayne Pierce asked the board for the variance on a sign that would have been several feet too tall for the lot frontage.

Heart Association Elects Officers

Michael K. Armstrong, M.D. was elected president of the American Heart Association, Lubbock County division, at its annual meeting at the South Inn Thursday.

Other officers elected were Joseph Sasano, M.D. vice president; Kay Bivens, secretary, and Howard Smith, treasurer.

Guest speaker for the dinner meeting was David Lee, M.D., professor at the Texas University Health Sciences Center in Dallas.

During the meeting recognition was given to outstanding volunteers. Charles Caraway, director of health and physical education for the Lubbock Independent School District, received recognition for being the first in the state of Texas to implement Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation training within the school system.

Other special awards included the Outstanding Media Award presented to the Avalanche-Journal, Distinguished Service Award presented to Mildred Montgomery. The outgoing president, Larry Joe O'Bless Your Heart Award presented to Mildred Montgomery. The outgoing president, Larry Joe O'Brien, M.D., was presented with a Service Recognition Award.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

The winter of '78 is slowly becoming a bad memory but the challenges are still there. Thousands of them. They're called potholes and make every outing as adventurous as riding in an open convertible through a mine field.

A network newscaster the other night quoted a rather impressive statistic right down to the number of how many potholes there are in the country. I don't know a pothole-counter personally, but I suspect they're a lot like bird watchers who call in their sightings on a day-to-day basis. ("Harvey Gravel here, reporting a two-footer on U.S. 1 that would make your back teeth rattle!")

The big problem is what do we do now. Light a caution light on them each evening and hope God thinks it's a candle? Plant trees in them and make the environmentalists happy? Or turn them into testing grounds for shock absorbers?

One very imaginative judge in a small Ohio town is trying one solution. For every drunk who appears before him, he sentences him to filling in potholes. As he observed, "They have something in common. One potted condition deserves another."

It's probably oversimplification, but I think I have the perfect solution to the gaping holes dotting the roads and streets of our nation.

If it were up to me, I'd assemble every two-year-old in the country and announce, "I want all of you to take a nap. Under no condition are you to go out into the traffic and play. No one...repeat...no one is to take a bucket and shovel and fill up the holes in the street. Your mommy likes the holes just the way they are. She does not want you to shovel dirt into them, or stamp on them with your good shoes on. If you want to dig new ones, fine, but under no circumstances are you to fill up the holes. Understand?"

Within two days there is no doubt in my mind that every single pothole in the country would be firmly packed with a compound that would handle truck route traffic.

Generally, the nation is inclined to underestimate the power of two-year-olds. Actually, they're a vital force who could eliminate war, save the forests, and unearth sources of new energy if given the chance.

There's no doubt in my mind that when Noah built his Ark, somewhere in the neighborhood was a two-year-old who had been told, "Don't you dare turn on that garden hose and get everything wet!"

Clip 'n' Cook

RAISIN BARS

2½ cups all-purpose flour, fork-stir well to aerate before measuring

- ½ tsp. baking soda
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. cinnamon
- ½ tsp. nutmeg
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1 tbsp. grated orange rind
- ¼ cup orange juice
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

Stir together the flour, soda, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. In a large mixing bowl beat together well the butter, sugar, egg and orange rind; beat in the orange juice. Gradually stir in the flour mixture until blended. Work in the raisins and nuts, using your hands if necessary, until evenly distributed. Chill, covered, for 1 hour. Divide in half; roll out each half on a prepared pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin to a 12-by 7-inch rectangle. Cut each rectangle into six 7-by 2-inch strips. Place strips, well apart, on greased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 10 to 12 minutes. While still warm, cut each strip crosswise into 3 bars. Makes 3 dozen.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I, too, use those "free" scraps of doubleknit fabric to make bedspreads, quilts, etc. To enlarge on your hint a bit, here is something else I do that you might like to try.

I first decide on the size blocks I want — usually have two or three sizes working at the same time (two-, three- and four-inch squares), and make a template of each size from sandpaper or heavy cardboard.

Now, here's where my hint comes in...

After cutting out a garment, instead of folding the scraps and putting them away (and more times than not, never using them), I cut the blocks out right then and there from the leftover fabric.

By using different-sized blocks, I can usually utilize even the smallest of fabric scraps.

I then place each cut size in a box and piece them together on some rainy day, or other times when I've nothing to do.

In addition to quilts and bedspreads, you can let your imagination run wild in coming up with other uses for these squares. They make lovely tablecloths, especially. — Mrs. R.J. Sandy

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

My grandson, Neal, age 10, is an avid TV fan, but was unable to watch it for a few days due to house painting going on. He was having terrible withdrawal pains.

The family has a basset hound, Ginger — unbelievably large, homely, ungainly...a dog only its mother would ordinarily love.

She came lumbering in the house this morning, her usual woebegone expression draped over her face. Neal's father said to him, "Isn't it strange how you can get so attached to something?"

Neal, quickly, "Yeah, like TV!" — H.B.

DEAR HELOISE:

Ran into a minor catastrophe the other day...I chipped my new stove. Have you ever tried to find "Harvest Gold" enamel repair paint in a small-sized bottle? Forget it!

What I did do was this... I used my kit of vegetable food coloring (used yellow, mostly), kept blending and adding the white enamel until I found the right shade to match my stove.

Voila, stove repaired and I now have a full bottle of paint on hand for future emergencies. — Ruth Schaire

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

When I have to put something in the freezer for a quick chilling, I always slip a towel through the freezer door handle.

Several times this has kept me from forgetting a bottle of something or other that I had placed in the freezer.

If you don't have a double-door refrigerator, you can just put the towel on top of the fridge, hanging down, so you can't miss seeing it. — M.D.

DEAR HELOISE:

While cleaning out my sewing cabinet, I found my measuring tape in its usual tangled state. I rolled it up nice 'n' neat and then tried to figure out how to keep it that way.

Picked up a small jar cap and tucked it right inside. Stayed curled up, snug as could be.

One could even use the plastic (or cardboard as the case may be) inside masking or transparent adhesive tape.

In a world growing cold and indifferent, it's nice to read your warm, friendly column.

Now, back to that cabinet... — Kathy Bartow

My world seems much more warm and friendly right now because of your sweet letter. Loved your clever hint as well...Hurry back soon! — Heloise

"The man who's worthwhile is the man who can smile when all his finesses go wrong."

South won the diamond lead in his own hand and promptly lost the spade finesse. East led back the three of hearts. South played his king and West plunked down the ace.

South still had to lose the club finesse, but that didn't stop him from smiling as he scored game and rubber.

East wasn't smiling at all. He pointed out to West that if West had just let South's king-of-hearts hold, East would still score his king of clubs and West would make two heart tricks instead of just one.

East's analysis was correct, but he should have blamed himself, not poor West.

It is usually the right play to lead fourth best, but not always. This time East should have led the nine of hearts, not the three. This would tell his partner that he (East) held no higher heart. West would have known that he should duck and East and West, not South would have wound up smiling.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I've read a lot in your column about battered wives and only one passing reference to a battered husband. I'm sure the reason we don't hear more from battered husbands is because few men want to admit their wives can beat them up. So, they commit suicide, disappear, or get taken to court where the wife says HE clobbered HER. Since her story is more believable, she walks out with the house, the kids, everything they own in common, and he winds up paying the bills.

The police are no help. They tell the guy to go sleep someplace else for the night and let her "cool off."

A friend of mine is being sued right now for divorce — and he was the one who got beat up. The guy was trying to put some clothes on their three-year-old (his wife thinks bodies are beautiful and everyone should walk around the house naked). She tried to brain him with a lamp. He called the police and guess who had to leave the house and is now the defendant?

A Shelter for Battered Husbands might turn up some startling statistics. What do you think? — Lexington, Ky.

Dear Lex: I'm sure more men beat up their wives than the other way round, but if you think there is a need for a Shelter for Battered Husbands, gather together those of like mind and get one going. I'm working the other side of the street, Mister.

...one laughed and I felt my face turn eight shades of red. I feel so ignorant, Ann. Can you say something to get me out of the dumps? — Canadian Reader

Dear Reader: Any person who would shout out the correct pronunciation of a word that had been mispronounced (in a meeting yet) is far more ignorant than the person who mispronounced the word. Forget it. I assure you the sentiments are on your side.

... Dear Ann: Occasionally you print an inspirational poem or essay sent in by a reader. Here's something that has kept me going for years. I hope you'll run it. — Rockford

STATE OF MIND

If you think you are beaten, you are. If you think you dare not, you don't. If you'd like to win but think you can't, it's almost a cinch that you won't. If you think you'll lose, you've lost. For out in the world you'll find Success begins with a fellow's will — It's all in the state of mind.

Dear Rock: I, too, believe in the power of positive thinking. If anyone knows the author of this poem, please let me know so I can give proper attribution.

Dear Ann Landers: I feel so humiliated I'm ashamed to show my face. I attended a large committee meeting and although it is difficult for me to speak up (I'm shy and inarticulate) I felt so strongly about a certain issue I decided to say something.

Well, Ann, I was a little bit nervous and mispronounced a word. A certain woman who just loves to put people down shouted out the correct pronunciation. Ever-

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: It has been an observation of mine that new widows seem to come up with the oddest assortment of body aches and pains. Some I know never had a sick day until after their husbands died.

Recently, it was my sister-in-law. She complains of lots of things, mainly about sleeping at night. It seems her leg muscles cramp up during the night. She never had the problem before. It has been several months since her husband died.

Are we all doomed to this fate if we outlive our husbands? She gets mad when I tell her it's in her mind. — Mrs. T.R.

I think you are oversimplifying. It is a common observation, a problem that cannot be accounted for in some instances except as part of general anxiety and despondency. Nor is this limited to widows, by any means.

But this is not to say that your widowed sister-in-law's complaints are imagined. Sometimes mental stress and depression can be translated into real body ills, especially among the elderly. The way we feel mentally can dictate how we feel physically. Carrying it a step further, our mental state can affect how we eat and otherwise take care of our body's needs. Lack of sleep and poor nutrition along with reduced activity are a mighty poor combination at any time.

Instead of telling your sister-in-law it's "all in her mind," you can do her a real favor by suggesting that now is a good time in her life to take physical stock of herself. I mean, of course, a complete physical. This may reveal a serious mineral imbalance (i.e. potassium) related to her diet. That can be a real cause of leg cramps. She might find my booklet on leg cramps helpful reading also. For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. There are medicines, such as quinine, that can take care of the cramping.

Gall bladder removal remains the best answer at this point, in my opinion.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Our little granddaughter, age 4, grinds her teeth while sleeping. We have examined her for pinworms, which you suggest, but we found none. Is there any other way we can check, or are there other causes? — F.D.

Bruxism (teeth grinding) is not uncommon in small children, but the time-honored cause — pinworms — is not always present. To settle this matter, have her seen by a doctor, who can look for eggs (with a swab).

Other causes can be changes from deciduous (baby) teeth to permanent ones. There may be a slight malocclusion (poor alignment) of the young teeth or irritation from budding ones. She may be "chasing rabbits" through a dream.

This is usually more disturbing to parents (and grandparents) than to the youngster. In rare instances a dentist may put a soft rubber form on the teeth, but I doubt this is necessary.

Dear Doctor: Just what is a caesarean section? — Miss L.

Removal of the fetus from the uterus by way of an incision in the lower abdominal wall.

Are you having a gall bladder problem? To find out how the gall bladder works and what kinds of trouble to look for, read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "You and Your Gall Bladder." Write Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents. Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail

Simple Shading, Warm Verse Makes Perfect Gift For Dad

The "Any Man Can Be" sampler pictured here stitches a thoughtful outdoors scene and verse against a 14-mesh needlepoint background that's especially just for dad when Father's Day rolls around. Simple shading in gold and brown yarns, with slanting lines for brush and veticals for tree limbs, will give you a tranquil scene of stream and forest and a hint of getting away from it all that your dad is bound to appreciate. What's more, your needlepoint canvas will be more than just a gift — it provides a memory of you, as well. And any dad will value that as something worth having.

Those who've tried realize the challenge of capturing outdoor scenes in needlepoint, of representing real vistas with only the suggestion of color and lines. Landscape craft work goes back to the oils and watercolors of American 19th century painters for much of its inspiration. Only, for the most part, these artists, many of them amateurs, painted their farms and fields and vast plains to point up the achievement of American technology, from steamships to railroads.

Fathers' Day is the right time to celebrate our unspoiled wilderness. "Any Man Can Be" is available in a kit containing floss, Persian wool yarns, a 14-mesh canvas, a needle, and complete instructions. The 9" x 12" oak frame shown here is also available.

Order "Any Man Can Be" No. 14576 for $9.99 plus $1.35 postage and handling. Order Kit and frame No. 14577 for $16.98 plus $1.75 postage and handling.

Furniture Finishing Tips Given

By VIVIAN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

This is a good time of year to think about acquiring a piece of furniture or two: Thrift shops and tag sales are not too crowded, and the slower pace of before summer provides more incentive for refinishing a piece of furniture.

Some folks enjoy the refinishing work; others resent the inevitable mess that goes with such a project. Ideally, the job should be done partially outdoors. But there is no reason why it can't be done indoors if one works carefully and neatly.

Thinking of it as a temporary thing and putting emphasis on the rewards that may be reaped from diligent application of elbow grease will change the outlook.

In fact, paint experts suggest setting up a temporary workshop indoors. Find a little hideaway spot. The corner of a garage? A recreation room? As long as you keep it well-ventilated there should be no danger. If it isn't too cold, a window may be left partially open so that you do not inhale harmful vapors. A fan should be used to circulate the air.

Clear several feet of floor space and cover the spot with a large piece of heavy plastic. Put newspaper over the place where you will put the furniture piece to be refinished. The paper will help to make a speedier clean-up, something to be thankful for after a hard session of removing paint or other finish.

The paint people suggest having at hand a plastic garbage can with a plastic liner into which all the peelings and paper can be thrown.

Many stripping compounds are on the market, but the choice should be a safe, non-flammable paint and varnish remover. Popular now with the do-it-yourselfer are the non-flammable, wax-free, semi-paste-type removers which do not leave a wax residue. These newer products make an after-rinse or neutralizer unnecessary. No matter, some precautions should be observed. Gloves to protect the hands, for example; and any work done with a paint-varnish remover should be in a well-ventilated room.

As you push the goo with a paint scraper or knife, you might hold a cardboard to catch some of the scrapings if the piece is flat on top. (Another word of caution: wear protective goggles or glasses to protect your eyes from accidental slips of the scraper which may deflect some of the remover into your eyes.) Also, it's a good idea to have an assortment of scrapers of different widths handy. A beer can opener is one which can come in handy. The sharp tip can be used for cleaning out cracks and other crevices around moldings or carvings on the piece being refinished.

The item should be thoroughly stripped before starting the refinishing project. Care should be taken not to gouge the wood.

Wipe the piece well with alcohol or some other solvent to remove all bits and pieces that might be left. If the piece still looks messy, rub with steel wool to smooth the finish. When using steel wool, follow the grain of the wood to prevent scratches which will mar the finish and be very hard to remove later.

You may want a wood finish that is clear, or one that is pretty much the same as the original finish. Several coats of shellac may suffice. Many books, for example, Wallace Nutting's well-known "Treasury of Furniture" books, offer formulas for stains and paints for mahogany, walnut and other wood finishes. These books are available in libraries. One book contains the authentic measurements of furniture stretchers, posts, rails, finials and so on in line drawings.

Paneling Must Adjust To Moisture In Room

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q. — I have ordered some paneling I am going to install in an extra room of our house. I recall reading somewhere about the necessity of keeping the paneling a few days in the room where it is to be installed. Do I have this correct? And, if so, why is this necessary, since it means I will not be able to start work for a few days after delivery of the panels?

A. — Your recollection is correct. The panels must be exposed to the room's normal humidity before being installed so that they can adjust to the moisture. Follow the manufacturer's instructions on how the panels should be stacked during this adjustment period. If you put up the paneling as soon as the delivery has been made, the material may contract or expand after it has been attached to the studs or wall, resulting in some misalignment. By permitting the panels to contract or expand before they are installed, this problem usually will not occur.

Q. — We are senior citizens and thinking about buying a mobile home where we would like to stay for the rest of our lives. However, we are a bit scared of taking such a step because we read from time to time about the owners of mobile home sites forcing tenants to leave for one reason or another. Is this legal?

A. — It is assumed that you are planning to live in a mobile home retirement community. Yes, such things as you mention have occurred, but they are becoming less frequent as the standards for such communities, especially those catering to the elderly, are raised. Also, lawmakers are passing more stringent regulations to protect the tenants.

Q. — I have obtained some wooden discs cut from the trunk of a large tree that had been downed by a storm. I intend to use them to make a patio floor of the kind that I saw several years ago. Can you tell me how they should be laid into the soil?

A. — First, soak them in a wood preservative for a few hours. Prepare a gravel pit or bed, at least 4 inches in depth, for drainage. The discs won't rock or slide as you lay them if you cover the entire patio area with sand, then hose down gently. The sand settles in the gravel or grit in the spaces between the discs. Sprinkle some dry portland cement over the sand. Then dampen lightly. When the cement dries and hardens, the discs will be firmly imbedded in place.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Three New Stamp Sets To Be Issued In Israel

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

"Tabir '78," Israel's National Stamp Exhibition, is hailed by the issuance of three new stamp sets for release April 23. One of the sets will be the first set-tenant sheet (containing 15 stamps of the same value) ever issued by that country, according to the Israel Philatelic Agency in America.

The set-tenant stamps commemorate Israel's Memorial Day. Depicted on the adhesives are "flowers" — one of the 180 children's paintings which compose the Memorial Wall in the Yad-Lebanem Museum in Petah Tigva. This unique mural is the first such memorial in Israel. The wall features paintings by school children in memory of soldiers who fell in defense of their country. The brilliantly colorful painting is divided by the perforations which form the sheet of 15 different stamps.

The second set honors five heroes of the Israel "Underground Movement" prior to the formation of the state. Each of these men is portrayed on a different stamp with tab. The names and dates of the individuals are noted.

The third philatelic item is a souvenir sheet marking "Tabir '78" which features four stamps showing a mosaic of old Jerusalem as taken from the Madapa Map, recognized as the earliest representation of Israel ever discovered.

The three new issues are available at your local dealer or stamp store.

Two new regular U.S. stamps in the Americana Series have been issued by the U.S. Postal Service. One is a 16-cent stamp featuring the Statue of Liberty head and the other is a 29-center showing a lighthouse design.

The Americana Series started in 1975 to replace the Prominent Americans Series. The subjects relate to the history and culture of the United States. The principal element of the design common to the Americana Series is the arrangement of the lettering along the side and around the bottom or the top of the stamp.

The inscription on the 16-cent Liberty says: "I Lift My Lamp Beside The Golden-Door." The lighthouse illustrated on the vignette of the 29-cent stamp is the Sandy Hook Lighthouse at Sandy Hook, N.J., built in 1764. The lettering reads: "Lonely Beacon, Protecting Those Upon The Sea."

First-day cancellations can be obtained in the usual two methods.

Those wishing to affix their own stamps after purchase at the local post office may forward their requests to: "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Atlantic City, N.J. 18401" (for the lighthouse stamp) and "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, New York City, N.Y. 10001" (for the Liberty stamp).

Collectors desiring the Postal Service to affix the stamps should send their orders to: "Lighthouse Stamp, Postmaster, Atlantic City, N.J. 18401" together with a money order for 29 cents per stamp, and to: "Statue of Liberty Stamp, Postmaster, New York City, N.Y. 10001" with a money order of 16 cents per stamp.

All orders in the new U.S. Americana Series must be postmarked no later than May 15.

Photographer Lauds Unpaid Assistants

By WALTER CHANDORA
Associated Press Writer

Irving Desfor asked me to write a column for him on some facet of photography that would be of interest to his readers. Appropriate at this time would be some information on photographer's assistants — not the paid variety in the employ of big studios but the wives of photographer-writers who work at home.

Largely unpaid, quiet, unassuming but always helpful, these assistants rarely share the glory that comes to their husbands — yet without them, their famous husbands would not be so famous.

These assistants know the anguish that comes from pressing deadlines and they know how to get their photographer-writer husbands to deliver. These diplomatic assistants act as buffers between their husbands and the sometime irritants of the business world. Where the husbands are discouraged, they insure, and their frugality counterbalances the extravagances of their husbands.

These unpaid assistants are shadows of their husbands. They can anticipate their moods — especially the dark ones — and with a word or an act avert gloom and despair. They generate picture and story ideas and help in their completion. They can locate "lost" negatives and transparencies from files that would be chaotic without them. They keep accurate office records to keep a check on clients and vendors alike. And when traveling for pleasure or on assignment, thanks to them, exposed film is not left in hotel bureau drawers; suitcases are always neatly packed and schedules are maintained.

They are also understanding lovers, outstanding cooks, sympathetic mothers, knowledgeable counselors and good friends.

For all of these things and more they seek no pay, they ask no glory, they want no by-lines and they make no demands for equality.

I am privileged to have such an assistant — and in Gertrude Desfor, Doc had one too.

For collectors who specialize in art and history, the International Stamp Collectors Society has prepared a beautiful cover commemorating the visit of the King Tut exhibition to Los Angeles. Depicted as the cachet is the famous gold "Death Mask" of Tutankhamun, an exquisite piece of art hand-crafted over 3,000 years ago. A limited number of these covers are available at $2 each by writing: King Tut, International Stamp Collectors Society, Equitable Bldg., Hollywood & Vine, Hollywood, Calif. 90028. Allow four to six weeks for handling and mailing.

U.S. Plans Gold Sale In Bid To Bolster Dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — The Treasury Department says it will begin selling gold to support the dollar and cut the nation's trade deficit by selling a small part of the U.S. gold reserve starting next month. What's the connection? How will it work?

The following questions and answers are based on interviews with several economists.

Question: What impact will the gold sale have on the trade deficit?

Answer: It's largely symbolic, according to experts. The trade deficit was $26.7 billion last year, and the 1.8 million ounces of gold will sell for about $300 million.

Assistant Treasury Secretary C. Fred Bergsten said Thursday that the gold sale is just one in a series of steps, including pressure on Japan to import U.S. products and increased promotion of U.S. exports, designed to cut the deficit.

Q: What links gold to the dollar?

A: There tends to be a see-saw effect between the two. The price of gold often goes up when the dollar falls because investors want their money to be in the safest investment. And when the price of gold goes down, the dollar tends to rise in value.

Q: Why?

A: People with gold want to sell before the price falls much and erodes any profit they may have made. That selling pushes the gold down further, accelerating the process. Investors who have bailed out of gold have to put their money somewhere, and that place often tends to be in dollars, which causes the dollar to go up in value as more people want to buy them.

Q: How can the government have a positive influence on the price of dollars by selling gold?

A: The plan to sell 300,000 ounces at each of six auctions beginning May 23 will increase the supply of gold on the open market, thereby causing the price to fall. The idea is to push the dollar's end of the see-saw up by pushing gold's end down.

The government also hopes the decision to sell some gold will increase confidence in the dollar, prompting investors to buy the U.S. currency.

Q: Will selling the gold undermine the U.S. monetary system?

A: No, according to the Treasury, which says it will carry out a long-standing policy of phasing gold out as the international monetary standard.

Q: Why does the government want to support the dollar?

A: The dollar has been falling in value for more than a year, losing about 20 percent in the past year against Japan's currency and about 20 percent against West Germany's. That has increased the price of foreign products in the United States, contributing to the nation's rate of inflation, now about 7 percent a year.

Q: Will selling gold help?

A: No one knows. But within hours of the announcement Wednesday night the dollar jumped in value and the price of gold plummeted. But the key reason the dollar has been weak is the massive U.S. trade deficit and the fear of more inflation.

Several economists say that unless those fundamental problems are addressed, the benefits of the gold sale will be only temporary.

Gold Sale News Aids Dollar

By The Associated Press
The dollar rose sharply Thursday on foreign exchange markets overseas and in New York after the U.S. Treasury surprised traders by saying it would support the currency by selling gold.

The announcement, however, sent the price of gold bullion slumping. With the prospect of new stocks of gold hitting the market, investors assumed that the gold price would fall as the dollar rose, so they sold heavily to keep their losses to a minimum.

The result in Zurich was a closing price of $168.875 an ounce, down $6 an ounce from Wednesday's close of $174.875. There was a similar drop in London to a closing price of $169.00, down from $174.75.

But it was a different story for the U.S. dollar. In Europe, the American currency jumped more than 5 centimes — or 2.8 percent of its value — against the Swiss franc. It also surged 3 pfennigs against the West German mark and 8 centimes against the French franc — gains of 1.5 percent in value.

In London, the dollar gained almost 2 cents against the British pound, and in Tokyo the dollar bounced back strongly against the Japanese yen.

The overseas gains were matched by similar improvements in New York trading.

"It's not only the dollar's best day in weeks or months, it's the best day for a few years," said a dealer at London's National Westminster Bank. "The dollar was undervalued anyway and had to recover eventually. But now that the bandwagon is rolling, there's no telling what will happen."

Here were Thursday's late dollar rates around the world, compared with Wednesday's quotes: Zurich — 1.9725 Swiss francs, up from 1.9180; Frankfurt — 2.0765 marks, up from 2.0460; Paris — 4.66 French francs, up from 4.58; Milan — 867.55 Italian lire, up from 860.00; Tokyo — 224.25 Japanese yen, up from 222.025; Amsterdam — 2.2155 Dutch guilder, up from 2.1780. In London, the pound fell to $1.8260, from $1.84395.

In New York, the dollar was worth 2.0753 West German marks, up from 2.0545 Wednesday; 4.6555 French francs, up from 4.5940; 1.9663 Swiss francs, up from 1.9280; and 226.20 yen, up from 222.30. The British pound was worth $1.8323, against $1.8390 Wednesday.

The dollar had been shrinking in value for more than a year. It has fallen 26 percent against the Japanese yen and 20 percent against the West German mark, two of the world's strongest currencies. The reason was the United States' economic problems — inflation, high unemployment and a trade deficit of $26.7 billion last year.

As the dollar dropped in value in comparison with other currencies, American travelers abroad were able to buy less with their U.S. money. And the cost of foreign goods in the United States was greater, making them less competitive with American products.

But sentiment about the dollar began turning last week with President Carter's speech pledging top priority to the fight against inflation. The dollar made significant gains earlier this week, but Thursday's spurt resulted from the Treasury announcement, dealers said.

The Treasury said 300,000 ounces of gold would be sold at each of six monthly auctions, starting May 23.

Money Supply Figures Show Large Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's basic money supply increased by a surprisingly large margin in the latest reporting week, an indication that inflationary pressures have not abated.

But analysts found solace Thursday in indications that the Federal Reserve is acting more aggressively to try to check the rate at which the money supply is growing.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that the narrowly defined measure, known as M1, increased by $2.1 billion to $343.8 billion for the week ending April 12. The broader money supply measurement, known as M2, also rose by $2.1 billion, to a total of $825.7 billion.

"Those are higher increases than the street had generally expected," said Lawrence Kudlow, an economist for Paine, Webber, Jackson Curtis Inc., a New York-based brokerage house. "The net effect is that money measures are now reaccelerating their growth rate."

Another money-supply specialist agreed, saying: "The outlook suggests more money supply pressures ahead against a background of a stronger economy." Many experts believe that rapid increases in the money supply foreshadow higher rates of inflation.

Both analysts, however, noted that the Federal Reserve, for the first time in recent memory, apparently acted Wednesday to blunt any negative effect of Thursday's announcement. The board appeared to tighten credit, a move that tends to depress the money supply and which already has resulted in lower bond prices and higher interest rates.

"That is basically a signal that they are seeking firmer money market conditions," Kudlow said.

For the latest four weeks, M1—the total of checking account deposits plus currency in circulation—averaged $341.9 billion. That is a 4.9 percent rate of gain from 13 weeks ago.

In the Federal Reserve's report on key interest rates for the week, federal funds averaged 6.78 percent.

Jury Accepts Self-Defense, Acquits Jordon Of Murder

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
 Charlie Jordon Jr., accused of murder as a result of a Feb. 15 altercation and shooting, was acquitted by a jury here Thursday.
 The eight-man, four-woman panel in Judge Thomas L. Clinton's 99th District Court deliberated about an hour before deciding Jordon was innocent of murder in connection with the shooting death of Raymond Booker.
 Booker, 34, was shot inside a house at 3607 Zenith Ave. shortly after 11 p.m.
 Evidence during the trial indicated Booker and Jordon, 20, of Shallowater, had been shooting dice and became involved in a dispute over $5.
 An eyewitness stated the defendant twice tried to back away from the confrontation with Booker, described as a much larger man, and said shots were fired after Booker started beating Jordon with his fists.
 Defense attorney George Thompson argued it was "clear as a bell" that Jordon had acted in self-defense.
 "The state by its own witnesses has proved a case of self-defense better than I ever could," Thompson said.
 Thompson pointed to a question posed to a state witness at one point in the trial by Asst. Dist. Atty. Jim Darnell.
 Darnell had asked that witness whether, if he had been in Jordon's position, he would have shot Booker. The witness indicated he would have done so.
 "The man (Booker) was bent on mayhem," Thompson said, pounding his fist on the jury box rail. He argued that Booker had begun to beat his client into unconsciousness, and that Jordon felt he had to act to protect himself from serious bodily injury.

 Darnell said the crux of the case was whether anyone had the right to shoot and kill another person as a result of a fistfight.
 Darnell asked jurors if they remembered people standing in line to purchase license plates. "Right now, that man is asking for a license to kill — because somebody took his fists and beat him," Darnell said, pointing at the defendant.
 The prosecutor wondered aloud why Jordon, if he had acted in self-defense, had not remained on the premises to explain to the police what had happened.
 Darnell said Booker had not been trying to kill Jordon. "If he had, he wouldn't have used his fists — he just wanted to teach Charlie Jordon a lesson."
 "Instead, Charlie Jordon taught him one," Darnell argued.
 Officers testified they arrived at the Zenith Avenue house to find Booker lying propped against the wall in a small back room. Testimony indicated there were three apparent bullet wounds on the left side of the chest, or upper abdomen and one in the back of the left thigh.
 In testimony Wednesday, witness Jimmy Wilson Jr. said Jordon tried to leave the small back room when Booker became angry, but indicated the defendant was unable to get away.
 Wilson said he tried to intercede, offering to pay Booker the money, but that Booker said he didn't want it.
 The witness said Booker, who he indicated, was much larger than Jordon, began hitting the defendant with his fists.

On cross-examination, Wilson repeated that Jordon had first tried to walk away from Booker. He added that Jordon had again unsuccessfully tried to break away after he had been hit.
 Wilson indicated he and another man managed to restrain Booker temporarily, but that the deceased broke loose and again went after the defendant.
 "He came after him again like a mad dog, didn't he?" Thompson said. "He came after him again," Wilson said.
 The witness said Booker pushed Jordon down over a table, and that suddenly he saw a gun between the two men.
 "They went down on the table and came up with a gun between them," Wilson testified. He said he saw the gun and heard firing and that he "hit the floor."
 Wilson indicated he did not know if Jordon had possession of the gun before it suddenly appeared.
 Witness Sylvester Kilpatrick said he saw Booker beating Jordon and heard three or four shots fired. He said he did not see the gun until after the shots were fired.
 Thompson criticized police investigation of the incident during cross-examination of various witnesses.
 Testimony showed that a desk sergeant was asked to take photographs of the scene because of the absence of regular identification officers.
 The desk sergeant testified that he attempted to take pictures but later discovered there was no film in the camera.
 Thompson also pointed out through questioning that no autopsy was performed and that, consequently, no bullets were removed from the body.

Heartline

(HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens of all ages. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. Senior citizens will receive prompt replies, but a stamped, self-addressed envelope must be included with the request. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.)

HEARTLINE: I am a 64-year-old widower, retired, and I draw Social Security benefits. I have always heard about a "living will." Do you have any information on this and is it a legal document? Would you suggest signing one of these? —C.S.

A "living will" is a short document that basically states, "If the situation should arise in which there is not reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental disability, I request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or 'heroic measures.'"

In some states, a "living will" is considered a legal document while in the majority of our states it is not. You should check with an attorney in your town to see if they are recognized in your state. Regardless of this, it has been helpful to physicians and family members who must make the difficult decision about the treatment of patients whose deaths are imminent.

You can receive a copy by writing to the Euthanasia Educational Council, 250 West 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. The council can also provide more information.

The decision to sign a "living will" is one no one can help you with. It is a matter between you and your conscience.

HEARTLINE: Each month I send my medical bills to Medicare. Sometimes these include bills from three or four different doctors. Lately, the payments have been delayed because Medicare has written for more information about itemizing one doctor's bill more completely. Is there any way I can prevent this delay? —J.C.

You are attaching all doctors' bills to one Medicare claim form. One carrier we checked with suggested that you attach bills from each doctor to a separate claim form, thus permitting the correctly itemized ones to be paid more promptly. We also suggest that you visit the doctor whose claims need more itemization and discuss the carrier's letter with him. By having the claim correctly itemized, your payments will be more prompt.

For people who are on the Medicare program, or will soon be turning 65 and going on it, Heartline now has available their brand-new 1978 Guide to Medicare. This book is still written in easy-to-understand question-and-answer form, but the 1978 issue has much more information. Included in the new issue are the new deductibles for Part A medical insurance, more items and conditions that Medicare covers, a more concise explanation of reasonable charges, and detailed instructions on how to fill out your Medicare claim form.

You can receive the 1978 Heartline's Guide to Medicare by sending $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio, 45381. This book is completely guaranteed and if you are not satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: My son is receiving Supplemental Security Income (S.S.I.) benefits because he is undergoing treatments for a severe drug addiction. I take care of all his funds right now. I am not sure if this program is helping him that much and we are thinking of having him come and live with us. If my son discontinues this treatment, can he continue to draw S.S.I.? —T.B.

If your son stops his treatment, he is no longer eligible to draw S.S.I. benefits. Drug addicts and alcoholics can get S.S.I. checks only as long as they continue with required treatments.

Transport Board Investigates Sinking Of Great Lakes Ship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ore carrier Edmund Fitzgerald, whose tragic sinking in Lake Superior became legend in song, probably perished because of damaged hatch covers, the National Transportation Safety Board has tentatively concluded.

In a finding approved and then pulled back Thursday, the board said the probable cause of the sinking was "The sudden massive flooding of the cargo hold which resulted from the collapse of a hatch cover."

The board later agreed, however, to withhold final determination until a dissenting member could file an opinion. The Fitzgerald, which sank with the loss of 29 crew members on Nov. 10, 1975, was made famous in a ballad by folksinger Gordon Lightfoot.

The 729-foot vessel, carrying a load of taconite pellets from Superior, Wis., to Detroit, disappeared in a severe storm. No distress call was heard, and no survivors or bodies were ever found.

A Coast Guard investigation last summer concluded the Fitzgerald probably sank because heavy seas washing over decks seeped through leaking deck hatch-covers into the holds.

That drew protests from sailors and shippers, who said the Coast Guard had put forward "nothing more than a theory" and had made no real effort to determine whether Great Lakes cargo vessels were safe.

The safety board's staff study concluded that the Fitzgerald suffered topside storm damage to its ballast tank vents and shell plating which permitted flooding.

In addition, the staff said, water entered the cargo hold through non-weather-tight hatch covers, as the Coast Guard had concluded.

"These factors combined to reduce the Fitzgerald's freeboard and give the ship a list," the board said. "In turn, the reduced freeboard and the list increased the force of the boarding seas which ultimately collapsed the hatch cover and flooded the ship."

The board said flooding occurred so rapidly that the ship sank before the crew could transmit a distress call.

Board member Philip A. Hogue argued during discussion of the case that "the prime weight of evidence in my opinion is toward grounding and shoaling."

After the board had voted 3-1 to approve the staff finding blaming the hatch covers, Hogue said he would file a written dissent. Member Francis H. McDams, who had expressed similar doubts during the debate but voted with the majority, then asked that the vote be considered tentative.

Chairman James B. King agreed, and said final consideration would be delayed until the board's May 4 meeting.

The board's tentative findings also recommended that the Coast Guard reconsider its standards for minimum freeboard for Great Lakes ships.

The Coast Guard reduced freeboard requirements in 1969, 1971 and 1973 amendments to the Great Lakes Load Line Regulations. This means that the ship sits lower in the water and more water can wash over its deck in a storm.

State Oil Allowable Continues Full Bore

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission Thursday extended all-out oil production in Texas through May. The 100 percent allowable has been in effect every month except three since April 1972.

Once again, however, the commission held the allowable for the East Texas Field to 86 percent to avoid possible waste.

Chairman Mack Wallace noted that crude oil imports into the United States totaled 8,034,000 barrels per day for the four-week average of April 7.

This represents 42 percent of the nation's demand for oil, he said.

Wallace announced that major buyers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 3,551,424 barrels a day in May, an increase of 7,627 barrels a day from April.

He also said that starting in June companies would not have to submit as many forms in making nominations. "I understand this will reduce your paper work by six inches," he quipped and added, "The federal government at the present time measures its paper work in pounds."

In the past six years the statewide allowable has dipped below 100 percent only in December 1976 and January-February 1977.

Here are major buyers' nominations for May, in barrels per day, with any changes from April in parentheses:

- Amoco 320,000 (down 5,000)
- Atlantic Richfield 170,000
- Chevron 66,300
- Cities Service 100,000

Lemmon Hits Oil Holdings Of Poerner

AUSTIN (AP) — Ray Lemmon, a Democratic candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission, said Thursday that Commissioner John Poerner should resign because of an admitted conflict of interest.

"Mr. Poerner has publicly said he has some oil and gas leases near Hondo that have been placed in a blind trust," Lemmon told a news conference. "These leases are subject to Railroad Commission regulation. The interim appointee has stated that his holdings are modest and if this is true, he should have no problem divesting himself of these holdings. His continued failure to divest himself indicates that his holdings are more valuable to him than the public trust and I again suggest and demand that he immediately resign or divest himself of these holdings."

Lemmon, former state legislator from Houston, said he had no holdings that would conflict with a commission job.

Lemmon predicted there would be a runoff following the May 6 primary vote, but that Poerner would not be in it. "He is politically not well enough known," Lemmon said. "Jerry Sadler should be in the runoff. More people know him accidentally than the rest of us on purpose. I think either myself or Jake Johnson will be the other in the runoff."

Hospitalization Slated For Honduras Leader

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Chief of State Gen. Juan Alberto Melgar Castro will be hospitalized Monday in Houston, Texas, a presidential press spokesman said Thursday.

No details of Melgar Castro's health were given, although the spokesman said he has been in poor health for 15 days.

Melgar Castro was hospitalized here for general fatigue more than six months ago and treated by Health Minister Enrique Aguilar Paz.

Melgar Castro was elected chief of state on April 22 by the Armed Forces Superior Council, the high military command of 28 officers who overthrew President Gen. Oswaldo Lopez Arellano.

Young Women Plan Rowboating Idyll

SEATTLE (AP) — Like thousands of others, Ginger Cox and Letitia Davis are planning a boat trip to Alaska this summer. But the two Seattle-area women say that unlike most vacationers, they'll row all the way — more than 1,000 miles.

"I've wanted to go to Alaska since I was a little kid," said Miss Cox, 23. "I thought of this trip years ago and everyone would laugh when I talked about it. Finally, I found someone else who thought it was neat and wanted to do it, too."

She estimated the trip will take 60 to 80 days, averaging 80 miles a day in the yet-to-be-built 20-foot Norwegian "faering." The boat, 5 feet wide and about 250 pounds, will have some kind of sunshade or shelter rigged to a mast.

Miss Cox, who lives in Issaquah, is a former collegiate rower for Dartmouth College. Her 21-year-old companion from Kirkland is a junior at Dartmouth and will arrive here in June to prepare for the odyssey.

"We're both rowing in the national regatta (at Green Lake, Wash., June 15-18). Then we'll take a day to rest and go," said Miss Cox.

Miss Davis will be training for the 1980 Olympic tryouts, she said. The route follows channels, straits and sounds weaving through dozens of island groups. The destination is Skagway, 950 miles away if one follows the main channels, nearly 1,200 if a small boat hugs the serrated coastline.

The two women have been on several rowing and hiking trips together, testing their compatibility in fair and foul weather.

Miss Cox, who works as a carpenter's helper, rows at least 90 minutes every morning, rain or shine, on Lake Sammamish or Lake Washington.

The boat will carry about 300 pounds of supplies. The two women will take along mostly grains, nuts and dried fruits, as well as fishing and clam-digging gear.

Navigational equipment will include charts and a barometer to warn of weather changes.

"Sometimes the weather can be tricky. There are long, narrow channels with no real good place to put ashore. We'll just have to be careful and watch ourselves," said Miss Cox.

'Whistleblowers' Hit Civil Service Package

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed changes in the civil service system will deprive "whistleblowers" of adequate protection, a trio of former high-level government workers said Thursday.

The three employees, all of whom were fired for exposing government waste in their agencies, testified before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which is considering President Carter's plan to overhaul the system.

"Far from protecting all whistleblowers, this bill would strip away rights we now have," said A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the most famous of the whistleblowers. Fitzgerald was fired as an Air Force systems analyst after telling Congress about $2 billion in cost overruns on the C-5A transport plane.

During his campaign for the presidency, Carter said frequently that he wanted to protect whistleblowers such as Fitzgerald. When he unveiled his civil service reorganization last month, the president said the plan would do just that.

But Fitzgerald, former General Services Administration investigator Robert Sullivan and former vaccine researcher, Dr. Anthony Morris, said the plan would not have helped them when they were fired.

Currently, persons exposing fraud or abuses in their agencies have a few, weak rights, Fitzgerald said. He said, however, it appears that Carter's plan would eliminate one of these — the right to a civil service hearing on the facts of the case. Fitzgerald said a hearing would be discretionary, not mandatory, under Carter's plan.

Currently, "the rewards and punishment system is upside down in many government agencies," he said. "The people who try to protect the taxpayers are getting in trouble and those who cover up waste are prospering or at least are not getting in trouble."

"I talk to five or six people a week whom I call 'closet patriots' — they say they would do the right thing if they could get away with it."

But Fitzgerald said his own case gives them little comfort. More than nine years after his dismissal, he has spent more than $500,000 in legal fees and is far from a final judgment on his suit for reinstatement to his job, damages and back pay.

After a four-year appeal through the civil service system, he was reinstated as an Air Force systems analyst.

Civil Service Overhaul Plan In Trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief spokesman lashed out against the civil service system Thursday, saying "It is damn near impossible to fire someone from this government for failure to do their job."

White House press secretary Jody Powell said federal employees are exerting political pressure to kill or gut Carter's plan to overhaul the system. This pressure is causing some key House members to try to delay passage until after this year's congressional elections, Powell said.

Carter met Thursday with Democratic members of the House Civil Service Committee and received a mixed reaction. "He is somewhat encouraged," Powell said. But he characterized the committee as a potential bottleneck for the legislation.

Participants in the meeting said Carter told them he considers the civil service package essential to his efforts to make government more efficient, and he pressed them to act this year.

Among other things, the package would cut down the levels of appeal through which federal employees may now fight firing or demotions.

Reps. Herbert Harris, D-Va., and Gladys Spellman, D-Md., said after the meeting that they still want to hold extensive hearings and that they doubt quick passage is likely.

Harris and Spellman both have many federal employees in their suburban Washington districts and are generally regarded as sympathetic with the government workers' views.

"I think the president's plan is an excellent starting point, but I frankly don't have a rubber stamp, and I would not rubber stamp the plan," Mrs. Spellman said.

Harris said, "I have very great doubts that the magnitude of the program will permit it to be pushed through in any sort of hurried fashion."

Powell's attack on the civil service system was prompted by a newspaper story and editorial suggesting the president misled the public by saying that only 226 federal employees had been fired "for inefficiency" in the most recent year on record.

The Washington Star said there were 17,000 firings. But Powell pointed to Civil Service Commission statistics showing that the larger number included all persons fired for causes such as drug addiction, commission of felonies, lying on job applications, and moral turpitude, as well as forced resignations and fired probationary employees.

He insisted that the 226 figure was not only accurate but appropriate, going "to the heart of the problem — and this is that it is damn near impossible to fire someone in this government for failure to do their job, if they are in the merit system."

Ninety per cent of all federal workers are in the merit system, Powell said, adding:

"This is absolutely essential, civil service reform, if there is to be any hope of any meaningful reorganization and increased efficiency in the federal government."

Landscape Architect Students Honored

Nancy Kelsey, a December 1977 graduate, and Malcolm Hester, a May 1978 graduate, are the two Texas Tech University students selected this year to receive the Certificate of Honor award by the American Society of Landscape Architects.

Both will be nominated for national recognition by the Texas Chapter of ASLA.

In competition for the award were four students nominated by the faculty in the Department of Park Administration and Landscape Architecture.

Karl von Bieberstein, state chairman of the ASLA Awards Committee, and two other committee members interviewed the five and selected Kelsey and Hester. Each student was required to submit a portfolio of work at the time of the interview.

Von Bieberstein said selection was based on the student's academic performance but also on a prediction of career success based on the student's broad understanding of the field and a realistic approach to problem-solving. ASLA student awards are presented to two students each year at the two Texas universities offering accredited landscape architecture majors, Texas Tech and Texas A&M University.

Miss Kelsey is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clyde E. Kelsey Jr. of 3307 74th St. Hester is the son of W. A. Hester of Amarillo.

'Great American Foot' Aimed At Fostering New Awareness

NEW YORK (AP) — Feet. They're strutting their stuff in a most unpedestrian salute in "The Great American Foot" show at New York's Museum of Contemporary Crafts.

"From art to fashion to fantasy, 'The Great American Foot' is designed to stimulate a new awareness of a common subject," says Paul J. Smith, the museum's director.

More than 75 artists, including Andy Warhol, Roy Lichtenstein and Jasper Johns, put their feet together for a wildly imaginative air to the podiatrist's bread-and-butter.

The not-so-humble foot has been cast in ceramic and fiberglass. Fantasy footwear has been crocheted, carved, feathered, glazed, beaded and quilted.

Museum-goers are serenaded as they wander through the midtown Manhattan museum. Tunes include "These Boots Are Made For Walking," "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," and — naturally — "Shuffle Off to Buffalo."

"People don't realize what a masterpiece of engineering the foot is," says Ruth Amdur Tanenhaus, the exhibition's curator.

Ms. Tanenhaus has included an anatomical study in the offbeat exhibit along with examples of footwear through the ages and foot superstitions.

"In Arab countries, a man was once able to terminate his marriage in one stroke by putting his unfortunate wife's shoes outside his door and declaring, 'She was my slipper, I have cast her off,'" she says.

"The ancient Egyptians' favorite remedy for a headache was to inhale the smoke from a burning sandal. And at an Anglo-Saxon wedding, the woman's father transferred authority from himself to the new bridegroom by presenting him with one of his daughter's shoes, thus giving rise to the custom of throwing an old shoe after a departing bride," she says.

Sponsored by the Kinney Shoe Corp., "The Great American Foot" will promenade here through June 30 before being available to other museums and art centers in America.

Kinney put up about $50,000 but the only Kinney brand in the show is a pair of sneakers, museum director Smith says.

"It's gratifying when a good marriage develops between corporate sponsorship and a cultural education program," Smith says. "Admission fees to exhibits can't possibly cover the cost of shows."

bly cover the cost of shows,"

What's next? "Well, there are lots of other body parts to consider," says Smith. "We're open to suggestion."

UNPEDESTRIAN SHOES — Among the unusual items of footwear currently on view at New York's Museum of Contemporary Crafts "The Great American Foot" show are: top, "Jester's Roller Skates," by Elissa D'Arrigo of New York; "Alligator Pumps," clutching cigarette, center, by E'wao Kagoshima of New York; and "Spiked Tennis Shoes," bottom, by Judith Auda of San Francisco. Increased Home Loan Guarantees, Other Benefits Voted For Veterans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Veterans Affairs Committee voted Thursday to increase home loan guarantees and burial allowances for wartime veterans and to increase compensation for those disabled in military service.

It also voted to require the Defense Department to honor the Vietnam era war dead with a memorial plaque in Arlington National Cemetery's memorial amphitheater because no acceptable unknown soldier has been found for burial at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The amphitheater is adjacent to the tomb.

The 13-bill veterans package would cost $154 million to implement in the first year.

The home loan guarantees would be raised from $17,500 to $25,000. The special home grants for those severely disabled in military service would be increased from $25,000 to $30,000.

The committee voted to change eligibility for home loan guarantees for Vietnam era veterans from 180 days of military service to 90 days, the same as for World War II and Korea veterans.

The committee voted to increase the burial allowance for wartime veterans from $250 to $350, despite Veterans Administration protests that this already duplicates other federal burial allowances, such as those covered by Social Security.

Over VA objections, the committee voted to authorize VA purchase of cemetery memorial markers for veterans who die after leaving military service and whose bodies are not recoverable. This is now available only for those who die in military service and whose bodies are not recovered.

Veterans who are not buried in a U.S. government cemetery are provided a $150 burial plot allowance in addition to the burial allowance. But there is a deduction if the cost is borne in part or wholly by a state or local cemetery. The committee voted over VA objections to give the state and local cemetery the full $150 to encourage creation of additional local veterans cemeteries.

Several bills were approved involving compensation payments to veterans with service-connected disabilities and their survivors. They provide:

—A 6.5 percent increase in the monthly payments to 2.2 million veterans and 471,000 widows and children and in the special clothing allowance some disabled veterans receive.

—A decrease from 50 percent to 40 percent in the disability rating required for a veteran to receive additional compensation for dependents.

—An increase from $100 to $200 in the special monthly pension paid to recipients of the Medal of Honor.

—Payments to survivors of veterans who are permanently and totally disabled for 10 years or more regardless of whether death is related to the veterans' military disability.

Protest By Woman Leads To Arrest In Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet woman who has tried for four years to leave Russia to join her husband in the United States was arrested by Soviet police Thursday after she tried to chain herself to a fence in front of the U.S. Embassy.

Mrs. Irina McClellan, 38, and her teenage daughter by a previous marriage, staged the protest as Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was concluding a meeting with Soviet leaders.

She is the wife of Woodford McClellan, a professor of Russian at the University of Virginia. They were married in Moscow in 1974.

Tass Fotokhronika, the Soviet photo agency, refused the use of its facilities to transmit an Associated Press photo of the incident for distribution internationally, claiming the picture was "unacceptable and politically tendentious." The AP, which has a contractual arrangement with Tass Fotokhronika for such transmission, protested the refusal.

United Press International also lodged a protest after Tass Fotokhronika refused to transmit a UPI picture of the incident.

An American Embassy official complained to the Soviet Foreign Ministry press office about the refusals.

A spokesman for Vance said of the arrest, "We deeply regret the forcible action taken against Mrs. McClellan" saying it was "the continuing refusal of the Soviet authorities to grant her exit permission which led her to express her views peaceably."

Mrs. McClellan was held three hours at a police station, then freed. Her daughter was not detained.

The two walked past about 20 uniformed Soviet police and plainclothes-men guarding the embassy and wrapped a chain around a fence near the building's flagpole, which flew the American flag. They held up a poster, inscribed in Russian, that read: "I've been waiting for a visa for four years."

Mrs. McClellan opened her coat to reveal a shirt, which bore the words "Let me out to my husband," in English.

Police raced from the embassy's door, struggled with the women and a short time later hustled them away.

Several U.S. Embassy officials were in front of the building during the incident and apparently witnessed it. The U.S. government has raised her case with the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Mrs. McClellan, in a statement distributed to reporters before the protest, appealed to Vance to do something about her "tragic fate."

"My family has no possibility to live under the same roof, in the same house," said the statement, typewritten in English. "My daughter and I have been exposed to cruel treatment and repressions by the Soviet authorities here. My case does not correspond to the Helsinki agreement, detente or any talks on peaceful coexistence. I call upon you to interfere (intervene) in my fate, to help to reunite my family and gain our right to be together."

Mrs. McClellan was taken into custody April 10 after staging a protest outside the Lenin Library in Moscow. On March 8, she was detained at her home when she tried to go to the Lenin Library for another demonstration by a group of Jewish women who also had been denied permission to leave Russia.

Special Oil Tanker Lane Wins Approval

LONDON (AP) — Maritime nations agreed Thursday to a new regulation designed to keep oil tankers in the English Channel a safe distance from the French coast, where 150 miles of tourist beaches were blackened last month in history's worst oil spill.

Members of the United Nations Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization agreed to require laden tankers in the channel — the world's busiest seaway — to use a special, one-way lane 30 miles off the French coast at Ushant. This north-bound lane will come to within 15 miles of the French coast off the Cherbourg Peninsula, where the English Channel narrows.

Empty tankers and the few full tankers traveling southwest down the channel will use a lane 15 to 20 miles off the exposed point of Ushant. An inner lane for north-bound non-tanker traffic also will be used under the new rule.

Additionally, radar surveillance will be stepped up to catch ships breaking the regulation, which officials said would become effective by early next year.

The Amoco Cadiz, a Liberian-registered supertanker, ran aground on rocks off the coast of Brittany last month in a heavy storm and subsequently broke apart, spilling 65 million gallons of crude oil into the sea. Much of the oil washed up on the Brittany coast.

The new regulation, designed to prevent similar disasters, was included in a package of measures offered for the organization's consideration by the French government.

The London-based IMCO, which deals with shipping safety and pollution matters, did not agree on French proposals to require duplicate rudder and steering systems on all new tankers and to adopt stricter measures against substandard ships.

Thousands of French soldiers and volunteers are still removing oil from Brittany's beaches. Eighty-eight separate clean-up operations are underway, from the Brest estuary to Paimpol on the north coast of France.

WORKING THE RIG — Jackie Thompson of Winnsboro, La., works on cable and drilling pipe aboard Texaco's semi-submersible drilling rig "Ocean Victory" on Thursday, 106 miles east of Atlantic City, N.J. The top of a blowout preventer, which will rest on the sea floor 432 feet below is attached to the end of the drill pipe. Thompson is a roughneck for Ocean Drilling & Exploration Co., which is leasing the rig to Texaco. (AP Laserphoto)

Cleveland Averts Strike By Teachers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Narrowly averting a strike, the city handed out paychecks for the first time in a month Thursday to its 11,000 full-time school employees — some of whom refused to enter classrooms until they got their money.

The checks, covering the past two bi-weekly pay periods, were distributed after the city's debt-ridden schools received an $18 million advance in state aid.

The employees, 5,400 of them teachers, are to be paid next on April 28. Since the state advance will only pay for school operations through the end of classes in June, employees have received no long-term assurances that summer payrolls would be met.

The Cleveland School Employees Unity Committee, a coalition of all school unions, had threatened to strike on Friday if the payments were not made.

Thousands of Cleveland's 113,000 public school students were without teachers part of the day Thursday as educators in several schools refused to work until they were paid. Report cards for many students were due last week, but have been withheld by teachers because of the pay dispute.

"We feel like the whole system is going down the drain," said Walker Whiting, an industrial arts teacher at Franklin D. Roosevelt Junior High School on the city's east side.

'Holocaust' Rating Up At Conclusion

NEW YORK (AP) — Based on ratings in three major cities, the concluding chapter of "Holocaust" attracted bigger audiences than any previous episode, NBC said Thursday.

NBC, quoting figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey, said the show got 59 percent of the Wednesday night audience in New York City, the same as Monday night, and 56 percent in Chicago and Los Angeles. The previous high for Chicago was 55 on Monday night, for Los Angeles 53 Tuesday night.

National ratings for the first three nights of "Holocaust," plus the overnight ratings for Wednesday, indicate the four-part dramatized documentary had a greater audience than any other program ever telecast by NBC, the network said.

NBC said its research department estimated 120 million people saw at least a portion of the series. ABC estimated 130 million watched all or part of its record-breaking "Roots," which was telecast in eight parts in January 1977.

Nielsen figures showed "Holocaust," which dramatized the plight of Jews in Europe during World War II, attracted a 43 share — 43 percent of the national TV audience — Sunday night, 51 percent Monday evening and 49 percent Tuesday night.

The share is Nielsen's measure of the proportion of a program's audience. It includes only those watching TV at the time.

In contrast to "Holocaust," "Roots" averaged a 66 share nationally for the eight-night run.

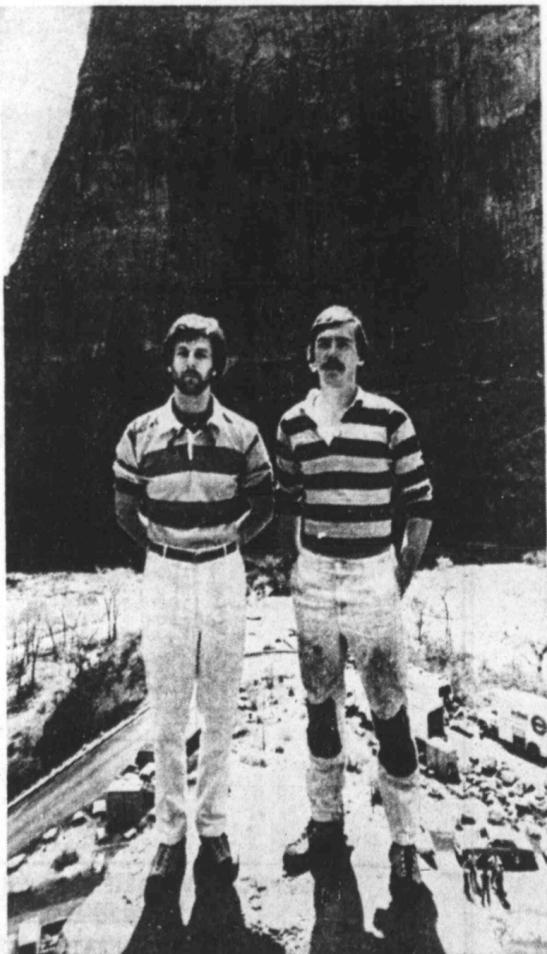

The Arbitron Co., which like Nielsen measures TV audiences, said its survey showed "Holocaust" with a 51 share in both New York and Los Angeles for the four-night period.

That school's 55 teachers spent the morning standing outside or sitting in their cars. When the checks arrived at midday the teachers went inside for a brief union meeting. Students had already been sent home for the day.

"As a teacher, you try to plan six weeks in advance," said Ann Breil, a social studies teacher at Roosevelt for the past 10 years. "How can you plan when you don't know if you will be in or out tomorrow? It bothers me because I like to teach."

"I don't feel that we're going to be teaching for the next three to four years because there will be one crisis after another," she added.

Cleveland's school system, Ohio's largest, has been on the brink of financial collapse for months, and had massive teacher walkouts in late November when it was unable to meet its payroll. Action by the Ohio Legislature in December to carry over school district debts ended that crisis.

Migrant Duties Change Urged

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sunset Advisory Commission staffers suggested Thursday that legislators give the Texas Good Neighbor Commission's migrant worker duties to the governor.

They told the commission the Legislature had effectively done this anyway with an appropriation bill rider prohibiting the Good Neighbor Commission from spending money on migrant programs.

Sunset commission staff members also said the Good Neighbor Commission's responsibilities for relations with Mexico could be given to the governor and its sponsorship of the Pan American Students to the Texas Education Agency.

The report was of special interest because of widespread criticism of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA) for allegedly mismanaging federal manpower funds intended for migrants.

A commission staffer said that while the Good Neighbor Commission's authority over migrant matters was given it by the Legislature, GOMA's "grew out of the governor's prerogatives."

Bill Wells, staff director, said the Good Neighbor Commission probably could perform GOMA's duties if given the same size staff — currently about 15 people — and $10 million annual budget.

"I don't know whether it could be handled better or worse than GOMA. There is no way to compare because the commission hasn't had the same authority as GOMA nor the funds," Wells said.

In its own report to the commission, the Good Neighbor Commission did not directly criticize GOMA but said somebody — preferably the Good Neighbor Commission — should monitor the numerous state, federal and local migrant programs.

"The appalling lack of coordination among migrant programs is a direct result of not providing adequate resources to effectively monitor monies designed to alleviate the plight of the migrant laborer. The number of migrant workers has not substantially decreased over the past decade, and this reflects negatively on the ability of programs designed to offer the farmworker alternative career opportunities," the Good Neighbor Commission's report said.

It said it could objectively evaluate migrant programs since it does not provide direct services.

In other reports, the sunset commission staff said: —Merger of the State Board of Barber Examiners and the Texas Cosmetology Commission would save $50,000 the first year and $200,000 per year thereafter.

Such a move, however, would be hotly fought since barbers and hairdressers for years have resisted any attempt to bring them under a single regulatory board.

—Enforcement duties of the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission could be transferred to the attorney general and its licensing function to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The staff report noted that the attorney general received 3,949 complaints about motor vehicles in 1977. The commission's authority extends only to handling complaints about warranty work on new cars. It also licenses auto dealers but has denied only three licenses since it was created seven years ago.

—Most duties of the Texas Structural Pest Control Board could be shifted to the Texas Department of Agriculture, leaving the board only with the job of hearing cases of alleged violations.

—Major administrative functions of the Board for Licensure of Nursing Home Administrators could be given the State Health Department.

"This arrangement could serve to enhance efforts to increase regulatory effectiveness of the nursing home industry. Moreover, cost benefits and economies of scale could be expected to result," the staff report said.

All-Volunteer Army Found To Be Failure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A report on the all-volunteer Army said Thursday recruiting shortages, increased pregnancies and poorly educated enlistees are eroding combat readiness and tending to make the system a failure.

Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., releasing the 377-page study, said the United States "will need to consider" restoring some form of draft or national service if there is no improvement.

"We need to acknowledge there is a serious problem," Beard said, "and I don't think the leadership of the Defense Department or the military has done this because of a can-do mentality."

The study was based on five months of interviews from private to general by Jerry L. Reed, a civilian long-range planner from the Naval Weapons Center in China Lake, Calif.

It noted the all-volunteer military, started in 1973, is based on a "total force" concept putting 54 percent of all Army manpower in reserve units. But, it said, "The U.S. Army total force is a failure due to major losses in reserve force strength."

The report said active-duty forces are 80,000 short of wartime strength and reserve units have fallen so far short of recruiting goals there would be a shortage of half a million soldiers in a wartime situation before the draft could take over.

Reed said mental test scores of volunteer recruits have dropped steadily in the last three years and the Army is "making comic books out of its training manuals" by rewriting them from an 11th to an eighth-grade reading level at a time when weapons systems are more complex than ever before.

Increased enlistments of women, who no longer are automatically discharged when pregnant, has created a "debate on female soldiers" and their children in operational readiness situations, he said.

Reed said in one unit in Germany with a large number of single women, up to a third were pregnant at any one time. "Many single women are having children while on active duty," he said.

The Army said 15.2 percent of all enlisted females, married or single, became pregnant last year.

Budget cutbacks also have resulted in

Fem Tennis, Track On Tap

It's a new pairing system in tennis, it's an enlarged field, but it's also a whole new ball game in both tennis and track today, when the Class AAAA and AA regional meets begin at Texas Tech.

At stake as girls from over West and Central Texas gather on the Tech campus will be tickets to the state meet, scheduled in Austin May 5-6.

Tennis will be the first of the two to begin, as Class AA girls take the courts at 8 this morning for first matches. The Class AAAA girls, with Coronado having two entries and Monterey one, will start at 9:30 a.m. The tennis will go through Saturday morning with finals and third-place matches.

For one thing, the Class AAAA field will be larger by one district. For the past decade, the region has had only five districts, the two from El Paso, plus the Panhandle, South and Abilene-to-Odessa districts. But, this year, the UIL has dispatched the Central Texas district of Temple-Killeen-Waco schools in this direction, making six districts to fight for championships.

And, it's a new seeding method for the tennis meet.

Region I has not seeded the better players, and in recent years, the other three regions have gone to such a plan. The local region is seeding its players this year, in an effort to strengthen its entries for the state meet, regional officials reported.

In AAAA girls singles, top-seeded is Midland High's Vicki Vasicek, with Susan Garner of El Paso Coronado getting the second spot.

In doubles, the Odessa Permian duo of Carmen Lewis and Leslie Miller is the favorite, with the Coronado duo of Lynda Lee Weaver and Dane Craig getting the second seeding position.

Miss Craig and Miss Weaver will take on the team of Brenda Bouche and Corinne Chacon of Ysleta in an opening match.

Monterey's Cheryl Rose, the 4-AAAA champion, will play Kathy Lawson of El Paso Eastwood in her opener, and Beth Nickels of Coronado, the 4-AAAA runner-up, will play Becky Gerken of Amarillo Caprock in a first match.

All tennis play will be on the two sets of courts south of Jones Stadium and on the recreational courts just east of the Tech swimming pool.

And while the tennis players are launching their services and volleys, the track meet will see girls running and jumping and throwing at the Fuller Track Stadium.

Most of today's action will be devoted to preliminaries, although five final events will be held. To be finished today will be the AAAA discus and long jump and Class AA triple jump, shot put and high jump.

AAAA SINGLES
First round—Beth Nickels, Coronado, vs. Becky Gerken, Caprock; Hella Barriga, EP Austin, vs. Denise Castillo, EP Eastwood; Karen Bros, Midland Lee, vs. Feral Hinkle, Temple; Kathy Lawson, Eastwood, vs. Cheryl Rosen, Monterey. Second round—Vicki Vasicek, Midland, vs. Clara Collazo, Killeen; Connie Beatty, Amarillo, vs. Susan Garner, EP Coronado.

AAAA DOUBLES
First round—Veronica Lopez-Yvonne Aguilar, EP Riverside, vs. Megan Neely-Cheryl Hall, Tasco; Kim Kincaid-Susie Maxwell, EP Andrews, vs. Theresa Landry-Sharon Landry, Plainview; Laura Scott-Frances Lovelady, EP High, vs. Lauran Marble-Julie Barnett, Temple; Debbie Cole-Melody Edwards, Caprock, vs. Cary Garlon-Dinah Boyd, Midland. Second round—Carmen Lewis-Leslie Miller, Permian, vs. Elizabeth Swift-Lisa Pence, Waco; Richfield; Brenda Bouche-Corinne Chacon, Ysleta, vs. Dana Craig-Lynda Lee Weaver, Coronado.

The field events will begin at 9:30, with running preliminaries to start this afternoon at 1:30.

All running finals will begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Palo Duro could be one of the top teams in Class AAAA.

Monterey, which ran away with the 4-AAAA track championship last Saturday, will vie for team honors with three relays and nine individual entries. Lubbock High will have three individuals competing and Coronado two.

The top two in each event—both in track and tennis—will advance to the state meet.

MONTEREY TRACK ENTRIES

LUBBOCK HIGH TRACK ENTRIES
Long jump—Leslie Stockton. 80 Hurdles—Rose Fields. Mile—Mary Lou Aquayo.

CORONADO TRACK ENTRIES
Discus—Pat Jefferson. 400—Loretta Lopez.

Tech Hauls In Little

ABILENE (Special)—A tug-of-war with participants on the ends of a rope extending all the way to Phoenix, Ariz., and San Antonio—ended here Thursday night as David Little, a 6-6 all-stater from Abilene High, signed a basketball letter-of-intent with Texas Tech.

"It was a battle," admitted Raider coach Gerald Myers afterwards. "It was touch and go."

Tech, in landing its third basketballer this spring, had to outlast Oklahoma for Little's signature. But the signing brought Tech its second Little this decade.

David is a younger brother of Richard Little, the 6-3 guard who made all-conference and quarterbacked the Raiders to the 1973 SWC championship.

The battle began in earnest Monday, when Myers and Oklahoma's Dave Bliss arrived on the scene after Little had visited OU. Neither left the city until Thursday afternoon, when Myers departed with the signed letter.

"It was worth the wait," Myers admitted, "well worth it. David is exceptionally quick for a player that tall. He can play outside, is an excellent ball-handler and outside shooter."

"He can play either guard or forward, so he gives us some versatility at different spots."

"This, I think, was the best year for high school talent in the history of Texas. There were a lot of good players, and I think David is one of them."

Myers said David, "is a lot like Richard, the same competitive, hard, exciting-type player. He reminds me a lot of Richard—except bigger."

"Yeah, it was a hard decision," said Little, "the toughest I've had to make. But, Lubbock is closer than Norman, and I wanted my folks to see me play."

David said that he had come to Lubbock frequently to see Richard play, "and I had thought about getting to play for Tech since that time."

As a senior at Abilene High, Little averaged 24.5 points and 10 rebounds. He had 36 points and 10 rebounds as the Eagles upset Fort Worth Dunbar for the regional championship. AHS finished 33-5 last season.

Little had narrowed his choice to Tech, OU, UTEP, Oregon State and Texas A&M before cutting the list to two teams.

In the final stages, the telephone played a role. Calling Little in behalf of OU were former player Alvan Adams, now center for the Phoenix Suns; Suns coach John McLeod, who formerly coached the Sooners, and former OU all-america footballer Jack Mildren, who went to high school in Abilene.

But, Tech countered with Bob Bass, now assistant coach with the San Antonio Spurs. Bass was coach at Tech when Richard Little was signed, and David remembered Bass visiting in his home.

Little now joins 6-3 1/2 Jeff Taylor and 6-1 1/2 Steve Smith of Hobbs as Tech basketball signees. And the signing season isn't over—at least Myers hopes it isn't.

"Of course, we're still recruiting Matt Clark (6-3 all-stater from Oklahoma City Southwest)," Myers said.

There have been some indications that Tech might sign a junior college player, but nothing has been announced.

WHEN TIME AND space run short... LSU's Charlie McClendon puts it down plainly, as to the freshman rule which will now permit red shirting: "If the kid is good enough to play (on the varsity), then he'll play. Otherwise, he'll be red-shirted. We'll have a JV program, but it'll be for those (upperclassmen) not quite good enough for our varsity. That's one place where the administrators outsmarted themselves. They didn't want tryouts, so they outlawed that part of offering scholarships. So, now, they've worked it around to where you have freshmen for a full year of tryouts. Since we really don't have to have any excuse now to cut a kid off scholarship, we can watch him for a year—if we want to—then cut him loose if we made a mistake on giving him a scholarship." However, McClendon, who is known to be one of the straightest men in the profession, said he would not cut an athlete for any reason. LSU signed only 25 gridders last year, to keep below the 95 total scholarships...

Don Grimes, the former Tech placekicker who still holds the record for most career field goals? He's opening a dental practice in Our Town... So its baseballers can get back to town in time to change and don their best blue jeans, Coronado asked to move starting time of its season-ending doubleheader at Plainview from 1 p.m. until 11 a.m. That night, May 6, CHS holds its all-sports banquet...

GERALD MYERS THINKS it's downright disappointing. Here, as big as Lubbock is, he hasn't been able to see any 7-footers sprout up at any of the five high schools. "But, look what happens to Shelby (McClair, at A&M): Rudy Woods grows up right under foot (at Bryan)." And Rudy grew up to 6-11 and was named MVP in a recent all-star game back East... If Notre Dame wasn't happy enough with winning the national football championship by whipping Texas in the Cotton Bowl, the CB had a little consolation prize. ND recently received a check for $1,008,371.92 for performing in the Jan. 2 classic...

Jimmy Ray Sulaica of Our City is being honored as a "Faces in the Crowd" by Sports Illustrated in the near future. Sulaica was the youngest American to get a first-degree black belt... Amistad Lake may be a fishing haven, but it has its somber side, too. Last year and the first three months of this year, five men have lost their lives in fishing and boating mishaps. It's become a matter of considerable concern for federal authorities, too...

FOR A CHANGE of pace, UT officials moved dates of this year's Texas Relays to Saturday and Sunday. It was a one-shot deal. "I didn't talk to a single coach who liked it that way," said Raider track coach Corky Oglesby. Evidently it was that way for UT coach Cleburne Price; plans are already made for a return to the usual Friday-Saturday format. One of the first to scream about the change was Baylor coach Clyde Hart, for religious reasons... Who said you don't rain out football games? Baylor had its 1977 game washed out—they're watching the weather reports for Saturday night now...

Maybe it's not a first, but sometime one wonders to what lengths a school will do to grab a recruit. There's this School A, in the running for a big basketball center, that signed the young man even though he didn't have the grades to get in, and thinking was it was strictly to keep him from competing School B. It occurred in a coastal state, and the only way the kid can get into the university where he signed is by going to night school—if that is even possible...

Hooks Enters Regionals

ODESSA (Special)—Estacado's Carol Hooks will be bidding for a spot in the state tennis tournament when play begins this morning in the Class AAA girls regional meet.

Also scheduled here today and Saturday are the regional track meets in the same two classes. However, there will be no Class AAA action today, since only six placers are qualified in each event.

Play begins this morning in the AAA and A tennis meet, with Estacado's Miss Hooks bidding for one of the top two spots in the state tournament.

FROM LOU HOLTZ (Arkansas) about his running quartet of Roland Sales, Michael Forrest, Ben Cowins and Jerry Eckwood: "Our fans are going to see some of the greatest runs in history. Unfortunately, with our rebuilt offensive line, those runs will be trying to get back to the line of scrimmage..." Feeling around Dallas is that Sonny Allen's son, Billy, will start four years for his dad at point guard. That's been the problem spot for the Mustangs for the past two seasons...

The SWC will be releasing next week its '78 Basketball Highlights film. The 24-minute show features the final games of last month's tournament at Houston...

4-AAAA Track Squads Vie For Loop Honors

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

HEREFORD—One says, "no way," another says, "possibly," and a third just says, "maybe." The funny thing is, all three are talking on the same subject—the District 4-AAAA track meet.

"We're just going out there and having a good time," said Lubbock High coach Tom Phelps. "I told them to go out there and do their best and have a ball doing it."

Meaning, of course, Phelps feels the Westerners have little chance of winning the meet which gets under way here today at 10 a.m. The finals start at 3 p.m.

"We are going to try and perform the best we can," explained Coronado coach James Gandy. "We aren't worrying about winning the meet. Monterey has so much depth it's hard to compete with them. We would like to see our kids qualify for the regionals."

So mark the Mustangs the possibles to overthrow defending champion Monterey. Like Gandy explained, "You never know what will happen there (the district meet). We may get some performances out of some people we didn't expect it from. Then again, so can anybody else."

To Gandy's best calculation, the Plainsmen should pull away from the Mustangs to the tune of 180-150.

"Of course there's no way either one of us will score that many points," he said. "The others (Lubbock High, Plainview and Hereford) will break in their and score some points. All three have some good athletes."

Speaking of good athletes, that brings up the Plainsmen.

"We're the defending district champs and that puts a little added pressure on us," said Monterey boss Bob Gay. "I like to think we have a good chance of winning, but we haven't been competing well lately."

"We're healthy now, and we're looking for some good performances out of some people that we haven't been getting in recent weeks."

One of the most consistent performers for Monterey all season has been high jumper Chuck Perry. However, he may get a strong challenge from Plainview's Kenneth Storey, a 6-6 leaper. Perry's top jump this year has been a 6-9.

Also in the field events, Monterey's David Campsey, the loop's top pole vaulter, is expected to have Bulldog Jerry Jackson, with a 13-6 effort, breathing down his neck.

"All the teams in the district have some good athletes," Gay said. "That means we'll have to stay on our toes, all right."

One of the top races of the day may develop in the 100-yard dash where no less than four sprinters are in the 9.8 range. Plainview's Louis Davis, and Hereford's Paul Bell have both clocked off 9.8 this year. A step back is Lubbock High's Darrell Hicks at 9.9.

Gandy predicted at time in the long 43s would be necessary to win the sprint relay.

Coronado's best time has been a 43.5,

Monterey and Lubbock High trail with 44.2 and 44.5, respectively.

Top performers for Coronado this season have been pole vaulter Scott Meador (12-6), long jumper Brent Royce (22-7/4), hurdler Darrell Mann (14.7), halfmilers John Biddle (2:06.6) and Steve Ufford (2:01.8), 220 man Archie Moore (21.7) and 330-intermediate hurdler Johnny Pisenso (39.8).

Carmichael Quits LHS

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

In a stride, C.E. Carmichael merely stayed in with his old neighbor when he resigned from the Lubbock High basketball coaching post Thursday.

Carmichael lived down the street from Jimmy Fullerton until recently. And it was two weeks ago that Fullerton resigned from the Coronado cage spot. Carmichael echoed many of the same sentiments which Fullerton stated, too.

"It was just the time for me to do something else. It's similar in many ways to what I read when Jimmy said he was resigning. There's nothing complicated about it. No bitterness. No pressure. It was a long, thought-out thing which I looked at from every possible angle. It wasn't an easy decision but I felt it was a good time to do it," the LHS coach said.

The 30-year-old Brownwood native coached the Westerners for four seasons. His 1976-77 team went 15-14 for Lubbock's first winning season in six years but the four-year overall record (36-60) reflected the difficulty in introducing a winning basketball program at LHS.

"When you work that hard at something as all coaches do, there has to be a certain amount of reward to keep the level of enthusiasm and intensity up. When I got the job, I had big ideas here. Everything was aimed toward having a successful program and I worked at it hard. Maybe the goals were too big," he said.

C.E. CARMICHAEL

Carmichael's future plans remain uncertain though he hopes to continue teaching social studies in the local system during the next school year. However, thoughts of returning to Brownwood for a private business venture have lingered in Carmichael's mind since he began considering his resignation in January.

"It's no secret I would like to relocate there (Brownwood) but I don't know yet when it would be. I am going to consider teaching for awhile here now. Lubbock High is unique in many ways. I work with some good people there and I really enjoy being at the school," he said.

The resignation creates two head basketball coaching vacancies for athletic director Pete Ragus to fill. Ragus indicated Wednesday that the selection committee was still reviewing applications for the CHS job.

"We don't expect any announcement on the Coronado job immediately. I'm sure the applicants for the Coronado job would want to wait until someone is chosen before they pursue the Lubbock High job any. If there's anyone interested in the Lubbock High job, we hope they will give us a call and we will be glad to consider them," Ragus said.

Tom Halliburton Cats And Dogs

THOUGH A FEW exceptions crawl around the earth at a snail's pace, our late, great planet is basically a cat-and-dog existence. To put it in more educated terms, the proper idiom is self-preservation.

Anytime our little black poodle at home steps near the curb, she weighs her chances and quickly calculates the percentages of surviving the fangs and claws of the mean Tom Cat across the street. But you didn't know your average animal was blessed with such smarts, did ya?

Now our dog (Camey) delights in prancing around the nearby lawns and making sure that judgment is passed in an honorable way when she involves any of the neighborhood cats. But when it comes to her welfare, our 11-year-old tail-wagging puppy affords herself the best of the percentages to stay alive.

So be it in the District 4-AAAA baseball race where the second half begins Saturday much to Monterey coach Bobby Moegle's chagrin. It's the dogs vs. the cats. Or for specifics, it's Monterey against everybody else.

have encountered health problems this week.

Reeves, 9-0 with a 1.25 earned run average, pulled a muscle in his pitching arm during Saturday's first game at Plainview. The senior hurler visited the doctor Monday and tried to pitch for the first time Thursday.

"There's some kind of a separation up high near his shoulder. He couldn't raise his arm to shoulder level on Monday. If he doesn't feel like he's 100 percent, he will not throw Saturday," Moegle said.

Hatfield, 7-3 with a 1.88 ERA, has been bothered by a sinus infection through much of the week. According to the MHS coach, "that's just about as bad as a sore arm."

Of course, Moegle could always play ball with sophomore Kent Potts and Ricky Pinkerton on the mound. MHS hitters carry a .312 batting average through 22 games and might be able to outscore the district opposition anyway. But Moegle's cup of tea is pitching and it always has been.

THERE'S ANOTHER REASON why the district race doesn't sit well with Moegle either. The 19-year veteran boss prefers a different format—play a 16-game race without halves and determine a true league winner over the long haul. That's Moegle's preference regardless of the quality of his own team.

"Our team may be better off playing in halves next year, but I sure won't vote for it. I think the fair thing is to determine a true champion over a 16-game schedule," he said.

Moegle's logic may be flawless in this instance, the cats are looking out for their lives and ignoring any fairness doctrines. The cats are smart enough to realize that Monterey has the big dog in baseball, winning 16 of 18 district titles under Moegle. Therefore, the cats know how hard it is to beat the big dog. Naturally, they'd rather have two chances than one.

Every year the dogs and cats get together and vote on the matter at a district meeting. Last year the baseball race was played as Moegle prefers. This year it's not because the voters changed their minds.

"It's out of my hands. All I can do is the principals or the top school officials vote. I told our principal that we favored one race and I was outvoted 4-1. I think we voted 5-0 for one race in the previous year. Maybe the rest of them got together and acted in their best interests. I don't know. Anyway, I ought to have a four-game lead and not be worrying about my pitchers so much. Hereford was 1-7 and yet there as good as we are at the start of the second half," Moegle said.

MEANWHILE, A SPOKESMAN for the cats, Vince Buffamonte of Lubbock High, looks at it from the other side of the fence.

"If I were over there at Monterey, I would favor one race, too. I might even if I were at Coronado. But Monterey's too strong this year to play with a 16-game race with them. This way you have two chances at playing for the district and your kids don't lay down and get discouraged if they fall behind in the first half," the LHS coach said.

Even animals are smart enough to look out for their own necks. Last time they voted, the cats won 4-1, though.

'Loners' Lead Individual Action

Apparently, Jackie Dais doesn't mind playing alone.

Miss Dais, Odessa Permian's lone entry in the Class AAAA girls regional golf tournament, posted a 6-over-par 79 in taking medalist honors in the tournament's first round. And, her closest competitor for a trip to Austin and the state meet is another girl playing without a team at her side.

Jackie Harlan of Temple posted an 81 for second in the race for individual honors.

But, in the battle for the team championship, however, Amarillo High's girls grabbed a 19-stroke lead over Midland Lee in that quest for tickets to the state meet. AHS posted a 363 total, with Midland Lee second at 382.

But, as with the individuals, the top two teams will qualify for the trip to Austin and the state meet, scheduled the first week in May.

Just as Amarillo holds a comfortable lead in its drive for the regional trophy, Midland Lee has 15 strokes over third-place El Paso Coronado.

Individually, behind Miss Dais and Miss Harlan, Midland Lee's Sheryl Guthrie is third with an 88.

In the Class AA portion of the meet being held at Meadowbrook Golf Course, Kermit's top unit grabbed a 6-stroke lead over Canadian. Kermit girls show a team 412, with Canadian second at 418, followed by Dalhart at 420.

Floydada's Mitzi Hale turned in a 93 to lead the individual golfers, and Canadian's Julie Hill is tied with Kristi Keith of Seymour for second at 99.

The second round of the tournament will be played on the first two nines at Meadowbrook, beginning this morning at 9:30.

Denver City—Jaymie Qualls 101, Lisa Kay 116, Sylvia Villa 125, Gloria Nevarez 125, Konni Gibson 142.

Tulia—Carole Clectker 112, Michelle George 112, Kim Minchew 134, Leslie McClendon 134, Suzanne Painter 135.

Kermit JV—Traci Smith 122, Kara Tucker 122, Angie Diller 131, Debbie Holmans 134, Kay Crawford 122.

Dimmitt—Jo Beth Bates 122, Mary Jones 130, Jean Bradford 131, Arian Truetock 121, Diane Love 152.

Ottawa—Kelli Smith 131, Lori Barnett 125, Judy Quigley 146, Marilyn Durham 131, Sharissa Hamby 133.

Merkel—Lisa Hart 126, Cindy Smith 144, Becky Watts 154, Patty McLeod 121.

Borger, Rankin Pull Out Regional Golf Crowns

ODESSA (Special)—Borger made it look easy in winning the Class AAA regional girls golf championship here Thursday, and Rankin escaped all competitors in the battle for the Class A championship.

But, Memphis' Tina Foxhall stepped in and outscored all players from both classifications in taking Class A medalist honors.

Borger turned in a team score of 719 in claiming the AAA regional trophy. Fort Stockton bounced in second at 777.

Rankin posted a team total of 782 in winning the Class A championship, and Memphis came from fourth place on the second and final day to claim second and earn a trip to the state meet, to be held in Austin next month.

Paced by Miss Foxhall's final-day 81, Memphis vaulted past Stratford and Farwell to come in at 797 for second as a team.

Miss Foxhall had it easy, as she had a two-day sum of 163 in winning medalist honors. Her score was better by 21 strokes than the score posted by AAA medalist Kathy Kaplan of Borger.

LHS JV WINS

LEVELLAND (Special)—Raymond Britto and Jamie Green each doubled for the only extra-base hits of the game Thursday, and the Lubbock High junior varsity took a 6-5 victory over Levelland's JV. Lubbock is 6-5. Sammy Chavez was the winning pitcher.

Gossett of Rankin had a 171 total. Farwell's Penny Hughes was third individually with a 177 total.

Teams played over the Golden Acres Country Club layout.

Class AAA team totals—Borger 719, Fort Stockton 777, Brownfield 810, Canyon 881, Lamesa 986.

Top individuals—Kathy Kaplan, Borger, 168—Romina Whitson, Borger, 184—Lynn McBride, Brownfield, 188—Debbie Balch, F.S., 192—Lori Cooper, Borger, and Leticia Granada, F.S., 193—Laura Jenkins, Monahans, 194—Cathy Townsend, Borger, 195.

Booker Grabs Top Honors

LEVELLAND (Special)—It was the Booker Show again Thursday in the Region I Class B girls golf tournament.

Booker's top two teams finished 1-2 in the team race and both qualified for the state girls meet to be held in Austin in two weeks. Booker is defending Class B state champion, also.

Team totals—Booker 840, Booker JV 942, Forsan 973, Wilson 975, Whiteaker 1123, Hermeigh 1154.

Booker—Penny Walker 205, Angie Purter 208, Lori Dickerson 208, Melinda Harrington 218, Pam Vaughn 230.

Wilson—Tammy Kahlich 215, Stephanie Cook 240, Kim Rice 241, Cindy Frestle 263.

Whiteaker—Tracy Taylor 262, Dianne Smith 278, Irene Guajardo 292, Betsy Toney 301.

Individual leaders—Sabra Sraeder, Sundown, 186, Cindy Craig, Happy, 196.

MOEGLE AND MONTEREY wrapped up the first half title with an 8-0 record last Saturday. The nearest animals in the chase were the Bulldogs (Plainview) and the Mustangs (Coronado) each at 4-4. This accomplishment achieved little more than a headline on the front page of Sunday's sports section and a guarantee that MHS would continue playing after its May 2 regular-season finale.

As for the race, Monterey returns to the starting line at 0-0 along with everybody else. That doesn't sit well with Moegle for a number of reasons—his two pitchers Ron Reeves and Derek Hatfield

Tech Golf Team Faces SWC Field

TYLER (Special)—Texas Tech will be reaching for the Southwest Conference golf championship here this weekend, as the teams collide over the Briarwood Country Club course.

Competition begins this morning, with the University of Houston the favorite to run away with the championship.

Tech will be playing with a unit of Mel Callender, Dennis Northington, Greg Jones, Kent Wood, Jean St. Germain, and Scooter Parks.

Lee's Back As Bosox Rip Past Brewers 10-4

By The Associated Press
Southpaw Bill Lee, a 17-game winner for three consecutive seasons before suffering a shoulder injury in 1976, is back in the groove, and the Boston Red Sox are rolling.

Lee, Boston's only left-handed starter, fashioned his second complete game in three appearances this season as the charging Red Sox breezed to their seventh consecutive victory, a 10-4 romp over the Milwaukee Brewers Thursday.

"I kept the ball down — I was too tired to get it up," Lee said in his usual manner, skipping from serious to joking. "I threw a lot of garbage."

"I threw too many pitches (125), and I walked too many (three), but I got some ground balls and the guys made good plays behind me."

With relievers warmed up in the bullpen, Lee went out for the ninth with a 10-3 lead. He retired Larry Hise and Gorman Thomas on two pitches. Cecil Cooper lined the first pitch into the right field stands for his fifth homer. Lee shook off that blast and got Dick Davis on an infield pop on his next pitch.

games, picked up his first victory of the season, with relief help from Fingers after the Braves had two runners on — via a walk and error — with one out in the ninth inning.

Veteran Atlanta right-hander Phil Niekro absorbed the loss and fell to 0-4.

Niekro retired the first 12 Padres batters, but got into trouble in the fifth when he walked leadoff batter Dave Winfield and Oscar Gamble beat out an infield single.

An infield out by Ozzie Smith moved both runners into scoring position and brought up Davis, who broke up the scoreless duel with his single to center.

Helped by two double plays, Jones faced only one batter over the minimum through the first seven innings and retired 12 Braves on infield grounders during that span.

DODGERS 5, ASTROS 1

Steve Yeager's three-run double broke a tie as Los Angeles scored four times in the sixth inning and defeated Houston to snap the Astros' four-game winning streak.

Trailing 1-0 against Mark Lemongello, 1-2, the Dodgers tied the game when Reggie Smith singled. Ron Cey walked and Steve Garvey doubled to open the sixth. Dusty Baker struck out and Rick Monday was walked intentionally to load the bases, but Yeager doubled off the left field wall, scoring all three runners.

The Dodgers added a run against Ken Forsch in the eighth on a double by Baker and a single by Monday, his 15th RBI of the season, tops in the majors.

Winning pitcher Doug Rau, 2-0, scattered eight hits, struck out three and walked one. Lemongello worked six innings for the Astros.

The Astros scored first when Bob Watson doubled to lead off the fourth and Jose Cruz singled him home.

PADRES 2, BRAVES 0

Randy Jones and Rollie Fingers combined for a three-hitter and Bob Davis delivered a two-run single, helping San Diego snap a four-game losing streak with a victory over Atlanta.

UIL Clears Wheatley

AUSTIN (AP) — A committee of the University Interscholastic League cleared Houston Wheatley on Thursday of a rule violation that could have cost Wheatley its Class AAAA schoolboy basketball title.

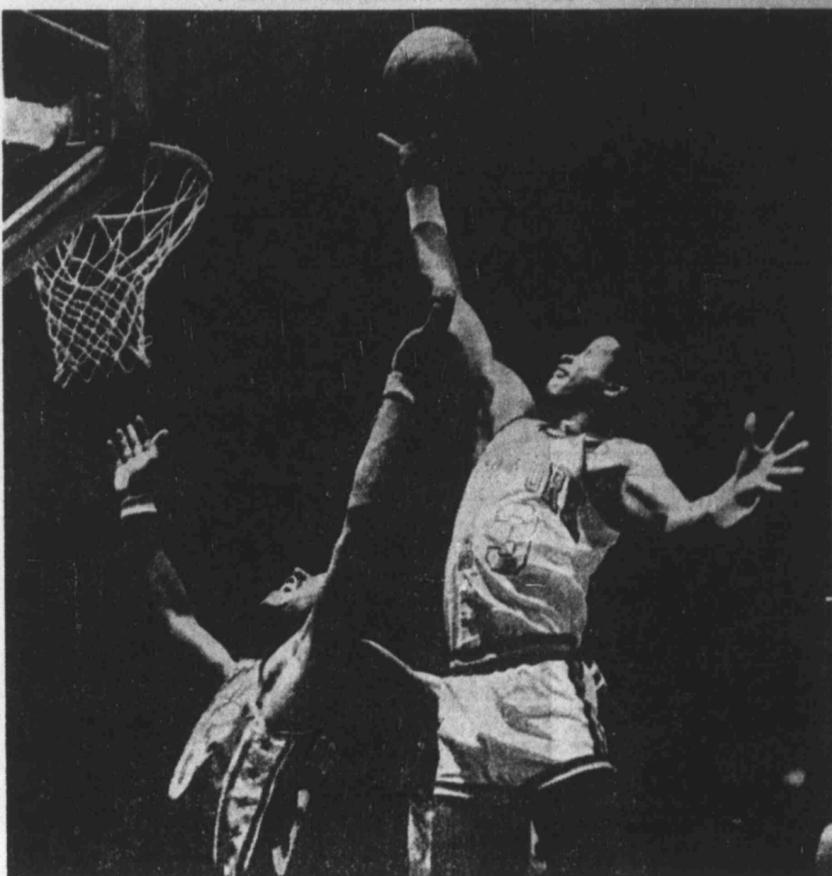

Another possible violation arose, however, and the UIL staff was ordered to investigate.

Asked if he envisioned returning here for another session before the state executive committee, Coach Jackie Carr of Wheatley said:

"All my records are clean. They can check anything they want to check and they ain't going to find nothing."

The nine-member committee decided Wheatley had not violated a UIL rule that prohibits a team or player from taking part in more than two games a week, excluding tournaments.

League director Bailey Marshall said the staff investigated Wheatley after receiving an unsigned letter and two anonymous telephone calls.

Sixers Grab 3-0 Edge

NEW YORK (AP) — Reserve guard Lloyd Free scored 18 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter to lead the Philadelphia 76ers to a 137-126 victory over the New York Knicks Thursday night and a 3-0 lead in their National Basketball Association quarter-final playoffs.

The Sixers can wrap up the best-of-seven series with a victory here Sunday. If the Knicks win that one, the series would return to Philadelphia for a fifth game on Wednesday.

Julius Erving and George McGinnis also scored 29 points each for the Sixers, who never trailed in the contest, and Doug Collins added 21.

Although New York was able to contain Philadelphia's running game for the most part, it could not stop the Sixers' hot outside shooting. Philadelphia hit 15 of 24 in the first quarter to a 37-30 lead, McGinnis scoring 12 points and Erving 8.

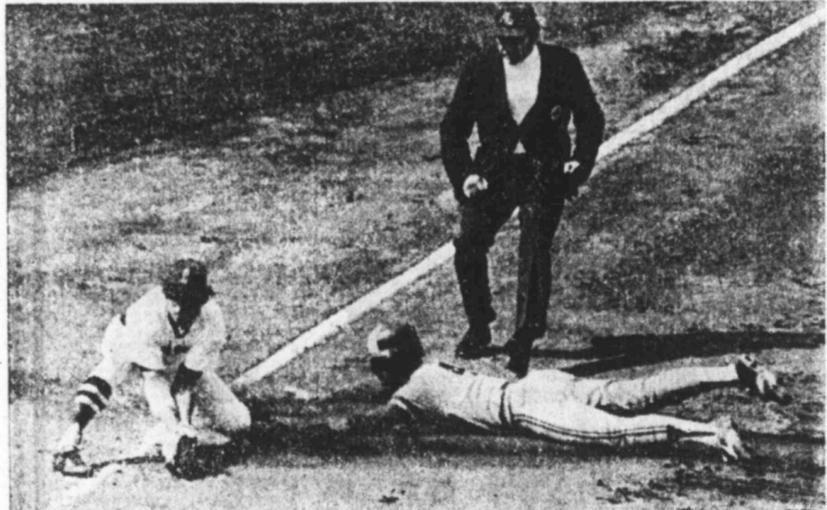

New York, outmuscled badly in the first two games of this series, fought back with some very physical play in the second period, including a vicious slam-dunk by Lonnie Shelton over the head of Philadelphia's Darryl Dawkins that brought the Madison Square Garden crowd to its feet.

Spencer Haywood scored 12 points in the second quarter as the Knicks drew even at 56, but Philadelphia scored the next 6 points and led 72-65 at halftime. The Sixers shot 61 percent from the field in the first half, Erving leading the way with 18 points.

Philadelphia kept up the pressure in the third quarter, hitting 15 of 26 shots to lead 103-93 going into the final period.

Raider Netters Vie In Corpus

CORPUS CHRISTI (Special)—With team squabbles settled, the Southwest Conference singles and doubles war begins.

The individual titles, for Nos. 1 through 6 in singles and 1 through 3 in doubles, will be at stake this weekend.

"This is an excellent opportunity for us," said Tech tennis coach George Philbrick of his young team that finished in the cellar in the team race.

Tech will have Harrison Bowes, David Crissey, Felix Amaya, Greg Davis, Rocky Berg, and Kevin Hopson playing the spots one through six, and the doubles teams of Bowes-Amaya, Crissey-Davis, and Berg-Hopson.

LCC Opens Another 'Must' Series Against DBC

DALLAS (Special)—The task facing Lubbock Christian College is not an easy one despite the Chaparrals' lofty national ratings.

However, LCC hopes to retain a share of the Texas Conference lead, the task is a must: sweep Dallas Baptist.

The teams open a four-game, two-day series here today with a 1 p.m. double-header. However, neither team's ace will be on the mound. But Indian Moose Cook (7-3) and Chaparral Oscar Acosta (10-1) will likely collide head on in Saturday's opener.

DBC has dipped to an 18-24 mark and presently stands last in the league with a 4-12 mark. The Indians face a must situation of needing to at least split their last eight loop tilts to guarantee themselves a spot in the six-team District VIII (NAIA) Tournament at Arlington May 7-10.

LCC, on the other hand, shares the top league spot with Texas Wesleyan with 11-5 records and those two teams collide in the season finales next weekend in Lubbock.

TWC (36-19-2) entertains Midwestern (15-20, 6-10) today and Saturday. The Indians have split four games this week, losing 7-3 and 9-2 to SMU Tuesday and beating UT-Dallas 9-0 and 8-0 Wednesday.

Cook absorbed the first-game loss Tuesday despite allowing only five hits. In his two outings prior to that he hurled a no-hitter at Midwestern and took a no hit in the seventh inning against TWC, before settling for a two-hitter.

DBC has never beaten LCC on its home field and LCC departed via bus at 1:30 p.m. Thursday. "I just feel more comfortable this way," Hays explained. "It's not a rush job and we can sleep later on field and trails the five-year-old series 16-

2. In fact, the Indians are 3-5 in Texoma Conference games played here this year.

LCC coach Larry Hays altered his travel plans for this series. The Chaps were originally slated to fly into Love Field this morning, leaving Lubbock on a 6:15 flight like they did two weeks ago when they split four games with TWC.

But earlier this week Hays changed game day. I just think it will help, especially since this is a key series and the kids are used to the bus and long trips."

Hays also admitted some concern about the number of strike outs his hitters have had the last two weeks. "We've struck out 55 times in the last 8 games. Before that we seemed to at least be moving the ball."

Over the last three weeks, during which LCC has played 12 games on the road and won 7 of those Hays had inserted Tim Leslie into the No. 3 spot in the lineup instead of the usual cleanup spot against righthanders. But against lefthanders, he's back in the No. 4 spot.

"That's seemed to work out real well, because we can lead Ricard Bowles off against lefthanders, put Steve Brigante third and Brady Brashear seventh or eighth. That way we break up our lefthanded hitters and it causes a problem for the other team because we've competed better at the plate and moved the ball more."

LCC will conclude its 16-game road trip here Saturday and return home to host Hardin-Simmons next Tuesday in a tune-up for the TWC series. H-SU beat Midwestern on the road Tuesday 4-3, 9-5.

Chaparrals Plunge In Rankings

KANSAS CITY (Special)—Lubbock Christian College slipped two more notches in the NAIA baseball rankings this week as the Chaparrals now stand seventh.

LCC, which previously had been rated no lower than fifth in five polls, drew 132 points, 33 fewer than the Chaps managed last week before going 3-3 to dip to a 35-13 mark.

Southeastern Oklahoma (30-6) managed nine first-place votes and 226 points to retain the No. 1 ranking the Savages have held all year.

William Carey (42-5) of Mississippi moved up a notch to second with two firsts and 206 points, replacing Birmingham Southern (24-7), which had one first and 201 points.

Defending national champion David Lipscomb (29-5) of Tennessee had one first and 179 points and moved up a notch to fourth.

Jackson State (45-5) continued its rise as the Mississippians drew three firsts and 168 points and for the second straight week advanced four berths and now stand fifth.

LaVerne, California slipped two spots to sixth with a 22-5 mark and 151 points.

Following LCC came Lewis-Clark State of Idaho, which retained eighth with a 31-7 mark and 125 points. Phillips (32-9) slipped two spots to ninth with 119 points and Grand Canyon (27-14) retained 10th with 89 points.

Texas Wesleyan (35-19) remained 11th with 73 points, Azusa-Pacific (Calif.), 28-5, 49 points) inched up one spot to 12th, Southwestern (36-14, 46 points) slipped a notch to 13th, Coastal Carolina (S.C., 21-9, 35 points) made its first appearance among the elite, holding down 14th with 35 points and St. Mary's (Texas, 24-8) remained 15th with 32 points.

Francis-Marion (S.C., 23-7, 26 points) moved from an 18th-place tie to 16th, Sam Houston State (23-16, 14 points) moved to 17th from that deadlock for 18th, Wisconsin-Oshkosh (11-4, 10 points) remained 18th and High Point (N.C., 19-6) and Milligan (Tenn., 22-7) joined the elite with eight points each.

Falling from the list this week were Oklahoma Christian, Newberry (S.C.) and Lewis (Ill.).

The Area II Tournament, which Lubbock will host May 17-19, promises to be the toughest in the nation, with either William Carey of Jackson State representing District 30, Grand Canyon a possible District 7 entry, LCC and Texas Wesleyan battling for District 8 honors and Sam Houston, St. Mary's and Southwestern possibilities for the District 4 title.

The Area II winner will launch the national meet on Friday, May 26, facing the Area I (California-Oregon-Idaho-Washington) winner at 5 p.m. The top contenders there are presently LaVerne, the No. 3 team in the national tournament last year, and Lewis-Clark of Idaho.

Tech Netters Gain Quarters

DENTON (Special)—Texas Tech's Karen Schuchard barged into the quarter-finals of the state AIWA tennis tournament Thursday and also joined Mame Bevers in winning a third-round doubles match.

And following Miss Schuchard's leadership, Tech grabbed second spot in the team standings. Trinity is the team leader with 22 points, and Tech trails with 17. TCU is in third with 15 points.

The tournament will continue through Saturday.

Miss Schuchard won a pair of matches in singles, clipping Trinity's Ann Schroeder 6-4, 6-2, in the fourth round.

And in doubles, Miss Schuchard and Miss Bevers won from Gina Alvarado and Lisa Wheeler of St. Mary's, 6-4, 6-0, in the third round of doubles.

Tech's Kathy Kuhne upset seeded Sophie Proubost of Lamar, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, in the third round of singles before bowing out to Trinity's Lori Oberheide in the fourth round.

Miss Bevers and Kim Hood of Tech remain in the singles competition but did not have any matches Thursday.

Third round—Kathy Kuhne, TT, def. Sophie Proubost, Lamar, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4; Kerry Sterling, Trinity, def. Mame Bevers, TT, 6-0, 6-0; Karen Schuchard, TT, def. Vickie Robinson, Texas, 6-1, 6-4.

Fourth round—Lori Oberheide, Trinity, def. Kuhne, 6-1, 6-3; Schuchard def. Ann Schroeder, Trinity, 6-4, 6-2.

DOUBLES

First round—Linda Rice-Karen Logan, SFA, def. Debbie Donley-Ann McNabb, TT, 6-1, 6-3.

Second round—Cathleen Sisson-Suzie Schilling, TCU, def. Kim Hood-Kim, TT, 7-6, 6-3.

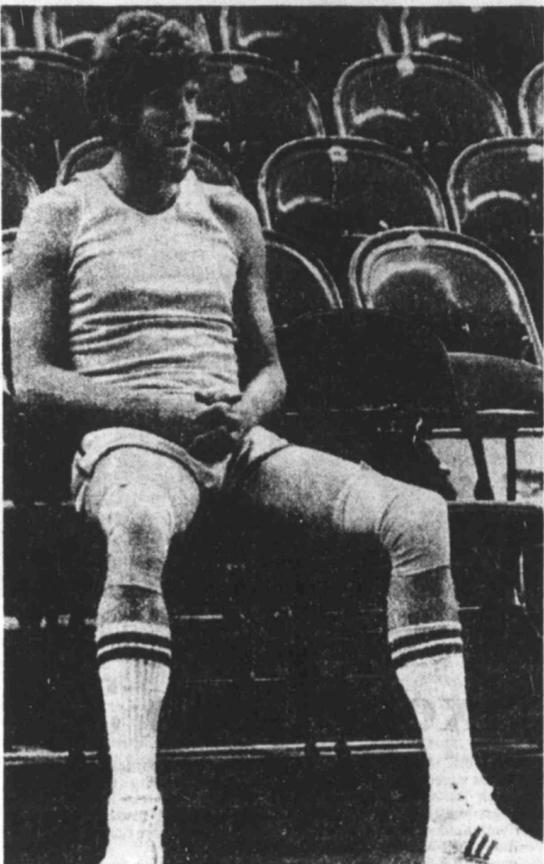

Third round—Mame Bevers-Karen Schuchard, TT, def. Gina Alvarado-Lisa Wheeler, St. Mary's, 6-4, 6-0.

FLOYDADA (Special) — Floydada's tennis team grabbed the District 4-AA title while Lockney's Howard Moore garnered the top individual honor Thursday.

Team Totals—Floydada 56, Abernathy 40, Lockney 20, Tulia 12.

Boys singles finals—Howard Moore, Lockney, def. Juan Dominguez, Abernathy, 6-0, 6-1.

Boys doubles finals—Bobby Whitaker-Zane Jantz, Floydada, def. Gilbert Cuevas-Sam Dominguez, Abernathy, 6-4, 2-6, 7-5.

WATCHING HIS MATES—Portland's Bill Walton, who until Tuesday's playoff game against Seattle had been out of action since February 23, watches as his teammates work out Thursday in Portland. Sonics Face Tough Chore Against Stung Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Lenny Wilkens knows how hard it will be for his upstart Seattle SuperSonics to make it two in a row over the Portland Trail Blazers here tonight.

"There's no doubt about it," Wilkens said as he prepared to put his team through a workout at Memorial Coliseum Thursday. "They feel they have to win. I'd expect them to be a little more patient and play a little better defense than they did the other night."

"But we're going to play hard, too, because we think we can win."

Wilkins isn't alone in his thinking. Most of the 12,666 highly partisan fans who watched the Sonics soundly whip the Blazers 104-95 Tuesday night are probably still wondering what happened and what can be done to alter the outcome next time.

With the victory in the opener of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association quarterfinal series, the Sonics took away Portland's home-court advantage.

"We don't even want to think about the desperate situation we'll be in if we lose Friday night," said Blazer forward Larry Steele, who scored 17 points in the first half Tuesday night, but was shut out the rest of the way.

The defending NBA champions were beaten in places they weren't supposed to be vulnerable.

They were impatient, reluctant to go through the various options of the intricate offense Coach Jack Ramsay has designed. Instead, they shot quick, errant 20-footers, which Sonics Marvin Webster and Jack Sikma promptly swallowed off the defensive boards.

Ramsay took the Blazers through a low-key workout Thursday, with Walton and Lloyd Neal not participating in the more strenuous parts of the practice session.

"I would hope Bill will run better tomorrow," Ramsay said.

As usual, Walton wasn't volunteering any information about his condition. So trainer Ron Culp acted as spokesman for the sore feet that kept Walton out of the final 22 games of the regular season.

"He was pretty sore yesterday," Culp said, "but he's moving pretty well today."

Walton's performance Tuesday — 17 points, 16 rebounds, two blocked shots — had nothing to do with Portland's loss. But the play of Maurice Lucas — 3 for 15 from the field — and backup center Tom Owens — 1 for 6 shooting, three rebounds and five fouls in 13 minutes — had a lot to do with it.

COLLEGE STATION (Special)—With just a slim hope remaining of gaining a spot in the Southwest Conference Post-Season Tournament, Texas Tech will battle second-place Texas A&M in a three-game series this weekend.

The teams will play a single game today, beginning at 3 p.m. and then play a doubleheader Saturday, starting at 1 p.m.

Both teams have six games left in the season. A&M is 14-4 in league play, just one game behind league-leader Arkansas. Tech is 7-11 and in sixth place. Realistically, the Raiders must win these three games and their last three against Texas next weekend to have any hope of finishing in fourth place and thereby getting a berth in the tournament.

Houston is currently third in the con-

Tech's Tisdale Loses Weight, Gains Quickness

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

One generally runs across football players that are trying everything possible to gain weight. Olan Tisdale, however, is trying to lose poundage. And doing rather well at it.

The Texas Tech defensive end carried about 230 pounds on his 6-5 frame last season as a sophomore, but he's whittled that down to about 215 this spring, and he figures that that's about what it should be.

"I want to stay at about 215," he said. "I've got to get down where I can run a little better. I've not been blessed with great quickness."

Tisdale said he was originally recruited with the idea that he might grow to about 250 pounds and play defensive tackle, but he never came close to that level and has remained at defensive end. Right now, as one of the few experienced players on the defensive unit, he is a stabilizing factor.

The defense is switching from the four-man front used the previous two seasons to a five-man front, which is an obvious adjustment for the unit. Tisdale, too, has had to make an adjustment, playing on the other side of the line from the one he played last year.

The junior-to-be San Saba product appears to be making the adjustment rather well. Defensive end coach Jess Stiles said recently that Tisdale has been playing better this spring than he ever has.

"He doesn't have the great quickness, so he's not going to make a whole lot of big plays," Stiles said. "But he's 6-5, and that helps. He's a solid player, usually at the place he's supposed to be."

Tisdale is basically a pass-rusher, but has pass coverage in a couple of defenses.

Scribes, Throats To Coach

It will be The Scribes vs. The Throats next Thursday night when Texas Tech holds its annual Red-White spring football game, and the coach will tell you what happened.

Sportscasters Bob Howell of KCBT-TV, Doug Rains of KSEL-TV and Sid Allen of KLBK-TV have been named "coaches" for one team, while Avalanche-Journal sports editor Don Henry and A-J sports staffer Carter Cromwell, who has covered the football Raiders for the past three seasons, will "direct" the opposing side.

Texas Tech head football coach Rex Dockery will sit in the press box during the contest and has agreed to make his initial attempt at authoring a game story for the Avalanche-Journal's Friday morning edition.

The game is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium and will conclude Tech's four-week spring training period.

"I'm a little freer than I was before," he said. "I'm not on the tight end all the time now. I can do more things."

He believes the new scheme has made the end play easier than it was last year. With one more man on the defensive line now (the noseguard), the tackles are less concerned with stopping up the middle than they were a year ago. This aids the ends.

"It sure makes our job against the option a lot easier," Tisdale said. "Last year, the tackles were worried about the inside all the time, so we had bigger gaps to fill."

NOTES: Ricky Kempf, a junior college transfer linebacker who has been out with a knee injury much of spring training, may have surgery, but the decision made yet. Probably, the decision will come next week. Kempf possibly has a torn cartilage. . . The Red Raiders will scrimmage Saturday, as usual, but the starting time will be 1:30 p.m., rather than 10:30 a.m., as it has been previously.

The secondary is even thinner now than it was at the start, with cornerbacks Freddy Taylor (sprained knee) and Willie Stephens (bruised hip) and free safety Greg Tyler (bruised leg) out of the lineup. The former two are normally starters, while Tyler is a second-teamer. . . The Raiders will close spring practice next Thursday with the Red-White spring game, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium. . .

Player Pulls Ahead Of Houston Field

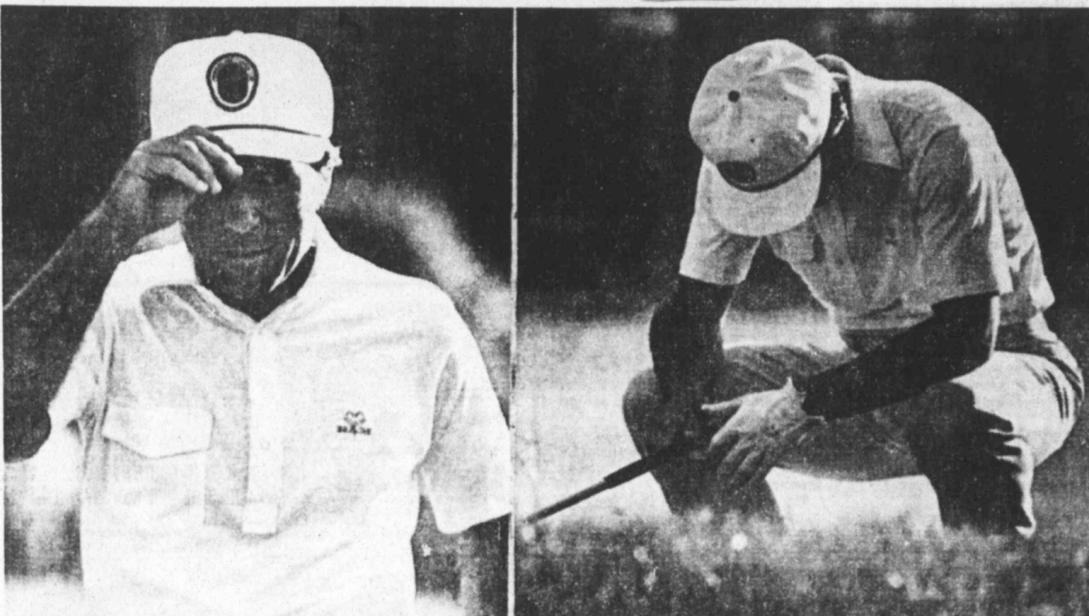

HOUSTON (AP) — Gary Player of South Africa, a come-from-behind winner in his last two starts, took a big step toward a third consecutive victory Thursday with an 8-under-par 64 that gave him the first-round lead in the $200,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

With Australian Bob Shearer in second place, a single shot back at 65, it marked a continuation of the foreign domination of the American tour. Foreign entrants have won the last three major events on the U.S. circuit and have led or shared the lead in 10 of the last 13 rounds.

Player has led only three of those — coming from far off the pace in the final rounds to win the Masters and the Tournament of Champions in his last two starts and then striking quickly in this one.

PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and Bob Murphy, delighted with his rebound putting touch, matched 66 in the sunny, mild, windless spring weather that favored the beautifully-conditioned, 6,997-yard Woodlands Country Club course and helped produce some of the lowest scores of the year.

NFL's Free Agents Standing Still

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Freedom of movement was one of the rallying cries National Football League players employed during years of warfare with the club owners. But despite their newfound free agency, nobody seems to be going anywhere.

Unlike major league baseball's free agents, who can bounce from franchise to franchise like so many pinballs with no compensation to the clubs they've left behind, the loss of an NFL player may entitle a team to draft choices, the number and worth determined by the player's new salary.

A lot of clubs apparently are unwilling to part with those choices. Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, has acknowledged the union may have underestimated the value clubs placed on those future draft picks.

But both Garvey and Terry Bledsoe, assistant executive director of the NFL

Management Council (the owners' "union"), agree that a football version of baseball's free-agent auction isn't what they wanted in the first place.

"What the two sides had in mind was creating a free-agent system that would permit players to get the advantages of the marketplace without having to change addresses," Bledsoe said Thursday. "If the purpose of the system had been to have 90 free agents and 90 guys move, clearly this didn't achieve it."

"Essentially I think the system we set out to create and the union set out to create — and the one we both wound up creating — allows the player to get into the market and measure his value, which is good for the player, and one which allows him to do so without having to move from his club, which in many cases is good for the player and in almost all cases is good for the club," Bledsoe added.

Says Garvey: "Most players do not want to move from team to team. It's a short career in football, shorter than any other sport. Most players are fighting to keep their jobs where they are. They know the systems and staffs on their teams. Most do not want to move, even those who play out their options."

If a player doesn't change teams, it's probably because his present club matched the salary offer he got from another one or, if he didn't get one, he received at least a 10 percent raise. In this way, players test the marketplace.

That guaranteed salary increase and the chance to see just what clubs think they're worth are reasons so many players play out their options, Garvey and Bledsoe point out. Changing teams, they say, is only a secondary reason.

"In examining this system, which really is unique in sports because it helps the average player instead of the superstar, you can't judge it simply on the basis of movement," Garvey says. That differentiates it from baseball, in which a few top-line players became overnight millionaires.

But he doesn't totally ignore the fact that only a few NFL players have changed teams.

"If we don't have any movement — and we don't have bids for established players — we think there may be something wrong," he says. "We're asking each player why he played out his option, what his salary is, what attempts he made to contact other teams, which teams contacted him."

Is he saying it's time to re-evaluate the agreement? "I think the jury is still out on this. . . . When we reached the agreement we recognized it was an experiment with people in management to make this agreement work. Rather than go back into the siege mentality that we operated under for five years, if adjustments have to be made to make this thing work then both sides will adjust."

Jayton, Lazbuddie Win

Host Jayton qualified 14 entries for regional and edged Motley County 195-186 for the District 9-B team track title Thursday.

Jayton set records in the 440 and mile relays, the 330 hurdles and the long jump while Randy Keith of Guthrie cleared 6-6 for a new high-jump record. Motley County qualified 11 entries for regional.

In District 4-B action at Levelland, Lazbuddie took the team title with 135 points, trailed by Amherst at 130.

Casey To Challenge Champ Roger Kirby

Roger Kirby will put his western states heavyweight championship on the line tonight against Scott Casey in the main event on the weekly wrestling program at Fair Park Coliseum. The main bout will be a no-disqualification. The show will begin at 8 p.m.

In a girls tag-team championship, champions Vicky Williams will be challenged by Lani Kai and Marie Lavern.

In preliminary bouts, Ted DiBiase will face Hans Schroeder, Jonathan Boyd will face Ricky Romero, and Dennis Stamp will go against Carlos Matta.

Snyder Nips Cubs

BROWNFIELD (Special)—Sid Everton blasted a home run in the top of the eighth inning to lift Snyder to an 8-7 District 3-AAA victory over host Brownfield Thursday.

The win left Snyder with a 5-1 district record, and the Cubs fell to 1-4. For the year, SHS is 19-5, Brownfield 10-10.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. If interest rates rise—as is being predicted—the yield on corporate bonds will rise and the price of preferred shares will decline. I now hold some high grade utility preferreds. Would it be best to sell them and put the money into corporate bonds?

A.—There would be no advantage to such a shift because interest payments by bonds are fixed just as are dividend payments by preferreds. Both types of security would decline in market price in the event interest rates rise.

As of the moment, new top quality, long-term corporate bonds are being issued (and outstanding bonds are being traded) to yield about 8½-8¾ percent. Many high quality preferreds are yielding about as much. If interest rates rise the dollar amount of interest of dividends paid out by any bonds or preferreds you now own will not rise. Those interest coupons or dividend checks are fixed at the time the security is sold. They are not raised or lowered to conform with changing money market (interest) rates. What does change is the market price of your security. If best quality bonds rates go to, say, 11 percent you can't expect any top quality bond or preferred you now hold (or buy today) to remain at a market price of 100. It will have to decline in market price to the point where its yield will match the 11 percent which is obtainable from new issues.

So—there would be no protection in shifting from preferreds to bonds, or vice versa. Both their market prices are influenced by interest rates changes. I'm referring, of course, principally to high grade investment quality issues.)

It would help if you differentiated between yield (or return) on the one hand and interest and dividend payments expressed in dollars on the other. Yield of a security (expressed in percentages) changes with any change in market price. Bond interest and preferred dividend payout—as measured in dollars—are fixed.

Q. I am a single woman in my 40s living on a fixed income. There is a $20,000 mortgage on my home at 9 percent. I could pay it off from savings now earning 6½ percent. But friends say it's better to keep the mortgage in order to enjoy the tax benefits derived from paying interest on the mortgage.

A. That argument holds no water, at all. Your friendly advisors just aren't using their heads.

Let's assume you pay 25 percent in taxes on your top income. Your $20,000 earnings 6½ percent brings in $1,300 a year, of which one-fourth, or $325 is paid out in income taxes. The 9 percent you pay on the $20,000 mortgage comes to $1,800, on which you get back a tax credit of $450. So—keeping the mortgage, as it means you earn $975, net, on your bank account and pay out $1,350, net, on your mortgage interest. How does that show you a net gain? (And I'm ignoring the fact that the mortgage also requires amortization payments which some people label "forced savings" but which doesn't help anyone living on a fixed income.)

If you were using your $20,000 for business, or in pursuit of a capital gain, retaining the fixed dollar mortgage might be justified. But since you are holding dollars (savings) for satisfaction of a dollar debt (the mortgage) I can't see how earning 6½ percent and paying 9 percent can help you any—at least not until income tax brackets run up to 125 percent.

Q. I'm living on Social Security and would like to invest $4,000 in tax-free municipal bonds to get income.

A. You can't use tax exemption, so why take the lower income from municipal bonds in order to get it?

Q. How can one borrow money from a broker in order to get more income?

A. I doubt that you can. You'd have to take some valid chances to get more interest on the borrowed money than it would cost you to brokerage interest charges, compounded monthly.

Death Penalty States Shunned

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Legal Aid and Defenders Association announced Thursday it will not hold any future annual conventions in states that have adopted the death penalty.

The organization, which represents approximately 1,000 legal aid offices around the country, took the action to protest the death penalty at a meeting of its executive committee last Sunday.

The association had previously decided not to hold conventions in states that have not adopted the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution and as a result had canceled plans to hold its convention this year in Las Vegas.

Betty Kehrer, executive director of the association, said the convention will be held in Washington, D.C., Oct. 19-22 and 1,000 delegates are expected to attend.

She said that as far as the organization knows, it was the first group to go on record against holding its annual convention in any state with the death penalty. In addition to representing legal aid offices around the country, the organization has more than 2,000 dues-paying members, including non-lawyers.

EXPLOSIVE DEVELOPMENT

U.S. inventor Hudson Maxim invented "maximite," a high explosive bursting powder which, when it was placed in torpedoes, resisted shock of firing and of piercing the armor plate without bursting. The explosive was later set off by a delay-action detonation fuse, another of his inventions.

Poverty-Level Income Raised

WASHINGTON (AP)—A non-farm family of four with an income less than $6,200 a year is now defined as living in poverty, the Labor Department says.

The department said it is raising the official poverty level by $350 from a year ago to take into account increases in consumer prices.

The poverty level for a non-farm family of four was $5,850 in 1977 and $5,500 in 1976.

The Census Bureau estimates that 24 million Americans were living in poverty in 1975.

The Labor Department said its poverty-level guidelines are used to determine eligibility for employment and job training programs.

The poverty level for a farm family of four has been raised $290 to $5,270 a year.

Earth-Like Life In Outer Space Found More Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of stars in our Milky Way galaxy that could have habitable planets circling them is much greater than previously believed, two astronomers said Thursday.

The scientists at the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona estimate that about 10 percent of the galaxy's 100 billion stars could have planets orbiting them.

Although it is impossible to know what proportion of these planets are habitable by Earth standards, the scientists say the more candidates there are to choose from, the better the odds of there being Earth-like life on some of them.

Dr. Helmut A. Abt and his research assistant, Saul G. Levy, say they have evidence stars much hotter than the sun can have planetary bodies orbiting them. It has been thought that because hotter stars spin much more rapidly than cooler ones, certain laws of physics made it unlikely that they could have planetary companions.

The sun has a surface temperature of about 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit and spins on its axis once every 25 days. So-called hot stars have temperatures between 20,000 and 100,000 degrees, and some rotate in a few hours.

About 10 percent of the galaxy's stars are hot stars.

Abt said in a telephone interview that the astronomers surveyed 42 hot star systems using the 84-inch telescope at the observatory, a national astronomy center funded by the National Science Foundation.

The scientists looked at the orbital motions of the stars, which can indicate if they are being pulled by gravitational forces of unseen companions. The astronomers found that seven of the hot stars may have planets around them.

A similar survey of 123 cooler stars done in 1976 indicated that one-tenth could have companions too small to be other stars, yet large enough to cause orbital motions. The scientists concluded that these companions could be planets.

Abt said present instruments are not sensitive enough to conclusively detect the presence of planets around other stars.

Political Rally Set In Levelland

LEVELLAND (Special) — The Levelland Area Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a non-partisan political rally Saturday on the Hockley County Courthouse square beginning at 1 p.m.

Several state and local political figures are expected to be on hand. Each candidate will have approximately three minutes to speak, with a question and answer period to follow.

Price Daniel Jr., Democratic candidate for Attorney General, has named Mrs. Carol Himmell of Crosby County his campaign coordinator in Crosby County and Jimmy R. Pigg of Brownfield his coordinator in Terry County.

Daniel faces former secretary of state Mark White in the Democratic primary.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Run For Your Life

"People are now talking about how running is supposed to produce some psychoelevating morphine derivative substance in the blood, or it's supposed to be some sort of religious experience, a natural high or something," says Olympic marathon runner Frank Shorter.

"I don't know about that," he says. "Maybe it is — but that shouldn't be the main reason for running. I just like to go out and do it. I have the same attitude I had when I was eight or nine years old. I go out and do it because I like it."

Frank Shorter, who hailed the dawn of American running by capturing the Olympic gold medal in Munich six years ago, will shortly spearhead by the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company.

But he says in Outside magazine that running is not only an aide to physical health, but mental well-being too. "Running makes a great study break," says Shorter, who ran through pre-med at Yale and law school at the University of Florida. "It was a great release, so I was always running the whole time... I was doing it to keep from going crazy." (NEA)

West In 25 Hours

There's nothing mini about a 25-hour TV series, considering a regular series runs for 23 weeks, but that's what NBC is calling its mammoth production of James Michener's epic novel of the American West, "Centennial."

Robert Conrad and Richard Chamberlain have headed out to Greeley, Colo., and the surrounding South Platte River region, where production has gotten underway. Conrad, known for his gung-ho ruggedness both on camera and off, portrays the hardy French frontier trader, Pasquinel. Chamberlain plays McKeag, a red-bearded Scot fugitive who flees to America and becomes Pasquinel's partner after the Frenchman rescues him from the Pawnee.

Conrad, who's on hiatus from Black Sheep Squadron to film "Centennial," which will air next season, feels at home in the woody surroundings. "I'm no stranger to the outdoor life," says Conrad, "and I honestly believe I could survive were I to be cut loose from civilization." (NEA)

Woody Isn't Laughing

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Woody Allen may have received two Oscars for his quasi-autobiographical "Annie Hall," but it's a whole other matter when strangers start chatting up his private life. All they may get is a lawsuit.

Nobody is saying what the offending words are, but Allen's lawyers are said to be seeking deletions in an unauthorized biography, "Woody Allen," written by Lee Guthrie. The book which has already gone into its second printing, traces Allen's life and career from his earliest days through his activities since the release of "Annie Hall."

A spokesman for Drake Publishers, Inc., who are publishing the biography, said: "We respect and admire Woody Allen for the comic genius that he is, and there is nothing slanderous involved." So far, the lawyers are still locking horns.

Fireworks' Dangers Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spate of accidental deaths and injuries associated with fireworks and explosives has prompted a public warning from the government.

"This is a serious situation but we can take action to reverse these tragedies," said Rex D. Davis, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

In the first three months of this year accidental explosions have resulted in at least 15 deaths and 32 injuries, Davis said, and 89 people died in such mishaps last year.

Among the recent tragedies cited by Davis were a man who was killed and a youth who lost a leg when a Civil War cannonball exploded in North Carolina, a man who lost a limb when dynamite used to stun fish exploded in Arkansas and a California boy whose hands were severed by a grenade he found while playing.

Davis said that since late February fatal mishaps have occurred in Arkansas, California, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Texas and Utah.

He urged that persons finding explosives report immediately either to local law enforcement officials or to ATF which has a toll-free telephone line: 800-424-9555.

Explosives must be handled only by experts under safe conditions "and represent an extreme hazard to others. Understand this hazard and warn your children," Davis said.

He said stolen or abandoned explosives may turn up anywhere and added that persons who experiment with making pipe bombs or homemade fireworks are "literally gambling with death."

In particular, Davis said, children should be taught to leave suspicious or unknown objects alone if they find them and to call an adult to see what the object is.

And if it is an explosive, he added, the adult too should leave it alone and call for expert assistance.

Wallace Seeks Protection

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace may not run for the U.S. Senate this fall unless the state Senate passes pending legislation providing him with state trooper protection when his term expires in January, a source close to Wallace said.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday he believes Wallace needs the troopers for security and to assist him with physical therapy and other medical needs.

Wallace is an unannounced candidate for the Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala.

Under existing law, Wallace could be extended trooper protection for five years after leaving office, but only at the discretion of the state public safety director.

Pioneering Spirit Sought

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch told Princess Beatrix and Prince Claus of the Netherlands Thursday that New York City will soon have the determined, pioneering spirit of old New Amsterdam.

"We are going to bring back the same feeling we had in New Amsterdam," Koch told their royal highnesses at a reception in the Netherland Club of New York. The business and social organization for Dutch-Americans is celebrating its 75th anniversary.

Koch predicted that today's New Yorkers will overcome the city's financial problems just as the first Dutch settlers here conquered the wilderness in 1625.

Koch, who served as an Army sergeant in Europe during World War II, said the Dutch were "the people I admire most."

Beatles Awed By Elvis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Beatles visited Elvis Presley at his Bel Air, Calif., home in 1965 and were so awed by the "King of Rock 'n' Roll" that they were speechless, a friend of the late singer says.

"When the Beatles arrived at Elvis' home, they were in awe of him and sat on a long sofa and stared at him," said Marty Lacker, one of two best men at Presley's Las Vegas wedding in 1967. "No one said a word for a long time. Finally, Elvis broke the silence, saying, 'Look, if you guys are just going to sit there and stare at me all night, I'm going to bed.'"

In an unpublished manuscript, Lacker also says Presley talked with former President Richard Nixon at the White House in 1970 about working as an undercover federal narcotics agent but nothing came of the offer.

Lacker said Wednesday night from his Memphis home that excerpts from the manuscript will be published in the May issue of Ladies' Home Journal. He has titled the 18-chapter book, "Elvis: Portrait of A Friend." He said his New York agent is negotiating with publishers.

Dublin's Mayor Sings

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Dublin's Lord Mayor, Michael Collins, sang "From Kilarney up to Dublin, the Irish hearts are bubblin'" during a news conference here.

Collins performed on Wednesday at the request of Omaha Mayor Al Veys, who was holding his weekly meeting with reporters.

Collins is visiting Nebraska at the invitation of Lincoln resident Bob Milton. On a visit to Ireland, Milton presented Collins with a key to the city of Lincoln from Mayor Helen Boosalis.

Nightmarish Success

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — People who thought the shower scene in "Psycho" was messy, are finding it was nothing compared to the blood that's splashed around the likes of Kirk Douglas, John Cassavetes and Carrie Snodgrass in Brian DePalma's latest thriller, "Fury."

DePalma, who directed such grisly films as "Carrie" and "Obsession," works in very much the same style as the master of thrillers, Alfred Hitchcock. And now the student may have surpassed the teacher. Says critic Pauline Kael: "No Hitchcock thriller was ever so intense, went so far, or had so many 'classic' sequences."

"I'm very flattered," says DePalma of the favorable comparison, "because I consider him the greatest director there is."

DePalma, who describes himself as "a relatively happy person," says in US magazine: "You have to be hyper real. It's so over-dramatic, you have to get into an operatic form to make it work."

When asked how he maps out his nightmarish stories for the screen, DePalma credits the Hitchcockian method of designing a story board. "I guess I started this when I was designing computers," he says. "I'd go out, get a little part, stay home and build this thing. Then I'd plug it in and see if it worked. That's how I really think about movies."

T-Shirt Angers Judge

DALLAS (AP) — Lawrence D. McLennan probably wasn't as happy when he left a Dallas County criminal courtroom as his T-shirt would have led one to believe.

Judge Robert H. Stinson, who arraigned McLennan on Wednesday on a marijuana charge, said the T-shirt McLennan was wearing didn't fit in with courtroom decorum. "It said 'I'm so happy I could defecate.' But he used a four-letter word," the judge explained later.

Stinson discussed a dress code for appearing in court with McLennan and finally told him, "I'm going to provide you with a mighty fine place to be happy. You're going to the county jail where there's plenty of plumbing for your needs."

The judge, who increased McLennan's bond from $200 to $1,000 and sent him to jail in lieu of bond, said anyone who appeared in his courtroom "with that kind of attitude probably wouldn't show up for his trial."

IRS Suspends Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has temporarily suspended the requirement that persons who leave a job be given a W-2 Wage and Tax Statement within 30 days.

The action was taken, officials said, because the forms are currently in short supply. It does not apply to aliens leaving the country, however, and forms will be made available to employers for use in these cases.

ComicBook Ads Face Scrutiny By Trade Panel

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission announced Thursday it will take a hard look at advertising in comic books.

The FTC directed its Seattle regional office to conduct the industry-wide investigation which is expected to take about a year.

William C. Erxleben, regional director, told a news conference Thursday that practices under investigation include advertisements which neglect to say that batteries needed to operate a toy aren't included in the advertised price; products that fail to perform as advertised, and use of comic book personalities or characters to endorse products.

Erxleben said one of the first steps in the study will be to invite written comments from the public, manufacturers, university researchers, child psychologists and even the children themselves.

"The study will involve interviewing child psychologists in depth in regard to the ability of a child to differentiate between a commercial and a story, what frustrations and problems might result from buying a product that doesn't work or isn't what it was represented to be and what this does to the child," he said.

Erxleben said preliminary estimates indicate about $5 million a month is being spent on comic book advertising and 92 percent of children between ages 8 and 10 and 82 percent between 5 and 7 are comic book readers.

The study also will seek to determine if comic books are being used to push dangerous products or products which would tend to foster bad habits or attitudes among children or cause discord among the family.

The study of comics books follows the commission's decision in February to begin a rule-making process that could lead to restrictions or a ban on television commercials directed at children.

That proposal calls for a ban on all advertising on programs aimed at children under the age of eight.

Los Angeles Focus Of Book Promoters

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — One balmy evening, after Gucci and Tiffany had closed, the big spenders from a New York publishing house took over the glittering, two-story Giorgio's boutique for an intimate $15,000 party.

The soiree — replete with tuxedoed waiters, strolling violinists and a guest list of the town's biggest spenders — was the final splash in Crown Publishers' extraordinary $75,000 campaign to create a best-seller.

The promotional blitz, which focused on this small enclave of West Coast wealth, has worked like a charm. "Scruples," a first novel by Judith Krantz, has climbed into best-seller lists on both coasts despite reviews which dismiss it as "fun trash" and worse.

Crown's lavish efforts are part of a growing trend among East Coast publishing giants to spend more money on advance promotion and concentrate the scope of that promotion on the West Coast.

Book publicist Jay Allen says most major media outlets for authors are available in Los Angeles. "Carson, Griffin, Dinah, the big talk shows are here. Every major newspaper has a stringer here," says Allen, who handled Joseph Wambaugh's latest, "The Black Marble."

"They like to think of Los Angeles as being a cultural wasteland. But, per capita, it's the biggest book selling city."

Narrowing the scope of an ad campaign is a gimmick Allen is used to. "If you can focus on one particular audience, you can get on the best-seller lists," he says.

The central event of "The Black Marble" is a dognapping, so Allen aimed his promotion at California dog lovers.

"Joe (Wambaugh) attended all the most important dog shows," Allen recalls. "He presented several of the best-in-show awards."

"... We found out there are 2,800 breed clubs with publications, and we sent them releases saying dogs were featured in an upcoming major novel."

As a result, he says, "The Black Marble" was a No. 1 West Coast best-seller before publication and quickly hit the national lists.

But even Allen is astonished at the success of "Scruples" and the amount of money spent to promote the novel.

"The book has glamor and fantasy," says Bruce Harris, Crown's marketing vice president who decided to make "Scruples" a household word.

"People don't want to hear about plumbers," says Harris. "They want to hear about designers and movie stars."

"Scruples," liberally spiced with sex, offers the added titillation of an inside look at the movie and fashion industries as background for a Cinderella story of a 30-year-old zillionaire.

The centerpiece of Mrs. Krantz's improbable tale is Scruples, the most extravagant boutique in the world — rivaled only by Giorgio's — which is created by the book's heroine as a Disneyland for spendthrift adults. It's the ultimate tribute to shopping as entertainment.

The setting is Beverly Hills' most expensive shopping street, Rodeo Drive, the avenue of answered prayers.

It was there that Crown spent much of its promotional budget for a book no one might have noticed otherwise.

"We wanted to spend $75,000 and make it look like a million," says Harris. "My feeling was that we could reach the consumer quickly by concentrating our effort before publication in the Los Angeles area."

"Los Angeles is at least the second-biggest book market in the country, and Judy is from Beverly Hills."

Harris explains the thinking behind

Actress To Tell All In Book

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Veteran movie reporters awaited for a Academy Awards 31 years ago. It didn't happen again.

At the 19th Academy Awards, Olivia DeHavilland won for her role in "To Each His Own," and the press recorded her rejection of the congratulations of her sister, Joan Fontaine.

"I don't know why she does that when she knows how I feel," Olivia said. Columnists wrote thousands of words about the contortment, suggesting that it had been caused by deep-seated antagonisms, including the fact that Joan had won the Oscar first, for "Suspicion" in 1941.

Although the two sisters appeared on this year's 50th anniversary award program, they did not meet. Probably just as well, since relations between Joan and Olivia have not improved since the awards in 1947.

The feud will no doubt be exacerbated by publication of Joan's autobiography, "No Bed of Roses," to be published by William Morrow this fall. (Olivia is also reported to be writing her memoirs, but she is likely to be more polite.)

"I'm going to tell everything," Joan promised. "About my whole relationship with Olivia, about Bill Dozier (her second husband), about Howard Hughes. I'm the only actress in Hollywood that Hughes pursued and didn't sleep with."

"You know, I've had a helluva life. Not just the acting part. I've flown in an international balloon race. I've piloted my own plane, I've ridden to the hounds. I've done a lot of exciting things, and I'll tell you something. What's happened so far is just the prologue."

Joan Fontaine is like that. She has an Auntie Mame zest for life, which is the reason she lives in New York. "I need the swift pace of New York and the sense of constant activity," she said. She also spends part of the year at Pebble Beach in northern California, where she whacks a golf ball around the famous courses. Her returns to Hollywood are infrequent. Besides the Academy Awards, she came here to appear in an ABC movie based on Joyce Heber's steamy novel "The Users." She plays a Hollywood socialite-fixer who helps introduce Jaclyn Smith to the local scene.

"It's a good part, far better than the usual junk I'm offered," Miss Fontaine said. "You wouldn't believe the scripts I receive. My life is too busy to waste my time on such drivel."

"The reason I left Hollywood is because they wanted me to play Elvis Presley's mother. Not that I had anything against Elvis Presley. But that just wasn't my cup of tea."

"No Bed of Roses" should make fascinating reading, and not merely because of familial squabbles and marital dis-

ter. Born in Tokyo in 1917; a year after Olivia, Joan grew up in Saratoga, Calif., followed her sister into films and seemed destined for a career as a lovely but colorless leading lady.

"Rebecca" changed that, and she followed in "Suspicion," which won her the 1941 Oscar as best actress.

Like David Niven and other star-authors, she declares that her autobiography is entirely her work. "I received no help at all; every word of it is mine," she said. "William Morrow made me an offer that was good enough to permit me to stay away from acting for two years. I was assigned three editors, all of whom had conflicting opinions. So I just wrote it the way I had originally conceived, and that's what is being published."

The project will be funded from residence hall funds.

The renovation work was previously approved by the Texas Tech regents.

Music From Outer Space

Concert Offers Music From Outer Space

OKLAHOMA CITY—The immensity and grandeur of space pull sharply into focus in a multi-dimensional concert and laser light show, "Music From Outer Space" Saturday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the Myriad.

The highly successful West Coast attraction that premiered to a sold out house in the Hollywood Bowl is launching a national tour beginning in Oklahoma City.

This entertainment experience is a concert of space music, performed by the Oklahoma Symphony orchestra conducted by Ainslee Cox and the most sophisticated laser display ever taken on the road.

Three lasers will provide a stunning array of visual effects, ranging from crisscrossing clotheslines of high intensity light that meld into luminous sheets to hand-held laser guns used in the show's finale, a "Stars Wars" Laser gun battle. An arsenal of rockets, explosions, lights and special effects will also supplement the full symphony orchestra.

In addition to the three lasers, the show's equipment includes a 125-instrument triangular lighting truss, a 360-degree sound system utilizing over 100 microphones, and a 96-channel mixer board plus a separate room in which to mix the sound. A crew of 22 technicians will travel with and set up the fifty tons of equipment. The equipment is valued in excess of $500,000.

In addition to the "Stars Wars" finale, the concert will include "Close Encounters," "2001: A Space Odyssey," "Star Trek Theme," "Twilight Zone Theme," and "The Planets."

Tickets for the space age extravaganza are now available at all Sound Warehouses in Oklahoma City, Lindsey and Norman for $10, $8 and $6. All seats are reserved.

The show, with the Oklahoma Symphony, will also play in Tulsa on May 1.

Texan Big Draw In Northeast

UNION, N.J. (AP) — A 275-pound Meat Loaf is showing rock music fans that a little theatre training can go a long way in breaking the boredom of hearing just one more loud hard rock group.

Meat Loaf, the name of the group and its hefty lead singer, has become a major concert draw in the Northeast on the strength of its debut album, "Bat Out Of Hell," which has tripled the 100,000 sales mark most new groups hope for.

But the usual wailing guitars are tied to what songwriter Jim Steinman calls "epic songs" — lengthy, multi-part tunes featuring Meat Loaf's deep Southern gospel voice singing tales of frustrated teenagers "all revved up with no place to go."

The band's entertaining stage show, keyed to intricate theatrical lighting, features the massive Meat Loaf feverishly stomping about the stage, his belly hanging out of a tuxedo and sweat plastering long hair to his scalp.

He roars like Ralph Kramden in duets with singer Karla de Vito, skips across the stage like "Stinky" in the old Abbott and Costello television show and puts out tremendous gut-level energy, with sweat flying into the audience whether singing Steinman's hard rockers, ballads or oldies.

While Meat Loaf's acting and singing occupy the spotlight, it was pianist Steinman who arranged the act and wrote the tunes, several of which owe a debt to Bruce Springsteen and the rock 'n' roll classics produced by Phil Spector.

"I love Bruce," the burly Meat Loaf said in an interview before a college date here, "but I think I'm more dramatic and theatrical than Springsteen because he doesn't have the background that I do. He grew up in bars, performing in bars. I mean you're not going to get the theatrical experience performing in bars that you would working for the New York Shakespeare Festival."

Meat Loaf himself and Steinman are among rock's oddest couples. Meat, as his friends call him, is a huge, overbearing Texan who loves hard rockers like the late Jimi Hendrix and Janis Joplin. The singer sidesteps questions about his age or real name, saying he has used Meat Loaf as his professional name since 1961.

He first won notoriety as a lobotomized motorcycleist in the cult film, "The Rocky Horror Show."

After cutting a few unsuccessful singles for Motown in the early 1970s as Stony and Meat Loaf, he said he performed Shakespeare in New York's Central Park, worked in the road company of such plays as "Hair" and sang lead vocals on Ted Nugent's "Free For All" album.

Steinman, 27, thin and introspective with prematurely gray hair, has written scores for several plays. He almost hates to admit he's writing rock music now, preferring to talk about his songs being "conceived and executed as if it were Shakespeare, 'Henry V,' an epic thing."

He loves opera, hates guitar solos and jams, and says he'd rather go to almost any musical event other than a rock concert.

The pair joined forces in 1975 to begin planning the album.

The highlight of Meat Loaf's stage show is "Paradise," an energetic three-section story about 17-year-olds who drive to a lake for a moonlight encounter in a car.

As the boy tries to make advances, former New York Yankee shortstop Phil Rizzuto does a taped narrative about a baseball player — and the boy — getting to first base, second base and third before being stopped at home by the girl, who demands a pledge of love.

"The Rizzuto idea just came while writing the song — how do you do a make-out scene without it becoming gross," said Meat Loaf. "So we remembered the thing from high school — first base, second base."

"We talked about Mel Allen and different people but Rizzuto was really our first choice," Steinman added. "We talked to his agent and he says, 'Well Mr. Rizzuto said that he would really like to do this because he's never done anything like this. But he has just one question: He wants to know if all the kids have to get high to listen to the record.'"

TRUCK STATISTICS

Manufacturers ship 57 percent of their products by truck, and in some states, including Massachusetts and Connecticut, this figure approaches 85 percent, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association.

Meat Loaf added, "Jimmy said it would be better if they don't and that was it."

While most groups would start thinking about a second album, Meat Loaf and Steinman want to stick with theatrics and produce a Steinman play, "Neverlands." The play is a rock 'n' roll musical based on Peter Pan that they did in a workshop at the Kennedy Center in Washington. And Steinman says one part is perfect for his 275-pound partner: Tinkerbell.

School System Sets Vocational Trip

By JEFF SOUTH
 Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock Independent School District trustees Thursday voted to pay the way for nine students to attend national competition in vocational skills — a break from past district practice.

But they drew the line at funding trips to national events for extracurricular clubs and trips scheduled when school is not in session.

"They just did great this year at the state level," Superintendent Ed Irons said of the city's high school students. He said the list of youngsters qualifying for national competition is "more than quadruple that of past years."

Previously, students invited to national skill contests have had to pay their own way. Even though the school board had had a policy authorizing the district administration to use discretion in funding such trips, budgetary restraints generally have prevented the district from picking up the tab.

But this year will be different. "We certainly believe in rewarding students who receive the honor of qualifying for national-level competition," Irons said.

He recommended that the school board put up about $2,900 to send nine local high school students — chosen recently at various state-level contests — to national events sponsored by such groups as Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA), the national Health Occupations Students Association (HOSA) and the national Office Education Association (OEA).

Those leadership groups are considered "intracurricular" functions because of their close involvement in respective vocational programs.

However, Irons said the school system should not pay the way for students to go to national events of "extracurricular" clubs, such as foreign-language clubs and the National Forensic League.

While those are "very worthwhile organizations," Irons said, "I'm afraid that when we start sending club groups to the national level, there'll be no stopping."

School trustees agreed, and they also said the district should not fund trips that take place when school is not in session.

They emphasized, however, that students in extracurricular activities should be encouraged to attend national contests on their own.

"We've got to draw the line somewhere," school trustee Brad Crawford said. "But we certainly ought to encourage them to raise the money themselves so they can go."

The school board's action will allow five students to attend the DECA Career Development Conference in Washington, D.C., on May 7-12. They are Ricky Pool and Steve West of Coronado High, and Brenda Brooks, Ray Foster and Brian Boswell of Monterey.

Also, the district will pay the way for Rhonda Spelce of Monterey to attend the HOSA national contest in Oklahoma City April 28-30.

The district also will be sending Maria Bursaga of Dunbar and Leaha Morrison and Gienna Haynes of Coronado to the national OEA competition in Detroit April 27 to May 3.

Teachers also will be sent to accompany those students.

Some high school students have been invited to the national contest of the National Forensic League, to be held during the summer. They will be required to pay their own way.

Irons said he expects more students in future years to qualify for national competition. He attributes the increase in such honors to the school board's decision two years ago to pay the way for students to compete at regional and state levels.

In other business Thursday, the board authorized the Monterey High School jazz ensemble to accept an invitation by the International Jazz Tour to participate in the fourth Hawaiian Christmas Jazz Tour. The tour is scheduled from Dec. 26, 1978 to Jan. 1, 1979.

Monterey is one of four bands chosen to participate. The group will pay its own way.

The school board also designated Sept. 26 and 27 as early-dismissal days for the Panhandle South Plains Fair. Half of the city's schools will dismiss students at 2 p.m. on each of those days.

In addition, the board appointed Albert Perez and Beverly Parsley to the public responsibility committee of the Lubbock Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center.

Country Western Music Shows Get Increased Television Exposure

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music shows have been getting unprecedented television exposure this year and more are lined up for airing in the next several weeks.

NBC has telecast three prime-time country music specials since January and will air a fourth in May. Also scheduled next month is a Johnny Cash special on CBS, "Classic Cash: The Old and the New."

Additionally, a Grand Ole Opry program was televised live in March by the Public Broadcasting Service for the first time in the 53-year history of the revered country music show.

And a syndicated country music-talk show, "The Nashville Scene," began airing in January in 28 cities, though it has been discontinued at least temporarily because of production costs and lack of a network sponsor.

The three NBC shows were the highly rated "50 Years of Country Music" and "Nashville Remembers Elvis on His Birthday," both in January, and "The World's Largest Indoor Country Music Show," which aired April 5.

A sequel to the first show, "Another 50 Years of Country Music," was taped last week for broadcast two hours each May 17 and May 24 on NBC.

The telecast of the Grand Ole Opry drew an "above-average" audience for public television, said Karen Kirshner, manager of program information for the PBS in Washington. "We'd love to do it again," she said. "We were pleased and the Opry was too. The Opry people were particularly pleased because it showed the Grand Ole Opry as it really is and was not just a television production. It was genuine."

Opry spokesman Jerry Strobel said there are no serious negotiations to televise the Opry again. "I think we received more good response than anything we've ever done before except for maybe opening the new Opry house," he said. "We got a lot of mail from fans and people who are not country music fans."

Besides the network and PBS shows, several other country music shows are syndicated, headed by "Hee Haw," which has been on the air 10 years. Others include "The Porter Wagoner Show," "That Nashville Music," "Pop! Goes the Country," "Nashville on the Road" and "Marty Robbins Spotlight."

The annual Country Music Association awards show is televised live each October by CBS. Cash also has periodic television specials.

Additionally, a syndicated show featuring Dolly Parton will return later this year. Called "Dolly," it was on two years ago but was discontinued for a year.

On June 6, the 12th annual Music City News Popularity Awards will be televised on an independent network.

Chet Hagan, producer of the two NBC specials on country music history, said a third is under discussion.

"We could do a third — maybe a Christmas country show," said Hagan, of Joe Cates Productions, Inc., New York City.

He said the specials are a tribute to the loyalty of country music fans. "In pop music, a hot act goes on for two or three years, then passes out of existence. But in country music, the performers retain their popularity. The old soldiers never die."

Tech Grad To Head Council

James R. Toland, a May music graduate of Texas Tech University, has been named executive director of the Lubbock Cultural Affairs Council by John A. Logan, executive vice president of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

As executive director of the Cultural Affairs Council, which is an affiliate organization of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Toland, 33, will be responsible for helping promote programs sponsored by members of the council. He also will handle the council's administrative workload and publish the council's Calendar of Cultural Events. He will begin his duties at the Chamber May 1.

He is now coordinator for public presentations with the Texas Tech department of music, a position he has held since its creation in September.

Prior to enrolling at Tech in 1975, he served eight years in the U.S. Army. From 1970-1973, Toland was assistant director of the V Corps Command Chorus. He was responsible for booking concerts and providing publicity and travel accommodations for the 40-voice choir.

In his current position, Toland is in charge of publicity and promotion of concerts, recitals and other musical programs sponsored by the department of music.
