

HIGH TRAIN ALMOST TAKES LOW ROAD—A broken rail was blamed Tuesday for this four-car derailment at the Santa Fe overpass above Avenue A at 16th Street. The train jumped track about 9:30 a.m., and a Santa Fe spokesman said two boxcars were completely derailed while two others were only partially off the tracks. Several chunks of concrete from the guard rail (damage visible near workman) were knocked from the overpass to the street below, but there were no injuries nor damages to autos below reported. Rain, Hail Strike Wide Plains Area

By IRA PERRY

SPRING SPRUNG a cruel joke on the South Plains Tuesday, first dousing the region with badly needed rains and then pelting residents with small hail. The storm caused at least one death, set off a round of fires and dropped temperatures to near freezing just before planting time for many area farmers.

Gentle rains falling off and on throughout the day brought more than two inches of moisture to some parts of the region in critical need of rain, but in other sections the season's first major storm system brought turmoil.

A shrouding mist of fog joined with fine hail pitched areas near Odessa into darkness through most of the morning, a darkness Department of Public Safety troopers say may have been the cause of at least one man's death.

Autos Collide
 A 1974 Oldsmobile westbound on SH 176 near Andrews early Tuesday went out of control on rain-slick streets, skidding into an automobile driven by 47-year-old Johnnie Frank Nimmons of Odessa. Nimmons was dead about 7:20 a.m. at the scene of that mishap, while the other car's driver, 24-year-old Eugene Williams of Hobbs, remained in serious condition late Tuesday night in Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

The same storm system brought Lubbock an official 1.66 inches of rain, although some unofficial reports topped the two-inch mark and nearby cities received as much as 2.50 inches.

Weathermen late Tuesday night forecast an 80 percent chance for more rains late into the night and early today. Totals, they said, might reach two inches in the South Plains and up to three inches in portions of the Panhandle.

To Clear Today
 Clearing skies were anticipated through this afternoon, with temperatures climbing to near 50. Low temperatures tonight should be around 40, with the high Thursday around 60.

Tuesday's rains brought 2.50 inches to New Deal, Petersburg reported 2.10 inches, Abernathy, Earth and Lockney each received 1.75 inches and Sudan, Jayton and Dickens reported 1.70 inches for the region's top totals.

Agricultural officials hailed the rains as "extremely timely." The rains came just prior to the opening Friday of the optimum planting period for cotton, although some already is up.

Runoff Substantial
 More moisture is needed, however, since the rains in some cases fell hard and fast. Runoff, as indicated by full roadside ditches in some areas, was substantial.

Agricultural officials pointed out there is still time to get the cotton crop planted within a favorable period. The optimum planting period for cotton traditionally has been regarded as May 5-20.

May is one of the wettest months, with an average rainfall of 2.60 inches.

Gentle rainfall, though, wasn't all the region's residents got.

In Petersburg, residents said what appeared to be a tornado roared through that city, uprooting a few trees but without causing major damage.

A twister also was reported near Crane and near Castroville in other parts of Texas, and the National Weather Service at San Antonio put 48 Texas counties under der tornado watches during the day after sighting possible funnel clouds in several areas.

Lubbockites missed the twisters, but the storm's more disenchanted side effects triggered two city fires, resulting in heavy damage.

Rainwater accumulating in floor drains at Dodds Service Station at 3802 50th St. apparently backed up gasoline in the drains into the station about 9:15 a.m., firemen said.

Lightning from the storm may have ignited the blaze there that damaged cars in the garage, test equipment in the structure's ceiling and blew out windows.

In the other blaze, firemen said unseasonable weather had caused residents at a 2012 61st St. home to turn on a floor furnace about 11 a.m. without realizing that a couch had been placed over it during the first of spring.

The fire was controlled, though, within 17 minutes, and there were no reported injuries in either incident.

The storm began its march across the region about 6:20 a.m., and it was late afternoon before things calmed down.

At 6:20 a.m., National Weather Service officials reported golfball size hail in Seminole, and 10 minutes later lightning struck a radio transmission tower six miles north of the Lubbock International Airport to put the weather services radio off the air for about an hour.

Unconfirmed reports of a tornado near Acuff were received about 7:45 a.m., and NWS officials clocked winds that damaged several barns there at 60 to 70 mph within a few minutes after the reports came in.

Small hail pelted some portions of the city before dawn Tuesday, and at 8:20

State Vote Estimate Raised; Briscoe, Hill Swap Charges

By The Associated Press
SECRETARY of State Steve Oaks looked at a big jump in absentee voting Tuesday and raised his estimate of the turnout in this weekend's Democratic primary by 50 percent.

Oaks, who only last week predicted a 1.2 million turnout, said he now thinks the primary will draw 1.8 million voters — more than cast ballots in 1976.

"From five working days ago until now, we've had a dramatic turnaround in absentee voting," Oaks explained.

Oaks left his forecast of the GOP primary turnout at between 110,000 and 150,000.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe continued hammering at Attorney General John Hill on fiscal issues. He told a news conference in Austin that Hill's promises to beef up state spending on education would cost more than $3 billion in the next two years.

Hill recently said he favors raising state aid to education from 60 percent to 85 percent of the total cost.

"Not in his wildest imagination can he fulfill those promises without a state income tax. The only alternative would be to double the sales tax," Briscoe said.

Briscoe also disclosed he will vote against legalizing horse race betting, a non-binding referendum issue on the primary ballot.

Hill told a news conference in Houston that Briscoe was borrowing money from banks at the rate of $100,000 a week to finance "his bogus income tax scare campaign in a desperate stop-Hill move."

He also campaigned at Santa Rosa High School in the lower Rio Grande Valley, where students cheered Hill and later booed when they were told they had to return to class.

"I'd rather be here in Santa Rosa looking into the faces of our future citizens than be where the present governor was yesterday — in some fancy club in a big city ridiculing John Hill," he said.

Attorney general candidate Mark White said he was "dismayed" by opponent Price Daniel Jr.'s stance that there is no legal ground for a lawsuit challenging Montana's 30 percent coal tax.

He said the tax would cost Texas electric power consumers $400 million in 25 years and applauded the Lower Colorado River Authority and Austin for suing to strike down the levy.

White said in a news conference at the LCRA building that if elected, he would join the suit.

A Daniel supporter, Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, said White was guilty of "demagoguery" on the issue.

"The remote chance of a successful challenge of Montana's tax would call into serious question Texas' own severance taxes on oil and gas and other natural resources," Coleman said.

Daniel said at a Capitol news conference he was so sure of winning he was cutting back spending to leave enough for a general election campaign against a Republican opponent.

White said horse race betting wasn't an issue in the attorney general's race but

Heavy Vote Posted By Absentees

AFTER SEVERAL frenzied and hectic days of absentee voting in Saturday's Democratic and Republican primaries, the polls closed for the final time Tuesday with more 1,331 voters casting ballots during the 12 days.

County Clerk Frank Guess termed the vote "pretty heavy for a non-presidential year," but said the turnout was not a record.

More than 2,000 persons voted absentee in 1976, when Texas held its first presidential primary.

County Democratic chairman Madison Sowder said it would be difficult to determine from the absentee totals how many voters would trek to the polls in person on Saturday.

Because of the presidential primary two years ago, it is hard to make a comparison with this year's turnout, he said.

In addition, Sowder said, 1976 was the first time members of the executive branch of Texas government were not up for election; they were elected for four-year terms in 1974. That could have caused fewer voters to cast ballots in 1976, he said.

A formula used by the secretary of state projects 28,000 votes will be cast in the Democratic primary in Lubbock County and suggests that number of ballots be printed.

However, Sowder said he ordered 34,000 just in case.

In 1974, the last non-presidential year, 23,308 Democrats and 1,697 Republicans went to the polls.

Republicans probably will vote in larger numbers this year because of contested races for governor, Congress, District 75-A state representative and county chairman.

Mideast Jet Sale Veto Urged By House Panel

WASHINGTON (AP)—A clear majority of the House committee that President Carter was hoping would help save his proposed sales of war planes to three Mideast countries backed a resolution Tuesday to veto the sale.

In a rapid crystallization of opposition, 22 members of the 37-member House International Relations Committee introduced a resolution in the House to veto Carter's entire sale of jet fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

The President had been counting on the committee to do just the opposite — to kill veto resolutions against the sale so the full Congress could not vote to veto them.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., one of the leaders of the move, had said earlier that he believed the committee would oppose the entire sale and thus force Carter to make the jet deal more favorable to Israel.

Carter wants to sell 60 sophisticated F-15 war planes to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-16s to Egypt and 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel. But Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said he believes the 22 committee members took the public stand against the planes for several reasons.

"What is means to me is that a significant majority of the members of the committee believe this sale is unacceptable in content and in form — and in timing," Rosenthal said.

An Associated Press survey found most opponents in the committee objected to having to vote for war planes to the Middle East without knowing what effect the planes sale might have on delicate peace negotiations.

Both houses of Congress have 30 days — until May 28 — to veto all or part of the proposed sale. Carter has suggested he will drop the entire package if Congress rejects any part of it.

No specific congressional approval is needed for the arms sales to go through.

The Associated Press questioned each member of the House committee, which began considering the war planes deal on Monday.

Nineteen said they either will vote for a resolution disapproving the sales, or are inclined to do so, especially where the administration's sale of 60 sophisticated F-15 jet fighters is concerned.

Only five said they now support or are inclined to support Carter's sales to Saudi Arabia as well as to Israel and Egypt.

The remaining 13 said they're either undecided at this time or are unwilling to speculate on how they'll vote on resolutions of disapproval that have been introduced.

However, at least half a dozen, including some who listed themselves as being tentatively opposed to the Saudi sale, said they would vote for it if Carter makes concessions for Israel.

There seemed to be little congressional resistance to the proposed sale of less sophisticated jet fighters to Egypt.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the committee, had said Friday he would get the 19 votes needed to kill any resolutions aimed at vetoing the sales.

Zablocki said he already has 15 votes, with the other four sure to come. But the congressman said he's disappointed that "more members don't have the courage to say publicly they support the sale."

Carter's aides have said privately they are counting on the House committee to kill resolutions against the jets sale so that the House — and therefore Congress — cannot veto it.

In another development, the White House issued a statement denying a request by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for a 90-day postponement of the arms sales proposal. The committee, which also is studying the proposed sales, requested the delay so that its members could make a Middle East inspection tour.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher told Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., the committee's chairman, that such a postponement isn't feasible, the statement said.

The only legal way to grant a postponement would be to withdraw the administration's formal notice of intent to make the sale, the statement said. It said withdrawal "at this time would call into question the seriousness of our commitments. It would not further the peace process in the Middle East nor would it be in the foreign policy interest of the United States."

In the AP survey, some House committee members indicated the kinds of Israeli concessions being discussed would involve efforts to ally Israel fears that the Jewish state could someday fall victim to an F-15 attack by Saudi Arabia.

Asked why the letter signed by Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch was mailed into the 19th District and around the nation in that form in his behalf, Reese said, "Sometimes your supporters and staff people get a little over-enthusiastic."

He had declined comment previously on that part of the April 6 letter, which said money "has been pouring into the district from left-wing sources to help a self-professed professional politician win the Democratic primary."

The Democratic candidates are Morris Sheats and State Sen. Kent Hance.

"The only thing that I disagreed with was that I thought the 'left-wing' was a little strong."

Reese said he saw "some of the comments that were going to be made" in the letter, which is primarily a fund-raising initiative, but does not now "remember seeing anything that called anybody a left-wing liberal."

11 Area High School Seniors Named To National Merit Scholarship List

ELEVEN SENIORS from area high schools are among 1,795 from across the nation named winners today of college-sponsored four-year Merit Scholarships by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Ill.

The list includes two each from Monterey High School in Lubbock and from Canyon High School and one each from Hereford, Lorenzo, Amarillo Palo Duro, Midland Lee, Odessa Permian, Petersburg and Plainview.

They are among 4,000 Merit Scholars who will receive awards valued at more than $12 million this year.

College-sponsored Merit Scholarships are offered with the stipulation that they must be used at the sponsor institution. The scholarships are renewable for up to four years of undergraduate study and range in value from $1,000 to $6,000 for the four college years.

Winners were selected by officials of the sponsoring college who also computed students' financial need and determined the amount of the individual stipends.

The 1978 Merit Scholarship competition began in October 1976, when more than one million high school juniors from more than 17,000 secondary schools took the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

The highest scorers in each state were announced publicly as semifinalists in September 1977. About 14,000 semifinalists advanced to finalist standing by meeting requirements that included confirming their earlier test performance on a second examination, being recommended for Merit Scholarship consideration by their high school principals, and presenting records to support high academic standing.

The following area students who have been awarded Merit Scholarships:

Cynthia L. Brasher, Canyon High School, to Texas A&M University; field of study — chemical engineering.

Holly J. Haines, Canyon High School, to Texas A&M University — engineering.

Mark E. Betzen, Hereford High School, Preston Smith Merit Scholarship to Texas Tech University — accounting.

Bobby J. Jennings Jr., Lorenzo High School, Preston Smith Merit Scholarship to Texas Tech University — engineering.

Denise R. Kellogg of 3424 56th St., Monterey High School, Preston Smith Merit Scholarship to Texas Tech University — mathematics.

Cheryl A. Rosen of 3710 68th St., Monterey High School, to University of Texas, Austin — undecided.

Kenneth R. Tucker, Amarillo Palo Duro High School, Preston Smith Merit Scholarship to Texas Tech University — physics.

a m. pea-size hail and very heavy rain triggered some flooding in low-lying intersections.

Officials said 55-mph winds also caused minor damage to a hangar at Town and Country Airport south of Lubbock just before golfball size hail was reported in the same area.

Power lines were downed, several barns were damaged and marble-size hail was reported in Lorenzo.

Heavy rains caused officials to cancel ribbon-cutting ceremonies for Santa Fe Railway's new piggy-back facility in Lubbock, but railroad officials went through with a luncheon to discuss the new half-million dollar facility.

Two afternoon baseball games between Lubbock and Coronado high schools also were canceled because of wet weather.

Rain mixed with snow fell for at least three hours Tuesday afternoon in Dalhart, and snow was reported in some other Panhandle cities, though no accumulation had been measured.

Snow and heavy fog set in after temperatures began suddenly dropping about 2 p.m. Tuesday, prompting freeze warnings for six counties near the New Mexico border.

NWS forecasters said Lubbock would not receive freezing temperatures, although readings had dropped to 36 degrees by 8 p.m. Earlier in the day Friona reported a 32-degree mark. Counties included in the freeze warnings extended from Bailey County and Lamb County northward to the Oklahoma border.

Snow and freezing temperatures were recorded just across the border. Clovis reported minor street flooding, some snow and cold temperatures throughout the day.

In Las Vegas, N.M., state police said some surrounding areas were isolated by up to 10 inches of new snow.

The Big Bend area was the only part of the state that saw sunshine for more than a few minutes Tuesday, and then it was only a brief glimpse.

Oddly enough, while Dalhart residents shivered in below freezing temperatures and snow, Laredo residents sunbathed in a summery 96-degree high.

Forecasters said that difference was the result of a system stretching through most of the state, but leaving that section

Army Troops Rescue Kidnapped Jeweler

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A kidnapped jeweler from New Mexico who was held chained and hooded for 45 days at a seaside hacienda has been rescued by army troops and was being questioned Tuesday about his long ordeal.

The release of Gregory Stiver, 28, of Albuquerque was the latest victory in the government's campaign against kidnappers for ransom in Colombia, considered by many the world's "kidnap capital."

There were at least 93 abductions in Colombia last year, more than in kidnap-plagued Italy, and at least 25 so far this year.

Army officials said six of Stiver's nine kidnapers were captured in the Sunday night raid on the ranchhouse near the resort city of Santa Marta, 900 miles north of this capital city. It was not known whether the gang offered any resistance.

Looking thin and disheveled, Stiver said in a brief interview on Colombian television Monday night: "I am all right now, I am extremely happy to be free."

Army officials said he was in good health.

Police sources said it was believed Stiver's captors were the same gang who abducted two other Americans in 1976 — Donald Cooper, a Sears Roebuck manager here, and Gustavo Curtis, a candy firm manager. Both were released.

Authorities said the break in the case came when a car driven by one of the suspected kidnapers broke down in front of Santa Marta army base. The driver acted suspiciously, was questioned, confessed to the kidnapping and led troops to the hideout, they said.

Stiver's abduction was not known publicly until his rescue was announced Monday. His kidnapers had written a letter to his family — his father lives in Portland, Ore. — demanding a $700,000 ransom for his release.

Local army commander Gen. Miguel Vega said Stiver arrived in Colombia

March 3 and told immigration authorities he was on an emerald-buying trip. This country is the world's biggest producer of the gem.

The general said Stiver met a Spanish woman with whom he went to Santa Marta. The Bogota newspaper El Tiempo said he was seized by five armed men while riding in car in the resort city.

Stiver was kept chained throughout the ordeal and his face was constantly covered by a black hood, Vega said.

Army officials said the kidnapers were four Argentinians, two Chileans, a Spanish woman and two Colombians. It was not clear whether the woman was the same one who accompanied him to Santa Marta.

Stiver is expected to return to the United States later this week after investigators take a deposition from him for prosecution of the suspects.

Besides Stiver, Cooper and Curtis, one other American, Richard Starr, 30, of Edmonds, Wash., is known to have been kidnapped here in the past two years, but he has not been released.

Starr, a Peace Corps volunteer, was kidnapped Feb. 14, 1977, during a guerrilla raid on a village where he worked as a botanist.

The anti-government guerrillas, members of the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, have issued statements accusing Starr of being a CIA agent but have made no specific demands for his release.

Track Betting Vote Tops List Of Ballot Issues

By Bill Kidd
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A difference of opinion, it has been said, is what it makes for a horse race.

In Texas, there are lots of differences of opinion — including those on the question of horse racing, and some of the activities associated with it, particularly betting.

When voters go to the polls Saturday, they'll have the chance — in both the Democratic and Republican primaries — to express themselves on the question of local-option pari-mutuel betting on horseracing, along with several other issues.

Horse racing is the issue which has attracted the most attention, both for and against it, and has garnered the greatest amount of organized support and opposition.

The issue is hardly a new one, having seen attempts three other times during this decade to win approval. It also has been the subject of interim committee studies, legislative hearings, and not a few sermons.

What ever voters decide won't be binding on lawmakers, and even if the proposition carries, it will be up to the Legislature to decide whether to pass a bill setting up a pari-mutuel racing.

Texas had such a system (which provides for division of wagers among the winners on a propositional basis after overhead is taken out) back in the 1933-37 period.

Gov. James Allred of Wichita Falls led the fight to abolish pari-mutuels, along with the Texas Racing Commission — which at the time was headed by Dolph Briscoe, Sr.

Dolph Briscoe Jr. hasn't indicated any great support for the ideas ... and Attorney General John Hill hasn't expressed a great desire for it either.

Former Gov. Preston Smith, however, has come over to the side of the Texas Horse Racing Association (THA), saying he thinks the proposal is all right on a local option basis.

Several church spokesmen and some law enforcement officials have indicated concern over the proposal, fearing betting would divert economic resources and result in involvement of organized crime.

THA has attempted to counter those fears, saying the state would be involved in policing the track operations, which would be paid for from the tracks earnings, and that pari-mutuel betting would encourage development of the horse industry in Texas, with new jobs, increased state revenues, and increased tourism.

Caldwell banker Charles W. Hancock, secretary-treasurer of the association, claims as much as $30 million could be contributed to the state's treasury the first year if the legislature were to approve a measure endorsed by the association.

"Under the bill we hope the next legislature will pass, 85 percent of the money bet at each track in Texas would go back to the bettors," he said earlier this year. "Five percent would go directly to the state treasury in the form of voluntary, painless taxes, and we estimate this amount to be about $30 million the first year. The figure would probably be closer to $50 million annually within three years. Five percent would go to the owners. The other five percent would go to the track."

That proposal is only speculation, however, opponents contend, since the referendum only asks for public opinion, is not tied to any set of specific details and is not legally binding.

Whether tracks would be non-profit, state-owned or privately managed would be a decision still to be made by the Legislature if the proposal ever reaches them.

Additionally, the legislators could change the THA formula for disbursement of revenue to provide for or omit any refund of revenue to cities or counties where pari-mutuel wagering would be legalized.

THA officials counter attacks based on those premises by saying their endorsed proposal is the one which probably will be submitted to the legislature after the referendum.

They point to studies indicating that there are no proven links between organized crime and horse racing — and to the fact that Texas already go to other states where they can engage in legalized betting.

Besides, they contend, there's plenty of betting on races now in Texas, despite the fact that it's illegal.

Those arguments obviously haven't convinced critics of the proposal, but THA hopes a substantial vote in favor of the referendum will convince lawmakers to consider legislation in 1979.

The other item which has attracted major attention is on the Democratic ballot, but not the GOP's.

State Democratic Executive Committee member Carrin Patman, wife of Sen. Bill Patman of Ganado, won approval of a referendum on whether the 1979 Legislature should increase interest rates on loans of under $5,000.

Sen. Patman, a long-time opponent of interest rate increases (as was his father, the late U.S. Rep. Wright Patman of Texas), has been the main obstacle in the past two sessions to attempts by small loan companies to increase the rates they may charge.

The lenders contend they need an increase to meet costs which have escalated since 1963, when the rates were set, and say they are being driven out of business because the legislature's failure to grant them increases.

The result, they say, will be that Texas companies will be taken over by the national chains, which are able to continue operating, thanks to profits obtained in other states.

Eventually, borrowers, with limited incomes or poor credit ratings will have nowhere to turn, except to loan sharks.

The lenders concede that no one is likely to vote for the idea of the increasing interest rates, and they went to court — unsuccessfully — to force the removal of the referendum.

Patman has labeled the loan companies themselves as "loan sharks", and has held press conferences to urge voters to say "no" to the proposal.

Those who vote in the Republican primary will have a chance, albeit a belated one, to express their opinions on the Panama Canal treaties, which were pending when the ballot was made up, but which now have been ratified by the Senate.

Another item for the GOP will be the method of selecting delegates to national party conventions.

But the item the Republicans have which may receive the largest "aye" vote may well be the question of limiting the amount of taxes State government may levy on its citizens.

That proposal has been brought up before in the Legislature, and at GOP state conventions, as well as having widely discussed in other states and at the national level by Republican candidates and office-holders.

In all likelihood, of course, the 1979 Legislature won't be significantly influenced by what a minority party's members say about a subject which is always a painful one where voters are concerned.

But like the other issues which are up Saturday, it at least gives the citizen a chance to let off a little steam, and to make it a bit clearer to elected officials where he or she stands.

School Enlists Federal Intervention

HALE CENTER (Special) — Representatives from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Justice Department questioned school officials here Tuesday about some parents' allegations concerning North Elementary School principal Haden Moore.

The Concerned Citizens of Hale Center, many of them parents of fourth and fifth graders at North, allege that Moore has inflicted unnecessary bruises on children being disciplined.

"We're not getting anything done with the local school officials," Linda Gomez, spokeswoman for the group, said Tuesday. "So, we decided to write our complaints down and get federal intervention into the situation."

The federal investigators are Jay Askew with HEW's Dallas Office of Civil Rights, Elementary and Secondary Division, and George Cerny with the Justice Department's Community Relations Service in Dallas. Both men could not be reached Tuesday for comments about their review of the situation.

When questioned about the federal investigation, School Supt. James Langford said Tuesday, "I don't have any information to give you, so there is not any point in discussing it."

Askew and Cerny met with the citizens group Monday night to collect parents' complaints about Moore.

On April 25, more than 180 parents and students picketed North Elementary, claiming that for the past few years children have been subjected to excessive bruising at the hands of Moore.

Representatives of the citizens group say they have met with school board members about the problem but "they continue to ignore it."

The group is planning another protest at the school for Monday. They will assemble at St. Theresa's Church and march to North Elementary.

Defense Posture--'At Ease'?

ASIDE FROM the impact on local economies and the natural inclination of various communities to want to keep whatever military bases they may have, there is something else involved in President Carter's recent military cutback move. It is the general feeling many persons are getting that the nation rapidly is winding down its military preparedness and defensive posture on a massive scale.

WHILE THIS may be an unfair assessment, if such an attitude prevails among many Americans, the same thought must occur to both foes and friends abroad.

In that respect, the announcement the past few days that the administration wants to reduce or consolidate 107 military bases in 30 states to be viewed in two contexts.

On the one hand, the President argues that such a move will save some $337 million a year—savings the administration claims can be used to bolster U.S. combat readiness in other areas.

On the other, those opposing cutbacks note that there would be a loss of some 23,300 jobs—14,700 of them military and 8,600 civilian. They also argue that some vital training facilities would be drastically reduced and that bases which might be needed in any new emergency would be lost or wiped out.

AMONG THE bases on the projected chopping block is Goodfellow Air Force Base near San Angelo, Ft. Bliss at El Paso also might be affected by the proposed budget saving plans. In addition, any number of other cities and states would feel the hammer-like blow of sudden loss of military facilities, from an economic standpoint.

As a matter of fact, it has been charged that President Carter deliberately held off the announcement until after the Panama Canal vote in order not to antagonize some supporters for the treaties.

THERE IS NO question but that there are savings which can be accomplished in the military, even to closing or consolidating some facilities.

But, such moves should be consistent with an overall defense posture of keeping the nation strong. Time and again the American people have indicated that they are willing to spend to keep the nation prepared at all times.

So, coming on the heels of several other moves by the Carter administration affecting U.S. weapons and defenses, the base closings more or less crystallize opinion in many persons' mind minds that we are downgrading our military machine.

When one considers the halting of the B1 production, cutbacks in U.S. Navy power, limitations on the Cruise Missile's range and most recently the delay on the Neutron warhead, then a disconcerting pattern emerges. Mr. Carter's actions in some areas such as the economy can be corrected. A mistake on keeping this nation adequately trained and armed could be fatal.

AN EDITORIAL:

Mavericks Make Able Allies

THE FACT that President Carter's most recent state visitor, Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, didn't attract much media attention serves to illustrate how the actual newsmakers don't always make the news at six and ten.

Ceausescu represents a country whose role in the shifting East-West balance of the past several decades has been as subtly influential as it has been unique.

A CHARTER member of the Soviet bloc firmly authoritarian in its domestic affairs, Romania nevertheless has been something of a maverick for better or worse in foreign affairs.

It has refused to toe the Soviet line, at times in defiance of massive pressure, and has cultivated its own special relationship with a number of Western nations. Romania's special situation has been of significant importance to the West on a number of occasions.

Refusing, for example, to go along with the rest of the Soviet team in breaking relations with Israel during the 1967 war, the Bucharest regime has been a valuable channel for communication between Israelis and Arabs.

IT PLAYED A role in the tortuous maneuvering toward a Vietnam settlement and in the rapprochement between the United States and Communist China. But for all of its good marks in international relations, Romania's performance at home is dismal by any democratic standard.

The Ceausescu regime ranks among the most oppressive in Eastern Europe. Dissidents are firmly suppressed and civil liberties limited to the point of nonexistence.

Romanians are discouraged from contact with Westerners and those seeking to emigrate or travel abroad run risks of police harassment, or worse.

IN ITS insensitivity to human rights, Romania is right up there with the Soviet Union. Which is a prime obstacle to a cordial relationship with the present occupant of the White House.

That may explain in part why Romania so far has been on the sidelines in the administration's attentions to Eastern Europe—including visits by both President Carter and Vice President Mondale to other countries of the region.

The current coolness between Washington and Bucharest may be understandable. Nevertheless, considering its value in the past, the Romanian connection still is well worth maintaining.

Life's A Towaway Zone And I'm Double-Parked

WASHINGTON—"Would you like to lie on the couch or sit in the chair?"
"I'll sit in the chair, if you don't mind, Doctor."

"All right. What seems to be troubling you?"
"I know you're going to think I'm crazy, but everyone wants to tow my car away."
"Please go on."

"EVERY TIME I find a parking place there's a big sign which says, 'This Is Private Property. Violators Will Have Their Cars Towed Away.'
"Or 'Only People With Permits May Park Here. We Reserve The Right To Tow Your Vehicle Away.' Some just say 'Towaway Zone' without even an explanation."
"Everywhere I drive I see tow trucks with their motors running ready to hook up my car the minute I leave it."

"How long have you had these hallucinations?"
"They're not hallucinations! Even when I came to your office today there was a sign in your building parking lot saying, 'Authorized Stickers Permitted. All Other Cars Will Be Removed at Expense to the Owner.'
"Do you have a sticker, Doctor?"

"LET'S NOT TALK about me. We're here to talk about you."
"I'm sorry, I'm under a lot of stress. It took me 40 minutes to find a place to park."
"Then you did find a place to park where they didn't threaten to tow you away?"

"Yes, in a Safeway. But I'm going to have to buy a bag of groceries before they let me out. Am I sick, Doctor?"
"You have a neurosis. In psychiatric terms it's known as an Anxiety Parking Complex. We've seen a lot of it lately. People are afraid to leave the house because they believe they won't be able to find a place to park."
"That's the way I feel most of the times. The thought defeats me before I even start up the motor. I've tried every pain reliever on television."

"DRUGS WON'T CURE your neurosis, Mr. Fine."
"What then?"
"Let me put it this way. Every day millions of people go somewhere and they find a place to park, many of them legally. Why do you think they can find a parking spot and you can't?"
"Because they have a piece of paper stuck on their windshields."
"No, Mr. Fine. The reason they can find a place to park is because they use positive thinking. They know when they leave the house that somewhere out in this great country is a nice wide open space that will just fit their car."
"In psychiatric terms it's called Kismet. You, on the other hand, freeze up every time you see a sign which has the word 'tow' on it."
"What do they call that in psychiatric terms?"
"Freud called it Tough Luck."

"SO WHAT YOU'RE saying is that if I think I'm going to find a parking place, I will find one, even if there aren't any."
"There is always a parking place somewhere. Someone is going to get it. This is a mean world we live in, Mr. Fine—a jungle you might say. There are policemen and sheriffs and meter maids all waiting to pounce on you."
"Those are the realities. But in spite of them you must say to yourself every morning when you wake up, 'Today I am going to find a place to leave my car, and no person on earth is going to tow it away.'"
"That's it?"
"What else did you expect me to say?"
"I was hoping you'd offer me one of your stickers."

LOOK ELSEWHERE. Washington peers down its nose, to put it mildly, on the authoritarian regime in Chile. Well, there have been political prisoners in Chile and there still are a handful behind bars.

But our policy aims at regularization of relations with Cuba, a dictatorship where independent examination has concluded there are between 15,000 and 60,000 "political detainees."

It is, it seems, a question of ideological chic. The super liberals still mourn the demise of the leftist Allende regime in Chile while whispering sweet nothings into the ear of the leftist Fidel Castro.

Nor is there massive concern over conditions in Cambodia, where some 800,000 to 1.5 million human beings have been executed or starved to death since the Communist takeover in April, 1975.

PERHAPS THE LIBERALS are abashed at the memory of their prediction that brotherhood would be achieved once the Reds took charge in Southeast Asia.

In South Africa, U.S. policy is inflexible. Nothing short of total black rule will suffice. Meanwhile, a campaign is being waged to withdraw American business interests from South Africa, although even United Nations Ambassador Andy Young rejects such a step on the grounds it would "lose jobs in the country and we wouldn't necessarily help blacks."

Sure South Africa's whites are racist. But should we burn them all to save their souls, and look away from the racism and denial of civil liberties in black African states?

'You're Sure This Won't Hurt?'

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Politics Of Morality

WASHINGTON—After days of concentrated warning from Capitol Hill that tax reform should be abandoned, President Carter has revealed his careful decision to the Cabinet: the program must be given top priority.

The pragmatic reason given by some presidential aides is that Carter can ill afford another retreat. There is also false optimism, bred by false analogy with the Panama Canal debate, about the President's ability to reverse public and congressional opinion.

But mostly, full speed ahead on tax reform reflects a recurrent moral of Carter in office. Having applied moral considerations to a non-moral issue, the President finds himself equating compromise with surrender.

Rejecting advice from Congress and his own cabinet, he must now invest time and effort to convince the nation of tax reform's moral validity.

WARNINGS AGAINST this course came early. The unlikely Paul Revere was Rep. Abner Mikva of Illinois, chairman of the liberal Democratic Study Group and a loyal Carter supporter on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Mikva first told Carter last June that there was no constituency for tax reform, warning against proposing all the reforms then being considered.

Such advice from Mikva and other Ways and Means members had limited impact. A political leader who often substitutes morality for ideology, the President had transformed the economic tradeoffs of the Internal Revenue code into a contest between the forces of darkness and light.

He finally sent up a tax reform package less ambitious than he wanted but far broader than Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal advised.

THE FATE OF THESE proposals has been obvious on Capitol Hill for some time. Rep. Joe Waggoner, a conservative Democrat from Louisiana and key Ways and Means member, privately forecast the outcome to Blumenthal:

Not as much tax reduction as the President asked; no tax crackdown on foreign business income; very little crackdown on expense accounts; no disproportionately heavy tax treatment of income over $25,000 a year. Not disagreeing, Blumenthal urged Waggoner to tell that to the President.

Warnings became reality April 17 when Ways and Means began dismantling the Carter tax reform, with unusual contempt for the President's wishes which grew larger when Carter responded by attacking "special interests."

That produced a remarkable White House meeting April 20 between the President and three senior Ways and Means members: chairman Al Ullman of Oregon, Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois (chief deputy majority whip of the House) and Waggoner.

THEY INFORMED THE President his program was all but dead. "I'm shocked," Carter replied, when they disclosed true anti-reform sentiment in Ways and Means.

Since that sentiment had been previewed for him 10 months earlier, suspicion was raised that the President listens but does not hear. Still, he argued that Democratic candidates need to face voters this fall in support of a tax reform program.

Rostenkowski then suggested that tax reform was endangering tax reduction. If the bill ends up repealing tougher tax treatment of capital gains at a cost of nearly $3 billion, both Rostenkowski and Ullman for fiscal reasons might end up opposing all new income tax cuts below present levels.

Five liberal Democratic members of Ways and Means saw the President the next day, April 21, but brought no better news. Mikva put it bluntly: if the President pushes tax reform, he might lose his tax reduction to stimulate the economy.

On Sunday at a political meeting in Greenwood, La., Waggoner made the same pitch to anti-inflation czar Robert Strauss. On ABC's "Issues and Answers" Sunday, Ullman repeated his warning to the President.

"I know Mike Blumenthal agrees with us, and I think Bob Strauss does," one congressional leader confided. "But does Jimmy Carter?"

WHAT WAS THE answer? It came at Monday's cabinet session, reflecting the position of the President and his senior staff. "It would be very damaging for the President to change his mind so easily," one staffer told us.

Plans for a nationwide crusade are underway. While blaming the Treasury for not starting this public lobbying while the White House was fighting the battle of Panama, one White House insider concedes tax reform never could have the establishment support enjoyed by the canal treaty.

Yet a common thread links these two wholly dissimilar issues: as with Panama, the President and his men must now consume inordinate energy on an issue marginal to great domestic and international questions.

Having passed up his last easy opportunity to set aside tax reform, he now faces certain defeat in Congress, with little political balm even if he does marshal public opinion. Such are the yields of the politics of morality.

JAY HARRIS:

A Bit Of Nostalgia

MAYBE THE "good ole days" weren't all that good. But, in retrospect, if one is to believe what one reads about life a century ago, they weren't so bad, either.

It is easy to work up a debate over whether the human animal enjoyed life better in a more leisurely world before fast cars, faster planes and computers. But, there is no question but that he had more time to enjoy what there was of it.

And while we wouldn't trade today's modern conveniences, and especially modern health aids from miracle medicines to hospitals, for "back then," there's something to be said for "another time, another place" where everything didn't have to be done like yesterday.

WHAT BROUGHT this bit of nostalgia on—we certainly didn't wander around at the time—were some reproductions dating more than a century from Harper's Bazar magazine.

It was L. E. "Jack" Davis, longtime Lubbock resident, who afforded us this window on the past.

Mr. Davis, who proudly admits he has lived much of that past 100 years, was in a nostalgic mood himself. He was getting ready to snip the ribbon on the Air Force's first flight simulator complex, a $29 million facility at Reese AFB.

It was Mr. Davis who as an instructor-pilot in the old Curtis Jennie, helped evaluate the world's first such "contraption," the Ruggles Patented Orientator some 60 years ago. Davis, who has been honored with the highest civilian award the Air Force can bestow, has devoted a lifetime to civic, business and national interests.

BUT, IT WAS in the role of a man looking back a bit when he walked in carrying three rolls of memorabilia.

The reproductions from Harper's Bazar date back to January, 1872, and cover a period until circa World War I, apparently. Needless to say, there were some surprises and some familiar names.

There was, for instance, a whole layout on the modern autos of the day. "25 Cents A Day Is All That It Costs Most People To Run This Car," read an ad over an open Hummobile, going for a list price of $750. Obviously, no teenage drivers!

And there was a touring type Maxwell, with "no extras to buy," for the unbelievable sum of $655. Spiffy spoke wheels, too.

And get this. A Chevrolet "Four-Ninety," the product of experience, was listed at $490, F.O.B., Flint, Mich. It boasted a "Mohair Tailored Top, Cover and Side Curtains, Electric Horn, Ventilating Windshield, Lamp, Tools, including Jack and Pump. And for $60 extra, electric lights and starter. We wondered when those "extras" got started.

THERE WERE others, the Studebaker, Pierce-Arrow and The Rambler, which boasted a spare wheel.

But, if milady didn't care for cars in those days, there was a wishbook full of the latest fashions. And high fashion then included long, beautifully cut gowns which reached to the floor and in some instances revealed as much cleavage—well, almost—as you see on prime time family television.

There were gray felt hats for the young lady, black lace and blue velvet bonnets, hats with ribbons, feathers, chin straps, and sailor types for youngsters.

There were all sorts of fancy sleeves one could order, with instructions on how to attach them to the garment in question.

In the lady's lingerie section, there were corsets, corset covers, a very decorous night dress and, heavens, "drawers." Needless to say, there were no models and the dress even for milady's boudoir then would be considered a laugh on today's beaches.

IF WE READ it right, Harper's Bazar in those days saw itself as "A Repository of Fashion, Pleasure and Instruction."

It also was a repository for a lot of other things, from notions to typewriters to wine to billiard tables to organs and sewing machines.

That typewriter, incidentally, was much more than a typewriter. "This is the complete accounting machine—the machine which writes, tabulates, bills, adds, subtracts, and audits..." The brand? Remington.

Another familiar name popped up over "Electro-Plated Table-Ware." What was billed as a "swinging water set," showed an elaborate pitcher on a stand with goblets and bowl, lined with gold, the outside plated with pure silver. The name: Reed & Barton.

There was an ad for "the finest champagne in America." "Dr. Kennedy's Hair Tea, which will prevent the hair from falling out," stocking supporters, and a "champion spring mattress."

ANOTHER FAMILIAR name popped up in an ad suggesting "night letters" for travelers.

"The family always wants to know that you 'arrived safely,' what sort of trip you had, how you found things at your destination. Send them a night letter any time before midnight and they will receive it next morning."

The company: Western Union Telegraph. There were "button hole workers," clothes wringers, a ladies air bustle, a "glove-fitting" corset, German, French and English toys, Colgate & Co.'s Cashmere Bouquet Soap, Dooley's Yeast Baking Powder, and Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient, which was good for what ails you.

Ah, those were the days. An ad pledged that "agents could make more money at work for us than at anything else," and another promised $425 a month, Horse and Carriage Furniture.

Another time, another place, almost another world...

PARADE MAGAZINE recommends that all high schools teach that first aid technique of relieving heart attack victims by applying intermittent pressure to the chest with the heel of the hand. Not a bad notion.

And while those schools are at it, they might include in their First Aid course the elderly adage: "If the face is red, raise the head. If the face is pale, raise the tail."

That state with the most bankruptcies, the most suicides, the most cases of cirrhosis of the liver and the most metropolitan crime, per capita, is Nevada.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Paul Newman is reported to be the latest in a lengthening line of entertainers the United States has booked into one of the world's most prestigious houses — the U.N. General Assembly.

Newman would become the first male among the American performer-diplomats since the practice began with Irene Dunne 21 years ago.

Shirley Temple Black, who recently celebrated her 50th birthday, was probably the best known American to serve here. Delegates remembered her movie roles as a curly-haired moppet and flocked to meet her.

This looking to the entertainment world to fill the U.S. diplomatic corps began under Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., U.S. ambassador to the United Nations from 1953 to 1960. Lodge apparently thought Hollywood actresses, Broadway performers and renowned opera singers would draw public attention to the fledgling international body.

"They had hardly any diplomatic experience and when it came to diplomacy, they really had to wing it," one official recalled.

Already accustomed to dealing with the public, the famous Americans lent an air of glamor and excitement to the international body. And many — like stage and screen performer Myrna Loy, singer-actress Pearl Bailey and opera contralto Marian Anderson — already had an intense interest in issues affecting the United States and the world.

Mrs. Black was a delegate to the assembly's regular session in 1969, to the United Nations' Stockholm conference on the human environment in 1972 and to the conference preparatory committee from 1969-1972. She was later appointed U.S. ambassador to Ghana.

"She was an extremely hard worker and a competent delegate," a former co-worker recalled. Another praised the "good job" she did.

"She was a real asset to us because she had great charm and she had tact," said a man who watched her in action in the assembly where personal contacts with foreign delegates are important. "She worked hard and she could get along with all kinds of folks."

Miss Bailey got the longest U.N. run of all after she told her friend, then President Gerald R. Ford, she wanted to be here.

Ford appointed her special adviser to U.S. delegations for the last month of the 1975 assembly session and the entire 1976 session. She also served as special adviser at the Economic and Social Council.

Miss Bailey wound up playing two parts — title role in the Broadway musical "Hello Dolly," at night and U.N. delegate by day. On matinee days, the pant-suited performer spent mornings in the assembly hall.

"She did her thing," said a former member of the U.S. mission near here. "I think she was effective in the sense of making friends because, you know, she is a very warm person..."

But Miss Bailey's easy-going manner and effusive personality did not sit well with all the diplomats, usually a reserved bunch.

"A lot of people put her down. Professional diplomats resent outsiders," the official acknowledged. Another former member of the mission said: "I think she was just a little bit too folksy."

Other performing artists on U.S. delegations included Miss Dunne, the Academy Award-winning movie star, in 1957 and Miss Anderson, the first black American to sing at the Metropolitan Opera, in 1958.

Myrna Loy, another film star, was organizer of the Hollywood Film Committee for the U.S. National Committee for UNESCO — the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization — in 1948. She also served as a member of the national committee from 1950 to 1954.

Actress-singer Helen Gahagan Douglas was on the U.S. delegation to the first New York session of the General Assembly in 1946. But she was already a Congresswoman, later to be defeated by Richard M. Nixon.

U.S. officials say they expect President Carter to name the actor-director Newman to the General Assembly's special session on disarmament beginning May 23 midway between two regular sessions. The delegation to each three-month session consists of 10 persons drawn variously from the diplomatic ranks, Congress, business and the arts.

Seymour Maxwell Finger, director of the Ralph Bunche Institute on the United Nations which studies the international body, said that in general he doesn't think entertainers should be put on delegations.

"It depends on the individual," he said, adding that he believes stars who have the right qualifications should be not barred or treated differently from persons who are employed in other professions.

75-B Demo Candidates Discuss Issues

This is the fifth in a series of interviews with candidates whose names will appear on Lubbock County ballots in Saturday's primary elections. Views of the two Democrats seeking the position of state representative for District 75-B are presented today. That district represents roughly the eastern half of Lubbock and only residents of that portion of the city will vote in this race. The names of the candidates are presented in the order in which they will appear on the ballot.

SALINAS

Froy Salinas, who has been the District 75-B state representative since 1976, is a life insurance salesman. He is 38 years old and lives at 1306 49th St. He is married and has four children.

AIRHART

Jerry Airhart, 36, is an accountant and employee of a cotton marketing cooperative. He lives at 1904 28th St. with his wife, Zela, and four children.

What are your qualifications?

My qualifications for the position include a proven record of doing the job. District 75-B has an extremely broad range of people to be represented from the rich to the very poor, from the professional to the working people, and a large number of middle-income people. I believe I have demonstrated the ability to represent the widely varying needs of all the people of the district.

I believe that I can furnish the representation and leadership in the Texas House that District 75-B needs and deserves.

How would you propose changing the financing of public schools in Texas?

I would propose 100 percent financing by the state of the minimum foundation program. This funding by the state would allow the local school board more monies to operate their respective schools thus allowing the school boards to reduce property taxes where possible. It is my goal that the education of our children throughout Texas should be based on the wealth of the state, as a whole and not on the wealth of a particular school district. The courts have already told us we need to do something about the way we finance our public schools and it is my feeling that we must come up with a fairer way to finance our schools or face the possibility of the courts telling us exactly how to do it. The people of Lubbock do not want the courts telling us how to finance our public schools and neither do I.

How we change the financing of our public schools will effect generations to come. It is important we make changes, but we must do it cautiously.

How would you favor using the budgetary surplus in the state treasury?

I would favor using the surplus in our State Treasury to eliminate the state sales tax on utilities. I would also be willing to explore the possibility of reducing our general state sales tax by one cent in order to provide some tax relief to the citizens of Texas.

We are living in times of high inflation and the budgetary surplus is not a true surplus. I would favor tightening of our belts on new state buildings, highways and programs, and keep salary increases to cost of living levels.

Can you foresee any circumstances under which a state income tax or a corporate income tax would be warranted?

Texas has an economy, business climate and low unemployment rate that is the envy of many other states in our nation. This business climate is attributable to the fact that we have neither a state income tax nor a corporate income tax. The predictions are that we will have a surplus of tax monies when we meet in January of 1979. The surplus coupled with fiscal responsibility and sound management of our tax dollars will eliminate the necessity of any new taxes of any kind.

No.

What measures would you propose to reduce the crime rate in Texas? Would you favor registration of handguns toward this end?

The 65th Legislature, of which I was a part, passed many anti-crime measures, including an additional district court for Lubbock County. I would favor additional courts for Lubbock to insure speedier trials for both the innocent and the guilty. I do NOT favor registration of handguns because only the law-abiding innocent people would register their guns and the criminals would continue to have their guns unregistered. I do not feel that the registration of any firearms will lower the crime rate by a significant percentage.

Registration of hand guns is not the answer. We passed a bill on carrying firearms in establishments where alcohol was being served. Have you noticed any less shootings at bars in Lubbock? I am in favor of stronger sentences. We need to build correctional facilities that deter crime, not just delay it.

How would you propose maintaining, or increasing, the funding for Texas Tech University and the Tech medical school?

Texas Tech University and the Tech School of Medicine will always have my support to maintain or increase the level of funding to do an adequate job of providing a quality, top-notch university for the people of this state. One of the areas of funding that is of particular interest to me is obtaining the funds to absorb the teaching costs involved at our teaching hospital so that the taxpayers of Lubbock are not over-burdened with the responsibility of training medical doctors for the entire state.

No change.

Do you feel property tax reform is needed in Texas? If so, how would you propose to change the tax structure?

I feel property tax reform is needed in Texas and I would propose to support the Peveo Bill that I co-sponsored in the last session of the legislature. The Peveo Bill calls for a uniform appraisal system for the state. In Lubbock County, we have several taxing authorities. In order to have uniformity and fairer taxation, we should have a uniform appraisal system of property within the county. Currently in our county, one particular piece of property might have four or five different values on the respective tax rolls.

Yes. We need strong property tax reform but we cannot let the special interests write this bill. It must have full disclosure and a central collection agency for all taxing units that use the property tax. This would be a big savings over methods presently used. I am in favor of limiting the amount of tax that can be collected on property.

What would you favor the Texas legislature doing to improve the lot of Texas farmers?

I favor several legislative measures to help our Texas farmers. I would like to see us raise the inheritance tax exemption amount in order to allow small family farms to be passed on with less inheritance taxes to be paid. I would also favor removing the state sales tax on utilities, and attempting to reduce the general sales tax by one cent, which would help not only farmers, but would help those people on fixed incomes such as the retired and the elderly.

I have no favorites.

If you felt strongly about an issue, but your constituents had opposite feelings, how would you vote?

It has always been my policy to reflect the feelings of my constituents in my district any time I vote.

District.

What legislation would you most like to see passed by the state legislature?

I would like to see us reduce the general state sales tax by one cent and remove the state sales tax on utilities completely. I would also like to see us enact a public school finance bill as I have described above which will keep Texas out of the federal courthouse. Any method of equalizing in the area of public school finance helps Lubbock because the Lubbock Independent School District and its taxpayers have been paying their fair share to finance our public schools in Lubbock. A public school finance bill is almost inseparable from property tax reform because of the dependence of Texas on property taxes for public school funding.

A good school finance bill that would meet the needs for educating our children.

Zero Base Budgeting's First Year Said Effective, Flawed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new budget rules resulted in 25 jobs being cut from the federal job-safety agency and led the Coast Guard to eliminate a boating program which had served its purpose, the White House said Tuesday.

Those were among the benefits claimed for the first year of zero base budgeting, which Carter has ordered the federal government to rely on exclusively in preparing spending requests for next year, a report by the Office of Management and Budget said.

The report said that despite some start-up problems, the technique is off to a good start after a one-year tryout.

In effect, federal agencies will be shedding the training wheels they used last year when they gave the president's budget review officers two sets of requests, one prepared in the new zero-base format and the other in traditional form.

Traditionally, federal agencies seek enough money to cover the costs of last year's programs, allowing for inflation, plus new programs. They tend to spend the most time and effort justifying requests for the new programs. The idea of zero base budgeting (ZBB) is to justify all programs, even those that have been around for years, from scratch. Hence the name.

More importantly, agency officials are supposed to assign each spending alternative a rank, from the most important to the least important. This amounts to saying which spending project can be cut first, something government officials are reluctant to do.

While saying the new method is off to a good start, the report acknowledged some problems. Officials sometimes had trouble figuring out what they were supposed to accomplish with the taxpayer's money. Some officials simply warned higher-ups of consequences of cutting their funds, rather than describing how they could get by for less. Most agencies had trouble figuring out what minimum level of money they could get by on.

The report didn't attempt to place a dollar value on savings from the first year of zero-base budgeting. "We don't want to oversell this thing," said George H. Strauss of OMB.

But the report did give some examples of benefits claimed for the first year, including the trimming of 25 low-priority jobs from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and a recommendation by the Coast Guard to phase out a program of assisting states to conduct safe-boating programs. "The program had achieved its objective," the report said.

Strauss said in an interview that review of existing programs isn't new, but that zero-base budgeting forced officials to do more of it than they had in the past.

He said ranking spending requests by priority was entirely new with the ZBB method, and had forced high-level agency officials to give much more personal attention to spending matters previously handled by subordinates.

"You sort of lock them up in a room for three, four or five days," Strauss said.

Among the start-up problems created by ZBB procedures was an increase in paperwork as government officials attempted to justify their requests for money. Some of that will be eliminated in the coming months as agencies shift entirely to ZBB and eliminate dual budget submissions.

House Opens Budget Debate; Inflation Check Top Priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — With checking inflation a top priority, the House opened debate Tuesday on a tentative budget calling for a smaller tax reduction and a smaller deficit than President Carter has proposed.

The plan for the 1979 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, sent to the chamber by the House Budget Committee, proposes spending roughly $501.3 billion, about $1.2 billion more than Carter suggested. Under the committee's taxing and spending plan, the government would take in about $443.2 billion, nearly $3.7 billion above Carter's revenue estimate.

The resulting deficit would be roughly $58 billion, about $2.5 billion less than the Carter red-ink figure.

Just before the House met, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters Carter said to him at a breakfast meeting that Congress "could expect vetoes of anything that is budget busting."

"He talked about inflation as absolutely being his number one priority," the speaker said. "He's very strong to keep the budget within a reasonable cost. There will be no compromises. He intends to stay with his figures."

The budget committees of the two chambers also emphasized in their reports the need to move more forcibly against inflation, still running at higher-than-anticipated levels.

The budget resolution proposes a net Commission Okays Rail Signals Funds

AUSTIN — The State Highway and Public Transportation Commission has approved spending $115,000 to install railroad grade crossing signals in the Lubbock area.

The signals are part of a $5.8 million program including 94 projects in all parts of the state.

Although final approval for the project must come from the Federal Highway Administration, the project currently calls for the federal government to provide 90 percent of the funding for the project, with the state contributing 10 percent.

Included in the Lubbock area are: The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe tracks in Lubbock at 29th Drive, $60,000 and at FM 835, $55,000.

tax reduction of $19.4 billion, in contrast to President Carter's program, now estimated to result in about a $24 billion cut. Moreover, the Budget Committee recommended that $7.5 billion of the cut be taken from Social Security taxes. Carter has recommended that Congress take no action this year to alter the new, higher payroll tax schedule it enacted in 1977, to begin in 1979.

The corresponding resolution already passed by the Senate also calls for a $19.4 billion tax cut, but would make it effective Jan. 1, 1979, instead of Oct. 1, 1978, the start of the new fiscal year.

The Senate resolution, moreover, makes no provision for reducing Social Security taxes and it includes $1 billion for tuition tax credits, rejected by the House Budget Committee and opposed by Carter.

Overall, the Senate resolution calls for spending $498.9 billion, revenues of $443.3 billion and a deficit of $55.6 billion.

By law, Congress has until May 15 to reconcile the versions of the two chambers and enact a guideline for the year's spending and taxing legislation. In the fall, when all or most of the fiscal bills presumably will be enacted or in the final legislative stages, Congress must pass a second, binding resolution setting spending ceilings and revenue floors.

The president cannot veto budget resolutions, but can disapprove individual spending bills.

The House budget resolution calls for defense spending of $115.679 billion, about $2 billion less than Carter recommended. The Budget Committee said, however, the reduction primarily represented a judgment that the Trident submarine program would be delayed, so funding would be premature.

The resolution would allot about $2 billion more for job-creating programs than Carter recommended.

75-A GOP Candidates Discuss Issues

ROBNETT

Nolan "Buzz" Robnett Jr., 37, is a real estate and investment specialist and received a BBA degree from Texas Tech University in personnel management. He lives with his wife Kathy and his daughter Denise at 3702 75th St.

CHAPPELL

Jack R. Chappell, 35, is an attorney. He and his wife, Jan Anita, reside at 5230 17th St. Chappell is a graduate of Lubbock High School and received a BBA degree from Sul Ross State University in 1965 and an MBA from Texas Tech University in 1966. In 1974 Chappell was admitted to the State Bar through law office study.

This is the fifth in a series of interviews with candidates whose names will appear on Lubbock County ballots in Saturday's primary elections. Views of the two Republicans seeking the position of state representative for District 75-A are presented today. That district represents roughly the western half of the city and only residents of that portion of the city will vote in this race. The names of the candidates are presented in the order in which they will appear on the ballot.

What are your qualifications?

It is important that a conservative area such as ours send legislators that display a great sense of fiscal responsibility and knowledge. My experience and background as a stockbroker and independent businessman have required continual study of the economy and of budgets. This experience will be invaluable. My experience as staff coordinator for the governor's office will also prove invaluable. It was during this 18 month period that I became familiar with the workings of state government, both in the legislature and in the various state agencies.

A life-long resident of Lubbock, having been born and reared in the district. I am a practicing third generation attorney. My background and education show that I am vitally concerned about both individual freedom and the free enterprise system — this is why I am running for office; as I believe that only through a concerted "grassroots" effort can many detrimental government excesses be reversed. I believe that I know and understand — and indeed am a part of — the pulse beat of the people and the district.

How would you propose changing the financing of public schools in Texas?

The alternatives available in the school financing program are many. My primary concern with any change would be that the tax be made more fair, equal, and more easily collected. The end result of all these changes in taxes should be for better, more efficient education of the children, high school students and college. There must be increasing emphasis on vocational education in order to develop very necessary trades and professions which are becoming scarce throughout the nation.

I would move very cautiously. The present financing system should be given a chance — to replace it with an inferior, and experimental, and/or a more costly system would be a mistake. It is a question of balances. The more the state finances local schools, the more it will control them. Under the presently structured Minimum Foundation Program we have about 85 percent to 15 percent — state to local — financing. I do not believe in a 100 percent minimum foundation average with the state controlling it all. Perhaps in some instances the average could be increased for the state's share; but this should be the exception and not the rule.

How would you favor using the budgetary surplus in the state treasury?

The budgetary surplus should be applied to the next biennial budget, thereby reducing taxes in the upcoming year. In business surpluses are regarded as bases on which to budget wisely for the coming year, and it should be this way with the state.

This should be returned to local taxing districts to reduce taxes. — Because 1) if the surplus is almost immediately dissipated then this will help avoid the surplus from becoming the target of extreme urban pressure and power blocks; and 2) with the bulk of all property taxes being school taxes, this surplus could be returned to local school districts for possible property tax reductions of from 10 percent to 50 percent.

Can you foresee any circumstances under which a state income tax or a corporate income tax would be warranted?

There are no circumstances under which a state income tax or corporate income tax could be warranted. The people do not want them, and the people are the last word.

Absolutely not. One reason the quality of life is excellent in Texas for both the individual and private enterprise is because of the absence of such a tax. If we can't solve our financing problems in other ways then we have lost the battle of sound financial management.

What measures would you propose to reduce the crime rate in Texas? Would you favor registration of handguns to ward this end?

I would not favor registration of handguns because it would be the first step toward more final gun control. I feel that working with law enforcement agencies, locally, state and nationally, with better training programs, better recruiting programs for officers, and development of new and better law enforcement techniques and theories will help as much as possible in the enforcement area to control crime. The real problem of crime is caused by the deterioration of values in our country.

The ultimate test of a community's tolerance for violent crime is what its juries will render for such crime. If a community had a reputation for jury verdicts in armed robbery cases of a minimum absolutely of 15-20 years and no probation, then I feel that the community's armed robbery rate would drop dramatically. And, THERE SHOULD BE STATE CRIMINAL JUSTICE ADVERTISING TO THIS EFFECT in order to advise people about what they can do to reduce crime in their community. — INALTERABLY NO. Registration is confiscation; and let us not forget that "gun control" is simply "people control" in sheep's clothing.

How would you propose maintaining, or increasing, the funding for Texas Tech University and the Tech medical school?

I would propose a coordinated system of funding for such universities as Tech which have medical schools and other necessary training facilities for our state. These are very important functions and the state should begin now to take into account the increased costs of operating these institutions.

I would support those bills assisting Tech in funding matters — especially as regards assistance for the Health Sciences Hospital. The Tech Health Sciences complex will play a vital role in the future of Lubbock and the South Plains. I would support legislation such as the Teaching Hospital Bill in the State Legislature.

Do you feel property tax reform is needed in Texas? If so, how would you propose to change the tax structure?

I have only two requirements concerning tax reform: 1) That the taxes be fair, equal and administered without favoritism and 2) That taxes always be reformed lower and lower, as opposed to tax increases disguised as reform. This can be done with greater emphasis and consideration of budgets of state agencies and greater efficiency of state government in general.

I would move cautiously again. "Tax Reform" is a phrase used generally by special interests with an axe to grind. "Tax relief" is the heart of the real matter. I feel that programs such as the School Tax Assessment Practices Board are good. I feel that his is an honest attempt to provide "fairness" in school taxing procedures. And, since school taxes amount to something like 40 to 50 percent of all property taxes paid, I feel that such a fact finding program is well worth the effort.

What legislation would you favor the Texas legislature doing to improve the lot of Texas farmers?

The legislature could help the farmers in several ways, mainly in the area of taxation, and through research in the Agriculture Commission to find ways and means of growing and marketing new and various products. Production should be increased, and it could be, if new crops and products were developed for growing and exporting from Texas.

Generally this is a "Washington created" problem — but not altogether. Direct assistance programs which are coupled to federal programs could be beneficial, but as they become complex they lose their ability to help the farmer. Land use rather than market value for tax appraisal purposes would be a program I would tend to support.

If you felt strongly about an issue, but your constituents had just the opposite feelings, how would you vote on that issue? Do you vote your district or your conscience?

I will always vote what I think is right. After I have studied an issue and feel I have more complete information than my constituents in my district I will try to explain to them how I arrived at my conclusions. If they don't agree, I will have to decide whether the issue is far-reaching enough to demand that I vote my conscience or with my district.

I would vote my district; and in that respect I feel that I know and understand many of the hopes, desires — and disappointments of the people of my district.

What legislation would you most like to see passed by the state legislature?

My favorite legislation is that which makes our state efficient, prosperous, with fair and low taxation. Bills should be lean, well-written and help us lead our people into a responsible, industrious way of life that will make our children better people than we are, living in a very efficient state.

Generally passage of too much legislation is counter-productive. Honestly, I would like to see what comes up and then only vote for that legislation that I feel is productive, based on sound principles, and which has the interests of the people of my district and of the state at heart. On the other hand, I cannot see voting for a bunch of unneeded and surplussage legislation.

Reduction In Wage Demands Critical To Control Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A significant reduction in wage demands by major labor unions will be critical for controlling the rate of inflation, which may worsen to 7 percent this year, the Carter administration's chief economic adviser said Tuesday.

"Cooperation from major unions in this effort is absolutely vital," said Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, in an address to the National Press Club.

He said contract settlements in the last round of negotiations with major unions averaged 9.5 to 10 percent a year in total compensation, which he said was much too high.

"If the next three-year round of major union contracts does not show significant deceleration from the last round, hopes for getting inflation under control in the near future will be very slim indeed," he said.

Schultze said unexpectedly large increases in food prices may push overall inflation this year to between 6.75 and 7 percent, which is worse than the 6 to 6.25 percent forecast earlier in the year.

He said President Carter will meet next week with labor leaders to appeal for their cooperation with his anti-inflation program, which calls for voluntary reductions in wage and price increases to levels below those of the past two years. He stressed the importance of this program's success for the nation's economic future.

"There is simply no way that continued healthy recovery can be maintained unless inflation is brought under better control," he said.

Schultze indicated the administration is satisfied that the price increases announced last week by General Motors for its automobiles comply with the administration's inflation targets.

Schultze also stated in strong terms the need for a tax reduction close to the $25 billion that Carter has proposed, but which is in trouble in Congress.

If the program is enacted, Schultze said, the nation's economy should grow near the upper end of a 4 to 4.5 percent range both this year and next, slightly below earlier forecasts.

But he said the outlook would "worsen significantly" in the absence of a tax reduction so that real growth would taper off later this year and fall to about three percent in 1979.

At that level, he said, unemployment might increase again instead of declining to the administration's target of a 5.75 percent jobless rate by the end of 1979, down from the current level of 6.2 percent.

"We need a tax cut and we need a sizeable one," he said. "Without it, the recovery will be in serious danger of faltering next year."

The slightly dampened outlook for economic growth even with a tax cut this year, down from the 4.7 percent projection earlier in the year, is a result of worsening inflation coupled with a weaker outlook for homebuilding because of higher interest rates, Schultze said.

Postal Service Shows Mail Volume Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Use of the mail continues to increase, a healthy sign for the debt-ridden Postal Service, the agency's top financial officer said Tuesday.

Senior Assistant Postmaster General Francis X. Biglin told the Postal Service board that mail volume was 5.1 percent higher in the most recent accounting period than in the same four-week period a year ago. Similar increases have been recorded in other recent accounting periods, he said.

"One of the reasons we are able to increase our volume is that we have been able to hold rates steady for 2 1/2 years," Postmaster General William F. Bolger told the board.

Mail volume is important to the financial position of the Postal Service because many costs are about the same no matter how much mail is handled.

"We need that volume. If you have delivery service set up and if the letter carrier only has one letter a day, you aren't doing things as well as you would like," Bolger said.

The Postal Service has recorded a deficit every year since it was formed in a 1971 reorganization. Biglin said the Postal Service now is losing money, even with the higher volume, but would be losing more without the volume increases.

During the first half of the fiscal year that began in October, the Postal Service lost $231 million, Biglin said.

A new rate increase is expected about June 1, which would wipe out much of the operating deficit. Although the size of the rate increase is not yet definite, it is expected that the cost of mailing a first-class letter will go from 13 to 15 cents.

In other actions at the postal board meeting:

— Tom Chadwick, the agency's consumer advocate, said citizen complaints and questions to postal officials in Washington increased 19 percent in the last fiscal year. "One of the major reasons was the severe winter weather that frequently delayed the mail," he said. Chadwick said the most frequent complaints were non-receipt of mail and delayed delivery.

— Assistant Postmaster General John Applegate said revenue for Express Mail, a service that provides next-day delivery or refunds the customer's money, is running 50 percent over last year. He said the Postal Service in coming months will increase advertisements for the service, which is available only in certain parts of the country, mainly urban areas.

Israeli Pioneer Golda Meir Reaches Age 80

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Golda Meir, lone survivor of the major pioneers who founded Israel, turns 80 Wednesday, and even Israelis who criticized her after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war now regard her with fondness.

Mrs. Meir headed the Israeli government for five years and 78 days, until June 1974, when she was forced to resign under a storm of public outrage over her government's handling of the Yom Kippur war in October 1973.

"I was among the thousands who gathered outside her office to demand her dismissal," says Arik Schein, a veteran of that war. "Four years later I realize that Golda was a real pillar of strength for the country."

Her government was criticized because Israel was caught by surprise when Egypt and Syria attacked.

Mrs. Meir, the unchallenged elder statesman of Israel, has not made a maior public appearance since Egyptian President Anwar Sadat came to Jerusalem five months ago. She was at the airport to receive him, and later sat next to him in Israel's parliament, where the Egyptian leader delivered a speech.

But according to one source, "She is a powerful shadow of morality even if she is absent. People still ask themselves, 'What will Golda think,' before making a move."

She is known to spend a lot of time in bed, following hospitalization last month for reasons that were never disclosed. If she is suffering from anything more serious than the ills of old age, it is not public knowledge. She distains big parties, and her associates refuse to say how she will celebrate her birthday this year.

Mrs. Meir, who declined to be interviewed, is believed saddened by the death of virtually all those friends with whom she helped establish a Jewish homeland in Palestine. All her famed contemporaries — David Ben-Gurion, Chaim Weizmann, Levi Eshkol, Pinhas Sapir and Moshe Sharett — are dead.

She was personally shattered last year by the defeat of her Labor Party, which she helped found. It had ruled Israel for 29 years, and when Israel marks its 30th anniversary next week it will be the first Independence Day in its history with the Labor Party not in power.

Golda, as she is known to all Israelis, was born May 3, 1898, in Kiev. At the age of four she witnessed her father boarding up the family house in anticipation of an anti-Semitic pogrom. The sound of the hammer, she once said, never stopped pounding in her ears.

Her family emigrated to Milwaukee in 1906, and as a teen-ager she became an ardent Zionist. She married a mild-mannered painter named Morris Meyerson, on the condition that they make their home in what then was Palestine, where they arrived in 1921.

Plunging into politics, she worked her way up in the local Jewish hierarchy, showing a flair for diplomacy and oratory. But she and her husband drifted apart after she bore him a son and a daughter. He died in 1950.

The Nazi holocaust, and the failure of the Allied powers to help European Jewry, made her believe that no foreigner should ever be in a position to dictate terms to Israel. That belief forged her rigid attitude toward the Arabs in her later years of power.

In the 1920s, she was a labor organizer. She and Ben-Gurion founded the party that was in power for 45 years, from pre-state days until last year. At one time she was virtually prime minister of Palestine, heading the Jewish Agency under British rule at a time when Prime Minister Menachem Begin was a hunted leader of the underground.

In 1968 she retired from politics, but a year later was chosen as a compromise replacement for Premier Levi Eshkol, who died in office. She did not want the job, she said, and expected to serve no more than a few months until a younger candidate could be groomed.

In more than five years as prime minister, she led Israel through an economic boom, cemented its arms relationship with the United States, became warmfriends with Richard Nixon, chewed out Henry Kissinger for supposedly not showing sufficient sympathy for his fellow-Jews in Israel, and even scolded Pope Paul VI in a private audience because he dared to question Israel's attitude toward the Arabs.

When she left public office, Mrs. Meir continued making trips to the United States to raise funds for Israel. "One time I came to America with $50 and left with $50 million," she recalled.

Her ultimate accolade came from Sadat, who declared in Jerusalem that the era of Mideast peace he was launching had in fact been started by the disengagement agreements Mrs. Meir signed after the 1973 war.

Speakers Discuss Fluoride Standards

By LARRY SPRINGER
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The federal health standard for fluoride in drinking water may be too restrictive and ought to be reviewed, several speakers suggested during a symposium on the implications of the Safe Drinking Water Act.

More than 500 community water systems in Texas have fluoride levels exceeding the maximum levels for containment set by the Environmental Protection Agency under provisions of the federal drinking water statute.

Although consumption of water containing high levels of fluoride can lead to fluorosis — a condition that can cause bones to become highly brittle and to break easily — Texas Health Department officials indicate that fluoride at the highest levels monitored in Texas has only one apparent health effect — the mottling of the teeth of children under age 14.

University of Arizona Prof. Raymond A. Sierka, discussing the various methods of removing fluoride from drinking water, said there should perhaps be a review by EPA of the beneficial effects of mild fluorosis which can make teeth more resistant to cavities and, in some cases, actually strengthen weak bones.

He observed that the National Academy of Science, in its lengthy report on the provisions of the Safe Drinking Water Act, suggested there should be new "sociological studies to determine if mottling is still considered desirable."

C.K. Foster, chief of the Health Department's Drinking Water program, noted that because of the questionable health effects of fluoride in the levels found in most of the Texas water systems in technical violation of the national standard, the Health Department is seeking a revision of that requirement.

He noted that EPA officials have been discussing the fluoride standard — particularly as it pertains to Texas and several other Southwestern states — but so far have not proposed any revisions to the allowed maximum contaminant level.

The Health Department has talked with EPA about the possibility of obtaining a variance from the standard that would bring more than half of the 500 water supply systems — primarily in North and Northwest Texas — into compliance without necessitating the addition of sophisticated and somewhat expensive fluoride removal equipment.

Foster said, however, that EPA officials do not appear to favor granting a variance although they may consider the issuance of "exceptions" to the standard to many of the water systems in violation.

The problem with an exception, said Foster, is that there must first be a public hearing to determine a need and then, if the exception is granted, the water system must submit a compliance schedule setting out deadlines for ultimately bringing the system into line with the federal regulations.

Nothing that the fluoride and nitrate standards set out by EPA may require expensive additions to many of the state's water systems, Texas Municipal Advisory Council Executive Director Danny Burger said most of the Texas water systems are fortunate to have many financing methods available.

Those systems operated by special districts and municipalities can use such methods as tax bonds (if the entity has taxing authority and a willing electorate revenue bonds, certificates of obligation and so-called "contract revenue bonds.")

Two women, Michele Hirsch and Veronica Attar, both of 4402 36th St., said they were attacked by the occupants of a car at another westside location about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

The victims said after they changed lanes in front of the other vehicle, its driver tried to stop them. After both vehicles finally did stop and words were exchanged, the two men and woman in the other car began beating on the two women, reportedly causing minor injuries.

In recently reported break-ins Elbert Douglas Collins of 2105 E. 4th St., No. 7, told officers whoever removed a screen and entered his apartment through an open window Monday stole $654 worth of goods.

Estelle Perez of 4402 20th St. No. 4, complained that someone broke through a window at her apartment the same day and made off with her $675 television.

Charles Johnson of 4406 56th St. said someone stole his hubcaps—worth a reported $200—Tuesday while his vehicle was parked on the lot at Coronado High School.

Frank Millican of 2407 46th St. said someone took a $500 "code-a-phone" from the rear seat of his car recently, while Randy Hines of 4602 50th St. here, too, was victimized by hubcap thieves recently. Hines estimated his loss at $155.

Meanwhile, Willis D. Robinson of Idaloo said thieves took $275 worth of property from the rear of his pickup Monday or Tuesday, including a tool box and tools, a jack, a tire and a lug wrench.

Kathy Nelson of 2619 E. Baylor St. just wanted her $45 battery returned after it was stolen Monday or Tuesday, while David Bloodworth of 3704 69th St. was out several eight-track tapes and a caddy, all valued at $100.

Paul hipot of Box 3163 said someone stole his four hubcaps valued at $280 Monday or Tuesday, while his car was parked at a lodge in the 6000-block of Avenue A.

Shooting Incident At Local Nightclub Injures Bartender

A 32-year-old bartender was hospitalized with bullet wounds Tuesday after a man reportedly walked into a club about midnight Monday and fired two shots.

According to reports, the victim, Arion Shipman, and two other men ejected a customer from the Body Shop at 25th Street and Avenue K about 10:45 p.m. for creating a disturbance. Witnesses said, however, that as the man left with two companions he made no threats.

About an hour later, Shipman said, he was mixing drinks behind the bar when he saw the man re-enter the club and pull a gun. Unable to move out of the way, he reached for the pistol, but the suspect fired before the victim could get the weapon. Shipman told police he did hit the gun as he was shot the second time.

Witnesses said they saw the suspect leave the scene in a car with two other men.

After Shipman was taken to the Health Sciences Center Hospital, police reportedly recovered two bullets from shelving behind the bar. Shipman was reported in satisfactory condition late this morning.

Buddy Davis of 5016 15th St., another man and their wives reportedly were run off the road in West Lubbock about 9:30 p.m. The driver said they took out after the suspect's vehicle, trying to get the license number, and followed it to a house west of Slide Road. Before the victims could say anything to the occupants of the other car, however, several men reportedly ran from the residence and jumped Davis.

After one reportedly grabbed him around the neck, and another stuck a gun to his head, a third pulled a knife and stabbed him below the ribs. Davis's condition was reported as satisfactory late this morning.

Reports indicated the burglar first attempted, but failed, to break through a door with a dead-bolt lock.

Burglars apparently ransacked two Lubbock doctors' offices early Monday until they found what they came for—at least $9,000 in cash.

Meanwhile, three Lubbock men were arrested Tuesday for allegedly possessing controlled substances and an illegal firearm.

Police received a call from a local truckstop that the trio might be selling pills.

Officers arrived on the scene about 12:45 p.m., but could not locate the described vehicle.

Seconds later, however, police saw the westbound vehicle turn north on Avenue A in the 4200-block, and the driver allegedly failed to signal.

Police then stopped the vehicle and asked the men to step from the car.

As police looked into the vehicle, they reportedly saw a .22-caliber revolver with four, live rounds in it. As an officer attempted to retrieve the gun, he reportedly found several vials of pills.

The pills, as was the gun, were seized by the officers and reportedly were turned into the Department of Public Safety for analysis.

All three men were taken to county jail about 1 p.m.

The City of Lubbock would like to know who stole an estimated $150 worth of barricades and warning signs from the intersection of 79th Street and Abbyville Road in the past two days. So far, there are no suspects.

Candidates Echo Similar Sentiment

PLAINVIEW (Special) — About the only discernible difference between the five 19th Congressional District candidates at a Tuesday night political forum here is that three are Republicans and two are Democrats. And all are conservatives.

At least that was the sentiment echoed repeatedly by all five candidates Tuesday night at the Chamber of Commerce sponsored forum.

Republicans Joe Hickox, Jim Reese and George Bush are seeking the GOP nomination, while Democrats Kent Hance and Morris Sheats will battle it out for their party's nomination.

The highlight of the forum came when Hickox blasted Reese for operating his campaign in the red. He chided the Odessa Republican for opposing deficit spending at the federal level while operating his own campaign at a deficit.

"Practice what you preach," he said. Reese acknowledged having a deficit, but said his campaign owed no one but himself. Reese's 1976 campaign owes him $79,000 and he has borrowed $15,000 to finance his current effort.

Project For Dallas Upsets Port Houston Panel

HOUSTON (AP) — Port Houston commissioners are upset over a Treasury Department proposal to establish a district customs office in Dallas.

George Altwater, executive director of the port, has been authorized to send a protest to Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

The commissioners fear the Dallas office could eventually diminish the power and prestige of Houston as an international trading center.

Dallas currently is part of the Houston district, which, in turn, is part of U.S. Customs Region 6, which also headquarters in Houston.

Altwater told the commissioners Monday the planned opening of a Dallas office is an insidious move to bolster the image of Dallas-Fort Worth at Houston's expense.

He said U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, a Houston Republican, already has protested to Blumenthal that the new district could have a strong negative impact on Houston and that any effort to downgrade the Houston district "will be met with strong resistance."

Port Houston officials fear that if Dallas gets a district office customs employees in Houston will be drained off to staff the Dallas operations and that eventual efforts might be made the transfer the regional headquarters to Dallas.

John Thorne, congressional liaison for U.S. Customs Commissioner Robert E. Chasen, rejected such fears.

"Houston doesn't lose a damn thing," said Thorne, a former administrative assistant to U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox, a Dallas Democrat.

Thorne said Fort Worth-Dallas deserves a customs office because of a tremendous amount of international trade but there are no plans to pull personnel out of the Houston office or to switch the regional office to North Texas.

The regional office serves Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma, and two parishes in Louisiana.

Texas currently has district offices in Houston, Laredo, El Paso and Port Arthur.

In addition to Fort Worth-Dallas and Greater Houston, the Houston district created in 1966 serves Oklahoma and the Texas panhandle area.

The proposed Dallas office would serve Oklahoma and portions of Texas north of the 32nd parallel.

Altwater objected to the Dallas proposal being announced last Thursday by Bette Anderson, undersecretary of the treasury, without prior notification or hearings.

A Treasury spokesman, however, said the plan requires approval by Congress as well as funding and staffing allocations.

This, he said, will allow ample time for complaints and objections.

Customer Dispute Case Clouds Plans Of Gas Company

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of LoVaca Gathering Co. said Tuesday an early ruling by the Texas Railroad Commission on a customer dispute settlement plan is essential if there is to be a spin-off of LoVaca this year from Coastal States Gas Corp.

Bill Greehey, in a report to customers of the troubled Coastal States subsidiary, said the long controversy has created planning problems for the independent management established for LoVaca by a 1973 court order.

The Railroad Commission on April 20 concluded hearings on a plan for settlement of customer damage suits exceeding $1.6 billion. The disputes resulted from the wellhead price of natural gas purchased by LoVaca having increased from 23 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to more than $2 since 1973.

All parties have until May 15 to file closing statements and proponents will then have until May 30 to file reply briefs.

Panel Refuses To Hear Assistant

AUSTIN (AP) — State Treasurer Warren Harding sent his chief assistant Tuesday to tell a legislative subcommittee about state funds in interest-bearing accounts, but the panel wanted to hear it from Harding.

"It's disappointing the treasurer can't come and meet with the committee and give us his views, and we can't even find out what city he's in," said Rep. Frank Hartung, R-Houston, chairman of the oversight subcommittee of the House Financial Institutions Committee.

Harding was out of town, said his chief assistant Morris Stevens, who did not know where the treasurer was. Harding, who was appointed to his post, is running for election.

An average of 91.3 percent of all state available funds were in interest-bearing accounts in April, drawing $10,276,189, Stevens said.

"Although it is possible the commission could issue a permanent rate order anytime following May 30, we do not expect an order will be issued until sometime after the June 3 primary election runoff," he said.

A Railroad Commission source said Tuesday he would be surprised if an order is issued before mid-June.

Attorney General John Hill has indicated he will file his opinion on the settlement plan by May 15.

Major provisions of the settlement include separation of LoVaca from Coastal States by a spin-off of the stock of an independent company that would be LoVaca's parent. Some 13.4 percent of the common stock would go into a trust for the benefit of settling customers and the balance would go to holders of Coastal States' common stock.

Coastal States also would carry out a search program in LoVaca's supply area requiring expenditures of at least $180 million over a 15-year period with all gas discovered to be dedicated to LoVaca at discounted prices.

The new LoVaca report to customers included projections of customer gas costs for the 12 months ending next April.

The projected gas costs are May $2.12, June $2.15, July $2.19, August $2.20, September $2.17, October $2.20, November $2.21, December $2.21, January $2.23, February $2.23, March $2.20, and April $2.20.

The prices were said to be based on current estimates of demand weighted by actual and estimated contract prices, all of which are subject to change.

Dissidents Find Political Asylum In New Jersey

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — Just a ferry ride from Ellis Island, where their ancestors landed before them, Soviet dissidents seeking political asylum are finding a haven.

More than 100 Russian families, most of them Jewish, have found homes in this North Jersey community, once infamous for its large number of corrupt politicians.

Jersey City, across the Hudson River from New York City, was "the ideal regional place" to set up a placement center for Soviet emigres, said Arthur Abba Goldberg, founder of the Committee for the Absorption of Soviet Emigres.

"Most of the immigrants coming in from the Soviet Union want to live in New York City or its environs," Goldberg said. "New York City is still the culture center of the world... There are more cultural things to which they can relate from an international and Jewish point of view."

The United States has provided a haven for Soviet literary personalities, scientists and other political dissidents. About 4,000 Soviet Jews were given special refugee status last year to allow them to emigrate to the United States.

Goldberg, a 37-year-old investment banker in New York, said he founded CASE in 1974 because of his Lithuanian heritage and his desire to do a "mitzvah," a Yiddish term for a good deed.

Goldberg said the CASE-assisted Soviet emigres "integrate pretty well into the community but they're never going to become American Americans. You can't divorce 20 to 25 years of your life."

He said the immigrants range "from the highly educated to blue collar workers. It cuts right across the board." Most are in their 20s or early 30s and typically have one child whom they send to private or religious schools in Jersey City.

CASE sponsors refugees so they can obtain entry visas and serves as a housing and employment placement service once they arrive.

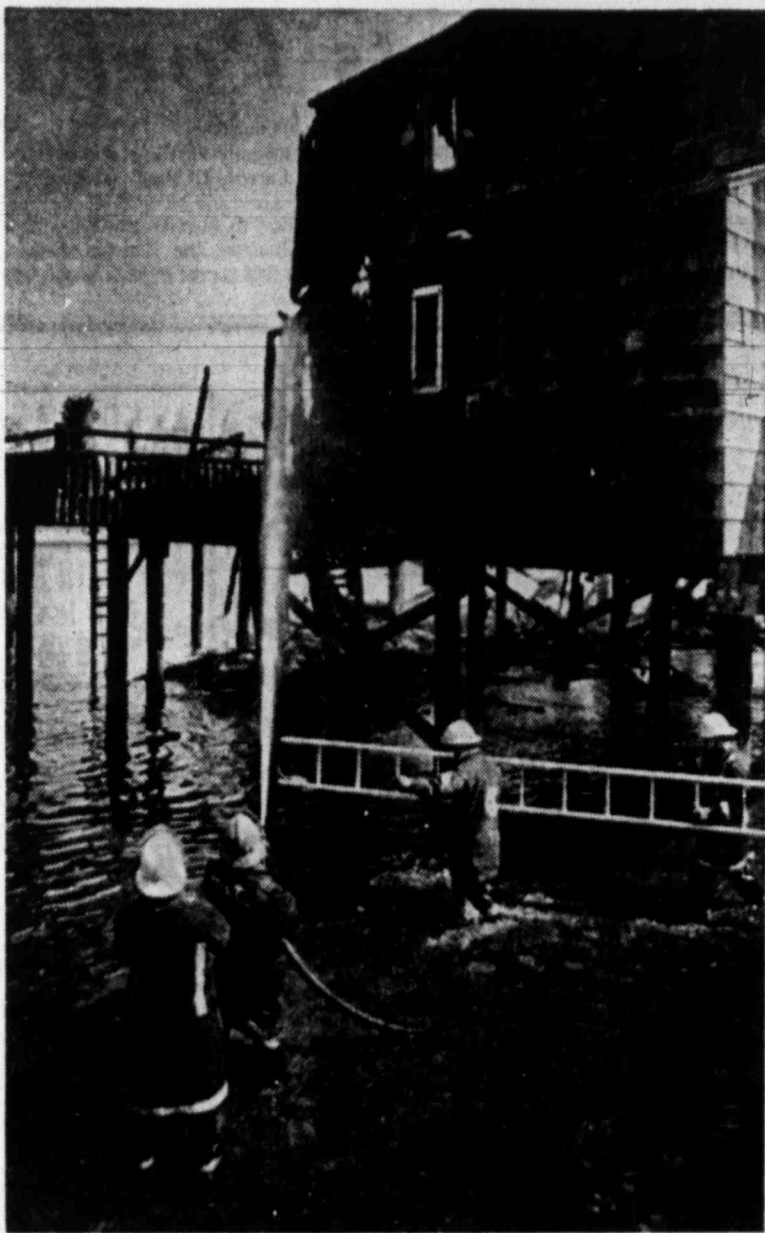

"The immigrants have a marvelous information network," Goldberg said. "Our name is passed around the immigrant grapevine to friends and relatives and friends of friends."

CASE, which receives funds from the city and through charitable contributions, is renovating six row houses and has "completed, under construction or under contract, work on 150 to 200 units," Goldberg said. The organization, he added, is completing a deal on a five-story building in downtown Jersey City to turn into a community center for the Soviet population here.

Jersey City, the state's second-largest city with a population of 257,000, is the home of the Hudson County Democratic political machine, once headed by Frank "I am the law" Hague.

The county's politics-once involved immigration in an odd way. A Jersey City mayor went to Italy to pick up a relative of America's discoverer to march in a Columbus Day parade. While the mayor was in Italy, his political opponents pointed out to immigration authorities that he had entered the country illegally years earlier. He eventually got back to Jersey City, but after some delay.

RESORT ARSON — Firemen wash down the ruins of a home in Atlantic City, N.J., Tuesday where a family of four had to jump into the bay to escape the flames. Atlantic City Assistant Fire Chief John Brenner said, "It's absolutely without a doubt arson." (AP Laserphoto)

Firefighters Battle Atlantic City Fires

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Four members of a family were forced to leap from their home into frigid bay waters Tuesday when fire of suspicious origin erupted in the Chelsea Heights section of this resort city.

"Because of the intense heat, they couldn't get out of the front door," Fire Capt. Lincoln Green said. "The only way out was to get into the bay."

More than 140 firefighters from Atlantic City and six neighboring towns worked early Tuesday to bring under control five separate fires called in minutes apart, Green said. An additional 80 firefighters were standing by.

Green said the fires, all within a five-block radius across town from the famed oceanfront boardwalk, were considered suspicious and possibly related. "It's ironic that you have five fires that run right behind the others — maybe three or five minutes apart."

No arrests had been made and the fires were under investigation, Green said.

Witnesses said Steve Labov, 31, chairman of the city Rent Leveling Board; his wife, Debbie, 29; daughter, Jennifer, 5; and son, Paul, 2; leaped from their two-story condominium home into the 40-degree bay waters.

Green said they were rescued by a firefighter who dove in after them.

The family and a firefighter were treated at Atlantic City Medical Center for exposure and then released. Green said one other firefighter suffered a pulled shoulder fighting the blaze.

The Labov home was one of five units in a condominium destroyed in the fire, Green said. The fire, he added, appeared to have started on the porch of the back unit in the condominium.

The Chelsea Heights neighborhood is "at least" middle class, police said. "It's the bigger, older homes out there," a dispatcher said.

Meeting Scheduled On Area Hospital

MATADOR (Special) — County commissioners will meet with the Motley County Hospital Board May 11 to decide if the financially ailing hospital can keep its doors open.

The hospital, which reopened July 5, 1976 after being closed for seven years, serves some 1,800 patients according to administrator S.J. Braselton.

Braselton said that without the facility, most patients will have to be sent to Lubbock and Plainview hospitals for treatment. He said hospital taxes probably will have to be raised in order to keep the facility open.

Police Find Parents Of Wandering Boy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Charles Todd Jr.'s mom didn't pack his suitcase and tell the 4-year-old to leave home, it turns out.
Police say that's just a story the boy made up — or the way he saw his adventure — after his parents left him with an elderly babysitter for a week and he walked out last Sunday.
The story got around, though — to local newspapers and television, and to national news media. People recognized the boy, and through them, police located his parents Tuesday.
The child was to be reunited with them later Tuesday.
Police Sgt. William Rowe, who heads the division of child abuse, said he did not expect charges to be filed in the case. After the parents were found, he said police decided this was what happened:

Last Sunday, the boy's parents dropped him off at the home of Lillie May Jackson, 70, of Columbus, expecting him to stay a week.
Rowe described her as "an elderly woman that this family knew from church ... She wanted the child to stay with her for a few days, and the parents consented. They dropped the child off at the woman's house and he apparently took his suitcase and walked out of the home. We found him wandering around."
The youngster was picked up by police that night on the city's east side, carrying a neatly packed overnight bag. He said he was 6 years old, lived in a red house, had two brothers, and had been sent away from home with his suitcase.

Mideast Jet Sale Veto Urged By House Panel

of the panel's Middle East subcommittee, is trying to get Carter to make concessions for Israel in time for the committee to support him and thus kill the veto resolution.

Hamilton and others are demanding no specific concessions, however. They generally want Carter to give Israel more planes and the Saudis less, or at least impose conditions to prevent the Arab warplanes from ever being used against Israel.

Most opponents of the arms deal said they object to having to vote on the warplanes for Israel and two Arab countries before it is clear whether peace can be achieved in the Middle East.

Several said they might support the sales if Israel gets more concessions — making clear their real concern is Israel's safety in case Middle East peace talks fail.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., said he thinks the committee has 25 votes for approving the veto resolutions that would force the Carter to make concessions.

"I think we'll approve them — but only as a strategy to force Carter's hand," Derwinski said.

A number of members said, however, they can't get a solid estimate of the planes' effect on the effort to negotiate a Mideast peace settlement.

"I can argue it every conceivable way," said Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass. "And we're risking catastrophe no matter how we vote."

Meanwhile, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said he expected a majority of Senate Republicans to support the war planes sales.

"There is no Republican position on the question of the arms sales ...," he said. "I do favor the sale to the three countries involved and my view is that a majority of Republicans would also support the package."

Earlier Tuesday, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said congressional action on the sale of jet fighters to Saudi Arabia should not be influenced by the remarks of Sheikh Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, who was quoted as saying, "We place great importance and significance on this transaction. We feel we badly need it. It's for our security. It is to defend Saudi Arabia."

dispute between the French and the militiamen over the "ambush" incident.

The PLO said the dead man was the bodyguard of the missing PLO officer. A spokesman for the Lebanese leftists said two Lebanese were killed in the "ambush" of a militia patrol near Tyre.

Tuesday's casualties brought to six the number of U.N. troops killed since the peacekeeping forces entered south Lebanon in March to supervise an Israeli withdrawal.

Israeli troops entered southern Lebanon March 15 with the stated purpose of wiping out Palestinian guerrilla bases.

The sundown barrage against the French barracks lasted about 20 minutes. The PLO spokesman said the French returned fire.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said he was "profoundly concerned" by the development and ordered Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Erskine of Ghana, commander of the U.N. forces in southern Lebanon, to return to the area immediately.

Erskine was in New York to attend a Security Council session today on Waldheim's request to increase the 4,000-man force in southern Lebanon by 2,000.

Palestinians, French Exchange Gunfire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist gunmen fired on French peacekeeping troops in southern Lebanon twice Tuesday, killing one and wounding seven, a United Nations spokesman said. Five French soldiers and a Palestine Liberation Organization officer were reported missing.

Among those wounded was Col. Jean Salvan, commander of the French forces in southern Lebanon.

A United Nations spokesman in New York gave this account:

Palestinian guerrillas ambushed a French vehicle northeast of Tyre Tuesday evening, wounding one French soldier.

At that time a Palestine Liberation Organization representative was at French battalion headquarters in Tyre talking with Col. Salvan. They drove to the ambush area to investigate, followed by two French soldiers in a U.N. jeep.

Shortly after they left, Palestinians opened fire on the barracks, killing one French soldier and wounding five.

Salvan's bullet-riddled jeep was found in Tyre. Salvan was reported out of danger in a Beirut hospital, but the fate of the PLO officer was not known. The U.N. jeep with the two French soldiers has not been located.

At about the same time a French armored car with a crew of three was reported missing. It was found destroyed near Tyre. No information was available on its crew.

Lebanese leftist militiamen allied with the Palestinians said they launched a mortar attack on French headquarters Monday in retaliation for an "ambush" of militiamen Sunday by French troops.

The PLO said one of its men was killed and two French paratroopers were wounded in the revenge attack, which broke out while the PLO was mediating a contents of a follow-up letter mailed out recently.

Both mailings were by the Richard A. Viguier Co. of Falls Church, Va., which is known for its direct-mail fund-raising work for conservative candidates and causes.

The three-page letter from Hatch was the second controversial letter to enter into the Reese campaign.

One from former California Gov. Ronald Reagan wishing Reese success in the primary has drawn criticism from Joe Hickox and George Bush, the other Republican candidates, as well as from their supporters.

Reese said Tuesday that he also got a letter from Rep. John Rhodes, Republican House minority leader, last June in which Rhodes encouraged his candidacy and wished him success.

He noted that the Rhodes letter was written before Mahon announced his retirement and before Hickox and Bush entered the primary.

Moro Letters Spur Search For Code

ROME (AP) — Investigators looked for secret signals Tuesday in the recent flurry of letters from Aldo Moro in the belief the kidnapped former premier may have buried clues to his whereabouts and captors in the handwritten messages.

Many believe Moro, long an expert in political code language, may be trying through the letters to pass on crucial information with a new code — making odd references to names and old and recent events, and striking out several words.

Tactics Switched
The Red Brigades terrorists who have held the 61-year-old politician captive for 47 days have switched tactics in the past week. Instead of the "communiques" they issued periodically until Apr. 22, they are using their victim to press for negotiations himself through the letters to politicians and friends.

Observers say the letters may confirm one conclusion the investigators have reached — that Italy's urban terrorism has a significant southern Italian connection. Until recently, urban terrorism was believed centered mainly in the industrial north.

In one letter last weekend, Moro named Riccardo Misasi, an obscure Christian Democrat member of parliament, and said he was asking Misasi to summon the ruling party's full leadership into session to discuss the terrorists' demand for an exchange of prisoners.

Quirk Noted
Political analyst Ottorino Gurgio noted that Moro, strangely, seemed to ignore the fact that Misasi could not do this without breaking the party's basic rules. Moro, president of the Christian Democrat Party, cannot delegate his authority under any circumstances.

Gurgio said, Moro may have named Misasi because he is from Calabria, the rugged toe of the Italian peninsula, thus hinting at a Calabrian connection in his kidnapping.

A half dozen extremists, including a young woman university professor, were arrested in Calabria during the massive anti-terrorist drive brought on by the Moro kidnapping.

"Anti-State Plot"
Police did not immediately link them to the Red Brigades, but Rome prosecutor Giovanni de Matteo said over the weekend that findings pointed to the existence of a national terrorist center coordinating the Red Brigades and other less-known extremist groups, including the Calabrian one, into what he called an "anti-state plot."

Sociologist Egerio di Nallo, an expert in the language of political extremists, said the Red Brigades used many Mafia-style terms in their communiques, from "boss" to "cosca," or clan.

"It is the language of leftists above all in the south," Miss di Nallo said.

Relatives and Interior Ministry experts agree that the 15 or so letters purportedly from Moro are authentic. Seven of them were sent over the weekend.

Whatever code signals may be written into his letters, Moro's main message is a plea for the government to modify its refusal to bargain with the Red Brigades kidnapers.

"The very lucidity that the letters shows is the lucidity of a man who is playing his last card for survival ... and is compelled to become a tool in his enemies' hands," wrote Milan's state-owned newspaper Il Giorno.

Italy's wave of terrorist attacks continued.

In Grugliasco, a small town near the northern city of Turin, police said a TNT bomb heavily damaged a newly built police station overnight. No injuries were reported.

FBI Man Testifies To Agency's Role In Viet Spy Case

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (UPI) — An FBI man testified at an espionage trial Tuesday that agents intercepted, photographed — and sent right along — nearly all the U.S. documents the defendants allegedly were funneling to Communist Vietnam.

Agent William Fleshman Jr. of the FBI's C15 counterintelligence squad said he worked closely with another star prosecution witness — a female CIA counter-spy — to crack the alleged Vietnamese spy ring.

The government used Fleshman's testimony to support that of Mrs. Dung Krall, the paid CIA agent and daughter of a former Viet Cong ambassador to Moscow.

Mrs. Krall testified that, acting as the ring's courier as a double agent for U.S. intelligence, she got a grocery bag full of U.S. documents from defendant David Truong on one occasion and a cardboard carton full on another.

She said she delivered them to Hanoi officials in Paris after the FBI had examined and photographed them.

Truong, 32, an expatriate Vietnamese, and Ronald Humphrey, 42, a U.S. Information Agency employee, have pleaded innocent to charges they conspired to steal classified documents from Humphrey's USIA office in Washington and send them to Hanoi officials at the United Nations and in Paris.

Fleshman produced photographs he and other agents made during their surveillance of Mrs. Krall's meetings with Truong.

Asked why the U.S. agents allowed the stolen documents to proceed through the courier chain to Hanoi if they were — as the government alleges — classified, Fleshman said it was considered necessary in order to protect Mrs. Krall's cover and allow her to continue spying on the spies.

Trial testimony brought out that the State Department had decided none of the pilfered documents would unduly damage the United States if they fell into hostile hands.

Fleshman said Mrs. Krall came to the FBI and the CIA with an offer to become an undercover operative.

"She expressed concern to me about activities in the United States that she felt should be looked into," Fleshman said.

At the trial's outset Monday, Truong's attorney, Michael Tigar, described the materials involved as low-grade "diplomatic chit-chat" and said the objective was not espionage but an effort to promote friendlier U.S.-Vietnamese postwar relations.

Humphrey's attorney, Warren L. Miller, said his client was no spy but simply "a man who loved too much" — a reference to the common-law Vietnamese refugee wife he labored to free from Communist imprisonment last year. She attended the trial with her four children.

Mrs. Krall, wife of an unidentified U.S. naval intelligence officer, has said Truong believed her to be merely a fellow countryman sympathetic to his cause and willing to do courier duty.

Under prosecution questioning Tuesday, she said she used the false cover story that she was in the export-import business and alleged that, on one occasion, Truong gave her a grocery sack full of documents in envelopes.

The date was not specified. Most of the charges describe acts that allegedly took place in 1977.

She said she delivered allowed FBI agents to photograph the documents before she delivered them to a Hanoi official identified as Phan Thanh Nam in Paris. She said she also carried a sealed letter back to Truong.

No further details about the documents or letters emerged Tuesday.

Humphrey's attorney, Miller, established on cross examination that Mrs. Krall never met his client or had any contact with him.

Trio Arrested In Kidnapping; Victim Returned Unharmful

MCKENZIE, Tenn. (AP) — A barefoot Jodie Elizabeth Gaines, wearing blue jeans and clutching a red rose, returned home unharmful Tuesday, 3 1/2 days after she was kidnapped.

The quarter-million dollars in ransom Ben Gaines, a wealthy businessman, put up for his 18-year-old daughter was recovered and authorities said three persons were in custody.

A spokesman for James Trimbach, special agent in charge of the Memphis FBI office, said David Michael Wilson, 25, his wife Patsy, and Andrew Dickson, 22, all of Paris, Tenn., were arrested and were held in the Henry County jail at Paris. Officers and bloodhounds searched for a third unidentified man in a Paris-area manhunt. No charges had been filed.

Jodie's mother Ludie dropped the ransom Monday night at a location specified by the kidnappers in an afternoon telephone call. Jodie was to have been released at 3:30 a.m. Tuesday, but the money was not picked up and she was not released. Then the family, which had asked the FBI not to interfere, called for a full-scale effort by authorities to find Jodie.

Gaines told about 200 friends and reporters who gathered Tuesday afternoon outside his home in this west Tennessee town of 5,500 that Jodie was in no condition to come outside.

When he saw his daughter Tuesday morning, Gaines said, "She had come as close to being destroyed as I could see."

Newsmen said that when her parents, sister and brother brought her home, she walked barefoot with her father to a back gate, stooped to hug the family dog, then embraced a state trooper standing nearby.

Her father put his arms around her neck and they turned for the door, her hands trembling. They said nothing. She had been examined at a clinic 10 miles away in Huntingdon where officials pronounced her unharmful but distraught. She apparently was given the rose by hospital staffers.

Standing beneath a banner reading, "Welcome Home Jodie," Gaines, who owns a local furniture factory, said he wished people did not have the lust for money that they do.

Trimbach said a kidnapper first contacted Mrs. Gaines on Saturday morning. A man trying to disguise his voice demanded $250,000. On Monday, a caller directed her to drive with the ransom to Paris, Tenn., then on to Murray, Ky., and back into Tennessee. As instructed, she left the money just below the border.

By Tuesday morning at 11:30 a.m. CDT, federal, state and county officers had traced Jodie to a country cabin near the Big Sandy River in the Springville area, about 15 miles northeast of McKenzie.

Gaines said that when he decided against further attempts to deal with the kidnappers, "We asked for the money to be picked up and brought back and put a full court press on trying to hold every bill and every hollow in this community because I could not stand the idea of my daughter — I know she had to be going through a lot of torment and a lot of tragedy — and I could not stand for that to continue on any longer."

He said it is "a tragedy that we live in a country ... where things like this have to happen for money."

"I wish we as people could not have that much lust for any material wealth or any material that we would punish a human being like I've seen our 18-year-old girl."

Estimate Hiked On State Vote

asserted organized crime could be kept out through strong laws, vigorously enforced.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, campaigning for election to his first full term, said he has been endorsed by 15 daily and weekly newspapers.

"I feel their recommendation ... speaks well of my tenure as commissioner of agriculture and of my plans for the Texas Department of Agriculture during the next four years," Brown said.

His opponent, Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Rosenberg, said Brown "is against the family farm and favors a trend towards corporate farming."

"If the present agriculture commissioner is doing anything to stop the parade away from the farms, he is keeping it a secret," Hubenak said in a statement released in Austin.

John Thomas Henderson, a candidate for the railroad commission, said consumers have told him they are fed up with the present commissioners, including his opponent, Mack Wallace.

"Utility rates are exorbitant, and much of the blame is due to the failure of the railroad commission members to act aggressively in their behalf, say the consumers," Henderson asserted.

Congressman Bob Krueger, a U.S. Senate candidate, said his opponent, Joe Christie, "has demonstrated in the last couple of TV debates that he hasn't done his homework."

"I don't see how he can come out for a bill that doesn't exist, but that's what he did. He came out for Scoop Jackson's press release on a farm bill," Krueger said.

House Passes Solar Energy Loan Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Tuesday passed legislation to promote solar energy through a $75 million loan program for small businesses that make, distribute, install and service solar equipment.

House passage came on the eve of Sun Day, designated by Congress to publicize the promise of solar energy.

Egg Producer Threatened With Suit Over Flies

Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin said Tuesday he is sending a letter to Cal-Maine Foods warning the company to remedy fly-breeding conditions at its egg production farm near Shallowater.

"The letter basically refers to the action I took last year. Unless they clean up the farm to meet state health inspection standards, a lawsuit will be filed to enjoin them from operating their business," Griffin said.

"It's up to Cal-Maine now. Either they comply or they're asking for a lawsuit." Griffin said he expects the firm to bring the egg farm into compliance by improving sanitation and fly-control measures. That's what Cal-Maine did last year after the DA sent a similar threat of injunction.

As in last year's action, Griffin said he will give Cal-Maine 10 days to act on the matter. He also said there will be "no further letters."

Should Cal-Maine alleviate the fly problem only temporarily, Griffin said he will not hesitate to file suit if future complaints are brought by citizens and the Texas Department of Health.

Dr. John Board, regional director for the state health agency, sent a staff member Tuesday afternoon to provide Griffin with fly counts and other data. Board said the information should be sufficient to allow the DA to "determine this (farm) is a public nuisance" — the legal prerequisite for seeking an injunction.

Griffin said he will rely on the state health department to document the action taken by Cal-Maine.

An estimated 60 residents of Shallowater and the surrounding area met Monday night with their lawyer, Warren Goss, and with Griffin to discuss legal action against the egg production operation, located in northwest Lubbock County.

The citizens said they have been plagued with flies for the past seven years and that they are fed up with the bureaucracy of getting state and county officials to act in the matter.

Many residents said they want the egg farm shut down altogether. And they indicated they may file a civil suit to attempt just that if county and state officials don't act first and forcefully.

"This is something of concern for all of us — not only because it's an inconvenience, but because it's a health hazard," Billy Hayslip, who moderated the town-hall meeting, said.

"If we're going to get it done, we're going to have to do it ourselves. I don't trust them (Cal-Maine) to try to control the problem. I think we're going to have to close them down to solve it once and for all," said Rhonda Harden, a rural resident who lives near the egg farm. Jean Holt, owner of a Shallowater restaurant, said the swarms of flies "are about to put me out of business. There's no way I can control them. It's so bad that when the wind is blowing my way, I'm going to have to close the restaurant. I have a right to make a living, too."

The residents contend that poor sanitation and inadequate fly-control measures at the egg farm, which includes several thousand chickens and 12 laying houses, have fostered the insects.

They claim the flies originating at the farm spread into the countryside and even Shallowater proper, bothering children and pets and forcing residents to stay indoors.

"Even in our own homes, we're not safe. The flies get into everything," Mrs. Harden said.

Residents say they've put up with the problem for seven years. There have been periodic efforts to get relief — petitions were circulated and complaints filed with state and county officials — but little has been done, they said.

Last year, after an investigation by the state health department, threats of an injunction by Griffin and a series of Avalanche-Journal stories, residents said Cal-Maine instituted a fly-control program that alleviated the problem for about three weeks.

"But now they're back, and they're worse than ever," Mildred Cook, another rural resident, said.

Monday night, Shallowater citizens formed a committee to keep tabs on the fly problem and follow up on action expected to be taken by state and county authorities. If nothing is done, the committee will recommend whether to file a suit.

Goss said citizens should give the state and county 10 days to act. He said residents then could file a civil suit in U.S. District Court against Cal-Maine, the county and the state health department.

"If these individuals choose not to carry out their responsibilities, then it's up to us as individuals to seek some relief in the civil courts," Goss said.

Goss said Cal-Maine could be fined up to $200 for each day it allows the fly problem to continue.

"It's a pretty bad problem," Board said of the flies. "The citizens out there are mad. I don't blame them."

But he said legal problems hindered initiating earlier action against the egg farm. By state law, Board said, such action is supposed to go through the county health officer. Lubbock County lists its health officer Dr. James Morris — but in practice, Morris serves only as physician for the county jail.

Because Morris was unable to act on the complaints, Board said he decided to go directly to Griffin — an option the state health department has under a new state regulation.

Park Patrols, Barricades To Continue

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Police patrols and temporary street barricades will continue to be used as traffic deterrents around Tech Terrace Park, the Citizens Traffic Commission decided Monday.

The interim measure will be used until cost estimates are secured for two "temporary permanent" barricades, the commissioners decided.

The commission, concerned that former Tech Terrace Park users would transfer their activities to other nearby parks, also voted to ask patrolling off-duty police officers at Tech Terrace to periodically check all recreational spots in the area.

After receiving cost estimates for the "temporary permanent" barriers, the commission will decide whether they should be installed to disrupt traffic patterns around the park at Flint Avenue and 24th Street.

The barricades, which would replace current temporary barriers on the park's northwest and southwest corners, later could be replaced by concrete islands to create cul de sacs.

Dr. Martin Gundersen, spokesman for homeowners around the park, asked commissioners to recommend to the city council that the interim barricades be installed while police patrol continues.

Both measures have been effective in controlling traffic congestion in the park area, he said. "Both together are necessary," he added in response to a city staffer's opinion that police patrol has been the deciding factor in reducing park problems.

Vaughn Hendrie, city information officer, had said he believes a steady decline in traffic activity at the park is due mostly to police visibility.

He said two police officers have patrolled the park area the past several weekends.

And, Hendrie added, "I believe we have accomplished the objective of preventing circling traffic" around the park.

Citizens in the area initially had complained to the commission about the circling traffic as well as congestion around the park on weekends. The commission has used temporary barricades and police patrols to break up the traffic jams.

Now, however, the residents are asking for the "temporary permanent" barriers to halt what they say is steady speeding around the park at night.

Gundersen told the commission that the speeding problem will have to be addressed eventually by the city.

Barricades, especially permanent ones, could stop that problem as well as the weekend congestion, he suggested. Hendrie told the commission that two permanent barriers would cost about $55,000. And, he noted, he has "seen" some of the weekend park users transfer their activities to other nearby parks.

Commissioners indicated by consensus that they are concerned about the possibility of the Tech Terrace Park problems being moved to other parks in the city. And they said they don't believe that speeding around the parks can be prevented by traffic pattern disruptions such as barricades.

Therefore, they concluded, it will be better to temporarily continue the police patrols around Tech Terrace Park until their effectiveness can be evaluated further and the cost problems of barriers studied.

Rosanna Wins Rat Race

WINOOSKI, Vt. (UPI) — Rosanna Rosanna Dana was the best rat of them all at the second annual "Rat Olympics" sponsored by the St. Michael's College Psychology Department.

Rosanna won the 4-foot dash, 2-inch hurdles and placed second in the obstacle course and bar press to give her 14 points and the championship Monday night.

In addition, she established a record in the 4-foot dash by completing the event in 1:00.05.

Rosanna's victory was a disappointment for backers of Great Rat Hope, a pre-meet favorite who only placed in one event.

Of 10 rats competing, Rattales picked up 11 points to take second place and Rattitude was third with nine points.

The rats had been in training for the past 15 days.

Vance, Fukuda Discuss Japan's Trade Surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met Tuesday with Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda and said he believes there is a strong commitment on Japan's part to reduce its massive trade surplus with the United States over the next year.

Vance told reporters the Japanese-American trade agreement signed last January was "good progress and I'm confident we are going to make further progress."

Fukuda, here on a two-day official visit, met with Vance for 90 minutes and the two leaders reviewed the situation in the Middle East, Africa, China and Korea.

Fukuda had separate meetings later in the day with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House International Relations Committee and was not available for comment on his working luncheon with Vance. Fukuda will meet with President Carter on Wednesday.

Vance described the relationship of the two countries as excellent despite their trade problems. Under heavy American pressure at the turn of the year, Japan promised to implement a series of measures aimed at reducing its surplus with the United States from $10 billion to $6 billion by next spring.

Vance said the strength of the U.S. relationship with Japan "is really the cornerstone or the pillar on which our Asian policy is founded and it will remain so."

Later, Fukuda gave a $1 million check to the widow of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey to benefit the Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

Fukuda presented the check in a ceremony in the Capitol to Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn.

Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda praised Humphrey as "a great statesman and a friend of Japan."

He said that Humphrey had been informed of the gift before his death of cancer last January and had acknowledged it in "a very warm letter."

"I believe that was the last signature by him," Sonoda said.

Mrs. Humphrey accepted the contribution as "a wise investment in education, in youth and in the future."

"The Humphrey Institute will be a center for the education, stimulation and recruitment of bright young men and women for positions in public service," she said.

No new taxes. What has it meant for Texas?

The people of Texas like Dolph Briscoe's kind of government because they are getting more from state government now than ever before, but at the same time, they are keeping more of their hard-earned wages for their own use, rather than paying higher taxes for unneeded or ineffective programs.

But the people of Texas understand this, too: when something needs to be done, Dolph Briscoe gets it done.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have put two and one-half billion additional state dollars into improving our public schools.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have increased average teacher salaries 53 percent.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have put new emphasis on vocational and technical education.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have increased funding for medical education by 250 percent.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have increased spending for mental health and mental retardation by 174 percent.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have expanded programs for the aged by 200 percent.

- During the Briscoe Administration, we have protected our $35 billion investment in the best highway transportation system in the world by enacting the first comprehensive, long-range highway program since 1955 — and we did it without raising the gasoline tax.

The choice is clear. Do we want to continue with Dolph Briscoe's style of leadership that stands on a solid record of prosperity without big government and without new taxes? Or do we want the kind of John Hill leadership that will promise anything to gain votes? The kind of leadership that will surely result in more governmental interference in your life and a state income tax next year.

Measure May Grant Exemptions From Endangered Species Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee voted Tuesday for legislation that could lead to the extinction of certain endangered species living near proposed federal construction projects.

The measure authorizes a special federal board to grant exemptions from the 1973 Endangered Species Act, which guarantees protection to endangered species and their critical habitat.

Under the legislation, the board could grant an exemption if at least five of its seven members decided that a construction project involved benefits that "clearly outweigh" the value of the threatened species.

The voice vote by the natural resources subcommittee cleared the measure for consideration Friday by the full Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

The subcommittee skipped over two proposed changes, which are expected to be debated by the full committee.

One, by Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., would set aside one seat on the seven-member board for the governor of the state in which a project is proposed.

The second, by Sen. James A. McClure,

R-Idaho, would require the government to file a formal environmental impact statement before it could list an area as critical habitat for an endangered species.

McClure complained that the public has no say in the administrative process by which critical habitats are officially listed.

The proposal backed by the subcommittee is opposed by environmental groups and the Interior Department. It is part of a measure reauthorizing the Endangered Species Act for the next three fiscal years. The law's authorization is due to expire on Sept. 30.

Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, a prime backer of the proposal, said it would head off attempts to weaken the Endangered Species Act even further when it reaches the Senate floor.

"I personally would prefer to see the act remain as it stands," he said. But he said the act "is likely to be repealed altogether if it is allowed to the floor" without amendments.

Opponents of the law claim it lacks flexibility. Under its provisions, federal agencies must make sure their actions have no adverse effect on endangered species or their critical habitat. If a problem arises, the agency involved is required to submit to a formal consultation process with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The law provides that irreconcilable conflicts should be resolved on the side of the endangered species.

The act has produced one celebrated conflict that has reached the U.S. Supreme Court.

An appeals court has ordered construction stopped on the Tennessee Valley Authority's Tellico Dam because of evidence that its completion would destroy the critical habitat of the snail darter, a small fish. The U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments last month on an appeal by the TVA.

Culver cited a report from the Fish and Wildlife Service, however, that as many as a dozen more projects may provoke serious conflicts under the law. He warned that political pressure for weakening its provisions could result.

Artists Find Success In Texas

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Carlos Jordan came from Puerto Rico to Texas to study at Texas A & M. David Strand came to escape the California fog.

Both found permanent homes and art-oriented careers.

They got together recently at Reese Air Force Base where Jordan, an 18-year veteran of the Reese graphics section, had just won the coveted Meritorious Civilian Service Award and Strand, a free lance illustrator from Dallas, was recording the Reese simulator launching for Air Force art annals.

It took Jordan all of four days to discover A&M wasn't for him. Texas Tech hit a responsive chord, so he headed for Lubbock, courses in commercial art, marriage with a Lubbock girl and a civilian job at Reese.

It took more than six years for Strand to get the courage to leave a good career and come, jobless, in search of clean air and a new career.

How Jordan has progressed shows in the recent award, the first time in 16 years it has come to Reese. For 17 years Jordan had zero-write-ups by the Inspector General teams in the graphics section.

He brought the base photo lab up to the standards of the graphics section, then moved into his current position, technical representative of the contract officer, when the units went civilian contract routes.

The 64th Flying Training Wing emblem, the Rudy Reese mascot design, the oil portrait of Lt. Augustus F. Reese for whom the base was named and the Friends of Reese series are a few of his contributions over the years.

Making sure Reese and other area military branches received all graphics necessary for their missions—from a general's briefing on the base to an advertisement for a coming attraction at a Reese club—was his responsibility.

Now, he is charged with making sure the civilian contractor does his job to Air Force specifications. Strand started his art career with a greeting-card company.

"An art director gave you ideas, you did some sketches and, if he liked them, you finished them," he explained.

Greeting card work is an art in itself, he added, and an individual taste must be adjusted to fit the pattern. Some artists can't adapt bold art concepts to the field.

From there, he went into the newspaper advertising department, producing anything any segment of the Riverside paper needed.

After six years of constant smog, which the wind never seemed to blow away, he headed for Texas, picking Dallas as a good commercial art prospect.

It took a while to convince him there were no jobs in Dallas. Convinced, he took his portfolio and went hunting free lance work.

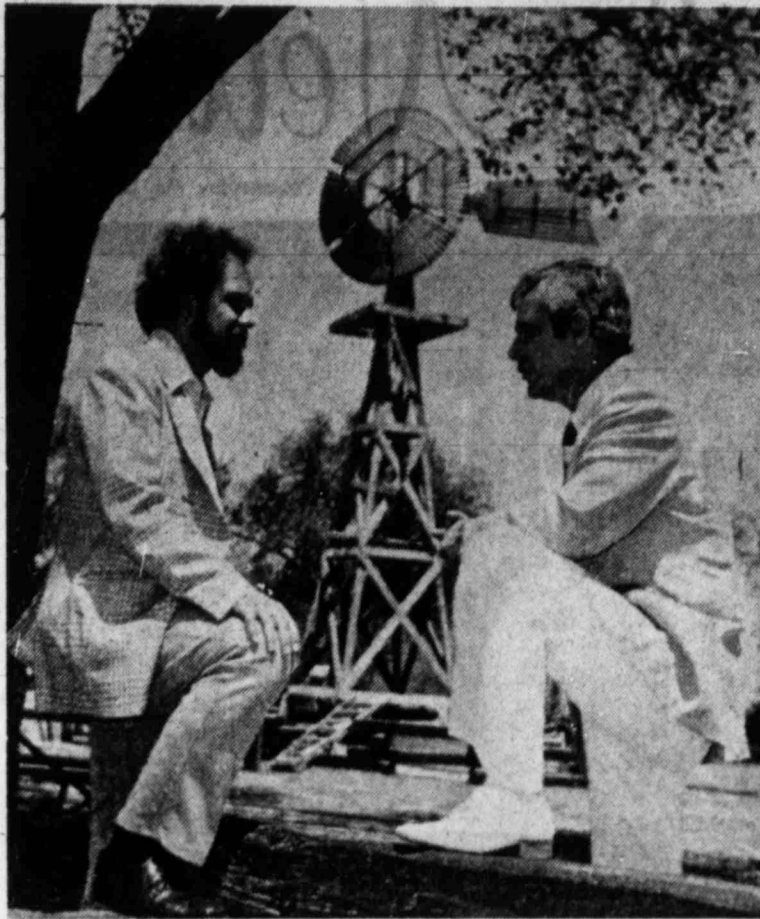

Six months later, he was established and, today, sends his "every six weeks" mailers to 130 firms around the country.

The thrill of the game is never working on the same thing twice. Strand got into the Air Force art field as a member of the Los Angeles Society of Illustrators, one of three such groups with which the Air Force works for additions to the historical collection.

He came to Reese as the closest society member to the scene of the new instrument flying simulator implementation.

Photographs taken at Reese will be presented in a single montage combination like one he did of Avenger Field at Sweetwater or in several paintings, whichever way the art seems to want to go.

There is no pay for the art, Strand said. The Air Force flies the artist where they need him, and, at specified times—once a year in the past but farther apart with a new money crunch situation—flies all artists with new art to Washington for a banquet and show plus a Washington tour.

The artist is left free to do his assignment as it strikes him. Strand prefers acrylics for painting and does a lot of pen and ink.

Adding to the 4,500-piece Air Force collection gives a different scope to his regular work—story boards for television commercials and art for foods, oil companies, even wildlife sketches for engraving on gun metal.

This is the first on-the-spot assignment for Strand. Previous work has been done from research and photographs supplied by the Air Force.

Jordan was his unofficial host during the base assignment to add Reese to the Air Force historical art collection, part of which now is touring the South Plains in a traveling exhibit.

Optimists Urge All-Out Solar Energy Drive

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Solar energy! Everybody's for it; nobody's against it.

It isn't really free and easy, and adopting it in place of oil, gas, coal and uranium will be at best a long, costly and uncertain process.

But solar energy has so much going for it that optimists want an all-out drive, on the scale of wartime mobilization, to base the nation's economy on energy drawn directly or indirectly from the light and heat of the sun.

And the worst thing pessimists can say about it is that we can't switch to solar energy fast enough.

Denis Hayes, who organized "Earth Day" in 1970 to publicize the environmental movement and originated the idea of Wednesday's "Sun Day" demonstrations, is one of the optimists.

"Federal policy has, in the past, consistently discriminated against those forms of energy that represent our brightest hopes," he said.

"The real leadership is not to be found in Washington," he said, but all over the country where companies, local governments and private citizens are building, encouraging and inventing new solar projects.

First lady Rosalynn Carter, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, the president's consumer affairs assistant Esther Peterson, and officials of 14 agencies proclaimed the government's support of solar energy development Tuesday and outlined scores of federal projects.

But Hayes told them that all this effort still is not enough.

"Solar supporters hoped to see the direct solar energy budget doubled," said Hayes, referring to the Carter administration's budget proposals for fiscal 1979. "Instead, it was cut 10 percent. ... A far more ambitious solar energy program must be designed."

In fact, administration officials say a new emphasis on solar energy will emerge in "Phase Two," the next round of national energy policies to be tentatively outlined this autumn and proposed to Congress early next year.

At first glance, everything seems to favor solar energy sweeping the world — which, in fact, it does every 24 hours as the earth turns.

The sun's heat can be captured directly to warm air, water or solid materials to provide both space heating and hot water for buildings; using ingenious heat-exchange devices it can even be turned against itself to provide air conditioning.

Direct solar heat can be used for some industrial and agricultural processes, such as drying crops.

Sunlight can be converted heatlessly, in a millionth of a second, into electricity by plates of silicon crystal that look like paper-thin frosted glass laced with ribbons of silver.

Or, it can be focused by a giant mirror system to create steam, which is used to spin a conventional electrical turbine.

It is the sun's energy that drives the earth's winds and evaporates the water that later falls as rain or snow, flowing downhill and back to the sea through rivers and streams. This energy, too, can be converted into mechanical work or electricity by efficient modern windmills and hydroelectric dams.

Solar energy actually is the earth's oldest and most basic energy source, absorbed and converted by plants into man's food and his fuels: wood and the fossilized plant remains we know as coal, oil and natural gas.

Energy technicians now propose to return to that ancient basis by systematically growing crops for conversion into liquid or gaseous fuels.

These forms of solar energy are expected to produce far less pollution than existing energy sources. Sunlight is available everywhere in the world, and it is "free" in the sense that the sun never presents a bill.

Bentsen On Track Of Three Underage Veterans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, trying to win an honorable discharge for a World War II Navy veteran who enlisted at 12, said Tuesday he is on the track of three wartime youngsters who fared better at the hands of the military.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said he has learned of three youths, aged 12, 13 and 15, who apparently enlisted during World War II and won honorable discharges — something the Navy denied Calvin Graham of Fort Worth, despite his record of distinguished combat service, when it learned he had enlisted under-age.

Graham, now 48 and crippled with arthritis, enlisted in the Navy in 1942 as a 12-year old seventh-grader. He was a gunner aboard the U.S.S. South Dakota in the Pacific and received several medals and battle stars.

When the Navy learned Graham was an adolescent, it revoked his medals and even jailed him for three months.

The Navy claims his enlistment was illegal, refuses to acknowledge he ever served and will not give him an honorable discharge.

Bentsen said the Navy, in fighting his legislation to give Graham an honorable discharge, claims the sailor was treated the same way as other underage vets.

"I have learned of at least three men who may well have been treated much differently than Mr. Graham, although they too were under age at the time they enlisted in our armed forces," Bentsen said in a letter to Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"It would appear that the Navy's insistence on going by the book in this case is not a long-standing policy," Bentsen said.

He said he did not have complete information on the other three enlistees because the terms of the federal Privacy Act make it unavailable to him.

He said the three, all Navy veterans, were:

Joseph P. Hargrove, who reportedly enlisted at age 15 in 1944 and received an honorable discharge Dec. 21, 1946; Bobby Lee Pettit, who reportedly enlisted at age 13 in 1942 and received an honorable discharge at the urging of the late Rep. Albert Thomas, D-Texas; and Jimmy Baker, who, according to the June 28, 1943 edition of Time magazine, received an honorable discharge after enlisting in the Marines at age 12 in 1942.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I got a letter recently from a young reader in California who wrote, "As you are a mother, perhaps you could define the phrase, 'Someday you'll thank me for this.' When I confronted my Mom with this question she replied with that age-old cliché, 'You're too young to understand. Wait until you grow up and have kids of your own.'"

"Somehow, I can't conceptualize myself ever thanking my Mom for wrenching a jelly donut out of my mouth and throwing it into the neighbor's yard. I can picture the neighbor's cocker spaniel thanking her, but not me." — Sincerely, Gayley S. (San Francisco)

How we mothers love it when you ask questions. You exhibit the kind of spirit that got my kids eight-hour naps when they were 17. (But then I never had kids who used language like conceptualize.)

Now, indulge me, Gayley, while I give a little background. The phrase 'Someday you'll thank me' was uttered by a housewife in Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 6, 1934, who had one of those kids you couldn't discipline and get a reaction out of. She'd send him to his room, take away his desserts, withhold his allowance, make him wear hard shoes in the summer. Nothing. Finally, one day after she had exhausted every threat she knew, she socked him on a chair and shouted, "One of these days, you'll thank me for punishing you."

The child looked up, stunned. Now he knew what he was dealing with — an incoherent, irrational, weird mother who had inhaled too much laundry bleach and sucked on too many wet shoestrings. He never misbehaved again.

The phrase is a last resort for mothers. It is never used lightly or indiscriminately, but only when reason fails. It is reserved for those moments when a child is about to have a wonderful time and a mother is about to put a stop to it. At a time when she is about to inflict pain on your backside and feels there's a dead space in the conversation. It makes a mother feel forgiven for what she is about to do.

Thanks to that housewife from Des Moines, Gayley, there are 18 million mothers sitting around by their phones today waiting for their children to call in their thanks. Frankly, it's not the avalanche we had hoped for, but people like yourself are still searching for the answers.

Believe me, Gayley, someday you'll thank me for my vagueness in answering your reply. You may call collect. The number is 555-9990. After 6 p.m., 555-8224. I'll be waiting.

Label Readers Get 'Sweet' Surprises

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Label-reading can be tricky if you are trying to identify products with a high sugar content.

The law says a manufacturer must list ingredients in descending order by weight. A pre-sweetened cereal that lists sugar as the first ingredient contains more sugar than anything else.

But some manufacturers get around this rule by identifying sugars by type so they won't have to put the all-inclusive word, sugar, at the head of the list, says consumer education specialist Janet Wilson of the University of Nebraska at Lincoln. As a key, she suggests looking for words ending in "ose." Maltose is malt sugar, dextrose and glucose are corn sugars, sucrose is the familiar cane and/or beet sugar, fructose and levulose are fruit sugars and lactose is milk sugar.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A son of mine who is living away from home has been told he has chemical diabetes. Would you be so kind as to comment on this condition? How does it differ from regular diabetes? — Mrs. C.A.

The patient lies quietly for an hour or so during the test. There is no pain and it doesn't harm the hair. It can be done on an out-patient basis. That is, you don't have to be admitted to a hospital to have it done.

However, if the child has come to the conclusion that being like daddy demands his morning coffee, there may be little you can do to change his mind at this point. If he insists on this, make his coffee caffeine-less.

Dear Doctor: I'm 23 and going on my third pregnancy. Everytime I have gotten pregnant, I have become diabetic after delivery. I'm no longer a diabetic, I'm told. My doctor advises me not to have a large family because of this problem. What causes the change in my body? I still watch my sugar. What are the chances of my being a full-fledged diabetic in my later years? — Mrs. C.E.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it all right to start a young child on coffee and tea? My four-year-old has developed a taste for coffee and will drink it right along with my husband at breakfast. He thinks it makes him one of the guys, I guess. Will this harm him? — Mrs. K.H.

Never take a chance on diabetes! For a better understanding of this disease, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Diabetes — The Sneaky Disease." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Copyright 1978 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Chemical or "latent" diabetes seems to be involved in both of the above questions. It can occur in individuals whose families have a history of diabetes.

The chief difference is that in the latent types there may be no overt signs, such as excessive thirst or urination. The fasting blood sugar may be normal, but become elevated under conditions of stress. Witness Mrs. C.E.'s problem with her pregnancies, a common stress factor in this. Having had this condition, she is wise to heed her doctor's advice to avoid having a larger family.

A chemical diabetic can go either way. He may revert to a non-diabetic state or become overt. At Mrs. C.E.'s age she might expect hers to develop into a full-blown state in from 10 to 15 years. She is wise to continue to watch her diet and weight.

For either of the above persons, weight-control and frequent monitoring of blood sugar is important to determine which way the balance is tipping. Both individuals are fortunate. Diabetes, especially this type, remains one of the most undiagnosed diseases.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What do they do when they give you a brainwave test? Does it hurt? How long does it take them to do it? Will it hurt your hair at all? Do you have to stay in the hospital? Is it the same as a brain scan? — Miss F.F.

A brainwave test is called an electroencephalogram (EEG). There are various forms of brain scans. The EEG is one.

Tiny electrodes (contacts that can pick up electric current) are placed on the scalp in various selected areas. A sensitive receiver picks up the electrical currents given off by the brain's cells and records them on a chart for the doctor to examine. To give you an idea, the different levels of waves can detect the smallest disturbances in any area of the outer brain or its surrounding envelope. It can distinguish waves caused during excitement, relaxation, drowsiness, sleep, or deep sleep.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Sometimes minding your own business is the wrong thing to do. I think this is such a time and am writing to see if you agree.

Here's the situation. I have a friend who is single. He is 37 years old and lives at home with his widowed mother. His mother is an "old-time Catholic" and a very fine person. She does not try to run his life nor has she ever poked her nose into his private affairs.

About ten years ago my friend fathered a son. He visits the boy often, supports him and is a very active, generous father, considering the circumstances. The child lives with his mother who is a divorcee and therefore cannot marry my friend in the Catholic church. (I don't really think they want to get married anyway.) The boy's mother and my friend spend a lot of time together and have a warm relationship.

My friend has never told his mother that the child is her grandson. The boy's father feels that in order to protect her from his "sin" he must continue to shield her. He will not let the boy's mother tell either. Everyone in the family knows but the boy's grandmother.

"Grandma" is getting old. Even though she is in good health she will probably die without ever having known about her grandson. The child, on the other hand, is being deprived of the privilege of knowing his wonderful grandmother.

What, if anything, should I do? — Watching From The Sidelines

Dear Watching: Since the principals have chosen to handle the situation in this manner, you have no right to interfere. This is not your affair, and no one is asking for your advice. So MYOB, Toots.

Dear Ann Landers: Our five-week-old baby seems to be cross-eyed. He looks that way when he gets tired or when he just wakes up from a nap. When I mentioned this to my husband he told me I was imagining things. When I brought it to the attention of my mother-in-law she said, "All my children were that way. Leave the baby alone. Don't start with doctors. The baby will outgrow it." My mother put in her two cents' worth. She said, "Those rattles above the bed are what's causing it. Take them down." So I did — but the problem persists.

Please, Ann, I know you aren't a doctor but you know the best ones. Will you get an opinion for me? — Charlevoix, Michigan Mama

Dear Mama: One of the best is Dr. Jay Arena, Professor of Pediatrics at Duke University. He says many infants appear to be temporarily cross-eyed because they cannot focus. The condition usually disappears by the age of six months. Dangling rattles and mobile art above the infant's head does not increase the tendency.

If the problem continues after the age of one year, Dr. Arena suggests that a specialist be consulted.

CONFIDENTIAL to Rat Fink and Proud of It But Where Do I Go from Here?: I don't know, but you'll probably go there alone. You've lost two good friends for sure — and maybe four. If you don't learn to keep your big bazoo closed after this experience, you're a hopeless case, Buster.

How much do you know about pot, L.S.D., cocaine, speed, meth, uppers and downers, glue and heroin? Are all these drugs dangerous? Get Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill plus a long, self-addressed envelope (24 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Those new glass baby juice jars are a gold mine of new uses at home or for fund raising. And as you buy them for the juice anyway, they're a free bonus.

Have holes drilled or punched the size you want in the lids, in whatever design you like. Spray the lids colors that go with your decor, and you have salt, pepper and spice shakers!

The glass has beautiful designs molded in, so without holes in the lids you can use them as spice jars in a rack of suitable size.

With only one to three holes, you can use them to sprinkle sachet in dresser drawers, for talcum powder, etc. If you like a lot of powder with a little wrist action, make more holes and slightly larger than for spices.

They travel well to carry just enough talcum, etc. on a trip, without taking up the space the regular-sized containers would.

I use three large holes in the very center to sprinkle colored cookie decorations over my cookie sheet, and there are no more spills from a teaspoon to clean up. — Carol O. Strowski

DEAR HELOISE:

Carol, these little jars are delightful! One could buy them for the juice (even if they don't have babies) and use in all those ways you mention. I loved your ideas. Love you too! — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

My family and I have always considered the throwing of rice at weddings as a wish for fertility.

My cousin, Tony, had a home wedding and, to our dismay, just as they were leaving we realized we had forgotten the rice.

One of Tony's little sisters grabbed a box of "quick" cooking rice and started to hand it out. My grandmother let out a loud "whoop" and ran to find a bag of the regular longer-cooking kind to throw instead. — Melodie Masure

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever goof and use a white interfacing with navy blue polyester? And when you made the buttonholes, did the white facing show through?

Try using a navy blue felt-tipped indelible pen to go around buttonholes, and the white will be completely covered. Could work as well with red, green, orange, black or whatever because the pens come in several different colors. — "Goofed"

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

My own bright idea is to use a weekly TV booklet as a date book.

I put my engagements or reminder notes down the right side border, beside the matching program times. I use the TV booklet every day, so I can't miss the date notes. — J.O.

DEAR HELOISE:

My daughter and I shop together every week, as I'm a non-driver, and also I help with the children since it's difficult to shop with little ones.

To distinguish my bags from hers, I mark an X with a marker on mine. Therefore, there's no more going home with the wrong bags and being left without a needed item. — Mrs. J. Bush

Matthew 23:18-35, The Living Bible

18 And you say that to take an oath 'By the altar' can be broken, but to swear 'By the gifts on the altar' is binding!

19 Blind! For which is greater, the gift on the altar, or the altar itself that sanctifies the gift?

20 When you swear 'By the altar' you are swearing by it and everything on it.

21 And when you swear 'By the Temple' you are swearing by it, and by God who lives in it.

22 And when you swear 'By heavens' you are swearing by the Throne of God and by God Himself.

23 Yes, woe upon you, Pharisees, and you other religious leaders—hypocrites! For you, tithing down to the last mint leaf in your garden, but ignore the important things—justice and mercy and faith. Yes, you should tithe, but you shouldn't leave the more important things undone.

24 Blind guides! You strain out a gnat and swallow a camel.

25 Woe to you, Pharisees, and you religious leaders—hypocrites! You are so careful to polish the outside of the cup, but the inside is foul with extortion and greed.

26 Blind Pharisees! First cleanse the inside of the cup, and then the whole cup will be clean.

27 Woe to you, Pharisees, and you religious leaders! You are like beautiful mausoleums—full of dead men's bones, and of foulness and corruption.

28 You try to look like saintly men, but underneath those pious robes of yours are hearts besmirched with every sort of hypocrisy and sin.

29,30 Yes, woe to you, Pharisees, and you religious leaders—hypocrites! For you build monuments to the prophets killed by your fathers and lay flowers on the graves of the godly men they destroyed, and say, 'We certainly would never have acted as our fathers did.'

31 In saying that, you are accusing yourselves of being the sons of wicked men.

32 And you are following in their steps, filling up the full measure of their evil.

33 Snakes! Sons of vipers! How shall you escape the judgment of hell?

34 I will send you prophets, and Spirit-filled men, and inspired writers, and you will kill some by crucifixion, and rip open the backs of others with whips in your synagogues, and hound them from city to city.

35 So that you will become guilty of all the blood of murdered godly men from righteous Abel to Zechariah (son of Barachiah), slain by you in the Temple between the altar and the sanctuary.

JACOBYS ON BRIDGE

By OSWALD JACOBY and ALAN SONTAG

The final contract was totally sound and was reached through a relatively scientific auction. Even though South had 19 high-card points opposite an opening bid, he did not make a strong jump shift of two hearts. The suit was too weak.

The rest of the bidding was an investigation by South of whether the best contract was six or seven hearts. He stopped at six because North was unable to exude sufficient enthusiasm over the three-spade cue bid.

West, confused by the flurry of bidding and afraid to make an attacking lead (although most experts recommend an attacking lead against a small slam), chose the 10 of trumps. Accidental though it was, it gave the defense a chance.

If declarer finesses with dummy's jack at trick one, the queen from East's hand will force the ace. And later, when declarer ruffs his two club losers in dummy, the defense will have promoted an extra trump trick, setting the contract.

If declarer can foresee this, and he should, he wins the first trick with the king in dummy. This simple play assures the contract if trumps break normally, and the chances are almost 68 percent they will break 3-2.

Declarer must win the first trick with the king to preserve dummy's jack-six of hearts to be used later for ruffing the club losers. Declarer's spade loser (the six) will be discarded on one of dummy's diamond honors.

There is a great temptation to finesse. A finesse in this situation, however, is clearly hopeless, because West would never have led away from the queen of trumps against a small slam contract.

Malaria Again Major Threat

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The incidence of malaria, which dropped sharply after the World Health Organization launched a global effort two decades ago, is on the rise again. The disease now claims 1.5 million lives a year.

United Nations health officials say malaria again is "a major threat to world health and development." While Africa and Asia are hit the hardest, the United States also has recorded an increase in malaria cases.

Experts at WHO and the U.N. Environment Program blame malaria's comeback on growing resistance to conventional anti-malaria drugs, a sharp increase in the price of petroleum-derived insecticides and the failure of governments to adopt effective programs against the infectious disease.

WHO launched a global program to wipe out malaria in 1955 when the disease struck 250 million persons and killed 2.5 million of them.

Since 1955, the number of malaria cases steadily declined, reaching a record low of 107 million in 1965. But a resurgence of the disease began in the early 1970s in India, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, Pakistan, all of Africa and some South American countries and in 1976, 150 million cases and 1.5 million deaths were reported.

"Malaria is now, once again, a major threat to world health and development," U.N. health experts say in reports to the World Health Organization and the U.N. Environment Program.

In the United States and Puerto Rico, malaria cases are on the increase, according to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Only 406 cases were reported in 1976 but the number jumped to 513 in 1977. Donald Bereth, spokesman for the center, blamed the increase on more travel by Americans to malaria areas and failure to take drugs with them.

Produced by parasites which are transmitted by the bite of certain mosquitos, malaria produces periodic bouts of fever, sweating, chills, headache and coma in humans that can lead to death.

In India, the number of cases has risen from a low of 40,000 in 1966 to six million in 1976; officials report. And in tropical Africa, the disease affects practically the entire population and kills one million children under the age of 14 every year.

U.N. health officials say that at least 43 species of malarial mosquitoes are now resistant to the insecticides DDT and Dieldrin which almost eliminated malaria in the mid-1960s. At the same time, the malaria parasite is beginning to resist conventional doses of chloroquine, the drug widely used to treat the disease.

Another factor hampering the anti-malaria drive is the quadrupling in the price of petroleum-derived insecticides that followed the Arab oil boycott in 1973-1974, the experts say.

The experts also say that excessive and prolonged use of insecticides has created other environmental and health hazards.

They report the "progressive contamination of virtually all global ecosystems by DDT, with traces in rainfall and in soil, and in organisms ranging from songbirds to ocean fish, from desert gazelle to Antarctic penguin."

The report calls for more effective and "environmentally sound weapons" to fight malaria's "counterattack."

As a first step, it recommends a return to traditional methods of mosquito control such as draining stagnant waters where mosquitoes breed, frequent irrigation to eliminate mosquito larvae and the wider use of "mosquito fish" which eat the insect eggs.

Ways to improve the anti-malaria fight will be discussed at the World Health Assembly when it opens its annual session in Geneva next month.

Vegetable Price Drop Expected

By The Associated Press

Consumers who have watched lettuce prices soar until salad is almost as expensive as steak can expect some relief early next month, a government economist said Tuesday.

"This thing is temporary," said Charles W. Porter of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, discussing the high prices. "We're just going to have to wait it out."

Porter said shipments of lettuce from California — the nation's major producer — are running half to less than half of what they were a year ago because rains in the Salinas Valley in February and March prevented farmers from planting and, in some cases, washed away seeds already in the ground.

Broccoli, cauliflower and some other vegetables also have been affected by the rains, Porter said, but the impact is less severe because the crop is spread out over a greater geographical area.

The current lettuce crop, planted in late March, should be ready about June 1 and Porter said prices should come down again. He said plantings of lettuce and other fruit and vegetable crops are normal and said that unless there is some unusual weather development, summer supplies should be adequate.

Meanwhile, lettuce prices have soared to more than double, and in some cases triple, what they were a year ago. Retail prices vary widely from area to area and store to store. In Washington, D.C., iceberg lettuce is selling for about 89 cents a head, prices in the Midwest top $1 a head in some places, and in New York City the price is up to $1.39 a head in a few stores.

At the shipping point, Porter said, lettuce is selling for $15 a crate of 24 heads — "an unheard-of price" — compared to a normal rate of $2.50 to $5 a crate.

The decrease in supplies from California has caused an increase in prices from other areas. Romaine from Florida has gone up, for example, even though supplies are normal, Porter said.

Almost five billion pounds of lettuce is grown in the United States every year, according to the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. California produces about three-fourths of the total and, at some seasons, provides up to 90 percent of supply.

Drought in 1976 and 1977 in California also caused fears of a shortage, but supplies of most fruits and vegetables remained adequate, thanks to irrigation and conservation measures.

Public tours are scheduled from 10 a.m. to noon, and from 4-6 p.m. May 11 through the facility.

Radio Station Schedules Opry

The fourth edition of the KLLL West Texas Saturday Night Opry will be Saturday at 8 p.m. in Lubbock's Civic Center Theatre where West Texas recording artists will be featured.

Previous shows have resulted in about $6,500 of donations to locally supported charities.

Advance tickets are on sale at Luskey's and both locations of Flipside Records for a minimum donation of $3. All seats will be reserved.

Profits from the tickets will go to Lubbock Insight, Inc., for the blind and visually handicapped of Lubbock.

Area Congressmen Recorded On Major Issues

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Member of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Apr. 21 through Apr. 27.

HOUSE
LOBBYING Passed, 259 for and 140 against, a bill to increase public and congressional scrutiny of lobbyists, those groups and individuals who seek to influence the outcome of legislation. The bill (HR 8494), now in the Senate, is the first major attempt to regulate lobbyist since enactment of a loophole-ridden lobbyist-control bill in 1946.

The main thrust of HR 8494 is to require lobbyists to publicly file reports on their activities with the Comptroller General. Such reports would disclose information such as money spent to entertain federal officials and business relationships between lobbyists and federal officials.

Rep. George Danielson, D-Calif., a supporter, said the bill "is designed to give us a law which is workable and which will enable the American people and the members of the Congress to know what type of activity is taking place in the field of lobbying here in the Congress."

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., an opponent, said he liked much of the bill but could not accept its reporting requirement for so-called grass roots lobbying. Such lobbying involves an organization using such techniques as mass-mail to solicit large numbers of citizens to generate pressure on members of Congress.

Members voting "yea" favored passage of the bill.
Reps. Jim Mattox, D-5, Bill Archer, R-7, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jake Pickle, D-10, James Wright, D-12, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Manuel Lujan R-1, and Richard White, D-16, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, James Collins, R-3, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jack Hightower, D-13, Omar Burleson, D-17, Barbara Jordan, D-18, George Mahon, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Abraham Kazen, D-23, and Dale Milford, D-24, voted "nay."

Reps. Ray Roberts, D-4, Olin Teague, D-5, W.R. Poage, D-11, John Young, D-14, Robert Krueger, D-21, and Bob Gammage, D-22, Rep. Harold Runnels, D-2, did not vote.

PEACE CORPS Rejected, 169 for and 228 against, an amendment to prevent the Peace Corps from operating in the Central African Empire in fiscal 1979. It was proposed to HR 11877, a Peace Corps authorization bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

About $1.5 million is included in the Peace Corps budget for programs in the Central African Empire. That is the tiny, poor nation that drew worldwide notoriety last December when its leader, Bokassa, crowned himself emperor in ceremonies that cost $25 million, about one-third of the country's annual budget.

Rep. C.W. Young, R-Fla., the sponsor, said: "I would like to be of aid and assistance to the poor folks in the Central African Empire, but my feelings is if their own country does not have any more concern for them, why should we?"

Rep. Don Pease, D-Ohio, an opponent, said the principal of the Peace Corps "is to help the poorest people within these nations, and, indeed, if the head of state is squandering money on his own coronation then it may well be that in that nation, above all, we need...the Peace Corps..."

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Hall, Collins, Archer, Poage, de la Garza, Burleson, Lujan, and Milford voted "yea."

Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Wright, Hightower, White, Jordan, Mahon and Gonzalez voted "nay."

Roberts, Teague, Young, Krueger, Gammage, Runnels and Kazen did not vote.

BUDGET CUTS Rejected, 43 for and 46 against, an amendment to cut $5 billion (just less than one per cent) out of the proposed "budget authority" for fiscal 1979. It was proposed to the congressional budget resolution (S Con Res 80), which limits the money Congress can appropriate to run the federal government in fiscal 1979. The resolution later was passed (see vote below) and sent to the House.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., sponsor of the amendment, said: "There is not one government agency that cannot stand a one per cent decrease in budget authority. Why, that amount alone is wasted each year in mismanagement, inefficiency, misplaced priorities and duplication."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, noted that S Con Res 80 already had been pared down in the Budget Committee, which he chairs. He said: "...when we say cut $5 billion in budget authority without saying where it is going to come from, who is to do the dirty work, may I ask the Senator?"

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D. Harrison,

Schmitt, R. and Peter Domenici, R, voted "yea."

Sen. John Tower, R, voted "nay."
BUDGET Adopted, 84 for and 27 against, a "target" federal budget for fiscal 1979. The budget is based on projected expenditures of $498.9 billion, revenue of $443.3 billion, and a deficit for the year of $55.6 billion. The proposed budget resolution will guide Congress in considering individual spending bills for the fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1, 1978.

Senators voting "yea" favored adoption of the budget resolution.

Tower, Schmitt and Domenici voted "nay."

UNHAPPY SHAREHOLDER — Mrs. Ray Rosenblum of Southfield, Mich., screams at Chrysler Corp. Chairman John Riccardo Tuesday during the annual shareholders meeting in Center Line, Mich., during an argument over the company's proposal to issue new stock. An overflow crowd offered strong resistance to the proposal. (AP Laserphoto)

Stockholders Give Automaker Grudging Vote Of Confidence

CENTER LINE, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. won a grudging vote of confidence from disgruntled shareholders Tuesday as they approved a new preferred stock issue and voted down efforts to restrict executive bonuses.

The margins backing management, 54 percent and 74 percent, were thin to an almost unheard-of degree in a major corporation not facing a battle for control.

At a boisterous four-hour annual meeting, dissident shareholders attacked management of the No. 3 automaker and complained that the issuance of 20 million shares of preferred stock would dilute their own holdings.

A retired lawyer, William Hefferan of Troy, even called for a "union" of shareholders and accused Chrysler of handing fat contracts to supplier firms in return for approval of Chrysler executive bonuses by executives of those suppliers who sit on Chrysler's board.

Though vocal, the opposition was in the minority and Chrysler's plan to issue preferred stock was approved by owners of 54.3 percent of the outstanding shares, or 32,768,148 shares. Just 8.6 percent of the shares, or 5,173,386, were cast against the proposal. The remainder of the shares were not voted.

The effort to restrict bonuses lost by 28,302,759 to 9,588,150 — 74 percent against. A similar proposal last year got 80 percent opposition.

Some stockholders suggested the company needed a new team at the top rather than a new stock issue.

Chrysler, which lost a record $120 million in the first quarter, said it needed the money from a sale of preferred stock to pay for plant modernization and the design of new cars for the 1980s.

The company expects to spend $7.5 billion over the next several years. The lay-out of cash is "a bold move" but "it will make Chrysler Corp. the more profitable and more competitive company you want it to be," President Eugene Caferio told a record crowd of nearly 800 shareholders.

The crowd, some jammed into side rooms where they watched the proceedings on closed-circuit television, greeted with hoots and jeers the upbeat forecasts of Caferio and Chairman John Riccardo.

Issuance of new stock normally is routinely approved by shareholders. But many shareholders demanded that instead of raising money that way, Chrysler tighten its financial belt.

Riccardo told them that sale of preferred stock would not dilute their holdings any more than if Chrysler borrowed money.

SST Rises Again From Congressional Defeat

By JOHN MARKOFF
(c) 1978 Pacific News Service

The supersonic transport (SST), the proposed faster-than-sound airliner shot down by Congress in 1971 after a bitter dispute between environmentalists and the aerospace industry, appears to be taking wing again, spurred by renewed government and corporate interest.

Proponents of the aircraft suggest that technical developments over the past seven years have come close to solving most of the major problems, such as excessive noise and unprofitability, which led to defeat of the first SST and continue to plague the British-French SST, the Concorde.

Opponents are already on the defensive, arguing that if the problems have been solved and the plane is environmentally and economically sound, why must private industry continue to rely on government development subsidies?

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has requested $15.9 million for research on various SST technologies in fiscal 1979. Since 1979, the year after Congress cancelled the SST program, NASA has spent $69 million researching SST propulsion systems, electronics, aerodynamics and raw materials.

In a new five-year plan released by NASA several weeks ago, the agency revealed it is considering funding a prototype SST in fiscal 1983. NASA sources indicate the cost of the development of this demonstrator aircraft with sophisticated new "variable cycle" jet engines may reach as much as $400 million.

The idea for the demonstrator prototype — a much smaller version of the proposed aircraft — was submitted to NASA by the Boeing aerospace company last year following a request from NASA.

"We suggested that maybe it would be a good idea if NASA thought about building this demonstrator which would be a small airplane to pick up additional data," said Boeing spokesman Tom Cole. "We are not building it now and have no intention of building it at this point," he added.

Cole said, however, that Boeing would almost certainly bid on the project if NASA decides to go ahead.

NASA is now funding both in-house and industry research on a second generation SST. "It's the economic aspects, it's the refinement of the aerodynamics, the reduction of weight and structure, the improvement of noise signature, all of those technical issues which are inherent in your ability to make a decision" which have led to the renewed interest, said

Jack Suddreth, the NASA official responsible for the Supersonic Cruise Research Aircraft program.

"We are working to bring along the technologies that were a barrier to the last SST or in the Concorde... All we're really doing is exploring whether or not it makes sense to fund the SST."

The NASA plan has already reignited the concerns of old and new opponents to the SST. Representative Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., asked the House Committee on Science and Technology recently, "Why is the federal government still providing what amounts to a direct subsidy to commercial aircraft corporations for research and development of an SST? Is this an appropriate expenditure for a project that was judged by Congress to be economically and environmentally unsound? And if the SST can now be shown to be profitable and environmentally benign aircraft, why don't commercial carriers take the investment risks entailed in the research and development of the Supersonic transport plane?"

One reason the SST was defeated in 1971 was the doubtful profitability of a plane that could carry only 125 passengers — an economic pitfall born out by the continuing need of the French and British governments to subsidize the Concorde SST.

"The American financial community has been sitting on their hands waiting for new technological developments," said Gordon Adams, an aerospace industry expert and research director of the Council on Economic Priorities. "They expect the technology to be ready by 1985, which exactly coincides with NASA's timing on this thing."

Boeing's Tom Cole agrees that the economic factor is an important one in deciding whether to go ahead with an SST. "We feel," he said, "that the SST has to be a fairly large plane to fulfill its mission and it has to have a range capability to make its speed worthwhile. The Concorde has a fairly small capacity and has to land and refuel if it wants to go halfway around the world." The new American SST, it is believed, would weigh around 700,000 pounds, as much as the giant Boeing 747 wide-body jets.

Environmentalists are generally taking a skeptical, wait-and-see attitude toward the NASA plans.

Grad Students Honored

Twelve Texas Tech University "outstanding graduate student teachers" have been recognized by President Cecil Mackey.

Vice President J. Knox Jones Jr. said the students were chosen from departments and programs in which the doctoral degree is offered.

The recognition carries a $100 grant. Graduate student teachers who received the award include Richard Bowes, Department of Music; Eddie Breashears,

Bail Bond Board Sued

A Lubbock property owner Tuesday sued members of the Lubbock County Bail Bond Board in an effort to obtain a license to make bonds.
 Plaintiff Lorena O. Turner asks in the petition filed in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court that the board be ordered to approve her application and that board chairman Alton Griffin be enjoined from participating in any capacity regarding the application.
 The suit says Griffin and the other four members of the board named as defendants are being sued only in their official capacities as board members.
 Mrs. Turner indicates in the suit she feels Griffin has personal feelings against a son of the plaintiff's which prohibit him from performing his function as board chairman.
 The plaintiff says she believes Griffin, for personal reasons, will not allow the board to approve the application.

Tiny Bacteria Killer Found In Ocean

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Biologists have discovered that a tiny ocean creature produces a chemical that kills bacteria more powerfully than any animal-made substance known to man.
 The scientists said not enough is known about the substance yet to determine its possible uses as a medicine for humans. But they said the discovery opens the possibility of finding a new variety of potent, disease-fighting drugs for humans.
 The substance, which does not have a name, is produced by common wood borers. These 16th-of-an-inch-long marine pests, sometimes called gribbles, use it to destroy all the micro-organisms contained in the wood they eat.
 The scientists discovered that the gut of these little crustacea contains no bacteria whatsoever.

Until now, scientists had thought that all animals — no matter how big or small — had bacteria in their digestive tracts. In humans, some of these microscopic organisms help digest food while others cause disease.
 Scientists have not yet isolated the bacteria-killing substance, but they speculate it is an enzyme or possibly an antibiotic.
 "It's a very potent anti-microbial agent," said Prof. Ralph Mitchell, one of the researchers who discovered the phenomenon. "Any organism that goes through the gut is killed."
 Mitchell worked on the discovery with Arabs Confer On Oil
 KUWAIT (AP) — Seven Arab oil-producing countries ended a three-day seminar here Monday after discussing ways of regionally integrating their oil industries and coordinating their oil and monetary policies.
 The participants — Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain and Oman — also discussed manpower planning, technological cooperation and possible joint industrial projects.

Two Men Accused Of Trying To Raise Dump Agnew Money

NIXON AND VOLPE IN 1968—Then-Massachusetts Governor John A. Volpe reacts to a quip made by then-President Richard M. Nixon at a 1968 dinner in Boston. Two businessmen were charged Tuesday with conspiring to raise $500,000 for the alleged purpose of trying to influence Nixon to make Volpe his 1972 running mate. The charges were made by Massachusetts Assistant-Attorney General Stephen Delinsky to a Superior Court Judge against Albert Manzi and William Masiello of Worcester, Mass. (AP Laserphoto)

BOSTON (AP) — Two Massachusetts businessmen were accused in court Tuesday of trying to raise $500,000 in an effort to influence Richard Nixon to dump Spiro Agnew as his 1972 running mate in favor of former Gov. John Volpe.

There was no evidence that Nixon either asked for or received any money and no indication how much money actually was raised. Volpe denied any knowledge of such a scheme, and the former president was not immediately available for comment.

William Masiello, head of a Worcester architectural firm, and Albert "Toots" Manzi, a member of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, pleaded innocent at arraignment on extortion charges.

Stephen Delinsky, first assistant attorney general for the state of Massachusetts, said at the session in Suffolk Superior Court that the two men attempted to raise $500,000 in cash "for the purpose of delivering the money to former President Nixon either before the Republican National Convention or during the convention."

Their aim, Delinsky said, was "to influence Nixon's decision" to substitute Volpe for Agnew as the vice presidential nominee on the Republican ticket.

At the time, Volpe was serving as Nixon's secretary of transportation. Nixon later named him U.S. ambassador to Italy.

Asked for comment, Volpe said, "I have never heard of a half-million-dollar kitty for the vice presidency. I never heard of it. I never met a William Masiello in my life."

Volpe said that Manzi had been his Worcester County coordinator during his 1966 run for the governorship of Massachusetts.

"He did raise some money for me then in Worcester County," Volpe said.

As part of their attempt to raise the cash, Delinsky said, the two men extorted $10,000 from the New York consulting firm of McKee-Berger-Mansueto, which at the time held a $6 million state contract to supervise construction of the University of Massachusetts Boston campus.

Manzi and Masiello were named in seven indictments returned by a Suffolk County grand jury last Friday.

They are charged with three counts each of extortion, and both men are named in one indictment charging them with violating the state's Corrupt Practices Act. The law prohibits state employees and officials from soliciting campaign contributions.

Candidate Reveals Position

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Crime is increasing because the U.S. Supreme Court has oversteered the individual defendant's rights as opposed to the general public's rights, O'Neal Bacon, State Supreme Court candidate, told The Avalanche-Journal.

"There must be a balance of the two," Bacon, running for associate justice, Supreme Court of Texas, Place One spot, said in a recent interview with the Avalanche-Journal's editorial board.

Bacon of Newton is judge for the First Judicial District, which includes Jasper, Newton, Sabine and San Augustine counties in East Texas. He has held the position since 1959.

Bacon said that to date he has disposed of more than 14,000 cases and has presided over more than 900 jury trials.

The Place One, associate justice spot is currently held by Price Daniel, who is retiring from the post. Bacon and Franklin Spears of San Antonio are vying for the position in Saturday's Democratic primary.

The 57-year-old candidate said that his philosophy is conservative and he branded Spears as a liberal. "Just look at his voting record," Bacon said.

When asked about the effectiveness of the state's equal rights amendment, Bacon said, "I think it protects women; if you try to protect them too much in equality, it will harm more than help them. I think it's just a question of the present law being properly interpreted and applied."

Concerning the large damage awards that have been given by juries lately, the Newton judge said that some of the awards were too big but that it was a matter of educating the jurors. "The decision should still be left up to a jury," he said. "We can't change the law every time we feel that a jury is wrong."

He believes that representation from East Texas is necessary on the state bench, "just as we need the representation from the Panhandle and El Paso areas."

He said that two state Supreme Court justices presently on the bench are from San Antonio.

The Gilmer native was graduated from the University of Texas in 1949 with a business administration and law degree.

Heartline

HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens of all ages. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write Heartline, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 43281. Senior citizens will receive prompt replies, but a stamped, self-addressed envelope must be included with the request. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I have just turned 65 years old and I am now on Medicare. Since I am new to this program, there are quite a few things I do not understand about it. I have read about doctors accepting assignment under Medicare. Can you tell me what this means and how it affects me? — K.R.

When a doctor accepts assignment, it simply means that he or she will accept whatever Medicare pays as 80 per cent of this bill, and will charge you only 20 per cent of what Medicare says is reasonable. It is up to your doctor as to whether or not he or she will accept assignment. The only way to find out is to ask him. Remember, just because your doctor accepts assignment on one claim, that does not necessarily mean he will on the next one.

Heartline must point out that very few doctors accept assignment, because the formula the Social Security Administration uses to determine what a doctor's reasonable charge should be is outdated. Due to this outdated formula, in many instances, the reasonable charge is only 60 to 70 per cent of the doctor's bill. For that reason most doctors do not accept assignment.

For people who are now on the Medicare program or will soon be turning 65 and going on Medicare, Heartline now has available their brand new 1978 version of "Heartline's Guide to Medicare." This book is still written in easy-to-understand-question-and-answer form, but the 1978 issue has much more information. Included in the new issue are the new deductibles for part A medical insurance, more items and conditions that Medicare covers, a more concise explanation of reasonable charges, and detailed instructions on how to fill out your Medicare claim form.

You can receive the 1978 guide by sending $1.75 to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. This book is completely guaranteed and if you are not satisfied your money will be cheerfully refunded. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: I am 48 years old. I have been working my whole life under Social Security-covered job. Since my husband has a good job and makes a very high salary, I am going to quit working. Since I am four years older than my husband, I will be starting Social Security before he does. Will I be able to collect benefits on my own work record at age 62 even though I will not have worked for the previous 14 years? — A.T.

Yes, you will be eligible for Social Security retirement on the basis of your own work record. Once a person has accumulated enough quarters of work to be eligible for retirement benefits, this can never be taken away from them. So, regardless of whether your husband is still working, you can draw Social Security benefits when you are 62.

HEARTLINE: I do quite a bit of traveling throughout the United States. Many times I will go by airplane. I am also on a medication that I must take daily. My question concerns my prescription drugs going through the X-ray machine at airport security check points. Do these X-ray machines have any effect on prescription drugs? — J.B.

No effect. While some dosages of the X-rays can be harmful to certain types of film, there is no effect when prescription drugs and vitamins are exposed — the exposure being for such a short length of time and the dosages very low. However, if you are worried, pack all such drugs in a separate bag and ask to have that bag hand-inspected as you go through the checkpoint, or carry the drugs through yourself. It's wiser, anyway, to pack all medicines in hand luggage in case your checked baggage is lost or delayed.

Stolen Car Not Worth Effort

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Like a bad penny, policeman Eugene Crump's 1966 Chevrolet keeps turning up.

Last June, Crump sold the car to a Rock Hill man, who agreed to pay him $500 in monthly installments.

Seven days later, the man, the Chevrolet and the money left town.

In October Crump spotted the man in Fort Mill and took off after him. But he got away.

Warrants were issued but never served, charging the man with larceny and failure to stop for a blue light.

In December deputies in Callahan County, Texas, found the Chevrolet abandoned near Abilene.

Tracking the car's owner took four months. In late April, though, Texas deputies found the Fort Mill connection.

Monday Crump got a letter from Callahan County Sheriff Bill Skinner saying the Chevrolet is waiting. But it will have to be finders keepers, Crump says.

Before he could get the car, he'd have to fork out the storage and towing charges, which, combined with a 3,000-mile round trip, would run more than $600.

Crump then would have to have the car repaired. Callahan law enforcement officials say it won't run.

"I'll send them a title," Crump said.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — I am writing in complaint of misrepresentation by the Houston office of the Veterans Administration. Briefly stated, I decided to go to graduate school. I wrote the V.A. asking about any entitlements I might have left on my G.I. Bill educational benefits. The first letter that they sent said I had 22 months left. I knew this was wrong, so I re-inquired and received a reply stating that I had only 2 3/4 months left. In a third inquiry, I was told I had 9 3/4 months.

Thinking I had straightened that out, I enrolled in graduate school. I went to see the Veterans Affairs office on campus and they told me that I had only six months of entitlements left. Who can I believe? Please help. — G.G., Houston

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — VA officials tell me there is no excuse for the repeated errors in their communications with you. Your remaining entitlement is 6 1/4 months. VA advises that you attend summer school full time this year. At the end of the term you will have only 3/4 month left, but by enrolling for the fall term you will be eligible for benefits for the entire term. Doing this will provide you with the maximum amount you can receive in benefits.

MESSAGE — I would like your assistance in obtaining information concerning the cost of living and job availability in Italy. The reason for this request is my interest in continuing my opera study in Milan.

I am currently a student in Houston, studying both drama and opera. After studying voice for five years, I feel it is necessary to go to Italy in order to acquire the proper training for a successful career. I am presently employed here in Houston as a financial accountant for a large firm. Your attention to this request will be greatly appreciated as this is very important to my career. Thank you. — A.V., Houston

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — I have contacted the Department of State regarding the present conditions in Italy, and they inform me that the cost of living in Milan, Italy's largest city, approximates that of any major urban area in the United States. To maintain typical American standards in Milan would not cost any more or less than in Houston. Italy has a significant unemployment problem, and it would be difficult for an American trained accountant to compete with Italian graduates in that field. Additionally, you might wish to contact the National Endowment for the Arts about possible scholarships for your study.

Do you have a problem with government? MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON cuts through the red tape to get answers to your questions about Social Security, veterans benefits, immigration matters and other problems you may have run into in your dealings with the Federal Government in Washington. Home Holds Big Allergy Potential

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Writer

Dust is the bane of the housekeeper, but most especially it is the bane of allergy victims.

And the place where they encounter it most persistently is the home. They can see it in the air through the bands of sunlight coming in his window. They can see it collecting on the bookshelves. But most of all, they can feel it deep down inside, and it brings on sneezing, wheezing, runny noses and tearing eyes.

There is practically no place and no thing in the house that doesn't shed dust or other particles into the air we breathe. The carpet sheds, the furniture sheds, the bed clothes shed. Everything hangs in the air of the home, from cigarette smoke to cooking odors, from mildew to the horsehair stuffing of the easy chair, from the cheery fire in the fireplace to the car in the attached garage.

To most people, none of these things is a problem. But to the allergy sufferer, it can mean persistent allergic rhinitis or asthma, sinus trouble or bronchitis. When an allergy is with you all year around, the doctor is going to suspect house dust first of all, and those will be the first skin test he tries.

But even if he finds out that house dust is the answer, there is virtually no way to avoid it, anymore than you can avoid the air you breathe. A lot can be done, however, at some expense and a lot of work.

If an allergic person is occupying the bedroom, it should be clear-up of all unnecessary dust-catchers, upholstered chairs and other stuffed furniture, knick-knacks, venetian blinds, bookcases and pictures. If a child is the occupant, keep toys elsewhere. The bedroom should be reduced to sleeping quarters. Rugs and curtains should be washed often, and they should be non-allergenic plastics, synthetics or glass fibers. Keep cosmetics, plants flowers elsewhere.

Floors should be kept cleaned and waxed. Ceilings and walls should be dusted frequently. Radiators should be cleaned, and even the bedspreads, the bedspreads and slats should be washed or wiped with a damp rag.

Clothes that aren't used often, or are used outside, should be kept in another closet. Bathrooms used by the allergic patient should be kept clear of everything but essentials.

The rules for the rest of the house are just as severe. Don't leave a bed of ashes in the fireplace, avoid furniture stuffed with horsehair or down or other animal products. The carpets, the drapes all contribute to the household inventory of dust. So does the kitchen. Cooking oils float through the entire house. So do spices and herbs, potential allergens.

The basement is a thing unto itself. It only yields and collects dust, but also fungi — one type of which, mold, is a potential allergen.

The National Institutes of Health lists certain "hot spots" for mold cultures — basements, refrigerator drip trays, air conditioners and humidifiers, compost heaps, heavily shaded area.

There is a ubiquitous creature called a mite, a spidery insect whose size matches its name. It is found almost all over the world, at least in those areas where man lives. Well, the mite's worn out body is a large part of house dust — and either the remnants of the mite's body or secretions it may emit are allergenic. Mattresses, the bed you sleep on, may have a higher degree of mite dust than any of other numerous kinds. At least some researchers have found this.

So, for a number of reasons, it is wise to look at the bed you make, because you will have to sleep in it. Avoid feather pillows and some foam materials which disintegrate. A pillow should be washable and covered with a dust proof casing. That can be covered with an ordinary pillow slip. Woolen or fuzzy blankets or comforters should be zipped up in a washable blanket cover. The cover should be non-allergenic and tightly woven to keep dust inside. Chenille or quilted bedspreads can be a problem. So can silk.

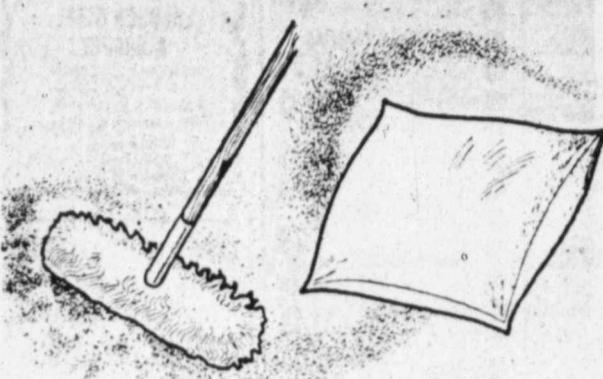

Having taken care of all these things, we can now deal with the air we breathe. It is useless to clean a room, and then have the forced hot air furnace circulate all of the dust in the house through that room. If you have one, use a good air filter in the furnace and clean it frequently, at least once a month. You may also use a fiberglass filter on the register in the "clean" room. Space heaters are difficult to clean, and accumulate dust. The best heating system is hot water forced through heating pipes or radiators.

Actually, most of the rules for air and home cleanliness cited for the allergic patient will likely benefit other members of his family as well. The most important of these is the quality of the home air everyone breathes. It's a lot easier on your nose and eyes if there is less dust around whether you are allergic to it or not.

If it also better for the lungs and the entire respiratory tract if the room temperatures are kept down to about 65 in winter and air temperatures are not lowered too much in summer by air conditioning. Excessive cooling of summer air also decreases humidity, and for the individual who insists on keeping the air conditioner at 70 all summer long, there can be persistent nasal stuffiness and sneezing. There is more to pay than your energy bill.

Hydrogen Fuel Car Stops In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — A car said to run on hydrogen fuel generated by solar power made a stop outside City Hall on Tuesday as part of a cross country trip from California to demonstrate the process.

Gerald Schafflander, president of Consumers Solar Electric Power Corp., said the car is virtually free of pollution, emitting only water vapor from its exhaust pipe.

He said the hydrogen should provide about as much mileage as gasoline but cost only about 25 cents per gallon on the retail market.

He said the process, if put to general use, could mean "the end of oil, the end of gasoline, of coal, of nuclear fuel."

Schafflander said his transcontinental drive will end today at the national celebration of Sun Day in the nation's capital.

Draft Sees No Surprises, Just New Millionaires

NEW YORK (AP)—There were no surprises Tuesday, just a few more instant millionaires, as running back Earl Campbell led the cream of the collegiate crop through the draft and into the National Football League.

gone are the days when a top pro pick (See NFL SELECTIONS, Page 3, Sec. D) reserved his praise for the coaches and the teammates who played an instrumental role in his ascension to stardom. Now he bestows his thanks upon the man who guaranteed lifetime financial security.

"A guy in my position needs a guy like Mike Trope to help him out. I owe everything to Mike," Campbell, the Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas, said after officially becoming the Houston Oilers' No. 1 pick. He didn't mention Darrell Royal.

Trope helped Campbell get something like $1.2 million from the Oilers over the next five years, roughly what Trope helped running backs Ricky Bell and Tony Dorsett, last year's top two selections, get from Tampa Bay and Dallas, respectively.

Tampa Bay had this year's No. 1 pick until the Oilers, hungry for Campbell, gave the Buccaneers four draft choices (two this year and two in 1979) plus tight end Jimmy Giles for the right to pick first among the NFL's 28 teams.

The Bucs' offense ranked dead last in 1977 partly because their two "name quarterbacks" — Gary Huff and Mike Boryla — were injured and the stand-ins couldn't do the job. So they used the first-round pick they got from Houston, No. 17 overall, to select Grambling's All-American, Doug Williams.

Williams is the first black quarterback selected in the first round by an NFL team specifically to play that position as a pro, unless you included Sandy Stephens of the University of Minnesota, chosen by the old New York Titans of the American Football League. Stephens would up as a running back in Canada. Other black quarterbacks have been selected in the first round, but to play other positions in the NFL.

Campbell, a 6-foot-1, 220-pounder who gained 1,744 yards for the Longhorns last year, was very specific about his desire for the 1978 season — and it had nothing to do with yards, touchdowns or playoffs: "I definitely have a major goal my first

Don Henry Days Of Wine And Poses

IT WASN'T LONG after he was drafted that the young man from the University of Pittsburgh began telling everyone that his name was Tony DorSETT. With a long fur coat—which he could afford, too—and an easy smile, Tony made it to all the big cities, and he looked at more cameras than a Nikon salesman.

He was No. 1 in the college game when he finished his play-for-books days. Then, he was No. 1 in the professional grab-bag. Just like that.

Now comes a young man from the University of Texas. He was No. 1 in college, and today he's No. 1 in the college draft. Just like that.

And he's yet to ask that his name be pronounced CampBELL.

For these young men, the draft is something to eagerly await. Now, the car dealers will treat them with much more respect. For them, it could mean more bucks than most of us can remember. And for some of us, there's a different thought when draft comes up—more in the line of latrines, olive-drab fatigues, and $78 per month.

But, being first... that's mighty big time.

by giving away in advance who will be No. 1, they've lost something.

Naturally, it was solved in advance last year when Dallas traded a carload of Joes for rights to DorSETT. And Tampa Bay followed by giving up its draft rights to Campbell.

Thus, the anticipation was about Who's No. 2, which, somehow, loses something. And, in a sense, the entire draft lost something when the two leagues merged. True, the merger came down to a matter of economics, which is not at debate.

But, as far as fun and games, for the sheer joy of watching grown men in business suits imitate clowns, those were the days.

Remember the picture of Buck Buchanan picking up Hank Stram the day he was drafted No. 1 by the Kansas City Chiefs, back in the AFL-NFL days? The old tricks of hiding out athletes on the night of the draft, so's as to have first shot at them the following morning?

The double-signings? The big bonuses? The drafts which lasted for hours before even one selection, moves which resembled a Spassky-Fischer chess match?

SUCH BATTLES RECALL the days of Johnny Cannon, of Johnny Huarte, of Joe Namath, of Ralph Neely, of Ger Schwedes, the tug-of-war over Don Meredith between the two Dallas teams...

Of George Izo—remember him? Houston picking Ray Jacobs of Howard Payne as its No. 1 prospect. Miami, if one will recall, wanted and drafted Jim Grabowski, only to lose out.

Roman Gabriel? You'll recall—trivia buffs might—that he was the No. 1 pick of the AFL, back in 1962. Oakland, the same ones will remember, was the team that bid first for his rights.

Maybe the owners will not want to remember those red-letter—and red-ink—days. It's much more dignified now, as grown men sit together in one large hotel conference room and quite formally read off the names. Then, the club will take its time in contacting the young man, who already has an agent and a salary figure in mind.

But, from a distance, far enough away not to be damaged by the fallout, it can't match the previous era... Hank Stram in the arms of Buck Buchanan.

Go ahead, Earl, you're big enough.

Three Raiders Picked During First Day

Three Texas Tech players were selected in the first five rounds of Tuesday's NFL draft. The New York Giants tabbed running back Billy Taylor in the fourth round and also took Raider defensive tackle Jim Krahl in the fifth round. New Orleans took defensive back Eric Felton in the fifth round.

"We really like Taylor's speed in getting to the outside," Giant coach John McVay said of the 6-0, 212-pounder. "He also can catch. He caught 30 passes coming out of the backfield during his senior season."

Felton, a 6-0, 202-pounder, was an all-Southwest Conference selection at cornerback following the 1977 season, while the quick Krahl, a 6-5, 250-pounder, received honorable-mention All-America selection.

Felton was somewhat surprised at being chosen by the Saints. "The Saints hadn't talked to me any. Pittsburgh and the New York teams had talked to me the most. I'm pretty pleased at going to New Orleans, though. I think it's a good opportunity."

Felton said he has not signed yet and "probably won't for a while." Neither Taylor nor Krahl could be reached for comment Tuesday.

IT HASN'T BEEN too many years that Dave Parks was the first pick in the draft. The Tech receiver was well regarded in the collegiate world, but not that highly regarded, until the winter when the San Francisco 49ers shouted his name first.

Immediately heads turned in this and his direction. A few weeks later, he began making all-America teams. And the world was his.

It is an honor that he deserved and that will stay with him—and such young men as Earl Campbell—the rest of his life. Something akin to the wealth they gave, back in the real old days, to Olympic champions. Those from Greece in the days when the games were staged in the shadow of Mount Olympus.

It's akin to winning the Heisman Trophy. And, if you come up with both... well, they'll never turn out the lights on you.

BUT, IN THE pros' rush to make the draft such a major PR project, they've taken some of the edge of it. Or, maybe

Did You Know

In 1911, Alfred Ewing Whitehead devised a plan to promote the sagging infant cotton industry of the South Plains. He purchased a carload of cotton seed, and offered one bushel to each farmer. In return, he was paid back 2 bushels of seed from each farmer who made a crop. It was the best season to date, with a total of 606 bales harvested. Just eight years later, in 1919, cotton production was boosted to a grand total of almost 14,000 bales. In 1977, the yield was 3.3 million bales.

year; I want my teammates to accept me as a human being as well as a football player," he said.

The Kansas City Chiefs, whose defense ranked dead last in the league and who wound up tying Tampa Bay for the worst record in 1977 (2-12), selected defensive end Art Still from Kentucky.

The New Orleans Saints gave quarterback Archie Manning a new passing target by taking Florida wide receiver Wes Chandler.

The New York Jets gave quarterback Richard Todd some more protection by taking Ohio State tackle Chris Ward and the Buffalo Bills, having dealt Simpson to San Francisco, filled the running back gap by taking Oklahoma State's Terry Miller.

Five teams had a pair of first-round picks as a result of trades. Green Bay took Stanford wide receiver James Lofton and Michigan linebacker John Anderson. San Francisco selected Notre Dame tight end Ken MacAfee and linebacker Dan Buz from Cal State-Long Beach.

Cincinnati grabbed Ross Browner, the 1976 Outland Trophy winner from Notre Dame and Washington center Blair Bush. Cleveland chose Southern Cal linebacker Clay Matthews and wide receiver Ozzie Newsome from Alabama and St. Louis picked Arkansas kicker Steve Little and Washington State defensive back Ken Greene.

Denver, the American Conference champion last season, took defensive tackle Don Latimer from Miami and Dallas, the Super Bowl champion, closed the first round by selecting Michigan State defensive end Larry Bethea.

LARRY BETHEA

ATLANTA (AP) — The trade of strong safety Ray Brown to the New Orleans Saints for cornerback Ernie Jackson was announced Tuesday by the Atlanta Falcons of the National Football League.

Brown has been the Falcons' all-time pass interception leader with 31.

Brown originally was a sixth-round draft pick from West Texas State.

Jackson, a No. 7, first-round draft choice from Duke, has played six years for the Saints.

"Ernie Jackson is a proven player at the corner spot and should help our football team," Bennett added.

A&I Boasts Three NFL Draft Choices

By The Associated Press

Texas running back Earl Campbell and his $1.3 million contract with the Houston Oilers hogged the spotlight Tuesday in the National Football League draft, but small-college powerhouse Texas A&I had three players selected in the first three rounds.

The Oilers, who acquired Tampa Bay's No. 1 draft choice, made the Heisman Trophy-winning Campbell the NFL's first pick.

Arkansas kicker Steve Little, who was picked by St. Louis, was the only other Southwest Conference player to be selected in the first round. He was the 15th player selected.

Texas A&I linebacker Johnny Barefield was picked by the Cardinals in the second round, while ace Javelina running back Larry Collins was a third-round pick by Cleveland.

The Cardinals then tapped the powerful South Texas NATA school in the third round for defensive back Doug Greene.

Texas-Arlington, never considered to be a fertile hunting ground for the NFL, had two players — running back Derrick

Earl Wants Acceptance In Pros

Brown, O.J. Simpson or Tony Dorsett, I'm just going to work hard and I know what Earl can do.

"I look up to three different football players — O.J., Brown and Franco Harris — they all can run, block and catch the football, that's the kind of player I want to be."

Campbell stressed that he has two major goals for his rookie season.

"I want my teammates to accept me as a human being as well as a football player. In order for this to happen, I can't be nervous. Anyhow, if I get nervous, my blood pressure will just go up," he said.

Campbell, an Associated Press first team All-American, said he has reached a tentative contract agreement with the Oilers and that he expects to sign this week.

"The biggest part of all this is being able to help my mother, she's not getting any younger. I'm glad to stay in Texas near my family. I'm in the process of fixing up my mother's house. She's told me I don't have to, but I want to," he said.

The Oilers were able to draft Campbell after trading four draft picks and tight end Jimmy Giles to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Phillips had indicated he would use Campbell as a halfback.

"It doesn't matter to me whether I play halfback or fullback, just so long as I play," said Campbell. "I'll just try to get the job done my way. If someone likes my style that's great."

Campbell said he is looking forward to playing with Anthony Davis, a running back the Oilers acquired last week from Tampa.

"He's a nice guy. I think he knows the pro system. He'll probably play halfback too, but I imagine he will also be running back kicks. The only other guy I know on the team is Billy Johnson."

Campbell said he is 11 hours short of his degree at Texas.

"If the teachers have some mercy, I may be able to go back and catch up. Otherwise I'll try to finish after my rookie year."

Cowboys' Pick To Follow Pugh?

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys drafted fast and agile defensive tackle Larry Bethea of Michigan State in the first round of the National Football League college draft Tuesday and the World Champions projected him as a possible left tackle where Jethro Pugh's career is winding down.

"When you draft from the 28th position, you can't be positive you have a star, but he has potential," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. "He's not a cinch but he's a good one. You never really know what a player has inside until training camp."

The 6-5, 255-pound Bethea took some advice to heart from Cowboy personnel director Gil Brandt, who told him "to start hustling."

"I owe a lot to him (Brandt)," said Bethea, who couldn't believe the Cowboys took him in the first round. "He told me to hustle, hustle, hustle and that's what I did in my senior year."

"It will be a challenge to play for Dallas...a hell of a challenge. I'll play anywhere they want me to play. I'd love to contribute on the specialty teams."

Bethea thought he was the butt of a practical joke when Brandt and Cowboys public relations director Doug Todd called him. "Who is this really?" Bethea questioned skeptically. "I still don't believe it...someone's going to have to convince me."

The Cowboys convinced him, by making a reservation on a 2 p.m. plane so he could fly to Dallas for contract talks.

"This was beyond my expectations," said Bethea. "Most people were telling me I'd go in the second or third round."

Bethea has 4.8 speed in the 40 and even played tight end his freshman year for the Spartans. Landry said the Cowboys have no tight end plans for Bethea.

"He has similar quickness to Randy White and we'll use him in the line," said Landry.

Pugh, a 13-year veteran, said at the Super Bowl it was possible he would not play in 1978. He still hasn't made an official decision.

"Bethea's an excellent athlete who has his whole career ahead of him" said Brandt. "He has great potential. He's smart, has good size and speed. He's a good athlete and he'll probably take a year to develop at tackle in our system. He is not gamble. He is a solid football player."

The Cowboys, who shocked the NFL last year by getting the negotiating rights to Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett, said the draft was "going right down the list" this year. Landry said. "There just aren't any secrets in the draft any more."

Yount Determined To Return To Play

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Shortstop Rob Yount says he's going to play baseball this season, but the Milwaukee Brewers still aren't sure how long.

Yount, 22, has been on the disabled list since March 28. He is in the option year of his contract, and had said he was considering leaving baseball for a shot at the professional golf tour.

The Brewers announced Tuesday that he had rejoined the club. A spokesman said he would begin working out with the team immediately and would return to active status as soon as he was able.

Yount was quoted as saying he was "delighted to rejoin the Brewers."

"All I want to do is concentrate on baseball and help the Brewers win some games," he said, adding that he would continue contract negotiations "later in the season."

A Brewers' spokesman said Paul Molitor, the rookie shortstop who started the season, has been slowed by a pulled groin muscle recently, and veteran Tim Lincecum, acquired in a trade with Toronto, is suffering knee problems.

Yount has been a Brewer starter since 1974, his rookie year. Since being placed on the disabled list, he has spent time in Arizona and California.

He was in Milwaukee for opening day, but left for California April 19.

Brewer President Bud Selig said at the time he did not consider it a bad sign, and continued to talk with Yount by phone.

As a college player at Louisiana State, Pete Maravich scored 50 points or more in a basketball game on 28 occasions.

Mats' Burrell Named MVP At Banquet

Kenzy Burrell, one of the South Plains' top running backs, was named the most valuable player of the Estacado High School football team Tuesday night at the Matador's all-sports banquet.

Burrell, also a top tackler, was the leading rusher for the Matadors, running for 1,064 yards.

Also honored were Jimmy Scott, fighting heart; Rudy Rodriguez, offensive lineman; Steve Worthey, offensive back; Freddie Ivory and Neal Sayles, defensive players; Willie Powell, basketball; Mike Sims, track; and Winston Gipson, scholar.

Awards were also presented to the top girl athletes.

U.S. Hockey Stars Drop Fourth Game

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Pavel Richter, Jan Zajicek and Jaroslav Pouzar scored two goals apiece Tuesday, triggering defending champion Czechoslovakia's 8-3 victory over the United States in the World Ice Hockey Championships Tuesday.

It was the fourth straight loss for the Americans, who got two goals from Curt Bennett of the National Hockey League. St. Louis Blues and another by Mike Eaves of the University of Wisconsin.

After a scoreless first period, Richter connected twice within the first 4 minutes of the second period. Then the Czechs got another from Zajicek for a 3-0 lead.

Bennett's first goal came 4 minutes into the third period but Zajicek got that one right back for the Czechs. Pouzar made it 5-1 before Bennett's second goal.

Milan Boyv and Eaves then swapped goals before Frantisek Cernik and Pouzar completed the Czech scoring.

"We're proud of them," said American assistant coach Andre Beaulieu. "They played a good game."

Lisle Remains Confident In Chaparrals

MARK LISLE

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Back in early March when Lubbock Christian College was mired in the throes of a 3-9 slump, Mark Lisle never doubted that the Chaparrals would rebound.

Now the Graham product, one of only two seniors on the squad, is looking to "go all the way" to the national tournament again.

Lisle is unusual in that he is a "part-time regular." Huh? Yep, that's right, a "part-time regular." Lisle, you see, is a pure designated hitter. He hasn't had so much as one attempt at his adopted position, first base, this season.

last half of the year. "That really hasn't been much of a problem," the business administration major, who still lacks a semester before graduating, said. "It seems like Tim (Leslie, who hits third) has been driving in so many runs that it takes the pressure off. Tommy (leadoff man Inman) and Darius (No. 2 hitter Cooley) usually get one and there's someone on second by the time I get up. So I'd say most of the pressure is on the 3-4-5 hitter."

Lisle, who took a .310 career average into this season, was a bit miffed at the All-Texas Conference selections, as a designated hitter was omitted. "It (All-Conference) would have been nice, but it's no big deal. I've just learned to live with the fact we (the DHs) get very little recognition. It's not something I will let get me down."

Graham High School didn't have a baseball program when Lisle was growing up, so his baseball experience came from Babe Ruth and American Legion ball. "The biggest adjustment I had to make was learning to hit the curve ball," he explains. "Mark Blau was a senior my first year and he had one of the best curves I've ever seen. It was through his help that I learned to hit the curve."

Lisle is one of five Chaparrals who are married, and that number should double within the next three weeks. Lisle's wife Susan just graduated with a degree in psychology.

"Playing baseball is the main reason it'll take an extra semester," Lisle explains. "I was never able to take more than 14-15 hours in a semester."

"Being married wasn't all that difficult because Susan goes to all the games and we're not apart that much. But what was hard was keeping up with the studies. Most of the teachers at LCC are good about helping you fill in on the notes you missed and help in any way they can, so that helped."

Lisle admits that baseball and softball have become a big part of his life and that he can't see himself stopping playing at this point.

At least not for another month, anyway.

Kupchak To Start For Bullets

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Mitch Kupchak looks forward to his role as a starter for the Washington Bullets against the Philadelphia 76ers tonight, but he says he's glad it didn't happen last week.

"I wasn't playing well and I lost confidence in myself," Kupchak said of his play against San Antonio in the National Basketball Association quarter-final playoff series.

"I never really went to the pits, but I thought I had to prove to everybody that I could still play. After a couple of bad games, I started to doubt myself."

Kupchak, often frustrated by his substitute status, will replace center Wes Unseld against the 76ers in the second game of the NBA Eastern Conference championship.

Unseld suffered a badly strained right ankle in the opening game of the best-of-seven series Sunday, a contest the Bullets won in overtime, 122-117.

Unseld will be in a cast at least until tonight when the injury will be re-examined by team physician Dr. Stan Lavine. He is listed as questionable for Friday's game here at the Capital Centre.

"We were afraid something was broken," said Coach Dick Motta, "so at least it wasn't all bad news. I'm not going to make any predictions that he won't be back Friday night. Wes is a quick healer, so you never can say how fast he'll get over an injury."

Although Kupchak had 14 rebounds in the opener, he has not been as consistent on the boards as Unseld. And Kupchak admits he does not set the same kind of crushing picks.

"I'm not going to try to play like Wes," he said. "I can't do that. I can be there and set the pick, but it won't have the same effect. I can also throw an outlet pass to half-court, but not to three-quarters like he can."

"I'll try to be more conscious of setting picks and freeing people for open baseline shots, but I have to play my style. The offense is flexible enough to accommodate what I do best, much more so than last year."

What Kupchak does best is run and score. He has been struggling during the playoffs to get his shooting on target, but he says knowing he will start will help him. He's shooting only 44 percent, compared with 52 percent for the season.

"I worry too much, but it bothers me when I play badly or don't get many minutes," he said before leaving for Philadelphia. "Basketball is the most important thing — no, the second most important thing in my life. It's bound to bother me."

"I couldn't get untracked. I didn't play well, so I didn't stay in long. That's the hazards of a sub. If you're not contributing, it's the coach's job to get you out of there."

"Generally, everyone's performance in the NBA is judged by how many points they score, and when I wasn't scoring, I started pressing and making some mental mistakes. Now that I'm shooting better, I just feel better. I'm not worried any more. I'm looking forward to the next game."

In four games against the 76ers this season, Kupchak led the Bullets with 95 points. George McGinnis usually tries to guard him without much success.

"They try to hide McGinnis on defense by having him guard Wes," said Coach Motta. "But he'll have to guard Mitch. I feel much better about Mitch now than I did last week. He had a little down period, but I just told him to relax."

"It used to bother me some, but at first I was playing behind John Harris. He was an All-America and I could understand that. Now just getting to play is the big thing and I enjoy it, even dh-ing."

"I think I hit better against better pitching, but it seems like every year toward the end of the season I go into a slump and the average dips down (this year it's gone from a high of .389 to its present .326). Hopefully, I can get back in the groove and start hitting like I was at the first of the year."

Lisle has been inserted in the cleanup position against righthanders much of the

LCC Winds Up Second In Poll

Lubbock Christian College finished second on the final District VIII (NAIA) poll, but that lofty perch still gives the Chaparrals a first-round bye in the upcoming District Tournament.

Texas Wesleyan (46-22-2) finished as the No. 1 team in the district, with LCC second with a 42-18-1 mark.

The University of Dallas (31-23-1) finished third, Jarvis Christian (25-18-1) fourth, Dallas Baptist (25-29-1) fifth and Midwestern (17-28) sixth. Paul Quinn finished as No. 7 with a 23-25 mark.

Thus, under the district tournament setup, UD will face Midwestern at noon Sunday at Arlington Stadium and Jarvis will take on DBC at 3:30 p.m., with the losers being eliminated.

On Monday, the meet reverts to a double-elimination format, with TWC facing the UD-Midwestern winner at noon and LCC taking on the Jarvis-DBC survivor at 3:30 p.m.

Tuesday, the winners will play at 3:30 p.m. and the losers at noon. A possible tripleheader will begin at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

This is the first year for the six-team format, but during the preceding four years with a four-team meet was used, the winning team—LCC three times and TWC once—finished the tournament undefeated.

NBC League Set Meeting Thursday

Rice Tabs Williams

HOUSTON (AP) — Bobby Williams, a member of the 1957 championship team at Rice University, has been named receiver coach by Ray Alborn, the new head football coach at Rice.

Williams, offensive coordinator the past six years at Spring Branch Northbrook, earlier had accepted a part-time assignment with the Owls before Homer Rice resigned as head coach last month to join the staff of the Cincinnati Bengals.

Williams coached earlier at Tomball, Lamar Consolidated, and San Angelo Central.

ENTRY DEADLINE

The entry deadline for teams in the YMCA church softball leagues is May 8. Teams interested in joining a league should contact the YMCA at 762-0588.

Tech Signs Fourth Cage Recruit In Beadle

SNYDER (Special)—The signing of Adam Beadle to a Texas Tech letter-of-intent brings to four the number of Raider basketball recruits this spring and to three the number of Western Texas Collegians headed for a major college.

And, the cupboard has not been picked clean, reported Nolan Richardson. Not only did the WTC Westerners gain national recognition by making the national junior college tournament, but Richardson has been reaping honors.

The first-year coach at WTC was named junior college coach-of-the-year by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches. The honor was presented to Richardson last weekend when he coached an all-star team in a game at Waco.

Beadle has signed a national letter with Tech for the second time. The 6-6 forward signed originally with Tech out of high school at Las Cruces, N.M., but dropped out of Tech only a few weeks into his first semester. He did not participate in basketball that year and played only one season with WTC. Thus, he will have three years of eligibility with Tech.

Also signed off last year's WTC club are 6-8 Julio Gallardo and 6-8 Jon Moorehead. Both signed with Baylor, although Moorehead signed only a Southwest Conference letter.

Moorehead is considering other schools, including Stetson of Florida and Arizona, it was reported.

Beadle averaged 17 points a game while hitting 52 percent of his field shots. Beadle also scored on more than 90 per cent of his free throws and wound up seventh in the nation among jacos in free-throw shooting.

Moorehead averaged 10 points a game and hit 56 percent of his shot. He also averaged nine rebounds a game.

Gallardo averaged 15 points a game, hitting 51 percent from the field and pulled down seven rebounds per contest.

In addition to the trio, Richardson said that three more members of last year's team could land college scholarships.

Beadle is the first junior collegian Tech has signed this spring.

Earlier, Tech landed 6-3½ Jeff Taylor and 6-1½ Steve Smith from Hobbs, and 6-6 forward David Little of Abilene High.

Alydar: It's All In Name

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Whether you're a hardboot or a romantic, you have to like Alydar in Saturday's 104th Kentucky Derby.

The very name of the stretch-running Calumet colt conjures up visions of princes, movie stars and the glitter of the jet set of another era.

The story is that Mrs. Gene Markey, the empress of Calumet Farm, named the Derby favorite after an old friend, Aly Khan — the sobriquet being a condensation of "All darling."

"Ridiculous," says Mrs. Markey. "I never called Aly anything but 'Aly.' I suppose I had Aly in the back of my mind but 'dar' is an Arabic word that means many things. Alydar was named by my husband."

Mrs. Markey inherited the famous farm, which has produced eight Derby winners going back to Whirlaway in 1941, from her first husband, baking powder tycoon Warren Wright, who died in 1950. Later she married Markey, a film producer and Navy admiral, who had been married to film stars Joan Bennett, Hedy Lamar and Myrna Loy.

Their horse-racing enterprises led them naturally into a friendship with Aly Khan, the international Pakistan playboy who once was married to actress Rita Hayworth. Aly Khan died in an automobile accident in 1960.

"What's in a name?"

William Shakespeare must have been thinking more of thoroughbred race horses than the scent of roses when he penned those immortal lines.

This weekend in thousands of offices and kitchens around the country secretaries and housewives will be scanning the Derby field looking for a catchy name which might inspire a "hunch" bet. Records and track times will be of meaning less value.

Alydar's tie-in with such glamorous figures as Aly Khan, Rita Hayworth and Hedy Lamarr — despite Mrs. Markey's protestations — is bound to touch romantic souls.

Most horses — the Derby contenders being no exception — get their names from their moms and pops. Affirmed's mom, for instance was named Won't Tell You. Believe It, the Wood Memorial winner, was sired by In Reality. Unbeaten Sensitive Prince's parents were named Majestic Prince and Sensitive Lady.

Chief of Dixieland was sired by Indian Chief II. Hoist the Silver came from Hoist the Flag and Silver Service. Dr. Valeri was named for a real live doc, not a horse or veterinarian. Darby Creek Road was named after a farm, Raymond Earl after Raymond Earl. Who is Raymond? Esops Foibles will really throw you. The first name is derived from the Employee Stock Ownership Plan while the second came from the horse's dam, Checkered Career.

None has the ring of Alydar — a majestic horse representing a majestic age.

Whalers Seek Victory In Quebec's Territory

QUEBEC CITY, Quebec (AP) — The New England Whalers will attempt to duplicate a feat accomplished by the Quebec Nordiques when the two clubs meet in the third game of their best-of-seven World Hockey Association semifinal round tonight.

Last Friday night the Whalers took advantage of home ice in Springfield, Mass., to defeat the Nordiques 5-1, but Quebec won Sunday's second contest, also in Springfield, 3-2, on Steve Sutherland's tie-breaking goal late in the third period.

Now the Whalers would like to pick up at least one victory in Quebec City. The fourth game is scheduled here Friday night.

Before the series began, Maurice Fillion, coach and general manager of the Nordiques, said he had no predictions, but he was confident his club would take the series and advance to the finals against the Winnipeg Jets. The Jets drew a bye to the final round.

Plagued by injuries during the regular season, the Nordiques will have their regular lineup on hand tonight with the exception of veteran defenseman J.C. Tremblay.

Fast-skating forwards Marc Tardif, who won the WHA scoring title with 154 points, and linemate Real Cloutier, will play — centered by Christian Bordeleau. Bordeleau missed a good part of the regular season because of injuries.

The Whalers will attempt to slow down Quebec's most powerful scoring trio with the checking line of Larry Pleau, Danny Bolduc and Mike Rogers.

Derby Focus Set On Four Jockeys

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The judgment of four small men named Cauthen, Velasquez, Maple and Solomone during a span of about 2 minutes Saturday could mean the difference between between victory and defeat in the Kentucky Derby.

"When you get four horses this caliber together and a race of the importance of the Kentucky Derby, then there is no room for jockey error," John Veitch, trainer of Calumet Farm's Alydar, said Tuesday.

"A jockey error could cost the race just in the fraction of a second it takes to make a decision," said Laz Barrera, trainer of Affirmed.

Of course, there will be other jockeys in the 1¼-mile Derby, probably six of them, but the four men on the spot are the riders of the Big Four — Steve Cauthen, on Affirmed; Jorge Velasquez, Alydar; Eddie Maple, Believe It; and Mickey Solomone, Sensitive Prince.

The spotlight especially will be on Cauthen, a native Kentuckian who will be making his Derby debut five days after his 18th birthday.

As to how the teen-ager will react to the pressure, Barrera said: "You don't believe Cauthen could be 50 years old?"

"I've never seen a kid as good as him at his age — his disposition and the way he handles himself at his age," said Woody Stephens, the trainer of Hickory Tree Stable's Believe It who saddled his first stakes winner in 1945 and won the 1974 Derby with Cannonade. "He's a cool little cookie."

"You've got real smart race riders riding these horses," added Stephens.

Velasquez, Maple and Solomone are veterans of Derby competition who will be trying to win the race for the first time. The only Derby-winning jockey in Saturday's 104th running will be Don Brumfield, who will ride Darby Creek Road. Since Velasquez still is in New York, Brumfield, who won the 1966 Derby with Kauai King, was up when Alydar worked a half mile in 50 seconds Tuesday, with fractions of 25.4 and 24.1-5.

Velasquez, a top rider in New York for many years, is a 32-year-old Panamanian who will be appearing in his fifth Derby. He finished third on Dike in the 1969 Derby, eighth on Bold and Able in 1971, eighth on Play the Red in 1976 and third on Sanhedrin last year.

"Velasquez has tremendous judgment," said Veitch. "He knows exactly where he is. A lot of jockeys can't adjust to the situation."

Maple, 29, made his Derby debut in 1971 when he finished fourth on Calumet Farm's Eastern Fleet. In his other Derby start, the regular on the New York circuit rode Flip Sal, who went lame in the 1974 race. Maple rode Alydar for that colt's first six races last year before being replaced by Velasquez after Alydar finished second in the Hopeful and the Futurity.

The ride on Top of the Marc Stable's Sensitive Prince will be the third Derby trip for the 36-year-old Solomone and also his best chance at winning. He finished eighth with Dandy K in 1964 and 15th with On the Money in 1971.

Veitch termed Alydar's workout "just right. It didn't take anything out of him. I just wanted to keep his mind on his game." The 32-year-old trainer said Alydar will blow out three-eighths of a mile Friday morning.

Pokes' Murchison Denies Allegations

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys owner Clint Murchison labeled as "libelous" and untrue Tuesday allegations in a Playboy magazine article by former White House confidant Bobby Baker that the Cowboys football franchise was arranged through a $25,000 bribe to late Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn.

"The story is not true. It is libelous," Murchison said from his 11th floor suite of offices, just above the Dallas Playboy Club.

Baker, a well-known Washington "fixer" and associate of the late President Lyndon Johnson, went to prison in 1971 on a variety of charges.

In his story, written with Texas writer Larry King for the June issue of Playboy, Baker said he was approached by a "courier" representing Texas money interests.

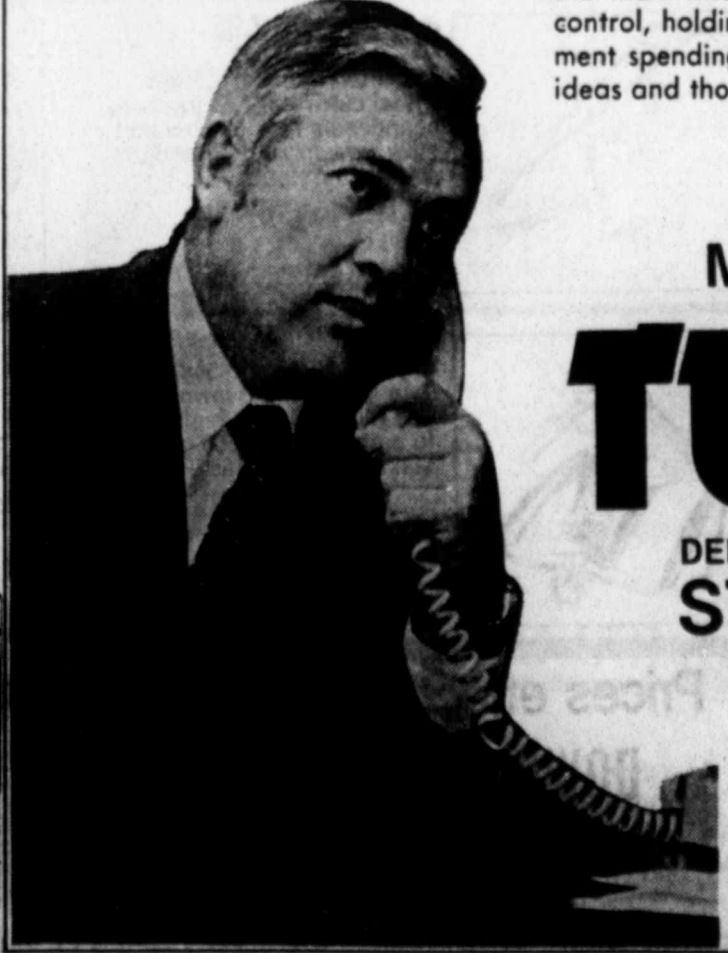

Baker quoted the man as telling him "my job is on the line. I've got to lock up that damn football franchise for Texas and I've been told not to leave any stone unturned."

Show Host Speaks Up For Women

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gerri Lange, host of "Turnabout," a public television program about women, says her climb to media stardom in middle age is proof "you don't have to die or wither up just because you hit 50."

Miss Lange, a 53-year-old former journalism teacher, has in three years established "Turnabout" as a dramatic news magazine show by, for and about women, seen today on 246 Public Broadcasting Service stations coast to coast.

The show originally was called "Woman-time & Co." It was created at KQED, San Francisco's non-commercial station, as an alternative to the traditional daytime programming of soap operas and game shows.

"Turnabout" is "on target, topic-wise," Miss Lange said, partly because the San Francisco Bay area is a focal point for social change in the country. The show has treated topics such as childbirth, contraception, women in science and the problems of running a career and a family at the same time.

Martha Gleesing, the show's executive producer and head of the all-woman crew, said part of the show's appeal is Miss Lange herself — her warmth, outgoing personality and experience.

"There's never been a spokeswoman for real women," said Miss Lange. "I don't mean a symbol like Farrah Fawcett-Majors."

"I love being a celebrity," she went on. "I know you're supposed to say it doesn't matter, but it does. I waited so long and I love it. I've been a winner and a loser and I'd rather be a winner."

She added: "I'm getting my second wind," she said. "No one has ever said, 'Take that old lady off the air.'"

A third generation Californian, Miss Lange is a divorced mother of three grown sons, one of whom plays a bartender on ABC's "Love Boat" series.

After a diversified career as editorial assistant, secretary, legislative assistant and journalism teacher, she landed a job as a producer at a local TV station in 1974.

Her family tree includes a Seminole Indian grandmother, a father who fought with the 10th Cavalry at San Juan Hill in the Spanish-American War and claimed to have saved Teddy Roosevelt's life, and an Irish great-grandfather.

An atypical Californian, she hasn't owned a car since 1959.

After a show on physical fitness for women, Miss Lange dashed out of the studio to buy herself a pair of jogging shoes. "I never used them, but I may, someday soon," she said.

Pain Killer Ruling Upheld

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals Tuesday upheld a federal judge's decision in a dispute over advertising claims between manufacturers of the pain killers Anacin and Tylenol.

U.S. District Judge Charles P. Stewart's ruling was a partial victory for McNeil Laboratories, Inc., maker of Tylenol. He enjoined American Home Products, Inc., which makes Anacin, from indicating in its advertisements that its product gives greater pain relief than Tylenol and reduces inflammation while Tylenol doesn't.

Both manufacturers appealed Stewart's ruling.

Tylenol's maker argued Stewart should have gone farther and also enjoined as false and misleading claims that Anacin gave faster relief and was harmless to the stomach.

The makers of Anacin contended their advertising was truthful and that Stewart erred in enjoining them.

The appeals judges disagreed with both manufacturers, ruling Stewart made proper use of market research reports to reach his decision and framed his injunction properly.

Burundi Issues ID Cards

BUJUMBURA, Burundi (AP) — The Burundi government has ordered all citizens over the age of 16 to carry an identity card in a measure aimed at reducing emigration from rural areas to the cities.

According to the government order in this former Belgian colony, the identity card can be obtained only in the municipality where applicants live and city residents will have to prove they have a job.

Indonesian Corruption Eyed

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesia lost an estimated $120 million because of corruption during a five-year period from 1973 to 1977, the attorney general's office announced.

Deputy Atty. Gen. H.R. Sadili reported that his office settled 996 corruption cases out of a total 1,704 filed in the five-year period. He said the remaining 708 cases of corruption are still pending "because they are difficult cases and very complicated."

African Children Poisoned

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Twenty children, ranging in age from 2 to 5, have died after eating a sauce contaminated by a mouse that had consumed rat poison, an Ivory Coast newspaper reported Tuesday.

The poisoning occurred Monday in a village about 50 miles north of this capital and 40 other children who ate the sauce were hospitalized, according to the daily Fraternite-Matin.

Tokyo Police Raid Gangsters

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo police raided 521 places, arrested 872 persons and confiscated 43 handguns and 13 Japanese swords Tuesday as they launched a spring campaign to wipe out gangsterism, authorities reported.

The 2,600 raiding officers also confiscated narcotic and stimulant drugs worth $297,000, police said. Similar raids were planned later this month as part of the annual campaign.

Postal Employee Named Rural Driver Of Year

Gaynor Roger Sell, a postal employee since July 1, 1953, has been honored as Rural Driver of the Year in the Lubbock Management Sectional Center Manager/Postmaster in Lubbock.

He was selected from other Drivers of the Month chosen during 1977 and 1978.

Sell has not received any traffic violations or citations during his career, which now includes a route of 182 miles per day with 305 postal customers.

Jet Fighter Problems Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force's F-16 jet fighter has severe — but probably correctable — engine problems and its ability to survive in battle remains unknown, the General Accounting Office says.

Final development of the single-engine plane is now underway and it is expected to be in delivery by August.

It is designed to be the standard lightweight fighter for the United States and for several North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies.

The GAO, an investigatory arm of Congress, said last week that the malfunctions of the F-16 engine are an estimated three times higher than the tolerance set in Air Force specifications.

The Tactical Air Command was quoted as saying engine stalls, for example, are a serious problem, particularly in combat "when loss of power can give an enemy aircraft a distinct advantage."

But the GAO said the problems "do not seem to be any more severe than those experienced in other major systems. And, experience with other systems shows that these problems are resolved over time."

The Air Force said some improvements already have been made.

The Air Force is purchasing 650 F-16s and eventually plans to buy 1,388 of the aircraft. Other prospects are 348 for Belgium, the Netherlands, Denmark and Norway and 160 for Iran. President Carter proposes selling 75 of them to Israel.

General Dynamics manufactures the plane. Pratt and Whitney makes the engines.

Aussie Males Rap Disco

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — A discotheque that charges one Australian dollar more for men than for women for entry on peak nights is in trouble with the state's Equal Opportunities Commission.

The panel has asked the disco, known as "Jules Bar," to explain its actions following several complaints from male patrons who say the extra charge discriminates against men on the basis of sex. The disco's owner has defended the practice as "an act of chivalry."

Suit Violates Dress Code

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Taxi driver Ed McGuire wore a three-piece pin-striped business suit to work, but all it got him was a suspension for violating the Broadway Cab Co.'s dress rules.

He was back in the usual dark blue shirt and pants Tuesday, after filing a grievance with his union to protest his suspension.

McGuire was not given any assignments by the company for three days last week because the firm said the suit violated dress rules, which requires blue or black jacket and pants.

McGuire, who continued to cruise and pick up fares in his cab during the suspension, said he filed a grievance with Taxi and Laundry Local 281 of the Teamsters Union.

He said the suit does not violate the dress code because the code prohibits stripes only on shirts, not on pants and jacket.

McGuire wore a white shirt with his suit.

McGuire said he filed the grievance because he was "trying to show the people of Portland some respect."

Jim Granberry Backs Hopeful Bill Clements

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Two former Republican candidates for governor, Paul Eggers of Wichita Falls, and Jim Granberry of Lubbock, showed up Monday to endorse the gubernatorial campaign being waged by William Clements of Dallas.

Eggers and Granberry joined Bryon Fullerton of Liberty Hill, who ran as a GOP candidate for lieutenant governor, and Republican State Sen. Bob Price of Pampa, at a capitol press conference with Clements.

Clements, a drilling contractor from Dallas who served for four years as Deputy Secretary of Defense, is challenging former State Republican Party Chairman Ray Hutchison, Dallas, in the GOP gubernatorial primary.

Granberry said Clements was the "most qualified" candidate of either the Democratic or Republican Party to run for Governor of Texas in the last 20 years.

Eggers added that Clements campaign should be successful through the November general election, when the Republican nominee matches up with the Democratic choice for governor, "simply because he has the money to compete."

Clements accepted the endorsements as a "compliment to my campaign," and predicted he would defeat Hutchison in the May 6 primary by a 60 to 40 per cent margin.

Wayward Radio Pastors Blending God, Gaming

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If a radio preacher repeatedly cites three-digit Psalm numbers, he may merely be serving the Lord. But he could be doing devilry — by illegally airing lottery information to his flock in return for such things of this earth as cold, hard cash.

So it is written in "Radio Report," a trade magazine here, by Gary Smithwick, a former Federal Communications Commission lawyer now in private practice in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Smithwick said such a preacher uses his radio pulpit to convince listeners he has an in with the Lord and the illegal numbers racket, then gives phony tips at special "blessing services" where the collection goes into the preacher's pocket.

Smithwick was asked about a ticklish problem that could ruin a wayward preacher — loss of faith by those who bet a tip and lose.

"Well, according to the FCC people, it's worked out so he gives enough scriptural references and numbers in his 'blessing service' that chances of him being right are very, very good," he said. "Someone is always bound to hit."

Though it's thought the wayward preachers are a minority, there's disagreement on how widespread is their blend of God and gaming.

Smithwick said one station has lost its broadcast license partly because of it, four more are under FCC scrutiny, and the agency "is making a concentrated effort" to control the problem.

He said in a phone interview that he thinks the Lord-and-lottery system occurs mainly in large cities where the numbers thrive.

Smithwick said the system starts this way: "The preacher gets on radio and in effect says, 'You come to my blessing service and I'll give you a hot tip on the numbers.' So you go to his blessing service."

"You give him $20 or so, and he gives you a little envelope that has some number in it... The people believe in this because they figure the minister is somehow plugged into the universe, that he knows what number is going to come up."

Come the next radio sermon, Smithwick said, the winning lottery number — always in three digits — can be detected by the betting believers in scriptural references repeatedly cited by the preacher. "It's supposed to be a way to reinforce the fact he's right, that he indeed is plugged into the universe," Smithwick said.

"He'll say things like, 'Psalms 9 and 39 blessed you last Sunday,' so you go look up the pari-mutuel figures for Sunday and see that the pot at Santa Anita that day was $2,397,939."

The last three numbers would be the winning number. The numbers cited in the preacher's sermon are always for the preceding week. Tips for a future lottery would come at the "blessing service."

Smithwick, who left the FCC in 1975, said he thought the radio preacher racket had been around for awhile but nobody realized it.

"I think the real awareness of it came in the WOOK case," he said, referring to a Washington, D.C., AM station whose license was yanked by the FCC in 1975 on grounds that, among other things, it "broadcast lottery information" in programs by ministers.

In his article, Smithwick said — and the FCC confirms — that the agency now is investigating similar allegations at WNJR, Newark, N.J.; WIGO-AM, Atlanta, Ga.; and WPCE and WOWI-FM, Tidewater, Va.

Arthur L. Ginsburg, the FCC's new complaints and compliance chief, said he doesn't think the preacher-numbers game is widespread. But Robert A. Zauner, a veteran FCC license hearing lawyer, said, "I would suspect it's more widespread than we presently know about."

for a station owner trying to determine if a preacher is misusing a broadcast sermon:

"That simple repetition of Bible phrases or scripture references does not conclusively establish that the minister is supplying numbers tips or advertising his winning numbers prediction service," he said. "However, it is a warning sign."

Zauner there are three things to watch for: repetition of three-digit Psalm numbers, claims that the numbers 'blessed' the listener, and constant repetition of words that don't seem to fit into a sermon.

An example, said Zauner, is: "Last Sunday I told you, 'Baby bless you.' Baby did bless you. Look it up!"

'Tattoo Charlie' Walking Ad For Business

BALTIMORE (AP) — With the Garden of Eden on his back and a "spread eagle with cupie dolls" on his chest, "Tattoo Charlie" is a walking billboard for his business.

"I'm completely covered with tattoos," says Charles J. Geizer, the 73-year-old Baltimore native who claims he's "known world-wide as 'Tattoo Charlie.'"

"I have tattoos on my body ranging from a star to the Garden of Eden with two angels on my back," he says. "I had my friends do the work on my back and the back of my arms. But, I did all the work where I could reach."

Geizer says he's rated by experts as "America's best tattooer." He's celebrating his 60th year in the business and claims he's applied about one million tattoos during his career.

Geizer says he became interested in the work after watching a tattoo artist as a child.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I would like to invest $25,000 (of the $90,000 now earning 5 1/4 percent in savings accounts) in common shares, but not until things become a little clearer.

A. I want to warn you at the outset that the phrase "until things become a little clearer" has absolutely no — repeat no — meaning. The only "clear" time to buy stocks can be pinpointed six months, or six years, or 16 years after the fact.

We now know — very clearly, indeed — that mid-1949, the fall of 1953, late 1957, mid-1961, the end of 1974 were time to buy stocks. And a fat lot of good knowing that does you now.

The stock market does not move on "clear" indications. It is influenced by hopes, suspicions, fear, greed and any other emotions lying around loose at the moment. If you stand on the sidelines awaiting a "clear" signal, that's where you are going to remain — on the sidelines.

Q. Please give us your opinion on investing in a four-year 7 1/2 percent savings certificate vs. in a common stock, such as Peoples Gas, or in a Peoples Gas bond issue.

A. If you put money into an insured savings certificate you agree to accept annual interest of 7 1/2 percent on your money and your principal back at the end of the four years... period. That's it.

If you buy a Peoples Gas Bond (rated A) you are lending money to the corporation for anywhere up to 20 years for a return, currently of from 8 1/2 to 8 3/4 percent.

If you buy common shares in Peoples Gas you are acquiring an A-rated share in a business, with all the hopes and problems a gas utility is heir to. In the last 17 years this investment grade company has been able to triple its dividend payout, taking stock splits and stock dividends into account.

You must decide whether you want to put dollars into a savings account, lend them to a gas company or acquire a "partnership" in a gas company.

Q. I have $11,000 in H bonds. If I redeemed them I would owe a tax bill of about $1,000. Would it pay to redeem and put the proceeds into high-grade corporates? Into tax-exempt bonds?

A. O.K., get out your calculator: $11,000 in H bonds yield $660 a year, subject to federal income taxes only. So reduce that $660 only by your IRS bill.

$11,000 in H bonds redeemed, minus $1,100 income taxes, would leave you $9,900 for reinvestment.

Earning 8 1/4 percent from good quality corporate bonds or preferreds the annual proceeds would be $866.25, fully taxable.

Reinvested in 6 percent tax exempts, the $9,900 would yield $594 a year, exempt, in most states, from all taxes.

So would you rather have the $660 a year you now get from H bonds, subject only to federal income taxes; or would you prefer $866.25 subject to all income taxes; or .594 subject to no taxes. Only you and arrive at the answer after applying your tax rate.

Q. Please tell me what to do with some mutual fund shares left me by my husband when he died 13 years ago. I now have only a small pension to live on.

A. You certainly cannot retain mutual fund shares which are oriented toward growth when what you need is maximum income... current income.

I would suggest asking the fund to switch your investment to its bond fund which yields around 7 to 7 1/2 or 8 percent to its bond fund which around 7 to 7 1/2 percent if it be done for only a $5 fee. If it can't, take your money out and put it into insured savings certificates.

Mr. Shulsky welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Nuclear Waste Dangers Eyed

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Gov. Dolph Briscoe Monday joined the controversy over establishing a nuclear waste disposal facility in or near Texas, saying he would "not allow any facility... which may endanger the health and well being of our people."

Proposals for establishment of a nuclear waste disposal site near Carlsbad, N.M., has prompted concern over the effects of such a facility on area water supplies and possible dangers of movement of the material through Texas for disposal.

Attorney General John Hill, Briscoe's opponent in the Democratic primary Saturday, said last week he would seek public hearings in Texas by the U.S. Department of Energy on the Carlsbad proposal.

Briscoe also indicated he would seek DOE hearings, and U.S. Sen. John Tower also announced he would be looking into the possible effects of the site.

Another cause of concern to Texas officials is the possibility of a "waste isolation pilot project" in Loving County, which Midland officials have indicated might endanger a future ground/water supply.

Briscoe's announcement Monday noted that "some preliminary geological studies are now underway in a number of states, including Texas, to locate possible sites" for disposing of waste from nuclear power plants.

"My position is and always has been that I must start out as being opposed to locating any such facility in Texas," Briscoe said.

"My office has been closely monitoring the progress of these preliminary studies and will continue to do so."

"We have been instrumental in making experts available to local and regional governmental entities who are reviewing those studies."

Those studies are being prepared by Union Carbide Corp. under a contract with the Nuclear Division of the Office of Waste Isolation of the Department of Energy.

So far, there has been no response from DOE officials to the request for public hearings, although DOE officials are reported to have contacted Hill's office for a "clarification" of Hill's request.

Peace Officer Named

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Sgt. Todd Edd Burson of the Plainview Police Department's Patrol Division was named "Peace Officer of the Year" here Monday night at the Hale County Peace Officers Association annual banquet.

Hale County Sheriff's Department investigator John Phillips was named runner-up for the honor.

Burson is a 28-year veteran of the city police force, while Phillips is assigned to the criminal investigation division of the sheriff's office.

No new taxes. What does it mean to you?

Dolph Briscoe understands that the surest way for a government to strangle its economy is to overburden its taxpayers. In contrast, his most active opponent in this year's Democratic Primary does not. That opponent — by nature and by his own admission — is an activist intent on becoming an activist governor. That means only one thing. It means government regulating our lives with bureaucratic red tape. And it means a governor whose reckless spending promises, if kept, would result in the imposition of a State income tax on you in 1979.

Governor Briscoe has pursued — and throughout his tenure as Governor will continue to pursue — a firm policy of no new taxes. This policy has served the people of Texas well. It has produced the strongest economy in the United States today. And in the process it has enabled the extension of more and better state services to our citizens than ever before in our history — without new or additional taxes.

When Dolph Briscoe became Governor, he set a course of making state government better without new taxes.

In 1972, the experts — as well as Dolph Briscoe's opponents in this year's Governor's race — said it couldn't be done.

Dolph Briscoe proved that it could. He proved that saying "no" to new taxes is saying "yes" to economic prosperity.

Since Governor Briscoe has been in office:
• 1,200 new industries, representing an annual economic impact of more than $11 billion, have moved to Texas.
• More than 850,000 new jobs have been created.
• Texas has been universally acclaimed as having the best political climate in the world for economic investment and growth.

To keep Texas on this course of prosperity without a State income tax, let's keep the candidate with a proven record. Let's keep Dolph Briscoe as our Governor.
