

Korean Scandal Widens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New information obtained by House investigators indicates as many as 10 current congressmen received cash payments from former South Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo, it was learned.

"There is additional information indicating payments were made" by Kim to current congressmen, Capitol Hill sources close to the South Korean influence-buying investigation told UPI late Monday night.

The information was disclosed after House Ethics Committee special counsel Leon Jaworski renewed his call for congressional action in an effort to force South Korea to cooperate in his investigation.

"We don't know exactly how many people are involved in the House," the sources said. "It's conceivable as many as 10 sitting members could be involved."

They said "many different sources" provided the information, "in some cases very circumstantial, in other cases very direct." The sources declined to elaborate.

Jaworski wants the House to adopt a resolution threatening to cut almost $60 million in economic aid for Korea if Seoul's government continues to bar sworn testimony from Kim, but the administration and a key House committee chairman oppose his plan.

The first test was expected in the House International Relations Committee, perhaps today.

Chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., said Monday he would vote against the proposal and predicted a majority of his committee would also. In that event, he said, it will be sent to the House with a recommendation for rejection.

The House tumbled a similar move almost two weeks ago, in what was considered a rebuff to Jaworski. The new resolution was offered Thursday by Democratic and Republican leaders, with backing by the full ethics committee.

Zablocki revealed his position during a committee hearing before Jaworski made his case and after Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher spelled out the administration's objections to the resolution.

Kim, ambassador to Washington from 1967-73, is now one of President Park Chung Hee's top aides in Seoul, and Korea has refused to let him testify under oath on grounds it would violate his right to diplomatic immunity under the Vienna Convention.

Christopher supported Korea's claim, saying the Vienna treaty forbids one government to use "overt pressure and sanctions" to compel another to waive immunity and make one of its diplomats supply evidence in any legal proceeding.

Moreover, he said, such U.S. action to get Korean cooperation would lead other nations to try similar efforts to get testimony from American officials and also "could have an undesirable effect on important security interests in Korea and in northeast Asia as a whole" by suggesting dwindling U.S. support for Korea.

Jaworski said Kim's testimony "is no less important" than Tongson Park's and, if Kim is not questioned, the House probe will be incomplete and Americans will doubt the House did all it could to get the truth about any influence-buying.

Jaworski gained national fame as the special prosecutor in the Watergate case which forced President Nixon from office, but he has found the Korean scandal much tougher to crack. It took months of diplomatic maneuvering before Tongson Park was allowed to testify on the alleged payoffs, with a promise of immunity from U.S. prosecution.

Names Of Students Key To Busing Assignments

The Lubbock Independent School District today announced its procedures for determining how students in designated grades will be selected for assignment to "sister schools" under next year's court-ordered integration plan.

In letters being sent home with students, Superintendent Ed Irons said elementary children will be divided into two groups according to the alphabetical placement of their surnames, for integration assignment purposes.

"In majority (predominantly white) schools, a student whose last name begins with the letters A through L will be transported the first 4 1/2 months (the first semester) of the school year, Irons said.

"A student whose last name begins with M through Z will be transported the second 4 1/2 months" to his sister school, Irons said.

"In minority schools, a student whose last name begins with the letters A through L will be transported during the first, third and fifth grades. A student whose last name begins with M through Z will be transported during the second, fourth and sixth grades," the superintendent said.

French Press Hunt For Missing Whites

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Belgian forces pulled out of the battered copper-mining city of Kolwezi today and left 600 French paratroopers and 400 Zaire government soldiers to clean the streets of rotting corpses and search for white hostages held by retreating rebels.

The 1,750-man Belgian task force of paratroopers and support units flew to Kamina army base, about 120 miles north of Kolwezi in Zaire's southern province of Shaba.

One battalion of about 500 Belgian troops is to remain at Kamina to assure the safety of the few remaining whites in the embattled area, while the rest took off for Melsbroek military airport outside Brussels.

The French Foreign Legionnaires who dropped over Kolwezi last Friday, began setting up defenses around the city in case the rebels, estimated at between 1,000 and 4,000, should regroup and resume the attack.

They reported meeting isolated pockets of resistance in the rolling bushland around Kolwezi.

The French reported their losses as two killed and 14 wounded. Two seriously wounded legionnaires were evacuated to Kinshasa, the capital of the former Belgian Congo.

"The first part of my mission — to take control of Kolwezi and assure the security of whites — has been completed in the city," French commander Col. Philippe Erluin said.

The French said they engaged a group of rebels six miles west of Kolwezi Monday, killing several and recovering about 30 weapons, including two recoilless rifles, two mortars and four machine guns.

They also found about 20 French women and children, who fled to the bush when the marauding rebels massacred members of their families, French authorities said.

During their search in Kolwezi for bodies and whites still in hiding, the legionnaires reported finding documents in the John XXIII high school, which served as the rebels' headquarters, proving that the invasion from Angola via Zambia was lengthily planned in advance.

They said the unspecified documents showed that the rebels began their massacre of some 170 whites and dozens of blacks on the morning of May 14, five days before the French paratroops dropped over Kolwezi.

Foreign Legion officers said the Belgian plan of repatriating white refugees to Europe as soon as possible was a mistake because it made identification of the dead more difficult.

It would have been better, they said, to identify all the refugees before they left Kolwezi.

Identification of the dead is also being complicated because the corpses are in an advanced state of decomposition, they said.

Kinshasa was calm today, although there were frequent military patrols through the city.

As an indication he considered the situation under control in Shaba, Zairean President Mobutu Sese Seko flew to Paris to attend a gathering of African heads of state and thank France for its military help against the rebels.

He also was expected to ask French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to keep French troops in Zaire until the security of the mineral-rich Shaba province is assured.

Latest figures show 2,269 refugees have been evacuated from Kolwezi. More than 1,350 reached Brussels and Paris in the last two days.

Court Ruling Curbs OSHA Inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, voting 5-3, ruled today that the federal government may not make unannounced inspections of the nation's workplaces unless it first obtains a search warrant.

The court struck down as unconstitutional a portion of the Occupational Safety and Health Act that has allowed Labor Department inspectors to carry out some 400,000 spot checks of factories and other business places since 1971.

The Constitution's protection against unreasonable searches applies to commercial premises as well as homes, the court said in an opinion written by Justice Byron R. White.

Today's decision upheld a 1976 ruling by a three-judge federal court in Idaho that government inspectors must first prove to a judge or magistrate that they have "probable cause" to believe safety hazards exist at a certain workplace.

The court's ruling virtually guts the Labor Department's strategy of keeping private employers alert to safety needs by holding over them the possibility of a surprise visit by government inspectors.

Government lawyers had argued that "the effectiveness of the inspection system would be largely nullified if an employer could gain significant delay by refusing to permit an inspection without a warrant."

More than 6 million industry and business locations are subject to checks by the 1,300 field officers of the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

There was no immediate comment on the ruling from the department or OSHA. In other actions today, the Supreme Court:

— Threw out an obscenity conviction on grounds the trial judge erroneously instructed the jury to consider children a potential target of the obscene material, even though there was no evidence that they had received any.

— Ruled that states may charge much higher hunting license fees for out-of-state hunters. The justices, by a 5-3 margin, said the disparity in fees does not violate that portion of the Constitution ordering fair treatment by each state for residents of other states.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, in a statement by president Richard L. Ilesher, praised the high court's decision on OSHA inspections, saying: "The business community ... and the 75 million people earning paychecks in the private sector should be delighted with this blow for freedom."

"The authority to make warrantless searches devolves almost unbridled discretion upon executive and administrative officers, particularly those in the field, as to when to search and whom to search," White's opinion said.

"A warrant, by contrast, would provide assurances from a neutral officer (a judge or magistrate) that the inspection is reasonable under the Constitution, is authorized by statute and is pursuant to the administrative plan containing specific neutral criteria," he said.

The court's ruling said a warrant would not be needed only when a business owner agreed to submit to a spot check.

Otherwise, warrants are needed and business owners are to obtain prior notice of the requested search authority.

"We are unconvinced ... that requiring warrants to inspect will impose serious burdens on the inspection system or the courts, will prevent inspections necessary to enforce the statute or will make them less effective," the court said.

"In the first place, the great majority of businessmen can be expected in normal course to consent to inspection without warrant," the decision said.

Joining White's opinion were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter Stewart, Thurgood Marshall and Lewis F. Powell Jr.

Chance Of Rain Teases Plains

Into the valley of drought comes the 20 percent — rattling, rattling over the weather wire. It comes every morning, the weatherman's lament, not 40, not 50, but only 20 percent. Clouds to the north of him, clouds to the south of him, but all unfortunately miles away.

Rain is a dream half-remembered and distant, and only a weatherman dreams it today.

Rainclouds pour in Mexico, the Rocky Mountains fill with snow, but on the Plains, the forecast is sent, and the chance of a sprinkle is 20 percent.

Sunny skies today may cloud up and rain tonight in Lubbock.

There is only a 20 percent possibility, though, weathermen said this morning. Showers moved into Texas from Mexico early today and brought rain to the extreme southwest part of the state.

The storm clouds drifted over the border at El Paso like a late-returning reveler and rained some south of the border city.

It was clear to partly cloudy elsewhere over the state.

Temperatures will be in the low 90s today and Wednesday in Lubbock and in the upper 60s tonight, weathermen said. Southerly winds of 10 to 15 miles an hour today and five to 10 miles an hour tonight were predicted. Readings over the state will be mostly in the 80s and 90s except at Big Bend, where the temperature is expected to reach 102.

West Texas extended forecast calls for widely scattered afternoon and nighttime showers and thunderstorms Thursday and Friday.

Warm afternoons and mid nights are predicted for the region.

City Action On Water Proposed

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

While not faced with an immediate danger, Lubbock can and should purchase additional water rights to avert a future water crisis, according to Wayne Wyatt, manager of High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

"I believe that it would be possible for the City of Lubbock to purchase a 100-year water supply and to feel confident after the necessary studies were made that the city had this quantity of water available," Wyatt said.

The district manager spoke this morning to Lubbock Chamber of Commerce members about the city's water supply situation.

The purchase of additional water rights in the state's southern high plains would equal five to seven million acre-feet of water. "This amount of water, plus the allocation from Lake Meredith (Lubbock's major supplier of water), would satisfy the needs for the City of Lubbock for at least a 100-year period," Wyatt said.

One advantage cited by Wyatt for large groundwater reserves is that the water could be utilized when needed, no evaporation occurs and water quality remains relatively constant.

Wyatt said the city presently is getting its water from two major sources — Lake Meredith located on the Canadian border in the northern part of the Panhandle, and city water rights to the Palo Verde

Elderly Warned On Insurance

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Older Texans often have been the victims of ignorance when buying insurance and many may well have been deceived by over-zealous agents, the State Board of Insurance says.

Without always realizing what they are agreeing to pay for, many senior citizens are investing in supplementary insurance which supposedly picks up where Medicare and similar programs leave off.

A memo issued by the board warned insurance firms against participating in unethical activity in selling insurance to the elderly.

The memo stated the board has received several inquiries relating to "agents who are apparently using sharp, overly aggressive and possibly fraudulent sales techniques" in selling insurance to senior citizens.

Agencies were warned in the memo that the insurer, as well as the agent responsible for the sale, will be held responsible for any sale in which elderly people have been taken advantage of.

"The board also urges insurers and agent to exercise great caution in the sale and servicing of the types of insurance covering elderly persons who may be particularly vulnerable in the insurance market," the memo reads.

"Being as they are, so alone and afraid, they buy everything," Director Ray Pectol of the Lubbock Senior Citizens Center said of older people. "Consequently they can't pay for it and lose all coverage."

Though the board reports some instances of forged signatures on insurance policies for older people, the major problem appears to be ignorance on the part of both the agent and the senior citizen making the purchase.

"I'm sure there are some rascals here," said Mal Cleland, president of Lubbock's Better Business Bureau. But the biggest problem occurs when agents sell insurance they are not familiar with, he said.

When mass-produced supplementary policies are made available, insurance agents are often put through a crash course to familiarize them with the programs, Cleland said. He called the crash-course agents "peddlers" who are only knowledgeable about the canned presentation they have been given.

"Each person is different," Cleland said. "The

Burt Reynolds Tells Of Change

NEW YORK (AP) — Burt Reynolds says his transition from shy teen-ager to "good ole boy" was calculated.

"The thought of actually holding a girl in public was excruciatingly painful for me, because, believe or not, I was so shy," the actor said in an interview.

As his acting career emerged, Reynolds says, he calculatingly developed the "good ole boy" image to "get the clout, to do what I wanted to do ... these good ol' boy roles and the talk shows have made me into a very well-paid personality."

But Reynolds says he was never completely at ease with companions of friend and talk show hostess Dinah Shore. "... as clever and cute as I thought I was, I wasn't sure I could be interesting through a whole dinner party," he said in the interview, published in the current issue of McCall's magazine.

Jackie's Snub Angered Quinn

NEW YORK (AP) — Had Jacqueline Onassis not snubbed him in a restaurant in Cannes, writes actor Anthony Quinn, he may not have starred in the just-released film "The Greek Tycoon."

The film is about a Greek shipping magnate who marries the widow of an assassinated president.

Quinn, in a bylined story written for Ladies Home Journal, says that in 1975, when it was announced he would play Onassis in a film called "The Onassis Story," representatives of Mrs. Onassis asked him not to do the picture. He had decided that he could not, he said, because he did not want to hurt the woman he had come to know jogging in Central Park.

Quinn then recalled a night when Mrs. Onassis entered a restaurant in Cannes and refused to acknowledge his waves. A short time after the snub, he signed for "The Greek Tycoon."

Breeze Helped, Governor Claims

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — In a little gubernatorial elbowing, Gov. Ella Grasso has chided Oregon Gov. Bob Straub about his winning entry in California's jumping frog contest.

Lil Nutmeg, a springy contestant representing Connecticut, the Nutmeg State, jumped 16 feet, 5 inches in the weekend contest, to finish second Sunday behind the entry of Straub's frog, Swamp. The winner outleaped Lil Nutmeg by 3½ inches.

Mrs. Grasso said the winner from Oregon "obviously was more attuned to the Pacific breezes of the West Coast than was our humble entry from Connecticut."

"If the competition had been held on the sunlit shores of the Connecticut River, the home field advantage no doubt would have swung to Lil Nutmeg."

Energy Link Eyed By City Staff

Impressed by power cost savings at the Memorial Civic Center, the city staff may recommend that the municipal building and airport be linked to the center's energy management system.

Assistant City Manager Jim Blagg said funds for the system link-up may be included in the budget for fiscal year 1978-79. If they are, the addition will be considered by the council during budget review sessions next month.

The center's Honeywell management system, which cost $22,500, paid for itself within about four months by saving the city $8,755 monthly in electrical bills, according to city estimates.

And if City Hall and the airport are connected to the system, Honeywell estimates, annual savings at the facilities will total $7,000 and $42,000, respectively.

The computer system at the civic center automatically monitors the temperatures at the facility, adjusting them when necessary and shutting off air conditioning and heating in certain areas when they are not in use, Blagg said.

By connecting the airport and City Hall to the computer via leased telephone lines, the single system at the center can monitor temperatures and conditions at all three facilities simultaneously.

Link-up expenses that would have been about $47,000 last year will tally almost 20 percent more by October, which is the earliest the connections could be made, Blagg said.

In the meantime, energy bills at the airport and City Hall continue to spiral. Blagg said the average monthly bill for the airport is $18,000, although it has run as low as $12,000 and as high as $20,000 plus.

The cost of heating and cooling City Hall and the adjoining police station averages about $8,500 a month, he said.

At the civic center, electrical costs have been held to about $9,000 a month.

Honeywell officials estimate cost savings on a complicated formula involving degree days and rising utility rates, and Blagg said they estimate "a considerable amount of savings" for the airport and City Hall if they are connected to the center system.

Whale Injures Park Trainer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A lucky animal trainer walked away with minor wounds after a 7,500-pound killer whale chomped down on his legs at Sea World Marine Park.

Winston the whale was only acting "playfully" when he nipped trainer Greg Williams on Monday, park spokesman Bill Seaton said.

The 20-foot whale, which has been at the park since October 1976, took the trainer's legs in its mouth during a training session, Seaton said.

The whale released Greg Williams almost immediately and nudged him over to the stage as is routine during the act," he said. "Williams walked off the stage unassisted."

Williams, 29, was treated at Mission Bay Hospital for several small puncture wounds. Park officials described it as a minor incident, the first of its kind in several years.

The incident could have been worse. Killer whales have no known enemies in the sea and can kill the largest creature on earth, the blue whale which grows to 50 feet in length.

Weapons Found At Klan Rally

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Armed guards and a cache of weapons — including a flamethrower, machine gun and hand grenades — were present during a Ku Klux Klan rally in Tupelo last month, a federal court was told.

The testimony came in a hearing Monday during which another witness, Tupelo Mayor Clyde Whitaker, testified that Gov. Cliff Finch put Highway Patrol and National Guard units on alert May 6 because city officials feared violence would erupt between black protesters and klansmen.

U.S. District Judge Orma Smith is attempting to determine whether a new Tupelo city ordinance banning public assemblies for 90 days should be struck down.

In taking the city ordinance to federal court, the Mississippi United League contends the city's attempt to impose a "90-day cooling off" period was an unconstitutional infringement on First Amendment rights of public assembly.

City officials have said they feared that racial tensions brought on by weeks of league protests would flare into violence with the addition of counter demonstrations by the Klan.

The league has held protest marches and rallies since February to press demands for an end to alleged police brutality and for more minority hiring. An economic boycott of white-owned businesses was begun on Good Friday.

In his testimony about the Klan rally and cross burning April 8, newspaper publisher Nathan Duncan said he saw sentinels armed with rifles on the roof of the Tupelo Ramada Inn, the site of the rally.

Duncan, publisher of the Lee County News, indicated he was under the impression they were members of the Klan.

Duncan told the court that during the Klan rally, he was taken to an automobile by a Klan member. When the vehicle's trunk was opened, Duncan said he saw a flamethrower, a machine gun and some hand grenades in a box along with two kinds of rifles or shotguns.

In testifying as an adverse witness called by the league, the mayor conceded that league marches had been peaceful in the past and he had no reason to believe that future rallies would lead to violence inspired by the league.

But Whitaker said city officials were concerned that violence would occur when the league and Klan held rallies the same day.

Last month, Klansmen said they would begin counter-demonstrations to show sympathy for white citizens and white-owned businesses.

Ambulance Worker Nabbed In Robbery

NEW YORK (AP) — An undercover agent faked semiconsciousness and arrested a city ambulance technician who allegedly robbed him en route to the hospital.

The technician, Rowland Howard, 28, was suspended and charged with grand larceny, official misconduct and possession of marijuana.

Investigation Commissioner Stanley Lupkin said that the agent pretended to be an out-of-town businessman taken ill at a midtown hotel.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) That extra cash you hoped to receive could turn out to be a deficit instead. Be wary of doing business with unfamiliar characters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) One with whom you're closely associated could appear self-centered and stingy. Back off from the affiliation if you see the storm signals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone could lay a sob story on you to get you to do his work. Be charitable, but make sure it's for the right people and the right reasons.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Watching your waistline? Guard against overindulgence. Remember: Obesity is the fine we pay for exceeding the feed limit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It may appear as if others are getting all the breaks denied you. Your lot in life is only what you make it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Braggarts are a type you find unattractive. Take care that you don't give friends reason to think you are one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Unless you really know what you're doing, be cautious managing things for others. You could bungles something big to put both of you in the red.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Giving and taking is a two-way street. Try to keep this in mind. Be as generous in return as people are with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Never do today what you can put off until tomorrow is a policy that will deprive you of success. Unfortunately, this may be how you play things tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) All the big things promised through one you deem to be an important social contact are best taken with a grain of salt. She's a better talker than deliverer.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be tempted to use an associate to satisfy ambition. If you could hear what others would say and think, you wouldn't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Ideas and concepts are easily blown out of proportion. Reassess everything when you're in a better frame of mind.

Doctors Able To Reverse Sterilization

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mrs. Emilio Torres, who was surgically sterilized eight years ago, likes to call her 9-month-old daughter a miracle baby.

"I knew right away when I was pregnant," Mrs. Torres said. "My husband didn't believe and neither did the doctor, but I knew. Now we plan to have one more, just as we had always hoped."

Mrs. Torres is one of a growing number of women who have successfully undergone a sterilization reversal. Although physicians still caution patients not to undergo sterilization unless they are certain they want it for life, success rates for reversal procedures now can run as high as 75 percent.

Mrs. Torres, who was 23 at the time of her sterilization, said the operation wasn't really her idea.

"I had been ill from blood clots in my legs and lungs caused by taking birth control pills," she said. "After my second child was born, the doctor said that future pregnancies could be fatal. He suggested that I have my tubes tied."

Mrs. Torres said several years after her sterilization she felt the danger of blood clotting had become minimal and that the operation had been a mistake.

"Everyone I knew was having children and everytime I'd hold someone's baby, I'd feel an emptiness, wishing the child was mine," she said.

Sterilization techniques for women involve clamping, cauterizing or partially removing the fallopian tubes to prevent eggs from traveling to the uterus.

Reversing sterilization requires rejoining the severed fallopian tubes. It is estimated about 600,000 American women undergo voluntary sterilization each year.

DR. LAMB

Causes Of Cirrhosis

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — My sister was in the hospital. She started to swell up in her stomach and all over her body.

The doctor said it was cirrhosis of the liver. He must be crazy. My sister never did approve of drinking. She never drank, maybe she would have a drink on Christmas Eve or a drink when her daughter got married. So it couldn't be from drinking. One doctor told her it was a poisoned liver. Please let me know what it is.

DEAR READER — Your letter is a perfect example of the point that "ignorance is not bliss." You are wrong in thinking that cirrhosis of the liver means you have been drinking too much alcohol. There are many causes for cirrhosis of the liver and only about 60 percent of the cases are associated with excess alcohol consumption. That's bad enough but it isn't 100 percent.

A liver can be damaged with a variety of chemicals, or from gallstones or various infections, including viral hepatitis. To help clarify this for you I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-8, Living With Your Liver. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Liver failure as occurs with cirrhosis of the liver can and does cause an accumulation of a lot of fluid in the abdomen particularly, and eventually generalized fluid retention.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband and I are both in our mid-20s, eat fairly well-balanced meals, but really don't exercise.

I have a desk job, he is an electrician and a little more active. Could you recommend some type of exercise program to help us? I'm about five to 10 pounds overweight and don't sit much. I'd like to lose a little but not a lot.

DEAR READER — You have asked an intelligent question — how to exercise to control overweight as opposed to what special diet you could go on.

It is the decrease in physical activity that often sets the stage for obesity.

An average adult will use about 50 calories more when walking a mile, no matter how fast or slow, as he would sitting during that time. There is some variation depending on your body weight. So if you and your husband took a mile and a half walk every day you would use about 75 calories more a day than you do now. In a year's time that is equivalent to about eight pounds of body fat.

If you are just interested in controlling obesity that is a sane and sensible program that almost anyone can follow.

False Teeth On Decline

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Advances in preventative dental care and the coming of age of a "flouride generation" has caused a dramatic drop in the number of denture wearers, according to a national dental leader.

The percentage of the 30-and-older segment of the population wearing one or two complete dentures dropped from 35.2 to 24.7 from 1960 to 1975, said Dr. C. Gordon Watson, chief executive of the American Dental Association.

"The percentage decline in denture wearers will no doubt continue, perhaps even more rapidly, in the years immediately ahead," Watson said.

Emphasis on preventative procedures in the dental office and self care at home have led to the drop, he said.

Watson, who canceled a talk on the subject to the South Dakota Dental Association because of illness, also attributes the health of potential denture wearers to community water fluoridation.

"The very first youngsters to have benefited from water fluoridation from birth are now beginning to enter that 30-and-older group," Watson said.

After rails arrive at a suitable habitat, they often lose their power of sustained flight. When the birds settle, they colonize and gradually give up their migratory patterns, says the American Museum of Natural History.

Goring, Goring, Gone

FORGET ABOUT the furor over the three-martini lunch. That may look like a minor skirmish compared to the battle coming up when the working public finds out what it may be paying additional taxes on henceforth.

to be regarded more as conditions of employment—the sometimes not-so-little extras which help to ease the pain caused by the already large bite taxes take directly out of paychecks.

AT STAKE in this case are not merely perquisites of the executive suite but numerous conveniences which millions of middle-income taxpayers take for granted.

And that, barring congressional counteraction, is not an unlikely possibility in an election year.

In the IRS view, these are services in lieu of cash payments to employed individuals and, as such, should be considered as part of income and therefore taxable.

Death and taxes may be certainties. But so is the outrage of a taxpayer suddenly attacked on a new front, er, flank.

Among The Folks Back Home

John D. Lofton:

WASHINGTON—Throughout history, since at least as far back as Plato, man has been offered numerous panaceas and nostrums, such as phrenology, mesmerism and spiritualism. And, of course, there is also wage and price controls.

price and wage adjustments needed to allocate resources, and they disrupted competitive relations, diverted capital investment, created shortages, and generated artificial motives for exports.

IN 300 A.D. THE Roman Emperor Diocletian fixed maximum prices on grain, eggs, beef and clothing. He also set wage ceilings for teachers, lawyers, physicians, tailors, and bricklayers.

price and wage adjustments needed to allocate resources, and they disrupted competitive relations, diverted capital investment, created shortages, and generated artificial motives for exports.

THE HISTORY of government limitation of price seems to teach one clear lesson: that in attempting to ease the burdens of people in a time drastic change of scenery from the flat, treeless plains. the wheat from the chaff about some of the false issues and outright lies that have been perpetrated...

Obviously, the best con artists are pros. From the Quote Wrack: "Humanity's greatest problem has never been the absence of solutions to complex situations. Its greatest problem has been the absence of belief in answers."

POSTAL SERVICE spokesman Don Bloyd says there's no basis in fact to rumors that window service is to be discontinued at the Murrehill station.

WHAT BAYH SUGGESTS is not seven more years for calm and rational debate—the first seven years is plenty long for that—but more time in which to bring anti-ERA legislators to their knees through intimidation, economic boycotts and threats of reprisal on a one-issue basis at the polling place.

Headline: "Light Seen At End Of Energy Tunnel." Turn it off, man, and quit wasting energy!

At Murrehill, as at the main Post Office downtown, customers have to wait in long lines at the service windows but, at least, says Bloyd, the windows won't be closed.

If the ERA guarantees nothing more than its proponents publicly say it guarantees—i.e., equal rights—then it is superfluous. The courts and existing laws protect women from discrimination in jobs, pay, etc., as it is.

WE TOOK A family drive through Lake Ransom Canyon village the other day and were amazed by the growth that has taken place in the last three or four years.

There are 18 women in the U.S. House of Representatives. The National Women's Political Caucus has proudly announced that 10 members of the House racked up perfect voting records on 16 issues the group designated as "important to women."

If, on the other hand, the zealot proponents of the ERA want favored treatment, not equality, then their histrionics begin to make sense.

I didn't count the number of new homes currently under construction, but Harold Chapman later told me it's 46. That will bring to about 230 families the number living in Ransom Canyon.

No woman's name is on the list. All 10 House members with perfect scores on issues "important to women" are men.

That's "favored treatment" as in wanting seven more years for a state legislature to vote again, again and again until it ratifies the ERA but never, never, never being allowed to vote to rescind its ratification once the ERA has been rammed through.

Now incorporated, Ransom Canyon provides a

Oval Office Ball In Jay's Court

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.—"With the rich and powerful, always a little patience," was a proverb once made popular in "Philadelphia Story," the play and film, and a sojourn into this state indicates that's how the mountaineers feel about their lanky, young Gov. Jay Rockefeller.

Sylvia Porter: Why You Can't Lose On Taxes Next Year

THE WHITE HOUSE'S tax package would knock out the medical expense deduction for home improvements, starting in 1979—eliminating countless tens of thousands of dollars in deductions for ill or disabled U.S. taxpayers, their spouses, children or parents.

* Non-prescription drugs, a deduction so frequently overlooked. Aspirin, decongestants, antihistamines, cough syrup, antacids, many other medicines you buy without a prescription, qualify as deductible medicines.

AS AN ILLUSTRATION, a woman needed to swim daily to prevent paralysis of the spine. On her physician's recommendation, her husband and she added an indoor swimming pool to their home at a cost of $172,000.

* NURSING CARE, and it's not necessary to hire a registered or licensed practical nurse. A medical deduction doesn't hinge on who provides the care: it rests on the care itself.

IF YOU ARE planning installing a medically related home improvement soon: (1) Get a written recommendation for the improvement from your physician. This is critical.

Officials Hope Promotion Will Help New York

By JOHN F. SIMS
NEW YORK (UPI) — At the depth of New York's fiscal crisis, cynical wags were heard to suggest the best solution might be to just sell the city.

So that's what they're doing. The city and state are both being "sold" in an advertising and promotion campaign backed by an unprecedented $12 million budget.

And the only really surprising thing about the wildly successful campaign is that it wasn't done sooner.

The promotion, going to the midwest and south after several months concentrated only in the Northeast corridor, is based around a simple phrase — "I love New York."

So far it has been two-pronged. One commercial campaign that began last summer emphasizes the attractions of New York State; the second employs the talents of Broadway stars to advertise New York City's biggest draw — the Great White Way itself.

In collaboration with airlines that service New York, the state's Commerce Department will offer packages that include airfares, hotel rooms and guaranteed seats at hit Broadway shows.

The next move will be to Europe, starting with package tours from Britain and later from France and West Germany.

The campaign is the brainchild of deputy commissioner William S. Doyle, a marketing whiz who previously worked for Wolverine and Chase Manhattan.

"Two years ago New York's tourism promotion budget was $200,000," Doyle said in an interview. "Most of that money went in producing one ugly tour guide and a very cluttered poster."

"The first thing we did was scrap all that and hold off on promotion for a few months while we conducted a very detailed study of New York State's image and its attractions. We found some interesting things."

"We asked people where they thought of going when they thought of a vacation. Forty-one percent mentioned Florida, but in fact only 21 percent had visited Florida in the previous 12 months. Eight percent mentioned New York State but it turned out that 13 percent had visited somewhere in New York State in the preceding year."

In marketing jargon that gave New York State a negative "top-of-the-mind awareness" that "apparently reflects the lack of past promotional efforts," according to the study.

So the New York Commerce Department asked for, and received, $4.5 million for tourism promotion, plus another $1 million to be used to attract business to the state. This year the budgets were upped to $10.3 million and $2 million, respectively.

Charles Moss of the advertising agency Wells, Rich, Green came up with the "I love New York" slogan that became the major thrust of the promotion campaign. "It really was a labor of love," he said. "The client, after all, was me, since I am a New Yorker."

The first result was a television commercial that showed scenic spots around New York State and a series of out-of-staters offering opinions such as, "I come from Cape Cod, but I love New York."

The music, and the same line, was later sung by the casts of Broadway musicals in another commercial illustrating the variety of hit shows running in New York City.

The result was astounding, according to the promoters. Hotel rentals, sales of show tickets and tourist receipts in general soared as the advertising campaign continued.

Doyle has some tongue-in-cheek advice for any other state or city that's looking to duplicate the success of New York's promotion campaign.

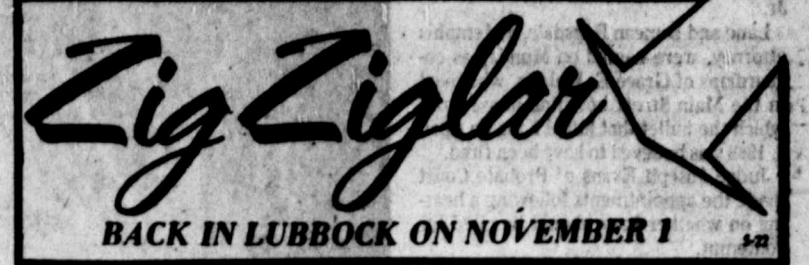

"In New York we have some very smart advertising, marketing and promotion people able to help them out," he said.

'Pig Lady' Claims She Enjoys Job

By GORDON HANSON
GWINNER, N.D. (AP) — Donna Hois was looking around for a job she thought would turn most females off. She found one.

The pretty, 110-pound college graduate is in charge of a hog-raising operation on a North Dakota farm.

"I dig pigs," is printed on the front of her often grimy T-shirt.

"I just love my job," says the brown-haired Miss Hois, 27.

A graduate of Southern Illinois University, where she earned a degree in animal industry, her working attire includes blue jeans tucked into muddy rubber boots.

"I wanted to do something that women don't do," says Miss Hois, 5 feet tall and single. "Raising pigs sounded pretty good."

But she had trouble finding a herdsman's job after graduating in December 1976.

"People wouldn't hire me. Some excuses were that I was too short, or was female, or lacked experience. They'd offer a job as an assistant, or pay only $400 a month. I got propositioned a couple of times."

"North Dakota was the only place to give me the job I wanted."

Don Hartness, who farms near Gwinner, hired Miss Hois at a beginning salary of $10,800 a year. Now she's earning $12,000.

"I told them I'd improve their breeding stock and help them make money. I accomplished everything I said I was going to. But the pay isn't high enough and I can't start my own farm. The money is in sales, so I'm leaving in June to sell hog confinement buildings out of Peoria, Ill."

Miss Hois, whose father is a photographer in Oak Lawn, Ill., puts in a 60-hour week. She is on the job daily and has two male assistants.

"I'm responsible for these pigs. I feel each one is my little pet," she says.

"I've handled about 5,000. The major part of the job is selective breeding. Farmers from Minnesota and North Dakota buy replacement gilts (young females) from us."

Miss Hois is involved in the entire operation, from the farrowing and finishing houses to the nursery. She repairs fences, performs castrations and helps sows give birth.

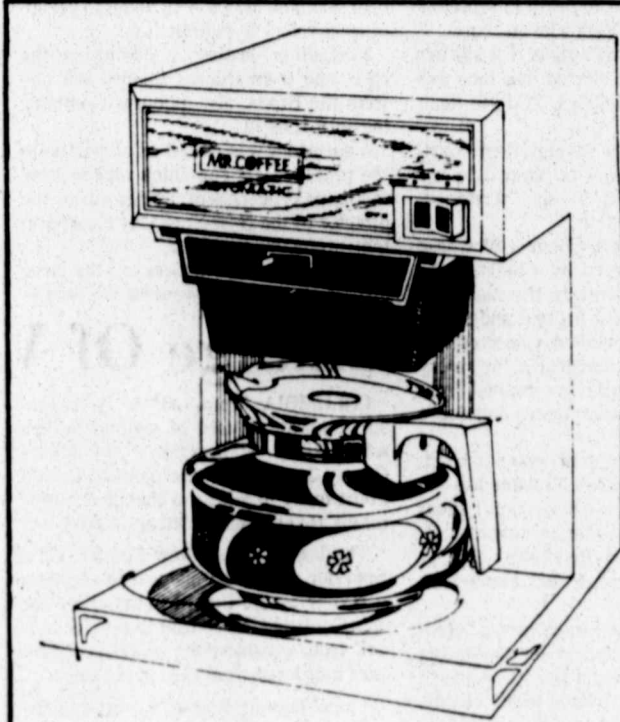

"I try to wear makeup and keep my weight down," she says. "If you work a hog farm, you can start looking sloppy. I try to take pride in myself."

The worst part of the job, she says, is using a high-pressure sprayer to clean the stalls. "Keep your mouth shut or you get a mouthful."

Judge Tabs Guardians Of Witness

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Author-lawyer Mark Lane says he would risk jail rather than return to Tennessee a 62-year-old woman who claims to have seen the man who killed Martin Luther King Jr.

Lane and Duncan Ragsdale, a Memphis attorney, were named on Monday as co-guardians of Grace E. Walden, who lived in the Main Street boarding house from which the bullet that killed King on April 4, 1968 was believed to have been fired.

Judge Joseph Evans of Probate Court made the appointments following a hearing on whether Lane should be cited for contempt.

Larry Nance, Mrs. Walden's previous guardian, had asked the court to cite Lane because Lane helped Mrs. Walden leave Tennessee earlier this month. Nance, who was allowed to withdraw as guardian Monday, contended Lane had no right to take Mrs. Walden outside the court's jurisdiction while she remained a ward of the court.

Evans postponed judgment on Nance's petition following a day-long hearing marked by frequent arguments between Lane and Nance.

Mrs. Walden was committed to Western Mental Health Institute at Bolivar, Tenn., shortly after King's slaying and remained there until her release April 25.

Mrs. Walden was living in a boarding home in Memphis when Lane put her aboard a plane for California on May 3.

Lane said Monday he helped the woman move after he concluded she couldn't get justice in Tennessee courts.

"You will not get her back. This state has held her as a political prisoner for 10 years, and you will not get her back," Lane said during one of the several heated exchanges with Nance. "I would not consider doing that for one moment and I would spend the rest of my life in a jail cell in Memphis."

Lane has maintained Mrs. Walden was illegally held in the mental hospital for 10 years because she refused to identify James Earl Ray as the man she saw after the King shooting.

Ray is serving a 99-year prison sentence at Brushy Mountain State Prison in Petros, Tenn., for the King slaying.

Lane, who has written a book on the King slaying entitled, "Code Name: Zorro," has said he represents Ray and Mrs. Walden.

The author-lawyer also attempted Monday to question a local television reporter, a television cameraman and Associated Press Memphis correspondent Les Seago about a discussion he had with Judge Evans about the woman the day he and Mrs. Walden left for California.

The three newsmen, however, refused to answer questions. They cited the 1973 Tennessee "shield law," which provides that newsmen may refuse to answer questions about their stories and sources and that any challenge of this refusal must be made to the Tennessee Court of Appeals.

Local Students Recognized

In a final round of recognition programs in the secondary schools Monday night, students from Evans and Mackenzie junior high schools were honored for a variety of accomplishments during the school year.

Billy Breedlove and Stephanie Dodson took the "Eagles of the Year" honors at the Evans Jr. High School program held in the Monterey High School Auditorium. They were presented the Daughters of the American Revolution Award. Named the first runners-up were John Griffith for the boys and Cindy Spragins and Debbie Watson for the girls.

Among other honors given at the program were those presented to Billy Woodward and Kristi Kountz who were named outstanding eighth graders. Howard Alford and Cindy Snodgrass were named outstanding seventh graders.

Three students were named to the Mackenzie Hall of Fame at the program for Mackenzie Jr. High School held in Coronado High School Auditorium. The students named to the Hall of Fame received the Danforth Award and copies of the book, "I Dare You." The students so honored were Charlie Deahl, Melinda McMillian, and Beverly Smith.

Renee Anderson and Lee Johnson won the Daughters of the American Revolution Award for citizenship. Runners-up were Georgianna Peng and Chad Northington.

Among other high honors presented at the program, the red and black honor letter "M" was presented to 12 ninth graders. The academic honors went to Renee Anderson, Melanie Bleau, Dawn Crossland, Charlie Deahl, Stephen Ford, Rhonda Hale, Mark Heinrich, Eric Johnson, Georgianna Peng, Kathy Presinger, Beverly Smith, and Kayla Webb.

Florida Suit Seeks Seizure Of Land

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Attorney General Robert Shubin has filed suit under a new law seeking to confiscate land worth more than $4.5 million. Shubin said Monday the land was bought by or on behalf of Michael Thevis, who has been indicted for allegedly violating the new Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organization Act. Thevis, who escaped from prison April 29, is charged with wholesale promotion of obscene matter. He still is at-large. The statute allows officials to seek forfeiture of any property bought with funds received from illicit enterprises covered by the law.

"IT WAS AN ACT" — Donna DiMasi, a survivor of confessed Son of Sam killer David Berkowitz's first attack, walks from the Brooklyn Supreme Court courtroom in New York Monday. Berkowitz was to be sentenced Monday but following a disturbance created by him, the judge set June 12 as a new sentencing date. DiMasi, in an interview with reporters after the session, called the display by Berkowitz an act. (AP Lashphoto)

City Officer Nabs 'Motorcycle Man'

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It's not easy when you're a rookie cop and a man turns into a "motorcycle" before your very eyes.

But it happened to officer David Dudley recently, and the former Texas Tech football center handled the incident with the equanimity of a seasoned policeman.

The story unfolded this way: After being notified that a possible mental patient might be at a service station near 13th Street and Slide Road, Dudley noted the location, then swung his patrol car in that direction.

When he arrived, Dudley thought he saw the object of the call. A man was doing deep knee bends in the driveway at the service station. "What are you doing?" Dudley wanted to know, after climbing out of his car. "I've got asthma," the 35-year-old said cryptically. "And I think I'm going to faint."

"Is there something I can do for you?" Dudley asked. "I need to light my cigarette so I can breathe," the man explained passively. "Where do you work?" was Dudley's next question.

"Oh, I own the Furr's supermarket chain," he was told. "Do you have some identification on you?" the officer asked. "You don't know who I am?" the man replied somewhat incredulously. "No, that's why I need some I.D."

"Not only do I own Furr's," the man said emphatically, "but I also own the City of Lubbock. I need to light my cigarette," he added. "You can light your cigarette after you give me some I.D.," Dudley said, slightly annoyed.

At that point, Dudley said in his report, the man produced his identification and lit his cigarette. Just as suddenly, the man tossed the lit cigarette to the ground. "How'd you get here?" the officer asked.

"I walked from Big Spring. I've been walking four years," the man told Dudley, as a second officer walked up. "Yeah, I've been walking..." the stoic man said, eyeing the second officer closely. "But it's time to run."

He meant it — literally. After a short chase the officers caught the man on the other side of the street and subdued him long enough to handcuff him. A scuffle ensued, Dudley said in his report, and the man allegedly began kicking and screaming.

Another cop arrived to help control the man. Like quicksilver, the man flashed into calm, and was helped to his feet. Then, "the suspect decided he was going to leave," Dudley wrote, "and he became a motorcycle."

The man began "revving" his "engine," as though he'd pull away. "I told him to 'Pull it over and park it,'" Dudley reported. "Why?" the motorcycle/man wanted to know. "You don't have a motorcycle license," Dudley answered. "Oh."

And with that, Dudley said he heard the sound of a motorcycle coming to a stop. It wasn't long before the ambulance attendants arrived.

Berkowitz' Taunts Spur Uproar In Courtroom

NEW YORK (UPI) — Neysa Moskowitz waited nervously for the man who killed her daughter to appear in the courtroom. It was late. It should have been over.

David Berkowitz — the confessed Son of Sam killer who terrorized New York for more than a year — had been due in court at 10 a.m. Monday for sentencing. Finally, an hour and 23 minutes late, the door to the windowless courtroom swung open. Berkowitz was ushered in.

He rolled his eyes. He tried to raise his manacled arms.

And there was bedlam. "Stacy was a —! Stacy was a —!" Berkowitz sang to the tune of "Ring Around the Rosey." He referred to Stacy Moskowitz, 20, the last of six young men and women he shot to death in senseless attacks along New York's lovers' lanes.

"That's right; that's right; I'd kill her again!" Berkowitz blurted. His face was flushed, his head bobbed. "I'd kill them all again!"

At the back of the seventh-floor courtroom, Neysa Moskowitz jumped to her feet. "You animal!" she screamed. "How dare you say that!"

Behind her, Robert Violante, 20, whose left eye was shattered by a bullet as he sat with Miss Moskowitz the night she was killed, rose from his seat and shouted: "You should get killed, you creep!"

Squirming in his handcuffs, the stocky 24-year-old Berkowitz was pushed from the courtroom by more than a half dozen officers.

Violante collapsed in his seat and wept, comforted by his father. Violante has one glass eye and says he can see only "about four feet" with the other because of a .44-caliber bullet from Berkowitz' Charter Arms Bulldog revolver that pierced his head.

The trouble began just moments before Berkowitz was to appear for sentencing for the six killings and the wounding of seven other young people in his bloody, year-long spree that began in July 1976.

Berkowitz was conferring with his lawyers in an office behind the courtroom and suddenly began scuffling with his guards. One officer said Berkowitz began screaming and tried to get to the window.

"He decided he was going to fly," the guard deadpanned.

Was it an escape try or a suicide attempt? the officer was asked. "Well," he said, "it's seven stories straight down."

In the struggle, Berkowitz kicked Chief Court Officer Dominic Ruocco in the back. He bit Capt. Joseph Murphy in the

Murphy was treated at a hospital and released; O'Toole, whose leg was badly swollen, was admitted for observation and X-rays.

Berkowitz' bizarre appearance in the courtroom lasted less than five minutes. Several reporters who stood only a few feet from Berkowitz when his outburst began said it had shaken them.

"It happened so fast, I didn't know if he was handcuffed or not," said one woman who sat in the front row.

State Supreme Court Justice Joseph Corso of Brooklyn adjourned the proceedings until June 12 and ordered Berkowitz — who had calmly pleaded guilty to the six murder charges in the same courtroom on May 8 — to undergo yet another psychiatric examination.

Two other justices presiding in the case, one from Queens County and one from the Bronx, also adjourned sentencing until June 12.

A gag order was placed on all parties to the proceedings. The union representing the court officers sent a telegram to the director of the New York City Court System, protesting the order.

Each of the three justices and the three district attorneys prosecuting the case —

one for each of the boroughs where the Son of Sam attacks occurred — said they were warned last week of a possible spectacle at the sentencing.

Corso read two paragraphs from a report he received from Dr. Daniel Schwartz, head of forensic medicine at Kings County Hospital, on a psychiatric examination he hid of Berkowitz after he pleaded guilty.

"When asked what he (Berkowitz) thinks will happen in court," Corso read, "his mind changes once again. Now his face lights up and his eyes twinkle as he replies, 'I know, but I'm not telling.'"

Corso said Schwartz then asked, "Is that something Judge Corso and I don't know? And the defendant answers, 'That's right.'"

Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola was the only prosecutor to protest the adjournments.

"We knew in advance what would happen here," Merola said. Then, noting the defendant had the right of appeal, Merola added: "As defender of the people of Bronx County, I object" to the adjournment.

Outside the courtroom, Mrs. Moskowitz said she thought Berkowitz' entire appearance was an act: "He wants us to believe he's crazy."

Change Of Venue Sought

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — A Wisconsin runaway accused of setting the fire which killed 42 persons at the Maury County Jail last summer goes to Circuit Court today to ask for a change of venue for his as-yet-unscheduled arson trial.

The lawyer for Andrew Zimmer, 17, of Superior, Wis., also planned to argue for a review by the Circuit Court of a Juvenile Court judge's refusal to remove himself from consideration of 42 second-degree murder charges filed in the case.

Lionel Barrett, Zimmer's court-appointed lawyer, said he doesn't think the youth can obtain a fair trial on the arson charge in Columbia because of intense local publicity and because many local residents lost relatives or friends in the June 1977 blaze. He wants the trial conducted in a metropolitan area like Nashville or Memphis.

The youth is accused of using a cigarette to ignite the padding of his isolation cell. Smoke poured through the one-story, cinder-block jail, suffocating prisoners and visitors trapped behind the bars.

Zimmer is classified as an adult for purposes of the arson trial. But the murder counts were filed, as the law requires, in Juvenile Court. Prosecutors want them transferred to the adult court.

Lettuce, Tomatoes Show Price Hikes

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Salad lettuce had to dig more green out of their pocketbooks last year.

A breakdown of last year's 8.2-percent increase in food prices has been put together by Morton J. Marcus, research economist at the Indiana University school of business.

"If white bread, ground beef and beer were major items in your diet, you experienced price increases from 2.1 to 3.1 percent last calendar year," Marcus said in the current issue of Indiana Business Review.

"Tomatoes for your salad rose by 17.7 percent and the lettuce by 27.4 percent," he said.

"Eggs declined in price by 21.1 percent but the butter in which they were fried increased by 10.1 percent and the side order of bacon by 14.2 percent," he said.

"Apples and bananas rose in price just over 10 percent — less than the 35.6-percent increase in the price of oranges," Marcus said. "Cigarettes and wine were cheaper, relatively speaking, rising only 4.8 percent and 6.6 percent respectively."

Other advances in the consumer price index included housing, up 7.5 percent although the average price of a new house rose 8.9 percent; entertainment 4.8 percent; transportation 3.9 percent, and apparel and upkeep 3.8 percent.

Marcus said there was a 4.4 percent decline in use-car prices while new models were rising 6.9 percent. Gasoline costs rose 4.8 percent while the cost of maintaining and repairing a vehicle increased 7.9 percent.

Rent was up 6.2 percent, property taxes up 7.2 percent, and home furnishings up 3.1 percent.

There also were increases in fuels and utilities: oil 8.7 percent; electricity 4.7 percent; piped gas 9.8 percent; telephone 1.2 percent and water and sewer 12.2 percent.

"Inflation appears to have hit smaller urban areas harder than the biggest cities," Marcus said. "Overall, consumer prices in the biggest areas rose 5.9 percent compared to 7.4 percent in the smaller areas."

RESOLUTION PASSED WASHINGTON (AP) — House-passed legislation would make Hungary the fourth communist state to win full trade privileges with the United States. The Senate now must act on the resolution that moved through the House Monday 209-173. Hungary would gain favored nation status, which would mean lower duties on U.S. goods sold to her and lower duties on Hungarian products imported to the United States.

Farm Chief Endorses Meat Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposed legislation reducing meat imports when domestic supplies are plentiful has been endorsed by Texas' agriculture commissioner and a Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate.

"The current system, which is exactly the opposite, has created an incredible situation which allows boom or bust supply-price swings," Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said in written testimony for a House committee Monday.

"Our cattle producers have suffered unfairly for four, long, costly years due to increased imports at the very time our own supplies were highest."

"Now that cattle supplies have dropped and producers are trying desperately to recover at least some of the losses incurred during the high import years, consumers are caught in the reverse portion of that cycle."

The legislation by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, would put import quotas on beef in inverse proportion to domestic production.

Brown, and Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, who is challenging Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, in November, addressed the House Ways and Means Committee.

Krueger said quick enactment of limits on meat imports is needed to protect domestic meat producers from economic hardship and to protect consumers from purchasing meat that does not always meet the same health standards required in the United States.

Krueger is sponsoring legislation requiring foreign slaughterhouses to meet the same standards as those in the U.S. and requiring labels identifying the origin of all meat.

He said the Department of Agriculture last week announced the second recall in a month of imported canned meat produced by a South American country because of possible food poisoning.

"While I am not suggesting that the purchase of foreign meat by consumers who wish to buy such products should be disallowed, I do believe consumers ought to have access to labeling warnings."

Judge Bars Airline From Taking Canes

BALTIMORE (AP) — A Baltimore judge has barred United Airlines from taking canes away from blind passengers on flights taking off from or landing in Maryland. The 10-day restraining order issued by Judge James Perrott was sought by the National Federation of the Blind.

Ralph Sanders, the Baltimore-based president of the federation, said United's practice of confiscating canes discriminates against blind people and is dangerous because it restricts their mobility in case of emergency. The airline says it is merely enforcing a federal safety regulation.

Judge Tabs Guardians Of Witness

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Author-lawyer Mark Lane says he would risk jail rather than return to Tennessee a 62-year-old woman who claims to have seen the man who killed Martin Luther King Jr.

Lane and Duncan Ragsdale, a Memphis attorney, were named on Monday as co-guardians of Grace E. Walden, who lived in the Main Street boarding house from which the bullet that killed King on April 4, 1968 was believed to have been fired.

Judge Joseph Evans of Probate Court made the appointments following a hearing on whether Lane should be cited for contempt.

Larry Nance, Mrs. Walden's previous guardian, had asked the court to cite Lane because Lane helped Mrs. Walden leave Tennessee earlier this month. Nance, who was allowed to withdraw as guardian Monday, contended Lane had no right to take Mrs. Walden outside the court's jurisdiction while she remained a ward of the court.

Evans postponed judgment on Nance's petition following a day-long hearing marked by frequent arguments between Lane and Nance.

Mrs. Walden was committed to Western Mental Health Institute at Bolivar, Tenn., shortly after King's slaying and remained there until her release April 25.

Mrs. Walden was living in a boarding home in Memphis when Lane put her aboard a plane for California on May 3.

Lane said Monday he helped the woman move after he concluded she couldn't get justice in Tennessee courts.

"You will not get her back. This state has held her as a political prisoner for 10 years, and you will not get her back," Lane said during one of the several heated exchanges with Nance. "I would not consider doing that for one moment and I would spend the rest of my life in a jail cell in Memphis."

Lane has maintained Mrs. Walden was illegally held in the mental hospital for 10 years because she refused to identify James Earl Ray as the man she saw after the King shooting.

Ray is serving a 99-year prison sentence at Brushy Mountain State Prison in Petros, Tenn., for the King slaying.

Lane, who has written a book on the King slaying entitled, "Code Name: Zorro," has said he represents Ray and Mrs. Walden.

The author-lawyer also attempted Monday to question a local television reporter, a television cameraman and Associated Press Memphis correspondent Les Seago about a discussion he had with Judge Evans about the woman the day he and Mrs. Walden left for California.

The three newsmen, however, refused to answer questions. They cited the 1973 Tennessee "shield law," which provides that newsmen may refuse to answer questions about their stories and sources and that any challenge of this refusal must be made to the Tennessee Court of Appeals.

Local Students Recognized

In a final round of recognition programs in the secondary schools Monday night, students from Evans and Mackenzie junior high schools were honored for a variety of accomplishments during the school year.

Billy Breedlove and Stephanie Dodson took the "Eagles of the Year" honors at the Evans Jr. High School program held in the Monterey High School Auditorium. They were presented the Daughters of the American Revolution Award. Named the first runners-up were John Griffith for the boys and Cindy Spragins and Debbie Watson for the girls.

Among other honors given at the program were those presented to Billy Woodward and Kristi Kountz who were named outstanding eighth graders.

Howard Alford and Cindy Snodgrass were named outstanding seventh graders.

Three students were named to the Mackenzie Hall of Fame at the program for Mackenzie Jr. High School held in Coronado High School Auditorium. The students named to the Hall of Fame received the Danforth Award and copies of the book, "I Dare You." The students so honored were Charlie Deahl, Melinda McMillian, and Beverly Smith.

Renee Anderson and Lee Johnson won the Daughters of the American Revolution Award for citizenship. Runners-up were Georgianna Peng and Chad Northington.

Among other high honors presented at the program, the red and black honor letter "M" was presented to 12 ninth graders. The academic honors went to Renee Anderson, Melanie Bleau, Dawn Crossland, Charlie Deahl, Stephen Ford, Rhonda Hale, Mark Heinrich, Eric Johnson, Georgianna Peng, Kathy Presinger, Beverly Smith, and Kayla Webb.

Theme for the Mackenzie program was "Life Is What U Make It."

Florida Suit Seeks Seizure Of Land

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Attorney General Robert Shubin has filed suit under a new law seeking to confiscate land worth more than $6.6 million.

Shubin said Monday the land was bought by or on behalf of Michael Thevis, who has been indicted for allegedly violating the new Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organization Act. Thevis, who escaped from prison April 29, is charged with wholesale promotion of obscene matter. He still is at-large. The statute allows officers to seize real estate of any property bought with funds received from illicit enterprises covered by the law.

"IT WAS AN ACT" — Donna DiMasi, a survivor of confessed Son of Sam killer David Berkowitz's first attack, walks from the Brooklyn Supreme Court courtroom in New York Monday. Berkowitz was to be sentenced Monday but following a disturbance created by him, the judge set June 12 as a new sentencing date. DiMasi, in an interview with reporters after the session, called the display by Berkowitz an act. (AP Laserphoto)

City Officer Nabs 'Motorcycle Man'

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It's not easy when you're a rookie cop and a man turns into a "motorcycle" before your very eyes.

But it happened to officer David Dudley recently, and the former Texas Tech football center handled the incident with the equanimity of a seasoned policeman.

The story unfolded this way: After being notified that a possible mental patient might be at a service station near 13th Street and Slide Road, Dudley noted the location, then swung his patrol car in that direction.

When he arrived, Dudley thought he saw the object of the call. A man was doing deep knee bends in the driveway at the service station.

"What are you doing?" Dudley wanted to know, after climbing out of his car. "I've got asthma," the 35-year-old said cryptically. "And I think I'm going to faint."

"Is there something I can do for you?" Dudley asked. "I need to light my cigarette so I can breathe," the man explained passively. "Where do you work?" was Dudley's next question.

"Oh, I own the Furr's supermarket chain," he was told. "Do you have some identification on you?" the officer asked. "You don't know who I am?" the man replied somewhat incredulously.

"No, that's why I need some I.D.," the man said emphatically. "but I also own the City of Lubbock. I need to light my cigarette," he added.

"You can light your cigarette after you give me some I.D.," Dudley said, slightly annoyed. At that point, Dudley said in his report, the man produced his identification and lit his cigarette.

Just as suddenly, the man tossed the lighted smoke to the ground. "How'd you get here?" the officer asked. "I walked from Big Spring. I've been walking four years," the man told Dudley, as a second officer walked up.

"Yeah, I've been walking..." the stoic man said, eyeing the second officer closely. "But it's time to run."

He meant it — literally. After a short chase the officers caught the man on the other side of the street and subdued him long enough to handcuff him. A scuffle ensued, Dudley said in his report, and the man allegedly began kicking and screaming.

Another cop arrived to help control the man. Like quicksilver, the man flashed into calm, and was helped to his feet. Then, "the suspect decided he was going to leave," Dudley wrote, "and he became a motorcycle."

The man began "revving" his "engine," as though he'd pull away. "I told him to 'Pull it over and park it,'" Dudley reported. "Why?" the motorcycle man wanted to know. "You don't have a motorcycle license," Dudley answered.

"Oh..." And with that, Dudley said he heard the sound of a motorcycle coming to a stop. It wasn't long before the ambulance attendants arrived.

Berkowitz' Taunts Spur Uproar In Courtroom

NEW YORK (UPI) — Neysa Moskowitz waited nervously for the man who killed her daughter to appear in the courtroom. It was late. It should have been over.

David Berkowitz — the confessed Son of Sam killer who terrorized New York for more than a year — had been due in court at 10 a.m. Monday for sentencing. Finally, an hour and 23 minutes late, the door to the windowless courtroom swung open. Berkowitz was ushered in.

He rolled his eyes. He tried to raise his manacled arms.

And there was bedlam.

"Stacy was a —! Stacy was a —!" Berkowitz sang to the tune of "Ring Around the Rosy." He referred to Stacy Moskowitz, 20, the last of six young men and women he shot to death in senseless attacks along New York's lovers' lanes.

"That's right; that's right; I'd kill her again!" Berkowitz blurted. His face was flushed, his head bobbed. "I'd kill them all again!"

At the back of the seventh-floor courtroom, Neysa Moskowitz jumped to her feet. "You animal!" she screamed. "How dare you say that!"

Behind her, Robert Violante, 20, whose left eye was shattered by a bullet as he sat with Miss Moskowitz the night she was killed, rose from his seat and shouted: "You should get killed, you creep!"

Squirming in his handcuffs, the stocky 24-year-old Berkowitz was pushed from the courtroom by more than a half dozen officers.

Violante collapsed in his seat and wept, comforted by his father. Violante has one glass eye and says he can see only "about four feet" with the other because of a .44-caliber bullet from Berkowitz' Charter Arms Bulldog revolver that pierced his head.

The trouble began just moments before Berkowitz was to appear for sentencing for the six killings and the wounding of seven other young people in his bloody, year-long spree that began in July 1976.

Berkowitz was conferring with his lawyers in an office behind the courtroom and suddenly began scuffling with his guards. One officer said Berkowitz began screaming and tried to get to the window.

"He decided he was going to fly," the guard deadpanned.

Was it an escape try or a suicide attempt? the officer was asked.

"Well," he said, "it's seven stories straight down."

In the struggle, Berkowitz kicked Chief Court Officer Dominic Ruocco in the back. He bit Capt. Joseph Murphy in the

Murphy was treated at a hospital and released; O'Toole, whose leg was badly swollen, was admitted for observation and X-rays.

Berkowitz' bizarre appearance in the courtroom lasted less than five minutes. Several reporters who stood only a few feet from Berkowitz when his outburst began said it had shaken them.

"It happened so fast, I didn't know if he was handcuffed or not," said one woman who sat in the front row.

State Supreme Court Justice Joseph Corso of Brooklyn adjourned the proceedings until June 12 and ordered Berkowitz — who had calmly pleaded guilty to the six murder charges in the same courtroom on May 8 — to undergo yet another psychiatric examination.

Two other justices presiding in the case, one from Queens County and one from the Bronx, also adjourned sentencing until June 12.

A gag order was placed on all parties to the proceedings. The union representing the court officers sent a telegram to the director of the New York City Court System, protesting the order.

Each of the three justices and the three district attorneys prosecuting the case —

one for each of the boroughs where the Son of Sam attacks occurred — said they were warned last week of a possible spectacle at the sentencing.

Corso read two paragraphs from a report he received from Dr. Daniel Schwartz, head of forensic medicine at Kings County Hospital, on a psychiatric examination he hid of Berkowitz after he pleaded guilty.

"When asked what he (Berkowitz) thinks will happen in court," Corso read, "his mind changes once again. Now his face lights up and his eyes twinkle as he replies, 'I know, but I'm not telling.'"

Corso said Schwartz then asked, "Is that something Judge Corso and I don't know? And the defendant answers, 'That's right.'"

Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola was the only prosecutor to protest the adjournments.

"We knew in advance what would happen here," Merola said. Then, noting the defendant had the right of appeal, Merola added: "As defender of the people of Bronx County, I object" to the adjournment.

Outside the courtroom, Mrs. Moskowitz said she thought Berkowitz' entire appearance was an act: "He wants us to believe he's crazy."

Change Of Venue Sought

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — A Wisconsin runaway accused of setting the fire which killed 42 persons at the Maury County Jail last summer goes to Circuit Court today to ask for a change of venue for his as-yet-unscheduled arson trial.

The lawyer for Andrew Zimmer, 17, of Superior, Wis., also planned to argue for a review by the Circuit Court of a Juvenile Court judge's refusal to remove himself from consideration of 42 second-degree murder charges filed in the case.

Lionel Barrett, Zimmer's court-appointed lawyer, said he doesn't think the youth can obtain a fair trial on the arson charge in Columbia because of intense local publicity and because many local residents lost relatives or friends in the June 1977 blaze. He wants the trial conducted in a metropolitan area like Nashville or Memphis.

The youth is accused of using a cigarette to ignite the padding of his isolation cell. Smoke poured through the one-story, cinder-block jail, suffocating prisoners and visitors trapped behind the bars.

Zimmer is classified as an adult for purposes of the arson trial. But the murder counts were filed, as the law requires, in Juvenile Court. Prosecutors want them transferred to the adult court.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposed legislation reducing meat imports when domestic supplies are plentiful has been endorsed by Texas' agriculture commissioner and a Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate.

Lettuce, Tomatoes Show Price Hikes

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Salad lovers had to dig more green out of their pocketbooks last year.

A breakdown of last year's 8.2-percent increase in food prices has been put together by Morton J. Marcus, research economist at the Indiana University school of business.

"If white bread, ground beef and beer were major items in your diet, you experienced price increases from 2.1 to 3.1 percent last calendar year," Marcus said in the current issue of Indiana Business Review.

"Tomatoes for your salad rose by 17.7 percent and the lettuce by 27.4 percent," he said.

"Eggs declined in price by 21.1 percent but the butter in which they were fried increased by 10.1 percent and the side order of bacon by 14.2 percent," he said.

"Apples and bananas rose in price just over 10 percent — less than the 35.6-percent increase in the price of oranges," Marcus said. "Cigarettes and wine were cheaper, relatively speaking, rising only 4.8 percent and 6.6 percent respectively."

Marcus said the 8.2-percent increase in food and beverage prices was second only to the 8.8-percent hike in medical care costs.

Other advances in the consumer price index included housing, up 7.5 percent although the average price of a new house rose 8.9 percent; entertainment 4.8 percent; transportation 3.9 percent, and apparel and upkeep 3.8 percent.

Marcus said there was a 4.4 percent decline in used-car prices while new models were rising 6.9 percent. Gasoline costs rose 4.8 percent while the cost of maintaining and repairing a vehicle increased 7.9 percent.

Rent was up 6.2 percent, property taxes up 7.2 percent, and home furnishings up 3.1 percent.

There also were increases in fuels and utilities: oil 8.7 percent; electricity 4.7 percent; piped gas 9.8 percent; telephone 1.2 percent and water and sewer 12.2 percent.

"Inflation appears to have hit smaller urban areas harder than the biggest cities," Marcus said. "Overall, consumer prices in the biggest areas rose 5.9 percent compared to 7.4 percent in the smaller areas."

RESOLUTION PASSED WASHINGTON (AP) — House-passed legislation would make Hungary the fourth communist state to win full trade privileges with the United States. The Senate now must act on the resolution that moved through the House Monday 209-173. Hungary would gain favored nation status, which would mean lower duties on U.S. goods sold to her and lower duties on Hungarian products imported to the United States.

Judge Bars Airline From Taking Canes

BALTIMORE (AP) — A Baltimore judge has barred United Airlines from taking canes away from blind passengers on flights taking off from or landing in Maryland. The 10-day restraining order issued by Judge James Perrott was sought by the National Federation of the Blind.

Ralph Sanders, the Baltimore-based president of the federation, said United's practice of confiscating canes discriminates against blind people and is dangerous because it restricts their mobility in case of emergency. The airline says it is merely enforcing a federal safety regulation.

Patman Offers Leasing Plan

AUSTIN (UPI) — The state could make millions of dollars by leasing 211,000 acres of right of way land.

Sen. William N. Patman, D-Ganado, said a 1955 study indicated the highway department had acquired the title to minerals underlying up to 211,000 acres of right of way.

"From as early as July of 1976 I have advocated that the State department of Highways' and Public Transportation change its present policy of not leasing such minerals to one of leasing," Patman said.

Patman said his plan would not result in gas and oil wells beside highways, but could allow directional drilling beneath the highways and pooling arrangements to remove oil and gas from beneath the state lands.

Carter Still Opposed To Reactor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says his trip to Tennessee did not shake his opposition to the controversial Clinch River nuclear breeder reactor which has already cost $515 million in planning expenditures.

"No, I haven't changed my mind about anything," Carter told reporters on his return to the White House late Monday after a day of touring the Tennessee Valley Authority and the nearby Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

Carter did not visit the nearby Clinch River project, which is strongly supported by Tennessee officials. The president bases his opposition on grounds the plutonium it produces could lead to a proliferation of nuclear weapons, but so far Congress has not agreed with him.

The chief executive had a busy day scheduled today, with meetings on Africa policy, his forthcoming 1980 budget and the presentation of management improvement awards to government workers.

He also was ready to announce a new initiative with private industry for the placement of workers after they conclude their stint under the Comprehensive Education and Training Act.

During the visit to Tennessee, Carter told a huge gathering of TVA employees that "energy prices must cover all legitimate costs of production, including environmental protection, but not waste and not windfall profits at the consumers' expense."

The president visited TVA headquarters and Oak Ridge to dramatize their role as a model in meeting the nation's energy needs without ruining the environment.

Carter said he foresees an expanded role for TVA, a quasi-government utility, in the future.

He noted with satisfaction that the TVA board last week slashed a recommended staff pay raise by nearly one third — from 1 to 8.5 percent.

"I expect the TVA and all Americans to do even more. Inflation is the nation's No. 1 economic problem," he said.

"This administration is with you in encouraging more competition and less concentration of economic power among the producers of petroleum, coal and uranium," he added. Since 1967, the TVA's customer rates have risen nearly 300 percent.

At the laboratory, the president inspected several sophisticated displays of nuclear research.

He also had a private session with staff members from the Oak Ridge laboratory, which helped produce the nation's first atomic bomb during World War II.

"The success we are trying to achieve is heavily on your shoulders," he told a panel of workers.

Carter will hit the road again at the end of the week, traveling to Chicago Thursday to hold a regional news conference and address a Democratic Party fundraising dinner.

Following stops in Springfield, Ill., and Charleston, S.C., Friday, he plans to return to Washington to host a dinner in honor of French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

The French president is in the country to attend the U.N. Disarmament Conference. Carter is sending Vice President Walter Mondale to pinchhit for him at that gathering.

Carter and his family plan to spend the holiday weekend at the Camp David presidential retreat.

Des Moines Passes Porno Ordinance

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The city council Monday night passed a temporary zoning ordinance to restrict the openings of adult entertainment facilities.

The ordinance — good for 100 days — says no adult establishments such as massage parlors, adult book stores and X-rated motion picture theaters can be built within 1,000 feet of a school, residence, church or similar business.

The council was reacting to an earlier controversy about an adult bookstore that was established near an elementary school.

The council said it hoped to have a new permanent zoning ordinance completed by the end of the 100 days.

Civil Service Proposal May Hurt Career Men

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's proposed civil service changes could give political appointees "a suffocating power over career executives," a retired civil service chief says.

But while important changes must be made in Carter's proposal, the plan provides a good foundation for reform, said Bernard Rosen.

Rosen, who retired from civil service in 1975, testified Monday before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Most political appointees are exceptionally able and dedicated to the national interest, but they often lack experience in shaping public policy and managing large organizations, Rosen said. Their initial perceptions are often "cloudy if not faulty," he added.

As they test their power, he said, "it is important for the public interest that political appointees not have suffocating power over career executives; power that could be used intertemporarily or to satisfy a special interest or to provide a scapegoat for a poor decision made at a higher level."

Carter's plan gives political appointees the right to reassign career executives within a newly created Federal Executive Service, with up to an $8,000 pay cut a year, Rosen noted.

Political appointees may be tempted to label as "unresponsive" career executives who point out "weak or undesirable elements in their ideas," Rosen said.

"The proposed new power for presidential appointees would send a clear signal to many career executives that if they don't want to be shipped out, they should not question or disagree with the views of their bosses," he said.

"We would substitute a new generation of 'agreeable' career executives for the constructively critical and politically neutral professionals," Rosen said.

The rationale, Rosen said, is to give top federal executives the flexibility that corporate executives have.

"But the analogy is meaningless because no corporation could be successful if it lost its top three levels of executives every two to four years as the federal agencies lose their presidential appointees," Rosen said.

He said this revolving-door syndrome underscores the need for objectivity, competence and continuity of non-political career executives.

Hughes Will Trial Starts Final Stage

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — After seven months of testimony, the windup of the trial to determine who gets Howard Hughes' fortune began with the argument that Hughes must have written the "Mormon will" because Melvin Dummar could not have been lucky enough to perpetrate such a credible forgery.

"Howard Hughes wrote it," Attorney Harold Rhoden declared in the opening sentence of his final argument Monday. "I think you know it," he told the district court jury.

The three-page, handwritten document found in Mormon Church headquarters must have been written by Hughes or else it is a forgery, Rhoden said, and "if there is a forger, it is Melvin Dummar or nobody."

"The evidence is inescapable that Melvin could not have done it — only Howard Hughes."

Rhoden argued that it was too outlandish to believe that Dummar, a gas station attendant who claims he once found Hughes in the desert and gave him a ride, would have known the details that support the will, many unknown then except to aides of the reclusive Hughes.

The will's detractors contend Hughes' handwriting was copied from photos in the book "Hoax" and a magazine, both of which they established Dummar read.

But Rhoden said eight letters which appear in words in the disputed document were not shown in the books, yet all were written the way Hughes wrote them.

"How lucky is this kid Melvin?" he asked the jury. "How lucky can he get? He happened to guess right? Eight times out of eight?"

How would Dummar have known, he asked, that "Hughes was possessed for many years" with hand-written notes?

A sensible forger would have presumed that a man as rich as Hughes would leave a formal typewritten document, he said.

"Someone perpetrating one of the biggest frauds in history, stealing millions, would have looked up a word" in the dictionary, rather than misspell the same words Hughes misspelled, he said.

Why would a forger have chosen to write with a ball point pen on a cheap paper tablet?

"How would someone in Dummar's position know then, he asked, that 'Hughes wrote hundreds of memos on that cheap, yellow, lined paper — hundreds — and he used practically nothing else?'"

He noted pen company chemists testified it was written in ink first manufactured in 1967, the year before the date on the contested will, and discontinued four years before Hughes died.

"The odds are astronomical that a person would pick up a pen with just the right ink to forge the document," he said.

Solon Doubts Action On Policy Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special House committee is reviewing congressional restraints on the conduct of foreign policy, but the committee chairman says no easing of restrictions is expected this year.

"I don't think there will be anything done this session anymore," said Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House International Relations Committee and head of the special committee.

The Carter administration, in the light of spreading Soviet and Cuban power in Africa, has been increasingly uneasy about the legislative restrictions, which were imposed after the Vietnam war.

Zablocki said Monday night the special committee composed of members of his International Relations Committee will concentrate on legislation involving U.S. economic and military assistance abroad and military sales grants.

Carter complained to a group of editors last week that he has to operate under "very tight constraints" in the foreign policy field because of the legislative restrictions.

The State Department on Saturday followed by issuing a list of 30 "restrictions on presidential authority to provide assistance to foreign nations and conduct foreign operations."

And U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young issued a statement saying:

"I share the president's concern about the many legislative restrictions on foreign assistance. For instance, there are a number of laws restricting aid to specified countries including Mozambique, Angola, Laos and Vietnam. Other statutes place various conditions on foreign assistance."

The fighting in Zaire has brought greater focus on the issue. Last week, House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes, R-Ariz., said after meeting with Carter that the president was frustrated "at having his hands tied" in supporting friendly nations.

A central target of the administration is 1975 legislation which prohibits covert American aid to anti-Marxist factions in Angola's civil war and bans further military involvement in Angola without action by Congress.

The Washington Post reported Tuesday that House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., authorized creation of the special committee on Monday and designated Zablocki to name its members.

Zablocki said in a telephone interview that a special task force within the International Relations Committee already had been examining the congressional restraints for some time and "we are continuing the further study of what we understand are some of the desires of the executive branch."

In the Senate, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said during the weekend he sees no evidence to justify legislative changes in the restraints. Aides to Byrd said Monday the senator has not changed his mind on the issue.

"Turkey, where sheep are the most important form of livestock, there are 37 million head of the animals."

Meat Prices Increased 41 Percent In Early '78

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is handing out more worrisome economic news, saying meat prices for the first three months of the year jumped 41 percent at an annual rate. Meanwhile other agencies were announcing a 2½-year high for subsidized mortgage interest rates.

In other economic developments Monday: — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. blasted doctors and hospitals for not restraining rising costs.

— Robert S. Strauss, Carter's chief adviser on inflation, is predicting the business community now knows it must accept smaller price increases before labor cooperates by demanding smaller wage boosts.

"Business knows they are going to have to step forward first (and) that will have a very, very salutary effect on labor negotiations if we take the right steps over the next few months," Strauss said.

— Federal Reserve Board member Henry C. Wallich said, "Unless we do more than the president proposed, I fear we'll find inflation will accelerate." Wallich suggested that a $19.4 billion tax cut figure accepted by Carter be reduced to $5 billion to $10 billion.

The President's Council on Wage and Price Stability said Monday that short supplies and strong increases in consumer demand drove up meat prices.

But much of the rise in the first quarter compensated for the depressed beef price level in the last two years, the council said in its quarterly inflation report.

Both the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration said Monday their subsidized mortgages would hit a 2½-year high of 9 percent. The last time the FHA and VA rates reached that figure was the period from September 1975 to January 1976.

The secretary of housing and urban development, Patricia Roberts Harris, said the interest increases were needed "to bring FHA rates in line with other competitive rates in both the mortgage and financial markets."

"This change is expected to increase the availability of FHA financing for moderate income home buyers and sellers who are the major beneficiaries of FHA-insured mortgage financing," she said.

The Carter administration views the discouraging economic picture as temporary — a factor of the bad winter and one-time market conditions. "Given the one-time nature of these events, there is every reason to expect that the price and labor cost increases will moderate substantially during the remainder of the year," the president's wage-price council said.

Hitting at medical cost increases, Califano said Monday that the nation's health care program was misdirected and taking an ever-increasing share of the federal budget.

"Even Lloyds of London with the full backing of the U.S. mint could not afford simply to insure the existing... inflationary health care industry," the secretary of health, education and welfare told a government conference on health policy.

Califano said the cost of government-financed health care this year would hit 12.7 cents of every dollar up from 12 cents last year.

But brightening the discouraging picture Monday was an announcement that the AFL-CIO construction trades unions and the National Contractors Association had reached an agreement calling for reducing the construction costs of some industrial projects by 9 to 15 percent. The agreement also seeks increased productivity and efficiency.

The pact was the first sure sign that either business or labor would take steps to follow Carter's voluntary anti-inflationary program announced last month.

Food costs, a big worry for shoppers, consumed some time in the House Monday as a price guide used by big volume meat buyers came under fire.

Nick Wullich, formerly an FBI investigator and now working for the House Small Business Committee, attacked the "Yellow Sheet" price guide for one having changed most price quotations 100 times during a 25-day period without reason.

The Provisioner Daily Market Service of Chicago puts out the sheet, considered a pricing bible for an estimated 90 percent of meat buyers and sellers.

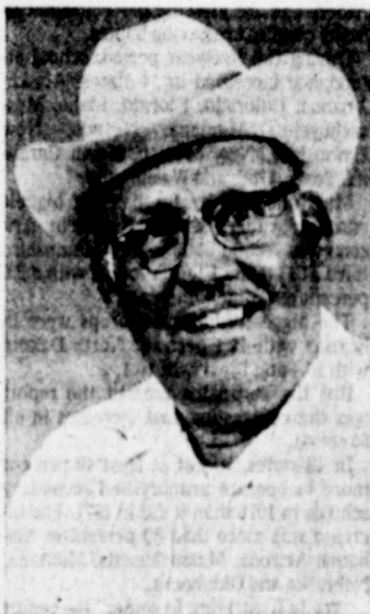

Wullich said price variations were published by the organization when there had been no evidence of market activity.

Lester I. Norton, president of the firm, called the allegations the "most singularly stupid stuff I ever heard."

Rites Slated For Ex-NM Governor

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — Private graveside services are scheduled today for John Burroughs, 71, former governor of New Mexico.

Burroughs, a native of Robert Lee, who moved to Lubbock County in 1917, died Sunday in a Dallas hospital while being treated for a lung infection.

The graveside rites at 6:30 p.m. and memorial services set for 1:30 p.m. (MDT) Wednesday in Portales Presbyterian Church are under the direction of Wheeler Mortuary.

After being graduated with a degree in agriculture from Texas Tech University in 1929, Burroughs taught school several years. In 1942 he established a peanut mill in Portales which became one of the largest in the nation. Another processing facility is operated by Burroughs' company in Lewisville.

Burroughs was elected to the New Mexico House of Representatives in 1956. He ran for governor two years later and won over Republican incumbent Ed Mechem. His 1960 bid for re-election failed, as he lost to Mechem by less than 2,000 votes.

As governor, Burroughs obtained passage of the State Personnel Law, designed to eliminate the political spoils system in the state.

Survivors include his wife, Jean; four daughters, Jane Downs of Santa Ana, Calif., Nan Anthony of Bethesda, Md., Karen Marchman of Portales and Beinda Burroughs of Denver, Colo.; four sisters, Reeta Self of Lubbock, Opal Allen of Lovington, Amertious Ansley of Albuquerque and Pearl Barnes of Durango, Colo.; and a brother, Col. Neal Burroughs of Honolulu.

Actor Assists In Arrest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Terry Carter wasn't following a script Monday night when he chased a man through Washington's streets and helped make an arrest.

It only seemed like old times for Carter, who for seven years played New York City Detective Joe Brodhurst on the "McCloud" television series.

"I really had no choice, Carter said after the incident Monday night. "I got carried away."

Carter, on business for a film production company he operates, was in his car when a man ran from a restaurant followed by a woman yelling, "Stop, thief!"

Police said Carter drove after the man, running red lights, cutting off cars and jumping curbs.

When the man boarded a city bus, Carter stopped the vehicle with his car, went aboard and seized the him. He placed him in his car, but the man bolted toward the Greyhound bus terminal.

Carter said he then moved his car against the curb and grabbed the man again. Carter took him back to the restaurant and called police.

The man, identified as Oscar Lee Johnson, 22, of Washington, was arrested and charged with robbery for stealing a purse.

"I guess I'm still playing that role," Carter said, recalling his "McCloud" days.

Globe Stores To Be Closed By Walgreen

The Walgreen Co. of Deerfield, Ill., has announced it will close its Globe discount stores by Aug. 31, including the Lubbock store at 3201 Ave. Q.

Current plans call for the leasing of the Lubbock store and 12 other units to K-Mart Corp. of Troy, Mich.

K-Mart officials said the Avenue Q store will be closed for a period of time for remodeling, but will reopen later in the year under the K-Mart banner.

Twenty-one stores in Texas, Arizona, Louisiana and New Mexico are affected by the move. Walgreen has already closed seven Globe stores and will close two more June 30, officials said. A total of 30 locations are involved.

Negotiations with several parties are in progress in connection with 17 Globe stores, according to Walgreen officials. The firm will assign its leases or will sublease a total of 13 stores to K-Mart Corp.

For the year ended Aug. 31, the Globe division reported a pre-tax operating loss of $10 million.

Court Upholds Prison Term

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld the 40-year prison sentence imposed against William A.H. Williams, convicted of extortion in the 1974 abduction of former Atlanta Constitution editor Reg. Murphy.

Williams originally was convicted in 1974 in Key West, Fla., and sentenced to 40 years in prison.

But the 5th Circuit Court overturned that conviction, citing pre-trial publicity. The court also said the prosecutor erred by making an inflammatory statement to the jury in his closing argument.

Williams was retried at Key West, convicted a second time and again sentenced to 40 years in prison.

At both trials Williams, a former Lilburn, Ga., contractor, pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Williams, serving his sentence at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, will be eligible for parole in six years.

Murphy, now editor and publisher of The San Francisco Examiner, said he was kidnapped at gunpoint Feb. 20, 1974.

Group To Consider Two Applications

A-J Austin Bureau AUSTIN — Two applications from Lubbock have been set for consideration by the Texas Health Facilities Commission at its voting session.

Home Help Care, Inc., is seeking to provide nursing care, physical therapy, medical social services, and related services within the 15 counties comprising State Health Service Area No. 2.

Visiting Nurse Service, Inc., is seeking to provide nursing and other services, including insurance physicals in patients' homes, within the 15-county area.

Both applications were postponed from earlier sessions.

Senator Cancels NY Financial Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire dealt New York City's chances for economic recovery another serious blow today when he canceled a scheduled Senate Banking Committee hearing.

In a single-page statement released just hours after city labor talks unexpectedly broke down, the committee chairman from Wisconsin said:

"I agreed to hold the May 24 hearings only on the condition that certain actions would be accomplished by parties in New York City and New York State before that date. None of these actions have been accomplished to date."

An aide, noting that the Senate takes a Memorial holiday recesses all next week, said a hearing could be held no earlier than early June, but that no date has been set.

The hearing was crucial to the city's chances of avoiding bankruptcy.

Without a hearing, the full Senate would be unable to take up legislation designed to keep the city solvent. The federal government's current $2.3 billion seasonal loan program runs out June 30, and city leaders and Carter administration officials say the city was likely to go bankrupt sometime in July if the program were not extended or replaced.

In canceling the hearing, Proxmire reiterated that various city and state agreements were necessary before his committee could proceed.

Proxmire was referring to efforts to conclude the labor negotiations, construct a financing plan, enact legislation in Albany that would extend the borrowing power of the Municipal Assistance Corp. and establish a long-term fiscal monitor to replace the current Emergency Financial Control Board.

"This information is of considerable importance in developing a hearing record on the basis of which the committee and the Senate will be able to make an informed decision," Proxmire said.

It was the same theme Proxmire has sounded repeatedly during the spring in resisting pressure from the administration and Mayor Edward Koch to go ahead even without the various agreements in place.

In New York, union leaders representing a coalition of 225,000 employees charged that city officials had made last-minute "contract retrogressions" Monday night, slashing their offer to the unions and further setting back attempts to complete a plan for New York's financial future.

"He reduced the offer and increased the giveaways," one union official who asked not to be identified said of Koch. "We were very, very close to an agreement" when the talks were hung up by a combination of "the nature of the increase and what the giveaways would be."

The union official said the city's "untenable position" came "without any explanation, and we responded."

The sudden breakout was a surprise since the night session began with high hopes that a settlement was close. Agreement with the unions would supply the key to complicated financial recovery efforts involving the city, the state and the federal government.

Ex-Underworld Chief Dies In New York

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Former underworld chief Joseph Colombo Sr., left almost totally paralyzed by an assassin's bullets seven years ago, died at St. Luke's Hospital here, hospital officials said today. He was 55.

Colombo, gunned down in 1971 at an Italian-American Day rally in Columbus Circle in mid-Manhattan, died Monday night, the hospital said. He had been admitted in a semicomatose state on May 6.

Dr. John C. Bivona Jr., who was attending Colombo, said death resulted from long-term complications stemming from his injuries. The immediate cause of death was cardiac arrest, he said.

A hospital spokesman said the former mob leader "passed away very quietly."

Colombo had been unable to lead an active life as a businessman, an Italian-American civic leader and, according to authorities, one of the nation's most powerful underworld leaders since he was shot in the head at close range three times during the rally.

He required round-the-clock nursing care. He could not talk nor write, and, except for the thumb and forefinger on his right hand, he could not move. For much of time since the Italian Unity Day rally shooting, he was semicomatose.

A co-founder of the Italian-American Civil Rights League, Colombo was shot by Jerome Johnson on June 28, 1971. Johnson, 24, was fatally shot on the spot. Johnson was not a known member of the underworld, but the shooting was considered by authorities to be part of a feud with the Gallo crime family.

Immediately afterwards, power-hungry mobsters seized whatever Colombo's associates could not protect in the Colombo crime empire.

In 1969 Colombo was identified in the Congressional Record as a commissioner of the Cosa Nostra, as it was then called, and as a boss of the former Joseph Profaci crime family.

Arrested many times, his official record consisted of only minor convictions for disorderly conduct in connection with gambling activities.

Colombo was an early protégé of the late Carlo Gambino, reputed to be the boss of bosses of organized crime.

Police Search For Suspect

Lubbock police today were still seeking a 23-year-old Mexican-American man in connection with the early morning slaying Monday of a 44-year-old city man.

Police found Dennis J. Piens of 7502 Ave. H, No. 17, clutching a knife and lying face-up in the 400-block of E. 34th Street about 12:40 a.m. Monday.

Piens was pronounced dead at 2:50 a.m. at Methodist Hospital, police said. The knife reportedly belonged to Piens' assailant and may have been taken away from him after Piens was stabbed.

Motorists heading west on E. 34th Street told police they saw the victim walk into the roadway, approach another vehicle ahead of them and fall to his knees.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack ruled homicide. Reports indicated Piens suffered an apparent stab wound in the lower left chest.

There reportedly was no blood on the knife held by the victim.

The incident apparently stemmed from an argument at a club in the 400-block of E. 34th Street.

Services for Piens are pending with Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home.

Dow Jones Off 5.37 At 850.05

NEW YORK (AP) — A warning of more bad inflation news in the immediate future helped push stock prices into a moderate decline today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial was off 5.37 at 850.05.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 4-5 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market was confronted with a forecast from Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, that consumer price index readings for both April and May are likely to look "pretty bad."

The April figure is due to be released a week from Wednesday — to be followed two days later by the May wholesale price index.

Analysts also pointed out that the support the market has received lately from a rallying dollar was missing today. The dollar slipped a bit against most leading European currencies.

In contrast with the overall trend, gaming stocks extended their recent sharp advance with the first casino expected to open in Atlantic City, N.J. later this week.

Bally Manufacturing rose 1 1/2 to 34; Playboy Enterprises 1/4 to 16 1/2, and Caesars World 1/4 to 21 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 27 to 55.16. But the American Stock Exchange market value index gained 13 to 145.98.

Volume on the Big Board reached 13.89 million shares by noon, against 11.59 million at the same point Monday.

Enrollment Drops In Schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Public school enrollment declined in 26 states between 1971 and 1976, but the cost of school operations rose sharply in all 50 states during the same five years, the government reported today.

Enrollment dropped 2.3 percent nationwide while costs were rising 56 percent during the period, it said.

The costs of running elementary and secondary schools rose in amounts ranging from 16.4 percent in Hawaii to 95.2 percent in Alabama, the National Institute of Education said in a 466-page report prepared for educators and made available to UPI.

The buff-colored book, "Declining Enrollment: The Challenge of the Coming Decade," warned school districts to carefully plan ways to cope with declining enrollment and face problems in the future.

The report said political and educational officials have cause for concern but should not panic over the figures. It said careful planning is needed to balance further cost increases against declines in enrollment.

"The lowered enrollment is expected to continue well into the 1980s," said the institute, an arm of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Declines in some areas were due to population shifts, said the report. But the overall decrease is due to the fact that Americans are growing older and not as many couples are having babies.

During the five-year period, school attendance increased in 14 states: Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Texas, Utah and Wisconsin.

Massachusetts by far has the biggest enrollment increase at 14.3 percent. Arizona was second at 13.5, New Hampshire third at 11.0 and Florida fourth with a 9.6 percent enrollment increase.

The biggest enrollment drops were in Kansas with 11.1 percent, North Dakota with 10.4 and Iowa with 10.1.

But the surprising part of the report was the contrasting cost increases in all 50 states.

In 43 states, it cost at least 49 percent more to operate primary and secondary schools in 1976 than it did in 1971. The increase was more than 80 percent in Alabama, Arizona, Massachusetts, Montana, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

"While frustrating to some," the report said, "the lack of one-to-one correspondence between changes in enrollment and the movement of school expenditures has been the result of at least four influences: rising prices, rising professional employment, fixed charges and service delivery methods."

The institute also said there are two popular theories on how declining enrollment will effect education:

— It will be highly disruptive to quality because of unmanageable revenue shortfalls and other problems.

— It will actually result in long-sought improvements through smaller classes and equalized funding.

"A mounting body of research, however, questions both of these extreme views," the report said. "It finds, instead, that declining enrollment has failed thus far to provoke any major shifts in the quality and character of local school services."

Judge Ignores Probation Bid

Dist. Judge Robert C. Wright has assessed a defendant a four-year prison term in a case in which the prosecution as well as the defense recommended probation.

Wright assessed the punishment to Dennis Eugene Wilhite, 31, of 1712 B 45th St.

Wilhite had been convicted by a jury May 2 in Wright's 137th District Court of possession of marijuana.

Testimony indicated that on July 16, 1977, he was in a car with two companions in the Buffalo Springs Lake area on the date in question. Prosecutors alleged that approximately 6.8 ounces of marijuana was found inside the auto.

The defense argued Wilhite was a victim of circumstances.

Records show Wilhite was assessed a three-year probation sentence here in 1966 for passing a forged instrument. He also was convicted of theft in Oregon in 1974 and sentenced to three years in prison, records indicate.

Despite the defendant's recent, assistant district attorney Phil Gamble told Wright that he would recommend a substantial probation sentence. Gene Shooter, adult probation officer, testified at the punishment hearing that he thought Wilhite would make a "likely" candidate for probation.

Man Locates Family Car

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Floyd Powell was only 11 years old when his father sold the family's 1930 Model A Ford in 1945, but he remembered the truck so well that he was able to pick it out at an antique auto flea market in Indianapolis last summer.

"When I walked around the rear of it and saw the way the tailgate was constructed, I thought, 'This is it,'" he said.

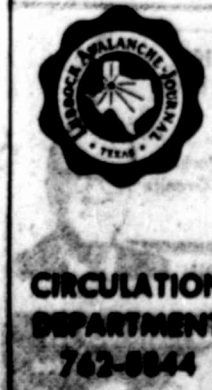

His father, who died several years ago, bought the truck in 1938. It had been used as a school bus, so a new cab had to be mounted on the chassis. Powell's father and grandfather then went to a sawmill, got some wood, and built a 12-foot bed on the back to haul farm produce to market.

The grain bed is still intact, including the custom tailgate they fashioned for emptying grain.

Rare Skeleton To Go On Display

By PETER GILLINS
 JENSEN, Utah (UPI) — The rare skeleton of a dog-sized baby stegosaurus that died at least 135 million years ago is being carefully removed from a quarry at Dinosaur National Monument for public display.

Scientists have known about the "remarkably complete" skeleton for 13 years, but only recently decided to remove it from a sandstone ledge inside the monument visitor center in Jensen and put it on display.

"In 100 years of collecting Jurassic dinosaurs in this country, this marks the second baby stegosaurus ever found,"

King said the fossil of the baby was provocative because it lacked characteristic plates.

"That raises questions like, did the plates appear after it was grown? Or were they like antlers on a deer—falling off with the seasons? Or maybe only males had plates and are we looking at a female?"

Plaster casts of the bones will be circulated for study in the scientific community, he said. A model of the skeleton will be sent to Yale, which has the other baby stegosaurus.

King said the whole skeleton is about the "size of a German Shepherd, a nice little pet." When full-grown, the stegosaurus was the size of an elephant.

Removal of the skeleton from the cliff is a break in quarry policy. The goal of the scientists has been to expose bones in the sandstone wall and leave them in place so visitors could see how they looked in the ancient stream bed where the carcasses were washed into sort of a "dinosaur logjam."

"The one thing visitors have asked to see over the years is a mounted dinosaur," King said. "This is an attempt to answer that problem without using up a great deal of space, time and money."

"These bones are very small and difficult to see in the quarry face."

He said the project should be finished within about two years. Meantime, the public may watch scientists as they work on the fossil.

Science Today

said park paleontologist Russel King. "The first one was found 100 years ago in Como Bluff near Medicine Bow, Wyo."

"The remains of baby dinosaurs are extremely rare," he added. "They were smaller and tended to decay faster than adults simply because they were made of cartilage. And predators could gnaw on little bones and drag them away easier."

King conducted a news briefing on the excavation, which he said is 60-70 percent complete.

Antelope Sent To Israeli Preserve

NEW YORK (AP) — A dozen rare antelope — four pair of Arabian oryx and four addax — traveled Monday to Israel, where they will become breeding stock at a wildlife preserve for biblical animals.

The shipment is part of an international effort to save the endangered oryx — a species of antelope believed to be the basis of the mythical unicorn and return them to their biblical habitat.

The oryx were provided by the Greater Los Angeles Zoo and are headed for the Hai Bar Preserve near Eilat. The preserve now has about 350 animals.

The animals arrived Saturday from Los Angeles and had been scheduled to depart from Kennedy International Airport at 7 p.m. Sunday, but the El Al cargo plane's flight was delayed by an engine problem, an airline spokesman said.

The four female addax, a desert antelope with curved horns, were to join a herd already at Hai Bar, which is Hebrew for "wildlife."

Only about 200 oryx are known to exist, all of them in zoos or preserves.

The $170,000 to purchase and transport the oryx came from Israel, the Hai Bar Society of Israel and the Holy Land Conservation Fund of the United States.

Bill Clark, a member of the Sierra Club and a participant in the conservation fund, said the oryx were in separate wooden crates and that lengths of hose were used to protect their delicate horns.

They were sedated, he said, and "didn't seem to mind the delay in getting off the ground" in New York.

Raising Of Old Ship Sought By Writer

ARVADA, Colo. (AP) — Author Clive Cussler, whose best-selling novel "Raise the Titanic" told of the fictional retrieval of the ill-fated Cunard White Star liner, now wants to raise the remains of a ship that sank almost 200 years ago.

The vessel is John Paul Jones' Revolutionary War raider-flagship, the Bonhomme Richard, which lies in a channel grave some 3 1/2 miles off the east-central coast of England.

U.S. Firms Will Show Russians New Devices To Aid Security

By GERALD NADLER
 NEW YORK (UPI) — American manufacturers are to show their latest security devices — including microphone pickups and beam-guided "people trackers" — at an exhibition starting today in the Soviet Union.

The equipment is ostensibly aimed at crime control and also includes burglary alarms, locking devices and safe protectors.

"I know it's taking place and that's all," said James Robb, director of East-West trade at the Department of Commerce. "It's a Soviet-organized show. No one in the U.S. government is involved."

But Marshall Goldman, a specialist on Soviet economy and a professor at Wellesley College, said such an exhibition is "terrible" because of the possible end-use of such equipment in Russia. He noted the Soviet Union has one of the world's largest political prisoner populations.

"The onus would be on the United States if the United States gave licenses for highly advanced crime prevention or detection equipment," Goldman said.

"An American manufacturer of such equipment who wants to go to the Soviet Union to sell should have his conscience to deal with."

The exhibit, "Security Alarm Equipment-78," will run from today to June 1 at Moscow's Sokolniki Park exhibition center, according to invitations sent out to U.S. firms by the USSR Chamber of Commerce.

An expert in the security field, Ed Griebel of Griebel Associates in New York, said, "The equipment listed in the invitation and an accompanying pamphlet includes some of the latest techniques known to us."

The exhibitors will show gadgets ranging from microphone pickups and television monitors to beams that can detect a person by the temperature changes in a room.

Although the devices are specialized, a Soviet official at the U.S.-Soviet Trade and Economic Council in New York said the exhibit will be open to the public.

But neither the Council nor the Commerce Department would give out the names or number of the firms that will exhibit. That information will be available in a catalogue at the exhibit, a Soviet official at the council said.

Although the Soviet Union says it has virtually solved its crime problem on grounds a Communist society rules out greed, the Soviet Chamber of Commerce invitation listed the themes of the exhibit as:

- "Detectors for protection of doors, windows, shopwindows, safes, cupboards, individual articles."
- "Equipment for premises, home accommodations, hotels protection."
- "Systems against burglary."
- "Electronic combination switching devices, code locks and automatic ticket gate systems used at... enterprises and institutions."
- "Receiver control devices, accumu-lators, control panels and stations."

The "receiver control devices" category, included, according to an accompanying Soviet Chamber of Commerce pamphlet:

"Devices to receive and register alarm signals, transmitted along communication lines, radio channels, telephone cables, central stations."

But Commerce Department officials said the exhibit was not a duplication of the Criminal Technology, or Crimtekhnika, show of 1974, which caused protests in liberal circles in the United States.

According to the U.S. Export Control Act, before crime control equipment can even be exhibited, exhibitors must receive a valid license from the Department of Commerce.

"We have licensed one participant regarding a form of crime control and detection equipment," said Larry Brady, assistant director of the Commerce Department's Office of Export Administration.

"There are four pending applications," he said.

Brady explained that for non-crime control equipment or hardware not otherwise controlled — items that are non-strategic, not in short supply or not harmful to U.S. foreign policy — no special license is required for exhibit or export.

Commerce Department stressed repeatedly the United States was not involved as a participant in the exhibit.

"We ourselves are not mounting any exhibition," said Blair Thompson, director of fairs to the Soviet Union.

Man Trying To Help Young Boy

NEW CARROLLTON, Md. (AP) — Ronald Storke, a foreman for a masonry construction firm, blows on little Christopher Garner's toes every night.

It was part of the tucking-in ritual when Christopher's mother was alive, and Storke, 28, figures it is a tradition worth keeping as he raises Christopher, 5, to manhood.

In 1976, when Christopher was 3, Storke had been living with Christopher's mother, Nancy Louise Spear, for two years. They planned to announce their engagement that Christmas, he said, and to marry one month later. He had made Miss Spear's son his son, he said.

But Miss Spear was murdered one week before Christmas in Washington, D.C., shot in a crime police say has not been solved. She was 21.

"On the one hand, all I could think was that she was gone and I was living with this terrible anxiety and grief," Storke said. "But then on the other hand, there was Chris, and my knowing it was my responsibility to keep him a normal child."

The effort he made to help Christopher cope with his mother's death helped convince a judge that Storke should have permanent custody.

"I felt that he had done a superb job of bringing the child through an emotional trauma of great magnitude," said Judge Robert Woods of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court. "He had really become the psychological parent of the boy, though he wasn't his natural one. I believe he is really committed to that child."

Storke says that is exactly the way it is. Christopher had been "super close to his Mommy," Storke said. "After it happened, I told him his Mommy had had an accident and had gone to God and Jesus and Mother Mary in heaven."

Sometimes, after the murder, Storke recalled, he would hear Christopher in his room, "crying and talking to his Mommy and then to God and saying it wasn't fair he should have her instead of her little boy who needed her."

"I'd feel like crying myself but I'd wait before I'd go in and talk to him, because I wanted him to have those moments of grief by himself."

Then Storke decided that it would be best for Christopher if he won permanent custody.

It took more than a year. He had to fight the boy's natural father and a maternal aunt and her husband.

Woods' decision last March 30 — awarding permanent custody to a man who was not the father and not legally related at all — is believed to be one of the first decisions of its kind in Maryland.

Storke said he plans to start adoption proceedings soon.

"He's mine really, in every sense, but that way he'll officially be it. And I definitely want to change his name to Storke."

Michael Richardson, his lawyer, called Storke "an amazing man."

"During the hearing, we asked him how he tries to make up for the fact that the boy has no mother, and he said he does the things she used to do for him, like blow on his toes at night."

"Here's this tough guy with a tough job, but he's so sensitive to the needs of a little boy. Very few natural parents get into a relationship that goes into that one."

Casino Owner In Atlantic City Expects Business To Be Good

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — If Mickey Mouse were a gambling man he would love Atlantic City.

This decrepit resort on the Jersey shore is shaking with anticipation, the kind that shook Anaheim, Calif., and Orlando, Fla., when Walt Disney started building amusement parks.

The 43,000 folks who live here are lusting after a pot of gold, a jackpot they are likely to find before the week is out.

The high-rollers are coming. There is little doubt that by Friday the first legal gambling casino east of Las Vegas will get down to serious business.

It was a make-believe game for four days over the weekend as the operators of the $50 million Resorts International Hotel-Casino allowed special guests to pretend to be big spenders at the gaming tables with phony money.

The Disney-like fun and games end Friday. After that it will take hard money to gamble.

And this week's historic opening of the first East Coast casino is expected to enrich Atlantic City like Disney World saved Orlando.

But there are some differences. "In 10 years you're going to have a Disneyland with slots, a town geared to the hedonism that we need," said Reese Paley, a millionaire owner of an expensive gift shop on the boardwalk.

Local leaders figure there could be as many as four casinos in operation by 1980.

Resorts International plans to open another hotel within three years.

For four nights through Sunday the new casino conducted dry runs to test its 1,200 slot machines and train the card dealers and croupiers at the 82 gaming tables.

Even the head of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission dropped by in the wee hours Sunday and his wife got an itch to gamble.

"When I told my wife she can't play the slots she broke down and cried," said Joseph P. Lordi.

James M. Crosby, the top boss of Resorts International, threw a party when it was all over and predicted his club will rank with the biggest in Las Vegas.

"We think we will compare with MGM (the MGM Grand Hotel) in Las Vegas that did about $100 million," the businessman said. "We think we can do that and perhaps more."

Resorts will feature craps, blackjack, baccarat, roulette, the Big 6 Wheel and slot machines in the old Chalfonte-Haddon Hall Hotel, once one of the premier convention sites in the nation.

Crosby, whose firm also operates two casinos in the Bahamas, estimated the slot machines took in some $20,000 on the first day.

Walter I. Rogers, vice president of casino operations for Resorts International, estimated there were some 4,000 people in the casino Saturday night during the biggest of the preview nights.

The guests were handed fistfuls of play money to try their luck at the tables. Despite some breakdown, when the machines first started spinning, Rogers said "quite a few" guests won $500 jackpots on the quarter machines.

A former resident of Las Vegas, who didn't want to be identified, wasn't impressed. He said he waited 10 minutes at a disabled slot machine and complained there weren't enough change girls.

"This is a rinky-dink operation," he said.

Mike Santaniello, senior counsel for the Casino Control Commission, was watching the operation closely.

"We expected some problems with the slot machines," he said. "But that's one purpose of the practice, to get out all the bugs."

Another purpose of the "dry runs" which ended Sunday was to train the 500 croupiers and card dealers.

Conferees Rescue Gas Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House energy conferees today turned back a last-minute attempt to derail a proposed natural gas pricing compromise.

The action cleared the way for expected approval of the plan that would free natural gas from federal price controls in 1985.

Conference leaders predicted the proposal would be approved later today and then ratified by Senate negotiators.

House negotiators rejected, 17 to 8, an attempt by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., who opposes deregulation, to get the panel to sidestep the gas issue and send to the floor three relatively minor parts of President Carter's five-section energy bill on which tentative agreement had already been reached.

Moffett claimed the gas pricing compromise would be a "burden to consumers" and should be rejected.

"The mentality that has guided us has been to do anything to get a bill and at any cost," Moffett, who favors continued price controls, said.

But conference chairman Harley M. Staggers, D-W. Va., claimed the compromise, which resulted from six months of intensive negotiations, "is the best hope we have for resolution of this issue."

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, the top House negotiator, said there are 13 firm votes for the plan among the 25 House negotiators. And the Senate conference leader, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., predicted a 10-7 margin among Senate conferees.

Acceptance of the compromise would finally break the logjam that has stalled action on the president's energy program since the congressional negotiators took up natural gas pricing last Dec. 2.

The compromise would lift federal price controls from newly discovered natural gas on Jan. 1, 1985, while providing annual price increases of about 10 percent in the interim.

Congressional economists say the bill would cost consumers about $9 billion more through 1985, compared with the status quo.

Once the natural gas plan is acted upon, conference leaders hope to send it and three other sections of the energy plan on which tentative agreement has been reached back to each chamber for a final vote.

Energy taxes — including the president's controversial proposal for taxing domestic crude oil — are now expected to be jettisoned and taken up later as separate legislation.

Conference aides said dozens of points are still in dispute involving natural gas pricing — issues that conferees decided to let the staff work out.

Although most are minor technical differences between House and Senate versions, staff members say some involve policy questions — such as how gas used in agriculture is to be treated and how stored gas is to be priced.

"There are many potential pitfalls. We're a long way from being ready for the signing ceremony," said staff member Betsy Moler.

She said it was doubtful the natural-gas bill could get to the Senate floor until the end of July.

And then, a filibuster by Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and other opponents of deregulation is viewed as a near-certainly.

Everything the conference committee produces must be ratified intact by both houses to be enacted.

Aides said there also remain some differences between House and Senate staffs on details of the three relatively minor parts of the energy program — energy conservation, coal conversion and electric rates — that could delay final floor action.

On another major legislative front, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd is slowly stepping up the pressure on leaders of a filibuster against proposed labor law revisions.

Byrd said on Monday he will initiate daily attempts to limit debate on the controversial bill beginning June 7, two days after the Senate returns from its week-long Memorial Day recess.

Republican opponents of the bill have been filibustering to prevent the bill from coming up for a final vote.

The West Virginia Democrat also gave opponents a gentle reminder that there are limits on how often a senator can speak, even during a filibuster.

Under the rules, a senator can only make two speeches on a single subject within one legislative day, which can last for several calendar days. Senators can be blocked from making more than two speeches on one subject if any of their colleagues objects.

Several senators have delivered more than two speeches since the filibuster began. While there have been no objections raised thus far, Byrd's comment made the point to opponents that they have been permitted to filibuster the bill at their leisure.

"It was just a gentle reminder that we do have rules and if they're going to filibuster, they're going to have to do it under the rules," Byrd said in a brief interview.

While Byrd said he would have the Senate vote once a day on limiting debate, opponents are considered likely to fend off at least two efforts to choke off the filibuster. It takes 60 votes to limit debate.

The legislation, intended to overhaul the nation's labor laws, has the backing of the administration and organized labor. Business groups oppose it, claiming it would give unions an unfair advantage over business owners and would be especially harmful to small businesses.

The bill would set deadlines for union representation elections and toughen penalties against companies that violate labor laws. One new penalty would provide time and one-half back pay for workers fired illegally during a union organizing drive.

City Gets Proposal On Water

75,000 acres of land in Bailey and Lamb counties.

Lubbock has contracted for 37 percent of the available water from Lake Meredith, which is approximately 34 million gallons per day (104.3 acre-feet), maximum. This equals approximately 38,000 acre-feet annually.

The 1978 allocation of lake water to the city has been set at 70 percent of the city's contracted supply, equaling 26,000 acre-feet.

Wyatt said the city estimates that its present groundwater reserve contains about 1.5 million acre-feet of recoverable water. The pipeline which delivers this water to the city is reportedly capable of delivering 41 million gallons per day, or about 46,000 acre-feet annually.

Lubbock also has access to groundwater reserves located beneath the city, and a small reserve near Shallowater.

These two water supplies, Wyatt said, are tapped only during high water-use periods such as droughts, or in emergencies such as a pipeline rupture.

Wyatt referred to talk about the city constructing a reservoir on the Double Mountain Fork of the Brazos River near Justiceburg, but said that samples from that site do not presently meet federal water quality regulations.

"I do not foresee an immediate water crisis for the City of Lubbock. However, it is my opinion that the city's current water supply sources are not adequate to meet its long-term future water needs and further that the Justiceburg reservoir, if constructed, would not solve these needs," Wyatt said.

package deals don't fit each individual.

Since the agent has only been trained sketchily in the details of the supplementary insurance, he cannot fully explain the policy to the senior citizen. Most agents will stress that people buy all their insurance through one agent who is familiar with individual needs and problems, Cleland said.

"Know what's in the contract," Cleland urged. "It's enforceable by law." Most of the problems don't involve unethical or illegal behavior, he said, but a misunderstanding of the contract.

However, if the agency selling the insurance is at fault, it is usually willing to adjust, Cleland said. Threat of revocation of license by the State Board of Insurance is usually enough to keep most firms honest, he said.

"When you're dealing with the elderly you have to be super careful," Lubbock agent John Abney said. It is usually wise to involve the children of the elderly person in the transaction, Abney said, to insure complete understanding between the buyer and the agent.

In addition to problems of understanding between the buyer and agent, cost of the supplementary insurance is often prohibitory for people with limited incomes.

Medicare helps pay for hospitalization charges, stays in skilled nursing homes, physicians' charges and associated health costs. But Medicare has a $140 deductible level.

Supplementary insurance is designed to pay costs below the $140 deductible limit. However, premiums for average supplementary coverage average $13 a month, which may be equally hard for the senior citizen to pay.

"They are overpriced," Pectol said of such policies. He hears complaints about the costs of the policies from people in the Senior Citizens Center but can do nothing after the insurance has been bought.

its students to Stewart; Mahon to Hardwick; Martin to Maedgen; Wheatley to Overton; and Iles to Wheelock.

Irons' letter stated: "A minority student in a majority school will not be transported from his home school. A majority student in a minority school will not be transported from his home school. These students may follow the regular transfer procedure by requesting to be transported with his or her grade."

That is, a white student attending Posey will not be required to go to Stubbs, and a black or Mexican-American child at Rush will not be required to attend Mahon. Such students may, however, request assignment to their sister school.

"A student who is scheduled to be transported during the first half of the year and enrolls prior to Oct. 30, 1978, will be transported at that time with his or her grade. Any student scheduled for transportation enrolling on or after Oct. 30, 1978, will be transported the last half of the year," Irons said in his letter.

Thus, a second-grader who has a last name beginning with A and who enrolls at Rush in November will be assigned to Mahon for the second semester, because he will have missed out on his scheduled reassignment.

"Children in the same family may be transported together," Irons said.

"If a student chooses to be transported with a brother or sister and it is not his or her time to be transported, the student will still be required to be transported with his or her grade level when scheduled," Irons said.

The integration plan will necessitate busing about 2,000 elementary students a day.

"Should a child miss the bus, it will be the responsibility of the parent to provide transportation to the assigned school," the superintendent's letter said.

"The neighborhood school will have no provisions for keeping a child who misses the bus."

Irons said all students "will complete the registration process at their home (neighborhood) schools" regardless of any reassignments.

PTA To Fight TV Licensing

CHICAGO (AP) — The national Parent-Teacher Association is threatening to fight against license renewal for network-owned television stations in Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit unless they cut down on sex and violence.

PTA president Grace Baisinger said Monday licenses of the five stations involved will be subject to routine review in 1979 by the Federal Communications Commission. She said the PTA may act against the stations if they fail to cut down next fall on what her organization considers objectionable programming.

"The PTA is responding to what we feel is an irresponsible increase in offensive programming — particularly violence in prime-time movies and 'sexploitation' shows," Mrs. Baisinger said.

She said the final decision on whether to challenge the license renewals would be based on the monitoring of prime-time programs by members of the PTA.

High Court Jolts OSHA

sending opinion, in which Justices Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist joined.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., who missed arguments in the case because of illness, took no part in the decision.

OSHA inspections long have been controversial, and the issue has been used by some political conservatives as a rallying point against expansive government regulation.

Many private businesses — mostly small businesses — have complained about arrogant and nit-picking inspectors.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall last May responded to such criticism, promising that OSHA inspectors would concentrate on major occupational health and safety hazards.

"There will be no more petty regulations like those dealing with coat hooks in bathrooms," Marshall said. "We're going to stop the absurd practice of printing 15 pages of regulations, in small type, on the safety of ladders."

Inspections still may be made, despite management objections, but inspectors must first obtain a search warrant after proving that there is good reason to believe that safety violations are present in a certain workplace.

The legal issue reached the nation's highest court after F.G. "Bill" Barlow, a Pocatello, Idaho, electrical and plumbing contractor who employs some 35 persons, refused in 1975 to let an OSHA inspector enter his plant without a warrant.

The Labor Department, citing a portion of the federal law that created OSHA as authorizing such entry "at reasonable times . . . to inspect and investigate during regular working hours," sought a court order forcing Barlow to submit to an inspection.

Barlow also went to court, and succeeded in convincing a three-judge federal panel that the inspection without a warrant violated his constitutional right to privacy.

"We felt all along that we were right, that this was a violation of the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution," Barlow said today.

Since the 1976 decision, OSHA has not been allowed to make unannounced inspections of Idaho workplaces. But because of interim actions by Justice Rehnquist, OSHA inspections in all other states have been carried out until today.

Barlow's test case attracted "much attention, sparking numerous 'friend-of-the-court' briefs in which government, business and labor officials presented their views."

The AFL-CIO and environmental groups such as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth backed OSHA's inspection system. They were joined by state authorities in Minnesota, Kentucky, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming.

Siding with Barlow were state officials in Idaho and Utah as well as the American Conservative Union, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Federation of Independent Business and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Gun Owners Up In Arms

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms recently asked for public comment on proposed new gun regulations, project officer James A. Hunt thought perhaps 7,000 firearms owners would write letters to the bureau.

But the bureau has been hit with a blizzard of mail. More than 150,000 letters have been received to date, and each day letter carriers bring thousands more.

The overwhelming majority of writers are angry gun owners adamantly opposed to the proposed regulations, which they view as a step toward national gun registration.

"I invite you personally to try and take my gun away — you might get it, but it will be when you pry my cold, dead fingers from it," said a Californian.

"We certainly don't need any more red tape, expense and paperwork where firearms are concerned, and we certainly don't need a national firearms registration program of any kind," said a Nebraska resident.

The proposals would require all new weapons to carry a federal serial number. Gun dealers would be required to promptly report all gun thefts and file quarterly reports stating the disposition of each firearm under their control. Information from the reports, which would not include the name or address of private purchasers, would be stored in a Treasury Department computer.

Treasury officials repeatedly have denied that the proposals amount to gun registration. But the National Rifle Association and other "gun lobby" spokesmen have warned the proposals amount to a first step toward national gun registration, and urged gun owners to protest.

Their urgings have not fallen on deaf ears.

Of the 37,000 letters which have been read to date, Hunt said, 34,400 oppose the proposals while 2,600 support them.

Congress also has gotten into the act. The House Appropriations Committee on Monday cut $4.2 million, the estimated annual cost of the program, from a $1.5 billion appropriation bill, and wrote into the measure a prohibition against using other funds for such a program.

In an accompanying report, the committee said its action was taken "to make abundantly clear to the bureau that it ought not to do by regulation what the Congress has not done by legislation."

The bureau contends the proposals would enable it to quickly trace the ownership of firearms involved in crimes.

Not all oppose the proposals. The National Council to Control Handguns supports the bureau. And a Californian voiced his support by stating in a letter that he "strongly favors Treasury Department regulations aimed at curbing illegal gun commerce."

Jury Will Consider Statement By Youth

By IRA PERRY

Avalanche-Journal Staff

PLAIN — A statement in which 18-year-old Ricardo Lopez purportedly admitted shooting Whitharral High School Principal Malcolm Omar Tripp will be admitted for juror's consideration when testimony begins here today.

Judge M.C. Ledbetter ruled the statement could be admitted for juror's consideration over the objections of the Littlefield youth's defense attorneys Patrick Abeyta and Willis Taylor, both of Lubbock.

Lopez was a freshman student at the school when the 31-year-old principal was slain on the steps just outside the front door of the school.

Sheriff's deputies said Tripp was shot twice in the back with a .32-caliber revolver in the April 7, 1977, incident.

Deputies arrested Lopez after he reportedly ran into a nearby grocery store, tossed a weapon on the counter and asked the clerk to call an ambulance.

Hours later Lopez reportedly signed a one-page statement admitting his involvement in Tripp's murder, but today Abeyta continued his argument that the confession and other oral statements may have been made while Lopez was under the influence of schizophrenic paranoia.

Dr. Richard Wall, a Lubbock clinical psychologist, said he ran two tests on Lopez a year after the incident that indicated the defendant was sane at that time, but showed symptoms consistent with a recent psychotic episode.

Abeyta asked whether Lopez's condition would have been obvious to the layman if that condition (schizophrenic paranoia), had occurred during Tripp's slaying, Wall said.

Special prosecutor John T. Montford, hired by Tripp's family to assist Hockley County Dist. Atty. Bill Boedecker, concentrated on testimony that Lopez was alert and unemotional when the statement was given. He also questioned Wall on his testimony that Lopez was "slow, careful and not willing to take risks."

Under Montford's questioning, Wall testified that, assuming Lopez acted the same way during Wall's tests that he did when police questioned him, he would have been sane.

Wall said, however, it would "be very difficult to go back a year and say that."

Wall also testified that during his examination Lopez talked of "shadows" and evil spirits, symptoms Wall said were typical of someone who underwent a schizophrenic episode.

Montford challenged that, asking Hockley County deputy Darrell Spence if Lopez made any reference to spirits, shadows or evil premonitions when he gave the statement.

"No sir, he didn't," Spence replied.

"Did you ever even ask him?" challenged Abeyta. Spence said he didn't.

With that, Ledbetter overruled Abeyta's motion to suppress the statement, clearing the way for jurors today to hear it.

Defense attorneys Monday indicated they will seek a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. Boedecker said the state will ask for a life sentence if Lopez is convicted.

He is being tried here on a charge of venue from Hockley County.

$2,000 In Goods Taken In Residential Burglary

Business and residential property crimes again were occupying most of the investigative time of Lubbock police today.

Mike Dan Burk of 1607-A Ave. X told officers someone pried a sliding-glass door at his apartment Monday and made off with almost $2,000 worth of goods including a stereo, television set and .22-caliber pistol.

Burglars got into a Gifford Hill building at 2323 Marshall St. by prying a door and made off with an undetermined amount of money from four vending machines. Reports indicated the machines were pried late Monday or early today.

Television sets reportedly were stolen from Dee Marie Morrison's 4901 4th St., No. 319A, residence and from the 2805 34th St. Book Exchange recently.

According to Vicki Ann Guess of 4429-B 31st St., a $300 55-gallon aquarium was stolen from the carport area of her home Sunday night. The complainant said she put the tank outside to dry after cleaning it.

Caution: Jogging may be hazardous to your health.

That's what a 31-year-old hairdresser found out Sunday when she was going through her paces on the parking lot at the Municipal Coliseum in the 2700-block of 4th Street.

Vicky Moreno of 2616 2nd Place said she heard what sounded like gunfire and simultaneously noticed the ground kick up.

The woman said she covered her face, fell to the ground and then looked around toward 4th Street, but could see nothing but heavy traffic.

The woman was not injured.

In reported break-ins Monday, Robert Smalley of 4420 10th St. said someone broke into his home over the weekend and stole six firearms and a stack of checks.

Both Cecil Dickey of Woodrow and Bobby Gene McGee of 313 Ave. V said tools were stolen from their businesses recently.

Dickey said someone stole $300 worth from his car lot and McGee said thieves took $400 worth of tools from a service station at 524 Idalou Rd.

Burglars took a $400 television from Victor Alvarez' 201 Cherry Ave. residence Monday, and Alan Odell of 3525-B 34th St. lost a $230 stereo during a break-in at his apartment in the last 10 days.

Joel W. Halberdier of Feagin Construction Co. said someone broke out four plate glass windows, 20 sheets of sheetrock and two garage locks recently at a house under construction in the 4600-block of 55th Drive. Halberdier of 2715 3rd St. said the damage amounted to several hundred dollars.

A Lubbock housewife was talking to a friend at the Monterey Shopping Center Monday, when a man, between 18 and 25 years old, exposed himself. The suspect reportedly fled on foot, but may have left the scene in a blue-and-white pickup truck.

A half dozen more Lubbockites were victimized by hubcap thieves recently, including Kelly Utley of 6118 Nashville Ave., Roger Andrews of 3302 26th St., Thomas Young of 1923 70th St., Joe Greer of 4412 57th St., Bryan Mason of 4345 28th St., No. 7, and Linda Romick of 4704 29th St.

Presbyterians Vote Against Gay Issue

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Overwhelmingly rejecting the ordination of practicing homosexuals, the United Presbyterian Church has taken the historic step of welcoming to its ministry gay men and women who seek to become heterosexual or remain celibate.

It was the first such explicit policy on homosexual clergy to be spelled out by a major Christian body.

The action by the church's 190th governing assembly late Monday came after an impassioned day of floor debate, culminating two years of study and wide controversy for the 2.6 million-member denomination.

"For the church to ordain a self-affirming, practicing homosexual person to ministry would be to act in contradiction to its charter and calling in Scripture," the assembly declared.

The ordination of practicing homosexuals failed on a show of hands, with an estimated 600 of 650 votes against.

And while ordination of celibate homosexuals passed by about 600 to 50, some delegates objected to allowing any homosexual to become a Presbyterian minister.

It is "a perversion of the gospel of grace," the Rev. Laura Jervis of New York City told the assembly after its vote.

Marshall's Bond Sale Bid Loses

Appellate justices Monday turned down without comment a Lubbock man's request for a new hearing in his suit to block the sale by the City of Lubbock of $26.4 million in municipal bonds.

James G. Marshall could not be reached for comment on the action by the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo. However, he repeatedly has claimed he will carry his case to the state's highest court if he does not win on the appellate level.

The longtime city hall critic lost his bid last month for the reversal of a district court's ruling that the 1977 election in which voters authorized The Amarillo court upheld the district court decision that pre-election and election procedures were legally conducted. Marshall claims in his suit that the election should be declared null because the ordinance authorizing it was defective.

City attorneys said they expected the appellate court to reject Marshall's motion for a new hearing in the case. The Lubbock man's next step is application to the Supreme Court for a hearing.

However, that court is very selective about about hearing only cases that can be applied broadly across the state, said James Brewster, city trial attorney.

If Marshall applies for a hearing before the high court and is rejected, he has indicated he may seek to transfer his case to the federal court system. City attorneys say they are not worried about that possibility, explaining they don't believe any federal questions are involved in the suit and it therefore would not be heard.

Only when all litigation is exhausted will the city be able legally to sell the general obligation bonds, proceeds of which will be used to finance improvements in the water supply, sewage system, streets, fire protection and storm sewers.

Civiletti Predicts Lawyer Reforms

BALTIMORE (AP) — Deputy U.S. Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti predicts the law profession will be subjected to more reform during the next decade than it has experienced in the past two centuries.

Civiletti, speaking to the 274 graduates of the University of Baltimore Law School, said a major change would be the "end of the general practice of law."

He said he expected development of specialists, increased use of para-professionals and new technology, non-court resolution of many conflicts and "wide-spread competitive advertising."

"You will see in the next 10 years more change in the practice of law than in the past 200 years," Civiletti said. "It is of the utmost importance for (lawyers) to recommit themselves to the ethical traditions of law, he added.

in the Convention Center, packed with observers and ablaze with television lights.

On the other side, Sandra Brawders, a Princeton theological seminary candidate for the ministry, had taken the floor during debate to dramatically acknowledge her homosexuality and declare:

"We can discover and find ways to share the delicate and lovely rainbow of acceptance under which God offers to meet us all."

Citing Scripture, the assembly said God intended "loving companionship" between male and female or celibacy, following Jesus' lifestyle, and that "the practice of homosexuality is sin."

However, the assembly said the homosexual condition itself ordinarily is not voluntarily chosen and is "more a sign of brokenness of God's world than of willful rebellion."

Repentant homosexuals able to redirect their desires toward heterosexual marriage or who remain celibate "can certainly be ordained" if otherwise qualified, the assembly declared, adding:

"Indeed, such candidates must be welcomed and must be free to share their full identity."

A major ecclesiastical body has never before openly taken that position, although homosexuals are generally assumed to have served as clergymen since ancient times.

On a plea by the Rev. John T. Conner of Eugene, Ore., the assembly adopted a provision that its ban on ordaining practicing homosexuals would not be used to punish those already ordained.

The assembly's action rejected the findings of a two-year study that favored allowing ordination of practicing homosexuals, a position that had triggered turmoil in the church.

The issue was raised by the 1975 application for ordination of William Silver, an avowed homosexual with a male mate, to the New York regional presbytery. It passed the question to the national assembly.

Silver told a news conference after the vote that he will continue to seek ordination to challenge the new policy.

Mahon Ducats Available

A limited number of tickets will be made available to the public for Saturday's Lions tribute to U.S. Rep. George Mahon, Art Cook, district governor of 2-72, announced Monday.

Mahon will be saluted for approximately one-half century of service at the governor's banquet, slated at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Civic Center.

The special tribute will be one of the highlights of a four-day district and state convention, which gets underway Thursday.

Tickets will be available at the office of the Lubbock Lions Club in Monterey Center through Thursday and will be on sale Friday and Saturday at the Civic Center.

Tickets are $7.50 each. Further details may be obtained by calling 797-4359.

Queen contests, ladies activities, report sessions, golf and tennis tournaments, a necrology ceremony and other events have been carded for the convention, expected to draw more than 3,000.

Jury Selected In Santa Fe Murder Trial

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A panel of seven women and five men were chosen to hear the murder trial of Kerry Rodney Lee after seven hours of questioning by attorneys and District Judge Maurice Sanchez.

The judge kept the court in session until 10:30 p.m. Monday in an order to get the jury seated for the trial of Lee, accused of the 1974 mutilation death of University of New Mexico student William Velten Jr.

The 12 jurors and four alternates were selected from a group of 120 prospective jurors who crowded into the courtroom in the first day of the trial. The potential jurors were questioned individually in the judge's chambers as well as in the courtroom.

Lee, 27, allegedly made a statement in connection with the Albuquerque killing of Velten after undergoing a religious conversion in South Carolina.

The alleged statement, which Sanchez had ruled earlier Monday can be introduced in the trial, helped gain freedom for four members of a California motorcycle gang convicted by an Albuquerque jury of the Feb. 66, 1974, slaying.

Sanchez said he hopes to have the trial, which was moved to Santa Fe from Albuquerque on a change of venue, concluded by Friday.

Defense attorneys Ray Hamilton and Bruce Kelly asked each prospective juror concerning any feelings about homosexuality that would impair reaching an impartial verdict.

Both sides asked jurors if they would be influenced for or against a defendant who was a born-again Christian and asked some of them, particularly the females, about their emotional ability to handle physical details of the case.

Hamilton also asked jurors their feelings about testimony from psychiatrists or psychologists.

Earlier Monday, Sanchez denied a pretrial defense motion to dismiss the case on grounds Lee was denied his Fifth Amendment rights by North Charleston, S.C., police.

Sentence Set In Rape Trial

A Colorado Springs man Monday was assessed a seven-year prison term after pleading guilty to burglary with intent to commit rape in an incident involving a Texas Tech University coed.

Michael Duane Tapscoff, 21, pleaded guilty before 137th District Judge Robert C. Wright.

Tapscoff was accused of entering the apartment of the Tech student March 9, 1977. Stipulated testimony from the victim indicated she awakened about 5 p.m. to find a man, naked from the waist down, standing by her bed.

Testimony read into the record by Asst. Dist. Atty. Phil Gamble indicated the man attempted to get on top of the victim, now 19, and fondle her but was scared away.

Tapscoff took the witness stand to admit he had intended to commit rape.

Muhammad Ali Says Blacks Not Oppressed

CANNES, France (UPI) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali gave the international press at the Cannes Film Festival a lesson in American race relations Monday.

Rolling into Cannes to promote a film in which he appears, "Freedom Road," Ali was asked if American blacks are oppressed.

"The leader of Los Angeles is black, the leader of Detroit is black, black people are mayors in more than a hundred American cities," Ali said firmly.

"We've got black people in Congress and the White House. We've got the most progressive black people in the world in America. We were oppressed 30 years ago but not any more."

Ali was taking a seven-day break from training for a rematch with Leon Spinks in a bid to be the only boxer in history to regain the title three times.

In this Mediterranean resort renowned for the size of egos during the film festival, Ali claimed he was the most popular person in the world.

He said he accepted the movie role of the slave, Gideon Jackson, who makes it all the way to the U.S. Senate because, "Gideon Jackson was just the type of person I am in real life."

The boxer said he might go on acting after he retires from boxing. He predicted he would be "the black Clark Gable. I will leave John Wayne behind at the box office."

In the actual film competition Monday, judges viewed America's entry for the main Golden Palm award, director Louis Malle's "Pretty Baby."

It already has done big box office business in the United States and Europe with its controversial theme of child prostitution in New Orleans, but the critics in Cannes Monday were not impressed, finding it slow moving.

Elderly Couple Subdues Thief

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A would-be robber picked on the wrong elderly couple.

Harry Fletcher, 78, told police he sighted a man in his back yard Monday and went outside to order him away. The man put a knife to his throat and demanded, "Give me your money or I'll kill you."

Fletcher's 73-year-old wife Bertha came to her husband's defense, police said, rushing from the house and beating the attacker to the ground with her walking stick. Fletcher wrestled the knife away from him, cutting the intruder.

Police said they arrived to find the elderly couple sitting on a bleeding, bruised man, identified as Jose Paramo, 23.

Paramo, who police said appeared to be under the influence of a drug, was treated at a hospital and booked for investigation of robbery.

Arraignments Slated For Bank Robbery

DETROIT (AP) — Six persons face arraignment today on federal bank robbery charges from a holdup that the FBI said was apparently staged to make it look like a "Robin Hood" caper.

Police said three other suspects who fled with some $4,700 after Monday's stick-up of a Manufacturers National Bank branch were still sought.

The alleged ringleader, identified as William Thomas James, 34, of Detroit, surrendered to FBI and Secret Service agents after firing a shot into the bank's ceiling and briefly holding about 20 persons hostage. None was injured.

Police said James entered the bank shortly after noon, pulled a gun from a knapsack and announced a holdup.

"He said he wanted everyone to cooperate and if they didn't he had a bomb and he would set it off," said Mary Karwowski, 18, a customer.

After firing a gun blast at the ceiling, James grabbed a bank employee, took her behind the tellers' glass enclosure and ordered customers and tellers to throw their money onto the floor, FBI agent Robert Knapp said.

Obeying James' order to "take the money and run" the alleged accomplices — posing as customers — then grabbed the money and fled, Knapp said. Detroit police, arriving in response to an alarm, apprehended two men and a woman and

Seized Vessel Carried Pot

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The freighter French Cap, which was declared a stateless vessel and seized last weekend, carried an estimated 17 tons of marijuana in its forward hold, the Coast Guard says.

The 80-foot ship was brought into the Coast Guard station Monday and the contraband, worth $10.2 million, was turned over to Customs and the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Authorities indicated the ship's 11 Colombian crewmen may be charged with possession and conspiracy to import a controlled substance. They were turned over to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Immigration director Ed Sweeney said if no charges are filed against the men, "We will treat them as distressed crewmen."

The cutter Sherman spotted the French Cap about 80 miles east of Cape Canaveral Saturday. When the vessel failed to display a national flag and respond to radio calls, it was declared stateless and a boarding party was dispatched.

CAR DERAILS

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Two open-air cars derailed on the Lincoln Children's Zoo train, and one of them fell several feet onto its side, Lincoln police said. Five people suffered minor injuries. There were about 30 persons in the two open-air cars. Zoo Director Al Bietz believed a prankster might have placed something on the track which caused the derailment.

Carter's Victories May Cost Democrats

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — With approval of the Panama Canal treaties and the Mideast arms package, President Carter now has won two tough foreign policy contests. The next question is the political cost of those victories to Carter and his party.

Opponents of the canal treaties made no bones about their intention to wreak political vengeance on senators who supported the president. Especially on the far right, funds are being raised and candidates groomed to make the canal "giveaway" a prime issue in the 1978 elections — and if that strikes fire, in the 1980 presidential contest.

Less has been said about political retribution by the losers in the struggle over sale of military jet airplanes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia. But some Democratic politicians are clearly worried about the votes and funds they have come to expect from the Jewish community.

Of the two issues, the canal may be the most troublesome to the Democrats.

There are two reasons for that. First, like some other controversies, the canal issue may have been more politically potent prospectively — that is, before it was decided — than after the fact of a ratification vote.

Barring some outbreak of trouble in the Canal Zone before the elections, it is possible that American voters simply won't be interested in the issue. This has happened in the past on such violently disputed questions as the nuclear test ban treaty, establishing diplomatic contact with China and selling wheat to Russia.

A second reason the Democrats (and the Republicans) who supported Carter on the canal may have no big problem in the fall is that opponents of the treaties managed during the long debate to isolate themselves from the mainstream of both political parties.

Even though the national public opinion polls showed either majorities or very strong minorities opposed to the treaties, most of the politicians who fought ratification came from the right wings of the major parties. That image alone may neutralize the canal issue in the fall campaigns.

The Mideast situation may be different. The fighter plane issue may be settled, but the Arab-Israeli conflict is not and supporters of Israel, Jewish and Christian, are likely to be very sensitive in future months about U.S. policy in the Mideast.

At the same time, there is a curious phenomenon of American politics that may come into play here. Pollsters have found that voters very often will be very critical of collective groups of politicians, such as the Senate, but regard the person they sent to Washington as an exception.

But even if senators who backed the Carter policy get a free pass from rank-and-file pro-Israel voters, they are not likely to get much help from the more sophisticated group that traditionally backs its support with money, which after all is "the mother's milk of politics."

County Aids In Auto Tax Crackdown

Lubbock County began in earnest Monday to work with the city in cracking down on reluctant automobile tax payers.

For more than two hours Monday afternoon, county commissioners discussed a request from Sheriff C.H. Blanchard for two more cars, two more deputies and a secretary to handle the extra work of serving the civil suits.

Lubbock city officials expect to file 400 suits a month for three months, beginning July 1, and 750 a month after that, if necessary, County Judge Rodrick Shaw noted.

The commissioners finally decided to delay action on the request while they ask the city to pay the $8 per paper service fee of the sheriff. The city has tentatively proposed requiring the taxpayers to pay the $7 Justice of the Peace Court filing fee and turning it over to the county after each one is paid.

Justices of the Peace Charles E. Smith of Precinct 1, Place 2, and Wayne LeCroy of Precinct 6 both appeared before the commissioners and said the city action will increase their workloads considerably and make it necessary to hire additional staff.

In other business, the commissioners voted to establish a preventive maintenance shop under Precinct 3 Commissioner Jim Lancaster in the old emergency medical service building at 10th Street and Avenue G.

Lancaster said afterwards that the shop will be opened June 1, possibly with county jail inmates helping with the work, to do maintenance on cars from the sheriff's office and the tax assessor-collector's office and on small vehicles from other county departments.

The commission also voted to abolish the office of county health officer because the office as it existed did not have the staff and capabilities required by statute.

Dr. James G. Morris, who held the title, and Dr. Bohdan Lechow will continue in their previous duties, which primarily have been attending to county jail inmates when necessary, commissioners noted.

The statutory function of the county health officer is being fulfilled by the county health center, officials have said.

Policeman Killed In Port Isabel

PORT ISABEL (AP) — A 29-year-old policeman was shot and killed late Monday as he and another officer approached a house where a family disturbance had been reported.

James Ralph Turner, 29, of Port Isabel died en route to a hospital at Brownsville, about 15 miles southwest, police said.

Melchor Salinas, 38, was arrested and charged with capital murder. Justice of the Peace Bud Emmons of Port Isabel denied bond and ordered Salinas held in the Cameron County Jail at Brownsville.

Turner was shot in the chest with a bullet from a .22-caliber rifle, police said, from a distance of about 16 feet.

John Hill Tells Backers Of Visit With President

During the Democratic gubernatorial campaign Atty. Gen. John Hill complained loudly and often that Texas had no voice in Washington, D.C., during the six years Gov. Dolph Briscoe has been in office.

So Hill wasted no time after defeating Briscoe in conferring with President Carter last week and making the views of Texans known on the president's energy plan and farm policy.

Hill briefed his supporters on the Washington trip here Monday and began to regroup his campaign forces for his race against Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

Carter's stances on energy and farm issues are "considered by Texans to be unfair to the state," Hill said.

"I felt it was important to convey this to the president," he said.

Hill said he told Carter he would "support him when he's right and oppose him when he's wrong" and expressed the hope he "will be able to provide stronger leadership at the Washington level."

Hill said he favored a three-prong program to reduce utility bills in Texas:

- Remove the sales tax on utility bills.
 - Convert electrical generating plants to alternate fuel sources such as coal.
 - Have the Public Utilities Commission to "look at every possible way lower rates could be promulgated."
- Currently Hill is doing his part in fighting for lower utility rates by opposing a $220.3 million rate hike being sought by Southwestern Bell.

The attorney general said, although he feels the requested rates are too high, the telephone company is "entitled to some increase."

He said recommendations ranged from 45-50 percent of the amount requested by Southwestern Bell.

Hill labeled a recent audit of his organization "entitled to some increase."

Beam Blamed In Tragedy

GARLAND (AP) — A deficient beam may have caused Sunday's collapse of a church roof during morning services, a city official said.

A 9-year-old girl died and 57 people were injured when part of the water-laden roof crashed into the sanctuary of the Walnut Village Church of Christ in this Dallas suburb.

"The preliminary investigation indicates the roof failure was caused by a deficient beam," Garland public information officer Dwayne Howard said Monday. "The deficient beam could have caused ponding on the roof ... The crack came halfway in the beam itself, and that's where the collapse took place."

Koppers Company Inc., based in Pittsburgh, made the laminated, 80-foot diagonal beam at a plant in Magnolia, Ark.

Warren Burnett of Odessa, the defense attorney, said, "These defendants have no past criminal records. By setting a high bond, you are setting a punishment, and punishment should not be set until a trial is held."

"This high bail was to keep these three in jail during an emotional time and that time has passed," he said.

During the hearing, Manuel Caballero, an arson investigator for the Houston fire department, testified he heard Morales yelling through a bullhorn, "Burn it, burn it. Get the pigs."

Caballero said he saw three cars burning and people throwing Molotov cocktails during the disturbance. He said Morales was urging the crowd to join and that Miss Youngdahl was walking in front of a group gathering at a shopping center and calling for justice for Joe Campos Torres.

Campos Torres drowned in Buffalo Bayou, a stream that flows through a section of downtown Houston, while in police custody.

Bail Reduced For Rioters

HOUSTON (AP) — The bail for three persons, accused by a grand jury of inciting a riot during a Mexican fiesta in a Houston park, has been reduced from $500,000 to $25,000 each.

Judge Joe Kegans granted the reduction after listening to more than four hours of testimony involving a May 7 incident that left 15 persons injured and several stores looted and burned.

Charged were Travis Morales, 25, a Rice University graduate and former medical student; Margolis Youngdahl, 24, also a college graduate and a worker at a Houston electronics company; and Thomas Robert Hirsch, 24, who graduated from the University of Oklahoma and has been working in a company warehouse.

The three were arrested May 11 shortly after a news conference on the steps of the city hall.

The trio are charged with being responsible for nine separate acts of violence during the riot in a city park near a predominantly Mexican-American section of Houston.

Defense attorneys had asked that the bonds be reduced to $5,000 each. Prosecutors argued that the $500,000 bonds should remain to insure that the three appear in court to answer the charges filed against them.

Prosecutor Vic Driscoll told the judge she should "consider that these three persons were responsible for a riot that caused at least $600,000 in damages, plus assault and other charges. Actually, these defendants should not be released on any bond at all."

Warren Burnett of Odessa, the defense attorney, said, "These defendants have no past criminal records. By setting a high bond, you are setting a punishment, and punishment should not be set until a trial is held."

"This high bail was to keep these three in jail during an emotional time and that time has passed," he said.

During the hearing, Manuel Caballero, an arson investigator for the Houston fire department, testified he heard Morales yelling through a bullhorn, "Burn it, burn it. Get the pigs."

Caballero said he saw three cars burning and people throwing Molotov cocktails during the disturbance. He said Morales was urging the crowd to join and that Miss Youngdahl was walking in front of a group gathering at a shopping center and calling for justice for Joe Campos Torres.

Campos Torres drowned in Buffalo Bayou, a stream that flows through a section of downtown Houston, while in police custody.

Three former officers were convicted of violating the civil rights of Campos Torres. U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling sentenced the trio to one year in prison and 10-year probated terms. Many Mexican-American leaders in this, the nation's fifth largest city, said the sentences were too light. The U.S. Attorney's office has appealed the sentences to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The three defendants were called to the stand and all testified they had the financial means of making bonds up to $5,000 and had jobs waiting if released from jail.

They also testified they had no intention of leaving the Houston area until their trials were conducted.

Called by the prosecution was Phil Archer, a newsman for a Houston television station, who said the crowd overturned a company car and destroyed equipment valued at $100,000.

Archer was hit in the head by a thrown object and stabbed in the hip while filming the riot. He spent one week in the hospital and still had scars on his face and walked with a limp.

Another television newsman, Jack Ca- to, was stabbed in the back.

Morales is the leader of a small group called People United Against Police Brutality.

More than 40 persons were arrested during the riot at the park Sunday night, May 7, and early Monday morning, May 8. Three policemen were injured. Two convenience stores were looted and fire caused heavy damage to a bakery, a variety store, a laundry, and a department store.

For the past few years, European pair competition has been dominated by one man—Peter Manhardt of Austria. A former World Open Pairs champion, he won the Philip Morris Cup in 1976 and 1977, and leads the 1978 race with a total of 96 points. His closest rivals have been 52 each! Here's an example of his style from the Tel Aviv leg of the competition, which he and his partner won by a narrow margin.

North's bidding showed a hand with six clubs and four spades. With his fine club support, Manhardt thought he would have a good play for six no trump, the higher scoring contract, even though six clubs rated to be a safer spot.

West dutifully led the ten of diamonds, and declarer could count twelve tricks if the clubs were running. So he won the ace of diamonds and cashed the ace-queen of clubs, and West's spade discard was a grievous blow. Now declarer needed a considerable slice of luck.

He ran the ten of spades, and breathed a sigh of relief when that held the trick—had it lost he would have been down five. The spade finesse was repeated and the three top hearts and two remaining spades were cashed in that order.

Dummy was now down to two clubs and the nine of diamonds. Since the lead was in dummy, East had to hold two clubs and was forced down to a singleton diamond honor. Manhardt presented East with his diamond trick, and East had to lead away from his ten of clubs into dummy's king-nine tenace, so the slam rolled in.

Note that if West had led a low diamond originally, the slam could have been defeated. West must hold on to the ten of diamonds, and East can unblock his diamond honors. Now when declarer tries the throw-in, West can win the ten of diamonds and cash two hearts for down two.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My husband is not what you'd call "handsome." He's middle-aged, a little on the flabby side, and he's losing his hair. But he's a bus driver, and Abby, I don't think you know how crazy some women are for bus drivers. It must be the uniform, because the women fall all over Bill as if he were a marine captain or something.

Bill says that most of the women on his run are mental cases. They have tried to tip him, give him their phone numbers, and they fight for the seat right behind the driver so they can blow on his neck. One lady even PINCHED him.

Should I ask Bill to get into some other line of work? Or should I let him stay on that bus with all those crazy women?

THE DRIVER'S WIFE

Dear Wife: Men who meet the public (in uniform and out) will be tipped, tempted, and even pinched occasionally. Give him lots of love. And trust him. If a man is happy at home, he won't look left or right.

DEAR ABBY: The teacher called me for a conference because of an essay my daughter had written as part of a class assignment. It was titled "My Father," and it went like this:

"My father is the worst father in the whole world. I am ashamed of him. He left us when we were small and my mother had to work to feed us. I hate him like poison."

Abby, my daughter was 4 years old when her father left us, but she seems to have built up a terrible hatred for him. In fact, she hates most men. My other children seem much better adjusted.

This teacher suggested I take my daughter to a psychiatrist. I don't believe too much in psychiatry. I saw one after my husband left me, and all I got out of it was the advice that I should "adjust" to the situation and make the best of it.

I don't want an emotionally disturbed child on my hands, but I can't afford to pay a psychiatrist just because a teacher says she thinks my child needs one. What should I do?

TROUBLES IN BALTIMORE

Dear Troubles: Ask your family doctor (or the school counselor) for recommendations, after explaining the background. Far better to investigate psychiatric help for your daughter and be told she doesn't need it, than fail to seek it when she does.

DEAR ABBY: I love my wife, Paula, and she loves me. No problems whatsoever. However, after 32 years of married life, I still believe Paula has an attractive figure. She may be a little flabby in spots, and flat in others, but I'm no Tarzan-built fellow either anymore.

Over the years I have bought Paula several beautiful nightgowns to wear in our privacy, but she has never worn any of them. Some have been in their original boxes for 20 years!

I don't think there's anything wrong with me, Abby, but I would like to see my little darling in a "turn on" nightie once in a while. Especially now, for it might pick up my interest a little when I need it most.

I wonder if other husbands have this problem? If so, perhaps if you were to advise me in your column, you could help us all.

PAULA'S MAN

Dear Man: I can't speak for husbands, but many wives have a "save-it-for-later" complex. Simply tell your little darling that it is later than she thinks!

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Wives Play Role In Executive Move

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — More than half of the proposed male executive career changes never take place because the organizations offering jobs fail to consider the wife's interests as well as where and how she wants to live, a national executive research firm based here estimates.

In many cases a wife may determine whether or not an executive will make the move from one company to another, says Ron Kelly, vice president of corporate development for Weatherly Associates.

The selection of a good real estate firm to show people around a new town, Kelly says, is an overlooked but important element in the hiring process. He suggests that corporations give relocation assignments to a competent staff member who will take the time to research thoroughly the religious, cultural, educational and social needs of the prospect and his family, and then pass this information on to the home broker.

Leg Of Lamb Provides Three Tasty Meat Cuts

By MARCIA O. BURG
Women's News Service

When it comes to lamb, it seems you either love it or you don't. But if you don't, perhaps you haven't given it a chance.

Unfortunately, most supermarkets don't display all the possible lamb cuts. You may therefore have to special-order some from an obliging meat-cutter or patronize an old-fashioned butcher in a smaller or specialty store.

Buy an eight-pound leg of lamb and have it divided into three parts. You'll derive two or three one-inch steaks to broil; a stew for two from a high-cut shank; and a lovely roast for four to six.

STEAKS: Broil with herb butter (a total of 14 to 18 minutes. Or pan-fry by heating a small amount of corn oil in a heavy skillet without permitting it to smoke. Brown slowly without covering, turning occasionally till reaching desired degree of doneness. Season with salt and pepper or serve with a red wine sauce simply made in the same pan. Just remove slightly underdone steaks (also applicable to shoulder loin or rib chops) to a warm platter in the interim, and get ready to "wing it." It's that kind of non-recipe-but luscious.

WINE SAUCE: With a wooden spoon scrape the pan essences together. Add a little boiling water to dissolve the meat particles. Then add a splash of red wine (sweet or dry). On low heat stir as you dissolve one beef bouillon cube. Add a dash of bottled gravy essence; garlic powder or two pressed garlic cloves; a generous sprinkle of basil and fresh-ground black pepper, and a tablespoon honey or apricot preserves. Add a goodly pat of butter or margarine. Taste and correct seasonings, then turn over steaks or chops several times in mixture. Now broil meat briefly in a very hot preheated oven, spooning sauce over it. Don't turn the meat and don't overcook it. The goal here is a rich brown, crusty glazed exterior, but a slightly pink, succulent, tender interior.

The roast would pass muster with the merest whisper of garlic and black pepper. But fresh lemon and oregano in the Mediterranean mode lift it to Olympian heights.

LAMB LEG OF OLYMPIA: Place a leg of lamb (with three sirloin chops or steaks and shank removed) on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Cut several two-inch deep slits at intervals over top of roast and insert a sliver of garlic in each. Combine one minced clove of garlic with one-quarter cup each, olive oil and fresh lemon juice; one-half teaspoon salt; one-quarter teaspoon pepper, and two teaspoons oregano in a small sauce pan.

Heat while stirring, then brush lamb with some of the mixture. Sprinkle one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper and one teaspoon oregano over roast.

Roast 30 to 35 minutes per pound at 325 degrees, or till meat thermometer (inserted at thickest point without touching bone) registers 175 degrees for medium doneness. Baste occasionally with lemon-oil mixture. Transfer to a heated platter and remove garlic, after letting roast "rest" a minute. Garnish with lemon slices and fresh mint (if available) or watercress.

Serve with Parmesan cheese-and basil-topped broiled tomato halves and oven-roasted potatoes or spinach-layered noodle pudding.

Breathes there even a dedicated cook who doesn't find one kitchen chore distasteful? If your patience runs out when you have to stop a crucial operation to peel a single clove of garlic, tackle a quantity at one fell swoop. This is culinary authority James Beard's method of preparing garlic puree for use in recipes requiring garlic seasoning and for a rich sauce to complement the flavor of a perfect lamb roast.

Young Executives Immersed In Work

NEW YORK (AP) — Executives 27 through 34 years of age are "almost entirely concerned with their careers ... plunge themselves into work and bring problems and worries home with them," a recent poll shows.

International Management magazine reports this is among the findings of a survey of more than 450 young executives conducted by Paul A. Lee Evans.

Pepper Used Different Ways

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeature Writer

The pepper is one vegetable that is used to flavor other foods as often as it is used as food itself.

It comes in a number of forms, from the hot Guinea pepper used for chili powder, cayenne, paprika and Tabasco, to the sweet bell pepper which is as bland as its cousin is tangy. The sweet pepper makes a delicious accompaniment to meat, fish or fowl and is good stuffed as a main dish.

Like tomatoes, the pepper is native to the Americas but was first appreciated in Europe. American cookbooks have a number of tasty pepper recipes, but there are many others from the cuisines of Spain and Italy.

The sweet pepper can be used in appetizers and soups, with meat, eggs and rice, and in salads. Canned red peppers called pimientos are very popular in this country. In fact, the variations are almost without limit.

Sweet peppers are good cooked as well as raw, of course, but care should be taken not to overcook them. Par-boiling is a good idea if you plan to stuff them, but 3 to 5 minutes in boiling, salted water is enough, since additional cooking will be necessary once you have stuffed them.

For some dishes, you may want to skin the peppers. If so, roast them in a hot oven till the skin blisters and blackens slightly. While still hot, place the peppers in a paper bag or pot with a tight lid to steam a few minutes, and their skins will come off easily.

When served raw, pepper rings are a popular style. If the raw pepper is stuffed with cream cheese or some such filling, cut it into thin rings to make an eye-pleasing addition to a salad or plate of cold cuts.

Joseph R. Bianco, Sunday supplement editor of the Portland Oregonian, says he likes peppers and eggs for brunch when he can't think of anything else to fix. He also features roast peppers in his cookbook, "My Dear Italian Mother's Peasant Recipes." (Touchstone Press, P.O. Box 81, Beaverton, Ore. 97005). Here's his recipe.

1 clove chopped garlic
Salt to taste
2 tbsps. olive oil

Wash and dry peppers and place on broiler rack, broiling about 10 minutes. When outer skin looks slightly burned, remove from broiler and peel off brown skin. Remove stems and seeds and tear pepper into 1-inch-wide strips. Place peppers in bowl when cool, adding chopped garlic, salt and olive oil. Serves 4 to 6. Good with chilled Soave wine.

Clearcutting Attacked By Group

DALLAS (AP) — A ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that in effect allows clearcutting of timber in East Texas national forests is under fire from environmentalists.

The Texas Committee of Natural Resources has asked the appeals court to rehear the case.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler had issued an injunction preventing the controversial form of timber harvesting. It was that injunction that was overruled by the circuit court.

TCNR head Ned Fritz, a Dallas lawyer, asked Monday that the case be reheard.

"The undisputed evidence, including a letter written by the superintendent of the National Forest Service in Texas, shows that the Forest Service was engaged in a program to clearcut 556,458 acres of the national forests in Texas. This comprises all of the timber in the Texas national forests available for timber management purposes," Fritz said.

The appeals court said that its decision "is not a wholesale license to clearcut in Texas forests," Fritz said.

"Yet the court ordered the district court's injunction dissolved and required no environmental impact statement to be prepared on the Texas clearcutting program. That is tantamount to a wholesale license to clearcut the Texas national forests."

TCNR had asked that such environmental impact statements be filed before chopping down all trees in a specific area.

The forests involved are the Sabine, Davy Crockett, Sam Houston and Angella national forests.

"The appellate court seemed to infer that there didn't need to be an impact statement," Fritz said, during the period during which permanent two-year interim forestry management guidelines are being drawn up under the National Forest Management Act.

"This is based on a misreading of the act," Fritz said.

He said the secretary of agriculture doesn't have to incorporate final guidelines until September 1985. "Congress could not have intended to suspend the applicability of the National Environmental Policy Act to clearcutting in the national forests for a decade," Fritz said.

Supporters of clearcutting say it is the most economical way to harvest timber; environmentalists complain that it leads to erosion and makes the land useless for recreation.

Kidnap Suspect Charged

Lubbock County deputies arrested a 23-year-old city woman Monday in connection with the alleged March 11 kidnaping of a 4-year-old Mexican-American girl.

Maria Espinoza Jimenez, of 515 N. Ave. B, was arrested at a relative's home about 9:45 a.m., after police forwarded information to the Sheriff's Department on the woman's whereabouts.

Mrs. Jimenez was charged with kidnaping in Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy's court and bond was set at $7,500.

The charges represent the latest element in the case that began late on the night of March 11, when 4-year-old Nancy Rene Rodriguez disappeared with a woman.

The child's mother told police she had gone to a club with Nancy, her son, her mother and another woman, but upon arriving the woman let everyone out of her car except Nancy, then drove away.

About 1 p.m. March 14, Lubbock police received word that the child had been found two days earlier in a San Antonio bus station wearing a note that read: "My name is Nancy. I live in Lubbock. Please send me to the Lubbock police department."

Lawmen here subsequently learned the name of a suspect and a warrant for her arrest was issued.

The child was reunited with her parents in Lubbock on March 15. She was unharmed.

Chancellor Urges Turning Off Sets

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, distressed by West Germans' affection for television, is urging families to shut off the set one day a week and talk to each other.

"We don't talk to each other enough, neither married couples, nor parents with their children nor friends among themselves," he said in a newspaper interview.

ized crime task force "without foundation." Gov. Briscoe's Criminal Justice Division last week accused the organized crime unit of illegal sleuthing and possession of weapons.

"I disagree 100 percent" with the findings of the audit, Hill said, adding the task force members "don't arrest people" and carry weapons "for their own safety, only if they choose to do so."

Hill called his victory over Briscoe "one of the biggest political surprises in the history of Texas politics" because he defeated an incumbent governor without a run-off.

He attributed the victory to "a strong platform, strong grassroots support and my strong record as attorney general."

His campaign against Clements will be a "very positive campaign based on the platform announced in September," Hill said. The platform includes progressive programs implemented within the state's budget.

Hill emphasized he would continue Briscoe's policy of "no new taxes," a point of contention during the Hill-Briscoe race.

"Hundreds of Briscoe supporters have contacted me" wanting to work in the campaign, Hill said, adding he welcomes the support.

'Tennis Wars' Interesting

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. The "tennis wars" are very interesting to me. It seems that the Grand Prix people are trying to snuff out Lamar Hunt's World Championship Tennis tour so they can control the whole calendar year. Did somebody with the Grand Prix tell Jimmy Connors not to defend his WCT title in Dallas this year? If so, it was another blow to a great tournament.

—Kent Lonsdale III, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A. Nobody tells Connors what to do except Mama Connors. It turned out that mononucleosis would have knocked Connors out of the tourney anyway. A black cloud hovered over the WCT finals this year, with Bjorn Borg's thumb infection rendering the whole affair meaningless.

However, WCT will explore one idea suggested by this column—to get Lloyd's of London to set a premium price for a $1 million award should any player win WCT, Wimbledon and the U.S. Open—a Triple Crown of Tennis—in the same year. WCT International Director John McDonald is going to inquire at Lloyd's about the matter. The payoff would be $100,000 a year for 10 years, beginning five years after the triple victory. WCT champions have twice followed up with Wimbledon victories, but no one has ever added the third leg.

Q. Please give us the true story of why the Yankees continue to pay so much money to Ken Holtzman, yet never let him pitch?

—Robert C. Straub, Traverse City, Mich.

A. In some respects this is becoming one of the great mysteries of baseball. Perhaps the answer is a simple one: Billy Martin lacks confidence in Holtzman's ability and, besides, he doesn't like him. Because of this, the Yankees have tried to unload Holtzman and his $165,000 salary, but they can't get anything for him. Holtzman, apparently a difficult fellow in several directions, say he would only go to Milwaukee or Chicago. Mysterious all round.

Q. I would like to know what were the most home runs hit in one single game by the great Willie Mays?

—William William J. Griffity, Louisville

A. Mays hit four homers in a game April 30, 1961. Only six others have done that in a nine-inning contest. Three more have done it in extra innings.

Q. I moved to the Kansas City area from St. Louis and follow the Cardinals closely. Over the years I've heard Jack Buck refer to Lou Brock as one of three people to hit a ball over the center field fence at the Polo Grounds. The people in this area say I'm crazy. Did anyone ever hit one out over the center field fence at the Polo Grounds?

—B. Crites, Platte City, Mo.

A. Four hitters reached the center field bleachers at the old ballpark beneath Coogan's Bluff, beginning with Babe Ruth in 1920. The others were Joe Adcock, Hank Aaron and Lou Brock. These were all 500-foot-plus smacks.

Jess Stiles Quits
As Tech Grid Aide

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Jess Stiles, an assistant football coach at Texas Tech for the past 10 years, has resigned, effective June 1.

He will become a sales representative for several athletic supply manufacturers.

The 48-year-old Stiles, known for his enthusiastic approach to the game, said, "It is with a great deal of mixed emotion that I resign. I have many memories, all of them are good. In my 10 years here, I have enjoyed the kind of support and friendship that lasts a lifetime.

"I'm really going to miss Tech. I've been here longer than I've been anywhere else," added Stiles, who came to Tech in 1969 as junior-varsity coach.

Tech athletic director JT King, the first of four head coaches whom Stiles worked under here, said, "Jess has been a very important part of the Texas Tech program, and we're going to miss him.

"He has been more than a coach here. His knowledge and love for the people of this area have been a great service to Texas Tech. We hate to see him go, but we wish him the very best in his new position."

Head coach Rex Dockery added, "It will be almost impossible to replace his experience and dedication, especially in regard to the West Texas area. He has been an integral part of our staff as a coach and a recruiter."

Stiles, a native of Clarksville, is a 1954 graduate of Midwestern University in Wichita Falls and served as an assistant coach there for 1 1/2 years before moving to Haskell High School as head coach for two years.

His next stop was Bowie, where his 1959 team finished 11-1 and was a regional finalist. From Bowie, he moved to Wichita Falls Hirschi, where he posted a 39-23-2 mark, winning a district championship in 1963 and gaining the state semifinals in 1964.

He was then head coach and athletic director at Borger before coming to Tech.

While junior-varsity coach at Tech, his teams were undefeated in four of his last five seasons at the helm. He became a varsity assistant in 1975 when Steve Sloan took over as head coach. He has coached the defensive ends the past three campaigns.

Dockery said that a search for Stiles' replacement has begun "and I have some guys in mind, but I'm not in a terrific hurry."

Top QB Staubach
Takes Owners' Side

NEW YORK (UPI) — Roger Staubach said Monday he does not agree with the NFL Player Association that league owners are failing to bargain in good faith under the new free agent rule.

The veteran quarterback of the world champion Dallas Cowboys said he thinks million dollar contracts for players jumping from team to team would be damaging to pro football.

Last week the NFLPA told a federal appeals court in Minneapolis that NFL owners are undermining the new system by agreeing among themselves not to compete for players. Union lawyers, seeking to have the case reopened, said only six out of 93 free agents this year received offers.

"I don't understand where the complaint is," said Staubach, who was in New York to accept an award as quarterback of the year from a football magazine. "I don't think the owner are conspiring against us, not the way the rules are set up. Those are the rules we bargained for. We agreed to it."

Staubach, who could conceivably command a multi-million dollar contract under a less restricted free agent system similar to baseball's, said he supports the controls under the collective bargaining agreement signed on March 1, 1977.

"I don't think we should have a system like baseball," Staubach said. "I don't think it's good for the game. There should be some type of freedom and that's what we have—it's better than it used to be."

"But without controls where does it end? You have the loyalty of fans involved; they don't like seeing guys jumping around every year. Ticket prices go up. Someone's got to pay for it. And you have the problem of high-priced players coming in and causing resentment on a team. I wouldn't like it if the Cowboys picked up some guy for $3 million."

Staubach, however, said he sees room for improvement in salaries of pro football players, who averaged $55,288 for the 1977 season, significantly lower than pro baseball, basketball and hockey players.

"I think each individual owner could do better paying his players, but complete freedom wouldn't be good," he said. "I wish I knew the answer."

Former Kansas State AD Breaks Silence

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — One day after he was fired as Kansas State athletic director, Jersey Jermier fired back, accusing the school's president of indecisiveness and its womens program of greed.

"I think it's fair to say I don't feel like I should have been fired," Jermier said, adding that Duane Acker, K-State president, told him Saturday either resign or be fired.

"I called him Sunday and I told him I wouldn't resign," Jermier said, "and he prepared the statement. At that point I wrote my one-sentence letter: 'As per your request, I am resigning June 30.'"

Breaking a long silence, Jermier contacted the news media Monday to tell his side of the story. He spoke from Shangri-La Lodge in Northeast Oklahoma, where Big Eight Conference officers will decide this week how hard to punish Kansas State, already the lowliest football program in the league, for granting 13 excessive scholarships last year.

In March, after announcing the Big Eight had put the school on probation for the scholarship infraction, Acker appointed a committee to study the problem-ridden athletic department. Acker said the report cleared Jermier of knowing complicity in the scholarship scandal but that "... many management responsibilities related to ticket sales, housing athletes, student-athlete health services and fund-raising haven't been handled directly and with dispatch."

"Many of the reasons for lingering were because the university is run by committees," Jermier said. "Whenever a decision needs to be made they appoint a committee. At times they've got committees."

Gourmet Chef Staub Feasting On AL Pitchers

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rusty Staub took off his baseball cap and donned his chef's hat the other day to cook a sumptuous lunch for some friends at his mid-Manhattan eatery.

The assignment was almost as tough for Staub as swinging against Nolan Ryan. "The kitchen's hot today and we need three different sauces for you guys," said Rusty, who has turned his gourmet cooking hobby into a thriving business.

Analysis

At 34, Staub is the senior citizen in the lineup of the surprising Detroit Tigers, who have been residing in first place in the East Division for most of the American League season. And Rusty can't hide his enthusiasm over the young Tigers.

Detroit's success has been built around some hot hitters, including Staub. Rusty is hitting .285, but the bat he likes to talk about most belongs to first baseman Jason Thompson, who is hitting a hefty .306 with 11 home runs and 29 runs batted in.

"He's got some sweet swing," said Staub. "The first time I saw him swing, I knew he'd be something special. What's he got, 11 homers? He'll have 15 by the end of the month."

At second base and shortstop, Houk uses a full platoon with four youngsters. Rookies Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell form one pair while Steve Dillard and Mark Wagner comprise the other. Whitaker and Trammell play against right-handers and Dillard and Wagner go against lefties. At third base, the platoon is veteran Aurelio Rodriguez and young Phil Mankowski and again, Houk has been successful with it.

The manager also platoons catchers, with Milt May playing against right-handers and Lance Parrish against lefties.

FROM HOME PLATE TO DINNER PLATE — New York Knicks coach Willis Reed, left, joins Detroit outfielder Rusty Staub in biting into some tasty spare ribs late last week at Staub's mid-Manhattan eatery in New York. Staub, 34, is the senior citizen in the Tiger lineup and scores as well in the kitchen as he does hitting. (AP Laserphoto)

The pitching staff has been a picture of patchwork, with Houk juggling bodies like Bob Sykes, Milt Wilcox and Jack Billingham while heavyweights like Mark Fydrich and Dave Rozema rest their ailing arms.

Put it all together, and it spells first place so far for the Tigers and a whole lot of fun for the designated hitter, chef Staub, who is swinging a productive bat and does quite a job with barbecue short ribs on his days off. "The kids have been great," said Rusty. So was the veal picata.

From FANS, the Ralph Nader sports consumer watchdog group, comes the interesting information that the New York Yankees have the highest ticket price scale in the major leagues. It costs an average of $5.19 for every ticket sold to a game at Yankee Stadium. That's 54 cents more than the Boston Red Sox, who finished second in this derby at $4.65.

On the other end of the scale are the San Diego Padres, whose average ticket price of $3.12 is the lowest in the majors. Of course, the Yankees won the world championship last season and the Padres finished fifth in the National League West.

You might assume, then, that winning has its rewards at the box office cash register. But then again, that's not surprising. You'd expect to pay more for a first-run show than you would for an off-Broadway production.

The average price ticket for a baseball game is $3.98, which would seem to support Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's contention that baseball is the most economical entertainment around.

But Peter Gruenstein, executive director of FANS, says that's a deceptive statistic, pointing out that baseball teams play twice as many games as professional hockey and basketball teams and 10 times as many games as pro football teams.

Still, the fact remains that for a single fan to buy his way into a single baseball game, it costs less money than it does for any other sporting event. All the other statistics don't mean much. What really counts is the dollar outlay and in that department, baseball remains a pretty good buy.

Dodgers, Reds Pull Into Tie With SF

By The Associated Press

It's not that Manny Mota is consciously thinking about trying to oust Smokey Burgess as the king of the pinch hitters. It's just that it's going to work out that way anyway.

"I would like to play until I catch Smokey. I think it would be very important to be the greatest pinch hitter. But when I go to the plate I don't think about it too much," he said.

What he does is win games for the Los Angeles Dodgers . . . like on Monday night, for example.

With the bases loaded in the eighth inning and the Dodgers locked in a 1-1 tie with San Diego, Manager Tom Lasorda called pitcher Don Sutton back from the on-deck circle and sent up the 40-year-old Mota.

And Mota sent a Bob Ovwchinko pitch down the left field line for three runs. Before the carnage ended, four more runs scored in the inning. Two on Vic Davalillo's bases-loaded single, and the Dodgers had a tidy 8-1 victory that jammed them in with San Francisco and Cincinnati, all virtually deadlocked for the National League West lead.

In the NL's only other action, Cincinnati trampled Atlanta 10-0 and Montreal beat Pittsburgh 5-2.

"Sure, it feels fine to have the 125th pinch hit, but I'm more happy about my team winning," said Mota, who had 14 pinch hits last year, has three this season and needs just 20 more to overtake Burgess. "If I tie with Smokey it's okay, but I want to win for my team." "That Mota's amazing," exclaimed Lasorda. "An outstanding man to have on the team." And he's delighted to have Davalillo around, too.

"They got five RBIs between them," he said. "Together I guess they're about 90 years old (actually their combined age is only 78). But I'll tell you one thing: when I call them off the bench I don't think about how old they are."

Davalillo would like to get the bat on the ball more — but he's not too concerned at the moment. "I have only two hits in 11 times as a pinch hitter, but I've been on base seven times and that's what Tommy wants us to do."

Dusty Baker's single, Lee Lacy's double and an intentional walk to Steve Yeager preceded Mota's hit. Dave Lopes ran for Mota, Bill North walked, then reliever Mark Lee's pickoff throw hit Lopes, who raced home as the ball bounced into center field. North, who reached third on the error, scored on Bill Russell's bunt. Reggie Smith's single and a walk to Ron Cey loaded the bases again and Davalillo singled to center.

With the victory the Dodgers are 24-15 with a .615 winning percentage. The idle Giants are 6-22 and the Reds .610.

Reds 10, Braves 0

"I've seen articles that say that we can't hit," Ray Knight sneered. "And they always include me." Knight, included in the Reds' batting order as a late replacement for Pete Rose, crashed a three-run homer in the rout of the Braves.

Ken Griffey hit a two-run homer and Bill Bonham won his fifth game without a loss by limiting Atlanta to five hits in eight innings.

Expos 5, Pirates 2

For 7 1-3 innings, Montreal's Steve Rogers flirted with a no-hitter. Then Rennie Stennett got the 1,000th hit of his career. Before the seventh inning was over Pittsburgh had three more singles, one by Frank Taveras driving in two runs, and Rogers was in the clubhouse.

But Darold Knowles limited the Bucs to one more hit the rest of the way as the Expos snapped their four-game losing streak.

Ranger Arsenal No Match For Marshall

By The Associated Press

When the Minnesota Twins are in trouble these days, all they have to do is dial "M" for Marshall.

"His arm is indestructible," gleamed Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch after watching Mike Marshall save another game Monday night.

Marshall has truly been a subject for superlatives since his return to baseball just a week ago. In that period, the burly right-hander has won a game and saved four others, including Monday night's 2-0 victory over the Texas Rangers.

In five appearances in a Twins' uniform, Marshall is yet to give up an earned run. He has pitched a total of eight innings and allowed just one hit and one walk.

"I've seen the guy do so many wonderful things that it's hard for me to single out what he's doing now as any different," said Mauch, who once managed Marshall when both were with the Montreal Expos.

Marshall, winner of the Cy Young Award in 1974 with the Los Angeles Dodgers, made his last appearance in the majors with the Rangers last June. He appeared to be finished with baseball after injuring a knee, but the Twins took a chance on him, offering a contract on May 15.

The new life seems to have inspired Marshall to an intimacy he never had before with the press. Characteristically tight-lipped, Marshall appears to have opened a bit more in interviews. After his most recent success, he provided this bit of insight:

"The toughest situation in baseball is to come in and get one out at the end of an inning. You've got to be right, right now. Fortunately, we accomplished that tonight."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Seattle Mariners routed the Kansas City Royals 10-1 and the Boston Red Sox edged the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4.

Marshall came to the rescue of Geoff Zahn, who needed help in the eighth inning. The Twins' reliever nailed down Zahn's fourth victory and the Twins' sixth in their last seven games.

The Twins scored their runs on a force-play grounder by Dan Ford in the first and another by Butch Wynegar in the second off loser Jon Matlack. Jim Sundberg continued his hot streak for Texas by hitting in his 22nd straight game.

Mariners 10, Royals 1

Tom House scattered nine hits and Seattle took advantage of a sloppy Kansas City defense to rout the Royals. House, who had been working primarily out of the bullpen in recent weeks, got the starting assignment because of a hectic schedule that has the Mariners playing nine games in seven days.

Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

Carl Yastrzemski belted a three-run homer in the eighth inning to lead Boston over Toronto and give rookie Alan Ripley his first major league victory. Yastrzemski's blast overshadowed two home runs by Toronto's John Mayberry. Jim Rice hit his 14th homer for Boston, a two-run shot in the first.

tees checking on committees. "There were times when I would get one answer from the president, get it done, then get a different interpretation from one of his assistants. I got tired of running between them."

Jermier said one mistake he made was "keeping quiet so long."

"I was being called 'No-Comment Jermier' and because of that I think I lost my credibility. When you continually have 'no comment' people tend to believe you're guilty."

Jermier said when he was hired two years ago he inherited "a women's athletic program" that is more vociferous than any school he's been associated with. "He said the budget for women's athletics was $214,000 plus administrative costs, but the women's program generated only about $6,000 in income.

The major function of the 11-person Intercollegiate Athletic Council, he charged, "is to disperse money evenly between the men and women, not considering the revenue sources."

Another big handicap to the K-State athletic department, Jermier said, is interference by David Laurie and Chuck Corbin, physical education professors and athletic council members.

Laurie produced pictures as evidence the Wildcats were violating spring practice rules by working out inside Ahearn Field House. Head Coach Jim Dickey, conducting his first K-State practices, immediately terminated the spring program.

"I do not understand why people like David Laurie, a PE teacher, and Chuck Corbin, a PE teacher, have spent a considerable amount of time taking pot shots at the athletic department," Jermier said.

"I don't understand why they weren't concerned with their own department. I certainly did not have time to see what they were teaching, what office hours they were keeping."

Long Heads Open List

Former Texas Tech golfer Steve Long shot a 5-under-par 137 Monday to head a list of four golfers who survived the 36-hole U.S. Open Golf Championship local qualifying Monday.

Long, of Melbourne, Australia, fired rounds of 71 and 66 on the par 72, Hillcrest Country Club course to lead the list of 36 entrants.

Ronnie Rosson also qualified with a (140), along with Mark Jarrett (141) and Mike Horton (142).

The four linksters move to the sectional rounds, June 12-13 in Arlington at the Shady Valley Country Club. There the field will be further trimmed for the U.S. Open, which will be played at Cherry Hills at Englewood, Colo., June 15-18.

Bears Win

ARLINGTON (AP) — For Baylor, the baseball season has been like a rerun of an old but good movie. Coach Mickey Sullivan hopes the similarity with the 1977 season ends right now.

Just like last year Baylor finished third in the Southwest Conference regular season but captured the post-season tournament. Then the Bears charged into the NCAA South Central Regional where they swept unbeaten through the field.

So far so good. Sullivan remembers painfully what happened next. Baylor lost two extra-inning games in the College Baseball World Series last summer in Omaha, Neb.

"We don't want to go to the tournament and get knocked out like we did last year," said Sullivan. "We probably had better athletes last year but we have a hustling team."

The Bears whipped Mississippi State 6-3 Monday night as Fritz Connally clubbed a home run and collected two other hits. Connally was named the Most Valuable Player of the tournament.

"We have to get off to a good start at Omaha and get into that winning bracket," said Sullivan. "We just don't have any left-handed pitching. In fact, we have a lot of pitching problems."

Baylor's Jaime Coacanover, bothered by arm trouble all year, could only go five and one-third innings before his arm tightened on him.

Then Mike Roberts came on to muzzle the booming Bulldog bats.

Baylor collected 14 hits off State's Perry Cliburn and reliever Jack Lazorko. The Bears erupted for four runs in the third inning on Connally's homer, an RBI single by Manuel Ordonez, Ken Kolhorst's long triple and Mike Johnson's RBI single.

The Bears, who have now won 12 games in a row, added two runs in the fourth inning on singles by Connally, Shane Nolen, Luke Prestridge and Ordonez.

The Bulldogs scored on an RBI single by Bob Kokol in the second inning and Mike Kelly's two-run single in the sixth inning.

Sullivan said ace Burl Coker, injured in the SWC tournament, will not pitch at Omaha in June.

"We just hope he can hit," said Sullivan. Coker was injured by a thrown ball while beating out a bunt in the SWC tournament.

"We had better athletes last year when we had Steve Macko, who was drafted," said Sullivan. "But you can't take anything away from this team."

Baylor will carry a 32-17 record into Omaha while Mississippi State, the runner-up in the Southeast Conference, finished the year 38-18.

"State has an excellent team," said Sullivan. "They get after it. But you can't replace tournament experience and that's what we have."

Only Sullivan hopes the Bears don't receive the same kind of experience again that they got at Omaha last year.

"We're not as bad off as I thought," Sullivan grinned.

All-Tourney

ARLINGTON (AP) — Baylor landed eight players on the NCAA South Central Regional baseball all-tournament team announced Monday night.

The team included catcher Ken Kolhorst, Baylor; first baseman Tim Welsh, Mississippi State; second baseman Manuel Ordonez, Baylor; third baseman Fritz Connally, Baylor; shortstop Bill Crosby, Baylor; utility infielder Luke Prestridge, Baylor; outfielders Mike Johnson, Baylor; Mike Kelley, Mississippi State; and Bobby Rutledge, Pan American; designated hitter Leonard Tyrone, Pan American; and pitchers Shane Nolen, Baylor, and Jon Perlman, Baylor.

Texas League

By The Associated Press
Western Division-leading San Antonio snapped a four-game Texas League losing streak Monday night, sliding past Tulsa 6-2 behind a six-hitter by Rick Nitz.

In other loop action, Midland took Arkansas 6-4, Jackson nipped Amarillo 3-2 and Shreveport powered past El Paso 10-7.

Nitz retired 14 straight Drillers during one stretch as he ran his record to 5-1 on the season.

San Antonio erupted for four runs in the sixth inning to break open the game. Mickey Hatcher's two-run single was the big blow.

Midland slipped into second place in the Western Division with its victory over Arkansas as El Paso dropped to third by losing to Shreveport.

Brian Rosinski had a two-run homer and Jim Buckner ripped a two-run single to pace the Midland attack.

Arkansas rallied for single runs in the fifth and seventh, then plated two more in the ninth, but couldn't overcome the Cubs' lead.

Dave Bialas stroked three triples in Arkansas' losing effort.

Herman Segeike was the winner while Dan O'Brien took the loss.

El Paso blew a 5-0 lead when Shreveport sent 10 men to the plate in the seventh for five runs. Big blows were a double by Larry Littleton, who had four RBIs on the night, and a triple by Ernie Young.

Winner Dennis Davis ran his record to 2-3. The loser was Ken Schrom, primarily a reliever and making his first start of the season.

Jim Bestwick drove in two runs in the top of the ninth to give Jackson its narrow victory over Amarillo.

Bob Grote picked up the win and Tom Tellman absorbed the loss.

J.R. Richard

HOUSTON (UPI) — J.R. Richard of the Houston Astros was named player of the week in the National League after hurling two shutouts in his only two outings.

The 6-foot-8 right-hander allowed only six hits in 18 innings and struck out 17.

Jim Sundberg

ARLINGTON (UPI) — Jim Sundberg of the Texas Rangers has been named player of the week in the American League after batting .452 and extending his hitting streak to 21 games.

Sundberg collected 14 hits in 31 at-bats last week, including a homer and two doubles and drove in 6 runs.

U.S. Open

DALLAS (AP) — Rocky Thompson's aggregate five-under-par 136 led local qualifiers shooting for 18 first-round U.S. Open spots Monday over two courses.

Great Southwest Golf Club (par 70) and Shady Valley Country Club (par 71).

There were a total of 166 golfers, 63 of them amateurs, shooting for the 18 positions.

Following Thompson were Mark Brooks, Joe Hager and Jim Henderson at 142; Kurt Cox at 143; Robert Elliott at 144; Bob Smith, Bill Lively, Kevin Grunewald and Dan Gray at 145; Lee Carter, Arnold Salinas, Sale Omohundro, Rives McBee, Doug Higgins Jr. and Bennie Passons at 146; and John Adams and Randy Jacobs at 147.

A sectional qualifying will be the next step, and will be held in Arlington.

The Open is scheduled for June 15-18 at the Cherry Hills course in Denver.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Country Club pro Charlie Epps led local qualifying at two area courses for the U.S. Open Monday but former touring pro Don Massengale wasn't as lucky.

Epps shot a one-under par 71 at River Plantation and had a two-under 72 in the afternoon session at Walden to beat his closest rival, Arthur Russell, by four shots.

Massengale, playing out of River Plantation, shot a 71 on his own course but was penalized four strokes on the Walden course after forgetting he had a companion's club in his bag. The penalty gave Massengale an 81 for the Walden course.

Russell, a former University of Houston golfer, had a 72 at Walden and 73 at River Plantation for a 145 total.

The low 14 scores among the 119 golfers will advance to the sectional qualifier at Arlington, June 5. The U.S. Open is scheduled June 15-18 at Denver, Colorado's Cherry Hills course.

Others qualifying for the sectionals were Randy Petri, Austin, and Blair Douglas, Walden assistant pro, both 145; Pat Baker, Beaumont, 148; Joe Hasbrouck and Al Bessink, both Houston, 149; Bill Evans, Sinton, and Jimmy Fetters, Port Arthur, all 149; Dick Harmon, Houston, Randy Sommer, Greg Antunes, Temple, Phil Romero, and Vaughn Moise, Houston, all 150.

NCAA Tennis

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Defending champion Stanford takes an eighth-ranked Arizona State in today's quarter-finals in the NCAA Tennis Championships at the University of Georgia.

All eight seeded teams advanced after Monday's opening round.

No. 1 seed Stanford swept its six singles matches against South Carolina, with the Cardinals' 18-year-old freshman star John McEnroe, the 1977 Wimbledon semifinalist who lost to Jimmy Connors, putting away Chris Mayotte, 6-4, 6-2.

After winning two of its three doubles matches, Stanford ended up with a total team score of 8-1.

No. 8 seed Arizona State defeated Oklahoma State 7-2 in the opening round of the eight-day tournament.

Also in today's play, second-seeded UCLA, which beat North Carolina 7-2 Monday, will play No. 7 Pepperdine, which defeated LSU 6-3.

Third-ranked Trinity, which trounced Wisconsin 8-1, will face sixth-ranked Southern Cal, which got past Houston 6-3 in the first round.

No. 4 SMU, which beat North Carolina State 8-1, will take on No. 5 California, which topped Princeton 8-1 in the opening round.

After dispatching South Carolina's Barry Gilbert 6-2, 6-0 Monday, defending NCAA singles champ Matt Mitchell said he's not bothered by playing third behind Stanford teammates McEnroe and Bill Maze.

"We play a challenge match at the beginning of the season and unfortunately I didn't play well at that time and I wound up playing No. 3," said the 21-year-old Stanford economics major who lost to both McEnroe and Maze in three sets in the challenge matches.

Jets Again Rule WHA

WINNIPEG (AP) — The Winnipeg Jets suffered a letdown in the first period, but before the night as over they were joining their fans drinking champagne.

The 5-3 victory over the New England Whalers Monday night gave the Jets their second World Hockey Association championship in three years. A jubilant capacity crowd of 10,348, many of them drinking wine or champagne in the final minutes, saw Winnipeg sweep its fourth straight game from the Whalers, duplicating a whitewash of the Houston Aeros in the 1976 Avco Cup finals.

The Jets trailed 2-0 after a first period that saw them obviously nervous and unable to settle themselves down.

"I think it was a case of human nature taking over," said veteran Bobby Hull in the noisy, wet Jets dressing room. "After the first three games I think the guys thought we just had to go out and we'd win. But we found out that we'd have to work hard as we did all season — it was the only way to do it."

The Whalers scored early and late in the first period. Mike Antonovich netted a quick wrist shot at 1:37 and Rick Ley pushed a puck behind Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley with one second remaining.

"I think everyone was looking to see who was going to do the job," said center Ulf Nilsson, who ended his four-year WHA career with Winnipeg with assists on the final three Winnipeg goals. "The guys were upset at one another after the period and I think we told ourselves we would have to go out and try to win it in the last 40 minutes."

And they did just that, after tying the game with two goals in 12 seconds of the second period. Dave Kryskow scored at 3:26 with a screened wrist shot and Lyle Moffat tied the score at 3:38 when he whipped the puck over New England goalie Al Smith's shoulder.

Anders Hedberg put the Jets ahead to stay at 17:59 when he deflected Lars-Erik Sjoberg's shot between Smith's legs.

Bilbrey Nabs Dirt Victories

By WAYNE PANTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Jimmy Bilbrey, winless so far this season in a new car, found the combination Sunday night to score victories in both the modified stock car semi and the main event at Lubbock Speed Bowl.

Bilbrey's win wasn't without some stiff competition from point leader Charley Whorton and principal challenger Larry Johnson, but when the gas man got out in front he made it decisive.

Starting in the back rows in the main, Bilbrey dropped a spot to Johnson, who blasted through the front runners on the backstretch of the second lap. But two circuits later and in the same spot Bilbrey pulled around Johnson to win going away.

In earlier events, it had appeared that a new engine had solved Larry's power woes, but in the main he appeared to be still having trouble and pulled into the pits after Bilbrey made his decisive move.

The elated Bilbrey later explained the solution to the suspension problem that had plagued him since the opening race.

"I decided I needed more weight to keep the wheels on the ground — and I got some," he said, displaying three 80-pound tractor weights chained securely to the back crossmember.

"I don't know if this is it or not, but I know that we've never run this good until now this season," he said.

Ironically, Bilbrey's wins came on a heavy track that never did improve enough to earn the description of tacky. In an effort to repair damage done by an afternoon tractor pulling contest, track manager Jack Halpain kept the water wagon on the oval for a lap or two more than necessary, it turned out.

High air humidity and subsoil moisture kept the track from ever getting into proper condition for top performances. And Halpain may have to require the contestants to deposit a couple of hundred pounds of mud at the gate along with their pit pass fees next weekend. A yard or two of costly clay today is scattered around the city and county in a race cars.

While trailing Bilbrey Whorton nevertheless scored a third in the semi and was second in the main, adding to the comfortable first-place point cushion he holds. Gene Sloan, driving despite a painful burn sustained when a radiator cap blew as he was preparing his car for the Hall of Fame outfielder Zach Wheat wore only a size six baseball shoe.

Barrera's Outburst Disturbs Cauthen

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Special Correspondent

In the complex, tensiled and gilded world of big-time professional sports, it often is difficult to realize that the components are not cold machines grinding out their million-dollar extravaganzas but actually human beings with normal frailties and sensitivities.

And sometimes they are confused, introverted individuals who need understanding or maybe just immature 18-year-old kids.

This was brought graphically to light in recent days with the latest eruption of dissension in the New York Yankees' clubhouse, not totally unexpected, and in the stable of the great 3-year-old race horse, Affirmed — totally shocking.

Two different situations in two widely separated sports, yet on common footing in that they both represented snap responses to frustration, wounded pride and absence of maturity.

Let's look at the second case first — the dramatic victory of Affirmed in last Saturday's Preakness.

It should have been a moment of great rejoicing for everyone connected with the effort — Lou and Patrice Wolfson, the owners; Laz Barrera, the cagy trainer, and 18-year-old Steve Cauthen, the jockey. It was time to laugh and celebrate.

But Barrera, a pleasant, easy-going Latin from Cuba, used the post-race occasion to unleash some built-up frustrations. That lovable old Laz should be irked was understandable; that he should pick this particular forum for his outburst was most uncharacteristic.

Barrera was upset first by the fact that Cauthen, flying in from New York after fulfilling a heavy riding schedule, reached Pimlico while the horses were being saddled for the big race.

"I waited and waited," Barrera fumed, "but he did not show up. I have only a few minutes to talk to him in the paddock."

The trainer's frayed nerves were further jabbed after the race when Pimlico officials whisked the young jockey aboard the single press box elevator while Barrera and his wife were shunted to the rear, forced to wait 20 minutes for the next trip.

"He knew we were back there," Barrera said, referring to Cauthen. "He should have stepped back to make sure we got on the elevator, too."

It was a case of punctured pride which might have angered any of us. Here was a man who had spent hours, days and months preparing a horse for the big occasion only to see all his efforts drowned in adulation over a kid who — not undeservedly — had mesmerized the sports world.

It was Cauthen who was interviewed by Howard Cosell on national television. It was Cauthen, not Barrera, who was fawned over and accorded royal treatment although track experts concede that a winning race is 90 per cent horse and trainer, 10 per cent jockey.

Told of Barrera's chagrin, Cauthen was crestfallen. He said he had reached Pimlico as quickly as possible. He said he was a victim of circumstances in the elevator incident. Of Barrera, he said, "I love the guy."

One can appreciate Barrera's dismay at not being given the recognition he deserved. But the trainer should understand also that Steve Cauthen still is 18 years old, and on that Saturday, he was swallowed up by the post-race hullabaloo.

The Yankees' incident is less excusable. These guys in pin-stripes are grown men, champions of their sport, should be examples of maturity and decorum.

A couple of weeks ago, Manager Billy Martin got upset at Mickey Rivers when he felt his moody center fielder had loafed on a ball hit to the outfield. He benched Rivers. On the team's air charter, Martin became angry because two other Yankees, catcher Thurman Munson and pitcher Ken Holtzman, were playing cards with Rivers. He threatened to get rid of Holtzman, Rivers' main buddy on the team.

After serving his penance, Rivers returned to the lineup and won a couple of games with his hitting and flashy fielding. Rivers is a complex man, haunted by personal problems, but a certain .300 hitter.

Martin, an excellent field manager, seems to make no attempt to find out what bothers his sullen outfielder. Instead of talking to him man-to-man, he communicates through intermediaries. Rivers feels demeaned.

So Rivers sulks while Martin burns. It is a very childish exercise. The Yankees have some growing up to do.
