Turnaways Faced By Hospital

By JEFF SOUTH, Avalanche Journal Staff
ON THE typical day in April, almost nine of every 10 available beds in the Health Sciences Center Hospital were filled...

We very much need to open additional beds... executive director Gerald Bosworth Monday told the Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers...

But doing that requires hiring more nurses. And Bosworth doesn't know yet where they will come from.

Nursing School Needed
He said the district will continue its recruitment efforts, but the ultimate hope is that the state legislature next year will appropriate funds to start a school of nursing at Texas Tech University.

Bosworth said the nursing school is the main factor in the ability of our hospital to open and stay adequately staffed. If you grow your own nurses, they have a tendency to stay in the area...

Dr. Richard Lockwood, university vice president for health sciences centers, said he believes funding for the new school has a good chance during the 1979 legislative session.

Extreme resignation of the urgent need for a nursing school, Lockwood said. A number of us will be down there in Austin to argue for it.

Authorized But Untended
The school already has been authorized by the legislature, but has yet to be funded.

Lockwood said if the legislature provides necessary appropriation, the school could be open in September, 1979. It would be at least two years, however, before the school would be turning out its own nurses, he said.

Bosworth said the nursing school graduates and the nursing school students who may be working part-time during their training would provide the Health Sciences Center Hospital with an adequate supply of personnel.

The need for more staff is evident from the census figures of the 24-bed hospital, the primary teaching facility of the adjoining Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

Occupancy Still Rising
The occupancy percentage for the hospital is 88 percent, Bosworth said. Since opening Feb. 1, the hospital has had available only 103 beds, an 11-bed increase from the 92 beds available in the previous year. The hospital has 100 beds, 26 in intensive care units and 26 in general.

Lockwood said the board Monday that the average occupancy for February was 88 percent on the total of 103 patients in the hospital. In March, he said, the average occupancy was 81 percent on the total of 103 patients in the hospital.

And for April, the occupancy rate is 84 percent on the total of 103 beds, and 84 percent on the bassinets, Bosworth said. Those are averages, and on many days the number of patients has exceeded the beds available, forcing an overflow into units that have not been officially opened.

Lockwood said he hopes to open 100 beds by the end of the year. See TURNAWAYS Page 14

54-44 Vote Gives Win To Carter

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate on Monday night endorsed President Carter's plan to sell jet fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia — transactions the president called vital to achieving peace in the Middle East.

On a vote of 54 to 44 the Senate rejected a resolution that would have blocked the $5 billion arms sales package. Opponents of the sales would have needed majorities in both the House and Senate to prevent them.

The administration had lobbied hard in favor of the sales.

President On Phone
Carter spoke by telephone Monday morning with several senators of both parties "stressing... the importance" of the vote, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said. The president also talked with a number of senators by telephone during the weekend.

The bitter fight over the sales also was marked by intensive lobbying by supporters of Israel and the Arab nations, as well as backers of the White House position that military aid to Arab moderates in Egypt and Saudi Arabia was in the best interests of Israel.

The sales will send 75 F-16s and 15 F-15s to Israel, 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia and 50 less sophisticated F-5Es to Egypt. In an effort to secure congressional support, Carter also promised to sell Israel another 20 F-15s for delivery in 1983-84.

The administration had argued that Saudi Arabia believes it needs the jet fighters to defend itself against a number of potentially dangerous neighbors that have been under the Soviet Union's influence. Israel has feared the jets might be used against it in any future Middle East war.

Support For Sadat
In a letter to all senators in the final days before the vote, Carter warned that rejection of the sales would be a "devastating blow" to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and his efforts to negotiate a peace agreement with Israel.

Shall we support and give confidence to those in the Middle East who work for moderation and peace? wrote Carter. "Or shall we turn them aside, shattering their confidence in us and serving the cause of radicalism."

But Sens. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and Clifford Case, R-N.J., responded in a letter of their own, distributed to senators on Monday, in which they argued that the sales "will only make it more difficult to revitalize the peace process."

Church, Case and Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., were among the leaders of the opposition to the sales.

Clumsiness Charged
Sarbanes at one point accused the administration of provoking a needless and divisive confrontation which could have been avoided through "adroit and skillful state-manship."

However, as the debate continued Monday, a Carter victory began to emerge. Even Church at one point several hours before the vote said, "I am told that the sales will be approved."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., had predicted the Senate would support Carter.

Debate on the sales lasted through the day, including a two-hour secret session held to discuss classified reports on the military implications of the transactions. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., a long-time supporter of Israel, argued in support of the three sales.

A Changing World
We must have the courage to face a changing world and the will to serve our best national interests, Ribicoff said.

He said the jets for Israel "will enhance both its security and its sense of security," and praised President Anwar Sadat of Egypt as "a responsible man who surely will not abuse the modest boost in Egyptian air strength."

Saudi Arabia, he said, faces a real See SENATE VOTES Page 14

Filipinos Find Bark-Wearing Cavemen

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—A group of cave-dwelling Filipinos wearing primitive bark clothing were discovered in a remote area of Mindanao island.

The discovery was made by a team of anthropologists and linguists from the University of the Philippines. The team had been searching for primitive cave-dwelling Filipinos.

A team of 100 men, led by the anthropologist, Dr. Robert Fox, and the linguist, Dr. Robert Fox, discovered the cave-dwelling Filipinos.

The cave-dwelling Filipinos were found in a remote area of Mindanao island.

They have been in contact with other people.

Carter Signs Farm Support Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter signed a farm support bill Monday which will provide federal commodity price support for 10 major crops as much as $2.4 billion.

The bill, which is authorized by the Agricultural Department, provides an increase in the minimum price for wheat and the loan rate for wheat. The legislation also provides for the government to purchase surplus crops to support prices of other crops.

of the bill, he said, was also to provide for the government to purchase surplus crops to support prices of other crops.

make the minimum price provision, but I will not propose to change the modification in the formula used to determine the cotton loan rate," Carter said.

He called attention to the part of the bill raising the Commodity Credit Corporation's borrowing authority from $1.4 billion to $2.4 billion to provide funds for operation of "domestic" and foreign food and agriculture programs.

He strongly urged Congress to act on authorization legislation to establish an international wheat reserve of up to 20 million bushels to strengthen our commitment for food and to less developed countries of the world.

Key Provisions
Key provisions of the law, which fall far short of what farm organizations and congressional farm leaders sought, are:

The bill authorizes discretionary power to raise support target prices for wheat and cotton during years when it is operating acreage control programs for those crops.

The target rates do not fix farm prices or set a floor under markets. However, they protect farm income because the Agriculture Department must pay farmers for any gap between market prices and the target levels.

Administration officials said earlier that if the bill became law, they would raise the 1978 wheat support target from the current $1.4 a bushel to $1.40. Spokesmen said no hikes were planned for feed grain or cotton targets because those crops had already been given equivalent help in the form of payments for idling acreage.

Congressional budget experts estimated the higher wheat target would raise potential government income support payments to producers by up to $600 million with the exact total depending on market price averages from June through October. The cotton support loan hike in the bill would add another $100 million in outlays, although that money probably will be recovered by the government later.

Over all, federal price support spending in fiscal 1979 — mainly for 1978 crops — is expected to reach about $5.5 billion after the new provisions are added, experts estimated. This total, which includes spending on crops like milk, peanuts and tobacco as well as the grains and cotton included in the new farm bill, would be $1.6 billion below estimated outlays for fiscal 1978.

Earlier this spring, farm state lawmakers pushed a far more generous crop support bill through the Senate in the wake of widespread farmer unrest over low prices and strong lobbying by members of the American Agriculture farm strike movement.

That bill was defeated in the House, however, after Carter warned it would be vetoed and announced a series of administrative steps including the food grain and cotton acreage-aiding payments.

In the aftermath of the House action, lawmakers developed the measure the See FARM BILL Page 14

COL. L.D. BLAKNEY, Apparent Heart Attack Victim

Police Veteran Blakney Dies At Lubbock Home

THE LUBBOCK law enforcement community was stunned Monday afternoon with news of the death of Col. Leonard Dean (L.D.) Blakney, 54, the police department's second highest official who died at his Lubbock home of an apparent heart attack.

Blakney was pronounced dead about 4 p.m. by Justice of the Peace L. J. Blakney, who ruled death due to natural causes.

The nearly 33-year veteran of the police department, who moved here in 1944 10 months before he joined the force as a 22-year-old, had been in ill health for some time and had been on medical leave from the department since April 3.

However, hours before his death about 3:45 p.m. Monday, Blakney had stopped by the department on an errand and had appeared in excellent spirits, one department employee recalled.

Before joining the police department, Blakney worked for the Atlantic Refining Co. and also was a member of the U.S. Army Air Corps and Signal Corps from Feb. 1943 to Oct. 1943.

On June 15, 1945, four days after his 22nd birthday, Blakney joined the force as a rookie patrolman, earning $178.50 a month.

On Nov. 1, 1948, he was promoted to the rank of sergeant and achieved the rank of lieutenant less than three years later on July 1, 1951.

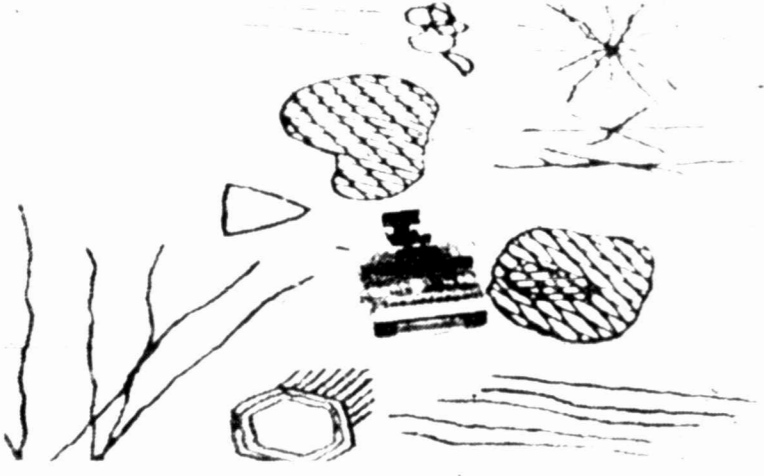

He was made deputy chief on Feb. 16, 1953, and became a captain Oct. 1, 1955. He was promoted to assistant chief of the department on Feb. 1, 1958, and received the title of colonel in 1976, as the department's second ranking official below Chief J. T. Alley.

He was a 51st Session graduate of the See L.D. BLAKNEY Page 14

Spring Means Sneezes To Unfortunate Many

By National Geographic
 WASHINGTON—The Song of Solomon says spring has arrived when "the tune of the singing birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land."
 But for millions of Americans, the arrival of warm weather is the time the pollen has come and the sound of sneezing is heard across the land.
 Tree pollens in spring and plant pollens in summer lead to paroxysms of sneezing. While allergy victims suffer most during these months, people sneeze in any season from a variety of causes.
 Along with winter colds and coughs, any kind of dust in the air, or a whiff of pepper, mustard or other spice is enough for a nasal explosion. A few sensitive people even sneeze at money, reacting to its special ink and paper, the National Geographic Society says.
 The ancient Greeks and Romans regarded sneezing as a good omen. Romans thought if a person sneezed while making a decision, it was a sign that he had made the right choice. Jews believed that to sneeze while praying meant that the prayer had been heard and would be answered.
 A sneeze traditionally also was viewed as showing good health.
 The almost automatic response when someone sneezes is to say "Gesundheit," a German wish for "healthfulness." In Roman times, the word would have been "slave."
 In a recent issue of Human Nature, Brent Stromberg says that connecting a sneeze with good health may have come from the observation that babies frequently sneeze at birth.
A Protective Mechanism
 Dr. Stromberg points out that sneezing is basically a protective reflex designed to prevent foreign objects from blocking a person's breathing. But he notes the mechanisms can be set off by fear of emotional disturbances as well.
 Several years ago, a Miami teen-ager suffered a sneezing attack that disrupted her life and endangered her health. June Clark started sneezing in April 1966 and continued for a record 154 days and nights.
 Sprays and other medication, even hypnosis, failed to halt the spasms. She finally was cured when an electrical device was hung around her neck that gave her a mild shock whenever she sneezed.
 Although a sneeze spreads germs, physicians warn it's better to cover it up than to try blocking it. Pressing the nostrils at the onslaught of a sneeze could divert its force inward, rupturing blood vessels and causing a stroke.
 In one case reported in England, sneezing changed the victim's life for the better. Jean Haymes, of Coventry, had been deaf from birth until in 1973, at the age of 22, she sneezed violently—and has been able to hear normally ever since.

Vietnamese Seek U.S. Residency

Questions, fingerprints, mugshots. It looked like the routine before a prison lock-up—the smiling faces told you different.
 "We've been waiting for this occasion a long time," Hung Ba Vu of Plainview said Monday. "We look forward to becoming citizens of the United States."
 Some 260 Indochinese now living on the South Plains have applied for permanent residency. Two days of hearings before an examiner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service conclude today in the Lubbock City Council chambers.
 Applying for permanent residency with Vu were his wife, Kim Dung Phan, and his daughter, Thien Huong, 6. Another daughter, Clara Maerline, 2, is ahead of the rest of the family. She was born an American citizen at a refugee camp near Fort Smith, Ark., when the Vus arrived there in September of 1975.
 "We will celebrate this," said Vu. "We still are celebrating my graduation. Vu was awarded an Associate in Applied Science degree from South Plains College in Levelland last weekend. Vu, who currently works at Trinity Point General Hospital in Plainview, completed course in retail business management.
 Approximately 1,000 persons, mostly Vietnamese, are expected to be processed in Lubbock before the "crash program" ends Sept. 30.
 "We're beating the bushes trying to get this done," said William J. Chambers, district director of the INS in Dallas. Additional funds were allocated the INS in order to process the applications.
 Most of the Vietnamese have been in the United States the minimum two years and are now eligible for permanent residency status. Five years after they first arrived they will be able to apply for citizenship.
 "Permanent residency status is important to these people because it's the beginning of putting down roots," said Olen R. Martin, INS examiner from Dallas. Of course, they have hopes of going back to Vietnam someday, but we know that's very unlikely.
 Permanent residency gives aliens all the privileges of citizenship, except the right to vote and hold certain government jobs.
 Chambers estimated 20,000 Indochinese live in this district which covers the northern tier of Texas counties and Oklahoma.
 That's one of the biggest loads in the nation, T. Helms said. Chambers. "The Vietnamese prefer the warm weather and it seems most of them have settled in the South and Southwest."
 The time of the next hearings in Lubbock will be determined by the number of applications the INS receives from the South Plains area. Examiners also are visiting Amarillo.
 Chambers said it is important to process everyone by Sept. 30, although he expects the job to be 95 per cent complete.
 "When our funds run out we won't have any money for the extra hours and travel we are putting in," he said. "After September it's likely those applying for permanent residency will have to come to Dallas for the hearing."
 Martin said that applications are accepted in most cases.
 "It's a matter of going through the procedure with each of them and explaining what it means," he said. Those who are turned down usually have criminal proceedings pending against them or the denial may be for moral reasons, but there is very little of that. These people were screened before they were allowed to enter the country as parolees.
 Chambers said he expects to meet the deadline in four months not only because of the character of the Vietnamese, but also because the application process is running so smoothly.

"We've got it down to a science," he said. "We've had some practice in the Dallas area and we've worked the problems out."
 The aliens are being supplied with a new type of identification card to replace the old green card system, Chambers said.
 This one is supposed to be more tamper proof and less easy to counterfeit, he said. Applicants should have them with in a couple of weeks if the work load doesn't get to be too much, he said.
Board Shelves City Bus Route Change Request
 The Transit Advisory Board postponed its informal consensus Monday consideration of a request to alter a bus route near the Coronado Apartments.
 Board members informally shelved Dr. Lester Payne's request for bus service to the apartments at 1017 E. 29th St. after agreeing they do not have enough information to evaluate it properly.
 Dr. Payne, who is co-owner of the 200-unit complex, told the board that his tenants will rely on bus service. Currently the nearest route stops about three blocks short of the complex.
 Without the service, he said, the complex will not develop properly and will remain a slum. If he doesn't get the adequate bus service, he said, "I lose money, you keep a blighted area."
 It is as simple as that, he added.
 The board, however, indicated the situation is more complex. Staff members said the nearest route schedule already is dangerously tight. Safety would be a significant factor if the buses had to increase speed to keep the schedule, said Ernie Premeost of Lubbock Transit Corp. And if the buses ran overtime, the system would lose its credibility with the public, Premeost added.
 Transit coordinator John Wilson added his reservations about the request, saying he recommends no immediate changes in the route.
 The consensus, the board requested a full survey of probable usage on the expansion and of alternate scheduling and routes.

Hobbs Editor Sets Retirement

By John Otis Meekins
A J Correspondent
 HOBBBS — After more than 30 years, James Kustner, 74, is stepping down as the colorful publisher and editor of the Hobbs-Elare.
 She has sold the weekly newspaper to Robert E. Gates of Carriazo, N.M., for 100% publisher of the Lincoln County News and the Torrance County Citizen. He is also a former professor of journalism and mass communications at New Mexico State University in Las Cruces.
 There is a time for everything, and the time has come for me to turn over the publishing of the Hobbs-Elare to a young, more able and capable publisher, Mr. Gates said.
 She added that she has reached the point where she is not able to work the 12-hour shift. She worked for the past two years.
 Every town of any size needs two newspapers, and both sides of any news need to be told, Mrs. Head said. When you have a town dominated by one newspaper, you have a town dominated by political bosses.
 Mrs. Head has lived in Lea County since 1940 and says that she would like to write a book about the important part the Elare has played in the development of Hobbs.
 She became editor and publisher of the Lincoln Leader in 1944 and was in publishing the Hobbs-Elare in 1948. It has a daily and then is a weekly. She sold the Leader in 1968 to devote more time to the Elare.
 Mrs. Head says that because of the frequent meetings of public boards and commissions, formerly held in private, have now been opened to the public. That was not the case 30 years ago, she added.
 Besides fighting for open meetings, the Elare had many fights for open records. One can now go to any public body and check the records, including invoices and payrolls, she said.
 Several years ago, Mrs. Head made headlines across the United States by publishing the names of persons on the welfare rolls in Lea County.
 As a result, many people were ashamed at some of the people receiving welfare and as a result, many persons were purged from the rolls, she said. It needs to be done again as many people are applying for welfare and food stamps.

simply because they are available and easy to obtain.
 The outspoken editor/publisher also battled the Hobbs School Board when she had learned of their plans for the demolition of Will Rogers School and Gym.
 Later, the old buildings have been leased to the City of Hobbs and serve as the Will Rogers Community Center. The Hobbs City Commission later awarded Mrs. Head a plaque for her efforts in saving the two buildings.
 "I'm not afraid to stand up and speak for a cause," she said. "I've no regrets for the past years and no ill will for any one. It has been rewarding to have been a publisher for more than 30 years."
 Mrs. Head and her husband of 47 years, J.C., plan to remain in Hobbs for the time being.

Childress To Help In Traffic Survey

A J Correspondent
CHILDRESS — The city is to assist in an upcoming traffic survey as a project of Amarillo College, city manager David Galligan has announced.
 "We hope the study will be of benefit in our efforts to obtain funding for a railroad underpass or overpass in the city," Galligan said.
 Currently, there is only one underpass at the edge of town on Highway 83 west. City officials would like to have another underpass near the downtown area.
 Residents have petitioned the city council for an underpass, noting that traffic at Lamar Elementary School is well as emergency vehicle traffic often is delayed while trains are passing through.
 Railroad tracks run through the entire length of the city, isolating sections of the southwest side, residents say.

City Students Given Tour At 'Sister Schools'

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Jerry Hale was worried. His custodial crew had been ill and Stewart Elementary, he said, could have used a good cleaning. After all, Monday's visitors were coming from a school with a reputation for being spotless.

The children from Guadalupe Elementary didn't seem to notice whether the halls were scrubbed. They were much too busy touring the brightly decorated classrooms and playing with the students of their court-ordered "sister school."

Under next year's integration plan, half the youngsters who live in the Guadalupe area on the city's north side will be assigned to Stewart, 4815 46th St. Monday the Guadalupe children rode a bus and took a "mini tour" of the Stewart campus.

Letters have been sent to about 100 local service and civic groups asking them to send a representative to the 10 a.m. session in the Hodges Community Center. The invitations are signed by Jane Quade, president-elect of the City Council of Parents and Teachers.

—Educate children, parents and teachers about the integration plan.
—Develop "a network of community-wide volunteers and informed leaders to assist in this effort."
LOOK organizers said they want to get "as broad-based a membership as possible. Although membership will be diverse and individual opinions about desegregation may differ, it would not be the council's purpose to debate the advantages or disadvantages of the plan, but rather to work for smooth implementation."

Develop strong ties between their schools. "If we have to change schools, we're glad we're going to Stewart," Oliver said.

SECOND HALE CENTER PROTEST — Concerned Citizens of Hale Center Monday again protested what they say is "excessive force" being used by North Elementary School principal Haden Moore in punishing fourth and fifth graders at the school. Angry parents, also joined by some students, say that they have received little response from school officials concerning their allegations that Moore has "excessively bruised" some children when punishing them.

The group, which held a similar demonstration in front of the school April 25, says they will not be satisfied until Moore is removed from office. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

Transportation Seminar Set By UTA Business Professor

Nationalizing America's railroads seems to be the only answer to handling the railroad labor issue, according to Dr. Pat Calabro of Delta Nu Alpha, a national transportation fraternity.

A harsh critic of the current railroad system, Calabro said the industry needs to spend $38 billion for updated equipment by 1985. The U.S. needs a railroad system for bulk cargoes, he said, but only two developed countries, Canada and the U.S. have privately owned rail systems.

Calabro sees the trucking industry making the same mistakes as railroads. Both started out as passenger vehicles that switched to cargo and, at first, served their clients well, he said.

Langford said in the statement that trustees met after the reported incident and that about 19 persons alleging Moore had abused the child appeared at the meeting. The group demanded the principal's resignation; the statement reads:

Also in the statement, Langford said the matter was given serious consideration.

Southwest To Receive Fare Hike

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Aeronautics Commission approved Monday the first fare increase for Southwest Airlines since 1974.

President Herbert Kelleher promised that "absent any catastrophic increases in costs," the new fares will hold until the 1980s.

Southwest has been "flying more and more for less and less" profit, he said.

The fare increase, effective July 1, will result in 98 percent of Southwest's customers paying $5 more per roundtrip, Kelleher said.

While Southwest has held the line of increases, air carriers regulated by the Civil Aeronautics Board have had 14 fare increases, Kelleher added.

Input costs have risen by 121 percent since Southwest went into operation in June 1971, he said, but the company managed to offset rising costs with greater productivity.

He cited higher labor costs, the need to expand facilities in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio and Austin and the purchase of new planes as reasons for higher fares.

Last year only a tax break enabled Southwest to avoid asking for a fare increase, Kelleher said.

Southwest fares will go up from 75 percent to 20 percent, depending on the price of the ticket, the commission staff reported. The biggest increase will be a $3 increase in the one-way $15 fare.

Kelleher said Southwest's yield of 6.95 cents per mile is the lowest in the nation.

This increase is noteworthy only because Southwest never applies for a fare increase," he said.

With the trade-in of three old planes on three new ones, Kelleher said Southwest will have the "youngest fleet of aircraft in the world." This exchange, he said, will cost Southwest $12 million.

"The evidence is clear," he said, "that Southwest holds the line on fares, does not unnecessarily ask for price increases and, when it can, reduces fares without urging by the commission."

TANK CARS EXPLODE — Smoke billows from 15 derailed cars of a Southern Pacific freight train near Nacogdoches Sunday afternoon. Three tank cars containing an unidentified substance exploded, forcing the evacuation of several hundred persons within a two-mile radius of the burning cars. (AP Laserphoto)

Experts To Probe Train Derailment

NACOGDOCHES (UPI) — Railroad experts waited Monday for smoky tank car fires to subside so they could begin investigation of a 16-car derailment which forced the evacuation of thousands of area residents.

Several tankers continued to leak corrosives, flammable liquids and flammable compressed gas, but fire officials had contained the blaze by early Monday and planned to wait until the fire burned itself out.

Between 2,500 and 3,500 persons began returning to their homes after officials decided the danger of explosion had passed.

It was the second time in less than a week that residents of East Texas town were forced to evacuate. Hundreds of Walton, Texas, residents had to leave their homes Thursday after a gas well began spewing deadly hydrogen sulfide.

The tankers, part of a 117-car Southern Pacific train, jumped the track Sunday just outside the city as the train crossed a small wooden trestle that crossed a stream feeding into Sam Rayburn recreational lake.

Three derailed cars — carrying two flammable liquids, ethyl acrylate and propylene oxide, and a flammable compressed gas, butadiene — exploded, scattering smoking shards of hot metal into nearby woods, causing additional fires.

The track where the derailment occurred had been inspected and found without defects only 90 minutes before the derailment, said Southern Pacific spokesman Joe Bart. The train itself had passed an automatic inspection device that indicated no defects just prior to the derailment.

"This train had passed an automatic hot box and dragging equipment detector about 1 1/2 miles before it derailed, and there was no indication of defective equipment," Bart said.

Bart said despite the chemical-laden blaze, no toxic materials were being released into the air. A whitish-blue haze drifted over the southern edge of the city Sunday shortly after the derailment. That haze initially was thought to be gas but later proved to be smoke from the fires.

Two firemen, two policemen and a deputy sheriff were admitted to the local hospital with respiratory problems.

Telephone Owners Get Credit

AUSTIN (AP) — General Telephone Co. customers who now own their own telephone would get a minimum 55-cent credit under a proposed tariff change filed by the company.

The company, which serves approximately 800,000 customers in 162 Texas counties, also would grant a 85-cent credit for each customer-owned extension phone.

The proposals were discussed Monday during a Texas Public Utility Commission hearing.

Julie Parsons of the commission's economic research division testified that the company should allow the same credit for a household's main phone as for each extension phone.

Mike Billings of General Telephone said the price difference between extension and main lines resulted from a need to collect administrative overhead costs from customers.

Egan though the customer provides his main line, he ought to contribute something to the company for the service.

Billings said Hearing Examiner George Schamen presided at the hearing. His recommendations will go to the commission for final action.

The company also requested an increase in its service installation fee to make up for revenue lost from customer-owned equipment credits.

"Hello?" "Hi, it's me." "Marge? I was just thinking of calling you!" "That's funny, I was just thinking of calling you. How are you?" "How are you?" "Is there an echo in here? I called you first, you tell me." "Ha, Ha, Ha. I'm fine. That is, I think I'm fine." "What do you mean, you think you're fine?" "Well, it's a long story." "Tell it. Your stories are always a riot." "Well, at 9:30 this morning, our seventy-two-year-old neighbor, Mr. Phillips, brought over his new deluxe vacuum cleaner." "What?" "He wanted to demonstrate it, he said, so he emptied it all over my living room floor. Then he proceeds to vacuum not only the living room floor, but also the furniture and the walls, using about three hundred different attachments." "How nice." "Well, you see, he only tid half of everything. And since I don't clean as often as I should, everything was half clean. Now the story gets better." "I hope so." "You see, his vacuum cleaner has a special air freshener feature. You put it in reverse, fill it up with air freshener and let it rip." "Hmmm." "The only problem was, he had forgotten to empty the bag. So he hits the switch and the entire living room was immediately filled with this black, dirty cloud of dust. Not to mention the smell of perfumed air freshener. I mean, I think the man has lost his mind." "He says, 'This vacuum cleaner can handle anything' and then takes off vacuuming everything in sight! Now, in the middle of all this, who should arrive but Jack, coming home for lunch! And what does he do? He goes into the closet and pulls out our vacuum cleaner, and the two of them begin comparing features!" "I don't believe it." "Then he challenges Mr. Phillips to a race to see who can vacuum up the mess first. And whoever wins gets the other guy's vacuum cleaner." "Who won?" "Well, let me put it this way, Mr. Phillips has two vacuum cleaners. We have none." "Ha, Ha, Ha." "It's not funny!" "Yes it is." "Here's the culprit now, Jack, do you want to talk to Fred?" He says no. "Put Fred on." "Hello? Jack are you there? Jack? You-ho, Jack??" "Yes, I'm here." "Marge tells me you gobbled away the family vacuum cleaner." "Yeah, well it was close. I'm challenging the winner to a weight lifting contest tomorrow." "Who's the winner?" "Our neighbor. He's seventy-two years old. I'll tell you, Fred. I don't get any respect anymore." "Now where have I heard that?" "Suzie asked me to take out the garbage last night and I told her I'd already taken out the garbage, and you know what she says? 'Well, then go out and keep an eye on it.' " "Funny." "Yeah, I bought Jimmy a hat for his birthday and the first day he plays with it he lets it go." "No respect." "No respect at all. I'll tell you we're sending Alice to a private school now, you know." "Yes, I know." "It's so private, she won't even tell us where it is." "Ha, Ha, Ha." "Well, now I've lost the family vacuum cleaner and run out of old jobs, you tell me what's new with you." "Well, not one whole heck of a lot." "Then why are we talking?" "One interesting thing did happen down at the plant." "Are you going to tell me about it, or is this some kind of a test?" "Last week one of the workers asked me if he could take some sawdust home." "Was he going to open a bar, or what?" "So I say sure." "Maybe he had a new vacuum cleaner he wanted to test." "I'll take all the sawdust you want." "Or make sawdust pancakes." "Are you listening?" "Yeah, I'm listening." "So I say, Sure, take all the sawdust you want." "You already said that." "And I fill out a form authorizing him to remove the sawdust in a wheelbarrow past the security guard." "That was a dull story." "I'm not finished yet." "Well, hurry up." "So every day for a week this guy takes a wheelbarrow of sawdust out to his car." "Hurry up!" "Until yesterday, one of his fellow workers came up to him and said, 'Hey, what's this with all the sawdust? Are you stealing it or what?' and the guy looks at him and says 'Heck no. I couldn't care less about this stupid sawdust. I'm stealing wheelbarrows.'" "Now that's funny." "I thought you'd like it." "Great gawd!" "You know I have a neighbor like yours. He's an old guy, very lazy. Every day he sits out on his front porch rocking away watching the cars go by. And yesterday I was talking to him and I asked him if he ever got bored—just sitting there." "Yeah? So what?" "And he said, 'No, I never get bored. Because I have a hobby.' I said, 'Hobby? You couldn't have a hobby. All you do is sit here all day. What's your hobby?' 'Bees,' he said. 'I raise bees. Well, I couldn't believe this. I said, 'Where's the beehive? I've never seen any beehive around here.' And he said, 'I keep my bees inside.' 'Inside?' I said. 'Let me see them.' So the old man took me inside and I said, 'Okay, where are your bees?' And he said, 'They're in the bedroom.' So we went into the bedroom and still no bees. So I said, 'Where are the bees?' And he said, 'I keep them in the closet.' You keep your shoes in the closet?' I said. And he said, 'Yeah, I keep them in a jar in the closet.' 'But if you keep them in a jar, they'll die.' And he turned to me and said, 'Hey, look, I told you it was only a hobby.' " "Funny. That's pretty funny." "Hey, when are you people coming back here to visit us?" "Never." "You old sour puss." "You're coming here next time." "Not until you get a new vacuum cleaner." "It's bring your own vacuum cleaner, and we'll sweep the town." "Listen, Suzie is yelling in my ear to get off the phone and let her talk to Marge some more." "Okay." "Take it easy, Fred, and remember our invitation. If you don't come here, we'll never see you again!" "I bet." "Bye." "Bye." "Marge, hi." "How's your garden these days?" "Everything is very hot and very dry here. But I'm managing to grow a strong and healthy batch of weeds." "Oh, good." "I mean they're some of the biggest weeds you've ever seen." "Terrific, you can use them in a salad. Or make weed sandwiches." "How's your garden?" "Oh, it's okay. I just unleashed one entire carton of frozen lady bugs yesterday, so they should keep the predators away." "Frozen lady bugs?" "Yeah, you can buy them frozen in cartons of several thousand, and you thaw them out and let them go. They drive away other insects." "I bet." "No, really, they're great. You should try them sometime." "Plan, or with butter sauce?" "Hey, did Freddie ever finish building his car?" "Oh, yes, it's finished all right." "How does it look?" "Oh, Suzie, it looks awful. I mean they did a terrific job, but it looks like a hot rod." "Oh, no." "Oh, yes, Fred hates it. He says he's going to pay to have it stolen some night." "Only problem is, Freddie does everything but sleep in that car, and if anyone started it in the middle of the night, you'd hear it a mile away." "Hell, outgrow it." "I suppose so, but guess what the latest project is?" "What?" "They're building a gyrocopter." "A what?" "Gyrocopter. It's a one man helicopter. Isn't that dangerous?" "What can we say? It belongs to the neighbors' kid." "The one with the big tool shop." "Right." "What do his parents think?" "I don't think they know what it is." "Humm, Jack, have you ever heard of a gyrocopter? He says... wait a minute..." "Marge, did you say Freddie is building a gyrocopter?" "Yes, Jack, why?" "I want one. I've always wanted one. Will he let me ride in it?" "Oh, you're impossible." "I'm serious. I've always wanted a gyrocopter." "Well, I'm sure Fred would be delighted if you came out here and got this one." "I will. Here's Suzie again." "Hi." "Your husband is crazy." "I know." "But also one of the most delightful people I've ever known." "Thanks." "What's happening in the old home town these days? Anything interesting?" "Well, let me think... Peter and Corinne moved away." "Oh?" "Yes, he's going to work in Winnemucca, Nevada, of all places." "Nice. How does Corinne feel about it?" "Well, apparently it's only for a few years. He'll be working on a new project, then I guess they'll come back here or move somewhere else." "Have you talked to them since they left? How do they like it?" "I haven't called them yet. They just moved a few days ago. The Blooms had a big going away party for them." "How nice." "Yes, it was nice, but you know what a problem I have remembering people's names?" "Oh yes." "Well, this was terribly embarrassing, a man came up to me at the party and he was one of these guys I'd seen before in the neighborhood, and I should have remembered who he was, but didn't. And he was very nice and came up to me and said hello, and while he was holding my hand, Sally came by—you remember her—" "Yes." "And I waved and said, 'Hi, Sally! How's your handsome husband these days?' And she gave me this strange look and said, 'You should know you're holding hands with him.' " "You know I did almost the same thing one time." "You did?" "Yeah, Fred and I were given two tickets to a show, but we couldn't use them because we were going out for dinner that night. So thinking fast, I phoned these people down the street and said, 'We have been given two tickets for the show tonight, but we can't use them because of an unfortunate dinner engagement, would you like to have them?' " "Fine, we'd love to go; but we happen to be your unfortunate hosts." "You're kidding." "Bad, eh?" "That's bad." "Well, listen, kiddo, take care of yourself and please try to keep that husband of yours out of trouble." "You, too." "And make him buy you a new vacuum cleaner." "You better believe it. You take care, too. And I hope we'll see you guys sometime." "I hope you'll see us, too." "We had a fabulous time at your house last time you came out." "Well, you're invited any time." "No, you're invited here." "Okay, take it easy. We sure miss you." "We miss you, too." "Bye." "Bye."

Trio Knifes Man In Lubbock Park

An early-morning stroll through a park in southwest Lubbock Monday ended with the knifing of a 23-year-old man, police said.

The victim, a resident of an apartment complex just adjacent A. M. Leftwich Park at 61st Street and Elgin Avenue, said he was walking near a play lake when two men and a woman approached.

"We thought we could find you down (here)," one of the trio said.

The victim said he didn't reply to what obviously was an ominous greeting.

"We're not going to play with you anymore," one of the eventual assailants said. "This time you can kiss your good-bye."

As the two men approached, the victim said he struck one of them, then noticed one of the men brandishing a knife.

"I don't know what it is you want," the 23-year-old said plaintively to the men talking him.

"Yes, you do," one of them said, before ripping the man's shirt open and throwing the frightened victim to the ground.

Though a second man reportedly also produced a knife, the victim recalled later that a woman interceded, saying, "No, I want to do it."

"If you don't bleed to death, you're going to remember me!" the victim said the woman told him callously.

During the brief melee that followed, the victim reportedly suffered a long, vertical wound to his abdomen, then was cut horizontally across the stomach three times. He also received a smaller cut to his right forearm, police reports indicate.

A car approached, frightening the assailants away, the man told police, and the victim walked the several hundred yards back to his apartment intent on getting a gun.

However, he later told police, the man elected to go to an neighbor's apartment instead to phone police.

The victim said he may have recognized the woman who did the cutting. The cut man later was taken by ambulance to Health Sciences Center Hospital but his wounds were believed to be superficial.

Two men, who fit generally the description of two of the assailants, were arrested minutes later at a bowling alley on suspicion of being drunk and also being involved in the incident, police said.

An 82-year-old minister said vandals inflicted about $2,000 damage on his car recently, while it was parked in the lot at Estacado High School.

J. E. Alexander of 1510 E. 2nd St. said he found his car with all the door windows broken, four flat tires, the front and rear seats slashed, his tape player and radio damaged and the wires to his distributor jerked clear, after he left the car at the school over the weekend.

Break-in artists used a tire tool and a sturdy boot heel in recent days to gain entrance to the Farm Discount Store on the Plainview Highway.

Walter Stephens of Route 3, Lubbock, said the burglars took some $3,875 worth of electrical tools and saws during what must have been a lengthy operation.

Cause Of Death Determined By Autopsy

A pathologist reported Monday that a 60-year-old New Deal man, murdered at his home early Saturday, died from multiple stab wounds and not from a single gunshot wound to his chest.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith, who had requested the autopsy on the body of Carlos G. Herrera, released the information.

A single, 22-caliber bullet removed from the body was "flattened," Smith said, and of no use to lawyers for ballistics tests.

Smith said examination of the body revealed that Herrera had died of massive internal hemorrhaging.

Smith said attempts to count the number of stab wounds had been inconclusive, but it was known that Herrera had been stabbed at least 20 times. A kitchen butcher knife with a six-inch blade was recovered in the man's back yard at his home located two miles south of New Deal.

An investigation into Herrera's death is continuing, Lubbock County deputies said Monday, but a man believed to have been a prime suspect has been questioned and released.

A requiem mass for Herrera will be celebrated at 2 p.m. today at St. Joseph's Catholic Church with the Rev. Michael McCormick, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens under the direction of Henderson Funeral Directors.

The Uvalde native moved to the New Deal area in 1949 and was a member of the St. Isidro Catholic Church in Abernathy.

Survivors include a son, Roger of Lubbock; five daughters, Longina Olivas, Beatrice Cantu and Lena Perez, all of Lubbock; Angelita Ponciano of New Deal and Mary Navarro of Three Rivers; three brothers, Ponfillo, Enrique and Eulalio; and two sisters, Paula Ortiz and Lucinda Ureste.

Persons interested in taking the U.S. Postal Service clerk-carrier examination may apply May 30 through June 5. Starting salaries range from $6.50 to $9.19 an hour. Application blanks will be available at the main post office, room 202, at 1515 Ave. G, according to Elmer J. Reed, postmaster.

Survey Studies Drinking Habits Of American Ethnics

EDITOR'S NOTE: The results of a survey of more than 1,000 American parents and adolescents reveal the drinking habits of American ethnics. Unlike drugs like marijuana or heroin, which garner much publicity, alcohol usage has seldom been the focus of intense study. Now a study sponsored by the National Institute for Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, carried out by the University of Chicago's National Opinion Research Center, thoroughly details the drinking patterns of American ethnic groups of Western European origin who reside in four major American cities — Chicago, New York, Boston and Minneapolis. The authors of the series are with the University of Chicago's National Opinion Research Center.

(c) 1978 Universal Press
Strabo, a Roman student of the Celts before the Christian era, reported that those wild, charming, passionate folk were furious drinkers. Should the distinguished Roman historian return to contemporary large American cities, he would have little reason to change his description.

Of the four American ethnic groups studied by the National Opinion Research Center (NORC) under a grant from the National Institutes of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA), the Irish easily won the prize for being the heaviest drinkers. But their Italian Catholic co-religionist were runner-ups, even though they are much less likely to have serious drinking problems than Irish Catholics.

Second In A Series

It should be observed that the NIAAA NORC research is not an attempt to defame Irish Catholics. Two of the three studies had focused on the ability of various ethnic groups to cope with old age and dying. The Irish would emerge as by far the most successful group. Unfortunately, no one as yet has funded major research on the ethnic response to aging and death.

Irish-American men studied in Chicago, Minneapolis, New York and Boston, consume on the average 388 ounces of ethanol (the alcohol component in intoxicating beverages) a year, which is almost exactly the same as the consumed by Italian men, though much of the Italian ethanol consumption is in wine and more than 40 percent of the Irish ethanol consumption is in hard liquor. Swedish Protestant men drink somewhat less — 265 ounces of alcohol a year, and Jews consume only 40 percent as much alcohol as the Irish — 148 ounces a year.

Similar patterns exist for women. Italian and Irish women consume approximately 130 ounces of ethanol each year, and Jewish women 90 ounces. For Jews and Italians, however, one-half of their ethanol consumption comes from hard liquor, while almost 70 percent of the ethanol of Irish women comes from hard liquor.

But the sheer amount consumed is not the only difference among the drinking subcultures. Half the Irish men in the NORC sample say they drink almost every day, as opposed to 40 percent of the Italian, 30 percent of the Swedes, and only 10 percent of the Jews. One-third of the Irish men in the sample have a predinner drink every day, while 20 percent of the Italians and Swedes have such a predinner drink, as do only 8 percent of the Jews. Nineteen percent of the Irish, 12 percent of the Swedes, 6 percent of the Italians, and 3 percent of the Jews say they would miss drinking a lot if they had to give it up. Not only are the Irish the most likely to drink hard liquor daily, but when they drink they drink more of it — on the average of two drinks a sitting as compared to slightly more than one drink on the average per sitting for the Jews.

The Irish also move in an environment of heavier drinking than do other ethnic groups. Fifty-four percent of the Irish, 41 percent of the Italians, 36 percent of the Irish, 41 percent of the Jews say they drink nearly every time when they get together with friends. Thirty percent of the Irish, 24 percent of the Italians, 23 percent of the Swedes and 16 percent of the Jews say that more than half their friends are heavy drinkers.

It has often been suggested that the Irish have a propensity to drink — noted by every student of the Celtic culture from Strabo to the present. Perhaps it is the result of some genetic predisposition that is transmitted from parent to child. However, the NORC/NIAAA research offers no support for such a genetic explanation.

The different drinking styles of the four ethnic groups studied can all be accounted for by different patterns of learning about alcohol usage. The Irish drink more than the Jews, for example, not because of differences in personality or genes but because their parents drink more (especially their mothers), because their spouses drink more, because their friends drink more, and because in strict religious Jewish families there is a horror of excessive drinking. Indeed, when one takes into account such environmental influences as parent, spouse, friends, and Jewish religious affiliation (Conservative or Orthodox), the differences of alcohol consumed per year among the four ethnic groups vanish.

Sociologist Richard Stivers of Western Illinois University, in his study of Irish drinking in Ireland and America, "The Hair of the Dog," places much of the explanation for the heavy Irish drinking on the horrors of the mid-19th century famine and to anti-Irish stereotyping in the early years of Irish immigration in this country. Like all immigrants groups, Professor Stivers (who is not Irish) observes, the Irish turned the negative stereotype of the stupid, brutal, gorilla-like Irish drinker into the positive one of the happy drunk. That stereotype became part of the self-image of many Irish Americans. Irish drinking, according to Stivers, is in part the result of bigoted, nativist stereotyping of the immigrants.

Whatever the explanation for heavy Irish drinking, there is no need to go beyond historical explanations for the sheer amount of alcohol consumed. Genetic or personality explanations are not required. But, as we shall see in Part III, the question of Irish problem-drinking — as distinct from amount consumed — is immensely more complicated.

Jury To Receive Aggravated Robbery

Final arguments were scheduled today in the aggravated robbery trial of John Henry Childress, Jr., accused in connection with a 1976 robbery of an elderly man.

Victim George V. Dirickson, 69 at the time of the incident, was beaten on the head with a baseball bat and, according to testimony, sustained a fractured skull.

Dirickson, now 70, said he was collecting rent at an office at 2105 E. Broadway when he was robbed Dec. 14, 1976.

The witness testified that four young men came into the office about 1:30 p.m., and that one of them inquired about renting a house.

Shortly thereafter, Dirickson said, another of the quartet picked up a baseball bat that was in the corner of the office and attacked him.

"He walked over and drew back and swung at me," Dirickson told Asst. Dist. Atty. Cindy Miller.

"I was about as bloody as a stuck hog," he said at one point. "I've still got scars on the top of my head from it."

Dirickson said he thought he had tried to ward off the attack. "I must have thrown my arm up because it was mighty sore when I came to," he said.

The victim indicated Childress, 18, of 1504 E. 14th St., looked as if he might have been one of the four men. He said the defendant was not the one who attacked him with the bat, which, he had explained earlier, had lain around the office for three or four months.

A doctor told the six-man, six-woman jury in Judge Denzil Bevers' 72nd District Court that X-Rays revealed a skull fracture. "It was like an egg that was cracked, but not smashed in," the physician said.

Dirickson testified he was in the intensive care unit of a local hospital for five days and was hospitalized about two weeks in all.

He said a bank bag containing $160 was in a desk drawer of the office. He also testified that personal items, including a watch, billfold and pocket knife, were taken from him.

Prosecutors introduced a statement made by the defendant Dec. 15, 1976, in which he indicated he was one of the four men present when Dirickson was assaulted and robbed.

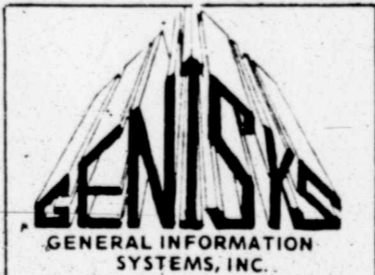

In the statement given police, Childress indicated he and three other men were discussing money "and someone said something about robbing an old man at the car lot down the street."

"We then went to the car lot," the statement reads.

According to the statement, one of the other men got the bat and hit Dirickson. Childress' signed statement said the four split some money, getting about $40 each.

Responding to questions from defense attorney Frank King, Childress took the witness stand to say he had lied in the statement given police.

He said he had turned himself in to authorities the day after the robbery because he felt it was the right thing to do.

Market Shows Good Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market overcame some profit-taking Monday in a late afternoon recovery which pushed the Dow industrial index to its highest level in more than seven months.

The widely watched indicator of blue chip performance gained 6.06 points to close at 846.76, its highest level since last Oct. 3 when it closed at 851.96.

The Dow Jones industrial index rose more than 18 points in the previous two sessions.

The market came in for some profit-taking in morning trading as the Dow index fell about three points before drifting slightly higher by mid-afternoon. Most of the buying, however, developed in the final hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Overall gaining issues outnumbered losers by not quite 4-3 among NYSE-listed stocks. The NYSE composite index of all listed common stocks rose .33 to 55.18.

Big Board volume came to a fairly active turnover of 33.89 million shares, down from Friday's heavy volume of 46.60 million shares.

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Exchange stocks as of NYSE close. Prices and volume considered for securities also traded on other markets.

Italy's Vote Swings Right

ROME (AP) — Italy's Christian Democrats scored sweeping gains Monday in local elections, gathering strength from a voter backlash to the kidnap-murder of former Premier Aldo Moro and other terror attacks by left-wing extremists.

Reversing a move toward the left registered in the 1976 national elections, Italians gave the Christian Democrats 42.5 percent of the vote while the Communists slumped to 26.5 percent — a drop of 9.1 percent from the 1976 results.

Violence continued as ballots were being cast in more than 800 municipalities. An auto company official was shot and seriously wounded Monday in Bologna by members of the Red Brigades — the same group that killed Moro, who also was president of the Christian Democrat Party. The Bologna executive was the 10th victim of terrorist gunmen in eight days.

Much of the forward surge by the Christian Democrats came at the expense of the second-ranking Communists, despite the Communists' vehement condemnation of the Moro murder and of terrorist actions.

The Communists, parliamentary partners with the ruling Christian Democrats, backed the government in its rejection of Red Brigades demands that jailed terrorists be freed in exchange for Moro, whose bullet-riddled body was found in an abandoned car in Rome last Tuesday. He was kidnapped and his five bodyguards slain in an ambush March 16.

Polls opened Sunday and closed Monday afternoon in most of the 816 small and medium-sized communities in central Italy, where 3.8 million persons — 10 percent of the national total — were eligible to vote. Higher than expected turnouts were reported in almost every precinct, with the average put at 88.6 percent.

Final Results Talled

With a complete count from all 4,430 precincts, these were the results: Christian Democrats 42.5 percent, Communists 26.5, Socialists 13.3, Social Democrats 4.8, the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement 4.5, and Republicans 3.2, with minor parties getting the rest.

In comparison, the Christian Democrats won 38.9 percent in the national elections in 1976 and 36.6 percent in the last local elections in 1974. The Communists, who had been cutting into the Christian Democrat strongholds, received 35.6 percent of the votes in 1976 and 25.3 percent in the 1974 local elections.

The Communists' strong showing in 1976 virtually forced the Christian Democrats to accept them in the parliamentary alliance engineered by Moro just before his abduction.

A Christian Democrat communique hailed the elections results as a "great satisfaction" and "clear response to terrorism."

Wave Of Emotion Seen

Armando Cossutta, a Communist Party official, said the Christian Democrats made gains because of a "profound wave of emotion" following Moro's death and their parliamentary agreement with the Communists.

Some analysts believe Moro's slaying may accelerate a rightward drift elsewhere in Europe. Italian newspapers had speculated that French voters, who went to the polls three days after Moro was kidnapped, may have been influenced by the attack. The French backed the ruling centrist alliance despite pre-election predictions of a Socialist-Communist victory.

The first hint of an Italian conservative protest showed up in the area of Trent, a northeastern city where Red Brigades founder Renato Curcio developed his terrorist philosophy. Polls there closed Sunday.

Complete returns from the city of Rovereto, the biggest voting center in the Trent area, showed the center-right parties with a 65-to-35 percent edge over leftist factions. Christian Democrats had been losing ground to leftists in Trent, once a conservative stronghold.

In Bologna, a long-time Communist stronghold, a self-proclaimed Red Brigades squad shot Antonio Mazzotti, 48, personnel director for the Menarini car body factory. He was reported in serious condition with bullets in his legs, stomach and chest.

This is the Red Brigades. We have executed Dr. Mazzotti of Menarini, a servant of the state," an anonymous caller told the Italian news agency ANSA in Bologna.

SUZETTE SCHOLZ
Chosen As New Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader

Former Tech Beauty Cheers For Cowboys

Suzette Scholz, a former Texas Tech cheerleader, was one of 32 women chosen Saturday to be a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader.

"This has been the most exciting thing that ever happened to me," Miss Scholz said.

She is the 19-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Scholz of 4603 10th St. Over a period of three weekends, a field of 1,500 applicants was narrowed to 81 for the finals. The women performed disco dancing in groups of four for the finals. Judges included Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders choreographer Texi Waterman and coordinator Suzanne Mitchell.

Sixty applicants were chosen for the last three stages of the finals which included learning a routine, taking a quiz on the Cowboys and having a personal interview with the judges.

Well Blowout Forces New Evacuation

WALTON, Texas (UPI) — An oil well that has spewed deadly hydrogen sulfide gas for a week blew out again Monday, renewing officials' fears of an explosion and forcing additional evacuations.

A spokesman for the Van Zandt County sheriff's office said anyone living within a seven-mile radius of the well was requested to evacuate.

David Tullis of the Department of Public Safety in Tyler, said the blowout extinguished the wildfire that members of Red Adair's oil well firefighting team had lighted to reduce pressure within the well and lessen the chance of explosion.

However, Tullis said members of the Houston-based wildfire crew managed to reignite the blaze and hoped to have the well capped by Thursday or Friday, barring additional complications.

Tullis said area residents, some of whom have been forced from their homes since Thursday, remained cooperative with officials.

"Of course, it is an inconvenience," he said.

"Then we had to wait about two hours to find out who made it and who didn't," Miss Scholz said. "I was just thrilled. Especially because so many reporters and magazines and television people were there all day."

threat from the Soviet Union and radical Arab states. Saudi leaders seek help, friendship and ties with the United States. This is a new relationship, and skepticism is understandable. But rejection and turning our back are not."

Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said rejection of the sales would be "a stunning blow" to Saudi pride and moderation.

"I believe that the prospects for peace would be significantly eroded by such a repudiation, and so I must reluctantly vote for the sale on that ground alone," said Baker.

More Jets For Israel

But then he called on Carter to approve a commitment to provide an additional 75 F-16 jets to Israel.

Opponents of the sales questioned the administration's judgment that supplying warplanes to the two Arab countries would enhance prospects for peace.

Sen. Joseph Biden Jr., D-Del., sponsor of the resolution to block the sales, said they would have "a debilitating effect on the prospects for peace."

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., in a speech focusing primarily on the Saudi sale, said rejection "would be a shattering vote of no confidence in our president, our secretary of state, our secretary of defense and our joint chiefs of staff."

We should carefully weigh the consequences of publicly repudiating the judgment and reliability of our own leaders."

Not Too One-Sided

McGovern concluded by saying "I plead with my Israeli friends not to press the American public and the U.S. Congress too one-sidedly. Do not ask us to spurn Egypt and Saudi Arabia to demonstrate that we treasure our relationship with Israel."

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., arguing against the sales, said he agreed with administration contentions that Soviet activity in Africa and the Middle East is a threat to the security of Saudi Arabia.

However, he attacked the administration for failure to come up with a policy to deal with the Soviets.

"What it truly has," said Moynihan of the administration, "is technology. Ingenious, wondrous, efficiently lethal technology — the engineering and manufacturing genius that is the F-15. But not a policy."

President signed today. It was tailored — with the exception of the cotton support loan provision — to comply with terms administration officials announced in advance would be "acceptable" to the White House.

The cotton section includes a 48 cent a pound floor under the support loan rate for the crop, up 4 cents from the level produced by a formula adopted by Congress in 1977. The loan rate, which is designed to set a floor under market prices, is the amount the government will lend farmers who post their crop as security.

PRESIDENT AND TRIBESMEN — Philippine President Ferdinand E. ture at this time to say if the Taobatos' discovery is of any major significance. After the Tasadays were discovered in 1971, anthropologists said they would not be surprised if similar primitive people were found in other remote areas of the Philippines.

A year after the discovery of the Tasaday, Marcos set aside a preserve of about 45,000 acres for them. Nothing has been heard from or written about the tribe in recent years. The new tribe was discovered about 500 miles northwest of the Tasadays.

The palace did not say what kind of tools the Taobatos used, nor did it say when the discovery was made, or by whom. However Marcos mentioned a "recent" discovery of a primitive tribe in Palawan in an informal interview in February.

In striking contrast to the Tasadays, the Taobatos apparently grew some kind of tobacco, wore multi-colored necklaces that appeared to be made of beads, and built fires by rubbing two stones together, using dried moss as tinder.

Sturdy Five-Footers

Marcos said the men were sturdy, with well-proportioned bodies, and averaged about five feet in height.

No other details of the tribe's culture were released. A palace spokesman said more information in Marcos' possession still had to be sorted out.

Marcos' wife Imelda accompanied him on the trip, as well as his daughter Irene, Manuel Elizalde, the presidential assistant for national minorities, and Dr. Jesus Peralta, curator of the national museum and an American-trained anthropologist.

The settlement is located south of a network of about 200 caves where government anthropologists have found pottery, jewelry, primitive tools and other artifacts believed to be thousands of years old.

An American archeological consultant of the Philippine government, Dr. Robert Fox, dug up a man's fossilized skull in one of the caves in 1962. Tests on the skull, called "Tabon man," have proven it to be 24,000 years old, the palace said.

Five photographs of the tribe released to the press were personally chosen by Marcos, the spokesman said.

Minority minister Elizalde and archeologist Peralta, along with some photographers, stayed behind in the valley for more studies, the spokesman said.

Soviet Dissident Orlov Allowed Statement In Defense Of Self

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuri Orlov, founder of the Soviet Union's best known dissident group, was allowed to make a statement defending himself at the opening of his trial Monday, his wife Irina said.

"I refuse to take part in the proceedings if you don't let me speak," Mrs. Orlov quoted her husband as saying. The trial was closed to foreign reporters.

Mrs. Orlov, who was allowed to attend with her two sons, told reporters outside the courthouse her husband was accused of sending slanderous information to Western embassies and correspondents and getting paid for it.

Humanitarian Concerns

Mrs. Orlov said her husband, founder of the "Helsinki" human rights group, defended himself by saying he was motivated by humanitarian and not political concerns.

Orlov founded the group to uphold the provisions of the Helsinki Agreement, a statement signed in 1975 by 33 nations that froze postwar European borders and supported human rights.

"Yuri's defense was brilliant," said his lawyer, Yevgeny Shalman. "He was more polite than anyone there."

Shalman said Orlov's statement lasted for about 1 1/2 hours. The trial is scheduled to continue Tuesday with the questioning of witnesses for the prosecution. Orlov named a dozen witnesses he wanted to call to his defense, Mrs. Orlov said.

Besides barring Western journalists and Orlov's supporters, Soviet authorities refused to allow Nobel Peace Prize winner and fellow dissident Andrei Sakharov to attend the proceedings. U.S. Embassy First Secretary Richard E. Combs, who came as an observer, was also kept from entering the courthouse, which was surrounded by dozens of uniformed and plainclothes policemen.

U.S. Concern Expressed

In Washington, the State Department expressed concern about the trial and that Combs wasn't allowed to attend.

"We are obviously concerned about the trials of those attempting to monitor compliance with the Helsinki final act," spokesman Hodding Carter said.

In London, the Foreign Office issued a statement terming Orlov's trial and continued detention of dissidents "very disturbing."

The Soviet news agency Tass said Orlov was accused of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda," a charge which carries a maximum penalty of seven years in a labor camp plus five years of internal exile. Tass said Orlov admitted writing and distributing documents which "contain fabrications, smearing the Soviet state and social system."

Orlov, who lost his job at Moscow's prestigious Institute of Earth Magnetism in 1973 when he spoke out in defense of Sakharov, answered "no" when asked if he understood the charges, his wife said.

Helsinki Documents

Mrs. Orlov said the charges against her husband involved the presentation of a number of documents from the Helsinki group dealing with such subjects as alleged misuse of psychiatric confinement and repression in the Ukraine.

In his defense, she said, Orlov took responsibility for writing and distributing the Helsinki group's documents, but denied that they were harmful to the state.

She said Orlov, who has been held incommunicado since his arrest, 15 months ago, looked thinner "but happy, he was smiling."

The Orlov trial is the first of an expected series of trials that climaxes a year-long drive to curtail organized dissident activity in the Soviet Union.

Tass said two other dissidents, writer Zviad Gamsakhurdia and musician Merab Kostava, both 39, pleaded guilty to similar charges in a trial in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi. They were members of the Georgian branch of Orlov's group.

Also Monday, one of Moscow's most active remaining dissidents, Alexander Podrabinek, was reported arrested.

ARRIVES FOR HUSBAND'S TRIAL — Mrs. Irina Orlov, left, is shown on her way into Moscow courthouse Monday when her husband, physicist and human rights figure Yuri Orlov, went on trial on charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. # Patty Hearst Prepares For Return To Prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An "extremely depressed" Patricia Hearst spent her last hours of freedom Monday preparing to return to prison to complete her seven-year sentence for federal bank robbery.

U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter said Miss Hearst, 24, was to surrender at the minimum-security prison facility at Pleasanton, 30 miles east of San Francisco.

Miss Hearst, free for 18 months while unsuccessfully appealing her conviction, will have to spend at least 14 months there before being eligible for parole next year.

Miss Hearst reportedly spent the past week at San Simeon, the fabled coastal estate built by her late grandfather, newspaper magnate William Randolph

Hearst, 200 miles south of her suburban Hillsborough home.

She was described as "extremely depressed" about her return to prison. The Times of San Mateo quoted unidentified family sources as saying she was especially concerned because all but 15 days of her previous 14 months in custody were spent in solitary confinement.

During her previous incarceration, Miss Hearst spent several weeks at the campus-like Pleasanton facility but was transferred to a San Diego prison after her attorney, Al Johnson, complained of threats on her life.

She was freed on $1 million bail in November 1976, eight months after she was convicted of joining her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers in an April 1974 armed holdup of a quiet residential branch of the Hibernia bank in San Francisco.

While free on bail, Miss Hearst was protected by private security guards and kept a low public profile.

Last March 24, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review her conviction, and District Court Judge William Orrick Jr., in a secret agreement with her attorneys, declined to modify his seven-year sentence.

Miss Hearst has cooperated with authorities since her September 1975 arrest in San Francisco. She is scheduled to testify for the prosecution when SLA members William and Emily Harris go on trial in October in Oakland on charges of kidnapping her. At the time of her kidnapping, Miss Hearst was an art student at the University of California at Berkeley.

The Harrises, among the few remaining survivors of the tiny band of revolutionaries that gained international attention with the Feb. 4, 1974, abduction, were her companions during her 19 months as a kidnap victim and fugitive.

Miss Hearst was captured in San Francisco in September 1975. At her two-month trial, she tearfully recalled her life on the run, saying the Harrises threatened her and instilled in her a fear of the FBI. She testified her captors told her she would be killed if she refused to participate in the bank robbery, which netted the terrorists $10,960.

Miss Hearst renounced taped "communiques" in which she declared her allegiance to the SLA, saying she was forced to make the militant statements.

She was also accused of spraying a Los Angeles sporting goods store with machine gun fire in May 1974 to cover the escape of the Harrises during a bungled shoplifting attempt. She pleaded no contest to an assault charge and was placed on five years probation.

The FBI, calling her the first political kidnap victim in American history, launched its most massive search ever for the elusive newspaper heiress. After the bank robbery, the FBI changed her status from victim to fugitive.

In May 1974, Los Angeles police surrounded an SLA hideout in Los Angeles and an hour-long shootout involving hundreds of police ensued. The house was engulfed in flames and the bodies of six SLA members were found inside.

Robert Jones Wins First Wiesen Prize

The first Thomas F. Wiesen award, presented to the Texas Tech University graduating senior with the highest grades in economics, was received Friday by May 1978, graduate Robert L. Jones.

The award was established in honor of the late Thomas F. Wiesen, who was a faculty member of the department of economics from 1940 until 1962. Wiesen was named acting chairman of the department in 1942 and became permanent head in 1946. He returned to fulltime teaching in 1953 and retired in 1962.

Jones received an engraved plaque and an honorarium of $50. The presentation was made by Richard Wiesen of Lubbock, son of the late professor Wiesen, who died Feb. 21.

A permanent plaque bearing the name of the recipients as they are announced each year will remain in the department.

Jones, majoring in economics and minoring in English, has made the Dean's Honor List each semester at Tech. He also is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jones of 3632 60th St.

Pantex To Expand Work Force

AMARILLO — Pantex, a nuclear weapons assembly plant, will expand its work force by 10 percent over the next two years in order to handle increased production of warheads, the Department of Energy has confirmed.

The payroll additions — totaling about $1 million a year — were confirmed by Paul H. Wagner, DOE contract administrator at Pantex.

The increased Pantex work load requirements are contained in a transcript of DOE hearings held in March before House Appropriations Committee.

The Amarillo Globe News obtained a heavily censored transcript of the hearings and learned Saturday of the increase in production.

"We have 1,850 on board right now; we intend to increase between now and fiscal year 1981 to between 2,000 and 2,050," Wagner said Saturday. "That's the personnel increase we're talking about for all programs in this area." The plant's annual payroll is in excess of $30 million.

Pantex is the nation's only final assembly point for nuclear weapons. Its increase in production was brought about by President Carter's decision to step up production of nuclear weapons.

Gen. Joseph K. Bratton, director of the DOE's division of military application, told the House appropriations committee that without additional manpower, Pantex doesn't have the capacity to handle the projected work load.

"In order to do the work load that we have outlined for you, that the President has approved in a stockpile program, we simply have to expand the facility there to meet it," Bratton testified. DOE asked for $10 million for the Pantex expansion to handle the increased work load.

The House committee, however, trimmed the $10 million expansion request for Pantex to $5 million.

Wagner agreed that the full $10 million is needed for expansion at Pantex, and said he was optimistic that the remaining $5 million can be budgeted for the following fiscal year.

Pantex initially will be involved in assembling multiple warheads for the Trident and Minuteman missiles. The Trident is a 6,000 mile range Navy launched rocket while the Minuteman has a range of 7,000 miles, is land-based in the Upper United States and operated by the Air Force.

Pantex also will modify nuclear warheads for the Lance, a 75-mile-range Army rocket heavily concentrated in Europe and designated to carry a neutron warhead if Carter approves.

The missile warhead work was confirmed last week by Donald Kerr, DOE acting assistant secretary for defense programs in Washington.

Government Tightens Card Rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Monday ordered all persons under 18 years old who are applying for a Social Security card to begin furnishing solid proof of identity and age.

"It's another step in our fight to keep illegal aliens from getting jobs" by using the cards for identification, said Jim Brown, spokesman for the Social Security Administration. "We can't stop cheating completely, but this will cut back on it."

Six million new Social Security numbers are issued each year and 80 percent of those go to U.S. citizens and legal aliens under 18.

Under a law passed in 1972 and gradually phased into effect, all persons over 18 already have to furnish birth certificates or other proof of age and identity to get a card. The new rule extends that coverage to under-18s.

It requires young Americans applying for a card either by mail or in person to furnish a public or religious birth record and another record — such as vaccination certificate, school record or driver's license — to establish identity. Parents who seek a card for young children must also provide such documents.

Legal aliens must provide similar identification papers.

If a birth or baptismal certificate is not available, another document may be used if it is at least one year old and shows information such as the applicant's name, address, age, signature or photograph.

Documents mailed to Social Security offices will be returned, Brown said.

"The whole purpose of this change is to make sure that the people who have Social Security numbers, have them legitimately and are entitled to have them," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. Where can I get information on Treasury bills which in a recent column you described as "the safest type of investment"? How do they work? Are they taxable or exempt from tax?

A. You can get information on Treasury bills at your broker, your commercial bank or at any Federal Reserve bank or branch.

Treasury bills are short term government loans, running anywhere up to a year. They are bought at a discount from face value and are paid off at face value. The interest thus earned is subject to federal income taxes (but not states or local income taxes) and varies according to the length of the maturity. For example, on the day your letter arrived, bills due in a week were selling to yield 5.96 percent on an annual basis and bills coming due in a year were yielding 7.55 percent and maturities in between were yielding returns in between these rates.

The column you referred to merely stressed the fact that the reader who asked the question had no reason to worry about the safety of a Treasury bill. The same is true of a Treasury note or bond, or any other direct government debt. There was no intention to describe "T-bills" as the ONLY "safe" investment, an impression which, it seems, was gathered by many readers.

Treasury bills are ideal vehicles for money which can be invested for anywhere from a week to a year. As such, they are handy instruments for employment of large, short-term funds. They are not necessarily the ideal investment, for example, for retirees in need of generous long-term income.

Q. Our children, 5 and 2, will soon receive $4,000 each to be invested for them until they reach the age of 18. What type of investment would give the highest gain with the best tax break?

A. Assuming the children have no taxable income now, I don't think there is much reason to worry about a tax break. Any earnings on $4,000 are not likely to cause a tax problem.

As for the best return over the next 13 to 15 years:

You could put the money into bonds or preferreds yielding somewhere 8 1/2 percent, which interest or dividend could accrue in a savings account. At 8 1/2 percent an investment unaffected by income taxes can double in less than nine years.

Or — you could buy each child $4,000 worth of growth shares — and hope for the best by age 18.

Q. I am a widow, in my mid-50s, with a good job and a high tax bill mainly because of $30,000 in taxable savings. I'd like to buy some tax-exempt bonds. Would it be best to put them in my children's name?

A. Not necessarily. The vast majority of tax-exempt (municipal) bonds are in bearer form (no name). If you will your securities to your children, there would be no problem in any transfer.

Q. What is the schedule of events which govern a bankruptcy case?

A. Each case is different. Some may be quickly settled, others may drag on for years. You must ask the trustee.

Q. I bought some public utility stock at $25. The prospectus says that anytime prior to Nov. 1, 1982 I may redeem it at $26.50. I've been told that is not true.

A. And so say I. (You evidently bought preferred shares. Common are not redeemable.)

You are referring to the redemption provisions which the company (not you) may exercise. The company is not required to redeem the shares but MAY do so its own option. As far as you are concerned, anytime you want your money back you will have to take market price.

Q. Is it legal for a lawyer to claim one-half of a small estate?

A. Ask your own lawyer.

Mr. Shulsky welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

LOOKING IN — Lubbock dentist Glenn Gay, a retired U.S. Navy captain, takes advantage of an Armed Forces Week invitation to look in on his military counterpart at Reese Air Force Base. ## Reese Opens Doors To Honor Retirees

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

South Plains military retirees will be very important persons during Armed Forces Week at Reese Air Force Base.

"We will open our doors for those of you desiring to informally investigate the present state of the art in your active duty career field," read a special invitation to known retirees from Col. Charles E. Bishop, Reese commander.

Former military personnel will be matched with Reese military for as much as a day's look at what modern technology has done to the military ways of yesterday.

While on the base, retirees will be learning about a new Air Force program, a Retiree Information Service Desk to be located in the Family Services Center.

The new program will provide a point-of-contact for retirees' questions and will aid in coordination of base services.

Getting a head start on other visitors was Dr. Glenn Gay, a dentist, who recently retired from the U.S. Naval Reserve as a captain.

Dr. Gay found the Reese dental clinic quite a change from WW II active duty, when he was getting inductees ready for duty and sometimes repairing the damage war had done to teeth.

Dr. Gay's action time in Korea and Vietnam action was spent wherever he could replace active duty dentists, on ships or on shore.

As his reserve assignment, he headed the reserve dental training clinic in Lubbock, and his annual duty was spent anywhere around globe he was needed.

At Reese for Armed Forces Week, Dr. Gay swapped a few tales about how it used to be while he looked over the system that replaced it.

There was no provision for dentists in the reserves when WW II came along, so, to allow Dr. Gay the year he needed to complete his dental training, the Navy enlisted him as an apprentice seaman.

"We'd drill and do all that stuff," Dr. Gay recalled of his enlisted reserve status during his schooling.

Most of his duty, he said, was stateside in the California area, but he spent the last six months of active WW II service on loan to the Air Force at Lackland AFB.

Looking for a civilian slot, the Coleman native signed up to help in a Lubbock office.

Reserve service was just beginning to be upgraded with reservists "getting something out of it" for reserve jobs and annual active duty sessions.

He retired recently as commander of the Lubbock reserve unit with more than 30 years of service.

Cancer Danger Seen In 'Burgers

NEW YORK (AP)—Hamburgers cooked too long at temperatures more than 300 degrees Fahrenheit in an electric frying pan or an electric home hamburger-cooking appliance can produce cancer-causing substances, a research team reported Monday.

The hamburgers cooked under these conditions give off chemical substances called mutagens, which "may represent a risk of cancer in people," according to researchers from Washington University's Center for the Biology of Natural Substances.

They said the same substances also have been found in several commercial food preparations that include beef extract.

The team at the St. Louis, Mo., university is headed by Dr. Barry Commoner, a noted biologist and environmentalist. Commoner said the possible risk is as yet unknown.

"Fortunately," Commoner said, "our results also show that regardless of how large or small it eventually turns out to be, the risk can be reduced to zero by choosing an appropriate cooking procedure."

The research results show that the substances do not appear if the hamburger is broiled under a heat source or in a microwave oven, Commoner said. Also, the risk can be reduced if the hamburger is fried only to the rare stage, he said.

"Apparently the crucial factors are the cooking temperature and the time of cooking," he said. "The temperatures produced by a broiler or a microwave oven are not as hot as those produced in an electric hamburger-maker, and therefore, produce fewer mutagens."

Mutagens are agents that can cause genetic changes. Scientists say that almost all substances that are mutagens also are capable of causing cancer.

The research was presented in a paper to be given at the annual meeting of the American Society of Microbiologists, which opened Monday in Las Vegas. The paper was made available in New York by the Scientists' Institute for Public Information.

Commoner said the researchers had not studied other cooked meats.

He said once scientists determined the molecular structure of the mutagens and the precise chemical reactions responsible for their formation in cooked beef and beef extract, then experiments could be made to see whether they can cause cancer in test animals.

Lacy Cites Oil Industry Ties

Midland oilman Jim Lacy brought his "Texas Needs an Energy Man on the Railroad Commission" campaign to Lubbock Saturday, and the Republican candidate says he will be the only candidate in the November general election with any practical oil and gas experience, regardless of which candidate the Democrats field after their runoff June 3.

Lacy will oppose either Jerry S. Sadler or John H. Poerner after their Democratic primary runoff.

Lacy says he entered the race to fill the unexpired term of retiring Railroad Commission member Jim Langdon because he has been in the oil and gas industry for some 30 years and he feels the industry deserves some representation on the Railroad Commission.

"The first thing Mr. Poerner did when he was appointed to fill Langdon's term by Governor Briscoe was to go down there and announce that he didn't know anything about the oil and gas industry," says Lacy.

"And Mr. Sadler says he worked in the oil fields," continued Lacy. "But if he did, it must have been 50 years ago."

"The difference between me and them is that I am an oilman, and they are not," said Lacy.

"After having held engineering, managerial and executive positions in the industry, I understand the industry well enough to regulate it in such a way as to benefit the general public," Lacy continued.

The Midland Republican said he thought it inconceivable that the oil and gas industry could pay 22 percent of the taxes in Texas; employ 250,000 with a payroll of $3.6 billion and be regulated by a commission without one single member being from the oil and gas industry.

"Texas and the nation are standing at the energy crossroads of crisis," said Lacy, "and the energy decisions made within the next few years will determine the economic destiny of our state and nation for generations to come. To deny the expertise and input of the energy industry in making the right decisions is a luxury that we cannot afford."

Now an independent oilman, Lacy served 19 years in various engineering and managerial capacities for Kewanee Oil Company before becoming executive vice president and director of Adobe Oil and Gas Corporation.

Lacy resigned from Adobe to become president and chief executive officer for Hyltech Energy Corporation, a Midland-based oil and gas firm.

He said he would put all of his oil and gas interests into a blind trust if elected to the Railroad Commission.

Lacy and his wife Juandelle reside in Midland where his daughter Rhona Jo Lacy is a school teacher in the Midland School system. A son, James Jr. and his wife, Christy, are students at Texas Tech.

Lacy is a veteran of World War II and a 1949 Texas Tech graduate.

"It is important that people realize how important the oil and gas industry is to Texas," Lacy said. "Texas produces 1/3 of the oil and gas produced nationwide, and nearly $1 billion in taxes is paid by the industry."

All Texas businesses paid $1.5 billion in taxes last year and almost $1 billion of that was from the oil and gas industry," he continued. "Consumers paid the other $2.9 billion, and, were it not for the oil and gas industry, their share would be raised from that $2.9 billion to almost $4 billion."

Auto Safety Devices Under Review

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Transportation Department proposed Monday that all auto-safety devices for children be improved to protect youngsters from being tossed about like "flying missiles" in head-on collisions up to 30 miles per hour.

It recommended that the safety standard that presently covers child auto seats be expanded to include car beds, hand-held infant carriers and child harnesses.

The proposed rule also would require that these devices be tested in motion crash tests with dummies, simulating a 3-year-old child and a 6-month-old infant. The present regulation calls only for static tests of child seats.

All child restraints would be subject to frontal impacts at speeds simulating 20-mile-per-hour crashes, and would be required to retain the test dummy in the system without any loss of structural integrity," said the department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

"Adoption of these measures is of paramount importance. For our statistics indicate that approximately 1,000 children up to age 5 are killed and 100,000 in this age group are injured annually in motor vehicle accidents," said agency head Joan Claybrook.

"Many of these deaths and injuries could be prevented or reduced in severity if the children were restrained so they are not thrown against the vehicle interior or during a crash," she said. "Children who are unrestrained in a crash literally become flying missiles."

Miss Claybrook said parents must be made to realize this, because it would do no good to issue a new rule if it were not used.

She said the proposal would be open to public comment until Dec. 1, after which a final rule would be written. The child restraint section would become effective May 1, 1980, while the dummy testing requirement would be to go into effect when the final rule is published in the Federal Register.

Under the proposal, the seating systems would be required to attach to the auto by the vehicle's seat belt.

Infant car beds when used would have to be placed laterally across the automobile seat, using the available seat belt or one supplied by the manufacturer.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers, You answered my son's letter in 1968. You answered my letter in the paper last year. Both replies were very helpful. Now I have another question. Please don't let me down.

If a homosexual really wants to be straight, is it possible? After living the gay life for 15 years, can a person who wants to, go the other way?

Ministers say it is a matter of morality. Doctors say it happens at birth — or when the child is very young, depending on his relationship with his mother or father. Others say it is because the child was molested at an early age by a pervert.

Only a parent who has lived with the problem can understand the heartache. I can't tell my son how much it hurts. He would think I was a hypocrite if he knew I started and ended every day with a prayer asking God to do whatever possible, or to show me what I can do to make my son normal.

Please give me more answers. — Ohio Mother

Dear Mother, First, not all ministers say it is a matter of morality. Many churches have okayed gay clergymen. Second, no doctor whose opinions I respect would say all homosexuals are born that way. (About 2 percent maybe, but they are victims of "biological mix-ups.") Third, the pervert theory is 100 percent wrong.

Can a homosexual go straight? It is possible, but highly unlikely. A reversal would require tremendous motivation and a great deal of therapy.

From your letter I get the impression it is you who is agonizing — not your son — and my heart goes out to you, dear. But I know of no homosexual who ever left the gay life because his mother asked him to.

My advice is get some help for yourself. You are the one who needs it. Please write again and tell me that you did.

Dear Ann, Three months ago, Greg gave me an engagement ring. We have been fighting ever since. The wedding is scheduled for June. I'm wondering if I should go through with it. For example:

Last night I fixed Greg's bacon-lettuce-tomato sandwich. He found four things wrong with it. The bread was too hard, the tomatoes were soggy, the bacon was burned and there wasn't enough mayonnaise. He carried on about the damn sandwich for an hour.

Do all engaged couples go through this sort of thing? — Morristown, N.J.

TOMATO ADDITION

Add a skinned, seeded and finely diced ripe tomato to homemade mayonnaise and serve with asparagus.

Dear N.J.: Either your fiance is childish or he is dwelling on unimportant things in order to avoid the real issues. If you two can't get your act together when you're sweethearts, what makes you think you can make it as Mr. and Mrs.?

Dear Ann, I work in a physician's office and love my work. The problem is the doctor's wife. She used to have the job I now have and she won't give it up — emotionally. Every day she's down here, looking at the books, meddling. Yesterday when I went out for lunch I returned to find she had rearranged my desk. I was boiling inside but controlled my anger. The two women who preceded me in this job left because of "Mrs. Dr."

Should I write a letter of resignation and be "The Third To Go"?

Dear Third: Why write it? Tell him why you are leaving. If he has enough guts (and good sense) to instruct his wife to stay out of the office, he'll do it and ask you to remain. If he can't hack it — clean out your rearranged desk and make way for No. 4.

Drugs? How much is too much? Is pot O.K.? Is L.S.D. too much? If you're on dope or considering it, get Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (24 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611. ## Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: After cleaning up spilled sugar and cinnamon for the umpteenth time due to my children making their own cinnamon toast in the morning, I decided to do something about it. This is what I came up with.

To a stick of softened whipped margarine (placed in bowl), I added about eight heaping teaspoons of powdered sugar and one teaspoon cinnamon. Mixed well with a fork, then beat on high speed with my electric mixer until smooth and creamy.

I put this mixture into a small plastic margarine container and made a label, "Cinnamon Butter," for it and stored in the refrigerator.

My children loved it especially on toasted raisin bread and it surely doesn't leave a mess as did making cinnamon toast in the past. Also it's creamier and the powdered sugar is dissolved more easily than granulated sugar.

Of course, my supply didn't last long, so since the first batch, my recipe has tripled in size. Also I've made it with softened "regular" stick margarine (un-whipped) and the soft tub-style margarine and still got good results.

Try it on French toast for a delicious alternative to syrup. Very good! — Pam Dailey

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

I had to laugh, but not at your daughter, of course. We all have to learn sometimes and I'm sure your letter brings back to all of us similar funny goofs we have made at one time or another.

Thanks for sharing a chuckle. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE

When cleaning under sofas and chairs that are hard to move, tip them back if there is room, or forward if not. It's then easy to run the sweeper under them.

After years of learning new things from your column, I would like to share an idea with you.

After washing my husband's sneakers, he discovered the tips were no longer on the sneaker strings. He said he put some sticky, clear tape around the strings in order to lace them up.

And that's the name of the game, honey bun. Drop those tips in our lap any time. We love hearing from you. — Heloise

Here is another old-time unblocking hand. It is the sort of hand that everyone will make the second time around, but most players will play carelessly at trick one and wind up with nothing but regret.

With the preceding paragraph as a hint, the play should be easy. South rises with the ace of diamonds and drops his queen.

Now all he has to do is draw trumps, cash his ace of spades, lead the nine of diamonds to dummy's 10 and be sure of an entry to get three club discards on the queen, nine and seven became equal. But it was necessary to drop the queen in order to be able to force an entry to the dummy with the 10-8 in case trumps failed to break 3-2.

The bidding of the hand is more interesting than the play. There are probably umpteenth ways to bid to a slam.

Ask the Experts

Any number of readers have written to ask us why South had to develop a squeeze to make six hearts in our article of February 6.

The answer is that he didn't need a squeeze. There were 12 tricks there for the taking as our readers pointed out. Please accept our apologies.

By Jon-Michael Reed
NEW YORK —During the last few years, TV serials have developed a habit of depicting a rash of seductively staged, near-nude love scenes. A portion of the viewing audience is up in arms at the almost continual parade of enticing disrobing.

A viewer from San Diego writes, "This new trend in soap operas is shameful. I've had to turn the set off or change channels because it seems that everyone is jumping into bed to carry on their conversations. My 12-year-old daughter and 3-year-old granddaughter are aware that these people are not really married to each other and want to know from me why they are naked in bed, etc." It is very embarrassing and I have no answer.

The answer is obviously to keep children away from the sets if you find this sort of frankness disturbing because the trend toward explicit and/or seductive serial shenanigans is on the rise. Networks have discovered that candid discussion and depiction of sexual problems has attracted younger, more liberal audiences. The new permissiveness on daytime screens is a reflection of contemporary morals, or so the producing thinking seems to insist. The trend on at least half of the current serials is to get out of the kitchen and the coffee klatch into the bedroom and the core of many marital problems.

The other half of the serial line-up still caters to the conservative audience that prefers their serials "straight" and talky rather than candid and depictive. You're not likely to see "half-naked" bodies on shows like "As The World Turns," "Guiding Light," "Another World" or any of the other serials owned, produced, and ruled with a conservative eye by Procter and Gamble. The more "trendy" serials like "All My Children," "The Young and the Restless" and "One Life to Live" on the other hand are more free of sponsor control to present their stories in a manner they feel is relevant to contemporary standards.

On "Y & R" performers shed their shirts or blouses at the drop of a towel. One was recently commented that their "One Life" likes to display Karen Wolek's cleavage and Brad Vernon's untee-shirted pectorals periodically. Even a once-conservative serial like "Love of Life" takes viewing advantages of the physiques of their robust, younger cast members. Shoulders and chests aside, however, it's doubtful that serials will ever go all the way. On the other leg, serials have come a long way from the days when married couples were shown sleeping in neck-high negligee and buttoned pajamas, in twin beds.

Tune in Tomorrow to the serial that best projects your own viewing and standards.

What happened to the actress who played Mary Matthews on "Another World"? —F.P. Denver, Co.

Virginia Dwyer originated and portrayed Mary for 11 years before the character was "killed off" in 1975. Last fall, after a long courtship, she married Los Angeles Times newspaper correspondent Osgood Caruthers. The couple recently returned from a trip to Cairo, and Virginia states she's ready to resume her career in another serial.

I adore Liz on "Young and Restless." Is she really married and does she have a family? —R.R. Columbus, OH.

Juliana McCarthy (Liz) married actor Michael Constantine (of "Room 222" nightmare fame) while performing in the original Broadway production of "Inherit the Wind" in the late 1950s. In 1971, the couple separated but remain friends and parents to their children, 18-year-old Theo and 8-year-old Brendan.

What happened to the character of Johnny Dallas and Tracy and Danny Micelli on "Edge of Night"? —L.C., Weymouth, Mass.

On "As The World Turns" Kim had a bowl of pet goldfish before she married Dan. Afterwards, the fish were never seen. What happened? —N.H. Lubbock, TX.

When Kim suffered a temporary memory loss, the fish were given to Betty. When Kim's memory returned, the show had new writers who thought life was a bowl of cherries rather than a bowl of fish. The pets were sent to that big fish tank in the sky.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When I was pregnant the first time I got toxemia in my seventh month and lost my baby. Now that my kidneys are back to normal, I would like to get pregnant again. Please tell me what I should do to avoid toxemia again. I am 26 years old, average weight, and never had high blood pressure or kidney problems before. During my pregnancy I saw my doctor regularly and watched what I ate. — D.D.

complain of numbness in the hands when operating a power mower. The person should remove the blade and check it on a blade balancer. Also the carburetor may need adjustment. The proper rpms might also be checked, as well as the body of the mower. A crack can contribute to unwanted vibration and produce numbness.
However, the blade is usually the culprit. I read and enjoy your column daily and just thought I'd add this bit of non-professional advice. — R.A.

The cause of toxemia in pregnancy is still a mystery. It is, as the name implies, a poisoning of the blood, which can occur in late pregnancy, usually in the last three months. It's more a symptom than a disease and almost always preceded by weight gain, blood pressure rise, and the presence of albumin in the urine, the latter the result of kidney overwork.

Thank you, R.A. I shortened your letter, but the essential point is made for all those summertime numbed-hand patients to note. Many readers suggested this diagnosis.

If nothing else, the specter of toxemia should be ample justification for early pre-natal care. Your chances of having it in a second pregnancy are increased slightly. Those monthly urine tests (for albumin) are a guard against developing toxemia. Mothers who get such care run a very slim chance of developing toxemia. The odds shoot up sharply for those who do not seek such care until late in pregnancy.

Depends on just how fast it builds up, of course. Knowing you are a fast-former once a year should be enough. If you have hearing loss or ear ringing, it should be done more frequently.

The chief symptoms (besides inordinate weight gain) are fluid retention (edema) and elevated blood pressure. These are almost always found in women who later develop toxemia. The condition seems to be related to an altered (speeded-up) metabolism during pregnancy. One key to control is to keep weight gain within the range considered normal in pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am one of those persons you speak of who just seem to form wax in the ears in excess. How often should I have my ears cleaned? — P.L.

Your previous experience should spur you to be seen early and frequently, so your weight gain and urine can be carefully watched. If you do this you should have no trouble. You should avoid alcohol and tobacco; get a normal diet, ample rest.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

If toxemia is not controlled, serious problems can arise for the mother and fetus. Advanced symptoms are fever, headache, abdominal pain, blurred vision, and ultimately convulsions.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have read about bulk-producing capsules one can take before a meal to fill up the stomach so you won't feel hungry and eat less. If this is a feasible way to lose weight? — Mrs. P.E.

Couple Repeats Wedding Vows

Apparently not. For one thing the bulk pills evidently are removed from the stomach rather quickly. They do most of the bulk-producing in the intestines. Hunger sensations originate in the stomach. This would not reduce your hunger. The bulk producers have their proper place in relieving bowel problems, but seem to fall far short as anorectics (appetite suppressors).

Tina Bullard and Chuck Stephens were married at 7 p.m. Saturday in East Side Church of Christ in Snyder.
Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Jervis Bullard of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stephens of Snyder.
Maid of honor was Mrs. Larry Farr, sister of the bride Steve Wilson of Midland served as best man.
The bride was graduated from Western Texas College. The bridegroom was graduated from West Texas College and attended Abilene Christian University.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: May I offer a bit of non-medical advice for readers who

Odd Nails Provide Collector's Hobby

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Frank Horwath was driving near the Indiana hamlet of St. John one day when he spotted an old shed surrounded by pile of rotting planks.

"I stopped the car, walked over and peeked inside," said Horwath. "An old man was sitting in there. I told him that I was a nail collector. 'Help yourself to a handful' he said, pointing to bucket of rusty nails. 'They were saved from that fire they had in Chicago.'"

"And that's how I got 15 square nails of different sizes from the Great Chicago Fire of 1871," said Horwath, 68, a retired carpenter.

Horwath said his love affair with nails began when he was 14 and was sorting them for his father, a cabinet maker.

"I began saving different sized nails and got to thinking there must be a lot of odd nails in the world, and there sure are," he said.

Horwath has 15,000 varieties of nails from 40 countries. They are documented and mounted on wooden panels lining the walls of the hobby room in a home he built himself.

"Museums that know of my collection tell me it is the biggest in the world," he said. "School classes and Boy Scout troops stop by to look at the collection and sometimes I set up displays in hardware stores and at the Senior-Citizen Center."

Horwath goes nail hunting in antique shops and shows, flea markets and junk yards. He's received nails from the world over, writing manufacturers from lists he got from consulates. Others are sent to him by people who know of his collection. Horwath has nails from a village church in Switzerland where the French leader of the Protestant Reformation, John Calvin, preached. He has an original nail (actually a tack) from the first nail machine, invented by Ezekiel Reed of Massachusetts in 1712.

He has original nails from the oldest dwelling in the United States, in St. Augustine, Fla., built in 1365, and from Independence Hall in Philadelphia, built in 1732.

Horwath said he exchanged many nails with the late L.C. Wills, a collector in Birmingham, England. Some include crude hand-forged nails from ruins of Roman villas in the British Isles dating to about 400 A.D.

The biggest "nail" is a two-pound, 15-inch-long circus tent spike, and the smallest is a needle nail, 95,000 to the pound.

"My most valuable nails are my 50 'tie-backs' — nails with heads inlaid in mother of pearl, or heads of opaque or Sandwich glass," said Horwath. "Many of the nails of ancient kings had heads set with rubies, emeralds and diamonds. The head comes off, and after the nail has been hammered in, the head is put back on. Most of them were used to hang pictures."

"The square nail has made the biggest comeback of all," said Horwath. "Because of their holding power, they are used to fasten wood to concrete in most buildings. With more demand for the square nail, we've just about made a complete cycle."

TV Producer Draws From Real Cases For Show's Plots

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) Jack Webb can do more with a file cabinet than an investigative team from the FBI or the IRS.

The producer-director-actor began in television's infancy by rummaging through the Los Angeles Police Department records for his enormously successful "Dragnet" series in which he starred as detective Joe Friday.

When that series concluded its long run, the ever-clever Webb made use of the U.S. Treasury files — not, of course, including classified material — for his "O'Hara, U.S. Treasury" series starring David Janssen.

In recent years Webb perused the Los Angeles Fire Department and a Long Beach (Calif.) hospital case histories for his series on paramedics in the "Emergency" series.

These days Webb is combing the United States Air Force Blue Book on Unidentified Flying Objects for his new hit show, "Project U.F.O."

Any producer could have done the same thing, especially in light of the freedom of information act.

Most of the files are in public domain. It is necessary to disguise names and places to avoid embarrassing individuals actually involved in the stories. The government, too, censors names and places to protect private citizens.

Webb's reliance on official documents for story lines gives his shows a hard-edged documentary look which has become his trademark.

"The economy of dialogue and attention to detail help," Webb said, grinning from behind his desk at Goldwyn Studios, headquarters of his Mark VII production company.

It would appear that Webb has an easier row to hoe than most producers whose scripts are based solely on fiction. One would suppose all Webb need do is pluck an incident or case from the files, add some drama, dialogue and film the episodes.

Not so says he. "It's very hard work constructing an entertaining piece of film from actual cases. I've done both kinds of shows and as a producer I find that pure fiction is much simpler."

"Project U.F.O." is the first dramatic science-fiction television series to capitalize on the runaway success of "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Webb hasn't seen either movie, partly to escape accusations of copying the special effects in the films.

"I didn't want to be influenced, even subconsciously by the movies," he said. "I didn't want anyone saying I ripped them off."

"We have our own special effects men who are doing a terrific job. It amounts to shooting two shows at once — the special effects and the story or plot line."

"Thanks to special effects, this is the most expensive series I've ever produced. Each episode costs a half-million dollars and about a quarter of the budget goes for effects."

Webb shot the pilot for the series this past October before "Close Encounters" was released. Once NBC saw what "Star Wars" was doing at the box office and heard about the potential of "Close Encounters," they came to Webb waving a contract.

Last November the network asked Webb how soon he could get his series on the air. NBC brass wanted the first episodes to start in January. It was simply impossible," Webb said. "Special effects take time and the pressure was terrific. But they did order 12 episodes with a 12-14 week lead time. We made it in February."

"We're still working on the last segment of that contract, delivering each show only three or four days before they go on the air."

"I'd like to have had more time to do these shows, but I think we're providing real quality. We're losing money on each episode, going over budget, but we hope to make up for it on the reruns." "Operation U.F.O." is acknowledged to be the biggest hit of all of NBC's new 1978 series. It is also the harbinger of more sci-fi space adventure shows in the coming season.

Webb thinks the day of cyclical programming is over, however. He doesn't foresee a plethora of science-fiction matching the glut of horse operas and detective shows of the past. Webb expects to see at most a half-dozen new science-fiction thrillers sprinkled around the networks.

Kaye Pleases Benefit Crowd

CLEVELAND (AP) — Using a fly swatter to conduct "The Flight of the Bumble Bee," entertainer Danny Kaye delighted an audience of 2,000 and had the 106-member Cleveland Orchestra roaring with laughter in a benefit concert at Severance Hall.

His antics Sunday night included a duet in Japanese with violinist Keiko Furusaki. Kaye estimated that the performance raised $170,000 to benefit the orchestra's sustaining fund.

He said he had one complaint about Cleveland — he didn't like the way the Cleveland Indians treated the Seattle Mariners earlier this week in sweeping a two-game American League series. Kaye is a part-owner of the Seattle baseball team.

Journalist Gets New Post

NEW YORK (AP) — Marilyn Berger, moderator of the public broadcasting television series "The Advocates," has been named director of programs for the Council on Foreign Relations.

The council said Monday that Berger, former NBC White House and national security affairs correspondent, will be responsible for the 1,800-member council's meetings and programs and for "broadening the public impact and effectiveness" of its activities.

Berger formerly worked for the Long Island newspaper Newsday and was a diplomatic correspondent for The Washington Post, covering the Middle East and strategic arms limitations, before joining NBC.

She left the network last fall. The Council on Foreign Relations is a privately funded, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization founded in 1921 and devoted to bettering international relations, according to its annual report.

Flynt Moved For Therapy

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt, paralyzed below the hips, has been transferred to the rehabilitation facility at Ohio State University Hospitals for therapy to help him walk again.

Hospitals spokeswoman Nancy Grover said Monday that Flynt's therapy, which has not yet begun, will be designed to meet his initial abilities and progress made over the next several weeks.

"The length of his stay in Dodd Hall will depend upon his response to his rehabilitation program," she said. "Mr. Flynt's present weakness involves both lower extremities. His outlook is positive and we are hopeful for continued progress."

She said security arrangements were being handled by university police under contract with the Flynt family.

Flynt, 35, was shot on March 6 as he returned to a courtroom in Lawrenceville, Ga., where he was on trial on charges of distributing obscene materials. A mistrial was later declared.

New Music Director Named

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — British conductor Neville Marriner was named Monday to succeed Stanislaw Skrowaczewski as music director of the Minnesota Orchestra.

Richard M. Cisek, president of the Minnesota Orchestral Association, said Marriner will take over at the start of the 1979-80 season. He said German maestro Klaus Tennstedt will be principal guest conductor in 1979-80 and Leonard Slatkin, now principal guest conductor, will become artistic director of the orchestra's summer season.

Skrowaczewski's resignation as music director, following a 19-year tenure, takes effect in August 1979.

The orchestra, originally known as the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, was organized in 1903 with Emil Oberhoffner as its first music director. Previous music directors have been Eugene Ormandy, Dmitri Mitropoulos and Antal Dorati.

Agency Offers Safety Film

EMERGENCY FILM FOR LOAN — The Transportation Department has available a new 25-minute film illustrating the life-saving potential of emergency response and medical service techniques.

The film is available for loan at no charge. When making a request, specify a preferred date and two alternate dates. To request the film write to Association Films, Inc., 866 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y., 10022.

Big Foot Fans Heartened

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — "A primate other than man, which is either ape or humanoid, is alive in this part of the world," anthropologist Carleton Coon said to a standing ovation at a conference called "Sasquatch and Other Phenomena."

The weekend conference at the University of British Columbia did not provide proof of the existence of the tall, hairy apelike creature, but Sasquatch fans took heart at being taken seriously at the conference, attended by representatives of Moscow's Darwin Museum as well as U.S. and Canadian scientists.

The elusive creature has been spotted from New England to northern California and is known as the "swamp ape" in Florida and Sasquatch or Bigfoot in the Northwest.

Rene Dahinden of Vancouver, who has been on the creature's trail for 22 years without ever glimpsing it, said he hopes Sasquatch is discovered in just one way — "By me, of course."

FCC Reviews Junk Calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Have you ever had to stop your cooking or carpentry, leave your television or book, and hurry to the jangling telephone only to hear an unexpected sales pitch?

Well, the government is considering placing restrictions on such calls and it wants to hear from the public on how strict it should be.

Last year the Federal Communications Commission took up the problem of the so-called "junk" calls made by machines which dial numbers automatically and then play a tape recording.

More than 1,000 comments from the public were received at that time and they were overwhelmingly in favor of either an outright ban on such calls, or at least severe restrictions.

Congress also began discussing the issue and, because of the widespread interest, the FCC is now considering regulating both the machine-made calls and unsolicited sales calls made by people as well.

Before proposing a formal regulation, however, the commission asked again for comments and would particularly like to see any comments on procedural, technical, operational and economic issues.

The deadline for comments is May 26 and if you have something to say, write to CC Docket 78-100, RM 2955, Federal Communications Commission, Washington, D.C., 20554.

Tax Form Comments Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you wanted to give the government a piece of your mind about this year's tax forms, here's still time.

The Internal Revenue Service has extended until May 31 the deadline for commenting on the forms and making suggestions for improvement.

Remember, though, they aren't looking for comments on the tax law — that's made by Congress — only on the forms you use.

Comments should be sent to the Chairman, Tax Forms Coordinating Committee, Room 5577, Internal Revenue Service, 1111 Constitution Ave. NW, Washington, D.C., 20224.

State Troopers Deliver Baby

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — "We heed help!" William Garten of Drayton Plains yelled as he pounded on the door of the state police post early Thursday.

Help he got. Troopers Michael Surd and Jeff Ware rushed out to Garten's pickup truck and delivered a 5½-pound baby girl to his wife, Robin. It was their second child.

Garten, 26, and his 22-year-old wife were on the way to the hospital when it became apparent they weren't going to make it.

Ware, a trooper for six years, said it was "one of the most moving things I have ever experienced."

Mother and daughter were in good condition at Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital.

Women Voters Vote For Male

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) — The members of the League of Women Voters unit here have elected a male president.

A spokesman for the 60-member unit in Union County says Herbert Greene is the first man to head a League of Women Voters group in New Jersey.

The organization did not accept men into its ranks until 1975.

Greene is executive director of Schoolwatch, a statewide education organization comprised of business, civic and religious leaders.

Network Makes Vast Changes In Fall Program Scheduling

NEW YORK (AP) — "Police Woman," "Grizzly Adams" and four other NBC regulars were left without TV time as the network announced on Monday a fall schedule that includes seven hours of new prime time programming.

NBC's fall layout barely resembles the network's 1977-78 schedule, which struggled all season in competition with ABC and CBS. Only "Little House on the Prairie" on Mondays, "The Rockford Files" on Fridays and "Wonderful World of Disney" on Sundays will remain in current time slots.

The fall schedule — NBC's season will begin Sept. 18 — presumably was put together without the help of Fred Silverman, who will take over as the network's president and chief executive in June. Silverman generally has been credited with engineering the entertainment schedule that thrust ABC into first place in the networks' battle for the prime time audience.

ABC and CBS had unveiled their fall seasons previously.

NBC said the upcoming season will feature three hours of new comedy programming, including "Legs," a half-hour show created by Garry Marshall, who produces the ABC hits "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley." "Legs" (8:30-9 p.m. EDT Wednesdays) is set in Las Vegas.

The comedy lineup also includes "The Waverly Wonders," featuring former pro football star Joe Namath (8-8:30 p.m. Wednesdays); "Grandpa Goes to Washington," with two-time Emmy-winner Jack Albertson (8-9 p.m. Fridays), and "Coastocast," about the humorous adventures of two airline stewardesses (9-10 p.m. Thursdays).

Other new programs in the NBC schedule are "Live from Hollywood with Dick Clark" (9-10 p.m. Wednesdays); "Sword of Justice," with two-time Emmy-winner Jack Albertson (8-9 p.m. Fridays), and "Coastocast," about the humorous adventures of two airline stewardesses (9-10 p.m. Thursdays).

In addition, the network said its "Weekend" newsmagazine would move to prime time in the fall, beginning at 10 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 10, and that "Big Event" and miniseries formats would be continued.

The blockbuster in NBC's "Big Event" series will be a 25-hour adaptation of James Michener's novel, "Centennial." NBC scored its biggest triumph of the past season with a nine-hour miniseries based on another novel, "Halo." In addition to "Police Woman" and "Grizzly Adams," NBC dropped "CPO Sharkey," "James at 16," "Class of '65" and "The Bionic Woman."

First Novel Prize Given To O'Brien

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1978 Ernest Hemingway Foundation Award, for a best American first novel, was given Monday to Darcy O'Brien for "A Way of Life. Like Any Other," a book about surviving an upbringing in the midst of Hollywood glamor.

The prize, announced by the PEN International writers association, was presented to O'Brien at a reception in the home of Hemingway's widow, Mary.

Born and raised in Los Angeles, O'Brien is the son of Hollywood cowboy actor George O'Brien. His mother was a stage actress.

He is a professor of Irish literature at Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., and previously published three nonfiction books in his field.

Last year's Hemingway award went to Renata Adler for "Speedboat."

Several other programs aired on a limited basis this past season — "Roller Girls," "Joe and Valerie," "Chuck Barris Rahr-Rah Show," "Hanna-Barbera Happy Hour," "Quark," "Richie Brockelman, Private Eye" and "Black Sheep Squadron" — will not continue, NBC said.

The network said "Operation Runaway," "Project UFO" and "CHiPs" would be back in the fall, but at different times.

NBC listed a number of feature-length movies to be aired in the fall, including "Airport '77," the new "King Kong," "Two Minute Warning," "Prisoner of Second Avenue," "The Other Side of the Mountain" and "Cassandra Crossing."

Besides "Centennial," NBC said miniseries to be shown next season include "Backstairs at the White House," "Studs Lonigan," "Little Women," "The Critical List" and "From Here to Eternity."

Protesters Of Busing Hear Reese

Jim Reese urged a local anti-busing group Monday to register their protest of court-ordered school integration loudly but peaceably — in part, by electing him to Congress.

The Odessa ex-mayor, who faces George Bush in a June 3 runoff for the Republican Party's congressional nomination, vowed to work for federal legislation that would prohibit "forced busing" to integrate public schools.

For the immediate future, Reese told We the People, "We have no choice. We should not do anything but obey the law. I do not believe people ought to break the law."

"But I do believe that when people do not like an unfair law, the law ought to be changed."

There are two ways to do that, Reese said.

One is to adopt a constitutional amendment. But that route would take eight to nine years, Reese estimated.

Rather, he favors passage of the "McDonald School Bill," a resolution introduced by U.S. Rep. Larry P. McDonald of Georgia to override busing ordered by federal courts.

"Congress has not been living up to its responsibility," Reese said. Lawmakers, he added, have all owed the courts to legislative action to delineate the authority of the courts "to prohibit busing for school integration."

An estimated 100 persons gathered to hear Reese address We the People, an organization formed primarily over concerns about the integration plan the Lubbock Independent School District has been told to implement next year.

The district's plan would require busing about 2,000 elementary children and several hundred secondary students a day.

We the People said the plan would cost millions of dollars, resulting in higher taxes. The group said the plan would waste fuel and result in destruction of the neighborhood school concept.

"We are losing our right to make our own decision here," Reese said. "The bureaucrats are covering us up."

He said court-ordered busing is a "bankrupt idea for social engineering. Forced busing simply does not improve the quality of education."

Reese added: "I don't think people ought to be told where they have to send their children to school." He said he supports freedom of choice and neighborhood schools.

We the People said it has undertaken a letter-writing campaign to promote action at the federal level. The group also is circulating petitions locally asking the school board to take a vote on the integration plan and on any tax increase deemed necessary to implement the plan.

Several members of the group said they may hire lawyers to attempt to fight the integration plan, but Reese said such efforts probably won't do any good.

"I wish I could tell you there's something you could do to be effective. But I do not see any immediate way around it (busing)," he said.

Still, Reese urged the organization to circulate the petitions and write letters to let their public officials know their feelings.

Reese noted that Midland schools are under their second year of court-ordered integration. "I don't know anybody that's pleased with it. They (the government) just pick off one city at a time because they know if they tried to take us all at once, they couldn't do it."

Bush is scheduled to speak to We the People May 25 at 7 p.m. in the Hodges Community Center.

Humphrey Fund Bill Okayed In House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill authorizing $1 million for a trust fund to set up a fellowship in honor of the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey was approved by the House on Monday.

The 222-to-152 vote sends the legislation to the Senate.

The fellowship in social and political thought would be established at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars at the Smithsonian Institution here.

According to the bill's floor manager, Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., the center would select a distinguished scholar, statesman, or cultural figure to receive the year-long fellowship.

Supporters estimate that $63,000 would be spent annually on the Humphrey fellowship, including the stipend, travel expenses and annual dinner for the recipient.

Opponents, including Rep. Robert E. Bauman, R-Md., contended it isn't necessary to honor Humphrey in two separate memorials.

Earlier this year, Congress authorized $5 million for the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

Bauman said the Woodrow Wilson Center can simply designate one of its present fellows as the Humphrey fellow, without needing $1 million for the trust fund.

Several weeks ago, the trust fund bill came before the House on a special ruling that required two-thirds approval of all members voting. It failed to gain the needed support.

Consequently, supporters brought the bill up again under regular procedures that needed only a majority for passage.
