French armed forces now in Zaire fray

By The Associated Press

France announced today it has begun a military operation in Zaire's Shaba province amid reports of spreading rebel gains in the area.

French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud said, "The operation is in progress. You will know more in a few hours...No parachutist has jumped up to the present time."

His statement on French television contradicted reports from Brussels that French paratroopers were dropping on the airport at the south Zaire copper-mining city of Kolwezi.

The French government had said earlier the purpose of its move in Zaire was to rescue more than 2,500 Europeans and 14 Americans trapped in the Kolwezi area.

Belgian sources in Brussels said the French troops were also intervening in the fighting to support President Mobutu Sese Seko's army, but the French government made clear Thursday night that the operation would be confined to the rescue.

Belgian government spokesman Michel van Ussel told reporters in Brussels the French Embassy notified his government of a paratroop drop after it had taken place.

There was no immediate explanation of the conflicting reports.

Fighting was reported in Kolwezi, and Belga, the Belgian news agency, said well-informed sources reported the rebels had retaken the town of Mutshatsha, 60 miles west of Kolwezi. The rebels were spreading over the territory around Kolwezi and Mutshatsha, the agency said.

Belgium was flying paratroopers to Zaire to rescue the Europeans and 14 Americans trapped in the Kolwezi area, but Belga said the Belgian government had not decided yet whether to go ahead with the operation. It said the Belgian troops were staging at the Zaire air force base in Kamina, 130 miles north of Kolwezi, until their government came to a decisiond.

Mobutu appealed to Belgium, Zaire's former colonial master; France, the United States, Britain and Morocco for help after the exiled rebels invaded southern Zaire last week. But the Belgian government was reported anxious to limit its troop

It was not known how many French troops were in action. An earlier report said 600 men of the Foreign Legion had arrived in Kinshasa and more were expected.

Most of the foreigners are trapped in or near Kolwezi, the copper-mining center 840 miles southeast of Kinshasa, which was taken last Friday by an estimated 4,000 Shaba exiles who returned to their homeland from Angola through Zambia.

Mobutu flew two dozen foreign journalists to the Kolwezi airport Thursday to prove it had been retaken by government forces. Exploding mortars and fire from automatic weapons could be heard at the airport, and the visit was cut short after about 20 minutes when mortar rounds began landing near the strip.

The airport was littered with shell casings, burned-out jet fighters and helicopters. A soldier said Zairean paratroops had stormed the field Wednesday afternoon and captured it in 15 minutes. He said casualties were light and the rebels retreated into the Belgium has a consul in Kolwezi, a town of 100,000 five miles from the airport, and the Foreign Ministry in Brussels said it received a radio report that fighting had stopped in the city. But government sources in reports of fighting, and the situation of the Europeans had not improved.

Belgian officials said the rescue operation could still be called off if it was decided that it was not needed. But this appeared unlikely because of the report of continued fighting.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said two planeloads of American aircraft fuel had left for Zaire to be made available for the Belgian airlift. Shipment of medical supplies, communi-cation equipment, petroleum and aircraft spare parts requested by the Zaire government would begin within week, the sources said.

President Carter&issued a memorandum Thursday releasing up to $17.5 million in military sales credits to finance the emergency shipments. About 1,500 U.S. airborne troops remained on alert at Fort Bragg, N.C., but a State Department official said the United States would not supply troops or planes for the rescue mis-

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Class-mates say a 13-year-old A-student, the son of a former presidential press secretary, killed his English teacher because of growing distress in a class where he was criticized, laughed at and given a failing grade.

John Daniel Christian took a .22-caliber rifle from his home Thursday morning, walked into his eighth grade English class several minutes late and, in front of horrified students, pumped three bullets into his teacher, Wilbur Rodney Grayson Jr., 29.

Grayson was struck in the head, right arm and side.

The boy's father, George Christian, White House press secretary in the last three ytars of the Lyndon Johnson's administration, appeared badly shaken when he arrived at police headquarters with two older sons.

State District Judge Hume Cofer ordered the boy held in the county juvenile detention center. Another hearing was set for May 26. Under Texas law, Christian cannot be tried for murder because of his age. The most extreme action the judge could take would be to adjudge him a juvenile delinquent and commit him to a state reform school until he is About 30 pupils were in Grayson's English class for gifted and talented students when he was killed.

What's a 'Metroplex,' and is it progress?

If change is progress, then tepping up may be stepping down and vice

One measure of man's so-called progress — call it development, if you like — is in word usage. Sometimes the usage is confounding.

For instance, ponder on that new word of clouded origin: metroplex. You'll not find it in the standard dictionaries, not even in the unabridged. Just wait. Given enough usage, particularly by the broadcast media, metroplex will be written into the wordbook by Webster's lexi-cographers. It'll be interesting to see how it's defined.

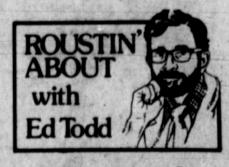

Metro, referring to the Paris subway system, is there. But the "plex" is caught in a time lag.

Remember back in the early 1960s when purists protested Webster's third unabridged edition, which accentuated usages of words shunned by the second edition.

Behold that grand old Gothic word "gay." It's in both editions, but there's an added meaning in the revised dictionary.

People have forgotten that it used to be good to be gay," commented a fellow of letters. "Now it's a no-no." To be gay is to be "bright and lively," "excited with merriment," and "first-class." Nowadays, the word often pertains to a faction in society that matches likes to likes. The "gay movement" is here.

Even the now-related word "queer" played a nifty role in communicating ideas. It's been taken over by slang. Perhaps even "quaint," too, will be similarly abused.

More on "plexes": The State De-partment of Highways and Transportation is coming out with this one: petroplexes. It has something to do with a traffic-safety campaign.

It, too, may be "written up" by Webster's or by other word experts.

Words are a joy — that's still a good word — with which to work and play. But when their meaning gets cluttered by misuse, something pre-cious is lost: the precise and clear communication of ideas.

That, after all, is what language is

"Residents of the county are not even allowed to vote for the City Council members, who appoint members of the Board of Equalization (with the approval of the other taxing bodies). This is taxation without representation, and that's what we fought the first war for," one of the participants said.

A.A. Thomas explained some of the avenues of recourse to the residents. "Under a new bill, which was passed last session (of the Legislature), if an agency wants to increase the taxes, it must hold a public hearing. Also, if you go to court, you do not have to pay the taxes. They are placed in escrow, which usually prevents having to pay a penalty on those taxes," he said. Ron Britton told residents, "The problem is not the re-evaluation, it's the tax rate. The rate is going to be where we can do something. If they would lower the tax rate then the tax valuation wouldn't hurt you.' Britton charged that the taxing bodies last year did not lower the tax rates in correct proportion to the incity property valuation increases.

Another meeting tentatively has been scheduled for Tuesday to elect leaders and organize action after the Board of Equalization meets Monday.

"Anyone interested in working on this can contact me," Britton said. "I'm going to be fighting them for the next couple of years. If you're in terested in a one-night stand, don't call me. This won't be done overnight; it's going to take months and even years," Britton said.

Texas falling into mobility crunch

Traffic congestion caused by "runaway expansion" in the state's urban areas has led to a slow-down in mobility, B. L. DeBerry, chief administrative officer of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said in Midland Thursday.

"Texas slowly has been losing mobility since the late 1960s," he said at the noon meeting of the Midland Rotary Club in the Midland Hilton.

DeBerry singled out Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth areas as being beset with "the mobility crunch."

As possible remedies, he suggested car- and van-pooling and mass-transit systems. Surveys indicate that, on the average, a work car transports 1.2 people. And one bus, if used by those who routinely commute to work by car, would mean "34 fewer vehicles" on the city streets and freeways, he

He said each day 411 additional cars enter the traffic flow in Houston. DeBerry, noting that this is National Transportation Week, based his prepared talk on the slogan "Transportion, America's Lifelines.'

He said that 20 percent of the gross national product (GNP) is "generated by the transportation services" and that these services by land, sea and air are second only to agriculture on the GNP scale.

'And agriculture would be paralyzed without transportation," he DeBerry mentioned the "ages" of the 20th century: Plastic Age, Nuclear Age, Air Age, Space Age and "the '60s - the Age of Protests." He called the current period "the darn'dest age

And historians in the year 2078 may reflect on the 1970s and view that decade as "the Age of Transportation, the Age of Mobility," he said. However, he said that unless the nation makes "smarter use of roads and routes" and unless it turns to an efficient transportation network system, America may be entering an "Age of Stagnation." The choice, he said, is between that and an Age of Enlightenment and Prosperity

DeBerry, who joined the highway department in 1937 and who became its chief administrator in 1973, talked about Texas' transportation network and of the "interdependence of transportation.

"Everyone benefits from good transportation; everyone loses when transportation is poor," he said.

And good transportation is "taken for granted," DeBerry said.

An indigent care policy was approved by the board. After reviewing some word changes, Frank Cowden Jr.said, "We've been kicking this thing around for four or five months. I think we ought to take this thing and live with it." The policy sets income guidelines, which taken with size of family, determine who will receive hospital care at no cost to them.

Mrs. John Armstrong presented the Advisory Board's report in which a problem with the pharmacy closing at night was voiced. The pharmacy is open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. But, if a patient needs some type of medication during the night, it must be obtained through the emergency room, and the patient must be billed for it through the emergency room, according to hospital Administrator Wayne Ulrich. Ulrich said he contacted Midland pharmacists and they reported they can not keep their firms open due to potential business hardships involving costs and security.

Dr. Michael Burleson, board member, said the hospital pharmacy's night hours would not be for people to refill prescriptions, but to take care of patients who need medication and can not wait until morning.

The board reconfirmed the anti-discrimination policies outlined in Title VI and Title VII in compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The policies previously had been adopted by

While considering the "charge-off" accounts totaling $85,000, board member E. H. Magruder Jr. said the hospital should look closer at the names on the list and see what could be done to get the money. Several small charges on the list have remained after the patient's insurance covered their portion, according to Ulrich.

The board went into executive session to consider land acquisitions, but took no action. Wednesday, the Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees had recommended purchase of land immediately east of the hospital at a cost of $220,821 for parking.

Carter family book drawing heated remarks from subjects

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Billy Carter wasn't the only one who took cousin Hugh to task for his new book about the Carter family, Hugh Carter has admitted.

He said Thursday that when he ran into President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian at an airport a few weeks ago, "She got really angry and said, You're the scum of the earth."

In fact, cousin Hugh said here on a tour to plug his book, the only Carter to thank him for an autographed copy of "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot" was the first lady. He said Rosalynn Carter wrote him that she and the president were reading and enjoying the book.

In Arapahoe, Colo., on Wednesday Billy Carter called Hugh a few names, suggested he belonged in a mental hospital and accused him of lying in the book, particularly about Miss Lillian. The book cites "family gossip" that Miss Lillian felt Rosalynn was not good enough to marry into the family and that she "hit the ceiling" when her son, Jimmy, announced their engagement.

"I deny I'm a liar, of course," the author said. "Everything in my book is true. You know, the truth hurts sometimes and maybe it's hurting Billy right now."

In fact, Hugh suggested, Billy ought to be kindlier about the whole thing.

"I don't even feel he's a redneck. He's a fine businessman and in my book I praise Billy more than he's ever been praised before," cousin Hugh said.

Betty Carter sings bebop jazz like nobody's business

By MAGGIE STEBER

NEW YORK (AP) -One thing you can say for sure about Betty Carter: Either you've never heard of her or you'd spend your last dime to hear her sing.

She's one-of-a-kind. And those who have heard her sing become true and steadfast fans, bearing just a bit of a grudge that she, one of the first ladies of jazz, is so little known to music lovers, especially those in the black culture whence her music came.

Betty Carter sings jazz born of the bebop era. She got her start 30 years ago at a time when jazz was at its purest and hottest, and she's played with the best. Today, she is one of the few links to that greatest period of creative music in Ameri-

Betty Carter's music is based on the strongest of foundations, influenced by artists like Dizzie Gilespie, Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Lionel Hampton and Max

And no one knows her own music better than Betty Carter. Songs like "Seems Like Old Times," "Blue Moon." "Heart and Soul," "Girl Talk," and "Round Mid-night" are frequently revisited, the result a bit different each time.

Betty Carter got her start in Detroit in 1947. She had just won a local amateur contest and mustered the courage to

'Charlie Parker was supposed to rehearse one afternoon at the club," she recalls, "and when he walked in, I was the first person he saw. "He asked me where

From Detroit, she moved to New York and joined Lionel Hampton's band. She toured with Hampton from 1948 to 1951. He called her "Bebop Betty," a label she didn't like because it suggested all she did was beloop and scat.

Betty Carter is an independent person, and that's affected both her musical style and her approach to the business. She's her own business manager and records on

In performance before an audience - she prefers that to recording she is spellbinding. Her voice trips over some songs in a staccato that takes off with the beat of a runaway metronome and melts over others like cool molasses.

For the audience, Champion Betty Carter is as much a visual treat as her voice is a sensual one. She's no taller than 5foot-6, and has a supple body that sings as much Betty Carter is lauded by colleagues, jazz greats like Sarah Vaughan and Ella Fitzgerald, as a singer's singer. But her value to the music form goes beyond that.

suffer psychologically

NEW YORK (AP) - Children of divorce. Thousands of them may suffer severe psychological damage because their parents do not know that divorce is not a problem for adults only, a child psychologist says.

Dr. Lee Salk, who went through a highly publicized divorce and custody battle with his ex-wife three years ago, says his children - Pia, 10, and Eric, 16 - came through the trauma unscathed.

During his own divorce, which Salk says is the second most stressful situation next to the death of a loved one, and in his years as a psychologist, Salk has learned much about children and divorce.

He has put what he has learned into a book called "What Every Child Would Like Parents to Know About Divorce." It is aimed not only at parents who are contemplating divorce but at parents who are not.

In fact, Salk believes it can be more damaging to a child to live with two unhappy married parents than one divorced parent.

Staying together "for the sake of the children" places a burden on children and gives them a poor image of marriage - which is likely to make them unhappy adults - he says. But children who are treated with dignity and consideration through a divorce learn that problems can be solved, unhappy situations can be worked out. In an interview in his Park Avenue apartment, Salk calls his children into the library. They are friendly spontaneously affectionate children because, Salk says, "they have two loving parents," even though their parents do not live together.

In what was once an unprecedented move, Salk, rather than his ex-wife, was awarded custody of the children. The custody battle, he says, was not based on who would be the most unfit parent but who would be the most fit parent. And that, says Salk, is the way all custody cases should be handled, without regard to parental

Even when there is not custody dispute, children are deeply affected by divorce, Salk says. And he believes the most important thing parents must do is discuss the matter with their children. Shielding or protecting them may cause great harm, he says, and most parents underestimate the ability of children to understand di-

The major fears children have about divorce are fear that they are to blame and fear of abandoment, Salk

What did I do tho cause this? This is often the first thing that will come into a child's mind ... It's a human thing ... All of us experience this one time or another," he says.

The fear of abandonment stems from the fear that since the parents have stopped loving each other. they may someday stop loving the Children must be assured that they did not cause the divorce and that their parents will never stop loving them, Salk says. He also believes parents should avoid "putting each other down" to the children but shouldn't go too far in the other direction, because the children may then become confused, wondering why, if one spouse is such a wonderful person, the other would want a divorce.

Major consideration should be given to children's feelings in workng out a divorce, Salk says. Children ould not make decisions such as but their desires should be sought and considered when the decisions are made, he says.

Many parents try to shield children by cutting them out of the decision-making process. "Children have to be treated with dignity," Salk says. "They have to be treated as people" capable of participating in decisions which affect their lives.

Salk says no one can generalize about children and divorce to say, for instance, at what age a child is the most or least vulnerable or what socio-economic background spawns the most troubled children of divorce. "I'm highly suspect of anyone who says you can do this," he says. "It's just not possible.

Here are some suggestions Salk advances:

-Don't undermine the child's trust by making promises that can't be kept in order to ease the unhappiness. -Share feelings with the child, but don't use him or her as a counsel-

-Don't be overprotective, such as sending the child off to camp or boarding school until the divorce is

-Avoid placing the child in the position of having to make a choice between his or her parents. -And don't use the child as a gobetween with the ex-spouse

The action by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is intended to end "redlining" - a practice in which lenders write off an aging urban neighborhood as too risky for

The board also ordered federally chartered savings and loans to ask loan applicants to state their race, sex, marital status and age. If a lender made no loans to minorities, it would "flag potential discriminatory loan decisions" the board said in a state-

Midland Memorial Hospital's critical shortage of nurses has been re-

After a search through various English-speaking countries of the world, six new nurses have been recruited to take over duties at the hospital.

And four of these nurses are presently working at the hospital-either undergoing orientation or preforming actual duties in the hospital's various departments. Of these four, one nurse is from England and three are from South Africa.

Sue Jewell, 23 from England, and Maria Dewet, 29, Hilda Lambrechts, 32. and Venice February, 28, from South Africa, are working hard at becoming acclamated to Midland's people, climate and geography. All are interested in U.S. travel and all are interested in gaining professional experience in U.S. medicine. They have been here from six days to two

A few of their observations: That patients in Midland's hosital are more aware of their rights and what they should be getting for their money than patients who are treated through socialized medicine, such as in England. British patients "do what they're told and don't ask for consultations," according to Britisher Sue

That the modernization of equipment in this country makes nursing much easier than in South Africa, for example. Maria stated that she was accustomed to using the old sterilizers, which wasted much time that could have been given to patients. DR. NEIL SOLOMON danger discussed

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there anything you have come across about the Pill increasing one's risk of having a heart attack?-Bertha T.

Dear Bertha: Some English studies indicated that women using the Pill had more non-fatal heart attacks than those who didn't (fatal heart attacks were not covered). But an American researcher, Dr. Anrudh K. Jain of the Population Council in New York, has gone over the British data and concluded that the real factor is smoking plus the Pill.

The Pill alone, Dr. Jain reported in a recent issue Kompto, by Waldo Saltand Robert C. Jones Son, by Nancy Down of the "American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology," didn't make any real difference in the heart attack rate of the British women who were studied. But smoking-without the Pill-did. And smoking combined with the Pill made a very big difference: women in this category had almost 12 times as many heart attacks as non-smokers not on the .

Dr. Jain thinks that cigarettes and the Pill have a Limited Engagement! "synergistic" or multiplying effect on each other in SNE OF THE BEST PICTURES OF THE YEAR increasing the risk of a heart attack. If you want to take the Pill, he says, don't smoke.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The school our children go tothe whole community, in fact-is on a big safety campaign, telling everyone not to do this and not to do that. It seems to me the whole thing is being overdone. Soon, people are going to be so hamstrung that they won't be able to do anything at all. How do you feel about these super-safety drives?-K.D.

Dear K.D.: I think if you looked at the statistics on all the unnecessary accidents that happen to peoplein the kitchen, around the house, with small children. driving, you name it-you would agree that these safety campaigns are needed. Accidents, after all, are the fourth leading cause of death in the United States, right after heart disease, cancer and stroke.

However, some safety advice isn't all it should be. For instance, there is a booklet called "Safety with Beef Cattle" put out by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. It contained such pearls: as "The best way not to have an accident is to prevent it." and "Hazards are one of the main causes of accidents" and even "Be careful that you don't fall into the manure pit." This little masterpiece has, fortunately, been withdrawn. But it serves to point up how good intentions can, on occasion, be carried to

Gasoline cost should remain fairly steady

WASHINGTON (AP) - Gasoline prices should remain fairly steady this summer in all areas of the country except the West Coast, Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary

O'Leary said he does not anticipate the surge in prices this year that sometimes occurs in the summer months as more Americans take to

"There is a general feeling that supplies are easy except on the West Coast, where refinery capacity is strangled," O'Leary told reporters.

"I would think this is not going to be a bad summer for the American driver. But it will be a bad summer from the standpoint of conservation,' O'Leary said.

On a related topic, O'Leary denied that the administration is holding its gasoline price-decontrol plan hostage to President Carter's embattled proposal for a tax on domestic crude oil. He said the administation still plans to lift the remaining price controls from gasoline - a carryover from the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74 - but is waiting for the right time.

"We want to submit it (to Congress) in a climate where it can pass,' O'Leary said. He said discussions with key members of Congress have indicated that if the decontrol plan were submitted at this time, there would be a floor fight and the measure would probably be rejected.

There have been reports that Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, in meetings with officials of the oil industry and its allies in Congress, had linked gasoline decontrol with passage of the crude oil tax.

But O'Leary denied this, saying the administration had already decided to decontrol gasoline - it was just a matter of timing.

There is a fluctuating federal price ceilings on gasoline. But at this time gasoline being sold at service station pumps in most parts of the nation is generally several cents a gallon below the maximum allowable price.

Buried homes shouldn't bug many

By SOLL SUSSMAN FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Underground houses apparently pose few psychological problems for their residents as long as natural light is not cut off, an environmental psychologist said Thursday at a conference on the energy-saving construction method.

Robert B. Bechtel, Ph.D., said a fear the houses will be dirty, stuffy and dark exists only among those not familiar with the earth-covered structures, often

'What we do find...is when people experience it, it's not like that at all," said Bechtel, president of the Environmental Research and Development Foundation of Tucson, Ariz. "It's a lack of experience. The image of underground is in the language," he said. "There is every indication that the problems of image can be solved merely by having people live in earth-covered houses." Most underground houses are actually earth-covered houses built primarily above ground level, making it possible for the houses to have windows. Bechtel has been studying psychological reactions to living underground since last fall. A previous study found people working underground in a windowless structure complaining they felt like moles.

Aside from being evidence that there is some truth to the underground stereotype, this bit of evidence could be attributed to lack of windows,' Bechtel said.

baseball fans second only to the

The team that has won more game than any other in the last 21 years gives nightly seminars in "Baseball, Played Properly." Prof. Earl Weav-er, proponent of pitching and percentages, sits in his dugout during infield practice and watches the crowd arrive, ones and twos at a time.

"Nice turnout," he says tonelessly, years beyond sarcasm.

The sedate white clapboard houses on 36th Street stare unblinkingly in from beyond the center field fence. The sun goes down purple and gold, the stars come out, the best rock 'n roll in the big leagues drifts and echoes around the park.

THIS IS indeed baseball played properly, with only those who truly care in the quiet stands, a grove of pine trees beyond the outfield fence, and Weaver's tomato plants growing in the bullpen.

A continent away, in Chavez Ravine, baseball is played profitably. The most beautiful ballpark in the world and the tackiest hard sell go hand in hand, one accenting and exposing the other.

Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles would be heaven, that is, if St. Peter weren't at the golden gate trying to sell cheap wrist watches.

Chavez is fragrant with L. A. sundown, palm and begonia. The red clay mixed with the infield dirt, the blue of the walls, and the perpetually filled stands create a rich triple threat of aroma, color and noise.

It is difficult to introduce 50,000 fans individually during a nine-inning game, but the Dodgers never stop trying. If it isn't sufficient to see Frank Sinatra and Don Rickles in the clubhouse, or Walter Matthau and Harvey Korman sandaled and cutesy in the hot dog line, the scoreboard has to keep up three hours of non stop listing of every person in the crowd with a birthday, anniversary or a bad

"A Dodger Welcome to Heinrich Hilmer of La Jolla."

Some ballparks are made for daylight; others should only come out at

THE GREATEST charm of Chicago's Wrigley Field is what it lacks: lights. If the truth be told, Wrigley is not a terribly attractive ballpark. Quaint, sure. Beautiful, not really.

The catwalks, the ivied brick outfield walls, the ancient hand-operated scoreboard, the pennants above the center field fence to show the league standings and whether the Cubs won or lost — all those things sound better than they look.

The bleacher bums are sufficiently demented. Day baseball is what God intended; and the whole shebang is photogenic. And it's nice to be able to see home runs bounce off people's front doors and watch them come out to see what the mailman wants.

But let's blow the whistle a bit. Wrigley Field ain't all it's cracked up

From ground level the field looks ratty, the dugouts are embarrassingly cuddy and the locker rooms are almost shabby.

However, when the sun is bright, the air crisp, and your seat seems closer to the diamond than the ondeck hitter, all is forgiven. So what if the neighborhood is deteriorating, the parking is impossible, the scoreboard is unreadable, and it is impossible anywhere in the park to find out what the actual score of the game is?

The fences in the power alleys are se close you're certain the next man will hit a homer; you're so close to the umpire you can hear him cough; and, suddenly, the crowd decides it will sing a song.

Wrigley Field is great.

But it's not as great as the hideously named Royals Stadium in the Harry S. Truman Sports Complex in Kansas City. For $70 million the Royals should have come up with a bettr name, something like Waterfall Park. But no price could have built a better modern-style stadium.

HOWEVER, please go at night. By day the two-stadium Truman Complex looks like a gaudy, colossal toy that some giant child left in the middle of nowhere.

When the sun goes down and the multicolored outfield water fountains start spouting and the clear midwestern moon starts shimmering on the steel and Tartan turf, even that gauche 12-story high Royals-crest scoreboard with the crown on top starts looking classy.

If you're going to shoot 50,000 gallons of water in the air and dazzle it with colored lights, the time to do it is

Royals Stadium is that rare park that looks stunning from inside, outside and above. The most distressing tendency of other newly built stadiums is that they look like the Mother Ship from Close Encounters on the outside, then bore you to tears once you get inside.

Riverfront and Three Rivers stadiums are by far the two most conspicuous and jubilant buildings in the towns of Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

Both are built on the water and from a distance look like blazing riverboats. Both were built with architecture, rather than baseball, in mind. They'll put you to sleep by the fifth inning if the game isn't close.

The Reds' infield is mottled with wear, the second-deck outfield pavilions are monotonous and all the stands are set inexcusably far from the field.

BASEBALL ALWAYS suffers when it is played in a cookie-cutter football stadium, like the ones in Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Kansas City had the right central ideas: limit seating to 40,000, but bring the fans close to the action; leave a center field vista open and enhance it if posssible, thereby creating an amphitheatre, rather than a claustrophobic cylinder.

Several rules of stadium building should be carved on every owner's forehead. Old, if properly refurbished, is always better than new. Smaller is better than bigger. Open is better than closed. Near beats far. Silent visual effects are better than loud ones. Eye polution hurts atten-dance. Inside should look as good as outside. Domed stadiums are crimi-

Britain hit by violence

By WILLIAM TUOHY The Los Angeles Times

LONDON - Britain, the nation that gave the world many of its sports as well as the concept of sportsmanship, has been plagued this past year by violence in connection with its national game - soccer.

The violence has occurred inside soccer stadiums and has spilled out onto the streets and into the fans' special trains.

British supporters attending matches on the continent have been so unruly that several European countries have threatened to ban games between their teams and British clubs. British fans are generally conceded to be the most unruly in Official commissions have been established to investigate the problem, but so far none has come up with any practical way to handle the violence that accompanies the game that is known outside the United States as "It is an immense problem," a government official said. "It is damaging and embarrassing at home. And we've gotten a terrible reputation abroad. No one seems to know what to do about it.

Sir Harold Thompson, chairman of the Football Association, has called for more police and stiffer penalties for those convicted of "soccer hooliganism.

"I think the government has got to take action against these people," he said. "They should have learned better at home. But now it's a matter of taking disciplinary measures."

Each Saturday the 92 teams in the various divisions of British football take he field. And each Sunday the newspapers carry accounts of the latest outrages accompanying the Irate fans have roughed up players from the opposing teams and officials as well. Often they-battle among themselves.

Bottles and bricks have been thrown inside the stadium. On one occasion recently fans threw steel darts at fans on the other side.

After the matches, visiting crowds, often filled with drink, rampaged through the streets, wrecking]bars and looting shops.

Last weekend, fans of two London teams, Chelsea and Millwall on the subway trains bringing them home. "Passengers were terrorized," a transport company official said. "The train was so damaged we had toFtake it out of service. It will take three months to repair." The soccer hooliganism is a far cry from the decorous behavior at cricket matches or the Wimbledon tennis tournament — even rugby games. In those sports fair play and good manners are still the style. Many observers blame the violence at soccer games not so much on the nature of the sport as on the boring life of the young, rootless fans. The Saturday afternoon game is a high point for them. "It's not a football problem," Alan Hardaker, secretary of the Football League, said. "It's a disease of the country. Parliament must make up its mind whether it wants law and order or not.

'These thugs have got to be made to realize that violence just doesn't pay. These kids are bored. They've no ideas of entertaining themselves. And the parents have opted out of all responsibility. Yet all we get are bunches of sociologists pontificating about the problem.

The sociologists tend to be more sympathetic, suggesting that the soccer matches are simply a way for bored, lower-income young males to blow off steam.

One recent report suggested that the typical "soccer hooligan" has much in common with the teddy boys of the 1950s, the mods and rockers of the 1960s, and the skinheads and punks of the 1970s. So when 50,000 or 60,000 young fans gather at one of the big weekly games, the stage is set for trouble and

The visiting fans pile off their trains and head for the stadium. They wear the colors of their team, often in long scarves. They sing team songs and chant team cheers for clubs that range from Northern Ireland (Belfast), to Wales (Cardiff), Scotland (Glasgow) and the London area (Tottenham and Queen's Park).

Desmond Morris, an anthropologist and author of "The Naked Ape," who is also a director of the Oxford United club, calls soccer hooliganism "ritual rudeness." He believes it has "quasireligious elements and trappings of church-going as it used to be: the chanting, special costumes, rhythmic clapping and the rest."

The situation is compounded by the nature of the soccer stadiums. In American arenas almost everyone is seated, but most British spectators stand on upward sloping aprons called "terraces."

The fans are free to mingle. A group of the terrace as their own turf. If a fan of the other team enters that turf, violence is usually the result.

Increasingly, the more mild-mannered fans are avoiding the Saturday games because of the threat of vio-

According to Hardaker, the league official, "the hooligans are whitling away the foundations of the game. It's cost the clubs dearly to fight it, and if it continues, some clubs will go to the wall. It'll kill the game."

Only about a dozen clubs in the league operate in the black now.

It has been suggested that the sale of alcohol be banned, and this has been tried with limited success in some matches. But the poorer clubs, which need the money they earn on the sale of beer and liquor, have

Ghost of gold medials past is throwing discus again

AP Sports Writer

The ghost of gold medals past showed up in California a couple of weekends ago to remind Mac Wilkins that, yes, Al Oerter really is throwing the discus again.

Oerter had a rather ordinary 192-foot toss in the meet at UCLA and, as expected. Wilkins won easily. But the presence in the competition of the 41-year-old, four-time Olympic champion cast a long shadow over Wilkins and the others train- than Oerter had ing for the 1980 Games at Moscow.

"Yeah, I'm back," Oerter said brightly. Yeah, Wilkins and the others noticed.

"I am working for the Games," Oerter said. "I'm very intent and, to start throwing again. based on what I've seen, I think I have a chance."

He is a throwback to I would need to follow," another time, a track he said. "I had the plan. and field relic who was All I had to do was do it." packed away in mothballs after capturing his fourth straight gold medal in 1968 at Mexico City. He was 31 then and he walked away from the sport a champion. And, for seven years, he stayed away.

There were three reasons that I quit when I did," Oerter explained.

"I was hurt. I had neck and rib problems all the time. That was No.1. No.2 was that everybody was setting goals for me. They were other people's goals, not mine. And third was my family. My daughters were growing up and I wanted to be with them more."

So the discus and the Olympics got along without Oerter for a while. In 1972 at Munich, Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia won the gold. His winning throw was 211 feet, 3 inches, 15 inches less achieved in winning the gold medal at Mexico City four years earlier. In 1976, at Montreal, Wilkins brought the gold back to the United States with a throw of 221-5. By

"I knew what I had to do, what kind of regimen

then, Oerter had decided

At first, there were problems. "When I started throwing again, it was as if I had never done it before," he said. "I kept hurting myself, pulling a shoulder or a calf. For six or eight months, I had trouble. I couldn't work. What do you train if everything is pulled?"

Oerter's body rebelled for a while, but eventually cooperated. And soon, the plan began delivering. It included distance goals. For 1976, he wanted to reach 180 feet and made 181. For 1977, the target was 200 feet and he hit 205. "If I could throw 200 last year, then the plan is working," Oerter said. This year, the goal is 215 and his best so far is 203. "I think 215 is achievable by August," he said. The UCLA meet was important to Oerter. "I had to see what Wilkins and the others were doing," he said. It also served the purpose of getting Wilkins and the other discus throwers to think about the return of a legend. "They welcomed me back and they took me seriously," Oerter said. His presence just adds one more thrower competing for the limited number of spots - three on the team. "I'm Oerter said he would work on technique. "I never had that," he said. "I did it all on strength. Wilkins is a great technician. Watch his intensity in the circle." Now, however, Wilkins

Hooliganism bugaboo of British soccer

LONDON (AP) - Shop windows were boarded up. Taverns were told to serve no drink to strangers. All police leave was canceled.

It happened in Southampton on a recent Saturday - all because of a soccer game between the Southampton and Tottenham clubs

It was not very different from any other Saturday in the soccer season. At a half-dozen grounds every week there is violence. The fans fight, rampage through the streets after the game and smash up railway trains.

The Southampton-Tottenham game passed off without serious trouble. The teams tied, and both won promotion to the higher soccer league, so the fans were in a happy mood afterward. But the police knew that if the result had been different, anything could have happened.

The courts threaten harsher punishment and crowd control has been stiffened inside the stadiums. Yet the hooliganism goes on escalating.

Britain's minister of sport, Dennis Howell, said the thugs "travel from all over the country, as if on a pilgrimage." He warned: "We really cannot allow support for a football team to become a cult if it develops to the point of threatening the peace in town." Soccer is called football in most countries,

But soccer hooliganism does threaten the peace and incidents in recent weeks pinpoint the troubles that have turned Britain's national sport into-a frightening social problem.

A subway train was completely wrecked in a clash between the fans of Chelsea and Millwall, both London teams

Chelsea and Millwall were not even playing each other. The fans were on their way home from separate games when they met. Only one person was arrested

In the south coast resort of Brighton, police struggled to break up fights between rival fans before and after a game, and the game itself was held up twice by fans invading the field and fighting. Nottingham Forest wrapped up the English League title by playing to a scoreless tie against Coventry. After the game, the jubilant Nottingham Forest fans were charged on the terraces by Co-ventry fans. Many were carried off injured after police broke up the fighting.

If at least 20 people are not ejected from a soccer game for fighting or throwing things, it is unusual. At a game between Bolton and Stoke the fans collected bricks from a building site near the stadium and threw them at each other in a pitched battle. Dozens were hurt.

It is traditional for soccer fans to wear their team's colors to a game. Now many have stopped doing it for fear of being attacked by fans of the other side.

The British government has set up more than one inquiry into soccer holliganism. One theory is that it has got out of hand because most spectators at British soccer games stand packed on the terraces, where violence is easily begun. In most other European countries the fans are seated.

Since Britain is a relatively small country, fans travel more. Sometimes 20,000 supporters of one team go across the country to see a game. The traveling fans usually start the trouble.

The further the fans travel, the worse they tend to behave. Liverpool supporters returning from a European Cup game in Germany last month looted a ferry ship and stole $20,000 worth of goods. Some argue that violence is a part of English working-class life, and that if it did not come through a soccer games it would manifest itself elsewhere. It also erupts in the punk rock movement. The most notorious fans are those of Manchester United in the north and Millwall in London's dock-

Followers of Scotland's national team have a bad reputation, too. After a game between Scotland and Wales last year one fan died and 50 were hospitalized after Scottish fans ran amok wielding knives and other weapons. That game ended 0-0. The Scottish fans had traveled to Wrexham in Wales to watch it and made it a wild day. Manchester United fans have caused trouble for years and are now banned from many English stadiums - if they can be recognized and kept out. They have a long record of pulling trains to bits, storming through the streets, smashing windows and terrorizing the local residents.

Millwall fans waited with bricks to pelt the supporters of Ipswich as they arrived to watch a Cup game. During the match they swarmed onto the field fighting. The teams left the field and play was held up for 18 minutes. Eleven policemen were injured and 30 people arrested.

As a result the Millwall stadium, known as The Den, was closed for two weeks by the English Football Association and the club had to switch its scheduled home games elsewhere.

No matter how large the police contingent, trouble-makers still seem to be able to cause trouble.

Government and soccer officials have suggested identity cards for all team fans and a complete ban on anyone traveling to away matches. Neither plan has been adopted yet. British Railways, to protect its trains, has cut down the number of special trains for soccer games.

Students often sharply satire religious preferences in polls

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - A tongue-in-cheek streak shows up in the attitudes of college students toward religion. When classifying themselves religiously, they occasionally put some sharp satire into it.

At least that is the case found in a check at one big "East Indian Southern Baptist Jew," one student jotted on a religious preference card, perhaps indicating his international inclusiveness. Others listed themselves as devotees of these ideals:

"Hermitism," "Accumulationism," "Porsche Fanatic," "Polytheistic-Hellene leanings with Albigensian overtones.

The far-out, quirky and obviously invented classficlations were reported on optional religious preference cards received from students by the Rev. Gus Schultz, Lutheran campus minister at the University of California at Berkeley. Other peculiar listings:

"Hedonist," "Ticcado," "Llamarianism," "Frogonian of the Latter Day Saints," "Holy Roller Buddhist-Ordained," "Pagan," "Anti-Moonie Existentialist," "Bokononist," "Mithraist" and "Orthodox

Several listed themselves as "agnostic," either of the plain kind or with curious variations such as "Judeo-Agnostic," "Protestant Agnostic," "Agnostic Satanist," "Seventh Day Agnostic" and a double doubter who termed himself a "Skeptic-Agnostic."

One student, verging on sacrilege, listed his affiliation as "First Fundamentalist Christian Church of the Prolonged Suffering and Gooey Death.

The Rev. Martin Marty, religious historian of the University of Chicago, summarized the odd designations in a recent issue of "Context," his weekly commentary on the interaction of religion and cul-

He notes that mainline church denominations predominated as usual in the optional student listings, but that the off-beat, concocted categories were scattered among them.

It mirrors a typically sardonic bent among the young, and perhaps a current anti-institutional mood. For many, Marty says, religion nowadays is "not a denominational game" in the traditional western sense.

Space colonies? scientist says yes forecasts that within 250 years it will be possible to construct a vast "artificial biosphere" in outer space Unveils criminal capable of supporting 10 billion people, more than twice the world's present population

According to Iosif Shklovsky, such a system of space colonies could have an overall surface area indreds of thousands of times greater than that of the earth - and thus be able to capture and utilize huge amounts of solar energy.

Shklovsky, a corresponding member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, looks farther into the future to predict that 2,500 years from now mankind will have fully colonized the solar system and been ready for expansion into other reaches of the earth's galaxy.

Writing in the current issue of the journal "Social Sciences," Shklovsky said he based his forecasts partly on the apparent feasibility of plans being developed in the United States for orbiting large satellites to beam solar energy down to earth in the form of microwaves

A U.S. coalition of aerospace companies, research foundations and educational institutions recently called for a large-scale effort aimed at launching the first of these satellites by 1995.

In addition, Princeton University Professor Gerald K. O'Neill, head of a group of physicists and engineers starting to design such solar satellites, has estimated that a space colony accommodating 100,-000 or more people could be built by the year Shklovsky argues that expansion into space was inevitable because of mounting population and environmental pressures upon the resources of the earth itself.

Only the colonizing of space would offer a longterm solution, Shklovsky contended, because it had been proven mathematically that adopting a "global balance" strategy of limited growth could only delay but not avert a world crisis.

East took the ace of diamonds and returned a heart. South stepped up with the ace of hearts and led a club to dummy's king. Then he discarded two hearts on high diamonds.

Declarer next led a trump to the king and returned a trump. East took three trump tricks, defeating the contract all by himself. You now have all the clues to the bridge murder. Who was the criminal? Decide for yourself before

MURDER WILL OUT South murdered the hand by bidding four spades.

If South bid three notrump at his third turn, North could correct to four spades with strong spades and unbalanced distribution. But when South bid four spades there was no way to retreat to three notrump.

If South did bid three notrump he would indicate doubt about the strength of the spades. Since North likewise has doubtful spades he would be happy to pass three notrump.

Regardless of the lead against three notrump. South can set up dummy's diamonds to add to his own club tricks. The defenders would be lucky to get three tricks.
