

Mahon Raps Cotton Dust Ruling

MAHON RAPS... Keith Henley, Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer... U.S. Rep. George Mahon of Lubbock Monday labeled U.S. Department of Labor cotton dust standards "highly inflationary" and "damaging to the cotton industry."

Mahon noted, however, that gin operators will be required to inform their employees of the health risks associated with exposure to cotton dust...

OSHA will be highly inflationary and impose a heavy burden on the cotton industry," said Mahon. "I had hoped some of the less expensive and more reasonable alternatives suggested by the Council on Wage and Price Stability would be adopted."

The veteran representative, who will retire later this year, said he has appealed to President Carter regarding the standards, as well as other top government officials, including Dr. Eula Gingham, assistant secretary of labor for OSHA...

Ag Association To Honor Smallwood

AMARILLO (Special) — Dr Charles M. Smallwood, dean of the West Texas State University school of Agriculture, will be honored at a commemorative barbecue by the WTSU Agriculture Development Association this month...

Smallwood has resigned effective June 30 to accept a position as dean of agriculture and home economics at California State University-Fresno.

Smallwood's new position with the CSU-Fresno will place him in charge of 1,500 students. The university has a total enrollment of 15,000.

White House economic advisers apparently persuaded Carter to order sweeping revisions in the engineering portion of the original standards because of the potential effect on inflation.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

A PURCHASING MISSION FROM THE Republic of China (Taiwan) will visit Memphis July 3 to conclude contracts for the purchase of 50,000 bales of cotton from U. S. exporters.

The mission also will sign an agreement with the ACSA and AMCOT (sales organization of U. S. cotton cooperatives) for the additional purchase of 500,000 bales of cotton worth $150 million.

THE MISSION IS HEADED BY H. K. SHAO, director general of Taiwan's Board of Foreign Trade, and is composed of 24 executives and representatives of government enterprises, corn, soybean and cotton spinner associations.

The team arrived June 9 for a 48-day tour of 16 states. The shopping list includes more than $287 million worth of industrial products, $94 million of farm produce, $200 million of nuclear fuel and $150 million worth of cotton.

U. S. EXPORTS TO ALL DESTINATIONS totaled 4,290,200 running bales up from 3,977,000 a year earlier, and outstanding sales for 1977-78 delivery totaled another 2,133,900 bales.

An increase in Russian cotton export prices of 2.5 to 3.5 cents per pound — depending upon currency levels — last week is expected to help U. S. cotton exports.

PART OF A SENTENCE WAS OMITTED in Sunday's column on cotton dust standards. The sentence was supposed to have read: The regulations are expected to include tolerance levels of 0.2 milligram of cotton dust per cubic meter of air in yarn production, 0.75 milligram in weaving, and 0.3 milligram in non-textile processing.

COMPLETE STOCK MARKET ANALYSIS BY MEX

Mart Records Slight Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed to record a slight gain Monday after three straight days of losses, but analysts remained worried over possible Federal Reserve actions and their effects on the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 1.65 to 828.62, erasing the first two hours' 4.24-point loss. Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled a moderate 25.5 million shares, down from Friday's 27.69 million. Losers outnumbered gainers by about a 2-1 margin among NYSE-listed issues.

The Fed's Open Market Committee meets in private on Tuesday, and the panel won't disclose exactly what went on at the meeting until four weeks have passed.

But "any change in Fed actions might show up at the trading desks late Tuesday or early Wednesday" if the central bank decides to tighten credit further by selling Treasury securities and draining banks' reserves, said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

The Federal Reserve may aim this week for higher interest rates as a way of curbing overly rapid money supply growth and checking inflation. But its actions could be restrained by fear of provoking an economic downturn.

One-Time James Bond Attempts Comeback

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If you were asked to name three James Bonds, you'd probably reply, "Sean Connery, Roger Moore and what's-his-name."

His name is George Lazenby, and he is trying to rebuild an acting career that started at the top in "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" and then descended to near-oblivion.

For the past three years he has been living in Hollywood and working here and on far-off locations. Recently he went to Singapore to appear in a two-part

"Hawaii Five-O" as well as Peter Bogdanovich's "St. Jack." He is part of the all-star cast in Universal's Operation Prime-time special, "Evening in Byzantium."

"The budget on 'Byzantium' is $4 million," he said wistfully. "I made four pictures in Hong Kong for less than that."

He plunked down $600 for a tradepaper ad to proclaim his career activity, and now he's hoping more roles will come. It has been a long road back from his James Bond disaster.

Ten years later, he still can't escape it. Bond producer Cubby Broccoli gave a recent interview in which he said Lazenby had been fired from the film series because he became too temperamental.

"Cubby claims I couldn't get along with the cast and crew," remarked the strikingly handsome actor. "There was only one incident; A tiff with Diana Rigg that was over in a few minutes. After nine months on a picture, something like that was bound to happen. Diana was an experienced actress and I had no experience, so she expected me to go along with whatever she wanted. I didn't see it that way."

George Lazenby was a small-town Australian garage mechanic with ambitions for something better. His clean features and muscular physique got him modeling jobs in London. "But I couldn't get an acting job without an agent and I couldn't get an agent without an acting job — Catch 22," he recalled.

When Sean Connery announced he would do no more Bonds, producers Broccoli and Harry Saltzman launched a search for a new 007. A former date and now a producer, Maggie Abbott, reached Lazenby in Paris and urged him to try out. He was interviewed, auditioned, tested and chosen.

"The first thing they did was put me with a vocal coach who told me, 'I would hate to be in your shoes,'" Lazenby said. "You can imagine how that made me feel."

"They wanted me to change my accent. They wanted me to walk like Prince Phillip. They wanted me to have the suave-ness and panache of Sean Connery — oh, how I got tired of sitting in a movie house and watching Connery movies over and over. There was no chance to inject any of my own personality in the role."

"As long as he has the sexual assurance and physical presence of Bond, we can dub his voice," they said.

While portraying the fearlessness of Bond, he was "scared to death inside," Lazenby admitted. He claimed to have no help from the director, Peter Hunt — "In fact, for the last six months of filming he wouldn't speak to me; he sent me messages through the assistant director."

Lazenby felt that he was caught in a power play among various elements of "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" and he was innocently used to perform the dirty work of others.

"I told the producers halfway through the movie that I wouldn't do another Bond," he said. "In fact, it's on the record in an interview I gave to the Daily Sketch. Saltzman couldn't believe it."

He collected $50,000 for making the film — Moore received $1 million for making the next one, "Live and Let Die"

— then was out of work for three years. He made his own film, "Unwind the Soldier," which failed to get wide distribution. He was about to team with Bruce Lee when the martial artist died. Lazenby stayed in Hong Kong to make other films, then came here three years ago.

"The first year was slow, and I used the time to go to acting school; I've got a lot of catching up to do. Any regrets about losing Bond? I suppose if I had stayed, I'd have $3 million in the bank now. But then I'd probably not have my wife and kids, and that's more important to me."

He is married to the former Christina Townsend of Rochester, N.Y. Their children are Melanie, 4, and Zachary, 3.

2 Carters To Visit Germany

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter will be taking a two-day trip to Germany in mid-July.

The first couple will be guests of German President Walter Scheel, on July 14 and 15, according to a White House statement issued Monday.

Carter had said he would attend an economic summit meeting in Bonn, West Germany, July 16 and 17, with the leaders of several European nations and Japan.

The Carters also plan to visit Berlin, the White House announcement said.

12-Year-Old Likes University Classes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Doug Stuart is voluntarily spending his summer doing what most University of Texas-San Antonio students dread — taking algebra, chemistry and calculus classes.

Stuart is 12 years old.

"The other students treat me like a normal student," said Stuart, who saved money from his paper route to take the summer school courses without credit.

The Hobby Middle School seventh grader added, "So far I like the chemistry lab the best. I plan to major in biochemistry because I like science a lot and I like helping others."

The youth's parents said their son first began to exhibit his unusual intelligence when he taught himself to read by the time he was three years old. He spent a lot of time "buried in books," said his mother.

The university allowed Stuart to audit the course after he met with an admissions counselor and his university instructors.

AUSTIN (AP) — An economist for a Texas consumer's group told the Public Utility Commission on Monday that energy stamps for the poor would "set class against class."

A commission staffer asked Frederick Wells what he thought about energy stamps to help the poor offset rising utility costs, and he replied: "I support it in theory all right, except it tends to set class against class with the working poor paying for the unemployed."

"Also, it has all sorts of administrative problems. Generally, I'm not very interested in that."

Wells lives in Bethesda, Md., but he spoke for Texas ACORN — Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now.

Earlier, two Washington economists, Charles King and John Rettenmayer, said each class of electricity customer should pay its own way.

Six commission examiners listened to testimony in the second week of a hearing on different ways to determine electricity rates.

Three days next week — including one night session — have been set aside for the general public to make known its views.

"There is a nationwide propensity to overcharge commercial and industrial users, especially the commercial class, and to undercharge the residential class," said King, representing the Texas Retail Association.

"One can write it off to politics, and that is the predominant cause," said King.

King said lifeline rates instituted in California to ease rising power costs on the poor have been "something of a disaster" in that "massive subsidies" have been obtained by raising non-residential costs.

Lifeline rates are supposed to provide at low cost the minimum amount of electricity necessary to maintain a modest quality of life. One problem in California, King said, is that vacation homes of wealthier residents also benefit from lifeline rates.

"Each class should pay its own way," said Rettenmayer of the General Services Administration.

He said if a class of customer must be subsidized, the money should come from a governmental agency and "not be hidden in service costs."

"Society is better off," he said, "if everyone pays his own way."

Can You Handle Work-Related Problems?

By Science Research Associates

Work is the source of many things and many people.

It provides most of us with money; it involves us in activities and contacts with other people that can be a source of personal satisfaction and fulfillment, or cause of discontent and unhappiness. At work, we experience all kinds of feelings — involvement, satisfaction, amusement, anger, joy, frustration, sorrow and boredom. All affects our emotional and physical well-being.

But above all, work provides for most of us the framework around which we organize our lives. It determines to varying degrees the style of life we lead — when we heat and sleep, where we live, who our friends are, what we enjoy doing, what we strive for, and what we buy.

Most of us spend at least one-third of our adult life working, traveling to and from work, and getting ready for work. The routine becomes so much a part of our existence that we take it for granted. We seldom stop to consider what we might do — or learn — that could make our working lives more satisfying and successful.

This installment of the SRA Coping Skills Test is intended to assess the level of one's skill in the knowledge of how to handle work-related problems. The questions are not intended to include all common situations that one might encounter in the world of work, but rather, a representative cross-section of such situations.

The questions may help you recognize that in all occupations people have the ability to learn skills and acquire information that can make one's work more effective and one's working life more satisfying.

Pick the best answer to each of the questions below; then turn to page 4, Sec. B to see how well you're coping in the world of work.

THE DAILY REPORTER,
BOX FSM 350, 50163

(Refer to the above ad for questions 1 and 2.)

- What does "salary commensurate with experience" mean?
 - The salary has been set by the employer.
 - The salary would be the same as your last salary.
 - The salary is set by law, based on the job description.
 - The salary would be based on your background.
- What should you do if you wanted to apply for the job?
 - Call the newspaper to find out the company's name.
 - Write a list of advantages and disadvantages of the job.
 - Send a letter and your resume to the address given.
 - Talk to your present employer about your qualifications.
- Lucretia has a new job for which she is paid the legal federal minimum wage that went into effect January 1, 1978. Her hourly wage is:
 - $2.35
 - $2.50
 - $2.65
 - $2.80
- In a job interview, which is the best way to explain why you were fired from your last job?
 - Give a truthful explanation.
 - Admit that it was entirely your fault.

 - The company president.
 - Which of the following would you NOT ordinarily be expected to mention on your resume?
 - A list of references.
 - Your educational background.
 - Your race.
 - A list of previous employers.
 - During an initial job interview, it is best not to concentrate your questions on salary, benefits, and vacations because:
 - The interviewer might label you as a worrier.
 - It would require too much time for the interviewer to explain these aspects of the job.
 - Information about salary, benefits, and vacations often is confidential until you are hired.
 - The interviewer might feel that your duties on the job are of secondary importance to you.
 - If the company you work for has a flextime system, you would most likely:
 - Choose when to begin and end your work day.
 - Get paid on an hourly basis.
 - Be subject to seasonal layoffs.
 - Work only four days out of every week.

Fearful American Family Eager To Leave Zaire

LUBUMBASHI, Zaire (AP) — A 14-year-old boy is stopped on his bicycle by soldiers who want to see his identification papers.

His father is stopped on the road by Africans who say they want to look at his watch.

The boy is afraid; his parents are afraid.

Finally, the children are sent home to America, and the parents stick it out, alone, afraid of what might await them outside their house, afraid of even the servants inside their house.

That is life for one American family in Lubumbashi, a month after rebels from Angola invaded this province and massacred about 100 whites and hundreds more blacks in Kolwezi, a town 150 miles up the road.

The parents, David and Janice, sit among the packing crates and suitcases. Their children, Robert, 14, and Kim, 8, are back in Connecticut, with a sister. David and Janice asked that their real names not be used. They don't want to draw attention to themselves.

They are from Denver, and like scores of other expatriate families, they are separated from their children because the Shaba war knows no innocents.

The rebels are now gone, but it is more than the rebels that David and Janice fear. Janice told how local Zairean soldiers stopped her son while he was riding his bicycle and asked him to produce identification papers.

It was then they decided to send Robert and Kim back to America. David and Janice are two of an estimated 130 Americans still living in Shaba province. Before the Kolwezi killings, there were twice that many.

"A lot of people are leaving here because they are afraid. It's mass hysteria and frankly, I think it is justified," said David, an engineer for a mining company.

"Our kids wanted to go. Their classmates were circulating horrible stories about Kolwezi and with the town full of military, we decided it would be best for them to leave.

"At least they are safe now with my sister," he said.

David said he and his wife were frightened by the attitude of his house servants following the Kolwezi killings. On several occasions, he said, he was just stopped on the road by Africans who said they wanted to look at his watch.

"They (the servants) turned cold and didn't work as hard," he said. "It was almost as if they were biding their time, waiting for something to happen here."

Fear of servants now is said to be common among expatriates in Shaba province. There were unconfirmed reports that some servants of Europeans took part in the killings and lootings which rocked the mineral-rich mining town of Kolwezi.

"When we first heard about Kolwezi, all we could think about was the people we knew who were there," Janice said quietly. "It all soaked in days later and we started worrying about ourselves."

David and Janice are in their late 30s, unpretentious people who live in a relatively modest style in Shaba's provincial capital.

Their home, in Lubumbashi's suburb, is a three-bedroom, ranch-style house with a manicured lawn, neatly trimmed hedge and a treehouse built by David for his children when they first came to Zaire four years ago.

The assignment is their first abroad, but David and Janice said they plan to leave in the fall when David's contract expires.

"We have to wait, otherwise I'll have to pay three months' salary to break my contract," he said. "But it is still hard to hang on."

FLIGHT TO SAFETY — A child and her doll are carried from a plane by a Red Cross worker in Brussels, Belgium, after their recent rescue flight from war-ravaged Shaba Province in Zaire. Some 130 Americans were evacuated from Zaire, but reports say an equal number stayed behind. Some families sent their young to safety, while others remain living in fear. (AP Laserphoto)

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Should an 86-year-old woman who appears somewhat anemic be taking vitamin B-12 supplements? I believe I heard that this is the vitamin some bodies cannot absorb. Is that true? The woman is my grandmother. She doesn't eat well, either. — Mrs. O.E.

From what you tell me, I believe it is wise for this lady to have some extra B-12. That is the vitamin involved in pernicious anemia. Some people lack the ability to absorb B-12 properly. Some are born with this defect. With others it can be a factor in old age. This possibility and the fact that she doesn't eat well anyway make supplements all the more advisable. She may need other vitamins besides and probably could stand a complete blood analysis to determine her general nutritional status — to learn, for example, if she really is anemic.

itchiness indicates a scalp infection, which medication might control. When it appears in adult life, alopecia areata usually subsides in a few months. It can be associated with tension and nervousness, and regrowth occurs when that cause is removed. In others it may be a reaction to medicines or drugs.

There is really no certain treatment for this. Corticosteroid drugs may produce regrowth, but they must be used for such an extended period that the therapy is usually not justified. Locally applied medicine is useless. I can't speculate on how long your condition will last without knowing the cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Does rheumatism differ from arthritis, and if so, how? — M.K.

Rheumatism is a catch-all for muscle and/or joint pains, including arthritis. The term means something only to the user. Arthritis is more specific. That refers to pain caused by disease of the joints proper. Rheumatoid arthritis is a disease of the joints caused by inflammation of the joints and adjacent tissue. It can be considered a form of "rheumatism."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Which do you advise taking in the morning before breakfast for a sluggish bowel — cold water with lemon juice, or warm water and lemon juice? — Mrs. F.G.

They are about equally effective with perhaps a slight nod to the cold water which may stimulate the intestines a bit more. But water doesn't remain cold for any appreciable length of time after being swallowed. Use what works best for you.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "The Way to Stop Constipation." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible. Copyright 1978 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read in your column that there are medicines that can be helpful for hypoglycemia along with the high protein diet. Please identify the medicine. My doctor says diet is the only treatment. — A.L.B.

I had in mind instances where the low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) is caused by glandular insufficiency, as in low thyroid, adrenal, or pituitary function. My reference was to hormone or tranquilizer therapy. In most cases, a diet high in protein with six daily feedings (three are snacks) and relatively low carbohydrate content is sufficient. My booklet, "Help for Hypoglycemia," discusses diet for this in detail. I cannot go into here. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor has told me I have alopecia areata. This has affected different parts of my body, mainly my scalp. The bald spots itch. I have had it for about three years off and on. Can you tell me more about this and the treatment and how long it will continue? — F.R.C.

A sudden patchy loss of hair (usually on the scalp or beard) is called alopecia areata when there is no obvious skin disorder or no systemic disease, such as one affecting the thyroid, for example. The

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag. South led dummy's three of spades at trick two. It was up to East to figure out his problem. It wasn't too tough for Spanish expert Rafael Munoz. South was trying to score a spade trick to add to three hearts and five diamonds. So Munoz went right up with his ace of spades. It was now up to him to go after the club suit and he selected the right club. He planked the king! West signalled by dropping his eight. It was a come-on signal, but it also was an essential play. Munoz continued with the five. West took the ace and led back the deuce, whereupon East was able to cash his jack and seven of clubs.

This hand was reported by Victor Mollo in his book "How Good Is Your Defense?" We take the ace of spades play as authentic, but wonder if someone didn't do something with the club suit to set up a standard but very difficult book position. East must lead the king. West must drop the eight.

UNLV Official Seeks More NCAA Staffers

DENVER (AP) — An official of the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, which had a bitter and controversial battle with the NCAA enforcement staff that spurred a congressional investigation, said Monday the association's enforcement efforts should be tripled.

"I may shock a few of you by saying this," said Bill Ireland, UNLV athletic director, "but I believe there is a crying need for beefed up enforcement on every level."

Ireland, his voice often rising with emotion, addressed a panel discussion on due process during the opening day of the convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

After one of the more highly publicized enforcement cases in history, UNLV was placed on a stiff two-year basketball probation last August and stripped of six scholarships.

A House subcommittee investigating NCAA procedures has held several public sessions and the probe is scheduled to end this summer.

"Part of our problem was the stigma of Las Vegas itself," Ireland said. "The garishness of The Strip, the gambling and the negative image the town has in the minds of many people."

Ireland then, indeed, surprised most of the 100 or so athletic directors with his next remarks.

"The NCAA Infractions Committee is one of the most distinguished panels of men in the United States," he said. "If I were going on trial for my life, I would want the NCAA Infractions Committee to hear my case."

Walter Byers, NCAA executive director, "is one of the greatest administrators in the United States. If I had his intelligence, I would be out of athletics getting rich, doing almost anything I wanted," Ireland said.

Bill Hunt, the NCAA director of enforcement, is a "very good friend of mine," he said.

"We were a victim of the system itself. I have talked with UNLV athletes, alumni and boosters and I do not, in all honest ty, gentlemen, believe we were guilty of the type of rules violations that should precipitate the type of penalty we received."

He indicated there was strong sentiment within the athletic community to "get Jerry Tarkanian." Tarkanian, the UNLV head basketball coach, was cited by the NCAA for numerous rules violations and the university was ordered to show cause why he should not be prohibited from coaching.

"I have actually been in elevators when the other people didn't know who I was and heard people say they hope the NCAA gets Tark. I once heard an athletic director from a southern university say, 'I ran an NCAA investigator off my campus and told him not to come back 'til he puts Jerry Tarkanian in jail,'" Ireland said.

He said there was a great deal of conflicting testimony given to each side in the dispute.

One player, he said, "urged on by a sensational press out to get Jerry said he received $10,000 from Nevada-Las Vegas. Then, when the attorney general of Nevada conducted an investigation and this player was brought into his office and put under a lie detector, he changed his story completely."

"But there was no effort made to resolve the conflicting testimony and the interpretation of the NCAA enforcement people was all the Infractions Committee had."

Ireland suggested television revenue could be used to triple the enforcement staff and budget. He said also the news media should be allowed to sit in on the appeal processes, which are very rigidly closed to the public.

"If a school truly believes it has nothing to hide and the NCAA truly believes it has nothing to hide, everyone should be happy to receive full press coverage of the proceedings," he said.

Ireland urged the athletic directors to work to acquaint themselves and their coaches with NCAA rules.

Look Out, Byron, You're Next

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Nancy Lopez bids to extend her all-time women's professional golf record to six straight victories this week and takes long range aim at the men's record—11 in a row by Byron Nelson in 1945.

Asked her thoughts about breaking Nelson's mark, the 21-year old rookie sensation smiled and said, "I'd love to. Let's see, what would I be up to after the next two weeks? Seven?"

If she wins at Hershey, Pa. this week and Noblesville, Ind. next week, she would extend her record to seven consecutive victories before she skips the Wheeling, W. Va. tournament.

Miss Lopez said the pressure during her fifth in a row at Locust Hill Country Club Sunday was the greatest she has endured during her torrid streak.

"No, the pressure at Hershey won't be what it was here," she said after her two-stroke victory over Jane Blalock and Debbie Massey.

One of the reasons behind Miss Lopez' record-shattering performance has been her putting. She did not have any three-putt greens in winning the LPGA Championship two weeks ago. She had only three 3-putters en route to her 214 total at Locust Hill. Her smooth, slow putting stroke has produced 16 rounds of par or better golf in her last 17 rounds.

Someone asked who taught her such unerring accuracy on the greens.

"Myself," she said. "Nobody ever gave me putting lessons.

"I used to cut the ball. I could get it in the hole but I had a terrible stroke. I knew it wasn't going to last. My stroke has gotten a lot better."

In the eyes of Miss Blalock and Miss Massey that may be the understatement of the year.

Miss Blalock said, "Twenty-footers are gimmes for her. She's the best putter I've seen in my life."

Miss Massey used to beat Miss Lopez regularly when they were both amateur standouts. But now Lopez' putting has pushed her past her longtime nemesis.

"I've never played with anyone who sank so many putts," said Miss Massey, the LPGA Rookie of the Year in 1977. "I don't believe anybody on the men's tour is putting as well or as consistently as she is now."

CONCENTRATION—Nancy Lopez, the rookie from Roswell, N.M., follows the flight of her shot, and the concentration has helped her win five straight tournaments on the women's pro golf tour. (AP Laserphoto)

IF YOU THINK Andy North was tired, as he fought off the gusty winds and tried to sink that final bogey putt for the National Open championship. . . my gosh, Andy, just think of all those folks in homes all across the country who had to sit through four hours of televised golf to reach that point.

Surely, some of you guys should have a little compassion for the armchair-types. Play it a little faster. . . use a cart. . . allow intentional passes on some holes, just as high jumpers and baseball pitchers can do in certain situations.

It could be that some folks probably never realized that there really were holes 1 through 13. Non-golfing spectators thought the pros just drew for scores for these holes and then everyone started on No. 14, "a tree-lined dogleg left with a bunker situated 190 yards from the hole, and a pair of sand traps guarding the approach to the two-tiered green. . . Hi, I'm Pat Brassie and I'll be your host for the fourteenth today, describing all the action for you on this beautiful spring day at Cherry Pits Country Club."

But, four hours of live telecasting—although not the first but at least an infrequent performance—doesn't set the Open apart. It's the action.

AS THE TALLY boards popped up over a view of a lake or massive gallery, the scores popped out as if on springs. These guys weren't tearing par shreds like they usually do. The leaders were even, maybe 1-under.

At times, pros have gone to the expletives deleted in trying to describe a U.S. Open site. Cow pasture was one term used a few years ago, if one recalls correctly. That was one of the terms clean enough to print.

But, through the years, Open officials have been criticized for their doctoring of courses. The fairways must be narrowed drastically, the rough allowed to grow a la the Big Thicket.

Greens are enlarged, the pins hidden behind big boulders or suspended over small lakes. Sand traps are magnetized and chipmunks imported to eat any golf balls falling in the fairways.

In short, the courses are made to resemble Lion Country Safari after a two-weeks rain.

BUT, DESPITE THESE random mutterings, the golfers—the nation's best and the mightiest in the world—keep coming back.

Because it's a major tournament, it's one they all want to win. It's said that what the champion takes home in check ($48,000 this week for Andy North), is but a drop in the sandtrap compared to what it will be worth in endorsements, speaking commissions, clinic fees and other business asides which come his way.

Even though the scores every year are about on the level with par, the fans keep coming out to the Open. And the networks this year saw the tournament as attractive to sell four hours of gusto, steel-belted, and comfortable golf shoes as well as divots and birdies and clinched fists.

The gripes will come on occasions, but, for the most part, the pros realize that the courses will be tough. It's a challenge for the real competitors—and few on the tour make it without that driving competitive spirit.

FOR THE FANS, the difference in scores is quite noticeable, but that surely didn't affect the gallery, in size or volume. It still cheered good shots, then collectively consoled the guys when they missed. And all because the competition continued.

The golf scores were higher, but all in proportion. There was no separation of the men from the boys along lines of the ones who approved of tough courses and those who did not. Jack Nicklaus took a double-bogey Sunday, and although his smile turned to a frown, he sucked it up and continued. He was playing the same layout as North, Tom Watson and the amateurs.

And, as he walked the fairways, the tube showed that North received the growing support and cheers from the crowd which was just showing its appreciation for his performance. Fact that he was not 15 strokes under regulation didn't lessen the applause.

That no record-low scores appeared on the board was no reason to knock the play nor the tournament philosophy of the governing USGA. If that group wants to continue to follow such a tough-course plan, then, right on.

The ground is level for the rookies, the Andy Norths, the Gary Players.

The competition's the thing—and they all keep coming back for more. . . fan and pros alike.
