One Dead, Two Injured In Car-Truck Collision

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 28-YEAR-old Lubbock man died and two persons were injured, one seriously, in a car-truck collision Monday at Indiana Avenue and the Brownfield Highway.

Rodney Earl Connell of 3408 38th St., the driver of the car, was dead at 1:36 p.m. on arrival at Methodist Hospital.

His 24-year-old wife, Deborah Lynn Benton, and Wallace Henry Daniel, 23, of 2104 9th St., both passengers in the front seat of the vehicle, were injured in the 12:50 p.m. accident.

The young woman was listed in serious condition at Methodist Hospital Monday night with multiple injuries and Daniel was admitted to Health Sciences Center Hospital for observation. He suffered possible broken ribs.

Police said the car was westbound on the Brownfield Highway when it collided at the Indiana Avenue intersection with a dump truck driven by William J. Patterson of Amarillo.

Reports indicate that the truck toppled onto the car, crushing the 1970 Oldsmobile sedan and trapping Connell and his wife inside.

Lubbock Fire Department rescue workers were able to free the young woman in about 20 minutes with the aid of the "jaws of life" unit, but labored for 40 minutes before they were able to pull Connell from the wreckage.

Patterson, 67, was treated and released from Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy ruled Connell's death, the city's 16th traffic fatality of the year, accidental.

Services for Connell, who recently moved back to Lubbock from Cortez, Colo., are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

A native of Sweetwater, he had lived most of his life in Lubbock.

Survivors other than his wife are his mother, Mrs. Allen T. Stewart of Lubbock; his father, Earl Connell of Abilene; and a sister, Bobbi McBeth of Hale Center.

Connell's death was one of 12 recorded on Texas highways during the Memorial Day holiday weekend. State officials termed the figure well below the national average.

For the nation, meanwhile, the toll moved past the 450 mark in the late afternoon hours, fulfilling a National Safety Council prediction that between 400 and 500 would perish on the highways during the three-day holiday period.

California led among the states with 64 deaths, followed by 23 in Indiana, Michigan was a distant third with 18, Ohio had 17, Arizona and Alabama each had 16, New York 15 and Illinois, Pennsylvania and South Carolina each had 14.

Consumer Boycott Of Beef Unlikely

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Neither a leading consumer advocate nor the nation's cattlemen foresee any organized national boycott of beef despite sharply climbing prices.

Both producers and consumers said little was accomplished during a 1973 boycott because it could do nothing to alter marketing cycles — or nature.

With the Agriculture Department predicting retail choice beef prices will increase 16 to 20 percent this year, consumer leaders are telling shoppers to cut costs by changing their diets and shopping for specials.

Kathleen O'Reilly, executive director of Consumer Federation of America, says, "The lesson learned in 1973 was that it hurt most the people who were not responsible — family farms and producers."

C.W. McMillan, vice president of the National Cattlemen's Association, agrees with her on the effect of the 1973 boycott.

"At least among the professional consumer advocates most of them would say the beef boycotts were counterproductive. I think there is a better understanding among some of the consumer activ-

Her group, a federation of 237 organizations representing 30 million people, did not support the 1973 boycott. It was led by a group that broke away from CFA to form National Consumers Congress, which no longer exists.

Mrs. O'Reilly advises consumers to ride out high beef prices by buying less expensive choice meat instead of prime, because choice has less fat, and to look for sales.

Summer Sun, Heat To Return Today

A TYPICAL summer-like day is on tap for the South Plains, with forecasters predicting an abundance of bright sunshine and warm temperatures today.

An upper level disturbance, moving through the region from New Mexico, Monday triggered thunderstorms in the southern portion of the South Plains, but shower activity rapidly moved eastward out of the area, and forecasters expect no precipitation of significance through Wednesday.

Rainfall amounts Monday ranged from a trace at Lubbock International Airport to more than an inch at Lamesa.

The high today will be in the low 90s, and readings tonight will be near 60. Temperatures will ease Wednesday to the mid-80s.

Students At Bean Augment Library With Own Books For Summer Fun

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHERE CAN YOU curl up with the only edition of "The Duck Who Wanted To go to Louisiana," or sample the latest spinoff on the childhood classic about Goldilocks?

Try the Bean Elementary School library. Listed in the card catalogue and featured on the shelves there are books written and illustrated by the students themselves.

The books were contributed by children in Bean's Title I reading program. The kids tell stories about everything from fast cars to family picnics.

Michael Tucker dedicated to his mom a book about the family dog, appropriately named "Shadow."

"Shadow is like my mother's shadow 'cause he's always following my mother around," Michael wrote. "He follows my mother all around the house, and he gets a little monotonous...for him, and my mother, too."

In a book dedicated to his teacher, second-grader Pete Garcia wrote "The Pig That Chased a Bug." As the title suggests, Pete's pig gets mad at a bug buzzing in its food and chases the insect out into the countryside. Fortunately for the pig's owner, the animal finally finds its way back to the farm.

Robert Perry picked up on the theme of "The Three Bears" and went a bit further — with a volume called "Pinky and the Five Bears."

"One day Mother Bear cooked a steak, but it was too hot. So the Bear family went to see 'Jaws.' While they were out, a little girl named Pinky came to their house. She was so pretty the doorknob popped right out of the door," Robert wrote.

The story line sounds familiar enough: Pinky eats the steak, and the Bear family makes a surprise return. But in Robert's version, the bears get nasty and start attacking Pinky — how else, but with bear hugs.

"They started hugging on her," Robert said. The happy ending comes when the Fozz appears on his motorcycle and sweeps Pinky off her feet and away from the Bears.

A popular topic with the Bean students is football. Willie DeLaCruz was one of several children who reminisced over how their favorite team, the Dallas Cowboys, beat the Denver Broncos in Super Bowl XII. Willie not only gave the play-by-play account, but illustrated nearly every formation the Cowboys used in that game.

Some of the books have deep messages. In "Tom Was Lost in the Woods," Lorenzo Gutierrez warned against kids taking the shortcut to town to run family errands.

Melissa Abriz dedicated to her brother Freddie a book about "Friends at the Movies," and how hard it is to get everybody to sit together during a double-feature.

In "My Piniata," Monica Valdes told about getting a surprise birthday present. "When I hit the piniata, I broke it and all the cupcakes and candies fell from the piniata."

Many children liked writing about animals. Angela Boing was the author of "Up In The Sky," about birds; Anthony Lopez, of "All About Whales"; and Wylie Fox, of "My Pets" — including pictures of his mice, pigeons, four cats, three dogs and turtle.

Cathy Powell dedicated to her Aunt Ruby a book titled, "The Duck Who Wanted To Go to Louisiana."

"Once upon a time, there was a duck who wanted to go to Louisiana. His name was Tim, and his mother's name was Linda. Tim wanted to go to Louisiana to see if his grandmother was hurt. They took a bus to Louisiana," Cathy wrote.

As it turned out, Tim's suspicions were right. His

NATO Chiefs Meet In Air Of Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top NATO leaders assembled Monday were concerned over expanding Soviet power but determined to strengthen their defenses from the Arctic to the Aegean.

The two-day North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit talks to be opened by President Carter at the Kennedy Center today will, however, range far beyond present and future affairs of the alliance.

European and American diplomats reported the secret exchanges also will focus on how NATO's 15 member countries can best thwart Kremlin actions undertaken to advance Soviet interests in Africa and other areas of the world.

Focus On Russians

Secretary General Joseph Luns of Holland, at a news conference Monday night, said the talks would be taking place against a background of significant trends in global Soviet policy.

Without going into detail, he referred to events in Africa, where Soviet and Cuban military help allegedly has poured into Angola and Ethiopia, Moscow's failure to respect the Helsinki agreements on human rights and the Kremlin's mounting production of submarines, missiles and tanks.

NATO's top official then listed the main subjects of discussion with which the heads of government will deal.

Look To Future

— The overall international situation and the state of the alliance. In this context, he said that the democratic framework of allied societies "has held remarkably well" despite economic strains and the attacks of terrorist groups.

— A study of trends in East-West relations over the coming decade. The leaders will attempt "to map our expectations for the future and take account of the uncertainties and ambiguities that continue to surround ultimate Soviet intentions."

— An examination of greater inter-allied cooperation in arms production, with the Europeans "heartened by recent evidence of U.S. willingness" to buy more defense equipment from the old world.

Soviets Assailed

He said the allies are seeking a political commitment at the top level on which to base a new long-term defense program.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, assailed the Soviets in a stinging attack Sunday for what he said were their "shortsighted attempts to exploit global difficulties." Brzezinski's warning to Moscow to desist was the latest in a series of U.S. and European criticisms of alleged Soviet-Cuban involvement in such places as Angola, Ethiopia and Zaire.

Statement Of Aims

A long term defense program is due for adoption in principle, rather than as a firm commitment, by the chiefs of government. It foresees modernizing and streamlining weapons and military systems across the board, from Norway's northernmost reaches to the Aegean, where two neighbors and alliance members, Greece and Turkey, are in dispute.

Estimates of the costs of the program, calculated at today's prices, vary between $80 billion and $100 billion over the next 10 to 15 years.

But the defense program can be no more than a statement of aims and intentions. This is because no NATO country can bind successor administrations to precise financial allocations years ahead.

Allied concern over the buildup of military power by the Soviet Union and its partners in the Warsaw Pact has been stressed by NATO, U.S. and European leaders repeatedly in recent years. U.S. Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., supreme allied commander in Europe, has estimated the Russians have overcome a roughly 10-to-1 inferiority in strategic balance and now are just about as strong as the West but with bigger spending programs ahead.

The British Defense Ministry reckons Soviet spending now eats up between 11 and 13 percent of the gross national product.

A secret NATO assessment to be presented to the summit meeting says the Soviet gross national product is likely to go on increasing at a four percent annual rate over the coming decade — with defense spending going up at an annual rate of five percent over the same period. This means Soviet power will be getting a progressively bigger chunk of national resources each year.

The dilemma facing NATO leaders is what to do about it, besides pitching more men, money, energy and effort into their own defenses at a time of world recession.

One matter receiving close attention is

Americans Salute Million War Dead

By The Associated Press

WITH BUGLES, rifle fire and flags, the nation Monday saluted the million men who have died in American uniforms from Valley Forge to Vietnam.

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown presided over the Memorial Day laying of the wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington National Cemetery in Washington. He said the country should rededicate itself to preserving the strength of its armed forces "so that it need not be proved in combat."

In Ohio, small American flags were placed at the graves of 206 Confederate soldiers, most of them officers, who died during their imprisonment on Johnson's Island on Lake Erie during the Civil War.

A special tribute to the 3,565 men who died on submarines during World War II was held at the U.S. Naval Weapons Station at Seal Beach in Southern California.

In Southgate, Ky., townspeople gathered for a service at the town's war memorial, a short distance from the site of the Beverly Hills Super Club fire that killed 165 people in May of 1977. Surrounded by the same volunteer firefighters and police officers called into action when the disaster occurred, Mayor Ken Paul said the community of 3,200 in northern Kentucky "would never be the same again."

And in Moore, Okla., an estimated 400 uniformed law officers joined about 2,000 other mourners for the funeral of a Highway Patrol Lt. Pat Grimes, one of three state troopers gunned down by two Oklahoma prison fugitives last week.

For many, the year's first warm-weather holiday was a day for relaxing at home, jogging in the park or swimming at the beach.

In San Diego, about 1,000 skinny-dippers jammed Black Beach on Sunday, a day early, to observe the fourth anniversary of the official approval of nude sunbathing. A smaller crowd was expected Monday, even though last year the beach lost its special "swimsuits optional" status.

In New York, 28 people competed in the annual Coney Island hot dog-eating

Dominican President Elected

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (UPI) — President-elect Antonio Guzman received congratulations from President Carter Monday for his election victory over President Joaquin Balaguer.

Guzman thanked Carter for his support and said he would invite him to his inauguration.

Carter sent Guzman "sincere and warmest congratulations" and said his successful fight to succeed Balaguer, ruler of this Caribbean island nation for the last 12 years was "an example to the rest of the world."

The message was published in Santo Domingo newspapers.

The U.S. president warned Balaguer's government earlier this month that he was concerned about the May 17 seizure of ballot boxes by Dominican soldiers after it became clear Guzman was the winner.

Balaguer apparently then persuaded dissident military commanders to allow the resumption of vote counting and accept the results. He conceded defeat on Saturday.

Guzman, leader of the left-center Revolutionary Party, describes himself as a moderate and says he favors free enterprise.

In an interview Sunday, he said he would not appoint any Communists to his cabinet. He has also ruled out party leader Francisco Pena Gomez, known for his fiery leftist oratory.

Others sending messages of congratulations to Guzman were Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, Costa Rican President Rodrigo Carazo and Puerto Rican Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo.

Guzman thanked Carter and Andres Perez for their support.

He said he planned to invite both men to his inauguration, along with Mario Soares, the prime minister of Portugal, and Willy Brandt, former West German chancellor.

U.S. ambassador Robert Yost said in a newspaper interview Monday that the U.S. pressure on the Dominican Republic to honor the results of the election did not represent interference in the country's internal affairs.

He described the attitude of the U.S. government as "normal interest."

With only a few thousand votes remaining to be counted, Guzman led Balaguer by 855,531 votes to 701,901.

Weather Plays Havoc In Most Parts Of U.S.

High humidity and temperatures in the 80s occurred in some New England and Midwest states on Monday, while parts of Montana, Idaho and Wyoming had snow, temperatures in the 40s, and gusty winds.

Rain and heavy thunderstorms continued over a large portion of the upper Midwest Monday afternoon, with northern Iowa getting some violent storms.

North-central Alabama also had heavy thunderstorms, and a flash flood warning was issued for Jefferson County. More than 1 1/2 inches of rain fell in just 30 minutes northeast of Birmingham.

The Atlantic Coast states had scattered thundershowers.

Only the Southwest had extensive sunshine.

The National Weather Service forecast showers and thundershowers Tuesday from the Great Lakes through the Southeast. New England, the northern Rockies and parts of the Great Plains were also expected to have some showers.

The southern Rockies, Far West and plateau region were forecast to have sunny skies. Temperatures around the nation were to be mild to warm.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 40 degrees in Mullin, Idaho, to 103 in Thermal, Calif.

Here are some early afternoon temperatures and sky conditions in key cities:

Eastern U.S.: Atlanta 80 hazy, Boston 83 fair, Buffalo 84 hazy, Caribou 89 fair, Charleston, S.C. 83 partly cloudy, Cincinnati 83 fair, Cleveland 85 hazy, Detroit 85 hazy, Knoxville 81 hazy, Miami 82 partly cloudy, Nashville 83 partly cloudy, New York 74 hazy, Philadelphia 73 cloudy, Pittsburgh 84 fair, Richmond 80 fair, Washington 79 partly cloudy.

George Supports Short In Upcoming Runoff

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Jesse George, unsuccessful Democratic candidate in the 28th state senatorial district race, threw his support Monday to state senate candidate E.L. Short in his run-off bid against Don Workman.

Voters will go to the polls Saturday to decide whether Short or Workman will be the Democratic candidate to face Republican Joe Robbins in the November general election.

Workman, a Texas Tech regent and former Lubbock banker, led the original field of five state senate candidates in the May 6 primary, receiving slightly more than 17,000 votes or 31 percent of the total votes cast. Short, a 52-year-old farmer and rancher and former state representative from Tahoka, received almost 11,000 votes.

George, who came in fourth, said in a Monday morning press conference he was urging his near 7,000 supporters "to cast their votes and their influence to E.L. Short this Saturday."

George said he felt Short "possessed a high degree of honesty, decency and sense of fair play."

"I especially appreciate his experience in the legislative process and his willingness to listen to all people and all viewpoints," George said.

Although he did not mention Workman by name, George was sharply critical of the Tech regent, saying "I cannot support an individual who twice publicly made the statement that Texas Tech is currently over-funded."

"I have to ask myself what influence will a state senator have in securing funds for a medical school both in Lubbock and in Odessa who has publicly expressed his own feeling that Texas Tech is over-funded," George said.

He also censured Workman for his stand on tenure for Tech professors. "I cannot support a candidate for state senator who is so strongly opposed to tenure at Texas Tech and institutions of higher learning," George said.

"This position can only lead to a tremendous loss of qualified and dedicated professors and would provide absolutely no incentive for newer and younger faculty members."

"My candidate, E.L. Short, has sought the advice of faculty representatives and has shown a warm and compassionate feeling for all aspects and improvements of public education and higher education," George continued.

"I feel that E.L. Short with his eight years of legislative experience and his unquestionable sincerity deserves the support of the 28th district in the June 3 runoff."

George reiterated a charge he had made about Workman earlier in the campaign, saying Workman and his wife were trying to establish "a king and queen domination with a feudal hierarchy for a selected feudal lord system."

Between them, Workman and his wife Skeet hold membership on five state boards. Workman serves on the Texas

Youth Council, the Criminal Justice Advisory Council and the Tech Board of Regents. His wife serves on the Commission on the Status of Women and the Texas State School District Tax Assessment Practices Board.

George, who made a similar endorsement of Short at an afternoon press conference in Odessa, said he will host a public reception for Short from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. today in the Country Place Clubhouse at 2302 Slide Road.

The Saturday run-off election also will see Republicans George Bush and Jim Reese vying for the chance to run against Democrat Kent Hance for the 19th U.S. Congressional seat in November.

In a Monday morning press conference, Clarence Warner, Republican National Committee member from Oklahoma and regional coordinator for Ronald Reagan, endorsed Reese to represent the GOP in the congressional race.

Warner, who had supported retired Air Force officer Joe Hickox in the primary, said he thought Reese "has the background and capabilities to strongly represent the people of this district."

Collapse Of Cliff Crushes Camper

NAVAJO NATIONAL MONUMENT, Ariz. (UPI) — Part of a towering sandstone cliff gave way and plunged onto a remote back country campground early Monday, killing a camper and injuring two companions near a cliff dwelling ruin.

A National Park Service spokesman said John Raske, 26, Phoenix, Ariz., apparently died instantly from head injuries in the accident which occurred near the Keet Seel Ruins on the Navajo National Monument.

The ruins, largest Indian cliff dwelling in Arizona, can be reached only by foot or horseback over rugged trail. They are located about eight miles north of the monument's visitors center.

Ben Moffett, of the park service's regional headquarters in Santa Fe, N.M., identified the two injured persons as Dr. James W. Toothaker, no address available, and Liz Principe, of Flagstaff, Ariz.

Toothaker, identified as a dentist with the Public Health Service in Arizona, suffered a broken hand and possible internal injuries, while Miss Principe reportedly had a broken leg and possible back injuries, Moffett said. He said they were hospitalized at Flagstaff.

Moffett said Raske's body was removed to the Scott Mortuary in Winslow by a helicopter leased by Grand Canyon National Park. His two injured companions were airlifted from the scene of the accident by an Arizona Public Safety helicopter.

Moffett said about 17 other persons in the campground, located at the base of the sheer 600-foot sandstone wall, escaped injury when the accident occurred at about 4:30 a.m.

"The people in the campground heard what they thought was an explosion," Moffett said, when a piece of sandstone broke loose and fell, apparently hit a rock and shattered."

Palo Duro Floods Subsiding; Campers, Residents Relieved

CANYON (UPI) — Skies, cleared and flood waters at Palo Duro Canyon State Park subsided for the first time in two days Monday, leaving campers and residents safe but mudbound.

"We're in pretty good shape today," said Randall County deputy Crosby Hammons.

"The water is going down, the sun is out and the worst is past providing we don't get anymore rains like we've had for the past couple of days. Everybody that wants out of there is out and the rest will make it out as soon as things dry out a bit more."

Department of Public Safety officers evacuated 61 persons by helicopter from the park when the Prairie Dog Fork overflowed, one of several creeks and rivers that flash flooded during the weekend.

At least three persons drowned in the floods and a fourth — Mae Zachry, 43, of Canyon, Texas — was still missing.

"We found Mrs. Zachry's car Sunday night, submerged in a creek about a half mile east of Canyon," Hammons said. "They are out searching for her body. We have to presume she was drowned although that's not confirmed of course."

The body of Kenneth Joe Marker, 24, of Amarillo was found Sunday in the back seat of his car which had been swept downstream by the flood.

Earlier, rescue workers found the body of Grace Taylor in her Palo Duro Canyon home, swept off its foundation by a wall of water. They also recovered the body of Nita Marie Stribling, 15, who was riding home with her boyfriend when the floodwaters washed over his car Saturday night.

In another weather related death in the area, Ruben Walker Johnson, 55, died when wind flipped a cellar door over on him in rural Hedley in the northern Panhandle. The door struck his head and then another wind gust toppled his pickup truck onto the door, killing him.

And while officials made estimates on the damage — $8 to $10 million — the homeowners along the still-swollen creeks continued their own cleanup operations Monday.

A Red Cross spokesman said preliminary reports showed 12 homes and 13 trailers destroyed, 51 homes and two trailers with major damage and 47 homes with minor damage. He said Red Cross equipment and personnel were in the area, serving meals and helping flood victims.

Randall County Judge Woody Pond said after viewing the area that his "preliminary and unofficial estimate" did not include hail damage to crops and livestock losses in the rural county.

"We're just doing what we can to help our neighbors," Pond said. "They're (the flooding victims) pretty well taking it in stride."

Ray Newkirt, claims manager in Amarillo for Hartford Insurance Co., said he

Man Shoots Self, Wounds Family

COHASSET, Mass. (AP) — A 46-year-old man shot his wife and their three children Monday, then shot and killed himself, police said.

Cohasset police were called to the James A. Quirk home when neighbors heard shots. They found Quirk dead and a .38 caliber revolver near the body.

His wife, Joan, 42, and the three children were taken to South Shore Hospital in South Weymouth for treatment of gunshot wounds. Officials would not give the names or ages of the children.

There was no immediate word on their conditions.

Soviet Purchase Renews Concern

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Deep concern in the West over recent reports of massive Soviet cobalt purchases once again emphasized the degree of U.S. dependence on fragile third world governments for key mineral and other basic resources.

State Department officials said the reported link between the Soviet purchases of cobalt and the invasion of Zaire were erroneous. It turned out that western companies, including American firms, also were buying cobalt in anticipation of higher prices.

But the episode served as a reminder that economic problems and political turmoil in Third World nations such as Zaire, source for almost half of the U.S. imports of cobalt, has a direct effect on the American industrial machinery.

Cobalt is used to make superalloy metals in the manufacture of magnets. The United States imports 97 percent of the cobalt it uses, about half directly from Zaire.

It is included in a list of 18 key mineral and other basic materials which the United States must import. U.S. dependence on foreign sources ranges from 33 percent for iron and iron ore to 100 percent for such products as industrial diamonds and natural rubber.

The most dramatic case of American economic dependence on foreign sources is, of course, petroleum. The United States is now importing 42 percent of its oil, with as much as 82 percent of it coming from members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

According to a just published State Department report on "The Trade Debate," the value of U.S. oil imports has risen from $4 billion in 1972 to $42 billion in 1977.

Thus, oil imports almost singlehandedly contributed the bulk of the $26.6 billion U.S. foreign trade in 1977, when the United States — the world's largest trading nation — exported $120.2 billion worth of goods and imported $146.8 billion.

The same report showed that in 1977, the United States' main trading partners were Canada, Japan, West Germany, the United Kingdom, Mexico, Saudi Arabia and Nigeria. The latter two OPEC members are the nation's main foreign oil sources.

In addition to cobalt and oil, the report shows the other 16 minerals and basic resources that the United States must import are (percentage of dependence and main foreign sources in parenthesis):

Natural rubber (100 — Indonesia and Malaysia); abaca or Manila hemp (100 — Philippines and Ecuador); industrial diamonds (100 — South Africa and Zaire); bauxite (99 — Jamaica and Surinam); manganese ore (98 — Brazil and Gabon); bismuth (97 — sources not indicated); chromium and ferrocromium (89 — South Africa, Soviet Union, and Rhodesia); tin (86 — Malaysia, Thailand and Bolivia); asbestos (85 — Canada); fluorspar (80 — sources not indicated); nickel (70 — Canada); zinc (58 — Canada); mercury (57 — sources not indicated); antimony, metal and ore (52 — South Africa, United Kingdom, Bolivia, People's Republic of China and Mexico); cadmium (52 — sources not indicated); iron and iron ore (33 — mostly Venezuela and Brazil).

HEW Funds Urge Art Of Relaxation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Relax, says the federal government.

On its 25th anniversary, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has spent a little of its $162.3 billion budget on an interesting little news release that says:

—It's surprising how little Americans know about the art of relaxation.

—As a result, the pressures of everyday life take a heavy toll on our physical and mental well-being.

"In the course of a day, people are frequently distracted from their activities by personal problems such as conflicts with family members, disagreements with employers, poor living or working conditions, boredom and loneliness," says handout DHEW (ADM) 78-632.

The secret, according to the National Institute of Mental Health, is to sometimes do exactly what you want to do and stop feeling guilty because you're not actively involved in "accomplishing tasks" or "producing things."

"Even vacations become whirlwind productions that leave the participants exhausted after concentrating too many experiences in a short period of time," says Dr. Louis E. Kopolow, a staff psychiatrist with NIMH.

The paper says it is essential to practice some type of relaxation daily and to pick activities "you really enjoy, not activities you think other people want you to pursue."

Six suggestions, including a last-ditch attempt to soothe yourself:

1. Check out activities available through recreation departments, adult education programs, volunteer work opportunities or college courses.
2. Walk around your neighborhood or in the woods. Go dancing, play golf, swim, dig in the garden, bowl.
3. If physically fit, try jogging, basketball, handball, squash or other sports. They "can give one a wonderful feeling of relaxation afterwards."
4. Create a sense of peace and tranquility in body and mind with mental exercises. Concentrate on relaxing successive sets of muscles from the tips of your toes to your forehead and neck. Lose yourself in a good book, drift into a quiet state with music or relax in a location with a beautiful view.
5. Paint, draw, make pottery, knit, build something with wood or cook.
6. If none of the above works, the government says the sixth suggestion is "a surefire method known through the ages": take a warm bath.

SLAIN TROOPER MOURNED — About 400 uniformed law officers were among the approximately 2,500 mourners who attended funeral services Monday in Moore, Okla., for Lt. Pat Grimes. Police Honor Fallen Comrades

MOORE, Okla. (UPI) — Hundreds of law enforcement officers stood at attention and delivered a final salute Monday to Lt. Pat Grimes, one of three state troopers who died in a gunbattle with two escaped Oklahoma convicts.

The Highway Patrol canceled a major traffic safety enforcement program planned for the holiday weekend so troopers could attend the Monday funeral for Grimes, 36, and the Tuesday and Wednesday funerals of troopers Houston "Pappy" Summers, 62, of Enid and Billy G. Young, 50, of Woodward.

All three died Friday at the Caddo, Okla., shootout with the two convicts, who also were killed.

The officers lined up outside the First Baptist Church after the service and saluted the flag-draped coffin as it was lifted into a hearse and began a 125-mile trip to Sand Springs for burial.

Highway patrolmen and other officers from as far away as California and Massachusetts attended Grimes' funeral Monday and a memorial service Sunday at the state Capitol in Oklahoma City for all three troopers. Other states represented included Alabama, Texas, Arkansas, Kansas and Louisiana.

Sumter County, Ala., Sheriff Melvin Stephens explained Sunday why he and another Alabama sheriff drove 750 miles to attend the services.

"We felt like the same thing could have happened to us," Stephens said. "We owed it to them to come."

The troopers died in shootouts with convicts Claude Dennis, 35, and Michael Lancaster, 25, who escaped April 23 from the Oklahoma State Penitentiary at McAlester and were suspects in several slayings in Texas and Alabama.

Another trooper, Lt. Hoyt Hughes, 46, was wounded in the gunbattle. He was hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

Funerals will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Emmanuel Baptist Church in Enid for Summers, and at 1 p.m. Wednesday at the Woodward High School auditorium for Young.

Dennis was buried Sunday in Bristow, Okla., his hometown. Funeral arrangements for Lancaster have not been announced.

New, Seasat Satellite To Monitor Oceans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. space agency plans to expand its watch on the world's seas with the launch next week of the first of a new breed of satellites — an ocean gazer called Seasat.

The satellite will carry out a "proof of concept" mission to see if radar and other sensors scanning the oceans can provide useful information for oceanographers, weathermen and commercial users of the seas.

The $91 million mission is designed to gather information on surface winds and temperatures, currents, wave heights, ice conditions, ocean topography and coastal storm activity.

"If Seasat A lives up to the expectations of those who believe the oceans can be studied from spacecraft, it could lead to a global system that can continuously monitor the oceans," the space agency said.

The spacecraft is scheduled to be launched by a modified Atlas rocket June 10 from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. It is to soar into a 500-mile-high north-south orbit that will take its instruments over 95 percent of the world's oceans every 36 hours.

"Twice daily, such a system could provide ships at sea with detailed charts of routes updated to show latest weather condition, sea state and hazards. Long-range use of the system could influence ship design, port development and selection of sites for such offshore facilities as power plants," the agency said.

The satellite's electronic "eyes" include three different types of radar to measure sea surface effects that can be converted to wind speed and direction, to produce images of ocean waves and ice and to measure average wave height. Other instruments will measure surface temperatures, detect water in the atmosphere and take pictures of clouds and coastal features.

The major difference between Seasat and other Earth observation spacecraft launched by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is that Seasat's instruments are designed to work day and night through all kinds of weather, and they are specifically designed to study the seas.

The satellite was built by Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. of Sunnyvale, Calif., using an Agena rocket stage as the foundation for the ocean watching instruments. The project is managed by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, Calif.

COAL PRODUCTION
The volume of coal production at a low of 15 percent of the 1967 level in 1980, peaked at 132 percent in 1918. In 1970, production was 108 of the 1967 figure.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There are sharks in the waters that President Carter's energy bill must navigate between now and final passage.

One shark is Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who has no fondness for the key to the Carter energy tax proposals, the tax on domestic crude oil.

Another shark is election day, which makes it increasingly unlikely as the weeks go by that Carter can continue to hold out for a full energy package that includes some taxes.

Another shark is the filibuster. House and Senate energy conference committee members have solved all the big issues on the first four parts of Carter's program: Conservation, conversion to coal, utility rates and natural gas pricing. But weeks of drafting the exact legislative language — plus some minor issues still to be cleared up — will mean the House and Senate may not vote on those bills until midsummer.

The fifth portion, on which conferees have discussed only a minor part, is energy taxation.

Some House leaders, such as Energy Committee Chairman Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, continue to yearn for completion of all five parts together.

But Long told interviewers Friday, "It does not help to pass the tax portions of the bill, to tie that in with the other controversial parts of the bill. The more controversy you add to a bill, the more difficult it is to pass. We would have a better chance, I think, to pass the tax bill on its own."

"If we can pass it at all," Rep. Anthony Toby Moffett, D-Conn., has tried repeatedly and unsuccessfully to get the conferees to offer the first three portions of energy legislation to House and Senate.

And some conferees have spoken of the difficulty of whipping up congressional enthusiasm for multibillion-dollar taxes in an election year.

"The closer it gets to election day, the more difficult it is going to be for the administration to get a bill that has taxes in it," Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, said. "I find it incredible they would try to put the tax bill through."

Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, have both hinted at filibustering the natural gas bill in the Senate.

Long said, "The administration is not willing to give up on the crude oil equalization tax. So perhaps we will see if the Senate wants to vote for it. If so, we will try to put it in a package that will make it as attractive as we can."

Runoff To Decide Helms' Opponent

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Democrats Luther Hodges Jr. and John Ingram, seeking the right to take on conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in the fall, both claimed Monday they will win today's primary runoff.

In election-eve trips across the state, Hodges, a former banker and the son of the Kennedy administration's commerce secretary, and Ingram, the state's insurance commissioner for the past five years, made a final plea to the state's 1.7 million Democrats.

Helms, who has emerged as a national conservative voice in his first term, had no primary opposition. Democrats have targeted Helms for removal but concede the fall race will be difficult.

About 38 percent of the Democrats voted May 2 in the eight-way primary that saw Hodges get 40 percent of the votes to Ingram's 26 percent. No candidate in a major statewide race in North Carolina in the past 60 years has won a runoff after trailing by more than 10 points in the primary.

Police Raid Yards; Seek Illegal Drug

ANTIOCH, Calif. (AP) — Police have pulled up from front yards in this San Francisco suburb hundreds of brilliant pink and purple flowers that turned out to be illegal opium poppies.

Some residents told police they had wondered why teen-agers would occasionally dash into their yards and snatch the blossoms. The raids started last week after an Antioch police officer recognized the flowers in one yard as illegal. No one was charged.

Alien Children--No Easy ABCs

NOW THAT THE Texas Supreme Court has ruled that children of illegal aliens do not have a right to free public education, the next order of business is to do something about the illegal alien problem.

Letting tens of thousands of children grow up in this country without an education would be a human tragedy of the worst sort.

Not only would it deprive the children themselves of any hope for a good future, the worst part of it, but it also would create a massive social problem for everyone.

IT IS ESTIMATED that there are more than 50,000 alien children in Texas alone, most of them from Mexico.

These are the children who were not born in this country; their brothers and sisters who were born in this country, of illegal alien parents, are citizens of the U.S. under current law.

Congress needs to face up to this problem. It can pass a law closing the loophole in the citizenship status so that parents who are in this country illegally are not tempted to stay so that their children will have citizenship. It can pass a law penalizing employers of illegal aliens thereby cutting off the economic lure of crossing into this country without permission.

Most of all, it and the Carter administration can work with Mexico and other countries toward a feasible program that will encourage legal migration for temporary jobs with the workers returning home when the job is finished.

IT WOULD BE no solution to find a backdoor way of educating children who are in this country illegally, although that certainly would be preferable to relegating the innocent children to a life of no schooling.

Members of minority groups who are citizens of the U.S. have enough problems trying to get into the mainstream of society, however, without complicating their difficulties with thousands of illegal aliens competing for jobs, educations and services.

The federal government has dragged its feet far too long. It is time for it to come to grips with this compelling issue that affects so many young lives.

AN EDITORIAL:

An Option Opens Opportunity

TENNYSON HAD it all wrong. Nowadays, in the spring of a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of...work, especially if he's graduating from college.

In its spring semester survey of colleges around the nation, the College Placement Council of Bethlehem, Pa., reports that job offers to bachelor candidates are running 31 percent higher than last year. (And this year's upsurge comes on top of a 49 percent increase the previous year.)

As companies gear up for a livelier economy, graduates with degrees in engineering, science and business-related disciplines will be most in demand.

GENERALLY, colleges and universities report increases in both the number of recruiters on campus and the number of job offers to graduates.

In some fields, however, the supply of graduates still greatly exceeds demand. As a result, more students are adjusting their career plans. The Maryland State Employment Agency characterizes many of the graduates it sees as flexible.

"We tell them to stay that way," a counselor said. "Consider taking another job instead of your first choice. Have some options at your disposal."

ART BUCHWALD:

Even Rats Get 'The Business' At Eatery

WASHINGTON—Experiment time was over, and a bunch of white rats went to the lab commissary to relax.

An attractive rat waitress took their orders.

"I'll take a hamburger medium rare, lettuce and a slice of tomato."

"Sorry, we only have hamburgers, no lettuce and no tomatoes," the waitress said.

"Okay, honey," the white rats said, lighting up a cigarette, "anything you say."

Another white rat said, "When are you going to give up smoking? It makes me sick."

"When you get off the Pill, Flo," the rat smoking the cigarette said.

"I CAN'T get off the Pill," Flo replied. "I'd lose my job." Then she turned to the waitress and said, "I'd like my hamburger rare and a glass of Perrier water with a twist of lemon."

"I'm sorry. All we have is water from New Jersey," the waitress replied.

"Skip the water," another white rat said to the waitress. "I'll have a cheeseburger and black coffee with no saccharin and what are you doing to-night after work?"

"Going to bed."

Timely Quotes

A professor at one of our schools put a note on the bulletin board stating that he would be unable to meet his "classes" that day. Some wise-guy erased the "c", which got a lot of chuckles. When the prof returned and saw the edited note, he erased the "l."

I wish that I could retain Through a herculean feat, As much of what I read As I do of what I eat.

A concerned mother was checking labels in a supermarket, looking for a snack for her 15-year-old boy. After she had put down about a dozen, the kid said, "Mom do you really want to know my favorite food? It's Red Dye No. 4!"

A survey shows the average wage earner was $500 in debt at the end of the year. Those of us who oved more can only pray that the law of averages catches up with us.

Passerby vows spring is truly with us. He heard the first screech of a Little League mother.

THE REASON is clear. Twice as many students entered the labor force between 1969 and 1976 (approximately 8 million) as in the previous seven-year period. A study by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts this trend will continue probably through the mid-1980s.

It concluded that as more graduates decide that working outside their field is better than unemployment, "about one in four will have to enter a non-traditional occupation."

The study added that graduates of four-year colleges will compete with graduates of two-year junior and community colleges for many openings.

COLLEGE PLACEMENT offices are besieged. For example, George Washington University reported twice as many students using its placement facilities last year as in 1976.

As more incoming students anxiously ask, "Can I get a job from here?" the importance of the link between college gown and business town increases.

To help strengthen that vital connection, alumni increasingly should be encouraged to establish or reaffirm an "old boy-old girl" network to help graduates facing the lonely task of finding a job.

"Hey, that's no fun."

"It so happens I'm one of the rats who is 'not' on the Pill. They have me on placebos," the waitress said.

"FORGET I asked," the white rat said.

Another rat said, "You have any Valium malted?"

"We only have Valium cherry soda."

"Okay, I'll have one of those and a hamburger just slightly singed on both sides."

"You want French fries with that?" the waitress asked.

"Are they cooked in saturated or unsaturated oil?"

"Saturated. What kind of place do you think we're running?"

"Don't get mad, I'm a heart patient," the white rat said.

"Oh, go ahead, Mike, have some saturated French fries," Flo said. "You only live once."

THE WAITRESS kept writing down the orders.

The last white rat was shedding hair all over the table. "Hey Mathilda, what happened to your coat?"

"They've been spraying hair dye on me all day long. I think I'll have a tuna fish sandwich."

"We're out of tuna fish. All we have left is hamburgers."

"All right, I'll have a hamburger broiled."

"We only fry them here," the waitress said.

Mathilda sighed. "Give it to me fried but red on the inside."

In 20 minutes the waitress was back. She placed down the orders.

They all looked at their hamburgers.

"HEY, WAITRESS," said Mike, "this hamburger's well done."

"So's mine," another one cried.

"Talk to the manager. I only work here."

The white rats were so hungry they decided to eat their hamburgers without complaining. Then they left.

The next night the commissary was completely empty. The manager said to the waitress, "Where is everybody?"

"Beats me," the waitress said. "All I know is a lab technician came in about an hour ago and asked me how many customers had eaten well-done hamburgers last night. I told him, and he ran out of here with a big grin on his face."

Blooper At The Fed

WASHINGTON—William Miller, the widely praised new chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has made a potentially serious tactical blunder by seeming to reverse his stand on a touchy tax question because of Carter administration pressure.

At issue is Wisconsin Republican Rep. William Steiger's popular proposal to roll back capital gains taxation to 1969 levels, now the business world's No. 1 legislative target.

In private sessions with Republican congressmen and business representatives, Miller gave the distinct impression of supporting the Steiger amendment or at least its concept. Soon after-

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

A Genius Of Words

KRONBORG CASTLE, Denmark—The original source of "Hamlet" is not William Shakespeare. The plot of "Hamlet" is the work of 12th-century Saxe Grammaticus, secretary of Bishop Absalon, founder of Copenhagen (Kobenhavn). But who in England, our country and throughout the world would know it?

The plot of "Hamlet" comes from the ancient Jutland legend, "Saga of Amled." The name "Hamlet"—or Amled, in Danish—is derived from "Amloede." In early Jutland dialect it meant "mad."

Grammaticus assembled ancient Danish legends—including the "Gesta Danorum" (History of the Danes)—and published them in Latin (1220). His "Amled" unquestionably is the basis for Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

KING-FENGE (in Shakespeare, Claudius) quarrels with his brother Orvedal, king of Jutland and father of Amled (Hamlet). He married the King's widow, Gerunde. Worldwide critics usually regard Hamlet as a procrastinator, but he was not.

Hamlet was really a butcher. He checks a story that is perfectly true then kills the wrong man. And Hamlet's dilemma was whether or not to take arms against a sea of troubles.

With abundant variations, so it goes in Saxe Grammaticus and Shakespeare alike.

Grammaticus' tale is set in East Jutland in the 7th century. On a heath near Raders, East Jutland, you will find Amled's grave. An inscribed granite headstone marks the spot which long research has found to be Hamlet's real grave.

KRONBORG CASTLE—Hamlet's castle—is in Heisinger, 30 miles north of Copenhagen. The castle has many pinnacled towers of varied sizes, a large courtyard and thick stone walls against which the sea crashes endlessly. It is Shakespeare's Elsinor Castle, the setting for his greatest tragedy. But, most certainly, the Bard never had anything to do with Elsinor. He heard about it only from travelers returning to England.

The English language's documented records extend back for more than 1,200 years. Modern English is a rich and living mixture of German-French words with their Latin roots and the blunt Saxon words of early Britons. It has a marvelous vocabulary—about four times that of other used languages. In fact, among all the world's 142 used languages, English is the most popular; the closest to a universal language that exists.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE could compress truths into single syllables. "To be or not to be" is man's largest question put into man's smallest and simplest words. But, once uttered, they expand to fill all the space in the human mind. At the time this earthy, robust genius came along, England had been torn by wars—the War of the Roses for one—as had the rest of Europe. It was a troubled world, like today's—has there ever been any other kind? For it is Shakespeare's amazing timeliness—the permanence of his portraits—that is finally the most astounding.

Shakespeare had a largeness of mind, wit and humor, and a soul hospitable to the whole experience of mankind. But even Shakespeare was not spared the subsequent injustices of envy.

To this day, however, 361 years notwithstanding, in theaters and libraries throughout the world, scholarship's honored maxim remains: "You do not judge Shakespeare; Shakespeare judges you."

ward, following arguments by Treasury Sec. Michael Blumenthal, Miller publicly opposed it. Miller's position on the Steiger amendment is scarcely a matter of life and death, either for him or the amendment. What could be deadly are doubts Miller has generated among congressmen and businessmen about his own credibility, an indispensable asset for the nation's central banker.

EQUALLY IMPORTANT is what the incident shows to businessmen, here and abroad, about Miller's ability to run the Fed independently of administration pressure.

Since taking over from Dr. Arthur Burns March 8, Miller has energetically demonstrated independence of President Carter by word and deed. Those demonstrations are now undercut by Miller's handling of the Steiger amendment.

On April 21 Miller received James Davidson of the National Taxpayers Union. With Davidson was Richard Rahn of the American Council for Capital Formation, an organization beating the drums for the Steiger amendment. The two lobbyists pushed Miller to get behind the amendment.

WITHOUT FLATLY endorsing the proposal, Miller left little doubt with Davidson and Rahn that he liked the idea and believed it would generate more tax revenues by stimulating economic activity.

The happy word sped through business and congressional grapevines for two weeks, leading to Miller's May 3 appearance at the weekly off-the-record breakfast of the S.O.S. Club, a potent group of Republican Congressmen.

Steiger himself asked about the capital gains question, and others chimed in.

Again, those present got the distinct impression that Miller was backing lower taxation of capital gains in general and the Steiger amendment in particular.

IT WAS, therefore, with some shock that Rep. Barber Conable of New York, the Ways and Means Committee's senior Republican and present at the S.O.S. breakfast, received a letter from Miller dated May 5 unequivocally opposing the Steiger amendment.

The conclusion, among the S.O.S. members, quickly spread by word of mouth, was that the administration had talked the chairman of the Fed into opposing what the President regards as a cancer on his tax program.

Through a spokesman, Miller informed us he never endorsed the amendment and was never even called upon to discuss that specific proposal—a claim at variance with several other accounts of the April 21 and May 3 meetings.

Miller also said, according to the spokesman, that he had not discussed the Steiger amendment with "anybody in the government other than congressmen."

IN FACT, however, Sec. Blumenthal and Miller have talked over the Steiger amendment—definitely at their weekly breakfasts and perhaps on other occasions.

While bending over backwards to insist he did not turn Miller around, Blumenthal acknowledges he argued against the Steiger amendment over the breakfast table—tacit admission that at one point Miller was much friendlier to the proposal than he is today.

Reactions to all this are mixed. "I'm disappointed," a terse Steiger told us. The Taxpayers Union's Davidson chooses to believe Miller in his heart favors the capital gains rollback "no matter what he says in the letter (to Conable)."

Other influential business leaders are deeply worried over the implications about Miller's credibility.

WHILE White House aides and other administration officials are publicly unhappy over Miller's conservative anti-inflation rhetoric, they privately advise he is probably just appeasing his business constituency and will end up as a loyal member of the Carter team.

Precisely that fear is secretly expressed by some of Miller's fellow governors on the Fed. Their apprehensions were stoked by the Current Business Week's account of "the new Miller-Carter economic accord."

That is why Miller's blooper on the Steiger amendment is most untimely. His admirers have been saying that ex-industrialist Miller reflects the razor-sharp intellect of Robert S. McNamara, but with political know-how that McNamara lacked. The second half of that description now seems in doubt.

The Land Craze...

MOST OF US are finding that there's usually too much month at the end of our money, but for anybody who has any left, here's a new wrinkle on saving: bury it in the ground.

Not the actual greenbacks, although it might be worth it if they came up as real lettuce. What the experts are telling us is: (1.) Invest in land, and (2.) Build your next home underground.

The first idea isn't exactly new. In this inflation generation, about the only way folks can keep their dollars from disappearing is to buy real estate. But lately it has taken off to where we hear stories about people actually doubling their money in a year or two.

That's if you're lucky enough to buy property in a "hot" area where values are going up so fast even real estate brokers are gasping.

PLACES LIKE Washington, D.C., Houston and Dallas, bedroom suburbs around big cities, resort areas, and almost any place in California.

That covers so much territory you can forget the statistics that show home prices up by only 18 percent in the last three years. (And even that beats what you earn on most common stocks.)

There are a lot of things that make land a good investment. To begin with, you gain control of a finite resource in a demand market. There are only so many hunks of handy dirt left to build on, and when that's gone the only way anybody can manufacture any more is to land-fill over water.

A lot of buyers would rather build on something that's been around a few million years.

ALSO, UNLIKE antiques, paintings and jewels, it's hard for anybody to steal a plot of ground. So you save a bundle if you need cash in a hurry you can almost always unload it at a fat profit.

Especially these days, with European and Arab investors pawing the ground for American real estate. Last time anybody added it up, for instance, the Arabs owned $50 billion worth of California, and the lines aren't getting any shorter.

There are risks, as with any investment property, but most of these can be avoided by following the three basic rules for choosing real estate: (1) Location; (2) Location; (3) Location.

If raw land is your choice, it's possible to double your money in a few years by going into a subdivision deal with a home builder.

BUT THAT takes inside information on new roads, zoning changes and what those in the business call "a very keen sense of how a town is growing."

(If you have a brother-in-law on the City Council, disregard the above.)

Your best bet when looking for a second income (from an apartment building, rental house or office complex) is to buy something that's already built. That's because rents always lag way behind rising construction costs.

Which brings us to the latest thing in building: the underground gimmick. Or...move in with the moles and cash in on the savings.

Obviously, this is not for everyone. Folks who get claustrophobic in elevators would probably spend their savings on psychiatrists. Better they should build topside, where the sky pokes through the smog once in a while.

But to more and more people, it's beginning to look like the only way to beat the bills. Even with the extra cost of digging the hole.

THERE ARE architects who swear an underground home (or office, school, library or shopping center) is the answer to the energy crisis.

For one thing, you don't need expensive insulation: The earth around you does the job. As for air-conditioning, forget it. The underground cools itself.

Put enough skylights around and you cut your heating costs, too. Chances are, say the drawing-board boys, you won't even need to fire up the furnace until the outside temperature dives to around 20 below.

What this adds up to (get ready, now...) is a 75-percent reduction in your fuel bills.

And with home electricity up almost 13 percent in the past 16 months, and with the predicted "new" energy crisis of the '80s looming over our pocketbooks, that's bound to turn any household into an instant gopher.

UNDERGROUND living has other pluses. You'd never again have to plunk out $5,000 to paint the house. Never again that twice-a-year juggling act to switch screens and storm windows. No more files, either.

But what made a believer out of me, in addition to beating the utility computers out of three-fourths of their monthly bite, is the happy thought that I'd never again have to wash another window.

That's enough to make me start digging right now. And hope the bulldozer shows up before I run out of fingernails.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

SO YOU THOUGHT Spanish was the dominant language south of the border, did you? Likewise. Seventy-six million people in nine countries speak it, true. Consider, though, that a sizable few more, 78 million Brazilians, speak Portuguese.

Q. "How many women who become full-fledged medical doctors quit work to bring up their own children?"

A. Seven out of 100, about.

If all the men in this country with the names of John, Charles or James were to gather in one place, they'd make a city far more than seven times bigger than Los Angeles.

The first puck ever used in rulebook hockey was a rubber ball with the top and bottom sliced off. Scholars at McGill University contend it originated there.

That man said to be the richest in America, Daniel K. Ludwig, routinely flies tourist class.

Takes only .002—that's two one-thousandths—of a second to pop a balloon.

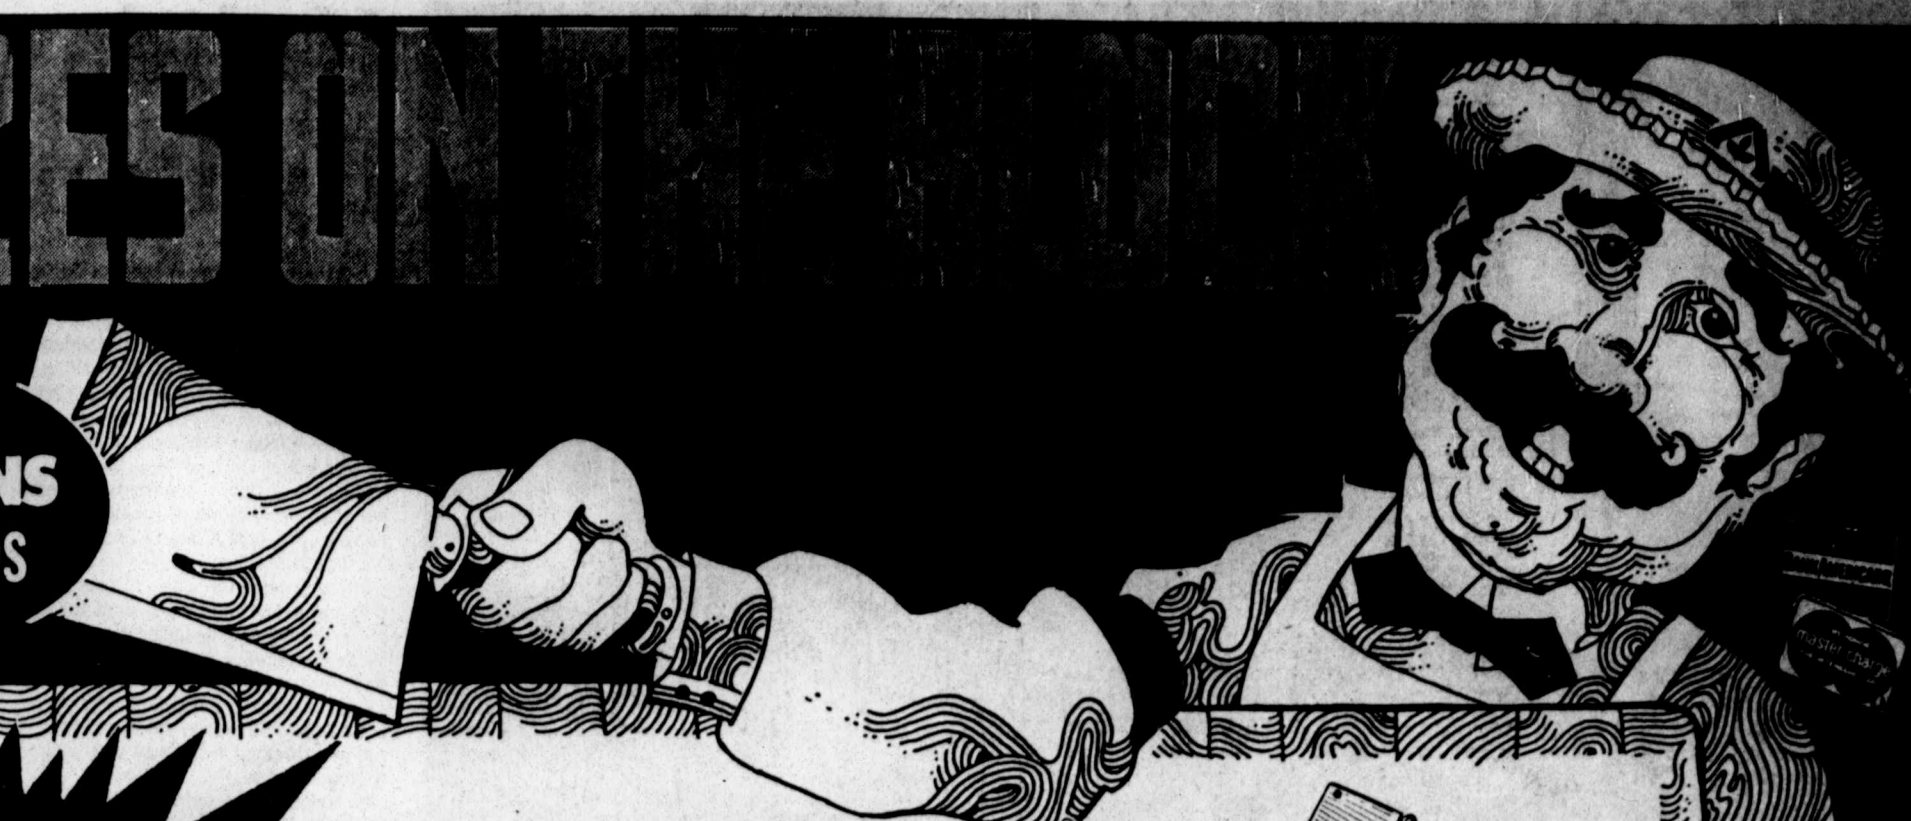

Q. "Wasn't Benjamin Franklin also the inventor of toothpaste?"

A. One of the inventors. His formula called for crushed charcoal mixed with honey.

Maybe the best known product of the 3M Company is Scotch tape. But probably the least known is phony blood, sold to movie, TV and stage producers for their gory scenes.

Holiday Marred By Rape Case

A 20-year-old Lubbock woman flagged down police early Monday morning and told the officers she had been raped.

The victim said that she had decided to walk home from a restaurant about 1 a.m. Monday and had reached Clovis Road and University Avenue when a bearded Mexican-American man drove up beside her.

She told officers that the man ordered her into the car with a threatening tone of voice and then drove to Canyon Lake No. 1 and raped her.

She said after the rape, she suggested they get out of the man's small car and move to near the lake. The man agreed, she said, and once they got out of the vehicle she tried to run.

Her assailant grabbed her by the arm, the woman told police, but she freed herself and threatened the man with a large rock and he ran.

In recently reported burglaries, James D. Townsend told police someone broke into his 2006 45th St. house and took four guns, jewelry and checks, together valued at $1,500.

Burglars who broke out a window at Robert Wade's 1310 E. Tulane St. home made off with about $500 worth of goods, including a television and antique flatware. Wade said the burglars also caused about $100 damage to the window and $50 damage to a china closet which housed the silverware.

A $450 television was taken from the home of Charles M. Cooper at 1707-A 9th St.

Cooper told police the burglars gained entry into his home through a kitchen window he had left open.

Mario E. Benitez of 1906 28th St. rear, told police burglars pried the door of his home and took a .38-caliber pistol, a television and a jewelry box, together valued at $350.

A .12-gauge shotgun was taken from Phillip L. Carroll's car that was parked at his 5313 49th St. residence. Carroll valued the gun at $160.

Elton L. Stafford told police someone removed a $350 motor attached to his boat. The boat was parked in the front yard of his 6601-A Ave. U home at the time of the theft.

Appointment Of Sundown Trustees Set

SUNDOWN (Special) — Sundown school trustees will meet in special session at 8 p.m. today to appoint three new members to the school board.

The new trustees, who would serve until the 1979 school board elections, would replace Carl Anthony, E.W. Roe and Dale Childs.

Anthony, Roe and Childs resigned from the school board May 23.

The three former school trustees recently filed a civil suit against two city residents here alleging libel by defamation of character.

In their lawsuit, the three allege they were libeled by two persons they claim were involved in the distribution of a letter to city residents just before the April 1 school board elections.

Sundowners Ella Mae Burnett and C.R. Carpenter were named as defendants.

The lawsuit contends the three men were libeled in the letter, which was distributed to every residence in the city just before midnight the day before voters ousted an incumbent school trustee.

Four Children Die In Blaze

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Four sleeping children were killed early Monday when an explosion and fire, apparently ignited by an arsonist, gutted their low-income housing project apartment, investigators said.

Mary Villarreal, 35, the mother of the four victims, and her three other children escaped death, but were taken to a hospital with injuries suffered when they leaped to safety from a second floor window.

The victims were identified as: Eddie Villarreal, 6; Mary Janet Villarreal, 13; Jesse Villarreal, 9; and Julie Ann Villarreal, 10.

The four children were found suffocated in two upstairs bedrooms after the blaze was extinguished, investigators said. The two dead girls "almost reached the window," but the two boys were not close to the window of their room, said Assistant Fire Chief Jimmy Saldana.

A neighbor, Robert Trujillo, 17, said he was awakened by an explosion about 3:15 a.m. and looked outside. "There were flames all over the (Villarreal) apartment," he said.

Other neighbors were unable to get inside the apartment because of the raging fire. The apartment was completely burned, investigators said.

Saldana said a can that apparently had contained flammable liquid was found outside the rear of the apartment.

"There was a very weak odor of a flammable liquid inside the apartment and that's why we have to say it is probable arson," Saldana said.

The explosion was in the downstairs portion of the apartment and the fire rapidly moved upstairs where the woman and her seven children were sleeping, investigators said.

Selection Begins For Murder Jury

DENTON (AP) — Jury selection for the capital murder trial of Gregory Arthur Ott was scheduled to open here Tuesday, and attorneys have predicted the process will take about two weeks.

Ott, 27, is charged in connection with the Feb. 20 fatal shooting of Texas Ranger Bob Doherty at a rural residence in Argyle.

Ott has been held without bond in the Denton County Jail since his arrest following a drug raid that led to the fatal shooting at his home.

Seventh Victim Of Pair Found By Authorities

HEMPHILL (AP) — Another victim caught up in the month-long reign of terror by two Oklahoma prison escapees has been found.

The discovery of a body positively identified as James Dowdy, 51, brings to eight the number of persons killed by fugitives Claude Eugene Dennis and Michael Lancaster. It had been speculated since May 5, when he never returned from a trip to the trash dump near his lakeside home of Beachwood about 22 miles south of here, that he was killed by the convicts.

Dowdy's body was discovered at a garbage dump near this Southeast Texas community about 3:30 p.m. Sunday. Dr. Jack Pruitt, a Lubbock pathologist, said he identified the decomposed remains as Dowdy from clothing and dental work.

The former railroad worker, who retired in Beachwood, left his home about 2 p.m. May 5 to take some trash to a nearby dump.

Beechwood Constable Tommy Ladner said he and several friends and neighbors had been searching for Dowdy since he vanished. Ladner said Dowdy's pickup truck was found abandoned near Durant, Okla. May 11, prompting authorities to fear he had been kidnapped or murdered by escaped convicts Dennis and Lancaster.

"There were several of us who got together and decided to make one last search today down by the dump," Ladner said prior to the autopsy. "About 75 feet from the road, Ted Hudson saw two feet sticking out from under some old papers...It's him, all right. All the times we searched down there, why I must have walked within 10 feet of him and never seen him."

Dr. Pruitt said Dowdy appeared to have been hit in the back of the head by a shotgun blast. He said there was indication he had been dragged to where his body was found.

With Pruitt's report, authorities can close the book on one of the bloodiest chapters the states of Texas and Oklahoma have ever had the misfortune to share.

Police believe Dowdy was probably the second victim of Dennis and Lancaster. The pair escaped from the Oklahoma State Penitentiary at McAlester April 23. It wasn't long before police could track their movements by the number of dead.

On April 29, David Bobo of Garland was shot to death; Mithal Mathew of Garland was killed May 2; and Bobby Spencer of Denison died May 10. The body of Stacie Beavers of Cuba, Ala., was found May 23 with her throat slashed.

It was then Alabama authorities gave Dennis and Lancaster the macabre nickname "thrill killers." However, police have no witnesses to confirm that the pair was responsible for the deaths of Dowdy, Bobo and Mrs. Beavers.

The manhunt ended at 11 a.m. last Friday when the pair was cut down by state troopers during the second of two vicious firefights in Caddo, Okla. Three troopers also died and a fourth was wounded.

Relatives buried Dennis Sunday afternoon in Bristow, Okla. Prison officials said late last week Lancaster would be buried in McAlester if his body wasn't claimed.

Dependency On U.S. Scored By Islanders

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pacific islanders, preparing to vote on the shape of their own government after three decades as wards of the United States, are complaining that — regardless of their political status — economic realities will keep them dependent.

During two weeks of hearings before the U.N. Trusteeship Council this month, the Soviet Union charged that lagging economic development was part of a larger design to annex the islands for U.S. military interests.

"Micronesia today is an embarrassment to the international reputation of the most developed and powerful nation in the world," said John Ngrakek, speaking for high chiefs Reklai and Ibedul of Palau, one of the island groups in Micronesia.

Micronesia — the "tiny islands" — is the name for some 2,000 central Pacific islands captured from Japan in World War II and administered by the United States as a U.N. trusteeship since 1947.

U.S. and Micronesian negotiators recently agreed that the islands will become an internally self-governing state in "free association" with the United States, which would continue to control military and foreign affairs for the ocean territory. U.S. strategic interests include a missile testing range at Kwajalein, a possible Marine training reservation in Palau, and an insistence that no other power be allowed in the islands.

A referendum on a constitution for the Federated States of Micronesia is set for July 12.

"Micronesians have for too long been forced to rely on the United States for economic survival," Micronesian Sen. Bailey Oltter told the concluding session of the council. "Our right to self-determination ... without economic independence is only a mirage."

Although the United States wants to end the trusteeship in 1981, Oltter said it should not end until Micronesia "can stand on its own feet."

The Soviet representative on the council, Vadim P. Kovalenko, accused the United States of promoting a "deteriorating condition" in the islands to keep them dependent.

The wealthiest part of the territory — the 16 Northern Mariana Islands north of Guam — has split away to become permanent U.S. territory.

The other districts — the Marshall Islands, Ponape, Kosrae, Truk, Yap and Palau — are poor. The estimated per-capita gross domestic product decreased in four of the six districts between 1975 and 1977.

In those districts, only one citizen earns more than $25,000 a year; 6,921 of the 16,616 wage earners in 1976 earned less than $1,000.

Islands that once fed themselves on fish, breadfruit and coconut spent $20.2 million to import food in 1977. Total imports by the six districts was $44.2 million, against $12.1 million in exports.

Micronesia survives, as the U.S. report to the Trusteeship Council admitted, on federal dollars — $82.5 million in direct grants and $31.7 million in other grants in 1977.

That supports the Micronesian government, which provides two of every three jobs. A U.N. report said the security and relatively high pay of the civil service has lured educated people away from risky but sorely needed ventures in capitalism.

Ngrakek said U.S. intentions were good, but observed that the territory had a stronger economy under Japanese control.

"It is the deterioration of our society that causes the most pain," said Roman Tmetuchl, another representative from Palau. "We are consistently insulted by those who would have us return to an idyllic past — grass huts, subsistence farming, an occasional feast."

ERA Opposition Said Due Partly To Pro-Abortionists

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If the Equal Rights Amendment fails to pass, pro-abortionists will have to take some of the blame. Clare Booth Luce said in a letter published in the spring edition of "Human Life Review," an anti-abortion publication.

The former congresswoman, feminist, writer and wife of the late co-founder of Time Inc., Henry R. Luce, said "...I do not accept the extraordinary proposition that women cannot achieve equal rights before the law until all women are given the legal right to empty their wombs at will — and at the expense of the taxpayer."

"There is no logical process of thought by which the unnatural act of induced abortion and the destruction of the unborn child in the womb can be deemed to be a natural right of all women."

Mrs. Luce first expressed her views in a letter to the Women's Lobby, a pro-abortion group, after the lobby's spokeswoman asked her to support their campaign for federally funded abortions.

Mrs. Luce asked that her name be removed from a list of the group's sponsors, and her letter was reprinted "Human Rights Review."

"I wish to disassociate myself from your campaign to purge congressmen who do not agree with your misguided efforts to make induced abortion a legal, normal and moral course of action for all women in all circumstances," Mrs. Luce said.

She said a recent Gallup poll showed "only 22 percent of Americans think that abortion on demand should be legal."

Mrs. Luce said, "If ERA fails to pass, as I now fear it will, a large part of the blame must fall on those misguided feminists who have tried to make the extraneous issue of unrestricted and federally funded abortion the centerpiece of the equal rights struggle."

Mormon Church Says No To ERA Extension

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has formally announced its opposition to proposals to extend the ratification period for the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution.

In a statement issued by the First Presidency of the 4-million member denomination, the Mormons said the extension proposal "appears to be a tampering with and an abuse of the process of amendment."

"We express confidence that this nation is sufficiently strong and fair to be able to resolve any problems of inequality and unfairness to women, or any other group in our society, without abusing the amending process for our most basic document," the statement said.

It said that continuation of the ERA ratification effort "will increasingly divide and polarize this nation."

The ERA, sent to the states in 1972, is three states short of ratification. The current deadline for ratification is March 1979.

The church has long been on record in opposition to the proposed amendment and Mormon women in several western states have been in the leadership of those opposing ratification.

"Any extension beyond seven years is unnecessary, unwise and unprecedented," the statement by the church leaders said. The proposed amendment, the statement said, "has had its full chance to build the support that any constitutional amendment should have to secure passage."

"It seems clear that the ERA lacks the powerful consensus of that very large majority of people in the United States which is so wisely required by its framers to change the Constitution," the statement said.

SPC Music Show Bookings Available

LEVELLAND — Five down. Thirteen to go.

Since the opening in January of its second season, "Texas — Cradle of Giants", the South Plains College produced country music road show, has logged 2,600 miles in travels to Harlingen, Dallas, Turkey, Spur and a homeshow on the SPC campus for the College's first Sandyland Opry Days. About 6,000 people have seen the show thus far, estimated Eddie Trice, dean of college relations at SPC who runs the sound board for the show.

Trice said that a number of engagement dates are still available before the show, with 13 cities remaining on the current schedule, closes the season July 4 on the SPC campus. Interested cities or organizations should contact Trice for booking information at SPC, 894-9611, ext. 231, or write him in care of SPC, Levelland, Texas.

Performances are set May 20 at Kingsland, Lake LBJ; June 1 at Lamesa; June 3 at Crosbyton; return engagement from last year June 9 at Lovington, N.M.; June 16 at Ralls, June 17 at Plains, June 20 at Plainview, June 27 at Littlefield, June 30, at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, July 1 at Bovina and July 4 at SPC. A show also is scheduled June 24 at Brownfield.

This year, the Texas — Cradle of Giants' cast and crew are hosting receptions about an hour before showtime at each stop for all current and ex-SPC students. Trice said, "We want all Ex's, present students to come visit and have a coke with us prior to the show". Trice said.

"Texas — Cradle of Giants" salutes the greats in country music here in Texas with a two-hour show featuring more than 60 country music favorites, folk and modern dances and skits. The 10-member cast have been recruiting from among faculty and students at SPC.

The show was written by Heien Roberts, SPC associate professor of speech who recently was one of 10 college teachers in the state to receive and be named a Piper Professor by the Minnie Stevens Pier Professor Foundation of San Antonio. The Award annually outstanding college teachers.

Mrs. Roberts also serves as the show's director.

During its first season last year, Texas Cradle of Giants traveling showmobile traveled more than 5,000 miles with stops throughout the South Plains region — Lubbock, Hale-Center, Post, Tahoka, Amarillo, Littlefield, Lake Meredith near Borger, Odessa, Bovina, Denver City, Ralls, Plains, Slaton, Hereford, Seminole and Lovington, N.M. among others. An estimated 20,000 saw it then.

This year, around 2,000 retired people from all over the United States saw the Texas Cradle of Giants opening performance last January in Harlingen; about 500 people came to the "Giant" show during SPC's first Sandyland Opry Days Show April 14; 1,000 people saw the show in Dallas April 26 for a national contractors convention and 1,500 fans came for the show during Bob Wills Day festivities in Turkey on April 29; and 1,000 saw the show at Spur on May 6.

TALL MAN DIES — Henry Hite, a vaudeville performer who claimed to be the world's tallest human, died Friday in Chicago. He was 63. Hite was promoted as being 8-foot-2, but the Guinness Book of Records said he was actually 7-foot-6 1/2. Hite is shown standing against the second floor of a Los Angeles motel in October 1971. Carter Slates Two States As Disaster Areas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter declared major disasters Monday for storm-battered parts of Montana and Wyoming, qualifying the two states for federal funds for relief and recovery efforts.

Heavy storms swept through the two Rocky Mountain states beginning May 15 and 16, leaving heavy property damage from flooding in Montana and flooding and mudslides in Wyoming.

And from the president's Disaster Relief Fund will help pay for: disaster unemployment assistance to those who are temporarily unemployed as a result of the disaster, debris removal, and the repair or restoration of damaged or destroyed streets, roads, bridges and public facilities and utilities.

Low-interest disaster loans will be made available by the Small Business Administration and emergency loan assistance will be provided by the Farmers Home Administration.

Federal relief activities in the two states will be coordinated by the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration in the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Administrator William Wilcox will designate the specific areas within the state eligible for federal assistance.

Cleveland Chief Battles Critics

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich, one step closer to facing a recall election, lashed out Monday at opponents who he said are "returning Cleveland to a mockery it has known" in the past.

The 31-year-old maverick Democrat attacked his critics at a holiday news conference called after more signatures were submitted demanding his ouster and the city council president announced plans to block Kucinich appointments to regional boards.

George L. Forbes, president of the 33-member council, said the body would refuse to act on any Kucinich nominations until the recall issue is resolved.

Forbes' decision was revealed Sunday night as leaders of the Recall Committee to Save Cleveland filed an additional 7,066 signatures on petitions.

The original petitions submitted April 28 were 3,335 short of the 37,552 registered voters' signatures required under the City Charter to force Kucinich either to resign or face a recall election.

If enough of the new signatures are validated and Kucinich refuses to resign, the council would have to set an election within 60 days at which voters would decide whether he should stay in office or not.

The drive was triggered by Kucinich's dismissal of Police Chief Richard D. Hongisto on March 24 and by allegations of mismanagement of the city.

"My administration has not hurt Cleveland," Kucinich declared at the news conference. "It has consistently worked to improve the city and its neighborhoods, but the recall has hurt Cleveland, and it is returning Cleveland to a mockery it has known under other administrations."

Kucinich succeeded Republican Ralph Perk as mayor of this highly industrialized city of 700,000 on the shores of Lake Erie. Many recall leaders are supporters of Edward T. Feighan, whom Kucinich defeated in a runoff.

Council Clerk Mercedes Cotner has 10 days to check the additional signatures. But Kucinich said Monday he would ask the Board of Elections to reject thousands of already-approved signatures on various technical grounds.

Forbes' delay in acting on his nominations could affect Kucinich's $17 million sewer-improvements program and his proposals to change the method the city uses to compute rent it is owed by the port authority. Sewer improvements were one of his major campaign pledges.

Forbes said the nominees to the board of the Cleveland Regional Sewer District and the Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Port Authority would not be seated "with the specter of the recall hanging over them."

Kucinich responded Monday that it was "wrong for the president to threaten to withhold important appointments because of the recall."

Kucinich has been at odds with the Democrat-dominated council since taking office. In April, he called the council "a bunch of buffoons" and "a group of lunatics," though he later issued a public apology.

Big Take Expected At Casino

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Casino officials Monday were counting the take from the first weekend of legalized gambling, and from all indications they have a lot to count.

"The crowds are fantastic," said Rick Howe, Resorts International Casino's day manager and a veteran of casinos in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, said Monday. "Nobody expected it to be like this."

"It (the crowd) was as good or better than anything I saw in Las Vegas."

"Estimates range from 50,000 to 100,000 people a day wandering through the casino," said H. Steven Norton, Resorts' vice president and general manager.

Since this resort town's first legalized gambling casino opened for business Friday morning, the 5,000-person capacity casino floor has been packed almost constantly, with long lines snaking along the Boardwalk outside waiting to get in.

Norton said there were no hard figures available on the three-day Memorial Day weekend casino take, but added: "Our equipment is about the same as the MGM Grand Hotel (in Las Vegas) and their win is about $250,000 a day. Our crowd is higher than MGM but whether we have the high rollers here than we do there is another question."

One knowledgeable source — not associated with Resorts — said the take was at least $500,000 a day.

Norton, however, said that not everybody in the casino was gambling and a lot of customers ran right to the nickel slot machines.

"We had a lot of curiosity seekers here," he said.

Three Battle For Seat As Arkansas Senator

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Gov. David Pryor and two congressmen — all with fairly liberal voting records — Tuesday face a tough Democratic primary battle for the U.S. Senate seat held for 25 years by arch-conservative John McClellan.

Voter interest appeared high, and the forecast called for good weather, prompting election officials to predict an unusually high 60 percent voter turnout. Polls open at 8 a.m. and close at 7:30 p.m.

Pryor and Reps. Jim Guy Tucker and Ray Thornton are vying for the two June 13 runoff positions. A fourth candidate, political novice A.C. Grigson, also is in the race but is not considered a factor in its outcome.

The winner will face taken Republican opposition in November.

Arkansans also will be voting in the Democratic primary to replace Pryor as governor and Tucker and Thornton as congressmen.

Attorney General Bill Clinton, 31, who has raised more money than his four opponents combined, is seeking to become the youngest governor of Arkansas since 1849.

His opponents are lawyers Joe Woodward of Magnolia and Frank Lady of Jonesboro, former county judge Randall Mathis of Arkadelphia and retired turkey farmer Frank Schwarzlose of Kingsland. The Democratic nominee will face Republican state chairman Lynn Lowe of Texarkana in November.

Pryor, Tucker and Thornton all have sought to persuade the electorate they are staunch fiscal conservatives bent on putting a lid on government spending. Pryor and Tucker, in fact, have proposed the federal government end all deficit spending.

However, Tucker and Thornton both produced liberal voting records as House members and Pryor also had a liberal voting record in his three terms as a congressman before being elected governor.

Pryor had substantial labor backing in his unsuccessful Senate race against McClellan in 1972. The AFL-CIO said Pryor had compiled a 100 percent pro-labor voting record in his final congressional term, whereas McClellan had scored zero.

However, Pryor lost that support in his two terms as governor. Labor has since endorsed Tucker, praised Thornton and called for Pryor's defeat in the Senate race.

The AFL-CIO reported that Tucker had compiled a 78 percent pro-labor record and Thornton a 64 percent record on key issues.

National Gallery Opens New Facility

WASHINGTON (AP) — All was organized confusion Monday as the National Gallery of Art put final touches on its new East Building, which will be opened officially on Thursday.

President Carter is scheduled to be the first official visitor, escorted by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, chairman of the board of regents, and Paul Mellon, gallery president and a principal donor to the building's cost of $94.4 million.

On Monday, gallery Director J. Carter

Brown showed some influential visitors around.

But most of those present were from the contracting firm, lighting installation men, curators, picture hangers, persons silkscreening labels on the thousands of exhibits, art and architecture critics, reporters, magazine writers and cameramen.

It seemed unlikely that order would be restored before Tuesday night, when the first of a series of dinners and luncheons will be held for those who have been involved in the project, one of the major arts events of the past several years.

But David Scott, assistant to Brown who has been supervisor of the project since its inception, told a reporter he expects the chaos to be eliminated in time. He was seen doing his own part by carrying a huge standing ashtray in one of the few areas where smoking is permitted.

The National Gallery of Art was opened in 1941, largely the gift of Andrew W. Mellon, Pittsburgh financier and art collector and former secretary of the treasury. The new East Building was paid for by a trust fund he established and by his two children, Paul Mellon and the late Ailsa Mellon Bruce. No public funds are used for acquisitions, although the federal government provides maintenance.

The site of the new building, a gleaming structure of marble, glass and steel, is a few blocks from the foot of Capitol Hill. It is on what was one of the last remaining building spaces on the national Mall. A moving underground walkway connects it with the original gallery.

Eight major exhibitions have been mounted, including an unprecedented loan show from Dresden in the communist German Democratic Republic which will be seen later in New York City and San Francisco.

Other shows extend the National Gallery's horizon further into American contemporary works. When it was established, it showed only old masters.

"Whether it actually accomplishes that purpose depends less on the law itself than on whether Congress chooses to use the procedures and powers available to it."

"The War Powers Resolution, in short, is designed to make it more difficult for Congress to acquiesce in future situations like Vietnam," Holt said.

"Whether it actually accomplishes that purpose depends less on the law itself than on whether Congress chooses to use the procedures and powers available to it."

War Powers Rule Untested, Study Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The War Powers Resolution, requiring a president to consult Congress before sending American troops into hostile situations, has yet to develop into a test of wills between the two branches of government, says a former Senate Foreign Relations Committee aide.

Pat Holt, who was chief of the panel's staff from 1974 to 1977 said in a study released recently by the American Enterprise Institute that the problem presented by the resolution "is at least as much political as it is constitutional" — can Congress participate in decision-making in the middle of a crisis?

"At any given moment, the relative powers of the president and Congress are what either feels it can get away with," Holt said in the study, which comes at a time when President Carter is complaining that congressional restrictions are hampering his ability to counter Soviet gains in Africa.

The War Powers Resolution became law in 1973 over President Nixon's veto. Besides prior congressional consultation, it requires the president to report to Congress within 48 hours after American troops are sent into hostile situations.

And 6 days later, that troop involvement ends automatically unless Congress approves it by then.

The study deals with how the resolution worked in several crises: The rescue of 65,000 refugees by U.S. naval vessels during the fall of Danang to Communist Vietnamese forces in April 1975; the evacuation of Phnom Penh and Saigon when they fell; the rescue of the crew of the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez from the Cambodians; and stationing of an American amphibious task force near the Lebanese coast in case 1,400 Americans needed to be rescued after the murder of the U.S. ambassador and another embassy official.

Holt said none of those short-lived incidents was a test either of executive compliance or congressional response. "Therefore, the real test is yet to come," Holt said.

The study said the main problem with the resolution comes from "its effort to define with too much precision the authority of the president to act unilaterally. The result is to make that authority either too broad or too narrow."

Holt said many lawmakers who supported the resolution viewed it as "nothing more than an attempt to restate and thereby reassert what they considered to be the ancient powers of Congress, powers which had atrophied through lack of use."

"The War Powers Resolution, in short, is designed to make it more difficult for Congress to acquiesce in future situations like Vietnam," Holt said.

"Whether it actually accomplishes that purpose depends less on the law itself than on whether Congress chooses to use the procedures and powers available to it."

Scientist Opposes Neutron Bomb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A chemist who played a major part in the development of the first U.S. atomic bomb says it is "preposterous" to call the neutron bomb humane and it would be "folly" to deploy it.

George Kistiakowsky, professor emeritus at Harvard, expressed his views on the controversial neutron bomb in an article, released Monday, that appears in the June issue of The Atlantic Monthly.

President Carter has delayed a decision on whether to go ahead with production and deployment of neutron bombs for missiles and cannons designed to halt a Soviet tank advance into western Europe in the event of war.

Kistiakowsky, who headed the Manhattan Project's World War II Explosives Division, said the neutron weapons were first tested by U.S. scientists nearly 25 years ago. But they only came to public attention last year when a reporter identified an item hidden in a defense appropriation as a neutron bomb.

Kistiakowsky said that as far back as 1960, when he was on President Eisenhower's scientific staff, the neutron bomb already was being misrepresented as a weapon that "when exploded above ground would kill everybody within a certain range but do no grave harm to anybody a little farther away."

"It is preposterous to call the neutron bomb humane, as some of its proponents have done," he said. "The area of rapid battle incapacitation of tank crews would be but one-fifth of the area of about four kilometers in diameter within which the great majority of exposed individuals, military and civilian, would suffer radiation illness and a large fraction would die either from that or years later from cancer."

He said the neutron bomb "does not appear to be more humane than the fission warhead, and is perhaps worse, being reminiscent in its delayed effects of the poison gases of World War I, which were outlawed by the Geneva Protocol of 1925."

The scientist wrote that Soviet tactical doctrine calls for a large separation between tanks in nuclear warfare environment and if the NATO forces deployed the neutron bomb, "the Soviets are likely to provide added radiation protection to their tank crews."

"Furthermore," he argued, "since exposure to neutron radiation would leave most of the armored vehicles in usable condition, and the battlefield not heavily radioactive from fallout, the attacker could be prepared with replacement crews to return the armored vehicle to battle quickly."

Precision-guided missiles already perfected could do a better tank-killing job, he said.

Chinese Troops Aid In War On Drought

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese troops have been helping peasants dig ditches and carry water to wheatfields in the fight against drought in a number of areas, China's official Hsinhua news agency reported.

The agency, in a dispatch received here, said units from Peking, Tsinan, Wuhan, Nanking and Sinkiang were involved in the operation. Some anti-aircraft units in Shantung Province have been assigned to make rain by shooting into clouds, it said.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How can I prevent sunburn this summer? When is the best time to take sun, if any, for a person sensitive as I am? What is the best lotion to prevent sunburn? How long should a burn last normally? — R.K.

If you live in the temperate zone, the best time to sun yourself is before 10 a.m. and after 4 p.m. In those periods the burn-producing wavelengths of sunlight are largely filtered out. If you are extra-sensitive use caution even during those hours.

Avoid sunning by a body of water. The reflections can be quite damaging, especially since the coolness can appear deceptively benign.

An initial exposure of no more than 20 to 30 minutes keeps most sunbathers safe, although this is a matter of common sense. You know from your own experience how much sun it takes to turn you into a broiled lobster. Brunettes burn less than blondes. As you tan, the exposure may be increased by 10 minutes per exposure.

There are many effective sunscreen lotions and other preparations to choose from. Effective ingredients to look for include para-aminobenzoic, benzophenone, or titanium dioxide. Preparations should be applied 30 to 60 minutes before exposure because the protective chemicals take about a half hour to bind to the skin and be effective. Remember they can be washed away by swimming and perspiration.

A burn takes from an hour to a day to develop, and usually subsides within 72 hours. The skin may remain sensitive to future exposure for several weeks after that.

The best way to alleviate symptoms? Dousing with cold water. Beware local anesthetic ointments.

Serious complications occur when extensive areas of the body are affected at once.

Common sense will keep you sunburn-free more than all the lotions you can buy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a prostate operation a few weeks ago and have had urination problems ever since. I still have to get up at night to urinate (a little at a time). I thought the surgery was to correct this. How come? Can you explain? — M.A.

This is not unusual. Some lack of control may be expected, but it should correct itself in time. There may be some infection. I haven't space to go into this in great detail here, but it is explained, along with methods of relieving it, in my booklet "The Pesky Prostate," which you can order by sending 35 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Control is usually regained within six months. You should have been told to expect this.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had the mumps when small on one side only. Now at 46, I've had a full case on both sides. Some doctors say you can have them three times. Some say only once. Please verify. — A.R.R.

One attack of mumps usually confers lasting immunity, whether one-sided or two-sided. Second attacks are not unheard of, but are uncommon. I have not heard of third attacks. Perhaps your childhood symptoms were not of mumps at all, but some other infection. Further comment would depend on whether you are male or female, which I cannot tell from your letter. Other correspondents take note.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has a lot of migraine headaches and has had them for a number of years. Would you please advise me where I can get Dr. Claude Frazier's book, "Coping With Food Allergy," which you mentioned several months ago? — Mrs. M.P.

Dr. Frazier's book is published by Quadrangle Press and does, incidentally, have diet suggestions in cases of migraine headache. You might find it useful. The publisher's address is 10 East 53rd St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Headaches! You can beat them. Write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: This hint has saved me many hours of needless steps, so I hope it will help some of your readers.

When I am doing my housecleaning I always seem to get off-track when I go to another room to put something away.

So now I put a TV table by the door of the room I want to clean. On it I have all the things I need for cleaning such as dust cloths, etc.

If I find something that belongs in another room, I put it on the table in a TV tray so when I get to that room to clean it, I just take it off and put it away.

Every room gets completely clean before I have to leave it — and in half the time — Sue Kreihamp

And with half the effort, according to a friend of mine who has four kiddoes. She also said she would need bushel baskets instead of a TV tray for the items which belong in other rooms.

Anyway, whatever you use, your idea is a good one! Gracias! — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE: I'm told our friendly national law enforcement agency has over 150 million sets of fingerprints on file.

That's nothing... I'm sure I've wiped more than that off my refrigerator door! — Phyllis

DEAR HELOISE:

I save the bags my sugar comes in to put ice cubes in.

The cubes never stick and it's so nice to have extras in case company drops in.

Thank you for all the wonderful tips you've given us "old" brides — all those things no one ever told me — Eileen Taylor

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE: How many times have you been out shopping in an unfamiliar part of town and had time on your hands to drop in on an old friend who you know lives in the general area, or stop off at a shop you have been meaning to visit? But alas, no specific address.

When your new edition of the telephone directories arrives, place the old ones (including the classified) in the trunk of your car.

No more stopping off at a roadside telephone booth or the nearest service station seeking advice. — Calvin

DEAR HELOISE:

Would some of you good guys or gals give me some suggestions? I'm on a 1000-calorie diet and get so tired of lettuce, carrots and cottage cheese. Have any of you got quickie ideas or recipes for someone like me who lives alone? — R.N.

I'm sure there are many of our dear guys and gals who would love to help you out (write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.) But in the meantime, visit your nearest library.

Look in the cookbook section or ask the librarian for help. There's a wealth of ideas there to help you with your problem. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I found a great way to keep my house plants alive while I am away on a short vacation.

Save all plastic bags from pillows, blankets, etc.

Water all plants the day before you leave. When ready to leave pull the plastic bags up over the hanging pots and tie to the hanger.

Other pots of plants can also be done this way. Just pull the plastic bag up over the plant and tie on top. Leave the bags loose.

This creates a terrarium and the plants will have room to grow and thrive. — Mrs. Janet Hutzler

DEAR HELOISE:

I made a discovery the other day that I'd like to pass on.

I bought an ecru plastic tablecloth that looks like a linen cloth, and the first time I used it someone spilled spaghetti sauce right in the center of it.

I tried various soaps and cleansers to remove the stain, but it still left a tomato stain.

The other day I was going to use the cloth again and my eye caught a fresh lemon on the shelf of the refrigerator.

I cut off a wedge of the lemon, rubbed it on the stain and it was completely gone. — Molly Geller

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Sometimes the best rubber bridge play isn't at all apparent. For example, the best way to play today's hand is for South to lead a club toward his own hand and stick in the nine.

This looks rather silly yet it gives South a 68 percent chance to collect four club tricks and four is the exact number of club tricks he needs to fulfill his contract.

How about the obvious way of playing clubs, which is to cash the king and lead toward dummy for a finesse? That play will produce four tricks only 60 percent of the time. It will produce a fifth trick some 18 percent of the time, but a rubber bridge declarer doesn't need that fifth trick. He wants the best play for his contract.

Holiday Changes Sunday Deadline

Because of the Memorial Day holiday, all items for publication in the Sunday, June 4, edition must be submitted to the Family News office no later than 5 p.m. Tuesday.

This deadline includes engagement and wedding announcements, items for volunteer directory and club calendar items.

Where does that extra 8 percent come from? The lead to the nine puts that card to work. We are sure of four tricks against any 3-3 break. If they break 4-2 the play works any time East holds the queen and one of the 10 spot with or without the queen. The finesse play only handles those 4-2 breaks where West holds the queen.

How should you play the hand in duplicate? Take the simple finesse play. Everyone will be in three notrump. Don't give up the potential overtrick.

Ask the Experts

A Canadian reader wants to know if 10 high-card points is the most likely number to hold.

Yes, it is. You should expect to hold exactly 10 high-card points 9.405 percent of the time. The second most probable holding is nine points which you should get 9.3562 percent of the time.

Clip 'n' Cook

BUFFET MEDLEY
2 3/4 cup water
1/2 cup sweet pickle liquid (drained from sweet gherkins)
2 tbsps. cornstarch
2 packages (12 ounces each) cocktail frankfurters
1/4 cup sliced sweet gherkins.
1 jar (8 oz.) red maraschino cherries, drained
1 can (11 oz.) Mandarin oranges, drained
In a large saucepan, thoroughly blend water, sweet pickle liquid and cornstarch. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and begins to boil. Add cocktail franks, sweet gherkins, cherries and Mandarin oranges, cover and cook over low heat, stirring occasionally until franks are heated, about 6 minutes. To serve, spoon into chafing dish; keep warm. Makes 12 servings.

SLOPPY JOE PIE
8 ozs. uncooked elbow macaroni
6 slices American cheese
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 envelope seasoning mix for Sloppy Joes
1 1/2-lb. can tomatoes
1 package (10-ozs.) frozen peas, partially thawed
Cook and drain macaroni as directed on package. Finely dice 4 slices of the cheese; add to macaroni with egg and toss lightly to mix. Spoon into well-greased 9- or 10-inch piepan to form a macaroni "crust." Bake at 400 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes, until lightly browned. Combine contents of envelope of seasoning mix, tomatoes and peas in saucepan. Simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Spoon into baked crust. Cut remaining cheese into strips; arrange on top of pie. Bake at 400 degrees for 5 to 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the woman whose husband works 12 hours a day, six days a week. She is worried that he might die of a heart attack.
My husband is a farmer. He works 16 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year. I work with him as much as I can. My husband doesn't smoke or drink, and I am not worried about him dying of a heart attack, but he MIGHT die from a broken heart.
Our farm is worth about $200,000 but we have less to live on than most people on welfare. Many farmers (including my husband) work for less than the minimum wage. When one considers the hours he puts in and how important weather can be to his entire crop, it's a shame.

Did you know that farmers represent only four percent of the population? At one time over 30 percent of Americans lived on farms.
We have no political influence. People who know nothing about farming make the laws that regulate our lives. We are being squeezed out of existence. No young person in his right mind wants to make farming his life's work. And who can blame him? If young people refuse to farm, who is going to feed this nation? Sign Me — Worried Sick In Superior, Wis.

Dear Worried: You raise some very provocative questions, and I don't have any answers. If the Secretary of Agriculture, Bob Bergland, would like to respond, I will gladly print his letter.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED
NEW YORK — CBS serials are making up for lost time in jumping on the location-shooting soap opera bandwagon. ABC has become a skilled trendsetter in the last few years in moving soap cameras out of the three-walled studio set and into the open-air streets. NBC has dragged its feet in this particular serial innovation. But CBS serial viewers will have an unclaustraphobic plethora of visual location delights during the next couple of weeks.

"As The World Turns" goes to outdoor shootings this week in a small New Jersey town as well as in New York State's Hudson Valley. The studio refused to issue advance notice of what characters are involved, but rumors persist that the scenes will involve a climactic turning point in the Bob and Karen storyline.

"Search For Tomorrow," packed actors Lisa Buck and John James (Kylie and Tom) off to the nation's capital for romantic cherry-blossomed park backgrounds. And "Guiding Light" will treat viewers to film footage of the Bahamas during a several week air period that involves honeymooners Ben and Eve McFarre (played by Stephen Yates and Janet Gray). That bit of information may be tipping the story scales, but surely everyone expected blind girl Eve and her loving knight Ben to tie the knot after all their various woes. An expected plot knot will be unraveled, however, during the Bahamas filming that will involve the mysterious past of Dr. Peter Chapman (played by Curt Dawson).

A serial location of a different sort took place recently when the fan clubs for Erika Slezak and Lee Patterson (Vicki and Joe Riley on "One Life to Live") joined forces for their annual get-together in honor of the serial stars. At the meet, Erika announced she's officially engaged to marry actor Brian Davies sometime this summer after his TV costarring role in "The Dain Curse" and his film role in Burt Reynolds' "Convoy" hit the screens. Lee, meanwhile, is devoting his free-screen love by tending his 53-foot Newporter sailing ketch.

Richard Dean Anderson (Jeff Webber on "General Hospital") admits that the best thing about playing a continuing role on a serial is the financial security it gives an actor. And with that security, Rick's been taking juggling lessons on the side. "The producer of our show," says Anderson, "is more pleased that I've taken up that hobby than when I was learning hang gliding."

Soap opera performers are increasingly being used to boost game show ratings. Last week Susan Lucci played a different kind of game than she does as seductress Erica Brent on "All My Children" when she scored on "The $20,000 Pyramid." Next week "Family Feud" will reprise a feature that attracted one of the largest audiences in the show's history when it pits cast members of "All My Children" against folks from "One Life to Live." The winners of that match will then oppose the "Ryan's Hope" clan the following week. Winners in these special "Feud" sweepstakes will donate their winnings to their favorite charities.

After all, they have plenty of winnings (and losses) to contend with on their soap operas. As you'll see when you tune in tomorrow.

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Nutrition 'Magic' Word To American Consumers

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

DALLAS (UPI) — Nutrition is a magic word to American consumers, regardless of their day-to-day behavior, says Ruth Clark, senior vice president for a New York City market research organization.

Mrs. Clark says many are torn between their desire for a more nutritious diet and the decision to eat at fast food restaurants although they know ahead of time the food does not fit nutrition criteria.

She spoke at the 41st annual convention of the Food Marketing Institute, whose membership includes food retailers and wholesalers, manufacturers and related industries in the United States, Canada and abroad.

She said interest in nutrition is due largely to Americans' "all-consuming passion for physical fitness."

"If you have any doubts about the importance of the physical fitness trend, just count the people you personally know well who are jogging, doing exercises, participatory sports, etc., all in the name of well-being."

Mrs. Clark, senior vice president of Yankelovich, Skelly and White, Inc., expects the fitness trend "to grow and grow and grow."

She bases her prediction on a family nutrition trends study completed by her organization in February this year for a large national magazine.

A national representative sample of 1,188 consumers 18 years of age and up were questioned in the final phase.

Asked how their current interest in nutrition compares with that of a few years ago, 77 percent said it was higher.

Yet, 71 percent agreed with the statement, "There's too much talk these days about what's good and what's bad for you when it comes to food."

Mrs. Clark said people are caught between their desire for government regulation and nutritional labeling, and their confusion over labeling language and government regulations.

She said these factors are a major barrier to families eating more nutritiously. Consumer attitudes and behavior don't always match, she added.

Asked what considerations most influence their choice of food, the consumers named, in this order: balancing the budget (41 percent), weightwatching (35 percent), recommended nutrients (17 percent) and not sure (seven percent).

Asked their major concerns about food safety, ingredients and additives, 83 percent ranked appearance first on a list of 13, followed by vitamins, pesticides use and calories.

Mrs. Clark said the respondent ratio of 80 percent women to 20 percent men was selected so the study would more accurately reflect the ratio of persons making food decisions at home.

The fast food restaurant fad has taken the U.S. by storm, so much so that supermarket delegates to the convention ranked fast food departments at or near the top when they talked about competing for consumers' food dollars.

Yet consumers picking a fast food restaurant apparently forget about nutrition. Asked the major factors that influenced such choices, 55 percent ranked speedy service first, followed by friendliness of employees, appearance and decor, food variety, close to home and take-out service.

Asked about major barriers to good nutrition at home, 72 percent put pleasing their families at the head of the list, followed by budget, controversy over product safety, in a rut about what to cook and concern about calories.

Other barriers they named: between-meal snacks, no time to cook, eating in restaurants, everybody eating at different times and children asking for products advertised on television.

The study showed average consumers already feel they are eating more nutritiously than they did a few years ago.

And they feel guilty about eating in fast food restaurants because most associate those establishments with bad diet.

Yet, they keep on doing it: 36 percent said they had visited a fast food restaurant once in the past month, and 28 percent said they had visited four or more.

"It's almost as bad as going to a party," Mrs. Clark said.

They ranked party-going third on a list of favorite leisure time activities that influence diet negatively. Television watching was first, movie-going second, and fast food restaurants, fourth.

Only 58 percent said nutritional labels were easy to read, and 78 percent wanted labels to include more ingredient information.

Only 27 percent said they use labeling for meal planning, as opposed to 59 percent who use it to help get value for their dollars.

Mrs. Clark said the trend to demand nutrition labeling even for raw foods "is largely a reflection of concern with product safety."

Consumers ranked freshness first on a list of 10 major concerns about diet, health and food. Eating a balanced diet was fourth, following enough exercise and enough rest.

Asked if labeling and package warnings made a lot of difference in their buying habits, consumers put product dating, government warnings and advertised specials at the head of a list of 10 factors. Nutritional labeling was eighth.

The study divided families into conventionals and unconventionalals in their attitudes toward mealtimes, food choices and eating habits.

Unconventionalals were defined as consumers who believe a balanced food day is more important than the old-fashioned balanced meal; that three squares a day are not necessary; and that any food can be eaten at any meal.

The groups were split 52 to 48 percent.

CONTACTS HAZARD

Avoid hair spray when wearing soft contact lenses. The spray may get onto the lenses and damage them.

Mrs. Clark said, but "I'd be willing to bet by 1980 the conventionals will be over the fence and on the other side."

Attitudes and behavior also parted company when consumers were asked what trade-offs they would accept. They voted for:

- More nutritional information on products even if it means higher prices;
- Stop advertising to children even if it cuts down on children's programming;
- More government safety regulations even if it means higher prices;
- And elimination of pesticides even if it cuts supplies and increases prices.

They voted against:

- Elimination of preservatives from such foods as jams and jellies at the expense of storage time;
- Elimination of artificial coloring from foods such as meat, gelatin mixes and sauces at the expense of appearance;
- And elimination of saccharine in soft drinks and diet foods at the expense of flavor.

The public is "sick of all the confusion, especially when it runs counter to their own self-interest or availability of substitutes," Mrs. Clark said. "... consumers are making their own judgments about what is important in product safety and what is not."

But she said she expects them to move cautiously in demanding withdrawal if a product is important to them and has no readily available substitute.

Sixty-five percent of the consumers surveyed hold government responsible for public education on nutrition, yet government tied with schools for last place on a list of 10 main sources from which they currently get such information.

American Designers Show Comfortable Fall Styles

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
NEW YORK (AP) — This fall the ideal of feminine beauty will be shaped like a T. It will have broad, padded shoulders and tapered skirts. It will wear spike heels with woolen socks and be draped in a menagerie of little animals.

The fall collections by American designers continue the soft, unencumbered, comfortable styles of seasons past. Dresses are still flowing and sexy.

But several new ideas are established, or old ideas are making a comeback: padded shoulders, shorter pants and a wildness of fur.

Shoulders are padded in jackets and coats to give a mannish, tapered silhouette, sometimes the gangster, the quarterback or the Joan Crawford look.

Ralph Lauren shows big, padded shoulders for the frontierswoman who wears his western styles. He shows pinstripe suits with broad shoulders and snug waists worn with spike heels.

Perry Ellis envisions the tweedy, college quarterback with hulking shoulders. Calvin Klein goes for a look that is sturdy but not ponderous.

Even some dresses have some shoulder padding. Richard Assaty, especially, sees the big T-shape in funnel-dresses with broad shoulders and wide belts.

Coats are becoming more varied and less tailored. There are wrap coats, blanket coats and stuffed life-preserver coats. There are also long crocheted coats and coats that are subtle blends of alpaca, chenille and wool.

Pants are softly gathered at the waist and taper to the ankle in skinny pants. Here and there is a startling padding-over-length often worn with chunky flats or spike heels and bobby sox.

And for a bit of dash, there is a zoo of little furry animals in whole or in part snuggled or dangling just about everywhere for day and evening wear. There are fur wraps, fur alings, fur pouches and fur collars.

Raccoon or fox tails festoon the figure, dangling from belts and bags and hemlines. Sometimes they are combined with feathers, cords, beads and stones for a far-out medicine man look.

Sugar Controversy Continues

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Do you realize that the average American now consumes his or her weight in sugar?

What effect does this enormous amount of sugar have on raising or lowering the serum cholesterol in man's blood? Does that extra spoonful of sugar in your morning coffee or that big almond-chocolate bar on the way home from school in any way endanger your heart? These remain vital questions because of the incidence of heart disease in North America.

Sugar, and its effects, is at the center of a controversy. Some extremists condemn it as though it were poison. On the other hand food processors and sugar manufacturers make defensive statements that often are equally insane.

Table sugar consists entirely or mainly of sucrose. It occurs naturally in sugar cane, sugar beets, sugar maple, sorghum and sugar palms. Sugar's main contribution to nutrition is quick energy.

Sugar in current use seems to be added to almost everything, so it is difficult to avoid a rather large intake. It is added to canned vegetables, soups, pickles, breads, barbecue sauce and breakfast cereals. It adds nothing but calories — no protein, minerals, or vitamins — to these foods.

Does all this extravagant use of sugar in any way threaten to increase serum cholesterol in the body?

Dr. D. Mark Hegsted, research nutritionist with the Harvard School of Public Health, is noted for his sane stand on all the recent food panics.

"In the first place, I can find no reason to suspect sugar to have any effect on the body's serum cholesterol. But I do caution people to eat less sugar. It is not needed. Many natural foods contain sugar, mainly fruits and many vegetables and whole grain cereals. Eat more of these and you will find you don't need so much table sugar. This is contrary to what the anti-sugar fanatics tell you.

"But when too much sugar drives out more valuable foods, such as meats, vegetables, fish, milk and cereals — all eaten in balanced proportion — then sugar does become a threat to health."

Dr. William H. Bowen, acting chief of the National Caries Prevention Program of the National Institute of Health, states:

"Dental caries result from the interaction of specific microorganisms with sugars on a susceptible tooth surface. There is ample evidence that dental caries do not develop in the absence of fermentable carbohydrates (sugar, in this case)."

Dr. Bowen, writing in Contemporary Nutrition says that it is not the amount of sugar eaten that counts, but the number of times sugar is eaten.

Which should cause the man or woman or child about to purchase a sweet snack to worry perhaps less about raising his cholesterol levels and more about getting more holes in his teeth.

Peking Official Predicts War Of U.S., Soviets

UNITED NATIONS — Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua predicted Monday the Soviet Union and the United States will "fight it out" some day, the war will be fought with conventional arms and the Soviets will start it.

The battlefield, he told the United Nations, may well be Western Europe. Huang's keynote address at the start of the second week of the U.N. special session on world disarmament drew angry Soviet reaction.

"Same Old Slander"
"It's the same old slander, but perhaps even more anti-Soviet, more dangerous," said one Russian official.

But Soviet U.N. Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky sat quietly through the entire 31-page onslaught and said later that Moscow would make "no protest."

The bespectacled Chinese warned the 149-nation General Assembly to beware of "disarmament hoaxes" generated by the two superpowers, such as, he said, the Soviet-American strategic arms limitation talks now under way in Washington.

Huang drew moderate applause from a General Assembly sharply depleted by the Memorial Day holiday. When he finished, he strode quickly from the hall, shaking a few hands as he went.

The Chinese foreign minister criticized both Moscow and Washington but clearly reserved his big guns for the Soviets, whom he accused of everything from fomenting new trouble in Zaire to planning "blackmail and eventual invasion of Western Europe." The latter particularly annoyed the Russians.

Shocking Forecast
But it was his forecast of a Soviet-American war that raised eyebrows in an assembly dedicated to seeking a way for the world to end the $400 billion-a-year arms race.

"One superpower (the Soviet Union) is bent on expansion," Huang said. "The other, the United States, has its vested interests to protect."
"As the struggle intensifies," Huang predicted, "they are bound to fight it out some day."

Confrontation in Europe, turmoil in the Middle East and the "gathering storm" in Africa provide the seeds of that war, he said — and, when the war comes, the Soviets will be the ones to start it.

"This superpower flaunting the label of socialism is more aggressive and adventurous than the other superpower," he said. "It is the most dangerous source of a new world war and is sure to be its chief instigator."

Increased Arsenals
Huang also said that when Russia and America do square off, "it is more likely that they will fight a conventional war" — indicated, he said, by the fact that both have enormously stepped up their conventional arsenals even as they negotiate the nuclear-oriented SALT issue.

The foreign minister said Moscow's recent proposal at the European Security Council that the participants renounce the first use of nuclear weapons "was aimed at facilitating its blackmail and eventual invasion of Western Europe by means of its predominant conventional force."

Huang put China squarely in the camp of the developing Third World — "We eagerly desire to lift our country from economic backwardness" — and said the world's smaller nations should put pressure on the Soviet Union and the United States to do more than present "worthless proposals" for disarmament.

Five-Point Demand
Huang submitted no disarmament proposals of his own and instead issued a five-point demand to the Soviets and Americans:

—Renounce the threat of the use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear countries and nuclear-free zones.

—Withdraw all armed forces and dismantle all military bases stationed on foreign soil.

—Stop the nuclear and conventional arms race, destroy by stages their nuclear arsenals and "drastically reduce" their conventional weapons.

—Cease stationing forces along the borders of other countries.

Halt the export of weapons to other countries "for the purpose of bringing them under control or fomenting war or abetting threats of war."

Huang did not say what China proposed to do about its own nuclear arsenal, but he promised the Chinese "will never commit aggression against other countries."

Tuition Tax Credit Due House Debate After Years' Delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is finally coming to grips with issues kept alive for years without a vote: whether tax credits for the cost of tuition should be allowed and what kind of schooling costs should be eligible.

The long-postponed debate is scheduled to begin Wednesday, after the House returns from its Memorial Day break. The Senate is continuing its recess all week.

The House debate will come on a bill that would allow direct subtraction from income tax owed of up to $250 of college or vocational school tuition and on an amendment for credits of up to $100 for tuition in lower schools. No votes are expected before Thursday.

Carter Opposes
President Carter and a number of educational, minority and civil rights groups oppose the legislation, but the House Republican Policy Committee and some educational groups support it, including those who speak for church-affiliated schools.

The bill would allow a taxpayer an income tax credit equal to 25 percent of college or other post-secondary tuition, up to a total of $100 this year, $150 in 1979 and $250 in 1980 per student. The program would end then unless continued by Congress.

The House Rules Committee recommended that votes be allowed on only three amendments.

One would provide credits in addition for tuition to private elementary and secondary schools, with maximums of $50 in 1978, $100 each year in 1979 and 1980.

Higher Basis
Another amendment would raise the basis of the deduction to 50 percent of tuition, but maintain the same ceilings.

The third amendment would be a substitute for the whole bill. Instead of credits, it would provide low-cost loans in the form of tax deferrals, for post-secondary tuition only, and beginning with the second year of college or equivalent education.

Beginning Aug. 1, a taxpayer would be allowed to defer up to $1,000 per student per year. The maximum would go to $1,500 in 1982 and $2,000 in 1986. The deferred amounts would be paid back over a 10-year period at three percent interest.

Carter recommended, instead of tax credits, a $1.2 billion expansion of present student aid programs, with provisions that would make families with as much as $25,000 income eligible for some grants. The House refused to consider such a bill under special speedup procedures, and the effort to bring it to a vote has not been renewed.

Six Defeats in House
Meanwhile, a bill is pending in the Senate, with approval of the Finance Committee, for tax credits that ultimately would provide $500 per student for tuition from elementary through post-graduate levels. Six times in the past the Senate has passed college tuition tax credit bills, but the House has approved none of them.

The major argument that has been made for college tuition tax credits is that they would provide relief to middle income families struggling to educate their children despite steeply increased costs but considered too affluent to qualify for most existing public and private scholarship aid programs.

Opponents of tuition credits say much of the help would go to families that need it least, since there would be no income test and families too poor to owe income tax would receive nothing. They also contend the credit would be so small in proportion to college costs that it would not usually affect a decision on whether to seek higher education. Accordingly, they say, the $1 billion cost to the treasury would be wasted.

Civil Service Bill To Help Informants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, responding to congressional criticism, has agreed to add more protections for "whistleblowers" to the president's civil service bill, several officials say.

Protection will be included for dissident employees who make allegations of non-criminal waste, mismanagement or impropriety, provided they do so confidentially within the government.

This will be added to the protections against firing, demotion or transfer which President Carter proposed three months ago for civil servants who go to the news media or Congress to allege criminal acts or rule violations by their colleagues or bosses.

One of the most noted whistleblowers of recent years was A. Ernest Fitzgerald, a Pentagon analyst who disclosed to a congressional committee a $2 billion cost overrun on the C-5A transport plane in the late 1960s. He was fired from his Air Force job, then ordered reinstated as deputy for productivity management after a seven-year legal battle which he said cost him $400,000.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., alleged that the treatment of Fitzgerald by the Air Force amounted to a cover-up of criminal behavior.

The administration also intends to push for passage of a bill to create strong inspector-general offices inside federal agencies to investigate the substance of complaints by whistleblowers and others. One version of the bill already has passed the House.

The new investigative arms would be in addition to a new special counsel proposed to investigate personnel grievances, including those by employees who say they are being punished for disclosing illegal activities.

The White House is continuing to negotiate with congressional critics of the plan, some of whom want to give wider powers to the special counsel and to protect those who make allegations of non-criminal improprieties to Congress and perhaps to the press.

White House domestic policy aide Fred Lazarus III and three Senate aides who asked not to be named described the negotiations. They said an agreement might be reached this week that would avert a House fight over the whistleblower issue, which has emerged as one of the most controversial aspects of the civil service plan.

Oriental, Mexican Food Garnished With Rebate

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Regular customers at Nguyen Huy Han's restaurant get sweet and sour pork, enchiladas, curry — and some of their money back.

Business has been good for the 42-year-old Vietnamese refugee during the past year, so he is distributing $10,000 in profits among about 1,500 steady patrons.

"This is my way of saying thanks to the community," said Han, who was director of taxation for South Vietnam in 1973 and 1974.

Han initiated the rebate program when he opened the WE (for West-East) Ethnic Restaurant last June. His regular customers — he calls them "friends, bosses and collaborators" — are assigned a number which they use each time they order. That allows him to keep a running tab of their bill for the entire year.

"People thought I was a madman," Han said of initial reaction to his profit-sharing scheme.

To explain how the plan works, Han used the example of a dish of sweet and sour pork selling for $1.50.

"This price includes 80 cents of actual cost (for example, food, labor and utilities) and 70 cents of future cost (unforeseen expenses and profit)," he said. "At the end of the year, if WE keeps 15 cents as profit and all unforeseen expenses are 25 cents, we must pay back the customers 30 cents."

Some of the money that would have gone into this year's dividends went instead to pay a big plumbing bill, Han said.

Han, who arrived here in July 1975, three months after the fall of South Vietnam, lives with a sister, their 84-year-old mother and three nephews a mile from the restaurant. He works to work every day, spending 15 hours a day on the job seven days a week.

To start the restaurant, Han used $500 savings and $4,000 borrowed from Vietnamese friends. The landlord is letting him use the facilities rent-free for two years.

He and his sister, who does most of the cooking for rotating menus of Vietnamese, Japanese, Chinese, Indian, Philippine, Mexican and American dishes, each draw a salary of $150 a month.

Han said his main culinary problem is learning how to cook hamburgers and french fries.

Evacuations From Zaire Continue Amid Concern

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Belgian and French aircraft ferried women and children out of embattled Shaba province Monday in a thinly disguised evacuation amid fears Katangan rebels would strike again.

The last of the 700 French Foreign Legionnaires who parachuted into the copper-mining town of Kolwezi withdrew to the provincial capital of Lubumbashi 210 miles to the south.

They took more than 200 women and children with them from the town of Likasi. These and others in Lubumbashi were being transported to Kinshasa, and from there to Europe aboard French and Belgian aircraft.

The departure of the final contingent of 150 paratroopers in a heavily armed column of jeeps and trucks to rejoin the main force that left over the weekend left the defense of Kolwezi in the hands of the Zaire army.

French officers said they feared there would be a major showdown between the government troops and townspeople, many of them from the same Lunda tribe as the insurgents and believed to be sympathetic to the invasion.

They said they also feared fresh attacks against Shaba's vulnerable mining and population centers by rebels still hiding out in the bush.

Officials denied the airlifting of women and children among the 4,000 evacuee population in Shaba was an "evacuation."

They said many were due annual leave at this time anyway and had been stranded by disruption in air services in the rescue of about 2,500 whites from Kolwezi.

The officials said the women and children, leaving from Lubumbashi and Kamina, were paying normal commercial fares to leave the country. But given the deteriorating situation, it was extremely unlikely any family would return to the area once it had been pulled out.

The withdrawal of the women and children left the men with the choice of staying on amid increasingly dangerous conditions or quitting their jobs and leaving the country as well, diplomats said.

The legionnaires were staying in Lubumbashi for a few more days, and a brigade of Belgian paratroopers based at Kamina also was on hand to help with the airlift.

The massacre of an estimated 200 whites in Kolwezi — and written death threats sent to white families — contributed to the growing mood of alarm among the remaining Europeans.

"If the French and Belgian troops or an international peacekeeping force stay in the area, then we will stay," one white resident said. "But if they go, that's a different matter."

Shaba's future security depended to a large extent on talks President Mobutu Sese Seko was holding Monday with King Hassan II of Morocco at the monarch's country palace at Fez.

About 100 Moroccan troops have been sent to Shaba. But Morocco has indicated it would send additional soldiers only as part of a pan-African peacekeeping force still to be formed.

Student Books Augment Library To Aid Children's Summer Fun grandmother had hurt her arm and — thanks to Tim and Linda — she got to the hospital just in time. "Tim's grandmother got well," author Cathy concluded her story.

Tim the duck might have found a faster way to Louisiana had he consulted some of the other Bean authors, like Ernest Vasquez or Jesse Cruz. Ernest (author of "About a Chopper") and Jesse ("The Hotrod Mechanic") wrote of race-car adventures. Jesse told of winning $10,000 in a race and buying a new house.

Several of the books were dedicated to the students' "publishers" — reading teachers Sandra Tappan and Jill Caldeleugh.

Alicia Gonzales even immortalized Mrs. Caldeleugh's service to Bean with "My Teacher and I." In that book, Alicia tells of Mrs. Caldeleugh's daily routine — how she teaches school and then feeds her dog, jogs, eats dinner and watches television with her husband.

The students' books were entered into the Bean library last week after months in preparation. Even though school is out, children will have a chance to read them over the summer, courtesy of the school system's summer library program.

All elementary school libraries will be kept open for a few days a week from June 8 through Aug. 11. Students should contact their schools for specific schedules.

Beef Costs

ists about how the system works," he said.

When producers sell beef, retail prices are relatively low, as they have been the past couple years, and when they rebuild cattle herds, prices are high, as they are now.

The basis of the cattle cycle is simply that it takes cattle longer to mature than other animals, so decisions made by ranchers and farmers have long-term implications. A calf develops in its mother's womb in nine months and two years later it is mature beef.

The cycle's down side or gradual "liquidation" that began in 1975 started a process of selling female cattle rather than keeping them to breed more calves. Retail supplies were built up and prices reduced as producers sold mothers as well as calves.

Eventually, the supply of cattle was diminished by slaughter of females as well as by the number of calves they did not bear.

The cattle industry wants a tiny share of each cattle sale to spend on beef promotion and marketing research to find a way to convert the "peaks and valleys" of the cycle to "hills and dales." An earlier effort to get that money was defeated in a referendum of beef producers. A chance to get a second referendum is before a House-Senate conference.

NATO Meet

whether the western powers can go on indirectly financing the Soviet military effort and the efforts of its East European partners through huge credits.

East European indebtedness to the West at this time is said by authorities to be nearing $50 billion, in the form of trading arrangements, grain, wheat, machinery and other sales. Within some NATO governments there is a growing theory that this kind of help frees Soviet and East European industries to concentrate on military production.

A possibility under scrutiny, particularly by the British, is to take some heat off the alliance by selling sophisticated defense equipment to China. The Chinese have made it clear to Britain they are interested in buying, for instance, the Harrier jet — for use along their northern frontier areas bordering the Soviet Union. Informal talks on the subject are underway. Peking is believed interested in buying 30 to 40 of these machines and the right to produce up to about 300 more under license in their own land. Britain, in consultation with NATO partners, is believed close to a major policy decision on the matter.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You need to make some necessary changes but are not in the right mood to handle them. Wait until you are able to gain the goodwill and cooperation of others. Study ways to expand your personal interests.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) Take care of a problem that has been bothering you, and then consider new projects that might appeal to you. Know what is going on around you and feel more secure.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good time to be with friends. You are able to reach your aims quietly and constructively at a later time. Know your true aims before you talk to your adviser. Attend a worthwhile function.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Civic work may be annoying, but it should be done now anyway. Be with good friends later. Pay important bills early. Be cheerful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Not a good time to consider new interests, but fine for pushing career matters. Find a better way to solve problems. Be more understanding with those at home.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get at pesky problems early so they are soon behind you. Do not permit mate or loved one to annoy you in any way. Study a new project that could bring in more money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Carry through with your own work and avoid controversy with partners. Use tact with one who opposes you. Be happy with loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Spend some time with partners and come to a better understanding. Take care of health matters. Add to prestige you now enjoy with co-workers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make amusement plans early so they work out fine later. Then get into important work that has to be done. Be more agreeable with kin.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't annoy others in any way at home and then you can have a good day in the business world. Work on some personal aim and get fine results. Watch out for strangers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be careful in motion. Get much done at home and at work. Be gentle with friends and get good results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get into the practical aspects of whatever is of interest to you and get good results. Don't make any heavy monetary investments, though. Take time to be with good friends later.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get into practical affairs early and make considerable progress. Go after whatever it is that appeals to you most. Drive with utmost care.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will easily absorb the condition of the environment around him or her, so be sure to provide the finest you can so that your progeny can express the best in this nature. An interesting and happy life here, if you are sure to give good spiritual training early in life. Sports are a must.

Israeli President Calls For Peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yitzhak Navon, a native-born politician and playwright, became Israel's fifth president Monday and appealed directly to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to reopen stalled Mideast peace talks.

The time has come "for the great reconciliation" between Arabs and Jews, Navon said after taking the oath of office in a colorful ceremony at the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

"The length of road that we still have to traverse is shorter than the road we have already passed," Navon said. He referred to Sadat's historic journey to the hilltop Knesset building last November to start the first direct Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations.

"Too many hopes have been implanted in the hearts of both our peoples for us to be able to disappoint them," he said. "The time for the great reconciliation has come."

Prime Minister Menachem Begin, looking pale and fatigued after running a high fever over the weekend, listened intently from his seat in the first row of the chamber.

"His temperature is down, but he may rest another few days," said spokesman Schlomo Nakdimon. Begin skipped Sunday's Knesset meeting.

Begin has a history of heart trouble. The cause of his fever is not known.

Navon, 57, succeeded Ephraim Katzir in the largely ceremonial post of president. Katzir chose to step down after one five-year term and return to his biology laboratory at the Weizmann Institute of Science.

Navon is a new breed of leadership for Israel, fusing Eastern and Western cultures. He is the first president of Sephardic background, descended from the Jews of medieval Spain who were dispersed by religious persecution mainly to the Arab countries.

Sixty percent of Israel's three million Jews have Sephardic roots, but most have been held back by poor educations and humble backgrounds.

Navon comes from the opposition Labor Party, and his views toward peace talks sharply contrast with those of Begin, who holds the political power.

Begin takes a much harder line toward return of occupied Arab lands and the future of the Palestinians than does the Labor Party.

Navon, who as president is required by law to refrain from partisan politics, supported the government in his inauguration speech.

"There is no foundation for the charge that Israel did not reciprocate" Sadat's offer of peace, he said. "The government proposed a peace plan involving serious concessions and risks which deserves greater recognition in Egypt."

Peace was possible, he said, "if everyone realizes that no side can achieve all its aims."

After the ceremony, televised live, Na-von addressed Israel's half million Arabs and the neighboring countries in an Arabic language broadcast.

In southern Lebanon, Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli-backed right-wing Christians exchanged mortar fire, and unofficial reports said three civilians were killed and three wounded.

Shells flew over positions manned by United Nations forces sent there to oversee Israeli withdrawal from the area. Israel invaded the area in March to rid it of guerrillas. A U.N. spokesman said the troops have not fired a shot in three weeks.

In Jerusalem, Israel instructed its embassies in NATO countries to try to block an American-sponsored attempt to get a joint statement by NATO foreign ministers in support of President Carter's Mideast policy.

According to information reaching Jerusalem, the statement would interpret some wording of Carter's Jan. 23 statement in Egypt calling for recognition of "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians.

The Israelis oppose this because Arab leaders interpret it as a call for the return of Palestinian refugees to the homes they abandoned in Israel.

Syria's new prime minister, Mohammed Ali Halabi, told his parliament Monday that the Palestinian cause is Syria's first priority.

"We shall continue our struggle until the Palestinian people get their rights in their land and establish their own sovereign independent state," he said.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis is to visit Syria Wednesday for talks with President Hafez Assad in the north Syrian city of Lattakia, Assad's summer residence.

Vietnamese Seek To Avoid Confrontation With China

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam said Monday it would be "stupid" to pick a fight with China and called again for talks to close the rift between the ethnic Chinese neighbors over the flight of ethnic Chinese from Vietnam.

Reports reaching Hong Kong from China indicated many of the refugees, said by Peking to total at least 89,700, are being resettled on special state farms.

Vietnam says "a handful of Vietnamese capitalists of Chinese descent" have fled because the conversion of South Vietnamese society to communism is taking away their businesses, and because of false rumors of war with China. Peking claims they are being expelled.

"Dark clouds are troubling the skies" over Chinese-Vietnamese relations, the official Vietnam News Agency said Monday in a dispatch received here.

"All sober-minded people know that the Vietnamese people are not so stupid as to seek trouble with China. They fight only when forced to defend their independence and sovereignty," it said.

VNA urged a halt to destructive propaganda and repeated Hanoi's call for a meeting soon of representatives of the two governments "to settle differences over the question of the Chinese people."

No answer from China has been reported.

Vietnam claims China has agreed that Chinese living in Vietnam eventually will become Vietnamese citizens. Chinese population in Vietnam is estimated at more than 1 million, with 800,000 of them in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

VNA on Monday also accused China of saying nothing "about the plight of hundreds of thousands of Chinese working people and their families in Kampuchea (Cambodia) who were subjected to blatant repression, massacre and mass eviction...."

"Thousands of them fled to South Vietnam where they were aided and protected by the Vietnamese people."

China supports Communist-ruled Cambodia in its continuing border conflict with Vietnam. The Soviet Union, China's rival, supports Vietnam.

The reports in Hong Kong said thousands of Chinese refugees from Vietnam were given beds, clothes, mosquito nets, food and even welcoming rallies prior to resettlement on "overseas Chinese state farms" throughout the country.

Broadcasts from Kwangtung and Fukien provinces in southern China, texts of which were made available Monday, said a coordinated mobilization by Communist Party and local officials was under way to receive, feed, clothe and house the newcomers.

The broadcasts said the people of both provinces felt "extremely great regret and anger" at Vietnamese authorities for "discriminating against, persecuting and expelling the overseas Chinese."

Two Communist newspapers in Hong Kong — Ta Kung Pao and Wen Wei Po — said Chinese who recently left Vietnam held meetings over the weekend in the southern provincial capitals of Kwangchow and Foochow, where they reported that skilled Chinese were made to work as laborers in Vietnamese mines and were forbidden to speak Chinese among themselves.

Brassiere Controversy Costly To Taxpayers

MAINZ, West Germany (UPI) — This is a story about a brassiere that cost the American taxpayer $21,000.

It involves a U.S. army general, a German lord mayor, a German woman army employee, an asparagus festival and a brassiere or lack of it, depending on the point of view.

The incident began when Brig. Gen. David C. Martin, commander of the American military post in this Rhineland city, decided that Mrs. Hannelore Nelson was not wearing a brassiere when she acted as his interpreter at a party given by the Mainz lord mayor at the annual spring asparagus festival.

An official letter was written accusing Mrs. Nelson, a 37-year-old employee in the army's Public Affairs Office in Mainz, of being indiscreet. She was dismissed without notice and took the matter to court.

There were conflicting reports on what she was — or wasn't — wearing. "I sat opposite her," said Army Public Affairs officer Capt. Steven Scully in defense of the army position. "She had on a sheer blouse with a little vest, but the vest was unbuttoned. Every time she moved or picked up a glass, it became obvious."

But the mayor and his police chief willing to testify that Mrs. Nelson had, in fact, worn a brassiere.

The army finally retreated and in an out of court settlement agreed to pay Mrs. Nelson $15,000 in addition to $6,000 for court costs.

Mrs. Nelson, a tall, slender woman, got her American-sounding name from her divorced American husband. The labor court offered to order the army to rehire her but she said she was satisfied with the cash settlement.

"I don't know what the fuss is about," she said. "I never go without a brassiere. It's not my style."

Her lawyer, Ernst Hollnack, summed it up: "It's the most expensive bustenhalter (brassiere) I ever heard of."

Czech Hijack Attempt Halted

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Police and crew members of a Czechoslovak airliner Monday subdued a man who apparently was trying to hijack the plane to West Germany, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported.

The CSA airline Yak-40, carrying 26 passengers and four crew members, entered West German airspace Monday morning, but turned back and landed at Prague. German authorities confirmed the overflight.

It was not known how many persons were involved in the hijack, but CTK identified its "organizer" as Jaroslav Havelka of Boskovic. The agency did not say whether Havelka was subdued while the plane was in the air or after it landed.

The plane was on a domestic flight from Brno, 115 miles southeast of Prague, to Karlovy Vary, 75 miles west of the capital and about 30 miles from the border with West Germany.

The pilot radioed the airport at Nuremberg about 11:20 a.m. and asked for permission to land there. But at 11:32 another report said the aircraft had turned back. It landed in Prague about 20 minutes later.

It was the third Czechoslovak hijack incident this month.

On May 10, a CSA Hyushin 18 carrying 46 persons from Brno to Prague was hijacked to Frankfurt, West Germany, by two men and a woman from Karlovy Vary seeking political asylum. One week later, a person identified only as S.L. from Brno tried to hijack a Yak-40 between Brno and Prague but was overpowered and detained.

Healthier Brezhnev To Leave On Visit To Czechoslovakia

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, apparently in improved health after a long bout with influenza, is expected to leave Tuesday for Prague and his first visit to Czechoslovakia in five years.

The visit comes three months short of the 10th anniversary of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia that crushed the country's experiment in "communism with a human face."

Brezhnev last traveled to Prague in February 1973 for the 25th anniversary of Communist rule in Czechoslovakia. He had been expected to attend 30th anniversary celebrations of the liberation of Czechoslovakia from German occupation but instead sent Politburo member Andrei Kirilenko, reportedly because his doctors had advised against the trip.

Western diplomats said they knew of no pressing reason for Brezhnev to go to Prague at this time. "It could be just a routine friendly visit," one diplomat said. "Prague may just have been next on the list."

The conservative Czech government of Communist Party leader and President Gustav Husak, who replaced the deposed liberal Alexander Dubcek after the August 1968 invasion, appears to be one of the most stable in Eastern Europe.

But it suffers from economic problems, which are gradually forcing it to turn toward the West. In need of replacements for its largely obsolete or obsolescent equipment and technology, Czechoslovakia is beginning to overcome its reluctance to borrow from the West.

In April, Czechoslovakia became the first Eastern bloc country to conclude an agreement with the Common Market to export steel to Europe.

In talks with Husak, Brezhnev may press for a bilateral agreement on long-term planning between Moscow and Prague, diplomats said. The Soviets are seeking such agreements with each of their close allies as a backup to the multilateral comprehensive program of Comecon, the Communist-bloc equivalent of the Common Market.

Brezhnev, 71, made his long-delayed visit to West Germany earlier this month. The fact that he was capable of two trips within a month indicated his health has improved after a long bout with influenza last winter. Diplomats noted, however, his schedule has appeared undemanding during the three weeks between trips.

Aussie Rescues Lao Girlfriend With Daring Swim Under River

NONG KHAI, Thailand (AP) — An Australian journalist, twice thwarted in attempts to rescue his girlfriend from Communist Laos, strapped on a scuba tank and swam under the rain-swollen Mekong River and Communist guns to snatch her from the opposite bank and bring her to Thailand.

Planning for Saturday's escape began almost 10 months ago, when John Everingham, 28, the last Western correspondent in Laos, was expelled by Communist authorities after more than a decade of residence there. His girlfriend, Keo Siroisomphone, 25, a Laotian medical student and daughter of a middle-level Communist official, had to remain behind.

Everingham said in an interview Monday that coded letters and messages were exchanged through friends after his expulsion, and rendezvous points were set. However, two earlier attempts to swim under the river separating Thailand and Laos were foiled when Laotian troops approached too close to the place where Keo was waiting.

Then on Saturday, Everingham — a powerful swimmer who learned his diving on Australia's Great Barrier Reef — put on his mask, fins, and a scuba tank fitted with two breathing devices and plunged into the river for the third time.

"I was very pessimistic this time," he said after the escape. The river was running fast because of recent monsoon rains. He said he could see Keo in a red dress and white blouse on the opposite bank about a mile away.

The day before, Thai officials said three Laotians had tried to swim to Thailand at the same spot. Patrols opened fire and killed two of them.

Everingham, with a compass stuck against his facemask because of the zero visibility underwater, said he had to battle the currents, trying at times to crawl along the muddy bottom, where he was tossed around in whirlpools. When he surfaced, he was still several hundred yards offshore and being carried past the spot where Keo waited with a fishing pole and a child to avoid suspicion. Exhausted, he swam back to the Thai side and tried again, this time entering the river farther upstream.

"I made it," he said. "I crawled out on the bank, she seemed to have given up. She was walking away in the distance. I yelled at the top of my lungs. Then she saw me and started running forward. She fell into my arms."

Keo had never learned to swim. Everingham put a slightly inflated life vest around her neck and one of the breathing regulators in her mouth.

With their faces just at the surface of the water and a quick-release strap binding them together, Everingham pushed hard into the current to gain distance from Laos. The riverbank, just below the Laotian capital of Vientiane, was lined with soldiers.

"I was fearful of a burst of bullets any moment. There were dozens of soldiers sitting on the bank. Some stood up. I think they saw something in the river but may not have realized what it was," Everingham said.

Thai officials, sometimes tough on refugees, who are considered illegal aliens, were friendly and helpful when the two arrived. About 100,000 Laotians have fled since the Communist victory in late 1975.

Harry Reasoner Returns To CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — The anticipated return of ABC anchorman Harry Reasoner to CBS was officially announced, on Friday.

Richard Salant, president of CBS News, said Reasoner would start Aug. 1 as chief correspondent of "CBS Reports" and co-editor of the program with Marlene Sanders, who also left ABC in the wake of Roone Arledge's becoming news chief last summer.

Reasoner, who grew unhappy in a diminished role after Barbara Walters quit NBC to become an ABC anchorman nearly two years ago, fills the post left by the departure of Bill D. Moyers for the Public Broadcasting Service.

While Reasoner's new salary was not disclosed, it is presumably much smaller than the $500,000 he was earning annually as anchorman.

"I am as pleased to see him back home with us as I was sorry when he left," Salant said.

Etna's New Cracks Add To Lava Flow

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Lava flowed Monday from four newly sighted openings at about 9,500 feet on the slopes of 10,705-foot Mount Etna, Europe's highest volcano, officials reported Monday. The new cracks added to a flow of molten rock that began April 29. The lava was moving toward the natural basin of the Ox Valley, but authorities said it posed no immediate threat to crops and villages at the foot of the volcano.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. My late husband left me mutual fund shares in which dividends have been reinvested. I feel I would do better by selling or collecting the dividends. Should I sell?

A. If you now need current income, you should obviously tell the fund to send you the dividends instead of reinvesting them. As to whether the invested funds would do better elsewhere I haven't the foggiest idea since you don't tell me how much you have invested, in what fund, or what it yields.

All I can say is: figure out what your investment is now worth (bid price per share times number of shares), that amount of money can earn 8 1/2 percent in the bond market. If you're not getting that return, your course is obvious.

Q. Is Treasury bond interest exempt from both federal and state income taxes?

A. No. It is subject to federal income taxes but exempt from state and local income taxes.

Q. You recently said that some annuities would yield as much as 12 percent. Which companies offer that?

A. All companies, if you are old enough. And that's not a true 12 percent "yield." Part of the benefits is your own money coming back to you.

Q. We plan to retire in mid-1979 and would like to plan for monthly or quarterly income without any long-term commitment which would prevent smooth transfer of principal to children. We both bear Depression scars and want absolute safety.

A. If you have a proper will there is no difference in the estate handling of a day-to-day savings account and a corporation bond due in 1999 or 2007. However, if securities are going to worry you, you should choose insured savings certificates which offer you monthly income and with the principal insured by a U.S. agency or strong state insurance system. Retirement is no time to begin worrying.

Q. We are in our 30s with a combined yearly salary of $61,000. Our retirement program has been set up by our employer. How can we reduce our tax bracket?

A. I don't know that you can. If all this $61,000 comes from salary on which income taxes are withheld, I don't see that you can do anything about it. If you mean that part of your tax problem derives from income on bonds or savings accounts then you might consider a shift to tax-exempt bonds.

Q. I will soon receive my degree as an accountant and an inheritance of about $30,000. How should I invest it? My only expenses will be the purchase of some clothes and a car. No immediate plans to marry.

A. I suggest you consider a basic life insurance program — one which would give you a foundation on which to build a lifetime insurance plan when you do marry; a savings program, and some long-term common share investments.

Q. How does one distinguish among "term savings," "special time deposits," "thrift certificates," etc?

A. Only by having a savings institution explain to exact provisions of these plans. Different savings institutions use different terms. Ask.

Q. Please explain the advantage of shifting E to H bonds? Would it be best to switch our payroll deduction to H bonds?

A. E bonds grow at the rate of 6 percent. They do not pay interest every six months. H bonds pay out an use to meet living expenses. 5/8 If you are on payroll deduction, you obviously are in a position to put money aside for your future. Stick to E bonds. H bonds are bought in $500 and up amounts, not by payroll deduction.

Senate Report Due On Korean Scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee plans to release a report in about two weeks on its investigation of the Senate version of the Korean influence-buying scandal.

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., chairman of the panel, has said that one of three senators broke the law by not reporting a cash contribution from Tongsun Park, the key figure in the controversy.

Park says the three are Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the late Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and John L. McClellan, D-Ark.

The offices of Bayh and Humphrey says those men are not the ones who broke the law. Former McClellan aides refuse to comment, even to say whether McClellan is unfairly being singled out.

Mr. Shulsky welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

For information on corporate and tax-exempt bonds, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to Sam Shulsky, care of King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

U.S. Dollar Dips; Gold Closes Higher

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar dipped slightly against major European currencies Monday in quiet trading attributed to public holidays that closed money markets in the United States and Britain.

The price of gold rose a dollar an ounce to close at $180.625 in Zurich, Europe's main bullion exchange. It closed Friday $179.625 an ounce.

Most Americans are marking a long Memorial Day weekend, while Britain was observing an annual spring bank holiday.

Here are late rates for the dollar Monday, with late rates for Friday in brackets:

- Frankfurt — 2.1123 West German marks (2.121)
- Zurich — 1.9367 Swiss francs (1.95)
- Paris — 4.63675 French francs (4.6587)
- Milan — 869.75 Italian lire (871.75)
- Amsterdam — 2.2625 Dutch guilders (2.2705)

MHS, Lee To Open Series

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
MIDLAND — There are all sorts of reasons to get superstitious about this Monterey-Midland Lee quarter-final playoff series, but MHS baseball boss Bobby Moegle tries to discount every one of them.

The battle for a trip to the state tournament (June 8-9 in Austin) begins its best-of-three series today in Midland Lee's field at 4 p.m. A possible doubleheader follows Friday in Lowrey Field at 2 p.m. Moegle downplays the fact that his team has downed the Rebels 5-0, 14-5 and 7-6 in the three regular-season encounters. He also dodges the fact that Lee coach Ernie Johnson owns a 2-0 lead in previous playoff series meetings.

"I think in a non-critical situation there's a tendency for one team to take the other lightly. When you've got a chance to go to the state tourney, it's a different story," Moegle said.

"I saw them (Thursday in the regional playoffs) against Sam Houston and I think they looked better in every phase of the game. And I feel we played better against them than they played against us."

As for the Johnson-Moegle previous confrontations, Lee eliminated Monterey in 1964 and 1969 in the two times the veteran coaches have collided in playoffs. In 1964, Moegle won the first game 4-3 before Johnson took 10-5 wins in each of the next two battles. In 1969, the same pattern existed with Monterey winning the opener 2-1 and losing the next two by 1-0 and 2-1 scores.

Albeit Moegle owns the home-field advantage for two of three meetings this week, the Monterey coach still accents the emphasis on today's game.

"I think the key to the whole thing is how we perform Tuesday," he said. "If they can beat us there, then we're really fighting for our lives. This is going to be a real good close series. Our kids are going to have to battle and play well."

Two Plainsmen played well when it counted in Friday's regional playoff win over El Paso Andress. Shortstop Mike Wooten's 3-run double in the fourth inning was the biggest offensive explosion of the windy day, while Ricky Pinkerton's pitching rescued a wild Derek Hatfield.

Moegle figured Wooten "has to be the hero" of both the Amarillo and El Paso series victories.

"In fact, he's been hitting the ball well since the second half of district play," he said.

As for Pinkerton, the Plainsmen coach felt the key centered around the sophomore's ability "to throw strikes."

A stout wind with gusts of up to 30 miles an hour would seemingly help the pitchers by blowing toward home plate. But Pinkerton noted that the wind created problems, too.

"I thought my curve ball would work, but I guess it didn't," he said. "I tried to throw about two curves and they wouldn't work because the wind was blowing across. I think that bothered Derek (Hatfield) too."

Moegle hopes Hatfield and Pinkerton get a rest from the mound today as Ron Reeves pitches for the Plainsmen against Terry Willis of Lee. Willis (9-2) tossed a no-hitter at Arlington in last Monday's regional playoff opener.

Willis, Doug Van Horn, Gary Gibson and Doug Schmidt have done the bulk of Lee's mound work down the stretch. Though the walk and strikeout ratios of the pitching staffs are comparable, the Monterey staff owns the lower earned-run average (2.43 to 3.30), while the Lee staff possesses the better proven depth.

Lee's team batting mark nips Monterey's .337 to .334, while the Plainsmen lead in home runs 25-9. Two of Lee's regulars, rightfielder Richard Josefy and pitcher-third baseman Van Horn bat in the 400 range, compared to Monterey's Eric Voyles (.424).

"The kids who impressed me the most were Van Horn, (catcher Clay) Calhoun, (leftfielder Todd) Clements and (centerfielder) Pat Moore before he got hurt," Moegle said.

Moore missed the third game of the Sam Houston series because of a bruised thigh. However, he is expected to play in today's game.

Sonics, Bullets Continue Series

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics are home, and they have no intention of leaving.

"Our plan was to win the opener at home, get a split of the two games at Washington and then come back here and wrap it up," said Sonics' guard Fred Brown. "I'd say we're right on schedule."

The Sonics took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series by beating the Bullets 93-92 Sunday at Washington.

It's a commanding lead, since three of the remaining four games will be played in Seattle — where the Sonics have won their last 21 outings — including the next two games tonight and Friday.

The sixth game of the series, if necessary, would be played at Washington Sunday — but the Sonics don't think it will be necessary.

"I believe in our home-court advantage," said guard Dennis Johnson. "We're tough at home. I'm pretty sure we're going to end the series in Seattle. I'm hoping for that."

"You can't say we're unbeatable, but we feel we're going to wrap it up at home," said center Marvin Webster.

"We're in good shape, but we still have to go out and win those two games," said Coach Lenny Wilkens, whose job now is to keep his club from getting overconfident. "But like I've said before, our home fans are great. There's no place I'd rather play."

The Sonics won't be playing in their usual building tonight. A mobile home show is in the Seattle Center Coliseum, so the game has been shifted to the mammoth Kingdome, the enclosed home of baseball's Seattle Mariners and football's Seattle Seahawks.

This will be the first basketball game ever played in the Kingdome, where the Sonics are scheduled to play next year, and it is expected to draw the largest crowd in the history of professional basketball.

The original 29,000 tickets were gobbled up within two hours by fans eager to be a part of the club's first run at the title in 11 years in the NBA.

An additional 15,000 "distant viewing" seats were placed on sale at $3 each. If all are sold, as expected, the crowd would shatter all NBA attendance records — 21,564 for a playoff game at Cleveland, 35,077 for a regular season game in the Louisiana Superdome and 41,165 for a doubleheader at the Houston Astrodome in 1969 that included the San Diego Rockets, whose star was former University of Houston All-American Elvin Hayes, now the star of the Bullets.

"I think its going to be fantastic playing before 40,000 or more," said Seattle forward John Johnson. "We're going to be up for this one."

Some have suggested that since the Sonics won't be playing in the building they're accustomed to, the Kingdome almost will be a neutral site. Neither coach was ready to accept that.

"I don't see how anything in Seattle can be considered neutral," said Washington Coach Dick Motta.

"Every court is the same. We'll actually be using the same floor we normally use," said Wilkens. "But instead of having 14,000 fans screaming for us, we'll have 40,000. Tell me that's not going to get a team up."

Of all the Sonics, no one is more anxious to win these next two games than Brown, the explosive reserve guard who now is in his seventh season with Seattle.

"I've seen a lot of things happen with this club," he said. "There were times I felt we would never have a winner here. Now that it's within reach, I want it. I feel this deeply, very deeply."

So much so that he would gladly sacrifice individual success and glory if it would assure the team of the NBA title.

"Of course I'd do that, winning is everything right now," said Brown. "What I do individually doesn't matter. I could shoot 0-for-10, 0-for-20. I wouldn't care as long as we win."

"We're on the verge of making history here. The Seattle SuperSonics — NBA champions. Winning is something everyone is going to enjoy. Who's going to remember what I did individually?"

Barazzutti Advances In Net Meet

PARIS (AP)—Italy's Corrado Barazzutti survived an early scare from South African John Yuill and went on to a 3-6, 7-6, 6-3 victory Monday in the opening round of the 50th annual Paris Open Tennis Tournament.

Yuill had to retire after the third set with a leg problem and was unable to continue the match.

Americans Dick Stockton and Tim Gullikson, and France's No. 2 player, Patrick Proisy, won their opening matches in the $400,000 tourney held under Paris' first spring heat wave at the Roland Garros Stadium.

Stockton ousted Robin Drysdale of Britain 4-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1; Gullikson eliminated Cliff Leicher of Australia 6-3, 6-2, 6-2; and Proisy downed Byron Bertram of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, 7-5.

Last year's winner, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and Italian Open champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden go into action later this week.

Barazzutti had trouble with the 29-year-old South African right from the beginning. He lost his serve in the sixth game of the first set and then a crucial double-fault cost him the eight game and the set 3-6.

The 25-year-old Italian, visibly rattled and talking to himself, came back in the second set with wicked passing shots and a more varied attack, finally winning the tie-breaker and set 7-6.

Ellis Quits As Texas' Player Rep

ARLINGTON (AP) — Pitcher Dock Ellis, who has been embroiled in a dispute with Texas Ranger manager Billy Hunter over the team's drinking rules, resigned Monday as player representative, and Mike Hargrove took his place.

Ellis was the starting pitcher in the first game of a doubleheader with the Minnesota Twins Monday afternoon. Ellis took exception last week to Hunter's rules, which prohibit alcohol on club flights and drinking by team members in the hotel bar.

Ellis issued a handwritten note to the press, saying, "I feel that some of these rules are juvenile and not for grown men. If any players act as fools, they should be fined or dealt with individually. I do not want to put my teammates in the middle because of my outspoken ways, which will not change as long as I can breathe."

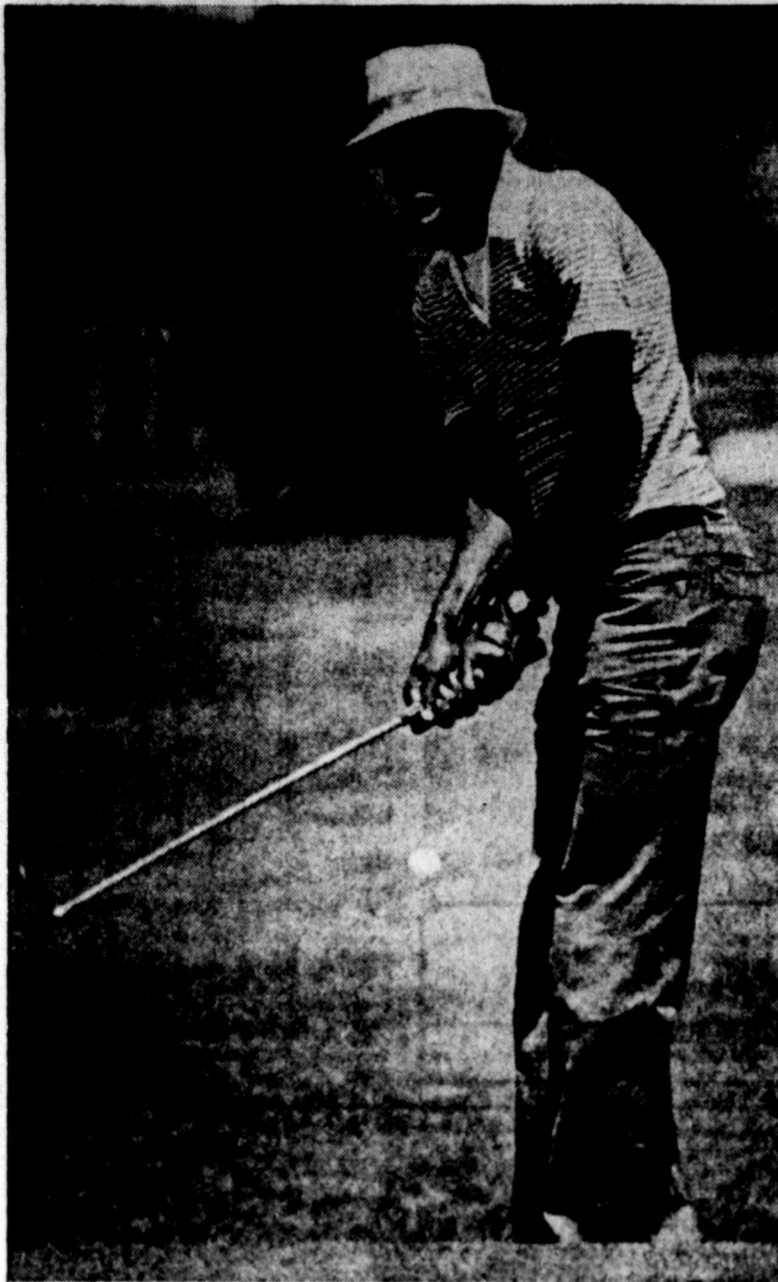

"Also the owners and the fans should not suffer because of my disagreement with the manager. Everybody wants to win, including me. I have been on six division winners and I want another here."

"Therefore, in the interest of the club I am resigning as player rep, although you can be sure my personal opinions about this matter have not and will not change and that I will always express my personal opinions."

As player rep, Ellis was instrumental in establishing a 15-minute cooling-off period after all Ranger games before reporters could interview anyone in the clubhouse.

He recently encouraged the Ranger players to violate Hunter's rules on a team bus in Minneapolis. At that point Hunter told Ellis to "sit down and shut up."

Ellis later called Hunter "a Hitler" and added "he ain't gonna make no lampshade outta me." Ellis also said "I told him I was going to do my best to break every rule he has."

Heise, Kearney Destroy Mark, Capture Win In Reese Tourney

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

After shooting what link types refer to as "lights out golf" Saturday and Sunday, Kevin Heise and Jack Kearney came back down to earth Monday.

Well, almost anyway. The duo, which opened the first and second rounds of these Air Force Base partnership tournament with a pair of 60s, cooled off during the final round, recording a so-so 61.

"I guess everything went well again today," Heise said, entering the clubhouse to turn in the team's scorecard.

The three-day total of 181 shattered the previous Reese mark, held by touring professional Jeff Mitchell and teammate Steve Long, by 17 shots. Mitchell and Long had posted a best of 198.

Heise and Kearney, a pair of Reese officers themselves, started the day with a five birdies, scoring a five-under-par 71 on the front nine of the 6,332-yard, par 72 layout.

Lopez Fires Record 65 To Nab Tourney Crown

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, the 21-year-old rookie sensation of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, shot a course-record 65 Monday to capture the $100,000 Golden Lights Championship by three strokes with a 72-hole total of 277 at the Waukegan Country Club.

The victory was the third straight and fifth overall this year for the 5-foot-7 golfer.

JoAnne Carner, the defending champion who started the day in first place with a three-round total of 210, 2 strokes better than Lopez, shot a 2-under-par 70 to finish runner-up at 280.

Lopez, whose 65 shattered the old record of 66 established two years ago by Laura Baugh, went out in 31 and came back in 34. She had birdies on four of the first six holes on the par-72, 6,410-yard course and finished the round with eight as opposed to only one bogey.

"I felt good right from my first tee," said Lopez, whose 65 was her best round ever as a pro. "I told Roscoe (Jones, her caddy) that if the putter felt as good in my hands as my clubs, I was going to play very well."

Lopez, whose 65 shattered the old record of 66 established two years ago by Laura Baugh, went out in 31 and came back in 34. She had birdies on four of the first six holes on the par-72, 6,410-yard course and finished the round with eight as opposed to only one bogey.

"I felt good right from my first tee," said Lopez, whose 65 was her best round ever as a pro. "I told Roscoe (Jones, her caddy) that if the putter felt as good in my hands as my clubs, I was going to play very well."

JoAnne Carner, the defending champion who started the day in first place with a three-round total of 210, 2 strokes better than Lopez, shot a 2-under-par 70 to finish runner-up at 280.

"No question that I'm happy and it's not because I'm winning. I'm happy that I'm healthy, that I'm able to be out in the sun playing golf and that I am able to enjoy all the people."

Asked if she can get any better since the 72-hole total of 277 was the best on the tour this year, Lopez said, "I can't answer that. I've never had a better stretch of golf than this. I always want to play well and not let it go to my head."

Carner, not visibly disappointed by her second straight defeat at the hands of the rookie, said, "I only had one bad shot... on the 17th hole... all day. I knew someone was going to apply the pressure. I really thought I went ahead of her with a birdie on the 10th hole."

"It was fun being out there battling back and forth. I can't be frustrated when somebody outplayed me. There's nothing you can do about that."

McEnroe Capt NCA

ATHENS, Ga. — McEnroe battled Sadri of North Carolina Monday before Collegiate Athletic Association championship 7-6.

Sadri served 20 McEnroe using the power-tie-breaking game.

McEnroe, 18, individual competition. Both plan to turn out for the championship.

McEnroe, general, the best player in the world had three remaining matches. "This is my last match," he said.

"It was a hard way to go out," match. "This is my last match," he said.

Sadri, who defeated McEnroe in the third round, said he will make Wednesday in G.

But his game power McEnroe "more of a power hitter."

"Every part of me is in there," McEnroe said after his first professional match during an exhibition week.

Sadri isn't sure he will make Wednesday in G.

McEnroe Captures NCAA Title

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Stanford's John McEnroe battled power-serving John Sadri of North Carolina State for more than four hours in the heat and humidity Monday before claiming the National Collegiate Athletic Association singles championship 7-6, 7-6, 5-7, 7-6.

Sadri served 24 aces in the contest, but McEnroe won the match by twice breaking the power-hitter's serve to win the tie-breaking game of the final set 5-3.

McEnroe, 18, was seeded No. 1 in the individual competition, while Sadri, a 22-year-old senior, was the 11th seed. Both plan to turn professional after the competition.

McEnroe, generally considered to be the best player in the nation, would have had three remaining years of eligibility had he decided to remain an amateur.

"It was an honest win and an honest way to go out," McEnroe said after the match. "This is the way I wanted to finish up my career as a collegian."

Sadri, who describes his game simply as "boom," got into the finals by defeating third-seeded Eddie Edwards of Pepperdine 6-1, 6-7, 6-1 in Sunday's semifinals.

After that match, Edwards described Sadri's play as a "serve hell out of the ball and rush the net game."

But his game wasn't enough to overpower McEnroe, who calls himself "more of a placement player" than a power hitter.

"Every part of his game is good," Sadri conceded after the match.

McEnroe said he plans to enter his first professional tournament this summer during an English clay court contest about a week before Wimbledon.

Sadri isn't waiting that long. He said he will make his professional debut Wednesday in Greenville, S.C.

Smooth Race Aids Unser's Win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The real story behind the 62nd annual Indianapolis 500, as with virtually every other race here since 1911, wasn't so much how Al Unser won it for a third time, as it was how Tom Sneva, Gordon Johncock, Steve Krisloff, Danny Ongais and everybody else lost it.

Because of the unique rules for the Indianapolis race, the winner is usually the guy who makes the fewest mistakes and has the least number of problems.

Unser had a smooth, uneventful race. So much so that he remarked, "It was the easiest of my 13 races here." Only when he scraped a tire and knocked his steering slightly out of whack on his final pit stop did he have any trouble. But by then his lead was so great that Sneva could not overtake him.

Sneva's chances suffered a mortal blow when "the handling went away for 40 laps," in the middle of the race. "By the time we figured out what was wrong and fixed it, it was too late," Sneva said.

Charging back from more than 40 seconds behind, Sneva closed to within 8.19 seconds — about a half mile — in the second closest finish in Indy history.

Johncock, who came in third, might have raced a different race over the final third of the distance if it hadn't been for a one-lap penalty assessed him for rolling over an air hose to a pneumatic tire wrench on his way into the pit area.

"The rules say it's a one-lap penalty if you run over it while leaving the pits," fumed chief mechanic George Bignotti. "He just nicked it with one tire on his way in, and we pushed him back off of it."

"We had a good shot at it, but when you're a lap down, why take chances? What's the use?"

Mario Andretti was set down for the same sort of infraction a year ago, but it was rescinded after a conference between officials and car owner Roger Penske.

At any place but Indy, a driver can get away with a mistake, or get a reprieve after a problem if he is lucky enough to catch a caution period and close up behind the pace car when the field is bunched back up.

But Indy officials don't think there should be second chances to win the Big One; they don't think someone who has built up a big lead should have it taken away from him and have to start all over just because somebody else's trouble causes a caution.

For that reason, a pacer light system is used at Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Theoretically, it keeps the field moving around the track, albeit at a caution period pace at the interval that was established during racing conditions.

Krisloff had moved into the lead on the 25th lap and still was in front on the 31st circuit when he and Larry Dickson ran afoul of the pacer.

"Krisloff improved his position by two pacer segments, as did Dickson. They were both in the same general location on the track at the time," explained U.S. Auto Club official Dick Jordan.

Officials promised to crack down on pacer cheaters this year. A number of officials were assigned solely to monitor the pacer positions during caution periods.

"There's been so much cheating reported in recent years that hasn't been policed, we were a little worried we might wind up penalizing everybody at least one lap and end up with an Indianapolis 500 1/2 to complete the official 500 miles," Jordan joked. "We found compliance was pretty good."

"Krisloff's was the most serious infraction. But a couple of others were on the border line. We were not calling the ones too close to call. It had to be something substantial."

Asked if the borderline cases involved some of the other leaders, Jordan replied, "I'd rather not answer."

However, The Associated Press learned from other sources that Sneva was the closest to the border line, with Ongais not far behind. Unser was involved in one "gray area" incident. In fact, it was initially recommended that Sneva be docked one lap but officials conferred and decided that the infraction wasn't blatant enough.

Another such close call would have been a violation, but it didn't occur.

Ongais was a victim of apparent mechanical failure, a broken turbocharger, with less than 100 miles to go. It took him out of the fight for the lead, where he had been since the green flag had dropped, and essentially gave the race to Unser. It was not known whether the pacer Ongais tried to keep up caused the failure or not.

How did other drivers lose it? Basically, most found out they and/or their cars just weren't fast enough. As for some of the others:

Andretti — Ignition system went sour after he charged from 33rd to ninth.

A.J. Foyt — Problem after problem. Ran out of fuel. Engine died twice in pits. Was never in the hunt.

Bobby Unser — Got the most that could be expected from his new Eagle that wasn't even supposed to get on the track for practice this month.

Johnny Rutherford — Strong early, but lost time making pit stops under green while others were luckier waiting until yellow flag was out. Penalized a lap for unspecified pit infraction. Motor broke.

Janet Guthrie — Broke her right wrist when she fell playing in a tennis tournament Saturday. Drove whole race with left hand, strengthening her claim she could whip most of three men in the field, "single-handed."

Trevino 'Called' Heard Triumph

ATLANTA (AP) — Lee Trevino, who wasn't even here, called the shot.

Two weeks ago he'd been forced to a record score to beat Jerry Heard in the Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament in Fort Worth.

"Jerry Heard's back," Trevino said at the time. "He will win in the next few weeks."

And Heard did, winning the Atlanta Classic Sunday to join Trevino in completing successful comebacks from similar back problems that threatened both their careers.

They were struck by the same bolt of lightning during the 1975 Western Open. Both were severely stunned. Both were hospitalized. In a relatively short time, both developed back troubles.

"Nobody really knows if the lightning did it," Heard said. "They do know that when you get an electrical shock, it has an effect on the muscles, that they contract. It could have been that."

Trevino had surgery and came back to win last year.

Heard didn't have an operation. But he played poorly through most of 1976 and last year played little. He spent eight weeks in bed, unable to move his legs, "and watching these guys playing golf on television and wondering if I'd ever be able to do it again."

He made it all the way back in the hot, humid, hazy weather at Atlanta. Heard scored a hard-won, 5-under-par final round for a 269 total, a spectacular 19 shots under par and a record on the hilly, 6,883-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

"This means an awful lot to me," said Heard, who'd won four tournaments and almost a half million dollars in the 1971-74 period and had been considered one of the game's brightest young players.

"You know, guys would come up to me and say, 'How did you play back when you were a good player?' It kind of gets to you."

Before, when I was winning all these things, it was just another feather in the cap. Now, the cap is awful bare. That $40,000 will come in mighty handy."

That's the prize he picked up, compared with the $15,467 that went to Lou Graham. Tom Watson and Bob Murphy, who tied for second at 271, 17 shots under par, but two back of Heard.

Watson, the season's leading money-winner with $203,631, shot a final round 68. Graham closed up with a birdie-birdie finish and a 66. Murphy, the only man who really had a shot at beating Heard, had a 70 that included a bogey — against Heard's birdie — on the final hole.

Gibby Gilbert was next at 70-278, and PGA champ Lanny Wadkins was sixth at 69-274.

Kuhn Desires Baseball In Olympics

TOKYO (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Monday he hoped to see baseball included in the 1984 Olympics, tentatively scheduled for Los Angeles, and indicated this could be the first World Series between Japan and the United States.

"Japan is working toward this goal," Kuhn said. "We have to see how things develop year by year but we want this as much as the Japanese do. We will both know when the time is ripe."

Kuhn spoke to reporters before a reception to celebrate the broadcasting of American games in this country, including the World Series and the All-Star game.

He said he feels the televised games "will infinitely contribute" to a World Series between the two countries, adding, "The Japanese are very perceptive. They're very quick to learn."

"We are all in agreement that there has been considerable improvement in Japanese baseball which I think is an excellent sign. I might add I'm hopeful the (televised) series of games will be constructive in the development of Japanese baseball at all levels."

"There is room for improvement in the techniques of baseball in Japan. I think this is what we all want," he added.

Kuhn, who arrived Saturday, said his visit to Japan was purely a social one. "We're really here to celebrate but it (the broadcasting of American games) is a big breakthrough."

In an interview with The Associated Press earlier, he declined to say how much the television deal was worth but called it "attractive."

Kuhn is to meet Tuesday and Wednesday with Japanese Commissioner Toshi Kaneko. He said he did not have anything specific to talk about with Kaneko but "whenever I sit down with my baseball friends from Japan we discuss that subject (the World Series)."

"My visit to Japan would not be complete if I didn't pay him a visit." This is Kuhn's fourth trip to this country.

On his last visit to Japan in 1974, the American baseball commissioner said he would like to see a World Series between the two countries within five years.

"At this point it is by no means assured that baseball will be included in the 1984 Olympics," Kuhn said. "We are hopeful and that is all we are at this point."

Auto Club Announces Official Indy Results

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser moved one spot closer to his victorious brother Al today when the official results of the 62nd running of the Indianapolis 500 were announced by the U.S. Auto Club.

Unser completed 196 laps, one more than was originally credited to him, to gain a fifth-place finish. Wally Dallenbach moved down to sixth.

In another position change from Sunday's unofficial results, Janet Guthrie slipped from eighth to ninth, with George Snider advancing to the No. 8 spot. Snider picked up one more lap in the official standings.

Those were the only position changes, but there were some changes in the number of completed laps for a few drivers.

Gordon Johncock, who finished third behind Tom Sneva, was penalized one lap for a pit violation. Johnny Rutherford also was penalized one lap for a pit infraction.

Fourth-place finisher Steve Krisloff and Larry Dickson were each penalized one lap for violating yellow-light procedures during the race's 31st lap.

Al Unser won the race in 3:05.5499 with an average speed of 161.363. He led the race from laps 76-107, 111-179 and 181-200.

Evans' Home Run Extends Sox' Winning Streak

By The Associated Press

Dwight Evans' eighth-inning home run lifted the Red Sox over the Toronto Blue Jays for Boston's seventh straight victory and ninth in the last 10 games.

The Red Sox took a 4-0 lead in the second inning on designated hitter Bob Bailey's three-run homer and an error by Toronto leftfielder Willie Upshaw that allowed Frank Duffy to score on Fred Lynn's double.

Toronto came back on Roy Howell's solo home run in the fourth inning and added three runs in the sixth on six singles, five of them in a row.

The Blue Jays would have taken the lead, but baserunner Upshaw was hit by Dave McKay's base hit into right field. Upshaw was ruled out and Otto Velez, on third base could not advance.

A's 6, BREWERS 2

Pete Broberg scattered six hits and Jeff Newman hit his third homer as the Oakland A's defeated the Milwaukee Brewers.

The A's took the lead with two runs in the first inning after a leadoff walk to Miguel Dilone and a hit-and-run single by Glenn Burke. Burke stole second, took third as Dilone scored on Mario Guerrero's sacrifice fly and scored when Mitchell Page beat out a hit to deep short.

YANKEES 2, INDIANS 0

A combined one-hitter by Andy Messersmith and Rawly Eastwick and Greg Nettles' two-run homer in the seventh inning gave New York a victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Cleveland's only hit was a first-inning single by Jim Norris off Messersmith, making his first appearance since July 3, 1977, when he played for Atlanta.

ORIOLES 6, TIGERS 3

Lee May drove in four runs with a pair of homers to lead the Baltimore Orioles past the Detroit Tigers.

The loss was Detroit's seventh in a row and ninth in its last 10 games. The Orioles have won eight of their last 12.

GIANTS 8, ASTROS 1

Ed Halicki drove in two runs with a fourth-inning single and scattered seven hits as he continued his mastery of Houston in the Astrodome to lead the San Francisco Giants over the Astros.

Halicki, 2-0, did not walk a batter and struck out three while lowering his earned run average against the Astros in Houston to 0.63 over the past 43 innings.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Loretta Young parks her Rolls Royce in front of John Engstead's West Hollywood gallery and carries in 15 changes of clothes. Clint Eastwood arrives in a pickup truck, wearing jeans and a T-shirt.

For 50 years, the famous faces of Hollywood have been entrusted to the exacting talent of John Engstead. From Marlene Dietrich to Cher, he has never failed to make them look good.

Engstead is a tall, spare, quiet-spoken Los Angeles native who inspires confidence. Having dealt with most of the glamorous figures of the film world, he is unaccustomed to the spotlight himself; he even dislikes having his own photograph taken.

Engstead started work at Paramount studios on a fateful day: Aug. 23, 1926. The publicity department was in an uproar because the studio's biggest star, Rudolph Valentino; had died that morning in New York.

Eventually, Engstead was assigned to set up portraits for the Paramount stars. He did everything except work the camera. When still photographers joined a 1933 studio strike, Engstead was assigned to take the pictures. He experimented with a young Paramount actor, Cary Grant.

Engstead returned to managing the sittings until he was fired in a 1941 studio shakeup. Fortunately, the J. Walter Thompson agency needed someone to photograph stars in Lux soap ads. Thus, his career was launched, and he continues to this day in making portraits of selected clients. Recent subjects: Cheryl Ladd, Ginger Rogers, Kate Jackson. He works four months a year, spending the rest of the time at his home on Maui.

He has enjoyed photographing the famous, but he has one regret; he never fulfilled his ambition to direct movies. "I would have been a good director," he said. "Carole Lombard thought so, and she put it in her contract that I would be assigned to her movies as an observer, with the idea that I would direct after watching three films. Then she went away on a war bond tour and died in an air crash on the way home."

Mystique Of Trucking Attracts Men Not Ready For Adulthood

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Meet Rick Barker and Cliff Bowers. At first glance, they're normal, 25-year-old bachelors, working or going to school or partying, not necessarily in that order.

But these two otherwise unassuming young men used to be the Hot Shot Haulers, the Cosmic Cruisers of the Ozone Express.

The Ozone Express, you see, was the pet name for their truck during the two years they were cross country semi-trailer drivers.

Like young men of the past who joined the circus or ran off to sea, these two decided to delay impending adulthood and its inherent responsibilities by experiencing the mystique of long-haul trucking.

"I was running away from marriage. I was engaged and didn't want to get married," says Bowers, who still answers readily to his CB radio handle of "Possum."

"I wanted to blow town, to see the country, meet a lot of girls in different towns," Bowers says. "I wasn't ready for a necktie and an 8-to-5 job."

"I wanted to get away, too," says Barker. "But I also had a mechanical interest in trucking."

They started at the bottom, hauling hay and such on one-day trips for small companies in the Midwest. Within a few months they were full-fledged pros for a big transit firm, wheeling their rig coast to coast.

They also worked for an independent trucker, one of the real mavericks in a breed that has been called the last of the cowboys.

What was it all like?

"It compares with nothing else on earth," Barker says. "It's a very intense life. You have to have a certain awareness."

Between the two of them, a flood of memories pours forth. Their words and stories tumble out on top of each other.

They talk about other truckers like "Captain Nemo" and "Big Sweed" and how, racing across Wyoming at 90 miles per hour, they passed an ambulance that had its siren and red light on.

There was the time they were so exhausted it took three hours to drive 18 miles between Dallas and Arlington, Texas because they had to stop for catnaps.

There were doctored logs, amphetamines for staying up all night and hours, even days, of trance-like travel. And there was the insulated feeling they had when their speeding cab became their whole universe.

Finally, they decided to quit.

"It's constant stimulus," Bowers says. "Everything is new. But you lose contact with your family and friends. Life is too short for that. I started to like it so much I quit because I knew it would get into my blood. It was a good growing experience."

"Trucking just didn't offer enough. It was temporary. I didn't want to do it all my life," says Barker, who has returned to classes at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, but hasn't decided what he'll do after school.

Bowers, who got 17 traffic tickets during his last three months of trucking, has seized on a new profession. He's a driving instructor.

Superintendent Attacked

BUCHANAN, Ga. (AP) — A father who spent thousands of dollars on high school graduation presents for his daughter only to learn she would not graduate was held in jail Monday on charges of attacking the superintendent during the commencement speech.

Frank Lowman was detained in the Haralson County Jail in lieu of $49,000 bond. He was accused of attacking County School Superintendent Bob Watson during graduation ceremonies Sunday.

According to witnesses, Watson was speaking to seniors in the high school gym when Lowman, 38, allegedly began punching him. Several seniors subdued Lowman and then restrained him until police arrived.

Wayne Brown of the sheriff's office said Lowman was charged with two counts of making terroristic threats, two counts of aggravated assault and one count of creating a public disturbance.

Lowman's daughter, Debra, 17, had been told she would be unable to graduate with the rest of her 122 classmates because she failed a final civics examination by nine points, according to her uncle, Mark Lowman.

He said her father tried repeatedly to convince school board members to allow her to take the examination again, but they refused. Mark Lowman said the board had allowed such re-examinations until a change in regulations about two years ago.

Bus Drivers Get Alarm Systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Metro activated its "silent alarm" system for bus drivers Sunday, a week and a half after the rape of a driver triggered a city-wide walkout over bus safety problems.

The alarm system enables drivers to signal for help in case of emergencies to Metro headquarters. Police can then be sent to the location to give assistance.

Recently, designer Edith Head, whom he had known since she was a sketch artist at Paramount, gave him a book-launching party at her Coldwater Canyon villa. Among the Engstead subjects who attended: Olivia DeHavilland, Eve Arden, Jane Wyatt, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Gail Patrick, Patricia Morrison.

The "Engstead Touch" shines through in all his photographs. How does he achieve it?

"I try to find the best angles," he explained in an interview. "Then I use the light that best suits the person. A star like Cher looks great in natural light. Others may require spotlights, others need strobes."

"I use the lights to accent their best features, perhaps cutting out a piece of cardboard to place over the spot. If a woman has a good bosom, I will spotlight that; if she has a big stomach, I'll put that in shadow."

"The main feature is the eyes. I tell my subjects 'I photograph your mind as well as your face. You can't have those blank, faraway looks.' The great thing about pictures of Garbo, whom I never photographed, is that you can see her mind is always working."

Engstead also takes care in the developing and printing of his pictures and avoids contemporary fads and styles.

"I want to be able to use my photographs for a long time," he explained. "I urge the women to avoid elaborate dresses and hair styles. Simplest is best. Well-dressed women realize that."

"It's better to have people say, 'Gee, doesn't Lauren Bacall look great!' than 'What a beautiful dress on Lauren Bacall!'"

Common Market, Soviets Talk Trade

MOSCOW (AP) — A top-level Common Market official opened talks Monday with the Soviet Bloc's Comecon to pave the way for the first trade negotiations between the two economic bodies.

Wilhelm Haferkamp, a West German in charge of external affairs for the nine-member Common Market, is leading the preparatory discussions here with Nikolai Fadeyev, secretary-general of Comecon. The Common Market seeks to limit any agreement eventually signed with Comecon to the exchange of economic information and statistics, as well as discussions on standardizing trading methods.

Land Locked Bolivia Building Navy

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — There's a new navy on the high seas — with a donated ship, a borrowed port and an admiral directing things from 12,000 feet above sea level.

It belongs to landlocked Bolivia, which hopes to expand its one-vessel fleet to a viable merchant force carrying Bolivian exports as far as the United States.

Bolivia has dreamed of returning to the sea ever since it lost its short Pacific coastline to neighboring Chile in the 1879 War of the Pacific. The government of President Hugo Banzer is trying to convince Chile to give Bolivia a Pacific Ocean outlet and recently broke diplomatic relations with Chile to make the point.

Venezuela, a strong supporter of Bolivia's sea-outlet aspirations, helped the dream along last July with the gift of a 4,000-ton freighter built in Britain 27 years ago.

A 46-man Bolivian crew took command of the Libertador Bolivar in March in Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, and sailed it around Brazil to Rosario, Argentina, where the Argentine government has conceded free port facilities. Rosario is a river port providing access to the Atlantic. A railroad runs there from Santa Cruz, Bolivia.

"The ship went as far as 400 miles from shore and the crew went eight days without seeing land during the voyage, which lasted 22 days," Vice Adm. Gutemberg Barroso, the navy commander-in-chief, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"We don't have much experience yet, but we have shown that our people can do it," said Barroso, whose command is in an army base at the edge of this city perched high in the Andes Mountains.

"Before the war (of 1879) we had a naval tradition in the Pacific Ocean," he said. "We had ships and commanders and admirals. But this is the first Bolivian ship on the seas in 100 years."

Its presence in international waters reaffirms Bolivian sea rights, he said, adding that Bolivia has only peaceful intentions with its navy.

While high-seas experience is new to Bolivia, the navy has actually existed for 15 years. It maintains a hospital vessel on Lake Titicaca, which at an altitude of 12,507 feet is the world's highest lake, and several boats that patrol rivers forming frontiers with neighboring countries. Part of Lake Titicaca, 110 miles long and 35 miles wide, is in Peru and part in Bolivia.

The 100-foot-long hospital vessel, with 12 compartments, was brought from the United States in pieces and assembled on Lake Titicaca.

Barroso said there are three basic naval schools in Bolivia but that officers go to a number of countries for training, including Brazil, the United States, Argentina, Peru, Colombia, Venezuela and Uruguay.

The navy chief, who began his military career in the army and switched to the navy when it was founded, said his only time at sea was in a Peruvian vessel along the coast of Peru.

Younger officers have been getting more ocean experience, and the Libertador Bolivar should improve their chances even more.

Capt. Douglas Estremadoiro, the 35-year-old commander of Bolivia's ship, said he had made a training voyage to Europe as well as various coastal trips in ships of neighboring nations.

Estremadoiro is charged with preparing a plan on how to use the Libertador

Bolivar and the future expansion of Bolivian fleet. He said he was awaiting supply of spare parts from England and thorough examination of the ship by gentine experts before setting out on next voyage.

The Social Democrats and the left-wing party, The People's Alliance, proved the major winners and the government coalition parties — The Independent Party and the Progressive Party, lost ground.

"It is a major left swing," said Ludvig Josefsson, chairman of the People's Alliance.

Politicians said they believed the result could serve as a preview to the general election June 25.

In the final election results, the Social Democrats increased their vote from the 1974 municipal elections from 9.5 percent to 16.5 percent, the People's Alliance upped their percentage from 17.1 to 24.5 percent, while the Progressive Party's percentage dropped from 18.8 to 15.2 percent.

Language Dispute Surfaces In Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — A language dispute that sparked a mass demonstration in Soviet Georgia also has touched off protests by minority Abkhazian citizens of the southern Soviet republic, according to a Georgian newspaper reaching here Monday.

The newspaper, Zarya Vostoka, printed the text of a speech by a Kremlin official who visited Soviet Georgia to answer what he called "no small number" of demands that the 503,000-member Abkhazian autonomous republic be allowed to secede from Georgia and join the Russian federation.

In his speech, Communist Party central committee secretary Ivan V. Kapitonov said this suggestion was turned down, along with a protest against designation of Georgian as the republic's official language.

The language furor began in April when the Georgian republic, of which Abkhazia is a part, moved toward adoption of a new constitution that dropped mention of Georgian as its official language.

In a number of Soviet republics, the local language is designated the official tongue, for use along with Russian.

Within the Soviet Union's 15 republics such as Georgia, Russia, the Ukraine and Estonia, are an additional 20 autonomous republics like Abkhazia that have their own national cultures and languages.

Altogether the Soviet Union recognizes the existence of 130 languages within its borders.

When Georgian citizens discovered their new constitution was dropping the designation of Georgian as the official language, demonstrations were held April 14 in the capital of Tbilisi, with varying reports putting the numbers taking part in the thousands.

Reports from witnesses said Georgian Communist Party leader Eduard Shevarnadze came out of the government house where the constitutional discussion was under way and addressed the protesters.

Zarya Vostoka then reported the drafters of the new constitution acceded to the demands and included the guarantee that "the official language of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic is Georgian."

The latest edition of the newspaper, printed last Friday, indicates this decision touched off another protest among the Abkhazian minority, an ancient people living along the east coast of the Black Sea, with roots going back to pre-Christian Greek and Roman settlers.

According to Kapitonov, the Soviet government and Communist Party "received no small number of letters, statements and telegrams, both individual and collective," raising "a whole number" of criticisms and suggestions.

He said some called for restoration of Abkhazian national place names or fuller development of Abkhazian culture and language. Others said not enough Abkhazian nationals are included among party cadres.

"The central committee has attentively considered these communications and deems them to have real substance," Kapitonov said.

But he added: "We believe that all the comrades who put forward or supported the idea of moving Abkhazia from the Georgian to the Russian republic will understand the illegality of their position and not insist on this. The future blossoming of Abkhazia should not be sought by this means."

War Crimes Conviction Thrown Out By Court

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch Supreme Court on Monday threw out a lower court's conviction of Pieter Menten and ordered a new trial for the millionaire art collector accused of killing Jews for the Nazis in World War II Poland.

The 78-year-old Dutchman had been sentenced to 15 years in prison by an Amsterdam court last Dec. 14.

In ruling on Menten's appeal, the high court said it found procedural errors in the Amsterdam trial. It ordered a new trial in The Hague.

The court said some documents used by the prosecution were not made available to the defense counsel and some defense witnesses were not called. As a result, it said, trial testimony was "incomplete."

Justice Ministry officials said Menten would remain in custody pending the new trial. No date was set for the trial but Menten's attorney said it probably would be at least three months away.

A diabetic, Menten has been held in the hospital wing of Scheveningen prison, near this capital city, since he was sentenced.

He fled to Switzerland shortly before a warrant was issued for his arrest in December 1976. The Swiss sent him back to Holland.

Menten was convicted of killing between 20 and 30 Jews in July 1941 while serving with the Nazi S.S. in the Polish village of Podhorocze, now part of the Soviet Ukraine.

Menten, who had been convicted and sentenced to an eight-month prison term in 1949 for collaborating with the Nazis, maintained his innocence throughout the seven-month trial and said he was in different places, including Berlin and Warsaw, when the killings occurred.

Study To Document Blue Ridge Life

WASHINGTON (AP) — A two-month study to document the folklife and culture of a section of the Blue Ridge Parkway will be conducted this summer by the Interior Department's National Park Service and the American Folklife Center of the Library of Congress.

The survey will document the folk culture around the Mabry-Mill-Rocky Knob area of Virginia and the Doughton Park-Little Glade Millpond area of North Carolina.

Four Top Terrorists Arrested

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Four of West Germany's most wanted terrorists — including three members of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla gang — have been arrested in Yugoslavia, the government announced Monday.

Two of those arrested are suspected of being involved in the kidnap-killing last fall of industrial magnate Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

Authorities gave few details of the arrests, but said the four were all arrested before May 20 and all taken into custody at the same time.

Justice Ministry spokesman Sepp Binder identified those arrested as Brigitte Mohnhaupt, 28, Rolf Clemens Wagner, 33, Sieglinde Hofmann, 32, and Peter Boock, 26.

According to police records, Miss Mohnhaupt, Wagner and Miss Hofmann are members of the original Baader-Meinhof gang.

Boock, according to the dossiers, is a member of the so-called "Siegfried Haag Group," an offshoot organization.

A spokesman for the Interior Ministry said Yugoslav authorities acted on information supplied by German police and "highly sophisticated technology" played a major part in tracking down the terrorists.

He said authorities believed a "severe blow" has been dealt to terrorist organizations' logistic systems.

Miss Mohnhaupt and Wagner are suspected of involvement in the slaying of Schleyer, 62, who was kidnapped on a Cologne street while driving home from work Sept. 5, 1977.

He was killed Oct. 18, after authorities refused to release 11 imprisoned members of the Baader-Meinhof gang.

Miss Mohnhaupt and Wagner are also wanted on suspicion of involvement in the killings of West German Prosecutor General Siegfried Buback April 7, 1977, and banker Juergen Ponto July 30.

Miss Mohnhaupt dropped out of sight after her release from a prison where she had served a four-and-one-half-year term for illegal possession of firearms and for being a member of a terrorist organization.

She also is suspected of having been involved in a gunbattle with Dutch police in Utrecht last September in which one officer was killed.

Miss Hofmann is believed to be a comrade of West German terrorist Stefan Wisniewski, 25, whom French authorities arrested at a Paris airport earlier this month and deported to Germany.

Wisniewski and Miss Hofmann are said to have received special training in a camp of the Peoples Front For The Liberation Of Palestine in 1976.

Binder said that Yugoslavia had asked Bonn for the extradition of some Yugo-slav citizens living in West Germany.

Political sources said Belgrade apparently wanted Croatia exiles it believes have been involved in armed attacks on Yugoslav diplomatic personnel and installations in West Germany in recent years.

Binder said, however, that Bonn would not agree to any prisoner swaps.
