Bakke Wins Admission; Minority Effect Argued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court opened the doors of a California medical school Wednesday to Allan Bakke, but said other whites still can be excluded from the nation's colleges under admission policies designed to give an advantage to minorities.

The 5-4 decision was a clear victory for Bakke, but without clear guideposts for the future use of quotas or goals in programs designed to aid minorities.

And, while the court ruling was on college admissions, its decision could affect minority hiring practices by hundreds of businesses and government agencies under affirmative action programs developed over the past 15 years.

That warning was sounded by Justice Thurgood Marshall, the court's only black, in an impassioned dissent.

"It has been said that this case involves only the individual, Bakke, and this university," Marshall wrote. "I doubt, however, that there is a computer capable of determining the number of persons and institutions that may be affected by the decision in this case."

The court's majority held that the University of California's medical school at Davis went too far in considering race when it refused to admit Bakke. But it said some affirmative action programs can properly be a factor in decisions on admitting students — without explaining what those programs might be.

The justices limited their six separate opinions to admissions policies in education and did not directly address themselves to other affirmative action programs.

The program dismantled by the court Wednesday had reserved 16 of the 100 seats in each of the medical school's entering classes for blacks, Hispanics and Asian-Americans.

Bakke's victory came in the court's main opinion by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. In that opinion, Powell held that strict racial quotas or goals are unconstitutional. "Preferring members of any one group for no reason other than race or ethnic origin is discrimination for its own sake," he wrote.

However, the four justices who joined Powell in the majority did not address themselves to the question of racial quotas and goals or constitutional guarantees. In their opinions, they said Bakke deserved admission to the Davis school under provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act which prohibits discrimination by race.

Programs Permitted

While ruling out quotas and goals, Powell said other types of affirmative action programs may be permitted.

"The experience of other university admissions programs, which take race into account in achieving the educational diversity valued by the First Amendment, demonstrates that the assignment of a fixed number of places to a minority group is not a necessary means toward that end," Powell wrote.

In his explanation of how far schools can go in considering an applicant's race, Powell cited the admissions program at Harvard as being designed to ensure racial and ethnic diversity while selecting students with a broad range of talents and geographic backgrounds.

Powell wrote: "In such an admissions program, race or ethnic background may be deemed a 'plus' in a particular applicant's file, yet it does not insulate the individual from comparison with all other candidates for the available seats."

But Powell said the Davis program "would hinder, rather than further, attainment of genuine diversity."

Citing his interpretation of the 14th Amendment, which guarantees equal protection under the law, Powell said the Davis minority admission program was not shown to be necessary to achieve the school's stated goals.

Powell dismissed arguments over

Meet With Carter Urged By Castro

HAVANA (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro says he wants to meet with President Carter to work out differences between the two countries. But he added Carter must take the initiative.

Castro told 18 American mayors that Carter must issue the invitation because of domestic pressures on the U.S. president over Cuban-American relations.

"Yes, I would like to," Castro said when one visiting mayor asked if he would be willing to hold such a meeting with Carter.

"But, he would have to convince more people than I would have to convince," the Cuban president said.

Castro apparently was referring to aroused American opinion over Cuban involvement in Africa and the traditional pressures from strong anti-Castro groups in the United States.

In Washington, White House spokesman Rex Granum said "nothing has changed" in Carter's position since a June 14 news conference when Carter said, "I don't think it is appropriate for me to see Mr. Castro."

Earlier this month, Castro made a similar suggestion about a meeting to two visiting congressmen in connection with Carter's charges that Cubans were involved in last month's invasion of Zaire.

The Cuban president met with the mayors during a reception at Cuba's Protocol House in Havana. The U.S. officials are leading a delegation of 100 Americans who have been touring municipal facilities in Cuba for the last week.

Question Surfaces

Mayor Richard Godfrey of Normal, Ill., said after the closed meeting that the question of a summit surfaced during discussions centering on whether U.S. investments might return to Cuba and on the issue of reparations for U.S. property seized by Castro after the 1959 revolution here.

"He said Cuba feels that it is owed some things too, but if we are going to solve these issues, we are going to have to have some talks," Godfrey said.

"I asked if he would be willing to meet with President Carter and he said, 'Why not?'" Mayor Wayne Pomeroy of Mesa, Ariz., said.

"'But, I can't suggest it,'" he quoted Castro as saying.

To Pursue Idea

"But, we could," Mayor Joseph Tilem of Beverly Hills, Calif., responded.

Tilem said later he would pursue the idea after the American group returned to the United States today.

"I'm going to talk to the U.S. Conference of Mayors and see if we might want to do it as an official thing," Tilem said.

"It might be a productive thing to do."

Castro also told the mayors he might welcome some U.S. investment in Cuba. However, diplomatic problems, including the old reparations dispute, would have to be settled first.

The United States broke diplomatic relations with Cuba in 1961 largely because of the reparations issue.

Last year, limited relations were resumed with the placement of a U.S. Interest Section here under the Swiss Embassy and a similar section for the Cubans under the Czech Embassy in Washington.

Heat Siege Dented By Rainclouds

A-J News Services

CLOUDY skies which formed over the South Plains Wednesday brought welcome moisture to scattered areas and a 20 percent chance of more rain today, including the Lubbock area.

Southeasterly winds, blowing 10 to 20 mph, pushed thunderclouds from eastern New Mexico into the Panhandle and South Plains late Wednesday, the National Weather Service said.

Even though no more than .25 of an inch of moisture was reported by cities across the South Plains, cloudy skies and light moisture held temperatures in the 90s, including a 94-degree reading at Lubbock. The city's low was 66 degrees.

Clouds Due Today

Partly cloudy skies are expected to prevail over the region today, with temperatures expected near 90. Tonight's low should be in the upper 60s and winds are expected to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

A chance of thunderstorms will remain in the forecast through the weekend, as prognosticators expect afternoon highs in the 90s and lows near 70.

Rainshowers were scattered around the state Wednesday, through the southern Panhandle, south of Lufkin in East Texas, across much of South Texas from Victoria to Del Rio and around Palacios. Heavy rains were reported in the far West Texas mountains and the Coastal Bend area Wednesday afternoon.

Colorado Flood Threats

To the north, heavier storms in Colorado posed a threat of flash flooding for that state's foothills as well as central Arizona.

The nation's capital was not spared inclement weather Wednesday, as winds gusting to 80 mph howled across the Potomac River, swamping small craft and knocking out power to about 19,000 Washingtonians. The Coast Guard and marine police rescued 40 people in sailboats that were overturned in the wind-tossed Potomac.

Showers also may appear in the Great Lakes region, while mild temperatures are expected to prevail over the northern half of the Pacific Coast and the central and southern plateau regions of the Southern Rockies.

Suit Filed In Cotton Props Case

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE U.S. government Wednesday filed a multi-million dollar lawsuit against John H. Thomas and Lonnie D. "Chic" Clark, citing losses alleged to have resulted from fraudulent cotton price support schemes.

The civil suit filed in federal court here asks for a combined judgment of $9.4 million against the defendants under auspices of the False Claims Act.

Two Thomas-owned companies, Jon-T Chemical Co. and Jon-T Farms, Inc., were named defendants along with Thomas and Clark.

Double Damage Asked

The first count of the civil petition seeks a judgment of $6.4 million against Thomas and the two companies, saying that amount represents double the estimated amount of damages the government allegedly sustained through Thomas' participation in the Upland Cotton Program in 1972 and 1973.

The government, in a second count, asks for a $3 million judgment against all four defendants, representing, according to the petition, double the approximate amount of damages for crop year 1973.

Thomas and Clark each have been convicted in criminal trials of improperly causing the issuance of cotton price support payments.

Thomas, 45, of Houston, convicted earlier this year, was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $129,000. Clark was sentenced last year to three years in prison and ordered to pay a $190,000 fine.

The cotton price support trials stemmed from an Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service investigation into Gaines and Andrews Counties farming operations.

Collaboration Charged

The second count of the civil petition, while alleging fraudulent conduct on Clark's part, also alleges that Thomas collaborated with him.

Both Thomas and Clark were prominent Brownfield businessmen at the time in question.

Basically, the government alleges in the civil suit, as it did in the trials, that Thomas and Clark schemed to evade the $55,000 cotton price support ceiling to individual farmers which was then in effect.

The government contends that, in Thomas' case, individuals who signed up as joint venture participants in farming operations received price support payments they were not entitled to because they actually had no substantive interest in the farm land they leased from Jon-T Farms.

Clark was also accused of leasing farm land to persons who had no actual substantive farming interest in the leases in order to fraudulently qualify them for support payments.

Count three of the petition filed Wednesday seeks, under an alternative procedure, $5.1 million, representing, according to the petition, the estimated value of allegedly converted sight drafts.

Deadline Near In Amateur Photo Contest

Entries postmarked after midnight Saturday will not be accepted.

Any photograph taken by an amateur after July 1, 1977, is eligible. Address entries to Snapshot Contest, The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock, 79408.

Weekly winners will receive parchment certificates. At the conclusion of the weekly contests, four winners will be selected in both the black-and-white and color categories and these will be entered in the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards for 1978.

The final eight winners will receive $50 each from The A-J and they will be competing for $55,000 in cash-and-travel prizes offered to top winners in the Kodak contest.

Elementary Schools In Midland Drop 'Thought Exercises'

By IRA PERRY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MIDLAND — Ten people soon will be exposed to lethal amounts of radiation, instructions to the game "Fallout Shelter" read, but the only available refuge can accommodate just six of the 10 persons.

The game's players — in this case 12-year-old Midland elementary school students — must decide who of the 10 lives and who dies.

Students that young have no business making a decision like that, angry parents told school trustees Wednesday, and teachers have no business using such teaching methods.

After three hours of often heated debate on the school system's pilot program of utilizing "value clarification strategies" like "Fallout Shelter" to teach students to make intelligent decisions, school trustees voted 4-1 to abandon the program and develop their own basic drug education program instead.

Games like "Fallout Shelter," role playing, diary keeping and other thought exercises have been used in schools here for a year, to teach pupils above the sixth grade to think about their own values and why they make the decisions they do, especially as they apply to the use of narcotics.

Irate residents and many parents of those children, though, demanded a "back to basics" program Wednesday, instead of the one they called an "atheistic, humanistic, horrid and insidious approach to replacing traditional Christian values."

Similar objections were heard from Lubbock residents earlier this year when programs like "Fallout Shelter" were being utilized in school classrooms.

Verbal Battle Erupts

School trustees here, who have battled residents over the program before, Wednesday tried to hold citizen speakers protesting the program to a five-minute time limit. But after a verbal battle between 61-year-old Dick Sollivan and school board president Johnny Warren, Sollivan won and then went on to convince trustees not to approve renewal of the plan.

School staff recommended adoption of the program for grades 6-12 in varying degrees, but Sollivan charged even that would "not be clarifying values for our kids. We're distorting them and replacing them with all kinds of things. These people (the program's founders) say just about everything's okay... homosexuality... lesbianism...you want to wive-swap, go ahead. It's okay the way they see it, and this is what we're teaching in schools if we're teaching this program."

Sollivan, encouraged by rounds of applause from about 50 apparent backers, claimed school trustees would be invading the privacy of the home and church if they approved the program.

Board member Ann Page agreed, say-

Group Of Dutch Passengers Flies To U.S. For 45 Cents

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Twelve Dutch passengers flew from Amsterdam airport Wednesday for less than a half dollar each on charter flights to the United States, a Dutch travel agency said.

The travelers boarded flights to Detroit and Chicago. The agency said it offered the fare of one guilder, or 45 cents, to passengers wanting to fill up empty seats on its charter flights.

On Tuesday, the Gefau Company of Amsterdam sold one-guilder return flights to 48 persons, who left for New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco. A company spokesman said the offer would be available until Aug. 1.

A spokesman for the Dutch civil aviation board said Dutch authorities have given travel organizations permission to set whatever price they like for unused seats on partially filled charter flights, so long as no more than 10 percent of an aircraft's seating capacity is involved. The experiment will last until Sept. 15.

Charter regulations remain in force for the other passengers. They must book at least 30 days in advance for a minimum stay in the United States of 14 days and the group must consist of at least 20 persons.

Bakke Ruling Taken In Stride

ALTHOUGH the Supreme Court's Allan Bakke decision Wednesday produced divided comment nationally, in Lubbock news of the ruling seemed to produce little adverse reaction.

Many of the community's minority leaders could not be reached for comment Wednesday evening, but one, State Rep. Froy Salinas, said he was "disappointed with the decision."

"I'm glad to see the Supreme Court recognize the need for affirmative action plans," he said, "but I'm disappointed with the decision because I'm afraid those who weren't eager to help minorities before will use it as something to hide behind."

Salinas added it probably was too early to predict what the effects will be of the court's decision.

In a 5-4 decision Wednesday, the court ordered a California medical school to admit 38-year-old Allan Bakke, ruling that he had suffered illegal discrimination because he is white.

But the court held that affirmative action programs intended to benefit minority applicants can be a factor in decisions on admitting students.

Bakke had charged that the University of California, Davis' medical school had a quota system under which 16 percent of its openings in each entering class were set aside for minorities.

He said he was denied admission while less qualified minority applicants were admitted ahead of him.

At Texas Tech's medical school, the associate dean of admissions said he personally felt the court's decision would not significantly affect the school's admissions procedures.

Dr. John W. Pelley said the medical school's admissions policy was a "flexible" one, which takes into account "a lot of noncognitive things, not just grades or race."

He said the school does not use a quota system.

Dean of the School of Medicine George S. Tyner declined to comment on the court's ruling, saying he needed time to study the decision.

The Tech Law School admits 20 students each summer with lower than average test scores, however law school Dean Frank Elliott explained in an earlier interview that the program is not for minority students only.

"If the summer program were based on race, we would have to end it if the court supported Bakke in its decision," Elliott said. "But it's not a minority program. Both white and minority students are admitted under it."

Tom Witt, personnel director for the City of Lubbock, said he felt the city's

Welfare Proposal May Lighten Load For States

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scaled-down revision of the welfare system was introduced in the Senate Wednesday with the promise that it would relieve states and localities of some expense and the prediction that it would pass this year.

Sen. Russell B. Long lent his name and prestige as chairman of the Finance Committee to the effort being launched by Sens. Alan Cranston and Daniel Patrick Moynihan.

Long's backing ensures speedy attention for the $5 billion proposal before the committee.

The package, which was billed as a "bare bones, no-frills approach," calls for fiscal relief for states and localities, incentives for employers to hire welfare recipients and income supplements for low-income workers with families through the earned income tax credit.

This approach was floated just a week after congressional leaders declared that there was no prospect for comprehensive welfare reform as envisioned by President Carter during this session.

Moynihan, a New York Democrat, acknowledged this problem but added: "We are assured by the Senate majority leader that there is time on the Senate calendar to allow full consideration of a measure of the magnitude we propose."

He described Rep. Jim Corman, D-Calif., chairman of an ad hoc House committee handling welfare changes, as "most responsive" to the proposal.

Cranston, D-Calif., is majority whip, the second-ranking leadership position in the Senate.

He said the leadership decision to abandon comprehensive reform for the year and the California vote to reduce taxes through Proposition 13 were the two factors leading to this latest welfare proposal.

"The infusion of additional federal funds that we are proposing will, in effect, cut in half the size of the welfare bill for states, cities and counties across the nation," he said.

The plan calls for adding $2.2 billion in federal spending in fiscal 1980 to help states meet the costs of the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. It would be shared in the form of block grants.

To encourage a reduction in the welfare rolls, welfare recipients would receive a 10 percent income tax credit on up to $6,000 of outside earnings with negative withholding where necessary. The current limit is $4,000.

Private employers would be allowed a 50 percent tax credit on first year wages if they hire a welfare recipient without displacing a worker already on the job. Present law limits the credit to 20 percent.

Cranston and Moynihan, who outlined their proposal at a news conference, estimated the program would cost $5 billion if fully operational. They projected a movement of 600,000 people from the welfare rolls into productive jobs in the fifth year.

President Carter's welfare package, which he said would cost $5.1 billion, was estimated by congressional specialists at $20 billion. A compromise plan developed in the House would have cost $10 billion.

Company Officers Resign Positions

NORTH WALES, Pa. (AP) — The two principal officers of Cutler-Hammer, Inc. of Milwaukee have resigned as directors of Leeds & Northrup Co.

A spokesman for Leeds said Cutler-Hammer board chairman Edmund Fitzgerald and president Oscar Reak quit Monday following last week's sale by Cutler-Hammer of its stock holdings in Leeds.

Cutler-Hammer sold its 1.3 million Leeds shares to General Signal Corp., Stamford, Conn., for $52 million.

Fitzgerald and Reak had been given seats on the Leeds board after their firm, a manufacturer of electrical and electronic equipment, had acquired one-third of the outstanding stock of Leeds, a maker of measuring control devices.

General Signal currently is discussing a possible merger with Leeds, and reportedly has not sought to fill the two board vacancies with two of its own representatives.

Haitian Refugees Flock To Florida

MIAMI (AP) — More than 60 Haitians landed their small wooden boats on south Florida beaches Wednesday, bringing to 201 the number of Haitians who have sought refuge in the United States this week.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials, fearing the arrivals could signal the start of a surge of would-be immigrants, said the latest landings occurred at Palm Beach and Delray Beach.

Twenty-three arrived at Palm Beach in an 18-foot boat and another 30 beached their 24-footer at Delray Beach. A U.S. Coast Guard patrol boat found another 30-foot boat containing 11 Haitians near Jupiter and towed it to Palm Beach.

The new arrivals, including men, women and children, all came from the Bahama Islands, said Truman Carr, acting chief patrol officer for the U.S. Border Patrol in Florida.

"We know there are hundreds, if not thousands, on the other side just waiting," said Carr.

State Of Church Troubles Pope In Final Days

UNSETTLED PAPACY — Pope Paul VI, shown earlier this year, is thinking ahead to the approaching end of his days, both pleased and troubled at the new directions the Catholic Church has taken during his 15-year reign. (AP Laserphoto)

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI, who talks of the approaching end of his days, is pleased but troubled at the new directions the church has taken during his reign.

Fifteen years ago, he ascended to the leadership of the world's 600 million Roman Catholics at a time when new ideas were giving the church an excitement not felt since the Middle Ages.

Now he speaks of his "fleeting and nearly ended pontificate" — and in his final years worries about a church whose unity is threatened by dissent and potential schism.

Clearly, he is pleased by the vigorous discussion. But just as clearly, he is distressed by the other side of that coin — the dissent and splits that accompanied it.

During his papacy, while the church was being lifted out of lethargy, new problems were created:

— Theologians openly contest papal teachings.

— Priests and the religious are being lost faster than they can be replaced.

In the 80-year-old pope's own estimate, the Second Vatican Council was the dominant theme of his papacy, and he appears determined in his final years to avoid a schism over implementing it.

Initiated by Pope John XXIII, with Pope Paul guiding its completion and followup, the council gave the church a reformed liturgy, a restructured government, and a vitality it had not enjoyed since the Middle Ages.

At the same time, though, the stimulus to theological discussion led to the new dissent within the church. Leading radical theologians now write books challenging papal infallibility, the real presence of Christ in the Eucharist, the virgin birth of Jesus from Mary, and the traditional church teachings on sexual morality.

Attacking from the other side, French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre and traditionalist followers refuse to accept the council's reforms with Lefebvre holding forbidden ordinations in defiance of the Pope.

But Pope Paul seems determined to avoid any final confrontation that would produce an official schism, or division within the church. He has held back from a public excommunication of the rebel archbishop, and his successor will have to decide whether to crack down on the two-pronged dissent or continue the policy of persuasion.

"I think he has completed what he had hoped to accomplish. He's in a holding pattern now," said one official who has worked in the curia for most of Pope Paul's reign.

But Cardinal Joseph Hoffner of Cologne, West Germany, in an article for the Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano last week, said that so many problems remain that "those who judge superficially could define this pontificate as a failure."

Commentators have called this papacy a "crown of thorns," and Pope Paul has frequently expressed anxiety about problems he is unlikely to resolve in the time he has left.

Prominent among those problems is a decline in the ranks of the faithful — and in the priesthood.

The openness of the council and heightened discussions about celibacy also led to a decrease in the ranks of both priests and the religious. The trend has been slowed since the years just after the council, when an estimated 5,000 priests and 10,000 nuns were leaving each year. But it has not been reversed and Pope Paul said this year that this causes him "immense pain."

In 1976, the last year for which figures are available, there were 4,469 new priests in the world compared to 1,894 dropouts and 4,971 deaths. With reduced numbers of recruits, the average age of priests is also climbing — up to 53 now in Europe. "The real crunch is going to hit in about 10 years," one Vatican official said.

Then there is the question of birth control.

When Catholics accustomed to a changeless religion suddenly were shaken by the radical reforms of the council, they carried over the new attitude into a mass revolt against one of Pope Paul's most important encyclicals, that banning artificial birth control.

A Gallup Poll of American Catholics this year showed 73 percent believe the church should allow birth control. Pope Paul, speaking about the approaching 10th anniversary of his encyclical, acknowledged that many Catholics continue to ignore the ban.

In other words, his teachings apparently did not settle the question for many Catholics, and his successor is likely to come under some pressure to reconsider the issue.

The pope is in generally good health for a man of his age, but has painful arthrosis that makes it nearly impossible for him to walk and has been bedridden by recurrent colds and influenza in recent years.

Several times recently, he has spoken of the approach of his death.

Who will succeed him?

The Pope seemed to give a boost to his closest collaborator, Archbishop Giovanni Benelli, 57, as a candidate when he appointed him to the diocese of Florence and made him a cardinal in a special ceremony. Benelli is now a power in the Italian church hierarchy.

N-Protesters Visit Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of persons, many uniformed in blue jeans, backpacks and boots, protested peacefully Wednesday against the Seabrook nuclear power plant in New Hampshire and atomic power in general.

About 500 protestors, terming their gathering the biggest anti-nuclear protest seen in Washington, attended speeches and rallies at the Capitol and the Department of Energy offices.

The demonstrators, who called themselves the Seabook Natural Guard, later marched to Lafayette Park opposite the White House for a noisy protest, and some 300 went to Nuclear Regulatory Commission headquarters.

NRC Chairman Joseph M. Hendrie and Commissioner Richard T. Kennedy came outside to meet the marchers, who were not allowed in the building. Both men later met with small groups of protestors and consented to answer questions.

"Nice of you to come by," Kennedy quipped as he moved through the crowd shaking hands, much to the surprise of many protestors.

Fielding many questions, he said he could not discuss Seabrook because of pending legal action. But Kennedy added that he had no qualms about living near a nuclear plant.

Hendrie told the group he generally supports a Carter Administration bill to cut in half the time it takes to license nuclear plants, and defended his agency's record of overseeing the nuclear industry.

Protest leaders said some demonstrators intended to stay at the NRC offices until today, when a decision is expected from three NRC members meeting in Manchester, N.H., on the future of the $2.3 billion electrical generating plant.

Opponents of the plant, still under construction, want the project halted until a determination can be made on how its cooling system will affect the nearby ocean.

The demonstrators heard the theme of anti-nuclear power expressed in speeches and songs at the Lafayette Park rally.

Singer Casse Culver of Washington, who described herself as a lesbian feminist, sang about what she called the link between feminism and the nuclear protest.

"The rape of the earth and the abuse of women are tied up in the same issues," she told the cheering crowd.

Activist Daniel Ellsberg called for a peaceful protest to foul up normal operations at nuclear facilities.

"Bombs don't stop plutonium and nuclear power," he said. "This can slow them down for a couple of days, but it will just harden the pro-nuclear position."

GOP--Shop Early For 1980?

ALTHOUGH THE presidential primaries are almost two years away, a look at those hitting the hustings for the Republicans would think they are this summer.

It is just as well. As talk of President Jimmy Carter being a "one-term" president grows, both the GOP and the country need to look to a viable contender.

There are plenty of them, if the speaking schedules of top GOP party leaders are any indication.

AS OF NOW, those who see in Mr. Carter's inept policies, both on the domestic and foreign front, a path toward disaster have a wide choice of those who may oppose him.

There are any number of old hands around with the political savvy to perhaps get things back on track and restore the nation's confidence in itself. Also, there is a stable full of bright, young prospects from which may emerge a person who can also lead and inspire.

IN THE LATTER category are several members of Congress, including Reps. Philip Crane and John Anderson both of Illinois and Jack Kemp of New York.

Also in the spotlight are some GOP governors, including Illinois Gov. James Thompson, Robert Ray of Iowa, William Milliken of Michigan and Pierre S. DuPont of Delaware.

Both Kemp and Crane have strong conservative backing, the former having been a leader in the fight for tax reform, the latter having been a major foe of the Panama Canal pacts.

BUT IT IS in the ranks of the "old pros" that the next GOP nominee may be found.

Former President Gerald Ford not only is criss-crossing the nation, making talks, but doing nothing to discourage speculation that he is available for another run at the White House.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, whose near miss for the brass ring in 1976, has done nothing to diminish his large following, also is keeping in the spotlight with talks and his newspaper column.

Also high on the list is George Bush, who has held just about every office the GOP has to offer, from congressman to envoy to China, CIA director and U.N. Ambassador to the United Nations.

HIGH ON THE list are others, whose names are almost household words. These include Sen. Howard Baker, who almost was No. 2 man in 1976. Baker is running for reelection in Tennessee and could be a factor, although his support of the Panama Canal treaties could hurt him.

Then there is the "darkhorse," former Texas Gov. John Connally, who is the most in demand of all prospects as a speaker. Although still the target of the ultra-liberals, and especially the biased Eastern establishment media, the tall Texan in the opinion of many possesses the qualities and dynamic leadership needed to "turn things around."

It still a long way to 1980. Maybe too long...

AN EDITORIAL:

It'll Be Oil Right For Awhile

THE GOOD news is that the price of oil on the world market is going to remain for a spell at $12.70 a barrel—a mere five times what it was five years ago when the oil producers liberated pricing from the restrictions of supply and demand.

The not-so-good news is that price stabilization is only temporary. It may last out the year, according to the most optimistic estimates, but certainly not much longer.

OPEC CONCLUDED its recent pricing session with the good guys (from the Western Point of view) Saudi Arabia and Iran carrying the argument for a price freeze.

Iraq, Libya and Algeria, among others, had pushed for an immediate boost to counter the erosion of oil income which is a result of continuing depreciation of the dollar.

It should be noted, this is a situation to which ever-higher oil prices have made their very substantial contribution. However, something more than Western interests is involved in the Saudi and Iranian caution.

Currently, there is a glut of oil on the world market; and a buyers' market is no time to try to squeeze more out of a buyer.

THE SAUDIS are reported to believe that curtailed production should take care of the surplus problem in six months or so. Once supply and demand are back in balance, consuming nations can be confronted with an offering price they'll be in no position to refuse.

The reason for the current oversupply is in part OPEC overproduction. But it also is due in significant part to the coming onto the market of increasing quantities of oil from other sources—principally Alaska and the North Sea.

THIS IS Western oil, and should improve the West's position in dealing with OPEC. But it also is very expensive oil to produce.

It is economic in very great part because of the artifically high price with OPEC countries have set for their product.

If OPEC is in a situation to raise prices when supply and demand are in balance, it conceivably could also drop them in a price war that the new Western producers would quickly lose.

ART BUCHWALD:

Don't You Know What It's All About, Alex?

WASHINGTON—Of all the graduation speakers who presided this year, none has had a more powerful effect than Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who spoke to the Harvard class of '78. His forceful message about the decline of the West sent most of the students into a depression.

I know this because I got a call the other day from a friend of mine. She asked me if I would talk to her son, who had been part of this year's graduating class and unfortunately had heard Solzhenitsyn's address.

"GERARD," I SAID, "you've got to pull yourself together."

"What's the use? Modern American society is doomed."

"How can you say that, Gerard? You just graduated from Harvard, the most elite school in the nation. The world is your oyster."

"You can say that, but you weren't at my graduation. We're suffering from a psychic disease of the 20th century."

"We are?" I said in surprise.

"Yes. We're cowards. We've all lost our courage."

"That's true, but you've got to rise above it," I told him.

"How?"

"By getting a job."

"IF I GET A JOB I'll only be contributing to the state of spiritual exhaustion that is part of the West's malaise."

"But if you do find a job you might get us out of the fix we're in. It cost your parents $50,000 to put you through school, not counting the Pinto they bought you that had to be recalled. Surely you owe them something."

"All I have to show for my education is television stupor and a penchant for intolerable music. I have a licentious press and the fad media to blame for all my problems."

"Gerard, everything you say may be true, but you're still master of your own soul. If the Harvard class of '78 drops out, who will our leaders be 20 years from now?

"Who will take over the Mobil Oil Corp., or AT &T, or the Ford Foundation? Where will we get our Cabinet officers or our economists from?

"Are you going to leave it to the Yale class of '78 to solve the problems that the West must face?"

"You owe it to us to pass on what you have learned at Harvard so that our civilization can be saved."

"It's not that simple," Gerard said. "You're asking me to join a free society where everyone marches to a different drummer. I prefer to sit on this stoop and not be part of the rabble that has as its goal moral mediocrity."

"That's your privilege in a free country, Gerard. But sitting on this stoop is not going to get us out of our spiritual dilemma.

"The only thing to do is to raise our sights and search our hearts and overcome our readiness to accept material well-being.

"I can't do it, Gerard, because I went to the University of Southern California. But you can, because you were educated in Cambridge."

JUST THEN GERARD'S father drove up. He got out of his car and stomped up. He said angrily to his son, "Are you still sitting on this stoop?"

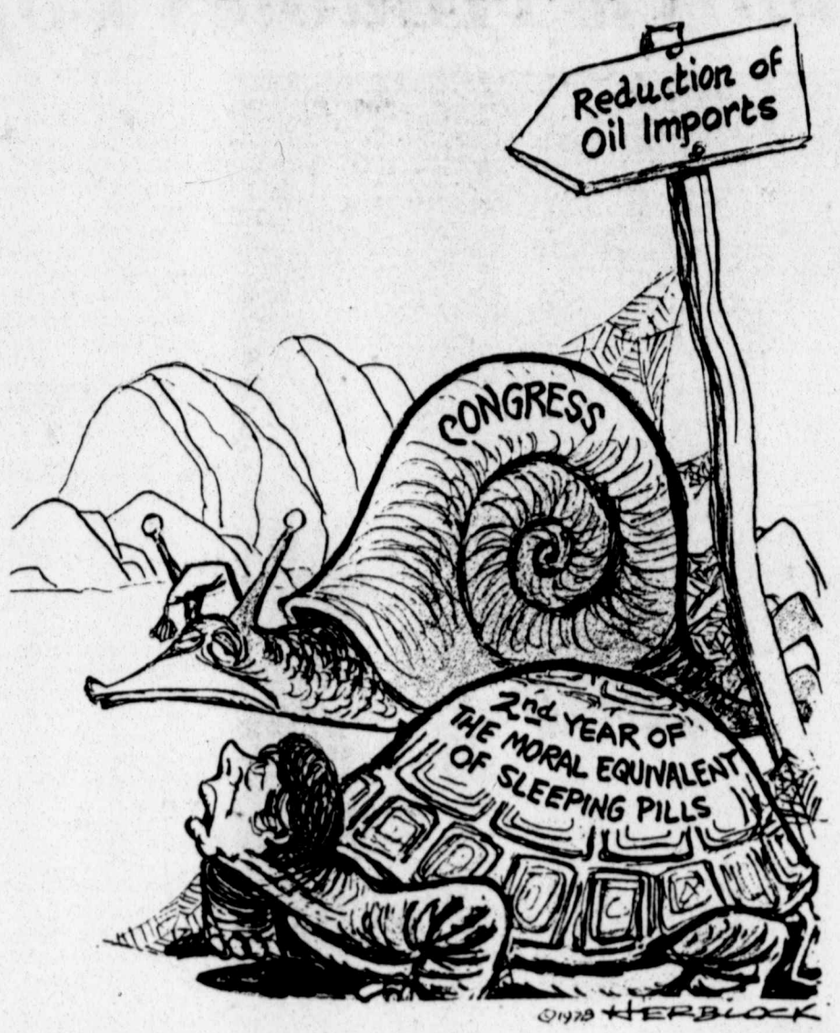
His father grabbed him by the shirt.

"Solzhenitsyn or no Solzhenitsyn," he said, flinging Gerard toward the car, "You get your butt out of here and don't come back until you've got a job."

Gerard, fear in his eyes, picked up the car keys from the sidewalk and said, "Sure, Pop, you don't have to get mad."

'If You're Not Going To Move Any Faster I Might Just Blast Off By Myself'



ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—President Carter's reorganization plan taking civil defense out of the Pentagon and putting it in the White House will soon be followed by a secret National Security Council (NSC) study demolishing the arms control lobby's argument that Soviet civil defense does not matter.

The reorganization plan was fought to the end by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, a confirmed skeptic about civil defense. The NSC study is passionately opposed by chief disarmament negotiator Paul Warnke, who contends that civil defense is useless.

Taken together, the two moves suggest a radical and wholly unexpected shift in Carter administration policy.

However, this is only a beginning. As unconvinced defense-oriented members of Congress pointed out, there is no money commitment approaching what the Russians spend to protect their people.

CIVIL DEFENSE has been dead in this country for 15 years, killed the last year of the Kennedy administration. Carter seemed ready to bury it for good March 30, 1977, when he announced U.S.-Soviet plans to "mutually agree on forgoing major efforts in civil defense."

Secretary Brown publicly belittled Soviet civil defense and privately muzzled Air Force intelligence officers worried about it.

Intentionally or not, this fit the arms control theology which holds U.S.-Soviet agreements are possible only if American citizens perceive that civil defense cannot prevent mutual destruction.

Adam Yarmolinsky, counselor of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), privately contends that advocates of civil defense are saying "a nuclear war could be no worse than a bad cold."

Change was generated last year from an unlikely source: Bardyl Tirana, a liberal Washington lawyer with no military background who opposed the Vietnam war and supported George McGovern.

NAMED HEAD OF civil defense in the Pentagon to his own and the military's consternation, Tirana quickly concluded that Jimmy Carter could not take a position countenancing mass slaughter of Americans in a nuclear war. Thus, Tirana became an energetic convert for civil defense.

Simultaneously, NSC staffers, led by former Harvard Prof. Samuel Huntington, began drafting Presidential Review Memorandum (PRM) 32 as a rebuttal to the arms control theology. The preliminary draft for the first time has the U.S. government recognizing the Kremlin's real outlook.

"The Soviets do not subscribe to the view that mutual vulnerability is stabilizing," says the PRM-32 draft, classified secret.

"To the contrary, they believe that deterrence requires, in addition to offensive forces, a credible defense from attack. In their view, a lack of significant damage-limiting capability inhibits the credibility of retaliation."

PRM-32 ALSO ARGUES that the "essential equivalence" of strategic strength between the U.S. and the Soviet Union "must also involve equivalent survivability of the two societies."

Therefore, "a civilian defense program directed towards the goal of equivalent survivability is a necessary corollary to the U.S. strategic forces policy."

ACDA director Warnke "is really screaming," according to one senior official, and will file a strenuous dissent to PRM-32.

As usual, Brown has been subtle, even inscrutable. While not objecting to PRM-32, he has fought backstage against the reorganization plan putting civil defense in the White House.

Brown's aides wrote unusually vigorous letters (over Deputy Defense Secretary Charles Duncan's signature) May 4 and May 10 attacking the plan as "unwieldy."

But in opposing the reorganization, Brown has embraced civil dfense as never before. Arguing that civil defense "cannot be considered as independent of the rest of strategic nuclear programs," he talked about "its deterrent effect" and "possible effect on reducing casualties."

ADVOCATES OF CIVIL defense, suspicious that Brown was changing his tune merely to keep the program under his thumb, backed the reorganization.

So did NSC Director Zbigniew Brzezinski, who on May 23 urged that the new disaster agency's chief be given a seat on the NSC, alongside Harold Brown, when appropriate.

On June 2, President Carter chose the option calling for the reorganization. He now has a new agency and a new doctrine in PRM-32, but a projected maximum of only $200 million in annual civil defense spending compared with cumulative Soviet expenditures estimated at $65 billion.

Although the constrained theory and structure of the past 15 years are gone, it is up to the President whether this is translated into true protection of the nation's citizens, with all that means for global strategy.

ANDREW TULLY:

We Are Hit, Man

WASHINGTON—The latest billet doux from the postal unions to the taxpayers reminds me of an interview I was granted back in the days of the three-cent stamp by Al (Bummy) Davis, a New York club fighter who was never mistaken for Mohandas Gandhi.

Of his opponents, Davis deposed: "I hit 'em and hit 'em, and hit 'em. Then if they're still conscious, I hit 'em again."

Apparently the union bosses have concluded that the country's working stiffs are still conscious.

They have, therefore, demanded that the government stand still for a continuation of automatic cost-of-living raises in the current three-year contract, plus wage increases of $1,100 in the first year of a new two-year contract and $865 in the second year.

EMMETT ANDREWS, president of one of the unions representing 554,000 postal workers, says the demand would amount to a 14 per cent increase in the first year. If it matters (and I fear it doesn't), that's at least twice what assorted Carter administration people want the postal workers to accept.

I refuse to honor Carter's team with the title "inflation fighters." They fight inflation like my left hook scares Muhammad Ali. All they have done so far is "hope" postal workers will accept an increase that is "substantially" under the 8 per cent annual boosts they estimate the postal workers have received under a contract that expires July 20.

A pox to such hopes. It will be bad news no matter how little the unions accept.

LABOR COSTS account for $7 out of every $8 the Postal Service spends. Wage levels thus are the major influence over how high postal rates must be to recover the expenses.

It is not as if postal workers are an underprivileged bloc. Wages now average $15,877 a year. That's $305-plus a week. I know non-government toilers who somehow manage to make do with much less.

Moreover, the postal workers have not been hit by the rise in consumer prices at an annual rate of about 10 per cent since Jan. 1. They've got that "cost-of-living" adjustment as a cushion. Now they want a hefty wage boost as well.

Meanwhile, official government figures reveal that postal workers' hourly wages have gone up 87 per cent since 1971, compared to a 64 per cent rise for private non-farm workers.

SO MUCH FOR the argument that government employes should be paid on a scale comparable to workers in the private sector.

We've got here some crazy country. With the mail service still lousy, we've got the postal unions telling taxpayers to drop dead, retroactively, that they want theirs and let the price of a postcard climb to 20 cents.

At the same time, thanks to the new 15-cent stamp, the taxpayers will finance an $826 million annual bill for government mailings, up to $110 million.

Jimmy Carter's inflation czar, Robert Strauss, is said to be "reasoning" with the postal unions. Watch it, Strauss. If you're conscious, they'll hit you again.

IF THE MAIL is any indication, our forecast that the tax furor was just starting was an understatement.

Now and then, an issue comes along, either emotional or monetary or both, which stirs the wrath of citizens as few others do.

In the past, such things as the Tech name change controversy, the ERA, Red Raider athletic events, certain City Hall politics, the farm strike—all have sparked an outpouring of opinion.

The reaction to the mailing of some 20,000 or more notices boosting tax assessments for South and Southwest Lubbock residents may be another one of those "straws that break the camel's back" things. "Now they've gone and done it!" seems to be the reaction.

WEDNESDAY, WE more or less gave City Hall's "side" of the problem.

Vaughn Hendrie, Lubbock's Public Affairs spokesman, explained that any major cut in revenues from property taxes almost certainly would mean a sharp curtailment in vital services most persons take for granted.

This would mean, he argues, sharp cutbacks in funding for the Police and Fire Department, public works, parks, Health, the Library system and such.

However, the other side of the coin—and one City Hall here, as elsewhere must look at—is that many, many families today are working with their backs to the wall.

A tax boost in some instances wipes out all budget planning. To argue that: "If they can afford to drive a car or live in a nice house they can afford more taxes" begs the issue. And besides, history has shown that too heavy tax burdens inadvertently have been the straw that breaks the etc. and brings down the ruling clique...

Dr. Osmond claims that high speed travel floods the brain with "information" that must be filtered and processed. Some of the warning signs are: Seeing the world as too bright or too dim, and seeing objects dance before your eyes.

The good doctor advises that "when traveling on a sunny day, wear dark glasses, and periodically pull over and lie down on the back seat....Avoid drinking coffee or soft drinks...And be sure and get as much rest as possible." ALMOST LOST in the news of Inflation, Cold War, Africa and the Panama Giveaway has been the nation's Space Program.

Actually, it's still alive and kicking.

As a matter of fact, Saturday a new class of 35 Astronauts will report to NASA at Houston for a new era in space travel.

And this class will be different from those of the past. While previous groups were made up entirely of white males, in contrast, the incoming class will include three blacks, a Japanese-American man and six women.

After reporting to Johnson Space Flight Center, they will be processed, then start two years of intensive training to fly the U.S. space shuttle missions.

NASA SPOKESMAN Bill O'Donnell says the space agency expects all 35 candidates to make it through the gruelling program. Then each will earn the rank of Astronaut.

For those who may wonder what happens to former Astronauts, we have an answer.

Once a Spaceman, U.S. style, finishes a NASA career, he usually finds success back on earth without too much difficulty. Two former Astronauts, John Glenn and Harrison Schmitt, are U.S. Senators. A third, Jack Swigert, is a candidate for the GOP senatorial nomination in Colorado.

Several former Astronauts are heads of major businesses, such as Frank Borman of Eastern Air Lines, James McDivitt of the Pullman Corp., and James Lovell of Fisk Telephone Systems, Inc. Others have had impressive careers in business, government and education.

Astronauts are a select group, picked for their brains, resourcefulness and high energy. As O'Donnell observes: "There are no former Astronauts. As far as Astronauts are concerned, once an Astronaut, always an Astronaut."

PICKETS CHANGE SHIFTS — Pickets at Wadley Hospital change shifts in what so far has been a peaceful strike. Here Charles Jones hands his strike placard to an unidentified woman. At right is Gary Blagg, an x-ray technician. (AP Laserphoto)

Effectiveness Of Texarkana Hospital Walkout Disputed

TEXARKANA, Tex. (AP) — A Wadley Hospital spokesman and a union negotiator disagreed Wednesday on the effectiveness of a strike by members of Local 11271 of the Communications Workers of America.

Charles Stuart Jr., the hospital spokesman, said more than 80 percent of the hospital employees reported for work Wednesday.

"That's ridiculous," said union negotiator Dale Magee. "But if I was the hospital, I would do the same thing."

Stuart said 474 persons were scheduled to work Wednesday morning and 395 reported. Of the 148 scheduled to work Wednesday afternoon, he said, 113 reported.

"In all areas where there are patients, we are fully staffed," Stuart said.

He said he did not know how many of the employees were union members. The local represents about 630 workers and has about 500 members. The hospital has a total payroll of 980 persons.

Picket lines went up at the hospital at 4:40 a.m. Wednesday in what is reportedly the first hospital strike in Texas.

Stuart said all departments are open and operating and that emergency patients were still being admitted.

"All we have stopped is elective surgery and procedures," Stuart said.

Stuart said there were 201 patients in the 358-bed hospital.

The hospital beefed up its security force and several supervisory personnel reported to work early.

Hospital officials had a white line painted around the hospital property line and pickets were to remain outside the line. Pickets were about 50 yards from the front entrance of the hopsital.

Magee said union members would picket all eight entrances to the hospital. He declined to estimate how long the strike would last.

Negotiations between the union and the hospital administration ended Saturday.

The hospital offered a 10 percent across-the-board wage hike and two additional paid holidays, but the union wanted a flat 50-cent-per-hour raise for all employees. The proposal included a no-strike provision.

The union — which represents licensed vocational nurses and maintenance, cafeteria and clerical workers — says the average wage of hospital employees is $3.23 per hour and that almost half the employees earn less than $3 per hour.

The hospital says the union is balking because of the hospital's refusal to deduct union dues from payroll checks.

Bakke Decision Draws Praise, Condemnation

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court was praised for "judicial statesmanship" and condemned for an "absolutely absurd" decision Wednesday in the wake of its ruling that a California medical school illegally discriminated against a white applicant because of his race.

Most of the legal experts, civil rights leaders and academic authorities contacted by The Associated Press said they were encouraged by the fact that the court said race can be taken into account in future college admission programs.

Like the court itself, however, the reaction was split over the issue of racial quotas. The justices issued seven separate opinions in connection with the 5-4 decision in the case of Allan Bakke, 38, who was twice rejected by the University of California medical school at Davis. Bakke charged that the school's admissions policy unconstitutionally set aside 16 of 100 positions for racial minorities.

The majority opinion handed down Wednesday said strict racial quotas or goals are illegal, but said other affiramative action programs to overcome past discrimination are permissable.

Bakke, who lives in Los Altos, Calif., and works at the Ames Research Center, a NASA facility in Mountainview, Calif., said only: "We are pleased with this decision. I'm not going to make any further comment." Asked if he will go to medical school in the fall, he said "yes."

One of his lawyers, Robert Links, reported a telephone conversation with Bakke earlier in the day. "He said, 'Great! You guys did it!' I said, 'No, we didn't. You did.'"

Links said he believes the university "will try to formulate a more acceptable program..."

Dr. John Tupper, dean of the medical school, said, "We will obey the law." He declined further comment, pending a review of the decision.

In Berkeley, the president of the university, David Saxon, said the decision would make it "somewhat more difficult for minorities to gain admission, but not very much more..."

Alan M. Derschowitz, a law professor at Harvard University, said the decision "is an act of judicial statesmanship ... that will go down in history not for what it did, but for what it didn't do. It neither legitimized racial quotas nor put down affirmative action programs. The decision will make the job of admissions offices a lot harder. It will make them look at people as persons, not as members of a group and not as computerized ciphers."

Peter Cohn, cocounsel for the regional office of the NAACP in Washington, said, "I think this is a very sad day in the United States. The Bakke decision represents a step back in time, even though the initial report sounds favorable to minority admissions programs," he said. "To suggest that the ... policy of reserving 16 out of 100 places in the entering class is unfair is absolutely absurd."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson said the ruling "will have negative effects on affirmative action..." The black leader repeated statements he made earlier this month, in anticipation of the decision, urging sit-ins and demonstrations of protest.

The complexity of the ruling caused confusion. In some cases, initial dismay gave way to cautious praise.

The Association of American Medical Colleges said first it was disappointed by the ruling. Later, in a further statement, the group added: "While we have not had time to thoroughly review this decision, we believe the Supreme Court in the Bakke case has only disapproved of the use of rigid quotas or goals based on race in the admissions process. We are pleased that the majority of the court accepts the use of race as one element in the selection of students ... We believe that the court decision has provided medical schools with opportunities to continue effective efforts to increase admission of under-represented minority students to medicine."

John Ryor, president of the National Education Association, said the group was disappointed that the court had struck down the University of California program, but added: "We are pleased that the majority of the court endorsed the constitutionality of affirmative action programs taking race into account."

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., vice president of Americans for Democratic Action, had a similar view. "The important thing about the Bakke decision is not that Bakke can go to medical school, but that the racists who wanted to turn back the clock on minority progress have received a stunning blow," he said. "The Supreme Court's decision that race is a proper factor in admissions decisions is the legal concrete on which further affirmative action progress can be made. The Supreme Court struck a blow for remedying past wrongs and providing a more equal society."

Merritt Weisinger, a Los Angeles attorney representing another student involved in a reverse discrimination case at the University of California medical school at Davis, said the decision was "self-contradictory" in ruling out quota systems while allowing race to be used as a criterion in admissions. "Anytime you give points for racial or ethnic origin, you're keeping somebody else out," he said.

Weisinger represents Rita Clancy, a 23-year-old Russian immigrant, who was admitted to the medical school under court order last September. U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride ruled that she probably would have been admitted if the school had not reserved 16 of its 100 slots for disadvantaged minorities.

Dr. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said, "I think the court in a sense has affirmed affirmative action ... As long as there is ... a sense of urgency about making the matriculation possible and available to blacks, then I think we can live without fixed quotas."

Jurist Marshall Eloquent In Bakke Case Dissent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even at almost-70, there was some of the old fire and anguish in Justice Thurgood Marshall as he voiced his dissent in the Allan Bakke case.

"The dream of America as the great melting pot has not been realized for the Negro," he said. "Because of his skin color, he never even made it into the pot."

Marshall said it sadly and the other eight justices looked solemn. Bakke was the most important decision of the year, delayed until the final days of the court's term, briefed, argued, briefed, rebriefed.

The justices' faces showed their weariness. There was, for once, no whispered banter; no humorous darts flew from across the great mahogany bench as often they do.

"We speak today with a notable lack of unanimity," said Justice Lewis Powell, reading the court's divided and redivided opinion. He said it slowly, apparently determined that the southern strain in his voice not obscure the importance of what he was saying.

The depth of the division was evident. It took an hour and five minutes of reading-in-turn for the justices to display all the facets of a verdict that goes far beyond Allan Bakke.

The court ruled that the University of California's medical school at Davis illegally discriminated against Bakke in refusing to admit him. But it also ruled that race can be taken into account in future college admissions programs.

As civil rights decisions go, Bakke is now in queue with the big ones: Plessy v. Ferguson in 1896, which validated the principle that state-ordained segregation is not wrong, and Brown v. Board of Education — the 1954 decision that said it is.

Old phrases — given new meaning by the term "reverse discrimination" — rebounded for Bakke between the 24 Italian marble columns that enclose the Supreme Court chamber:

"Money collected by color blind tax collectors (should) be spent by equally blind tax collectors" ... "strands of heritage, strands of emotion are plucked (by the case)" ... "we all know institutions that give preferences to athletes and children of alumni, to the affluent and those who have connection to celebrities and the powerful."

Long before the justices filed into the court Wenesday morning, the word was out that this would be the end of this year's Washington guessing game, "Waiting for Bakke."

In this case, the Washington institution with the fewest leaks was a veritable pincushion of signs. Functionaries refused to say in advance how many decisions there would be this day; normally the number is supplied. Aides made whispered telephone calls to reporter friends the night before. Important people arrived — James Nabrit, who helped argue the 1954 case; Jack Greenberg, past legal director of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

Minutes before 10 a.m., the wives of Justices Marshall, Harry Blackmun, William Brennan, John Paul Stevens and Potter Stewart took the VIP seats in the front of the hall.

Blackmun, already in his black robe, ushered his wife into the VIP section. The solicitor general of the United States, Wade McCree, sat in front of the bench awaiting the decision — just as another black lawyer named Thurgood Marshall, later also solicitor general, had awaited Brown in 1954.

Forty-five seconds early — the clocks in the Supreme Court are seldom correct — the justices stepped out from behind the curtain, preceded by Chief Justice Warren Burger and followed, almost imperceptibly in order of seniority, by the others.

"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!" Marshal Alfred Wong began his ritualized cry. "The court is now sitting." The lucky 200 tourists who happened to be in the sightseeing line at the right time strained to see.

Stewart first delivered the court's ruling in another matter and felt constrained — in the heavy atmosphere of expectancy — to say it was "an important case."

The last to speak was Marshall.

He said he doubted whether any computer is capable of measuring the effect of the Bakke case. He said blacks' position in America today is a tragic consequence of 200 years of inequality. He said failing to do something about it, affirmatively, "will mean America will remain a divided society."

It all has come full circle, said the gray-haired Marshall, who will be 70 next Sunday. The Civil War was followed by affirmative action programs, but the Plessy decision "destroyed the movement toward complete equality."

There was almost nothing until the Brown decision, "with the tacit approval of the courts," Marshall said, and that was followed by gains for blacks.

"Now, we have this court again stepping in, this time to stop affirmative action programs of the type used by the University of California," he said at the end.

Then Burger announced the court adjourned until 10 a.m. today.

Chronology In Long Litigation Outlined

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here's how the case of University of California Board of Regents vs. Allan Bakke reached decision day at the nation's highest court:

— With his application to the University of California at Davis Medical School twice rejected, Bakke sued in the Yolo County Superior Court in June 1974.

His suit charged that the medical school's special admissions policy unconstitutionally set aside 16 of 100 positions for racial minorities, and that he was better qualified for admission than some of the students admitted under the special program.

— In an opinion Nov. 25, 1974, Judge F. Leslie Manker ruled that the university's program was invalid because it discriminated against Bakke because of his race. But Manker refused to order the school to admit Bakke, ruling only that Bakke is entitled to have his application reconsidered without regard to race.

Both the university and Bakke appealed the ruling. In an unusual move, the California Supreme Court agreed to hear the case without waiting for a state appeals court to hear and decide it.

— After hearing arguments, the California Supreme Court on Sept. 16, 1976, ruled that the university's affirmative action program was unconstitutional because it violated the equal-protection rights of whites.

The state's highest court ordered the university to admit Bakke as a medical school student in the fall of 1977.

— On Nov. 15, 1976, however, the university secured Supreme Court permission to keep its admissions policy in effect until it could appeal the state court's ruling.

— Despite pleas from numerous civil rights groups that it not pursue the case further, the university on Dec. 14, 1976, sought Supreme Court review.

— That review was granted Feb. 22, 1977.

— The justices heard almost two hours of arguments in the case the morning of Oct. 12, 1977.

San Francisco lawyer Reynold Colvin represented Bakke. Archibald Cox, a former solicitor general and former Watergate special prosecutor, represented the university. Solicitor General Wade McCree argued for the government as a friend of the court, essentially stating that affirmative action programs have their place in education and that the program used by the University of California should be returned to state courts for further study.

— Five days later, the justices asked each side and the government to submit new briefs in the case centering on how a portion of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 affects the Bakke case.

The portion of the law makes it illegal for any institution receiving government funds, as do most state schools, to discriminate against anyone because of race.

— On June 28, Wednesday, the court ordered Bakke admitted to the medical school, ruling that the University of California discriminated against him because he is white.

Houston Law Dean Sees Dual Effect

By The Associated Press

Affirmative action is not dead because of Wednesday's Supreme Court ruling in the Allan Bakke case, according to George Hardy, dean of the University of Houston's Bates College of Law.

He was one of several to react to the long-awaited decision dealing with reverse discrimination.

"Affirmative action is not dead — it's impacted and criteria will have to be defined to avoid the rigid race-based quotas UC Davis had developed," Hardy said.

Hardy said the court's decision has done two things.

"It's given Allan Bakke a personal victory and it's said quotas based "It's given Allan Bakke a personal victory and it's said quotas based strictly on race are unconstitutional," Hardy said. "But states can consider race in a properly devised program. Race is one among a variety of factors.

"It will be important to see whether the Supreme Court limited its holding to the Civil Rights Act of 1964 or whether it based the decision also on the Constitution," Hardy said.

"The Supreme Court will avoid Constitution decisions whenever possible. I wouldn't be surprised if it were based on the Civil Rights Act."

Dr. Stanley Crawford, dean of the UT Medical School in San Antonio, called the decision "predictable."

"I hope this will not stimulate vast numbers of Bakke cases. I always thought you can't have your cake and eat it too, but it seems they (the Supreme Court) have done just that.

"At least they haven't totally ruled out affirmative action programs. Our program. . .is not based on race, but on a disadvantaged background."

He said his school will comply with the Supreme Court decision as soon as it is evaluated and explained.

One constitutional scholar said universities will feel pressure to keep quiet about specific minority enrollment goals.

"It's unclear what its impact will be, but it appears to say that if a university is too explicit about its preference for minorities the court will require it to be less explicit," said Mark Yudof, a University of Texas Law School constitutional specialist.

The court ordered Bakke admitted to the University of California at Davis Medical School and said the school had discriminated against him in denying him admission because he was white. Bakke had challenged an enrollment program that reserved 16 spots for minority students.

"It's saying in essence your (the medical school) mistake was announcing the number 16. It invites schools now not to announce any goals or quotas," Yudof said.

David Hershey, University of Texas admissions director, declined comment on whether the ruling could affect any special enrollment programs on the 42,000-student Austin campus.

Attorney General John Hill's office sought copies of the 5-4 decision and splintering opinions. A spokesman said no comment would be made until the ruling was studied.

"That ought to turn things upside down," said Rep. Bill Caraway, D-Houston, chairman of the Joint Committee on Higher Education Funding. "Frankly, I'm a little set back. I didn't expect it to go that way."

Man In Parallel Case Offers Bakke Advice

SEATTLE (AP) — "Instead of focusing on racial characteristics, a man should be judged for what he does," said Marco DeFunis after hearing of the Supreme court's ruling in the Bakke case.

DeFunis, now a Seattle lawyer, filed suit against the University of Washington law school when he failed to gain admission. The suit reached the Supreme Court in 1974, but was dimissed because DeFunis since had been admitted.

Now practicing civil law in a Seattle partnership, DeFunis said his advice to Bakke would be to "work very hard and do the job in medical school."

In the Bakke case, the court ruled on Wednesday that the University of California Medical School at Davis illegally discriminated against Allan Bakke when it refused to admit him.

He should "forget about the case and concentrate on the goal (medical school)," DeFunis said Wednesday. "I wish him all the best of luck."

DeFunis has never met Bakke, although they have corresponded. He said he doubts Bakke will have any problems with a backlash from the decision.

"I got along well with my peers in law school, including minority students," DeFunis said. "I was not discriminated against. They treated me as a fellow classmate."

BACK TO NORMAL — While machine gun-toting soldiers still man the streets of Matamoros, Mexico, local residents have gone back to the daily routine. The men in the background took advantgage of a nice day to get their shoes shined and read what the papers said about the recent violence. (AP Laserphoto)

Town Getting Back To Normal

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — It was business as usual Wednesday — shoeshine boys hawking their services, merchants peddling their wares to residents — but against a background of boarded up businesses and heavily-armed federal troops.

The daytime activity followed two nights of sporadic rioting by high school students.

Although it was quiet, school officials wary of potential trouble canceled closing ceremonies at the city's public middle schools. Students had swarmed the plaza Monday night to protest the recent death of a youth who was reportedly beaten by police.

"We want it to be calm," said Sonia Garcia Zuniga, assistant principal at a downtown secondary school.

Students gathered outside the school and waited to receive report cards.

The normal business activity came amid reports of a general strike. An official at the local Confederacion de Trabajadores Mexicanos, a union organization, discounted a government official's report of such a work stoppage.

The heavily-armed soldiers stayed on the streets throughout Tuesday night. There were minor skirmishes and scattered arrests.

One night spot in a local red-light district suffered minor damage at the hands of youths.

A military official at the local garrison said the federal troops will remain "as long as needed."

He was not specific on how many of the helmeted troops were on the streets.

"The sufficient number," he said with a smile.

Mayor Antonio Cavazos-Garza, who escaped from the angry mob Monday night, remained unreachable. Armed bodyguards outside his home said they did not know where the mayor was.

Garza has been unavailable for comment since the rioting that left three dead in this city of 300,000.

PART INDIAN

At least 90 percent of the people of Mexico have some Indian blood, National Geographic says.

The city building on the plaza was gutted by fire and the city jail suffered extensive fire damage.

Police Chief Emiliano del Toro resigned Tuesday, but the resignation was not accepted by officials here. Instead, he was suspended pending an investigation of last week's death of a 15-year-old student.

Three local policemen have been jailed and 11 suspended in connection with the death.

Nixon Motel Less Than Palatial

HYDEN, Ky. (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon, accustomed to luxurious VIP suites, has reservations waiting at the 24-room Appalachia Motel here where he will dedicate a recreation center Sunday.

"I guess it is right that he should be staying here because there was no other place in town," said Eddie Moore, who owns the seven-year-old, wood-shingled, split-level motel.

Leslie County Judge-Executive C. Allen Muncy, in charge of preparations for Nixon's visit, confirmed that the former president will be staying at the Appalachia Motel on Saturday night.

Nixon is scheduled to arrive at the London, Ky., airport 40 miles away. Muncy has asked residents to form a motorcade and escort Nixon back to this hamlet of about 500.

Muncy said a small reception is planned for Nixon at the motel Saturday night. Sunday, following a parade down Hyden's main street, Nixon is scheduled to speak at dedication ceremonies for the $2.2 million Richard M. Nixon Recreation Complex.

Workers are hurriedly finishing a 16-room two-story wing at the motel. Nixon is expected to be lodged in one of the double rooms of the new wing, which Moore said will be ready by the weekend.

Leslie Fiscal Court booked all 40 rooms at the motel a month ago when Nixon announced he would accept the invitation to Hyden. But Moore said he did not learn until last Sunday that Nixon would be staying at the motel.

Woman Blames CIA In Husband's Death

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of an American who was executed as a mercenary by the Angolan government two years ago accused the CIA Wednesday of luring her husband to his death.

Sheila Sullivan Gearhart asked a U.S. District Court in Washington to award her $33 million in damages. Among defendants listed in the suit were the CIA, former CIA director William Colby and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Daniel F. Gearhart, a former Green Beret who had fought in Vietnam, was tried by the Angolan government on charges of being a mercenary and was executed on July 10, 1976.

The suit claims that the CIA lured Gearhart to Angola through "treachery and deceit," that it directly transported him to the African nation and that it failed to warn Gearhart that the city of Sao Salvador, Angola, was about to fall and that he was likely to be captured.

The suit also contends that after Gearhart was captured, the defendants issued a series of public statements "calculated to distort and mislead concerning their lack of responsibility for (Gearhart's) plight."

It claims that the defendants "did falsely portray Daniel F. Gearhart as a criminal who had gone to Angola on his own and who was not worthy of any efforts on the part of our government on his behalf."

The suit also contends that the defendants, through the CIA, conducted an illegal propaganda campaign within the United States and that Gearhart "was persuaded by this propaganda ... to join the army of the National Front for the Liberation of Angola."

It alleges that even though all defendants had knowledge of the hopeless nature of the war, Gearhart was "transported directly by the Central Intelligence Agency into Angola without warning of the extraordinary danger to his life."

Gearhart was captured by Cuban forces in Angola on Feb. 13, 10 days after he left the United States. He had earlier placed an ad in a magazine, Soldier of Fortune, asking for employment as a mercenary. His family was deeply in debt at the time.

At his trial, Gearhart stated that the persons who recruited him had deceived him and promised never to engage in mercenary activities again.

Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., who appeared at a press conference with Mrs. Gearhart to announce the suit, said he had introduced a resolution asking the intelligence committee to investigate all aspects of the CIA's involvement in the Angolan war.

Others named as defendants in the suit were William Nelson, William Welles and James Potts, all of the CIA, Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft and Sheldon B. Vance.

Soviet Claims Denied; American 'Treated Well'

MOSCOW (AP) — American businessman Francis J. Crawford said Wednesday he is innocent of the currency violation charges against him and he does not know why he was hauled from his car and held for two weeks in a Soviet prison.

But the International Harvester representative said he was well treated during his ordeal and is back at work in his firm's Moscow office, "trying to sell tractors."

"I fully state I am innocent of all charges," the Mobile, Ala., native, dressed in a baggy brown business suit, told Western correspondents at a news conference in the company offices.

"I do not understand nor maybe never will as to why I was detained in prison during this investigation. However, I was treated satisfactorily during this period of detainment. In all my years here, I've considered myself in accordance with Soviet law," he declared.

Crawford, 38, came close to tears on several occasions as he was asked about his two weeks in prison. He gave few details of his experiences in jail.

Crawford was arrested the night of June 13. He was jailed in Moscow's Lefortovo Prison until Tuesday when he gained his temporary release through a U.S.-Soviet agreement to free two Russians held on espionage charges in the United States. They were released to the custody of the Soviet ambassador to the United States, Anatoly Dobrynin.

Crawford said he was released in the custody of the U.S. ambassador to Moscow, Malcolm Toon. Crawford told reporters he is under no restrictions other than those imposed on any foreign businessman working in Moscow.

He said he and other businessmen must get permission from the Soviet Foreign Minstry to leave the Soviet Union or to travel to other parts of the country.

Asked how he plans to spend his time until his case comes to trial, he said: "What I want most of all is to resume my duties in this office and return to a normal life."

On the subject of his wedding plans to Virginia Olbrish of Philadelphia, he said, "everything is in a holding pattern."

Anti-Bias Action Pledged

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter accused the government, educators and financial institutions of bias against businesswomen Wednesday.

He promised action on a task force report urging increased government help for women business owners, saying they face discrimination when they attempt to borrow money to finance their ventures.

"I don't think there's any doubt that a federal agency or private lending institution, an institution of higher education, has an almost innate feeling that a business investment would best be made through a man (rather) than a woman," Carter said. "It's not fair. It's not deserved. There's no reason for it. But it exists."

The task force urged a Census Bureau survey to count female-owned businesses, a computerized directory of them, increased federal purchasing from them, and more efforts by government agencies to provide training, management assistance and financing for female-owned businesses.

Carter promised the report would not "gather dust," and said he'd discuss the recommendations with his department heads at the next cabinet meeting.

The president accepted the recommendations in a brief ceremony in the White House Rose Garden.

"There's an alarmingly small portion of women ownership of active businesses, and (in) the financial structure of our country," he said, adding that only three-tenths of 1 percent of the nation's gross business receipts come from businesses owned by women.

"This is an alarmingly small percentage, and it certainly is not related to either the need or the inclinations or the ambitions of women, who want to be at the management level in the free-enterprise system in our country," he said.

He said women are one-third as likely as men to be in middle-or upper-level management positions, although "women have the same motivations as men for wanting to own and control and manage the business life of our country...to take what talents or ability they have and let that talent be expressed in production."

He said he wanted to help women business owners "not just to please women or honor women," but to help the nation make fuller use of "a tremendous reservoir of talent, innovation, sensitivity, (and) competence."

Change, Abuse Workshops Scheduled

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — Workshops on child abuse and changing society will be offered this summer by the psychology department of Eastern New Mexico University, under the direction of Dr. Natividad M. Allen.

The workshops may be taken for two hours undergraduate or graduate work in education, psychology or sociology. "Child Abuse" will be offered July 31-Aug. 5 and "The Changing Society: Implementing Psychological Change" will be held Aug. 9-17.

Topics for the child abuse workshop include child development and the family, adoptive parents, abuse and neglect and personality sub-types of abusive parents.

Guest speakers will be Dr. Joseph P. Cardillo, clinical psychologist at Bernalillo County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center in Albuquerque and Dr. Bill Krieger, director of psychology and research for Albuquerque municipal courts. Area speakers will be Jose Garcia, educator and registrar at ENMU and Ernie Holland, social worker for the Curry County Social Services.

In "The Changing Society" workshop, Dr. Allen will use the textbook "The Magic Theater: The Psychology of Adjustment." The book covers psycho-social theories of change, implementing change and analysis of transactions including one-up and one-downmanship and Freud's labyrinthine mind.

Movie Mogul Begelman Sentenced To Probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Begelman, who as head of Columbia Pictures was the main player in a scandal that shook the entire movie industry, was sentenced Wednesday to three years' probation, fined $5,000 and ordered to do one years' community service for stealing $40,000 from the studio.

"I have been subjected to the judicial system and I found it fair," said Begelman as he left the courthouse in nearby Burbank.

Superior Court Judge Thomas Murphy said that Begelman, 58, would not draw any jail time unless he violates the terms of his probation.

"It almost looks like a death wish," Murphy said of Begelman, pointing out that his record up to that point had been clean. "You are neither violence-prone, nor are you case-hardened," he told Begelman.

DAVID BEGELMAN

Richard Rogan, one of Begelman's attorneys, said a panel of judges had suggested that Begelman be required to produce a film documenting the dangers of the drug PCP, often called "angel dust," as part of his community-service requirement.

Murphy ordered Begelman to perform any community service his probation officer might impose. The film, he said, might be part of that service.

Begelman, whose movie box-office successes include "Close Encounters of The Third Kind," pleaded no contest to three counts of forgery and one of grand theft last month. The forgery counts were dropped Wednesday at the time of sentencing.

Begelman wrote three checks on his studio's bank account. The checks were for $10,000 in actor Cliff Robertson's name, $5,000 in director Martin Ritt's name and $25,000 in the name of Hollywood restaurateur Pierre Groleau.

Begelman, dressed in a gray suit and blue shirt, remained seated during the sentencing. He said nothing in court.

Asked outside court about his plans, Begelman said, "To go back to work."

A year ago, the industry reveled in its prosperity as it approached the end of the biggest moneymaking year in its history. But Columbia's stock took a beating on the New York Stock Exchange when news of Begelman's misdeeds surfaced.

Begelman, admitting mishandling the funds last fall, rejected broader implications in his case, attributing it to personal problems.

"My misdeeds, my misappropriation of funds...were aberrational," Begelman said at the time. "I had neurotic displays of self-destructiveness."

He resigned in October and went into therapy. Columbia, unwilling to lose a man who had saved the studio from the brink of bankruptcy, suspended him at full salary, then stunned the industry by returning him to his top post in December.

Two months later, the pressure of publicity and stockholder unrest forced Begelman's resignation. He has since been rehired as an independent consultant at an annual salary of $300,000.

Robertson, the Academy Award-winning actor who blew the whistle publicly on Begelman's embezzlement, predicted that other victims of crooked movie deals would be speaking out soon.

Recall Position To Be Decided

CLEVELAND (AP) — Democratic party leaders, meeting next month, will decide whether to take a stand in the recall election facing maverick Democrat Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich.

The date for Cleveland's first mayoral recall election is to be set by City Council on Thursday.

The election is expected to be held in August, but council can pick any date within 40 to 60 days.

Timothy Hagan, new chairman of the Cuyahoga County Democratic organization, said Wednesday the more than 600 precinct committeemen will meet July 20 to elect vice chairmen, and "the recall issue will be on the agenda."

"We will discuss whether we should be for or against the recall or take no position at all," said Hagan.

The issue is a highly controversial one for the party organization. Some Democratic leaders have said they are opposed to taking a stand, but Hagan said it was "a political issue, and I think the party should take a position on a political issue."

The Kucinich administration has been feuding with the Democratic leadership in City Council, but the 31-year-old mayor is reported to have some staunch supporters among the party faithful.

Legislative Committee Views Drug, Alcohol Abuse In State

By BILL CLAYTON

AUSTIN — An oppressive cloud hangs over our heads and casts a long, dark shadow. That cloud drug abuse, and the shadow is is crime, wecked homes, destroyed minds, abused children and other atrocities.

Drug and alcohol abuse is not a new concern for the Texas Legislature. In the last several sessions a great deal of work has been done formulating laws to deal with the growing problem. But it still exists and, as long as it does, we must persist in our efforts to control it.

The Select Committee on Drug and Alcohol Abuse and Control was formed as a special interim committee to pursue all possible research avenues in development of legislation and recommendations for the 66th Legislature.

Specific areas the committee was charged with investigating include possible legislative measures to curtail the supply of illicit drugs into Texas, revisions of the Texas Penal Code to inhibit distribution of such contraband, requiring alcohol and drug-related coverage in health insurance plans, and the state's proper role in providing assistance to diagnostic and referral services.

Thus far the committee has held two public hearings. A recent hearing in Austin was devoted primarily to testimony of measures to prevent transfer of illegal drugs along the Texas-Mexico border. Suggestions included doubling a task force now in operation along the border, creation of a separate district in the area to watch drug traffic, and the need for conpensatory pay for the dongerous patrol job.

Concern was expressed on increasing abuse of prescription durgs. Testimony indicates that some drugs are prescribed needlessly and recklessly for great profits. Additions to the Controlled Substances Act were suggested as a remedy for this loophole.

Drug abuse is exceedingly wasteful of human potential. Idealistically, we wish that we could take each drug and alcohol abuser and give him what he as an individual needs to replace that "habit" he has formed. Realistically, we know that government can never provide the cure-all for everybody's needs, but we must endeavor to form guidelines, offer needed services, restrict criminal profiteers, and educate the public so that they can make knowledgeable and rational decisions.

Humphrey Institute Funds Being Sought

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Money raisers are about two-thirds of the way toward their goal of $20 million to erect a building and endow a Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

It's not generally known that the institute already exists, but without its own building.

It's not clear how much Humphrey memorabilia will be housed in the new building, although one fund-raiser says it will have both a duplicate of the late senator's office and a working office for his widow, Sen. Muriel Humphrey.

The university's School of Public Affairs was created in 1968 as a graduate program for those studying public service and planning. It was renamed the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute last September.

The nationwide fund drive is spearheaded by the former secretary of state, Henry Kissinger. It is aimed at collecting funds for a new building — costing $2 to $4 million — plus an endowment to run the school.

The fund drive now stands at about $13.5 million, according to Robert Odegard, executive director of the University of Minnesota Foundation, the private money-raising arm of the university.

The total includes $5 million from congress, $1 million from Japan and assorted donations.

Although they are still after big money, including more donations by foreign governments being sought by Kissinger, officials say they hope hundreds of small contributions also will trickle in.

"We're still going to shoot for that $20 million, but we need those small contributions," says Curtis Carlson, a Minneapolis businessman who has donated $1 million.

Carlson says there will by an office for Sen. Muriel Humphrey in the institute building when she leaves the Senate, along with a museum-like replication of Humphrey's Senate office.

Humphrey died last Jan. 13 of cancer. Mrs. Humphrey, 66, was appointed to succeed him until a special election is held in November for the remaining four years of the term.

The main purpose of the institute is a paraphrase of Humphrey's autobiography, "The Education of a Public Man." The institute is for the education of public men and women.

The institute offers master's degree programs in public affairs and planning. It has double-degree programs jointly with the university's Law School, School of Public Health and School of Social Work. Students can earn two degrees simultaneously.

The site tentatively chosen is an unfinished classroom building at the east end of the Washington Avenue bridge. A four-story tower atop the base probably will be selected as the institute's new home.

John S. Adams, director of the institute, believes construction can be finished and the building opened by 1980.

Even though its prime purpose is education, Adams says the building will be a "tangible memorial" to Humphrey at the institute, and it will be an access point for scholars wishing to research the Humphrey papers.

The institute now has 14 full-time faculty members and 14 part-time. The part-timers include seven from other branches of the university and seven from off campus. The institute also does research for state and local governments.

Adams said new programs will be developed in six areas, all reflecting Humphrey's interests: economic planning; human services for different segments of the population such as the elderly and the poor; the law and society; urban policy; peace and arms control research, and world food and agricultural policies.

Lethal Bomb Found On Florida Roadway

KEY LARGO, Fla. (AP) — A bomb containing 150 pounds of dynamite found wired across an isolated dirt road could have been a warning to sheriff's deputies from drug smugglers said to frequent the area, officials say.

The bomb, which would have been tripped when a wire touched a battery 170 feet away, was disarmed Tuesday night, said Monroe County Sheriff William Freeman.

He said the wire was strung across a dirt road just 200 feet off the only through-highway in Key Largo. "A passing car could have set it off," Freeman said.

"We've had a lot of drug busts in that area," he added. "I don't know what they were intending to blow up. Whoever did this didn't want to leave any evidence."

In a seven-month period in 1977, Freeman said, officers confiscated 160 tons of marijuana from trucks traveling the road near the spot where the dynamite was discovered and from boats trying to land along the isolated coast.

Freeman offered no explanation as to how the bomb was discovered. A deputy and demolition experts disarmed the device.

"The bomb was new. It definitely had not been there a long time," said Deputy Tom Thurston.

Earl Griffin, a construction company dynamite expert who helped disarm the bomb, said three cases of dynamite were wired together with primer cord packed between the boxes.

"The dynamite was ready to go. The way the bomb was set up, it looked like a warning to the sheriff's department not to mess with that area," Griffin said.

Administration Fights Coal, Uranium Divestiture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration expressed its opposition Wednesday to legislation that would bar oil companies from owning coal and uranium reserves.

Administration officials told a joint House-Senate hearing that they cannot support bills now pending before Congress calling for this type of divestiture.

A recently completed, year-long Justice Department study of competition within the energy industry shows that such steps are not needed, Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield testified.

Shenefield, who heads the department's antitrust division, said that despite large coal and uranium holdings, "oil companies do not presently have market power" over either of these fuels.

His testimony to a joint meeting of the Senate Judiciary and House Interior subcommittees drew sharp criticism from sponsors of the bills, who reminded Shenefield that presidential candidate Carter had backed a form of divestiture during his 1976 campaign.

And Shenefield himself had expressed personal support for such legislation before the Senate Judiciary Committee last August.

"After the president telling us during his campaign that he wanted to do something about horizontal divestiture, I'm shocked and I'm dismayed," said Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee.

And Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said, "I share Rep. Udall's disappointment in this administration."

Energy and Interior department officials also testified in opposition to the legislation and in support of the administration position as stated by Shenefield.

But Alfred F. Dougherty, director of the bureau of competition for the Federal Trade Commission, an independent agency not under the president's control, disagreed.

"The trend of oil company entry into uranium and coal has reached the danger point," he said. While opposing full divestiture, Dougherty suggested limiting the percentage of coal or uranium reserves owned by a single company.

Both Carter and then vice-presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale indicated general support for divestiture during a number of 1976 campaign appearances and in statements and speeches — although not since taking office.

Shenefield said that while the eight largest oil companies control about 34 percent of U.S. coal reserves, coal markets remain "workably competitive."

Eleven oil companies own 56 percent of the nation's uranium reserves but the largest holder — Kerr-McGee — is not considered a major oil company, Shenefield testified. He said there is no evidence that any of these oil firms engages in anti-competitive practices in uranium markets.

"Neither coal nor nuclear fuel are good economic substitues for oil, vast supplies of coal are available with relatively small increases in price and, for major oil companies, revenues from alternate fuels are quite small compared to oil revenues," he added.

Offshore Oil Lease Hearings Draw Few

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — After only one witness testified Wednesday, surprised federal officials ended two days of subdued hearings into further mid-Atlantic oil and gas leases and said the public is apparently warming to the idea of ocean drilling.

"We're quite surprised at the lack of turnout," said Frank Basile, manager of the Interior Department's Outer Continental Shelf office in New York. "People apparently are finding offshore drilling is legitimate, or at least inevitable."

Only 23 persons — all from the oil industry, environmental groups and government — testified at the hearings on federal plans to lease 136 tracts covering 774,273 acres of the Baltimore Canyon Trough, a geological formation offshore.

The tracts are to be sold next February for areas 50 to 100 miles off the coasts of New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia. The new zones are north, south and seaward of 93 tracts leased to the oil industry for $1.1 billion in August 1976.

In the first lease sale, nearly 200 people testified for four days in similar hearings here in January 1976. About 175 persons testified in January 1977 at hearings in Boston and Providence, R.I., on the leasing of tracts in the Georges Bank area off Massachusetts.

Unlike the Northeast's two previous hearings, witnesses at the latest hearings generally supported offshore drilling. Most, however, had some reservations about specific parts of the environmental impact statement for the lease sale.

The U.S. Geological Survey estimates that there are 1.02 billion barrels of oil and 13.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas under the Baltimore Canyon Trough tracts. It believes by far the most oil and gas is in tracts now being explored.

Oil companies have sunk seven exploratory wells in the area since late March. One of the wells has been reported dry, but six other oil companies have not announced what they've found so far.

Cities Seek Aid To Cope With Sudden Growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is being asked to vote to provide $150 million a year over the next five years to help communities cope with sudden energy-related growth.

The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee approved the measure on a 10-4 vote Tuesday night, clearing the way for floor debate. Most of the money would go to Appalachia and Rocky Mountain states, according to sponsors.

But the measure may face a spirited Senate fight from senators from areas who wouldn't benefit from the funds. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, called the measure "a boondoggle bill that will cost the American taxpayer $750 million. It seems Proposition 13 hasn't taught some people anything."

Both grants and loans would be available to states and communities under the legislation. The money could be used for things such as improved road and sewer systems or new schools — any projects made necessary by energy development boom.

As many as 200 communities in the Rocky Mountain West and Appalachia could probably qualify for funds under the program, said Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a sponsor.

He said some obvious examples would be Gillette and Rock Springs, Wyo. — both of which have undergone rapid population explosions because of mining.

Caroline, Junot Wed In First Of Two Ceremonies

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco, who overcame the reluctance of her parents to see her wed a commoner 17 years her senior, married Paris playboy businessman Philippe Junot Wednesday in an intimate civil ceremony at the royal palace.

The nuptials will be completed Thursday morning with a Roman Catholic ceremony in the palace's small chapel.

Caroline, pledging "to love, cherish and obey," the 38-year-old business consultant and financier, smiled faintly as she said "Oui" — Yes — to her vows. The tall, ruggedly handsome Junot, wearing a dark blue suit, stooped to kiss his bride.

They were wed in the same ornate palace throne room where Caroline's father, Prince Rainier III, married American movie star Grace Kelly 22 years ago.

Rainier and Princess Grace looked on as Louis Roman, president of tiny Monaco's State Council, performed the 15-minute wedding. Also present were Junot's parents and about 35 other members of the two families.

"Princess Caroline's hands shook a little as she signed the register," Roman said afterward. He described the service as "nice, and in good spirits."

The chandeliers, the imposing ancestral portraits and the velvet-draped throne of laquered wood lent some majesty to the ceremony. But otherwise it was strictly private — the antithesis of the sumptuous Rainier-Kelly wedding of 1956. Caroline wore an ice-blue crepe georgette dress by Dior and her mother an apricot-colored chiffon.

The family had rehearsed the wedding Tuesday.

After the ceremony, the doors of the austere ochre-colored palace overlooking the Mediterranean were opened to all Monaco's citizens over 21 for a royal reception.

About 3,000 Monegasques filed into the palace courtyard to hail the newlyweds.

Each guest received a traditional paper cone of candied almonds with the wedding date embossed on the flap.

"It was wonderful," said one aged Monegasque. "We are always honored when the prince invites us to his home." The last such visit was in 1974 when Rainier celebrated his 25th year as sovereign.

The prince, wearing a dark suit and tinted glasses, told the crowd, "How good that we are reunited in the palace, the birthplace of our history. I have always wanted you to share the intimate moments of my life."

The Monegasques presented Caroline with a pair of Cartier diamond earrings. They have already given the couple a chest of silverware.

The confectioners of the Hotel de Paris, the stately old lodging house of Monte Carlo's casino clientele, sculpted a six-foot-tall multi-tiered wedding cake to be cut after Thursday's religious wedding.

Rainier barred newsmen from all the events because the family had decided on a quiet wedding reflecting its misgivings over Caroline's choice of a husband.

Though they have mellowed toward the 38-year-old Junot in recent weeks, Rainier and Grace were flatly against the match when Caroline announced it to them a year ago. They feared Junot was too old for her and too much a playboy.

At one time, the gossip sheets said Prince Charles of Britain and throneless Prince Fuad of Egypt were in the running. Charles politely declined to attend the wedding, pleading a prior engagement, but Fuad accepted his invitation.

The night before the wedding, the royal family gave a palace ball for 600 guests, many of them former kings, princesses and the just plain rich. The orchestra played waltzes for the older crowd, rock and roll for Caroline's set and a special rendition of "Sweet Caroline."

Caroline and Junot spent their last unmarried day in private and were not seen in the sunny, tourist-packed town.

Princess Grace eluded reporters and went into the Hotel de Paris restaurant to entertain friends at a luncheon. The guest list was not known, but it included at least some of her old Hollywood friends in town for the wedding — Frank Sinatra, Ava Gardner, Cary Grant, David Niven and Gregory Peck.

There was little evidence that the 40,000 residents of Monaco — many of them expatriates enjoying the principality's benevolent tax laws — were excited by the wedding.

"This is not like 1956," said a woman cab driver. "Many Monegasques are disappointed because they wanted a big affair to attract tourists and bring prestige to Monaco. But I'm happy. It means less traffic in the streets."

For the Rainier-Kelly wedding, Monegasques set off fireworks, sounded a 101-gun salute and cheered in the streets.

Each Person's Memoirs Valuable, Professor Says

AUSTIN (AP) — Everyone's memoirs — even those of "typical" people — have historical value, says DeWitt Reddick, professor emeritus of journalism at the University of Texas.

"Many have gained a renewed interest in living from others' interest in their memories," Reddick told a group of ex-students.

He described a man in his 80s whose first book of memoirs was so well received that he hired a secretary and began a second.

Police Seek Man In Attempted Sexual Abuse

Lubbock police Wednesday were searching for a man who reportedly tried to sexually abuse an 11-year-old child.

The youngster told police he and some other children were playing hide-and-seek in their neighborhood when a black man believed to be in his mid-20s approached the victim, hit him and threw the child over his shoulder.

The youth said the man carried him to an abandoned apartment in the 2800 block of Weber Drive, saying he would kill the victim if he wasn't quiet.

Once in the apartment, the suspect removed his belt and placed it around the victim's neck, according to the youngster, again saying he would kill the youth if he didn't follow instructions.

The child said the man pushed him down and, after the victim refused to remove his pants, the suspect pulled down the victim's clothing.

The complainant told police he escaped through a broken window in the apartment when the man began undressing himself.

A 19-year-old Lubbock man was arrested early Wednesday when officers responding to an alarm at Lubbock High School, 2004 19th St., didn't believe the man simply wanted to play basketball in the school's gym.

While officers were checking the building about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday, they discovered the man, who said he and a friend, who left shortly before police arrived, had come to the school to play basketball.

The man told police his friend had unlocked a door to the building so they could play ball, but further investigation by police revealed a loosened screen and open window in the building, reports indicate.

In recently reported burglaries, Patricia N. Moore told police someone took more than $1,800 worth of jewelry from her home at 4705 88th St.

Bruce G. Apsly said whoever pried the front door of his 4117 Brownfield Highway, No. 42, residence Tuesday night made off with an $800 stereo system.

Burglars got away with $494 worth of property, including $60 in cash and old coins, a watch and a stereo system, from Leroy Curtis' 5603 Magnolia Ave. home, according to reports. Curtis said the burglars also caused $60 worth of damage to his residence when they broke the front door lock and jamb to gain entry.

According to reports, a man filled his car with $9.85 worth of gas at the McLain Oil Co. station at 301 N. University Ave., and turned the entire pump around as he hastily left the scene. The pump caught fire, causing $2,150 worth of damage.

In other reports made available by police, a welder and trailer were stolen from a construction site in the 400-block of Toledo Avenue Monday or Tuesday. The loss reportedly was set at $2,000.

A $750 haul was made from the 1909 Parkway Drive home of Santos Urive sometime during the same two days, reports showed. Whoever got into the residence made off with two television sets, a stereo and a phone.

According to William Pratt of 4709 47th St., someone broke into his house Tuesday and made off with over $600 worth of property including a stereo, television and .45-caliber pistol.

Israel's Formal Reaction Said Key To Bilateral Peace Talks

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's foreign minister said Wednesday that Israel's formal reaction to a peace plan being drafted by the Egyptians will determine if direct Egyptian-Israeli talks are held in London next month.

Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel, Egypt's top diplomat, made the remark to reporters after meeting with U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts for an hour to review the Mideast situation.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said in an interview Tuesday that President Carter's administration was aiming for a series of face-to-face talks between Egypt and Israel, beginning with talks in London early next month.

The United States has been the middleman in trying to revive peace talks between Israel and Egypt. The talks broke down last January. Kamel said Egypt has "no inhibitions in meeting the Israelis" but that no decision had been made on the proposed talks in London.

"This has to be preceded by our presentation of our proposals to the Israelis through the United States and knowing their reaction and then we will decide on the basis of this reaction," Kamel said.

Kamel said, "If conditions are right, if we feel something positive might come out of it, we have no inhibitions."

Egypt's plan is based on Sadat's suggestion that the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River be returned to Jordan and the Gaza Strip to Egypt as a first step to a settlement.

Israeli security and the future of the Palestinians living in the occupied lands would be negotiated later.

Israel rejected the idea "without reservation" last Sunday, but Prime Minister Menachem Begin later said his government had not rejected the plan. He said Israel only made clear that it had opposed the idea outlined by Sadat.

Israeli spokesman Arieh Naor said Sunday that Israel views the return of the occupied lands before negotiations start as preconditional, thus unacceptable.

Asked if this clarification was a positive signal, Kamel said, "No ... they felt they did something unwise and tried to remedy it."

Israel proposes limited self-rule for Palestinians plus a continued Israeli military presence in the occupied lands for five years, after which the status of the lands would be open for negotiation.

Sources have said Kamel, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan of Israel and Vance are tentatively scheduled to meet in London July 9, presumably to discuss the Israeli and Egyptian peace plans.

Kamel said Egypt's new plan would be presented to the United States shortly before or shortly after the visit next Monday of Vice President Walter Mondale.

Mondale, after a visit to Israel, plans to stop in Alexandria for a meeting with President Anwar Sadat.

Fingerprints Said Found In Family Truck

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Several fingerprints, described as of fair to good quality, have been lifted from the truck of a slain Texas family, a spokesman for the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation confirmed Wednesday.

Ted Limke, OSBI chief inspector, said the fingerprints posed a "good possibility" for new leads in the case, which so far has stymied officers.

Limke indicated several prints taken probably belonged to the victims but that others "bear checking out — even though they could lead to a dead end.

The prints are expected to be sent to the FBI laboratory in Washington for a parallel analysis. Results are not expected for several days.

A motorist spotted the bodies of Air Force Sgt. Melvin Lorenz and his wife Linda, also an Air Force sergeant, last Thursday along Intersrate 35 near Purcell, about 30 miles south of here.

Officers found the body of Richard Lorenz, 12, Lorenz' son by a previous marriage, on Friday in knee-high weeds just north of where the other two bodies were discovered.

Police said the family was headed from its San Antonio home to Spiritwood, N.D., for the funeral of Lorenz' mother when they were slain.

Their pickup camper and two dogs were missing. The vehicle and dogs were discovered Monday in the parking lot of an Oklahoma City airport motel.

The prints were taken from the bloody interior of the truck cab and around the pickup's tailgate, investigators said.

"We worked all day Tuesday and came up with several leads, but we really don't have anything solid at this point," Limke said.

He added that ballistics tests on a .22-caliber rifle discovered in the pickup ruled it out as the murder weapon. Investigators said that a missing .357 Magnum pistol probably was used in the killings.

Agents believe the pickup was driven to the motel parking lot immediately after the slayings, early Thursday, and left there after credit cards and money of the victims were taken, Limke said.

A check with airline booking agents to see whether any of the stolen credit cards had been used to purchase airline tickets "turned up nothing," he added.

Plants To Be Moved

DICKEY, Maine (AP) — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has drawn up a plan to protect a rare snapdragon that grows wild near the site of the proposed Dickey-Lincoln dams. The plan, submitted Tuesday to the Army Corps of Engineers, includes efforts to transplant the Furbish lousewort outside the area of the $700 million hydroelectric project along northern Maine's St. John River.

The proposal is aimed at heading off a confrontation over the Endangered Species Act, which prohibits federal projects that destroy certain rare plants and animals. A similar controversy involving a small fish, the snail darter, has halted work on a federal dam in Tennessee.

The first book jackets in the United States were made in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1890 by Issac Hammond.

Carter's Policy Attacked As Unfriendly To Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Department officials, delivering an updated report on Middle East peace prospects Wednesday, found themselves defending the Carter administration against charges that it is exerting undue pressure on Israel.

In the course of a broad-based attack on the U.S. role in the peace effort, Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., charged that the United States has tried to interfere in domestic Israeli politics to force that government to make concessions.

This, plus refusal to apply equal presure to Arab states to reach a settlement, he said, "raises real questions as to whether we do or do not want Israel to survive."

Case, the ranking Republican on the foreign relations panel and an avowed Israeli supporter, also said he felt the United States is too deeply involved in the negotiations and should get out "before we find ourselves running the whole show."

Case's attack appeared to take by surprise the two senior State Department officials, Ambassador-at-large Alfred Atherton and Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders, who had been called before a foreign relations subcommittee to report on the status of the Middle East peace effort.

They vigorously defended the administration, saying U.S. approaches toward a settlement had been and remain "even-handed," but that the United States retains a "total commitment to Israel's security."

They said the United States has repeatedly urged the Arabs, along with Israel, to support the peace initiative begun last fall by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Atherton said the fact that Israel's internal debate is more public may cause a "misperception" that pressure is being imposed only on one side.

He said Sadat, as well as the Israelis, has been urged to propose ways of resolving the crucial issue — the Palestinians' future — and "an answer is forthcoming."

To Case's remark that the United States appears to be "pushing (Israel) until it snaps," Saunders replied:

"We don't feel it is a question of pushing Israel. There is a need for Israel's security to be assured, and a need to create a peace in which her security is permanently assured."

He said U.S. policy all along has made Arab recognition of Israel a basic principle for the negotiations. Although only Sadat thus far has agreed, he said, the United States feels that other Arab states — which he did not name — "might be willing to move into the negotiations on this basis."

Two Die, One Hurt In Big Spring Crash

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Two persons were killed and a third seriously injured in a two-car collision 5.5 miles west of here early Wednesday.

Henry Parmer, 32, and his 28-year-old wife, Quanita, both of Shreveport, La., were pronounced dead at the scene of the accident on I-20.

Another passenger in the Parmer vehicle, Sharon Renedies, 25, of Stonewall, La., was in stable condition Wednesday in Malone-Hogan Hospital here.

The driver of the second vehicle, Jeffrey Richard Perry, 20, of Odessa, was treated and released at Malone-Hogan Hospital following the 1:45 a.m. accident.

Department of Public Safety reports indicate the Parmer vehicle overturned five times after the rear-end collision, and Mrs. Parmer was trapped in the vehicle for almost an hour. Perry's vehicle, according to reports, skidded about 400 feet from the impact point and landed in a culvert.

Eck Curtis, Top Coach, Dies At 75

Eck Curtis, longtime high school and college football coach and a former director of athletics for the Lubbock Public Schools, died in Abilene Wednesday and funeral services have been set for that city Friday.

Curtis, 75, died early Wednesday morning at his home in Abilene after a long illness.

Funeral services will be at 4 p.m. Friday at Elliott-Hamil Chapel of Memories, and burial will be in Elmwood Memorial Park, both in Abilene.

Curtis had lived in Abilene since retiring as Lubbock ISD's athletic director in 1964. He had served in that capacity for about ten years, taking over in 1955.

He was born Esker Curtis, in Paris.

He was an athlete in high school and was the quarterback of a football team at Abilene Christian College in 1924.

He started his coaching career at Anson the following year. And in 1926, his Anson team won the unofficial state Class B championship, defeating Marlin 3-0 in a game played at Abilene.

Curtis also coached at Ranger, Electra, Breckenridge and at Dallas Highland Park. When he went to the University of Texas as assistant coach to the late Blair Cherry, Curtis had compiled a record of 235 wins, 72 losses and 17 ties in high school.

In 1945, his Highland Park team tied Waco 7-7 for the state championship. In all, his teams won 12 district high school championships.

He moved to the University of Texas the next year and served there nine years as an assistant coach. He resigned that position to become Lubbock athletic director on Jan. 1, 1955.

While at Texas, he coached present Lubbockite Bobby Layne ("the greatest player I ever coached"). Another of his pupils at Texas was Tom Landry, now coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

The year Curtis resigned as Lubbock AD, he was honored as a member of the Texas High School Coaches Association's Hall of Honor.

Session Prospects On Taxes Dwindle

AUSTIN (AP) — Chances of a special legislative session on tax relief dwindled Wednesday as three House committees began studying tax-break measures that could be used now or in the 1979 Legislature.

"Every day that passes lessens the chances of a special session," said a close associate of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby who has been in on all negotiations.

Earlier, Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he might have something to say about a special session later this week, but it might be next week before he decides whether to call the 181 lawmakers into special session.

"I want to be sure we have our homework done," Briscoe told reporters.

Hearings Scheduled

Speaker Bill Clayton announced that the House Ways and Means Committee and the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments would begin public hearings on tax relief measures July 5.

Clayton said the hearings would be part of "a continuing effort to provide proposals for tax relief for the 66th Session (in 1979) or any special sessions which might be called."

However, representatives of Hobby and Clayton have been unable to agree on legislation to consider at a special session. Briscoe said he will not call one unless he is assured it will be successful.

Special Panel Meets

A special House committee on property taxes met Wednesday, with executive director James McGrew of the privately financed Texas Research League testifying:

"Proposition 13 was a great thing for California, but I wouldn't want it to happen in Texas. It gets at the government closest at hand but not at the one causing the trouble, which the last time I heard was still on the Potomac. . . If the federal government would put its house in order and get a handle on inflation, then a lot of questions about property taxes would go away."

Measures Specified

Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, chairman of the property tax study committee, said he had talked with Clayton and felt that the tax relief measures most likely to be considered by a special session or the 1979 Legislature would be repeal of the 4 percent sales tax on residential utility bills; repeal of the 10 percent state property tax for state college construction funds; increasing the state inheritance tax exemption from $25,000 to $200,000; increasing the homestead exemption for those 65 or older from $3,000 to $5,000 for school taxes only; and assessing agriculture land on its productivity instead of market value.

"You are on track with what the speaker is interested in," said Debby Cartwright, speaking for Clayton's office. "All these items are being talked about at the present time."

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, said he felt limitation of taxes should be a subject of any special session. "If it isn't, we will catch hell next session," he said.

Miss Cartwright said there had been considerable talk among negotiators, "but we have not had time to analyze the impact this would have on schools districts, water districts and others. The more we got into it, the more complex it became. The speaker wants your advice, he needs you."

McGrew warned that many Texas communities, particularly in East Texas, contain large numbers of persons 65 and over. "If you grant them an exemption, you will put a big load of paying property taxes on those who are not that old," he said. "If you grant the exemptions, you should see that the state takes care of the increase."

McGrew also noted that property tax relief would not be just for farmers and homeowners. "Several years ago we had a study that showed that 75 percent of the property taxes in Texas were paid by business. I don't think it is that much now because of the fast rise of market valuations. . . but we are sure that business does pay more than half the property taxes in Texas," he said.

Walter Lilie, assistant comptroller, said the latest revenue estimate is that Texas will have a surplus of $750 million in the treasury at the end of this fiscal period, Aug. 31, 1979. He said if 1980-81 economic growth continues its current pace, that would amount to about $2 billion, giving the 1979 Legislature almost $3 billion over current operations to spend for the next two years.

Lilie said the comptroller had been unable to get any actual figures on the impact that a Proposition 13-type measure would have in Texas. "We would much rather hold back and give you good sound data a little later," Lilie said.

Senators Reject Curb On Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave the Carter administration a victory Wednesday by knocking from a State Department authorization bill a potential new restriction on the president's power to make foreign policy.

The provision, if approved, would have given the Senate a stronger voice in arms deals and other agreements with foreign governments by allowing it to determine whether any such proposal would be considered as a treaty.

Under the Constitution, treaties are considered by the Senate alone and require a two-thirds vote for passage.

Majority Approval

Other international agreements need only the majority approval of both houses. Some lawmakers complain that presidents in recent years have made increasing use of this technique to negotiate what are, in effect, treaties.

The Carter administration, meanwhile, has charged that it is excessively hobbled by restrictions imposed by Congress on the executive branch's freedom to act in foreign affairs.

Fearing further erosion of executive powers to make foreign policy, administration officials supported an amendment, sponsored by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., to strike that provision from the bill.

Compromise Agreed

When it appeared likely to be approved, sponsors of the original agreed to a compromise — offered by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, as a "fallback, fallback, fallback" position — providing for the administration to consult in advance with senators on whether an agreement would be submitted as a treaty.

Glenn's proposal was accepted on a voice vote.

In approving the $1.9 billion, House-passed measure for State Department and other foreign operations, the Senate adopted amendments reflecting U.S. concern about recent events in Africa.

The overall measure also was approved by voice vote and sent to conference where differences between it and the House version will be worked out.

Lopsided Vote

In a vote that proved surprisingly lopsided, the Senate approved an amendment calling for a severing of the limited diplomatic ties established with Cuba last year, until Havana removes its military forces from Africa.

The vote was 53 to 29 in favor of the proposal, which was offered by Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., in language virtually identical to that of a pending House-Senate resolution condemning Fidel Castro's government for its Soviet-backed activities in Africa.

Like the resolution, the amendment is not binding on the administration but merely expresses the "sense of Congress" that diplomatic ties should be cut.

Arguing against the proposal, Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said the U.S. Interests Section set up in Havana last year, though limited in size and mission, has proved valuable. To close it down would be "cutting off our nose to spite our face," he said.

Also accepted was a ban on shipments of police or paramilitary gear to Gen. Idi Amin's regime in Uganda, or the training of Ugandans in this country. Another would bar diplomatic recognition of Angola while Cuban troops are there, unless the president certified to Congress that such a move was in U.S. interests.

The Senate also rejected moves to expand the U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange program and to suspend U.S. participation in the United Nations trade embargo against Rhodesia until September, 1979.

The cultural exchange proposal would have used an unspecified portion of the Soviet Union's unpaid World War II debt of $674 million.

whether the affirmative action program at Davis set "quotas" or "goals," saying that whether the Davis limitation was described with either term "it is a line drawn on the basis of race and ethnic status."

Bakke, who now is a 38-year-old engineer for the U.S. space agency, said he was "pleased" with the decision and planned to enter medical school in September.

Officials at the school said they would obey the law.

Ralph Smith, chairman of the Legal Education Task force of the National Conference of Black Lawyers, said he hopes "the court hasn't become the assassin of affirmative action."

But Dr. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said that as long as such schools are open to blacks "then I think we can live without fixed quotas."

Later, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said the court had sanctioned affirmative action programs supervised by his department and Attorney General Griffin Bell also said the court had endorsed the government position in favor of affirmative action.

Two distinct majorities were formed by Wednesday's ruling, with Powell the pivotal character in each. Joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices John Paul Stevens, William H. Rehnquist and Potter Stewart, Powell held that strict racial quotas or goals as used at Davis violate the 1964 law.

Powell then joined Marshall, William J. Brennan, Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun in agreeing that some affirmative action programs may be valid.

Powell alone ruled that strict racial quotas or goals also violate the Constitution. Had there been a clear-cut majority for Bakke on that point the decision's impact could have been devastating to the civil rights movement.

In the opinion in which Burger, Rehnquist and Stewart, agreed, Stevens wrote: "In unmistakable terms, the (1964 Civil Rights) act prohibits the exclusion of individuals from federally funded programs because of their race."

He wrote: "It is because of a legacy of unequal treatment that we now must permit the institutions of this society to give consideration to race in making decisions about who will hold the positions of influence, affluence and prestige in America.

"For far too long, the doors to those positions have been shut to Negroes. If we are ever to become a fully integrated society, one in which the color of a person's skin will not determine the opportunities available to him or her, we must be willing to take steps to open those doors."

Bakke had successfully sued the university in state courts after his application to the Davis medical school was rejected in 1973 and 1974, charging that the admissions program reserving places for "disadvantaged" students was an impermissible racial quota.

Under it, Bakke charged, less academically qualified blacks, Hispanics and Asian-Americans were admitted ahead of him because he was white.

Bakke, who lives in Los Altos, Calif., never had to prove that he would have been admitted if the school had not had a special admissions program and the university conceded it could not prove Bakke would have been excluded if the program had not existed.

No whites have been admitted under the special program at Davis, although 245 asked to be considered. School records show that the program has accepted only blacks, Hispanic or Asian-American applicants.

A state trial court ruled that Davis' minority program violated the 14th Amendment as well as a portion of the 1964 Civil Rights Act that outlaws racial discrimination by institutions receiving federal funds. The California Supreme Court upheld the trial court's ruling.

The Constitution's 14th Amendment, approved 110 years ago, extended to blacks the promise of full membership in American society, granted citizenship to recently freed slaves and ordered states not to "deny to any person ... the equal protection of the laws."

Those words have been used by civil rights activists in virtually every case aimed at expanding the role of minorities in America. Their greatest victory was in 1954 when the Supreme Court outlawed racial segregation.

The racial civil rights movement gained momentum over the past 15 years as government-ordered programs began to give special preference to minority members and women to overcome past discrimination in business, education and government.

These programs, however, sparked numerous lawsuits, each essentially asking whether the government could take race into account for special treatment to help make up for official discrimination in the past.

The Bakke ruling had been anxiously awaited as possibly the court's most important edict on race relations since 1954. Billions of dollars worth of programs in government, education and private business, aimed at making up for past injustices, were considered on the line.

Court Ruling Causes Only Ripple Here

He said the city never has had a quota system.

In hiring fire fighters and police officers, Witt said the state law says the city must, after testing applicants, "hire from the top down, without regard to race or other factors. We have to take the most qualified."

This has prompted "a great deal of inquiry, but they (the city's affirmative action programs) have withstood the test of time."

Witt said the city's affirmative action policy has helped to increase the number of minorities in the city's work force.

According to a 1977 federal report, the percentage of blacks employed by the city has increased from 3.83 percent to 8.6 percent in the past six years, while the number of Mexican-Americans has grown from 17.9 percent to 18.2 percent.

Challenges Studied On Proposition 13

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court agreed Wednesday to consider three challenges to the Jarvis-Gann property tax-cutting amendment but refused to delay implementation of the law.

It ordered that all briefs be filed by July 21 and set Aug. 11 for hearing arguments. The law, which cuts property taxes by about 57 per cent, takes effect July 1.

A number of school districts and counties have filed petitions challenging the validity of the tax measure which trimmed revenues to local governments by $7 billion annually.

The measure was approved by California voters as a referendum in the state primary earlier this month.

The court unanimously agreed to consider one petition filed by 29 school districts, a second by seven counties and a third by the city and county of San Francisco.

The court also ordered that similar petitions filed by labor groups and taxpayers be refiled as friend of the court briefs.

All the petitions had urged the court to declare Proposition 13, the ballot name of the Jarvis-Gann measure on the June 6 ballot, invalid on a number of grounds, including arguments that it embraced more than one subject, was a revision rather than an amendment to the constitution, and was vague.

San Francisco's petition also said Proposition 13 impaired the city's obligations to pay the cost of employee retirement plans and health benefits.

Schools To Scrap Thought Exercises

ing "I saw these same things with the board in our own Sam Houston Elementary School, and to me it was an invasion of privacy, and if that's what we're going to be doing in our schools, I don't want my children to be involved in it."

A local sheriff's deputy urged board members not to scrap the decision-making program entirely, but to replace games like "Fallout Shelter" with more concrete, factual experiences taken from real-life situations.

"We've got the cases we give them where they decide whether to kill a man or not," the deputy said. "Where's the line? We can say we want to leave the sensitive stuff out, but when do we get to the point where 12-year-olds just have to decide to cut off one of his arms, and that's okay?"

Decision-making strategies and value clarification systems like Midland's are in use across the nation, school officials told the group. Still, the board decided to scrap the plans in favor of a basic drug education program that it says stays with the facts and out of students' minds and thoughts.

Tests to determine whether the one-year pilot program had any effect on students were inconclusive, trustees noted. Answers on the tests were lower for students in the program on some questions, but higher on others than answers of students who did not undergo the value clarification system.

Chlorine Gas Sweeps Pool, Hurts 240

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A cloud of chlorine gas engulfed a crowded outdoor swimming pool Wednesday, sending 240 persons — mostly children — to area hospitals, police said.

Spokesmen at three hospitals said all but nine persons were treated and released. The nine admitted were in fair to good condition, officials said.

About 300 people were around the pool at the time of the gas leak.

The leak occurred just after noon at Rosedale Pool in this Cincinnati suburb. The outdoor pool area was packed with some 300 swimmers and sunbathers who had come to escape temperatures of more than 90 degrees.

"Everyone was choking and gagging," said 12-year-old Dave Bohn. "Everyone shot for the doors. It was bubbling up out of the drain."

"People were dropping sick up and down the street," said James Ruth, Covington fire chief.

One of those overcome was 20-year-old lifeguard Jody Salter, who warned those at the pool of the gas, witnesses said.

After announcing the danger over the pool public address system, she ran into the pool filter room thinking that a fellow guard was there.

"She got a double dose and collapsed," said Lauri Edgington, 16, who worked in the refreshment area.

Carrillo Loses Bid For Case Rehearing

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Duval County District Judge O.P. Carrillo lost a bid Wednesday for a rehearing before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals of his 1976 felony theft conviction.

Carrillo was sentenced to four years in prison on charges of stealing taxpayers' money through phony equipment rentals.

He is serving a five-year federal sentence on charges of filing false and fraudulent income tax returns.

The appeals court upheld Carrillo's conviction May 10.

Gunmen Raid Villages In Lebanon, Kill 22

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Unidentified gunmen killed 22 persons abducted in raids on four Christian villages in eastern Lebanon before dawn Wednesday, the government announced.

The state radio said top officials of the Beirut government were meeting in emergency session to discuss the slayings. They were believed linked to a rivalry between two Christian factions — the Phalangists, who field Lebanon's largest private Christian army, and followers of former President Suleiman Franjieh.

The Voice of Lebanon radio, run by the Christian Phalange Party, said 40 persons were kidnapped in the raids on villages in the Bekaa Valley, Lebanon's agricultural heartland, and 26 of them were killed. "The fate of the others was unknown," Phalangist radio said.

A government communique did not say how many persons were abducted but said local police found 22 bodies near the villages.

Informed sources said those abducted Wednesday were believed to be members of an 800-strong Phalangist militia unit that attacked the mountain resort town of Ehden, 68 miles north of Beirut, on June 13. Franjieh's son Tony, Tony's wife and 3-year-old daughter, and about 30 Franjieh supporters were killed in that raid.

After that attack, the elder Franjieh vowed revenge and gave Phalangists living in northern Lebanon until June 30 to quit the area or pledge allegiance to him. Franjieh warned of dire consequences if they refused.

The June 13th assault and Wednesday's abductions represented the worst inter-Christian crisis since the 1975-1976 Lebanese civil war that pitted allied rightist Christians against an alliance of leftist Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas.

A predominantly Syrian peacekeeping force crushed the civil war in November, 1976, and has attempted the maintain order in central and northern Lebanon ever since.

In reply to an appeal from Elias Sarkis, Lebanon's Christian president, Syrian troops have been deployed in northern Lebanon buffer zones between areas held by Franjieh forces and those of the Phalanists to head off a possible vendetta.

Syrian troops were rushed to the scene of the latest killings as well.

Stress: Can't Avoid It. Can You Deal With It?

By Science Research Associates

Whether you are promoted on your job, buy a new house, go on a vacation, learn your child is truant from school, spend the day skiing or playing tennis, are divorced by your spouse, or suffer the death of a loved one, you are under stress, whether you are aware of it or not.

Stress affects people both physically and mentally. It often is uncomfortable. When it is intense, we say we are "uptight" or we are "not together." We may feel challenged, helpless, excited, frustrated. We may act quickly and deliberately, or we may be unable to choose a course of action, or we may act impulsively.

Many authorities in medicine, biology, psychology, believe unrelieved stress plays a role in a wide variety of physical and mental ills, including high blood pressure headaches, ulcers, diabetes and backaches.

As noted, stress is invitabe. But its intensity and, perhaps, some of its long-term ill effects can be reduced if people learn to choose how they will respond to stress-producting situations.

This section of the SRA Coping Skills Test is designed to dramatize the fact that you do have choices as to how you react to most stress situations — and that the way you handle a situation can make it less stressful. The answers suggested are those that a group of Chicago mental health professionals felt would be most productive in reducing stress. The professionals are on the staff of Psychological Resources, Center for Personnal and Family Life, of Olympia Fields, Ill., and include clinical psychologists and psychiatric social workers who work daily with personal and family problems.

You may disagree with these experts in their choice of answers for some of the situations in the test. They emphasize that in some cases you may be right, depending on your own personality, your value system, and the exact circumstances. There are no pat formulas for dealing with stress.

Mark the way you would react in the situation listed below. Then compare your choices with those picked by our panel. Their choices are on Page 16, Sec. D.

1. You have been informed by your daughter's high school that she has been cutting her second-period class for the past three weeks. What would you do first?
   A. Ban all social activities and television.
   B. Talk with your daughter, then work with her and the school to reach a solution.
   C. Consider this a "school" problem and tell school personnel that you will support whatever acton they take.

2. Sarah, 53 has been depressed since the death of her husband six months ago. What would you suggest she do first to deal with the depression?
   A. Read books on the subject and talk to others with similar problems.

Ford Acquitted Of Mishandling Bank Funds

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

W. Jaye Ford, accused of conspiring to misapply funds of the Slaton Savings and Loan Association in 1973, was acquitted by a jury here Wednesday.

The panel in U.S. District Court deliberated two hours and 40 minutes before returning to find the 36-year-old ex-bank examiner innocent of all six counts in the indictment against him.

Ford's face split into a grin and he turned to embrace defense attorney Tom Sims of Houston moments after the verdict was announced.

The bulk of the allegations against the Dallas resident had concerned a controversial deal involving the sale of approximately 8.3 acres of land near Quaker Avenue and South Loop 289.

The government alleged Ford helped engineer a false appraisal of the property in order to influence the association to make a $500,000 loan.

Ford was accused of later receiving $94,000 of the proceeds from the transaction in the form of a check to a company in which he had an interest.

Two counts of the indictment, not connected with the land transaction, had accused the defendant of causing false statements to be made to the local Texas Commerce Bank in order to procure a $700,000 loan for two other individuals. Neither Slaton Savings and Loan nor Texas Commerce Bank suffered any monetary loss because of the alleged dealings.

Sims said in final argument that the government had utterly failed to prove its case.

"They've produced nothing but a big cloud of smoke in this case," he said.

Basically, the government contended Ford was connected with Slaton Savings and Loan and acted as its agent, while at the same time being connected with another company, Bay Tree Investments, Inc.

Testimony during the trial indicated the savings and loan purchased the eight-acre tract in early 1973 for approximately $300,000.

Key government witness Greg Wood of 3312-A 74th St., formerly connected with the savings and loan, testified he made a false appraisal of the property in July of that year in order to justify a $500,000 loan. Wood said he had done so at the implicit instruction of superiors, but wavered on the question of Ford's alleged participation, saying he could not be certain the defendant was there when the appraisal was discussed.

The indictment charged the appraisal was made in order to influence the association to make a $500,000 loan to Bay Tree, which reportedly purchased the property for $400,000 acquired in the loan.

The land reportedly was used as collateral for the loan.

Ford was alleged in the indictment later to have received $94,000 of the proceeds from the association loan to Bay Tree, in the form of a check from Bay Tree payable to a company in which Ford had an interest.

The government argued that Ford helped mastermind the land transaction, acting in conspiracy with former association owner Edward T. Miller.

But Miller, called as a government witness, indicated there was no such conspiracy between him and Ford. He indicated it was laughable to suppose Ford controlled the association from behind the scenes, as the government contended, and said the board of directors had been proud of the Bay Tree transaction.

Ford also took the witness stand to deny any wrongdoing.

Sims zeroed in on Miller's testimony in final argument, stressing that the government had called him to the stand.

"Miller has nothing to lose — he is immune from prosecution under this indictment," he said. Jurors had been told Miller, 45, of Dallas, a former co-defendant in the case, had earlier pleaded guilty to one count of the indictment charging him with making a false statement to a bank. That count had nothing to do with the alleged conspiracy scheme. Miller, as part of the plea bargaining arrangement, had agreed to testify for the prosecution.

Sims also argued that Wood's testimony made it impossible to find Ford guilty of the count charging him with helping effect the alleged false appraisal.

"If the witness has a doubt in his own mind (about whether Ford helped arrange the appraisal), then there has to be a reasonable doubt," he said.

"I submit Mr. Ford did not cause Mr. Wood to do anything."

Ford testified he was not aware at the time that the $94,000 check from Bay Tree came from the land transaction proceeds.

Gartner Refusing To Step Down Despite Request From Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Gartner, continuing to defy President Carter, said emphatically Wednesday he will not quit as a member of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission despite a presidential call for his resignation.

Even if the president calls him personally with a request that he step down, Gartner told the Senate Agriculture Committee, "I would have to tell him I can't quit."

The panel called Gartner for questioning about $72,000 in gifts in grain company stock his children received, and about concerns that the gift presents a potential conflict of interest.

Gartner reminded the panel that he told the White House and Congress all about his family's financial holdings several months ago.

He said he has not violated any legal or moral standard, and has found no conflict of interest in his $50,000-a-year job.

Gartner repeated his intention to disqualify himself should any future conflict arise. He said the stock which has caused the controversy, and had been held in trust for his children's education, has been sold at his suggestion.

"If I resigned, it would look to the public as an admission of wrongdoing. I am not guilty of a wrongdoing," said Gartner, his wife and three of his four children seated behind him in the crowded committee room.

And when Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., asked him whether it is fair to refuse a request from Carter, who appointed him in the first place, Gartner said, "I think if there is any unfairness, it's directed towards me."

The gift has become an embarrassment to the Carter administration, since the stock was in Archer-Daniels-Midland Co., a $2 billion-a-year company whose activities are partially regulated by the commodities trading commission.

Carter, speaking at a nationally televised news conference on Monday, called for Gartner's resignation. " ... the image of impropriety resulting from the acceptance by his children of a substantial gift leads me to think it would be better if he did resign," Carter said, although he noted that Gartner has committed no crime.

Gartner told the committee the public requests followed two private suggestions from top aides to Carter and Mondale that he step aside.

Last Thursday, he said, Mondale's chief of staff, Richard Moe, asked him to quit. The following morning, he said, Moe and top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan made a similar request.

Soviets Report Successful Space Docking Attempt

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet spaceship Soyuz 30 docked with the orbiting space laboratory Salyut 6 Wednesday at 1:08 EDT, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The Soyuz 30, manned by Soviet cosmonaut-flier Pyotr Klimuk and Polish cosmonaut-researcher Miroslaw Hermaszewski, was sent up Tuesday to join the Soyuz 29 crew of Vladimir Kovalenok and Alexander Ivanchenkov aboard the space lab.

Tass reported that after the spaceship docked with Salyut 6, Klimuk and Hermaszewski transferred to the space station.

Soviet television showed Polish cosmonaut Hermaszewski and Soviet flight commander Klimuk as they boarded the space laboratory and greeted the two crewmen already on board.

The two new arrivals brought gifts, including a doll and a teddy bear.

"It's wonderful when travelers meet up along their way — even more wonderful when it's in outer space," one of the cosmonauts was quoted as saying.

A television announcer said all systems were normal and the cosmonauts were proceeding with their assigned tasks.

The Soyuz 30 flight was the Soviet Union's second international space shot, and Hermaszewski was the second non-Soviet or non-American to fly in space.

Vladimir Remek of Czechoslovakia spent a week on Salyut 6 with three Russians in March. Soviet officials said they expect to send up an East German later this year.

Tass said: "During the approach, docking and transition (from one spacecraft to the other) the crews of the spacecraft and the orbital station operated with precision and harmony."

Tass reported the new arrivals would stay aboard the space lab for seven days. They will then return to earth, leaving the original cosmonauts behind to continue their scientific experiments.

During their stay aboard the Salyut 6 craft, Hermaszewski and Klimuk will carry out a program of research and experiments worked out jointly between Soviet and Polish scientists, Tass reported.

The experiments will include a study of semi-conductor materials under weightlessness, medical tests on the cosmonauts themselves, photography of the earth and oceans and technical experiments associated with the spacecraft, Tass reported.

On television, while floating about in the cramped space of the entrance to the space station, Hermaszewski told his Russian comrades: "It is very symbolic that a friendship that began on earth is just as strong in outer space.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and Polish leader Edward Gierek congratulated the international crew on "the successful beginning of the flight," Tass reported.

"Your joint flight is a new symbol of the unbreakable friendship and fruitful Soviet-Polish cooperation, a vivid manifestation of our peoples' brotherhood, of the unity of the entire socialist community," their message read.

Tass called the international flight "another major stride in using space for peaceful purposes.

"It has great scientific and technical importance."

The cosmonauts thanked Brezhnev and Gierek for their warm greetings and assured them that they would do everything for the successful fulfillment of the space mission.

Kovalenok and Ivanchenkov, who were blasted into space June 17, have been aboard the orbiting space vehicle for 11 days. They have been continuing the scientific experiments started by their predecessors, who smashed the world space endurance record on the Soyuz 26 mission.

Cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko stayed aloft for 96 days and 10 hours. The previous record of 84 days had been set by four U.S. astronauts in the Apollo program.

The United States has not had a manned space shot since 1975.

Western scientific sources say the international launchings allow the Soviet Union to tap Eastern European countries for payments to support the escalating Soyuz space program.

Tax Discontent In U.S. Not New Phenomenon

By LOUIS HARRIS

Now that the first waves of panic that followed passage of Proposition 13 in California have subsided, it should be remembered that most Americans have been unhappy about taxes for a long time. The so-called tax revolt is not a new phenomenon.

Since 1969, the Harris Survey has repeatedly asked cross sections of Americans a series of questions designed to measure the level of the public's upset over taxes. The increase over the past nine years have been marginal at best:

—An 87-10 percent majority currently feels that "politicians promise tax relief before election and then do nothing about it when elected." The figure was 85-7 percent in 1977, 88-8 percent in 1975 and 86-7 percent back in 1969. It is clear that an underlying cynicism about politicians and tax relief has long been a fact of American life.

—By 74-18 percent, a majority agrees with the statement that "I resent my money being spent by the government the way it is." There has been hardly any change since 1977 and, indeed, back in 1969, a 67-21 percent majority shared this view. This means that resentment over the way tax monies are spent has risen by only 7 points in nearly a decade.

—By 82-13 percent, a majority also complains today that "too much tax money is going to people who don't appreciate it." A year ago, a 78-13 percent majority felt this way, as did a 78-11 percent majority back in 1969. Again, the basic public attitude has not changed significantly.

—By 75-21 percent, a majority now feels that "people in power don't know how much taxes cause people like me to suffer." A year ago, a comparable 73-19 percent felt this way, while back in 1969, a 67-22 percent majority held the same view.

These results clearly indicate that taxes have always been unpopular among the people who have to pay them. Sizable majorities of the public have long complained that they had finally reached "the breaking point" on the amount of taxes they pay. Today, a 66-30 percent majority feels that way, and this is almost the same as last year. In 1969, a 54-34 percent majority reported having reached the breaking point.

Perhaps the best key to the recent expressions of outrage over taxes can be found in the heavy majorities who now feel that they receive poor value for their tax dollars at all levels of government.

—At the local government level, a 63-34 percent majority is negative about the value Americans get for their tax monies.

—An even higher 68-26 percent hold the view that people don't get good value for the tax dollars they pay to state government.

—And the highest dissatisfaction about value received is reserved for the federal government, which receives a 72-21 percent negative rating.

The key word is "waste" in government spending. By 89-5 percent, a recent ABC News-Harris Poll of 1,500 adults nationwide found that the vast majority of Americans interpret the vote for Proposition 13 as "a strong protest that people running government will have to respond by trimming a lot of waste from government spending." Furthermore, by more than 2 to 1, Americans tend to favor such a measure for their own states. However, large majorities were opposed to a California-style cut in property taxes if it meant cutting by one third the aid currently given to the elderly, disabled and poor. And most Americans also do not want to see such a cut in service in public hospitals and public health care, in public school education, or in fire or police protection.

The task for government in the days ahead will not be to battle against tax cuts but rather to justify any increases in expenditures and to prove that tax monies are being spent wisely. The simplistic notion that the way to control government spending is to slash tax revenues does not appear to wash with the vast majority of Americans as they take a hard second look at the implications of the passage of Proposition 13 in California.

Vietnamese Incursion Into Cambodia Puzzling

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnamese troops backed by tanks and planes have penetrated as far as 37 miles into neighboring Cambodia, Thai and American intelligence sources say.

But they said it is uncertain whether Vietnam's attack on its Communist neighbor, believed to have started within the last two weeks, is intended to wipe out Cambodian border bases or topple the Phnom Penh government.

The sources said as many as 70,000 Vietnamese troops on both sides of the border may be involved and that Vietnamese were operating near the Chup rubber plantation about 10 miles from the key Mekong River town of Kampong Cham.

A Thai source said a Vietnamese move on Kampong Cham would indicate the raid was intended to do more than wipe out Cambodian forces, which have staged bloody raids on Vietnam from border camps.

Vietnamese occupation of the area would tie up Cambodia's rubber industry, providing a severe blow to an already crippled economy.

Many observers here are puzzled why the Vietnamese would renew fighting with Cambodia while engaged in a mounting dispute with China over ethnic Chinese in Vietnam, thousands of whom have been reported expelled.

The war along the 500-mile border flared up shortly after Communists defeated U.S.-backed regimes and took over both countries in 1975. Vietnam staged a major raid into Cambodia last December but withdrew, apparently under Chinese pressure.

American analysts in Washington say the latest foray appears to have brought some Cambodian territory under at least temporary Vietnamese control for the first time.

U.S. sources said the town of Mimot, about six miles inside Cambodia, was in Vietnamese hands.

The Vietnamese are said to be in the Parrot's Beak, a slice of Cambodia territory that juts into southwest Vietnam, and in adjoining Svay Rieng Province.

Hanoi Radio said Vietnamese troops annihilated two Cambodian battalions in the border area last week. But it said the Cambodians invaded Vietnamese territory.

Washington sources who asked not to be named said they believe the goal of the Vietnamese drive is to wipe out Cambodian base camps. The U.S. and South Vietnamese armies invaded the same area in the spring of 1970 in an unsuccessful hunt for the Communist Vietnamese headquarters U.S. officials claimed was there.

The war appears to be rooted in ancient ethnic hatreds and conflicting claims to the border territory. Each government has accused the other of large-scale attacks across the border and atrocities against civilians.

Cambodia has made no mention of a major attack in its broadcasts recently but last weekend accused Vietnam of trying to overthrow the Phnom Penh government with help from the CIA.

Plains Fair Lineup Adds Charley Pride

Singer Charley Pride will be making his eighth appearance at the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair here this fall, general manager Steve L. Lewis has announced.

Pride, who holds the record for number of appearances for a single star at the fair, also will bring with him the trio Dave & Sugar.

CHARLEY PRIDE

They'll combine for two performances — 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. — on Sept. 24 only.

The fair, which will run from Sept. 23 to Sept. 30, earlier announced four other Fair Park Coliseum stage shows, including: The Statler Brothers, Sept. 25; the Johnny Rodriguez show, with Linda Hargrove, Sept. 26; the Jim Ed Brown show, featuring Helen Cornelius and Wendy Holcombe, Sept. 27; and Eddie Rabbitt with Jerry Clower, Sept. 28.

The RCA Records star currently has 22 albums in his catalog, a dozen of them gold albums. He's also had a steady stream of chart-topping country singles although his music has spilled over into the mainstream of popular music.

He has racked up numerous achievements and is one of the hottest tickets in country music rooms in the nation.

His personality has been described "as easy-going as a tadpole on a water lily."

Dave and Sugar, who have appeared here with Pride before, are fast becoming stars in their own right. Their first release for RCA, "Queen of the Silver Dollar," stayed on the charts for 20 weeks, reaching the No. 20 spot in all three record industry publications.

Other top records have included "The Door is Always Open," "I'm Gonna Love You" and "Don't Throw it All Away."

All seats are reserved for all six shows scheduled during the fair. The sixth entertainment package will be announced soon, Lewis said. Tickets for all shows are $4, $5, and $6.

Special Trial System For Juveniles Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — Juveniles accused of crimes, whose cases are first reviewed by a court-assigned master and then by a judge, are not subject to unconstitutional double jeopardy, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

By a 6-3 margin, the court upheld a Maryland law which provides for a hearing master to determine if juveniles are delinquent. If a juvenile is deemed delinquent, his case is then turned over to a judge for a final ruling.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, in the majority opinion, said the Maryland system does not mean that a juvenile defendant has to stand trial twice.

"An accused juvenile is subjected to a single proceeding which begins with a master's hearing and culminates with an adjudication by a judge," Burger said. "The state presents its evidence once before the master. The record is then closed and additional evidence can be received by the juvenile court judge only with the consent of the minor."

Similar systems for juveniles are in effect in about one-third of the states in the nation.

The ruling came in a case in which nine minors in Baltimore were accused of crimes ranging from vandalism to assault with intent to murder. A court-appointed master concluded in eight of the cases that the evidence against the youngsters was insufficient, and the ninth juvenile was placed on probation.

In a dissenting opinion joined by Justices William J. Brennan Jr., and Lewis F. Powell, Justice Thurgood Marshall said the decision by the hearing master in favor of the eight minors amounted to a verdict of acquittal.

To permit a judge to overrule that decision is the same as allowing an appeals court to impose a guilty verdict for an adult who has been acquitted, Marshall said.

"The court reaches a result it would not countenance were this a criminal prosecution against an adult, for the juvenile defendants here are placed twice in jeopardy just as surely as if an adult defendant, after acquittal in a trial court, were convicted on appeal," Marshall said.

"The system thereby poses a substantial risk that innocent defendants may be found guilty, since it allows the state a second opportunity to persuade a decision maker of the juvenile's guilt after the first trier of the fact has concluded that the state has not proven its case."

The ruling overturned a decision by a three-judge federal district in Maryland.

Saudis Plan To Market Oil

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The governor of Saudi Arabia's state-owned petroleum and mineral organization, Petromin, announced plans Wednesday to expand into marketing and distributing oil on an international scale.

Abdul Hadi Taher told the Saudi newspaper Al-Madina that Petromin will enter the world market as soon as two oil refineries and a plant for the separation of associate gas are completed. Riyadh radio, monitored here, which reported the interview, did not give a date for the completion of these projects.

The two refineries will be built at the Jubail oil and industrial complex in eastern Saudi Arabia, and at Yanbo on the Red Sea, Taher said.

He added that studies for the refineries, which will refine crude oil marked for export, have been completed with the Shell, Mobil and Texaco oil companies.

Bentsen Warns Soviets On Confrontation Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, says that unless the Soviet Union ends its policy of confrontation in Africa and elsewhere, the Senate will almost certainly reject any arms limitation treaty.

"We simply do not feel that we can enter an agreement of such evident significance with a nation we cannot trust, with a nation that speaks of accord while seeking out confrontation," Bentsen said in a floor speech.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY

DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My problem is swelling of the joints of my fingers. They are so painful I can barely use them in my daily duties. I am 70 and feel in good health except for my fingers. I notice a hard swelling at the joints which seem to be getting larger. Can you tell me what this is and what I can do for it? — Mrs. G.S.

This sounds very much like degenerative joint disease. I prefer this term to "osteoarthritis," which, although it is a more common term, isn't really acccurate. It doesn't mean you are deteriorating, only your finger joints. It commonly affects "hinge" type joints. In fact, there is a jingle to describe the process: "When fringes on hinges impinges, it twinges."

The swellings are called "Heberden's nodes," which develop gradually and appear in the late stage of the disease. The constant wear and tear on the joints over the years gradually erodes the surrounding cartilage, exposing the bone itself. The swelling is a complex process, including bone and cartilage growth (to protect the joint).

The only optimistic note I can add is that the outlook is pretty good. The pain eventually subsides, although the swellings remain. My citing of the little jingle about "hinges" is not intended to dismiss the painfulness this can bring.

What can you do? Consecutive treatment is usually effective. By this I mean such things as hot soaks (two to three times a day, especially in the morning). Pain-relieving drugs on the order of aspirin will help, although there are other effective non-narcotic drugs that can be prescribed. We have too many examples of addiction resulting from stronger painkillers for these to be practical for long term chronic use.

I suggest you see a doctor, preferably a rheumatologist. The problem is well-known, and there are certain isometric exercises that can help keep your joints mobile during this period and prevent crippling.

We don't know what causes these joint disorders. In women there is a suspicious relationship to the timing of menopause. Degenerative joint disease is more common in men under 45 and in women over 45. My booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," discusses it. For a copy send 50 cents to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, along with a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll mail you one.

ZUCCHINI CASSEROLE

Tear off 18-inch square of aluminum wrap. In center place ½ lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced; 4 small zucchini, sliced, and 1 medium-sized onion, sliced. Sprinkle with 1 clove garlic, minced; 2 tbsps. butter; salt and pepper. Seal the foil to make an airtight package. Place on the grill over medium-hot fire. Cook 45 minutes, no need to turn.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes ankle swelling, and is it something seriously wrong? For a week or more I can hardly tie my shoe laces. I am 69 and seem to be in good health otherwise. — T.Y.K.

This implies sluggish leg circulation. Varicose veins are a common cause, and heart failure or liver and kidney disease can contribute. The symptom warrants a visit to your doctor. Varicose veins can be treated effectively, as can the other causes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In recent years I have been bothered by a bursitis condition in my right shoulder due to playing baseball in my younger days. I am 47 and am wondering if an exercise schedule would help. — J.J.R.

If your problem is bursitis the Codman exercises might help. These consist of holding an object such as a flatiron and rotating the arm slowly and in gradually increasing arcs. Then you can creep up the wall with your fingers, going as high as stiffness and discomfort allow. Another is done with the arm outstretched sideways with a rotating motion. Hot wet compresses should relieve pain and pain-relieving medicines as aspirin can be used. As with any exercises pain should be a signal to stop or to modify them.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a teenage girl with an overeating problem. So when I gorge myself I drink a mixture of Epsom salts and a cup of warm water. It flushes me out. I've done it for two years. I'm concerned about the effects of this. Are there any? — L.R.

This can cause loss of vital body minerals along with disturbance of your digestive machinery. Incidentally, if you think this is reducing your calorie intake, you're wrong. Most absorption takes place in the upper gut and the laxatives work primarily in the lower sections.

• • •

You can lose weight if you really want to! Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

PUPPET PROGRAM — The Lubbock County Bar Auxiliary will host a Friday puppeteer performance from 3-5 p.m. in the Home Economics Auditorium at Texas Tech University. The purpose of the program, to be presented to fourth graders in city and county schools this fall, is to acquaint children with the law. THOUGHTS ON LOVE

"Never the time and the place
And the loved one all together!"
(Browning: "Never the Time and the Place")

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: I am sick and tired of reading letters from people calling you names and complaining about something you printed. For example: The Sex Test.

For openers: You did not devise the Sex Test, nor did you endorse it. You merely printed an updated version which was submitted by three Dayton teenagers who felt you had an obligation to your young readers to let America know where they are coming from.

No one was forced to read the test or take it. Apparently loads of teens wrote to say you were some kind of creep because they scored badly. These same kids call you "Mother" or "My Best Friend" until you give them advice they don't want to take. Then all of a sudden you are a kook, a nut or a dumbbell. To all those sourballs who griped, I'd like to say: If you don't like Ann's advice, keep quiet. Remember, you asked for it. — Tyler Texas Teen

Dear Teen: Thanks for your loyalty, but actually I don't get upset when readers disagree with me. Sometimes they are right, and when they are, I don't mind admitting it. Please read the next letter. It has an interesting twist to it.

• • •

Dear Ann: I was sorry you let the cabal of dissenting mothers change your mind about bathing babies in the kitchen sink. You were right the first time and should have stuck to your guns.

In your first answer you cited the possibility of a baby accidentally turning on the hot water faucet. Well, that's exactly what happened to my child when I bathed him in the kitchen sink. He was severely scalded and I'll never forgive myself. Next time don't be so quick to back off, Ann. — San Antonio Mom

Dear Mom: At least 30 mothers had the same experience and wrote to tell me about it. This is not a huge number, but enough so that I am printing your letter and repeating my original warning. Mothers! You wouldn't wash your dishes in the bathtub — so why bathe the baby in the kitchen sink?

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: A woman who works in this rather small office loves to gossip. I really don't trust her because she seems to have so much to say about everybody. I've often wondered what she says about me behind my back. I have tried to avoid getting chummy with her but she has a way of getting people to like her whether they want to or not.

Yesterday I had a birthday. This woman came by my desk with a gift. I was so stunned, all I could say was "thank you." After I regained my composure I returned the gift unopened and told her I couldn't accept it. She asked, "Why?" I replied, "A gift should be given to a friend by a friend." She said, "Well, I'm your friend." I told her I didn't think of her that way.

Now I'm afraid I was a little rude. How can I patch this up? — Second Thoughts On The Third Floor

Dear Second: To refuse to accept a gift merely because you aren't especially fond of a person is a slap in the face. Nothing in your letter indicates that this coworker ever did you any damage.

I think you should go back to that woman and apologize. In fact, you should bring her a gift and tell her if she hasn't returned yours you'd like to have it.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Anyone familiar with thrift shops knows what a marvelous source they are of used and frequently high-quality merchandise — bicycles, books, household goods and clothing of every description — at a fraction of its original cost.

Recently I had a special reason to bless my local thrift shop, and would like to share my experience with others who may find themselves in similar straits.

Due to hand surgery I was sporting a cast and bandage the general dimensions of a honeydew melon, and no sleeve in my entire wardrobe would squeeze over it.

Since men's shirts have deep armholes and wide sleeves until they taper at the elbow, I hied myself to the nearest thrift shop where, for a mere dollar or so each, I bought several men's shirts and sweaters to coordinate with my slacks and a friend's borrowed poncho.

My daughter then hemmed the shortened sleeves to a becoming length and squared off any shirttails.

The gloriously economical result? I had a number of mix-and-match outfits in which I could socialize and return to work for one-armed duties, and for less than the price of one new blouse, had I been fortunate enough to find one to fit my "melon."

Now when you are cleaning out closets and updating wardrobes, before tossing out that outmoded hair dryer, the clothes that no longer fit your kids, or the paperbacks overcrowding your bookshelves, consider what such items might mean to those less fortunate than you are.

Thrift shops, local churches, senior citizens' homes, etc., would be deeply grateful for your donations. — Faithful Reader

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's an idea to make a room more cheerful for a shut-in.

I broke my leg, so most of my time is spent on my bed. In my bedroom I have several non-blooming plants, so I used a "twistem" (paper-covered short piece of wire) and wired an artificial colorful bloom to several of them.

Don't decorate too many plants or your room will look cluttered and spoil the effect. — Mary Layman

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found a great cure for a smelly garbage disposal. Feed the disposal a few small pieces or slivers of scented soap. Between the scent and the suds, odors disappear. — Mrs. M.J.

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's a hint for freshly chopped parsley in seconds."

Cut washed parsley stems off in desired pieces, and keep for soup greens in a strong plastic bag.

Then place the rest of the parsley in another strong plastic bag and freeze. Next day, take out and just crumble in the bag. All the parsley will be in small pieces just as if it had been hand-chopped. Saves time and you can take out the amount needed anytime. — Mrs. J.J.J.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband and I travel many miles each week to a supermarket. Our problem was the frozen food items that would start to thaw before we got home.

My husband solved that by putting an ice chest in the trunk compartment of the car with small plastic disposal bags and ice cubes to keep the items cold until we get home.

He empties two trays of ice cubes into each bag. When we get home he puts the bags in the freezer, and they are ready to use again. — L.A.O.

The unlucky expert had us in his clutches again.

We have to agree with him this time. The game was duplicate. Every South played in four spades and every other South made the contract.

The queen of diamonds was opened at all tables and after East followed with the six or eight West was allowed to hold the trick. Declarer would win the diamond continuation and knock out West's ace of trumps. Later on he would get to discard one of dummy's clubs on his fourth heart and lose just one club.

Now look what happened to our unfortunate friend. East put his king of diamonds on his partner's queen. South had to win in order to stop an immediate club return. Then he knocked out the ace of trumps only to have West lead his nine of diamonds to his partner's 10.

Back came the club and down went poor South.

SIGN OF THE TIMES — Officials of Texas Tech University and the city of Crosbyton work together Wednesday to hoist a sign designating the site of the Crosbyton Solar Power Project. Crosbyton donated land to Texas Tech for the project which will see a 65-foot solar energy collector erected as a test phase in October. Helping lift the sign are Dr. John D. Reichert, project director and associate professor of electrical engineering from Texas Tech, Norton Barrett, Crosbyton city secretary, and other Crosbyton city councilmen and workers. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

Crosbyton Solar Project Initiated

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Crosbyton and Texas Tech officials met under cloudy skies Wednesday to raise a sign dedicating 25 acres of usually sunny farmland for the construction of a 65-foot solar energy collector for the city.

Completion of the early stages of the project will precede the planned construction of 10 200-foot dishes designed to meet the energy needs of the 2,500 Crosbyton residents.

Dr. J. Knox Jones, Texas Tech vice president for research, accepted the deed to the property located directly across from the Crosbyton airport along with Regent Clint Formby and Engineering Dean John Bradford. They cited municipal officials for their "spirit of cooperation" and acceptance of the need for energy research.

The U.S. Department of Energy recently signed a $2.5 million contract with the university for the project's construction. Groundbreaking for the project is expected in October.

"We have witnessed another step in the solution to the energy problem," Bradford said. The project began in 1974 when the city asked university assistance in meeting increasing energy demands.

The Department of Energy originally denied the request for funds saying the project was either too small or too large to fit existing plans. The agency was involved only in the construction of individual home units or large industrial units at the time.

The department later created an intermediate area of research for projects the size of the five-megawatt Crosbyton unit.

"Even the federal government can't stand up to that kind of West Texas spirit," Bradford said.

White flags emblazoned with a fiery sun dotted the city square in honor of the dedication. An "it's too good to be true" theme marked the speeches of most of the participants, including project director Dr. John D. Reichert and Crosbyton Mayor George Witt.

The land donated for the project was originally purchased by the city for the airport and a city landfill. E-Systems of Garland, a development and production company for high-technology electronic systems, has been named as subcontractor for the project.

Project Director Reichert has called the project a "solar gridiron," comparing its shape to a cereal bowl. The suns rays are focused on water circulating in nickel alloy pipes reaching temperatures up to 1,000 degrees as superheated steam.

The only other known project similar to the Crosbyton plan is located in Marseille, France, and uses oil heated at much lower temperatures.

Somali Guerrillas Execute Captured Cuban Soldiers

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somali guerrillas angered by Cuba's intervention against them during the war in Ethiopia's Ogaden region executed their Cuban prisoners after trying them in people's courts, a guerrilla spokesman said here Wednesday. He declined to say how many were executed but indicated it was fewer than 100.

The trials and executions were in late February and early March, when the Cuban and Soviet-led Ethiopian counteroffensive against Somalis in the Ogaden gathered momentum, said Shamed Hussein Haile of the Western Somali Liberation Front

"When people saw the Cubans slaughtering innocent women and children they were so angry that we had no option," said Haile, a member of the WSLF executive council. "We also had no place to take them."

Most Cubans, he said, preferred to die fighting rather than be captured.

The counteroffensive ended the full-fledged war in the Ogaden between Somali regular troops and guerrillas on one side and the Soviet-and Cuban-backed Ethiopians on the other.

The Somalis want to annex the Ogaden to Somalia.

Somali regular troops withdrew as the Ethiopians reoccupied all the major towns, and the WSLF reverted to guerrilla warfare.

Since then the guerrillas have reported growing success in their hit-and-run attacks, saying they have killed many Ethiopian soldiers, destroyed tanks and captured large quantities of arms.

Because reporters are unable to visit the Ogaden, independent confirmation is not avialable. But Western and other diplomatic sources here and in Ethiopia believe the guerrillas are again succeeding in pinning down the the Ethiopians. The guerrillas had taken over most of the Ogaden before the counter-offensive.

Haile said most Cuban troops who fought in the Ogaden have been withdrawn and apparently transfered north to Eritrea, which is almost completely controlled by other insurgent forces. Cuban and Soviet advisers, however, remain in all battalions.

"Our strategy is to make it very unsafe, very insecure for them in the whole area," Haile said. "We are attempting to cut all roads so they can only communicate by air. We are mining roads and ambushing convoys."

Most of the Ogaden population, which is predominantly ethnic Somali, is in the countryside, he said.

"People have fled the towns, fearing Ethiopian reprisals," he said. "Our aim is also to protect the people against reprisals and at the same time make sure that the Ethiopians are unable to make contacts with the masses."

Because they can't attract people back to the towns, Haile said, the Ethiopians are attacking bands of Somali nomads in the region and are trying in vain to persuade the rural people to live in villages where they they can be controlled.

Hailie denied that regular Somali troops are infiltrating the area in the guise of guerrillas, but said some Somali soldiers joined the guerrilla forces rather than return home.

"But they were all people originally from the Ogaden," he said.

Most of the arms being used by the guerrillas, he said, have been captured from the Ethiopians. "But we are not pessimistic about getting arms from the Middle East," he said.

Some conservative Mideastern nations, concerned about growing Communist influence in the Horn of Africa, reportedly backed the Somalis in the Ogaden war. Control of the Horn of Africa is considered vital by the West because it is near important oil shipping routes from the Mideast.

The United States' public role in the dispute was limited to an appeal for a cease-fire and mediation by the Organization for African Unity.

Vegetable Plant To Open At Dimmitt

DIMMITT (Special) — The Dimmitt Chamber of Commerce will hold ribbon-cutting ceremonies at 10 a.m. Friday for the opening of Dimco Industries' new vegetable processing plant.

The facility on U.S. 86, east of the Dimmitt city limits, is expected to hire approximately 125 workers for the plant and 150 field hands.

The $1 million facility will process potatoes, onions, lettuce and carrots for distribution to all parts of the country but with major emphasis on Texas, Florida, Georgia, Oklahoma, Kansas, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan.

Truman Touchstone, president of the corporation, said that additional emphasis is expected to be placed on the production of vegetables in the Dimmitt area in coming years.

EFFECTIVE INSULATION

Modern insulation's effectiveness can be dramatic: Three inches of mineral wool or glass fiber in a wall is about equal to a stone wall six-feet thick.

California Tax Bill Said To Attack Poor

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith, decrying California's Proposition 13 as "a disguised attack on the poor," told public employees Wednesday to expect a severe backlash against the tax measure within a year.

"An attack on public services singles out the poorest of our citizens for the greatest deprivation," Galbraith told the convention of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Only the affluent, he said, have nothing to lose from the public service cuts necessitated by Proposition 13.

"The affluent have private schools and universities," said Galbraith. "The poor and middle class depend on public education.

Galbraith drew a cheering ovation from some 3,500 delegates when he declared, "The affluent, who are very affluent, can afford medical care. The rest need a national health service."

The economist urged public employees to develop their political clout as a defense against generalized attacks on their jobs.

"Nothing so civilizes discourse as the fear of political retribution," Galbraith said.

He praised public servants as indispensable in a civilized society and denounced the increasing attacks on them.

Rhodesian Guerrillas Kill Two Missionaries

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Three black nationalist guerrillas shot and killed two Roman Catholic missionaries at a remote mission hospital in central Rhodesia, the military command reported Wednesday.

The incident occurred Tuesday night, just four days after 12 British missionaries and children were clubbed and hacked to death by raiders near Rhodesia's eastern border.

A total of 11 missionaries and four of their children have been killed this month.

The Rev. Gregor Richert, 48, and Bernhard Lisson, 69, both German Jesuits, were killed Tuesday night at the St. Rupert's mission, said Monsignor Helmut Reckter, spokesman for the Jesuits in Rhodesia.

The three gunmen talked to the mission's 12 black staff members before shooting the missionaries in the face, Reckter said. The staff members did not witness the shooting but heard gunfire. Reckter said the gunmen returned after killing the men and said: "We have shot the two whites."

The German Jesuits run 16 missions across a vast stretch of central and northern Rhodesia. Reckter said all the missions have white personnel and there are no plans to withdraw them.

"We are determined to carry on," he said. "I don't understand it. It is a very hateful business, of course."

The handful of patients in the 40-bed St. Rupert's hospital asked to leave Wednesday, Reckter said.

"The black staff are still there and we will keep it open, but I think patients will be too scared to come," he said.

Lisson had worked in Rhodesia for more than 40 years. Richert had been in the country for 15 years.

Officials said the area around St. Rupert's — 90 miles west of here — is heavily infiltrated by guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union. The military claimed Nkomo's men killed the German missionaries.

The British missionaries died in an area where Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union guerrillas operate. Black members of the staff and pupils at the British mission said the guerrillas in that raid identified themselves as members of Mugabe's organization. Mugabe denied the charge and accused black Rhodesian security forces of committing the murders. Nkomo and Mugabe's forces form the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance.

A military communique said the Germans were killed by Nkomo's guerrillas who showed up at the hospital and demanded to see the priest in charge.

"Both victims were then forced to return to Father Richert's house, which they entered together with terrorists. Their servant was told to leave. Shortly afterwards, a single shot was heard, then three shots followed by a burst of automatic fire," the military statement said.

St. Rupert's is located about 20 miles from the Sanyati mission where an American Southern Baptist was bayonetted to death June 16.

Only a few hours before the military announced the Tuesday night killings, 21 relatives and friends of the British-based Elim Pentacostal Church arrived in Salisbury for the funerals of the 12 people killed last Friday night.

Florence Evans, who lost a son, daughter-in-law and grandchild in the massacre, said Wednesday that God had a reason to take them and that the killers should be forgiven.

"God's purpose has been served," said Mrs. Evans, who came to Salisbury to claim two surviving grandchildren. Her son, Phillip, 29, daughter-in-law, Susan, 35, and granddaughter, Rebecca, 4, were among the victims. But two of her grandchildren, Timothy, 10, and Rachel, 8, were at school in Salisbury when the raiders struck the mission, 180 miles east of Salisbury.

"We have to forgive them," Mrs. Evans said. "I just think ...the Lord has a purpose in it all. Something will come out for his glory. We must carry on the work in Rhodesia irrespective of this, and I know my son would have echoed those words."

Westinghouse Official Promoted

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. Wednesday elevated longtime executive Douglas Danforth to a newly created No. 2 job in which he will oversee the company's day-to-day business.

Danforth, 55, was appointed vice chairman and chief operating officer of the nation's 26th-largest company by its board of directors. Chairman Robert Kirby remains chief executive officer.

The new position was created because of increasing demands on Kirby, both inside and outside the corporation, Danforth said in a telephone interview. "He's been overloaded in the past year or so and I think he just felt that it should be a two-man job rather than one," he added.

Since 1974, Westinghouse has seen a steady growth in sales, reaching a record $2.3 billion last year. Earnings have kept pace, reaching $250 million in 1978.

When Kirby took over in 1975, Westinghouse has just gone through two disappointing years that saw net profits fall to $28.1 million in 1974.

The problem was diagnosed as over-extension and Kirby began cutting money-losing subsidiaries, including Westinghouse's appliance division.

"We've culled out bad business that amounted to a billion dollars in sales over the past three years, but the purification of the portfolio is essentially completed," said Danforth, who headed Westinghouse's Industry Products division before his appointment.

"Now we are highly liquid. We moved from a 9 percent return on equity to over 12 percent. One of my main tasks is to keep that return moving upward," he said.

Danforth said Westinghouse will embark on an ambitious capital-spending program over the next five years that easily could be double the approximately $900 million spent since 1973.

"It'll be spent in a variety of places. We'll make sure that businesses that have historically been healthy will get top priority for programs that will make them stronger.

"We expect new factories to be built and considerable money will be spent on those plants that need to be upgraded," he added.

Danforth said little about litigation involving Westinghouse and utilities which have charged the company with reneging on uranium supply contracts. Ten utilities sued the corporation for $2.5 billion in damages, but two have since settled out of court.

A federal judge in Richmond, Va., is deliberating on the testimony and trial evidence, and he has encouraged the parties to negotiate a settlement. "Discussions are taking place," Danforth said.

In announcing Danforth's new job, Kirby referred to the amount of time the uranium case has required.

"Satisfactory resolution of the uranium litigation remains the major corporate objective.... I plan to devote as much time as is necessary to reach equitable settlements with all parties.

"In addition to the uranium negotiations, the growth of the corporation makes it desirable to create the position of chief operating officer," Kirby said in a statement.

Oregon Baby Declared Dead By Court

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A 2-month-old boy, whose father has been charged with beating him, has been declared dead by court order although his body functions are being maintained by a life-support system, a hospital spokesman said Wednesday.

Wayne K. McLaughlin Jr. had been in critical condition at the University of Oregon's Doernbecher Memorial Hospital since June 16. His father, Wayne K. McLaughlin, 22, was accused of beating the baby and charged with first-degree assault.

The child was declared dead at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday. A hospital spokesman said a brain scan showed "no brain activity."

"He is still on a life support system and apparently will remain on that until a decision by the Multnomah County Court, which had issued a temporary restraining order on removal of the life support system," Tim Marsh, hospital information officer, said.

A judge granted the order Monday, after the attorney for the father said the hospital might be considering removing the life-support system.

Dr. Donald Kassenbaum, vice president for hospital affairs, called the order "an extraordinary intrusion into medical care."

An attorney from the state attorney general's office planned to ask that the temporary restraining order be overturned, said Michele Wiley, University of Oregon Health Sciences Center information officer.

"We do have an Oregon law that defines brain death and the child has met the criteria," Miss Wiley added. "It's a case where, without the court having stepped in, the child would have been dead. I mean he is dead, but he would not still be on a life-support system."

She said the baby weighed 9 pounds, 15 ounces and was being treated in the pediatric intensive care unit. She said he had suffered head injuries and bruises.

"The child was brought to us by the mother and she said the child had been beaten," Miss Wiley said.

In a similar case in St. Paul, Minn., a 24-year-old woman will stand trial Aug. 14 on charges of murdering her 4-year-old daughter. The child was declared "brain dead" on June 16 and is breathing with the help of a respirator.

Governor Doubts TM As Way To Help State

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy says he's not going to endorse transcendental meditation, nor is he going to speculate on whether TM can turn Rhode Island into an ideal state.

But the Democratic governor told three TM leaders Tuesday that if conditions in the state improve dramatically in the next few weeks, he'll let them know. TM leaders are conducting a campaign to recruit 4 percent.

Downtown Rotary Installs Officers

Taking over as president for the retiring Ray Diekemper was Warlick Carr, who will serve until next July.

Other new officers include William H. Tinney, first vice president; Ed Irons, second vice president, William R. (Bill) Moss, sergeant at arms, Joe Minkley, secretary, George A. Pratas, treasurer, and Syble Hames, executive secretary.

New directors, named for two years, will include Curtis Barrett, W.R. Dunbar, R.P. Fuller and Joe L. Murfee III. Holdover board members include Roy L. Ward, Irons, Tinney and John Selby, named to finish the term of Max Dodson, who died the past week.

The officers were installed by J. Davis Armistead, who will assume duties as governor of District 573, marking only the second time that Lubbock has had a man in that position.

Military High School In Works

CINCINNATI (AP) — A military school is being developed with the help of the U.S. Army within the Cincinnati public school system.

"As far as the people in the Pentagon know, it's the first time an active duty officer has been assigned as a consultant to a public school system," said Thomas Flaherty, the school district supervisor coordinating the program.

The military alternative school will be a four-year high school program enrolling 100-120 students and dealing with all four branches of service.

Students will be prepared to enter the military academies, or to enter military service directly at advanced pay. Students would not have to commit themselves however to a military career.

In the fall, a team from the Ft. Monroe, Va., Army Training Command will visit the Cincinnati school district to study program plans for possible use in other school districts, Flaherty said.

The appointment of Capt. John Egan represented the culmination of a yearlong battle with Pentagon officials to help the program.

The alternative program was initially shelved last September when Pentagon authorities refused to allow the Morrow Army Reserve Center to be used.

Pressure by state legislators helped to bring about a change of heart, Flaherty said.

"There weren't any regulations or precedents for dealing with this," Flaherty said.

Egan, formerly the metropolitan Cincinnati area commander for U.S. Army recruiting, believes his job is to help both the school district and the military.

He will be helping the district develop courses in military subjects and acquire the proper textbooks and materials.

The military will be helped, he said, "by developing a program that is innovative and worthwhile that will raise the quality of the young men and women we might be seeing as the soldiers of the future."

Outside Water Purchase By River Unit Approved

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Upper Colorado River Authority may purchase water from another district — including water from the proposed Stacy reservoir project and store it in a reservoir outside its district boundaries prior to distribution, Attorney General John Hill has ruled.

However, the district can't sell that water to users outside the district, he added.

In an opinion released Wednesday, Hill said UCRA has authority "to use the Stacy Reservoir for impoundment of purchased water prior to distribution to users within the district."

Stacy Reservoir is proposed for construction by Colorado River Municipal Water District in Coleman, Concho and Runnels counties. The application before the Texas Water Commission is being opposed by the Lower Colorado River Authority and City of Austin.

UCRA Chairman Everett J. Grindstaff, Ballinger, had asked for the opinion, and had specifically raised the question of impounding purchased water in Stacy reservoir "pending actual need by the users in its district," and of the interim sale of the water to users outside the district — since the authority "will not need to use the purchased water within its boundaries for a 10-year period."

Hill noted that the authority has specific authority to store and sell Colorado River water within its district, and to sell water outside the district — along with a "general grant of power" to perform the same services as other similar districts.

Water Projects Attack Heard By Senate Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, already defeated in the House in his fight to trim federal spending on water projects, Wednesday took his case to the Senate.

Both the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation urged a Senate appropriations subcommittee to reject water projects which the House funded over the president's objections.

The projects would cost $21 million in the budget year starting Oct. 1 and a total of $650 million if fully constructed.

"The House included funds for five construction projects which the president specifically recommended not be built for environmental or economic reasons," said Maj. Gen. Charles McGinnis, director of Civil Works for the corps.

"The corps subscribed to the criteria used in the evaluation (by the president). We respectfully recommend that funding for these five projects be deleted."

The five projects are Bayou Bodcau in Louisiana; LaFarge Lake, Wis.; Lukfata Lake, Okla.; Meramec Park Lake, Mo.; and Yatesville Lake, Ky.

McGinnis told the subcommittee on public works appropriations that the House added "numerous other unbudgeted construction projects" which do not meet the president's criteria as spelled out in his water resources message. He recommended that these projects also be deleted.

C.I. Barrett, an assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, said funding should not be provided for the planning of two major construction projects administered by his agency, nor for construction of a third project.

The two projects in the planning stage are the Fruitland Mesa and Savory Pot Hook projects in Colorado. The third project is the Narrows Unit, also in Colorado.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., subcommittee chairman, suggested that further study of the two projects might prove fruitful, but Barrett said both projects had been studied and found uneconomical.

"We don't feel that another study would make them more (economically) feasible," Barrett said. "We don't have the staff to undertake another study."

As for the Narrows Unit in Colorado, Barrett said his agency is reviewing its environmental impact and has not made a final decision on construction.

He said there was a possibility that the project could harm two endangered species — the whooping crane and the bald eagle.

Nearly all the money for the eight projects was deleted last year after Carter, who wanted to kill 15 projects, and Congress, which wanted to fund them all, agreed to a compromise.

Carter has indicated that he might veto legislation that includes funding for the eight projects.

Bermuda Exchange Offers Leisurely Trading

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — It has no ticker tape, no trading floor, no noisy crowd of brokers, and not much to offer day-traders interested in fast money.

Things operate on a pretty modest scale at the Bermuda Stock Exchange — 775 miles across the sea from Wall Street and probably the world's smallest market for stocks and bonds.

One Monday this month, roughly 2,700 people thronged the floor of the New York Stock Exchange during a typical six-hour session in which 25.50 million shares changed hands.

The same day, it took four women and two men just 21 minutes in a small conference room at the Bermuda Provident Bank Ltd. to trade 163 shares of stock and three bonds worth $3,000 before they adjourned.

The Bermuda exchange was established in early 1971 to provide a market for investors in about two dozen companies here.

The list includes the four Bermudian banks; utilities like Bermuda Electric Light, Bermuda Telephone and the Watlington Water Works, and a variety of local businesses ranging from publishing and broadcasting companies to Kentucky Fried Chicken (Bermuda) Ltd.

The exchange's weekly Monday afternoon meetings go according to a set routine. Each local bank sends a representative to act as a broker, the host bank provides a "referee" to run the session, and a secretary is present to record what takes place.

The bank representatives begin by drawing numbered table-tennis balls from a black bag to determine the order in which they may offer whatever shares they have for sale as the name of each stock is called.

"When the rules were written, they were called the Gentleman's Etiquette for Trading on the Exchange," said Betty Brown of the Bermuda Provident Bank, who was taking her turn as referee the day a recent visitor sat in on the proceedings. "Now we just call them the rules of trading."

Some other, more traditional, modes of Bermudian behavior persist, however. Kennedy Parker of the Bank of N.T. Butterfield, a one-time manager of a brokerage house branch office in Short Hills, N.J. who came here about six years ago, attended the session dressed in a blue blazer and tie, blue knee socks and a dark-red pair of Bermuda shorts.

Though it lacks most of the glamorous trappings, the Bermuda market apparently differs little from the world's other exchanges in its susceptibility to unpredictable fluctuations.

In 1977, for instance, an index of 10 Bermudian stocks nearly doubled, starting the year at 116 and reaching 230.9 by December. The year's trading volume set a record of 339,376 shares, and the total value of securities changing hands reached $4.51 million.

Since a outbreak of civil unrest in December that received worldwide attention, the index has fallen back to 213 as of mid-June.

"Activity on the Exchange has dwindled progressively so far this year," the Royal Gazette, one of Bermuda's newspapers, observed in a recent article.

"Most market officials attribute this to investor unease after last December's riots and the fact interest rates abroad are rising markedly, which makes it more attractive for an investor to send money overseas."

For a client on the telephone asking about the market's recent weakness, Vanderpoel Adriance Jr., a Bank of Butterfield investment consultant, offered a more universal answer:

Little Time Lost Because Of Strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lost working time caused by strikes last month fell to one of the lowest levels for a May since World War II, the government reported Wednesday.

The Labor Departvent's Bureau of Labor Statistics said work stoppages in May cost business and industry the loss of 1.6 days for each 1,000 days of working time.

That was the the lowest idleness rate for a May since 1973 and the third lowest for that month since 1945, the bureau aid.

Lost working time due to strikes normally is high during May because of a seasonal increase in major conract terminations and large strikes, said the bureau, which attributed the low idleness rate for last month to an absence of many large strikes.

The May rate compares with 1.2 lost days per 1,000 in April.

Strike-related idleness during the first five months of 1978 averaged 2 days for each 1,000 days of working time, the highest for the period since 1970, the bureau said. The 110-day nationwide coal strike, which ended in late March, was responsible for much of the high rate, the bureau said.

According to government figures, there were 835 strikes in effect during May, the lowest number for that month in 11 years. Approximately 307,000 workers participated in the walkouts, which resulted in 3.1 million worker days off the job.

WORST BRIDGE DISASTER

The worst bridge disaster in history was the collapse of a suspension bridge at Angers, Frances, in 1850, as a regiment of soldiers marched across. Some 200 perished.

Blumenthal Assails 'Millionaire's Relief Act'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to cut the capital gains tax in half is nothing more than "a millionaire's tax relief bill," Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said Wednesday, arguing it would accomplish little of what its backers claim it will do.

Blumenthal said the measure would cost the U.S. Treasury $2.4 billion at a time when budget deficits are a major worry, and he said virtually all of the benefits would go to the wealthy.

"This would be called the Millionaire's Relief Act of 1978," Blumenthal told the Senate Finance Committee's subcommittee on taxation during the first of two days of hearings on the bill.

The bill is a Republican initiative, but has widespread backing among Democrats, and the Carter administration is now fighting an uphill battle in its effort to defeat it. Carter originally had favored an increase in the capital gains tax.

Carter said at his news conference earlier this week that he will veto the bill if it passes, that it provides "huge windfalls for millionaires and two bits for the average American."

But several proponents of the bill accused the administration of using "demagoguery" instead of facts to try to defeat the legislation, saying such a tactic is harmful to the public interest.

One backer, former Assistant Treasury Secretary Charls Walker, didn't dispute that the proposal would reduce the tax rate for the wealthy, but said it would indirectly benefit all Americans and should increase, rather than decrease, federal revenues.

The main purpose of the lower tax would be to increase investment, which in turn would boost production and create more jobs, said Walker, who is now chairman of a group called the American Council for Capital Formation.

Both opponents and proponents presented an array of contradictory statistics and claims and counter-claims to support their arguments. But it appeared from the outset that the five members of the subcommittee who attended the session favored a reduction in capital gains taxes, indicating the difficult battle that lies ahead for the administration on the issue.

The lawmaker whose name has become most associated with the proposal, Rep. William A. Steiger, R-Wis., testified and predicted the House Ways and Means Committee will clear a tax bill that includes a reduction in the capital gains tax by mid-July. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind-R-Va., who presided at the hearing, pointed to a "ground-swell of support" in both the House and the Seante for a reduction in capital gains tax rates.

A capital gain is the profit that someones makes when he or she sells a stock, a business or a home. It is the difference between the buying and the selling price, but there is no tax until the investment is actually sold.

A capital gain from a business, land or stock now is taxed for individuals at a rate equal to one-half of the taxpayer's rate on ordinary forms of income, such as wages. Until 1969, when it was increased to its present level, the tax rate was only 25 percent.

Steiger's proposal is to reduce the capital gains tax to its 1969 level. He told the committee that the increase in the tax in that year has contributed to the slump in the nation's economy that has occured since then.

Federal Short Films Project Due Expansion In Second Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expansion of a project to return short films to U.S. motion picture houses, already the subject of audience acclaim, was announced Wednesday by the National Endowment for the Arts.

Four animated films of considerable creativity have been shown since February. The endowment chairman, Livingston L. Biddle Jr., said they have been seen by more than one million persons, and that spot surveys indicate that 88 percent of the audience would like to see more shorts.

The films, made by independent filmmakers, are distributed to theaters at no cost to them. Each filmmaker was given $2,000 for non-exclusive use of his film in 35 mm format for three years. Next year the amount will be raised to $2,500. Some of the producers had previously received grants from the endowment, the American Film Institute or other sources.

Catherine Wyler, assistant director for media arts at the endowment, said the aim in the second year is to comb the nation for the best 100 short films, later to be screened down to 10 for theater distribution. Each film is transformed from 16 mm to 35 mm at the agency's expense. Fifty prints of each are made, so the expectation is that by this time next year 500 prints will be in distribution, all across the country.

The venture has the endorsement and cooperation of the National Association of Theater Owners and the Motion Picture Association of America, in whose Washington theater the four films now being shown were screened for media representatives.

The endowment has contracted with the Foundation for Independent Video and Tape, a service organization in New York City, to administer the project and distribute the films. Alan Mitosky, project administrator, said the four films are now available to 2,067 theaters through 87 distributing exhibitors.

Filmmakers interested in submitting films for the second year's program are asked to write to the foundation, 99 Prince St., New York, N.Y., 10003, by Nov. 1. Films must be no longer than seven minutes in length, and must be eligible for a "G" or "PG" rating.

The films being shown currently are "Clay," by Eliot Noyes Jr., produced while he was a senior at Harvard; Frank Film, by Frank Mouris, an Academy Award winner; "Lapis," a computer-produced film made by James Whitney; and "Light," by Jordon Belson.

The National Endowment is an independent federal agency, created in 1965, to encourage and assist the nation's cultural progress. It makes grants to individuals and organizations with the advice of a 26-member, presidentially appointed Council on the Arts.

Five Slain In Boston Gangland Drug Dispute

BOSTON (AP) — Five men playing backgammon in the basement of a downtown disco were shot to death in a gangland dispute over drugs, police said Wednesday.

The bodies included the owner and night manager of Blackfriars, a youthful nightspot in Boston's shopping district. The five corpses were discovered by a janitor Wednesday morning.

"It was a professional job," said Police Commissioner Joseph Jordan.

The victims, some of whose heads were blown away by shotgun blasts, were found in a tiny office in the sub-basement where they had been playing backgammon after the club closed Tuesday night.

"The massacre ... has all the earmarks of a gangland execution," said Suffolk County District Attorney Garrett Byrne.

"I have never seen a more shocking crime," he added.

The victims included Jack Kelly, 34, of Framingham, a former television investigative reporter who was night manager of the lounge.

Also killed were Vincent Solmonte, 35, of Quincy, the owner, and Peter F. Meroth, 31, of Boston; Charles G. Magarian, 36, of North Andover, and Freddy R. Delavega, 34, of Somerville.

Kelly worked for WNAC-TV for almost three years before he was dismissed in December, 1976. He had been employed by Blackfriars for several months.

Solmonte also owned Vincent's, a trendy waterfront bar, and other establishments.

Byrne said the execution appeared to have been carried out in a dispute over "heavy narcotics." He said some cocaine was found at the restaurant.

However, investigators declined to say whether a drug transaction was going on when the killings occurred.

Jordan said the crime was the biggest mass murder in Boston in his memory. "It was a real wicked, vicious type of crime," he said.

Jordan said a janitor arrived at the club to begin cleaning at 4 a.m., and discovered the bodies about 8 a.m.

"They were in various positions," Jordan said. "One was in a chair, several were lying on the floor behind and beside a desk. There was a great deal of blood all over the office. It was a small, confined space."

Byrne said he had set up a task force that would meet Thursday to coordinate an investigation of the killings.

The lounge occupies the first floor and the basement of a century-old five-story granite building on Summer Street. It opened about five years ago in a remodeled storefront of weathered wood and brick.

Bill Seeks Inflation, Unemployment Lids

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee approved "full employment" legislation for action by the Senate on Wednesday after first calling on the president to eliminate inflation by 1983.

The measure, the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, requires the president to submit an annual report to Congress outlining short-and long-term goals for unemployment, inflation and other economic criteria.

Until the committee acted, the only numerical goals in the measure called for cutting joblessness to 4 percent of the work force and 3 percent of the adult work force by 1983.

But by a vote of 8-7, the panel adopted a proposal by Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., setting a companion goal of cutting inflation to zero by the same date.

The Carter administration has strongly opposed establishing a specific goal for inflation in the legislation.

The most recent government figures show unemployment is about 6.1 percent of the work force, while inflation is increasing at an annual rate of about 10 percent.

The Humphrey-Hawkins legislation, named for Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., and the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., has the backing of a wide assortment of civil rights, religious and women's organizations. In general, however, these groups prefer to see no specific inflation target written into the bill for fear it would interfere with efforts to cut unemployment.

Unlike earlier versions of the legislation, the measure the committee approved by voice vote mandates no programs to make sure the unemployment goals are met.

The bill, passed in different form last year in the House of Representatives, was passed earlier this year by the Senate Human Resources Committee.

Neither the House bill nor the legislation the resources committee approved calls for a zero inflation rate, however, and the question is likely to be voted on again when the measure reaches the floor later in the year.

In another change to the measure, the banking committe voted to establish a balanced federal budget as a national goal. As it does with other goals, the measure mandates no specific programs to meet the target.

U.S. Planes Bought By Japanese Agency

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Japan's Maritime Safety Agency has purchased 13 turboprop aircraft from Beech Aircraft Corp. for more than $26 million, Beech announced Wednesday.

The Super King Air 200-T aircraft will be used for patrol of Japan's 200-mile fishing territorial limits, according to Beech's senior vice president, Michael G. Neuburger.

The aircraft will replace 11 Twin Beech models used for patrolling Japan's waters since the late 1960s.

Beech spokesman Norm Dunn said the Japanese wanted the aircraft as quickly as they can be built, but said no date for completion has been set.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JUNE 29, 1978

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 1, 13, 24, 36, 47, 59, 70 ... Can be your fault
Highs: 14-23, 37-46, 60-69 ... High powered day
Lows: 2-12, 25-35, 48-58, 71-75 ... All worn out feeling

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 12, 26, 40, 54, 68, 82 ... Likely to lose your cool
Highs: 1-11, 27-39, 55-67, 83-85 ... Happy as a bird
Lows: 13-25, 41-53, 69-81 ... Don't be hasty to react

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 5, 22, 38, 55, 71, 88 ... Watch out, danger today
Highs: 1-4, 23-37, 56-70, 89-95 ... Thinking cap on Lows: 6-21, 39-54, 72-87 ... Difficult to reason

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Welding Rods Become Sculpture

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer

When Orville Hoelscher isn't working in his Godfrey, Ill., body shop, he might be found at home pursuing another career — creating sculpture.

How did an artist end up in the body shop business? For artistic reasons.

"I had a car repaired one time, and it did not suit me," he said in a telephone interview. "I decided it would take someone with artistic talent so that the cars would look like something."

And that's what he has been doing for the last 30 years.

Previously he worked repairing stained glass church windows and crosses and art glass and as a designer and touchup artist.

All the while, he has been a painter, sculptor and pastel artist.

Hoelscher, 64, is largely self-taught, although he said he first learned to draw from his artistic mother while growing up in Breese, Ill., and has had private tutors. His wife also is an artist.

He says too much formal art instruction can ruin an art student's creativity because the student's expression becomes an extension of the teacher's.

His sculpture involves what Hoelscher says is probably a unique medium. He creates realistic pieces using welding rods.

"This was a medium no one knew anything about as far as realistic sculpture," he said.

The technique is dangerous, he said, because it involves high temperatures formed by acetelyne gas and oxygen and it is sensitive, because the rod has to be touched at just the precise moment to get the desired effect.

Not only is it difficult to control, but it is difficult to see. The artist said that what he sees through the glass of his welding helmet "looks like tapioca boiling on the stove."

Welding rods are made of steel coated with copper, which turns black in the heating process. After the work is finished, Hoelscher burnishes it with a wire brush, then seals it with plastic.

He creates such figures as Mark Twain at the wheel of a river boat, ballet dancers, athletes in action and animals in natural settings. His sculpture sells for $200 to $2,000. He said it is in collections in Germany and Ireland as well as the United States.

This summer, Hoelscher and his wife will take off a couple of months to travel around the country to exhibit and sell their work at art fairs.

Hoelscher laments the amount of material Americans throw away, and uses parts of cars he salvages from his shop to create other sculptures with chrome bumpers and fenders.

Primarily, though, Hoelscher says, "I feel that I have something to say with welded steel. I feel that by getting it out across the United States other people will be able to see what can be done with steel."

Expenses Cause Rise In Hospital Rates

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Noting that a 20-cent per hour minimum wage hike goes into effect in January and supply and utility bills are moving upward, Central Plains Regional Hospital Directors Monday voted to raise hospital rates to pay for an 8.5 percent increase in the 1978-1979 budget.

The new budget is $6,191,000, up approximately $320,000 from the current budget. To cover the increase, daily room rates will increase $6 for private rooms and semi-private rooms. Explaining the increase, hospital administrator Whitelaw Hunt said the Plainview hospital will still have lower rates than 90 percent of the hospitals in the region.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Early confusion is eliminated by being cautious in whatever you do. The remainder of the day and evening are excellent for making new plans and getting into projects you like.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A letter may cause some problems but if you study it well, it may be to your benefit instead. Be with those persons who can add to present success. Be careful of one who is not acting right.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Go over your plans carefully for accuracy before you put them in motion. Then full speed ahead. You can have a fine time socially with good friends in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get together with advisers and confidentially gain their ideas, suggestions and then follow the best of such. Be with loved ones in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You are tempted to do something foolish but your good judgment wins. Be with good friends and show good comradeship.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care of business matters before getting into community affairs. Expansion where career work is concerned is possible now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have an excellent idea but it should be studied thoroughly before putting it in motion. Your hunches are not good now, but can be quite accurate later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Evaluate responsibilities and then carry through with them sensibly. Evening is fine for added happiness with loved one. Be thoughtful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Listen to what partners have to say and then you know what needs to be done to have more success. A minor affair that has been puzzling you clears itself up. Avoid one who shows no appreciation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't let an irate fellow annoy you. Later the mood changes and all is fine.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make social or recreational appointments early so that all goes smoothly later on. Avoid getting into an angry debate with a loved one. Use tact.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use more tact at home and have more harmony there. Be careful of one who is working against you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Difficulties and problems arise where work is concerned, especially with details. Later all is easy and you make real progress. Communications are fine in the evening.

Jaworski Defends Plea Bargain; Attacks Newspaper Columnist

FORT WORTH (AP) — Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski attacked the integrity of a New York Times columnist Wednesday and accused "political opportunists" of obstructing the Koreagate investigation.

The silver-haired Houston attorney denied as "completely erroneous" allegations by syndicated columnist William Safire that the probe of the South Korean bribery scandal is a "charade" and a "cover-up."

He said Safire is waging a "personal vendetta," a conflict which he contended dates back to Watergate and Safire's former role as a speech writer for President Richard Nixon.

"He does not have regard for honor or integrity," the lawyer asserted.

Jaworski, here to address conventioning Texas attorneys, did concede that attempts to obtain testimony from former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo may be hopeless.

"We're struggling to get his testimony ... but if we hear nothing in the next 10 days or two weeks, it probably will be a lost cause," he said.

He said the ambassador's testimony could be "very, very important," in determining that former and current members of Congress allegedly received cash payments from the South Korean government.

Jaworski spoke to newsmen briefly before telling the lawyers that without plea bargaining the country would never have learned the full truth of Watergate.

"The American public has demanded that the story of Watergate be known, and through the process of justice under law it has been made known," he said. "And I can assure you that had it not been for perfectly fair and just plea discussions, the full story of the break-in and the cover-up would never have been known."

Jaworksi touched on his role as special prosecutor in the Watergate affair in defending the concept and effectiveness of plea bargaining.

"After Herbert Kalmbach, President Nixon's personal counsel, offered to plead guilty to a felony and go before the grand jury to reveal the full facts of his involvement and his knowledge of activities in the collection and distribution of hush money to the Watergate burglars, as well as other illegal conduct involving primarily illicit campaign contributions and the improper acquisition of ambassadorships, the White House became quite nervous at the thought of the revelations he was in a position to make," Jaworski said.

"The White House also became quite apprehensive over the success the special prosecutor was having in obtaining inculpatory evidence from first one and then the other of the targets and especially concerned that still others would decide to join the chorus.

"I have not told that before and I have not written that before."

Jaworski said William Saxbe was then attorney general and "It should be said that undoubtedly Saxbe had been pressured by the then-president publicly to raise questions about the plea bargaining we were conducting."

FORT WORTH:were conducting.

In his comments on Koreagate Jaworski said:

"The investigation has been marred by the action of political opportunists who have greatly misrepresented some phases of the investigation and distorted its objectivity.

"Some, in the interest of political self-preferment, have planted farbications in news stories and one of their number (Safire) resorted to the use of a rather widely read syndicated column to present unjust charges.

"It is a tragedy that this unfortunate event has been and is being used as a political football instead of constituting a non-partisan effort to bring to light the true facts — even though they lack the sensationalism earlier predicted by some and hoped for by others."

COLORADO ECONOMY CHANGING

Once primarily a mining and grazing state, Colorado now draws the largest segment of its income from manufacturing, followed by agriculture, tourism and mining. Its snow-capped peaks, ski centers, ghost towns and health spas make it a popular vacation-recreation area.

Texas Gas Utilities Said No More Profit Leaders

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Railroad Commissioner John Newton Wednesday told the State Bar of Texas convention that gas utilities in Texas no longer are earning the highest rates of return in the country.

In 1976, Newton said, the Railroad Commission was granting utilities an average return of 7.7 percent on fair value.

"This was among the highest rates of return in the nation," he said. "But it dropped to 6.3 percent in 1977 and during the first five months of this year it dropped to 6.1 percent."

Newton said the 21 percent decrease in rates of return to gas utilities did not just entail setting rates. He said utilities also were required to file regular cost of gas statements and other data with the commission to ensure compliance with the commission's directives.

Newton said more than 70 percent of the audits performed by the commission's gas utilities division have uncovered some type of noncompliance with commission standards.

"Every auditor found enough extra taxes due to more than pay for his trip," Newton said. "We found three utilities which were charging incorrect rates."

'Healthy' Oldster Lawson Gets Help

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A stooped, shabbily-dressed, elderly black man shuffled into the Southern Manor Nursing Home last week and handed a wadded dollar bill to 88-year-old Charlie Lawson. He left before anybody could ask him his name.

Meanwhile, Oscar Wyatt Jr., head of the giant Coastal States Gas Corp. in Houston, called to donate $1,200. A Waco bail bondsman sent $100 and the crew of the USS Coral Sea is taking up a collection.

They are among dozens of persons from across the nation who have contributed money after learning that Lawson has been ruled too healthy to receive Medicaid payments and would be evicted from his nursing home.

Lawson is blind in one eye, nearly deaf and has hardening of the arteries, but doesn't receive daily medication or treatment. Therefore, state Medicaid officials said he was no longer entitled to the $462 monthly payments that have financed his 15-month stay at the home.

He was to have been evicted by Father's Day and would have been forced to live alone on only $160 per month in Social Security payments. His son and grandchildren were unable to support him and are appealing the decision.

"We have enough money now for Charlie to stay for seven months. If all of the pledges come in, we'll have enough for him to stay from now on, or until the pledges stop," said Marsha Jones, a registered nurse consultant at the home.

The Northside Lions Club and Ronald Freed, owner of the nursing home, donated enough money for Lawson to avoid eviction by June 18. When The Associated Press sent the story nationwide, donations began pouring in.

"I think this is just wonderful," said the gentle, smiling Lawson. "I'm ashamed of it. I'm ashamed for them to have to help me, but I tell you right now, they sure have helped me. I knew there were more good people in the world yet. They couldn't have been any nicer.

"I'm so happy I can stay here. I sure do appreciate it."

In broken grammar, the bondsman wrote: "I am a Black Man. . .after all Charlie is a Man and I am a man. Regardless of race, Creed or Color, God want us to help those that need help. and he said he will return our blessings in Double Folds. If at anytime I can be of further service to Charlie, you, or anyone, or any Nursing Home, do not hesitate to call upon me, I assure you it will be a Pleasure."

The popular Lawson helps nurses care for his fellow patients whenever possible and is constantly attempting to boost morale. The vacant faces of the elderly patients light up when the friendly Lawson walks past.

Mrs. Jones said the fragile mood of the patients darkened when they thought Lawson would have to leave.

But Charlie Lawson has them smiling again now.

Country Turning More Toward Coal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coal is becoming the primary fuel source to which the nation is turning, despite the absence of a firm national energy policy, Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said Wednesday.

Ford, in a Senate speech, said he based his assessment on a list of planned new commercial energy projects compiled by the Bureau of Mines.

The list showed that of 535 pending or planned energy projects east of the Mississippi, 445 involve coal, Ford said. He said that of the 808 projects listed for the West, 353 involve coal.

"As far as the eastern half of the nation is concerned, coal has become the dominant source of energy," Ford said. "The trend toward coal in the West is equally significant, though not as great."

"Moreover, that policy is evolving without any guidance or direction on the part of the federal government," Ford said.

Appliances To Contain Operating Cost Labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labels telling consumers how much it will cost to operate home appliances such as refrigerators and ovens will begin appearing in about a year under a government program approved Wednesday.

In some cases, the labels will reveal differences of hundreds of dollars in energy costs over the life of appliances of the same size that perform a common function, said Michael Pertschuk, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission.

Thus, for example, a consumer shopping for a new refrigerator will be able to gauge the cost of operating the appliance as well as compare the pricetags on various models.

Covered by the new labeling program will be 13 types of major appliances, including refrigerators, furnaces and water heaters.

Pertschuk said the labels approved Wednesday "are designed to aid consumers' purchasing decisions by providing much needed information on what it costs to operate major eppliances."

In addition, the labeling program should help conserve energy by making consumers conscious of how much they are spending on energy to operate their appliances, he said.

About one-fourth of the nation's energy is used in homes, according to an FTC estimate.

"These new rules should stimulate manufacturers to develop appliances that are more energy efficient," Pertschuk said.

In some cases the appliances with a low yearly energy cost will have a relatively high pricetag, said Andrew Wolf of the FTC staff.

But the higher initial payment could be outweighed by long-range savings on utility bills.

The labels will begin appearing on appliances on showroom floors in about a year, after hearings and a period for public comment to help the FTC refine the wording of the regulation, said Wolf, who helped draw up the regulation.

An example cited by Wolf for the commissioners is of a typical 23-cubic-foot refrigerator-freezer that would cost an estimated $84 per year in energy costs. The label also would tell consumers that the energy costs for similar models range between $63 and $122.

The labels also contain a chart enabling consumers to translate the national cost estimate for a model to his local utility rate. Electricity rates average 3.8 cents per kilowatt hour nationally, but are about 8 cents in New York City, Wolf said.

Wolf said the FTC staff drew up the labels and conducted tests that showed that consumers could understand the figures on them.

The energy efficiency for the various appliances is determined by Department of Energy tests, and the FTC staff designed the yellow-and-black labels.

Other appliances covered by the rule are freezers, dishwashers, clothes dryers, room and central air conditioners, home heaters other than furnaces, television sets, kitchen ranges and ovens, clothes washers, humidifiers and dehumidifiers.

Some additional appliances may be added later, including heat pumps, Wolf said. The rule will not apply to appliances that do not use much energy, such as can openers and pencil sharpeners.

Some states already have appliance labeling programs and others are considering such regulations. Some manufacturers have said the various requirements cause them unnecessary expense, and they have urged a federal rule that would pre-empt the state laws so that there would be a single, national labeling standard.

Crane Educator Named Sundown Superintendent

A-J Correspondent

SUNDOWN — Jack D. Gothard, 44, of Crane was chosen by unanimous vote of the Sundown school board, Tuesday night, as the school system's superintendent.

That unanimity is a step in healing the wounds of controversy that split the town's 1,195 residents before the resignation of former superintendent Dean King.

Elementary school principal Dalton Gill has served as interim superintendent since King resigned in May in exchange for $90,000 plus retirement benefits for the remaining three years of his contract. King's resignation came after months of controversy in this Hockley County community that split neighbors into pro-King and anti-King forces.

Some citizens criticized King for his stance on several personnel issues. One such incident was when the school board, at the recommendation of King, voted 4-3 not to award new contracts to five teachers. Officially King gave no reason for his recommendation. Protest demonstrations by Sundown students were watched over by area law enforcement officers.

The newly hired Gothard is principal of Crane Elementary School and director of curriculum for Crane Independent School District. He has held those positions for the past seven years and has been in the Crane school system for a total of 20 years, serving as athletic director, football coach, basketball coach, golf coach and physical education teacher.

He was assistant coach at Austin High School in El Paso in 1957-58.

Gothard graduated from Seminole High School, attended Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene and received a B.A. in physical education from Texas Western College. He received his M.A. from Sul Ross University in Alpine.

Earlier this month the Sundown school board hired Nick Williams, 25, of Spur as business manager. He replaces Clayton Brazelton, who resigned in the spring.

Annapolis Grad Mark C. Broome Gets Commission

Broome, 21, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Broome of 3709 67th St.

He graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in naval architecture.

A graduate of Monterey High School, Broome was nominated to attend the academy by U.S. Rep. George Mahon.

Broome has been assigned to pilot training programs at Moffet Naval Air Station in California and at Pensacola, Fla.

Aggravated Assault Charged In Shooting

An early Monday shooting incident resulted in an aggravated assault charge, filed Wednesday against a Lubbock man.

Named in the charge was George Pritchett, 26, of 313 Ave. T, No. 9. The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $1,500 bond.

Pritchett is accused of shooting Terry W. Barrett, 27, of 313 Ave. T, No. 14.

Officers said they found Barrett lying in the front yard. He had been shot in the chest.

Police reports indicated Pritchett, allegedly holding a .32-caliber pistol in his hand, was arrested at the scene, shortly after officers arrived.

A witness said an argument preceded the shooting.

LONG SEARCH FOR SECURE IDENTITY

Afrikaner's Problem Backed By Long History

By BRANDT AYERS

JOHANNESBURG (NEA) — To a white Southerner, no personality in South Africa is more tragically compelling than the Afrikaner, white king of a black nation.

He is a character out of my own past: playmate, neighbor and kinsman of the 1940s, '50s and '60s in the American South. It is easy to care about the Afrikaner, to love him and despair of him.

Second In A Series

His 300-year history in South Africa is the story of a long trek to a time and place where his identity and self-respect would be at last secure.

Along the way the Afrikaner's experience is familiar to Americans, particularly Southerners. He was the pioneer settling unchartered land, fighting and prevailing over native tribes, attempting to maintain his own state as a haven for his language and culture but losing it in a civil war.

He was displaced from the land he loved and found himself a poor stranger in the city, an alien in his own country. He felt the scorn of his own countrymen, the English-speakers. They called language, Afrikaans, bastard Dutch. They looked down on him because of his poverty and derided his country ways.

The seeds of that history produced a familiar character, quick to laugh and to fight, a lover of the land and the Bible, marvelously hospitable and deeply suspicius of strangers' motives.

It all began when the Dutch East Indian Company established a provision station for their ships at the Cape of Good Hope in 1652.

Later, the original Dutch were joined by French Protestants, seeking religious freedom, and Germans who came, unlike the British, to build a nation instead of an imperial colony.

By 1835 the British had seized control of the Cape and were present in growing numbers. To escape British administration, the Boers (farmers) set out on the Great Trek up the eastern coast and to the interior.

On Sunday, Dec. 16, 1837, they met 10,000 Zulu warriors at the Ncome River. Armed only with spears, the brave Zulu attacked the laager, circled ox-wagons, with its cannon and 400 muskets. By the end of the day, the river's waters had turned red and today it is still called Blood River.

To gain control of their own lives and to secure their own language and culture the Boers established the independent states of the Orange Free State and the Transvaal in the early 1850s. Within 20 years gold and diamonds were found in the Boer Republics, and in came the British — again.

These frictions produced the Anglo-Boer War (1889-1902) which the British won with overwhelming numbers and equipment.

The Afrikaner had failed to secure his identity with blood and bullets, and there was no place left to which he could trek in search of it. He could not go home to Holland. After his 250 years in South Africa, its ways were even more strange than those of the British.

So, Afrikaners went on a Great Trek of the Mind, concentrating all their cultural, intellectual and political institutions on developing an idea that could give them national identity politically.

The idea was apartheid. It was clear, logical and, as it was idealized, had appeal to the active conscience of the Bible-reading Afrikaner.

It was rooted in a belief that contact between black and white would produce friction and, ultimately, exploitation of black by white. In order to protect the black from exploitation and to allow each ethnic group to develop its identity and self-respect without intereference, each tribe would be given its homeland.

Like all radical ideologies which attempt to compress ungovernable human and economic forces into a rigid set of intellectual absolutes, the idea was bound to fail. But it triumped at the polls in 1948 with the victory of the Nationalist Party.

Smack in the middle of the 20th century, the Afrikaner's nationalism was propelled against a torrent of history, swollen by black nationalism on his own continent. In relentless pursuit of his ideal, he began to re-segregate everything from jobs to university classrooms to restaurants.

There was neither common sense nor justice to the scheme and so it resulted in the ultimate exploitation. Urban blacks, whose labor was essential to the nation's zooming economy, were repaid by losing their citizenship. They were given political rights in a homeland, hundreds of miles away, which their grandparents may never have seen.

Thirty years later, the clarity and justice of the idea seem to have dissipated. The government itself is inching away from the psychological essence of the idea. Today, three million, the Afrikaners are confused, defensive, isolated from the world and fearful that they will once again lose their identity; this time to the riptide of black nationalism, 18-million strong.

From the moral cockpit of America today, even from the relatively secure moral plateau of the American South at this historical moment, it is easy to look down with contempt on the Afrikaner as he grapples with horrifying complex problems and choices.

But I find him no easier to despise than other white Westerners who have attempted to enforce a radical vision of God's plan — as revealed to them. The Afrikaner Puritan is no worse than the New England Puritans, who hanged the Quakers, or the Spaniards' Inquisition, which burned the heretics.

Instead, I tried to give the African Puritans a vision of a more positive identity and securer sense of self-respect. At the close of an address to the Afrikaner Chamber of Commerce in Johannesburg, I said:

"I have a dream for South Africa. When you have solved your vastly more difficult and complex problems to the satisfaction of all your tribes, I can see a day when the South African representative to the United Nations rises in the General Assembly and a hush falls over the chamber.

"He pauses before he speaks and his eye catches the delegate from the United States. He does not say it, but he thinks, 'Morally, you are not half the size of my people.'

That is my dream. The reality may be quite different.

House Okays Veteran Pension Program Overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted a drastic overhaul of the veterans' pension program Wednesday that would raise payments to those with the lowest income as much as 104.4 percent.

The House also voted a 6.5 percent increase in payments for veterans receiving compensation for service-connected disabilities and survivors of those who die of such disabilities..

And it approved another bill to allow veterans receiving disability compensation to receive allowances for dependents if their disability is rated at 40 percent or more. The present allowance is for those rated 50 percent or more disabled.

The vote on the pension bill was 398 to 5, the compensation increase 400 to 1 and the disabled dependents bill 385 to 16.

The pension increase would have a net cost of $852.9 million the first year for 1.14 million veterans and 1.27 million survivors. The first-year cost of the compensation bill would be $325.5 million for 2.57 million veterans and survivors. The third bill would cost $50.4 million for 147,000 veterans.

The legislation goes to the Senate where somewhat similar bills are pending. However, the Senate Veterans Committee has voted a pension overhaul that is not quite as generous as the House, 68 percent for a husband and wife.

Pensions are based on how much other income a veteran or survivor receives, including Social Security.

The 104.4 percent increase in the House bill would apply to a veteran with one dependent who has no other income, raising payments from $2,544 a year to $5,200. Any other income would be subtracted from the $5,200 guaranteed income floor.

Payments for extra dependents above one would go from $60 to $600 a year.

The payment to a single veteran with no other income would go up from $2,364 to $4,000, a 69.2 percent increase.

The maximum payment for a widow alone would go from $1,596 to $3,000 and for a widow with one child from $1,908 to $3,900. The increase for each additional child would go from $312 to $600, the same as a veteran with more than one child.

Future automatic increases in the pension rate would be based on the cost-of-living index on an annual basis the same as Social Security.

The pension system would be geared so that a veteran would not lose money because his Social Security or other pension goes up, based on the cost of living index, as occurs now. This would eliminate the annual ritual of the past several years of Congress having to change the pension rates and income limitations.

A provision that would immediately affect all World War I veterans, but others later, would guarantee veterans 80 years or older on the pension rolls $804 a year over their basic pension payments.

Pensions are paid to veterans who are totally disabled before age 65 if they come within the income limitations. After age 65, only income is a factor. For widows and orphans, income is also the only factor.

GSA Lauds Designs Of Federal Buildings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six federal buildings, two sculptures, a mural and a concept for federal building design were commended Wednesday in an annual awards program of the General Services Administration.

"The program's purpose is to recognize and publicize projects which have helped enhance the quality of our environment," said administrator Jay Solomon. "This program encourages humane and responsible designs by the architectural community and the construction industry."

Projects receiving commendations:

Pioneer Courthouse Restoration, Portland, Ore.; Portland architects Allen, McMath, Hawkins; the citizens of Portland; GSA's regional office in Auburn, Wash.

Megastructure, so far only a concept in federal office buildings design; Building Sciences Inc, Towson, Md.; Cambridge Seven Architectures of Cambridge, Mass.; Davis Brody Asssociates, New York City.

Batcolumn, a 101-foot sculpture resembling a baseball bat by Claes Oldenberg in front of Chicago's Social Security Administration building; the GSA regional office in Chicago and the agency's art-in-architecture program.

Moonlight on the Great Pee Dee, a mural in the John L. McMillan Federal Building in Florence, S.C.; the artist, Blue Sky; GSA's regional office in Atlanta.

Federal Office Building and Post Office, Santa Rosa, Calif.; the architectural firms of Roland-Miller-Asssociates, Santa Rosa, and Frank L. Hope Associates, San Diego; GSA's regional office in San Francisco.

San Diego Federal Courthouse and Office Building; the achitectural venture of Wheeler-Hope, San Diego; GSA's office in San Francisco.

Tech Appoints New Education Dean

The College of Education at Texas Tech has "streamlined the administration structure of the college" by creating the new position of associate dean for programs, according to Dr. Robert H. Anderson, dean of the college.

Selected effective Sept. 1 was Dr. Billy E. Askins, who has been director of advisement. Anderson said Askins has a strong record of accomplishments and a strong interest in his new role. "He and I have had a good working relationship, and I'm looking forward to our administrative partnership," Anderson said.

Askins, with Texas Tech since 1967, received a B.S. degree in secondary education from East Texas State University, an M. Ed. in educational administration from Midwestern State University and an Ed. D. in secondary education from North Texas State University.

He has published numerous articles in his field and has served Texas Tech in a variety of administrative roles, including director of advisement, assistant chairman of curriculum and instruction and director of student teaching.

Women Bureaucrats Fail To Get Speaker

DENVER (AP) — Federally Employed Women has scheduled its annual training conference in mid-July but so far can't find anyone associated with the federal government to address the 2,500 to 3,000 women bureaucrats expected to attend.

Those who have turned down invitations so far include: President Carter; his wife, Rosalynn; Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps; Housing Secretary Patricia Harris; Eleanor Holmes Norton, head of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; Civil Service Commissioner Ersa H. Poston; and Midge Constanza, a special assistant to Carter.

Mrs. Poston said she would be out of the country, but none of the others invited gave a reason for not being able to attend, said conference chairman Patsy K. Smith. The conference is scheduled for July 12-16.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I'm attracted to two utility bonds with high yields because they will mature soon — Detroit Edison 12¼s and Duke Power 13s, both due in 1979. How can they offer yields so high as 11.9 percent and 12.2 percent, respectively?

A. They don't.

On the day your letter arrived, the bonds were selling at around 105. When the mature — in a little more than a year — you will get $1,000 back for every $1,050 you pay to acquire them today. So before you allow yourself to drool over those luscious 12½ and 13 percent coupons, cut the $50 right out of each bond's payout to maturity. The yields you quote are current yields — which is all very good. But that $50 loss in a year's time per bond at redemption is also very, very real.

• • •

Q. I spent most of my life in a large Midwestern financial center where I had a helpful broker. When I moved to a small town further west I found it difficult to carry on business long distance. The new broker I found there evidently spent little time on my portfolio. He made some bad sales. Advice, please.

A. Go back to your original broker. I'm reluctant to believe that with long-distance dialing right at your finger tips, it makes much difference whether you are five miles across town from your broker or 1,200 miles away in a small town. I've never found a broker who ever turned off long-distance (collect) calls. In fact, many firms encourage long-distance accounts for their registered representatives. Go back to the broker you liked.

• • •

Q. I heard someone on the radio saying that you can get 12 to 14 percent on your money if you just write to some financial organization in some small town. Do you know who they are?

A. Please! Not in a family newspaper.

• • •

Q. I'm 74, comfortable — don't need more income. That's why I keep $40,000 in a safe deposit box. Friends say I'm wrong.

A. And so do I.

First of all, you should force yourself to spend more money. If you don't at 74, when will you? Besides, it's good for the economy.

Secondly, regardless of your tax bracket, the tax on $40,000 interest can't wipe it all out.

Thirdly — and here I'm getting into dangerous ground — I feel the money is safest in an insured bank or savings and loan account. (I know of no hard and fast rules which govern the protection of items kept in a bank vault.)

• • •

Q. I bought some stock on the day it sold "ex-dividend." My broker says I was not entitled to the dividend because I had not paid for the stock. Is he right?

A. He's right for the wrong reason and missed the easiest, most obvious explanation, to boot.

Ex-dividend means "without the dividend." If you buy a stock on the day it is "ex-dividend" it should be obvious that you are buying the stock without the dividend ... period.

What's all this nonsense about payment date? You owned the stock the moment your broker executed your order on the floor of the exchange. But your ownership came a day late. I don't care when you paid for the stock.

• • •

Q. We are soon to retire — in our late 60s — and getting all sorts of differing opinions from friends on whether we should sell out our tax-exempt bonds or buy more.

A. Until you know — for sure — what your top tax bracket will be in retirement all this friendly advice is so much idle gossip.

If, in retirement your top level of income will be taxed at more than 30-35 percent, the investments bringing in that income should be in tax-exempts. If your highest tax bracket drops to 18 or 20 percent, then you don't have much need of tax exempts. Sit loose and rest easy. After a year of retirement you'll have a far better far of how much, if any, tax shelter you will require.

Commune Dwellers Persevere

MAD BROOK FARM, Vt. (AP) — Mad Brook once was a haunt for fisherman determined to catch a limit from its white, foamy waters.

Nowadays, the rockbed mountain stream calls to mind the hippie commune born on its banks during the back-to-the-land movement of the 1960s.

Mad Brook Farm's survival today is of no small significance in northeastern Vermont, where 10 years ago farm communities were scandalized by the invasion of frizzy-haired city slickers.

"They're not a bad bunch of people," Jack Sloan, East Charleston's postmaster for 28 years, said recently of the transplants who remain at Mad Brook.

Some of East Charleston's 600 residents, to be sure, still consider the people at Mad Brook Farm a strange lot, but now they offer a tempered respect for the outsiders.

The Vermonters, a rugged breed known for their quiet reserve and non-interference in other folks' business, know they could have told the migrants what would happen to their notions of planting a few seeds and living in bliss.

But in typical fashion, they watched silently as their neighbors discovered the short growing season and then began to scrounge for work in a region where the unemployment rate is 11 percent.

While settling in, the 12 Mad Brook founders experienced several changes. All their marriages broke up during the first three years and the community membership was in flux.

"We went from spiritualists and vegetarians to gun freaks and heavy drinkers," recalled Georgeanne Poe, a 35-year-old mother of two who lives on the farm with Bruce Davis, 24.

At last count, there were 24 people sharing in the utility expenses and mortgage payments for almost 500 acres. They don't pool their resources, but, said Mrs. Poe, that never was part of the plan.

In 1972, the commune's residents launched their first project — a bimonthly newspaper of classified ads called The Green Mountain Trading Post, which now has a circulation of 5,000.

There were a series of projects after that — many spawned by John Rogers, the 38-year-old Trading Post editor.

The residents hustled at Christmastime, cutting evergreen branches, making wreaths and selling them throughout the state. Some were involved in buying an old house, repairing and selling it. A few made quilts, rocking chairs and leather crafts.

Early this spring, they entered the traditional Vermont industry of sugaring — tapping maple trees for syrup. Rogers recalled with some amusement the local folk watching quietly as the group mistakenly assaulted elm trees, ashes and beeches.

Katharine "K.C." Whiteley, 31, said the secret for survival in the commune is an ability to do a lot of different things.

555 Prisoners Released In Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Defense Ministry announced the release of 555 persons from martial law detention Wednesday and said charges against them were being dropped.

Seventy-seven of the prisoners were granted only temporary releases. Most of the 478 granted permanent release were already out of jail.

The ministry said 222 of those freed were active members of the Maoist New People's Army, military arm of the Communist Party, and 100 were confessed Moslem rebels. It did not say who the remaining prisoners were.

Before Wednesday's announcement, the ministry said a total of 2,081 persons had been released since April 7, including 630 granted amnesty earlier this month. Most of those granted amnesty also had been out of jail for some time.

Another 306 persons have been recommended for amnesty, the ministry said, but it was not known how many of them were still in jail.

Missionaries To Be Sent To Rhodesia

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom says his Church of Christian Liberty plans to send 27 volunteers to Rhodesia to reopen a mission closed after a massacre last week.

Lindstrom said Tuesday the first contingent will leave next month to reopen the Emmanuel Mission, where seven British Pentacostal missionaries and five of their children were slain by guerillas.

"As in the days of the old wild West, all of our mission's staff will have a Bible and a gun," Lindstrom said.

He said the volunteers are "sick and tired of cowardly communist terrorists attacking defenseless Christian missions and raping, beating and murdering innocent missionaries."

Lindstrom said the first group of volunteers, made up of former military personnel, will secure the mission grounds. Eventually, efforts will be made to reopen as many of the 19 closed missions in Rhodesia.

Lindstrom said he had two formal meetings in April with two government officials. He called them "individuals of importance ... and friendly to our desire to help."

He added, "We haven't worked out all the details. We expect to have someone there working out those details so that when the first contingent arrives it will not be without notice ... We couldn't possibly operate without the government's approval."

TULIP HYBRIDIZATION

The 500 commercially cultivated varieties of tulips now on the market are chiefly the result of hybridization in this century. The most recent new classification is the Darwin Hybrid, giant of the tulip world, with large blossoms and stems that may reach 26 inches high, reports National Geographic.

School For Paperhangers Unique In Annals

By NANCY SCHULINS

RUTLAND, Vt. (AP) — Hanging around Stan Warshaw can be a sticky — but profitable — experience.

A former New York contractor, Warshaw is the founder and president of the U.S. School of Professional Paperhanging. He is a man with a monopoly — and a dream.

Someday, Warshaw vows, the ancient comic image of a clumsy paperhanger who glues his hands in his pockets and gets wrapped up in his paper will be given a long-overdue burial.

To that end Warshaw's school was born in an old machine shop in September 1973 with an enrollment of six students.

Today, the fledgling institution is the only paperhanging school to be accedited by the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools.

Immaculate in a white medical jacket with a razor blade clipped to his pocket, Warshaw runs his hands through thinning brown hair and reflects on the importance of wallpaper.

Outside the tiny room, three dozen students climb ladders, cut paper and mix paste in a series of large, oblong work rooms. A strange melange of strips, flowers and geometrics covers every available surface. It is an interior decorator's nightmare.

Paper is being wrinkled and ripped. Mistakes are being made, and that's the way Warshaw wants it.

Once they're in the field, mistakes are going to cost them time and money. You can't very well hang $50,000 worth of foil and hope you used the right primer.

"I tell them, 'Make your own decisions. I'm not going to be with you in the bathroom.'"

Instructor Larry Elsner, Warshaw's son-in-law and a U.S. School Alumnus, says the course opens with extensive lectures and demonstrations. On the second day, he says, students begin hanging the cheapest grade wall covering available. An atmosphere of fear and confusion prevails.

The transformation from clumsy amateur to skilled professionl begins in about the fifth week, he says. "They learn that wallpaper should be caressed like a newborn baby being brought home from the hospital."

Work-study projects are part of the program, and sudents spend some of their time papering private homes and public buildings.

The more outside work they do, the more competent and calm their nerves are when they get home," says Elsner.

A New York stock market dropout, a smelter and a butcher have numbered among those willing to spend nearly three months learning to hang wallpaper.

While the students' ages range from 17 to 67, Warshaw prefers students in their mid 20s. And if he had his way they would be college graduates with backgrounds in art and design.

Not all students make it, he says.

In addition to a high degree of physcal dexterity," he says, paperhanging requires a working knowledge of mathamatics, color, chemistry and public relations.

It is not a trade but a profession, he contends "and one in which do-it-yourselfers have no business dabbling.

"I welcome do-it-yourselfers into the course, sure. But the first thing they have to do is unlearn everything they've taught themselves.

Warshaw is the author of "No Molasses in the Wheat Paste: A Gourmet's trip through 20th century Wallcovering Installation." He hopes his book — and especially its title — will persuade amateurs to beware.

Three or four decades ago, he explains, molasses commonly was added to wheat paste by novice paperhangers for its stickiness.

Warshaw says he is dedicated to raising the public conciousness with regard to wallpaper. He already has begun work to establish a National Association for professional Paperhangers, complete with meetings and conventions. Someday, he hopes, paperhangers will need licenses to practice their profession.

Flood Of Refugees Crowd Bangladesh

DACCA, Bangladesh (UPI) — The 200,000 Moslems who have spilled across the border from Burma into this already overpopulated and hungry nation say Bangladesh can expect more refugees.

They say other "Rohingya" — Moslems of Indo-Arayan stock — will soon leave Burma, since it appears the Rangoon government has ordered their total eviction. The Rohingya form Burma's largest ethnic minority, 1.5 million of the country's 29 million people.

Some believe they also will be joined soon by another minority, the Chinese, as phase two of President Ne Win's "Burmanization" campaign.

More than 600 people, including at least 120 children, have died of fever and dysentery in the refugee camps where the Rohingya depend on whatever food relief organizations can supply.

The camps house more women, children and old people than young men, a fact nobody seems able to explain.

Some hint the men have joined insurgents training in the hills to fight beside Communist guerrillas against Burmese government troops in Asia's most obscure battle. Others have a different theory.

One Rohingya, 25-year-old Abu Taher, escaped earlier this month to tell of several weeks of forced labor with other Moslem men in the northeastern border area.

Taher said he saw troops distributing rifles to work camp supervisors and to new troops who had been moved into the border area while he worked there.

A recent meeting between the foreign ministers of the two countries produced no solution to the problem and it is still unclear which of the rival version of the issues at stake is true.

The Burmese say the Rohingya are illegal residents and cannot stay. Bangladesh says the expulsion is a movement to "purify" Burmese stock.

The Burmese are of Mongolian blood, Buddhist and extremely nationalistic. But the Rohingya are more enterprising and pose an economic threat to their indigenous compatriots, who consider foreign ancestry a stigma.

Another sore point is that the Rohingya pressured the government to turn Arakan, their home state, into an autonomous region.

Taher's troop movements were confirmed by reports from Rangoon, the Burmese capital, that said two army divisions had moved into Arakan State.

Taher also reported canal and river routes, the most viable means of transport along the border, were being repaired to make them navigable after years of neglect.

Most Burmese Rohingya originally came from Bangladesh in the days of the British rule, when the entire Indian subcontinent was a colonial unit and former national borders meant little.

City Hospital Due Lease, Name Change

Lubbock Osteopathic Hospital at 5301 University Ave. is being leased by a corporation based in California and will soon undergo a name change.

A spokesman for National Accommodations, Inc., based in Studio City, Calif., announced Wednesday that the hospital will be renamed Community Hospital of Lubbock.

The hospital will still retain its osteopathic services, and plans to open a 24-hour emergency room within the next two months, August Gilges, vice president of acute general hospitals of National Accommodations, Inc., said.

The corporation officially takes over the lease July 1, Gilges said, taking a five-year lease from the Lubbock Osteopathic Hospital Corporation with two five-year options on the lease.

Gilges said he did not know exactly how much the hospital was being leased for, but estimated "about $5,000 or $6,000 a month."

Gilges said there were no plans for changes in the supervision of the staff, but that a "controller" from the corporation would come in, working directly for the hospital in an overseer capacity.

The corporation also plans to hold free clinics for hypertension and for cancer detection sometime in the future, Gilges said.

The corporation is involved with health care across the United States, operating hospitals, nursing homes and retirement homes.

"The company is interested in small hospitals" like the 76-bed Lubbock facility, "because they can use the corporate services we provide," Gilges said. He named auditing, accounting and centralized purchasing as some of the corporate services.

Appeals Court Upholds Sonia Lopez Conviction

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal appeals Wednesday affirmed the conviction and $100 fine assessed Sonia Lopez by a Lubbock County court for theft.

The three-paragraph opinion by the appeals court said Miss Lopez entered a plea of guilty, and no brief or statement in the case was filed.

BARNEY'S MYSTERIOUS EASTERN CURRY

Now, here's an exotic, mysterious recipe with a lot of zing. And the mystery? Converting leftovers into a glorious dish fit for any dinner party. Now, I know when you use Piggly Wiggly meat and poultry, it's mighty unusual to have leftovers - but just buy extra next time. Save enough to stir into my savory sauce and serve this delicious dish with a good stein of beer.

4 cups leftover beef or poultry, cubed
¼ lb. butter
6 stalks celery, chopped
4 medium apples, peeled and chopped
2 White Onions, peeled and chopped
1 cup raisins
2 T butter, melted
¼ cup flour
¼ cup curry powder dash of ginger
dash of hot sauce
salt and pepper to taste
4 cups chicken stock, heated
½ cup light cream

In a large pot melt butter; add apples, onions, celery and cook until soft. Meanwhile in another pan add flour to 2 T melted butter; add curry and ginger. Stir in hot sauce, salt and pepper. Combine with apple/onion mixture and simmer 3 minutes. Add hot chicken stock; simmer 30 minutes and then add meat and cream. Stir to warm. Serve with rice and condiments such as chutney, coconut and chopped eggs. Serves 4-6.

Rape Conviction Upheld Over Defendant's Pleas

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday upheld the conviction and 99-year sentence of Jose Antonio Saracho, convicted of aggravated sexual abuse of a woman he abducted at knifepoint from a Big Spring bus station.

According to the appeals court opinion, Saracho approached the woman, who was waiting in a car to pick up her mother, held a butcher knife to her throat, drove her to a spot outside the city limits where he threatened to kill her before forcing her to have intercourse with him and to perform other sexual acts before driving her back to the bus station.

Saracho contended there was insufficient evidence to sustain the conviction, that the trial court erred in forcing him to appear before the jury without his shirt so that the victim could view his tattoos, that some photographs of evidence were improperly admitted into evidence and that he should have been granted a mistrial because one of the jurors who knew him did not say so during the voir dire examination.

The appeals court said the juror involved had testified that she did not remember Saracho until the punishment phase of the trial, when his mother testified, and said she did not remember whether Saracho had attended school with her son.

Saracho also objected to alleged improper jury arguments by the prosecutor, who argued if Saracho were not found guilty of aggravated sexual abuse, he wouldn "quit trying rape cases unless they happen on the 50 yard line in front of 50,000 people."

The court rejected all the contentions and affirmed the conviction.

Removal Of Alcohol Auto Fuel Tax Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., predicted Wednesday that the House will approve legislation to remove the 4 percent motor fuel tax on grain alcohol sold to power automobiles.

Findley, a sponsor of the Senate-passed legislation, said it could sharply increase the use by motorists of "gasohol," a mixture of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent grain alcohol. In turn, he said, it could have a heavy impact on Illinois corn producers.

"I'm a gasoholic," Findley said, filling the tank of his car with the mixture at a demonstration at the reflecting pool in front of the Capitol. "I'm not even a reformed gasoholic. I'm just a plain gasoholic."

Findley said he believes that the House will pass the tax reduction measure. Under the bill, the 4 percent levy would still apply to the gasoline content of the fuel but not the alcohol content. Findley said he did not know the amount of revenue that would be lost through the measure but said the bill has the benefit of reducing U.S. dependence on foreign petroleum.

Gasohol already is available to Illinois motorists at stations in Salem, Springfield, Hartford and Carlisle, an aide to Findley said. He said it also can be obtained from FS Services, an affiliate of the Farm Bureau. He said the alcohol used in the product is manufactured in the state by Technical Industrial Petroleum of Peoria and ADM of Decatur.

Findley said that, before the substance goes into wide use as a fuel, the cost of manufacturing the alcohol will have to be reduced. But he said the increasing cost of gasoline is speeding acceptance of gasohol.

"The price of gasoline is going to go up," he said. "That much we know. The day of gasohol is coming, and it's coming sooner than I'd thought."

Other lawmakers on hand for the demonstration, sponsored by ADM, included Sens. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

"You're about to enter a new age — the age of gasohol," Findley told Javits.

"This will not make a farm boy out of me," Javits said.

SCION SEIZED IN ITALY

MONDOVI, Italy (AP) — The 23-year-old son of a Mondovi industrialist was kidnapped by two men early Wednesday as he was entering his house in this northern Italian city, police reported. Pierfelice Filippi broke away from the two men briefly but was overpowered and taken to a waiting car. He is the 22nd person believed kidnapped for ransom in Italy so far this year.

Vega Star To Dominate July Skies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The brilliant bluish-white star Vega will be a dominant object in the July sky over the United States, according to the U.S. Naval Observatory.

In the small constellation Lyre, Vega will appear almost directly overhead between 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. local time.

In astronomical terms Vega is considered to be nearby, being only 23 light years away. If the sun and Vega were the same distance from Earth, Vega would appear 50 times brighter than our sun.

Because of the steady change in the Earth's axis of rotation, the Naval Observatory reports that Vega will become the North Pole star in about 12,000 years.

In 1850, Vega took part in making history by becoming the first star to have its photograph taken.

July 4 will be a special day for astronomers as well as historically-minded Americans. On that date the Earth will be at its furthest distance from the sun, 94,509,000 miles.

On the evening of July 10 the planets Venus and Saturn will appear to be almost touching. In reality, of course, Saturn is 830,000,000 miles beyond Venus as seen from Earth.

Both planets will be visible low in the southwest at sunset, setting an hour or two after the sun.

Mars will move from the constellation Leo into the constellation Virgo in July. It will also be low in the southwest at sunset, setting about two hours after the sun.

Mercury will be very low in the west at sunset, setting an hour later, and Jupiter will be too close to the sun to be easily visible in July.

There will be a new moon on July 5, first quarter July 13, full moon July 19 and last quarter July 26.

TRIPLE WRITTEN LIMITED WARRANTY

1. LIMITED FREE REPLACEMENT WARRANTY
Whites tires will be replaced free within 30 days, excluding repairable punctures, when used under normal conditions. This free replacement limited warranty covers tire failures due to BLOW OUTS, CUTS, BRUISES, TREADWEAR, or separations resulting from usual wear and tear in road use under normal conditions, providing the tire is not repairable.

2. LIMITED MILEAGE SERVICE WARRANTY
Whites tires are warranted for the number of miles (or months) indicated against BLOW OUTS, CUTS, BRUISES, TREADWEAR, RUT WEAR, and all other road hazards except running flat or use on misaligned wheels. Any tire failing from any of these causes will be replaced on the basis of service rendered or repaired free of charge if repairable, providing failure resulted from usual wear and tear in road use under normal conditions.

3. LIMITED LIFETIME WARRANTY
We further warrant all White tires for the life of the tire against defects in workmanship and materials during and after the above warranties have expired, without limit as to time or mileage prorated on tread wear.

Child's Learning Helped By Horse

By ERIC WAHA

VIENNA (AP) -Usally children learn to walk before they learn to ride. For some children, however, it is the other way around.

Therapists at Vienna's Children's clinic began what is called "hippotherapy" in 1975. This technique improves the coordination of handicapped children and their balance and relaxes their muscles.

When a healthy person starts riding lessons, he notices that his muscles soon react to the movements of the horse. This is because of a reaction to the rotating back of the horse, to maintain balance and to cope with the unusual positioning of the legs around the body of the horse.

Handicapped persons have the same reaction, which helps to reduce their handicaps.

Children selected for hippotherapy must be at least 4 years old, must have a certain measure of control over their bodies, be mentally capable of cooperating with the therapists and must not be fearful.

The "therapy horse" must be smart, reliable and even-tempered and his gait must be rhythmical. Hippotherapy must be ordered and supervised by doctors. It is carried out by qualified therapists only.

Five-year-old Thomas loves a brown horse named Dandy that helped him to take his first steps. He had suffered serious brain damage at birth, which badly hampered movement of both legs. His arms were affected less. Although he was too weak to stand up, he could sit and move by crawling when he began hippotherapy treatment on Sept.15, 1977.

"On Nov. 3, he was taking his first steps," said Emmy Tauffkirchen, the chief physiotherapist of the Children's Clinic, where three out of four children like Thomas, treated by hippotherapy, have showed marked improvement.

"When he was able to stand up and walk, he was still a bit unsure of himself," she added. "Dandy lowered his head so that Thomas could hold the horse's ear, for support."

She said hippotheraoy not only helps a handicapped child's body, but also his mind.

"There is something such a child can do that many a healthy child cannot do — ride a horse," she said. "It helps his self-confidence and his self-respect."

Hippotherapy began in the Scandinavian countries about 20 years ago. From there it spread to Belgium, to West and East Germany, Holland and Switzerland. Mrs. Tauffkirchen brought it to Austria in 1975.

Dandy was given to the clinic by a wealthy woman as a Christmas present in 1974.

The following year, Mrs. Tauffkirchen took him to Fulda, West Germany, for training as a therapy horse. In October of 1975, hippotherapy began here.

Mrs. Tauffkirchen is graduate of the Viennna University, where she enrolled in physical medicine studies. The courses last at least three years and include all forms of rehabilitation — especially after accidents — of adults as well as children.

"But I have always been interested in work with children," she said in an interview with The Associated Press.

When she finished her studies in the late 1950s there was not a single physical therapist attached to any of the Vienna children's hospitals.

She went to Switzerland for one year. When she returned, the professor in charge of the Children's Clinic suggested she work half-days with children.

"But after only one month, the professor decided I should work full time," she said. "Now we are six therapists, plus five students."

Vienna Civil Rite Planned By Prince

VIENNA (AP) — Prince Michael of Kent and Baroness Marie-Christine von Reibnitz, whose plans for a Roman Catholic wedding were scotched by Pope Paul VI, arrived at Vienna's Schwechat Airport on Wednesday. They plan to marry in Vienna's city hall on Friday.

Prince michael, 35, cousin of Queen Elizabeth II, and the 33-year-old Austrian baroness were forbidden a Catholic wedding because they plan to raise their children as Protestants.

Like all members of Britain's royal family, Prince Michael belongs to the Church of England. Because the first marriage of his Catholic fiancee was annulled, the prince cannot marry her in the Anglican church.

Transit Pass Eases Woes Of Commuters

BOSTON (AP) — While an exasperated schoolteacher waits for change at a subway fare booth, Stephen Elaman, flashing a wallet-size card, runs past the turnstiles and catches the departing streetcar they both take home from work.

The card, carried by Elman and 26,000 other commuters, is a pass to the network of buses, subways, trolleys and trains that crisscross the metropolitan area.

Again, the pass has spared its possessor one of the frustrations that often discourage commuters from taking public transportation.

For a flat fee once a month deducted from his paycheck, Elman, an employee of a local university, receives a pass that entitles him to unlimited rides on the trolley system.

For a few dollars more, he could take countless rides on longer routes on any of the Boston area's subways, buses or commuter trains.

The pass program, which is operated by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority with the help of employees, is the first of its kind in the country.

Started four years ago, the program attracts riders by promising reduced fares and convenience. Pass programs officials also are trying to make the pass more appealing by making arrangements with local museums and other attractions for discounts to passholders.

While ridership on trasit systems in many other cities is declining, the MBTA boasts its numbers are going up.

It is estimated that people rode the area's transportation system a million more times than the previous year. About 90 percent of the additional rides is attributed to the success of the pass program. Ernest Deeb, pass program administrator, says about 26,000 of the estimated 250,000 people who use the system daily now have a pass.

The large participation traslated into a drop in revenue for a while because passholders get a discount, but Deeb says the program now is breaking even.

The cost of a monthly pass equals 18 round-trip rides on the route used by the commuter. This gives most commuters a free ride on two days a month. For people who use the transit system on weekends or after work, the pass becomes a big bargain.

Nearly 600 employers in the Boston area now participate in the pass program, and the staff can barely keep pace with the new applications, Deeb says.

"The response is overwhelming. We get letters in the mail almost every day," says Deeb. Other transit systems have copied the idea, but Boston's system remains the largest, he says.

The list of firms that participate in the MBTA program includes some of Boston's biggest employers, such as the John Hancock Company where almost 1,000 of the company's 1,400 employees have passes.

When you're about to make the biggest purchase of your life, you'd better know HOW.

HOW is the Home Owners Warranty. America's first nationally-insured,* 10-year protection plan for new homes. It covers you for a year against workmanship and materials that fail to meet approved standards; for two years against defects in wiring, ductwork and piping; and for 10 full years against major structural defects. Only qualified HOW builders can offer this unique protection. ASK YOUR BUILDER IF HE KNOWS HOW and for details of program coverage. Get to know HOW.

Mondale Begins Mideast Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale begins a four-day Middle East trip Thursday for private talks with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and a brief meeting with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The vice president said in an interview that he would not be involved in specific discussions over problems in resumption of Israeli-Egyption peace negotiations. Nor will he be involved in any direct negotiations, he said.

He will consult with Begin, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and other Israeli leaders, reviewing in particular the political elements involved in resuming Israeli-Egyptian peace talks, and where the current situation in the Middle East is headed, officials said.

The trip will include a stop in the old, Arab quarter of Jerusalem where Mondale will visit the western wall of the ancient Jewish temple.

That stop is being characterized as a private visit because an official visit there would mark U.S. recognition of Israeli control of the quarter, occupied by Israel since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek had said he would boycott the Mondale visit if the vice president did not stop at the annexed Arab sector of the holy city, which includes the shrine.

Mondale said in a statement Wednesday: "My family and I intend to make a personal visit to the western wall, that most holy shrine of the Jewish people. My friend Mayor Kollek is welcome to accompany me. This is not a political visit, of course, but my return to the wall is a matter of great personal importance to me and my family."

The vice president, who will travel with his wife, Joan, and daughter, Eleanor, first visited Israel from August 27 to Sept. 1, 1973, shortly before the most recent Arab-Israeli war.

Mondale's stop Monday afternoon in Egypt, where he will confer for about two hours with Sadat in Alexandria, was added at Sadat's invitation after the Israeli tour was planned. He will return to Washington early Tuesday morning.

The vice president will be accompanied by a delegation of White House and State Department officials and 28 other persons, including a number of Democratic Party contributors and officials of Jewish organizations.

Among the White House officials will be President Carter's counsel, Robert Lipshutz, and his domestic policy adviser, Stuart Eizenstat. Neither has a direct role in the Middle East situation. Both are Jewish.

While in Israel, Mondale will call on former Prime Minister Golda Meir and will visit a kibbutz.

The major speech of the trip, a message on behalf of Carter marking the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Jewish state, will be delivered at a state dinner in the Israeli parliament, Saturday evening.

Libyan Leader Ends East German Visit

BERLIN (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy wound up a three-day visit to East Berlin on Wednesday after signing a 10-year agreement on political, technical and economic cooperation, the official news agency ADN reported.

No details of the agreement were disclosed. A separate agreement was signed on cooperation in "the area of health affairs," ADN said. Khadafy left by train for Warsaw. The 34-year-old Libyan leader is making a political and economic tour of Eastern Europe which already has taken him to Bulgaria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

City Residents Attend Mexican-American Meet

Twenty members of Comerciantes Organizados Mexico Americanos will be attending the third annual convention of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC) today through Sunday at the Sheraton Crest Inn in Austin.

Guest speakers for the convention will include Dr. Daniel Valdes, president of La Luz magazine; U.S. Sen. John Tower; U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger; Attorney General John Hill; and Bill Clements of Dallas, Republican candidate for governor of Texas.

One of the highlights of the convention will be the selection of TAMACC'S "Outstanding Businessperson of the Year" for 1978.

Representatives of more than 20 Mexican-American chambers of commerce from throughout the state are slated to attend the convention.

The purpose of the convention is to help TAMACC fulfill a three-fold objective which includes the development of civic and business leadership, the increased participation of Mexican-Americans in economic issues and the increased participation of the Mexican-American community in the economic structure of Texas and the United States.

Zenodotus of Ephesus, the first superintendent of the library at Alexandria, was a Greek grammarian who made the first critical edition of Homer.

??? WE TAKE THE GUESSWORK ??? out of choosing the right business!

We put people in business for themselves . . . that's our business! People just like you: ready to own and run a business, but unsure how to begin. WE SHOW THEM HOW!

First we show them our high-impulse hardware & variety products that are proven sellers. Then we tell them about our national network of HHC Dealers, servicing their Handy Hardware Center displays in busy retail locations—and earning a 50% mark-up on every product sold!

We show them how they DO NO SELLING! . . . and need little business experience to begin. We show them how they can begin earning profits their very first day. We tell them how flexible our opportunity is: how THEY choose the size business that's right for them, beginning at $7950. Of course we tell them we secure all stores, train all Dealers, provide continuous promotional support and protect our Dealers with a Buy-Back Agreement. Then we show them our busy Home Office and say this: INVESTIGATE BEFORE YOU BUY!

And their choice is always easy. Because WE TOOK THE GUESSWORK OUT! Let us take the guesswork out of YOUR decision and help you choose the right business! Call or write Mr. Weston today for our FREE brochure, which spells out full details.

LILLISTON ROLLING CULTIVATOR

- cultivates at speeds up to 10 mph — pre-emerge to tool bar height.
- mulches tough crusts and aerates the soil — also helps to retain moisture.
- incorporates pre-emerge or post-emerge chemicals — well into the soil.
- builds beds, bars off, lays by — won't harm tender crop root systems.

PRESIDENT CARTER

MICK JAGGER

Women To Picket 'Stones'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — When an expected crowd of 12,000 rock fans gather for a Rolling Stones concert at the Mid-South Coliseum Wednesday night, not all of them will be there to idolize Mick Jagger and the group.

A small group of women, members of the fledgling Memphis Chapter of the Women Against Violence Against Women, will picket the performance because of the Stones' portrayal of women in their songs and promotional material.

A co-organizer of the protest, Linda Byrd, said billboards promoting a Rolling Stones album, "Black and Blue," displayed a chained and bruised, but smiling, woman with the caption "I'm black and blue from the Rolling Stones and I love it."

A spokesman for the Stones said the accusations did not merit a reply.

Actress Attends Film Show

TAIPEI (AP) — American actress Cicely Tyson arrived in Taipei Wednesday to attend the ninth Asian-Pacific film show.

Tyson, of Harlem, New York, told local reporters she was glad to see American Blacks were given a chance to play important roles in movies and TV series, and hoped this trend would continue.

Winner of two Emmy Awards for best actress in 1974 for her role in the TV drama and TV special "Jane Pittman," Tyson won acclaim for her roles in the TV series "Roots," and the motion picture "Sounder."

More than 160 delegates from several countries will participate in the show, in which 16 dramas and nine non-fiction documentaries were entered.

Evangelist Predicts Downfall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong — temporarily banished by his father from the Worldwide Church of God — has predicted a downfall of the religious empire because of its leaders' lavish spending habits and poor financial management.

ARMSTRONG

Armstrong told the Los Angeles Times in an interview published Monday that the church is a "house divided" that has its 65,000 members "shot through with fear."

The one-time heir apparent to head the church, Armstrong was recently ordered to take a six-month leave of absence by his father, Herbert W. Armstrong, who heads the Pasadena-based organization. The younger Armstrong still receives an annual salary of $85,000.

Armstrong said the church has been forced by inflation and extravagance to borrow money to meet its payroll obligations, despite more than $65 million in annual income.

Carter May Go Fishing

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — President Carter was reported to be planning a fishing trip for tuna and bluefish Thursday off the Virginia coast.

The White House wouldn't confirm or deny the trip, but the chief of Secret Service, Michael Kelly, in nearby Norfolk, said:

"We've been alerted to support a presidential visit."

The president reportedly will make the fishing jaunt into the Atlantic on the 50-foot charter boat Gannet, owned and chartered by Norfolk attorney Peter Decker.

Two Secret Service men Tuesday checked out the Gannet here, after it had returned to the Virginia Beach Fishing Center from a charter trip, said the center's booking agent, Pat McGhee.

Inspiration For Bacchus

WELLS, Maine (AP) — Mail-order Bishop H. Carlisle Estes says he got a divine inspiration to open a Temple of Bacchus along U.S. 1 after town zoning officials refused to allow him to open a restaurant.

Estes, who holds his clerical credentials from the Universal Life Church, outlined the nature of the services he plans in a letter to the town code enforcement officer: "Divine food, heavenly music, esthetic painting and sculpture, sacramental wines, spiritual beverages, inspired writings, ethereal dancing."

Estes and his partner Vincent Marino sought to convert Marino's house into a supper club but were turned down by the zoning board, which ruled last February that a restaurant would not be acceptable in the residentially zoned area.

American Author Honored

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — American author Frederick Pohl was honored at the World Science Fiction Writers Convention in Dublin as the best science fiction writer of 1977.

Pohl, 58, received the John W. Campbell Memorial Trophy on Sunday night for his novel "Gateway."

Judged second were the Russian writers Arkadi and Boris Strugatski for their novel "Roadside Picnic." Another American, Philip K. Dick, finished

Shades Of The Snaildarter

MARION, Va. (AP) — The shiny pigtoe pearly and the tan riffleshell have brought a halt to the cleanup of debris from floods in this part of southwest Virginia, and county officials are hopping mad about it.

The shiny pigtoe pearly and the tan riffleshell are types of freshwater mussels that live in the Middle Fork of the Holston River — and are on the federal list of endangered species.

There are also two small fish, the yellowfin madtom and the spotfin chub, to be considered. They, too, are endangered species.

The cleanup was halted June 19 after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service complained to the Army Corps of Engineers that silt was being stirred up and that this could harm the endangered mussels and fish.

Also stirred up is the Board of Supervisors of Smyth County, which was declared a federal disaster area after damaging floods last November.

The supervisors have fired off telegrams to President Carter, Virginia Gov. John Dalton, and Virginia members of Congress, seeking their help in seeing that the work resumes.

BLACK MEANS WHITE — A young lady from Bangladesh rubs a black, charcoal-like substance into her teeth recently at Sonargaon. The practice is common in rural areas of Bangladesh, a poor country where consumer goods taken for granted elsewhere — such as toothpaste — yield to less expensive and more traditional ways. Secret Assassinations Probe Acknowledged

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Dr. Clyde Snow, an anthropologist with the Federal Aviation Administration center, confirmed he is working on a secret project for the House Assassinations Committee, which is investigating the deaths of John Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King. He declined, however, to reveal the nature of the project.

A forensic anthropologist, Snow often aids in plane crash investigations by studying skeletal remains and then reconstructing an unidentified crash victim's facial features for authorities. Committee spokeswoman Jane Downy in Washington said Snow's work is being kept confidential for at least a few more months.

Hill Undecided On Entering Hale Slaying Investigation

Attorney General John Hill will decide "before the end of the week" whether to conduct an investigation into the Sunday shooting death of a Mexican-American man, who died while in the custody of a Hale County reserve deputy, a spokesman said.

Roscoe Harrison, a press officer in the attorney general's office, said staff members have talked to Plainview officials, including Sheriff Charles Tue and Dist. Atty. Marvin Marshall, about the incident which has piqued the interest of Hispanics and prompted two investigations already.

"We always (talk to local officials)," Harrison said. "We don't go into an investigation blindly."

Hill, in Fort Worth to attend the State Bar Convention, was unavailable for comment.

But Harrison said the attorney general is aware of the death of Tim Morales Jr., 25, and of a request from members of the League of United Latin American Citizens for a supplementary probe..

Investigations by the FBI and a Texas Ranger are underway, and reserve deputy Charles Cypert has been suspended from duty pending their outcomes.

Cypert, 45, a 6-year reserve veteran of more than 200 arrests and a civilian radio repairman, had reported to duty Sunday in the absence of a vacationing deputy.

He reportedly was responding to a drunk and disorderly call and was handling the matter alone.

Morales, who was arrested, reportedly left Cypert and proceeded toward a nearby residence, before being intercepted.

A scuffle ensued, Tue said, and Cypert's .45-caliber automatic pistol discharged. The shot struck Morales in the forehead below the hairline and killed him instantly, an Amarillo pathologist has confirmed. Blood samples analyzed later revealed Morales was legally intoxicated at the time of his death.

The incident, which reportedly occurred four miles north of Mayfield at the intersection of FM 179 and FM 1071, is the sixth death in 13 months of a Mexican-American while in the custody of a West Texas lawman, Hispanics say.

LULAC district one director Tony Reyes says the organization "is satisfied authorities investigating the incident have received all possible information about the case..." He says LULAC plans no protests.

On Tuesday, LULAC officers said they'd found a witness to the shooting. Earlier, it was believed no one other than the principles had witnessed the gun's discharge.

However, investigations continue and a Hale County grand jury is not expected to review the case until early July, according to Marshall.

Services for Rosales, a Robstown native and a Hale Center resident for 20 years, will be at 10 a.m. today in St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Hale Center with the Rev. Glen Rosendale, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in the Hale Center Cemetery under the direction of Freeman Funeral Home.

Rosales had farmed in Lakeview the past seven months.

Survivors include his son, Timothy III of Plainview; his father, T.L. of Hale Center; a brother, Rudy, of Hale Center; five sisters, Elojia Balderas, Bertina Gomez and Anita Flores, all of Hale Center, Juanita Roybal of Plainview and Erma Hernandez of Robstown; and his grandmother, Isabelle Rosales of New Deal.

*4. A is the most difficult, but probably the most acceptable.

*10. In most cases, A is the best solution because it takes into consideration individual differences and needs. For some, however, cleanliness is of such importance that B rather than A would result in lower strees. Still others can live happily with solution C.

*14. In a recent survey of successful women executives, most agreed that a women in such a situation should remain "on task" and refuse to get involved in such exhanges, although she should not be unpleasant about it.

*17. B would provide the most immediate solution. D would not be possible because the law prohibits treating employees differently on the basis of sex.

*18. A is best; he could have he come ill or had an accident.

Rare Plants To Be Moved From Dam Site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The furbish lousewort, an endangered plant, is not expected to take its cue from the snail darter and block construction of the Dickey-Lincoln dam project in Maine, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said Wednesday.

The fish and wildlife service outlined a conservation program which it said could insure the survival of the rare plant and still allow the controversial project to be built in northern Maine.

The announcement came at a time when Congress is wrestling with possible changes in the Endangered Species Act to permit exceptions to the law.

The Supreme Court recently ruled the Tennessee Valley Authority could not close the gates on the Tellico Dam on the Little Tennessee River because it would doom the snail darter, a rare fish protected by the Endangered Species Act.

The proposed Dickey-Lincoln project would destroy or jeopardize 512 furbish louseworts by inundating 88,000 acres of land and 267 miles of streams, the fish and wildlife service said.

But a conservation program calls for the Corps of Engineers to establish new lousewort colonies by transplanting or seeding, protect existing lousewort habitats below the project impoundment, study lousewort propagation techniques, and carefully monitor existing louseworts during and after construction of the project.

"If the conservation program is followed, it will result in an increase in numbers of the species and increased protecton for its habitat," the fish and wildlife service said.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service director Lynn Greenwalt commended the Corps of Engineers for its effort in devising a workable solution.

"Shortly after the species was rediscovered in 1976 and appeared likely to be listed as an endangered species," Greenwalt said, "the corps initiated an informal conultation process with us so we could look for alternative solutions to the potential problem."

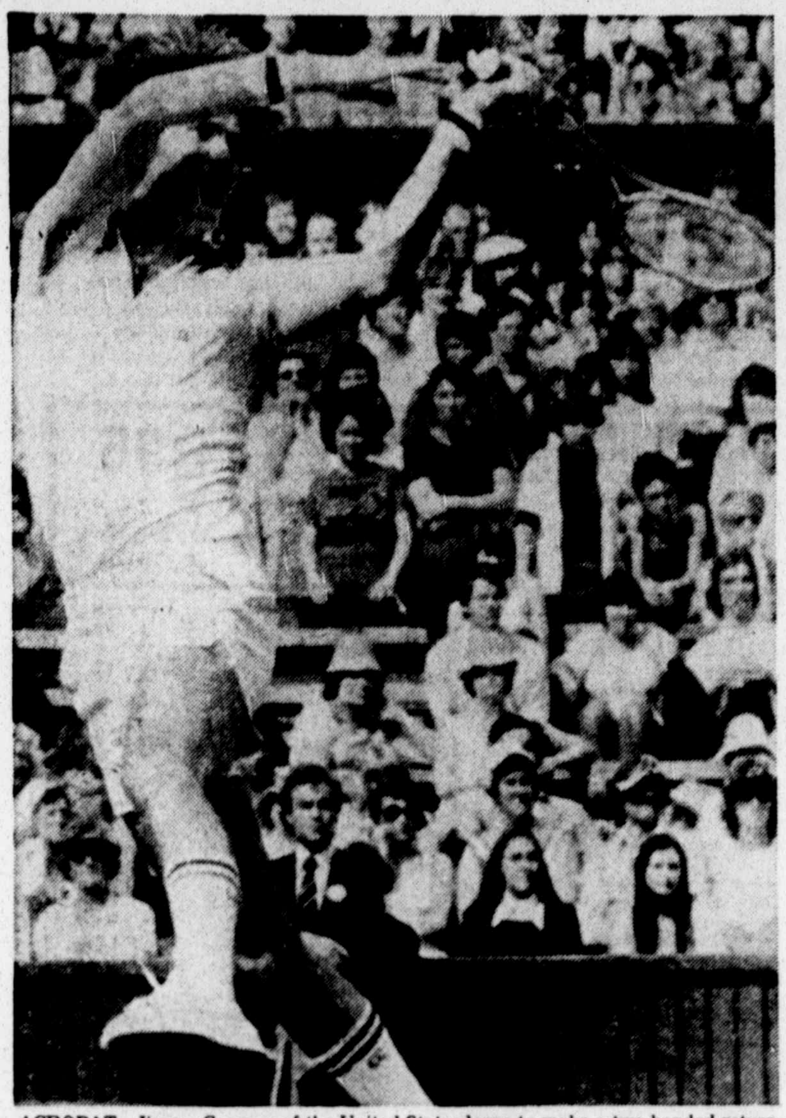
Connors Defeats Warwick In Second-Round Match



ACROBAT—Jimmy Connors of the United States leaps to make a two-handed return of a ball hit by Australia's Kim Warwick during the players' second-round match at Wimbledon Wednesday. Connors survived a strong challenge from the Aussie to win 6-3, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4 and move into the third round. The match took place on Centre Court at Wimbledon. (AP Laserphoto)

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors survived a powerful challenge from Australia's Kim Warwick Wednesday to win a scintillating match 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4 in the Wimbledon tennis championships.

"That brought out my best tennis, that's for sure," the left-hander said as he moved into the third round.

Connors' arch-rival, Bjorn Borg of Sweden, the defending champion, waited patiently for a long women's singles match to finish and never got on court Wednesday. His second-round match against Peter McNamara of Australia was postponed until Thursday.

An all-time record crowd for one day, 37,600, milled around the outer courts of the All-England Club and pushed and squeezed to try to get a glimpse of the stars.

See Summaries, 3E

To the dismay of the fans, the only seeded player to lose all day was British hope Buster Mottram, who was No. 12. Frew McMillan of South Africa, better known as a doubles ace, pulled his white cap firmly over his eyes, wielded two-handed backhands and forehands and eliminated the tall Englishman 9-8, 6-4, 6-3.

Third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States whipped J. Royappa of India 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

Two American seeds, Brian Gottfried and Roscoe Tanner, scored easy wins to reach the third round.

Gottfried downed fellow American Brian Teacher 6-2, 7-5, 6-3. Teacher offered serious resistance only in the second set, and Gottfried had some luck and broke the deadlock after each held service for 11 games. He hit a forehand that ticked the net and bounced high over his opponent's shoulder.

Tanner hit ferociously past Bob Giltinan of Australia 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

The most impressive winner among the seeds was Raul Ramirez of Mexico, who cruised past Don Schneider of South Africa 6-1, 6-0, 6-2.

Guillermo Vilas of Argentina withstood 16 service aces from John Feaver, a 26-year-old Englishman, to win 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

John Alexander of Australia, one round behind the other seeds, overcame Victor Pecci of Paraguay 7-5, 4-6, 9-8, 8-9, 12-10 in a marathon lasting 5 hours 20 minutes, spread over two days. The match had been halted by darkness after two hours of cut and thrust Tuesday night.

"I started in the cold of the evening and finished in hot afternoon sun," Alexander said. "What a match."

Other seeds going to the third round were Ilie Nastase of Romania, who beat Italian Gianni Ocleppo 6-3, 6-4, 9-7, three-time champion John Newcombe, ousting fellow Australian Ross Case 6-4, 6-2, 9-8, and Poland's Wojtek Fibak, who outstroked Johan Kriek of South Africa 8-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Connors' match against Warwick, played before a packed and excited crowd on the center court, was the best of the tournament so far.

Warwick, after going down gallantly in the first two sets, played tremendous tennis to win the third, with the roar of the crowd constantly behind him.

The Australian matched Connors game for game in the fourth set to 4-4, but then his game suddenly disintegrated, and Connors volleyed his way past to the finish.

Chris Evert, aiming for her third Wimbledon crown, reached the third round by hitting past Helena Anliot of Sweden 6-1, 6-0, but it was not as easy as the scores would make it seem. The tall, slim Swede hit powerful forehands and kept the rallies going, and Evert had to pull out some difficult retrieving shots.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia, another strong contender for the crown, found it much easier to defeat Lele Forood of the United States 6-0, 6-2.

America's two high school girls, Tracy Austin and Pam Shriver, raced into the third round.

Tracy, 15 years and 6 months, conquered the Betsy Nagelsen 6-2, 6-1. Pam, 15 years and 11 months, did even better and crushed Robin Harris 6-0, 6-0.

Title-holder Virginia Wade, six-time singles titlist Billie Jean King and strong challenger Martina Navratilova, the exiled Czech, did not play Wednesday.

Sheffield Fires 69, Assumes Lead In City Junior Golf Meet

By SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

He says he plays better when she tags along.

Apparently Sheffield knows what he is talking about. The Monterey youngster shot a sizzling 4-under-par 69 Wednesday to take the lead in the Lubbock City Junior Golf Championship going into today's final round—and his mother accompanied him around the entire 18-hole layout at Meadowbrook Golf Course.

Although Mrs. Sheffield had a previous engagement, she decided to go with her son because, as she explains, "I think he plays better when I'm watching, he holds his temper down and doesn't get frustrated as easily."

Reflecting back on a round in which he made five birdies, one eagle and only three bogeys, young Sheffield agreed—"I always play better when she's along.".

Sheffield needed all the help he could get after firing a 7-over-par 79 on the first day of the tourney.

The confident youngster, who was once kicked off the Monterey golf squad because he went to get dougnuts between classes, shrugged his shoulders and remarked on "the plenty of bad breaks yesterday (in the first round)" that influenced his poor play.

Those bad breaks included an unplayable lie on the 12th and 18th holes.

But it was a different story Wednesday, as the temperature and wind lessened, and Sheffield's game picked up.

"I hit the green on every hole except three—and those were the only three that I bogeyed," he explained. "But my putting still gave me a hard time."

For example, as he prepared to tee off at the par-5 17th hole, he turned and exclaimed, "watch me birdie this one."

After a good drive, his second shot was engulfed by a bunker and the predicted birdie looked to be out of reach. But a good third shot gave the schoolboy a 15-foot chance for a birdie.

Without any hesitation he proceeeded to stroke the ball towards the hole, only to have it hug the lip of the cup and roll out.

He settled for par and bit his lip, wishing those putts would fall.

Taking A Break

JEFF MITCHELL'S SITUATION is different from most of ours in that when he gets two weeks of vacation, it's not of the paid nature.

But, there comes a time when the summer gets too draggy; the mind doesn't function in perfect harmony with the body; and every town looks just like the last. It's time to take some time off.

Hence, Mitchell's visit in Lubbock with his friends and folks. Just rest, sip lemonade, and enjoy the current heat wave, even if it does mean nothing coming into the pocketbook.

The professional golf tour isn't all new slacks and nonchalance, leaning on a putter waiting for the next guy to drop a 10-footer. There's the mental and physical strain; "I was just getting tired," Mitchell admitted this week.

The former Texas Tech golfer had been on the pro swing without a break since February, but, after the Buick Open, he and his wife headed for Lubbock and a rest.

Well, almost a rest, as he took time off from his time off to win the Gaines County Open last weekend. But, for the most part, it's been rest—and a little instruction from a local pro.

• • •

"I'D BEEN AT it for quite a few weeks," Mitchell said. "I was playing better (than earlier in the spring), but I couldn't keep interest in it because I was so tired."

Over the past few tournaments, Mitchell's game would include one hot round—a 69 or so—which would spring him into the better-money range.

He had reached the point where "I've been about one shot away from making quite a bit more money. I feel I need to improve my putting now.

"(Even earlier), the difference was the putting. Some days, I don't hit it real well, but on the average, I'd hit it well and, when I had a good round, it was when I'd make a few putts. Golf is two different games, hitting and putting.

"Putting helps—espeically in confidence. Good putting breeds confidence in all areas of the game.

"But (while here), I've had a chance to work with Richard Whittenburg (pro at Hillcrest Country Club), and he's helped me.

"Just like fundamentals, it's nothing major. But you get into habits that you don't realize at the time. You need someone to point it out. What you're doing and what you feel like you're doing are two different things."

• • •

MITCHELL HIT THE pro tour last year, PGA card in hand, and hit a hot streak late in the summer. His money purse bulged. And by the end of the year, he had cashed tour checks for about $31,000.

This year, the total hasn't been that; he has made just under $6,000, "which is not indicative of what I've played," he admits.

"I've never been a good player in cold weather. I like it when it's hot. So I feel I'm just now getting my second wind, so to speak.

"I didn't practice much in the winter, and I got off to a slow start. It's taken a little longer than I had expected to get back into consistent performance."

• • •

"THE LAST FOUR months, I've made almost every cut; I feel like a part of it (the tour) now. I'm just not up to where I can make the big checks.

"I usually finished anywhere from 35th to 50th, and it's not all that bad. But, about 25th is where you start making money.

"I'm not embarrassed by my game; I'm pretty proud of the way I hit it. I've made the cut just about every tournament. I feel I can compete with most of the guys out there. It's just a matter of time and a matter of work before I can make a real good showing.

"The whole first of the year, I was a little bit tight; I was really looking forward to this year.

"I don't ask for a whole lot; I like to feel my own game out. There is so little different betwen the tenth guy and the 100th guy.

"I want to make my $10,000 this year, to keep my card, but at the same time play good, solid, consistent golf."

Now, with the rest period about ended, a revived Jeff Mitchell will return to the circuit (at Milwaukee next weekend).

Report Reveals Shift Involving NBA Clubs

By The Associated Press

Tentative agreement was reached Wednesday to transfer ownership of the Boston Celtics to Buffalo Braves' owners John Y. Brown and Harry Mangurian and shift the Braves' franchise to San Diego under the new ownership of Celtics' owner Irving Levin, it was learned.

Two well-placed NBA sources confirmed the report to The Associated Press and said attorneys for Brown and Levin will meet in Los Angeles today to draw up the final papers for the deal. Brown and Levin were traveling and could not be reached for comment.

A third source, in the Braves front office, who asked not to be identified, said of the report: "We will make an announcement of our intention to move the franchise when the NBA Board of Governors meet in Chicago July 7. The club has no further comment."

The deal would be subject to the approval of the Board of Governors. However, the source said Levin and Brown have received "positive feedback" from several governors.

One source close to the negotiations said: "In a deal like this, there are any number of things that can go wrong. But so far everything has gone very smoothly."

Levin has been under pressure from Boston fans and media for his failure to return the once-dominant Celtics to prominence in the NBA. According to the sources, Levin welcomed the chance to take over a new team near his Los Angeles home.

Brown, who has been searching for a new home for the Braves for more than three months, is said to be "looking forward to the challenge of rebuilding the Celtics."

ATTRACTION—It may appear that Philadelphia second baseman Ted Sizemore (6) is attracted to Montreal's Gary Carter. Actually, Carter had slid into second base Tuesday to break up a double-play attempt and flipped Sizemore. The tactic failed, however, as Sizemore tagged Carter out and threw to first base to complete the double play. (AP Laserphoto)

Dietzel, LSU Near Deal?

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The chairman of the Louisiana State University Board of Supervisors said Wednesday that Paul Dietzel will easily be approved as the school's next athletic director.

Oliver P. Stockwel said he has heard no criticism of the selection of Dietzel by the board's Athletic Committee Monday.

"I can see no reason why the full Board of Supervisors would not accept the committee's recommendation," Stockwell said.

The board meets here Friday to vote on Dietzel's appointment, and a poll shows the majority of board members will approve him, even though he is still athletic director at Indiana University and has not said he will take the job.

The athletic committee voted 8-1 to recommend Dietzel's appointment and four supervisors contacted Wednesday they would go along with that recommendation. There are 18 supervisors, but five could not be reached for comment.

"I believe the LSU fans will recognize Paul Dietzel as a man of character and will be overwhelmingly in his favor," said supervisor Norris Fitzmorris.

Dietzel, who led LSU to a national football championship as coach in 1959, has said he will not take the job until after he talks with Indiana University President John Ryan, who is in Poland until July 4.

The 53-year-old Dietzel, who went to Army in 1962 after saying he would never leave LSU, was not interviewed for the Tiger athletic director's job. However, he has not said he would not take it.

Tech's Head Coach Searches For Assistants To Fill Staff

It's just not as easy to look for two persons as one; check with Rex Dockery.

Only coaches need to check with him, however.

Dockery, heading into his first year as head football coach at Texas Tech, has spent part of the last ten days of his vacation on the telephone and in interview sessions seeking not one, but two, assistant coaches.

First, he had to replace Jess Stiles, the Raiders' defensive end coach who resigned June 1 to enter the sporting goods business. Then, Monday, receiver coach Pat Hodgson resigned to become receiver coach with the San Diego Chargers.

"We've still got a couple of weeks," Dockery told the Avalanche-Journal from his vacation spot in North Carolina Wednesday. I'm just taking my time. I've made some calls and gotten some recommendations.

"I'd kinda like to hire these two coaches at the same time."

Although he isn't ready to announce any names, Dockery admitted that he was close to hiring at least one aide —"very close.

"But you don't want to just rush out and get someone in a hurry. You need to know who you are getting.

"There are a lot of good coaches, but not all have the right combinations (of qualities) for your staff. And that's what I'm trying to get."

Dockery said he had talked to coaches within the state and while on his vacation in Tennessee and North Carolina.

"I approached one coach in Texas about taking Jess' place, and, to be honest, we just couldn't afford him. He was probably one of the better high school coaches in Texas.

"But most high school coaches (on the Class AAAA level) are making more than assistants in college. But I am interested in getting somebody from Texas.

"I talked to one coach who would have come, except it was in the summer and too close to the start of fall football. He just felt it would not be right to leave the school at this time—and I appreciated his loyalty.

"If it had been in the winter or next season, I'm sure he would have taken the job, but he wouldn't come now."

Dockery said that he had not considered shuffling assignments among his present aides in hiring replacements for Stiles and Hodgson.

"There are some things to consider, including recruiting areas, but we will try to get the best people for the positions."

Dockery said that the offer which Hodgson accepted came quite suddenly.

"They had lost two or three coaches out there (San Diego), and they decided to hire Pat. It was a heck of an increase in salary for him. He felt like it was the best thing for him. Therefore, I wished him well."

Stiles had been a member of the Tech staff since 1969. Hodgson joined the Raider staff this spring.

Although Dockery said he was in no hurry to pick the two replacements, he said he hoped the men could be in Lubbock by the first of August.

Western Open To Start; Injured Miller Pulls Out

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Johnny Miller, whose late charge last year almost kept Tom Watson from his second Western Open Golf triumph, won't cause any problems in the tournament that begins today. He withdrew Wednesday, complaining of back trouble.

"Johnny would have been a major threat because he's beginning to play well," said Watson, who won by a single stroke last year. "He mentioned to me that he twinged it (his back) in the British Ooen last year of the year before.

"He's has some back problems that have kept him off the tour for awhile."

Miller, who fired 69s in the last two rounds to tie for second at last year's Western, telephoned tournament officials Wednesday morning to say he was having back spasms and would not be able to compete.

So Watson will not have to face the man who tied for sixth in the U.S. Open two weeks ago as he seeks his fourth victory of the year.

But Watson hasn't yet filled out a bank deposit slip for the first $45,000 first prize to add to his tour-leading earnings of $211,379.

There's still the expected danger in the $225,000 event from "your normal guys, your Hale Irwins, your Andy Norths. I don't go out and challenge the players.

"I go out and challenge the course. On this course, if you can go out and not make double bogeys, you're doing pretty well," said Watson.

Watson said the 7,083-yard, par-72 Butler National Golf Club course is one of the three most difficult on the pro tour. However, now that the fairways have matured, it is a fair layout.

"I play fairly consistently. I'm not striking the ball as well I'd like to. I never am. But I'm prepared, I've played this course maybe 40 times. I have a game plan. I'll stick to that," he said.

Still, Watson added, "It's a golf couse on which rarely will anyone escape with bogeys. There will be some higher scores than bogeys, including the winners'."

Among the absentees from the tournament is J.C. Snead, who fractured his left wrist Saturday when a hay wagon he was riding partially tipped over. Besides Milller, Leonard Thompson, Doug Ford and Greer Jones withdrew Wednesday.

Evonne Prefers Goolagong Name

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Evonne Goolagong Cawley, the sunny Australian who married Englishman Roger Cawley, says she prefers to be called by her maiden name of Goolagong, the name that appears on the championship rolls that include her 1971 Wimbledon singles title.

At Wimbledon, where officials adhere strictly to protocol, she appears on the program as Mrs. R.A. Cawley. And many people have confused her with another Australian, the former Helen Gourlay. She appears on the program as Mrs. R.L. Cawley.

There was no indication that the Wimbledon authorities would bend their rule.

Mrs. Goolagong, who married three years ago, gave birth last year, and her daughter is named Kelly Cawley.

NHL Delays Expansion

DETROIT (AP) — Expansion by the National Hockey League involving World Hockey Association teams is dead — at least for this year.

Both leagues concluded three days of talks Wednesday at the Plaza Hotel and announced at the end of the marathon sessions that they couldn't reach a satisfactory agreement.

It was thought that up to four WHA teams — Edmonton, Quebec, New England and Winnipeg — might be assimilated into the NHL.

"I can assure you from the National Hockey League standpoint, every effort was made to find that common ground in the time period we had," said John Ziegler, president of the NHL.

"We're satisfied that our counterparts in the World Hockey Association exercised equal amounts of good faith in their efforts," Ziegler continued.

"We haven't been able to find that common ground and there won't be expansion (by the WHA) into the NHL," Ziegler concluded.

Howard Baldwin, president of the WHA, said at the joint news conference: "The attitude of both leagues was 100 percent to achieve the best interests of teams in both leagues. . .now the WHA will go about its business."

Baldwin said the league expected to operate as scheduled next season with at least seven teams.

"The Houston situatiton is still unresolved," Baldwin said.

Houston owners in March said they wanted to apply for membership in the NHL, saying they didn't want to operate a WHA franchise. The WHA has been trying to find local ownership for the team ever since.

Ziegler said the main problem was that there wasn't enough time to hammer out an agreement and "we both have to get on to our business."

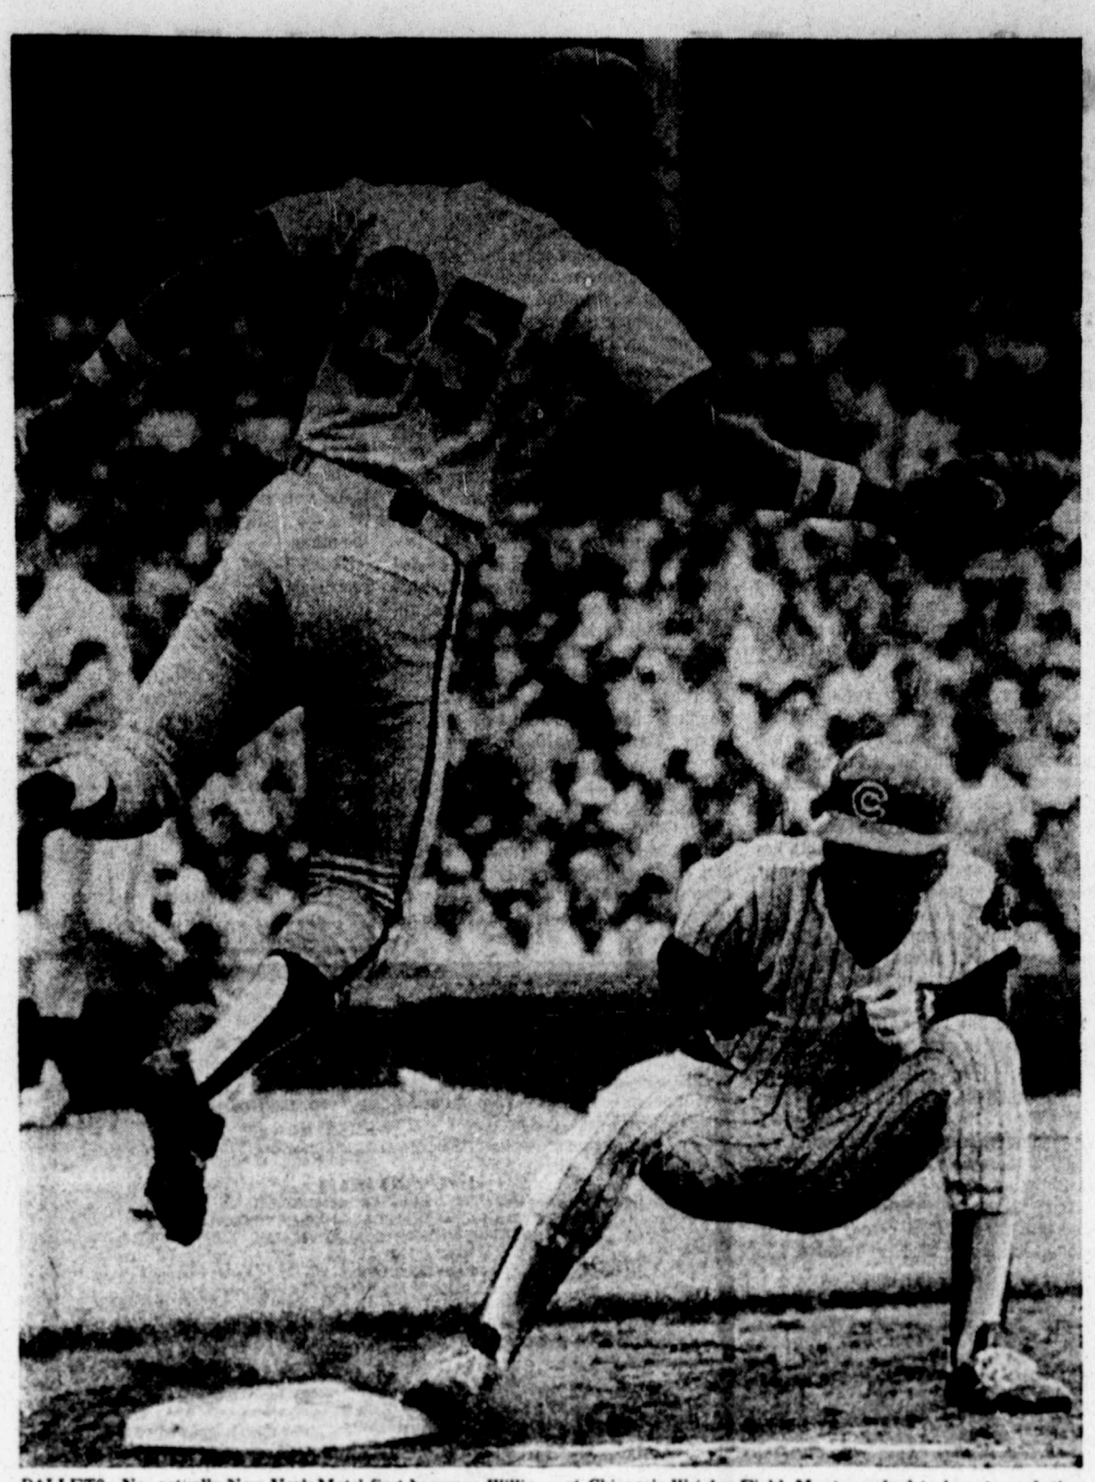
Ziegler said there were no plans for resuming discussions this year and, when asked about the prospects of reaching a settlement next year, Baldwin said he didn't want to look that far ahead.

Baldwin said the league was not considering expanding on its own to San Francisco or Seattle. Edmonton is considered the strongest of the candidates for possible assimilation into the NHL.

There are several hang-ups, none of which were discussed publicly by the leagues' representatives. For instance, the NHL has rights to nearly all the Edmonton players. If the Oilers were to have a viable expansion team, NHL teams would likely have to waive the rights to those players.

Another problem involves Canadian television revenues. Currently, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver share television receipts, but if the three Canadian WHA teams were to join the NHL, the pot would probably have to be split six ways.

Robert H. Kent, president of the NHL's Atlanta Flames, said there was simply too much to do and not enough time to do it. Ziegler had said there wasn't really one proposal from the WHA, but that several areas were considered.



BALLET?—No, actually New York Mets' first baseman Willie Montanez is leaping over the Chicago Cubs' Rodney Scott on a pickoff attempt during the teams' game Wednesday afternoon at Chicago's Wrigley Field. Montanez had to leap to grab the throw from pitcher Jerry Koosman. (AP Laserphoto)

Ailing Fidrych Rejoins Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Ailing Detroit Tiger pitcher Mark Fidrych was to rejoin the team Wednesday in Cleveland after getting treatment from the New York Yankees' team physician.

The Tigers said they sought out Dr. Maurice Cowen because of his success in treating a similar ailment of Yankee mound ace Don Gullett.

Fidrych received "vigorous treatment" from Cowen, who is also an orthopedic

Phillies Rally To Defeat Montreal 7-5

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia exploded for five runs in the seventh inning and Garry Maddox had three RBI, as the Phillies defeated the Montreal Expos 7-5 Wednesday night.

Jim Lonborg, 7-5, got the victory, allowing one run on four hits through six innings. Mike Garman, 0-3, who relieved Montreal starter Dan Schatzeder in the seventh, took the loss as he gave up all five Phillie runs in the seventh.

In the seventh, with one out, Bob Boone singled. Bud Harrelson ran for Boone, took second on a wild pitch and advanced to third on a single by Ted Sizemore.

Tim McCarver, pinch hitting for Lonborg, hit a sacrifice fly to score Harrelson. Maddox then slammed his sixth homer of the year to put the Phils ahead 3-1.

Larry Bowa followed with a single, stole second and moved to third on a throwing error by catcher Gary Carter on the play.

Garman was taken out of the game after walking Mike Schmidt, and reliever Bill Atkinson gave up run-scoring singles to Greg Luzinski and Jose Cardenal.

The Expos came back with three runs in the bottom of the seventh against reliever Warren Brusstar. Ellis Valentine and Andre Dawson singled and scored when Larry Parrish doubled. Dave Cash's single scored Parrish.

BREWERS SWEEP NY

Sal Bando singled home Sixto Lezcano from second base in the seventh inning, breaking a 2-2 tie to lead Milwaukee to a 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees, as the Brewers completed a doubleheader sweep.

The Brewers won the opener 5-0, as Ben Oglivie crashed a three-run, seventh-inning homer to back the six-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell, 8-5.

The Brewers, with four successive victories and 17 in their last 22 games, overtook the Yankees for second place in the American League East.

Yankee rookie Larry McCall, 0-1, gave up three successive hits for two runs to start the second game, then held the Brewers to one hit until Lezcano beat out a grounder to shortstop with one out in the seventh.

Lezcano took second on a balk and scored on Bando's single to center. Bando advanced to second on a fielder's choice and scored on a double by Buck Martinez for a 4-2 Milwaukee lead. The Brewers scored three insurance runs in an eighth-inning rally capped by Robin Yount's two-run single.

INDIANS, TIGERS SPLIT

Andre Thornton stroked a tie-breaking RBI single in the sixth inning to give the Cleveland Indians a 2-1 victory and a doubleheader split with the Detroit Tigers.

In the opener, Ron LeFlore slugged two RBI singles to give the Tigers a 4-2 victory.

Thornton's single in the nightcap, which scored Rick Manning from second, helped Mike Paxton, 5-4, record the victory. Paxton needed ninth-inning relief help from Sid Monge, who gained his third save.

The Indians scored first in the third inning. Duane Kuiper singled, advanced to second on Larvell Blanks' groundout, and came home on Manning's single.

BLUE JAYS 3, ORIOLES 2

Jim Clancy and Tom Murphy combined on a five-hitter and Rico Carty smashed a two-run, first-inning homer to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a victory over the Baltimore Orioles and a sweep of their four-game series.

The loss was Baltimore's seventh in a row. The Orioles had won 18 of 20 games going into last Friday night's game in Boston, where they started their losing streak.

Toronto's four-game sweep, including a 24-10 victory Monday night, and a double-header sweep Tuesday night, represented the team's longest winning streak in its two-year history.

Clancy was aided by three double plays, including an inning-ending double play in the fourth when the Orioles had men at first and third with one out.

Clancy, 5-7, struck out seven and in one stretch through the middle innings retired 10 straight batters. He gave up two runs in the ninth, on Lee May's RBI single and an infield error, before needing last-out relief help from Murphy, who gained his seventh save.

The Jays got their third run in the fourth inning on doubles by Otto Velez and Rick Cerone to hand Scott McGregor, 8-6, the loss.

GIANTS 4, PADRES 2

Larry Herndon rapped four hits and scored a pair of runs to pace the San Francisco Giants to a victory over the San Diego Padres in the first game of a double-header.

Jim Barr, 4-4, gave up six hits in 7 2/3 innings, and Randy Moffit came in to earn his fifth save. Padres left-hander Randy Jones, who surrendered eight Giants hits, took the loss and dropped to 5-7.

The Giants took a 2-0 lead in the second inning. Willie McCovey led off with a double and, one out later, took third on Herndon's single. Johnnie LeMaster then doubled home McCovey, and an intentional walk to Marc Hill loaded the bases. Barr's sacrifice bunt scored Herndon.

The Giants scored single runs in the fourth and sixth innings on RBI hits by Bill Madlock and Hill to go ahead 4-0, and the Padres scored twice on a pair of hits in the sixth to cut the score to 4-2.

ASTROS 3, REDS 0

Bob Watson slammed a three-run home run in the seventh inning and Tom Dixon hurled a four-hitter for his first major league shutout as the Hoston Astros blanked the Cincinnati Reds.

Dixon, 4-3, did not allow a runner to reach third while lowering his ERA to 1.96. The Astros collected all three runs and eight hits off Houston nemesis Fred Norman, 8-5.

Dixon led off the seventh inning with his second single of the game but was forced at second base on Terry Puhl's unsucessful sacrifice attempt. Jesus Alou followed with a single to left, and Puhl held at second. Wilbur Howard ran for Alou, and the Astros executed a double steal, putting runners on second and third.

Enos Cabell struck out for the second out of the inning, but Watson followed with his ninth homer of the season on a 3-2 pitch as the Astros gained only their second victory in their past seven games.

DODGERS 3, BRAVES 2

Ron Cey belted a three-run homer for the second straight night and gave the Los Angeles Dodgers a victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Cey's 10th home run of the season was a line drive down the left field line off knuckle-baller Phil Niekro, 8-9, in the third inning. It capped a rally that began with two outs when Bill Russell bounced a single to center and Steve Garvey walked.

Cey's three-run homer Tuesday night beat the Braves 3-0.

The victory went to Burt Hooton, 7-6, who worked six innings in the near 100-degree heat before he was relieved by Charlie Hough. Terry Forster, the third Dodgers pitcher, got his 10th save.

Burroughs also scored Atlanta's first run in the fourth inning when Hooton experienced a wild streak, walking three, including Niekro with the bases loaded to force in the run.

It was the 13th victory for the Dodgers in their past 18 games and their 12th in their past 15 trips to Atlanta.

CARDS, 7, PIRATES 5

Ken Reitz's two-run double snapped an 11th inning tie and gave the St. Louis Cardinals a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Reitz, hitless in five prior at bats, doubled into the left field corner with two outs off losing reliever Kent Tekulve, 4-5.

Scoring were Ted Simmons, who had doubled, and Keith Hernandez, who was intentionally walked.

The victory went to Roy Thomas, 1-0. It was the first major league decision for the rookie reliever, acquired by the Cardinals last weekend on waivers from the Houston minor league system.

It was the third straight victory for St. Louis, matching the Cardinals' season-high, achieved twice before.

Pittsburgh tied the score 5-5 with two runs in the ninth on a sacrifice fly by Willie Stargell and an RBI single by Phil Garner. A perfect throw by Cards center fielder Jerry Mumphry cut down John Milner at the plate and saved a potential winning run in the inning.

St. Louis took a 2-0 lead in the second inning off starting pitcher Jim Bibby on a leadoff homer by Hernandez, his ninth, and doubles by Mike Phillips and Cards starting pitcher Silvio Martinez.

And the Cards scored two more in the fifth. Lou Brock walked and scored on a double by Mumphry, who took third on Garry Templeton's bunt single and scored on Simmons' sacrifice fly.

Pittsburgh scored two runs in the second on Stargell's two-run homer following a single by Milner and added a run in the seventh on Otts's triple and a single by Garner.

CUBS 9, METS 8

Mick Kelleher's suicide squeeze bunt with the bases loaded drove in the winning run in the 10th inning and gave Chicago a 9-8 victory over the New York Mets.

Kelleher's bunt scored Dave Kingman, who had reached first base when he was hit by a pitch from loser Butch Metzger, 1-3, and gone to third on a hit-and-run single by Greg Gross.

The Cubs had snapped a 5-5 tie with three runs in the eighth inning, only to have the Mets come back with three in the ninth.

Kelleher drew a walk to open the Chicago eighth and went to third on Dave Rader's double. Dale Murray walked Steve Ontiveros intentionally to load the bases.

Murray retired pinch-hitter Rudy Meoli on a fly ball and got Ivan DeJesus to bounce into a force play at the plate; then issued a walk to Bobby Murcer to force in the go-ahead run.

Ram Move Discussed

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of the Los Angeles Rams met with Anaheim officials Wednesday in a continuing study to determine if his National Football League club should move from its Los Angeles Coliseum home, but no immediate decision was anticipated.

Rosenbloom, making his first personal visit to Anaheim Stadium and other facilities which might be used, indicated no immediate decision, but said, "We have to have a decision by the end of July whether we are going to move or renovate," the latter a reference to the Coliseum.

Anaheim has proposed a building program at its stadium, where baseball's California Angels play, to boost capacity from 44,000 to 72,000. Officials said construction must start by Sept. 1 to be ready for the Rams in 1980.

The NFL team has a contract with the Coliseum through 1979.

Steve Rosenbloom, the owner's son and assistant, commented: "It's amazing that everyone has made the decision for us. We've never said we're leaving the Coliseum. Anaheim and others came to us after hearing of our situation."

The Rams have asked the Coliseum to make improvements as the team has done in past years, but without results to date.

However, the Coliseum Commission has said improvements will be made, although some may not be done until after the 1984 Olympics if they come to Los Angeles.

William Talley, city manager of Anaheim, termed Rosenbloom's trip to the stadium as "strictly a visit by an honored guest." He denied reports the city was making a definite proposal on this day.

There have been negotiations for several months and proposals reportedly are in the final stages, but Rams' administrative assistant Jack Teele said definitely, "Nothing will be done today."

The Rosenblooms scheduled a visit to the recently closed Lowe Elementary School which possibly could become training headquarters for the club, should it move to Anaheim. The team would reportedly assume the cost of making improvements and maintenance if the school becomes available.

Lubbock Meet Opens

With players from as far away as South Africa and Monterrey, Mexico, the 23rd Annual Lubbock Open Tennis Tournament gets under way today.

Over 500 persons have entered the tourney, which features singles and doubles play for different age divisions.

Girls' singles in the 16-under and 18-under division begin today at Coronado High School tennis courts. The top seed in the 16-and-under group is Terasa Karr from Amarillo. Lubbock's Cheryl Rosen is the No. 1-seeded player in the 18-and-under group.

The 12-and-under, and 14-and-under girls' divisions square off at the Lubbock High School courts today.

In the boys' 16-and-under division, Donny Mordecis is predicted to win. The matches are in the Tennis Center also.

Boys' 12-amd-under and 14-and-under will play on the Monterey courts and Steve Kordos, from Amarillo, and George Jimenez, from Monterrry Mexico, are the top-seeded players in their respective age groups.

All matches begin at 8 a.m. Adult matches will begin tomorrow.

Lopez Claims Tour Has Become Tiring

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, the 21-year-old rookie sensation on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, said Wednesday she was tired but playing in this week's tournament as a favor to the husband of another LPGA competitor.

"I'm tired and need the rest," said Lopez, whose streak of five consecutive tour victories was snapped last week in Hershey, Pa. "But Donna Young is a good friend of mine and her husband, Ken, is the tournament director. He asked me to play and I agreed."

The decision to play was good news for sponsors of the $75,000 tournament, but it means defending champion Judy Rankin will have a tough time repeating.

Lopez will be going after her eighth tour victory of 1978 when play begins Saturday in the 54-hole tournament at the 6,044-yard, par-72 Harbour Trees Golf Course.

"After I lost last week, it felt kind of strange. But I'm confident this week," said Lopez at a press conference.

She said she had trouble sleeping last week and her putting was a major problem.

"I had a lot of interviews and was asked to pose for a lot of pictures," she said. "I try to oblige, but it has started taking a lot of time away from golf.

"The last few days I've spent getting sunburned by the pool. I've signed autographs, but it's a lot more fun signing them at a pool than during a tournament."

Lopez has already won more money this year than any woman golfer has won during a single year—$131,128—but she said the money doesn't mean that much to her now.

"It's just sitting in the bank. I really haven't had time to do much with it, but I'm not playing for the money. I just enjoy winning golf tournaments."

Although she intends to aim for the winner's check of $11,250 here, she admits the upcoming U.S. Open at the Indianapolis Country Club, July 20-23, is her next major target.

"I really want to win the Open this year. It's the big one in my mind. Especially since I finished second in it last year," she said.

She plans to skip next week's tournament stop in Wheeling, W. Va., to take the rest she feels she needs. Then she'll prepare for her bid to add the Open crown to the LPGA title she earned earlier by playing in the tour's final stop before the Open.

Munson Suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Catcher Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees has been suspended for three games and fined an undisclosed sum for bumping umpire Jim McKean last Thursday, American League president Lee MacPhail said Wednesday.

The incident occurred after Munson was called out by McKean on a pitch that the home plate umpire said hit the Yankee's bat for a fouled strike three.

AFTERMATH—Rescue workers in East Topeka, Kan., pull the form of an unidentified University of Kansas football player from a ditch in which he and another KU player were working Wednesday when a cave-in killed one of them, 21-year-old Dennis Balagna. Also Injured was John Mascarello. Both were starters for the Jayhawks last season. (AP Laserphoto)

Red Sox' Hiring Practices Cited

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox are being credited by a state agency with "more substantial efforts" to remedy past racial discrimination in hiring.

Quotas for hiring racial minorities, and women, in all capacities with the baseball team, except as player, were agreed to in April 1977 for the Red Sox and the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

The agreement, signed by then-General Manager Dick O'Connell, was hailed as the first such hiring commitment ever extracted from a major league sports team.

Improved grades for aggressive recruiting of minorities and women comes from MCAD Attorney Mark Schreiber, who conceded, "I've learned about baseball" since he was put in charge of the case.

Only last week, Red Sox slugger Jim Rice caused a furor when he was quoted in a national sports magazine that the team's front office is "racist" for holding back his career in its earlier stages. Rice later said the charge no longer is accurate.

The team's agreement with the MCAD, in fact, specifically excludes quotas for the signing of players. Boston was one of the last major league teams to sign black players 20 years ago.

The agreement does stipulate that within five years, the Red Sox' employee roster will have 15 percent minorities and 45 percent women workers in some categories.

The quotas apply to the front-office staff, lower-echelon workers such as those on the grounds crew, and even major and minor league coaches.

Team Vice President Buddy LeRoux, one of the club's new owners, says former major league player Tommy Harper is being groomed to oversee compliance with the MCAD agreement.

Harper is an assistant in the team's front office, working with Treasurer John Harrington. LeRoux said Harrington is in charge of the affirmative action hiring program.

However, Harrington is leaving the club this week to enter private business in the Boston area. The former AL controller under Joe Cronin was the last holdover from the O'Connell regime last fall in preparation for the change in franchise ownership.

Meantime, the Red Sox have made periodic reports to the MCAD on hiring progress. Schreiber said the team has sent notices to "minority and women's organizations" locally and nationally to seek job applicants.

Fem Pair Inks With Raiders

Texas Tech has signed a pair of women athletes, it was reported Wednesday.

Joining the basketball team coached by Gay Benson will be a transfer from South Plains College, Louise Davis.

Miss Davis, a graduate of Canyon High School, made second-team all-regional while playing at SPC. She will be a junior at Tech.

Golf coach Jay McClure had added Mary Delong, a schoolgirl from Coeur d' Alene, Idaho. Miss Delong was a three-letter winner on the school's boys golf team.

Miss Delong was a five-time medalist of the city golf tournament and set a course record in her division.

Connecticut School Leads Big U.S. Challenge In Royal Regatta

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — Trinity College of Hartford, Conn., the school where crew practice on the Connecticut River attracts more recruits than football, opens this year's strong American challenge at the Henley Royal Regatta today.

Trinity is the first U.S. crew to take to the water in a long day of side-by-side heats along Henley's 1-mile, 550-yard course.

Their morning clash with England's Exeter University comes in the Ladies Challenge Plate for 8-man crews.

Later today, four other U.S. crews meet first-round opposition in the Ladies Plate, including Yale University, Harvard University, a Syracuse University second eight, and the U.S. Coast Guard Academy varsity crew, winners of America's small college championship at the 1978 Dad Vail Regatta.

The Coast Guard, coached by Bill Stowe, an Olympic gold medal oarsman in 1964, will be watched by the Academy's athletic director, former Cleveland Browns' quarterback Otto Graham, who has accompanied the crew to this peaceful haven in the Oxfordshire countryside.

Twenty-five American crews are in the final entry list of 205 boats, after scratchings and elimination heats. Thirteen trophies are at stake, and the finals are Sunday.

One of today's toughest rowoffs pits a junior crew from the University of Washington against the Neptune Rowing Club of Ireland, who beat the Americans by 3½ length at the Nottingham, England, regatta last weekend.

The Washington Huskies also have brought their varsity heavyweight crew back to Henley, following a victory in the Grand Challenge Cup last summer, only the seventh time since 1839 U.S. crew has won Henley's greatest prize.

"We're back because we won last year and want to do it again," said Coach Dick Erickson, known to some of his boys as "The Admiral."

Undefeated in their regular meets this season and winners of the Pacific 8 Conference Regatta, the Huskies had a dreadful warmup at Nottingham, coming in second and fourth in their two races, beaten both times by a Bulgarian national crew they are likely to meet in this year's Grand.

"Those were water fights, not races, because of the atrocious weather conditions," Erickson said of the poor Nottingham performances. "The question is: Can a good college or university eight realistically compete against a national crew?"

The Huskies did so last year, beating the British national heavyweight crew by a length to take the Grand.

There is no action in the Grand today. The British eight faces the Bulgarians Friday, and the winner meets Syracuse University, winners of this year's Intercollegiate Rowing Association championships, in Saturday's semifinals.

The other semifinal pits Washington against Northeastern University, a crew comprised mostly of the Boston school's varsity.

Pampa Golfer Tops Juniors

BIG SPRING (Special)—Scott Barrett of Pampa won in two separate junior golfing competitions here Wednesday, with one of them offering a shot a tournament in Florida.

Barrett turned in a 1-over-par 73 to lead the qualifying for the National PGA Junior Tournament, to be held later this summer in Callaway Gardens, Fla. Five players qualified here for that elimination tourney.

The five will now advance to Dallas for the regional qualifying round July 19.

Finishing behind Barrett in this meet were John Slaughter of Abilene, 74; Chris Johnson of Seminole, 77; Mike Stanley of Abilene, 78; and Robart Upham of Midland, 78.

The qualifying was held in conjunction with the West Texas PGA Junior Tour, which Barrett won. However, he had to survive a playoff here. He had tied with Bobby Knox of Brownfield at 73 for the championship in the 16-18 age division.

Playoffs were needed in both the other age brackets also. Louis Wilks had a 76 but had to beat Sam Hansard of Lamesa in the 14-15 division, and Cole Thompson of Abilene won a playoff from Gene Gibson of Brownwood in the 12-13 age group.

SPC Signs Two Track Hopefuls

LEVELLAND (Special)—South Plains College track coach Clint Ramsey has added two new prospects to his team.

Signing to compete for SPC next spring are Kerry Cranfill of Brownfield and Randy Keith of Paducah.

Cranfill has cleared 6-6 in the high jump and will run the hurdles at SPC, also.

Keith competes in the high jump, pole vault, long jump, and sprints. He was third in the state in the high jump.

REGIONAL ROUNDUP

City Furnishes Officers' Defense

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — City Council agreed to provide defense for three former policemen recently named in a lawsuit filed by four gas company employees.

Councilmen expressed a desire to defend all four men name in the suit but the fourth defendant, City Attorney John Forbis, indicated he would provide his own counsel.

"But it won't be me," Forbis said.

The council named Forbis to represent the former policemen.

The city attorney advised the other defendants that they do have the right to employ their own attorneys rather than accept defense provided by the city.

However, all three men have indicated to they want Forbis to represent them.

The lawsuit against Forbis, Odis Burrows, John Ballew and Don McKinney was filed recently by four employees of Lone Star Gas Co. who alleged violation of their civil rights in connection with a gas rate dispute in Childress in 1977. Burrows was chief of police and McKinney assistant chief when the dispute surfaced.

The City of Childress is not a defendant in the suit, in which $100,000 actual and $250,000 punitive damage are sought. Plaintiffs are Lone Star employees Joe Smith, Billy Farris and Buford McKeever of Childress and Engineer William Clark of Dallas.

The petition alleges violation of the civil rights of the plaintiffs by reason of "embarassment, intimidation and humiliation" suffered when they were arrested as they were excavating gas pipelines in the city on June 7, 1977.

Purpose of the excavations was an attempt to determine age and condition of the line, one of the factors involved in supporting the company's case for a rate increase in Childress. City officials contended the company had no authority for excavations except to make repairs, and ordered the digging stopped.

Five gas company employees were later arrested on charges of violating a city ordinance against "obstructing a highway or other passage." Four of the five are plaintiffs in the lawsuit, while the fifth declined to participate in the legal action.

Plainview Fire Investigation Delayed

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Plainview fire investigators hope soon to begin checking the charred ruins of a downtown building.

Part of the walls and roof of the Veigel Building, erected in the 1920s, collapsed during Tuesday's fire, hampering efforts to pinpoint the cause of the early morning blaze.

"We're just waiting for the insurance company to get a front-end loader to remove the debris so that we can get in there and see if we can't find the cause," Plainview Fire Chief Woody Sevison said Wednesday.

The flames, pushed by gusty winds, swept through Graham's Restaurant; Shir's Shanty and the Crooked Cue Pool Hall. An unoccupied business office on the floor above the three firms also sustained extensive damage, and the Gemini Carpet Company immediately north of the building received heavy smoke and water damage.

Damage estimates were revised upward to $150,000 Wednesday.

Police evacuated as many as 20 persons from the Commercial Hotel because winds were pushing heavy smoke toward it. However, no injuries were reported.

The blaze was brought under control about 6 a.m. Tuesday, some three hours after it was reported by a patrolman. Fire marshal Joe Ferguson said the fire apparently had been burning several hours before it was discovered.

Pageant To Select Little Miss

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — A Little Miss Greenbelt Pageant has been scheduled in conjunction with the Aug. 11 Greenbelt Football Bowl Game.

The pageant will offer three age divisions for the swimsuit, talent and dress competition. The divisions are Tiny ages 3 to 5, Little Miss Division, ages 6 to 8, and Miss Greenbelt, ages 9 to 12.

The pageant is open to girls in all area towns. Entrants from other towns, however, must secure a sponsoring merchant in their towns.

The $10 entry fee and the contestant's name, age, address and sponsor's name should be sent to Little Miss Academy, Box 867, Childress, 79201.

Plainview Library Board Reappointed

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — With Mayor Bob Wayland casting the tie-breaking vote, city councilmen here Tuesday re-appointed Shirley Igo, Susan LaFont and Malcolm Tisdel to the Unger Memorial Library Advisory Committee.

Councilmen Bill SoRelle, a vocal supporter of the board, was not present at Tuesday's session.

In a letter to the council, SoRelle said he would be unable to attend Tuesday's meeting but reaffirmed his support for the board and the three members.

However, his written statement could not be used as a vote, and Wayland was forced to cast the tiebreaker.

Wayland's support came as no surprise, since he made the original recommendation to reappoint the three members.

Although there was no discussion on the matter Tuesday night, the library issue has sparked considerable controversy in Plainview during the last month.

It reached a peak when the library board voted to keep five of six sex-related and feminist books in general circulation at the library after a group of citizens had protested the books and fought to have them banned completely or placed on a restricted shelf.

At that time, the library board did vote to put one of the six books on a restricted shelf, but that action did not satisfy the protestors.

The mayor and most councilmen acknowledged receiving numerous phone calls and letters from supporters of both sides of the issue.

Lockney Band Wins Honor

A-J Correspondent

LOCKNEY — The junior high school band has been chosen to represent Region XVI in Class C honor band competition in August at the Texas Bandmasters' Association convention is San Antonio.

Mason Attorney 'Golden Boy' For GOP's National Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Mason rancher-attorney heads a list of 10 Texans being touted by the Republican National Committee as potential political superstars.

The RNC feels the historically Democratic Lone Star State is ripe for plucking this election year, especially since eight of the state's 24 House members won't be running for re-election in November.

And Tom Loeffler, who surprised fellow Republicans in the May primary with a decisive victory in the 21st District race, has emerged as the GOP's brightest star, according to the RNC.

The 31-year-old former University of Texas defensive back carried all but one of the 16 counties in the sprawling 21st District that encompasses such far-flung cities as San Antonio, Fort Davis, Del Rio and San Angelo.

"Loeffler is definitely one of our best candidates," said Charlie Black, the RNC's director of campaign operations. "We are focusing on 10 (House) races in Texas and due to a couple of reasons, we feel we can win them."

The House seat in the 21st — which has never been occupied by a Republican — is being vacted by Bob Krueger, who is attempting to topple Sen. John Tower.

Republicans feel that Loeffler has the vote-getting blend of being anti-government on one hand and a candidate who understands the ways of Washington on the other. He caught the RNC's attention by snaring almost 60 percent of the Republican vote in the May primary, romping past three other opponents.

Although Loeffler is running for his first office, he is not a political newcomer. He was a member of Tower's staff from 1972-74 and served as special assistant for legislative affairs to President Ford in 1975.

He spent part of this week in the nation's capital renewing acquaintances and searching for campaign contributions. The RNC has kicked in $4,000 to his campaign with more promised, said Black.

"Texas is by and large a conservative state," added Black, "and we feel we can do well there.

"The single most important factor (in determining which candidates to back strongly) is incumbency," he said. Texas has eight House seats — all currently held by Democrats with more than 150 years combined seniority — being vacated by either ambition, retirement or primary upsets.

Loeffler's $4,000 contribution from the RNC is not topped by any other Texas candidate. The nine other RNC-backed challengers, according to Black, are:

— Frank Glenn of Flint who is challenging McKinney's Ray Roberts, a 16-year House member and chairman of the Veteran Affairs Committee. Roberts is one of two multi-term Texas incumbents on the RNC's "hit list."

— Wes Mowery of Fort Worth who will battle Texas A&M economics professor Phil Gramm for the seat being vacated by Rep. Olin "Tiger" Teague.

— Bill Fisher of Abilene, who will vie with Stamford farmer Charles W. Stenholm for the seat currently held by retiring Rep. Omar Burleson, a 16-term congressman.

— Leo Berman of Arlington, who will challenge Democrat Martin Frost of Dallas. Frost upset three-term congressman Dale Milford in the primary.

— George W. Bush of Midland, the son of former CIA director George Bush. Lubbock attorney Kent Hance, a state senator, is the Democrat hoping to follow the dean of the House, 22-term congressman George Mahon, who is also retiring following this term.

Carter Issues Plea For Child Welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter kicked off U.S. participation in the United Nations-sponsored "International Year of the Child" Wednesday by calling on Americans to set an example for the world in the way they treat their own offspring.

He said most Americans are unaware of statistics showing that 1 million U.S. children are physically abused by their parents each year and that 10 million have never received medical care.

There was a reception in the White House Rose Garden for members of a national commission, headed by Jean Young, wife of Andrew Young, Carter's ambassador to the United Nations.

Others on the commission include Sens. Charles C. Mathias, R-Md. and John Culver, D-Iowa, who were appointed by the Senate, and Reps. Viginia Smith, R-Neb., and Gladys Spellman, D-Md., appointed by the House.

In addition, the president announced the names of 23 other persons to serve on the commission, which is scheduled to meet twice this year in preparation for next year's observances.

They are Marjorie C. Benton, Evanston, Ill.; Unita Blackwell, mayor of Mayersville, Miss.; Eddie Lee Brandon, Aurora, Colo.; Jose A. Cardenas, San Antonio; Bill Cosby, comedian; Marian Wright Edelman, founder of Children's Defense Fund.

Taiwan Trade Delegation Inks Pact For U.S. Grain Purchase

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The purchase of $27 million in corn and soybeans was completed this week by Taiwan in its effort to offset a trade surplus with the United States.

Contracts for 104,000 metric tons of corn and 54,000 metric tons of soybeans were signed in the Missouri Capitol by a trade delegation after offers from 16 bidders were examined.

The Taiwanese had set a target of 50,000 tons of corn, but increased it to 54,000 tons Monday.

H.K. Shao, the leader of the delegation and director general of the Taiwan Board of Foreign Trade, said the "Buy American Drive" was started by his country because of the increasing trade surplus, which amounted to $1.6 billion last year.

A trade mission from Taiwan visited the United States earlier this year, and another delegation is expected in the fall. Purchases resulting from the three missions are expected to total $1.6 billion in agricultural and industrial products, Shao said.

Taiwan expects to spend $300 million during this mission on cotton, corn, soybeans, wheat and barley and about $450 million on electrical equipment, oil exploration gear and other goods.

Jack Runyan, director of the state agriculture agency, said about 80 percent of the corn and soybeans sold Tuesday is expected to come from Missouri.

"Any time grain is shipped out of the United States it's going to help Midwest grain prices," said Jack Ryan, coordinator of the agriculture department's international marketing division.

Taiwan will concentrate on grain during the third mission this fall, Shao said, and expects to spend from $400 to $500 million.

The largest sale Tuesday was made by Continental Grain Export Co., which offered 54,000 metric tons of soybeans worth $14.3 million to be delivered in October and November. The October price was $264.74 per ton, and the November price was $263.95.

ADM Grain Co. sold 27,000 tons of corn worth $3.4 million to be delivered in August at $129.50.

Garnac sold 27,000 tons of corn for $3,513,240 to be delivered in August. The price per ton was $130.12.

The 20-member trade team is to visit 14 states and the District of Columbia on its 50-day tour.

After the deal was concluded Tuesday, the group had lunch with Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale and other state officials. The governor presented Shao with a shadowbox of Missouri grains, and Shao gave the the governor a pen.

Creating Swine Market May Increase Production

It might be "putting the cart before the hog," but building a swine plant could significantly increase pork production in the West Texas area, according to John H. Westerhoff, president of Farmland Food, Inc., in Kansas City.

Westerhoff will address Texas Tech's 26th annual Swine Short Course, which begins at 9 a.m. here today at the Farmer's Co-op Compress.

Successful swine production involves feed grain availability, good management throughout the feeding period and an easy outlet for market-ready animals, says Westerhoff.

Many farmers won't increase swine production, though, without that readily available market, he adds, which has been the problem in the West Texas area.

Although a plant recently closed in Plainview, Dr. Leland Tribble, animal science instructor, explained that it had a more specialized interest in selecting hogs. The plant was set up to manufacture pork sausage, for which it needed older sows.

A complete slaughtering facility would use more young pigs, although all types would be acceptable for slaughtering. This more complete facility could help provide a more profitable outlet for area swine producers.

Just building a slaughtering facility will not ensure it will be successful, however, Westerhoff says. It must be built with sound reasons backing it up, such as providing a marketing outlet for ongoing swine production in the area.

It also could serve to fill food marketing needs in the area.

The swine plant could create a use for excess feed grain produced in the area by allowing the grain to be converted into livestock, and then providing an outlet for the increased numbers, he says.

Before building the plant, Westerhoff says, there also must be adequate financing to construct the facility and to provide working capital.

Swine plant operators also need to ensure the cooperation of area producers.

"You must be assured of an adequate supply of hogs," he says. "Your overhead expenses continue whether you are killing and processing or not."

The swine plant location must also provide sufficient labor, water, power, transportation and community goodwill, he adds.

With a new plant and sound management behind it, the swine industry in West Texas could significantly increase production, Westerhoff believes.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

OFFICIAL COUNTY-BY-COUNTY FIGURES from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, released this week, show cotton production in the 25-county High Plains area last year totaled an all-time high of 3,215,400 bales.

The crop exceeded the previous record of 2,888,700 bales in 1973 by more than 300,000 bales and was up from the 1976 output of 1,986,500 bales.

Planted acreage was 3,749,600, of which 3,638,800 acres were harvested. The planted acreage was the second largest in history, exceeded only by 3,902,500 acres in 1952, and was up from 2,786,300 acres in 1976.

Yield per harvested acre averaged 424.1 pounds, well below the all-time high of 513.2 pounds in 1965 but up from 365.6 in 1976 and the 10-year average of 383.5 pounds from 1967 through 1976.

Lubbock County, with 346,000 bales, led the area in total production. Then came Gaines (292,000 bales), Hockley (261,000) and Terry (238,000). The top four counties in in 1976 were Dawson, Gaines, Lynn and Lubbock, respectively.

Grain Futures

Some of the slippage was inspired by bearish technicalities that developed as a result of the weakness of the preceding session, brokers said.

But the major factor again was liquidation of July contracts ahead of first notice day, when those who have sold contracts can begin issuing notices that they intend to deliver the actual commodities.

Analysts said traders were expecting heavy deliveries of corn and wheat and moderate deliveries of soybeans. As a result, speculators were getting out of the market to avoid taking the deliveries.

Reports of a recent pickup in Brazil's soybean and soybean products exports were accompanied by more speculation that restrictions on such exports might be liberalized.

In other export news, the Department of Agriculture said the Soviet Union purchased 7.9 million bushels of U.S. corn.

But the department also said that a supplier other than the United States would sell India a large quantity of soybean oil. Previously, the sale had been listed with the government as potentially coming from U.S. stocks.

At the close, soybeans were 5 to 7 1/2 cents lower, with July contracts quoted at $6.77 1/4 a bushel; wheat was 4 to 6 3/4 cents lower, July $3.10 3/4; corn was 4 3/4 to 6 1/2 cents lower, July $2.47 1/4 and oats were 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 cents lower, July $1.23 3/4.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.50 to $7.95 a bale lower Wednesday.

Liquidation of contracts by traders who follow charts and computers depressed prices, brokers said.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading was slow Wednesday in the Lubbock cotton market.

Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was light. High Plains growers sold mixed lots at 200 to 1,200 points over loan rates.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations declined 100 points and closed at 54.10 cents on the base quality of grade 41, staple 34, micronaire 3.5-4.9. This was down 150 points from a week ago.

Cattle Futures Close 80 To 150 Points Up

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures, led by the December delivery at the limit advance, closed 80 to 150 points higher Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Sales totaled 25,594 cars. The market rallied sharply after early losses of 65 points and ran up to one-week highs on aggressive short covering and other buying on the part of locals and commission houses.

Good outside support was attracted on belief that prices may have "bottomed out," with light runs and slaughter adding to incentives to buy.

The six markets expect 5,400 head today. Cash cattle were up $1.75 to off 75 cents, with the best top at $55 per hundredweight. The Omaha top was $53.75.

Feeder cattle futures finished 105 to 150 points higher on sales of 2,027 cars. Most contracts posted the daily limit up as prices surged to the highest level in more than one week. The upturn followed an initial loss of 70 points.

Outset selling carried over from Tuesday and stemmed from easiness in cash animals and beef. However, traders noted the light pace of kill ahead of the holiday and also cited the sharp recovery in live cattle futures on belief that the market may be "bottoming out" after reaching three-month lows.

The six markets expect 2,300 head today. Cash feeder cattle were firm to off $2. The best top was $78 per hundredweight at San Antonio.

Hog futures rallied from early losses of 112 points and ended 52 to 150 points higher, led by October through February at the limit. Sales totaled 7,500 cars.

Weakness in the pork belly pit, along with slow demand for pork products and easiness in cash hogs in the face of light runs and kill, brought pressure early.

The sharp upturn in the cattle pit and technical support here after prices hit the lowest levels since February touched off short covering and other buying.

Deliveries total 15 thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one-fourth cent at 75 to 78 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

TEXAS HAS MOST REGISTERED LOBBYISTS

Lobbyists Splurge To Get Legislators' Attention

(EDITORS'S NOTE — How does a lobbyist operate? Does modern lobbying fit the stereotype of the bloated gladhander passing out big bills outside legislative chambers? Which lobbies carry the most clout in Austin? This is the first of a two-part series examining these questions.)

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — "If I could get everyone of 'em out on the golf course, I would do it," railroad lobbyist Walter Caven says of the 181-member Texas Legislature.

Caven, a lobbyist for 19 years, exemplifies the old pro who uses a generous expense account and an easygoing manner to make friends with legislators.

Golf games, lunches and drinks at the Headliners Club are part of Caven's repertoire. He's affable but also canny, with a sense of timing like a switching yard dispatcher.

"We hit the bill early — on introduction almost. If we get a commitment early, it goes a long way. Most members don't have any interest in 95 percent of the bills. They'll do what you ask if you get to them early," Caven said.

But lobbying today is more than charm and the one-on-one persuasiveness of pros like Caven who wait outside House and Senate chambers at lunch time.

It involves big bucks and volunteers for political campaigns, big crowds to pack galleries and hearing rooms, mobilization of legislators' home folks and offering nuggets of compelling information at strategic moments.

"That's the most in the nation. And the No. 2 state had only 400," said Miss Goodman.

Your kid's teacher or your barber might be in Miss Goodman's file. Texas' rather weird Lobby Control Act says they're lobbyists if somebody else — such as a professional association — paid their expenses to come to Austin and buttonhole legislators.

Those reports — only the tip of the lobby iceberg — show entertainment is the biggest expenditure. A Harte-Hanks newspaper chain reporter read all the reports last year and found lobbyists spent $400,000 wining and dining legislators last session.

Caven's $4,810 was piddling by comparison with the $15,407 spent by Phil Gauss of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, which offered a daily lunch spread at its headquarters across from the Capitol.

Lawyers and doctors were locked in combat over medical malpractice at the time. The doctors' lobbyist, Ace Pickens, spent $1,031.

LOBBY POWERS — These men are not elected officials, but they can still have a lot of influence on the legislation that comes out of Austin. They are among the 3,000 people registered as lobbyists with the State of Texas. From left are Walter Caven, representing theTexas Railroad Association; Ace Pickens, medical lobbyist; and Gerhardt Schulle, Texas Real Estate Association. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas State Teachers Association lobbyists Callie Smith and Jim Hooser spent only $895. Highway lobbyist Eugene Robbins, who scored with over $500 million in new road appropriations, spent a modest $2,532. Harry Hubbard and Sherman Fricks of the Texas AFL-CIO spent $7,737.

Real estate lobbyist Gerhardt Schulle said his $6,883 in entertainment tabs were worth every penny.

"It makes it easier for you to communicate, not because you're buddy-buddy but because you understand the person," he said.

But the new breed of young, issue-oriented legislators is not always eager to socialize with lobbyists.

"I appreciate people who come to the point rather than talking business over a two-or three-hour lunch or an evening at the Caucus Club," says Rep. Chase Untermeyer, R-Houston.

Entertainment costs are gnats alongside the silver eagles of the lobby's campaign largesse, distributed through political action committees (PACs).

The Texas Medical PAC spent $536,642 in 1977 and 1978 on legislative, congressional, state and national politics. The trial lawyers' Lawyers Involved For Texas (LIFT) spent $188,676; realtors (TREPAC) $262,877; highway builders a surprisingly low $3,373; nursing home administrators (NAPACT) $60,453; undertakers (Morti-PAC) $14,500; teachers (TEPAC) $11,950, and the AFL-CIO, $19,887.

Morti-PAC gave $500 to Meier, who chairs the commission that will recommend whether the Legislature should phase out the undertakers' captive State Board of Morticians.

Is the campaign contribution that valuable as a lobbying tool?

"To say yes would be to say a guy did something because of that contribution. I don't think that is true," said medical lobbyist Pickens.

But Caven says, "They listen to a $1,000 contribution more than a $100 contribution. I don't know how much the trial lawyers give, but they give too damn much. There are some senators that do anything they want."

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, claims the Texas Real Estate Association, which helped kill his property tax "reform" bill last year, controls several Senate votes through contributions.

"Senate members are more inclined to go with the big contributors because it takes so much to run a Senate race. In the House .. , you can run a campaign on shoe leather," he said.

Realtors did make the big contributions — such as $10,000 to Lombardino.

Schulle said his organization sought to "elect people who share your basic philosophy. Then obviously when legislation comes up that is important to your industry, they are going to be more understanding because their philosophy is more in tune with yours."

"The truly most effective method of lobbying is friendship. — 'Can I do this to ol' Joe Smith, he's my good buddy?' " said Rep. John Wilson, D-LaGrange.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, says effective lobbyists are at it year-round — like Harry Whitworth of the Texas Chemical Council and his annual dove hunts.

Lobbyists speak for business, labor, professional and other special interest organizations with members scattered throughout the 181 House and Senate districts.

The savvy lobbyist knows how and when to mobilize these people into formidable armies of letter writers, phone callers and button-holers — even down to mass appearances in the Capitol.

Schulle said while he sells the realtors' viewpoint in Austin, "We also tell our members to contact their representatives. They collaborate our story."

Mass appearances are part of the game, too, like the time the TSTA half-filled Memorial Stadium with 35,000 teachers wanting more money.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, credits a letter-writing campaign with House passage of a bill (which died in the Senate) exempting church-related child care centers from state regulation.

"On House Bill 900, legislators voted for it who I characterize as clearly philosophically opposed to them (the letter writers). . . It was a way for them to get brownie points," sh said.

But grassroots tactics can backfire.

"There is a circus atmosphere," gripes Untermeyer. "When the horse racing people came in, the uniform of the day was a white cowboy hat. . . . The people running it conveyed the idea that this is what you have to do to catch the attention of the typical dumb legislator."

Caven prefers a rifle to a shotgun — such as a letter from an influential and well-informed person in a district.

"For example, the tie plant at Somerville is the basis for the whole economy in Somerville, so the manager would be listened to," he said.

Then there are tactics that alienate, lose votes.

All legislators interviewed said lobbyists caught in a lie don't get a second chance. Bryant said he is turned off "when they suggest that your position is going to ruin your chance for re-election or higher office, when they presume your motives are just as base as theirs."

Caven said lobbyists have everything to lose if they employ unscrupulous methods.

"A lobbyist would lose the best job he ever had in his life. . . . I am proud of my profession," he said.

Hospital Managers Name New Executive

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Hospital Corporation of America, which bills itself as the nation's leading hospital management company, announced Wednesday that Donald S. MacNaughton is its new chairman and chief executive officer.

The Nashville-based firm disclosed MacNaughton's hiring at a New York news conference. He succeeds Jack C. Massey, who becomes chairman of the HCA's executive committee. The compnay said MacNaughton announced earlier he was retiring early from his postion as chairman and chief executive officer of the Prudential Insurance Company of America.

Campaign On To Send Women Into Mines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Equal rights advocates are campaigning to send more women underground as coal miners.

Armed with class-action lawsuits and tactics to improve enforcement of state anti-discrimination laws, the equal rights groups are aiming their drive at growing job opportunities.

The federal government says as many as 100,000 jobs will open in Appalachia alone by 1985, as coal production increases to relieve U.S. dependence on oil imports.

Ion-Drive Engine May Power Future Spacecraft

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The fire and thunder that sends rockets into space may be replaced by a quiet, blue glow when and if a proposed new generation of spacecraft chases comets and reaches for the edges of the solar system.

The ion-drive engine, designed by National Aeronautics and Space Administration engineers, went dramatically public in the movie Star Wars, says Ken Atkins of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory here.

The sinister forces of Darth Vader, arch-villain of the movie, threatened Princess Leia and her followers in TIE Fighters. TIE, as Atkins is fond of pointing out, stands for "twin ion engined."

Atkins said a more realistic version of ion drive offers our own planet a steerable, energy-efficient rocket powered by a stream of minute particles hurled into space by magnetic fields.

The "little popgun engine," launched from a space shuttle 200 miles or so above the earth, could push a spacecraft to rendezvous with a comet and tag along for its trip around the sun in the next decade, Atkins said in an interview.

JPL and the Lewis Research Center in Cleveland have been developing the ion-propulsion engine for more than 10 years.

The shuttle — a reusable spacecraft designed as the workhorse of America's space program through the end of the century — opens a window to space that's closed to conventional rockets from earth.

A low-thrust ion engine would be hard-pressed to nudge a bowling ball against the gravity and friction on earth. But when carried aloft by a shuttle and thrown by a conventional rocket into the emptiness of space, the system could push 2,000-pound payloads at speeds approaching 500,000 miles an hour, Atkins said.

Ion drive, with 10 times the fuel efficiency of current rocket engines, may also bring us closer to the day when "you could sail around the solar system and even go interstellar" for trips to other stars, he said.

Current rockets depend on tons of bulky chemical fuels, which burn explosively to give men and machines the great push needed to escape the earth's gravity.

"All our space shots have been where we hit them with a big kick at the beginning," Atkins said. "We, in effect, throw them out into space and then they just coast to the target. With ion drive we would be running the engines continuously, all the way to the target, so we'd have a steerable spacecraft."

NASA has included an ion-drive rocket in its current five-year plan, under which Congress would be asked to fund a project beginning about 1981, Atkins told a science conference in April.

He said NASA hopes in 1985 to launch an ion-drive rocket that would probe Halley's Comet when it circles the sun in 1985 and then rendezvous with a smaller comet, Tempel 2, in 1988.

"That way we'd get two comets for the price of one," Atkins said. "We'd drop off a small instrument probe (into the center of Halley's Comet) and then the main spacecraft would continue on to Tempel 2...The spacecraft could just drift along with the comet," sending information back to earth.

NASA also is considering a mission to orbit Saturn in the late 1980s and Atkins said ion drive would be ideally suited for the job.

Of particular interest, he said, would be dropping a scienific probe on Titan, one of 10 moons circling Saturn. Titan, nearly half the size of earth, is the only moon in the solar system known to have an atmosphere. Atkins said some scientists believe it "is probably a likely place to find some form of life."

Atkins said ion propulsion is a proven concept that already has been tested in space. He said a satellite equipped with experimental ion engines was put in orbit in 1969 "and it's up there today and they're still turning it on and off and running different tests."

The engines have no moving parts. Shaped like a coffee can, each one is about 15-inches across and 10-inches high. A spacecraft might be powered by a half-dozen of the little devices and Atkins said they could run for several years on a TV-sized fuel tank full of mercury.

Mercury vapor is fed into an ionization chamber where its atoms are sent through a stream of subatomic particles. The inevitable collisions knock electrons from the electrically neutral atoms, changing them into positively charged particles called ions.

Billions of these ions, as they drift out of the engine, pass through a powerful electric field which gives each one a burst of speed as it heads into space. And each particle, as it moves off in one direction, gives the rocket a tiny shove in the opposite direction.

Without the drag of friction and gravity, speed increases constantly. JPL says an array of six ion engines could add about 190 miles an hour to a rocket's speed each day. After 1,000 days, the total increase would be 190,000 miles an hour.

CARE PLAN UNDERWAY

BOSTON (AP) — A plan aimed at sending elderly hospitalized patients to foster homes instead of nursing homes for continued care has been launched by Massachusetts General Hospital. The program's creators expect to place about 30 patients in homes within a year after the program begins in September. Patients needing minor services, such as injections, would participate. The foster homes would be paid between $300 and $400. A similar program is being conducted at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Unusual Region Of Salt Domes Feeds Amazon River In Peru

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have discovered salt water rivers in the remote Andean highlands of Peru that flow through a strange region of salt domes as they feed the Amazon River.

The National Science Foundation, in announcing the findings Sunday, said one of the salt rivers eroding a huge dome had exposed a glistening purplish-white cliff of salt 5½ miles long and 330 feet high.

Dr. John M. Edmond, a geochemist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Robert Stallard, a graduate student, made the first detailed study of the area while working on a chemical analysis of the Amazon.

The scientists said that while Indians have known of the salt rivers and streams since pre-Columbian times, the scientists found virtually no mention of them in scientific literature of the region.

While the rivers are less salty than the ocean, the content is high enough to affect nearby animal and vegetable life. Edmond said he found no trace of fish in the water and only sparse vegetation along the banks.

Edmond said the Amazonian headwaters in the Peruvian Andes are in areas in which rock salt was exposed when the earth pushed upward to form mountains.

"Under the tremendous stresses of geological uplift, the salt can be squeezed like toothpaste through cracks and faults in originally overlying rock and come out at the surface," he said.

The scientists reported finding mounds of salt, some several miles across, as well as narrow pinnacles 10 to 12 feet high sticking out of the floor of tropical forests.

Flying over the forests, "you can spot the salt areas easily because the vegetation is much different from the rest of the region," Edmond said. "Where the salt is, there are big holes in the forest because many plants are not able to tolerate the salt.

Edmond said the salt domes and pinnacles are being washed away by rain, providing enough dissolved salt to affect adjacent rivers and streams. The water gets about half its salt content this way, with the remainder coming from normal rain and sediment found in the area.

Edmond estimated that about 5 percent of the streams in the headwater region are affected by salt outcroppings.

The scientists are interested in Amazon tributaries because this major river which empties into the Atlantic 3,000 miles to the east carries 18 percent of all runoff going into the world's oceans.

Science Knowledge Drops For Students

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the decade since America landed men on the moon, knowledge of science has declined steadily among the nation's 17-year-olds, a government-sponsored survey shows.

The same survey found that 9-and 13-year-old students fared better in biology in 1977 than they did in 1973, but their scores continued to drop in tests on the physical sciences.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress made those pronouncements Monday in releasing the results of the third test of science achievement it has conducted since 1969.

The younger students had declined in both areas between 1969 and 1973.

More than 72,000 pupils were tested nationwide for the assessment, funded by the National Center for Education Statistics in the department of health, education and welfare.

Arthur Livermore, of the American Association for the Advancement of Science Education, said decreasing enrollments in high school physics and chemistry courses may be to blame for the 17-year-olds' poor showing.

"Less than half of the high schools in the country even have physics courses," noted Livermore.

John M. Akey, a past president of the National Science Teachers Association, said the results for the 9-and 13-year-olds were "remarkable in the face of across-the-board de-emphasis of science education from kindergarten through high school."

He contends that rising costs and the emphasis on "basics" are squeezing science out of elementary classrooms.

Several experts also said the high science achievement levels in 1969 may have "reflected the high level of public consciousness of science during the early days of space exploration and the impact of new science curricula" being introduced in the nation's schools during that period.

In the test, 9-year-olds were asked questions that required them to know facts such as that an iron nail is more likely to rust than a plastic comb, a marble or a balloon, and that the sun is larger than the earth, Mars, Venus or the moon. Ninety-two percent knew the former; 56 percent the latter.

Both the older groups were asked what 50 percent humidity means. Twenty-seven percent of the 13-year-olds and 42 percent of the 17-year-olds chose the correct an wer, that "the atmosphere contains half as much water as it could at its present temperature."

The tests found that in general, certain groups tended to perform above the national level. These were boys, whites, those with at least one parent who went to college and those living in the Northeast, big-city suburbs or well-to-do urban areas.

Those generally below the national level were girls, blacks, those whose parents did not graduate from high school and students in the Southeast, big cities or poor urban areas.

Eight years ago, students in rural areas generally were below the national levels, but they are now at or near those levels, the report said.

Senator Urges Aid To Railroads

NEW YORK (AP) — Pointing to a possible multimillion-dollar payroll fraud within Conrail, Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., Tuesday called for a comprehensive federal policy to save the nation's railroads.

The South Dakota Democrat, speaking at Joint Economic Committee hearings here, said Conrail "has failed to provide convincing evidence that it will reach the goals established for it, even if billions of additional federal dollars are appropriated."

He called for new incentives to achieve sound management and labor practices.

The possible payroll fraud surfaced earlier this month when several Congressmen learned that federal tax withholding forms mailed to apparent Conrail employees had been returned by the Postal Service with addresses unknown.

McGovern said the U.S. Justice Department is investigating the incident he charged was "made possible by an antiquated wage distribution system typical of most railroads."

"I am convinced that if Congress and the administration fail to act, we will have deliberately consigned government to continual ineffectual tinkering at a cost of untold billions of taxpayer dollars while the crippling illness of the railroads in the Northeast and the Midwest spreads throughout other major components of the national system," McGovern said.

SOUTHWEST AIRLINES — making a quantum leap in service this year with new flights in Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and three other Texas points — is planning to spread its wings even further soon both inside and outside the state.

Southwest plans to file an application in early 1978 to extend its routes to Amarillo and the Beaumont-Orange-Port Arthur area, hopefully in 1979, airline president Lamar Muse says.

And it hopes by 1979 or 1980, he told The Avalanche-Journal, to be operating a subsidiary company, Midway Airway, in the North.

That interstate operation would center on Chicago's close-to-town Midway Airport and serve 14 other markets, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Minneapolis-St.Paul, Omaha and Pittsburgh, he said.

An application for such service already has been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Southwest's expansion plans into Amarillo have nothing really to do with Continental Airlines' pull-out there, Muse said.

Airport Bomb Kills Worker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spring-loaded pipe bomb exploded Saturday in a locker room at National Airport, killing one Federal Aviation Administration employe, but the FAA said there was no threat to air passengers and no disruption of airline opertions.

FAA and FBI officials said initial investigations gave them a good idea about the type of bomb used but no clue about the motive for the blast. They said there was no warning the bomb would go off.

An FAA spokesman, referring to the 1975 locker bomb explosion that killed 11 and injured 70 at New York's LaGuardia Airport, said: "This was no LaGuardia."

'Fight Crime' Reward Fund Leaps Ahead

THE "FIGHT CRIME NOW" reward fund — announced Wednesday by a group of anonymous citizens who want to help stem the mounting crime rate in Lubbock — has now climbed to $2,880.

Robert R. Norris, vice president and general manager of The Avalanche-Journal, announced Saturday that the newspaper would add $500 to the fund.

In addition, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dregne contributed $25 and three anonymous donors added $355 to help swell the total to $2,880.

Norris had announced earlier that The Avalanche-Journal, along with a local bank, would serve as the recipient for handling the fund, which will be held in trust.

From time to time, specific rewards will be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who commit crimes against society, particularly armed robberies and assault cases.

Four citizens who requested anonymity to avoid the possibility of personalities becoming involved contributed $500 each to the fund to originally establish it.

The original $2,000 has been offered for information which leads to the arrest and conviction of one or more of the three persons who, without provocation, attacked, beat and shot 21-year-old Texas Tech student Jim Adair on Dec. 15 at the service station where he worked. The remainder ($880) will remain in reserve.

Adair only recently returned to his home in Richardson from a Dallas rehabilitation center, where he had undergone treatment since Jan. 17. Still partially paralyzed and wearing back and leg braces and using crutches or a wheelchair, he will remain home for about a month, after which a diagnosis will be made on his progress.

Further contributions may be made to the fund by sending them to the "Fight Crime Now Fund" in care of The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock 79408. Persons desiring to remain anonymous should attach a note when making the donation.

Monies received will be turned over to a bank to act as trustee, Norris said. "The newspaper in this instance is not acting or attempting to act as a law enforcement agent, but in the avenue of public service to encourage those who wish to do so to participate as citizens to help make Lubbock a better and safer place in

Majors Hopes Film Role To Overcome TV Image

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Lee Majors has just finished an action-adventure movie here that he hopes will help him shed his "Six Million Dollar Man" image.

"I hope I'm a good enough actor to overcome it," the 39-year-old Middlesboro, Ky., native said in an interview. "I didn't think it would be so hard."

The movie, "Greed," produced by Carlo Ponti, co-stars Karen Black, Margaux Hemingway and Marisa Berenson and involves a big emerald robbery. The villains in the film are not the usual Hollywood heavies but the voracious, man-eating Brazilian piranhas.

LEE MAJORS

For Majors, the movie is "not one to show how good an actor I am, but a commercial vehicle."

It's Majors' second film. His first, to be released in the next few weeks, is called "Norseman." From Brazil, Majors planned to return to Kentucky to begin work on another adventure film called "Steel."

Majors' agent said he's trying to promote the actor as an adventure star along the lines of Sean Connery, Roger Moore and Michael Caine.

Majors was in four TV series in 13 years, including "Big Valley," "The Men from Shiloh," and "Owen Marshall."

The most successful was "Six Million Dollar Man." Shedding that tag is a problem as Majors tries his hand as a movie actor. And even the movie publicists work against him, he said.

The publicity for his first film, he said, read, "'Norseman' starring Lee (The Six Million Dollar Man) Majors."

"They're destroying what I'm trying to do," he said.

The switch to movies after years making TV series was a "maddening" change of pace, Majors said, "mainly because there is a slower pace in shooting a movie.

But he said he wants to stay in the movies and is already talking about starting his own company.

"When we shot TV we sometimes would do 22 shows back to back," he said. "But shooting a movie, you go a page a day sometimes, and some days you don't even do a page."

Majors is married to Farrah Fawcett-Majors, once a star of ABC's "Charlie's Angels." The tall actor shrugged off reports in the Brazilian press that there was trouble between them.

Selectivity Stalled Nolte's Career

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — For the past two years Nick Nolte gave evidence of being another flash-in-the-pan who hit it lucky with one spectacular role before returning to a justified obscurity.

Two TV seasons ago as Tom Jordache in "Rich Man, Poor Man," the record-breaking miniseries, Nolte brought an electrifying character to the tube. There was an animal-like magnetism to the muscular, blond newcomer that demanded attention.

His performance was hailed by critics and public alike.

When you're hot, you're hot. It was taken for granted Nolte quickly would follow his break with another big TV show or an important movie role. He did neither. Nolte, 38, disappeared as if he'd stepped in an open manhole.

He was more than eager to work again, but on his own terms. The men who make movies didn't like the terms.

Nolte took time out the other day to explain what happened to him after the enormous impact of "Rich Man, Poor Man." He sat in a Beverly Hills office and sipped a cold beer from the can, speaking easily and confidently.

"The public really went for the character of Tom Jordache," Nolte said. "But the paople in Hollywood were skeptical because 'Rich Man' was television. They talked about how tough it is to bring an actor from TV to movies.

"They don't think in terms of talent. Talent weighs in when they believe an actor can do the job, but the big factor is his ability to draw the public into theaters — whether he is talented or not.

"I'd made a definite decision to go for pictures but the men at the studios felt they had to know in advance whether a guy who made it on television could draw audiences to theaters.

"While we were still making 'Rich Man' — it took half a year — Universal knew it had a very good thing going. They talked about doing a sequel, changing the end of the first series to keep Tom Jordache alive. Either that or have me come back to play Tom's son in the second series.

"But they had no options on me. I told them I thought a sequel would be exploitive. Universal still wanted to make a deal with me.

"I told them I'd like to make a couple of movies a year and maybe a TV show, with the freedom to choose my own properties. I was told you don't do movies at Universal unless you also do TV.

"When word got out about 'Rich Man,' all the studios wanted to make deals with me, two or three pictures and no controls on my part. I was a hot commodity to be packaged. My talent didn't count."

Nolte, a native of Nebraska, is a dedicated actor who worked in little theaters around the country for years. He eked out a living as an actor, taking drama classes and studying. He played small roles in TV and in movies.

He speaks of talent and interpreting roles with professional detachment. One senses Nolte will become a superstar. He exudes an elusive vitality that all major screen actors past and present possess.

Nolte is convinced talent will out in the end, as it did with Jack Nicholson and others who struggled for years in obscurity. But he does not rule out the luck factor either.

"Circumstances played a part in my getting the Tom Jordache role," he said. "I read the book and talked to Universal about the part. I wanted the part and knew I was right for it. But they turned me down flat.

"The producers looked at some of my 30 TV shows and saw no trace of Tom. Then one of the series' two directors, Boris Sagal, called and asked me to test with Peter Strauss playing Tom's brother, Rudy.

"When we finished the test, I knew both of us would be hired. You can tell when a scene works. I was confident because I knew we'd laid it down the way it should be done. Besides, they weren't going with big name actors."

Nolte earned enough on "Rich Man, Poor Man" to support himself for a year while he looked for a property that would continue the momentum of "Rich Man."

"At the end of the year I was broke," Nolte recalled. "I could have done a lot of television stuff or some movies I didn't believe in. I wasn't able to work in the three movies that appealed to me that year — 'Sorcerer,' 'Slap Shot' and 'Apocalypse Now.'

"I finally accepted 'The Deep' with Robert Shaw and Jacqueline Bisset. I was reluctant about it but I had to go to work. The fact that I got the part said to many people that Nolte was able to work in something economically viable."

"The Deep" failed to give Nolte much to do. His role did not measure up to the vital vibes of Tom Jordache. Nolte himself was disappointed with the results although the picture earned many millions of dollars.

Nolte soon will be seen in "Who'll Stop the Rain," the film version of Robert Stone's prize-winning novel, "Dog Soldiers."

He plays a former combat soldier involved in heroin smuggling. It is a brutal and terrifying movie. Nolte dominates the screen and serves notice that he is indeed a movie star, one to be reckoned with in the years ahead.

Actress Gets Role In Suspense Drama

BUFFALO (Special) — New York actress Mary Beth Hurt has been signed by producers Robert Christiansen and Rick Rosenberg for a key role in MGM's suspense drama, "Hide in Plain Sight," with James Caan starring and making his debut as a director.

Miss Hurt, last featured in Woody Allen's "Interiors," joins a cast headed by Joe Grifasi, Robert Viharo, Jill Eikenberry, Barbra Rae, Danny Aiello and Ken McMillan.

The MGM presentation will be released in the United States and Canada by United Artists and throughout the rest of the world by Cinema International Corporation.

CANDY CONSUMPTION DOWN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average American ate 15.4 pounds of candy last year, the smallest amount in 39 years. The Commerce Department, which made the report, had no ready explanation for the decline. But it said one reason might be the trend toward smaller, more expensive candy bars.

Kerrville Music Festival Set

KERRVILLE — The second of Kerrville's four 1978 music festivals is set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the outdoor theater of Rod Kennedy's Quiet Valley Ranch.

The three-day family festival is the 4th annual Kerrville C&W Jamboree with such headliners as Bob Wills vocalist Leon Rausch, honky tonk star Moe Bandy and country music's fast-rising new romantic singer Eddie Rabbit.

The weekend, dubbed Country Western Days, includes three 6 p.m. concerts, the annual $1,000 country-western song writng contest finals, an 11 a.m. Sunday morning brush arbor service and, new this year, a 10:45 a.m. Saturday western parade and Sunday afternoon Coca-Cola Cowboy Horse Races and Donkey Derby.

Families camp out within walking distance of the outdoor theater. Most bring lawn chairs for extra comfort during the nearly 25 hours of concerts and a jacket or sweater for the cool evenings.

Gates open at 10 a.m. Friday and remain open 24 hours a day. Security, sanitation, toilets, showers, water and a dumping station are provided. Most of Kerrville's 900 motel rooms are taken, so camping is the way most people attend.

The opening night concert is headlined by Rausch, whose recording of "I'm Satisfied With You" is getting strong play on country stations all over Texas. Bill Mack from WBAP, Fort Worth, will introduce Dottsy and the legendary Floyd Tillman. Austin performers Butch Hancock, Bill & Bonnie Hearne and T. Gosney Thornton will open the evening.

Saturday at 10:45 a.m. the western parade will be headed by honorary parade marshals Hall of Famer Floyd Tillman and "Cowpokes" cartoonist Ace Reid. Both are nationally-known and live in Kerrville. Horses, wagons, stage coaches and the colorful 1st Cavalry Division Platoon from Ft. Hood are in the parade as well as many of the show luminaries.

The 1 p.m. song contest finals will be judged by Nashville song writers Glenn Martin, Sonny Throckmorton and Red Lane. The afternoon show will be climaxed by the appearance of Leon "Pappy" Selp, who recreates the music he made for Columbia Records in 1934 with his Blue Ridge Playboys.

The Saturday night concert opens with Southwest Bluewestern Bluegrass Bad Champions TVA and continues with songwriter Whitely Shafer ("Baptism of Jessie Taylor," "That's The Way Love Goes," "Bandy The Rodeo Clown," "Biggest Airport in The World") and Austin's Jon Emery who was the big surprise hit performer at the jamboree last year.

Contemporary country performers Steve Fromholz and Linda Hargrove also appear and Hoyle Nix and his West Texas Cowboys will be joined by Japanese fiddle player Shoji Tabuchi for some western swing in the old Bob Wills style. Bandy will close the concert.

Sunday morning at the brush arbor The Master Four will provide some gospel music beginning at 11 a.m. with Allen Damron and Southwind and at 1:30 the Cowboy Horse begin with early entries from Austin, Comfort, Fredericksburg, Devine, Mountain Home and Clear Lake Shores. Fiddling Frenchie Burke and Kent Finlay will provide the music for the races.

The Jamboree closes with a 6 p.m. concert headlined by Rabbit, whose hits "Love's On Fire" and "You Don't Love Me Anymore" are high on the charts right now. Also appearing are Capitol Records' newest star Marcia Ball and the exciting Cooder Brown Band.

Children under 12 are admitted free and camping is free to ticket holders. Complete information is available by calling (512) 896-3800.

Harpist Finds Lovely Music Tough Task

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Harpists, say those who are, work like devils to play like angels and being one is hardly heavenly.

What's so angelic, they ask, about lugging around a 78-pound, 6-foot-tall musical instrument that probably costs you about $8,500.

To get a melody by plucking the strings means time consuming and painstaking winding and rewinding the heads in the tuning process. If that doesn't bring you down to earth try being a harpist at a cocktail lounge.

She said some bar patrons request such numbers a "Dueling Banjos" and "Melancholy Baby," but, apparently in defence to the instrument, one of the most frequently requested tunes is "Clair de Lune," by Debussy.

Being a barroom harpist is only part of her work. She also plays in the evenings at the hotel's dinning room and at Sunday brunch .

Miss Strasek, 25, takes other engagements at Blossom Music Center, concerts and specials events in the Cleveland area. She has performed as second harpist with the Cleveland Orchestra.

Despite the problems of transporting and tuning her instrument, Miss Strasek has ben dedicated to the harp since she started training on it at the age of 9.

She said she was inspired to take up the harp when she was about 6 by the Marx Brothers movies where Harpo Marx played it.

"I suppose I was captivated by his playing," she said. "What he played sounded nice. We have the same birthdates, I found out later. I believe a little bit in astrology."

Her father, Frank Stresek, is an orchestra leader in Cleveland and her mother is a pianist and songwriter. Miss Strasek began studying piano when she was 5.

Applause is infrequent during her performance but she said her ego does not demand a lot of recognition.

"Nor does the harp command applause," she said. "The harp creates an atmosphere. It's pleasant, and it's more subtle than other types of entertainment.

"I suppose I enjoy it a great deal because it lets me express myself."

Bette Midler Career Flowering On Screen, Too

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — That most carefully managed of superstars, Bette Midler, is finally making it to the big screen.

She has conquered almost every medium, starting in a gay New York City bathhouse. Her concerts have been socko, her record albums have gone gold, her Broadway revue broke records, and the TV specials have been acclaimed. Now she is starring for 20th Century-Fox in "The Rose."

The Midler career appears to have been well-calculated, even the intervals to recharge her enormous energies. And even though her performances seem wildly impromptu, there is evidence of strong discipline underneath. The same elements appear in "The Rose."

"We started out in rehearsals playing the script very cautiously," explained director Mark Rydell ("The Reivers," "Cinderella Liberty"). "Then Bette herself pulled up short and said 'We can't be too cagey, too cautious, let's go all the way.'

"It was very brave of her. She has more to lose than anyone. But she elected to play the role full force, and it works. She is absolutely fearless. She played a scene in front of a crowd of people on a New York street in which she cried hysterically. She can be wild, yet she also has the power and dignity. An amazing talent."

"The Rose" concerns the last eight days in the life of a self-destructive rock star in 1969. Her frantic activity involves an ambitious manager, played by Alan Bates, and a Vietnam War deserter, Frederic Forrest.

The other day "The Rose" was filming in downtown Los Angeles at a rundown basement bar which had been converted into a nightclub featuring female impersonators. There were male replicas of Mae West, Barbra Streisand as well as Rose, the character Miss Midler plays.

The star was unavailable, but the coproducers explained how the project developed. Marvin Worth, who produced "Lenny" about another tragic star, Lenny Bruce, was first struck by the Midler talent 4½ years ago.

"I saw her perform at the Troubadour," the producer-writer recalled. "I went with Peter Gruber, who was then head of Columbia Pictures, and I proposed a picture for Bette. It din't work out because Columbia was in turmoil at the time.

"Then I thought, 'Why not have Bette do the life of Janis Joplin?' I made a deal with 20th Century-Fox, and did a great amount of research on Joplin. But it seemed to me the story should go beyond Joplin.

"I was interested in how certain performers reflect their times. Certainly if Frank Sinatra, Rudy Vallee or Elvis Presley came along now, they wouldn't be as popular as they were in their own eras. Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix and Jim Morrison were all products of an hysterical period in our history, and their music reflected it. They also died at the same time."

Aaron Russo is coproducer of "The Rose," and he has been Miss Midler's mentor since 1972.

"I've waited six years for a movie for Bette," he remarked. "The scripts I read and discarded either lacked quality or weren't important enough for her. I wanted a role that only Bette Midler could play. In other words, if she couldn't make the picture, the project would have to be abandoned.

"The toughest one to turn down was 'The Fortune.' She would have costarred with Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson with direction by Mike Nichols. But I read the script and decided it was a role any number of actresses could play (Stockard Channing did . I was almost holding my breath until the picture came out. I shouldn't say this, but I was happy when it failed."

Russo finally selected "The Rose" even though the role offers little chance for Miss Midler to display her comedic talent. Instead, she concentrates on the music, singing songs of the period as well as original number in "hard-driving electric-blues rock 'n' roll." Paul Rothscild, who worked with The Doors and Miss Joplin, is creating the music.

FIRST STARRING ROLE — Superstar singer Bette Midler will make her debut to the big screen in "The Rose," which is the story of the last eight days in the life of a self-destructive rock star in 1969. The co-producer, Aaron Russo, said that he had waited six years for a movie for Bette because he wanted one that only she could play. (AP Laserphoto)

AT&T Dislikes Hand In Placing Wiretaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. objected Wednesday to federal legislation permitting the attorney general or federal judges to order the phone company to participate in national security wiretaps.

A bill approved by the House Intelligence Committee would permit the government to order the phone company to provide "any and all information, facilities or technical assistance necessary to accomplish the electronic surveillance."

Testifying before a House judiciary subcommittee, AT&T lawyer William Caming said the corporation is "gravely concerned" about the new wiretap powers which would be given to the Justice Department.

"We believe it is wholly contary to the public interest to place such 'directive' authority of sweeping and disturbingly ambiguous character in the hands of a member of the executive branch," he said.

Congress has been working on wiretap legislation since disclosures of dozens of warrantless taps under former President Richard M. Nixon. In some cases, the home telephones of journalists and former White House officials were wiretapped.

The bill approved by the Senate and the House Intelligence Committee would require that a judge approve national security wiretaps, instead of the president as under current law.

Only the House Intelligence Committee version would expand the phone company's role. The Judiciary Committee shares jurisdiction on the issue and Caming urged that panel to allow AT&T to continue its current passive role in any court-ordered wiretaps.

Under present practice, AT&T gives the FBI the location of a telephone terminal which permits the agency to go ahead with the wiretap.

Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., said the bill should permit telephone company executives the right to refuse to help install a tap if they found it to be morally repugnant.

Also testifying was Rep. Morgan Murphy, D-Ill., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, who said phone company officials have refused to provide some wiretap help requested by government officials.

"The telephone company would prefer not to be involved at all," Murphy said.

Urging passage of the bill approved by his panel, Murphy said giving a federal judge control over the wiretap process will prevent the kind of abuses that occurred in the past.

In the consideration of balances between national security and the need to preserve rights of privacy, he said there is now too much concern for civil liberties.

He said federal agencies are failing to gather valuable national security and intelligence information because they are afraid of appearing to repeat the abuses of the past.

ABC Places Top Five TV Shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The five most watched television shows nationally, last week, were light comedies from ABC, leading that network to first place in the week's ratings war, according to A.C. Nielsen ratings released Tuesday.

"Three's Company," the adventures of two girls and one boy sharing an apartment, was the week's most watched show, the service said.

The program bagged a 21.4 rating, meaning it was watched by an estimated 15.4 million viewers during a week heavy with reruns.

"Laverne & Shirley" was second with a 20.8 rating, or 15.2 million viewers; "Charlie's Angels" was third with 20.7 or 15.1 million; fourth was "Happy Days" at 20.2 or 14.7 million; and fifth was "Love Boat," 19.1 or 14 million.

Overall, ABC averaged a 14.7 rating for prime time, followed by CBS with a 13.5 and NBC with 12.7. The networks say these figures give the percentages of homes with television in the country watching a particular network during an average minute of prime time.

The top-ranked non-ABC show was CBS' comedy, "Alice," which drew a 19 rating.

Tied for seventh place was NBC's "Quincy," the highest-rated non-comedy entry, with two CBS offerings, "M-A-S-H" and "One Day at a Time," all with an 18.3 rating and 13.3 million viewers.

The least watched show of the week, Nielsen said, was CBS' "Baby I'm Back," a comedy about a father who returns after abandoning his family for many years. That show drew a 6.7 rating for 4.8 million viewers.

The 11th through 20th most watched shows of the week were CBS' documentary series "60 Minutes," 17.5, 12.7 million; ABC's comedy "Carter Country," 17.4; CBS' "All in the Family," 17.3; ABC's "Starsky & Hutch," 17.2; CBS' "Switch," 17.1; ABC's "Barney Miller," 16.3; tied for 17th, CBS' "Incredible Hulk," NBC's "Big Event-Police Story," and CBS' "Tuesday Night Movie-'Escape From Bogen County,'" all with 16.3; CBS' "Lou Grant" was 20th with a 16.2 rating.

Mortgage Pool Suggested

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Michael Bilandic has proposed a $100-million mortgage pool which would enable homebuyers who live in their buildings to get low-interest loans from the city for buildings with one to six units.

Bilandic, who called the plan the first of its kind by a major city, said Tuesday the city plans to sell $100 million in tax-exempt municipal revenue bonds. Families that have combined incomes of less than $40,000 a year would be able to apply for loans of up to $80,000 at interest rates of 8 to 8¼ percent.

Stock Rise 'Technical'

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, slightly down for most of the day, rallied near the close to finish with a modest gain Wednesday, but analysts said the rise was based on technical factors rather than positive economic news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues, down by as much as 2.95 points during the session, closed with a 2.60 increase to 819.91, slightly less than the 5.03 point rise posted Tuesday.

"The market sometimes goes up because it goes down," said Larry Wachtel of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields. "You really can't attribute any market improvement to news.

"The market got over-sold," he said. "It attracts people who say, 'It got killed, so I'm gonna buy.'"

Gainers held a better than 4-3 edge over losers in volume of 23.26 million shares, the lowest since May 30.

Brokers said the thinness of the trading accentuated the technical rally, and said caution over impending economic announcements kept many investors out of the market.

The Federal Reserve is scheduled to announce the latest money supply figures Thursday, followed by the release of the May inflation statistics on Friday.

New York (AP) —Wednsday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.
