Clerk becomes seventh victim of 'kneecapping'

By EDWARD MAGRI

ROME (AP) - Terrorists shot an official of the Christian Democratic Party in the legs today in the seventh "kneecapping" attack in Italy in seven days

A telephone caller said the attack in Milan on Tito Berardini, a 41 year old bank clerk, was the work of the Red Brigades, the urban terrorist army that kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro on March 16 and murdered him last Tuesday

Berardini, a district secretary of the party which has dominated the Italian government since World War II and of which Moro was president, was on his way to his car to go to work when two men and a young woman. all dressed in blue, stepped out of a white Fiat and ope ed fire Their victim was hit in both legs

The three drove off. The car, which had been allegedly stelen, was found several hundred yards away

About an hour after the attack, a woman telephoned an Italian news agency and said. We are the Red Brigades It was we who hit Tito Berardini, a DC (Christian Democratic) man, this morning A communique will follow. Did you get that?"

A powerful bomb also caused seri ous damage to a Justice Ministry office on the outskirts of Rome during the night, and two smaller bombs went off and several shots were fired at a police station near Turin, but no injuries were reported The police, meanwhile, were still apparently without clues to the whereabouts of Moro's murderers. and informed sources said a reorgani

The highway probably will follow U.S. 87 and connect with Interstate 27. which is under construction between Amarillo and Lubbock, according to Sen Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, who proposed the highway bill amendment. A second part of the amendment calls for a similar highway to run 485 miles southwest from Amarillo along U S 60 and 70 and to connect with

Interstate 10 at Las Cruces, N.M. If the Lubbock San Angelo highway is built according to current standards for interstate highways, the construction will cost about $440 million, officials indicated Thursday Funding will be on a 90-10 basis with the federal government picking up 90 percent of the tab and the state paying the rest, a spokesman for Bentsen

The House already has passed its version of a highway bill, and a compromise between it and the Senate version will have to be developed by joint conferees of the House and Senate. Final passage of a two-year highway bill is expected by August or September, the spokesman said.

Sources said the reorganization of the SID, or Information Defense Service, and its anti-terrorist branch, sparked by allegations that they were infiltrated by fascists who covered up right wing plots and snooped into the sex lives of thousands of Italians, almost totally dismantled the services' network of informants. The sources asked to remain unidentified.

As a result, the informants said, the government was totally in the dark about what was happening in the terrorist underground, and this was why the police could find no clues to the whereabouts of the Red Brigades terrorists who kidnapped the former premier on March 16 and murdered

Instead there were such blunders as the inclusion of two extremists already in fail and an informant on a

Agitation against the SID, particu larly from the Communists and So cialists, started in 1967 with charges that Gen. The Delano growers finally signed with Chavez in 1970, but, charging that the UFW mismanaged its hiring halls, refused to renew contracts in 1973. neighborhood curmudgeon, likes a good sport. He loses in the spirit that the winner wins Winners particularly are fond of good losers. Does a winner get congratulated for being a good sport? No The burden is always on the loser.

That aside, the Midland Jaycees, like the kids around them, will be trying - probably with success -to make good sports out of most of the competing youngsters during SuperKid Day Saturday on the gridiron at Midland Memorial Stadium. Registration begins at 7:30 a.m., and the gaming and shouting begins at 10.

It'll be a day of fun more than skills, although dexterity and endurance certainly will play a role in the eight field events: two sprinting events, football kicking, softball or baseball throwing, flying-disc sailing, jump roping, sack racing and barreling through the obstacle course. It sounds Spartan. It even hints of the Great Race, except it's two events away from being a decathlon. There'll be "awards and prizes and zillions of ribbons" for the 1,000 or more sporting youngsters, ages 6 through 12, who'll be there racing, tossing, throwing, kicking, crawling and jumping, said Jaycee Don Murphy

As you might well know, SuperKid Day is a benefit. The kids, try or not, will be bringing in a penny a point per sponsor. The cash goes to the American Lung Association, which the Jaycees decided to sponsor as a do-good

The maximum number of points a young athlete can score in any of the events is 100. Believe it or not, there also is a minimum score: 50. If a kid picks up a football and just drops it, he's already halfway to a perfect

There's more cause for that than just pennies.

"You don't want any little kids walking around with no points," Murphy said.

Guaranteed points assure a pay-off for the sponsoring Jaycees and what's to benefit.

Murphy said he hopes that so much excitement is generated over Super-Kid Day that next year the Jaycees will be turning aside kids who'll be wanting to play in the fun o' games.

The events will be in seven age categories right up the line: 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12. The top dude or gal in each event in each category will be given a trophy. The 10 runners-up in each category

Committee considering bracero plan

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) - A U.S. Senate committee is considering a proposal that would allow Mexican laborers to come into Texas and other states "to work at a specific job for a specific length of time" to ease the plight of farmers trying to get their

Sen. James A. McClure of Idaho recommended the bracero program Thursday as an alternative to the Carter administration's illegal alien bill that would classify as "permanent resident aliens" the estimated 765,000 persons who entered the country before 1970 and as "temporary resident aliens" those who came between 1970 and 1977.

The Carter proposal would leave all aliens who entered the United States illegally after Jan. 1, 1977 subject to deportation.

McClure testified Thursday that Carter's proposal would leave farmers "high and dry at critical times of the year."

Without illegal alien labor, McClure said, farmers who rely heavily on irrigation would be unable to hire field hands and "the work just won't get done." Under his proposal, McClure said, "Aliens would be protected under our laws and mandated to obey our laws.'

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall testified on behalf of the administration's illegal alien program.

He called it part of a continuing effort "to bring those who are disadvantaged into the economic mainstream.

The presence of large numbers of illegal aliens in the country has led, Marshall said, "to widespread exploitation of these workers. "Investigations often reveal that undocumented workers are not paid the minimum wages prescribed by the Fair Labor Standards Act, that many work under unsafe or hazardous conditions or are the victims of illegal discrimination," the Labor chief McClure argued also for the states to be placed in charge of the flow of the laborers.

The Labor Department is empowered to issue visas to allow foreign laborers into the country for a specified time, but McClure said governors are in a better position to determine the realities of the labor market.

Marshall disagreed.

The federal government has officials in each state and has availabile data from the states' employment offices, Marshall said

Southwestern Bell has sent plan to Congress

Having competition in the communications industry gives customers a choice - but it makes it difficult to provide low-cost services to residential and rural customers, said Juanita Bryant, new district manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. Ms. Bryant spoke Thursday to the Midland Downtown Rotary Club. She said the philosophy of regulated telephone companies is that those who use the public network should pay "equitably" for that service. To that end, Southwestern Bell and other telephone companies have presented a plan to Congress as a means of accomplishing such a goal and to allow for competition, she said.

First, she said, regular long-distance calls would be averaged on a nationwide basis so that low-cost service could be provided in rural areas. Also, rates would be set so that long-distance service would continue to subsidize residential service, she

Second, specialized communications networks connecting various telephones within a business could be provided by the telephone company, specialized companies or the individual customer. But, she said, there would be a charge for connecting the system to the public network.

Ms. Bryant said the third element of the proposal is that specialized communications systems which are not connected to the public network could be provided by someone other than the regulated companies. And, fourth, switchboards and mobile units still would have access to the public

Ms. Bryant said the telephone company expects to spend $33 million in Midland over a three-year period beginning in 1978 to provide increased service capability. Currently, there are 550,000 calls made in Midland or into Midland each business day, she

Asian policy talk

A major speech on Asian policy is promised by President Carter for early summer. The Pacific and the Far East hold problems for the United States which won't go away, even if they seem to be in a holding pattern

The Carter administration has had its hands full with Panama. the Middle East, the Soviet-Cuban adventures in Africa, arms negotiations with Moscow and the perennial fence-mending with the nation's European allies.

Asia has loomed in foreign policy mainly in terms of the trade imbalance straining our economic relations with Japan.

Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda. preparing for his visit to Washington, warned in an interview that the economic strain between the United States and Japan is a symptom of larger problems within the Western trading community which could have grave economic and political consequences if they go untreated.

No one can quarrel with that, and we can hope that the missionary work of Mr. Carter's trade negotiator, Robert Strauss, is going to bring some relief in the U.S.-Japanese economic imbroglio and thus to the nation's trade problem as a whole:

Pointedly, Mr. Fukuda emphasized that he sees no change ahead in the security relationship between the United States and Japan. This is the aspect of our Asian policy more likely to concern Mr. Carter in his policy statement. The United States defense commitment to Japan remains the centerpiece of Pacific security.

As solid as the centerpiece may be, however, it is surrounded by elements of uncertainty. When Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinzki visits Tokyo this month he also will call on Seoul and Peking. Meanwhile, Vice President Walter Mondale is making a swing through the South Pacific and Southeast Asia. It is in those other Asian capitals that the uncertainties lie.

President Carter's preoccupation with other aspects of foreign policy is not the only reason for the low profile of Asian affairs in the last year. The new regime in Peking is only now emerging from the unsettled transition of power triggered by the deaths of Chow En-lai and Mao Tse-tung. On Taiwan, Chiang Ching-kuo is just settling into leadership after the death of hisfather, Chiang Kai-shek. A period of status quo in this nation's relations with the two Chinas may be coming to an end. Our China policy yet hangs on the ambiguities of the Shanghai communique which capped former President Nixon's visit to Peking in 1972.

The "normalization" of our relations with the mainland Communist government is a card in Mr. Carter's hand which obviously awaits only the right moment to be played.

How to play it with the least damage to our relations with Taiwan has been the question confronting the administration.

Three great powers - China the Soviet Union and the United States - see their interests touching in the Far East. In their midst are the militarily weak but economically formidable Japan, the worried Chinese on Taiwan, a Philippines torn with insurgency. and new Communist governments taking root in Indochina

From the standpoint of headlines, the last year has been a quiet one in the evolution of the Asian policy of the United States:

As the President prepares to tackle the subject, it well may be that this period of quiet may be coming to an end

It is hoped that Mr. Carter will receive better advice on the subject than he has gotten on some of his other foreign problems. It further is hoped that he will proceed with caution, and in line with the views of many Americans in the overall policy. particularly as it affects Taiwan.

Anyway, his promised talk will be awaited with considerable eagerness.

CHARLEY REESE: Charley delighted that it rained on 'Sun Day'

By CHARLEY REESE Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. - I'm glad it rained on "Sun Day" in a lot of areas. Not that I care if people want to stand out in their yards and wave at the sun or even shout at it or hold up signs saying, "We love you, Sol."

It's just that promotions like "Sun Day" tend to distract us from more immediate problems like developing nuclear power and breeder reactors, finding more oil, and opening up federal lands to exploration and min-

That, of course, is their purpose. I suspect the naive souls who are so immersed in saving the environment are the unwitting dupes of the multinationals which are clever enough to realize that environmental extremism is a non-prosecutable way to shaft their competition.

If, for example, you own a lot of uranium, then breeder reactors, which negate the need for large quantities of uranium ore, stink. If you have cozy arrangements with the oil cartel countries, then it is certainly not in your self-interest to encourage the discovery of new oil by competitors. If you own a lot of coal mines, you are not likely to be in favor of developing strip mining in the West.

What better way to oppose all these things than to finance, with foundation money, the environmental No-Nothings who will innocently lobby for legislation restricting all of these things?

You see solar energy is a fad, but unless you live to be 50 years older than you are now, you are not likely to see it play any appreciable role in the economy. The technology and capital to produce solar energy in large enough quantities simply do not exist nor will they in the foreseeable future no matter how many silly promotions

We will either develop nuclear power and find new sources of petroleum and cheaper coal or the economy will imitate a down hill skier.

Now maybe you prefer to condemn your children to an impoverished and hungry future in exchange for the knowledge that somewhere you can't afford to visit are 20 million acres of wilderness untouched by mean old men. Not me.

I don't buy this romantic nonsense. The Japanese have demonstrated that you don't need two million acres of empty land in order to enjoy solitude and tranquility. You can get by with a pot plant in the corner if you work at it.

But what you can't get by without is energy and plenty of it at the lowest unit cost possible. In our lifetimes that means nuclear, oil and coal.

The environmental No-Nothings are trying their best with stupid legislation and nuisance court actions to keep you from getting it. For example, they held up completion of an express highway in Central Florida for months at a cost of additional thousands of tax dollars because the highway was aimed at the nesting area of a certain kind of sparrow.

That's misplaced values. Human lives may have been lost for want of a safer highway and those extra thousands of tax dollars represent human labor. If the bird can't adapt, let the species become extinct. In the natural order of the universe, quite a number of species have become extinct with no help at all from man. I'm not aware of any damage whatsoever that has occurred because of the disappearance of the dinosaurs and the saber-tooth tiger.

While we're being raped by the oil cartel, these blankety-blanks are going into court to block further oil exploration of the continental shelf. I hope, too, they are all enjoying the upsurge of malaria since they suc ceeded in banning DDT.

In short, these environmental mugwumps are endangering the human environment and that's why I'm glad it rained on their silly "Sun Day.

Derwinski's move may mark the start of an overdue Republican effort to play tit-for-tat with the embattled Democratic President. When he and Republican members of the Civil Service Committee arrived at the Oval Office at the President's invitation on April 4, Mr. Carter said, in effect, look, I can't get this bill (Civil Service reform) through without you; I need your help. Derwinski, who favors most parts of the reform bill, immediately asked for a slowdown on Hatch Act reform (which would weaken present political restrictions on government employes).

The President was noncommittal. But White House aides say privately that since Civil Service reform is top priority on the President's legislative list, he will take the heat off the Hatch

WASHINGTON-Bureaucrats and congressmen are fighting to the death over the embattled Renegotiation Board. The agency was created 27 years ago by President Harry Truman during the Korean War to recover excess profits that defense contractors had milked from the Pen-

Members of Congress, led by ex-Marine Rep. Pete McCloskey, R-Calif., are trying to kill off the panel. McCloskey today was scheduled to fire the latest salvo at the board. In a 'Dear Colleague' letter, he will charge: "The costs to the government appear to have been greater than the net sums recovered by the government and the total costs to business and to the government is clearly much greater than the amounts recovered. The Congressman reviewed the 10 most recent written decisions of the Court of Claims, which hears final appeals on Renegotiation Board rulings. He asserted that in each case the court reduced the amount the board tried to recover for the Treasury. The Californian said the overall reductions cut back the board's awards from $7 million to $3.7 million. When we contacted board member William McQuillen, he protested that McCloskey's figures represent "less than 20 percent of the board's cases and are, therefore, misleading." The statistics, he told us, show that 74 percent of the board's findings have been upheld and so far this year the success has been at a rate of 84 percent.

Compounding the plight of the agency is the fact that its legal authority expired two years ago, but it continues to receive funds to work on a backlog of $150 billion in renegotiable Pentagon contracts. It's likely that Congress, to the delight of the defense industry, will cut off funds for the board in 1979, thus destroying the only federal agency with monitoring power over excess defense profits.

McCloskey and other California legislators who oppose the board come from districts heavily larded with defense industries. McCloskey insists, however, this has nothing to do with his stand. The board has been ineffective in the past, but President Carter has tried to breathe new life into it by giving full White House support to the beleaguered agency. And he personally selected Goodwin Chase as chairman. Chase had served as a board member under Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford and compiled an outstanding record by fighting the defense profiteers and exposing the board's foot dragging. Sadly, Chase's performance at the helm of the board has been less than effective. Since last September, he has been absent from work for nearly three months. After a week of being blasted at House hearings, Chase left Washington on April 28, taking refuge at his Tacoma, Wash, home,

When we reached him by phone. Chase said that his doctor had told him to take time off because of exhaustion. In response to charges that his absenteeism is impeding the board's work, he exclaimed, "That's absurd.

We talked to Chase's fellow board members, McQuillen and Harry Van Cleve. "His absence has been for an crusader whose heart is in the right place. Last June, for example, the silver-

Lockheed Corp. overbilled the Navy $10.2 million for missing steel. Later. Chase had to retract the charges because he could not document them. The accusation, says Chase, was based on faulty information supplied him by the Navy Last year. Chase threatened to appeal the $6.9 million Renegotiation Board budget prepared by the Office of Management and Budget. This angered the budget staff because it was the largest budget in the board's history and had been personally approved by President Carter. Chase decided against the appeal after his staff persuaded him to reconsider. In another gaffe, last month, Chase embarrassed the board by misidentifying aerospace contractors while testifying in support of the board's 1979 budget before a House subcom-

In fairness, the workaholic Chase is on the hotseat. Bothered by health problems, he is also under seige by the defense industry and Congress. McCloskey believes he has enough House votes to kill the panel.

Chase told us that he is "gravely concerned by the false and misleading statements with which members of the U.S. Congress are being deluged by the defense industry and its agile and resourceful lob-He predicted that "if the defense industry's campaign should succeed in killing-or even seriously crippling-the Renogtiation Board, then the defense conglomerates and their lobbyists will emerge as jubilant winners. Chase called McCloskey's attack a "distortion of facts repetitive of those being created by defense industy lobbyists." He said there should be more recognition of the $1.3 billion worth of excess profit determinations made by the board.

Cuban troops may be called into Sahara conflict

By DAVID LAMB The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI, Kenya - The for minister of the Polisario said Thursday his movement would be forced to ask for support from Cuban troops if France did not end its military intervention in the Western Sahara war.

The Polisario is an Algerian-backed liberation movement fighting against Mauritania and Morocco in West Africa for control of the Coloradosized western Sahara. The former Spanish colony was partitioned between the two countries in 1976.

At least four times since December, including once last week, France's Senegal-based warplanes have attacked Polisario guerillas inside Mauritania. The Polisario claims to have shot down two of the Jaguar fighter jets in the most recent attack, which reportedly killed 11 guerillas.

"Without French intervention the war would be over in two or three months," the foreign minister, Hakim Ibrahim, said in an interview.

"If the intervention continues or intensifies, we will not have any other alternative but to call for Cuban support. This is not something we have spoken of before and it is not an alternative we want to use because it is important wer keep our neutrality between East and West."

Cuba has at least 37,000 troops serving in 14 African countries, according to U.S. intelligence estimates, and their presence in the Soviet Union's behalf has had an important effect on the continental balance of power.

They helped President Agostinoh Neto of Angola fight his way to power against two Western-backed liberaton groups in 1976 and this year they were instrumental in helping Ethiopia's Marxist regime turn back a Somali invasion in the Ogaden.

France has about 100 military advisers in Maurtania. Ibrahim said he considers them mercenaries and equated their activity against the Western Sahara members of Polisario to that of Hitler against the Jews. He said any French military

In 1975 Spain pulled out of the phosphate-rich colony, giving the northern two-thirds to Morocco and the southern third to Mauritania. The Polisario, formed in 1972, then stepped up its guerilla war to gain independence for the region. Algeria replaced Libya as the principle backer of the movement in the mid-1970s.

Ibrahim said the Polisario has the upper hand in the war, an assessment independent analysts in Mauritania do not contest. He said his forces are holding 600 Mauritanian and 1,000 Moroccan prisoners.

Freakish weather leads to fabulous farm prices

By WILLIAM C. REMPEL (C) The Los Angeles Times

The devastating weather that swept through California farming regions this season left behind a lot of wealthy farmers - despite the widespread destruction - while contributing to some rather bizarre scenes.

In the Salinas Valley a 22-inch fish was caught swimming up a furrow in a flooded lettuce field. A rancher outside Paso Robles lost 40 head of cattle when they became mired in the mud of a rain-soaked

December winds of 102 m.p.h. blew potato crops and seeds out of the ground near Bakersfield and flash floods carved 10-foot-deep gorges through other fields in the area.

California farmers are calling this the worst weather season they have seen - but not all of them are complaining. For some, a neighbor's damaged crop means the others will get higher prices for their crops.

Lettuce farmers, for example, are harvesting fortunes thanks to weather-induced shortages from Arizona to Salinas: Lettuce prices hit record highs last month in the Salinas Valley, where the leafy vegetable already was king - with restaurants named for it and songs sung about it.

Where it would take a 300-acre lettuce field to produce a $1 million lettuce crop last year, the same crop value could be raised on a 50-acre field this year. (And in Monterey County, nearly 70,000 acres were planted in lettuce.)

Similar profits but in less dramatic numbers rubbed off on growers ofbroccoli, cauliflower, tomatoes and potatoes in the Salinas Valley where rains and floods inundated about 7,000 acres this spring.

Produce from fields that were not ruined or washed out to sea is bringing in prices that more than offset the losses in projected crop yields. This year weather roulette really paid off for the farmers up here," one agriculture official said. But the annual gamble on weather - a gamble in which state produce consumers also have a big stake brought disastrous losses to farmers in Kern County, by contrast. "I'm just hoping to salvage some of my seed and fertilizer costs," said

Edison farmer John Slikker. He stood in a field of abnormally small potatoes where blight caused by excessive moisture had stunted the growth of his California white rose (or new potato) crop

WASHINGTON - The director of the President's Council on/Wage and Price Stability, Barry P. Bosworth, said Thursday that AFL-CIO president George Meany may be correct in refusing to pledge labor's support for smaller wage increases to combat

The AFL-CIO Executive Council

Tuesday had voted to reject President Carter's request for a deceleration of wage increases and Bosworth said in an interview that the administration's anti-inflation program might have to be revised as it applies to wages.

Many unions, he said, have been locked into two or three-year contracts, adding that it would not be 'equitable" to ask those unions that had received moderate wage increases over the past few years to pledge further reductions.

But he said he believes the program makes sense on price increases because companies have had the flexibiity over the past two years to raise prices to meet rising production costs.

Carter's program, announced last month, asked business and labor to reduce wage and price demands enough to knock half a percentage point off last year's inflation rate of nearly 7 percent.

Bosworth, a major architect of the program, said it might have to be altered to recognize differences in wage increases received by various

One possibility, he said, would be to change the wage guidelines to ask unions that had received sizable increases to scale down their demands by more than half a percentage point. Unions whose workers had not kept pace wih inflation might be asked simply to hold the line.

Two months ago, after a Bosworth memorandum to the president outlining the need to establish an anti-inflation program was leaked to the press, the White House was jarred into action on the program.

The program also set up plans to establish special inter-agency task forces to work on problem areas such as transportion, health care and housing.

The administration has met with leaders of several industries such as steel, aluminum and automobiles, and received pledges of support from corporate executives. General Motors Corp. Chairman Thomas A. Murphy has said that barring a disaster, GM will raise prices less this year than

Drug couriers bring wares into Germany

(C) The Los Angeles Times

BERLIN - Harassed German police call them "an ant army" - thousands of couriers bringing hard drugs from the Middle East to this divided city and on to West Germany, leaving a growing trail of addiction, abuse and death.

Many of the couriers are Turkish, hard to trace among the 80,000 Turks living in West Berlin and the half million more in West Germany.

Aiready this year, West Berlin has recorded 21 overdose deaths.

The situation is no better in West Germany, where the 1977 death toll reached 380, compared to only 102 overdose fatalities in 1972.

It was against this background U.S. officials recently issued new warnings about the dangers of drug abuse among the 225,000 U.S. military personnel stationed in West Germany and Berlin. A congressional study said the misuse of drugs by servicemen threatened to undermine their military effectiveness.

Many German experts believe that the drug problem of the 1970s is a reversal of the pattern of a decade earlier

Hard drug abuse in the earlier period was blamed on the U.S. draftee army and the Vietnam war, spreading eventually into the German civilian community. Now hard drugs have become cheaply available in the German civilian community, particularly among those in their 20s, and have apparently spread in reverse direction to th U.S. military ranks.

"The German political leadership does not seem to understand the seriousness of the problem," one foreign expert commented. "At the lower level, they have very good people, working very hard, but at the upper level there is little awareness of the

The German press pays but spasmodic attention to the drug issue and the major publications have yet to print statistics about the 1977 rise in overdose deaths.

The battle against drug abuse also is hampered by a conflict of jurisdiction between different government agencies, the lack of a national drug enforcement agency, inexperienced police and the special legal status of

U.S. military police and U.S. drug enforcement agents praise the German police and customs officials for their desire to battle the drug problem and have developed friendly, efficient plans for cooperation with them. When a White House level drug expert came to visit Bonn recently, however, there was no ranking West German official to meet with him and to discuss the problem on a national

However, along with the bristling attacks have come a number of accolades of the "right on" variety.

The advertisement was a big enough spark but when Harrod was quoted as saying San Diego is "basically a hick town," the sparks were fanned into a flame that could heat the tar some would like to use to run Harrod out of town. "I think I've got some-

Jet sale Senate OK forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) Senate and administration officials predict that the Senate on Monday will reject attempts to veto President Carter's proposed sale of iet warplanes to Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Israel.

"I think that as of now the votes are there in support of the proposals," said Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Byrd would not say how large a margin supporters of the sales package might enjoy.

indicate," Byrd said.

The committee's 8-8 vote Thursday was sufficient to reject a disapproval resolution. But the committee decided to send the resolution to the Senate floor without recommendation.

Byrd said the matter will be brought up in the Senate Monday. "I would hope we could debate the matter throughout the day and possibly have a vote in late afternoon," he said.

The majority leader also disclosed that one on the Senate floor are senator has asked for a closed session for part of the debate in which to discuss classified mat-

Arms embargo request faces uncertain future

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's request that Congress lift its arms embargo against Turkey facesan uncertain future that has been underscored by conflicting votes in key Senate and House commiftees. In a setback to the administration's plans, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 8-4 Thursday against removing the restriction. The House International Relations Committee voted 18-17 earlier this month in favor of removing the embargo.

The issue now goes to the floor of the Senate and House with the outcome still in doubt.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., a leader in the drive to keep the embargo, said the administration would be "ill advised to continue to press it. That doesn't mean they won't do it."

military aid bill totaling almost $3 billion. Proponents of removing the embargo can revive the issue on the Senate floor with amendments to the overall bill.

On other major issues in the bill, the Senate committee:

-Approved Carter's request for authorization to give South Korea $800 million worth of U.S. military equipment over the next five years as the United States withdraws ground combat troops. An amendment was adopted to require that Carter give Congress a report on the military balance between North and South Korea 120 days prior to each phase of the withdrawal. -Overrode administration objections and voted to ban sales of items such as police equipment and riot gear to countries engaging in "a consistent pattern of gross violations" of human rights. The president still could authorize such sales, however, by certifying that exceptional circumstances warranted the transac-

The administration said the language of the ban would spark "unproductive debates" about what constitutes a consistent pattern of gross violations. -Deleted military training programs for Nicaragua and Paraguay on grounds they are vuilty of human rights violations.

Congress imposed the arms embargo against Turkey in 1975 after that country used American-supplied weapons to invade and occupy Cy-prus. Turkish troops continue to hold 40 percent of the island, where Greeks make up about 80 percent of the popu-

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, one of only three Democrats to vote with the administration on the issue, said the embargo has not pressured Turkey to negotiate about Cyprus.

"We're as far from a just settlement as we were when we began (the embargo)," he said. "It's useless to persist in a policy that has clearly Church also said the policy has not helped U.S. relations with Greece, 'where anti-Americanism is rising.' Arguing to keep the embargo, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said the administration's proposal could weaken "the less than overwhelming position the Greek government has, which is a pro-U.S. position. "I don't think we can trade off Greek good will for prospects and promises" of improved relations with Turkey, he said. Both Greek and Turkey are NATO members. Turkey retaliated against the embargo by closing U.S. military bases there.

The administration has argued the loss of the bases has cost the United States intelligence data on the Soviet Union and has weakened NATO's southeastern flank.

President's remark hurt First Lady, cousin says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rosalynn Carter was outwardly unruffled but inwardly hurt by her husband's celebrated admission in Playboy magazine that he had lusted after other women in his heart, says Hugh Carter Sr. in his new book. "She acted very calm and unconcerned, but it had been a painful thing for her," the president's cousin wrote in the book entitled "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot." During the 1976 presidential campaign, Carter was quoted in an interview with Playboy as saying that he had "looked at a lot of women with lust," but that he believed God would forgive him for such thoughts. "I believe Jimmy had not meant that he wanted other women but merely that he was not a holier-thanthou kind of person pretending that he had never looked at another woman and found her attractive," Hugh

"The truth is that Jimmy and Rosalynn are one of the greatest love stories I know," he said. "Jimmy has told me now and then how wonderful it is to be in love and not to need anyone else." Hugh Carter, a Georgia state senator and owner of a worm farm in Plains, told reporters on Thursday that he expects Mrs. Carter, unlike some other members of the family, to be "delighted" by her treatment in the book.

Although Mrs. Carter tried to be a "perfect wife and housekeeper," she never quite won the approval of her mother-in-law, Miss Lillian, according to the book. "For her handling of Miz Lillian" alone, she deserves a medal," says Hugh Carter, who was called the "scum of the earth" by the president's mother for his unflattering comments about her outspoken and stubborn manner.

Carter wrote. Plane hijacking foiled

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao (AP) — Two Colombian pilots and Curacao police captured an armed man who hijacked a Colombian airliner for five hours, and the police questioned 86 passengers through the night in search of accomplices of the hijacker.

Officials said the passengers included at least two Americans, Peace Corps volunteer James Edwards of Oxnard, Calif., and his grandmother, whose identity was not available. Edwards is stationed in Santa Marta,

Three persons - the captured hijacker, the plane's flight engineer and a Curacao policeman — were wounded, but none was in serious condition. Most passengers reported seeing only one hijacker, a man about 25 years old armed with a hand grenade and two pistols. But several passengers said he told someone over the plane's public address system to "protect him," and Netherlands An-tilles Justice Minister Leo Chance said: "We're not absolutely sure there was only one hijacker." The identity of the captive was not made public. A spokesman at the Cali, Colombia, airport where the plane made a stop said he demanded 2 million pesos — about $55,000 — and threatened to blow up offices of the Colombian airline all over the country if he didn't get it. The Avianca Airlines Boeing 727 was hijacked Thursday afternoon with 113 passengers and six crew members aboard while on a domestic flight from Santa Marta, in northern Colombia, to Bogota, the capital.

HOUSTON (AP) - Robert Pretty said he knew something was wrong when he returned home from work and found cold toast and half-empty glasses of milk on the breakfast table.

Pretty, 35, a metal worker, then found the bodies of sons Scott, 7, and Mark, 5, in the bathtub in one bathroom and the body of his wife, Karen, 26, in the tub in the master bedroom bathroom.

Scott's hands were tied behind his back with a coat hanger, his feet bound with stockings, and he had been gagged. The hands and feet of Mrs. Pretty, who was still in her flowered robe. had been bound with telephone cord. A similar cord was around her neck. A county medical examiner ruled the deaths were from a combination of strangulation and suffocation by drowning and that it appeared all three heads had been held under

Police reported Thursday they had few clues except for the couple's blue 1978 Mercury Marquis, the only thing Pretty found missing after he had discovered the bodies Wednesday

The car later was found in an apartment house parking space several blocks from the Pretty home and was towed away for a check for fingerprints and other possible clues. Homicide detective C. W. Kent said the house did not appear to have been burglarized. "Whoever did this must have come in unexpectedly, while they were hav-ing breakfast," Kent said. "There was no sign of a struggle or

BIG SPRING - The Texas Water Commission is to hold a hearing in Austin June 7 on an application by the Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD) to impound a lake on the Colorado River near the Concho-Coleman-McCulloch County line in Central Texas.

"The time when one locality developed a water supply without regard for its neighbors is past in Texas," said O. H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager.

"Water, being the precious resource that it is, must be used so that it will afford the greatest essential benefits for the most people where the water is needed," he said.

Ivie said the regional-supply concept has been part of a plan for the proposed reservoir "because we are committed to serve an area of the state that soon will be in deficit supply without this new source.

The region to be served by the proposed reservoir, which would be near Stacy, is bounded by Coleman-Ballinger, Sweetwater, Midland-Odessa and San Angelo. Municipalities outside those lines may be served by the district, Ivie said.

"It is a hard fact of life that those wanting water must be willing to pay for water," he said. "Still, no municipality would expect to tie up water it did not need but which its neighbor needed urgently."
He said the CRMWD is "dedicated to the philosophy" of supplying water to the upper Colorado River basin and to the Permian Basin and "even to others with a demonstrated need."

This is the time of the year when folks start tackling outdoor projects, and if you have a strong back and weak mind, concrete jobs may be on your list. If you're going to pour a patio or drive, drainage is an important consideration. Of course, if the situation is right, you can just slope

However, sometimes the best way is to make the center higher and have a slight slope to both sides. This is called a crown. If you had a long drive and wanted a crown, it would be nice if you could find a warped board that had just the right contour to use as a screed so you could rake along the wet concrete to form the surface you want. There's an easy way to make one.

Figure the difference between the high center and the low edges. Take a 2x4 and a 1x4 the width of the drive and place them side by side with a space the same as the difference between the high and low points. Nail a scrap of wood at each end crossways so the boards are held this distance apart. Now use a large C-clamp in the center to bring the boards together at that point. When they are together, nail another scrap to hold them there. The stronger 2x4 will remain straight while the 1x4 will bend to form the exact contour for the crown. With a helpter, you'll be able to strike off the surface and end up with a drive that will drain to both sides. There are many tricks that make concrete work

You're always wanting suggestions for uses of the old motor oil drained from cars. I brush it over the forms used for concrete projects. When the concrete has set up, the forms can be removed, and the oil makes them let go without any trouble. The oil also prevents the wood from drinking moisture from the concrete which would cause it to cure too fast.-G.S.H.

Dear Al: If you've ever wanted to have railings or iron posts in a concrete porch or patio, the best time to plan for them is when pouring the concrete. If you leave holes in the concrete, you can then set the iron work in place after the big slab has cured. To prepare holes for the iron work, I poured the concrete around glass jars of the right size for the needed cavities. I coated the jars with grease. When the concrete had set up and cured, I poked an iron pipe into the jars and broke them. Then I used my shop vacuum to remove the pieces and had holes in which to set the railings .-

2×4 CROWNED

A SUPER HINT - How many times have you heard people refer to a cement driveway? Cement is the dry powder, but after it's mixed up, it becomes concrete. Incidentally, do you know whether Portland cement comes from Portland, Oregon, or Portland, Maine? If you guessed either, you're wrong. The name comes from the Isle of Portland, En-

Make driveway with a crown gland. When the stuff is used, con-crete looks like the rocks from this isle. (A little bit of handyman trivia.)

> If you ever have to set any kind of anchor bolt in concrete there's a way to give the bolt better anchoring within the slab. Bend the bold at about a 45 degree angle, keeping the bend on the part of the bolt that will be beneath the concrete surface. With the outside part positioned vertically to the slab, the bend will add strength to the setting .- J.W.

SHOP TALK- The really big concrete jobs are much easier if you have someone else to do the mixing. There's a new type mixer called a concrete mobile. Instead of mixing as they drive along, this type truck mixes after they arrive. They have all the ingredients in bins and set a few dials to get the exact mix you need. The advantage to us slower do-it-yourselfers is that this fresher mix gives you longer to do your finishing. If a company in your area has this type equipment, it'll be worth

Is is all right to kiss a fellow good-night on the first day?—B. IN BRAN-DON, FLA.

DEAR B .: depends. The kiss itself is not as important as the motivation behind it. If a good-night kiss is a mutual sign of affection, I see nothing wrong with it-even on the first date. But if there is no feeling for the other person-only a desire for selfgratification, it is cheap and meaningless.

A girl should never kiss a boy because she thinks she "owes" him something for having date her. Neither should a boy expect a girl to kiss him for that reason.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is very careless about her ppearance in the privacy of our home. She gets breakfast barefoot in her nightgown, with her hair uncombed, which is not very pretty. She knows better and can make herself strikingly beautiful if we're having guests or going out. It hurts to know she won't bother to make herself presentable for me.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market rose sharply in heavy trading today. registering enthusiasm over reports that President Carter might be planning to tone down his taxcut proposal

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 6.58 at 840.78 on top of Thursday's 12.04-point gain.

Advances outnumbered declines by about a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed

Big Board volume totaled 22.63 million shares by noontime.

A published report from Washington this morning said the President was likely to announce soon that he was. trimming his proposed tax. cut from $25 billion to about $20 billion. He was also said to be want its effective date pushed back from Oct. 1 to next Jan. 1.

Analysts said the report was greeted as a signal that the White House was adding fiscalpolicy measures to the Federal Reserve's campaign to subdue inflation.

They noted that a smaller tax cut would tend to reduce the federal budget deficit, which is regarded on Wall Street as a primary source of inflationary pressures.

After an early 8-point rise, however, the Dow leveled off. Brokers noted that the average had again reached the 840-850 range, where last month's rally bogged down.

Glamor issues leading the advance included Texas Instruments, up 2 at 771/2; McDonald's, ahead 11s at 50; Polaroid, 13s higher at 363s, and Xerox, up 38 at 5034.

The NYSE's composite index rose .43 to 54.81. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .59 at 142.15.

Dentist offers 'old fashion' pine box burial

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - The frontier tradition of burial in a pine box was a good one, says James Reveley. It was dignified for the deceased and inexpensive for the survivors.

Incensed at the cost of modern-day funerals, which a federal study found average from $1,300 to $1,600, Reveley decided recently to offer a $300 alternative. The charge includes pickup by Reveley's Memorial Service of the body of a deceased, cold storage, legal paperwork, a handmade pine coffin, and delivery of the box to a cemetery or crematory.

Reveley also will help relatives arrange religious. memorial services and to find a cemetery plot or crematorium for disposal of the body.

"It's bucking the establishment," he said in an interview, "but I think I'm doing something really worthwhile. I think it's a real public service.

Reveley began working at a funeral home on weekends while in high school 17 years ago. He went to mortician's school, served an apprenticeship and became a mortician.

But, he said, "I was turned off by the commercial practices and ethics of the business and I quit in a couple of years."

He continued to work at mortuaries to pay his way through college and dental school and, at age 34, has a fulltime dental practice today.

Last December, he opened Reveley Memorial Service-An Alternative, a side business to his dental

The alternative is a no-frills funeral. There's no embalming of the body, no cosmetic treatment, no fancy casket, no display room, no chapel, no funeral procession and-most importantly believes Reveley-no fat bill to take care of after the living have departed. Reveley said he believes millions of people are victimized annually by funeral home operators who take advantage of their customers.

He supports this view with a study of funeral home practices by the Federal Trade Commission in August 1975 which stated:

"Each year, millions of families are forced by the death of a relative to make one of the largest consumer purchases under severe handicaps of time pressure, emotional distress and lack of information or experience

"As an FTC hearing examiner noted long ago, there are few, if any, industries where the ultimate consumer is so disadvantaged or where his normal bargaining power is so diluted in a situation of such immediate need.

Reveley keeps a copy of the FTC report on the desk at his funeral home.

"We just take the body, put it in the pine box, and deliver it to the cemetery. Then nature does its job. I would never embalm a body," said Reveley.

"How many times have you heard somebody say, When I die, I just want to be buried in a pine box? Well, that's what I'm offering.'

The cost of a cemetery plot or cremation is additional and is worked out between survivors and the cemetery. Reveley might offer suggestions if asked.

Reveley's had only four customers since opening five months ago. "But we've had a lot of inquiries. The word is spreading," he said.

The biggest problem for his business, Reveley said, is that relatives of the deceased are concerned about what others will say about them if they bury the deceased in a pine box without an elaborate funeral.

'Most people agree it's a waste of money. Funerals are for the living-the living of the funeral home owners," he added.

Reveley said there's been pressure against his business by the traditional funeral homes in San Antonio. He said one person originally refused to provide services to him for fear other funeral homes would terminate their business.

Reveley's funeral home is in a one-story building his father used for a medical practice.

He purchased a cold storage vault, where bodies can be kept temporarily. And, in another room, he displays the pine box coffin with rope handles.

A state law requires Reveley to have at least five casket models available, and he has three cloth-covered wooden models and a metal coffin in addition to the plain pine model. "But I don't really show anything but the pine box.

Just like the regular funeral homes only like to show the expensive metal caskets. The casket is supposed to be a symbol of love, they say, and you are made to feel small and disrespectful if you don't get a fancy casket for the deceased," said Reveley. "But if a customer of mine wants one of the caskets besides the pine box, he can have it at my

"There's just going to have to be a realization that the money for a fancy funeral can be better spent by the survivors, or left for a charity," he said.

Court upholds 50 cent award

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The 2nd Court of Civil Appeals Thursday upheld a jury's award of only 50 cents for a Tarrant County woman injured in a 1975 traffic accident.

Marianne Thompson had sued for $8,000 for "physical pain and mental anguish" in her accident with Arthur Derwood Rowell. A judge had ruled she was injured in the accident but left it to a jury to decide the extent

The jury ruled she was due only $1 for physical pain and mental anguish suffered in the accident. But it also said she was half to blame for the accident and therefore entitled to only half the dollar, plus

Mozambique is playing power role in South Africa

By LES PAYNE Newsday

PEMBA, Mozambique - Having won its own revolution, Mozambique, by directly supporting the guerrilla war in Rhodesia, is playing a major role in the shifting of power in southern Afri-

The coastal nation of 10 million, which, along with Angola, gained its independence in 1975 following the military coup in Portugal, is the key to what some U.S. officials fear is a falling of dominoes: The white minority regimes of Rhodesia and South Africa have appealed to western nations for support in preventing a Mozambique-style socialist takeover in their countries and the rest of south-

Black nationalists in the two white-rule countries have drawn inspiration and material aid from the revolutionary government here. About 6,000 guerrillas of the Zimbabwe African Nationalist Union fighting in Rhodesia were armed and trained in Mozambi-assistance, coupled with the mass exodus of skilled Portuguese and the closing of the border between the two countries, has stunted the growth of its economy. Some government officials say the situation cannot improve until the Rhodesia war is over.

But Mozambique is paying a high price for its opposition to the Rhodesia regime. The bur-

The country is plagued by legions of post-independence problems.

The Portuguese population, which once provided most of the doctors, lawyers, technicians, civil servants and other professionals, has dwindled from more than 250,000 to fewer than 20,000, three-fourths of whom still hold Portuguese passports.

The shortage of skilled labor, which has afflicted every African country following independence, is particularly severe in Mozambique. To fill the gap, the government has recruited hundreds of migrant specialists, called cooperativas, from countries around the world. Many have had problems adjusting to the language and customs, so the government has begun to recruit Portuguese specialists, whose language is the official one and who are familiar with the customs instilled during pre-independence days.

The nation's economy remains in ruins. Agricultural production has failen off. The civil service staffed largely by inexperienced employees. Because of the shortage of critical skills, citizens in technical training are sometimes pulled out of their clases and put to work in the fields they are studying. Transportation and communications systems have been disrupted. There are fewer than six taxicabs in the capital city, Mapu-

to. And throughout the country, telephone communications with the capital have been cut by the Rhodesian army attacking across the border at base camps from which guerrillas operate against the government

Despite the hardships, the country is establishing a socialist economy that, according to the overwhelming majority of Africans interviewed, already has improved their living conditions. Under Portuguese rule. blacks in the cities and in the rural areas reaped little reward from their participation in the political and economic life of the colony. Mozambique views itelf as a country rebuilding. Production quotas are set for farms and industries, and managers are under government pressure to meet

"We are a country starting anew," said Carlos Lobo, the country's chief representative to the United Nations. "We should not be measured by the same yardstick used to measure countries whose governments have been in power for 200 years. The Portuguese left the country in shambles. We have had only two years to begin recovery."

Nowhere is the need for recovery more noticeable than in Cabo Delgado, the northernmost province, where the armed rebellion against Portuguese began in 1962. Largely an agricultural area, the province, with a population of 1 million, is the test area for the nation's planned transfer to a communal farming system. But there are age-old problems with arid land and dreaded contagious dis-

Closing socio-economic gap is Israel's big challenge

By MARTIN G. BERCK

A Haifa woman needs her telephone fixed. The telephone company sends an indifferent, somewhat surly repair man. "It's going to be a lot of trouble," he says. "It's going to take a long time."

The repairman uses a special instrument to call his home office. Lackadaisically he reports trouble on the line. He gives his report in French. The Belgian-born customer thanks him in French.

In an instant, the repairman's attitude changes. Again he calls his office and says, in effect, "Listen, buddy, this customer is a friend of mine, and you'd better get on this job in a hurry. Right away. Vite.' Grateful, the lady of the house pours him a cup of coffee. "This is really good coffee," says the repairman. "You kow, Ashkenazim don't know how to make good coffee, but you sure do." Noting the woman's fair complexion, he remarks, "But you don't look Moroccan.' Speaking French is a sign - in this case, not an accurate one - of North African origin and membership in the Sephardic-Middle Eastern-Oriental, Asian-African component of Israel's population the "they," when the "we" are Israelis whose ancestors came from northern and eastern Europe and North America.

For 30 years, closing the socio-economic gap between the two major goups has been Israel's biggest challenge — exceeded only by the military one posed by hostile Arab neighbors. The military threat provided a huge life-and-death incentive for knitting together the disparate strands of Israeli society. The army, in which virtually all males must serve on active or reserve duty until age 59, provides one of the country's potent integrative mechanisms. Time provides another. For now, a majority of Israel's 3 million Jews are sabras (native-born), a condition that tends to blur distinctions and stereotypes of immigrant groups.

Blur, but not erase. The view is widespread that Moroccans, who came to Israel in large numbers during the 1950s, tend to be impulsive, anti-social, problem-prone, with an outsized share of delinquency, a group unhappy in its poverty. In contrast, Yemenites are seen as naively pleased with their lot, not much higher on the economic ladder, but rich in folk culture and religiosity, and something of an oriental success story. Iraqis and Persians have a foot in both have and have-not camps, with some subgroups boasting of high cultural and economic attainment. Georgians, the newest arrivals among those generally classified as orientals, tend to be written off as clannish and devious. In like manner, Tunisians, Algerians, Egyptians, Syrians, Indians and others in the Sephardic category are assigned special and not uniformly favorable characteristics.

Sephardi - the word is used more or less interchangeably with oriental — derives from the Hebrew word for Spain. First or second-generation Israelis, usually from Turkey, the Balkans or North Africa and versed in Ladino, a form of medieval Spanish, consider themselves to be the "real" Sephardim. They point out the unlikelihood of a Yemenite's forebears' having passed through Spain before the great expulsion of Jews from that country in 1492 'We're Spanish; we're not Arab," says a man whose ancestors wound up in Smyrna.

Ashkenazi is a word also stretched beyond its original denotation. It comes from the medieval Hebrew word for Germany, but it takes in most Jews from northern and Eastern Europe, and those of the Ameicans whose roots are not Sephardic. Ashkenazim, too, are stereotyped in unflattering ways, with Romanians seen as crafty, Hungarians as cunning, North Americans as spoiled rich kids. Yiddish, a form of Middle High German, was the tongue spoken by most east European Jews before they became Hebrew-speakers.

Germans, who immigrated in large numbers during the 1930s, have been the targets of ethnic barbs for decades. They are seen as uptight, self-righteous and obsessively proper. An Israeli of German background is kown as a Yekeh - a word whose origin has several theories. One is that it is a Hebrew acronym for a "Jew who is difficult to understand." Another is that the word is a spinoff from the "jackets" immigrants from Germany were given to wearing, unlike most of the rest of the population.

But it is a fact that the lingering ethnic stereotypes have given ground to a much more pronounced Israeli attitude: to revel in the varied origins of the Interest bought

HOUSTON (AP) - A half interest in two downtown office buildings has been purchased by the Deutsche Bank and other partners in an international investment group.

Realty circles estimate the price at $62.5 million, or 50 percent of a total reported $125 million value of the One Shell Plaza and Two Shell Plaza office buildings developed by the Gerald D. Hines Interests of Houston.

The group buying the half interests include the Deutsche Bank and other firms identified only as international banks. The group is called AV America Grundbesitzverwaltungsqesellschaft mbH Co. Hines remains a major owner of both properties and will continue to control and manage the two buildings. The deal is believed to be the second largest ever made on downtown property in Houston. A West German group acting through the Deutsche Bank paid Hines about $92.5 million in 1976 for an 80 percent interst in Pennzoil Place, an office com-

One Shell Plaza and Two Shell Plaza are the first major office buildings developed by Hines and opened in 1971 as corporate headquarters of Shell Oil Co.

One Shell Plaza, a 50-story tower, now is the tallest building in Houston although it is destined to be eclipsed by the 55story First International Plaza, a Hines project scheduled for completion in 1980.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Jerry Sadler thinks his runoff opponent for the Texas Railroad Commission has a conflict of interest because he still owns some oil and gas prop-of the mineral interests owned by John H. Poerner in a blind trust would serve as sufficient solution to the conflict of interest problem is of no merit whatsoever," Sadler ar-

Solar enthusiasts say we should switch now

By STAN BENJAMIN

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) -Bearing a message of good will, the government energy man flew 2,500 miles into Sun Country only to find himself catching more solar heat than a Death Valley lizard.

Somewhere between Washington and Palm Springs, policy analyst Barry Gale slipped out of the familiar world of oil, gas and nuclear power, into a close encounter with "Alternate Energy" enthusiasts bombarding him with their intense vision of a solar and geothermal future.

Gale's experience gave the Carter administration a taste of the grilling it can expect from a new energy constituency that dawned spectacularly in the May 3 "Sun Day" celebra-

Even the president's "Sun Day" announcement of a $100 million increase in the solar development budget would not have satisfied the frustrated questioners Gale faced last month at an alternate energy conference sponsored by the University of California Riverside Extension.

Gale told them the administration supports solar energy; they jeered. He told them the Energy Department was thinking "very, very tentatively" of public "town meetings" on future energy policy; they put Gale through his first town meeting then and there.

Why, they demanded, doesn't the nation switch - now, immediately from petroleum, coal and uranium to the clean, endless energy of sun, wind, water and the earth's natural

Why doesn't the government credit the social and environmental benefits of these alternate energy sources while it counts their costs?

Why does the government still spend more on nuclear development than on solar? Where are the government's incentives for solar energy to match those given conventional fuels? Where, they asked, is its sense of Gale didn't have all the answers. Nobody does. As director of data analysis in the Energy Department's policy office,

Gale plays a supporting role in policy development at least four echelons below cabinet level. But he became a lightning rod for challenges from his audience and fellow panel members at the Palm

Springs conference. Panelist Ronald Doctor, California energy commissioner, indirectly attacked the foundation of Carter's solar policy, based on driving solar equipment costs low enough to compete commercially against petroleum, coal and the atom.

"The fundamental question is not the cost of solar energy," said Doctor, "but the desirability of this means of supplying energy compared to the

Refunds may be due

WASHINGTON (AP) - Electric customers who received higher bills because many utilities had to buy electricity from other utilities during the coal strike may get some of their money back, says an official of the Department of Energy.

William W. Lindsay of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission said Thursday that utilities may have overenarged other utilities as much as $100 million for emergency electricity shipments. Those costs were passed on to the consumer. The rates charged in the transfer of electricity during the strike were "clearly in excess of costs of providing the service," Lindsay told the Senate's energy conservation and regulation subcommittee.

"In an emergency situation like this, rates should approximate costs," he said.

"It may be," Doctor continued, "that solar energy should be developed by massive state programs. ... We don't have free markets in this country today. ... We have to deal with managed — some would say manipulated - markets that do not always perform in the public inter-

Dr. Jan Hamrin of the University of California's Energy Extension Service, raised a deeper issue. "To many people, the whole energy question is one of technology," she said. "In my opinion, the issues are social and value questions. ... Where are we, where are we going, how are we going to get there, and is that really where we want to be?"-

Gale was asked what the government can do about these value questions of energy development and who is responsible for working out such

"We don't know, to tell you the truth," Gale said. "You're dipping into a (philosophical) problem when you talk about social values. ... I have a tough time defining what they are, and if you have a tough time defining what they are, you have a very tough time figuring out how to change burst out, "This is absolute nonsense. You're talking about social values every time you throw money into a nuclear power plant or into a nuclear research project.

That was too much for Doctor, who

You have implicitly made the social decision that nuclear is good and you're going all out to promote nuclear. Why don't you put that money into solar instead? Why don't you put it in biomass (fuel crops)?"

"Well," replied Gale, "all I can say is I think we are doing that, and maybe your perception is different from our perception in Washington.'

"What's the ratio of expenditure for nuclear versus expenditure for solar?" challenged Doctor. Gale agreed federal nuclear spending is higher, but said the administration is "trying to rectify that prob-lem" in its next round of energy policy decisions. A man in the audience stood up and said, "If you look at the people ... who have been involved in solar energy or alternate energy for some time, you'll find lots of them are starving. ... No government programs ... are addressing that problem." Gale said, "the key thing is price," and when alternate energy systems become as cheap if not cheaper than imported oil, then you're going to see those technologies take off."

"That kind of attitude," interjected panelist John Bockris, an Australian researcher, "is the old attitude of the market mechanism, and it will be too

The man in the audience shouted: "And meanwhile, we're starving." Gale said this was not an isolated problem - "It's a problem of how do we get Congress to act on behalf of these national energy problems."
"The problem is well defined, the solutions are all available," said one voice from the floor. I think all we need is an action group. I don't think we need more studies. I don't think we need more task forces. ... What will it take to get going?"

Tommy Cash overcomes much

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Like his brother, Tommy Cash has overcome personal problems to regain his pride, find life fulfilling and rediscover the rewards of a country music career.

Cash went through an unsettling divorce in 1975 and lost interest in his career, much like his older brother Johnny, who battled pill addiction in the 1960s

But Cash remarried in March and he's finding new spirit in life. It's just like his brother's 1968 marriage to June Carter, who helped the "Man in Black" immensely.

"I've matured as a man and an artist,' Tommy Cash said in an interview in a Music Row office. "I'm happily married now. I'm proud of my new record, and there have been some I wasn't proud of. It's like a new lease on life.

"I went through a bad divorce in 1975 and went into a slump," he said. "I lost my confidence and interest in my stage show and my whole career. But time heals all wounds and you get over things. I got interested in my career again. My wife has really helped; she helped me regain my confidence and encouraged me.'

Cash, 38, has just released the 42nd single of his 13-year career, "A Lot of Catching Up to Do." His biggest hit was the million seller "Six White Horses.

Although he's forever fighting the shadow of his brother, Cash said he really didn't know Johnny well until 1976, when YES they toured together doing a Bicentennial

"We worked together, ate together, lived together," he recalled. "It was a marvelous experience and helped me get my head together. I by Nick Lowe, Lou Reed and Pattf Smith are solid albums from routine-or-less works. The Derby ranks the top records to provide an extra guideline.

-Elvis Costello's "This Year's Model" (Columbia JC 35331) — With his horn-rimmed glasses and mildmannered reporter appearance, Costello doesn't look much like a rock star. But his music is right in step with the classic rock pulse. His vocals bristle with a conviction and bite that we rarely find in rock in the '70s. Thanks to crisper production touches, "Model" — with it tales of frustration and desire — is even more potent than last year's solid "My Aim Is True." There's a sensual urgency to "Pump It Up" that should make the song a show-stopper live, and Costello's taunting "Radio, Radio" is a call to arms that deserves the cheers of anyone who is disillusioned with the dreariness of Top 40 radio.

-Doctors of Madness' "Doctors of Madness" (United Artists UA-LA871-J2) - Doctors is the British band that an NBC-TV news team pointed to a couple of years ago as an example of how sharpies can manipuate the poor, unsuspecting rock audience. The commentators suggested the just-formed band was a bunch of no-talents. The irony is the group hasn't become a hit in England, but it's music is pretty good. So much for NBC news, and the

The Doctors' style on its first LP - available until now only in import copies - leaned heavily, but often productively, on David Bowie's stirring, pre-"Young Americans" period. Kid Strange was a good writer and singer, and the quartet's violinist had a name tailor-made for mid-'70s rock decadence: Urban Blitz. The group didn't move forward in its second album, however. The two albums have been brought together in this package. Some of the stuff from the first album still sounds terrific and some of he things third section got fresh. from the second album remain commonplace. But Bowie fanatics should give it a try. It's closer to the super emotional strains of "Ziggy" and "Aladdin Sane" than "Heroes." MAYBE.

-GENERATION X's "Generation X" (Chrysalis CHR 1169) — This invigorating power pop outfit from England kicks off its debut album with a rousing version of John Lennon's "Gimme Some Truth." The track has such striking rock splendor that it makes you want to sign up for the band's fan club. When Generation X follows with its own, uplifting "Wild Youth," you know you're onto something. Billy Idol's vocals have authority and snap. The arrangements mix the frantic rejoice of the early Sweet with punk-new wave social comment. The result is a strange, but mostly inviting blend of tough guy and bubble-gum images. Not everything keeps pace with those opening tracks, but the band's experimental, echo-assisted "Wild Dub" is a classic exercise in appealing pop-rock textures. YES.

-Nick Lowe's "Pure Pop for Now People" (Columbia JC 35329) - This album is so much fun that I've listened to it more than anything else on the list. There's an innocence and intelligence here that parallels the late Gram Parsons' work with the Flying Burrito Brothers. There's also a strong sense of clashing cultures. Where Parsons mixed what once seemed incompatible country and rock elements, Lowe merges lightweight pop strains with wry rock sensibilities in records that can be enjoyed on both the simplest and most sophisticated levels. The tracks are uneven, but the best reflect a delight with the record-making process that is hard to resist.

No Dice's "No Dice" (capitol ST 11733) - Unlik most new British bands these days, this foursome is neither punk nor power pop. It's more a marriage of the old party-time spirit of the Faces and Rod Stewart's recent, morning-after reflections. Lead Stewart-ish touches to give the whole thing a touch of class. No Dice has an above-average songwriter in Gary Strange an especially appealing guitarist in Dave Martin. The group stumbles when it gets too far into the blues, but "Someone Else's Gold" and "Crystal Clear" show it has a poignant side to match its basic rocking approach. MAYBE.

Pere Ubu's "The Modern Dance" (Blank 001) -There's so much surface noise on my copy of this album that I almost went back for another copy, but the noise may be intentional. Everything else on this debut LP by a boldly original Ohio group is framed in the oddest of electronic textures. Besides, what's a little surface noise when measured against the eerie, graveyard moans and other gurgling laboratory effects? David Thomas sings with enough growling, almost sub-human intensity to make him Mr. Hyde to Capt. Beefheart's Dr. Jekyll. Much of the music is as unsettling as a fingernail against a chalkboard. Because of that, Pere Ubu is probably going to have a hard time finding a large audience. Still, it has enough humor, spirit and "modern age" psychedelia to fascinate the adventurous. MAYBE.

-Lou Reed's "Street Hassle" (Arista AB 4169) -The comeback artist of 1978. Despite occasional sales spurts and flattering critical notices, Reed's music has been trendy and insignificant in recent years. The highly influential spark plug of the old Velvet Underground group hasn't made a good album since "Berlin" in 1973 - until now. "Street Hassle" is a gem. Unwieldy and ragged at times, it has provocation and bite. The title selection, which alternately cries out for and rejects romantic involvement, carries Reed's old "Walk on the Wild Side" persona even further into the backstreets of human emotions. A bold, powerful collection. YES.

-Patti Smith's "Easter" (Arista AB 4171) -Another candidate for the comeback artist of the year. After the disappointment of "Radio Ethiopia," Smith has regained the control and passion of her 1975 debut album. Smith has always had commanding rock instincts, but she channels them more effectively than ever here into solid, accessible rock songs. "Rock 'n' Roll Nigger" has enough fury to match the Sex Pistols, while "Because the Night" the current single - is as elegant a rock ballad as anyone has done in years. The album is bogged down by occasional moments that are either plain or naggingly obscure, but the high points match Costello

-Stiff Records' "Live Stiffs" (Arista STE 001) -Stiff is the eccentric British label that best epitomizes the independence and charm of the new wave not punk - movement in England. In just two years, it has given us LPs by the angry Elvis Costello, the likable Nick Lowe and the irrepressible Ian Dury. All three are featured on this live album recorded last year during a promotional tour by Stiff artists. The Costello and Lowe tracks make the collection a must for those who like "This Year's Model" and "Pure Pop...," but the other tracks — by Dury, Wreckless Eric and Larry Wallis' Psychedelic Rowdies - aren't strong to make this a must for everyone. Those unfamiliar with the Stiff artists shoud start with either the Costello or Lowe solo LPs. MAYBE.

-Wire's "Pink Flag" (Harvest ST 11757) -There's something too pat about this British band's approach, but still I'm fascinated by the album. The group has crammed 21 songs — or fragments into an Orwellian look at a largely cold, impersonal, disintegrating society. Though the musical textures are often alluring, the group puts the most stress on its words. You might think of Wire as what Pink Floyd would have become if Floyd's personnel had been English Lit majors rather than science and electronic shop freaks. In fact, the "Pink Flag" album cover is reminiscent (minus the cow) of Floyd's old "Atom Heart Mother" cover. The lyrics border at times on double talk, but somehow it seems

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The desire to expand her career and the idea for the movie came about the same time to Karen Grassle

She had been in the role of Caroline Ingalls, the mother on NBC's "Little House on the Prairie," for

"I was personally frustrated because I had never played the same part over a long period," she said. "I had a need."

It was her first role in prime time television, although she had appeared briefly in three soap operas in New York between stage work. The role is also one with which she does not personally identify. She thought once she was established in a successful series other roles would come her way. But nothing did. "I felt I was hiding my light under a sunbonnet," she said. "Fortunately, I had a good role model in the series in Michael Landon. Hemakes his own opportunities."

It was about that time she and Cynthia Lovelace Sears decided to work together writing a movie. And it was then that she went to Houston on a tour to promote the series and met activist journalist Katie

'She's the one who told me about battered wives," said Ms. Grassle. "I suffered from the same stereotypes about wife beating as anyone else. I thought it happened only to blue collar workers who stopped off at the bar before cashing their paychecks. I knew it didn't happen to people I knew. Katie straightened me out.

Ms. Grassle knew she had the makings of a TV movie. The result is "Battered," an NBC movie she co-wrote and starred in with Mike Farrell, Howard Duff, Joan Blondell, LeVar Burton and Chip Fields. She had just finished filming the day before on the movie, which tells the story of three couples involved Ms. Grassle said she admired the way Landon and Alan Alda were into writing and directing. "That's the thing to do," she said. "Take responsibility for your own opportunities. 'Cynthia and I had never written before. We'd never even tried to write. We thought we'd just write a treatment and I'd play a part. But we were encouraged to take this baby and develop it ourselves. That's what we did." She said she is disturbed by the way women are brutalized on television. "Women are raped, beaten up and murdered," she said. "Then a man comes along on a white horse and solves the problem.

"There is a taboo in our society, however, against interferring in anything between married couples. One of the most important questions we wanted to answer as why the wives stay. We felt if we didn't answer that question, we hadn't done our jobs." The answer, she felt, lay in sexism. She said,

"Girls are given doll's, taught to be gentle, but they're not taught to defend themselves. They're taught that their identity depends on success as a wife-mother. The worst failure is to be a failure as a woman, identified as a wife-mother.

Ms. Grassle said, "A woman feels if she's struck by her husband it's because she isn't doing her job. she feels the fault lies in herself.

She decribes herself as a feminist. "A libber is a perjorative term used to suggest what otherwise is a pushy, aggressive broad."

Yet, on "Little House on the Prairie" she plays the traditional pioneer woman, whose life is dedicated to her husband and family.

'I looked for ways to enhance the part by showing this type of woman is not as happy as she's made outto be. Then, I said, 'Why am I fighting this material on a regular basis? Why not go for the fantasy figure? Caroline Ingalls has a private life, but that's between herself and God. 'The pioneer woman is a myth. I felt in conflict with it. I'm not Joan of Arc. I'm just a person doing the best I can. I took the job despite what I knew about the character. It's been wonderful for me. It's

Her last job before "Little House" paid $90 a week. She was lured to Hollywood with the promise of a movie role, but it fell through before she had even arrived. Composers set U.S. campaign

By KEVIN M. KELLEGHAN

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Remember hit songs of the 1940s and '50s like "It's Impossible," "What a Difference a Day Makes," "Granada" and "Be Mine

They were written by Mexicans. And Mexican composers are determined to get Americans whistling their tunes again through a $3 million promotion campaign this year supported by the Mexican

Two decades ago, Mexican music regularly made the U.S. hit parade, although Americans rarely knew many favorities were first sung in Spanish south of the border.

"Besame Mucho" was the first million-record seller, a 1943 bilingual version by Larry Russell, a Los Angeles-born singer who recently won an award here as "the American who has done the most for

Mexican music. Others, recorded by stars like Perry Como, Ray Conniff, Edy Gorme, Trini Lopez, Harry Belafonte, Shirley Bassy and Vicki Carr, helped make Mexican composers Agustin Lara, Maria Grever and Alberto

The songs included "Amor, Amor" "Vereda Tropical," "You Belong to My Heart," "Perfidia," "Frenesi" and "Magic is the Moonlight."

There were songs in Spanish that became familiar as well, including "Granada," "Alla en el Rancho Grande," "Tipi Tipi Tin" and the mambo music made famous by Cuba's transplanted Perez Prado, who triumphed after he moved to Mexico.

The Mexican Composers Society, with 20,000 active members, has its eye on the record charts again and the dollars. The society recently opened a $2 million dollar, three-studio, 48-channel recording complex and will launch its own record label this year.

Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo attended the studio opening and promised support for the campaign, calling Mexican music "a message of the brotherhood of Mexico to the people of the

The composers have assembled a "Voices of Mexico" team of 45 top Mexican artists who will promote throughout the country, the United States, Japan, Spain, Italy and Canada. And the society will give a $1,000 prize this year to the best new composition by a Mexican composer.

Composers will visit 18 U.S. cities, promoting Mexican music. Ramon Inclan, the society's public relations manager, said the cities include New York, Washington, Chicago, Miami, New Orleans, Las Vegas, Dallas and San Antonio.

'Sharpstown' issue on legislative docket

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - State insurance for bank deposits — the issue that made Sharpstown a household word in 1971 - is back on the legislative docket.

But House Speaker Bill Clayton, who ordered a subcommittee study on the feasibility of a State Deposit Insurance Corp., said Thursday he is thinking only of protecting deposits over $40,000.

That's the limit per account owner that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) will cover.

The House subcommittee on state deposit insurance held its first hearing Wednesday but generated no testimony from bankers or their trade associations.

"Don't everybody rush up here at once," said Rep. Bob Maloney, R-Dallas, subcommittee chairman.

State Credit Union Commissioner John P. Partons described the state deposit insurance system created by He said most credit unions chose a state insurance system over the federal one when given the choice in 1975. State bank deposit insurance was Intimately associated with the Sharpstown State Bank scandal.

The core of the scandal was an allegation that then House Speaker Gus Mutscher and two lieutenants received profitable stock deals from Frank Sharp in return for passage of two deposit insurance bills in 1969. Goy. Preston Smith vetoed the bills, which the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission interpreted as giving Sharp a way out of Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. scrutiny of his Sharpstown bank. Maloney told reporters any bill on deposit insurance would have to be super legislation because the taint of Sharpstown would be there.'

Asked what good such an SDIC might be, he said, "There may be a financial advantage to state banks in using state experience rather than national" as the basis for deposit Maloney's subcommittee got its instructions from Rep. Nub Donaldson, D-Gatesville, chairman of the House Financial Institutions Committee.

"If we had an SDIC (State Deposit Insurance Corp.) it could relieve the dual (state and federal) layer of regulation. People have expressed to me some dissatisfaction with the regulations of the FDIC," Donaldson said in

Old-timers say kids of today missing the fun

By WILL PENEGUY The Times-Picavune

NEW ORLEANS - Johnny Unitas, Kyle Rote Sr., Paul Hornung, Bob Cousy and Mickey Mantle were locked in personality ping-pong here Wednesday night, bouncing from interviews to autograph signings. Someone asked, "Don't you guys ever get tired of this?'

"Never," said Mantle. "I love it," added Hornung.

It was a step back into another era. a time in which Unitas says "the athletes at least enjoyed their work."

"It's hard to say why. I don't think they seem to have the same fun playing anymore. Maybe it has become too big a business. But the players I know today just don't seem to have fun anymore," Unitas said.

Ironically, those five athletes were all involved in the making of professional sport's present bed: an entanglement of big business, entertainment and spiraling inflation.

Rote was one of the prime movers in the formation of the NFL Players Association. Cousy brain-stormed the 'NBA union. Unitas and Mantle were a pair of the early packages TV marketed on those 19-inch sliver-screened surburban salesmen that popped up in the American dens of the 50s.

UNITAS, WHO signed his 1956 contract with Baltimore - "I thought I'd pulled a fast one because Pittsburgh signed me for $5,000 the year before and cut me" - doesn't put all the blame on the athletes.

"I don't blame the kids. It's the times that've done this," he said of our litigation-minded, bureaucraticbased society. "They're just out to get whatever they can.

"But I don't mind saying I do question some of their attitudes - their dedication to the game. They are getting good money and I don't think the teams and the fans are getting 100 percent performance in return.'

Hornung agrees. "There's no question you're getting a different kind of kid out of college today." but he is a reflection of our society, says the former Green Bay Packers great. "Jim Finks said it best. It's just not an honor to play professonal football any more Not only is it not an honor to play, but the athletes of today are not received by the public with the same adultion of 20 years ago.

"TV has a lot to do with it," said Rote, who is quick to point out that his son Kyle Jr., twice a winner of "Superstars" competition "made more in eight days than I made in 11 years." "I grew up without TV and when I was a kid we were lucky if we saw a player in the flesh. My kids just didn't feel the way about athletes that I did. They had different priorities." Rote smiled and added, "Maybe that's a sign of intellect on their part.

"BUT THE fans of today are hearing and reading the same things we are everyday about huge contracts and jumping teams. When I grew up, we didn't know what anybody was making and it was no concern.

Although both Rote and Cousy were prime movers behind the labor membement in pro atheltics, both have reservations about the direction the games are headed in now.

"I was a part of its creation," Rote said of the NFLPA. "And it came about because of inequities in the system. But as it gets stronger it is creating abuses of its own. But if you follow history that's a common tract. Labor manmagement (in industry) followed the same route.

The need for the players associations grew out of what Hornung calls the owners treatment of players as chattel mortgages.

COUSY APPROACHES the problem by saying, "I helped create the monster. But at the time we needed representation and today we still need

In the end, says Cousy, it is always. the fan "who gets it in the neck."

came into this heated series six games out of first place. It was time for the streak to cease, but it wasn't easy at that "It had to happen some time," Midland catcher Duane Gustavson said matter of factly after the win. "They

It looked like a piece of cake in the early going as the heavy leaded bats of Mike Gatlin and Eric Grandy staked Midland to a 7-2 margin after three innings. And to top that off, can't win them all, can they?"

Midland starter Ron Davis seem to Cubs averages

Davis tired in the seventh, but went far enough to even his record at 2-2.

Somehow, San Antonio kept chipping away, and before you knew it, it was a one-run ball game heading into the ninth inning. Midland reliever Tom Butler gave up a leadoff walk to lack Perconte to open the ninth, but later ended the threat with a double play tossup to Kelly Snider, who obliged with his second twin killing rap of the night.

Davis was a little wild starting the contest and gave up two runs, one unearned, in the second frame when two walks and a double by Mark Bradley hurt him. He got into trouble again in the third with a walk and another double to Snider, but this time he pitched his way out of it as the Cubs nailed Bobby Mitchell and Snider at the plate trying to score on a ground ball and what appeared to be a wild pitch by Davis. Gustavson fooled them all by retreving the errant pitch and tossing to Davis to nail Snider. -

Davis went on to retire 12 batters in a row before he was roughed up for two runs in the seventh.

"It was a good outing for me. I got a little tired in the seventh and started to get the ball up, but I had one real good stretch there.

"I thought Ron pitched real well," Midland manager Jim Saul said. "His slider was working for him, but I think he lost it in the seventh. I couldn't really tell from the side. But we'll take this one. I like to beat the Dodgers any way we can.'

The Cubs have now won nine of their last 10 games. In this win, it was Gatlin, on loan from the Minnesota Twins farm, and Grandy that carried the big sticks. Each knocked in three runs and each powered awesome Gatlin and Grandy both homered in the second inning. Gatlin blasted out a 380-foot shot to left center while Grandy hit a two-run fly ball round tripper that would have brought rain on a cloudy day. Gatlin hit a two-run ground rule double in the third to deep right center while Grandy added run scoring single to go along with Aaron Randall's sacrifice fly, which accounted for all the Cubs damage against the Dodgers.

Gatlin now has homered in his last two starts after joining Midland five days ago. "I'm not really a long ball hitter. I hit line drives like that double in the third. But I got a good curve tonight and just leaned out over the plate and got good wood on the ball," Gatlin understated. That shot could have crossed the Grand Can-

San Antonio added two runs in the eighth inning when Myron White connected for his fourth homer of the year off Butler. That made it close in the race, five games back

CUB PRINTS: A two-bit beer night will greet the Cubs and Dodgers tonight at 7:30 when Lee Smith, 3-2, will face San Antonio's David Stuart, 3-3. #### McCovey disturbed over talks SAN FRANCISCO - How suite it

San Francisco Giants veteran Willie McCovey is upset with the way contract negotiations are going with team management. According to the San Francisco Chronicle in today's editions, the discussions have stumbled over whether the club pays for his hotel suite on road

"I've talked with (Giants' owner Bob) Lurie three times in the vey said, "and I'm no closer to signing now than I was in spring training."

The newspaper said McCovey's attorney, Hal Silen, is urging McCovey to accept a 10-year package deal by which hewould play the next two years with an option for a third, then spend an additional eight years with the club on a personal services contract.

With incentives, the 40year-old McCovey could make about $150,000 per year for the next two playing seasons, and a total of $400,000 for the following eight years.

The hotel suite clause is the obstacle, the Chronicle said. If McCovey were to pay for it himself, as he has done for several years, it would cost him about $5,-000 annually.

"It (the suite) is just a little thing - something I've had for the last six or seven seasons," McCovey said.

General Manager Spec Richardson said, "We were near the end of negotiations, writing the proper language into the contract, when the suite thing was brought up. Bob is bending over backwards to give McCovey a 10-year package. If it was my decision, I wouldn't give it to him.

"This might not be doing the right thing." McCovey said as he left the clubhouse Thursday, 'but I'm still disturbed over something Lurie said to me, indicating the Giants did me a favor by signing me two years go.

If there's one team that Steve Carlton enjoys beating, it's the Cincinnati Reds. If there's one pitcher, it's Tom Seaver.

Carlton has been thoroughly enjoying himself in recent days.

For the second time in less than two weeks, the Philadelphia Phillies' lefthander tamed the Reds while facing Seaver. That inspired a genuine grin from the usually stoic Carlton.

"It was one of the sweetest victories of the year," said Carlton after pitching a six-hitter to whip the Reds 4-1 Thursday night. "I can't remember beating Tom very often.'

It was only the second time he's beaten Seaver in their last 10 decisions. The first was last week, a 12-1 victory in Cincinnati. Until then, Carlton had an 0-8 record against "Tom Terrific," dating back to 1970.

Thursday night's victory also was satisfying because Carlton hasn't had much luck against the Reds since he came to the National League. His last two victories improved his record against Cincinnati to 7-9.

Elsewhere in the National League, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0; the San Francisco Giants trimmed the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2; the Chicago Cubs edged the San Diego Padres 4-3 and the New York Mets nipped the Montreal Expos 3-2. The Boston Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 in the American League, which had two rainouts - California at Detroit and Minnesota at Chicago.

Greg Luzinski's home run and a two-run triple by Richie Hebner backed Carlton's pitching. In the third inning, Luzinski pounded a bases-empty homer, his seventh of the year. The Phillies knocked out Seaver in the eighth on Hebner's tworun triple. In contrast to Carlton's euphoria was Seaver's dismay after losing his fourth game in five decisions. 'No matter what road you want to take," he told writers after the game. "I lost 4-1." The Cincinnati ace kept repeating the known fact in front of his locker: "I lost 4-1. Nothing seemed to raise the spirits

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Ricky Hayley brought a new pole vault to the state boys track meet this weekend to help polish a reputation left tarnished after the Texas Relays last month. Hayley of Corpus Christi Tuloso-Midway entered the relays with a 16-2 best, second-highest vault nationally, but could launch only a 15-0. "All three of my 16-plus jumps this year have been on asphalt or hard runways," said Hayley, who has signed a scholarship with Texas A&M. "When I get on that Tartan runway at UT, it changes my stride HAYLEY CLEARED 17 feet in practice and was scheduled to find out if that was a good omen at 5 p.m. today when Class 3A pole vault finals are held at Memorial Stadium.

Other top athletes competing in the two-day meet are Dallas Jefferson's Michael Carter, Class 4A shot put champion and Carl Williams of West Columbia, state record holder in the 100-yard dash and 220.

Rain rescues Captains in TL

By The Associated Press

It was just like the old western movie scene...the soldiers arriving just in time to save the settlers from the Indians. Only this time it was the rain starting just in time to save Shreveport's Captains from a rally by the Jackson Mets.

The rain came in time to save Shreveport's abbreviated, five-inning 3-0 Texas League baseball victory over Jackson.

Jackson had runners at first and third with two out and the count was down to three-and-two on Bob Healy when the rain came...and came...and came. The umpires called the game, ruling it a complete

The rain apparently didn't do too much to cool Jackson manager Bob Wellman, who protested the game on grounds that no effort was made to get a cover on the field and that there wasn't a ground crew around to help cover the field so that the game could be resumed when the rain stopped.

IN OTHER less turbulent Texas League action, El Paso clipped Amarillo, 11-4; Arkansas blasted Tulsa, 10-4 and Midland edged San Antonio, 7-6.

Bob Ewing and Danny Goodwin had two-run homers for El Paso in the 11-4 victory over Amarillo. Joe Hicks accounted for all four Amarillo runs with a three-run homer and a solo homer. Ralph Botting went eight innings, giving up only six hits and striking out nine to raise his record to 2-1. Gary Lucas, who pitched for five innings, is now 2-4 with the loss Arkansas rode the home run hitting of Mike Calise and Gene Dotson in taking the 10-4 victory over Tulsa. It was quite a slugfest with Arkansas getting 15 hits and Tulsa 13, including four doubles.

Said Neale, "We're playing now the way we played at the start of the season," when New England surged into first place with 11 straight victories. We know what we have to do against Winnipeg," said Neale. "And one thing you can be sure of, we won't be trying any of that Birmingham stuff."

The Birmingham Bulls tried their usual intimida-

By MIKE COCHRAN FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Steve Melnyk could have been a cat burglar. Or at least a pickpocket.

With the velvet touch of a safecracker, he one-putted 12 consecutive holes Thursday and escaped with the first-round lead in the $200,000 Colonial National Invitational golf tourna-

"I'm embarrassed to tell you how many putts I had," the former U.S. amateur champion said with a grin after posting a 5-under-par 65 that broke up a five-way deadlock at 66.

Against a background of lightning, thunder and semi-darkness, Melnyk calmly dropped a 6-foot birdle putt on the final hole and beat a cloudburst by a long eyelash.

That putt was only his 22nd of the warm, windy afternoon and was the final indignity imposed upon the proud Colonial, which yielded a nearrecord 26 subpar rounds for openers.

THUS, MELNYK, 31, a non-winner in eight years on the tour, took a one-shot lead into today's second round of the 72-hole chase for a $40,000

The quartet at his heels included Lee Trevino, the 1976 Colonial champ, who flirted with first place until he took a bogey at the 17th and then narrowly missed a tying 30-foot birdie putt on No. 18.

"I'm hitting the driver so good, I gotta dial the operator for long distance after I hit it," he chuckled. Also at 66 were Fuzzy Zoeller, Gil Morgan and Mike Sullivan. Sullivan, 23, was in the sunrise trio first off the tee while the other leaders were among the late finishers.

Former Masters champion Charles Coody, who played collegiately at nearby Texas Christian, headed a group at 67 that included 1972 Colonial winner Jerry Heard and five others.

TOM WATSON, bidding for his fourth title of the season, was within striking distance at 69, but Gary Player, also a three-time winner this year, fell back with a 73.

Defending champion Ben Crenshaw also toured the 7,170-yard Trinity River treachery in 39-34-73 and surrendered any serious hope of repeat-

Melnyk attributed a portion of his putting success to a lesson from Crenshaw and admitted the 22-putt performance was his best ever. He one-putted every green from the seventh hole through the 18th.

"I didn't hit any good golf shots I'd consider particularly memorable, but I didn't hit any real bad golf shots either," the former University of Florida golfer said.

HE STRAYED with a 5-iron on the par-3 16th and wound up within a whisker of going out of bounds. He took a scrambling bogey 4 and con-fessed with a sly grin, "It was a good

George Burns knocked a 1-iron in the hole at the par-5 first green for a double-eagle deuce, the first in Colonial's 30-year history. But he gave back the three strokes on the 10th with a triple bogey and finished at 32-38-70.

"Twenty people saw the double eagle," he quipped. He didn't say how many witnessed the triple bogey.

Barney is questioned in probe

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) - After authorities threatened to hold him on $100,000 bond as a material witness, Detroit Lions defensive back Lem Barney testified before an Erie County Grand Jury investigating an alleged international drug ring.

Barney, 32, a resident of Detroit, testified with partial immunity for 40 minutes Thursday.

Authorities declined comment when asked if Barney was questioned about other National Football League players. A dozen persons were indicted later on a total of 102 counts by the grand jury probing the alleged cocaine and amphetamine trafficking scheme,

The year-long investigation relied in part on court-approved telephone taps. One of the taps allegedly recorded a conversation Barney had concerning cocaine and amphetamine purchases, court records

The three-time All-Pro arrived from Detroit, but balked at testifying, saying he wanted to review the taped conversation

Accompanied by lawyer Lester Hudson, Barney was handed a subpoena. When he still appeared reluctant to testify, saying he wanted total immunity - including immunity from any perjury charges resulting from his testimony -Barney was charged as a material witness.

Bail was set at $100,000 to insure his presence in the jurisdiction pending his testimony. When de-puties began handcuffing Barney, state Supreme Court Justice Norman A. Stiller waved them away, saying there was no need to embarrass the 12-year NFL veteran. Barney testified shortly thereafter.

Rice's 11th*belt

BALTIMORE (AP) - In the constant battle between pitcher and batter, even the hot-hitting Jim Rice seeks an edge.

At least, pitcher Dennis Martinez of the Baltimore Orioles thinks the Boston strongman may have used a bit of chicanery to set up his two-run homer which keyed a 5-4 Red Sox victory Thursday night.

Rice, who came into town with a .571 average during a nine-game hitting streak, was 0-for-4 against Baltimore pitching when he came to bat in the third inning following a single by Jerry Remy.

ON AN 0-2 count, Martinez made an unsuccessful pickoff attempt on Remy which might have been his biggest mistake of the game.

Martinez claimed Rice used that moment to check the position of catcher Dave Skaggs, who was positioned for a pitch to the outside of the plate.

"I saw him look back," Martinez said, "and I thought maybe I should pitch him inside. But then I decided to stay with the outside fastball, and it was about five inches off the plate." Rice, who was gone before he could be checked on the sneak-a-peak theory, had agreed earlier that the pitch was well out of the strike zone. But he seemed to be expecting it there. "It was a bad pitch, and wasn't a good ball to hit," he said. "It could have gotten away from the catcher, it was that far out.

But Rice sent the ball flying over the right center field fence for his sixth homer in 11 games and his 11th of the season.

ALTHOUGH HE has driven in 19 runs while hitting safely in 10 of his last 11 games, Rice insisted, "I'm not in a streak. Every day is a new game." Ray Miller, Baltimore's pitching coach, was amazed at the strength of Rice. "It looked like he just reached out to protect Remy when he ran," Miller said. "Last night, he hit a shot to shortstop on an inside pitch which I thought he had already decided to take."

Each team scored twice in the ninth, with the winning run crossing the plate as Baltimore shortstop Kiko Garcia dropped the ball as he was about to underhand an inning-ending forceout toss.

Boston, which has won eight of its last nine, used relievers Bob Stanley, Tom Burgmeier and Dick Drago before stifling the late bid by the Orioles, who won Wednesday night on Eddie Murray's two-run homer in the ninth. Murray, who left five runners stranded by hitting into two double plays, sent one run home with a sacrifice fly. Another scored when Rice lost Lee May's soft fly to left in the lights.

But Drago, who hadn't pitched since April 28 because of a sore arm, retired Gary Roenicke on another soft fly to Rice, nailing down his third save in nine appearances.

For the second night in a row, Boston's Carl Yastrzemski singled on his last time at bat, extending his hitting streak to nine games.

Prior to the ninth, Baltimore scored on Rich Dauer's sacrifice fly and a pinch single by Terry Crowley, who has gone 12-for-23 as a pinch hitter since rejoining the Orioles last Aug. 12.

Buckner figures 10-speed is his ticket to majors

BT TED BATTLES

Midland Cubs outfielder Jimmy Buckner has learned his

All he got going 90 miles-an-hour in his Volkswagen was a ticket, and it wasn't to the major leagues. From now, Jimmy vows his speeding will be on his 10-speed bike and, if there is a ticket to the major leagues in his future, Buckner figures that's how he'll get it.

"The year I stole 50 bases (Lodi, California League, 1973, while a Baltimore farmhand), I had ridden a 10-speed bike all winter," he recalled, "This last winter I was back on my 10speed, peddling it everywhere I went in low gear.

Buckner credits building up his legs during the off season for his fast start on the bases in the Texas League this season. Last year he stole only eight bases in 67 games for Midland. This year, 29 games into the season, he already has fleeced opposing catchers 19 times.

"I know if I ever make it to the majors, I'll do it on stolen bases. That's the direction the game has been going in recent years and the stolen base has taken on increasing importance.

Perhaps the trend was impressed upon Jim while playing under Maury Wills in the Mexican League a couple of winters ago. Maury stole a base or two in his career, reviving a phase of the game that had threatened to become nothing more than a vestigal appendage.

THE SPEEDING ticket came when the Cubs asked him to report after he had been released in spring training a year ago by both the San Diego and Chicago organziations.

"I was with San Diego only a week. They offered me good money, but looking back, I can see they had no intention of keeping me, so the money offer was misleading. They were loaded with outfielders. Through my brother Bill (who had been traded from Los Angeles to Chicago during the winter), I got a tryout with the Midland Cubs during the last week of spring training "Manager Jim Saul's club was pretty well set and I was released at the end of spring training, but they told me to go home, keep playing, stay in shape and be ready.

When injuries struck Midland the second month of the season, Buckner was playing for a semipro team in Lake Tahoe, not sure whether his pro playing days were over at the age of 22. When I got the call, I headed for home (Vallejo, Calif.) and got the ticket for speeding.

WHILE HE stole only eight bases, Jimmy was a bargain basement find for the Cubs. He was the second leading hitter on the club with a .313 average and the offensive catalyst in making things happen and helping Midland to the second best won-lost record in the Texas League, al though the Cubs' misfortune of playing in the same division as El Paso, with the best winning percentage, kept them out of the playoffs.

"The release by San Diego was a blessing in disguise, because I got to play for Jim (Saul). The first couple of games he put me in the lineup and I sacrificed a couple of times and hit-and-run a couple of times, so he put me in the No. 2 spot and left me there for the year. The nice thing about Jim is that he lets you play your game and he will stick with you through the slumps if you are putting out 100 per cent on the

FOR A career which started out with such promise back in Lewistown of the Northwest League, the subsequent years have been filled with frustration for Buckner

It was in 1972 that he set the modern Northwest League record for most hits (113), total bases (208), triples (13) and home runs (17) and led the league in runs scored, doubles and RRI. The honors flowed in He was named to the Class A all-star team, named the league's MVP and named Topps. Minor League Player of the

"The next spring I went to camp expecting to move up to AA ball," he remembers. "The Orioles were stacked with talent and I was sent back to A ball. It was a bitter disappointment. My rookie year, plus a winter in the Mexican League, I felt would help me to bridge the gap. In Mexico, I had 123 hits in 70 games and 208 total bases off good pitching. So when I was sent back, I reported to A ball with a bad start. I got off to a terrible start, but batted .350 the last half of the season and wound up with a .276 average and stole 50 bases at Lodi.

The Orioles released him along with some other good players who have done well since in 1975 after two seasons in AA ball. "It seemed to be a case of the manager releasing all the single guys." So Jimmy wound up hitting 309 for Monterrey in the Mexican League in 1976.

Grateful to the Cubs for the opportunity to play again, Buckner not only spent the winter riding his 10-speed bike, but worked as a lumberjack in the California forests. "We chopped wood all day and had lunch on the mountainside. When it rained, we went down into town and loaded wood on trucks. It made me thinner, leaner and faster."

THIS SPRING it looked like he'd stick with Wichita, but after the "last" cut, an outfielder was sent to the Aeros on option and Jimmy was back with Midland.

If it was a disappointment, it showed only in the opening se-.. ries at San Antonio when he went 2-for-15. Since then, he has hit at a .456 clip, leads the league in hitting, slugging? stol and "attitude.

Against Amarillo the other night, Jimmy turned in what has become a typical Buckner performance this year, making two spectacular catches in the outfield, stealing three bases and collecting three hits, including the game winner in an 11-10 slugfest, coming through with two out in the ninth and behind in the count 0-2.

On Tom Tellman's first two pitches he looked like the All-America out. "I hit a fast ball, the same kind he blew by me for the first two strikes.

Then, Wednesday night against the Gold Sox, he hit a two-out run-scoring triple that sent the game into extra innings and then in the 13th put the winnin run on third with a hitand-run single.

Buckner feels he has matured in the last year and credits his marraige to Jane Crisp, a North Carolina girl last Labor Day, asone of the big reasons.

"They used to call me Mad Dog. I've always played with a lot of emotion, but she settled girl and very religious. I've never been very religious, but since I met her, I've learned there's more to life than just swinging a baseball bat."

Buckner feels he is young and still has plenty of time to make it to the majors. "I have no time table. I just want to compile some statistics in the Sporting News where I can be followed and maybe someone will take has stopped short of so designating him.

"Martinez has done an excellent job," Bamberger

Physical problems have bedeviled Brewers catchers since spring training, when Ray Fosse, who had signed a four-year contract as a free agent, injured a knee, ankle and hamstring muscle while running out a ground ball. Fosse, who had been expected to be the Brewers' regular catcher, underwent knee surgery Wednesday and is sidelined for two to three

Nyrop is vital to Montreal defense

MONTREAL (AP) - When players from other National Hockey League clubs discuss the Canadiens they often comment on the mobility of the defense corps as one of the big reasons for Montreal's success.

And chances are they will talk about the rushing tactics and the ability of Larry Robinson, Guy Lapointe and Serge Savard - not necessarily in that order - to move the puck out of the Montreal end and still get back in time to protect their own goal.

But there's a lesser-known member who makes up the basic foursome posted on the Montreal blue line.

He is Bill Nyrop, who in the Stanley Cup playoff quarter-finals against the Detroit Red Wings and the just-completed semifinal series against the Toronto Maple Leafs, continued to be a totally reliable figure. He often is overlooked because of the more open performances of the Big Three.

THAT IS, however, the way Nyrop

King Solomon likes Buddy Jay

By TOM SALADINO

ATLANTA (AP) — Early in his pitching career he was dubbed "Kingcolomon" but Atlanta Braves' ace reliever Eddie Solomon would just as soon be called Buddy Jay.

Rescued from the oblivion of the minor leagues by the Braves a year ago, Solomon a 27-year-old righthander who labored seven seasons with limited success in three organizations, responded with a 6-6 record as a starter and long reliever.

The 6-foot-3, 190-pounder began this season in a similar role but fate and a blazing fast ball have changed all that for Solomon, who grew up in Warner

"A SITUATION came up where we had to pitch him in short relief and he was outstanding," said Manager Bobby Cox. "He did the same thing the next time out and has been outstanding. He's our stopper, our No. 1 man in the bullpen.

Solomon, who signed with the Los Angeles Dodgers' organization in 1969 and shuttled off to the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis organizations, responded with a string of 15 consecutive innings without allowing an earned

"I've always been called Buddy Jay since I can remember," said Solomon, whose given name is Eddie Jr.

When I signed with the Dodgers in 1969, I signed the contract as Eddie but my close friends all called me Buddy Jay. In fact, my first year in the rookie league my coach, Goldie Holt, even called me 'King Solomon.'

"I'VE WORKED out of the bullpen before but it was different. In Los Angeles they had Mike Marshall when I was there and in St. Louis it was Al Hrabosky. It was hard to get any work in. Hard to stay sharp," he explained.

This situation certainly is different. I never really thought I could get into relief pitching. But since I accepted the idea, I've had no prob-

Stop Thompson stop Nuggets, easy

SEATTLE (AP) - It all looks so simple. Stop David Thompson and you've stopped the Denver Nuggets.

Actually, no one is going to stop Thompson, the Nuggets' 6-foot-4 guard and one of the premier shotmakers in the National Basketball Association.

But the Seattle SuperSonics, applying some old-fashioned chest-to-chest defense, have cooled off the Denver star and the Nuggets are feeling it.

Dennis Johnson, the Sonics' 6-4 guard, shadowed Thompson throughout Wednesday night's playoff game. Thompson wound up hitting just 6 of 19 shots and Sonics won 105-91 to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Western Conference championship series.

Turner, the winning skipper in the 1976 America's Cup yacht race, is also 39. He's managed and umpired, so what's left for him to do? "I'd like to play," he said with a laugh. "But I guess I'm too old for that."

HE SAID watching a game from behind third base provided a good view, but it wasn't too different from his usual perch by the Braves' dugout. "I always sit down at the field level," Turner said. "I don't want to sit upstairs in a glass box. Some of the owners have to do that for protec-

Turner is by no means your normal owner. He's read over half of Bouton's book, Ball Four. "I read enough to know I like it," Turner said. "What amused me the most was his recounting of some of his salary negotiations under the old system. After reading that, it's easy to see why players

Thompson and the rest of his Denver teammates know exactly where they stand.

'We're still in this series. But we've got to win one game here," he said. "My shots just aren't dropping. I haven't been shooting the ball that well," continued Thompson, Denver's leading scorer in the regular season. "I missed a lot of easy shots (Wednesday night). If I'd made all the layins I had, I'd have scored 35 points. "But Marvin (Webster) is pretty intimidating in there."

Denver's plan was to get the ball inside to Dan Issel, their 6-9 center. But Marvin Webster, Seattle's 7-1 center and a former Nugget, ruined that strategy.

"WE DROPPED back and clogged the middle," said Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens. "When you drive and go up in the air and the middle is clogged, the only pass has to go out, Issel's sub-par performance under-scored Denver's inside troubles. The Nuggets' leading scorer in the first two games of the series, Issel collected just 13 points on 6-for-17 shooting. He played 13 minutes in the second half after being ca led for his fourth personal foul early in the third period. The Nuggets also must find a way to stop Fred Brown, who has bounced off the bench and bombed Denver in the SEATTLE (AP) - Eight young men have been arrested for scalping tickets to Wednesday night's National Basketball Association playoff game matching the Seattle SuperSonics against the Denver Nuggets.

Soccer preparations are normal after bomb blast

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - The main press center for the 1978 World Cup of soccer was reopened Thursday following a bomb blast that killed a police demolition expert who tried to defuse it.

"Everybody is back to work and everything is normal", said a spokesman for the San Martin Cultural Center, in the heart of the city, where the press center is to open Monday.

The World Cup competition will begin June 1 with a soccer match between defending champion West Germany and Poland.

But the main press center here and those in the four interior venues -Rosario, Cordoba, Mendoza and Mar del Plata - will open next week as the first of an estimated 5,000 journalists begin arriving for their final accreditation and preparatory work.

Some 500 technical and clerical workers were back on the job following Wednesday afternoon's bomb blast in the press center garage.

Police Inspector Hector Rodriguez, 27, was killed instantly when the device — hidden in a car — exploded in his hands. His helper, Corporal Raul Angel Russo, was gravely wounded and remained hospitalized in a coma, accoring to police sources.

Four other persons, also believed to be police officers, were reported to have been wounded by the blast, but police did not officially confirm this.

Municipal emergency workers were called in just after the bomb went off because officials feared the explosion had caused structural damage to the walls and ceilings of the garage, located in the basement below the press center.

But a closer inspection determined that damage was minor, and the complex - which includes a theater, auditoriums and office space - was opened to World Cup employes.

Meanwhile, in Mar del Plata, army officials who are in charge of World Cup security scheduled mock kidnappings and other "violence" for Fri-

Wednesday's explosion — no left-wing guerrilla group claimed respon-sibility for the blast — challenged the Argentine military government's Cup security measures. Last August, left-wing guerrillas shot and killed the then head of the Argentine World Cup organizing committee, retired army general Omar Actis.

Since then, security measures at Cup committee offices have been stringent. All visitors must be searched and committee officials travel with body guards at all times. But reliable sources say that a combined army-police antiterrorist commando unit of 60 men has been formed, similar in organization to the West German group which deftly freed passengers from a hijacked Lufthansa airliner in Somalia.

The Roman Catholic conference of archbishops issued a communique Thursday asking Argentina's 25 million inhabitants, most of whom are Catholic, to think of the Cup as not just a sporting event but as way for 'the people of the world to know each other, respect each other and value

ROYSTON, Ga. (AP) - Baseball fans attempting to pay homage to Ty Cobb - one of the game's greatest players .won't find many remembrances in his home town. But city officials say Cobb is not forgotten.

All that remains of the Ty Cobb museum - a tribute to the man who holds the major league record of 4,191 hits - is a plaque which hangs in city hall. Only two of the four billboards advertising Royston as the "Home of Ty Cobb, Baseball Immortal" remain. The others are the victims of wear and tear. And there isn't any money to replace them.

The museum - originally built for $500,000, much of that in public contributions - has been turned over to city officials for $1. State funds for the tribute to Cobb, who died in 1961 of cancer, ended three years ago in an economic cutback.

Now the pictures of Cobb, who retired from baseball in 1928, and hundreds of newspaper clippings about his illustrious career are kept in a storeroom at Cobb Memorial Hospital in

Mayor Jerry Gaines gave several reasons for the tribute's

"It all began when Interstate 85 opened up," he said. "We used to be a major traveling artery through (Georgia highway) 29 and people would stop off to see the historic sites, but 85 ended that.

"Occasionally, there is a person who'll drive off 85 and ask for the Cobb museum," he said.

"Perhaps we didn't promote the idea enough in the beginning," he added. "But there was a problem in that most of Cobb's stuff had been contributed to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown (N.Y.) and his family didn't cooperate that much.
