

Carter Okays More Israeli Jets

Concession Given To Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, on the eve of crucial congressional committee votes on his proposed three-way Mideast arms sale, agreed Wednesday to sell 20 additional jet fighters to Israel in the future.

White House press secretary Jody Powell announced an apparent administration compromise with congressional critics of Carter's planned $4.8 billion war plane package for Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

Powell referred to the compromise as an administration commitment to Israel. He said it "meets the responsible concerns" of Senate and House members who had questioned the planned delivery of sophisticated F-15 fighters to Saudi Arabia and F-5Es to Egypt.

Saudi Statement
 Word of Carter's decision came one day after Defense Secretary Harold Brown relayed to members of two congressional committees a formal statement of Saudi Arabian assurances to use U.S.-supplied fighters only for defensive purposes.

Carter wants to sell 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel, 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia and 50 F-5Es to Egypt. The compromise is aimed at blunting congressional opposition to the sale of sophisticated F-15s to Saudi Arabia.

The compromise had been rumored throughout the week as supporters and opponents of the arms sales package maneuvered to win allies on Capitol Hill.

To Support Sale
 Powell said Carter will support the sale of 20 additional F-15s to Israel in the mid-1980s. He added that the administration will give "sympathetic consideration" to Israeli requests for still more modern warplanes in the future.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the White House announcement "greatly increases the chances the arms sale will be approved."

Actually, the question before McGovern's panel and the House International Relations Committee is whether to support resolutions rejecting the arms deal. The two committees have scheduled votes on the issue today.

"Bruising Debate"
 Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, called the administration offer a "bonafide effort" at compromise but said it has not produced the kind of consensus inside the committee needed to head off "a bruising debate" on the Senate floor.

Later, following a private meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Church said the panel, which had been expected to strongly oppose the sales, appears to be evenly divided on the issue.

Church said a split vote would be a symbolic victory for Carter, but added that a close reading of the arm sales law.

Utilities Probe Ordered On Overcharges

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government commission ordered a full investigation Wednesday into the possibility that some utility companies overcharged other utilities for electricity during the winter coal strike.

The announcement by the federal Energy Regulatory Commission said it found during audits that "extraordinary" operating and billing practices apparently were used in some wholesale electricity sales.

During the coal strike, utilities that were unable to generate enough power from their own coal-powered plants were forced to buy power from neighboring utilities not affected by the shortage.

Utilities that were forced to buy electricity passed the costs on to their customers, but the commission did not attempt to estimate how home electricity bills might have been influenced by suspected overcharges.

If the investigation uncovers overcharges between utilities it could order the offending firm to refund money to the company overcharged.

The commission said its investigation would determine whether such transfers of electricity should have been billed under less expensive rate schedules than those that were applied.

The commission had directed its staff to conduct a preliminary audit a month ago of three major electricity systems and to collect billing information from a half dozen individual companies.

The investigation ordered Wednesday will apply to those systems and companies.

Houston Grants Curfew Power

HOUSTON (AP) — The City Council unanimously adopted an ordinance Wednesday granting Mayor Jim McConn the power to establish curfews and control the sale of liquor and firearms in the city if he finds such action necessary to avoid a repetition of recent violence in a Mexican-American neighborhood here.

McConn asked the council to consider the ordinance after listening to statements from residents of the near Northside, community spokesmen, church representatives and the man many claimed was responsible for the rampage in a park Sunday night that left 15 persons injured and several shops destroyed.

Eduardo Lopez, president of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church board association, echoed the statements of several other speakers in the packed council chambers who called on McConn to keep Travis Morales out of the neighborhood.

Lopez said church-sponsored ball teams would no longer play in Moody Park, the scene of Sunday's disturbance, until added police protection was provided.

Not Abandon Park

"As community residents we will not abandon the park altogether," Lopez said, "but we demand that the cancerous growth that is Travis Morales be kept out of our neighborhood."

Morales, 25, is the spokesman for People United to Fight Police Brutality, a group he said had "about 15 members" formed to protest the death last year of 23-year-old Joe Campos Torres while in police custody.

Morales told McConn and councilmen he had been at the park Sunday night but denied he encouraged anyone to take part in attacks on businesses near the park.

Told by a reporter his group did not seem to represent anyone, Morales said "if we didn't represent a lot you wouldn't be here right now."

March Planned

The group plans what Morales called "a militant, non-violent peaceful march Saturday at the park to demand that charges against those arrested be dropped."

Felony charges were filed Tuesday against 17 persons arrested during the stone and bottle-throwing attacks on police and stores Sunday and Monday. Eight others were charged with misdemeanors. Some 20 juveniles were also arrested both nights.

Several speakers said substandard living conditions and frustration in sections of the Mexican-American community were the basis of the problem that is being obscured by focussing on Morales.

"Let us not lose sight of the problems," said Hector Garcia, chairman of the Political Association of Spanish-Speaking Organizations. "Although the police acted with restraint on Sunday, the problem of the Mexican-American community with the police has not gone away."

Lorenzo Cano, Harris County leader of La Raza Unida party, said attention should be directed at community needs and not "at some drunks and poor stupid revolutionaries."

Morales later filed a million dollar lawsuit against state Rep. Ben Reyes, D-Houston, who was quoted as saying Morales was responsible for rampage that followed the outbreak of a fight in the park Sunday.

The $1,050,000 suit alleges Reyes made slanderous and defamatory remarks about Morales, including statements to the news media saying Morales had been in the neighborhood all day and used a public address system to urge members of the community to engage in unlawful acts.

The suit also claims Reyes said Morales urged the looting and burning of stores and that he allegedly stated to those in the park area that they should loot or burn stores owned by Jewish merchants.

Kids Impressed By New 'Hospitale'

By JEFF SOUTH

THE "PASHANS" at the Health Sciences Center Hospital can be assured they are getting the best of care. That word comes from the kids whose parents work at the big new "hospitale."

"My mom works hard and well. I can tell because when she comes home she is all tired out. Sometimes I have to help her make up her bed cause she has to make up all the children's beds," said 8-year-old Chama Lynn, daughter of Ruth Ann Lynn, head nurse for pediatrics.

"And you should see all the shirts my mom has to give to the children. There are alot of them."

Essays Give Views

Chama made those remarks in an essay written for a contest commemorating National Hospital Week. The contest was sponsored by the Health Sciences Center Hospital, and children of several hospital employees entered.

"My mom has a job. Mom is a secker tarri," wrote Evan Easley, age 6, son of Jo Ann Easley, administrative secretary to Gerald Bosworth, the hospital's executive director.

Evan said of his mother: "She works for the big boss, at the hospitale. She ansers telefones and ties letters. She opens letters. Some times I vaset her ofes. I like the gifet shop."

Evan attached to his essay a drawing of the huge Lubbock County teaching hospital. His entry tied for second in the contest.

Becky Duncan, 11, said her mom also is a secretary — to associate director George McGowan.

Have Secretaries, Too
 "She types 75 words a minute. I thought a hospital was just for nurses and doctors. But it's not. They have secretaries, too," Becky wrote.

"They even have a gift shop. I've never really been in a hospital before. Except when I was born, and I was too young to remember."

Another entry came from Kelle Fralick, whose mom is a clerk-typist in the hospital's business office.

"She types, ansvers the telephone, files, ansvers. She gives directions to people and takes breaks to get a drink and to eat. Sometimes when I call her she puts me on hold," said Kelle.

"She likes meeting people and she likes talking to them. She talks alot."

Charlotte Butler, age 10, tied with Evan Easley for runner-up honors. Charlotte had the most relatives working at the hospital.

Readings Near 90 Due South Plains

A-J News Services

RAIN-bearing spring storms Wednesday covered most of the South Plains like a patchwork quilt, but forecasters said the cooler temperatures and cloudy skies would dissolve today into almost summery conditions.

Showers scattered across the region without pattern Wednesday left generally only a trace of moisture, but Dimmitt reported 13 of an inch with pea-size hail before noon. Matador reported .03 of an inch as did Plainview. Floydada residents received .05 of an inch.

Lubbock rain gauges showed only a trace of precipitation after the brief morning showers were quickly replaced by winds gusting up to 35 mph. In that wind, it didn't take long for dust to pick up to round out a typical spring day.

Dirt Prospect Seen

South Plains residents today should see more summery conditions today, though, with temperatures reaching near 90 degrees before day's end. Low temperatures tonight should be in the upper 60s followed by a high Friday in the upper 80s. Again, however, southwesterly winds at 15 to 20 mph could increase chances of today being a gritty Thursday.

Extended forecasts late Wednesday called for a similar weekend, with highs in the 80s and 90s through Monday and lows in the 50s and 60s. Conditions should be generally fair and mild.

In other parts of the state, storm warnings were issued for parts of Orion, Sterling and Lynn Counties late Wednesday after radar detected storms that could trigger heavy rain, small hail and gusty winds moving toward those areas.

WHEN A deadly tornado ravaged Lubbock eight years ago today, it snuffed the lives of 26 people, scarred 500 others and damaged about $135 million worth of property.

The priceless lives cannot be replaced and the scars may never fade, but the monetary loss can — and is — being recovered.

Besides generating increased tax revenues from nearby commercial developments, the Memorial Civic Center, built in tribute to the storm's victims, has in the past year attracted almost 50,000 visitors.

Visitors Leave Cash

And because those visitors spent an average of $92 a day for the average two-day stay, they added about $5.7 million directly to the city's economy, said Roy Smith, Convention and Tourism Bureau director.

Eventually the economic impact of the visitors' dollars totaled almost $40 million, he said, explaining that the money is "turned over" by the original businesses 6.9 times.

"We're talking about a hit," Smith said. "It's easy to sell Lubbock when we have a beautiful ta-

Slain Moro Buried By Family

ROME (AP) — Aldo Moro was buried by his embittered family Wednesday in a secluded village cemetery north of here, miles from a mounting political furor over his assassination and from the continuing wave of urban terrorism besieging this nation.

His widow, Eleonora Moro, wept openly as the coffin was placed in the tomb after the private service. "Addio, (goodbye) Aldo," she said.

Italy's chief police official, Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga, resigned in face of the growing backlash to the government's failure to save the former premier. In Milan, a four-member "kneecapping" team gunned down an industrialist. And in Turin, an imprisoned leader of Moro's Red Brigades kidnapers ominously warned that the siege of terrorism was not about to end.

Four hundred mourners — all family members and friends — attended the funeral service in Torrita Tiberina, a village 30 miles north of Rome where the Moros had a house.

The widow and her children, who had appealed to the government to negotiate with the kidnapers in hopes of saving his life, issued a terse statement after his bullet-riddled body was found Tuesday saying they wanted no state funeral or other public commemoration.

The government, nevertheless, scheduled a state funeral service for Saturday in Rome, without the body.

The white oak coffin holding the Moro's body was driven by hearse from a Rome morgue Wednesday to the hilltop village, where eight pallbearers, none of them family members, carried it through the rain 300 yards to the 17th century San Tommaso Church for the simple funeral Mass, which included no eulogy or sermon.

A single white candle burned in front of the coffin.

Mrs. Moro, dressed in black, and her four children sat with heads bowed in the front pew and took communion during the service. The coffin then was driven 1 1/2 miles to the cemetery, where Moro was buried in the tomb of a friend's family. A Moro family tomb will be built nearby.

The village of 800 closed its shops.

In one of his last letters during 54 days in captivity, Moro, in despair over his fellow Christian Democrats' refusal to bargain with his Red Brigades kidnapers, requested that no party or govern-

Giant Pandas Still Display Independence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Zoo's two star-crossed giant pandas fought like two lovers, then made up and spent their first weekend together but failed for another mating season to get their act together, zoo officials said Wednesday.

"I think at this stage we're a little closer," said William Xanten, the zoo's curator of large mammals, who has been trying to breed the cuddly pair every spring since they arrived as a gift from the Chinese government in 1972.

Xanten said Ling-Ling, the female, and Hsing-Hsing, the male, had a dozen close encounters from April 17 through last Monday but the results were as frustrating as in previous years.

Mating pandas in captivity is no easy matter. There are no textbooks and it has been done only in Peking. Chinese zoo officials haven't provided much in the way of instructions, zoo authorities said.

Still, Xanten felt progress was made this year, with Hsing-Hsing being more aggressive than in past years and less intimidated by Ling-Ling's roars.

The problem also may be a matter of age, with Hsing-Hsing now 6 1/2 and Ling-Ling 7.

"The Chinese say between 6 and 8 years," Xanten said.

This year, Ling-Ling slimmed down from nearly 300 pounds to a handsome 278, and Hsing-Hsing, weighing 273, were once again brought together in the female's enclosure for approximately 90 minute encounters beginning at 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. The two were kept separated the rest of the time.

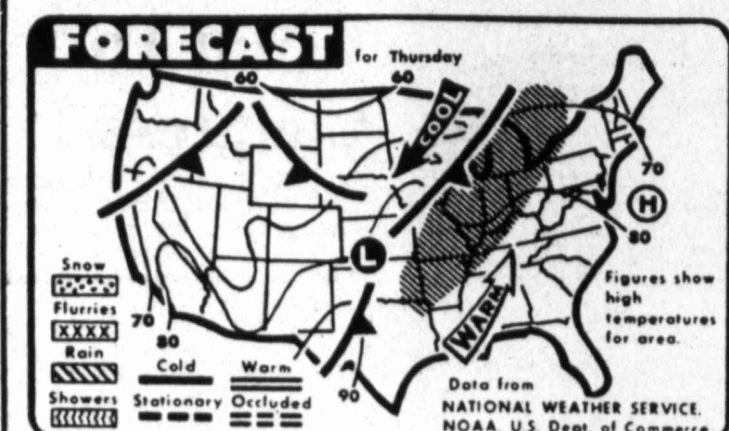

But last Friday and Saturday, the pair spent their first nights together. On Friday, Xanten said, they had what sounded like a heck of a fight with "lots of screaming, lots of roars." But it was mostly noise and neither was hurt.

There didn't seem to be any lack of willingness on either panda's part, just a lack of communication about who was supposed to do what, Xanten said.

Xanten apportioned the blame evenly. "It looked like this year both animals were just fumbling around."

Zoo officials will try again in the fall if Ling-Ling goes into heat then. If not, they will wait until next spring.

"I think it is just a question of having to wait," Xanten said. "In any case, there's nothing we can do."

Senate Panel Okays Weapons Bill Authorizing N-Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee approved a $36 billion weapons bill Wednesday authorizing funds for a new nuclear aircraft carrier and conversion of civilian jumbo jets to carry cruise missiles.

The bill, $613 million higher than the administration's request, recommends that $1.9 billion be spent for the carrier. The Carter administration does not want the ship built.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the panel, said committee members view the ship as "the last real large carrier" but feel it is needed to maintain the Navy's striking power through the 1990s.

The administration has proposed halting construction of large carriers in favor of building smaller ones. Congress endorsed that approach last year.

The House Armed Services Committee also recently included a nuclear-powered carrier in a $38 billion weapons authorization bill it approved.

The Senate bill, written in a series of closed-door meetings, was sent to the Senate floor on an 18-0 vote. It authorizes spending for military hardware and research and development in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The Senate went along with an administration request for $41 million for an experimental program to convert jumbo jets such as the Boeing 747 or McDonnell Douglas DC-10 to carry cruise missiles. Defense planners believe the civilian planes could carry up to 80 of the missiles, about four times as many as could a B52 bomber.

The cruise missiles are like small, pilotless bombers that are launched from the air and have a range of about 1,500 miles.

The House Armed Services Committee rejected the administration's request for the $41 million for the plane conversions on grounds the missile-packed jets would be so slow they would be highly vulnerable to Soviet air defenses.

The jumbo jets have been an issue in strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union and the Kremlin is trying to restrict use of the planes as a cruise missile carrier.

In its proposal for tanks, the Senate committee proposed spending $797.4 million for a fleet of 1,070 vehicles, including 110 XM-1 tanks, the newest model.

It trimmed $270 million from the Army's tank-building program by directing that diesel-powered M-60A1 tanks be upgraded and modernized to the level of the M-60A3 tank, instead of actually being replaced by the M-60A3. The more advanced tank has improvements such as a laser rangefinder and computer technology.

In addition, the committee approved $37.5 million for the 120 millimeter German-built gun for the XM-1 tank. The House committee deleted funds for the German gun, but eventually restored the money under administration pressure.

The committee's aircraft construction program goes beyond the Pentagon's request for F-14s, the Navy's prime fighter, by authorizing four more planes than were sought.

It also increases the requested number of Navy F18 lightweight fighter-bombers.

The committee's ship-building program deletes funds for construction of a Trident submarine in fiscal 1979 because the program already is more than a year behind schedule. Stennis said the money could be restored next year.

In addition, the committee added $45 million for conversion of a helicopter carrier for use with aircraft which take off vertically from the deck of a vessel.

'Angelic Looking' Youth Accused In Robberies Of Elderly Women

FLINT, Mich. (UPI) — An "angelic looking" 15-year-old boy found hiding under a pile of dirty laundry was accused Wednesday of beating and robbing 13 elderly women and killing one of them during a five-month crime spree.

Police said the youth preyed on old women who lived alone. But officers said that, because of his age, he could not be prosecuted on criminal charges.

One of the boy's alleged victims died, another was chased from her home by fire and another was left tied in a chair while her mattress burned and gas escaped from her stove, police said. All lived alone.

Investigators said none of the robberies netted more than $50 in cash.

The boy was arrested Tuesday night in the upstairs bedroom of a north side home, hiding in a pile of dirty clothes. An anonymous tip led police to the house.

Following his arrest, the suspect was taken to a juvenile home from which he escaped in January.

The boy, described by Detective Lt. Bruce Benson as chubby, well-mannered, persuasive and "angelic looking," apparently sweet-talked his way into victims' homes on the premise of making an emergency telephone call or using the bathroom.

"He looks like a little teddy bear," Benson said. "Many elderly women who are normally extremely cautious and would never open the door for strangers have opened the door for him."

Once inside, he said, the boy would become vicious, beating the women, throwing others down stairs or setting fires in their homes.

In one case, the youth allegedly robbed an 84-year-old woman of $20, a watch and her wedding rings, then tied her in a chair, set her bed on fire, turned on the gas stove and left, police said. There was a subsequent explosion but the woman managed to free herself.

Two days later, on Jan. 18, the boy allegedly tried to burn a woman out of her house. He was identified, arrested and taken to the Genesee County Children's Facility in Flint Township, where he threatened to escape and kill the officers who arrested him.

Two days later he did escape.

Police believe the woman killed died between the time the youth escaped and the time he was arrested again April 21, but police would give no details off the killing.

Lubbockites Win Business Awards

Two Texas Tech University business administration students from Lubbock are recipients of $100 each for ranking highest academically in their classifications.

Robert E. Densford of 2513 56th, a freshman accounting major, and Elizabeth Wood of 6206 Kenosha Dr., a junior management major, each received a C.N. Hilton scholarship.

The scholarships were awarded on a competitive basis, and the decision was made by the scholarship committee for the College of Business Administration. Candidates were recommended by the business administration faculty.

Exploration Due In Western Lamb County Ruins

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Man moved the rocks and made a shelter of some kind long before cowboys drove the first cattle within sight. They were fallen to ruins even then.

Puzzled settlers wondered as they picked and dug up curiosity bits to take home over the decades.

What the curious took home long ago may have been the exact thing by which Eddie Guffee, curator of archaeology at the Llano Estacado Museum, might have identified the architects of the rock ruins of Soda Lakes in western Lamb County.

Armed with a grant from the Texas Historical Foundation, Guffee will head a summer excavation into three sand dunes with rock ruins in hopes of ascertaining the builder and the use to which structures were put.

"It is a historical site, we suspect Spanish Mexicans from New Mexico," Guffee, who also is assistant director at the museum, said.

With limited funds, the group will make a broad survey of the area rather than concentrate on any specific section.

With luck, they could discover if the Comanchero used the spot while trading with the Comanches, if the ciboleros made it a temporary shelter while hunting the buffalo or if the pastores made it a stopover for wandering flocks of sheep.

It could be, Guffee explained, a combination of all three plus cowboy and settler use for temporary shelters.

Artifacts from a pre-Anglo, Spanish-Mexican occupation area on Quitaque Creek in Floyd County holding a similar sequence already make up a major museum exhibit.

At the Merrell-Taylor Village Site, which included four half-dugout ruins similar to subterranean structures of New Mexico, Guffee's crew uncovered a sequence of habitation from a Spanish lance era to white glaze pottery of the settler.

Study of architectural lines and artifacts revealed the probable presence of all known travelers of the area from worked flint of the historic Indian to the weaponry used by the military to drive him from the area.

A primitive irrigation ditch evidently had been used as late as 1880 when Col. Charles Goodnight operated a ranch for Cornelia Adair, bringing the site into the famed JA Ranch.

Anglo owners, taking over the land when the ranch was broken up, evidently had reopened the ditch to irrigate their own crops for a while.

Investigating historical occupations is as vital to the museum's objectives — the Staked Plain and its approaches and the inhabitants at whatever time and place — as a look at the mammoth hunters.

Tracing the tracks of man yesterday took a different turn for Guffee for bicentennial projects. He had to rediscover the Plainview Site which gave an Early Man projectile point the Plainview designation for having been discovered first at that location.

The site, discovered almost 40 years ago in a gravel pit, needed clarification to remain on the National Register of Historic Places.

When Guffee went looking for verification that the site still existed, he found that everyone knew the vague location — out there somewhere in Running Water Draw — but no one could point to the spot.

Finally, one artifact hunter who had traversed the narrow ledge many times to explore the site while heavy machinery dug even deeper for caliche, pointed to a specific spot and said, "It's down there."

Between the surface and "down there," was 20 feet and more of Plainview's sanitary land fill.

With fading hopes, Guffee took his own machinery and dug a trench, intersecting the site outside the disturbed area with the first investigating backhoe.

Further exploration defined a larger site with future possibilities, proving that undisturbed bone and possible artifacts, maybe even another Plainview point, are there.

The site still will be there, protected behind the fence enclosing the city's dump area, when future museum exploration may uncover more about the Early Man who killed the longhorned bison in Running Water Draw almost 10,000 years ago.

For this summer, though, museum efforts will be turned toward later inhabitants of the area who may have left tracks in the sand dunes built up around the rock ruins of Soda Lakes.

Lack Of Flood Warning May Mean Suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A city or county that fails to warn motorists of flood dangers at stream crossings can be sued for drownings and injuries, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court said it found "no reversible error" in a Waco Court of Civil Appeals decision ordering a full trial of Estelina Aleta McVicker's $434,000 suit against Johnson County.

A district court in Cleburne had entered a summary judgment for the county.

Mrs. McVicker's husband drowned and she was injured when their car was swept into rampaging Buffalo Creek in 1975. She said there was no flood gauge or any other warning of danger.

The appeals court said flood waters on a county road are a "premise defect" for which a government unit might be held liable if the evidence points to negligence.

In another decision, the court ruled that county mutual insurance companies — on which many Texans rely when they can't obtain coverage elsewhere — are exempt from state deceptive trade practice laws.

The court agreed with an El Paso Court of Civil Appeals decision throwing out all but $3,000 of a $96,403 judgment against the defunct Mobile County Mutual Insurance Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Jewell sued the company after it paid only $6,062 for fire damage to their mobile home at Monahans while they claimed the $16,000 structure was totaled.

A jury in Monahans said failure to pay the claim was a deceptive trade practice and assessed heavy punitive damages against the company.

The appeals court, however, ruled Mobile was exempt from the deceptive trade practices law because the Legislature had specifically left county mutuals out.

While upholding the decision, the Supreme Court said the Legislature should take note of the fact that county mutual customers lack "the protection against unfair and deceptive insurance acts or practices afforded to persons who deal with other types of insurance companies."

The court also upheld a Waco Court of Civil Appeals decision that the "Dead Man's Statute" applies to medical malpractice suits.

The statute prohibits witnesses from testifying about words or acts of a defendant who cannot rebut the testimony because he or she is dead.

Ralph Lamar Wilkinson sued the estate of the late Dr. Dan H. Clark, a Texas AM health center physician. He claimed that Clark's failure to diagnose a detached retina caused surgery to be less effective than it should have been.

A Bryan jury said the estate owes Wilkinson nothing, and the court of civil appeals agreed.

The appeals court said the trial judge acted correctly in forbidding Wilkinson to testify about conversations he had with Clark or tests the doctor performed.

AN EDITORIAL:

A Strangler In Our Midst

ONE OF THE more graphic, and tragic, testimonials to the threat facing law and order in a complicated world of politics and intrigue has taken place in Italy for all the world to see.

The bloody slaying of former Italian Premier Aldo Moro by the terrorist Red Brigades not only poses a challenge to the already fractionalized and beleaguered Italian government, but to all governments and men who oppose anarchy.

For, by whatever name, what has taken place in Italy, and for that matter in numerous other countries, in the name of "nationalism," terrorism or "rights" is a threat to civilized society.

THERE ARE those who may see this as an over-statement of the case, and the threat. Not so.

The Red Brigade, as its counterparts in Germany, France, Libya, Algeria and throughout the world, has in effect taken the law into its own hands.

It, and the other terrorist groups, many of them linked to a worldwide terror movement, is part of a movement to impose its demands, its thinking, its redistribution of wealth, its morals and its judgment on all men.

If this sounds alarmingly similar to the Communist Manifesto and the action of Moscow's legions from Cuba and Angola and Ethiopia, then it is no accident.

PREMIER ALDO MORO, at the age of 61, was one of Italy's more influential figures.

AN EDITORIAL:

Feminism Won't Foot Bill

WHILE A lot of American families can thank the feminist revolution (you should pardon the expression) for the roofs over their heads, a lot of others have good cause for blaming it for their difficulties in finding roofs.

Why? Well, because the feminist movement's success so far in expanding the legal rights and responsibilities of women has been a major contributing factor in the current housing boom.

Possibly "the" largest single factor, according to an analysis by the Advance Mortgage Corp., a Detroit-based subsidiary of New York's giant Citicorp.

ONE PROVISION of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1975 required that a working wife's income be counted toward mortgage eligibility under the same standards as the husband's, the company notes in its quarterly survey, U.S. Housing Markets.

"At a stroke, that (added eligibility) increased the mortgaging power of millions of two-income families 40 to 60 per cent," the survey points out, "and in many cases, by much more."

M. STANTON EVANS:

No Place Is Safe From Bureaucratic Monsters

WASHINGTON—Government in the Western world is gobbling up the resources of its citizens at a fast and rapidly accelerating pace.

Such was the message relayed by economist Warren Nutter of the University of Virginia at a recent gathering of the Philadelphia Society, an annual conclave of academics and others addressing public policy issues from a scholarly perspective.

Despite the highbrow auspices, the data that Nutter had to convey turned out to be a bit of a shocker.

EXAMINING FIGURES for 16 Western nations over the past generation, Nutter found that government spending in nearly all of them had been increasing at a giddy rate—rising, on the average, from less than a third of national income in the early 1950s to more than half in the middle 1970s.

Nor was there any indication in his figures that the process of absorption has run its course.

The worst offenders, Nutter found, are the Scandinavian countries and the Netherlands. As of 1975, governments in Sweden and Norway were absorbing 64 percent of national income, and in Denmark 59 percent.

In the Netherlands, the figure was up to 62 percent. Unsurprisingly, Nutter also found these nations had the highest rate of increase in government spending in recent decades.

AT THE OTHER end of the scale are Australia, Switzerland and Japan, with the smallest shares of national income consumed by government (39, 32 and 30 percent respectively).

The United States, which we like to think of as the world's great bastion of free enterprise and limited government, ranks higher than these three nations in terms of government involve-

Jest For Fun

The best way to find out if your date is all for ERA, is to ask her if she wants to go Dutch.

After a winter like we had, even my crabgrass will look good.

Highly respected, he was kidnapped and five of his body guards were slain in a bold foray by the Red Brigade 55 days before he was found dead.

During that period, the Red Brigade carried on a campaign of threats and "bargaining" based on the premise that if they did not get their demands—release of other alleged terrorists—then Moro would be slain.

One can argue that the Italian government owed it to Moro and his family to save him. And that it did, with every legal and civilized means available, short of capitulation to the anarchists.

NOW, ONCE again, the lie has been given to those who argue that it is possible to deal with such groups.

The only way is to hunt them out, then deal with them swiftly. Only by making the cost so high and the risk intolerable can the Red threat be eliminated.

Unfortunately, it may be too late to halt the spread of this disease. There are those who will argue the point, but even in the U.S.—which has had its share of assassination and riots—the tendency to "take to the streets" and place "rights" above reason is growing.

The example being set in Italy and other foreign nations today should serve as a clear warning to those in this nation. Law and order may be just a slogan for some. But backed by respect—which means fairness and firmness on all sides—it still is the only civilized way of living with one another, be it individuals or nations.

The number of families in which both husband and wife are working (the latter either full or part time) currently is put at some 20 million. And it is growing by about 400,000 a year.

This translates financially into billions of dollars in mortgage-available income which would not have existed prior to the 1975 equal credit act when incomes of working wives of childbearing age were generally discounted by mortgage lenders.

THAT, IN A way, is good news—for two-income families and the housing industry.

It's not good news that single-income families, generally those in which only the husband is jobholder, have not seen their mortgage-available income escalate similarly.

Consequently, they are being priced out of the market as housing costs continue to rise steeply. That is unless they can apply the increased value of a present home to the purchase price of a new one and bit the bullet elsewhere to meet higher monthly payments.

But so it goes with, ahem, revolutions—you win some and you lose some.

ment, with 42 percent of national income, as of 1975, disposed by official agencies.

In the middle rank, according to Nutter, are the United Kingdom and West Germany (each 54 percent), Canada and Luxembourg (each 51 percent), France (50 percent), Austria and Italy (each 49 percent) and Belgium (48 percent).

(These and other data on the subject are displayed in graphic and tabular form in Nutter's study, "Growth of Government in the West," published by the American Enterprise Institute.)

IT IS CLEAR ON Nutter's researches that the United States is heading the way of the Scandinavian collectivism and Great Britain.

The trend of government spending in this country has been dramatically upward in recent decades: From 12.1 percent of national income in 1929 to 27.9 percent in 1949 to 37.2 percent in 1969 to roughly 42 percent in 1976.

We are today approximately where the British and the Swedes were in the early 1960s and tracking close behind them.

Just to make sure there is no confusion about where responsibility for all this lies, Nutter provided a breakdown of figures for both domestic and "external" spending, the latter figure including defense, for all the Western societies.

IN VIRTUALLY every case, he shows, the percentage of national income devoted to defense throughout this period has fallen—from a median figure of 5.8 percent in 1950 to 3.7 percent in 1974.

The acceleration of government spending has occurred precisely as spending for defense has gone into a phase of sharp decline.

In the United States, which has borne so much of the Western defense burden, the aggregate figures are larger but the trend is the same.

U.S. spending for defense amounted to 13.7 percent of national income in 1954 but only 6.3 percent in 1976.

Domestic spending during this span increased from 18.1 to 35.3 percent of U.S. income. It is the burgeoning welfare state, in other words, that is the source of government's recent explosive growth.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Double Or Nothing?

WASHINGTON—A presidential decision has been made for a summer summit here with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to sign a new strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II), a gamble risking Jimmy Carter's leadership at home as well as his command of the West against Moscow's world offensive.

The gamble and risk stem from President Carter's private acknowledgment that he does not now have the votes in the Senate to approve the new treaty. Nevertheless, he is determined to send the treaty to the Senate late this year, without asking for immediate action. He would then seek to mobilize public fear of a nuclear holocaust to build pressure for SALT II in 1979.

What's more, despite increasingly adventurous worldwide conduct by the Kremlin, Carter has reinforced his policy against any linkage of SALT with Soviet good behavior.

Moscow's refusal to reduce its pressure on the Horn of Africa is not relevant to SALT. Nor was last week's Soviet-supported government overthrow in Afghanistan, an intervention officially ignored by the U.S. government.

THIS ANTI-linkage, turn-the-other-cheek policy raises some eyebrows in Western Europe. But what really builds fear there is the prospect that Senate refusal to ratify SALT II would gravely compromise Carter as a leader of the Western alliance.

The carefully constructed buildup for the summer summit predates the President's March 17 speech at Wake Forest University. It is now clear that the Wake Forest speech, widely interpreted as a policy switch warning Moscow to mend its ways in Africa, was intended for domestic consumption.

Actually, the crucial Moscow SALT session in mid-April was privately arranged between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin just before the Wake Forest speech.

ALTHOUGH VANCE has said little about his April talks in Moscow, some SALT II disputes were settled there. Except for a few remaining unresolved issues, the agreement is set in concrete.

Acute alarm is spreading through the Western alliance over signing a treaty that, in Carter's own private opinion, today does not command the necessary two-thirds support in the Senate.

A ranking European diplomat told us that failure of the U.S.-Soviet SALT II negotiations would be merely a "setback for detente"; but a treaty defeated in the Senate, he added, "would destroy European credibility in the 'imperial' responsibilities of America."

"CREDIBILITY" OF U.S. leadership is already in a state of disarray, partly due to Carter's much-criticized vacillation on the neutron "bomb" and his decision—without getting any Soviet tradeoff—not to put it into production.

That is added to previous concern over Carter's unilateral cancellation of the B-1 bomber, again without responding Soviet concessions.

Now comes Carter's full-speed-ahead on SALT despite the most intensive and successful Soviet offensive since October 1962, when Moscow placed nuclear missiles in Cuba.

This timing, following the B-1 and neutron warhead cancellations, is the source of serious concern in European capitals.

The ambassador of one of this country's most important non-European allies put it this way to us: "The President's refusal to link SALT with Soviet actions in Africa and now in Afghanistan is the answer to a maiden's prayer. There must be rejoicing in Moscow."

THAT STRONG sentiment is now being expressed openly here at home by Henry Kissinger and other former high officials. Citing a "presumption" that the U.S. may now be facing "a global geopolitical challenge" from Moscow that cannot be reconciled to "any definition of detente," Kissinger warned in a New York talk April 19 that Senate approval of a new SALT treaty was now questionable.

Kissinger's warning defines Carter's political risk in charging ahead with SALT II in the face of the President's own gloomy appraisal of chances in the Senate.

Without the support of Kissinger, which he had in full measure during his nip-and-tuck battle over the Panama Canal treaties, Carter could not count on even a small percentage of the Republican senators who made Panama ratification possible.

Still, the President has made his irrevocable decision to bring Brezhnev here, then take his chances by appealing to the country over the Senate's head. This is a double-or-nothing bet that, if lost, would be the most severe setback yet to Carter's presidency.

JAY HARRIS:

A Texas Touch...

THOUGHT FOR Today: Everybody has everything that really counts—themselves.

OVERHEARD: The man whose behavior leaves his wife speechless has hit upon something priceless.

DURING THE heat of the Panama Canal debate, Rep. Jim Collins suggested that a plebiscite should be held on the recreation of Texas as a Republic.

The response was overwhelming—in favor of, it turns out.

The conservative Dallas Republican recently noted that he had asked President Carter to review the Texas Annexation Treaty of 1845 after work on the Panama treaties had been concluded. Some Texans took him seriously, others joined the fun.

A Dallas surgeon wrote Collins that it was the "best damned idea I've heard in years." But he quickly added: "Let's do it if it's only for the fun of it. Old Uncle Sam ain't going to let us go..." Others weren't quite so pessimistic...

A MAN FROM Mesquite wrote: "Let's get on with it. It's time the rest of the Union recognized us for what we are."

In making his suggestion, Collins said that his fellow Texans, being proud, would not want any federal funds to hold a plebiscite and that they might instead each contribute a dollar to defray expenses.

According to his Washington office, the dollars as well as the letters rolled in. The Dallas surgeon doubled his ante. A woman sent a check for a $1 and a man in Florida mailed a dollar bill with a request to be considered an honorary citizen of the new-old Republic.

All of which may rankle some newly anointed Texans. But, believe it or not, Texas does have the right to do what Rep. Collins suggested, even to dividing itself into five separate states if it so chooses.

Of course, that or the plebiscite won't ever take place, mainly because dyed-in-the-wool, or dust, Texans are like they are because, well, they're Texans! You don't need any other explanation.

SLIDE ROAD Sam Says: If pride goes before a fall, there must have been an oversupply of it last week.

AND THERE was the girl who lost her interest when her boyfriend lost his capital.

LUBBOCK GOT itself some national publicity in the May issue of Ford Times, the handy little booklet published by the auto company of the same name.

Seems that Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bradshaw of West Des Moines, Iowa, were among a group of travel editors and photographers who visited this area, courtesy of the Texas Tourist Development Agency.

Under the heading of "Roadside Clown," the couple did a layout, with color photos, of the prairie dog town in Mackenzie State Park, as well as similar prairie dog towns and habitats elsewhere.

The article told millions something about the curious little creatures, which have been the bane of cattlemen and ranchers, and at the same time lived up to their "clown" image by entertaining thousands.

In any event, it was an interesting piece. Lubbock and Prairie Dog Pete got a "good play" in a national publication. And hopefully, we'll get some tourists coming our way as a result.

CARTOON QUIP, Father to Mom: "Have you noticed on allowance day, the generation gap narrows sharply."

AND THE Office Grouch says if the family budget looks sick at the end of the month, it's probably something you ate.

WHILE ON the subject of Texas, it is apropos that we also talk about taxes, something which has just been in the news, and may be again.

Much ado was made during the gubernatorial campaign about how Texans are much better off than their counterparts in other parts of the nation.

It was not just campaign talk.

A recent study reveals Texas citizens come off in great shape, compared to others in the 48 plus two, especially when adding up state and local taxes per $1,000 and in state general sales taxes per $1,000.

For the fiscal year 1976, Texas ranked 42nd among all states in State and Local Taxes per $1,000 of Personal Income. This averaged out to $106.23 per $1,000.

IN THE MATTER of state general sales taxes per $1,000 personal income, for the 1977 fiscal year, Texas came off in 29th position.

The average payment per $1,000 was $21.90.

Just for the record, Alaska with $210.34 and New York with $174.33 top all states for state and local taxes per $1,000 for 1976 fiscal year.

And Hawaii, with $50.66 and Washington with $47.73 per $1,000 head the list on state general sales taxes. For further comparison, on state and local taxes the U.S. average is $125.81, and for sales taxes the U.S. median is $22.57—Texas being below average in both instances.

It is significant that Texas also enjoys an excellent economic climate as one of the brighter states of the growing Sunbelt as a result of low unemployment, excellent job opportunities and a Right-to-Work law, and to this point a reputation as one of the top "can-do" States of any of the nation's Fifty.

It's something to think about between now and November. It didn't happen by accident or pie-in-the-sky promises. If you vote to spend it, somebody—meaning each of us—must pay for it. It's just that simple!

Pre-School Tours Planned For Busing Students

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Now that its integration plan has been approved, the Lubbock Independent School District is earnestly preparing for implementation — beginning with a series of "mini-tours" for students who will be changing schools next year.

The next two weeks, the last of the 1977-78 academic term, will provide opportunities for children to visit the "sister schools" to which they will be assigned under the plan, Supt. Ed Irons said.

Parents also will be invited to participate in those tours, he said.

Irons met Tuesday with principals of elementary schools involved in the cross-assignment plan. The principals will schedule the tours over the coming two weeks, with parents notified in advance through letters sent home with their children, school officials said.

The school system will arrange for bus transportation.

The tours will be coordinated through the district's community relations task force — one of seven administrative committees initiated by Irons to help implement the desegregation plan.

Irons said he needs to talk over his ideas with the district's board of trustees. But as things stand now, he hopes to designate administrative teams to head up efforts in the following areas:

—Transportation. The district must formulate routes, time schedules and other details for transporting about 2,000 elementary students, a few hundred junior high youngsters affected by the closing of Struggs, a projected 350 high school students transferring to the new Dunbar-Struggs Magnet Complex, children opting to attend the Iles Elementary magnet program, and pupils exercising majority-to-minority transfers.

The proposal for the senior high schools is expected to include a "shuttle bus" service, perhaps through Citibus, between Dunbar and the campuses of Monterey and Coronado.

The Texas Education Agency has agreed to provide consultants to help design the "safest bus routes possible," Irons said.

—Instruction. The integration plan includes a districtwide re-emphasis on reading skills. Also, Irons said his staff will "look at the instructional program of each school" to ensure that it and its sister school "fit together."

For example, Murfee Elementary (an open-space school) will be sending its fifth- and sixth-graders to Wheatley (a self-contained school). Irons said programs may be modified so that students making the move are accustomed to the new classroom arrangement.

—Staff development. Irons is planning training programs to help teachers and administrators sharpen skills for working with children of different races. The district had considered seeking a grant for this purpose, but now intends to conduct "in-house" programs.

Irons said the staff development activities probably will begin in August and continue throughout the year.

—Community relations. This committee will assist in informing the commuty about the integration plan and get parents and students involved. Specific proposals include exchange programs, school visitations, parent volunteer programs, meetings with parents and community leaders and possibly creation of a "rumor center" to clear up questions about the plan.

Irons said the school system may work closely with such groups as Parent-Teacher Associations and Lubbock Organizing for Our Kids (LOOK).

—Magnet schools. Integration of Iles Elementary and Dunbar High depends on the voluntary transfer of whites to those campuses. If that effort fails, U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward says he may order the implementation of mandatory transfers before school opens in August.

Irons said the district is committed to the success of the magnet schools. He said a committee will be designated to oversee the magnet programs.

—Budget. Pending Woodward's ruling, the school district's budgetmakers had been at a standstill. Now they can proceed with preparing cost figures for the integration plan and plugging them into next year's budget, Irons said.

Cost aspects will include transportation (purchase of buses, salaries of drivers, cost of fuel and maintenance, etc.) and academics. In the latter category, the district plans to enrich the curriculum, especially at the magnet schools, and lower the pupil-teacher ratio in integrated classrooms.

—Food service. While not specifically part of the integration plan, a school breakfast program will be instituted in Lubbock next year as required by state law.

Final Ordinance Reading Set

The Lubbock City Council may pass on final reading today an ordinance prohibiting the possession or drinking of alcoholic beverages on streets abutting municipal parks.

The ordinance will be considered during the council's regular session beginning at 9:30 a.m. in council chambers.

Council members approved the ordinance on first reading last month. The law is aimed at reducing traffic congestion around city parks, especially around Tech Terrace at Flint Avenue and 24th Street.

Parks Board Chairman Henry Huneke will go before the council at 10:30 a.m. to recommend new reservation rates for community centers.

On the board's recommendation, he will suggest there be no charge to the bookers when they have no admission fee and the general public is invited.

When no admission charge is made but the general public is not invited, the fees would be $25 for the social hall and $10 for meeting rooms. With an admission charge, the fees would be $50 for the social hall and $25 for meeting rooms.

Sunday reservations would be $50, and an additional $10 would be charged if a meal is to be served or if a group of more than 50 people uses the facilities.

NINE LIVES AND MEDICINE — Veterinary researcher David Gross of Texas A&M displays one of the cats he is using in studies of the effects of ammonia on the lungs. The research is a direct result of the Houston ammonia truck disaster, two years ago, and scientists hope to discover how and why respiratory systems react to toxic situations. Cats were selected for the experiments because of similarities in their respiratory system to that of human beings. (AP Laserphoto)

Cats Helpful In Lung Studies

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A Houston cat on its way to a routine veterinary checkup in May 1976 inadvertently became the focus of medical research by Texas A&M University and the Baylor College of Medicine.

Rev. Orange Feather and his owner were caught in the cloud of ammonia gas that spread over the Interstate 610-U.S.59 interchange May 11, 1976, when a tank truck overturned. Seven persons died and dozens suffered serious injuries, including permanent lung damage.

Dr. David Gross, associate professor of veterinary physiology and pharmacology at Texas A&M, said the cat's owner escaped the worst effects but the cat suffered lung problems from inhaling ammonia fumes.

"A friend of a friend knew the vet who treated the cat after the accident. It was suffering from the same problems the human patients were...and ultimately it was suggested the animal be brought to us for studying," Gross said.

After analyzing Rev. Orange Feather's symptoms, Gross and his colleagues saw more and more comparisons between the cat's scarred lungs and the pulmonary problems of human patients.

Gross, who is also an associate professor at the Institute of Comparative Medicine — a joint program of Texas A&M and Baylor College of Medicine in Houston — said his colleagues agreed that the orange-colored cat might serve as a valuable model for the study of lung injuries after inhalation of ammonia and other noxious gases.

He said lung study is difficult with many of the standard research animals.

"So had it not been for this cat, we might not have considered the investigation," he added. Rev. Orange Feather has since died.

Gross and graduate student Kenneth Dodd set up a pilot study involving 24 cats. The animals were exposed to varying levels of ammonia, then tested for breathing functions. Autopsies were done at different times to assess lung damage.

He said preliminary data appears to demonstrate the changes in feline lungs after exposure to ammonia parallel what happens to human lungs in similar circumstances.

"We saw some very bad lung disease, a greatly increased susceptibility to pneumonia and eventually chronic lung problems," he said.

Gross said he hopes the project can be expanded to study the effects of exposure to all types of noxious gases and said he has asked the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to consider funding such a project.

"As I understand it, physicians have many theories about treating high-dose exposure to ammonia and other gases but, of course, they're all reluctant to experiment with anything new on a human patient...Our project would allow us to try whatever drugs and other methods have been thought of," he said.

Carrillo Loses Theft Conviction Appeal

AUSTIN (AP) — O.P. Carrillo, removed from his district judge's bench by the Texas Senate in the state's first impeachment trial since 1931, lost his appeal of a theft conviction Wednesday.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld Carrillo's conviction on a charge he stole funds of the Duval County Conservation and Reclamation district through a money "laundering" transaction in 1971.

Carrillo, removed as district judge of Duval, Jim Hogg and Starr Counties, was assessed a four-year prison sentence at the close of his trial in Edinburg.

Carrillo also has been disbarred and began serving a federal prison sentence on a tax evasion conviction on Jan. 20.

Witnesses and other evidence at Carrillo's trial indicated these details of his alleged theft of money from the water district, of which his father was board president:

... Carrillo bought a station wagon in November 1971 for $5,631, obtaining a 60-day bank loan and paying for the vehicle with a personal check.

Two months later, he told business associate Rodolfo Couling that George Parr — the late "Duke of Duval" — was going to buy Carrillo a station wagon and the supply of the hardware store's blank invoice forms.

Couling said he deposited the check Jan. 13, 1972, then gave Carrillo a blank check on the firm's account. The check was completed the same day, with the blanks filed in to make it payable to Car-

... check for it would come from the water district.

On Jan. 11, 1972, the water district issued a check for $5,625 to Benavides Implement and Hardware, in which Carrillo was a "silent partner."

Couling, who operated Benavides Implement and Hardware, said the store had neither performed services nor sold goods to the county. He said Carrillo had

... rillo's bank for $5,725, the amount of the station wagon loan plus interest.

The evidence here showed a common design and understanding between appellant (Carrillo) and Couling, and perhaps others, to steal money from the water district," the court said.

It said that under the circumstances disclosed in the trial, "the evidence is sufficient to show that appellant was a principal to the theft."

Texan Asks To Film TV Series On CIA

DALLAS (UPI) — Texas multimillionaire Gordon McLendon feels the American television viewing public is ready for the CIA on prime time.

McLendon, who made most of his money in broadcasting, movie houses and real estate, wants to put together a television series on the counterintelligence agency, commonly known as "The Company." He feels he must have the CIA's approval for such a venture, and he said he just might get it.

"We are still working with the CIA on it," McLendon said. "They are trying to determine the lengths to which they can give us cooperation. They are very desirous of doing it. Stansfield Turner has made every effort to open the CIA to the public, as far as it can be done within the bounds of security."

"Obviously, we don't expect them to tell us what kind of international plot was uncovered the previous day. But, funny things happen in the CIA. Human interest. We'd like to have that kind of material from them."

"I belong to the Association of Former Intelligence Officers. It has about 2,200 members, and they can provide us with all of the background material, all of the plots, that we could conceivably need."

McLendon — who was an intelligence officer in the Navy — said he first had the idea for such a series years ago, and that it was not a spinoff from "The FBI" series which was begun on TV in the late 1960s.

"The FBI series was very successful, and I think the time is right for a darned interesting series on the CIA," McLendon said.

J. Edgar Hoover, late director of the FBI, reportedly never missed an episode of "The FBI," and even kept one agent on duty fulltime to work with the production as script consultant. McLendon said he would not want to make his series on the CIA like the Quinn Martin Production on the FBI, a show which never showed the blemishes.

A spokesman for the CIA said five other producers have sought permission to do a CIA-background series.

Airline's Liquor Lawsuit Rejected

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Third Court of Civil Appeals today rejected a suit by Texas International Airlines Inc. challenging the legality of special airline beverage fees the state collects for liquor sales on plane flights.

Texas International sought to recover $64,310 paid under protest but failed to name the proper state officials in its suit.

The appeals court upheld a lower court judgment against the carrier on the technicality.

The airline suit named the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission but failed to name the agency's executive director, the state attorney general or state treasurer.

SAN AUGUSTINE — School board members based their resolution of Superintendent's resignation have been called "son."

The board took action Tuesday night, and took Superintendent's office to that "Dr. Williams" as "Dr. Williams."

Allegations against two broad categories of teachers to comply with and established board repeated and continued.

Wednesday, board Tindell said that "sleed" the board's official status. She cited the budget superintendent for knowingly failed teachers' salaries statement.

"I'm not saying theft of funds, but the way we had repeat performance Tindell said.

Schoolmen Clash Over Charges

SAN AUGUSTINE (AP) — Charges on which San Augustine school board members based their request for the resignation of Superintendent Glyn Williamson have been called "hogwash" by Williamson.

The board took the action Monday night, and receptionists at the superintendent's office told callers Wednesday that "Dr. Williamson is no longer with us."

Allegations against Williamson fell into two broad categories — "repeated failure to comply with official directives and established board by-laws," and "repeated and continued neglect of duties."

Wednesday, board member Willie Earl Tindell said that Williamson had "misled" the board on the district's financial status. She cited a $110,000 discrepancy in the budget, saying Williamson, superintendent for the last three years, knowingly failed to include accrued teachers' salaries in a recent financial statement.

"I'm not saying there was any kind of theft of funds, but if we kept spending the way we had been, we'd have a repeat performance of last summer," Mrs. Tindell said.

Last year, the schools ran short of funds for salaries and are now involved in a federal suit against the Texas Education Agency. The suit alleges that the state is discriminatory in granting aid based on local property taxes in rural areas by using taxes on land, but no other assets for the school's operations.

The board recently fired business manager Shirley Strother in an effort to ease finances by elimination of her salary.

"Really, Mrs. Strother was paid an outrageous salary," Mrs. Tindell said.

Other community figures said the firing had political overtones.

Williamson appointed math teacher Tom White to keep the schools' books, but Mrs. Tindell said White's salary was not increased.

Williamson said the request for his resignation "came as a complete surprise," but Mrs. Tindell said it shouldn't have.

"It's been building up over a period of time," she said.

Williamson said he planned to appeal the request for his resignation by requesting a public hearing, and that he planned to report the action to the TEA.

$2,783 Repast To Belie Texas Image

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — In a state that proudly proclaims chili, beer and barbeque as the staples of any exquisite meal, perhaps Lawrence V. Skloss' $2,783 repast Tuesday night might be viewed as a trifle effete.

But so be it. Skloss, an advertising director for a local newspaper, said he wanted to dispell the state's "image of a bunch of cowboys and Indians" and prove to the world that class is indeed alive and well and living — or at least visiting — in Texas.

And what better way to wipe out the western myth, Skloss said, than partaking of a meal devoid of charred meat.

So with the aid of the proprietors of La Tour Restaurant, he arranged "The Most Exquisite Meal Ever Served in America." Skloss chose himself and his wife to serve as judges.

After a champagne toast, the Sklosses chose from eight hor d'oeuvres, including Beluga caviar at $4 an ounce, coquille St. Jacques au champagne and Pate de Fois Gras Strasbourg.

Chef Robert Gregson's meal included escalopes de veau escorfier, bouquetiere des legumes, choufleur Polonaise, artichauts Bernaise, Carottes a la Vichy, champignons aux fines herbes, pommes a la Parisienne and asperges a la choron.

Among the eight wines for the eight course dinner, the Sklosses sipped 1919 Chateau Filhot, a $450 sauterne.

The evening cost a meager $2,783, not counting tax and tip. The dinner was perhaps not the most expensive ever consumed, but Skloss was certain it ranked among the top 10.

According to a New York Magazine article in 1977, the record may be held by restaurant owner Peter Cipolla and Jean Schaedle who spent $5,004 at New York's Palace restaurant. But that included a tip of $878.

But Skloss said the inspiration for the exquisite meal was the highly publicized $4,000 meal at Chez Denis in Paris served to Craig Claiborne of the New York Times.

Skloss declined to say who picked up his tab.

Anarchist Siege Ends In Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Members of a slum clearance movement took to the sidewalk across the street from their fortified house Wednesday as policemen watched and neighborhood residents walked 33rd Street for the first time in 55 days.

Rock music from nearby Drexel University dormitories and fraternity houses replaced the crackle of police radios that had been heard the day before.

On Tuesday night, six mounted policemen whirled their horses away from the last barricade and about 100 supporters of the movement streamed noisily to the small band of anarchists who had been under siege for 344 days until agreeing to vacate the premises by August.

"I'm very happy to see Powelton Avenue so pretty today," said Norma Altus, who with her husband Phillip operates a dry cleaning business on the corner of the block, at the edge of the barricaded area.

"And now that the city and (the movement) have resolved their problems peacefully, I want to know what's going to be done for the mom and pop store whose rights were never considered by the city or any sympathizers when the blockade was put up and we were innocently involved," Mrs. Altus said.

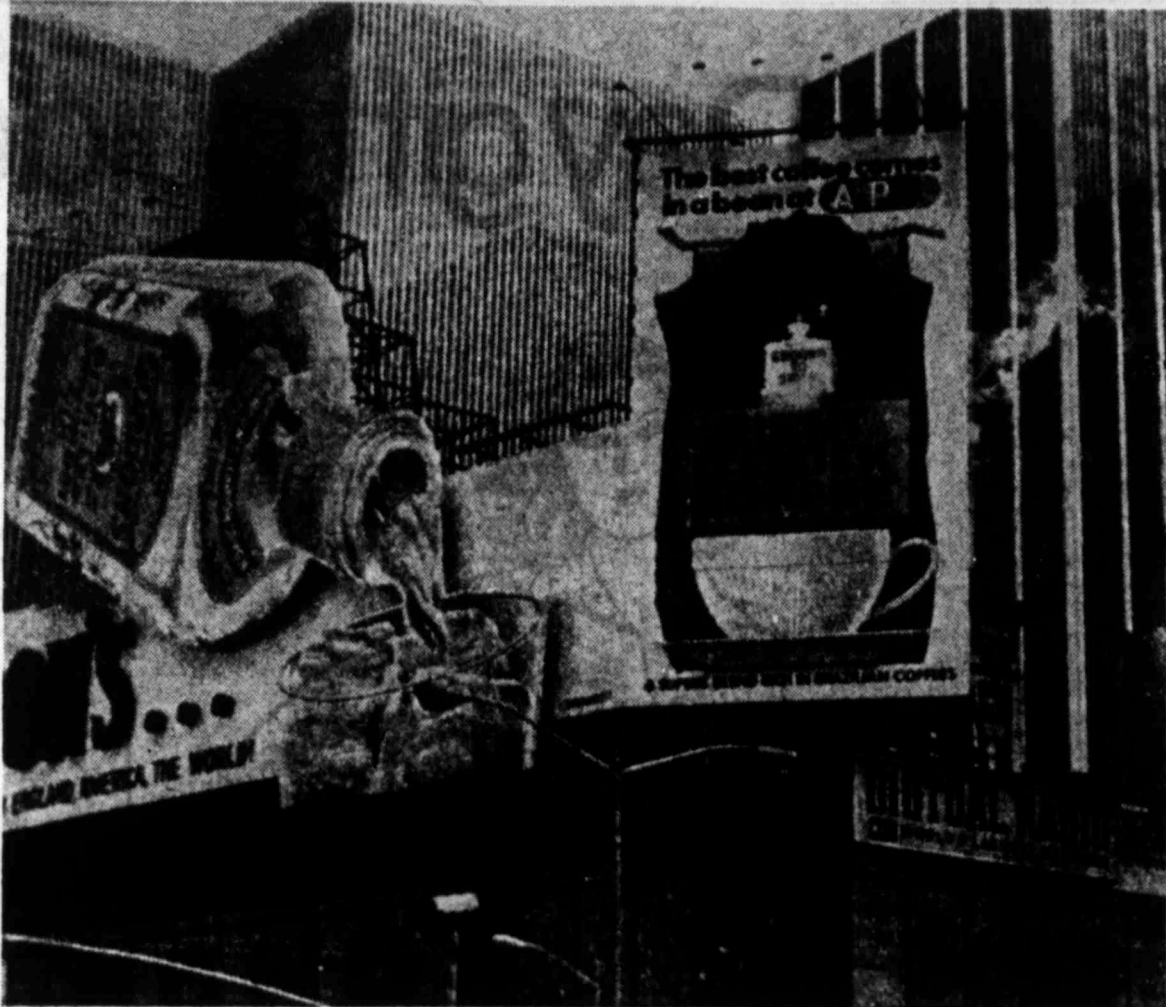

"Is the city going to compensate us for our losses for trying to operate a peaceful business in a very violent area?" Mrs. Altus said.

The laundromat between the cleaners and the compound remained closed Wednesday and police sandbags remained in the windows of the apartment house across the street. But the bullet-proof trailers, the armored car, the snow fences, the fire hoses and wooden blockades were gone as city sanitation crews cleaned the surrounding area.

On the sidewalk was Sue Africa, one of five movement members released from prison on reduced bail Tuesday before her 18 compatriots surrendered seven guns, most inoperable, as part of the agreement ending the blockade.

Beside her, Sharon Africa nursed infant twin boys. Many members have taken Africa as a last name.

One of every four Arkansans has a fishing license, says National Geographic.

Security Beefed Up For Gov. Carroll

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Since late 1976, security around Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll has been beefed up.

Shatterproof glass has been installed in his office. Instead of one or two state troopers around the executive mansion, there are heavier patrols — as many as 20 troopers in shifts at one time.

Closed circuit television covers all entrances to the building — even the adjacent tennis court. Armed guards patrol the 13 state aircraft at the Capitol City Airport. And teams of state police patrol the state Capitol grounds at night with dogs.

Usually, the police uncover nothing worse than lovers in bushes. But the extra protection is costing more than $300,000 a year by one estimate, and that is prompting speculation — some of it in the form of rumors of assassination attempts.

It also has prompted skepticism and criticism from Carroll's opponents. For example, there is Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall, a fellow Democrat but no ally of Carroll. She shares in the protection, but says she cannot fathom why anyone would want to harm her.

This week, administration sources claimed the governor was the target of two apparently unrelated assassination plots in 1978.

No overt attempt to kill Carroll has occurred and no arrests have been made.

But the sources, including state Justice Secretary John Smith and top Carroll aide Jack Hall, claim the potential assassins are known and under surveillance. They say the scare apparently has eased.

All the sources are remaining silent about possible motives and they are reticent about revealing protective measures — on the ground that there is no security in disclosing security details.

Carroll has defended his security measures, but referred questions about them to Smith. He has said he did not want to know that much about alleged threats on his life.

Probe Of Crash Begins In Florida

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — National Transportation Safety Board officials Wednesday inspected the cockpit equipment from the 727 jetliner that crashed in Escambia Bay, killing three of the 58 persons aboard.

Federal investigators also were scheduled to interview, for the first time, members of the cockpit crew of the ill-fated National Airlines flight 193, which hit the fog-shrouded water three miles short of the Pensacola Airport runway Monday night.

The cockpit voice recorder and flight data recorder, recovered by divers late Tuesday, were flown to Washington to be analyzed by Safety Board technicians.

Prior to interviewing the cockpit crew, Safety Board Chairman James King met with Airline Pilots Association representatives to develop guidelines for questioning the pilot, Capt. George Kunz, 55, of Miami; the copilot, Leonard Sanderson, 31, of Hollywood, Fla.; and the flight engineer, James Stockwell, 47, of Princeton, Fla.

King said National officials in Miami will decide when to begin removing the jet, which is two-thirds submerged in 12 feet of water, but he hoped recovery operations would begin within two or three days.

The cockpit equipment was drenched in the watery crash, therefore investigators soaked it, including the two inflight recorders, and sent all the equipment to Washington in a water-filled bag. King said it will be dried out slowly and carefully to minimize damage.

He said he does not expect the recordings of cockpit conversation and other flight data information to be ready for analysis for two or three weeks.

The Federal Aviation Administration Thursday will release a transcript of the conversations between the plane's crew and the airport control tower prior to the crash. However, the FAA reported soon after the crash that the conversation between the plane's crew and the control tower was "routine," and there was no hint from the crew of any trouble.

King had reported Tuesday night that the pilot violated the FAA clearance requirement of a 480-foot ceiling by making a landing approach. He said Wednesday, however, that the statement was not correct, and there was more than the minimum 480 feet of clearance.

Funeral services for two of the three victims, Frances Lane, 57, of Pensacola and Mrs. S.J. Fantauzzi, 29, of Tarzana, Calif., were scheduled Thursday. Funeral arrangements were not complete for the other victim, Paul Wilkes Sr., 62, of Virginia Beach, Va.

Dreifus said the crew of an Eastern Airlines jet that decided against trying to land at Pensacola minutes before the National plane crashed will be interviewed later this week.

Man Suspected Of Violating Firearms Laws

A 40-year-old Tahoka man was jailed Wednesday on suspicion of violating federal firearms laws.

Lubbock police department detectives observed the man entering an apartment they had under surveillance, and stopped the suspect's pickup truck at the corner of Erskine Street and North University Avenue.

When the investigating detective asked the suspect for some identification, the man reached in his pocket and then under the seat. At that point, the detective told the man to get out of the truck and a search of the vehicle revealed an automatic pistol under the seat.

Police reports indicate there were six rounds in the clip of the Italian-made gun, one round in the chamber, and the safety lock was off.

Officers Tuesday afternoon also arrested a 28-year-old Lubbock man on suspicion of compelling prostitution and aggravated promotion of prostitution and a 21-year-old Lubbock woman on suspicion of compelling prostitution in connection with an assault of another Lubbock woman.

A 21-year-old waitress told detectives she had worked for the man about a week, and when she went to a club in the 400 block of E. Amherst Avenue Tuesday afternoon, the man demanded money from her.

When she told him she had no money, the man reportedly beat her back and legs with an extension cord, producing bruises. She told police he then hit her over the head with a beer bottle, cutting her scalp.

The complainant told police the other woman then held her while the man held a match to the bottom of her left foot. The couple released her after she promised to bring them money.

Thieves Tuesday night made off with about 1,500 pounds of aluminum beer cans, valued at $225, from the Great Plains Distributors company, according to sheriff's office reports.

The missing cans had been loaded on a trailer parked in the company lot.

Thieves also hit two cars owned by Scoggins-Dickey Buick that were parked on a lot at 15th Street and Paris Avenue, taking two wheels and two tires from each of the vehicles. The loss was valued at $772.

Benjamin Licon told police someone took two sets of rings from the glove box of his car while it was parked at 2424 Marshall St. Licon estimated his loss at $1,000.

City burglars also were busy Tuesday night, breaking into two homes and a business.

Joe B. Sifuentes, of 1522 26th St., told police someone entered through the unlocked front door of his house and made off with an AM-FM radio, stereo system and two speakers valued at about $330.

Burglars forced their way into the Sylvia Gutierrez home at 2616-B Ave. K and took an estimated $300 worth of goods before leaving through the kitchen door.

Listed as missing from Miss Gutierrez's home were a portable black and white television valued at $150, a .47-.22-caliber pistol and assorted jewelry valued at $100.

Burglars also took $315 worth of linen from the Ramada Inn laundry room at 5845 Ave. Q, and caused about $35 worth of damage in gaining entry to the facility.

Madeline Frances Daniel, a motel employee, told police 100 white double bed sheets and 50 wash cloths were taken from the room, which burglars entered by prying off the padlock securing the door.

A stalwart service station attendant foiled a robbery late Tuesday after he punched one of the men in the nose.

Tony Roberts, 17-year-old attendant at the 3115 56th St. Exxon Station, said a red Mustang with four men drove up to a gas pump shortly before 10 p.m. Two of the men reportedly got out of the vehicle, and after Roberts walked past one of them he heard him trying to get into the cash register.

When Roberts turned around and asked what the stranger wanted, he was told pointedly, "I want the money."

By then, the attendant had stepped back inside the office, just in time to receive a blow to the chin. He said he staggered back a step and retaliated by hitting his attacker in the nose.

Sealy was a native of San Diego, Calif., and had moved to Snyder in 1973. He worked for Brooks Oil Well Service here.

Survivors include his daughter, Leah of Big Spring; his parents Bob and Margie Sealy, both of Snyder; a sister, Lorraine of Snyder; and a brother, John of Denver, Colo.

Board Agreement

Irks Sundowners

SUNDOWN (Special) — Lawmen kept a quiet watch on activities in this tiny oil town late Tuesday and Wednesday after tempers flared when school board officials agreed to pay more than $90,000 for controversial school superintendent Dean King's contract.

King, a target of criticism from some Sundown residents because of his stance on several personnel issues, resigned in an emergency board session late Tuesday after trustees agreed to pay him $90,000 plus retirement benefits for the next three years.

That action came after months of bickering between city residents that some Sundowners claimed "has split whole families so bad some won't talk to each other."

After Tuesday's session, King spoke casually with news reporters and waived to say goodbye to many Sundowners who stayed after the meeting. The money to pay for his contract will be drawn from school funds over the three-year period, board president Jim Hogue said.

Hogue said the current high school principal would step up to the superintendent's position until a replacement can be secured.

Woman On Probation Charged In Slaying

A woman who received a probated sentence after pleading guilty to murder approximately five months ago was charged Wednesday with another killing.

The murder charge was filed against Willie Lee Gaines, 49, of 2129 E. 30th St. It was one of two murder charges filed Wednesday as a result of weekend homicides.

Also charged with murder was Algie Stokes, 67, of 1515 E. 28th St., Apt. 1. Mrs. Gaines is accused of the stabbing

Knife-Wielding Robber Sought

Lubbock police Wednesday were still searching for the knife-wielding robber who reportedly made a $25,500 haul after he tied up a Lubbock builder who was showing him a new home late Tuesday.

Dick Mosley, 53, said he went to the 5706 71st St. house about 6:45 p.m. to meet a man who wanted to see the property. When Mosley first arrived, the prospective buyer was not there, so he talked with an across-the-street neighbor for a few minutes.

When the man, driving a 1970 white Pontiac, showed up a short time later, he and Mosley went inside.

After they walked through the door, reports indicated, the stranger produced a knife and ordered, "Hit the floor you..."

The robber reportedly took $1,500 from Mosley's wallet, as well as two rings, valued at $3,000 each, and an $8,000 watch.

After tying up the builder, he went outside, told the neighbor he was going to get his wife to look at the house and sped from the scene.

Lawmen To Honor

Ex-Crosby Sheriff

CLAIREMONT (Special) — Fletcher Stark, Crosby County sheriff for the last 18 years, will be honored today at the 30th annual Caprock Peace Officers Association Rattlesnake Rodeo and Barbecue here.

Stark will be recognized "for his service not only to his community but also to the association," said Cecil Fox, president of the association.

Stark resigned from his post in April.

More than 400 lawmen from throughout West Texas are expected to attend the event, which will be held at the Old Clairemont School, 16 miles west of Jayton.

News Briefs

Five fire units from four stations responded to a 1:20 p.m. blaze at 2003 26th St. Wednesday, though damage was not believed to have been serious. Owner Randall Klose said he believed children playing with matches may have set a mattress on fire, causing the structure fire. The blaze was under control in six minutes, a fire department spokesman said, and damage to the structure was estimated at $1 to $100. Damage to contents was set at $100 to $1,000.

Following the collision of two switch engines of the Burlington Northern line, firemen were dispatched to 26th Street and Avenue H about 10:43 a.m. Wednesday. The collision resulted in the rupture of a fuel line and the leakage of an estimated 75 gallons of diesel fuel. No one was injured and sand was brought from the airport to cover the spilled fuel, a fire department spokesman said.

Rotary Foundation Fellowships for study abroad for 1978-79 have been awarded to Holly Hughes, graduate student from Texas Tech University, representing the West Texas district; and to Elaine Hrnirc, senior music major at Texas Tech, representing the South Texas district.

Janet Dyer, 24, of 3708 32nd St., was in critical condition Wednesday at St. Mary's Hospital from minor burns and smoke inhalation. Mrs. Dyer's four-year-old son Heath remained in serious condition and her other son, Keith, also four years old, was listed in satisfactory condition. The three were rescued by firemen, Monday morning, from a bedroom of their burning home. Fire Marshal A.C. Black said the blaze apparently started when a cigarette ignited a couch in the living room.

Both objected to a provision in the "compromise" that would give the federal government limited power to restrict the right of gas pipelines in producing states to renegotiate contracts with purchasers if it would mean much higher prices for consumers.

They said this would mean new federal intrusion in a market which has historically been free from any types of federal control.

Rep. Joe D. Waggoner, D-La., whose vote could put the compromise over the top and thus end the nearly six-month stalemate on this part of President Carter's energy bill, said he may vote for the measure but needs more time to think about it.

Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the full House-Senate conference committee on energy, expressed optimism that the latest compromise measure now can be approved by House and Senate negotiators.

A meeting was scheduled for Thursday for a vote on the proposal, which would lift federal price controls from newly discovered gas after Jan. 1, 1985.

To break the long stalemate, 13 House and nine Senate negotiators must support this plan, framed after months of closed-door negotiations.

Although 10 Senate negotiators have indicated support, House members can only count 11 votes without those of Wilson and Waggoner.

Israel Ends Mourning, Hails Independence Day

JERUSALEM (AP) — Looking back on 30 years of achievement and ahead to political uncertainty, Israel ended a day of mourning for its war dead and began a 24-hour nationwide birthday party at sundown Wednesday.

As Israelis started a round of picnics, street carnivals and flag-waving merriment in honor of Independence Day, Prime Minister Menachem Begin boasted that Israel has "massive strength" with which to confront its foes.

"Since the days of the Maccabees (2,100 years ago) the people of Israel has not been as rooted in our land as it is today," Begin said in a broadcast address to the nation, which declared its independence May 14, 1948, but celebrates the anniversary by the Jewish lunar calendar.

Begin also warned that Israel faces a "great struggle" in Middle East peace negotiations with Egypt.

President Carter, in a filmed message broadcast on Israeli television, congratulated the Jewish state and repeated a pledge he made to Begin in Washington last week, that the United States would stand by Israel "not just for another 30 years but forever."

President Ephraim Katzir said in another address that "first signs are appearing of chances for improving our relations with some of our neighbors ... Although these negotiations are passing a crisis, we are firm in our belief that peace ... will be achieved."

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman said at a memorial ceremony for war dead that "we are living through historic times, fraught with the prospect of change in Israel's relations with the Arabs, even to the extent of a possible peace."

After the festivities, the Israeli Cabinet is expected to get down to crucial discussions of new American ideas for bridging the gap between Egyptian insistence on total Israeli withdrawal from captured Arab land, and Israel's demand to keep military control of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said in an interview he anticipates "a political breakthrough" this year. He would not elaborate.

With the memory of the March 11 highway massacre that killed 35 Israelis fresh in mind, 30,000 police and soldiers set up a massive security net to screen merry-makers from possible guerrilla attacks.

Another 30,000 young soldiers were to visit the major battlefields of Israel's 1948 war for independence.

Before the celebrations began, memorial ceremonies in every town and village reminded Israelis of the bitter price of survival — 15,000 soldiers killed in four major wars and in thousands of border skirmishes and acts of terrorism.

Official ceremonies, neighborhood street dances, an international Bible quiz and an open-air concert beside the walls of Jerusalem's Old City are among 300 events planned to mark the day.

The highlight of festivities is Thursday's military parade at the Hebrew University stadium, a flyover of U.S.-made F-15 and Israeli Kfir jet aircraft and a display of vintage weapons, such as Piper planes and homemade artillery pieces that helped Israel win the 1948 war.

The parade's organizers hope finally to put to rest the internal feuds of pre-independence days by inviting surviving members of rival underground movements to march together past the reviewing stand.

The bitterness among these movements, which later developed into Israel's main political blocs, simmered for 30 years until a younger generation elected Begin to office one year ago.

In an interview with the Yediot Aharonot newspaper, Dayan said he hoped peace talks with Egypt could be broadened in the coming year to include Jordan and to resolve the Palestinian question.

"I think we can look back with satisfaction over the past 30 years," Dayan said, recalling days when Jewish immigration was restricted, when Jews were forbidden to pray at Jerusalem's Wailing Wall and when independence was still a dream.

The problems go beyond politics, with Israel also challenged by an average 40 percent inflation rate, a chronic trade deficit of $3 billion, soaring defense costs that eat one-third of the national budget and a wide social gap between rich and poor.

Israel's problems today are small compared with the hardships of its first 30 years, opposition leader Shimon Peres wrote in the same paper.

In three decades Israel grew five-fold to more than three million Jews, absorbed immigrants speaking 112 languages from 81 countries, reclaimed arid land and turned a backwater Middle East country into a modern industrial nation, Peres wrote.

"All this in a time of war," wrote the former defense minister.

"The accomplishments are many and dramatic," Peres wrote.

Moro Letters More Desperate At End

ROME (AP) — Aldo Moro sent a stream of letters to the outside world during his long ordeal, the tone and handwriting growing steadily more desperate as the hour of his murder approached.

The first letter, received two weeks after his abduction, was written in Moro's usual style of cautious understatement and spoke of the "difficult circumstances" he was in, while the last, received last Friday, bid goodbye to his family, saying, "Soon they will kill me."

In the end, all the pleas attributed to Italy's leading politician failed to persuade the government to negotiate with his kidnapers. Moro's bullet-riddled body was found Tuesday, 54 days after he was kidnapped.

There has been no official count of the letters attributed to Moro — estimates range from 20 to as many as 80, written to his family, Italian President Giovanni Leone, leaders of the Christian Democrat and Socialist parties and other officials. Only about 10, however, were published in newspapers, the others kept secret by the recipients.

Experts said the handwriting, the constructions and the at times twisted phraseology resembled Moro's, and his party's official newspaper Il Popolo published them as the letters of its president.

But the party said they were written under duress and Premier Giulio Andreotti described them as "not morally attributable" to his colleague.

The letters contained the first suggestions of what Moro's urban guerrilla kidnapers, the Red Brigades, later demanded in one of their "communiques" — the release of terrorist prisoners to save his life. In one of the first letters, Moro urged the government to act wisely

"to prevent further trouble."

On April 4, he wrote, "I am a political prisoner placed in an untenable situation by your hasty decision to close any discussion relating to persons imprisoned in a similar way. Time is flying and unfortunately there is too little."

Six days later another letter pressed the issue of a prisoner exchange, asking "Is there maybe an American and German connection in holding fast against me?"

After the Red Brigades passed the death "sentence" on their prisoner, finding him "guilty of crimes against the people," a newspaper received another Moro letter it described as written "in a desperate hand."

"We are nearly at zero hour: it is a matter of seconds rather than minutes. We are at massacre time," it said.

The letter named top leaders of the ruling Christian Democrat party one by one and concluded bleakly:

"With mine goes the cry of my mortally wounded family. For this reason, for an evident incompatibility, I request that no state authority or party official should participate at my funeral."

His farewell letter to his family, received last Friday, the day the Red Brigades announced they were carrying out the death sentence, was addressed to his wife Eleonora with her nickname.

"Dear Norina. I was told that soon they will kill me. I kiss you for the last time, kiss the children," it said.

Just how the letters were delivered, whether by a Red Brigade "postman" or through some secret channel established with the family, was never disclosed. The last letter reportedly was picked up in a public telephone booth by Moro's daughter Anna.

Medical experts suggested Moro may have been drugged or subjected to psychological torture during his captivity, making him malleable in the hands of the terrorists. The Christian Democrat party said after receiving one letter from Moro that "the so-called testimony written in the inhuman conditions which we have often underlined ... is more painful evidence of this situation."

Summing up the letters after Moro's body was found Tuesday, the Rev. Gianni Baget-Bozzo, a leading political historian, said, "It is perfectly acceptable to disagree with the idea of negotiations."

Belgium's Premier Threatened

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Telephone callers predicted an Aldo Moro-like drama in Belgium, terrorists killed a policeman in Spain, lethal religious riots continued in Iran and Nicaragua's ambassador to Colombia was kidnapped and freed, as the shadow of violence touched three continents Wednesday.

In Bogota, the Colombian capital, police said Ambassador William Barquero was abducted by a gang that dragged him from his house shortly after sunrise. Two of the four assailants were said to have been dressed as Roman Catholic priests. Police said Barquero was released unharmed two hours later.

In Charleroi, Belgium, an anonymous caller speaking English with an accent told the switchboard at the joint plant of two French-language Socialist newspapers: "This is the Red Army ... You know what has happened to Moro. Next is (Henri) Simonet."

A similar call was received by a Flemish-language paper in Antwerp.

Simonet, a Socialist, is the Belgian foreign minister. The call came one day after Moro, the five-time former Italian premier, was found shot to death in an automobile parked in the center of Rome, not far from where he was kidnapped March 16 by the terrorist Red Brigades.

The Red Army Faction, a West German leftist guerrilla gang in the same mold as the Red Brigades, has committed no known acts of political terror in Belgium. West German terrorists have been convicted of violent crimes next door in the Netherlands, however.

In Spain, terrorists believed to be Basque separatists shot and killed a national policeman during the night, police said. He was the second member of the Guardia Civil killed in 36 hours.

Police said the second victim died in the Basque city of San Sebastian, northwest Spain, when terrorists hiding in a cemetery blasted a patrol car with sub-machine guns. Earlier, terrorists in the Basque capital of Pamplona killed another Guardia Civil member by detonating a bomb attached to a light post as a patrol car passed.

In Iran, witnesses said "many" persons were killed Wednesday in a battle between government troops and Moslem holy men who attacked a police station. The clash took place in Qum, 100 miles south of Tehran.

In riots the previous day, nine religious demonstrators were killed, officials said. Those disturbances broke out after a call by religious leaders — the mullahs — for a protest in memory of persons killed in anti-government riots 40 days before. The protesters oppose government reforms removing some restrictions on women, and want the government of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi to close movie theaters and liquor shops.

In Beirut, Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization pledged Wednesday to try to prevent radical guerrillas from attacking U.N. forces in southern Lebanon. A spokesman said the PLO's policy is "peaceful coexistence" with the U.N. peacekeeping force. He was responding to a question on Tuesday's clash between radical Moslems and Norwegian peacekeepers near Mount Hermon, in which one guerrilla was killed and a Norwegian lieutenant wounded.

American's Murder Probed In Lebanon

BEIRUT (AP) — Police were baffled Wednesday by the murder of a 22-year-old American, whose body was found the day before on a roadside east of Beirut.

The victim was identified from papers found on the body as Paul Wilson, a Louisiana resident who was registered at the University of Georgia.

He was shot in the head and stabbed at least six times. His body was dumped on Damascus highway road, six miles east of Beirut, a predominantly Christian area.

Police said they did not know where why or by whom he was murdered, but the investigation was continuing.

The victim carried no passport but American embassy officials confirmed through Washington that Wilson was a U.S. citizen. Officials did not even know why the young man was in Lebanon.

Defeated Sheriff 'Getting Even'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For a man who said he didn't need the job, defeat has turned Sheriff Don Gilman into one of the fiercest lame ducks in Indiana political history.

A week after his stunning Democratic primary defeat by Deputy Jim Wells, the flamboyant Gilman is making good his pledge to spend the remainder of his appointed term "getting even."

Even the most routine information about the department's business is now denied to reporters, and some of Wells' associates on the 450-member force have been transferred or demoted. The Marion County Sheriff's department serves outlying parts of Indianapolis, while the Indianapolis Police Department is responsible for the inner city.

"The first 14 months in office were work," says Gilman, a millionaire who built a health club into a small corporate empire. "The next eight months will be fun and I am going to enjoy it."

He was appointed sheriff in February 1977, after popular Democrat Lawrence Broderick was killed in an automobile accident. At first Gilman said he had no intention of running for a full term, but a year later he had changed his mind.

By that time, so had the Democrats. When he was rejected in the county slating convention, Gilman decided to run on his own, financing a campaign with $20,000 from his personal fortune.

"Whatever happens I'll walk away with my head high in the knowledge I've done a good job for the taxpayers," he pledged at the time.

But if Gilman's head is high, others are rolling in the aftermath of his defeat.

Days after the primary, he initiated dozens of demotions and transfers, affecting those who had even the remotest connection with Wells, a captain on leave from the sheriff's department. One of the first to go was Capt. Max Turner, the public relations man hired to improve Gilman's public image.

Turner, who before the election defended Gilman in a televised response to an editorial by a local station, was demoted to deputy and reassigned to the department's civil division.

"I tried to do a good job and got criticized by the press. So I'm not going to talk to anyone. There will be no more PR. And I don't need a PR man no more," Gilman said. "I'm going to taunt the hell out of the press. Don't bother to call me no more. I'll just taunt you. I will taunt the press for fun."

Two of the changes affected friends of Wells, who will face former two-term Sheriff Lee Eads in November. Sgt. Jerry Hubbs, married to Wells' niece, was transferred from road patrol to jail duty. Lt. Larry Jones, day shift commander in the jail, was transferred to overnight duty and demoted to sergeant. Wells is godfather to Jones' children.

Jones has filed a $200,000 lawsuit against Gilman, seeking back pay with interest and restoration of rank. He said he was demoted because of a "political association and friendship with Jim Wells."

Gilman also imposed a gag order, forbidding his deputies to talk with reporters and barring the media from "any division without my prior approval."

"Nobody talks with the press except Gilman and he isn't talking either," Col. George Kemp, the chief deputy, said Friday. As of Monday night, the most routine inquiries about traffic accidents and minor crimes were being greeted with "no comment."

John C. Ruckelshaus, an attorney for the Fraternal Order of Police, said the deputies should defy the order. "I dare him to try to enforce the gag order," Ruckelshaus said. "If he does, I'll stick it in his ear."

The county Democratic organization, led by Wells, has tried to persuade Gilman to resign. In a letter to the sheriff, Wells said, "... your obvious enjoyment of playing games with a once-proud department and your incessant taunting of the news media has led to a very embarrassing situation..."

But Gilman steadfastly has refused to quit and called the letter "about as low-down as I could think of."

FIERCE LAME DUCK — Sheriff Don Gilman of Indianapolis, Ind., who last week lost the Democratic nomination to one of his deputies, has pledged to spend his last eight months in office getting even with the press and other critics. Since his primary defeat, Gilman has transferred or demoted dozens of deputies and imposed a gag order on his department, prohibiting all employees from talking with members of the media. ## Czech Plane Hijacked To Frankfurt FRANKFURT (AP) — Hijackers seeking political asylum forced a Czechoslovak airliner with 46 persons aboard to fly to West Germany Wednesday and surrendered, police and airport officials said.

The Ilyushin 18, on a flight from Prague to the Czechoslovak city of Brno, landed at 7:30 p.m. at Frankfurt's Rhine-Main airport, where it was surrounded by police.

Police Chief Knut Mueller said one of the hijackers carried more than four pounds of explosives in a plastic container, but no detonator.

He said the hijackers were a 27-year-old taxi driver, Josef Katrincak, his wife Anna and two children and another adult, Radomir Sebesta.

All were from the western Czechoslovak town of Karlovy Vary.

Before the surrender, airport security officials had begun negotiations with the hijackers, using a stewardess as a translator. A woman and two children were allowed to leave the plane.

The Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported the hijacking two hours after it happened, saying the plane was commandeered by "a group of terrorists."

The report said Czechoslovak authorities have asked for return of the plane and extradition of the hijackers.

It was the eighth hijacking of a Czechoslovak plane to a West German airport by persons seeking asylum since 1970.

The last was Feb. 6, when a man claiming to have a bomb diverted a jetliner to Frankfurt on a flight from East Berlin to Prague.

He surrendered and is awaiting trial. A young East German couple and 2-year-old son, passengers on that hijacked flight, chose to remain in West Germany.

Phillip Morris Bids To Buy Seven-Up Co.

NEW YORK (AP) — Philip Morris Inc. stepped up its bold move to enter the soft-drink market when it said on Wednesday it would raise its tender offer for Seven-Up Co. stock to $46 a share from the original $41 bid.

Late last week, Seven-Up turned down the initial May 1 offer as inadequate. "We think it would be a mistake for shareholders to jump at the tender offer," Ben Wells, Seven-Up chairman, said at the time. There was no immediate comment from Seven-Up regarding the higher bid.

The sweetened bid raises the value of the offer to as much as $492 million from $440 million.

Philip Morris, a New York-based conglomerate specializing in cigarette and beer production, also said that it will remove an earlier condition that at least 5.47 million shares—or 51 percent of the total—must be tendered. Under the revised offer, Philip Morris said it would accept any and all shares tendered. The offer expires May 15.

Of Seven-Up's about 10.7 million shares outstanding, about 51 percent is closely held. The three founding families—the Gladney, Grigg and Ridgway families—hold about 45 percent, and the other 6 percent is held by long-time stockholders.

In raising its offer, Philip Morris also said that it would forego the higher bid if prior to the close of business Thursday Seven-Up and certain of its holders agree to a merger.

The company is offering, as it did in the initial bid, to enter into a tax-free merger by exchanging a new issue of convertible preferred stock for Seven-Up common. Under the merger proposal, up to 45 percent of Seven-Up's holders would have the option of receiving $46 in cash for the stock in lieu of the securities swap.

The same provision was made for the initial offer, but Seven-Up also rejected that plan.

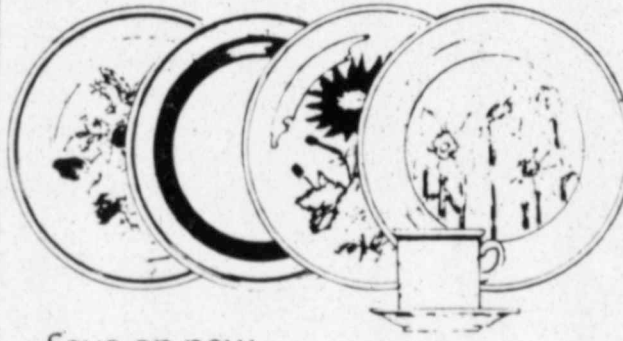

Seven-Up has a history of independence. At its annual meeting last month, shareholders approved a proposal staggering the election of directors, dividing the numbers into three classes.

Solon Cited For Embezzling Faces Expulsion From House

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — After a month of agonizing, the Michigan House prepared to vote Wednesday on whether to expel a popular colleague who was convicted of embezzling $24,000 from an heiress.

But the legislator, Rep. Monte Gerald, was pessimistic.

"There's still a little hope, and I think the vote will be close," he said wearily. "But I expect to be expelled."

It would be the first time in the state's history that a legislator has been expelled.

The vote was expected during Wednesday's session.

Gerald, a 43-year-old Democrat, father of five and former mayor of Madison Heights, was convicted in March on two counts of embezzlement.

He has steadfastly proclaimed his innocence, says he will appeal and already has announced he will run for re-election. As a felon, he would be unable to vote for himself.

During his 3½ years in the Legislature, Gerald gained respect of his colleagues for rewriting the state's probate code and has been appointed by the House speaker to several important committees, including judiciary and taxation.

Democratic Majority Leader Joseph Forbes recently called him "a hard-working, creative member of the Legislature, who has made a significant contribution ..."

But last month, a move began to expel him — with legislative leaders from both parties clamoring for him to be booted out for the good of the Legislature. Last week, a House committee concluded three weeks of hearings by recommending Gerald be ousted.

The expulsion resolution said the two-term legislator's conviction "calls into question the integrity and actions of the entire Legislature and seriously undermines the confidence and trust of the citizenry in the institutions of government."

The leaders said voter confidence in public officials is already low. This is also an election year.

Since his conviction, Gerald had attended House sessions only twice, and on Wednesday it had been more than three weeks since he had appeared in the House. The last time was shortly after expulsion proceedings began.

$10 Expense Money

Called Legal By Hill

AUSTIN (AP) — It is legal for county commissioners to be paid $10 in expenses when they attend meetings of such groups as chambers of commerce, Attorney General John Hill ruled Wednesday.

He issued the opinion to Harris County Attorney Joe Resweber, who had asked about the $10 payment the county commissioners had authorized themselves.

On Thursday, Gerald is to be sentenced in Oakland County Circuit Court for taking money from a wealthy Bloomfield Hills heiress, Geraldine Patra, whom he was representing as a lawyer.

She said she had entrusted the money to him and that he used some for a down payment on an office building and to buy stock. He claimed she owed him the money in fees.

If Gerald wins re-election, Michigan's Constitution would allow him to return to the House under a provision which prohibits lawmakers from being expelled twice for the same crime.

The State Bar of Michigan revoked his license to practice law, but the Michigan Supreme Court reduced the disbarment to three years, citing Gerald's "previously unblemished record."

Youths Protest Citizenship Laws Of U.S.

LONDON (UPI) — More than 100 American children demonstrated on the steps of the U.S. embassy Wednesday to protest American laws that could take away their citizenship and even make them stateless.

The children waved banners declaring "I love America" and "I'm American as apple pie."

Rally organizer Anthony Hyde, co-chairman of the American Children's Citizenship Rights League, said citizenship laws are "another example of the out-of-sight, out-of-mind attitude that pervades Congress as far as overseas Americans are concerned."

Those laws require a child born outside of the United States to one American and one non-American parent to live at least two years in the United States between the ages of 14 and 28.

Moreover, the American parent must have lived a total of 10 years in the United States, five of these after the age of 14, to pass on citizenship.

"The lawmakers just have not anticipated how unfairly some provisions of the law affect the rights of some U.S. parents and their children," Hyde said.

He cited the example of an American student who left the United States to attend his father's funeral in Germany. Sixty days later he tried to return home only to find he had lost his U.S. citizenship and was now "stateless."

In another case, he said, a child was denied U.S. citizenship because his American father worked in Hong Kong and had spent only four years and nine months — instead of the required five years — in the United States.

Since the British mother gave birth outside the United Kingdom, the child was also unable to claim British citizenship.

In contrast, any boy or girl born in the United States — even to illegal immigrants or vacationing foreigners — is automatically a U.S. citizen with no subsequent residency requirements, Hyde said.

Hyde called for support for two bills now before Congress to "correct these citizenship inequities."

"We are encouraged by the support we have been able to generate," he said.

"We just hope we can reach enough Congressmen in time for legislative action to prevent many personal tragedies."

He estimated 38,000 American children are born abroad each year — 15,000 of whom are made "second-class Cinderella citizens" under current regulations.

Canvass Reveals Additional Votes

A-J Correspondent
PADUCAH — In an official canvass of votes in Saturday's primary election Tuesday night, the Cottle County Democratic executive committee discovered 60 additional votes were cast than were initially reported.

The canvass revealed a total of 1,254 votes were cast, compared to the unofficial 1,194 reported Saturday night. No county races were affected by the vote change.

There still will be a run-off for county judge between challenger Tilden B. Armstrong, who received 329 votes, and Roger Holley, the incumbent who garnered 546 votes.

In the race for county commissioner, Pct. 2, John D. Shavor and Grady D. Staggs will faceoff. Staggs received 142 votes to Shavor's 135.

The largest vote increase went to Sam D. Johnson who was unopposed in his race for associate justice of the Supreme County, Place 2. Johnson gained 53 votes in the canvass.

Democratic gubernatorial nominee John Hill gained five votes and Railroad Commission candidate John Poerner Charles W. Barrow, candidate for associate justice of the Supreme Court, Place 3, each gained one vote.

Illegal Alien Bill Compromise Seen By Bell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell went to bat for the administration-backed illegal alien bill Wednesday, noting it may take some "creative compromise" to assure passage of the controversial legislation.

Bell and Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher testified before a Senate subcommittee considering the Alien Adjustment and Employment Act that was presented by President Carter in August, 1977.

The bill was introduced in the Senate by four Democrats, including Judiciary Committee Chairman James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

At the conclusion of Bell's testimony, Eastland invited the attorney general to return to answer questions "when more members of the committee are present." Eastland and another sponsor of the bill, Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, were the only two senators present for Bell's testimony.

outweigh the disadvantages. The most important advantage is the right to live and work in the United States without fear of apprehension by the authorities and without being easy targets for exploitation by unscrupulous employers or landlords.

The attorney general also pointed out that the administration's plan also calls for adjustment of revenue sharing formulas to account for the impact of temporary alien residents on state and local governmental services.

Bell also said there is "no magic" in the Jan. 1, 1977, amnesty date. "It is an attempt to meet legitimate humanitarian and practical concerns without creating incentives for increased migration, which a complete amnesty most surely would do."

Christopher said the State Department had contacted officials in countries that contribute most to the illegal alien problem in the United States. He mentioned four specific meetings with officials in Mexico and, when asked by DeConcini if he believed Mexico was cooperating on a "reluctant basis," Christopher replied, "I take (Mexican President Luis) Portillo at his word when he says they want to export their products, not their workers."

Controversial Areas

Some of the bill's more controversial measures include sanctions against employers who hire undocumented workers, establishment of a temporary resident alien status for aliens who entered this country illegally after Jan. 1, 1977 and amnesty for illegals of "good citizen" status who entered the country prior to January, 1977.

Bell stressed "the need to move forward now to come to grips with the difficult and complex social problems associated with massive illegal immigration."

"Some may say that not enough is known about illegal immigration to make policy decisions ... and, while the exact dimensions of the (illegal alien) population are not known, it is clear that the impacts of this population are," he continued.

"Must Do Something"

"Thus, steps must be taken to do something about the problem of undocumented aliens irrespective of whether 2.5 million or 5.2 million are in the nation."

"The important fact is that the problem is significant and growing and the forces which cause it are not going to disappear in the foreseeable future."

"It is also argued that the problem of illegal immigration is too controversial, that we will never be able to agree as a government and as a people on what the proper solution should be," Bell added.

"I disagree because I have great faith in the ability of Americans to achieve political and social progress through creative compromise. The administration's proposals have been offered as a means of opening the dialogue with the Congress and with the public."

Concept "Practicable"

In responding to the most common criticisms of the proposed bill, Bell said the temporary alien resident concept "is practicable and that the rationale behind it is sound. It is also necessary, I might add, because it is the only way to get the people (illegals) to come out and register."

"The important underlying question that must be answered is whether, once the facts are presented, the undocumented aliens will decide that it's worthwhile to come out of hiding," Bell continued.

"We believe that they will because the advantages of the temporary status so

Labor Rejects Carter's Wage Slowdown Plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Organized labor rejected President Carter's plea Wednesday that it pledge to hold down future wage demands, saying his anti-inflation program must first slow rising prices.

"We feel that the pressure should be put on the prices rather than the wages," AFL-CIO President George Meany said in spurning Carter's request that wage increases be held below levels of the previous two years.

Carter, who met with Meany and other labor leaders Wednesday, had no immediate comment. But one administration official said the president was displeased with labor's response.

"I think he (Carter) said what he had to say and was not exactly pleased with everything he heard," said the official, declining to be identified.

Meany said Carter's economic advisers at the meeting seemed "disappointed" that the AFL-CIO would not commit itself to the administration's price and wage deceleration plan.

"What the workers are trying to do is make up for prices that have gone up since the last negotiations," the labor leader said.

Meany added that if price increases slow, so will wage hikes because many wage agreements provide cost-of-living

Jaworski Rebuffed By House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejecting an appeal from special counsel Leon Jaworski, the House refused to take even token action Wednesday against U.S. aid to South Korea in an effort to get testimony from a former Korean ambassador.

An effort by Rep. Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., to "send a signal" to South Korea without actually reducing any of its aid was defeated, 254 to 146.

Caputo's amendment would have cut $56 million in Food for Peace aid for South Korea out of Congress' federal budget target figure for next year.

An amendment by Rep. Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind., against military credit sales to Seoul was rejected by a standing vote of 66 to 16.

One opponent, Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., who like Caputo is a member of the House ethics committee, denounced the move as "a little international extortion."

Other opponents said the ethics committee had not proved that South Korea had bribed a single congressman.

Urging the House to "get tough," Jaworski, the committee's special counsel, had announced earlier that South Korea refused to allow investigators to receive sworn testimony from former ambassador Kim Dong Jo into allegations that he handed envelopes stuffed with $100 bills out to congressmen.

Jaworski said South Korea offers only to let Kim discuss the issues in a long distance telephone call to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, not under oath.

Italy's Terrorism Flares

Police in Milan said three men and a woman shot and wounded industrialist Franco Giacomazzi in the legs. The victim is an executive of the state-run Montedison chemical company.

The shooting had all the trademarks of an attack by the urban guerrilla Red Brigades, police said, but the Milan newspaper Il Giornale received an anonymous telephone call claiming the shooting was the work of the previously unknown "Armed Popular Communist Front."

The fear lingering after Moro's assassination by his Red Brigades kidnappers was that it marked just the beginning of a new stage of violence promised by the Marxist revolutionary band.

In Turin, the founder of Red Brigades, Renato Curcio, disrupted court proceedings in his trial on sedition charges to shout a warning to the prosecutor. "You live outside of history. Perhaps you have not understood what has happened in these days or what will happen in the coming months in Italy."

Curcio, a onetime philosophy student, called Moro's assassination "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was dragged from the courtroom in chains after the outburst.

Authorities stepped up protection for prominent politicians and other likely targets of terrorist violence. Police pressed their all-out search for 20 wanted persons, including nine charged in arrest warrants with complicity in the Moro kidnapping.

In downtown Rome, thousands of ordinary citizens streamed past the spot where Moro's bullet-riddled body was found Tuesday. The visitors signed a memorial book on a table in the street and then went about their lives with a torpor reminiscent of the aftermath of the John F. Kennedy assassination in the United States.

Workers nationwide observed a two-hour work stoppage, and thousands braving a driving rain massed in St. John Lateran Square at a rally organized by the country's three major unions to pay tribute to Moro and speak out against terrorism.

"I have faith that the state with the help of labor will have the strength to defeat the Red Brigades," declared Luigi Macario, leader of a Christian Democrat-dominated union.

Other national figures paid their respects at the headquarters of the Christian Democrat Party, which Moro led. And Pope Paul VI was on the verge of tears as he talked about his dead friend to a crowd of children in St. Peter's Basilica.

In the first official Soviet reaction to the Moro assassination, a Tass news agency commentator called it a "monstrous" act and said the Soviet people "are convinced the Italian people will give a proper rebuff to the intrigues of those who are trying to lead them away from the course they have chosen."

The Red Brigades have denounced the Italian Communist Party's new alliance with the minority Christian Democrat government, saying the Communists have betrayed the true proletarian cause.

Efforts to find Moro's assassins included a police sweep along the coast near Fregene, a posh beach resort outside Rome, apparently because sand was found in the cuffs of Moro's pants. But there was no trace of the murderers.

Authorities released 24 of 26 persons arrested in dragnets May 8, saying they had insufficient evidence. The suspects had been held on charges of subversive association. Only the editors of two leftist radio stations remained in jail.

Investigators said an examination of Moro's body showed that he suffered at least 11 bullet wounds in the chest, fired from a distance as though in a formal execution. The Red Brigades said in their messages that Moro had been submitted to a "peoples trial" and condemned to death for "anti-proletarian" policies.

Bullets from two different weapons were extracted from Moro's body. Police experts said they came from a rapid fire Czech-made 7.65mm Scorpion pistol, the same kind used in the 1976 Red Brigades killing of a Genoa prosecutor, and a pistol firing short 9mm bullets.

Medical sources said the autopsy also revealed he had a tumor of the thyroid but they could not say whether it was benign.

They said the tumor was in an early stage and would normally have grown slowly because of Moro's age.

shows there is no way to prevent the issue from reaching the Senate floor.

It has been widely believed that a resolution of disapproval needs to be approved by both House and Senate committees and the two chambers or the sales would go through.

Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., whose position on the issue had previously been unknown, said the White House compromise offer has convinced her to support the administration's position and to vote against the disapproval resolutions.

Rep. Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., said, "But it appears that it is not enough." Fascell said some opponents are also trying to get Carter to sell Saudi Arabia fewer than the 60 F-15s proposed.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the International Relations Committee, said, however, he remains confident his panel will defeat any resolutions of disapproval.

"You know what the real issue is?" Zablocki asked. "To stop a confrontation. Nobody wants to vote on it."

Brown and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance had urged Carter on Wednesday to promise Israel an additional 20 jet fighters as a way to keep Congress from rejecting the arms deal, a White House source said.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said Vance and Brown recommended that Carter propose the sale of the added planes for Israel.

The Jewish lobby in Capitol Hill and congressional opponents of the Saudi Arabia would imperil Israel's security.

Carter submitted the proposal to Congress on April 28. Under parliamentary procedure, the House and Senate have 30 days to disapprove part or all of the sale.

For example, he said, when West Texas Hospital built its new facility near the civic center, it left the older building vacant. And that in turn allowed South Plains College in Levelland to open an extension here in the former hospital, Stack said, adding, "I think it will be a tremendous stimulus for downtown Lubbock."

Several Lubbockites closely involved in the tornado recovery plan agree with that assessment. The civic center's presence has been "very good for us in our business," said Dorman Igo. He is in the jewelry trade and is past president of the Greater Lubbock Development Association, a group of businessmen interested in promoting the downtown area's development.

city like the civic center."

In the year that it has been open, the civic center has hosted 42 conventions, meetings or seminars, Smith said. And, he added, he is "extremely pleased" with the next year's prospects.

He said one farm show has booked a date in the civic center for five consecutive years.

The civic center was approved three months after the tornado by citizens eager to erase the physical blemish of razed land. The massive structure was seven years in the planning and building and was opened in March, 1977.

Today at 4 p.m., Lubbockites will get their second public viewing of the facility when city council members dedicate a tapestry hanging near the Exhibit Hall.

The wall hanging, commissioned by the city council and made by internationally known artist Romeo Reyna, depicts life on the South Plains through symbols such as the windmill.

The civic center has had another, more indirect effect on Lubbockites and their economy.

"Before the tornado's destruction, the 70-acre area generated only $62,275 a year in combined city and school property taxes, according to the Urban Renewal Agency."

Now, the agency says, with only 9.3 acres in the area developed by commercial businesses, the annual tax yield is $120,490.

"That is nearly a 100 percent increase on one-seventh of the land," said the agency's Robert Stack.

And, he added, in 1970 the combined city-school tax base was $2.83 per $100 valuation, while this year it is only 16 cents higher. So, he said, the tax base does not make the major difference.

Instead, he said, he believes the reason for the change is that the houses and small businesses in the 36-block area before the tornado were old and generally in poor condition.

Now, commercial developers have built expensive — and therefore more taxable — businesses such as motels, a restaurant and office building.

And, Stack added, the people displaced by the storm's ravages have relocated their homes and businesses elsewhere in the city, thus contributing to Lubbock's economy.

"The whole thing was a gain," Stack said.

He said the Urban Renewal Agency, which is in charge of the 70-acre Memorial Center Complex Addition, has sold a little more than 11 acres around the center for private development. Revenue from the sales totaled $1.34 million, which was used to repay the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for its loans.

The Urban Renewal Agency still has about 9 acres left to sell, Stack said. He explained that about 50 acres of the tract was sold as public land for streets, alleys and for right of way.

The remaining 20 acres was designated for commercial development, he said.

But, Stack said, he believes the economic impact of the tornado and subsequent civic center addition extends beyond the immediate commercial development in the area.

For example, he said, when West Texas Hospital built its new facility near the civic center, it left the older building vacant. And that in turn allowed South Plains College in Levelland to open an extension here in the former hospital, Stack said, adding, "I think it will be a tremendous stimulus for downtown Lubbock."

Italy's Terrorism Flares

Police in Milan said three men and a woman shot and wounded industrialist Franco Giacomazzi in the legs. The victim is an executive of the state-run Montedison chemical company.

The shooting had all the trademarks of an attack by the urban guerrilla Red Brigades, police said, but the Milan newspaper Il Giornale received an anonymous telephone call claiming the shooting was the work of the previously unknown "Armed Popular Communist Front."

The fear lingering after Moro's assassination by his Red Brigades kidnappers was that it marked just the beginning of a new stage of violence promised by the Marxist revolutionary band.

In Turin, the founder of Red Brigades, Renato Curcio, disrupted court proceedings in his trial on sedition charges to shout a warning to the prosecutor. "You live outside of history. Perhaps you have not understood what has happened in these days or what will happen in the coming months in Italy."

Curcio, a onetime philosophy student, called Moro's assassination "an act of revolutionary justice, the highest act of humanity possible in this society without justice and divided into classes." He was dragged from the courtroom in chains after the outburst.

Authorities stepped up protection for prominent politicians and other likely targets of terrorist violence. Police pressed their all-out search for 20 wanted persons, including nine charged in arrest warrants with complicity in the Moro kidnapping.

In downtown Rome, thousands of ordinary citizens streamed past the spot where Moro's bullet-riddled body was found Tuesday. The visitors signed a memorial book on a table in the street and then went about their lives with a torpor reminiscent of the aftermath of the John F. Kennedy assassination in the United States.

Workers nationwide observed a two-hour work stoppage, and thousands braving a driving rain massed in St. John Lateran Square at a rally organized by the country's three major unions to pay tribute to Moro and speak out against terrorism.

Patsy Locke, coordinator of the hospital's emergency department, said she has listened to everyone's problems. She handles complaints from patients, doctors and employees. She's always worrying about the department, Tami said about her mother.

"She gives people IV's and takes blood. She takes care of babies, kids and adults when they're sick or hurt. She wraps people up and takes temperatures. She helps everyone and most people trust her."

"She's gentle when people are hurt, and loves her job. She studied very hard to be a nurse and is very glad she did. She's on call day and night. Even when she's sick she has to go to work. My mom wants the emergency department to be the best emergency department around," Tami said.

The essay contest was one of several activities conducted by the Health Sciences Center Hospital this week. Today, from 10 a.m. to noon and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m., the hospital will host public tours of the facility.

Tours will begin in the hospital lobby.

Also in the lobby today, the hospital will provide free blood pressure screening.

Other activities include the distribution of bumper stickers with the slogan, "The Health Sciences Center Hospital Wishes You Well." The hospital also has erected a sign with the same slogan, signed by its staff and patients.

Texas Grads Face Tight Job Market

AUSTIN (AP) — A tight job market for Texas college graduates through 1983 was forecast Wednesday by the state college coordinating board.

The board said jobs for new bachelor's degree holders will number between 35,090 and 38,460, while predicting there will be 39,740 graduates seeking those jobs.

Employment opportunities in Texas for new master's and doctor's degree holders will be in balance with the number of jobseekers, the board said.

Its report said there will be plenty of openings for newly turned out doctors, dentists, optometrists and veterinarians but the supply of law graduates will exceed the available jobs.

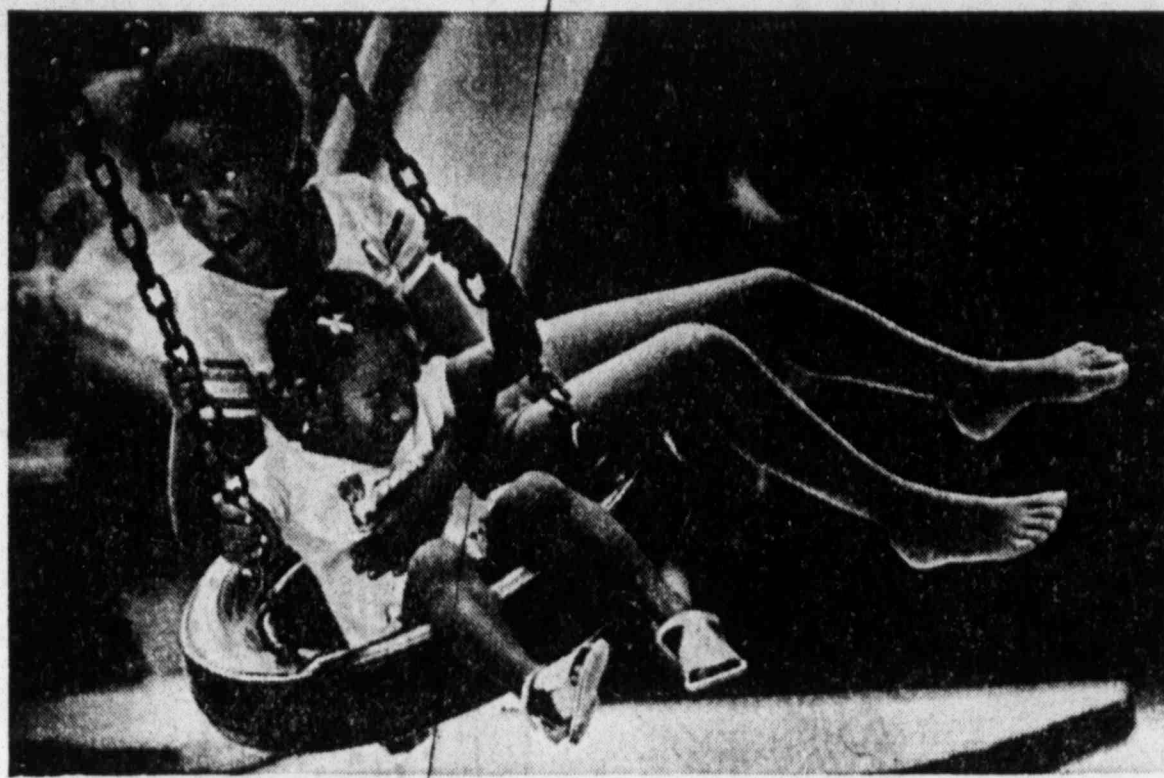

The board said that in many fields, the number of graduates would exceed the demand by more than 10 percent.

"Opportunities will be greatest for individuals willing to relocate or to consider employment in positions which may not be directly related to their fields of study," the board said.

It predicted a crowded market for reporters, lawyers, architects, commercial artists, counselors, psychologists, photographers, musicians, public administrators, foresters, social workers, broadcasters, public relations persons and elementary school teachers.

High demand was forecast for computer scientists, engineers, accountants, medical technology, health care administrators and nurses.

Auto mechanics, welding, electronics, court reporting, aviation technology, secretarial work and construction should present good opportunities for employment of persons without degrees, the board said.

Tech Graduate Earns Award

Nathan Collie, recent graduate of Texas Tech University and native of Abilene, has been presented the Earl D. Camp Award for outstanding achievement in the field of biology.

The award, based on scholarship and faculty evaluation, was established in 1971 when Earl D. Camp retired as chairman of the department of biology to resume a professorship in the department.

A cash award of $100 also was presented to Collie.

Collie graduated in December 1977, with a Bachelor of Science in zoology and an overall grade point average of 4.0. Throughout his college career Collie has conducted research in comparative endocrinology, the study of hormones.

His study has taken him to the University of California, Berkeley in the summer of 1971, and to the Columbia University of Medicine, in the summer of 1977, to do research in comparative endocrinology.

Despite its name, the Dead Sea is not a sea but a land-locked lake, says National Geographic.

Arctophiles Like Their Teddies Fuzzy, Huggable

AUSTIN (AP) — Jan Meyrick was sitting near a Christmas fire to ward off the Boston cold when her husband casually picked up a worn teddy bear and pointed a miniature cap pistol at the bear's head.

"Jan, look at this," he said, kiddingly, and pretended to pull the trigger.

"I went white," she recalls.

In Jan's mind, "Cowslip," a silent friend and confidante since she was an infant, momentarily faced death.

"He didn't pull the trigger," she says with relief. It was as if in holding back, her husband had reaffirmed her belief that he was a good man — and saved a life.

Jan, 28, a petite blonde secretary, is a "bear person." She always has been and always will be. To teddy bear lovers, age doesn't matter.

Bear books tell us Prince Charles of England took his bear to prep school; Elvis Presley was fond of them; and John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson played with them as children.

The Soviets reportedly are featuring a teddy bear known as "Misha" as the 1980 Olympic mascot.

The Good Bears of the World (GBW) — which furnishes teddy bears to children in hospitals — has headquarters in Bern, Switzerland, and publishes a Honolulu newsletter that goes to an adult "underground" of bear lovers around the world.

Austin has its share of arctophiles — bear lovers.

"It's only recently that grown people have been willing to admit their affection for teddy bears," says Jan.

"Men did not show sentiment," says pharmacist Juan Ochoa, 29, "but things have changed."

He started his collection when a friend gave him "Bubba," a bear that had been hugged by numerous young children during mental health counseling.

After initial embarrassment, he talks of his bears with ease.

"Every bear," he says, "was given to me by someone close to me. Besides, bears are huggable and I consider myself a huggable person."

Bear lovers seek each other out for "bear talk," but most are inveterate collectors and are careful not to disclose their sources. Jan, for example, has first refusal rights on bears found by a Massachusetts dealer, but she prefers not to divulge the name.

She once spent $80 in an unsuccessful attempt to trace a $30 bear she glimpsed in a flea market.

Tennie Heiner propped her bear up at her clothing shop for company, but so many customers asked to buy it that she took it home.

Mary Gayle Stromberger and Shelley Dumas stocked a few bears at "Grandmother's House," a children's boutique, and they sold so quickly they are now on constant order.

The "BB Bear" — basic brown bear — has become the store's signature, and the women give a party each year on Oct. 27, which is "Good Bear Day."

That is Teddy Roosevelt's birthday. The origin of the name "teddy bear" is a 1902 Washington Star cartoon of the former president refusing to shoot a bear cub.

TEDDY BEAR COLLECTOR — Jay Meyrick, an Austin secretary who is a member of an international "underground" of adults who collect teddy bears, cuddles Llewellyn. Purchased in a New York quilt shop, the teddy bear is more than 70 years old. (AP Laserphoto)

Guests at the annual party include a bear once owned by Gladys Ray, who wrote the book on which the movie "Red River" was based, and "Teddy Williams," whose nearly furless appearance shows his age of 70 or so. He belonged to Cal Williams of San Antonio, who is 67 and received the bear as a hand-me-down from his father.

Further evidence that bears are part of a man's world, too, is the bear Mrs. Stromberger and Mrs. Dumas gave their carpenter, James Inman. The next time he did some work for them he brought along his bear, dressed in overalls that were a replica of those he wore.

"There is an insatiable demand for bears," says Mrs. Dumas, "and the old ones are not easy to find."

"I gave one away when I was 14," Jan remembers, "and I've regretted it ever since. I wonder if he has been well taken care of."

Majority Feels Squeeze Of Social Security Tax

By LOUIS HARRIS
By 48-30 percent, Americans would like to see Congress cut back the recent increase in the Social Security tax by third. As they see it, the difference should be made up from the general tax revenues of the federal government.

This finding from a recent Harris Survey of 1,508 adults nationwide confirms what many members of Congress have been hearing from back home. Americans feel that they are being squeezed by taxes and want some relief.

Despite their reactions to the Social Security tax rise, people are deeply concerned about the financial health of the Social Security system. By 87-9 percent, they agree that "Social Security provides minimum basic security for older people and it cannot be allowed to go broke."

Basically, Americans also feel that Social Security is the bedrock of any retirement program for older people. A 46-33 percent plurality clearly rejects the suggestion that "since most people need more money in retirement than Social Security provides, it would be better to go over to a totally private system of pensions and abolish Social Security, except for the very poor and unemployed."

Majorities of the public even approve of Congress for the action it took last Deember in passing the sharp increase in Social Security taxes:

—By 54-31 percent, most Americans feel that "Congress showed real courage in asking that taxes for Social Security be raised sharply to save the system."

—By 54-28 percent, they also go along with the argument that "although some people with higher incomes have opposed the new Social Security tax rates, the new tax rates are right, because the added money to save Social Security from going broke should be obtained mainly from those in higher income brackets."

How, then, can the shift toward opposition to the Social Security tax rise be explained? Two key clues emerge from this latest Harris Survey:

—By 71-14 percent, a sizable majority feels that "it is a prime example of irresponsibility by the federal government that Social Security was not funded properly in the first place." Clearly, the public is disturbed by the revelation that something as basic as the Social Security system could have been badly planned.

Moreover, when people came face to face with the specific size of the new Social Security tax, they were rather shocked. This is expressed by a 45-39 percent opposition to the sharp increase in

Bell Dairy Considers Purchase Offer

After being locally owned for the past 53 years, Bell Dairy Products on University Avenue may be sold to a large Illinois food processing firm.

Bell Dairy President George Wilson said Wednesday that Bell received a "letter of intent" Monday from Dean Food Co. of Franklin, Ill., and that negotiations will follow between the two firms.

Wilson said, however, that no deal had been closed yet. He said that if the Lubbock company is sold to Dean Food Co. it will not be for another 60 to 90 days.

Wilson said he did not predict any turnover of personnel if Bell Dairy was sold. "They wouldn't be interested if we didn't have good people," he said.

The Lubbock dairy is presently owned by 15 local stockholders. Wilson would not say how much money would be involved for a transfer of ownership to be completed.

Richard Mather, president of Creamland Dairies of Albuquerque, N.M., said the Illinois firm is also attempting to close a deal with that company, along with Price's Dairies of El Paso.

Bell Dairies is the majority shareholder of Creamland, and Price's of El Paso is a wholly owned subsidiary of Creamland. Price's of El Paso has no connection with Price's Valley Gold Dairies of New Mexico.

Mather said he was "not at liberty" to release details of the transactions.

"A letter of intent that outlines our joint intentions to proceed with the acquisition by Dean Food Co. has been signed," Mather said. "We are in the process of closing."

William Fisher of Dean Food said, "This is a new part of the country for us. These are very solid companies and we expect that there will be little change in personnel."

Fisher said Dean Food owns many small dairies in the midwest and south.

Prices Dairy in El Paso is the oldest dairy in the area, serving southwestern Texas and southern New Mexico for more than 50 years.

The dairies employ more than 500 persons and Creamland had a total yearly payroll of $3 million in fiscal 1976.

Creamland was founded in 1937 by Albert G. Simms and a group of Albuquerque farmers and businessmen.

Bank Names Loan Officer

Robert L. "Lynn" Copeland has been named vice president and installment loan department manager at First National Bank.

Copeland comes to First National from Security Bank and Trust Co. in Ponca City, Okla., where he served in a similar capacity.

He was previously in Lubbock for more than 17 years and worked for ISC Financial Corp. as district manager in charge of 11 West Texas and Eastern New Mexico offices.

Copeland replaces Howard Moore, senior vice president at First National Bank. Moore will now be working in the public relations and business development area.

Two Women Complete Highway Patrol Training

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — It was tough going, but the first women to complete the training program for the Oklahoma Highway Patrol found they were accepted by their classmates as they proved they were there to work.

Among the 45 graduates Wednesday from the state Department of Public Safety's academy were the first two female troopers, Tomisine Pauline Tatum and Freda Kay Daugherty.

The patrol was founded by the 1937 Legislature to help stop the high rate of traffic fatalities and the bootleg-liquor runners who were breaking the state's prohibition law.

While preparing to pass the academy's requirements, the women found that some things haven't changed over the years. The troopers still undergo grueling physical training.

"It's been rough ... especially the physical part — the 17-hour days," the 24-year-old Miss Daugherty said.

Miss Tatum, 26, formerly of Austin, Texas, said the training "has really been exciting ... but I didn't expect it to be as hard as it was."

"It's like any other female who enters a man's world," said Miss Daugherty, a Vinita, Okla., native who last year received a degree in criminal justice from the state's Northeastern State University.

"When we first got here, it was like a wall was up ... until we did show them we could do what we have to do," she said.

The new troopers do not seem to be unduly wary of the hazards of law enforcement work.

But, they conceded they might face some special problems because they are female, such as a certain amount of respect for their authority from male motorists they stop on the highway.

"I ran into that a little while working back home in the hospital," said Miss Daugherty, a former nurse. "You just have to act professional and let them know who is in charge right off the bat."

Could she shoot to kill someone if placed in a position of jeopardy while on duty?

"... If it comes down to my life or theirs, it's going to be theirs," Miss Daugherty said.

Dialysis Firm To Expand

MALLEN (UPI) — A manufacturer of kidney dialysis equipment plans to increase its floor space by 50,000 square feet and double its employment by adding 200 more workers at its plant in the McAllen Foreign Trade Zone.

Bill Meyers, president of the zone, said Erika of Texas, Inc., would carry out the major plant expansion at a cost of $2.7 million.

Erika is the manufacturing unit of National Medicaire Care, Inc., a Boston-based company in the health-care field.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: Your column is a public forum in which many have had a chance to speak to others. May I now use it to address the media?

Dear Media: Please let up on those of us who have "put" our parents in nursing homes. When I was growing up (in the '30s and '40s) I read novels about people who led blighted lives caring for aged, ailing and usually domineering parents. I also saw it first-hand. My mother, a wonderful schoolteacher, quit her work and spent 18 years caring for her mother-in-law, who despised her.

Today's newspaper, magazine and TV writers don't recognize that our homes are not as large as the homes of yesterday. Nor do they realize that some old people need round-the-clock care. Many "rotten kids" live in small towns where help cannot be hired at any price. The writers also ignore the fact that some middle-aged people are raising grandchildren who are victims of broken homes.

Thanks for listening, Media. Ann, do you see something here that I've missed? — Censured In Denver

Dear Den: If you missed something, so what? You hit plenty. Thanks for writing. I'm in your corner.

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me with a response to those insensitive and crass people who compare the size of children.

My son is small for his age. I'm tired of biting my tongue when acquaintances (I'd hardly call them friends) make remarks such as, "Is he the shortest child in his class?" Or, "I can't believe he's seven. Look at how much taller my son is!" People have even had the gall to ask me who my son takes after. ("Is your family short or is it your husband's?") I would appreciate some guidance on how to respond to these morons. — Sioux Falls

Dear Sioux: The best way to deal with clods is to consider the source and don't let them get to you. If you feel you must respond, answer the question WITH a question. Sample: "Why do you attach so much importance to size? Such peculiar reasoning has always baffled me."

Dear Ann Landers: I disagree with your advice to "Fear for the Future." Why do you always tell relatives, neighbors and close friends to "inform the youngster's teacher"? We are not psychiatrists, medical doctors or moral specialists. Please get off our backs! When a teacher reports something to a parent there had better be plenty of evidence. How can a teacher know what some of these kids do at home or what a boy's "affection" for his mother is all about?

That woman should tell her sister that a 14-year-old kid who delights in fondling his mother is abnormal and needs immediate psychiatric attention. She should also tell her to get going before everyone in the neighborhood starts talking. Teachers should teach and not be asked to deal with such intimate problems. — U.R. Wrong

Dear U.R.: Sorry, I don't buy it. Criticism when offered by a relative is seldom appreciated. A truly enlightened and caring teacher would know how to help — and would be glad to do so. You sound unsympathetic and unwilling to go out of your way to lend a hand. Are you near retirement age? I hope so.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How to Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
My fiber glass tub and shower always looked soiled despite having tried all types of commercial cleansers sold especially for fixtures made of this material.

Our hardware area made it even more difficult to combat what is a general problem in cleaning fiber glass.

I made a paste of baking soda, left it on overnight, and then turned my shower on full blast the next day.

Most of the film lifted. Then I took a damp cloth (not a sponge), sprinkled baking soda on the shower floor and scrubbed just as you would with any scouring powder.

The results are unbelievable. Not only are my tub and shower gleaming white again, but the original shine has been partially restored so that they look almost new.

We had actually been thinking of ripping the tub out as it looked so bad despite everything I did to clean it. This has solved our problem. — Elinor Miller

I picked up my phone and called a friend of mine to test this hint for us. She had been pulling her hair trying to clean her fiber glass tub and shower too. She said baking soda is the best thing

I made a great discovery. I was doing dishes and when they were finished I wanted to get the suds out of the sink.

I found that cold water speeds up the process of eliminating the suds.

DEAR HELOISE:
I was making finger sandwiches for our club meeting and discovered something I never knew before.

I used one loaf of bread and had a hard time cutting off the crust. Then I took a loaf of bread out of the freezer and cut off the crust while the bread was still frozen, and what a difference...

The bread cut so nice and easy and even had no crumbs.

Hereafter I'll freeze the bread before I try to cut off the crust.

I'm 63 years old and it took me all this time to find this out... — Helen Arington

A Wisconsin reader wants to know if we open with one heart or one spade?

The correct opening bid is one heart. You want to play in hearts if your partner holds the same length in each major suit.

Business Women Honor Employer

By OSWALD JACOBY and ALAN SONTAG

A simple South might just have bid six hearts directly after North bid three, but South had some idea of getting to seven.

A simple South might well have gone down one at six. He would simply discard his queen of diamonds on the ace of spades and hope for a successful club finesse and a 3-2 club break.

This South worked out a complicated play to make the contract against any 3-2 club break.

Temprano Chapter of American Business Women will honor employers of the organization at 7:15 p.m. tonight in the Lubbock Women's Club.

Awards will be presented to Boss and Woman of the year. Guest speaker will be W.R. Dunbar, division manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About six months ago I sprained my ankle severely while playing tennis. Since it was weakened considerably, I am wondering what I might do to strengthen it so that I can play again without a recurrence of the problem. — Miss B.W.

After six months you should not be experiencing any pain on movement. If you are, go back to your doctor to have the situation reevaluated. It means healing has not occurred satisfactorily.

There are different grades of ankle sprains, from a simple tear to a rupture of a ligament to a tearing away of a ligament from the ankle bone itself (the most serious).

If it doesn't hurt and if there is no swelling, simple exercising can restore strength — walking or flexing of the joint, plus massage. No one can guarantee that you won't have another attack of "tennis ankle," which for want of a better term we can call this. You should wear an elastic ankle or tape the joint, particularly during exercise.

An ankle sprain can take a long time to heal. Your age, which you don't mention, can be a factor in prolonging the time. If you were off your ankle entirely for any length of time the muscles may have been weakened and require even longer to regain full strength.

My other eye is very good. What is your opinion of the intraocular implant? — M.L.

The danger is that loss of vision will become complete if the cataract is not removed when it should be. A cataract (a hardening of the lens) will not disintegrate or go away on its own. Nor will it "leak."

You are fortunate your other eye is good, so you can function during recovery from surgery. That one should be watched carefully. Cataracts usually develop in both eyes at different rates.

The intraocular implant is a plastic lens implanted in the space formerly occupied by the old clouded one (the cataract) which is removed in surgery. This is becoming popular, and fairly good results have been reported. It eliminates need for the cumbersome "cataract glasses." However, as with any implant surgery, complications may occur. The implanted lens may act as a foreign body. However, with experience and new techniques these dangers have been minimized.

The important thing now is to get a better understanding of cataracts and just when surgery is required and why. It's estimated that upwards of 400,000 people a year in the U.S. have vision restored with cataract surgery. You should not fear it. See my booklet, "Cataracts and Glaucoma." For a copy, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

bruises very easily. The slightest bump or fall turns into ugly, dark bruises that stay for weeks at a time. My doctor tells me to watch the child closer. Do you have any suggestions for me? — Mrs. J.K.

One would have to see the bruises to make any meaningful comment. Has the child been checked for purpura — a blood clotting problem? From your description I would want to see blood tests, particularly a blood platelet count.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I know this is not strictly a medical problem, but have you any information on how to help hair in which the ends split badly? Can my shampoo or dye be at fault? — G.L.

I can't pose as a cosmetics authority.

but I have been told that one often unsuspected cause of splitting ends is failure to rinse out the very ends of the hair following shampooing, tinting, etc.

Do you have problem hair? Dr. Thosteson's new booklet, "Good Health for Your Hair," shows how proper treatment can result in healthier, more attractive hair. To get a copy, write Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Doctors Sought For Rural Areas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — To meet America's shortage of primary health care physicians, an Institute of Medicine committee Wednesday called for financial incentives to encourage more doctors to enter the field and the underserved rural areas.

The panel said the supply of doctors is increasing rapidly in the United States and may be 60 percent greater in 1990 than today. But it said too many will be specialists and not enough will provide the basic, personal, relatively low-cost care most people need.

Only 44.8 percent of today's doctors provide primary services.

To induce more doctors to provide primary care, the committee recommended that physicians be paid the same by insurers for similar services whether they are general practitioners and family physicians or specialists.

Dr. E. Harvey Estes, the committee chairman from Duke University, said at a news conference many specialists now enjoy both roles — providing specialized services as well as primary service. He said the panel recommendation would force a doctor to choose one role or another.

Estes said, for example, that a family physician might charge $20 for stitching a child's minor leg laceration while a plastic surgeon might charge $100 for the same care.

"The real question is does this small laceration of the leg need the care of a plastic surgeon? We should allow the plastic surgeon to charge his additional fee if his services are indeed needed."

To determine if the services of a specialist are needed, the committee said the patient should first go to the primary care doctor and only go to a specialist if the primary physician or a second doctor recommends it.

Spotlighting the uneven distribution of doctors among the population, the committee said there are an estimated 46 million to 50 million people in rural areas or low income inner city areas inadequately served by physicians.

The panel recommended government and private medical insurance plans discontinue geographic differentials in payment levels.

"Primary care practitioners should be encouraged to serve underserved populations and they should be paid fairly no matter where they practice," the report said.

The Institute of Medicine is an arm of the private National Academy of Sciences. The study was financed by grants from two private foundations.

Animals Don't Always Stick With Their Own

By National Geographic

WASHINGTON — "Birds of a feather flock together" is not always true. A goose that became separated from its flock has moved in with a pig in a Maine farmyard, reports National Geographic World.

The magazine says the goose follows the animal everywhere. The pig will lie for hours while the goose walks along its back, cleaning the pig's bristles with its beak.

Hens have been known to "mother" abandoned kittens. On a farm in Iowa several years ago, a determined hen took charge of four kittens after driving the mother cat away.

Chickens, ducks, cats, and dogs all have served as "pets" for thoroughbred horses whose owners have found the high-strung animals to be more relaxed when they have a companion.

A decade ago a race horse at Belmont "adopted" a goat, watching over it by day and covering it with straw at night.

World cites a working farm dog in Germany that spent its free time as the playmate of a miniature pony.

The magazine says a similar bond has grown between an ape and a cat. The orangutan, being raised by two scientists in Borneo, cuddles their house cat which purrs with pleasure.

Examples abound. In Tallahassee, Fla., a stray dog once became a homeless kitten's guardian. The dog protected the kitten in traffic and used its body to shield the kitten in the rain.

At a New York animal shelter, a cat returned the favor by acting as "seeing eye" cat for a blind dog, leading it to the food dishes at mealtimes.

When an injured fawn was brought into an animal shelter in England, it was befriended by a cat and the two became inseparable. On this side of the ocean, a couple in Maryland found themselves with an extra mouth to feed after their cat adopted a lost fawn.

In San Antonio, they tell a not-so-tall tale of the lamb that used to guide a blind calf around a farm by bleating directions.

Other "odd couples" have included a raccoon and a bulldog, a German shepherd that took care of a bear cub, a fox and a boxer, a retriever and a rabbit, and two cats—one Siamese, the other Bengal tiger.

A woman in London was horrified to find her cat in the parakeet's cage, until she saw the bird sitting on the cat's head. Thereafter, the two became fast friends. Similarly, in a household in Maine a black cat and a budgie shared meals at the same plate.

Blind Cyclist Loves Outdoor Sensations

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The sounds and smells of nature delighted Tore Naerland as the blind adventurer and a partner pedaled their tandem bicycle along the cliff's edge of the Pacific.

"We listened to the music of the tides coming in and going back out and the music of the birds," said Naerland, 23, from Stavanger, Norway. "The air was fresh, and we could smell the trees. It was great."

The temperature was 50 degrees below zero when he and Torvald Tjaaland peddled out of Anchorage, Alaska, on April 1. Rain drenched them through Washington and into Oregon, where a trucker accidentally ran them off the road. They had six flat tires.

"We averaged 100 miles a day," Naerland said. Tjaaland is sighted and did the steering.

Tjaaland and Naerland spent their nights as guests of Norwegian consuls or friends in an itinerary arranged by their sponsors, the International Lions Club and the Norwegian Heritage Foundation-Sons of Norway. The sponsors flew them to Alaska as part of a program to help the blind.

Another pair of Norwegian bikers joined them in Oregon for the coastal ride.

As they passed the sea, a radio kept them up with the news. Occasionally, they listened to music. Joked Naerland in an interview Tuesday: "We like to listen to Johnny Cash when we pedal uphill and Elvis Presley down the hills."

The temperature was 80 when their 2,400-mile trip to San Diego ended Monday. Early Thursday, the two plan to take off by bike to New York and from there to Miami, ending their U.S. tour.

"Too many handicapped people feel sorry for themselves," said Naerland, who lost 95 percent of his vision as the result of an optic nerve disease at age 15. "We should get out and do things. We should be believe in ourselves."

Escapee Seeks Medical Care

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Joe Mendoza, who escaped from the Tom Green County Jail Monday, surrendered Wednesday in the presence of his lawyer and two San Angelo Standard-Times staff members.

Mendoza told Standard Times Managing Editor Charles Reddin and courthouse reporter Alan Sayre that he escaped so he could seek medical attention for his ear. He claimed he injured his ear during his arrest April 18.

Mendoza, 20, was jailed on indictments charging attempted murder and possession of a firearm on a licensed premise.

He said he had not received the medical attention he requested while confined in city and county lockups.

Felony escape charges were filed Monday against Mendoza and Jerry Don Stockstill of Lubbock after they fled from the enclosed roof exercise area of the jail.

Mendoza told the Standard Times in a copyright story in Wednesday afternoon editions that he separated from Stockstill immediately and does not know the whereabouts of 20-year-old fugitive.

Jail records show Mendoza was taken to a hospital emergency room three times and was visited by a doctor once since being jailed.

Suspected Drunk Driver Shoots Trucker In Leg

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — A Houston truck driver stopped a motorist he believed to be a drunk driver on Interstate 10 Wednesday and the driver shot the trucker in the leg.

Sheriff's investigator Steve Bodnar said truck driver William Thomas, 36, stopped a red automobile he saw weaving from lane to lane on the divided highway and radioed he was detaining the car's driver who appeared intoxicated.

However, the motorist shot Thomas in the leg and got away. Officers from Kendall and Bexar Counties later found the suspect hiding in some brush near the scene of the shooting and placed him in jail pending formal charges.

Thomas was treated for a leg wound at the Bexar County Hospital.

Briscoe To Grant 30-Day Stay Of Convicted Slayer's Death

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Wednesday he will grant a 30-day stay of execution for William David Hovila, scheduled to die Monday by drug injection.

A spokesman for Briscoe's office said the governor was telephoned the details of the case Wednesday and said he would grant the stay.

Hovila's mother had said she would consider asking the courts for a stay but none had been presented Wednesday afternoon to State District Judge John Vance.

Hovila, 30, of Dallas, was twice convicted of the 1973 capital murder of Dallas lawyer Henry J. McCluskey Jr., who was found robbed and shot twice in the back near a Dallas lake.

Jay Floyd, head of the governor's clemency office, noted that it has been traditional for Texas governors to grant such 30-day stays after all apparent court appeals have failed.

He said in researching all death cases from 1950, when the governor was first given the authority, to 1964, the last execution, all requests for reprieves were granted.

The 30-day delay can be granted by the governor without recommendation by any other person or body. After that reprieve, an unlimited number of stays may be granted upon recommendation of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and the governor's approval, Floyd said.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial after Hovila's first conviction, but the second jury also returned a guilty verdict and recommended the death penalty.

If the sentence is carried out in the early morning hours Monday at the Huntsville state prison, Hovila will be the first condemned man to die by lethal injection, the execution method chosen by the state legislature to replace the electric chair. Over a 40-year period, 361 persons died in the straight-backed oak chair built by convicts.

This time, the Department of Corrections plans to use sodium pentothal, a general anesthetic also known as "truth serum."

The injection will cause immediate loss of consciousness and then a progressive coma during which blood pressure and respiration decreases until death occurs.

Dope Charge Holds Father

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The father of one of two teenagers who claim they found almost a half million dollars buried on the father's ranch was arrested Tuesday night after a marijuana raid on a Corpus Christi motel.

The raid, conducted by several law enforcement agencies, netted 450 pounds of marijuana.

James Hiroms, 37, was arrested along with his brother, Donny Ray Hiroms, 36, and John W. Cundiff, 41. The three were arraigned Wednesday before U.S. Magistrate Philip Schraub, who set bond at $100,000 each. They were charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and taken to the Nueces County Jail.

Hiroms is the father of James Dean Bridges, who, along with Percy Arnold Garcia, was stopped by Waco police in early 1977 on a traffic violation.

Police searched the youths' brand-new Thunderbird automobile and found the cash in the trunk.

Since that time, several governmental agencies have laid claim to the money, which is in a Waco bank pending determination of its rightful owner.

Hiroms never claimed the money.

Judge Eyes Out-Of-Court Fees

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A Wyandotte County District Court judge says he will start assessing court costs in civil cases against lawyers whose last-minute out-of-court settlements result in costly delays.

Judge O.Q. Clafin III made the announcement after reviewing his case load. Clafin said he had set 50 civil jury trials for hearing in the past 10 months but all but three of them were settled out of court, some as late as the day the trial was to start.

"A lot of them have settled on Monday morning when we were to go to trial that day, some of them have been on Friday afternoon and others have come during the weekend, and the lawyers called me at home to tell me," the judge said.

"That way my Mondays and Tuesdays are idle, but if I had been alerted earlier I could have set a divorce case or pretrial conference or something which doesn't take long to set up," Clafin said.

The judge said in a letter to lawyers Tuesday that they would be assessed court costs if they settled out of court within a week before the scheduled start of a jury trial.

Court Administrator Richard D. Shannon said 232 district court civil cases were settled out of court last year and cost the county thousands of dollars in juror fees and other court costs.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I'm interested in buying tax-exempt bonds but would like to know how safe they are. I recently read about a city's credit ratings being reduced. Does that mean the bonds are not as safe as they were?

A. "Safety" is a relative term, except, perhaps, in the case of our federal government bonds, which must be considered the ultimate in safety.

Municipal bonds are rated, just as are the mortgages of corporations. If a rating agency says one tax-exempt issue is AAA, it means the bond is considered "safer" than one rated AA, or A or BBB. Municipal bonds are bought mainly through brokerage firms, and if you want help in analyzing the safety of one bond or another it would make sense to consult a brokerage firm that has a municipal bond department, or a banking house that specializes in municipal bonds.

Finally, there are different types of municipal bonds, which enjoy differing levels of endorsement by their issuing municipalities or public authorities. Some bonds are backed by the full taxing powers of the state or city; some enjoy only limited endorsement. Some bonds are issued for specific projects — sewers, water supply, highways — and are backed only by the revenues from those projects. Some bonds are issued by a town to raise money to build a plant and thus attract a specific industry and are backed only by the company for which the plant was built. If you want to find out what stands behind a tax-exempt bond you must ask someone in a position to know.

Q. We are in our early 50s and in doubt as to whether we are on the right financial track. We can invest about $300 a month. In addition we will have some money coming out of Federal Land Bank bonds soon. Our money is now in savings, credit unions (both heavily taxed), and in E bonds and insurance.

A. There's nothing in your program which can be labeled as "wrong track." However, there is an obvious lack of any form of investment geared to offset inflation, except, of course ownership of your home.

Mentioning, or suggesting common stocks — against the market background of the last 10 or 12 years — is somewhat like suggesting that one go out and start banging his head against a stone wall. Nevertheless, I don't think you are justified in ignoring equities 100 percent. If I may assume that you are about a dozen years from retirement (from the day when you will turn to this money for support) then it is also fair to assume that over these years solid stock prices will reflect the cheapened dollar. It is even a better assumption that dollar dividend payout will be higher than it is today. (Your return envelope includes a list of basic stocks.) Furthermore, by owning no stocks at all you and your wife are passing up $22 annually in tax-free dividends a year. It won't buy you a new car, but it's better than having holes in your shoes in wet weather.

Q. We are getting along in age and want to protect our children and grandchildren from tax problems with our estate. How can we do this?

A. By consulting an estate lawyer or tax expert who also can advise you about the laws of your state. Be careful about unsolicited advice from friends about gifts, trusts, trust funds, etc. If you really want to spare your children problems, don't listen to uninformed hearsay. Go to an expert who knows or can get to know your particular needs.

Shulsky welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Nuclear Weapon Malfunctions

YUCCA FLAT, Nev. (UPI) — A nuclear weapon buried 2,100 feet underground at the Nevada Test Site malfunctioned Wednesday and failed to explode on signal.

The Department of Energy first announced that the weapon, code-named Transom, had been detonated at 8 a.m. PDT, but later officials acknowledged that there had been a failure.

"There was no nuclear yield," controller Troy Wade said, meaning the device did not explode. The weapon was to have had a yield of 20 to 150 kilotons.

"There is no possibility of any additional explosion, so there is no hazard to anyone on or off the Nevada Test Site," Wade said.

David Jackson, information officer for the Department of Energy, said electronic signals needed for detonation were transmitted from the control point and reached the device but they did not trigger it.

It was not the first time a nuclear test had failed.

"We have had some that did not function in the past but it is very unusual," Jackson said. He did not give the number of similar malfunctions in the past.

Jackson said the reason for Wednesday's malfunction probably would not be made public because of the classified nature of nuclear testing.

"As with any testing program, scientists will attempt to learn why there was no nuclear yield," a Department of Energy statement said.

The test would have been the fifth announced this year, the 489th publicly acknowledged nuclear blast at the Nevada site and the 611th U.S. test since the beginning of the atomic age.

Airline Inks Largest Purchase Order In Aviation History

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixteen years ago, Singapore International Airlines—then known as Malaysia-Singapore Airlines—bought its first jet aircraft. On Wednesday, the airline signed the largest purchase order in the history of commercial aviation.

The order—placed with Boeing Co. for 13 747s and six 727s—easily surpassed a $780 million deal Eastern signed last month with Europe's Airbus Industry. And it shows just how intent SIA is upon adding to its already remarkable record for expansion.

"You don't get responsible, serious organizations placing contracts just for the history books," J.Y.M. Pillay, chairman of the state-owned airline, said at the signing. Pillay's airline has been doubling in size every four years lately and is now the second-largest intercontinental airline in Asia.

Since that first jet—a British Comet—was purchased in 1962, SIA's revenues have grown from about $6 million annually to about $463 million last year.

The revenues came from SIA routes throughout Asia and to the Middle East and Europe. Last month, SIA began cargo service to San Francisco via Honolulu.

Medical Students Fight Tuition Hike

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A group of medical students has won a temporary restraining order against a sharp increase in tuition fees at the University of Kansas.

Judge Cordell D. Meeks of the Wyandotte County District Court issued the order Tuesday, then disqualified himself from further proceedings because he is a member of the board of directors of the university's alumni association.

Annual tuition would go from $1,500 to $4,000 for state residents and from $3,000 to $8,000 for non-residents under the three-year accelerated medical program, and from $1,125 to $3,000 and $2,250 to $6,000 under the regular four-year program.

The 227 students petitioned the court on grounds that the increase, effective June 1, was designed "to force medical school graduates to practice in Kansas."

The fee change, signed into law April 14 by Gov. Robert F. Bennett, provides that after graduation a doctor would be paid back for the cost of tuition — one year of tuition for each year practiced in Kansas.

Students agreeing to practice in medically under-served areas of the state also would receive monthly stipends of $500 while in school.

and plans to add passenger service to the route early next spring. Routes to other American cities are restricted by the Bilateral Pact on air routes, but SIA intends to appeal the exclusion.

The company attributes most of its success to one reason. "The most important factor is the geographical location of Singapore," says Managing Director Lim Chin Beng. Although Singapore itself is small, its central location offers access to the Middle East, Europe and Asia, with North America just a long hop over the Pacific.

SIA officials are counting on continued success to pay for the new planes. Twenty-five percent of the cost is expected to come from operating profits, with the remainder coming from loans from commercial banks and the U.S. Export-Import Bank and from the sale of the line's existing fleet of seven 747s.

"We do not envision any difficulty in selling our present fleet of 747s," Pillay said, adding that SIA already has had discussions with other airlines. When they are sold, some of the profits will be enormous: Because of the line's six-year depreciation policy, the book value of three of the jets will be zero, but the sales price will be the going rate.

The planes that will replace them will be an updated model of the 350-passenger 747 with a more powerful Pratt Whitney engine that will burn 3 percent less fuel than present models. The jet engine order, worth $120 million, will provide jobs for 1,000 persons at Pratt Whitney's Connecticut plant, according to Harry J. Gray, chairman of United Technologies Corp., Pratt Whitney's parent company.

The order also will provide jobs in Seattle, where Boeing is headquartered. According to Boeing Chairman T.A. Wilson, 22,000 workers will get two more months of work on the Boeing production line, which now has a two-year backlog.

Two of the 747s are to be delivered next year, six more in 1980 and one each in 1981 and 1982. The remaining three planes are on option for delivery between 1983 and 1985. The first four 727s will arrive next year, with the other two for delivery after 1979 if SIA exercises its option.

By 1980, when the bulk of the 747s have arrived and the older planes have been sold, the average age of SIA's fleet will be 1.7 years—one of the most modern in the world.

Disabled Coalition Seeks To Aid Ailing, Aged

NEW YORK (UP) — The 13-year-old blond athlete playing football in the streets of Brooklyn jumped for a pass and landed on a car antenna. The rod pierced his right eye, entered his brain and temporarily paralyzed one side of his body.

Thirteen years later, Alan Van Praag is one of about 15 million physically disabled Americans who, thanks to medical progress, survived accidents that years ago would have been fatal.

"By the year 2000 there will be one physically disabled, chronically ill or over-65 person for every able bodied individual," said Dr. Frank Bowe, director of the American Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities Inc.

The phenomenon of more and more physically disabled people, matched by a fledgling political movement born in the 1960s, has given rise to the coalition's Washington-based effort to ensure that disabled people have an equal opportunity for education, jobs and decent housing.

Persons with physical impairments are handicapped only when they're unable to deal with the environment, said Bowe, a psychologist who is deaf. He spoke in a telephone interview translated to him by a listener.

He emphasized that adequate federal legislation was passed in the 1970s to make buildings and transportation accessible to those confined to wheelchairs and outlawing discrimination on the basis of disability. Those laws still are not fully implemented, he said.

The desire of many disabled people, like Van Praag, is to be treated "like anyone else."

Now a maritime trial attorney, Van Praag walks with a limp, is blind in one eye and has limited use of his left arm. Through emotional support from his father and friends, plus constant physical exercise and intellectual perseverance, he has overcome the psychological horror of the incident that changed his life.

"I don't consider myself disabled," he told a visitor to his Wall Street office. "I can't clip the nails on my right hand — that's the one thing in the world I can't do."

Van Praag insisted the institute of Rehabilitation Medicine at the New York University Medical Center was crucial to his recovery.

Better known as the "Rusk Institute" after its founder, Dr. Howard A. Rusk, the institute has led the nation in efforts to mainstream the physically disabled into society. The vocational services and placement departments set up interviews and work to land patients in jobs when they leave the hospital.

Its biggest obstacle is public attitude — a blend of ignorance, cruelty and unwanted pity.

Rosalind Zuger, the placement director, said that in a society in which the emphasis is on beauty and perfection, people feel someone physically disabled is unsightly, "something not pleasant."

Moreover, most Americans don't have the exposure to disabled persons that they have with other minorities, unless someone in the family or a neighbor has a physical problem, she said.

"It's the same as with other prejudices, you have to get to know a person," Mrs. Zuger said.

Meyer S. Siegel, the institute's vocational services director, said the element of performance and achievement in American thinking prompts the public to feel sorry on impulse for someone who many not be able to do things in the normal way.

The discovery of this "innate prejudice" was very painful for Van Praag. "It's not expressed. They're (the general public) afraid to hurt you. But they assume you can't do what other people do," he said.

Recalling his adjustment to the accident, the 31-year-old lawyer said, "It was a shattering blow to me not to be able to do anything. I was an athlete — three letter man (in high school) — a tennis pro in my spare time and fairly attractive to women."

It was "hard to face rejection from the female sex," Van Praag, who is now married, said. "I had never been rejected."

He called his life from 18 to 22 "a void," a time when "I missed an awful lot. I'm trying to recapture it now by travel, seeing different places."

But Van Praag did gain something during that time. Describing himself as "highly motivated," Van Praag explained how after he was hurt he was a better student. "I don't think I would have been a lawyer without the accident," he said.

Shevchenko's Wife Kills Self At Home In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — The wife of the Soviet U.N. official who defected in New York committed suicide in her Moscow residence, her son said Wednesday.

Well-informed Soviet sources said Mrs. Leongina Shevchenko, 49, died Monday from an overdose of sleeping pills. Her body was found in a closet Tuesday in the apartment she shared with her daughter, Anya, 16.

In New York, her husband claimed Mrs. Shevchenko was kept from speaking with him about his decision not to go home. He said the Soviets forced her to return to Moscow.

"The death of my wife has been a heavy blow for me," said Arkady Shevchenko in a statement released through his lawyer. "I did not even have a chance to talk with her after my decision to break with the Soviet government because — and I am convinced of this — they forced her to return to Moscow."

Their son Gennady, who like his father entered the Soviet foreign service, said his mother "was in a terrible state" after her husband refused to return to the Soviet Union in early April. Neither he nor his mother was able to speak with Shevchenko after he announced his decision, the younger Shevchenko said.

"I want to speak with him," he added. Shevchenko, who left his U.N. post as undersecretary general for political and Security Council affairs and sought permission to remain in the United States, appealed in his statement for help from the U.S. government to bring his daughter to the United States.

"My daughter, who is only 16 years old, has been deprived of her mother, but she still has her father," he said.

Shevchenko, 47, locked his office and stopped coming to work April 6. Later he let it be known that he had refused an order from the Soviet government to come home on an official visit.

His lawyer said at the time that Mrs. Shevchenko left with Anya on the same plane her husband was to have taken. She had been escorted to the airport by Soviet diplomats, but she told authorities she was returning to the Soviet Union of her own free will, he said.

The Soviets blamed Shevchenko's refusal to return on a "frameup" by U.S. intelligence agents. There were reports that the diplomat had a drinking problem and was having an affair. There was also speculation that he was a secret American agent.

In Moscow, Mrs. Shevchenko told reporters she had returned for fear the Americans would seize her and her daughter.

"He is a marvelous father and husband. He cannot live without his work and his family. I am 100 percent sure he will be returning," she said.

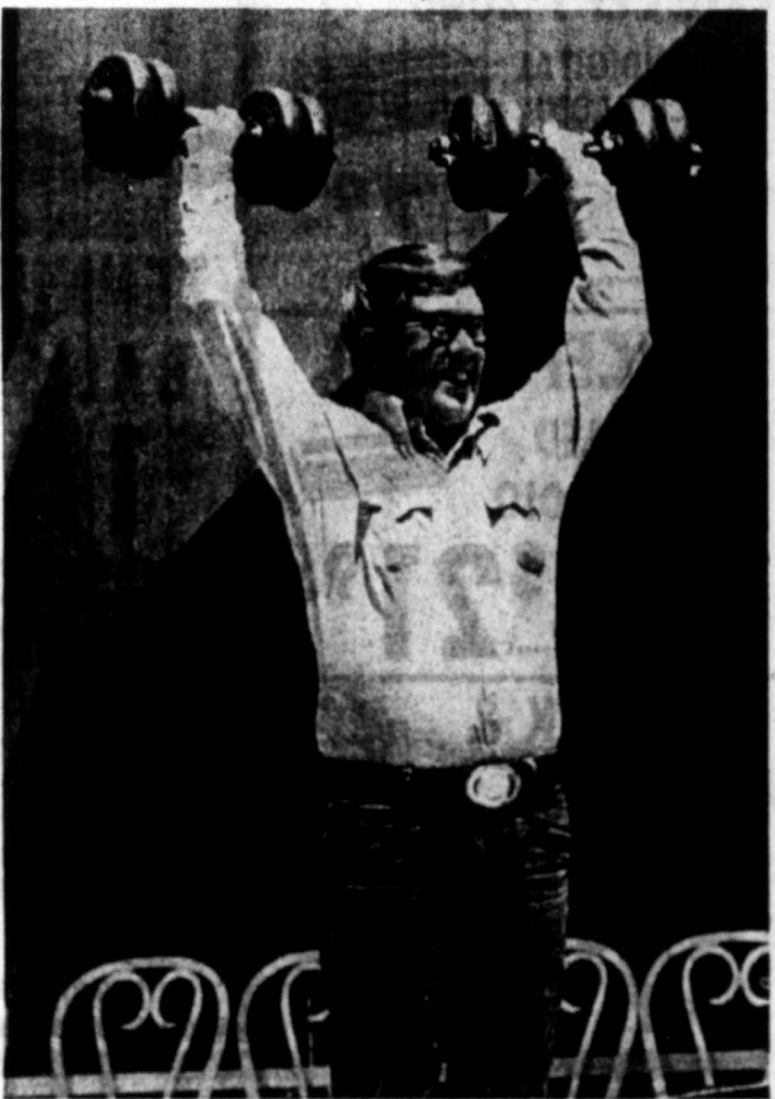

Victor Louis, Moscow correspondent of the London Evening News who is known to have close contact with the Kremlin, reported that it appeared Mrs. Shevchenko took her own life "because she could not bear the Moscow explanation that Mr. Shevchenko was involved with American intelligence."

Shevchenko had explained his refusal by saying he had "serious differences" with the Soviet government. But he said he had assurances that his family would not suffer as a consequence of his decision.

Shevchenko announced April 26 that he had reached agreement with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on termination of his U.N. service. The United Nations said he settled for $76,116.

'Junk Call' Commercials Outlawed

AUSTIN (AP) — "Junk calls" that bring non-interruptible advertising spots into Texas homes have been outlawed by the Public Utility Commission.

It knocked out the unwanted calls as part of some 70 changes in its substantive and procedural rules.

Such calls are dialed automatically and can't be cut off by the recipient until the message ends. Some devices automatically redial a number if the recipient hangs up before the recorded message is fully played out.

The new rule prohibits telephone companies from allowing the calls over their networks.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. indicated such equipment can be connected without its knowledge. It said, however, it would disconnect any such devices it can locate. Bell said customers should report the messages so that the equipment can be traced.

Other rules adopted by the commission require utilities to:

—Inform applicants for residential services of the lowest priced available service upon request.

—Notify customers who are dissatisfied with the resolution of a complaint of the process for carrying the matter to the commission.

Man Challenges Broken Glass

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (AP) — Glass shattered in all directions and a trickle of blood seeped from his stomach as Wilbur O'Diem swung a hammer and smashed a milk bottle held against his chest.

"Little bit off on that one," quipped the 49-year-old O'Diem.

Some of the shards had dropped on a blanket stretched out in front of O'Diem. He threw himself onto the glass.

He rose smiling, with no further damage to his body.

For an encore, "The Glass Man of Stanfield" slotted a double-edged razor blade into a wooden block. He rolled over the half-inch-high exposed blade three times, and again emerged unscathed.

"Too much cushion here in the grass," he complained. "You can see that I bent the blade a little bit but when I do it on a concrete or hard floor, the trick works better."

O'Diem, after his demonstration in Casa Grande, said he discovered his talent 24 years ago in Dayton, Ohio, when he fell off a picket fence and landed in a pile of glass but was not hurt.

"I decided then that if I could fall on glass when I was drunk and not get cut, it'd be nice if I could condition myself to do it sober," he said.

"Then I began sleeping with all the broken glass I could find so that I could condition my body to relax against the sharp edges."

O'Diem said he gave up alcohol long ago, and was injured seriously only once — while doing his falling stunt. "There was one piece I didn't see and it cut me right across the heart," he said.

"Well, people kept telling me to quit before I killed myself, so I did. But after a while, there wasn't any more food on the table. That's why I'm back at it again."

O'Diem has done his glass and razor tricks for just about any street-corner gathering willing to pay. More recently, he's been appearing at a Stanfield tavern, and hopes for nightclub and carnival billings in the future.

"I get a Social Security check and a disability pension from the Veterans Administration but it's hard to survive on $270 a month," he says.

He considers his tricks every bit as dangerous as those performed by Evel Knievel.

"The only difference is that he does his thing and I do mine," says O'Diem.

Bank Teller Averts Alleged Scheme

Some heady work by a Wolforth bank teller may have thwarted a 19-year-old city bank employee's plans to allegedly steal nearly $80,000 in cash and checks from a local bank, investigators say.

James Gaylon Useton, whose address was listed as Route 3, Box 2, Lubbock, went to jail Monday for his alleged role in the scheme.

He is being held in lieu of $50,000 bond, charged with felony theft.

Lubbock County deputies and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrested the young man Monday at the American Bank of Commerce in Wolforth, where he allegedly presented $7,500 cash to a teller at the bank.

According to reports, Useton told the ABC teller he wanted to exchange the $7,500 for different denominations. The bank employee, Bonnie Threadgill, told investigators she became suspicious because the money, in a Lubbock National Bank bag, was in wrappers stamped with the names or initials of local businesses.

Deputies, FBI agents and LNB representatives were summoned to Wolforth. After Useton reportedly told them several different stories of how he got the money, he was arrested.

As of today, lawmen had recovered about $19,000 cash. Investigators said checks totaling more than $59,000 had been burned.

Deputies said Useton had worked at LNB's printing shop for six to eight weeks. That part of the building is adjacent to the vault which contains night deposits. Lawmen theorized that someone in the area of the vault could have learned the combination by watching when it was opened each morning.

The suspect also reportedly had a key to the bank.

Police responded to an alarm at the bank about 2:30 a.m. Saturday. However, when they arrived, they reportedly found nothing disturbed and no sign of illegal entry. A bank representative who arrived a short time later, reset the alarm and it did not go off, so deputies theorize the night-deposit vault already had been closed.

According to Deputy Ed Barclay, the alarm would have sounded when the basement vault was opened, and the person who used the combination to open it possibly still was in the deserted part of the building when police arrived. Reportedly, officers did not go into the basement area where the small vault is located.

Bankers' suspicions were not aroused until they received the call Monday, because the vault contained several deposits made during the rest of the weekend. After contacting a security firm, bank officials learned that nine deposits made by the agency on behalf of businesses were not in the deposit vault.

Three of the businesses were those whose names were on the wrappers presented at the Wolforth bank Monday, investigators said.

In addition to the $7,500 at that bank, lawmen said they recovered a paper sack containing $400 from the suspect's car and an additional $7,700 cash from his home.

Lawmen reportedly recovered enough evidence from ashes to show the checks had been burned.

The big mistake in the crime was leaving the wrappers on the money, remarked Barclay today. Deputies said they would have had nothing else to lead them to the missing money without the identifying seals.

According to Capt. J.B. Douglas, deputies believe they have accounted for all the stolen money. However, they are basing that assumption on the records kept by the security company which made the deposits. There are no such records of individuals who might have made deposits during that time.

Auto Sales Help Hike Consumer Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strong burst of auto sales contributed to a 2 percent increase in consumer spending in April, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

Total retail sales for the month were $83.6 billion, the third monthly increase after a 2 percent drop in January, the department said.

Part of that increase reflects the continuing rise in prices due to inflation. However, the figures also represent growth above the expected inflation rate for April and coincide with other indicators showing increased economic activity.

Auto sales in April rose 6.7 percent to $13.4 billion after a slow start this year. Auto buyers spent 14 percent more in April than they did in April of 1977.

Building materials, hardware and garden supply stores also had a strong month, increasing sales by 6.3 percent to $3.6 billion, the department said.

However, sales of furniture and other home furnishings declined 2.3 percent to $2.8 billion and were 1 percent below the level for April 1977.

Motorists spent $4.7 billion at gas stations in April, a decline of 4.2 percent from March but about the same amount as they spent in April 1977.

General merchandise and department stores increased sales by 1.2 percent and food stores by 2.1 percent last month.

Total retail sales were 9.3 percent higher than in April 1977, while prices climbed about 7 percent.

The April increase followed gains of 1.1 percent in March and 3 percent in February. The figures are adjusted to take into account seasonal changes in buying patterns.

Truck Hits School Bus

CHANTILLY, Va. (AP) — A dump-truck crashed into a school bus Wednesday, injuring 20 persons, 17 of them high school pupils.

Two youngsters and three adults were hospitalized.

The accident occurred during the morning rush hour as the bus driver was turning left from a major highway at an intersection that had no traffic lights, said police spokeswoman Betty Bosarge.

The driver of an oncoming dump truck avoided hitting the bus broadside by cutting his wheels sharply in an attempt to overturn the truck, she said, but hit the bus in the rear.

The collision knocked the bus into an oncoming pickup truck, which clipped a car.

Of the drivers, only the dump-truck driver was unhurt, according to hospital officials.

Savings for a rainy day makes good sense at Plains.

Everybody talks about the weather. And when it rains on the Southern High Plains that's really something to talk about.

Everybody talks about saving some money for the future. For the children's college expenses. For a special vacation. For emergencies. For security. But, like the weather, talking about savings doesn't cause anything to happen.

Plains National Bank can help you make something happen about your savings. With passbook savings accounts and certificates of deposit. Both pay the highest interest permitted by law. We'll even draft your checking account monthly to help you automatically set aside a portion of your earnings for that future need.

Next time you want to talk about the weather, talk to your rain maker. Next time you want to talk about savings, talk to Plains National Bank.

Princess To End Stormy 18-Year Marriage

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret will dissolve her 18-year marriage to Lord Snowdon despite Britain's old taboo against royal divorce.

Kensington Palace, home of the 47-year-old younger sister of Queen Elizabeth II, made this official announcement Wednesday.

"Her royal highness, the Princess Margaret, Countess of Snowdon, and the Earl of Snowdon after two years of separation have now agreed that their marriage should formally be ended. Accordingly her royal highness will start the necessary legal proceedings."

The last member of Britain's royal family to divorce was the Earl of Harewood, Margaret's cousin, whose marriage was dissolved in 1967. There have been no divorces in recent times in the immediate royal family, but the subject has been controversial among British royalty since the time of the much-married King Henry VIII in the 16th century.

Princess Margaret, sixth in line to the throne, split up with her photographer husband two years ago. Since then, she has been in hot water in Parliament, the press and the public over her friendship with socialite Roddy Llewellyn, an aspiring singer 17 years her junior singer.

Rumors that Margaret wanted a divorce so she could marry Llewellyn were cooled, however, when a spokesman for the princess said she had "no plans for re-marriage."

Llewellyn, a brewery heir who once lived on a hippy commune and has shared well-publicized holidays with Margaret on the Caribbean island of Mustique, was vacationing Wednesday in Tangiers, his agent said.

The princess was recuperating from suspected gastroenteritis, an ailment of the digestive tract, in London's King Edward VII Hospital, where she was admitted a week ago.

Snowden, arriving at a London hotel for an arts and design award dinner, told reporters: "I hope you will give support and encouragement to Princess Margaret when she comes out of hospital and goes about her duties again." He declined further comment.

The Kensington Palace announcement, confirmed by the queen's Buckingham Palace, said lawyers for the couple have been in close touch laying the groundwork for the divorce, and "formal legal proceedings will begin within days."

"The princess is suing for divorce. This is a technicality, one party has to start the proceedings. The marriage has broken down and the couple have lived apart for two years. These are obviously the grounds for divorce," said a spokesman.

Margaret first met her commoner husband, Antony Armstrong-Jones, at a wedding 20 years ago.

She was still smarting from the scars of her romance with Group Capt. Peter Townsend, a Battle of Britain fighter pilot she was prevented from marrying.

Her family, the Church of England and the government opposed the match because the dashing captain was divorced and Margaret's ruling sister was temporal head of the church, which forbids re-marriage in church of divorced persons.

Then as now in her decisions about her personal life, Margaret was torn between duty and her own happiness. But her rebound romance with Armstrong-Jones seemed to make things right for a while. Margaret and "Tony" were married at Westminster Abbey on May 6, 1960 and the queen elevated Armstrong-Jones to the nobility with the title, Earl of Snowdon, which he retains.

The first six years of marriage were happy, by all accounts, but then friends began telling of sharp arguments.

When they separated in March 1976, Snowden said he was "desperately sad in every way that this had to happen." He prayed for the understanding of his two children, expressed love and respect for the rest of the royal family and wished Princess Margaret "every happiness."

His relationship with Buckingham Palace remains cordial. He was asked to take the first official pictures of the queen with her first grandchild, Princess Anne's son.

Recent gossip columns have reported a growing friendship between Lucy Lindsay-Hogg, a divorcee filmmaker, and Snowden, 48, whose photographs appear in the Sunday Times of London and many leading magazines.

The children of Margaret and Snowden

— David Viscount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14 — will remain in their mother's custody. Lord Snowden will have access, it was announced.

Margaret gets $100,000 annually from the state for her royal duties. A divorce will not affect that stipend, although members of Parliament have said she should give up public life and stop burdening the public purse. Her husband gets nothing from the state.

Divorce has been controversial for British royalty since Henry VIII broke from the Roman Catholic church and set up the Church of England so he could divorce the first of his six wives, Catherine of Aragon.

The uncrowned King Edward VIII, later known as the Duke of Windsor, gave up his right to the throne in 1936 because of opposition to his proposed wedding to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, a divorced American. He later married her and she became the Duchess of Windsor.

Zoo Designs New Villa For Gorillas

CINCINNATI (AP) — Gorillas at the Cincinnati Zoo are running around in a new open-air home designed to relieve the boredom of life in a cage.

"One of the things we've been guilty of in zoo design is that we've provided all the comforts, but we've not relieved the boredom for the animals," Cincinnati Zoo Director Ed Maruska said Wednesday. "By taking the stress out of the exhibit, we've created boredom."

"A bored gorilla might sleep more or overeat or adopt certain habits."

Maruska admits he doesn't know how the gorillas will react to the stage-like crescent plain, which opened to the public last weekend.

The new gorilla environment is the one of the largest of its kind in North America. The complex is larger than a football field, and the area inhabited by the gorillas is 60 feet by 200 feet.

The Cincinnati Zoo holds the world record in live gorilla births — 10 since 1970. Fourteen gorillas currently reside at the zoo.

Zoo officials hope the gorillas will operate as a family group in the new display. "It's going to be important that we work in getting the animals living harmoniously," Maruska said. "So far there's been the normal process of the male asserting his authority in the area. There have been some quarrels, but some fighting occurs even in the best of families."

"The gorillas are still kind of shy because they have been caged so long. It's going to take some time, but they are already more relaxed than they were."

Not all the gorillas will be moving immediately into the complex. The oldest — 28-year-old King Tut — and some of the baby gorillas will remain in the old Ape House.

The first time the gorillas were allowed to explore the environment several of the smaller animals, fleeing the male gorilla Hatori, jumped into a 14 1/2-foot-wide moat separating them from spectators. Hot wires supplement the moat as an extra security precaution.

The environment still bears little resemblance to a jungle. There are a few trees and some bamboo plants. The trees are protected by railings and hot wires, or the gorillas would break them up.

Committee Okays Bond Interest Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee approved legislation Wednesday to allow the treasury to raise the interest on savings bonds.

Under present law, the interest on the small bonds that people buy individually and through payroll deductions is limited to 6 percent.

The Treasury had told the committee it has no immediate plan to raise the interest, but would like the authority to do so if necessary to keep pace with rising interest yields on other investments.

The bill, which now goes to the House, also would give the Treasury authority to sell an additional $10 billion in long-term securities above the 4 1/2 percent interest ceiling generally applying to such bonds.

Also approved was a measure to extend through Sept. 30 the $752 billion ceiling on the public debt. Without congressional action, it would drop on July 31 to $400 billion, well below the actual debt.

Riding Clubs Meet Slated At Paducah

Votes By Area Members Of Congress Recorded

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Apr. 28 through May 3.

HOUSE

FEDERAL PAY Rejected, 172 for and 210 against, an amendment to limit to 5.5 percent the pay hike slated for military personnel and federal white collar employees in fiscal 1979. The vote left authority in the budget for at least a six percent "comparability" raise for some two million military and 1.5 million civilian employees. The amendment would have saved, and estimated $255 million in payroll costs. It was proposed to H Con Res 559, the congressional budget resolution setting recommended spending limits to govern later consideration of individual money bills. The measure was headed toward final passage and conference with the Senate.

Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Tex., the sponsor, called the amendment necessary to fight inflation. "If we are not willing to bit the bullet, so to speak, within the federal government, I see no reason to ask the America industry or American labor...to be willing to take lower pay raises."

Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Tex., an opponent asked: "Why should we get a pay ceiling on federal workers alone? Why not pick out other groups? Why not doctors or plumbers or lawyers or mechanics?"

Members voting "yea" favored the cap on federal pay.

Reps. James Collins, R-3, Jim Mattox, D-5, Bill Archer, R-7, James Wright, D-12, Jack Hightower, D-13, Omar Burleson, D-17, George Mahon, D-19, and Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-1, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Ray Roberts, D-4, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, W.R. Poage, D-11, John Young, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Barbara Jordan, D-18, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Robert Krueger, D-21, and Dale Milford, D-24, voted "nay."

Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Olin

Teague, D-6, Richard White, D-16, Bob Gammage D-22, Abraham Kazen, D-23 and Rep. Harold Runnels, D-2, did not vote.

DEFENSE SPENDING Rejected, 142 for and 262 against, an amendment to add $2.4 billion to the fiscal 1979 budget authority for defense spending. The money was to fund construction of another nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. It was in addition to $127.4 billion already proposed in the 1979 congressional budget resolution (H Con Res 559, see vote above). The $127.4 billion represents the budget "authority." The amount to be actually appropriated, which cannot exceed later in the year.

Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., the sponsor said the additional money is needed because "frankly, I am worried today about the defense of our country."

Rep. Robert Giomo, D-Conn., an opponent said: "By holding the line on add-ons, whether they be in defense or in other areas of the federal budget, we will begin to get some discipline on spending."

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Teague, Archer, Poage, Wright, Hightower, Young, de la Garza, Burleson, Mahon, Gonzalez, Krueger, Lujan, Gammage and Milford voted "yea."

Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle and Jordan voted "nay."

White, Runnels, and Kazen did not vote.

PRISONERS' RIGHTS Excluded, 227 for and 132 against, adult prisoners from a bill designed to insure the civil rights of certain disadvantaged citizens. The bill (HR 9400) gives the U.S. attorney general the power to sue to remedy abuses of such institutionalized persons as wayward children, the mentally retarded, the elderly, the chronically ill and the handicapped. The bill, which affects local, state or federal institutions, was sent to the Senate. This vote excluded adult but not juvenile prisoners from its scope.

Rep. Allen Ertel, D-Pa., a supporter, said that prisoners already have "every basic right that any other American citizen has as far as the right to redress and petition the courts is concerned."

Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., an opponent, said that in "outstanding unjust cases" of prisoners being abused the bill "offers some hope that their constitutional rights will be observed..."

Members voting "yea" favored excluding adult prisoners from the bill.

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Archer, Pickle, Poage, Wright, Young, de la Garza, Mahon and Milford voted "yea."

Brooks, Jordan, Lujan, and Gonzalez voted "nay."

Teague, Eckhardt, Hightower, White, Burleson, Krueger, Gammage, Runnels, and Kazen did not vote.

OSHA Confirmed, 96 for and 33 against, Bertram R. Cottine to serve on the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, the panel that oversees the much-criticized Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). Some senators viewed Cottine, a 31-year-old activist lawyer once associated with Ralph Nader, as a symbol of over-zealousness by OSHA.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., a supporter, said Cottine is "committed to making the commission truly responsible to the needs of America's workers and America's industry."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, an opponent, said Cottine's appointment would tilt the commission against business because his "sympathies clearly and unequivocally have been on the side of labor."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, voted "yea."

Sen. John Tower, R, Sen. Harrison Schmidt, R, voted "nay."

Sen. Peter Dominici, R, did not vote.

This is a Barney special...and I mean special! Just smoke one of my tender Piggly Wiggly turkeys for a picnic or for a party. Everyone will just love it. All you need is a covered grill, charcoal and one of my boy's plump tender birds.

Use a 10-15 pound turkey. Baste it well with cooking oil then sprinkle with garlic salt and pepper. Place a few sprigs of celery tops and parsley in the cavity. To keep the turkey moist, wrap it in cheese cloth before smoking and baste with oil or butter frequently while it is on the grill.

Prepare the grill by putting charcoal to one side then cook the turkey on the other side of the grill. Cook for about 4 hours...use a thermometer for the best results. You'll love it!

RAINES COOPER

Top Students Honored

LEVELLAND (Special) — Darrel Raines is valedictorian of the 1978 graduating class at Leveland High School and Karen Cooper is salutatorian. Raines, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Raines, finished with a 97.01 average. Miss Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cooper, had a 96.08 average.

HOWARD PRICE

City Educator To Be Honored

Howard Price, who has served as principal at five Lubbock schools, will be honored Sunday at a retirement reception hosted by the Coronado High School faculty from 2-4 p.m. in the Coronado High School cafeteria.

Price, who has been director of secondary education of the Lubbock Independent School District since 1970, is completing 41 years as a teacher, coach and administrator. His teaching career includes 33 years in Lubbock and experience in elementary, junior high and senior high school levels.

His first job in education was as an elementary teacher at Post in 1935, where he advanced to high school head coach. He coached a year at Crane before coming to Lubbock in 1943 as assistant coach for Lubbock High School.

He also coached at Hutchinson Junior High and Overton Elementary Schools.

He served as the first principal for Wolfarth Elementary, Matthews Junior High, Wilson Junior High and Coronado High School. He also was principal for Lubbock High School in 1930.

Respiratory Therapy Program Slated

LEVELLAND (Special) — Final testing and interviews for admission into the respiratory therapy program at South Plains College are scheduled Monday.

Interviews will begin at 9 a.m. on the fourth floor classroom at St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock. The 15-month program begins its summer term May 31.

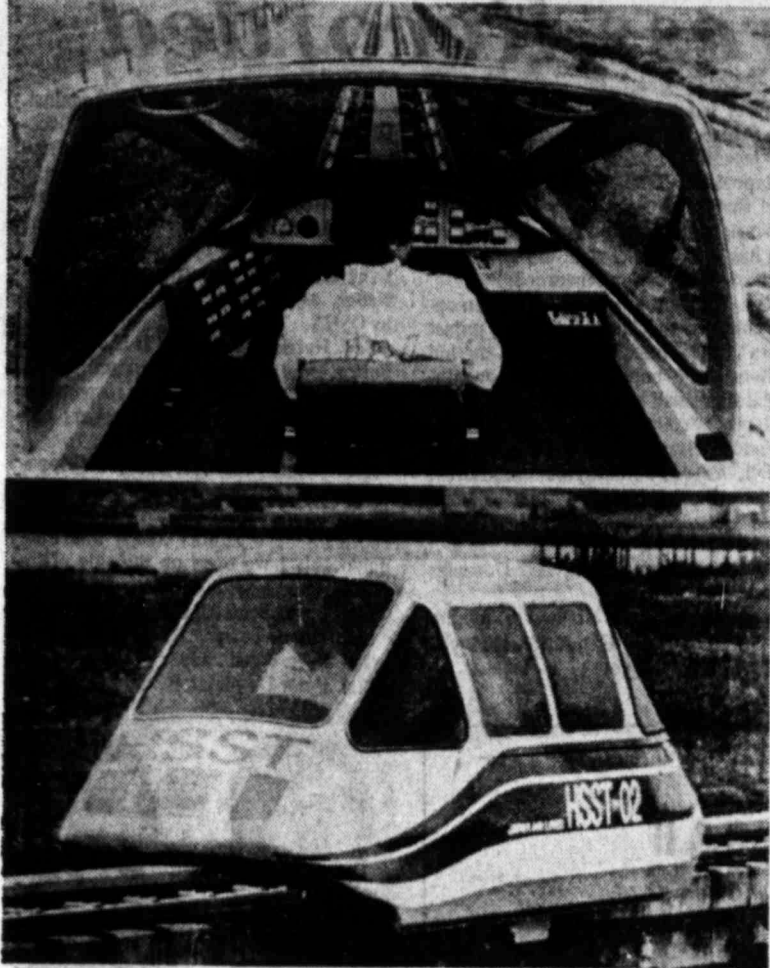

Students completing the freshman year will be eligible to receive a certificate of proficiency and will be eligible for certification as a respiratory technician. On completion of the full two-year program, students will be granted an associate in applied science degree and will be able to take the American Registry of Respiratory Therapists examination for certification.

OFFSHORE WEALTH

Though offshore drilling rigs abound off California, the richest oil deposits yet found on the U.S. continental shelf are in the Gulf of Mexico, where thousands of wells now produce oil. Seismic studies suggest possibly rich oil fields in the seabed off South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, but early exploration has been discouraging. National Geographic says. Oil companies now are expanding exploratory drilling off the East Coast.

Heart Pumps Used In Surgery Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration announced the recall Wednesday of 357 heart pumps that may have contained "counterfeit" parts that could cause the devices to fail.

The devices were the AVCO intra-aortic Balloon Pump, model 10, used by 266 American hospitals and 91 hospitals abroad, primarily for open heart surgery.

The balloon in the device is inserted in a heart artery to help keep the patient's heart beating before, during or after surgery.

Alfred Magro, director of marketing for AVCO Medical Products of Everett, Mass., said the pumps may have contained counterfeit computer components that erroneously carried a supplier's regular trademark.

The parts may have been substandard or reject parts made by that supplier, he said.

The FDA said the University of Arizona Medical Center first reported a high rate of malfunctions and failures with the machines. After an investigation, the FDA notified AVCO, which sent hospitals telegrams April 2 warning them not to use the devices until they were fixed.

Magro said all but nine of 266 machines in the United States have been fixed. Distributors in Europe and elsewhere have also been notified and sent replacement parts, he said.

An FDA spokeswoman said one patient at the Tuscon Medical Center who had been attached to a balloon pump died on Feb. 10 after the machine malfunctioned.

But a hospital administrator, Joan Moore, said that the problem was spotted immediately and the patient was switched to another machine in a matter of seconds.

"We do not feel it contributed in any way to the patient's death," she said. The Tuscon hospital subsequently got AVCO to take back the $20,000 machine because it was generally dissatisfied with its performance and because of problems in getting it serviced, she added.

Thomas Craig, an AVCO attorney, said a balloon pump could stop working when a dying patient's own heart begins to fail. He said the firm did not know how many of the 357 devices actually contained counterfeit parts or if there is any specific malfunction that could be traced to counterfeit parts.

Each heart pump contains 15 to 31 of the parts in question, each costing about $8.

Magro said AVCO bought the parts from a franchise distributor for Advanced Micro Devices of San Francisco. That firm has filed a $1 million trademark suit against two non-franchised distributors for allegedly using the AMD logo and part numbers on substandard or reject parts, according to reports in trade magazines.

Recall Order Hits American Motors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Wednesday ordered American Motors Corp. to recall 310,000 cars and trucks, compelling the automaker to correct exhaust pollution problems that marred most of its 1976 model year production.

In issuing the order, the Environmental Protection Agency said it raised to 12 million the number of cars and trucks recalled since 1972 to correct flaws in emission control systems — one in every five new vehicles sold.

"As a record of compliance with the law and as an expression of concern for public health, this marks a dismal showing by automakers," said EPA Deputy Administrator Barbara Blum.

The latest massive recall affects only AMC cars and trucks meant for sale in the United States. Cars involved include 1976 model Hornets, Gremlins, Pacers and Matadors with 258 cubic inch engines; CJ-5 and CJ-7 Jeeps with 232 cubic inch engines, and 1975 and 1976 dispatcher trucks used by the Post Office.

The EPA said the vehicles have a defect in the pollution control system which could cause excess emissions of nitrogen oxides.

The recall does not involve 1976 model AMC cars and trucks sold in California, where the vehicles have different exhaust control systems because of that state's stronger air pollution requirements. However, the California vehicles are being investigated by EPA for the same defect.

American Motors announced a similar recall Tuesday night on a voluntary basis.

AMC said it was recalling about 45 percent of the affected vehicles. But the EPA action requires the company to get federal approval for its corrective measures.

"If the public health threat from air pollution is to be abated, it is crucial that cars meet the emission standards set by Congress," Mrs. Blum said.

"Nitrogen oxide emissions change into nitrogen dioxide in the atmosphere, and adversely affect those with acute respiratory illness, causing difficulty in breathing, chest pains and bronchitis in children."

She said the pollutants also are a major contributor to smog that "causes lung and eye irritation which leads to headache, eye discomfort, cough and fatigue."

The AMC defect involves an inadequately brazed joint in the exhaust gas recirculation system, which frequently breaks and makes the system ineffective.

Ford Motor Co. was recently ordered to recall 640,000 vehicles for similar problems and EPA said the defective part in both the Ford and AMC exhaust systems was manufactured by the Eaton Corp.

AMC's recall announcement said the company would make the repairs free of charge if affected cars were brought to dealers.

Bell Reveals Success Of Laser-Glass Lines

CHICAGO (AP) — Bell Telephone announced Wednesday that its experimental laser-glass communications system "performed even better than expected" and will become part of Bell's regular service beginning in 1980.

"This dramatic milestone in communications means... we are much closer to eventual widespread use of individual private television channels, advanced undersea communications and improved long-distance service," said Charles H. Elmendorf, assistant vice president for American Telephone and Telegraph.

He emphasized that the immediate advantages of the lightweight system will include improved telephone service near power stations that cause electromagnetic interference, less expensive large-scale visual telephone service, and larger load capacities in densely populated metropolitan areas.

"We've proved the technology works," Elmendorf added at a news conference. "Now it's a matter of economics. The widespread use of the technology depends on demand, on how much people are willing to pay for the services that are available."

Residential video telephones "are still way out there in the distance, but we can see its potential more clearly now." He added that trans-oceanic use of the glass cables "is technologically possible, but still a long way from reality."

Stock Mart Surge Seen If Inflation Victory Indicated

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The new chairman of the Financial Analysts Federation says any sign that the battle against inflation is being won will result in a surging stock market.

"Any evidence that inflation is being brought under control would cause a very strong stock market," says the chairman, Benjamin C. Korschot of Kansas City. "The market is seeking concrete evidence of lower interest rates and some control of inflation."

Korschot, president of Waddell and Reed, an investment and mutual fund organization, was elected to head the 15,000-member federation at its meeting here.

Korschot spoke hopefully of the stock market's future, telling the other analysts the U.S. economic recovery should continue.

"I see no recession," he said. "There may be a slowdown in 1979, but I don't see any excesses in this recovery."

He said the recent record surge in the stock market could be attributed to "nervousness" on the part of foreign investors and large institutions with lots of cash reserves.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman G. William Miller's emerging reputation as an inflation fighter was also partly responsible for the surge, Korschot added.

"The confidence level in the investment community went up when Miller made it clear there would be a major effort to control inflation," he explained. "That and other actions made it look as though we were really coming to grips with inflation."

He said that at the same time, stocks were undervalued or reasonably valued, and that many still are.

Brace Lost, Someone Here Needs Leg Up

Some local soul is probably alive, but who knows if he's kicking after Martha Roberts' discovery Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Roberts of 4835 53rd St. was en route to a doctor's appointment about 3:50 p.m. when she spotted something that looked like a shoe in the road, just west of 54th Street and Quaker Avenue.

She climbed out and found a leg brace with a black shoe attached to it. The shoe was a "right" shoe, she said.

"I had surgery on my foot in November," she said Wednesday, "and I could picture myself wearing one of these. I know how much I'd want it back."

Mrs. Roberts quickly began contacting local radio stations and the police department.

She ran into only one problem.

"I called a man at one of the Spanish radio stations and he wears a leg brace. But when I tried to tell him what I wanted, he kept laughing so hard I couldn't tell him. 'He just kept asking 'How?' and I said 'I don't know how anyone could have lost it,'" she said.

Despite everyone else's levity, however, Mrs. Roberts affirms that she is entirely serious about getting the brace returned to its rightful owner.

"Someone is desperately in need of this," she said, "I've got it here (at home) if someone wants it."

Mrs. Roberts has asked possible owners to contact her at either 795-4170 or 797-5240.

Right-Of-Way Hearing Held

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court heard oral arguments Wednesday over the State Department of Highway and Public Transportation's objection to paying more than $80,000 for five acres of right-of-way in Lubbock County.

The state appealed a ruling originally handed down by Lubbock County Court Judge E.H. Boedeker in favor of Mary Stephenson Baker and other owners of the land being condemned for highway construction.

Arguing the case for the state were attorneys Dean Arrington and Watson C. Arnold of Austin, representing the Attorney General's office.

Baker and other plaintiffs in the case were represented by Robert Garner, of Amarillo law firm.

Amherst Clinic Asks Permission To Build

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — South Plains Hospital-Clinic, Amherst, has applied to the Texas Health Facilities Commission for permission to construct a replacement to its existing facilities, and to relocate from 611 Main to 1400 Main.

The application requests permission to construct and equip a 19,992-square-foot replacement facility to correct Life Safety Code deficiencies, and to construct and equip a 3,000 square-foot replacement clinic for private physicians' offices and treatment areas.

If the application is protested May 19, it will be set for hearing. If there is no protest, the application may be referred without hearing to a THFC voting session.

School For Pool Operators Slated

The Lubbock Department of Health will sponsor a swimming pool operators' school Saturday, May 20, at the Godeke Library lecture room, 2001 19th St.

Pool operators and the general public are invited at no charge to attend the school, which will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

It will include presentations, films and demonstrations on proper care and operation of pools. Lecturing will be representatives from the Texas Department of Health, emergency medical services, city health department and a pool chemical firm.

For further information call public health educator Paula Underwood at 762-4411, ext. 351.

Notables Scheduled For Wedding Party

MENNEAPOLIS (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale, singer Roberta Flack, three pro football players and a former baseball pitcher are slated to be in the same wedding party.

Tom Tipton, who founded the first black-owned ad agency in Minnesota, asked Mondale to be his best man. Tipton, a close friend of the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey and a soloist at his funeral, said Mondale is standing in for the senator, who always said he wanted to be his best man.

Miss Flack, a high school classmate of Tipton, will sing at the wedding. Former Brooklyn Dodgers pitcher Joe Black will be a groomsman, and three Minnesota Vikings, Alan Page, Carl Eller and Jim Marshall, will be ushers.

The bride-to-be is Earnestine Collins of Atlanta. The wedding will be May 20 at Westminster Presbyterian Church in downtown Minneapolis.

Morton Plans Workshop

MORTON (Special) — Morton City Council members will meet in called session at 7:30 p.m. today to conduct a workshop designed to orient the town's new mayor and councilmen to their duties and responsibilities as public servants.

Annual Fire Show Slated Today By City's Firemen

Lubbock firefighters will show off equipment and work techniques to the public Thursday at their 14th annual fire show.

The off-duty firemen will display the equipment at 7 p.m. at the fire department's training grounds on Municipal Drive north of Mackenzie Park.

After an introduction by Chief Tom Foster at 7:30 p.m., the firemen will show the public how they fight different types of blazes, including those involving houses, truck spills, butane, oil pits and a combination of truck spills and oil pits.

The show is in conjunction with Fire Service Recognition Day, proclaimed by Mayor Dirk West.

Chief Foster said the presentation is the fire department's "way of saying thanks to a lot of wonderful people for the support and encouragement they have given us during the past year."

18-Hour-Dance Slated By Coronado Group

If you, like the BeeGees, "feel like dancing," the Coronado High School Aikane Tri-Hi-Y has just the thing for you: an 18-hour dance-a-thon beginning at 8 p.m. Friday in the Merchants Building at the fairgrounds.

Two live bands, Sweet Country and The Sundowners, will be on hand to provide the music and there will also be a selection of records played by disc jockeys, says Jackie Brownfield.

The dance lasts from 8 p.m. Friday to 2 p.m. Saturday and there will be free food and drink for the contestants, as well as door prizes, certificates and other items for the public.

The organization is sponsoring the dance in behalf of the Muscular Dystrophy Association, Miss Brownfield said.

In addition to the prizes there will be a pie throwing contest and a "hairy leg" event, she said.

No spectators will be allowed between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. Saturday, she said.

For information call 793-5632 or 797-2762.

U.S. Mayors Plan June Cuban Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A delegation of big-city mayors will visit Cuba in late June at the invitation of the Cuban government.

The trip is being organized by the U.S. Conference of Mayors, which last sent a delegation to the Caribbean island in 1959, shortly Fidel Castro came to power.

A spokesman for the mayors, Gene Russell, said the visit will cost city officials $495 each, including roundtrip airfare from Atlanta. The June 21 to June 28 trip will follow the mayors' five-day annual meeting in Atlanta.

The mayors conference has chartered a 100-passenger Southern Airways jetliner for the journey, and Russell said 42 persons already have signed up for the Cuban tour, which will include Havana and a number of other Cuban cities.

Mayor Paul Soglin of Madison, Wis., is expected to lead the delegation, said Russell. Soglin — a student activist during his law school days at the University of Wisconsin — has visited Cuba twice, once with a delegation of Madison city officials.

The mayors conference often sponsors foreign trips for city officials; a recent visit to Israel featured conversations with government officials at the time of the breakthrough in relations between Israel and Egypt.

The Cubans, anxious to expand relations with the United States, have hosted a number of U.S. delegations in the past several years, including congressional representatives and business officials. It is now possible for Americans to travel to Cuba as regular tourists.

Russell said the Cuba trip was approved without opposition by the leadership of the mayors conference.

The conference said it does not yet have a list of mayors who will be making the Cuba trip.

Hearing Scheduled On Federal Grants

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Department of Water Resources has set a hearing in Midland May 16 to acquaint the public with changes in the federal program for granting money to municipalities for construction of wastewater treatment facilities.

The hearing is to begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Reginal Air Terminal Office Building.

The department and the Federal Environmental Protection Agency have shared responsibility for administration of the program, but the state agency is now proposing to take over functions previously carried out by EPA.

The program has provided some $700 million to Texas cities for building new facilities, with another $1 billion allocated to Texas by Congress for the next five years.

Details on the proposed changes will be given at the hearing.

Kindergarten Parent Orientation Slated

An orientation program for parents of students eligible for kindergarten classes in the fall of 1978 at Bayless Elementary will be at 9 a.m. Thursday in the Bayless cafeteria.

Principal Dan McPherson said parents should bring available immunization records and birth certificates to the meeting to complete the pre-registration process at the session.

Rural Women Aspiring To Different Role

AUSTIN (AP) — When many urban women rejected a passive, domestic role, their rural sisters still desired that ideal, says a University of Texas researcher. At least it freed them from hard labor.

"Rural women wanted to be Doris Day, but you couldn't be Doris Day and milk the cows," said Frances Hill, assistant professor of government.

Mrs. Hill, the 32-year-old daughter of a Wisconsin dairy farmer, logged 20,000 miles in six midwestern states in a recent 14-month period, interviewing rural women.

Her interviews with 103 women and written surveys of 200 others already have attracted interest from eight or nine publishers. A National Endowment for the Humanities grant will finance a return trip this summer.

"I worked on the operating theory that the experience of being female in rural areas is different than in urban areas," she said in a telephone interview.

"For the urban woman, the passive ideal was oppression because it was forced on them," she said. "But the rural woman aspired to it."

The cultural difference does not mean rural women oppose the feminist movement, she says, citing the estate tax example.

"They are very militant about that," Mrs. Hill said. "They say a man pays for a farm once, a woman pays for it twice."

Under estate tax laws, a farmer does not pay an estate tax on common property if his wife dies, but a widow must pay.

Little research has been conducted on rural women and how they view their roles.

"I wanted to find out why women have been so ignored when they have been doing so much," she said of her work. The U.S. Department of Agriculture does not collect statistics on women's labor on the farm, but compiles such information on men and occasionally boys.

She chose the upper Middle West for the survey because she knows it best.

RESEARCHING RURAL WOMEN — Frances Hill, a government professor at the University of Texas at Austin, recently spent 14 months interviewing farm women of the Midwest. She will return this summer to gather additional data, but she has concluded already that rural women have a different ideal from their urban sisters. (AP Laserphoto)

Median Age Moves Upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — The median age of the U.S. population has grown a little older, creeping up to 29.4 for the first time since 1960, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday.

The U.S. population, including military personnel overseas, was 216.8 million on July 1, 1977. That is an increase of 12.5 million, or 6.1 percent, over the population on April 1, 1977.

One reason that the median age has increased is that children born during the Post World War II baby boom generation are getting older.

The number of young adults — ages 25-to-34 — increased by eight million, or 31.8 percent, between 1970 and 1977.

The group of persons ages 35-to-54, many of whom were born during the low birth-rate Depression years, increased by only one percent.

The report, which includes population estimates by age, sex and race, shows that the preschool population, including children five and under, declined 11.2 percent, or 1.9 million, between 1970 and 1977.

One major reason for the decline is that most women are having fewer children than they did during the high birth-rate years of the 1950s.

However, the black population grew 11 percent while the white population increased 4.8 percent during the 1970-to-1977 period.

"The black population has experienced a slower decline in fertility than the white population," the report says.

'Big Mac' Allergin Singled Out By Doctors Common In Foods

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers report that the sauce on McDonald's "Big Macs" contains a food additive to which some people are allergic. They said a 35-year-old woman was stricken with "life-threatening" symptoms while eating one of the hamburgers.

Symptoms of allergic reaction to the additive called gum tragacanth include swelling, itching and shortness of breath, according to the four physicians at McGill University Teaching Hospital in Montreal.

They issued the warning in a letter in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, saying they wanted to alert physicians to the "hidden" allergen "in view of the widespread consumption of Big Macs."

Douglas Timberlake, a spokesman at McDonald's headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., pointed out that gum tragacanth, derived from Middle Eastern mountain shrubs, is used in many foods and is considered safe by the Food and Drug Administration. He said the matter would be investigated by McDonald's Quality Assurance Department.

In Washington, FDA spokesman Emil Corwin said the additive is used in baked goods, relishes, meat products, gravies, juices and processed fruits. He said the agency has received no complaints about it.

The doctors said researchers have known since the 1940s that gum tragacanth produces allergic reactions in some people. They said they did not know how common the allergy is, but one of the doctors, Phil Gold, said he did not think it was "overwhelmingly common."

In the case of the 35-year-old woman, the doctors said she was taken to a Montreal hospital with shortness of breath, itching, abdominal pain and a hive-like swelling of her face, arms and trunk.

Medical Convention Set

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — A predicted 5,500 physicians and other registrants will attend the 111th Texas Medical Association convention opening Thursday at the convention center.

Featured speakers at four separate luncheon meetings will be Dr. John H. Budd, president of the American Medical Association; Dr. Edward Teller, a pioneer in nuclear technology sometimes called "Father of the H-Bomb"; Abe Lemons, basketball coach at the University of Texas, and Dr. James Todd, a trustee of the Medical Society of New Jersey.

God's Word To Compete Against Porn

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Storehouse of Love, opening next week in the heart of the city's downtown pornography district, plans to offer blue movie patrons a look at a different form of affection.

The storehouse will open Monday in a run-down storefront along bustling Liberty Avenue, surrounded by fast food restaurants, flashy art movie houses, massage parlors, and late-night street prostitution.

But the Storehouse plans to offer religious guidance in place of the popular 25 cent peep shows, and the only books and magazines on sale will carry a firm Christian message.

"The Lord spoke to me and laid it on my heart," said James Deglau, one of the founders of the Storehouse. "This is something that has to be done."

The location, Deglau said, was intentionally chosen after numerous weekend excursions during which he found the Liberty Avenue patrons highly receptive to his religious message and pamphlets.

"This is really where we want to put it," Deglau said. "Everyone goes to church on Sunday morning in a nice area, but those people need it right down there."

"It is open to everyone, the person walking down there looking for, what should I call it — pleasure — as well as the person already committed to Christ."

Deglau, who said he was not connected with any organized religious movement, didn't know who would pay the rent.

"We are trusting the Lord for this," he said.

Deglau said he expects the Liberty Avenue regulars to respond favorably to his holy war against smut.

"We have been down there passing out tracts and telling them the Lord loves them, and 80 percent of the people are wide open, they want to hear about Christ," he said.

"They are down there looking for something, but they don't really know what it is."

Income Limit Rule Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is considering changing the way it calculates eligibility for Supplemental Security Income, a special program for aged, blind and disabled persons.

To be eligible for the extra assistance a person or couple must come within certain income limits and cannot own property — other than their home — worth more than a limit set by the government.

It is this property limit that the Social Security Administration is considering changing.

The first proposal increases the amount of household goods and personal property allowed from $1,500 to $2,000 and the value of an automobile allowed from $1,200 to $2,000.

In addition, officials want to change the basis of this value from the current market value to the equity value of the property.

For an automobile, a person now comes within the limits if he owns a car worth $1,200 or less, regardless of how much he still owes on a loan for it.

Under the new proposal he could own a car worth more than $2,000 as long as his payments on the car — equity — had not reached the $2,000 level. Only the amount the individual actually paid on the car would be counted.

Currently 4,258,124 Americans receive benefits under the program ranging up to $177.80 a month for an individual and $266.70 for a couple. In July this maximum will increase to $189.40 for individuals and $284.10 for couples.

The government is soliciting comments on the proposed changes and if you have something to say write, by June 16, to the Acting Commissioner of Social Security, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, P. O. Box 1585, Baltimore, Md. 21203.

Safety Probes Launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four new vehicle safety investigations have been launched by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

They include a suspected front wheel bearing problem in 1975 Monza, Starfire and Skyhawk cars, a front brake problem in Dodge heavy-duty vans, failures of trailer wheels made by Broad Wheels Co. and a brake problem in Ford heavy trucks.

The investigations could lead to vehicle recalls.

The first involves Chevrolet Monzas with V-8 engines, Oldsmobile Starfires and Buick Skylarks. The possible problem involves front wheel-bearing failures which may damage or break the wheel spindles. If the spindle breaks, the wheel can separate from the car, the agency says.

In the second case, the agency is investigating a front brake problem in 1973-1977 Dodge van models B-300, MB-300, CB-300, MB-400 and CB-400. It described the problem as deterioration of the steering mechanism stops which permits the front wheels to turn too far, resulting in temporary loss of front braking.

The third investigation involves the failure of chrome plated trailer wheels made by Broad Wheels of Ononeta, Ala. The problem might cause the wheel to separate from the trailer, the agency said.

The fourth case involves brake failures on 1975-1978 Ford heavy duty truck models B, C, F, L, W and CL equipped with antilock brake systems. The agency is studying a suspected problem in the wiring harness connecting the rear-wheel sensor junction block to the antilock computer module.

Persons who experience problems with any of these vehicles are asked to write to NHTSA, 400 Seventh St. SW, Washington, D.C., 20590 or call toll-free, 800-424-9393.

Mail Stop Order Issued

PILLS KNOCKED OUT — The Postal Service has issued a mail stop order against RFN Associates of Carlisle, Pa. Postal officials charged the firm with mail fraud in the sale of knockout pills which had been advertised to render a woman unconscious and incapable of resisting sexual advances.

Under terms of the order money orders cannot be paid to the firm and mail will not be delivered unless the company can prove it has nothing to do with the pills.

Chartering Laws Challenged

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer activist Ralph Nader has proposed that all corporations be federally chartered to give citizens and workers throughout the nation equal protection against corporate power.

However, Nader said at a news conference Tuesday that he believed a federal chartering law is less likely to be adopted than a bill requiring more stringent state charter standards.

"That would include Delaware, the corporate Reno," he said. "General Motors could buy Delaware in a weekend if Du Pont were willing to sell it."

Either federal chartering or reformed state chartering would be aimed, he said, at ending the existence of corporate havens in states with permissive chartering laws.

Nader appeared at a seminar sponsored by the Civil Liberties Review and New York University Law School.

Crawfish Champion Challenged

MAUREPAS, La. (AP) — Harold Picou, claiming he has never been beaten in a crawfish eating contest, has issued an open challenge to Wayne Kirkland, the new state champion who was crowned last weekend at the Breaux Bridge Crawfish Festival.

Kirkland finished off 32 pounds of crawfish in an hour to overwhelm 14 opponents from Louisiana, Texas and Florida. He slowed down after he'd built an insurmountable lead.

"That ain't no champion," said Picou, who said he missed the Breaux Bridge contest because of business. "I ate 30 pounds in 19 minutes in Gonzales four years ago. I've eaten in contests all over the place. In New Orleans I ate 20 pounds in 15 minutes flat. I ain't never been beat in over 100 contests."

Crawfish are like miniature lobsters. Contests involve breaking off the tail, removing the meat and eating it.

Town Cuts Property Taxes

MERROUGE, La. (AP) — This little town of 800 in Morehouse Parish has more money than it needs, so officials slashed property taxes by 18 percent.

"The people of Merrouge voted a sales tax several years ago, and the sales tax has provided substantial revenues for the city," said Mayor W.T. Blackwell, who announced the cuts Wednesday.

"In fact, at this point in time we have more money than we need, so I felt — and members of the town council felt — the right and honorable thing to do was reduce taxes."

Blackwell said the cut will be in effect for one year. Then they will consider whether to reimpose it to maintain full police, garbage and other services.

New Caribbean Policy Urged

NEW YORK (AP) — John Bartlow Martin, former U.S. ambassador to the Dominican Republic, warns that countries of the Caribbean are becoming increasingly hostile to the United States and he urges development of new, mutually beneficial policies.

In a book published for the Twentieth Century Fund and released Tuesday, he blamed much of the hostility on what he said was Washington's indifference to the economic problems of the Caribbean over the last decade.

He said this led many countries to adopt economic and political policies of "a leftward statist nationalist" nature and to align themselves with other Third World countries.

Eaglet Born In Zoo

ABC's Newsmagazine '20-20' To Debut In June

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's weekly newsmagazine program, "20-20," described by the show's executive producer as "a lively, visual presentation of goings on in current affairs and other fields of human endeavor," will premiere at 9 p.m. CDT Tuesday, June 6. Though ABC has avoided the comparison, the debut does mark the network's entry into a field that CBS' "60 Minutes" has had to itself for several years. NBC's newsmagazine, so far unnamed, will make its debut in September. Both ABC and NBC are anxious to cash in on the success enjoyed by "60 Minutes." The A.C. Nielsen Co., which rates prime time programs for the TV networks, ranked "60 Minutes" No. 6 for the period between Sept. 12, 1977 and April 9, 1978.

Bob Shanks, a vice president of ABC News and executive producer of "20-20," said the new show "will be a true newsmagazine of the air in the tradition of 'Life' and 'Look,' which we use as our point of departure."

"Our goal is to revive through electronic means the standards of excellence achieved in that great age of photojournalism and bring that kind of quality of offering of information to the mass audience of prime time television," Shanks said.

Hosts for "20-20" are Harold Hayes and Robert Hughes, two men with extensive background in both magazine and television journalism.

Hayes was editor of Esquire magazine from 1963 to 1973, and was host of a nightly interview program on public television in 1974 and '75. Hughes has been art editor of Time magazine since August 1970, and has worked on a number of cultural programs for the BBC.

"20-20" apparently will be similar in format to "60 Minutes," which is telecast Sundays at 7 p.m. though the ABC show will differ in approach by offering each week a lead story — described by Shanks as "an in-depth piece on the major news that week."

Shanks said the program will include four major stories each week, including the lead and "investigative pieces, personality profiles, and stories on trends covering everything from major social movements to the latest twists in pop culture."

Hayes was named senior editorial producer of "20-20" in January and ABC said he will continue in that job. Before joining on global environment for the Public Broadcasting Service.

Among Hughes' most recent television assignment was work on programs on culture and society in the 20th Century.

The ABC newsmagazine will include regular contributions from six correspondents — Dave Marsh, Sander Vanocur, Sylvia Chase, Dr. Carl Sagan, Thomas Hoving and Geraldo Rivera.

Marsh formerly was co-anchor of the WCBS-TV "11 O'Clock Report" in New York City. Vanocur is a former national political correspondent for NBC and Ms. Chase has been co-anchor of ABC's weekend network newscasts.

Sagan is a Pulitzer Prize-winning author and director of the Laboratory for Planetary Studies at Cornell University. Hoving is a former director of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Rivera has been a special reporter for ABC News since last summer.

Marcel Ophuls, an internationally known filmmaker, will be overseas producer for "20-20." Ophuls' documentary, "The Sorrow and the Pity," examined collaboration in Vichy France during World War II and was nominated for an Oscar.

Brock Brower and Edward Tivnan, experienced in both magazine and television journalism, work, are the show's writers.

"20-20" HOSTS — Robert Hughes, left, and Harold Hayes, two men with extensive backgrounds in magazine and television journalism, will be hosts of "20-20" ABC's weekly newsmagazine program, which premieres June 6. Though ABC has avoided the comparison, the program marks the network's entry into a field that CBS' "60 Minutes" has had all to itself (AP Laserphoto)

Diesel Production Hike Seen

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The president of General Motors Corp. predicted Wednesday that 15.5 million new cars and trucks will be sold this year despite the harsh winter.

"In March our industry sold more new cars and trucks than in any other month in history and our momentum continued in April when GM's total sales set a new record for the month," President E.M. Estes said.

He told business, civic and political leaders that General Motors Corp. plans extensive production increases of diesel and turbocharged engines for the 1979 model year.

In remarks prepared for noon delivery, Estes said increased production means introduction of the engines in more models for better average mileage.

"With a smaller diesel joining the one we introduced this year, our diesel output is planned to nearly triple," Estes said. "This year we had hoped to test demand for diesel cars and light trucks by building 100,000 diesel engines, but early production problems, now solved, cut our car output to an estimated 68,000. At that reduced rate we were so short of the engine we never could gauge the total potential demand. We plan to boost production to 190,000 next year."

The federal Environmental Protection Agency expects to announce in July results of its study of the effects of diesel fumes.

Estes said GM expects to increase output of the turbocharged V6 engine from 40,000 this year to 100,000 during 1979.

The GM diesel now is limited to 1978 model Oldsmobile 88s and 98s and Cadillac Seville, and Chevrolet and GMC light trucks. The turbocharged V6 engine is available only in the 1978 Buick Regal.

Estes said GM would have to "continue redesigning car-line by car-line until we get through our entire product lineup around the end of the decade. In the next round of redesign, though, the emphasis is going to be on lighter—and probably not so much on smaller."

He said production would include more lightweight materials, components and weight-saving designs. Estes said control of exhaust pollutants is nearly completed. "Finishing the clean-up will depend largely then on how quickly consumers replace their older cars with newer, cleaner-running models."

MEMORIES OF ELVIS — Top Elvis imitator Rick Presley will be bringing back memories of Elvis this Friday and Saturday at the Ole Opry House. Tickets are $4 and may be reserved by calling 745-4591.

Rick Presley To Appear Here

Rick Presley will again be bringing back memories of Elvis at the Ole Opry House on the Slaton Highway this Friday and Saturday.

Mike Martin and Windmill will provide dance music until Rick's show at 10:30 p.m. Tickets are $4 and reservations may be made in advance.

Rick, the Elvis imitator who was playing in Lubbock at the time of Presley's death in August, will be singing several of the Presley hits, from "Jailhouse Rock" to "Way Down."

Rick is considered one of the top Elvis imitators in the country, and has just returned from the East Coast, where he has been playing in New York nightclubs and in New England and Canada.

He will be performing at Roosevelt High School during school hours Friday, and plans to come back this fall to play the rest of the area high schools.

Rick has recorded four albums of Elvis songs, and says he is getting ready to retire the Elvis act. This week's show will be the last Lubbock performance of the Corpus Christi man's complete Elvis act with jumpsuits and trimmings.

Over 419 Lubbockites have joined the Rick Presley Fan Club since he last played the Hub City.

Reservations may be made by calling 745-4591.

OCEAN DUMP — Sewage disposal in the Atlantic Ocean from the New York City area alone now totals 14 million tons a year. In a single generation enough waste was dumped into a six-square-mile area of the shallow New York Bight to raise the sea floor 35 feet, National Geographic says.

Five Groups To Feature Monterey Band Finale

The Monterey Band Department will feature five performing groups in its season finale, scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday at Monterey High School Auditorium.

The program will offer three concert bands and two jazz ensembles playing a variety of selections, including the march classic, "Stars and Stripes Forever," by composer John Philip Sousa. The sweepstakes winning band will perform Don Gillis' arrangement of "Tulsa," and the jazz bands will play selections from their festival repertoire.

The concert is sponsored by the Monterey Band Booster Club and tickets are on sale for $1 for adults and 50 cents will be over three hundred guests from the

PINE BOX MORTICIAN — Dr. James Reveley poses with one of the handmade pine coffins he uses in his $300 funeral plan. (AP Laserphoto)

Ex-Mortician Offers Austere Pine Box Funeral At Low Cost

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The frontier tradition of burial in a pine box was a good one, says James Reveley. It was dignified for the deceased and inexpensive for the survivors.

Incensed at the cost of modern-day funerals, which a federal study found average from $1,300 to $1,600, Reveley decided recently to offer a $300 alternative.

The charge includes pickup by Reveley's Memorial Service of the body of a deceased, cold storage, legal paperwork, a handmade pine coffin and delivery of the box to a cemetery or crematory.

Reveley also will help relatives arrange religious memorial services and to find a cemetery plot or crematorium for disposal of the body.

"It's bucking the establishment," he said, "but I think I'm doing something really worthwhile. I think it's a real public service."

Reveley began working at a funeral home on weekends while in high school 17 years ago. He went to mortician's school, served an apprenticeship and became a mortician.

But, he said, "I was turned off by the commercial practices and ethics of the business and I quit in a couple of years."

He continued to work at mortuaries to pay his way through college and dental school and, at age 34, has a full-time dental practice today.

Last December, he opened Reveley Memorial Service — An Alternative, a side business to his dental practice.

The alternative is a no-frills funeral.

There's no embalming of the body, no cosmetic treatment, no fancy casket, no display room, no chapel, no funeral procession and — most importantly — Reveley — no fat bill to take care of after the living have departed.

Reveley said he believes millions of people are victimized annually by funeral home operators who take advantage of their customers.

He supports this view with a study of funeral home practices by the Federal Trade Commission in August 1975 which stated:

"Each year, millions of families are forced by the death of a relative to make one of the largest consumer purchases under severe handicaps of time pressure, emotional distress and lack of information or experience.

"As an FTC hearing examiner noted long ago, there are few, if any, industries where the ultimate consumer is so disadvantaged or where his normal bargaining power is so diluted in a situation of such immediate need."

Reveley keeps a copy of the FTC report on the desk at his funeral home.

"We just take the body, put it in the pine box, and deliver it to the cemetery. Then nature does its job. I would never embalm a body," said Reveley.

"How many times have you heard somebody say, 'When I die, I just want to be buried in a pine box? Well, that's what I'm offering."

The cost of a cemetery plot or cremation is additional and is worked out between survivors and the cemetery. Reveley might offer suggestions if asked.

Reveley's had only four customers since opening five months ago.

"But we've had a lot of inquiries. The word is spreading," he said.

The biggest problem for his business, Reveley said, is that relatives of the deceased are concerned about what others will say about them if they bury the deceased in a pine box without an elaborate funeral.

"Most people agree it's a waste of money. Funerals are for the living — the living of the funeral home owners," he added.

Reveley said there's been pressure against his business by the traditional funeral homes in San Antonio. He said one person originally refused to provide services to him for fear other funeral homes would terminate their business.

Reveley's funeral home is in a one-story building his father used for a medical practice.

He purchased a cold storage vault, where bodies can be kept temporarily. And, in another room, he displays the pine box coffin with rope handles.

A state law requires Reveley to have at least five casket models available, and he has three cloth-covered wooden models and a metal coffin in addition to the plain pine model.

"But I don't really show anything but the pine box. Just like the regular funeral homes only like to show the expensive metal caskets. The casket is supposed to be a symbol of love, they say, and you are made to feel small and disrespectful if you don't get a fancy casket for the deceased," said Reveley.

"But if a customer of mine wants one of the caskets besides the pine box, he can have it at my cost."

Simplified Truth In Lending Object Of New Senate Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a bill Wednesday that would simplify the legalistic mumbo jumbo that consumers encounter when trying to decipher credit terms.

Congress passed a Truth in Lending Act in 1968 because businesses did not tell consumers enough about credit terms. Now they are apparently telling them so much that it is confusing.

The new legislation, passed in the Senate by voice vote and sent to the House, would alter the 1968 act.

Both consumer and credit organizations supported the Senate bill in hearings.

Consumers complained that disclosures required by the 1968 law are too long and difficult to understand. Creditors said they have trouble keeping up with administrative and judicial interpretations of the law.

A Senate Banking subcommittee heard testimony from psychologists that disclosure statements now given to consumers are ineffective because there is too much data.

As an example of the simplification that would be required under the bill, a car buyer would no longer be told the "cash price," "down payment" and "unpaid balance of the cash price." Instead, he would only be told the "amount financed."

In addition, the bill would require that credit disclosures be separate from contract terms. This provision would highlight the disclosures by setting them apart from all other information.

Another change would put descriptive phrases on the statements to explain them to consumers. For example, the "finance charge" would be accompanied by the explanation, "This is the amount the credit will cost you."

The original law was designed to enable consumers to shop for loans by easily comparing credit terms from various lenders expressed as an "annual percentage rate."

Senators from both parties, while calling for simplification of the law, said it has been a boon to consumers. They cited Federal Reserve Board statistics showing consumer awareness of prevailing rates for common loans has gone from 15 percent in 1969 to 55 percent in 1977.

The bill would make compliance with the law easier for creditors by requiring the Federal Reserve Board to issue model disclosure forms. Use of these forms would guarantee compliance with the law. Small businesses often have to hire lawyers to draft disclosure statements under the current law.

Religious Order Probe Costs Maryland $200,000

BALTIMORE (AP) — The investigation of the Pallottine Fathers' finances that led to a guilty plea by the order's former chief fund-raiser cost Maryland about $200,000, the state attorney general said Wednesday.

Most of the money — 1/4 of some $170,000 — was used to pay the salaries of three full-time accountants and three full-time lawyers assigned to the case, according to Attorney General Francis B. Burch.

The staff pored over "tens of thousands" of documents and financial statements subpoenaed by the prosecutors in the 21-month probe, Burch said.

The prosecutor said another $10,000 was spent for transportation of grand jury witnesses and their lawyers, many of whom traveled here from homes in southern Florida.

The Very Rev. Guido John Carcich, one-time fund-raising chief of the Pallottines, spent much of his time in Fort Lauderdale and Fort Myers, Fla., where the order invested more than $5 million in motels, trailer parks and condominiums.

The Florida trips stopped in 1975 after reports about the Pallottines' finances and Carcich's dealings with politically influential Marylanders.

Those reports sparked the state probe that resulted in Carcich's guilty plea Tuesday to a single count of misappropriating part of the $175 million he was estimated to have raised for the Pallottines' foreign missions.

In return for the plea, the state agreed to drop 60 other charges contained in an indictment returned against Carcich by a special grand jury last January.

Chaps Wallop TWC 17-4, Win District

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
ARLINGTON — The sleeping giant awoke Wednesday with such a gusto that many of the 400 Arlington fans felt that Hurricane Chaparral had descended upon them.

When the fireworks were over, Lubbock Christian College had successfully defended its District 8 NAIA title and advanced to the Area II Tournament, which will be held May 17-19 in Lubbock.

The victory by a rousing 17-4 count was the fifth in nine meetings this year with arch-rival Texas Wesleyan. Ironically, it was a come-from-behind effort, as the Chaps, now 45-22, were down 3-2 entering the bottom of the third inning.

"I was happy to see us hit like we're capable of hitting," Chaparral coach Larry Hays said after the game in the jubilant dressing room. "I think we had some pressure on us because we're hosting the Area Tournament, and we wanted to be there."

"It was tough on Wesleyan to have to play a possible three games in one day, but, with the way our tournament is set up, it's always going to be that way. That's the advantage of playing in the winners' bracket."

Hays also complimented his defense, which turned in its 50th double play of the season. "I thought we played super defense, despite the four errors. When we needed a play, we got it, and that helped."

History thus repeated itself, as the victor emerged undefeated through the tourney. And it was a good thing because rain descended upon the stadium less than five minutes after the final contest was over.

In winning this tournament for the fourth time in five years, LCC banded 19 hits off three Ram hurlers, with Darius Copley, Tommy Inman, Tim Leslie and Bobby Doe each collecting three hits.

Copley ripped his second home run of the meet, and, for the second time in three games, finished with four RBI. Steve Brigante also had a homer, and Inman scored five times to set a school record.

Gary Swann turned in a gutsy performance, scattering six hits and five walks in seven innings to up his record to 5-3. Randy Vinson and Bob McNicol each hurled a frame to complete the triumph.

TWC bested Dallas Baptist in the first game 5-1. However, a call to the NAIA office in Kansas City midway through the contest resulted in a DBC forfeit, although the game was required to be completed.

DBC coach Jim Harp violated two tournament rules, suiting up more than 18 players — he had 24 in uniform — and, when Ruben Trejo took the mound against TWC, he was the 19th Indian to appear in a contest, and that resulted in the forfeit.

Hays won the coin toss prior to the game, allowing LCC to serve as the home team for the first time in the meet. Inman led off the first inning with a single and was sacrificed to second base.

Leslie's single scored him, and Mark Lisle followed with a single to score Leslie from second base where he had gone when Inman scored.

TWC went up 3-2 in the third on the second of four singles by Carlos Cuervo, a one-out hit this time, and the combination of Gary Shippy's wind-blown triple and an LCC error.

A pair of walks and singles by Leslie and Lisle accounted for two runs in the third for LCC, but Leslie was thrown out trying to steal, and Lisle was tagged out while trying to score on Richard Bowles' single. TWC's last hurrah came in the fourth when Billy Schell walked and scored on Keith Spreckles' one-out double, but Brady Brashear prevented further damage to the LCC cause when he slammed against the wall in right field to rob Chris Phillips of a potential extra-base hit to end the inning.

LCC bats really awakened in the fourth inning. Glenn Wilken walked and was sacrificed to second and Inman singled. Mike Childers came on to pitch for TWC, and his first pitch was wild, allowing Wilken to score and give LCC a 5-4 lead.

Brigante then unloaded his sixth home run of the year, a 370-foot shot to left field.

But the Chaps added four more runs in the fifth frame with Inman's bases-loaded walk, Brigante's sacrifice fly, a throwing error on TWC catcher Steve Elliott and Copley's single accounting for the runs.

Wilken singled in a run in the sixth inning and singled in the seventh for another RBI after a walk, a wild pitch and Copley's single got home the final run in the eighth.

Five Chaparrals made the all-tournament team — Leslie, Brigante, Copley, Inman and Doe.

Everyone but Clark Langdon hit safely Wednesday for LCC.

Brotherhood Works Again In CHS Camp

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
The term brotherhood applies in a different fashion when discussed around Coronado's tennis circles.

At the CHS net program, brotherhood means you try to top what your older brother did a few years back.

And that's what Dale Anderson and Robert Davis will try to do this weekend at the state tennis meet in Austin. In 1974, the CHS doubles team of Art Anderson and Doug Davis reached the state semis. Now the younger brothers would love to venture a step or two beyond that.

Davis and Anderson (the latest pair of them, that is) were formed into a doubles team almost a month ago by CHS tennis coach Jim Carter, who wanted a nice vacation weekend in Austin and realized there was no way to get the vacation if either of the two players continued competing in singles. What Jim Carter hath joined together, let no man put asunder. The young teammates say they're improving with each workout.

"I think we've improved a lot as a team since just regionals," said the 6-3 Anderson. "We've had a lot more time to work together."

The Mutt-and-Jeff twosome bare little resemblance in their games. Davis, a 5-8 1/2 natural lefthander, plays righthanded and punches patient ground strokes. Meanwhile, the taller Anderson uses his height and reach to his advantage by unleashing a wide-arching serve which bounces with the unusual spin that lefties produce. Evidently, the contrasts in their styles aid in producing a formidable tandem.

"It's good to have a righthanded and a lefthanded player on the same team. It helps on service turns and court coverage because it makes you that much stronger on volleys down the middle. It gives you two forehands, which is your strongest shot," Davis said.

The shorter member of the duo reached the state doubles with Steve Wyett last year and dropped a three-set quarter-final match but gained experience of playing at state.

"You're real nervous that first morning match for awhile but it shouldn't bother me quite as much as last year," Davis said.

The Coronado team escaped three match points in the second set and gathered momentum to down Odessa Permian's Mike Madden and Steve Ashley 4-6, 7-6, 6-1 in the regional semifinals.

After defeating District 5-AAAA champs on Friday for the trip to state, the CHS team lost to the 5-AAAA runner-up team of Joe Love and Kirk Farquhar (Midland High) 7-6, 2-6, 6-2 in the regional finals. Each of the Coronado players believed he "let down" in Saturday's match.

"We didn't really play that good in the finals. We just didn't win the big points and that's the way it was all day. Maybe we had run out of big points to win the day before," Davis said.

In losing the first set to Permian's team

4-6, Davis double-faulted at deuce with the score tied in games at 3-3. The CHS team subsequently dropPed the point, the game and ultimately the set. Then trailing 5-4 in the second set, Davis-Anderson trailed 15-40 and dodged two match points before winning the game and the set.

Davis realizes his serve means very much to his team's success in doubles play where the serve-and-volley tactics

ONE JOKE IS that the only person Corky Oglesby is taking to the Southwest Conference track meet at Austin this weekend is the team trainer and a physician. Only thing, Oglesby sees very little humor in it all: he's too busy trying to locate healing ointments.

It's reached the point now that he's asking his troops to eat their meals outside, for fear the ceiling will fall. But, even this might not work: During a very leisurely workout Tuesday, javelin thrower Stan Smyth twisted a knee.

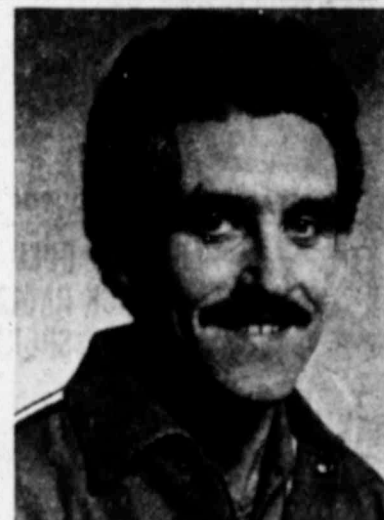

"I don't think I've ever seen a year with this many injuries," moaned the Tech track coach. "It's been this way all year long. We don't have many left to can run at all."

It's to the place where the athletes don't answer "here" at rollcall; if they're able to hobble to the dressing room, they answer with their latest injury, the one affecting them that day.

"I really thought, last fall, that we'd have a great team this spring," Oglesby said. "The way they were running in the fall, I wouldn't have been surprised if we'd run about 40 flat in the sprint relay and about 3:08 in the mile relay. Now, shoot, if we can get four guys to run, I'll feel fortunate."

THE SPRINT RELAY looks to be able to step on the track, but it's not so rosy for the mile relay, even if Corky can find four volunteers not on crutches.

It's not a case of injury here but measurements. In this year of in-betweens, some schools running races of yard distance, some in meters, the SWC went to the metric standard. Thus, times for the relays in yards aren't being accepted.

And although Tech has a time good enough to qualify, it has the ninth best metric time and thus is dropped from the eight-team field. In the hopes that one of the other teams will be short of runners by that final event and not be able to run, Oglesby is taking his mile relay.

"For sure," he laughed, "they'll be fresh."

That is, if they're healthy.

THE INJURY LIST opened even before fall, when discus thrower Marc Taylor, who finished fourth in the conference a year ago, needed knee surgery. He

Colonial Golf Tourney Begins

FORT WORTH (AP) — The peak of Ray Floyd's season very well could come in the next few weeks.

"I'm really looking forward to it," said Floyd, who in the last few years has placed himself in the front rank of golf's great stars.

"I'm playing well, really playing better than my scores would indicate. I'm not getting as much out of it as I should, but that will come," added one of the leading contenders in the prestigious, $200,000 Colonial National Invitation Tournament that got underway today.

Floyd, winner of two tournaments in each of his last two seasons, hasn't collected a victory this year. But he's finished 18th or better in his last five starts and been in title contention in most of them. And the best, Floyd said, could be yet to come.

"I tend to shoot about the same score no matter what kind of course we're on. It can be a hard course or an easy course and I'm still shooting somewhere around 68 or 70. That's why I'm really excited about the tournaments that are coming up in the next few weeks," explained the man who owns both a Masters and PGA championship.

In the next three weeks the pros play three of the toughest courses they face all year — the 7,190-yard, par-70 Colonial Country Club layout this week, the Muirfield Village Golf Club next week and the hills of the Atlanta Country Club the following week. Scores near par often win all three of those events — which fits Floyd's game perfectly.

A major change on the Colonial course this year makes it even tougher than usual. The green on the 13th hole has been reshaped to a severe, two-level putting surface. "If you don't get the ball on the right level, it's going to be almost impossible to two-putt," said tournament chairman Bill Speer.

Among Floyd's major challengers for the $40,000 first prize are Tom Watson and the man he beat by a single stroke last week, Lee Trevino, along with defending title-holder Ben Crenshaw, U.S. Open king Hubert Green and South African Gary Player, who reeled off a string of three consecutive victories earlier this season.

Watson and Trevino are particular threats.

"I'm not all that pleased with the way I'm striking the ball, but my putting has finally come around," said Watson, whose third victory of the year made him the season's leading money-winner. "And when your putting is good, that takes a lot of pressure off the rest of your game."

"Taking nothing away from Tom, I played good enough to win last week," said Trevino, a runner-up in two of his last four starts. "Maybe this week."

Other leading lights in the select, invitational field of 102 include 1978 winners Tom Weiskopf, Bill Rogers, Mac McLendon, Lon Hinkle, Jay Haas, Barry Jaeckel and Gil Morgan.

CBS-TV will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

'Fastest' Day Hits Indy Track

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Ongais and Mario Andretti both topped 201 mph Wednesday in the closing hours of the fastest practice day in the 62-year history of the Indianapolis 500.

"We were just trying to go faster than we have before," said the 36-year-old On-gais, who was timed at 201.974 mph on his last lap of the day. It was one of six laps recorded by the Hawaiian native, who already has two U.S. Auto Club victories this year.

Eleven cars were timed at 195 mph or better and 16 of the 35 cars practicing at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Wednesday topped 190 mph.

"We were not necessarily trying to top Andretti's speed," Ongais said. "We're just trying to go and get as much out of the car as we can," said Ongais, who leads the USAC point standings for this year.

Andretti, the 1969 winner here, had a 201.838 lap.

"If everything goes right, I think it's going to take four laps of 200 mph to win the pole. It's a thrill to know the car is capable of that speed."

Gordon Johncock, the 1973 winner at Indy, had a time of 197.672, followed closely by two-time winner Johnny Ruth-

HOT BOWLER

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bob Brinkman of Deer Park, Ohio, isn't waiting for official sanction by the American Bowling Congress of his two successive 300 games. He is going ahead with a celebration Saturday. The scores are being investigated by the ABC in Milwaukee after a local representative declined to rule on whether they should be recognized.

ford with 197.585. Others topping 195 were Wally Dallenbach 197.4, two-time winner Al Unser 196.850, Sait Walther 196.7, 1977 USAC national Champion Tom Sneva 195.897, two-time winner Bobby Unser 195.610, Johnny Parsons 195.524 and Steve Krisloff 195.2.

A.J. Foyt, the defending champion and the only four-time "500" winner, made his first appearance late in the day and took four laps before leaving with an apparent mechanical problem.

Foyt's best time was 189.274. When his car pulled in the pits there was smoke coming from the rear end and fluid leaking. Foyt declined to discuss the problem with reporters.

Owner Jim Gilmore also declined comment on the problem, but did say Foyt's late appearance was due to work which had to be done on the Coyote which has never been raced before.

Sunny skies and warm temperatures gave the drivers the best weather since the track opened and mechanical problems caused few yellow caution lights.

The only close call came when Bobby Unser lost control of his car coming out of the first turn. The car went sideways, slid 340 feet and made light contact with the outside wall of the Speedway.

"The right rear tire hit," said Unser, who slid away from the wall and continued into the pits. There was no serious damage to the car and Unser was unhurt.

LA Council Favors Bid In Olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a 10-5 vote, the Los Angeles City Council approved Wednesday the city's contract for the 1984 Olympic Games, three days before an international body meets on final site selection.

The approval came despite a warning by Deputy City Attorney Sally Disco that the financial risk to the city could not be eliminated. But, she said, the city's contract did minimize the risk of the city's being held liable for millions of dollars in costs for the games.

The International Olympics Committee is expected to vote on that contract during its meeting in Athens, Greece, beginning Saturday.

During the council debates over the contract, Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky said the Los Angeles Police Department now estimates that security for the Olympics would cost $22 million. He also said that the contract contains no provision for reimbursing the city for those costs.

Councilman Ernani Bernardi said security costs for the Montreal Olympics in 1976 were estimated at from $100 million to $150 million. He added that former police chief Ed Davis had said earlier that security cost in Los Angeles for the 1984 games would probably be 50 percent higher than in Montreal.

Earlier this month, the city attorney's office submitted a sternly worded draft of a 1984 Olympics contract to the IOC. The 24-page document was filled with fiscal protections for Los Angeles and differed from the draft contract given to the city by IOC members in Mexico City in April.

However, IOC Executive Director Monique Berlioux, in a telegram to the city, said the IOC would not consider the city's draft contract until the city responded to the IOC draft contract.

In its meeting Wednesday, the city council also rejected the IOC's standard two-page contract, calling it unacceptable. The council authorized the city's delegation to the IOC meeting to make technical or non-substantive changes in the city's approved contract without further council approval.

The council also approved a 30-day extension of the city's May 18 deadline to bid for the Olympics and approved sending copies of the contract by Telex to the IOC after it is approved by the mayor.

City Council president John Ferraro said he had hoped to present a shorter version of the city's contract for approval by the council but the city attorney's office had not completed it.

That shorter contract could be brought before the council for approval today, Ferraro said.

But Bernardi claimed the shorter contract and 30-day extension of the final bid date would further weaken the city's bargaining position.

Carlen Awaits Decision

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — University of South Carolina trustees — unable to resolve a conflict over whether the school's president or its football coach runs its athletics — adjourned a 3½-hour closed meeting indefinitely Wednesday.

Board Chairman R. Markley Dennis said, "There has been no final resolution or decision." He declined to describe "matters before us" or answer reporters' questions about who has the board's support.

Football Coach Jim Carlen came to the meeting about two hours after it began and remained almost an hour. He, too, declined comment as he walked briskly away, smiling.

President James B. Holderman was present throughout the session.

Also present was Gov. James B. Edwards, an ex-officio board member.

The board was meeting to discuss athletic affairs at the university.

Holderman, president less than a year, has been under fire from Carlen and basketball Coach Frank McGuire, plus others associated with Gamecock athletics. The unrest began in the fall when Holderman offered McGuire a job as athletic director over all university branch campuses.

McGuire declined and succeeded in getting Holderman's acknowledgment that he could remain as coach until at least the end of the coming season, when he will be 65 years old.

Carlen, hired four years ago, has been athletic director over all sports except basketball for the past two years.

He objected to Holderman's appointment of a vice president for athletics, James A. Morris, this winter. Carlen contended Morris was preempting his responsibilities.

Dorsett Speaks For Police Unit

BEAUMONT (AP) — Dallas Cowboy runningback Tony Dorsett, who has been in a couple of scrapes with the law, made a pitch to minorities Wednesday to join the Beaumont police force.

"I'm here for the kickoff of the recruitment of minorities into the police force," Dorsett told a crowd at City Hall. "I hope we find some qualified people out there to attend the academy."

Dorsett briefly referred to his troubles with Dallas police. The first involved an altercation with a bartender. The second was when he was charged with disorderly conduct when Dallas police arrested a woman companion for investigation of drug possession. However, Dorsett said after the second incident that he was going to try and keep a low profile except on the gridiron.

"I try to be a law abiding citizen," he said.

He appeared on behalf of a minority recruitment committee of the Beaumont Civil Service commission.

He taped some television spots for the commission after being honored in city council chambers with council members and Police Chief Willie Bauer. He then signed autographs for a horde of youngsters.

The commission is seeking recruits for its September police academy.

Dorsett was paid $1,250 for the appearance, with the city picking up $250 and the rest coming from private sources.

Bouton Baffles Brave Batters

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Jim Bouton struck out seven Atlanta Braves batters in an exhibition game Wednesday, but despite his well-used knuckleball the Richmond Braves lost 7-3.

Bouton, 39, a former New York Yankees pitcher who dropped out of baseball in 1970 and now is trying to make a comeback, said he felt wonderful, nonetheless, about his six-inning performance.

"I'm just here to pitch," Bouton, who has been pitching batting practice for Richmond, said before the game.

Ruidoso Begins Saturday

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (Special) — More than 1,000 horses are now headquartered at Ruidoso Downs; timed workouts are under way; and the mountain track is now awaiting the start of the 1978 season.

By the end of the week, most of the 1,700 stalls will be filled. The new season, covering 71 racing days and offering a record purse disbursement of more than $6 million, will begin at 2:30 p.m. CDT Saturday.

Racing secretary Tom Dawson had to sift through some 2,700 applications for stall space in order to trim the requests to the 1,700. The list of trainers who got the green light to ship horses to Ruidoso represent some of the finest talent in this part of the country, Dawson said.

Doyle Roberts will be bringing 31 head, Dawson reported, including the filly Countess Blade. Trainer Jolly Driskill, who finished second in the Ruidoso standings last year with 37 wins, will be back with a 35-horse group. Topping Driskill's list is Fleet Fannie, the filly that won the Phoenix Futurity, earning just under $40,000.

Driskill's group includes several two-year-olds owned by B.R. Evans of Tulia, a group which includes Bully's Blade, Rusty Blade and Mighty Mito.

The new season will consist mainly of Thursday-through-Sunday racing and will extend through Labor Day, Sept. 4, and the All-American Futurity.

That race tops the list of specials and will be worth $1 million in purses. Also on the program this season will be the $850,000 All-American Derby on Aug. 27, the $525,000 Kansas Futurity on June 4, the $450,000 Rainbow Futurity on July 30, the $450,000 Rainbow Derby on July 3, the $125,000 Thoroughbred Futurity on Sept. 2, and the $100,000 World's Championship Quarter Horse Classic on July 23.

Sunday racing begins at 2 p.m. All other days, it starts at 2:30 p.m.

Don Henry

Then, the injuries started popping up. Also did some grade problems which stripped Oglesby of several athletes, both freshmen and upperclassmen.

He's had weightmen, sprinters, jumpers, competitors of all descriptions, lame at various times. In addition to Taylor, Tech red-shirted halfmiler Randy Yates before he was weakened by mononucleosis.

And, if it isn't one injury, it's two. As in the case of the school's only hope for a gold medal.

After finishing second in the long jump a year ago and winning the SWC indoor championship, Jim MacAndrew was considered a good bet for a title, which would have been the school's first outdoors since 1968. But, MacAndrew, the senior Olympian from Toronto, injured the heel on his jumping foot.

He was able to pad the heel enough for a couple of leaps and planned that strategy for the conference meet. Then, he ran into the tailgate of a pickup and hurt his knee. Yes, the tailgate of a pickup.

WHILE HUNTING WITH some of the other Raiders, the group was trying to lift the camper top off a pickup truck. The top began to tilt, and, while trying to catch it, MacAndrew banged his knee against the tailgate. It prevented him from competing in the Wayland Baptist College meet at Plainview two weeks ago, and he has been on the mend since that time.

"I've been real concerned about it, but it's felt better this week, and I should be able to jump without any pain. I have confidence that I can still win."

Prior to the tailgate incident, he could sprint, but had pain when jumping. And even with the heel injury, MacAndrew had the best leap in the conference by about a foot — until last week.

Then, a footballer reported for the SMU track team, and D.K. Perry, a junior from Bonham, leaped 25-51/2 at a meet in Waco. That is just 11/2 inches short of MacAndrew's best jump this season.

So, suddenly Perry is the favorite for the SWC gold medal.

MacAndrew will attempt to jump Friday afternoon, but he has been unable to work out this week because of the knee. "I don't know how he'll do," Oglesby admitted.

But, in the event MacAndrew is able to compete, Oglesby plans to have a medical doctor handy. You never know when one will be needed.

LCC Rated Ninth In Poll

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — William Carey (Miss.), despite four straight regular season-ending defeats, finished the 1978 season at the top of the NAIA's seventh and final collegiate baseball poll.

The Crusaders, 47-9, outdistanced defending NAIA World Series champion David Lipscomb (Tenn.), 39-8, for the No. 1 spot. William Carey accumulated 13 of 16 first place votes and held a 29-point advantage over David Lipscomb in the coaches poll.

Jackson State (Miss.), 50-10, and Phillips (Okla.), 43-11, tied for third place. Southeastern Oklahoma, 41-9, ranked fifth over Lewis-Clark State (Idaho), 44-8. And Birmingham Southern (Ala.), 43-12, placed seventh.

Filling out the top 10 were: LaVerne (Calif.), 25-11; Lubbock Christian, 44-22; and Azusa Pacific (Calif.), 39-9.

Thirty-one district champions advance to area playoff action May 19-20 to compete for the eight-team field in the NAIA World Series, May 26-31 at St. Joseph, Mo.

The second ten: Coastal Carolina (S.C.), 32-11; Grand Canyon (Ariz.), 36-16; High Point (N.C.), 29-7; St. Mary's (Texas), 31-9; Texas Wesleyan, 47-24; Francis Marion (S.C.), 27-11; Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 18-8; Aquinas (Mich.), 34-6; Point Park (Pa.), 25-2; Milligan (Tenn.), 28-12.

Blyleven Cools Giants' Attack

By The Associated Press
Bert Blyleven went to a windy but dry Candlestick Park mound Wednesday and cooled off one of baseball's hottest teams, the San Francisco Giants, with a six-hit, 12-strikeout performance.

In his last start, the Pittsburgh Pirates' hurler allowed seven hits and 6 runs in one inning-plus against the Los Angeles Dodgers on a wet day in Pittsburgh.

"The mound was muddy and it was tough to throw a good curve. But that one is over, just like this game, and I'm not making excuses," Blyleven said after beating the Giants 5-1.

"I had no pop on the ball last time and the Dodgers are a good hitting team. Today, I had pop and was challenging the batters a lot more," he said.

His 12 strikeouts, the most in a game by a National League pitcher this season, came mostly with curve balls, the most the Giants had seen in a long time.

"It's hard to adjust to Blyleven. He throws curves in all situations and most National League pitchers will challenge you with the fast ball," said Willie McCovey. "He throws the curve about 90 percent of the time."

Blyleven, said it was more like 60 percent of the time, but whatever, it earned him his second victory in the league.

PHILS 3, ASTROS 1
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rookie second baseman Jim Morrison belted a 2-run homer and Jim Lonborg hurried a five-hitter as Philadelphia defeated Houston.

Morrison, called up from the Phillies' Oklahoma City farm team when regular second baseman Ted Sizemore was injured on April 28, hit a 1-0 pitch from Houston starter Mark Lemongello with Bob Boone on first and two out in the second inning.

Lonborg opened the fifth with a single to center and later scored when Lemongello issued a bases-loaded walk to Jay Johnston.

METS 7, EXPOS 2
Elliott Maddox drove in 3 runs with a double and single and John Stearns walked a home run to lead the New York Mets over the Montreal Expos.

Maddox' RBI single highlighted a 2-run first inning and the Mets' outfielder dou-

Barbara Bell of Albuquerque's El Dorado High School has become the third signee of the year for the Texas Tech women's basketball team.

Bell, 5-9, averaged 14.6 points and 10.6 rebounds per game last season, as her team won the New Mexico state championship. In her four seasons, El Dorado was state champion three times and runner-up once. The club was 95-4 during that period.

As a senior, Bell was first-team all-state and made the all-tournament team at the state meet.

Gerulaitis Reaches WCT Semifinal Tilt

DALLAS (AP) — Vitas Gerulaitis survived a plague of double faults Wednesday night to trim Mexico's Raul Ramirez 6-1, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1, and set up a semifinal showdown with top-seeded Bjorn Borg in the World Championship of Tennis Finals.

Gerulaitis, who led the eight finalists in WCT points this year, endured 12 double faults in the first three sets, including five in the third set. He finished with 13 double faults.

Borg advanced to the semifinals Tuesday night with an easy four-set victory over Dick Stockton. Although he didn't lead the field in WCT points, Borg was seeded No. 1 because of a higher world ranking.

Gerulaitis had two double faults in the opening game of the match, losing the first three points. He then tossed aside a motel room key that had been jangling in his pocket and won the next five points to hold his serve.

He broke Ramirez in the fourth game of the first set after Ramirez made two consecutive errors on volleys. Gerulaitis then served up an array of winners to break Ramirez in the sixth game en route to a 6-1 victory.

Ramirez capitalized on a pair of Gerulaitis double faults in the sixth game of the second set for a service break that put him ahead 4-2. He then took advantage of two more Gerulaitis double faults in the eighth game for another service break that clinched the set.

Gerulaitis, a 23-year-old New Yorker, had three more double faults in the second game of the third set but held service after six deuces. He broke Ramirez in the first game after his tiring opponent missed four shots and had a service break in the fifth game.

Murray's Clout Snaps Bosox' Winning Streak

By The Associated Press
Eddie Murray's 2-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday night gave the Baltimore Orioles a 3-2 victory over Boston and ended the Red Sox' winning streak at seven games.

Carlos Lopez, batting for right fielder Larry Harlow, led off the ninth with a bloop single off Boston reliever Tom Burgmeier, 1-1. Ken Singleton, who had homered in the fourth, advanced Lopez to second with a sacrifice bunt. Then Murray hit his fifth home run of the season, a drive into the bullpen in right field.

Butch Hobson drove in Boston's first run with a second-inning single and had scored in the seventh on Frank Duffy's double.

Hobson, who suffers chronic pain from bone chips in his right elbow, was moved to designated hitter in the lineup and replaced at third base by Duffy, who had batted only six times previously.

Consecutive singles by Carlton Fisk, Fred Lynn and Hobson produced the first Boston run.

After Hobson walked on a 3-2 pitch with two out in the seventh, Dwight Evans singled and Duffy doubled.

The Orioles wasted leadoff singles in four of the first five innings, but came back in support of Mike Flanagan, 3-3. Flanagan allowed seven hits and struck out 10.

CHISOX 7, TWINS 2

Lamar Johnson and Bill Nahorodny hit 2-run homers and rookie Rich Wortham, backed by four double plays, earned his first major league victory as the Chicago White Sox snapped a four-game losing streak with a 7-2 triumph over the Minnesota Twins.

The Sox ended a string of 23 scoreless innings when they jumped on rookie Roger Erickson, 2-3, for 3 runs in the first. Johnson slugged his second homer of the season in the third inning after Don Kessinger had singled, and Nahorodny hit his second homer in the seventh following a single by Eric Soderholm.

Ralph Garr and Kessinger singled to open the Chicago first. Jorge Orta doubled to score Garr, and Kessinger scored when Johnson grounded out. Orta then scored on a single by Chet Lemon.

The Twins managed a run in the second when Craig Kusick walked and Roy Smalley reached on an error. After Larry Wolfe bounced into a double play, Kusick scored on a double by Bob Randall.

Glenn Borgmann walked to open the Minnesota fifth and scored two outs later on a double by Dan Ford.

Jim Wiloughby relieved Wortham in the ninth.

RANGERS 4, BREWERS 3

Bump Wills lined a 2-run home run, Al Oliver rapped a 2-run double and the Texas Rangers survived three Milwaukee homers to beat the Brewers.

Doyle Alexander, 3-1, gave up a leadoff homer to Paul Molitor, the rookie's third of the season, in the Brewers' first inning. Alexander retired the next 12 batters in order until Sal Bando hit his fourth homer leading off the sixth.

Sixto Lezcano slammed his fifth homer for the Brewers' final run with one out in the seventh. After Alexander walked Gorman Thomas, Reggie Cleveland relieved and pitched out of trouble.

Texas took a 2-1 lead in the third on a walk to Mike Hargrove and Wills' second homer, just inside the right field line off Larry Sorensen, 3-3.

A walk to Toby Harrah, a fielder's choice, a single by Wills and Oliver's double off the right-center field wall made it 4-1 in the fifth.

TRIBE 6, MARINERS 1
Ron Pruitt hit a solo home run and rookie Ted Cox added a 2-run single, sparking Cleveland over Seattle.

Rick Wise, 2-5, scattered five hits over six innings, then rookie Dennis Kinney contributed three hitless innings of relief for his fourth save of the year.

The Indians picked on starter Rick Honeycutt, 2-4, for their first four runs. Seattle took a 1-0 lead in the third on a two-out single by Julio Cruz, a stolen base and a single by Craig Reynolds. The Indians tied it in the bottom of the inning on Pruitt's third homer of the season.

Buddy Bell led off the Cleveland fourth with a single and Andre Thornton walked. The runners moved up on Mike Vail's sacrifice, an intentional walk to Willie Horton loaded the bases and Cox followed with his single through the hole at shortstop.

Horton had an RBI single in the sixth for a 4-1 Cleveland lead. The last 2 runs came home in the eighth on a wild throw by Seattle shortstop Reynolds.

BLUE JAYS 3, A'S 1
Rick Bosetti and Bob Bailor had run-scoring hits and the other Toronto run came home on an infield out in a 3-run third inning that backed Jim Clancy's six-hitter and carried Toronto to a 3-1 triumph over Oakland.

Oakland's run in the top of the third — its first score in 29 2/3 innings — was unearned. Jim Essian scored from second when left fielder Willie Upshaw dropped Bill North's routine fly ball.

The Blue Jays got their first baserunner off Rick Langford, 0-2, with one out in the third as Dave McKay singled to center. He moved to third on a base hit by Luis Gomez and scored on Bosetti's single. Bosetti took second as A's right fielder Gary Thomsen tried unsuccessfully to nab Gomez at third.

Bailor's infield hit — Toronto's fourth consecutive hit — scored Gomez with the second Blue Jays run and Gomez came home on Roy Howell's high chopper back to the mound.

Clancy, 2-2, walked four and struck out five in pitching his first complete game of the season.

The A's had lost 6-0 and 5-0 to Detroit and had dropped a 4-0 decision to the Blue Jays in the opener of the series before finally scoring for the first time in the third inning.

But Philadelphia, lead by McGinnis and Collins three times built the lead to an 11-point margin at the end of the quarter, 23-12. Jones had eight rebounds in the opening period and the 76ers turned 10 fastbreaks into points as they beat the Bullets sagging defense before it could get set.

The 76ers scored the first three baskets of the second period to boost their margin to 17 points at 29-12.

But Washington ran 10 of the next 12 points to reduce the lead to nine at 31-22. Charley Johnson, who scored 10 points in the second quarter, keyed Washington's comeback as they came within five at 37-32 with 5:34 remaining in the half.

A's Switch Spring Site

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The Oakland A's will hold their spring training drills here next year, replacing the Chicago Cubs.

A's owner Charles O. Finley met with local officials here Tuesday to work out arrangements. The Scottsdale City Council will meet Tuesday night to complete the formal contract.

The A's had had drills in Mesa in the past, but failed to renew their contract when Finley became involved in efforts to sell the team. Meanwhile, Mesa contracted with the Cubs to use their facilities for spring drills.

The A's are expected to pay Scottsdale 15 percent of gross ticket sales or $200, whichever is greater. Chicago had paid $125 per game.

The Cubs moved to Mesa after club officials claimed they had no guarantee new practice facilities would be constructed by next year.

City officials said Tuesday that had "a strong commitment" to upgrade facilities at the stadium and noted additional facilities are under construction on an area for minor league team workouts.

Mart Seeks Class A Track Crown

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
AUSTIN — If things manage to work out—which in most cases they don't—Mart could pull off one of the stranger things ever to happen at the state track meet.

Before the running events even start at 1 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Stadium, Mart might have 48 points tucked away in its duffelbag. And that could be enough points for the Panthers to win their second Class A state title.

Last year, Karnack took the A crown with 50 points.

But if the Mart tracksters are unable to shine in the field events, they can just forget about the team title. Why? Because the central-Texas team has barely a competitor in any of the nine running events.

The band of Martians are led by high jumpers Dwayne Jones and Mike Costley. Jones had the top jump (6-8) on the regional level, while Costley cleared 6-6. David Walling of Knox City holds a narrow half inch lead over Costley, clearing 6-6½ here last week.

In the shot put, Mart's Ricky Brown trails state-ranked Parnell Lykdes of Hull-Daisetta. Lykes, also a top discus thrower, has a regional best of 61-3¼ (the throws ranks Lykes fifth in the state), while Brown produced a 57-5¼ effort at the regional competition. Brown, however, has a best of 60-½ this year.

Brown and Lykes are also expected to do battle in the discus ring, too. Brown has a best effort of 183-2 for his best throw of the year, despite tossing the plate only 164-4 last week. Lykes had his top throw of the year last week, 180-6.

Mart Jones might have the hardest task of any Panther, as he goes into the long jump with the third best effort, 22-9½. However, that is deceiving as the leaper has a 24-1 under his best so far.

While Mart is doing its damage in the field events, Jourdanton might do the same in the running portion.

Jourdanton is loaded mainly with long distance runners, two milers, one half-miler and a mile relay team.

There is no team entered in the Class A division which was able to get two relay teams out of regionals.

South Plains teams should also be well represented at the two-day meet.

Yayo Salinas of Memphis brings the top half-mile time into the meet (1:57.1).

Fitzsimmons Receives KC Kings' Cage Post

KINGS' COTTON — Cotton Fitzsimmons, the former head coach of two other National Basketball Association teams (Atlanta and Buffalo), was named the new head coach of the Kansas City Kings franchise Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Cotton Fitzsimmons, a power-of-positive-thinking advocate with .561 winning percentage in 20 years as a head coach, was named floor boss of the Kansas City Kings Wednesday.

"We want to win and we want to win now," Fitzsimmons, 47, who coached the Buffalo Braves last season, told a morning news conference.

"I didn't take the job to rebuild. I'm tired of rebuilding. This team will win next year."

The Kings finished 31-51 this season and fired Head Coach Phil Johnson in January. Larry Staverman, assistant general manager, closed out the year as interim coach.

A native Missourian, Fitzsimmons is familiar to Midwestern basketball fans. He began his coaching career by fashioning a 224-58 record at Moberly, Mo., Junior College and was head man at Kansas State for two years, taking the Wildcats to the Big Eight championship in 1969-70. He joined the NBA in 1970 as head coach of the Phoenix Suns and later coached four years at Atlanta.

"The Kings can run and score and we definitely will try to utilize our running and shooting ability," Fitzsimmons said. "I think what the Kings need more than anything is confidence."

"I happened to catch the Kings last year on their winning streak and that night they could have beaten any team in the league."

Fitzsimmons said the Kings need no drastic personnel changes to become quick winners.

"Settle is showing us, proving to us right now that if you play good, solid defense and pound the boards you can play with anybody. It's not a mystery."

He admitted, however, the Kings need improvement in ball handling and defense.

"They threw a lot of passes into the front row seats last year," he said. "But it takes a lot longer to put together a good defense...that's a total team concept and it takes a lot of work."

Asked how long his contract was, Fitzsimmons said, "About five pages. I don't worry about contract length. A one-year or two-year contract in this business is about like a one-day contract."

"You've got to win. And this team is going to win."

Joe Axelson, general manager, said Fitzsimmons signed a two-year pact.

"We are very pleased to have Cotton as our head coach," Axelson added. "His enthusiasm and self confidence are just what we've needed for a long time. He will be a 12-month-a-year coach."

CTK Honors Prep Athletes

Athletes from Christ The King High School will be honored at an all-sports banquet tonight.

The family-type fete will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the CTK gym. The teams will be recognized and the outstanding individuals introduced.

The CTK girls team will be featured, after winning the state TCIL championship.

Former Sixer Boss Blasts Cunningham

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gene Shue, deposed as Philadelphia 76er coach after only six games of the 1977-78 National Basketball Association season, says his replacement, Billy Cunningham, is only a "figurehead" coach.

But while Shue's comments, in an upcoming issue of Sport Magazine, were revealed at a vulnerable time — with the 76ers trailing the Washington Bullets 3-1 in their best-of-seven semifinal playoff series going into Wednesday night's game — Philadelphia General Manager Pat Williams said Wednesday that Cunningham should not worry about his future.

"The Bullets have played very well in the series and we haven't, that's it," Williams said, brushing aside Shue's contention that Cunningham's lack of savvy is partly to blame for the team's difficulties.

"Gene's entitled to his opinions and I'm sure the statements that he made is how he feels, but it has no concern with the ball club," Williams said. "Billy's done an outstanding job. Just because of one article from a freelance woman writer who doesn't know if the ball is stuffed or inflated I'm not going to dignify it with a comment."

Asked if Cunningham, who has a multi-year contract with the 76ers, would be back at the helm next season, Williams replied, "Of course."

"All the players are doing is falling in line. But when Billy has to finally coach them, then you will see the types of problems they have," Shue told Philadelphia-based writer Samantha Stevenson. His comments during two interviews, in December and January, will appear in the June issue of Sport.

The article contends that dissension is tearing apart the 76ers' multi-million dollar franchise.

But Shue claims the NBA championship this season would have been "guaranteed" if he had not been fired "because I had the players all last year and they were under better control."

Shue said Cunningham is giving lesser players increased court time just to keep them happy — to the detriment of the team.

"I went with the guys I thought would win for me. That was Doc (Julius Erving) and George (McGinnis) and Doug (Collins). With Billy, more of the other guys are playing more."

"(Lloyd) Free and (Joe) Bryant are getting time. Eventually the other players will get sick of that and all of a sudden they'll want more time. Doug will do that and George. Heck, they've already been complaining — and so will Doc."

As for Cunningham's "figurehead" status, Shue said: "Billy is not doing any serious coaching on this team. The players are playing great schoolyard basketball and whatever Xs and Os have to be drawn, (assistant coach) Chuck Daly's doing it. Billy is only a figurehead."

Cunningham denied comment on the article, saying he would have to see it first.

New AD Selected For SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University hired a new athletic director Wednesday, putting on the shoulders of 39-year-old Russ Potts the responsibility of perking up the paltry attendance at Mustang football games.

Potts was hired from the University of Maryland, where he had been assistant athletic director the past several years. He is credited with turning about Maryland's gate woes, from an average of 17,000 fans a game when he went there to 45,000 last season.

Potts succeeds Dick Davis. Unlike most college athletic directors, Potts has never coached.

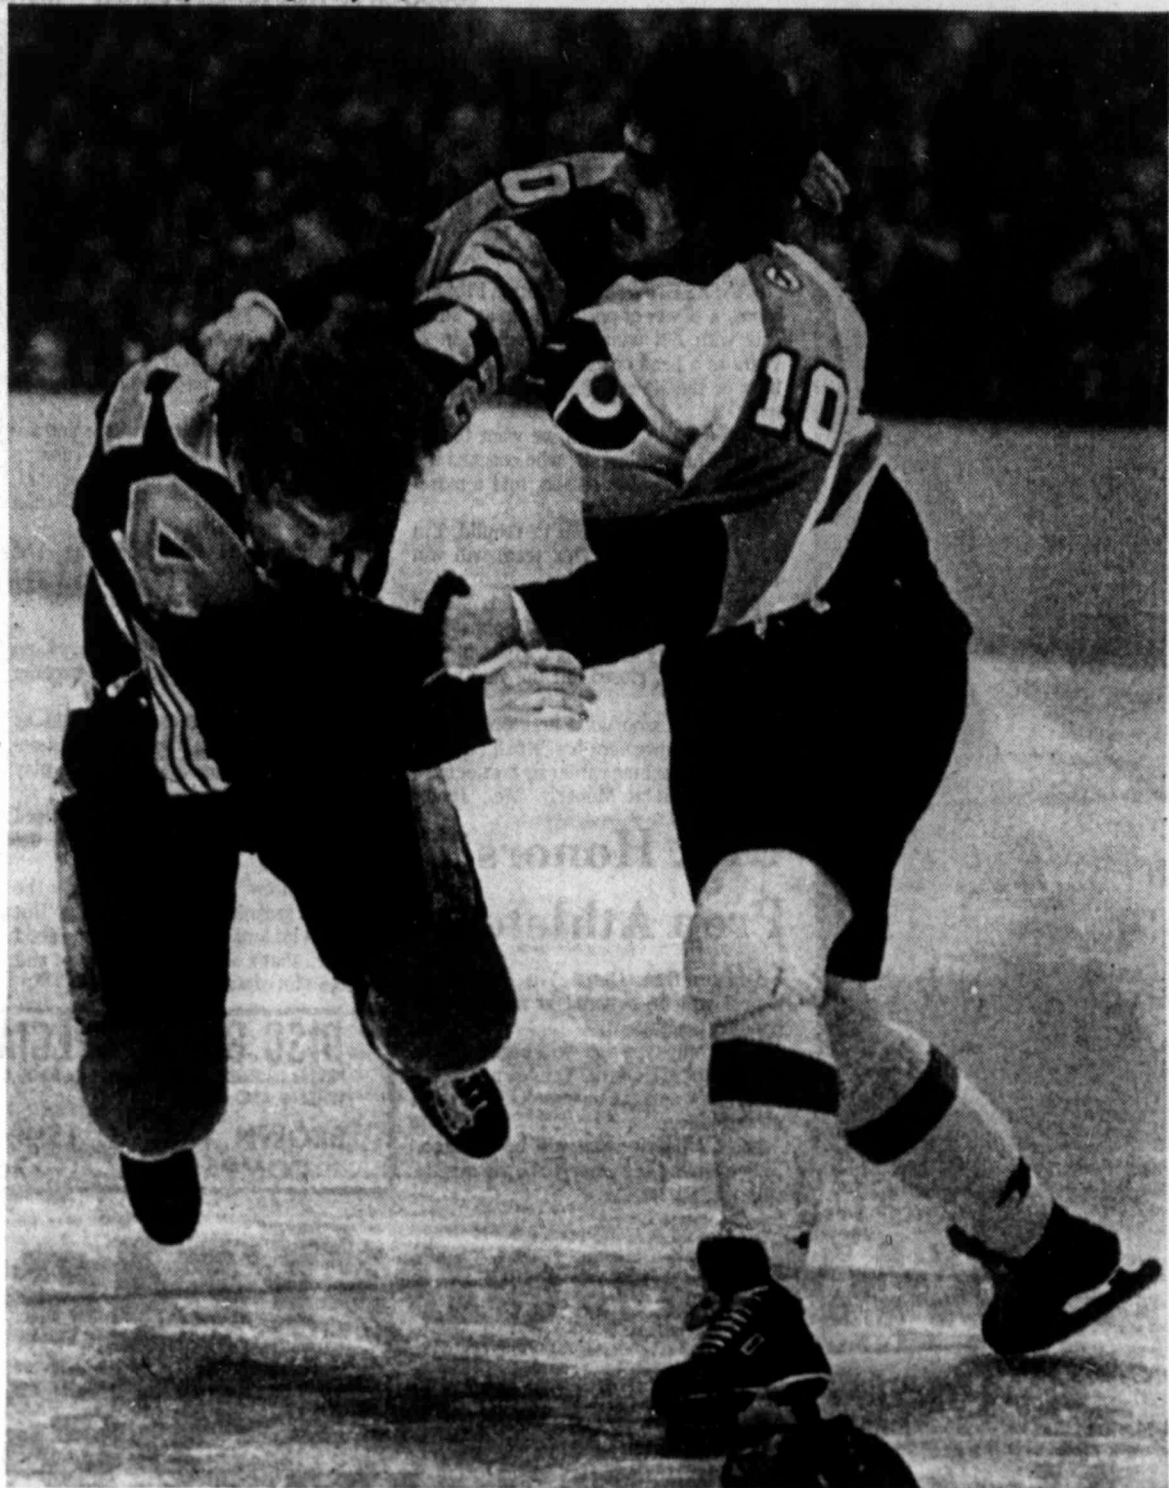

"But that's not a disadvantage, considering 95 percent of the athletic departments in the country are in the red," Potts said. His major challenge "is to have SMU compete successfully for the entertainment dollar in the Dallas metropolitan area," which he said requires different skills from coaching a winning team.

He will try at SMU some of the same promotional efforts that proved successful at Maryland — including a "corporate partners" program involving industries and businesses in SMU athletics; an active group sales program; an aggressive season ticket campaign; mass media publicity campaigns; and some giveaways.

A native of Virginia, Potts majored in journalism and was a sports editor for six years after graduating from Maryland. Then-Maryland athletic director Jim Kehoe brought Potts aboard as the first sports promotion director on the college level.

He was responsible for all advertising sales, all ticket sales and all radio-television negotiations. Maryland had one radio station in 1970, but now has a network of 55 stations for both football and basketball.

He will have hiring and firing power over the SMU coaching staff, including football coach Ron Meyer and basketball coach Sonny Allen, he said. But he said he anticipates no changes in the staff.

Houston Battles For NHL Berth

HOUSTON (AP) — Kenneth Schnitzer says the only objective of his search for a National Hockey League franchise is to make money.

"We're not on an ego trip," said Schnitzer, a developer who is majority owner of the Houston Rockets and Houston Aeros and the operator of the city-owned Summit where both teams play.

"We're into this to make money. There are no other objectives," Schnitzer acknowledges he wants to drive a hard bargain while trying, in effect, to merge his World Hockey Association Aeros with an existing NHL franchise.

"We can't accept a burden from the NHL, either in dollars or in players, that would keep us from having a viable product in the form of a team here," Schnitzer said.

"I can't tell if the NHL is going to accept our proposal. To put it bluntly, if the price isn't right, and if we feel we can't field a competitive club going into the NHL, we're not going to pursue it."

Speculation has centered on Colorado or Cleveland as the teams involved in the negotiations but Schnitzer again refused to name specific franchises.

"I'm not going to respond to specifics about a franchise because it would preempt my negotiations," he said.

"I should know by the 20th of this month if I have a deal to take to the NHL governors at the June meeting in Montreal."

Schnitzer said the situation boils down to two things.

"First, the response we get from the teams we're negotiating with, and two, the NHL governors," he said.

"We may know before the June meetings. If we don't get the proper response from the teams we're negotiating with, then there's no sense going to the NHL. If the response is negative, we could know within a week to 10 days."

Schnitzer said he is optimistic the NHL wants a Houston franchise.

"But not through expansion," he said. "If they do want Houston as I think they do, it's not because we've got a great city or a pretty arena, but because we can help them with a network television contract. It's not going to help them if we're weak."

If his NHL efforts fail, Schnitzer is prepared to fold the Aeros or sell the team. He acknowledges he has had no offers for the WHA franchise.

"I think someone buying and keeping it here to play another season in the WHA is a dead issue," he said.

Schnitzer said 40 to 50 hockey dates are important to The Summit.

"But not so important that the ownership is prepared to lose $2 million with a sports franchise," he said.

Jets, Whalers Reach Finals

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — A three-week layoff ends for the Winnipeg Jets Friday night when they open the World Hockey Association playoff finals against the New England Whalers in Springfield, Mass., hoping to duplicate their feat of two years ago.

In 1976 the Jets came off an 18-day layoff to sweep the Houston Aeros in four games to win the championship for the only time in their six-year history.

This year the layoff will extend to 19 days before Winnipeg meets the Whalers in the first game of the best-of-seven series to determine who will succeed the Quebec Nordiques as league champions. New England beat Quebec in five games in the semifinals.

"Our practices have been much the same as they were two years ago," said left wing Bobby Hull. "As I recall, we played really well coming off the layoff."

Montreal Dominates Stanley Cup Series

MONTREAL (AP) — While the Canadiens were scheduled to return to work today in preparation for the Stanley Cup finals, the almost-annual hue and cry from other National Hockey League clubs to break up the powerful Montreal organization already was under way.

Coach Scotty Bowman gave his club a day off Wednesday after the Canadiens had sent the Maple Leafs packing for the summer with a sparkling 2-0 victory in Toronto Tuesday night. The triumph gave the powerful Montreal squad a four-game sweep of their best-of-seven semifinal series against the bouncy, stubborn, but over-matched Leafs.

Despite the fact his club had been swept aside by the Canadiens, Toronto owner Harold Ballard congratulated his players for going as far as they had against such a formidable assortment of talent.

Ballard, however, also blasted the Montreal organization, specifically General Manager Sam Pollock.

Bruins Seek Clincher

BOSTON (AP) — Leading 3-1 in their Stanley Cup semifinals, the Boston Bruins can wrap up the season for the Philadelphia Flyers tonight. A victory could also end chances for a good fight between the clubs until next fall.

If the Bruins win the fifth game of the best of seven series, they will meet the Montreal Canadiens in a replay of last year's Stanley Cup finals, won handily in four straight games by the Canadiens.

The National Hockey League semifinals return to Boston Garden where the Bruins won the first two games of the series.

They took a decisive lead Tuesday night in Philadelphia with a 4-2 victory punctuated by two fights which collected a total of 40 minutes in penalties for both clubs.

The first clash erupted 11 seconds into the opening period.

Boston's Tom Wensink and Philadelphia's Tom Bladen dropped their gloves and flailed at one another after Bladen's hard check of the Boston player. Wensink cut Bladen's brow over his right eye and both drew five-minute penalties.

Wensink was in the middle of the second fight at 26 seconds into the second period.

He and Flyer Rick LaPointe went at it after Philadelphia's Dave Hoyda slammed Peter McNab into the boards following an icing call.

While the linesmen were busy with the bout, Philadelphia's Mel Bridgeman and

The Leafs played the entire series without Swedish-born defenseman Bjorge Salming, who suffered an eye injury in Toronto's seven-game quarter-finals against the New York Islanders. Lanny McDonald also disclosed he had played the four games against the Canadiens with a fractured wrist.

However, the right winger refused to use the injury as an excuse for Toronto's loss. But the Leafs didn't have the same sting without Salming and a healthy McDonald.

In contrast, the Canadiens were without star defenseman Guy Lapointe for the last game against the Leafs. But Bowman simply reached to his bench strength to insert Brian Engblom as a replacement. The seldom-used defenseman turned in a more than adequate performance.

Lapointe suffered a back injury when dumped heavily to the ice by Toronto left winger Dan Maloney in the third game of the series. A spokesman for the Canadiens said Wednesday that Lapointe's status remained uncertain and would depend on day-to-day checks with team doctors.

The ease with which Montreal can count on depth at all positions was the reason for Ballard's blast at the Canadiens.

"They ended up first in the league and will probably cakewalk to the Stanley Cup," Ballard said. "Yet they'll end up with five or six top draft choices next month."

"As long as the Canadiens have all those guys hidden down in Nova Scotia (with the Voyageurs of the American Hockey League), they'll be able to trade for top draft choices."

But despite the criticism, Bowman will have his team — including several candidates from the Voyageurs — back on the ice under full steam today. The Canadiens, however, still do not know what team they will meet in their effort to win the Stanley Cup for the third consecutive season.

Montreal must await the outcome of the Bruins-Flyers semifinal round that could wind up tonight as Boston holds a 3-1 edge over Philadelphia. Should Boston win, the best-of-seven final would get under way here Saturday night. But if Philadelphia stages a comeback, the Canadiens would be forced to mark time until early next week.

Record, Shortfall Grain Crops Linked To Weather By Analysts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Given good weather, the Soviet Union could produce a record grain crop this year in excess of Moscow's goal of 220 million metric tons, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

Further, the department said, favorable global weather conditions could boost world grain reserves to record levels by mid-1979.

Unfavorable weather could cut world grain inventories 20 percent a year from now, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

The agency for the first time projected two world grain production alternatives on the basis of weather possibilities in major crop regions.

The report stressed that crop conditions worldwide are highly variable and that the early projections for the 1978-79 crop year "are particularly tenuous."

The Soviet Union, as one of the world's largest producers and users of grain, plays a vital role in considering world supplies and consumption of grain, particularly wheat and so-called coarse grains such as corn and barley.

Under the good-weather forecast, 1978 Soviet grain output would surpass the record of 223.8 million metric tons in 1976 and this year's goal of 220 million metric tons. Even at the lower mark the crop would be Russia's fifth largest.

The report said that the Soviet Union this year could produce a wheat and coarse grain harvest of 217 million metric tons if there is good weather and as little as 183 million metric tons if the weather is unfavorable.

Not included in the report was an allowance for "miscellaneous" Soviet grain production, which includes rice, beans, peas and other crops that Moscow includes in its overall grain category.

The source, asking not to be identified, said with good weather the Soviet Union could produce 12 million metric tons of miscellaneous grain and with poor weather about 8 million metric tons.

Thus, using figures in the report for wheat and coarse grains, total Soviet output this year could range between about 191 million and a record 229 million metric tons, compared with 195.5 million last year.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Cattle Futures Close Lower 22-45 Points

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Live cattle futures closed 22 to 45 points lower on Wednesday, led by October, with distant August up 40 points after gaining 120 early on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Volume was estimated at 29,821 contracts.

Heavy runs and slaughter tended to bring pressure, as did profit-taking after Tuesday's sharp rally.

Traders also were expressing concern over possibly adverse consumer reaction to sharply higher wholesale beef prices this week.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one cent at 87 to 88 1/2 cents per pound, highest since June 1975. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 per hundredweight with the top at $57.25 at Peoria, an August 1975 high.

The major terminals expect 11,100 head to arrive today. Wednesday's slaughter was estimated at 145,000 head.

Hog futures soared to new season's highs across the board before ending 32 points higher to five lower. December was up most, with nearby June and distant July at the loss. Sales were 7,885 cars.

Firmness in pork products and improved cut-outs tended to offset increased arrivals and kill. Strength in cash hogs also was a factor and helped lift prices to the highest levels since March 1977.

Futures remain well over current cash levels.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up two cents at 76 to 80 cents per pound, an eight-week high. Cash hogs were up 50 cents to $2 per hundredweight at a top of $50.

The six markets expect 29,500 head to arrive today. Kill Wednesday was estimated at 296,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures rallied from a loss of as many as 62 points to climb 187 before ending 17 to 172 stronger, led by August. Volume was estimated at 9,314 turnover.

The firmer tone to cash bellies tended to offset heavier runs and kill, and traders also noted new season's highs in hog futures as constructive factors.

May rose to $73.40 per hundredweight, up more than $5 from the cash basis.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1/4 cent at 65 to 68 3/4 cents per pound, f.o.b. river.

Commonly called white ants, termites are rarely white, and most certainly are not ants. They descend from cockroach-like creatures of the coal age some 250 million years ago, National Geographic says.

Consumer Advice Given To Farmers

U.S. farmers are the most efficient producers in the world, but they need to become more consumer-oriented in order to develop new markets and create realistic, steady prices, says Dr. L. Louise Luchsinger, marketing instructor at Texas Tech.

"Farming is a business and, therefore, farmers need and should use advice that is available to any type of growing business concern," Luchsinger said.

"Farmers do not need government subsidies so much as they need to find other solutions to their problems and seek new markets for their products."

In an effort to find out how best to help the farmer, Luchsinger spent time last year working at a cotton gin in Opydyke. Her purpose was to return to the producer level and learn about the product.

"I began the project knowing nothing about agriculture, but I quickly found out that West Texas farm produce is of excellent quality and that farmers should be able to market it effectively."

Working with Don and Robin Anderson of Agricultural Investment Consultants, Inc. in Lubbock, Luchsinger decided that identity-preservation marketing was necessary to successfully market West Texas agricultural produce. This approach would differentiate the product in the mind of the consumer.

She chose soybeans as the test product and suggested sealing them in a plastic container within a container for shipping. This would maintain the quality of the product for the consumer, with the end result being that the product can be recognized by the consumer as one of special quality and from a certain region.

Luchsinger pointed to Washington

State apples as an example of consumer recognition of a special quality product.

Luchsinger recognized that soybeans are to the Oriental what Boston baked beans are to the New Englander, or red beans and rice are to the Louisiana Cajun.

In the Far East high protein soybeans are used as spices, made into soups, fried with other foods or just eaten out of the bag.

In 1977 a total of 2,701,000 tons of soybeans were shipped to Japan, with 730,000 tons intended for direct human consumption.

This year three sealed containers with 40,000 pounds of West Texas soybeans in each arrived in Japan in late March. If marketing results materialize as Luchsinger anticipates, then the Japanese consumer will eventually be actively seeking West Texas soybeans because of their quality and taste, she believes.

"If this happens, then area farmers can begin forward contracting and can smooth out cyclical price fluctuations between consumer and producer," Luchsinger said.

Luchsinger stressed that the most important point in achieving identity preservation is maintenance of the product's quality and identity. These techniques have application for other commodities, with corn being the most likely West Texas candidate for the near future.

Luchsinger foresees what she calls a "melding of production and marketing."

"Farmers are great producers but they need to get into the marketing side and become aware of sales techniques such as press relations and publicity."

Farmers Get Questionnaire

AUSTIN (Special) — During late May and June, many Texas farmers and ranchers will receive a crop or livestock questionnaire from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service or will be personally interviewed by the service's field staff.

"This is part of the continuous effort of keeping track of Texas' biggest business — agriculture," says Wilbert Walther, chief statistician.

The information gathered through the questionnaires and interviews provides the basis for determining the acreage devoted to the various crops and midyear livestock numbers for the state of Texas and for each county.

Walther said that with the depressed prices of many agricultural commodities, it is more important than ever that the statistics be as accurate as possible.

The survey is a joint effort of the USDA's Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service and the Texas Department of Agriculture.

to aid producers in making the best production and marketing decisions.

"They are also essential in enacting wise legislation affecting agriculture and are used in determining the national program acreage and payment levels to producers under the various commodity programs," he pointed out.

The primary beneficiaries of accurate estimates are farmers and ranchers themselves.

Prompt and accurate completion of the survey forms provides for more reliable estimates. It also helps to reduce survey costs.

All individual farm and ranch information is kept confidential, and only state and county summaries become part of the final published estimate, said Walther.

The survey is a joint effort of the USDA's Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service and the Texas Department of Agriculture.
