

Grand Jury Returns 66 Indictments

A WOMAN who received a probated sentence six months ago after pleading guilty to murder was indicted Wednesday in connection with another killing.

Named in the murder indictment was Willie Lee Gaines, 49, of 2129 E. 30th St. It was one of 66 indictments returned by a county grand jury Wednesday to Judge John R. McFall's 237th District Court.

Five alleged murderers were indicted. Kidnapping Case Included. One kidnapping indictment was returned.

That was against Maria Espinosa Jimenez, a 23-year-old woman accused of abducting a four-year-old girl March 11. The child was discovered unharmed later in San Antonio.

Mrs. Gaines was indicted in connection with the May 6 stabbing death of Elgin Sylvester Widemon, 49, of 2407-D Weber Dr., who, reports indicate, had been dating the defendant.

Officers arrived at Mrs. Gaines' residence about 4:05 p.m. to find Widemon's body sprawled in a hallway of the home and a bloody butcher knife lying on a nearby coffee table.

Stab Wounds Found. Widemon had been stabbed in the chest, shoulder and under the chin, police reports said.

A witness indicated Widemon and Mrs. Gaines became involved in an argument about 30 minutes before police were called.

The witness, Mrs. Gaines son, said he heard scuffling noises and ran into the house to find his mother lying on the floor and Widemon standing over her with a chair. He reportedly shoved Widemon, who fell to the floor face down.

Mrs. Gaines was assessed a seven-year probated sentence Dec. 2, 1977, after pleading guilty to murder in connection with a 1975 shooting incident. The victim in that case reportedly was the defendant's boyfriend.

Other Slaying Cases. Also indicted for murder Wednesday were Aigie Stokes, Valentino Robles, Wenceslaus Cruz Perez and Carlos Luna Vasquez.

Stokes, 68, of 1515 28th St., Apt. 1, is charged with the May 6 shooting death of his wife, Virginia Mae Stokes, of 4310 E. 63rd St.

Mrs. Stokes reportedly had been shot twice in the chest with a .38-caliber weapon. She was found in her residence.

Robles, 17, of 2909 Baylor St., allegedly murdered Abdon Rangel, Jr., May 26, on the parking lot of a local club.

Rangel, 26, of 3110 Emory St., reportedly was shot about 11:20 p.m. near the club at 1708 4th St. A purported witness to the incident said Robles grabbed a gun from the witness' car. The witness said he saw Robles fire four or five times toward a group of people behind the club.

Perez, 23, of 1105 25th St., was indicted as a result of the May 22 stabbing death of Dennis J. Piens, a death which reportedly capped a barroom argument.

Piens was found about 12:40 a.m. in the 400-block of E. 34th Street. He died.

Cattlemen Protest Beef Imports Plan

By IRA PERRY

TEXAS cattlemen, farmers and lawmakers Wednesday denounced a Carter administration plan to hike foreign beef imports to curb rising domestic beef prices as a "cruel, political hoax" that will prove worthless to consumers and detrimental to the nation's cattle industry.

A White House spokesman said Wednesday President Carter will announce his decision today to allow importation of an additional 200 million pounds of foreign beef into the country this year as one of several attempts to hold down rising inflation.

Farm state legislators were told of Carter's decision Wednesday, and the announcement set off a flurry of criticism and complaints.

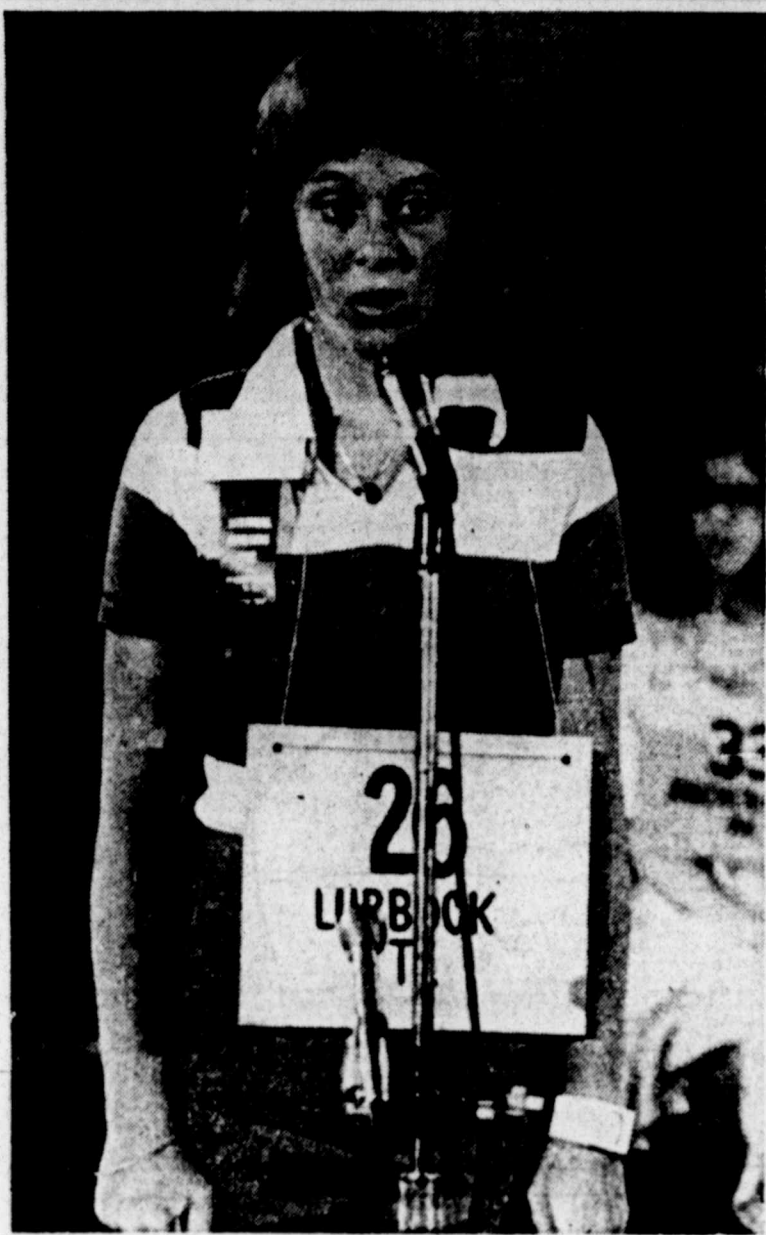

U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger (D-New Braunfels) called the measure a "severe blow to domestic beef producers who are only now recuperating from depressed market conditions."

"Very, Very Bad News" U.S. Rep. George Mahon of Lubbock echoed that feeling, saying the action would be "very, very bad news" to the Texas cattle industry.

"You could argue that it is a political gesture on the part of the President," Mahon said. "On the surface, it may appear as a substantial move at reducing the cost of living, but the likelihood is it may have almost a minuscule effect on the actual cost."

Government economists have indicated beef prices may rise almost 20 percent this year above 1977 averages of $1.34 per pound. In April of this year, beef price averages already had rose to $1.63, according to U.S.D.A. figures.

The same economists claim Carter's proposal could only slow that rise by as much as 5 cents a pound this year. Other

DROPS FROM BEE—Julianne Raines of Big Spring, the Lubbock region's representative in the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., dropped out of the competition in the third round Wednesday when she failed to correctly spell "paroxysm." Bee Contestants Narrowed To 22

WASHINGTON D.C. — At the close of the first day of the National Spelling Bee competition, only 22 of the 106 spellers remain in the contest.

Julianne Raines, the Lubbock representative, went out of the competition during the third round. "Paroxysm" was the word which halted Julianne's advancement in the bee. She erroneously spelled it "Paroxism." She was the 26th speller to drop out putting her in 80th place.

Two Texans Remain. Of the eight contestants from Texas, only two remain in the competition. They are Jennifer Malidore of El Paso and Patrick Lafferty, Jr., of Houston.

The scholars from Texas included Rolando X. Ramirez, Corpus Christi; Johanna Lea Schumann, San Antonio; Alicia Carlson, Amarillo; Brandon Rigney III, Fort Worth and Elaine Taylor, Dallas.

Spelling competition will continue this morning. The spellers will continue their seventh round and will battle it out until a national champion is determined.

agriculture officials claim the actual savings to the consumer may be closer to only a penny or two per pound.

"That is what's ironic about the whole thing," Texas Cattle Feeders Association executive director Richard McDonald said. "Even the USDA admits that it's not going to have a drastic reduction in retail prices. Everybody admits it's really not going to have a factor on inflation. This is a political ploy he's playing with, and it's not going to be of any benefit to producers or consumers."

The Amarillo cattleman said USDA 1977 figures show the average American consumed 93.2 pounds of beef last year at an average price of $1.38 a pound. If the 5 cents per pound savings is correct, he said, the average consumer would save only $5 or less on meat purchases this year.

Record Gold Sale. WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund Wednesday completed its biggest gold sale ever, selling 1,395,200 ounces of bullion to private bidders and governments of developing countries. The IMF sold 470,000 ounces under its competitive bidding system to private buyers at prices ranging from $182.86 to $183.92 an ounce.

Some of the words were deceptively easy, such as "gnome" and "ohm," and some were tongue-twisters, such as "lebensraum," a German word that means living space.

National Spelling Bee week will end Saturday.

Another contestant who dropped out is Maria Del Carmen Gonzalez, 13, of Mexico City, the first entrant from a foreign country. She came with her father, who doesn't speak English, and her mother, who speaks a little. With a "buena suerte" (good luck) from her father, she got through the first round with "pestilent," but dropped out in the second with "petulent" instead of "petulant."

"We were surprised," Moore's wife said. "We didn't even think about it being illegal. It wasn't until we'd gotten the equipment and had everybody hired that we were told dancing in public was breaking the law."

A group of ministers plans to make sure the prohibition against public dancing is maintained.

"I've had a number of calls from concerned citizens and other pastors," said the Rev. Bill Sisson, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church. "The disco's target is supposed to be 500 to 700 people a week from as far away as McAlester and Holdenville."

"We feel this is an undesirable thing and that it would be exploiting Henryetta," he said.

City Manager Chester Simons said Henryetta's law declares, "No person or organization can conduct a public dance in the city, period."

Soviets Say Carter Threatens Detente

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union responded quickly to President Carter's foreign policy speech Wednesday, saying he rather than the Kremlin must choose between "confrontation or cooperation."

In a lengthy dispatch from Washington, the official news agency Tass called Carter's remarks "strange" and accused him of ignoring recent Soviet statements on strengthening detente made at the U.N. special session on disarmament.

To the Carter statement that "the Soviet Union can choose either confrontation or cooperation. The U.S. is adequately prepared to meet either," Tass responded:

"Sounds Strange" "This statement sounds strange to say the least. Indeed, Carter knows well that it was the Soviet Union that chose long ago and irrevocably the road of peaceful coexistence ... but evidently in the ruling circles of Washington the choice has still not been made."

The quick Tass response was considered rare. It came only hours after Carter's speech at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Tass claimed America's policies on Africa and its association with NATO to increase western military strength is hampering Soviet efforts to strengthen detente.

"As is recognized by more and more states it is the United States' policy that is the main obstacle on the path of detente and peaceful cooperation and of progress on the path of disarmament," Tass stated.

Carter "Inventions" Although the Soviet Union, the news agency said, made "concrete suggestions" at the disarmament meeting to curtail the arms race and expand detente to the military arena, "President Carter made no mention of these issues."

"He repeated again inventions, which are standard for present American propaganda about 'the excessive buildup' of Soviet military might and unfounded allegations that the Soviet Union is trying 'to export' its form of government."

"President Carter evidently needed all this set of propaganda in order to justify the USA's and NATO's claims to the role as 'global policeman,'" Tass added.

As it has done in recent weeks, the official news agency blasted America and its NATO allies for their policy on the embattled African country of Zaire and for the western bloc's decision to increase its military expenditures. America provided aircraft to ferry supplies for a Belgium evacuation of foreigners from Kolwezi in southern Zaire last month.

Tass also accused Carter of being two-faced in his assessment of the U.S. position on Angola, where thousands of Soviet-backed Cuban troops are stationed, the U.S. State Department has said.

"The president assured that Washington wanted a peaceful settlement in Angola although it was precisely the USA that is known to have supported and supplied disruptive groupings in that country..." the news agency reported.

Mention of Carter's speech also was made on a Soviet television news program.

Carter's address was billed by administration officials in Washington as an attempt to restore a measure of calm after news reports which one White House official said were "flying off the deep end" in reporting a deterioration of relations between the two superpowers.

The president made clear, however, that he dislikes Soviet and Cuban military support for revolutionary forces in Africa. He said of the Soviets: "All too often they seem ready to exploit any...opportunity" to promote instability.

"A competition without restraint and without shared rules will escalate into graver tensions, and our relationship as a whole will suffer," the president said near the end of his address.

"I do not wish this to happen, and I do not believe that Mr. Brezhnev desires it," he said in reference to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Carter cautioned against excessive swings in public mood.

Brooke Admits Financial Misstatement In Court

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., said in court Wednesday that he "made a misstatement and a mistake" in a financial accounting filed in connection with his divorce last year, and said he did it under the pressure of threats.

Brooke's divorce from his wife of 31 years had been due to become final June 15. But action has been stayed by Judge Lawrence T. Perera following published reports that Brooke gave two different versions of his worth — one in the divorce case and the other in his financial disclosure to the U.S. Senate.

Standing in the witness box for 90 minutes, Brooke, who is up for re-election in November, did not say who made those alleged threats.

"I had been receiving all sorts of threats about disclosure and exposure, that my political life would be ruined,"

Brooke said, staring at his estranged wife, Remigia, who sat directly in front of him in Middlesex County Probate Court.

"Scurrilous and malicious statements were being made about me."

"That did not excuse me. I am a member of the bar. I took an oath to tell the truth and I misstated the facts."

Brooke had said in a deposition in the divorce case that he owed $49,000 to Boston wholesale liquor dealer A. Raymond Tye. He told the court Wednesday that, in fact, he owed Tye $2,000.

The rest of the money, Brooke contended, he owed to the estate of his late mother-in-law, Teresa Ferrari-Scacco. Under questioning, however, Brooke acknowledged that the current amount of that debt was actually $30,000.

Brooke resumes testifying Thursday.

And, Brooke has asked for a full financial accounting by his wife and her family. He also wants the Welfare Department to disclose any information it has on his late mother-in-law's Medicaid account.

At the opening of Wednesday's hearing, Perera said that if he found that the senator's misstatements had misled his wife and her attorneys, he would reopen the case and hold another trial.

In Washington, the Senate Ethics Committee is investigating Brooke's financial affairs.

The judge questioned Brooke directly for 90 minutes. When he asked whether "a reasonable person might have been misled" as to his personal liabilities, Brooke replied: "I don't think this would have any real material value on the ultimate settlement."

Brooke's attorney, Robert McGrath, accused Mrs. Brooke's lawyer, George Ford, of wanting to reopen the case to increase Mrs. Brooke's share of the property settlement.

"What he is looking for is what Mrs. Brooke has been looking for from the beginning — everything," said McGrath.

Brooke's lawyers distributed a financial statement listing Brooke's net worth at $184,105 and Mrs. Brooke's net worth, after the divorce settlement, at $463,650. Mrs. Brooke's assets were listed at $480,000 in real estate, counterbalanced by a debt of $16,000 on a mortgage.

Prior Fight Caused Exclusion

MOUNT VERNON, Wash. (AP) — A woman who sued an Elks lodge and eight bars and restaurants because they refused to admit her once belted her former husband with a beer bottle in one of them, a lawyer testified during the trial.

Margaret Willoughby Archer, 27, filed suit in Skagit County Superior Court contending she was deprived of her civil rights and right to privacy when she was banned four years ago from nearly all the eating and drinking places in Anacortes.

Willoughby and a friend were swearing at customers in a cafe. His wife was "laughing at this and making no effort to stop it," he said.

David Welts, an attorney for former owners of the Twilighters, said during a third incident Mrs. Archer swore at and berated his clients because she didn't like the policy against wearing tank tops during dance hours. Her husband was wearing one at the time, Welts said.

Mrs. Archer subsequently divorced Willoughby in 1976 and married an Anacortes fireman.

After Wednesday's hearing, Brooke read a statement on the steps of the courthouse saying that he "reluctantly" had filed a suit against the state welfare commissioner, Mrs. Brooke and her sister and brother over the issue of whether Mrs. Scacco had collected any Medicaid benefits.

Published reports have alleged that Mrs. Scacco had collected $50,000 in Medicaid benefits from 1973 until her death in July 1977.

Named as defendants were Anacortes police chief Pete Dragovich, the local Elks lodge and then-owners and operators of eight bars and restaurants. Much of the first-day testimony in the civil rights suit concerned Mrs. Archer's character and reputation.

Attorney James E. Anderson testified Tuesday that Mrs. Archer once hit her former husband, Mick Willoughby, during a disturbance in the Twilighters Tavern. The incident occurred, Anderson said, when Willoughby and another man were causing a disturbance, and his wife would not let a waitress remove their drink glasses. In the subsequent melee, she hit Willoughby with a beer bottle, Anderson said.

But Mary L. Barcott, Mrs. Archer's sister-in-law, said Mrs. Archer was a member of two prayer groups, has "a beautiful singing voice" and wrote scriptural songs.

Anacortes was gripped by a "reign of terror" during the summer of 1974, Anderson said. Doors were kicked in and jugs were broken in fights, he said, with Willoughby and a friend two of the chief troublemakers.

Mrs. Archer's attorneys said she was tainted by her marriage to Willoughby. Former Twilighters owner Richard A. Bain said he understood she was banned because of her marriage to Willoughby. Her name didn't come up at a June, 1974 meeting of proprietors, Bain testified, unless she was mentioned as the wife of Willoughby.

In another incident, Anderson testified,

'Miss Lillian' Plans Visit To Colorado

DENVER (AP) — Having hosted the president, his brother and his daughter, Colorado now gets a chance to greet his mother.

Miss Lillian Carter will fly to Durango on Friday, by commercial airliner, to attend a session of Phi Theta Kappa, a national community and junior college fraternity holding its annual honors institute this week at Fort Lewis College in Durango.

Miss Lillian will stay overnight in the southwestern Colorado town, and meet with Phi Theta Kappa members for a question-and-answer session on Saturday morning.

She then flies to Denver for a meeting with Gov. Richard Lamm and dinner at the governor's mansion. She also will meet with a delegation of senior citizens and members of the Colorado Commission on Women at the mansion.

Miss Lillian, 79, has served as a roving goodwill ambassador in this country and abroad since her son became president.

Carter was in Colorado last month for the dedication of the national Solar Energy Research Institute in Golden, his second trip to the state since becoming president.

Billy Carter, the president's brother, also was in Colorado last month — making a graduation address to the nine seniors at the high school in Arapahoe.

The president's daughter, Amy, skied last winter at the resort in Crested Butte owned in part by Howard "Bo" Callaway, a former Georgian and long-time acquaintance of the president.

Brazilian Tourists To Pay

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Brazilians who want to tour abroad must continue to pay a $1,200 deposit for a visa because the nation's balance of payments deficit is over the $3 billion mark and growing.

Finance Minister Mario Henrique Simonsen said Tuesday that drought this year diminished southern crops and will drive up the deficit to $4.5 billion. The deposit, which is kept one year without interest by the government, is designed to slow the flow of Brazilian spending outside the country.

Militant Jewish Leader Vows Trouble During Nazi March

CHICAGO (AP) — Rabbi Meir Kahane, founder of the militant Jewish Defense League, vowed on Wednesday there will be violence in Skokie if Nazis try to march in the Chicago suburb on June 25.

Kahane said Nazis who try to march in the heavily Jewish area north of Chicago will "get a kick in the head."

"I want to make it clear that the Nazis will not be repressed by non-violence," said Kahane, who told a news conference he now represents the Conference of Jewish Activists and is no longer affiliated with the JDL.

As Kahane traveled to Chicago from Milwaukee Wednesday, police here found a pipe bomb in Nazi headquarters, but defused it before it could explode.

Kahane told reporters he was sorry the device did not go off.

He said the organization he now heads is based on "non-violence except when it comes to Nazis."

The rabbi said that those who follow Nazi leader Frank Collin into Skokie and "all the groupies who think it is a thrill, a kick, to be a Nazi and march, all of the thrill they will get is a kick in the head."

He said he hopes police in Skokie on June 25 "will be wise enough to realize ... the clear and present danger of violence and use their inherent emergency power to see that the march is stopped."

Kahane said there is a growing "radicalization on the part of many, many ordinary Jews" over the proposed march. He said thousands of Jews from around the nation would be in Skokie to insure there would be violence if the Nazis try to stage a march.

"This is a problem that far transcends Skokie ... We have suffered enough at the hands of Jewish leaders who learned nothing at Auschwitz," said Kahane.

On Tuesday, meanwhile, the Illinois House Judiciary Committee rejected two legislative moves to ban the march later this month.

The two measures would have generally barred demonstrations on public property that would defame groups' racial or religious characteristics or which would lead to riots.

The sponsor of one of the bills said he would try to revive it on the floor of the House.

Clear Skies Give Chance To Dry Out

Relief from heavy downpours which have swamped the South Plains for the past two weeks can be expected to continue today.

Waterlogged fields should begin to dry up as forecasters predict partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures in the mid 80s for this afternoon.

The overnight low is expected to dip into the mid 50s and winds today should be northeasterly at 10 to 15 mph.

The National Weather Service continued to post a 20 percent chance for rain before dawn today as scattered thunderstorms began moving into the South Plains once again late Wednesday. However no precipitation is expected during daylight hours.

Warmer temperatures in the 80s and clear to partly cloudy skies are expected to remain over the South Plains through Monday.

Wednesday, considerably less thunderstorm activity was reported over the Lone Star state than had occurred earlier in the week.

Northwesterly winds at 5 to 15 mph had blown the decreasing number of thunderclouds into the eastern regions of the state where flash flood warnings were in effect by late Wednesday.

Lubbock's high reached 81 following an early morning low of 56.

Across the rest of the state afternoon highs were recorded in the 70s throughout the Panhandle and the 80s for the remainder of Texas.

Hundreds Visit Montoya Bier

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Hundreds of persons filed through the state capitol rotunda Wednesday to view the coffin of former U.S. Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., who died Monday in Washington.

Gov. Jerry Apodaca praised Montoya's accomplishments in 40 years of public service, and clergy from several denominations led a religious service in the rotunda.

The coffin was covered with a spray of 40 red roses, representing Montoya's years in public office. A spray of white carnations from President and Mrs. Carter was nearby.

Fabian Chavez, an assistant U.S. secretary of commerce from New Mexico, was to be the president's official representative at the services.

Montoya, 62, died Monday at Georgetown University Medical Center of liver and kidney failure caused by what doctors termed "a rather unusual and rare disease." He had been defeated in a bid for re-election in 1976 by former astronaut Harrison Schmitt, a Republican.

A rosary was set for Wednesday night at St. Francis Cathedral in Santa Fe. Funeral mass is scheduled Thursday at the cathedral at 10 a.m., with burial in Rosario Cemetery in Santa Fe.

Montoya is survived by his wife, Della; two sons, Joseph II and Patrick; a daughter, Lynda Harran; and two sisters, Virginia Chavez and Louella Salazar; and a brother, state Sen. Theodore Montoya.

AN EDITORIAL: Weapons, Not Words, Vital

NOT ONLY millions of Americans, but leaders abroad, both friendly and otherwise, are closely watching President Carter to see if he really is taking a new turn in foreign policy, or just engaging in more rhetoric.

In recent days, Mr. Carter has come down hard on Russian-Cuban involvement in Africa. And the administration has provided logistical support for French-Moroccan aid to Zaire.

But, in talks involving a broader Pan-African peacekeeping force, which just ended in Paris, the U.S. balked at expanding its role past that in Zaire, at least for the moment.

TOO, MANY OF the President's actions involving the U.S. defense posture, vis-a-vis the Soviets' growing military power, disturb those who read past Mr. Carter's words.

And, on another count, when the White House stands by silently as U.S. Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young all but refutes White House statements on Cuban involvement in Africa, one has to wonder what is going on.

The thing which disturbs many close observers of U.S. and Russian military forces is that practically every study made in recent months points to Moscow gaining superiority over America at all levels within the next two to five years.

In fact, in the most recent study reports indicate that Moscow may already hold a decided edge over the U.S. in any conventional war. And, the so-called "parity" at the nuclear level is expected to swing in favor of the Soviets by the mid-1980s.

WHAT ALL THIS portends for the future of America is obvious.

At some point in the future, Moscow will be in a position to swing its weight behind "forces of liberation," not only in Africa, but elsewhere in the world.

And, if by chance "madmen" were to assume power in Moscow, and the occasion arose, an atomic ultimatum would not be past the realm of possibility, say over a U.S. threat to crack down on Cuba, or to protect the Panama Canal.

THESE, ADMITTEDLY, are dark thoughts and may never come to pass.

But, then who could have imagined Hitler, the Holocaust, Pearl Harbor, the Cuban Missile Crisis?

Or, for that matter—although this newspaper has warned of it for three years—the Russian-Cuban "invasion" of Africa?

The bald facts are that while we applaud President Carter's seeming change of attitude toward the expansionist policies of world Communism, the rhetoric will mean nothing if the U.S. does not keep its defensive and offensive forces on a par with Russia.

AN EDITORIAL: Slivers Of Gold Among Feds

A NEAR-magical effect on human psychology apparently answers the ancient interrogative "what's in a name?" these days, especially when the question applies to a metal and that metal happens to be gold.

A vivid case in point has been supplied by the U.S. Treasury.

Its announcement earlier this year that it would begin selling gold was promptly followed by a halt in the dollar's decline on international exchange markets and an upsurge in value against the mark, yen and other major currencies.

THE NEWS, furthermore, prompted an outpouring of optimistic comments by foreign bankers and traders. Not to mention a fresh explosion of trading on an already hectic stock market.

Which only goes to show that it's considerably easier to go off the gold standard than it is to replace gold as the standard by which the international community measures the seriousness of a member's economic policies.

TREASURY PLANS to sell lots of some 300,000 ounces of gold each at six monthly auctions, the first of which was conducted last week.

At current free market rates, the Treasury can expect to realize between $300-$400 million on the sales. That's a lot, even in depreciated dollars.

But it does not come even close to the U.S. trade deficit ($27 billion last year) or touch the reason for the deficit, i.e., the still-increasing excess of imports, particularly oil, over exports.

IN FACT, IF the Treasury sold the entire Fort Knox gold hoard—currently some 277 million ounces—at optimum free market prices, it could not realize more than about $50 billion, enough to cover the trade deficit for less than a couple of years.

While the importance of the sales is primarily symbolic, it is a signal to gold-seeking Europeans and oil-producing Arabs of a new willingness on the part of the Carter administration to take active measures in defense of the dollar.

But that signal must be followed by additional and more far-reaching measures to bring U.S. imports and exports into something resembling balance.

Otherwise, all that glitters in this case is going to be fools gold.

ART BUCHWALD: Stamps Take A Licking, But Keep On Sticking

WASHINGTON—While many people have complained about a first-class stamp going up from 13 cents to 15 cents, the U.S. Postal Service is very proud of it.

I talked to one of the men who developed the 15-cent stamp and he considers it one of the greatest breakthroughs in mail delivery since the invention of the zip code.

"For years we've dreamed of a 15-cent stamp, but it is one thing to have the concept and another to make it a reality. Ever since the people upstairs said they wanted it, we have been working day and night to develop one according to their needs."

"What specifically did they want?"

"THEY SAID they wanted a stamp lighter in weight so we could get more letters on an airplane. At the same time it had to take a beating from hail and snow and sleet.

"The stamp also had to be flexible enough to bend when it was bought in rolls instead of sheets. And the most important requirement was that it could not be used again when the post office failed to cancel it."

"How did you solve the last problem?"

"That was the most difficult," he said. "The post office has been losing between $10 million and $20 million a year because when people got a letter with a stamp that was not canceled they steamed it off and used it again. This is a federal crime, but very few federal attorneys will prosecute."

"THEY SAY IT IS too difficult to find a jury that will convict someone for recycling a postage stamp. So the people upstairs told us we had to come up with a stamp that couldn't be used twice. It wasn't an easy assignment."

"The first thing we developed was a glue with an explosive base. When a person tried to pry off an uncanceled stamp from a letter, the stamp would blow his hand off."

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Haves Vs Have-Nots

LOS ANGELES—The basic reason why Californians chose to defy their state's political establishment by voting this week on the issue of instant tax relief can be found in the instinctive response by the politicians to that act of revolt.

When the polls clearly showed that the state constitutional amendment to radically reduce property taxes by $7 billion was pulling well ahead in Tuesday's vote, state legislators and state officials huddled privately to ponder these questions:

Can we go to court immediately to set aside the vote? Can we get a new amendment on the November ballot to partially undo the work of this one? Can we adopt new taxes next year to maintain government at its present level?

Those frantic responses reveal the dramatic split between the governors and the governed here as elsewhere in the nation.

The people regard government as an oppressive burden that fulfills few legitimate needs; their rulers see government as the focus of modern life, whose far-flung operations must not be curtailed.

BECAUSE OF THIS, the strategy against the tax amendment (sponsored by 75-year-old anti-tax activist Howard Jarvis) threatening the people with diminished government service got nowhere in the early going. "The people say: good, go ahead, we can do without it," one worried Democratic assemblyman told us last week.

The events here, therefore, comprise no less an anti-government revolt than an anti-tax revolt. The voters are sending a message of disapproval to the politicians which may now be duplicated across the land.

Gray Davis, the usually perceptive political aide and campaign manager of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., is almost surely wrong when he cautions this "a fight between the haves and the have-nots," the "haves" for tax relief, the "have-nots" against.

On the contrary, the establishment—business, labor, the big newspapers, the academic community, civic groups and practically every important elected official—vigorously opposes the Jarvis amendment.

BIG BUSINESS opposition to Jarvis was nearly universal. State assembly speaker Leo McCarthy recruited them with a combination of conditional business tax benefits and "veiled threats" (as described by one corporate executive).

"The corporations think by feeding the crocodiles they will be the last to be eaten," Ronald Reagan, who last month endorsed the Jarvis amendment, told us.

In contrast, the amendment's hard-core support comes from lower-income homeowners who are going under because of oppressive taxes. Their ranks, oddly, were swelled by substantial numbers of school teachers and other government workers who are first and foremost taxpayers.

Assembly majority leader Howard Berman, Gov. Brown's right-hand man in the legislature, was stunned when a meeting attended by his supposedly liberal Jewish constituents in Los Angeles upbraided him for opposing Jarvis.

State Sen. Bill Greene, a black Los Angeles legislator, told us he is astounded how many of his constituents voted for Jarvis.

IN 20 YEARS OF reporting political events here, we have seen no issue that so preoccupies Californians. Yet, the message is coming over slowly, if at all, to the ears of the state's rulers.

Assemblyman Kenneth Maddy, once considered the Republican with the best chance to beat Brown, totally misread the political climate and geared his campaign to oppose Jarvis. Mainly because of that, he entered Tuesday's governor's primary a poor third.

An exception was assembly minority leader Paul Priolo, the only official in high state office supporting Jarvis. Priolo is no right-wing militant and scarcely even a conservative. He enraged the right in 1976 by supporting Gerald Ford over Californian Reagan. When we last talked here four months ago, he denounced the Jarvis amendment as mindless demagoguery.

BUT PRIOLO SOON confronted the refusal of fellow legislators, including fellow Republicans, to translate the mammoth (variously estimated at $3.5 to $5 billion) state budget surplus into property tax relief.

To the amazement and contempt of colleagues, Priolo endorsed Jarvis and since become an ardent advocate of lowered property taxes and no new taxes to replace them.

JAY HARRIS: A Lesson Learned

IT SEEMS AS though it were long ago. But, only ten years have passed since the "great protest," the riots, the assassinations.

How far have we come since? It's a good question.

It was a decade ago that Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was gunned down in Los Angeles, late the night of June 5, 1968, to be exact.

Only two months earlier, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had been slain. Together, the two incidents served as a bloody exclamation point to a period of violence and social upheaval which left a mark on the nation which may never be erased.

BUT, AT THE moment, many Americans, white and black, rich and poor, had come to accept H. Rap Brown's verdict: "Violence is as American as cherry pie."

Later, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama was to be shot and paralyzed in a Maryland shopping center, and terrorists were to inject anarchy into the lives of the innocent as well as the lives of those who were their targets.

Looking back on the unrest of 10 years ago, one can trace its roots to a specific cause—the rioting in Chicago and Washington, D.C., and other major cities after the death of King. Student violence often was an expression of defiance against university authority.

The violence in Chicago at the time of the Democratic National Convention got its impetus from the demonstrations against American involvement in the Vietnam War.

ALL SORTS OF reasons can be given for the turbulence of 1968, more or less a climax to the searing Sixties.

In one way, the protest movement was born of a permissive age which followed World War II, and could be interpreted as a protest against society as a whole.

The System, as well as The Establishment, authority of all kinds was under attack, as were such deep-seated institutions as marriage, the family and the educational system.

Fred Luchsinger, writing in the Swiss Review of World Affairs, put it this way:

"The new radicalism...was not interested in the 'dialogue' offered by concerned citizens and shocked parents. Its adherents certainly made no effort to communicate, to make themselves understood outside their own ranks; they spoke a highly stilted, elitist language which was least understood by precisely those who were supposed to be awakened and mobilized into revolutionary masses. And the masses, especially those of the working class, were in fact never moved by the 'movement.'"

TODAY, THE great international youth movement has all but faded into oblivion.

Some of those involved joined the once-hated establishment with a view of reforming society from within. Others became dropouts, falling victims of drug abuse or opting for a "nothing" role.

In a way, a spinoff from the protesters still is much in evidence, although at a different level. They are the terrorists, particularly those in Western Europe.

Here, violence is not directed at Society and The System so much as at those who represent Law and Order. And while the 1960s Age of Protest was often born of spontaneity, rather than planned violence, the terrorist on the other hand often charts his or her bid for notoriety down to the last-minute detail. That civilized nations have not come to grips with the problem portends graver threats for the future.

NOW A NEW era seems to be emerging in the U.S., if not much of the Western World.

With the Vietnam War far enough behind, and put in its proper perspective by most persons, the U.S. seems to be taking a turn away from its self-imposed isolation. A new threat, actually the same one, looms anew on the horizon. Will we be more realistic this time?

Ironically, it has been 10 years of self-examination, a more honest appraisal of a War that should have been won, and a realization that regardless of hiding one's head, history moves relentlessly on; that has brought us to this point in time.

Too, disappointment in a President who promised too much, the Panama "giveaway," the human rights hypocrisy, the bare-listed Russian-Cuban power grab in Africa—all have combined to awaken a slumbering giant to the fact that it could die in its sleep.

THIS IS NOT to say that the U.S. should be the world's policeman, any more so than it can be its preacher or its conscience.

But, it is to say that the seat of Freedom still holds the last remnants of hope for millions at home and abroad.

There's still much to be done. A nation of peoples which turns out less than 50 per cent of the qualified citizens to choose their leaders—actually only one in 10 in Lubbock last week!—still faces major problems.

Responsible citizens who feel they have done their duty in "turning things around" by talking to one another or giving money, yet fail to get actively involved—even to seeking office—are failing their nation, and their children as much or more so than those protesters of a decade ago.

For whatever it is worth, it was the responsible, informed citizens, as well as those not so fortunate, who founded this Republic and kept it on a steady course for 200 years.

We have seen nothing that changes that formula, not even the traumatic detour of a decade ago. A lesson in history. One we should commit to memory.

L.M. BOYD: ...Pass It On

THOSE THREE celebrities most adamant against appearing in television commercials are said to be Walter Cronkite, Jackie Onassis and Greta Garbo.

Runners-up include Elizabeth Taylor, who reportedly turned down nearly $1 million to pitch Mercury Cougars.

And both John Denver and Glen Campbell are said to have declined $1 million to sell Kentucky Fried Chicken.

The statisticians say you and I each in our lifetimes will walk the equivalent of two and a half times around the earth. You maybe.

Q. "What's the highest paid non-professional hourly job for women?"

A. Cocktail waitress. Some women in that line make up to $450 a week.

Foreign Dollars Eyed By Head Of Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman G. William Miller of the Federal Reserve Board said Wednesday the government is deeply concerned about the lack of control over the approximately $500 billion in U.S. dollars held abroad.

"It's one of the greatest worries at this period of time. It's the most serious threat to us in terms of currency actions," he said in a speech at the National Press Club.

Miller said the government is at work on proposals to try to gain better control over the foreign-held dollars, but admitted that "we don't yet have any solutions."

The dollars circulate in what is known as the Euro-dollar market. The amount of foreign-held dollars has grown rapidly in recent years because of U.S. trade and payments deficits.

Some dollars are sent back to the United States in payment for goods and services from this country, but the vast bulk

Joan Little Appeal Fails Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers for Joan Little failed for the second time in three days Wednesday to enlist the help of the nation's highest court to block her return to a North Carolina prison.

Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall on Wednesday rejected a request that Miss Little's extradition from New York be postponed.

The full court rejected a similar request Monday, clearing the way for her extradition.

In their newest attempt, lawyers for Miss Little contended that the high court's intervention was justified because North Carolina authorities have announced their intention to prosecute their client for the crime of escape.

Miss Little was serving time on a breaking-and-entering conviction when she escaped from a state prison near Raleigh last October. She was arrested in New York City last December.

Miss Little, who is black, became a rallying cause for civil rights and women's rights activists when she stood trial in 1975 on charges of murdering a North Carolina jail guard.

She was acquitted after testifying that she had stabbed the guard with an icepick to defend herself against attempted rape.

Miss Little's lawyers have been trying to block her return to North Carolina, charging that a conspiracy exists to kill her. North Carolina officials have denied that any such plot exists.

In the request denied Wednesday, lawyer William Kunstler of New York relied on the announced intention to prosecute Miss Little for escape.

"It is counsel's understanding of the law in this area that when a demanding state expressly avows that it is extraditing for a specific purpose and disavows extradition for another one, it cannot subject the person sought to be extradited to prosecution for any crime relevant to its disavowed purpose," he said.

Kunstler told Marshall that North Carolina authorities had consistently said they did not want Miss Little returned to the state to face escape charges, but to finish serving time for her breaking-and-entering conviction.

Kunstler's legal argument relied on an 1886 Supreme Court decision on extradition.

But Marshall noted in a brief order that the cited decision "was controlled by a treaty between the United States and Great Britain."

"Needless to say, there is no treaty involved here," Marshall said. "The application is, therefore, without legal support and is denied."

Government Official Still Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI says an unidentified man photographed during a terrorist incident in the Netherlands in March is not missing State Department official William Bradford Bishop Jr.

Bishop disappeared two years ago after five members of his family were slain in their Bethesda, Md., home. His auto was later found in Tennessee, but no trace of Bishop has ever turned up.

The FBI launched its current probe after an Associated Press photo of hostages held by South Moluccan terrorists.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's big-city mayors, feeling rebuffed by President Carter, have picked Sen. Edward M. Kennedy as the major speaker at their annual meeting in Atlanta later this month in an effort to put political heat on the White House.

"The mayors were upset that Carter couldn't come," said one source, who declined to be identified. "It was taken by some as another example of the president's continued insensitivity to the politics of making his administration effective, including even winning a second term."

"The decision to invite Kennedy is one more sign that support for Carter is paper-thin among traditional Democratic interest groups and was designed to put some political heat on the White House," said the source close to the mayors group.

The president declined the invitation because of his trip to Panama June 16-17.

Kennedy, still eyed warily by the White House despite his avowed support for Carter's renomination in 1980, was invited after a Gallup poll among Democrats in April showed him the preference by a considerable margin over Carter for the party's 1980 presidential nomination.

The source said the mayors were charmed to learn that Carter will stop in Atlanta on his way to Panama June 16, the day before their annual meeting opens, to speak to a conference of Baptist men.

After Republican Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford had declined to address the group's annual meeting during eight years in office, the mayors had hoped for a presidential appearance this year, particularly since Carter has just sent to Capitol Hill the nation's first proposed comprehensive urban policy legislation.

A spokesman for the mayors conference, which represents cities of more than 30,000 population, said, "We are disappointed that the president can't come speak to the mayors who worked so closely with him on developing his new urban policy, but we are pleased that Anne Wexler is coming to discuss that policy with us." The spokesman declined to be named.

Firms Make Move To Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Sixteen industries with an estimated annual impact of $88 million selected Texas locations in April; the Texas Industrial Commission announced Wednesday.

The firms will hire 685 persons, the commission said, and will result in the creation of 1,423 other jobs.

In addition to Miss Wexler, a senior White House staff member who has been working to assemble coalitions of interest groups like the mayors to help push the urban legislation through Congress, the administration will be represented by Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia R. Harris and Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps.

White House aide Bruce Kirschenbaum, who formerly lobbied here for New York City, said the scheduling problems of getting Carter back to Atlanta on his return from Panama were just too tough to resolve.

"It's unfortunate in terms of people taking this too much to heart," Kirschenbaum said. "I've been on the other side so I understand that, but in no way does this indicate a lack of support for mayors or the urban policy and we hope it wouldn't be read that way."

He said the Baptist speech was the result of a longtime commitment.

The mayors' spokesman said the conference had offered to schedule Carter any time between June 17-21 that was convenient for him but when that proved impossible the group turned to Kennedy "to be sure to have an interesting speaker."

A spokesman for Kennedy said the senator had been planning to spend June 19 in Boston but had opened his afternoon schedule to fly to Atlanta for the speech. He said the conference had advised the senator's staff that Carter had declined, but that the Massachusetts Democrat had accepted because, "It's a very prestigious group; the senator has been active in urban affairs and is from an urban state. He was happy to do it."

Memories Of Scandal Linger At Commencement

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Cadets who battled the Pentagon and won became Army officers Wednesday when the U.S. Military Academy graduated its biggest class ever, closing the books on the historic institution's worst scandal.

But it was a costly victory for 86 survivors of the 1976 cheating scandal. They wrenched from the Army the unprecedented opportunity to return to West Point after admitting honor code violations, but they left the nation's oldest military academy a year late.

Some say the trauma, which began more than two years ago, matured them, but they believe they were the scapegoats of a system which sets forth ideals that cannot be attained.

They concede that the academy has undertaken drastic reforms since they were tainted by the scandal, but they say it still has a long way to go.

"They still have the archaic honor system, which is the root of the problem," one of them said on the eve of the graduation ceremony. "Ideally, on paper, fine. But the realities of it — I'm evidence of the realities. It just doesn't work right."

In his commencement speech, Army Chief of Staff Bernard Rogers said the 176-year-old institution had given the graduates a "moral compass by which to chart your paths ahead."

Listening were some of the disgraced cadets' vocal supporters, who left West Point expressing moral outrage and who returned for the first time Wednesday.

propelled by bittersweet sentiment.

"I'm here to share the joy of the people I've known for years, especially the Class of 1977," said the Rev. Thomas Curley, a Roman Catholic chaplain who departed last June.

Removed from the confrontation that burnished deep circles beneath his eyes, he now preaches in a suburban church near New York City.

With him was Arthur Lincoln, who defied the Army establishment and took the case to the media and the Congress. The one-time officer now practices law in Massachusetts.

A New York lawyer who pleaded the cadets' case in the federal courts, Sidney Siller, was here, too. So was another of the dissident Army lawyers who represented them, Dominic Thomas. A West Point graduate, like Lincoln, he quit the Army to practice civilian law.

At dinner with the priest Tuesday night, Lincoln said the talk between them was of officers who dared not say cheating was widespread. It was of social ostracism. It was of those heady days and sleepless nights of mounting tensions and brutalized tempers. It was of the Army's persistent denials that the academy was in trouble.

At Wednesday's ceremonies, Lincoln said, "I'm not going to see those who graduate in 1978 but those who didn't graduate in 1977."

It was the members of the Class of 1977 who were given, in their junior year, the routine engineering homework assignment that would rock the academy for months.

A total of 152 cadets eventually left the academy because of the scandal. Ninety-eight of them returned last fall after the Army bowed to public pressure and a recommendation of a special commission headed by former astronaut Frank Borman.

Of the 92 who returned and entered the class of 1978, 86 were among the 947 graduates Wednesday. Five will go to summer school and one is awaiting separation for conduct deficiencies.

"I feel great, I really do," said Timothy

Ringgold, who went public with the scandal. "The academy has really treated us like they ought to treat everyone all the time. It's been less arbitrary than you would expect of a bureaucracy like West Point."

Added David Hall, who resigned after volunteering that he witnessed cheating: "This whole experience kind of forced me to realize what integrity means, why it's important."

So it was with the traditional toss of their hats that the Class of 1978, massed in gray and white on the brilliant green artificial turf of the West Point stadium, consigned to history a scandal which had rent their venerable institution and the Army itself.

Labor Plan Backers Set Senate Try

WASHINGTON (AP) — Backers of labor law revision got ready to test their strength for the first time Wednesday against an 11-day filibuster, but conceded in advance they would be unable to choke off debate.

One strategist working for passage of the bill said there might be as few as 48 votes against the filibuster when the roll was called in late afternoon, far short of the 60 required to limit debate.

"We're going to be in pretty good shape today," said Republican Leader Howard Baker, a supporter of the GOP-led talkathon.

With a second vote already scheduled for Thursday, both sides were treating the first anti-filibuster roll call almost as a warmup.

"Nobody is too excited about it," one AFL-CIO official said of the first attempt to limit debate. "We've got to get through one or two (tries) before we get serious," said Victor Kamber, who has spent months working for passage of the controversial legislation.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, also said the first vote would not be a real test of strength, since several supporters of the legislation are out of Washington and unable to vote.

He said he believes opponents continue to have the strength to kill the bill by filibuster. If they don't, Hatch said, he will stall a final vote further by forcing votes on hundreds of amendments.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams, a principal sponsor of the legislation, has predicted the filibuster would be broken by the end of next week.

His side is counting on the support of several senators who will vote once or twice in favor of the filibuster, in part to mollify their hard-lobbying small business constituency, then switch sides.

The legislation, with backing from organized labor and the Carter administration and opposition from business organizations, has been the focus of a multi-million dollar lobbying campaign.

The bill sets election deadlines for union representation elections and stiffens penalties against violators of the labor laws.

Backers of the measure say it is needed to prevent unscrupulous employers from depriving workers of their existing rights. Opponents counter that the measure is heavily tilted toward unions to the detriment of employers and would be especially harmful to the owners of small business.

Wallace Eyes Special Race For Senate

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, who said earlier he would not run for public office this year, is considering seeking the late James B. Allen's U.S. Senate seat, an aide said Wednesday.

Wallace may run in a special election to fill the last two years of Allen's term because of an "unbelievable" number of telephone calls, letters and telegrams he has received urging him to do so, said the governor's press secretary, Billy Joe Camp.

Allen, whose Senate term expires in early 1981, died of a heart attack last Thursday at Gulf Shores, Ala.

Wallace can appoint a temporary replacement but must by law call a special election to choose a successor to Allen.

Allen's widow, Maryon, has been mentioned as a possible temporary replacement. Wallace could have himself appointed by stepping down as governor and having Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley, who then would become governor, appoint him to the post, but Camp said that was unlikely.

Camp said, however, that Wallace might run for the seat in the special election because of "the magnitude of requests and encouragement" Wallace has received. Most of the requests, Camp said, advanced the argument that unless Wallace were elected, Alabama would be without "an experienced name in the Senate."

Alabama's other senator, John Sparkman, is retiring this year.

Wallace, 58, had announced he would run for Sparkman's seat but withdrew from the race three weeks ago, saying he would retire to private life when his term expires in January.

He cannot by law succeed himself as governor.

Wallace has not yet fixed a date for this special election to choose Allen's successor but has indicated he may set it for Nov. 7, the day of the general election.

Long-Time Prosecutor Named In Murder Plot

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Oscar McNinnis, a long-time South Texas prosecutor, was indicted Wednesday on federal charges alleging he conspired to kill the former husband of a female friend.

U.S. District Judge Reynaldo Garza issued bench warrants for McNinnis, the 61-year-old district attorney for Hidalgo County, and Patricia Frada, 24, of McAllen.

McGinnis was arrested at Raymondville and Miss Parada was arrested at Edinburg within hours of the indictments. The FBI said the arrests were made without incident.

Garza set McNinnis' bond at $500,000 after U.S. Attorney Tony Canales said McNinnis was "dangerous to others" and a threat to "abscond."

The two appeared before U.S. Magistrate William Mallet who set formal arraignment for June 16. He said both could seek bond reduction.

The indictment charges McNinnis and Miss Parada with conspiring to kidnap for the purpose of committing murder.

Miss Parada's bond was set at $100,000. The indictment alleges that McNinnis plotted with a convicted murderer to kill Noe Villanueva — Miss Parada's ex-husband. Villanueva was not killed.

The indictment indicates that McNinnis thought the slaying took place as planned.

McNinnis arranged for the release of Villanueva, being held on drug charges, from the Hidalgo County jail, according to the true bill.

It further alleges that McNinnis met with Daniel Rodriguez several times in the Hidalgo County jail, where Rodriguez was incarcerated, to plan the killing.

The first meeting was April 15 and the last was on May 24 — the day after the killing was to take place.

However, sources within the investigation said, Rodriguez was unable to have Villanueva located and McNinnis began applying pressure. Rodriguez reportedly went to Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmolejo to tell him of the meetings with McNinnis.

Collection Given To Library

(A-J Correspondent)

SNYDER — The Scurry County Historical Commission has donated its collection of photographs and resource material to the Scurry County Library where it may be used by researchers on county history.

The materials were collected within 15 years and used to prepare more than 50 historical markers in the county.

The sheriff contacted Canales and FBI agents were sent in. They obtained tape recordings of McNinnis' meeting with Rodriguez, sources said.

The indictment alleges that the plan included Miss Parada meeting with her former husband in Reynosa, Mexico, and also alleges McNinnis was to "arrange" for Mexican police to arrest Villanueva "and hold him for the purpose of murder."

Miss Parada was not to show up at the meeting, according to the indictment. On April 19, McNinnis allegedly gave Rodriguez a police photograph of Villanueva. Rodriguez also had been given details of the Reynosa meeting.

The meeting took place as scheduled May 23, the indictment said.

However, Villanueva was not killed. But on May 24, McNinnis reportedly again met with Rodriguez at the county jail. At that meeting, according to the indictment, McNinnis "received from Daniel Rodriguez personal identification papers of Noe Villanueva." The indictment also states McNinnis instructed that Villanueva's body "be disposed of in the manner so that it would not be found."

McNinnis testified for 75 minutes before the grand jury here Wednesday. Federal prosecutors said McNinnis did not know why he had been subpoenaed but that he probably assumed it was for routine cases.

Miss Parada testified for 10 minutes. McNinnis has served as district attorney since 1967. He earned a reputation as a tough and effective prosecutor and garnered acclaim for getting convictions on three men represented by famed defense attorney Percy Foreman.

Scout To Relive Antarctic Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty years ago, at his request, Adm. Richard E. Byrd was accompanied on his expedition to the South Pole by a Boy Scout.

Now, a half century later, a nationwide competition has resulted in another scout — 18-year-old Mark W. Leinmiller — being chosen as a working member of a National Science Foundation project at the South Pole.

Cigarettes Linked To Heart Attack

BOSTON (AP) — Cigarettes caused three-quarters of the heart attacks suffered by a group of otherwise-healthy women under 50, researchers say. They warn that such attacks are likely to increase as more teen-age girls take up smoking.

The doctors also found that heavy-smoking women under age 50 are about 20 times more apt to have heart attacks than are non-smokers. Half the time, these attacks are fatal.

The study, conducted at Boston University Medical School, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors estimated that about one-third of the young women who suffer heart attacks — or myocardial infarctions — have no underlying illnesses, such as high blood pressure that could be the cause.

"Our findings suggest that this category, some 75 percent of infarctions could be avoided if women did not smoke," the doctors concluded.

Heart attack is the biggest killer in the United States. Each year, about 40 of every 100,000 women under age 45 suffer heart attacks. The rate is four to five times higher for men.

The BU study is the first to be limited to otherwise healthy women who had no reason to suspect that they were in danger of having heart attacks. The researchers compared 55 women under 50 who had had heart attacks with a control group of 220 women matched for age and area of residence.

The research, directed by Dr. Dennis Slone, found that women who smoked 35 or more cigarettes a day were 21 times more likely to live heart attacks than non-smoking women.

The risk dropped dramatically for lighter smokers. Women who puffed 25 to 34 cigarettes a day were 14 times as likely as non-smokers to have heart attacks, while the danger for those who smoked one to 14 a day was four times greater than for non-smokers.

National statistics show that the number of teen-age girls who smoke has doubled in the past 10 years, while the level of smoking among boys has stayed the same. Now, about equal numbers of teen-age boys and girls use cigarettes.

"Unless this pattern changes, the contribution of cigarette smoking to the occurrence of premature myocardial infarction in otherwise apparently healthy women will probably increase," the doctors wrote.

Computer Duns Hit By Ruling Of FTC Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company that sends a computerized series of dunning letters to debtors across the country used unfair and deceptive tactics, the Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday.

The commission overruled a finding by an FTC law judge and unanimously ordered Capax, Inc. of Willingboro, N.J. to cease the practices.

The company has promoted itself to firms trying to collect on debts as "the modern answer to an old problem" and a "customized, computerized control company."

For a fee, Capax offers clients a choice between different sets of dunning letters. There are long and short versions of a "strong" series, a "diplomatic" series, one for "bad check" cases and various series in Spanish. The longest series consists of 11 letters spread out over 90 days.

The FTC opinion by Commissioner Elizabeth Hanford Dole said that Capax misrepresented its role by implying that the debts had been assigned to it for collection action. Another misrepresentation was that Capax had the authority to sue over bad debts, she wrote.

The opinion cited such formlatters as this one, the eighth in the diplomatic series: "If you want to avoid unpleasant and costly action, make immediate payment directly to (name of company)."

Mrs. Dole said, "Contrary to the impression created, Capax's service consisted of simply the preparation and mailing of form letters on behalf of creditors to alleged delinquent debtors... There was no assignment of debts to Capax."

Lawyers Vow To Fight State Bar Association

AUSTIN (AP)—A group of lawyers announced Wednesday they will sue the Bar Association over an issue older than this country — "taxation without representation."

The federal suit will seek to block a $150 fee — or assessment — the state bar wants from each of Texas' 29,000 lawyers.

The money is to be used to pay the $4 million bank note on the Law Center, near the Capitol.

President Laird Palmer of Lawyers for Bar Reform said lawyers who approved the fee in a statewide referendum by a vote of 12,696 to 8,686 "were misled to believe they were voting for an assessment."

"Now, the assessment having been passed, we learn that it is being treated by the bar as a fee assessment, or dues, and that the leadership plans to collect forcibly," he said.

Lawyers who don't pay their bar dues and fees by Sept. 1 can be prohibited by district judges from practicing law in their courts.

"It's not the money," Palmer told a news conference. "It has become a question of principle."

Palmer said after bar directors had decided without consulting the membership to build the Law Center, they "promised faithfully that our membership fees would never be used to pay for that building."

He described the $8 million center as "an enormous, luxurious, glass-and-steel edifice that most of us don't want, and that the bar can't pay for."

The center was to be financed with contributions, but Palmer said they dried up after the Internal Revenue Service ruled the donations were not tax deductible.

"We are of the opinion," Palmer said, "that the assessment . . . constitutes taxation without representation; that it is the equivalent of compulsory unionization, in violation of the Texas right to work laws and other federal statutes; that it constitutes the taking of property without due process of law . . . that we are being compelled to pay a debt for state property that cannot be legally mortgaged; and, that the borrowing of this money was done in complete violation of the bar's own rules."

Palmer said although the fee assessment was due June 1, the bar's rules prevent it "from taking any action against a non-paying lawyer until at least Sept. 1.

Thus any talk of an "injunction" to prohibiting lawyers from practicing "is nothing more than a threat to coerce lawyers to pay the assessment."

He said the bar reform group includes more than 100 lawyers from numerous cities, including Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas, Tyler, Bryan and Huntsville. Each member is asked to pay $10 to help pay for the lawsuit.

The suit will be filed before the state bar convention, at the end of June, Palmer said.

One reason for filing it in federal court, he said, "is to relieve the pressure on state judges" — who are members of the bar.

Briscoe Seeks Help For Two Counties

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Wednesday he has asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to declare Dimmit County and his home county of Uvalde as disaster areas.

Briscoe said in a statement the declaration would assist farmers and ranchers in obtaining emergency loans "to cover physical and production losses caused by adverse weather conditions" from July 1, 1977 through May 24.

Building Of Towers Improved

CADDO MILLS (AP) — Ask anyone whose business requires putting up a transmitter tower what his problems are, and the weather will probably be at the top of the list. Cold and wind make the construction of a several-hundred-foot tower a tricky proposition.

An East Texas engineer's new technique for raising such a tower Dennis Henderson and his NETCO Systems in Caddo Mills have a patent pending on the process and have completed their first installation without a hitch.

"It's an elevator-type principle, and the whole thing is mounted on a winch truck," Henderson said.

The NETCO rig allows construction from the top instead of the bottom. The topmost segment of the tower is assembled first, then an elevator-type principle hoists the segment along a gantry, allowing the next-to-the-top segment to be installed beneath the top. The process is repeated until the entire tower is raised, with the bottom segment being the last to be put into place.

The rig has an automatic guy wire control on it that adjusts the tension as the tower rises," Henderson said. "It's built so that it won't slip under any wind conditions."

The technique eliminates the need for climbing the tower. Attachments like microwave dishes and antennae can be connected from the work area aboard the winch truck.

Henderson said the first installation using the technique was a smooth operation. "We haven't climbed that tower yet," he said.

He also points to the economy factor, saying that a 100-foot tower can be erected in an hour by two workers.

"Using our system, you cut your labor by 50 percent," Henderson said. "For a big job that would take seven to 10 days, we can do it in three days." He said a job that would cost $1,000 using other methods would cost $500 with the new technique.

The NETCO system can be used "anywhere you can get the winch truck," Henderson said.

A Dallas telephone company has ordered two of the rigs, and Henderson said he is bidding on construction jobs in Germany.

Youth Inmates Fight Guards Over Meals

HUNTSVILLE (UPI) — An official of the Texas Department of Corrections Wednesday said youthful inmates angered about food service at their minimum security unit clashed with guards during a weekend disturbance.

Tom Taylor, administrative aide to TDC Director W. J. Estelle Jr., said several hundred inmates were tear-gassed late Sunday near the conclusion of the four-hour disturbance at the Ferguson Unit about 20 miles north of town.

The Ferguson Unit houses about 2,000 first time offenders ranging in age from 16 to 21.

Inmates in the cellblock in which the protest originated were briefly evacuated to a gymnasium. Some offenders have since been placed in other TDC units in the area.

"There was no alternative but to use gas and quell the disturbance, nip it in the bud as it were," Taylor said. "We had no injuries with inmates or with our employees. Everything is operating normally now."

There was some confusion about whether guards or inmates started the incident.

One report indicated guards moved into the unit Sunday and demanded to know who wrote a letter to someone outside the prison complaining about the food. Inmate mail is censored.

Last Tuesday the officials of the unit began to discover notices that were written by inmates and distributed to various areas of the prison complaining of the food and making suggestions on a unified protest over the food," Taylor said. "The officials tried to discover the source. We were unsuccessful in doing so. The officials had been sensitized that something might occur. It did occur Sunday evening."

One report said about 60 inmates were removed from their cells and several were beaten and sprayed with mace.

The disturbance started after they were racked up (after lights out) in their cells for the evening, about 10:30. In cellblock one, with loud yelling, destruction of property, the disturbance began. The disturbance then spread to other cellblocks."

Taylor said counselors, parole officers and teachers were barred from visiting the unit Monday.

Canada-U.S. Fishing War Goes Quietly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-eight hours after Canada and the United States imposed reciprocal fishing bans, the U.S. Coast Guard reports it has found no Canadians fishing illegally in American waters.

Nor has Canada reported arresting any Americans in its territorial waters during the two-day-old fish war.

"There have been no incidents of any kind," said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Leo Loftus. "It's very quiet."

The fishing bans went into effect at noon Monday. They stem from disputes over fish conservation measures to protect stocks of salmon, cod, haddock, pollock and scallops.

"Nobody's doing anything to inflame the situation," said Loftus. "We don't anticipate any trouble."

In addition to commercial fishing, the ban also applies to Canadian sport anglers fishing from Canadian-registered boats in U.S. waters. Canada has imposed no restrictions on U.S. sport anglers.

Couple Battle For Post

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — Bedfellows make strange politics. Ask an Ionia husband and wife who launched their campaigns Tuesday for the same county commission seat. Filing nominating petitions for the primary election as a Democrat was Robert Cusack, 38. His wife, Beverly, 35, filed as a Republican. Robert may have a slight edge since he has no primary opponent; but Mrs. Cusack faces two other GOP hopefuls. The Cusacks take their pending political battle philosophically. "Each of us knows the best one will win," Mrs. Cusack said. "She's got her party. I've got mine," added Cusack. The couple's three children seem equally unperturbed. Karen, 14 years-old, appears to have the best grasp of the situation. Asked how she felt about the race, she answered: "No comment."

Feeding Elephant Costly

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The meal enjoyed by elephants at the Tulsa Zoo cost Judy Crosby about $60, not to mention the charge cards involved. "They ate my billfold, driver's license, charge cards and checks," she said. "They finally spit out my soggy car keys." Miss Crosby was lifting her niece to feed the elephants Tuesday when one of the animals grabbed her purse with his trunk. He threw his prize in the air, spilling the contents around the pen. Two other elephants then joined the fun and before long the contents of the purse had been swallowed. Miss Crosby found a zoo employee who retrieved $1.04, including a nickel and quarter with toothmarks. Zoo officials said Gunda, a 30-year-old elephant, had poked his nose where it didn't belong when he stepped into the protective moat surrounding the elephant quarters. Zoo officials couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday on whether Miss Crosby would be reimbursed for her loss.

'Jolly Boatman' Tops Mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Caleb Bingham's 1850 painting, "The Jolly Boatman," has sold for $980,000, more than three times the previous record for any American painting. The previous record was $320,000 paid for a James Peale painting sold in London, according to Joan Hartley, spokeswoman for Sotheby, Parke-Bernet galleries. Bingham, who lived in Kansas City, died in 1879. His painting, sold to a New York gallery on Tuesday, shows a flatboat coming down a peaceful river with boys singing and dancing on top of it. "This is an image that was popularized by a Currier Ives print that was made in the 19th century," Miss Hartley said. "It's a very well known, middle-America, mid-19th century image — a bygone era of our history." The auctioneers sold Bingham's work to Herschel Adler Galleries after Stewart Feld entered the top bid via telephone from New York, she said Wednesday. The sale was part of a four-day auction that ends Thursday, featuring rugs, tapestry, silver, cut glass, paintings, Oriental works of art and art nouveau. The name of the previous owner of "The Jolly Boatman" was withheld by the auctioneers.

King Visits Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — Swedish King Carl Gustav XVI arrived Wednesday on a nine-day official visit to the Soviet Union, the first trip here by a Swedish monarch in modern times. The 32-year-old king and his wife, Queen Sylvia, were greeted by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev at Shermetyevo Airport. Hundreds of Russians waved blue and yellow Swedish flags as Gustav inspected a military honor guard. Brezhnev will host a dinner for the royal couple Wednesday night in the Kremlin before the king and queen leave for Kiev, Tashkent, Bukhara and Leningrad.

PLASTIC MONEY — Walter Cavanagh, a drug store manager at Santa Clara, Calif., is worth a million in potential credit. His 897 credit cards weigh 26 pounds and if he charged his limit would be worth $1 million. (AP Laserphoto)

Credit Card Record Set

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — By all accounts, Walter Cavanagh has one of the riskiest hobbies in the world — collecting credit cards. At last count he had 897, weighing 26 pounds, worth more than $1 million in potential credit. He still has 300 applications to be filled out. It all started on a bet with a friend seven years ago. "At that time, I thought there were only 10 or 12 credit cards in the whole world," he said. His buddy later begged out of the bet, but Cavanagh, by his own admission, went berserk. He plied acquaintances for the names and addresses of stores in the towns where they had grown up; he scoured business magazines, annual financial reports, catalogs and telephone books; he printed up form letters. He then filled out the hundreds of applications he received. The 34-year-old bachelor, who manages a drug store in Santa Clara, Calif., has earned a place in the Guinness Book of World Records. Advertising executives for Diner's Club heard about the unusual hobby and now are ferrying him and a suitcase of credit cards around the country on a promotional tour. That's what brought him to Philadelphia, where he was interviewed.

Thank-You Note Planned

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler will be getting the biggest thank-you note of his illustrious career if the Metropolitan District Commission here has its way. The commission plans to collect 500,000 signatures on stacks of parchment-like paper and present them in leather-bound volumes to the octogenarian on his 50th July 4th concert at the outdoor Hatch Shell this summer. At least one volume may be filled only with signatures of firefighters since Fiedler is a noted fire buff and collects fire helmets. "The purpose of this effort is to give the citizens of Massachusetts the opportunity to thank Mr. Fiedler for providing thousands of free concert hours to the general public over the past 50 years," MDC Commissioner John F. Snedeker said.

Nashville Sound Feted

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Loretta Lynn, Conway Twitty, Bill Monroe, Tom T. Hall, Charley Pride, Tammy Wynette, Bill Anderson, Don Williams and the Statler Brothers will star this week in a six-day extravaganza celebrating the Nashville sound. Thirteen-thousand country-and-western fans are expected to pay $30 each to attend the 7th International Country Music Fan Fair — an explosion of Las Vegas glitter, western garb and celebrity worship — at the Municipal Auditorium here. The stars will be entertaining for 12 Loretta Lynn hours each day. A makeshift record store in the auditorium expects to sell between 5,000 and 7,000 country-music albums and tapes before the fair ends Sunday.

Law Frowns On 'Lessons'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A 13 year-old boy calling himself "Zorror" apparently tried to teach some adults a lesson about crime, police say. Now he's got some legal problems to go with his spelling deficiencies. The youth, whose name was withheld because of his age, is charged with illegally entering several automobiles and stealing a pistol, camera, CB radio and sunglasses. All the missing loot was later found about 100 yards from the alleged crime scene with a note addressed to "the people I have taken these articles from." The word "articles" and his hero's name of "Zorror" weren't the only misspellings. "You know I could have gotten away with every bit of it. PS. I even had to steal the pin and paper," he wrote. Signed "Zorror." Deputies took the youth into custody and later released him to his parents pending court action.

Drinking Problem Aired

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former Minnesota Gov. Karl Rolvaag says he is an "acute and chronic alcoholic" who is "groping for sobriety." Rolvaag discussed his alcoholism Tuesday at the annual conference of the Association of Halfway House Alcoholism Programs of North America. "Without A.A. (Alcoholics Anonymous) I am a dying man," he said. Rolvaag, 64, was governor from 1963-1967 and lieutenant governor from 1954-1963. He resigned as chairman of the Public Service Commission in 1977 because he said his drinking interfered with his work. When he was governor, his staff hinted to him that he was an alcoholic, but no one told him directly. "Who," he asked, "is going to tell the governor he's a drunk?" He said his family is suffering and has all but broken up. "I belong to the homeless and the rootless in this society," he said.

Hunting Violations Alleged

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Federal officials report five planes have been seized and six men have been charged with illegal hunting of brown bear after the largest Airborne Hunting Act investigation in state history. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service charged four Alaska hunting guides with using planes to illegally hunt bears. Those charged are Dennis Thompson and William Sims, both of Anchorage, and Jeff Graham and Olaf Madson, both of Port Heiden. Federal law prohibits herding or harassing of wildlife from aircraft and knowing participation in such activity. Sims and Thompson are partners in the Bonanza Flights and Guide Service. Sims and Graham are directors of the Alaska Professional Hunters Association. The state also has filed criminal charges against Richard Gunlogson, an Anchorage guide who is secretary of the hunters association, and King Hoermann of Arlington, Texas. Those two men are charged with violating a state law that prohibits taking a brown bear the same day a hunter is airborne. The alleged violations occurred last October and last month. Officials said Tuesday the investigation continued and additional charges were expected. The federal charges carry a maximum penalty of $5,000, one year in prison, plus forfeiture of any wildlife taken and any aircraft used in the violation. The state violation carry a maximum fine of $1,000, six months in jail, plus forfeiture of wildlife and aircraft involved.

Painting Sells For More Than Expected

NEW YORK (AP) — An old Dutch Master painting of Mary and Joseph's "Flight Into Egypt," expected to sell for up to $50,000, went instead Wednesday for $130,000 to a dealer in Geneva. Sotheby Parke Bernet auctioneers said the 1631 panel work by Marten Ryckaert was put up for sale by Sol de Swaan, an importer of jute products here, who was born in Holland and had acquired the art as a family heirloom. The Swiss dealer's name was not disclosed. The painting shows a fairytale background with mountains, ships, an ancient city, a jousting scene and women bleaching linen. In the foreground, Joseph leads Mary, who is riding a donkey.

Hunting Violations Alleged

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Federal officials report five planes have been seized and six men have been charged with illegal hunting of brown bear after the largest Airborne Hunting Act investigation in state history.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service charged four Alaska hunting guides with using planes to illegally hunt bears. Those charged are Dennis Thompson and William Sims, both of Anchorage, and Jeff Graham and Olaf Madson, both of Port Heiden. Federal law prohibits herding or harassing of wildlife from aircraft and knowing participation in such activity.

Sims and Thompson are partners in the Bonanza Flights and Guide Service. Sims and Graham are directors of the Alaska Professional Hunters Association.

The state also has filed criminal charges against Richard Gunlogson, an Anchorage guide who is secretary of the hunters association, and King Hoermann of Arlington, Texas. Those two men are charged with violating a state law that prohibits taking a brown bear the same day a hunter is airborne.

The alleged violations occurred last October and last month. Officials said Tuesday.

Painting Sells For More Than Expected

NEW YORK (AP) — An old Dutch Master painting of Mary and Joseph's "Flight Into Egypt," expected to sell for up to $50,000, went instead Wednesday for $130,000 to a dealer in Geneva.

Sotheby Parke Bernet auctioneers said the 1631 panel work by Marten Ryckaert was put up for sale by Sol de Swaan, an importer of jute products here, who was born in Holland and had acquired the art as a family heirloom.

The federal charges carry a maximum penalty of $5,000, one year in prison, plus forfeiture of any wildlife taken and any aircraft used in the violation.

The state violation carry a maximum fine of $1,000, six months in jail, plus forfeiture of wildlife and aircraft involved.

The Swiss dealer's name was not disclosed.

The painting shows a fairytale background with mountains, ships, an ancient city, a jousting scene and women bleaching linen. In the foreground, Joseph leads Mary, who is riding a donkey.

Couple Battle For Post

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — Bedfellows make strange politics. Ask an Ionia husband and wife who launched their campaigns Tuesday for the same county commission seat.

Filing nominating petitions for the primary election as a Democrat was Robert Cusack, 38. His wife, Beverly, 35, filed as a Republican.

Robert may have a slight edge since he has no primary opponent, but Mrs. Cusack faces two other GOP hopefuls.

The Cusacks take their pending political battle philosophically.

"Each of us knows the best one will win," Mrs. Cusack said. "She's got her party. I've got mine," added Cusack.

The couple's three children seem equally unperturbed.

Karen, 14 years-old, appears to have the best grasp of the situation. Asked how she felt about the race, she answered: "No comment."

Feeding Elephant Costly

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The meal enjoyed by elephants at the Tulsa Zoo cost Judy Crosby about $60, not to mention the charge cards involved.

"They ate my billfold, driver's license, charge cards and checks," she said. "They finally spit out my soggy car keys."

Miss Crosby was lifting her niece to feed the elephants Tuesday when one of the animals grabbed her purse with his trunk.

He threw his prize in the air, spilling the contents around the pen. Two other elephants then joined the fun and before long the contents of the purse had been swallowed.

Miss Crosby found a zoo employee who retrieved $1.04, including a nickel and quarter with toothmarks.

Zoo officials said Gunda, a 30-year-old elephant, had poked his nose where it didn't belong when he stepped into the protective moat surrounding the elephant quarters.

Zoo officials couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday on whether Miss Crosby would be reimbursed for her loss.

'Jolly Boatman' Tops Mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Caleb Bingham's 1850 painting, "The Jolly Boatman," has sold for $980,000, more than three times the previous record for any American painting.

The previous record was $320,000 paid for a James Peale painting sold in London, according to Joan Hartley, spokeswoman for Sotheby, Parke-Bernet galleries.

Bingham, who lived in Kansas City, died in 1879. His painting, sold to a New York gallery on Tuesday, shows a flatboat coming down a peaceful river with boys singing and dancing on top of it.

This is an image that was popularized by a Currier Ives print that was made in the 19th century," Miss Hartley said. "It's a very well known, middle-America, mid-19th century image — a bygone era of our history."

The auctioneers sold Bingham's work to Herschel Adler Galleries after Stewart Feld entered the top bid via telephone from New York, she said Wednesday. The sale was part of a four-day auction that ends Thursday, featuring rugs, tapestry, silver, cut glass, paintings, Oriental works of art and art nouveau.

The name of the previous owner of "The Jolly Boatman" was withheld by the auctioneers.

King Visits Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — Swedish King Carl Gustav XVI arrived Wednesday on a nine-day official visit to the Soviet Union, the first trip here by a Swedish monarch in modern times.

The 32-year-old king and his wife, Queen Sylvia, were greeted by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev at Sheremetyevo Airport. Hundreds of Russians waved blue and yellow Swedish flags as Gustav inspected a military honor guard.

Brezhnev will host a dinner for the royal couple Wednesday night in the Kremlin before the king and queen leave for Kiev, Tashkent, Bukhara and Leningrad.

Credit Card Record Set

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — By all accounts, Walter Cavanagh has one of the riskiest hobbies in the world — collecting credit cards.

At last count he had 897, weighing 26 pounds, worth more than $1 million in potential credit. He still has 300 applications to be filled out.

It all started on a bet with a friend seven years ago. "At that time, I thought there were only 10 or 12 credit cards in the whole world," he said. His buddy later begged out of the bet, but Cavanagh, by his own admission, went berserk.

He plied acquaintances for the names and addresses of stores in the towns where they had grown up; he scoured business magazines, annual financial reports, catalogs and telephone books; he printed up form letters. He then filled out the hundreds of applications he received.

The 34-year-old bachelor, who manages a drug store in Santa Clara, Calif., has earned a place in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Advertising executives for Diner's Club heard about the unusual hobby and now are ferrying him and a suitcase of credit cards around the country on a promotional tour. That's what brought him to Philadelphia, where he was interviewed.

Thank-You Note Planned

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Pops conductor Arthur Fiedler will be getting the biggest thank-you note of his illustrious career if the Metropolitan District Commission here has its way.

The commission plans to collect 500,000 signatures on stacks of parchment-like paper and present them in leather-bound volumes to the octogenarian on his 50th July 4th concert at the outdoor Hatch Shell this summer.

At least one volume may be filled only with signatures of firefighters since Fiedler is a noted fire buff and collects fire helmets.

"The purpose of this effort is to give the citizens of Massachusetts the opportunity to thank Mr. Fiedler for providing thousands of free concert hours to the general public over the past 50 years," MDC Commissioner John F. Sneider said.

Nashville Sound Feted

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Loretta Lynn, Conway Twitty, Bill Monroe, Tom T. Hall, Charley Pride, Tammy Wynette, Bill Anderson, Don Williams and the Statler Brothers will star this week in a six-day extravaganza celebrating the Nashville sound.

Thirteen-thousand country-and-western fans are expected to pay $30 each to attend the 7th International Country Music Fan Fair — an explosion of Las Vegas glitter, western garb and celebrity worship — at the Municipal Auditorium here.

The stars will be entertaining for 12 Loretta Lynn hours each day. A makeshift record store in the auditorium expects to sell between 5,000 and 7,000 country-music albums and tapes before the fair ends Sunday.

Law Frowns On 'Lessons'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A 13 year-old boy calling himself "Zorror" apparently tried to teach some adults a lesson about crime, police say. Now he's got some legal problems to go with his spelling deficiencies.

The youth, whose name was withheld because of his age, is charged with illegally entering several automobiles and stealing a pistol, camera, CB radio and sunglasses.

All the missing loot was later found about 100 yards from the alleged crime scene with a note addressed to "the people I have taken these articles from."

The word "articles" and his hero's name of "Zorror" weren't the only misspellings. "You know I could have gotten away with every bit of it. PS. I even had to steal the pin and paper," he wrote.

Signed "Zorror."
Deputies took the youth into custody and later released him to his parents pending court action.

Drinking Problem Aired

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former Minnesota Gov. Karl Rolvaag says he is an "acute and chronic alcoholic" who is "groping for sobriety."

Rolvaag discussed his alcoholism Tuesday at the annual conference of the Association of Halfway House Alcoholism Programs of North America.

"Without A.A. (Alcoholics Anonymous) I am a dying man," he said.

Rolvaag, 64, was governor from 1963-1967 and lieutenant governor from 1954-1963. He resigned as chairman of the Public Service Commission in 1977 because he said his drinking interfered with his work.

When he was governor, his staff hinted to him that he was an alcoholic, but no one told him directly.

"Who," he asked, "is going to tell the governor he's a drunk?"

He said his family is suffering and has all but broken up. "I belong to the homeless and the rootless in this society," he said.

PICKET STRUCK BY CAR — Picket Steve Myers, 30, of Altoona, Iowa, is thrown to the hood of a car driven by a non-union Delavan Corp. plant worker, who drove through pickets and crashed the gate of the plant, in West Des Moines. the brakes inside the plant gates. Myers returned to the plant area after treatment at a hospital. Another demonstrator, Jim Friend Jr., was injured when the auto entered the gate. ERA Ratification Fails In Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, ILL. (UPI) — The Illinois House Wednesday defeated a resolution to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment, setting back efforts by pro-ERA forces to get the amendment added to the U.S. Constitution by the March 1979 deadline.

The resolution fell six short of the 107 votes necessary for passage. The final vote was 101-64.

Illinois is the last major northern industrial state which has not ratified ERA. That has made it a pivotal state for the proposed amendment's chances of ultimate ratification.

Thirty-five states have ratified ERA and three more states are needed to ratify it.

The measure this time received the same 101 "yes" votes in the Illinois House it got last June on a test vote. Lack of support from black Chicago Democrats apparently doomed the resolution.

Sen. Dawn Netch, D-Chicago, one of the leaders of the pro-ERA movement in the Senate, said, "The blacks didn't vote" as expected.

"This is a surprise," she said. "We've got to rethink the whole thing. We certainly expected it to pass."

Rep. Alan Greiman, the chief ERA sponsor, said five black Democrats gave "suggestions," they would vote for the measure earlier but then did not. He said he thought two other members of the Chicago Democratic organization would have voted for it if the rollcall had been closer.

"There are men apparently in this General Assembly that were willing to say the hell with the rights of others because of their petty infighting," Greiman said. "I voted for a lot of rights for a lot of people and I'm really in shock over that."

One black lawmaker who did vote for the measure at the last minute, Rep. Jesse Madison, said afterwards, "If I hadn't given my word, I would have voted against it, too."

In his floor speech, Madison implied that blacks have not been brought into the legislative process and have not been consulted on many issues. "We have been counted on," Madison said, "but not included."

Rep. Ronald Griesheimer argued ERA would accomplish "absolutely nothing" because there already are federal laws which cover discriminatory actions. He said it would attack the family and sexuality in the nation and promote homosexuality and bisexuality.

Rep. Edward Bluthardt said he voted "no" because he was "turned off" by a women's convention in Houston last year and a convention boycott in Chicago by various groups until Illinois passes the ERA.

The galleries were filled and groups for and against ERA flanked the entrance to the House chamber. Greiman said he received a call from first lady Rosalyn Carter Tuesday night thanking him for his efforts.

The deadline for ratification is March 1979 but efforts are under way in Congress to extend the deadline seven years.

The measure last passed the Illinois House in 1975 by a vote of 113-62. It has not passed the Illinois Senate since 1972, the first year of voting on the controversial constitutional question.

Jockeying on the amendment has been heavy for months. It peaked this week with Gov. James R. Thompson prodding GOP House members to vote for ERA. Calls by 11 members of the Illinois congressional delegation for Thompson and Chicago Mayor Michael Bilandic to apply pressure and a claim by the League of Women Voters that ERA has had majority backing in Illinois since at least 1974.

President Jimmy Carter urged ratification of ERA in a recent speech before the Illinois legislature.

Negotiations Aimed At Avoiding Layoffs

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The Navy and General Dynamics continued working Wednesday toward a settlement of cost-overrun claims in an attempt to prevent 8,000 layoffs at the Electric Boat shipyard next week.

Democratic Rep. Christopher Dodd, whose 2nd District includes the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton, remained optimistic that some tentative proposals for settling the $544 million claim would prove acceptable to both sides.

General Dynamics was trying Wednesday to convene its board of directors to discuss the proposals to resolve cost overruns in the production of the 688-class attack submarines.

The General Dynamics division had blamed the Navy for 35,000 design changes in the nuclear submarines being built at the southeastern Connecticut shipyard. The Navy, in turn, said Electric Boat was responsible for many of the delays and that the scope of design changes wasn't unusual for a project of that magnitude.

The company threatened to stop work on 16 of the subs on Monday if the Navy did not agree to pay the added costs resulting from the design changes. But the Navy responded immediately that it would go to court if necessary to keep the plant running and the construction program going.

Just over three-fourths of the affected workers are employed at Groton and the rest work at the Electric Boat plant in Quonset Point, R.I. Electric Boat also builds Trident submarines for the Navy.

Corporations Can Give To Campaigns

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Corporations may donate and spend money on bond issues, constitutional amendment and referendum campaigns, Attorney General John Hill ruled Wednesday.

Hill's legal opinion was the first action to apply to Texas a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that corporations have the same free speech rights as individuals.

The attorney general made it clear, however, that corporations may not contribute to campaigns for public office.

His opinion went to District Attorney Henry Wade of Dallas, who asked whether a corporation could spend money to pass or defeat a municipal bond issue.

Dodd said he would ask President Carter to insist on constant negotiations through Sunday if the two sides didn't settle their dispute involving the cost overruns.

Navy Secretary W. Graham Clayton Jr., General Dynamics Chairman and Chief Executive Officer David S. Lewis and other Navy and company representatives, meeting Tuesday in Chicago, reportedly came up with some tentative proposals for a settlement.

Lewis assured Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., that the proposals were "legitimate" and "valid." But he wasn't overly optimistic at the time that the firm's board of directors would accept them.

The original contract calls for the last of the 18 subs to be completed by January 1981, but the subs are up to 40 months behind schedule. The new delivery date is May 1984.

The company said 14,000 of its 25,000 employees would be affected by the work stoppage. The shipyard is the largest private employer in Rhode Island and the second largest in Connecticut.

The cost of the program was originally $1.4 billion, but EB claims the design changes have already added $544 million and that by the time the last of the subs is delivered added costs will reach $840 million.

An earlier threat by the shipbuilding company to halt production in April was averted when both the Navy and EB agreed to a 60-day extension to work out a settlement. The Navy at that time made a provisional payment of $66.5 million.

Dodd said Tuesday he told both parties that Congress will balk at anything resembling an attempt to "bail-out" Electric Boat. The issue has become how much Congress will pay rather than how much Electric Boat deserves, he said.

Critics Fear Effects From Proposition 13

By The Associated Press

The passage of Proposition 13 in California drew praise from critics of government spending on Wednesday, but opponents of the drastic tax cuts warned that there could be problems ahead.

"I'm concerned about the adoption of Proposition 13," said Patricia Harris, secretary of housing and urban development. "It is not limited to homeowners. It extends far beyond homeowners and I think even the people of California may awaken and wonder whether they wanted to go that far."

Noting that Proposition 13 cuts taxes for businesses as well as homeowners, the secretary said: "It seems to me that was rather like burning down the barn to roast the pig."

Sen. Harry Byrd, I-Va., called the California vote a healthy sign and said, "Congress in the last 15 years has taken a totally reckless attitude toward the expenditure of tax funds. I am hoping what happened in California yesterday will be taken seriously by the Congress of the United States."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., compared the California measure to "that two-by-four you're supposed to hit a mule with in order to get its attention," and said: "The voters of California have gotten the attention of public officials, all right."

Two teachers' unions, meanwhile, criticized the California action.

The National Education Association said Proposition 13 "spells potential disaster for the citizens of California."

John Ryor, president of the teachers' group, said there is a "very real danger of destroying the existing basis of funding without finding another, better way of providing our citizens with those essential services. If we fail to do this, the problem can literally rend the nation's fabric of social services."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, said: "Reducing property tax receipts by 60 percent may provide short-term relief to local taxpayers but will ultimately weaken the state's ability to attract jobs and businesses because public services will be either non-existent or dimly inadequate."

A different view came from Richard H. Headlee, chairman of Taxpayers United for Tax Limitation, which is based in Southfield, Mich., and which is pushing for a measure that would limit property taxes, although it would not cut back existing levies.

"The taxpayers are fed up," Headlee said, adding: "The work on the tax limitation petition drive thus far has been done without the support of big government, big business or big unions in Michigan. It is a classic example of citizen revolt. The California results highlight the nationwide presence of such a revolt."

Jerry Wurf, president of the million-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said Proposition 13 was "a natural reaction by California voters to an intolerable property tax burden. The tax burden is absolutely unbearable for low and moderate-income families because they pay too much and the wealthy and the corporations pay too much."

But Wurf, who heads the largest union in the AFL-CIO, said that "When budgetary chaos hits California, public employees won't be the principal victims. Everyone depends upon public services to provide a liveable environment. Only the irresponsible sponsors of Proposition 13 can afford to retire to their comfortable estates and shut out the rest of the world."

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., said the California vote was an "unmistakable message." He said Americans are tired of "having their paychecks raided by the federal government to finance ill-advised and grandiose spending schemes at home and abroad ... They are fed up with oppressive taxation ... Unless Congress and unless the Administration take more positive action to put our fiscal affairs in better order ... I have no doubt that the entire nation will find itself in the midst of a tax revolt on the order of what took place in California."

California Tax Vote Clouds Bond Market

By The Associated Press

California's vote to limit property taxes has confused the tax-exempt bond market as investors try to figure out what impact the decision will have on municipal securities.

Tuesday's vote to lower property taxes to 1 percent of market value — a measure known as Proposition 13 — has caused problems for about $2.8 billion of bonds sold by cities and towns in California. The price has fallen for many.

"We're following the situation closely and are not taking any actions now. It's impossible to say what will happen," said Freda Ackerman, a vice president at Moody's Investor's Services, one of the two major agencies that rate the credit of cities, towns and states.

Many Other States Preparing To Follow California's Lead

By The Associated Press

"The taxpayers are the boss." The words belonged to the head of the Virginia Taxpayers Association, but their message is shared in Massachusetts ... Oregon ... Arizona. And in more than a dozen other states.

An Associated Press survey Wednesday found proposals to limit state and local spending or taxation in 17 states.

And the movement seemed likely to grow after Tuesday's California taxpayers' tea party, where voters overwhelmingly approved Proposition 13, which slashes property taxes.

In Texas, for example, Rep. Walter Mengden, a Republican from Houston, has repeatedly tried — and failed — to get the legislature to limit taxes. He announced Wednesday that he would try again when the lawmakers convene next year.

Kenneth White said his Virginia taxpayers group will propose to the 1979 legislature that property taxes be cut.

"The sentiment is with us and politicians will be falling all over themselves to oblige the taxpayer," said White.

"We've been saying this for years," said George Lauer, 68, of Pennsylvania, talking about the movement to roll back property taxes. "If our lawmakers don't listen and if they aren't receptive, they have only one thing to look forward to — and that's a revolt."

A proposal is pending in the Pennsylvania legislature to eliminate the property tax and replace it with an increase in the state income tax. Andrew J. Watson, who unsuccessfully sought the Republican nomination for governor earlier this year, is trying to get a tax-relief initiative on the Pennsylvania ballot in November.

"Confiscation by taxation is but the first symptom of what the future holds unless the people again gain control of their government," said Watson. "We must tell the government how much we will contribute to run the government rather than being told how much we will have left when they get done with their spending programs."

The Tax Foundation, Inc., a non-profit research group, said that per capita property tax collections increased 111 percent from 1966 to 1976. The public's anger over the increase is evidence in opinion surveys. Fifty-nine percent of those questioned in a recent AP-NBC News Poll said property taxes were too high. 75 percent of those questioned said they agreed with the statement: "There should be a lid on property taxes, even if that means cutting back on some government services."

The AP survey showed that limitations on state spending are an issue in South Carolina, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Arizona, Delaware, Florida, Texas, Virginia and Illinois. Seven states — Idaho, Minnesota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Montana, Nebraska and Ohio — are considering sharply curtailing property taxes or eliminating them completely. Four states — Tennessee, Colorado, New Jersey and Rhode Island — already have strict spending limits.

The National Taxpayers Union, a Washington-based lobbying group, said it would help carry the campaign for tax cuts to other states. Charles S. Crawford, director of national programs for the group, said a cut in spending would not mean a cut in vital services. "It's a matter of taking a blank check away (from legislators) and inserting in its place a set of priorities," he said.

"Watch out, it's really going to snowball," said Wendell Halseh, an Oregon farmer who is one of the organizers of a drive to place on the November ballot a proposal limiting property taxes to 1 1/2 percent of market value.

The snowball effect was evident in Florida. The state Senate opened a special session Wednesday which was supposed to be devoted to one issue — ownership of underwater lands. But Lew Brantley, the Senate president, in a surprise move, promptly introduced a bill to put a lid on property taxes.

In most cases, the spending and tax proposals take the form of constitutional amendments and, in some areas, final enactment is still some time away. In Massachusetts, for example, a proposal to limit state spending to a percentage of the gross state income must be approved by two legislatures and then by the voters in the 1980 general election. In Ohio, a proposal to increase state funding for education and therefore reduce the reliance on local property taxes, is still in the committee stage.

The demands for change are spreading even to states which already have spending or taxing limits. In Minnesota, for example, where increases in local property taxes are limited to 6 percent a year, the head of a Senate committee has said he will introduce a bill next year to limit property levies themselves to 2 percent of market value.

The results of the California election on Tuesday prompted comment on Wednesday in Washington where lawmakers are considering President Carter's tax proposals.

"California has a message for everybody," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd. "It reflects the general concern about inflation and the need for a tax cut."

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the California voters "told their government that enough is enough. It is time the Congress takes note and realizes that the American taxpayer is waking up from his eternal tax nightmare."

California Officials In Turmoil After Vote

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. proposed an immediate freeze on all state jobs Wednesday, and three public employee unions filed suit in the state Supreme Court in the wake of a voter-mandated $7 billion cut in property taxes.

Meanwhile, the president of the 186,000-member California Teachers Association, said the state's 1,047 school districts should not open schools in the fall unless the state restores needed funds.

Tax revolt leader Howard Jarvis' state Proposition 13 takes effect July 1, reducing property tax funds for cities, counties and schools from $12 billion to $5 billion annually, unless a spate of filed and expected suits delays or blocks the initiative.

The Democratic governor, who vigorously fought the tax cut plan, which California voters approved in a nearly 2-1 landslide Tuesday, said he will propose specific cutbacks in a special address to the California Legislature on Thursday.

Brown, who easily won re-election in Tuesday's primary, said his proposal will involve no new taxes to replace the $7 billion property tax cut mandated by voters who approved Proposition 13, and that his proposed cuts would be "in all areas I can make them without injuring anyone."

He said the cuts would be "difficult and it would be painful, but we will carry them on in the spirit of Proposition 13."

Meanwhile, Democratic Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, the state's most powerful legislator, proposed spending "every dime" of the state budget surplus, plus an additional $300 million from state government cutbacks — a total of about $4.5 billion — to keep essential county and school services afloat.

Although the property tax cuts directly affect only local government, not the state, leaders of both parties said the state must cut as much as it can from its $17.4 billion budget to free tax funds to help local government minimize cuts of essential services.

The Republican minority, meanwhile, proposed its own tax plan, which includes additional cuts in the state income tax and a request that Congress return to California the $2 billion tax "windfall" which the federal government would reap from the California initiative.

Since the measure slashes the average homeowner's and businessman's property tax by 57 percent, that eliminates tax deductions worth an estimated $2 billion annually.

The California Federation of Teachers, the California Teachers Association and the California State Council of Service Employees brought suit against the state's 58 county tax assessors and asked the court to restrain them from taking any action to implement the 57 percent property tax cut approved by voters Tuesday.

The court took no immediate action.

State Attorney General Evelle Younger, a tepid supporter of Proposition 13 who won the Republican nomination for governor in Tuesday's elections, said he would go to the state Supreme Court independently if the Legislature doesn't come up with a workable plan by July 1.

The resounding vote was being widely viewed as a signal that homeowners, angry at soaring property levies, were willing to accept cutbacks in government services to fund a tax cut.

Shrugging off warnings of layoffs and cutbacks in schools, parks, police forces and fire departments, voters surged to the polls in heavy numbers and passed the largest property tax cut in the nation.

McCarthy predicted at a news conference that 75,000 local government employees would lose their jobs this month.

Members of the American Civil Liberties Union demonstrated Wednesday in front of the University of California-Los Angeles County Medical Center in Los Angeles to protest feared cuts in medical services.

The 10-sentence amendment to the California constitution says annual property taxes may not exceed one percent of market value.

It rolls back assessments of market values to 1975 levels and limits annual increases in assessments to two percent, except when a property is sold, at which time the property may again be assessed at current market values.

Solons To 'Hear Footsteps'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The success of California's Proposition 13 will cause politicians everywhere to hear "footsteps behind them," says the National Taxpayers Union which is ready to carry the tax revolt to other states.

In the sights of the Washington-based organization are 28 states where it says "significant tax reduction or limitation efforts are underway."

The group describes its mission as lobbying against legislation that hurts taxpayers. Buoyed by the overwhelming passage of Proposition 13 — which will cut property taxes in California by an average of 57 percent — the NTU's officers called a news conference Wednesday and vowed to foment tax revolt elsewhere.

"It's a matter of taking the blank check away and inserting in its place a set of priorities," said Charles S. Crawford, the taxpayers union's director of national programs. He said that as a result of Tuesday's voting, grass roots organizations will spring up.

"Politicians all the way down the ladder, down to the school boards and water districts are going to hear footsteps behind them ... they are going to realize what the legislature didn't do first in California, they are going to have to do at their levels of government."

To carry its message outside of California, the organization said it has enlisted the participation of Proposition 13 co-sponsors Howard Jarvis and Paul Gann.

Most immediately the effort will be in Oregon, one of four states where similar proposals have been introduced. The NTU said the other states are Nevada, Arizona and Nebraska.

William Bonner, executive secretary of the taxpayers organization, said there is room for tremendous savings in every government program, and that movements to limit state revenue or spending will cause bureaucrats to look harder at their programs.

Asked whether some of the good in programs might not be thrown out with the waste, Crawford said:

"Voters typically recognize the difference between meat and fat. If they start losing valuable services, they'll find a way to have that reinstated ... the meat ax approach might blaze a pretty important trail."

James Davidson, chairman of the organization's executive committee, used the "I'm mad as hell" theme of the movie "Network" to describe what is happening.

"The point is," he said, "the message has been received ... the mandate has been registered. People said they are fed up by gargantuan government which has been draining and impoverishing them."

Crawford said that while California was not the first state to begin what the taxpayers union calls "reversing the trend toward greater erosion of America's personal income by government", it was the first successful use of the initiative process.

"The taxpayers had tried four previous times to get property tax reforms through the ballot box and failed," he said. "Finally, the silent majority found its voice and sent the government and the bureaucracy a message loud and clear — a message which will be heard long, and far away from California."

at a local hospital about two hours later. Officers arriving at the scene said they saw a large spot of blood on the left side of the 44-year-old Piens' abdomen. Officers also said a knife, with the blade in an open position, was in Piens' right hand.

Argument Reported
Witnesses said Piens, of 7502 Ave. H, No. 17, had been involved in an argument at a club at 400 E. 34th St.

The witnesses said Piens apparently had been trying to get his wife to leave the club. After that, witnesses indicated, Piens exchanged words with one of two men who reportedly had joined his wife and a female companion.

Vasquez, 31, was indicted in connection with the Feb. 24 shooting death of Rafael Herrera, Jr., 39. Herrera's body was found lying on the pavement outside a club near the intersection of Teak Avenue and East Broadway.

Vasquez, who reportedly lived at 3516 E. Broadway at the time of the incident, was taken into custody in April in Greeley, Colo.

Mrs. Jimenez, of 515 N. Ave. B, the kidnapping suspect, was arrested at a relative's home May 22.

The indictment represents the latest element in the case which began late March 11, when four-year-old Nancy Rene Rodriguez disappeared.

The child's mother told police that she had gone to a club with Nancy, her son, her mother and another woman, but that upon arriving the woman let everyone out of her car except Nancy, then drove away.

Found In Bus Station

On March 14, Lubbock police received word that the child had been found two days earlier in a San Antonio bus station wearing a note that read: "My name is Nancy. I live in Lubbock. Please send me to the Lubbock police department."

The child was reunited with her parents in Lubbock March 15.

Also Wednesday, an 18-year-old Slaton man, Deary Wayne Darty, was indicted for aggravated rape.

Darty is accused of raping a 16-year-old Slaton school girl at knife-point May 8.

The girl said she was raped after being lured home from school by a telephone message advising her there was an "emergency." The girl said she arrived home and was attacked by a rapist inside the house.

Records show Darty received a five-year probation sentence on April 20 of this year for unauthorized use of a vehicle.

Three No-Billed

Three persons were no-billed, thereby clearing them of any accusation of guilt in connection with cases considered by grand jurors.

Persons no-billed were: Kandys Rampey, age and address unavailable, cleared of a theft of service charge; Ernesto Arizona, 21, of 1316 33rd St., cleared of a failure to stop and render aid charge; and Douglas Earl Birden, 19, of 1602 Ave. C, cleared of an aggravated assault charge.

favor of economy in government. Politicians' ways are at election time. It is time for a full-scale holy war on taxes."

Comptroller Bob Bullock said he was unable to make an accurate estimate of the effect a Proposition 13 move would have in Texas, but it would have its greatest impact in urban areas where taxpayers are subject to high city tax levies.

Bullock estimated that ad valorem taxes in Harris and Dallas counties would be reduced by about one-half by Proposition 13 while collections in Travis, Bexar and Tarrant counties would be reduced by a lower percentage.

SENTENCED TO LIFE—Gene T. Meyer covers his face as he is taken to court with other unidentified prisoners in Upper Marlboro, Md. Meyer was sentenced to life in prison for his conviction on charges of stabbing a co-worker's wife and infant daughter to death as part of a "you kill my wife, I'll kill yours" plot. (AP Laserphoto)

Murder Swap Case Sets Bizarre Drama

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I'll kill your wife. You kill mine."

That bargain, struck by co-workers at a suburban computer firm, led to the death of a young woman and her infant daughter. Both were brutally stabbed to death in the kitchen of their home.

Their killer appeared in court this week and what followed was a drama so bizarre, so chilling and spectacular, that the judge in the case said he had seen nothing like it and wished the law would allow a more severe penalty.

The conspiracy involved two computer technicians, co-workers, both 28. One wanted his wife dead so he could live with another woman. The other wanted to collect a $100,000 life insurance policy on his wife.

Detective Thriller
The story unravels like a detective thriller.

According to court testimony from a government investigator, Lon A. Lewis offered Gene T. Meyer $3,000 in March, 1977 to kill Lewis' pregnant wife. But Meyer offered to commit the murder for free if Lewis killed Mrs. Meyer in exchange.

One warm, humid September evening six months later, Lon Lewis arrived home in suburban Bowie, Md., to find the bloody bodies of his wife, Carol, 27, and their 4-month-old daughter, Heather, on the kitchen floor, according to court documents. Lewis called the police.

A month later, Lewis and Meyer confessed to the murder-swapping plot. Meyer was convicted on April 26 of carrying out his end of the bargain. Lewis was convicted on murder charges exactly one month later.

Not End Of Case
But even that was not the end of the dramatic murder case.

At what started as routine sentencing hearing in nearby Upper Marlboro, Md., on Tuesday, Meyer sat calmly and dispassionately as he was sentenced to consecutive terms of life plus 30 years' imprisonment.

Suddenly, he paled as the deputy state's attorney called forth a tall, tanned man from among the spectators. The man was introduced as Capt. Frank Mazzone, a slick, experienced undercover policeman.

"Mr. Meyer knows Mr. Mazzone but not by that name," the prosecutor announced to a stunned courtroom.

Then the prosecutor told the judge that Mazzone, posing as a lawyer, had visited Meyer in jail and Meyer had solicited Mazzone to kill more people — Meyer's wife, Hortensia; two local policemen involved in his arrest and interrogation; and Lon Lewis.

Slumps To Floor
At this point, Meyer fainted and slumped to the floor. He had to be taken from the courtroom on a stretcher.

Marshalls cleared the courtroom and called the rescue squad, which did not arrive until 30 minutes later. The ambulance attendants wheeled Meyer out the front door.

But the ambulance was waiting in the rear.

Anti-Inflation Gain Seen In 90 Days

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief inflation fighter said Wednesday that people should expect results from the voluntary price and wage restraint program by the end of the summer.

Robert S. Strauss said people will have a right to ask "What the hell have you done in the first 90 days?"

"I think in 90 to 120 days people ought to look around" and assess the program, said Strauss. "I hope that by the end of the year there will be meaningful, measurable progress in our efforts against inflation, and I think that within the next 60 days you'll see them."

But Strauss, who also serves as the administration's special trade ambassador, declined to say the program should be judged a failure if there is no progress in three months. Strauss added that he is encouraged by the cooperation the program has received so far.

Business Aid Hoped
At a breakfast meeting with reporters, he also declined to predict the specific results expected in the next few months. "I hope there will be substantial business support in 60-90 days," Strauss said.

Carter's anti-inflation program is aimed at reducing the rate of inflation by one-half of 1 percentage point a year through efforts to hold wage and price increases below the levels of the past two years.

Strauss disclosed he has sent Carter an inflation memorandum that outlines a framework for the anti-inflation program for the next six to 12 months. He said it suggests ways to extend the anti-inflation program to the state and local level and to drum up additional nationwide support for it.

Increased Output
The memo also stresses the importance of improved productivity in the anti-inflation effort and deals with plans for a government task force to monitor the government's own contribution to inflation, Strauss added.

He repeated administration assurances that prices, which have increased at an annual rate of over 10 percent in recent months, should begin to ease up in June for consumers because the recent burst in food prices should be about over.

"Many of the seasonal problems will be behind us in 60 days and when you look at June returns, I'm going to try to take credit for it in June if I possibly can, but you know as well as I do that the seasonal (factors) will have done it. Food and fruit and vegetables will be down . . ." he said.

Rail, Postal Talks
Strauss said he is worried about the trend of negotiations on a new contract for railroad workers, and said it's imperative that the rail agreement as well as a new postal workers contract show support for Carter's program to restrain wage increases.

"It can't get some support for the program from those areas, the nation will be dealt a setback," he said.

However, Strauss said that since most major labor agreements will not be nego-

Union is negotiating in good faith to reach an agreement at second round Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, saying, "I am glad to report that the prospects for a SALT II agreement are good."

But he accused the Soviets of attempting to export a "repressive form of government" to other nations. And he said they had violated an international accord reached at Helsinki, Finland, because of "the abuse of basic human rights in their own country."

Part of his speech was a pep talk to the American people. He said U.S. strategic military forces are adequate and there is "no cause for alarm" over disparities in conventional military strength.

He said the Soviets, despite their totalitarian form of government, are losing momentum in economic growth, are subject to chronic agricultural shortages and are losing international popularity to the point that Marxist parties in other countries "no longer look on the Soviet Union as a model to be imitated."

MARIJUANA SEIZED
LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — More than two tons of marijuana was taken from a World War II-era airplane that apparently was beginning to run out of fuel before landing at the local airport, police said Wednesday. Detective Capt. J.E. Taylor estimated 97 bales of marijuana, weighing about 4,420 pounds, was taken from the plane.

tiated until next year, it will be necessary for businesses to demonstrate prior restraint on prices and for the government to show restraint in its policies.

Referring to unions, he said, "They've got a right to see what we do in the next few months. As we make progress, I think we'll see that reflected in labor's demands."

In another development, the Commerce Department reported that businessmen will increase their investments in new plants and equipment this year by nearly 6 percent, after adjustment for inflation. That's up from an earlier estimate of a 5.5 percent increase.

The department said businesses plan to spend $151.1 billion on new investments, up from $135.8 billion last year. Increases were planned by most major industries, led by air transportation, up 35.8 percent.

Meanwhile, G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said the kind of inflation the United States is experiencing "breeds recession." Miller said a major challenge to policymakers will be to contain it during the months ahead without slipping into a recession.

In a speech to the National Press Club, Miller denied a suggestion there was an agreement between the White House and the Federal Reserve Board for an easing of monetary policy by the Fed if the Carter administration cuts federal spending.

Miller said any easing of fiscal policy by the administration will ease pressure on interest rates, but it won't necessarily reduce them or keep them from rising even further, because the primary influence on interest rates is inflation.

Nevertheless, Miller said he was pleased to see reports that Carter is considering a further reduction in the budget deficit for fiscal 1979, which would reduce it below $50 billion. The deficit is now projected at about $53 billion.

Cattlemen, Others Blast Plan For Beef Imports year. The administration is trying to create the impression that it is helping consumers." National Cattlemen's Association President Richard A. McDougal told the Avalanche-Journal. "This action, however, is just another cosmetic approach to the problem of inflation — which is largely government-caused anyway."

"Cruel, Political Hoax"
"This is a cruel, political hoax that will hurt, rather than help consumers of beef in years ahead," he said, claiming the additional meat markets would not significantly drive down prices because the increase amounts to only an additional pound per person for the rest of the year.

"The administration would gain a lot more credibility with the public by exhibiting some backbone and attacking the fundamental causes of inflation," McDougal said.

McDougal said the effect of Carter's decision would have a detrimental effect on the nation's cattle industry, because "the psychology is such that some people in the business will say, 'well, if the government is going to interfere everytime we start making a profit, I'm just getting out.'"

Cattlemen began liquidating herds in 1973 in an effort to keep beef prices stable and only this year are beginning to rebuild herds, Texas Asst. Commissioner of Agriculture Bob Williams said.

USDA figures show the nation's cow herds as of Jan. 1, 1978, were still 15 percent below the peak period of Jan. 1, 1975, the largest decrease within that period.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown earlier in the day issued a short statement saying he was discouraged with Carter's decision, especially portions which will mean contracts with New Zealand and Australia — countries he said don't buy many American products — for increased beef imports from their countries.

Discourages Cattlemen
McDougal said the effect of Carter's proposal would be to further discourage cattlemen not to rebuild their herds this year because of the added imports, a sign to them, he said, that the Carter administration will not allow beef prices to rise any higher regardless of the plight of the American cattlemen.

American Agriculture Movement leader Gerald McCathern, who proposed stricter controls on foreign beef when the movement was at its climax, said Wednesday the Carter decision "could only result in renewed unrest in 1978" and that "in the long run it will cost the national's economy billions of dollars." Cattle industry officials had urged Carter and key administration officials to leave the industry alone and allow the laws of supply and demand to control beef prices.

Nevada Jury Gets Hughes Will Trial

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The trial to determine if Howard Hughes wrote the so-called Mormon Will went to the jury late Wednesday, exactly seven months after the trial began.

Clark County District Judge Keith Hayes ordered the panel of five men and three women to begin its deliberations immediately.

Six of the jurors must agree on a verdict.

At stake in the trial is the vast estate left by Hughes when he died April 5, 1976, while on an emergency flight from his hideaway at an Acapulco, Mexico, resort hotel to a hospital in Houston.

The will, left at the headquarters of the Mormon Church in Salt Lake City on April 27, 1976, leaves Hughes' estate to that church, four colleges and universities and a number of charities. It also leaves one-sixteenth of the estate to Melvin Dummer, a former service station operator who says he once picked up a man in the Nevada desert who claimed he was Hughes.

Four of Hughes' relatives contested the will. The relatives, who were not named in the document, contend that the purported will is a forgery and not a very good one.

An audit after the elusive industrialist died set the value of his estate at $169 million. But there have been estimates that it is worth up to $2 billion.

Attorneys for Hughes' relatives say that Dummer, his wife, Bonnie, and possibly others forged the hand-written, three-page document after learning of Hughes' death.

But attorney Harold Rhoden, who represents former Hughes associate Noah Dietrich — named in the document as executor of the estate — said in his closing arguments that the story of how Dummer received the will was true.

Dummer said a "mysterious courier" appeared at his service station and left the will with instructions to deliver it to the church.

Man Escapes Attackers By Feigning Death

A 28-year-old Amarillo man escaped from his three attackers early Wednesday by pretending he was dead.

Lorenzo Flores told police he had gone to a club in the 1700 block of E. 19th Street about 1:30 a.m. Wednesday to look for a friend.

He said when he came out of the club a few minutes later, he saw three men breaking into his car, parked on the lot.

Flores said he ran toward his vehicle and when he got close, one of the three struck him with a board and knocked him to the ground. He said the men then took his car keys and got into the car.

Flores said the same man who hit him with the board then grabbed Flores from behind, put a knife to his neck and dragged him into the car.

Flores said the man, believed to be about 40 years old, pushed him down in the seat and threatened to kill him if he moved and the driver took off from the lot.

After stopping in a canyon between E.

Broadway and E. 19th Street, Flores said, he was forced out of the car. He said he was taken to a stream farther into the canyon, forced into the water and the knife-wielding man held Flores head under water.

Flores said he held his breath, let his body go limp and pretended he was dead, at which point the suspects fled.

In addition to the attack and theft of his car, Flores said, the men also took an envelope containing $1,500 in cash from the glove compartment of the vehicle.

After his assailants left, Flores said he flagged down a car that took him to a friend's house for help.

Police Wednesday also were searching for a Mexican-American male who reportedly assaulted a Lubbock woman.

Cathy Sue Luback of 2905 Ave. J said the man, who had come to her mobile home to fix the roof, entered the living room and made advances toward her.

Mark Dee Fisher said the person who

Fisher listed as missing five stereo speakers, a digital clock, a necklace and cash.

A .22-caliber rifle, valued at $100, was taken from the James Perkins residence at 5410 48th St. Tuesday, police reports indicate.

Burglars took starters, grinders and batteries valued at $600, from the Farmers Co-op Compress Shop at 3800 S. E. Drive sometime between 7 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday, Ronnie Brown of 4906 43rd St. said.

Ann Maps, owner of the Foxie Box, located at Auburn Street and University Avenue, reported that $350 worth of alcoholic beverages was taken from the night club.

Police, responding to a reported domestic disturbance at a 45th Street residence late Tuesday, soon got the idea that the alleged assailant had plans for them, too.

A woman at the house told officers a man was drunk and had been beating a little girl. Police said the furniture was overturned and as they were standing in the front room, the suspect entered and tried to hit one of them.

As they followed the man into another room, reports showed, they were met with a flying glass bottle directed at, but narrowly missing, their heads.

The 26-year-old resident was hauled away kicking and screaming to Lubbock County Jail, where he was booked for assault on a police officer and using loud and profane language.

Lubbock police got a call about 8:30 p.m. Tuesday to assist out-of-town detectives who were anticipating the arrest of an assault suspect from their city.

Police from Big Spring had a warrant for the 24-year-old Lubbock resident and called officers here to assist in surveillance of his 49th Street home. After spotting the suspect get into a car they followed and stopped him as he was leaving the neighborhood.

Police reportedly found substances believed to be marijuana and heroin in the man's auto. After a Drug Enforcement Administration officer was given the evidence, the man was booked on suspicion of possessing the drugs.

A 47-year-old truck driver almost got the shock of his life early today following a mishap in the 100-block of E. 44th Street.

A patrol officer said he saw a large flash of light about 12:30 a.m. and when he got to the scene found a tractor-trailer and a broken power line. The rig's driver reportedly was standing in front of the truck.

After Lubbock Power and Light arrived and secured the high-voltage lines, police directed their attention to the driver.

They started to suspect something when the man handed over a credit card as his driver's license. When asked what happened, about all the driver was able to say was: "I don't know. I was just making a turn when all hell broke loose."

The man was arrested on suspicion of being intoxicated when officers noticed he was having to use a light pole for support as he spoke.

Manuel Guzman Jr. said a burglar got into his 2222 25th St. house and made off with a $900 camera during an incident nearly a month ago.

According to Roger Mitchell of 5501 48th St., No. 112, someone broke into a box that was mounted in the rear of his pickup and stole $400 worth of tools late Monday or early Tuesday.

Ruth Braxton of 308 7th St. told police she lost $200 worth of clothes, a $75 television set and a $30 radio to whoever got through a window at her residence recently.

The same mode of entry possibly was used at Gafford's Produce at 708 27th St. this week, Box Gafford said. According to the complainant, $257.50 cash was stolen from an office at the business.

Three Children Die In Lake Near Cone

CONE (Special) — Three Crosby County children drowned early Wednesday, while playing in a lake pit on a farm about a mile west of Cone.

The dead were identified as Joe Munoz Jr., 12, of Ralls; and Gloria Munoz, 9, and Ray Munoz, 7, both of Dougherty.

Ralls Police Chief L.T. Starkey said apparently two teen-age youths at the Munoz residence noticed the children were missing and walked a mile to call for help.

Volunteers from the Ralls Ambulance Service and the Ralls Fire Department received the call at 10:30 a.m. By the time they reached the site, located on the Tom Campbell farm, the bodies of the two boys had been pulled from the lake.

The volunteers then swam out into the pit, which was about seven feet deep, and about 30 minutes later recovered the girl's body.

Justice of the Peace W.E. Easter of Ralls pronounced the three children dead at the scene and ruled the deaths accidental.

Most of the lake area was shallow, and apparently the youngsters did not realize there was a deeper pit area, Easter said.

Recent rains have brought the area about seven inches of moisture, so the lake was "pretty full," Starkey said.

Services for the three children will be at 11 a.m. Friday at St. Michael's Catholic Church in Ralls with Father Harold Waldo, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Ralls Cemetery under direction of Carter-Adams Funeral Home.

Joe Jr. was a student in the Ralls school system. He was a native of Uvalde and had lived in the Ralls area most of his life.

His survivors include his father, Joe Munoz Sr. of Ralls; his mother, Ruby Munoz of Plainview; three brothers, Fred of Roscoe, Jesse of Plainview and David of Ralls; and eight sisters, Mary Ramirez and Margarita Munoz, both of Plainview, Alice Moreno and Dora Munoz, both of Dallas, Josephine Esparza of Dougherty, and Aida Munoz, Olivia Munoz and Diane Munoz, all of Ralls.

Gloria and Ray were students in the Floydada school system. She was a native of Richmond, and he was a native of Fort Myers, Fla.

Survivors of the brother and sister include their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Miguel Esparza of Dougherty; two brothers, Louis Munoz and Mike Esparza, both of the home; and their grandparents, Joe Munoz Sr. of Ralls, Ruby Munoz of Plainview and Arcelia Esparza and Miguel Esparza, both of California.

Gaines Agrees To Settle Civil Suit Out Of Court

Local attorney Gene Gaines, accused in a civil suit of defrauding an elderly woman out of nearly $10,000, Wednesday agreed to an out-of-court settlement.

Under terms of the agreement, Gaines will transfer $9,500 to the woman's estate.

The agreement was announced in open court after testimony, being held before a jury in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court, had been underway more than two days.

Shaver had earlier ordered a disputed sum of $3,500 to be deposited into the registry of the court.

According to the settlement terms, that money, plus accrued interest, will be transferred to the woman's guardian as guardian of the estate.

The agreement said that judgment would be further rendered for $6,000, without interest, payable at the rate of $600 per month.

The original petition by the guardian, the elderly woman's brother, had asked for $9,686.15 with interest and punitive damages of $20,000 against Gaines.

Records show that the woman, now in her 80s and living in a nursing home, was discharged from the Wichita Falls state hospital for the mentally ill Oct. 2, 1974.

In the original petition, the plaintiff alleged that Gaines won the woman's confidence in late 1974 and persuaded her to withdraw more than $7,000 from a Paducah bank.

The document alleged that Gaines then disbursed the money, together with other sums, totaling $9,686.15.

The brother filed an application for guardianship Jan. 7, 1975.

A document filed in probate court later that year indicated Gaines had disbursed $8,342.41 in services connected with the estate of the elderly female client.

The original petition against Gaines alleged the woman was obviously incompetent during the time in question.

Gaines, during the trial which ended with the settlement Wednesday, contended he had legitimately charged the woman for services on a contingency fee basis and called witnesses who said the woman seemed normal to them.

'Abner' Of Comedy Team Dies At 72

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Retired actor Norris Goff, who was Abner in the Lum and Abner comedy team that headlined a network radio show for 24 years, died at the Eisenhower Medical Center Wednesday after suffering an apparent stroke. He was 72.

Goff, known by the nickname "Tufty," portrayed Abner Peabody in the show, which was situated in the fictional Jot 'Em Down country store of Pine Ridge, Ark.

Chester Lauck, who played the character Lum Edwards, now lives in Hot Springs, Ark.

The Lum and Abner show began on NBC Radio in Chicago on April 26, 1931. The show continued on various networks until the waning days of radio comedy shows in 1955, when Lauck and Goff retired.

The hospital said Goff suffered an apparent stroke at his home in nearby Indian Wells Monday night and was rushed to the Palm Desert medical center, where he died without regaining consciousness.

Goff is survived by his wife, Liz, a son, Gary, and a daughter, Gretchen Elizabeth Dooling.

FRUIT OF THE ROOM — What better conversation piece on the Chippendale coffee table than photographer Gary Davis' "electrical banana" (to quote Donovan) and accompanied apples? They even might adorn a graceful end table or be plugged in by the aquarium. With an extension cord long enough, the snappy homemaker could tuck the edibles in his pocket and roam freely throughout the house. But remember. Even though they may look delectable, one bite could prove a "shocking" experience.

School Busing Program Safety Measures Okayed

Seat belts will be available on the buses the Lubbock Independent School District intends to purchase to implement its court-ordered integration plan. Superintendent Ed Irons says.

The seat belts are among several features incorporated in the district's transportation program to ensure the safety of children in getting to school next year.

Other features include summer training sessions for drivers and installation of two-way radios on all buses.

Parents requested the seat belts. Irons said. "They generally feel that young children, especially first-graders, would be safer if we have seat belts available," he said.

"Some parents seem to fear that if a bus lurches forward or makes a sudden stop, a child who is not buckled in could fall out of his seat."

Transportation officials say that is unlikely to happen because bus seats are positioned so close together. Despite some "mixed opinions" on how valuable seat belts are on school buses, Irons said belts will be installed on Lubbock's buses.

"We won't have them on every seat, but we will have enough for children who want to use them," he said.

Another question parents have been asking the district is whether students who ride school buses will be protected by personal injury insurance.

Lubbock and other school systems used to provide such insurance. But in 1975, an attorney general's ruling deemed that the purchase of personal injury coverage by school districts is unconstitutional.

"The law prohibits us from carrying this kind of insurance," Irons said.

The district still has full liability coverage. But for a rider to collect on a personal injury, he must prove that the accident was the result of the district's negligence.

At any rate, the Lubbock school system's bus safety record is "excellent," and Irons doesn't expect that to change.

Transportation supervisor Robert Miller said the district's buses logged about 100,000 miles during the 1977-78 school year, with about 1,300 riders a day. There were eight accidents, most of them minor, and "no serious injuries," Miller said.

"When you consider the number of miles our buses go, and the fact that it's done in an urban setting, we have an extremely good safety record," Miller said.

The quality of bus construction is set by the federal government. "They are very sound vehicles, with good structural integrity. When we do have an accident, which is rare, the possibility of a student getting hurt is pretty slim," Miller said.

The state requires that school bus drivers be 18 or older, have a chauffeur's license, pass a physical exam and take a state-sponsored driving course.

Miller said Lubbock goes beyond those requirements by upping the minimum age to 21, checking out each applicant's driving record and having employees take a National Safety Council defensive driving course and a Red Cross first aid class.

"I anticipate starting the training sessions this summer in order that our drivers will have a reasonable opportunity to get familiar with operating a school bus before school starts," he said.

Irons has asked the State Board of Control to order 35 buses, with an option to buy another five, for use here next year. That requisition has been designated an emergency to ensure that the buses will be delivered by August, Irons said.

He said the 70-passenger buses are expected to cost the Lubbock school system $16,000 to $18,000 each.

This month the district will take bids on two-way radios for its bus fleet.

"The radios will be a big help," Miller said. "We'll be able to keep in constant contact with all our buses."

Should a vehicle experience mechanical trouble on a run, the district will be able to send a relief bus immediately, he said.

The district's court-ordered integration plan will involve transporting about 2,000 elementary children and several hundred secondary students a day.

Pupil personnel director Bill Parker, in charge of students' safety, said taking a bus may well be safer than any other form of transportation. "Over the last several years, we've received far more injury reports on children who are driven to school in private automobiles or who walk or ride bicycles, than on children who take a bus," Parker said.

"Granted, we don't have that many children riding buses. But statewide, the figures suggest that a bus is safer than, say, a private automobile," he said.

Under the school system's plan, children will gather at their neighborhood schools in the morning and receive transportation to and from their court-ordered "sister school." This "point-to-point" program will eliminate pickups and other stops on busy streets — the most hazardous part of school bus driving, Miller said.

form of transportation. "Over the last several years, we've received far more injury reports on children who are driven to school in private automobiles or who walk or ride bicycles, than on children who take a bus," Parker said.

New Mexico Flood Evacuees Return Home

TATUM, N.M. (AP) — Families evacuated from the Tatum area after a dam threatened to overflow or break returned to their homes Wednesday as the flood danger passed, Tatum police said.

Cruz M. Sedillo, deputy Civil Defense director, said water in the dam Tuesday was 10 to 20 feet high and backed up for about a half mile. He said the dam could have overflowed or broken if the area received more rainfall Tuesday night.

The National Weather Service in Albuquerque had said two thunderstorms could hit the area Tuesday evening and issued a flash flood warning. But the storms missed the Tatum area. A spokeswoman for the Tatum Police Department said the water in the dam was receding today.

Tatum Police Chief Lesley Dudley said he flew over the dam Tuesday afternoon and found "a little bit of water spilling over into a spillway on the northern end."

John Ramsey of the Army Corps of Engineers reported that, on the basis of a map reconnaissance of the dam, there would be "no high danger to life or property" in the event the dam broke.

Same Conditions But No Action On Local Property Tax Revolt

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The way Californians tell it, you'd think their property taxes were just outrageous.

After all, the owner of a typical $60,000 house on the West Coast has been paying an average of $1,400 a year in state and local property taxes.

No wonder homeowners there voted themselves such a huge tax cut Tuesday. Why, if somebody tried to make Lubbock pay California-size property taxes, we'd revolt too — right?

Wrong. You're already paying them.

The owner of a $60,000 home here gets billed about $1,380 a year in property taxes to support his city, school district, county, hospital district and state government. That is nearly identical to the California average on the same-priced house, according to the Associated Press.

California voters were protesting that their annual property taxes had been running around 2.4 percent of what their property is worth.

But Lubbock isn't much different. Taxes on a house here typically amount to about 2.3 percent of the home's market value.

The analogy has certain flaws. For one thing, because of different markets, a house that California appraises at $60,000 may be worth only about $40,000 in Lubbock. In that respect, Lubbock taxes could be considered lower.

Also, some California cities have higher property taxes than others. A $60,000 home in Los Angeles has been taxed at about $1,800. Just the same, however, a $60,000 house in San Diego gets hit for only about $1,100.

Another factor is that California has a very high income tax and a six percent sales tax, while Texas has no income tax and the sales tax here is only five percent.

Still, it was the property tax that upset Californians the most. And despite market differentials, the average property tax in California is comparable to Lubbock's.

So why is it that California has rebelled against property taxes — by overwhelmingly passing Proposition 13 — while Lubbock remains relatively quiet about its ad valorem tax burden?

John Brooks, tax assessor-collector for the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District, hopes the reason is that the people here have more sense.

"Everybody's itching but they don't know where to scratch. The so-called 'property tax revolt' isn't simply an economic issue. It's an emotional issue. People want to tell government they've had enough," Brooks said.

"The irony is that 99 percent of the things people are mad about concern the federal government. But 99 percent of their anger is directed at local governments."

"Local entities — the city and the school district — are literally made the whipping boys for people upset with the feds. It's bordering on mass hysteria."

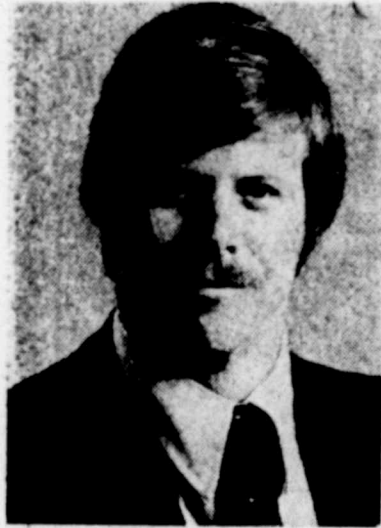

The California vote, Brooks said, supports that theory.

What Californians did was to limit property taxes to one percent of market value. Thus, a home appraised at $60,000 could be taxed at no more than $600.

If a similar measure were enacted here, Lubbock taxes — like California's — would be cut about 57 percent.

Proposition 13 also forbids tax assessors from increasing assessments by more than two percent from year to year. Such a proposal would have drastic effects on Lubbock. Property here is re-evaluated on a four-year cycle in which taxpayers see no increase for three years but then face a large adjustment the fourth year.

Proposition 13 will cut local government revenues in California from $12 billion to $5 billion, and public officials there have no certain way to make up the difference.

WALTER STUECK

Traffic Head Named For Tech Program

Walter W. Stueck has been named to head up Texas Tech's Traffic Safety Coordination Program.

Stueck, who held a similar position in Uvalde at Southwest Texas Junior College, will assist local city and county governments in developing traffic safety plans.

"I'm excited to get started here at Tech. The problems here on the South Plains offer a tremendous challenge to our program," Stueck said.

The Office of Traffic Safety/State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in Austin serves as the contracting entity for Tech's program and other similar programs throughout the state.

Tech's Traffic Safety Coordination Program serves an 18-county region surrounding the Lubbock area. The program also staffs an area traffic engineering in training and a public information and education specialist.

South certainly wanted to get to seven spades. His partner had practically bid game by himself and had shown the three missing aces. He would also show one king if South bid the follow-up five notrump, but South had a better way to bid his hand. He bid six clubs to tell North to bid seven spades if he held two of the three top honors. But North failed to oblige and South knew that the enemy held the king of trumps.

South was also a careful player. He noticed that even six spades required careful play to guard against a three-zero trump break. So South made the safety play to guard against this. He won the club in his own hand and led a low trump. West played the nine and South played dummy's 10. We didn't mind if East got to score with a singleton king. The bid was six, not seven. He did mind about losing two tricks if West held king-jack-nine. This is just what West held, but after that 10-spot play West could only collect one trump trick.

Ask the Experts

A Dakota reader picked up two successive hands with no high-card points at all and wants to know if that is entitled to be mentioned in the Guinness Book of Records. We doubt it. The chance of holding zero high-card points is .003639 or almost four in a thousand. The chance of getting two in a row just over 13 in a million, so we are sure other players have been equally unlucky.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: You haven't lived long enough to qualify as an expert on sex among the elderly. I have. All women do NOT lose their sex drive in later years. You told "It's Zero Here" that many elderly people derive ample satisfaction out of fondling and caressing — just touching and being close. This may be true if BOTH the man and his wife have one foot in the grave, but that's not the way it is in our house. I say if the only place a man has it is in his head, let him keep it there. I'm tired of being mauled and pawed, aroused and left hanging in midair. No one should start a fire unless he can put it out. Just sign me — Needing More At 72

Dear 72: I did NOT say "all women lose their sex drive in later years." Some women, as well as men, maintain a keen interest in sex into the 80s and even 90s. I did say, however, that some elderly couples are content just to be held and caressed lovingly and nothing more is needed. If ever a couple needed joint sex therapy, it's you and your husband. There are simple solutions to your problem and I hope you will make an effort to find them. If your physician is unable to recommend a legitimate sex therapist (watch out for quacks — the woods are full of 'em), write to the American Psychiatric Association. That National Headquarters address is 1700 18th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009.

Dear Ann: The controversy in your column about breastfeeding babies in public brought back a memory that gave me and other members of our family a hearty laugh. I'd like to share it with you and your readers. Many years ago my mother was going by train from Galesburg, Ill., to the next town. She noticed across the aisle a large, friendly woman who was breastfeeding her child. The little one was fretful and not taking his nourishment. At that moment the conductor came by and asked the woman for her ticket. My mother heard the woman say, "Eat your dinner, child, or I'm going to give it to the conductor." — An Illinois Reader

Dear Reader: Thanks for a good laugh. These old family stories are a lot funnier than the current jokes that make the rounds.

Dear Ann Landers: A message to all those jerks who yell at the secretary because her boss did not return their call: Why don't you yell at him in person? Do you think the secretary has the power to stand over the guy and demand that he call you back just because you said it was urgent? I've been answering telephones for 15 years, and it is unbelievable how nasty people can get. I realize being tolerant is part of my job, but life would be so much more pleasant if people were sensible. What do these bullies think they are accomplishing when they yell at the secretary? Please ask them, Ann — Hammered-On Sue

Dear Sue: I don't have to ask them. I know. They're taking their frustration on the handiest target, and that's you. Of course it makes no sense, but when people behave emotionally instead of rationally, this is what you get. Keep a smile in your voice, honey — and don't let those clods give you their ulcers.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What does the doctor mean when he says someone has a "reducible hernia"? — A.K.

I'll define a hernia first. It is the protruding of a body part through a break in the tissue supposed to hold it in place. A groin hernia may be protrusion of a loop of intestine through the abdominal wall, for example.

A reducible hernia is one that can be pushed back into proper position. If the hernia cannot be placed back in proper position, it is an "incarcerated hernia." An incarcerated hernia to which blood supply is cut off is a "strangulated hernia."

These three terms, in fact, can describe the progress of some hernias, which is why I stress early treatment when required. A strangulated hernia can be serious.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send me your booklet on foot care. Hopefully it will contain information on having too much calcium. I was told that this is the cause of my very painful corns, which have appeared on the inside of both little toes. Is the only cure to have them scraped? — Mrs. M.D.

You can't lay this to too much calcium in your body. The cause of corns is strictly mechanical — continuous pressure and friction that causes a thickening or cornification of the skin. Corns are pea-sized affairs shaped like corn kernels. In "hard corns," which appear over bony areas (joints) the small end of the kernel points inward from the skin and can be pretty painful. Soft corns, which I presume you have, are usually located between toes. They almost always respond well when pressure (from shoes) is relieved. Corn plasters of salicylic acid help remove them.

These can also be used for hard corns, along with filing and foot soaks, but sometimes they may be too deeply imbedded and must be removed surgically. You'll find corns, bunions, and other foot ailments discussed in the booklet you ask for. Send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611 and I'll mail a copy to you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am of average build. I wish you would print a weight-height chart to let people like me know what our weight should be. — Mrs. J.D.

No need to. A good weight for a medium-framed woman who is 5-foot-2 in medium heels is from 107 to 119 pounds. An additional 3 1/2 pounds for each additional inch of height keeps you in a good weight class. The medium-framed man 5-foot-3 in one-inch heels should weigh between 121 and 133 pounds. He can add about five pounds for each additional inch of height and have acceptable weight.

A much better yardstick, however, is how well you like yourself in a bathing suit.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you please give us your thoughts on peanut butter? I know it's rich in protein, but how about advising these kids of mine that a little meat protein wouldn't hurt, either. I think the peanut butter idea has been oversold and that a lot of youngsters would do better with a meat sandwich instead. Any ideas? — H.D.

Peanut butter is a nutritious food. We are lucky it is because it is a staple for many youngsters. But it is not a complete food by any means. A tablespoon of peanut butter, which is probably enough to make a small sandwich, contains about four grams of protein. To get the protein in a hamburger patty, you would have to eat from five to six tablespoons of peanut butter. But that would supply about 500 more calories than the patty.

Meat is a more concentrated and complete source of protein than the peanut butter. In answer to another writer, there is no difference in the nutritive value of chunky vs. the creamy style of peanut butter.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A person can be born with too much cholesterol. Nervousness can increase the cholesterol of a person's blood. True? — W.S.

There may be a tendency for members of the same family to have high cholesterol levels. We find high levels in children for no other obvious reason. So that's true, apparently. Nervousness is a vague term. Tension and anxiety can increase the cholesterol level, so test results on tense individuals are accepted cautiously, and may have to be repeated.

Although cholesterol has been implicated in heart attacks and other circulatory

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK—When a serial's ratings take a nose-dive, writers have a tendency to pull out every trick in the melodramatic book of plots. But this week on "One Life to Live," which has fallen from audience grace in recent weeks, there's going to be a ballooning bonanza of story stress.

A few of the plots that hadn't been scheduled to occur or climax until the end of the year have been pushed ahead and hyped up. Within five days on the show there will be bullets flying, kidnappings, a major operation, a knife fight, a horseback riding accident and a heart attack, which some of the audience may also endure amid all the mayhem. And the show warns there's further steam ahead, so get out the tranquilizers.

Over at "Edge of Night" there's a housecleaning underway among several non-contract players. Getting the boot are Robin Groves as Logan's secretary, Maggie, and Herb Downer as Dr. Dave Roper. Herb, incidentally, graduated from Yale in the same class as Henry (the Fonz) Winkler. Also leaving "Edge" is Micki Grant, who occasionally appeared as Ada Chandler, Lt. Luke's wife. Micki's a renowned Broadway composer who most recently contributed songs for the musical, "Working."

Martina Deignan (Annie Stewart on "As the World Turns") informs us that she spends off-screen hours contributing efforts to Jacques Cousteau's environmental causes and the "Save the Whales" organization. The actress, born in East Orange, N.J., attended Loyola University and the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London before diving into the tearful travails of Annie on "ATWT." Just in case Annie's husband Beau is tempted to horse around with seductress Melinda, Martina's prepared to tap him right out of her life because the actress is also a dancer and accomplished horsewoman. But since Martina's a former waitress, she'll undoubtedly keep "tabs" on Beau's activities.

Recently joining the cast of "Serach for Tomorrow" is Malachi Throne when he played a priest on the same show.

Larry Haines (Stu Bergman on "Search for Tomorrow") received rave reviews in Toronto while appearing in the Jack Lemmon-starring, "Tribute," which is Broadway bound. But during Larry's first scene in the show when he delivered the line, "Hello, my name is Lou Daniels," a woman in the fifth row stood up and shouted, "Oh no, you're not. You're Stu Bergman." Such is the "reality" of serial characters in the minds of the audience. Also starring in the play as Lemmon's ex-wife is Rosemary Prinz, who after a dozen years off the daytime tube is still remembered as Penny Hughes on "As the World Turns."

THE MAILBAG

My favorite soap is "Ryan's Hope," and one character I never can see enough of is Bucky Carter. I think Justin Deas is just super as Bucky. Could you give me a little information on him? He's such a doll.—L.R., Poway, CA.

The son of a diplomat, Justin was born in Colville, Pa., but lived and studied in such places as Mexico City and Iran. Deas met his wife Jodi when they both starred in a William and Mary College production of "Taming of the Shrew." The couple was first married in a barber-shop then latered restaged the ceremony for relatives in Albuquerque. They have a grade school-aged daughter, and both Justin and Jodi practice yoga and meditation.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:
In my personal telephone book (the one we keep next to the phone) I have all the utility company phone numbers listed under "U" — and under each phone number I have the account number for each utility.

If I have to call them for any reason it saves lots of time for them and me. To utility companies, no one is a name — just a number — so they can find the account much quicker.

Also, since the personal phone book is always handy, under "Z" where there is always lots of unused space I keep records of my major appliances such as freezer, washer, dryer, dishwasher, etc.

When the appliance needs repairs all I need to do is refer to the little phone book where I have recorded make, model and serial number.

All the warranty papers and instruction books for the appliances are kept in a plastic bag in the least-used cupboard of my kitchen.

I always know where they are — they're never moved and are always handy. — Patti Winters

DEAR HELOISE:
For quickness, use your ice cream scoop (the kind with the lever release) instead of a spoon and knife when placing drop cookies on the cookie sheet for baking. The scoop handles any amount of batter you would want — even a small spoonful. — Mrs. J. Franklin

DEAR HELOISE:
While cleaning out my cupboards trying to sort through the various sizes of plastic lids, I wondered how all the lids could be kept together instead of scattered throughout the cabinets.

I came upon a terrific idea: Use the bottom part of the cardboard box that a two-pound cheese is packed in.

Stand the lids upright in the box and no more mess in the cabinet.

I also use the boxes in the drawers of the bathroom chest to hold makeup, barrettes and bobby pins.

The boxes are very sturdy so don't discard them! — Mrs. Jill D. Loy

DEAR HELOISE:
I got so tired of looking for the socks that my washer must have eaten, 'cause I really never ended up with pairs.

I decided to pin the socks together, in pairs, as I sort the clothes.

I have it easy, 'cause my husband leaves his socks on the bedroom floor so pin them together before I put them in the hamper.

It really has helped me keep them together and they sure don't disappear anymore! — Sarah Georgieona

DEAR HELOISE:
Before my daughter gets to wear a new pair of shoes, I always give the shoes (not the soles) a light coat of protective wax with one of the clean-and-wax floor products (the one-step application kind).

Her saddle shoes with the white toes look nicer so much longer and are easy to wipe off each day.

Rewax when needed — quick and easy. — A Reader

DEAR HELOISE:
My husband likes soft-boiled eggs for breakfast but it is painful holding the hot shells to get the egg out.

One morning he asked me why I didn't wear rubber gloves when breaking the eggs. I tried it and it worked.

DEAR HELOISE:
My sister was visiting me recently and saw me take a necklace and earring set out of one of those old suede-lined, spring-back eyeglass cases. The lining keeps the jewelry from getting marred.

She noticed I had several more with sets in them and thought it was neat.

She asked, "Why don't you send that idea in to Heloise?" So here you are, dear.

Deaf-Mute Being Tried For Rape Second Time

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Cruz Tijerina Jr., 20, a deaf-mute convicted here last June of rape and placed on 10-year probation, returned to Lubbock Wednesday for the beginning of a hearing that could end his freedom and result in a penitentiary sentence.

In a landmark trial June 30, a nine-man, three-woman jury took 30 minutes to find the stocky, boyish defendant guilty of raping a 20-year-old Memphis woman here on June 27, 1976.

The case drew extensive publicity since it was the first trial local observers could recall in which the defendant, charged with a major offense, could neither hear nor speak.

At the conclusion of the trial, 137th District Judge Robert C. Wright assessed Tijerina a 10-year prison sentence, then suspended all but 30 days of it and ordered the young man to begin a rehabilitative and vocational program.

On Feb. 11, while a resident of the Vaughn House in Austin for the multiply-handicapped, Tijerina allegedly raped a 39-year-old woman who can neither hear nor verbalize and who is partially blind.

The woman also lives at Vaughn House.

On Wednesday, six court-appointed interpreters were assembled for a hearing on a prosecution application to revoke Tijerina's probation.

Judge Wright quickly denied the first two of three defense motions.

Defense attorney Robert Yzaguirre of McAllen and his associate, Roy Trevino, asked the court to dismiss the application since the Texas Penal Code "does not provide for the possible conviction of a woman for the offense of rape."

Wright, taking note of a Massachusetts ruling that such statutes are sexually discriminatory and therefore unconstitutional under the "equal protection clause," denied the motion anyway.

He noted the Massachusetts case involved the "statutory rape" of a 14-year-old and could not be extended to the Texas rape code that deals with adults.

Next, defense lawyers asked for a writ of habeas corpus, on grounds that Tijerina had not been given a hearing within 20 days of the prosecution's filing.

Yzaguirre contended that failure to do so violated the "speedy trial" section of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Wright denied the motion, after reminding Yzaguirre of the complexity of the Tijerina case and the attendant need to locate qualified interpreters. When court convened Wednesday, Tijerina's lawyers had known of the prosecutorial action for 22 days, two days over the limit.

Wright also reminded Yzaguirre that he had agreed to a June 7 hearing when the date was discussed in Wright's chambers May 24.

Following an afternoon of logistical problems, in which interpreters were seated near the bench and around the defendant and complainant, the 39-year-old woman was questioned by Judge Wright to ensure she understood the proceedings.

A rapid audience, including District Attorney Alton Griffin, looked on as "deaf/blind" interpreter Patsy Nelson gingerly took the prim complainant's hands in her own.

Each time, after Wright posed a question, the words were "transmitted" through Mrs. Nelson's fingers to the woman's. As the pair struggled to "understand" each other, another court-appointed interpreter, Mrs. Lil Browning, gestured silently to Tijerina to appraise him of the proceedings.

A final defense motion to subject the complaining witness to a psychiatric examination likewise was denied by Wright.

The hearing will continue today at 9 a.m.

Gunmen Hit Truck In Daring Holdup

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Masked gunmen held up a security truck in nearby Newcastle Wednesday and escaped with an estimated $450,000 in one of the biggest holdups ever in the Irish Republic, police said.

Several hundred troops and police officers launched a search for a 10-man gang. A police spokesman said the robbers were armed with submachine guns, rifles and pistols.

It was the latest of more than 350 armed robberies here since 1976, and Justice Minister Gerry Collins has said, "Lawlessness is getting out of hand."

Police disclosed few details and declined to link the heist with fund-raising raids carried out by factions of the outlawed Irish Republican Army. The IRA is fighting to end British rule and Protestant domination in neighboring Northern Ireland.

Director Says Center 'Reducing Deficit'

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although the Lubbock Civic Center may never turn a profit, the facility is doing very well financially for a center barely a year old, Civic Center Director Mickey Yerger said Wednesday.

Yerger told the board of Civic Lubbock, Inc., the center has attracted as much business as a center four or five years old.

He projected the center's $327,000 deficit would be reduced by nearly $100,000 by September and projected the next audit would reveal $330,000 in total revenue and $560,000 in expenses.

Yerger, who is leaving Lubbock for a job in Kansas at the end of June, said later it is not unusual for a civic center to operate in the red, but said the Lubbock center had "reduced the deficit much faster than anticipated."

Taking the "considerable economic impact of conventions" in the city into account, the center is "not operating at a loss," he said.

The money pumped into the local economy by visiting conventioners is considered by Yerger "an indirect source of revenue" amounting to $5.5 million a year.

However, Yerger said there are several reasons why the center may never technically show a profit.

Revenues will "never be maximized" because a discount rental rate is offered to local non-profit groups, Yerger said, and because revenues are shared between the civic center and the coliseum auditorium.

"Neither is fully maximized because they are sharing events," he said.

One of the major sources of revenue for other civic centers is pay parking — an idea rejected by the board previously as a "concession to local residents," Yerger said.

Profits Revenues are also held down because rental rates for conventions must be quoted three to four years in advance, he said.

The "remarkable increases in revenues" experience by the civic center, in spite of all these hindrances, "makes us look even better," Yerger said.

He told the board 545 different events had been booked in the past seven months and during the past 243 possible booking days, the facility was used on 215 days.

The center grossed $29,000 last month, $2,000 more than May, 1976.

Yerger said 58 percent of the total revenue during the past seven months was from food and beverage sales, much of which is alcoholic beverages.

Over half of revenues from rent have come from events in the Exhibit Hall — the largest room in the center. Nearly 30 percent comes from the Banquet Hall, and only 8 percent is derived from rental of the Center Theatre.

Board members also received an audit of Civic Lubbock, Inc. for 1976 and 1977 which shows assets have increased $52,310 between September, 1976, and the same month a year later.

The audit lists liabilities for the non-profit corporation of $45,666.

The same board members, who also meet as the Civic Centers Board, were told by Community Facilities Director Jim Weston that 26 persons have applied for Yerger's job.

He said he expected to begin interviewing for the position later this week or early next week.

Weston said he'd like to have a replacement hired by June 23 (Yerger's last day), but said he doubted the person could be at work by that time.

Third Strangling Victim Found

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The body of a young woman who had been strangled was found in a neighbor's backyard Wednesday — the third time in three weeks a woman had been killed in the same manner on the city's east side, authorities said.

Investigators said they were considering the possibility that all three were killed by the same person.

The fully clothed body of Marilyn Bryant, 22, was lying against a fence, partly covered with uprooted plants.

Leo J. Donovan, chief of homicide, said the young woman had picked up her baby early Wednesday on the way home from her job at the Ford stamping plant in nearby Woodlawn.

Donovan said she apparently took the infant to her home, then went out to her parked car where she was assaulted.

Her parents learned that she was missing and began a search along with some neighbors that resulted in discovery of the body, Donovan said.

Asked about the possibility that all three women may have been killed by the same person, Donovan said, "We're concerned, naturally. There are some differences, but strangulation was the cause of death in all three cases."

Bank Charters Viewed For Lubbock

AUSTIN—Testimony is scheduled to continue throughout the week on the contested charter applications of three bank proposing to open for business in Lubbock.

State Banking Department hearing officer Dan Krohn predicts witnesses will continue to testify through Friday, with only one applicant, Liberty State Bank, have completed its case.

First Southwest Bank of Lubbock, First State Bank and Liberty State Bank have applied to establish offices on Indiana Avenue. Those applications have been protested by Security National Bank, Lubbock National Bank and Bank of the West.

Wednesday's testimony included that of Plains National Bank President T.J. Wallace, one of the proposed directors of First State Bank at 82nd and Indiana Avenue. Businesses have expanded in the area, he said, citing the growth of office buildings, shopping centers and restaurants west of Indiana and north of 82nd and east of Indiana.

10 Students Work On Lake Project

A-J Correspondent CHILDRESS — Ten high school students are working on improvements at Scott Lake. With two more expected to be employed later on the project.

Earlier this year, the city received approval for an $18,726 CETA grant to make improvements at the Lake. The funds are being used for salaries and expenses of the improvements.

Clearing of the land is completed, and water lines have been installed, with installation of 12 picnic tables, construction of fencing, planting of about 40 trees and seeding of the area scheduled for the summer.

"About $1,900 will be spent on fencing and another $1,600 has been budgeted for a log-type playground area," city manager David Galligan said. "And an adjoining ball field area will be developed."

The ball field will be used for baseball, football, or other activities.

Scott Lake was a water supply here but had fallen into disuse and was somewhat neglected in recent years, officials says, but was stocked with catfish and bass about two years ago.

Inhumane Treatment Alleged

BIG SPRING—This West Texas city, which a few years ago was criticized by national environmental groups for its alleged treatment of rattlesnakes, is now catching it for its so-called inhumane treatment of jack rabbits.

The ABC television program "20/20" which premiered Tuesday night, identified Big Spring as a community which supplies the long-eared animals for the sport of coursing.

Coursing, especially popular in the Midwest, allows the rabbits to be chased and killed by greyhound dogs which are being trained for racing purposes.

Cited as an example on the television program was a rancher named Jess Allen, whom the show's producers claimed was supplying the rabbits for the sport. In reality, Allen ranches in the St. Lawrence community, which is an estimated 50 miles from Big Spring and is in Glasscock County.

Allen said Wednesday that he had been trapping and selling jack rabbits for many years. Most trappers, he explained, sell rabbits without asking questions about what the animals are used for.

One of Allen's neighbors explained to an inquisitive newspaper reporter:

"You sell a calf and you don't ask whether it's going for dog meat or prime rib. You just sell it."

Allen said that three men came to his ranch about three weeks ago after calling ahead to say they wanted "to buy rabbits."

"When they brought a television camera with them, we ran them off," he said. "If they come back, we'll run them off again."

Hershel Armstrong, longtime West Texas rancher, said, "Ranchers often shoot jack rabbits and let them lie by the side of the road for the buzzards, just to get rid of them. The government tells ranchers we can't kill eagles. They tell us not to trap the poor coyotes. I didn't know they cared about the jack rabbits. Why doesn't anybody care about the sheep and cattle?"

Allen said his father has trapped and sold rabbits for many years. There is no law against it in Texas.

Allen also recalled the men who phoned in to buy rabbits claimed they were from Tennessee.

"They didn't tell us they were from a television program," he said. "Is there any kind of law to require them to be honest?"

Some of the filming shown on the program, which was offered in prime time, was done at the Midland Air Terminal where they showed the rabbits being shipped out after they were purchased.

Child Says Father Killed Mother

NEW YORK (AP) — The children of Raisa Sukonik say they want the man accused of murdering their mother to die, even though it would make them orphans.

Mrs. Sukonik, 39, was knifed to death on a street near her home in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn Monday morning and her daughter Alina, 12, told the New York Post she saw her father do it.

Police arrested the husband two blocks away and he was charged with murder and weapon possession.

According to the newspaper, the father, Arie, 43, and his wife were divorced five years ago in the Soviet Union, reunited here briefly after he emigrated and convinced them to join him, then separated again.

Recently he had pestered her for another reconciliation, Alina and her brother, Gennady, 19, said. The girl said her father ercoasted her mother in the street Monday when Mrs. Sukonik was on her way to work.

"When she saw him, my mother began to run," Alina said. "She went only a few feet when he stabbed her twice. My mother screamed, 'Don't kill me, I'll talk to you,' but he stabbed her again. I hit him with my hand to try to stop him, but he stabbed her again. My mother fell and he bent over her and stabbed her again," the girl said.

"He is an animal" said Gennady. "Worse than a Nazi. He deserves the death penalty. They should shoot him down," Alina added. "He deserves to die, but it should not be an easy death."

The maximum penalty for murder in the New York State now is 25 years to life.

Now without family, the brother and sister were being helped by friends and an immigrant aid organization.

Training Class For Officers Moved Closer

A-J Correspondent
CHILDRESS — Since several recently-hired policemen here will be required to take a 240-hour course for peace officer certification, city officials opted to move the classroom to Childress.
 City Manager David Galligan explained that there was a complete turnover of the local police department when a new chief was elected in April, and that several of the new officers have not yet taken the peace officer certification training required by state law.
 Galligan said it costs more than $1,000 per man to send the policemen to an out-of-town school and pay for replacement personnel. So officials decided to look into the possibility of offering the training course here.
 "The cost of having the school in Childress is high," Galligan said, "but doesn't compare with the great expense of sending the officers out of town."
 Officials contacted representatives of Texas A&M University — which sponsors the six-week training course — and scheduled the school beginning June 19 in Childress.
 Attending from the Childress Police Department will be officers Ronnie Massey, Bob Seagroves and George Cox. In addition, Sheriff J.E. Benham said one of his deputies, Oliver White, also would be enrolled.
 Galligan said he has received inquiries from officers in Paducah, Shamrock, Memphis, Roscoe, Seagraves and Wellington concerning signing up for the training.

Defendant Testifies In Death Of Seven-Month-Old Infant

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
 Murder defendant Casimiro Juarez, accused of causing the death of a 7-month-old baby, denied Wednesday he had dropped the child headfirst to the floor of his trailer house three days before she died.
 The tall, black-haired gin worker, described by authorities as an illegal alien, testified through an interpreter to an attentive jury in 72nd District Court.
 Juarez, 23, is accused of killing Miranda Ann Ramirez, the daughter of 19-year-old Alma Ramirez.
 The defendant's testimony Wednesday refuted the account given earlier during the trial by Miss Ramirez, who was living with Juarez at the trailer house near Canyon Gin last December.
 Juarez' former lover said she came home "stone drunk" Dec. 19, 1977, raised the baby waist high, then dropped her to the floor five times.
 The state witness had said the child fell on her forehead each time.
 The baby died at a local hospital Dec. 22.
 Juarez said Wednesday that Miss Ramirez' story was not true.
 Court-appointed defense attorney Albert Perez asked Juarez: "Did you throw her (the baby) down on the floor at all?"
 "No," the defendant replied.
 Earlier, Juarez had stated that if he had dropped the baby to the floor five times, she would have had bruises and probably broken limbs.
 Juarez also denied Miss Ramirez' allegation that he had often whipped the baby.
 Miss Ramirez indicated she told Juarez she was three-months-pregnant before the couple began living together.

 Juarez testified that account was not true. "Actually, no, she had lied to me," the defendant said. He said he had not learned his girlfriend was pregnant until two months after she moved in with him.
High Court Lets Stand Cattle Case

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court let stand Wednesday lower court decisions in something of a daisy-chain sale of cattle by Producers Grain Corp. to Anderson Cattle Co. to American Beef Packers.
 A lawsuit over the sale of cattle resulted in a court hearing at Plainview and a judgment of $288,760 to Producers Grain from Anderson Cattle, which brought the appeal.
 However, the Supreme Court may have agreed with a statement made by the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals, which upheld the judgment to Producers Grain on Nov. 17, 1977, when it wrote, "It is difficult to determine what appellants' (Andersons') objection is."
 The suit arose after Producers Grain sold 2,000 head of cattle to Anderson Cattle, with payment to be made through a San Antonio bank.
 Five days after the initial transaction, in December 1974, Anderson Cattle sold 1,506 of the same head of cattle to American Beef Packers.

He indicated, however, that he had made up his mind to treat the baby as his own. "Yes, I even told my mother that the child was mine," he said at one point.
 Juarez denied dropping the baby on the floor Dec. 19. In testimony Wednesday, he gave no account of events which might have injured the child.
 He said that he had told investigators after his arrest that he did not know the reason Miranda Ann had died.
 The defendant was to continue testifying when the trial resumed today.
 Earlier Wednesday, a pathologist said the baby died after a blow to the top of her head, but he could not specify how the injury was inflicted.
 "She fell or she was hit or she dropped on her head," said Dr. Jose A. Diaz-Esquivel. "I cannot say which. A blow to the head would be the least likely possibility."

DPS Office Addition Making Progress

A-J Correspondent
CHILDRESS — Plans are progressing for the proposed addition to the Department of Public Safety office here.
 Sgt. Paul Clanton Jr. of the DPS said a three-man team composed of a DPS safety officer, an engineer, and an official of the State Board of Controls have finalized plans for the addition.
 Clanton said the team surveyed the area and worked on planning the size of the addition to the building and the proposed parking lot. The additional office space is estimated to be 2,000 square feet.
 In addition to the present communications center and DPS offices, the enlarged building will house several other law enforcement DPS divisions. Texas Ranger Leo Hickman also will have offices in the new addition.

 Clanton said actual construction should be underway by September.

Coffee Production Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — World coffee production is expected to be up sharply in the coming year to an estimated 74.6 million bags, the largest crop in four years, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.
 In its first estimate for the 1978-79 season, the department's foreign agricultural service said that the new world crop may be about 9 percent larger than the harvest of 68.6 million bags produced this year.
 A bag of green unroasted coffee weighs 60 kilograms or about 132.3 pounds.
 Exportable production, which is how much coffee producing countries have left over after allowing for domestic consumption, was estimated at 56.3 million bags, compared with 51 million in 1977-78.
 "About 40 percent of the total increase in 1978-79 is accounted for by Brazil, where production is estimated at about 20 million bags," the agency said. "This is less than earlier expectations since extended drought during the growing season reduced bean size in some areas."

 World coffee production, mainly because of severe frost damage in Brazil, dropped to less than 61.5 million bags in 1976-77 from 73.8 million the year before. Production had climbed in 1974-75 to almost 81.1 million bags.
 The sharp drop in production two years ago triggered record prices in the world coffee markets.

NO FRILLS FRED — Fred Erdman of Springfield, Ohio picks up the ticket he hopes will keep him airborne for about 100,000 miles. Erdman estimated that his ticket would be 135 feet long if stretched end to end. He begins his marathon flight in Columbus, Ohio, June 19 and he hopes to finish in the same city July 10. 'No-Frills Fred' Plans Vacation Of Unceasing Flights By Airline CINCINNATI (AP) — Fred W. Erdman II doesn't mind flying the no-frills way. As long as he's flying, he's happy.

That's why he's planning a 100,000-mile, three-week airplane lover's extravaganza. He'll make more than 130 take-offs and landings, hitting some airports more than once, on a $322 excursion fare offered by Delta Airlines. He'll go as far north as Bangor, Maine; south to Miami; and west to San Francisco.

Under the Delta program, an unlimited number of stopovers is permitted as long as the customer pays for his ticket and sets his itinerary two weeks before starting out. He may fly only Delta — unless he takes a side trip to the Virgin Islands via Prenair. He has to do it within 21 days. And he is restricted to the coach section of each plane.

Erdman says he doesn't care about jumbo jets or movies or complimentary champagne. He likes the old-fashioned way of flying.

"I love anything with a propeller on it," says Erdman. "I love to hear the bang-chug of the engine on those old propeller planes and see fire coming out."

Erdman already has been to 291 airports in the United States, Mexico and Canada on 1,091 flights. Last year he flew 52,920 miles in 21 days on an excursion fare with another airline.

His itinerary for the upcoming trip means "I'll land in one city and as soon as the next plane is ready to pull out, I'm jumping on."

He'll leave from Columbus June 19 and hopes to end up there July 10.

In order to avoid lost baggage — a problem which might seem inevitable on such a helter-skelter schedule — Erdman's family plans to visit the Dayton airport three times during his trip. There, they'll wave him off on another flight after handing him another carry-on suitcase filled with fresh clothes.

Delta officials say Erdman will see virtually every airport used by the airline. Erdman estimates he'll pass through Atlanta, Delta's major connection point, at least three times a day.

"Mostly I'll sleep a lot and read a lot of books," he says. "Also, I'll work on my flight log."

Erdman, 38, has been keeping the log since he was a youngster. It tells when and to where he flew on what airline.

Several airlines offer excursion plans. Among them is Pan American, which has a "Round the World in 80 Days" fare that entitles a traveler to circle the globe in economy class on a standby basis for $999. For $299 each, two persons traveling together can fly to any of Eastern Airlines' domestic stops, plus Mexico and Puerto Rico, in seven to 21 days.

Arthritis Benefit Dance Scheduled Here

The musical Mames Brothers of Lubbock will play a benefit dance for the West Texas chapter of the Arthritis Foundation tonight at Cold Water Country.

A minimum $3 donation will be asked at the door. The brothers, Lloyd, Kenny, Steve and Donnie, will alternate sets with the Outlaw Express, which has been playing at the 7301 University Ave. club.

A benefit with several groups there in April raised $1,100 for the foundation.

Doors will open at 8 p.m. today, and the dance will begin at 9 p.m. and continue till 2 a.m.

The event was organized by Robert Burbridge, chapter director, and Gordie Ham, entertainment coordinator at Cold Water Country.

The brothers, Lubbock natives, recently released a record album, "The Mames Brothers," on the Texas Soul label of Lubbock.

Discrimination Charges Hurlled Against Clubs

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Allegations that several Lubbock bars discriminate against minorities prompted the Lubbock City Council to consider the need for a public accommodations ordinance today.

The council will convene its regular session at 9:30 a.m. in council chambers.

City Human Relations Director Luciano Perez, who says he has received discrimination complaints on the clubs for 2 1/2 years, is expected to brief the council on a possible ordinance and on the allegations.

Perez said complainants allege that minorities are asked to produce Texas Tech University or Reese Air Force Base identification cards, while whites are not asked for any identification.

Other complaints are that dress codes are applied more strictly to minorities and used as an excuse to keep out Mexican-Americans and blacks.

Other clubs allegedly issue membership cards freely to whites at the door, but seldom give such cards to minorities.

The public accommodations ordinance, to be drafted by the Human Relations Commission, would outline and prohibit discriminatory practices by businesses which cater to the general public.

Perez said he believes council discussion of such an ordinance is the result of a letter to council members from State Rep. Froy Salinas.

Salinas, who also has received discrimination complaints about city nightspots, said "several of the clubs have been blatantly discriminating against Chicanos and blacks."

He suggested the city enact an ordinance similar to one in Fort Worth, which makes it unlawful to discriminate against any person because of race or place of origin in a place of public accommodation.

However, Salinas said he'd like the council to strengthen the penalties for violating the ordinance and allow offending clubs to be closed for a certain period of time when found guilty of a violation.

The legislator said allegations of discrimination in the city might hurt the city's ability to lure conventions, as well as "create serious racial problems in the city."

Salinas would like to see the State Alcoholic Beverage Commission code amended to allow clubs in the state to require proof of age as the only entrance requirement.

The alleged discrimination by some local nightspots came to light in an article in the March 8 edition of Update.

Also on the subject of bars, the council is scheduled to take action on an ordinance which would prohibit minors from entering clubs unless accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

An ordinance regulating substandard housing in the city is set for discussion Thursday, after council member Carolyn Jordan requested specific changes in the document.

Some projects previously approved by the council, but never funded, may spring to life with the discovery of $259,000 in surplus revenue sharing funds.

Staff suggestions on how to spend the money include a new City Hall roof, repair and remodeling of the city tax office, purchase of a "jaws of life" unit for the Fire Department, traffic signals at 82nd Street and Indiana Avenue, street lights on University and Indiana Avenues between Loop 289 and 82nd Street, and a euthanasia chamber and fencing at the animal shelter.

The rehabilitation of the Manicappelli Home on Canyon Lakes Drive west of University Avenue is recommended at a cost of $30,000. If the historic structure is refurbished, it will be used as a party house for the Canyon Lakes Project.

Also at Thursday's meeting the city council will:

— Consider a resolution between the city and the Office of Traffic Safety for funding a study on traffic signal timing and street intersection capacities.

— Consider an agreement between the highway department and the city to install a traffic signal at South Quaker Avenue and Loop 289.

— Consider Community Development block grant funding for a security patrol at Green Fair Manor.

— Consider Community Development block grant funding for construction of a fourth day care center in the city and the remodeling of an existing center.

— Consider Community Development block grant funding for purchasing and remodeling a church building at East Cornell Street and North Quirt Avenue for a Guadalupe-Parkway Neighborhood Center.

Lubbock Convictions Upheld By State Court

A-J Austin Bureau

Three convictions from Lubbock County — one for murder and two for aggravated robbery — were upheld Wednesday by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Harry Barron Jr., sentenced to 30 years in prison in the shooting death of Henry Guzman, appealed on the grounds there was insufficient evidence to support his conviction, and that the trial court had not properly charged the jury on the "law of parties."

According to the appeals court opinion, Guzman's body was found beside a farm-to-market road by sheriff's deputies on the morning of Feb. 8, 1975. Testimony at the trial indicated Guzman had died from multiple gunshot wounds.

The operator of a "beer and pool hall" outside Lubbock testified she had seen Barron, Guzman and two other men, Guadalupe Pina and Joe David Pina, at her place of business.

Guadalupe Pina testified at the trial that he and Barron picked up Guzman and drove him to the pool hall, and later along various roads before reaching the spot where Guzman was killed.

Pina testified he remained in the front seat of the car and heard "mumbling, followed by four gunshots in quick succession," shortly after the other men left the vehicle.

The court said that at the time of the trial, Guadalupe Pina was "on parole from a life sentence for a murder conviction."

and "apparently...was attempting to prevent a revocation of his parole and at the same time not incriminate appellant (Barron) and Joe David Pina any more than he felt compelled to do."

"It is highly probable," the court said, "that he knew more than he revealed to the jury."

The court concluded the evidence was sufficient and that the jury was properly instructed.

The court also affirmed the 40-year sentence for aggravated robbery assessed Ben Jackson Jr. Jackson was identified by the victim, who testified Jackson accosted him at gunpoint in a restroom after the victim had taken part in a dice game "in a club known as Lowe's in Lubbock County."

Also upheld was the five-year sentence of Donald Wayne Reed, convicted of aggravated robbery. Reed's court-appointed attorney filed a brief saying the appeal was "wholly frivolous and without merit."

Swimming Pig Beats Heat

BERLIN (AP) — A pig beat a West Berlin heat wave Wednesday by joining swimmers at a local nudist beach.

Police said the unidentified swine wandered peacefully across a lounging area, went into the water and swam across the Halensee, a small lake west of the downtown area. It was apprehended and taken to an animal shelter.

U.S. Guide Leaves Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Anthony Maschocci, a 19-year-old guide at a traveling U.S. agriculture exhibit ordered out of the country for inciting anti-Soviet activity, left for the United States on Wednesday.

An embassy spokesman said Maschocci, who lives in Boston, was flying to Washington. Earlier in the day, an official of the U.S. Embassy went to the Foreign Ministry to inform the government officially that Maschocci had left.

The embassy spokesman said the U.S. official made clear to the Soviets that Maschocci had done nothing in conflict with his normal duties as a guide.

Maschocci was accused of "inciting activity hostile to the Soviet Union" among visitors to the exhibition and voicing "slander" against the Soviet state and socialist system, according to a report carried by the official news agency Tass on Monday.

Walter Lupan, another guide at the exhibit, also was cited in the Soviet complaint but already had left the Soviet Union after completing his part of the planned tour.

The exhibit, titled "Agriculture U.S.A.," focused on several generations of a farm family in Illinois, showing improvements in technology and lifestyle over the years.

The Soviet newspaper Izvestia devoted a lengthy article Wednesday to Maschocci and the Soviet complaints against him.

The newspaper said Soviet officials first complained to the U.S. exhibit director about Maschocci's behavior on May 18 and the director "acknowledged" the complaints against the guide.

The next day, the newspaper claimed, the director told Soviet officials the guide had been "straightened out."

The embassy spokesman called the Izvestia report "totally erroneous" and denied the exhibit director accepted "any so-called facts" about the guide.

The spokesman said he did not know why the Soviets would want to portray the incident in such a light, adding that after the first complaints Maschocci was allowed to work at the exhibit for five days until it closed.

Sadat Threatens Correspondents

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat said Wednesday that foreign correspondents who write "something wrong" about Egypt will be expelled from the country.

"Anyone who commits anything against Egypt, we would tell him thanks, but we do not want you among us. Write from your own country," Sadat said in a speech to troops stationed in the Suez canal area.

"I say to foreign correspondents that we won't be hurt by anything that is published abroad because the truth would appear at the end after all," the official Middle East News Agency quoted him as saying.

Sadat warned foreign correspondents against contacting Egyptian dissident elements, saying "this won't get them anywhere." He said Egypt is starting a new era of discipline and "anyone who writes something wrong, we would tell him goodbye. Go to your country and write from there anything you like on our democracy."

Sadat's remarks came few hours after a judge lifted a government ban on this week's issue of Al Ahali, organ of Egypt's tiny leftist party.

The weekly was banned Tuesday night for the third week in succession on ground it carried a party decision to temporarily freeze its activities, including publication

Pro-Palestinian Draws Sentence In Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — American student Sami Esmail was convicted Wednesday of membership in a Palestinian guerrilla group and faces up to 10 years in prison.

But a three-judge panel in Tel Aviv district court acquitted the 23-year-old Michigan State University student of the more serious charge of contact with a foreign agent, which carries a maximum 15-year sentence.

Sentencing on the first charge is set for Monday.

The New York-born Esmail, of Palestinian ancestry, was found guilty of joining a group hostile to Israel, the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

In her closing remarks, prosecutor Sara Sirotta did not ask for the maximum sentence. She cited two cases in which guerrilla group members had received prison terms of two to three years and asked that Esmail's sentence be stiff enough to discourage people from joining such groups overseas.

"My only crime is my political solidarity with the oppressed and homeless Palestinian people and other oppressed people throughout the world," Esmail said after the verdict was read. "I cannot see how this solidarity can be of harm to anyone."

Esmail was arrested last Dec. 21 at Israel's Ben-Gurion International Airport when he arrived to see his dying father in the town of Ramallah on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

The conviction was based on a statement Esmail signed after his arrest naming a Palestinian contact who met him on the Michigan State campus, where Esmail was taking graduate engineering courses, recruited him for training in Libya and gave him a round-trip ticket in the summer of 1976. In Libya, the statement said, Esmail and about 150 other youths heard political lectures on the Palestinian cause, and a group of about 20, including Esmail, stayed on to receive training in light arms and grenades.

His attorney had asked that the statement, one of three made by Esmail during his interrogation, be thrown out of court because it was made under duress. But the court accepted it into evidence, noting only that a Hebrew "translation" of it, written by an interrogator and signed by Esmail, would not be considered because of "many inaccuracies."

Esmail was not accused of actually carrying out activities endangering the security of Israel. Defense attorney Felicia Langer called for a sentence of only a few months, pointing out that light sentences often are given to Palestinian youths in the West Bank for similar charges.

The acquittal on the charge of contact with a foreign agent was made on technical grounds. Since the PFLP and other Palestinian groups do not represent a foreign government, Israeli courts have ruled previously that the law forbidding contacts with foreign agents does not apply in such cases.

At the Michigan State campus in Lansing, mathematics Professor John Masterson, co-chairman of the National Committee to Defend the Human Rights of Sami Esmail, said in a statement:

"The committee is outraged that Sami Esmail, an American citizen, has been convicted of membership in an illegal organization by the Israeli government without one shred of substantive evidence having been presented at the trial."

"The sole basis of the conviction was the so-called statements that Sami signed under duress." Esmail was a student of Masterson's.

Sexual Revolution Impact Noted Among West Germans

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germans, who never have had a reputation as great lovers, apparently have joined the sexual revolution, a new survey shows.

"Before they turn 19, over 70 percent of the Germans have done what formerly was not talked about," said Stern magazine, which commissioned the survey by the Allensbach Institute for Opinion Polling.

According to Stern, the survey of 1,600 persons found an eightfold increase since 1963 in the percentage of men admitting to extramarital sex, from 3 percent to 24 percent in the 1978 survey. Among women surveyed, 9 percent said they indulged in extramarital sex — three times as many as in 1963.

"The virgin is no more," said Elizabeth Noelle-Neumann, an institute official in charge of the survey. "In 1963, 39 percent of the single women under 30 said they had still had no intimate relations with a man. Today 4 percent said that."

As in the United States and other countries, the sexual revolution has had its greatest effect among the young.

The survey found the percentage of West Germans under 17 who admitted to having sex jumped from 10 percent in 1963 to 30 percent in 1978. Of that group, more than half said they had sexual intercourse regularly or with several partners.

Twenty-two percent of the men surveyed and 12 percent of the women said they had their first sexual experience between ages 13 and 15, compared with 8 percent of the men and 3 percent of the women in the 1963 survey, Stern said.

The survey found that the institution of marriage has lost much of its appeal — particularly for German women whose lives once revolved around "children, church and kitchen." In 1949, 62 percent of women surveyed said they were "very satisfied" with their marriage. This time the figure dropped to 36 percent. Among men, 56 percent said they were "very satisfied" in 1949, and 45 percent today.

The institute said the changes in sexual attitudes reflected the new, independent role played by women in West German society. Many young women, freed by the birth control pill from fears of pregnancy and by the own careers from dependence on men, do not feel the same pressure to marry that their mothers did, the institute said.

"A sexual revolution is not an exaggerated term," wrote Mrs. Noelle-Neumann. "The strong changes, when you compare the differences in both Stern surveys of intimate affairs in 1963 and 1978, do not let you think otherwise."

Professor Helmut Thielicke, a theologian writing for Stern, observed: "The tendency toward pleasure as an end unto itself is experiencing an increase in direct proportion to the depletion of neighborhood society and of its basic fundamentals." He said the sexual revolution had led not only to a "liberation," but in many cases "to a corruption of sex which is at least as bad as puritanical inhibition."

Court Delays Theft Appeal

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday delayed final action on an appeal by Doyle Denton from Howard County for theft over $50.

Denton was sentenced to life imprisonment following his conviction, with two prior felonies used to enhance the sentence.

The court "abated" the appeal, saying that while the record shows Denton was represented by a court-appointed attorney, no brief apparently was filed by that attorney while Denton filed a brief on his own behalf.

The court said the "rather confusing record" leaves it unclear as to whether Denton was represented by counsel or whether he acted as his own attorney.

SENIORS GET SCARE

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Dozens of Huntington-area high school seniors have received draft notices, but Army spokesman Will Drier said it's just a "malicious prank." Drier said the notices, printed on military stationery, instruct recipients to report to active Army duty within 20 days. He noted the draft ended four years ago and suggested recipients toss the phony notices into their trash cans.

New Jersey Upset Jars G.O.P.

WASHINGTON (AP) — "They just let it slip through their fingers," said an aide to the Senate Republican leadership. He was talking about New Jersey Republicans who for 24 years had kept Clifford Case in Washington.

The 74-year-old Case, ranking Republican on the prestigious Foreign Relations Committee and second ranking on the Appropriations Committee, was defeated in a political upset in Tuesday's primary.

While Case was telling reporters in New Jersey that his defeat was "less of a disappointment than I would have anticipated if I'd thought about it," it stunned and surprised his GOP colleagues here.

"I'm saddened," said Assistant Minority Leader Ted Stevens, R-Alaska. "He's had a great career in the Senate and I would hope the administration would recognize that by giving him an ambassadorship or something."

Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said he'd thought early on in the campaign that Case might be in trouble. "But they talked me out of that, so the result comes as a surprise," he said.

Baker, however, said he saw an "excellent chance" for the Republicans to pick up a seat in the fall with Rep. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., who easily captured the Republican nomination to replace retiring Democratic Sen. James O. Eastland.

Baker said he called some Republicans who won party nomination for Senate seats, including Jeffrey Bell, the conservative newcomer who ousted Case.

Baker did not indicate whether he thought Bell could win in the fall, but Republican aides expressed strong skepticism that the former campaign worker for Ronald Reagan could defeat the Democratic challenger, ex-pro basketball star Bill Bradley.

"If they (the Republicans) really think he can win, they're kidding themselves."

Damper Put On Prayer

CHICAGO (AP) — Frank Seifermann says he fled Germany and Nazi prosecution in 1937, and when a young bureaucrat told him he could not give a prayer of thanks to Jesus Christ at a federally funded senior citizens lunch, it "was like sticking a needle in me."

As things turned out, Seifermann didn't have much to worry about. The inexperienced bureaucrat's ruling surprised her own boss, who said she didn't understand her instructions. The oldsters haven't missed a day of prayer — but the episode gave them a bad moment.

Seifermann, a Roman Catholic, said that about 70 senior citizens were at the daily lunch as usual Tuesday at Queen of Angels Catholic Church. And as usual, elderly Sylvia Catanzaro, a supervisor, asked if anyone in the group wished to participate in a prayer.

"I usually stand up and give the prayer," Seifermann, 65, a retired baker, said. "We have a fine Jewish couple in the group and when they are there I do not mention the name Jesus Christ. But they were not there yesterday and I referred to the Heavenly Father, thanking him for the food and taking care of the sick senior citizens. I ended the prayer, 'Jesus Christ, amen.'"

"Standing near me at the table was a young woman appointed to help oversee the funded lunch nutrition program sponsored by the Mayor's Office for Senior Citizens," Seifermann said. "She told us we could no longer pray. I've always been a Catholic. I left Germany when I didn't get freedom of religion. I came to this great country of freedom. I served in the U.S. Army during World War II.

"I feel kind of mad. I feel hurt. But I'll keep praying there."

The woman was Bonnie Chudacoff, 26, who has been working for the mayor's senior citizen program for only four weeks.

Peking Army Told To Denounce Late Leader

TOKYO (AP) — At the risk of opening old wounds, Teng Hsiao-ping, China's No. 2 leader, has ordered the armed forces to renew a campaign of denunciation against Lin Biao, a hero of the Cultural Revolution who later died discredited and in mysterious circumstances.

Teng, chief of the general staff, also has called on the military to refrain from paying "lavish lip service to Mao Tse-tung thought," an admonition he says Mao himself would have approved.

The combative Teng, deputy premier and vice chairman of the Communist Party, says his campaign against the late defense minister Lin, who was so closely identified with the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution, is not designed to negate the accomplishments of those three years of social upheaval.

Instead, he says, it is aimed at achieving greater national unity and "settling accounts."

Lin, who had been in line to succeed Mao as China's leader, reportedly died in an airplane crash in late 1971 after what Peking said was an attempt by him to seize power.

The 74-year-old Teng, making his second political comeback, was a victim of the ideological purges of the Cultural Revolution. He now says Lin tried to sabotage the revolution "initiated and led" by Mao.

Teng's comments came in a speech at an all-army political work conference last Friday. The full text was transmitted here by the Hsinhua news agency this week.

He said the criticism of Lin should be coupled with the current campaign against the radical "Gang of Four" led by Mao's widow, Chiang Ching.

The four radical leaders were arrested shortly after Mao's death in 1976 and were accused of having plotted a coup. They had been responsible for Teng's second fall from power, in early 1976.

"Some people say they are afraid that the inclusion of Lin among the targets for exposure and criticism along with the Gang of Four might involve the risk of negating the great Cultural Revolution and that this might be construed as digging up bygone problems to the detriment of unity. That is wrong," Teng told the assembled soldiers.

He claimed Lin was scarcely criticized in the past because radicals aimed attacks at Mao's image, at the late Premier Chou En-lai, who was Teng's political mentor, and at the present defense minister, Yeh Chien-ying. As premier, Chou had linked Lin to alleged anti-government subversion.

Teng assured those who sided with the Gang of Four there would be no reprisals for the persecution against him and thousands of others.

There is "no question of dwelling on by-gones," he said, adding that the country could have "full confidence" in those, like him, who had been rehabilitated — restored to good graces.

Teng was purged by the radicals for his views that modernization of industry, agriculture, science and the armed forces must be based on reality — not just political theory. He has been described as a pragmatist rather than an ideologist.

He agreed with an earlier statement by party Chairman Hua that it is time to restore party leadership to China's army, but Teng hit hard at the theme that Mao wanted political work adapted to realities, to "new historical conditions."

Hua's statement suggested there may have been disagreement during the conference over whether to follow Mao's theories of guerrilla war or to move toward creation of a professional, well-disciplined modern army equipped with sophisticated weapons.

Advising the conference not to "pay lip service" to old directives, Teng said Mao himself was "uneasy that his words were quoted frequently and over and over in the newspapers."

He reminded the soldiers of Mao's observation that "to carry out a directive of a higher organ blindly, and seemingly without disagreement, is not really to carry it out but is the most artful way of opposing and sabotaging it."

Belgian Paratroopers Due To Return

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The Belgian paratroopers who helped rout Angolan-based rebels from the Zaire province of Shaba are expected to be flown home by the end of this month, Premier Leo Tindemans announced Wednesday.

But official Belgian sources said the soldiers might be ordered to remain in the mineral-rich southern Zaire province if the situation deteriorates there.

French and American transport planes, meanwhile, continued to ferry the first Moroccan units of an African peace force into Shaba.

The remaining 600 Belgian paratroopers were part of a Belgian-French force dropped on the strategic copper-mining town of Kolwezi to rescue European civilians during last month's rebel invasion. Some of the Belgian soldiers arrived back in Belgium Tuesday night, the Defense Ministry said.

The return of the others will span over at least two weeks and should be completed by the end of June, Tindemans told reporters after a two-hour meeting of the government's crisis committee, set up May 14 when the invasion was first reported.

American planes have airlifted the French troops from the area and both French and American planes by Tuesday had replaced them with about half of the 1,500 Moroccan soldiers who will form the backbone of the planned 2,000-strong all-African peace force. It also will include about 300 troops from the former French territories of Gabon and Senegal.

In the Senegalese capital of Dakar on Wednesday, the national parliament approved a plan to send soldiers to Zaire to guard that central African nation against what Senegalese Premier Abdou Diouf called "a crime of aggression from the outside."

Zaire has persistently charged the Soviet Union and Cuba with supporting the invasion by rebel Katangese, who fled to Angola after a civil war in the 1960s, when Shaba was called Katanga.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman here said the peacekeeping force should not be limited to soldiers from French-speaking African states, such as Gabon, Morocco and Senegal. It should be open to other African nations as well, he said.

Cubans Attack In Angola

LONDON (AP) — An Angolan rebel spokesman said Wednesday Cuban troops backed by warplanes and helicopters have launched a major new offensive in three Angolan provinces against pro-Western guerrillas opposed to the Marxist government.

The spokesman, representing one of the two guerrilla armies fighting for control of the oil-and mineral-rich central African nation, said 5,000 Cuban troops — about a quarter of the Cubans believed to be in Angola — were taking part in the campaign.

The latest offensive in the central and southern provinces of Bie, Cuando Cubango and Huambo was launched Sunday against the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, UNITA spokesman Tony Fernandes said in a telephone interview here.

UNITA and the northern-based Angolan National Liberation Front (FNLA) lost the 1976 civil war that thrust President Agostinho Neto's Marxist government, supported by Soviet aid and Cuban troops, into power. But they have continued a rural war of resistance.

Fernandes said London's UNITA office had no reports of casualties in what he said was the seventh offensive by Cubans in two years to wipe out the guerrillas.

There was no independent confirmation that a new Cuban offensive is under way. Access to Angola by Western journalists has been severely restricted.

Fernandes claimed UNITA has 20,000 guerrillas who control large areas of the countryside in southern and eastern Angola.

Fernandes said the current offensive was launched by air from the towns of Lobito and Benguela on Angola's Atlantic Coast and from Luso in Mexico Province, adjoining Bie and Cuando Cubango. He said fighting was particularly heavy at Vila Serpa Pinto, a town in Cuando Cubango Province.

The UNITA representative claimed Cubans were solely involved in the offensive with no help from the 8,000-man Angolan regular army.

Fernandes claimed UNITA controls six airstrips, used to offload arms flown into Angola from outside the country. He declined to identify the suppliers, but the Neto government claims arms are sent from South Africa and European nations.

"We have all the prerequisites of being a country within a country because we control large portions of the country," he said.

Angola's civil war between the three ethnically and ideologically opposed nationalist movements followed its independence from Portugal, the former colonial power, in 1975.

Since Neto's Angolan Popular Liberation Movement government assumed power Cubans and Soviet advisers have replaced the Portuguese in the administration and security forces.

Opponents of the Neto government claim more than 70,000 Angolan civilians have been slain in Cuban-led offensives against UNITA guerrillas in the past two years.

There was no immediate indication whether Cubans have launched similar operations against Zaire-backed FNLA guerrillas in northern Angola.

Congress Eyes Safety Belt Alternatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most American motorists simply will not buckle up their safety belts, despite clear evidence the belts save lives, witnesses before a congressional panel agreed Wednesday.

But there was no consensus on whether it would be more productive in the short run to try to improve seat belt usage or to push the development of acceptable passive safety systems that would not require car occupants to do anything.

Spokesmen for the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety told a House public works subcommittee recent studies show fewer than 20 percent of those riding even in newer automobiles with supposedly more convenient belt systems were using them.

Leon S. Robertson, a behavioral scientist on the institute staff, said the lack of protection for children was more frightening — 93 percent of young passengers were found without protection. Holding children on laps or in arms is extremely hazardous, he said. The children can be crushed by an adult in case of a crash.

Benjamin Kelley, senior vice president of the institute, said chances of increasing safety belt use are remote. He said educational programs, buzzer and light warnings have had little effect.

The ignition interlock system developed by Ford Motor Co. to prevent starting a car unless belts were fastened did have some effect, he said, but Congress dropped the federal requirement for such a system because of motorist opposition.

U.S. public opinion opposes laws mandating use of seat belts, he added. Legislatures of some 30 states have considered such legislation but none has adopted it.

Dr. John D. States of the University of Rochester Medical School told the subcommittee refusal of motorists to buckle up is a political fact that must be accepted.

He said airbags designed to inflate in a crash are costly, subject to malfunction and frighten some car buyers.

He said automatic belt systems might be an alternative and praised the passive belt system of the Volkswagen Rabbit, saying it "successfully used two of the most impact resistant systems in the human body, the knees and the buttocks, for energy impact targets."

Other technical advances could be combined with such a system, he said, for additional protection. Among these he listed better glass and windshield design, crushable dashboards, knee and thigh restraining shelves, stronger doors and sides and improved bucket seats.

A spokesman for the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association challenged esimates that little can be done to improve belt usage.

John Manikas, a Ford official who heads the association's highway safety committee, said all cars may have passive restraint systems by the mid-1990s but "what about the years between now and the 1990s?"

The task force also found that communities that develop their own building codes usually create unnecessary building costs, while unjustifiable housing costs are less likely in communities that have adopted a modified model code.

Mrs. Harris said her department's Federal Housing Administration has driven up housing costs through its Minimum Property Standards, covering such things as construction, plumbing, wiring and room size, which must be met before the FHA will insure the mortgage.

"In many instances, the HUD standards differ from local codes, subjecting the builder to the problem of having to comply with at least two sets of regulations," she said.

The task force recommended that HUD's loan processing procedures be streamlined and that other statutory and regulatory requirements associated with the purchase of a home be simplified.

Other government-created problems spotted by the task force included environmental and equal opportunity standards, although Mrs. Harris said, "We at HUD do not believe these objectives should be compromised."

Mrs. Harris said in a news conference that some of the suggestions could be achieved administratively, others would require legislation, and the federal government would encourage local authorities to address others.

For example, she said the task force recommended that urban development money be withheld from communities which fail to meet site-development standards which the report also calls for.

Among the steps Mrs. Harris said HUD would initiate were encouragement to use federal Community Block Grant Funds to purchase land now for use later in subsidized housing to avoid higher land costs at construction time.

concludes that building codes, regulations and other restrictions imposed at the federal, state and local levels are largely responsible for the price surge.

"In the area of land supply, the Task Force Report singles out government action — through regulation and investment decisions — as a major cause of limited land supply," Mrs. Harris said.

"As far as land development is concerned, the increasing cost again is due primarily to costly regulations," she said.

At the local level, the task force found that financially strapped governments have shifted to developers and homebuyers the costs once absorbed by the community — such as streets, roads and sewers.

Overregulation Cause Of Housing Hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government concluded Wednesday that federal, state and local regulations are the chief culprits in the rising cost of housing.

Patricia Harris, secretary of housing and urban development, announced a program to do away with some of the red tape.

She said a Task Force on Housing Costs concludes that building codes, regulations and other restrictions imposed at the federal, state and local levels are largely responsible for the price surge.

"In the area of land supply, the Task Force Report singles out government action — through regulation and investment decisions — as a major cause of limited land supply," Mrs. Harris said.

Woman Dies In Street After Eviction From Home

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A widow evicted from her apartment for not paying rent died on a sofa beside the street, guarding her meager possessions. "I think she just lost her will to live," Shirley Bledsoe, the woman's daughter-in-law, said Wednesday. "After losing her husband, getting kicked out of her apartment was the last straw." Deputy Coroner Bobby Hudson said Al-line Carnes, 59, died Tuesday of natural causes. Funeral arrangements were incomplete. Mrs. Carnes had lived in the apartment on East 51st Street with Eunice Parker for a few months, Mrs. Bledsoe said, and apparently got badly behind on the rent. "They were put out because they had $300 worth of back rent due," said Paul

A. Bonner, owner of the apartment house. "I've been trying to get them out for a long, long time." Bonner said the women were evicted Monday. Mrs. Parker moved to another house, he said, but Mrs. Carnes stayed with her furniture. "She refused to leave her stuff because there are a lot of thieves down there,"

Mrs. Bledsoe said in a telephone interview. "She wanted to keep what little she had, and it wasn't much." On the curb were the couch, an old living room suite, a chest of drawers, a dresser, a thin foam-rubber mattress, piles of clothes in blankets and a refrigerator with the front door torn off. "She apparently had to sell her bed and I noticed the electric range was missing," Mrs. Bledsoe said. "About all she had was odds and ends and a few personal belongings."

Two welfare workers from the Chattanooga Human Services Division found the woman a room for Monday night, but she refused it because she couldn't take her furniture. "One of the neighbors wanted to take her in, but she said she'd stay with her stuff," Mrs. Bledsoe said. "She said it was so nice and cool she'd sleep on the couch."

On Tuesday, the welfare workers returned with an offer of permanent lodgings and found Mrs. Carnes dead. "I don't know what was going on in her mind," Mrs. Bledsoe said. Married 16 years to Mrs. Carnes' only son, she remarried after his death. "She'd been in low spirits since she and her husband were divorced — she did remarry, but he died in a year — and she didn't have any real family. "She was pretty independent, but she always got to a phone and called me when she felt just a little sick," she said. "Her father and her son both died young, and she had a real horror of dying."

Hospital Costs Limit Bill Wins Skirmish In House Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter won a victory Wednesday in his battle against skyrocketing hospital fees as a congressional committee refused to shelve a proposal that would limit such increases. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee voted 26 to 16 against a move by Rep. Bob Gammage, D-Tex., to send the hospital cost containment bill back to its health subcommittee.

Loyalty Leads To Fraud By Former Town Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Tax Court has upheld fraud penalties against a former Otsego, N.Y., town supervisor who stopped filing tax returns when faced with the dilemma of sending in an incorrect return himself or blowing the whistle on his father. The court ruled in the case of Alton G. Dunn Jr. of Cooperstown, N.Y. Court papers said he served as supervisor of the Town of Otsego from 1964 to 1969. According to the Tax Court decision, Dunn failed to file federal income tax returns for the years 1962 through 1971. Judge William M. Drennen upheld fraud penalties against Dunn for 1967 through 1971. The exact amount of the penalties will have to be calculated by the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS had sought fraud penalties for all of the years Dunn failed to file, but Drennen approved smaller "failure to file" and "negligence" penalties for 1962 through 1966. According to Drennen's memorandum opinion, issued Monday, Dunn had discovered in 1962 that his father, with whom he was a partner in an insurance business, was erroneously computing the partnership income. Dunn, who was also a lawyer, was unable to get his father to change the method of reporting, the court record states. Dunn "felt a strong loyalty toward his father. He did not want to knowingly file a fraudulent return but he was loath to affirmatively inform the Internal Revenue Service of his father's erroneous computations of the partnership income," Drennen wrote.

Landslide Fatal To Four On Italian Resort Beach

ISCHIA, Italy (AP) — A landslide crashed down on a crowded Mediterranean resort beach Wednesday, killing at least four persons in a coffee shop and possibly trapping others, authorities said. Volunteers and government workers searching for more bodies dug through the tons of rocks and dirt that slid onto Maronti beach from an adjacent hillside. Officials said the dead found in the remains of the shop were German and Swiss tourists visiting this vacation island west of Naples.

Oil Exploration By Israelis In Captured Area Condemned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has condemned Israeli oil exploration in occupied Egyptian territory as beyond the legal authority of a "belligerent occupant" power.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance outlined the U.S. view in a meeting last Friday in New York with Egyptian Foreign Minister Muhammad Ibrahim Kamel. It was reiterated Wednesday at the daily State Department press briefing by spokesman Hodding Carter.

Israeli forces overran the Egyptian Sinai desert during the 1967 Six-Day war.

Having virtually no oil resources of its own, Israel used the Abu Rudeis oil fields. They were returned to Egypt as part of the 1975 Sinai disengagement agreement but Israel continues to explore for oil in both land and offshore areas belonging to Egypt and still under Israel's control.

"Our position," said Carter, "is that the development and exploitation of new oil fields in occupied territories is unprecedented and goes beyond the legal authority of a belligerent occupant."

"Further, even previously developed mineral resources of occupied territory cannot be used for purposes beyond the needs of the occupation."

Six months ago the Israeli government said it had drilled a second well in the Gulf of Suez and planned to drill six others in the next few months near El Tur, off the coast of the Israeli-occupied Sinai desert.

One of the offshore wells was producing about 5,000 barrels a day. Israel imports nearly all of its oil and is seeking new energy resources.

Tel Aviv has said that Israel hopes it can keep an economic interest in the oil production even if Israel withdraws and turns the area back to Egypt in any peace agreement.

Meanwhile, the State Department spokesman reaffirmed the Carter administration's confidence in Egyptian President Anwar Sadat as a peacemaker.

Sadat has told troops stationed at the Suez Canal to brace for a continued "battle of liberation" if Israel does not respond satisfactorily to his overtures.

"We don't feel he has raised the war option," Carter said.

The spokesman added: "He's made a reference to the possibility if peace negotiations break down. His commitment to the peace negotiations has been stated repeatedly."

On a related matter, U.S. officials said Vance has no plans to visit the Middle East next week after stops in Paris and London for discussions with NATO allies.

There have been recent reports Vance would go to the region to try to get Israeli-Egyptian negotiations started again.

Council To Streamline Writing Of Environmental Statements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Council on Environmental Quality is proposing regulations to streamline the process of writing environmental impact statements for major federal projects.

"These regulations are designed to reduce paperwork, reduce delay and above all to pave the way for better decisions," said CEQ chairman Charles Warren said Wednesday.

The proposals, developed after extensive public hearings, establish guidelines for all federal agencies to follow in preparing the statements. They include:

— Limiting most statements to 150 pages or less. The statement on an Alaska natural gas pipeline, for example, was 16 volumes and over 10,000 pages long.

— Requiring the statements to be written in plain English.

— Bringing all affected parties, including government agencies, project opponents and proponents, into the planning stage to determine what major issues and alternatives should be examined. This procedure should reduce the number of suits brought to halt a project on grounds the environmental impact statement was inadequate.

— Establishing a timetable so affected parties will have an idea of when the review will be completed.

Under law, federal agencies must prepare an environmental impact statement before undertaking any action that will have a "significant impact" on the environment. The actions can include such disparate items as building a dam, financing an interstate highway or opposing wilderness legislation.

Over 8,000 environmental impact statements have been written since the law requiring them went into effect on Jan. 1, 1970. An average of 1,000 are filed yearly.

Warren said the regulations should make the documents more usable and readable. "Many statements, he said, can be characterized as possessing 'cumbersome length and verbosity.'"

Now, he said, "we're going to keep them short and to the point. The quality will be improved."

The council will receive comments on its new proposals until Aug. 11. Final regulations are expected to be issued in October.

Agency Sees Increased Use Of Battery-Powered Vehicles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Perhaps 10 percent of all U.S. motor vehicles will be powered by electrical storage batteries by the year 2000, the Department of Energy said Wednesday.

But George Pezdirtz, director of the department's energy storage systems division, said it may be 10 or 15 years before many lightweight, cost-competitive batteries for autos are seen on the market.

"I've been encouraged by the progress we've been making in the past year" with private firms planning to produce new type batteries on a commercial scale, he said.

The department's budget for battery systems research and development next fiscal year is $24.1 million. About $11 million of that is earmarked for advanced batteries, now in the laboratory and testing stage. Pezdirtz said the department sponsors the largest energy storage development program in the world.

He and an assistant, Maurice J. Katz, told a news conference huge banks of batteries might be used by utilities since a great deal of generating capacity is lost because it is not required at night.

If there were a way to store it for use the next day, oil and gas now used for peak generating plants could be saved, they said. Better energy storage systems would permit a closer match between supply and demand and thus help eliminate energy waste, they said.

Pezdirtz said batteries have been developed that will not lose their charge if left at the curb for 12 to 14 days — a longer period than most automobiles are idle. He said it is feasible and economically possible to power a vehicle that will travel from 180 to 200 miles on a single charge.

He said the industry is diverse, does not have large amounts of capital and has not been trained to do research and development, but that industry is putting up 20 percent or more toward development.

The program's goal is to develop batteries at a cost of $30 to $35 for a kilowatt-hour. Since the power required for a lightweight vehicle is from 20 to 40 kilowatts, such a battery might cost $600 or more but should last for years, the officials said.

Wildcat Well Totals Announced

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Railroad Commission reported Wednesday that 15 wildcat oil wells and 67 wildcat gas wells were drilled in Texas during the last half of May.

The oil discoveries included four in South Texas, three in the Panhandle, two each in the San Antonio and Southeast Texas areas, and one each in East Texas, and the Lubbock, Midland and Wichita Falls areas.

The gas discoveries include 22 in the Refugio area, 21 in South Texas, 11 in Southeast Texas, three each in East Texas and the San Angelo and Lubbock areas, two in the Panhandle and one each in West Central Texas and the Midland area.

The commission said 288 oil wells were completed in the last half of May, 46 fewer than in the same period of 1977. A total of 304 gas wells were completed, 119 more than in the same time last year.

The commission reported that 109 dry holes were drilled in the May 15-31 period.

OLD STOMPING GROUND ROBBED

EDDYVILLE, Ky. (AP)—More than $14,000 in cash, money orders and checks was stolen from a business office here, and the thieves, described by officials as professionals, apparently knew their target well — the Kentucky State Penitentiary. Superintendent Donald Bordenkircher said thieves entered the prison business office, which is not inside the prison but is within 200 feet of the walls of the maximum security facility, through a back window Monday night.

Canada Restricting Oil, Gas Exports

OTTAWA (AP) — The Ontario government said Wednesday Canada should continue phasing out oil exports and limiting natural gas exports to the U.S.

In a submission to the National Energy Board's hearing on oil supply and demand, Ontario suggested oil exports be considered only after Canada's needs have been assured by a surplus for the next 30 years. It said additional natural gas exports should be considered on the same basis, although current gas export commitments should be fulfilled.

Ontario said the "purported short-term cash flow problems of the petroleum industry — which might be ameliorated by more gas or oil exports — shouldn't be permitted to prejudice the long-term national interest of ensuring secure supplies of non-renewable energy resources."

It added that until crude oil and gas from offshore and arctic sources become available domestically they shouldn't be included in energy supply forecasts to justify increased exports from traditional sources in western Canada.

House Kills Measure To Computerize Gun Sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bitterly divided House voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to bar the Treasury Department from computerizing its gun sales records.

The vote came after a long debate which threatened to explode into a shouting match between proponents and opponents of gun control.

The National Rifle Association had strongly opposed the proposal by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Most law enforcement officials supported the measure.

The vote came as the House considered a bill to appropriate funds for the Treasury Department, the Postal Service, the Executive Office of the president and for various independent government agencies for the coming fiscal year.

The House Appropriations Committee had voted previously to insert a provision in that legislation stating that the bureau, a part of the Treasury Department, could not use any of the funds to implement its proposal to computerize gun sales records.

The House Appropriations Committee had been lost or stolen. All of the information would have been entered into a computer so that the bureau could quickly trace each gun by serial number to the dealer who sold it.

Witnesses Tell Of Stupor Due To PCP

WASHINGTON (AP) — "I was living in a drug dream world," said a 24-year-old man who says he has quit using the drug PCP. "It is the most bizarre drug I've ever encountered."

The man, identifying himself only as Norman, testified along with two other former users of PCP (Phencyclidine) before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee Wednesday about the increasing popularity of the drug and its effects.

All three young men, who used pseudonyms to protect their identities, are currently participating in a drug rehabilitation program in suburban Washington.

Occasionally, Norman said, when he had smoked PCP he "would go blind, completely black."

"I could neither talk nor see anything, I thought I was dead."

Asked if friends were discouraged from using PCP because of that experience, Norman said, "No, everyone thought that was really cool. They smoked more to get where I had been."

While he was using PCP, a second witness, Don, said, "I had the mentality of a three-year-old. I couldn't really concentrate."

He said his speech became slurred and he was unable to think clearly.

The third witness, John, said, "When I used PCP I had a great feeling of importance."

He described traveling and not knowing how he ended up in places far from home.

"Frequently, I would wake up in hotel rooms, or even executive suites and I wouldn't know how I got there."

Steven E. Lerner, a California research specialist on PCP, told the subcommittee that PCP use is increasing sharply, especially among young teen-agers.

Deaths attributed to PCP use, he said, appear to be on a dramatic increase.

In Los Angeles, Lerner said, there were 20 PCP-related deaths in 1976; in 1977, the number was 66, he said.

Lerner said in a study he conducted two years ago, he found the average age among first users of PCP was 19 years. A more recent survey of 2,750 users showed they first used the drug at age 14.

Most PCP use is among young white residents of the suburbs, he said.

Lerner said that users frequently suffer speech and memory problems for several years after they stop taking PCP.

PCP was originally produced by the Park Davis Co. as an operating room anesthetic, but its use was cancelled when patients showed prolonged delirium.

It is now manufactured illegally in small labs and sold for $125 an ounce.

Tax Judge Complains About Protest Suits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The flow of taxpayers using the court to issue protests has prompted a complaint from Tax Court Special Trial Judge Francis J. Cantrel.

Cantrel ruled in a case challenging the income-tax laws on a variety of constitutional grounds. The case was similar to many others in recent years and which found all the challenges rejected.

The judge, quoting from an earlier tax court opinion, found the case "without any legal justification but solely for the purpose of protesting the federal tax laws."

"This court has before it a large number of cases which deserve careful consideration as speedily as possible, and cases of this sort disrupt our consideration of those genuine controversies," Cantrel said.

C. Moxley Featherston, chief judge of the tax court, said cases of this type

For an investment of $625 in chemicals, Lerner said, an illicit PCP manufacturer can net $225,000 in sales of the drug, also known as angel dust, Peace Pills, Hog, Green, Sheets and Number One.

"I have been showing up with fair frequency within the last couple of years."

He noted that cases of war protesters refusing to pay taxes have subsided with the end of the Vietnam war, but those challenging the constitutionality of the laws continue to parade forth.

Asked if such cases are a waste of time for the taxpayers and the court, Featherston said, "It certainly seems that way to us."

But, he added, "We are not in a position to deny any citizen the right to litigate before the tax court if he chooses to do so."

The House Appropriations Committee had voted previously to insert a provision in that legislation stating that the bureau, a part of the Treasury Department, could not use any of the funds to implement its proposal to computerize gun sales records.

Rep. Robert McCloy, R-Ill., sought to amend the bill once it reached the House floor to remove that provision, thereby allowing the bureau's proposal to go forward.

The House voted 80 to 314 against McCloy's amendment.

The bureau's proposal would have required the federal registration of gun owners, although opponents characterized the proposal as the first step toward such universal registration.

It would have required gun manufacturers to print a unique serial number on each gun and to tell the bureau each quarter where they had shipped each gun after manufacture. Gun dealers would have been required to tell the bureau which guns had been sold. They also would have been required, as they are currently required, to keep a list of persons to whom they sold the guns, although this information would not be relayed to the bureau.

Dealers also would have been required to tell the bureau promptly when a gun

The bureau had testified that the procedure simply would speed up its tracing of guns used in crimes — a process that sometimes takes several weeks or months under the existing system.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, a leading opponent of the proposal, argued that the bureau's proposal was a "devious end-around" attempt by the agency to do what Congress had refused to do — require the registration of all guns.

But Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., said the bureau was well within its rights under existing law to issue the proposal.

"This is not a question of whether you support or oppose the gun control law at all," he said. "The question is whether you want to improve the reporting of guns that are killing so many of our constituents."

IN MINI-SERIES

Kim Hunter, Claire Bloom, George Kennedy, Ed Flanders, Lee Grant, Eileen Heckart and Paul Winfield are new to the all-star cast of "Backstairs at the White House" mini-series, being produced by NBC-TV.

Carter Found Lacking Political Base

By LOUIS HARRIS

President Jimmy Carter is a politician in desperate search of a political base. Dramatic evidence of this can be found in the close examination of the results of a mid-May ABC News-Harris Poll of 1,498 voters nationwide. These results indicated that if the 1980 presidential election were held today, Mr. Carter would lose to Gerald Ford by 48-43 percent and to Ronald Reagan by 47-46 percent. By contrast, if Sen. Edward Kennedy were the 1980 Democratic nominee, he would run ahead of former President Ford by 52-43 percent and ahead of Ronald Reagan by 54-42 percent.

These findings made headlines, for they indicate that Jimmy Carter may face real trouble at election time two years from now. But the headlines, in many ways, obscure a more basic political situation.

In a way, President Carter's poor showing makes it clear where the Democrats must find their basic strength if they are to win another run for the White House in 1980:

—The roots of Democratic Party support are in the big cities of the nation, where Mr. Carter still leads Gerald Ford by a slim 48-43 percent. However, this margin is not wide enough. Back in 1976, when he won by a narrow 2.1 percent of the vote, Mr. Carter swept the cities by 58-40 percent. A major erosion has taken place in Carter's city strength.

Blacks, who are located disproportionately in the cities, still favor the president against Gerald Ford by 77-12 percent. But this is a full 10 points below Mr. Carter's 1976 rating. Sen. Kennedy wins a higher 88-8 percent majority among the blacks when paired against Ford. Even Gov. Jerry Brown, who runs 14 points behind Ford and 12 points behind Reagan in the nationwide poll, wins the black vote by 62-28 percent against the former president and by 70-19 percent against Reagan.

The real change in the cities can be found among white city dwellers. In 1976, Jimmy Carter won this group's vote by 52-47 percent, which, when coupled with the black vote, was enough to offset setbacks in the suburbs, small towns and rural areas.

Now, however, President Carter loses the white vote in the cities to Gerald Ford 50-40 percent. By contrast, Kennedy is ahead of Ford by 51-43 percent. This slippage among urban whites is a key to much of the President's present trouble.

—Another solid bloc upon which the Democrats will have to build is the union vote. Against Ford, President Carter wins the support of trade unionists by 53-38 percent. But this is well below the 64-32 percent margin that Kennedy enjoys. There has been much talk about the decline of union political power, and, indeed, it is true that union members are less likely to follow their leaders than in the past. Nonetheless, without the union vote, Jimmy Carter could be in deep trouble, since one out of five likely voters is a union member.

—Another key group for the Democrats is that of voters less than 30 years of age. Mr. Carter loses this group to Ford by 48-47 percent, although he wins handsily against Ronald Reagan by 55-41 percent. Kennedy, however, sweeps the vote of the young by 57-39 percent against Ford and by 64-34 percent against Reagan.

Other key groups in the basic Democratic coalition are liberals, whom the president does win from Ford by 63-29 percent, and Catholics and Jews, both of whom are now showing real signs of drawing away from the president. Among white Catholics (excluding Spanish-speaking minorities), Mr. Carter loses to Ford by 48-45 percent. Kennedy takes the white Catholic vote away from Ford by 59-35 percent.

Of course, the ultimate irony is that victory among this coalition of blacks, urban whites, union members, liberals, white Catholics and Jews is still not sufficient to assure the election for a Democrat. A candidate must do reasonably well among two other swing-voting groups that have grown in the 1970s — the college-educated and the independents.

Capital Expenditures Increases Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses estimated in April they will increase their spending on capital equipment by about 6 percent this year, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

The April estimate was stronger than the 5.5 percent estimate businesses gave in a survey in March, the department said. These figures are adjusted to account for inflation.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal has said more spending on plants and equipment is needed to keep the economy growing. He says the country is not spending enough on its future. The business estimates still fall short of the 7 percent increase in real capital spending in 1977.

Before adjustment for inflation, businesses' plans for capital spending increased 11.2 percent over last year to $151 billion, the department said. Spending in 1977 was $135.8 billion, a 12.7 percent increase over 1976.

Capital spending increased in the first quarter of the year at an annual rate of 4.4 percent after a 1.6 percent decline in the fourth quarter last year.

Most of the increases for the rest of the year are expected in manufacturing industries, while the first-quarter increases were in other businesses. Raising their estimates the most were the food and beverage, petroleum, railroad, airline, communications and stone and glass industries.

Actual spending in the first quarter was at an annual rate of $2 billion, or about 1.5 percent lower than previously estimated. Businesses did not change their estimates for the second quarter but raised their predictions for the second half by about 1.5 percent, the department said. In a speech May 8 at Bal Harbour, Fla., Blumenthal called capital formation one of the nation's leading economic problems.

CHIROPRACTORS SEEK RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS

The International Pain Control Institute is presently engaged in what is the most extensive research program ever undertaken by the chiropractic profession. This research is directed toward determining the relationship between health problems and spinal misalignments and utilizes a screening process called Contour Analysis.

Volunteers are being sought for screening. Contour Analysis enables taking a three-dimensional picture (called Moire photography) of the topography of the surface of the spine to detect spinal stress deviations. This analysis will be correlated with leg deficiency, patient symptomatology, and levels of spinal tenderness. An analysis of this type can reveal such things as normal and abnormal stress patterns, spinal curvature, muscle spasms, muscle imbalance, spinal distortions, and scoliosis.

This is a public service program for participating volunteers. The doctors are contributing their time, service, and facilities for the program.

Anyone wishing to be a volunteer may telephone participating doctors directly for information or an appointment.

Mart's Rally Reaches End

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's six-session rally since Memorial Day came to a halt Wednesday under moderate selling pressure.

However, some California savings and loan housing stocks rallied strongly following approval by the state's voters of a proposal to sharply reduce property taxes.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 34.82 points in the past six trading days, pulled back 4.59 to 861.92.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange dropped off sharply, totaling 33.06 million shares against 51.97 million Tuesday.

Analysts said the market's steady rise of late had attracted some traders who had been waiting for an opportune moment to sell.

However, they also noted enthusiastic buying of issues linked to the California housing market following Tuesday's vote approving state Proposition 13, which calls for an average reduction of 57 percent in property taxes.

Special Invitation Lures U.S. Tourists To Cuba

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Less than 10 miles from the Bay of Pigs, Kenneth Flint of Pascagoula, Miss., reeled in a six-pound, seven-ounce black bass as dark clouds and an orange ball of setting sun vied for attention on the horizon of Cuba's Treasure Lake.

Around a reedy point of the Zapata Swamp, Ernestine Bodsden and Mildred Glover, a couple of Little Rock, Ark., office workers, were reeling them in and throwing them back because the chunky bass were "too small for the wall."

About two hours away by boat and bus, more than 100 American anglers were trolling for blue and white marlin along the Havana shore, competitors in the annual Ernest Hemingway Memorial Tournament.

And to the east, at the beach resort of Veradero, another 250 Yankee boatmen were rocking in the surf, touring the countryside or enjoying a sumptuous meal at the former DuPont Estate, now a luxurious tourist showplace on Cuba's north coast.

American tourists are in Cuba again.

And the Cubans — who closed the doors to U.S. travelers shortly after the 1959 revolution — are glad to have them. They are issuing special invitations, scheduling special events and going to great lengths to reopen the once-lucrative industry of Yankee tourism.

More than 400 Americans and an assortment of Mexicans, Venezuelans, Swedes and Germans were here at the Cubans' invitation in a recent week.

"These people are pioneers in what you might call a policy of renewed emphasis" for the American tourist dollar, said Miguel Arocha of the Cuban Institute of Tourism as he surveyed acre upon acre of sleek, expensive American yachts moored at Barlovento Marina on the outskirts of this capital city.

Forty-five of the gleaming sea cruisers had pulled into Havana harbor a few days earlier to participate in the event named for the late American writer who once lived in Cuba. One yachtsman estimated that, at an average of $125,000 each, the marina was the temporary home for more than $5.6 million worth of U.S. boats.

Does this renewed emphasis on attracting American travelers mean that individual tourists can now come here whenever they desire?

"As a matter of policy, we are not against receiving any individuals," said Gary Gonzalez, special assistant to the head of the Cuban Tourist Institute, Luis Gongora. "But, right now, we are concentrating on small groups, on special events such as these fishing tournaments and similar things. We need advance notice of any tourist."

But, he said, "I don't think it will take more than the end of this year" before Americans can travel here as regular tourists on an individual basis. The U.S. State Department lifted all restrictions on travel of U.S. citizens to Cuba last year.

Meanwhile, the Cubans have scheduled a sailfish tournament in October to take place in Oriente Province and plans are being made to bring Americans here in special package-tour groups for bird watchers, hunters, athletes and just plain sightseers.

Top government officials will not comment, but diplomats and other foreign observers here say the Cubans have long realized they have been losing huge sums of hard currency to the Caribbean nations that took over as tourists' destinations for Americans 20 years ago.

Cuba used to be the tourist mecca in this area before the 1959 revolution.

"Today we have to go and seek the people," Arocha said. "But once we get these specialized activities (like the fishing tournaments) established, the people will come to the event."

The marlin tournament, the Veradero junket, the bass fishing on Treasure Lake next to the Bay of Pigs battlefields all appeared to justify the Cubans' optimism this past week.

Flint, the Pascagoula, Miss., air conditioning installer spending a week at the bass fishing resort, said:

"I am living my dream. Treasure Lake has some of the best fishing in the world and I never thought I'd get here. I'll be back and I'm going to bring my wife and all my friends."

Miss Glover, who runs a Social Security office in Little Rock and has been traveling to exotic bass fishing sites for 20 years, raved about the friendliness of the Cubans and the "first-class treatment" the group had received.

AMERICANS IN CUBA — Comedians Tom and Dick Smothers kneel and shake hands while holding onto the bill of a marlin they landed while participating in the Ernest Hemingway Memorial Fishing Tournament off Havana harbor recently. They were among hundreds of fishermen especially invited by the Cubans, anxious to resume the lucrative American tourist industry. Others in the picture were not identified. (AP Laserphoto)

Legislation Seeking Changes For Broadcasters, Cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation introduced Wednesday would ease many rules governing broadcasters, completely free cable TV from federal control and possibly strip American Telephone Telegraph Co. of its supply subsidiary, Western Electric Co.

It also would reorganize the present seven-member Federal Communications Commission into a new agency — the Communications Regulatory Commission with five members limited to one 10-year term. FCC members now serve an unlimited number of seven-year terms.

The bill was introduced by Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., chairman of the House communications subcommittee of the Commerce Committee, and Rep. Lou Frey of Florida, the ranking subcommittee member. It is a complete revision of the much-amended 1934 Communications Act.

Van Deerlin told a news conference he plans hearings soon and hopes the bill will clear Congress by 1980. He said all sides will have a chance to present their views.

Frey said "we've been bumbling along...with a hodgepodge" and no national communications policy. "We have faced the issue with a way to go and a vehicle do it with."

Van Deerlin and Frey said their bill is fashioned to let the marketplace control communications and reduce the regulatory role.

Broadcast stations would no longer be given three-year license terms. Radio licenses would be for indefinite terms subject to revocation only for violation of technical rules. Television licenses would be extended to five years and become indefinite 10 years after the bill is enacted.

The bill would do away with comparative hearings when there is more than one application for an available radio or TV frequency. It would set up a random selection system.

No entity could own more than five radio and television stations, and the bill provides that no individual may own more than three TV stations in the top 50 markets. Ownership would be restricted to one broadcast station in each market.

One owner may now control up to 21 stations — seven television stations, seven FM radio stations and seven AM radio stations.

Under current rules, both radio and television stations are required to present both sides of controversial issues. The bill would water down the rule and make it applicable only to television.

The equal-time provision for political campaigns would also apply only to television. Candidates for president, vice president, the Senate and other statewide offices would be exempt.

An entirely new feature would be a license fee that would reflect both the cost of processing the license application and the value of the spectrum occupied by the user. Such a user fee would also apply to other users of the spectrum, such as telephone companies.

The money would go into a special fund to provide money for public broadcasting and loans for minority ownership of broadcast stations and the development of telecommunications services in rural areas.

ATT would have to divest itself of Western Electric three years after the bill is enacted under the current circumstances. But Van Deerlin noted that competitive developments may make this unnecessary if ATT is no longer considered a monopoly then.

Another provision would allow ATT to free itself from the restraints of a 1956 consent decree under which the telephone company can use its equipment only to provide telephone service and is prohibited from providing unregulated service.

William M. Ellinghaus, vice chairman of the board of ATT, commented that the proposal "is so comprehensive and sweeping" that it would take extensive study to analyze it.

Actress Added To Cast For 'Champ' Remake

MIAMI — Screen newcomer Mary Jo Catlett has been signed for her second film, a featured role in MGM's "The Champ." Franco Zeffirelli's first American film now before the cameras on location here with Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway and child discovery Ricky Schroder heading the cast.

Miss Catlett, who will be seen as a reformed drinker working as a stablehand at Hialeah Racetrack, was chosen by Zeffirelli after he had seen her performance as a bar habitue who has a fling with Burt Reynolds in "Semi-Tough," a performance that earned her considerable critical applause.

Miss Catlett hails from Denver where she began acting in clubs and at Denver's celebrated Elitch's Gardens before coming to Hollywood to further her career in motion pictures and TV.

"The Champ," which is being produced by Dyson Lovell, is a modernized adaptation of the 1931 MGM screen classic that won an Academy Award for Wallace Beery and brought Jackie Cooper to movie stardom. The new script is by Walter Newman and Spencer Eastman.

Tech Study Could Help Area Cities' Data Processing

Five South Plains cities may benefit from a feasibility study begun at Texas Tech University to solve the data processing problems faced by each of the communities.

The Texas Tech Center for Public Service is undertaking the $11,628 feasibility study of a cooperative automatic data processing network to improve record keeping and information processing in the cities of Plainview, Lamesa, Brownfield, Littlefield, and Levelland.

The project will permit the cities to explore the possibilities in working together to provide automatic data processing services at lower costs than if each established its own system.

Dr. N. Joseph Cayer, acting director of the Center for Public Service is the project director.

"None of these cities now has an automatic data processing system," he said, "although some contract work is done. By developing a network system, it could be possible for each city to reap the benefits of automatic data processing without exorbitant costs."

As a part of the project, the Texas Tech center personnel also will train key officials of the participating cities in assessing potential automatic data processing applications for city services.

The award was announced by Edward Vela Jr. director of the Dallas office of the U.S. Civil Service Commission. The grant was made under the Intergovernmental Personnel Act program. The study is to be completed by Oct. 31.

The project coordinator is Dr. Paul Cheney of Texas Tech University. He is on the information systems faculty while Cayer is a member of the political sciences faculty.

ABC Tops With Seven Daytime Emmy Awards

SOAP STARS WIN EMMY AWARDS — Laurie Heineman, who portrays Charlene Frame Matthews in "Another World," and James Pritchett, who plays Dr. Matt Powers in the series "The Doctors" hold their Emmy awards Wednesday during the Fifth Annual Emmy Awards ceremony for daytime television in New York. Miss Heineman won her award for best actress, and Pritchett for best actor. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Days of Our Lives" won an Emmy as the best daytime dramatic series and the stars of NBC's "The Doctors" and "Another World" won acting awards in nationally televised ceremonies here Wednesday.

James Pritchett, who plays Dr. Matt Powers in "The Doctors," was chosen outstanding actor in a daytime dramatic series for the period between March 14, 1977, and March 28, 1978, and Laurie Heineman, Charlene Frame Matthews in "Another World," was named best actress.

An ABC soap opera, "Ryan's Hope," won an Emmy for writing, and Richard Dunlap of CBS' "The Young and the Restless" picked up one for directing.

ABC was the big winner overall with seven daytime Emmys, including four for children's programming, NBC had five and CBS and the Public Broadcasting Service two each.

ABC had 28 nominations, NBC 18, CBS 13 and PBS eight.

Talk show host Phil Donahue was a double winner. He won an Emmy as the outstanding host or hostess in a talk, service or variety series, and his syndicated "Donahue" show was chosen the outstanding such series.

NBC's "Hollywood Squares" was chosen the outstanding game or audience participation show, and Richard Dawson, host of "Family Feud" on ABC was the outstanding host in the same category.

Mike Gargiulo won an Emmy for his direction of the June 20, 1977, episode of "The $20,000 Pyramid" on ABC.

"Captain Kangaroo," which made its debut on CBS in 1955, was named the outstanding children's series.

Dawson, once a co-star in the "Hogan's Heroes" comedy series, was host for the awards ceremonies on ABC.

"Days of Our Lives," which premiered Nov. 19, 1965, was one of four daytime serials nominated for the top award by members of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. The others were "All My Children" and "Ryan's Hope" on ABC and "The Young and the Restless" on CBS.

Here are the other daytime Emmys awarded Wednesday:

—Individual director for a variety program, Martin Haig Mackey, "Over Easy," March 20, 1978 episode, PBS.

—Children's entertainment special, "Hewitt's Just Different," ABC Afterschool Special.

—Children's informational series, "Animals, Animals, Animals," ABC.

—Children's informational special, "Very Good Friends," ABC Afterschool Special.

—Children's instructional series, "America Rock, Schoolhouse Rock," ABC.

—Special classification, outstanding program achievement, "Live From Lincoln Center: Recital of Tenor Luciano Pavarotti from the Met," PBS.

—Outstanding achievement in coverage of special events, "The Great English Garden Party — Peter Ustinov Looks at 100 Years of Wimbledon," June 18, 1977, NBC.

Africa Talk Slated At Tech Museum

East Africa's past and present will be discussed in a public lecture today at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

Linda Donley of the L.S.B. Leakey Foundation will begin her lecture on "African Museum Ventures" at 7:30 p.m. There is no charge.

Miss Donley has worked for the National Museum of Kenya for the past four years, developing two museums. One is on the offshore island of Lamu and the other in western Kenya at Kitale. Much of her time has been spent on collecting trips into remote areas and studying the peoples of Kenya and their material culture.

She will describe her experiences among the Turkana, Pokot pastoralists; the Abaluhya agriculturalists; the Boni who are traditional hunter-gatherers; and the Swahili traders along the Kenya coast.

Her descriptions will include the daily lives and celebrations of these people and how their cultures are being preserved and presented in the museums.

Miss Donley, who holds a pilot's license and who taught riding for the British Horse Society in England for two years, is a zoologist with degrees from Indiana University and the University of Kentucky. She was employed for two years as a research assistant for the Smithsonian Institution and received training there.

The lecture is sponsored by the West Texas Museum Association and two Lubbock families who met Donley in Africa, the W.B. Blankenships and the W.D. Hords.

Private School Held Not Tax Deductible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tax court has refused to allow an Oklahoma couple to deduct as a medical expense the cost of sending their son to a private school.

The youngster had been diagnosed as having a learning disability and, at the suggestion of a doctor, he was entered in a private school for two years.

However, the IRS declined to allow school expenses to be treated as a medical cost and the court agreed, noting that the particular school chosen did not treat learning-disabled children exclusively.

Public TV Marathons Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission proposed on Wednesday to restrict the amount of air time public broadcasting stations could devote to fund-raising marathons and auctions.

But the commission agreed that it should not restrict such activities too much because Congress directed that the stations raise much of their own money.

There has been considerable listener complaint about time devoted to such activity and FCC Commissioner Abbott M.

Washburn said the issue "is getting out of hand."

The commission on Wednesday also decided to move ahead to define more clearly what public television stations are since their character has changed since the 1950s when channels were reserved for "educational" stations.

Another rule proposal that came up Wednesday would limit how many public broadcast stations may be owned by the same entity, similar to the restriction long applied to commercial broadcasters.

There would be a limit of seven stations by one owner, except in the case of those state owned networks. However, the commission plans to look at the wisdom of state-owned public stations.

Under the proposal no one could own more than one TV station or more than two FM radio stations, but could own both a TV station and an FM radio station.

Another proposal to change the rules on advertising on public broadcast stations would include amending the ban against announcements promoting the sale of goods and services in several ways.

The proposed rule would allow announcements:

—Relating to program content, such as the sale of transcripts or bibliographies for a nominal fee.

—Of transitory events as long as the content is limited to time, date and nature, such as concerts, lectures, church bazaars.

The proposed rule also would permit a station to carry announcements identifying by name only, not product, of parties making contributions of goods and services.

Top Musical Marks 25 Years

NEW YORK — Is it possible to break all the rules and still succeed? No way! And yet...

...Look at New York's most enduring and successful musical, which celebrates its 25th anniversary this spring.

It opens the last day in May. Any Broadway producer in his right mind knows you don't do that!

Its curtain goes up at 8 in the morning. That's 12 hours too early!

It plays to a packed house, totaling 30,000 people, yet closes in two weeks without going on the road. Economic suicide! Oh, yes; no ticket will be sold. Insane!

The show has just one backer, who knows that every performance will cost more than $3,000 a minute; he gives the producers more than $2 million to spend; they hire a cadre of international stars to head the cast, yet make no effort to sell tickets. Clearly, they are doomed to failure!

Right? Wrong! They have, in fact, found the key to success, and the proof of this is that the product of their labors, the Milliken Breakfast Show, celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

And the "angel" thinks the money is well spent.

There should be more like him on Broadway.

But there aren't; and there are no other musicals — in or out of New York City — anything like the Milliken Breakfast Show.

While the Breakfast Show is technically an "industrial" show, a theatrical event used by industry to sell products, it has long been recognized as the most successful, lavish and professionally-oriented of any of the productions on which U.S. industry spends more than $4 million annually.

Sponsored by Milliken & Company, the textile manufacturer, the Breakfast Show has become the annual highlight of New York's "market week," when ready-to-wear buyers from all over the country visit the city to shop the Seventh Avenue market for fall fashions. At the Breakfast Show, held in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, they breakfast as Milliken's guests, see an hour-long original musical which previews fall fashion trends, and are then transported (via chartered buses) to the garment district, where they arrive by 9:30 a.m. for a full day of shopping the market.

In its 25 years, the Breakfast Show has grown from a cast of two to more than 60; from a modest budget to $2 million; perhaps a professional narrator, to a full-scale theatrical production featuring, for example, a look at next year's automobile. Seldom do internationally-known stars appear in such productions. But in this respect, too, Milliken is different.

Over the years, it has featured an unequalled array of talent, including Bert Lahr, Molly Picon, Angela Lansbury, Gwen Verdon, Juliet Prowse, Alexis Smith, Van Johnson, Gloria Swanson, Robert Morse, Valerie Harper, Chita Rivera and John Davidson, to name a few.

This year, 1978, marks the Breakfast Show's 25th Anniversary. Again the cast is studded with stars and, again, the house is packed.

Kenya Lecture Today At Tech Museum

Linda Donley, who developed two Kenya museums from scratch, will tell her African museum adventures at 7:30 p.m. today in The Museum of Texas Tech University.

While working with the National Museum of Kenya for the L.S.B. Leakey Foundation, Miss Donley spent much of her time on collecting trips into remote areas and studying the peoples of Kenya and their culture.

She will describe her experiences among the Turkana pastoralists, the Abaluhya agriculturalists, the Boni hunter-gatherers, and the Swahili traders.

How the people lived and celebrated and how their cultures were preserved in the museums, one on the island of Lamu and one at Kitale in western Kenya, will be discussed by Miss Donley who went to Africa first with the Peace Corps.

She is a zoologist with degrees from Indiana University and the University of Kentucky and two years experience as a research assistant with the Smithsonian Institution.

The free lecture is sponsored by the W. B. Blankenships and the W. D. Hords.

Big Time, Bright Lights Await Monterey

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
AUSTIN — Monterey's baseball school intends to hold its graduation exercises Friday night. But final exam time comes first.

Uh, make that semifinal exam time tonight as the Plainsmen play the Corpus Christi Moody Trojans in the state Class AAAA baseball tournament at 9 p.m. In the earlier semifinal, Duncanville and Bellaire collide at 7 p.m.

All the action takes place on the Astro-Turf and under the bright lights of Disch-Falk field, a major-league type facility on the east end of the University of Texas campus. The whole thing will be a new experience for Monterey, which has played all but two games during the day. The Plainsmen have never played on the phony grass this season but MHS coach Bobby Moegle sounds more concerned with the adjustment of playing under the lights.

"It's going to be as bright as a big-league park in Austin," Moegle said. "We practiced Monday and Tuesday nights at Lowrey Field but the lights just aren't strong enough. Our hitters were having a real tough time making much contact at Lowrey."

Every team must adjust at a state tournament, though. It's a part of the game which Moegle's teams have handled with ease in previous years. The MHS coach actually seems more concerned with a few of his own players in playoff wars.

One of them, tonight's starting pitcher Ron Reeves (15-1), may need to improve his earlier playoff appearances.

"Our biggest problem is that Reeves has been giving up about four runs a game in the playoffs. He's going to have to cut that down because we may not be able to get six and seven runs against Moody's pitcher," Moegle said.

The Trojan starter, A.J. Owens (14-3) has pitched five times in the playoffs, recording four wins and a save. Moody's two offensive sparks are leadoff man Greg Griffin and third batter Buddy Logan.

The MHS coach feels they are the keys to Moody's team.

"We feel we have to keep Griffin from getting anything going and keep Logan from hitting it out of the park. We will just try to play baseball with the rest of their hitters and try to keep from creating a situation where they could hurt us," the MHS coach said.

Numerous situations bugged the MHS defense, which committed three errors in each of last Saturday's games. Besides the pitching of Reeves, the pitching of Derek Hatfield and the fielding of shortstop Mike Wooten and leftfielder Dana Rieger have worried the veteran coach.

"I'm disappointed in the defense Wooten has played. He's dropped a couple of them. (Second baseman Ricky) Pinkerton made a bad relay on a double-play ball but a thing like that is to be expected of a sophomore. But Wooten and Rieger are two-year starters.

"I don't know what's wrong with Hatfield. He's had constant control problems and he should be over the jitters as much experience as he's had," Moegle said. "But he looked real good under the lights Tuesday night because his ball moves so much. He may be able to go down there and be real effective."

Hatfield would start Friday's championship game should MHS defeat Moody tonight. The senior righthander walked four batters and worked one inning in his regional appearance against El Paso. Hatfield lasted only 3 2/3 innings and allowed four runs and four hits.

Regents Give Nod To Tamburo

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Dick Tamburo jokingly remarked he was beginning to think about it: That executive session was taking longer than expected. But, yes, the visitor from Illinois was called and his name recommended to the Texas Tech Board of Regents who accepted him Wednesday as new director of athletics for men.

Tamburo, associate AD at the University of Illinois, was present for the afternoon formality of hiring at the called Regents meeting, then he followed that meeting by briefly outlining his program which will have a marked promotional outlook, a favorable regard for women's athletics and possibly an enlarged administrative staff.

The conditions under which Tamburo will be coming—regarding salary and length of contract—have not been worked out completely, Tech president Cecil Mackey said Wednesday, but it was apparent that both Tech officials and Tamburo were satisfied with the tentative arrangements.

Tamburo presented his views and philosophies at a press conference held after the Regents' meeting, then shook hands at a following reception at which time he met most members of the Tech coaching staff.

It was at the reception that he first met the man he will be replacing, J. T. King, Tech's athletic director since 1969, was out of town Monday and Tuesday and did not arrive back in Lubbock until Wednesday afternoon. King is retiring Aug. 31.

"I always say that the man they hire is the man I'll support," King said after meeting Tamburo. King had been named originally to the committee to select the new AD but asked that he not be involved in the process.

The 48-year-old Tamburo stepped to the front of Wednesday's Regents' meeting with the approval of Mackey. Only five Regents were on hand (chairman Judson Williams, vice chairman Robert L. Pfluger, Roy K. Furr Jr., Don Workman and Clint Formby) for the closed-doors executive session called strictly to consider the AD matter.

When the meeting which lasted about 25 minutes—longer than Tamburo had expected, he jokingly admitted afterwards—was opened to the public, Pfluger, who chairs the Regents' sports committee, recommended Tamburo be hired, and the vote of the group was unanimous.

On several occasions—both at the press conference and afterwards—Tamburo praised the high level of facilities and the program at Tech, as directed by King. And he emphasized that any changes in personnel would not be made for change sake.

"I want to talk to the people (in the Tech athletic department) before doing anything," Tamburo said. "It's a tremendous opportunity here, and I'm fortunate to take over a program that Jake has had. It's a challenge to me to continue to grow with what he has developed.

"Anytime you talk of hiring people, you think of the area and locale and their base of operations. If you're going to hire coaches, you want to hire coaches who know the Texas area.

"We want good, qualified people, if you think of hiring. But I'm not thinking about hiring, just to take a look at the administration (immediately). We want to expand and grow, and I think promotions has to be a part of it.

"I'm looking at a beautiful stadium," he said, as he surveyed Jones Stadium following the press conference. "I'd like to see it packed every game, and promotion is a part of it. That (promotions) will be one of the phases of responsibility (in any reorganization of personnel or administrative moves)."

Tamburo indicated that he had complete control of hiring practices within the department, "as channeled through Dr. Mackey's office. But," he emphasized, "I am in no way out to make changes strictly to make changes."

He said minor changes would be made in working into his programs.

Tamburo is coming from a program which had five assistant ADs, each, naturally, with definite areas of responsibility. Tech has one: John Conley, who is in charge primarily of business affairs, although Johnny Owens works closely with him, and Carole Baker is in charge of the ticket office.

Tamburo said he would consider adding one person to the administrative staff.

At Illinois, Tamburo's designated areas were supervising facilities (golf course, ice rink) and tickets and sports information.

Tamburo, asked about women's athletics and his thinking, said, "I'm a firm believer in women's programs. The opportunity for young ladies should be exactly the same as the young men. I look for a well rounded (women's) program although right now they are separate.

"I will cooperate with the women's program, and I'm sure they want to cooperate with us."

The programs are combined at Illinois, and concerning such a move here, "We found that we have eliminated a lot of

The Future...

AS HE SAT at the front of the assembly room—a row of tape-recorders and microphones facing him—Dick Tamburo did not resemble a sprinter, nor a man given to panic.

But Tamburo nodded, then admitted to attributes which carried him through such diverse situations. His words expressed what his emphatic nod had only hinted: "It was fast... It was hectic."

Polite laughter interrupted the two short sentences, but the short burst of laughter was a rarity in the session Wednesday afternoon. Those who had gathered in the Tech meeting hall had not come to laugh, but to listen, as Tamburo outlined his qualifications, his aspirations, and his evaluations of the Raiders' athletic department.

It was his department to direct now, and the assembled group of news gatherers wanted to know how he planned to confront the situation.

The words he expressed—with the exception of the "fast... hectic" remark and another short aside—were uttered in the same serious vein as they were received. This was not a session for frivolity, but for interest.

Through slightly tinted, horn-rimmed glasses, Tamburo peered out as his questioners, responding to every request as one who was not only used to such sessions but one who had considered the points in advance. In short, Dick Tamburo had done his homework; he could see what he needed in the future and appeared to have plans for meeting such needs.

After eight years as assistant athletic director, his answers indicated he felt he was prepared to enter the kitchen. The heat will come in the form of challenges, challenges he appears ready to accept.

IN THESE DAYS and times, athletics is no different from private business, gov-

Bullets Edge Sonics For NBA Title

SEATTLE (AP) — The Washington Bullets, led by Charles Johnson and Bob Dandridge, upset the Seattle SuperSonics 105-99 Wednesday night to win the first National Basketball Association championship in the history of the 17-year-old franchise.

Johnson and Dandridge scored 19 points each for the Bullets, who stunned a capacity crowd of 14,088 by bringing the Sonics' 22-game winning streak at the Seattle Center Coliseum to an abrupt end.

It was the 12th time in the NBA's 32-year history that the playoff finals went to the seven-game limit, creating a winner-take-all situation of 48 minutes of basketball to determine the league champion. The veteran Bullets, whose starting five has 36 years of pro experience to 17 years for the Seattle starters, were up to the challenge.

They had avoided elimination on Sunday when they routed the Sonics 117-82 at Landover, Md., to even the series at three victories apiece. Wednesday night, despite playing on the road as five-point underdogs, the Bullets picked up where they left off. After a tight first quarter, they dominated the next two periods to lead 79-66 going into the final 12 minutes of play.

Each time Seattle tried to come back, the Bullets were able to turn back the threat. Seattle closed to 98-94 in the final two minutes before Mitch Kupchak hit a three-point play with 1:30 to go.

Fred Brown sank a free throw and hit a bank shot and Paul Silas hit a layup to bring Seattle within 101-99 with 18 seconds left. But six seconds later, veteran center Wes Unseld sank two free throws to clinch the victory.

Dandridge's layup with four seconds left closed out the scoring.

It was a team effort as six Washington players scored in double figures. Tom Henderson and Unseld scored 15 points each. Kupchak had 13 and Elvin Hayes 12.

The victory ended 10 years of playoff frustration for the Bullets, the only team to make the NBA playoffs every year in the past decade.

Twice before they had been to the finals, only to lose in four straight — to Milwaukee in 1971 and Golden State in 1975.

But this time the Bullets were not to be denied.

"I don't think it's fair to burden this team with the failures of the past," Bullets coach Dick Motta said during the playoff finals.

'Casey' Claims Credit

By "CASEY" THE PITCHER
as told to
TOM HALLIBURTON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
My name is Casey and I'm a pitcher at Monterey. You never get to write about me in the actual games but I work on the mound in practice games and workouts and I'm really hard to hit.

I'm the reason Bobby Moegle still coaches baseball here. Just ask him! If he had to go out and throw batting practice every day, he would have gotten his arm out of the coaching business long ago.

I'm so hard to hit that some of the guys call me Nolan instead of Casey. I can throw the 75-to-80 mile an hour fast ball. Then if Monterey's fixing to face a real hummer, I can gear up and throw it 90 and 95 miles an hour every couple of seconds. I can stay out there all day and throw thousands of pitches and still come back strong the next day, too. There's not many guys in the big leagues who can do that.

Moegle and assistant coach Mike Crutcher get all the credit for developing these guys like Jeff Harp and Eric Voyles into great hitters. But that's a bunch of baloney. I'm the guy who made those hitters learn how to hit a hard fast ball. Most of them wouldn't be able to get the bat around this weekend against those flame throwers at state if it wasn't for me.

All those Monterey guys left town yesterday so I can do a little bragging and they won't come and beat me up. Don't tell anybody but I've struck out Bieger and Ron Reeves a bunch of times when I was throwing junk. And when I really cut it loose, they might as well try to bunt their way on base because they won't make contact with a big swing.

A little bit about my statistics, if you please. I weigh about 88 pounds but without my steel legs. I only weigh about 65 pounds. I have a couple of wheels made from Urethane which grips the ball the way most pitchers grip the ball. My wheel never goes flat. You never need to stick me into a whirlpool so that I can pitch in a couple of days. All you have to do is clean my wheels periodically.

One time I threw more than 500 pitches in one hour and a coach charted each pitch. He said 96 per cent of them were strikes. Bet you Ron, Reeves and Derek Hatfield can't do near that well. Bet you Tom Seaver can't either.

And my pitches aren't phony, either.

I can throw with the same amount of backspin or overspin and you can adjust me to get the exact rotation on pitches that you want. I'm trying to learn how to throw a knuckle ball but it's tough without any fingernails.

You're going to have to shell out nearly a thousand bucks to get me but I'm worth my weight in resin bags because I can throw so often and so hard.

I have an on-and-off button which regulates when I work. Then there's a couple of knobs to regulate my velocity and my height but they don't matter much. When I get my adrenal in flowing and I'm ready to compete, you can throw all those knobs into the dugout and let me hum.

Not only can I throw 90 or 95 per cent strikes but I can throw to spots. Up-and-in, low-and-away. I'm going to hit those corners without adjusting my throwing motion one bit.

The guys at school don't appreciate my greatness. Nobody does. If these guys win state, they will come home and get all the plaudits without thanking me at all. That's the way it goes when you're professional and under-rated and humble.

Don't you think I'm all three of those?

VALUABLE PITCHER—"Casey" the batting practice pitcher for Monterey, takes much credit for the Plansmen's drive to the state tournament this weekend. After Monterey left via chartered bus to Austin Wednesday, Casey gloated over his value to the team. (Staff Photo)

PRESENTATION—Tech's new athletic director, Dick Tamburo, is flanked by Regent Robert L. Pfluger, left, of San Angelo and Tech president Cecil Mackey at a press conference Wednesday. ernment, or picking dandelions in the front yard. Soon as you get one problem uprooted, another pops up right behind it.

In this sense, Tech is no different from the University of Illinois, where Tamburo currently hangs his fedora. And the challenging topics popped up at the press conference... money... women's sports... bringing in the customers... with practically ever question.

These are not problems which were waiting just for Tamburo; any man who stepped in to replace J.T. King—or King himself had he not taken retirement—would have faced the same concerns.

After a series of very successful football seasons, the Raiders appear headed for a less-than-sensational autumn. With heavy losses via graduation, Tech has been pegged for a second-division finish, its lowest level since 1963.

And this creates a challenge for Tamburo: How to get the people in the gates on Saturdays. Maybe this was one his mind as he spoke often Wednesday afternoon of his qualifications. He commented at one point that Illinois was operating in the red when he and current Illinois AD Cecil Coleman arrived in 1972. "We turned it around and have been in the black every year."

Tech has operated in the black under King, but it is Tamburo's challenge to remain there.

This prospect of promoting a below-championship-level team has to be coupled with the problems of the average fan. The fan has to weigh plunking down $8 a head to go to the stadium on Saturday against going to the grocery store for bread and milk and listening to the game on the radio.

It's called inflation, and it's a problem which won't go away by ignoring it.

THE NEW MAN also faced the questions of women's athletics as he faced the press Wednesday. This is an area which, presumably, the Regents and Mackey probed with Tamburo during the screening process, because it is an area which faces all ADs across the land.

And it will be one he will have to handle—in connection with the financial matter—whether he advocates consolidation of the two programs or continuation of the present format.

Sporting sports... basketball ticket sales. Southwest Conference matters. Tamburo will have to field the problems. There is a growing concern for the non-revenue sports such as golf and tennis, and if it has not already reached the Regents' level, it may in the future. These sports, if upgraded drastically, will take additional dollars.

Dwindling attendance at basketball games, despite the waiting list for tickets in the adult sections, will draw his attention. Is there a plan in his mind to dump all the old season ticket holders who buy but do not attend, or will he be able to promote the sport and bring those fans back into the Coliseum?

Tamburo, in admitting that his application and selection as Tech's new AD had been a fast, hectic procedure, inherits an outstanding athletic program, one at which the school—and King—can point with pride.

With that outstanding program goes challenges. If Tamburo hadn't thought he could handle them, he wouldn't have applied. He confidently handled that fast, hectic selection process; he appears ready and confident to tackle the challenges which loom ahead.

problems and have a lot of harmony and both programs grow by being combined.

Tamburo said his objective was an overall good program, based, as it is now, on emphasis on the revenue-producing sports of football and basketball.

"To have a good program, you have to have football and basketball... Basically, we want to keep the program going in the direction it is. Of course, you always look toward the Cotton Bowl (championship) type of thing.

"In the others, I'd like to be very competitive and be good. That doesn't mean we can be No. 1 all the time but be very, very good in the conference you're in.

"I'd sure like to be first in everything—everybody would.

"But we want a well rounded program."

In other areas of consideration:

The Southwest Conference: "I know Frank Broyles (Arkansas AD) from the late 50's when I was an assistant at Arizona State. I have met Darrell Royal (at Texas), and I have worked with Marvin Tate (A&M's assistant AD). Oh, yes, Bill Yeoman and I were at Michigan State at the same time, in the spring of 1953."

Size of programs: "Our budget at Illinois was about $3.3 million, paper budget. (Tech's is approximately $2.6 million.)"

Tech being known as a football school: "I don't see any changes in football. The rest of the programs, we're looking for bigger and better things (by) upgrading the rest, making everyone work a little harder to catch up."

Athletic promotions: "One aspect is merchandising. Definitely, without a doubt, we can promote (Tech and the SWC)."

Tech's facilities: "I am highly impressed. I can marvel at this (stadium) expansion King has made... the turf, the press box, the building (under construction) at the north end. I didn't get to see inside the basketball arena but (all facilities), there doesn't look to be a major thing (below par). Jake left them all in great shape."

Football scheduling: "I like; good, respectable teams, a good cross-section of the country, and I think you have this. To be very honest, I'd like to see some Big Ten teams. It gives the athletes a trip to the Midwest."

Tamburo will leave here this morning for Champaign, to attend the high school graduation exercises of his daughter, Tamara. He will be back in Lubbock for a couple of days next week but does not expect to be on duty here on a regular basis until about the last week in June.

The new AD was in Texas for a time, spending time in the Army at Fort Hood. This followed his collegiate playing days at Michigan State, where he was all-America at linebacker in 1952. He was an assistant coach at Arizona State 1958-66 and Iowa 1967-70. He held both offensive and defensive coordinator titles during his time at Iowa. He was named assistant AD at Kent State in 1971 and became assistant AD to Cecil Coleman at Illinois in 1972.

Vilas Survives Challenge

PARIS (AP) — Defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina survived a challenge from Chile's Hans Gildemeister 6-4, 2-6, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3 Wednesday to move into the semifinals of the $400,000-dollar French Open Tennis Tournament.

Dick Stockton of Dallas also moved into the semifinals with a surprising 5-7, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 triumph over Spain's clay court specialist Manuel Orantes, the No. 5 seed.

Sweden's Bjorn Borg, No. 1 seed and favorite here to win his third French Open title, had a day's rest after ousting American Roscoe Tanner on Tuesday.

In one of the most exciting, though not most arduous matches of the tournament, the unorthodox Gildemeister played a cagey cat-and-mouse game against Vilas using his deceptive two-handed forehands and backhands.

"Gildemeister had one very good shot — the forehand or backhand. It's the same shot," the 25-year-old Argentinian said after the 3-hour 35-minute match.

Funeral Set Today For Auburn Coach

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Funeral services will be held this afternoon for Auburn head basketball coach Paul M. Lambert Jr. at the Southern Illinois University Arena in Carbondale.

Lambert, 43, coached at Southern Illinois for eight seasons before taking the Auburn job in April.

He died of smoke inhalation in a Tuesday morning fire in a motel at Columbus, Ga., where he was helping conduct a clinic for junior high and high school coaches.

Before a packed center-court crowd that included Princess Caroline of Monaco, the 22-year-old Chilean mixed lobs and drop-shots in an attempt to penetrate the steady, backcourt game Vilas has honed with his coach, Ion Tiriac of Romania.

For a time, the strategy worked as it did in March when he beat Vilas in Davis Cup competition in his hometown of Santiago.

Gildemeister jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first set. But Vilas adjusted and came back to take the set.

In the second set the Chilean placed top-spin forehand drives in the back corners of the court, and with Vilas unable to hit put-away shots Gildemeister won the second set.

In the third set, as was true throughout the seesaw contest, Vilas kept to his baseline game and broke Gildemeister's serve in the first game.

His greater physical strength and better condition gave him control of the set 6-1 and appeared to give him control of the match.

But Gildemeister, with the crowd clearly behind him, hit tough cross-court passing shots and effective drop shots to fight back and win the set.

His strength failed him in the final set though, and the tiring Argentinian overcame erratic serving and weak volleys to take the set and the match.

Vilas and Stockton will meet Saturday on the next-to-last step toward the $48,000 men's title.

Big Scene Backfires On Holmes

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An attempt by challenger Larry Holmes, emulating Muhammad Ali, to upset Ken Norton has had a reverse effect in advance of their World Boxing Council heavyweight championship fight Friday night.

"It was unprofessional," said Norton, who was obviously angry because Holmes had upset his training schedule.

Even some in the Holmes camp felt Wednesday that the delay of a Norton training session the previous day had not brought the results Holmes had wanted.

Instead of being rattled by the tactic, Norton became more determined against a foe he says he dislikes on general principles.

Norton first thought of moving his training from the sports pavilion at Caesars Palace when Holmes caused a scene and a near fight by refusing to leave during a Norton workout Tuesday. But then the champion from Los Angeles changed his mind and continued working out at the scene of the scheduled 15-round title bout.

"I think he is stupid," Norton said.

If the champion needed any further motivation against the undefeated Holmes, it was provided in the incident at the training quarters.

"I'm not underestimating this guy," Norton said. "The question is whether he can take a punch, and can he punch back after that."

"I know he is at an emotional high and it might be an advantage for me to let him stay high. Eventually, he's going to make a mistake and get careless. Sometime in those 15 rounds," Norton continued, "he'll make some mistakes and I'll take advantage of it."

"I'll just do my job, work on his body. I think I'm a fairly good body puncher, but I can tear his head off, too. I'm not a devastating puncher, but I can wear him down."

Norton's workout was delayed an hour when Holmes first sat in the bleachers, then went into the ring to talk to the crowd over a microphone and finally approached Norton while the champion was skipping rope.

'Rerun' Set At Belmont?

NEW YORK (AP) — The Belmont Stakes Saturday will be a "rerun" featuring Affirmed, the star of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and his leading supporting player, Alydar.

At least that's the view of the Belmont in the eyes of Laz Barrera, Affirmed's trainer.

"You're going to see the same race you saw in the Preakness," Barrera said Wednesday. "They'll be battling in the end."

If you see a "rerun" of the Preakness stretch duel, you'll see a great horse race. If you see the same result — it was Affirmed by a neck in the Preakness — you'll see a thoroughbred racing first...two straight Triple Crown winners. Seattle Slew completed the Triple last year.

Three other 3-year-olds are expected to be entered Thursday, and none are considered to be the equal of the Big Two. They are Darby Creek Road, Noon Time Splendor and Judge Advocate. Barrera sent Affirmed through his final workout Wednesday and, with exercise rider Jose Iturrar up, the Harbor View Farm colt went five-eighths of a mile in 1:00.4, galloping out three-quarters in 1:15.5.

"The work was perfect," said Barrera. "It was even all the way." The eighth-mile fractions were 122.5 seconds, 251.5, 383.5 and 482.5.

Alydar will breeze three-eighths of a mile Friday. The Calumet Farm colt worked three-quarters in 1:12.5 and went out seven eighths in 1:26.5 last Monday.

Grimsley Nabs No. 10 As Expos Bop Padres 8-3

By The Associated Press
Ross Grimsley fired a six-hitter to become the major league's first 10-game winner and Larry Parrish hit a three-run homer as the Montreal Expos defeated the San Diego Padres 8-3 Wednesday night.

Earlier, Tony Perez hit his 301st career homer and Wayne Twitchell and Bill Atnolds combined for a four-hitter, helping the Expos to a 4-0 victory over the Padres in the completion of a game suspended Tuesday night because of a power failure at Olympic Stadium.

The Padres scored two runs against Grimsley, 10-2, in the first inning of the regularly scheduled game, on a single by Fernando Gonzalez, a walk to Don Reylected the Expos' scoring.

The Padres scored a run in the sixth on a two-out walk to Tenace, a single by Tucker Ashford and an RBI single by Dave Roberts.

Parrish's sixth homer of the year, however, a two-out shot in the seventh after a walk to Ellis Valentine and a single by Andre Dawson, clinched the victory.
Grimsley pitched his ninth complete game, tops in the National League, in 13 starts. He walked four and struck out six, and has won his four last starts, all complete games.

NCAA Track Meet Back On Schedule

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — A track and field team representing Division II of the National Collegiate Athletic Association will compete as scheduled in Mexico City June 15, the NCAA announced Wednesday.

Arizona State Drops Miami

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Hard-throwing Casey Lindsey of Arizona State scattered six Miami hits Wednesday night to win his second start in the College World Series with an 11-3 victory over the Hurricanes in a losers' bracket contest.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Lindsey, a southpaw who won the Sun Devils opener against St. John's, gave up only a run-scoring single and a solo home run to Randy Guerra and boosted his record to 7-1.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Lindsey needed relief help in the eighth inning when Miami's Rick Pazo singled and Ron Batters walked. Arizona State Coach Jim Brock took no chances and brought in freshman Ken Jones to finish off Miami. Jones gave up the third Miami run in the ninth when Tony Brewer tripled and a fielder's choice allowed the run to score.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Guerra, was brought in to relieve loser Augie Ruiz, 15-4, in the Sun Devils' four-run sixth inning. The Hurricanes committed two errors that contributed to three of the four Arizona State runs and the Sun Devils finished Guerra off by battering him for five runs in the ninth inning.

Arizona State Drops Miami

The Sun Devils took a 2-0 lead in the third, scored four runs in the sixth and five in the ninth.

Arizona State Drops Miami

In the last inning, singles by Greg Stahl and Steve Michael and a walk to Jamie Allen loaded the bases, and Guerra walked in a run by giving a pass to Hubie Brooks.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Bob Horner singled to drive in Allen, and Chris Bando boomed a double to the left field fence to drive in three runs.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Chicago knocked out Twins' starter Roger Erickson, 6-4, with their six-run second.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Ron Blomberg walked to open the inning and moved to third on a single by Bill Nahorodny. Alan Bannister drove in Blomberg with a single and Erickson hit Eric Soderholm to fill the bases.

Arizona State Drops Miami

A sacrifice fly by Thad Bosley made it 4-0 and Twins' shortstop Roy Smalley then booted a potential double play ball, which let in Chicago's fifth run and brought on Mac Scarce for Erickson.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Scarce gave up a two-run single to Henry Cruz and a run-scoring single to Blomberg before settling down to finish the game for the Twins.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Minnesota scored on RBI singles by Larry Wolle in the seventh and Smalley and Glenn Borgmann in the ninth.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Ken Brett and Paul Hartzell stopped Oakland on four hits with the California Angels topped the A's with a 4-1 victory in the first game of a doubleheader.

Arizona State Drops Miami

The victory was only the second in the last 11 games for the Angels, while the A's had their four-game winning streak snapped.

Arizona State Drops Miami

Brett, 2-3, made his first start since May 20 and only allowed singles to Taylor Duncan in the third and Jeff Newman in the seventh. Hartzell came on to start the eighth and yielded a Dave Reversing home run in the ninth for Oakland's only run.

Arizona State Drops Miami

The Angels chased loser Alan Wirth, 2-4, with three runs in the third. Ron Fairly

Arizona State Drops Miami

Bill Bonham not only wasn't certain who tossed him the game ball after the Cincinnati Reds' 9-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs. He wasn't sure if he deserved it.

Arizona State Drops Miami

"It wasn't one of my better games," Bonham said after scattering eight hits over six innings to win his first start against his ex-teammates. "But I thought about the situation and I decided I'd keep it."

Arizona State Drops Miami

Bonham, who went to Cincinnati in an off-season trade which brought Woodie Fryman to the Cubs, said several of the Reds had come to him before the game and told him that they would try to give him as much support as possible.

Trevino Looks To Third Win

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Lee Trevino may be gunning for the American national championship, but this week his objectives lie in the $250,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

"I'm like a duck," the bubbly Trevino said after a practice round on the 7,249-yard, par 72 Colonial Country Club

Connors Eases Into Quarters

BECKENHAM, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors was relaxed and carefree as he crushed Egyptian Ismael El Shafei 6-2, 6-2 to reach the quarter-finals of the Kent grass court tennis championships Wednesday.

Connors remains convinced that he is the man to stop Bjorn Borg's bid for three consecutive Wimbledon titles. And Connors appears physically fit to make the effort at the end of the month.

After Wednesday's easy third round win in 42 minutes, in only his third match since a blood disorder put him in a Los Angeles hospital two months ago, Connors said that he felt happier about his game each time he went on the court.

"Things could not be better at the moment," said the 1974 Wimbledon champ and twice a runnerup since. "Coming here after just five days of practice since I got better left me feeling a bit apprehensive but it has all gone much better than I expected."

Connors was at the club in time to see fellow American Stan Smith turn in an equally formidable performance to beat Ray Kelly of Australia 6-1, 6-4 in the second round.

Smith, who won Wimbledon in 1972, had a third round match with another little known Australian, Charlie Fawcett, but persistent rain, which made the grass treacherous, held up the match at 1-1 in the opening set.

In the women's singles third round, top seeded Evonne Goolagong of Australia beat Silvana Urros of Spain 6-0, 6-0.

course. "Every day when I wake up, it's a brand new world."

"I just take it a day at a time. Sure, I know the (U.S.) Open is coming up next week, but right now I'm more concerned about winning this tournament. When this one is over, after they pay off on Sunday, then I'll start thinking about the Open."

Many of the game's top attractions are skipping this event to concentrate on practice sessions for the National Championship in Denver next week, but Trevino is among the handful of stars who feel that competition rather is the best preparation.

"I usually don't play well after taking time off," he said. "I practice as much as anybody, beat those balls for hours. But it ain't the same thing. You're not under the gun on the practice tee. You don't know what your game is until the heat's on—and that happens on the golf course."

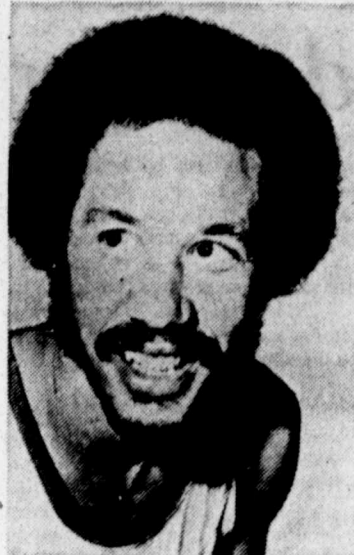

Trevino, twice a winner of this event, is one of the leading candidates for the $50,000 first prize that goes to the winner of the tournament beginning Thursday. He won the Colonial National Invitation with a record score in Fort Worth last month and has recorded three second-place finishes this year.

His chief opposition could come from South African Gary Player, who started a string of three consecutive victories with a triumph in the Masters earlier this season. Player has won $159,543—the most he's ever achieved on the American tour. He is competing in his 13th consecutive event.

Other 1978 tournament winners on hand include Jim Simons, Gil Morgan, Miller Barber, Barry Jaekel, Lon Hinkle, Jerry Heald, Mac McLendon, Spain's Seve Ballesteros, and big Andy Bean, who took last week's Kemper Open.

Also in the 150-man field are defending champion Al Geiberger, who composed that landmark, 13-under-par 59 on his way to the 1977 Memphis title; Dave Hill, a four-time Memphis winner; and Johnny Miller.

CBS-TV will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

HENRY BIBBY

NBA Stars To Join Ralls Clinic

RALLS (Special) — Three National Basketball Association stars and an assistant coach from UCLA will be instructing at the Northwest Basketball Clinic set for June 12-16 at Ralls High School, according to directors John Jones and Bob Busby.

Working at the week-long affair will be Don Ford of the Los Angeles Lakers, Henry Bibby of the Philadelphia 76ers, Dennis Awtry of the Phoenix Suns and Jim Harrick, an assistant coach under Gary Cunningham at UCLA.

Bibby, an all-America guard at UCLA, was drafted by the New York Knicks in 1972, playing in the second back court with Earl Monroe and Walt Frazier. He was later dealt to the 76ers.

Ford, a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara, is a defensive specialist for the Lakers, pulling down 33 rebounds as a rookie. He averaged 9.6 points during his initial year.

At 6-11, Awtry will be the tallest instructor at the camp. A former all-American at Santa Clara, the Phoenix centers drafted by the 76ers in 1970.

Harrick is presently serving as the recruiting coordinator as well as an assistant varsity coach for UCLA. It is his first season with the Bruins.

For more information about the clinic, contact Jones at 806-253-2822, or write, Box 581, Ralls, Texas.

COACH NEEDED

WELCH (Special) — Dawson High School is searching for a girls basketball coach who can also teach social studies. Supt. Van Carr announced. Carr can be reached at (806) 489-7462 or by writing Box 8, Welch.

British Weed Out Yanks

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Frank Campbell and Ted Ferguson became the long survivors among 79 Americans Wednesday after three rounds of the British Amateur Golf Championship.

All eight seeds — four Scots, three Englishmen and a South African — also are among final 32.

Campbell, the 52-year-old veteran from Huntsville, Ala., gained a 1-up victory over Philip Jonas, the South African 30 years his junior.

Campbell, who readily admits he is past his prime, tuned up for this event by arriving in Britain two weeks ago and playing as many courses as he could fit in from Wentworth in the south to St. Andrews in the north.

But he had to fight hard to get past Jonas.

Campbell started solidly and got to the turn 2-up with a string of pars. Then Jonas picked up a hole on the 11th and strove desperately for another to crack the American's composure.

But, in his eagerness, Jonas started to spray his tee shots around the fairways. Campbell, still playing solidly, was always under pressure, but refused to wilt.

From the 12th hole on, he hung grimly to his shaky lead and managed to salvage halves from all the remaining seven holes to inch his way into the fourth round, in which he meets Scotsman Peter Buchanan Thursday.

By contrast, Ferguson, from Midland, had a relatively easy passage into the fourth round. He had a first round walkover when his opponent withdrew just before the tournament, beat Ricardo Rossi, the Brazilian champion by one hole in the second, then brushed aside Richard Welch of Northbrook, Ill., 3 and 2 in the third.

In the fourth round he plays David Suddards of South Africa who disposed of John Eller from Winston-Salem, N.C. 3 and 2 in the third round.

The day had started disastrously for the Americans. With four already through to the third round and 15 still to play second round matches, their hopes ran high.

But only four of that 15 — Tom Matey, Bill Ploeger, George Mark and Craig Routhier — won in the second round Wednesday and they all stumbled to third round defeat.

Matey, from Glencoe, Ill., was beaten 1-up by Doug Roxburgh, the 1974 Canadian champion. Ploeger of Columbus, Ga., had a second round win over Roman Taya of Spain but then lost 3 and 1 to Mike Sarsfield of England.

Mark of Portland, Ore., beat Gerry Nelson of Leesborough, Ind., then suffered a 3 and 2 loss to Scotsman Laurence Gray, and Routhier of Deersfield, Ill., was demolished by Allan Brodie, the Scottish champion and second seed, 7 and 6.

Meanwhile, defending champion Peter McEvoy, the Anglo-Scot who is favorite to repeat, continued his winning ways with a 6 and 5 win over England's Roger Chapman. Gavin Levenson, the South African, beat England's John Carroll 3 and 1 while Peter Deebie and John Davies of England and Gordon Murray, Ian Hutchison and Paul McKellar, all of Scotland, had easy third-round wins.

Rookie From Roswell Confident In LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Rookie Nancy Lopez shrugs off the pressure of accomplishing a fourth straight victory in the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Championship opening today.

"I don't really think about comments made about four in a row or anything like that," said Miss Lopez. "You come out and do your best. What happens, happens."

With a victory of an international field of 114 over the Nicklaus Golf Center course, Miss Lopez would:

—Reach $100,000 the earliest in a single season for a women's pro. Judy Rankin hit the plateau in July on her way to a record $150,000 two years ago.

—Extend her own rookie record to six tournament titles. No other rookie ever had won more than one event.

—Move within range of the men's tour rookie record of $153,000 Jerry Pate established in 1976.

Miss Lopez has earned the respect of her counterparts.

"She's in a class by herself," said Carolyn Kertzman. "There are us humans and then there's her."

Miss Lopez' streak has stolen much of the attention from Jan Stephenson, one of the tour's glamour queens. Miss Stephenson can understand why.

"When you're 21, you feel all your putts will go in. If she keeps her confidence, she will be good for a long time. Right now it's the youth thing for her."

Miss Lopez, the daughter of an automobile body shop owner in Roswell, was asked if she has any flaws in view of her streak that has carried her earnings to more than $96,000 this year.

"I can't analyze myself," she said, adding, "I used to suck my thumb when I was little."

The Nicklaus Center plays a long 6,312 yards and for that reason Miss Lopez and JoAnne Carner, last week's victor in Toronto, are expected to duel.

Both are big hitters. Both should score well on this new permanent home for one of the two women's majors.

Miss Lopez had whipped her 39-year-old rival on two successive weeks before Mrs. Carner blitzed the final round of the Toronto tournament with a career low of 64.

"I just wish Nancy were here," said Mrs. Carner after her triumph. She gets that wish this week.

Chako Higuchi, the short-hitting Japanese pro, defends her title against the strongest field of the year. Fifty-six of the leading 57 money winners are assembled for the 72-hole event.

Portions of the last rounds Saturday and Sunday will be carried by NBC-TV. First prize is $22,500.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I bought 50 shares of a high-priced stock that has since fallen a total of $600 in market value. Would it make sense to buy more at the lower price to cut my loss? Or should I sell out and take a tax loss?

A. It would be pointless to discuss either maneuver without knowing: 1) the name of the stock, and 2) your investment needs. But a few points can be made:

You do not cut your original loss by buying more stock at a lower price. You are increasing your investment. If you paid $4,000 originally for 50 shares of an $80 stock and it has since fallen to 68 you now hold $3,400 worth of stock. If you now add another 50 shares at 68 you still have that paper loss of $600, but have increased your investment to $7,400 ($4,000 plus $3,400). True, if the stock comes back, you break even much sooner than if you had merely retained only the original 50 shares. But there's no profit in the proposed 100-share holding until the stock comes back to above 74.

As to taking tax losses: that should always be considered—at least up to the amount which can be used to offset earned income plus any previously taken stock market profits. However, if you still like the stock and hope for recovery, there isn't much point to taking losses so early in the year. But keep it in mind as a November-December maneuver.

Q. Please explain "bid" and "asked." I've been buying counter stocks. Recently, I bid $4.25 for a stock quoted $4 bid, $4.50 asked and didn't get the stock. I finally paid $4.50, but if I had to sell immediately I would get only $4. Why such a spread?

A. A "bid" — on any market—represents the highest price would-be buyers say they are prepared to pay. An "asked" is the lowest price would-be sellers say they are prepared to accept for their stock. In your case, you broker, shopping around, could find no stock being offered at $4.25 a share. So your first bid of $4.25 went unanswered. When you raised your bid to $4.50, sellers appeared.

There is no way anyone can decide whether a half point is a reasonable spread or not. Spreads are determined by the relative willingness of buyers to buy vs. willingness of sellers to sell. It's no different from your offering an auto dealer $5,000 for a car and his insisting on $5,350.

Q. I am an employed widow who has bought a condominium with a $29,500, 29-year, 5 3/4 percent mortgage on it. I plan to sell my old home for $60,000. When I do, should I pay off the mortgage on the condominium. It costs me $296 a month.

A. I can't imagine why anyone would want to wipe out a 5 3/4 percent debt any earlier than required. That's a cheap loan, a borrower's delight. The money you get for your old home can easily be put to work earning 8 1/2 percent. Why use it to wipe out a 5 3/4 percent debt? (One word of caution, however: Make sure of your figures. In my mortgage book, a 29-year $29,500 loan at 5 3/4 percent requires monthly payments of only $179.07. Are you sure your mortgage interest rate is only 5 3/4 percent?)

Q. I am an elderly retired man with a substantial block of E bonds. To avoid estate problems, I would now have to redeem them all at one time, forcing my income taxes to high levels.

A. Before you open yourself to all that tax liability in a single year, consult the E Bond Information Service, Treasury Department, Washington D.C. 20226 for possible alternatives. If you now want income from these bonds, you need cash in only part of them every year, paying the tax only on the accrual portion of the few bonds you cash.

SCM Corporation's Suit Against Xerox Supported By Court

NEW YORK (AP) — SCM Corp.'s partial victory Wednesday over Xerox Corp. in a five-year-old civil antitrust suit over alleged domination of the office-copier business raises a question that long has troubled anti-trust lawyers: What is a "relevant market?"

It's not sufficient for the government or a civil plaintiff to prove that a company has established a monopoly. To make a case, lawyers have to define exactly what is being monopolized or where the monopoly is taking place.

In the Xerox-SCM case, those issues weren't simple. U.S. District Judge Jon O. Newman wrote in one of a series of opinions in the case that the dispute involves 10,000 "separate allegations of fact."

SCM argued that Xerox put up "a patent thicket" that blocked it and other manufacturers from making copiers that use plain paper. SCM said Xerox should have granted it the license it sought in 1964 to use Xerox technology to make plain-paper copiers. Xerox countered that it was entitled to protect its technology and was no obligation to license its patents once they become profitable.

In its deliberations on the case, the federal court jury in Hartford, Conn., looked at four key questions on a list of about 75 that Newman gave them during the trial. The four queries had to do with which types of office copiers constituted a "relevant market."

The jury rejected SCM's claims that office copiers using plain and coated paper comprised a relevant market in 1964. In other words, SCM lost its bid to prove that the two types of copiers could be taken together as one industry.

But the jury said what defined the market in the 1964 didn't necessarily apply at other times. It upheld SCM's contention that the "convenience office copier" field — copiers using both plain and coated paper and plain paper — comprised a relevant market in 1969. In other words, plain-paper copiers competed with coated-paper copiers that year. Xerox had sought to show demand for one type didn't necessarily affect demand for the other.

The rejection of the 1964 claim means SCM may not be able to collect most of the $1.5 billion in treble damages it had sought from Xerox. But its victory on the other point leaves open the possibility it still can collect damages from the giant copier manufacturer.

The definition of a "relevant market" encompasses a number of points. Among them are: how much control over an item's price does a company have; how much of an inhibiting force is competition for an item; and how these conflicting forces are measured. But interpretations of these points have varied from year to year, and thus the meaning of "market" has changed from case to case.

In 1946, the U.S. Supreme Court said Aluminum Company of America had monopolized the market for virgin aluminum ingots, rejecting Alcoa's contention that the market actually should be broken down into two separate domestic industries and imports.

Ten years later, the high court took a different position. Du Pont Co. was charged by the federal government with monopolizing the market for cellophane. The government asserted that the market for cellophane was separate and distinct; it said users of packaging materials wouldn't substitute cellophane for foil or plastic. Du Pont countered successfully that the wrapping materials actively competed with each other and that the "relevant market" should be all packaging wraps.

"We conclude that cellophane's interchangeability with the other materials mentioned suffices to make it part of (the) flexible packaging market," the court held.

In 1966, the court changed its views again. The federal government charged that Grinnell Corp. and three companies it owned or controlled monopolized the market for property alarm services that are linked to central receiving stations.

Grinnell and the others took Du Pont's precedent and contended the government's case was faulty because the market actually was made up of the separate fire alarm and burglar alarm businesses.

In addition, the companies said local alarm bells and watchmen services should be seen as competitors to central station services. They added because the central stations only served points within a 25-mile radius, each locality should be seen as a separate market.

Grinnell and the subsidiaries lost their case. "We see no barrier to combining in a single market a number of different products and services where that combination reflects commercial realities," the Supreme Court held.

The court said it is impractical to break down central station alarms into fire and burglary categories.

Anti-Smoking Crusader Wins Fight With Railroad

PARIS (AP) — A French court ruled Wednesday the nationalized rail system failed to enforce its no-smoking regulations, and awarded $217 to an anti-smoking crusader and the same amount to his organization.

The case began two years ago when an unidentified smoker lit a cigar on a no-smoking car of a Strasbourg-Lyon train. Denis Valet, president of the French League Against Smoking Tobacco in Public, halted the train with a jerk on the brake cord and called the conductor. He was fined $10.80 for stopping the train and took his case to court.

Pessimistic Consumers 'Buying Scared' Because Of Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — It seems like a paradox: consumers are keeping up their purchases of homes, cars and major appliances because they are pessimistic about the future of the economy.

That's what the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center is noting. The researchers contend the situation isn't paradoxical at all but is just the result of people buying now, instead of later, to beat the next round of price increases.

"They're borrowing from future expenditures," says analyst Monroe Greenstein at the brokerage firm of Bear Stearns Co.

"For example, you might need a clothes washer and a clothes dryer but you really can do without the dryer now," said Greenstein. "Still, you'll buy both now instead of waiting."

This sentiment means homebuilders' and retailers' sales might be showing better-than-expected results now. But the trend also can spell trouble, because "future results may be worse than expected," said Greenstein. "After all, you've got to pay back those debts sometime."

People can't be blamed for fearing further price increases. According to the Labor Department, consumer prices rose 0.9 percent in April—a 10.8 percent annual rate of gain. The Federal Home Loan Bank reports, meanwhile, that an average new home now costs $61,600, compared with $53,400 a year earlier. The average effective conventional mortgage rate on new homes stood at 9.30 percent in April, up from 8.94 percent 12 months before, the FHLB says. In some areas, however, annual mortgage rates now reach or exceed 10 percent.

Continuing strong sales of homes in many areas is "most surprising," said Michael Sumichrast of the National Association of Home Builders.

"People seem to be buying homes despite the fact that mortgage rates are hitting 10 percent. A few months ago, we knew intuitively that the 10 percent rate would kill sales. But they still appear strong."

Sumichrast said, "it's like a friend told me last week: 'As long as home prices appreciate 15 percent a year and the consumer price index rises 7 or 8 percent, what's a 10 percent mortgage?'"

The buy-now-to-beat-inflation trend was analyzed by the Michigan center, which samples national opinion every month. According to the center's founder, Dr. George Katona, respondents are asked if today is "a good time to buy." If the answer is affirmative, they then are asked, "Why?"

In the most recent survey, taken in late May, "48 percent of all respondents said buying conditions were favorable in April because prices would only increase in the future," the center said in a report. "This represents the highest recorded proportion of respondents to indicate a buy-in-advance price rationale since these surveys were started in the early 1950s."

ICC Increases Freight Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission approved railroad freight rate increases Wednesday averaging 3.7 percent nationwide. But it rejected an industry request for a 7 percent hike on coal shipments to electric utility companies.

Instead, the commission said it would permit the railroads to file for a nationwide rate increase of 4 percent on utility-grade coal.

"Coal is a basic energy source and an increase not fully justified would have an inflationary impact," the board said in its order.

Jan Rosenak, deputy director of the ICC's Office of Proceedings, estimated that cutting the increase from 7 percent to 4 percent will save utility companies and consumers about $45 million in utility costs.

The ICC approved other increases proposed by the railroads. They amount to 4 percent on shipments between and within East and West regions and 2 percent on those to, from and within the South on most other commodities, including coal used in making steel.

Southern railroads generally are more prosperous than those elsewhere in the country.

The railroads estimate the new rates will generate about $672 million, offsetting in part some $940 million in increased costs.

The industry had asked for the new rates to become effective Thursday, but the commission set a June 17 date to give shippers adequate notice.

More than 200 protests on the proposed rate hikes were received by the ICC, many from electric utilities opposing the 7 percent coal rate increase.

Goodyear Plans Center In Ireland

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Goodyear will build a $5 million international research center at its industrial and film products plant in Craigavon, Northern Ireland, Goodyear chairman Charles J. Pilliod Jr. said Wednesday.

Construction of the 54,000-square-foot center will employ more than 100 persons and will begin later this year, the chairman said.

The new facility will be part of Goodyear's worldwide research and development organization, carrying out research and development of materials and machine processes used in producing industrial and film products, Pilliod said.

Research Proves Value of Fire In Range Control

A turnaround for skeptics who doubted the value of fire on rangeland has come about in the past 10 years, primarily as a result of the work of Dr. Henry A. Wright, recently named Horn Professor of range and wildlife management at Texas Tech University.

Wright joined the faculty at Texas Tech in 1967 with the charge to learn whether fire could be used to control brush in Texas.

"There was very little interest or hope for the use of fire in the state. In fact, organized two Horn Professors at their regular board session.

Many thought it was detrimental to land, and we had to be out of our minds for trying to use it," he said.

"Nationally skepticism was similar, although fire control had been used since 1880 in the Flint Hills of Kansas and since 1955 in the Southeast."

In the intervening decade, fire has come a long way and is looked upon now as a useful tool in range and wildlife management.

Wright has become the nation's foremost authority for prescription burning on grasslands. Beyond the grasslands, not only is fire occasionally unoppressed in the national parks in some instances, but prescribed burning also is used in several parks to reduce the amount of easily ignited underbrush.

So popular has the method of control become that Wright can no longer keep up with ranchers' requests for his expertise in burning. Consequently, two of his priorities have become the training of skilled manpower in prescription burning and the writing of a textbook with Dr. Arthur W. Bailey of Edmonton, Alberta.

He does not expect immediate results in either field. The book will take about two years to complete, he said, and it takes two or three years for an individual to gain confidence in the application of prescription burning methods.

Wright cited three reasons why the popularity of fire control is growing.

"Fire is gaining its rightful place in our management programs, partly because of high costs for chemical and mechanical treatments, but mostly because we know how to use fire to achieve many objectives in certain vegetation types, and it is more aesthetically pleasing after the first year following burn."

He makes it clear that fire is not a cure-all and not appropriate for all plant communities. It is important, he emphasizes, that burn prescriptions be carefully prepared to protect wildlife habitat and the grazing tastes of both livestock and game.

Wright's major work has been in mesquite-tobosa grass country and with juniper in central Texas. He also has done a great deal of work in sagebrush country.

He is working now with a "wildlife habitat following fire" study in South Texas. He has assisted with training programs in Boise, Idaho, Casper, Wyo.; James-town, N.D., and Denver at the requests of the Bureau of Land Management and the Fish and Wildlife Services of the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Forest Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

He is in the planning stages of writing prescriptions for the Soil Conservation Service in Texas.

Wright received a bachelor's degree at the University of California-Davis and advanced degrees at Utah State University. Before joining the Tech faculty, he worked as an assistant range specialist for the California Extension Service and as research associate for the Intermountain Forest and Range Experiment Station.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

PRESIDENT CARTER IS EXPECTED to announce that an additional 200 million pounds of meat will be allowed into the United States this year under renegotiated restraint agreements with major supplying countries.

Robert Strauss, Carter's chief inflation fighter, met with congressional agriculture leaders and told them the decision had been made to renegotiate the levels of meat imports, mainly beef.

Members from rural areas at the meeting told Strauss the decision "was a terrible one." They said the additional beef imports would not have any impact on what consumers pay for meat and instead would have a negative effect.

MEAT FUTURES AT THE CHICAGO Mercantile Exchange fell the daily limits in the initial reaction to the reports.

But exchange floor traders said the reaction was mostly psychological and in the opinion of Lind-Wallock Co. president Barry Lind "was foolish" in view of the percentage of the total U. S. meat supply that the increase represents.

He noted that it would amount to about two days of beef production or about one pound per person for one year.

Last week, for instance, beef production totaled 371 million pounds, against 448.7 million the previous week and 399.2 million pounds in the comparable week a year ago.

Packers Trading Co. representative John Kelly felt the market may have been looking for an excuse to sell off. He noted the huge open interest of 92,471 contracts had not decreased significantly recently and cited the possibility of a wash-out if the public becomes panicky.

THE ADDITIONAL MEAT IMPORTS would have an adverse impact on the U. S. balance of payments and affect decisions of cattlemen, members of Congress from rural areas said.

They said U. S. cattle producers would look on the decision as a sign that prices would be coming down and would continue to cull their herds, which would lead to a shortage of meat with resulting higher prices over the next few years.

Sources said the Carter administration was saying that renegotiating the restraint levels was different from lifting the restrictions completely. But the fact is the additional 200 million pounds of meat is just about all the meat which would be available for exporting to the United States.

THE ADDITIONAL MEAT IS EXPECTED to come mainly from Australia and New Zealand, since Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland told a press conference last week that those were the only two countries that had excess meat.

Bergland noted the president was given three options — suspend the restraint agreements immediately, renegotiate the agreements, or do nothing for 60 to 90 days and assess meat prices after that time.

Under the current agreements, Australian imports are 663.5 million pounds and New Zealand imports are 272.6 million pounds.

Foreign Acquisition Of Farmland Debated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the first rounds of an emotional fight against foreign acquisition of U.S. farmland will take place in the Senate on an unlikely topic: a tax treaty between the United States and the United Kingdom.

The treaty, supported by corporations, has been fought by state governments, who fear it would restrict their taxation of foreign businesses, and unions, who fear the treaty will encourage U.S. corporations to export American jobs to Great Britain.

Those groups strongly opposed the treaty in hearings last summer but "the farm angle didn't surface at that time," explained Milt Hakel of the National Farmers Union.

When the Farmers Union leadership became convinced the treaty could give foreign buyers of land more advantages than they already have, they joined the opponents.

The Farmers Union interest developed after Commerce Department officials estimated that at least $800 million in foreign investment in the United States last year — or 30 percent of the $2.5 billion total — went for purchases of farmland.

Tony Dechant, president of the Farmers Union, said, "While some may contend that foreign investment would be desirable because U.S. farmers have a capital shortage, we maintain that this influx of outside capital is disruptive rather than helpful."

He added that foreign investment "diverts up the price of farmland in the selected areas in which foreign investment is concentrated" in part because foreign owners can avoid taxes Americans must pay, buy land with devalued American dollars, earn more on the land and thus pay more for it in the first place.

The farm group's concern centers around Article 9, section 4 of the treaty, which would restrict state tax officials from a current practice in a number of states of requiring corporations doing business in the states to submit tax data on the parent corporation and all its subsidiaries.

The practice, called the "unitary business doctrine," is intended to prevent corporations from shifting businesses from state to state to avoid taxes. The treaty would allow British corporations to only submit tax data on business done in the states and states would have to take their word the tax returns were complete.

Corporations have failed for years to get Congress to outlaw the "unitary business doctrine," and the British tax treaty, if it is ratified in its current form, would be the first victory for the corporations.

Even tax experts who argue the corporations have a good case say the treaty is not the proper forum to discuss the changes.

Meat Import Rumors Give Cattle To Bears

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Live cattle futures plunged the daily limit of 150 points across the board on Wednesday to one-month lows before ending 40 to 150 lower on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

January posted the only limit decline at the close. Sales were 31,845 contracts. A commission house with cash hog connections was a late buyer.

Weakness stemmed from an expected increase of 200 million pounds in U.S. meat import quotas. Early in the day the market gained 122 points on light runs and kill along with higher cash cattle.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 89 1/2 to 91 cents per pound, a two-week low. Cash cattle were steady to up $1 with top at $60.75 per hundredweight in Omaha.

Slaughter was estimated at 133,000 head. The six markets expect 10,500 head to arrive today.

Feeder cattle futures slumped the daily limit of 150 points across the board before finishing 70 to 130 lower, led by September. Volume was 3,439 contracts.

Court Denies Group Records Disclosure

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An attempt by a San Antonio anti-poverty agency to force delivery of documents given to a county commissioner and accusing it of illegal conduct failed Wednesday in the Texas Supreme Court.

The court refused to consider the appeal of Economic Opportunities Development Corp., Inc., from rulings of lower courts that refused to order Bexar County authorities to release the document.

Former County Commissioner Albert Bustamante received the affidavits and other documents from persons accusing the community action agency of wrongdoing. The subject matter of the documents was reported in local newspapers in May 1977.

When the anti-poverty agency asked Bustamante for copies, he said he had delivered everything to the U. S. General Accounting Office and the FBI.

In upholding the refusal of a trial judge to compel disclosure of the documents under the Texas Open Records Act, the San Antonio Court of Civil Appeals said Bustamante couldn't provide what he didn't have.

The appeals court said that "to require that office to furnish copies of the documents that are no longer in that office would be to require an impossible act."

Bustamante has resigned as county commissioner and is the Democratic nominee for Bexar County judge.

The high court also upheld establishment of a San Antonio Savings Association branch in New Braunfels.

It said it would find no reversible error in an Austin Court of Civil Appeals ruling that Savings and Loan Commissioner W. Sale Lewis acted properly in approving the branch.

In another case, the court said Lone Star Gas Co. is not entitled to a refund of $809,000 in state and local use taxes paid on 200 miles of foreign-made pipe.

Lone Star sued for recovery of the taxes on the pipe used in its pipeline from Pecos County to Cedar Hill in Dallas County.

The court said storage and use of the pipe in Texas made Lone Star liable for the tax.

Attorney General John Hill said the ruling's importance would extend far beyond the taxes collected from Lone Star.

"The long-range effect... is to produce millions more in additional tax revenue for the state," Hill said.

He said there are three similar cases involving $1,454,000 now pending in district courts.

The court said that when an item is stored in Texas for any period of time, it is subject to the use tax even though bought out of state and subsequently used for a non-taxable purpose.

Civil Service Bill Adds Job Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amendments aimed at curbing potential White House manipulation of top federal jobs were attached Wednesday to President Carter's civil service revision bill by a Senate committee.

The sponsor of the amendments, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said they are to protect top federal managers from partisan political treatment by any administration.

The bill's broad discretion to demote, promote, or even remove career persons from the elite corps of senior executives "must not be used for political purposes," Stevens said.

"Whether it is a new Republican or Democratic president, he brings in with him people who believe that new brooms ought to be able to sweep clean and you ought to have a bunch of 'yes' men around you," Stevens told the Governmental Affairs Committee.

"That's exactly what we don't want to have," he said. "We want to have senior executives who have background and knowledge in the government to stand up and tell a new group where they are going wrong."

Stevens' amendments would affect the part of Carter's proposal that would create a Senior Executive Service of top federal managers who would hold the most prestigious non-political jobs in the government. Their appeals of transfers, promotions or demotions, however, would be much more limited than those provided rank-and-file federal employees.

Breeder Reactor Ties Senate Panel In Knots

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy Committee deadlocked Wednesday on the question of the plutonium-producing Clinch River breeder reactor, rejecting proposals both to kill the project and to keep it alive.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the committee chairman, said later he expects the panel to resolve the impasse by sending the measure to the Senate floor without a recommendation.

"This issue will have to be decided on the floor, and I predict the Senate will vote for some kind of ongoing breeder program," said Jackson, who supports the project.

President Carter has been trying to kill off the Oak Ridge, Tenn., project since taking office, but congressional supporters of the facility have managed to find ways of frustrating his efforts.

The Senate panel first rejected, 13-6, a motion by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., to allocate some $159 million to fully fund the controversial project as part of a $13-billion authorization bill for the Department of Energy.

Then members voted down, 10-9, a proposal by Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., that would have had the effect of terminating it.

Finally, an effort at compromise by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, also failed on a 9-9 tie vote.

Church proposed that Clinch River be given a go-ahead but that the president be allowed to halt it if he agreed to back an alternative breeder design — to be built under plans the administration would have to submit to Congress by March 31, 1981.

"This would deprive the administration of the argument that Clinch River is a technological turkey," said Church, a breeder advocate. The administration did not support his proposal.

Congress voted in 1977 to proceed with the project, on which construction is yet to begin, but Carter vetoed the bill. Congress then tried to revive Clinch River by putting funds for the measure in a major appropriations bill, which the president did not veto because it contained money for many other programs.

The administration has resisted spending the breeder funds, however.

Meanwhile, legislation that would fully fund the breeder is headed for the House floor and is given a good chance of passage.

The committee has been split before on the breeder issue and in 1977 also sent legislation containing the breeder program to the Senate floor without a recommendation.

Breeder reactors produce more nuclear fuel than they consume, thus offering the potential of nearly unlimited supplies of future nuclear energy.

But the type of nuclear fuel that would be "bred" in the Clinch River project is plutonium — suitable for use in atomic weapons.

Japanese Defend Whaling

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will continue its whaling operations "at any cost" and fight moves to reduce catch quotas, a Japan Whaling Association official said Wednesday.

Shigeru Hasui said there were no plans to increase planned catches. Japan ranks second in whaling to the Soviet Union.

Tiny Town's Library Comes From Very Little

WARD, Colo. (UPI) — Standing in front of the Ward Post Office, the careful observer notices a finger pointed upon the building. It points to the left.

The library is open, says a wooden sign hanging below the finger.

A narrow footpath along the left side of the wooden frame post office leads along a grove of spruce and aspen trees. In the rear is a door with a gray sign nailed above. It reads: Ward Public Library.

Readers of this sign would find themselves in a hollow of the Rocky Mountains in Northern Colorado — 9,253 feet above sea level.

Above the town, on Colorado 72, cars speed around a curve, the occupants seeing only a few chimneys and rooftops of the mountain village.

It's a short drive down a curving dirt road into the town, past the Gateway Glacier general store and up a hill to the white post office with the flag flapping atop the silver pole.

You cannot hear the noisy flag from inside the library. Sitting in an old hard-back chair with a leather seat, you hear only the faint tapping of hot water in the old iron radiators.

There was no library in the summer of 1973, when a wanderer named Barry Levas visited Ward. He soon left, and a short time later, 800 books arrived in the town by mail. The postage had already been paid by Barry Levas.

In June of that year, Greg Tebrich, a poet, came to live in the old mining town and found 25 boxes of books in a small, abandoned cabin.

"I had no idea what they were for, but I decided we needed some shelves," said Tebrich. "I took all the books out and put them on the shelves; that's when a medical school friend of mine came by and helped me sort them into subjects."

Until the end of that summer, Tebrich and some friends used the collection as a private library, charging $1.25 for usage. The cabin had a potbellied stove, and the librarian on duty brought his own wood.

The idea of a public library occurred. A town referendum gave Tebrich a few hundred dollars for the project. The next April, Tebrich packed up the books and moved his library to the tiny room behind the post office.

There was no heat during the winter of 1974 and the library was closed, "except by appointment."

The library's wooden beauty was first seen one day in the summer of 1975 through the eyes of Jean Pless, a young artist and carpenter of Ward who was given the task of creating form within the four walls.

"All the materials were within walking distance," she said. "I wanted to stick to function and natural materials."

She had weathered boards with rusty nails protruding and rough-cut pine from a local mill; she found a grove of nearby aspen trees that had been bent into curves by the wind, and she came across pine logs lying here and there.

When her work was completed, the next summer, she had created a library of craftsmanship.

It is only 20 feet across, each way, with a high white ceiling. The sun banks off the snowy peaks of the Rockies into the eastern windows in the morning, and returns afternoons through the panes facing west. Puddles from snow-caked boots lie near the door on the varnished wooden floor.

Even a short man could strike his forehead on the loft of aspen logs eight paces straight back from the librarian's pine-wood desk. Underneath, two steps farther, are the children's books in wooden stacks against the wall.

Seven plank steps, hand riding along a curving aspen bannister, takes you top-side, your head inches from the ceiling. The right wall is lined with science books: anatomy, entomology, botany, medicine. One book on the fifth shelf catches the eye: "Diseases of the Foot."

A second section, in a small enclave hidden by a map of South America tacked to a divider, are books on language, psychology, history and political science. Snap on an overhead lamp and the light shows books on Richard Nixon alongside Churchill's six volumes of World War II.

Down below, Tebrich may be sitting at the librarian's desk, behind a row of green potted plants, writing poetry. Or Bob Bows, the town clerk, could be tapping out his business on a typewriter at a brown table facing a row of reference books against the west wall. Both men have just entered their 30s; like all but three of Ward's 125 residents, they are young.

Magazines and atlases are held behind strips of wood nailed into the backside of a bookcase to the left of the writing table.

The bookcase forms one side of an angular arbor; the bookshelves arched by aspen branches with clinging spider plants and a wandering jew. Inside, along five walls of books, are the essays of Montaigne and Bacon; Shakespeare, Blake, Conrad, Hardy, Tolstoy, Nietzsche, Plato, Steinbeck, Kipling, Rabalais, Twain, Kerouac, Joyce, Emerson, and more.

Step outside the arbor, and you face the east wall of modern, popular fiction; but on the top shelf is a category misfit — a row of 16 faded, brown books, a gift from Carl Walter, an old miner who died in Ward in 1973 and left his 1899 correspondence course in mining to the town. Walter's photograph, a small one, is framed and set atop the bookcase of Colorado history books under the loft.

The card catalog is in an old, brown cabinet flanking the popular fiction shelf. No Dewey system here: the cards simply list the library's 6,000 books according to categories — the books of each subject in alphabetical order.

For any of the 200 library card holders, or infrequent visitors, who aren't quite sure where things lie, Tebrich has things in order.

HEW Losses Less Than First Reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. on Wednesday lowered by $833 million an earlier estimate that his department wastes $6.3 billion to $7.4 billion a year.

Califano said half the $833 million was money that his inspector general's office mistakenly counted twice when it catalogued waste, fraud and abuse in the department two months ago. The rest of the reduction was due to revised estimates of the losses.

Califano, in a letter to all members of Congress, emphasized that the bulk of the wasted funds is money spent on programs beyond HEW's control, including more than $2 billion in what the agency considers excessive medical costs reimbursed by Medicare and Medicaid.

Congressional action is needed to achieve savings in these areas, he said.

The first annual report by HEW Inspector General Thomas D. Morris, released in early April, described the lost estimates as "a conservative measure of the extent of fraud, abuse and waste in key HEW programs."

The report stirred up controversy on Capitol Hill about HEW spending, slated to rise to $182 billion in fiscal 1979. The report estimated that $5 of every $100 spent by the agency was going astray.

Some lawmakers already have attempted to reduce the federal budget by $3 billion to reflect a waste at HEW. Califano said he expects more attempts to impose across-the-board reductions as Congress acts on a Labor-HEW appropriations bill during the next few weeks.

Such an indiscriminate approach shows a serious misunderstanding of the fraud, abuse and waste problem and the effective ways to deal with it," Califano said. He said "meat axe cuts will reduce the funds available for the millions of Americans who benefit properly from HEW programs."

He also sent the lawmakers copies of a lengthy directive to his department heads ordering them to meet targets to reduce waste by $1.1 billion in 1979.

Revision Would Up Jail Term

WASHINGTON (AP) — Criminal code revision approved by the Senate could nearly double the time persons convicted of federal crimes spend in prison, Congress was told Wednesday.

Maximum sentences for most offenses would be reduced under the Senate bill, but the actual time in prison could be increased because of sharp reductions in parole and time off for good behavior, the Congressional Research Service said.

The service, a division of the Library of Congress, delivered a study of the proposals to members of the criminal justice subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee.

The study did not take into account the possible effect of guidelines called for in the Senate bill. These guidelines would be established by a sentencing commission and judges would normally be expected to follow them. The research service said the guidelines could "somewhat reduce" total time in prison from the amounts estimated in their study.

Under a tentative version being considered by the House subcommittee, the Judicial Conference would decide whether guidelines were feasible and write them if it decided they were. The guidelines, if adopted, would be advisory only. The Judicial Conference is made up of federal judges.

Under the Senate bill, sentences would be served in full except in unusual cases in which the judge specified that parole should be considered because the prisoner was a good prospect for rehabilitation.

So-called "good time" would be earned at the rate of three days per month after the first year of imprisonment, which is less than can be earned under existing federal law.

The study said the changes could result in an increase of 63 percent to 93 percent in time prisoners would spend behind bars.

For instance, the researchers estimated that the actual sentences for marijuana offenses under the Senate bill would be from two to four months shorter than under current law. The average time marijuana offenders would spend in prison, however, was estimated to be at least 26 months.
