Consumer Food Price Hike Due

WA:HINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration Tuesday braced for the latest inflation figures, which one official predicted would be a disaster.

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday that consumer food prices now are expected to climb 8 to 10 percent this year, the highest increase since 1974.

Last fall, the department predicted that retail food prices for all of 1978 would average 4 to 6 percent more than in 1977. But on March 28, the department revised its estimate upward to show a gain of 6 to 8 percer Figures On April Due Today

Barry Bosworth, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, has said the April and May Consumer Price Index figures on overall inflation will "probably look pretty bad." The April figures are to be released today.

He said they would probably match the 9.3 percent annual inflation rate that stirred alarm in the first three months of the year. The April figures, he said, would be a "dis-

Although he agreed the April price report will be bad, one government economist said he didn't think it would cause the administration to do anything it isn't already

"We are already expecting it to be bad; we are already doing as much as we can...I don't see how the administration could be more aware of it," said the economist, who did not want to be identified. He said food prices probably will be up again sharply in May, but that prices are also rising generally throughout the economicosts, both in labor and raw materials. "It's a cost-push thing that's got to work itself out," he added.

Advance Continues "The sharp advance in retail food prices, which began to accelerate last winter, has continued this spring," the Agriculture Department's outlook board said. "First half retail food prices are rising and continue to run around 8 percent above a year ago."

Officials said the food price boost is due in part to smaller supplies of red meat from what had been expected a few months ago and weather damage to some fresh vegetable crops.

Other contributing factors are thriving exports of farm commodities to foreign counries and a brisk American consumer

Any improvement should not show up until June, but for the entire year infla-tion should be about 7 percent, Bosworth said.

Inflation Strategy

The Labor Department compiles the figures, but Bosworth often gets figures on price trends early as he plans strategy to control inflation.

John Zaluski, economist for the AFL-CIO, said inflation "hurts our people more than anyone else. Food, energy and housing are purchases that can't be

Cost Containment Effort Pledged By Teaching Hospital

Avalanche-Journal Staff

WARY of federal intervention, the Health Sciences Center Hospital Tuesday pledged to support a "voluntary cost con-tainment program" aimed at holding down the price of medical care in Texas and the rest of the nation.

In a resolution, the Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers vowed to keep expenditures of the local teaching institution as low as possible without sacrificing service.

Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and its hospital, off federal legislation that would impose an "arbi-trary cap" on health-care expenditures.

The effort has been engineered by state and national hospital officials to "show the country that these things (rising hospital costs and hospital bills) can be handled in a voluntary way without mandates from Washington, D.C.," Bosworth

Reese Takes Variety Of Shots At Bush

By PAULA TILKER Avalanche-Journal Staff

Republican Jim Reese, coming into the home stretch in his Saturday runoff bid against George Bush, Tuesday accused his opponent of "deliberately misleading" the public about his background.

Reese said during a news conference that Bush implies in his campaign brochures that he is a Midland native, while his workers conduct a "negative and divisive" campaign in that city. Bush, 31, labeled the claim concerning the background information a nonissue and the campaign charge as "absolutely untrue.

The two men are seeking the GOP en-dorsement as a candidate in the November general election for George Mahon's 19th Congressional District seat.

Reese, 48, took exception to a brochure that says Bush was "born July 6, 1946, and raised in Midland, Texas." Reese said the wording suggests Bush is a Midland native, although he was born in Con-

Where he was born is not important. What is important is that he deliberately misled the people," Reese said, adding his opponent "allowed the misrepresentations to continue" in media reports.

Bush, contacted later, countered that he "never tried to mislead anybody." He noted that he ordered about 3,000 brochures destroyed after it was discovered they mistakenly stated that he was born in Midland

When questioned about his references to "negative and divisive" campaigning by Bush in Midland, Reese charged his opponent's volunteers with soliciting

votes by saying "we don't want anyone

The workers are taking "advantage of the natural rivalry" between the two cities, said Reese, a former Odessa mayor.

"Either the campaign has deliberately fostered this divisiveness or George Bush has been totally incapable of controlling it " he added.

Bush called that a "false accusation" and said his workers assured him they have campaigned cleanly.

And, Bush added, "Odessa is very important in the election and rivalry would be damaging in November.'

Bush also dismissed Reese's questioning of his past association with an Odessa-based company

Reese noted that the company is listed as a member of Odessa's chamber of commerce but that it is not listed with the telephone company. Reese refused to say why he raised the subject, saying only that he believes it is a "curious thing" that needs to be explained.

Before announcing his candidacy, Bush said, he bought into the company, which paints oil field supply equipment. How-ever, he sold his stock in March because of campaign pressures and since then has not involved himself with the company, he said, adding some of his old brochures list him as chairman of the company's

To Reese's contention that "it becomes an issue of credibility," Bush countered, The people want to know what my beliefs are" and not his past association with a private company.

City Of Future Charted By Italian Architect

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Take a moment to picture your hometown of the future as it lives in the sketches, models and mind of futuristic architect Paolo Soleri. It would be a self-contained, 25-story crescent structure of shops, residences, industries, schools and businesses, built atop sloping terraces of greenhouses covered by a hundreds of square yards of glass or plastic. Much of the city's food would be grown in the greenhouses, which would also capture solar energy to provide most of the city's heat and power. It would be designed to capture the stingiest of winter's rays of sunlight, but shield residents from the harsh summer

There would be no traffic jams because there would be no need for autos — the whole thing would take up only 16 acres. But it would be home for about 5,000 persons in spacious 2,000-square-foot dwellings. It's called "Arcosanti," Soleri's prototype of what he calls "Arcology," and it's slowly being built in central Arizona.

"If you came to me as a client and told me you were very concerned about conserving reserves, especially energy, or very concerned about pollution, waste, preservation of land, preservation of farmland. . . this is the way to go," said Solerwho spoke this week at the Fourth International Congress of Reglition, the Arts, Architecture and the Environmen

Soleri preaches the gospel of "miniaturization" and sees the world's sprawling cities as monuments to wastefulness His "Arcology," which symbolizes Soleri's complex theory connecting architecture and ecology, is designed to save a polluted world crowding itself out of energy reserves, land and food.

The diminutive, intense 57-year-old architect sees cities like Arcosanti as the final evolution of the city, "a societal framework that can give a higher quality to humankind's physical, psychological and aesthetic well-being."

Arcosanti began taking shape on an 860-acre tract of land in Arizona in 1970. It is being built largely by volunteers, with much of the funding coming from donations, arts festivals and the sale of art objects from Soleri's Consanti Foundation.

"There is a big urban crisis in the country today," said the Italian architect. "I see no other alternative than to concentrate energies within a structure that is conducive to the environmental conditions that will confront us a few years

"Society has to face facts," he added. "We probably cannot continue at the rate we are going in terms of consuming energy resources, food and available land space."

Soleri has sketches and models of such cities that would be self-contained in huge, odd geometric buildings — one re-sembling a giant footstools — much taller than the Empire State Building. Such a city would house more than a million persons in only a few square miles.

that would be built into and atop a dam, enabling the city to take advantage of the nearby water resources man or woman traveling on business. Continental's regular Coach section now has only the choicest, quietest seats in its own part of the plane, away from the discount area. In Continental's Coach, discount and regular fare passengers are not mixed together.

And there's plenty of room in our DC-10's, plus fold-down middle seats in our 727's where you can just stretch out and relax. Or spread out your papers and get some work done without being bothered. It's a place where you can get away it all, while you're getting to it all.

little more room, a little less noise, you'll be in a lot better position to enjoy free stereo, hot meals, your favorite drinks and the service that made Continental famous. With flight attendants who still think flying is special. And who want you to get off their plane smiling.

To Los Angeles: 9:30 AM, 3:45 PM. All flights direct. Schedule effective June 1.

3. If your meeting runs late or your plans change, you won't be out of luck on your way out of town. By keeping strict limits on the discount seat section, Continental is almost certain to have regular Coach seats available right up to the last minute. Palestinians Accuse Israelis In Shelling BEIRUT (AP) — Israeli gunners opened fire Tuesday on Moslem villages in southern Lebanon, killing five civilians and wounding 17, Palestinian guerrillas reported. A spokesman for Yasser Arafat's guerrilla high command in Beirut said the barrage was aimed at villages of Nabatieh province 8 to 12 miles north of the Israeli border. 'The indiscriminate Israeli shelling of residential quarters in the Nabatieh area led to this number of casualties among Lebanese citizens," the spokesman said. The spokesman said the Israelis were shelling from inside Israel. He also accused Israeli-backed right-wing Lebanese Christian forces of opening fire on the guerrilla-controlled Moslem villages "to assist the Israelis and help cover their criminal acts.

Rightist Lebanese spokesmen in Beirut later confirmed the shelling took place but withheld comment on charges that they took part.

Victims of the shelling were reported taken to hospitals in the coastal city of Sidon, 20 miles from Beirut and provincial capital of the south.

Policy Seen As Tampering

NEW YORK (AP) - Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza said Tuesday that the Carter administration's human rights policy is being interpreted in his country to overthrow the government by violent

Somoza, whose family has ruled the Central American nation for more than 40 years, stopped short of saying American policy was fostering disturbances in Nicaragua.

"I don't say that the Carter administration fosters it, because that's a delicate statement. But just the fact they're pronouncing the right to dissent

U.S. military aid to Nicaragua was suspended last year after congressional hearings on alleged violations of human rights by Somoza's government.

Somoza said he believed in "the inherent right" of dissent, but said there are two kinds of dissent, one "inside" the law and the other "outside.

Last week, five Nicaraguan radio stations were closed down because their owners had gone outside the law, Somoza said, and illegally "instigated the people to riot" in reporting "the burning and looting of an industrial establishment" in the town of Esteli.

"We had to stop them for a time until they got cooled off and then they were allowed the next day to broadcast again, with all their freedom in hand," Somoza

U.S. officials said they were concerned the incident could be a sign of worsening conditions in Nicaragua, where they said human rights violations have decreased since the congressional hearings last

'That' Budget Still Way Off

IF HE FOLLOWS through on his order for a "crackdown" on federal spending in fiscal 1980, President Carter still will be $37.5 billion shy of keeping his promise to the American public-but at least he'll be $13 billion closer than he is today.

In 1976, voters will recall, candidate Carter promised a balanced budget by the end of his term while, out of the other side of his mouth, he was promising to beef up all sorts of government spending programs.

Net result: A deficit that's been running in the red at the rate of more than $50 billion a year ever since he took office.

LAST WEEK, THOUGH, the President told officials in his administration to hold federal spending to about $538 billion in That'd be about $80 billion more than this year and $40 billion more than next year, but the order was hailed far and wide as a directive for an "austere" budget in 1980.

Still, it'd be $12 billion below what Mr. Carter's budgetmakers say would be needed to continue present programs intact, so the President is at least moving in the right direction-if he means what he says and

If the President settles in on this promise as one to keep, the fiscal 1980 deficit would be "only" $37.5 billion. His hope, obviously, would be that the voters would see this "trimming of the deficit" as a step toward keeping his balanced budget pledge and give him four more years to go all the way.

ALTHOUGH Mr. Carter didn't indicate what programs he thought might be delayed or trimmed back in order to meet his 1980 budget targets, analysts said it would imply virtually no new spending or tax-cut initia-

Considering inflation, some existing programs might even have to be cut, 'tis said.

Economists will join us in doubting that Mr. Carter will get the budget back on track toward a balanced income and outgo, considering the howl that's bound to be raised by the liberal big spenders.

However, we should not let this dampen our enthusiasm for the idea. And if Mr. Carter does by some inner strength of will hold the budget increase under 10 percent in each of the next two years, he will-quite frankly-have done better than we thought

A-mend-ments Don't Mend It

WHILE THE 1977 amendments to the Social Security Act undoubtedly will adequately provide for the short-term solvency of the trust funds, their end, as the psalmist said, is as bitter as wormwood, sharp as a twoedged sword."

Colin D. Campbell, professor of economics at Dartmouth College and an adjunct scholar of the American Enterprise Institute, warns that the new legislation "fails to address long-term financing problems.'

Furthermore, he predicts further social security legislation in the near future.

"THE 1977 amendments, as have previous amendments, expand the coverage of the socal security system-in this case for persons with high earnings," he writes.

By raising the taxable wage base, it raises the replacement ratios of persons whose earnings are covered more fully because of the higher wage base.

The new legislation does reflect a shift in emphasis by Congress away from welfare objectives and toward greater individual equity. But, alas, it's only a paper moon.

Lawmakers manage to shift gears more often than a cross-country teamster. The difference is lawmakers seldom take their legislative vehicles out of neutral.

THE 1977 amendments hold constant at approximately $121 a month the initial minimum benefit promised to persons when they retire at age 65.

In recent years, the principal consequence of providing a minimum benefit is that persons not covered by social security in their regular jobs are able to get a remarkable financial deal out of the social security system.

Bypassing The Brass

WASHINGTON-Just two days after secret testimony by the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) reaffirmed the military's opposition to a total nuclear test ban, President Carter ordered U.S. negotiators to press for precisely such a deal with the Soviets.

Carter's propensity to take military decisions against the military's advice has never been clearer. On May 18, at closed-door Senate hearings on his nomination as JCS chairman, Air Force Gen. David Jones unequivocally opposed,

ANDREW TULLY:

WASHINGTON-Jimmy Carter should invite his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, and Sen. Barry Goldwater to dinner so they can get better acquainted.

Z. B. and the Arizona Senator implicitly agree that it would be fine if the United States could put more pressure on the Soviet Union to stop its military meddling in Africa.

Z. B. believes Communist China is just the partner we need in that enterprise. Gold bly would buy that, but there's this little snag,

It is that Z. B. wants full diplomatic relations with Peking, if necessary at the cost of tossing Taiwan onto the ash heap. Goldwater is vigorously opposed to deserting our Taiwanese ally so we can exchange tea and sympathy with the Chinese

THUS, WE had Z. B. in Peking telling his hosts that Carter .: "determined to join you in overcoming the remaining obstacles in the way to full normalization of our relations...The United States has made up its mind on this issue.

At the same time; the Heritage Foundation released a "Critical Issues" study by Goldwater in which he declared that it would be unconstitutional for the President to abrogate the mutual defense treaty with Taiwan without obtaining the approval of two-thirds of the Senate or both houses of Congress.

And, of course, Peking has insisted that before full relations can be established, the U.S. must sever diplomatic ties with Taiwan, abrogate the defense treaty, and withdraw the remaining 1000 American troops there. The Red Chinese repeatedly have insisted that these conditions are not subject to negotiation.

IT SEEMS to me that over coffee at Carter's place, Z. B. and Goldwater could reach a meeting of minds on the situation. Surely they could agree on an obvious fact of life, to wit, that Peking views the Soviet Union as the biggest threat to its national security.

Red China and the Soviet Union share a long. common border, where military clashes have been frequent. The two peoples are traditional enemies. In a crunch, then, the Red regime should be willing to accept half a loaf-full normalization of relations with the U.S. without altering America's diplomatic relations with Tai-

By doing so. Peking would gain an ally-or at least a not unfriendly government-in dealing with the Russian bully.

INDEED, Z. B. put it just that way in a Peking speech. He said there were many areas of the world where the United States and China could contribute to peace and "deter imperialistic aggression." He didn't mention Zaire, but he did mention Africa, where Russian and Cuban adventurism has drawn fire from Peking and Washing-

In Africa, Europe, the Middle East and Asia, said Z. B., the U.S. and Red China "can enhance the cause of peace through consultations and where appropriate through parallel pursuits of similar objectives."

And Foreign Minister Huang Hua declared that 'The shadow of (Russian) social-imperialism can be seen in almost all the changes and disturbances in almost every part of the world."

Now there is a meeting of minds in plain, unvarnished language: The Russians are the villains. In baseball parlance, a deal Washington and Peking—and Barry Goldwater—could live with would benefit all sides.

in the interests of national security, a "zeroyield" ban (prohibiting even low-yield explosions) of all underground tests. He was patently unaware that a "presidential

CONSEQUENTLY, defense-oriented members of the Senate Armed Services Committee pounced on JCS chairman-designate Jones when his confirmation hearings began May 18. These senators were particularly concerned about the

Paul Warnke, chief disarmament negotiator, that week was pressing for a U.S.-Soviet moratorium on all tests prior to negotiations for a "zero-

Answering questions from Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, the general declared: "I could not recommend a comprehensive test ban...in the context of zero testing.

SEN. HENRY M. Jackson pointed out that the joint chiefs previously opposed a zero-yield treaty. "I subscribe to that," Jones responded. "... We don't see any capability to verify the Soviets with any assurance down to zero yield.

Pinning Jones down, Jackson asked whether 'this is still the JCS position." The response: Yes, it has not changed

Jones refused to alter this stance despite prodding by Sen. John Culver of Iowa, battering ram of the arms control bloc.

"Isn't it true," asked Culver, that the treaty will provide us with a fair degree of confidence on compliance and provide a low incentive for

The general stood his ground: cheating "may not be quite that difficult... I am not assured that we would have confidence the Soviets couldn't

CULVER PERSISTED, suggesting that a treaty lasting five years to less would not threaten reliability of the U.S. nuclear stockpile. Jones replied that "something unexpected" can always effect "reliability," adding: "You just may not find the problems if you don't do testing."

Jones clearly was uninformed about other plays elsewhere in the Washington arms game. Warnke that week failed to get his pre-negotiations moratorium but won agreement on a zero-yield, fiveyear treaty (three years longer than the chiefs prefer). "Presidential decision memorandum signed May 20 directed negotiators to start from Soviet proposals for on-site inspection and unmanned seismic detector stations-considered inadequate for verification by Pentagon scientific

THE JCS convened May 22 to talk it over. Gen. Bernard Rogers (Army), Adm. James L. Holloway (Navy) and Gen. Louis Wilson (Marines) were dead set against it. The new Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Lew Allen, wavered. Jones seemed to back away from his strong stance, suggesting that the chiefs should study the question a little

But during his confirmation hearings, Jones had locked himself into independence. When one defense-oriented senator after another asked whether he would be his own man as JCS chairman, Jones replied time and again: he would not travel the country making speeches but he woud give Congress his own blunt opinion even if it conflicted with Jimmy Carter's.

As we have tramped around the world, we have had the good fortune to come in contact with not only some of the leaders of key nations, but the man and woman in the street.

We have shared bread, wine and thoughts with hundreds of persons, from leaders in South Africa and Israel to taxi drivers in Cairo and Rome. And we can honestly say that for the most part people are more alike than they are different. In brief, it's a much, much smaller world than many of us realize. And, while our own country seems to be slowly emerging from a period of self-imposed isolation, the rest of the world has been waiting..

IN THE SAME block in which our hotel was located in Lisbon is the headquarters of the Communist Party in Portugal.

The blood-red flag with the yellow hammer and sickle floats gently in the breeze. Bold signs and clenched fists proclaim the rallying cry.

Throughout the city, posters and occasionally banners, proclaim the merits of "the workers" and the Communist cause. Spray paint and large circulars deface the sides of many buildings. Similar scenes are to be found in much of Rome.

Walking through the main shopping area and outlying points, one would get the impression that the Red Legions wield much weight in this nation, torn by the upheaval only four years ago of doing away with 46 years of a more or less benevolent dictatorship.

The truth, according to those who should know, is that the Communists as a hard-core political unit control no more than perhaps five percent of the nation's voters and are feared by the average Portuguese citizen.

THIS IS DOUBLY so in the case of the businessmen, who are doing a good job thus far in restoring Portugal's past role in commerce and

U.S. Supreme Court To Consider Issue Of Alimony For Men

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court said Tuesday it will decide whether laws providing alimony payments only for divorced women discriminate against divorced men.

The justices also ruled that lawyers generally may not drum up business by personally contacting potential clients but that lawyers for non-profit groups may do so when seeking "litigation as a vehicle for effective political expres-

In the alimony case, the court will study the validity of an Alabama law making only women potential recipients of alimony

William Orr, a San Francisco business executive charged with being behind in alimony payments to his ex-wife, an Alabama resident, charges that the law fosters sex discrimination.

It violates the Constitution because it denies him and all other divorced men equal protection under the law, attorneys Eleven other states have laws provid ing alimony only for women, and those laws hang in the balance of the high court's eventual decision.

The states are Arkansas, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nevada, New York, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee and Wyoming.

In a pair of decisions, the justices drew a distinction between lawyers who solicit clients "for pecuniary gain" and those who volunteer free legal help to further the goals of an association such as the American Civil Liberties Union.

The court unanimously refused to back down from traditional bans on so-called "ambulance chasing" by lawyers as it up-held the disbarment of Cleveland attorney Albert Ohralik

Noting the "detrimental aspects of face-to-face selling," Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. said for the court that "the potential for overreaching is significantly greater when a lawyer, a professional trained in the art of persuasion, personally solicits an unsophisticated, injured or distressed lay person." Ohralik, who was disbarred after asking two young women seriously hurt in a car accident for permission to file a lawsuit for them, had charged that Ohio's ban on such solicitation infringed on his free-speech rights. Powell also wrote the court's opinion that provided the ACLU and other civil rights groups with a significant victory.

In other matters Tuesday, the court: - Agreed to study a request from Massachusetts authorities that it significantly relax the restrictions now imposed on police searches. In a case that could lead to a watering-down of the court's Miranda ruling on the rights of criminal suspects, the justices said they will decide whether suspects' statements ruled inadmissible as trial evidence may be used to justify a search warrant. - Agreed to decide under what circumstances poor persons charged with minor crimes are entitled to court-appointed lawyers. At issue in a case from Chicago is whether free legal aid should be given to all persons facing a possible prison sentence.

Ruled, in effect, that television an radio stations are under no obligation to provide air time to persons opposed to product commercials. The court let stand rulings that the "fairness doctrine" imposed on broadcasters almost never applies to commercials. Acting on his own, Justice Thurgood Marshall told New York authorities not to return prisoner Joan Little to North Carolina until they hear from the Supreme Court. The full court is expected to consider in its Thursday conference Miss Little's claims that her life will be jeopardized if she is extradicted to North Carolina, where she was the focal point of a much-publicized murder trial in 1975.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Israel has unveiled a miniature remote-controlled spy plane that looks like a large model aircraft but can fly reconnaissance missions up to 200 miles.

The 70-mile-per-hour Mastiff, built by the Tadiran electronics firm, will be offered for sale abroad. Company officials say its price - $500,000 for six planes and monitoring equipment — is about one-fourth the cost of similar planes

The fiberglass plane is eight feet long with a wingspan of 14 feet and weighs 150 pounds. It can fly to 10,000 feet.

It can carry a 33-pound load, Tadiran officials said, and can remain in the air up to six hours with a smaller load. The officials said that because of its size the Mastiff is difficult to detect either by radar or the naked eye. The plane can carry a television camera to, ansmit pictures back to its base. Reports here said Israel previously purchased miniature planes from other countries, but decided several years ago to build its own model better suited to the area. The company would not say how many, if any, of the airplanes had been ordered by the Israeli army. FLANAGAN'S TV

Message To Washington MESSAGE - Please help me to correct an error that was made regarding my Social Security check. Last November my father passed away. We had the same name, so in December our mailman took it on himself to mail my check back. He wrote on the envelope that I had passed away. I am four months behind in my checks. I have been to every agency I can get to in an effort to restore a source of income I desperately need. I am disabled and have exhausted every way I know of to solve this, except for you. Will you please help me? I don't know where else to turn. - H.F., Groveton

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS - The Social Security Administration tells me the problem has been resolved and you should be receiving a check for the four months due you in the very near future. You may have, in fact, received it already. As to your mailman, the Postal Service has instructed him to never again take such action on his own initiative.

We believe this would help the Mexican economy while at the same time providing precious metals for American use. We don't know who to contact first, though, and would appreciate your help in getting this started. Please furnish me any information you can on this situation. — O.M., Eagle Pass

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Inter-American Development Bank officials have advised me that they consider loan applications from the governments of member countries or for projects that have been assigned a high priority by the governments of member countries. Irenee du Pont Jr., great-great-grand-son of the Du Pont Co.'s founder, is retiring as a senior vice president of the company and as a member of its powerful executive committee.

However, du Pont, 58, does not view the move as either a sad or momentous

"The change was all in place long before I came on the executive committee," du Pont said.

In fact, he has been a leader in removing the vestiges of family control since he joined the executive committee 11 1/2

Du Pont was a strong backer of Irving S. Shapiro, who became the firm's chief executive in 1974, despite his unprecedented background of being a lawyer, Jewish and a native of Minneapolis with no du Pont family connection.

Shapiro's appointment was a break with the company's tradition of keeping the top job within the family.

"It began to appear the issues facing the company were not internal but external," du Pont said. "The challenge to making profits for the stockholders and quality products at a reasonable price came from the impact of laws and public

The merger of Christiana Securities Co. into the Du Pont Co. was another of du Pont's projects.

"It had outlived its purpose by decades," du Pont said. "In 1972, we took the bull by the horns and eliminated it ... We got a lot of static."

Law suits delayed completion of the merger until last October. The newspapers then were sold to the Gannett Co. Inc. of Rochester, N.Y., for $60 million cash. The bank stock is to be sold later.

Load-Leveling Guide May Be Inaccurate, Safety Report Says

WASHINGTON - The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that current guidelines for use of load-leveling in towing trailers may not be desirable.

Load-leveling hitches permit the towing of heavy loads. They level the load, helping to avoid overloading of rear tires, axles and the suspension system of the car.

However, current guidelines call for use of load leveling until the car-trailer combination is level. In many cases, the administration said, this may transfer more of the load to the front axle of the towing vehicle than is desirable for proper handling, stability and braking.

In such cases it may be preferable to apply less load leveling and to maintain a level condition by using shock absorbers raised by air pressure on the rear of the towing vehicle, the administration

The agency has issued a report discussing load-leveling problems, methods of applying load leveling and determining proper vehicle attitude.

Festival Tabs French Film, U.S. Actors

CANNES. France (AP) - Italian director Ermanno Olmi's "L'Albero degli Zoccoli," ("The Wooden Shoe Tree"), a three-hour epic on the fate of landless farm workers in 19th-century Italy, won the coveted top prize, the Golden Palm, of the Cannes International Film Festival on Tuesday.

Filmed almost entirely with real peasants from the plains of Lombardy, "L'Albero degli Zoccoli" was co-produced with Italian television. The title refers to a woman burying her son's wooden shoes under a poplar tree that plays a symbolic role in the action.

American actor Jon Voight, 40, won the festival's male acting prize for his portrayal of a paralyzed Vietnam war veteran in Hal Ashby's "Coming Home."

Two actresses. American Jill Clayburgh and French star Isabelle Huppert, shared the female acting prize.

Miss Clayburgh was honored for her portrayal of an abandoned wife in Paul Mazursky's "An Unmarried Woman." Miss Huppert received the prize for her title role in Claude Chabrol's "Violette Nozieres," the real life story of a French girl tried in the 1930's for murdering her

U.S. Envoy Reported In Talks With Vietnamese

HONG KONG (AP) — A Paris-based firmed that Knight made a trip to Hanoi late last month, but described it as "exsecret trip to Hanoi last month and met with top Vietnamese officials to discuss normalization of relations with the United States, a well-informed Western source said Tuesday.

The source said Ridgway Brewster Knight, a former American diplomat and now Chase Manhattan's director of international relations in Europe, spent a week in Vietnam and returned with a personal message for President Carter.

The message reportedly contained several suggestions for relaxing of U.S. trade restrictions against Vietnam, an intermediate step leading to resumption of relations between the two countries, at war until the North Vietnamese conquest of South Vietnam on April 30, 1975.

In New York, a bank spokesman con-late last month, but described it as "exploratory, and on bank business." The spokesman said he could comment no further.

But the highly reliable source here, who asked not to be identified, said Knight ranged over broader topics concerning U.S.-Vietnamese relations.

It was not clear if the trip were made with the tacit approval of the Carter administration to test the prospects for normalization or if it was a project of Chase Manhattan's world-traveling President David Rockefeller, known for his ventures in personal diplomacy.

Knight served as U.S. ambassador to Belgium from 1965-69. He joined the bank in 1973. The source said Rockefeller has used him on special assignments in Disclosure of Knight's trip came at a time of souring relations between Vietnam and China, a development that Western diplomats here say could make Hanoi much more anxious to establish normal diplomatic ties with the United Hanoi denies the allegations, and on Tuesday it called again for negotiations in early June to settle the dispute. China has not responded.

Western diplomats and observers here said they believe China reacted strongly to the flight of the refugees because Peking felt Vietnam had got too close politically to the Soviet Union.

One source said the Chinese probably would be happy to see normalization between Hanoi and Washington, a move that in their eyes would undercut the Russian influence in Vietnam. Diplomatic observers say the Soviet Union, on the other hand, undoubtedly would try to use its influence in Hanoi to prevent any trade normalization with the United States.

Vietnam's Communist government has maintained that the cornerstone of its foreign policy is not to be dependent on any single power.

One businessman said this might be the last chance for the Americans to do something to reduce Russian influence in Vietnam and help chart the future political status of Southeast Asia at the same

One of the stumbling blocks to normalization has been Vietnam's demand for war reparations from the Americans.

Western analysts say Hanoi now may be ready to drop the demands, which have been rejected by the United States.

The last round of U.S.-Vietnamese diplomatic talks was last December and the next formal meeting is expected to be lat-er this year, although no date is set.

Unexplained Sway Closes Maine Bridge

DEER ISLE, Maine (AP) - The suspension bridge linking Deer Isle to the mainland was closed to traffic Tuesday after it developed a visible sway.

State police barred vehicles and pedestrians from traversing the 1,200-foot span which carries Maine's Route 15 across Eggemoggin Reach between Deer Isle and Sedgwick.

Bridge engineers were en route to the scene from Ellsworth and Augusta, said Martin C. Rissel, the head of the Maine Department of Transportation's maintenance and operations division.

"We simply don't know what caused it, and we don't know what the problem is," said Rissel. He said he didn't think there was any danger that the bridge would col-

Hodges Loses Senate Race

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram won the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate Tuesday night, surprising Luther H. Hodges Jr. in a runoff.

Ingram will take on Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in the general election. With 75 percent of the precincts reporting, Ingram had 173,033 votes, or 53.4 percent, while Hodges had 151,154 votes, or votes, or 46.7 percent. The race was expected to be watched with interest from the White House because Helms has been a constant opponent of Carter administration policies. Hodges, a banker and the son of a former governor, said during the campaign that he had a commitment from President Carter for at least one campaign visit to North Carolina if he were the Democratic nominee in November.

Hodges, who campaigned for nearly a year and spent $1 million, benefitted from a familiar name in state politics. Ingram ran on his tough-talking populist reputation as insurance commissioner. Hodges won 40 percent of the vote in the eight-candidate primary. Ingram, as runner up, exercised his right by law to demand the runoff because the top-vote getter received less than 50 percent of the ballots cast. Ingram was 14 percentage points behind Hodges - a greater deficit than any runoff candidate has overcome in 75 years.

Helms, a national spokesman for conservative causes, was elected in 1972.

Cuba Assails U.S. Charges On Zaire

ident Carlos Rafael Rodriguez of Cuba said Tuesday President Carter's charge that Cuba trained and equipped rebel invaders of Zaire's southern Shaba province was "absolutely false ... based on impudently repeated lies.

In an hour-long speech at the General Assembly's special session on disarma-ment, he also said that "the military resence of France and Belgium with U.S. logistical support, on the pretext of saving the lives of their citizens" in the central African country was "an ominous

Lashes Mondale

He had a sharp reply for Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who complained in the assembly last Wednesday that "one country" - meaning Cuba - had not signed a treaty to keep Latin America free of nuclear weapons and said "that should be remedied now.

Rodriguez retorted Cuba could not renounce its right to possess any type of arms while the United States "illegally occupied" the Guantanamo Navy Base in Cuba. He said the U.S. presence was the situation that should be remedied now.

"As long as the nuclear power in this hemisphere maintains an aggressive policy toward Cuba and resorts to ill-disguised threats," he said, "no one in all fairness can ask our country to respond with meek acceptance and voluntary ren-

Carter Denounced

Rodriguez, referring to President Carter's remarks at a Chicago news conference Thursday, said the president's "imputations...against Cuba with reference to the recent events in Shaba are absolutely false, and...the government of the United States has sufficient reasons to know that they are based on impudently repeated lies. Carter said the invasion was mounted in Angola with Cuban aid and that both countries "must bear a heavy responsibilfor the killing in Zaire.

The Cuban official told the assembly no Cubans were in the invading force, which started out in Angola, entered Zaire through Zambia and was crushed by French, Belgian and Zairian troops.

U.S. Policy Hit Rodriguez said "a change in perspective of United States leaders" has resulted from Pentagon Paper and Watergate revelations, but added, that Carter's thoughts on international policy are "often contradictory" and accused him of 'dangerous deviations" and "falsificathat purpose nor did it train those who at-tacked. Neither does Cuba have political ties with the organization which claimed responsibility.

Rodriguez, bearded and bespectacled, wagged his finger to stress points as he spoke. He got 35 seconds' applause, more than Mondale, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France or Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko did when they spoke last week.

Across the street from where he spoke about 25 Cuban refugees marched with signs reading "Free Cuban Political Prisoners," "Human Rights for Cuba" and 'Cuban Troops out of Africa.'

Carter Rips Cuba's Africa Involvement

'The activities of the Soviet Union and Cuba in Africa are preventing individual nations from charting their own courses," Carter said. "As members of the world's greatest alliance we cannot remain indifferent to these events because of what they mean for Africa and because of their effect on the long-term interests

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said, "We are prepared to assist in a limited manner" in Africa, but that any plan of action that emerges from the Paris talks will not involve the use of U.S. troops in Africa.

Only Monday, NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns of Holland told reporters there is no chance of the alliance extending the frontiers of its responsibilities.

But in his speech, President Carter hailed the actions of individual allies like Belgium and France in rushing aid to the wobbling government of Zaire after an Angolan-based military force invaded the southeastern province of Shaba, prized as a source of uranium, cobalt and copper. Agreement Reported

Meanwhile, French diplomatic sources in Washington revealed that Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing have agreed to help African nations protect themselves against outside aggression if the African countries will enter into joint defense agreements.

So far, however, African leaders have shown little enthusiasm for entering into such a mutual defense accord.

Later, West German officials also agreed that the "West should help African countries to pursue their independence and sovereignty" against outside ag-

Along with his warning to the Soviets and Cubans, President Carter also stressed the need for strengthening the NATO military forces in the face of a Soviet challenge.

U.S. Role Seen

"The United States will play its part (in meeting that challenge) across the spectrum of conventional, theater nuclear and strategic nuclear forces," Carter said. "In the past year the United States has increased its conventional combat strength in Europe and is enhancing its capability for rapid deployment to the continent. U.S. theater nuclear forces are being modernized and the United States will maintain strategic nuclear equivalence with the Soviet Union. The somber note struck by Carter was echoed by Luns and other speakers, including British Prime Minister James Callaghan and Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit.

Alliance "Unshakeable" "Let no one be misled," Callaghan stressed in a passage plainly addressed to the Soviets. "The alliance is unshakeable." In addition to Soviet maneuverings in Africa, he said, East-West relations have been worsened by the "unremitting growth in Soviet military capability" and the Soviet attitude on human rights. Callaghan declared: "The Soviet Union should understand our concern but they should also know that we will not drift into a collision course through failure of knowledge or effort." Carter promised that his country would do its share to strengthen NATO defenses.

Ecevit, who presided over the NATO meeting, reflected his country's dismay over the continued refusal of Congress to cancel its embargo on the supply of arms to his nation. The ban was imposed in 1974 after Turkey invaded Cyprus and remains in force despite administration efforts to have it removed. Congressional opponents say the Turks first must yield the territory they still occupy on the East Mediterranean island - nearly half the

Ecevit has said Turkey can make no concessions over Cyprus while it remains under the pressure of the arms embargo. The Turkish leader, in addressing his colleagues, departed from the NATO majority view - especially over the Soviet threat, arguing that Moscow "does not have as threatening an attitude toward Turkey as it did some years ago." But Ecevit made it clear his country has no intention of copying the French and Greeks, who have pulled their forces out of NATO's military system.

On the sidelines of the conference, President Carter held a series of private talks with individual heads of government, including West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. Aides said the two men agreed on NATO's essential needs and agreed on an approach to the seven-nation economic conference to be held in Bonn mid-July. Both, according to spokesmen, stressed the need for closer coordination of Western money, trading and overall economic policies if runaway inflation and unemployment are to be

MIAMI (AP) - The East Coast's chief hurricane-watcher is marking the start of the hurricane season with a warning to Atlantic City to hedge its bets on the

The Eastern Seaboard hasn't had a serious hurricane since Donna in 1960 and New Jersey hasn't seen a bad hurricane in the past century," says Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center here. "When I was up in Atlantic City last year, the standard pitch was, "We don't have a hurricane problem." "But that's wrong. Everybody has a potential hurricane problem and some places along the East Coast have more of a problem because the population is so great in some areas, we might not be able to get all the people out in time."

Preparing for the official opening of the hurricane season Thursday, Frank alluded to the opening this month of Atlantic City's first gambling casino - and to the hordes of tourists that gambling could bring to the New Jersey resort, and communities nearby.

Included in his area of concern are the communities on Long Beach - an island connected to the New Jersey mainland

"We know that on some weekends there's 150,000 people on the saland," he says. "With three lanes of the causeway leading out, they could evacuate 2,000 cars, or 10,000 people an hour at the most. That means if we only can give them six hours' warning, we could only get 60,000 out before the storm hit."

Director of the Hurricane Center since 1974. Frank begins the hurricane season cach year with Cassandra-like pessimism— a role he says is necessary because of the general ignorance of potential disaster lurking in the subtropics from June to

The ignorance has been further cultivated by a dearth of storms, he says. No major destructive storm has visited the East Coast in the 1960s and 1970s — and more and more people have moved into oceanfront condominiums and low-lying coastal areas.

"We're in a lull of hurricane activity and we're happy about it," says Frank.
"But no one must assume it's not a problem. The message remains the same. We've got more people living along hurricane areas and the concern about the potential damage and death from a hurricane is greater than ever."

Atlantic's first hurricane will go by the name of Amelia. The other 1978 Atlantic storms will be named Bess, Cora, Debra, Ella, Flossie, Greta, Hope, Irma, Juliet, Kendra, Louise, Martha, Noreen, Ora, Paula, Rosalie, Susan, Tanya, Vanessa,

In the Eastern Pacific, equality of the sexes begins making inroads with the first four storms, named Aletta, Bud, Carletta and Daniel, but male names are not scheduled to be used for Atlantic storms until 1981.

By The Associated Press

President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire claimed Tuesday that rebel tribesmen driven out of the southern Zaire city of Kolwezi massacred an undetermined number of white hostages over the weekend somewhere in the bush.

French paratroopers routed the rebels from Kolwezi almost two weeks ago and remain in Zaire's southern province of Shaba to protect European civilians still there. There have been conflicting reports on whether the rebels took white civilian hostages with them as they retreated toward their bases in Angola. Mobutu, in Morocco seeking military help from King Hassan II, said in an interview with the official Moroccan news agency, "According to information obtained by our special services, the hostages who were held by the rebels were all liquidated, men, women and child-

Kolwezi May 20 said the rebels killed many Europeans during their 10-day occupation and took dozens of European hostages with them when they fled into the bush. The French began a pursuit of the rebels to try to free the hostages, but were called back as the rebels approached the Zambian and Angolan bor-

The rebels have claimed, through their spokesmen in Brussels, Belgium, that they took no civilian hostages, only seven Frenchmen who served as military advisers to Zairian troops. But refugees and Zairian witnesses have reported seeing the fleeing rebels with white hostages.

The Zairian Red Cross has said the death toll in Kolwezi was 720. That included 132 foreigners. Belgian officials said the bodies of 73 whites had been found and that 289 still were unaccounted for since the May 12 invasion by an esti-mated 4,000 Angola-based rebels. France has said 44 of its citizens are missing.

The rebels are Lunda tribesmen op-posed to Mobutu who fled in the mid-1960s after an unsuccessful rebellion in Shaba, then known as Katanga. A similar invasion was repulsed last spring by Zairian troops aided by about 1,500 Moroccans. Belgian and French troops evac-zi after the latest attack.

In New York, Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodrigues said Tuesday that President Carter's claim that Cuba trained and armed the invaders was "based on impudently repeated lies."

Rodriguez told a special U.N. General Assembly session on disarmament that Cuba "has not participated directly or indirectly" in the invasion. "Furthermore, Cuba did not supply the arms for that purpose nor did it train those who attacked. Neither does Cuba have political ties with the organization which claimed responsibility for the said events."

In Washington, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd urged the Carter administration to consider severing diplomatic relations with Cuba because of its activities in Africa.

"The blame for the atrocities in Shaba

Province also rests with the Cubans and

Soviets, who armed, trained and encouraged the invaders," Byrd said in a speech prepared for delivery in Cleveland.

Adair Team Battling

TEHRAN (UPI) - Texan Red Adair's crack firefighters Tuesday inched toward an oilfield blazing out of control for six days in a daring attempt to drop through the leaping flames in special cabins and cap two valves.

The firefighters, William Henry and Raymond Dryer, joined by a large group of Iranian experts, said they would try a pincer attack on the well's gushing oil taps from two fireproof, crane-borne cab-

But they moved slowly, held back by the intense heat and the high desert winds that whipped the flames into an in-

The two men plan to enter separate capsule chambers cooled by two 6-inch water hoses, a spokesman for the operation said. Once they get near enough, he said, they will set in motion "mechanical hands that will reach out and try to shut off the two oil sources (valves controlling the oil flow)."

"Up to now the valves are reported intact despite the great intensity of the fire," the spokesman said.

He said Adair's team would begin moving closer to the flaming mouth of the well as soon as the wind steadied in the "right direction."

Columns of thick, acrid smoke spiraled from the blaze as scores of Iranians in firefighting gear waited in a fireproof command post to assist the Americans.

An official of the state-owned National

Iranian Oil Company said high-pressure water cannons were constantly showering the red-hot mouth of the oil field, 540 miles southwest of Tehran.

The fire, which erupted from a leaking pipeline Tuesday, killed two Americans and five Iranian emgineers and already has destroyed equipment valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Electronic Pain Killer Improves Man's Mobility

PAIN RELIEVER — Samuel Librizzi demonstrates in his home the battery-powered transmitter which sends electronic impulses to dull pain in his back. Librizzi, 47, was injured 11 years ago in an auto shop accident. The electronic nerve stimulator, installed 18 months ago, was the first method he found to ease his pain. (AP Laserphoto)

PITTSBURGH (AP) - For 10 years, Samuel Librizzi unsuccessfully fought the crippling pain in his back with drugs and surgery. Now, he says, feeling good is as simple as twisting a knob.

"Everything is beautiful," said the 47year-old ex-mechanic, who is wired to beat pain. He wears a battery-powered transmitter - about the size of a bar of soap - on his belt. It sends soothing electrical impulses to electrodes implanted near his fused and scarred spine.

"Without it I couldn't move. I wouldn't be able to walk," he said in a telephone interview from his home in New Castle.

Librizzi damaged his back when a 250pound auto transmission fell on him from a work stand in 1967. He has been unable to work since.

Eighteen months ago, a Pittsburgh pain specialist implanted the experimental device in Librizzi, and for the first time in years he has been able to move free from intense pain.

"I can't say I feel normal enough to go The rest did not work.

out and perform my duties, but at least it gives me the ability to move around," he

The electronic nerve stimulator uses low-impulse signals to block pain sensations in nerve tissue. Impulses are sent from the transmitter to an aptenna attached to Librizzi's skin. A radio signal dispatches them to receivers surgically implanted under the skin, where fine wires take the impulses to electrodes deep in his body.

"I turn it on for 20-minute periods four to eight times a day," he said. "When the pain gets bad, you turn it up.

Doctors say they're not sure why the transmitter works for Librizzi. Most of the devices installed by Dr. Ruben Tenicela, director of the pain clinic at Presbyterian-University Hospital, have failed.

"This is not a panacea," Tenicela said.
"I have installed 13 stimulators. Two were taken out after relieving some pain.

He said 10 million to 12 million Americans are chronic sufferers of back pain, and he estimated one million have tried almost every drug, technique and ma-chine available to relieve it.

"By word of mouth they have learned that this treatment exists and they think this is the answer to all their problems," he said. To discourage unrealistic hopes, Tenicela noted the national success rate with

Russian Filmgoers Pick Top Movies

MOSCOW (AP) - A film in the Disney mold about a lost dog and his dying master has been chosen as the best film of 1977 in the Soviet Union, where other evening entertainment is scarce and moviegoing is a passion.

Soviet Screen, the magazine that sponsors the annual competition, announced the winner this week. It said 22,000 readers sent in ballots for the best picture, an inoffensive tale of canine loyalty called "The White Dog 'Bim' With One

Soviet Screen said the top-grossing Soviet film, based on ticket sales, was a limp spoof about bribery called "You Help Me and I'll Help You."

It gave no attendance figures for the top-billed movies, but Soviet statistics show that each year 4.5 billion tickets, costing the equivalent of 34 to 90 cents, are sold at 154,000 cinemas, with the average Russian going to the movies 17.7

By comparison Americans, who have a much wider variety of film fare, go to the movies an average of only five times a year.

The magazine said ruefully that the popularity of films among the masses seems to have had little relation to recommendations published in journals like Soviet Screen.

Most films cited in Soviet Screen's best-picture list were in the vein of light entertainment, with few political overtones or serious artistic merit. Another top-ranked film, for example, was a happy-go-lucky story of Peter the Great and a black ancestor of the poet Alexander Pushkin called "The Tale of How Tsar Peter Married Off an Arab."

Two serious films with strong emotional impact scored high. One, called 'Night Over Chile," condemned the activities of that country's military government, long a target of Soviet criticism.

The other, called "The Ascent," examines the moral choices made by two captured Soviet soldiers in World War II when they are faced with public execution or collaboration with their Nazi captors.

Directed by a woman, Larissa Shepetko, the film drew international attention and won a gold medal at a West Berlin film festival.

Subject matter and the approaches taken during filming are carefully monitored here for political content, and little serious social criticism of Soviet life makes its way into moviehouses here.

The magazine's poll indicated the constant stream of war films and political education movies pouring out of Soviet studios are not favorites with the public.

There are a number of standard leading men and women in Soviet films, but no personalities with the stature of Hollywood stars.

Soviet Screen's readers chose a plump actress, Anna Dobrokhotova, as the best actress of 1977 for her portrayal in the movie "Sweet Woman" of a bedraggled young woman who meets misfortune because her goal in life is pleasure.

Readers handed the dubious distinction of worst film of the year to two movies about youth, "Moscow Time" and "Cafe Isotope.

Hill said his appointment of Ledbetter, a former analyst for the Legislative Budget Board, was partial fulfillment of a campaign promise to manage state spending better.

"After all, budget management is the key tool to controlling costs," he said.

Budget control does not mean turning down increases in agencies that need more money, he said, but Hill added, "The theme of hold the line is going to be an important theme throughout my administration."

Legislators generally have ignored governors' budget recommendations, and Hill was asked why he thought he would be different.

"I would hope that by the hard work we are going to put in . . . we will build credibility with the Legislature. . . . I am going to do every thing I can to bring about the enactment of the kind of budget recommendations I make," Hill said.

Ledbetter will be paid with campaign funds, and Hill said this is because, "The only way I can be effective in January is to begin preparations in June."

Ledbetter holds bachelor's and master's degrees in economics from Texas A &M, where he quarterbacked the 1965 and 1966 Aggie football team. He worked for the budget board from 1969 to 1973, worked two years for Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and became Bullock's chief clerk in 1975.

Palo Duro Park To Get Cleaning

Palo Duro Canyon State Park near Canon, as of this date, is closed to campers. Elon Baker, park superintendent, said, "We've got to clear away equipment, debris and lots of mud before we can accommodate campers of any type. It's too early to say when we'll be ready for tenters or self contained camper vehicles." Some sources believe it will be the weekend of June 10 before campers can be accommodated with full facilities inside the state park. The "Texas" outdoor musical drama in Palo Duro State Park plans to open on schedule June 14. Margaret Harper, public information director for the produc-tion, stated, "Fortunately, the amphitheatre is well above the water line, and there is no pavement damage to the road." Paved free parking is adjacent to the amphitheatre.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you tell me how to encourage a child to become potty-trained? My oldest son is three and refuses to use the potty. in enzyme production. There are many enzymes associated with various foods. The principal grouping are the three the carbohydrate-splitting ones (amylases), the fat-splitters (lipases) and those that break down protein (proteases). As we grow older production of enzymes slows down somewhat, causing digestive problems. I have no objection to your use of enzymes inasmuch as it seems to have helped you. My concern is that you may be approaching the problem from the wrong end. It would be best to know why you have the indigestion. The cause may lie elsewhere, as with the gall bladder, a stomach ulcer, or a lack of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. You may have altered your pattern of eating and elimination in your retirement.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm very excited about this. Just must tell other venison haters about my discovery: My husband loves to hunt and brings home a deer once in awhile. After all the trouble and expense he goes to, I feel sorta obligated to cook some of that animal. Usually end up giving most of it away though, as I can't eat it! The rest of the family doesn't care for it much either.

That is until today...

We just acquired a barbecue grill (large barrel type). My husband wanted me to barbecue. Well, since I'm not experienced at this and didn't want to ruin some good meat, I decided to experiment on a deer leg that my husband shot last fall that was in the freezer. (Was secretly hoping I would ruin it.)

First I thawed the meat, then soaked it in cold water with one-half cup vinegar for a couple hours. Got my fire going good in the grill - just on one end.

Then I drained the meat well, removed all the tough outer skin I could by cutting and peeling, and sprinkled garlic salt and black pepper on it. Now that leg was ready for the grill.

I just placed it on the grate over the flame, turning once or twice, until nice and brown. Then moved it to the other end of grate (off the flame) closed the lid. and let it smoke!

About every 30 minutes I lifted the lid and turned and basted it with some leftover gravy drippings from a roast.

After four hours it was black as coal all over, the meat was coming loose from the bone, so I thought it must be ready or ruined. I got brave and tested for doneness by simply slicing a piece off and tasting it. Delicious!

For a larger part of the deer, the haunch for instance, it might take longer. Be sure also to keep the fire going good, but do not allow it to reach the meat. You want it to just smoke bake.

way, and I ate my share of it too. There was only the bone left for the dog!

Now I won't cringe next time my husband brings home a deer. — Happy Cook

DEAR HELOISE:

I am a hay fever victim and use loads of tissues, which are very expensive. In my bedroom I only have room for a boutique box. When I ran out recently, I took a roll of soft toilet tissue and as I unrolled it, kind of flip-flopped it into a stack.

I inserted this into my box and left a litle piece sticking out. Now I can grab one piece for lipstick, or gobs for a sneezing fit. Seems to last a long time. - Mrs.

At Wit's End...

Do you know what the basic difference is between youth and old age?

Youth has always believed that somewhere around the next bend, there is always a box when they need it. Old age never wants to take that

Later, when I thought about it, I was always receiving a scarf in a stationery box, a blouse in a shoebox, and once I got a small pendant in a box marked, "Rectal Thermometer."

At Christmas, there was no size too large or small, no form too ridiculous, no present too pithy to be matched up to one of Mother's famous boxes.

After awhile I came to recognize them. The box from Saks (Mother had never been to Saks in her life) that always caused the recipient's heart to beat a little faster until I found a floral ironing board cover in it one year), a Christmas box from Nieman-Marcus (she'd never been to Texas in her entire life) that she salvaged from the lost-and-found at the church, and her ace in the hole, a box from Tiffany's which I didn't get too choked up about when she gave me a mood ring in it two years ago

She had boxes stashed all over the house for transporting cakes, hamsters, laundry and picnic supplies. Boxes for mailing. Boxes for storing. Boxes for science themes, sleeping dogs, snapshots and memorabilia. Boxes for starting fires. Boxes for rainy-day projects. Boxes for boots by the door. And boxes to keep the baked beans from spilling over the car trunk. Boxes for a child's birthday present that you didn't know you had until you went through the catch-all drawer in the kitchen. NEW YORK (WNS) - The high insurance rates charged young drivers, espe-cially males, is one of the chief scandals associated with the hotly controversial auto insurance problem these days. It's not unusual in some large cities for a young driver to pay $1,200 or even more for insurance on a car worth $1,000.

The problem, the insurance companies insist, is that young drivers have not only more accidents but more serious ones as well. The companies point out that more than 26,000 young people die in car accidents each year. The insurers are especially concerned about drinking by young drivers. The highway fatality rate jumped in the early 1970s when various states lowered the minimum drinking age to 18 from the previous 21.

In general, young drivers comprise about 22 percent of all drivers; they are involved in 37 percent of all car acci-

Still, in the 15-to-19-year-old group, young men killed in car accidents outnumbered young women eight to one, ac-cording to Dr. Henry Betts, medical director of the Rehabilitation Institute of

Even driver education, long one of the sacred cows of teachers and parents and of the insurance industry itself, has come under question. Some, if not most, insurers have long given a discount for youngsters who took a high school driver ed course; most often 10 percent. The most significant questions about high school driver ed courses have come from the Insurance Institute of Highway Safety (IIHS), but at least some teens, too have voiced criticisms of driver ed as an "easy" course that doesn't adequately prepare students for action decisions on the highway.

The institute's main concern, as recently voiced, is that high school driver ed inference sponsored by the rehabilitation institute, as reported by the Journal of American Insurance, was that driver ed was geared to passing the licensing test with too little emphasis on skills needed for highway driving.

Give a tougher test at the end of the course, said the teen. The question about the general adequacy of driver ed came to a head late last year with the publication of a study by IIHS on Driver Education And Fatal Crash Involvement of Teenaged Drivers.

The study, by Drs. Leon Robertson and Paul Zador, found that: 1. High school 16-to-17-year-old licensed drivers on the road since 80 percent of the 16-to-17-year-old who took driver ed got licenses they otherwise wouldn't have received until

2. Increases in the number of 16-to-17years-olds taking driver ed did not reduce the involvement rate of this age group in fatal crashes 3. Among 18-to-19-year-olds, the proportion who had taken driver ed was also unrelated to the fatal crash involvement rate for this group. So driver ed had no effect here either.

The researchers stressed that the study in no way dealt with whether high school driver ed does or doesn't reduce the involvement by 16-to-17-year-olds in non-fatal crashes but only with their involvement as drivers in fatal crashes. The study does, however, say that were the licensing age raised to 18, the "adverse effects of driver ed would be removed." The study examined driver ed experience in 27 states during a number of past years. National Highway Traffic Safety Administrator Joan Claybrook criticized the report as having "an inadequate factual basis for their claim that 2,000 deaths result from increased licensure of 16-and-17-year-olds because of driver education." But she didn't disagree with the basic premise. Actually the study didn't say driver ed should be abolished but rather that it needs more research for possible improvements. The youngsters at the Chicago conference not only advised more training in highway hazards and a tougher test but more involvement of parents in driver ed and stricter law enforcement. One suggestion was that a teen back to the driving range for more pro-

Nature lovers are being startled in suburban woodlands by Wills, a slender, bespectacled statistician who walks the shady paths wearing nothing but his glasses, a wristwatch

He said that since becoming a serious nature buff in 1976 he has encountered strangers 120 times; none, apparently, has been a policeman,

"Only three of them objected, but there are no phones on the trees and by the time they get to one, they've had a chance to think it over logically: 'Hey, the guy wasn't hurting anyone," he said. "Their reactions vary: 'Hey, put you clothes on.' Or 'Hey, that's great," he said.

Wills, who is divorced and lives alone, said he has been arrested only twice - each time sunbathing in the nude in the backyard of his suburban Hanover Park home. Neighbors with small children complained. He said he was acquitted in 1973 of disorderly conduct and public indecency because he was on his own property; in 1974 a similar charge was dismissed.

"The laws are hypocritical and I had hoped to be found guilty so I could appeal," he said.

He said he has a suit pending in federal court challenging the constitutionality of laws cracking down on public nudi-

"It's primarily a religious conviction with me and that is a great driving force," said Wills. "A person should be unmasked. Clothes are a mask. They're only good for protection - like against sunburn - or for dressing up to be attractive. Clothes are a substitute for the real thing. They produce a fantasy, like drugs. People wearing them can't cope with reality.

Wills said he was inspired by "a spiritual message that bodies are good things because they are God's creations.

Lack Of Patriotism Seen

SEATTLE (AP) - Lew Chilson, the nation's most decorated living veteran of World War II. says he's "no flagwaver," but he still is disappointed by dwindling public displays of patriotism.

Chilson served as grand marshal of the city's Memorial Day parade, which drew a sparce crowd. A memorial service at the end of the parade was attended by only about 100 persons other than those who were actually participating in

"I don't know what it is," Chilson said afterwards, "but over the years it has been noticeable. It has been dwindling more and more. People don't seem to have the patriotism they once had.

The only person who won more medals in World War II was the late Audie Murphy, who turned actor after his mili-

Old Duties Await Mitchell

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is tentatively scheduled to resume his old clerical duties at the federal prison camp he re-entered last week, Warden C.W. Beaver said Tuesday

Beaver said he tentatively decided to reassign the 64-yearold former Cabinet member to the prison's education department as a result of a medical examination conducted after Mitchell's return to the Maxwell AFB facility last Friday from a five-month medical furlough

He said the examination showed Mitchell to be in "good health," despite having "lost a little weight" in the wake of two recent operations.

After being released on medical furlough last Dec. 28, Mitchell underwent surgery in January for a weakened abdominal artery. In April, a plastic hip socket was implanted in Mitchell's arthritic right hip. He becomes eligible for pa-

The runner-up leaped to her feet, grabbed the microphone and cast apoplectic aspersions on the character and parentage of the winner and the jury.

Supporters of the winner, Jocelyn Daou, took offense at the bcoadside from loser Mona Raad. Shouts led to shots, but luckily no one was injured.

It was a terrible fiasco, everybody agreed. Moreover, some say it was no contest and Jocelyn Certainly no winner. The whole questionable affair was organized by George Dfouny, a renegade in the eyes of the Lebanese beauty queen establishment, as represented by Raymond Locre. Loire has been holding his beauty contests for 16 years and duly dipatching the winners to the Miss Universe and Miss World pageants. He claims he is the only one in Lebanon properly accredited for such activity.

But the civil war has spread fear and loathing even among the beauty queens.

Moreover, of all the girls in both contests, only one was a Moslem, which some people argue is less than representative of the whole country.

Im any case, the government was so aghast at the tawdry Raad-Daou fracas that it stepped in with a decree. From now on, nobody holds beauty contests anywhere in Lebanon without the sanction of the Ministry of Tourism.

York Regrets Confession

- LOS ANGELES (AP) - "People look at me with hate, says Ned York. "And it blows me away. Maybe if they catch the strangler, it will stop. There's one thing I really dread - what if they never catch the guy."

York, 33, says that since the February morning he was arrested for questioning in the Hillside Strangler murder case, he has been slugged by a friend, dropped by his agent, and forced to go on unemployment He says he has been followed, stared at, whispered about and approached by people on the street who say, "Aren't you the nut who ... "Being an actor I always wanted to be famous," York said recently in the first interview since his arrest and release. "I never wanted to be infamous. God knows it wasn't a publicity stunt. Who the hell would want that kind

Police still have not caught the strangler, although they are questioning a former convict, now being held in a federal prison in San Diego, in two of the killings.

Cheating Now Problem In

Kindergarten

AUSTIN (AP) - Some parents are encouraging their preschoolers to cheat on kindergarten screening tests, according to school officials and at least one mother. The reason? Children who flunk get all-day classes for free, but those who pass must pay $30 a month to go a full

All of Austin's 3,800 kindergarten pupils receive half-day classes for free. But to attend all day, tuition must be paid unless the child is economically deprived or educationally handicapped.

The screening tests determine the children's educational level

One mother was quoted by the Austin American-Statesman as saying two of her friends instructed their children to answer "I don't know" to questions on the short oral test.

"I feel if my two friends knew about it, then there must be more," said Linda West. Mrs. West quoted one of the wornen as telling her that if she "had any ense" she would have done the same with her children.

"She said that she knew that her child would not be deprived and she'd save $30," Mrs. West said.

Johnnie Boone, coordinator of primary grades for the Austin school district, says principals have been advised to look for zero scores on the tests. And she said cheating will be discussed at a workshop for school administrators in August.

M.G. Bowden, director of elementary education for the district, acknowledged that parents might be instructing their children to cheat on the tests but said, 'I don't believe there are many

About two-thirds of the kindergarten pupils in Austin attend all day, and about 42 percent of them pay tuition, school officials say.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

Matthew 27:47-66. The Living Bible

47 Some of the bystanders misunderstood and thought He was calling for Elijah.

48 One of them ran and filled a sponge with sour wine and put it on a stick and held it up to Him to

49 But the rest said, "Leave Him alone. Let's see whether Elijah will come and save Him." 50 Then Jesus shouted out again, dismissed His spirit, and died.

51 And look! The curtain secluding the Holiest Place in the Temple was split apart from top to bottom; and the earth shook, and rocks broke. 52 And tombs opened, and many godly men and women who had died came back to life again.

53 After Jesus' resurrection, they eft the cemetery and went into Jerusalem, and appeared to many people there.

54 The soldiers at the crucifixion and their sergeant were terribly frightened by the earthquake and all that happened. They exclaimed,

"Surely this was God's Son."

55 And many women who had come down from Galilee with Jesus to care for Him were watching from

57 When evening came, a rich man from Arimathea named Joseph, one of Jesus' followers. 58 Went to Pilate and asked for Jesus' body. And Pilate issued an order to release it to him. 59 Joseph took the body and wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60 And placed it in his own new rock-hewn tomb, and rolled a great stone across the entrance as he left. 61 Both Mary Magdalene and the other Mary were sitting nearby watching.

62 The next day-at the close of the first day of the Passover ceremonies -the chief priests and

Pharisees went to Pilate, 63 And told him, "Sir, that liar once said, 'After three days I will come back to life again."

64 So we request an order from you scaling the tomb until the third day, to prevent his disciples from coming and stealing his body and then telling everyone he came back to life! If that happens we'll be worse off than we were at first." 65 "Use your own Temple

Furr's Opens New Supermart At Loop 289, Quaker Avenue Avalanche-Journal Staff ing chemicals and print paper, will be

Furr's Inc. opened its new supermarket at Loop 289 and Quaker Avenue, Tuesday, with a wide range of departments designed to provide one-stop shopping for purchasers of groceries and household goods.

In celebration of the grand opening which will continue through June 10th, Furr's will give away 200,000 Gold Bond Stamps, a year's supply of Maple River Hams, and two microwave ovens.

The new store, while slightly smaller than the firm's Family Center store at 4426 34th St., has all the variety of that facility with the exception of a jewelry department. Software items at the Loop 289 and Quaker Avenue store are not as extensive, but a selection of featured goods will be stocked.

This particular supermarket, expected by Furr's officials to set a pattern for the firm's future stores, contains 36,400 square feet of floor space.

It features a pharmacy, camera department, firearms section, bakery, coffee shop, family kitchen section for carry-out foods and a variety of grocery departments

While primarily a grocery store, Furr's also will market cooking ware, CB radios, television sets and sporting goods in the new supermarket.

Checkout service will be handled by 10 stations plus two express lanes. Each station is equipped with electronic registers. The family kitchen section prepares food for carry out, such as meat loaf and and special deserts. The in-store bakery produces an assortment of fresh breads, pies, cakes, cook-

fried chicken as well as hot vegetables

ies, sweet rolls and brownies The pharmacy is designed to provide service while the customer is shopping and will maintain records for tax purposavailable in the store's camera department. Enlarging equipment also will be marketed there.

In the grocery sector, a self-service meat counter is bolstered by a butcher behind the case for special orders.

In addition, the grocery facility will feature a fresh produce department, frozen foods and an elaborate cosmetic depart-

The new supermarket will form the nucleus of a future shopping center at South Quaker Avenue and Loop 289. An additional 150,000 square feet of retail space is scheduled to be added adjacent to the building with construction expected to be underway in 60 days on that portion of the development.

The new Furr's store will employ approximately 125 persons in full and parttime positions. Joe Thompson is store manager, and Randy Green is assistant manager. Other personnel include: Irwin

HEARTLINE: I am a veteran of World War II. My wife has already passed away, so I live alone. My children live in a town approximately 100 miles away, so I see them, but not real frequently.

My concern now is, if something should happen to me, I want my children to have an easy time. I have heard that the VA will pay a burial expense. Can you tell me about this? — K.N.

VA provides up to $250 toward the burial expenses of eligible veterans and an additional $150 is available as a plot or interment allowance if burial is not in a national cemetery or other government

These VA payments will be reduced or eliminated in cases where the veteran's employer or a state agency has made such payments.

In cases where a veteran's death is service-connected, VA will pay an amount not to exceed $800 in lieu of the usual burial allowances.

HEARTLINE: I will be 65 years old in January and I hope to continue to work until the end of 1979. My company has a health insurance plan that I am covered under. Do I still have to take out Medicare when I turn age 65? - C.F.

No, you do not have to take Medicare at 65. However, you should check very carefully with your company because many group policies will not cover employes over the age of 65.

You should sign up for the hospital portion of Medicare because this is free. The medical benefits are $7.70 per month and for each year after the age of 65 that you do not take the medical benefits the premiums will be increased by 10 per

Broadcast Group Eyes Junk Calls

WASHINGTON (AP) - Broadcasters are telling the government they don't want it classifying as "junk" calls their and radio listeners.

If the Federal Communications Commission is going to ban so-called junk calls, an issue of paramount importance s the formulation of a narrow definition of 'junk'," said the National Assoctation of Broadcasters, an industry

The FCC is considering whether to restrict or ban unsolicited telephone calls by advertisers and others - calls made to people either on a person-to-person basis or through the use of automated

The NAB, along with other interested parties, was invited to comment on the proposed restrictions

In a statement, the NAB said "there is a need for the commission to distinguish at the outset between 'junk' and unsolicited telephone calls.

"There are many types of unsolicited telephone calls which benefit both broadcasters and society at large, including public opinion palls, surveys of the general public to ascertain community needs and audience research surveys," the NAB said, adding:

"Unsolicited calls are absolutely necessary to achieve statistical reliability. Indeed, the FCC has recognized that the use of random telephone calls to survey members of the general public is an effective way for broadcasters to ascer-tain community seeds."

The NAB said it strongly opposes the adoption of any rules which would limit the ability of broadcasters to use the telephone in serving the public. "It is particularly important that the commission not prohibit the making of unsolicited calls to unlisted numbers," the NAB said.

Telephone strveys, when unlisted telephones are used, provide the best eco-nomically viable tool for sampling a broadcast cross-section of the entire population to be surveyed.

Such surveys often rely on selections of blocks of numbers, through which cit-izens can be surveyed randomly without

"Under the broadcast system in this country, audience research is vital to the ability of the broadcasters to serve the ability of the broadcasters to serve the public interest." the NAB added. "The adoption of any rule designed to limit the use of the telephone for such purposes would have a 'chilling' effect on freedoms guaranteed to broadcasters by the First Amendment."

nation's mailboxes are delayed because they're routed to the wrong post office, an internal Postal Service study says. Assistant Postmaster General Pete

Dorsey, relating the survey's findings to the service's governing board, said the routing errors arise form mechanical and human mistakes as well as improper ZIP

"Oh, yes," Dorsey replied when a board member asked if there were fewer routing errors before machines replaced human hands at the sorting table.

As an example, he said, "a letter from New York City to Washington might wind up in Cleveland to Washington. It will be at least one day late.

He said routing errors are a main factor in service's inability to live up to its delivery standards. 'Mail used to be sorted twice, and that gave you two chances to catch errors. Now, you only have one shot at it," he ex-

With machines, a device brings one letter to a postition in front of a postal worker. The worker has one second to punch the five digits of the ZIP code into a keyboard on the machine. The numbers punched tell the machine where in that city or to which other city the letter should go. The device then shoots the letter into the appropriate mailbag.

If the clerk punches a wrong number the letter ends up in the wrong location. Sometimes the machines will make a mistake by itself. However, the machines enabled the Postal Service to eliminate ATLANTA (AP) — The former FBI official named in reports that the FBI used a prominent black leader to try to oust Martin Luther King Jr. as head of the civil rights movement said Tuesday that he remembers talking with a black leader

"I have a vague recollection of some black leader coming to see me. I don't re-member who he was. I have no idea what we talked about," said Cartha DeLoach, former head of the FBI's crime records

The reports said a confidential memo in 1964 from former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to his assistant, William C. ullivan, alluded to a discussion between a black leader and DeLoach.

The memo, obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, indicated that the FBI worked during the mid-1960s with a black leader whose name was deleted from the memo to try to replace In a telephone interview with The Atlanta Journal from New York, where he is a Pepsico Inc. executive, DeLoach said the man he met "probably wanted to see Mr. Hoover and was referred to me. You're asking about something that was 14 years and thousands of memorandums

He said he could not remember whether the man was well-known at the time or came prominent later.

Oklahoma Prison Security Eyed

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Gov. David Boren has called a meeting of state corrections officials to discuss security procedures at state penal facilities.

Boren said he has asked Corrections Director Ned Benton to review security procedures at all state prisons in the wake of a recent series of escapes, most notably the escape of Michael Lancaster and Claude Eugene Dennis.

Three Oklahoma Highway Patrol troopers were killed and one was seriously wounded in two gunfights with Dennis and Lancaster last Friday near Caddo.

Lancaster and Dennis fled the Oklahoma State Penitentiary at McAlester on April 23 and went on a crime spree in several states.

Boren scheduled the meeting with corrections officials for Thursday.

In a related matter, a Corrections Department spokesman said that the number of escapes from state prisons had dropped sharply since record-keeping began after the McAlester prison riot in

Nancy Nunally, public information officer for the department, said that as of April 30 of this year, there have been 18 escapes from state penal facilities, including seven from McAlester and four from the Granite Reformatory, the state's two maximum security prisons. She said only two of the escapees remained at large. Last year there were 59 escapes, including 10 from McAlester and seven from

Granite. Seventeen of the escapes were from the Lexington Treatment Center. Mrs. Nunnally said the 59 escapes in 1977 figured out to a ratio of 1.5 percent of the state prison population. She said that compared to a ratio of 5.62 percent in 1975, when 164 convicts

Humphrey Memorial Law Inked By Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter has signed a law he says creates a living memorial to the late Hubert H. Humphrey "instead of erecting yet another granite or marble edifice.

The memorial is an annual fellowship in social and political thought. Recipients need not be Americans.

Congress authorized $1 million to establish a trust fund to finance the fellowship which will be associated with the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars here.

Scottish Lasses Take 'Lofty' Exams

LONDON (UPI) - The sky was the limit for three Scottish schoolgirls Tuesday when they took their final exams in food and nutrition 30,000 feet above the Atlantic Ocean.

The girls, Samantha Gregson, 17, Jill Honeyman, 16, and Caroline McDonald, 16, from Milnes High School in Murrayshire, Scotland, were afraid their "O-level" (ordinary) exams would interfere with a three-week exchange program in Boston to which they had been accepted.

But the Scottish Education Department permitted them to take the exams under the eye of their teacher on board the jet at the same time their classmates were taking it back at Milnes.

"Pan Am has promised to find somewhere quiet for the girls," teacher Michael Chalmers said as he left with the students from Heathrow Airport. "We will try to hold it under normal conditions and I hope there won't be too many distractions for them.'

Going back to 1961, there are 62 state escapees who have not been apprehended, she said.

Last week, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bob Funston proposed spending $13.7 million on new construction at the McAlester prison because he thinks it would curtail the number of escapees and save money in the long run.

Funston, a state senator from Broken

ble" that 108 convicts escaped last year from the state's prisons and other penal

Mrs. Nunnally said Funston's figures included 49 persons who were reported missing at times from community treatment centers, including several who were late returning from short furloughs.

Police Search For Six Escapees PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Flak-jacket-

ed police with dogs and horses searched woods and fields Tuesday for six prisoners who climbed over a 40-foot wall and escaped from Holmesburg Prison the night before.

Other officers in jeeps, cars and helicopters watched nearby roads.

Holiday Weekend Deaths Near 500

CHICAGO (AP) - Traffic accidents claimed the lives of nearly 500 holiday travelers as the long Memorial Day weekend drew to a close

At 3 a.m., EDT, traffic deaths had climbed to 483, reflecting the final homeward rush of travelers.

Last year, there were 432 deaths over the Memorial Day weekend.

Five of this year's deaths came in one accident Monday afternoon, when a tractor-trailer jackknifed on a rain-slick Alabama highway, two cars slammed into it and another went off the road to avoid it. An Oxford, Miss., couple and their 3year-old son and a Florence, Ala., couple

A witness said rescue workers had to cut the tops off the cars to get survivors

The National Safety Council had estimated that between 400 and 500 persons would be killed on the nation's roads between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Mon-

The highest toll for a three-day Memo-rial Day weekend was 597 in 1969, and the lowest recent toll was 389 in 1974. The highest Memorial Day total was

The breakout Monday night was the most spectacular in the fortress-like prison's 82-year history, and the biggest since 1947, when bank robber Willie Sutton fled with four others. Sutton wasn't caught until five years

This time, the seven prisoners used rope or braided sheets with metal hooks to get over the wall.

"They selected the best possible place to negotiate an escape," said prison su-perintendent Edmund Lyons. He said the escapees broke through a 12-foot skylight in their cell block, made their way to the roof, and leaped to the courtyard. From there they went over the wall at a spot 300 feet from the nearest guard tower.

The prison is used to house both convicts and defendants awaiting trial. The seven were awaiting either trial or sentencing on a variety of charges ranging from assault to robbery and rape.

Lyons called the six still at large Tues-

Inmate Denied Okay To Wed Jail Guard

NEW YORK (AP) - An inmate at the Bedford Hills prison for women in Westchester County has been denied permission to marry her boyfriend, a prison guard, because state law bars anyone from marrying while serving a life term.

Karen Muessman, in her mid-20, was sentenced to three years to life for possession of cocaine, under the stiff-penalty drug laws adopted during the administration of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. Her application to marry a prison guard she had known for three years was rejected. A hearing on the matter is set for day afternoon "dangerous, very danger-ous," even though they were not believed armed. "Whenever anyone escapes from custody they are dangerous," he said.

Store owner David Scott, who was robbed in an incident that tipped police to the breakout, described the robbers

"One guy was really verbal but they weren't physically abrasive. The dude who tied me up was a decent guy. The keys were in the truck which was in the garage and they jumped in and away they Police said the escapees might be carrying crowbars and hammers taken from Scott's tire store a block from the prison. The robbers took $650 and a 1965 Ford pickup that was later found abandoned on nearby Interstate 95, authori-

The six at large, all from Philadelphia, were identified as Charles Azim, 36, awaiting sentencing on convictions of assault, conspiracy and robbery; Johnnie Boone, 27, awaiting trial on a rape charge, and awaiting sentencing after nviction of another sex offense; Jerry

White had been awaiting sentencing after conviction of robbery, assault and

The charges were listed in Common Pleas Court records.

Like Neighbor Iran May Fall To Moslem Coup

By TAMIM ANSARY
(c) Pacific News Service

Until the moment of its collapse a month ago, the Afghan dynasty led by "President" Sardar Mohammed Daoud appeared impregnable. Secured by a stern military, a ubiquitous police force and a controlled press, Daoud had created the very model of serene stability, closely resembling the regime of his nextdoor neighbor, the Shah of Iran.

As one city after another in Iran has been shaken in recent weeks by violent disturbances, careful observers of the Middle East are concerned that the similarities between the two nations may not have ended with the leftist Moslem coup that toppled Daoud.

Not only did the political structure of Afghanistan closely parallel the system still prevailing in Iran, where all state power is concentrated in the hands of a dynastic ruler and his blood relatives. But also the pressures surrounding the throne in Afghanistan were similar to those that confront the Shah of Iran, and the shah continues to respond much as Daoud did, with repressive measures.

One Arab-language publication has already broached the possibility that the shah might be on his way out. The question arises, therefore, whether the coup in Kabul could provide a scenario for events upcoming in Iran.

Like most countries in south and central Asia, Afghanistan contains many disparate ethnic and tribal groups - almost separate tribal nations - within its borders. Here too the central government had long been struggling to overcome the traditional power structure that holds sway in the countryside — the tribal chieftains, the big landowners or sardars and the religious establishment comprising the Islamic mullahs. In the process it developed a class of technocrats identified with, but not identical to, the ruling class of Afghanistan, consisting of foreign-trained technicians and military officers, bureaucrats and intellectuals. They are the ones who overthrew the 50-yearold Mohammedzai clan to which Daoud

The Mohammedzais recognized in the technocracy a potential challenge to their dominance as much as 20 years ago, but they seemed trapped by the age-old di-lemma of monarchs: the lack of any mechanisms for sharing power despite the need for ever larger corps of military, technological and administrative personnel to control and administer the nation. Commoners eventually had to be drawn into these ranks because, as an Iranian put it when commenting on a parallel phenomenon in his country. "There weren't enough cousins to go around."

The state bureaucracies began to grow and to fill with commoners in the 1950s, the so-called "decade of development." Mohammedzais carried out the tasks essential to consolidating their control of the countryside; but the question arose as to how the regime could maintain its dominance over this burgeoning class of educated commoners. Ironically "development" as practiced by the Mohammedzais may not have been the best strategy for defusing domestic tensions. Technological improvements such as highways, airports, dams, power stations and telecommunication systems were necessary to forge a unified state. But these projects, financed almost wholly by foreign aid allowed no participating for the local tribal populations.

The result was a continuously widening gulf between the regime in Kabul and the socially conservative rural populations.

Although the government could easily control the highly centralized bureaucracy running the newly imported industrial plants, such economic enterprises were wholly divorced from the traditional economy. It was that economy for which economy. It was that economy for which the rural leaders were rooted and from which they derived their power. Thus, apart from government programs, most of the people in Afghanistan continue to live exactly as they have always done, as nomadic herders or sedentary farmers, a situation almost mirrored in Iran today despite the billions of dollars in oil revenue that flow into that country each year.

As these tensions deepened between the countryside and the regime in Kabul, the apparatus of control grew correspondingly larger. More military, more administration, was needed. And, as the class of educated commoners grew in numbers and power, Daoud began to rely under surveillance.

The fact the coup of April 26 caught most observers by surprise reflects how effectively Daoud's regime controlled information and suppressed every expression of political dissatisfaction. Yet the suppression of the dissent only served to disguise the pressures that were building, not to eradicate them.

In Iran, the shah's noterious surveillance.

In Iran, the shah's notorious surveillance network, SAVAK, serves roughly

Space Helmet Lets Boy, Five, Play Outdoors Despite Allergy

CARMICHAEL, Calif. (AP) - A 5-year-old boy with a rare disease can play outdoors again, thanks to a one-of-a-kind space helmet and the persistence of his parents, who refused to believe it when doctors told them their son was mentally

Young Jared Reisman has an allergy to airborne particles so strong that even a few minutes outdoors can turn him blue and leave him unconscious. Allergies have been pinpointed as the cause of the problem, but doctors have been unable to explain why Jared's reactions are so severe.

Dr. Charles D. May, a leading immunologist at the National Jewish Hospital in Denver, is scheduled to see Jared this

Meanwhile, Jared's father, chemical engineer Barry Reisman, and two engineers at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory have developed a helmet for Jared to wear to protect him from his allergies.

The helmet is attached by a corrugated tube to an air purifier he wears on his back.

"If he didn't have that helmet, he'd be sick within five minutes and stay sick for two to three weeks," Reisman

When Jared was 18 months old he came down with what appeared to be a case of the flu. But the congestion, fevers and headaches continued, and he became listless and stopped learning to talk.

Reisman and his wife, Marlene, took the boy to doctor after doctor - 28 of them in all - but none could determine what was wrong. Some insisted Jared suffered from teething problems or a common cold.

At a clinic in nearby Sacramento, doctors concluded Jared was retarded and suggested that he be institutionalized. They also suggested that the Reismans seek psychiatric help.

Out of desperation, Reisman installed two air filters in his home - disregarding the advice of most doctors, who said the $575 panels he used were a waste of money.

But the results were dramatic. Jared's ears began to clear of mucus, and he heard sounds for the first time in years. His mother got him to begin speaking again.

The space helmet his father designed allowed him to begin kindergarten last fall, but he had to drop out after two weeks when symptoms of his illness returned. His father now is negotiating with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for a light spacesuit that may let the boy attend school all day.

How long Jared will have to wear such protective devices is unknown. But Mrs. Reisman said her son doesn't seem to

"I caught him sitting on the sofa one day, his legs crossed, just laughing," she said. "I asked him what was so funny and he said, 'I just remembered. I used to be sick all the time.

Iwo Jima Flag Raiser Fired From Job On Memorial Day

who helped raise the American flag on Iwo Jima in what became a symbol of World War II was fired during the Memorial Day weekend as the night manager of a Manchester motel.

Rene Gagnon, 53, is one of two survivors - the only Marine survivor - of the flag raising captured in a Pulitzer Prizewinning photograph by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal. Three of the six men in the picture were killed during 35 days of savage fighting for the Gagnon said he was fired Monday by James Gleason, co-owner of the Queen City Motel. He said Gleason complained about an interview with Gagnon in Saturday's Concord Monitor

The newspaper said Gagnon closed the motel before it was full one night last week. The article also said Gagnon rented a room to a couple obviously having "I wasn't given a chance to point out that what I said and what he (the reporter) observed on his own were different things," Gagnon said. "All he (Gleason) said was, 'You're all through Gleason, who won three Distinguished

"I did everything I could for the guy," Gleason said. "But it's just come to an

He said Gagnon has had drinking problems, which Gagnon acknowledged.

The historic flag was raised four days after a bloody amphibious assault by the Marines on Feb. 19, 1945. The island was one of a dwindling number defended by the Japanese with suicidal determination to delay the American advance.

On Feb. 23, 12 days before his 20th birthday, Gagnon was among Marines and a Navy corpsman who climbed 554foot Mount Suribachi, Iwo's highest point, and raised the flag The scene is immortalized in a huge sculpture, the Iwo Jima memorial, near Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia. Gagnon said he was one of only 12 men of 250 in his company who walked off the island - the rest were among the more than 5,000 Americans killed and 15,000

He said he attached no significance to being fired on Memorial Day. "I suppose to them, it's just another day," he said. "It wouldn't make much difference if it was tomorrow, would it?" Gleason - who attended a Memorial Day Mass at a Manchester cemetery Tuesday - said the firing was linked to

Carter Defense Cuts Assailed By Tower

HENDERSON (AP) - The administration's cutbacks in the Army's ammunition budget threatens the United States' military preparedness, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said Tuesday.

"In my view, the Carter administration is not following up on its stated policy to increase the readiness of our NA-TO forces when reductions of this magnitude are forced upon the United States Army in so critical an area as our vital ammunition stocks," said Tower.

The administration slashed the Department of Defense's request for $1.6 billion in ammunition hardware to $1.1 billion, the senator said.

"The Lonestar Army Ammunition Plant in Texarkana, the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant in Marshall and the Red River Army Depot in Texarkana are all actively involved in the mission of supporting the Army's requirements for munitions," Tower said.

"I firmly believe that the potential for expanded operations at each of these activities should be put to greater use in filling critical requirements in each of the services for ammunition supplies,'

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. We hold some convertible preferred shares in a corporation which has advised us that it would be to our advantage to convert to the common. I doubt the company really cares about us. What do you think of the offer?

A. I can't comment og the offer because you did not send me a copy of it. But even having read it, I doubt that the company would make an out-and-out recommendation. The practice in these matters is for the company to point out, for example, that your imcome (from common dividends) would be higher than what you now receive from the preferred (or a convertible debenture, in some cas-

In the letters on this subject which have been brought to my attention I have always found that the corporation leans over backward to be objective. After all. if management were to urge you to make what proves to be an unsatisfactory switch to the common, it is giving you a far better platform form which to express your dissatisfaction than if you had remained a preferred shareholder. Many perferreds do not give their owners a vote (and debenture holders, of course, have no voice in management at all) whereas common holders can speak right out and vote at the annual meeting.

I've always found management letters on this subject to be eminently fair although legalese may make them hard to PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Former House Speaker Herbert Fineman, one of Pennsylvania's most powerful legislators before his conviction a year ago for obstructing justice in an investigation of a scheme to sell admissions to medical schools, has won a $25,000 city grant for a foundation he organized to help convicted white-collar criminals.

Q. We've invested in a growth fund for about a dozen years. We retired five years ago and would like more income. Should we redeem now or wait for a better price?

A. I don't know, and I don't know anyone who does know for certain. If you need income now, you must reinvest for income now. You can't get it from a mutual which generates dividends of under 3

Q. What are my rights as a shareholder in a small company whose president is planning to "go private"; that is, buy in the shares and own the firm himself?

A. You're going to need the help of a corporate lawyer who can analyze the charter and any contracts under which you acquired the stock.

Q. We are in our mid-50s, looking forward to retirement in 5 or 10 years. Meanwhile, since we are both employed (total income $25,000) and have few deductions, we pay a terrible income tax. We've been advised to sell our house for about $45,000 and buy another for around $100,000 so as to get the tax advantage of higher realty taxes and mortgage inter-

I grant you that a large portion of our working days is used to produce revenues for Uncle Sam. So be it. But until tax brackets get up to above the 100 percent bracket, I can't see assuming heavy financial burdens merely to avoid taxes. Anyway, I'd say that a house costing four times annual gross salary is on the high side. (I'm not talking of it as an investment but as a place to live.)

New Jersey Casino Spurs Excitement In Gambling Stocks

NEW YORK (AP) - Atlantic City, N.J., isn't the only place where excitement over casino gambling is running high these days.

Some 120 miles north, on Wall Street, stocks of several companies with gambling interests are riding a hot streak of Last week the list of New York Stock Exchange issues hitting new highs for the past 12 months was sprinkled with such names as Bally Manufacturing, a producer of slot machines; Caesars World and Harrah's, operators of hotel-casinos in Nevada, and Playboy Enterprises, which operates resort facilities as well as publishing magazines.

At the American Stock Exchange, meanwhile, heavy trading continued in both the class A and class B shares of Resorts International, the company which runs the casino that introduced legal gambling to Atlantic City late last week.

Both issues of Resorts International stock sold for less than $3 a share as recently as 1976. At the end of last week the class A stock was going for $36.62 and the class B stood at $54.25.

Caesars, Bally and Playboy all have announced plans to open their own casinos in Atlantic City. From mid-April through last Friday, Caesars stock climbed from $10.87 to $19.25; Playboy from $10 to $16; and Bally from $23.75 to $35.

Resorts stock gained more ground Tuesday following word from the compa-

But Bally's shares took an abrupt downward turn, falling more than $3 on news that the Justice Department's antitrust division was investigating Bally's position in the slot-machine business.

Traditionally there have been few securities analysts who have followed the gambling companies. A number of their clients among investing institutions, such as some pension funds, universities, and religious organizations, avoid investing in the gambling business.

AT&T To Share System Grudgingly

AT&T said it was seeking the new rates under protest

James E. Olson, executive vice president of AT&T, said the company was doing so to comply with court orders.

But, Olson added, AT&T still believes the duplication of service will eventually lead to higher home telephone rates.

AT&T submitted its application for the new rates with the Federal Communications Commission. The filing provides for three steps aimed at making the rates conform to the 9.5 percent rate of return that AT&T is authorized to earn on its in-The rates are referred to by the govern-

MCI Communications says its service is substantially less expensive than AT&T's long distance service, but notes that it must rely on some equipment leased from AT&T. Execunet now serves 24 cities, and MCI has on file with the FCC applications to serve 10 more, which an MCI spokesman said "is about all we can handle

The Bullets erased a 15-point, thirdquarter deficit, tied the score midway through the fourth period, and led 106-104 after Bobby Dandridge hit a three-point play with 20 seconds to go.

But Seattle's Fred Brown sent the game into overtime by sinking a jump shot from the right corner with 14 seconds on the clock.

Then Johnson, who had just eight points in regulation time, took command. He scored the first basket of the overtime on a fast-break layup, then beat Seattle's defense downcourt for a short jump shot that made it 110-106 with 3:35 to go.

The Bullets led the rest of the way Henderson clinched the victory by sinking four free throws in the final 13 sec-

Racquets Announce Shakeups

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - The Phoenix Racquets, struggling to keep out of the western division cellar of World Team Tennis after last year's championship season, named a new coach and club president Tuesday.

In a surprising move, local pro and for-mer Racquet member Brian Cheney was named to replace Syd Ball as playercoach. Buell Wetmore replaces Jimmy Walker as president.

Ball will remain as the club's No. 2 men's player while Cheyney will replace Dean Martin Jr. as No. 3.

It was announced at an afternoon news conference that Martin has signed a oneyear contract and would leave the Racquets to film a movie about tennis. The film, called "Getting Off," will be produced by Robert Evans with Ali McGraw co-starring. Martin will be making his acting debut.

Walker had sold the franchise on May 11 to Simmons Professional Sports Franchises. He said he had discussion with the new owners last week and "decided that the job as president is a fulltime posi-

At the time he sold the club, Walker had said he wanted to devote more time to other business interests.

Wetmore has been general manager and vice president.

The Racquets were western div champions a year ago with Chris Evert, who left the club for the Los Angeles Strings this season.

Miss McGraw was present for the news conference, as was Pancho Gonzales and Evans. Gonzalez will serve as a cons ant for the movie and also have a role in the film, which is to be billed as "the first serious movie about tennis."

"I'm excited about starring with Martin," said Miss McGraw, adding that she thought he would have outstanding suc-

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Dryden's position as goalie for the Montreal Canadiens seemingly would entitle him to some inside information about the future however, that all further inquiries on the status of his coach be directed to the machine which gives answers so readily. plans of Coach Scotty Bowman.

But the veteran netminder insisted Tuesday that he has no better idea of what will happen than the people who claim Bowman, his Montreal contract elapsed, will join the New York Rangers.

"Like anybody else, I'm looking at the little factors or things that might indicate what he might do," said Dryden, in New York to accept an award as the National Hockey League's outstanding player this season. "But I don't have any feelings or sense of what is going to happen.

"I've been reading the stuff in the papers, same as everyone else, but until Jean-Guy Talbot is fired as coach of the Rangers, Jean-Guy Talbot is still the coach of the Rangers," he said. "We, on the team, have talked about it. 'What about Scotty? What's he going to do?' But we just play our own word games and leave it at that."

With the annual NHL meeting and draft of junior players just under two weeks away, the Rangers haven't announced what form their management will take next season. Neither have the

What Dryden also will be reading is that he was named by a computer as the

"Certainly, there are better players," said the goalie who helped the Canadiens This year, for the first time, all 33 Indy to their third consecutive Stanley Cup championship by winning 12 of 15 games in the recently concluded NHL playoffs. "Guy Lafleur (Montreal's right wing) and others are certainly better. But the computer, analyzing all statistical aspects of play and comparing it to a computer-researched standard of performance, gave the award - and the $10,000 check that goes with it - to the 29-year-old veteran of seven NHL seasons and five NHL titles. "I'm not a fan of statistics, myself," said Dryden. For those who are interested in numbers, the goalie compiled a 2.05 goals-against average and five shutouts in the regular season. The award raised his post-season earnings to a tidy $30,000. Each Montreal player earned $15,000 for helping win the Stanley Cup, $2,500 for winning the Prince of Wales Conference title, and $2,-500 more for winning the Norris Division

Stanley Cup Gets Unexpected Shower

MONTREAL (AP) - Right wing Guy Lafleur of the Montreal Canadiens already has won his share of honors from the National Hockey League this season and likely will win more when all the ballots are counted for other awards yet to be handed out.

But Lafleur got more than his share of the league's top prize — the Stanley Cup — last weekend, a trophy won by the Canadiens for the 21st time last week. He took it home to Thurso, Quebec.

"I did it to take back to show the people in Thurso," he admitted with a grin. "I had it all weekend.

Moses Leads Prefontaine Field

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) - "I'm definitely the best track and field athlete in the country, and outside of (Cuba's Alberto) Juantorena in the world," Edwin Moses said without a trace of cockiness.

Moses, the Olympic champion and world record holder in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, will put his marvelous talents on display tonight in the Prefontaine Classic, an invitational meet at the University of Oregon being held on the eve of the NCAA Championships

The tall, bespectacled, literate Moses, a recent graduate of little Morehouse College in Atlanta, who set the world mark of 47.45 seconds in last year's AAU Championships, will be using the Pre Classic as a tuneup for next week's national meet at Westwood. Calif.

Moses' opposition in the Pre meet is scheduled to include James King and Tom Andrews, two world-class athletes, but not in his stature.

Moses also has been running the open 400 in the past year and beating most of his opposition, but he doesn't feel ready to take on Juantorena, the Olympic champion and world record holder

"I have not run enough 400s yet," said Moses. "When I race him - if I do - I want to be prepared to win. I will not be running to finish second. And I do not want to run against him when only he is ready.

However, I don't think such a race will take place this year. I haven't been concentrating enough on the 400 to face a runner like Juantorena.

Interestingly, the open 400 today will feature three 1976 Olympians from the American team - 400 bronze medalist Herman Frazier, plus Maxie Parks and Benny Brown, who collaborated with Frazier and silver medalist Fred Newhouse in winning

Two other American gold medalists are lined up for the Pre meet - Mac Wilkens Olympic discus champion, competing in the discus and the shot put, and Steve Riddick, a member of the winning 400-meter relay team, in the 200.

Riddick will face Houston McTear, James Gilkes and Don Merrick. Other top athletes entered include: shot putter Al Feuerbach; high jumper Dwight Stones; pole vaulters Earl Bell, Dan Ripley, Larry Jessee and Jeff Taylor: 800-meter runners Mike Boit and Mark Enyeart: 1,500-meter runners Paul Cummings, Steve Foster and Phil Kane, and Marty Liquori, Craig Virgin and Jeff Wells in the 5,000.

Delph To Join AIA Cage Unit

Athletes in Action, the church-oriented group furthering amateur sports, announced Tuesday that four outstanding basketball players have joined its roster.

Coach Bill Oates, whose club compiled a 37-2 record last season, said that Marvin Delph of Arkansas, Dave Baxter of Michigan. Derrick Jackson of Georgetown and Eugene Parker of Purdue have agreed to join his club.

'I think the key is that each man is looking for his own positive experience and being part of an environment," said Oates, 38, who coached at Santa Ana College near here before joining AIA.

They are looking for a quality of life. not material things.

AIA also announced it is changing its headquarters from Tustin to nearby Fountain Valley where the Los Caballeros Sports Club is expanding its facilities for year-around training.

The basketball team has given AIA its greatest exposure and the 7-foot Ralph Drollinger has turned down big-money pro offers to stay with the organization. Returning with Drollinger for another AIA season are Brad Hoffman from North Carolina, Tim Hall from Colorado State, Irvin Kiffin from Oklahoma Baptist and Ernest Wansley from Virginia

Soccer Standout Hit With Foot Ailment

Team officials said Rivellino, a midfielder with a tremendous shot, has had a painful instep the last two days. He has avoided shooting with his left foot during

A Brazilian spokesman said the whole team hoped Rivellino would be in shape to play, but there was some doubt about his fitness.

If Revellino misses the game against Sweden it could make all the difference because the match is expected to be contested in midfield. Sweden plans to try to contain Brazil by going into the game with four midfielders - Steffan Tapper. Lennart Larsson, Anders Linderoth and Bo Larsson.

Georg "Aby" Ericson, the Swedish coach, said, "Against Brazil we need a good midfield, perhaps more than anything else. We need to take a point against the Brazilians. It would be a serious blow if we lost against Brazil and then had the pressure on us in the following matches against Austria and Spain."

Helmut Schoen, veteran coach of defending champion West Germany, caused a surpise by leaving Bernd Holzenbein off his team when the West Germans face Poland in the opening game of the tournament, scheduled for Thursday at Buenos Aires River Plate Stadium

Schoen will use Hans Mueller instead in a bid to build up midfield strength. Mueller has played in only two international games and observers thought he was too inexperienced to play in the opening match.

It was another sign that the teams will be cautious and defensive in their initial approach. The Poles, third in the 1974 World Cup in Germany, concentrated on physical fit-We are stronger than we were in 1974.

Spain, arrived in Argentina to a welcome by 2,500 Spaniards, most of them residents of Buenos Aires. Girls wore costumes from every region of Spain.

The greeting was typical of the scenes of the past week. The ethnic groups in Argentina ensure that almost every team has its local support.

Adults Find New Braces Appealing

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actress Muffi Durham's praise for her orthodondist sounds a bit like the television commercial roles she landed with the help of her newly straightened teeth.

'Two years ago, I was turned down for a soft drink commercial because I couldn't show my teeth when I smiled," says Miss Durham, 26, flashing a perfectly aligned streak of white. "Now," she says, "I've been getting a lot more parts. It really paid off."

Only a few of Dr. Craven Kurz' patients are aspiring actresses or models like Miss Durham - many are housewives, mailmen or secretaries. But all are adults, undergoing a treatment once thought to be reserved for children and Improved braces have replaced the "railroad track" look of metal bands with subtler, often tooth-colored, plastic brackets. And, say orthodontists, the public is increasingly more health conscious and less reluctant to be seen with braces. "There's been a tremendous increase in adult orthodontics in the last four or five years," says Dr. T. Michael Speidel, a Minneapolis orthodontist. In Atlanta, Dr. Marvin Goldstein says when he treated his first adult patient in the late 1940s, he scoured dental literature and found only one or two isolated cases of adults who had worn braces. "Dentists then were just sort of told that you couldn't treat adults because they were fully grown. I had to work hard to overcome those early taboos which had no basis in fact." Kurz is still unusual in the profession because he treats adults almost exclusively. But Goldstein says his practice now is about half adults. In the Minneapolis area, Speidel says the average orthodondist is treating from 10 percent to 30 percent adults, an increase over practically none 25 years ago and a substantial rise from even five or 10 years ago.

Dr. Deloit Wolfe, one of four orthodondists in the 60,000-population university and lumber town of Missoula, Mont., says his 20 percent adult patient load includes a few cocktail waitresses and secretaries who felt they needed straighter smiles to do well on the job.

But I've treated a grandmother in her 50s, roofers, ranchers and general laborers. About 90 percent of my adults are females, but the men are starting to come after their family dentists point out that straighter teeth can help relieve physical problems," such as gum disorders, difficulty in chewing or teeth which would ultimately have to be extracted.

"It's the initial trauma to their own ego," says Wolfe. "But the dental IQ of the American public is getting to the point where they really do appreciate anyone who takes a step at self-improvement. As I tell all my patients, if any of your peers give you a bad time, they are not worthy of having as friends, any-

Kurz says slightly more than half of his patients are women, who are often more open about admitting that aesthetics was more important than health considerations in bringing them to the orthodontist

Kurz, 35, who practices in the affluent Westwood section of West Los Angeles. says recently developed, less conspicuous braces have helped make orthodontic work more palatable for adults. Instead of wrapping metal bands around the teeth, plastic, tooth-colored brackets are glued onto the teeth and connected with ivory-colored wires.

Some dentists shy away from the brackets because of their tendency to break. says Wolfe, who uses them only if the patient insists. But Kurz says he has worked with the plastic brackets long enough "to solve most of the problems."

Sometimes, says Kurz, a patient who only needs minor straightening can get

Indians Of Bolivia Eye Voting Power, New Inca Empire

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Aymara and Quechua Indians, whose Inca empire once dominated a large part of the South American continent, suddenly have become a major political force in Bolivia, and their leaders talk of changes.

They speak of re-establishing the Inca empire and returning to a communal society "without exploiters or exploited."

They claim Spain and the United States should indemnify them for centuries of 'exploitation.

They make up 60 percent of Bolivia's population, which now numbers nearly five million, and their influence is expected to be felt in next month's national elections, after centuries in which Spaniards and people of mixed blood dominated Bolivia's national life.

We do not want to be foreigners in our own land any longer," said Jaime Apaza, a leader of the burgeoning Indian move-

When Christopher Columbus reached America in 1492, the Aymaras and Qquechuas extended through what is today Ecuador, Peru. Bolivia and parts of Argentina and Chile

"They are the largest moral force that Bolivia has," said the Rev. Julio Tumiri, a Roman Catholic priest who has worked many years in the Organization of Peasant Cooperatives. Most small farmers in Bolivia are from one of the Indian groups, so the words Indian and peasant are considered synonymous.

This previously silent majority, whose ancestors built the rock cities of Tiahuanacu in Bolivia and Machu Picchu in Peru is now the major force in five Bolivian political organizations.

In the last elections, 12 years ago, there was not a single political group dominated by Indians. But they may be the great surprise of the presidential and congressional elections scheduled for July 9.

Today's peasant political organizations are all based on the memory of Tupac Katari, who two centuries ago tried to reestablish the Inca empire. He rebelled against the Spanish and was encircling La Paz before he was defeated. Tupac Katari was condemned to die, pulled apart by four horses

The agrarian reform of 25 years ago, which made landowners of those who worked the land, and universal suffrage have put Bolivian Indians in a relatively better position than their counterparts in other South American countries with large Indian populations.

Traditionally, however, Bolivian peas-ants have voted in favor of whatever government was in power. That may be changing.

Now we will watch out for our own interests," said Constantino Lima, executive director of the Tupac Katari Indian Movement, one of the peasant groups. Lima said his group will offer a candidate in the July balloting.

The rising consciousness of the peasants is, in great measure, the result of modernization that has been reaching rural areas of Bolivia.

Almost half of Bolivia's some two million students are studying in rural areas. Almost all, however, are at elementary levels of schooling

The Catholic church has increased its efforts to help the peasant since the 1952 agrarian reform. Hundreds of pastoral agents work in peasant communities. They stress that the peasant is a human being "with dignity, with rights to participate in the decisions that concern the fatherland," one church worker said.

There are now a dozen radio stations broadcasting almost exclusively in the Quechua and Aymara languages and which have specialists in literacy and agriculture. It is calculated that one of every four radios sold in La Paz is purchased by a peasant. The opening of new roads also has facilitated communications between city and country.

"They are overcoming the feeling of gratitude for the concession of lands during the agrarian reform," said Tumiri.

Sudan already has reaped $100 as the top entry among 20 counties at the district level. It has advanced to the regional competition in which four small communities that have shown the most civic mprovement during the 12 months which ended March 31 will be selected.

But the real prize has been the resurgence of civic spirit throughout the town, Hoyt Robertson, chairman of the Sudan Civic Improvement Association, de-

"The real benefit ... has been getting all our people involved," Robertson said. Not only the young people have whole-heartedly backed the program, but the adults, too, he said.

"And this will continue long after the contest is over," Robertson added.

The city boasts a proud heritage from its beginning in 1917 as a railroad way station and farming community carved out of the old 77 Ranch.

In the 1940s it gained worldwide attention with its Fall Festival and United Nations pageant, the envy of even large cities. The 1950 census recorded 1,330 residents and the town grew to 1,700.

But like many small towns, Sudan went into a dormant stage during the 1950s and 1960s. Young families moved away. Business growth leveled off. Then as the 1970s began, the trend started to change

The nation's bicentennial and a newly organized Lions Club stimulated a reaitiated and Sudan qualified as a Bicentennial Community.

Last November, county extension agents John Farris and Mrs. Dorothy Powell explained the community improvement program to community lead- oldest in the county, is being restored as

ers. The Sudan Community Improve-ment Association was organized, officers were elected, and four committees were established. In addition to Robertson, officers are Cletis Holloman, vice chairman; Sara M. Woods, secretary-treasurer; and Billye Doty, reporter.

Every organization in Sudan, including the schools, all the churches and each civic, youth and ethnic group, has rallied behind the project.

All the groups are represented in the association, which has set up short and long range goals and has coordinated a side range of projects.

The community improvement program started more than 20 years ago, when the investor-owned utility companies of Texas and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service joined forces to stimulate community improvement through organizational efforts.

The contest is a measurement of accomplishment which communities of 1,-000 or less population make toward specific goals during the year, explained Mrs. Powell.

At the end of the year, a team of judges visits each community. The citizens are limited to two hours in which to explain and exhibit their achievements. In the district judging, Sudan edged out White-face in Cochran County and West Camp in Bailey County for a chance at becoming one of the four state champions.

Sudan is in competition with Imperial, Wildorado and Truscott for the regional

In addition to the $300 and designation as "State Winner, Region I," the regional champion will receive a letter of comwakening community pride. Under the mendation from Gov. PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

WASHINGTON HAS KNOCKED DOWN, at least for the present, regulations developed by the Texas Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee which were aimed at fair and sensible determination of producer eligibility for prevented-planting payments in 1978.

The Washington ASCS directive was received in the state office at Coll tion last week. County ASCS offices were notified of the directive Tuesday.

If the directive isn't rescinded and is a statistical of the directive Tuesday. If the directive isn't rescinded and is strictly enforced, says Donald Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., "it will be almost impossible for any producer to qualify for a prevented-planting payment this

The PCG is protesting the directive. Meantime, Johnson says, producers in dry areas would be wise to consider dry-planting cotton. If the cotton fails to come up or subsequently dies, he points out, application then can be made for a failed-acreage payment.

"OTHERWISE, PRODUCERS MAY BE DENIED the protection intended by Congress under the disaster provisions of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977." Johnson adds.

The law says producers are due prevented-planting payments when "because of drought, flood or other natural disaster or other condition beyond the control of producers" they are prevented from planting cotton "or other non-conserv-

The state ASCS office weeks ago advised county offices that Texas farmers unable to plant cotton before the required planting date of May 31 would not later be required to plant feed grains if they had applied a cotton herbicide to the land, and would not be required to plant other non-conserving crops if they had no history of planting those crops.

But USDA's lawyers in Washington now have said these instructions are "outside the language of the law." This would mean producers who received planting moisture after May 31 would have to plant some non-conserving crop — regardless of potential production or financial return — on cotton land, which in turn would make them ineligible for a prevented-planting payment.

IN A MAILGRAM TO USDA, with copies to congressmen and senators, the PCG has contended that the state office instructions were in accordance with the language of the law and has urged that they be allowed to stand as written.

The PCG message, in part, says: "Strict enforcement of your directive without giving county ASCS committees leeway to use good sense in its application would force farmers, already financially strapped and facing another disastrous year, to spend money useles putting seed in the ground with no hope of production or financial return. Producers would thus qualify for a failed-acreage payment instead of a preventedplanting payment

"Cost to the government would be the same; the producer's benefit would be diminished by the cost of his fruitless planting, and a portion of the nation's precious fuel supply would be wasted.

"This punitive interpretation of the law cannot but further erode producer confidence that this administration desires to maintain a viable agricultural conomy. It should be rescinded immediately.

A FAIRLY LARGE SECTION of the High Plains still has a planting moisture deficit, although good rains have fallen in portions of the dryland belt.

Official amounts from Thursday night through early Tuesday included:

December Leads Selloff In Live Cattle Futures

By Reuters CHICAGO — December led a selloff in live cattle futures on Monday on the Chi-

Futures ended 27 to 132 points lower on a turnover of 25,902 contracts. The market reacted after an early gain of 37 points when June failed to penetrate the all-time high after coming within one tick at $62.35 per hundredweight.

cago Mercantile Exchange.

Early support came on reduced cattle runs and continued record high beef and cash cattle prices. Weakness in the pork complex and fears of consumer resistance brought aggressive profit-taking and other selling in the late trade. Wholesale beef was unchanged to up 11/2 cents at 931/2 to 96 cents per pound, a record high. Cash cattle were up 40 cents to $3 with a new record high in Omaha at $63 per hundredweight. The six markets expect 19,600 head to arrive today. Monday's slaughter was estimated at 140,000 head. Feeder cattle futures tumbled 75 points to the daily limit of 150 in most contracts. The limit loss was the second in a row and came after October gained 77 points

Early buying lacked follow-through as other meat futures slumped. There also was a fear of consumer resistance. Initial buying was sparked by soaring beef and cattle prices.

Cash feeders were steady to $6 higher with the top at Fort Worth of $80.25 per hundredweight.

Live hog futures finished 45 to 140 points weaker. August led the d and was 145 points lower for a time. Volume was estimated at 7,631 trades.

The market skidded after an early gain of 40 points in April and fell to its lowest levels in almost three weeks.

Weakness in other meat futures, along with liquidation in the nearby as June 1 approaches, kept up pressure as did the premium of futures to cash. Scale-down buying stemmed from higher cash hams and early gains in cash hogs.

Wholesale hams were uncha 2 1/4 cents per pound at 78 to 80 cents, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were off 50 cents to $1.50 per hundredweight with the top at $52.50 in Peoria.

The principal myth, she said during an interview between shows at the Sahara-Tahoe, is that sex symbols are victimized, vulnerable and tragic figures who "have a corner on the misery market."

The image is "crazy" but nonetheless exists, fostered by the media and by a television industry that has not yet advanced beyond "cliches, labels and a sort of prototype person," she said.

It's true that the myth has become reality for some sex symbols. But Raquel said she has too much of a "survival" instinct to let herself get pigeon-holed in

Mist Welch has played all sorts of sexy roles the more than two dozen films she had done in the past 10 years or so. But she now working on a film she describers a look at the lives of a successful, independent career woman and her

She's collaborating on the movie project, and having a say in character development, plot and other aspects besides just acting. That goes for an upcoming television project, too.

It's all a far cry from her mid-1960s role in "One Million Years B.C.," in which Raquel said her only chore was to don a skimpy outfit and run from one rock to another, screaming mid-way.

Raquel isn't about to deny her figure played a big part in achieving superstar status. She just wants people to realize she's not like "a physical specimen without substance, a beautiful flower grown by artificial means without any smell to

She wants to perform in roles which she sees as 'closer to me." That means multi-faceted roles which reflect the changes people go through during their lives, she explained.

And that's where her "survival" instinct will pay off, the brown-haired beauty said, adding that she'll keep pushing for what she wants "with a lot of effort and sincerity and pride." The sex symbol stereotype which has helped her in one way can hurt in another, because "everyone wants sex symbols to be vulnerable. Everyone wants a great beauty to pay," she said. "They're not happy unless they can feel you're really toasting away somewhere
