

Carter Finding Way As Leader

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — As a world leader, President Carter is still finding his way, no longer the freshman and yet uncertain about how to attain U.S. foreign policy goals.

He is neither bold nor passive. He maintains that the United States should lead by example, most specifically on human rights.

But he has toned down his public criticism of the Soviet Union and other chronic violators of human rights, and he is gradually giving ground on arms control, another early visionary goal.

His trip to Latin America and Africa may have enhanced American standing in the Third World and might pay off eventually in promoting peaceful transition to black rule in Rhodesia.

Yet there is no indication of a break in the pattern of strife in the breakaway British colony.

Carter is the first president in recent times to have passed a year in office without U.S. troops firing a shot in anger.

But at the same time, the Russians have burrowed deeper into Africa, maintained a foothold in the Middle East and could be free to break out new nuclear weapons if the SALT talks fail.

The Panama Canal treaties — one approved, one pending in the Senate — are at this point the major foreign policy accomplishment of Carter's first 15 months in office.

He does not claim to have solutions to the most intractable of Arab-Israeli differences. Even the cheeriest optimists within the bureaucracy do not expect an early weapons limitation agreement with Moscow.

Meantime, administration sights have been lowered on that issue. Carter now aims for a reduction of about 10 percent from the strategic weapons totals tentatively agreed upon by Gerald Ford and Leonid Brezhnev in November 1974.

This is a substantial retreat from the massive cutbacks Carter's negotiators tried to get a year ago.

It's also the sort of marginal reduction Henry Kissinger thought was sewed up during his January 1976 Kremlin talks — only to be sidetracked because of concern within the Ford administration that an arms agreement with the Soviet Union was politically unwise in a presidential election year.

In the Middle East, Carter is trying to fan the flickering hopes of an Egyptian-Israeli accord. Differences over the Palestinians, eventual Israeli withdrawal from captured Arab territories and the fate of Jewish settlements on those lands are so sharp that an agreement soon remains unlikely.

Thus the two priority objectives, a weapons agreement with Moscow and a diplomatic breakthrough in the Middle East, are still out of reach.

Now that Rhodesia's white regime has agreed to a gradual transition to black rule, the administration is pressing for a swifter transfer of power and for the inclusion of militant black factions in a settlement.

That involves a gamble, because communist-aided guerrillas have so far refused to deal with Prime Minister Ian Smith, who agreed to terms with more moderate black groups in Rhodesia.

The risk is that the guerrillas will expand the fighting, disrupt the Smith settlement and, in the process, open a door the Russians and Cubans might enter.

Having committed the United States to total withdrawal of U.S. ground forces from South Korea, Carter has decided to keep two-thirds of them there until 1981.

The drive toward normal relations with mainland China has slowed to a virtual halt.

One senior adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said Russian meddling in Africa could imperil nuclear weapons negotiations, while others in the administration, including Carter, said there was no cause-and-effect connection.

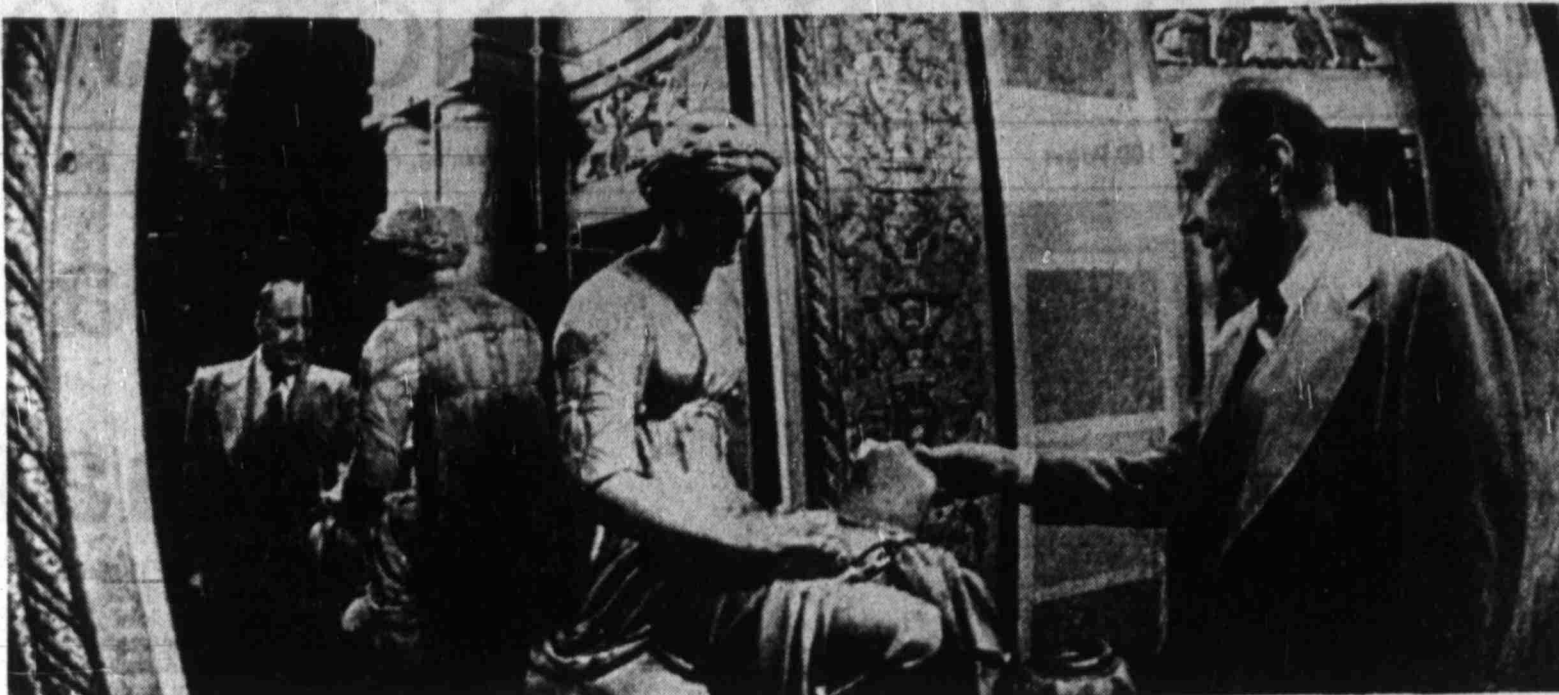

Carter's prediction of a quick nuclear weapons agreement proved off the mark. He promised the Palestinians a homeland, then had to backtrack, saying he did not favor a Palestinian state.

Brzezinski, his principal theoretician, began with a determination not to view all aspects of U.S. foreign policy through the prism of Soviet relations, as some thought Kissinger had wrongly done.

But after preaching concentration on stronger ties with the NATO allies and Japan, Brzezinski has evolved into the administration's hard-liner toward Moscow and has kept Soviet affairs at the center of U.S. foreign policy.

All the while, the State Department grumbles about interference from the White House while Secretary of State Cyrus Vance does not so much formulate policy as provide technical advice.

So determined is the administration not to operate in Kissinger's shadow it has yet to cast one of its own.

Increase Reported In Imported Steel

HOUSTON (AP) — More than one million tons of steel was imported through the Port of Houston the first three months of this year.

Port Authority officials said the figure represents a 182.6 percent increase over the same period last year.

Chuck Bullock, associate general manager, attributed the increased steel tonnage to importers attempting to get foreign steel in before federal controls on steel imports are fully into effect.

Female Guerrillas Move Up Ranks In Europe

EDITOR'S NOTE: Women guerrillas are moving up in the ranks of revolutionary groups — and becoming more dangerous. Here is a report.

By HILMI TOROS

ROME (AP) — More women are taking up the gun in the guerrilla organizations of Western Europe.

A former coed is led into court in chains as a member of Italy's Red Brigades, the terrorist organization that kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro.

A 22-year-old dental assistant among the South Moluccans who commandeered a train in the Netherlands last year was described as the most ruthless of the gang.

In West Germany, 10 of the 16 terrorists sought for the kidnap-slaying of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer are women. So are two of the three killers of banker Juergen Ponto.

"In Italy of 1978 we have arrived at armed feminism," said an Interior Ministry official. "They act in cold blood."

"They are violent because society has been so violent against them for so long," said Tina Baffi, an Italian female attorney.

Although no woman has reached the pinnacle of power in the Irish Republican Army, women have been in the forefront of the Italian and West German terrorist movements.

Western Europe's best-known female terrorist in recent years was Ulrike Meinhof, a Hamburg journalist and housewife who with anarchist Andreas Baader organized and led West German y's Baader-Meinhof Gang in the early 1970s in a campaign of arson, bank robbery, shooting and bombing.

Another leader in that group was Baader's mistress, Gudrun Ensslin, who aided him in his first terrorist attack, setting fire to a department store in Frankfurt in 1968 as a strike against the "pig-fascist state." When Baader was arrested for the arson, Mrs. Meinhof led the prison raid that rescued him.

Baader, the two women and a male associate were captured in 1972. All four were found dead in their prison cells, Mrs. Meinhof during the trial, and the other three after a terrorist hijacking to secure their release failed.

The government said all four committed suicide but their disciples carrying on their terrorist fight claimed they were murdered.

Italy's Red Brigades also was founded by a man and a woman, Renato Curcio and his wife, the late Margherita Cagol. And like Mrs. Meinhof, Miss Cagol in 1975 led an armed attack that freed Curcio from jail.

Miss Cagol was killed shortly after in a shootout with police. Nadia Mantovani, once a model pre-med student at the University of Padua, took her place at Curcio's side. She is still beside him in the defendants' cage in Turin, where the government is attempting for the third

PRISON VISIT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two American consular officials have visited imprisoned businessman Louis LeFevre in a Nigerian jail and found him "well and in good spirits," the State Department said Monday. LeFevre was arrested by Nigerian officials last week just before President Carter arrived for his official visit.

time to try 15 members of the Red Brigades.

Among the fugitive members of the Red Brigades is 26-year-old Susanna Ronconi, a former political science student considered to be in the top echelon of the organization, who once wrote that she went underground "to exalt the role of women in the class war."

Miss Ronconi and another woman are among seven persons wanted in connection with the killing of a Turin police official on March 10, the day after the Red Brigades trial started, and for the kidnapping of Moro six days later.

Moro's five bodyguards were killed by the kidnapers, and investigators say they have ascertained that one or possibly two women were among those firing submachine gun.

The IRA in Northern Ireland is said to use women mostly as smugglers of explosives and to lure British soldiers to ambushes. But some — the Price sisters — have been convicted of terrorist bombings in London.

Margaret McKirney, at large and wanted for bombings, was once classed as the most wanted terrorist in Britain. Maire Drumm, in her 50's and called "Grandma Venom" because of her fiery speeches against the British presence in Northern Ireland, was killed by Protestant terrorists while in a hospital.

Army Chow Worse In Russia

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — American GIs who spent their military careers complaining about Army chow should hear the latest intelligence on the Russian military diet.

A U.S. Army analyst reports many Soviet soldiers suffer from vitamin and mineral deficiencies because their diet is short on vegetables.

And many Russian regiments and military schools must supplement their rations by raising their own vegetables, pigs, livestock, rabbits and poultry on "kitchen farms," the report says.

Victoria Dibbern, a nutritionist with the Army's Foreign Science and Technology Center, Charlottesville, Va., reported, "Even potatoes and cabbage may run out before the new harvest."

"Difficulties with food production, preservation and distribution in the civilian sector are reflected in the military food supply," she wrote in an official publication of U.S. Army logistics.

The nutritionist reported a gradual upward trend in the variety and quality of food available to the Russian armed forces, "especially the officer corps and other groups."

Without detailing the sources of her information, Miss Dibbern said that "nutritional difficulties of the Soviet armed forces are corroborated by Soviet military medical literature."

Her article was the latest of a number of reports in recent years by U.S. defense specialists focusing on the Soviet serviceman, his characteristics and the conditions under which he lives and trains.

"Better food is a privilege of rank in the Soviet military," Miss Dibbern said. "The conscripted rifleman and the non-commissioned officer are served more meat than enlisted men while officers enjoy a greater variety of meat, as well as eggs, dairy products, fresh fruits and vegetables that the troops see only on holidays."

Russian soldiers are detailed to work in their unit gardens and to care for the animals, she said, and sometimes soldiers are loaned out by their commanders to work on nearby collective farms in exchange for food products.

During maneuvers, Miss Dibbern said, "Public catering service personnel are assigned to provide high quality field dining for the officers... and VIPs" observing the training.

"This system appears to have blossomed in the early 1970s as a peacetime effort to reward the officer corps and make life more comfortable for VIPs during field exercises," the report said.

Christian TV Station Sought

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Evangelist Billy James Hargis says Tulsa needs an alternative television station and he plans on providing it — a station that will have full-time Christian programming.

Hargis said this week he plans to apply for a permit to operate the station on ultra high frequency channels. Several other groups have expressed their interests in starting UHF stations in the city.

At present, there are no UHF stations in Tulsa, which is served by three network-affiliate commercial stations, an educational television station and cable television.

Hargis said a preliminary survey shows a need for a fulltime Christian television station to provide an alternative in television viewing.

The station would be owned and operated by the David Livingston Foundation, the missionary arm of the Church of the Christian Crusade, Hargis said.

Government Encourages Use Of Funds For Arts

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
CHICAGO (AP) — Eleanor Roosevelt, patron of the New Deal, would burst with pride at Chicago's community arts renaissance.

Pride in artists like Al Price, a well-traveled painter and writer who is putting Chicago's black history to canvas. Or Bill Walker, whose acrylic street scene is entitled, "No Hope With Dope."

Pride in city officials, whose cultural commitment includes hiring 108 "artists in residence," and approving the hiring of 347 persons for work in 64 non-profit art agencies.

And proud of the American taxpayer, who is paying for it all with jobs money earmarked for the long-term unemployed.

Chicago is a pacesetter in the use of federal jobs dollars to subsidize the arts. Through the $6.2 billion public service jobs program, the federal government is underwriting a coast-to-coast mobilization of an estimated 10,000 unemployed artists.

In 1938, as first lady, Mrs. Roosevelt dedicated the South Side Community Arts Center in Chicago's black community. Today it is the sole survivor of several hundred such centers created by the Depression-era Works Projects Administration.

And today, 40 years later, the center again is hiring artists with federal jobs money. This time the program is the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act rather than WPA.

The U.S. Department of Labor is encouraging the CETA art activities, and is planning a conference in May to discuss the arts with local manpower officials.

"Arts are among the first hurt by recession. Schools eliminate music and art classes. Contributions to museums dry up. The industry literally goes into depression," says Joyce Bolinger, who heads Chicago's artists-in-residence program. "CETA is helping us back up."

Since 1975, the city of Chicago has spent $7 million CETA dollars to hire 965 artists. Some $3.9 million is being spent to hire artists this year alone.

Though philosophers have long heralded the value of art for art's sake, it has never been clear just what role cultural projects should play in federal job policies.

Robert Anderson, administrator of the Labor Department's office of comprehensive employment development, notes, "The cultural activities are very visible. You never see the guys chopping ice to keep the sewers moving, but a theater group has presence."

Even so, he stresses that "the arts account for a minuscule percentage of all public service jobs," and he concedes, "cultural endeavors might be considered a frivolous luxury" by some.

CETA's public service jobs program was created as an anti-recession tool in 1975, and was expanded last year.

President Carter recently proposed a three-year CETA extension.

CETA-arts projects are not usually the "ballet and opera menu" served up at the Kennedy Center in Washington, according to Deirdre Frontczak of the National Endowment for the Arts.

The wide variety of projects receiving CETA funds include the Ballet Folklorique in Denver; the Eugene O'Neill Theater in Waterford, Conn.; the Fourth St. Gallery in Dubuque, Iowa; LaMama Theater in New York City, and a mime troupe in Laing County, Ore.

The way the CETA-arts connection generally works is for a private arts agency — the Yerkes Civic Theater, in Martinsburg, W.Va., and the Tacoma, Wash., Arts Council are two examples — to apply for CETA funds.

Some cities, Chicago and New York are examples, hire artists directly.

Even without CETA, most artists would make a living. But arts officials say that if the artists didn't have CETA jobs, they would inevitably try to find work in jobs held by others — waiting on tables, pumping gas or teaching school.

Computer Protects Patents

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Depriving lawyers around the world of fat fees for routine jobs has enabled Dr. Bernard Olcott, himself a patent lawyer and an engineer, to build a neat $10 million global business.

His firm, which operates in 125 countries, has 50 blue chip clients, mostly American but some British, German or Japanese. It has an imposing headquarters building in Weehawken, N.J. Its business volume has grown by 25 percent in most years.

Like most such modern success stories, Olcott's is based on recognition of a very special problem situation and use of the electronic computer to overcome it.

Olcott's special situation grows out of the fact that virtually every industrial country in the world except the United States and Canada puts what amounts to a head tax on patents to keep them alive. The tax can run anywhere from $25 to $3,000 a year per patent and if it isn't paid promptly the patent automatically expires and the invention or process it covers is up for grabs in that country.

"This is a lucrative racket for patent attorneys in those countries," Olcott said, "and the rules have been rigged to favor the racket. The taxes have to be paid at different dates in every country, in the country's currency and there are complicated fee schedules and filing rules."

Since many blue chip companies have hundreds of active patents filed in scores of countries, even a small error by the patent attorney in charge of watching patents can cause losses of $1 million or more, Olcott said. This, he said, long enabled foreign patent lawyers to charge highly inflated fees for very routine work in this field.

Olcott set out 15 years ago to work out a computer program that would do most of this work, keeping track of the thousands of patents registered, the dates and amounts of taxes due in various countries and other tricky details.

"I had to work up the programming myself because I couldn't raise the $200,000 it would have cost to have it done," he explained. Armed with this program, he succeeded in selling his idea to two giant firms, DuPont and Union Carbide. He began making foreign patent tax payments directly for these companies, eliminating the foreign lawyers or forcing them to slash their exorbitant fees.

"Without the muscle of these two big clients, the foreign patent lawyers would have had no trouble in burying me right at the start," Olcott told UPI. But gradually his success attracted such other clients as Exxon, Allied Chemical, GAF, Celanese, Texaco and many foreign companies.

The Olcott system not only saves legal fees but the use of his computer frees the clients' own patent lawyers of the routine headache of paying foreign patent taxes.

The $10 million business volume is the amount of patent taxes he pays yearly for his clients. He didn't disclose his share of this.

ANIMAL STUDIES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two federal agencies said Monday they will cooperate in auditing animal safety tests that commercial laboratories perform on pesticides. The Food and Drug Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency said they would work together to avoid duplication and to provide a single standard for laboratory performance.

Panama Canal Treaty Throws Senate Newcomers Into Limelight

By STEVE GERSTEL
WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Paul Hatfield of Montana was appointed to the Senate in January, there was no reason to believe that anyone would hear of him again anytime soon.

That's no knock at Hatfield. The system is such that a newcomer to the Senate usually disappears, not to surface again until he has logged an adequate amount of time to qualify for attention.

There have been exceptions, of course, but there was nothing in Hatfield's background to indicate he would skip the traces. And the former jurist probably wouldn't have except for the Panama Canal treaty.

Because of the great difficulty he had in reaching a decision — a task which also bedeviled many others — Hatfield's announcement of support on the morning of the vote assured ratification of the neutrality pact.

That earned him front-page newspaper pictures with treaty leaders Robert Byrd and Howard Baker and a recall petition back in Montana. He could have done well without the publicity as he goes after a full term this fall.

But the emotional and highly-divisive treaty has thrust some other newcomers into the limelight as well as giving new prominence and a new insight into some who have been center-stage.

In his first major test as Senate Democratic leader, Robert Byrd has emerged as a tough, pragmatic chief with an ability to give in only to the point where he has to in order to line up the votes and brutally cut down other changes.

On the opposite side of the aisle, Howard Baker of Tennessee has emerged as a riverboat gambler who, after agonizing thought, backed the treaty with changes and in the process risked the wrath of the right in the country, the state, and the Senate.

There was never any question that Byrd and Baker, because of their positions, would emerge in major roles.

Nor was there any doubt that Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, would become the acting chairman of the Foreign Relations and shepherd the treaties as they made their way through the Senate.

But there were several surprises, among them Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.

Laxalt, best known during his brief career in the Senate as Ronald Reagan's national campaign chairman in 1976, wound up as the leader of the opposition in his first major legislative effort.

Although he lost — barely — on the neutrality pact and may go down again on the Panama Canal treaty itself, Laxalt displayed a previously-undisclosed knack for floor debate, head-counting and negotiation.

And Laxalt did it in a way few ardent conservatives or ardent liberals can — civilly and without irritating the opposition.

Sarbanes, a newcomer just past his first year in the Senate, became Church's righthand, on the floor hours and days on end and, in the process, exhibited a capacity for verbal sparring and a deep knowledge of the history and legality of the treaties.

Children's Groups Sponsor Hearings

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., faced five "hearing examiners" ages 10 to 13 and confessed: he has not done enough about protection of children's rights. He intends to do more, he said.

"I come here today as a newcomer to this field," McGovern told the group recently.

He was a witness at the last of three days of hearings by children's groups into the problems of children in juvenile facilities.

The hearings were sponsored by the magazine Children's Express and were conducted for the most part by children. The hearing examiners were children, as were some of the camera operators and reporters in the audience. The sessions were held in the office of the Day Care and Child Development Council of America. McGovern looked up from his witness' seat to the five hearing examiners at a raised platform eight feet away and said, "It is ironic that in the U.S. Senate, of which I am a member, we frequently cut off money to countries that violate human rights, and continue to provide millions of dollars to institutions that continue to violate human rights of children."

He also said, "It is a tragedy that no American can live with, that there are serious human rights violations in our country, not the least of them violations of the legal, moral, and personal rights of our children."

The chief hearing examiner, Robin Moulds, 13, of New York City, asked McGovern where the fault lies.

"It is the fault of everyone from the president on down," McGovern said. "I have not done enough," he said. But he said he has supported legislation concerning juvenile justice.

He said somewhat wistfully that he had won his campaign for the presidency in 1972, his wife Eleanor intended to make the White House "a children's advocacy center." Laws should be passed to monitor treatment of children in institutions so "minimum standards of decency" are maintained, he said.

The youngsters have heard testimony from children put in solitary confinement in juvenile detention homes, for minor violations of behavior rules.

One of them, identified only as "Mary

N.," said, "I just curled up in my bed and was kind of in a stupor for a few days... When I was locked up, I fantasized about suicide all the time. I wished I could go into a coma."

McGovern said, "I cannot think of any circumstance under which a child ought to be put in solitary. I think it is a barbaric practice. Most of these children are in need of more counseling."

"It's your fault for reading me that bedtime story about Jack and Jill going up the hill for a pail of water!"

New Presidential Election Proposal Under Study

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ninety years ago, the American people went to the polls and the man who got the second largest number of votes was elected president.

This had happened before, but under circumstances that tended to take the electoral vote system off the hook. This time the system produced a clear absurdity.

In 1824, Andrew Jackson got the largest popular and electoral vote but John Quincy Adams became president — but that was a case when none of the four top candidates had an electoral college majority and the House of Representatives had to elect the president.

In 1876, Samuel Tilden led Rutherford Hayes in the popular vote but lost the presidency in a gigantic battle over the award of electoral votes that included shady dealings on both sides that got down to the last electoral vote.

So, although there also was evidence of hanky-panky in 1888, it was the election in which the system itself created a conflict as big as the White House: the loser had a big popular vote plurality but wasn't even close in the electoral vote contest.

Republican Benjamin Harrison defeated Democrat Grover Cleveland, 233 to 168 electoral votes, a clear majority and plurality of 65. But the popular vote in the same election was Cleveland 5,534,488, Harrison 5,443,892, or a 90,596 plurality for Cleveland.

Could that happen again? Easy. Had a total of 8,000 votes cast for Jimmy Carter in Ohio and Hawaii gone to Gerald Ford in 1976, Ford would have had an electoral

Oil Firm To Test Flooding Process

HOUSTON (UPI) — Continental Oil Co. has signed a nine-year, $35.5 million federal contract to test a new way of forcing more oil from established fields, it was announced Monday.

Conoco and Department of Energy officials said the chemical flooding process — which, if economical, might expand Rocky Mountain production by 1 billion barrels — will be tested in the Big Muddy Field in eastern Wyoming.

They said the test project will start soon and end in June 1987. Conoco will contribute $26 million and DOE $9 million in the project which a spokesman said likely will recover 700,000 more barrels of oil than otherwise would have been pulled from the field.

majority and Carter would have been the loser with a popular vote plurality of about two million votes.

Analysis

There are many who think the country would be in real trouble today if it elected a president without a popular vote plurality. Some question whether a president in that situation would have any leadership influence, either with Congress or the people.

So now comes a new proposal to avoid such situations. Developed by a task force supported by the Twentieth Century Fund, the plan simply would award the popular vote winner of presidential elections a "bonus" of electoral votes that would almost surely guarantee an

Funeral Costs Jobs Of Chinese Officials

HONG KONG (AP) — Several officials in a county of China's Anhwei Province have been fired for holding an elaborate, five-day funeral for an official who supported the discredited "Gang of Four" radical leaders of the Chinese Communist Party, the local Hefei Radio reports.

The broadcast said the officials also allowed 7,000 yuan, or about $4,200, to be spent on medical treatment, travel and other expenses for the official, Wang Chin-po, who was a deputy party secretary in Kuoyang County. He died in November.

electoral majority.

The bonus idea came from historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a task force member, who was looking for a compromise between those who think presidential elections should be decided by the popular vote and nothing else and those who want to retain the present system, which reflects the balance between state sovereignty and the popular will inherent in the makeup of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives. Under the task force plan, there would be a "pool" of 102 electoral votes — two per state plus the District of Columbia — that would go to the popular vote winner.

Maryland has about 150 species of trees, including black and white oak, beech, poplar, locust, hickory, ash, gum, spruce, hemlock and dogwood.

Had it been in effect in 1876 and 1888, both Tilden and Cleveland would have been elected, but it still would not have given Jackson an electoral majority in 1824.

The task force solution for that situation is a runoff election between the two top vote getters within 30 days, thus eliminating an election in the House which might completely flout the will of the public.

Ex-Workers Monitored In Program

TYLER (UPI) — A program sponsored by the National Cancer Institute and the Texas Chest Foundation is being operated for 1,000 former employees of the Tyler asbestos plant who may carry the internal scars of 18 years' neglect.

The Pittsburg Plate Glass-Corning Plant where project officials say the workers breathed noxious asbestos dust has been closed for six years.

The plant owners, and the U.S. government, agreed to settle a $100 million lawsuit by paying 445 workers — or their survivors — $20 million out of court. But the Tyler Asbestos Workers Program is still monitoring the largely invisible mutations from the asbestos, looking for early signs of cancer and other diseases the dust is known to cause.

"Approximately 1,000 former workers have been identified as a high risk group due to their industrial asbestos exposure," said program director Dr. Charles Spivey. "When combined with smoking habits, their risk of developing lung problems is increased."

Health problems the program is looking for include lung cancer, asbestosis, mesothelioma — all lung diseases — and gastrointestinal malignancies. In their suit, the workers claimed they were never warned of the dangers in handling asbestos.

The program involves medical surveillance of the 1,089 people known to have worked at the plant between 1954 and 1972. Because many of the potential ailments "may not be evident in some individuals until 10 to 20 years after initial exposure," Spivey said, each worker is offered a complete examination — including lab tests — every six months at the program's clinic on the grounds of the University of Texas health center at Tyler.

In addition to physicians and nurses, the program's staff includes caseworkers to keep up with the clients, some 20 percent of whom now live outside the Tyler area. For these people the program offers biannual screening clinics at Dallas, Houston, Longview, Mineola and Huntsville.

Of the 1,089 workers exposed to the asbestos dust, the program has not examined about 300, according to the program's statistics. Of these, 162 are considered "lost to follow-up." These are people on whom the program has no current address and has been unable to trace.

"The entire staff is actively concerned with locating and examining all former asbestos workers so medical intervention can be made before a possible disease process begins," said Dr. George Hurst, director of the Tyler health center and the program's principal investigator.

One of the biggest hazards the program deals with is asbestosis, an irritation of lung tissue that leads to a thickening of the lung walls. Hurst said the main problem with asbestosis is that it can worsen even after the worker ceases to be exposed to asbestos, but the symptoms are not evident until several years after the disease begins to develop.

"Though in many instances asbestosis will progress even after cessation of exposure, there is some evidence that very early detection may prevent progression to a serious stage," Hurst said. "Early detection of the disease is, therefore, of great importance."

While most of the damage already has been done, the program's staff includes medical education personnel to advise former workers of measures they can take to decrease their chances of becoming seriously ill.

The most obvious step workers can take to increase the odds in their favor, Hurst said, is to stop smoking. Hurst said research indicates former asbestos workers who smoke are running 92 times the risk of contracting lung cancer than people who have neither smoked nor handled asbestos.

"This research points to the need to encourage former asbestos workers to stop smoking," Hurst said. "Quitting smoking is one of the few preventive measures these workers can pursue to reduce incidence of lung cancer and other pulmonary diseases."

Historic Hotel To Be Changed To Apartments

HOUSTON (AP) — The historic downtown Rice Hotel will be converted to luxury apartments, office and retail space by the spring of 1979.

New owners have estimated the cost of the conversion would be about $10 million.

Lance Funston, president of Portfolio Management of Texas, Inc., also said an application has been filed with the Department of Interior to have the 18-story, 800-room structure included in the National Register of Historic Places.

Acceptance for listing in the register could mean federal grants up to half the cost of purchasing and restoring the property. Funston said his firm acquired the hotel building from Rice Preservation Corp. and the land on which it located from Rice University in a $3 million transaction concluded Friday.

Rice Preservation Corp. bought the building and its furnishings for $542,962 in a foreclosure sale last September after attempts to operate the facility as a hotel proved unsuccessful.

Funston's firm, which specializes in restoration and management, also acquired the University's 99-year lease on the five-story Rice Hotel Garage.

"We feel this is essential to the Rice's long-term preservation, Funston said in announcing plans for applying for its recognition of the structure as a national historic place.

House Demos Back Tax Shift Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Democratic Caucus today endorsed a cut in Social Security taxes and voted to use income taxes and other general revenues to help finance Social Security.

The vote by members of the party that has nearly a 2-to-1 majority in the House was 150 to 57.

The non-binding resolution adopted by the Democratic caucus does not endorse any particular amount of general treasury funds to be used for Social Security, which now is financed by payroll taxes equally levied on employers and employees.

The resolution neither specified how much Social Security taxes should be cut nor whether the taxes should be cut more or less than the tax increases voted by Congress last year, when the lawmakers adopted a plan to bolster the sagging finances of the system with tax hikes of $227 billion over 10 years, beginning in 1979.

The caucus resolution favors "use of general revenue funds, with appropriate reductions in Social Security payroll taxes" and asks the Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee to prepare legislation for this purpose as soon as possible.

The House Budget Committee Tuesday voted to make room in the tentative budget for a $7.5 billion reduction in Social Security taxes during the year beginning Oct. 1.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told the caucus today it would be "not only a mistake, but a disastrous mistake" to simply divert general treasury funds to the Social Security system.

But, as the debate made it evident the resolution would carry, Ullman indicated he might not oppose taking some elements of the present system, probably Medicare hospitalization and disability insurance, out of general Social Security and financing these from general treasury revenues.

The committee is scheduled to consider Social Security legislation in the next few weeks.

As the House Democrats were debating the question, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal urged Congress not to change Social Security taxes this year.

"Having developed — after careful study and long deliberation — a system of contributions adequate to meet the needs of this and future generations of retirees, it would in our judgment be unwise to undo this progress by hasty action," Blumenthal told the Senate Finance Subcommittee on Social Security.

"We do not believe that there is any urgent need in view of the president's (income) tax-cut proposals that this be done this year," the secretary said.

Blumenthal's position has the backing of Sen. Russell B. Long, chairman of the Finance Committee, and of its senior Republican, Sen. Carl T. Curtis. But Sen. Gaylord Nelson, who heads the Social Security subcommittee, is leading the charge for a rollback.

Long also appeared to be dead-set against using income-tax revenues for Social Security. "If we can't raise the taxes to meet the program's costs, then our only real alternative is to find a way to reduce Social Security benefits, the Louisiana Democrat said.

Blumenthal refused to rule out the possibility that the Carter administration might support using revenues from its proposed crude-oil tax to finance a cut in Social Security taxes. But he declined to endorse the idea.

In the House caucus, which did not address the crude-oil tax issue, Rep. James A. Burke, D-Mass., argued that the burden of increased Social Security taxes would make U.S. industry even less competitive in international markets. He said the average tax on a steel worker, matched by his employer, is $1,500 a year more than in competing countries. He said the difference in the case of automobile workers ranges around $1,100.

"The whole issue in this country today is jobs, jobs, jobs," Burke said. Congress has been under heavy pressure to take some of the sting out of payroll tax increases it approved last December.

However, opponents of the resolution argued that the pressure is coming almost entirely from persons in higher earnings brackets since the steepest increases on employees would be brought about by raising the wage base on which a Social Security tax is levied.

The Budget Committee on Tuesday followed the recommendation of Chairman Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., to approve a Social Security tax reduction as part of an over-all $20 billion tax cut.

Cage Coach Resigns At Coronado High

Jimmy Fullerton, the only head basketball coach in Coronado High School's history to have won a district championship, resigned his coaching duties this morning, Lubbock Athletic Director Pete Ragus announced.

Fullerton, who was head basketball coach at Evans Junior High for four years and assistant coach at Coronado for four years before taking his present position, will remain a teacher in the Lubbock ISD and will seek an administrative position within the system, Ragus indicated.

In three years under his direction, the Mustangs compiled a 45-46 record. His first year at the school Coronado finished 25-8, winning the second round of 4-A AAAA play with a perfect 4-0 mark and then beating Plainview 59-53 in a district playoff.

The Mustangs nipped Pampa 59-56 in overtime in bi-district, but lost 75-72 to Wichita Falls in the opening round of the regional tournament.

The following year Coronado dipped to a 10-20 mark and finished 2-6 in league play. During the 1977-78 season the Mustangs went 10-18 and were 2-2 in each half of district play.

Ragus said he is now taking applications to fill Fullerton's position. Coronado also has a new head football coach in Jack Quarles, who replaced Don King.

Grand Jury Acts In Murder Cases on the parking lot of the Cotton Club on U.S. 84.

Witness accounts indicated the victim and other men had been arguing periodically through the night at the club, where a birthday party for a 15-year-old girl was in progress.

Investigators arrived to find Mata, of 2003 E. 47th St., lying dead on the south end of the lot. A witness said Mata was attempting to run when he was shot down.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalock said it appeared the victim had been shot more than once.

Also indicted today for alleged murder was Ida Mae Johnson, 41, of 1618 Ave. C, Apt. 64. She is accused of the shooting death of her husband Dennis Johnson, 50, of the same address.

Johnson was killed at approximately 9 a.m. March 27 in an apartment at 1709 Ave. C. Reports indicated the victim had been shot in the chest.

Police arrested Mrs. Johnson at a nearby residence.

A car-bicycle collision resulted in an involuntary manslaughter indictment against a 25-year-old Lubbock woman.

Named in that indictment was Janice Kay Williams of 3205 56th St.

The March 25 mishap killed Mackey Avington Paxton, 24, who was operating the bicycle near the intersection of North U.S. 87 and Yucca Avenue.

A charge filed against Miss Williams alleged she caused Paxton's death "by accident and mistake when operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated."

A witness said Miss Williams' auto was traveling north on U.S. 87 when it failed to negotiate a curve. According to reports, Paxton was riding the bicycle approximately three feet west of the east curb line.

The victim, of 302 E. Purdue St., Space 76, reportedly was found lying face down in a ditch about 75 feet from the point of impact.

Escape and robbery indictments were returned against Juan Jose Flores, 17, of Bowie.

Flores is accused of robbing a convenience store at 2025 Clovis Road March 24, then breaking and running from a police officer who reportedly stopped him.

Treasury Eyes Dollar Coin

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A new dollar coin, smaller than a 50-cent piece, may be jingling in pockets by mid-1979, says the director of the U.S. Mint.

The U.S. Treasury Department has been studying the new coin, Stella B. Hackel said Saturday. She said legislation is expected to be introduced by June and if it passes, the Mint would produce 100 million coins a month, distributing them as soon as 500 million were minted.

The new coin probably would have a core of copper sandwiched between a copper-nickel alloy, she said, and would be about 10 percent larger than a quarter but weigh twice as much.

mother's family.

She added that her husband seemed to have adjusted rather well to the fact they were expecting triplets after the obstetrician had informed them of the possibility. Mrs. Best said they had hoped to have both boys and girls in the triplet set, but that they were satisfied with all boys.

She added that the main thing now is the fact that the boys are here and are healthy babies.

The Coahoma resident said both maternal and paternal grandmothers, as well as several aunts, live close to the couple so she would have help later on after the babies come home from the hospital.

Carter To Delay Action On Jets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has decided to delay submission of its controversial $4.3 billion Middle East arms package to Congress until the Senate takes final action on the Panama Canal treaties in about two weeks.

The move, disclosed today, would give opponents of the Mideast arms deals more time to try to block warplane sales to Saudi Arabia and Egypt. But it might also help the administration in the long run.

The delay reflects consideration for senators who have not yet made up their minds on the arms package and want the canal treaty settled first before turning attention to the question of Mideast arms.

Once the arms package is formally submitted, Congress has 30 days to exercise a veto. Unless a majority of both the House and Senate register their opposition within that time, the deals automatically go through.

Criticism has centered mostly on the proposed sale of 60 F-15 jet fighter bombers to Saudi Arabia. Backers of Israel are concerned that the planes would be used against the Jewish state in a future Mideast war. Other opponents base their objections on the proliferation of sophisticated weapons in an unstable region.

There is opposition, too, to the administration's plan to sell 50 F-5E fighters to Egypt, the first major arms shipment to that country by the United States. The package also includes 15 F-15s and 75 F-16 jet fighters for Israel.

Administration officials have warned that the Israeli arms would be withdrawn if efforts are made to scuttle the Arab sales.

The original administration strategy called for submitting the arms package to Congress once it returned from Easter recess. That was on Monday.

Now, officials said, the package will be held up until the Senate completes its consideration of the treaty to implement transfer of the Panama Canal to Panama by the year 2000. That is now scheduled for April 26.

Afterward, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is prepared to testify before Senate and House committees, on request.

In light of the arms controversy, such a request is thought inevitable.

In an earlier round of hearings, Vance politely turned down requests for delay, saying the Middle East countries were eager to have the sales completed.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a key member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had urged the administration to give Congress more time. He said the Senate would be preoccupied with the Panama Canal treaty and he hoped Congress would not have to "rush to judgment."

The decision to delay submission at least until April 26 seems designed to meet that request. But it also will give opponents additional time to map strategy against the Arab sales.

Gulf Crash Kills Three

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A helicopter carrying six persons to an offshore oil drilling vessel hit the water and flipped over in the Gulf of Mexico today, killing three oil workers who were trapped inside, the Coast Guard said.

The pilot and co-pilot and one of four oil workers managed to escape from the helicopter and were rescued. They suffered minor injuries, authorities said.

Divers found three bodies trapped within the craft, which was held on the surface by an automatic flotation device.

Names of the victims were not immediately released.

The helicopter, owned by Air Logistics of Sabine, Texas, crashed about 60 miles southeast of Galveston.

Coast Guard Chief Bob Baeten said the helicopter was approaching drilling vessel Java C for a landing when it hit the water shortly after midnight.

"It apparently just missed the ship," Baeten said.

Sadat Lauds U.S. Views

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat declared today that Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman is welcome in Cairo, but that Prime Minister Menachem Begin "should be more flexible" in Mideast peace negotiations.

Sadat also said he was satisfied with U.S. participation in Middle East diplomacy.

"President Carter really has taken his share," Sadat said. "The American role is very important because America and President Carter are no more mediators, he is a full partner. He has agreed on this conception and for me this is very satisfying."

The Egyptian leader spoke to an international group of journalists and academics in Cairo for a conference on news exchanges with the Third World.

an airport parking lot expansion project. According to state law, voter approval is not needed before the sale of revenue bonds.

The council decided last December to finance the $2.4 million parking lot expansion in part with $1.7 million in bonds. In addition, $700,000 from the airport's capital improvements tax fund reserve will be spent.

The fund money has been accumulated since 1973 to pay for most overruns in airport and Memorial Civic Center construction projects.

It is formally called the general tax fund reserve and was marked as a line item in the budget. The city council discontinued its growth during last year's budget session.

According to plans, the airport parking lot will be expanded to include a double-tiered section at the east end of the lot. By 1984, the city plans to have about 2,150 parking spaces available at the airport.

An unpredicted doubling of airline boardings during the past year has prompted the short-term expansion project because of space shortages.

Additions To School Plan Set newly elected Mrs. Ervin.

The two new trustees were administered their oath of office by 137th District Judge Robert C. Wright.

Departing school trustees Joan Ervin and Bob McKelvy were honored with plaques for their service to the school system and especially the youth of Lubbock. Mrs. Ervin, incumbent board secretary, and McKelvy, board vice president, had each served eight years as trustees.

Mrs. Ervin, the first black elected to the board, was defeated in her bid for reelection by Mrs. Stafford. McKelvy had not sought another term.

Waters told Mrs. Ervin, "You have been diligent and hardworking, and certainly you have been faithful to this board."

He noted that McKelvy has been a "steady, cool hand — dependable and reliable." Waters said both departing trustees will be missed.

The board canvassed results of Saturday's election and made a few changes in the figures reported as unofficial returns.

Total number of votes cast in the school board election was 17,317 — a record, about 1,000 votes more than the 1976 race.

In Place 1, Mrs. Stafford received 7,959 votes; Mrs. Ervin, 4,248; Bill Warren, 3,605; and John Ray Jr., 992.

In Place 2, Crawford got 7,149 votes; Claude Dollins, 3,964; Donna Muldrew, 2,566; Edith O'Brien, 2,435; and Robert Lowery, 624.

In the reorganization of the board, trustees picked Waters as board president, Monte Hasse as vice president and Jose Ramirez as board secretary.

The board today also changed May 26 from a teacher in-service workday to a class day. That change was needed to make up the unscheduled Feb. 17 holiday due to a snow storm.

Instead of getting out on May 25 as originally planned, students' last day of class will be Friday, May 26.

with blowing dust from the storm, the sheriff said.

Aerial rain reports include traces also at Brownfield, Dimmitt, Floydada, Leveland, Matador, Plainview and Tulia, 10 inch at Post, .08 at Seminole, .22 at Silverton and .39 at Lamesa.

Lubbock had less than a trace.

Weathermen listed a 20-percent chance of more rain today in the Lubbock vicinity.

Temperatures in the middle 80s today and the lower 50s tonight are predicted. Thursday's high should be near 80.

Winds will be westerly at 10 to 15 miles an hour, and partly cloudy skies today over Lubbock and the South Plains are expected to clear and become fair Thursday.

Wind warnings are out for area lakes.

The agricultural forecast says the rain, if it comes, will be from widely scattered thunderstorms over mainly the eastern counties of the South Plains today and that rainfall will be generally less than a quarter-inch with isolated totals of more than an inch a possibility.

Low clouds drifted north from the Gulf of Mexico during the night and covered most of central and East Texas at daybreak.

Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 60s with extremes ranging from 55 at Dalhart in the High Plains of the Panhandle to 74 at Brownsville.

In Colorado, travelers were warned of heavy snow and blowing snow in the western portion of the state today, especially in mountain areas.

QUEEN ELIZABETH PRINCESS MARGARET LLEWELLYN

Queen Orders End To Romance

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II reportedly has given her younger sister, Princess Margaret, a royal ultimatum: end her relationship with brewery heir and aspiring nightclub singer Roddy Llewellyn or withdraw from public life. Buckingham Palace declined comment on the front-page report today by the Sun newspaper.

"I wouldn't dream of contacting the royal family about private conversations," a palace spokesman said.

The Sun, quoting "a close friend of the royal family," said the queen was "deeply upset" by criticism of the royal family because of the 47-year-old Margaret's friendship with Llewellyn, 17 years her junior.

The unidentified royal confidant was quoted as saying, "The princess is being forced to choose where her first loyalty lies. It's sad but inevitable."

The report came one day after royal spokesmen announced the princess had the flu and had canceled public engagements.

Margaret was still bed-ridden Wednesday in Windsor Castle west of London. A medical bulletin Tuesday said "her condition is improving."

Llewellyn, a socialite who once described himself as "unemployable," has been Margaret's frequent companion since her legal separation from Lord Snowdon — society photographer Anthony Armstrong-Jones — two years ago. They were married in 1960 and have two children who live with their mother.

Mrs. Humphrey To Reveal Plans

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Will she or won't she run? That's the question Sen. Muriel Humphrey says she will answer Saturday at the annual Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party's dinner.

The dinner is being dedicated to her late husband, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who died of cancer Jan. 13. The affair also will serve as a forum for the widow to announce whether she will be a candidate in a November election to fill the remaining four years of his term.

State law requires that a special election be held in November to decide who will fill the term.

Mrs. Humphrey was appointed to husband's post through 1978.

Morris Udall Hospitalized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Morris K. Udall is reported in good condition at Bethesda Naval Hospital after undergoing emergency surgery for a ruptured appendix.

A Navy surgeon performed the 40-minute operation after the 55-year-old Arizona Democrat congressman was admitted to the hospital earlier Tuesday suffering severe stomach pain.

Udall, who challenged Jimmy Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, may remain hospitalized for about a week.

Hank Williams Movie Planned

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Warner Bros. will begin production this summer on a movie about the late country music singer Hank Williams, a family member says.

His son, Hank Williams Jr., also a country music singer, revealed the movie plans Tuesday at the opening of a museum honoring his father on Nashville's Music Row.

The museum has Williams' costumes, musical instruments, papers, and other memorabilia.

He was best known for "Your Cheatin' Heart," "Lovesick Blues," "Kaw-Liga" and "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry."

The singer, who died in 1953, was the subject of another movie, a 1964 production, "Your Cheatin' Heart."

Mark Phillips' Horses Injured

BADMINTON, England (AP) — A horse that went lame may have cost Capt. Mark Phillips a chance for a fourth title at the Badminton Horse Trials.

The husband of Princess Anne may also have lost a chance to represent England in the World Championships at Lexington, Ky., in September. The British team will be chosen next week on the basis of the Badminton competition.

Phillips' first ride, Persian Holiday, went out with a damaged hoof Tuesday, and his second ride, George, also was idled by injury. Phillips was the Badminton winner in 1971, 1972 and 1973.

Lance Denies Magazine Report

ATLANTA (AP) — Former budget director Bert Lance says a Time magazine report that claimed a Carter aide called him an embarrassment to the Carter administration was "a complete fabrication."

Also denying the account was a secretary to presidential aide Hamilton Jordan, who Time said told Lance in the White House two weeks ago that Lance "should keep as much distance as possible between himself and the president."

Time said the exchange took place when Lance turned in his diplomatic passport. He resigned last summer under criticism over business practices.

The Atlanta Constitution on Tuesday quoted Jordan's personal secretary, Eleanor Connors, as saying the meeting couldn't have taken place. She said Jordan was in Florida at the time.

Lance, who commented on the report during a Washington speaking engagement, said, "You should invite me back in a year or so, and I can tell you what really went on about the passport."

NEW CHIEFS — President Carter has named Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, left, to become chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Jones is currently Air Force chief of staff. Gen. Lew Allen Jr., Air Force vice chief of staff, center, was named to become Air Force chief of staff, and Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, now commander of the Pacific fleet, to be chief of naval operations. Carter Selects Military Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has chosen senior officers with management and educational backgrounds for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the nation's highest ranking military council.

With three of five terms running out in late June and July, Carter has the opportunity to make the first broad changes in the Joint Chiefs since 1974. Pentagon sources said Tuesday night that he has tapped Gen. David C. Jones to be the next chairman.

They said that Jones, 56, a native of Aberdeen, S.D., will replace Gen. George S. Brown, who is due to retire July 1. That is the same day on which Jones' 4-year tour as Air Force Chief of Staff ends.

Jones has been serving as acting chairman of the joint chiefs since late February, when it was found that Brown had prostate cancer. Defense sources say Brown is undergoing radiation treatment.

and it is doubtful that he will return to his Pentagon office before retiring.

Under Jones' leadership, the Air Force has managed its tight money resources and weapons projects in a manner that apparently pleased Defense Secretary Harold Brown and the president.

To head the Navy, Carter selected Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, now commander of the U.S. Pacific fleet, Hayward, a combat pilot in the Korean War and who later commanded carrier units, won attention in the early 1970s as the Navy's senior planning and budgeting official.

A 53-year-old native of Glendale, Calif., Hayward will succeed Adm. James Holway, whose term expires June 29.

Gen. Lew Allan Jr., picked to succeed Jones as Air Force Chief of Staff, is a 32-year veteran whose background is nuclear physics and weapons science.

Allan, 52, who holds a doctorate in physics, moved up to Air Force vice chief only five days ago.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, a former Rhodes scholar, remains as Army Chief of Staff. He had been favored by many senior defense officials to become chairman of the joint chiefs, but there were indications he preferred to finish out the last 2½ years of his term as Army chief.

The fifth member of the Joint Chiefs is Gen. Louis Wilson, who has about 15 months remaining of his term as Marine Corp Commandant.

Under Jones' leadership, the Air Force has managed its tight money resources and weapons projects in a manner that apparently pleased Defense Secretary Harold Brown and the president.

To head the Navy, Carter selected Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, now commander of the U.S. Pacific fleet, Hayward, a combat pilot in the Korean War and who later commanded carrier units, won attention in the early 1970s as the Navy's senior planning and budgeting official.

A 53-year-old native of Glendale, Calif., Hayward will succeed Adm. James Holway, whose term expires June 29.

Gen. Lew Allan Jr., picked to succeed Jones as Air Force Chief of Staff, is a 32-year veteran whose background is nuclear physics and weapons science.

Allan, 52, who holds a doctorate in physics, moved up to Air Force vice chief only five days ago.

Gen. Bernard Rogers, a former Rhodes scholar, remains as Army Chief of Staff. He had been favored by many senior defense officials to become chairman of the joint chiefs, but there were indications he preferred to finish out the last 2½ years of his term as Army chief.

The fifth member of the Joint Chiefs is Gen. Louis Wilson, who has about 15 months remaining of his term as Marine Corp Commandant.

Drugs, Alcohol Interact

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
 DEAR DR. LAMB — I was happy to see your article on Librium and alcohol, but you did not go far enough. The two combined can make even a person who loves life become suicidal. Librium is used extensively in treating alcoholics.

Several years ago I had a nervous breakdown. My family and doctor put me in the hospital. All patients, most of whom were alcoholics, were put on Librium.

After a month I was released, with no instructions on continued treatment or warnings about Librium. My family doctor knew little of psychiatry and on identifying my capsules gave me a prescription to continue them. I drink socially, but am not an alcoholic.

It was not until several years later and several attempts at suicide, including brushes with the law and commitment to a state institution, that I learned what Librium and alcohol would do.

The law should require any doctor to explain fully the effects of any drug given to a patient.

DEAR READER — Librium is one of many tranquilizers used mostly to eliminate anxiety. Yes, it is used extensively to relieve the anxiety state that so often accompanies the withdrawal from alcohol in the treatment of alcoholics. It is useful in relieving anxiety from any cause — not just from withdrawal from alcohol.

Alcohol is a nervous system depressant and can even be used as an anesthetic. As such it is good in combination with any tranquilizer or sedative and in many cases interactions do occur. Alcohol has important interactions with many other medicines as well; using it can be a factor in the success or failure of even the complications of a medical treatment prescribed by your doctor.

I do think that doctors need to be more aware of the interactions of a long list of medicines and alcohol. Patients also should be aware that alcohol should be avoided when taking any medicines unless the doctor has specifically told them the alcohol will not matter in their particular case.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-4, Alcohol, Whiskey, Gin, Vodka, Rum, Wine, Beer, to give you more information on the effects alcohol can have on the body. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Your point is that a patient should be informed about the medicines he takes just as he must give an informed consent for an operation and I agree with you for the most part.

There are some obstacles. Many patients do not have the technical background to properly evaluate a lot of information about medicines. Almost every medicine has a list as long as your arm of complications that can occur. If you are looking for a medicine that causes no side effects you will have to stay with water — and that would have to be distilled.

Tape-recorded interviews have proven that patients have enough trouble already just remembering or understanding the more simple instructions the doctor gives.

Traffic Chief Announces Resignation

By CARRIE LINE CURTIS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

During a fiery meeting Tuesday with residents of the Tech Terrace Park area, Paul Mills, chairman of the Citizens Traffic Commission, announced his resignation, saying the duties of the job had become too much of an emotional strain. Mills said he took a letter of resignation to the mayor's office after the meeting. He added that he felt he was putting too much pressure on himself serving on the commission and as its chairman following an illness.

He had completed one year as chairman of the commission and recently was re-elected to serve another year as head of the group.

The commission voted to continue discussion of the Tech Terrace problem at a special meeting at noon Monday in the city manager's conference room at City Hall.

The Tech Terrace residents had demanded that the commission provide relief from what they say is dangerous traffic congestion around a city park located at Flint Avenue and 24th Street—an area that fronts many of their homes.

Commission members told the group a decision will be made next week and a recommendation forwarded to the city council for its meeting April 13.

In addition to further discussion Monday of the Tech Terrace problem, commission members will consider a request by Western Hills Baptist Academy for a four-way stop at 55th Street and Wayne Avenue, appointment of a committee to study median cuts on 50th Street, traffic law enforcement and safety for children during the summer months.

Mills told The Avalanche-Journal his decision to resign had nothing to do with the Tech Terrace problems.

In other action during the meeting Tuesday, commission members recommended the city council approve a request for one-hour parking on the west side of Vicksburg Avenue opposite Coronado High School.

H.W. "Buzz" Bourgeois requested the parking limit. He added that recent barricades erected on the west side of Vicksburg Avenue have alleviated the traffic congestion around Coronado High School during peak traffic periods. He said that there is one-hour parking along the east side of Vicksburg Avenue alongside Coronado High School.

Bourgeois is building an apartment complex on the west side of Vicksburg Avenue across from Coronado High School.

The group also voted to recommend measures to ensure the safety of children attending Nat Williams Elementary School on 58th Street and Utica Avenue.

The group voted to designate school zones on Utica Avenue with 20 mph speed signs and a flashing yellow signal. Signs also were recommended setting the speed limit at 20 mph on 58th Street near the elementary school.

Jury Acquits Don Trull

TYLER (AP) — It took weary jurors more than 18 hours and one stern admonishment from State District Judge Gleim Phillips to acquit businessman Don Trull of aggravated kidnapping charges stemming from an Aug. 9, 1977 incident.

The jurors returned the innocent verdict Tuesday night after two days of numbing deliberations.

Trull, who claimed he held a man hostage to recover $1.5 million he lost in deals involving paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes, took the news dry-eyed and without emotion.

"I was just thinking about winning, that we were going to win," Trull said later.

Asked if he expected the verdict, he said, "Yes sir, I sure did."

"The jury heard all the evidence available and determined it did not convict beyond a reasonable doubt," said Smith County District Attorney A.D. Clark III. "By golly, I have no quarrel with the jury's verdict."

"You might say that we had great confidence in the jury," said defense attorney G. Brockett Irwin. "We felt, regardless of the verdict, that they had given the case full, fair and impartial consideration."

Jury foreman Hilmar Kuhlman declined to talk to newsmen about the verdict. "We don't have any comments. We're just tired and we want to go home," he said.

Phillips had sternly admonished the deadlocked jurors earlier in the evening to press for a verdict.

"Some jury, sometime, will have to try this case," Phillips told the jurors. "You are that jury and it seems to me that you should make every effort to reach a unanimous verdict."

Trull, 40, was charged with dousing the Tyler office of millionaire Billy Pyron with gasoline, taking Bill May, a Pyron employee, hostage and threatening to ignite the office during a four-hour standoff with police.

Trull claimed during and after the standoff that Pyron and Estes hoodwinked him out of $1.5 million in a series of complicated business transactions.

The jury has sent out more than a dozen notes, requesting evidence and testimony from the week-long trial that was highlighted by a courtroom appearance by Estes and numerous allegations of perjury and shady business deals.

The panelists spent three hours in the courtroom Tuesday morning, listening to tapes of May's testimony about the incident. Irwin later said that was a pivotal point in the deliberations.

The jurors began deliberations about 1:30 p.m. Monday and continued until midnight, taking only a dinner break. Phillips ordered the jurors sequestered at midnight Monday. Deliberations began again at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Phillips did not allow the jury last week to hear testimony by Pyron and Estes about alleged business transactions with Trull, ruling that it was not relevant to the kidnapping charge.

Many of the sessions out of the jury's earshot were heated. At one point, attorneys for both sides accused the other's witnesses of lying under oath.

Documents Trull took from the Abilene office he shared with Estes in 1976 have sparked state and federal investigations into Estes' alleged recent business activities in violation of his strict parole.

Estes was paroled in 1971 after serving six years of a 15-year federal prison sentence for his multi-million dollar swindle. During Monday's closing arguments,

Chutes Open For Rodeo Tonight

Top notch arena action, outstanding country and western entertainment and the unpredictability of a jackrabbit roundup are on tap for the kickoff of the 36th annual ABC Rodeo at 7:30 p.m. today in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Cowboys and cowgirls from all over the nation will be tackling tough rodeo stock and the clock, vying for a slice of the prize money pie to be carved up at the Saturday finale.

Jody Miller, rodeo queen turned singing star supreme, will be stepping into the entertainment spotlight for some fan-pleasing music which already has won her the coveted Grammy award.

All the traditional rodeo events—bull-riding, saddle bronc, bareback bronc, calf roping, steer wrestling and barrel racing—will unwind nightly with champions decided Saturday.

Jackrabbits fresh from the West Texas range will be making things lively for Lubbock service club teams trying to win a $500 donation to the Lubbock Boys Club in their club's name. Night winners will be scrambling again at the final rabbit roundup Saturday.

Rodeo fever hit the Lubbock scene at 3:30 p.m. today with the traditional rodeo parade out Broadway.

Col. Charles Bishop, commander of Reese Air Force Base, was parade marshal, heading up the cavalcade of riding groups, beauties and officials of the American Business Club which sponsors the rodeo to benefit the building fund of Lubbock Boys Club.

ABC Rodeo queen Lesli Griffin paired off with the Red Raider from Texas Tech, Larry Cade, for her journey down the parade route.

Other beauties making the route by horseback were royalty of the American Association of Sheriffs Poses and Riding Clubs — national queen, Renee Crisp of San Angelo; Region 1 princess, Becky Albers of Abernathy; and District 1 queen, Julie Johnson of Lubbock.

National AASP&RC president Garland Hargis of Fort Worth and Region 1 vice president Sybil Leftwich accompanied them.

Also parading were FFA princess Aricka Speer, 4-H Club princess Cindy Sageser and Pioneer 4-H Club queen Karen Cain.

Riding clubs include San Angelo Saddle Club, Lubbock Saddle Club, Lamb County Sheriff's Posse, Abernathy Riding Club, Floydada Riding Club, Lubbock Rangers Junior Riding Club, Terry County Sheriff's Posse, Scurry County

Junior Sheriff's Posse and Scurry County Sheriff's Posse and Cal Farley's Boys Ranch.

Spicing up the parade were the Khiva Motor Patrol, Khiva Lubbock Klowns and Khiva Kart Patrol along with rodeo clowns Rick Young and Bunky Boger.

Other groups riding out Broadway were the girls state AA basketball champions of Slaton High School, the adventure group of Campfire Girls, Tri-County Cinderella pageant winners, Ridge Range backboard and stock producer Jiggs Beutler.

Representing the American Business Club was rodeo chairman Charles Lee and club president Joe Ince.

The 1978 edition of ABC rodeo will be dedicated to the late Jack Harmon, amateur rodeo performer and longtime ABC Rodeo booster who designed and built the chutes used in the coliseum for ABC and Texas Tech rodeo action.

A special salute this year goes to Paul Willis, a charter member of the Downtown ABC club, who has been president of the club, rodeo chairman several years, president of the Big Hat Club and a lifetime member of the American Business Club.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

It sounds incredible, but there are 30 million Americans who can't get to sleep at night.

They toss, turn, grind their teeth and room around the house fixing drinks, reading books, staring at test patterns on TV and popping pills.

Since the pursuit of sleep has become a real science (there are sleep clinics and even sleep foods) I can no longer remain silent and must speak out. If it helps one man or one woman, I'll feel rewarded.

I am married to the legend of Sleepy Hollow...a man who can fall asleep in the middle of a tax audit. It therefore falls to me as a duty to share with you some of his rules for falling asleep.

1. Stay dressed and upright. One cannot fall asleep in a pair of loose pajamas stretched out on a clean bed with the lights off. My husband's best sleep comes following a large meal when he is propped up in a recliner chair in a vest with the television blaring.

2. Napping aids sleep. No one likes to go to bed tired. I have observed that he naps best through sports events. For some unexplained reason, he wakes up (a) when the score is given and (b) when you think he is asleep and switch the channel to a Doris Day movie.

3. Children aid sleep in the male species. Some men have been known to sleep all through their children's formative years. I have discovered there is nothing to cure a case of insomnia like the voice of a child in the night whining, "I'm thirsty," "I have to potty," "I feel sick."

4. If your husband has trouble nodding off, take him to a social event — a concert, an opera, a school play, or a cocktail party. I have had my husband sack out in a roomful of 200 people in party hats singing, "Hello Dolly." When I pointed out that he snored offkey, he said, "I was not asleep. I was just resting my eyes." (Some men have only to look at a tuxedo and it's like a sedative.)

5. Naturally, everyone doesn't have access to all the sleep-inducing materials at my house, but the other night my mother observed my husband in a chair fast asleep over a book. "Look at him," she smiled. "It's nice to see a man who can relax with a book over his chest."

That's easy for Mother to say. She didn't write the book.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a husband to SHUT UP? After 40 years of marriage, I have heard everything he has to say at least 15,000 times. I know all his war stories by heart, also his "raised-on-a-farm" routine, and his cures for all the ills of the world. I have had it up to here with his loud, long-winded monologues on politics, religion, business — you name it, he's an authority on the subject.

He demands absolute silence when he's watching a ball game on television, but he thinks nothing of turning the set off in the middle of something I'm watching if he wants to say something.

We have lost most of our friends because of his know-it-all attitude. Who wants to be around someone who talks all the time and never listens? I've listened to him for 40 years and I'm sick of it.

I've read your column for years. So has my husband. He loves your humor. Maybe with humor you can offer a solution to my problem. Thanks for trying. And please don't send any letters to the house. My husband doesn't believe in privacy — except for himself.

HAD IT

Dear Had It: It will take more than "humor" to solve a problem that's been building up for 40 years. Obviously, to improve an ailing marriage both parties must be willing to try. Professional counseling might help. If your husband refuses to cooperate, you can either split, or "bear the ills you have, rather than fly to others that you know not of."

DEAR ABBY: Just a note to protest your approval of giving gifts in someone else's name. If someone were to give Reverend Moon (remember the "Moonies"?) so much as a toothpick in my name, I'd likely go over and blow up his house.

I imagine you have a pile of letters on your desk concerning this subject, so if any of them agree with me (and most should), I'd appreciate it if you would publish them.

Dear A.P.E.: Some readers agree with you, but you're the only one who threatened to blow up the house of anyone who gave an unauthorized gift in your name.

DEAR ABBY: A comment to BITING MY TONGUE, the wife of the man who tells co-workers that he owns his own home, when in fact he is only renting it.

Ownership of property is a matter of public record. All one needs to know is the address of the property and it can be looked up in the county assessor's book. Other pertinent information, such as when the property was purchased, how much was paid for it, the owner's mailing address, and how much it is taxed is also available.

If the man who falsely claims to own his home has a job that calls for in-depth investigation of his character and assets, he is in deep trouble. For obvious reasons, lying about such a matter implies a lack of integrity.

So please tell his wife to stop biting her tongue so she can open her mouth and tell her husband what he's toying with.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

A two-way finesse is a treacherous holding, for it's always difficult to guess which defender has the missing honor. The best method of tackling such a combination is to find a line that eliminates the finesse completely.

South took a direct route to the optimum contract. Once his partner supported spades, South knew exactly where he wanted to play the hand.

West led the king of diamonds, and when dummy appeared, it seemed that declarer would have to rely on the club finesse for his contract. To complicate life, he could play either defender for the missing lady.

Closer analysis revealed that a strip and end play could guarantee the contract. The opening lead marked the queen of diamonds with West. If trumps were 2-2, declarer could draw trumps, eliminate hearts, and then throw West in with the queen of diamonds to force an advantageous lead.

Accordingly, declarer won the ace of diamonds and drew two rounds of trumps. He wasn't too concerned that the suit split 3-1, because it was West who showed out on the second trump. That meant that a partial elimination would succeed.

Declarer cashed the king and ace of hearts, then ruffed a heart, stripping that suit from both his hand and dummy. Now West was given the lead when declarer exited with a diamond.

West was faced with a choice of unhappy plays. If he returned a red suit, declarer would ruff with dummy's remaining trump while discarding a club from his hand. If West shifted to clubs, it would eliminate declarer's guess in that suit and present him with three club tricks. Either way, the slam was assured.

Clip 'n' Cook

KISS COOKIES

1 cup butter or margarine
½ cup granulated sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1½ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup finely chopped walnuts
8-ounce package milk-chocolate kisses, about 54
Confectioners' sugar

In the large bowl of an electric mixer cream the butter, granulated sugar and vanilla. Add the flour and the walnuts; beat on low speed until thoroughly mixed; cover and chill. Meanwhile, unwrap the chocolate kisses. Shape a scant tablespoon of the dough around each kiss, making sure to cover each completely. Roll between your palms to form a ball; place well apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until bottom edges are golden and cookies look set — 10 to 12 minutes. Cool slightly; with a wide spatula remove to wire racks to cool completely. Store in a tightly covered tin box. Just before serving, dust lightly with the confectioners' sugar — only to make the cookies look pretty because they are sweet enough as is. Makes about 54.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible.

Matt. 17:9-27, The Living Bible

9 As they were going down the mountain, Jesus commanded them not to tell anyone what they had seen until after He had risen from the dead.

10 His disciples asked, "Why do the Jewish leaders insist Elijah must return before the Messiah comes?"

11 Jesus replied, "They are right. Elijah must come and set everything in order."

12 And, in fact, he has already come, but he wasn't recognized, and was badly mistreated by many. And I, the Son of Mankind, shall also suffer at their hands."

13 Then the disciples realized He was speaking of John the Baptist.

14 When they arrived at the bottom of the hill, a huge crowd was waiting for them. A man came and knelt before Jesus and said, "15 'Sir, have mercy on my son, for he is mentally deranged, and in great trouble, for he often falls into the fire or into the water;

16 So I brought him to Your disciples, but they couldn't cure him."

17 Jesus replied, "Oh, you stubborn, faithless people! How long shall I bear with you? Bring him here to Me."

18 Then Jesus rebuked the demon in the boy and it left him, and from that moment the boy was well.

19 Afterwards the disciples asked Jesus privately, "Why couldn't we cast that demon out?"

20 "Because of your little faith."

Jesus told them. "For if you had faith even as small as a tiny mustard seed you could say to this mountain, 'Move!' and it would go far away. Nothing would be impossible.

21 But this kind of demon won't leave unless you have prayed and gone without food."

22,23 One day while they were still in Galilee, Jesus told them, "I am going to be betrayed into the power of those who will kill Me, and on the third day afterwards I will be brought back to life again." And the disciples' hearts were filled with sorrow and dread.

24 On their arrival in Capernaum, the Temple tax collectors came to Peter and asked him, "Doesn't your master pay taxes?"

25 "Of course He does," Peter replied. Then he went into the house to talk to Jesus about it, but before he had a chance to speak, Jesus asked him, "What do you think, Peter? Do kings levy assessments against their own people, or against conquered foreigners?"

26,27 "Against the foreigners," Peter replied. "Well, then," Jesus said, "the citizens are free! However, we don't want to offend them, so go down to the shore and throw in a line, and open the mouth of the first fish you catch. You will find a coin to cover the taxes for both of us; take it and pay them."

The Slim Gourmet

Take meat, rice and a vegetable and what have you got? A rather routine but adequate meal. Stuff the meat and rice in the vegetable and you've got a special treat!

A California reader is the winner of this month's Slim Gourmet Recipe Contest for her imaginative way of stuffing zucchini cases with savory veal. Topped with ripe fresh tomato or mushroom slices and bubbling cheese, this dish looks as appealing as it tastes... a complete meal for less than 350 calories. For her winning recipe, Mrs. B. B. Schulz of Buena Park, Calif. will receive a $12.95 hardcover copy of my Slim Gourmet Cookbook, published last fall by Harper & Row.

VEAL-STUFFED ZUCCHINI
 4 medium zucchini, unpeeled
 1 cup water
 1 lb. ground veal
 2 eggs
 1/2 cup instant rice
 1 tsp. minced parsley
 1/2 tsp. dried oregano
 garlic salt and pepper to taste
 4 small, or plum, tomatoes, or large mushrooms, sliced
 4 tbsp. shredded Monterey Jack or sharp Cheddar cheese
 Wash zucchini; slice lengthwise. Arrange in a single layer, cut-side up, in a non-stick skillet. Add water. Cover and simmer just until tender-crisp, four or five minutes. Drain and set aside to cool.
 Wipe skillet and spray with non-fat vegetable cooking spray. Spread ground veal in skillet and brown over high heat. Break up into chunks and continue cooking until well-browned. (Drain and discard any fat.)
 Scrape out insides of zucchini. Chop and add to veal. Stir in eggs, rice, parsley, oregano, garlic salt and pepper. Mound in zucchini shells.

Arrange shells in a single layer in a shallow heatproof baking dish. Cover with foil and bake 20 minutes. Arrange tomato or mushroom slices over filling and sprinkle with cheese. Slip under broiler, just until cheese melts. Each stuffed zucchini case, under 170 calories.

Here's another variation on stuffed vegetables... peppers with a lean meat filling that tastes like fattening sausage:

'SAUSAGE'-STUFFED PEPPERS Filling:
 1 lb. lean, fat-trimmed pork or veal, ground
 16 oz. can Italian tomatoes, undrained
 1 cup water, divided
 1/3 cup raw rice
 1 cup chopped onion
 1 tsp. garlic salt
 pinch of red pepper flakes
 1/4 tsp. sage, or mixed poultry seasonings
 2 tsp. dried oregano
 6 well-shaped bell peppers
 8 oz. can plain tomato sauce (without oil)

3 tsp. Italian-seasoned bread crumbs
 1 tsp. grated sharp Romano cheese

Spray a large non-stick skillet with cooking spray. Spread the chopped meat in the skillet and cook over high heat until the underside is browned. Break into chunks and turn over. Continue cooking until meat is well-browned. Drain and discard any fat that accumulates in the pan.

Add the undrained tomatoes and break up well with a fork. Add one-third cup water. Stir in rice, onion and seasonings. Cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, until rice is tender (about 15 minutes).

Meanwhile, slice tops off peppers; remove seeds and inner membranes. (Mince pepper tops, except hard stem ends, and add to the skillet.)

When filling is cooked, spoon into pepper cases. Stand filled peppers upright in a baking dish. Combine the tomato sauce and remaining two-thirds cup water, and pour over peppers. Combine bread crumbs and Romano cheese and sprinkle over the filling. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, covered, for 25 to 30 minutes, basting occasionally. Makes six servings, about 250 calories each.

Win the Slim Gourmet Cookbook by entering your decolorized recipe in our friendly and informal contest with no rules. If you're not a winner next month, don't give up! We may print your recipe some other month when it's more suitable to the season. All recipes published will be awarded a book. Print clearly, give your name, address and zip code, and send your entries to SLIM GOURMET READER RECIPE CONTEST, Sparta, N.J. 00781.

Plutonium Levels Up In Natives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Homecoming for the islanders of Bikini atoll in the Pacific did not live up to the expectations prompted by government promises. Bikini's residents had been moved to another island 400 miles away in 1954, when the United States set off a hydrogen bomb on the coral off a tiny island at the northwest corner of the Bikini atoll. In 1968, Lyndon B. Johnson announced a rehabilitation plan to permit the 500 former residents to return to their homes. Three years later construction crews started to build 40 houses of concrete blocks, corrugated aluminum roofs, and a sheltered open area for laundry and cooking. More than 50,000 coconut trees were planted, and the soil was turned and tilled for planting. "One of the few money making activities of the islanders is production of a substance from coconuts which is used in soap and edible oils," said John deYoung, staff assistant in the Interior Department's office for the trust territories of Pacific. DeYoung said the Bikinians, who are not as big in stature as native Hawaiians and somewhat darker in complexion, generally wear Western style clothing and were converted to Christianity by missionaries in the 18th century. He said they are known for weaving fine mats "soft as silk" from the long shiny leaves of the pandanus plant. An Atomic Energy Commission survey before the return of the Bikinians found the island, though severely hit with radioactivity following the bomb blast, had virtually no radiation remaining. The government spent about $3 million to bring back 100 of the original inhabitants who chose to relocate, some 15 families ranging in age from babies to the elderly.

So early this year the government began shipping coconuts, milk and other food to the island. The Interior Department has also asked Congress for $15 million to move the islanders to a smaller atoll 10 miles away.

DeYoung said the islanders have been provided with a nutritionist who has instructed them on the possible dangers of eating local plants, including squashes and other vegetables they began to cultivate.

"There is no danger as long as they do not eat certain plants," deYoung said.

He also said the islanders had been barred from building homes in their traditional string-like pattern onto other parts of the island found to have contaminated soil.

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Wednesday, April 5, the 95th day of 1978 with 270 to follow.
The moon is approaching its new phase.

There is no morning star.
The evening stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter, Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.
American black educator Booker T. Washington was born April 5, 1856. Actress Bette Davis was born on this date in 1908.

On this day in history:
In 1951, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg of New York City were sentenced to death for stealing atomic secrets for Russia.

In 1964, American Gen. Douglas MacArthur died at the age of 84.

In 1968, major American cities were hit by violent riots as an aftermath of the assassination of black leader Martin Luther King.

In 1976, American billionaire Howard Hughes, 70, died of kidney failure on a flight from Acapulco, Mexico, to Houston. Also that day, James Callaghan became prime minister of Britain.

A thought for the day:
Booker T. Washington said, "No race shall prosper till it learns that there is as much dignity in tilling a field as in writing a poem."

He explained the natives may have been eating five to six coconuts per day instead of the one per day the government recommended.

The radioactive substance is transferred to man because Strontium 90 is left in the soil and picked up by plants, whose fruit is then in turn eaten by humans.

Uncle Loc's Success With Girl Doubted

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand — According to a press release from Hanoi, the communist regime in Vietnam is "making glorious progress" rehabilitating Saigon's street urchins by placing them in special schools for "not yet good children."

By way of demonstrating the success of the program, which since the war ended in 1975 claims to have made goodie-goodies out of 2,000 not yet good children, the report cited the case of Tien Be Hiep, a born again young hood "with hundreds of thefts on his record."

Under the gentle tutelage on "Mother Hieu and Uncle Loc," the in-house names for Tran Van Loc and his wife who run the school for the war invalids and social affairs service, Tien learned to wake up to a whistle, wash, dress, exercise and, with his fellow orphans, "Line up to eat, study and enthusiastically pursue political or artistic activities and take turns to criticize friends in daily triumphs and lapses."

It made me wonder how Mother Hieu and Uncle Loc were making out with Ti-Ti the Jasmine girl. The last time I saw her she was peddling flowers outside the Continental Palace Hotel on Saigon's main square and occasionally standing on tippy-toes to relieve an unsuspecting My — an American — of his ring or wristwatch.

That was in May 1974, and she couldn't have been more than 5 or 6 then. Her real name was Pham, according to the necklace that always adorned her scrawny unwashed neck — unless she had stolen that, too — but everyone called her Ti-Ti, Vietnamese for "littles one," because she stood knee high to a 105mm howitzer shell.

Ti-Ti was the feminist's edition of Kipling's "Kim." Her home was the great open road of life, especially the bawling, sinful stretch of Tu Do Street down to the Saigon River, which since the days of the French had catered to man's baser desires. Like Kim, she resisted all efforts of the clergy, the social agencies, the police and annual successions of do-good Americans, particularly the wives, to mother her, reform her or place her in an orphanage.

Mother Hieu would have a handful here.

Her run-ins with the "white mice," the native gendarmes, provoked catatums of classic GI obscenities, of which she had total recall and a faithful ear. In addition to limpid almond eyes and a smile of unquestioned innocence, Ti-Ti had the inborn gift of the con. Her strategy was to lurk among the potted plants of the hotel's terrace bar, barefoot in her tattered dress, until a young helicopter pilot or a hardhat for RMK, the big construction consortium, entered with a girl on his arm.

"Frowers for a pretty lady," Ti-Ti would intone in her carefully fractured English, pushing a string of fragrant jasmine blossoms under the lady's nose. If the gallant escort refused, he was immediately exposed as a "cheap, cheap Charlie" and worse. The abuse grew in volume as the couple moved toward a table and only abated when Ti-Ti was paid off to go away or ejected by the maitre d', which was a self-defeating maneuver as she frequently made her exit by scooping up a pile of piastres awaiting the cashier's attention.

When dinner was served on the terrace, Ti-Ti always waited until the main dish was uncovered before taking up her position on the sidewalk and staring hungrily in, like a Third World famine poster, at the now guilt-ridden diners. Drunks snoozing at the bar often went home unburdened by their wallets, and no one was quicker off the mark than Ti-Ti in the rip and run marathon of making off with a wristwatch or a handbag.

It is difficult for me to picture Ti-Ti awaking to Uncle Loc's whistle. Her only boudoir, when I knew her, was the AP jeep, parked across from the hotel, which she shared with four other street urchins. All awoke to the steaming aroma of Pho, Vietnam's noodle soup, rising from the sidewalk kitchens.

Her daily triumphs and lapses, before the evening bar hours brought out the potential jasmine customers, consisted of pick-pocketing rambles in the central market, begging outside the PX to improve her GI slang, a little shoplifting along the street of the leather goods and sharing anecdotes and some of her loot with the no-nose leper in front of the Catholic cathedral. He was her friend, and so was Con Cua, "the Crab," the beggar boy with the paralyzed spine who crawled through life on all fours. Both, for trade reasons, hid the watches she had given them.

Ti-Ti's day ended with the hoot of the curfew siren, the roar of the "Honda hour," with the pimps on the motorbikes trying to peddle their wares on the buddy seat and the GIs hurrying back to their billets on every available cycle, and the million candle power flares lighting up the night diamond bright over the jeep where the not-yet-good children slept.

Ti-Ti, where are you and where's my watch?

Spokane City Council To Probe Names Leak

SPOKANE (AP) — The City Council has ordered a police investigation to determine who gave the names of city manager finalists to a newspaper reporter.

The council had agreed not to identify out-of-state candidates without their permission.

"This was to protect them," Mayor Ron Bair said recently. "Serious repercussions could occur in their cities."

An article in the Spokane Daily Chronicle last weekend identified the five finalists for the job as Glen Yake, acting manager, as well as city managers Gerald R. Davis of Vallejo, Calif.; Gerald G. Fox of Wichita Falls, Texas; George E. Hubler Jr. of Fairfax, Va., and Terry L. Novak of Columbia, Mo.

The mayor said one of the out-of-state candidates could lose his job as a result of the article, but he refused to say which man's job was in jeopardy.

Bair, a former television reporter, said the newspaper reporter was not being investigated but that a probe was needed to determine whether there is a security problem in City Hall.

He said he was told by the Chronicle that a city staffer gave the information to a reporter. The reporter has denied saying where he obtained the information.

BLIND LAWMAKER — State Rep. Julius Morris, who is the only blind legislator in Connecticut's history, believes he could have been a better lawmaker if the state paid its General Assembly members enough. Blinded in World War II, the New Britain Democrat is stepping down from the House this year, but is also considering a run for the Senate. (AP Laserphoto)

Blind Lawmaker Plans To Run For New Post

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Julius Morris is blind, but he has never let that be an obstacle. Although retiring from the state House this year, he's already considering a run for the Senate.

Morris has led a life of circumstances that would have been obstacles for others. He dropped out of school in the eighth grade and as a 16-year-old left his South Carolina farm and lied about his age to join the Army.

He was 21 and already a recipient of the Silver Star in February 1945 when enemy gunfire blew up his tank in southern France and blinded him.

By 1953 the bashful country boy whose grammar had been so bad he "didn't know what 'were' was" had learned enough to graduate second in his law school class at the University of South Carolina.

In 1962, on his second try, he got 21 more votes than an incumbent and was elected to the Connecticut House of Representatives. The New Britain Democrat has been there since.

He ran unopposed in 1976 and announced that he would not seek re-election because he couldn't afford to. Morris, 54, said his law practice didn't allow him enough time to be the legislator he thought he should be and he didn't have enough money to be a lawmaker only.

Now, however, he wants to run for office again. The difference is that his daughter and son-in-law plan to join his law firm by autumn.

Morris said the only thing that bothers him about being blind is not being able to see the people he loves.

He has never seen his youngest sister, who was 4 when he returned home from World War II, and he has never seen his wife, although a photograph of her was in the wallet of an Army pal he served alongside for three years.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: After all the publicity given to Dick Van Dyke joining the Carol Burnett Show — and how well they worked together — he suddenly disappeared from the show. What happened? — A. Krueger, Grand Island, Neb.

A: We asked Carol for you — and this is what she told us. "I'm sorry that you and some of your readers weren't aware of why Dick 'suddenly disappeared.' It was his desire and decision. Commuting close to 4,000 miles every month to and from his home in Cave Creek, Ariz., where his family is living, along with the demands of a weekly variety show, proved too impractical."

"I found myself able to spend but one day a week with my family, after flying and driving eight hours every Saturday and Sunday," Dick said. Such a schedule, has become too strenuous to do myself justice, personally and professionally. As much as I love Carol and Joe Hamilton, and the excitement of doing the 'Carol Burnett Show,' this is the factor in my decision."

Everyone involved had nothing but lavish praise for Van Dyke. "Dick's a comedy genius and an actor's dream to work with," commented Joe Hamilton (Carol's husband and executive producer). "All of us love him and will miss him terribly. But we must respect his decision. Our production company is planning a special in which he and Carol will co-star. He will not be 'replaced.' How can he be?"

Q: How many of our Vietnam veterans still remain unemployed? — Ex-G.I., Columbus, Ohio.

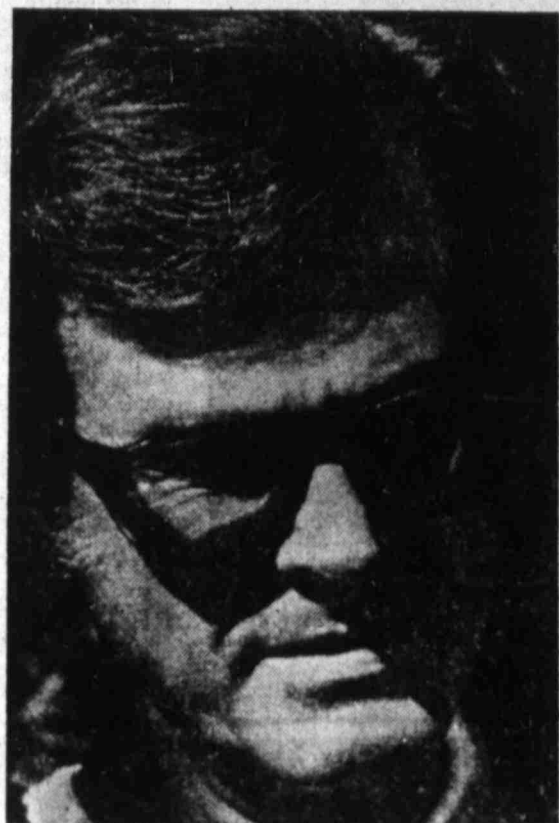

A: Excluding those who have either lost their desire to work or, frustrated in job-hunting, have stopped looking — there are between 500,000 and 600,000 unemployed Vietnam veterans.

Q: We keep reading conflicting stories about Robert Culp. One is that he's going to team up with Bill Cosby again on a new TV series of "I Spy." And the other story says he's retired. What's the real story? — Mrs. Amelia R., Memphis, Tenn.

A: Neither of these stories is accurate. Bob appeared only recently on TV — in a dynamite performance — as the star of a cop show, "The Last of the Good Guys." Culp is carving a whole new future in mature roles. Don't hold your breath waiting for him to re-unite with Bill Cosby. Bill's bag these days apparently is bulging with kiddie capers and commercials. Incidentally, Culp once described acting as "the oldest profession in the world!"

Q: A security guard in a department store wrongly accused me of shoplifting the other day. I claimed he didn't have the authority to question me. Wasn't I right? — G.L., Seattle.

A: Yes. You need not answer the questions of a private guard, unless and until he summons a uniformed officer or detective. Before arresting you, the law requires that you be informed of your rights. A study made by author Laurence Gonzales, reveals that more than 1.7 million Americans were "mistakenly" arrested one year, many by private security guards. Some of the guards later were revealed as having engaged in systematic wire tapping, bugging, invasion of privacy, trespassing, theft, and impersonating public police.

Oyster-Eating Champion Says 'Keep 'Em Moving' To Win

By PETER FINNEY Jr.
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The technique is simple. "You just keep six or seven oysters between your teeth and Adam's apple at all times," said Mickey Rigdon, who should know. "I'm never without five or six in my mouth. I swallow them whole — just keep 'em moving."
To Rigdon, who has deposited as many as 238 Louisiana oysters in his interesting stomach at one sitting, exaggerations are meaningless.
He clicks off the statistics ("I've eaten 18.2 dozen (218) in five minutes, and I'm trying to get it in Guinness") and the reasons ("I don't play football or baseball but I'm good at this") and the results ("The next day I had a little problem").
Rigdon, a Jefferson Parish fireman, was predictably on sick leave after his big win in the Amite Oyster Festival, but he said it was for an injured elbow, not for a bloated stomach.
He takes care of that. Immediately after downing close to 10 pounds of oyster meat, complete with oyster juice, he runs to the nearest open area.

"After 15 dozen something starts happening in the throat area," Rigdon said, "and you have the overpowering urge to upchuck. I've never thrown up during a contest. I always do after a contest to get all that out of my stomach."
Like most oyster guzzlers, Rigdon's training techniques are not what you would call scientific.
"I don't have to practice," Rigdon said. "It's just natural. The night before, I don't drink any beer and I have a normal supper. I have a normal breakfast — about four eggs, bacon and three or four pieces of toast — because the contests are always late in the evening."
"I drink three or four beers before the contest to take the edge off."
Rigdon, who weighs "close to 225," has always had the edge on fellow competitors. He got hooked on oysters as a child and hasn't been able to break the habit. He usually downs about seven dozen raw oysters in casual company, but he only does that on 10-cent oyster nights because things have gotten too expensive.
"I guess I've always been a big eater," Rigdon said. "I've been eating oysters for 17 or 18 years. I notice the other guys can eat a lot, too, but they just don't have the speed. I think it's just natural."

"My brother (Charles "Whup" Rigdon) is a big guy, and he wanted to challenge me to a contest. In Amite, he went out partying the night before and he didn't even finish second or third. I even lent him my fork, but it didn't help."
Rigdon endures this mental and physical anguish for $50 in first prize money and a tin trophy. But he said gorging himself with oysters makes him a better lover, as the old wives' tale insists.
"They say it don't, but I think it does," Rigdon said. "Once the people see how the contest progresses, they start screaming and yelling. The women go crazy. Of course I have my own thoughts on that."

Gallery Bans Nude Works

WEST BEND, Wis. (UPI) — The West Bend Gallery of Fine Arts has banned 17 pictures of nude women from a showing of portraits by artist Duane Unkefer.
"We didn't realize his show would be mostly nudes," gallery director Edward Kocher said. "All we'd seen were portraits and very well-done portraits. We pulled out the blatant nudes but the others are in and there are probably 15 of them."
The works that are being excluded are from an exhibit of pastel portrait and figure works depicting partial or total female nudity.
Unkefer, a former Milwaukeean who is now a creative director for a Los Angeles advertising agency, was surprised about the censorship but not too angry.
"I had a nice talk with them yesterday," Unkefer said. "They feel that (although) certain of the pictures, though not offensive to them, are fine work, there are individuals in the community who have reacted to them in the past."

Infected Dessert Poisons Students

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An infected gelatin dessert caused the food poisoning that made some 4,000 local school children sick last Thursday, the government reports.
The children got sick after eating the one-penny breakfasts which the government supplies. There were no deaths, but 1,598 of the children were kept in the hospital overnight.

Christie Raps Governor Spotlight

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Voters are deciding on their next U.S. Senator like they would select toothpaste or deodorant, Democratic senate candidate Joe Christie charged Tuesday night.

Christie, along with his Democratic opponent U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger and La Raza Unida candidate Luis Diaz DeLeon, appeared before about 125 persons at a League of Women Voters Council meeting Wednesday at the Hilton Inn.

In his opening statement, Christie, a former head of the state Insurance Board, bemoaned the "irony in Texas politics that the attention of the media and the conversation in the coffee shops has centered on the governor's race."

Christie said the governor's office was largely ceremonial, as compared to the office of senator where a "single vote can determine the direction the nation goes for many years."

The former state senator from El Paso said voters stood to make the choice of who would be Texas' Senator on the basis of "shadows on a television screen" rather than on the differences on the issues.

However, few significant differences emerged between the two Democratic contenders.

Without mentioning Christie by name, Krueger charged his opponent with talking about state issues rather than national issues.

"It is essential a person direct himself to national issues rather than state issues," Krueger, of New Braunfels, said.

"I shall continue to speak directly to the issues and not make it a race of personalities as another candidate is trying to do," he pledged.

All three candidates found themselves in basic agreement concerning welfare reform.

Christie said he supported President Carter's approach of dividing welfare recipients into two groups — those unable to work and those able to work.

He said he would support legislation to pay those unable to work "enough to live a dignified life" and stress vocational and technical training for those who can work.

Christie also said he would support day care to allow welfare mothers to work.

Krueger emphasized Americans get "much of their sense of self out of the work they do" and said the object of welfare reform would be to raise recipients' "sense of self."

"It is important in this country to do everything to help people achieve dignity," he said.

DeLeon, an Austin educator, said he favors a guaranteed annual income as the answer to many of the problems of welfare.

On the issue of public financing of congressional campaigns, Krueger and Christie lined up in opposition while DeLeon said he favored government assistance to candidates.

Krueger said it is "important for candidates for public office to get their financial support directly from the people" and said the legislation before Congress is "directly discriminatory" to those challenging incumbents.

However, Christie commented that if the legislation had favored incumbents it would have "shot out of Congress like a bullet" rather than being stalled as it is.

Although Christie noted he has raised "only about half as much as my opponent," he said he did not support public funding of campaigns because it gives voters an "opportunity to judge officeholders on how contributions affect their voting of record."

"I ask that you do it in this case," Christie said, apparently in reference to Krueger's contributions from the oil industry and support of natural gas deregulation.

All candidates said they supported mandatory conservation of energy measures, although Christie noted he favored the "carrot over the stick."

Christie said he opposed recent Social Security tax hikes, while Krueger said he supported them and voted for them for lack of an alternative.

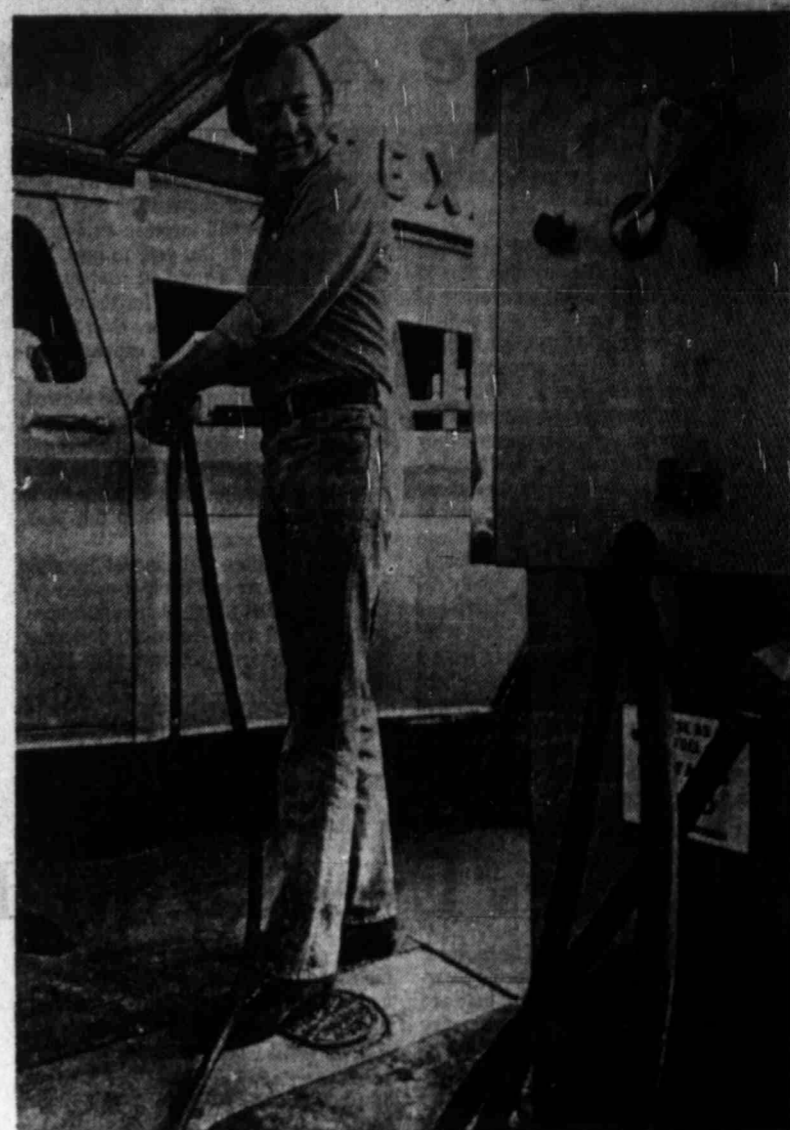

All three men said they favored the Equal Rights Amendment and Christie said he favored extending the time allowed for states to ratify the amendment.

In her remarks to open the council session, Betty Anderson, state league president, praised the work of the organization and urged its members to continue to educate the public.

She also pledged that the group will continue its national drive for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, which she called the "missing link in our struggle to become a democratic nation."

Mrs. Anderson also said it is time Texans admitted the need for reforms in such diverse fields as property taxes and welfare programs.

She told the group of 57 statewide delegates and 16 state board members that the league's goals will be decided during today's sessions.

POLITICIAN MEETS PUMP — U.S. senatorial candidate Joe Christie does a switch on the usual political tactic of squeezing hands by squeezing the nozzle of a gas pump instead. Christie, of El Paso, was pumping gas at Leroy Fuller's 4th Street station here today to call attention to what he terms the control exerted over people's lives by major oil companies. The former state senator also washed windshields, checked oil and performed other services for customers. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

Wolfe Explores 'Me' Decade

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The new sexual awareness, the women's and minority movements, religious cults, the rush to join the latest in psychotherapy groups — all are part of this decade's preoccupation with the individual.

Writer-journalist Tom Wolfe calls it "The Me Decade." Others refer to it as the new narcissism. Whatever the label, the '70s have ushered in the most intensive era of individualism this country has seen.

And Wolfe, whose essays satirizing all this self-awareness appeared in New York magazine a year ago, said in Lubbock Tuesday he feels the "Me" decade and its trappings are resulting in people being "less concerned with family, marriage, children, or even about having children."

Wolfe, who spoke at Texas Tech Tuesday night, said he feels people now are spending so much energy on perfecting their own lives that their children's lives no longer mean that much.

Taking the women's movement as an example, Wolfe said the movement makes it interesting just to be a woman — "it gives stage value to women."

And men are not far behind, the New York writer said. Books are coming out on the phases of men's psychic and emotional development, Wolfe said, and soon men will find themselves the center of attention.

The current movements and programs toward self-improvement and self-gratification merely allow individuals "to put themselves on stage," Wolfe said.

"Putting 'me' on stage, that is the movement's initial appeal, and that gives it its staying power," he said.

Wolfe allowed that it is good that "people of all sorts are seeing how far they can go with their lives." But the side effects of this intensive introspection has led to an ignoring of the needs of society as a whole, he said.

"All of us believe that what happens after them means something," Wolfe commented. "That is why people take out life insurance policies and make out wills."

But the current preoccupation with only the needs of the self "is an assault on that," he added.

Charges Filed In Robbery Of Restaurant

An aggravated robbery charge was filed Tuesday against a man accused of taking almost $1,000 from the safe at the Smuggler's Inn, 1915 50th St., early Sunday.

Named in the charge was Danny Burtist Eoff, 23, of 2139 74th St.

The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $5,000 bond.

A masked, gun-wielding bandit reportedly put $999 in a sack and ordered employees into a vault during the 3 a.m. incident.

But a suspect was captured after two employees called authorities.

Restaurant employee Susan Smith, 22, told officers she had walked out the rear door of the building when a man pointed a pistol at her and demanded that she return inside with him.

The witness said the masked man led her into the dining area where several employees were gathering after work and ordered the group into the cold storage vault.

Assistant manager Michael Earl Sandell said the man made him lead the way to the bar, where the bandit reportedly ordered seven more employees to lie face down on the floor while he and Sandell went into the office and emptied the safe.

After the man had put money in a sack, Sandell said, the robber ordered employees on the barroom floor into the vault, took Sandell's vault key from him and locked the group inside.

Unknown to him, two of the imprisoned workers had called authorities.

Sheriff's Deputy Dean Bohannon was waiting outside and, according to reports, a suspect was arrested after a brief chase.

Also Tuesday, Michael A. Cox, 24, of 5303 21st St., was charged with burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape.

Cox is accused of attacking a woman in her residence about 5 a.m. Saturday. The DA's office recommended a $2,500 bond in that case.

Trull Acquitted

Irwin delivered a revival-like plea to the jury, brandishing a Bible in one hand, his other on Trull's shoulder.
Irwin said Trull was just "running a bluff" at Pyron during the incident at the office in an attempt to recover his losses.
Clark said, however, that Irwin's defense was "throwing a skunk in the jury box... to put anybody on trial except the defendant."
"If red herrings and rabbit trails work with you," Clark continued, "Irwin has accomplished his purpose. He's fooled you. He's clouded your minds with everything except what happened on Aug. 9. But that's what the trial is all about."

Arsonists Cited In Brush Fires

By The Associated Press
Authorities battling a rash of brush and forest fires in the Southeast say many of the fires appear to have been set by arsonists.

Thirteen people have been arrested on arson charges in connection with fires in Georgia and Alabama, officials said Tuesday.

Compounding the arson problem for forest rangers and fire fighters are the open burning of trash and leaves and a spell of dry weather.

The National Weather Service said no rain was in sight for the region.

Eleven people have been charged with arson in Alabama in connection with fires started in the past month, said Frank Segó, a spokesman for the state Forestry Commission.

He said almost half the forest fires in Alabama since mid-March were "directly attributable" to arson.

Sheriff's deputies in Haralson County in northern Georgia said they had arrested two men and charged them with arson in connection with a series of fires last Sunday.

"We've had 225 fires in the last four days," said Tommy Mauldin, forestry supervisor for 10 counties in northwest Georgia.

"We figure about 70 percent of them were arson," he said.
Tennessee state forester Max Young said authorities tried unsuccessfully to arrest several suspected arsonists in southeast Tennessee. "But unless you see them actually set the fire, you can't prosecute," he said.

In Mississippi, forestry official Freddie Jordan said several fires in the central and eastern areas of the state appeared to be the work of arsonists.

But Frank Craven of the Georgia Forestry Commission said the arson problem was not all that unusual in the spring.

"We've found this arson problem with us year after year in the Southeast," he said. "We don't really know why they do it. I guess it's just meanness. It just is more evident when it's this dry and things are easier to burn."

About 1,400 fires which damaged or destroyed 6,500 acres have been reported across Georgia in a six-day period, state forestry officials said Tuesday.

Alabama officials said about 196 fires were burning on 17,346 acres in their state Tuesday. About 10,000 acres were lost in Alabama last Saturday alone, officials said, and four deaths in that state have been attributed to wildfires.

Segó said that, to his knowledge, none of the deaths was caused by fires set by arsonists.

Chesapeake Bay is 180 miles long, and covers 155 miles in Maryland and 70 miles in Virginia. Its width ranges from 2.6 to 27 miles.

Bette Davis Celebrates 70th Birthday

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bette Davis doesn't hide her age, but she doesn't dwell on it either. "It's just another birthday," she says of her 70th today. "A big one, I'll admit, but I don't believe in birthdays."

An expectable response from an actress who, unlike some others, has never been reluctant to reveal her age: She was born April 5, 1908, in Lowell, Mass.

At 70, Bette Davis exhibits no slackening of her enormous energies. She declined a recent birthday interview — "I'm much too busy with the Academy Awards and all that." She has spent 47 years in films and during the past year appeared in three movies: Disney's "Return from Witch Mountain," the television film "Harvest Home" and the all-star Agatha Christie mystery "Death on the Nile," her 85th movie.

"That's the best thing for me, having my work," she said at the Egyptian location in October. "I would never get married again; that just wouldn't succeed. When your children grow up and leave you, it can be very lonely. Luckily for me, I've got my work to fill the gap."

When she is not working in films, she goes on the road with her one-woman show, screening highlights from her film career and commenting on her life and work.

Miss Davis has always been free and open in her comments, and these are some of her remarks in recent times:

—"I've always known the value of the press. They're just as valuable as the performances you give; you can't exist without them. That is something that is lacking today. Young people don't realize the value of publicity. They're fools."
—"It took me a long time to learn to fight. In the beginning I wasn't that way at all. It wasn't in my nature, but I realized that you have to force yourself to fight for what you want or they simply won't respect you. I never would have had the same career if I hadn't fought."

—"The only thing I worry about is dying without a cigarette in my mouth. People have suggested that I give up smoking, to which I answer, 'Whatever for?'"

—"Of Human Bondage" was my first step up the ladder, the first time I was considered possibly a really good actress. The character I played was the first bitch heroine on the screen, and none of the well-known actresses would play it."

—"Nuts to growing old. Don't you ever believe that life begins at 40 or that it's wonderful to be 70. I'd give anything to be 30 again. Every so often somebody asks me if I've had my face lifted. I always tell them, 'Would I look like this if I did?'"

—"I think the key to life is to never stop accepting its challenges. As far as I'm concerned, once someone stops accepting challenges, he's dead."

Consumer Panel Critics Want Agency Kept Alive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics of the Consumer Product Safety Commission — including those within the consumer movement and in Congress — are saying the oft-criticized agency should be given one more chance.

Consumer groups testified Tuesday that the five-year-old commission should be kept alive for three more years in a final effort to make it effective.

Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., who agreed with this viewpoint despite his own strong criticism of the agency, hears from more consumer and industry witnesses today. A Senate panel is considering Ford's bill to reauthorize the commission.

"You should make it clear that this is a last-chance authorization," Anita Johnson of Environmental Defense Fund said.

"Oh, that is clearly understood," Ford replied.
Another witness, Kathleen Sheekey of Consumer Federation of America, called her organization "an outspoken critic" of the product safety commission but said it was optimistic about future successes.

Sharon Nelson of Consumers Union said Congress must put the commission "on notice that the commission's performance in protecting the public by carrying out its duties under the Consumer Product Safety Act must improve substantially and promptly."

The Carter administration reportedly is considering phasing out CPSC and transferring its functions to other government agencies, but no White House plan for doing this has been officially announced.

The reasons the consumer groups and Ford were optimistic about the future of the commission include two recently-confirmed commissioners and the resignation, effective June 30, of controversial Chairman S. John Byington.

"If, after a reasonable period, a new chairperson appointed by this administration has not demonstrated satisfactory progress toward rectifying the problems which abound at CPSC, then a fresh look can be taken at where else in the government the responsibility for consumer product safety might be placed," Ms. Nelson said.

During its five years the commission has promulgated under its enabling legislation mandatory safety standards for only swimming pool slides, architectural glazing and matchbooks. However, the matchbook standard was struck down last week by a federal appeals court.

Ms. Nelson called this "a snail's pace," and Ford noted that the average length of time in developing the standards has been 834 days, compared to the 330 days required by law.

Several of the witnesses, all of whom are outspoken critics of the agency, noted mitigating factors. They noted that in addition to the mandatory standards under the enabling law, the commission enforces other laws and has issued bans and recalls, required safety labels and undertaken information campaigns.

Robert Rauch, another staff attorney for Environmental Defense Fund, said, "They are just beginning to get their act together. It has been very frustrating dealing with them."

Carter Sends Well-Wishes To 'Duke'

BOSTON (AP) — John Wayne's recovery from open-heart surgery is routine — except for a presidential phone call and televised get-well wishes from Bob Hope.

Martin Bander, spokesman for Massachusetts General Hospital, said Tuesday that President Carter had telephoned Michael Wayne, the 70-year-old actor's son, to say he was praying for him.

Bander also quoted the president as saying:

"John Wayne is a great national asset. If there's anything I can do for him, please let me know. He surprises all of us with his ability to recover. Tell him he is in my thoughts and prayers."

During the Academy Awards Monday night, Wayne was paid tribute by master of ceremonies Bob Hope.

"We want you to know, Duke, we miss you tonight," Hope said. "We expect to see you amble out here in person next year 'cause no one else can walk in John Wayne's boots."

Wayne was operated on Monday for a faulty heart valve, and Bander said the hospital switchboard was swamped with calls from well-wishers from around the world.

Although he remains in intensive care, Wayne could be out of the hospital in about two weeks and could be working again by midsummer, doctors said.

The actor, who won the best actor Oscar in 1969 for "True Grit," "is continuing to have a routine convalescence," said Bander. "His blood pressure and pulse are normal. His pulmonary problems have not posed any difficulties."

In the operation, doctors cut out the mitral valve in Wayne's heart and replaced it with a similar valve from a pig. The valve separates the left atrium from the left ventricle.

Wayne's valve had ruptured, allowing blood to leak from his heart into his lungs. Doctors said this made Wayne weak and short of breath.

'Mighty Mouse' Resists Poison

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A new breed of mouse, unfazed by traditional rodent poisons, has taken up residence in a number of homes and exterminators are scratching their heads in dismay.

Nicknamed "Superrodent" or "Mighty Mouse," those who deal with them say the mice constitute the worst rodent infestation in a decade.

Don Schultz, a rat control specialist for the health department, said the mutant mice are offspring of common house mice that have developed a resistance to poisons used routinely by exterminators and homeowners.

There is a new chemical available that authorities say is safe and effective. The only trouble is, the mice turn their noses up at it.

One rat control specialist with the health department offers a solution.

"I know I'm not supposed to say this," he said, "but I've had friends that had problems and as a last resort I've recommended a cat. It seems to work every time."

He said he had mice problems himself "until I got my Siamese cat. I haven't seen a mouse since."

Circus Kids Lead Fantasy Lives

By VICTORIA GRAHAM

NEW YORK (AP) — They dress in spangles, boys in top hats and girls with decolletage. They are not embarrassed by applause, awed by elephants or doubled up by clowns. Their noses rarely wrinkle at animal smells.

Circus kids is what they are. Twice every day, seven days a week, to the roll of drums and aroma of caramel popcorn, nine boys and girls live out their children's fantasies. They are part of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum Bailey Circus.

Julio Farias, 14, flies through the air. Shannon Woodcock, 8, and his 6-year-old sister, Delilah, ride elephants. Pinky Bale, who says "I am nine and three-quarters and my real name is Caroline," rides a horse.

Then they slip into jeans and T-shirts and do what other kids do: study, play, watch television, visit friends, play pranks. School is sandwiched between acts and after dinner for two hours a day.

Turned out in sequins and awaiting their cues, Shannon pinches Steffie Slavovi, the tiniest Bulgarian bareback rider. Steffie cries and runs to her grandmother, Madame Slavovi, who sighs and observes, "Kids will be kids." Pinky scolds Shannon. The show goes on.

"We're just normal kids and we love the circus," said Julio, whose best trick is a triple somersault. His 6-year-old brother, Tata, and 9-year-old sister, Carmelina, join him on the trapeze.

The kids are now at Madison Square Garden and in June will be off to Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and other cities.

But while in New York, the youngsters have become the center of a legal dispute involving the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the city and the circus.

The society says the circus is violating an 1876 law against using children under 16 in high wire, animal and other acts. But a court has issued a stay and the kids are mostly oblivious to the fight.

"Don't ask them about it," said a circus spokeswoman. "They don't understand."

But Julio, the eldest, understands and defends his work. "This is my life and my work," he said, rubbing his powdered palms, callused from the trapeze. "If they ground me, then I get out of shape. My calluses get soft and later they bleed."

"I also believe kids should be protected," said his Cuban-born father, Fidel, who catches Julio when he spins from his third somersault. "But why don't they go up to 125th Street and protect the kids there? I read that two kids are hired to kill. I read about an abandoned baby in New York. But in the circus, kids are safe."

"Always my children are next to me and they go with me always," Farias said. "They are working on their future. They have bank accounts. And when Julio is 16 I will buy him the best car."

Julio said proudly, "We live in a 21-foot trailer and have everything we want. We have good friends here from all over the world. You can learn Polish or Hungarian and collect stamps."

He doesn't think circus kids are different. "I don't think of myself as a star because in the circus everyone is a star."

Tow-headed, freckled Shannon, whose parents, Buckles and Barbara Woodcock, train elephants, looks up from his water-color painting and breaks into a chattering monologue about the elephants:

"I really like it and when the elephants run you go up and down. Boing. Boing. Boing. And I'm not scared because I hold onto the harness. And I like the different people and my mother likes it when we're on the road on the train and she can sleep late."

Rider Pinky Bale is used to seeing her father, stuntman Elvin Bale, shot from a cannon and her mother, Jeannette Williams, train cheetahs. Someday she would like to try the trapeze or train horses.

Pinky, who is pretty, poised and sweetly glib, kissed her horses. "I just love the circus," she said.

And what does she like best? She pursed her lips, thought a bit, brightened and clasped her hands. "I just love watching people really get happy."

BETWEEN ACTS — Circus youngsters bend over watercolors on a bench in a hallway recently. School is sandwiched between acts for the youngsters and is also tucked in for two added hours after dinner. The youngsters are at the center of a dispute involving the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, the city and the circus. (AP Laserphoto)

Former School Official Sues Area District

Former Southland schools superintendent T.E. Dickerson Tuesday filed a federal suit against the district, seeking an award of damages and reinstatement to his former position.

The school board voted unanimously to dismiss Dickerson May 28, 1976, about midway through a three-year contract.

Dickerson claims in the suit that he was discharged because he had actively participated in school board elections against two incumbent trustees.

The suit names the seven trustees on the board at the time of Dickerson's dismissal as defendants, along with the district.

Dickerson claims he sustained approximately $69,000 in actual monetary damages as the result of the alleged breach of contract.

The plaintiff claims he suffered in name and reputation damages amounting to $75,000.

The suit asks that $10,000 in punitive damages be assessed against each defendant.

Among other things, the suit also asks for a permanent injunction ordering Dickerson, now a San Marcos resident, to be reinstated to his former position under terms of the former contract.

Permanent members of the U.N. Security Council are: China, France, the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom, and the U.S.

Trade Unionists Prepare To Blast Multinationals

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

LONDON — An international trade union group is quietly preparing to issue a series of charges against a number of major multinational corporations that could have important ramifications on the way such companies do business in the industrialized world.

Tuesday, we've learned, the union group plans to accuse the multinationals of violating a voluntary code of conduct recommended by the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, whose members include the United States, Canada, Japan and the countries of Western Europe.

The planned move, following similar charges last year, is considered by international business executives based here, to be part of a union strategy to limit or multinational contract bargaining. The unions would like to turn the present voluntary OECD guidelines into a legally binding code and set up a judicial procedure for handling alleged violations.

The companies bitterly oppose a compulsory code because they feel it would restrict the freedom of their operations and would also force them to disclose too much information about their activities in individual countries and open them up to increased union demands. As a result, employer groups in most of the OECD nations have urged their memberships to support the voluntary guidelines in an effort to stave off more drastic action. Many companies however, have failed to respond.

"Although it's the policy of the U.S. government to get American companies to endorse the voluntary code to avert something that could be legal and binding and compulsory, that effort has been falling on dead ears," a London-based American executive told us. "They don't seem to understand the problem. It's very short-sighted to them."

The union group — the Trade Union Advisory Committee (TUAC) to the OECD's Committee on International Investment and Multinational Enterprise — made its move last March when it took a meeting with the committee by surprise by accusing a dozen multinational corporations, including Bendix, Citicorp, International Telephone & Telegraph, Litton and Warner-Lambert, of violating the voluntary guideline relating to industrial relations. It charged individual companies with such things as conducting a world-wide anti-union policy, changing the corporate structure of a subsidiary to evade union representation and improperly closing down operations in specific countries.

One of the examples cited was the now-famous Badger case, in which the Badger Co., an American engineering and construction company, refused to pay 250 dismissed employees of its bankrupt Belgian subsidiary the severance pay called for under Belgian law. The parent company — itself a subsidiary of Raytheon

Corp. — claimed that it was not legally liable for the debt.

That position set off a chain of events that led to the OECD accusation by TUAC, which was supported by the Belgian government in its asserting that the failure to pay the severance violated the OECD guidelines. Other multinationals, while agreeing that the guidelines were voluntary, felt that the parent company had a moral obligation to carry out the subsidiary's responsibility. They also pointed out that not to do so would intensify the demands for a compulsory code.

Following pressure from all sides at the OECD meeting, the parent company agreed to begin negotiations on making the severance payments to the dismissed workers and an agreement was reached last April.

A new book, "The Badger Case," written by a Belgian professor who served as an adviser in the case and containing a foreword by the government official who headed the negotiations, has just been published in the Netherlands. It describes the episode as a landmark case in the history of the industrial relations impact of multinational enterprises, since it tested for the first time the credibility of international guideline for multinationals and the response to them by governments, unions and employers.

With the Badger victory under its belt, TUAC plans to come to next week's meeting in Paris of the OECD committee on multinational enterprises with a new list of alleged violations of the guidelines. In anticipation of renewed fireworks, some member governments — including the U.S. — are expected to upgrade the level of their representation at the session and be better prepared to deal with the union charges and TUAC's efforts to build a record to support a push for a compulsory code when the present guideline comes up for review in June 1979.

In addition, the business counterpart of the union group, the Business and Industry Advisory Committee (BIAC) has been intensifying its efforts to drum up support for the voluntary guidelines among corporations in the OECD member countries in order to counter union charges that the absence of real support for the present code points up the need for a compulsory legal framework.

Critics Urge Carter To Take Action

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter returns from dealing with some of the hottest international issues of the day to find smoke rising from various areas of the economy, and also from his critics.

The economy is not in good shape, and the critics are shouting loudly that it cannot correct itself until Carter takes firm hold of the reins and gives a good hard tug.

He did grab the reins briefly and effectively while in Brazil, denouncing the $10.50 price increase announced by U.S. Steel, and forcing a rollback to a more acceptable figure of $5.50.

But one tug doesn't make a program, and the critics — angry, impatient, doubting, fearful — are asking what he's going to do about the dollar, the trade imbalance, food prices, taxes, government spending.

All these have become the subject of speculation in the mass media, as well as in the allegedly confidential memos sent by private economists and in the more widely distributed bank newsletters.

The most outspoken of the criticisms was delivered by Business Week magazine, which scolded the president for having "let the nation go a long way down the road toward destructive inflation."

Claiming Carter has "made a hodgepodge of his economic program by trying to give something to everyone" for political reasons, it warned "he must change course to avoid an economic fiasco."

In case the message was missed, the magazine reprinted the editorial in a full-page advertisement in the New York Times, urging that it be read by "every American business executive and President Carter."

Clearly, one of the great frustrations of many critics is their view that the federal government itself is spattering grease on the economy while blaming private industry.

They feel the government isn't credible. While talking about the dangers of inflation, Congress backs a higher minimum wage, higher farm price supports and restrictions on lower-priced imports.

And so they drop their estimates of anticipated growth, and raise the odds on higher prices and perhaps recession.

Typical of that position is Merrill Lynch Economics. After listing actions that can only exert more pressure on prices, including the budget deficit and an excessively loose monetary policy, it comments:

"Thus we continue to expect an underlying uptrend in inflation and interest rates, to the point where growth slows sharply, or recession begins, sometime early next year or late this year."

In short, private industry is ringing the inflation alarm, but it fears the fire department either won't respond or will come and put out the economy along with the fire.

The latter could be accomplished with controls, business executives feel, and a poll of 1,100 chief executives by the National Chamber of Commerce found that nearly half expect them to be imposed.

One explanation for the fear is the belief of many critics that the administration is now in such a bind, partly because of its own lack of a program, that already it has no other way out.

Woman Enters Plea In Death Of Son

HOUSTON (UPI) — A clerk Monday pleaded no contest to child abuse charges in the suffocation death of her 5-year-old son last summer. Verda Faye Butler, 23, was charged — along with her boyfriend, Robert John Ferrante, 26 — following the death of Heath Butler.

The boy who had been wrapped in blankets on a hot night to "sweat stubbornness out of him." A jury convicted Ferrante of criminally negligent homicide after he admitted wrapping the child in the blankets. He was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $2,000.

State District Judge Jon Hughes scheduled sentencing of Mrs. Butler for May 19 to allow time for a pre-sentencing background investigation.

Ginger Rogers' Palladium Show Dips Into Store Of Memories

By RUTH GRUBER
LONDON (UPI) — It's a long time since the all-singing, all-dancing days of the 1930s when Ginger Rogers starred in movies like "Goldiggers of 1933" and later, with Fred Astaire, swept millions of fans off their feet with her fancy footwork.

She has become a nostalgic symbol of "the good old days" both for oldsters who remember them — and for youngsters who wish they could.

And though her career spans more decades than one would think polite to mention, Miss Rogers is happy to recall them. She has dipped into her store of memories and used them to create an autobiographical show that has just opened at London's Palladium.

"The current nostalgia boom represents a longing for the ideals — those lost values — of days gone by," Miss Rogers said before the opening of her two-week run.

"It's very comforting to know that I've been singled out to represent a time when the theatrical world was presenting entertainment — not violence, filth and obscenity," she said.

The years have treated Miss Rogers kindly. At 66 she comes out on stage in a swirl of pink and ostrich feathers. A huge blonde wig makes her look like what Dolly Parton will look like in 20 or 30 years.

Her voice is strong, her dancing confident — even the high kicks — and she looks like she's loving every minute.

"I'm a very happy person," she said. "I love to work — and I've always been very contented with my work."

Her Palladium show uses film clips and slides to flashback through her life and she sings a lot of the songs she made famous in the movies and on stage.

"We really don't have composers any more like the ones we had back then," she said. "Gershwin, Kern, Berlin, Cole Porter. What material!"

Miss Rogers said that despite her continuing success and popularity, her life as an entertainer had not been all roses.

"I was pigeonholed as a singer-dancer, just like everyone is pigeonholed into some slot," she said, adding that dramatic roles like "Kitty Foyle" gave her some of her most pleasurable moments as an

Princess Rejoins Husband In Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — After nine years of exile from her husband's country, Dutch Princess Irene has returned to Spain and rejoined her husband, Prince Carlos Hugo de Bourbon-Parma, the leader of the Carlist Party.

Dictator Francisco Franco expelled the couple in 1968 because of their campaign to put the prince on the then vacant Spanish throne. Prince Juan Carlos of the Bourbon branch that took the throne in 1970 became king in 1975 and Prince Carlos Hugo was allowed to return five months ago.

actress.

"It was the hardest thing in the world to accept being a woman in a man's world, which the entertainment industry is," she said. "I often wished I was a man, for being a woman often prevented me from doing things that I wanted to."

Directing, for example, I always wanted to direct. I think I'm capable of doing it. But I think that being a woman back in the '30s and so on prevented me from doing this."

Miss Rogers, a devout Christian Scientist from childhood, said she would like to do another film — to add to the 73 she already has acted in — but only "if it's in the same flavor as the films I did in the past."

Those movies, she said, "were entertainment with a capital 'E' — and she is quick to condemn films of today that she finds overly concerned with sex and violence."

"I don't think people invite you into their homes and first entertain you in their bathrooms," she said.

Because she prefers not to see such films, she said, she is not really familiar with a lot of the younger stars.

For example, she has not seen John Travolta, whose dancing in "Saturday Night Fever" has prompted some critics to call him a "new Fred Astaire."

But she did have one thing to say about him, sight unseen.

"Oh, no," she said. "I doubt that. No matter how good he is, he won't be another Fred Astaire ... There's only one Fred Astaire."

Linden Keeps Working To Prove Versatility

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — If Hal Linden seems to be popping up all over the place — in movies, TV specials, nightclubs and stage — it's not that he needs the money. Hal is trying to escape the pursuit of a cop named Barney Miller.

For four years now Linden has played Barney in TV's classiest sitcom, "Barney Miller," and he is anxious not to become too closely identified with the sad-eyed police captain.

As it is, half the people who greet Hal on the street call him Barney.

Linden is convinced his best defense is to spread himself around, doing as many things as possible to prove his versatility.

Linden is aware the show will end some day. He plans to insure his future by disassociating himself from Barney except for a half-hour on Thursday nights.

"You have to branch out while you're still on the air and the show is hot," Linden said. "You can't wait until you become so firmly fixed in the public mind that the image can't be changed."

Hal's first departure was a TV movie in Barney's second year followed by the pilot movie for "The Love Boat" series.

For two years Hal has been seen on Sundays as the host of "Animals, Animals, Animals," an entertaining and educational nature show primarily directed at children. He is not identified or introduced as the actor who plays Barney.

Hal has guest-starred in two TV specials this spring, singing and ice skating with Dorothy Hamill, and playing the clarinet and cutting up with the Captain and Tennille.

That's not all. You want busy? Hal Linden will give you busy.

He leaves this month for El Paso for his first starring role in a movie, sharing billing with Marjoe Gortner and Lee Grant in "When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?"

Special arrangements have been made to fly Hal in a private jet from El Paso to Mobile, Ala., May 8 to play host and master of ceremonies at the 21st annual America's Junior Miss Pageant.

When the movie is completed, Hal will return to Hollywood to produce and star in his first musical TV special for next season. He will sing, dance and include a number from his act. He will make no mention of "Barney Miller."

After that, Hal may try to work in a couple of nightclub bookings.

There won't be any vacations in Hal's peil mell flight from Barney until production on the series is resumed this summer.

"Let me say I love our series," Hal said. "Every year more work is put into perfecting the stories and the performances. It gets harder, not easier, because we are all working for quality."

"But every actor would like to think he has more arrows in his quiver than the one with which audiences identify him. It's a prime battle for me to prove I'm versatile because of my Broadway background in musicals and drama and my appearances in Las Vegas.

"If you get caught in only one area of your career, say, in a situation comedy like 'Barney Miller,' you can find it difficult to get back to other areas."

"It's a lot easier for me to do than Carroll O'Connor or Henry Winkler. They play Archie Bunker and the Fonz, both of whom are stronger, more flamboyant characters than Barney."

"Both Carroll and Henry have branched out, but I think they are more closely identified with their roles than I am."

"I don't know if it's the way to become a star, but I'd like to get back to Broadway now and then, too. Everything I do is specifically planned to get away from Barney."

Linden was doing well in his native New York, working in the theater and occasional television shows before he came west for the series. Although he was measured a success, he wasn't famous until "Barney Miller" came along.

He appreciates the fact that the ABC-TV series has made him rich and will make him richer in the years ahead. But how much longer would he like to stay with the show?

New TV Series Provides Look At Life Between Two World Wars

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI)—A new series devoted to the flamboyant period between World Wars I and II opens with the dramatic flair of a high school audio-visual presentation.

Although the series promises better material later, it is only fair to the audience to warn that "Between the Wars" opens with Eric Sevareid delivering what amounts to a lantern slide lecture, interrupted occasionally by scholarly interviews and snippets of film. One film clip shows Woodrow Wilson playing shuffleboard.

"Between the Wars" is a Mobil Showcase presentation that the oil company has sold to an independent network of television stations. Unlike ordinary "syndication" sales to individual stations, the Mobil shows ("When Havoc Struck" was the first) appear at the same time in each market in which they have been sold—beginning today, 6:30-7 p.m., Central time. (Check local listings.)

It's unfortunate that the planners of an ambitious and worthy project such as this diplomatic history from Versailles to Pearl Harbor failed to compensate for a predictable weakness in the early shows—lack of good film.

As welcome back as series narrator Sevareid may be from his brief retirement, he can't carry the television audience without good visual backup.

It might at least have given audiences a taste of good things to come if the makers of the series had devoted the opening half hour to an overview of the period, which would have allowed them to whet viewer appetites.

Then they could have gone on to what is the subject of the first episode in this history—the Paris Peace Conference following World War I that ended with the signing of the Treaty of Versailles, concentrating on the diplomats who shaped it, and the American president whose hopes for securing peace were doomed by what happened there.

The show has a few light moments, as when France's Georges Clemenceau, puzzled by Wilson, is said to have commented on the American: "He talked like Jesus Christ but acted like Lloyd George."

Most startling was the view of a medical expert that one symptom of Wilson's influenza, which he contracted in Paris, might have been inflammation of the brain, a form of encephalitis that could have compromised his judgment.

"Between the Wars" offers 16 installments, as it calls the roll of events leading to World War II—from the American refusal to join the League of Nations, through isolationism, the great depression and the rise of Hitler, problems in the Pacific and those preliminary bouts, the Italian-Ethiopian and Spanish Civil Wars, right down to the main event at Pearl Harbor.

History buffs will find the series fascinating, and viewers will find it informative. The shows are a bonanza for high school students interested in the era.

Many Uses Found For Recorders

By LEROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI)—When TV home recorders first appeared on the market it was assumed they would be used primarily by the well-to-do to catch up on favorite programs they had to miss.

But it turns out that most uses of the recorders are much more utilitarian. A lot of the usage is educational or professional, according to Sanyo Electric, Inc., of Compton, Calif., which distributes the Japanese-made Betacord recorder in the United States.

The recorders are not inexpensive. The Betacord basic model, for example, has a suggested retail price of $995. In order to use it for most of these specialized applications, the user also must buy a hand-held TV camera for around $750 in black and white and up to $4,000 in color and perhaps some other peripheral equipment.

For many uses, the cost is well worthwhile, Sanyo says. For instance:

An optician in Dallas deals with fussy patient-customers by shooting their picture with a concealed TV camera as they try on glasses, then showing it to them on the Betacord.

"They like it so much better than the old mirror," says Sheldon Weisman of Forest Lane Optical Co., "that I can make a sale now in 15 minutes that often used to take an hour."

Coaches of ice skating, hockey, tennis and football teams have found the small TV recorder and camera system a vast improvement over movie film in correcting players' mistakes because it is instant and can be used in either regular or slow motion.

The recorder also is replacing the movie camera for horse race finishes at some tracks and is being used by show horse trainers to improve performance much as athletic coaches use it.

The full length mirror for generations has been the dancing school's chief correction tool; now it is being supplemented by the portable TV camera and small recorder. Mrs. Joanne Dierdorff, ballet instructor at the University of Redlands in California, says the mirror necessarily distorts the dancer's movements; the TV recorder shows them faithfully.

Southland Corp.'s Embassy Dairy at Waldorf, Md., has put all its service manuals into videotape.

Charles Morgan, sales manager of Vretsch Vending Machines at Warsaw, Ind., has used Betacord to build up a big library of tape cassettes for salesmen to use in dealing with customers.

Pierce Construction Co. of Holland, Ohio, uses the system to make on-site recorded observations in preparation for submitting bids and to inspect the quality of the work after the job is in progress.

Providence Medical Center in Portland, Ore., uses the system in psychiatry. Dr. Kent Neff says pictures of patients gather a lot of valuable behavioral information.

"There is often an amazing amount of recall by the patients when you play the pictures back to them," he said.

At the Snowbird, Utah, ski center, ski instructors are using the TV camera and recorder to show skiers how to play it safe. Terry Derry backpacks the recorder, camera and cassettes to classes on the slopes. He says there is no doubt that this has reduced falls.

Food Reserve Plan Costs Increase

WASHINGTON (AP)—Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has delayed so long in buying wheat for an international food reserve that its costs now are nearly 40 percent higher than when he announced the plan last summer.

The plan involves 220 million bushels of wheat which the Carter administration announced last Aug. 29 would be purchased from the open market and kept as a reserve of food aid for needy countries. Bergland had the authority to buy the grain last summer but decided to wait until Congress approved legislation to set up the reserve. Action is still pending.

Mark Rudd Now Leads Quiet Life

By STEVE HINDY
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Mark Rudd, the student radical leader of the 1960s who emerged from hiding last fall to face long-standing charges, now leads a quiet life while his lawyer tries to get one remaining charge against him dismissed — marijuana possession.

charge against Rudd is for alleged possession of marijuana at the Canadian border in New York's Niagara County in 1969.

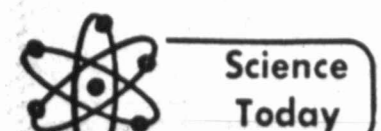

Fewer Injuries Noted In Swimming, Tennis

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Does an injured offspring short circuit your nervous system? Spare yourself. Talk son or daughter into taking up swimming or tennis on the high school sports front.

A study of injuries in high school sports shows the two activities score the lowest rates.

"We're going to show a film called 'The Columbia Strike' and a series of people who were involved, including Mark, are going to talk," Starr said.

Rudd went free in October after pleading guilty to a single charge of criminal trespass in connection with the 1968 Columbia takeover. The district attorney's office did not comment on the plea bargain that resulted in Rudd's freedom.

in injury rates — for both sexes. Football and wrestling account for the highest injury rates, according to sports health detectives reporting in Pediatrics, journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Dr. James G. Garrick and his associate, Ralph K. Requa, both with the department of orthopedic surgery at the University of Washington, base their report on a two-year study of injuries among participants in sports at four high schools in the Seattle area.

At least 5.5 million American youths participate in high school athletics. The study showed injuries occurred in women's sports at a rate of 22 per 100 participants; among men, at a rate of 39 per 100.

"In spite of improvements in safety equipment, training and conditioning programs, as well as more sophisticated medical surveillance, the number of athletes injured as a result of sports participation continues to increase," Garrick reported.

"Providing routine medical care for 5.5 million teen-agers is logistically difficult, and placing these youngsters in a highly competitive active sport environment compounds the problem.

"Obviously there simply are not enough physicians, athletic trainers, nurses or other medically trained individuals to be present at every competitive event in the 33 high school sports to say nothing of the practice sessions.

"Just providing physician coverage for more than 125,000 high school football games each fall is an impossible task."

Other highlights of the report: — Two-thirds of the injuries occur during practice — the activity accompanied by the lowest level of medical care.

— Forty-two percent of the injuries were examined by physicians. In many instances the physician's visit was prompted by concern regarding the potential presence of a fracture.

The information, according to the investigators, can help school officials to make decisions regarding insurance coverage and assigning medical or paramedical personnel to athletic events and practice sessions likely to have high injury

Interest In Plant Growing

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Some say it looks like a naked woman. The Russians are growing a lot of it and no one seems to know why.

In the minds of many, it's good for everything from warts to whooping cough — the greatest thing since the invention of shoe laces and transcendental meditation.

And it's expensive — up to $100 a pound.

It's the wild ginseng root, recently classified as an endangered species. As a cash crop, the root must be nurtured in the shade, often under sheds. And ginseng connoisseurs believe the most efficacious roots are those that most closely resemble the female form.

Whatever its value to mankind, little is known about the plant.

Emil Staba, a professor at the University of Minnesota College of Pharmacy, is one of the few ginseng researchers in the world. He has been studying the root for seven years, working with Edith Chen, a doctoral candidate, Ronald Sawbuck, a fellow professor, and a pair of Wisconsin ginseng farmers.

Staba and his crew have made three significant scientific contributions. They have developed a technique for growing ginseng tissue culture in a laboratory. And they have discovered that the same qualities found in the root are present in the leaves and stem of the plant, which may be good news to those paying high prices for the root alone.

The third contribution is what happens to ginseng when it is eaten by rabbits — apparently, not much.

"The national interest in ginseng has become tremendous," Staba said. "Exports from this country last year totaled $1 million. It's also an important product of South Korea, Taiwan, the Philippines and Switzerland."

The Swiss are experimenting on the plant's possible value to the aging.

Staba's experiments with the chemical qualities of ginseng have neither proven nor disproven claims for the plant. There are some indications of toxicity, he said, but there have been few signs of bad side effects among rabbits.

"We aren't in the position of saying whether or not ginseng is everything it's cracked up to be," Staba said. "We aren't saying it's a utopian drug, but we aren't saying it isn't either."

By JOSEPH BONNEY
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jim Baldwin is a 33-year-old contractor who thinks it's great sport to crawl through the underbrush and shoot people with a BB gun.

Baldwin heads a club of 30 adults who spend their spare time planning and fighting war games — using real BBs as ammunition and real people as targets. They fight with regular BB guns and automatic weapons that fire 600 BBs a minute. They're building a plywood tank and plan to convert an old Volkswagen into a supertank with a gun turret on top.

They hold strategy meetings every Tuesday, go on weekend field maneuvers, and regularly engage a rival club in nearby Covington in wilderness fights lasting 12 to 24 hours.

It sounds utterly insane, but Baldwin and his pals maintain it's just good, clean fun.

"You know, you get into your 30s, and you don't play tennis, you don't play golf, you don't want to go out and play football and tear up your legs. ..." Baldwin said. "This is a fun sport. It's a good release."

Fun maybe, but it still sounds dangerous.

"Perfectly safe," Baldwin said. All combatants wear heavy clothes, helmets, and masks of wire mesh and shatterproof plastic. High-powered guns are banned, and each fighter must be willing to test his weapon on himself at point-blank range. Participants say in five years no one has been seriously hurt.

Knives and rough physical contact are forbidden, and the club — the Greater New Orleans BB Warriors — screens potential members to keep out over-aggressive "crazies."

Most of the club's regulars are in their 20s or early 30s. None is a military veteran. Some are construction workers, one is a ceramic sculptor, one plays guitar for a rock band. A few are women.

Baldwin said he and a friend, Alfred Booth, cooked up the game one night.

"We were just sitting around, getting loaded, when we got the idea," he said. They contrived a seven-page rule book, complete with glossary of war-games jargon and detailed precautions for safety and fun.

The battles are held in rural areas across Lake Pontchartrain or on deposits of sand in the Bonnet Carre floodway between the Mississippi River and the lake.

Each battle has its own "scenario." Sometimes one side will defend a fort and the other side will attack. Sometimes it will be a clash between two guerrilla forces. Points are scored by objectives, like taking a fort or "killing" an enemy soldier.

A "kill" means a soldier is shot three times with BBs or is hit by a grenade made of flour or BBs wrapped around a firecracker. The slain warrior then goes to the "dead zone," which is like the penalty box in ice hockey. After an hour, a dead soldier is "reborn" and can resume battle.

In the dead zone there's cold beer, food, and a lot of talk between opposing sides, and that helps make the honor system work, Baldwin said. "If you make it fun to lose, you don't have to worry about the honesty. Look at football, where losing isn't fun. You need a referee to keep them honest."

RIOTERS KILLED

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Nine persons died Monday from police gunfire during rioting that crippled the central Indian city of Hyderabad, police reported. "Police had to open fire in self-defense and to prevent large-scale destruction of property and buses," a police spokesman said.

ON THE ATTACK — Members of a club that fights "battles" with BB guns charge through underbrush to attack the enemy. About 30 grownups in New Orleans participate in the unusual sport. Real BBs are shot at real people, but participants are protected by heavy clothing, masks and helmets. (AP Laserphoto)

Mystery Surrounds Girl's Kidnapping

MORGAN CITY, La. (UPI) — The mystery about the kidnapping of Mary Leah Rodermund is more than a month old, but the teen-ager's parents say they still hope to see their daughter alive.

Miss Rodermund vanished on a Sunday one month ago while running some errands. In a brief call a few hours later, a man demanded $5,000 ransom and let her speak to her father, Carl Rodermund, for a few seconds. Then the line went dead. Rodermund was ready to pay. But the kidnapper never called back.

The few clues about her disappearance have fizzled out, but Rodermund said he has not lost faith.

"I think the fact that we haven't heard is an indication she's out there somewhere," he said. "At least eight hours after she disappeared she was still alive, so that gives me hope."

Does he think she was killed? "Of course, I can't say (for sure). We just don't think so."

Police and the FBI spent hundreds of man-hours on the case.

"It's cold," said FBI spokesman Al Sims. Dozens of tips came in, but few led anywhere. Several people who might have seen the abduction remain to be questioned, Sims said, but essentially the investigation is at a dead end.

"We've talked to half the people in Morgan City," he said. "Everything that we were able to develop concerning the girl indicated that it was a legitimate kidnap, not a runaway or a hoax or anything like that. We're still operating on that premise."

Miss Rodermund's car was found in the parking lot of a drugstore where she had run some errands. The kidnapping sent waves of shock through Morgan City High School, where "Leah," as she was called, was a sophomore.

One neighbor, for whom she babysat, said Leah was "just as sweet a person as you'd ever want to meet." Her steady boyfriend and she got along well and nobody could think of any reason for her to run away.

The Rodermunds thought about it — but dismissed it.

"Of course, I had hoped it was a runaway from the beginning and we did consider the possibility. It didn't seem likely then and nothing has changed to make it seem likely now," said Rodermund, an oil company executive.

"We've had time to reflect, and after reflection there's still — we can't imagine any reason why she might have run away."

The four other Rodermund children gathered at the house to await word and the tense wait for a call from the kidnapers was trying.

"Probably for two weeks we anticipated something," Rodermund said. "Since then, not too much — although every call, possibly we secretly hope and have a little anticipation that it will be from her or the kidnapers."

EDITOR'S NOTE

Water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink... Water is the target of good poetry and bad jokes. There's nothing like it. No one thinks much about it — until it's unavailable. But water is the lifeblood of the Texas economy, rivaling oil and gas in economic importance. This is another in a series of special reports on Texas water.

By MIKE COCHRAN

AUSTIN (AP) — "Water, taken in moderation, can not hurt anyone." — Mark Twain.

"A mixture of brandy and water spoils two good things." — A wise old sage.

Water, when compared with more exotic delights, seldom fares better than poor. Devotees of the devil's brew spurn it as an unnecessary evil.

That old scoundrel W. C. Fields cursed it immortally.

So who needs it?

With all due respects to ol' W. C., most everybody needs it, especially in Texas, the nation's third-largest state, with nearly 13 million thirsty residents.

Besides drinking it, Texans find water the lifeblood of a complex economy that includes hundreds of water-using industries and a variety of agricultural purposes.

Dr. Herbert Grubb of Austin, one of the state's outstanding authorities on water, talks in charts, graphs and smart, a combination which is not easily understood by everyone. But he makes this point:

"The interdependence among the specialized Texas industries makes it important for Industry A to be concerned about a water supply for Industries B, C and D, since Industry A may depend upon either or all of these other industries for essential production materials and for markets.

"For example, the retailer of finished foods, such as ground beef for hamburgers, depends upon the supply of beef, which depends upon the supply of grain, which depends upon a supply of irrigation water, fertilizer from the agricultural chemical industry, fuel from the energy industry to pump water, and a large number of inputs that are obtained from manufacturing industries."

In other words, a lot of people need a bunch of water for different reasons, or you can't have a hamburger.

And, as Grubb says:

"This analogy applies to clothing, housing, home furnishings, utilities, energy, transportation, medical services and supplies and all other goods and services produced within Texas and marketed to in-state and out-of-state customers."

Few states have such a diverse economy so dependent upon fresh water supplies. Some 72 percent of the present water use in Texas comes from underground sources, and most is used for irrigation.

Texas produces staggering amounts of grains, meats, cotton and other food and fiber, all requiring water. It is the leading oil and gas producer in America, and again water is essential.

Freshwater inflow into the bays and estuaries of the Texas coast provides the ecological balance for marine finfish and shellfish, the basis for another multimillion-dollar industry.

There are nearly 15,000 different manufacturing establishments in Texas, according to Grubb, "and the gross value of output by the 10 major water-using industries totals $17 billion annually."

The heavily industrialized areas in Southeast Texas are the major users, but paper milling, closely related to the East Texas logging and forestry industries, is another heavy user.

"Shortages of water required to produce paper will impact all areas of the state," Grubb said. He offers this example:

"A small shortage of 1,000 acre feet of water would cost an estimated 102 lost jobs, more than a $1 million decrease in income to Texas labor and a $100,000 decrease in taxes to state and local governments."

An acre foot is 325,850 gallons.

Now, the chilling news: Texas now uses some 17.3 million acre feet of water a year, and as its population and industry increase, so do its needs.

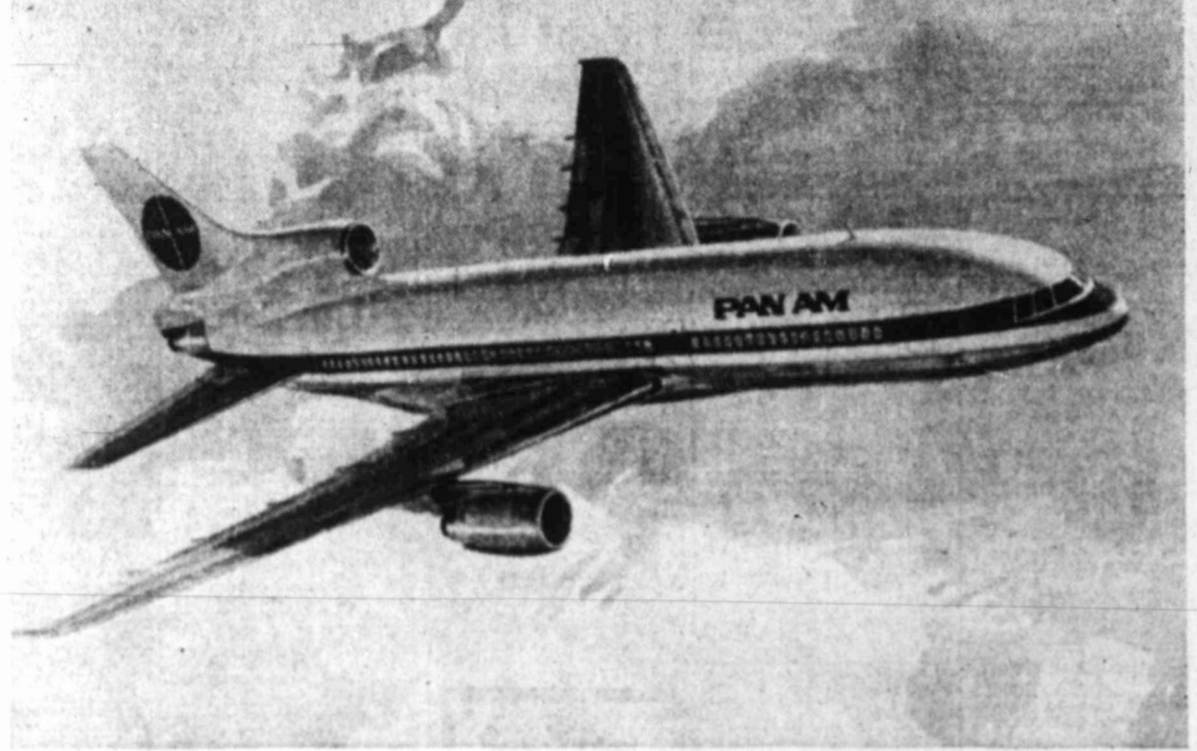

But it is now using its ground water at a clip of 12.2 million acre feet per year. Those underground aquifers, however, have a recharge capability of about 5.1 million acre feet.

So the state is using up 7.1 million acre feet of its reserve each year.

Allen White, Grubb's assistant as director of planning and development for the Texas Department of Water Resources, provided this analogy:

"Say you got a savings account and you put $5 million in each year. But somebody takes out $12 million a year. Even if you had $100 million to begin with, you can see what's going to happen if someone takes out $12 million a year. You're going to run out eventually."

The problem, he said, is that "it's just damn hard to get that across to the man on the street."

Shutouts Make Moegle Winningest Coach

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The whole thing seemed rather secondary to the day's main honoree, and that figures. Bobby Moegle usually takes such things in stride.

The whole thing was that Monterey's baseball coach became the all-time winningest high school baseball coach in Texas history by winning two more games Tuesday at Lowrey Field. But it wasn't a big deal to the 19-year veteran.

What mattered to Moegle was his senior pitchers Ron Reeves and Derek Hatfield blanked Coronado by 3-0 and 6-0 scores to start the District 4-AAAA schedule on a smooth note.

And records really aren't that important anyway. Sports writers probably invented these things just to throw into a dull story—every now and then. So in keeping with this assumed tradition, it is hereby written that Moegle has reached career victory No. 520 to outdistance Houston Reagan's Le Roy Ashmore at 519. The 21-year Houston coach stopped coaching in 1969 after heart problems.

It seems altogether fitting that Moegle broke the record during this district opener for a number of reasons:

1. The games needed a little spice to liven up things a bit.
2. Moegle got to beat his old player and assistant coach (Coronado's head coach John Dudley) for the 21st time in 22 tries.
3. And oh yes, the shutouts.

"I was real pleased with the two shutouts. I really didn't think either of our pitchers was as sharp as he has been. Getting off to a good start in district is more important than the record though. I really don't care what records I set as long as I don't set the record for most losses," Moegle said.

The Monterey coach felt the two games had very little in common. In the first game, Reeves and Coronado's Gene Segrest waged a close pitching duel in which one error and Segrest's momentary wildness determined the outcome. However in the second game, the Mustangs committed six errors while MHS compiled all their runs in the first three innings. And Coronado did very little to narrow the deficit because Hatfield chunked a one-hitter and encountered very few problems.

Monterey brushed up CHS second-game pitcher Russell Johnson for 4 runs and four hits in the first inning of the nightcap but the CHS lefty didn't allow an earned run. With two outs in the bottom of the first, Dana Rieger socked a hard grounder to the left side which CHS third baseman Terry Spradling booted. The error placed runners on first and second before Reeves sliced a double near the right field foul line to score Mike Wooten from second.

Rieger advanced to third on Reeves' double and both runners scored when Eric Voyles sliced a single to left on a 2-ball, no-strike pitch. Voyles moved to second on the throw to the plate and scored on Phil Bruedigam's line single to left. Here again, Bruedigam's hit came on a 3-ball, 1-strike pitch.

Errors damaged Johnson even worse in the third after Rieger stroked a leadoff single to left. Reeves grounded to third and Spradling's replacement, Mark King, tossed a high throw over his second baseman's head on a force play. Another error on a relay throw allowed Rieger to score seconds later and move Reeves to third.

Reeves added the other run when CHS shortstop Segrest booted Bruedigam's grounder. Bruedigam apparently scored moments later on Segrest's throwing error, but plate umpire Vernon Poerner field blanked Coronado by 3-0 and 6-0 scores to start the District 4-AAAA schedule on a smooth note.

And records really aren't that important anyway. Sports writers probably invented these things just to throw into a dull story—every now and then. So in keeping with this assumed tradition, it is hereby written that Moegle has reached career victory No. 520 to outdistance Houston Reagan's Le Roy Ashmore at 519. The 21-year Houston coach stopped coaching in 1969 after heart problems.

It seems altogether fitting that Moegle broke the record during this district opener for a number of reasons:

1. The games needed a little spice to liven up things a bit.
2. Moegle got to beat his old player and assistant coach (Coronado's head coach John Dudley) for the 21st time in 22 tries.
3. And oh yes, the shutouts.

"I was real pleased with the two shut-

The cowboy played an important role in the history of the Texas Plains. The large ranches which occupied the open and free range employed this rugged, hard-working individual to guard their herds from predators, marauding Indians and cattle rustlers. The cowboy was the sentry on guard. His courage helped to make this great area safe for the future farmers who would soon migrate to the plains.

Orr's Return Pleases Dockery

TIM ORR'S RETURN to the Texas Tech squad Tuesday was not sufficient reason to make Rex Dockery grow a foot taller. But it may have made the Raider head coach feel that way.

Orr, a sophomore-to-be running back, informed Tech coaches just prior to last Thursday's beginning of spring training that he was leaving the team, a decision that did not brighten the Raiders' running-back situation. Orr is a better-than-average talent at a position where Tech is not long on experience and numbers.

The Techs can count just one running back—junior-to-be fullback Sam Bailey—in camp that has significant varsity experience. Orr played enough to letter last season, but he cannot be considered a proven performer. Junior-to-be Eddie Monaco also lettered in 1977, but much of his playing time was on the specialty teams.

The other strong candidates at running back are sophomore squadmen Don Earl, Mark Olbert and Steve Dawson. So the return of Orr, a 6-5, 210-pounder with good speed and quickness, improved the overall outlook. Still, it is accurate to say that Tech has a problem at this position, and it must be resolved at least adequately if the Raiders are to be reasonably successful in 1978.

THE DEPTH PROBLEM is most critical now, since all except Bailey are unproven. Of course, some or all of the others could step forth between now and Tech's Sept. 10 opener against Southern California, but Bailey is now the sole known quantity. In a reserve role in 1977, he rushed for 203 yards, had a 4.1-yard average per carry and was the team's top kick returner. He possesses good quickness and toughness.

Barring injury, one would expect Bailey to start next season, but who will play opposite him and who will be the primary backups are unclear. More will be known after today's and Saturday's scrimmages.

Earl is the No. 1 tailback now. He was a late signee last summer after the high school coaches association all-star game. He has good speed and quickness, but lacks good size, standing just 5-7 and weighing 175 pounds.

The Stamford product was used at wide receiver in 1977 and caught four passes for 170 yards and a touchdown.

Dawson and Monaco are currently the No. 2 tailback and fullback, respectively. Dawson is a 6-1, 195-pounder with good ability. He gained 210 yards for the junior varsity last year on just 29 carries, a 7.2-yard average.

He had fumbleitis, though, and, like most of the others, lacks experience. He suffered a shoulder separation last year, but that has healed. He has also been troubled with flat feet, but is now wearing built-up shoes and arch supports, which are alleviating the problem to a large extent.

MONACO IS 5-11, 202, but he lacks speed, and that is his biggest drawback, although he is considered an excellent contributor to the special teams.

Orr is a player to watch. He was penciled in as the No. 1 tailback before spring training, but he'll have to earn the spot back after his three-day hiatus from practice. He has the ability to do it.

He has previously run the 40 in 4.6 and is quick off the mark for a back of his size. He exhibited his capabilities in the first half of Tech's junior varsity game against Ranger Junior College last season when he carried five times for 63 yards before suffering a sprained knee near the end of the first half.

The Tech staff is toying with the idea of installing portions of the I formation into its offense, although the split-back veer will remain the team's basic set. In the I, Orr, because of his size, would appear to be an ideal tailback.

THE SIXTH BACK in the group of candidates is Olbert. A 5-11, 190-pounder, Olbert doesn't have great straightaway speed—he won't outrun many second-yearmen—but he has good quickness to the line of scrimmage.

The Oklahoma native has been troubled by injuries since he's been at Tech. He missed his freshman campaign because of a back injury and subsequent operation and suffered a hyper-extended knee early in spring training.

Those are the six backs in the forefront of the battle now. It's a wide-open fight, and all have chances to contribute significantly next season. The amount of success Tech enjoys will depend in part on how well the backs develop.

Study Shows Artificial Turf Dangerous

WASHINGTON (AP) — More serious knee, ankle and foot injuries in college football are caused on artificial turf than on natural grass, according to a preliminary study presented to Congress today by the NFL Players Association.

The preliminary report, dealing with injuries associated with artificial turf and natural grass in college football for the seasons 1975-1977, indicates knee injuries for all three years are higher on ersatz surfaces even though 59 per cent of the practices and games were played on natural sod, said Ed Garvey, executive director of the pro football players union that has opposed the use of artificial turf.

"Knee injury rates are higher for practices and games," he said. "There are more 'significant' knee injuries on artificial turf and the data show an increasing rate of such injuries during the period surveyed."

He said the rates for foot and ankle injuries on artificial surfaces exhibit a similar relationship to that for knee injuries.

"Significant" injuries are those that restrict an athlete from participation for more than seven days.

Garvey gave the consumer subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee the data from a preliminary report of the National Athletic Injury-Illness Reporting System, a non-profit organization associated with Penn State University.

He told the subcommittee that the final report has not yet been submitted. He said there may be an effort made to relate the findings of the preliminary report with the type of shoe worn by the athletes.

"Nevertheless, these preliminary data overwhelmingly give further support to the NFLPA assertion that artificial turf is a dangerous product," said Garvey.

The Senate subcommittee is considering a three-year authorization bill to continue the Consumer Product Safety Commission that Garvey said the players' union believes "has defaulted in its responsibility to the public to assure sports and recreational product safety."

The players' association has sought unsuccessfully for the past five years for the commission to issue regulations on artificial turf or for the government agency to study football-related injuries.

"The Congress has recognized, rightly we believe, that consumer product safety must be a federal responsibility," said Garvey. "The agency it established to protect the public was given a broad charter and powers. But in the area of organized team sports, after five years experience, the record of this agency is a disaster," said Garvey.

Scattered '80 Olympics 'Attractive'

LONDON (AP) — Spread the Olympic Games around several cities . . . Do away with national flags and anthems at medals ceremonies . . . The old ideas are raised again, this time by politicians.

Denis Howell, Britain's Minister of Sport, aired the thoughts at a meeting of European sports ministers in London Tuesday.

He said he found the prospect of a scattered Olympics attractive, in view of the rising costs that few single cities can meet.

Howell spoke as Los Angeles faced a clash with the International Olympic Committee over its bid to host the Olympics of 1984. IOC members say Los Angeles has adopted an arrogant tone in replying to a questionnaire on the running of the Games. Los Angeles says it will not agree to anything that leaves the city with a deficit.

The California city — the only bidder for the 1984 Summer Games — makes its application to the IOC at Athens next month.

But in welcoming the idea of spreading the Olympics, Howell was concerned about splitting up Olympic Village.

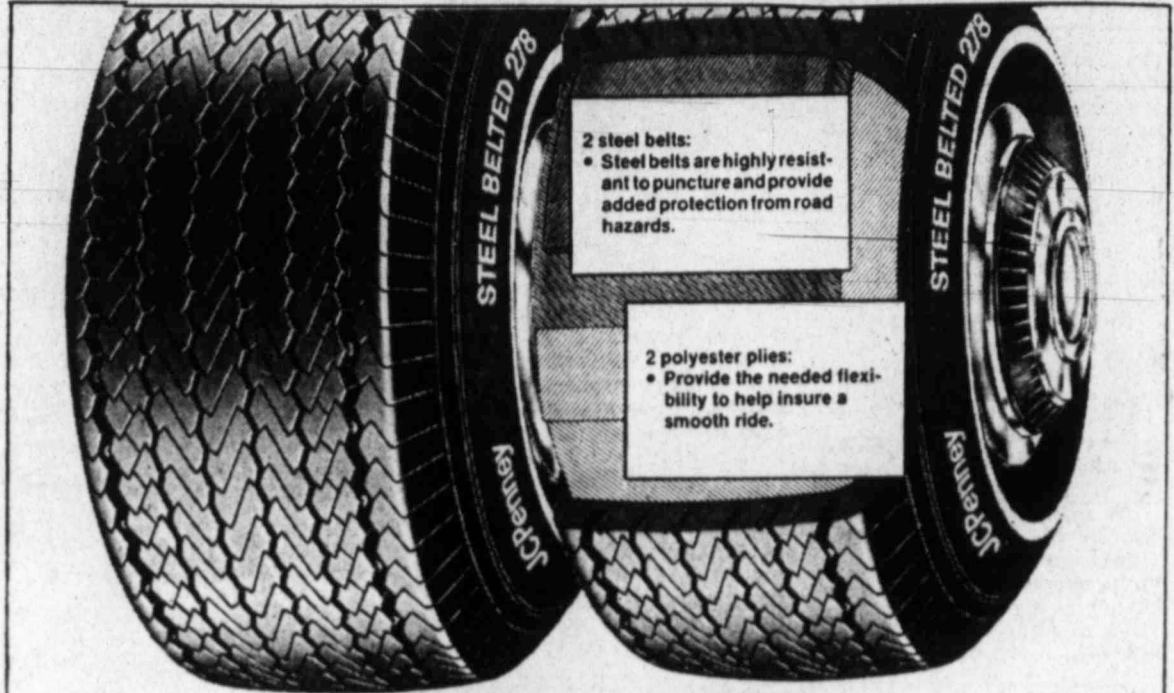

"Olympic Village, every four years, is the only place in the world where the youth of the world gets together, irrespective of the color of their governments or racial issues or anything else," Howell said.

"If we do regionalize the Olympics, what do we do about the village? We would have to establish some form of subsidiary villages."

Howell said it might be a good thing to diminish the importance of anthems and flags on big sporting occasions.

"For example, in the Olympic movement, many ministers have thought it might be a good thing to have an Olympic flag and an Olympic anthem at the medals ceremonies," he said. "That would do a great deal to take the heat out of international sport."

All of Howell's ideas have been raised before. Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, has himself spoken in favor of abolishing flags and anthems at the games, but the IOC has never taken it any further.

Chaps Continue Rampage, Topple ACU 11-4, 12-10

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Lubbock Christian College tried to finese Abilene Christian Tuesday afternoon, and it almost cost the Chaparrals their long winning streak. But the Chaps used a pair of weird double plays to end the last two frames and sweep the Wildcats for the third time this year and extend that unbeaten skein to 27 games.

Oscar Acosta was backed by eight extra base hits—including five homers—as he won the opener 11-4 to improve his record to 8-0. The Chaps tallied eight times in the first frame of the nightcap but had to hang on to post a 12-10 verdict and up their record to 30-9.

Richard Bowles, who had not seen mound duty since his senior year in high school in 1976, came in to relieve Richard Nixon to start the fifth inning of the finale and was touched for Mark Cowan's 3-run homer before he recorded an out.

And when he departed with one out and runners on first and second in the sixth, ACU had narrowed the gap to 11-9. Reliever Randy Elmore got a double play on an infield pop that was not caught. The umpires called the infield fly rule on Cowan's pop between home and the mound, but both base runners were off and running and third baseman Clark Langdon alertly tagged one out after catcher Bobby Doe let the ball drop.

Then in the seventh with runners at the corners and one out, Elmore fielded Brian Burton's one hopper back to the box, turned and fired to second. But Glenn Wilken and Steve Brigante turned Abbott and Costello as the sailed into centerfield, with ACU's 10th run scoring. However, Darius Copley fielded the ball in center and fired to Langdon at third to nail Craig Nolan, who had attempted to go from first to third. Then Langdon's throw to second was in plenty of time to nail Burton.

Langdon blasted his third and fourth homers of the year in the opener and Tim Leslie, who went five-for-eight for the day to hike his average to .467, uncorked Nos. 12 and 13' and Tommy Inman chipped in with his seventh, an inside-the-park jobber.

Langdon's 2-run shot in the second frame of the opener gave LCC the lead for good, and he added a solo shot after Brigante was thrown out trying to steal the fifth. Leslie had a solo blast in the fourth after Inman was out trying to steal and then that combination had back-to-back blows in the sixth, the fourth time this year they've turned that trick.

LCC tallied 7 tainted runs against winless Kent Boss (0-5) in the first one-third inning of the nightcap and ripped reliever

Oral Roberts Rips Tech

TULSA (Special)—Oral Roberts erupted for three runs apiece in the sixth and seventh innings Tuesday night to defeat Texas Tech 8-3 in a non-conference baseball game.

The teams play a single game tonight, beginning at 7, with Gary Moyer (4-1) the starting pitcher for Tech.

The Titans, 17-8, led by only 2-1 going into the sixth inning, but came up with three runs in that inning on a two-run single by Lyle Brakenridge and a run-scoring single by Audrie Culbert and then added three more in the seventh, two of those on Culbert's two-run single.

Tech, 20-15, had taken a 1-0 in the top of the third when Scott Leimgruber and John Keller hit back-to-back doubles, but ORU tied it in the bottom of the inning and then went ahead with a fifth-inning run.

The Raiders scored in seventh on Larry Selby's solo home run, his first of the season, and added another run in the ninth on Randy Newton's double and an ensuing sacrifice fly by Brooks Wallace.

Bowler Stands Second

DALLAS (Special)—Lubbockite Lydia Duncan stands second in the Novice Division singles with a 484 total—12 pins behind the leader—after the first weekend of the 41st annual Texoma Women's Bowling Association's State Tournament.

Eighteen-year-old Kathy Kirst of San Antonio rolled a 700 series and Robert Billings of Waco recorded the tournament's high game (258) and high series (670) on opening weekend.

Patty McDonald of Port Comfort rolled a 226 to take the early lead in the Billy Simon Award for Senior Age Citizens.

Two state records tumbled, also, as Cheryl Bodenhamer-Betty Ponder of San Antonio shattered the Class A doubles mark when they combined for a 596-627—1224 to best the two-year old mark. Dee Redd of Orange toppled an 11-year-old mark in Class C singles with a 627 as the 148-average bowler had games of 206-191-230 to best the old mark by seven pins.

Tulia's Carley Cosby ranks third in Class A All-Events with a 1648 total, 51 pins behind the leader.

Weiskopf Due Augusta Win?

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Golf is a means to an end for Tom Weiskopf. "I'm a very fortunate man," said Weiskopf, whose towering talent is matched by his occasional bursts of temperament. "Golf has been very, very good to me. I love the game. It's all I've ever done. I can't possibly imagine doing anything else for a living."

"Golf has given me a very good life. It's made me financially secure. And it gives me the time to do the other things in life that I enjoy."

Chief among them is big-game hunting, an activity close to his heart. He now has reached a status — secure in the front rank of the game's great players — which enables him to set a schedule that accommodates his hunting interests.

This fall, for example, he is going after big horn sheep in Alaska, possibly at the exclusion of the rich and prestigious World Series of Golf. He has not yet qualified for that event, but he may. If he does, he is uncertain whether he will compete.

"There are four kinds of game sheep on the North American continent," Weiskopf said. "I've got three of them. I'm going after the fourth this fall. Very few people have gotten all four. It's quite a distinction among hunters. It's something I want to do very much."

He has planned the Alaskan expedition for some time. And the World Series of Golf won't interfere.

"If I'm eligible, and I get my sheep in a hurry and can get back to Akron in time to prepare, then I'll play. But if it doesn't work out, if I don't get the sheep in a hurry, if I don't have time to put my game in shape, then I won't play."

That doesn't mean Weiskopf places golf in a secondary role in his life. It doesn't mean he is without golfing goals. Far from it. And one of his goals, perhaps his primary target, is the Masters championship which begins Thursday on the beautiful Augusta National Golf Club course.

"You can't play this game for long without developing a sense of tradition," he said. "And the Masters . . . well, there's so much tradition. I don't think there's any player on the tour that doesn't want to win Augusta."

He appears ready to make a strong run for it. A victory over Jack Nicklaus in the Doral Open has Weiskopf primed and ready. Despite a limited schedule this year, he has earned more than $54,000.

His career record, which includes more than $1 million in earnings and a British Open championship, makes him a top contender in any event he enters — particularly when his interest and enthusiasm are stirred in the Big Four events.

That's the case this week. There's nothing casual or off-hand about his preparations. And, he has an impressive history in this annual spring classic. His high, booming shots, ideally suited to the length and hills of Augusta National, have produced a record-matching four runner-up finishes.

But he hasn't won. "It doesn't mean I can't win," he said. "It just means that four times I've played almost good enough. I'm due."

'78 Masters Gets New Dimension

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—A new dimension has been added to the Masters Golf Tournament this year.

For almost two decades, there has been Jack Nicklaus, a towering giant of the game, supreme player, the man to beat every time the world's premier players assemble in one of the greatest spectacles in sports.

And there have been the challengers, the Weiskopfs, the Irwins, the Floyds, and, more recently and more successfully, Tom Watson, who last year beat the mighty Nicklaus at his own game — the dramatic finish in the greatest pressure golf can offer — over his own playground, the quiet beauty of Augusta National Golf Club, flowered, gently rolling hills that have served as the site for some of the game's most treasured legends.

Another Nicklaus-Watson confrontation is a titillating possibility in the Masters that begins Thursday; another match between the long-time ruler and the man who would be king. It's possible. But not really probable.

Of greater possibility, greater probability is the bold bid of Severiano Ballesteros, a dashing young Spaniard and the most exciting personality this ancient sport has produced since the young Arnold Palmer.

He's the new dimension, the new face, an unknown factor.

"He's a long, very long (hitter)," said veteran Billy Casper, the 1970 recipient of the most famous piece of haberdashery in sports, the green jacket that goes to the winner of this annual spring rite. "And he's a fantastic putter. His game is ideally suited to Augusta National. He will win here. Probably more than once."

The youthful Ballesteros, flagship of the "Spanish Armada" that has dominated European golf for two years, shrugs and says in improving English: "I need more experience. Very many good players here. Very difficult to win in the States."

He accomplished that last week, however, winning the Greater Greensboro Open in his first start in a regular PGA Tour event. He won it one week short of his 21st birthday, becoming the youngest player in 15 years to capture a tour title.

Incredibly, considering his age, it was his 19th worldwide title and added a fourth continent to his string. As a teenager, he finished second to Johnny Miller in the 1976 British Open. For the last two seasons, he has led the British Order of Merit and played on the winning World Cup team.

Last season, he won the Swiss and French Opens and took other titles in England, Japan and New Zealand. In his only other start this year, he won the Kenyan Open.

Here, however, in the flowering dogwood and azalea and magnolia, he faces an assembly of the world's finest shot-makers, a field that includes 58 tour-tested American pros, nine American amateurs, 10 foreign pros and one foreign amateur.

Chief among them, is Nicklaus, the 38-year-old who quite possibly is the greatest player the game has known, holder of all the golf records worth having, who has dedicated himself to supremacy in the Big Four — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens, the PGA. He has won those a record 14 times and, with his age advancing, has re-arranged his schedule to concentrate more fully on those events.

And his plan seems to have worked. In his last four starts, he has finished second, first, second and first and collected more than $155,000, tops on the money-winning list this year. In two of those events, he chipped in twice in the last 10 holes and played his back nine in 30.

"Obviously, I'm playing well," said Nicklaus. "I'm pleased with my new schedule. I'm very pleased that when I needed to make things happen, I was able to make things happen."

Watson took a different view of the situation, however.

"Jack is scoring well. But to achieve that scoring, he's chipping in and making long putts," said Watson. "I'm sure he's not playing as well he would like to."

Watson does not exempt himself from criticism. The 1977 Player of the Year has won twice this season and collected more than $100,000. But he's missed the cut in two of his last three starts.

DUE FOR A WIN? — Tom Weiskopf has been the runner-up in four Masters Tournaments but has never won the event. He's back this year and really after the top prize. (AP Laserphoto)

'Slow Play' Penalties Slated

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Hefty penalties — fines up to $1,000 and a three-week suspension — will be assessed pro golfers found guilty of slow play.

"As the showcase of golf, we must take steps to correct the situation," PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman said Tuesday in announcing the new, strict and drastic steps that will be taken to speed up play.

"The pace of play is of continuing concern. Slow play is a considerable detriment to the tour and to the game of golf," he said.

Beman said slow play is a problem, not only on the tour, but in junior golf, high school and college golf, the amateur game and weekend country club play.

"It goes throughout the game," he said. "It takes time and a great deal of money to build a golf course. If we could improve play 20 per cent, that means you, at your country club, could provide a place to play for 20 per cent more people."

He said the new, tough policy — to be administered and judged by officials carrying stopwatches — was the result of a time-study taken at nine tournaments and new rules instituted by the Tour's Policy Board at a meeting Monday night.

"We are taking drastic, stern and immediate action with our players," Beman said. "The new rules will be instituted in a couple of weeks, after the Tour's membership is informed in writing."

Under the new rules, a player found guilty of slow play would be fined $200. A second offense also calls for a $200 fine. A third offense carries an automatic fine of $1,000 and suspension from three tournaments.

Beman said the time study analyzed 15,000 strokes in nine tournaments and found that the average time for a player to hit a second shot was 27 seconds, 30 seconds for a chip or trap shot, 38 seconds for a first putt and 14 seconds for a second putt.

Those figures will be used as guidelines — not inflexible standards — in judging slow play, he said.

"We know that in many cases it will be a judgment call, that we will be open to criticism and many complaints," he said. "But our avenues of appeal remain open."

"And we feel an improvement in the time of play is necessary to ourselves and the game of golf."

After the rules have been in effect for some time, a new time study will be made, he said.

Many In NBA Reluctant To Discuss Pain Killers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — When Bob Gross of the Portland Trail Blazers came down hard on his left ankle during a National Basketball Association game at Milwaukee March 23, he "heard something crack."

It was a stress fracture, but he said he initially felt no pain. His ankle had been numbed by three injections — including one into the bone — of Marcain, a local anesthetic.

"It's the same thing that the dentist injects into your gums," said Dr. Herbert Wendel, director of the Division of Clinical Pharmacology at the University of Oregon Health Science Center School of Medicine.

"A local anesthetic is a purely symptomatic treatment. It numbs the nerve endings," Wendel said. "From a medical standpoint it is outrageous to do this. The only way it will heal is to rest it."

But the Blazers were hurting with three front-line players out heading into the final few weeks of the season. So Gross played.

Gross' experience provided an unusual glimpse of the use of such so-called pain-killing drugs in sports medicine, a subject many in the NBA are reluctant to discuss.

Dr. Robert Cook, the Blazers' team physician, said such drugs aren't given indiscriminately and aren't intended to completely kill the pain. Trainer Ron Culp was asked if the dosage given Gross — who had also taken three shots at half-time of the previous game — was unusually large?

"No, and it was not administered in such a way as to totally remove the pain," Culp said. "We feel that pain is too important of an indicator."

But Gross said after the Milwaukee game, "I heard a crack and didn't know what it was. I looked around to see and suddenly realized it was my ankle."

Cook said the term pain-killer is not correct.

"The term pain-killer is a misnomer," Cook said. "You do it to modify the pain. You can't treat these players like race horses. You can't be impersonal."

Culp admitted he was defensive about the subject because the Blazers consider themselves one of the most conservative teams in professional sports when it comes to drug usage.

General Manager Harry Glickman said he and other team officials have specifically discussed the issue and have set some ground rules.

"We don't feel we want any player to play if it would risk permanent injury or further temporary injury," he said. "That decision has to be a medical decision."

Coach Jack Ramsay, who was asked about the subject after his injury-ravaged team had recently lost to Boston, was not particularly jovial. He said he believed the use of such injections was legitimate in the NBA.

"If I didn't feel it was legitimate, we wouldn't do it," he said. "It's the player's decision. Make sure you put that in your story."

"I don't think any Trail Blazer player has been forced to play when he felt he shouldn't," Culp added.

The player has the right to refuse such injections, and the doctor can overrule a player and tell him not to take the shots.

"That happens," Cook said. "When you're a doctor your first duty is to your patient, not the owner or the management."

Some players shy away from the subject.

Bill Walton and Maurice Lucas are two of the team's most noted players who don't like to use pain-killers.

Walton, who now steers clear of controversial subjects, refused to discuss the matter. And repeated telephone calls to Gross' home last week produced no answers.

But Lucas was more candid.

"I don't believe in it myself," he said,

"or taking any of those kinds of shots. But that depends on the players. They don't put any pressure on you and it's a lot less prevalent in the league than it used to be."

Gross' case wouldn't have become such a controversy had he not spoken openly about getting the injections after leading a rally that helped the Blazers beat Seattle March 21. When he suffered the ankle injury the next game, the subject naturally came up.

The real risk is that using the drugs to play on an injured leg or ankle could increase the chance of more serious injury and, in the long run, shorten a player's career. In Gross' case, Wendel and others said there is no chance of any serious damage.

But Culp said that using drugs to play while injured can increase the risk of further injury. "I'd be a fool to deny that," he said.

Cook said the Blazers were planning to rest Gross, but the team already had Walton, Lucas and Lloyd Neal out of action and couldn't afford to lose another player.

Gross' injury, which will keep him out of action until well into the playoffs, was difficult to diagnose, Cook said.

"He was having sort of ill-defined pain and we gave him a pain-modifier," Cook said.

Glickman also was familiar with the case.

"There was nothing to indicate that by playing he would have suffered the injury that he suffered," Glickman said. "He kept telling the doctors it was feeling better. And he played two rounds of golf earlier in the week."

In addition, Glickman said, the use of such injections is even more prevalent outside of professional sports.

"I can show you people at the tennis court, people with 'tennis elbow,' who have taken more shots than our whole team put together."

Snyder Stops Cubs

BROWNFIELD (Special) — Snyder thwarted Brownfield 18-4 Tuesday afternoon in a District 3-AAA high school baseball game.

The Tigers, now 14-4 overall, were led by Mitch Mackey and Mike Hicks. The losing pitcher was Roy Keller.

General Manager Harry Glickman said he and other team officials have specifically discussed the issue and have set some ground rules.

"We don't feel we want any player to play if it would risk permanent injury or further temporary injury," he said. "That decision has to be a medical decision."

That means no scholarships. No home field.

And almost no wins.

But after 32 consecutive losses, all kinds of joy erupted Tuesday among the walk-on members of the North Texas State baseball team. The Eagles got a no-hitter from pitcher John Downs for a 10-0 victory over UT-Dallas, then came back with a 16-7 triumph and a sweep of the doubleheader.

Now, Coach Johnny Williams is setting his sights high for the rest of the season.

"We were 0-for-February and 0-for-March, but our goal in April is to go over 500," he said during the revelry of the twin victories over UT-Dallas at Fort Worth's Rockwood Park.

The 10-0, no-hit victory was an abbreviated affair, cut short after five innings under the 10-run rule.

UT-Dallas, which like North Texas plays only club ball, got five runs in the first inning of the second game, but the Eagles rallied for a 16-7 victory, dropping UT-Dallas to 1-9 for the year.

The end of the drought came just three days after the Mean Green appeared to have beaten Texas Tech in Lubbock before losing again. NTSU led by 11-0 going into the bottom of the fourth inning, but the Raiders scored seven runs that inning and five more in the bottom of the final inning to win 12-11.

That type of thing had happened to the Eagles several times this season, and Williams must have been apprehensive the bottom would fall out again Tuesday.

"We've played some close games this year, and there were times, too many times, when I thought we'd finally got our first win. But something would happen. We'd have a three-run lead and then our pitcher would walk somebody, and next thing you know, somebody who hadn't done anything all year hits a grand slam and we lose."

NTSU's schedule this season includes such established programs as Pan American, Oklahoma and Baylor.

And Southwest Conference leader Arkansas is still ahead.

"This win is going to change things around," Williams said. "We still have Arkansas on our schedule, and UTA, but other than that, the schedule eases up on us in April."

Williams has been striving, since he took over as coach of the baseball program three years ago, for varsity recognition of baseball at North Texas. The athletic department has told him, he said, that baseball will become the school's ninth varsity sport when money is available.

Southwest Texas finished at 593, Howard Payne 595, East Texas State 601, Texas A & M 611 and Abilene Christian 617.

The Lone Star Conference selects its champion in four 36-hole tournaments. The next stop on the tour will be Tuesday at Elkins Lake Golf Club near Huntsville.

Besides Singletary, six others matched or broke par Tuesday. Dean Plott of Howard Payne fired a 141, followed by John Murphy of Howard Payne 142; Trey Martin of Angelo 143; and Len Feemster of Angelo, Lee Singletary of Sam Houston and Rick Gary of Angelo, all at even-par 144.

Pro Baseball

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers and the Houston Astros picked up exhibition victories Tuesday night at the expense of the University of Houston Cougars with the Rangers having an easy time and the Astros having to struggle.

Jon Matlack pitched seven shutout innings to lead the Rangers to an easy 8-0 victory over the Cougars in the first game of the doubleheader in the Astrodome.

Bob Watson's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning snapped a tie and the Astros went on to edge the Cougars 3-1 in the second game.

Billy Blum, who has an 8-0 record with the Cougars, held the Astros to one run and six hits for seven innings in the second game.

The Cougars took a 1-0 lead in the second on Terry Byrum's triple and Donnie Randall's sacrifice fly.

The Astros tied it in the bottom of the inning on Joe Ferguson's sacrifice fly.

Terry Puhl started the Astros' eight with a single and was sacrificed to second. A walk and Denny Walling's single loaded the bases and Watson's sacrifice fly brought in one run and Dave Bergman singled in another.

Matlack allowed the Cougars only three hits in the opener. He allowed no walks and struck out four. Len Barker pitched two innings to complete the Ranger shut-out.

The Rangers scored four runs in the seventh inning on hits by Kurt Bevacqua, Jim Mason, Dave May and John Lowenstein.

Cougar Coach Rolan Walton was proud of his team's effort in the second game.

"I think we got everybody's attention," Walton said. "I was pleased."

Blum also was pleased.

"We had a good time and that's what it's all about," he said. "All we did was prove that on any given night just about anybody is capable of beating anybody else."

UT-Rangers

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns take a break from their unsuccessful Southwest Conference baseball season tonight with a game against the Texas Rangers of the American League.

Last year more than 10,000 fans crowded into the 7,000-seat stadium to watch the Rangers beat Texas 9-4.

This year, reserved seats were still available Tuesday.

The Rangers are scheduled to start Doyle Alexander, who won 17 and lost 11 last year, and will follow with Jim Umbarger.

Five Longhorns are slated to pitch, with freshman Keith Creek, 8-1, the starter.

Although Texas has a 28-12 season record, the Longhorns are 4-8 in the SWC, losing series to Arkansas, Houston, Texas A&M and Rice.

The Longhorns play Baylor in a three-game series this weekend.

Tomjanovich

HAMTRAMCK, Mich. (AP) — Rudy Tomjanovich, a hometown boy who went on to great heights — literally — hasn't been forgotten by the folks in this Detroit-area city.

The 6-foot-8 forward for the Houston Rockets will be honored at a testimonial dinner May 2, then inducted into the Hamtramck Hall of Honor the following day.

Tomjanovich was forced to sit out the rest of the current National Basketball Association season after being slugged two months ago by Kermit Washington of Los Angeles. Tomjanovich suffered a fractured jaw and other facial injuries.

A star basketball player at the University of Michigan, Tomjanovich, 29, has been a professional for the past eight years.

Slam Dunk

OKLAHOMA City (AP) — Cameron College forward John Derrick brought down the house and a backboard during a halftime slam dunk contest at Tuesday night's Oklahoma Basketball Coaches Association all star game.

The 6-foot-7 senior from Garland, Texas, ended the competition on his second attempt when he demolished the goal.

He was promptly awarded the contest plaque.

Derrick, who one local sports writer claims "has springs built into his knees," was a little embarrassed by his accidental vandalism of the Bethany Nazarene College men's gym.

"I didn't know the goal was that weak," he said. "I just went for the goal. I think my wrist must have hit the rim."

Resumption of the game was delayed about 45 minutes while workmen installed a new backboard and hoop from the nearby girls gym.

"He demolished it to the tune of about $500," a college spokesman said. "But it was beautiful."

Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Coach Doug Moe says when his San Antonio Spurs play the Phoenix Suns in a National Basketball Association game, it's like watching the Spurs practice against themselves.

"Phoenix is the quickest team in the league. They're a lot like us," Moe said Tuesday night after San Antonio rallied in the second half to claim a 125-119 come-from-behind victory over the Suns.

The victory was the fifth straight for the streaking Spurs who, in winning their 51st game of the season, tied the franchise record set in 1975-76 when San Antonio was in the old American Basketball Association.

The Spurs clinched the NBA Central Division title last week with a victory at Cleveland, but there has been no letup in their play.

"We are just getting tougher and tougher in the second half," said Moe, who last year often watched his team do just the opposite after building early leads.

"We're playing with a lot of confidence and we have been really active defensively," the San Antonio coach added.

Larry Kenon and George Gervin, the Spurs' two NBA All-Stars, combined for 54 points and keyed a fourth quarter rally that moved San Antonio ahead of Phoenix after trailing by three at the half.

Kenon, Gervin and Coby Dietrick each had nine points in the final period, and Kenon's seven straight put the Spurs ahead 120-108 with 2:51 left to play.

Kenon finished with 29 points while Gervin, the NBA's leading scorer, had 25. Dietrick had 18 points.

Phoenix super rookie Walter Davis led all scorers with 35 points despite being well-covered by Kenon most of the night.

But Moe praised Kenon's defensive play as "super" and said he did a good job of guarding Davis.

Davis said he was pleased with his shooting. "but I didn't get the rebounds and assists I should have."

"The key was that our defense gave us the lead and then we let up," Davis added.

Phoenix Coach John MacLeod praised the San Antonio defense, regarded as one of the NBA's more porous.

"They did a good job defensively against us, keeping us between the free throw circle and the half-court line," said MacLeod, "and it's awfully hard to run an offense out there."

"We had our chances," he added. "We are capable of playing much better defense and offensive rebounding."

Ron Lee had 18 points for Phoenix while Paul Westphal and Alvan Adams added 17 apiece.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES — Coronado baseball coach John Dudley (left) congratulates Monterey's Bobby Moegle after the veteran coach broke the all-time career coaching mark of 519 victories Tuesday. Bidding War To Settle Spinks-Ali Bout Site

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Leon Spinks says he has chosen the time and the opponent for his first defense of his heavy-weight title, but fight promoter Bob Arum said the place will be decided in a bidding war.

"I'm gonna fight Muhammad Ali my next title fight... sometime in September or October," Spinks said at a New York press conference where he accepted his championship belt from a boxing magazine.

Arum is president of Top Rank Inc., the promotion firm which holds exclusive rights to a rematch between Ali and the young fighter who won the championship from him. Arum was here Tuesday talking to New Orleans businessmen about staging the fight in the Superdome, which could seat close to 100,000 for a boxing match.

But Arum said he wasn't limiting his search for a site to New Orleans.

"There's a group in St. Louis backed by Anheuser-Busch that's very interested; there is a group in Montreal and a group in Mexico City," Arum said. "We have meetings in each of those cities later in the week."

"I met with some New Orleans gentlemen two weeks ago in New York and we talked again last night on the way in from the airport," Arum said Tuesday. "I'm meeting with them again, but it is very unlikely anything will be announced."

"In fact, if anything is even agreed to, it would be more than I expect."

Spinks said that Arum is merely scouting territory for him.

"I don't know where Bob Arum is going," he said. "The fight will be where I want it to be."

Judge Ed Bell, Spinks' attorney, said Las Vegas and Detroit are also being considered as potential sites for the fight.

Arum said the great capacity of the Superdome is very attractive.

"This is the only place in the world where we could get enough people in and not worry about rain," he said.

He said he believes television rights to the fight will be open for bids also.

"The highest TV rights on record were $4 million for the first Ali-Spinks fight," he said. "This one will go over $7 million easily — very, very easily. You're talking about a momentous event."

Top Woman Cager Eyes '80 Games

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Blazejowski has reached a lot of milestones in her career, but there's still one more she wants badly.

"I'd like to play in the 1980 Olympics," she says. "Right now, that's my No. 1 priority."

After the season she had this year, it's probable that she'll reach that goal. The Montclair State senior was recognized Tuesday as the nation's best woman college basketball player when awarded the Margaret Wade Trophy.

"It's like the cherry on the ice cream sundae," the 21-year-old, 5-foot-10 forward said. "This award caps my season."

And what a season it was for "The Blaze."

Blazejowski set a women's career record of 3,199 points, second only to Pete Maravich in all-time scoring among male or female college players. The Louisiana State superstar finished with 3,667 points in 1970.

The impressive accomplishments of the Montclair State star included a 52-point performance against Queens College as a junior that set a single-game record, male or female, for the new Madison Square Garden. This year, she topped the nation in scoring with a 38.6 average and led the New Jersey school to a third-place finish in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIWA) national tournament.

"This award completes my career," Blazejowski said. "No other athlete feels the way I do. This is the first award of its kind offered to a female athlete, and it makes me proud. When I was younger, I always wanted to be the best female athlete. All these people recognize me as the best player in the country — and it's my best season and my career."

Despite her obvious talents, Blazejowski was ironically not invited to play for the United States in the 1976 Olympics — one of the rare losses of her career. She still remembers that slight, and would like to make up for it in 1980.

"That's water under the bridge now," she said. "It was a bad experience but I've proved myself. There are better things in the future in 1980."

Along with the probability of the Olympics, a possibility exists that a women's professional league will start sometime in the near future. Of that, she says: "All I know is that two guys in Ohio are talking about starting something in 1979. We'll just have to wait and see what happens. Right now, I'm shooting for the Olympics."

In the Wade Trophy balloting, Blazejowski received 47 of the 91 votes cast by coaches, sports writers and sports information directors from 10 regions of the AIAW.

UH Funds

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Post said today it had learned that former University of Houston financial analyst Samuel A. Harwell deposited about $170,000 of university short term investment funds in the separate University of Houston Foundation during a three year period.

The deposits, which began in 1975 and occurred through 1977, were only recently discovered in the private, non-profit organization which raises money to support the university. The funds have since been paid back to the UH short term account with interest.

The existence of the deposits was detected by Dr. Roger Singleton, then executive vice president of the UH system, when he replaced J. Treadway Brogdon as secretary of the organization. He said he did not know why the deposits were made to the foundation.

Singleton, who was named financial vice president and treasurer of the UH system Monday, said he examined UH Foundation records because he wanted to be sure he had a "clean balance sheet" before accepting the assignment.

Harwell, who was fired from the university in November for allegedly exceeding his investment authority, was not available for comment.

Meanwhile, UH officials say a five month investigation still has not determined the extent of losses suffered from short term investment practices terminated late last year.

BU-SH Split

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Sam Houston State rallied for five runs in the last two innings to win the second game 7-6 over the Baylor Bears Tuesday and earn a split of a doubleheader.

Baylor won the opener 2-1 on a ninth-inning solo homer by Ken Kolkhorst.

Fritz Conally blasted two home runs in the second game to give the Bears a comfortable 6-2 lead going into the bottom of the sixth. But then reliever Jaime Cocanower was charged with two wild pitches and catcher Ken Buckalew had three passed balls as the Bearkats scored four runs to tie the game.

Then the Bears committed two errors on the same play in the seventh inning as the Bearkats' Rick Voz scored all the way from first with the winning run.

Sam Houston is now 20-14-1, and Baylor is 18-13-2.

LSC Golf

BROWNWOOD (AP) — Sam Houston State, paced by medalist Robert Singletary, won the first Lone Star Conference golf tournament Tuesday by two strokes over Angelo State at the Brownwood Country Club.

The Bearkats, conference champion and runner-up in the NAIA last year, carded a 292 in the morning round and came back with a one-under 287 over the final 18 holes to finish at three-over-par 579.

Singletary finished at four under par after rounds of 68 and 72.

Stephen F. Austin was third at 591.

Moegle Sets Win Record

 ruled that Bruedigam failed to touch the home plate.

By then, Hatfield owned a 6-0 lead and had squeezed out of his toughest dilemma of the game. Coronado loaded the bases with one out in the third. Spradling was struck in the back by a pitched ball, Segrest singled to rightcenter and Kenny Bunch drew a base on balls. Then Jim Wells popped up to the second baseman and Ricky Powell watched a breaking pitch for the third strike on a full count.

Hatfield walked the leadoff batter in the next inning but Donnie Arterburn grounded into a double play to end the threat.

"I threw the way I'm supposed to throw. I was starting to struggle a little until that double play. It really helped," said Hatfield.

Meanwhile, his pitching mate (Reeves) felt it was his worst pitching performance of the season. Nevertheless, the senior raised his record to 6-0 with a four-hit shutout.

Coronado outthrew the Plainsmen 4-3 in the opener but the Mustangs never pushed across any runs.

MHS stands 2-0 and 12-4 with a Saturday doubleheader at Hereford next on the schedule. CHS, now 0-2 and 6-11, draws an open date Saturday.

Johnson, Adami No Longer In Allison Shadow

By CARTER CROMWELL

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

As they did for a good part of last season when Rodney Allison was injured, Mark Johnson and Tres Adami are competing for the No. 1 quarterback job at Texas Tech. But they aren't directly in Allison's shadow this spring, and that has to make a difference.

Tech had pinned many of its high hopes last season on Allison, and Johnson and Adami encountered the inevitable comparisons with him when they engineered the team in his absence. And the comparisons became sharper when the Raider offense sputtered without its acknowledged leader.

There are several quarterbacks in the Tech spring camp that are fighting for the top job, but Johnson and Adami, because of their advantage in experience, must be given the edge at this point. Much more is expected to be known after the spring's first scrimmages, set for today and Saturday.

"There's still pressure on us because we're fighting for the No. 1 job," said Adami, who is currently alternating with Johnson on the first team. "I figure it will be better not having to play in Rodney's shadow, though."

Johnson, a junior-to-be, figures that "somebody will be pushing me, no matter what," but admits that last year's comparisons to Allison became tiresome.

"All last year, we heard them. It kind of got me down," he said. "People were always saying 'Wait until Allison gets back.'"

Next year's quarterback will unquestionably be judged against Allison to an extent, but Allison won't be here, and the offense should be different than it was for the last couple of seasons. It will not revolve so much around a single outstanding individual such as Allison.

"We won't be a star team," quarterback and receiver coach Pat Hodgson said.

Adami said, "Everybody will just have to pitch in and work more as a team without Allison. We don't have super people like that."

Johnson agreed, saying, "We weren't as team-oriented on offense last year as much as we'll have to be this year without a standout like Rodney."

Hodgson feels that having what he termed "a no-name offense" may help the club, since one player won't bear the brunt of the burden.

In last year's offense, there was no question that Allison was the big man, THE key, the player that made everything click. Subconsciously, the rest of the offensive team relied too heavily on him to make the big play. When he went out, a void—mentally and physically—was left that couldn't be filled.

Both Adami and Johnson are in much different positions this spring than they were a year ago. They now have legitimate shots at the starting job. Last spring, they couldn't realistically believe they had a chance at beating out Allison.

"I enjoy the competition," Adami said. "It's a real challenge to now be competing for the No. 1 job."

Johnson added, "Everybody knows these first two scrimmages mean a whole lot. The job is really up for grabs."

Tech head coach Rex Dockery said, "We should know a lot more about the quarterbacks after the scrimmages. We'll make some decisions after that. The quarterbacks have been throwing pretty well, but they haven't been under fire yet."

Johnson must improve his passing, and he readily admitted it.

"My arm has been bothering me some when I throw, but I'll just have to work that out."

"I also need to improve my efficiency on third-down plays. Last year, I didn't make the needed yardage on the third downs like I should have. I want to be 60 to 70 per cent effective in these situations."

Adami, a good thrower and average runner who had a fine spring in 1977, said he is working mostly on throwing the ball.

"I'm working on taking a shorter drop and setting up quicker. I'm having to get used to these younger players, too. Last year, we had a lot of veterans, so this is a different situation in that regard, too."

Adami was hampered all last season by a bad right ankle and foot, but he said the situation is nearly cleared up now.

"It's still kind of weak, but I can cut on it and do everything else when it's taped up real good."

NOTES: Tech's scrimmage today will begin at 5 p.m., but the team will go onto the field at 4 p.m. The scrimmage will last about 1:15. It will be a controlled scrimmage. Saturday's scrimmage will not be as controlled. "We'll be able to tell more after these two scrimmages," head coach Rex Dockery said. Starting split end Brian Nelson suffered a sprained right knee Tuesday, the seriousness of which was not immediately known.

HOGAN AT MASTERS — Ben Hogan, left, chats with 1935 Masters winner Gene Sarazen, center, and 1956 champion Jack Burke, Jr., as he visited the Masters course Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Hogan Surprised People Still Recognize Him

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
AUGUSTA, Ga. — "I don't know him in the world they recognized me," the man said, "with all this gray hair and a hat on."

"That's him over there," a middle-aged man said to his teenage son, pointing. "That's Hogan. He was the greatest." Word spread over the Augusta National course like a brush fire.

"I doubt if anyone will ever do it again," said bekickered Gene Sarazen, the amazing septuagenarian who scored a double eagle in winning the Masters in 1935. "Only (Jack) Nicklaus has a chance."

CPGA Tour Gives Up On Finding Sponsor

TORONTO (AP) — The Canadian Professional Golf Association has all but given up on finding a sponsor to back its tour.

"The matter of a national sponsor is all but dead for this year," said Holschetter. "There's difficulty in finding the amount of money needed to run a tournament this size."

Accompanied by his Texas buddies, Demaret and Jack Burke Jr., Hogan went to the white tournament house to get his credentials, ate lunch with chairman Bill Lane, then took a cart on a tour of the course he mastered in 1951 and 1953 after a near-fatal auto accident.

Twins-Mariners Open Baseball Season

By The Associated Press
The Minnesota Twins and Seattle Mariners aren't considered contenders in the American League West, but one of them will be all alone in first place sometime tonight.

The major league baseball season gets under way when those two teams square off in Seattle's Kingdome. The National League kicks off Thursday afternoon in Cincinnati with the Reds hosting the Houston Astros, and all 26 major league clubs are scheduled for action by Saturday.

There also were a dozen exhibition games scheduled today and two more on Thursday.

In their sophomore year, the expansion Mariners hope to better last season's mark of 64-98.

"As a second-year club, people will expect more from us," says Manager Darrell Johnson. "I think we can give them a little more. I expect us to wind up in the mid-70s somewhere. There's just no way we're not a better ballclub than last season."

On the other hand, people expect less from the Twins, who held onto first place for all of May, most of June and even as late as Aug. 15-16 before fading to fourth, 17 1/2 games off the pace. Although Rod Carew and his .388 bat are back, the Twins lost league RBI leader Larry Hisle and batting runner-up Lyman Bostock in the free agent draft.

Seattle's Glenn Abbott, a 12-game winner, will have the honor of throwing the first pitch of the season. He will be opposed by Dave Goltz, who won 20 for Minnesota last season.

The National League opener pits Cincinnati's Tom Seaver against Houston's J.R. Richard.

"I think this is the best team we've ever had, including the '75 and '76 teams when we won the National League championship," Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson said Tuesday after the Reds rallied from an 8-1 deficit to beat the Detroit Tigers 9-8 in the final exhibition game.

"Your record in the spring doesn't really matter, but winning some games late to establish a winning atmosphere is important," said Anderson. "I'm going out on a limb. By Oct. 1, I expect to win. We're absolutely ready, not from a rah-rah standpoint but as ready as professionals as I've ever seen them."

As the exhibition season wound down, the defending NL champion Los Angeles Dodgers suffered their seventh consecutive defeat, bowing to the Oakland A's 6-5 on Jeff Newman's two-run single in the eighth inning even though third baseman Ron Cey, sidelined since March 26 with a pulled hamstring, returned to action and rapped out four hits.

"It doesn't really concern us," said Al Campanis, the Dodgers' general manager. "If we'd have kept all our players together then it might. But injuries have kept us from really playing as a unit a lot of the time, and that makes a big difference."

"We should have everybody ready to go soon. I hope the team we've seen recently isn't the team we'll see when the season starts."

In other exhibition action:

- The Philadelphia Phillies crushed seven home runs and crushed Toronto 17-4. The long ballers were Greg Luzinski, Richie Hebner, Bob Boone, Bake McBride, Larry Bowa, Mike Schmidt and Jay Johnstone.
- The San Diego Padres got a three-run homer from Dave Winfield and a pair of solo shots from Oscar Gamble and defeated the California Angels 9-7.
- Milwaukee's Ben Oglivie drove in four runs, three with a homer, and Gorman Thomas added a two-run blast in the Brewers' 10-8 victory over Cleveland.
- Lamar Johnson collected his 18th spring RBI with a sixth-inning triple, snapping a scoreless duel and helping the Chicago White Sox beat the Atlanta Braves 3-1.
- Dennis Leonard hurled six scoreless innings as Kansas City nipped the Baltimore Orioles 2-1.
- Home runs by Bill Robinson and John Milner helped the Pittsburgh Pirates turn back the Boston Red Sox 3-1.
- Greg Gross had two singles and a double and drove in three runs to lead the Chicago Cubs over the San Francisco Giants 9-4.

Ed Figueroa pitched eight innings and Graig Nettles drove in two runs with a single and triple as the New York Yankees beat the Montreal Expos 3-1 and the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the New York Mets 2-0 behind the four-hit pitching of John Denny and Pete Falcone and a Ken Reitz homer.

The University of Houston dropped a doubleheader to major league teams. Jon Matlack hurled seven innings as the Texas Rangers beat the Cougars 8-0. Then the Houston Astros beat the collegians 3-1.

"The boys, they're part of the game," explained Driessen. "You aren't supposed to hear 'em, but you do. But I watched and I saw they booed (Johnny) Bench and guys who had been here a lot longer than I was. If they could take it, so could I."

Pressured by replacing Perez, Driessen went 0-for-17 to open last season and Anderson admits he was afraid of what was happening to his new starter.

"I called him aside in Chicago and told him I knew how bad the public was beating up on him, but I'd be with him until the end," Anderson said.

Anderson Doesn't Duck Loaded Question

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Talk about a loaded question.

In a recent interview before his baseball team left their spring training camp at Tampa, Fla., Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson was asked: "Would you trade Danny Driessen even up for Steve Garvey?"

Driessen is the Reds first baseman and Garvey plays first base for Los Angeles, the Reds perennial rivals in the National League West.

Anderson did not duck the question. "Garvey can do one thing, hit," Anderson explained. "He's a good first baseman, but he doesn't have the range my man has. He doesn't have the speed. The answer is no."

The Reds manager explained that Garvey is the better known of the two players because of the more extensive publicity he has received.

"The public doesn't know Driessen like they know Garvey," Anderson explained, "but they will."

Garvey has been in the public eye longer than Driessen, who until last year was playing in the shadow of Tony Perez.

When Perez was traded to Montreal prior to last season, Driessen became the Reds regular first baseman and responded by hitting .300 with 91 runs batted in, 17 home runs and 31 stolen bases.

Last season, Garvey hit .297 with 115 runs batted in and 33 home runs.

The Dodger first baseman had three years 1974-76 when he collected 200 or more hits, and last season, Garvey won his fourth straight Gold Glove award for defensive excellence.

Driessen wasn't worried about being compared to Garvey when he stepped into the regular lineup for the Reds. The comparisons were with Perez, who had been a popular player in Cincinnati before being traded to Montreal.

Driessen was even booed in the midst of his development as one of the game's outstanding first baseman.

"The boys, they're part of the game," explained Driessen. "You aren't supposed to hear 'em, but you do. But I watched and I saw they booed (Johnny) Bench and guys who had been here a lot longer than I was. If they could take it, so could I."

Pressured by replacing Perez, Driessen went 0-for-17 to open last season and Anderson admits he was afraid of what was happening to his new starter.

"I called him aside in Chicago and told him I knew how bad the public was beating up on him, but I'd be with him until the end," Anderson said.

Sanguillen Back With Pittsburgh Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Manny Sanguillen believes God had a hand in a trade that returned him to the Pittsburgh Pirates to catch for his former National League teammates.

But a more earthly view credits Duffy Dyer's thumb for Tuesday's deal with the Oakland A's.

"Duffy Dyer has a broken thumb. That was one of the reasons we were anxious to get another catcher. Plus, Sanguillen gives us another right-handed hitter," a team spokesman said here.

Dyer, the Pirates' starter behind the plate, has been placed on the disabled list.

Sanguillen was reacquired in exchange for right-handed pitcher Elias Sosa, outfielder Miguel Dilone, and a player to be named.

"I just prayed to God that he would send me where I was to go," said the 34-year-old Panamanian. "It makes you feel good and happy to be back."

"I got the feeling his heart has always been in Pittsburgh," said Harding Peterson, general manager, after telephoning Sanguillen at the A's training camp in Mesa, Ariz.

Dyer's thumb is expected to heal within several weeks, but Peterson wants Sanguillen to stay with the club longer than that.

"Hopefully, he'll be with us for the rest of his career," he said.

Sanguillen, who played regularly with the Pirates beginning in 1969, was traded to Oakland in November 1976 in a deal that brought A's manager Chuck Tanner to Pittsburgh.

Oakland also got $100,000 in cash in the Sanguillen-Tanner exchange.

Sanguillen was expected to join the team training camp in Bradenton, Fla.

The Pirates also announced the signing of outfielder Steve Brye, who was recently released by the Milwaukee Brewers of the American League.

Brye batted .249 in 94 games for the Brewers last season.

Braves Fans Will View Flying Saucer

ATLANTA (AP)—The Atlanta Braves promised their fans they'd see a flying saucer at the team's National League opener Friday, and they will see one—even if it's illegal, a Braves spokesman said Tuesday.

The Federal Aviation Administration warned the team last week that a flyer by a phony flying saucer could be illegal.

As publicity for the baseball game, the Braves and local ham radio operators have been broadcasting an invitation to space ships to fly over Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium when the Braves play the Los Angeles Dodgers Friday.

Said FAA official George Bergmark said the Braves' plans to fly in a phony space ship if the real thing didn't show up would be "against FAA regulations."

LHS Drubs Levelland

LEVELLAND (Special)—Lubbock High, sparked by Noel Jaime's grand slam home run and total of seven runs batted in, downed Levelland 15-10 Tuesday.

Levelland, 6-9, led 10-5 after five innings, but Jaime's grand slam narrowed the margin to 10-9 after six frames.

The Westerners, 11-4, then scored six runs in the seventh to take the victory. Jaime had a three-run triple in the rally.

Ernest Day also had a two-run homer in the first inning for Lubbock High.

Jays Get Mayberry For Minor Leaguer

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP)—First baseman John Mayberry, who three years ago signed a $1 million contract with the Kansas City Royals, was shipped to Toronto Tuesday for an unnamed minor leaguer.

Joe Burke, Royals general manager, said the slump-ridden first baseman, who fell out of grace during last year's American League playoffs, did not cost the Blue Jays a player from their major league roster.

"We'll have a choice of some of their young players after Oct. 1," Burke said. "Hopefully, we'll get one of their good prospects in their minor league system."

Manager Whitey Herzog had made no secret of his wish to trade Mayberry, and the Royals pursued a deal all winter long. From the outset of spring training, it was apparent Mayberry had lost his first base job to a rookie, Clint Hurdle.

In the fourth playoff game against the New York Yankees last October, the normally slick-fielding Mayberry dropped a pop foul and fumbled a throw to the bag. Before being benched, he struck out twice with men in scoring position.

The Yankees won the game to square the best-of-five series at 2-2 and the following day won the pennant. Mayberry later said he had been suffering from a toothache.

"Mayberry wasn't ready to play in that fourth game," Herzog said Tuesday. "And that was the most important game in Royals' history."

"Actually, I like John," he added. "But he made a mistake at the wrong time and let the whole team down. I just couldn't forget what he did. There is more involved than just the ability of a player."

Mayberry, 28, came to the Royals in a trade with Houston in 1971 and four years later was runner-up in the AL Most Valuable Player voting. That season he slugged 34 home runs, drove in 106 runs and batted .291 and the Royals signed him to a five-year, $1 million contract. He never regained his '75 form. In 1976 his average fell to .232 and last year he hit .230.

"I think John can go to Toronto and maybe hit 35 home runs, have a good year," Herzog said. "But we had to make room for Hurdle."

Hurdle, 20, made a meteoric rise though the Royals' farm system as an outfielder, batting .328 and hitting 16 home runs last year at Omaha. This spring, he's hit .265 with one home run while Mayberry batted .229 in 12 games.

"I feel bad about the whole thing," said Herzog. "I stayed with John for two years. I got a lot of hate mail because I kept playing him."

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Dollar Gain Encourages Stock Mart

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, continuing to benefit from a stronger showing by the dollar in foreign exchange.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 43 at 758.80 after a 4.33 gain Tuesday.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 7-4 spread among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's strength was attributed partly to an upswing by the depressed dollar since Tuesday against leading foreign currencies.

But analysts also noted a potential obstacle in the market's path — the monthly report on the wholesale price index due from the government on Thursday.

"Prices rose 1 percent in February — 12 percent at an annual rate," the Merrill Lynch Market Letter pointed out.

"A similar jump probably occurred in March due to larger advances in farm prices and increases in other categories."

Marine Midland Bankers climbed 1 1/2 to 15. Late Tuesday an agreement for Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corp. to acquire control of the company was approved by Marine Midland directors.

Locked, recipient of a $500 million order for L1011 jets from Pan American World Airways, gained 4 to 18 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index rose .09 to 49.75. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 13 at 129.08.

Volume on the Big Board reached 10.46 million shares by noon time against 8.72 million at the same point Tuesday.

Europeans Stage Big Walkout

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Millions of West European workers walked off the job for at least an hour today, rallied inside their plants or demonstrated in the streets to protest rising unemployment.

It was the first Europe-wide "Action Day" called by the European Trade Union Confederation on the eve of a Common Market summit in Copenhagen to discuss the region's more than seven million jobless.

More than 10 million Italian workers in industry, commerce and agriculture launched a four-hour strike to protest both unemployment and the terrorist kidnaping of former Premier Aldo Moro.

Transportation and hospital services were not affected, but most schools, universities and gas stations were closed.

In Belgium, many workers put down their tools for an hour or more, and in Brussels a group of demonstrators briefly occupied the office of State Secretary for Budget Marc Eyskens.

A spokesman at the union's headquarters here said telephones were "red hot" with calls. But he said he could not estimate the turnout yet because most action was scheduled for the afternoon.

In the nine nation Common Market, 6.26 million were out of jobs at the end of February, 485,000 more than a year before.

The confederation's secretary, Mathias Hinterschield, blamed the rising unemployment on "inflexible and reactionary attitudes" of European employers and the "cautious or negative" policies of the Common Market governments.

WALKER CAY, Bahamas (AP) — Richard Nixon was due to leave the Bahamian island hideaway owned by his friend Robert Abplanalp today and apparently planned a stopover at an exclusive resort in the Florida Keys.

The former president and his wife, Pat, were expected to travel to the Ocean Reef Club, a swank complex on Key Largo, one of the keys nearest Florida mainland.

Dick Frank, auditor of the resort, said he was not sure of Nixon's plans but said, "We have a contingent of Secret Service men coming in."
