Christmas in April not slowed by scorching day

Saturday was hot, almost too hot to do anything besides find a cool spot and stay there.

But, people of all ages and all occupations climbed out from their cool corners to wield paint brushes, hammers and nails to repair other people's homes during the Christmas in April VI project. The event is coordinated by the Human Relations Council and involves community and civic organizations helping to repair substandard housing of elderly and/or handicapped persons who are unable to do the work themselves.

Petra Acosta was sitting in the back of her house at 1404 Walnut St. in an old car with a blanket over the windshield and a mattress on the car's roof. The car windows were rolled down to allow a breeze to blow through, giving some relief from the heat. The belongings in her house were placed on the ground. A small, dark brown puppy tied to a bed frame whimpered occasionally.

Spending the day in a car may be inconvenient to many people, but Ms. Acosta wasn't minding it. She is in a wheelchair and can not do repairs to her house. "They (Christmas in April workers) have been so nice to me," she said, a grin spreading across her face. "I'm going to see my house new again."

Workers from Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church are redoing the two-room house. Mario Hernandez, who was in charge, said they were replacing screens on the windows, repainting the whole house, putting in new carpeting in the living room and new vinyl in the kitchen, fixing a buckle in the kitchen floor and installing new plumbing. They had started about 9 a.m. Saturday, but were not expecting to be through until sometime today.

For Lottie Raphe of 508 S. Mineola St., Christmas in April is nothing new. They have worked on the front two rooms of her house, and this year returned to finish the rest of the house.

The 76-year-old woman was sitting in the living room with her Chihuahua dog and reading. The wind outside became a cool breeze inside. While she praised the work of the project, she added that her mother, 100 years old, wished they would change the electric outlet so they could plug in the television and an electric clock.

Ms. Raphe explained how she found out about the program. "A young lady came to the door one day and gave me a card that said 'If you need help call us' and I called."

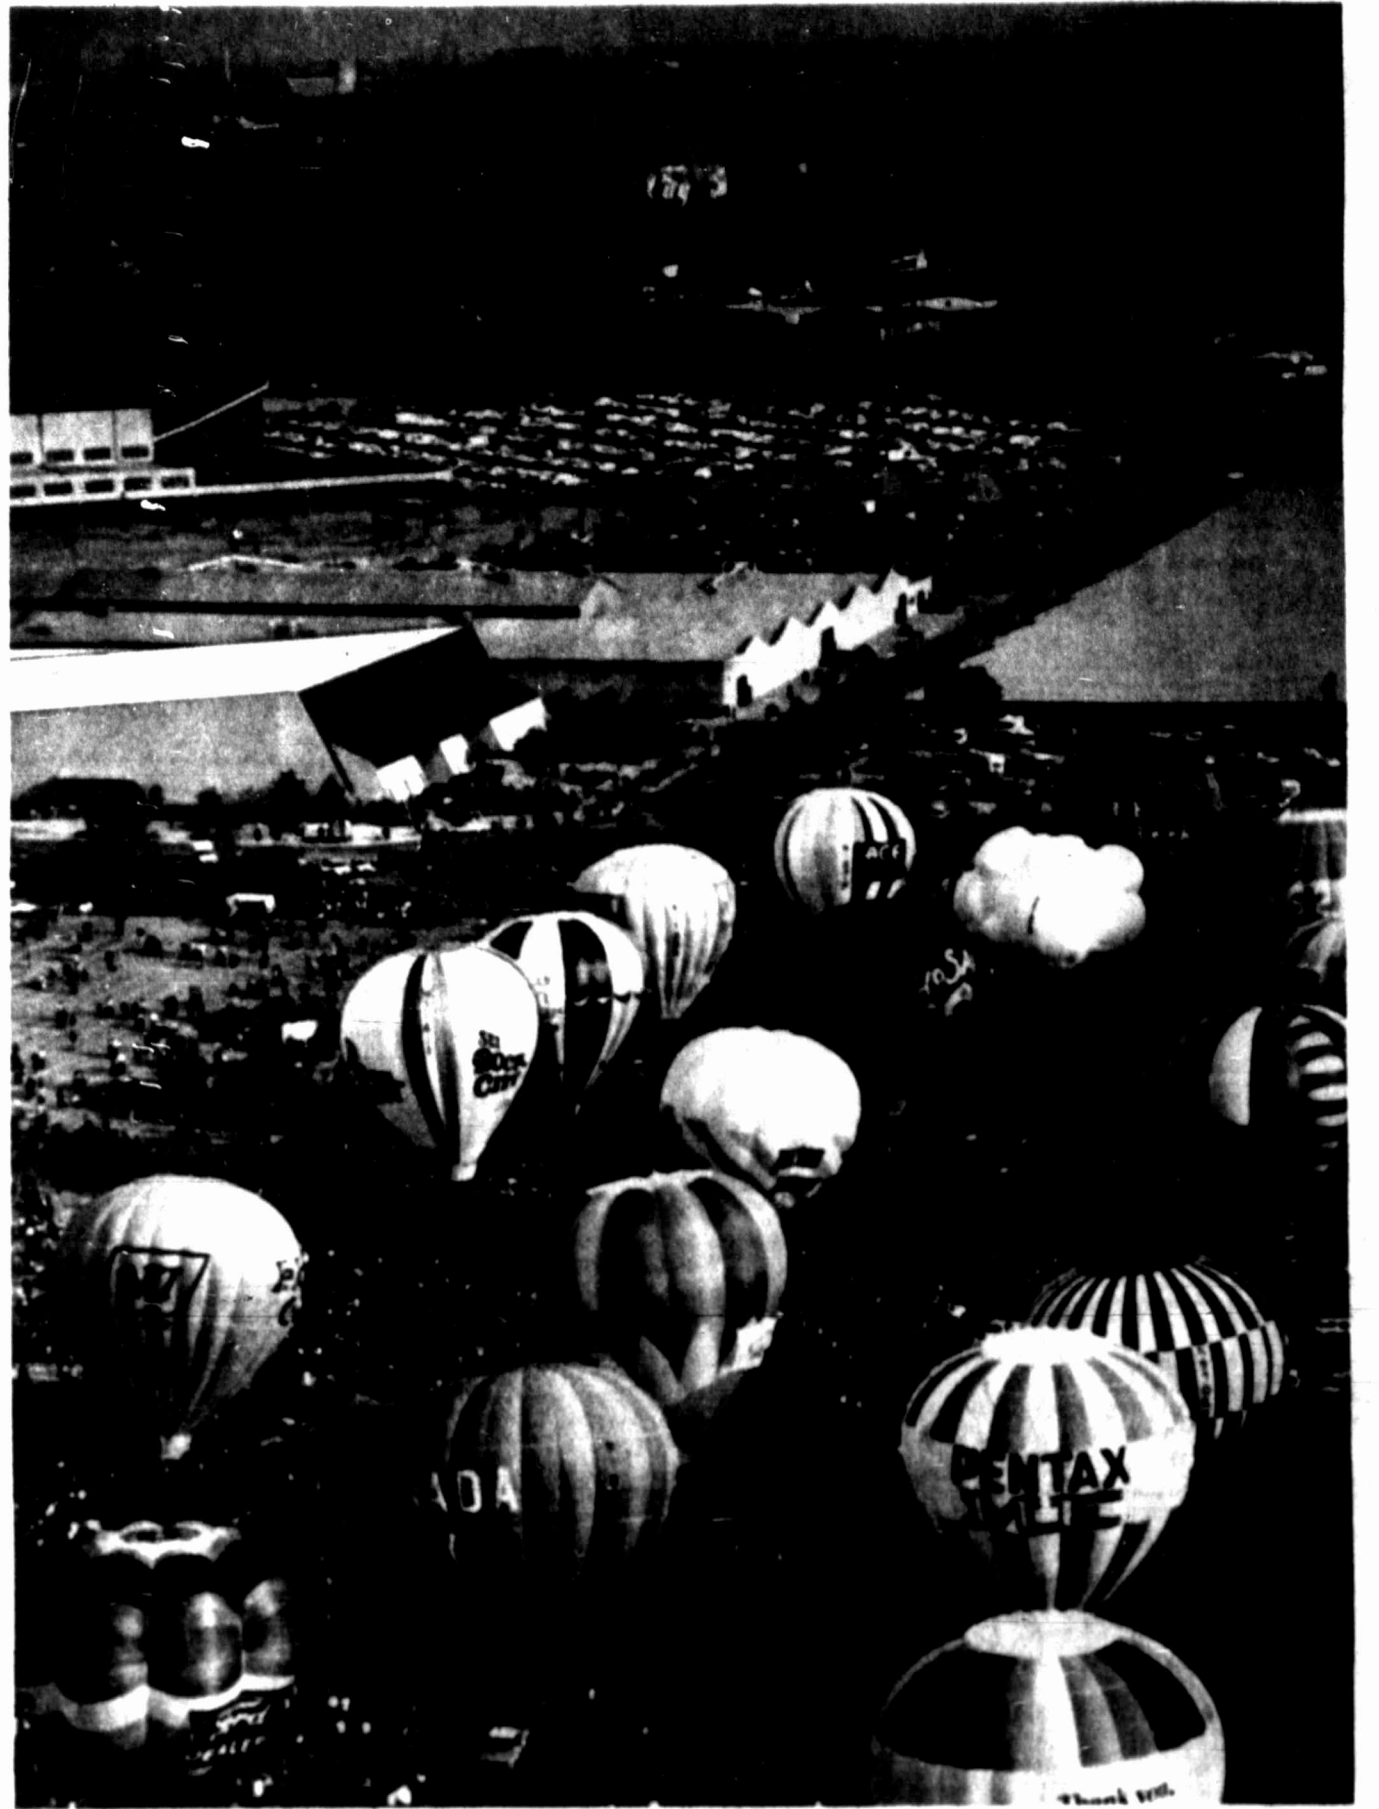

John Amos, a carpenter, had finished fixing the kitchen ceiling that was drooping in the center, and was texturing it before painting. Others from the First United Methodist Church were repairing doors and installing new light fixtures.

"Time is a big thing in our work here," Amos said. "Our group is a mixed bag of people. There is a minister, engineers, accountants, an artist and musicians. It's a community project and something the rest of the community can get involved in."

Members of the Crestview Baptist Church were "covering" the ceiling of the Bascom Shaw house at 1501 E. Wall St. The roof was their major concern for the day, but the wind and sand were hampering their work. "I wish someone would ask the weatherman to turn off this sand," a high school boy said.

Lonnie Kreger with the group said the house also is scheduled for new window screens and some work to fix a leak in the lavatory. No matter how many Saturdays it takes, "we'll finish this roof," Kreger said. "We knew that it would take longer than a day."

If there is any complaint about the program from anyone, it probably will be from those doing the work and that is, as Kreger put it, "There is not enough time in the day to get the work done."

Liquid protein diet found lethal to rats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government put 200 obese rats on strict protein diets similar to those blamed for the deaths of 16 women, and 95 percent of the animals died within a month.

The rats' deaths seemed to bear striking similarities to those of the women who the government said were victims of a popular liquid protein modified fast.

The 16 women, all between the ages of 25 and 44, died suddenly, generally following cardiac arrhythmias, which are irregularities in heartbeat seemingly similar to those observed in the rats.

The Food and Drug Administration has attacked the liquid protein diet as being potentially lethal. FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said, however, there have been no recent reports of deaths linked to the diets.

A spokesman for the FDA said preliminary results of the study of fat rats indicate that females "are dramatically more susceptible to diets of this kind than males, although we don't know why."

The study also indicates that vitamins and minerals, particularly potassium, prolonged the life of the dieting rats for a few days but were not sufficient to keep them healthy.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said other early findings of the study include a pattern of sudden death, possibly due to heart attacks.

He said scientists also observed that "calories count" as a factor because a group of rats fed twice the calories in the form of protein as other groups tended to survive longer.

Only 11 rats, all of them male, were still alive on Friday, one month after the diets began. Pines said. The tests are still under way.

The laboratory findings were disclosed as the FDA prepared to issue a new set of warnings it plans to require on labels of liquid protein and other dietary protein products.

Last December the FDA proposed to order all liquid protein products and similar diet aids to display prominently warnings that said "VERY LOW CALORIE PROTEIN DIETS MAY CAUSE SERIOUS ILLNESS OR DEATH." And it proposed warning consumers not to use the products without medical supervision. The proposals are still pending final action, and no warnings have yet been required on these products.

Protein supplements, usually sold in powder form by health food stores for people who want to increase their normal intake of protein, would have to carry the warning about the danger of very low calorie protein diets and advice not to use the supplements for weight reduction.

Afghan coup fait accompli

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Military rebels who toppled the government of Afghanistan reported Saturday that 200 persons were killed in the coup, including President Mohammed Daoud, his vice president, two cabinet ministers and the air force commander.

An Iranian newspaper reported meanwhile, that monitored broadcasts of Afghan radio said there was still "scattered resistance by some of the supporters of the previous regime" on the outskirts of the capital city of Kabul.

The report by the Tehran newspaper Kaynan, based on radio monitoring at the Iranian Afghan border, could not be confirmed elsewhere. Diplomats here in touch with the situation in the isolated nation last reported fighting Friday, the day after the coup was launched.

But Western diplomatic sources said Kabul itself returned to normal

Saturday, with shops reopened and government transport workers back on the job.

The coup leaders previously had reported that Daoud, 69, and his brother and adviser Naem, 68, had been killed because they "madly" resisted the rebels.

Radio Kabul said Saturday in a broadcast monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. that Vice President Sayyed Abdul Elah, Defense Minister Gholam Haydar Rasuli, Interior Minister Abdul Qadir and air force commander Lt. Gen. Mohammad Musa also were killed when they "refused to surrender despite repeated calls by the Revolutionary Military Council."

Afghan broadcasts said the rebels were in complete control of the mountainous nation, a largely agricultural land of 20 million people bordered by the Soviet Union, Pakistan and Iran. The Tehran newspaper said Radio

Kabul also reported that "the rest of the presidential family are wiped out."

French diplomatic sources said many family members had found refuge in the French Embassy in Kabul. There was no independent confirmation of the fate of the president or his relatives.

The Military Revolutionary Council, headed by Col. Aslam Watanjar, ordered government workers, teachers, students and transport workers to carry on their regular activities and ordered a 10 p.m. curfew.

In their broadcasts, the rebels repeatedly described the new government as "democratic, Islamic, reformist and non-aligned" and said Afghanistan would "remain faithful" to its "international commitments and will respect its neighbors and the honorable and respectful religion of Islam."

4,000 march for Lozano

By LINDA HILL
STAFF WRITER

ODESSA — Up to 4,000 Mexican-American demonstrators marched approximately four miles through the streets of Odessa Saturday, chanting slogans such as, "We want justice."

The march was sponsored by Concerned Citizens for Justice, an Odessa group seeking further legal action in the Ector County Jail death of Larry Lozano Jan. 22. An Ector County inquest jury recently ruled his death to have been accidental. A number of Mexican-Americans have publicly disagreed with the jury, however.

Lozano was booked into the jail 12 days before he died outside his padded cell. Sheriff Elton Faught said in a press conference the next morning that Lozano had "gone berserk" and committed suicide by banging his head against the plexiglass window of his cell. Faught maintained that Lozano should have been in a mental institution. A number of Mexican-American individuals and organizations have been critical of both Faught and District Attorney John Green.

The Rev. David Chavez, spokesman for the Concerned Citizens, said the march was a "formal protest" of attitudes toward Mexican-Americans in Ector County.

As the marchers made their way from St. Joseph's Catholic Church to the Ector County Courthouse, and then back to the church for a rally, the original group of about 3,000 marchers swelled to approximately 4,000, with dozens of cars, horns honking, following behind.

At one point, the parade stretched about five blocks. And spectators lined most of the parade route, many of them raising their fists or honking their automobile horns in response to the exhortations of the marchers.

"They can't say we're apathetic now," said Vicki Gomez, Ector County school board member. "I cannot believe the number of people who have joined us," she said.

Members of the Brown Beret, a Mexican-American activist organization, served as marshalls for the march, spacing themselves approximately every 50 feet on each side of the marchers. Odessa police who provided traffic control for the parade said there were no problems.

As the demonstrators circled the Ector County Courthouse, they paused briefly to chant, "We want justice," and other slogans. Many raised their fists or waved placards as they shouted.

Officials had locked the courthouse as the marchers approached. Several deputies watching the parade from outside a side entrance turned and walked back into the courthouse as the shouts grew louder.

Among those in the forefront of the crowd were Consuelo Lozano, Larry Lozano's mother, and several other family members. About two-thirds of the way through the parade route, Mrs. Lozano left the marchers and rode at the head of the parade in an Odessa police car for the rest of the route.

In a speech at the rally after the march, American GI Forum representative Carlos Leal praised Odessa Police Chief Jack Tomlin, saying Tomlin is "all for us" having the right to demonstrate.

Leading the parade were members of the Brown Beret carrying U.S. and Mexican flags and banners. State Rep. Paul Moreno from El Paso, pushed in his wheelchair by former Ector County Constable Leonard Garcia, also was near the head of the parade.

Rev. Chavez, a Methodist minister, said of the purpose of the march, "We want people to know we're not disorganized."

Thomson reflects on his tenure

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Life is a series of changes. A person adjusts to each one and then moves on to the next.

Bob Thomson looked around him, realized he and his family were getting settled in after living in Midland nine years, and decided it was time for another change in his life.

Beginning May 8, he will start on a new job as director of parks and recreation in Lawton, Okla. Friday was his last day in Midland as director of parks and recreation, a post he had held since November 1973 when he was promoted from recreation superintendent.

Sitting behind his cleaned-out desk, Thomson reflected on his job, his accomplishments with the post and areas that still need to be changed.

"I am not dissatisfied with Midland," he said. "This primarily is a career move. I am reaching the age where if I wanted to change, I had to do it now. And it is tough to move now. But, I felt we (his family) needed a change, and I wanted to do it before we got entrenched here."

Changes were made in the parks and recreation department during his years as director, but Thomson said he was not solely responsible for them.

The department itself was restructured with four divisions involved: zoo, parks, recreation and golf course. The zoo had not been considered a separate division, Thomson said, and the budget had been part of the parks budget. By taking it as a separate division, the city could see exactly what was involved in running the zoo. The first professional zoo keeper was hired. "It was brought up to an acceptable humane standard as far as the United States Department of Agriculture and the public were concerned."

The golf course division was reorganized and a golf professional was hired in 1975. "We have one of the finest municipal operations in the state, especially in view of our arid climate. It is hard to grow things in this part of the country," Thomson explained.

The largest change came in the parks department. The staff of 22 in 1973-74 was down from the 1961-62 budget. Now there are 32 positions in the parks division.

The parks and recreation commission appointed by the Midland City Council has aided the relationship between the department and the city, Thomson said. "There had been an air of suspicion built up, and now we (the department) are working closer with the city. We are now trying to give all the facts to the council." The commission consists of nine members and acts as a citizens advisory body to the City Council.

Newspaper names Brown data processing director

Bill D. Brown, 33, has been named director of data processing for The Midland Reporter-Telegram. It was announced Saturday by Jim Allison Jr., publisher.

Brown joins the newspaper after being employed the past eight years by the Digital Equipment Corp., the world's largest manufacturer of mini-computers.

Brown will be in charge of all data processing operations as the newspaper continues its conversion to fully computerized handling of news, retail advertising, classified advertising, circulation and business activities.

Brown is a long-time West Texan. He was born in Bremerton, Wash., and grew up and graduated from high school in Dalhart, Texas. He attended California Polytechnical Institute where he studied electrical engineering.

He then was employed for five years by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) as an electronics engineer in the Apollo manned spacecraft command module program at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

In 1970 he joined the Digital Equipment Corp. in Maynard, Mass. His most recent assignment for Digital was as a field engineer in Texas.

Bill D. Brown

Brown, who has been living for the past few months in Odessa, plans to establish residence in Midland in the immediate future.

'Spring Fling' slated

Senior citizens and Midland College students will get together for a "Spring Fling," slated as the last student event of the school year, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. Wednesday in the Student Center.

"This is the third time that Midland College has sponsored this type of function," Jan Reed, director of the Senior Citizens Program, said. "The idea is to get everyone involved in joint activities and just see how much fun all of us can have together."

Dr. Jim Cook, director of Student Activities, has lined up a variety of entertainment for the event. A duo from Nashville, "Northfork Express," will sing and play guitars from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. Belly dancers will perform, as well as jazz group and tap dancers from the Midland Community Theatre.

Ice cream and free orange juice will be provided as refreshments. Lunch may be purchased at the snack bar, or persons may bring a sack lunch.

A "Hug A Granny" booth, where students may get a hug and, once in a while, even a kiss from senior ladies will be set up for the event.

The public is invited to attend the fling. Senior citizens from Midland and surrounding areas are urged to come and explore the campus to learn what is going on at the college.

Author to give address today

Joan Lowery Nixon, winner of the Best Children's Book Award of 1975 Texas Institute of Letters, will speak on "Whodunit? The New Look in Mysteries for All Ages" at the Friends of the Library's annual meeting at 2 p. m. today in the Parish Hall of Trinity Episcopal Church.

The talk is open to the public. Ms. Dixon, a former Midlander, has authored more than 25 fiction and non-fiction books, writes a weekly column for The Houston Post, and has written numerous magazine articles.

One of her juvenile mystery novels was winner of an Edgar scroll from Mystery Writers of America in 1975. And her books "The Secret Box Mystery" and "Danger in Dinosaur Valley" were Junior Literary Guild selections.

She is a member of the Authors Guild, the Mystery Writers of America and is a member of the board of directors of the Society of Children's Book Writers.

She and her husband geologist Hershell Nixon, co-authored "Oil and Gas: From Fossils to Factories" and "Volcanoes: Nature's Fireworks."

Russians release pilot, navigator

MOSCOW (AP) — The pilot and navigator of a South Korean jetliner forced down by the Soviets after straying into Russian airspace were freed by authorities Saturday and were flown out of the Soviet Union.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the pair admitted disobeying interceptor pilots' warnings to land when their Boeing 707 wandered over northwest Russia, April 20. A Russian jet fired on the airliner, killing two passengers, and the plane made an emergency landing on a frozen lake.

Passengers and crew freed previously have said they saw only one interceptor and it gave no warning signal before firing.

Pilot Kim Chang kyu and navigator Lee Kun shik, escorted by an American diplomat, left from Leningrad aboard a Scandinavian Airlines System plane en route to Copenhagen, Denmark, where South Korean diplomats and airline officials were waiting for them.

The flight made a brief stopover in Stockholm, Sweden, but the freed men did not talk with reporters there. Tass said the President of the Supreme Soviet pardoned the two Koreans "considering their admission of guilt and their repentance, and also guided by principles of humanism."

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Moscow said it was told Friday the Soviet investigation of the incident had been completed and the Koreans would be released. The bodies of the two dead and 106 other surviving passengers and crew of what was to have been a Paris-to-Seoul flight were freed by the Russians two days after the incident.

The KAL plane made its forced landing in a desolate area 230 miles south of Murmansk, in Russia's northwest corner.

The American spokesman in Moscow said the two Koreans were flown from Murmansk to Leningrad for Saturday's flight.

Low, middle-income families feel college crunch

By JON HALVORSEN
Associated Press Writer

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) — Monday thousands of high school seniors will be making one of the most important decisions of their young lives — which of the nation's elite private colleges to attend.

For some, the day of acceptance may mean fulfillment of an ambition — theirs or their parents'. For others, the decision may already have been made for them. Either they were rejected by the schools or they didn't apply because they're part of a growing group whose parents decided against making the huge financial sacrifice.

Although there are fewer low and middle-income applicants and the overall percentage of high school graduates enrolling in four-year colleges is declining, the top-notch private schools have no shortage of candidates.

Last year, Stanford and Dartmouth accepted only one in four applicants;

Harvard, less than one in five; Amherst, less than one in six.

The cost of attending such institutions is staggering. At Bowdoin College, the 184-year-old alma mater of Hawthorne and Longfellow, next fall's 380 freshmen — of 3,600 who applied — will pay $7,250 each, up from $6,550 this year, for tuition, room and board, fees, supplies and incidental expenses.

But at Bowdoin and other private schools, the proportion of students from low and middle-income families is dropping.

Fewer families who fall into what the sociologists call the middle class are even applying to places that are very expensive," says William R. Mason, Bowdoin's director of admissions. His office defines middle class as families earning $15,000-$25,000, "and you might even push it up as high as $30,000."

A Bowdoin study comparing its freshman classes over an eight-year period — as the student body increased from 955 to its present 1,350 — shows a growing number of well-to-do students and a decreasing proportion of those less affluent.

The effect of soaring costs on families of modest means hasn't gone unnoticed. At Bowdoin, three alumni, each acting independently, set up substantial scholarship funds earmarked specifically for "middle-income" students.

"That's a new phenomenon," says C. Warren Ring, vice president for development.

In his annual report a year ago, Bowdoin President Roger Howell Jr. noted that given inflation generally and the increased costs of attending Bowdoin, "there is nothing mysterious about the growing need to provide aid to students from upper middle-income families."

"We continue to be troubled, however, about the decreasing numbers of low and lower middle-income students, and we will continue to direct our recruiting effort to lower income students of high ability."

Says Mason: "What we're trying to do here is admit a class without any notion as to whether they can pay" — and then aid every student who needs it. About a third at Bowdoin receive financial aid.

Since 1972-73, the college has met the "calculated financial need" of every low-and middle-income student who qualified academically. In previous years, some students had to be put on a waiting list for financial aid.

In 1968, 35 percent of Bowdoin's freshman aid recipients came from families earning $15,000-$25,000. Now, more than half fall in that bracket.

Walter H. Moulton, director of student aid, says Bowdoin families in the $15,000-$20,000 bracket received average financial aid of $3,450 toward this year's cost of $6,550. The net cost to parents was $3,100 — compared with $3,205 for instate students living on campus at the University of Maine at Orono.

Families earning $20,000-$25,800 received an average of $2,750, leaving them with a net cost of $3,800.

But even with the financial aid available, Bowdoin and similar institutions see a "declining public" among low-and middle-income families.

One reason, Mason says, is that middle-class values have changed — parents are less willing to make the great financial sacrifices they once did to pay for their children's college education.

Mason, who has spent 11 years in admissions work at Yale, Williams and now Bowdoin, adds: "The ethic that prevailed (among parents) when I first started was, 'Don't worry, we'll make the sacrifice.'"

Now, he says, more and more middle-class families are using their disposable income "as a kind of payment back for all their hard work" by spending it on themselves.

The study surveyed 10,000 families who applied for student financial aid for the current school year. The higher the parents' income, the study found, the less willing they were to contribute what was expected of them — based on income and other assets — toward their children's education.

Joe Paul Case, associate director of the College Scholarship Service, believes that middle-income families' ability, or willingness, to pay for a college education "perhaps is influenced by their own expectations of what is, for lack of a better term, 'the good life.'"

Case says it's a myth "that middle-income families don't qualify for aid — they do."

Youth accuses father

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Tom Hansen says his father struck him only once as a teenager. But Hansen, now 24, says a decade of emotional distress caused him to bring a $350,000 damage suit against his parents.

"It's hard for me to work at a job where there is someone over me...I start arguing with my father in my head. I feel criticized for everything I do," says Hansen, adding that he now lives on Social Security mental disability payments.

The parental malpractice suit, filed in Boulder District Court on Wednesday, seeks $250,000 for medical expenses and $100,000 in punitive damages from his parents, Shirley and Richard Hansen, who maintain residences in Boulder and Hilo, Hawaii. Neither could be contacted for comment.

Hansen says his problems began 10 years ago with a weeklong weed-cutting session after his suspension from prep school for smoking marijuana.

Hansen said that when he was 14, he and his two sisters were suspended from Hawaii Preparatory Academy for using marijuana.

"My father became pretty upset, and, well, he took off work for a week and had us cutting weeds in the backyard with sessions of lectures, like what did I think so-and-so's mother thought about me now."

He said the disciplinary work sessions lasted all day with two meals of oatmeal "but no milk on it. I had to sneak food from the refrigerator. I felt guilty for taking food."

He would not identify his sisters by name or age, but Hansen says both emerged from the experience in better shape than he and the older sister is finishing medical school.

Hansen said that after the weed-cutting discipline he was in and out of public and private schools. There were periods of living on the beach with hippies. He says he became a compulsive marijuana smoker.

He said his father threw him out of the house for good at age 17 after he was expelled again. "I was left starving on the streets for a year. (He attributes his 124-pound and 5-foot-8 height to that lean period). I hung out with some hard Christians in a Christian commune for three years in Kona (Hawaii)."

Hansen, who says his psychiatrist has diagnosed him as "a latent paranoid schizophrenic with recurring homicidal tendencies," believes the parental malpractice suit will "relieve a sense of personal injustice against myself."

Midland chosen for convention

BIG SPRING — Harlan Brancel of San Angelo was elected governor and Midland was selected as the 1979 convention city at the annual convention of District 2-A1, Lions International, here Saturday.

C.E. McCain, a member of Midland's Southside Lions Club, was elected lieutenant governor.

Diane Lewallen, representing the San Angelo Sundown Lions Club, was selected as the district's queen in the annual contest held Friday night. Kelly Jean Robeson of the Sweetwater Downtown Lions Club, was named the first runner-up in the contest, and Liz Schuman, sponsored by the Stanton Lions Club, second runner-up.

Robert E. Zimmerman of Ottawa, Canada, a former director of Lions International, was the featured speaker at the convention.

Leaving parks director reflects on his tenure department, Thomson said, has been the formulation of the bond proposal which went before the voters in April 1977, but was defeated. "It was an attempt to get an immediate source of funds to make corrections that have been needed over the years," Thomson said. "The needs were based on a master plan of the system."

Even though it was defeated, Thomson said he does not think it was because of the plan itself. Rather, he places the blame on the property re-evaluation the city had done. People were afraid of higher taxes, according to Thomson.

"I feel it was defeated because of a misunderstanding of there-evaluation. I can't believe people would defeat something to improve their quality of life. They feared horrendous tax increases."

On Thomson's list of improvements, he has the fact that more city council members are recognizing the department. "When I first came here, you seldom heard a city official say parks and recreation were important. In the last two elections, some candidates have addressed themselves to the issues of parks and recreation." Their interest also is reflected in the increased budget and capital improvements, Thomson said. Despite the reorganization and improvements, problems still remain with the department.

At the time of the bond election, the parks system was behind the times "and it continues to slip behind," he said. "We are operating the parks facilities in a second rate manner."

Automated watering systems are necessary, and most of Midland's parks use the antiquated irrigation system. It takes two weeks to move the system around the park once. Meanwhile, the ground keeps getting harder. "Some parks are so hard you can break your fanny when you sit down," he quipped.

Dennis the Menace Park is the exception, but "that was done right with an automated system," Thomson explained. Someone donated $25,000 to "make a first class park. It's easier to do it this way if you have the money to begin with." Most of Midland's parks came into existence during 1962-63 and irrigation pipe was less expensive. To install an automated system at Wadley-Barron Park on N. A Street would cost about $15,000 to $20,000, Thomson estimated.

"It's hard to imagine in a city of this size with people of forward-thinking that parks still are watered with irrigation pipe," Thomson said, shaking his head.

Funds are needed not only to replace the irrigation pipe, but also to get new playground equipment "to replace the ancient play equipment and to jazz it up a little."

The facility housing the parks and recreation department across from Dennis the Menace Park also is on Thomson's list of things that need to be improved. The "tin barn" as Thomson calls it, serves as headquarters for the department and also as the only facility from which to operate programs. "They either need a massive renovation or a new building. This building is one big room with a metal roof and concrete floor. They need a more functional and attractive building," Thomson said.

'Strike' list names may vote

The almost 10,000 voters whose new voter registration cards didn't get to them can vote in the May 6 primary, even though their names appear on a "strike list." Midland County Voter Registration Deputy Janeice Buita said.

Of the 39,580 new yellow registration cards mailed out, 9,745 were returned by the U.S. Postal Service, Mrs. Buita said. Those names were taken off the rolls of registered voters and placed on a strike list.

However, those persons whose names are on the strike list can go on May 6 to the voting place for their old precinct, fill out a registration application and vote at that polling place, Mrs. Buita said.

If there is a runoff in their primary, they also can vote at that same place June 3, she said.

Registration at the polling place is possible only for those persons who were registered to vote when the new cards were mailed in December, she added.

The senior citizens center proposed at the Circle Drive fire station is a definite need for the community, according to Thomson. "You hear the fallacy that older people don't need any place to go. While some people here are wealthy enough to fly off to Europe, there are a lot here who can't."

But, the department still is facing another problem, and that is the need for non-elected community leaders to see the need and importance of parks and recreation in the scheme of things, Thomson said. "These people wield as much influence as the elected. They are a lobby group, such as the chamber (Midland Chamber of Commerce), that could wield influence, but have not supported parks and recreation."

According to Thomson, the reason for their non-support is they have access to other recreational facilities without having to use the public equipment.

Despite the improvements and continuing problems, Thomson said he had reached a point where he felt he could do no more here.

No matter where he goes, though Thomson said he will always have the continuing desire "to see every person realize the importance of leisure facilities. We are providing a service where they can partake in things that make them happy."

A mass, in which a priest from Monahan and a bishop from El Paso participated, preceded the march.

Delegates will be representing leagues from the 50 states, Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

tors stayed for a rally at St. Joseph's. "The (Concerned Citizens for Justice) committee will not stop until the culprits have been indicted," Leal told his audience. And, he said, the committee will continue to be active to fight "discrimination, injustice and police brutality."

Consuelo Lozano also addressed the rally, speaking in Spanish. According to Ms. Gomez's translation, Mrs. Lozano told of three visits to her son during the 12 days between his arrest and death. She said he was so badly injured that she did not recognize him.

Mrs. Lozano said she had "pleaded" with jail officials to get medical attention for her son, who she said was taking medication.

"The last time I saw my son, I told him all doors seemed to be closed," Ms. Gomez quoted Mrs. Lozano as saying. "When they (the Pecos police) told me my son had killed himself, I knew it was a lie," she said.

Leal called Lozano "a man who lost his temper and used less than mild and gentlemanly language" to Ector County sheriff's deputies. He charged that the "majority of Odessa" is trying to cover up for what he said he believes is wrongdoing by sheriff's deputies.

A mass, in which a priest from Monahan and a bishop from El Paso participated, preceded the march.

Big Spring man stabbed, beaten

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring man was in guarded condition Saturday night in Malone-Hogan Hospital after he was assaulted by three men at 12:03 a.m. Saturday in an alley, according to a hospital official.

Vidal Garza, 78, told police that three men entered an apartment he was in, located on the alley, to get food and water. Garza said they got into a fight and the men stabbed and kicked him. The men then left the apartment, heading south.

A hospital official said Garza's lower left jaw bone had been fractured, and he had received lacerations on the left side of his face, left hand and leg. He said Garza also had a bruise on the right side of his head.

Police said they are holding two men, both escapees from Big Spring State Hospital, in the incident. The search is continuing for the third suspect, according to police.

Aptitude test set for May

The Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service testing program, which involves 11 hours of testing to determine student aptitudes, will be administered May 19 through 21 at Midland College.

AIMS Foundation officials think it is important to take the complete test at an early age, and it is a definite advantage to take it while in high school or the first year of college. The test is designed to help students in determining their career interests.

Interested persons should register for the test well in advance. Applications and brochures are available at the college, or persons may call Dr. Elizabeth Robinett, college counselor, at 684-7851, extension 123, for more information.

Brown Berets plan relay, rally today

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring chapter of the Brown Berets will sponsor a relay and rally today to protest what the organization calls unjust rulings and police discrimination in the Juan Galaviz and Tiburcio Griego Santome cases.

Galaviz reportedly was shot and killed Dec. 8, 1977, by a police officer following a high-speed auto chase through residential areas of Big Spring. In late March a Big Spring grand jury did not return an indictment against the officer who reportedly shot Galaviz.

Griego was arrested in November by Glasscock County Sheriff Royce "Booger" Pruitt for being drunk and disorderly at a church festival near St. Lawrence. According to reports, while in the back seat of the sheriff's car, Griego was shot and killed by ex-deputy Sheriff G. B. Therwhanger of Stanton.

Therwhanger and Pruitt claimed Griego pulled a steak knife and cut both of the men. In February, a grand jury returned a no-bill of indictment against Therwhanger.

Henry Menchaca, major of the Big Spring Brown Berets chapter, said the relay from St. Lawrence to Big Spring, approximately 24 miles, would be a symbolic gesture against what the Brown Berets believe are injustices in the two cases.

The relay will begin at 10:30 a.m. in St. Lawrence and will conclude more than four hours later at the rally, which will begin at 2 p.m. at the Comanche Trial Park amphitheater, Menchaca said.

"The purpose of the rally," Menchaca said, "is to bring national attention to the Galaviz and Griego Santome killings, to bring to light the repressive methods of the police and to involve those people that have not previously been involved."

Midlanders receive award

WASHINGTON — Two Midlanders have received Amoco Oil Co.'s Bronze Medallion of Excellence for their participation in the national American College Theatre Festival in Washington, D.C., recently.

Barbara Buckley, 20, and Ange Dickson, 21, received the award, created seven years ago as part of Amoco's sponsorship of the festival, which was presented during ceremonies in the John F. Kennedy Center's Eisenhower Theater following Angelo State University's production of "Sideshow," the winner of the student playwriting competition.

Ms. Buckley, a junior at Angelo State, played one of the townspeople in the production. Ms. Dickson, a senior, was production manager for the show.

Midlanders join opening

BROWNWOOD — Two Midlanders will join five others as participants in ceremonies to celebrate the opening of the J. Howard Hodge Memorial Towers, a newly-constructed carillon, at the Institute of Christianity at Howard Payne University, university President Dr. Roger L. Brooks said recently.

Veda Hodge, president of the Howard Payne University Board of Directors and wife of the late J. Howard Hodge, and Dr. Daniel Vestal, pastor of Midland's First Baptist Church, will attend the ceremonies, scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. Tuesday.

The 37-bell carillon, known as the Americana "Classic" is tuned to the traditional Flemish Standards which includes the sub-octave hum tone, Brooks said.

Selector switches will permit the bells to be heard internally alone, from the tower alone or together.

A special feature of the carillon is a clock-controlled digital player. This mini-computer utilizes digital memory tapes which activate the hammers of the bells and can be set to automatically play a predetermined number of carillon selections over the tower at chosen times of the day, throughout the week, Brooks said.

Federal fluoride standards discussed

AUSTIN BUREAU

AUSTIN — The federal health standard for fluoride in drinking water may be too restrictive and ought to be reviewed, several speakers suggested during a symposium on The University of Texas campus on the implications of the Safe Drinking Water Act.

More than 500 community water systems in Texas have fluoride levels exceeding the maximum levels for contamination set by the Environmental Protection Agency under provisions of the federal drinking water statute.

Although consumption of water containing high levels of fluoride can lead to fluorosis — a condition that can cause bones to become highly brittle and to break easily — Texas Health Department officials indicate that fluoride at the highest levels monitored in Texas has only one apparent health effect — the mottling of the teeth of children under age 14.

University of Arizona Prof. Raymond A. Sierka, discussing the various methods of removing fluoride from drinking water, said there should perhaps be a review by EPA of the beneficial effects of mild fluorosis which can make teeth more resistant to cavities and, in some cases, can actually strengthen weak bones.

He observed that the National Academy of Science, in its lengthy report on the provisions of the Safe Drinking Water Act, suggested there should be new "sociological studies to determine if mottling is still considered desirable."

C. K. Foster, chief of the Health Department's Drinking Water program, noted that because of the questionable health effects of fluoride in the levels found in most of the Texas water systems in technical violation of the national standard, the Health Department is seeking a revision of that requirement.

He noted that EPA officials have been discussing the fluoride standard — particularly as it pertains to Texas and several Southwestern states — but so far have not proposed any revisions to the allowed maximum contaminant level.

The Health Department has talked with EPA about the possibility of obtaining a variance from the standard that would bring more than half of the 500 water supply systems — primarily in North and Northwest Texas — into compliance without necessitating the addition of sophisticated and somewhat expensive fluoride removal equipment.

Foster said, however, that EPA officials do not appear to favor granting a variance although they may consider the issuance of "exceptions" to the standard to many of the water systems in violation.

The problem with an exception, said Foster, is that there must first be a public hearing to determine a need and then, if the exception is granted, the water system must submit a compliance schedule setting out deadlines for ultimately bringing the system into line with the federal regulations.

Dear Jim:

It was good to meet with you again during my last swing through your magnificent state. You all are tremendous people! Some folks think the story-book image of Texans is just a mite exaggerated, but Nancy and I know from personal experience that those claims of exaggeration are dwarfed by what you really are. Individualism, independence, and industry, tempered by patriotism and genuine compassion, are characteristics which well serve your state and our nation.

I've reflected at length on the subject of our recent meeting, earnestly seeking to develop a position which supports the cause for which we've worked so hard over the years, while at the same time, one which does not impede our efforts in presenting a united front for the campaigns in November.

All across our country we have some of the finest Republican candidates ever to run for public office. Competent, qualified, and honorable people. New faces, and some older ones, and I find it tremendously exciting and encouraging, for our party must develop new leaders. You yourself spoke well of your opponents during our meeting. For that I commend you, and I commend them.

As usual, there are all kinds of arguments to justify a course of action. But as has been said before, "When in doubt, adhere to principle and ignore the personality."

The bottom line of course, is that a choice must be made. That's what our political system is all about. And the bottom line in this instance is that two years ago I gave public testimony to your leadership, your qualifications, and your personal commitment to those values which are so essential to our national existence.

You are today the same man, and the challenges to our nation are unchanged. Thus on the basis of principle, congressional races this year. I do so not merely because of statements made months ago, but because those statements are just as valid today as they were then.

Good luck.

Sincerely,

RONALD REAGAN

Beef cattle picture now looks bright

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

Non-irrigated fields over the Plains section of Texas remain in a critical moisture situation. Sunny, dry and windy conditions prevailed for another week. Winds have decreased irrigation efficiency for producers trying to prepare for planting on irrigated land. Many acres of dryland cropland are suffering damage from wind erosion.

The current beef cattle picture looks bright as prices have generally been strong. But how long will it last? There are a number of factors at work that will have a direct bearing on the cattle market for the rest of 1978, according to Dr. Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Cattlemen need to keep these in mind as they plan ahead.

What will help keep the strength in beef cattle prices? Uvacek lists these factors: Per capita disposable incomes are rising rapidly, boosting the demand for beef. Cow and nonfed cattle slaughter is down sharply even though fed cattle production is up. Much less pork is available this year than earlier expected. Pork supplies will probably be up only about 1 percent for the year. Lamb and mutton production is down sharply and should be 11 percent below the 1977 level.

Improved feedlot profits are boosting the demand for feeder cattle. Feeder cattle and calves available for feedlots are down 9 percent this year. The breeding herd is much smaller, so this year's calf crop should be smaller. On the other hand, factors that could cause some weakening in cattle prices are these: Seasonal increases in pork supplies are still coming.

Current retail beef prices are at record highs. Recent $30-plus prices for fed beef have not yet been reflected at the retail level. Further reduced cow slaughter should cause a scarcity of manufacturing beef, pushing hamburger prices up sharply. Broiler and turkey production is expected to increase substantially in the next few months. Large placements of cattle into feedlots during the last quarter of 1977 have still not been marketed, particularly from the Midwest.

Break-even prices for cattle currently moving into feedlots will be about $52 per hundredweight in the August-September period. If fed cattle prices falter, there will be losses, just at the time most feeder cattle will be marketed. Weighing all these factors, Uvacek calls for some weakness in cattle prices during April and May followed by a strong recovery in June. The July-September quarter should show another downward trend followed by some improvement by November and December.

The trend to growing something to eat continues popular among backyard gardeners. This has been a difficult year for vegetable gardeners with the added stresses of a drought situation and many calls for advice and information have come into the Extension office. Some questions concerning two of the early season vegetables are quite common.

One is what causes radishes to get hollow instead of firm and crisp? The hollow "pithy" center in radishes can be caused by over-maturity or poor growing conditions. Radishes grow very quickly under ideal conditions. One sunny day can make the difference between maturity and over maturity in radishes.

Another factor which can contribute to a pithy center in radishes is poor growing conditions. Hot, dry weather causes slow growth. When this happens after the radish root has begun to enlarge, the pithy center often occurs. Plant radishes early in the spring and late in the fall to avoid the hot weather as much as possible.

Another question we get frequently is why did my lettuce taste so bitter and start to grow tall so quickly? Most home garden lettuce, especially the Bibb variety, goes to seed quickly in high-temperature, long-day conditions. It quickly develops a bitter flavor in this kind of weather unless irrigated every few days. Buttercrunch, Salad Bowl, Ruby and Romaine tolerate more of these adversities than other varieties and remain sweet and tender longer. Try planting these next season for your summer lettuce.

Minter McReynolds, county executive director, ASCS, has advised that farmers now have until May 15 to sign up their intentions to participate in the 1978 farm program. This has been extended from May 1. McReynolds points out that farmers can withdraw even after signing up, but that unless they have done so by the extended deadline date, cannot later decide to participate.

Girl Scout campout slated

ODESSA — Camp-outs for Girls Scouts and non-Scouts will be held beginning in June at Camp Mitre Peak, south of Fort Davis in the Davis Mountains, and at Hat-A Ranch, south of Bakersfield.

The first one-week session at Camp Mitre Peak begins June 11 and "is full, but there is still room in the other sessions," said Pat Thompson, camping services director and acting executive director of the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council.

Girls in the camps take part in hiking, swimming, crafts, singing, horseback riding, nature study and living in the out-of-doors.

Hat-A sessions begin June 12 and June 22 for Brownie Scouts and start June 17 and June 27 for Junior Girl Scouts.

Ex-Midlander named president of WTCC

LUBBOCK — W.G. "Bill" Marquardt of Fort Worth, formerly of Midland, was elected president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce for 1978-79 at its 60th annual convention held here this weekend.

Marquardt, president of Texas Electric Service Co., succeeds E. Bruce Street of Graham, who becomes chairman of the board.

Fort Worth was selected as the 1979 convention city.

Other officers named include Bob Corkins of Alpine, president-elect; Burvin Hines of Arlington, formerly of Midland, vice president, finance and membership; Ray Clymer of Wichita Falls, vice president, program of work; Robert Wooster of Fort Worth, vice president, special events, and C. C. Elliott of Abilene, treasurer. Edward H. Coltharp of Abilene is the executive vice president.

W.G. Marquardt

C. Winston Barclay of Midland was named vice president of District VI.

Other district vice presidents include C.F. Minar, Amarillo (I); Giles M. Forbess, Lubbock (II); Killen M. Moore, Vernon (III); James R. Nichols, Fort Worth (IV); Bill Cox, Impact (V); L.H. Koogle, El Paso (VII); Richard E. Morrow, Fort Stockton (VIII); F.L. Stephens, San Angelo (IX); Jack Pilon, Brownwood, formerly of Midland, (X); and Raymond Barker, Kerrville (XI).

Elected members at large of the executive committee are Durwood Chalker, Abilene; J.R. Beadel, Brownwood; W. Lee Watson, Brownwood; Harry W. Clark, Midland; John A. Wright, Abilene, and Hellen Reese, Odessa.

E.W. LeFevre of Eden and N.M. Mitchell of Sanderson were named lifetime directors.

J. Fred Bucy of Dallas, president of Texas Instruments, Inc., addressed the convention at its Friday noon meeting, speaking on the subject "Free Enterprise and Government Regulation." Congressmen George Mahon of Lubbock and Omar Burlison of Anson, both of whom are retiring from Congress at the end of this year, were the Friday night banquet speakers. They have served a combined total of 75 years in the House. Both expressed optimism that the United States could weather any crisis, but they tempered that optimism by relating some of the problems they face as legislators.

The speakers lauded the West Texas Chamber on its 60 years of service to West Texas and recalled interesting incidents occurring in their long relationships with the organization.

Other convention speakers included Bill Stewart of Austin, executive director, Texas Air Control Board; Lloyd Unsell of Washington, D.C., executive vice president, Independent Petroleum Association of America, and Harvey Davis of Austin, executive director, Texas Department of Water Resources.

Texas congressional races offer variety of interests

By TOM DeCOLA
Associated Press Writer

Primary races for seats in the Texas delegation to Congress have something for just about everybody, from the minister who says God wants him on The Hill, to the San Antonian whose name was left off several ballots, to scrambles for the offices of legendary figures who are not seeking re-election.

Most observers predict light turnouts in the state elections May 6, despite the spicy attractions of a horse race betting referendum and a hot Democratic battle for occupancy of the governor's mansion.

Some colorful and powerful Texas representatives will be replaced. George Mahon, W. R. Poage, Omar Burleson and Olin "Tiger" Teague are retiring. Bob Krueger is running for the Senate; and Barbara Jordan, an eloquent spokeswoman for her black race, her gender and her Houston constituency, is quitting for personal reasons.

As is generally the case, the Democrats are providing most of the competition.

In Mahon's 19th District, the Rev. Morris Sheats is taking on State Sen. Kent Hance for the Democratic nod. Sheats says God is changing his charismatic ministry from that of a local shepherd to that of a national leader. Sheats said his decision was "simply God's next step for my life." Republican candidates are Jim Reese, George Bush and Joe Hickox. The GOP is given a fighting chance in this district.

Observers predict a runoff in the fight to replace Poage in the 11th District. Front-running Democrats are Lyndon Olson Jr., Marvin Leath and Lane Denton. Steve Alexander is still in there pitching. The winner gets to take on Republican Jack Burgess and his Ronald Reagan-backed campaign.

Burleson's retirement as 17th District representative provoked eight candidacies, but three Democrats and one Republican wear the favorite's colors. The Democrats are A. L. Rhodes, Fike Godfrey and Charles Stenholm. The GOP front-runner is Bill Fisher.

The 6th District has been war hero Teague's personal property since 1947. The favored Democrat is Phil Gramm, and Wes Mowery is getting the bulk of the Republican betting.

Miss Jordan's replacement will most likely come from the Democrats, where three candidates appear to be leading the field of seven. They are State Reps. Anthony Hall and Mickey Ireland, and Houston city councilman Judson Robinson Jr.

Krueger is giving up a chunk of territory bigger than 19 states. Nelson Wolff leads the pack of Democratic hopefuls, but it was in this 21st District that a problem came up. Steve Clark's name was left off the Kerr County ballots, and that fact wasn't discovered until after some absentee ballots had been cast. An election official says the mix-up could result in a rare, three-man runoff. Other Democrat candidates are Woodrow Glascock, Paul Dahlgren and Joe Sullivan.

The winner from among these will probably end up taking on the GOP's Tom Loeffler.

Personal problems of longtime Rep. John Young of Corpus Christi have attracted more opponents than he has had in the past 14 years. His Democratic opposition comes from Joe Wyatt and Jason Luby, while Republican Joy Yates waits in the wings. Young was accused by one of his former female Washington staff members of hiring her for sexual favors. Since then, his wife has committed suicide. No action was taken against White regarding the staffer's 1976 allegations.

The cast of characters for the 22nd District seat hasn't changed. Once again, it's Bob Gammage and Ron Paul in the forefronts of their respective Democratic and Republican parties. Gammage will have to win over three newcomers in the primary, and he's expected to do so. Paul is unopposed.

The two squared off in the 1976 general election, and Gammage defeated Paul.

CHOSEN "Outstanding Girl of the Month" for April by the Midland Branch of the American Association of University Women is Lisa Libby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Libby. A senior at Lee High School, Miss Libby has received several academic awards and is a member of the National Honor Society. She also is a member of the Rebelettes honor squad, Junior Council, 100 Club and Explorers. She has received certificates of achievement in karate and powder puff mechanics and has been recognized for her work with the Association for Retarded Citizens. Miss Libby has worked for Structuremaps Ltd., General Crude Oil Co. and Geomap Inc. She is a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church and teaches the 2- and 3-year-old Sunday school class. Officers fired

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Police Chief Harry Caldwell has fired five police officers in connection with the death of Randall Webster, 17, who was fatally wounded by police following a high speed auto chase last year.

Caldwell Friday fired William E. Byrd, 24; Danny H. Mays, 31; John T. Olin, 27; Norval W. Holloway Jr., 29 and Lt. Paul D. Dillon, 37.

Caldwell also accepted the resignation of Officer James A. Estes, 27, who earlier had been suspended from duty with pay.

Byrd pleaded guilty in federal court Thursday to providing a weapon that was placed near the body of Webster after he had been fatally wounded by officers.

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Hundreds of anti-nuclear demonstrators gathered Saturday for the largest protest ever held at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, the nation's only facility which produces plutonium components for nuclear weapons.

On a boulder-strewn plain at the base of the Rocky Mountain foothills, the demonstrators urged that production of nuclear weapons be halted and that the plant be converted to some other use.

Officer arrests man with ax

Police arrested a 20-year-old Midland man Friday night after he threatened and swung at an officer with a hatchet, police said Saturday.

The man reportedly was involved in a large-scale disturbance on Midland's south side involving fights and bottles being thrown.

Officer Duane Robertson was dispatched to South Lee Street, where a large and unruly crowd reportedly was forming. Robertson later reported that, as he crossed the railroad tracks, he saw a man standing on a corner of Lee Street and Industrial Avenue throwing beer bottles with one hand and holding a hatchet in the other.

Robertson reported that he attempted to call police headquarters but was unable to contact them because the radio was busy.

Police said Robertson told the man to put down the beer bottle he was holding, and the man complied. Robertson then reportedly told the man to put the hatchet on the hood of the police car. Officers said the man refused, and a fight ensued. During the fight, three additional police units were dispatched to the area.

Robertson reportedly managed to disarm the man, but as he attempted to handcuff him, the man broke free and grabbed the hatchet again, police said. At this time, Robertson pulled his revolver, and the man surrendered, officers said.

Midland 4-H team takes first

OZONA — The Midland County 4-H Club Team No. 1, led by Lee Schweitzer, placed first in competition against 20 teams in a range grass-judging contest recently held here.

Making up that winning team were James Finley, Phillip Buys and Lee, who was the team's high-point man.

Midland's No. 2 Team of David Erwin, M. W. Huneke, Lloyd Bliznak and Scott Durr placed second in the range-judging contest.

The two teams were coached by Jane Schweitzer, a Midland County 4-H Club leader, and by Sam Nance, range conservationist for the Midland County Soil Conservation Service.

The contest, hosted by the Crockett County 4-H and FFA organizations, was sponsored by the board of supervisors of the Crockett County Soil Conservation District.

The two Midland teams will represent District 6 in the statewide Texas 4-H Club Round-up at Texas A&M University in June.

Midland's No. 1 team also won first place in grass-identification at the 1978 Eldorado-Divide Pope Ranch range-judging contest held near Ft. McKavett.

Schweitzer was the high-individual judge in that contest. Finley was the runner-up in scoring.

In range judging, the Midland County 4-H Club team placed third. Finley was the high scorer.

Man arrested on drug charges

A 30-year-old Midland man was arrested Friday night for suspected possession of dangerous drugs.

Officers, acting on an informant's tip, stopped a vehicle at the intersection of G Street and Industrial Avenue. After searching the vehicle, police found four capsules of what they believed to be a narcotic substance.

ALLERGIES: Your personal poisons

Caution: your medicine might cause severe allergic reaction

By JOHN BARBOUR
The Associated Press
Chapter Seven

There are well over 1,000 drugs in the American medicine cabinet, not the one in your bathroom of course, but the one symbolized by the omnipresent drugstore.

They are partly responsible for the fact that Americans can expect to live more than 25 years longer today than those born at the turn of the century, and with less physical discomfort.

And drugs continue to improve every year — in potency, effectiveness and variety. But thereby hangs a problem.

Many of today's drugs from aspirin to antibiotics are so formidable that they cause adverse drug reactions of some kind. Almost every drug carries a warning of possible side effects, a warning of who should not use it.

It is estimated that at least a quarter of the adverse reactions to drugs are really allergic responses.

Three of the most common drugs are the most frequent causes of drug allergy, partly because they are so universally used. They are aspirin, penicillin and the sulfonamides. There are no sure figures, but federal publications indicate that up to 90 percent of all allergic drug reactions stem from the use of that common trio.

Doctors are wary these days in prescribing penicillin. There was a time when many of them, in response to a patient's demands, would give penicillin for the symptoms of the common cold. Besides not being effective against viral agents, which cause most colds, penicillin carries its own hazards.

It is probably the most common cause of drug allergy, and the most common reactions are hives and rash. No one knows for certain what percentage of the population is allergic to penicillin. Estimates run from one in 100 to one in 10. But in its most severe form, penicillin allergy can cause anaphylactic shock in minutes after injection, and that fact alone gives any doctor, and should give any patient, pause.

Fortunately, in most cases, there are other antibiotics that can be substituted for penicillin, although some allergic patients will develop a sensitivity to these as well. A patient should keep his doctor alert to any known sensitivities to drugs, and in some cases should carry warnings on his person if he knows he is sensitive to penicillin. He is otherwise flirting with death.

Aspirin, the most commonly used pain-killer and anti-inflammatory drug, can also bring on allergic attacks — hives, giant hives, asthma attacks and anaphylaxis. What makes aspirin an even more insidious problem is that it is often combined with other medications and the user will not even know it is in the cold tablet he is popping into his mouth. There are probably more than 200 medications in which aspirin is present.

Most frequently, a patient will have some warning that he is having an allergic attack — swelling in the oral cavity, difficulty in breathing. There are many substitute medications, and a doctor will know what they are.

The longer acting sulfa drugs may produce a wide range of allergic reactions from hives to an inflammation of the blood vessels, from an ordinary rash to blood problems. And these drugs cover a range of medications from antibiotics to diuretics to oral antidiabetic agents.

While these three classes of drugs are the most common causes of medical allergic reactions, there are a forest of other less frequently encountered drugs, antitoxins, tranquilizers, barbiturates, hormones and anesthetics that are potential allergens.

So great is the American ingestion of drugs of various kinds that the U.S. government estimates that $3 billion a year is spent each year in treating adverse drug reactions in American hospitals.

The specific problem of allergic drug reactions is only a part of that, but a dangerous part. Proof of the allergic nature of reactions rests on finding the presence of a sensitizing antibody in the sera of these patients. When classic responses such as anaphylaxis or serum sickness or asthma occurs, the doctor is relatively certain it is an allergy. He also relies on other symptoms and signs, and an allergy is sometimes proved by simply withdrawing the suspect drug and substituting another.

Besides the classic allergy symptoms, drugs can produce a number of other reactions attributed to allergy. In some cases fever is the only symptom, developing a week to 10 days after the onset of therapy. It sometimes hides behind the fever that is an expected symptom of the disease.

Unlike other allergies, skin testing is of limited use in the case of drugs. Their reliability is questionable, and there is also the possibility of a sudden, dramatic drug reaction.

The best test is the patient's own recollection of his reactions to various drugs he has taken in the past. The doctor will probably investigate any drug previously taken, including nose drops, ointments, tonics, laxatives, vitamins and other everyday preparations most people don't think of as drugs. Certainly people with a history of asthma should beware of taking aspirin or any medication that contains it.

And just as certainly no person should take any drug casually or without good reason.

Son of sculptor Gutzon Borglum fears art on Mount Rushmore may outlive government

By KEN HERMAN

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Lincoln Borglum fears that an artwork he fathered, Gutzon who is rather proud of may designed and supervised outlive the government of the massive sculpture, the United States. But the younger "You have these heads Borglum, now 66, took up there and there's no over the project when his record of who the people father died shortly before are or why it was carved... Unless we assume Although Borglum the government will be finished the awesome around for 100,000 work on the mountain, he still views it as an unfinished dream. He talked about it in his home-studio in this Rio Grande Valley city.

"Fifty thousand years from now they won't know what the hell it is. We don't know why the Sphinx was built or why the Pyramids were for," the artist said.

Mere written records would not be sufficient, he added. Borglum wants to see records that would be almost as permanent as the faces of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt — granite likenesses that erode at the microscopic rate of less than an inch per 100,000 years.

"It would be a room cut out of the mountain. On the walls would be an inscription with the history of the United States and who those people are that are carved up there," he said.

Work on the proposed hall of records — designed by the elder Borglum — had begun but was cut off by officials in Washington. Gutzon Borglum saw the room as a way to prevent misinterpretation of his work thousands of years from now.

He foresaw future scientists and thinkers mistakenly theorizing that the four faces were gods or that they marked a tomb.

Lincoln Borglum believes it will take a grassroots movement from the people to spark the completion of the proposed hall of records. He sees the hall as the only viable addition to his father's masterpiece.

But there have been other suggestions. Some would like to see other presidential faces in the granite.

"FDR is always the top choice and Kennedy is second. But it's a moot question. There's no room for another head," he said.

Borglum keeps busy today and his works are featured in several Texas cities. A Christ statue he created is displayed in Beeville. Rockport has a St. Francis statue done by Borglum and the Gladys Porter Zoo in Brownsville has a Borglum sculpture of the zoo's namesake clutching a baby gorilla.

And periodically he gets calls from people with mountains. There have been contacts from South America, Mexico and New York. But none, he said, went beyond the talking stage.

Mountain carving would be a good bit different today from the way his father did it. It would be quicker — and too expensive. "There are new techniques. We probably could do Mount Rushmore in three or four years now," he said.

Time running out on Texas' clout on Capitol Hill

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Old age, ill health and ambition are about to cost Texas the lion's share of her political roar on Capitol Hill.

Four of the state's oldest and most powerful representatives — George Mahon, W. R. "Bob" Poage, Omar Burleson and Olin "Tiger" Teague — are retiring at the end of the year, taking with them 152 years of legislative experience, plus two committee and three subcommittee chairmanships.

In addition, Rep. Bob Krueger is leaving the House after four years to run for the U.S. Senate seat currently held by John Tower. And Barbara Jordan, the eloquent, three-term congresswoman from Houston, is retiring for "personal reasons."

The four senior members, ranging in age from 68 to 78, say they have had enough.

As Mahon put it: "I've been leaving home early and returning late and the strains are constant."

When they go, the face of the state's congressional delegation will change dramatically.

Since the mid 1930s, when Franklin Delano Roosevelt occupied the White House and Texas John Nance Garner served as his vice president, the Lone Star state's delegation has been regarded as one of the nation's most powerful.

Texas attained its greatest political clout in the 1950s when Sam Rayburn served as Speaker of the House and Lyndon Johnson as Senate majority leader. Even after Rayburn's death in 1961, and Johnson's departure for the vice presidency that same year, the Texans they had tutored began their rise to prominence.

NOW, nearly a generation later, they too are leaving, victims of age and disenchantment with a changing Congress that has gradually eroded the importance of their seniority.

"It's almost unprecedented that this many would retire in the same year," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, who holds the highest-ranking House post of any Texan since Rayburn's days as speaker. "I don't think there is any question that we are losing a wealth of experience and influence by losing these established and distinguished members."

The congressional affluence to which Wright refers is represented by: Mahon, 77, of Lubbock, the House's senior member, who came to Congress 44 years ago and, in 1964, became chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee. He is also chairman of the Appropriations' defense subcommittee.

Poage, 78, of Waco, second only to Mahon in House seniority with 42 years of service and chairman of the Agriculture Committee until 1974 when he was ousted during a show of youthful insurgence in the Democratic Caucus. He currently chairs the livestock and grains subcommittee.

Teague, 68, of Fort Worth, elected to the House in 1946, and chairman of the Science and Technology Committee that oversees the space program. The most decorated veteran now serving in Congress, Teague had his left leg amputated last year — the result of World War II wounds — and is vacating his post because of ill health. A former chairman of both the Democratic Caucus and Veterans' Affairs Committee, he now chairs the veterans' education and training subcommittee.

Burleson, 72, of Anson, with 32 years in the House and a high-ranking member of the crucial Budget and Ways and Means committees.

"We still have as many committee chairmen as any other state," adds Wright referring to chairmen Jack Brooks of Galveston (Government Operations) and Ray Roberts of McKinney (Veterans' Affairs). "Texas is the only state with three members on the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee of the House (Wright, E. "Kika" de la Garza and Jordan) and we're the only state with three members on the Budget Committee (Wright, freshman Jim Mattox and Burleson)."

In addition to Wright, who is in line to become the next speaker when "Tip" O'Neill decides to step down, Texas is also represented in the upper echelon of national leadership by Democratic National Committee Chairman John White and presidential troubleshooter and confidant Robert Strauss.

But there is no Texas replacement for Mahon, who has gained widespread respect during his evenhanded reign over the Appropriations Committee.

In Wright's words, Mahon is, quite simply, the man who "provides the funds." Teague offers a practical example of Mahon's power: "If you were in government and had to award a contract and you've got two companies that are equal... and say, one company was in George Mahon's district. Now where would you put that contract? You'd put it where you needed to have a friend. There's no question Texas will lose a lot that way."

Mahon's departure will have "some effect," he modestly admits. "It will be a new ballgame in a way. Since 1964, I've been called upon by presidents and cabinet officers. They need the chairman of the Appropriations Committee. They count on him."

"They've got to have money... money talks."

But the decisions of where to spend Uncle Sam's money shouldn't hinge on strict regionalism, Mahon quickly adds. "Things aren't done purely on the basis of political chairmanships. The best interests of the nation have to be foremost in your mind."

Teague, known on Capitol Hill as a man who isn't shy about speaking his peace, cites another example of Texas' firm grip on federal spending.

During recent testimony before Teague's science and technology committee, a representative of the National Science Foundation "made some cute remark about letting Texas A&M research the sex life of the buffalo."

"As you know, we researched the sex life of the screw worm fly and helped stamp out screw worm," continued the Aggie, Class of '32. "Well, I happened to know that A&M, Rice and the University of Texas each had gotten more money (for research) that the entire state of Alabama. How did it get there? Why do you think the eastern (congressional) group formed a caucus and hired a man to lobby against money going to our part of the country? Not one factor caused it but many factors and the members of Congress did their part."

Teague also believes the decline of Texas seniority in the House will be difficult to replace.

"You don't start working in a bank today and become the head of it tomorrow," he began. "That's exactly the same way in Congress. There's no difference in our seniority up here and in the banks and businesses and schools back home."

"The youngest child doesn't run the family. You've got to be a grandpaw or at least a paw before you can run the place and that's all it is up here."

"Historically, the South has been strong in seniority because the voters take a young man and if he behaves himself, they keep sending them back."

A freshman Democrat, Rep. Jim Mattox of Dallas, agrees.

"One of the things that has made

Texas representation so effective is that they have sent people to Congress when they are young and kept them here. If you lose that, it's got to have an impact on your effectiveness.

"I think that seniority is not important now as it was six years ago, but the seniority system is still alive and well on the Hill."

Poage, who lost his committee chairmanship by a one-vote margin in the Democratic Caucus, said he feels the seniority system has fallen unfairly on rough times. "There's a whole new system up here that I don't like... and I don't have to put up with it."

"I thought about retiring a few years ago but a fellow in my district announced he was going to run against me and I couldn't retire under fire like that."

Burleson, retiring to keep a "silent agreement" with his wife, said the time required to pass "worthwhile legislation" often takes years to accomplish "and the men that have been here the longest and know the ropes are the ones that will get that kind of legislation passed."

"And the longer you stay up here, the more you realize that there never will be a right time to retire... you go from one piece of legislation that is important to you to another. I don't believe it will ever end."

Singer's first home saved by builder, fans

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — A builder and a handful of die-hard Janis Joplin fans are credited with saving the blues superstar's first home from demolition by city crews.

City officials said the house Miss Joplin lived in until she was about 4-years-old had deteriorated below city standards and was a health hazard.

The vacant, vandalized structure was only weeks away from being leveled when the city began receiving calls from concerned fans.

"I plan to put it back in the original condition without any changes," Riggs said. His 28-year-old daughter, Jane, will live in the house when it's restored.

And, said Riggs, she plans to collect Joplin mementoes to decorate the home where visitors may someday be allowed.

"Of course, we'll be willing to allow a shrine or some type of marker because this is part of the city's history. But we're not thinking along those lines yet," Riggs said, although he said traffic has started picking up around the house and many sightseers have stopped.

Imported vegetables tested

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state agriculture department is testing vegetables imported from Mexico to make certain they meet federal health standards, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said. The department is testing for pesticide residues, Brown said in a statement.

Representatives of the American Agriculture Movement had requested the tests, he added. "If the produce does not meet FDA standards, it can be traced back to Mexican points of origin and forbidden for import," he said.

Brown said more than 100 samples from several thousand acres of Mexican produce have been sent to laboratories in San Juan and Brenham, and of the 52 samples completed all have met FDA standards.

Judicial contests

It isn't always easy to generate a lot of enthusiasm concerning state judicial elections, but, hopefully, the situation is changing.

Texas voters, recalling an embarrassing situation which occurred in such balloting two years ago, seemingly are more interested this year in learning something about the candidates before going to the polls.

With this in mind, The Reporter-Telegram has reviewed the list of candidates for the various court positions involved and has made a sincere effort through various means to determine the candidates best qualified for the respective offices.

Four places on the higher courts are contested in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Franklin Spears, a San Antonio district judge, is The Reporter-Telegram's choice for Place 1 on the Texas Supreme Court. He seeks to fill the spot being vacated by Price Daniel Sr., who is retiring.

A district judge for 10 years, Spears also has served in both houses of the state legislature.

T. C. Chadick of Texarkana has this newspaper's endorsement to fill the unexpired term for Place 4 on the Supreme Court. He was appointed to the court last October, following many years of service on the Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals. We consider him well qualified for the assignment. Two places are contested for the State Court of Criminal Appeals.

Judge Jim Vollers has The Reporter-Telegram's endorsement for Place 2 on the appeals court.

He served for nine years, by appointment of the Court of Criminal Appeals, as state prosecuting attorney, before being named to a place on the court itself earlier this year. He also has had additional judicial experience and we feel he should be continued in office.

Seeking Place 3 on the court is Judge W. C. "Bill" Davis, who moved up to the Court of Criminal Appeals by appointment in January after having served more than a decade as district judge in Brazos County. He also is a former county judge and municipal court judge. Adding to his experience, Davis also served for a time as commissioner for the Court of Criminal Appeals.

The Reporter-Telegram believes that Judge Davis should be elected to the court's Place 3 seat.

Four names to remember, then, when voting are Spears and Chadick for the two Supreme Court seats, and Vollers and Davis for the Court of Criminal Appeals posts.

Hobby, on his record

Bill Hobby is seeking re-election as lieutenant governor of Texas, and Democrats of the Lone Star State should give him the nomination in the May 6 primary.

He has three opponents, but they mainly are opponents in name only. They have done very little campaigning.

Hobby has established a solid record of achievement during his six years as lieutenant governor.

As lieutenant governor, he is the presiding officer of the Texas Senate, and in this he has done a most credible job. He also has displayed excellent leadership in the handling of legislative programs in the Senate. The Reporter-Telegram endorses Bill Hobby for the nomination he seeks, basing its action on his record in office.

'Better education in all areas' is the real need

WASHINGTON — The Tuition Tax Credit Act, designed to provide financial relief to parents burdened with heavy educational costs, will likely be debated in the Senate soon, and it has a good chance of passing.

Such an eventuality will create a ruckus, for the notion of giving parents this break and thus helping nonpublic schools has already aroused reactions of bigotry, Pecksniffery and shortsightedness approaching blindness.

The bill, authored by Sens. Bob Packwood (R-Ore.) and Daniel Patrick Moynihan (D-N.Y.), addresses itself not only to middle-class plight but also to financially strapped nonpublic schools. In the past decade, the overwhelming bulk of federal money has gone to public institutions, and the lopsided character of this flow has caused political stirrings.

People are disappointed in recent results from public education and are beginning to realize that: (1) The best education offers diversity and choice. (2) It is not good for a monopoly to develop in any area of human endeavor, including education. (3) The American educational system must provide a place for viable nonpublic schools.

The Packwood-Moynihan bill would allow a family to subtract up to $500 per child in tuition expenses from its federal income tax bill. If the family owed less than $500 it would be refunded the balance of the tax credit.

This program would entail no new spending, but would cut the federal tax take by $4.5 billion. There's no reason why the Carter Administration couldn't ask for several billion less in its request for federal aid-to-education if it is pushing for a better budget balance. Anyway, the tuition tax credit is such a good idea that it has become dangerous. The monopolists in public education are screaming like stuck pigs over Packwood-Moynihan.

The most hysterical and absurd outcry came from Albert Schanker, the union chieftain who provided those lovely teacher strikes in New York City. "It will be the beginning of the end for American public education," Schanker declared of the Packwood-Moynihan bill.

The AFL-CIO, nearly half of whose members are Catholics, has also come out strongly against the bill because it doesn't want to see the jobs of union teachers threatened. Ditto for the National Education Assn.'s politburo.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano is against it because he can't stand the heat from educational bureaucrats at HEW who have been doing things the same old way for so long that they wouldn't recognize fresh air if they whiffed it.

Sen. Teddy Kennedy (D-Mass.) is against it because he automatically thinks the only way to solve a problem is through more spending, and Packwood-Moynihan involves no new spending.

Editorialists who worship on the altar of secularism oppose it because it goes against their narrow faith. The American Jewish Congress raises the question of constitutionality.

And what's this, President Jimmy Carter opposes it and threatens to veto it? Is this the same Jimmy Carter who, as presidential candidate, wrote the president of Catholic Education Administrators:

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

'Equal Justice Under Law'

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — Carved on the pristine marble front of the Supreme Court building are these noble words: "Equal Justice Under Law." Unfortunately, this idealistic inscription is often ignored by the black-robed men and women who mete out justice in the United States.

They seem more enthusiastic about enforcing the laws against malefaction than malefeasance. For they apply different standards to the jobless who commit crimes in the streets and the affluent businessmen who commit crimes in executives' suites.

The high school dropout who holds up a filling station is sent off for a lengthy prison stretch. But the business leader who is caught embezzling funds from his stockholders often gets off with a suspended sentence and a fine.

This rich man, poor man discrimination is breeding cynicism in the land and making a mockery of our legal system. We have obtained a congressional report, not yet released to the public, which describes the double standard of justice. It should prick the consciences of those who condemn street crime but condone white-collar crime, honoring law and order more in the preaching than in the practice.

The report, "The Federal Coverage of White Collar Crime," was prepared for a House subcommittee headed by Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich. Congressional investigators charge there is "an ongoing, massive cover-up of white-collar crime, which is cleverly built into the design of the federal enforcement model and the policies and postures of the Justice Department and federal regulatory agencies."

Citing stark statistics, the report declares bluntly: "If you are black and poor and unemployed and get convicted of robbery, you have a 90 percent likelihood of being imprisoned and the average length of imprisonment is 74 to 124 months."

In contrast, "white collar embezzlers who live in the suburbs and steal millions instead of hundreds or thousands have only a 20 percent likelihood of being imprisoned and the average sentence is only 20 months."

Street crime in America, of course, is fearsome. Yet small-time, often desperate hoodlums steal only a pittance, compared to the loot that dishonest businessmen and corporate executives plunder each year.

It is estimated that bribery, consumer fraud, embezzlement, securities thefts and other punishable white-collar crimes cost the public $44 billion annually. If non-felonious ripoffs from price fixing were included, according to a Senate estimate, the total would run to $200 billion a year. This is an annual boodle that would astonish old-time business buccaners such as Jay Gould and Jim Fisk.

Conyers' investigators found a disturbing pattern of indifference and ineffectiveness exists among federal law enforcement agencies when it comes to dealing with upperclass crime. They found a great deal of overlap and needless duplication of effort and, at the same time, inadequate funding and administrative ineptitude.

For instance, the report contends that the criminal fraud section of the Justice Department currently has less than 50 attorneys although "now sitting on the desk of the head of this section are scores of huge bribery cases forwarded ... by the Securities and Exchange Commission."

The investigators found that the FBI has about 800 accountant-trained investigators assigned to its white-collar crime force but states: "Some officials at the Justice Department who are supposed to have access to all these investigators complain that FBI assistance in the white-collar crime area is inadequate."

We reported last July that Internal Revenue agents were no longer allowed to assist the Justice Department on white-collar deceptions, even though they are acknowledged as the only ones expert enough to analyze the complex financial transactions and bookkeeping often involved in business crimes. The House memo says this has "all but crippled the U.S. Attorney and Justice Department white-collar crime enforcement efforts."

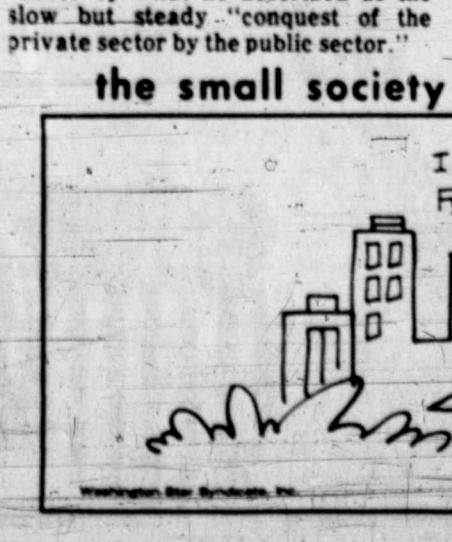

It also cites "bitter enmity" between the Securities and Exchange Commission's enforcement division and the Justice Department's criminal division. "Both are grossly underfunded and understaffed," the House investigators report.

Another astonishing finding by the House investigators was that in 1977 "resources were shifted away from the top three priority law enforcement areas of the FBI — foreign counter-intelligence, white-collar crime and organized crime — into domestic security."

A supplemental report from the Library of Congress commented: "It has also been argued that some of this failure (of effective white-collar crime enforcement) is due to political pressures on the executive branch from powerful and influential business leaders."

Despite the proclamation over the Supreme Court facade, what comes to mind is the comment of a French satirist on equality under the Bourbon monarchy: "Both the king and the poorest beggar of Paris is equally entitled to sleep on the coldest winter night under the bridges of the Seine."

CHARLEY REESE SAYS: 'Holocaust' was not a uniquely German event

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — If there is any benefit to be gained from remembering the Holocaust, it is to understand that it was engineered, not by primitive barbarians, but by a Western, modern, Christian and highly civilized nation.

The gravest mistake anyone could make in remembering the slaughter of six million Jews and millions of others by Nazi Germany would be to think it was a uniquely German event.

That is not to say the Germans do not bear responsibility for that specific mass murder. They do — those were present at the time. The point to remember is that what the Germans of that day did had nothing especially to do with the fact that they were Germans.

Oh, they applied characteristic German energy, efficiency and organization to murder just as they apply it to building cars, but from a moral standpoint, it is the decision to murder, not how efficiently you do it, that must concern us.

And that decision had nothing to do with the fact that the people who made it were Germans.

The Holocaust, as indeed all events in human history, took place first in minds before it materialized into events. If you want to understand events, you must analyze the intellectual processes that create them. Those processes are as prevalent today as they were in Nazi Germany and are to be found in every nation, including ours. They are: prejudice, rationalization, repression and moral cowardice.

In order to bring off the Holocaust, anti-Semitism was necessary. To destroy a human being, you always begin by destroying his humanity in the mind of the person who will be pulling the trigger.

That's what anti-Semitism accomplished. That, in fact, is what all prejudices accomplish by creating a mythology that casts the objects of the prejudice into a non-human category. It is much easier to persuade people to kill non-humans than it is to persuade them to kill other people. It is easier to kill a "fetus" than it is a baby.

Prejudice makes rationalizing easier. Rationalizing is the mental process of justifying, instead of thinking. It involves repression which is shutting out of your consciousness facts which you know to be true. More often than not, moral cowardice is the motivation for the rationalizing.

The people in the South who lynched blacks were, like the Nazis, fundamentally bourgeois family people and Christians (nominally if not in practice). Only by accepting the mythology that the Negro was not human could they justify their uncharacteristically cruel acts.

It should be remembered, too, that anti-Semitism was a product of intellectuals, not peasants, and that it was the educated, wealthy people who chose to institutionalize it with laws, editorials, books, and so forth.

In the U.S. today, anti-Semitism is still largely an upper-class phenomena. It is the plush private clubs which exclude Jews, not the neighborhood bars, and it is the very large corporations where Jews are rarely found in executive positions (less than one-half of one percent according to Vance Packard).

What the Holocaust amounted to was the cold-blooded decision on the part of German industrial barons, lawyers, newspapermen, writers, and the people to sacrifice Jews to achieve national goals. To make that decision palatable, they embraced anti-Semitism.

Do you think there will never be another Holocaust? A million and a half Cambodians already are dead. Millions of Chinese and millions of others have been systematically exterminated by Communist governments with which, as they did with the Nazis, Western nations are trading and lending money to.

Watch how many people start saying that the U.S. cannot afford to sacrifice its national interests (Arab oil) to save Israel. The Carter administration already is trying to make that decision palatable by painting the Israeli government as an intransigent, expansionist hindrance to peace which is as big a lie as any Goebbels ever uttered.

The true horror of the Holocaust is that it was done by people just like us.

Mark Russell says

It's always sad when a marriage doesn't work even though Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters will remain "good friends."

"It's too bad about Harry and Barbara," said the kindly old Howard K. Smith. "In my day a marriage meant something."

There are always two sides to a story when a couple breaks up. Barbara not putting the cap back on the toothpaste, Harry eating his peas with a knife — little things that grow into big things.

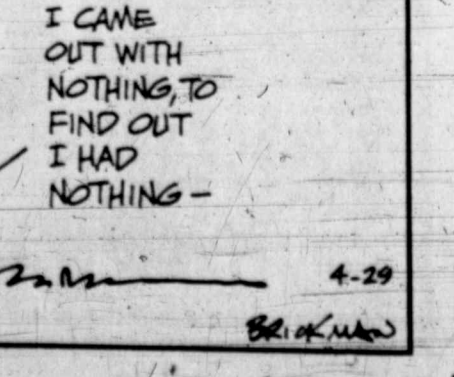

The only remaining detail is who gets custody of Sam Donaldson.

We still live in medieval times and may this be history's last recorded marriage arranged by the parents.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

GOP hopeful Jim Baker seems to have good chance in state race

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — While May 6 will mark the end of the campaign trail for some candidates, that primary date is, to borrow Churchill's phrase, merely the end of the beginning for others.

There is, of course, the prospect of a run-off in the Democratic gubernatorial race, where, as supporters in the camps of the two most prominent contenders agree, voter turn-out likely will be crucial.

But come November, there will still be several statewide races to be concluded from a partisan standpoint: the governor's race, the U.S. Senate race and the attorney general's race.

In those latter two cases, it's already known who the Republican candidate will be.

John Tower undoubtedly falls into the category of a man "who needs no introduction."

Jim Baker, on the other hand, may not be readily identifiable to many voters.

Baker, however, does have plans to change that.

Normally, a GOP candidate for attorney general would not fall into a "preferred risk" category as far as his chances of success go, and would produce about as much excitement among the populace as scrubbing out a bathtub.

But Baker already is off and running, and is attracting some attention.

Does he have a chance? The answer appears to be "yes."

For one thing, there's no incumbent, and for another, Baker seems to be able to raise the money he'll need — with contributions so far nearing the $300,000 mark.

Baker has been traveling around the state since he formally announced his candidacy Jan. 31, to gain exposure and to help inspire his campaign workers.

"Independence" is one of the key words Baker has stressed in his effort, plus his legal experience as a "non-political attorney."

Baker's not completely "non-political," by any means, having chaired the Gerald Ford presidential campaign. Ford is now returning the favor, by putting in an appearance or two for Baker's fundraising.

One somewhat curious fact is worth noting regarding Baker's law practice: the firm of Andrews, Kurth, Campbell & Jones was the firm that represented the Howard Hughes family for years, and which now represents the court-appointed administrators for most of Hughes' estate.

If elected attorney general, Baker would inherit the state's case on the Hughes' will from John Hill. Baker's Houston campaign headquarters says the campaign thus far has been going well, and has been conducted as if Baker did indeed have a primary opponent.

Campaign officials agree the pace will be stepped up a bit after it's clear which of the Democratic hopefuls will be Baker's opposition in November.

They didn't say, but other GOP sources have said, that Baker's campaign strategy likely will differ significantly depending on whether it's Mark White or Price Daniel Jr. that Baker faces.

While Daniel would continue to have the advantage of greater name identification, as he has throughout the primary, Baker might have better luck against Daniel, who could be more easily tagged as a "liberal" than White.

Daniel's support of the proposed constitution in 1974 could be a major handle for Baker, since that issue has been painted with the colors of "big government" and "right to work."

For someone who's perceived as a "liberal," Daniel has found support from a large number of elements normally classified as being on the conservative side of the ledger, and organized labor hasn't shown any great enthusiasm for him — with the Committee on Political Education endorsing Mark White.

White was little known statewide going into the primary campaign — which has been a test of his ability to raise money (which he has) and to get name identification.

If White wins, the race between him and Baker likely would come down to who can raise the most funds, and get the greater identification.

In either case, Baker seems to have a good chance — even, or especially, for a Republican.

Love means everything

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A far-out militant type youth consulted me saying he didn't feel well. "Why see me? I'm no doctor? A physician is the man you want to see."

"I've already seen a doctor and was referred to you. A stupid guy he is, too, for he told me I'm sick because of my thoughts and that I had better do something about it."

"Smart doctor," I replied.

We went into the boy's thinking in depth and found the source that was really poisoning him. He was full of hate and I mean packed full of hate and nothing else. He hated the establishment, the government, his parents, everybody including himself.

"Only a good, prolonged dose of love can cure you," I told him. We tried to teach him how to empty out hate and substitute love and good will. He was a tough case and it wasn't easy for him to change his thoughts and attitudes, but ultimately he came through.

Love is a word that has been much abused and has really taken a beating. It is even used as an excuse for the most permissive acts possible. Some groups distort so-called "love" of their fellow man as an excuse for everything from arson to riots.

But the fact is that love is a first in everything. Without love I am nothing, you are nothing, the world is nothing. Love is basic.

As a matter of fact, the individual can wither and die unless he has love, both for himself and for other people. One of the greatest books on this subject was by the famed psychiatrist, the late Smiley Blanton, with whom I founded the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry.

In his memorable book, "Love or Perish," Blanton says, "To say that one will perish without love does not mean that everyone without adequate love dies. Many do, for without love the will to live is often impaired to such an extent that a person's resistance is critically lowered and death follows."

"But most of the time, lack of love makes people depressed, anxious and without zest for life. They remain lonely and unhappy, without friends or work they care for. Their life is a barren treadmill, stripped of all creative action and joy."

To live creatively it is imperative to love. In some youth movements today, in spite of the bizarre qualities that offend some people, there seems to be a sort of gentle religious emphasis to the extent that they share, touch, reach out — they have communication. The kind of love we are speaking about is a deep feeling for people. It is the kind of goodwill that helps you accept your fellow men, all of them, whatever their condition in life or whoever they are, and feel for them as part of yourself. Love is the expression of that feeling by acting, by reaching out to your neighbors.

To love others the first person you've got to love is yourself. If you don't love yourself you can't love anyone else.

This self-love begins with true knowledge and respect for your own abilities, your capabilities and potentials. And, the added knowledge that you are putting those attributes to work to their fullest extent. If you love yourself and respect yourself, then and only then can you achieve the ability to see and respect your fellow man as a brother, and that is the basic meaning of love.

Today we are constantly being barged with gloomy stories about the population crisis. We are being warned that this world, not too many years hence, will be unable to support all the people that inhabit it.

Yet these are all the neighbors we are expected to love as ourselves. And that we must do, for if it is true that the individual actually will wither and die without love, a nation suffering shattered love could deteriorate also.

But love can transform an entire group, perhaps even a nation. The action of three high school students if magnified could be the answer. In a large city high school they compacted to carry on a quiet war of love against a teacher who was harsh and unfair. Instead of emotionally reacting to her, which would have been natural, they quietly began loving her and secretly prayed for her in the classroom.

In time she actually became a different person and the entire school felt the impact. Maybe our country would also if we all got together in a quiet love demonstration.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Clements for Texas

To The Editor: Thank goodness, a good Republican, Bill Clements, is willing and able to spend the necessary funds to be elected as governor of Texas.

Thank goodness, Bill Clements agrees with columnist Reese of Florida — the teachers should have an adequate pay scale. Mr. Clements agrees the teachers are responsible for what is taught in the classroom. Teachers should upgrade the requirements to be a qualified teacher in Texas.

Bill Clements said no to those who favored giving away the canal. He went to Washington and encouraged our senators to vote no.

Bill Clements is against the gun control laws. Bill Clements believes there is a middle ground between the oil industry and the environmentalist. Over dictation on both sides works against the people of Texas.

Bill Clements is a dynamic man who will lead Texas with Texan pride. He is a leader in drilling for oil and gas, who recognizes the need for deregulation. He will enlist the support of other oil and gas producing states for this purpose.

Each person should run for office just once to realize the dollars needed for even a school trustee's campaign. Think of the people who benefit from political campaigns — printers, hotels, airlines, motels, radio, TV, clerks, secretaries, office building owners, advertising media of every kind.

Sure it takes funds to reach the people of this great state; this successful business man is not buying votes. — Republicans this year have a candidate for governor, Bill Clements, who is able and has the guts to work full time for Texas.

No health cards

To The Editor: I heard what I thought was a horrible rumor last week, which was confirmed Monday, April 24, with the Health Department of the City of Midland, Texas.

Did you know that health cards are no longer a requirement for employees in any Midland restaurant? Even though the State of Texas has deserted us, it would seem that a provision for health cards would be in the City of Midland ordinances for your protection and mine! Mrs. J.H. Fine Star Route A, Box 53 Midland

EDITOR'S NOTE: According to Jewel T. Smith, chief sanitarian (health unit) of the Health Department for the City of Midland, the examination for "food handlers" cards "consisted of a skin test for tuberculosis and a blood test for syphilis. Pre-employment and periodic medical examinations have been discontinued because such examinations do not provide protection against illness which might be transmitted by food. Examinations and tests for tuberculosis or venereal disease should not be regarded as a part of a food-protection program, but rather as a part of the community's tuberculosis or venereal disease control program."

Reagan criticized

To The Editor: Attached is a letter I wrote to Governor Reagan on April 27 which I feel is of interest to your readers.

Dear Governor Reagan: I have never written a politician commenting on my personal feelings as to his or her actions. However, your recent inappropriate endorsement of Jim Reese in the Republican Primary election and your approval of certain two-year-old advertising material needs comment.

You have skillfully championed the cause of conservative government for many years. Those espousing a philosophically conservative approach to government should be thankful for your abilities and national presence. Republican strength in Texas is rare indeed, but, as you know, with your help and others like you, we have been gaining ground, especially in the 19th Congressional District.

We currently have a tight race among three similarly conservative candidates. Your interjection before the local Republicans have made their choice was ill-advised, poorly timed, and inappropriate. It is a blessing to have a contested primary for a liberal. This is not a conservative vs. liberal race but rather a choosing among fellow conservative Republicans. We need to encourage this type of conservative competition to build strength in the local Texas Republican party. Is this not exactly what you have been working for throughout the country? If so, why ruin your own efforts and alienate two of our groups of conservatives.

Your endorsement is given and past. However, I would encourage you to think again and dissuade Mr. Reese from using two-year-old advertising (originally produced during an uncontested election) featuring you, not Candidate Reese. The 19th District and Midland, Texas, especially has many friends of yours and conservative Republican government. You have done us all a great disservice. Please think again.

Kenn S. George GOP Executive Committee Member Precinct Chairman Midland

Is justice equal?

To The Editor: For sometime I have had a growing concern for the difference in the care given to securing rights of those accused of major crimes and rights of victims of such acts with no seeming great concern for the finality of consequences to the victim or his survivors.

Never has this been so apparent as in the case of the brutal, senseless, inhumane behavior of officers of the law to a mentally disturbed person — already driven berserk from lack of proper attention — Larry Lozano — and such behavior causing his death.

Unbelief, horror and a sense of being shamed as a human being best describe how I feel about this sad thing. But beyond this, that no real effort for justice has been sought. One wonders why the so valuable time and knowledge of the able pathologists was used. So little attention was paid to their explicit testimony.

This incident has been called a "race thing." But the real question is this: Do we have laws to punish the act of unlawful taking of another's life? Yes. Do these laws apply to all alike, or are there exemptions and these exemptions to be upheld and excused by those whose sworn duty it is to prosecute those who commit such acts?

Our greatest need is to exercise our right to vote. Vote for laws to protect our rights and for men in public office who respect our rights and their also.

Mrs. O.J. Warner 4616 Princeton Ave.

All votes important

To The Editor: The May 6th Republican primary election is a unique opportunity for Midlanders to help nominate one of our own to a national office of great importance.

By now everyone must know that George Bush seeks the Republican nomination for the United States Congress from this district. It is also well known that George was raised in Midland and began and has continued his business career here. He is one of our own.

What is not well known is the great significance each and every vote will have in the coming Republican primary. In the last non-presidential election year, only 3,928 votes were cast in the Republican primary. Of those 3,928 votes, 1,476 came from Midland County, 1,768 from Lubbock County and 190 from Ector County.

These numbers show clearly how critical each and every vote will be. These numbers also show clearly that a large turnout of Midland voters for George Bush in the Republican primary can insure the nomination of one of our own.

Mrs. L.E. Sawyer 1405 Community Lane

Primary vote vital

To The Editor: May 6th, Saturday, Texas holds its primary election. The general election may seem a long way off, but the real political decisions are made on primary day. Once the nominees are selected, you may find yourself with a choice between two candidates you had no voice in selecting. So vote May 6th.

Do vote in the Republican primary, because you have an outstanding candidate in the 19th Congressional District race — the capable, enthusiastic and mature Joe Hickox.

Joe calls himself the workingman's conservative candidate. His campaign has not been extravagant. The emphasis, rather, has been on his sincere dedicated interest in serving his country.

The House needs a man of Joe's caliber to join forces with such distinguished lawmakers as Phillip Crane, John Ashbrook and the like who are helping to stem the tide in Washington. These men need Joe Kickox in the House of Representatives and so does the 19th District.

Elinore Chase 1303 W. Kansas

Some are aware

To The Editor: Concerning the letter from Mrs. Patricia D. Conway in the paper of April 16, yes, there are many of us who do indeed know who the bad guys are. There are many good books available with documented facts about the members and their insidious plan for the American people. Three good references are, "None Dare Call it Treason," "None Dare Call it Conspiracy," and the best of all is "The Politician."

I am talking about the Council on Foreign Relations, commonly referred to as the CFR. If the American people don't wake up and inform themselves, this nation could make Nazi Germany look like a picnic in the woods, considering the difference of some 200 or so million souls. In closing, I will tell you this, Mrs. Conway is not one of the uninformed Americans I'm concerned about.

Wayne Stump 4207 Pasadena St.

Reese best choice

To The Editor: In refute to The Midland Reporter-Telegram's endorsement of George Bush, I would like to submit the following letter to the editor.

Jim Reese has lived and earned a living in Lubbock, Midland and Odessa for most of his life. His opponents have lived in the 19th Congressional District for a combined total of seven years of their adult life.

Most of us would agree that becoming a West Texan comes from living in West Texas and being a part of West Texas; not from moving into the area and talking like a West Texan.

Jim Reese is a West Texan and thinks like a West Texan. This is evident by the fact that in 1976, Jim publicly endorsed Ronald Reagan for president, who was the overwhelming favorite in West Texas. George Bush, after moving to Midland, served as a coordinator for Gerald Ford. And Joe Hickox publicly supported neither. This is why Jim has won the endorsement of Ronald Reagan in the Republican primary Saturday. It is also the reason Jim was endorsed in 1976 by Reagan, when he lost a very close race to George Mahon, a 44-year incumbent.

Jim Reese is running for Congress

Conspiracy exists

To The Editor: Charley Reese, in his article of April 16, refuses to acknowledge a conspiracy in the governmental policies of the past forty years, which has brought the United States to a state of moral degeneration and financial insolvency. He hinges his refusal upon the fact that the manipulators of the political process are not violating a law.

I submit a conspiracy exists when "there is an agreement between two or more persons to do an evil act in concert." When a group works toward subjugating the government of the United States to that of a world government, it seems evil.

One doesn't need to be a Bircher to recognize the fact that the Rockefeller creatures, the Council of Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission, are working toward world government. The CFR was founded by the Rockefeller's in the late 1940s, and David Rockefeller founded the Trilateral Commission in 1972. Some of the members of the Trilateral Commission are Jimmy Carter, Cyrus Vance, Paul Warnke, Henry Kissinger and George Bush (the one that was a congressman at the time).

Liberals refer to persons who favor an independent United States as "isolationists." I noted George Bush (the jogger who wants to be a congressman) stated recently on a TV program that he was not an isolationist. With his big money contacts, I suspect this candidate was using a liberal codeword to express his support of world government.

Conspiracy or not, the Council of Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission are effectively subjugating the government of these United States to that of a new world order. This month, one step in this organization's plans was successfully accomplished. The United States was divested of its Canal of Panama.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A real crisis

To The Editor: This is an appeal to the citizens of Midland. When they were told industry would look at the recreation facilities before considering moving here we rallied and passed a bond to improve the public golf course. Now Midland faces a greater crisis. What industry will move into a city without adequate transportation? Our local cab company closed their doors without warning to our mayor, city council or citizens. Those of us that used their services were stranded and still are. The drivers of United are doing their very best, but they are not radio equipped, plus they have daily passengers that they must serve first before all else, and rightfully so.

I have spoken personally by telephone with Mayor Angelo. He does need our help and our ideas. I did tell him that I would write a letter to the citizens via "Letters to the Editor" appealing to the citizens of Midland not to sit back and wait for someone else to come up with ideas. Please sit down now, write or call Mayor Angelo or a member of our city council, give them your idea. You never know, it just might work.

As many letters stated before the bond issue, facilities for entertainment was one item any business wishing to move to Midland would look at. Without such items they would look elsewhere. Entertainment facilities would be much further down on the list than adequate transportation. Plus the fact how are visitors (businessmen, salesmen, future homeowners and taxpayers) landing at Air Terminal going to arrive in downtown Midland, via Odessa taxis? That takes money away from this city.

I myself have in writing given my own idea to Mayor Angelo for his consideration. Please give him yours. One of us in this city will have an idea that will work. We can not expect our mayor and council to carry the entire load of our city without help.

Sylvia O. Munoz 1017 Tarleton St.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Hopefully, MIDTRAN, which was incorporated this past week after approval by the City Council, will provide improved transportation services to many Midlanders.

What Texans?

To The Editor: We read your headline in last Saturday's paper "Texans 'Quite Happy' With Energy Plan," and the first thought was, what Texans? The second thought was, who wrote that idiot headline?

Has anyone thought to check out Jim Wright's reasons for assuming any Texans will like the Carter plan, and why? We suspect they may be the same ones Charley Wilson and Bob Eckhardt called in for help in writing the Dingell bill, but not West Texans. And, the headline is plumb misleading.

Why not run a poll of oil people in the Permian Basin to see how many of them like the so-called compromise? In talking with some 100 FBPA members so far, I've found none who buy Jim Wright's statement, or his actions.

In fact, several have said that they are only sorry those who are supporting either Dingell, Jackson or Carter, on energy, are not in our district, so they could vote them out of office. And, having gotten the details of the latest natural gas price control bill, I can only agree 100 percent.

Holism challenges modern medicine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A diverse band of crusaders from California is descending on the nation, flying the banner of holistic health and dedicated to treating the mind and spirit as well as the diseased body.

Their weapons against sickness are as new as biofeedback and as old as herb potions — as prosaic as massage and as occult as spiritual healing.

But there are reservations about the holistic movement. Critics point to its highly commercialized aspects and to the fact that the state has no guidelines for certification, no licensing for practitioners of holistic health, no medical degree needed although they purport to treat ill people.

The holistic approach is a rebellion from what some consider the "hard" methods — surgery, powerful drugs, costly therapy. Holists advocate a softer approach. They preach individual salvation.

In his book "Mind as Healer, Mind as Slayer," psychologist Kenneth Pelletier says of current health care: "People have been killing themselves by failing to alter self-destructive habits." A patient's whole life is to be considered, some holists preach. Thus, at a typical comprehensive holistic health center, a patient — called a participant or partner — might consult a psychologist, diet adviser, social worker, physical therapist — and a doctor.

Treatment might be biofeedback, self-hypnosis, acupuncture, massage, nutritional counseling or body movement sessions.

So far, holism doesn't have the approval of health care insurers or government insurance programs, but it's beginning to find support in important places.

Dr. James Gordon, a psychiatrist with the National Institute of Mental Health, says, "We're at a crisis point in our medical care. So many people have chronic diseases, and treatment is so expensive. We've reached the stage where we've dealt with the most obvious diseases but have come up against those that seem to be resisting."

"People are looking elsewhere and they're getting relief." But are they?

While holists cite examples of cancer cases cured by visualization, in which the patient imagines his body beating away the disease, or an illness overcome by diet, not many of the techniques have satisfied scientists.

Some of the best results on the holistic front are reported in the treatment of chronic pain. David Bresler, head of the holistically oriented Pain Control Unit at UCLA, says patients who have failed to get relief from back pain with conventional treatment "get longer lasting, more effective relief with an average of 10 or 11 acupuncture treatments, enrollment in a self-control class where they learn self-hypnosis, guided imagery, relaxation or nutritional therapy."

He says this costs $600 compared with $8,000 to $10,000 patients might have, or did, spend in a year on hospitalization, traction, drugs or surgery.

Those crusaders with a sense of the realities of the health care system are calling for studies to verify holistic methods, mindful that unless insurance companies and the government back the movement it will remain a luxury for the affluent. Seminars or workshops in rustic retreats costing several hundred dollars are frequently advertised. One flyer advertised the "Voyage of a Lifetime" — a 14-day cruise to Greece, Egypt and Israel; an "adventure in psycho-anthropology and consciousness" to "experience new dimensions of knowledge and self-development while visiting the great cultural and spiritual energy centers of the world." Price not listed.

Dr. Marc Lappe of the California State Health Department, though an advocate of holistic treatment, testified at a recent hearing that "holistic health today, I believe, is mostly designed to aid the affluent few who already enjoy good health than to provide remedial treatment for those afflicted by stress-related illnesses" — poor people who may be more prone to hypertension, heart disease and cancer because of their environment.

How big the movement is hard to gauge. Leslie Kasloff, author of an upcoming directory of holistic services, estimates there are 100 to 500 centers and clinics specializing in holistic health and 5,000 to 10,000 practitioners who do at least some holistic work. California, land of new movements and preoccupation with health, leads the way, and the San Francisco area has the densest accumulation of holistic centers.

Lappe notes that holistic medicine is a "stepchild of the ecology movement," attracting a homogeneous group of practitioners. "Some have traditional medical degrees, some are osteopaths, some are chiropractors. They share a homeopathic approach to medicine." The American Medical Association has taken no official position on holism, although Dr. George Mixter, who answers public inquiries for the AMA, said: "It's like motherhood — we're for it, but what are you going to do about it?"

State board investigates insurance sales methods

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Insurance Board said Friday it is investigating reports that agents are "apparently using sharp, overly aggressive and possibly fraudulent sales techniques" in selling life, accident and health insurance to elderly persons.

Also, the board said in a statement, there have been reports of the forgery of signatures of elderly and disabled persons on insurance applications and the collection of one-year premiums for which the persons allegedly insured never applied. "These practices must be stopped," the board said.

The board said that where elderly and physically handicapped persons "have been taken advantage of," the insurer, as well as the agent, "must be held responsible."

"If the situations now under investigation or future similar matters that are brought to the attention of the State Board of Insurance are found to support a decision that any of the above practices have been followed, both insurer and agent will be subjected to firm disciplinary action," the board said.

Additionally, full restitution will be required, it said.

Gas deregulation predominant issue in Senate campaign

By LINDA HILL

Candidates' positions on natural gas deregulation have played an important part in the U.S. Senate campaign this spring, particularly in the Permian Basin.

With less than a week to go before Saturday's primary, the three major primary contenders are divided on their response to the House-Senate conference committee gas pricing compromise being discussed now in Washington, D.C.

U.S. Sen. John Tower, unopposed in his bid for the Republican nomination, has said he is against the plan because it would not allow for complete deregulation until 1985. A ceiling, which would rise each year would be in effect until then.

Tower said the compromise proposal also would extend regulation and allocation authority to intrastate gas, and that is "totally unacceptable."

Tower said he plans to vote against the proposal "if that's what it contains."

Democratic candidate U.S. Rep. Bob Kruger's office indicated the congressman still is studying the proposal to determine what it contains in three areas: limits on severance (export out of state) taxes, federal allocation authority and definition of new gas.

Former State Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie, the other Democratic candidate, said he supports the compromise plan.

"It's not a perfect bill by any means, but I think the state can live with it. I do support what I've heard of the compromise so far. The price set is about what gas is selling for in Texas," Christie said.

Tower and Kruger both support immediate deregulation of new natural gas prices, while Christie is in favor of phased-in deregulation.

Christie said deregulation is "the ultimate goal of all of us," but he believes gas users need time to adjust gradually.

He also has said he would support measures to help independent producers.

He said he would have supported a bill introduced by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen which would have called for deregulation over a two-year period.

Kruger has been strongly identified with the natural gas issue, having introduced legislation calling for immediate deregulation on of new natural gas.

He has said, however, that phased deregulation is "a reasonable concept."

Since Tower does not have an opponent in the Republican primary, he said, he has not been spending much time at partisan political functions.

The two Democratic contenders, however, are slugging it out in an active, and at times heated, campaign.

Kruger spends much of his time on the campaign stump talking about Tower. He is critical of what he calls Tower's lack of leadership in such areas as natural gas deregulation.

Tower, a 17-year Senate veteran, counters by pointing to his position as chairman of the Republican Policy Committee and ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee and the Financial Institutions Sub-Committee.

Christie says he will start talking about Tower after the primary. In the interim, he claims that Krueger and Tower are very much alike. "The only difference between Krueger and Tower is that Krueger is a foot taller," is one of Christie's favorite campaign lines.

The two Democrats disagree on how the primary campaign is going.

In Midland last week, Krueger said it would take "a miracle" for Christie to win the primary, "and I don't believe miracles happen to people who run nasty campaigns."

The Christie forces, however, maintain that the race is a tossup, in spite of Krueger's much better-financed campaign.

Christie said as many as half the voters still are undecided, and as many as 30 percent still may be undecided on election day.

In his campaign, Christie has attacked Krueger as a tool of "Big Oil," and has taken his campaign to neighborhood gas stations in 20 cities to call attention to what he says is domination of life in Texas by major oil companies.

Krueger hammers home his belief that a strong voice for energy producers is important to Texas, and pledges to take a "leadership role" in the fight to free producers of the restraints of federal regulation.

Although he faces no primary opposition, Tower must deal with the independent candidacy of Henry Grover, former Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Grover has filed notice of his intention to collect signatures to get his name on the November ballot without a party designation.

Tower has said he expects Grover's candidacy to have a "minimal effect" and to draw as many Democratic as Republican votes.

Both Krueger and Tower bring academic backgrounds to their campaigns.

Krueger, 44, holds a doctorate in Elizabethan literature from Oxford and was dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Duke University. He returned to Texas to run his family's business in New Braunfels and was elected to Congress in 1974.

Tower, 52, is a former professor of government at Midwestern University in Wichita Falls. He first was elected to the Senate in 1961, to fill the Senate seat vacated by Lyndon B. Johnson.

Christie, 44, served four years as chairman of the State Insurance Board, after having been state senator from El Paso six years.

Singlaub denies regrets 'for having spoken truth'

ATLANTA (P) — Maj. Gen. John Singlaub, who bowed to pressure and retired after his second outspoken criticism of President Carter's defense policies, says he has "no regrets for having spoken the truth as I perceived it."

Singlaub's retirement was announced Friday after he met with top Army officials in Washington to discuss remarks he made to ROTC cadets at the Georgia Institute of Technology. In his speech, Singlaub assailed Carter's decision to shelve the neutron bomb and criticized the Senate-passed Panama Canal treaties.

It was the second such incident involving the 56-year-old Singlaub, who escaped with only a transfer last year after criticizing Carter's decision to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea, where Singlaub was then chief of staff.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Rex Granum said President Carter had "been advised of the action" against Singlaub "rather than initiating it."

Former President Gerald Ford, on a political fund-raising visit to Newark, N.J., said he did not think Singlaub should have retired.

"I feel it's extremely important for senior military officers to speak their own mind, to speak as their conscience tells them," he said.

Singlaub was sent here from Korea to become chief of staff of the Army Forces Command at Atlanta's Fort McPherson.

Singlaub said in a statement Friday that he had asked to be relieved of active duty May 31 and placed on the retirement list June 1 "or as soon as practicable after that."

"As I have stated several times before, I have no regrets for having spoken the truth as I perceived it," he said. "I do sincerely regret, however, any embarrassment that I may have caused the United States Army."

In his address to the cadets Thursday, Singlaub said Carter's decision to delay production of the neutron warhead without gaining concessions from the Soviets was "like throwing your trump card away in a game of bridge. I think it's ridiculous."

Carter announced earlier this month that he would delay, at least temporarily, production of neutron weapons, which were designed to use radiation, rather than blast effect, to stop any Soviet tank assault in Western Europe.

The Army's information chief, Brig. Gen. Robert Solomon, announced Singlaub's decision to retire after Singlaub met Friday with Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff.

Solomon said Singlaub was retiring after a 35-year military career "essentially because of what he considers an inadvertent disclosure of remarks he made" to the cadets.

Miss USA crown goes to Hawaiian

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Judi Lois Andersen, a blonde, 20-year-old airline stewardess representing Hawaii, won the 1978 Miss USA title Saturday night over 50 other contestants.

A resident of Honolulu and a graduate of Bennett College, she is a stewardess for Air Hawaii and interested in fashion designing, modeling and water sports. She will represent the United States in the Miss Universe contest July 24 at Acapulco, Mexico.

The first runnerup was Diane Elizabeth Pollard from Hamilton, Mass. The other three semifinalists, in the order in which they finished, were Barbra Jo Horan of Dallas, a student at SMU; Jayne K. Buecher of Indianapolis and Marlena Gale Garland of Las Cruces, N.M.

The other semifinalists were: April Shaw of Lakeland, Fla.; Barbara Samuelson of Anchorage, Alaska; Nancy Lynn Lippold of Norman, Okla.; Donna Lynn Adrain of Los Angeles; Robin Lee Shadle of Springfield, Va.; Margo Flynn of Salt Lake City; and Sandy Dell of Latrobe, Pa. During the two-hour nationally televised program, which was also viewed in 20 foreign countries, the contestants paraded in costumes representative of their states.

Medication can affect sex life

Dear Dr. Solomon: If you are taking a drug for high blood pressure, can it affect your sex life? My husband may have this problem—he has been on hypertensive drugs for about six months now and says he is certain this has something to do with the way things are present.—X

Dear X: Hypertension drugs can affect a person's sex life by acting on what is called the sympathetic nervous system. They may, for instance, interfere with ejaculation or, in the case of a woman, make orgasm more difficult. Your husband should check with his doctor. A switch in medication may be all that is needed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there really any point to "sanitizing" glasses the way they do in motels these days? Wouldn't just plain washing be good enough?—Frances G.

Dear Frances: Interestingly enough, just plain washing probably would be a lot better than all the "sanitizing" that seems to be going on. A recent Environmental Health Administration report said that over 50 percent of all sanitized glasses examined in a survey had germs capable of producing diseases. Dr. Bailus Walker, who led the investigation, said that in 40 of 66 hotels visited, the washing procedure was simply to rinse the glass in hot water in the bathroom, dry it with the bath towel, and repackage it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How do you feel about exercise for young people who are diabetic? Our daughter's fiancé is diabetic, but he has been told he can go right ahead with college sports.—Roberta B.

Dear Roberta: Not only is exercise good for diabetics—it should be thought of as part of the treatment unless there is some special problem limiting physical activity. Regular exercise helps control diabetes by lowering blood sugar and reducing the need for medication. In fact, mild diabetes may be controlled just through diet and exercise.

Prolonged exercise, of course, can cause hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) so an appropriate amount of calories are needed before and perhaps during exercise.

The Diabetes Foundations says that younger diabetics should establish a pattern of participating daily in sports. For those who might be interested, they recommend "A Diabetic's Sports and Exercise Book" by June Biermann and Barbara Toohey. It is published by J.B. Lipincott.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

AUSTIN, TEXAS (AP)—A gift of more than $211,000 by Houston lawyer Charles Sapp will establish a new endowed law professorship at The University of Texas.

UT regents have approved creation of the Liddell, Sapp, Zivley & Brown Professorship in Banking, Financial, Commercial and Corporate Law.

Sapp, a 1938 UT law graduate, established the professorship with a gift of 9,500 shares of common stock of Southwest Chemical Services, Inc., a Delaware corporation.

Breeding rabbits, judging shows keeps this man happy

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Peter Cottontail comes and Peter Cottontail goes, but Stuart Griffith is always on the bunny trail.

For the past decade he's hopped around the rabbit show circuit working as an American Rabbit Breeders' Association judge. There are 50 shows a weekend in the United States, he said, and thousands of rabbit breeders compete.

Griffith raises the critters, too; has for 30 years. His hutch holds an assortment of more than 150 in various colors. And for the past 16 years he's been a rabbit registrar for other fans.

"I think rabbit raising is one of the best things there is," he told a reporter. "It's interesting, and the people you meet are just really good honest people."

He does more judging than showing. "You've got to know each and every variety from one end to the other," he said. Among the things he examines are textures, toenails, teeth, ears, eyes, conformation and color.

"It takes years of work with rabbits in order to get a judge's license," he said. There are examinations to be sure the judge knows the 38 breeds and their 150 variations.

Some years he jumps through up to 25 shows, visiting most of the states east of the Mississippi. He takes about a minute to examine the contestants, usually inspecting 250 long-ears a show. A secretary follows him about, jotting down his comments for his reference and for the owners.

"When I go through, say the first time, I try to see if there are any that are going to be disqualified. I look them over from their tails to their noses," he said.

Five rabbits are winnowed from the crowd for the finals. And an overall winner is selected from them.

Energy Problems: From a Black Point of View—Blacks should support a national strategy to increase domestic production of oil and gas reserves over the short term, and this approach would provide time for the development of alternate resources.

Our fight is for survival, and dead end jobs, welfare or tax rebates are not the solutions. Only productive jobs in business and industry will restore the nation's economic health.

The national resolution passed by the NAACP recently states in part: "For the great majority of people the NAACP represents, the cost of energy today is sufficiently high to discourage any unnecessary use.

Blacks are born conservationists, with year-around natural wind-conditioned housing, obsolete fuel-guzzling cars and "the system" continuing to move what few job opportunities we have further and further from traditional black communities, we don't need to be told to conserve.

Editorial Quotes: "There was a time in American history when the minister was one of the few scholars in his community, and the church recognized him as such. However, in contemporary society, this is not the case. Today's church is looking for a pastor who has a sound biblical knowledge but who is also able to function as a preacher, counselor, shepherd, businessman, PR director, teacher, and who is able to perform a myriad of other duties associated with the pastoral ministry." From Pulse (Church of God educational ministries).

President Carter Says: "We have a long way to go in our country in meeting the legitimate needs of citizens who have been deprived too long of equal opportunities, equal education and equal opportunities for their business." stated the president recently to 32 representatives of black media associations at the White House. "Baby, I'm Back": Actress-writer Denise Nicholas is back as chairperson for the 4th Annual American Airlines-Jet Celebrity Tennis Classic. The annual event will be played as part of the United Negro College Fund's "Super Tennis Week in Tucson" May 27-June 3 at the Tucson Racquet Ranch. Carter aides still 'explain' inflation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Although consumer prices rose at close to a double-digit rate in March, a spokesman for President Carter says the administration is not ready to concede a fundamental worsening of the inflation outlook.

A sharp climb in meat and fruit prices helped send consumer prices up by 0.8 percent last month, signaling an annual inflation rate of more than 9 percent, the government said Friday.

Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum termed the March report disappointing. But he added that early in 1977, adverse winter weather and higher food prices caused a similar bulge in consumer prices, which subsequently tapered off.

"A similar pattern is possible this year," Granum said.

The Labor Department said overall food costs rose 1.3 percent in March. Beef prices increased 2.6 percent, pork prices rose increase in February, 2.9 percent and fresh fruit costs jumped 4.7 percent.

That is well above the 6 percent to 7 percent inflation rate that the administration has forecast for 1978.

The Labor Department said overall food costs rose 1.3 percent in March. Beef prices increased 2.6 percent, pork prices rose Meat prices have been rising sharply all year because of reduced supplies and growing consumer demand. The experts say shoppers haven't seen the end of big price boosts.

Except for a February decline, fresh fruit prices also have been advancing sharply since late 1977.

Injured thumb saves construction worker from death in disaster

WILLOW ISLAND, W.Va. (AP) — Construction worker James Miller had imagined the worst: if the scaffolding ever failed while he was atop it, he would grab onto some protruding reinforcement-steel "and hang on."

He did not have to try his survival plan. Miller injured his thumb at 9:20 a.m. Thursday. It probably saved his life. Forty minutes later, scaffolding gave way 168 feet atop a huge cooling tower under construction at a power plant here, sending 51 fellow workers plummeting to their deaths below, where Miller had been mixing concrete. Miller, 29, of Elizabeth, W.Va., was being treated at a nearby Parkersburg hospital when the mass of metal and wood crashed. He broke out in a sweat when the news broke. "I would have been under it," he said Friday, a day after one of the nation's worst industrial disasters. "I called my wife to let her know I was all right. She refused to believe it was me. She thought I was a goner." said the 5-foot-6 father of two. "I'm a church man. I believe I was just spared. I kind of figure somebody is taking care of me."

He had worked on the lofty catwalk "20 or 30 times in the past year when we were a man short." "To me it wasn't any different than working on the ground. That's how solid it was. I was a believer that it would never fall," Miller said. And if it did, "I always felt the inside scaffolding would fall down the inside and the outside scaffolding would go down the outside. But it all went over the top and went down the inside," he said. Despite his brush with death, he will return to his $10-an-hour job at the Pleasants Power Station beside the Ohio River.

Energy projects sprout

By HOLLY KURTZ
HONOLULU (AP) — Residents of Hawaii are soaking up the sun in more ways than one as solar energy projects sprout in increasing numbers across the islands.

Government and private sources spent $2.5 million on solar demonstration projects in Hawaii last year, compared to $160,000 for 1975 and 1976, according to a state government report.

Nearly 2,000 solar-operated water heaters have been installed in homes and businesses across the state in the past three years, a Hawaiian Electric Company survey showed.

Sales may jump if a federal tax credit for solar energy devices is approved. Local residents are waiting to determine the tax credit, said Tom Brennan, Pacific representative of the federal Department of Energy.

Hawaii residents are already entitled to a state tax credit of 10 percent of the cost of a solar energy device.

Solar energy is not a new concept here. Some families built homemade solar water heaters in the early 1900s, taking advantage of Hawaii's year-round sunshine.

The islands' position near the Equator allows them to receive intense radiation since the sun is directly overhead for part of the year.

With government dollars and pleas for energy conservation adding incentive, the number of firms installing solar heating units has grown from eight to nearly 30 in one year, according to the State Energy Office.

In using the sun's rays for energy, collectors placed on rooftops absorb the rays. They are used to heat water, to heat or cool indoor air, and to produce electricity. Of the various uses, solar water-heating is the most economically feasible now, according to federal and state officials.

Among the businesses adding solar collectors are four Waikiki hotels, which won Department of Energy grants totaling more than $1 million.

"Hawaii was fortunate. We got almost one-third of the grant money," said Robert Stern, Hawaii liaison for the Department of Energy.

The federal government has also subsidized solar water-heaters for single family residences in low-income areas and for public housing projects.

The solar water-heating system installed last August at Banyan Street Manor, a 55-unit Honolulu apartment building, provides up to 66 gallons of hot water daily for each unit.

Mounted atop the three wings of the apartment building are 164 solar panel collectors, each about three feet wide by six feet long. The sunlight is absorbed by the collectors, which heat water in copper tubes.

The system saves from $8 to $22 on tenants' monthly electric bills, said Banyan Manor manager Eleanor Lisenbee.

Hawaii Electric Company estimates that hot water heating accounts for 40 percent of a household's electric bill, and that a solar heater will save a family up to $15 on its electric bill.

But the cost of repair and maintenance is an unknown factor, said Hawaiian Electric spokesman Van Beazle.

Although the dollar saving to consumers is significant, the energy saving is minimal.

Even if every possible household converted to solar water-heating, said Beazle, the saving would be only about three percent of the basic fuel needed to produce electricity on the island of Oahu.

Stern estimates the saving at about 8 percent.

Solar heating devices for single-family homes cost an average of $2,500, but pay for themselves in utility bill savings in about seven years, said Michael Bean, solar division manager for the firm that designed Banyan Street Manor.

House-Senate chores on gas mind-boggling

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The difficulty Senate and House conferees are having in trying to reach a compromise on natural gas legislation is a striking example of the inevitable mess that occurs when Congress tries to get into the regulation business.

Regulation at best tends to be slow-moving and bureaucratic, and when 435 members of the House and 100 members of the Senate undertake such regulatory chores as determining down to the penny a ceiling price for natural gas, it boggles the mind.

Not only has the current Congress tried to decide the initial price and the rate at which that price should increase annually for the next seven years, it also is involved with writing a definition of new gas and new reservoirs and with other technical matters.

Congress has been wrestling with the gas regulatory problem for more than a year, starting with President Carter's energy plan announcement in April of last year. The issue has been before the Congress many times before, of course, but this was the first time that Congress undertook to make the regulatory decisions itself. In the past the issue was control by the old Federal Power Commission or decontrol.

At the outset, various committees held hearings, debated issues and finally moved gas legislation to the floor. There was further debate and finally each house came forth with its own version.

As it turned out, not surprisingly, the two versions were far apart, so the legislation then went to conference. The Senate named 17 conferees and the House selected 25 to try to work out the differences.

The conferees tried from time to time over a period of five months to reach some compromise but made little headway. Then a group of the conferees began meeting on their own behind closed doors in an effort to arrive at some acceptable solution.

There were about a dozen of these and they met on occasions with Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and had an audience with President Carter.

Finally, at about 1:30 p.m. on Friday, April 21, reporters waiting in a hallway outside a room in which the negotiators were meeting heard a round of prolonged applause from within the room, signaling that a compromise had finally been hammered out.

The weary reporters applauded in return to let the conferees know that the reporters, too, were happy that something — anything — had been decided.

Subsequently, Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), Rep. Thomas Ashley (D-Ohio) and other key members of the group emerged to proclaim that, indeed, a compromise had been drafted. They expressed confidence that the full conference would accept the compromise and that, in turn, it would be adopted by floor votes.

Schlesinger, who had participated in the final long hours of discussion, was also pleased and confident, saying the president was aware of the final terms and found them acceptable. A few days later, at a press conference, the president indicated he considered the battle was over the gas bill.

But the celebrations proved premature. Last week reporters were again waiting in hallways outside of closed doors while groups of conferees tried once again to agree on a control plan. The end was not yet in sight.

One of the problems stemmed from

Eckel names G. L. Seber

ODESSA—Eckel Manufacturing Co., Inc., has named a new company president, effective June 1. He is Gerald L. Seber, presently vice president of international sales.

He will move from Eckel International, Inc., in Houston, to the home offices and plant in Odessa.

The announcement was made by Emery Eckel, founder and current president, who will continue an active role as chairman of the board.

Replacing Seber in Houston as vice president of international sales is Larry Almquist, who joins the organization Monday. Almquist is an 18-year veteran of the Martin-Decker Co. where he has served most recently as manager of international operations.

the fact that there was uncertainty over just what was contained in the final compromise. Even staff members who had sat through the negotiating sessions weren't clear.

Another cause of confusion was the fact the provisions were so complicated. There were price provisions for old gas, for new gas, for onshore gas, for offshore gas, for deep-well gas, imported gas, geopressurized gas, gas from coal mines, and so forth. Someone counted 12 different categories; another said there were 17. No one was sure.

Furthermore, some congressional egos had been wounded. This was especially true of the conferees who had been left out of the negotiating sessions. Some others, upset by one portion or another of the final compromise, were talking of changing their vote.

With the vote margin already so thin and uncertain, this sort of wavering endangered the compromise, causing its leaders to stall for time before presenting the plan to the full conference for a final vote.

All in all, it has been an on-going demonstration of how unwieldy and unwise it is for the legislative arm of the government to involve itself in a regulatory activity.

In the case of natural gas pricing, there are those who think the marketplace would be the best regulatory because this would bring economic facts of life into play. With Congress trying to run the show, the primary factor is politics.

Independent oilmen still top explorers

By Max B. Skelton

HOUSTON (AP)—Jack Allen says independent oil operators continue to dominate domestic explorations despite a long series of negative governmental actions.

The president of the 5,000-member Independent Petroleum Association of America says independents still account for about 90 percent of exploratory wildcat wells drilled and more than 50 percent of oil and gas reserves.

But the Perryton, Tex., independent says some of President Carter's tax proposals would subject independents to further punitive measures at a time positive proposals are needed to create an economic climate that would maximize domestic oil and gas explorations.

"It would seem that independent producers who play such a vital role in the energy well-being of our economy should be encouraged by sound consistent policies which would allow us to expand drilling efforts," he said.

While representing his association and 20 state and regional trade groups, Allen outlined before the House Ways and Means Committee a five-point petroleum taxation policy he said would encourage maximum explorations and development.

"Included were the elimination of noncorporate intangible drilling costs as a minimum tax preference item, repeal of the 65 percent of taxable income limitation on percentage depletion for independents, amending existing law to prevent further reduction in the percentage depletion rate, authorizing the expensing of geological and geophysical costs rather than requiring their capitalization, and enactment of a energy development investment tax credit for all exploration and development expenditures.

With the enactment of such a policy, Allen said, Congress could then "stand back and watch domestic independent oil and gas producers redouble their efforts to bring our dependence on imported oil and natural gas to manageable, acceptable levels."

Allen said there were about 20,000 independent explorer-producers in the United States in the mid-1950s but that by 1971 at least half of them "had merged out, sold out or simply gone broke."

"The industry was decimated for two primary reasons, artificially low anti-competitive price fixing by the federal government and repressive, punitive tax policies by the federal government," Allen said.

The repressive tax policies, he said, included the 1969 reduction of the depletion allowance from 27.5 to 22 percent and the 1975 action that substantially repealed the allowance for about 85 percent of oil and gas production.

Allen said the Carter Administration's proposal to deny credit for any ordinary income taxes while determining liability for a minimum tax is punitive to producers.

"It is contrary to the basic purpose of the minimum tax provision which is to require payment of some tax by those who pay little or no ordinary income tax," he said.

Allen said capital from both external and internal sources has been taken away from independents by the existing minimum tax provision.

"Independents are highly reliant on outside investors for a significant portion of exploratory funds, a source which has been severely restricted because of the minimum tax on intangible drilling costs," he said.

Allen said there also is concern over a proposal to tax as corporations limited partnerships with more than 15 limited partners.

"Again it seems almost as though this is a punitive measure specifically directed at independent oil and gas producers," he said.

"The limited partnership is one of the commonly used vehicles within the independent sector. An individual producer may be a participant in many such limited partnerships at any time.

D-Jax has convenient, Best service is goal economic dynamometer at Adia PARTIME

Midlander, M. D. Mills and associates of D-Jax Corporation have developed a revolutionary, yet relatively inexpensive pumping well dynamometer. Installation can be easily accomplished by one man in less than one minute, without D-Jax supervision.

Built with a minimum number of moving parts, it simply "hooks" on the existing horsehead bridle cables. It gives a direct dynamometer card read out, reflecting or recording qualitatively a history of what is happening downhole, including traveling valve, standing valve, and counter-balance checks. There is no loss of resolution due to hydraulics or molecular difference in various polish rods. No calibration or zero base line problems. It is possible to get up to 100 dynamometer charts from each roll of paper. Charts are changed by simply cutting off the run chart. If you have ever attempted to install a chart on a conventional dynamometer on a windy day, you will appreciate the continuous roll chart feature of the D-Jax Dynamometer.

Shown above is a D-Jax pumping well dynamometer. For a field or office demonstration of this revolutionary, yet relatively inexpensive dynamometer, call D-Jax at 683-5710.

Adia PARTIME provides temporary help to business and industry in a broad range of clerical, industrial and technical skill areas. One of the largest temporary help services in the country with over 300 offices worldwide, Adia was founded on the principle that the best possible service would reward them with ever increasing numbers of good clients.

Midland's office, located at 2004 W. Wall, is owned by Fred and Myrna Hansler and managed by LaRene Menzel. Recently added to the office staff here is Beth Slaton. They offer quality temporary help to the Midland area. Their applicants have been tested and can be depended on to do a good job for all their clients.

Jim Horn, vice president for Adia PARTIME credits their growth to a business philosophy that emphasizes the best service available. "In our business," he said, "the best service hinges on the best people. All of our practices are designed to attract and hold the best people—internal staff and temporaries alike. We don't want to be known as a big company. We want to be known as the best. That's a position that's harder to achieve."

"Planned usage is the wave of the future," Horn went on to say. The industry has been promoting the idea of planned use of temporary help for maximum benefit to the client companies. When a firm can predict peak work periods, or times when it knows for sure that additional help will be needed—such as inventory time or for seasonal or even daily peaks—that firm can plan its staffing needs and have the temporary personnel ready to go to work when needed. This offers a tremendous advantage in production and profit. Rather than hiring additional full-time staff, you need pay for temporary workers only for the time worked.

With assistance from Adia PARTIME, vacation time needn't cut down on your firm's production. For your convenience, Adia PARTIME has available in booklet form their 1978 Vacation Planner. Call LaRene Menzel or Beth Slaton at 683-6111 for your copy soon. You'll find it to be a most useful tool in planning your personnel's vacation schedule and in determining your replacement needs.

Whether your company needs clerical, sales, technical, secretarial, or data processing help, Adia PARTIME can provide you with temporary personnel with the specific skills needed. For further information, call them soon. They'll be delighted to help you.

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Proponents of offshore and onshore crude oil unloading facilities on the Texas Gulf Coast made their separate pitches to Transportation Secretary Brock Adams Thursday.

Adams, who said he had no opinion on which type facility is best for the area, will have to decide whether to grant an operating license to a proposed state-run offshore facility. The decision is seen as the key in determining how the state's multi-million dollar petrochemical industry will insure itself an unbroken supply of crude oil.

Backers of the offshore proposal, originally put forward as Seadock by a consortium of several oil companies, say the facility could handle 43 percent of the nation's crude oil imports.

The offshore terminal needs a license to operate from the department. The DOT has granted one license to the now-defunct Seadock and another to a private group building a terminal off the Louisiana coast. Backers of the state plan have not decided whether to adopt Seadock's license or seek an entirely new one.

Proponents of a plan to build an onshore terminal in the Port of Galveston say the facility could handle 75 percent of the offshore terminal volume at one-fourth the cost.

No DOT license is required for the onshore facility, but dredging a 30-mile 55-foot deep channel into the Gulf of Mexico to accommodate huge oil tankers would be necessary. Both facilities would be public.

Adams called the Northville Industries' presentation of its plan to build the facility "very persuasive." But he expressed doubts whether the huge tankers could maneuver in Galveston's crowded port.

Adams said Thursday it was clear supporters of the plans are convinced both facilities cannot be built.

Harold Bernstein of Northville Industries told Adams his support of the offshore project would kill the Port of Galveston plan.

S. O. Hawley

Harold G. Lambeth

Lambeth to hit milestone

Harold G. Lambeth, senior accounting assistant, will complete 25 years of service with Shell Pipe Line Corp. Monday. He is assigned to the Central Division office in Midland.

He started with Shell as a general clerk in Colorado City and transferred to Midland in 1954 when the West Texas Area office was moved from Colorado City.

He became senior accounting assistant in 1974.

Lambeth is a native of Colorado City and was graduated from Lames High School. He holds a B.B.A. degree from Texas Tech University.

Gulf makes two awards

Gulf Oil Exploration & Production Co. has presented long-service awards to two employees in its Western Division, Southwest Division.

S. O. Hawley, unit supervisor in the Midland office of the Comptroller Department, was honored for having worked 30 years with the company.

He began his Gulf career in 1948 as a senior stenographer-clerk in the Fort Worth office. He later worked as a lead clerk and was transferred to Midland and promoted to unit supervisor in 1960.

T. B. Jenkins, a PBX operator in the Midland office of the Comptroller Department, received a 15-year service award.

Ms. Jenkins joined Gulf in 1963 as a PBX operator in the Midland office where she has remained her entire career with the company.

IMCO names J. B. Dean

IMCO Services, a division of Halliburton Co., has announced two personnel changes in the Permian Basin and one in Louisiana.

Johnny B. Dean has been named sales representative for the company's West Texas area, with headquarters in Midland.

Dean has been with IMCO since 1957, and previously was manager of the Hobbs, N.M., District.

Eldon Westenberg succeeds Dean as Hobbs District manager. He joined the company in 1975 and most recently was a senior service representative for the Monahans District.

Verda T. Smith recently joined the company as a sales representative for the South Louisiana Area. His office is in New Orleans. Smith has more than 20 years' experience in the drilling fluids industry.

C. L. Lawrence in new position

ODESSA—Dresser Industries has promoted C. L. Lawrence from senior field safety engineer to Field Safety Department manager in its Odessa.

Lawrence previously served Dresser as an oil field equipment safety consultant.

Tests slated

ODESSA — Tests for commercial and non-commercial pesticide applicator certification will be given by the Texas Department of Agriculture at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday at the department's Odessa office, 3652 N. Dixie Ave.

Anyone not certified to use the 24 pesticides now restricted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will not be able to buy them, said Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown.

Applicator training material may be obtained from William P. Morrison at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, Route 3, Box 213-AA, Lubbock.

Exxon promotions revealed

Exxon Co., U.S.A., has promoted H. Kirby Blevins to engineering technician and transferred him from the Midkiff, Midland District, to the Division Drilling Organization in the Mid-continent Production Division, Midland.

Blevins was maintenance foreman at Midkiff. He joined the company in Eunice, N. M., in 1952 and commenced field assignments in West Texas in 1963.

John E. "Jay" Brasher has been transferred from Crowell to the Mid-continent Division office in Midland and promoted to engineering technician.

At Crowell, he was maintenance foreman. Brasher joined the company as a roustabout in New London. Subsequently, he was assigned to drilling locations in Louisiana, and in 1958 moved to Seminole. Production field assignments followed in the Means area and in 1973 he was transferred to the Bateman Ranch Area near Crowell.

Chattie G. Jacobs, assigned to General Accounting in the Midcontinent Production office in Midland, has been promoted from senior administrator to accountant-exempt.

She joined the company as clerk-stenographer in the East Texas Gas Plant and was transferred to Midland in 1959.

Coal-fired Texas plant described

TEXAS CITY—Plans for a multi-million dollar coal-fired cogeneration plant in Texas City to produce both steam and electricity were described last week by Byron R. Lowe, the newly-appointed general manager of the joint project, CAM.

Under the concept, the cooperative project of Union Carbide, two Amoco subsidiaries of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, and Monsanto, will supplement the steam needed for process heating in the plants owned by Union Carbide, Monsanto, Amoco Texas Refining Co., and Amoco Chemicals Corp. in Texas City.

The electrical power produced will be fed into the local distribution system operated by Community Public Service Co.

The companies will reduce natural gas and oil consumption in existing boilers and release those fuels for home heating and other high priority uses.

The natural gas and fuel oil deduction is equivalent to the annual home heating requirements for a population of approximately one million residents in the Midwest area of the United States, or 1.75 million residents on the Texas Gulf Coast.

Lowe pointed out that by using the cogeneration concept and converting to coal, the contemplated project is consistent with the objectives of the Texas Railroad Commission ruling and proposed National Energy Policy of discontinuing the use of natural gas and oil as boiler fuels.

The nation's balance of payments situation will also benefit substantially by reducing the use of imported oil and converting to domestic coal.

"By combining the production of steam needed for refinery and chemical processes with electric generation in a large plant, we can attain approximately 75 per cent fuel efficiency. This is compared to about 35 per cent fuel efficiency experienced by a typical plant generating only electricity,"

Lowe said. "In addition, the application of advanced control technology to a consolidated single source will enhance environment control measures in the Texas City area for air quality."

To prevent deterioration of air quality, the best available control technology will be utilized to remove sulfur dioxide and particulates from the stack emissions, Lowe added.

Steam production of the plant is designed to deliver three million pounds per hour. Electrical power produced by cogeneration in the new plant is anticipated to be about 150 megawatts.

Caution being shown in lignite production

COLLEGE STATION—A Texas A&M University geologist says Texas lignite producers are approaching the future with some caution because it requires multi-million dollar investments to mine lignite for energy production. Texas lignite only has a primary value as a fuel for electrical generation, says Dr. Christopher Mathewson of Texas A&M. Lignite is a low heat value member of the coal family, meaning that large reserves are necessary.

Fortunately, Texas has an abundant supply. Unlike oil or gas fuels, lignite has properties unique to each deposit. "Say I build a power-generating plant," explains Mathewson. "That plant designed to use lignite must have an adequate supply, because lignite plants can't be easily designed to use a variety of energy sources. Therefore, if I have a lignite deposit and no power plant to use the lignite, then I don't have a market."

"The development of our Texas lignite resources requires a market and the discovery of a suitable fuel deposit. "What we are looking at in just setting up and opening a Texas lignite strip-mining operation is a $50 to $75 million investment," says the geologist.

The dredge lines used in coal strip mining cost about $1 dollar per pound. A single dredge

Course scheduled on engineering

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer a course on "Reservoir Engineering for Geologists and Non-Petroleum Engineers" May 15-19 in Midland.

The five-day course, to be held in the Graduate Center Building, will cover the fundamentals of reservoir engineering at a level directed toward the petroleum geologist or the engineer with no reservoir engineering background.

It will include engineering and geologic data of reservoirs, data gathering, reduction and treatment for reservoir solutions (descriptive rather than mathematical).

The purpose of the course is to give the participant fundamental understanding of reservoir fluid properties, properties of reservoir rocks, fluid flow of oil and gas reservoirs, recovery mechanisms, and secondary and tertiary recovery methods.

Sloan J. Black, a registered professional engineer and consultant with Prentice & Records Enterprises, Inc., in Lafayette, La., will be the instructor.

The course will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., each day. The fee is $385, including a set of note-taking outlines.

Black was graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1958 and is an active member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers. During 18 years of major company and consultant experience, he has completed a wide variety of engineering and management assignments, inshore and offshore.

Production engineering responsibilities included major multi-field tank battery consolidation, vapor recovery installations, gas cycling systems and gasoline plants.

ARDMORE, Okla.—Noble Affiliates, Inc., has announced the election of Norvel R. Tomlinson as vice president and treasurer, and Bobbie W. Cunningham as corporate secretary. Tomlinson succeeds Jack D. Wilkes, who recently retired, as chief financial officer of the company.

Mrs. Cunningham has been assistant corporate secretary of Noble Affiliates since 1975.

HOUSTON—Reese M. Smith, formerly of McCamey and Midland, has retired from Exxon Pipeline Co., after 26 years of service. He was a senior right-of-way claims agent in the Southwest Texas Division office in Corpus Christi.

Smith joined the company in 1951 and had worked in McCamey, Midland, Mexia, Longview and Houston.

CORPUS CHRISTI—Hamilton Brothers Petroleum Corp. and Texas Gas Corp. announced their agreement on a proposal by Hamilton to make a cash tender offer for any and all shares of Texas Gas Corp. common stock at $27 per share net.

Texas said its board of directors had approved the proposal and expects to formally endorse it to Texas stockholders when the offer is made.

HOUSTON—C&K Petroleum Inc. said it signed a $9 million, three-year agreement for exploration of oil and gas with a "major utility." It didn't identify the utility. Under the agreement, C&K said it would bear 25 percent of the exploration costs and receive 50 percent of any production revenue. Production costs would be in addition to the $9 million agreement, said the oil and gas exploration and development concern.

ODESSA—Loffland Brothers Co., worldwide drilling contractor, headquartered in Odessa, has won the Customer Better Total Value Award for domestic division for 1977. Awards are presented each year to the domestic and overseas divisions which have the largest percentage of wells drilled which are rated by the customer as giving them better total value. This marks the sixth consecutive year that the Mid-continent Division has received the award.

HOUSTON—James Russel Lope has joined Gruy Management Service Co. as area engineer in the Houston District. He formerly was associated with Crest Engineering Co. and Texaco Inc.

He is responsible for complete operation of oil and gas wells in his area of the Houston District.

"Two, four, six, eight! Who do we appreciate? Audrey Gill!" these Midland High School students seem to say as they gather around Principal Gill, who is retiring after 31 years of service to Midland public schools. (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

Midland to fete Audrey Gill Day

The red carpet will be rolled out Monday for Midland High School Principal Audrey Gill, who is retiring this month after 31 years of service to Midland public schools.

Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo will proclaim Monday as "Audrey Gill Day" during a principals' luncheon, given by the City Council PTA, at noon at Washington Elementary School. Gill will be guest of honor at the luncheon.

All that day, Midland High students, teachers and staff members will be wearing badges as a reminder of the event.

At a 7 p.m. PTA meeting, Midland High students, former students and parents will gather in the school cafeteria to honor Gill. According to Midland High PTA President Barbara Allen, they will pay tribute to Gill following installation of the new PTA officers.

Also scheduled during the meeting is a tour of the art department as part of "Arts Appreciation Night." Mr. Gill will be portrayed in a skit as our favorite work of art," Mrs. Allen said.

A reception will follow in the home economics departments with foreign exchange students as special guests.

Gill came to Midland in 1947 after graduating from The University of Texas at Austin where he was co-captain of the Longhorn football team. He began his career as a teacher and assistant coach at Midland High and then was promoted to head coach.

In 1967, he moved to Lee High School as assistant principal. During his tenure, Gill served as athletic director for the school system and has headed the administration at Midland High since 1969.

"I have worked closely with Audrey Gill since he joined me as assistant principal when I was principal at Lee in 1967," Assistant Superintendent Garland Chapman said. "He has vigorously supported the schools and Midland students for over 30 years. He is an excellent administrator and we shall miss him."

Schools Superintendent Dr. James Malley said that the traditions Gill established over his years of service will remain, adding, "Audrey gave unselfishly of his time, energy and experience for 31 years. I hope that he plans to stay in Midland so that all of us can continue to enjoy his friendship and his counsel."

'Sunny Jim' thrives despite predictions

EDITOR'S NOTE — They call him Sunny Jim, but two years ago experts forecast a black cloud would gather over 10 Downing Street. Few thought Britain's fourth Labor prime minister of the century could survive his nation's problems or his Conservative challengers. He not only survived, he's thriving.

By ARTHUR GAVSHON
AP Special Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — "A lie is halfway around the world while truth is pulling on her boots," James Callaghan once mused in the House of Commons.

It was the British prime minister's way of chiding an opponent for stretching facts — without actually calling him a liar, which is unparliamentary language.

"Sunny Jim" himself, who started his third year as prime minister this month, has been called many things by friends and foes in nearly 33 years of parliamentary life.

Fellow lawmakers see him as a superb political technician for his mastery of Parliament and the Labor Party he heads. Within the Labor movement, some see him as a self-serving machine politician in the American mold.

Even critics acknowledge that Callaghan has displayed an uncanny touch in the past year or so. He has wooed Labor conventions to back controversial policies against all odds. He has dominated his Conservative challengers, led by Margaret Thatcher, mixing sarcasm with passion as occasion demanded. And he has projected himself to mass audiences as the kindly, caring, confident uncle who knows what people want and what's best for them.

His springtime tax cuts could be a siren song inviting electors to vote the Labor government back to office when the nation ballots in the coming year or so.

And Callaghan's summertime save-the-dollar plans could have the aim of staying off a damaging world trade and money war which would drive Britain's still-fragile economy back onto the rocks.

Equally, though, both measures could achieve their stated purposes.

—At home to stimulate growth and cut unemployment from its level of 1.4 million or 6 percent of the work force.

—Abroad to steady money markets, spur economic growth and heal America's deepening trade rifts with West Germany and Japan which pack perils of political quarreling.

In any case, few British or foreign authorities rated Callaghan's survival prospects highly when on April 5, 1976, he succeeded Harold Wilson as Labor's fourth prime minister of the century.

Even fewer foresaw that he would be presiding now over a taxcutting exercise at home or the search for a new world economic order abroad.

Callaghan, then 64, was regarded rather as the aging caretaker minding the nation's store while new Conservative managers under Mrs. Thatcher prepared to take over.

And despite his successes, some problems remain to be resolved.

The Labor movement remains divided — between reforming social democrats and leftwing radicals who want to extend state takeovers and controls until most major enterprises are publicly owned.

And politically, Callaghan and his party must develop coherent policies and tactics to counter Mrs. Thatcher's potent formula for catching votes on the issue of immigration (nonwhite) and law and order.

Callaghan favors controls of the influx but opposes massive repatriation. He insists that every non-white legally settled in Britain should have full citizenship rights.

Most politicians recognize that Mrs. Thatcher's stress of what amounts to a race issue has injected a note of uncertainty if not apprehension.

A certain stillness, nevertheless, blankets 10 Downing Street — the prime minister's headquarters — where infighting and backbiting recently flourished.

Callaghan doesn't live there anymore, preferring his modest two-room apartment in an untrendy part of London south of the River Thames. The prime minister conveys an impression he neither needs nor wants to be at the center of every political or official development because he has more abiding perspectives.

Referring once to those longer-term interests, Callaghan confided: "The best hobby I know is to be at home with my wife (Audrey) and the children."

The children now are grown. Two daughters and a son have given Callaghan nine grandchildren to romp with and to spoil with candy he keeps in a well-stocked bedside drawer. One of Callaghan's daughters, Margaret, married economist-turned-journalist Peter Jay, now Britain's ambassador in Washington.

As the only prime minister to have run three great departments of state (treasury, home office and foreign office), Callaghan has the bearing of a man who has seen it all happen before.

He favors a concerted international effort to meet the challenge posed by the problem of mass unemployment. This is the kind of topic he talks about in frequent telephone exchanges with President Carter.

It was in these talks with Carter that Callaghan worked out his save-the-dollar ideas. When he had sorted them out he flew to Bonn for a long session with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on March 12 and arranged a special visit to Carter later in the month. All of this was in preparation for a July summit parley in Bonn among the world's major industrialized countries called to figure out how best to stabilize the world's money and trading systems.

Ms. Debnam still creates and edits "The Mini-Page" in Raleigh, North Carolina. Other awards that "The Mini-Page" has received include a Freedom Foundation Award and the American Dental Association's Science Writers Award.

Krueger drive pushed here

U.S. Rep. Hob Krueger of New Braunfels, Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, announced Saturday that an organizational meeting of Midland County supporters was held recently.

Persons interested in working on the campaign may call Tom Johnson, 684-9001; Ron Tefteller, 682-5574, or Jim Aisup, 683-3351, a Krueger spokesman said.

Krueger is seeking the Senate seat currently occupied by John Tower. He is opposed in the Democratic primary by former State Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie.

Handicapped have some tax breaks

A state law enacted in 1977 exempts orthopedically handicapped persons from sales and use taxes, according to the Midland County Veterans Service Office.

The exemption, which applies to personal vehicles driven primarily by orthopedically handicapped persons, applies to veterans and non-veterans, office secretary Melba May said.

In order to make use of the exemption, the person should make his claim known at the time of purchase and be prepared to offer evidence of the disability. The exemption does not apply to vehicles owned or operated by corporations or partnerships.

Saturday's election follows expensive campaigning

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

Texas voters get a chance Saturday to say what they think about some of the most expensive and extensive political campaigning the state has seen in many a year.

More than $7.5 million has already been spent in statewide campaigns, some of which started actively almost a year ago.

The big question in everybody's mind at the Democratic primary on May 6 is whether there will be a runoff for governor on June 3. Former Gov. Preston Smith is threatening to play the spoiler to victory claims made by Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Attorney General John Hill.

The hot U.S. Senate race between Rep. Bob Krueger and Joe Christie and the closely contested GOP primary race for governor between Bill Clements and Ray Hutchison should be settled within a few hours after the polls close.

However, there is very possible Democratic runoff for an unexpired term on the Texas Railroad Commission with recently-appointed Commissioner John Poerner challenged by three active campaigners.

Still other runoffs are likely in congressional District 6 where six Democrats seek to succeed Rep. Olin Teague. College Station, in District 11 where five Democrats want to take the place of Rep. W.R. Poage, Waco; in District 17 where there are seven Democrats in the race for the place vacated by Rep. Omar Burleson, Anson; in District 18 where there are seven Democratic challengers for the position left by Rep. Barbara Jordan, Houston, and possibly other districts.

Secretary of State Steve Oaks warned last week that voting strengths may be lower than many have expected. He said absentee voting, which continues until May 2, has been extremely light.

Oaks predicted a turnout of 1 million to 1.2 million "at the most," for the Democratic primary. Others earlier estimated 2 million. In 1974, the last statewide election not affected by presidential campaigns, had 1.5 million Democratic voters, about 29 percent of those eligible.

The state's top election official estimated there would be 100,000 to 110,000 in the "Republican spree" that would result in an income tax. Hill, 54, says Briscoe is trying to scare voters with the income tax talk and promises no new taxes also. He bought a big "VETO" rubber stamp and exhibited it during the final days of the campaign, promising to use it on any tax bill that reaches his desk, if elected governor. The Houston lawyer, also a millionaire, says Briscoe is an "absentee governor who doesn't mind the store."

Smith, now 66, wants back the job Briscoe took from him six years ago. He claims superior knowledge and experience in state government over Hill and hits at Briscoe for what he says is lack of leadership.

Two relatively unknown Democratic candidates for governor are Donald R. Beagle, 56, a welder from Nederland, and Ray Allen Mayo, 64, San Juan, who says he is an author-publisher.

Clements, 61, organizer of SEDCO, a worldwide oil drilling company, and former deputy secretary of defense, said he is the only GOP candidate with enough financial backing to beat a Democrat in November.

Hutchison, 45, Dallas bond and finance law expert and former state GOP chairman, said Clements is another example of the big rich who want to start at the top.

Mario Compean, 37, of San Antonio is the Raza Unida candidate for governor. The two-man Democratic race for the U. S. Senate has been overshadowed by the Briscoe-Hill feud and by expectations that the big Senate race will come in November when the Democratic nominee challenges Sen. John Tower, a 17-year incumbent with conservative friends in both parties, has spent most of his time in Washington, making speaking trips to Texas when Congress was not in session. He is 52.

Krueger, 42, former college dean and scion of a rich New Braunfels family, was elected to Congress in 1972. He quickly became recognized as the champion of the oil and gas industry, particularly for gas deregulation. He is known for his well-organized and well-financed campaign.

Christie, 44, former El Paso state senator and former chairman of the State Board of Insurance, claims Krueger is a tool of the major oil companies. Christie has had money problems but has endorsements from labor groups and liberal Democrat organizations.

Luis A. Diaz DeLeon, 52, Austin, is the Raza Unida candidate for governor. The two-man Democratic race for the U. S. An analysis of the bitter gubernatorial battle.

Briscoe, who turned 55 just last Sunday, wants another 4-year term to give him an unprecedented 10 years as governor.

The millionaire banker-rancher from Uvalde campaigns on his record, saying he has shown Texas can have effective, efficient state government without new taxes. He says Hill promises a "wild spending spree" that would result in an income tax.

Hill, 54, says Briscoe is trying to scare voters with the income tax talk and promises no new taxes also. He bought a big "VETO" rubber stamp and exhibited it during the final days of the campaign, promising to use it on any tax bill that reaches his desk, if elected governor. Irvin Feld is a 20th Century Barnum

NEW YORK (AP) — Irvin Feld is a near-sighted, square-jawed, hard-nosed 59-year-old businessman who becomes a hot dog chomping, cigar-smoking, chattering child when he goes to the circus.

Great? This one 15-minute number cost me more than any complete Broadway show. See our snails! All his life — certainly since he hawked snake oil on a carnival midway at 13 — Irvin Feld wanted his own circus. In 1967, he bought one. Feld is president of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. He also is producer, promoter, talent scout. "I spent $1 million on the costumes alone for this number. Now, take feathers. We buy all the ostrich feathers South Africa exports. All of them. They're twenty times more durable. Our elephant blankets cost as much as one Las Vegas extravaganza. Everything is twice as big. Twice as exciting. Twice as costly. Twice as fast. In 1969, Feld doubled the circus. He created a second "Greatest Show on Earth." Today two separate companies — equally as "Greatest," Feld claims — tour the United States 11 1/2 months a year.

comes some halving. When Feld bought the circus in 1967, the average age of the performers was 46. Today, he says, it's 23. He created a clown college to train new talent. He began periodic visits to Eastern European nations that operate state-supported circus schools.

WE'VE LOTS FOR TOTS!

Just before dozing off, little "Cute 'n' Cuddly," here, had several things to say:

"My Mommy's real smart. She buys things I like at Safeway. My baby food an' my milk an' my oil an' my powder an' all kinds of stuff like that. She started getting things for babies at Safeway when the twins were little. They're 'most four now. Says she saves lots of money, too. Gee, this milk is good...glug...ummmm...ZZZZZ..."

Gubernatorial candidates swap punches in speeches

By The Associated Press There was no letup or catching of breath this weekend in the hot and close race to see who will be the next governor of Texas.

Carter's couples work hard, earn big money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The husband and wife teams working for President Carter have a lot in common. They work long hours and schedule their lives tightly. And they make big bucks.

Trial of pair charged with espionage to begin

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Constitutional issues that parallel and may eclipse those of the Watergate era will be aired this week in the trial of two men indicted on charges of spying for communist Vietnam.

Nuclear weapons plant target of picketing

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Hundreds of anti-nuclear demonstrators gathered Saturday for the largest protest ever held at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, the nation's only facility which produces plutonium components for nuclear weapons.

"We must do more to prepare our young people to become productive members of society within the framework of an educational system which should be the very finest in the nation," Gov. Dolph Briscoe said in Beaumont Saturday.

"These programs for public education demonstrate action — not political promises," Briscoe said. "I don't think Texans want to turn their state government over to John Hill and other big spenders. I believe they much prefer the steady progress we are making under the policies of my administration — economic growth and improved services without new taxes."

Foundation grant program. Her husband, who was mayor of Pittsfield, Mass., before joining the Carter administration, had a $20,000-a-year salary. Another White House couple faring well economically is Dr. Peter Bourne and his wife, Mary King.

Foreign intelligence case without prior approval by any federal court. The department says this may never have happened before.

— Carter authorized a videotape of Humphrey in the U.S. Information Agency office where he was a watch officer with a top security clearance.

Letter from Moro?

ROME (AP) — A Rome newspaper Saturday received a new letter attributed to former Premier Aldo Moro begging fellow Christian Democrats to bargain with his Red Brigades kidnapers.

Leaders of the ruling Christian Democrat Party later met in private but gave no sign they would modify their refusal to negotiate with the terrorist gang that abducted the 61-year-old party president March 16.

Rome prosecutor Giovanni De Matteo said the letter indicated there was no speedy end in sight to the kidnapping despite a series of ultimatums by the Red Brigades.

"After the last messages what was considered the ultimatum of the Red Brigades no longer appears to be," De Matteo told a news conference.

The 10-page handwritten and signed letter seemed to show that Moro is still alive despite threats by the Red Brigades to kill him unless the government freed 13 imprisoned terrorists.

In the letter, described by the newspaper Il Messaggero as written in a "shaking and desperate hand," Moro criticized party leaders for their stand against bargaining him for jailed terrorists and asked for the convening of a larger party council to discuss the issue.

"I die if my party so decides, in the fullness of Christian faith and in the immense love for an exemplary family I adore," the letter said. "But this bloodbath will not go well for (party secretary Benigno) Zaccagnini, (Premier Giulio) Andreotti, the party, or for the country. Each will have to bear his responsibility."

Stacy shares lead with record round

ATLANTA (AP) — Defending champion Hollis Stacy fired a course-record 8-under-par 65 Saturday and forged into a share of the lead with Gloria Ehret in the $75,000 Lady Tara Golf Tournament.

Stacy's record-setting total left her at 140, 6 under par on the hilly, 6,353-yard Brookfield West Country Club course.

Ehret, the first-round leader after a 69, came back with a 71 in Saturday's round, narrowly missing a 35-foot putt for a birdie on the final hole.

"I went crazy today," said Stacy, who claimed her first Ladies' Professional Golf Association title in this tournament a year ago.

She has been on a hot streak lately, having won at Birmingham two weeks ago and losing a playoff to Amy Alcott at Raleigh last week.

"Today would be called leap-frog golf," Stacy said. "I came out to see how many people I could jump."

She jumped all but one, 32 in all, after her opening-round 75 when she had trouble sinking putts.

Her round included nine birdies, tying the all-time LPGA mark for birdies shared by five others. The previous women's record at Brookfield West was 67, a total reached earlier in the day by Pat Bradley, who used it to move into contention at 144.

Stacy, playing the backside first, nipped out a 10-foot birdie putt on number 10 and then strung together consecutive birdies from 15 feet, 1 foot and 5 feet. She parred the 14th and strung together three more birdies beginning at number 15, the first two from four feet and the last from 15.

Stacy also birdied the third hole from four feet and then had her only bogey of the day when she caught a bunker while guarding the fourth hole. She got two more shots back with birdies from 18 feet at number six and from three feet at number eight.

Stacy and Ehret enter Sunday's final round with a 1-shot lead over Janet Coles, who had 70 and Judy Kimball, who shot 69.

Alcott and Joyce Kazmierski were at 142 and three others were deadlocked at 143, including glamor stars Laura Baugh and Jan Stephenson.

Stephenson had a 68 and Baugh a 70.

Earl's longtime dream at hand

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Earl Campbell of Texas, who has idolized pro football players since he was 9 years old, will become one Tuesday, when the Houston Oilers pick the Heisman Trophy winner as the No. 1 choice in the draft.

"One of the happiest days of my life will be when I sign a pro contract and can go to my mama's house and show it to her," Campbell once said. "That will be what I call beauty...I would almost be ready to die."

CAMPBELL, 22, has been thinking about the pros since he was a fourth grader and dashed across a playground playing flag football. He is one of 11 children, and his mother has been a widow for 13 years.

Incredibly, the premier, running back in college football last year was a linebacker until his senior year at Tyler high school. His idol was Dick Butkus.

After he started tucking that "little brown thing" under his arm, Campbell switched his admiration to big, strong runners such as Calvin Hill, Larry Csonka and Franco Harris — then to Chuck Foreman, who "combines the catching and running like I'd like to do."

As a senior, Campbell, 6-1 and 228 pounds, used his 4.6 speed to lead the nation in rushing with 1,744 yards and caught five passes for 111 yards. He also was the top scorer with 19 touchdowns in 11 games. His 6.53 yards a carry was an all-time high for major college backs who ran as much as he did — 267 carries.

MORE IMPRESSIVE was the fact that 1,054 of Campbell's yards came after he had been hit by at least one would-be tackler.

Los Angeles Rams scout Harley Sewell said even as a sophomore Campbell was "running over some people who I think are going to make it as defensive linemen in the pros."

Gil Brandt of the Dallas Cowboys says running backs with Campbell's quickness and size — he is the third heaviest rushing champion in NCAA history — come along every 10-15 years.

Player moves into tie with 69

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gary Player, grim-faced in determination and concentration in his quest for a fourth consecutive victory, fought his way to a 3-under-par 69 and moved into a five-way tie for the lead Saturday in the third round of the $200,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

The little South African, a comeback winner in the Masters, Tournament of Champions and Houston Open in his last three starts, had to shake off a potentially disastrous double bogey with a birdie on the following hole to move into a tie with Homero Blancas, Gibby Gilbert, Fuzzy Zoeller and Lon Hinkle.

ALL FINISHED 54 holes over the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course with 205 totals, 11 under par.

Hinkle, playing early in the day before the gusty breezes reached their full strength, composed an 8-under-par 64, matching the course record with his best round as a pro. Blancas putted his way to a 68, Zoeller shot 70 and Gilbert had a 67. Gilbert missed a 6-foot birdie putt on the final hole that would have given him the lead alone.

D.A. Weirring, the rookie who held the second-round lead, slipped to a 73 and was alone at 206, a single stroke back.

The group at 207 included Fred Marti, Gary Koch and Grier Jones.

Koch shot a 30 on his back nine for a 67, while Marti and Jones had 69s.

FIRST-ROUND leader Lee Trevino took a 74 and fell 4 shots off the pace at 209. In all, there were 22 men within 4 shots of the lead.

"It should be a very, very exciting finish," said Player, who has had to make up a total of 17 strokes in the last rounds of his three victories. He could become only the third man in PGA Tour history to win four consecutive tournaments. Jack Burke was the last to do it, in 1952.

"Who ever wins will have to play a super round," he said. "You can't concentrate on one man. There must be 15 players who have a chance to win. It's like a lottery. With so many players close, it will be as tough to win from level as it has been the last few weeks."

Player, 3 shots off the pace when the day's play started, played his front side in 4-underpar 32, missed a couple of 10-footers and then, from the lead, took a double-bogey 8 on the 14th hole.

HIS 1-IRON off the tee kicked left into the rough and he had no choice but to chip out. He put his third shot in the fringe and took 3 to get down.

Wildcats flash to 5 firsts in Penn Relays

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Villanova's swift and sturdy runners, who ought to retire the Penn Relays to their trophy case, equalled their all-time record of five major relay titles Saturday at the two-day session of the world's oldest track and field meet.

The Wildcats made a believer of Coach Jim Elliott, who last week scoffed at meet director Jim Tuppeny's prediction that Villanova would win five for the fourth time. The Cats did it first in 1968 and repeated the next two years.

This year Villanova ran off with the distance medley Friday for the 13th straight year, and won championship watches Saturday in the 3,200, 6,000 sprint medley and 1,600 meter relays.

THE ONLY three relay events Villanova didn't win were the shuttle hurdles and the 400 and 800 meter relays, probably because they weren't entered.

Don Paige anchored the 3,200 and 6,000 and ran the third leg on the sprint medley, while Mark Belger handled the third leg of the distance medley and anchored the sprint medley and 3,200 winners. Belger completed his three-year career with 10 triumphs in 10 relay events.

Villanova trailed in the 3,200 until Belger, who ran a 1:46.9 half-mile, caught New Mexico anchor Sam Kipurgat with 100 meters to go and pulled away to win by eight yards. Villanova won in 7:17.9, with New Mexico second at 7:18.7.

It was the fourth relay triumph of the meet for the Wildcats.

Elliott's runners made his "it's impossible to win five" statement last week a white lie when they wound up the meet with a hairline victory in the 1,600 over Tennessee.

Keith Brown led off the 1,600 with a 46.6 quarter, and was followed by Derek Harbour (46.3), Glenn Bogue (46.4) and anchorman Tim Dale (45.2). Dale just touched out Tennessee anchor Antoine Blair at the wire before a roaring crowd of 36,421 at Franklin Field.

The race was so close that both Villanova and Tennessee were clocked in 3:04.5.

Villanova started its fourth record-setting Penn Relays with a victory in the 6,000 meter run.

Elliott's Wildcats came back in Saturday's first major relay to win the 6,000 by seven yards over a surprising Penn State quartet.

Dave Hill of the Florida Track Club, who this year won the Florida Relay's metric mile in 3:40.7, edged Wilson Waigwa in the invitation mile in 3:58.6. Tom Duit of Western Kentucky was second and James Munyala of Texas El Paso third.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Veteran Dock Ellis, saddled with an 8.18 earned run average in the early going, shut down heavy-hitting Boston on five hits Saturday night as the Texas Rangers clubbed the Red Sox 4-1 for their fifth consecutive victory.

Ellis, 2-1, who had been pounded for six runs in less than two innings by the Red Sox on April 15, retired 12 consecutive batters at one point before surrendering a run in the sixth.

With Ellis nursing a 2-1 lead, Mike Hargrove ripped an eighth-inning double to drive in Jim Sundberg and Bert Campaneris and chase starter Dennis Eckersley, 0-1.

The victory was the sixth in the last seven games for the hot Rangers, who got off to a 2-9 start this season. The loss was the fourth in the last five games for the Red Sox, who came into the game hitting .291 as a team.

Twins' Zahn five hits Yanks

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota's Geoff Zahn fired a five-hitter Saturday to outduel Dick Tidrow as the Twins defeated the New York Yankees 3-1.

Zahn, 2-0, gave up two infield singles in the first inning but then retired 19 straight batters before the Yankees bunched three hits in the eighth to score their only run.

Tidrow allowed just seven hits in eight innings and suffered his second loss in three decisions.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the first when Roy Smalley doubled, took third on a sacrifice and scored when Dan Ford grounded out.

The Twins made it 3-0 in the seventh on a run-scoring single by Hosken Powell and an RBI double by Bob Randall.

Zahn struck out five and walked none in his second complete game of the year. Singles by Cliff Johnson and Paul Blair and a double by Bucky Dent accounted for the Yankees' only run.

Guerrero's sparks Oakland

OAKLAND (AP) — Mario Guerrero drove in four runs with a pair of singles to lead the Oakland A's to a 5-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

Pete Broberg, 3-0, got the victory with relief help from Bob Lacey in the ninth. Broberg allowed six hits, three of them by Buddy Bell, who raised his average to .425, before Lacey came on to get the final two outs.

Oakland protected its lead in the American League West by scoring early off Indians starter Wayne Garland, 2-3, who allowed five runs in 12-3 innings. He was relieved by David Clyde, who worked 41-3 scoreless innings in his first appearance for Cleveland.

Oakland took a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Dwayne Murphy walked, Mitchell Page doubled and Guerrero drove them home with a single to center. In the second, Gary Alexander had an RBI single before Guerrero drove in two more runs with a single to left.

Bell, who doubled in the first, scored Cleveland's only run when he tripled to right center in the fourth and came home on Andre Thornton's sacrifice fly.

Orioles crown Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Lee May's tie-breaking home run triggered a three-run inning that carried the Baltimore Orioles to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday night.

May's homer was his fourth of the season and the 1,700th base hit of his career. The blast hit the upper deck facade in left field and snapped a 2-2 tie.

Carlos Lopez and Doug DeCinces followed with singles. Lopez scored on an infield out and DeCinces on a single by Billy Smith.

Baltimore starter Jim Palmer boosted his record to 3-1 and has a 20-8 lifetime mark against the White Sox but needed seventh-inning help from Don Stanhouse.

Palmer gave up two runs in the first inning on RBI singles by Zobby Bonds and Lamar Johnson. The Sox loaded the bases with two out in the seventh before Stanhouse retired Bob Molinaro on a grounder. He went on to pick up his fifth save of the season.

The Orioles reached loser Ken Kravec, 1-3, for a run in the third on a walk and a run-scoring double by Mark Belanger and tied it in the fifth when Smith doubled, moved to third on an error and scored on a sacrifice fly by Belanger.

Royals pound Brewers

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Hal McRae drove in three runs and speedy Willie Wilson scored four times as the Kansas City Royals pounded the Milwaukee Brewers 11-2, Saturday night after losing all-star third baseman George Brett as a result of a shoulder injury.

The 1976 American League batting champion was hurt in the bottom of the first inning when he crashed into Milwaukee shortstop Tim Nordbrook at second in an attempt to break up a double play.

With one run already across in the Royals' first, McRae scored on a throwing error by Nordbrook. John Wathan's doubled made it 3-1.

Switzer denies report that he plans to resign

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma University football Coach Barry Switzer has issued an emphatic denial of out-of-state published reports he is going to resign.

During halftime at Saturday's alumni-varsity game, reporters asked Switzer about an article in a Dallas newspaper concerning his possible resignation.

"No, I am not resigning!" he said. "There's no truth to that. I have no reason why a rumor like that would get started. It probably got started in some coffee shop just like the rest of them."

The Dallas newspaper report said there have been rumors all of the assistant coaches at OU were going to quit. It quoted an Austin, Texas, television station as saying a former OU player claims Switzer is going to resign.

Assistant coaches Larry Lacewell, Jerry Pettibone and Gene Hochevar have resigned recently, but all three

Rose only 4 hits short of coveted 3,000 goal

NEW YORK (AP) — "I won't allow him to do it here," said Cincinnati Reds Manager Sparky Anderson. "If he gets three hits tomorrow, I'll yank him."

Anderson was talking about Pete Rose, who collected three home runs and two singles in six times at bat Saturday against the New York Mets to move within four of the career 3000-hit total, an accomplishment reached by only 12 major leaguers.

The Reds rapped out 20 hits and six homers in handing the Mets their sixth straight loss, 14-7.

"Pete is one of the greatest players of all time," said Anderson, who maintained that he would pull Rose Sunday even if his team was losing. "He was born and bred in Cincinnati and I want him to do it before the hometown fans."

"WE BEGIN an eight-game homestand Monday night and it would be great if he could do it on national television. This takes precedence over anything."

Rose, 37, enjoying his first three-homer day in his 16 years in the majors, said, "I'd hate to come out if we're down by four or five runs, but Sparky's the boss. I'm not going to argue with him."

Of the approaching milestone, Rose said, "Look, I know I'm going to do it. But I'm not just going to get four hits and retire. I'm going to get 170 more hits this year and I'm coming back next year and who knows how many years."

TRAILING 6-1 in the nationally televised game, Cesar Geronimo, Pirates rip Giants, 6-2.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Rookie Don Robinson stopped San Francisco on five hits and Mario Mendoza hit his first home run in three years in the major leagues to pace the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-2 victory over the Giants Saturday.

Robinson, pitching in his third game in the majors, struck out five and didn't give up a base on balls.

The Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Bill Robinson singled, moved to third on John Milner's double and scored on Phil Garner's single. They got two more runs in the third when Omar Moreno walked,

Rose, and Ken Griffey each hit solo homers off Mets starter Nino Espinosa in the fourth inning. Dan Driessen had delivered the Reds' first run with a homer in the second.

The Reds rallied for five runs in the fifth off loser Mardie Cornejo, 3-2, to take the lead for good. Geronimo's two-run double tied it at 6-6 and Don Werner's single drove in Geronimo with the go-ahead run.

Rose, who extended his hitting streak to 10 games and is attempting to become the 13th major leaguer to reach 3,000 hits, then homered to give the Reds a 9-6 lead. Rose's home runs were his first of the season.

Pedro Borbon, 2-0, one of four Cincinnati pitchers, got the victory.

Dave Parker tripled and Bill Robinson singled.

Mendoza, who replaced Frank Taveras at shortstop after Taveras injured a finger in the first inning, connected on the first pitch as he led off the fifth and sent it over the left field wall for a 4-0 lead.

Mendoza led off the seventh with a single. Moreno walked, Parker singled Mendoza home and Moreno scored on a sacrifice fly by Rennie Stennett to make it 6-0.

Mike Ivie and Mike Sadek singled to open the eighth inning for the Giants and both scored on Bill Madlock's two-out double.

two hits before leaving the game for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning.

Keith Hernandez singled to open the seventh for St. Louis and moved to second on a wild pitch by Hooton. Ted Simmons' grounder moved Hernandez to third, and after Hooton intentionally walked Jerry Morales, Reitz delivered his winning fly ball to center field.

Rasmussen set down the first 10 Los Angeles batters before Bill Russell singled with one out in the fourth.

The defeat halted a five-game winning streak for the Dodgers and was only their second loss in the last nine games.

Rasmussen 4 hits LA Dodgers

ST. LOUIS (P) — Eric Rasmussen pitched a four-hitter and Ken Reitz delivered the only run of the game with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning as the St. Louis Cardinals edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0 Saturday night, marking a successful debut for Cards Manager Ken Boyer.

St. Louis Manager Vern Rapp was fire earlier this week and Jack Krol had been handling the club on an interim basis before Boyer, former Cardinals third baseman, took over Saturday night.

Rasmussen, 2-2, beat Burt Hooton, 1-3, of Los Angeles, who allowed just

Braves blank Cubs, 5-0

ATLANTA (AP) — Hot-hitting Jeff Burroughs drilled three hits and veteran knuckleballer Phil Niekro added a two-run single in a five-run third inning to power the Atlanta Braves to a 5-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday night.

Niekro, 2-4, handcuffed the Cubs on six hits, struck out five and walked two.

Burroughs, who leads the National League with a .413 batting average, has 14 hits in his last 17 times at bat over the last six games and also has drawn eight walks.

Stanton, behind the running of Mitch Elmore, Marvin Jones, Lewis Henry and Todd Smith, won the mile relay with a 3:25.7 to earn a state berth in Austin in two weeks. Smith just missed a berth in the 440 with a third place 49.9.

Neither Andrews or Lamesa won any state berths in the AAA run.

Phillies spank Padres, 7-2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Garry Maddox, Bob Boone and Bake McBride drove in two runs each to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 7-2 victory over the San Diego Padres Saturday night.

The Phillies jumped on Padres starter Dave Friesleben, 0-3-4 for three runs in the first. Maddox' broken-bat base hit with the bases loaded scored Larry Bowa, who had tripled into the right field corner, and Mike Schmidt, who had drawn a walk. Richie Hebner, who had been walked intentionally, scored from second on Boone's single to left.

The Phillies added four more runs in the fifth to help Jim Lonborg raise his record to 2-2.

Greg Luzinski and Maddox singled and Boone brought Luzinski home with a double to right. After second baseman Jim Morrison was walked intentionally to load the bases, reliever Dan Spillner walked Lonborg to force a run. McBride then stroked a two-run single to center.

Oh hits 10th homer

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese home run king Sadaharu Oh of Ymiuri homered in a losing cause as the Yakult Swallows beat the Giants 5-3 Friday. The round-tripper was Oh's 10th of the season.

Andujar stops Expos on 3 hits

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Joaquin Andujar pitched no-hit ball for 51-3 innings Saturday night and finished with a three-hitter as the Astros beat the Montreal Expos 3-1.

Andujar, 2-2, walked three batters in the first five innings but did not yield a hit until Dave Cash belted a line drive double to left-center with one out in the sixth. Andre Dawson followed with a single over shortstop Jimmy Sexton's head to score Cash.

Ellis Valentine's ninth-inning single was the only other hit off Andujar.

The Astros provided Andujar with a

3-0 lead on Bob Watson's two-run homer in the first and Jose Cruz' RBI double to left in the third inning.

Sexton was inserted in the starting lineup at the last minute when Roger Metzger was hospitalized suffering from headaches. Then, in the third inning, Astros coach Tony Patechco was taken to a hospital for X rays after he was hit in the face by a foul ball hit by Montreal starting pitcher Steve Rogers.

Rogers, lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth, dropped to 2-3 with the loss.

Ector, Wellington claim track crowns

ODESSA — Odessa Ector and Wellington captured team title here Saturday in the AAA-A boys track meet at W. T. Barrett Stadium.

Ector posted 100 points to win the AAA title while Lubbock Estacado was a distant second with 76 points. It was much closer in the Class A run with Wellington edging Stanton, 45-38.

Stanton, behind the running of Mitch Elmore, Marvin Jones, Lewis Henry and Todd Smith, won the mile relay with a 3:25.7 to earn a state berth in Austin in two weeks. Smith just missed a berth in the 440 with a third place 49.9.

Toronto eliminates Islanders

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Lanny McDonald's goal at 4:13 of overtime Saturday night gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-1 victory over the New York Islanders and sent the Maple Leafs into the National Hockey League semifinal playoffs against the Montreal Canadiens.

Ian Turnbull passed into the New York zone, then McDonald sneaked the puck away from New York's Clark Gillies and lifted a 20-foot shot over goalie Glenn Resch and gave the Maple Leafs the deciding seventh game of the fiercely fought best-of-seven series. It was the third consecutive overtime at Nassau Coliseum, but the Islanders had won the other two.

New York had an excellent chance to win the game just 2:15 into the extra session when right wing Billy Harris took the puck away from Toronto defenseman Brian Glennie and had an uncontested 15-foot shot at goalie Mike Palmateer.

WEST TEXAS HUNTING AND FISHING

Fishing weekend leaves little time for old feedbag

BY JON CHASE

I got home last Sunday from one of those weekend excursions where going back to work is a way to get some rest. Last Friday, Anne and Fred Schwiening, my wife and I packed up all the kids, our two dogs and headed out towing a jeep towards Fred's old home place on the Llano River.

hours reserved for sleeping and trying on the feed bag. After an agonizing session with a minnow seine, we had enough perch and red horse minnows to set out a trotline and the stage was set for a highly successful and equally exhausting trip.

FRED FIGURES an old boy can do all the relaxing he wants in Midland and doesn't think the Llano River is at all suited for taking it easy. Sunday afternoon after the dust had settled and I was feeling like a marathon runner on his way up "Heartbreak Hill", I stopped to reflect on what had been one of the most exhausting and, at the same time, enjoyable trips I had ever taken.

We averaged about four hours of sleep a night and had done more fishing and hunting than you would normally do in 10 outings. With the hunting our wives did we had loaded up with channel cats, yellow cats, bass, perch, squirrels and cottontails. Our largest yellow cat weighed eight pounds and we had enough game to feed a small army.

Fred is a man after my own heart in that he takes his hunting and fishing seriously, but next time I go on one of these non-stop affairs, I'm going to take along my track shoes.

THE HIGH Sky Bass Club represented Midland in fine fashion by finishing third in the Regional Bass tournament on Twin Buttes last weekend and qualified for the state tournament to be held on Lake Palestine later in the year.

It sounds like the fishing is really beginning to pick up on area lakes from the reports I have been getting. I talked to Jim Binns of Midland and he was on Lake Spence this past weekend with his father-in-law, Dan Mobley, Roswell, N.M. Jim said that they caught 20 pounds of black bass

Saturday on an ultra light spinning outfit.

The fish hit a "stump bumper" and before it was all said and done had managed to strip the gears on his spinning reel. A striped bass is quite a handful on heavy tackle and I can imagine the excitement one could create on ultra-light tackle.

Jim said that the bass they caught didn't have any signs of having been on the spawning beds and that their eggs were still real firm. It sounds like there is going to be a belated spawn, which should be good news for those of you who haven't been able to get in on the spring fishing yet.

I received reports from as far away as Falcon Lake this past week and when the wind wasn't making things unbearable, it seems that just about everyone was catching fish. As I keep saying, this is the magic time of the year when it comes to fishing and, if at all possible, you should try to get on the lake before the dog days of summer hit.

The really good fishing will taper off during the hot summer months and won't pick up until late September. Keep the calls and letters coming and I will see you wherever the water is.

Who's worried about 76ers?

By The Associated Press

The Washington Bullets have fought their way out of the frying pan. Now they head directly into the fire.

The Bullets, with reserve guards Larry Wright and Charlie Johnson combining for 30 points, edged the San Antonio Spurs 103-100 Friday night to win their National Basketball Association quarter-final playoff series 4-2.

But the Bullets won't get very long to enjoy their victory. They must return to action today for the opener of the Eastern Conference championship series against the rugged Philadelphia 76ers, Philadelphia, which will have the home-court advantage for the first two games, swept the New York Knicks in four straight in its quarter-final.

"Let me savor this for awhile," pleaded Washington Coach Dick Motta after his club eliminated the Central Division champion Spurs.

THEN, REMEMBERING that the alternative to playing Philadelphia would have been playing a seventh game at San Antonio, he added: "I'd play Philadelphia tonight if necessary. I just didn't want to go back to San Antonio."

Meanwhile, in the Western Conference, the Denver Nuggets blew a chance to wrap up their quarter-final series at home when they bowed to the Milwaukee Bucks 117-112. The series now shifts to Milwaukee for Game 6 on today with Denver leading 3-2.

The Seattle SuperSonics lead the defending champion Portland Trail Blazers 3-1 in the other quarter-final series, which resumes today in Seattle.

"We know full well we have a big task ahead of us," said Motta. "We weren't supposed to do anything because of all our injuries, but we're not through yet. We have to play a different type of ball game against Philadelphia. They have a deeper bench and are more physical — and they have Dr. J (Julius Erving)."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, whose club has had a full week of rest since eliminating the Knicks, expects a tough series.

"They've been in the playoffs forever," he said, noting that this is Washington's 10th straight year in postseason play. "Playoff experience is something you just can't measure."

Veterans like Elvin Hayes and Wes Unseld and Bobby Dandridge are used to the playoffs.

Johnson scored 14 of his 20 points in the second quarter to help Washington to a 58-52 halftime lead. Wright got 8 of his 10 points in the final quarter.

Hayes also had 14 rebounds while Wes Unseld had 16 rebounds and 12 assists.

Reserve forward Mark Olerberding led San Antonio with 24 points and NBA-scoring champion George Gervin had 23. Gervin played with a nameless San Antonio jersey, No. 33 instead of his normal No. 44, and Mike Gale wore a Washington jersey turned inside out because some of the San Antonio luggage was lost en route.

"WE CAN'T complain," said a dejected San Antonio Coach Doug Moe. "When you get beat because you can't put the ball in the hole, you can't say a thing."

"The ball just wasn't falling for us," offered Gervin. "We were taking good shots, playing super basketball and had it going ... and the lights went out."

Milwaukee guard Brian Winters couldn't put the ball in the hole in the first half, scoring only 2 points. But he tallied 21 in the second half to help the Bucks upset Denver as Milwaukee scored 39 points in the fourth quarter.

"Brian Winters is the type of player who's going to get his points — it was just a matter of time," said Milwaukee rookie forward Marques Johnson, who led all scorers with 34 points.

Denver led most of the way, a slam dunk by David Thompson stretching the margin to 10 points early in the final period. Milwaukee ran off 9 straight points to pull to within 94-93 with 6:43 left. After a basket by Thompson, Winters hit two field goals and Johnson added one to give the Bucks a 100-96 advantage.

DENVER TWICE drew even before a three-point play by center John Gianelli gave the Bucks the lead to stay at 107-104 with 2:13 left.

"Johnson was great and Winters was tough in some crucial situations for them," said Nuggets Coach Larry Brown. "I thought their team showed a lot of character in coming back."

Denver was paced by Bobby Jones with 25 points and Thompson with 23.

Revenues affected

The effects of curtailed deliveries to oil companies is having a substantial effect on the operating revenues of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Revenues of $1,555,286 were only $11,000 above a year ago despite adjusted rates to the oil companies. Delivery of water had dropped off by 313,000,000 gallons for the period.

Revenue from the sale of 10 percent more water to the cities was up $93,000, but those from sale of 20 percent less to the oil companies was down by $119,000. During the first quarter cities took 2,360,000,000 gallons and oil and industrial users 1,215,000,000.

As of Nov. 1, 1977, CRMWD reduced the amount of surface water to oil companies by one-half as a conservation measure to preserve the reserves in Lake J. B. Thomas. Directors have given notice that if there is not a sizeable runoff in the lake prior to Monday, then all deliveries from the lake to oil companies will be suspended, a development which likely would pull revenues below a year ago.

Iowa firm promoting new type life policy

By MICHAEL W. MILLICAN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Innovation is stirring in the insurance industry in the form of a new type of life policy successfully being promoted by a company based in Iowa.

Bankers Life of Des Moines predicts that within a few years its idea will transform the somewhat stodgy business of writing life policies. The new idea, which Bankers Life didn't conceive but is the first major company to push aggressively, is called adjustable life insurance.

It is designed to provide customers with flexibility so that it no longer is necessary for them to project how much coverage they will need many years in the future and how much they will be able to pay for it.

With it, a person can buy a relatively inexpensive term life policy when he's just starting out; increase the premium and face amount when he marries and has a family; switch it to whole life and pay higher premiums when his career is established; cut back the amount of coverage and monthly cost if he loses his job and increase them when he lands a new one.

Before adjustable life, most of those changes in that person's original insurance plan would have required purchase of a new policy. And 55 percent of the first year's cost of a whole life policy goes to the agent as a commission, 35 percent if it's a term policy.

"Buying a new policy and dropping an old one is extremely expensive because of the commissions. But with adjustable life you pay a commission only on the amount by which you increase the face amount," said C.L. Trowbridge, senior vice president and chief actuary of Bankers Life and the primary architect of the new policy.

Bankers Life has been offering the policy for more than a year and initial results suggest it will catch on, said Trowbridge. Last year 30 percent of the 80,000 life policies the company wrote were adjustable life.

Minnesota Mutual, a much smaller company, began experimenting with the new type of policy in 1971 and has been offering it on a full scale basis for more than two years — but without the level of promotion Bankers Life is giving it.

Elsewhere in the business world this past week:

—The U.S. trade deficit shrank to $2.8 billion in March from February's record level of $4.5 billion, largely because less oil was imported. Last year, the nation's record $26.7 billion deficit averaged $2.2 billion a month. Economists continue to be concerned about the level of the deficits.

—The government moved against inflation by tightening short-term interest rates to cool the economy. Several major banks followed by raising their prime rate, the interest they charge on large corporate loans, from 8 to 8 1/2 percent.

—Meanwhile, the Labor Department reported that the consumer price index rose 0.8 percent in March, an annual inflation rate of about 10 percent.

—Stock prices continued their climb amid heavy trading on Wall Street. It was the fourth consecutive week of higher stock prices.

BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Texas' industrial expansion following last year's trend

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Industrial expansion in Texas during the first quarter of this year shows "no particular departure from last year's trends," reports the Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas at Austin.

Fifty-five new plants were announced for the January-March period, compared to 55 for the same period in 1977, while expansions came to 65, an increase over the 53 for the comparable 1977 period.

New plants and expansions continued to be located predominantly within the 25 Texas standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSAs), with 80 percent of the total.

Seventy percent of the total, in fact, was within the Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Longview, Austin and San Antonio SMSAs. Non-metropolitan communities recorded 22 new or expanded plants, compared to 25 for the same period a year earlier.

Of the 20 standard industrial classification groups for manufacturing plants, significant gains were noted in two groups: machinery other than electrical, and electronic machinery, with 11 (compared to five).

Chemicals, fabricated metal products, transportation equipment and apparel and related products continued active.

The State Securities Board has approved publication of proposed rules concerning exemptions for municipal revenue bonds and parent-subsidiary transactions, and revision of security registration and fairness and dealer registration standards.

Some additional changes, which are being considered by a State Bar panel, also are under study, and will be reviewed at some future date.

Board officials note there is "considerable interest" in the exemption sections among the securities industry, and describe the changes as "fairly complex and sensitive."

Texas ports chalked up record export-import tonnages last year, over 200 million tons, and indications are that 1978 may be moving towards another record.

Houston, naturally, topped the list, with over 100 million tons (the first time that port has hit that mark), but Brownsville appears to be benefiting greatly from increasing trade with Mexico, due to discovery of new, large crude oil reserves there.

Predictions are for a total 270 million tons moving through Texas ports by 1990, with foreign commerce making up some 70 percent of that.

And if the efforts to construct a deepwater port are successful, that total would likely be considerably higher.

Efforts continue by the Texas Real Estate Commission and State Bar to adopt forms for handling real estate sales, but it appears nothing will be finally decided until the end of the year or early 1979.

The commission met this month to consider the work of a joint lawyer-real estate broker committee, and reported after its "emergency session" it's still waiting for action by the board of directors of the State Bar.

Any final action is still six to eight months away, TREC reports.

Savings and loan associations in Federal Home Loan Bank Board District 9, which includes Texas, New Mexico, Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, made nearly $1 billion in loans in March, exceeding the record set last March by some $150 million.

Loans for the first quarter totaled $2.5 billion, up from $2 billion for the first quarter of 1977.

Savings added in March came to $6.75 million, including $3.75 million from interest credited to accounts.

Savings inflows for the first quarter came to $9.7 million down from the record $1.2 billion recorded for the first quarter of 1976.

business beatitudes

by Bill Beattie

We must learn to depend upon ourselves by doing things in accordance with our own way of thinking. We make our judgment trustworthy by trusting it. We must cultivate regular periods of silence and meditation. The best time to build judgment is in solitude, when we can think out things for ourselves without being interrupted.

To be alone and quiet for a brief period each day is an experiment worth trying. The fast pace of living today may make it difficult to carry this out, but most of us could do it if we tried. At any rate, we should moderate the pace at which we are living. If we remain in high gear, at top pressure, we are bound to suffer the consequence in our performance.

Confucius says, "The superior man will watch over himself when he is alone. He examines his heart that there may be nothing wrong there, and that he may have no cause for dissatisfaction with himself."

There is no big man who has never felt small. Some men never feel small; but these are in the minority. Ramsay MacDonald tells us, "The educated man is a man with certain subtle, spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, rational and sane in their fullest meaning in all the affairs of life."

Most of the great things that have come about in science, religion, medicine, etc. have taken place not in a crowd or during a social event, but often when people were alone and not afraid to be lonely. It would do the world good if everyone of us would compel ourselves occasionally to be absolutely alone. Most of the world's progress has come out of suchaloneness.

There is no weaker person than he who cannot bear to be alone. There is no stronger person than the one who finds his powers in solitude.

Conversation enriches the understanding, but SOLITUDE is the school of genius.

Following are excerpts of an interview by George Esper, one of the AP correspondents who covered the war.

Q. What are some of your personal thoughts on the third anniversary of the fall of Saigon?

A. Needless to say, like any of us who served over there trying to carry out our national policy, we're saddened by the result. After all, we expended a great deal in resources and lives over there to achieve what was heralded, certainly at the outset, as a noble and a very idealistic objective. I think, personified by Mr. Kennedy in his inaugural address. Our system wasn't able to sustain the commitment and one can make a case that the commitment shouldn't have been made in the first place. And if one could have anticipated the outcome, we would have not committed ourselves in the first place. But the lessons to be learned are numerous.

Q. Does Vietnam still haunt you in any way?

A. The military were given a job to do by political authority and we put our heart and soul into it. We did our best. Our best was not good enough. However, I would say parenthetically that although we lost the war, we didn't lose a single battle above company level. So one can say that militarily we were successful. In the final analysis, politically we were not successful. I'm terribly disappointed that our country failed to do what it set out to do. But one has to be philosophical about these things. One has to be circumspect in reviewing history. And if one has done the best that one knew how in carrying out what one is told or assumed was national policy, that's about the best you can do. And I would say one's conscience is bolstered by that realization.

Q. Another subject you're familiar with: General Kinnard's survey that more than half of the American commanders said the war shouldn't have been fought with American troops.

A. I'm quite familiar with that survey. Of course, you have to realize when the survey was made everybody knew that it had been lost because the Case-Church amendment had been passed to get the full appropriation act I mean anybody who was a student of the situation, and we have to assume the generals were at the time the survey was taken, realized that we as a nation were going to fail in carrying out what we had intended to do, which was our national policy.

Q. Are you doing a lot of writing and lecturing on the war today?

A. I'm not carrying on any campaign and I'm not promoting the war.

A. In the final analysis, we had the power but we didn't have the will.

Q. Are you doing a lot of writing and lecturing on the war today?

A. I'm not carrying on any campaign and I'm not promoting the war.

Q. Were the results of the war worth the effort, considering casualties, disruption of the U.S. political scene and side effects on U.S. society and the U.S. military?

A. One gains very little from defeat and this is the question of the American defeat. Certainly, in hindsight, what we expended to carry out this highly idealistic, and I would say moralistic, commitment went for naught. If our crystal ball — the crystal ball of the policymakers, the political authority — could have foreseen this development, their judgment would have been, well, certainly it's not worth it. So it's not logical that our policy would have been considerably different.

Unfortunately, since we didn't act that way, our system didn't respond that way. Our estimate of the future was, as always, very hazy. We thought that we could influence the situation and that we could continue to be the champions of liberty, that we could resist the aggressive actions by a belligerent, aggressive power.

Q. Do you have any regrets on the Vietnam War personally?

A. I certainly regret that we did not succeed. There's no satisfaction in failure. But here again, I'm proud of the way the military conducted themselves. They did their job, as they were told to do it. But they did not lose the war. The war was lost politically.

Q. Could the war have been won?

A. I'm not sure. It's a question of whether we had the will to win it.

Real Estate Today

Owner, DON HARVEY REALTORS

WHY A TITLE SEARCH?

A home is a peculiar kind of a purchase. Although you may be the only purchaser involved, others may also claim rights in the property.

For example, there may be an easement to restrict the use of your land. The seller may not have paid his taxes. A previously undisclosed heir of a former owner may appear and claim a share of the value. These are a few of the problems that can and do occur.

Your deed to the property does not eliminate claims that others may have. It simply transfers the seller's right of ownership to you.

But there are ways to protect yourself from these lurking dangers. A title search of public records will check for possible claims against the real estate. But for protection against hidden land title problems that even the most thorough search will not reveal — the answer is title insurance.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY realtors, 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! Come in for your free copy of "Homes for Living" magazine.

Max Emfinger, Jaycee program-events chairman, guides Devin Phiffer in the football kick event.

Skipping rope seems to interest these Superkids. Back row competitors are Tommy Reneau and Teri Lynn Carpenter. In the foreground is an unidentified girl athlete.

City youths...

Midland youths May 13 will have a chance to become "Superkids" and to meet another superkid, Thomas Henderson, star linebacker of the Dallas Cowboys, Super Bowl champions.

Superkids is a new state Jaycee project with the motto, "Superkids win because they care—help fight lung disease!" Proceeds of the event, which will be held in Midland Memorial Stadium, will go to the American Lung Association of Texas.

The Tall City competition is being sponsored by the Midland Jaycees. Henderson, whose nickname is Hollywood because of his aspirations of becoming a movie star in the off season and also after he quits playing pro football, will participate in the events and sign autographs at the end of the contest.

Youths 6 to 12 years of age are eligible to enter in any of the eight events which will include baseball throw, football kick, 50 yard dash, 100 yard dash, plastic disk throw, sack race, jump rope and an obstacle course.

Each event will be divided into seven age groups with boys and girls competing against each other. To enter, they must complete registration and sponsorship forms and have signed permission from their parents or guardian.

Each participant must have a sponsor who can pledge any amount, beginning with a penny, they wish for each point the child accumulates during the day. A minimum of 50 points will be won by each child just for entering contest. Points will be given for each event entered with more going to the top ten places. More than one sponsor can be obtained.

Top winners in each event will receive ribbons, while decathlon winners in each of the seven age groups will receive trophies. The grand prize will be two bicycles presented to the boy and girl who collect the most from sponsors based on their point total for the day's activities.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. and the events will get underway at 10 a.m. Preregistration and sponsorship forms can be obtained from all Midland Dairy Queens and YMCAs, the Boys' Club and Burger Chef. A registration form appears on Page 2A of today's Reporter-Telegram.

The grand champion of all seven age groups will be presented a trophy by Henderson and also will get to eat dinner that night with the star football player, who has already played a part in the movie Semi-Tough. The goal of the American Lung Association of Texas is the prevention and control of lung diseases through involvement in public and private schools by distributing literature and catalogs listing available audio-visual materials and equipment.

Most young people are bursting with energy and many times this entering contest. Points will be given for each event entered with more young people a chance to excel in sports as well as an opportunity to help achieve the goal of the lung association.

According to the association, a person takes a breath every three seconds and if they do it automatically, they're lucky because, for many people, being able to breathe easily is a real effort. These people suffer from lung diseases such as emphysema, asthma and chronic bronchitis. The lung association, through Superkids competition, is attempting to do something about this through programs to fight these crippling diseases that affect both children and adults.

The schedule for the first Superkids event conducted by the Midland Jaycees is as follows:

7:30 a.m.—Registration at Memorial Stadium. Each Superkid will, upon registering, check in with their age group poster-lady-scorekeeper to get his or her name on the official scoring poster. After getting each name entered on scoring poster, each Superkid will go to assigned area in stands to wait for the Superkids events to begin.

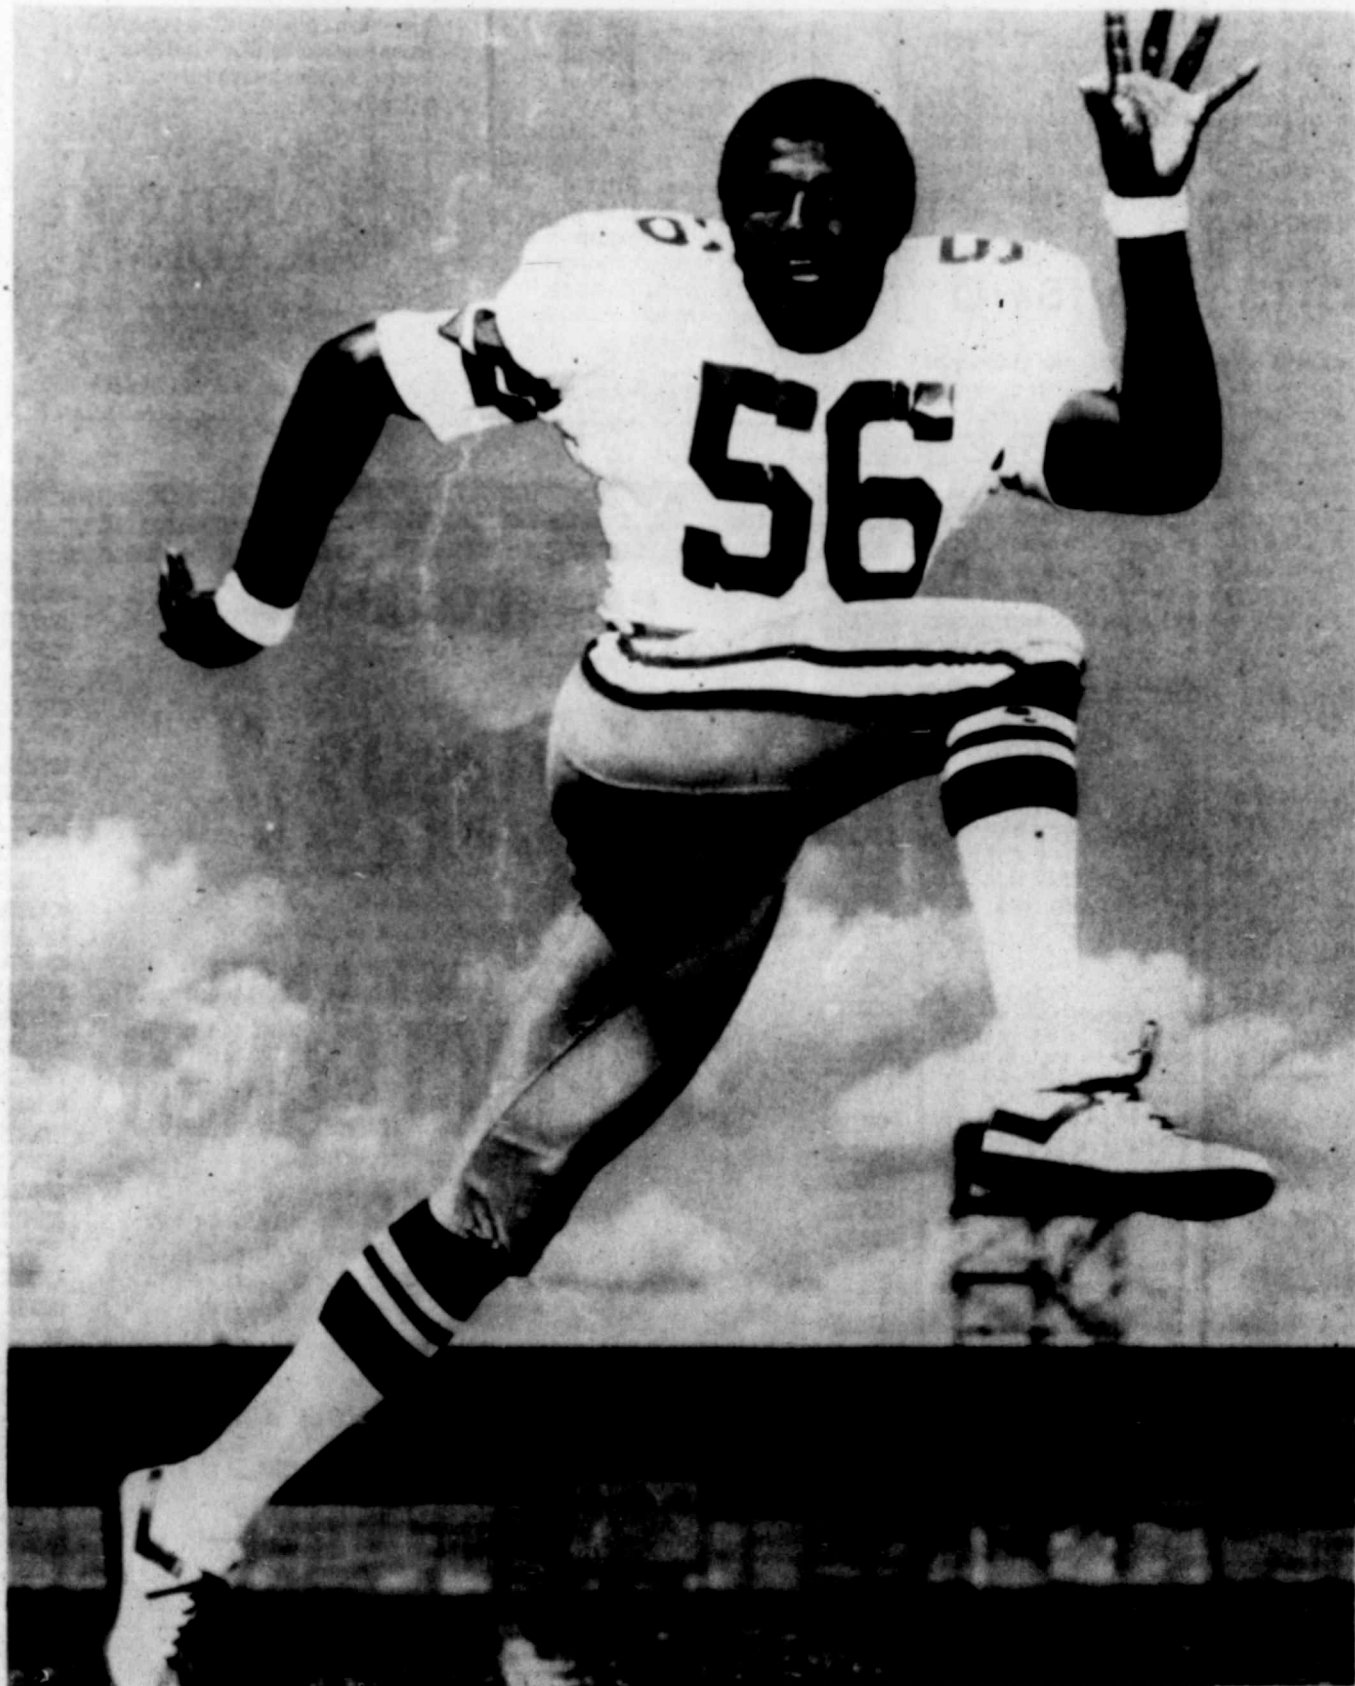

8 a.m.—Henderson arrives at Midland Air Terminal.

8:30 a.m.—Henderson arrives at Memorial Stadium.

10 a.m.—First event for all age groups.

10:30 a.m.—Second event for all age groups.
11 a.m.—Third event for all age groups.
11:30 a.m.—Fourth event for all age groups.
Noon—Each kid will assemble back to original assigned area to eat lunch, which will be eaten in the assigned area in the stands for each age group.
1 p.m.—Fifth event for all age groups.
1:30 p.m.—Sixth event for all age groups.
2 p.m.—Seventh event for all age groups.
2:30 p.m.—Eighth and final event for all age groups.
3:15 p.m.—Awards ceremonies with Henderson.
4:15 p.m.—First Superkids officially completed.
4:30 p.m.—Thomas Henderson autograph signing party at Burger Chef on Big Spring Street.
5:45 p.m.—Superkids overall age group champions will have dinner with Henderson at a place to be decided later.

Thomas Henderson, linebacker for the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys, will be in the Tall City May 13 for the Midland Jaycees' Super Kids event at Memorial Stadium at 8:30 a.m. and will sign autographs at 4:30 p.m. the same day.

for the sack race event. Looking on from the back row are Jaycees Wayne Green, Max Reneau and Alan Barnett.

A person takes a breath every three seconds... For many people, being able to breathe easily is a real effort. The lung association, through Superkids competition, is attempting to do something about this.

DEAR ABBY

Son shatters parents' faith in prayer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have long been faithful readers of your column, and as I have no one to turn to in my hour of despair, I must talk to someone.

How does one go on when his faith in prayer is shattered and the bottom has fallen out of everything? I feel as if my life is over and even my prayers are useless now.

We adopted a little boy when he was 8 days old. We loved that child more than our own flesh and blood. We prayed for him constantly. Yet, between the ages of 14 and 19 he went from skipping school to robbery and, now, to rape!

Our hearts are broken. Our son was raised in a good Christian home. We went to church every Sunday and always tried to set a good example. We never had tobacco or liquor in the house.

Where have our prayers gone? We cannot understand it. We are numb, sick and brokenhearted. God bless you if you can help us.—HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: You speak of prayer as though it were the premium you paid for insurance against all ills and evils. It is not. Prayer is simply "a talk" with one's God. No amount of praying will protect another, in this case your adopted son, from the consequences of his own actions. Each man must do his own praying, just as each man must accept the consequences of his own behavior.

I don't know where your son went wrong. But your faith in prayer should not have been shattered because he did.

DEAR ABBY: I work and make a pretty good salary. The guy I go with also works, and his take-home is twice what mine is, but he never seems to have any money. He's always asking me for money for gas, eating out and movies.

If he'd ask me for a regular "loan" and then pay me back, I wouldn't mind, but he always says he left his wallet in his other pants. He's a neat guy otherwise. What should I do?—DEBBIE in your other head. Lend him bus fare and tell him to go home and get his wallet.

DEAR DEBBIE: If you give him any more money, you left your brains

DEAR ABBY: My mother hasn't been to see a doctor in years, but she's always complaining about headaches, backaches, dizziness or a feeling of weakness.

She buys every kind of painkiller she can get without a prescription, and if the directions say, "take two," she takes four. She has even taken pills that were prescribed for someone else. (I've heard her ask friends and relatives if they have any pills for pain, and could she have a few.)

How can I get her to quit taking so many pills? She's not dumb. She's a college graduate. She's really a wonderful woman, and I'd like to have her around for a few more years.—LOVING DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Tell your mother that a pain is nature's way of telling her that something is wrong with the equipment. To suppress the pain and ignore the warning, instead of going to a physician to find out what's wrong, is foolish and dangerous.

Good diet habits advised

COLLEGE STATION—Poor nutrition practices—excess calorie consumption and excess alcohol (also high in calories)—lead to overweight and obesity in more than 40 percent of the U.S. population, says a foods and nutrition specialist.

For this reason, the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs issued its second edition of Dietary Goals for the U.S. with the new goal "to avoid overweight, decrease energy intake and increase energy expenditure," Mrs. Sweeten explains.

Mrs. Sweeten is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

By eating a balanced diet based on a selection of lower-calorie foods from the four food groups, a person could strive to meet these goals with changes in food selection and preparation.

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO HAVE A CHIMNEY FIRE?

It's no fun. If it doesn't burn the house down, it will probably wreck your chimney and scare you half to death. Here's how it happens.

Begin with one dirty chimney — let's say a fireplace not cleaned for a couple of years. The soot lining the chimney flue is saturated with flammable stuff called creosote. (More detail on creosote is available in any dictionary.) It doesn't take much to ignite creosote — a newspaper fire sending flames up to the damper is enough.

Once kindled, creosote burns with joyous abandon. In a matter of seconds the fire spreads up through the flue creating a draft that only helps things along. At this point your average chimney fire begins to roar and howl, sending the occupants of the house running for cover.

If you run, you'll be treated to a real fire works show. As the creosote fire builds and intensifies the heat melts the mortar between the brick. The red-hot mortar actually drips into the flue, only to be caught up in the tremendous up-draft, and these little fire balls shoot out the chimney and onto the roof. If you're lucky, the chimney will fall apart destroying one end of the building — if you're not, this miniature volcano can bring the whole house down.

However, if you stand your ground a chimney fire can be controlled. CALL THE FIRE DEPARTMENT, throw rock salt on the floor of the fireplace, cover the opening with a wet blanket and hope for the best. But it should be pointed out that having your chimney cleaned is a lot easier on the nerves than the rock salt and wet blanket method.

The Wine Cellar

by Sam Day

Some people think that rose wines have an undistinguished taste, that there is really nothing special about rose wines to give them their own character. This might be because they are incomplete red wines in a way. They are made from the same grapes as red wines, but the fermentation process lasts only long enough to give the wine the appropriate pink coloring. Nonetheless, roses remain appealing to many people on many occasions, and we are among them. We can recommend some fine roses that we sure you will enjoy.

Come in and talk to us at IM-PERIAL LIQUORS, 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4256 about your wine preferences, we be happy to recommend some wines we think you'll enjoy. We feature a full selection of imported and domestic wines and can suggest an appropriate selection for Mother's Day giving. Look for the friendly maitresse in our drive-up window. Hours: 10-9 Mon-Sat.

Helpful Hint:
Many full flavored red wines will improve with bottle age.

Why San Antonio Academy?

Why not some other school or why not leave well enough alone—maybe it's not that important after all.

Why? Because education is not the only thing we provide at San Antonio Academy. It is the self-discipline we instill, the values we communicate, the responsibility we give to each student we teach, which makes the difference.

Why San Antonio Academy? Because it's not enough just to have "an education"—you should learn how to handle what you know. Kindergarten through 8th grade.

I loved the one the other day about the food concessionaire at the airport who was up to here in dirty dishes all day and finally loaded them into a truck and deposited them in a cemetery so he wouldn't have to wash them.

C'mon now, admit it, we all entertain fantasies of bucking the system. Don't tell me you've never wanted to throw grease down the sink when your husband isn't looking or lock the door on the children when they're out playing.

What mother has never been tempted to look at her child's bedroom and brick it up... or take a soiled diaper to the john, toss it in and flush it.

Is there a woman alive who has never spoon-fed a toddler with more strained squash coming out than going in and has never been tempted to take and butter knife and spread the gook all over the kid's face?

I have restraint and I hate myself for it. I also have a dream. One of these Monday mornings when I climb into the car and the gas gauge registers E, I am going to quietly get out of the car, remove the labels from my clothing and throw them into a gym bag. Then I will walk to the telephone booth two blocks away and call a cab that will take me to the bus station. I will board the first bus that comes in going anywhere, change my name and open a massage parlor in another city.

Until I really pull it off... I don't deserve to have a high school named for me.

Heroes don't take it anymore

By ERMA BOMBECK

The real heroes in this world don't necessarily swing a baseball bat; whirl around space, or go to Stockholm to pick up a Nobel Prize.

To me, the real heroes are the people whose human endurance is pushed to the limits and they do something about it. The I'm-mad-as-hell-and-I'm-not-going-to-take-it-anymore syndrome.

You read about them in the newspaper. The man who got fed up with traffic on the Los Angeles freeway and one night he just got out of his car, left it to tie up 300 cars and walked into the sunset.

Or what about the postman who carried mail for 37 years and one day decided he'd had it and dumped the entire contents of his bag down the sewer?

Eagles Auxiliary selects president

The Auxiliary to the Fraternal Order of Eagles elected Kay Williams president during a business session. She and other new officers will be installed June 4.

Also elected were Clara Hay, vice president; Sarah Barnes, chaplain; Kathy Morgan, conductor; Darlene Smith, secretary; Ina Walden, treasurer; Mary Merritt, inside guard; Bert Jones, outside guard, and Freda Tyra, Sybil Clark and Nora Whetstone, trustees.

Membership awards were presented by Omera Askew to Mary Brown and Mrs. Whetstone. Elizabeth Wilson was honored for having obtained the most new members for the year.

New members initiated were Billie Welch, Bea Sears, Pat Shackelford, Millie Thornton, Judy Hearn, Martha Nickson, Margaret Murray, Lyndia Weaver, Peggy Hale and Carolyn Richard.

Plans were made for the state convention to be June 21-25 in Dallas. The Midland auxiliary's ritual team, composed of Dorothy Robertson, Mrs. Askew, Mrs. Brown, Bettie Twitchell and Mrs. Wilson, will be in competition at the convention.

Self-help cure: learn self-love

By DARLA WELLES
Copley News Service

Depressed? Distressed? Feeling ready to fly apart at the seams?

Psychiatrists Tom Rusk and Randy Read have a suggestion:

Patient, healthful. The two, who teach and work together in private practice in San Diego, Calif., and who are currently writing their second book, contend that self-help may be an excellent alternative to psychotherapy in many cases.

They allow that there are a variety of mental disorders that require professional help, but they feel that a lot of the people undergoing various types of therapy or counseling may actually be spending their time and money unwisely.

"Some people seem to think that being 'in therapy' is a solution in itself," Rusk says, "as though seeing someone once a week were a substitute for doing something about their problems."

"And, of course, it can help. But there's the danger of letting the therapy go on indefinitely or of falling into the trap of expecting someone else to give you all the answers."

Either approach can allow the patient to duck real involvement in solving his problems, the doctors say.

"Therapy can be used as a way to avoid taking action," Read says. "It's like holding your hand in a flame and then instead of responding to the discomfort by taking it away from the heat," taking a painkiller so you can keep it there.

"I think a lot of times therapy is used that way. And tranquilizers, too."

"It's amazing the resistance that people put up to actually working to solve their own problems. They seem to be looking for something like surgical anesthesia. Something that will let them go to sleep and wake up to find everything fixed. But getting mentally healthy isn't like having your appendix out. Other people can't do it for you."

Read and Rusk subscribe to the definition of mental health as not so much being without problems as being able to handle problems.

And as such they feel that it can be learned. By anyone who wants to.

The first and most absolutely essential lesson, they say, is:

Learn to love yourself. It sounds simple. But for most people, the psychiatrists say, it's not.

"If you stand people in front of a mirror and ask them to say something critical to themselves," Read says, "most will find plenty to say. But if you ask them to say something favorable, to give themselves a heartfelt compliment—that's another matter. They feel embarrassed. They can't think of anything to say."

"It seems to go back to the way in which we bring up our children in this country. We don't seem to encourage self-love. We teach that success and winning and being the best are all important, that falling short is failure and failure is bad—a fault."

"And from that people learn to treat themselves very harshly. With such self-contempt and such self-hate."

The irony of the situation, Read says, is that most people wouldn't work for a boss who treated them as critically and with as much contempt as they treat themselves.

"We're not suggesting adopting a Pollyannaish attitude of 'I'm great and I'm perfect,'" Rusk says. "But the negativity is a real problem. It has sort of an arrogance to it even though it looks humble on the surface."

"There's sort of a message there that you not only should be perfect, but that if you continue to be hard on yourself you could be perfect."

But that approach, the two say, is counterproductive.

The important thing in their view is self-acceptance, being less judgmental, learning to love yourself for what you are—not for what someone else expects you to be.

Believe it or not, it doesn't have to cost you a fortune to possess Waterford. There are pieces that are well within your reach. Yet you can be sure that whether you pay under $25 or over $2500, each piece of Waterford is blown by mouth & cut by hand with equal reverence.

Every woman can look and feel younger.

Let Pat Walker help create a new you.

S. Nelson is perhaps one of the more spectacular examples of the stunning results that may be attained through Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Salons International. Read what she has to say about the program that has benefited millions throughout the world over the past 26 years:

"I hated myself fat, and every new year I promised to really get with it and lose; however, it never happened. Finally my doctor advised me, tactfully, to stay out of his office until I decided to lose weight. He just couldn't help me. Out of desperation, not believing, I called for a courtesy treatment at Pat Walker's. This was the turning point in my life. With a loss of 51 pounds and several inches, I began to enjoy my life with my friends and family, especially my three grandchildren. The Pat Walker program gave me a positive approach to everyday living."

How's your approach to life?

Now the national director for Pat Walker, Ms. Nelson firmly believes the program can upgrade the life outlook of the overweight as surely as it makes them slimmer, trimmer, more confident of their appearance—and themselves.

In the elegant atmosphere of a Pat Walker salon (where there's none of the noise and confusion you may have encountered at gyms and spas), you can reduce IN ABSOLUTE PRIVACY. Moreover, you have assistance from interested professional counselors (who also conduct their counseling, by the way, in complete privacy).

Another difference: SYMMETRICON

Symmetricon is the equipment, exclusive to Pat Walker's, providing passive exercise that gently shapes and firms your figure while it also improves your circulation and helps correct posture. You wear your regular street clothes during treatments. At Pat Walker's you can lose weight (and keep it off) ON YOUR OWN INDIVIDUALIZED PROGRAM—without strenuous physical exercise or stringent diets.

Haiti now place for quickie divorces

By LEW WHEATON

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — With a checkbook in one hand and a failed marriage in the other, hundreds of Americans are flocking to Haiti for uncontested divorces that are ready in two hours of paperwork.

So many foreigners are coming to this sunny Caribbean island to sever the marital bonds that the Haitian government has opened a permanent office here to assist couples in getting the quickie divorces.

But officials caution that Haitian divorces have not been extensively tested in court, and may prove worthless in the United States.

More than half the approximately 1,200 persons who sought divorces in each of the past three years were Americans, says Marie Ange Puzo, assistant director of the Office of Divorce for Foreigners. The other nationalities include Scandinavians, West Germans, Italians, Liberians and a scattering from Africa and South America.

U.S. Consul Donald B. Wallace, whose office au-thenticates the signatures of Haitian officials on divorce decrees, said that many Americans began coming to this poverty-stricken nation a decade ago when U.S. courts first started to void Mexican-obtained divorces.

The procedure described by Miss Puzo can cost as little as $375 — the $175 fee charged by the government divorce office and $400 for the legally required Haitian lawyer recommended by the government. The fee, of course does not include transportation or lodging in Haiti.

The divorce office is located near the cruise ship pier just around the corner from the U.S. Embassy and the Pan American office. Most customers seek uncontested divorces in which both sides have agreed to separate amicably, Miss Puzo said.

In these cases, she said, one member of the couple must appear in person with a notarized power of attorney from the other spouse and a checkbook. After two hours of filling out forms, the spouse leaves the matter in Haitian hands. The paperwork passes from the office to a judge who issues the decree to the U.S. consulate for authentication and back to the office, which mails the document to the former couple.

The paper, worded in French, is prettily gift-wrapped in ribbon.

Most of the customers fly in one day and depart the next, and some continue their vacation on another Caribbean island.

As for their authenticity, Haitian divorces "are recognized everywhere if they are uncontested," Miss Puzo said.

"Generally, Haitian divorces have been accepted because they are amicable — they aren't questioned in court," the U.S. consul added.

There will be no admission charge. Miniature roses and rose arrangements will be awarded as special prizes every 30 minutes during the show.

This year, roses will be sold, individually or as arrangements, to raise funds for the maintenance of the ARS Center in Shreveport, La. The MRS contributes $150 to the fund annually for the 118-acre center.

Good scissors enhance sewing

COLLEGE STATION — Scissors will do a lot to enhance a sewing project if they're the correct style, if they're sharp and if they're in good condition, says a clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.
 In buying scissors, look for those that are joined with a screw and not a rivet so they can be adjusted or tightened with use, advises Marlene Odle-Kemp. Also, lightweight scissors may be easier to handle. Plastic handles may prevent bruising the hand and fingers when cutting many layers of cloth.
 For greater ease in cutting, keep scissors sharp, she recommends.
 Dull scissors chew fabrics and may cause runs and snags. They also take longer to cut.
 Sharpen scissors at home with a file or electric file across the blade. However, don't file them like a knife, the specialist warns.

Buff the edge to keep it free to metal shavings.
 Of course, a professional sharpener may do a more accurate job. Look for a reputable sharpener — often times found in a fabric store.
 To keep scissors in good working order, remember they may need oiling for easier handling, Ms. Odle-Kemp suggests.
 Place a drop at the screw and work repeatedly until they are easier to work. Clean any excess oil from the blades to prevent spots on the fabric.
 Cut several pieces of scrap fabric to make sure all the oil is removed.
 Also, keep scissors in a dry place, preferably in moisture absorbent cloth to prevent rust, she adds.
 If they do rust, remove the rust with a mild abrasive and let the scissors dry thoroughly over heat — such as a pilot light.

Times close prostitutes school

By KEN RINGLE
The Washington Post

Since standards are falling everywhere, it should come as no surprise that a Midwestern school for prostitutes has shut down, the victim — at least in part — of changing times.

"The madam was an authority figure, allowed no drugs and believed in professional ethics," said Barbara Sherman Heyl, assistant professor of sociology at Illinois State University, who studied the school for four years.

"She complained that young girls didn't want to work at their profession anymore... didn't care about becoming real pros. Her idea of what a prostitute should be didn't jibe with the ideas of the girls she was training. There was a real generation gap."

Heyl, a 35-year-old mother of two who teaches a course in deviant behavior on the Illinois State campus in Normal, Ill., said the school grew out of the same vocational traffic circles that clutter the rest of the job market: in order to get a job in a warehouse a girl needs house experience, but she can't get that experience without having a job.

While call girls and streetwalkers — the mom and pop stores of hookerdom — can hang out a shingle anytime, anywhere, house prostitutes share more of a corporate enterprise, Heyl says.

Unless everyone in the house is a top performer and works together, the reputation and income of the whole house suffers. Madams are thus unwilling to hire girls with only a dilettante's background in their art.

Thus was born the school for scandal which Heyl studied and whose life and death she chronicles in a forthcoming book, "The Madam as Entrepreneur: Career Management in House Prostitution," (Transaction Books, Rutgers University Press).

The school, which Heyl says operated in a middle-sized midwestern city, formed part of a carefully conceived marketing strategy designed to offer youth and variety while holding down cost. Much as the patrons of a barber college can get their locks off at a reduced rate, customers at the school for whores were drawn by its lower fees (roughly a dollar a minute) and perhaps the accomplishment of helping a novice get started in a new career.

In addition to instruction in such physical skills as pelvic movement and oral sex, the girls were schooled in the more subtle (and, Heyl says, the more difficult) psychological side of a prostitute's calling, including "parlor talk," putting a customer at ease and bargaining for the fee. They were even counseled in hygiene, protecting themselves and avoiding the depression that often accompanies the girl's increasing separation from straight society.

"When you think about it, sexual behavior is a very complex social phenomenon," said Heyl. "This idea that everybody is born knowing how to do it is ridiculous... To be successful in it as a career... a girl is going to have to know values as well as skills — how to feel OK about herself and what she's doing."

Heyl said she first learned of the school in 1972 when one of the students in her deviant behavior class asked if a prostitute he knew could address the group.

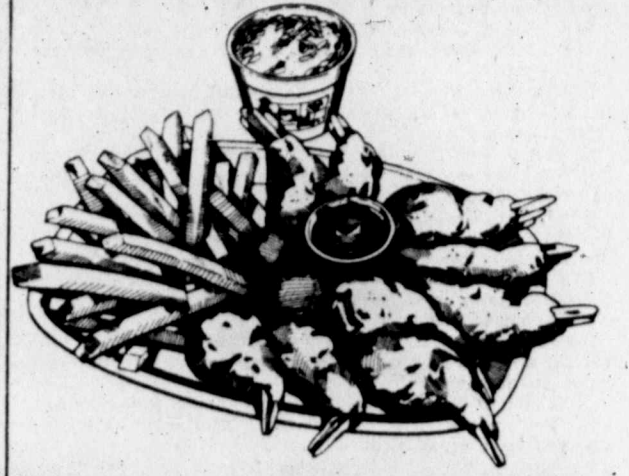

Since the students were studying illegal behavior and had heard other speakers from the wrong side of the law, Heyl said, she sought the counsel of the university administration and, "with fear and trembling, agreed."

"I wanted the students to confront these people as human beings... to understand that their activities in most cases stem from the same sort of needs that all of us have," Heyl said. They just respond to those needs differently.

When the woman appeared for the lecture, Heyl said, she was tastefully dressed in a pant suit, wore little makeup and "generally confounded all our stereotypes." "She was attractive, articulate and obviously educated," Heyl said.

Divorce cycle rolling around

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

When I visited my 95-year-old grandmother at her nursing home recently, she took my hand and drew me closer.

"How many times have you been married?" she asked.

"Twice, Grandma," I said. "This is my second time."

"Oh, well," she scoffed, "you're just a beginner."

Grandmother had been married to the same man all her life, and still wears the plain gold band he gave her, though she's been widowed for over 30 years. Her religion and her personal beliefs wouldn't allow divorce, and I'm not sure Grandma would have ever wanted one.

For while I thought the state of marriage in our society was stabilizing, I, personally, didn't know as many people who were breaking up marriages, but apparently there is a cycle to such things, some unspoken rhythm, at least in my life.

The wheel has turned, and again the divorce cycle is up. Just this morning a friend called to let me know she and her husband had made the big decision.

"It was mutual and civilized," she explained. She did go on to say that once they went to lawyers with their plans, and outsiders began to enter with objectivism and legalities, the friendly divorce began to get hostile. This particular friend is divorcing her first and only husband after 15 years of marriage.

Among many of my other friends, the second or third divorce is taking place, and they each assure me that subsequent divorces are no easier than the first.

"I've known for a long time that I wanted a divorce," said a second-timer, "but I hated the stigma of having two marriages behind me." It seems that even this stigma is lessening. Like all other unthinkable things, once you get used to the idea, it becomes more acceptable than before.

Recently I've heard several people blame the women's movement for the increase in divorce, but that is difficult for me to believe. Among my friends of the feminist community, some have never been married, some are divorced, but many are married still. In that way they seem no different from the general population.

In my own experience, at least, the divorce trend had begun long before I'd heard of so-called women's liberation. It began first of all among my friends who are especially independent.

When the woman works, and enjoys working, it seems that not only does she feel freer to choose her state of marriage, it also appears that the husband feels less guilty about seeking divorce. It may leave him guilt-ridden to dump a dependent wife — it may even leave him financially busted. But when the woman works or is capable of doing so, it's a different matter. Ironically, it is among these same couples, in which the wife works, that I've seen the happiest, most stable marriages.

Wood designs start with meditation

By DEBBIE ZAHN
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — His name is Gaylor Deforest, but if you call him that around his friends they look up in surprise.

You see, they know him as Butch — a nickname having nothing whatsoever to do with the length of his hair.

Deforest has very long blond hair, a reddish beard and sea-blue eyes which gaze off at some distant point when the conversation turns to his two favorite subjects — wood and meditation.

For a year he's let the color and texture of wood reveal its beautiful patterns under the direction of his "centered" consciousness.

Deforest's wood designs grace the walls of numerous stores in Southern California. He says in the last three months his telephone hasn't stopped ringing from people who want the Deforest touch.

But a year ago, life wasn't quite so cheery. Emotional problems caused him to draw a creative blank.

"When you create, it's got to be a flowing thing," says Deforest during a break from his work. "If you're not free to experience your feelings, you just can't do your best."

Through transcendental meditation and yoga, he gained a better perspective of himself.

Now when he's applying one of his designs to a wall he concentrates on his mantra. A mantra is a series of syllables which when repeated keep the mind focused on the present moment.

"Even before getting into yoga, I was really drawn to things that had a definite center, like kaleidoscopes or snowflakes," he explains. Deforest applies this centering principle to his wood designs. Each one begins at some central point from which subordinate patterns emanate. "I rarely make plans for a job. You tell me what kind of look you want to achieve. I can do the job faster than it would take to draw the plans."

"Relaxing" is the look Ron Ogden says Deforest created for his beauty parlor. Ogden says the reception to the artist's work has been fantastic. "People just love to come in here," he enthuses.

"The wood gives the place a very comfortable, at-home feeling."

Some people view remodeling as a nightmare, but Ogden says working with Deforest was a good experience.

"I've put in a lot of shops, but I've never seen anyone like him. He took the job very personally and he really concentrated on what he was doing."

"Before he started, he took me to see a wall he did at a real estate office," Ogden says. "I knew that was the look I wanted."

And while prospective customers might request a similar look for their stores, Deforest is adamant about never repeating a pattern for a design.

"That would be boring. That's why I don't do drawings first, then I'd know what it would look like in the end."

Furr's salutes the Strawberry

Strawberry (Fragaria)

We make a beautiful buy on some beautiful Strawberries. They're arriving by the truckload. What do we do to promote them? Well, the original plan called for the gathering of all 4,374 Furr's employees and their families at the Wilma T. Mehafko Memorial Recreational Park near Chitwood. Climaxing the day-long celebration a remote controlled '47 foot helium filled green and red nylon berry was to be released to the West Texas wind while in the background the Chitwood Junior Highschool Marching Ensemble would play its festive and patriotic arrangement entitled "Strawberries and Stripes Forever".

But since most of you couldn't be there we decided on plan B: Bring the Strawberry to you. So, throughout the month of May we'll be saluting the Strawberry at the Furr's in your town by proudly serving it to you in a variety of wonderful ways. The Strawberry, in all its glory, right next to all your other good cookin' favorites. Look for this week's specially priced Strawberry Features! Here are some suggestions for this week:

America growing up, changing attitude about sex

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON — The first time Patricia Schiller, 64, MA, JD, saw a porn film was in 1968. And she won't forget it.

"I was sitting in a room with 35 people," she recalls, flushing a little even now. "There were five women. The rest were men, all sex educators, counselors, therapists. I can remember my hands started getting sweaty, my cheeks reddened, and I thought, 'Oh God if any of these people could see me now I'd die.' When the lights went on the other women looked worse than I did. The women were really upset. The men weren't as uptight. They had all seen '... films' before, though they were still at the giggling stage. But I had never seen a porn film in my life. I had been to the Crazy Horse in Paris and I could discuss sex without batting an eye. I was very comfortable with sex. I thought, 'But watching this movie I felt like a peeping Tom. Especially during the part about homosexual women.'"

Today, 10 years later, Pat Schiller, founder and executive director of the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists (AAECT) can watch a porn movie, (clinically, a "confrontation film," or, informally, a ".... film") without batting an eye.

And not only that, she approves of them.

And so, at the 11th National Sex Institute sponsored by AAECT and held at Washington's Mayflower Hotel this past week, there were confrontation films being shown on the second floor continuously during the evening sessions and during various seminars pertaining to visual aids in sex therapy.

And nobody else batted an eye either.

"We leave films up to the individual," she says.

"The major factor is that it's important to confront our own feelings and to appreciate the fact certain parts of you really need to be talked about and dealt with. These films get your reaction to a physical encounter and then you are able to talk about it and share your feelings with others. But it definitely has to be used in the right place, under the right circumstances with the right supervision. Otherwise it's pure porn."

William Masters and Virginia Johnson think it's significant that for the last two years Johnny Carson has not made a single joke about them.

The reason for this they believe is that America is growing up.

It was also the first time Masters and Johnson had ever attended an AAECT meeting and the first time they had won the group's annual award. "This group," Virginia Johnson told them in her acceptance speech, "has finally come of age."

Masters and Johnson know about the struggle for acceptance. They endured scorn in the 20 years since the gynecologist (Masters) and the advertising executive (Johnson) joined forces and began doing research and writing in the field.

Finally, this year, they have finally formulated a code of ethics for the profession which they feel will enhance its credibility.

In an interview in their suite at the Mayflower between seminars Masters and Johnson discussed their views on the changing attitudes about sex in this country.

They are older now, she 53, he 63. He has a slight paunch, is white haired and nearly balding. (Women kept coming up to him at the convention and asking to pat his head, and he happily obliged.) He seems content to sit quietly by and let his wife do most of the talking, occasionally interjecting a cogent remark. She too is a good deal heavier than she was. They both seem rather comfortable with themselves, well, like an old married couple rather than sex experts.

In fact, you could say that Masters and Johnson are the first members of the "sex establishment." And they act like it. Ironically they are both very conservative in their approaches to sex research and disapproving of new, less orthodox research or methods.

"Up until now there has been an underlying orgy atmosphere at these kinds of meetings," says Johnson. This meeting is unique. A couple of years ago the chances of a workshop of so-called health-care professionals would have been rare. The people who came to these things had not been able to separate their personal needs from the subject. All of a sudden this group is no-nonsense. If they have been having orgies, if they're simply here to meet others, it's not visible."

Johnson says that this has only been able to happen because of the new ethical guidelines that the real professionals have been working so hard to make happen.

"It immediately gives this organization maturity and credibility. It's had to go through growing pains."

And she tells of a conference they attended last year in Montreal where "many of those who attended insisted on demonstrating their own lifestyles and invited the media to observe orgies. It made everyone in the field aware of how vulnerable we are."

Neither Masters nor Johnson is too crazy about the idea of the demonstration rooms where private concessioners rent space to display sexual merchandise, such as "Linda's love swing," which show how to make love on a swing or "Joni's delight," a sexual device for women. Nor do they particularly care for the demonstrations of porn films.

"We've never used a movie in our lives," says Masters with an edge of disdain in his voice.

"We don't use crutches of any kind," says Johnson. "We don't think they are necessary and we don't like to develop dependency."

"We don't, however," says Masters quickly, "object to them."

What they do object to, and rather vehemently, is the fact that Shere Hite, author of the controversial and popular sex book for women, the "Hite Report," was invited to speak at the AAECT convention this year.

They were not the only ones to object. Many of the participants felt that Hite, not being a professional therapist, did not have the required credentials, and her presence tended to erode the credibility of the organization. Masters and Johnson were particularly disturbed by the fact that because of a dropout, Hite was switched from being luncheon speaker "entertainment" to keynote speaker.

They did not go to hear her speak. "I just couldn't bear to listen to a thing like that," says Virginia Johnson. "This is my first public critique of Shere Hite but I am so incensed at her pseudo-science. This is the era of pop science and she is doing a great disservice to the field. What she's doing is political showmanship and you cannot make a science of political opinion. They aren't the same. Hers are kindergarten ideas."

"What hurts," says Johnson, "is that people who are doing this kind of writing are perpetuating the myths of their own personal experiences. And by inviting Shere Hite here is just giving her credibility."

Shere Hite arrived about a half-hour late for her opening speech. She appeared in little girl, dyed-blond, frizzed ringlets, doll-faced makeup and a frou-frou pink ruffled blouse with huge puffy sleeves.

She began by talking about her book, several years old now, and the thousands of wonderful cards and letters, gratifying responses, success stories which had come out of it.

In a soft, whispery, slightly coy voice — seemingly at odds with her definitive pronouncements — she declared: "The majority of women do not orgasm from thrusting or coitus... intercourse does not provide clitoral stimulation... I object to the word 'foreplay,' it sounds passive... this is a sexist definition... sex is oriented around the male and the male definition of sex and reproduction... men put women into the position of asking the man for extra stimulation, then feeling grateful... women are always waiting for men to mete out the goodies...

Effective talking necessary

COLLEGE STATION—Effective two-way communication, flexibility, enough maturity to give and take healthily and willingness to adapt are key factors to marital satisfaction.

Strong marriages are made of people who can tolerate each other's weaknesses and enjoy seeing each other as individuals, says Jenny Reinhardt, a family life education specialist.

Ms. Reinhardt is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

In a male-female relationship, it is naive for one to think that the other person can give him happiness, she continues.

However, two people who are personally maintaining their own inner happiness and growing as individuals can do a lot to enhance each other's happiness.

This is not the case when one has a childish view that life together should be full of ecstasy.
