Mother Tells Of Lopez' Obsession With Demons

By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff
PLAINS — The quiet, frail mother of Ricardo Lopez told jurors here Wednesday that the "shadows" her son said told him to kill someone may have come from his obsession with demons, sorcerers and black magic.

Reciting names of devils and portions of prayers against God in books the 18-year-old youth had read, Mrs. Florencia Lopez told jurors of her son's fascination with sorcery as defense attorneys opened their case trying to prove Lopez was not sane at the time he allegedly shot his high school principal to death.

A psychiatrist had testified earlier that Lopez told him that "evil spirits" ordered the Littlefield youth to kill someone April 7, 1977, or he himself might die. Lopez, in a statement given deputies that day, admitted shooting Whitharral High School's 31-year-old principal Malcolm Omar Tripp just outside the school's front door as classes began that day.

Special prosecutor John T. Montford, hired by the slain man's family to assist Hockley County Dist. Atty. Bill Boedecker, rested the state's case against the Littlefield youth earlier Wednesday. Testimony in the trial before 121st Dist. Court Judge M.C. Ledbetter will resume at 9 a.m. here today.

Lopez is being tried here on a charge of venue from Hockley County. Boedecker already has indicated the state will ask jurors for a life sentence if Lopez is convicted, but defense attorneys Patrick Abeyta and Willis Taylor opened their case Wednesday admitting Lopez killed Tripp, but claiming he may have been insane at the time.

"The defense has never contended that our client, Ricky Lopez, did not kill Mr. Tripp. The state has proven that fact," Taylor told the three-man, nine-woman jury. "The defense will attempt to show you an explanation."

"We ask you to follow us into perhaps a world which none of us will ever know... It is not our world. It should not be anybody's," he told them.

From there, Taylor began outlining through witness testimony the youth's apparent excursion into the realm of black magic and demonic possession since he was a teen-ager.

"All the time he wanted those things," Mrs. Lopez testified, referring to mystery stories, books about black magic and satanism. "He used to read those horrible stories, mystery stories, UFO stories, those horrible questions."

Black Magic Questions

Through the years, Mrs. Lopez said her son even once asked her if "he could turn into an animal by black magic, but I told him that's not good."

She said he also asked her about casting spells against persons he did not like.

Painting a picture of his early life, she told jurors Lopez never left home without his parents, that he was an isolationist and would even "run inside the house

Hail, Heavy Rain Pummel Panhandle

A-J News Services
 A LARGE portion of the South Plains was under a tornado watch until late Wednesday, while other parts of the Panhandle were pummeled with hail and heavy rain as a severe storm system moved across the area.

A tornado watch was in effect until 11:30 p.m. Wednesday for Lubbock, Cochran, Hockley, Crosby, Dickens and King Counties.

However, no twisters had been sighted in the South Plains area late Wednesday.

The forecast for today calls for a low temperature in the upper 80s, with a high tonight near 68 degrees. There is a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. Winds should be southerly 15 to 20 mph and occasionally gusty this afternoon.

A low pressure trough situated over New Mexico is the dominant weather influence locally. The system is expected to induce a moist, southerly flow of air over the area throughout the day and may trigger some showers, the NWS says.

Those rain showers are expected to produce amounts generally less than one quarter of an inch, though the NWS says local amounts to one inch are possible.

At 9 p.m. Wednesday Lubbock had received only a trace of precipitation, according to the NWS.

The weather instability was causing some wary glances at the sky throughout the Northwest Texas area late Tuesday, however. And the weather service said a band of very heavy thunderstorms extended from north, northeast of the Lubbock International Airport, southward toward Slaton.

Movement of the storms was away from the Lubbock area, however.

Funnel Reported

The late-spring weather precipitated softball-sized hail at Spearman in Hansford County in the upper Panhandle. Spearman police also reported a funnel cloud, 12 miles southwest of the city about 6:50 p.m. However, the funnel reportedly lifted back into the clouds, dispersing with any threats.

Earlier, at 6:04 p.m., the Moore County Sheriff's office had reported golfball-sized hail near Sunday, northeast of Dumas.

Across the state today partly cloudy weather is expected to be the rule, though the weather service includes a chance of afternoon and evening showers virtually for all of Texas.

In the five-state regional forecast the word was essentially the same: partly cloudy, warm, humid and a chance of thundershowers.

The chance of rain extended to all the area, except western New Mexico, the weather service said.

The national forecast for today calls for showers and thundershowers to be widely scattered across the Upper Mississippi Valley, the Great Plains and the Rockies, as well as the northwestern states.

It'll be mostly sunny over the nation's eastern third, except for some scattered rain in southern New England. It will be mild in the Northeast, the NWS says.

U.S. Considers Zaire Options

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is considering a list of options, none of them very promising, for helping bring stability to Zaire, a friendly country which looks increasingly like an international cripple.

The country is plagued by corruption and inefficiency, threatened by rebels based in Angola, and teetering on the verge of bankruptcy, State Department African experts say privately.

Meanwhile, White House spokesman Jody Powell said Wednesday that top Carter administration officials have discussed the possibility of U.S. aid for guerrillas fighting the Cuban-backed regime in Angola.

Congressional Ban Faced

But Powell said Carter hasn't yet decided whether to seek repeal of a congressional prohibition against any such move.

"His concern is not one of any special action that he wants to take next week or next month or tomorrow night," Powell said, adding that Carter's worry is the effect of letting other nations know that by an act of Congress, "certain options in the conduct of our foreign policy are foreclosed."

And Powell said U.S. intelligence officials have received additional evidence within the past two days to support the American claim that Cubans trained the rebels shortly before they invaded Zaire.

Cuba has denied training the former Katangese rebels.

Worsening Situation Expected

Though the United States, France, Belgium and other allies plan to discuss coordinated approaches to the problems Zaire faces, one State Department official says there seems to be little that can be done to prevent a bad situation from getting worse.

"Before this whole thing happened, the country was crippled anyway," said one policymaker, referring to this month's invasion of Shaba province by Katangan rebels.

The rebels heavily damaged Shaba's major copper-mining facilities, which are Zaire's major source of foreign exchange. Reports reaching the department indicate it will take at least two or three months to get the mines operating, if Zaire can persuade European technicians to return and help fix them. It could take longer than that without outside help.

An interruption in copper exports is the last thing Zaire's shaky economy needs. The country owes about $2.6 billion to Western banks and governments, and it has fallen way behind in its payments.

A consortium of banks, headed by Citibank of New York, was in the process of putting together a $220 million loan for Zaire to help it improve its industrial base and pay back its debts.

"The bankers are very nervous now. They won't loan the money unless they are convinced it is the only way to save their previous investments," an official said.

Representatives of the banks and western governments have been planning to meet next month to evaluate the latest economic recovery program propounded by Zairean President Mobutu Sese Seko.

Now, one department official said, a debate has begun, principally in business and academic circles, about whether Zaire can recover as long as Mobutu, who seized power in a 1965 coup, retains control.

The official insisted there is no thought being given to covert action to topple Mobutu. "That kind of kingmaking is not very fashionable," the official said.

Charges Against Mobutu Many

The charges against Mobutu are numerous. Some critics point out that he failed to follow the economic austerity guidelines imposed by the International Monetary Fund last year when it allowed Zaire an $85 million line of credit.

Mobutu persisted in spending for showcase projects, such as a satellite telecommunications system, which do little to solve Zaire's basic economic problems. The IMF withdrew its line of credit.

Mobutu has also been accused of personal corruption, most recently by John Stockwell, who headed the CIA's covert operation in Angola until 1975. Stockwell said Mobutu pocketed $1.4 million he was supposed to pass along to pro-Western Angolan guerrillas.

One department official said the corruption in Zaire has become so pervasive that simply replacing Mobutu would not reform the country's political system.

Experts Blame Mobutu

Mobutu is also blamed by administration experts for the state of the Zairean army. They say he has followed a policy of purging or transferring efficient officers who look like potential threats to his control. Therefore, the army has remained weak and unable to cope with the rebels.

Granberry, Rigsby Endorse Bush For Mahon's House Job

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
TWO Republican Party heavyweights — Jim Granberry and Deaton Rigsby — threw their support behind the congressional campaign of George Bush Wednesday night.

Bush faces former Odessa mayor Jim Reese in a June 3 run-off for the Republican nomination.

Granberry, a former Lubbock mayor and 1974 Republican gubernatorial nominee, and Rigsby, former Lubbock mayor pro tem, flanked Bush as they heaped praise on his abilities and the manner in which he has run his campaign.

"He thinks well and quickly on his feet; he's knowledgeable on the issues and gets along with people," Granberry said.

Without Reservation

"I endorse him without reservation. I will work for him and vote for him. I hope we can send George Bush to Congress in November," he said.

Rigsby said Bush would be a "credit to West Texas because he exemplifies what the mainstream of the thought is in West Texas."

Bush's advocacy of a strong free enterprise system also was applauded by Rigsby.

Bush said he was "deeply grateful" for the endorsement and promised to run an "aboveboard campaign" because of his dedication to unity within the Republican Party.

Youthful Age Cited

Granberry cited Bush's youthful age of 31 as one reason for the endorsement. "I can see George serving several terms, giving him good seniority. After that he'll still be a young man," he said.

Bush pledged to remain in Congress, if elected, "until I'm not effective," adding a great deal of seniority can be amassed in five or six terms because of the current turnover in Congress.

He said Reese's advocacy of limited terms for members of Congress, because members are more concerned about being re-elected than serving their constituency, is a "simplistic look at it all."

"He's saying people don't pay attention to how they vote," Bush said, adding "the system has worked very effectively as it is."

However, Bush said he had no objection to limiting the president to a six-year term.

Granberry refused to make a negative comment about Reese and said he would support whichever man is the party's nominee.

However, the former mayor did make an allusion to Bush's opponent when he commented that Bush could "debate

City Sued Over 65 Retirement

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
TWO FORMER City of Lubbock employees Wednesday sued the city, challenging a policy of compulsory retirement at age 65.

The plaintiffs also contend they were unfairly denied employee benefits because of their age.

The Texas Municipal Retirement System (TMRS), as well as the city, was named a defendant in the suit filed by Truett Alford and Walter Nierlich in U.S. District Court here.

Injunctions Requested

Alford and Nierlich — who, according to their petition, were discharged by forced retirement Jan. 1 — ask U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward to issue preliminary and permanent injunctions ordering their reinstatement to former positions.

The two also ask that the city and TMRS be ordered to provide them with monthly retirement benefits equal to those received by employees who were under the age of 50 when they were hired.

The suit seeks $50,000 in damages for

Interest In 'Magnet Program' At Iles Elementary Escalates

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
THE "magnet program" planned for Iles Elementary this fall has attracted in just one week the kind of interest school officials thought would take years.

Already about 60 families, with a combined 80 children, have inquired about enrolling at Iles, which beginning in August will have "extended day" activities and other features unique to the Lubbock Independent School District.

And parents of 20 students so far have completed and submitted Iles applications, Ed Stokes, the district's elementary education director, said Wednesday.

Response Beyond Expectations

"We didn't expect this kind of response. It's fantastic," Stokes said.

As part of its court-ordered integration plan, the school system — with help from Texas Tech University — has designed for Iles an "exemplary program" to attract white children from throughout the city by voluntary transfers.

Iles, 2401 Date Ave., is the only minority elementary school involved in the plan in which the district hopes to achieve racial balance without compulsory assignment of white pupils.

Federal government attorneys have doubts whether such voluntary techniques, also being employed at Dunbar High School, will work here.

Judge Gives Instructions

U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward has told school officials to be ready to order students to attend Iles and Dunbar if the "magnets" fail to attract enough white youngsters.

But school officials don't believe mandatory assignments will be necessary. Indeed, Superintendent Ed Irons said Iles may prove so popular that the school may have to maintain a waiting list for students to get into the program.

Information sheets and pre-registration forms for Iles have been available in principals' offices of neighborhood elementary schools throughout the city since late last week. The school district sent out a release on the Iles program Wednesday, but many parents already had learned of the enrollment opportunities by word of mouth.

Parents Display Interest

At last count, Irons said, parents of about 80 children interest in expressed registering for Iles.

That figure is surprising because the district had projected an enrollment of only 54 white students at Iles next year. School officials had predicted the number of whites at Iles would reach 75 in 1979 and 100 in 1980.

The response so far suggests that Iles may attract as many as 100 white children by the start of the 1978-79 school year alone.

In its release Wednesday, the district said Iles will have "an optional early and late schedule beginning at 7:30 a.m. and concluding at 5:30 p.m. The regular school day will be from 8:20 a.m. until 3 p.m., the same as for other elementary schools."

The before-and-after-school activities at Iles will include supervised sports and recreation, arts and crafts, accelerated academics and tutoring programs.

The district said the goals of the Iles program are "an emphasis on basic skills, a major role for the creative and expressive arts, a broadened opportunity for the gifted and talented, and a commitment to health and physical education."

Iles will feature such things as "indi-dualization of instruction, non-graded, multi-age groupings, team teaching, a family homework policy and a low pupil-teacher ratio," the district said.

The Texas Tech college of education is cooperating with the school district in developing and implementing the Iles program. Besides regular teachers, many university professors and student teachers will be working at the school, often

Bill Dean Due To Fill Tech Ex-Students Post

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff
THE TEXAS Tech Ex-Students Association is expected to name Bill Dean, head of student publications at Tech, as the association's new executive director, The Avalanche-Journal has learned.

Reliable sources say the 40-year-old Dean will be announced as the replacement for longtime executive director Wayne James at a press conference later this week.

Dean, a Lubbock native and Texas Tech graduate, has been director of student publications at Tech since 1967. He has supervised the publication of the campus newspaper, The University Daily, the La Ventana yearbook and Tech's magazine, Exordium.

He also has been closely involved in student activities on campus, serving as faculty sponsor for the Texas Tech cheerleaders and for Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Dean graduated Tech in 1961 with a bachelor's degree in Marketing. He also received his master's degree in Educational Administration in 1965 and his PhD in Education in 1971 from Tech.

Before coming to the university, Dean was director of publications and taught journalism at Lubbock High School from 1962-66, and was director of student activities at Coronado High School from 1966-67.

The Ex-Students Association has been searching for a new executive director since the resignation of James in March.

Dr. R.G. "Wick" Alexander of Arlington, president of the association, said the Ex-Students was looking for a director who could work with the administration, faculty and students. "Public relations ability" was critical for the job, Alexander said in earlier interviews.

The association had been criticized in past years for isolating itself from the university, not recruiting recent graduates and mismanaging funds.

Ex-Students officials have said they are working on building a positive image for the association.

U.S. Bids To Halt Global Arms Race

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States has offered to serve as the "eyes and ears of peace" to help make disarmament work for a world spending almost $1 million a minute for weapons.

The American proposal — to help set up monitoring systems like one in the Sinai Desert between Egyptian and Israeli forces — was unveiled Wednesday by Vice President Walter F. Mondale to a special U.N. disarmament conference.

Nearly 130 officials, including 20 heads of state and 53 cabinet ministers, are to speak at the conference. The five-week session was called so the countries could search for ways to halt the nuclear weapons race and divert the nearly $400 billion spent on arms each year to peaceful purposes.

Only four of the 149 member countries — Cambodia, South Africa, the Comoro Islands and Seychelles — were not represented.

The American delegation, headed by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, includes Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., actor Paul Newman and octogenarian Ambassador W. Averell Harriman.

While pledging the Carter administration's commitment to reduce arms sales and curb nuclear weapons, Mondale said the United States cannot reverse the arms race by itself.

He accused the Soviet Union of an unprecedented arms buildup in Europe and told the delegates:

"It will be increasingly difficult for us to sustain our policy unilaterally unless there is more rapid movement toward a multilateral effort at restraint." He said Warsaw Pact nations have a tank advantage over NATO of nearly 3-1.

Mondale said experience in the Mideast shows that monitoring methods such as aerial photography and ground detection projects can create the confidence necessary to make disarmament work.

The Sinai project is part of the 1975 disengagement agreement between Israel and Egypt negotiated by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. About 200 Americans are involved, providing assurances against surprise weapons buildups.

Mondale said the United States has a defense budget "no larger in real terms" than two decades ago and is engaged in the broadest set of arms control negotiations in its history.

He reaffirmed the promise made by President Carter to the General Assembly last fall that nuclear weapons would be used only in self-defense.

Wednesday marked the opening of two weeks of debate on arms control measures. This will be followed by three weeks of technical discussion aimed at developing an international disarmament program.

Next week leaders of the NATO countries will hold a summit meeting in Washington and probably will ask Carter to increase the U.S. military defense of Western Europe.

President Spyros Kyprianou of Cyprus and Swedish Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin both spoke against the neutron bomb, a project President Carter has shelved pending signs of restraint in the Soviet arms program.

The neutron bomb, intended primarily for use against Warsaw Pact tanks in Europe, is designed to kill troops with high radiation doses while doing minimal damage to property outside the immediate blast area.

"We look forward," Kyprianou said, "to the abandonment of the neutron bomb, as well as all such weapon to be produced by any other country... and we also look forward to a SALT II agreement."

The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks between the United States and the Soviet Union are under way in Geneva. Further talks are scheduled Friday in Washington between Vance and his Soviet counterpart, Andrei A. Gromyko.

The talks will center on lowering limits on long-range missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons to replace limits set in the 1974 Vladivostok agreement. That accord permitted 2,400 long-range missiles and bombers on each side.

Falldin said development of the bomb might make nuclear war more of a possibility.

Questions, Answers Examine Arms Conference Viewpoints

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly has begun a five-week special session on disarmament, an enterprise that has drawn worldwide attention and created a good deal of confusion. Following, in question and answer format, is a discussion of the background and objectives of the conference.

Q. Why is it being held?

A. Previous international efforts to achieve disarmament have failed to arrest the arms race and most of the U.N. member countries have agreed that it is getting out of hand. Global military spending has more than doubled since 1966 and now approaches $400 billion a year. The United States and the Soviet Union account for more than half this amount, but military spending by developing countries is also growing rapidly — about 10 percent a year. The shipments of conventional arms and services amounted to $13 billion in 1975.

Q. Who asked for the conference and who is attending?

A. The idea originated in the dissatisfaction of many U.N. members, particularly the nonaligned states, with slow progress in disarmament. They have requested a world forum in which all states could participate, including China and France, which are not included in the 31-nation Conference of the Committee on Disarmament in Geneva, the main international negotiating body for disarmament. All 149 U.N. member countries are attending the special session, the first time since the Disarmament Conference of 1932 that virtually all countries of the world have met to discuss disarmament. More than 20 heads of government and 53 cabinet ministers will attend. In addition, 1,200 members of private citizens' groups are to appear, 500 of them from Japan, and will be allowed to use the assembly hall for a day to express their views.

Q. What does it expect to achieve?

A. It will not be a negotiating forum. For the first two weeks, the world governments will try to publicize the cost and danger of the arms race and make proposals to deal with them. In the following three weeks, it will try to define a set of principles and a program of action to eliminate the danger of nuclear proliferation, reduce the cost of military security and divert to peaceful purposes at least some of the $400 billion being spent annually on arms.

Q. What are the economic and social effects of the arms race?

A. The gigantic costs of the arms race use up resources that otherwise go to welfare and economic development. For instance, there are almost as many soldiers, approximately 22 million, as there are teachers in the world. All told, 60 million people are engaged in military related occupations, uniformed or civilian, public or private. The World Health Organization spent $83 million over 10 years to eradicate smallpox in the world, an amount not quite sufficient to buy one single strategic bomber. The poorest countries, with per capita incomes below $200, generally spend as much for military activities as they do on agricultural development.

Q. Is the United Nations a proper forum to handle disarmament?

A. The founding members of the United Nations expressed in its charter their determination to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war. The charter defined the primary purpose of the United Nations as one of maintaining international peace and security. It said this purpose should be promoted "with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources." The charter empowered the General Assembly to consider the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments.

Q. How does the United States view the conference?

A. President Carter has pledged a strong U.S. contribution to the session, but U.S. officials privately have expressed misgivings that the complex disarmament issues would be handled in a mammoth public debate. Some Third World diplomats interpret the decision by President Carter not to attend as a sign that the Carter Administration does not attach priority to the session.

Big Spring Residents Disrupted

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A wild javelina wandered into an exclusive neighborhood here Wednesday morning, disrupting the routine of numerous families and tapping the energies of a squadron of police officers.

The officers warily approached the hog, trying to corner him with sticks. A man with a dart gun arrived on the scene, seeking to solve the problem with tranquilizing drugs.

The animal was first spotted on the north side of town but roamed at least 30 blocks. It wound up in the yard of Mrs. Bob Piner, who proceeded to jab at it with a broom through a wire fence.

Enraged, the hog charged through flower beds, causing minor damage. When officers arrived, the javelina ran at them with its head down before disappearing into some shrubbery.

The hog showed plenty of fight until it was placed in a cage, where it proceeded to give a sigh of resignation, then died. The excitement had obviously been too much for it.

Before the tumult waned, the animal had succeeded in awakening virtually everyone in a five-block radius of the incident which occurred between 7 and 8 a.m. The hog lost all hope of escaping because every dog in the neighborhood took up the chase, joining in a symphony of barks.

Korean Troop Withdrawal Endorsed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted overwhelmingly Wednesday not to interfere with President Carter's plan to withdraw American ground troops from South Korea.

The 247-142 vote was largely symbolic but was the first expression of sentiment by the full House on the troop withdrawal issue.

The House also voted to build a large, nuclear-powered aircraft carrier that the Carter administration said it does not want.

On another issue, the House rejected a proposal to restrict abortions at military hospitals.

These issues were elements in a $38 billion weapons authorization bill approved late Wednesday by the House on a 319-67 vote. The bill was then sent to the Senate.

The Korean troop amendment proposed by Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., would have barred the administration from using any funds authorized by the bill to reduce American troops in South Korea beyond the level of 26,000 soldiers.

Stratton's amendment — if passed — apparently would not have restricted the president; there were no funds in the weapons-buying bill for the withdrawal of troops.

Similarly, the House approved, on a 65-35 vote, an amendment that would have banned funds authorized by the bill to be used to implement the Panama Canal treaties without approval of the House and the Senate. The bill contains no money for carrying out the treaties.

On a voice vote, the House rejected an amendment that would have banned abortions in military hospitals, except in cases of incest, rape or when the life or long-term health of the mother is endangered. Pentagon policy now requires a military hospital to conform to local abortion law.

In the area of shipbuilding, the House voted 264-139 against a compromise proposal to build a smaller, $1.5 billion oil-fired carrier instead of a $2.1 billion nuclear carrier.

As written by the House Armed Services Committee, the weapons bill was $2.4 billion above the administration request, largely because of increases added by the panel to the Navy shipbuilding budget.

which would be the fifth to be built — had been proposed by the committee over the objections of the administration.

The administration wants to stop building nuclear carriers and instead have smaller, oil-fueled carriers. It did not request any carrier construction authorization this year, but in the face of the committee action, said it would prefer a conventional carrier instead of a nuclear one.

The House also voted 293-106 against a proposal to ban any money for carrier construction.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., leader of the move to substitute a nuclear carrier with a conventional one, said all ships are sinkable and "it makes no sense to place such money into one ship."

Rep. Sam Stratton, D-N.Y., said a nuclear-powered ship would be more economical over the years and questioned "who knows if we're going to have oil" in the future.

On a 287-115 vote, the House also killed an attempt to replace the bill drafted by the committee with what essentially was the administration's original request.

Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., leader of the unsuccessful move, said the committee bill resembled a "Pentagon wish list" that included pet projects of Congress members and proposals Carter had rejected.

The bill would authorize spending for weapons programs and defense research in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Sensitive to charges the legislation is a pork-barrel bill, the House voted 266-136 to kill a provision authorizing $8.1 billion for a Gulfstream II executive jet for use by high-ranking Navy and Marine officers.

Carter won a victory at the start of the debate when a committee amendment restricting his ability to withdraw American troops from South Korea was deleted from the bill on a parliamentary ruling that it was not relevant to the legislation.

Under the amendment, Carter would have been required to leave at least 26,000 ground troops in South Korea until a formal peace agreement is signed by the Seoul government and North Korea. The president plans to withdraw all ground combat troops from the country over the next five years while continuing air and naval support there.

On a voice vote, the House also rejected a move by Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., to cut the committee-written bill by $9 billion.

Arguing to replace the committee bill with the administration version, Carr said the secret committee sessions where the bill was drafted had "a Christmas-like attitude" and the bill was changed "to accommodate members of the committee and their needs back home."

He said one provision of the bill would authorize use of military troops to help out at winter Olympic games at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Mo., a committee member, said Carr's proposal to scrap the panel's bill "borders on the edge of anarchy.... It's throwing away

Wild Dogs Trap Couple In Home

SPRING MOUNT, Pa. (AP) — A crippled man and his wife were trapped in their home for nearly an hour Wednesday as a pack of wild dogs barked and snapped at their front door.

"I saw these two dogs right at the bottom of my steps and I rattled the doorknob to try to shoot them, but as I did that a whole lot of other dogs came jumping out," Clara O'Neill, 57, said.

She said there were at least 12, "barking wildly."

"I didn't count them, I just ran in," she added.

Mrs. O'Neill called state police, and the troopers, armed with shotguns, chased the animals for 60 minutes before cornering them. Two dogs were shot because they were too fierce to handle, police said.

The SPCA was called to take away the rest.

Mrs. O'Neill's husband, Thomas, 57, is an industrial instrument maker. Because he walks with two canes, she was helping him carry his lunch to the car Wednesday morning when the dogs appeared.

She said most appeared to be part German shepherd.

State police said there have been several incidents involving wild dogs in the Montgomery County area over the last several weeks. Some domestic animals have been attacked, he said.

AN EDITORIAL:

A Bankrupt African Policy

THE TRAGEDY which has been unfolding in Zaire the past few days serves only to punctuate the bankrupt policy of the Free World, and especially the U.S., in combatting the Russian-Cuban strategy to conquer much of Africa.

For months now, Moscow has been using Russian weapons and Premier Fidel Castro's hired guns to systematically bludgeon opposition and set up a series of Communist dictatorships.

This has been the pattern in Angola, Mozambique, Ethiopia and to lesser extent in Tanzania and half a dozen other points.

THROUGHOUT THIS period, while Cuban forces were being built up to a force of some 42,000 in various parts of Africa, certain members of the Carter Administration have been in effect playing into Russia's hands on Africa.

First, U.S. Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young shot from the lip on numerous occasions, urging and actively seeking so-called "black majority" takeover in all of Africa, and particularly in Rhodesia and the Republic of South Africa.

His pitch, callously aided and abetted by the silence and later outright approval of the State Department and the President himself, was that it was time for Africa to be turned over to the native Africans.

IT MADE GOOD propaganda, but little sense, especially as it applied to Rhodesia and South Africa.

AN EDITORIAL:

Only Inflation May Survive

ALL TOO OFTEN these days, one gets the feeling that when some major domestic or international news event takes place, much of the populace is caught by surprise.

In instances other than major disasters and such, most major happenings are foretold ahead of time.

This applies to any changes in domestic or international monetary affairs, most political events and certainly to economic factors.

WHY, THEN, ONE might logically ask are so many "caught by surprise?"

The answer is simple. Far, far too many persons take far, far too little time to keep themselves informed about the world in which they must live and survive.

No longer do we exist in an atmosphere of "what happens at the office or around the corner." The lives of everyone today—whatever one's status in life—can be altered drastically, for better or worse, by some event which takes place in such a faraway place as The Horn of Africa, a meeting of oil producing nations in Venezuela or a change in the Stock Market.

THE NATION'S press may for weeks, or months, take note of some sort of labor strife in the farm fields of the West.

H. STANTON EVANS:

Now, It's All One War In Africa--Moscow's

WASHINGTON—The latest survey tells us that half-a-dozen different wars are being waged in Africa, but in the sense that really matters the latest survey is mistaken.

In fact, there is only one war being conducted in Africa, albeit on half-a-dozen fronts. The headlines may say "Eritrea," "Rhodesia," or "Zaire," but a glance beneath the surface shows that in every case the adversary forces, and the stakes, are essentially the same.

Each is a salient in the Soviet drive to conquer Africa, using Fidel Castro's Cuban mercenaries as willing proxies.

In Ethiopia, for example, it is estimated that 17,000 Cuban troops and up to 1,000 Soviet advisers were involved in the successful warfare with Somalia in the Ogaden desert.

Now these forces have been focused on the Eritrean rebels, and it is reported that Cuban pilots are flying missions for the Ethiopian government. The Ethiopians also claim support from South Yemen and Communist East Germany.

IN THE Rhodesian fighting, United Press International reports the number of Cuban advisers aiding guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo has grown to 70.

The Cubans are being guided by senior Soviet adviser Vasily Solodnikov, who is stationed in Lusaka, Zambia, and reportedly supervises Soviet operations through all of Southern Africa.

The explicitly Marxist regime in Mozambique has been a base for anti-Rhodesia guerrilla operations for months.

IN ZAIRE, meantime, thousands of invaders from Soviet-allied Angola were fighting for control of Shaba province (Katanga).

Early reports indicated the invading party included whites identified as Cubans. This conforms to the pattern established in last year's invasion, when Zaire broke relations with Cuba, charging that Havana and Moscow were behind

Young, whose experience in international diplomacy mounts to next to zero, and later Vice President Mondale only served to stir up an issue which can not be resolved "now," short of bloody violence.

And the sad part of the story is that everyone from President Carter on down in the administration should know this.

IN THE MEANTIME, Russia seized upon the fact that the last vestiges of European rule was vanishing in Africa—when Portugal gave up Angola and Mozambique—to launch its own African policy.

This involved the use of Castro's Cuban soldiers to fight the wars that Moscow itself could hardly fight.

Instead of recognizing the ploy for what it was, a blatant military maneuver in which international Communism was being exported to Africa, the Carter Administration chose to ignore or soft-pedal its concern. True, it was Congress itself which during the Ford Administration signaled Russia it would do little or nothing to halt the Red takeover of Angola.

Since then, Cuban military might have soared from 8,000 fighting men to 42,000 in Africa. And the latest Cuban-Russian backed invasion into Zaire, with the slaughter of whites, only serves to emphasize the intent of these forces.

Belatedly, President Carter and his inept advisers seem to realize the danger. Unfortunately, it may be too late. The ghosts of last week's victims may come home to haunt the U.S.—much sooner than we think.

To many, it is something which is happening hundreds of miles away. News stories may tell of a drought in the lush vegetable and fruit growing areas of Florida or California. It is someone else's problem.

That is, it is until the price of a gallon of gas goes up, or a head of lettuce costs in excess of $1 a head. Logically, one might ask what good it would do to keep up with such news as labor strife and oil meetings, "because I can't do anything about it anyway."

TO US, THIS is a fallacy, just as is the fact that more than half of Texas' and the nation's eligible voters fail to exercise the most important possession they have—the right to vote and choose their leaders.

Unfortunately, as long as the majority of citizens take the attitude that things seemingly far removed from them can't affect their lives, that "there's nothing they can do," then that is the way the world will turn.

There is a solution. An informed and alert public, willing to speak out, will result in an informed, alert political and economic policy—of, by and for the people. It has worked before and can again. The place to start is as near as home, and this edition of the newspaper.

Tens of thousands of Cubans were involved, of course, in the Marxist takeover of Angola itself, and have remained there to help the regime consolidate its power.

Against this backdrop, what is the Carter administration doing? On the public record, not much. The President recently made some tough remarks about the Cuban presence in Africa, but there is little evidence of policy changes to back his rhetoric.

The machinery of "detente" continues to roll forward; we continue to pursue the SALT agreements and other accords with Moscow, as if the cold war had abated; and the administration continues to seek a normalization of relations with Castro, even as his mercenaries roam the world.

WORST OF all, in particular hot spots such as Rhodesia and Southwest Africa, American policy is actually weighted in favor of the Soviet-backed guerrillas and against the efforts of moderate, anti-Communist groups, who seek internal settlement.

The most flagrant example, perhaps, is Rhodesia, where moderate blacks and whites have agreed on a formula for black majority rule, but the United States has refused to back their efforts. We insist that governing arrangements in Rhodesia be made satisfactory to the Cuban and Soviet-backed guerrillas.

Small wonder, in view of all this, that friend and foe alike view U.S. policy with amazement—and, in the case of our friends, profound depression.

The situation has become so bad that Saudi Arabia has officially deplored the lack of U.S. response to the Soviet-Cuban challenge and has tried to fill the void created by Carter. If there is to be any coherent American policy toward Africa, it appears that Congress, and not the Carter regime, will have to provide it.

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Why Wallace Quit

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—As he has done throughout the past six years, George Corley Wallace stifled the tragic and courageous overtones that enveloped him when he appeared here May 18, just two nights after his stunning withdrawal from the U.S. Senate race.

Addressing a state convention of nursing home owners, Gov. Wallace instead used rough humor in explaining his surprise announcement in Mobile May 16. Saying that he is a teetotaler, the governor added:

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

A Secret Battle...

LONDON—The name of the chief of England's foreign intelligence (espionage) service operating secret agents overseas is punchinello's secret—no secret at all. But he must remain unnamed.

His section, related to the Foreign Office Intelligence Unit, is called M-6. A government's brains are useless unless it has eyes and ears that it can trust. This is the responsibility of M-6. M-6 insiders here call it "The Circus." The name is derived from the address of the organization's secret Cambridge Circus headquarters. It is a five-story Edwardian building with high domed windows overlooking this famous intersection of London streets.

The chief's office is one floor underground a red-green light over the door. It is surrounded by what had been in 1890 a millionaire's wine cellar.

BRITISH WRITER Lawrence Durrell once claimed that "We all lead lives of selected fiction." So do members of M-6.

Secret intelligence deals with both the actual and the possible. And former Central Intelligence Agency Director William E. Colby once told a U.S. Senate committee: "An intelligence judgment is a step toward policy, not a reflection of it."

The battles are like playing tough bridge; regardless of the cards you have in your hands, you must work at it every minute or you are lost.

A secret agent's trust in his handler is the rarest feeling of all. This is especially true to a man whose only chance of survival has lain in obedience to the smallest impulses of suspicion. Day and night, M-6 handlers make every effort to supply this offset.

THE WORLD IS not getting smaller, as we seem to think. It is getting bigger and more speeded up, complicated and harder to understand—and stabilize—than ever in history. Worldwide M-6 tries to stabilize it.

History recalls innumerable examples of what we have come to call the cold war with its sudden shifts from "hard line" to "soft line" to gain immediate objectives and comfort the enemy. The technique—and its rewards—are obvious. But, cold war or not, M-6 fights it worldwide and with great effectiveness. You can bet the rent money on it.

Here in Britain an organization known as M-5 protects home security, operating in the manner of our Federal Bureau of Investigation. M-5 embraces an organization called Central Register. Its files are enormous. Central Register collects dossiers on more than two million people, including foreigners.

M-5 ALSO CONTAINS the Special Branch of Scotland Yard. In effect, this is a third branch of British intelligence.

M-5 tells me that Scotland Yard (Metropolitan Police headquarters) was founded in 1829 by Home Secretary Sir Robert Peel. It is called Scotland Yard because it is situated on the site of a former palace King Edgar gave Scotland's King Kenneth for his London residence.

The American and British publics know much more about the dangers than about the size of intelligence organizations. Our own CIA is much larger than our State Department and spends more than twice the money. But size attracts penetration.

It is no coincidence that one of the world's best espionage organizations is among the smallest. This is Mossad, the first Israel Intelligence apparatus.

"I believe somebody put a drink in my iced tea that night, because the next thing you know I was making a speech and saying I'm not running for the Senate. So, now I don't know how to get back in."

That was just a joke, of course, and not the real reason. But neither was the serious explanation he gave newsmen here, as elsewhere since his May 16 announcement, that "I just don't think I'd feel right in Washington being surrounded by so many pointy-heads." Actually, this claim that Wallace would consider himself alienated as U.S. Senator No. 100 is just a cover story.

THE REAL REASON is brutally simple: the assassination attempt of May 15, 1972, at a Laurel, Md., shopping center has belatedly removed George Wallace from the mainstream of politics.

While the spirit is willing, the flesh is not. He has finally admitted to himself he could not meet the physical demands placed on him as a U.S. senator dragging around what he privately calls "my half-dead body."

That private admission concludes a six-year struggle by Wallace to stay alive politically amid first the torment of pain and finally the permanence of paralysis. To have admitted how hard that fight had been would have destroyed him politically.

Besides, he has worried about discouraging other paraplegics (the reason he has been so obscure about explaining his withdrawal from the Senate campaign). But privately he knows he was paralyzed too late in life to ever become completely self-sufficient.

POLITICAL OPPONENTS and a few former allies have been painting a bleak picture of Wallace on the eve of a possibly losing Senate campaign: distraught because of his recent divorce, physically haggard and deafer than ever, living in the past relishing his famous triumphs in national politics and showing little interest in current affairs.

The Wallace we saw here May 18 and in nearby Decatur May 19 bore no resemblance to that stereotype. His appearance and spirits were the best in years, his deadness no worse than usual.

As for living in the past, Wallace seems vitally interested in a broad spectrum of national events far removed from his current role as populist governor battling the conservative state senate.

WITH WIT AND enthusiasm, he discussed SALT, neutron weapons, inflation, tax reform, presidential style, the Mideast, Communist China, Joe Califano and, especially, turbulence in Africa and its impact on U.S. security and economics.

But Wallace in private conversation now repeatedly returns to that spring afternoon in Maryland that "was the end of me" in politics. Time and again he repeats the phrase, "if I was on my feet," in speculating on the might-have-beens. It truly would have been a different political world had Wallace not been in a wheelchair.

"If I was on my feet," Wallace says, he would have been on the 1972 ticket, for Vice President if not President.

AND NOW, "if I was on my feet," he would love to try his hand in the cockpit of the U.S. Senate.

Of his long, turbulent stay on the national scene, Wallace says little about the early years fighting to save segregation. No racist at heart, he used racist political appeals only while they had major effect. No Southern segregationist politician dropped that institution with less regret.

What he talks about at length is his role as a son of the rural Deep South making converts, winning primaries and wielding influence across the land.

He calls himself an "instrument" to gain the respect of the non-South "looking down on us as rednecks, bigots."

THROUGH ALL his personal tragedies, Wallace seems more at ease with himself than ever before.

But at age 58, he speaks in the past tense. When a private college administrator recently complained about federal regulation, Wallace replied:

"That's your problem. I've been fighting it for so long. Now somebody else has to go on."

That acknowledgement of the havoc wrought by the would-be assassin's bullet foretold that George Wallace would not be coming to Washington to enliven the Senate.

JAY HARRIS:

The Real Story...

AS IS THE case with many in this business, we have always planned to write The Great American Novel.

In addition, we also have given some thought to doing a book on Texas Tech's legendary Coach Pete W. Cawthon, and another tome on another legend in his time, Cong. George H. Mahon.

We still plan to do T.G.A.N. But, the option on the other two projects has been exercised. More than a year ago, Etta Lynch of Lubbock penned a book on the fabulous Pete, aptly entitled "The Tender Tyrant."

Now, a book on Cong. Mahon has just been released. Written by Wanda Webb Evans, also of Lubbock, it is available at most book stores. The hardback book, which sports a black and gold jacket showing Mr. Mahon overlooking the lighted Capitol in Washington, chronicles the life and times of one of America's great statesmen. Suffice it to say, it is fascinating reading.

THE MAHON BOOK, like the one on Pete Cawthon, has an intriguing title: "One Honest Man," with a subtitle, "George Mahon, A Story of Power, Politics and Poetry."

On its pages is a story, not only of George Mahon, the teenage farmboy from Loraine, Texas, the story of the man whose words and deeds later were to help change history, but also an account of more than four decades of some of the most momentous happenings in history.

Not only does "One Honest Man" relate the account of one man's success story and his love affair with all that America has meant to so many, it serves as a guideline for anyone who may choose public service to one's fellowman as a career.

It would be impossible in one book to touch on all the things which have gone into the 44 years of service which George Mahon has given to his country. Nor does this book attempt to dwell on the legislative details in which the Congressman has been involved so many times.

Instead, it paints a picture of a man who may regard as one of the four or five most powerful men in Washington today, a man who helped shepherd the birth of the Atomic Age, a man who preached and practiced fiscal responsibility, yet who was bold enough and wise enough to keep his beloved country strong enough to remain free. And it depicts the more intimate life of a man, often in his own words, as it relates to family, friends, God and country.

IN BRIEF, "One Honest Man" is the story of a most unusual man.

The book begins with the story of "The Two Billion Dollar Gamble," the account of how Mr. Mahon and his colleagues "in the know" and yet not in the know, trusted such World War II leaders as Gen. George Marshall and others to develop the atomic bomb.

Then, as now, George Mahon saw in "the ultimate weapon" the potential for mankind's destruction and prayed for its peaceful use.

George Herman Mahon was to be involved, as a member and later as chairman of the all-important House Appropriations Committee, in many of the fateful decisions of the past four and a half decades.

BUT, IT IS in the intimate glimpse into the little, personal touches of his life—unknown to those other than family and close friends—that the book offers an intriguing study of the man.

The book traces the Mahon family's background, his struggle for an education, his efforts as teenager to contribute to his country's efforts in World War I, his start in public life as a county and district attorney and that all-important race in a crowded eight-man field for the newly created Congressional seat in the 25-county 19th District.

It also relates the influence of parents and family, particularly of his mother who instilled in him an appreciation of good reading, the Bible, Shakespeare, Byron, Keats, Shelley, Kipling and Poe, writings which he committed to memory and recites to this day.

There is the anecdote of how a teenage George arranged for a mail-order typewriter to be sent to him, hoping to have the $2.35 a month rental fee by the time it arrived. He was in the field when informed by a stern father that the machine was on hand before George had the money. It was a lesson he was to remember the rest of his life, and it sparked a warning theme often sounded to his colleagues and various administrations bent on deficit spending.

SOME OF THE most beguiling reading in the book is found in the chatty, informative letters which George Mahon wrote various members of his family through the many years he was separated from them in Washington.

His thoughts to his father about how "Washington has become a war capital for the fourth time in your lifetime" on the outbreak of World War II, his world tour just after the war and his shock at the devastation wrought by the conflict, and his pride in the family Victory Garden during the War, the family's role in an Easter Parade. All make for good reading.

There are many other insights into the man who many have known as a person to whom they could turn for help, be it with farm legislation, aid in getting a deserving candidate into West Point or Annapolis or with a Social Security check.

And there are vignettes of George Mahon, the proud father of daughter Daphne, of the faithful and loving husband to helpmate and friend and partner in all, Helen Stevenson Mahon.

In the chapter, "Take A Little Honey," George Mahon not only reveals a secret many husbands and wives might well follow but one which stood him in good stead in gaining much from his colleagues. It is impossible to tell that "One Honest Man" has to say. But, in her dedication of the book, Mrs. Evans sums it up:

"This book is for those young men and women who will love America enough to serve her through all the tomorrows with as much dedication and courage as George Mahon has for more than four decades of yesterdays."

Hidalgo Mayor Won't Give In To Newly-Elected Successor

HIDALGO, Texas (AP) — Two persons laid claim to the mayor's seat here Wednesday — one who took the oath of office at noon and another who refused to vacate the office he has occupied for six years.

In the April elections in this border town of 2,000, incumbent Mayor Ed Vela edged challenger Enequina Garza by a single vote. But Mrs. Garza filed an election contest suit alleging irregularities at the polls.

The state election code orders that Vela, as the contestee, had 20 days to file a surety bond to cover any damage awards mandated by the courts.

Jay Floyd of the governor's office said in Austin that bond was never posted. But Mrs. Garza did post her required bond, he said.

Floyd also said the election code orders that when the contestee (Vela) fails to post the bond, the contestant (Mrs. Garza) gets the job until a court ruling on the suit.

"We don't have any discretion," Floyd said. "The clerk of the court certified that the bond wasn't filed. The commission naming her mayor was signed by the governor and the secretary of state late Tuesday and put in the mail."

But as Mrs. Garza took the oath, Vela sat in his office. He said he won't move out until he sees the signed commission from Austin.

"Until I'm officially notified by someone who has the authority to remove me

I will continue to serve as mayor," he said in his office.

Mrs. Garza, who took the oath from a local notary who unsuccessfully sought the mayor's post several years ago, said Vela's decision is fine with her.

She was expecting Thursday's mail to bring the commission.

Mrs. Garza said she owes the temporary victory to her supporters and attorneys.

"If you have a good law firm behind you..." she said.

Vela contends that his lawyers did take all required steps.

"I know that we answered the contest allegations correctly. I have no knowledge that the bond was not filed," he said.

His attorney was unavailable for comment Wednesday afternoon.

The election contest will be heard by State District Judge Joe Cisneros of Edinburg — the same judge who presided over a court of inquiry that led to criminal charges against Vela and his wife.

Vela was named in charges of official misconduct and misapplication of funds. His wife was named in a misapplication of funds charge.

The insurance man has held the mayor's seat since 1971. In previous elections he managed to win by what he called "pretty comfortable margins."

Mrs. Garza was making only her second attempt at elected office.

In her previous attempt she lost her bid to gain a precinct chairman's post. Her opponent was Mrs. Vela.

OC Plan Allows Year-Round Signup

ODESSA (Special) — A new office education plan underway at Odessa College allows a student to sign up any weekday on a year-round basis for one course or an entire program.

All of the college's traditional secretarial and office skills classes are being phased into the new program, which now is open, but will go into full effect next fall.

"This new program is advantageous to the student because she won't have to wait until a semester begins to enroll,"

Billie Duncan, department chairman, said.

"This means in office education the college is totally accessible to the community on a 12-month basis."

A student may sign up for one or more courses and pays only for each course as she enrolls.

Students have the option to enroll in any of the course for regular college credit or under a certificate plan. Under the old secretarial plan at OC, a student needed two years to complete the study.

Pasadena Threatened With Suit

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston City Council passed a resolution Wednesday authorizing the city legal department to take action against Pasadena to collect $250,000 in water payments.

City Attorney Robert M. Collie Jr. said if another attempt to collect the back payments fails, the department will file suit in state district court.

A 1971 agreement with Houston committed Pasadena to take and pay for 18.5 million gallons of water a day only if Houston could deliver the water.

Pasadena Mayor John Ray Harrison has said the point where Houston can deliver that much water is unacceptable because the water "would have to be pushed all through town" to where it is needed.

Pasadena has paid Houston for water actually metered since January which amounts to about half the amount called for in the contract, according to Sam Dixon, chief of Houston's water division.

MOVIE SCHEDULED

"The Last Tenant," starring Tony Lo Bianco, Lee Strasberg and Christine Lahti, will air as an "ABC Theatre" presentation June 25.

Only Smithsonian Will Know For Sure

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Don Gainey is sure the .44-40 Whitney rifle he owns once belonged to outlaw Jesse James, but he is going to have the Smithsonian Institution try to verify his claim to satisfy everyone else.

"I've always said it's the real thing," Gainey said. "Hopefully, this will settle the matter once and for all."

Bill Wilson, who sold the weapon to Gainey, found a yellow, brittle piece of parchment inside the rifle written to "F. and Jesse James" from "C.E. Canfield" in Carmel, Mo., on "2.10.1873."

"I don't have the faintest idea why that slip of paper was in there," he said. "It's the darndest thing."

The 42-year-old retired engineer has shown the weapon to about a dozen gun collectors, he said, who are convinced it is authentic.

Gainey, who now runs his own antique business here, said in a recent interview that he purchased the rifle for $1,000 from Wilson. Wilson, he said, bought it three years ago for $25 from a widow living in Missouri.

Gainey said the paper was probably a bill of sale written by a member of the Canfield family.

"My guess is that Canfield, who was Jesse's cousin, put it there out of pure arrogance to prove he had sold the gun to them," he added.

Gainey said he sent pictures of the rifle and the note to the Smithsonian's Division of Military History this week to verify the gun's authenticity to skeptics.

"That will be the clincher," he said. "But I'm not worried because I know that it's the real McCoy."

The rifle was manufactured in the late 1800s by the Whitney Arms Co. of New Haven, Conn. However, company records concerning the original sale of the gun were destroyed in a flood in 1900, Gainey said, making it difficult to trace it with certainty to the outlaw James.

Jesse James and members of his gang — including his brother Frank — robbed several banks and trains in Missouri and nearby states, beginning in the 1860s. He was shot in 1882 by Robert Ford — a gang member who turned traitor to collect a $10,000 reward.

The octagonal-barrel rifle Gainey shows signs of wear on the right or breech side of the forearm stock that makes it appear the weapon was carried across a saddle for an extended period of time.

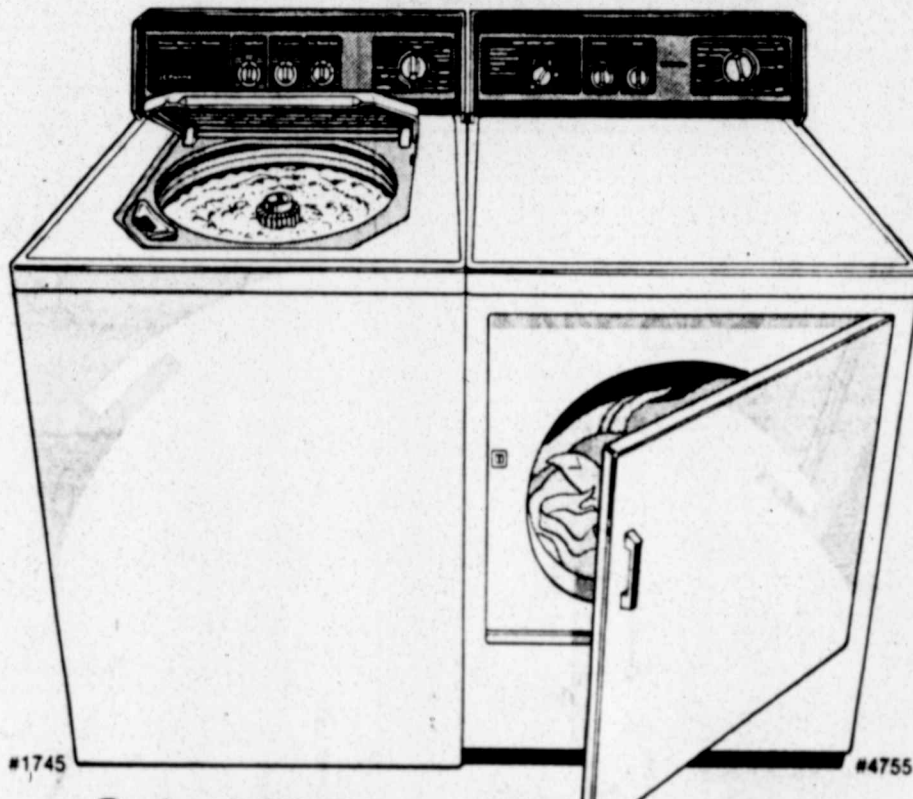

Wilson had planned to hang the rifle over the mantelpiece of his fireplace.

Viets Accused Of Chinese Ouster

WASHINGTON (AP) — China accused Vietnam of the "massive expulsion" of 70,000 Chinese in an interview published Wednesday by the government news agency, Hsinhua, and monitored here.

The Chinese said most of the expelled people — an estimated 50,000 — had been forced to leave Vietnam since April. The report indicated that the people expelled were Chinese citizens.

American officials, speaking privately, said they had little intelligence from the area except for published documents.

In a related development, the East German news agency reported that in Vietnam to work on development projects.

China told the Vietnamese it would need the money budgeted for those technicians to take care of the refugees from Vietnam, according to the East German report.

Relations between Vietnam and China, two historic enemies, have not been good in recent years. The Vietnamese are closely allied to the Soviets, with whom China is feuding. And the Chinese are close allies of Cambodia, with whom Vietnam is having an intermittent border war.

Recent reports from Vietnam have said that the government is conducting a campaign to wipe out the vestiges of capitalism by closing down small shops and businesses. Expatriate Chinese run such businesses in countries all over Asia, and American officials said the campaign apparently was a factor in the expulsion of the Chinese.

The Chinese report, however, characterized those expelled as laborers whose hard-earned property had been confiscated. It said some had been beaten and wounded and that old people and children died as they were forced to leave on foot for the border.

The Chinese said the Vietnamese used tactics like cutting the food rations of Chinese and forcing them into unemployment to push them into leaving.

Two Legionnaires Killed In Skirmish Outside Kolwezi

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — French paratroopers skirmished with Katangan rebels outside Kolwezi and two French soldiers were killed, military officials reported Wednesday.

The French Defense Ministry in Paris said paratroopers battled a rebel force Tuesday at Liulu, five miles from Kowezi. The two soldiers killed were the third and fourth deaths among the 600-man French airborne force dropped on Kolwezi last week to rescue trapped foreigners. Rebel casualties in the clash were not reported.

An army spokesman in Paris said there were incidents of "minor resistance" in the area Wednesday but "nothing important."

Western diplomats were turning their attention to Zaire's economy, badly crippled by the invasion of Katanga rebels into the Shaba mining region.

A report from Kolwezi said the final toll of Europeans massacred by rebels during their one-week occupation of the southern Zaire city would probably not exceed 120. Some previous estimates put the toll at more than 200.

A Belgian reporter quoted a physician, Dr. Ruppel, as saying he had identified 60 bodies by Monday and found 13 more bodies, most of them Greeks and Pakistanis, on Tuesday.

The French estimate that at least 150 Zairians, both soldiers and civilians, and 200 rebels were killed in the fighting and in last week's bloody rampage in Kolwezi. The black casualty toll could be much higher for the total period since the invasion began, but no reliable figures were available.

Many of the Lunda tribesmen who invaded Shaba Province May 12-13 were making their way back to Angola Wednesday through a northwest corner of Zambia. British newspapers quoted one rebel leader passing through Zambia as saying the retreating forces had "many European hostages" with them, including women and children.

The rebels, believed to number 4,000, are the remnant of a secessionist army that in the 1960s was driven from Shaba, then called Katanga, and found refuge in Angola.

Officials here and in Paris estimate that between 170 and 300 European residents of Kolwezi were still unaccounted for. The French Foreign Ministry said many are in rebel hands, and France formally asked Zambia and Angola to help free them.

French officials said the French forces might pursue the rebels to Zaire's borders but had no intention of exercising a right of "hot pursuit" into Zambia or Angola. So far, military officials say, the paratroopers have stayed within nine miles of Kolwezi.

Zaire's pro-West president, Mobutu Sese Seko, appealed to France and other French-speaking African nations earlier this month to establish an international force to maintain security in Shaba. But the majority at a French-African summit in Paris decided to shelve the proposal for now.

Many of the Africans are believed fearful of setting a dangerous precedent of foreign intervention.

Mobutu met separately Wednesday with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Belgian Premier Leo Tindemans, both in Paris. Belgian paratroopers who helped evacuate Europeans from Kolwezi have withdrawn, although 600 of them remain at a Zaire government air base 130 miles to the north in case needed for further rescue missions.

Relations between Belgium and France appear to have been strained by the military operation in Shaba. Some Belgians and some of Giscard d'Estaing's opponents in France accuse him of harboring the long-range motive of supplanting Belgian influence in this mineral-rich former Belgian colony.

The French president says the paratroopers will withdraw when the European hostages are freed.

Diplomatic sources in Kinshasa generally agree that only foreign troops are capable now of providing security in Shaba. They say President Mobutu has asked the French to stay for at least two months.

The said the French likely will be replaced by a force provided by African nations.

The unit of the Zairian army assigned to Kolwezi was routed by the invasion. Its commander is unreported.

Western diplomats agreed on the importance of guarding Zaire from a takeover by a pro-Communist government.

Apart from its mineral wealth, Zaire is a huge country, four times the size of France, in the very heart of Africa.

"It would be a turning point," said one diplomat. If the others (Soviets) get Zaire, they've got Africa."

In Washington, the Carter administration also is trying to find ways to help bring stability to Zaire, whose already-shaken economy suffered a severe blow when Kolwezi's important copper mines were shut down.

Belgian reports Wednesday from Lubumbashi, Shaba's capital, said a contingent of engineers was expected to return to Kolwezi soon to try to resume production at the state-owned Gecamines copper mine. The report could not be confirmed elsewhere.

Without the Europeans to run Kolwezi's copper, cobalt and zinc mines, Zaire faces loss of more foreign exchange just as the International Monetary Fund and Western nations were looking into ways of revitalizing Zaire's wobbly economy. The country has foreign debts of about $3 billion and an inflation rate of more than 70 percent.

Economic experts say the Shaba invasion has thrown economic planning in this nation of 25 million back by years.

Massacres Arouse South Africa Resolve

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The massacre of whites in Zaire has churned up old fears in white-ruled southern Africa, the century-old dread that racial war will finally rid the continent of European domination.

The Shaba invasion in Zaire is proof positive that little sand is left in the hourglass in this part of the world. "South-West Africa's white leader Marthinus T. Steyn told a farm group there.

"The tiger of violence is loose in Africa."

Dire warnings like Steyn's and the headlines in the region's newspapers this past week — "Zaire Horror Orgy Revealed," "Hundreds Face Massacre," "Drunk Boys On Rampage" — have sent shudders of apprehension through many of South Africa's 4.4 million whites.

For some here it strengthened their resolve against easing white control over the 18 million blacks in South Africa and against turning South-West Africa, also called Namibia, over to guerrilla-backed black militants. In Rhodesia, the Zaire bloodbath may bolster the conviction of many whites that Prime Minister Ian Smith's "internal" settlement, with safeguards for whites, is the correct path to black majority rule.

"It will strengthen the determination of Rhodesians of all races to see that the forces of law and order are maintained in a state of disciplined efficiency," said the pro-government Rhodesia Herald newspaper. "Without that presence, any government, new or old, will be easy prey for the enemy."

"No Kolwezi Here," the pro-government Johannesburg Citizen headlined an editorial in which it said. "The Zaire drama should be a warning to the ProgFeds (the opposition Progressive Federal Party) and other liberals in this country. The continent, in fact, is still possessed of an inherent savagery."

Commenting on the siege mentality, the liberal Rand Daily Mail of Johannesburg said white fears growing out of the Zaire violence are the "wrong kind of emotion to exploit."

"One should be cautious in one's reaction to such events not to leap to unjustified conclusions and generalizations, particularly in a country like South Africa, where public emotions can so easily tip over to destructive racialism."

An estimated 100 or more white residents were slain by rebel invaders who occupied Kolwezi, in Zaire's Shaba Province, last week. The French, who sent a paratroop force in to rescue trapped foreigners, said about 150 Zairians, both soldiers and civilians, also were killed, along with some 200 rebels. South Africa and Rhodesia, meantime, are preparing for wider war south of the Zambezi, the river that divides black-ruled Central Africa and the white-dominated south, and they fear new Cuban involvement.

After a recent Rhodesian raid on a suspected guerrilla camp in Zambia near the Zambezi, the biracial Rhodesian government indicated it will step up cross-border pre-emptive attacks against guerrillas.

The South Africans, too, seem to be following this "forward strategy," sending their forces across the Angola border from South-West Africa on May 4 to strike at Namibian guerrilla camps 150 miles inside Angola.

South Africa rules South-West Africa under an old League of Nations mandate rejected by the United Nations. It plans to grant independence to the territory but wants to keep the guerrillas out of power.

Cuba already has an estimated 40,000 soldiers in a dozen African nations. The State Department says Cuban advisers trained the rebels who invaded Zaire May 12-13 from Angola.

Western intelligence sources say there already are signs that Cubans are training black guerrillas in Zambia, Angola and Mozambique and the Soviet Union is increasing the amount and sophistication of weapons given to southern African guerrilla movements.

Rhodesian defense sources say the Salisbury government is anticipating the possibility of a greater Cuban role in southern Africa by developing an anti-tank capability it previously did not have.

Long before the new Zaire war, South Africa began building military bases along its borders, and more troops and police were assigned to frontier duty to halt what officials of the white government say is a rising flow of black "urban terror" infiltrators from neighboring states.

Col. H.O. Eksteen, a counter-insurgency specialist here, said "a large number" of expatriate black students have been arrested trying to smuggle weapons into South Africa. The Sunday Tribune of Durban reported that 100 suspected guerrillas and 200 alleged recruits have been captured in South Africa's border regions in the past 10 months.

The most visible example of South Africa's "hard crust" border defense strategy is the Hoedspruit air base, under construction in remote eastern South Africa, near the Mozambique border.

Low Cost Loan Program For Black Schools Set

NEW YORK (AP) — Frederick D. Patterson, founder of the United Negro College Fund 34 years ago, Wednesday announced a new program in which insurance firms will help predominantly black schools build their endowments through low-cost loans.

Patterson said the pilot project could revolutionize the way private colleges acquire operating and endowment money. Patterson, now 76, told a news conference that the program — which now involves six southern colleges and universities, "will show others that it can be done."

"Many of the small colleges throughout the nation are operating with deficits or under stingy financial conditions," said Patterson, the former president of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. Robert M. Hendrickson, executive vice president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, one of nine participating firms, explained that the program involves investments of $4.8 million. Half of the "seed money" will come from the colleges' own grant and gift funds; the other half will be loaned by the insurance firms, he said. The money will be invested in securities, with the interest used annually for three purposes: to service the investment, to be reinvested and to provide operating funds for the participants.

The six institutions participating in the pilot effort are Bishop College in Dallas; Virginia Union University in Richmond, Va.; Rust College in Holly Springs, Miss.; Tuskegee Institute; St. Augustine's College in Raleigh, N.C.; and Fisk University in Nashville.

Patterson said at least three more colleges — Benedict, Morehouse and Spelman — were ready to join the program when additional insurance company backing was found.

Participating insurance companies include Equitable, which has agreed to loan $1 million to the effort, and American Republic of Des Moines; Booker T. Washington of Birmingham; Fidelity Banker's, Home Beneficial and Life Insurance, all of Richmond, Va.; North Carolina Mutual of Durham; Southwestern Life of Dallas and Universal Life of Memphis.

Tire Chemicals May Be Foes Of Cancer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Chemical compounds used in the tire industry have retarded some types of leukemia and tumors in laboratory animals, the National Cancer Institute (NCI) has informed Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

This was reported Wednesday by Dr. Richard C. Waller, Goodyear's vice president of research. He emphasized that the testing was preliminary and "drawing any conclusions from the results would be premature."

"Our compounds have not yet been tested in humans, and it is still too early to conclude whether they will reach that clinical stage," said Waller. "However, continuing evaluations are in process."

The compounds, referred to in the industry as oxidation catalysts, antioxidants and vulcanization accelerators, are used to protect rubber from deterioration or to speed and improve chemical reactions in the manufacture of natural or synthetic rubber products.

"The compounds interest NCI scientists because they might lead to some different mechanisms for fighting cancer than those used in the past," Waller said.

NCI discovered the anticancer qualities of the rubber industry compounds in its international screening program for industrial chemicals. Under that program NCI scientists collect chemical substances from industries and research organizations and tests them against cancer.

Waller said Goodyear has been a voluntary participant in the program for more than five years and has submitted more than 1,500 substances to NCI for study.

A number of these materials have shown varying degrees of anticancer activity, he said.

Corporation Accepts Stock Bid

NEW YORK (AP) — Dymo Industries Inc., which has been struggling against French and Swedish corporate suitors, has decided to give up independence and accept a takeover bid at a higher price from a Los Angeles holding company.

But the Swedish suitor, Esselte AB, refused to give up and increased its offer to match the higher bid.

Shortly after Dymo and the holding company, Daylin Inc., jointly announced Wednesday that Daylin intends to offer $30 a share for all of Dymo's common stock, Esselte raised its bid for Dymo shares from $24 to $30 each.

Esselte last week offered $24 a share, a $45.3 million deal that Dymo's directors said was too little money for their company. Daylin's proposal would be worth $62 million, an offer Dymo's directors said they will recommend that the company's shareholders accept.

Daylin said its offer would be made as soon as the proper documents are filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Dymo's stock was traded Wednesday because of the acquisition bids. It closed Tuesday at 28 1/2, up 1/2.

Dymo is a San Francisco company that makes systems for label embossing, price marking, coding, addressing and photo composition and operates laundry and dry-cleaning systems. Earlier this month Dymo paid the French firm of Pricel $17 a share to recover 28 percent of its stock. Three days later Esselte made its offer of $24 a share.

Dymo tried unsuccessfully to have the U.S. District Court in Manhattan block Esselte's offer. Dymo said it would appeal the court's refusal to do so.

Esselte's bid is being made through the Swedish firm's U.S. subsidiary, Oxford Pendaflex Corp. Esselte bought Oxford Pendaflex, a maker of filing systems, about two years ago, and the company has borrowed the money it would need to buy Dymo.

Esselte has been distributing products of Dymo's Sisual Systems division in Denmark, Sweden and West Germany. Dymo has been distributing Esselte's plastic products in Belgium. Esselte tried to buy Dymo's Visual Systems division last year for $22 million plus about $10 million in royalties. But Dymo rejected that offer last November.

Effects Of Spill Still Being Felt

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — New chlorination equipment supplied to several communities near the site of a massive sewage spill has secured the last of public water supplies against bacterial contamination, a state environmental official said Wednesday.

James Odendahl, head of the environmental quality division of the state Department of Natural Resources, said equipment was obtained to chlorinate water in some small communities which had not previously had the equipment. Water from public water supplies in communities on both sides of the Missouri-Arkansas border had received safe ratings on bacteria tests, Odendahl said.

He added that the problem with contamination of hundreds of private wells still exists. "There is a major problem with private wells that I don't yet know how we're going to address," Odendahl said.

William Raithel, a spokesman for the Missouri Division of Health, said about one-third of water samples taken from wells and other sources in the area of the sewage spill were showing unsafe levels of bacteria. He said 344 of 1,010 samples tested proved unsafe, and health officials were trying to plot the unsafe samples on a map to see if a pattern of spreading from the sewage spill site could be discerned.

Suggestions Offered To Hold Down Duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Travelers who have gone on a foreign shopping spree can help hold down their duty payment by following advice in a recent issue of "Human Behavior" magazine.

The magazine suggests, and Customs officials agree, that you can help yourself by declaring first high-duty items, such as clothing or jewelry, and listing things such as cameras or radios last.

The first $100 of your spending is exempt from duty charges, so by listing items first you can use this to cover clothing, with a 42 percent duty, or jewelry, which is assessed at 27 percent.

Debate Rises On Diplomatic Immunity In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Wednesday there are more than 16,000 persons living in the United States with total diplomatic immunity from U.S. criminal and civil laws.

Another 27,000 foreigners enjoy a limited immunity from criminal or civil penalties in performing "official acts" as members or employees of foreign embassies, legations or organizations.

But the definition of what constitutes an "official act" is not spelled out in U.S. statutes.

All of those with total immunity are officials or employees of foreign governments living in Washington and New York. The limited protection from U.S. laws extends to persons in those cities and in other cities around the country.

The statistics were offered by State Department officials who urged Congress to adopt reforms updating existing 188-year-old laws on diplomatic immunity.

However, Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., made it clear he was not satisfied with the figures they provided. He also lamented the fact that nowhere in U.S. law or regulations is there a precise definition of what constitutes an "official act" by a foreign official or employee.

Sarbanes is seeking to deny foreigners, from senior diplomats to the lowliest servants, the right to escape criminal charges and lawsuits while living in the United States.

The issue has become controversial as the result of disclosures that foreigners regularly ignore traffic summonses and other laws, and incidents in which U.S. citizens were unable to collect damages from foreigners in auto accidents.

Sarbanes said the legislative proposals are intended to "significantly reduce" the number of persons enjoying diplomatic immunity in the United States. He said they're also aimed at setting up an insurance system that would make sure U.S. citizens were adequately compensated for damages by foreigners.

Two other sponsors of the legislation, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Rep. Joseph Fisher, D-Va., cited examples of U.S. citizens who had been denied compensation in serious auto accident claims involving foreign embassy personnel.

Metzenbaum said the ability of insurance companies to use diplomatic immunity as a defense helped provide a "windfall" for the firms, which can collect premiums without the risk of clients being legally obligated to pay anything.

Richard Gookin, the State Department's assistant chief of protocol, said the administration "enthusiastically supports" these changes in diplomatic immunity laws.

Concerning the assertion that U.S. insurance companies have used the diplomatic immunity laws to avoid paying claims, a spokesman told the committee the insurance industry favors a "reparations system" to compensate persons victimized by foreign diplomats who refuse to answer just claims.

John J. Nangle, attorney for the National Association of Independent Insurers, also said the industry believes any move to disallow the use of diplomatic immunity as a defense would be "grossly discriminatory." He said it would prevent diplomats and other foreigners from acquiring regular insurance, forcing them instead into assigned risk pools.

Confusion Blots Ice Cream Rating Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal by the Agriculture Department last winter to set federal grade standards for ice cream has melted under the glare of public comment.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said Wednesday that the proposal which would have ranked ice cream according to three levels of quality was supported by 228 of those who filed comments and opposed by 195. Forty-one expressed neither approval nor opposition.

Thus, the comments showed no overwhelming support for the proposed voluntary grade standards. Also, many of them indicated confusion about the proposal, Mrs. Foreman said.

The comments were submitted after the Agriculture Department announced a study draft of the proposal last Feb. 21. It would have rated ice cream's quality on the basis of flavor, body and texture and color.

For example, the top ice cream would have been rated U.S. premium grade and would have "possessed a pleasing and desirable flavor characteristic of fresh dairy ingredients."

The next highest, U.S. Grade A, would have had "a fairly pleasing and desirable flavor" while the lowest category, U.S. Grade B "may possess the following flavors to a slight degree: foreign, high acid (sour) or rancid" and other comparable characteristics.

Mrs. Foreman said that "although many persons who commented favored grades, they thought the grades would tell them what ingredients were used in ice cream."

But that was not what the proposal involved, she said. The ingredient information will be covered by a labeling regulation handled by another government agency, the Food and Drug Administration, which is scheduled to go into effect on July 1, 1979.

Some comments on the ice cream grade proposal indicated a desire to have it reflect nutritional value or other qualities. But Mrs. Foreman said that "we do not know whether this can best be accomplished by the grading system or by improved nutritional labeling."

Carter Pushes Hospital Cost Control Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is urging the House Commerce Committee to approve his bill to control rising hospital costs as "the most important step ... to hold down the intolerable rise in health costs."

In a letter written Tuesday and released Wednesday, the president described the legislation as "one of my top priorities."

The committee is expected to vote on the legislation today. White House press secretary Jody Powell said the vote was expected to be "extremely close."

Failure to approve the legislation "would be a serious blow in the fight to hold down inflation and it would be entirely the wrong signal to the rest of the economy," Powell said at the daily White House news briefing.

Carter's proposal would place an annual lid of 9 percent on hospital cost increases.

Carter's letter said "the precipitous rise in health care costs" was one of the most important causes of inflation.

The president said inflation in the health care industry has been 1.5 times greater during the past three years than the rate of increase of all consumer prices.

Hospital costs make up 40 percent of health costs and "have been rising about 2.5 times faster than the national rate of inflation," Carter wrote.

"I urge you, as a member of the Commerce Committee of the House, to help bring spiraling health care costs back in line with the rest of the economy by passing that legislation," the president said.

Some Access To Private Records Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should have unrestricted access to a citizen's private records when it conducts foreign counter-intelligence or Secret Service investigations, Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti said Wednesday.

Civiletti also told a House Government Operations Committee that privacy legislation should not apply to the federal grand jury process.

He proposed the exemptions in outlining the Carter administration's position on the privacy of financial records for the subcommittee on government information and individual rights.

In instances besides those covered by the exemptions, the government should notify the citizens involved or get permission from the courts before obtaining private documents and records, Civiletti said. This notice could be provided after-the-fact in emergency cases.

The administration wants the legislation to apply to individuals and not to corporations or other legal entities. A citizen could challenge the government's request for records in court.

An overall government approach to privacy is being drafted by a special inter-agency task force, which will submit options to President Carter in about two months.

Condominiums Set For Rental Units

WASHINGTON (AP) — McLean Gardens, one of Washington's largest concentrations of moderately priced rental housing, has been sold for $30 million to a California builder who plans to convert its 725 apartments into condominiums.

The builder, Dwight W. Mine, said the apartments will be restored and modernized before being sold at prices ranging from the mid-$40,000s to the mid-$70,000s. One-third of the units in the complex of brick buildings will be reserved for elderly persons, he said.

Houston Ex-Officer Testifies Gun 'Planted' Near Body

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Houston policeman has testified before the city Civil Service Commission that a gun was placed near the body of Randall Webster, a 17-year-old Shreveport, La., youth killed by officers in February 1977.

John T. Olin, 27, who was fired from the police force, said late Tuesday Sgt. Paul D. Dillon, who later was promoted to lieutenant, knew of the "throw-down" gun and discussed the incident with other officers involved in the case.

Dillon also was fired by Police Chief Harry Caldwell and is appealing the action before the three-member commission.

Olin told the commissioners that officers Danny Mays, 31, and Norval W. Holloway, 29, dragged Webster from a van after a high speed chase and threw him to the ground.

Olin said, "I reached for his (Webster's) stomach. Mays was at his head leaning over. I saw Mays swing at his head and the gun went off. I saw blood start coming from his (Webster's) head."

The officer said Dillon then arrived and "we told him that Mays hit the boy on the head and the gun went off and shot him. We all talked to Mays. Dillon asked if we needed a gun" to place at the scene and Holloway said he would get one.

Later, Olin said, officer Holloway "told me he had placed a gun in Webster's hand and then laid it down."

Former officer William E. Byrd has pleaded guilty in federal court to supplying the thrown-down pistol.

Olin said the teen-ager had put both hands outside the van before he was pulled from the vehicle and appeared to be unarmed.

Allen Isbell, the attorney for Dillon, said the other officers decided to testify against his client in hopes of gaining immunity from prosecution.

Isbell also provided testimony in an effort to prove that Dillon had insufficient time and there were too many witnesses around for him to take part in any gun throw-down attempt.

The commission took Dillon's appeal under advisement with a decision expected later this week.

Meanwhile, the 14th Court of Civil Appeals upheld the firing of two Pasadena police officers accused of planting a gun on a woman involved in a chase last March 20 in the city on the outskirts of Houston.

The court opinion overturned a ruling by State District Judge Richard W. Millard that the city had erred in firing the two officers.

The case involved Michelle Eversole, 23, who left a service station without paying for a $7 gasoline purchase. Officers Thomas Barron and John Ballard gave chase. Barron was accused of firing six shots at the fleeing auto. He said the woman appeared to have a gun in her hand.

Later, Ballard allegedly planted a pistol near the scene in an effort to make it appear she was armed. The woman was not injured.

Opinions Of Experts 'Garbage'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jurors who have heard months of testimony on Howard Hughes' handwriting listened Wednesday as an attorney denounced some expert witnesses as charlatans whose words were "garbage."

Plainview To Rename City Parks

A-J Correspondent
PLAINVIEW (Special) — City councilmen here Tuesday agreed to rename two city parks in honor of a trio of residents "who have made outstanding contributions to Plainview."

Acting on a request of the city's parks committee, councilmen voted to change the name of 16th Street Park to M. B. Hood Park in honor of the late Plainview mayor who served in that capacity 14 years. In addition, Hood was a councilman six years, giving him 20 years of direct service to Plainview through city government. During his tenure as mayor, property for the park was purchased.

Also, councilmen agreed to change the name of Curry Lake Park to Edgar and Essie Givens Park in honor of the husband-and-wife team who have made numerous contributions to the city, particularly in the black community where the park is located.

"The Givens have been active in social and civic activities here for many years," Tut Tawwater, parks committee chairman, told councilmen.

Harold Rhoden, in his third day of closing arguments at the Mormon will trial, individually attacked every handwriting expert who testified for the contestants of the will.

"It's as if each selected his own limb to go out on and then cut it off," he said. Referring to one expert, he told jurors: "This man was playing games with you. Maybe he thought you couldn't think. He was giving you garbage."

Rhoden, representing former Hughes' aide Noah Dietrich, is trying to prove that the disputed three-page, handwritten will is authentic.

The contestants, several Hughes relatives who were not named in the document, contend it was forged by Melvin Dummar, a Utah gas station attendant who is designated as an heir in the will.

Rhoden noted Wednesday that even one of the experts who claimed the will was phony said "he never heard of a forger who tried to knock off three pages... It would take about 10 years to do something like this as a forgery."

The jury of three women and five men took notes as Rhoden reviewed for them the characteristics of Hughes' handwriting. He displayed large blowups of the reclusive's penmanship, then compared various letters with those in the will.

The jurors, who have sat through nearly seven months of testimony, will hear from attorneys for the Hughes relatives before the case is submitted for their judgment, probably early next week.

Only six of the eight jurors must agree on a verdict.

The controversial Mormon will, dated March 19, 1968, was delivered to Mormon Church headquarters in Salt Lake City a month after Hughes' death April 5, 1976.

Two Juveniles Held In Rape Attempt In County

Two juveniles remain in county jail today in connection with the attempted rape of a 15-year-old girl living northeast of New Deal.

Sheriff's deputies Wednesday afternoon answered a call to the residence concerning a burglary in progress. Upon arrival, they were told of the rape attempt.

The two youths were picked up by deputies shortly afterward.

Burglars continued to plague Lubbock residences and business Tuesday night.

Rosa C. Rios of 2905 Auburn St., rear, told police that someone took an AM-FM tape deck and stereo system and a lamp from her home. She set the total value of the goods at $800.

Burglars who broke into Refugio T. Pena's 2401 2nd Place home made off with a stereo system valued at $729.

Raul S. Sepeda told police that burglars apparently entered his 5013 15th St. home through an unlocked garage door and took a $500 television set and Home Box Office unit.

Burglars broke into the paint shop of an automobile company at 1910 4th St. and made off with a $300 air compressor, according to Ronnie R. McGee of 4504 59th St., owner of the business.

Fred O. Gonzales of 423 3rd Place told police burglars entered his home while he and his wife were sleeping and took a ladies' electric watch and an onyx ring. He valued the jewelry at $115.

Steve A. Bomar reported the theft of a $1,000 diamond ring to Lubbock police. Bomar said the ring was taken from the bedroom of his 4602 50th St., No. 109, home.

Thieves took a $975 watch from a bathroom at the Koko Inn, according to Charles M. McCollum. McCollum, of 2712 20th St., told police that when he realized the watch was missing he checked the area and was unable to find the watch.

Michael David Whorton told police someone took a tool box and tools, valued at $50, from the bed of his pickup and also a power lawn mower worth $60 from the back yard of his 6009 Vernon Ave. home.

Miscreants toting a .38-caliber weapon destroyed an airconditioning unit at the American Legion Post at 61st Street and Olive Avenue. Harry Bunton of 1711 E. 28th St., post commander, told police the gunshot caused $1,700 in damage to the unit.

Holmes Graham of 4612 10th St. told police that the persons who shot out two windows at his 2014 Clovis Road business caused about $250 damage.

Larry D. Johnson said $1,200 worth of property was stolen sometime since Friday from a house under construction in the 5500-block of Grinnell Street. Reportedly taken were light fixtures and a dishwasher.

Whoever broke through a window at Sterling Miller's 610-B N. Elkhart Ave. residence Tuesday reportedly made off with $1,000 worth of stereo equipment.

Gerry Lynn Averett of 5209 72nd St. told police a $500 television was taken from that house Tuesday. Reports indicated entry was made through an unlocked back door.

A burglar got through a door at Kim Cronk's 1919 Ave. M home Tuesday and got away with a stereo, sewing machine and camera, altogether valued at $1,650.

Food and soft drinks, reportedly worth $100, was stolen from a concession stand at Mae Simmons Park Monday or Tuesday. According to reports entry was gained by breaking through a door.

Utility Board Delays Road Lights Decision

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Electric Utility Board decided by consensus Wednesday to study additional data before recommending to the city council a street lighting policy for Loop 289 frontage roads.

At City Manager Larry Cunningham's request, the board discussed formulating a lighting policy, but agreed it needs more information such as possible funding sources and areas in which lights should be installed.

After learning from Lubbock Power and Light Director Bill Wood that item, several board and staff members implied they believe the businesses want more than lighting for safety.

"Personally I don't feel we should put up lighting just so some guy can save money on area lighting," said Tom Hill of LP&L, a comment to which board member Betty Wheeler murmured agreement.

N.B. McCullough said he believes the telephone callers who requested lighting "probably want to bring business in there."

Wood said, "The major problem is their security lights are getting shut out and they want help" with area lighting.

Because the state owns 15 feet of right of way along the frontage roads, the lights would be some distance from the streets, Wood told the board. The highway department also indicated to him that it is not interested in additional lighting along the Loop, he added.

Hill backed up Wood's statement, saying the highway department believes the spillover lighting from the Loop is adequate for safe driving along the frontage roads.

Other problems, such as funding sources and what type of lights should be used for different zoning districts abutting the roads, will have to be considered before a policy is formulated, Hill said.

At the board's request, Chairman George Meenaghan said he will request that summaries of LP&L's proposed budget for fiscal year 1978-79 be sent to members.

He also will ask that the board be informed of council budget sessions so that members can attend to discuss LP&L's proposed finances.

The board's action is not meant to create an "adversary" situation between it and the council, Meenaghan said.

"It's just to remind them that the ordinance says this," he said, referring to a passage authorizing the board to review and recommend budgets to the council.

In the past, the budget has been sent from Wood to the city manager and then to the council. But, Meenaghan said, "I think we ought to get in compliance with the ordinance."

The board is not just a "rubber stamp," he said.

Police Seek Suspect In Slaying Here

Lubbock police today are continuing their search for a Mexican-American man who allegedly shot Javier Gutierrez Tuesday night.

Gutierrez, 17, of 1831 San Jose Drive, was found in the 2100 block of Emory Street, where he reportedly was shot about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday. He died about 1:53 a.m. Wednesday in Methodist Hospital.

Gutierrez' death brings the total number of homicides in Lubbock this year to 15.

Reports indicate that Gutierrez was shot in the back of the head. Police recovered a bullet near the front door of the apartment where the victim was found.

A woman at the scene told police the victim had fought with another man in front of the apartment just before the shooting. Other witnesses provided the same description of the suspect and of the vehicle that left the area after the incident.

A nearby resident reported hearing four shots and seeing the suspect's vehicle, a light-blue 1968 Ford pickup with a white left door, drive south from the neighborhood.

Services for Gutierrez are scheduled for 2 p.m. Friday in El Buen Pastor Church with the Rev. Frank Garcia, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens under the direction of Henderson Funeral Directors.

He was a native of Mexico and had lived here six years, after moving here from Juarez. He was a member of El Buen Pastor and was employed by Frontier Wholesale Company.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Gutierrez; five brothers, Manuel, Joe, Pedro, Ramon and Elias, all of Lubbock; two sisters, Maria Gutierrez of Lubbock and Elena Cudillo of Petersburg; a grandmother, Cruz Perez and his grandfather, Rafael Campos.

John Cox Sr. Rites Set Saturday

SEAGRAVES (Special) — A ruling remained pending this morning in the death of a Gaines County sheriff's deputy.

Deputy John Larry Cox Sr., 43, was found dead at his Seagraves home about 9 p.m. Monday, according to Gaines County Justice of the Peace Fred Connally.

Cox was discovered by his wife, Connally said, and had reportedly been shot.

Gaines County Sheriff Ed Welch would not say whether authorities suspect foul play was involved in the death. "They just don't know yet," said Sgt. Jesse Priest of the Texas Rangers, who are also investigating the death.

Welch said an autopsy had been performed Tuesday, but results had not come back this morning. He said the investigation would probably continue "for at least a week."

Services for Cox, a Lubbock native, will be at 9 a.m. Saturday in First United Methodist Church here with the Rev. John Becker, pastor, and the Rev. Bill Dodd, of Gatesville, officiating.

Military graveside rites will be at 11:30 a.m. in City of Lubbock Cemetery Saturday. Burial will be under direction of Connally Funeral Home here.

Cox had served in the U.S. Navy 21 years before becoming a deputy sheriff for Gaines County. He was a member of First United Methodist Church here.

Cox married Mary Puryear in Albany, June 6, 1977.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Ann; his stepmother, Mrs. S.H. Cox of Belton; four daughters, Dorothy and Cindi, both of Jacksonville, Fla., and Donna of Portugal and Kin Puryear of the home; three sons, Sammy of Korea, John Larry Jr. of Jacksonville, Fla., and Brent Puryear of the home; three brothers, William John of Los Angeles, Calif., and Sam and Lon, both of Lubbock; and three sisters, Mrs. Mary Gotcher, Mrs. Lynn Harrison and Mrs. Doris Seale, all of Lubbock.

TO CROWN SUCCESSOR

Susan Perkins, Miss America of 1978, who will crown her successor on NBC's live telecast of the annual Miss America Pageant September 9, was employed as a legislative assistant in the Ohio State legislature before she won her crown. This will mark the 25th consecutive year the Atlantic City, N.J., event has been televised.

Search Continues For Missing Man

A-J Correspondent

GUTHRIE — Lawmen here Wednesday, with the aid of specially trained German Shepherds, scoured rough terrain on the 6666 Ranch area but came up with no trace of a 68-year-old Finney man, who has been missing since May 14.

A.B. "Henry" Northcutt, the father of Lubbock zoning administrator Jerrell Northcutt, was last seen May 14 when he visited a neighbor, Elmo Adams. Adams said Northcutt had left to run an errand.

The dogs were flown to the area Wednesday morning to aid in the search. The dogs will be working another day or two, King County Sheriff Hermon Oliver said.

'Disappointing' Tag Placed On Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's performance since taking office 16 months ago has been courageous, but disappointing, because he has failed to deliver on his promises, a study by the Brookings Institution said Wednesday.

Carter has turned to Brookings, a Democratic-oriented economic think tank, for several key members of his administration, notably Charles L. Schultze, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers, and Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

But despite the associations between the institution and the administration, the study assessed Carter's performance in critical terms, although the views were those of the authors and not of Brookings itself.

It said that Carter has been courageous in proposing significant changes in a wide variety of federal programs, including energy, social security, food stamps, welfare, employment, education, hospital costs, urban policy, defense and taxation. But it noted he has not been able to win enactment of very many.

"On this basis, the performance is disappointing," wrote Joseph A. Pechman, editor of Brookings' annual federal budget study, entitled "Setting National Priorities."

"Where the administration falls short is in carrying its initiatives through the legislative process — whether by overloading the congressional calendar or by misjudging the balance of political forces on major issues," he said.

In his summary of the study, Pechman, a tax expert who has been consulted frequently by the administration, gave the president mixed reviews on his economic performance. He said he has done well in prolonging the economic expansion with his 1977 economic stimulus program, but poorly in combatting inflation.

Inflation Policy Criticized

"The administration can be faulted for giving inflation control little emphasis in its various initiatives and for not dealing with the wage-price problem," he said.

The study also said the Federal Reserve Board and the White House may be working at cross purposes with the result that a "possible incompatibility of fiscal and monetary policy" risks cutting short economic expansion.

It said the Federal Reserve's growth targets for the nation's money supply may not be adequate to finance the 11 percent growth rates of the nation's gross national product that the administration envisions in 1978 and 1979.

Despite Carter's introduction of zero-base budgeting into the nation's budget process, "there are virtually no reductions in outlays for old programs" in the 1979 budget, even though the process is supposed to make old programs compete for dollars on an equal footing with new proposals, the study said.

It said Carter will be unable to deliver on his pledge to balance the federal budget by fiscal 1981 if significant tax cuts are enacted by Congress this year, and the budget may be in deficit by as much as $30 billion.

Israel Army Rocked By Second Suicide

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A second religious Israeli soldier committed suicide after mistreatment by training officers, a member of parliament charged Wednesday.

Rabbi Menachem Porush of the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel faction said the soldier was training at the same tank base as another religious soldier whose suicide was reported last week.

The first suicide, as well as charges of mistreatment of religious soldiers, caused an uproar last week when reported in an expose by the Orthodox newspaper Shearim.

Abuses reportedly included beatings and forced labor with little sleep. Religious recruits were forced to drink sea water on marches and were kept from performing religious obligations, the report said.

Four training officers were jailed for their actions, the reports said. The army has not commented on the charges, but the news accounts passed censorship, indicating their accuracy.

Army ombudsman Haim Laskov, former chief of staff, said he received 10,000 complaints of mistreatment from soldiers last year, up 18 percent from the year before.

everytime he was playing ball and someone in a truck or tractor would drive by."

Once, she testified, he became sick and was taken to a curandero, a magic man of Mexican-American folklore, and was cured.

She also said she placed a rabbit's foot under her son's pillow to help him sleep.

But, she also said Lopez told her of "shadows" in their own home, shadows he connected with spirits from another world.

"The shadow told me to do this," Dr. James Kreimeyer, a psychiatrist who examined the youth a month after Tripp's death, said Lopez told him.

"The shadow in my dreams told me to kill anybody," Kreimeyer related Lopez told him. "The only man outside was the principal."

rather than irritate in a conversation" and, therefore, could be more effective.

Granberry described Reese as "a friend of mine" and said Reese asked him to become a regional campaign chairman before entering the race formally.

However, Granberry said, "I feel so strongly about George because he's so well-equipped for the job."

Granberry cited Bush's experience as a Navy pilot, which he said showed responsibility, and his experience in the oil business, along with the fact that he has no children as favorable assets.

And "auxiliary benefits" would accrue for the district because Bush's name would gain him "tremendous committee assignments."

Besides, Granberry said, "His father may become president."

However, the Lubbock dentist emphasized Bush's name was not the main reason for his endorsement.

Nixon 'Memoirs' Sales Brisk After Slow Start

NEW YORK (AP) — After initial reports of a slow start, sales of former President Richard Nixon's "Memoirs" were brisk in the week following publication. Sales were highest outside of the East, some of the nation's biggest chains said.

And Grosset Dunlap predicted that 300,000 copies eventually would be sold of the $19.95 book, which some retailers are discounting as much as half.

"I think we had a nice sale on the book," Brentano's merchandising manager Barry Denenberg said. "I'll make very few returns."

He said the book posted the third-highest sales in the chain's 30 stores last week and would slip to fifth or sixth this week.

The book officially was published May 15, but it went on sale in a number of stores earlier. Although a spot check by The Associated Press 10 days ago found several booksellers reporting sluggish sales, the chains said sales now have met or exceeded expectations.

Kay Sexton, spokeswoman for the B. Dalton chain of 310 stores, said "Memoirs" was second in sales for two weeks running, with particular strength in Nebraska, Oklahoma, Missouri and Palm Springs, Calif.

She said the company's best-seller list was led by Erma Bombeck's latest book, which sells for $7.95, with sales of 12,000 copies of "If Life is a Bowl of Cherries — What am I Doing in the Pits?" the week before last and 5,000 copies last week.

"Memoirs" is going at the rate of 2,000 copies a week, "which isn't bad on a $20 book," the spokeswoman added, relating that corporations were buying 50 of them at a time, presumably as gifts.

Edward Stoddard, president of the ceedings.

"The statement that he was going to kill anybody, not anybody in particular, would not be consistent with your diagnosis of paranoid schizophrenia. Would it, doc?" Montford queried.

Kreimeyer later agreed, and then admitted that he had known there were other easier targets for the human "sacrifice" the "spirits" told Lopez to make, it might have made a difference his diagnosis.

"Would that have changed your diagnosis?" Montford asked. "Would it have made a difference if you had known about all these other people, these other things?"

"To some extent," Kreimeyer replied. "It would have made me wonder." "It would have made you wonder if he was telling the truth, wouldn't it?" Montford challenged.

"Yes sir, it would," he replied.

Lopez also told the two experts he did not hear the voices that told him to do things when he was awake, only in his dreams.

Under questioning by Montford, the two witnesses who examined Lopez testified this was inconsistent with a diagnosis that Lopez suffered from acute paranoid schizophrenia, which qualifies as a legal mental disease in Texas and, as such, a legal defense for any crime.

However, under questioning from Taylor and Abeyta, Kreimeyer and Wall also testified Lopez was calm, collected, exacting, reluctant to talk and very careful about his thoughts — symptoms they said could indicate schizophrenia.

Kreimeyer painted jurors a picture of Lopez as a boy "extremely sensitive of criticism" and having "poor control of his impulses."

Shown To Be Withdrawn

The former clinical director of Rusk State Hospital's maximum security ward said tests on Lopez made May 18, 1977, showed that Lopez was withdrawn, depressed and suffered from "delusional thinking."

Montford closed the state's case after following Lopez' confession with testimony from Tripp's wife, Patricia Alice. She told jurors April 7, 1977, was a special day for her husband.

"He had been working on his master's and he got a letter the day before congratulating him, so he had to take the letter to show everybody," she said, breaking down in tears.

Montford read Lopez' confession Tuesday after Ledbetter overruled defense arguments that it may have been given while the youth was not mentally competent.

"A couple of months ago, I made a plot to kill the principal, Mr. Tripp, at Whittier High School. I planned to take a gun and kill the principal," Montford read from Lopez' statement.

Doubleday chain of 30 stores, said "Memoirs" was "selling better than we expected." Declining to furnish figures, he alone said it is doing well in New York — so well that it will make the best-seller list in Doubleday's Fifth Avenue store.

Senior buyer Thomas Paynter of Waldenbooks noted that sales in 488 stores were strong but nowhere better than in Pennsylvania and Ohio. He said he did not know why.

"Maybe, he has friends there," Paynter said with a smile, adding that "it seems to be a much better book" than critics have found.

Publisher Harold Roth said Grosset Dunlap has added a second printing of 25,000 copies to the 225,000 copies in the initial order. And Judith Welling, a spokeswoman for R.R. Donnelley and Sons, the manufacturer of the book, said press time was reserved Wednesday for a third printing of a minimum of 25,000 copies.

Roth said that 2,500 copies were being sold daily.

Furthermore, he reported that 2,336 copies of 2,500 commemorative editions selling for $250 and 8,000 copies of 10,000 deluxe $50 editions have been purchased.

"The book has exceeded my expectations," Roth said, predicting subsequent printings to total 300,000 copies and a sell-out of the special editions.

Roth was critical of what he called an "emotional reaction" against the disgraced former president and said one bookseller had demanded of a prospective customer his reason for buying the 1,184-page volume.

As for a bookseller who was quoted in an AP story last week as questioning the quality of the binding, the publisher said, "It happens to be a very well-produced book. It is standing up very well."

Satellite 'Killer' Tested By Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have conducted a new test of their satellite-destroying system less than three weeks before the start of U.S.-Soviet negotiations on curbing such space war weapons.

"The Soviets launched a probable anti-satellite interceptor on May 19 against a Soviet satellite," the Pentagon said Wednesday when asked about reports of such a test. The statement gave no details.

Defense officials said they were surprised the Russians chose to conduct an anti-satellite system test ahead of the June 8 opening of negotiations in Helsinki. Some viewed the development as a discouraging harbinger for those talks.

Divided On Success

Experts were divided on whether the test, the first in five months, was a success.

Intelligence sources said the hunter satellite got "pretty close" to the target satellite but did not explode. The hunter dropped out of orbit in one piece while the target had remained in space, they said.

Experts were uncertain whether the Russians intended to destroy the hunter and the target, or whether they were only testing the hunter's ability to come within lethal range.

With the target satellite still orbiting the earth, they said, the Russians could send up a second interceptor later and get in an extra test.

The May 19 test was the ninth since early 1976 when the Russians resumed their experiments after a four-year lapse

Drug Abuse In Army 'Serious'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 209,000 enlisted personnel in the Army use marijuana and about 49,000 use hard drugs such as heroin and LSD, figures in an internal Army survey indicate.

However, Brig. Gen. John H. Johns told the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control on Wednesday that the Army survey was unable to determine whether the use of drugs had any measurable effect on the Army's combat readiness.

Johns, director of human resources development in the Army's personnel office, also said the survey indicated drug abuse in the military is not as widespread as shown by an earlier committee study.

Not Epidemic

"The Army views its drug abuse problems as serious but not of epidemic proportions," said Johns.

"The abuse does have some degree of adverse impact on combat readiness but it is difficult, if not impossible, to establish a definitive causal relationship that can be quantified," he added.

In April, however, Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., the panel's chairman, took a different stance. Commenting on his committee's survey, Wolff said, "the committee is certain that regular drug use does have an adverse effect on combat readiness, job performance and the morale of our armed forces."

Johns was testifying on the Army's survey of enlisted soldiers picked at random, in which they were asked whether they used drugs occasionally, frequently or never. Officers were not included in the study.

Marijuana Used

The survey found that 18.6 percent of the enlisted personnel responded that they used marijuana occasionally and an additional 12.6 percent said they used it frequently. This amounts to roughly 31 percent of the 671,000 enlisted men in the Army.

The survey also showed that 5.7 percent of the respondents said they used hard drugs occasionally, while an additional 1.6 percent said they used hard drugs frequently.

If the survey figures are applied to the 671,000 total enlisted men and women, slightly more than 209,000 would have admitted using marijuana and nearly 49,000 would have admitted using hard drugs.

The survey was attacked by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., who noted that 50 percent of those responding said they believed the answers could be traced back to them.

"It is a crime in the Army to use hard drugs and marijuana," English said, questioning whether many soldiers might have answered untruthfully in order to avoid being linked to a crime.

Prosecution Threat Ignored

"Even with the threat of prosecution, even under the threat that the survey could be traced back to them, 30 percent answered 'yes' to marijuana use, he noted.

English also criticized the questions used, saying they allowed the person answering the form to determine whether his use was occasional or frequent.

"A person who smoked 5 marijuana cigarettes a day could decide he was an occasional user," he noted.

Johns said the Army data indicated there had been an overall decrease in hard drug abuse and that marijuana usage was holding steady.

He acknowledged that the overall use of drugs in the Army was higher than estimates on drug abuse in the civilian population. But Johns pointed out that drug abuse in society is at its highest in the 18-25 age bracket.

Both the United States and Russia are heavily dependent on satellites in earth orbit to monitor missile tests and other key military developments in each other's territory.

U.S. officials believe that such satellites, on guard against surprise atomic attack, promote mutual deterrence and discourage military adventurism.

The United States is pushing ahead with its own anti-satellite program, which aims at combat-ready weaponry by the mid-1980s.

Meanwhile, this country has accelerated research on means of safeguarding U.S. satellites from attack and destruction.

Margaret's Marriage Quickly Dissolved

LONDON (AP) — A two-minute proceeding in a musty London courtroom Wednesday dissolved the marriage of Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon, celebrated in the pomp and circumstance of a Westminster Abbey wedding 18 years ago.

The royal divorce came 20th in a list of 27 and put royalty in company of a barmaid, an office cleaner and a former guardsman.

Neither the 47-year-old princess, nor her photographer husband, the former Antony Armstrong-Jones, 48, was required to appear in court for the proceedings — a mere formality under British divorce laws updated seven years ago.

Irons said transportation to and from Iles will be furnished from three or four selected school locations in Lubbock for the regular school day program. Transportation services will not be available for the early-morning or late afternoon activities.

Iles will continue serving students living in the Iles zone (although each of them will spend every other year at a predominantly white school, as required by the integration plan).

"Although the exemplary program is being designed to attract majority (white) students to Iles, requests from minority families will be considered on a limited basis, depending on the enrollment of majority students," the district said.

each plaintiff, together with liquidated damages of $25,000.

A city spokesman said Nierlich had been employed in the Parks and Recreation Department since November, 1962.

Alford reportedly worked in the production department at Lubbock Power and Light.

The petition describes TMRS as a state agency which plans and administers distributions of the city retirement program.

Alford and Nierlich claim in the suit defendants have deprived them of rights they are entitled to under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

According to them, persons 50 or older when employed may not participate in the retirement plan administered by TMRS.

Unfair Policy Alleged

Plaintiffs say the alleged policy unfairly deprives persons over the age of 50 when hired of benefits including:

- Employer contribution toward retirement or the opportunity to contribute their own funds into a plan.
- Vacation pay upon termination.
- Accumulation or receipt upon termination of accrued sick leave pay.
- Paid up group term life insurance following termination equal with younger employees.

Plaintiffs also contend in the suit that a compulsory retirement age of 65 bears no reasonable relationship to the capacity to do a job.

Plaintiffs seek, along with other relief, a declaratory judgment that defendants have violated provisions of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Texas Age Discrimination Law and the U.S. Constitution.

Star Says Film Not Lewd

LONDON (AP) — Brooke Shields, 13-year-old star of "Pretty Baby," said Wednesday she hopes the film about a child growing up in a New Orleans brothel will not be banned in Britain.

"It is not pornographic or lewd," Brooke said of the film by French director Louis Malle. It has been banned in parts of Canada, and there are reports it may not be given a British certificate for public showing because it deals with child prostitution.

"Sure, I appear nude in one sequence," Brooke told reporters, but she added, it "was directed with great taste so as not to make it cheap or dirty in any way. My mother would never have agreed to my appearing in just filth."

Terri Shields, Brooke's mother, said she thinks "Pretty Baby" "is a very beautiful film about a very sensitive subject."

Brooke, in London after attending the Cannes film festival, has completed a new film, "Tilt," in which she plays a pinball wizard.

Singer Considers Offer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant is considering whether to accept an offer to be nominated for a vice presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention, a religious news organization says.

In separate interviews in the Baptist Press, Miss Bryant and her husband, Bob Green, agreed it would be an honor for her to be nominated. Miss Bryant, a Southern Baptist, was quoted as saying she wants to learn more about the post before deciding.

Green, who manages his wife's career, said the offer came "many weeks ago," but he couldn't recall who made the request.

Homosexual groups plan protests against Miss Bryant, who ran a successful campaign to overturn a homosexual rights ordinance in Dade County, Fla., when she speaks before the Southern Baptist Pastor's Conference in Atlanta on June 11.

Queen Visits Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Queen Elizabeth flew 110 miles inside Communist East Germany Wednesday for a day of military pomp and public appearances in West Berlin.

Trumpeters heralded the British monarch and Prince Philip onto Berlin's Mayfield, part of a giant Hitler-era sports complex built for the 1936 summer Olympics. Riding in a four-horse coach flown from London, the queen reviewed 1,100 British troops before more than 30,000 spectators, including thousands of Allied military personnel and flag-waving schoolchildren let out of classes for the day.

Beating Christmas Rush

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — A Duluth oil company is mailing Christmas cards to its 15,000 customers this week to beat the upcoming postal rate increase.

Harold Bach, executive vice president of Inter-City Oil Co., says it doesn't bother him that Christmas is still seven months away.

The message on the envelope asks, "Who's the nut sending Xmas cards this time of year?"

Bach suggested that his company mail the cards to its customers now as a promotion stunt, before the first-class postage rate goes up to 15 cents May 29.

"We have been trying to develop creative promotions. This one seems novel enough," he said. "We think our customers will see the humor in it and think well of our company."

The 6-by-9-inch cards have a border of holly and red and green print. Their message is, "Because the days of the 13-cent stamp are fleeting we are sending you now our Christmas greeting."

And there is a sketch of Ben Franklin, the first U.S. postmaster general, and the Franklin quotation, "A penny saved is a penny earned."

Aliens Given Special Permit For Harvest

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — Mexican aliens began harvesting area crops Wednesday after being granted special permission to enter this country for that purpose.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions signed an order last Friday granting permission for the workers to cross the border. The Presidio Valley Growers Association asked the judge to allow the workers in the fields immediately to save the onion crops.

Bill Bishop, president of the association, said there were about 10 days left to harvest onions. He said the cantaloupe harvest begins in mid-June and ends in early July.

Gerald Coyle, deputy district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said permission was given Tuesday for 330 Mexicans to work 70 days.

Bishop said the workers will be paid 40 cents per sack of onions, which could average $4 per hour.

"Basically, the U.S. economy is the only economy of significant size able to recycle those petrodollars back into productive worth," Lance told executives gathered for a seminar Tuesday.

"And all of you know money in and of itself is really not of any benefit to anybody unless it is properly used," said Lance, who resigned his Carter administration post in the midst of criticism of his personal financial dealings.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The police report in suburban Hoover read: "Stolen, one set of shark jaws, with full set of teeth; eight to 10 inches in diameter in full opened position."

He said they were stolen while he had them hanging on a string on his patio to dry out so they could be mounted.

Ex-Gov. Hall Paroled

LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Former Oklahoma Gov. David Hall, who served 18 months in federal prison on bribery and extortion charges, is free on parole and has moved into his family's La Costa home.

The Oklahoma Democrat began serving four concurrent three-year terms Nov. 22, 1976, after his conviction was upheld by an appeals court.

He was released Monday from the Swift Trail Federal Prison Camp near Safford, Ariz., and was picked up by his wife. He plans to operate Dreyco Investment Corp., an investment and real estate firm, at a shopping center in this plush Southern California resort community.

Hall, who was indicted three days after leaving office in 1975, will be on parole until Feb. 8, 1979, authorities said.

Postage Hike Protested

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Mrs. Henry M. Sibley wasn't about to accept the increase in postage from 13 cents to 15 cents effective next Monday without some protest.

The Hanover County woman mailed her Christmas cards this week.

Inside each card was the following poem: "Without a moment of delay, you have now received your Christmas card in May."

"When the new postal rate was passed, this will probably be our last."

"We all wish you the very best, for this Christmas and the rest."

Kennedy Aid Sought

BOSTON (AP) — The Ulster Defense Association, Northern Ireland's largest Protestant organization, has appealed to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to mediate a settlement in the long-troubled region.

Andy Tyrrie, chairman of the paramilitary group, said it would refrain from further violence until the Massachusetts Democrat replies, according to Wednesday's Boston Herald American.

"We believe that Senator Kennedy is the one man who would be acceptable to both (Protestant and Catholic) communities here," Tyrrie said in an interview. "He is Catholic, but the Protestant community believes in his integrity and credibility."

Tyrrie said his 30,000-member group has avoided violence in the past several months but recent attacks by the Provisional Irish Republican Army are making it more difficult to continue the policy.

Fathers Of Year Selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Father's Day doesn't arrive until June 18, but 13 men already have been honored as National Fathers of the Year.

Martin Luther King Sr., father of the slain civil rights leader, Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill, New York Gov. Hugh Carey and fathers from the fields of sports, show business and journalism accepted awards at a banquet Tuesday.

The awards were presented by the non-profit National Father's Day Committee.

"This comes as a total surprise to me," King said at a news conference before the ceremonies. "I never sought it."

Other fathers honored Tuesday: U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, federal Judge John Sirica, actor Yul Brynner, newspaper columnist William Safire and actor Dick Van Patten.

American To Construct Only Golf Course In Soviet Union

CHICAGO (AP) — Robert Trent Jones is on a journey of golf detente.

Jones, who has built 400 golf courses in 42 states and 23 countries, has been commissioned to design what will be the only course in the Soviet Union, where the game has been viewed as an odd capitalist sport.

"I think it is a good omen," Jones said. "If we get them playing golf instead of doing what they've been doing, it will be great."

Jones said the 7,000-yard course will be built just outside Moscow in a rolling, timbered greenbelt area with a swamp that has been made into a lake and can be used for water holes. He said he hopes to have the course completed before the 1980 Olympics.

"Visiting businessmen and the diplomatic corps will be using the course the most at first," he said. Once the Russians "get on to the game, we think they'll go at it in a big way."

Jones first talked to the Russians about building a golf course in 1974, when he went to Moscow on a trip sponsored by Armand Hammer, president of Occidental Petroleum. Hammer, 80, is building a world trade center in Moscow and suggested the idea of building a golf course nearby to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, said Jones's son, Robert Trent Jones Jr., who accompanied his father to Russia.

Brezhnev liked the idea, Jones Jr. said, and gave the go-ahead. The course will be owned by the Russian government and built by Russian laborers assigned by the government.

In Moscow, officials said the course would not be the first ever built in Russia. In the late 1920s, when a consortium of American companies built a huge hydroelectric complex in Zaporozhye in the Ukraine, the Soviets provided a golf course along with six tennis courts and swimming pool to amuse Americans working there.

When the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower planned a visit in the 1950s, one hole was built for him at a resort near Lake Baikal.

Brezhnev is not known ever to have played golf, but he owns a golf cart former President Richard Nixon gave him.

Jones Sr. said that in 1974 he discussed the proposed golf course with Vladimir Kuznetsov of the Soviet foreign service.

"Kuznetsov kept his golf bags in his office closet and read every golf book in the world," Jones said. "He had learned to play on assignments outside the country. He would go out in the fields and hit golf balls around when he was home.

"I guess you would have to say he is the Russian golf champion — he's got nobody there to challenge him."

Jones Jr. said that when Kuznetsov was given a United States Golf Association book of rules, "he shrugged and said, 'We make our own rules over here. The golf course will be for all the people if they can get starting times.'"

'Disappointing' Tag Placed On Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's performance since taking office 16 months ago has been courageous, but disappointing, because he has failed to deliver on his promises, a study by the Brookings Institution said Wednesday.

Carter has turned to Brookings, a Democratic-oriented economic think tank, for several key members of his administration, notably Charles L. Schultze, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers, and Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

But despite the associations between the institution and the administration, the study assessed Carter's performance in critical terms, although the views were those of the authors and not of Brookings itself.

It said that Carter has been courageous in proposing significant changes in a wide variety of federal programs, including energy, social security, food stamps, welfare, employment, education, hospital costs, urban policy, defense and taxation. But it noted he has not been able to win enactment of very many.

"On this basis, the performance is disappointing," wrote Joseph A. Pechman, editor of Brookings' annual federal budget study, entitled "Setting National Priorities."

"Where the administration falls short is in carrying its initiatives through the legislative process — whether by overloading the congressional calendar or by misjudging the balance of political forces on major issues," he said.

In his summary of the study, Pechman, a tax expert who has been consulted frequently by the administration, gave the president mixed reviews on his economic performance. He said he has done well in prolonging the economic expansion with his 1977 economic stimulus program, but poorly in combatting inflation.

Inflation Policy Criticized

"The administration can be faulted for giving inflation control little emphasis in its various initiatives and for not dealing with the wage-price problem," he said.

The study also said the Federal Reserve Board and the White House may be working at cross purposes with the result that a "possible incompatibility of fiscal and monetary policy" risks cutting short economic expansion.

It said the Federal Reserve's growth targets for the nation's money supply may not be adequate to finance the 11 percent growth rates of the nation's gross national product that the administration envisions in 1978 and 1979.

Despite Carter's introduction of zero-base budgeting into the nation's budget process, "there are virtually no reductions in outlays for old programs" in the 1979 budget, even though the process is supposed to make old programs compete for dollars on an equal footing with new proposals, the study said.

It said Carter will be unable to deliver on his pledge to balance the federal budget by fiscal 1981 if significant tax cuts are enacted by Congress this year, and the budget may be in deficit by as much as $30 billion.

Israel Army Rocked By Second Suicide

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A second religious Israeli soldier committed suicide after mistreatment by training officers, a member of parliament charged Wednesday.

Rabbi Menachem Porush of the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel faction said the soldier was training at the same tank base as another religious soldier whose suicide was reported last week.

The first suicide, as well as charges of mistreatment of religious soldiers, caused an uproar last week when reported in an expose by the Orthodox newspaper Shearim.

Abuses reportedly included beatings and forced labor with little sleep. Religious recruits were forced to drink sea water on marches and were kept from performing religious obligations, the report said.

Four training officers were jailed for their actions, the reports said. The army has not commented on the charges, but the news accounts passed censorship, indicating their accuracy.

Army ombudsman Haim Laskov, former chief of staff, said he received 10,000 complaints of mistreatment from soldiers last year, up 18 percent from the year before.

State's Testimony Completed In Lopez Murder Trial

everytime he was playing ball and someone in a truck or tractor would drive by." Once, she testified, he became sick and was taken to a curandero, a magic man of Mexican-American folklore, and was cured.

She also said she placed a rabbit's foot under her son's pillow to help him sleep. But, she also said Lopez told her of "shadows" in their own home, shadows he connected with spirits from another world.

"The shadow told me to do this," Dr. James Kreimeyer, a psychiatrist who examined the youth a month after Tripp's death, said Lopez told him.

"The shadow in my dreams told me to kill anybody," Kreimeyer related Lopez told him. "The only man outside was the principal."

Psychologist Dr. Richard Wall of Lubbock, testified Lopez told him the same story of how a black form in his dreams told him he had to kill someone April 7, 1977, or he might be harmed, or even killed himself.

Claimed Under Spell

Kreimeyer said Lopez told him someone "had put a spell on him, but maybe he hadn't."

That testimony — sought by defense attorneys to confirm Kreimeyer's diagnosis that Lopez suffers from acute schizophrenic paranoia — is what Montford centered on during Wednesday's proceedings. "The statement that he was going to kill anybody, not anybody in particular, would not be consistent with your diagnosis of paranoid schizophrenia. Would it, doc?" Montford queried.

Kreimeyer later agreed, and then admitted that he had known there were other easier targets for the human "sacrifice" — the "spirits" told Lopez to make, it might have made a difference his diagnosis.

"Would that have changed your diagnosis?" Montford asked. "Would it have made a difference if you had known about all these other people, these other things?"

"To some extent," Kreimeyer replied. "It would have made me wonder. "It would have made me wonder if he was telling the truth, wouldn't it?" Montford challenged.

"Yes sir, it would," he replied. Lopez also told the two experts he did not hear the voices that told him to do things when he was awake, only in his dreams.

Under questioning by Montford, the two witnesses who examined Lopez testified this was inconsistent with a diagnosis that Lopez suffered from acute paranoid schizophrenia, which qualifies as a legal mental disease in Texas and, as such, a legal defense for any crime.

However, under questioning from Taylor and Abeyta, Kreimeyer and Wall also testified Lopez was calm, collected, exacting, reluctant to talk and very careful about his thoughts — symptoms they said could indicate schizophrenia.

Kreimeyer painted jurors a picture of Lopez as a boy "extremely sensitive of criticism" and having "poor control of his impulses."

Shown To Be Withdrawn

The former clinical director of Rusk State Hospital's maximum security ward said tests on Lopez made May 18, 1977, showed that Lopez was withdrawn, depressed and suffered from "delusional thinking."

Montford closed the state's case after following Lopez' confession with testimony from Tripp's wife, Patricia Alice. She told jurors April 7, 1977, was a special day for her husband.

"He had been working on his master's and he got a letter the day before congratulating him, so he had to take the letter to show everybody," she said, breaking down in tears.

Montford read Lopez's confession Tuesday after Ledbetter overruled defense arguments that it may have been given while the youth was not mentally competent.

"A couple of months ago, I made a plot to kill the principal, Mr. Tripp, at Whitehall High School. I planned to take a gun and kill the principal," Montford read from Lopez' statement.

rather than irritate in a conversation and, therefore, could be more effective.

Granberry described Reese as "a friend of mine" and said Reese asked him to become a regional campaign chairman before entering the race formally.

However, Granberry said, "I feel so strongly about George because he's so well-equipped for the job."

Granberry cited Bush's experience as a Navy pilot, which he said showed responsibility, and his experience in the oil business, along with the fact that he has no children as favorable assets.

And "auxiliary benefits" would accrue for the district because Bush's name would gain him "tremendous committee assignments."

Besides, Granberry said, "His father may become president."

Nixon 'Memoirs' Sales Brisk After Slow Start

NEW YORK (AP) — After initial reports of a slow start, sales of former President Richard Nixon's "Memoirs" were brisk in the week following publication. Sales were highest outside of the East, some of the nation's biggest chains said.

And Grosset Dunlap predicted that 300,000 copies eventually would be sold of the $19.95 book, which some retailers are discounting as much as half.

"I think we had a nice sale on the book," Brentano's merchandising manager Barry Denenberg said. "I'll make very few returns."

He said the book posted the third-highest sales in the chain's 30 stores last week and would slip to fifth or sixth this week.

The book officially was published May 15, but it went on sale in a number of stores earlier. Although a spot check by The Associated Press 10 days ago found several booksellers reporting sluggish sales, the chains said sales now have met or exceeded expectations.

Kay Sexton, spokeswoman for the B. Dalton chain of 310 stores, said "Memoirs" was second in sales for two weeks running, with particular strength in Nebraska, Oklahoma, Missouri and Palm Springs, Calif.

She said the company's best-seller list was led by Erma Bombeck's latest book, which sells for $7.95, with sales of 12,000 copies of "If Life is a Bowl of Cherries — What am I Doing in the Pits?" the week before last and 5,000 copies last week.

"Memoirs" is going at the rate of 2,000 copies a week, "which isn't bad on a $20 book," the spokeswoman added, relating that corporations were buying 50 of them at a time, presumably as gifts.

Edward Stoddard, president of the

Doubleday chain of 30 stores, said "Memoirs" was "selling better than we expected." Declining to furnish figures, he alone said it is doing well in New York — so well that it will make the best-seller list in Doubleday's Fifth Avenue store.

Senior buyer Thomas Paynter of Waldenbooks noted that sales in 488 stores were strong but nowhere better than in Pennsylvania and Ohio. He said he did not know why.

"Maybe, he has friends there," Paynter said with a smile, adding that "it seems to be a much better book" than critics have found.

Publisher Harold Roth said Grosset Dunlap has added a second printing of 25,000 copies to the 225,000 copies in the initial order. And Judith Welling, a spokeswoman for R.R. Donnelley and Sons, the manufacturer of the book, said press time was reserved Wednesday for a third printing of a minimum of 25,000 copies.

Roth said that 2,500 copies were being sold daily.

Furthermore, he reported that 2,336 copies of 2,500 commemorative editions selling for $250 and 8,000 copies of 10,000 deluxe $50 editions have been purchased.

"The book has exceeded my expectations," Roth said, predicting subsequent printings to total 300,000 copies and a sell-out of the special editions.

Roth was critical of what he called an "emotional reaction" against the disgraced former president and said one bookseller had demanded of a prospective customer his reason for buying the 1,184-page volume.

As for a bookseller who was quoted in an AP story last week as questioning the quality of the binding, the publisher said, "It happens to be a very well-produced book. It is standing up very well."

Satellite 'Killer' Tested By Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have conducted a new test of their satellite-destroying system less than three weeks before the start of U.S.-Soviet negotiations on curbing such space war weapons.

The Soviets launched a probable anti-satellite interceptor on May 19 against a Soviet satellite, the Pentagon said Wednesday when asked about reports of such a test. The statement gave no details.

Defense officials said they were surprised the Russians chose to conduct an anti-satellite system test ahead of the June 8 opening of negotiations in Helsinki. Some viewed the development as a discouraging harbinger for those talks.

Divided On Success

Experts were divided on whether the test, the first in five months, was a success.

Intelligence sources said the hunter satellite got "pretty close" to the target satellite but did not explode. The hunter dropped out of orbit in one piece while the target has remained in space, they said.

Experts were uncertain whether the Russians intended to destroy the hunter and the target, or whether they were only testing the hunter's ability to come within lethal range.

With the target satellite still orbiting the earth, they said, the Russians could send up a second interceptor later and get in an extra test.

The May 19 test was the ninth since early 1976 when the Russians resumed their experiments after a four-year lapse because of what intelligence sources Early in his administration, President Carter made a public appeal to the Russians for a ban on satellite-destroying weapons. But the Russians have staged five tests since then and have given no signs that they intend to forego such a system.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown announced last October that the Russians had achieved an ability to destroy some U.S. satellites.

In February, he told Congress that Soviet advances in satellite-destroying weapons "are leaving us with little choice" but to get into a space weapons race with the Soviet Union.

"Because of our growing dependence on space systems, we can hardly permit them to have a dominant position in the anti-satellite realm," Brown said in February.

Both the United States and Russia are heavily dependent on satellites in earth orbit to monitor missile tests and other key military developments in each other's territory.

U.S. officials believe that such satellites, on guard against surprise atomic attack, promote mutual deterrence and discourage military adventurism.

The United States is pushing ahead with its own anti-satellite program, which aims at combat-ready weaponry by the mid-1980s.

Meanwhile, this country has accelerated research on means of safeguarding U.S. satellites from attack and destruction.

Margaret's Marriage Quickly Dissolved

LONDON (AP) — A two-minute proceeding in a musty London courtroom Wednesday dissolved the marriage of Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon, celebrated in the pomp and circumstance of a Westminster Abbey wedding 18 years ago.

The royal divorce came 20th in a list of 27 and put royalty in company of a barmaid, an office cleaner and a former guardsman.

Neither the 47-year-old princess, nor her photographer husband, the former Antony Armstrong-Jones, 48, was required to appear in court for the proceedings — a mere formality under British divorce laws updated seven years ago.

on a one-to-one basis with students. Irons said transportation to and from Iles will be furnished from three or four selected school locations in Lubbock for the regular school day program. Transportation services will not be available for the early-morning or late afternoon activities.

Iles will continue serving students living in the Iles zone (although each of them will spend every other year at a predominantly white school, as required by the integration plan).

"Although the exemplary program is being designed to attract majority (white) students to Iles, requests from minority families will be considered on a limited basis, depending on the enrollment of majority students," the district said.

Drug Abuse In Army 'Serious'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 209,000 enlisted personnel in the Army use marijuana and about 49,000 use hard drugs such as heroin and LSD, figures in an internal Army survey indicate.

However, Brig. Gen. John H. Johns told the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control on Wednesday that the Army survey was unable to determine whether the use of drugs had any measurable effect on the Army's combat readiness.

Johns, director of human resources development in the Army's personnel office, also said the survey indicated drug abuse in the military is not as widespread as shown by an earlier committee study.

Not Epidemic

"The Army views its drug abuse problems as serious but not of epidemic proportions," said Johns.

"The abuse does have some degree of adverse impact on combat readiness but it is difficult, if not impossible, to establish a definitive causal relationship that can be quantified," he added.

In April, however, Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., the panel's chairman, took a different stance. Commenting on his committee's survey, Wolff said, "the committee is certain that regular drug use does have an adverse effect on combat readiness, job performance and the morale of our armed forces."

Johns was testifying on the Army's survey of enlisted soldiers picked at random, in which they were asked whether they used drugs occasionally, frequently or never. Officers were not included in the study.

Marijuana Used

The survey found that 18.6 percent of the enlisted personnel responded that they used marijuana occasionally and an additional 12.6 percent said they used it frequently. This amounts to roughly 31 percent of the 671,000 enlisted men in the Army.

The survey also showed that 5.7 percent of the respondents said they used hard drugs occasionally, while an additional 1.6 percent said they used hard drugs frequently.

If the survey figures are applied to the 671,000 total enlisted men and women, slightly more than 209,000 would have admitted using marijuana and nearly 49,000 would have admitted using hard drugs.

The survey was attacked by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okl., who noted that 50 percent of those responding said they believed the answers could be traced back to them.

"It is a crime in the Army to use hard drugs and marijuana," English said, questioning whether many soldiers might have answered untruthfully in order to avoid being linked to a crime.

Prosecution Threat Ignored "Even with the threat of prosecution, even under the threat that the survey could be traced back to them, 30 percent answered 'yes' to marijuana use, he noted.

English also criticized the questions used, saying they allowed the person answering the form to determine whether his use was occasional or frequent.

"A person who smoked 5 marijuana cigarettes a day could decide he was an occasional user," he noted.

Johns said the Army data indicated there had been an overall decrease in hard drug abuse and that marijuana usage was holding steady.

He acknowledged that the overall use of drugs in the Army was higher than estimates on drug abuse in the civilian population. But Johns pointed out that drug abuse in society is at its highest in the 18-25 age bracket.

each plaintiff, together with liquidated damages of $25,000.

A city spokesman said Nierlich had been employed in the Parks and Recreation Department since November, 1962. Alford reportedly worked in the production department at Lubbock Power and Light.

The petition describes TMRS as a state agency which plans and administers distributions of the city retirement program.

Alford and Nierlich claim in the suit defendants have deprived them of rights they are entitled to under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

According to them, persons 50 or older when employed may not participate in the retirement plan administered by TMRS.

Unfair Policy Alleged Plaintiffs say the alleged policy unfairly deprives persons over the age of 50 when hired of benefits including:

—Employer contribution toward retirement or the opportunity to contribute their own funds into a plan.

—Vacation pay upon termination.

—Accumulation or receipt upon termination of accrued sick leave pay.

—Paid up group term life insurance following termination equal with younger employees.

Plaintiffs also contend in the suit that a compulsory retirement age of 65 bears no reasonable relationship to the capacity to do a job.

Plaintiffs seek, along with other relief, a declaratory judgment that defendants have violated provisions of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Texas Age Discrimination Law and the U.S. Constitution.

Star Says Film Not Lewd

LONDON (AP) — Brooke Shields, 13-year-old star of "Pretty Baby," said Wednesday she hopes the film about a child growing up in a New Orleans brothel will not be banned in Britain.

"It is not pornographic or lewd," Brooke said of the film by French director Louis Malle. It has been banned in parts of Canada, and there are reports it may not be given a British certificate for public showing because it deals with child prostitution.

"Sure, I appear nude in one sequence," Brooke told reporters, but she added, it "was directed with great taste so as not to make it cheap or dirty in any way. My mother would never have agreed to my appearing in just filth."

Terri Shields, Brooke's mother, said she thinks "Pretty Baby" "is a very beautiful film about a very sensitive subject."

Singer Considers Offer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant is considering whether to accept an offer to be nominated for a vice presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention, a religious news organization says.

In separate interviews in the Baptist Press, Miss Bryant and her husband, Bob Green, agreed it would be an honor for her to be nominated. Miss Bryant, a Southern Baptist, was quoted as saying she wants to learn more about the post before deciding.

Green, who manages his wife's career, said the offer came "many weeks ago," but he couldn't recall who made the request.

Homosexual groups plan protests against Miss Bryant, who ran a successful campaign to overturn a homosexual rights ordinance in Dade County, Fla., when she speaks before the Southern Baptist Pastor's Conference in Atlanta on June 11.

Queen Visits Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Queen Elizabeth flew 110 miles inside Communist East Germany Wednesday for a day of military pomp and public appearances in West Berlin.

Trumpeters heralded the British monarch and Prince Philip onto Berlin's Mayfield, part of a giant Hitler-era sports complex built for the 1936 summer Olympics. Riding in a four-horse coach flown from London, the queen reviewed 1,100 British troops before more than 30,000 spectators, including thousands of Allied military personnel and flag-waving schoolchildren let out of classes for the day.

Beating Christmas Rush

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — A Duluth oil company is mailing Christmas cards to its 15,000 customers this week to beat the upcoming postal rate increase.

Harold Bach, executive vice president of Inter-City Oil Co., says it doesn't bother him that Christmas is still seven months away.

The message on the envelope asks, "Who's the nut sending Xmas cards this time of year?"

Bach suggested that his company mail the cards to its customers now as a promotion stunt, before the first-class postage rate goes up to 15 cents May 29.

"We have been trying to develop creative promotions. This one seems novel enough," he said. "We think our customers will see the humor in it and think well of our company."

The 6-by-9-inch cards have a border of holly and red and green print. Their message is, "Because the days of the 13-cent stamp are fleeting we are sending you now our Christmas greeting."

And there is a sketch of Ben Franklin, the first U.S. postmaster general, and the Franklin quotation, "A penny saved is a penny earned."

Aliens Given Special Permit For Harvest

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — Mexican aliens began harvesting area crops Wednesday after being granted special permission to enter this country for that purpose.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions signed an order last Friday granting permission for the workers to cross the border. The Presidio Valley Growers Association asked the judge to allow the workers in the fields immediately to save the onion crops.

Bill Bishop, president of the association, said there were about 10 days left to harvest onions. He said the cantaloupe harvest begins in mid-June and ends in early July.

Gerald Coyle, deputy district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said permission was given Tuesday for 330 Mexicans to work 70 days.

Bishop said the workers will be paid 40 cents per sack of onions, which could average $4 per hour.

U.S. Called Top Market

ATLANTA (AP) — The United States is now one of the best markets in the world for foreign investors, former federal budget director Bert Lance told businessmen who may want to do business with Arab nations.

"Basically, the U.S. economy is the only economy of significant size able to recycle those petrodollars back into productive worth," Lance told executives gathered for a seminar Tuesday.

"And all of you know money in and of itself is really not of any benefit to anybody unless it is properly used," said Lance, who resigned his Carter administration post in the midst of criticism of his personal financial dealings.

'Jaws' Loses Bite

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The police report in suburban Hoover read: "Stolen, one set of shark jaws, with full set of teeth; eight to 10 inches in diameter in full opened position."

George Patrick Wachter said the jaws belonged to a 6-foot 6-inch, 200-pound shark he landed off the Georgia coast earlier this month.

He said they were stolen while he had them hanging on a string on his patio to dry out so they could be mounted.

Ex-Gov. Hall Paroled

LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Former Oklahoma Gov. David Hall, who served 18 months in federal prison on bribery and extortion charges, is free on parole and has moved into his family's La Costa home.

The Oklahoma Democrat began serving four concurrent three-year terms Nov. 22, 1976, after his conviction was upheld by an appeals court.

He was released Monday from the Swift Trail Federal Prison Camp near Safford, Ariz., and was picked up by his wife. He plans to operate Dreyco Investment Corp., an investment and real estate firm, at a shopping center in this plush Southern California resort community.

Hall, who was indicted three days after leaving office in 1975, will be on parole until Feb. 8, 1979, authorities said.

Postage Hike Protested

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Mrs. Henry M. Sibley wasn't about to accept the increase in postage from 13 cents to 15 cents effective next Monday without some protest.

The Hanover County woman mailed her Christmas cards this week.

Inside each card was the following poem:

"Without a moment of delay, you have now received your Christmas card in May.

"When the new postal rate was passed, this will probably be our last.

"We all wish you the very best, for this Christmas and the rest.

"So, without further ado, many joyous holidays to all of you."

Kennedy Aid Sought

BOSTON (AP) — The Ulster Defense Association, Northern Ireland's largest Protestant organization, has appealed to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to mediate a settlement in the long-troubled region.

Andy Tyrre, chairman of the paramilitary group, said it would refrain from further violence until the Massachusetts Democrat replies, according to Wednesday's Boston Herald American.

"We believe that Senator Kennedy is the one man who would be acceptable to both (Protestant and Catholic) communities here," Tyrre said in an interview. "He is Catholic, but the Protestant community believes in his integrity and credibility."

Tyrre said his 30,000-member group has avoided violence in the past several months but recent attacks by the Provisional Irish Republican Army are making it more difficult to continue the policy.

Fathers Of Year Selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Father's Day doesn't arrive until June 18, but 13 men already have been honored as National Fathers of the Year.

Martin Luther King Sr., father of the slain civil rights leader, Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill, New York Gov. Hugh Carey and fathers from the fields of sports, show business and journalism accepted awards at a banquet Tuesday.

The awards were presented by the non-profit National Father's Day Committee.

"This comes as a total surprise to me," King said at a news conference before the ceremonies. "I never sought it."

Other fathers honored Tuesday: U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, federal Judge John Sirica, actor Yul Brynner, newspaper columnist William Safire and actor Dick Van Patten.

American To Construct Only Golf Course In Soviet Union

CHICAGO (AP) — Robert Trent Jones is on a journey of golf detente.

Jones, who has built 400 golf courses in 42 states and 23 countries, has been commissioned to design what will be the only course in the Soviet Union, where the game has been viewed as an odd capitalist sport.

"I think it is a good omen," Jones said. "If we get them playing golf instead of doing what they've been doing, it will be great."

Jones said the 7,000-yard course will be built just outside Moscow in a rolling, timbered greenbelt area with a swamp that has been made into a lake and can be used for water holes. He said he hopes to have the course completed before the 1980 Olympics.

"Visiting businessmen and the diplomatic corps will be using the course the most at first," he said. Once the Russians "get on to the game, we think they'll go at it in a big way."

Jones first talked to the Russians about building a golf course in 1974, when he went to Moscow on a trip sponsored by Armand Hammer, president of Occidental Petroleum. Hammer, 80, is building a world trade center in Moscow and suggested the idea of building a golf course nearby to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, said Jones's son, Robert Trent Jones Jr., who accompanied his father to Russia.

Brezhnev liked the idea, Jones Jr. said, and gave the go-ahead. The course will be owned by the Russian government and built by Russian laborers assigned by the government.

In Moscow, officials said the course would not be the first ever built in Russia. In the late 1920s, when a consortium of American companies built a huge hydroelectric complex in Zaporozhye in the Ukraine, the Soviets provided a golf course along with six tennis courts and swimming pool to amuse Americans working there.

When the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower planned a visit in the 1950s, one hole was built for him at a resort near Lake Baikal.

Brezhnev is not known ever to have played golf, but he owns a golf cart former President Richard Nixon gave him.

Jones Sr. said that in 1974 he discussed the proposed golf course with Vladimir Kuznetsov of the Soviet foreign service.

"Kuznetsov kept his golf bags in his office closet and read every golf book in the world," Jones said. "He had learned to play on assignments outside the country. He would go out in the fields and hit golf balls around when he was home.

"I guess you would have to say he is the Russian golf champion — he's got nobody there to challenge him."

Jones Jr. said that when Kuznetsov was given a United States Golf Association book of rules, "he shrugged and said, 'We make our own rules over here. The golf course will be for all the people if they can get starting times.'"

FTC Rules Ban Against Eyeglasses Ads Illegal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission, told that prices of similar eyeglasses sometimes vary by 350 percent, ruled Wednesday it is illegal for states and professional groups to restrict advertising of prices for eye examinations and glasses.

State laws or professional associations restrict such advertising in about 40 states.

It was the first time the FTC, relying on a 1975 law, had made such a sweeping, industrywide ruling rather than regulating companies on a case-by-case basis. More than a dozen FTC decisions on what is legal throughout an industry — decisions that could run counter to state laws — are pending in such business areas as funerals, hearing aids, mobile homes, vocational schools and used cars.

The American Optometric Association said that the FTC "is overstepping its power as a federal regulatory agency" and that the association would appeal the decision through the federal courts. A challenge in the courts could amount to a test of the FTC's powers to regulate an entire industry.

The FTC ruling, approved by a 4-to-0 vote, is designed to increase price competition in the $4 billion a year business of eye examinations and selling eyeglasses and contact lenses.

"Where there is no price advertising allowed, there is little incentive for providers to offer a bargain," FTC Chairman

Michael Pertschuk said.

The regulation also requires ophthalmologists and optometrists to give a copy of the prescription to the consumer. This will enable the consumer to use the advertisements in deciding where to have the prescription filled.

The Opticians Association of America, whose members are likely to benefit from the action, endorsed it. The opticians group said the regulation "is expected to make it a lot easier for consumers to obtain helpful information about where to buy contact lenses and eyewear."

Consumers go to three professional groups concerning eyeglasses. Opticians fill prescriptions but are not qualified to examine eyes. Optometrists are trained to do both.

The third group, ophthalmologists, consists of medical doctors who treat eye diseases as well as prescribe glasses but rarely fill their own prescriptions.

The optometrists stand to lose the most from the FTC regulation because they both examine patients and make their eyeglasses. Because of the regulation, many consumers may take the prescription written by an optometrist to be filled by an optician.

The FTC took the action because of studies showing wide variation in prices for identical eyeglasses. One study found a variation of 350 percent in New Jersey, and other surveys found price differences almost as large within other states.

The staff said that prices are about 25 percent to 40 percent lower where advertising is allowed.

The FTC staff found that there were differences in quality, but that these had no relation to the prices charged. The staff also said the price differences affect elderly people the most because 93 percent of Americans older than 65 wear eyeglasses.

The opticians association said there will still be some variation in prices. "A fancy boutique on Fifth Avenue will not be charging the same prices as a small store in a small town," K. Richard Davenport, president of the group, said.

FUGITIVE SURRENDERS

IRVING (AP)—A New Mexico jail fugitive holed up in a motel room with his wife and 2-year-old son held off police and FBI agents for eight hours Wednesday, threatening to shoot anyone who approached. No shots were fired and the man surrendered after police had his lawyer flown in from Amarillo. Norbert Lynn Young, about 27, of Hereford, Texas, who escaped from the Taos, N.M. jail about three months ago, is also wanted for parole violation in Hereford.

Actress Explains Split With Gridder

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Actress June Wilkinson says her marriage to Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini is ended because of the effect on his life of fans' cheers and boos.

"I want nothing more than for us to be a family," Miss Wilkinson said in an interview with the Jacksonville Journal. "But the problem, I think, is more the pressure in Dan's life. He is into adoration more. He's more effected by cheers and boos."

The actress, appearing at a Jacksonville dinner theater, said she and Pastorini separated in December and have seen each other only once this year. They have a daughter, Brahma, 2.

This is their second separation since they married in 1973.

"His comment the first time was, 'You're the most beautiful woman I know, both inside and outside, but I need to be free.' I can't argue with that," Miss Wilkinson said.

But, she said, after the separation, Pastorini wanted them back together again.

"We got back and were going super for a while, but the pressure of football, I think, hurt it," she said. "When you're not winning, sometimes you look at it like everything is going wrong."

She said she loves Pastorini and knows he loves her.

Public Turns Against Neutron Bomb

By LOUIS HARRIS

A major shift in public attitudes toward the neutron bomb has taken place in the United States. Last July, a 44-38 percent plurality favored producing the bomb. Now a 47-26 percent majority opposes it.

There are dramatic differences in the way men and women view the issue of the United States' producing the neutron bomb. Women oppose the bomb by 54-23 percent, up from a much closer 43-32 percent a year ago. Men support the bomb by 48-40 percent, but this is down from a 56-32 percent majority who favored it in 1977.

This is not the first time that men and women have deeply disagreed on an issue that affects human life. During the Vietnam War, women were consistently more opposed to U.S. involvement — by 10 points — than were men. On capital punishment, women are 10 points more opposed to the death penalty than are men.

In addition to the sharp split between men and women, significant differences also exist by region and by age. On a regional basis, the East is opposed to the bomb by 57-28 percent, the Midwest by 50-33 percent, and the West by a closer 50-41 percent. However, the South favors producing the bomb by a margin of 40-34 percent.

Young people under 30 oppose the neutron bomb by 52-35 percent, and those in the 30-49 age group oppose it by 51-33 percent. However, people between 50 and 64 years of age favor it by a narrow 40-38 percent.

According to a recent Harris Survey of 1,472 adults nationwide, specific worries about the neutron bomb have all grown since last July:

—By 74-12 percent, a very large majority worries that "even though the neutron bomb is only a limited weapon, it can lead to the use of other nuclear weapons and total destruction." This is up from a 66-15 percent majority who felt the same way last year.

—By 52-22 percent, a majority also feels that "because it will be so easy to use, the neutron bomb will more likely be used by field commanders as a substitute for conventional weapons, and that is wrong." This is up from a 47-26 percent plurality who felt similarly last July.

—By 49-34 percent, a plurality feels that "it is morally wrong for the U.S. to produce any more weapons in addition to those we already have which kill people by radiation, even if they are enemy soldiers," up from a 43-38 percent reading a year ago. However, pluralities of the public can see some advantages in the neutron bomb:

—By 46-25 percent, the public believes the "neutron bomb is the most effective defense for Western European countries against the threat of an attack by Russians with masses of tanks and troops, where they have superiority." This is slightly down from the 48-21 percent plurality who agreed with that claim in July.

—By a razor-thin 40-39 percent, a plurality also goes along with the view that "the neutron bomb is desirable, because it can be limited in its use just against enemy troops and not against civilian populations." This is down from 45-34 percent in 1977.

—By a close 36-34 percent, a plurality also can see merit in the argument that "the neutron bomb is such an active deterrent that it will actually reduce the threat of war in Europe if it is given to NATO for its defense." This is slightly down from the 39-33 percent majority who felt that way last year.

President Carter had indicated that he was opposed to going ahead with the neutron bomb. But under pressure from his military advisers and NATO, he deferred a final decision, with the implication that if the Soviets are forthcoming on a SALT agreement, he might cancel production of the weapon.

Carter Trails Ford In Voter Poll

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter is trailing his 1976 opponent, Gerald Ford, in Americans' preferences for the 1980 presidential contest, according to a national poll released Wednesday.

The poll, conducted by Louis Harris and Associates for ABC News, also found former California Gov. Ronald Reagan roughly even with Carter in the "trial heat" for the 1980 presidential race.

Former President Ford was ahead of Carter in the poll results by a 48 percent to 43 percent margin. The remaining nine percent of the persons polled did not express an opinion.

ABC News said the percentages are based on telephone interviews last week with those who said they had voted in the 1976 race and with a small group of persons who were too young to vote that year but who now are over 18.

The latest finding shows Carter weakening in trial heats in the last two months. A Harris survey early in April found Carter leading Ford by a 50-42 margin.

Reagan and Carter were about equal in the poll. Reagan, Ford's main opponent for the GOP nomination in 1976, was the choice of 47 percent of those polled, while Carter was picked by 46 percent.

Because of the approximately three percent sampling error inherent in a poll of about 1,500 interviews, it is not possible to say either Carter or Reagan is ahead.

As other, earlier polls have reported, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., is the choice of Democrats over Carter for their party's 1980 nomination. Kennedy, who has said he will not run, holds substantial margins over both Ford and Reagan in the trial heats.

The Harris poll said Kennedy leads Carter 60-35 among Democrats in their choice for 1980.

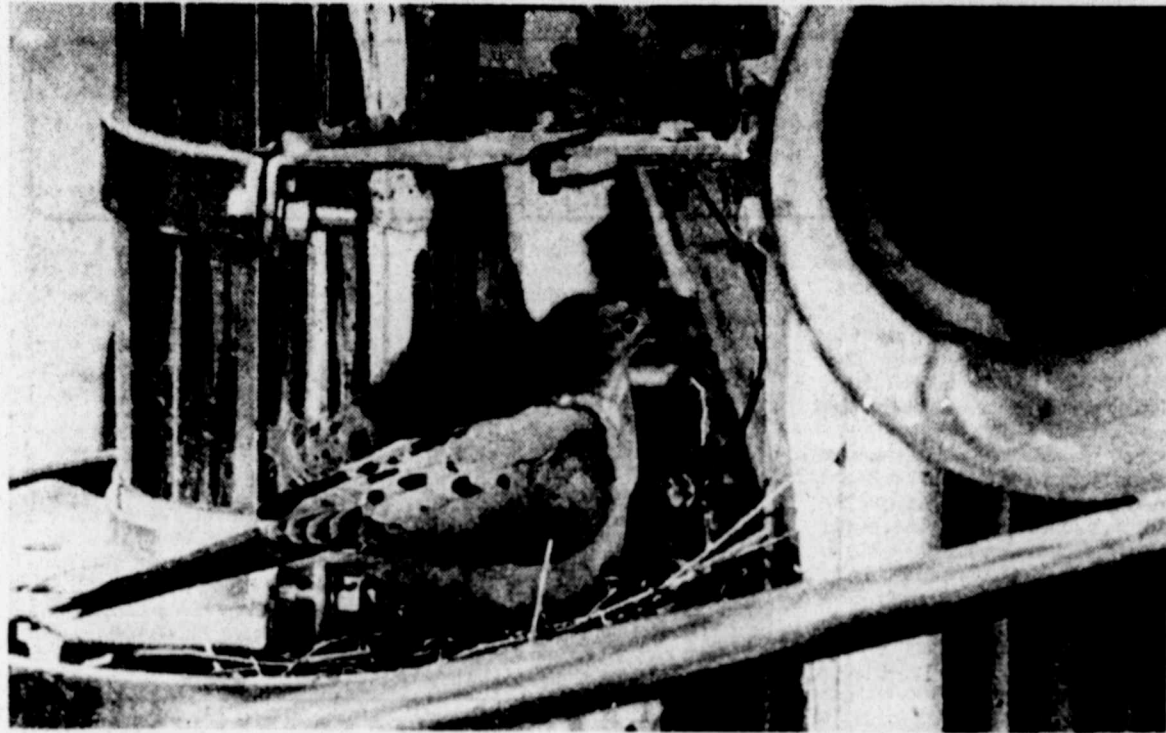

Another frequently mentioned Democratic challenger to Carter, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, trailed Carter and the two GOP possibilities.

Carter was preferred by Democrats by a 64-29 margin over Brown for the Democratic nomination.

Brown trailed Ford by 52-38 and Reagan by 52-40 in the match-ups.

In each case, the person interviewed was asked a variation of this question:

"Suppose the election for president in 1980 were held today and Carter were running on the Democratic ticket and Ford on the Republican ... who would you vote for?"

HOUSTON (AP) — It was about that time, she found a spot for a nest and laid two eggs.

The place she selected was the exhaust stack of an $80,000 oil field rig truck owned by Trucks of Texas of Houston.

Cal Wallace, president of the firm, saw the dove on her nest and ordered his men not to move the rig until the babies were hatched and could fly.

The truck was to be on display at the recent Offshore Technology Conference in Houston. When John Wofford, a salesman for the firm, started the engine, the mama dove "flew across the windshield, giving me some dirty looks."

Wofford turned off the motor and went to investigate. There he found the nest

City's Four-Year Cycle Tax Revaluation Upheld

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In a case without precedent in Texas, the state Supreme Court Wednesday upheld the Lubbock city-school tax department's practice of revaluating property on a four-year cycle.

The Supreme Court affirmed lower court rulings that such a revaluation system, in which each quadrant of the city is reappraised on a rotating basis every four years, is legal.

"We won," declared Jim Brewster, civil trial attorney for the City of Lubbock. "This is a landmark."

The case grew out of a tax lawsuit filed in Lubbock's 140th District Court in 1975 by Brunken Toyota, Pollard Friendly Ford and Don Crow Chevrolet.

Among other things, they questioned the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District's "selective revaluation of certain segments of the community" for individual tax years.

In any given year, they said, when one quadrant of the city is reappraised "without a corresponding adjustment in the values of other segments of the community" property owners in the reappraised quadrant end up paying a disproportionate share of taxes.

Brewster had argued that the staggered revaluation system is "equal and uniform." In a brief to the Supreme Court, he said differences in assessments in any given year are not all that great from quadrant to quadrant. And the reappraisals average out for all properties over the four-year cycle, Brewster said.

Although most big cities reevaluate property on a rotating basis, the Lubbock suit represented the first time a cyclical reappraisal program had been challenged at the state level in Texas. Without writing its own opinion, the Supreme Court affirmed the November staggered revaluation system may have some flaws, it does not constitute "intentional discrimination" against any partic-

Awards Dinner To Start State Lions Convention

A Cabinet awards dinner at Lake Ransom Canyon at 6 p.m. today officially launches the District 2-T2 and state Lions convention here.

The convention runs through Sunday, with headquarters in the Memorial Civic Center.

Registration begins at 7 a.m. Friday in the main lobby of the civic center. A full slate of activities will get under way at 8:10 a.m. when the convention is called to order by Alton R. Griffin, chairman.

More than 3,000 Lions from around the state are expected.

One of the highlights will be a salute to retiring U.S. Rep. George Mahon. The veteran congressman will be honored at 6:30 p.m. Saturday. A limited number of tickets, at $7.50 each, is being offered to the public. They will be available today at the office of Lubbock Lions Club in Monterey Center (phone 797-4359).

Friday and Saturday, the tickets will be sold only at the civic center. On Friday, House Speaker Bill Clayton of Springlake will address a luncheon meeting at 12:15 p.m.

Art Cook of Lubbock is district governor. Eleven City Lions Clubs are co-hosting the convention.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
With the approach of June, the month of weddings, I decided it was time I passed along this suggestion.
For many years one of my aunts has given each of us getting married a unique and useful gift at the family shower.
She takes a laundry basket and fills it with kitchen linen, baking pans, cookie sheets, kitchen utensils, and kitchen staples such as baking powder, baking soda, salt, pepper, flour, sugar, etc.
The last several showers her daughters went in with her on the gift, therefore the size of the laundry basket and what was in it grew.
Believe me, this is one gift that is always appreciated and, by the time I got married, it was also expected. But she has yet to disappoint a new bride-to-be.

When one of our friends was married, I added one thing to the list. I used a plastic tablecloth to wrap the basket in and tied it with a large amount of string. Twine or cord could be substituted. Thus everything in the gift was reusable. — Wanda Fay

'Tis a great shower gift and a great budget stretcher too! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
Until your little children are old enough to handle an ice cream cone by themselves just give them the empty ice cream cone.

They love them, don't get ice cream all over themselves and think that they are having the same thing that you are eating.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: The person I am writing about is not a teenager. She's a 42-year-old woman who has a responsible position and commands a high salary.
This morn'g's desk is across from mine. About six weeks ago her teenage niece taught her how to make bubbles out of bubblegum. She sits there all day making these enormous bubbles. It is revolting.
Sometimes the bubbles burst on her face and the gum gets stuck to her glasses or in her hair. When this happens, she lets loose a blast of profanity and reaches for a jar of gasoline which she keeps in her desk drawer. (She says it's the only thing that removes gum effectively.) Valuable time is wasted by people who stare in fascination. Also, the smell of the gasoline knocks me out.
I am writing to ask if we should circulate a petition of protest and give it to the chief honcho. Thank you. — Stuck With Her Too Long that, emotionally, he is still a child.

He needs professional help. If he refuses to get it, I hope you will handle his infantile outbursts the same way you would handle a child's temper tantrums. Ignore him and let him wear himself out.

Dear Ann Landers: There's a rumor going around school that you can get lip cancer if you kiss a boy who smokes a lot and has the beginning of lip cancer. Is this true or false? Please print. — New Trier West

Dear N.T.: It is not possible to get lip cancer from kissing a person who has it. However, it's not a good idea to kiss anyone who has any kind of sore on his lip. You just might get something deadlier than lip cancer. I am talking about syphilis. And this gives me a good opportunity to suggest to one and all that any sore that is slow to heal (ten days is the outside limit) should be seen by a doctor.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needn't crowd you out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' book, "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Nuclear Plant Saves Money
OYSTER CREEK, N.J. (AP) — The nation's first large-scale commercial nuclear plant for generating electricity has saved the utility's customers more money than the original cost of the plant.
The 650-megawatt nuclear generating station, placed in operation here in 1969, cost $110 million to build. The savings in fuel costs since that time, as compared with the cost of oil, comes to about $300 million, reports William G. Kuhns, chairman of General Public Utilities Corporation, owner of the plant here. He points out that these fuel savings are automatically passed on to customers through the energy adjustment clause.

The weak jump overall is designed to create excitement and upset the opponent's partnership communication.
When it succeeds it is wonderful. When it fails it means going back to the old drawing board.

West's preempt didn't keep North and South from reaching their normal four-spade contract which would be one down on normal play. However, it did give South a chance to try an abnormal play and the abnormal play let him make an impossible contract.
The play wasn't too abnormal. South just decided that West held just one spade as part of his preemptive hand.
Therefore, at trick two South led dummy's queen of spades.
What would you do as East? Looking at that singleton king in the West hand you would duck. But, you are just a bridge player sitting there—not superman. You don't have X-ray eyes. You don't see any way for your ace to do better than catch the queen. You play your ace. West's king of spades goes to the scaffold and North and South win the rubber.

CALCIUM NEEDS

Being assured of getting good quality protein in a "vegetarian" meal is a lot easier when dairy products or eggs are included. Apart from providing high quality protein, dairy products are an excellent source of calcium and riboflavin. In the U.S., about 85 percent of our calcium needs are met by dairy products. So, eliminating these foods from the diet means that we must make a special effort to meet our calcium requirement by eating large servings of dark green, leafy vegetables — good sources of calcium and riboflavin.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you please explain trigonitis infection? What causes it? Can it cause back pain, frequency of urination? What kind of doctor specializes in this, and why is it so difficult to treat? — M.R.

The "trigone" is the medical term for a triangular area of the bladder formed by the two inlets from the kidneys (ureters) and the outlet below (urethra). This area is a common site of infection, which is called "trigonitis." This distinguishes it from "cystitis," which is the general term for bladder infection.

It is particularly subject to infection from either below or above, from the kidneys and ureters above or from the urinary outlet channel below. Treatment depends on the infecting organism and its origination. Backache may occur with trigonitis, especially if the kidneys are involved. It is more common in females (as are all bladder infections) because of a shorter urethra which provides a ready pathway for invading organisms. A urologist specializes in treating such ailments.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can sinus infection interfere with hearing? What are the chances of my nasal polyps growing back? I had mine removed by surgery, but understand I may have to go through this again in the future. — P.G.

Sinus infection may interfere indirectly with hearing. This happens when infectious material gets to a point adjacent to the eardrum or to the eustachian tube opening to cause swelling there.

To your second question about polyps, yes, they tend to regrow after surgery to remove them. "Regrow" may not be the proper term, though. Polyps usually grow in cauliflower-like clusters and at varying rates. If a very small polyp remains behind after surgery, it can be the "seed" of a new crop. This is not uncommon. Also, it is important to remove the basic cause of the polyps, such as an allergy or a bent septum — anything that tends to limit nasal drainage and thus promote polyp formation. For a discussion of this, see my booklet, "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble." Send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had polio as a child. My left leg now is a little shorter than the other because the muscles there are a lot smaller. I'm told a health spa can help me rebuild these muscles so that the one leg will be the same length as the other. Do you think this is possible? I am 26, male, and am not handicapped by this. Your column is great, and I learn a lot from it every day. — B.D.

I doubt this can be accomplished, from what you tell me. Permanent damage to the nervous system suffered in polio cannot be treated, and muscles served by the nerves involved are permanently weakened. However, muscles that are not affected may be developed to improve leg size. But don't expect the shorter leg to equal the other in length.

Before you go into any program of this sort you should consult a physician to evaluate your leg muscles. It would be preferable to consult the doctor familiar with your case and the records. Examination will show to what extent the leg muscles were damaged by polio.

Since the leg variance seems slight and does not handicap you, why not settle for appropriate lifts, unless your doctor is convinced the therapy holds some promise of improvement and would not be a waste of your money.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

School Trustees At Sundown, Plaintiffs In Lawsuit, Quit

A-J Correspondent
SUNDOWN — Three school trustees who recently filed a civil suit against two city residents here alleging libel by defamation of character Tuesday night resigned from the school board.
 The board accepted the resignations of Carl Anthony, E.W. Roe and Dale Childs. Anthony and Roe, who were not present at Tuesday's board meeting, had submitted letters asking that the board accept their resignations immediately.
 After the board read the letters, Childs said "Do I need to put it in writing or can you accept my resignation now?" and then left. The three gave no reason for their resignations.
 In their lawsuit, the three allege they were libeled by two persons they claim were involved in the distribution of a letter to city residents just before the April 1 elections.
 Sundowners Ella Mae Burnett and C.R. Carpenter were named as defendants.
 The letter was distributed to every residence in the city just before midnight the day before voters ousted an incumbent school trustee.
 The letter was unsigned and outlined 14 points asking voters to consider their vote carefully. The 14 points dealt with school morale, administration policies and personnel matters.

 The lawsuit was filed in Levelland's 121st District Court.
 School trustees have set a special board meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday to appoint three new members to serve until the 1979 school board elections.
 In other business, the board tabled a written request by former Sundown superintendent Dean King asking that the board pay for 10 hours of his lawyer's time.

THEY'RE THE BEST:
 "The Fifth Annual Emmy Awards for Daytime Programming," will be aired live June 7 on Channel 28.

 King was referring to an April 13 school board meeting which had slated discussion of his contract on the agenda. The board's lawyer was not at the meeting, however, and the board tabled the contract discussion. King says his lawyer "put in time for something that was not discussed."
 At the meeting, interim superintendent Dalton Gill called for the community to pull together to support the school and the board. "I'm calling for the differences and the hostilities to cease here and for us to get on with the business of educating the children and running the school," he said.

NASA Plans Animal Space Experiments

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space agency engineers are developing containers to house animals for what could be the forerunner of a space age Noah's Ark for surgical experimentation, a Johnson Space Center engineer said Wednesday.
 Cletis R. Booher, an engineer in the Life Sciences Project Division at the space center, said early flights of the space shuttle will provide containers for only small animals but he said future plans could include larger animals.
 The containers are being designed, Booher said, to eliminate animal handling except when needed for experiments.
 "We will try to do as much by automated fashion as possible so that the experimenters don't have to spend three-quarters or all their time taking care of the animals," Booher said. "The basic problem in zero gravity (weightlessness) is how to get rid of waste matter and how to provide food and water in a way they can get to it."
 Booher spoke at one of a series of seminars at the space center on the final day of a two-day conference on life sciences and possible medical applications to space research.

 The conference was co-sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston.
 The two agencies invited 350 doctors and scientists to the conference, hoping to interest them in providing experiments for one of NASA's space shuttle flights planned for the 1980s.
 Booher said there would be a surgical facility aboard the space lab that would allow experimenters to dissect or operate on laboratory animals.
 "There is a lot of experimentation, particularly when you talk about calcium loss, bone degradation and muscle degradation," Booher said. "If the experimenter wanted to see what happens after a couple of days of exposure to zero G, they could either examine or dissect the organism at various stages of the flight."
 The containers would accommodate 24 to 36 rats for up to 32 days, Booher said. Animals would be visible without opening the units and the cages would be interchangeable to accommodate different sized animals.
 Craig Hartley, an assistant professor at the Baylor College of Medicine at Houston, said he represents a group considering sending up a rat experiment.

 "We were planning to send up groups of rats, some of them exercised and trained and others sedentary like most of us," Hartley said. "We would want to see the differences in those two groups, their acclimation to weightlessness and how they adapted after returning."

Task Force To Improve Race Relations Formed

HOUSTON (AP) — A task force representing 25 Mexican-American organizations has been formed in Houston in an effort to improve conditions in the Hispanic neighborhoods of the nation's fifth-largest city.
 Eduardo Lopez, a spokesman for the group, told the City Council Wednesday. "We are demonstrating our sincerity, our commitment and willingness to deal with problems in our community in a non-caring city atmosphere. We ask you to demonstrate your sincerity and commitment."
 The task force will attempt to find solutions to such problems as drug abuse, an increasing crime rate, inadequate recreational facilities, poor education, unemployment and police abuse.
 Lopez told the council. "We stand before you today knowing that as responsible citizens we must share the blame for the neglect and despair and poor conditions in our community. Our fault lies in that we have not been able to convince you (the council) of the seriousness of the situation."
 Lopez asked the council to direct more funds for the development of social services, city services, and housing programs; to hire and promote more Mexican-Americans in city jobs; and to order all city departments to consider the needs of the Hispanic community as top priorities.

 The task force was formed after a May 7 Mexican fiesta exploded into a riot at a city park. Fifteen persons, including three policemen and two newsmen, were injured and several business establishments were looted and burned. Police arrested at least 40 persons.
 The Hispanic community makes up about 13 percent of the city's 1.7 million residents.
BUS CRASHES
NEW YORK (AP) — A suburban bus swerved into an abutment on a rain-slicked expressway near Yankee Stadium on Wednesday, injuring 28 persons. Three were hospitalized. Riverdale Transit Corp. said the bus, operating between The Bronx and Manhattan during morning and evening rush hours, was on the West Side express run. After hitting the abutment, it skidded sideways on the Major Deegan Expressway.

I-27 Restriction Planned

Northbound traffic along I-27, just north of New Deal, will be restricted to one lane with a 35 mph speed zone, beginning Tuesday, if weather permits.

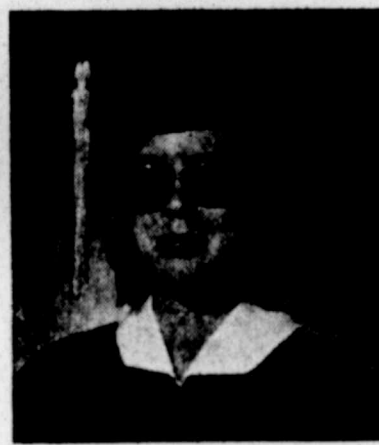

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation reports that contractors are constructing a culvert under the main lanes in this area.

EXPLORER DIES

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A member of a Brown University expedition to the Himalayas was killed in "a solo accident" in India, Martha Matzke, a spokeswoman for the Ivy League school, said. Word of the death of Paul Palatt, 35, came Tuesday in a telegram from the head of the 32-member party, Dr. Thomas A. Mutch, a Brown geology professor.

DUBIOUS GOURMETS — A buffet meal in Denver, Colo., featuring octopus, camel hump, elephant trunk, musk ox, hippo and Philippine dragon au curry, brought out some 250 hunters and fishermen Tuesday night to sample 29 exotic dishes and enrich the coffers of the Safari Club International's conservation fund. Here man in dark suit looks somewhat dubious after tasting some octopus. (AP Laserphoto)

Banquet Of Big Game Features Camel, Musk Ox, Waitresses

DENVER (AP) — The big bash is over, but the memories of tough Algerian camel, rich Amazon piranha, tasty African elephant, sea serpent from Chad and African lion linger on. Hesitant gourmets were assured that the rear hump of the camel was the best part and the trunk of an African elephant the most tender.

Alaskan musk ox, flown in for the event, tasted a bit like roast beef.

For $45 each, some 250 hunters and fishermen partook of 29 exotic dishes, bought drinks from topless waitresses and played the gaming tables — all in the name of conservation.

The Tuesday evening dinner was hosted by Jack Jonas, vice president of a local taxidermy and safari firm, Jonas Brothers Inc. of Denver.

The money goes to Safari Club International, for conservation work.

Jonas is secretary of the local chapter of the club, which has 40 chapters in the United States, Canada and Europe. Made up primarily of hunters, it views wildlife as a renewable resource and takes the position that conservation must go hand in hand with hunting.

It sponsors wildlife education courses for youngsters and teachers and lobbies for what it calls intelligent game management laws.

Jonas noted that the club recently paid insurance to protect Colorado ranchers and farmers from moose damage — enabling the species to be imported to Colorado as game animals.

The role of the hunter in conservation remains controversial, however. Within the last five years, the governments of the traditional big game hunting paradises of Kenya, Zaire, Uganda, Tanzania, Mozambique and Angola have banned hunters.

The buffet meal, served at a private club in suburban Lakewood, was garnished by a glowering octopus. It featured such delicacies as hippo and something called Philippine dragon au curry.

Many guests left half the food on their plates as they discovered how rich it was, but all seemed to enjoy the repast.

One guest came from New York City, having met Jonas at the Thorn Tree, a popular watering spot in Nairobi, Kenya — once the big game hunting capital of Africa.

One petite school teacher said she fulfilled a fantasy by answering a newspaper advertisement to serve as a topless waitress. All seven waitresses were working topless for the first time.

Clean-shaven men in three-piece suits mingled with bearded mountain men in leather vests and blue jeans to talk of hunting in the Colorado Rockies, the frozen Arctic or the dusty plains of Africa.

Bob Chisholm of Wichita, Kan., a founder of the Pizza Hut chain and big game hunter who was dressed in a blue, short-sleeved safari suit, held an animated conversation with a topless waitress at his table, after paying $300 in a raffle for the privilege.

Jonas had hired the cocktail waitresses for a total of $350 and raised $1,100 for the club by raffling them off as dinner companions.

Chisholm, a lean, enthusiastic man who has 150 trophies, finished everything on his plate, and observed that the elephant was a bit fat and tasted like very rich pork.

Past Tech President To Help Head Board

Two Texans will head the prestigious National Science Board over the next two years.

Re-elected to his third term as chairman of the board was Dr. Norman Hackerman, president of Rice University.

Newly elected to the vice chairmanship was Dr. Grover E. Murray, past president and currently University Professor of Texas Tech University. Dr. Murray's term begins on July 1. Both men also were elected to the executive committee.

The National Science Board, which governs the National Science Foundation, is composed of 24 nationally eminent scientists. Selected on the basis of established records of distinguished service, the members are chosen from the fields of basic medical or social sciences, engineering, agriculture, education, research management or public affairs. They are nominated by the President of the United States and approved by the Senate for a six-year term.

Dr. Murray is serving his second term on the board.

The former Tech president also was elected to the board of trustees of the Paleontological Research Institution. This national organization is dedicated to research on fossils and ancient life forms in this country, particularly in relation to the eastern coastal regions.

On behalf of Hackerman, Dr. Murray presided this week over proceedings of the 6th National Science Board Regional Forum, held in Philadelphia. The objective of the forums is to secure the public's guidance in defining the future role of science and of NSF by focusing discussions on regional problems.

"Citizen participation in the affairs of government, especially of a science-based agency, is not a simple process. We of the National Science Board believe these experiments with public participation in science policy formulation have been productive," vice chairman-elect Murray told forum participants.

"We look forward to mutually rewarding long-range association with you — all in the interest of maintaining the high quality of life in these United States," he added.

NSF is directed to initiate and support basic scientific research and programs; to foster interchange of scientific information with other nations; to evaluate status and needs of the sciences; to maintain a current register of scientific and technical personnel and a central clearinghouse of data on resources; and to initiate and maintain a program for the determination of the total money for scientific research awarded to educational and other institutions.

Current NSF budget for fiscal year 1978 is $900 million. In 1966 Dr. Murray was named president of Texas Tech and in 1969 became the first president of the Tech School of Medicine. He resigned both positions in 1976.

Extra Care Urged In Working With Automobile Battery

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent report of a man's being seriously hurt while checking the fluid level in his automobile battery has prompted a warning from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The injured man was using a match for light while checking the fluid level, officials said. The flame touched off hydrogen gas produced by the battery and an explosion resulted.

The traffic safety agency noted that every day thousands of motorists check their battery levels or jump-start cars without any mishaps.

But explosions can occur, they said, and when this happens the prime hazards are particles of battery acid flying into the eyes and splashing on the skin of the victim.

The agency urged motorists to keep their cars tuned to minimize drain on the battery and to have the battery checked periodically and replaced or recharged as necessary.

Mitchell To End Prison Furlough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is scheduled to return to prison in Alabama Friday, ending five months of freedom.

Since his release Dec. 28 from Maxwell Air Force Base prison near Montgomery, the 64-year-old Mitchell has undergone operations to repair a weakened artery in his abdomen and for hip surgery.

Housing, Weeds, Bars Lead Topics At Council

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Standard housing, weed control and minors frequenting bars will be on the minds of city council members when they meet in regular session today.

At a 9 a.m. council work session in the city manager's conference room, council members will discuss the status of a substandard housing ordinance drafted last year at Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan's behest.

Council members may sweep the cobwebs off the ordinance in light of a recent state Supreme Court decision making landlords responsible for making sure their rental units are fit for human habitation.

The city staff's suggested ordinance would make the city a neutral intermediary between landlords and complaining tenants.

The council will also discuss at the work session legal remedies to keep minors from drinking in bars, possibly by barring minors from drinking establishments even if accompanied by an adult.

The discussion is in response to several complaints received by council members about the inability of police to prevent minors from drinking in bars.

How the city will fight the seasonal problem of weeds will be discussed by council members also. No changes in the weed control plan are expected.

Also at the work session, council members will consider legislation they want to support during the 1979 legislature, discuss procedures to be used to distribute funds to the arts from the city's hotel-motel tax and furnish comments to the Department of Housing and Urban Development on three proposed sites for Section 8 (subsidized-rent) housing projects.

The city council is scheduled to convene its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. in council chambers to consider a $714,734 claim against the city stemming from a fire the night of Feb. 16 and the morning of Feb. 17 in the 1500 Block of 34th Street.

The claimants accuse the fire department and Lubbock Power and Light of negligence in combating the multiple alarm blaze.

Claimants are Larry D. Sides and Thomas C. Sides, doing business as Sides Printing Co.; Providence Lloyds, an insurance company; Hughes Petroleum, Inc.; Joe Davis, doing business as Davis Floral Company, and J.C. Davis, building owner.

Two contracts related to the city's takeover of the Texas Tech Programs for Older Texans (TTPOT) meals for the elderly program will be considered by the council. One is a contract with John Knox Village of West Texas for meal preparation and delivery and the second is a contract with Citizens for Improved Transportation, Inc. for transportation of the elderly.

The city stands to receive an additional $106,000 in operating assistance funds for mass transit if council members authorize an application to the Urban Mass

Transportation Administration.

As the result of an audit, the city learned it is eligible for the additional money. UMTA reimburses the city for about half of its operating expenses for the transit system.

Council approval could clear the way for the city's application for $10,960 from the Community Services Administration which would fund a recreation program for low-income youth.

At a 10:30 a.m. public hearing, city council members will consider five zoning cases, including one appeal from the Planning and Zoning Commission.

W.D. "Dub" Rogers Jr. is appealing the request of Cumberland Presbyterian Church for a zoning change at 78th Street and Indiana Avenue from R-1 to C-2.

Public comment also will be solicited on proposed amendments to the zoning ordinance regarding banners, flags, pennants, stack lots and front yard setbacks.

At a 2 p.m. paving assessment hearing, city council members will consider the 1978 paving program which includes 10 alleys and 27 streets.

VOLCANOS VICTIMS DIE

MANILA (AP) — Two children have died in evacuation centers, bringing to four the death toll since the Mayon volcano began erupting May 3, the Red Cross says. The relief agency said the deaths were caused by respiratory and intestinal diseases. The centers house some 23,000 refugees who fled villages near the crater.

Tax Revaluation Plan Upheld By High Court

the court added that "exact uniformity and equality in taxation is virtually impossible to achieve" anyway.

Brewster argued that it would be great if the city-school tax office could reappraise all property every year. But neither Lubbock — nor any other big city, for that matter — has the personnel to do such a job, he said.

The next best thing, Brewster said, is to reappraise property on a rotating basis, with all parts of the city treated fairly and equally.

The cyclical program is "practical, just and essential," Brewster said after the Supreme Court ruling.

"We simply can't afford to go to a massive system of appraising all property each year. It would require unbelievable amounts of manpower and office space."

He said a four-year cycle is "reasonable." Cyclical reappraisal programs have been upheld in many other states, Brewster said.

Irving Motel Stake-Out Nets Escaped Convict

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Most occupants of the La Quinta Motor Inn slept quietly Tuesday night, unaware that a dozen law enforcement officers spent eight hours trying to flush out a jail escapee who was holding his wife and 2-year-old son hostage in a motel room.

Norbert Lynn Young, armed with a small caliber automatic weapon, surrendered after his lawyer was flown in from Amarillo.

Young's mother, Polly Rogers, also flew in from Amarillo, where she operates a bail bond agency. She sobbed outside the motel room as police negotiated the surrender.

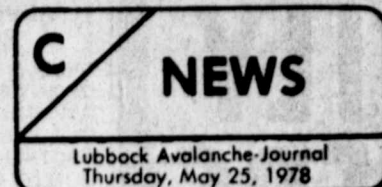

Irving Police Tactical Squad members and FBI agents had the area surrounded. Eight rooms in a courtyard area were cordoned off.

No shots were fired. Young, 27, of Hereford, Texas, is named in federal warrants and also wanted for escape from a New Mexico jail and parole violation in Hereford.

Young surrendered to his lawyer, Charles Fairweather, outside the motel room.

The stakeout at the La Quinta Inn — between Texas Stadium and Dallas-Fort Worth Airport on U.S. 183 — began at 12:30 a.m. after Irving police got a teletype message from the Deaf Smith County sheriff's office in Hereford. A deputy at Hereford said he received a report Tuesday the man was in Irving, a Dallas suburb.

Deaf, Smith County Sheriff Travis McPherson said Young is wanted for numerous post office break-ins, and theft and passing of money orders "all over the United States."

Irving police Lt. Bill Brantley said officers talked by telephone with Young and then allowed him to call Fairweather.

Mrs. Rogers cried as her son was placed in a police car.

"I want to see him," she kept repeating.

Jinx Keehn, night manager of the motel, said she talked with Young three times and said "he sounded like a cat hung on a ceiling — real tense."

FBI agents asked Miss Keehn to call Young about 3 a.m. and tell him to come to the front desk to pay some miscellaneous motel bills.

But instead, an unidentified man staying in the room came to the desk and was apprehended by agents.

Records in Taos indicate Young was arrested in Taos Nov. 27, 1977. He was spotted in a coffee shop by a Taos County deputy, who recognized his face from a wanted poster. Young fled but was later apprehended and jailed in Taos.

In addition to local charges arising from the arrest, Young was held on federal charges of burglary of a post office. He was discovered missing from the Taos jail Dec. 20 when postal authorities arrived to question him. He is believed to have escaped in the predawn hours of Dec. 17.

A criminal complaint was filed in late December against Young for escape. The indictment and complaint both list his name as Young, plus aliases Harold Young, Norbert L. Jacobs, Jason L. Hale, Daniel Everett Clark and Nathan John Hopson.

Egypt Responds To Proposals To Renew Talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan disclosed today that Egypt has replied to Israeli proposals for restarting stalled peace talks, but he claimed Washington rejected Cairo's answers as inadequate.

Speaking in Parliament, Dayan said Israel was given a U.S. memorandum on the Egyptian position on Friday.

He spoke after Prime Minister Menachem Begin's ruling coalition government defeated a no-confidence motion by a vote of 66-32 with one abstention. The motion was raised by a small leftist party and was endorsed by the Labor Party, Israel's major opposition faction. It focused on domestic issues, but also condemned Begin's foreign policy for delaying peace.

The Egyptian reply was the latest move in U.S.-mediated efforts to break the deadlock in Egyptian-Israeli talks that developed last January when the two sides failed to agree on a declaration of principles to guide future talks.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat launched the peace drive with his historic journey to Jerusalem last November.

Last month, Dayan proposed shelving the declaration and moving on to primary issues of a peace treaty. He said he submitted a list of questions to Cairo and asked Sadat if he was prepared to negotiate a comprehensive agreement or sign a separate accord with Israel.

Dayan declined to discuss either the questions or the Egyptian replies. But he said the U.S. State Department found the Egyptian document "so impossible that they — to put it diplomatically — returned them to their authors." He said it was returned with the explanation that "not even the Americans would suggest to Israel that it accept the proposals for a basis for negotiations."

Cairo replies its regular weekly meeting Sunday and follow up with debate in Parliament on peace policy.

Dayan was replying to a speech by Labor Party opposition leader Shimon Peres, who said the Begin government's policy was putting Israel on a collision course with the United States.

Before the speeches by Peres and Dayan, the house held one of its most raucous sessions in the memory of parliamentary observers over the no confidence motion submitted by the small Sheli Party.

Moshe Nissim, replying for the government, faced a barrage of heckling over such diverse issues as whether the state-owned television should include speculation in its news broadcasts and whether schoolteachers should be allowed to take part in political activity.

Shouts echoed through the high-roofed house chamber as members accused each other of lying, gangsterism and vote-buying.

House Threatens To End S. Korean Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee approved a resolution Wednesday warning South Korea of a possible loss of U.S. economic aid if it refuses to permit a former ambassador to talk about alleged cash payoffs to congressmen.

But the resolution, adopted 31-0 by the House International Relations Committee, was softer in tone than the one sought by Leon Jaworski, special counsel for the House ethics committee.

Jaworski said he wanted a resolution stating flatly that Congress will cut off the financial aid unless South Korea permits the former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo, to testify under oath to House investigators.

However, the resolution adopted by the committee merely warned South Korea that the House "will be prepared to deny or reduce such aid" if former ambassador Kim refuses to talk to House investigators.

Jaworski had announced earlier that South Korea refuses to waive diplomatic immunity for the former ambassador other than to let him make telephone calls to congressional leaders to discuss the allegations.

Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., the committee's chairman, said the resolution may not go to a House vote until the week after next.

"It's not an outright threat," Zablocki said. "Whether the House would withhold the aid I'm not prepared to say." He said it probably would depend on the degree of the ambassador's and South Korea's willingness to cooperate.

Though the warning approved by the committee was less than Jaworski sought, Peter White, his deputy, said "we're very pleased with it and we think it will do the job."

Jaworski had asked for a House threat to approve no more economic aid for Seoul until the former ambassador answered questions under oath.

The resolution, however, does not demand sworn testimony from Kim, and says only that the House "will be prepared" to cut the aid.

Jaworski reportedly had told ethics committee members he has information that the former ambassador gave about 10 current House members envelopes stuffed with $100 bills.

But Jaworski said publicly that the information is probably not strong enough to make a case against the congressmen unless the former ambassador corroborates it.

Meanwhile, Jaworski and his investigators refused to comment on a copyrighted story in the Cleveland Plain Dealer on Wednesday. The story said House investigators learned of the alleged payoffs through U.S. intelligence intercepts of cables that the former ambassador to Seoul sent to his government.

Jaworski had said two weeks ago that he had secret information on the former ambassador's alleged payments.

Word leaked out publicly this week that the information includes names of about 10 current House members — one version says eight lawmakers — who might have gotten envelopes stuffed with $100 bills from the former ambassador.

Sources say Jaworski told ethics committee members about the information but did not give them the names or the source of the information.

There was no immediate State Department comment.

Without referring directly to the replies, Dayan said Sadat's position remained "as extreme as possible," demanding total Israeli withdrawal from captured Arab lands and creation of an independent Palestinian state. Israel rejects both demands.

"The position of Sadat today is that he is not willing to sign a separate agreement over Sinai. That is his stand until this moment," Dayan said.

He said the cabinet would discuss the

Air Standards Charge Faces VW, Agencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government charged Volkswagen's U.S. subsidiary and 15 Volkswagen dealers Wednesday with violating air pollution standards by tampering with emission control systems on 20 cars.

The dealers were accused of failing to properly adjust the systems in 1975 and 1976 model Volkswagen Rabbits and Sciroccos. Each violation carries a maximum $10,000 penalty.

Volkswagen of America Inc., headquartered in Englewood Cliffs, N.J., was named in the suits because one of its agents is accused of helping a dealer who allegedly tampered with the emission controls, a Justice Department spokesman said.

One of the dealers, Jim Boone, of Jeffersonville, Ind., was accused of removing a catalytic converter from a Volkswagen Dasher, the only alleged infraction involving that model.

The Federal Anti-Pollution Law prohibits manufacturers and dealers from removing emission control devices or making them inoperative after the vehicles are sold to customers.

The other dealers named in the suits are Pinchback Volkswagen of Lexington, Ky.; Montgomery County Cars, Rockville, Md.; Bardetti Volkswagen of Haverhill, Mass.; Altenburg Volkswagen, Taunton, Mass.; Westroads Volkswagen, Omaha; Grandville Motors, Buffalo, N.Y.; Precision Autos, Syracuse, N.Y.; Parma Motors, Parma, Ohio; Warrington Motors, Bryn-Mawr, Pa.; McGee Volkswagen, Pittsburgh; Economy Volkswagen, Dallas; Chittenden County Volkswagen, South Burlington, Vt.; Ray Burnett of Alexandria, Va.; and Stohman Volkswagen, Tysons Corner, Va.

Steel Official Backs Off Wage, Price Proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying that prices must follow costs, the chairman of U.S. Steel Corp. Wednesday indicated that he has no plans to follow the lead of several other large corporations and issue a plan for wage and price restraint.

"I think any businessman would be foolish not to support the administration's effort to hold down inflation," Edgar Speer, chairman of the nation's largest steel-making company, told a news conference.

"But the private sector is only one element. Labor and government also must make a commitment if this thing is to work."

Speer was questioned about a limited price and wage restraint program announced by American Telephone & Telegraph Corp. on Tuesday which the utility issued in response to the Carter Administration's request for voluntary efforts to hold down the rate of inflation.

Speer said he "hadn't thought that much" about making a similar promise. But he added that since executive salaries in the company had historically increased at a rate less than 5 percent, he would consider it "gratuitous" to publicly promise to hold them to that level.

ATT and General Motors have both made such public commitments for their executive employees.

Speer also told reporters he could not rule out the possibility of further steel price increases this year if the combination of rising inflation and not enough demand made that a reasonable decision.

U.S. Steel drew White House criticism earlier this year when it announced a $10.50 a ton increase in the price of steel in early April. But the increase was rolled back to $5.50 a ton after a number of U.S. Steel's competitors announced price hikes at the lower rate.

Speer was not specific on the extent or timing of future price hikes, should they become necessary this year. But asked by one reporter what type of price increase might be necessary if there were an inflation rate of 8 percent, Speer suggested a price hike of 7 percent and said the additional one percent could be accounted for through increased productivity. The inflation rate is now around 6 percent.

His comments came at a news conference during the annual convention of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Speer, who is chairman of the industry association, said during a luncheon address that U.S. producers will have to begin investing in building new plants with the latest technology, if they are to compete effectively on the world market in the future.

If built with the latest technology, Speer said such plants could result in a savings of 40 to 50 percent in labor per ton of steel, use 30 to 40 less energy and be environmentally sound.

Most investment in steel facilities for the past decade has been through expansion and modernizing existing facilities.

Although the industry currently faces severe difficulties in raising capital for expansion or building, Speer warned that American producers must find the means to build completely new plants.

"In my opinion, there is no way that any American steel company can maintain a competitive position in its home markets — there is no way the American steel industry can earn a place in tomorrow's total steel market... if we continue to follow a pattern of modernizing and replacing one process and one piece of equipment at a time as we have generally done for the past 15 or 20 years."

fund, "but I don't think we've got anything left to give."

"We are against unfair treatment — against bigotry and prejudice of any kind," said Dean. "We think there should be more understanding. Anybody who is familiar with the subject knows there have been isolated instances of discrimination against homosexuals, but that's not the case on a broad base."

The margin in Eugene wasn't as large as in other successful repeal votes within the last year in Dade County, Fla., St. Paul, Minn., and Wichita, Kan.

VOICE shunned a Bible-quoting campaign style of previous gay rights referendums. But a telegram of congratulation came Wednesday from Anita Bryant, who led the successful challenge to gay rights ordinances in Dade County and helped in the St. Paul and Wichita challenges.

Miss Bryant praised VOICE, "the Christian public and all the citizens of Eugene who worked and voted against legalized immorality."

Dean feels there will be more referendums and "I suspect we'll see these gay rights laws falling one by one across the country... If they couldn't win in Eugene, they can't win any place else, except maybe San Francisco."

Tuesday's vote repealed an amendment, approved by the City Council, which had added discrimination based on sexual orientation to the kinds of discrimination prohibited by the city's human rights ordinance. The amendment never took effect after being adopted last November because signatures were quickly gathered to put it to a popular vote.

Country Music Fete Set At Levelland

LEVELLAND (Special) — An open-air country music jamboree will be Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at South Plains College.

Weather permitting, the monthly event will be staged outdoors in the quadrangle bounded by the Administration, Student Union and Fine Arts buildings. It will be moved to the nearby student union in case of bad weather.

Gay Rights Activists To Continue Battle

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Supporters of a repealed gay rights ordinance announced plans Wednesday to create a fund to help defend homosexuals against discrimination. They asked the group that opposed the measure to contribute.

The ordinance was repealed by almost a 2-1 margin in a referendum Tuesday, 22,896 to 13,427. Almost 50 percent of the city's registered voters went to the polls.

The Rev. Douglas Huneke, a supporter of the ordinance, said churches and other organizations will be asked to contribute to a "fund for justice," to finance court costs.

Huneke called on leaders of Volunteer

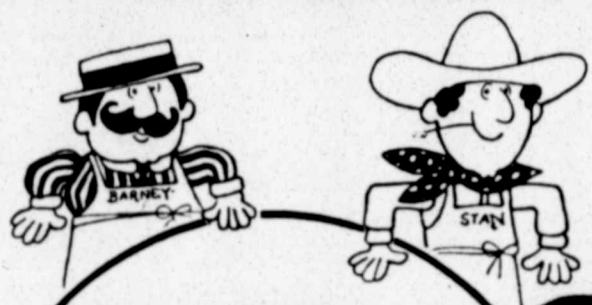

Organization Involved in Community Enactments (VOICE) to help build the fund. VOICE, which led the successful drive for repeal, argued that homosexuals' civil rights are protected by the same laws that protect civil rights for all citizens.

Larry Dean, a VOICE spokesman, said he didn't see anything wrong with such a

Pilots Revise Major Airport Ratings

WASHINGTON (AP) — An international pilot group has lifted its poor safety ratings for airports in Boston, New York and Portland, Ore., and is calling Los Angeles International the worst in the country.

The group dropped a "black star" designation for Boston's Logan International, a "red star" from New York's Kennedy International and an "orange star" from Portland International.

This leaves Los Angeles International as the only United States airport with a black star rating, the lowest the pilots give.

The action was taken at a meeting in Frankfurt of the International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations. It was announced here Wednesday by the U.S. Air Line Pilots Association.

Seven other airports worldwide were dropped from the black star list and four were added.

A black star is given to international airports judged by the pilots to be "critically deficient" from a safety standpoint. A red star goes to airports considered "seriously deficient," and an orange to those rated "deficient."

The 65-nation group in its annual review of airports, branded 22 with black stars, 236 with red and 258 with orange

Los Angeles retained its black because pilots consider it a safety hazard to be so many takeoffs and landings over water, as dictated by the airport's noise reduction procedures.

Two other airports in U.S. territories retained black-star ratings. They are the Harry S. Truman Airport in the Virgin Islands, which the pilots say may be cleared after completion of a new runway, and Pago Pago International in American Samoa, cited for poor runway conditions, inadequate landing aids, taxicabs, radio communications and weather reporting.

Anchorage and Honolulu International retained red star classification. There are now no orange star airports in the U.S.

The U.S. pilots association said last September it would recommend removal of Boston's black star after Logan officials announced new noise reduction rules which did not compromise air safety. Also, all Logan runways were grooved for better braking action, electronic landing aids were refined and other safety improvements made.

The red star was removed from New York's Kennedy after the airport took action to correct several deficiencies, such as prompt removal of runway contaminants, improved noise abatement procedures and sharp curtailment of vehicular traffic in runway, ramp and taxi areas.

Plainview Campus Registration Set

LEVELLAND (Special) — South Plains College at Plainview has scheduled summer registration Tuesday and Wednesday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Classes begin Wednesday. Summer bulletins listing courses offered, tuition fees and other information may be obtained through the Plainview facility or the SPC main campus.

SCHOOL COSTS SOAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — School costs rose 56 percent in the United States from 1971 to 1976, even in states that experienced declines in enrollment. A study by the National Institute of Education cited rising prices and a 6.8 percent increase in the number of classroom teachers. The number of pupils rose from 45.9 million to 44.7 million.

for widebody aircraft led to the cancellation of Portland's orange star.

Of the 22 black star airports, seven are in Colombia, three are in Australia (Kalgoorlie, Learmonth, Meekatharra) and two are in Venezuela (Caracas, Maturin). The others are in Indonesia (Ujung Pandang), Tonga, Solomon Islands, Fiji, Western Samoa, Greece (Kerira) and Italy (Rimini).

The pilots mainly cited the Colombian airports for shortage of fire fighting equipment and personnel. The airports are at Bogota, Barranquilla, Cali, Cartagena, Leticia, San Andres and Medellin. Those added to the list this year were the two Venezuelan airports, Western Samoa and Solomon Islands.

Removed from the black star list in addition to Boston were Rhodes, Greece; Algeiro, Italy; Teheran, Iran; Medan, Indonesia; Osaka, Japan; Panang, Malaysia; and Isle de Pascua, Easter Island, Chile.

Priests Follow Charity Law, More Funds Sent Overseas

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Pallottine Fathers, which once operated one of the country's largest direct mail charity operations, have substantially increased the amount of charity funds sent overseas, according to a new audit report.

The audit, submitted to state officials, said the Pallottines had also greatly reduced their fund-raising costs last year to within the limits required by a state charity reform law.

The financially-troubled Roman Catholic order raised $4.6 million last year and spent 41 cents of each dollar on fund-raising and management costs. That was half of the costs the order reported in 1975 and 1976 when it ran one of the largest direct-mail charity operations in the United States.

The order distributed $4.7 million last year for use by its "foreign and domestic apostolates" from money collected in past years and income derived from investments.

The audit, prepared by the Philadelphia office of Arthur Andersen & Co., does not detail the use of the funds.

But the amount distributed represents a sharp increase in the money sent to its international headquarters in Rome. Between 1970 and 1975, the order distributed $1.6 million to its foreign missions — or about 2.6 percent of the $62 million raised during the five years through its fund-raising drives.

A probe of the order was launched following published accounts that much of the money raised was secretly funneled into speculative land deals and loans to businessmen. Suspended Gov. Marvin Mandel used $54,000 in Pallottine funds to help pay for his 1974 divorce settlement.

The investigation led to the indictment of the Very Rev. Guido John Carcich, the order's former fund-raising director. Earlier this month, Carcich pleaded guilty to a single count of diverting $2.2 million into secret accounts and of using a portion of the money to benefit friends and relatives.

The drop in fund-raising costs is apparently due to a reduction in the mailings of appeal letters. The order sent 10 million letters last year compared to 50 million in 1976. Under an agreement reached with the attorney general's office, the order is required to reduce its mailings to about 9.5 million by August.

Plainview Board Approves Bid For Various School Renovations

PLAINVIEW (Special) — School trustees here Tuesday awarded a $1,499,319 bid to Knox, Gailey and Meador contractors of Lubbock for a major portion of the school renovation project, approved by local voters in last year's bond election.

Work in this phase of the project includes enclosing exterior corridors at College Hill, Hillcrest and Lakeside schools, constructing underground rooms at those schools, adding six rooms at Highland, enlarging and renovating the high school kitchen, adding a new floor at one of the two Plainview High School gyms, repairing roofs at most schools and adding new auditorium lighting and control panel at P.H.S.

Although the Lubbock firm was awarded the total package, it is expected to subcontract several jobs to Plainview companies, Dr. Glenn Harrison, superintendent, said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I am 27, single and interested in beginning to accumulate an investment portfolio. I have $1,000 with which to start, but have no idea of what type of security I want. Present income is not as important as future security.

A. Let's take that "future security" item first, because that factor must determine not only the makeup of your investment list but the decision on whether to invest at all.

There is no "future security."

Forget it! And until you do forget it you shouldn't make a move. It is absolutely essential that you realize that when you send this $1,000 (and all subsequent thousands) off to battle you are sending your money into uncharted waters (controlled by pirates?) and that you, at 27, can have no more idea where and how this money will wind up than Columbus could pinpoint where he was headed.

I agree, of course, that you don't want current income from these funds. That's a reasonable decision and one which you can now make. But from that point on it's all "up for grabs." As a matter of fact, you not only can't have "future security," you don't even want it — assuming the popular definition of "security" as safekeeping of that $1,000 (et al). You don't want it protected as $1,000. You want it to go out there and fight, and bring back $10,000 or $50,000 or whatever sum you can imagine. And take chances doing it.

There is no way you can protect that money, "secure" it, and still have it do a job for you in the year 2112 and thereafter when we may assume you would normally turn to it for support.

What odds you set up for your "betting" must depend upon your own personality, your ability to assume risk, etc. But risk there will have to be — whether you "play" the real estate market, or rare coins, or antiques, or common shares. You must get rid of that "future security" bit.

Widow's Mite — This column has consistently urged women who were recently bereaved to resist any efforts to influence them into making any sudden decisions — especially in reference to finances. In more than 75 percent of letters received from widowed readers, the dangers of such hasty decisions are spelled out in good securities irresponsibly sold, bad ones purchased; in hasty real estate deals, in unsuitable annuity purchases, etc.

The insurance industry recently took notice of this danger in a study by the American Council of Life Insurance which also urged delay in making important financial decisions. The Council said:

"In the early stages of grief, surviving spouses sometimes make decisions they would not make later on. For example, a widow might be persuaded by acquaintances to make investments that are not really suitable for her needs.

"For survivors who want a little time to adjust, some life insurance companies issue a small cash settlement within a day or two of notification of death to cover immediate needs, then issue the remainder of the benefits when the beneficiary says things are more settled.

"Beneficiaries report this has kept them from making mistakes they might have if they had received all of the benefits before they had worked out plans for their use."

This is certainly a most commendable innovation and should be taken advantage of.

Q. We are retired with $30,000 in a savings account. What other investment would be safe?

A. Assuming your $30,000 is protected by federal-agency or a strong state insurance program, I'd say the only other equivalent safety would come with purchase of Treasury bonds.

SHULSKY welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Justice Department Mulls Merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said Wednesday it will be a week or so before it decides on the proposed merger of two steel-producing giants, Lykes Corp. and LTV Corp.

Assistant Attorney General John Shenefield, who heads the antitrust division, said it will probably take a week to "develop further facts" before a decision can be reached by Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

"A week is our time frame. This is a complex fact situation," he said. Shenefield, Bell and other Justice Department officials met for nearly two hours with officials and lawyers from the two companies Wednesday.

Lykes Corp. said it may go into bankruptcy unless the government approves its merger into LTV, a transaction that would involve an exchange of securities valued at up to $200 million.

Lykes owns the Youngstown (Ohio) Sheet & Tube Co., the eighth largest U.S.

steel producer. LTV owns Jones & Laughlin Corp. in Dallas, the seventh largest producer.

It was understood that the two companies base their appeal to the Justice Department on the claim that if Youngstown goes out of business, it would do more to hurt competition in the steel industry than if the government approves the merger.

Government officials have said the merger would produce what would be the third or fourth largest steel company in America.

Also at stake are nearly 12,000 jobs at the Youngstown plant. Lykes decided last September to shut down a large portion of its steelmaking capability at a cost of 4,000 jobs.

Since last September, banks that have major loans to Lykes have agreed to temporarily waive repayment of about $125 million. But some of the waivers expire soon and Lykes has said it could soon be in default.

Lykes registered pre-tax losses of $220 million for 1977 and $25.9 million for the first quarter of 1978.

Officials of both companies declined all comment as they emerged from the attorney general's office.

The Justice Department would not comment on the substance of the talks, which were billed as the companies' final appeal for merger approval.

Fewer Than Half Of States Pay Taxes In Excess Of Fiscal Aid

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-one states sent more tax dollars to Washington than they got back in aid in fiscal 1977, the Tax Foundation Inc. said Wednesday.

Economists for the foundation, a non-profit research group, developed a formula determining each state's tax costs for all grant programs. The economists then compared the costs to actual amounts state and local governments receive in grants, as reported by the U.S. Treasury.

Indiana paid the most for federal help. Residents sent in $1.43 for every $1 in aid they received. Pennsylvanians came closest to exactly breaking even, sending $1 and a fraction of a cent to Washington for every $1 in aid. At the lower end of the scale, Vermont residents sent Washington 53 cents for every $1 they got back. District of Columbia residents paid 29 cents for every $1 in aid.

On an overall basis, the foundation said, state and local governments raised nearly $22 billion from their own revenue sources to qualify for $66 billion in federal aid.

The foundation said the aid was distributed in 97 programs ranging from "Animal and Health Plant Inspection Service" to "Water Resources Research."

The foundation noted that not all states can — or choose to — participate in all available programs.

Here is a list of the states and the amount they contributed to get $1 in aid:

Indiana, $1.43; Connecticut, $1.36; Kansas, $1.34; Ohio and Texas, $1.31 each; Illinois, $1.26; New Jersey, $1.25; Nebraska, $1.23; Florida, $1.22; Iowa and Missouri, $1.19 each; Maryland, $1.16; Virginia and Washington, $1.14 each; Colorado, Delaware and Nevada, $1.12 each; California, $1.08; New Hampshire, $1.07; Michigan, $1.01; Pennsylvania, just over $1; Wyoming, 99 cents; Arizona and Minnesota, 95 cents each; Oklahoma, 93 cents; Tennessee, 92 cents; Oregon, 90 cents; Massachusetts, 89 cents; Wisconsin, 88 cents; North Carolina, 87 cents; Rhode Island, 85 cents; Kentucky, 83 cents; New York, 82 cents; North Dakota and South Carolina, 80 cents each; Idaho and Louisiana, 79 cents each; Utah, 78 cents; Alabama, 76 cents; Hawaii, 74 cents; West Virginia, 73 cents; Arkansas and New Mexico, 70 cents each; Georgia and South Dakota, 66 cents; Maine, 64 cents; Alaska and Montana, 61 cents each; Mississippi, 57 cents; Vermont, 53 cents.

Radiology Training Aptitude Test Set

LEVELLAND (Special) — The SPC radiologic technology program will conduct an aptitude examination June 2 and July 7 for entrance into the two-year program. The exam will be given at 8:30 a.m. both days in the SPC guidance and counseling office, located in the administration building. A fee of $1 per person will be charged.

Other entrance requirements for the program include provision of high school and/or college transcripts, SAT or ACT scores, a spine X-Ray and interview with program personnel.

This fall the radiologic technology program will be in SPC's new facilities in Lubbock, formerly the old West Texas Hospital.

Students completing the two-year program will be awarded an associate in applied science degree and will be eligible to take the American Registry of Radiographers examination for certification.

For more information, contact the SPC guidance and counseling personnel.

Trooper Suspended For Alleged Slaying

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A New Jersey trooper charged with murder in connection with the shooting death of a Vietnamese refugee has been suspended without pay or allowances, State Police Superintendent Clinton L. Pagano said Wednesday.

Pagano said trooper Harry F. Helduser, 34, was suspended as a result of his indictment Wednesday by the Cumberland County grand jury for the murder of 21-year-old Sang Ngoc Le on April 4 in Upper Deerfield Township.

According to state police records, Helduser drew his revolver while in pursuit of a speeding car on Route 77 that ignored his warnings to pull to the side of the road. When the car veered into the path of the trooper's car, Helduser opened fire, records show.

The driver, Sang Ngoc Le of Bridgeton, was taken to Bridgeton Hospital with a gunshot wound to his head. He was transferred to Wilmington General Hospital in Delaware where he later died.

disappointing, because he has failed to deliver on his promises, according to a study released Wednesday by the Brookings Institution.

Carter has turned to Brookings, a Democratic-oriented economic think tank, for several key members of his administration, notably Charles L. Schultze, chairman of his Council of Economic Advisors, and Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

But despite the associations between the institution and the administration, the study assessed Carter's performance in critical terms, although the views were those of the authors and not of Brookings itself.

It said that Carter has been courageous in proposing significant changes in a wide variety of federal programs, including energy, social security, food stamps, welfare, employment, education, hospital costs, urban policy, defense and taxation. But it noted he has not been able to win enactment of very many.

"On this basis, the performance is disappointing," wrote Joseph A. Pechman, editor of Brookings' annual federal budget study, entitled "Setting National Priorities."

"Where the administration falls short is in carrying its initiatives through the legislative process — whether by overloading the congressional calendar or by misjudging the balance of political forces on major issues," he said.

In his summary of the study, Pechman, a tax expert who has been consulted frequently by the administration, gave the president mixed reviews on his economic performance. He said he has done well in prolonging the economic expansion with his 1977 economic stimulus program, but poorly in combatting inflation.

"The administration can be faulted for giving inflation control little emphasis in its various initiatives and for not dealing with the wage-price problem," he said.

Two Fail In Appeals Of Texas Death Sentences

AUSTIN (AP) — A San Antonio man found guilty in a nurse's stabbing death and a Dallas man convicted of killing a college student lost appeals Wednesday of their death penalty sentences.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals found no reversible errors in the trials of death row inmates Donald Gene Franklin and Ronald Curtis Chambers.

In a death penalty case, the appeals court automatically is asked for a rehearing. If the court again upholds the conviction, the trial judge sets an execution date.

Franklin was convicted of capital murder in the July 26, 1975, death of Mary Margaret Moran, who worked at Audie Murphy Veteran's Hospital in San Antonio.

The nurse apparently was seized as she left the hospital shortly after midnight. Still alive despite seven stab wounds, she was found four days later in an overgrown field several miles from the hospital. She died the next day.

Two witnesses testified they saw Franklin in the parking lot before the abduction. Police traced Franklin's car and the next day went to his house.

The defendant allowed them to search his house, where police found some of his clothing soaking in a basin with traces of human blood. The nurse's billfold, checkbook and other items were found partially burned in a trash can behind Franklin's house.

Franklin's trial was moved from San Antonio to Corpus Christi.

The appeals court, in a 5-4 decision, rejected the defendant's arguments that his conviction should be overturned on several technical grounds.

Judge W.T. Phillips, in a dissenting opinion, said Franklin should be given a new trial because the prosecution improperly used Franklin's silence at pre-trial proceedings against him.

Chambers was convicted in the April 11, 1975, death of Mike McMahan.

Trial testimony indicated McMahan and his date, Deia Sutton, were leaving a Dallas night club when four men forced their way into McMahan's car. The pair was driven to the Trinity River, south of downtown Dallas, forced down the levee and shot.

The four assailants started to leave the area when they heard McMahan shout to his companion. The men returned, beat McMahan with a shotgun and choked the woman.

McMahan died, but the woman climbed up the levee to the nearby LeBaron Hotel and notified police. She later testified at Chambers's trial.

The court rejected Chambers's contention that the last juror chosen at the trial should have been excused. The juror said her husband did business with Miss Sutton's family.

Judge Truman Roberts, in a dissenting opinion, said failure to excuse the last juror was a "reversible error," and Chambers should be retried.

The court took the following action in other cases:

— Upheld the 50-year sentence imposed on Gerald Williams in the 1974 pistol slaying of his wife, Mrs. Williams's body was found in their Texas City home.

The court rejected Williams's argument that a written confession was improperly admitted into evidence.

— Threw out the murder conviction of George Warren Jr. because the Harrison County district judge failed to instruct the jury on the law of self-defense.

Warren was sentenced to 10 years in the 1974 death of Alma Owens. The defendant testified he killed her in self-defense.

"The trial court is required when properly requested to charge (the jury) on every defensive issue raised by the evidence," the court said in sending the case back to Marshall for possible new trial.

— Reversed a Harris County marijuana conviction because the police stopped the defendant without a valid reason.

"A driver's license check may not be used as a subterfuge to cover up an unlawful stop based on mere suspicion," the court said in the case of Kenneth Carl White. White was convicted on charges of possessing four ounces of marijuana and given a two-year probation sentence.

— Upheld the 50-year sentence assessed Thomas Chambers Logan in the 1975 shooting death of Max Arnst in Harris County.

Logan had argued he should be given a new trial because a confession used against him was not made voluntarily.

Court Plans 'Consortium' Ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas men traditionally have had a legal right to file personal injury suits and collect money damages for "loss of consortium" with their wives.

The Texas Supreme Court agreed Wednesday to decide whether the state's Equal Rights Amendment opened up that right to wives who have lost "consortium" with their husbands because of an injury.

Consortium, a law dictionary says, means "conjugal fellowship of husband and wife, and the right of each to the company, cooperation, affection and aid of the other in every conjugal relation."

A June 14 hearing was set.

In other major actions, the court:

— Upheld the practice of revaluing property for taxes in different parts of a city at different times.

— Ruled that so-called Schedule D oil and gas securities and other investments sold by Texas firms across state lines are subject to regulation by the State Securities Board.

Ann P. Miller of Dallas filed the landmark "loss of consortium" suit after her husband, Stewart, was injured in a 1974 collision with a car driven by David Andrew Whittlesey. She sued Whittlesey for $50,000.

A Dallas judge said a wife has no standing to bring a loss of consortium suit. But the Tyler Court of Civil Appeals said the Texas ERA, approved by the voters in 1972, gave her that right.

Whittlesey's appeal is now before the high court.

Mrs. Miller's lawyer, Ronald L. Wilkinson of Dallas, said the woman's husband is ambulatory and employed although "following the accident there was a period of disability involved."

He would not elaborate on the case, saying the facts would be brought before a jury if the Supreme Court upholds the court of civil appeals decision and orders the suit to trial.

The property tax case dealt with an issue that has caused controversy in Austin, Fort Worth and several other cities where property is reappraised by areas and not all at once in the entire city.

Without writing a new opinion, the court upheld the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals' decision in a Lubbock case. Two auto dealers sued the city of Lubbock and the local school district.

Lubbock's plan divides the city into zones. One zone is reappraised each year, and a single part of town is reached every five years.

The suit, by Brunken Toyota and Polard Friendly Ford, said the appraisal plan was arbitrary and would result in some citizens' paying higher taxes than those in other parts of town.

Lubbock said there was no discrimination involved.

"It is well settled in Texas and other jurisdictions that exact uniformity and equality of taxation is a virtually impossible to achieve and an unattainable ideal," the appeals court decision said.

The high court also found "no reversible error" in the Texarkana Court of Civil Appeals decision giving the State Securities Board regulatory power of Schedule D securities.

Schedule D securities are exempt from registration with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, but selling offers are reported to the SEC on a form called "Schedule D" — hence, their name.

The case reached the high court on an appeal by Enntex Oil & Gas Co. of Nevada, Spindletop Oil & Gas Co., Oklahoma Coal & Oil Co., Laprada Oil & Gas Co., Texas Coal & Energy Co., Paul E. Cash, J.W. Heflin and Joe B. Owen.

All sales of the fractional interests in oil and gas leases were made outside of Texas, but the appeals court said state regulation would not be an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce.

Securities Commissioner Richard Latham said fraud in sale of Schedule D oil and gas investments has pretty well been cleaned up by federal and state officials.

He said, however, that Wednesday's decision still was significant.

"It enables the agency to be sure the borders of the state are not being used to harbor perpetrators of fraudulent and illegal activities in the securities field," he said.

He said it also meant that an operating oil company — in this case Spindletop — is subject to the Texas Securities Act, even though it is not an actual seller of securities.

In another decision, the court agreed with lower courts that one-time San Antonio City Council candidate Jack Porter Hogue has no case against National Bank of Commerce of San Antonio. He had sued the bank for $100,000 because it loaned $50,000 to the San Antonio Good Government League, which backed his opponent, Henry Cisneros.

The courts said the loan was not illegal.

ENERGY ALTERNATE URGED

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Energy experts meeting here say the world will face an oil shortage by 1983 unless steps are taken now to conserve use and to develop alternate energy sources.

The court rejected Williams's argument that a written confession was improperly admitted into evidence.

— Threw out the murder conviction of George Warren Jr. because the Harrison County district judge failed to instruct the jury on the law of self-defense.

Warren was sentenced to 10 years in the 1974 death of Alma Owens. The defendant testified he killed her in self-defense.

"The trial court is required when properly requested to charge (the jury) on every defensive issue raised by the evidence," the court said in sending the case back to Marshall for possible new trial.

— Reversed a Harris County marijuana conviction because the police stopped the defendant without a valid reason.

"A driver's license check may not be used as a subterfuge to cover up an unlawful stop based on mere suspicion," the court said in the case of Kenneth Carl White. White was convicted on charges of possessing four ounces of marijuana and given a two-year probation sentence.

— Upheld the 50-year sentence assessed Thomas Chambers Logan in the 1975 shooting death of Max Arnst in Harris County.

Logan had argued he should be given a new trial because a confession used against him was not made voluntarily.

U.S. Sues Philadelphia For Sewage Violations

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The federal government filed two separate suits against the city of Philadelphia Wednesday, complaining that it had violated the Clean Water and Ocean Dumping Act, and seeking to hasten construction of three sewage treatment plants.

The state of Pennsylvania joined the suit to speed up treatment plant construction.

Jack Schramm, regional administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said the city's tardiness in developing land-based alternatives to ocean dumping harms the area's health and economy.

The city was first ordered to upgrade its level of treatment in 1968, and because of a lack of progress during the past 10 years, now contributes about half the pollution from all municipal and industrial sources combined along the Delaware River estuary, Schramm said.

He added that building new plants will create up to 18,000 jobs.

The government is saying that Philadelphia's three treatment plants, not upgraded since they were built in the 1950s, discharge more than 450 million gallons of inadequately treated sewage each day into the Delaware River. It says the plants must be upgraded to remove at least 90 percent of the discharged pollutants.

The suit, centering on the treatment plants, asks U.S. District Court to enjoin Philadelphia from further delays, and to penalize the city up to $10,000 a day if it fails to meet the construction schedule.

In the other action, the federal government seeks collection of $225,000 in civil penalties which Schramm recently assessed the city for violation of its ocean dumping permit. It also asks the court to enjoin the city from continuing to violate its present permit, and to end all ocean dumping by Jan. 1, 1981.

The city, on orders from Mayor Frank Rizzo, earlier had filed a federal court action against Schramm to keep him from collecting the $225,000 fine.

After that, the witnesses, indicated, Pens exchanged words with one of two men who had reportedly joined his wife and a female companion.

Services for Piens will be at 2 p.m. Friday at Griffin Funeral Home in Stewartville, Minn., with the Rev. Carl Brenner officiating.

Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery in Stewartville under direction of Griffin Funeral Home.

Survivors include seven sons, Gerald, Ronald, Michael, Dennis, Thola, Paul and Darrin, all of Rochester, Minn.; two daughters, Barbara and LaNay of Rochester; his mother, Mrs. Thola Piens of Stewartville, and three brothers, Arnold of Mabel, Minn., Dale of Stewartville, and Donald of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Murder Charge Cites Man In Stabbing Death Here

A 23-year-old Lubbock man has been charged with murder in connection with the early Monday stabbing death of Dennis J. Piens.

Named in the charge was Wenceslaus Cruz Perez of 1105 35th St. The criminal district attorney's office recommended a $2,500 bond.

Perez had turned himself in to the Lubbock police about 11 a.m. Tuesday.

Piens, 44, of 7502 Ave. H, No. 17, was found about 12:40 a.m. Monday in the 400 block of E. 34th St. He was pronounced dead at 2:50 a.m. Monday at Methodist Hospital.

Officers arriving at the scene said a large spot of blood was seen on the left side of Piens' abdomen. Officers also said a knife, with the blade in an open position was in Piens' right hand.

Reports indicated the knife was not bloody.

Witnesses told police Piens had earlier been involved in an argument at a club at 400 E. 34th St.

The witnesses said Piens had apparently been trying to get his wife to leave the Government's Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employment trends in recent years indicate that the federal government's role as a major provider of jobs in metropolitan Washington is diminishing, a Council of Governments report shows.

At the same time, total employment, which reached 1.6 million in the Washington area in March, had increased by more than 27,000 in the ensuing year, the report points out.

Suit Causes Rise In Tune-Up Price

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A lawyer who balked at paying a $24.32 repair bill on his lawn mower now must pay $1,074.32 to an Amarillo repairman, the Supreme Court ruled today.
 Here is the story as set out in court records:
 Lawyer Robert Barfield testified that J. Darrell Brogdon, owner of Profit's Lawn Mower Service, agreed to tune his lawn mower for $14.
 Brogdon testified that the agreed price was $14.50 plus the cost of parts, and a large poster in the shop showed that was the standard price. In addition, Brogdon said, he wrote "14.50 plus parts" on the repair order in Barfield's presence.
 When Barfield came to pick up his mower, he refused to pay $24.32 — $14.50 plus $9.82 in parts.
 Brogdon refused to allow him to take the mower without paying.
 Barfield sued to get the mower back and for $500 in attorney's fees. He alleged that in keeping the mower Brogdon was trying to extort money, and he asked for $3,000 in exemplary damages.

The Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals noted that although Barfield failed to file a proper affidavit to get the mower back, a writ of sequestration was issued and served, and Barfield got the mower.
 The mower has since worn out and been discarded.
 Brogdon filed a cross-suit against Barfield, alleging that Barfield knew or should have known that he was not entitled to the writ.
 A county court-at-law jury awarded Brogdon, the repairman, $74.32 in actual damages and $3,000 in exemplary damages.
 The jury found that Barfield knew or should have known that he had violated sequestration procedures in causing the writ to be issued and knew or should have known that the sequestration law had been held unconstitutional.
 The Amarillo appeals court affirmed the judgment but said $3,000 for exemplary damages was excessive. It reduced the judgment by $2,000.
 The Supreme Court affirmed the ruling without offering an opinion of its own.

Events Of Disaster Retraced By Board

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Witnesses at a National Transportation Safety Board hearing on Wednesday retraced the string of events leading to the Waverly railroad disaster that killed 16 persons.
 Chaired by Elmer Garner, chief of the NTSB's railroad division, the hearing was convened to gather facts in the Feb. 24 disaster. In addition to the 16 dead, scores more were injured and several blocks of the community burned when a derailed Louisville Nashville Railroad petroleum tanker exploded that chilly Friday afternoon in blinding flame on the edge of Waverly's business district.
 First to testify were Sydney R. Johnson, superintendent of LN's Nashville division, and the crew of ill-fated Train No. 584.
 The five-member panel was particularly interested in a broken, high-carbon steel wheel Johnson saw in the wreckage while he checked on efforts to clear the line.
 Just after the disaster, the NTSB reported preliminary investigation showed the wheel probably caused the Feb. 22 derailment that set the stage for the explosion. Other wheels made of the alloy have been ordered removed from all railroad cars; none may now be used on freights carrying hazardous materials.
 "I observed that there was a cracked wheel that was cracked all the way outward to the rim and was moved in on the axle," Johnson said. He noticed that a gondola car was missing a wheel and surmised a connection.

 The engineer and brakemen of No. 584 were questioned closely about their observations on the trip to the west-central Tennessee community. The panel wanted to know whether there was any indication the wheel was overheating.
 None nothing amiss until the derailment, they said. The brakes had been checked when the gondola was added to the train at Coalsburg.
 "The crewmen involved in 584 and the others involved in handling the gondola all performed their duties in a normal manner and in full compliance with the rules," Johnson said.
 Neither of two liquid petroleum tankers derailed appeared more than dented, he said. Though no gas was leaking, Civil Defense and local officials ordered the immediate area evacuated just after the derailment.
 Burley Holcomb, an LN employee directing the clean-up operation, decided the tankers could not be put back on the tracks. He and Johnson ordered the cargo transferred to a truck and to a tanker requested from the Nashville yards. A more extensive evacuation was ordered.
 "I did not see anything to indicate that the tank cars were damaged in such a way that the procedures we used were unsafe," Johnson said.
 One of the tankers exploded during the first transfer attempt, a job contracted to Liquid Transporters, Inc. of Louisville. Holcomb died in the blast.
 Some investigators have said they suspect the metal wall of the deadly tank was fatigued and, flexed by changes in pressure caused by changing temperatures, gave way. Johnson said it was 30 degrees when the car derailed and 52 degrees when it exploded.

Parochial School's Principal Seized In Narcotics Raid

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — The principal of a Roman Catholic elementary school in Geneseo was among 35 persons arrested Wednesday in a series of drug raids, police said.
 The principal, Frank Koutnik, was to have left his job at St. Malachy's at the end of the school year to become principal in the fall at St. Anne's grade school in East Moline.
 Police in the Quad Cities area said about $500,000 worth of heroin, cocaine, LSD and MDA were seized in the raids.
 Koutnik was charged with delivery and possession of controlled substances and was held on $75,000 bond.
 Authorities said 130 officers made the arrests in the Illinois counties of Henry and Rock Island and in Scott County, Iowa.

Transport Chief Warns Against Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal highway trust fund could go broke if Congress passes a proposed four-year "buy now, pay later" spending program.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Wednesday. "The myth of a bloated highway trust fund is only that, and responsible fiscal policy cannot be founded on imaginary dollars," Adams told the House Ways and Means Committee.

The highway trust fund is primarily used for road building and repairs. It is chiefly financed by motor fuel taxes, plus levies on manufacturers' sales of tread rubber and on heavy trucks and buses.

The secretary opposes a recommendation by the Public Works and Transportation Committee to authorize $45 billion from the trust fund for the fiscal years 1979 through 1982.

Adams said the Treasury Department estimates that uncommitted funds, revenues and interest in the fund during that period will be $36.6 billion.

That, Adams said, leaves a shortfall of $8.4 billion. And, he added, the Treasury Department projection may be optimistic.

The Public Works and Transportation Committee wants to use trust fund revenues from 1984 and 1985 to cover the $8.4 billion deficit generated from 1979-82.

"This means that either there will have to be a drastic reduction in highway projects authorized after 1982, or those new projects will also have to be funded from future revenues until year by year the trust fund is depleted by advance commitments," said the secretary.

STILL DOUBTFUL BARGAIN

BANGKOK (AP) — Thailand's government has dropped the cost of a marriage license from $5 to a nickel, saying the cost kept too many marriages from being registered.

Deadly Holiday Weekend Seen

CHICAGO (AP) — Millions of motorists will be on the nation's highways this Memorial Day weekend, and the National Safety Council estimates that 400 to 500 will die in accidents.

The traffic death toll is estimated from 6 p.m. local time Friday until midnight Monday.

Last year 432 persons were killed during the three-day Memorial Day period. The record for a similar period was 597 deaths in 1969. A record death rate of 629 was posted in 1968, but that was for a four-day period.

Interoffice Memo To IRS: 'How's That Again?'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Note to President Carter (copy to Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal); Your directive on clear writing by federal agencies may not have reached the Internal Revenue Service.

A recent IRS news release began: "A proposal to extend the expiration date of part of a prohibited transaction exemption dealing with certain securities transactions directed by a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan on its behalf was published Friday, May 5, 1978, in the Federal Register by the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of Labor."

Citizen Integration Panelists Named

A steering committee was announced Wednesday for Lubbock Organizing for Our Kids, a citizens' group formed to assist court-ordered school integration here.

Attorney Roy Bass, immediate past mayor, will head the committee. He will be assisted by Louise Cummins.

Each member of the steering committee will direct coordination of activities in a specific area. For example, Ray Diekmeyer, president of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, will be in charge of promoting support among businesses for the successful implementation of the school district's integration plan.

Other steering committee members are Leon Harris and Rex Webster, publicity; Carolyn Lanier, George Scott and Jorge Moreno, cross-cultural awareness; J.Q. Warnick, security and crisis prevention;

Frank Gonzales, youth groups; the Rev. A.L. Davis, churches; Dudley Strain, bus safety activities; Jane Quade, activities of schools having Parent-Teacher Associations; Maria Mercado, activities of non-TA schools;

Betty Anderson, rumor control; Kay Key, speaker's bureau; Willie Washington, recruitment and coordination of parent volunteers, and E.G. Nunez, involvement of educators.

The steering committee members were selected by from nominations submitted by various local clubs and civic groups. Those not selected for the steering committee will be asked to serve on an executive committee to help carry out the organization's activities.

REQUEST FOR QUALIFICATION STATEMENT FROM CONSULTANTS
 (Sealed qualification statements will be accepted by the El Paso Water Utilities until 2:00 P.M. M.D.S.T., Monday, June 12, 1978. The Public Service Board of the City of El Paso is requesting qualification statements from EIS Consultants for consideration for the selection of a consultant for the preparation of an Environmental Impact Statement on the city's proposed wastewater treatment plant. The proposed wastewater treatment plant is to be built in a far corner of Northeast El Paso, approximately 1.2 miles southeast of U.S. Highway 54 and three miles east of McCulloch Road. The plant will treat sewage to potable water quality and then this water will be injected underground to the historic Boson, a subterranean basin at the eastern edge of the Franklin Mountains. The water will be retained in the underground for a period of time before being removed back for consumption. The potable water will be transported to the basin by means of a pipeline and injection wells. Environmental consultants wishing to be considered for the job of preparing the EIS should submit a statement of qualification to the General Manager, El Paso Water Utilities, City of El Paso, P.O. Box 511, El Paso, Texas 79969, on June 12, 1978.

Budget, Medical School Items On Agenda For Tech Regents

A $96 million budget for Texas Tech University and the School of Medicine is among a long list of items to be considered this morning by the university's Board of Regents.
 The 1979 budget figures show the university receiving about $71 million — an increase of about $2 million over the $69.28 million received in state appropriated funds last year. The School of Medicine is slated to receive about $25 million, slightly less than the $26.14 million appropriated in 1978.
 Administrators say the medical school's budget was higher last year to cover construction costs. The 1979 budget, although lower, actually reflects more funds for the school's operating expenses since most construction projects have been completed.
 The board also will recognize establishment of the first undergraduate profesorship in agricultural finance in Texas.

 The regents will acknowledge the Charles C. Thompson Professorship in Agricultural Finance, established to honor the longtime leader in Texas agricultural finance and former Tech regent and board chairman.
 Although not an item on the agenda, the board is expected to hear a report from Tech President Cecil Mackey during executive session on the selection of a successor to Athletic Director J. T. King.
 The closed session is scheduled to last more than an hour. An announcement on a new AD is not expected today, however sources say a decision should be reached within two weeks.
 In other action, the board will award contracts for the renovation of fire alarm systems at the university and renovation of Sneed Residence Hall. The board also will authorize receipt of bids for remodeling the Old Library building and constructing an addition to the Electrical Engineering building.
 The regents will be asked to authorize advertising for bids for leasing mineral rights on university-owned properties, and to approve increases in student service and student health service fees.
 A policy for selection of primary and secondary depositories and a contract for the printing of The University Daily also will be considered by the board.
 In medical school matters, the regents will consider approval of an amendment to the general operating agreement between the School of Medicine and the Lubbock County Hospital District, and affiliation agreements between the medical school and the El Paso Cancer Treatment Center Foundation and the Palo Duro Convalescent Home in Claude.

Dr. J. Bensburg Honored With Alumnus Award

BATESVILLE (Special) — Dr. J. Bensburg, director of the Research and Training Center in Mental Retardation at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, has been named the recipient of the 1978 Distinguished Alumnus Award at Arkansas College.
 Dr. Bensburg graduated from Arkansas College in 1947 with a bachelor of science degree. During his student days, he was a member of Alpha Psi Omega drama fraternity, a member of the Harlequin Theatre and president of the Pre-Med Club.
 He received his master of arts degree in psychology from the University of Arkansas in 1948 and was awarded his doctorate in psychology from George Peabody College in 1957.
 Dr. Bensburg joined the Arkansas Child Development Center in 1957 as associate director and chief psychologist. In 1959, he became the assistant director of the Mental Hygiene Division of the Arkansas State Board of Health.
 He became director of the Attendant Training Project of the Southern Regional Educational Board in 1961, and served in that capacity until 1966, when he became associate director of the Center for Development and Learning Disorders at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.
 Dr. Bensburg has been with Texas Tech since 1972, and also serves as a professor of special education and psychology and adjunct professor of psychiatry at the Texas Tech School of Medicine.

Man Arrested In Fatal Shooting Would-Be Hijacker Captured In Moscow

BROWNFIELD (Special) — Brownfield police late Tuesday night arrested a Brownfield man in connection with the shooting death of Jackie Deanda.
 Reports indicate that the 29-year-old Brownfield man was arrested in Moscow.
MOSCOW (AP) — Police exchanged gunfire with a hooded man holding two hostages in a downtown Moscow Finnish airline office Wednesday, then, after the hostages escaped, flushed him out with tear gas and arrested him.
 A Soviet source identified the man as Mikhail Timoshukov, 22, of Kazakhstan in Soviet central Asia, wanted by police there for an undisclosed offense. A Moscow police source claimed Timoshukov was mentally unbalanced.
 The official Tass news agency said there were no injuries in the incident.
 Speaking to Western reporters who called the Finnair office, the gunman identified himself as a member of the "Russian Liberation Army," an organization unknown to Westerners here.
 A Finnish embassy spokesman said his embassy received three or four telephone calls from the gunman demanding an airplane to an unspecified destination. He said the man threatened the lives of his two Russian hostages, a Finnair secretary and a driver for the Finnair Embassy.
BROWNFIELD (Special) — Jackie Deanda, also of Brownfield, was shot at least three times with a small caliber weapon about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday.
 Police here picked up the suspect about 30 minutes after the incident.
 Deanda died at 2:18 a.m. Wednesday in Brownfield General Hospital.
 Services for the Orange Grove native are set for 4 p.m. Friday in St. Anthony's Catholic Church here with the Rev. Aidan McGuire, pastor, officiating.
 Burial will follow in Brownfield Cemetery under direction of Brownfield Funeral Home.
 Deanda moved to Brownfield with his parents in 1949. He married Anna Maria Medrano in Brownfield Jan. 4, 1969. He was a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church.
 Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Sandra, Linda and Stephanie, all of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Deanda of Dickens; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Deanda and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Rivera, all of Orange Grove; four brothers, Joe Jr. of Amarillo, and George, Johnny and Armando, all of Dickens; six sisters, Mrs. Bertha Ann Gutierrez of Dickens, Mrs. Peggy Longoria of Brownfield, Mrs. Janie Teina and Mrs. Mary Ann Contreras, both of Peecos, and Mrs. Sylvia Oliviar and Mrs. Luce Olivias, both of Kermit.

IN A COFFIN BUILT FOR TWO — David Margulies and Lois Smith lay side by side in a coffin for two — until someone yanks a cord at the end. Then they sit upright, displaying ghoulish grins and uncouth greetings. This and 49 other works of "living" sculpture were part of a Public Art Fund benefit held in two downtown Manhattan galleries Monday night. (AP Laserphoto)

'Living Sculpture' Placed On Display

NEW YORK (AP) — Mona Lisa wore a real mustache. But the man in the purple coffin had a fake one. And the lady with the pafalos wore terry shorts and jogging shoes. She was sitting atop a ladder, communicating by written notes.

If it all seems bizarre, that was the intention of the 50 works of "living" sculpture arrayed in two downtown galleries at a benefit recently for the Public Art Fund.

"The basic idea is that everybody is a work of art," said Phyllis Yampolsky, a happenings veteran who conceived the clamorous evening of weird dress, odd pose and irresistible involvement.

Among the notables who either designed or became the sculptures were former Metropolitan Museum of Art director Thomas P.F. Hoving, Andy Warhol "superstar" Taylor Mead, and sculptors Duane Hansen, Marc di Suvero, Larry Rivers and Tom Wesselman.

Artist Alice Neel, in bonnet and studded chair, was a sculpture designed by Robert Graham, who called the piece "Alice Neel in the 18th century."

"I love it," the grandmotherly painter of nudes declared. "I just wish they'd give me a glass of champagne or at least a glass of water." Terming herself a "speaking statue," she bubbled. "I love to show off — and besides, I think they're having fun."

Sue Shehy was a case of life imitating art imitating life. The model for one of Hansen's realistic sculptures sat motionless — until anyone realized she was real and spoke to her — in unmistakable reproduction of the woman shopper eating a banana split in the original work.

"I like it," she allowed. "I don't find it that hard." Hannah Wilke posed in a revealing sequins dress. With greenbacks strewn about her stool, she assertively thrust a tin can at onlookers. "Living Sculpture," read the legend. "Still Has to Make a Living."

David Margulies and Lois Smith lay side by side in a coffin for two — until anyone yanked a cord at the end. Then they would bend upright, displaying ghoulish grins and uncouth greetings.

His mostache notwithstanding, the man behind an ornate golden frame was anything but the inscrutable Mona Lisa posing coquettishly behind a hand-held reproduction of the real face.

"I like showing off," he allowed. The placard identified her-him as Evangelina Tabasco, but Sam Wiener said he was her and the sculptor.

Rule On Cotton Dust Delayed By Orders From White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a court deadline only a week away, President Carter's economic advisers have returned to the back burner a long-delayed rule aimed at protecting 800,000 cotton workers from disease linked to cotton dust.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration was prepared to publish new cotton dust standards May 31, in accordance with its promise to the U.S. District Court in Washington. That deadline was the latest in a long series of target dates negotiated in a lawsuit filed by union workers demanding government action.

Last week, however, the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability claimed that the latest OSHA plan would cost industry $625 million in start-up expenses and about $200 million per year after that. The council went on to suggest that revisions were possible to reduce the inflationary impact "without sacrificing the health benefits."

White House economists followed up Tuesday on that report by ordering OSHA to delay publication of the rule until it can be thoroughly examined by the Regulatory Analysis Review Group, an interagency panel recently created by the president to keep rein on the economic costs of regulation.

Those participating in the decision to delay the issue once more included Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and Robert S. Strauss, recently named to head the president's anti-inflation effort.

Schultze, in a preliminary memo to the review group on May 2, said, "It is important to ensure that any new regulations do not impose unnecessary or uneconomic costs on American industry."

Medical studies have shown that a significant number of workers exposed to cotton dust eventually contract byssinosis, a lung disease that can lead to disability and even death.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability said the new OSHA rules, requiring new equipment and other steps, could prevent 284 byssinosis cases a year, thus costing, in effect, $440,000 per case.

The council questioned whether simpler steps, such as greater emphasis on masks for workers and periodic checkups for byssinosis, wouldn't be just as effective as much lesser cost.

Both OSHA's head, Dr. Eula Bingham, and her immediate boss, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, declined to comment on the White House order for a delay while the regulation is reviewed further. One official, who asked not to be identified, commented:

"The lid is on. The thing is sitting over there (at the review group) and there's nothing we can do about it."

Arguments over cotton dust standards date back many years, including the Nixon administration's onetime refusal to touch the issue because it was so controversial. Court pressure brought by labor unions eventually lead to public hearings and finally formulation of the proposed standard by OSHA.

Exactly what problems, if any, the indefinite White House delay will have in the still-pending lawsuit was unclear. OSHA had attempted to gain dismissal of the suit in return for its promise to publish the rule by May 31, but the court declined that request on ground that it first wanted to see the result.

Sol Stetin, a senior officer of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, said the union was "shocked" to learn of the new delay. A cotton dust standard is "morally imperative," he said.

Childbirth Chapter To Give Out Toys

Members of the Lubbock Chapter of Childbirth With Preparation will present 27 teddy bears to the pediatrics unit of Health Science Center Hospital at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Made of washable materials, the toys can be laundered after the patient playing with them goes home or decides he no longer wants to play with them.

Childbirth With Preparation is comprised of a group of 15 teachers who work with 300-400 couples each year in giving childbirth preparation instructions.

The teachers meet the first Saturday of each month to keep abreast of the latest developments in childbirth instruction. Their primary purpose is to teach prenatal care of expectant parents.

Funds are raised by the group through their "plate project," according to Mrs. Renee Hillis, president of the organization.

The group can take pictures drawn by children or poems and have them affixed permanently to a plate. The plates then are sold to parents, according to Mrs. Hillis.

Professor Fears Destruction Of WWII Records

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A University of Pennsylvania professor says the full story behind a World War II secret may never come out if the government destroys files of 16 camps where some 2,500 enemy aliens were held without trial after arrest by the FBI.

But a federal official in Washington, disputing the professor's claim, said there are now no plans to destroy the files.

Jerre Mangione, who has written about the subject in a new book, said the documents are stored in 800 boxes at the Federal Records Service in Suitland, Md.

He said recent FBI announcements about the systematic destruction of closed criminal files more than five years old caused him to be concerned about the preservation of records dealing with internments.

But the deputy archivist of the National Archives and Records Service, Dr. James E. O'Neill, told a reporter in Washington: "They are not scheduled for destruction. Nothing is going to happen to them until our people make a determination as to whether any or all of them should be retained permanently. They are definitely not scheduled for destruction."

A public information spokesman at the National Archives said the 824 boxes were received only recently from the Immigration and Naturalization Service, via its parent organization, the Justice Department.

The spokesman noted that the archives is receiving a huge volume of materials from the period following World War II, and said no schedule has been fixed for appraising the documents.

Mangione maintained that historians should be allowed to study the documents before any are destroyed. The archivist spokesman said he does not know their status, but that it is almost certain that scholars will be allowed to inspect them, under Freedom of Information Act procedures if not openly.

Mangione said he inspected the documents to research his book, and was charged $30 a day.

While most Americans know about the mass internment of 110,000 West Coast Japanese — most of them citizens of the United States — by the Army, Mangione said few are aware of selected FBI arrests of 5,000 German, 5,000 Japanese and 250 Italian aliens deemed "potentially dangerous."

The arrests were authorized under a 1978 law that permitted apprehension of any enemy alien without due process, he said.

The aliens were confined in 16 special camps, the biggest in Texas, New Mexico, Montana and North Dakota.

Mangione says he learned of the program as public relations director of the U.S. Immigration Service between 1942 and 1948. He describes it in a new book, "An Ethnic at Large."

"I was party to keeping it quiet," Mangione said. "There was nothing sinister about this coverup, but it was necessary at the time because any publicity aroused the wrath of Americans, especially those in the vicinity of the camps after they had hometown casualties."

Mangione said more than one million

San Marcos Gunman Gives Up To Police

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A San Marcos man held police at bay for about 5 1/2 hours Wednesday, reportedly firing shots at two people before surrendering about 8:50 p.m.

San Marcos authorities identified the man as John Koch. Witnesses reported Koch locked himself in his house about 3:10 p.m. and fired several shotgun blasts into a nearby pickup.

Czech Gunmen Stopped By Police After Bus Hijack

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Three gunmen commandeered a Czechoslovak student tour bus and tried to force their way to West Germany and political asylum, the official Czechoslovakian news agency CTK reported Wednesday.

One hijacker killed in a Tuesday night shootout with border guards was identified as Milan Bares, from Straskov-Vodochody in Bohemia, who was to start an 18-month prison term on May 22 for an unspecified crime.

Two others, Robert and Vaclav Bares, were wounded and arrested, the report said. The report did not say whether the men were of the same family.

Border guards used an armored car to stop the gunmen during an exchange of gunfire that left one student and the bus driver injured.

FBI, Foreign Intelligence Reciprocity Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Wednesday disclosed its guidelines on FBI foreign intelligence activities and a leading critic of government surveillance said they make clear that the FBI does "a lot for foreign governments."

The 19-page edited document was released under a Freedom of Information Act request by Morton Halperin, director of the Center for National Security Studies in Washington.

The guidelines were censored to eliminate what the Justice Department said was information that could damage the government's intelligence-gathering system.

Assistant Attorney General John Harmon, in a letter to Halperin, said: "We believe that it is important that the FBI's foreign counter-intelligence investigations not be made more difficult by disclosures that reveal or tend to reveal information about methods of investigation or the circumstances of their use."

Harmon said the information, "if acquired by sophisticated foreign intelligence services, would permit them to adjust their clandestine operations in this country to reduce their vulnerability to detection."

Halperin said he was uncertain whether he would file a court appeal to try to obtain the censored information.

He said in a telephone interview that he felt the most revealing aspect of the guidelines was its indication that the FBI exchanges a great deal of information with foreign governments.

"It's clear they do a lot for foreign governments," Halperin said.

The guidelines state, for example, "FBI headquarters shall promptly notify the Department of Justice of any request by a law enforcement, intelligence or security agency of a foreign government for information or assistance in a foreign counter-intelligence matter involving a United States citizen."

The guidelines were adopted in May 1976 under former Attorney General Edward Levi.

The Freedom of Information request is not related to a pending court case involving Halperin, who was placed under electronic surveillance when he worked for the National Security Council in the Nixon administration.

Coincidentally, the Justice Department filed a legal brief in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on Tuesday reaffirming its position that former President Richard M. Nixon and his chief aides should be immune from lawsuits for ordering wiretaps against government officials and reporters in the early 1970s.

On Aug. 7, 1977, a district court judge ruled that Nixon, his chief of staff H.R. Haldeman, and former Attorney General John N. Mitchell must pay nominal damages of one dollar for authorizing a wiretap on Halperin's home telephone, a tap that lasted more than a year.

Halperin is appealing the ruling for further damages, and the Justice Department is appealing on grounds that federal officials should be immune from such suits.

Cattle Futures At New Highs

By Reuters
 CHICAGO — Cattle futures ran up to new highs in all contracts except distant June before ending 35 points higher to 25 points lower Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Sales totaled 18,131 cars. October was up the most, gaining 50 cents early, with distant June off the most.

Initial profit-taking was quickly absorbed as traders noted continued record high prices for beef and cash cattle.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 2 3/4 cents at 89 3/4 to 93 cents a pound, a record high quotation. The six markets expect 9,600 head today.

Cash cattle were up 50 cents to $2, with the best lot at $61.65 per hundredweight, an all-time high. Omaha and Joliet recorded highs of $61.50. Slaughter was 142,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures ended 22 points lower to 20 higher on 2,332 cars. August was up the most, with May off the most.

The market surged 70 points in October and retreated 80 points in January in erratic moves.

Initial buying on $1 to $3 advances in cash feeder cattle prices lifted all futures except April to new highs for the season. May rose to $68.70, with cash prices up to as much as $77 at Fort Worth.

Hog futures followed mixed trends in cattle futures and finished 50 cents higher to 30 cents lower on 6,860 cars. April was up the most, with nearby June off the most. Prices were up 80 points to off 60 points at times.

Initial selling followed heavy hog runs and lower prices but the turnaround in cattle futures on record high cash trade made for short covering and other buying here. New highs were set in most contracts on the rebound.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one-half cent at 78 to 80 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 27,000 head.

Cash hogs were steady to off $1, with the best lot at $52 at Peoria. Slaughter was 286,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures were lower all day and ended 70 to 177 points lower, led by August, on sales of 7,867 cars. July was down 190 points at the start.

Prices tumbled on continued heavy storings out of town and locally, despite kill. Prices slipped to the lowest level since February, more than 19 1/2 cents under recent highs. Selling continued in the face of early gains in cattle and hogs.

Deliveries totaled 218 thus far. Wholesale bacon was off two cents to up 1 1/2 cents at 64 1/2 to 68 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE UNUSUAL "LARGE SUPPLY, high price" situation being seen in the soybean market is due to exceptionally strong demand.

For those with old-crop beans left to sell, says the USDA, it suggests pretty favorable prices through the end of the marketing year.

Usually, big soybean stocks (843 million bushels on April 1) and intentions for an 8 percent increase in spring plantings would indicate a price level well below the recent $7 a bushel beans were going for at Chicago.

But demand should stay strong, at least until new-crop beans start coming in next fall. Mainly, it's because this is the only country with large supplies of soybeans and soybean products available for export. Then, too, good livestock markets are keeping domestic use strong.

BRAZIL, THE WORLD'S SECOND-LARGEST producer-exporter of soybeans, is hurting from drought. Its 1978 crop is down to only 355 million to 375 million bushels, compared with 448 million last year.

Supplies of Indian peanuts and U.S.S.R. sunflower seeds also are smaller than expected. And the dollar's decline in value relative to European and Japanese currencies has helped to boost demand for U.S. soybeans.

Accordingly, U.S. processing mills are turning out record volumes of soybean oil and meal.

Farm prices for soybeans have advanced from last fall's low of $5.25 per bushel to $6.74 in April. Generally, prices peak in the spring, but timing of the top dollar this year may depend on the outcome of the 1978 Brazilian harvest now nearing completion and crop developments in other countries.

PRICES HAVE STAYED STRONG, thanks also to record U.S. feed use of soybean meal for poultry, cattle and hogs. Sharp advances in livestock prices have boosted the demand.

In addition, demand for soybean meal by Western Europe and Japan has increased. Prices of soybean meal (44 percent protein) at Decatur rose from $135 a short ton last October to $170 in late April.

The U.S. food industry also has shown strong demand for soybean oil and exports may be a new record, with large shipments to India and Pakistan.

THE STATE ASCS OFFICE WAS NOTIFIED by Washington this week that haying and grazing privileges on set-aside and voluntary diversion acreages have been approved in Texas for emergency feed grain program participants.

It was emphasized that eligibility is limited to livestock owners approved for emergency feed program (EFP) assistance.

Forage may be purchased "from any other producer not an EFP participant, provided it is approved in advance of purchase and the county committee determines the amounts paid are not excessive and will not permit unwarranted benefits to the seller because of the emergency harvesting."

The period for harvesting and grazing these acreages — if there is any forage on them — shall not extend beyond July 1.

Bennett Gets Cotton Post Here

Mack Bennett, a Marfa native, will return to Lubbock in July as assistant area director of the Cotton Marketing Service.

Office, according to Donald W. Bratton, western regional director of the USDA's cotton division in El Paso.

Amy May Change Eyewear Styling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amy Carter, whose large-rimmed glasses help make her instantly recognizable, soon may be harder to spot.

Her mother, Rosalynn, says the 10-year-old is about to experiment with contact lenses. Mrs. Carter told reporters that an eye specialist has suggested Amy's impaired vision is less likely to deteriorate if she switches to contacts.

Bennett, who has been assistant branch chief for the cotton division of the Agricultural Marketing Service in Washington, D.C., will succeed Wilburn Reeves.

Reeves will move to the Harlingen cotton office as area director. He was assistant director of the Lubbock office for 10 years.

The Lubbock office is the largest of 18 AMS cotton marketing services offices in the western region of Texas, New Mexico, California and Arizona. It serves 22 counties in Texas, including three sub-offices in Lamesa, Brownfield and Levelland, and three counties in New Mexico.

Last season, from September 1977 to February 1978, the office classed 2,940,000 running bales. It served 341 gins, 34 warehouses and five cottonseed oil mills in Texas and New Mexico.

Bennett, a 1957 Texas Tech graduate in agronomy, has worked with the AMS for 17 years in offices in Memphis, Phoenix and Carlsbad. In 1968, he was awarded the USDA's Certificate of Merit for superior performance as western area market news reporter.

From 1969, he worked as area director of the Carlsbad Marketing Services Office until he transferred to Washington.

Bennett and his wife Doris have three children, Mark, Paul and Marsha.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures dipped slightly on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday as traders decided to liquidate contracts and convert paper profits into cash after sharp price hikes a day earlier.

Cash dealers said farmers sold a lot of corn overnight to take advantage of the sharp price increases of the preceding session.

But rain in parts of the cornbelt partly offset the negative impact of grain company's purchases of cash corn, which were being hedged by selling in the futures market.

Democrats' Final Count Goes Against Racing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Democrats turned down horse race gambling in the party's May 6 non-binding referendum, 685,505 for and 720,012 against, State Democratic Chairman Calvin Guest said Wednesday.

Guest said party headquarters had received results from all 254 counties. He said they will be canvassed and officially announced at the June 13 State Democratic Executive Committee meeting.

The SDEC refrained from issuing vote totals at its May 16 meeting because not all counties' results had been submitted. Horse race betting advocates threatened for a time to sue the party to force a delay in the announcement of results until recounts could be made, but they later dropped the threat.

They said there were some irregularities as well as erroneous reporting of vote totals.

Republicans had a similar referendum and defeated pari-mutuel betting, 74,281 to 69,638.

The referendum had no legal effect and was promoted by horse race advocates in the hope that majorities for pari-mutuel wagering might encourage legislators to legalize on-track betting.

Consul Held Hostage By Gunman In Brazil

RECIFE, Brazil (AP) — A young man who said he was armed seized the honorary consul of Mexico and two other persons here Wednesday and demanded a flight out of Brazil, a state government spokesman said.

The consul, Arnaldo da Fonte Dubeux, a Brazilian and also president of the Recife stock exchange, and two employees were held in Dubeux's office on the third floor of a downtown building. Police surrounded the building.

Recife is a city of about a million inhabitants some 2,000 miles north of Rio de Janeiro.

The young man, who identified himself as Julio Santana, sought a flight to Mexico, Sweden or some eastern European country, officials said.

Flute Recital Set Today

Miss Lynda Maunder will be presented in a senior flute recital today at 4:30 p.m. in the Saint John United Methodist Church Garden Room. There is no admission and the public is invited.

Besides Miss Maunder's presentations by Profkoeff, Poulenc and Ganne, Miss Tamara Vance will present a piano solo and accompany. The Coronado High School Woodwind trio, composed of Miss Maunder on flute, Miss Harriet Harvey on oboe and Miss Diane Grevelle on clarinet will play works of Mozart and Haydn. Miss Patti Shurbet will also accompany.

Graduation Rites Set This Week For City Schools

Graduation exercises for 1,903 seniors in public high schools here will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

At 8 p.m. today, ceremonies will be held for graduating seniors of Estacado High School in Lubbock Municipal Auditorium and for Monterey High School in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

School in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, Dunbar High School in Lubbock Municipal Auditorium and Lubbock Evening High School in Wilson Junior High School auditorium.

Lubbock High School's seniors will have their graduation program at 8 p.m. Saturday in Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Monterey High School will graduate the most students with 660. Class sizes of the other schools are 581 for Coronado High School, 324 for Lubbock High School, 196 for Estacado High School, 113 for Dunbar High School and 29 for Lubbock Evening High School. The numbers include some students who will finish diploma requirements in July.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 25 cents to $1.25 a bale lower Wednesday.

Prices declined by selling influenced by continued improved weather for cotton planting, brokers said.

Warmth Belies Ullmann's International Status

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
SAN FRANCISCO (NEA) — The prim blonde sits next to the mayor's massive oak desk with a tentative smile on her face. Her hair is pinned back severely. She has no makeup on, not even eye shadow. She is dressed in a velvet maroon jacket and a modest gray skirt.

LIV ULLMANN

She is neat and well-scrubbed, and she could be a matron from Hillsboro who has come all the way from the Peninsula to have lunch at Trader Vic's. Actually, she is an international movie star.

Liv Ullmann has come all the way from Oslo, Norway, for this occasion, flying in the previous night and having dinner with the mayor in the wine cellar of Ernie's, a velvet-brocaded gourmet restaurant. And she will fly right back to Oslo the next morning.

With her, she will have the ceremonial key to the city, a replica of the key to Mission Dolores, which dates back to the first decade of the city's origin in the late 18th century. And the memory of a very special tribute by the San Francisco Film Festival, a Liv Ullmann Retrospective.

With the publication more than a year ago of "Changing," a book of personal, contemplative reflections about herself and the life around her, Liv Ullmann has emerged as more than a fleeting image on the silver screen. It gave character to the actress — beyond the nine films she made for Ingmar Bergman, by whom she had a daughter; beyond the dates with Henry Kissinger; beyond the nomadic commuting between continents.

It revealed her, at the age of 39, as six printings in hard cover and four printings in paperback — "was the best creative experience I have had because I could keep my integrity all the way through; for four years the time it took to write the book) I was doing my thing and not somebody else's thing."

Notes at a massive, staged conference are a splash of superficiality, but with the intelligence of an Ullmann and, yes, her kindness, they can be revealing.

What does she consider the best and worst of America?

"The violence and plastic is the worst. The generosity and warmth is the best."

Which is her main career, the movies or the stage?

"Obviously, because I'm Norwegian, the theater is my main career. There is little film-making there. It's very meaningful for me to go back to Norway and act in the theater there."

Next January, she will try the musical theater. She goes into rehearsal for a Broadway version of "I Remember Mama" with music by Richard Rodgers.

substantial, warm and, above all, human. She shows it now even in that most incommensurate of settings, a press conference in a politician's office, with the whirl of cameras and the click of questions.

"It's not because I'm here and polite," she says to them. "San Francisco is my favorite American city. It's human. The most like Norway. I mean it."

And you know she does. Just as she does when she says that writing "Changing" — which has gone through

"I have enormous fear," she says, her eyes luminous, but her tone of voice doesn't reflect it.

Her roles have tended to be somber or regal — how would she feel about playing a hooker?

"I will do any, as long as it's a woman telling a story about a woman, whether she is a hooker or a queen. I know less about hookers than queens." Pause. "I'm not great at queens either."

"Let me play the bad guy," interrupts Mayor George Moscone of San Francisco. He goes through the ceremonial process of giving her the key to the city. In return, Ms. Ullmann kisses the mayor.

"Don't ever ask me again," Moscone smiles broadly. "Why would anyone ever want to be mayor of San Francisco?"

As the throng straggles from his office, over against a wall, facing a camera, a guy holding a Channel 2 mike peals out in his best studio voice a lead-in to the interview: "If any member of the press hadn't already fallen in love with Miss Ullmann, they had a chance to catch up today."

She blushes.

That night, at the Palace of Fine Arts, built for the 1915 Pan American Exposition, she comes out on stage, after 90 minutes of Ullmann on screen in varying parts clipped from her movies. She is in a flowing, full length white dress, her face radiant and carefully highlighted with color, her hair let out and cascading over her shoulders.

She looks like a star.

She sits, primly again, facing her 2,500 fans as if they were in one gigantic living room, talking easily about herself. She first arrived in Hollywood when she came over to help in the promotion of "The Emigrants."

"Hollywood," she muses in near flawless English, "had seen my 'tragic face.'"

Then they saw I smile."

So they cast her in such turkeys as "Lost Horizon," which got the top echelon of Columbia Pictures fired, and "40 Carats" which did the same for the hierarchy at Warner Brothers.

"In Norway, it's a little shameful to be a success and happy," she says. "My failures in Hollywood helped me in Norway." She smiles wryly.

And she is not deterred. "People are isolated," she philosophizes. "They talk with doors between them. That's one of the things the movies or art does — remove those doors."

There is no barrier at all between Liv Ullmann and the people she addresses.

The second summer session is set for July 10-Aug. 16.

During the first term courses will be taught in art, auto mechanics, biology, business administration, chemistry, child development, drama, emergency medical technology, photography, physical education, physics, psychology, radio, reading, refrigeration and air conditioning, sociology, Spanish, speech, welding, medical lab technology, respiratory therapy, economics, government and history.

Summer classes will meet Mondays through Thursdays. The school will be closed on Fridays due to the summer four-day work-week schedule.

Students planning to attend Odessa College in the fall but not planning to attend summer school can obtain summer jobs on campus if they qualify for work-study guidelines. Norrie Bledsoe, director of financial aid, said.

Summer school students also are eligible to apply for work-study positions.

Mental Health Drive Underway

ROPEVILLE (Special) — Members of the Mental Health Association will collect funds for the organization in a house-to-house drive this month.

Ana Garcia, chairman of the Bellinger drive in this area, said the association is a non-profit, citizen activist organization dedicated to promoting mental health through education.

Bellinger marchers collecting in the Ropesville area are Hortencia Ochoa, Angie Martinez, Mrs. Gerald Parker, Peggy Foster, Mrs. Ronald Cole, L.C. Finley, Joe and Diana Corona, Mandi Flores and Tony Garcia.

Model For Perfume Ads More Than Pretty Face

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — You probably don't know the name, but you almost certainly know the face because it flashes on the television screen several times a night, week in and week out.

The face is that of the "Charlie Girl," a cosmetic firm's model who has sold oceans of perfume.

Her name is Shelley Hack. She is blonde, lithe and piquant. There is a will-o'-the-wisp quality about her that defies a hard and fast label.

In addition to her two-year run in the perfume commercials, Shelley has adorned magazine covers and high-fashion ads in ladies' magazines.

Shelley's story might be confused with that of Margaux Hemingway, Farrah Fawcett-Majors or Cheryl Tiegs — blonde, beautiful and astonishingly successful models who reaped fortunes from TV commercials.

But the resemblance ends there. Shelley is different.

To begin with she is not physically interchangeable with the others. While most models share a conventional, even-featured beauty, Shelley's face is arresting because of its imperfections.

She is myopic and wears rose-tinted, metal-framed spectacles. Her nose, while small and finely wrought, has a definite twist near the tip. Her mouth is generously large and expressive but certainly not sultry.

Her complexion is delicately fair and delightfully given to blush when she becomes self-conscious.

There are some other differences about Shelley. She is the eldest of six children of an affluent Greenwich, Conn., family and a graduate of prestigious Smith College. She also attended the University of Sydney (Australia) where she majored in archaeology.

Clearly, Shelley is anything but the typical pretty, vacuous cover girl. She lives in a Manhattan apartment, but her real home is a 224-acre farm in the mountains of central New York state, two hours drive from the city.

She is unmarried and reticent about discussing her private life and the man or men who occupy her thoughts and-or evenings.

There is a subtle, unique femininity about Shelley that attracted producer-director Joe Brooks the moment he saw her.

Brooks was interviewing actresses for the costarring role in his new movie, "If Ever I See You Again." He was searching for a new and interesting face to play the romantic lead in his contemporary drama.

Shelley had never acted in her life except for a two-line bit part in "Annie Hall." But Brooks, who had talked to scores of actresses — some of them stars — took one look at Ms. Hack and hired her on the spot.

Atypical of other models with acting aspirations, Shelley was prepared. She had been studying acting in New York for a couple of years.

"I'd enjoyed a certain amount of publicity and recognition as the 'Charlie Girl,'" Shelley said. "But it's easy to become the model of the month. I didn't want that. I began acting classes to be prepared if the opportunity came along."

"I was amazed at how quickly Joe made up his mind. I didn't read for the part or take a screen test. I walked in and he told the other people in the room that I was the girl he was looking for."

Brooks who wrote, directed and produced "You Light Up My Life," costars with Shelley in "If Ever I See You Again," for which he also wrote the music.

The suddenness of Shelley's ascent from model to movie star has left her neither breathless nor apprehensive.

"It remains to be seen whether I can act," she said serenely. "I'm waiting for the first reviews to come out."

"A period of time elapses after you complete a movie and before it goes into theaters. The film sort of disappears from your life and you become curious about what people will think of it."

"It's so private when you make a movie and then suddenly it becomes very public. I think I feel objective about how this picture turned out but I believe it was a good first film for me."

"My role was within my ability to handle it. I don't want people in the industry to think I came in as a little model who got a break. It's important for me now to do something entirely different in my next movie."

"Fortunately I have two more years to go with my Charlie contract. It gives me financial security. I won't have to take parts I don't want for economic reasons. And it's not a demanding job. Only 20 days work a year."

"The Charlie image is interesting because people recognize me and some actually chase me down the street. I would never recognize anyone from TV commercials. But evidently a great many people do."

New National Smoker Study:

Merit Scores High Marks On Five Key Points!

'Enriched Flavor' cigarette proven major alternative to high tar smoking—see results below

Can MERIT taste hold its own against leading high tar brands?

Does MERIT satisfy smokers over a long period—or are MERIT smokers slipping back to old high tar favorites?

Read the bottom-line results of new research conducted with smokers like yourself.

Research Confirms Breakthrough

Same Tune For Bears, Right Down To Rasp

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Doubtless, there are few persons that would view life as being grand if they were suffering with a sore, scratchy throat and a hoarse voice. For Mickey Sullivan, though, the affliction has acquired a pleasant meaning.

Almost precisely a year ago, Sullivan was unable to speak in a tone much louder than a whisper. The reason? Several days of shouting instructions and encouragement to his underdog Baylor baseball team, as it swept through the Southwest Conference Tournament and the South Central Regional Tourney to earn a spot in the College World Series.

Now, he is in the same predicament after the Bears executed the identical maneuver over the past two weekends.

"I hadn't had a sore throat since last year," Sullivan said Wednesday with a quite noticeable rasp. "It's hard to complain, though."

Indeed, for the second consecutive season, his Bears finished third in the SWC's regular-season race, but battled back in post-season action to gain a berth in the CWS. Prior to 1977, Baylor had never participated in the Omaha classic.

The outcome has been rather unexpected both years. This season, Sullivan had high hopes at the start, but injuries prevented the Bears from jelling until late in the campaign. Then, they won their last six league games—seven of their last nine, overall—and have won six straight times in post-season play.

"I thought before the season that we'd be playing for first place all year long," Sullivan said, "but injuries hurt us."

"I thought that we might have the best pitching staff in the country and two of the best arms in the nation in (Andy) Beene and (Jaime) Cocanower."

But tendonitis, which has troubled Beene since his sophomore year, prevented him from being effective in 1978, and Cocanower has not been consistent, posting a 4-5 mark. The staff has a mediocre 3.98 earned-run average.

"We could never establish a consistent rotation," Sullivan said.

Baylor remained alive in the SWC race, but lost two of three games to Texas in early April for perhaps the low point of the season. Then, the Bruins rallied.

"After the Texas series, almost everybody got well, and that made a big difference."

Despite the loss of Sammy Bickham to transfer, Sullivan felt that pitching was the commodity that could propel the Bears back to Omaha, but it has been hitting, instead. Baylor is batting .300 as a team for the season and .307 in conference play. Both are the best marks in the league.

Six Bears batted over .300 in SWC action—outfielder-pitcher Shane Nolen (.374), pitcher-outfielder Burl Coker (.346), first baseman Luke Prestridge and designated hitter Mike Johanson (.310 each), catcher Kenny Kolkhorst (.318) and shortstop Manuel Ordonez (.310).

Sullivan, however, is concerned about his team's hitting as the June 2 start of the CWS nears. The Bruins rapped a great deal of hits in three games at the regional tournament in Arlington last weekend, but left too many runners on base.

WAVING GOODBYE?—Perhaps, but to the rest of the SWC. Baylor coach Mickey Sullivan gives signals from the third-base coaching box during the Baylor-Texas Tech series during the 1978 season. His Bears are the SWC's representative to the College World Series for the second straight year. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis)

Nolen pitched a 3-0 shutout against Mississippi State in the opener. In the second game versus Pan American, the Bears left 18 men on base and had to go into extra innings to win 3-2. In the finale against MSU, they left 14 men stranded in a 6-3 triumph.

"We hit .305 in the three games, but didn't get the big hits," Sullivan said. "Pitching and defense won it for us. Our defense has really come on in the last couple of months."

Yes, pitching, despite the fact that lefthander Coker, the team's top hurler with a 9-2 record and a 1.64 earned-run average, chipped a bone in his pitching arm in the SWC Tournament and will see action in Omaha only as a designated hitter, if at all.

In 28 innings in Arlington, Baylor pitchers gave up only two earned runs and just 11 hits—three of the infield variety and none for extra bases.

"That's a pitcher's ballpark, though," Sullivan admitted, "and, to be realistic, none of the other three teams in the tournament (Louisiana Tech was the other entry) were strong-hitting clubs. They had won on pitching, defense and speed."

"Their team averages were good, but they didn't have many guys that could hit the ball out of the park. I'd say that there were three or four teams in the SWC that were better with the bat than they were."

Pitching and defense must come through again for Baylor to do well at Omaha this year. A year ago, the Bears lost their first two games by one run apiece and were eliminated.

With Coker out of the rotation, Cocanower and Nolen must be effective, as must juniors Mike Roberts and Jon Perlman. The latter three were relievers much of the year until necessity forced them into the starting rotation. Perlman threw a three-hitter through nine innings against Pan American.

True, the Bears can hit, but Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium is a large, pitcher's park, and the good pitching at that level of competition will slow the Baylor batters down somewhat.

"We'll miss Coker, especially since he had pitched in the College World Series last year," Sullivan said. "He was our stopper. He had eight of our 15 conference wins."

"We'll just have to find some more pitching and hit better with men on base."

"Still, I think having been to the CWS last year will help us a bit. That tourney experience always helps. We were the only team at Arlington with recent tourney experience."

This is Sullivan's fifth year as Baylor head coach, and, when he took over, he

Reeves Shines As MHS Rips Andress 16-4

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

EL PASO—By the middle of the fifth inning, Monterey made this contest boring enough for most fans to lean back and take a long siesta.

The Plainsmen owned a 10-run lead, as they cruised toward a 16-4 whipping of El Paso Andress in the regional baseball playoff opener Wednesday. And, unless the Monterey gang enjoys Old Mexico too much, it should have little trouble reaching the Class AAAA quarterfinal round next week.

Before clinching that bid, though, the Plainsmen must win either Friday or Saturday in Lowrey Field. The Friday game will begin at 4 p.m., and the Saturday game, if necessary, will start at 1 p.m.

By the fifth frame, the Plainsmen could have played the rest of the game in caps and gowns, which 10 players will be wearing tonight in graduation ceremonies. They scored at least once in every inning and five times in the fifth and sixth innings.

In the bottom of the sixth, two ladies in the stands commenced on one of the loudest and most amusing arguments imaginable. They probably provided the most excitement of the afternoon. Or maybe the most exciting thing was the public-address announcer, who repeatedly yelled "We want a hit" after Andress trailed by 15 runs.

At that point, the Eagles obliged their cheerleader with five straight hits and four runs to avoid the shutout. It was the only time in the game when Monterey senior pitcher Ron Reeves lacked total control. The MHS hurler struck out 14 batters and never allowed a runner past first base until the sixth inning.

But, your a team has a 15-run lead, it's easier to commit a few errors in your pitching techniques.

"I kept looking toward the dugout because I was trying to find out what I was doing wrong," Reeves said in describing his brief slump. "It seemed like I was just falling off the mound."

Irwin Pegged Silent Threat

ATLANTA (AP) — Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player are the top attractions, but a quietly intense Hale Irwin could be the man to beat in the $200,000 Atlanta Classic.

"You like to feel you can win any tournament you play," Irwin said.

"In a situation like this, however, you come in knowing you can win. That's not to say you will win. But you know you can. And that is important."

Irwin, firmly entrenched as one of golf's leading performers, goes into today's start of this event unbeaten in his last two starts over the difficult, leg-straining, confidence-testing, 6,883 yard Atlanta Country Club course, probably the hilliest layout the touring pros play all season.

Reeves returns to the mound if Monterey needs a third game Saturday. Derek Hatfield (12-3) will pitch Friday's game for MHS against Donnie Hunter (5-2).

Hunter must hope for better pitching luck than Andress starter Sam Cordero experienced Wednesday.

The Eagles committed six errors behind their hard-throwing righthander. One miscue led to Monterey's long first-inning run; two more errors produced a single run in the third; and another bobble opened the gates for five unearned runs in the fifth.

Cordero's control problems created immediate difficulty at the start of the game when Andy Barron and Mike Wooten drew free passes. Then, Jeff Harp slapped a routine grounder that eluded shortstop Hunter, long enough for the speedy Barron to score from second base.

Another walk helped MHS score in the second frame. Mike Craig drew a base on balls, and Barron lined a high pitch down the third-base line for an RBI.

Harp opened the third by poking a fast ball into right field for a single. The Monterey catcher stole second, went to third when the Andress catcher threw the ball into center field and scored when the centerfielder booted the catcher's errant throw.

In the fourth, Wooten's two-out, two-run single chased home Phil Bruedigam and Craig. Each of the runners had singled.

Another error by Hunter paved the way in the fifth inning when the shortstop booted Ricky Pinkerton's grounder with two outs and the bases loaded. Dana Rieger and Reeves scored on the play before Barron's single to left field drove in Craig.

Wooten topped the rally off with a looping two-run single to left, as Pinkerton and Barron scored.

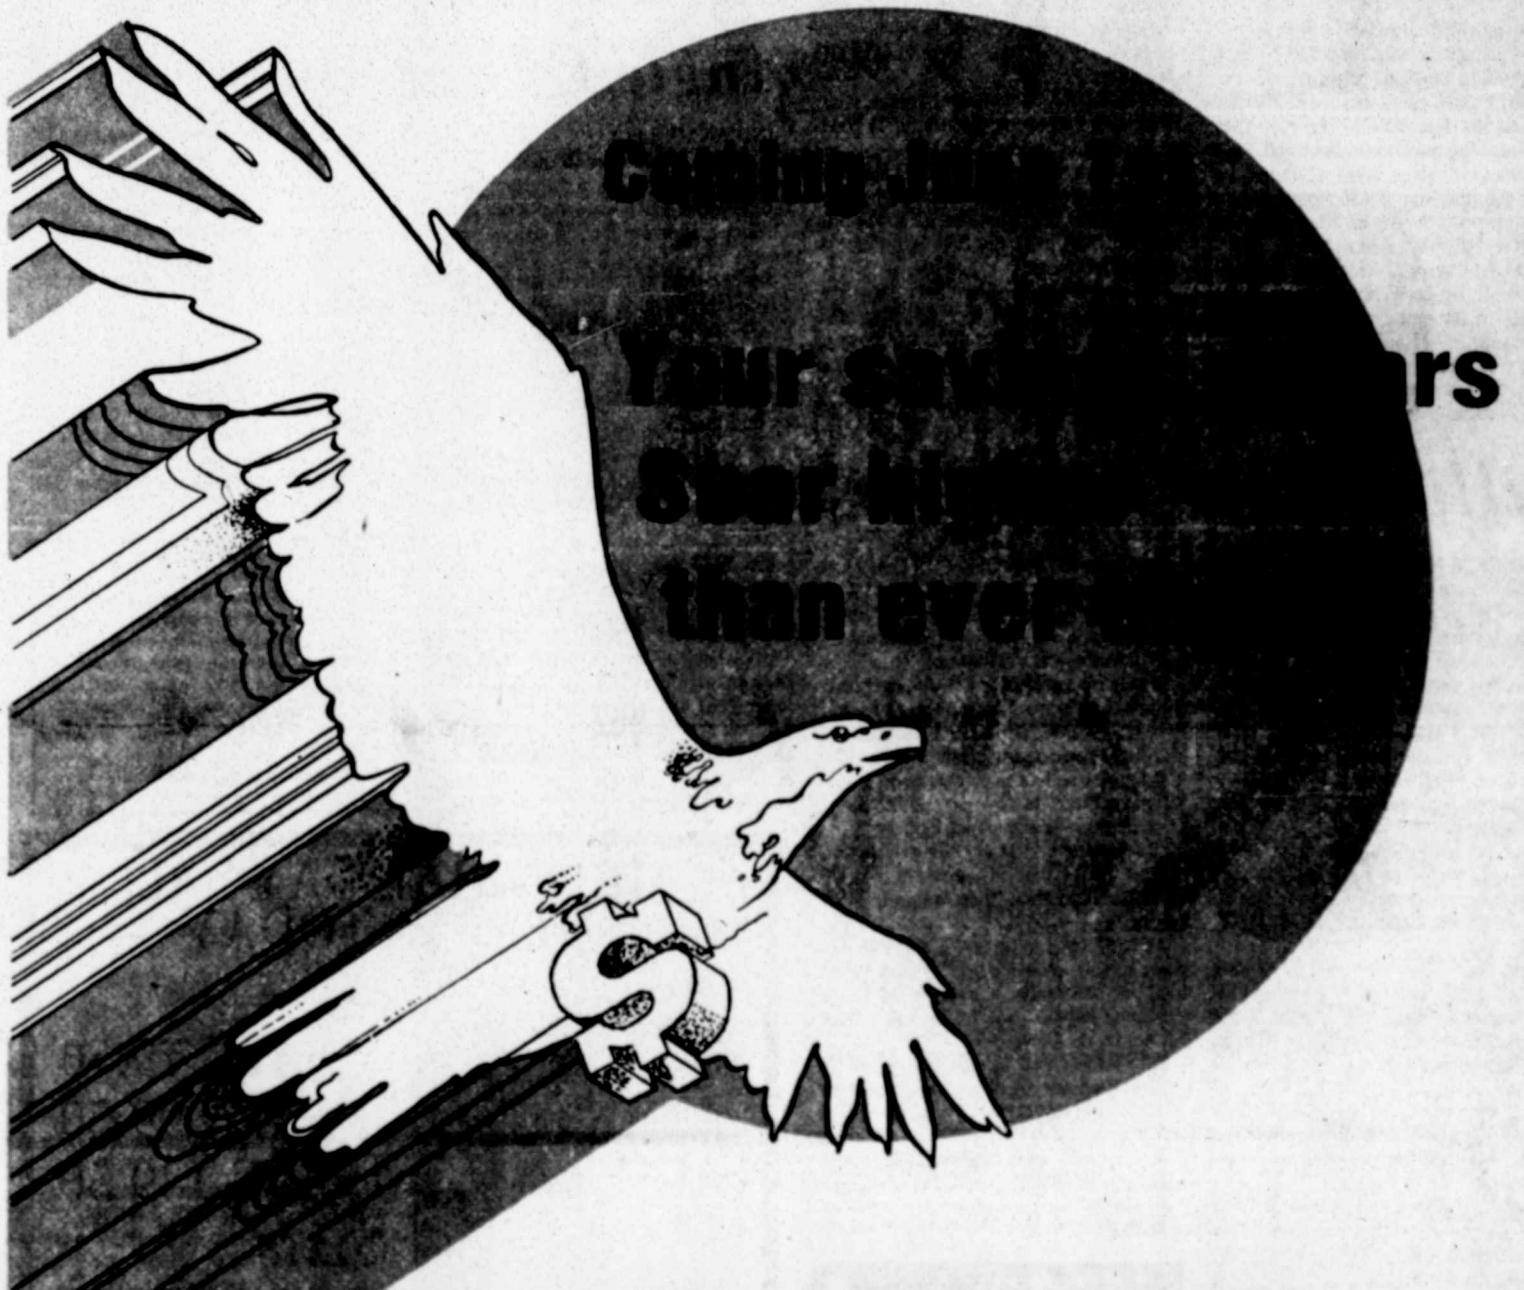

An error, a run-scoring single by Bruedigam and a three-run triple to left-center by Harp did the damage in the sixth before Craig drove home the game's final run in the last inning.

"I don't look for any letdown on Friday," Monterey coach Bobby Moegle said afterward.

Two-run doubles by Hunter and Jim Crisp accounted for the Andress runs in the sixth.

Who Will Call For Start?

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tony Hulman won't be around this year to say "Gentlemen, start your engines," and that's creating some confusion at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

With four days remaining before the 62nd Indianapolis 500-Mile Race, no one seems to know who will call for the start of this year's race. But nearly everyone has a theory.

Hulman, who owned the speedway for 32 years before his death last October, signalled the start of 22 Indy 500s, taking over the job after former track president Wilbur Shaw died in 1954.

The tradition traces back to 1946. In 31 years, the simple, four-word script changed only once — when Janet Guthrie became the first woman to qualify for the 1977 race.

"Last year, with Janet in the race, it was a great secret, too," says Don Foltz, a long-time Hulman associate. "No one knew until he said it how Tony was going to announce the race."

After much speculation — and several rumors — Hulman upped his intro to 15 words, recalls Foltz, who keeps the hand-written script in his desk drawer.

Foltz pushes his yellow cap back on his forehead, clears his throat and intones: "In company with the first lady ever to qualify at Indianapolis, gentlemen, start your engines."

Since Janet Guthrie will again be the field of 33 drivers starting this year's race, rumor has it the speedway will simply play a tape recording of last year's announcement.

But rumor also has it that Tony Hulman George, Hulman's grandson, will signal the start of the race.

Some think that speedway president Joseph Cloutier will carry on the tradition, and others are betting on Hulman's daughter, Mari.

One popular rumor calls for Hulman's widow, Mary, to start the race.

"That one was big before Janet qualified again this year. The story was Mrs. Hulman wouldn't mind starting the race if she could say it simply.

"But with Janet in the race, that complicates the announcement somewhat. So that rumor doesn't seem to be so popular now," Foltz says.

"We'll have someone here to do it, that much I'm sure of," says speedway vice president Al Bloemker, running his hands through thinning gray hair.

"But there are certain questions you just don't ask, and if you do, it's a tradition that you don't get an answer."

So far, Bloemker estimates that hundreds of Hoosiers have broken with tradition and asked the question. "But they didn't get an answer, either."

Bloemker, who has heard the start of more than 30 Indy 500s, says he's "not even speculating" about who will take the microphone Sunday.

Foltz admits to some personal curiosity.

"But who shall say it is known only to God — and two or three other people."

Indy Safety Measures Helpful

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A crash in the Indianapolis 500 used to mean almost certain injury and frequent death.

But not any more.

Following the tragic 1973 race, in which drivers Art Pollard and Swede Savage and crewman Armando Teran were killed and a score of spectators injured, the U.S. Auto Club and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway took measures which have greatly improved safety.

"There have been 61 deaths at the Speedway since it opened in 1909, including 37 drivers, but there have been no deaths and very few serious injuries since 1973.

The first thing USAC did after the 1973 race, which had to be restarted because of a flaming crash on the first lap that knocked out 12 cars, was move the fuel tanks to the left side of the race cars, away from the track's concrete wall.

Breakaway valves were installed between the fuel line and the tank and engine, to prevent fuel from sloshing out on impact and possibly catching fire.

The size of aerofoil wings was reduced, and USAC ordered installation of the "popoff" valve on all cars to limit manifold pressure and thus engine power.

And it worked, although speeds, that were nearing 200 miles per hour, dropped about 10 miles per hour the next year because of the technical restrictions. But there were no fatal crashes.

Last year, USAC eased up on its regulation on manifold pressure, and a complete resurfacing of the 2½-mile track, along with great improvements in tires, engines and chassis designs, increased the speeds dramatically.

Tom Sneva won the pole position last year at a then-record 198.884 mph. This year, he captured the pole again and broke his own record with a 202.156 average. Ironically, the last serious crash at the speedway was by Sneva in 1975.

This year, there were no more than a handful of spins or crashes during practice and qualifications, and all of the drivers involved walked away relatively unshaken.

Sneva, Danny Ongais and rookie Rick Mears will line up on the first of 11 runs for the start of Sunday's race.

The only crash in last year's race was by veteran driver Lloyd Ruby, who was unhurt. Ruby could not line up a ride this year and will miss his first 500 after 18 consecutive starts.

Sneva's younger brother, Jerry, was the rookie of the year last year, finishing 10th in the race. This year, he was the slowest qualifier after lining up his ride at the last minute.

Three of the previous four rookies of the year, however, did not make the starting field, and a fifth, Mike Hiss, will have to relinquish the car he qualified to Mario Andretti.

Hiss, the 1972 rookie of the year, stepped into Andretti's racer for qualifications because the former Indy champ was in the Belgian Grand Prix. Hiss qualified at more than 194 mph, but Andretti will drive it in the race.

Australian Vern Schuppan, the 1976 rookie of the year, was to have driven the backup car for Pancho Carter, the top rookie in 1974. But after Carter's car failed to start during qualifications last Saturday, his crew had to take some parts from Schuppan's car to enable him to qualify on Sunday.

"Because of the rain delays, it became impossible to qualify both cars on the same weekend," a team spokesman said.

Bill Puterbaugh, the 1975 rookie of the year, did not have a ride this year, and Graham McRae, who won the award in 1973, qualified but was bumped from the field.

The twin, 175-horsepower engines that push the blimp at about 40 miles per hour admittedly are no threat to Sneva's track records, but the two-time Indy pole position winner described his ride as perfect.

"It's not quite as fast, but you have to respect it," laughed the bespectacled former school principal.

Sneva, who will lead the lineup of 33 cars in Sunday's Indy 500, took over the controls of the blimp as it approached the mammoth Speedway grounds on a short flight from Indianapolis International Airport. However, as pilot Don Ploskunak stepped to the rear, Sneva called back. "Don't go too far."

Sneva Tries Different Angle Of Speedway

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Sneva, the fastest driver ever to qualify for the Indianapolis 500, took a different look at the familiar Speedway on Wednesday, turning a slow lap from 1,000 feet overhead.

Sneva, who has mastered the relatively small four-wheeled racers that hug the ground at speeds over 200 miles per hour, took his first ride in the giant Goodyear blimp. The first thing he wanted to know was "What kind of motors do you have on this thing?"

The Wolf Pak, an amalgam of two semi-pro teams that played in this area last season, opens its season July 1 against the Scranton, Pa., Stars at nearby Valley High School stadium, which seats 10,000.

The Wolf Pak will play 10 regular season games in a league that also the Connecticut Sea Raiders and four New York teams: the Buffalo Geminis, the Rochester Mustangs, the Syracuse Bisons, and the Binghamton Jets.

Gilliam To Try Football Again

SPRINGDALE, Pa. (AP) — Quarterback Joe Gilliam, yearning for a return to the bigtime, signed Wednesday with the Pittsburgh Wolf Pak of the new Atlantic Football Conference.

"I consider myself a better athlete now than when I played for the Steelers," Gilliam said at a press conference in this community, just up the Allegheny River from Three Rivers Stadium, where he once flashed brilliance with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We're tickled pink to have him," said Wolf Pak President, R.J. Baker, also head of North American Fencing Corp., which is backing the team with its advertising budget.

Baker and Gilliam declined to discuss financial terms. They said only that Gilliam would receive an equal gate share with other players and also be paid extra for promotions work with the fencing company.

The 27-year-old Gilliam's personal battles with drug use and his fall from the National Football League have been well chronicled.

He said he views the Wolf Pak as a chance to prove he still has the talent that made him a Steeler starter for a few weeks during the 1974 season.

An option in his Wolf Pak contract would allow Gilliam to sign with an NFL team at any time. Gilliam and Baker said.

"I put my life in the hands of God some time ago, and He hasn't failed me," said Gilliam, attired in a blue sport coat and slacks, a colorful shirt accented by neck jewelry, and white shoes.

During his period of admitted drug use, Gilliam was waived by the Steelers and the New Orleans Saints. He later went into a drug rehabilitation program.

"I know I've had problems and I know I'll have them again," he said, "but I know drugs won't be one of them."

"Drugs is the kind of thing where you can get all the help in the world, but it's up to the individual. If he wants to stop, he can."

Gilliam recently made a surprise appearance at a free-agent tryout camp held by the Dallas Cowboys in Texas Stadium. He has not been approached further by the Cowboys.

"I wouldn't call it encouragement at Dallas. I wouldn't call it discouragement either," said the former Tennessee State star.

"I'm not putting a time limit on getting back into the NFL, but I'm delighted to get back in football and get another shot at the NFL."

Surprise Rocks A's As Winkles Departs

OAKLAND (AP) — Up until the strange end of his term as Oakland A's manager, Bobby Winkles showed no signs of cracking under the pressure of working for Charlie Finley.

Then, as coach Red Schoendienst said in the wake of Winkles' unexpected resignation, "He said he had just about enough. I didn't want to ask any questions about what he meant by that."

And Winkles, who walked out before Tuesday night's game against Milwaukee, could not be found to answer questions from anybody else.

Jack McKeon, back in the managing job he lost when Finley fired him last June 10, said he and the other coaches noticed a change in the usually cheerful Winkles when they reported to the Oakland Coliseum Tuesday night.

"We thought he was going to do something, just from the way he was talking," said McKeon, whose second time around as Finley's manager began with a 3-2 loss to the Brewers that cut the surprising A's lead in the American League West to one game.

What the 48-year-old Winkles did was phone Finley in Chicago and tell him he was resigning because, according to the surprised owner, "He did not think I was satisfied with the manner in which he was managing the team."

Relief pitcher Bob Lacey said the players noticed that Winkles was not in uniform and had been on the telephone.

"We knew something was up. But I thought he was probably just talking to Charlie about getting another pitcher, since Joe Coleman was sold to Toronto Monday," Lacey said.

"I thought maybe we were going to move to Denver after all," said third baseman Wayne Gross.

Then, about 20 minutes before game-time, A's Traveling Secretary Bobby Hofman came around with printed press releases, that went to the players before the press saw them.

"It had the magnitude of learning that your pet dog had been run over," said Dave Heaverlo. "Everyone was totally surprised."

Finley admitted, "I was on him continually to play more aggressive baseball."

The owner also said he'd chewed out Winkles after he was unable to reach him Monday, an off-day, to talk about the sale of Coleman and a proposed deal for another pitcher, but Finley added he'd assured Winkles he had done "an outstanding job."

Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger said, "I'm sure Bobby had just had enough of Finley."

"But why didn't he just tell him off and get himself fired? It doesn't make sense."

"I guess sometimes you can just get so discouraged that you do things without thinking."

Super Soccer Adds Atlanta Franchise

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta will have a team in the new professional indoor Super Soccer League that opens this summer, it was announced Wednesday by franchise owners Bill Putnam of Atlanta and Robert R. Williams of Mobile, Ala.

Putnam said the league will hold its inaugural draft in New York next Wednesday to stock its 11 charter franchises. Each team will select players from a pool of players, mostly American college players with some foreign talent available.

Charter franchises along with Atlanta, the owners said, will include Miami, Shreveport, New York, Birmingham, Providence, Washington, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles and San Francisco. Other teams may be added.

STILL LOVED IN CHICAGO—Philadelphia Phillies outfielder Jose Cardenal signs autographs for his Chicago fans at Wrigley Field Wednesday. Cardenal, formerly of the Chicago Cubs, is idolized by his fans, but his memory of the way he was treated under the Cubs' new management last year isn't a happy one. (AP Laserphoto)

Cardenal Awaits Chicago Cheers

CHICAGO (AP) — Jose Cardenal, idolized by fans but driven out of Chicago by management, is back home and waiting to hear the cheers from the bleachers again.

But he has no desire to relive the way he was treated last year by the Cubs' new braintrust of general manager Bob Kennedy and manager Herman Franks.

"Last year I had a reason to be upset because before Herman and Kennedy came I was playing every day and I was a successful ballplayer and they put me in the doghouse for no reason," said Cardenal.

"I don't have hard feelings against Herman and Kennedy. But the way they treated me was lousy."

Cardenal is in Chicago with the Philadelphia Phillies, who wind up a series with the Cubs Friday. He was traded Oct. 26 for pitcher Manny Seoane, now in the minor leagues.

After last season, Cardenal said, he and his lawyer told Kennedy he wanted to be traded to Pittsburgh or Philadelphia. As a 10-year veteran who spent five years with the Cubs, he could veto any deal.

"I wanted to stay in the East Division so I could come home three times a year instead of two," said Cardenal, who lives in suburban Northbrook. "To me it's like coming to any ballpark. The only difference is I have a home here and people are here to cheer for me."

The 34-year-old outfielder, now with his seventh major league team, said he enjoys the loose attitude of the wisecracking Phillies and the communication between the front office and the players, both of which were missing on the Cubs.

"When I went to spring training (coach) Tony Taylor told me 'don't get afraid. This is just the way they are. They're loose,'" Cardenal said with a grin. "Sometimes they call me 'grand-pap. You played with Lou Gehrig. You're really doing a good job for your age.' They say I'm 46."

Cardenal hasn't played much with the talent-laden Phillies. Heading into Wednesday's game, he'd played 12 games and was batting .360 on nine hits for 25 at bats.

"He's played left, right and first base for us. He's been super. He's become one of the guys," said Phillies Manager Danny Ozark. "He wants to play. I play him as often as I can. He doesn't gripe when he doesn't play."

Cardenal had been bitter about not playing last year. After five seasons in which he had never batted less than 291 or had fewer than 500 at bats, he hit just 239 on 226 trips to the plate.

"I'm very happy here. I know I can play here but I came into a new team and they already had a ballclub," he said.

"When the season is over and if we win at least I come out with $30,000 in my pocket."

Name Confusion Plagues Cincinnati's Collins

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Collins has an identity problem, but there are few people who don't recognize him as one of the fastest players in baseball.

"Every day, at least once, someone calls me Doug Collins," lamented the Cincinnati Reds' utilityman, whose name is often confused with that of the basketball star for the Philadelphia 76ers.

Collins has had a chance to become better known to Reds' fans this week while starting in place of Cesar Geronimo, who is sidelined with a sore right shoulder.

NHL's Barons Ink Wisconsin Star

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — The Cleveland Barons' newest acquisition, collegiate ace Mike Eaves, was given an enthusiastic introduction Wednesday by Barons' General Manager Harry Howell.

In announcing the signing of the University of Wisconsin star to a National Hockey League contract, Howell called him "a leader, a quality person and a winner — three ingredients we are looking for to build this team around."

And the 5-foot-10, 180-pound Eaves said that although "the transition from college to pros will be tough physically and mentally...I know I can play immediately."

However, Eaves said he is going to have to condition himself to be tougher "and not be intimidated by NHL defencemen. Sometimes you have to fight," he said, adding that this would be a new experience.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Eaves, who led the Wisconsin Badgers to an NCAA hockey title in 1977, had been drafted by the St. Louis Blues of the NHL in 1976.

But he said he was glad he was switched to Cleveland. The Barons traded veteran defenceman Len Frig to St. Louis last summer for the rights to Eaves.

"It kind of gave me life. I had heard nothing from St. Louis. Cleveland kept in contact with me all year."

He said he had been contacted also by two World Hockey Association teams, but "there was never any doubt I wanted to play in the NHL."

Eaves, 21, graduates from Wisconsin Saturday.

Collins also has appeared in more games than the other pinch hitters on the Reds, playing in 27 of the National League team's first 41 games.

His speed on the bases has helped him gain attention from both the fans and Reds' management.

He has run the 100-yard dash in 9.6 seconds and has proven he can steal bases. He came into this season with 81 stolen bases in 312 big league games.

With the California Angels in 1976, he stole 32 in 99 games.

It was the Reds who first discovered Collins in 1970, when he was just getting out of high school in Rapid City, S.D.

Collins didn't play baseball in high school, but he was all-state in football, basketball and track.

His school didn't have a baseball team, but he played American Legion ball and impressed Bill Clark, a Reds' scout.

Collins was drafted 23rd in the free agent draft, but didn't sign, although he said he had a good offer from the Reds.

"I wanted to go to school. I wanted to play other sports. I couldn't see myself just playing baseball," he said.

He went to Mesa, Ariz., Junior College and lasted a year before signing to play professional baseball.

Last year, he played with the Seattle Mariners of the American League and appeared in 120 games, batting .239.

Collins admits he was surprised by the off-season trade which brought him to Cincinnati in exchange for pitching prospect Shane Rawley.

"They had their starting eight set," Collins said. "But they told me they would use me some against left-handers and that I would get some playing time."

of Sweden again conceded a first set before overcoming an unheralded opponent.

Wimbledon champion Borg, trying to shake off the effect of a 10-day layoff, spotted the first set to Frenchman Eric Deblicker, 5-7, the last point being a rare double-fault for the normally accurate Swede.

But the 21-year-old Borg then overwhelmed Deblicker in the center court before a crowd of over 5,000, taking the second set 6-2 and then blanking the Frenchman 6-0.

The American seeds — Brian Gottfried, Eddie Dibbs, Roscoe Tanner, Harold Solomon, Arthur Ashe and Hank Pfister — all had a field day as did unranked U.S. giant-killer Victor Amaya.

Amaya, the 23-year-old Holland, Mich., resident who eliminated seventh-ranked national hero Corrado Barazzutti Tuesday, won over Colombia's Ivan Molina 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

As with Borg, the 32-year-old Ashe, attempting a comeback after a season off with foot surgery, faced a Frenchman, Christoph Roger-Vasselin. The Frenchman fought hard but at the end bowed to the experience of the former Wimbledon champion.

Ashe ranked 14th, won the first set 7-6, after bouncing back from a 5-6 deficit. In the second, he made up for his rustiness with well-timed shots to the net and breezed through 6-2.

Third-seeded Gottfried also found no opposition in Australia's Colin Dibley, triumphing 6-1, 6-3. No. 4 Dibbs crushed Argentine hopeful Jose Clerc 6-1, 6-3.

Pfister, ranked 16th, easily disposed of Paul McNamee of Australia 6-3, 6-3.

The 24-year-old Pfister now sets his sight on local standout Adriano Panatta, unranked but a surprise winner over second-seeded American Vitas Gerulaitis in the first round.

"I'm ready for him," Pfister said. "I'll be after him despite his home court."

Eighth-ranked Solomon and ninth-seeded Tanner both struggled, but overcame fighting opponents.

The 25-year-old Solomon relied on his wicked two-handed back-hand in a two-hour thriller over rising Paraguayan Victor Pecci 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 while Tanner eliminated Czech Jiri Granat 6-2, 7-6.

Among the women, top-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia ousted Leslie Hunt of Australia 6-1, 6-2 while second-seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania struggled in overcoming compatriot Mariana Simionescu 7-5, 7-6 in the quarter-finals.

The two are center forward Gerry Ingram, who has appeared in all 11 games of the Sockers, scoring six goals, and reserve winger Doug Wark, 26.

Same Song: Losers Knock Refs

BOSTON (AP) — It has become standard operating procedure for the losing team to complain about the officiating in the National Hockey League's final playoff series. Boston Coach Don Cherry griped loud and long after Bruins' losses to the Canadiens at Montreal in games one and five, while Coach Scotty Bowman was graphic in his displeasure after losing game No. 4 in Boston.

The major achievement of the post-game rages has been to distract observers from the fact that the losing team didn't play well enough to win — regardless of the officiating. That certainly was the case in Game 5 Tuesday night, when the Canadiens totally shut down the Boston offense on the way to the 4-1 triumph that brought Montreal within a victory of their 20th Stanley Cup title.

"It just wrecked a good game," said Boston right wing Bobby Schumatz, referring to the officiating of referee Dave Newell, and not to the Bruins' inability to penetrate the Montreal defense.

"Don't tell me the officials didn't control who won," added an openly incensed Brad Park.

There was more of the same from Cherry. Boston General Manager Harry Sinden, and a number of other Bruins employees. But it didn't change the score, and it didn't change the fact that some time Thursday, the Stanley Cup will arrive at Boston Garden for possible presentation to the Canadiens.

"We have something to win — that's all the incentive we need," said Montreal defenseman Larry Robinson, who contributed an excellent effort, including the game's opening goal, to the Canadiens' triumph Tuesday night.

"The later it gets in a series, the fifth, sixth or seventh game, the harder it gets. Your time is cut down. If you lose the first game, you say, 'Well, they've still got to win three more.' If you lose the second, you say, 'They've still got to win two more,' and so on.

RAINOUT RESET

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves said Tuesday their May 7 rainout with the Houston Astros will be rescheduled as a single game for Thursday, Aug. 3, at 6:35 p.m. in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"But when you lose the fifth game, you're just about out of time," said Robinson.

So the Bruins have 60 minutes left, at their home arena, to force a deciding seventh game, or this longest of hockey seasons will be history by Friday.

"We'll beat them Thursday. You can count on that," said Cherry, still frazzled by the 106 minutes in penalties—62 of them to his Bruins—in the fifth game which gave Montreal a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven set.

The coach has reason for confidence, since Boston has not yet lost at home in seven playoff games and used the smaller ice surface to contain the Canadiens in Games 3 and 4.

"But when they make a mistake, we'll be there to pounce on it," insists Robinson. "We're playing for the Stanley Cup. That's all anybody needs to remember."

"The team that wins over the course of the year has to play all kinds of different styles," said Montreal left wing Steve Shutt. "You have to win with one style for Boston, one for Minnesota and so on."

Should the Canadiens find the answer in Game 6 here, they'll own the Cup for the third consecutive time.

Rick casting without ThumBar

Rick casting with ThumBar

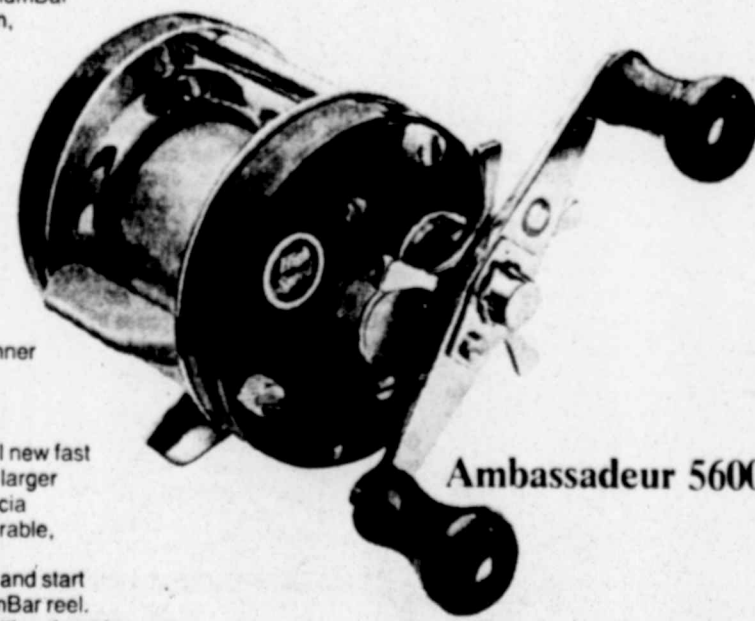

Ambassadeur's exclusive "fast-cast" ThumBar is the most revolutionary advance in baitcasting in years. Designed to give perfect control, ThumBar shifts into free spool with one silk-smooth touch of your thumb. Then, because ThumBar is located directly beneath your thumb, you're automatically in position to control the spool before, during and after your cast. And ThumBar's spool can never disengage or trip accidentally while cranking in line or playing a fish.

ThumBar gives you more casts in an average day, too. And that can mean more fish by the end of the day. Because the more time your lure spends in the water, the better your chances are of catching fish. And the easy-to-palm ThumBar makes handling a pleasure, all day long. Every ThumBar comes with classic Garcia Ambassadeur features such as:

- Dual braking systems for greater freedom from backlash
- Power precision gearing and stainless steel ball bearings
- High-speed 4.7 to 1 gear ratios for greater ease when buzzing spinner baits
- And power handles, standard on all models

One hand. One motion. One complete cast. It's that simple. Garcia's ThumBar reel is available in three versatile sizes. The all new fast retrieve, narrow spool 4600C, classic standard size 5600C and the larger 6600C. All have the same built-in quality that's made the name Garcia Ambassadeur the one you can trust whenever you're looking for durable, dependable tackle.

So join two time B.A.S.S. Master Classic Champion Rick Clunn, and start trusting all your catches to a Garcia Ambassadeur "fast-cast" ThumBar reel. # Work, Not Tennis Proves Important To Cuban Netter

HAVANA (AP) — Twenty years ago, Orlando Garrido was an international tennis champion. He played, and often won, against such tennis greats as Pancho Gonzalez, Lew Hoad, Tony Trabert, Vic Seixas.

Today, the University of Miami graduate is still a weekend tennis player — whenever it doesn't take too much time away from his job as a scientist with the Fidel Castro government.

Garrido, now 47, has won international acclaim for his discoveries of a number of new species of birds and snakes while working as a zoologist at the Cuban Academy of Sciences.

His work is his passion now, he says, just like tennis used to be a generation ago. "I think of those days with great fondness," Garrido told a visiting American reporter over a Cuban "mojito" cocktail recently. "I spent 10 years on the international circuit starting when I was still a student at the University of Miami from 1952 to 1956."

Garrido won 48 international tennis titles over that span and has acquired 49 Cuban national championship trophies from the time he began playing in his teens.

He and Ecuadorean net star Pancho Segura were at the Miami school at the same time. But Segura was a few years older and by then was concentrating on the tennis circuit while Garrido was earning his scholarship by playing with the school's very successful tennis teams of the early 1950s.

"We once established the longest record of matches won by any team in any sport," Garrido says of his university days. "It was a great time."

"On the circuit, I started traveling all over the world, played at Wimbledon, in France, Italy, several Latin American countries and all over the U.S. I won a lot of tournaments but not much money."

Those were the days when most tennis players were considered amateurs even though they received money under the table and for travel and "expenses."

The thin but wiry Garrido says he's very happy with his job. He rejected all notions of leaving his homeland during the early years of the Cuban revolution.

His mother lives in Miami. His brother,

Ray Garrido, was a well-known jai-alai player in the Tampa, Fla., area for years and is now a tennis pro at a club in upper New York state.

"I've got all I want right here," Garrido says. "I don't have much in my pockets. I've made a reputation internationally as a scientist, but that hasn't put any more money in my wallet."

"Still, I would rather be here than anywhere else," says the intense, personable Garrido. "I have important duties here and certain prestige. I probably would not have these anywhere else. Cuba is my home."

And Garrido still plays a good game of tennis.

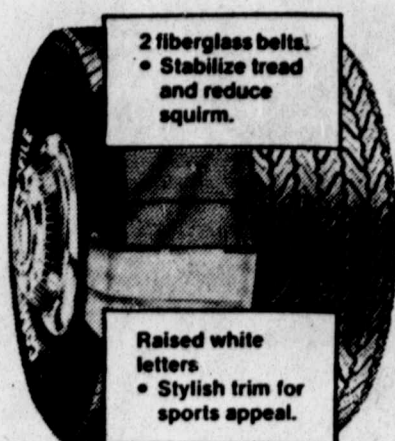

Whenever he isn't trekking through the Zapata Swamp in search of new species of snakes, birds or animals, he's on the courts of the old Vedado Tennis Club.

ment to Texas, and now it is losing one of its players to the Longhorns.

Freshman Ken Montgomery, a 6-foot-6 sub who was the No. 2 career scorer in Indianapolis high school history, is transferring to Texas and will be eligible for the 1979-80 season.

He played briefly at the end of the Wolfpack's 101-93 loss to Texas in the NIT championship at Madison Square Garden and missed two free throws.

Montgomery's transfer parallels that of Texas scoring leader Jim Krivacs, who switched from Auburn three years ago. Montgomery also is a close friend of Krivacs and was the best man at his wedding.

Krivacs, however, said he did not put a hard sell on Montgomery. "He listened to what I had to say but I wanted him to make his own decision," said Krivacs.

Krivacs will be a senior next season, but since Montgomery must sit out a year they will not get a chance to play together.

Montgomery visited here a year ago. "I just thought the future wasn't there (at North Carolina State) and I wasn't going to get to play," Montgomery told the Austin American-Statesman.

Montgomery broke Oscar Robertson's high school career scoring record with 1,926 points in 94 games but fell 153 points short of George McGinnis' Indianapolis-area record for 94 games.

Playing at Perry Meridian High School, Montgomery averaged 14 points a game as a freshman, 20.7 points as a sophomore, 23.2 as a junior and 23.3 as a senior.

"What it gets down to is that he just wants an opportunity to play," said Krivacs. "He's put in a lot of time and hard work and he feels he'll get a good shot down here. I think he'll play here."

Carner Credits Billy Martin

With 'Save'

KINGS MILLS, Ohio (AP) — JoAnne Carner credits New York Yankee Manager Billy Martin with providing some insight which helped save her golf game.

Mrs. Carner, here this week to promote an upcoming Ladies Professional Golf Association event next month, said that in 1974 she was suffering from something she called "analysis paralysis."

"I was swinging wrong and couldn't correct it," she said. "I was taking lessons from Gardner Dickinson and had started to diet, but I just couldn't get aggressive on the golf course," she said.

Martin at the time was managing the Texas Rangers and was with the team at spring training in Florida.

"We were having dinner with Martin and mutual friends," recalled Mrs. Carner, who is seventh among all-time money winners on the women's tour. "It was the night before the final cut of spring training and Billy felt bad about telling some of his players they had to go. He wanted to relax."

"In the course of conversation, I was telling him about my problem in being aggressive. Thinking about every shot, I would cut this or hook that or blade another. He asked me to tell him about a typical day."

She told Martin that she'd go to the course two or three hours early and spend an hour on the practice tee and then putt for about 30 minutes. After a round, she'd practice some more.

Martin suggested that the time to think was after the round.

Clyde Walker Quits Kansas AD Post

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Clyde Walker resigned Wednesday as University of Kansas athletic director, a position he held for five years during which he put the athletic program on a firm financial footing.

Walker, 47, said in a statement that he was resigning to return to North Carolina but said he would not announce specific plans for a few days.

The Kansas City Star said Wednesday that Walker would move to the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, which has been without an athletic director since Lee Rose moved to Purdue as head basketball coach earlier this year. The Star quoted sources in Charlotte as saying an official announcement would be made Thursday.

"Most of my family lives in North Carolina and most of my professional career in athletic administration has been spent there," Walker said in a statement announcing his resignation.

He moved to KU in July 1973 from the University of North Carolina, where he had been an assistant athletic director for one year and a football recruiter and administrative assistant for five years before that. Walker coached 16 years in the prep ranks before he joined the North Carolina staff in 1967.

Chancellor Archie Dykes announced that Doug Messer, an assistant athletic director at KU, would become acting director of men's athletics when Walker leaves July 1.

Dykes said the search for a replacement would begin immediately. "We intend to search nationwide, following our affirmative action guidelines for the most capable person available," Dykes said.

Walker is the second athletic director at a Big Eight Conference school in Kansas to resign this week. John "Jersey" Jermier resigned under pressure Sunday at Kansas State University.

Dykes praised Walker for the job he did at KU, noting that the athletic department had an operating deficit of more than $250,000 when he took the job.

Cubs Thump Phillies 6-4, Surge Into East Lead

By The Associated Press
With two out, the score tied in the bottom of the 10th inning Wednesday and slugger Dave Kingman at bat, the possibility of a game-winning home run loomed large.

And with the next crack of the bat, the ball was resting in the left field bleachers. Chicago had a 6-4 victory over Philadelphia and the Cubs were in first place in the National League East, one-half game ahead of the Phillies.

But the bat belonged to slender, light-hitting Manny Trillo. He jumped on a Gene Garber pitch — one pitch after Garber had hit Kingman.

"I just wanted to hit the ball as long as I could, because if you hit the wall, Kingman has a chance of making it to home plate. It's good I hit it out," said Trillo, who hammered his first homer of the season and the 19th of his major league career.

"I wanted it inside. It was up a little bit. But I thought it was a pretty good pitch," said Garber, 21. He said the 1-2 pitch that hit Kingman "just got away."

"A walk or a hit batsman in that situation always seems to upset the appreciator," said Phillies Manager Danny Ozark. Bruce Sutter, 42, got the victory in relief.

The Cubs had rallied with two outs in the ninth to tie the game 4-4. Trillo walked but was erased when Larry Bittner hit into a double play. But successive singles by Steve Ontiveros and Dave Rader set the stage for Greg Gross to slash a triple off Warren Brusstar, tying the game.

Philadelphia had taken a 4-2 lead in the seventh on consecutive singles by Bob Boone, Bud Harrelson, former Cub Jose Cardenal and a sacrifice fly by Larry Bowa.

Garry Maddox belted his first home run of the season in the second for the Phillies.

Chicago went ahead with two runs in the third. Ray Burris led off with a triple and scored when Bowa's relay skipped into the dugout. Ivan DeJesus then grounded to third baseman Mike Schmidt, who bobbled the ball and threw wildly to first for an error, allowing DeJesus to reach second. Gene Clines then bunted for a single. Bill Buckner's sacrifice fly scored DeJesus.

GIANTS 2, ASTROS 0

Vic Harris, pinch hitting in a move hoped by San Francisco fans, delivered a two-run single in the sixth inning, giving the Giants a 2-0 victory over Houston.

Harris was sent up with runners on first and second for pitcher John Montefusco, who had allowed only three hits and struck out seven in six innings. He had one hit in his previous 33 at-bats this season.

Houston reliever Ken Forsch, who relieved starter Floyd Bannister after five innings, threw a wild pitch, advancing the runners. Then Harris hit a soft liner to center field for the game's only run.

Forsch, 1-2, struck out the Giants' first batter in the sixth, Mike Ivie, but Larry Herndon reached first when third baseman Enos Cabell booted his ground ball. Herndon moved to second on a ground out and Forsch intentionally walked pinch hitter Terry Whitfield before Giants Manager Joe Altobelli made the unpopular — at least temporarily — move of pinch hitting for Montefusco, 4-2.

Gary Lavelle pitched three innings of two-hit relief for the Giants in recording his seventh save.

Terry Puhl had three of the Astros' five hits and now has hit in 15 consecutive games.

The Giants protected their one-game lead over Cincinnati in the National League West by winning their ninth straight home game. They stand 15-4 overall in May. The Reds beat Atlanta 5-4.

Bannister left the game because a muscle in his throwing arm tightened up. Montefusco was bothered by a pulled back muscle and might have been taken out even if the pinch-hitting situation hadn't arisen, Altobelli said later.

Puhl had a bunt single in the third, a single to left in the sixth and an infield hit in the ninth, raising his average to .338.

The Giants' Jack Clark had the game's only extra-base hit, a double in the third which extended his consecutive game hitting streak to 14.

San Francisco catcher Mike Sadek dropped two foul popups for errors. Art Howe singled after one of the errors, in the second inning. But Montefusco was unrattled and pitched out of trouble the few times Houston threatened to score. No Houston runner got further than second base in the game.

CARDS 2, EXPOS 0

John Denny's two-hitter and Ted Simmons' two-run single in the third inning carried St. Louis past Montreal, snapping the Cardinals' 11-game losing streak.

Denny, 4-2, yielded singles to Andre Dawson and Gary Carter and faced only 28 Expos batters. He struck out three, walked one and helped himself by starting two double plays.

Mike Phillips' leadoff double over first base triggered St. Louis' third-inning burst against Hal Dues, 0-2. Phillips reached third on Montreal right fielder Ellis Valentine's throwing error. But after Denny struck out, Phillips was tagged out in a rundown following Gary Templeton's grounder.

Dues then hit Jim Dwyer with a pitch and Montreal third baseman Larry Parrish was charged with an error on a grounder to his left by Ken Reitz to fill the bases. Simmons connected on an 0-2 pitch for the decisive blow.

Denny, duplicating his first major league two-hit triumph earlier this month, held the Expos hitless until Dawson led off the sixth with his single to right field.

REDS 5, BRAVES 4

Reliever Mickey Mahler walked Joe Morgan with the bases loaded as Cincinnati rallied for three runs in the eighth inning for a victory over Atlanta.

Trailing 4-2, the Reds knocked out Jamie Easterly with consecutive doubles by Dave Concepcion and Dan Driessen. Mike Lum's pinch hit single off Adrian Devine tied it. Then Pete Rose was intentionally passed and pinch-hitter Cesar Geronimo also walked to load the bases.

Mahler, after delivering three straight balls to Morgan, walked him on a 3-1 count, forcing in pinch-runner Rick Auerbach with the deciding run.

Reliever Manny Sarmiento, who limited the Braves to two hits and one run over the last 42-3 innings, upped his record to 4-2.

Reds starter Paul Moskau held the Braves hitless until the fifth when he loaded the bases and gave up a two-run single to Rod Gilbreath. Brian Asselstine capped the three-run inning with the first of his two sacrifice flies.

Adrian Devine, 2-2, suffered the loss.

PIRATES 6, METS 5

Rennie Stennett's two-run single in the 10th inning gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-5 victory over the New York Mets, who lost despite a pair of home runs by Willie Montanez.

Stennett's single to right off loser Skip Lockwood, 4-4, came with one out after Pittsburgh had loaded the bases on a pinch single by Jim Fregosi, a walk to Frank Taveras, a sacrifice bunt and an intentional walk to Dave Parker.

Montanez, who had a run-scoring single in the first inning and a two-run over the right field wall with two out in the top of the 10th to put New York ahead 5-4.

Trailing 4-3 going into the bottom of the eighth, the Pirates gained a 4-4 tie on Dave Parker's second run-scoring double of the night.

The Mets trailed 3-2 going into the eighth, but Lee Mazzilli beat out a bunt single and, one out later, Montanez drove starting pitcher Don Robinson's first pitch to him over the right field wall.

It was the eighth extra-inning game for the Mets in their last 14 outings, and their fifth in eight games.

In the bottom of the eighth, pinch-hitter John Milner opened the inning with a walk off reliever Dale Murray and Frank Taveras sacrificed pinch-runner Mario Mendoza to second before Parker's tying double into the right field corner off reliever Kevin Kobel.

Robinson fell behind 2-0 in the first inning, which began when Lenny Randle's pop up was dropped by Pirate first baseman Phil Garner as he was bumped by shortstop Frank Taveras.

ONE MORE TIME—San Francisco second baseman Bill Madlock (18) slides safely into second with his second steal as the ball gets away from Houston shortstop Roger Metzger (14) in Wednesday's game at San Francisco. The Giants scored two unearned runs in the sixth to shut out Astros 2-0. (AP Laser-photo)

By The Associated Press
 Al Oliver singled home pinch runner Bobby Thompson with the winning run in the 11th inning Wednesday night as the Texas Rangers topped the Minnesota Twins and new relief ace Mike Marshall 3-2.

With one out, Mike Hargrove walked and was replaced by Thompson, who stole second. Bobby Bonds also walked before Oliver delivered the winning blow, his third hit of the game. He also drove in the first Texas run.

Marshall, who suffered his first loss in six appearances since joining the Twins last week, relieved starter Paul Thormsgard in the 10th. In his previous appearances, Marshall had earned one win and four saves.

Pinch-hitter Craig Kusick tied the game for the Twins in the bottom of the ninth with a two-out home run off Paul Lindblad. Lindblad, 1-0, relieved starter Dock Ellis in the seventh and had retired five Twins in order when he yielded Kusick's first home run of the year. However, Oliver's hit made him the winning pitcher.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when John Lowenstein opened the game with single, stole second and scored on Oliver's single. Bump Willis made it 2-0 in the fifth when he lofted a 3-2 pitch just inside the right field foul pole for his fourth home run.

TIGERS 3-0, ORIOLES 2-1
 Andres Mora's first home run since being recalled from the minor leagues May 15 gave Baltimore's Jim Palmer a 1-0 victory over Detroit for a split of a two-night doubleheader with the Tigers.

The Tigers, who had lost 11 straight games in Baltimore since July 31, 1976, won the opener 3-2 on a ninth-inning single by Aurelio Rodriguez, a late-inning defensive replacement.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson pushed his Mercury to a four-lap average speed of 160.551 mph Wednesday to take the pole position for Sunday's $350,000 World 600 stock car race.

Pearson, snatching the pole for the 10th consecutive Grand National race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, topped a field that was marked by the conspicuous absences of Richard Petty and Darrell Waltrip.

Petty, after making practice runs with other drivers on Tuesday, suddenly loaded up his Dodge and hauled it back to the Petty shops in Randleman. Speedway officials said only that Petty was planning "more work" on his car but there were unconfirmed reports that NASCAR officials had determined Petty's car was too low.

Waltrip blew a tire during a practice run Wednesday, scraping the wall and damaging his Chevrolet.

Both Petty and Waltrip planned to attempt qualifying later in the week.

Cale Yarborough took the outside spot on the first row with an average speed of 159.736 over four laps in his Oldsmobile. Dave Marcis and Harry Gant, both driving Chevrolets, took the two spots on the second row.

Dick Brooks, in a Mercury, and Bobby Allison, driving a Ford, grabbed third-row positions as 15 of the 40 spots in the World 600 field were filled Wednesday.

Pearson, a 43-year-old grandfather from Spartanburg, S.C., turned his first lap on the 1.5-mile speedway in 162.070 mph, a shade under the track record of 162.162 held by Yarborough.

"I knew the first lap would be the best one. It always is here," Pearson said.

He said he came close to brushing the wall in the second turn on his third lap, and "backed off" a bit on that lap.

"It felt so good on the first lap I guess I just tried too hard," Pearson said. "I didn't hit the wall but I sure came close."

Yarborough took his qualifying laps earlier than Pearson and waited to see what would happen.

Mora won the nightcap with his homer off Bob Sykes, who had won his first three starts for Detroit after being called up from the minors.

Palmer, 5-4, allowed six hits — two apiece by Rusty Staub, Jason Thompson and Steve Kemp — while knotting his 199th career victory. The Tigers loaded the bases in the sixth on a double by Thompson and two walks, but Palmer retired Milt May on a fly ball.

May's third hit of the opener launched Detroit's winning rally off Dennis Martinez, 3-3. Steve Dillard ran for May and scored on the hit by Rodriguez after being sacrificed to second.

Baltimore had tied the score in the eighth. Doubles by Larry Harlow and Pat Kelly chased starter Jim Stalon and Ken Singleton greeted John Hiller with an RBI single. Hiller then retired the last

California Garment Industry Frayed At Lining

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sleek California Mart, citadel of the burgeoning West Coast garment industry, bulges with activity as buyers from around the world pour into the three-building complex.

Inside the mart's 1,700 lavishly decorated showrooms, throngs of local manufacturers spotlight their own brands of California chic.

The image is sun-kissed affluence and beautiful people. The California dream put to thread. And the fashion world loves it.

Once considered a poor sister to the mammoth East Coast garment industry and known for little more than its gaudy swimwear, California's clothing business and the fresh, new-style influence it now commands has grown 128 percent in the past decade to become a $2.6 billion-a-year business.

But behind this California success story, within a few yards of the mart, the scene is not all sunshine and extravagance.

Sandwiched between cheap hotels and taco stands in the city's 10-square-block downtown garment district are the cramped shops where the California look is stitched together.

"It's a real can of worms down there," says Charles Hughes, chief investigator for the state Division of Labor Standards. "It's a real mess."

While not exactly the sweatshops of bygone years, officials say the factories had enough problems to warrant recent formation of a 56-person task force by the division to investigate working conditions.

With the force just over a month old, says Ed Tchakalian, a senior deputy labor commissioner for the state, investigators have found half the shops checked did not carry workmen's compensation insurance, and just a few kept adequate time and wage records.

In a similar crackdown two years ago, state investigators found 98.5 percent of the shops, especially the small contracting operations that make up 80 to 90 percent of the industry, were violating the labor code. And officials say many problems continue today.

—Wages are among the lowest of any manufacturing industry in California, state figures show.

—Most garment workers in Southern California are Mexican-Americans, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service estimates half of those are illegal aliens who often don't know their rights as employees or are afraid to exercise them.

—Industrial homework, the illegal manufacturing of garments in private homes, is widespread. More than a dozen cases were successfully prosecuted in a 1975 crackdown by state and local authorities, but several officials say they believe the problem still is "extensive."

Bernard Brown, president of the Coalition of Apparel Industries in California, says the industry is being unjustly maligned.

"It's just not fair to blacken a whole industry because of things like the sweatshops that happened long ago," Brown says, claiming most clothing manufacturers have eliminated unfair labor practices. "If they do exist today, it's only on the fringes of the industry."

"And in that case, the apparel industry is no worse than any other. No industry is 100 percent perfect," Brown said.

Despite his assurance such problems existed only "in little corners of the industry," Brown did not offer any firm figures. "I just don't know," he said. Brown conceded wages were low, claiming nearly all untrained workers start at the minimum wage. But he argued that the pay was proper for the semi-skilled work being done. And he defended the extensive use of illegal aliens, saying U.S. citizens were unwilling to do the work "because they could earn as much on unemployment and welfare."

"As a whole, the industry is clean," insisted Brown, vice president of Koret of California, the state's second-largest garment producer behind Levi Strauss Co. "Unfortunately, our image is not what it should be."

Both Brown and Todd Rutkin, a former president of the Cutting Contractors Association, said the industry is trying to police itself through industry organizations.

"I just don't believe you can legislate these kinds of improvements," Rutkin said, although he conceded only a small percentage of the 3,000 shops belonged to such industry organizations, substantially diluting their effect.

As for employees, "Most of the industry is not organized," says Mario Vasquez, a spokesman for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. Only about 10 percent of the state's 75,500 garment workers belong to the union, he said.

In contrast, on the East Coast, where most clothing workers come from European backgrounds and have a strong tradition of unionism, union membership is 85 percent.

Statistics compiled by the state Division of Labor Standards show the average wage for California's 75,500 garment workers is $3.84 an hour. The only lower-paid manufacturing industry, officials said, is the leather goods business, at $3.52 an hour.

But officials noted those figures were based on reports by employers, and Tchakalian made it clear he considered time and pay records kept by nearly all small garment-making shops inadequate.

Woman's Residence Yields 360 Canines

SYDNEY (AP) — It took Sydney authorities two days to remove 360 dogs from the home of a woman hospitalized after a car accident, police said Wednesday.

Olga Dunn, 49, told reporters from her hospital bed that a judge allowed her to keep five of the pets but ordered the rest hauled to the pound.
