

Gas Price Increase Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former federal energy chief John C. Sawhill called today for "a major increase" in gasoline prices to show Americans there is an energy crisis.

"It is very important to raise prices at the gas pump... We've got to send a signal to the American consumer that the days of cheap energy are over," Sawhill told a news conference at the close of three days of meetings here of the Trilateral Commission.

In answer to a question, he declined to suggest exactly how much prices would have to rise. But he said it would have to be "a major increase" and that it could be phased in over a period of time.

Because of government-imposed price restrictions in this country, Sawhill said, Americans are paying lower prices than the world price, which has lulled them into thinking that an energy crisis doesn't really exist.

That attitude results in a much greater consumption of energy than would otherwise be the case, which drains wealth from the United States and gives it to oil-exporting countries, he said.

The low price also discourages investments in U.S. energy projects, said Sawhill, who is now president of New York University. He was director of the old Federal Energy Office during the administration of former President Gerald R. Ford.

"We feel very strongly it is important to raise U.S. energy prices up to the levels prevailing on world markets," he said.

High Court Jolts Major Oil Firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — States may prohibit oil companies from operating retail gasoline service stations, the Supreme Court ruled 7-1 today.

In a decision that could significantly change the way the big, integrated oil companies do business on a retail level nationwide, the court upheld a Maryland law forbidding oil producers or refiners from operating retail stations.

The decision means the oil companies will have to cease operations of about 250 stations in Maryland within the next year.

Florida, Delaware and the District of Columbia have similar laws passed, as Maryland's was, in the wake of the 1973 gasoline shortage.

In view of today's decision, which was written by Justice John Paul Stevens, other states might choose to follow Maryland's lead.

(Max Nalley, public relations representative for Exxon's marketing area which includes Texas and 11 other states, said he doubted Texas would follow suit.)

"The Arab oil embargo was felt there — in Maryland — much more severely than here. The result was perhaps a desire to punish the oil companies," he said. "I would be surprised if Texas were to come up with such a law."

The court also ruled that states may require oil companies to make all retail price reductions within that state on an across-the-board basis.

That provision is included in Maryland's law, and is law in Delaware, California, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia.

Basically, under the law a refiner cannot charge varying prices within a state for its products. In states without such laws oil companies legally may give retailers in certain areas special price breaks to meet competition or spark new sales.

Shell Oil, in challenging the Maryland law, said that requiring uniform prices "forces a seller to make the ruinous choice between not meeting an equally low price of a competitor in a localized area and losing sales as its dealers lose sales, or meeting localized competition but suffering the ruinous consequences arising from having to extend the same lower prices to all dealers statewide."

The court, with only Justice Harry A. Blackmun dissenting, rejected arguments by nine oil companies that Maryland's law violates federal commerce laws and the Constitution's safeguards for interstate commerce.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. took no part in deciding the case.

Under Maryland law, oil producers and refiners must contract with retailers if they want to sell their products to the consumer; they cannot do so directly. There is nothing in today's decision, however, that prevents oil companies from owning the stations and property.

The Maryland law was challenged by Exxon, Phillips, Shell, Continental, Kayo, Gulf, Ashland, Commonwealth Oil and the Petroleum Marketing Corp.

They charged that the law is designed to cut down on competition.

State officials contended, however, that the law was enacted to prevent oil companies from disciplining independent dealers in Maryland by controlling their supplies during gasoline shortages.

Stevens said the Maryland law was passed as officials responded "to evidence that producers and refiners were favoring company-operated stations in the allocation of gasoline and that this would eventually decrease the competitiveness of the retail market."

He said: "Regardless of the ultimate economic efficacy of the statute, we have no hesitancy in concluding that it bears a reasonable relation to the state's legitimate purpose in controlling the gasoline retail market, and we therefore reject (the oil companies') due-process claim."

In dissent, Blackmun said the court's majority "fails to condemn impermissible discrimination against interstate commerce in retail gasoline marketing."

His disagreement apparently was based solely on a provision of the Maryland law he said would "protect in-state retail service station dealers from the competition of out-of-state businesses."

Syrian Army Hunts Killers In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops, under a curtain of tank fire, stormed a village in northeastern Lebanon today in a house-to-house search for suspected assassins of former President Suleiman Franjeh's son, police reported.

In southern Lebanon, meanwhile, U.N. troops and Christian militiamen shared control of a border security strip following Israel's pullout. But the Lebanese government demanded the Christians stay in their barracks until Lebanese army regulars can replace them.

The rough search by Syrian peacekeepers, who remained in Lebanon after crushing the civil war there in November 1976, escalated tensions that gripped the hill country in the north. It came as Franjeh prepared a mass funeral for his son and 42 others slain in the worst clash between rival Christian armies since the 18-month civil war.

A police spokesman in Beirut said the Syrians traced the killers of Franjeh's son to the northeastern village of Deir el Ahmar, about 15 1/2 miles southeast of Ehden, scene of Tuesday's fighting.

Tanks ringed the town and soldiers ordered residents to turn over the suspects, he said, adding: "When the ultimatum was not heeded, the Syrians opened up with tanks and rockets and then stormed in."

The spokesman said a Lebanese army corporal was killed and 12 houses were badly damaged as the Syrians began a search. It was not immediately known if any suspects were taken.

Syrian troops patrolled highways, combed mountain woods and checked traffic trying to head off a vendetta between Franjeh's forces and the Phalangist Party, two of the country's leading Christian factions.

The former president's son Tony, Tony's wife and 2-year-old daughter, their bodyguard-chauffeur and maid, and 38 Franjeh supporters were killed Tuesday when 800 Phalangists attacked Ehden, a See LEBANESE Page 16

Torrential Rain, Hail Slam Area

Like a well-aimed artillery shelling, violent rainstorms blasted parts of the South Plains Tuesday night but left other parts unaffected except for a spatter of rain and distant thunder.

Lubbock got only .05 inch of rain, while 2.76 fell at Lorenzo and 4.45 at Tulia, and lightning knocked out electrical power in the Crosby and Swisher County towns.

The National Weather Service gives Lubbock a 20 percent chance of rain for tonight.

Tulia also had pea-and-marble-size hail, and police reported golf ball-size hail on U.S. 87 outside town.

"It was a doozy, I tell you," said Tulia police dispatcher Jeanette Hinkle this morning. "You just couldn't get over how hard it rained and how much water there was."

"All the residential streets were under water, and there were a few places that were impassable."

Most of the rain there fell from 9 p.m. to 11 p.m., Mrs. Hinkle said.

Police Chief Weldon Smith recorded 4.70 in his home rain gauge.

Lightning hit the police radio transformer in the station parking lot about 8:30 p.m., and Tulia police communicated by walkie-talkie until the system was restored after midnight.

"Lights were out all over town," Mrs. Hinkle added.

Power was off in Lorenzo from 12:45 a.m. to 2:30 a.m. in the rainstorm there.

"We had a little flood," lumberyard manager Bill Liston of Lorenzo said.

The southward-moving storm apparently unloaded all its hail around Tulia because none fell at Lorenzo.

Liston said Lorenzo streets also were

Youth Shot In Alleged Break-In

A 16-year-old Lubbock boy was in serious condition in St. Mary's Hospital today after encountering two shotgun blasts when he allegedly broke into a westside home late Tuesday.

The wounded youth was found near a school shortly after a homeowner fired two shots at an intruder.

Police, responding to a reported burglary in progress about 10 p.m., were met at the front door of the house in the 3800-block of 57th St. by a screaming woman. Inside, they found a distraught man holding a shotgun.

Reports indicated several windows and a glass door were shot out and blood was visible inside the room. Officers reportedly found two empty shotgun shells on the floor of the family room and a small flashlight and piece of aluminum pipe in an adjacent enclosed patio area.

The 36-year-old homeowner told police the doorbell rang several times and someone knocked on the front door of the residence. He said he did not respond, but moments later heard noises at the back door.

The man said he got out of bed, picked up a 16-gauge shotgun and went into the family room to investigate the sound.

The resident told police he saw the figure of a person standing inside the door of the glass-enclosed patio area and shining a flashlight around the room.

At that point, reports said, the man fired twice through the glass between the family room and the patio.

Entry into the home reportedly had been gained through the back door of the Middle Years Time Of Conflict

(Editor's Note: Today, the middle years are being identified as a major crisis point for marriage. One quarter of the marriages that have lasted 15 years or more now end in divorce. At mid-life, men and women seem to switch gears and head in opposite directions. What are these new directions and how can they be expected without destroying marriages? In this third of a five-part series from her book, "The Male Mid-Life Crisis," published by Doubleday & Company, Inc., author Nancy Mayer provides clear answers.)

By Nancy Mayer
(c) 1978 by Nancy Mayer

Mid-life is the time when marriages frequently quake or break, the time when husbands behave strangely and wives need more than epithets to survive.

When a marriage of long duration falls apart, the most common cause of conflict is different rates of growth. In time some people outgrow each other, or grow in opposite directions. Each needs more room to experiment and stretch.

The third person in the triangle is not another man or woman, but an evolving self, which now feels suffocated within the confines of traditional marriage. "Existential divorce" is the phrase used to describe the breakup caused by one, or both, partner's concluding their marriage no longer has meaning. This sort of rupture is usually devoid of dramatic clashes: no violent fights, no intrusive lovers, no major differences in background. Rather, the choice made at 20 just doesn't seem valid, or rewarding, at 40.

Third In A Series

Moreover, there is a growing body of evidence from social scientists which suggests that a sexual reversal takes place at this stage of life, a reversal that is likely to be explosive. At mid-life, men and women seem to be switching gears and heading in opposite directions. Intent on living out the potentials and pleasures they had relinquished in earlier years, men begin to move toward the passivity, sensuality, and tenderness previously repressed in the service of productivity. Women experience the opposite: Now that their nurturing function is no longer needed, they often become more autonomous, aggressive, and cerebral.

What this mid-life switch means in contemporary terms is that men of this generation are trying to break out of the masculine mystique at the same time that women are seeking to break out of the feminine mystique.

Whether a husband and wife hurdle the stresses imposed by the mid-life sexual reversal will depend on many factors: How strongly are they still bound together by loving feelings? Is their sexual relationship mutually satisfying? How deep is the hostility between them? Equally important: How much loyalty do they feel for each other and for family life? What does each expect from the marriage and from a marital partner? What does each imagine is possible in another relationship? And how much is one, or both, willing to risk to get something better?

In general, however, the survival of a marriage at this stage of life hinges on this key question: How much can each partner let the other grow without feel-

Police Rip Yard In Body Search

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Police using a backhoe ripped up the yard around an alleged kidnapper's dwelling today, and an official said a search was under way for at least one body.

Police denied reports they were searching for the graves of six abduction victims. But Hampden-Berkshire District Attorney Matthew J. Ryan said on Tuesday: "We're looking for one specific body in particular and there may be others."

The yard is at the home of Kenneth A. Appleby, 27, who was arrested Tuesday and charged with kidnapping a New York City man, police said. He was ordered held without bail on a fugitive from justice warrant issued in New York City, but a hearing was scheduled for today.

The Morning Union of Springfield reported today that Appleby told police he buried several bodies of kidnap victims in a fenced lot behind his home, a small hut with tarpaper-covered sides and a metal roof.

However, Capt. Richard Kulig of the West Springfield police said today: "He didn't say anything. He called his lawyer, and his lawyer told him not to talk to us."

An innocent plea was entered for Appleby, a bearded, hefty Springfield pawnbroker, at his arraignment in Springfield District Court.

Police said they planned to dig up sections of a 3 1/2-acre area in the rural neighborhood around Appleby's home.

State police Det. John Cauley said they were searching for items listed in a search warrant. He denied that they were looking specifically for bodies.

West Springfield police Capt. Anthony Martilli said nothing was found at the site by the time the search was suspended Tuesday night. Police guarded the site overnight.

City Slaying Blamed On 'Hit Men'

By FRANK PATRICK

Leroy Adams, accused of murdering his wife inside a local massage parlor in 1976, today claimed organized crime was trying to muscle in on his wife's massage business and implied "hit men" were responsible for her death.

The gray-haired, gravelly voiced Adams, 52, said he did not fatally shoot his wife or wound another massage parlor employee.

Instead, he claimed he ran frightened from the massage parlor after hearing gunshots.

Margaret Holt Adams, 48, known as "Brandy," was gunned down May 19, 1976, at her place of business, Brandy's Massage Parlor at 2802 34th St., about 5:30 p.m. She died less than four hours later at a local hospital.

Victoria Jean Simmons, 19, who said she worked as a masseuse at the place, had testified Tuesday she had heard Mrs. Adams apparently pleading for her life moments before the older woman was fatally wounded.

The tall brunette said Adams then walked into another room of the massage parlor as she was on the telephone to police and shot her twice.

Adams today told an attentive seven-woman, five-man jury in 237th District Court that he had been aware organized crime — "the syndicate" — had been trying to take over the massage parlor operation.

He indicated a stir had been caused when a dead fish wrapped inside a newspaper was found on the premises.

"Did that have some kind of symbol?"

CERRITOS, Calif. (AP) — Only the chimney of former first lady Pat Nixon's childhood home remains after a bulldozer razed its fire-scarred frame. The small, farm-style house was labeled a total loss and a safety hazard after a January firebombing, city spokesman Tom Robinson said Tuesday. "The city considered several options — including trying to rebuild the home," Robinson said. But that would have cost $90,000 — $60,000 more than the city received in insurance. He said the chimney bricks would be used to build a memorial planter on the site.

World-famous plastic surgeon Ivo Pitanguy is attending her. "We are shooting the long shots for now. We are doing very little filming of Marisa," reports her producer. He said Pitanguy has yet to perform plastic surgery on Miss Berenson. "We hope the cut will heal by itself and that no surgery will be needed." While Pitanguy decides how to proceed, Miss Berenson is reported "very relaxed and handling it well."

FBI Seeks Food Snatcher

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A pantry raider with a sweet tooth may have bitten off more than he could chew when he broke into a Charlotte home this weekend. Authorities are making a federal case out of it. The southeast Charlotte home belongs to Herbert Monahan, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina. Monahan was in Tennessee this weekend, and the house was empty. But FBI office manager Charles Barton went there Sunday to check the mail and found the front door open. Within minutes, the place was swarming with FBI agents and local police. They didn't find much in the way of clues.

"It wasn't a calculated raid of somebody trying to hit the FBI," said agency spokesman Chuck Richards. "Nothing of value was taken that we can determine. Cookies and cheese were eaten." But Richards said federal agents are still on the case, trying to discover if any FBI property — guns for example — was stolen. No arrests have been made.

DAILY NEWS DRIVERS CROSS PICKET LINES — Newspaper Guild pickets yell at a New York Daily News truck driver as he wheels his delivery truck out of a News plant late Tuesday night on the first day of a strike against the paper. The drivers delivered 125,000 copies of the paper, which has a normal circulation of nearly 2 million. (AP Laserphoto)

Reporters' Strike Fails To Halt Publication Of New York Paper

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Daily News, hit by a reporters' strike, published today with drivers, ignoring shouts of "scab," crossing picket lines to take the nation's largest circulation paper to newsstands.

A spokesman for the morning tabloid said it appeared that something less than half the normal 2 million copies would be distributed. The News ran a 64-page edition, roughly two-thirds the normal size, and did not publish its separate suburban sections.

Two persons were arrested outside the Daily News garage as some delivery trucks were pelted with bottles and cans. Police said the two were not News employees, but they were not further identified. Police said they would be charged with criminal mischief.

At one point, several pickets sat in the street trying to block deliveries, but they were removed by police.

No new contract talks were immediately set between the News and the striking Newspaper Guild, which represents some 1,300 editors, reporters, photographers and commercial employees.

The Guild, whose contract expired last March 30, walked off the job shortly after 2 p.m. Tuesday when contract talks broke down. Key issues were how wage increases would be distributed — the paper wanted some hikes based on its determination of merit — and union opposition to alleged retrogressions sought by management.

The Guild had hoped the deliveries — the only Daily News union with the power to shut down the paper because they are not subject to automation or wholesale replacement by management — would support the walkout.

But after the drivers' union met for several hours in a garage across from the News, delaying the first edition by more than three hours, a large number of drivers went to work while about 30 stayed behind.

The paper said 176 drivers worked, but had no firm estimate on how many would be employed on a normal evening.

Angry Guild members shouted "Scab! Scab!" from police barricades as the drivers, some wearing hard hats, went to get their trucks at about 11 p.m.

Moments later, the first delivery truck — pelted with bottles and cans — backed into the bay, took on a full load of papers and left on its rounds.

One truck had a window broken by a thrown object as union leaders trying to control pickets shouted through megaphones.

"Easy does it. Don't get hurt."

After some of the drivers crossed the picket lines, Guild Executive Director Harry Fisdell said. "It behooves us to stick together. If we don't, this anti-union paper will see us hang separately."

News spokesman Jonathan Thompson charged there had been "minor sabotage" to engraving room equipment. He charged the Guild had called an "arbitrary and unjustified strike deadline, which didn't allow for a progressive discussion of all issues."

A strike deadline had been set last week, but that was allowed to pass as talks continued, then collapsed Tuesday.

Pressmen, paper handlers, stereotypers and engravers, all members of the Allied Printing Trades Council, refused to cross Guild picket lines, but members of the International Typographical Union — the printers — did go to work along with drivers, the News said.

On the picket lines, reporter Donald Singleton, chewing on a cigar, said he "hated" having to walk out and added, "Everybody was stunned. There was always hope that it was not going to happen."

Rizzo Lashes Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mayor Frank Rizzo has ordered city advertising withheld from the Evening and Sunday Bulletin because the newspaper has refused to correct what he claims was an erroneous story.

Rizzo estimates that his action could cost the Bulletin, the city's largest newspaper with a daily circulation of 540,851, about $500,000 annually.

"That's the only weapon I have," the mayor said Tuesday at an impromptu press conference.

"I'm instructing the city representative and all my cabinet people — the law has been thoroughly checked on this through the city solicitor — we are pulling all of our ads out of the Philadelphia Bulletin," Rizzo said.

Bulletin officials said Tuesday night that they had not received official notification of the cancellation.

"We have heard nothing from the mayor to prompt a change in the story," said Joseph G. Elliott, vice president of the Bulletin Co.

The newspaper reported in its Sunday edition that Alfred E. Smith O'Neill, head of an organization seeking to change the city charter, was negotiating with the Rizzo administration to sell cancer insurance to city employees. The proposed charter change would allow Rizzo to run for a third term in office.

City officials have said O'Neill proposed the insurance plan to the Philadelphia Credit Union, an independent agency serving city employees but without any formal ties to the city.

Rizzo, who vigorously disputed the Bulletin story, has said he will go to court to learn the newspaper's anonymous sources.

The Bulletin will continue to receive City Council advertising because the council must place classified legal notices in Philadelphia's three largest daily newspapers. The mayor, however, has discretion in placing other city promotional and legal advertising.

Senate Vote On NYC Nearing

By MARC ROSENWASSER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Banking Committee staff members were meeting today to prepare for the panel's final action on a bill intended to keep New York City from going bankrupt.

"It's show-and-tell time," said one staff member, alluding to the almost countless variations of ad proposals that have been discussed by committee personnel in recent weeks. "It's time to either put up or shut up."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the committee chairman, says he wants the panel to vote on the bill Thursday. However, due to the complexity of the subject and the fluidity of various senators' positions, there were predictions that a vote would be delayed.

An aide quoted Sen. Harrison Schmidt, R-N.M., as saying that drafting the final version of the bill and sending it to the floor could take up to four days.

Five of the 15 committee members are thought to be solidly behind the Carter administration proposal to provide the city with $2 billion in 15-year bond guarantees over the next four years. Three members of the panel, including Proxmire, firmly oppose the plan.

Staff members and city lobbyists say the other seven committee members favor some sort of assistance, but aren't sure what.

A new, more stringent guarantee proposal by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., the former mayor of Indianapolis, could give the undecided senators a place to turn.

Lugar, like the administration, would have the federal government guarantee city bonds for up to 15 years. However, besides limiting the guarantees to $1.5 billion, he extended to the city in three sets of $500 million, Lugar's bill would require the city and state to meet other conditions before most of the guarantees would take effect.

Either house of Congress could kill the plan before July 1, 1979 — when, under Lugar's plan, the city would get the second $500 million bond guarantee. And the city would get the third $500 million guarantee only after it balanced its budget.

Under the administration bill, Congress could not pull back once it voted the $2 billion guarantee.

A toughening of the conditions, some committee sources believe, will enable some reluctant senators to go along, even if they have philosophical problems with the concept of long-term federal bond guarantees being extended to the city.

One such senator, John Heinz, R-Pa., has spoken repeatedly of the need to keep the city on a "short leash."

City officials say the guarantees are necessary to help New York regain access to the public markets and raise the cash it needs for its long-term spending projects. The city's last bond offering in November failed.

Premature Infants Survival Improves

CHICAGO (UPI) — At least two-thirds of all premature infants born after only 28 weeks in the womb can survive, the Arterican Medical Association says.

Dr. Arthur E. Kopelman of the East Carolina University Medical School said a recent study shows that while 5.1 percent of pregnant women have premature deliveries, at least two-thirds of the premature infants born after only seven months in the womb can survive.

Kopelman, who noted the survival rate is much better than 15 years ago, said it is virtually impossible to give a reason for the dramatic improvement. But he said new knowledge has helped deal with the dangers of too little or too much oxygen, chilling, malnutrition, low blood sugar and parent-infant separation.

Writer Gives Notes On Pacific Tour

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
NADI, Fiji (AP) — Sand found in the sandals of a beachcombing columnist lately returned from the South Pacific:

It took the missionaries the better part of a lifetime to persuade the carefree islanders to go about in clothing like civilized folk. Now Club Mediterranee has invaded Moorea, Bora Bora and the other Society Island. The first thing the high society jet setters do is chuck their raincoats and run starkers on the beach.

Women's rugby is a leading spectator sport in Papua-New Guinea. These brawny broad-shouldered lasses blitz the ball carrier and execute bone-crushing blind side tackles with a joyous malevolence that would bring a smile to the cherubic features of Bubba Smith and leave Howard Cosell speechless. Well, down to his last 100,000 words anyway.

Another tourist reminder in Papeete: "Le pourboire n'est pas d'usage a Tahiti" — tipping is not customary in Tahiti. The word apparently hasn't reached the natives yet, but then life is lived at a slower pace here. The news of Lincoln's assassination arrived two months late.

Nadi is pronounced with an "n" to rhyme with dandy, and Pago-Pago is pronounced as a double pango. No one seems to know why. The 'N' has been missing for years here. And my laundry never came back either.

The Catholic cardinal of Manila is named Cardinal Sin. He greets visitors to the episcopal residence with the double-take one-liner: "Welcome to the House of Sin."

Fletcher Christian, alias Clark Gable, the HMS Bounty mutineer who lived on Pitcairn Island with a South Sea lovely called Mi-Mini. He named his eldest son Friday October, after the day of the week and month of the year when he was born in 1790. Twenty years later, Captain Mahew Folger came ashore from the American ship Topaz and told him he was in error because he forgot to reckon with the International Dateline. Christian promptly changed his son's name to Thursday October.

Bora Bora, which James Michener called the most beautiful of all South Sea Islands, is due to be socked by a hurricane ... staged by Dino de Laurentis for a movie of the same name. The same people who reincarnated "King Kong" have built a mock-up village complete with lighthouse, hotel, general merchandise store ("Hudson Bros. & Co.") and a two-dimensional coastal steamer right out of Joseph Conrad. The wind machines are already in place, mounted on jeeps. Dino wishes the Tahitian workmen would hurry up and finish building the set so he can blow it down before the real hurricane season beats him to it.

"Yachties" from all over the world cruise the South Pacific isles and atolls, advertising available crew berths in the local newspapers, leaving messages for each other in marinas and motels along the way, sometimes scribbling a note that is a cry for help from all the ships at sea:

"Golden Kris, 60-foot Canadian ketch, overdue at Vavau in Tonga, after having sailed from Nauru March 8. Japanese tanker reported believed sighting March 19 about 7 PM 160 nautical miles southeast Nanomea. If anyone can give information of whereabouts of yacht, please contact Moana, Travel Lodge, Auckland."

Walking along the row of yachts moored at the Papeete marina is, for those with time to listen, like living through a chapter out of Conrad. Every slip has a tale to tell to the background music of halyards slapping against the metal masts and, always, a weather-reddened yachtie to tell it.

"This your boat?" I asked a balding chunky man with a wooden leg who was rebuilding a badly mauled and de-masted 45-foot sloop named Charlotte's Dream.

"Ja. She is now," he replied in a thick German accent. His was a strange tale.

"Two Chicago insurance men signed me on in Acapulco to navigate them to Tahiti. Their first Pacific crossing in their brand-new fiberglass sloop. West of the Galapagos, crossing the equator, a fierce storm came up while one of them had the watch. Ripped off the jib and tore up the railings, almost washing him overboard.

"She roared for five days. Force nine winds. The two clung to the cabin floor on their faces. They cried. They prayed. They screamed. Neither would come on deck to help me. When the mast went, I begged them to give me a hand. With one leg, I couldn't save the boat alone. I went after the young one with a stay wrench. I threatened to kill him right there if he didn't get up on deck.

"He refused. So did the other. They told me if I got them to Tahiti alive, I could have the Charlotte's Dream. They never wanted to see her again. The co-wards, they kept their word. Ja, she's mine."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Take A Number And Wait

THE TASK of dynamiting a route through governmental red tape ritually consumes an inordinate amount of time, energy and taxpayers' money every working day in every congressional office.

What is so aggravating about this case work (as it is referred to on Capitol Hill) is the fact that most of it would be uncalled-for if civil servants performed their jobs with a modicum of civility, concern and common sense in the first place.

FOR INSTANCE, consider the experience of two California schools which applied to HEW last fall for a couple of relatively modest grants.

Rural Delano, Calif. (population 15,350) spent months preparing its very first government grant request and put the application in the mail in time for it to be postmarked Nov. 9, 1977—six days before the deadline.

Thanks to Postal Service efficiency it arrived Nov. 17, two days after the deadline. Bureaucrats promptly rejected it, returning it unopened and unread.

A WEEK EARLIER, the same HEW office had likewise summarily rejected a grant application from San Francisco State University because the request arrived one and a third business hours late beyond the 4 p.m. Nov. 9 deadline.

During the 3,000-mile trip by commercial air express, an engine on the airplane caught fire, forcing an emergency landing for repairs.

Both schools naturally appealed the arbitrary rejection, but their pleas fell on deaf ears. So they enlisted the aid of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., majority whip.

AFTER CHECKING the facts, Cranston fired off an angry letter to HEW Secretary Joe Califano in protest of what Cranston called "the icy blast of federal hauteur" encountered by the schools.

The letter sank into the maw of the bureaucracy and wasn't discovered and disgorged until May 5. When it finally reached him, Califano, according to news accounts, "hit the ceiling."

So, six months after it was submitted, the Delano High application is being processed. But San Francisco State? No dice. They shouldn't have waited until the last day to submit their request, Califano ruled.

Oh well, there's always next time.

The Taxpayers Are...'

James J. Kilpatrick:

'Demos Have Not Done Good'

WASHINGTON—Conservatives are a pessimistic lot. Fifty years of recurring disappointments have led them to the dismal conclusion, constantly demonstrated, that things will get worse before they get any better.

But something is happening out there in the political world. Conservative fortunes may have plumbed the ultimate sub-basement; their elevator may be about to rise again.

This is a giddy prospect. Over on the conservative side, we are faint with exhilaration. Our boys are crying, "light at the end of the tunnel!" And, "turning of the tide!" It is almost beyond bearing.

Some of the evidence is empirical; some of it is seat-of-the-pants; some of it emerges from the poor performance of President Carter. In whatever form, the evidence of a conservative resurgence is mounting, and it gets more surprising all the time.

TAKE A MOMENT to look back. In the House elections of November 1974, the Republicans lost 46 seats. The Democrats had held 243 seats in the 93rd Congress; they opened the 94th with 289.

If the usual pattern of political recovery had obtained, the GOP would have recaptured many of the seats in 1976. It was not to be. The Democrats held their 289 seats as the 95th Congress began, and of course they claimed the White House, too. On paper, the prospect was for one-party, liberal dominance of national political affairs.

It has been a curious thing, and from the conservative view an altogether delightful thing. To borrow from the old cigarette commercial, Democrats have not done good like liberals should.

Despite strenuous efforts by the leadership, Democrats have refused to stay whipped in line. Their constituents have sent them a message, and the message has had telling effect.

THIS IS HOW the wind blows. Last year the conservative coalition in the House, formed of Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans, was successful in 68 percent of the rollcall votes in which the coalition materialized.

This was a 10-point increase over 1976; only three times in 16 years has the coalition posted a better record.

Another yardstick is fashioned by the editors of Congressional Quarterly in terms of support for President Carter. Last year Carter succeeded on 75 percent of the votes on which he had taken a definite position.

The figure may sound high. It was lower than the support recorded in any year by Kennedy or Johnson, and barely one point higher than Richard Nixon scored in his first year.

The surprising patterns of 1977 were further confirmed in the ideological scorecards maintained by various organizations.

In 1975, the liberal Americans for Democratic Action gave 113 House members an approving score of 80 percent or more; in 1977, the tallykeepers of ADA could find only 70 members in the top bracket.

AT THE OPPOSITE end of the spectrum, the conservative U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which had praised 100 members in 1975, honored 131 in 1977.

The patterns have continued into 1978. The

THE AMERICAN Civil Liberties Union, in its usual frenzy over liberal causes, "deplores" an order that a married man be hired as an equal to a divorced woman. The job: Co-director of the White House Conference on Families.

Can you imagine! The Gov'tment thinking a family man might know as much about families as a divorced woman!

A study of traffic signal timing here has been ordered by the City Council. It'll be expensive because of overtime paid to the consultant—time he wracks up waiting for the light to change.

One light the consultant might study is the signal at 8th St. and Ave. K, adjoining A-J property. The Office Playboys says that from his second-floor desk to the top of the 14-story First National-Pioneer building seven blocks away, one-third of the travel time is spent waiting for that light to change.

WANT TO KNOW one reason it's so difficult for you as a citizen to change the course of government? It's the job insulation enjoyed by bureaucrats.

President Carter is trying to correct the problem by making it easier to demote, promote or fire senior bureaucrats who deserve it.

But Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, says "That's exactly what we don't want to have. We want to have senior executives who have background and knowledge in the government to stand up and tell a new group (President and his cabinet) where they are going wrong."

Stevens is wrong. It hardly does the American public any good to express its will at the polls if the new President is going to be powerless to implement his program because entrenched bureaucrats are "standing up and telling him he is wrong."

No, Virginia, the Texas Sunset Advisory Commission isn't an arbitration board God set up to decide whether He or Congress was right on what time dusk should set in.

The Army says well, yes, the fact that 3 out of 10 enlisted men smoke marijuana, by their own admission, "does have some degree of adverse impact on combat readiness."

Never fear, folks, after 20 years they can retire on a lifetime pension and all you'll be paying for will be their loafing, not their combat readiness.

Public servant: "We're slaving to serve the people."

People person: "I'd say, more like you're serving to enslave the people."

Residents of Washington, D.C., pay only 29 cents in taxes for each dollar of federal aid they receive, the Tax Foundation reports.

These are the same D.C.-ers who are clamoring for statehood—on the basis that they ain't getting treated right by Congress!

You're extravagant, says My Neighbor Twice Removed, if you use your stick deodorant only down to where it needs pushing up; you're frugal if you dig out and use the part that holds it in the case—and you're cheap if you keep the empty holder around for a week thereafter as a room deodorizer.

SOME TIME BACK, Jim Granberry took the family cat with him on a quick trip to the store. Being a Republican cat, the animal had led a sheltered life. It became confused and disoriented by change.

When Granberry returned to the car and opened the door, the cat bolted to freedom. A black cat, it refused the overtures of its Republican master to return to the car, which had become a symbol of oppression.

Weeks later, the 1974 gubernatorial standard-bearer had his son in the car with him. They spotted the prodigal cat.

By then, the animal had learned that it's a dog-eat-cat world out there and it quickly accepted an invitation to return home.

IN DUE COURSE, the cat gave birth to five kittens. All five immediately went on the Granberry welfare rolls as dependent and neglected children born illegitimately of a shiftless, unemployed father.

Later that day, however, Granberry announced to the family that the kittens would have to go. The shocked assemblage demanded an explanation of his reactionary heartlessness.

"Why," Granberry explained, "We can't keep these kittens under our roof. They're Democrats."

"How can you tell, daddy?"

"They have their eyes closed."

Holmes Alexander:

Second' Chance Comes But Once

WASHINGTON—My late father grew up about 100 years ago in a Confederate county where those who had fought or sympathized for the losing side had no civil rights and little economic opportunity.

He often looked across the top of his morning newspaper, down the length of the breakfast table and issued a warning that could only have had its source in memories of the reconstruction: "Son, don't ever lose a war."

It seemed a preposterous idea that the mighty United States need ever worry about such a disaster, and in the 1940s, this proved to be true. After the Japanese sneak attack in Hawaii and the Philippines, the American forces in Asia and Europe swept from one victory to the next, with the outcome never in doubt.

BUT IN THE 1950s, theoretically as part of the United Nations force, we suffered from vainglorious leadership in Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and virtually elected Dwight Eisenhower with instruction to "go to Korea" and settle for a draw. It had the effect of postponing an evil day which is now upon us.

Worse, in the 1960s, we had a cowardly President who turned tail before a Communist outlaw in Cuba. We stood around and wrung our hands while the Berlin Wall was built to imprison Eastern Europe and in a fit of folly attempted to restore the French ill-got empire in Indochina.

My father's remembered advice—"Never lose a war!"—often recurred to me as the nation's fortunes receded and its tragedy deepened—and it doesn't take a sooth-sayer to make out the shape of things to come as the decade of the 1970s reels to its close.

EVERY POLICY WE have undertaken since 1945 has failed for a reason that any high school student should be able to read as he runs.

All of our policies, chiefly the making of alliances and dickerings with disarmament treaties, have been defensive doctrines. The most grotesque alliance is the United Nations, which bears no semblance at all to a government where the will of the people rule.

NATO is about all that's left of the tinsel galaxy of defense pacts built by Acheson and Dulles, and today NATO cringes before the superior forces of the Warsaw Pact.

The Soviet Union defied the Monroe Doctrine by establishing an obedient satellite in the Western Hemisphere, and sending the Cuban legions to fight for the Red flag in Black Africa.

No where have we matched these aggressions with similar moves or even counter-moves. We have stood by and watched while everything goes dead wrong.

I had the experience of a personal interview with the late Gen. Lucius Clay on the trip of Vice President Johnson to view the coils of wire and rubbish that was just beginning to be called the Berlin Wall.

Clay, previously military governor of Berlin, told me that he had put on civilian clothes and visited East Berlin while Johnson was entertaining crowds in the allied sector.

It was Clay's considered opinion that with a little encouragement from the Vice President, the East Berliners would have torn down the wall with their bare hands.

Such chances may not come again. They certainly won't under our posture of passiveness. If we lose this war, the misery of the last century's Reconstruction will seem like a picnic.

Sylvia Porter:

Contact Customers: Lens Me Your Ears

(First of four columns)
 MORE THAN HALF of all Americans (52 percent) now wear prescription lenses—with eyeglasses still the overwhelming choice.

But contact lenses are rapidly gaining in popularity, with the number of contact lens wearers approaching 14 million, the percentage of wearers more than triple the level of a decade ago, and spending on contact lenses up to a third of a billion dollars in '77 alone.

What's more, as the contact lens industry has boomed, prices have been falling—in contrast to increases in the prices of eyeglasses.

The range in hard contact lenses will be from a low of $99 to $350 a pair; the range in soft lenses, from $150 to $450.

SO INDEFINITELY wide is the spread in prices for contacts and eyeglasses, in fact, that the Federal Trade Commission has just ordered restrictions on the advertising of prices to be lifted to spur competition that would force down charges.

If you're a typical contact lens wearer today, says the American Optometric Assn., you're a woman between the ages of 17 and 24.

But with new technological developments and advances in contact lens design, materials, prescribing and fitting, the appeal of contacts is broadening to young men as well as those over age 50.

In only 22 years from now, half of the 100 million Americans who wear eyeglasses will have switched to contact lenses—hard or soft, or a new mix in between—predicts the director of the Contact Lens Service at New York's St. Vincent's Hospital and Medicare Center.

TECHNOLOGICAL breakthroughs are accelerating, some as recent as a few weeks ago, others slated to reach the market within a year.

For instance, Danker & Wolk, Inc., Uniondale, N.Y., revealed earlier in 1978 that it had received clearance from the Food and Drug Administration to market a new type of "semi-hard" lens, first of its type and unlike either conventional or soft contacts, and to be promoted.

Under clinical investigation is another innovation—a silicone rubber contact lens which telegraphs a new generation of potential materials for use in eye care, and better wearability.

SEMI-HARD AND soft tinted bifocal lenses also are being tested by the industry for more comfortable fit and better vision. Studies are underway, too, for contact lenses that could be worn 24 hours a day and for a lens material that would permit the eye to breathe normally through the lens itself.

Your growing acceptance of contacts has resulted in a surge of mail order sales, but "mail order contact lenses may damage your eyes," warns the AOA.

A slight deviation from a perfect fit can cause the lens to ride incorrectly. So minute are the measurements that you may have to return for several visits after you receive new lenses for adjustments.

These visits and individualized instructions plus practice in applying, removing and caring for the lenses should be included in the total cost of the lenses to you.

With mail order lenses, you have no one to whom you can go back to check the lenses, the AOA cautions.

Computer programs are being developed to select lens designs based on vision performance and eye measurements. The computer helps doctors "try out" a lens design on a computer model of the patient's eye. An immediate feedback can suggest modifications before prescribing the actual lens specifications.

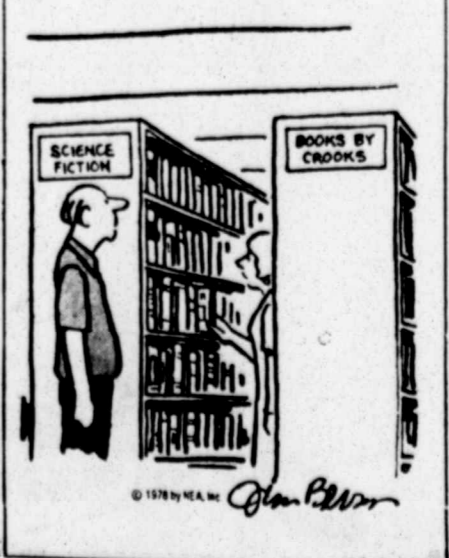

IT WAS ONLY 30 years ago that lens experts began working with hard plastic lenses. The soft plastics were introduced in the late 1950s, came to market as recently as in '71. Now as new discoveries speed up, millions more will be turning to these lenses.

But be on guard. Before buying, get all the facts. Make sure you can wear contacts successfully. Ask the doctor's policy concerning patients who cannot, for whatever reason, adapt to their new lenses.

Find out in advance what the total fee will be for your contacts and what the fee covers.

Tomorrow: Beware of "bargains."

Police Dread Family Quarrels

THE CALL COPS DREAD — It may be a 418F in San Francisco, or a 1052 in New York City, but a family quarrel is one of the most dangerous calls officers can get because they never know what to expect. New York officer Rober Shack said, "I always assume the man is armed." Earlier this week, one officer was fatally shot and another critically injured when they answered a family disturbance call in Chattanooga, Tenn. (AP Laserphoto)

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

It's a 418-F in San Francisco, a 10-52 in New York, a 430 in Chattanooga. In Dallas they call it a Signal Six. In Detroit it comes crackling over the police radio: "family trouble."

It happens all the time, the family beef, the lover's quarrel. It can end in handshakes or gunshots, but you don't know until you get there. There's not a policeman with savvy who doesn't dread the call.

The family quarrel is hazardous to his health, frequently more so than chasing bank robbers. With them, police know where they stand. In a family argument, a complaining wife might suddenly side with her husband, who might just be carrying a gun.

On Monday, one policeman was fatally shot, another critically injured when they answered a family disturbance call in Chattanooga, Tenn. Police say the husband was an ex-convict who shot before the two officers could draw but was killed by the felled officers.

"The family disturbance is one of the most dangerous calls we get because you never know what to expect," said Sgt. Bob Sivley of the Chattanooga Police Department, adding that 60 percent of all calls his department gets are for family disturbances.

"You don't know if you're going to find someone with a weapon or if they're going to use it. You just have to assume it's a dangerous call, think trouble and be alert."

Chattanooga claims but a small part of national domestic warfare and police everywhere know its danger. In New York, Officer Rober Shack says, "I always assume the man is armed."

The battlefields across the country encompass all economic and social levels; they are tenements, penthouses and suburbs. The combatants are husbands and wives, boyfriends and girlfriends — and sometimes police.

According to FBI statistics, about 40 times a day a policeman is injured while investigating a disturbance. About three times a day a policeman is shot while responding to a disturbance call. One is killed answering a disturbance call almost twice a month.

Disturbance calls include family quarrels, man with a gun, bar fights and other situations short of major crime. Law enforcement experts say the family quarrel is often the big one.

"If you could look behind all the murders and assaults, you'd see family quarrels," said Bill Ellingsworth, public affairs director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

According to the FBI, more policemen were shot, stabbed, assaulted or otherwise injured while responding to family quarrel and other disturbance calls than in any other situation.

Of the 49,079 injuries suffered by police in 1976, 15,448 came from disturbance calls. Of the 2,768 policemen shot on duty, 1,034 stemmed from family quarrels and other disturbances.

In 1977, 93 policemen were killed in the line of duty, and the most lethal situation, which claimed 22 lives, was the dis-

Rampaging Bull Shot By Police

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — A black bull made an hour-long dash through the city Tuesday, frustrating police, denting cars and chasing several amateur motorists. Authorities eventually killed the 1,500-pound animal with 28 shotgun blasts.

Sgt. Robert Starbuck said "many citizens ran out in front of him, trying to block him." Others tried to contain the bull with their bare hands, he said. No injuries were reported.

A posse of seven officers on motorcycles, many more in patrol cars and some on foot pursued the bull for at least one mile.

The animal leaped over a 5-foot wall near a building just south of the downtown area and raced through the ground floor of a parking garage. It dented several cars, including a police vehicle.

As a result of the inherent dangers in the family quarrel, many police departments give special training in handling domestic disturbances. They may have crisis teams and social workers and often refer family members to counseling and other social service agencies.

In Wheaton, Ill., the police have a social service division of civilian employees who work as crisis intervention teams. In New York City's 30th Precinct in upper Harlem, police refer willing families to a Community Dispute Center for counseling.

But it is still a dangerous business. And still, it is the cop on the beat who makes the first contact with angry people, who takes the big risk and can often douse the fire or fan the flame.

The typical case is the argument between a couple. Maybe he hasn't paid the rent. Maybe he's running around. Maybe she is. Maybe it's the kids. Often they both are drunk. Often she calls the police and wants him out. Sometimes a neighbor calls.

Typically, two officers respond. They stand to the side and knock on the door. They separate the parties and try to calm them.

"It can be a very volatile situation, especially if you're not prepared, and many aren't because there is that respect for the home as the castle," said William T.

Dean, with the bureau of operations and research for the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"Sometimes with an officer there, the woman becomes more abusive of her husband," he said. "Sometimes the people who were fighting each other, join forces against the officer who is now an intruder."

"If an arrest is to be made, the man may turn on the officer. Or the woman turns on the officer who is making the arrest."

Officer Shack tackles quarrels and beefs in New York's 30th Precinct, which has one of the highest family disturbance rates in the city. It was running one a day in June.

"Family disturbances are tough to deal with and you can trigger trouble and definitely get hurt," said Shack, who adds his own gun is never out but is always ready.

He never allows a door to be opened in his face. "because you don't know what's behind it." If there's a knife or baseball bat around, he swiftly removes them.

And he talks, and he listens. "It's all in your attitude," says Shack. "You can't take sides. You have to be sympathetic, but you can't be weak."

"And you've got to treat them with dignity. You can't let a man feel degraded. They are acting like children, but you can't treat them that way. After all, kids can be dangerous."

Consumer Agency Criticized For Inefficiency By GAO

By JEFFREY MILLS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The agency responsible for protecting the public from hazardous products takes so long to act that consumers can be harmed in the meantime, a new government study says.

The report Tuesday by the General Accounting Office said that the Consumer Product Safety Commission:

—Failed to insure that all of some banned hazardous products were either taken off the market or bought back from consumers.

—Took far longer to formulate such corrective actions as recalls than its own regulations allow.

—Made the regulations affecting several products less effective than they might have been partially out of a desire to soften the burden costly product recalls impose on business.

Commission spokesman Dick Brasie said the criticisms are out of date. "We had problems and we corrected them. This is an old matter," he said.

He said the agency has doubled its compliance staff — the employees charged with carrying out such commission actions as recalls — since the incidents discussed in the report.

The GAO, which has similarly criticized the product safety commission in earlier studies, focused on two situations in the latest report but used the new material along with previous findings in drawing its conclusions.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission has been slow in identifying hazardous products and alerting the public of their dangers. Recalls have not been successful," the report said.

The two situations detailed in the report are a recall program involving some models of smoke detectors and bans on two types of products containing asbestos.

The smoke detectors, manufactured by BRK Electronics of Aurora, Ill., were found to be a possible fire hazard.

The commission learned in February 1976 that six of the smoke detectors had caught fire but the recall did not take effect until almost a year later.

Partially responsible for the delay was a five-month period in which the commission and the company were trying to agree on a press release announcing the recall, the GAO said.

Meanwhile, the report noted, several more of the smoke detectors ignited.

Although commission regulations require the staff to forward proposed corrective action plans to the commission for approval within 30 days from the date the case was opened, this case took 134 days to reach the commission," the GAO said.

Even after the recall was ordered in January 1977, the commission failed to effectively get the product out of the hands of consumers, the GAO said. Only 37 percent of the 116,000 defective smoke detectors were returned, the report said.

The government investigators said they reviewed 28 recall cases and found that in one case none of the recalled merchandise was bought back and in three other recalls an average of only 8.5 percent was repurchased.

The report said the commission in 1977 banned 28 types of products under the Federal Hazardous Substances Act, but that as of May 1, 1978, the agency still did not know how many individual items were involved in the recalls or how many had been turned in.

Most products banned or subject to recall under the law "were not being recalled and continued to be in the possession of consumers and available for sale," the report said.

The GAO also said the commission was slow in banning two consumer products containing asbestos, which has been linked to various types of cancer.

The commission first became aware that several products posed an asbestos hazard in 1973 but did not issue a ban on any items containing the substance until 1977, "and it did not require the recall of products previously sold to consumers," the GAO said.

In the asbestos cases, the commission decided to use a regulatory procedure that did not require recalls. One reason for this approach, the report said, was that the commission believed "this action would not unduly burden manufacturers, distributors and retailers with costly product recalls."

Zaire Receives Promise Of Aid

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Zaire today received first tentative pledges of emergency aid after the central African nation agreed in principle to international control over its shattered economy in return for a $1 billion salvage plan.

Representatives of 10 nations meeting here to rescue the former Belgian colony's economy began promising assistance to ease its most pressing needs for food, fuel, medical aid and industrial equipment.

Belgium and Canada and a delegation of the nine-nation European Community's executive commission made the first offers this morning, conference sources reported.

The United States, Italy, France and Britain said they were waiting for more information before making any firm commitments at the conference, which ends later today.

Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko agreed to foreign controls over his central bank and finance ministry in exchange for more than $1 billion to bail out his economy.

Mobutu is already receiving foreign military assistance. He has a pan-African peacekeeping force stationed in the eral-rich Shaba province to guard against any fresh invasion and prevent an exodus of whites, vital to the mines which provide most of Zaire's income. The African troops replace French and Belgian soldiers flown in last month to rout secessionist guerrillas who briefly occupied the strategic copper mining center of Kolwezi and massacred black and white civilians.

The plan to bolster Zaire's economy and reduce official corruption and inefficiency won preliminary approval at a conference Tuesday of representatives of Mobutu, the United States, Belgium, France, Britain, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Canada, Iran, Japan, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the Common Market executive commission.

The plan must be approved by the various governments and the international organizations before it can be put into operation.

Under the plan, an International Monetary Fund official with his own foreign staff will be principal director of the Bank of Zaire and monitor all operations particularly international money transfers.

Another foreign official will fill an executive post in the Zaire finance ministry and exercise significant powers.

Zaire would get $960 million in investment capital over several years, emergency aid within three months and an undisclosed amount of additional foreign aid, presumably in grants and credits.

European representatives at the meeting said while they did not wish to violate Zaire's 18 years of independence, the near-chaotic African nation would have to submit to economic discipline to get substantial new aid.

Sources in Kinshasa, Zaire's capital, say the foreign governments and international agencies also want Mobutu to curb the official corruption that is rampant in his government and to improve the welfare of his country's 26 million people.

The sources said that because of the invasion of the Kolwezi copper and cobalt mines by anti-Mobutu exiles last month, Zaire's exports this year will be cut $300 million and will total only about $1 billion. The government's foreign debt totals about $2.8 billion and it is more than $300 million behind in payments on the interest and principal.

Economists say unless Zaire gets the aid Mobutu seeks, Zaire's inflation will increase from 70 to 150 percent, there will be commodity and food shortages, factory production will decrease, unemployment will rise, and there will be pressure on the government to increase wages by printing more money.

Estes, Attorney Set Meeting With Feds

DALLAS (AP) — Paroled West Texas ex-financier Billie Sol Estes and his attorney G. Brockett Irwin were to meet with attorneys from the U.S. Justice Department here today, Irwin said Tuesday but declined to say what would be discussed.

"We've got a lot of work to do tonight but I don't know what we're going to talk about," the Longview attorney said Tuesday night.

The meeting was suggested by the Justice Department. My client and I are always ready to meet with the Justice Department."

Irwin said Estes had requested meetings with the Justice Department on several occasions and that federal attorneys were responding to those requests.

Irwin denied he and Estes were in Dallas to plea bargain with federal attorneys over fraud indictments rumored against Estes.

"We are not plea bargaining," Irwin said.

U.S. Attorney Kenneth J. Mighell of Dallas denied Tuesday night that such a meeting with Irwin and Estes would take place today.

"I do not have a meeting with Billie Sol Estes," he said.

Mighell also declined comment on the status of a federal grand jury currently meeting in Dallas. However, the U.S. Attorney's office has confirmed that a grand jury is investigating Estes' alleged business shenanigans since his parole from federal prison in 1971.

Estes said the federal government was preparing criminal cases against him and prosecutors were attempting to "blackmail" him into pleading guilty to avoid the involvement of his family in possible prosecution.

Auto Mishap Kills Woman

PLAINVIEW (Special) — A 79-year-old Hereford woman died Tuesday several hours after she was injured in a two-car collision at the intersection of Highway 87 and FM 788, about three miles north of here.

Grace Elizabeth Roberson died about 5:45 p.m. Tuesday at Central Plains General Hospital here. The mishap occurred about 10:40 a.m.

Mrs. Roberson was eastbound on 788 when her car and a vehicle driven by Maudie Marie Vinduska of Marion, Kan., collided, according to the Department of Public Safety. The Vinduska car was southbound on Highway 87, investigators said.

Estes said the federal government is considering indictments for fraud, mail fraud, interstate transportation of stolen property and violation of IRS laws, including conspiracy to conceal assets.

The former promoter, now 52, was convicted on mail fraud charges in the early 1960s after his fertilizer tank empire collapsed.

He served six years in prison before being paroled.

Conditions of the parole, which lasts until 1981, forbid him from engaging in any form of promotion or self employment.

The latest round of allegations against him reportedly resulted from the sale of industrial steam cleaners.

"We've been meeting like this for weeks and weeks," Irwin said Tuesday night. "But I don't think it would be appropriate to discuss what we are going to talk about."

Services for Mrs. Roberson will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at Rose Chapel of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home in Plainview with the Rev. Merle Weathers, a retired Baptist minister, officiating. The Rev. Doug Manning, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Hereford, will assist.

Burial will follow in Rest Lawn Memorial Park Cemetery in Hereford under direction of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Mrs. Roberson married O. B. Roberson Feb. 12, 1916 in Hereford.

Survivors include a daughter-in-law, Louise Roberson of Hereford; a sister-in-law, Mrs. W. A. Smith of Amarillo; a brother-in-law, Doc Roberson of Hereford; a granddaughter and two great-granddaughters.

Explosives Theft Charges Filed

HUNTSVILLE (UPI) — A 19-year-old oilfield worker charged with stealing 800 pounds of explosives from a Louisiana seismicographic firm was arrested without incident outside a nightclub early today.

Police said John Mark Shotwell, 19, of Huntsville, described in a four-state alert Saturday as armed and likely to resist, was arrested at 1:39 a.m. on a Louisiana warrant charging felony theft.

Capt. Dennis Johnston said officers acting on information supplied by a hitchhiker recovered explosives from scattered locations, including a wooded area near Interstate 45 south of the city.

U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents said they might charge Shotwell, who allegedly stole "high-powered dynamite" and blasting caps from Grant Geophysics, Inc., of New Iberia, La., beginning as early as last February.

Johnston said a hitchhiker Shotwell had given a ride called police late Tuesday and described the car Shotwell was driving. Officers then found the vehicle at a nightclub.

A rifle was found in the car floor, Johnston said. Search of the trunk was delayed pending arrival of ATF bomb experts because of a fear it might be booby-trapped.

An ATF spokesman, who said the explosives theft had been discovered last week by the Louisiana firm for which Shotwell had worked, said a total of 110 pounds of explosives had been recovered by dawn today.

Brutality Hearings Set

HOUSTON (AP) — A public hearing on allegations of police brutality will be held in Houston in December by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, the Houston Chronicle's Washington bureau reported today.

public interest groups will be asked to testify in Houston.

Four former Houston policemen were indicted by a federal grand jury earlier this month on charges of violating the civil rights of a Louisiana teen-ager who was shot to death last year after a high speed chase with police. A similar case involving a Houston youth also is under investigation.

A spokesman was quoted as saying hearings on a National Police Project will be held by the independent fact finding commission Dec. 4-5 in Philadelphia and Dec. 11-12 in Houston.

The commission monitors civil rights developments but has no enforcement authority. The police project is to lead to a report and recommendations to the White House and Congress.

The spokesman said police officials, private citizens and representatives of Three other former policemen were convicted in March on federal charges of violating the civil rights of Joe Campos Torres, who drowned while in police custody last year. The Justice Department is appealing the sentences of one year in prison and 10 years probation assessed by U.S. District Judge Ross N. Sterling.

Soviet Defector, Family Continue To Fight System

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN
MOSCOW (UPI) — Crewman Valentin Agapov made a painful decision in November 1974 as his Soviet fishing ship pulled into Stockholm.

It earned him the wrath of the Soviet government and it sent his family to war against an emigration system that has defeated his mother, wife and daughter at every turn.

Agapov jumped ship, automatically becoming a traitor to the Soviet fatherland and opening a struggle by his family that has run from the dramatic to the pathetic.

Attempts to get support in the West have become so frequent that the Agapovs are no longer considered important news in Moscow. The Agapovs often call Western reporters to witness their demonstrations, which have ranged from simple protests to a suicide attempt by his mother.

The Agapovs are marked people in the Soviet Union.

Valentin Agapov's 68-year-old mother, Antonina, is considered unbalanced after her attempt to kill herself by drinking cleaning fluid. Now she talks of setting herself on fire in a public place in a last violent attempt to focus world attention on the family's cause.

Valentin's wife, Lyudmila, 39, says she is constantly followed by plainclothes policemen and has dropped out of sight several times in an attempt to regain her privacy.

Daughter Liliya, 13, has been drawn into the cause, carrying protest signs and making representations to the Swedish Embassy in Moscow.

Why is the Soviet Union keeping the three women in the country against their will? What possible threat could they cause should they be given exit visas? One theory is that the Soviet Union is not interested in punishing the women at all — but that the authorities feel it is the best way to punish defector Valentin. Soviet society has little time or sympathy for defectors. Indeed, defection by the rank-and-file seems one of the unforgivable sins against the Soviet state.

The newspaper Leningradskaya Pravda wrote on the subject several years ago, explaining why a musician who had defected to Britain could not return home.

"A fatherland cannot be traded and exchanged when it is convenient," the newspaper said. "The native country is a holy thing."

There also seems to be support for the theory that the Soviet Union fears emigration permission for the Agapov women could encourage other defections.

At this stage the women seem to have abandoned formal applications and have moved into trying to shame the officials into giving them permission to emigrate.

They are currently placing their hopes on Sweden's King Carl Gustaf and Queen Silvia, who are visiting Soviet leaders (June 6-16), and on asking them to intercede. Earlier attempts to work through diplomatic channels have failed, as have a number of valiant, but doomed, airborne escape attempts.

Valentin Agapov said in Stockholm April 6 he arranged for a Swedish pilot to violate Soviet airspace with his small plane in an attempt to "rescue" the family.

The pilot made it into the Soviet Union, landed on a frozen lake, but flew off when he was approached by an unmarked car. Later he was arrested in Finland and charged with violating Finnish and Soviet airspace.

The family said it tried four times to meet the pilot, but failed.

If the appeal for help from the Swedish royal couple fails, it is certain that the three Agapovs will continue their frustrating battle to win emigration permission. And until that time, according to an earlier appeal to West German Chancellor for Helmut Schmidt, the family will continue to live what it called "a nightmare reality of horror."

"The country which is our motherland has become for us worse than a step-mother. We don't consider the U.S.S.R. our motherland anymore," the appeal said.

FNMA Hopeful Cites Opposition

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Like most people who tilt at windmills, Elliot Schneider came out second best in his race for a seat on the board of directors of Federal National Mortgage Association last month. Schneider, a Wall Street stock analyst and broker, who ran to add "backbone" to "Fannie Mae" in its running battle with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, is back at his desk searching for profits for himself and his clients.

We checked with him to find out if his two-month campaign was worth the effort and he said he really wasn't sure. "A lot of people at the meeting said it was," he said, "but it remains to be seen."

FNMA is a federally-chartered corporation that buys mortgages from bankers, to keep up a supply of new money in the housing market. The company is run by a board composed of 10 members elected by the stockholders and five appointed by the president. HUD has regulatory powers over the company — although there have been some reports recently that those powers may not be as clear as they were thought to be — and HUD secretary Patricia Roberts Harris has been trying to use her leverage to get more control over FNMA's mortgage-buying practices.

Schneider missed his goal by a couple of million votes, which isn't as much as it looks because FNMA has cumulative voting, which gives each share as many as 10 votes for any one candidate. He said he thinks his effort could play a part in bringing some changes to the company, if only in a reverse sort of way. "The management was against me because they didn't want an outsider on the board," he said, "so they had to make some promises to big institutional shareholders to get their votes. I don't have any reason to think they won't live up to the promises, but only time will tell. People who opposed management also were against me, because they wanted to get their own people in."

Most of all, he said, "I think I made the shareholders aware of what they could do, and I think management will be hearing more from shareholders. I think I made management more aware, too."

After the shareholders meeting, at which the management was returned to office, FNMA raised its dividend 12 percent to an annual rate of $1.16 a share. Schneider, who had urged a dividend hike, said he thinks the increase could have been a little bigger, but that the difference isn't that important.

His mini-crusade over, Schneider said it's time to get back to tending his business. "The worst part," he said, "is that whenever I'm out of the office for a few days, it takes me about three weeks to get back into the insanity that is Wall Street."

There are times when corporations seem to fall over themselves in an effort to be all things to all people. In its report for 1977, for example, U.S. Steel Corp. said it had profits of $1.66 per share of common stock. A recent analysis of that report, though, contends that the figure probably should have been around 70 cents a share and that Big Steel — and other companies that follow the same practices — may be hurting themselves with the higher figures.

The analysis is by the Quality of Earnings Report, which studies the accounting practices of corporations and tries to dig through them to more "realistic" figures. Co-authors Robert Olstein and Thornton O'Glove told us the accounting methods used by U.S. Steel, which result in different reports to shareholders and tax collectors, are typical of the practices of two out of three big corporations.

The difference in this instance comes from the deductions for depreciation of plant and equipment. U.S. Steel uses one method, called straight-line, for reports to stockholders and another, called accelerated, in tax returns. The idea is to save on taxes, but to present the best possible picture to the stock market, since accelerated depreciation reduces earnings more than straight-line does.

"The trouble is," O'Glove says, "that stockholders are being given a false impression that earnings are higher than they really are, because there isn't as much depreciation as there should be with today's rates of inflation. Later on, when the equipment actually has to be replaced, it's charged against profits, so the stockholders just give it all back."

There's more trouble, O'Glove adds, when the companies try to raise their prices and find they can't convince the government that their profits are shrinking, or when they have to negotiate with unions. "When do you admit it's time to stop overstating earnings when those earnings just don't exist?" he asks.

Moscow, Idaho, Named After Mountain, Not Capital Of Russia

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — The spring slush is gone from the chimney of Idaho that rises north to meet Canada.

Under the sun, a breeze wrinkles the wild iris and violets purpling slopes that tractors cannot reach on the rounded hills green with the midget plants growing most of America's dried peas.

It is plain why the first settlers in this lava basin west of the Rockies called it Pleasant Valley.

Then why is the capital of Pleasant Valley, a city of 18,000, named Moscow?

The immigrants who made America brought names like Paris, Berlin, Rome, London and Vienna. But there is no more direct link between Russia's capital and the dried pea-and-lentil capital in Idaho than in a man who made little liver pills and a man who became president, both being named Carter. Nyet.

Bart Niemyer, Asbury Lieuellen, O.H.P. Beagle, Thomas Tierney, Henry McGregor and the other town fathers a century ago named their place after nearby Moscow Mountain. And that little cousin of the Rockies was named after a Pennsylvania community and had nothing to do with Russia, say the people of Pleasant Valley, thank you, sir.

This Moscow may say something about America.

This Moscow has no Red Square.

Some of the fellows once painted the streets around Friendship Square red. But it had no more significance than when, recently, campus males at Moscow's University of Idaho began calling unthin coeds "Idahogs" and the girls of the potato state school countered by labeling the tubbier boys as "Idaspudding."

In Russia's capital the local university sits atop a hill overlooking the city. In this Moscow, the university does the same. End of similarity.

This Moscow has but one plain-clothed detective, Sgt. Sheldon Russell. He is wearing a flowered sportshirt but no tie, no jacket and no gun.

Muscovy's detective sits at a desk under a wall calendar decorated by a bird titled "Yellow-bellied Sapsucker." The policeman smiles.

"Oh, I'll carry a gun if need be. Had to draw a gun on a fellow I chased a couple of years ago. But when I leave the building, I'm not taking a weapon with me."

"Once I hunted. Now I enjoy going out in the woods with no desire to pursue and shoot the creature."

Moscow had a murder six years ago. But the detective is concerned because armed robbery now is on the rise: "We had three the past year — a fellow in a ski mask and with a gun sort of thing. Three armed robberies is much for Moscow."

He said, "A few years ago the university students demonstrated. They always told us in advance. They even told us they would be sitting down in Main Street and would expect us to arrest them. Cooperation. An educated citizenry."

"A little drugs, yes. Some burglary, but a peaceful Moscow."

In this Moscow, college students form 40 percent of the population. Moscow has letter carriers in short pants, house landscaping featured in magazines, Main Street book stores, architecturally manicured store fronts and college girls behind the counters.

Main Street also has a Pregnancy Counseling Service. A mental health clinic sits above the Chamber of Commerce.

This Moscow's Kremlin is a squat gray plastered building off Main Street. Supervisor William U. Smith sits in an office next to that of the parttime mayor and fingers a wallet-sized calculator on his desk.

"Actually I use a telephone more than the calculator," he said. "Moscow is a people town." He pushed the calculator aside.

The university is our most influencing factor. The campus sits on one side of Main Street and most of the houses are on the other side. Moscow's population is probably better educated than most. But we have problems.

"We are only eight miles from Poland, across the Washington State line. They'd like our business. Of course, it helps that Idaho's sales tax is less than Washington's."

Moscow's biggest problem is internal. Like other U.S. cities and towns, it is now engaged in the economic war between downtown businesses — the tax base — and the building of shopping malls on the outskirts.

Smith and his Muscovites have mustered $17 million from local, state and federal public and private treasuries to ease downtown traffic — Main Street at rush hour mixes herds of campus cars with logging trucks.

Moscow has decapitated its parking meters to ease downtown customer shopping. It has annexed land so it can regulate mall construction.

"There is not an unused store building on Main Street," Smith said. He moved a finger across an aerial map of Moscow. "But Sears, Penney's, and the Safeway are planning to move from downtown to the malls."

The city supervisor outlined growth plans. He tapped the calculator. He said the constant income of university dollars and farm produce — "Anyone who eats a dried pea or a lentil in America is helping Moscow" — will keep this city growing.

"There is no alternative to growth," he said. "But there is a price."

"Right now we have superb elk hunting and trout fishing just outside the city. Deer are seen even inside Moscow."

"Growth may push all that away," He shrugged. "But there is no alternative."

Up the hill, from the other side of Main Street, a university junior, Jim Wright, 20, looked down on Moscow.

"Some of the business types are student squeezers. A seedy, one-bedroom apartment, with a pullout bed, for $180 a month. But I like it here in Moscow."

"There's not much to do — a few movies and the beer halls. But you should see my home town," he said.

A beer, not vodka, is this Moscow's drink. Idaho law limits a town's number of bars. And the students stake out their favorites.

A University of Idaho student probably drinks his beer at the Garden Lounge, the Dispensary or the 650-seat Rathskeller — unless he is a forestry student for whom the Billiard Den is the saloon.

Washington State bans anyone under 21 in a bar. Idaho has an 18-year-old limit. So students from Pullman's Washington State University cross the border to Moscow and meet in Mort's Club and the Spruce.

"There's no real trouble in Moscow," Wright said. "Of course, a few years ago some of the Alpha Tau Omega sweatshirts had a party and two of them 'They took two chickens which had been undergoing experimental feeding. They then forced the chickens on beer and then they bit off the chickens' heads."

"And there is the annual Spring Round-up — when the police cart off a few dozen marijuana smokers. And sure, the Vandals, our football team, aren't really vandals; they don't win."

Retiree Lunches At Old Office

By EDWARD CRAIG
NEW YORK (UPI) — At the age of 90 Benjamin J. Levy would be forgiven if his step is somewhat unsteady, if his hearing needs mechanical aid, if he chuckles to himself at odd moments at some remembrance of things past.

How many men of his age still are able to make a trip to the office, even if it is only once a week and just to lunch with former co-workers?

Levy retired 12 years ago as a general partner of Salomon Brothers, the giant investment house where he spent virtually his entire working life. He bowed out regrettably, yet resigned that the pace of daily business was beyond him and room had to be made for those coming up.

Levy, or "B. J.," as he is more familiarly known, is one of the few remaining links to the old days on the Street. When he started in the financial district with the Salomon predecessor firm, he made $5 a week. His job for Ferd Salomon, father of the three founding partners, was office boy, which sometimes involved carrying a sandwich board advertising the firm's rates for borrowing money. The firm at that time was a simple money brokerage, a far cry from the international investment house it is today, with a net worth around the $200 million level.

Levy went to the company in 1903 when it worked out of a "hole in the wall" on lower Broadway, a short walk from the majestic office building it now occupies at One New York Plaza. The present location gives a magnificent view of New York Bay, though the hectic daily pace allows few there a chance to pause to enjoy it.

Levy's first job was with a woolen firm. Salary: $4 a week. Ferd Salomon needed a combination messenger-office boy and Levy applied for the job, more for the $1 raise than the prospect of a more interesting line of work. His education consisted of a grade school diploma and a year as a sub-freshman at City College of New York.

In 1910 the firm was incorporated by Salomon's three sons — Arthur, Herbert and Percy — as Salomon Brothers & Hutzler. The tail end of the corporate name referred to Myron Hutzler, scion of the Hutzler department store family of Baltimore. Hutzler died a generation ago and, with none in the family to carry on, the firm reverted to Salomon Brothers on moving to its present location in 1970.

Pevy was married in 1911 when he was making $35 a week.

"It was a good salary for a household but Mr. Salomon gave me a raise anyway," he recalls. His bride was Anna Cohn. There are two children, Murray and Bernice, four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Long before anyone else in the financial district, Salomon Brothers had a five-day week.

"There was no Saturday work because Ferd Salomon felt the day should be set aside for those who wanted to observe the Jewish sabbath," he says.

Sometimes the work day ended early. Levy remembers that he and others often would take the subway uptown to the old Polo Grounds to watch the New York Giants play baseball. The games started late in the day then, and there was no night baseball.

"And meat sandwiches cost three cents, lemonade two cents a glass and newspapers a penny," he reminisces.

In his day the books had to balance by closing time and if not, employees stayed on the job until they found any discrepancies.

"Mr. Salomon would give us supper money when we stayed late, and all the work was done by hand, without the aid of all the gadgets available today."

Robert Kennedy's Estate Remains Lively

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
MCLEAN, Va. (UPI) — When the famous die, their homes often become shrines to their memories, mausoleums where people speak in hushed tones and walk softly as they view the roped-off rooms that once were occupied by the mighty.

That is not what has happened to Hickory Hill, the 5 1/2-acre suburban Washington estate Robert F. Kennedy left 10 years ago on his last political campaign.

On a recent visit, it seemed alive as ever, resounding to the shouts of children and the sounds of dogs and horses.

The grounds, dominated by the big pre-Civil War manor house on the hill, are well kept but the place obviously gets plenty of use — a well-worn tree house perched in a tree next to the back patio, the big swimming pool at the bottom of a grassy hill in the rear, and tennis courts and a working barn to the sides.

Presiding over all this is Ethel Kennedy, now approaching her 50th birthday and still rearing the last of 11 children of the marriage that began 28 years ago.

This is no matronly widow, gone white-haired and stout as the world passes her by. In the halcyon days of the Kennedy clan, Ethel was as often seen playing touch football as either her husband or her president-to-be brother-in-law and she still keeps lean and fit with tennis and horseback riding.

In the pool house, the walls are plastered with photographs, some of Bobby and his political and athletic exploits, but just as many of Ethel in action on the tennis court and in other activities.

There may be touches of gray in the short hair, but she still has the girlish look and quick bright smile that made it hard to believe a decade ago she was the mother of 11 children.

The place still swarms with kids. At a recent awards ceremony (the Robert F. Kennedy journalism competition for coverage of news about the disadvantaged), there seemed to be as many youngsters as adults.

As may be par for the Kennedys, one of the boys was hobbling with a cast on his leg and several teenagers were in the tree house, launching each other and inviting all comers to join in swooping rides from the house to the pool on a precarious-looking trolley strung between trees.

And animals. At the awards reception, a herd of (one reporter counted seven) Labradors shambled through the crowd while a St. Bernard placidly watched the proceedings from the top of the hill.

The same week as the ceremony Hickory Hill had a pet show. The feature attraction was a circus elephant, which got away from its handlers and made an unscheduled tour of the grounds scattering the visitors before it was brought under control.

Mrs. Kennedy always has been friendly with news people, starting from the days when her husband was a Senate committee counsel and she, along with the reporters, spent long days listening to testimony in Capitol Hill hearing rooms.

At the journalism event, she mingled gaily with old friends, many now at the top of their profession, and warmly greeted the younger generation on hand to receive the prizes in the contest that was begun 10 years ago to honor her husband by news people who covered his political and governmental career.

The rest of the guest list showed the breadth of her acquaintance. Veterans Administration chief Max Cleland, Common Cause founder and former HEW Secretary John Gardner, former Senate rackets committee accountant Carmine Bellino and former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall were among several hundred guests who chatted around the pool.

But active as she has remained, Ethel Kennedy still has little taste for center stage. When the time came to present the RFK Awards, it was Sen. Edward Kennedy who made the short speech of tribute to the winners.

Mrs. Kennedy handed the plaques and bronze busts of Robert Kennedy to them with a smile and a quick word to each.

OMB Cites Closed Meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-nine percent of the meetings of federal executive agencies in the first five months of this year were totally or partially closed to the public, the Office of Management and Budget said this week.

OMB Director James T. McIntyre told a Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee that 16 of the 47 agencies covered by the report held all their meetings open, while six closed all their meetings.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the subcommittee and chief author of the Government in the Sunshine Act, which promotes open meetings of federal agencies, called the statistics disturbing.

"We have seen so many tortured interpretations of the act's key provisions that I'm beginning to think that we have an excess of paranoid commissioners and far too many general counsels out there with over-active imaginations," Chiles said.

Resistance by the federal agencies to open meetings "is inconsistent with the overwhelming intent of the law to open up the whole decision-making process to the public," Chiles added. "This pervasive attitude is also inconsistent with the president's own stand on openness and accountability in government."

McIntyre noted that President Carter sent a letter to all department and agency heads last week directing them to respect the Sunshine Act "by opening to the public as many meetings as possible."

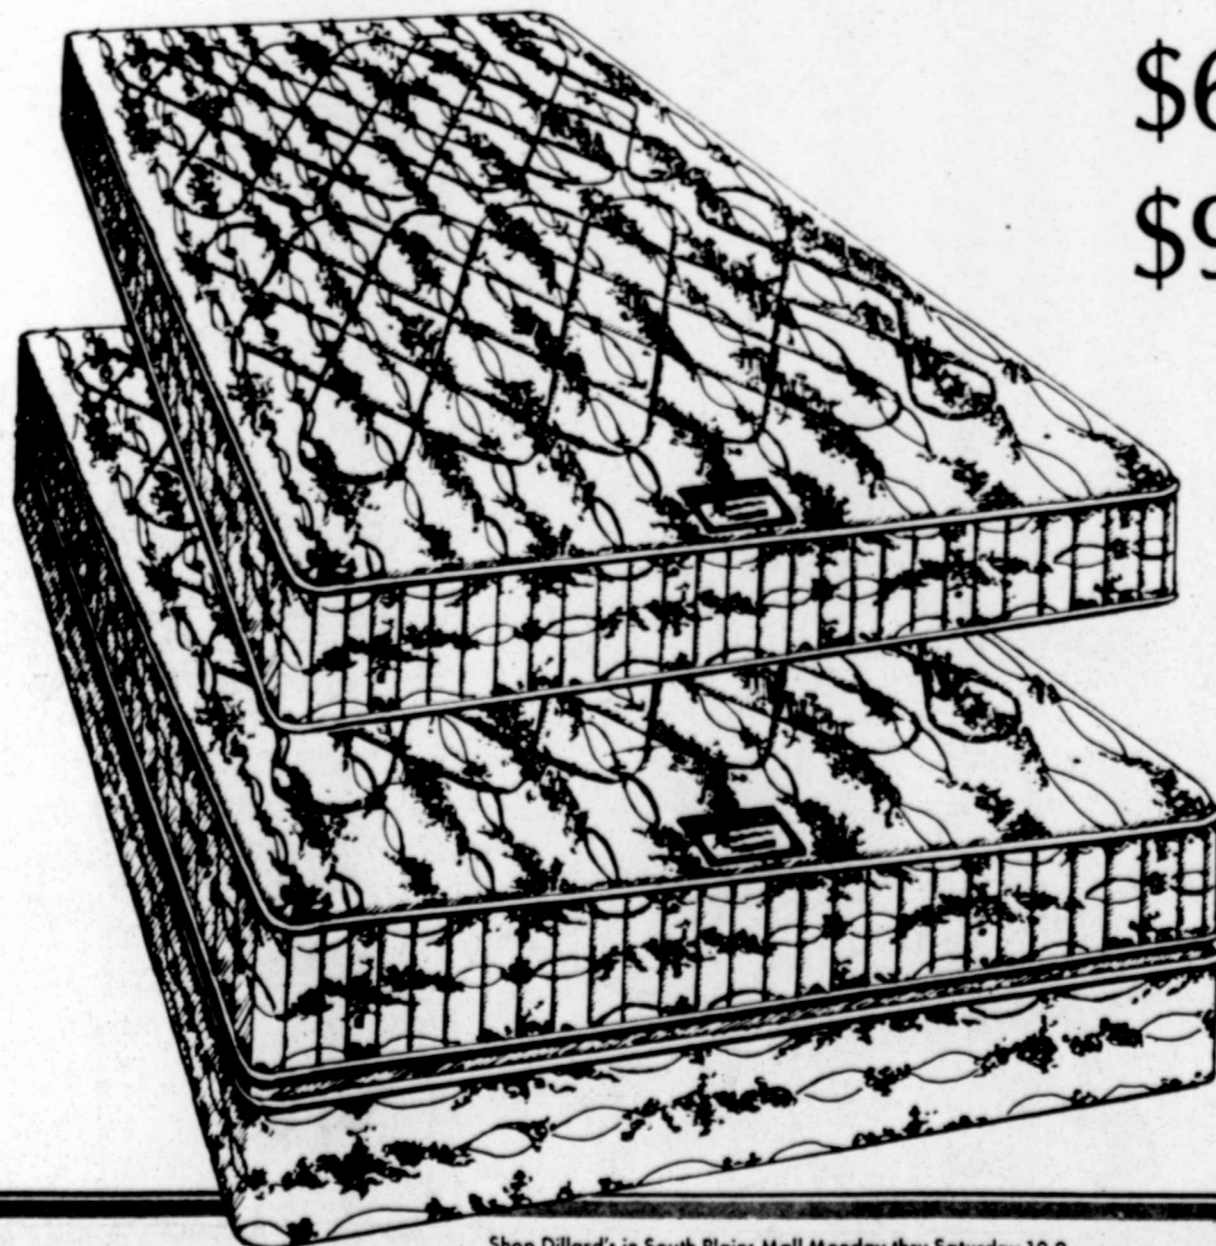

Carter also said the attorney general would not be allowed to defend in court "the closing of any meeting (by any agency) unless they can demonstrate that harm would have resulted if an open meeting had been held."

Although the agencies have a long way to go toward open meetings, McIntyre said, they are doing better than was recorded in a similar report for a four-month period in 1977.

While 51 percent of the meetings were open to then public during the first five months of 1978, only 37 percent were open during the survey period last year. While 39 percent were closed last year, the figure was down to 23 percent this year.

When a portable electric drill is rated as one-quarter inch, it does not refer to the size of the bit it will hold, but to the size of the bit's shank. Thus, a half-inch bit with a quarter-inch shank will fit a quarter-inch drill.

Technology Challenges Nature's Gem Monopoly

By ROBERT LOCKE
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — From diamonds to turquoise, gemstones are among the most coveted of nature's treasures. Now technology is challenging nature's monopoly.

Radiation can change the color of diamonds and topaz. Chemicals can deepen the lustre of turquoise and jade. Heat and pressure can produce artificial rubies and emeralds. And, says gem expert George R. Rossman, manmade crystals can be created to masquerade as diamonds and other expensive stones.

The changes and imitations may be permanent and virtually flawless imitations of nature, says Rossman, an associate professor of mineralogy at the California Institute of Technology. "In many cases, there's no way to tell which is natural and which is synthetic" without sophisticated laboratory tests.

But Rossman warns some changes are merely temporary improvements which will fade to the commonplace in a few months or years.

Rossman says radiation can change clear topaz into more expensive brown imperial topaz, but "put a piece in the California sunlight for two days and it will revert to absolutely colorless."

Radiation also can transform a drab mineral called spodumene into a brilliant green gem, he says. But the gem becomes spodumene again when exposed to light.

"It's buyer-beware time," says George Kramer of Los Angeles, assistant director of the American Gem Society, a jewelers' trade group. "The consumer cannot protect himself because you can't tell just by looking."

Rossman agrees: "The consumer is helpless. He is at the mercy of the retailer. But fortunately, in most cases, the retailer himself has his reputation to protect. The gem industry — the reputable gem industry at least — is deeply concerned about this."

Kramer says, "Most jewelers are not out to bilk the public, but there is the danger of misrepresentation."

"The consumer has to be very, very careful. He has to ask a lot of questions and he has to be satisfied with the answers."

Both Kramer and Rossman say the most helpless consumer is someone with only a few hundred dollars to spend.

"If you're considering the purchase of a half-million-dollar stone," Rossman says, "then you'll be willing to pay several hundred dollars or whatever it is to have a professional gemologist go over it."

"But these tests are expensive. If a person is buying a ring from your local jeweler for a few hundred dollars ... then nobody in his right mind would have it checked out because the cost of the measurements would be more than the cost of the stone."

The careful and informed buyer, however, can find some real bargains among the well-made imitations, as long as he knows what he's getting, Rossman says.

"It depends on what you're after," he says. "If you're after something pretty ... these synthetic materials give you every bit as much beauty (as the real thing) and at a fraction of the cost."

Besides, he says, "There's really no such thing as a completely natural gemstone. ... As they come from the mine, stones are cleaned and cut and polished. That's one type of alteration the public finds acceptable."

Altering gemstones is hardly a new idea.

But modern technology, he says, has greatly enhanced the ability to transform the color ... to something more esthetically pleasing and presumably capable of being sold at a higher price and greater profit."

The trick is to mimic and accelerate nature. The natural heat, pressure and radiation that, over millions of years, produces gems in the earth can often be duplicated by a technician in a few minutes or hours, Rossman says. In fact, the process may work too well.

"One of the problems that manufacturers of synthetic emeralds were having was that their synthetics were more perfect than natural emeralds," he says.

PBS Examines Rosenberg Case

By DANIEL F. GILMORE
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In what may prove to be a clamorous reopening of a controversial subject, Public Broadcasting Service will televise an update of the Rosenberg spy case on Monday.

The date is the 25th anniversary of the execution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg on charges of atomic espionage for the Soviet Union.

"The Rosenberg-Sobell Case Revisited" is a 90-minute rerun of "The Unquiet Death of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg," a prize-winning PBS program four years ago, with an update commentary based on new documentation obtained from the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act.

Morton Sobell was a codefendant who is now free after serving 19 years of a 30-year prison sentence.

Alvin H. Goldstein, who produced the original 1974 program as a reporter for the National Public Affairs Center for Television, did the commentary for the introduction and epilogue for the new program produced by PBS affiliates WETA in Washington and KTCA in St. Paul-Minneapolis and given a media preview this week.

Goldstein said the first program was incomplete for lack of documentation.

"Now, an estimated 10 percent — 100,000 FBI pages — have been released," he said. "For the most part they are filled with the minutiae of hearsay FBI investigation ... They neither confirm nor deny the guilt or innocence of the Rosenbergs and Sobell."

Goldstein said government prosecutors claimed there was "evidence, not usable in court, showing the Rosenbergs were the head and center of an espionage ring," but none of this showed in any of the documentation he saw.

However, UPI has learned that at least one official directly concerned with the case is trying to make public still-secret files which he says will "further prove" the Rosenbergs were guilty of what Judge Irving R. Kaufman said at their sentencing was "a crime worse than murder."

"What we did find," Goldstein said, suggested:

— "The Rosenbergs were viewed and used as weapons in a raging cold war ..."

— "Parts of testimony against them were as much constructed by the government as remembered by witnesses."

— Kaufman, Chief Justice Fred Vinson and Attorney General Herbert Brownell acted improperly in blocking appeals and stays of execution.

Israel Army Trains Women As Tank Instructors

By MICHAEL PRECKER
AN ARMY BASE, Southern Israel (AP) — Iris, her attractive features obscured under a battle helmet, drove the 50-ton Centurion tank, while Zmira and Irit stood in the turret behind the big gun. Inside, Anna had just finished checking the oil.

They were demonstrating the expanding role of women in the Israeli army, but only for photographers and safely away from hostilities.

To offset a shortage of tank commanders, Israel's army began three months ago to train women as classroom instructors for male tank corps recruits.

"This will free more male commanders for the front," a male officer explained. "They'll get better experience there than in the classroom."

"I was in the army a month when they told me I'd be a tank driver," said 19-year-old Iris, who noted she has no civilian driver's license. "I'm proud of myself that I can do it."

Actually, the two dozen women who comprise the first female group will not drive tanks. They will teach such topics as optics, machinery and ballistics to soldiers who will go on to train in tanks.

But to submerge themselves completely in the subject, the women learned to Federal Court Cites Labor Impropriety

WASHINGTON (AP) — In imposing a $10,000 fine against the AFL-CIO for violating federal campaign spending laws, U. S. District Court Judge George L. Hart says the organization's practice of transferring money between accounts gives the appearance of impropriety.

Hart ruled Monday in a suit filed by the Federal Election Commission, which accused the AFL-CIO of illegally transferring $392,500 from its general treasury to a fund that makes direct political contributions.

operate tanks on the dusty base terrain. Israeli censors prohibit naming the installation or giving its exact location.

On a practice spin for the benefit of reporters, the four-woman crew maneuvered around a dirt path and bounced over a steep rise similar to what a tank commander might find in the Egypt's Sinai Desert, most of which is occupied by Israel. The only casualties amid the clouds of dust were a skinned arm and a lost helmet.

"Very good," cracked a male tank driver watching the proceedings. "The country is much safer now."

After fighting side-by-side with men in the 1948 war of independence, women were relegated to noncombat status.

A report issued last February by a committee of parliament complained that women were eligible for only 210 of 700 army professions and usually served their country as clerks or secretaries.

Stung by the criticism, the army apparently is trying to show it is opening up new areas to women, so long as no danger is involved.

But parliament member Ora Namir, who headed the investigating committee, remains unconvinced. She said neither the army nor the government has responded to the report and its recommendations for upgrading the role of women soldiers.

"But maybe it did have some impact," Mrs. Namir added. "The army can make much better use of its women than it does now and it will give them a better feeling about their army service."

Iris agreed. "I'd sure rather do this than be in an office serving coffee," she said.

The officer in charge of the tank instruction program said women eventually may be better instructors than men, since the still-experimental project can select the best qualified women, while the best men are at the front.

Zmira added that she thought having women instructors would "push the boys to study. They'll think, 'She knows this and I don't,' and they'll work harder."

But the prospect of women facing Egyptians or Syrians across the frontier is still remote. Even on modern automated tanks, loading 60-pound artillery shells and squeezing a hand brake to stop a tank in battle is more than most women can bear, the officer said.

"I don't think we'll put women at the front, especially not in a war," he said. "But if you asked me three months ago if we'd even have girls in tanks at all, I'd have said no."

Nevertheless, as the officer spoke, a woman soldier served coffee.

Desai Snubs U.S. Nuclear Safeguards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Morarji Desai, "taking a position of national dignity" in refusing to accept U.S. and international nuclear safeguards, met again with President Carter this morning.

Desai walked across Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House from his Blair House guest quarters for his meeting. The long black limousine sent to fetch him trailed behind.

The Indian leader planned to speak to the National Press Club later today after his windup meeting with the president. He met with Carter on Tuesday and also with members of the foreign affairs committees of the House and Senate.

Desai and Carter spoke about the sensitive nuclear safeguards issue during their private, 25-minute meeting Tuesday. White House press secretary Jody Powell reported no details.

But after the meeting with congressional leaders at the Capitol, it was clear that Desai, the ascetic 82-year-old who led the restoration of Indian democracy, is not yielding to American pressure.

"He's taking a position based on national dignity, pleading the case that India should have the same rights as other nations," said Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., added that Desai was insisting that the United States honor its contract to supply nuclear fuel to India's Tarapur reactor until 1983.

Under a law passed by Congress earlier this year, the Carter administration will be forced to cut off nuclear fuel exports to India by 1980 unless India accepts international inspections at all of its nuclear facilities.

The law is supposed to help prevent the spread of nuclear weapons. It was prompted in part by India's explosion of a bomb in 1974, using nuclear material diverted from reactors and upgraded to explosive quality by Indian scientists.

The House International Relations Committee today approved the Carter administration's plan to continue sales of nuclear fuel to India.

On a voice vote, it rejected a resolution that would have blocked the transfer of 7.6 tons of uranium to India for its Tarapur power plant. The vote sent the resolution to the House floor with a committee recommendation of disapproval. The issue could be raised anew there.

flooded by the rain, most of which fell in about two hours.

The town has had 7.81 inches of rain since May 1, he said.

Area rain reports from Tuesday night and early today also included 1.44 at Matador, 1.02 at Silvertown, .94 at Floydada, .18 at Tahoka and .05 at Spur.

At Ralls, eight miles east of Lorenzo, 90 fell and at Crosbyton, 16 miles east of Lorenzo, only .32 was recorded. No hail was reported.

Partly cloudy skies and continuing hot and humid weather are forecast for today and Thursday.

Temperatures are expected to be in the low 90s today and Thursday and in the high 60s tonight.

Winds were predicted to be southerly at 15 to 20 mph per hour today and 10 to 15 mph and gusty near thunderstorms tonight.

Radar showed moderate to very heavy showers and thunderstorms at 7:30 a.m. today from near Briscoe in Wheeler County to 25 miles north of Guthrie, weathermen reported.

The storm was heaviest 25 miles west-southwest of Childress, weathermen said, and it was moving east at 10 to 15 miles an hour.

In New Mexico, scattered thunder-showers are forecast for the late afternoon and night in the southeastern plains and south central mountains.

Rain reports over Texas from Tuesday night included .09 at College Station and Galveston, 1.56 at Beaumont-Port Arthur, .06 at San Angelo, .49 at Houston and .04 at Childress.

Elsewhere in the nation, hot desert winds funneling through mountain passes and an eye-stinging layer of smog enveloped Southern California, but unseasonably cool temperatures chilled the northern states today.

The hot winds pushed afternoon readings to 100 degrees near Los Angeles Tuesday, sending thousands of persons to the beaches for a cooling plunge in the 64-degree surf. Lakes were jammed with boaters, water skiers and fishermen.

Temperatures ranged from 72 degrees in seaside Santa Monica to 89 degrees 15 miles inland at the Los Angeles Civic Center. Burbank recorded 96 degrees and Riverside 98. Palm Springs peaked at a sizzling 108 degrees. A 96-degree reading was recorded at Blythe during the night.

The winds faded late in the day, leaving a layer of smog over the metropolis. First-stage health advisories were called in San Gabriel San Fernando and Pomona-Walnut Valleys and in San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

The National Weather Service said temperatures in Southern California could be even warmer today.

In the northern states, however, clear skies and cool temperatures forced millions of persons to retrieve light coats stored for the summer months.

Readings in the 40s were common throughout the Great Lakes region and the upper Ohio Valley. Light frost was predicted in some areas.

ism?" defense attorney John Montford asked.

Adams indicated the alleged episode was a warning from the underworld.

"Does the syndicate operate here in Lubbock County?" the defense lawyer asked.

"Yes, sir, they do," Adams replied.

The defendant again said yes.

Adams — who said he had separated from his wife a few days before she was killed — said an apparent attempt had been made on either his, his wife's or both of their lives about a month before the fatal shooting incident at the massage parlor.

He testified that the auto in which the couple was riding was strafed with gunfire from another car, with bullets, according to the witness, striking the rear of the auto near the gasoline tank.

Pictures later taken of the car were admitted into evidence.

The defendant said he customarily stayed at the 34th Street massage parlor operated by his wife between about 5 and 9 p.m. for purposes of protection for his wife and employees when he was requested to do so by her.

Adams said his wife telephoned him about 2 p.m. May 19 and asked him to come to the business that day.

He indicated he walked in the front door and immediately heard gunshots. "I didn't see anything — I heard shots," Adams testified.

He said that as soon as he heard the shots, he went back out the door.

Adams painted a picture of the massage parlor as a place where services of prostitution were offered.

Mrs. Simmons had testified Adams entered the business and indicated he and Mrs. Adams had gone into a massage room while she sat poised near a telephone to call police in case there were trouble.

"I heard, 'Please, Roy, don't,'" she testified.

"How would you describe Brandy's voice?" asked Asst. Dist. Atty. Jim Darnell.

"Terrified," Mrs. Simmons stated.

Immediately after the plea was made, the witness said, there was a gunshot.

Mrs. Simmons said she was on the telephone to police in a different room of the building when Adams suddenly appeared at the door.

She said Adams shot her twice without ever speaking.

The witness, during a rugged cross-examination by Montford, said she did nothing but give massages at the parlor and had never engaged in prostitution or "hanky-panky" with anyone.

Mrs. Simmons said her salary, based on hours worked, ranged from $100 to $150 per week. She said the massage parlor job was the first one she had obtained after coming to Lubbock in late 1975.

She said her husband worked at odd jobs during the period.

At queries from Montford, Mrs. Simmons said she now lives in a $70,000 brick home, but said she is giving it up because it is "too expensive." She said she and her husband have a 1977 Cadillac which was new when it was purchased.

Lebanese Village Attacked

Franjeh stronghold. Twelve Phalangists and three Syrians also were killed before Syrian forces blasted the Phalangists from the town.

The Phalange Party said its forces attacked Ehdén because the Franjeh's militia refused to surrender the killers of a Phalangist leader last week. The two factions have been at odds since Syrian troops in Beirut cracked down on Christian troops in the Lebanese army and Christian militiamen in February, March and April. Three hundred persons died in the fighting, and Franjeh sided with the Syrians.

"The massacre ... shall be avenged by a war unto death," Franjeh told thousands of screaming supporters at his headquarters in Zagartha, another mountain town 12 miles southwest of Ehdén.

In southern Lebanon, U.N. forces took over 14 key positions along the southern frontier belt, six miles wide and 59 miles long, as the last Israeli forces pulled back across the border Tuesday.

The Christian militia commander in the area, Maj. Saad Haddad, said he agreed to the U.N. checkpoints and observation posts after the U.N. commander, Maj. Gen. Emmanuel Erskine of Ghana, pledged his men would prevent infiltration by the Palestinian guerrillas the Israeli invasion drove from the area.

Haddad warned that the Israelis might return if the peacekeepers failed to protect the Christians from guerrilla reprisals.

Erskine said the Lebanese government in Beirut told him Haddad "represents the legitimate authority in the south. We have no objections." But the government denied this and said it sent U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim a message protesting Erskine's statement.

A government statement said the Lebanese army command ordered Haddad and his 700 men to remain in their barracks until the arrival of an army brigade to take over his command. It said the U.N. force should take over the entire area vacated by the Israelis.

As the Israelis went home, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan charged that as many as 300 armed Palestinians already have returned to southern Lebanon. He cabled U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that this violated a U.N. commitment to keep the guerrillas out of areas relinquished by Israel.

Israel invaded Lebanon March 15, four days after a Palestinian raid in which 36 Israelis were killed on the Tel Aviv-Haifa highway. The Israelis occupied 500 square miles of southern Lebanon to create a guerrilla-free security belt along the border. They began withdrawing in response to a Security Council demand and completed the pullout after 91 days of occupation.

Los Angeles Woman Charged In $240,000 Welfare Fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who allegedly collected $240,000 in welfare overpayments by claiming to have 47 children is being sought in what county officials say may be the biggest case of welfare fraud in history.

"She was very professional and very sophisticated in her dealings," says fraud investigations director Michael Collins.

Officials identify the woman as Barbara Jean Thompson, 33. A woman believed to be Mrs. Thompson was seen driving away from her Ladera Heights home in an expensive sports car last Wednesday, shortly before authorities arrived with a search warrant, said Joan Manley, welfare fraud investigator for the county Department of Public Social Services.

An arrest warrant issued last Wednesday charges Mrs. Thompson with 13 counts of perjury and 10 counts of welfare fraud. Mrs. Manley said that during the past seven years Mrs. Thompson received checks at eight different addresses by using eight false identities documented by driver's licenses and Social Security cards.

Mrs. Thompson, who has four children, allegedly claimed a total of 47 children, investigators said, by documenting their existence with false birth certificates.

Authorities say she had lived for less than a year in a home that carries a $119,000 mortgage. A house in that neighborhood recently sold for $169,000. Authorities said Mrs. Thompson owned a Porsche, a Cadillac and a Mustang.

The two largest welfare fraud cases reported so far were prosecuted in Chicago.

Linda Taylor, 50, dubbed the "Welfare Queen" by Illinois investigators, was sentenced in May 1977 to two to six years in prison for theft and perjury in a case that officials say may have involved $150,000 in illegal payments. She was convicted on charges that involved $9,793.

Arlene Otis, 30, a graduate student in criminal justice at the University of Illinois, was indicted last April on 614 counts charging welfare theft of as much as $150,840 in Medicare and food stamps. She is being held in lieu of $200,000 bond pending trial slated to begin June 30.

In addition to welfare checks totaling $239,587.50, Mrs. Thompson also is alleged to have collected non-cash benefits — food stamps and medical services.

Collins said the six-month investigation into Mrs. Thompson's activities began when a routine computer screening found that two checks were being sent to the same address. An investigator was sent to the address and further computer searches were made.

"Additional cases kept popping up that looked similar," Collins said.

Mrs. Thompson's husband, Danny Williams, was arrested last week and booked for investigation of making false identification. Authorities said they found duplicating equipment and other items used in manufacturing fake identification in the home, which is in Williams' name, but he was released pending further investigation.

Also being investigated are the various friends and relatives to whose homes Mrs. Thompson's checks were sent, Mrs. Manley said.

Mid-Life Dangerous Time For Marriages

With the exception of couples who are emotionally disengaged from each other, and therefore relatively indifferent to their partner's changes, one person's growth will usually cause some disruption in the marital relationship. This is to be expected. What really matters in determining a couple's success or failure in letting each other grow is the extent to which they are neurotically dependent on one another.

Those who are so neurotically intertwined can usually ride through this decade fairly easily, despite their mutual changes, and then establish a new equilibrium in their 50s that will enable them to live out the remainder of their lives as close companions. The crucial factor is that "they don't push and they don't squeeze," says Dr. Ian Alger.

"For example, some women realize their husbands may be having affairs, but they aren't threatened by this. And it isn't necessary they confront the husband and make him feel guilty. On the other hand, if a man is able to accept his wife's having an affair or starting a new career, then the same thing may happen in reverse."

Mid-life marriages need not be destroyed when men and women begin to move in opposite directions. To the contrary, as each partner grows and changes in an effort to become more whole—the man by becoming more expressive, the woman more independent—their relationship is actually strengthened. Without such movement, in fact, both persons will stagnate and so will their marriage.

One solution to a stagnating marriage is for the husband to divorce and remarry. "Serial marriages," are the wave of the future, predicts Alvin Toffler, and that is the style many Americans have already adopted. Now such spits and matches are occurring increasingly during the middle years, and the evidence is overwhelming that these second marriages are usually better than the first ones. The explanation is quite simple, say the experts: People who remarry are more mature, experienced, and confident. They know themselves better, and are less likely to need excessive support or confirmation from a mate. They also tend to work harder at making the marriage successful.

Divorce is a common solution of marital woes today, and many men have already gone that route once, or twice, before they reach their 40s. But others are still struggling to hold together a relationship of 15 or 20 years duration.

This is not an easy task, especially for a generation of men and women who were taught that you grew up, got married, and lived happily (more or less) ever after. When dissatisfactions mount, as they do almost invariably at this stage of life, there is a tendency to blame the institution of marriage itself, as if the marital relationship were something fixed and immutable.

But the fact is that marriage is a process, a fluid relationship that assumes many different forms throughout the years, a relationship that is always either growing or deteriorating. Frequently, however, the terms of this contract have never been openly discussed.

Despite the fact that it is much more difficult to renegotiate an old marital contract than make a new one with someone else, this is the challenge facing mid-life couples who want to revitalize their relationship: To the extent that either of them has grown and changed, they will have to hammer out a new contract that accommodates these changes—a new bargain, based on old roots but purged of old rules.

Clearly we are already heading in this direction, as couples of all ages struggle to discover what suits them best. Embarked on a bold new experiment that our society has not yet fully sanctioned, such couples have discarded the approved script on how to play husband and wife in order to design marital bargains that mesh with their personal preferences.

We read about these novel arrangements, gossip about them with relish, and occasionally even meet friends or neighbors who have broken the old marital mold. But despite our assumption that such daring innovators are rare, more Americans than we might suspect are experimenting today with the myriad new ways of being married. The fact that over one million people have enrolled in marital enrichment programs or marital encounter groups, which are usually sponsored under conservative religious aspects, is one indication of this revolutionary trend.

More flamboyant choices aimed at loosening the bonds of matrimony include those made by couples who decide on open marriage, or sexual "swinging" or communal living. Other, less radical, innovations are being tried by the increasing number of husbands and wives who are commuting to work in separate cities during the week, while living together only on weekends.

And then there are those couples who, having rejected the standard stereotypes, are choosing to reverse roles. According to their agreement, the woman goes off to the office each day while the man stays to mind the kids. Or, in another version, both partners agree to divide the household chores, take turns with the children, and maybe even grant each other permission to enjoy separate vacations.

"Different strokes for different folks," as the saying goes. These are but a few examples of the ways in which couples today are rewriting the marital contract to suit their own individual needs, ignoring traditional rules that hamper their relationship and hinder their growth. Which is not to say revamping a marriage in mid-stream is easily accomplished. The barriers to change, substantial enough when a single individual is concerned, are greater still when they involve two persons. Moreover, this generation of mid-life men and women, having been victimized by the masculine and feminine mystiques, are likely to experience some soul-shattering conflicts as they struggle to replace conventional roles with more fluid desires and demands.

But difficult does not mean impossible. Despite the obstacles that chain people to the past, couples now in their middle years who want to re-invent their own marriage have ample resources available to help them. In addition to the growing number of marital counselors and therapists now practicing nationwide, growth centers, couples groups, and weekend marathons are becoming more widespread. Such group experiences provide couples with a unique opportunity to explore new ways of getting in touch with themselves and their mates, new ways of communicating and relating. And in the process they help to open their imagination to other possibilities, other patterns of being married.

Popular wisdom notwithstanding, it is only those over 40 who really know who they are, what they want, and how to get it. Maturity, it turns out, does have special rewards: It means possessing the courage and confidence to resign one's life, and one's marriage, to suit personal proclivities.

Mahon Seeks Hearings On Anti-Busing Bills

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
U. S. Rep. George Mahon of Lubbock says he has asked the House Judiciary Committee to conduct a hearing on proposed legislation that would prohibit court-ordered busing to integrate schools.

Mahon made the disclosure in a letter to Dana Vowell of We the People, a local anti-busing organization.

Two proposals to ban "forced busing" have been referred to the judiciary committee, the congressman said.

H.R. 4479, by Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., would override the authority of courts to order busing. This bill has been sent to the subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and administration of justice, Mahon said.

H.J. Resolution 456, by Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, is a proposed constitution-amendment. It has been put in the subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights. Unlike the McDonald bill, the amendment would have to be ratified by states to become law.

"As you know, the McDonald bill would deny the federal courts any jurisdiction in busing matters. I personally feel, as do many others, that the courts would deny such legislation unconstitutional," Mahon, 77, dean of the House, told Mrs. Vowell.

Nevertheless, Mahon added, "I have appealed to members of the judiciary committee to hold an exhaustive hearing on the McDonald bill."

The Lubbock Democrat could not be reached for comment. However, an aide said such a hearing at least would get discussion going on anti-busing legislation.

If during the hearing it became evident that the McDonald bill is indeed unconstitutional, the stage would be set for a hearing on the proposed anti-busing constitutional amendment, the aide said.

"As I've said in previous correspondence, I would vote to submit a constitutional amendment to the states for ratification if such a measure should come to the floor for a vote," Mahon told Mrs. Vowell.

In an earlier letter, Mahon stated, "I am opposed to forced busing to achieve racial balance." But he said he fears there is little he can do, and that an anti-busing constitutional amendment would take several years to ratify.

Mrs. Vowell said the latest letter appears "much more optimistic. Mr. Mahon seems to be saying that there is hope."

Mrs. Vowell said the legislation proposed by McDonald and Mottl "has been tied up in the judiciary committee for more than a year. They've just been sitting on it. Maybe Mr. Mahon's action will prompt the committee to hold hearings so that Congress can take action."

If the committee won't do anything, the bills' sponsors may force such action themselves, Mrs. Vowell said. She said both McDonald and Mottl have filed "discharge petitions" which — if signed by 218 of the 435 House members — automatically would move the legislation out of committee and onto the floor for a vote.

In a letter to Mrs. Vowell, Mottl said his petition already has 197 signatures. If just 21 more House members sign, Mottl said his House proposed constitutional amendment could come up for a vote within a month.

Mrs. Vowell said ratification of a constitutional amendment is "not necessarily a lengthy process. Six of the 26 amendments to the Constitution have taken less than a year to be ratified."

But Mahon, in his most recent letter, said he sees problems in forcing congressional action via a discharge petition.

"Members of Congress generally, and that includes myself, feel that this procedure is ineffective and usually does more harm than good. As I recall it, not a single bill has been enacted into law by this process during the last 15 years," Mahon said.

"A petition antagonizes the committee involved and usually damages the chance of passage of legislation."

That is why Mahon believes the House Judiciary Committee must be persuaded to hold hearings and move the legislation along regular channels.

Mahon will retire after this term, his 44th year in Congress. Both candidates for his seat — Democrat Kent Hage and Republican George Bush — say they support anti-busing legislation.

We the People, which is seeking a "peaceable, legal and legislative solution" to court-ordered busing, wants local public officials to go on record in support of the McDonald or Mottl legislation.

The group plans to present petitions next week to the Lubbock school board opposing Lubbock's court-ordered integration plan.

The Lubbock plan will involve busing about 2,600 elementary children and several hundred secondary students a day.

Armed Robber Hits Motel In Hub City

Police at noon were looking for an armed robber who reportedly made off with $300 from an eastside motel early today.

Robert Lee Dobbins, 41, night manager of Seven Acres Lodge at 2415 E. Broadway said he was asleep on a couch when a man knocked on the door and asked to buy cigarettes.

Dobbins reportedly opened the door and, after going to a back room to get the cigarettes, turned around to face a long-barreled blue-steel revolver.

The clerk reportedly handed over $75 of his own cash and $225 belonging to the motel.

The robber was described as a black man, 18-25 years old with red-tinted eyes.

Bob Cope of 3119 42nd St. told officers someone got through a back door at that residence Tuesday and made off with two televisions, valued at a total $1,300.

According to Judy Kay Phillips of 4313-A 53rd St., whoever broke out a window to unlock a door at her home Tuesday stole a $550 television and a half-gallon of ice cream.

Michael Dean Daniel said two revolvers were stolen from his 5433 42nd St. home during the past two weeks. Reports indicated no sign of forced entry was found.

A woman found sitting by the side of Southeast Drive early Tuesday was in serious condition today in the intensive care unit at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

About 3:30 a.m., passersby found the nude woman, the victim of an apparent assault, sitting on the edge of the pavement and said she appeared to be in a trance.

Before the 24-year-old Brookridge woman, who was visiting a relative here, was taken to the hospital, police had found an abandoned car, which appeared to have been forced off the road, in the same area.

Inside the auto, officers found the woman's clothing, some of which reportedly was torn.

An emergency room nurse reportedly was able to get the woman's name and the victim said that all she could remember was leaving a club in the 4700 block of 4th Street and starting for home.

Doctors said the woman's injuries did not appear to be inflicted by a weapon. Laboratory tests were being performed to determine if the woman was sexually abused.

In a recently reported burglary, Camille Ranson of Route 5, Box 176 B-3, Lubbock, told sheriff's deputies someone took more than $1,500 from her home, including two shotguns, a stereo system, an apartment and a cassette tape player.

Jewelry valued at about $3,000 was taken from Jerry Wayne Gibbons' car Tuesday night, while it was parked in the driveway of his 2107 52nd St. home, according to reports. Gibbons said that about 1 a.m. he heard a noise outside and turned on a light that apparently scared the burglar off, but not before the burglar made off with most of the jewelry.

Burglars who broke a window at the Chat King restaurant at 40th Street and Avenue O took about $100 in change from a cigarette machine and an undetermined amount of cash from a juke box, according to manager Debra Stafford of 1303 65th Drive, No. 26. Miss Stafford said it would cost about $115 to replace the window.

Rick Greer of 4002 50th St. said whoever pried a vent window of his car, while it was parked at 4600 68th St., got away with goods totaling about $300, including a .357-caliber pistol and baseball equipment.

Insufficient Experience Stops Anita

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
ATLANTA (AP) — Anita Bryant's lack of denominational experience with the Southern Baptists, and not her crusade against homosexuality, was seen as the reason she lost a bid for a top post in the nation's largest non-Catholic Christian denomination.

"Our people just felt she was not as well-equipped for the job," said the Rev. Jimmy Allen of San Antonio, re-elected Tuesday to a second one-year term as president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

She said her loss in the election for the convention's first vice presidency did not imply repudiation of her fight against homosexual rights laws.

He pointed out the convention praised Miss Bryant for her campaign a year ago, and she also got a rousing reception at her appearance before the Pastors' Conference prior to the current meeting, the largest Southern Baptist gathering in history.

But the "messengers" decisively rejected her candidacy Tuesday, casting 6,807 votes for the winner, the Rev. Doug Watterson of Knoxville, Tenn., to 3,273 for the singer. (Watterson is a former Dallas pastor.)

Whatever the reasons, the loss cost her a powerful platform from which to pursue her plans to expand her fight against homosexuality, a drive that already has resulted in repeal of homosexual rights legislation in several cities.

With a record-breaking 21,290 people registered for the convention and others still arriving, this Southern Baptist assembly was the biggest since the denomination was founded in Georgia 133 years ago.

They adopted their biggest national "Cooperative Program" budget — $75 million for the ensuing year compared to $63.4 million for 1977-78 — and also began shaping strategies for their goal of evangelizing the whole world by the century's end.

Receipts for Southern Baptist work, counting those for local congregational expenditures, total $1.8 billion annually, with 13 million members nationwide.

It also has a bigger corps of missionaries overseas than any other church, 2,776 of them, with 279 new ones added in the last year, its foreign missions board reported. The denomination has 8,533 overseas congregations with 1 million members.

In another area, denominational leaders strongly disputed charges made Tuesday by the new head of a conservative, unofficial Southern Baptist group that denominational seminaries are infested with watered-down teachings about the Bible.

The Rev. Harold Lindsell of Wheaton, Ill., newly elected president of the Faith and Message Fellowship, said the group was mounting a drive to cleanse the seminaries of such teachings and insist and require that the Bible be presented as verbally infallible.

Asked if such a purge might cause a schism as happened in another denomination, the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod, he said, "Schism is a nasty word, but peace at the expense of theological principle is too expensive."

Allen said he had "great confidence in the biblical fidelity" of Southern Baptist seminaries, although there commonly are critics on both the left and right insisting on their particular positions.

Such infighting, he told reporters, is "counterproductive."

Brooke Report To Senate Inaccurate

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward W. Brooke's Senate financial disclosure report failed to include information about stocks he holds and incorrectly stated that he is not a member of any corporate board, the Boston Herald American reported today.

The copyrighted story said Brooke also stated incorrectly that he put up security on a $125,000 loan used to purchase property in the French West Indies, when, in fact, he had not.

The statement contradicts Brooke's sworn 1977 divorce deposition and his latest financial statement filed in connection with the divorce, in which Brooke said he had not put up security on the loan, the newspaper said.

There was no immediate comment from Brooke on the story.

Brooke's finances are the subject of an investigation by the U.S. Senate Select Committee on Ethics, which sent a committee member to Cambridge last week to get copies of Brooke's financial statements made in connection with the divorce.

Announcement of a decision on whether Brooke's divorce case will be reopened had been expected today by Middlesex County Probate Court Judge Lawrence T. Perera. But court officials said today it would be at least one more day before Perera issued his ruling.

Italians Agree To 'Air' Fresco

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The Italian government agreed today to air condition the home of "The Last Supper" as the first step toward a new restoration of Leonardo da Vinci's faded fresco.

The Ministry for Cultural Patrimony announced it would appropriate $275,000 to install air conditioning in the refectory of the Church of Santa Maria alle Grazie in central Milan, where the 15th century wall painting is visited by an average of 1,300 tourists daily.

"The Last Supper" has been fading since soon after Leonardo completed it in 1497 because he used egg tempera, an unstable medium for walls, instead of fresco paint.

It has been restored and repainted repeatedly over the centuries. But now it is being attacked by mold and bacteria resulting from the smog and humidity of modern Milan.

After air conditioning is installed to cleanse, dehumidify and stabilize the atmosphere around the fresco, experts will determine what should be done to restore it again and protect it against further damage.

FORD ARRIVES — The normally well-groomed Gerald Ford had his hair disheveled by the wind as he arrives for a Maryland GOP fund raiser in this Baltimore suburb Tuesday night. Ford Denounces Carter Actions 'In Just About Everything'

By RICHARD NEWCOMBE
BALTIMORE (AP) — In one of his toughest attacks on President Carter since leaving office, former President Ford said Carter is failing at just about everything — the economy, energy, defense and controlling the growth of government.

Ford said Tuesday night Carter's proposed budget in excess of $500 billion fails to halt the expansion of the federal government and gives no relief to the "over-regulated and over-taxed" American voter.

"The truth is that the Carter economic plan is in a total shambles," Ford said, adding that Carter's energy program is "insufficient in the first place and misdirected in the second."

On defense, Ford said Carter's policies have led to a 50 percent reduction in Navy ship building, the elimination of important military developments such as the B-1 bomber and too many concessions to the Soviets.

The $100-a-plate dinner, which the Republicans said raised more than $100,000 for the state party, attracted a number of officials of the Ford administration, including Alan Greenspan, the former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Greenspan, a close personal friend of Ford's, chuckled when asked about Carter's economic policies.

"There's substantial room for improvement," he said, smiling.

The Maryland Republicans cheered loudly when Ford, who looked tan and trim, merely mentioned the words "Proposition 13" — an initiative approved overwhelmingly by California voters that will slash property taxes in that state by 57 percent.

"The message to all public office holders ought to be very clear," he said. "Government expenditures are far too high, taxes at the local, state and federal levels are too high and inflation is public enemy No. 1."

"Inflation can be laid at the desk of the Carter administration," he said. "We Republicans should preach the gospel of tax reduction and responsible control over federal spending."

'Son Of Sam' Imprisoned

NEW YORK (AP) — Far from the city streets where the "Son of Sam" killed six persons and wounded seven, David R. Berkowitz is now in a prison near Canada where he will undergo tests that will help decide in which institution he should serve six consecutive life sentences.

Berkowitz was secretly transferred before sunrise Tuesday to the maximum-security Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora, where he faces medical, psychiatric and psychological examination.

The trip from Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, where Berkowitz had been housed since his arrest last August, began about a half hour after sunrise.

A source said Berkowitz was "pretty docile" after he was awakened at 4 a.m. and had eaten breakfast.

City Department of Correction officers escorted the 25-year-old former Bronx postal clerk in a high-security vehicle to Ossining in Westchester County for processing at Sing Sing, law enforcement sources said.

On Monday, Berkowitz was sentenced to 315 consecutive years in prison for his 12-month shooting spree through Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens.

Under state law, he will be eligible for parole after 30 years, regardless of whether he spends any of those years in a psychiatric facility. Parole, however, could be denied repeatedly.

The judges who sentenced Berkowitz have unanimously requested the New York Parole Board to deny Berkowitz parole when he becomes eligible.

Brooke Report To Senate Inaccurate

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward W. Brooke's Senate financial disclosure report failed to include information about stocks he holds and incorrectly stated that he is not a member of any corporate board, the Boston Herald American reported today.

The copyrighted story said Brooke also stated incorrectly that he put up security on a $125,000 loan used to purchase property in the French West Indies, when, in fact, he had not.

The statement contradicts Brooke's sworn 1977 divorce deposition and his latest financial statement filed in connection with the divorce, in which Brooke said he had not put up security on the loan, the newspaper said.

There was no immediate comment from Brooke on the story.

Brooke's finances are the subject of an investigation by the U.S. Senate Select Committee on Ethics, which sent a committee member to Cambridge last week to get copies of Brooke's financial statements made in connection with the divorce.

Announcement of a decision on whether Brooke's divorce case will be reopened had been expected today by Middlesex County Probate Court Judge Lawrence T. Perera. But court officials said today it would be at least one more day before Perera issued his ruling.

Beef Policy Called 'PR'

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 Attorney General John Hill Tuesday called President Carter's actions to raise the amount of beef imported into the U.S. "little more than a public relations gesture" which would not significantly reduce beef prices for consumers.

Following a speech to the state Firemen's and Fire Marshals' Association annual convention which ends today, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee had few kind words for Carter's latest agricultural move.

Hill said the amount of beef which would be imported is "minor compared to the total supply" therefore would not lower prices paid by consumers for beef.

"I can't say the beef import situation has helped the consumer or the cattle industry in the past," he commented.

Asked what effect the passage of California's controversial Proposition 13 to roll back property taxes might have in Texas, Hill said he had advocated "property tax reform all through the campaign."

Hill said his gubernatorial campaign platform has included taxing agricultural land on its productive rather than market value, increasing the inheritance tax base, increasing state support for public schools to lessen the burden on homeowners and standardizing property appraisals throughout the state.

Since Proposition 13 passed overwhelmingly, Hill said he plans to ask for a study the implementation of Proposition 13 as it would relate to Texas.

Specifically, Hill said, he wants a legislative committee to examine whether some limit on property taxes in Texas or a limit on the amount taxes could be increased every biennium should be implemented here.

"We've got six months to watch the California experience to get a better view of the totality of the experience," Hill said.

Asked about opponent Clement's promise to balance the state budget by eliminating 25,000 state employees, Hill called the approach "overly simplistic."

He said he plans to examine the budget of each agency for specific areas which could be cut — a plan requiring a "lot of effort."

In the end, "people will know I'm not taking the arbitrary approach," he said. "People will know I've been sensible to each agency."

However, Hill conceded there are an excessive number of state employees, and said he hopes some of the workers can be eliminated by attrition.

"I don't anticipate the number going up," he said.

Hill said Clements has "grossly overestimated" the number of Briscoe supporters who are now backing the Republican nominee.

As for Clements' announcement that Briscoe's campaign treasurer had gone to work for the Clements campaign, Hill noted the man was a paid employee for Briscoe and is "working for a salary" for Clements.

Besides, Hill said, "I'd rather have Jess Hay who raised the money (for Briscoe)" and said Hay is supporting Hill for governor.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE — Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, praises firefighters for their "courageous and unselfish work" in a talk during the annual state convention of the Firemen's and Fire Marshals' Association here. Fernandez Seeks 1980 Nomination

By KEN HERMAN

HARLINGEN (AP) — It was hardly the setting for a serious presidential contender.

The room was small, the gathering was slim and reporters showed up only because it was a slow news day.

But Ben Fernandez is serious. Whether he is a legitimate contender for the White House remains to be seen.

"It's time to bring new blood into the administration of the United States," the California economist said here Tuesday. "And I believe the Spanish-American community is the source of that new blood."

The 53-year-old son of illiterate field hands is one of several men seeking the backing of a group known as the Presidential Candidate Committee.

"The committee is to identify a qualified, electable American of Hispanic descent to run for president," the founder of the Republican National Hispanic Assembly said.

Fernandez confidently predicts a massive shift of Hispanic voters from the Democratic Party to the GOP. He said his party more accurately reflects the ideology of the Hispanics — "fiscally conservative, highly individual and champions of small government."

"The candidate will be an All-American candidate — not a Hispanic candidate," he said.

The committee is now working towards a $10 million campaign goal. The money will be turned over to the man that gets the committee's backing next January. Fernandez said the candidate will enter GOP primaries nationwide.

The economist said he hopes his campaign will spark a "renaissance of spirit" in the nation.

"I will hit very hard on the work ethic. Americans are getting softer every day. The old values have to be restored," he said.

He favors cuts in welfare programs and agreed that stand might have a negative effect in some Hispanic communities.

"You have to take a stand even though it could hurt you," he said.

Fernandez said he "lukewarmly" supported Gerald Ford in 1976.

"When I saw him eating tamales in Texas without taking off the corn husk I knew we were in trouble," he said.

He sees his candidacy as an incentive to Americans from poor families. Fernandez said his parents were "poor but proud" and raised eight children.

"In one generation there's a possibility that one of the Fernandez children will be making a move for the presidency," he said.

SILENCE IS THE HARDEST ARGUMENT TO REFUTE

Clements Accuses Hill Of 'Acting Like Carter'

AUSTIN (UPI) — Republican Bill Clements says John Hill, his opponent in the November gubernatorial election, is starting to act like Jimmy Carter, and he doesn't mean it as a compliment.

"Texans were deceived by Jimmy Carter but they will not be deceived by smiling John," Clements said Tuesday.

"John Hill is looking more like Jimmy Carter every day," the Dallas oil drilling contractor said in response to a meeting the attorney general held with heads of state agencies Monday to discuss means of cutting government spending.

"Hill adopted the facade of budgetary control by asking the Texas bureaucracy to cut spending," Clements said. "During his presidential campaign, Carter also blasted bureaucracies, yet their size and budgets have only continued to grow."

"I suggest that if Mr. Hill wants to lop off some fat, he begin with his own office."

Clements, a former deputy secretary of defense, said the attorney general's budget had increased 600 percent and his staff had grown by 100 percent during Hill's six years in office.

Hill met Monday with the heads of 35

AUSTIN (AP) — The time might not be too far distant when Texas power companies can reduce peak demands by switching off your air conditioner temporarily without entering your house.

It might sound like Big Brother, but in most cases, consumers would decide whether to join in the scheme to reduce peak-hour demands on electric systems. The idea is to cut costs and save energy.

Houston Lighting & Power Co. and El Paso Electric told Texas Public Utility examiners Tuesday they are in the early stages of investigating such systems.

The commission's hearings on various proposals to make electricity cheaper and conserve energy resume next Monday with testimony from groups outside the power industry.

Commission members will decide this fall on recommendations to the Legislature as well as on policies that might guide their own decisions on electric rates.

"The load limiting devices under consideration are basically radio controlled devices that would shut down a water heater, space heater or air conditioner for a period of time. Our engineering department is evaluating different equipment," said Robert Hackett, El Paso Electric's rate manager.

Ross Doan, manager of rate and economic research for Houston Lighting & Power, said his firm is looking at "ripple control" of air conditioners.

Equipment, he said, ranges in price from $125 to $400 per household, so the company is taking it slow.

"We don't want to buy one method and have a better method come along," he said.

Doan said the equipment under study by Houston Lighting & Power is a "ripple system" that would turn off air conditioners for a few minutes at a time. The cut offs would "ripple" through the system so not everyone would be switched off at once.

He said HLP would test customer acceptance first.

Melanie McCoy, commission project director, said load management could reduce power consumption at peak hours of the day.

This could help stabilize electric rates, she said, by avoiding or delaying construction of new plants to handle peak loads.

Peaking plants remain idle much of the time, but the cost of being prepared to meet the demands of consumption periods is built into the rates consumers must pay.

Mrs. McCoy said load reduction by remote control switches is voluntary in most places that use it.

"Whether you choose to have it in your house is voluntary. But once you have it, you have no control over whether it is shut off or not. In most studies, the consumer is not even aware of it. It has a lot of possibilities, especially in high air conditioning areas," she said.

Solon Urges Tower To Oppose Funding

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, called on Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, today to vote against additional federal funding for New York City.

Krueger, who is trying to unseat Tower in the November general election, said he voted against the $2.3 billion loan guarantee bill in the U.S. House last week.

"In addition to voting for New York City funding in 1975, John Tower killed an amendment which would have required New York City to balance its budget by 1977 in order to receive federal aid," Krueger said in a statement. "I hope Sen. Tower has realized he misplaced his trust in high-spending New York City officials."

AP Promotes Jim Brigrance

DALLAS (AP) — Jim Brigrance, Texas news editor for The Associated Press since 1975, has been appointed assistant chief of bureau in Dallas.

Dorman Cordell, chief of bureau in charge of AP operations in Texas, said Brigrance would continue his news editor duties when he assumes his new assignment July 1.

Brigrance, 38, a native of Ennis, joined The AP at San Francisco in 1969 following news assignments for Radio Station KGBC in Galveston and the San Antonio Express and San Antonio Light. Brigrance transferred to the Dallas AP staff in 1970.

By ERMA BOMBECK

This column is FOR CHILDREN ONLY.

In anticipation of your question, it will take about a minute and 15 seconds to read. There will be no quiz and no big words.

Remember how your mother sat through a pouring rain to watch you play baseball and a high fly went right through your fingers and she said, "It could happen to Pete Rose?"

Remember that when she serves a birthday cake that has to be propped up with bread crusts and the crack in the middle with icing and the layers reinforced with toothpicks.

Remember how you borrowed her camera for the picnic and you dropped it into the duck pond and she said, "It was old and we needed a new one anyway?"

Remember that when she returns your brand new T-shirt hopelessly shrunk, perma-wrinkled and with terminal lint.

Remember when you were in the school play and you had one line, "I hear soldiers outside," and you blew it and she said, "Does anyone hear anything?" and she said, "You were the only one we could hear."

Remember that when she's the only mother who shows up at the class picnic in a dress, white shoes and hose.

Remember when you were supposed to play "March of the Wee Folks" in the piano, recital and all the others were girls and your mother said, "You look flushed. Maybe you have a fever and shouldn't go?"

Remember that when your mother is waiting for you in the car after scout meeting and the dog is clawing the seat and the baby is slobbering on the steering wheel and she is in a towaway zone and forgot to unplug the coffee pot.

Remember when you were selling peanut brittle for the band and your grandma was out of town and you didn't start selling until the night before you were to make your quota for the gang to go to Washington and your mother was on a diet and bought two dozen boxes for the freezer?

Remember that when they need volunteers to chaperone the fourth grade to a meat packing plant for class day and all the other mothers are allergic to children and your mother was due to deliver last week.

It's called "compassion" and I lied to you. Look it up!

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Someone wrote in on behalf of quiet people, saying that most quiet people are shy, sensitive and insecure, and they're embarrassed when someone says, "Gee, you're quiet."

I've been quiet all my life and it doesn't bother or offend me if my quietness is mentioned. As a matter of fact, with so many nonstop talkers in the world, I think we quiet ones deserve some applause. If everyone talked all the time, who would listen?

Furthermore, the quiet ones are often intelligent people who wisely refrain from blaring out every thought that pops into their heads.

Let that quiet one speak only for himself. Although I'm considered "quiet," I'm neither shy nor insecure.

I also notice that because I'm not always talking, when I do say something, people listen.

PROUD TO BE QUIET

Dear Proud: Thanks for speaking out for those who prefer to be quiet. (P.S. I know you're right. I've been married to a quiet, intelligent man for 39 years.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old, fairly attractive woman who was born cross-eyed. I had surgery at a young age, which corrected the problem somewhat, but it's still quite noticeable.

Abby, my reason for writing is to ask why comedians and cartoonists think that portraying a person with cross-eyes is considered either funny or a sign of stupidity.

I have lived with this defect all my life and have developed a severe complex about it. I find it difficult to look someone in the eyes or even have my picture taken. I try my best to conceal my defect because I have been humiliated and embarrassed to the point of tears when inconsiderate people make fun of me.

Being cross-eyed is a handicap. Why do so many people think it's funny? And what can I do about it?

HURTING IN OHIO

Dear Hurting: Intelligent, sensitive people do NOT think any kind of handicap is "funny." And comedians and cartoonists who use cross-eyed characters to get laughs do so more out of thoughtlessness than malice.

Much is being done today in modern surgery. Don't give up until you've explored every possibility of further corrective surgery. (P.S. Try to develop a little compassion for the ignorant who ridicule the handicapped, for "they know not what they do.")

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

"Play in haste, repent at leisure" could well be the epitaph for most bridge players. Before playing to the first trick, declarer should decide on his overall plan. South failed to do that, and it proved fatal on this hand.

The auction was straightforward. Once South received spade support, he leaped right to game.

West did not want to lead a trump, and since his minor-suit holdings were equally unattractive, he chose his top heart. Declarer snatched at the chance for a "free" finesse, and he covered with dummy's ten. East saw no reason to sacrifice his king, so he followed with a low heart.

After the ten won, declarer led a trump to the king and then cashed the ace of hearts. Dummy was entered with a trump to the ace, and declarer suddenly realized his predicament. If he led the queen of hearts for a ruffing finesse, East would cover and declarer would ruff. But now there was no way for declarer to get back to dummy to discard on the jack of hearts.

Therefore, declarer had to abandon hearts and lead a club toward his king in the hope of finding East with the ace. Unfortunately, West had that card, and declarer could not avoid losing two club tricks and two diamonds for down one.

Some thought at trick one would have allowed declarer to come up with a sure trick line. He could afford to lose a heart trick and two tricks in the minor suits, providing he could set up the high hearts in dummy to take care of two of his minor-suit losers while retaining an entry to dummy.

Declarer should play low from dummy at trick one and win with the ace in his hand. Now he can draw two rounds of trumps with the king-queen in his hand, and then concede a trick to the king of hearts.

East can return to a club, allowing the defenders to complete their book with two tricks in that suit. But when West shifts to a diamond, declarer wins the ace, crosses to the ace of trumps and uses dummy's two heart tricks to provide parking places for his two losing diamonds.

The Slim Gourmet

If you're in a pickle over quick and easy ways to make non-fattening foods flavorful...think "pickling spice."

Those tiny tins of whole pickle spice can make a lot more than pickles. They can make lean, low-calorie foods stand up and salute. Which is our way of warning: pickle-spiced foods are not for flannel palates. All the spices used are sharp and assertive, nothing blandly namby-pamby about them. So, if the subtleties of cottage cheese and yogurt are beginning to make dieting a drag, try lean meat or poultry spiked with pickling spice. (If you're cautious by nature, use lesser amounts.)

What is pickling spice? Generally, a blend of spices in hard-to-find whole or coarsely-chopped form: chopped bay leaves, whole mustard and coriander seeds, whole cloves and peppercorns, bits of cinnamon bark, chili pepper and dried ginger root, allspice and nutmeg or mace. The mixes are available on most supermarket spice shelves.

Pickle-spiced meats and poultry are delicious served cold...just what you're looking for in the warm weather weeks ahead. Here are some slim recipes to try. The first is best served cold:

SPICED PICKLED BEEF

3 to 4 lbs. ready-to-cook corned beef round, NOT brisket
2 to 4 cloves garlic, minced (or 1/4 to 1/2 tsp. garlic powder)
2 to 4 tbsps. mixed pickling spices
Remove corned beef from plastic wrapper and trim and discard fringe fat, if any.

Tear off a length of heavy-duty foil wrap, or use a double layer of lightweight foil. Spread the wrap flat and sprinkle on half of the garlic and seasonings. Add the fat-trimmed corned beef. Sprinkle the top of the meat with remaining seasonings. (The outside of the meat should be well-coated with spices.)

Wrap tightly in foil. Place foil-wrapped meat in a roasting pan and put in the oven. Set oven control at 275 degrees. Roast 4 or more hours, until corned beef is tender but not falling apart. Remove from oven and allow to cool, still sealed in foil and its own broth. Then chill. To serve, remove the chilled meat from its broth and slice razor-thin against the grain. Serve with brown mustard, and Melba-thin slices of flat rye or pumpernickel bread, coleslaw and green pickles. Each 4-ounce serving has 155 calories.

MARINATED SPICED STEAK

1 flank steak (about 1 1/4 lbs.)
1 to 2 tbsps. mixed pickling spices
1 to 2 cloves minced garlic (or 1/4 to 1/2 tsp. instant)
1/2 cup vinegar
cold water to cover
Lay the steak flat on a cutting board. With a sharp knife, make shallow diagonal criss-cross cuts, scoring both sides of the steak in a diamond pattern.

Sprinkle a little of the pickling spices and garlic in a shallow pan. Add the steak, flat. Sprinkle steak with remaining spices and garlic. Add vinegar and just enough water to cover. Cover the dish and refrigerate all day or overnight.

Drain steak. Barbecue or broil, turning once, to desired doneness (best served rare). Slice thinly against the grain. Makes four servings, about 205 calories each.

PICKLED CHICKEN FILIPINO

2 lbs. frying chicken thighs or drumsticks
3/4 cup unsweetened pineapple juice

3 tbsps. cider vinegar
3 tbsps. soy sauce
1 tsp. mixed pickling spices
Arrange chicken in a single layer and brown under broiler. Drain and discard melted fat. Add remaining ingredients. Cover pan with foil and bake in a 375-degree oven until chicken is tender, about 35 to 40 minutes. Drain and chill. Serve chicken cold. Makes six servings, about 170 calories each.

COLD SPICED PICKLED TURKEY THIGH

Follow preceding ingredients list, but substitute a defrosted turkey thigh for the chicken. Put the turkey thigh skin-side up in a small baking dish. Add remaining ingredients and cover with foil. Bake in a 325-degree oven until tender, 2 hours or more. Uncover and continue to bake and baste until most of the liquid is evaporated.

Remove turkey from pan, cool, wrap and chill. To serve, cut the turkey into thin slices. Serve on a cold salad platter. Makes four servings, 180 calories each.

Election Reforms Hit Snag After Feverish Start

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
WASHINGTON (UPI) In the days following the Watergate scandal, Congress and state legislatures rushed election reforms into law. Today that trend has slowed, and is being reversed in some states.

Partisan considerations and the desire of incumbents to get re-elected have replaced the bipartisan reform fever that swept legislative halls when the corrupt practices of the 1972 presidential campaign were revealed.

In Congress, filibustering Republicans last year blocked public financing of House and Senate elections and majority Democrats this month proposed election law "reforms" that both the GOP and groups like Common Cause labeled a "partisan grab."

At the state level there is similar inaction.

Wisconsin's drive to pass a new law is tied up in a court battle between the legislature and the governor. Maryland is the only state actively working on improving its public financing law. A nationwide survey turned up little interest for major reforms in the rest of the states.

In a few states where courts struck down one provision of a reform law, the legislature just reacted by repealing the entire statute.

But the initial wave of reform brought considerable change.

—In 1976, the U.S. held its first presidential election financed with public money, and it was generally labeled a success by candidates and critics.

—Forty-four states enacted major campaign finance laws.

—Twenty-seven states enacted ethics laws.

—Fifteen states provide for public financing of some state elections.

—Nearly all states require disclosure of the names of major contributors.

—About half limit the size of contributions and ban use of corporate funds.

The pattern of reform in the states follows few geographical boundaries, except that there is little in the way of such laws in the south, other than North Carolina, which has one of the strongest.

Surprisingly big reform oriented states like California and New York do not have extensive campaign reform laws, nor does Florida which led the nation in another area of reform — sunshine laws.

The states with public financing are a mixed bag, including big states like Maryland, Massachusetts and Michigan, and small states like Idaho, Iowa and Utah.

Campaign Practices Reports, which has extensively studied state election laws, places Alabama, New Mexico, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Wyoming at the bottom of the reform list, since they do not even require pre-election disclosure of contributions and spending.

Common Cause says the Pennsylvania law is the worst in the country.

The focus of legislation in Congress and the states this year is on tinkering with the laws — raising expenditure and contribution limits to meet inflation increases, and finding ways to eliminate the mountain of paperwork reform has triggered.

The Federal Election Commission, the

—The Republican and Democratic National Conventions were financed with government money and each party got about $2.3 million. The parties complained this was not enough to put on the traditional style convention, but when all the bookkeeping was done they returned a total of $552,000 to the Treasury.

—The campaign contribution limits of $1,000 by individuals and $5,000 by groups did not seriously cramp the style of the major candidates, nor did the limal candidates to contribute to, the new law created a new avenue of influence. The law stated that a union, a corporation, a group of doctors, anti-abortionists, or whatever, can join together and give up to $5,000 to congressional candidates.

What has happened is that hundreds of unions have gotten together to form PACs, as have medical organizations and big business. There were less than 100 PACs in 1974, about 300 by the time of the 1976 elections, and the number is now soaring toward 600.

Common Cause reported that these special interest groups spent a record $22.6 million on 1976 congressional elections — nearly twice the 1974 amount. It appears the figure will double again for the 1978 elections.

Studies showed that 70 percent of the money went to Democratic candidates, and an even higher percentage went to incumbent congressmen.

The Republican Party, at the edge of extinction in Congress holding about one-third of the seats, used another section of the law to fight back. It raised a war chest of more than $16 million for the 1978 congressional campaign, which the election law says can be channeled in $50,000 chunks to individual congressional candidates.

Faced with the prospects of being able to raise only $2 million, the Democrats proposed legislation which would cut to $15,000 the amount a political party may contribute to House campaigns, which would bottle up the Republican war chest.

Senators and House members of both parties, more interested in their own survival than election reform, have throttled attempts for public financing of congressional elections. It is favored by President Carter and liberal Democrats, but has almost no chance in the next couple of years.

The picture on public financing is similar at the state level. It is done in 15 states, and the remaining 36 generally don't show any sign of passing new laws.

Maryland is the only state with a serious chance of strengthening its weak public financing law, and Wisconsin, the latest state to add public financing, is locked into a battle between a strong and weak law.

Oregon's law self destructs in 1980, and the drive to extend it is viewed as a major test of the future of public financing.

Generally state public financing laws can be divided into two groups.

Most are patterned after the federal law — the taxpayer can check off on his return $1 in his taxes he wants spent on political activity. These are the so called strong law states.

The weak law states have a checkoff box if a taxpayer wants to spend an extra dollar or two out of his refund for political purposes. This system has resulted in raising very little money in the states involved.

Some states give the money directly to candidates, while others funnel it into the state party machinery which passes it on to candidates.

The difference between weak and strong laws is shown in Maryland, where a weak law resulted in raising only $500,000 — no where near enough to pay for the state and legislative campaigns as planned.

...majority Democrats have proposed election law "reforms" that both the GOP and groups like Common Cause labeled a "partisan grab."

federal agency created to police the new law, finds bookkeeping and auditing its biggest headache. Jimmy Carter defeated Gerald Ford nearly a year and a half ago and the FEC has been unable to complete audits not only of the two candidates, but also their major primary rivals, George Wallace and Ronald Reagan.

"Public financing worked well, but the FEC is overwhelmed with reports and the auditing procedure," said Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J. chairman of the House Administration Committee which oversees campaign finance laws.

A long row of filing cabinets occupies one wall of the entire first floor of the office building housing the FEC. There are the campaign finance reports of every candidate who ran for president, the House and the Senate since the law went into effect in 1975. There, supposedly, is the name, address and occupation of every person who gave over $100 to a federal candidate.

Summing up these reports, one finds:

—The federal government spent more than $70 million on the 1976 election. Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford got $21.8 million for the general election and they and 13 other primary contenders shared almost $25 million in matching funds before the conventions.

its on the amount they could spend.

—The Treasury fund which finances presidential elections is healthy. From the $1 taxpayers checked off on their tax returns, $70 million was spent in the 1976 election out of $95 million available. Now, two years before the 1980 election, the fund is already back up to $61.6 million.

Several things occurred as the result of public financing of presidential elections.

Wealthy donors whose large contributions were often awarded with ambassadorships were put out of business. The age of carrying suitcases full of $100 bills around in a campaign ended.

There was one hint of scandal, and the new law proved effective, although slow, in picking it out. Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania falsely qualified for federal funds for his abortive presidential campaign, and the FEC auditors Shapp himself apparently was not involved. He repaid out of his own pocket the entire $300,000 he had received in federal funds.

A less exciting but very important result of the federal financing for presidential elections is the growth of an institution called the political action committee — or "PAC" in shorthand.

With fat cat contributors no longer a major influence, and without presidenti-

Writer Notes Changes In China

EDITOR'S NOTE: Rod Beaton, president of United Press International, led a group of 25 U.S. editors and publishers on a recent 17-day trip through the People's Republic of China. They visited the cities of Peking, Shanghai, Chengtu, Wuhan and Canton, as well as several rural areas. The group talked to scores of Chinese officials, workers, students, farmers and others. For Beaton, it was his second trip to China, the first in 1972. The following article comments on the changes that have taken place since then, as well as providing an assessment of the nation today.

By ROD W. BEATON

CANTON, China (UPI) — The People's Republic of China is in the throes of profound social, economic and political change which may well impact world history and is most certainly establishing a "renewed" direction for its 900 million people.

This view was underlined by scores of Chinese officials who met recently with a UPI delegation during a 17-day visit to six major centers and five provinces. The delegation was made up of UPI directors, Newspaper Advisory Board members and UPI officers.

The new direction was particularly startling for repeat visitors to the People's Republic who had journeyed through China in 1972, shortly after re-establishment of Sino-American relations.

"We veered off course," admitted one leading Chinese official in describing the excesses of the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution as well as the activities of the so-called "Gang of Four," led by Chairman Mao's widow, Chiang Ching.

"We are now returning to our fundamentals," this official said.

Some leaders agreed that the current Chinese obsession with "smashing" all vestiges of the Gang of Four may be nothing less than a revulsion against the excesses of the Cultural Revolution. Such comments in 1972 would have been regarded as heresy, since it was Chairman Mao Tse-tung himself who originated the Revolution.

"It served a good purpose in the beginning, but the Gang of Four abused it in their effort to gain power," it was explained to members of the UPI group. "The people were confused and misled."

Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping told the delegation that China must modernize, and he placed great emphasis on unity of the people. He made it clear that the Cultural Revolution, if not dead, no longer plays an important role in Chinese life.

Clear signs of liberalization were everywhere.

Intellectuals and production and technical experts have been restored to favor. Emphasis is placed on creativity and inventiveness. Educational policies stress basic learning and specialized skills, combined with practical experience. Incentive or bonus pay scales are being instituted in many factories as rewards for productivity.

Students who marched off to the countryside and led in the turmoil of the Cultural Revolution have returned to their books or training to be teachers, engineers and doctors. Doctrinaire political purity is no longer a prerequisite for admission to universities.

"We're looking for our most talented and intelligent youths," a director of a large educational institution said. "It was all so stupid," he added, in explaining the loss of a generation or more of students with specialized skills.

All of these changes are attributed to the ascendancy of Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, Vice Premier Teng and other new "cabinet-level" leaders.

Throughout China, Chairman Hua is pictured at the side of the "Great Teacher" Chairman Mao, and slogans urging unity, modernization and productivity abound in factories and communes.

One Chinese fundamental has not changed, however. The incredible ability of the People's Republic to create instant public opinion was never more apparent. In more than 30 lengthy briefings, the UPI group was told over and over, in identical words, that practically all of China's failings in recent years could be attributed to the Gang of Four. This view was reflected everywhere — in operas, musical programs, television, radio broadcasts, wall posters and slogans and in newspapers.

The director of a fine arts institute said he was once not allowed to exercise his creativity and dared not display certain liberated art: "now I feel liberated and there is a renaissance of art in China."

The vice chairman of a revolutionary committee described how industrial production collapsed due to the confusion created by the Gang of Four, in the course of the Cultural Revolution. A leading mechanical engineer said he was placed under house arrest for 13 months; he was unable to do any work and suffered numerous beatings. A production specialist described how he fled from place to place in order to complete his projects and avoid harassment from "henchmen" of the gang.

The new values, candor and attitudes were refreshing to the American visitors in comparison with 1972, but the thrust towards modernization is bringing new problems. Vehicle traffic, competing with millions of bicycles, appears to have quadrupled in such large centers as Peking.

Both noise and air pollution is a growing problem.

Litter and waste can be seen where none existed in 1972.

U.S. Grain Essential For Soviet Nutrition

By United Press International
MOSCOW (UPI) — It appears American grains will continue to play a substantial role as the Soviet Union struggles to improve the protein content of the average Soviet diet.

American agricultural officials recently toured Soviet grain-producing regions and repeatedly assured their Soviet counterparts the United States wants to remain a dependable supplier of grains for feeding purposes.

The Soviet Union grows enough grain to meet its basic needs, but it must import from the West to fill gaps created by crop shortfalls traced to bad weather and inefficiencies.

The Soviet Union has purchased 13.6 million metric tons of American grain this season.

and Cubans, particularly in oil-rich Angola.

But the unwanted children of Portugal's decolonization — some 650,000 uprooted former white settlers — are certain to make the planned reconciliation difficult.

Enlistment Boom

PARIS — Recent French military interventions in Zaire and Chad, coupled with rising unemployment in France, have caused a boom in army enlistment.

Military sources say applications for enlistment are coming in not only from France, but also from abroad. The foreign applicants are applying to join the French Foreign Legion.

Wives On March

LONDON — Wives of Britain's servicemen are on the rampage — or at least the march — to demand more money for their husbands.

Under British law members of the armed services themselves are not permitted to strike or demonstrate. So their wives are taking on the job for them.

They have already staged one march to the House of Commons to lobby members of Parliament.

Other similar demonstrations are planned.

They are marching to a song that starts "Join the forces; join them for a life of poverty."

Anti-Terrorist Fight

BONN — Urban guerrilla gangs have been active for 10 years but West Germany has still not worked out a plan to oppose such terrorist acts as the kidnapping of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer with a well-organized, coordinated action by police and security forces.

Responsibility still is fragmented between federal, state and local authorities and no permanent "crisis staff" exists to react immediately to terrorists and lead the fight against it.

The division of authority between the leaders of the security forces and government leaders also is blurred.

To Mend Rift

LISBON — Nearly three years after it scrambled from its five-century-old African empire, Portugal and its former colonies appear ready to mend their family rift.

A flurry of diplomatic activity has resulted in plans for Portuguese President Antonio Ramalho Eanes to meet his Angolan counterpart, Agostinho Neto, and the foreign ministers of both Mozambique and Angola have been invited to visit Lisbon.

The Portuguese, from moderate left to moderate right, are counting on this diplomatic offensive to recoup economic and cultural ground lost to the Soviets

Labor Filibuster Vote Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ask any senator, lobbyist, aide or ever-present and well-informed observer in Congress how the next vote will come out on the labor law filibuster.

But don't expect firm answers. "It's going to come down to one vote," when the roll is called today, says Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a filibuster leader. "We're close, but we're not over the top," says an administration official. "The Senate voted for the third time Tuesday against cutting off the filibuster on the measure backed by the Carter administration and organized labor."

The bill, strongly opposed by business groups, would set timetables for union representation elections, provide greater access to job sites by union organizers and toughen penalties for violations of federal labor relations laws.

The 54-43 vote, which had been expected, set up a showdown for today, and backers of the bill are making an all-out push to get the strength they need.

Both sides say today's result could depend on a single vote.

The 54 votes supporters received Tuesday were six short of the 60 needed to choke off a filibuster. But it was their best showing yet.

Immediately afterwards, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., the majority leader, stepped up the pressure in the gentlemanly way of the Senate.

He filed a motion setting up a fifth anti-filibuster attempt for Thursday, and said there would be more, if needed.

He raised the possibility of having senators return to Washington after next November's elections to complete work on legislation neglected because of the filibuster.

Together, they were taken as signals that Byrd intends to persist until the filibuster is choked off.

Hatch's response: "If he doesn't get it tomorrow, he's beaten."

The only senator to switch his vote on Tuesday was Robert Stafford, R-Vt. He had voted for the measure in the Senate Human Resources Committee, but twice supported the filibuster.

For today's vote, supporters say they are counting on the backing of these five senators, in addition to the 54 already in their corner: Republicans Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, Charles Percy of Illinois, John Heinz of Pennsylvania and Ted Stevens of Alaska and Democrat John Sparkman of Alabama.

All but Weicker, who did not vote Tuesday, have supported the filibuster in the past. Weicker has voted against it.

If they get all five votes, supporters would have 59 — one short of the total they need.

Lobbyists filled one room off the Senate floor Tuesday as the vote was taken.

They have been working for months toward the showdown, and the effort is continuing.

Harold Coxson, a top labor law official for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said businessmen from Nebraska, Arkansas and Florida will be in Washington today to lobby their senators.

Sens. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., all filibuster supporters so far, are regarded as key votes and have been lobbied heavily.

Bumpers, for example, had lunch on Monday with Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

"He says it is now possible that he could vote for (cutting off debate) somewhere down the road," said an aide, who asked not to be identified.

No New Federal Aid Going To California

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's budget director said today the federal government will not bail out California or other states or local governments that cut back their taxes.

"There was a message for Washington as well as California in the Proposition 13 voting," Budget Director James T. McIntyre said.

"So I assert it is wishful thinking that the federal government can help ease the financial burdens resulting from state or local citizen voting."

"Looking to Washington for a bail-out isn't going to be a viable or sensible solution in the future," he said.

McIntyre said the government is considering what federal funds might have to be cut off to California because of the property tax limitation approved there June 6.

He said that the federal government could not pay the salaries of teachers, for example, if California stopped paying some of them with state money.

The government is studying similar restrictions in federal child-nutrition programs and local government jobs for the unemployed, he said.

The state government has made no public plans to ask the federal government for money to make up for the lost revenue.

In a speech to the Advertising Council, McIntyre said the California vote was only the "loudest single shot fired so far in what some people insist is a taxpayer revolt. But it was hardly the first."

He pointed to an attempt by 23 states to ban federal deficits.

"I would remind you that the citizen discontent over taxes, bureaucracy and red tape is directed against the federal establishment as well as other governments," he said.

McIntyre said he is afraid that "cities and counties will turn to the federal government more than ever before to bail them out of financial troubles.

"I suspect we will be hearing more of these warnings in the weeks ahead. Such thinking raises false hopes," he said.

The federal government cannot pay for services the states have trimmed because "federal resources are not infinite. Indeed they are being stretched tight as things stand today," he said.

Wage Proposal Unpopular

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Labor Department plan to raise salaries for low-paid managers and supervisors in private industry is not popular in the White House.

The president's Council on Wage and Price Stability says the proposal would be costly to business and consumers. Private firms criticize the plan for the same reason.

White House inflation fighters also say the plan is contrary to the president's policy of eliminating costly and unnecessary federal rules.

The department wants to raise the minimum salary that an estimated 1.5 million employees must receive to be exempt from federal overtime wage laws.

Those statutes require workers to receive time-and-a-half for hours worked over 40 hours a week.

The rule would affect managers of fast food restaurants, motels and theaters; executive assistants; credit managers and supervisors of a store department.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Tuesday he would consider the proposal's inflationary impact before making a final decision.

INJURED IN TUG-OF-WAR — Two unidentified middle school students in Harrisburg, Pa., sit with bandaged hands in a hospital Tuesday after being treated for burns and cut fingers when a nylon rope snapped during a tug-of-war between 2,200 students. Fifty students were treated by local hospitals, several of them losing fingers or fingertips. School nurses treated others at the scene. (AP Laserphoto)

Tragedy Mars Picnic When Rope Snaps

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The giant tug-of-war was meant to ease the tedium of final exams for 2,200 young students. But the rope snapped, slicing off fingers and fingertips on four small hands.

A fifth student is in danger of losing her thumb. Some 200 people were injured.

"It sounded like someone banged a piece of plastic on the wall or someone pulled the string on a party cracker," said 14-year-old Shannon Meloy. "I smelled something burning and I thought it was the rope, but I think it could have been hands."

Almost all students at Harrisburg Middle School, comprised of grades seven through nine, had lined up on the school lawn Tuesday for the tug-of-war, which was billed as an attempt to make the Guinness Book of World Records.

The Guinness record book currently has no entries for tugs-of-war.

The students grabbed the 2,000-foot-long braided nylon rope and pulled. It broke about 12 minutes into the contest, the whizzing rope scaring through muscle, tendons and bones. Some students near the point of the break had relaxed their hold, but others in the back kept pulling. The rope whipped back through the hands of those who had relaxed, witnesses said.

Two boys, aged 14 and 16, lost their left little fingers. Two others, 13 and 14, had fingertips cut off.

"It could have been the snap or the nylon rope running through their hands at such high speeds that it took the finger right off," said Betty Bogar, public information chief at Polyclinic Medical Center.

"It happened so quickly that I didn't see or hear anything," said 13-year-old Lisa Seay, both hands wrapped in bandages over second-degree burns.

"I just fell to one knee. I looked down at my hands and saw mostly blisters and some blood. My hands were numb."

"It was just a game," said Keith Morton, 14, third in line on his team when the rope snapped. "We just wanted to see how many people could do it."

At least 68 students and faculty were taken to hospitals. All but one were treated and released, according to hospital officials. An additional 150 were treated by the school nurse, mostly for rope burns and assorted bruises.

Marie Lewis, 13, was the lone admission. Doctors hoped to save her thumb, which was connected only by tissue, by surgically sewing it back on her hand. She was listed in satisfactory condition.

Doctors could not replace the fingers of the boys because of the degree of tissue damage, Miss Bogar said.

The rope, borrowed from Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. and rated to withstand 13,000 pounds of stress, is a type used in heavy construction to pull electrical lines into place during installation, a spokesman for the utility said.

Mondale Setting Israel Visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale will visit Israel later this month to help celebrate that country's 30th anniversary, President Carter announced today.

"The vice president will convey my congratulations and those of the American people to Israel on this important anniversary," Carter said in a statement. "His visit underscores the deep and enduring ties of friendship between the people of the United States and Israel."

Mondale is expected to go to Israel on June 29 for a visit ending July 3.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible.

Mark 2:24-28, 3:1-12, The Living Bible

24 Some of the Jewish religious leaders said to Jesus, "They shouldn't be doing that! It's against our laws to harvest grain on the Sabbath."

25,26 But Jesus replied, "Didn't you ever hear about the time King David and his companions were hungry, and he went into the house of God—Abiathar was high priest then—and they ate the special bread only priests were allowed to eat? That was against the law too."

27 But the Sabbath was made to benefit man, and not man to benefit the Sabbath.

28 And I, the Man from Heaven, have authority even to decide what men can do on Sabbath days!"

CHAPTER 3

1 While in Capernaum Jesus went over to the synagogue again, and noticed a man there with a deformed hand.

2 Since it was the Sabbath, Jesus' enemies watched Him closely. Would He heal the man's hand? If He did, they planned to arrest Him!

3 Jesus asked the man to come and stand in front of the congregation.

4 Then turning to His enemies He asked, "Is it all right to do kind deeds on Sabbath days? Or is this a day for doing harm? Is it a day to save lives or to destroy them?" But they wouldn't answer Him.

5 Looking around at them angrily, for He was deeply disturbed by their indifference to human need, He said to the man, "Reach out your hand." He did, and instantly his hand was healed!

6 At once the Pharisees went away and met with the Herodians to discuss plans for killing Jesus.

7,8 Meanwhile, Jesus and His disciples withdrew to the beach, followed by a huge crowd from all over Galilee, Judea, Jerusalem, Idumea, from beyond the Jordan River, and even from as far away as Tyre and Sidon. For the news about His miracles had spread far and wide and vast numbers came to see Him for themselves.

9 He instructed His disciples to bring around a boat and to have it standing ready to rescue Him in case He was crowded off the beach.

10 For there had been many healings that day and as a result great numbers of sick people were crowding around Him, trying to touch Him.

11 And whenever those possessed by demons caught sight of Him they would fall down before Him shrieking, "You are the Son of God!"

12 But He strictly warned them not to make Him known.

Man Runs His Own Power Plant

WHITE RIVER, S.D. (AP) — Keeping up with the Joneses seems to be harder than it ever was — especially if the Jones you're talking about is Don Jones.

Jones hasn't paid a light bill in 35 years. He's got lights, a stereo, even baseboard electrical heat, but the power company never sends him a bill.

It sends him checks instead.

His secret? He owns a hydroelectric plant — the only one on the Little White River.

Jones bought the plant from a power company during World War II and has operated it since. He said a 1973 study showed his was the only hydroelectric company in the country owned by one man. The others are owned by governments, corporations or cooperatives.

As Jones and his son, Don Jr., tell it, a man named Fred Schwartz operated a small gasoline-powered plant at White River in the 1920s.

He persuaded the city of White River that it needed electricity for more than two or three houses and the plant was built in 1924.

The city began operating the 100-kilowatt plant in 1925, but sold it to Central West Public Service, a power company from Sioux Falls.

The company put in a 250-kilowatt generator to boost the plant's output to 350 kilowatts and hired Schwartz to run it. Schwartz bought the plant, but the company went bankrupt before he could pay it off.

Central Electric & Gas, a company with offices in Lincoln, Neb., and Sioux Falls, S.D., became the new owner. Jones bought it from them for a little more than $25,000, which he paid off six years ago.

"They told me when I bought it I'd be lucky if I could make it run five years," Jones said with a chuckle.

The plant still provides power to White River — about enough to keep 25 farms supplied with electricity — in conjunction with a cooperative power company in Mission.

And Don Jones doesn't much worry about keeping up with anybody.

He and his son live in the house Schwartz lived in. The log cabin walls put together before Schwartz arrived are hidden by more contemporary surfaces and a second story has been added.

Except for concern about ice jams on the river and rainfall upstream, Jones doesn't have to worry about his power plant. He said he can let it operate itself, sometimes for as long as two weeks.

He sold his livestock last year and even talks about selling the plant before too much longer.

"A fella's got to retire sometime, doesn't he?" Jones asked.

He was standing on what used to be the only bridge across the Little White River when he asked it, looking across the reservoir where most of the kids in White River learned to swim. A big game fish flipped itself out of the water 100 feet away as swallows swooped toward the power plant's reflection in the lake.

Don Jones just might be too young, at 78, to retire from all that.

New Retirement Age Supported

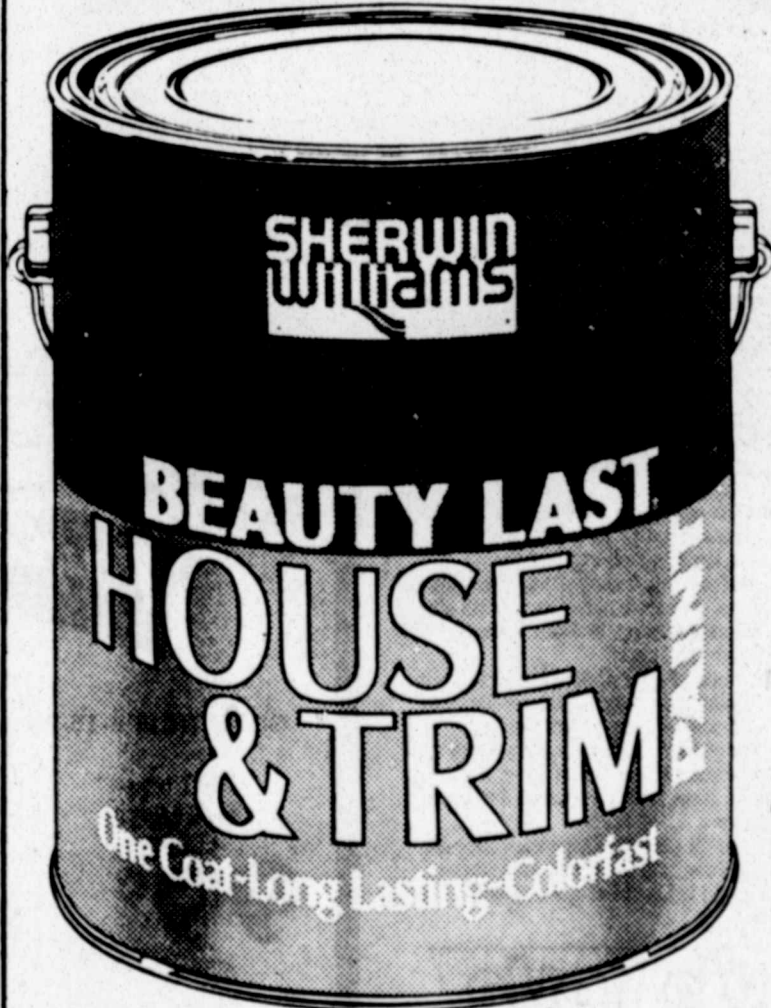

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six corporations say they agree with a House committee that workers who become 65 during the remainder of this year should not be forced into retirement.

A new law abolishes mandatory retirement for most federal workers later this year and provides, effective Jan. 1, 1979, that private sector workers may not be retired involuntarily for age until they are 70. But since the law doesn't protect private sector workers who become 65 during the remainder of this year, Reps. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., and Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., wrote large corporations urging that employees who become 65 this year not be forced to retire.

Demos Haggle Over Balloting

AUSTIN (AP) — State Democratic leaders said Tuesday that the difference between defeat and victory for the controversial horse race betting issue on May 6 was a narrow margin of 32,000 votes.

The official vote as certified by the State Democratic Executive Committee was 702,505 or about 49 percent for and 734,814 or almost 51 percent against.

Certification of the results by the state party's governing body cleared the way for the Texas Horseracing Association's announced drive in the 1979 Legislature to bring major horse race tracks to Texas.

However, the Tuesday vote sparked a brief intraparty fuss.

"If we certify these results with all these questions we stand to split the whole Democratic party," said committee member Ben Bock, New Braunfels, father of a state representative. He failed to get the horse race betting results removed from the certification resolution.

"I'm not a horseman," said Warwick Jenkins, Waxahachie, in speaking for Bock's motion, "but there was carelessness in counting these results. Some people didn't even count the referenda votes. We don't have to certify the results. They are non-binding. We ought not to say to the people of Texas that we guarantee these figures."

Committee member Jim Allison, Cooper, said about 700,000 signers of a petition put the horse race issue on the ballot, "and I think the people of Texas have a right to know the outcome."

"If we don't certify the results of the referendum, then some people will challenge our ability to certify the other election results," said Harold Hammett, Fort Worth.

A spokesman for state Democratic headquarters said it had doublechecked every report sent in on the horse race vote with county officials.

On May 16, state headquarters said the preliminary total was 685,505 to 720,012, a difference of about 34,500 votes.

Last Friday the Texas Horseracing Association said it would not protest the official certification, but it was close enough for the association to plan a drive for pari-mutuel betting in 1979.

Douglas McCreary of Calvert, chairman of the association, said the horse race vote carried Bexar County by 67 percent; Cameron, Hidalgo and Webb counties by 69 percent; Travis County by 57 percent; Galveston County by 64 percent; and Harris County by 53 percent.

McCreary said the referendum carried in legislative district that elected 86 of the 150 Texas House members and 21 of the 31 senators.

AUSTIN (AP) — Here are the official vote results of the May 6 and June 3 primaries as certified Tuesday by the State Democratic Executive Committee:

 Associate justice, 11th Court of Civil Appeals — Bob Dickson 30,323, J. Neil Daniel 27,605.
 May 6 primary ballot referenda:
 Higher interest rate — For 141,716, against 1,220,305.
 Horse race betting — For 702,505, against 734,814.

Other results of the May 6 primary were certified by the committee on May 16.

State Court Eyes Suits By Hill

AUSTIN (UPI) — The State Court of Civil Appeals will determine whether the state attorney general has the authority to sue state agencies in a case which could affect the electricity bills and quality of water for millions of Texans.

Attorney General John Hill is appealing two district judges' decisions dismissing his suits against the Texas Water Rights Commission and Texas Water Quality Board. The appeals court will hear the case today.

The two agencies, since merged into the Texas Department of Water Resources, maintained the attorney general's role is to defend any action by a state agency and the attorney general is not authorized to contest their decisions.

However, Hill, the Democratic nominee for governor, says the attorney general should first defend the public interest.

"Any power of a government official or agency is subject to abuse," he said in a written argument. "The question before this court is whether abuse of the agency's power is subject to the check of judicial review initiated by the attorney general on behalf of the people of the state of Texas."

One case involves the Water Rights Commission's overruling of Hill's objection in 1976 to allow Houston Lighting and Power Co. to pay the Lower Colorado River Authority for water for generators at the South Texas Nuclear Project.

The project is a joint venture by Houston, Austin and San Antonio and is located near the mouth of the Colorado River in Matagorda County.

Hill said the water is not owned by the LCRA and the LCRA persuaded Houston to pay only by blackmail and threats to oppose a federal license for the nuclear facility.

"This is water to which LCRA has no legal claim whatsoever," Hill's written brief contends.

Hill's other suit challenged controversial actions on the South Texas Nuclear Project and the Edwards Aquifer. The aquifer, an underground reservoir, provides water for more than 1 million people and is the principal water source of San Antonio's drinking water. The nuclear project is supposed to supply electricity to Houston, Austin and San Antonio.

Hill opposed the Water Quality Board's changes in pollution control regulations for the Edwards Aquifer.

Hill contends the changes "significantly lessen the degree of control of pollution causing activity over the recharge zone posing a threat of contamination of the reservoir which would be a hazard to those people dependent upon it for drinking purposes."

Researcher Takes Post At Tech

Dr. John R. Abernathy, weed research project leader at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Lubbock, has accepted an appointment as adjunct professor with the department of plant and soil sciences at Texas Tech University.

Abernathy's primary area of responsibility, according to Dr. Dwane G. Miller, chairman of the department, will be to assist in the graduate student program. Abernathy will aid in directing these projects for the students and in guiding their research work, Miller said.

He also will serve as a resource scientist for the plant and soil sciences faculty, Miller added, primarily in the area of weed science.

Abernathy has been project leader at the experiment station since 1973. Before that he worked for Veliscol Chemical Corp. in Chicago, first as field development manager and then a regional manager of field development for the Midwest.

He received his bachelor and master degrees in agronomy and weed science, respectively, from Oklahoma University. He received his doctoral degree in weed science from the University of Illinois.

LIKE A BULL IN A CHINA SHOP — A plant supervisor inspected one of several cars flattened Tuesday when a man, thought to be a recently fired employee started a bulldozer and turned it loose in the parking lot of a Houston plastics firm. The runaway bulldozer crashed through the line of cars about 2 a.m., flattening or severely damaging five of them before it struck an idle railroad car and halted. It is not known whether or not the man was caught. (AP Laserphoto)

Sheriff Faces 29-Year Prison Sentence

TYLER (UPI) — In a surprise plea-bargaining arrangement, Fannin County Sheriff Raymond Taylor has ended his federal racketeering trial by changing his plea to guilty and now could be sentenced to 29 years in prison.

After meeting briefly with prosecutors during a Tuesday morning recess, Taylor agreed to plead guilty to bribery and nar-otics charges in exchange for dismissal of 13 counts of a 16-count indictment against him.

The plea change came in the seventh day of the widely publicized trial. The veteran East Texas sheriff, who was suspended from duty following the filing of the indictment, had claimed he was innocent of all charges.

Before accepting the new plea, U.S. District Judge William M. Steger warned Taylor that a plea bargain arrangement acceptable to the prosecution was not necessarily binding on his court. He also warned the sheriff those charges he pleaded guilty to could net him a $70,000 fine and 29 years in prison.

Steger set a June 23 sentencing date and Taylor was allowed to remain free on a $100,000 bond.

Taylor refused to discuss his plea-bargaining agreement other than to tell reporters "everything's fine."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jeff Baynham, the prosecutor in the case, had few comments other than "justice has been served here."

"I feel this case has put on notice law enforcement officers who choose to violate the law rather than enforce it," Baynham said.

The prosecution brought forth an assortment of drug dealers, pimps and prostitutes who claimed they paid Taylor to allow them to operate without interference in Fannin County.

The testimony Monday of former prostitute Linda Strahan was representative of the stories which damaged Taylor's credibility.

"We (she and her husband) heard we could buy the sheriff there (in Fannin County) so we moved there," Mrs. Strahan said.

"When we first opened, Taylor was there two or three times a week. We were to pay Sheriff Taylor $200 per month at first."

Other witnesses had testified the sheriff solicited and accepted bribes to allow narcotics and gambling operations to flourish. One convicted drug dealer said he had purchased narcotics from Taylor.

Deputy Recalls Fatal Shooting

DENTON (AP) — A Denton County deputy testified that he shouted "police officers" twice just moments before a Texas Ranger was shot to death during a drug raid at a residence in nearby Argyle.

Capt. Dwight Crawford gave the testimony Tuesday in the capital murder trial of Gregory Arthur Ott, who is charged in the Feb. 20 shooting death of Texas Ranger Bobby Doherty.

Crawford, supervisor of the criminal investigation division of the Denton County Sheriff's Department, also introduced a Titan .38 caliber revolver and a .12 gauge shotgun confiscated from Ott's home.

Crawford was one of six officers who staged a drug raid during which Doherty was fatally wounded.

Before testimony began Tuesday, Ott pleaded not guilty to capital murder in connection with Doherty's death.

Crawford testified that he, two other deputies, two state narcotics officers and an informant went to Ott's house on a drug "buy and bust."

The officer said Doherty was shot in the forehead at a door to the residence as he and other officers circled the house.

County-district attorney Jerry Cobb also introduced two bullet fragments removed from Doherty's head during an autopsy.

About 22 persons, including crime lab technicians, will be called as witnesses, Cobb said in his opening statement to the jury.

Clinic Seeks Volunteers

Volunteers are being sought to assist a State Health Department team in screening needy Lubbock County children Monday and Tuesday for health problems.

The clinic will be conducted from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Texas Department of Health, 3411 Knoxville Ave.

Mary Robbins, a Department of Human Resources caseworker, said mothers need to be with the children receiving health checkups, so volunteers are needed to supervise other children in the family during the examination, as well as to provide transportation to and from the clinic.

Volunteers should call Alice Day, county volunteer coordinator, at 762-8922, ext. 254.

Any Medicaid recipient under 21 is eligible for the health screening and those who do not already have an appointment are urged to contact the DHR office for a time.

During the past fiscal year, 2,926 young people received screenings for medical problems in the Amarillo and Lubbock regions. Of these, 1,103 were referred to physicians for treatment.

RFK STAMP PROPOSED

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a move underway to honor the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy through issuance of a commemorative stamp. Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., disclosed Tuesday he is urging Postmaster General William F. Bolger to approve such a stamp. Kennedy was assassinated 10 years ago.

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband was suffering recurrent attacks of pain from gallstones. He refused to consult a doctor until he collapsed and was taken to the hospital where tests were made and the diagnosis of gallstones established. The doctor says he has to have surgery, but my husband refuses this and has put himself on a low-fat diet. He believes this will eliminate the attacks. Is this true? It is my thought that the stones can be eliminated only by surgery. Can they be dissolved?

DEAR READER — There is a national study program being conducted mostly by university hospital centers to study different ways that gallstones may be dissolved. Beyond this about the only way you can eliminate gallstones is by surgery.

You didn't tell me anything about your husband's age or the rest of his medical status, but if he is in reasonably good health otherwise, probably the quickest and easiest approach to his problem would be surgery. For him to have had severe enough pain to cause him to collapse implies that he has small stones passing into the bile duct that caused the severe pain.

The gall bladder itself can become infected and cause a severe acute illness very much like you can get from acute appendicitis except the location of the pain is higher. It can even rupture and cause a medical emergency.

I believe that your husband would be very well advised to follow his doctor's advice. If he doesn't trust his doctor he can get a second opinion.

To give you a better idea about gallstones, what problems they can cause and what can be done about them I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-9, Gall Stones and Gall Bladder Disease. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

The low-fat diet is often used for people who have gallbladder colic or gallstones, but it will not dissolve the stones and the basic problem will still be there.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What causes styes on their eyes? I have them removed and then they come back again and again. I would like to know how I can prevent myself from getting them. I have one right now and it will have to be removed by surgery.

DEAR READER — A sty is a small boil. It is caused by bacteria (usually staphylococci). The bacteria sets up an inflammation around the follicle of the eyelash (its root) and it behaves like a small boil. Eventually it is localized and it points and is either opened to drain or drains on its own.

The reason they occur in crops is because it is a bacterial infection and the bacteria manage to progressively affect different eyelashes. Local treatment with hot compresses is usually prescribed. A person who has repeated styes some times benefits from antibiotic therapy.

A person with such a problem should avoid using eye makeup and any other cosmetic procedures that lead to contamination of the area. Anytime a wash cloth is used or anything else around the eye it should not be used again but should go immediately to the laundry until the infectious process has been completely controlled.

Fuel Industry Officials Report Good Summer Gasoline Supply

NEW YORK (AP) — Petroleum industry officials say there appears to be plenty of gasoline for summer driving and that the healthy supply probably will keep prices from rising.

"The gasoline inventories are high, there's plenty of crude oil available and refineries aren't even running at capacity," said one industry spokesman, who asked not to be identified. "And this is all after the busy Memorial Day weekend."

And new statistics show that the average price for regular, leaded gasoline is lower than it was at this time last year and unleaded gasoline has shown only a minimal increase in price.

Dan Lundberg, a Los Angeles-based gasoline-marketing expert, said the national average price for regular gasoline last month was 60.3 cents per gallon, down from 60.4 cents in May 1977.

The national average price of unleaded gasoline was 64.4 cents last month, up only one-half cent from May 1977, according to Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg Letter, a gasoline marketing newsletter.

Oil companies and service stations generally increase the price of gasoline as the busy summer driving months approach. Last year, the price of unleaded gasoline increased by three cents per gallon between January and May.

But this year, large inventories and a slower-than-expected growth in demand have forced the oil firms to hold the line on prices. Unleaded gasoline increased in price by only one-half cent per gallon between January 1978 and last month.

Industry officials attribute the encouraging supply picture to various factors, including the recent glut of crude oil, high inventories of gasoline resulting from aggressive oil refining during the cold winter months and the increased fuel efficiency of new automobiles.

Better fuel efficiency, a slack economy and the already high cost of gasoline have combined to reduce the rate at which demand for the fuel is growing, experts said.

"There is a definite, definite falling off of demand growth," Lundberg said. "It looks like the increase for this June will be less than one percent over last year."

By comparison, U.S. gasoline demand grew by 3.8 percent in June 1977 over June 1976 and by 3.1 percent in June 1976 over June 1975.

In addition, several experts recently have predicted that gasoline consumption actually will decline through the 1980s.

As for this summer, experts said there should be no widespread supply problems. Earlier, it was feared that unleaded gasoline could be in short supply in California, but industry officials now say shipments from other areas should offset any shortage.

Yukon Log 'Skyscrapers' For Sale

WHITEHORSE, Yukon Territory (AP) — In the market for a couple of vintage skyscrapers?

Two of them are up for sale here, and a slice of the colorful history of this city in northern Canada founded on the lure of Klondike gold goes with them.

One is two cabins high; the other three cabins. They're solid log in construction.

Owner Waldemar Bellon is offering the two buildings and the 50-by-100 foot lot they occupy for $150,000, but he'll listen to any reasonable offer.

Martin Berrigan, who quit working the gold dredges at Dawson in the early 1940s and moved to Whitehorse because of health problems and built the log skyscrapers. They've become tourist attractions.

"Life is too short to allow for getting sick, so I started to build cabins for rent," historical information cards at the MacBride Museum quote Berrigan as saying before his death in 1950.

Berrigan built several one-story cabins, then put up the two-story skyscraper, in effect piling one cabin on top of another.

When a friend asked Berrigan why, if he could build two cabins one on top of the other, could he not do the same with three, he took up the challenge and finished the three-story structure in 1947.

It's 58 logs high. Berrigan cut the nine-inch timber from the banks of the Yukon River and skidded the 300-pound logs to the building site on Lambert Street with a team of horses.

Each cabin is about 16 feet square, with walkaround porches.

Berrigan reportedly charged more for the ground level cabin than he did for the top cabins, because to reach the second and third stories occupants originally had to climb outside ladders.

Bellon bought the skyscrapers about five years ago, and he has added a basement apartment under the three-story structure.

All six units in the two skyscrapers are now occupied, at rents ranging from $170 to $200 a month.

LOG CABIN SKYSCRAPER — This log cabin skyscraper is one of two Waldemar Bellon is selling in the historic Klondike gold rush city of Whitehorse, Yukon Territory. The other is two cabins high. Bellon is asking $150,000 for the two vintage skyscrapers and the lot they occupy, but says he will accept any reasonable offer. (AP Laserphoto)

Dog At Home After Absence Of Four Years

LAC LA HACHE, British Columbia (AP) — After four years, their runaway dog Prince was just a memory for ranchers Wilf and Dianne Wright. But the memory came to life when a muddy, shivering animal appeared on their doorstep.

Mrs. Wright carried the dog inside, fed him some milk and petted him.

"He began to get his strength back and, suddenly, despite all the mud and dirt, I realized it was Prince," she said Sunday.

Wright recognized Prince immediately. He shouted the dog's name and Prince ran over to him and raised a paw in greeting.

"He was shivering and shaking, and just lay down to rest," Mrs. Wright said. "He was absolutely exhausted. I don't think he could have walked another inch."

Four years earlier, Prince, then 7, had disappeared from the family's 500-acre ranch in British Columbia's Cariboo region.

"Highway 97 runs right through our ranch, and we feared he'd been hit by a car," said Mrs. Wright. "We searched everywhere and asked everyone we knew for miles around."

Improved Productivity Issue Often Postponed

By JOHN CUNIFF
 NEW YORK (AP) — Want to reduce inflation, raise the quality of life, lower the foreign payments deficit, improve the cities, solve pressing social problems, create jobs, extend leisure time?
 You do, of course, so it follows that you are also for greater productivity, which is a measure of how efficiently we use manpower, materials, machinery and money. We've measured poorly of late.

 At hearings scheduled today, members of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress were due to hear again from the experts that our recent poor record is a problem that no longer can be ignored. That is what they heard years ago, too. Meanwhile, the record has worsened. Vital as it is, improved productivity seems to be one of those issues always postponed, if not totally ignored.

 During the years since World War II the rate of improvement has been 3.2 percent a year, but during the past decade it has fallen to just 1.5 percent, and is not likely to get back to 3.2 percent before 1990 at least.

 While the United States, whose industrial superiority was built by rapid productivity increases, chugs along somewhat wearily, the rates for Japan, West Germany and some other trading partners race ahead.
 A report just issued by the nation's productivity center indicates rates in Japan and West Germany might average between 4 percent and 6 percent a year through 1990, while that for the United States lags under 3 percent.

In other words, one could argue, the competitive position of American-made goods can be maintained only by taking a smaller profit or by assistance from the federal government — that is, protectionism.

In the sense that this is a semi-capitalist country, such a turn would bring the end in sight. The spirit of free enterprise that helped spur a productivity surge in the past century might be suffocated.

The alternative — licking the problem and restoring greater productivity — would on the other hand shower the populace with such benefits that one wonders how it can be ignored, as sometimes it is.

George H. Kuper, executive director of the National Center for Productivity and Quality of Work Life, tried to underscore this point in his report, "The Future of Productivity."
 If it had merely increased over the past 10 years at the same 3.2 percent rate of the previous two decades, he said, "the difference would have meant an additional $100 billion in real GNP."
 GNP is gross national product, the total of goods and services, of steel and bicycles and food and vacations and houses and nursing care and day camps and security and technology and clean air and water.

daring investors.
 Reselling these ingredients to Americans is somewhat comparable to teaching a once healthy adult how to walk and talk, skills that he or she once learned enthusiastically and almost intuitively.

All Americans are familiar with some of them: labor-management cooperation; support for science and technology; creation of an economic climate that encourages capital formation and risk-taking.

The list includes government incentives to stimulate private enterprise, the reform of government regulation, more efficiency in government. And at least one more, as noted in the center's report: "Better public understanding of the necessity of improving productivity."

Improvements in all other areas of the productivity issue depend on such understanding, but it is not easy to put across. No easier than teaching an adult to walk after he lost that intuitive skill.

Salad Restaurants Termed Successful

By LeROY POPE
 NEW YORK (UPI) — Nearly all posh restaurants and some not so posh have salad bars these days and restaurateurs say a growing number of customers pass up entrees and dine on soup and salad.

Noticing this, Bruce Zankel, a New York financial consultant, decided there was a golden opportunity to start a chain of restaurants serving only salads, soups and desserts. He has been in business two years and already is preparing to open his fifth restaurant in Manhattan and has plans to expand to Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and Atlanta.

His first restaurant on Manhattan's 57th Street does about $15,000 a week on 75 seats, to give an idea of the whole potential.

Zankel hastens to say that much of the credit belongs to 25-year-old Cari Wyman, a luminous brunette who is his vice president and top chef.

"She designs the salads and she's more important to the business than I am now and will be for some time," Zankel said.

The cuisine consists of about 20 salads, only five of which are on the menu any given day. Prices are $3.50 to $4.50. The clientele started out about 70 percent feminine but Cari said it's at least 40 percent masculine now.

The business is called Healthworks. "I adopted the name with some hesitation," Zankel said. "We aren't really running health food bars. Everybody knows salads are good for you, but we sell taste, not dieting or therapy."

It might seem that creating new salads is a somewhat restricted field but Cari Wyman doesn't think she'll have any difficulty coming up with at least half a dozen new salads or variants of traditional salads yearly. Her present repertoire is pretty cosmopolitan. There is, for example, the Pagoda: snow peas, lotus, water chestnuts, bean sprouts and other Chinese vegetables. "Popeye" features spinach (what else?). Nicoise is tuna fillets, feta cheese, green wine olives, capers, green beans and other stuff. And there are Miss Wyman's own versions of such traditional salads as Tuscan, Waldorf and Little Caesar.

Zankel said the recent record surge in the prices of lettuce and other fresh garden greens cut sharply into his profits but he decided against raising prices. "I think good business sense requires you to ride out seasonal things like that."

Cari Wyman said she derived her interest in salads very early from her Czech father who was an enthusiast about vegetable gardening. When she grew up and became an office worker she used to make lunch salads and take them to the office. They were so tempting that her co-workers paid her to make salads for them and that eventually brought her to Zankel's attention.

As far as Zankel knows, there are no other restaurants in the country based almost exclusively on salads.

Incidentally, salads as we know them today are a relatively late comer to the diet of English-speaking peoples. Salads were a staple in the Mediterranean coun-

Lumberyards Try To Allure Women Buyers

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Lumberyards, once all-male strongholds through most of the country, are changing their hiring practices and selling goods that will attract more women, an industry official says.

"It's not just a men's room anymore or a place where the boys can get together on a Saturday," according to John Bimsen, Iowa district manager of the Northwest Lumberman's Association.

"We are getting calls from lumberyards from all over for advice on how to get the women in their stores because, in many cases, they've got the pocketbooks for the family and the access to the money," Bimsen said.

"And the yards are a little nervous and don't really know how to bring in the girls. They are finding they've got to expand."

The coming of the women means the coming of wallpaper, tiles, carpet samples, dishes and — in some cases — interior decorators to some of the lumberyards. Today's lumberyards are setting themselves up as information centers for the homeowner.

"Don't get me wrong. This doesn't mean we are losing the lumber or getting rid of the wood. It just means we're looking at both sides of the merchandising," Bimsen said.

The do-it-yourself boom is aiding the lumberyards and Bimsen said that is directly related to the women.

"Our business has been helped by the do-it-yourself boom," he said. "More and more people are doing repairs in their homes and making the changes themselves rather than spending money on it. And in many cases they are spearheaded by the wives or the girlfriends."

Bimsen admitted many men used to look at the lumberyards as a place to get away from the women.

"It's a fact of life, and some of the old-timers are having to adjust to the idea," Bimsen said.

Cadmium Concerns Environmentalists

By AL ROSSITER JR.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is growing concern among environmental health specialists about the future threat of cadmium, a ubiquitous metal some believe may have a role in causing high blood pressure and possibly even a form of cancer.

"It's just hard to believe how widely cadmium is used and how widely it becomes dispersed in the environment," said Dr. David Rall, director of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences. "We're concerned about the future effects on the population."

Cadmium, obtained as a byproduct of zinc production, is used in nickel plating, solder, vapor lamps, nickel-cadmium batteries and incandescent light filaments. Its hazards to industrial workers have long been known.

But only in the past few years have scientists realized that it also may be a growing problem for the general population.

More than 100 scientists met at the National Institutes of Health for three days last week to discuss the problem. Participants came from Sweden, Denmark, New Zealand, Japan, Yugoslavia, England, Belgium, Canada and the United States.

"What we're worried about is the slow steady buildup of cadmium in the environment and in the critical organs in the American population," Rall said in an interview.

Unlike lead and many other toxic substances, once cadmium gets in the human body, it stays there for a long time, building up to amounts scientists fear may reach dangerous levels in the years ahead.

It is its persistence in the environment that creates the problem. When waste substances containing cadmium are burned, the cadmium vaporizes and is spread to surrounding land. Salts of cadmium readily dissolve in water and can enter the water supply. Cadmium can build up in sewage wastes.

One way or another, cadmium is getting into farm land and is being taken up by some food crops. Wheat can take up cadmium from soil as can rice and some other grains and Rall said there is evidence that cadmium content is increasing in these food crops. Tobacco also contains cadmium.

"Cigarette smoking is a major source of cadmium," Rall said. "There's a small amount of cadmium in every cigarette and as you inhale it, the cadmium stays in the body."

Cadmium seems to make its way to the kidneys and liver and stay there. Rall said the cadmium buildup in the kidneys is the area of greatest concern because it is known that high levels of cadmium can cause kidney disease.

"The cadmium levels in the kidneys of the general population are a third to a half those levels that we know are toxic," Rall said. "If, as we suspect, cadmium levels will increase, we're particularly concerned about the future."

In addition to kidney disease, he said animal studies indicate that cadmium may be linked to high blood pressure in humans. Some preliminary — not yet confirmed — studies indicate a link between cadmium and prostate cancer.

Dr. Lars Friberg, a cadmium specialist from Sweden's Karolinska Institute, said one question still to be answered is precisely how much cadmium is required before it can affect the human body. Another is how can it best be controlled.

"We should very carefully think over where we need it and where we do not need it," he said.

So now, it may find a new home — appropriately — in Lincoln, Ill.

Representatives of Lincoln, the only town named for the 16th president before he became chief executive, plan a trip to Charleston Thursday to take a look at the statue.

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has offered Charleston city officials $5,000 for the statue that was erected in 1969 at a $21,000 cost to area businessmen. Charleston accepted the offer, but a final decision by the board of directors of the Lincoln Chamber must be made before the sale is final.

"If we feel it is good for us and tourism and adds to the historical outlook in the city of Lincoln, we will carry on regardless and not listen to one or two people," Walter Strohmenger, executive director of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce said.

The steel and fiberglass statue — said by some to be the ugliest likeness of Lincoln ever built — stands two miles south-east of Charleston and has attracted vandals and party-goers, not tourists, as planners had intended.

The idea for the structure came from Charleston merchant Andy McArthur who had seen a large statue of a lumberman in Iron City, Mich., and thought Charleston could use a similar attraction. Initially, a commercial developer planned to build the statue as the center of a large tourist attraction, and 21 businessmen each signed $1,000 promissory notes to begin the project.

But the developer backed out and the businessmen were forced to come up with the $21,000. Later, some of the merchants decided to hold a festival to raise money and recoup some of their losses. Few people attended, though, and the Charleston Chamber estimated that, in all, the Lincoln statue cost its backers $37,000.

Another sore point with residents is the looks of the statue.

"There is some question about how the thing looks," said Jack Ensign, a Charleston merchant and former city council member, who was one of the statue's 21 financial backers.

"People use all kinds of sarcastic adjectives to describe it. It's grotesque and the head seems to be out of proportion with the rest of the body. It's too large."

Even with all its problems, Strohmenger said the statue may be just right for Lincoln.

He said he is aware of thousands of tourists who come to Illinois each year to visit Lincoln's native home and he added that if the city purchases the statue, it probably will be placed in Rallsplitter State Park, south of Lincoln.

"If we were to put it in, we would make something that people might want to come to see," said Strohmenger.

Wolf Breeding Successful, Expert Says

BEAUMONT (UPI) — An expert says a government effort to start the nearly extinct red wolf breeding in the wilds of South Carolina coastal islands may have yielded its first newborn.

Curly Carley, director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Red Wolf Recovery Program, said monitors have yet to spot the young, but the radiocollared parents have started staying in one area.

"We have concluded something must be holding them there, and it is probably the pups," Carley said.

He said a recent effort to take a look at the mother, whose body would bear visible evidence of nursing, was unsuccessful. Carley said it may take several months to verify the pups by new tracks or sighting.

Carley said the male wolf and a female released on the island in January had been ranging between Bulls Island and Capers Island, but lately have remained on Capers.

The animals, believed to be the purest red wolves available, were captured near the Louisiana-Texas border for relocation in an area where there would be no opportunity to breed with coyotes or dogs.

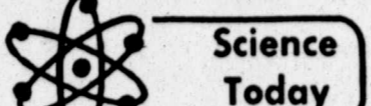

The wolves once ranged the entire Southeast and South Central United States, but had nearly bred themselves out of existence before government biologists stepped in.

Scientists have searched western Louisiana and conducted gene tests for the purest specimens available. The first litters were born last spring in the Tacoma, Wash., zoo. Other litters were born there last April.

Carley said that even if there are no pups this year, the effort has been a success because the animals — nicknamed John and Judy — seem to be living well on small animals available on the islands.

"We have shown these highly mobile canids will stay in a very restricted area and that we can develop public interest and support in a project like this," he said.

"Through the press in South Carolina, John and Judy have quite literally become local celebrities."

Deaths Remain Big Mystery

QUINCY, Calif. (UPI) — The spring thaws revealed the fate of the five slightly retarded young men. But the question of what compelled their journey into a frozen, deadly wilderness remains unanswered.

The group vanished into the stormy Sierra while driving home 50 miles after a basketball game on Feb. 24 — 110 days ago today. But why? Family members say they were frightened or forced. Authorities first speculated they lost their way, but now they aren't so sure.

They'd like to know what really happened to Jack Madruga, 30; Jack Huett, 24; Gary Mathias, 20; Ted Weiher, 32; and William Sterling, 29, all of the Marysville-Yuba City area.

Bodies of four of the missing men were found last week, and searchers led by Deputy Sheriff Dennis Forcino continued this week to look for the fifth, Mathias.

As the tragic pieces of the group's losing battle for survival in the mountains about 20 miles west of Quincy has unraveled, it has become apparent that their suffering defied description.

The five, all of whom lived happy, insulated lives with their families, deviated from their normally set pattern of outings only once — the night they turned off the freeway, drove past Lake Oroville and up a mountain road until the pavement ended. They then followed a dirt track until their vehicle mired down some 200 yards into the snowline.

They got out, so the account goes, walked and ran uphill in the middle of the night into the deepening drifts. The family points out that several were afraid of the dark and at least two — Stirling and Weiher — abhorred cold weather and the outdoors.

Now that the bodies have been found, authorities know the men, wearing street clothing and low cut shoes, made their way 19 miles through 4-and 6-foot deep snow. A storm howled most of the night, and Forcino figures it took at least a day and the night to travel that distance before Weiher and possibly two others stumbled onto a snowbound Forest Service trailer in the Daniel Zink campgrounds.

Stirling and Madruga apparently died 4½ miles short of the trailer.

Weiher, his feet frozen solid, lived in the trailer 8-13 weeks before he succumbed to exposure although he had matches at his disposal, extra clothing, a few blankets and plenty of food.

"His shoes were off and missing when we found him," the sheriff's deputy said.

Forcino believes Huett, and possibly Mathias, made it to the trailer with Weiher, then left again. He surmises that Huett, confused and horrified after Weiher died, left to get away from the body.

The discovery of the bodies ended a mystery that has plagued sheriff's departments in three counties since the car was first discovered but raised many more questions.

Why did they go up there?

Forcino said the mountains are interlaced with roads and the chances of walking straight to the trailer were very slim.

"If you didn't know where it was at, it would be one in 1,000 of finding that kind of place."

Most Shark Attacks Not Unprovoked

MIAMI (UPI) — Charles Buie, who has spent nearly half his life catching sharks, doesn't consider them especially dangerous and says most of their attacks on humans are provoked or accidental.

Buie, 43, is skipper of the 70-ton "Seaquarium," the boat that keeps the concrete canal at Miami Seaquarium on Virginia Key filled with representative species of Atlantic Ocean sharks.

There are 250 species of sharks known in the world's oceans. Buie said he has caught "thousands of sharks" belonging to about 60 species in 21 years of hunting.

Buie said that while scuba diving off the coast of Florida, "I've been run out of the water several times by sharks."

"But I don't consider sharks terribly dangerous," he said. "Statistics show the number of unprovoked attacks to be very small."

"When people are skin diving and have a 'bang stick' (explosive device to scare off sharks), they get curious about what it will do. When they see a shark, they try to use it on him."

"If you hit him with a bang stick, his attack on you is not unprovoked — it is a protective measure by the shark," Buie said.

Most other attacks by sharks on humans in U.S. waters are cases of mistaken identity, Buie said. Humans are not part of a shark's preferred diet.

"Most of the shark attacks in Florida waters occurred along the East Coast north of West Palm Beach. The water is murky and turbid. Most attacks occurred on surfers who had a hand or foot dangling in the water. Sharks feeding on fish thought those hands and feet were small fish," Buie said.

"When there is turbulence in the water, and the visibility is down, the danger of an accidental shark attack increases. The shark is a nocturnal feeder. If there is turbulence or overcast sky, the water condition below the surface is the same as at night," he said.

Buie offers this advice to summer swimmers:

- Never swim in the surf at night.
- Swim on clear days, in clear water.
- Avoid wearing bright, shiny objects like bracelets, medallions and charms because "they appear to a shark to be the shiny side of a small fish."
- Avoid excess splashing, kicking and sudden movements.
- Never dive from a boat on which you've been fishing because "you've already baited the animal with the fish you've been catching."
- Always keep an eye out for sharks while swimming and if you see one, head for shore or your boat by swimming slowly and rhythmically.
- If you encounter a shark that looks aggressive or curious while scuba diving and you are unable to reach shore or your boat, seek shelter by lying among rocks on the sea bottom.
- Don't consider yourself out of a shark's reach as you near the shore. A 14-year-old boy lost a leg to a tiger shark at Sarasota, Fla., in 1959 in just 18 inches of water.
- Always give the shark the benefit of the doubt and leave, even when you think he hasn't seen you.

Firm To Move Headquarters

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Co., the diversified appliance and electronics company best known for its sewing machines, has announced that it would move its corporate headquarters from New York City to Stamford, Conn., during the summer of 1979.

The move will affect about 430 Singer employees. An additional 60 persons employed by the company's international division will stay behind in the firm's Rockefeller Center location for the time being, the company said.

The company's headquarters will be in a new building being built in downtown Stamford, which is located on the Connecticut coast about 40 miles east of New York City.

Uniroyal To Sell Sinking Shoe Business

NEW YORK (AP) — After 86 years as one of the nation's largest footwear producers, Uniroyal Inc., the maker of Keds and Pro-Keds sneakers and other lines of casual shoes, will sell its currently unprofitable domestic shoe business, the company said this week.

Uniroyal said it had signed a letter of intent to sell its U.S. footwear business, which had sales of about $150 million last year but made a large contribution to a $2.7 million loss in Uniroyal's leisure and sport division, to Oxalaga International Enterprises of New York.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

The new concern is headed by Jonas Senter, chairman of New York-based CITC Industries, a firm that designs, distributes and imports shoes in the U.S. and markets footwear abroad.

Intense foreign competition, particularly from low-priced imports from the Far East, the high labor intensity of the U.S. footwear industry, and the ill effects of a 140-day rubber industry strike in 1976 seriously hurt Uniroyal's U.S. shoe business, a company spokesman said.

Uniroyal said it is selling the unprofitable business "to concentrate its growth in other segments of its business."

The company plans to emphasize production of radial tires, specialty chemicals and plastics.

Included in the sale are worldwide rights to Uniroyal's U.S. brand names, including Keds and Pro-Keds athletic shoes, Grasshoppers women's casual shoes, Sperry Top-Sider nautical shoes and Royal-Red Ball fishing footwear.

Uniroyal also will give up its plant in Dublin, Ga., where it employs more than 500 workers. Uniroyal's sport and industrial clothing division also are included in the sale.

Texas Sees Increase In Insurance

AUSTIN (UPI) — Only two states — California and New York — collect more tax and fee revenues from the insurance industry than Texas, according to a University of Texas associate professor of finance.

Jerry D. Todd, in an article to be published in the July issue of Texas Business Review, said the insurance industry in Texas nearly tripled in size from 1966 to 1976, growing from $2.6 billion in premium volume to $7.8 billion.

He also said Texas' annual compounded rate of growth, 11.5, was .7 percent higher than the national rate growth average.

Todd said 1,704 insurers were licensed in Texas as of Aug. 31, 1976, when the latest data was compiled. That was a slight decrease, but still more insurers than in any other state.

The finance professor said that while the number of insurers in Texas remained fairly constant over the 10-year period, the distribution among the types of insurers did not. Substantial increases occurred in the number of legal reserve stock life insurance companies, stipulated premium life insurers and stock property-liability insurers.

Total premiums written by all insurers in Texas increased almost 200 percent from 1966 to 1976, with the bulk of the growth stemming from property-liability insurance premiums and health insurance premiums.

The two insuring groups that had the highest growth rates, Todd said, were the title insurance industry and the hospital service corporation (Blue Cross-Blue Shield). The title insurance industry had a 15.8 percent average annual growth rate, primarily because of increases in real estate values and in the number of transactions.

Blue Cross grew at an average rate of 16.9 percent. Although legally Blue Cross is not an insurer, it is regulated by the State Board of Insurance and its service is insurance.

Pryor Wins Arkansas Runoff

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — After his 1972 loss to John L. McClellan in the race for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, David Pryor told a friend: "It was like everything had died — like the leaves were falling off the trees, like my own personal, private winter had settled in."

Pryor, 43, picked up the pieces of his political career, came back to win two terms as governor and made a run again this year for that same Senate nomination. This time around, it turned out much brighter for Pryor.

Overcoming charges of impropriety made against his campaign manager, Pryor handed U.S. Rep. Jim Guy Tucker his first political defeat in Tuesday's runoff election for the seat McClellan held for 35 years until his death last November.

The governor will go into the general election as a heavy favorite against Tom Kelly, 35, of Little Rock, a lightly regarded Republican nominee.

With votes counted in 2,714 of the state's 2,728 precincts, the unofficial count showed 262,743 votes, or 55 percent, for Pryor and 217,342, or 45 percent, for Tucker.

The campaign grew increasingly bitter in its final days.

Pryor's campaign manager was accused of asking the chairman of the state's utility-regulating commission to favor a gas company in a pending rate case. The manager denied the charge, and a prosecutor's investigation cleared Pryor.

"It's been like the Super Bowl to me," Pryor said. "In the last eight days, this campaign has gone from one end of the field to the other — it's been a wild experience."

Tucker, conceding defeat, predicted a November victory for Pryor: "I don't think he's going to have any trouble in the fall — I know the people of Arkansas have the good sense to send a Democrat to Washington."

Arkansas Democrats also picked nominees for two congressional seats — the one Tucker is vacating and one being given up by Ray Thornton, who was eliminated May 30 in the initial Senate primary.

For Tucker's 2nd District seat, state Rep. Doug Brandon of Little Rock, with 52 percent of the vote, defeated state Rep. Cecil Alexander of Heber Springs.

Brandon faces Republican Ed Bethune of Searcy in the general election.

For Thornton's 4th District seat, former prosecutor Beryl Anthony of El Dorado defeated Secretary of State Winston Bryant 52 percent to 48 percent.

Palmer Scores Win In Maine

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Republican Linwood E. Palmer Jr., who returned to Maine six years ago with plans to eventually become governor, will get his chance at the office in November against Democratic Attorney General Joseph E. Brennan.

Sen. William Hathaway, D-Maine, and Rep. William Cohen, R-Maine, who is expected to face a tight battle for Hathaway's seat in November, had no opponents in their party races.

Palmer, the state House GOP leader who left Maine for 18 years to become a steel industry executive in Massachusetts, won the three-way GOP primary race Tuesday over lawyer Charles Cragin III, a former lobbyist and political newcomer, and state Senate GOP Leader Jerrold B. Speers.

Palmer had 48.6 percent of the vote to 38.4 percent for Cragin and 13.1 percent for Speers.

Brennan, who finished second in the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial primary, collected 51.4 percent of the vote this time to beat state Sen. Philip Merrill, a protégé of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, and state Rep. Richard J. Carey. Merrill had 37.1 percent and Carey had 11.5 percent.

Thurmond, Ravenel Earn Nominations

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A battle for a U.S. Senate seat between a popular young reformer and a veteran conservative officeholder shaped up Tuesday as Democrat Charles D. Ravenel won his party's nomination Tuesday for the seat held by incumbent Republican Strom Thurmond.

With 743 of the state's 1,641 precincts reporting, Ravenel, a Charleston investment banker, had 66,146 votes. Greenville attorney John Bolt Culbertson had 22,929 votes. Chester contractor James T. Triplett had 19,013 and Lynchburg educator William T. McElveen had 14,223.

Thurmond faced no opposition in the Republican primary.

Voters also chose Democratic and Republican nominees for governor.

Lt. Gov. W. Brantley Harvey Jr., unable to win a majority of the votes, was forced into a June 27 runoff with former state Sen. Richard W. Riley for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

According to unofficial returns, Harvey had 88,490 votes, Riley had 78,485 and former U.S. Rep. W. J. Bryan Dorn had 67,182.

The winner of the Democratic runoff will apparently face former U.S. Rep. Edward L. Young, Republican party officials said their nearly complete figures showed Young with 12,146 votes to 11,563 votes for former businessman Raymon R. Finch, who conceded.

Thurmond, a 74-year-old former governor and a 1948 States' Rights Party candidate for president, was unopposed for nomination to the seat he has held since 1954.

The conservative Democrat-turned-Republican remained unusually busy with appearances around the state, however, in preparation for November.

Ravenel, 40, was the best-known of the Senate hopefuls because he won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1974 in his first campaign for public office.

He was later ruled off the ballot when the state Supreme Court said he didn't meet the constitutional requirement of having been a resident for five years.

Virginians Choose GOP Hopeful

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Northern Virginia Republicans have chosen Jack Herrity, a 46-year-old insurance man, to try to unseat Democratic Rep. Herbert H. Harris in November.

Herrity, chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, easily defeated two rivals for the GOP nomination in Tuesday's 8th District primary.

Mental Patient Certified For Tennessee Ballot

LAKE CITY, Tenn. (AP) — The state Election Commission, which held up Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker's GOP primary qualifying petition because of a signature, routinely certified a mental hospital patient as a candidate for governor.

David Collins, state election coordinator, says there was no reason for the commission to question the petition filed by Democrat Ben Miller, a patient at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Murfreesboro since May 25.

Miller, 51, listed his address as the Blue Haven Motel in Lake City, about 130 miles east of Murfreesboro.

Collins said he did not know Miller was a patient at a psychiatric hospital until Tuesday. Miller's petition had been in order, with 67 signatures where only 25 are required, he said.

"There's a presumption of sanity for everybody," Collins said. "We don't do a background check. Even if Mr. Miller had been adjudicated incompetent, I'm not sure that the election commission could take his name off the ballot now."

Last Thursday, the commission questioned the authenticity of Baker's signature on his qualifying petition. After Baker submitted an affidavit the next day stating his signature was genuine, the commission placed the Republican's name on the Aug. 3 primary ballot.

Miller is one of eight Democratic gubernatorial candidates certified by the five-member commission.

Residents of this East Tennessee mining community area describe Miller as a man who wears an old baseball cap with the bill out to the side and who hangs out everywhere and is friendly to everyone.

They say the former taxi driver had been talking about being governor, promising jobs to anyone who would listen and asking them to sign his qualifying petitions wherever and when.

Hospital officials said Tuesday that federal law prevented them from saying what Miller is being treated for, if anything.

"But, this is a psychiatric hospital," assistant administrator James Hubb said. "Mr. Miller is here by his own choice. He hasn't been committed by anyone and he's free to walk out the door anytime he wants."

A veteran of World War II and the Korean War, Miller said in a telephone interview he has no plans to leave the hospital, even to campaign.

"I'm just here because I don't have no home," he said. "I've been mistreated all my life but I'm going to set this straight when I become governor."

He said he decided to run for governor because too many criminals are being let loose. "I believe in capital punishment, law and order and no welfare. That's my platform," Miller said.

Sheriff Dennis Trotter of Anderson County remembers Miller coming around the courthouse in nearby Clinton with his petitions and asking everyone from judges to secretaries to sign them. Most did.

"I don't want to ever hurt Ben's feelings, but we thought it was a joke. We signed his petitions to make him happy," Trotter said. "When I read that his name was qualified, I couldn't believe it."

Florida Candidates Get Bell's Money

MIAMI (AP) — Political candidates — to every level of government from city commissions to the Legislature and possibly Congress — have received contributions from Florida officials of Southern Bell Telephone Co., a top company executive has told The Miami Herald.

"It was just a way of life," the Herald quoted Southern Bell Vice President James M. Brown. The quotes appeared in today's editions. "You need to support good candidates, and if that means you contribute, you accept that."

The issue of the campaign fund — similar to ones maintained by other Bell subsidiaries and first revealed in 1975 — has arisen again because of a disclosure statement filed recently by Southern Bell with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission asking it to forestall public hearings on the matter.

Brown, who requested an interview with the Herald, told the newspaper he began administering a secret fund of cash to be given to political candidates when he became vice president and general manager of the Florida phone system in 1967.

He said he kept thousands of dollars in a safe in his office, collected from top management personnel under a systematic, four-state program begun at the company's Atlanta headquarters. He said company lobbyists and other employees were given cash from the safe to deliver to political candidates. The program was discontinued in 1973 because of concerns about changes in federal elections' laws, he said.

"It's incumbent for us to have representatives up there in the Legislature to look after us," Brown told the Herald in defending the political contributions from the state's largest utility. "I don't know of anyone who is more susceptible to having legislation passed that affects the general public more than the telephone company."

Brown said the only candidates who didn't receive contributions were those running for the Public Service Commission, which regulates the phone company's rates.

Southern Bell President L. E. Rast, who administered the fund before Brown, denied the company broke any laws, despite an apparent conflict with a 1960s Florida election law against political contributions from anyone "operating a public utility."

He called the fund "a plan ... serving a good purpose for promoting good government."

Service Exp By Southwest

By PAT PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
SOUTHWEST AIRLINES — making a quantum leap in service this year with new flights in Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and three other Texas points — is planning to spread its wings even further soon both inside and outside the state.

Southwest plans to file an application in early 1978 to extend its routes to Amarillo and the Beaumont-Orange-Port Arthur area, hopefully in 1979, airline president Lamar Muse says.

And it hopes by 1979 or 1980, he told The Avalanche-Journal, to be operating a subsidiary company, Midway Airway, in the North.

That interstate operation would center on Chicago's close-to-town Midway Airport and serve 14 other markets, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Omaha and Pittsburgh, he said.

An application for such service already has been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Southwest's expansion plans into Amarillo have nothing really to do with Continental Airlines' pull-out there, Muse said.

"We made that de Continental announce ping Amarillo."

Muse said the airline "tic" about CAB approval proposal, although "trying to muddle up it."

At present, he said, it operates only two round-trip Midway Airport.

"However, because o to the CAB, now then who allege they want t the same cities South serve."

"They are just tryin water. I doubt if many serious," he comment Muse noted Southw contains two important

The Dallas-based commut r wants to operate the same way o Midway rather than be forced to ch what it termed the "market-stifling i state fare dictated by the CAB."

Southwest's Texas operations are reg lated by the Texas Aeronautics Commi sion.

The airline claims that its "outstanding success" in its Texas operations which are outside the jurisdiction of the CAB is

Airport Bomb Kills Worker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spring-loaded pipe bomb exploded Saturday in a locker room at National Airport, killing one Federal Aviation Administration employe, but the FAA said there was no threat to air passengers and no disruption of airline operations.
FAA and FBI officials said initial investigations gave them a good idea about the type of bomb used but no clue about the motive for the blast. They said there was no warning the bomb would go off.
An FAA spokesman, referring to the 1975 locker bomb explosion that killed 11 and injured 70 at New York's LaGuardia Airport, said: "This was no LaGuardia."

'Fight Crime' Reward Fund Leaps Ahead

THE "FIGHT CRIME NOW" reward fund — announced Wednesday by a group of anonymous citizens who want to help stem the mounting crime rate in Lubbock — has now climbed to $2,880. Robert R. Norris, vice president and general manager of The Avalanche-Journal, announced Saturday that the newspaper would add $500 to the fund. In addition, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dregne contributed $25 and three anonymous donors added $355 to help swell the total to $2,880.

Norris had announced earlier that The Avalanche-Journal, along with a local bank, would serve as the recipient for handling the fund, which will be held in trust.

From time to time, specific rewards will be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who commit crimes against society, particularly armed robberies and assault cases.

Four citizens who requested anonymity to avoid the possibility of personalities becoming involved contributed $500 each to the fund to originally establish it.

The original $2,000 has been offered for information which leads to the arrest and conviction of one or more of the three persons who, without provocation, attacked, beat and shot 21-year-old Texas Tech student Jim Adair on Dec. 15 at the service station where he worked. The remainder ($500) will remain in reserve.

Adair only recently returned to his home in Richardson from a Dallas rehabilitation center, where he had undergone treatment since Jan. 17. Still partially paralyzed and wearing back and leg braces and using crutches or a wheelchair, he will remain home for about a month, after which a diagnosis will be made on his progress.

Further contributions may be made to the fund by sending them to the "Fight Crime Now Fund" in care of The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock 79408. Persons desiring to remain anonymous should attach a note when making the donation.

Monies received will be turned over to a bank to act as trustee, Norris said. "The newspaper in this instance is not acting or attempting to act as a law enforcement agent, but in the avenue of public service to encourage those who wish to do so to participate as citizens to help make Lubbock a better and safer place in

Labor Bill Fight May Prompt 'Black Monday II'

By STEVE GERSTEL
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although the blood is not dry on the carpet from last time, the Senate may be getting near another "Black Monday."
 For those who cannot or would rather not recall, the day came about a year ago when a pair of old hands gunned down two of the new boys in town on the Senate floor.
 By the time Vice President Walter Mondale and Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd got through, there wasn't much left of Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.
 Their "filibuster by amendment" — which had tied the Senate in knots — was in a shambles.
 Steamrolled by the Mondale-Byrd tactics on the floor and deserted by President Carter, Abourezk and Metzenbaum had no choice.

 They gave up. The filibuster ended and legislation approving the deregulation of natural gas was approved.
 With Mondale acting as a willing pawn in his capacity as presiding officer of the ad hoc committees to study and find ways to avoid a repetition — not of the way Abourezk and Metzenbaum were shot down but of making a "filibuster by amendment" impossible.

The novel filibuster was preceded by the classic type in which the liberals prevented a vote with lengthy speeches. But that ended when 60 senators voted to shut them up.
 Once cloture is imposed, each senator is allowed only hour of debate which cannot be transferred and — in the past — that had always been enough to bring a final vote.

But Abourezk and Metzenbaum had filed some 200 amendments, each of them valid for consideration.

That meant the possibility of votes, votes to reconsider, appeals, quorum calls and the prospect of weeks and weeks of senators rushing to and from the floor before a judgment could be reached and other bills brought up.

It was an intolerable situation which made a mockery of the cloture rule by which 60 senators could put a stop to a filibuster.

But the various informal committees never came back with remedies, which is the reason that the Senate may find itself in another "Black Monday" situation.

The Senate is once again embroiled in another of its periodic filibusters — this time on revisions in the labor laws.

The filibuster is still in its classic stage because, despite some tries, the supporters of the bill have not been able to muster 60 votes. They may never pull it off, one way of averting a second "Black Monday."
 But if cloture is imposed, the conservatives leading the filibuster are ready to take the Abourezk-Metzenbaum primer and use it for their own purposes. They have some 500 amendments to play with.

In the absence of new rules, Byrd may once again have to become the unpopular gunslinger.

Or, as a Democrat said only half jokingly, "We've got Fritz Mondale warming up in the bullpen again."

Analysis

Senate, Byrd got the rulings that allowed him to dump — one a second — the amendments which the liberals were hoarding.
 Although it was a last resort move by Byrd, dictated by his desire to push through some form of an energy package, it left a sour taste in the Senate.
 There were immediate formations of

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Who, if anyone, has been the technical adviser to Telly Savalas during the "Kojak" series now coming to the end of the road? — Henry T., New Orleans.

A: There is no such thing as an end to the road to a successful TV series. It is continuing to run in syndication — for which we are all grateful. The "adviser" was a homicide squad in the South Bronx — next to Harlem, one of New York's toughest areas. Their job was to prevent Kojak from making technical mistakes that could easily get a cop killed. And Telly was smart enough to accept the advice. That is one of the reasons why Kojak will always remain a series that melded violence with entertainment. Which is why professional officers applauded not chucked in derision at the action. When Telly visited the south Bronx precinct, he received congratulations for a role well played — not a discordant Bronx cheer.

(Footnote: Willie Sutton is Kojak's No. 1 fan. The one-time bank robber and escape artist, now enjoying extended freedom for the first time in years, told Dick Ryan that Kojak intrigues him. "He is the only one who talks and acts like the officers I encountered in my time.")

Q: I'm steadily dating two men, both of whom say they want to marry me. One is my age (in his 20s), the other, old enough to be my grandfather. Married twice but divorced, he's charming, sexy — and rich. Which one, from your experience, should I say yes to? — Mary O.C., Minneapolis.

A: We'd rather pass along what a friend of ours with a history of similar marital dilemma said: "I married the first time because I was too young to know better. And the second time because I was too old to know better!" You can take it from there.

For the Eat-Those-Words Dept. (in the April 4 edition of Us Magazine): CBS-TV film critic David Sheehan predicted, "Diane Keaton (Academy Award nominee for Best Actress) won't win an Oscar for 'Annie Hall.' Keaton will be the victim of purely petty politics," wrote Sheehan. "She is a Hollywood outside who stars in an anti-Hollywood movie made by a rebel named Woody Allen, with whom Keaton once had a love relationship that was the inspiration for 'Annie Hall'...The prevailing prejudices in Hollywood make everything and everyone associated with 'Annie Hall' a long shot at best."

Q: There used to be a time when kissing scenes were forbidden in movies produced in India. With the lifting of other taboos in India, is kissing now allowed? — T. Raymond, Tulsa, Okla.

A: Some Bombay filmmakers thought so until the Central Board of Censors cut out such a scene from I.J. Johar's film, "Nasbandi."

Q: Though many take credit for originating the open phone public participation radio format, we're told the real daddy of the idea is newsman-commentator Alan Courtney. Is that what he's doing today? — Eddie Black, Queens, N.Y.

A: Alan's line is still the busiest in the south Florida area. He's heard three or four hours every night broadcasting over Miami's All-News station WINZ and consistently pulls the highest ratings in this highly-populated sector of the South. He continues to mix controversy with nostalgic commentary, and when he runs out of breath, airs a pop record. Just as he did when he first came upon the scene decades ago in Miami and New York. Meanwhile Courtney's written more than a hundred songs, including his get-on and get-off theme.

Q: Why does activist-comedian Dick Gregory say that "he lives in fear of violent death at government hands"? — O.W., St. Louis.

A: He claims he's being harassed for exercising "my freedom of speech," in criticizing the government. He's so cautious because of his suspicions, that when he's on a speakers' platform, he claims he never drinks the water provided, nor does he ever dine on college campuses. Furthermore, he says he does not write checks because he's afraid the IRS will alter them and "bust me."

Personal Postcards:

Complex Stock Deal Breaks NYSE Dollar Sales Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Tyco Laboratories — in one of the most complex deals Wall Street has seen in years, and one which involved the largest stock trade in New York Stock Exchange history — has ended its attempt to acquire Cutler-Hammer Inc.
 But there's still a fight for control of Cutler-Hammer, a Milwaukee-based electronic equipment manufacturer.
 Eaton Corp., which paid $115.8 million Monday for the 2.1 million Cutler-Hammer shares owned by Tyco, said it would try to gain a majority interest in the electronics firm. And if successful, Eaton said, it would sell to Tyco all of Cutler-Hammer's holdings in yet a fourth firm — Leeds & Northrup.

Of the 2.1 million Cutler-Hammer shares sold by Tyco to Eaton, 1.8 million were sold in one block for $55 per share. The $103 million deal was the largest in terms of dollars in the history of the New York Stock Exchange, exchange officials said.

The series of rapid-fire events began Monday afternoon when Cutler-Hammer, which has been trying for months to avoid takeover by Tyco, announced that it had itself acquired another firm — Davis & Wilder Inc., an electronics manufacturer.

Cutler-Hammer officials insisted that the deal, in which Cutler-Hammer agreed to turn over a minimum of 25,000 of its own shares to Davis & Wilder, was not linked to Tyco's takeover bid.

Moments later, Tyco announced from its Exeter, N.H. headquarters that it had sold all of its Cutler-Hammer holdings — which amounted to about one-third of Cutler-Hammer's outstanding stock — to Eaton Corp., a Cleveland, Ohio-based conglomerate that specializes in vehicular products.

According to the agreement, if Eaton should acquire a majority interest in Cutler-Hammer, it would attempt to sell Cutler-Hammer's holdings in Leeds & Northrup to Tyco. Cutler-Hammer owns about one-third of Leeds & Northrup, which is based in North Wales, Pa. and makes measuring and control devices.

So Tyco, which said it earned about $5 million after taxes on the Cutler-Hammer deal, also could acquire a large interest in Leeds & Northrup.

Shortly after the Tyco announcement, the stock exchange said it had checked its records and found that the block sale of 1.8 million shares of Cutler-Hammer shares to Eaton had broken a record set in 1968 in the $76 million sale of 730,000 shares in American Standard Inc.

The developments occurred so quickly that Cutler-Hammer spokesmen, aware that Tyco had sold its shares, did not know until informed by a reporter that the purchaser was Eaton.

"It's Eaton," spokesman Frank Hayes shouted to other company officials. "He says it's Eaton."

Hayes refused comment on the deal, but when asked if the company felt a bit like a pawn, he said: "Yeah, I suppose."

Free Market Analysis
 This is not ordinary "Gossip" it's "Choice". We have just found out the Owner is weak and willing to sell this three bedroom, one bath single garage, "spic and span" inside and out. Drive by 2612 45th and give one of our Agents a chance to "show it off".
 Is your foresight as good as your hindsight? This one is my favorite and it will be yours too. Three bedrooms, with the largest one installed. Beautifully custom draped throughout and this home is only one year old. Located in Farrar and priced to sell!
 Call us today about our "Booth Rental" Beauty Shop for sale and it wears a "Budget Price Tag".

CREDIT ONE TO THIS CONSUMER — Divorce lawyer Richard Ostor of Garden City, N.Y., displays his Citibank Master Charge card Tuesday after he won a court victory against the nation's second-largest commercial bank. The victory came when a judge ruled that Citibank had to refund a 50-cent-a-month service fee it had imposed on its Master Charge customers who paid bills promptly and thus did not incur finance charges. "It's proof the consumer does have rights," Ostor said. (AP Laserphoto)

Court Orders Bank To Refund Charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Chalk one up for the little guy.
A Long Island divorce lawyer took the nation's second largest commercial bank to court and won the first round. Not only for himself, but for several hundred thousand other people as well.

"It's proof the consumer does have rights. It tells the banks they can't push the little guy around," said Richard Ostor of Garden City, N.Y., discussing his victory.

That victory came Monday when a judge ruled that Citibank had to refund 50-cent-a-month service fees it had imposed for 20 months on its Master Charge customers who paid their bills promptly and, therefore, did not incur finance charges.

Ostor specializes in divorce. "I very rarely get involved in public-interest cases," he said Tuesday.

In April 1976, however, Citibank announced the 50-cent fee. "I was annoyed," Ostor recalled. "I was very annoyed. I thought their action was completely illegal. I wanted to make a stand."

Citibank said the fee was necessary to offset rising costs. The idea of "service charges" for the previously free bank cards was expected to spread.

Other financial institutions failed to follow the Citibank lead, however. And last January, Citibank itself dropped the 50-cent promptness payment. The bank conceded consumers had objected to the charge, although it declined to say whether it lost customers because of it.

"I would think that this ought to be a very clear warning to them," said Kurt Prins, a staff member of the House consumer affairs subcommittee. "They had to eat crow and now they have to pay."

A Citicorp spokesman said the bank would appeal the ruling by Justice Andrew DiPaola of the state Supreme Court, the first rung of New York's legal ladder.

A second bank spokesman said that about one-third of Citibank's 1 million Master Charge cardholders would be affected. A spokesman for DiPaola said the ruling could mean reimbursement "of at least $1 million to $2 million."

Ostor will get back only 50 cents. He paid the fee only once — by accident. When he realized what he had done, he wrote to the bank and got back "form correspondence" explaining the new charge. "I knew that to go to the bank would be futile," he said.

Early in 1977, Ostor filed suit; his case was consolidated with those of two other men. On Monday, DiPaola said the charge was illegal and ordered the refunds.

"The clear intent of the law is to give a credit card holder an opportunity to receive his bill and to have a reasonable period of time to make payment prior to any service charge being imposed," DiPaola said. "Further, it is unfairly discriminatory to assess a charge against one who pays his bill promptly."

Ostor still has — and uses — his Citibank Master Charge card. He pays promptly. With the single exception, he has ignored the service charge, deducting it from his bill. Citibank took no action. "They even raised my credit line," he said. "It shows you how stupid computers are."

Increased Enrollment In SER Ordered

Service, Employment and Redevelopment (SER) — a job training organization — was instructed at the South Plains Association of Governments meeting Tuesday to increase enrollment in its programs.

During a quarterly assessment, it was discovered that SER was spending too much money on administrative and services budgets, and not enough on wages and training.

The wages and training are for the jobs the organization is to help provide. By increasing enrollment in the job programs, a larger percentage of the budget will be spent for wages and training.

The Department of Labor outlines specific guidelines for percentages spent in each category, and by increasing enrollment SER will fall under these guidelines.

The board also gave favorable comment to an application by the Hockley County Retired Senior Volunteer Program for a $7,350 to buy a new station wagon.

The board also authorized Cochran County Judge Glenn W. Thompson, SPAG president, to sign an authorization for the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee to submit its planning application for fiscal year 1979.

The plan calls for a 10 percent salary increase for the Criminal Justice planner and staff.

The board also voted to apply for a supplemental grant of $2,467 for the SPAG Law Enforcement Training Program.

The program provides basic training to law enforcement officers. The budget went over because 96 officers received basic training instead of the planned 60 officers.

Pro-ERA Boycott Asked By Mayor Of Wichita

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Mayor Connie Peters is asking other Wichita city officials to boycott hotels and restaurants when they attend the National League of Cities conference in St. Louis in November because Missouri has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

"We'd like to camp out in the downtown area close to the meetings," she said in an interview from New York, where she is attending meetings with representatives of a state trade delegation. "But we'll check out the St. Louis codes regarding camping. We don't want to violate any laws."

Reactions To Kennedy Noted At White House

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although Jimmy Carter's White House staff denies it, the activities of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., certainly seem to make high administration officials jump.

The White House announced on Tuesday it was sending Vice President Walter F. Mondale to speak to the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Atlanta next week.

The decision came five days after the big-city mayors, miffed that President Carter declined to appear, had turned to Kennedy as their main speaker.

The senator, who canceled scheduled appearances in Boston that afternoon, will still address the main luncheon of the mayors' conference on June 19. Mondale is to appear the next day.

Meanwhile Tuesday, Kennedy wound up a two-day meeting which he sponsored here for 150 municipal officials from Massachusetts. Eight high administration officials responded to Kennedy's request for guest speakers.

Asked if the mayors' invitation to Kennedy had affected the decision to send Mondale, senior White House aide Anne Wexler replied, "Not really." She also said she knew of no discussion of any coordinated response to Kennedy's invitations to his own municipal meeting.

But Tim Kraft, senior political coordinator in the White House, complained to a group of reporters on Tuesday that he had not been consulted — and should have been — on Carter's decision to turn down the mayors' invitation.

One administration source, who declined to be identified, said of the municipal meeting: "When Ted Kennedy writes or calls, people in this administration move."

In two days, the meeting that Kennedy sponsored with Massachusetts mayors drew Patricia Harris, secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, anti-inflation chief Robert Strauss, Attorney General Griffin Bell, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, chief White House domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, and Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Kennedy's spokesman, Tom Southwick, said the municipal meeting produced a significantly higher turnout than the senator had gotten for similar meetings during Republican administrations.

The episode developed this way: The mayors invited Carter. He declined. The mayors asked for U. N. Ambassador Andrew Young. He couldn't make it, either. The administration then said it would send Wexler and two Cab-net members. The mayors accepted those three, but turned to Kennedy to be the main speaker. He accepted quickly. Only then did the administration offer Mondale.

A source close to the municipal group said the mayors were upset that Carter declined, and the decision to invite Kennedy was intended to put some political heat on the White House.

Kennedy came out considerably ahead of Carter in a Gallup poll of Democrats in April on their choice for the party's 1980 presidential nomination.

Despite his repeated public support for Carter's renomination in 1980 and his consistently strong backing for Carter's legislative proposals, the Massachusetts Democrat is still eyed somewhat warily by the White House.

Kennedy has frequently disclaimed any interest in the presidency. Sounded out recently about his plans for 1980, the senator gave this typical reply: "I expect him (Carter) to run, and I am going to support him."

The mayor's conference had never been able to persuade Republican Presidents Richard M. Nixon or Gerald R. Ford to address their annual meeting during eight years in office. The mayors had anticipated getting Carter this time, however, because he has just sent Congress a comprehensive urban policy bill and because his staff has been meeting with their representatives and other interest groups to line up support for it.

The White House said Carter's trip to Panama on June 16-17 for an exchange of Panama Canal treaty documents would prevent him from attending the mayors' meeting, even though the mayors offered to schedule his appearance any time between June 17 and June 21.

Base Cutbacks Avoid Texas Installations

By TERENCE HUNT
WASHINGTON (AP) — Military cutbacks proposed by the Pentagon two months ago could hit Northeast and Midwest states with an annual payroll loss of $206 million, according to a study released today.

Under the proposal, Texas will lose no active military bases, though several defense-related jobs will be affected.

The study, performed for congressmen from the region, said the cutbacks would eliminate more than 10,000 military and civilian jobs in the Northeast and Midwest with a payroll loss of $110.7 million.

The loss of those jobs, in turn, could cause a secondary job loss of 8,000 positions in the private sector with a payroll loss of $95.3 million, according to the study.

The study was conducted by the Northeast-Midwest Institute, a research organization created by the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition, a group of congressmen from 18 states in the region.

Coalition members, in a letter to President Carter, said they were "deeply disturbed" by "the continued removal" of military facilities from Northeast and Midwest states. They asked to meet with the president to protest the cutbacks in their region.

The coalition said the Pentagon's proposal would close or substantially reduce almost one-sixth of the principal military bases in the Northeast and Midwest.

The study said the Northeast-Midwest region stands to lose 2.4 percent of its share of defense jobs, while the South and West each would lose 1.2 percent of their shares.

In absolute numbers, however, the South would suffer the greatest loss because it has the largest number of defense jobs. The study said the plan announced by the Pentagon on April 26 would slash 13,043 of the 1,058 million defense jobs in the South, 10,228 of the 423-911 defense jobs in the Northeast-Midwest and 9,710 of the 780,754 defense jobs in the West.

The Pentagon says the proposed realignment of bases in 31 states and the District of Columbia would result in an annual savings of $337 million through a net reduction of 23,200 jobs.

Not all of the states represented by the Northeast-Midwest coalition would be affected by the cutbacks. For example, Connecticut, Delaware, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Iowa and Nebraska would not lose any jobs under the cutbacks. Indiana would gain 4,100 jobs, more than any other state.

California would lose 11,700 jobs under the realignment, more than any other state, followed by Illinois, where 6,400 jobs would be cut.

City Church To Request Variance

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff
A representative of the First Baptist Church will ask the Zoning Board of Adjustment Thursday to permit the church to build parking lots on nine lots on 13th Street in Overton South.

Bobby J. Moody, appearing for the church, will make the request at the 8:15 a.m. meeting in city council chambers. The Overton South Neighborhood Association, which helped defeat the church's request for parking on 14th Street a year ago, is expected to support the current request if the church agrees to extensive landscaping of all its lots.

If the parking request is approved by the ZBA, no houses would remain in the 1900 block of 13th Street. Also at Thursday's meeting, Tom Sawyer will appear for Casa Blanca Restaurant at 2138 19th St. to request a variance in parking requirements for the eatery.

Some opposition from the Overton South Neighborhood Association is expected to the request, which has been placed on the ZBA agenda and withdrawn three times.

Neighborhood opposition also is expected to the request of Jack McClendon to allow the expansion of a dance floor at the Big Texan Steak Ranch in Monterey Shopping Center.

Nine letters opposing the request already have been submitted, citing noise and traffic as reasons for fighting the dance floor addition.

Betty Fred will request a special exception from the board to permit her to operate a beauty parlor in a mobile home at 6001 34th St.

Gary Hall will ask for a variance of the side yard setback requirements on a lot at 2424 21st St.

The board also will be asked to approve a request from the Calvary Baptist Church which had already been approved last month. However, the approval for a temporary worship facility at 82nd Street and Albany Avenue was made on the wrong lot.

Coleman H. Cox will request a variance to allow him to add to a house converted to apartments located at 2209 6th Street.

William M. Groux appearing for Bill Groux Texaco will request a special exception to permit him to expand his service station located at 7002 Indiana Ave.

The case arose when two youths were accused of theft and filed motions, based on their affidavits, for summary judgment. The state did not respond, and the trial court granted the motions and dismissed the state's allegations.

In reversing the trial court, the Dallas civil appeals court stated that the legislative intent of the Family Code "was to protect juveniles from the taint of criminality and to treat and rehabilitate them. Whether a juvenile has engaged in delinquent conduct and consequently is in need of supervision or rehabilitation cannot be adequately determined by affidavits."

Further, the appeals court said, a summary judgment in which full facts are not developed is not permissible in a "proceeding to ascertain whether a juvenile is in need of supervision, or whether the juvenile has engaged in delinquent conduct."

The Supreme Court did not address that reasoning. It merely said that the Family Code provides that the youth may appeal from a court order, but does not grant that right to the state.

This omission is particularly significant," the Supreme Court said, when compared to the law that preceded the Family Code, "which granted the right of appeal to 'any party aggrieved.' We conclude that by this omission the Legislature did not grant the state the right to appeal from adverse judgments in juvenile delinquency proceedings."

Mart Fails To Hold Early Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today, failing to make a strong early gain stand up. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 6 points in early trading, was off 43 at 856.55 by noon today.

Gainers maintained a moderate lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. The early buying was attributed to enthusiasm over recent market gains. After declining in early trading Tuesday, the market rebounded to finish about even for the day, and several individual issues scored dramatic advances in response to corporate news.

But once the initial wave of buying passed this morning, the market began to pull back steadily. Analysts said many traders appeared to be taking a cautious position awaiting President Carter's news conference today and the Federal Reserve's weekly report on money and credit conditions Thursday.

Casino gambling issues, the market's hottest group in recent weeks, continued to attract buyers. Bally Manufacturing rose 1 1/4 to 35 1/4. Play by Enterprises picked up 1 1/4 to 17 1/4, and Resorts International class A shares jumped 5 1/2 to 56 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange.

Resorts said today, its profits would increase sharply this year because of earnings from its new casino in Atlantic City, N.J. The NYSE's composite index rose 1 1/2 to 56.92, and the Amex market value index climbed 1.02 to 151.47.

Volume on the Big Board reached 17.48 million shares by noon, up from 12.54 million at the same point Tuesday.

Budget Cuts, Defense Increases Hard To Resolve

By R. GREGORY NOKES
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost in the same breath, former President Gerald Ford criticized his successor the other day for failure to substantially cut the budget deficit and for killing the B-1 supersonic bomber program.

It doesn't require a whole lot of thought to figure out the problem with that one. Spending on the B-1 bomber would cost billions. So what does Ford have in mind?

Ford, like many other critics of budget deficits, also favors increased spending on defense programs. What they really are saying is, cut the rest of the budget but leave defense alone.

And since defense spending will total about $127 billion in 1979, or more than 25 percent of the total budget of about $500 billion, it implies some pretty hefty cut-work on what is left.

Everybody has his sacred cow in the budget, and it is the total of those untouchable items that makes it difficult for President Carter to sharply reduce the deficit as critics such as Ford demand.

There are pressures from mayors to spend more on cities. There are pressures from the elderly and near-elderly to keep Social Security benefits rising with inflation. And there are government workers who feel entitled to pay increases that also keep up with inflation.

Supporters of the CIA have won approval for spending on 1979 spying activities of around $10 billion, although the exact amount is a secret. Neither Republicans nor Democrats favor leaving the unemployed and the inner-city poor to starve.

All this has created a major problem for Carter, who seems committed to holding down spending and working toward a balanced budget as any president in nearly two decades.

Arthur Burns, now a private citizen, attracted public attention recently by calling on the president to demonstrate his commitment to fighting inflation by accepting a 10 percent cut in presidential pay. But inflation-fighter Burns didn't volunteer to cut his pay during the eight years he was chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Remodeling, Building To Compete

SEATTLE (AP) — Home remodeling will challenge home building during the 1980s for consumers' dollars, according to Harry J. Kane, an executive vice president of Georgia-Pacific Corp., the world's largest plywood producer and a leading manufacturer of building materials.

The remodeling market probably will approach $40 billion annually, Kane told analysts gathered here this week for a forest products seminar.

The forest products industry is working on new production techniques for more efficient operations, substantial production increases in some areas and conservation of energy, Kane said.

A new dry process for making gypsum wallboard, which would eliminate the energy and water consuming slurry process now used, is in the works, he said.

The industry also is developing new pulping methods that would use fewer chemicals, recycle water to conserve energy and minimize pollution, he said.

Oil Companies Plan Merger

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles and Husky Oil Ltd. of Calgary announced Tuesday that the directors and management of both companies have agreed Occidental will acquire Husky.

The acquisition will be made through an exchange offer of 80 percent or more of Husky's common stock, the firms said after meetings in Los Angeles and Edmonton.

The joint statement said Husky had decided to turn down an offer by Petro-Canada, Canada's federal oil corporation, to purchase Husky's common shares.

All the preferred shares will be cumulative $100 stated value stock, of which 90 percent will carry a dividend of $10, and 10 percent will carry a dividend of $7.50.

The $7.50 preferred shares will be convertible into Occidental common shares at a premium of about 16 percent.

On the basis of present market values and exchange rates, each Husky shareholder will receive about 0.402 non-convertible preferred shares and 0.045 convertible preferred shares for each share of Husky common stock.

Examiner Favors Continental's Bid

AUSTIN (UPI) — Continental Oil Co. should be allowed to mine for uranium at 29 sites in six South Texas counties, says a hearings examiner for the Railroad Commission.

Chesley Blevins said Monday he had advised the commission to approve Continental's application. Blevins also said 18 of the sites should have more stringent reclamation standards than those set out in his original recommendation.

Blevins presented his recommendations at a conference on the Conquista Project covering about 11,000 acres in Karnes, Gonzales, Atascosa, Live Oak, Duval and Wilson counties.

The commission directed the Surface Mining Division to circulate the modified proposal for comment by interested parties. A division spokesman said the procedural step would take 60 days before the application could be brought before the commission for a final decision.

And did you ever notice what happens when a president tries to close a military base in this country?

No matter how outmoded the base might be, many of the same lawmakers who argue for economizing in government shed crocodile tears on the floors of Congress to keep them open for the sake of national defense, the local economy or both.

Carter, Ford and former President Richard M. Nixon each tried to save a couple of hundred million in the budget by stopping aid to school districts where there were large numbers of federal workers, since the workers pay taxes just as any local resident. But each time Congress put the money back.

There just aren't a whole lot of things in the budget the president can cut. Between 75 percent and 80 percent of the budget is considered beyond the president's control in any one year.

Congressionally mandated Social Security expenditures of $108 billion in fiscal 1979 are a prime example, and that's 22 percent of the budget. Interest on the public debt of $55 billion is another.

Ironically some of the defense spending is in the part of the budget that technically is controllable.

Carter has decided he wants to reduce the fiscal 1979 budget deficit by another

$3 billion to $5 billion to reduce it below $50 billion, but his budget people say the only way may be to further trim his proposed tax cut because it's too late to change anything else. The fiscal year begins on Oct. 1.

The fiscal 1979 budget, the first of his presidency, provided for an increase of just 2 percent in real spending over 1978, after discounting for inflation, which isn't much.

It also is a smaller increase in real terms than for any other budget in recent times, including the two Ford budgets.

National health insurance, potentially very expensive, is being pushed onto the back burner, and Carter's proposed welfare reform program is being trimmed because of its potential cost.

In planning for fiscal 1980, Carter is projecting scarcely any increase in real purchasing power at all, no more than 1 percent. But even a 7 percent increase just to offset inflation means a hike to $535 billion from the $500 billion in fiscal 1979.

Carter is aiming for a budget deficit in fiscal 1980 of between $35 billion and $40 billion and some veteran government budget planners say the budget itself will be one of the tightest they've ever seen.

There is no question the government spends more money than it has, and it has been doing this for a long time. The problem is how to achieve a better balance between revenues and receipts without causing a major upset in the economy, or discriminating against an already disadvantaged group in the process.

Carter is proposing to do this by gradually reducing the government's share of the nation's wealth, from the current 22 percent of the gross national product to about 20 percent by 1981. Spending would increase each year, but not as fast as the nation's overall income, which would leave proportionately more money for the private economy. In the best of all worlds, the earliest the budget can be balanced now appears to be 1982, a year later than Carter's original goal.

He could be stymied even in this timetable by the looming possibility of a new recession next year, which would undoubtedly increase the deficits once again as the government poured new money into unemployment and welfare benefits, while its revenues would declined.

SUCCESSFUL CADDY—Andy Bean, winner of the last two events on the PGA tour, totes his own golf bag Tuesday in a practice round at Cherry Hills Country Club in Denver, site of the U.S. Open which begins Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Pros Face 'Murderous' Course In U.S. Open

DENVER (AP) — The sight of 6-foot-4, 215-pound Andy Bean tearing into an iron shot in the rough but managing to advance the ball a mere 20 feet underscored the point: The rough at Cherry Hills is murderous.

The 152 golfers assembled for the 78th U.S. Open Championship this week were almost unanimous in their appraisal of the rough, grown tall and thick by a rare, week-long rainfall earlier this month.

"The winner won't be in that rough much," predicted Bean, who must be rated one of the favorites after back-to-back titles at the Kemper Open and Memphis Classic the past two weeks.

"I hit that shot of mine on No. 10 about 20 feet, and I was swinging as hard as I could. You just have to stay out of it to win."

Jack Nicklaus, winner of 14 major tournaments and who figures to be a factor in this one, called the rough "the most uniform and difficult I've seen in an Open in a number of years. You cannot drive the ball off the fairway and expect to make a good shot from there."

Tom Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and the current top money-winner, said the rough is "unmerciful. If you get in there, you really can't play."

Ben Cranshaw added that "if you get in the rough, it'll just cost a shot, that's all."

Because of that danger and the narrow fairways, the players frequently have chosen irons off the tee during practice rounds this week. With Cherry Hills' 7,083-yard length made shorter by the thin air at Denver's mile-high altitude, it made no sense to sacrifice direction for distance off the tee.

Nicklaus said he pulled out his driver only five times during his practice round

Tuesday, and said he doubted he would use it that much during the tournament.

"There's no reason to," he said. "This course is playing very short."

Cherry Hills, which is hosting its third Open, has undergone some alterations since Arnold Palmer began his meteoric rise to the top of the golfing world with a final-round 65 to charge from 7 strokes back and win the event in 1960.

The course has been lengthened somewhat, and 12 sand traps have been added. The major change occurred at No. 1 — once a 346-yard straightaway hole on which Palmer drove the green en route to his 65. But it's a 399-yard dogleg-left hole now.

Palmer has returned, thanks to a special exemption granted him by the U.S. Golf Association, and his fabled army of followers remains loyal. Although a sentimental favorite, he can't be considered one of the top choices to win this week. After all, he last captured a major title in 1974 and last won in this country in 1973.

Instead, the favorites include Bean, Nicklaus, Watson, defending champion Hubert Green, two-time winner Lee Trevino, 1974 titlist Hale Irwin and 1965 champion Gary Player.

The games of Green, Trevino and Irwin seem especially suited for this event. All are accurate strikers of the ball, possess strong competitive streaks and are currently playing well. The tournament is something of a homecoming for Irwin, who grew up in nearby Boulder, starred at football and golf at the University of Colorado, and played here often as an amateur.

Player, who says he wants to win this tournament more than any other in the world, won three consecutive tournaments, including the Masters, earlier this year.

Other possibilities are European sensation Severiano Ballesteros, always-dangerous Tom Weiskopf, PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and former Open winners Jerry Pate and Lou Graham.

The par-71 course features several short par-4s among the first seven holes, but toughens considerably from the eighth hole to the finish. Trevino calls those final 11 holes "the toughest you'll ever want to see."

Temperatures have climbed into the 90s during practice rounds, but it is expected to cool off somewhat for Thursday's opening round. However, a chance of thunderstorms, accompanied by strong, gusty winds also is predicted for Thursday.

Six Teams Hoping For Carew's Services

By The Associated Press

If the price is right, any of six American League teams will soon find itself with one of baseball's premier hitters.

Minnesota Twins president Calvin Griffith is the auctioneer and six-time AL batting champion Rod Carew is the merchandise up for sale — until midnight Thursday.

Here are Griffith's ground rules: "We're not going to give him away. We need a first baseman and pitcher and more." The 66-year-old president said Tuesday. "If we come up with the right names, okay. If not, there's another 12 teams in the National League we can talk to this winter. I don't have to make a trade. Carew's obligated to the Twins through 1979."

Carew is in the last year of a three-year contract that pays him about $190,000 annually and has an option year in 1979.

Last week, Carew rejected a five-year, $2 million offer from Griffith.

Carew, the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1977, has stated that he would play for the New York Yankees, Kansas City Royals, Boston Red Sox, California Angels and the Texas Rangers.

Four clubs—the Yankees, Royals, Rangers and a team not on Carew's list—have expressed interest in the 32-year-old first baseman, but Griffith said none of the offers are good enough for "what we

Oliver's Hit Stops Gale's No-Hit Game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Making the right move at the wrong time cost young Rich Gale a no-hitter Tuesday night.

And nobody felt worse than Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog, who made that move.

Gale, a hard-throwing, 6-foot-7 rookie, was seven outs away from no-hitting the Texas Rangers when to the plate came lefthanded-hitting Al Oliver.

Herzog signaled to first baseman Pete LaCock to move away from the bag toward second. One pitch later, Oliver hit a hard grounder squarely over first base for a triple.

It turned out to be the only hit the Rangers could muster as the Royals, slugging a record-tying seven doubles, took a 5-0 victory.

"Every National League manager told me he never hits one over the bag," Herzog said apologetically. "And just before Oliver swung I said, 'If he gets Oliver, the sonofagun is going to pitch a no-hitter.'"

"Whitey played me right," Oliver agreed later. "I saw LaCock move off the bag just before the pitch. It's a rarity when I hit one over the bag."

For Gale, who is having a fairy tale season, it was the sixth victory against only one defeat and his first big-league shut-out. He made a weak effort to be philosophical about missing the no-hitter. But his disappointment was obvious.

"We don't make up any more games on Oakland for a no-hitter, so what difference does it make?" he said. "I wouldn't have minded having it, though I thought

Norman Gains Quick Revenge

By The Associated Press

It didn't take Fred Norman long to settle a score with the Cincinnati Cubs.

The last time the Cincinnati left-hander faced the Cubs, he was blasted off the mound by a fierce Chicago attack that resulted in a 10-1 loss.

That was a week ago. But on Tuesday night Norman threw it back in the Cubs' teeth, combining with reliever Doug Bair to fashion a four-hit, 1-0 triumph.

"Everything was there, the good command and good location," said Norman.

It was one of Norman's best performances in a Cincinnati uniform. He didn't allow a hit until Steve Ontiveros singled in the fifth and only three Cubs reached second base until the ninth.

Then, with runners on first and third, Chicago

Bair came on to strike out the last two batters and preserve the victory.

"He's the best reliever we've had since I've been here," Norman said.

Norman also got a big assist from his catcher, Don Werner.

"He called 90 percent of the pitches," Norman said of the youngster who is substituting for the injured Johnny Bench.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 3

Lee Lacy slugged a three-run homer in the first inning and Steve Yeager hit a solo shot in the second to lead Los Angeles over Philadelphia.

Don Sutton scattered eight hits, three of them bases-empty home runs by Mike Schmidt, Richie Hebner and Greg Luzinski. The victory was Sutton's fifth in 11 decisions and first since May 22.

"This complete game came at an opportune time. We have a lot of guys down," said Sutton, referring to a weary bullpen. This is one of those times I was out there for the duration. Anything short of a touchdown or a field goal, and I was staying in."

Giants 9, Expos 5

Jack Clark drove in four runs with a double and a three-run homer to lead San Francisco over Montreal. Left-hander Bob Knepper, 8-3, survived a shaky three-run first inning and then retired 16 batters in a row to post the Giants' fourth straight victory.

Mets 3, Padres 2

Lenny Randle's two-run single in the ninth sparked New York over San Diego. Randle's hit came off Padre reliever Rolie Fingers, 2-7, while Skip Lockwood, 7-4, gained the victory with two scoreless innings of relief work.

Trailing 2-1 going into the ninth, Lee Mazzilli ignited the Mets' rally with a single. He advanced to third when Padre left fielder Gene Richards bobbled Tim Foli's single for an error.

Astros 2, Pirates 1

Cesar Cedeno tripled home Dennis Walling from third with two out in the eighth to lead Houston over Pittsburgh. With one out, Walling singled and stole second before moving to third on a grounder by Enos Cabell. Cedeno followed with his triple to the right center field wall off loser Jim Bibby, 4-3.

Ken Forsch, 2-2, was the winner with relief help from Joe Sambito.

"It's encouraging to see our bullpen pitch as well as it has," said Houston manager Bill Virdon. "A good bullpen could make a lot of difference for this club."

Braves 12, Cardinals 1

Pitcher Preston Hanna belted his first major league homer and recorded his fifth victory and Atlanta cruised for seven runs in the seventh inning to rout St. Louis. Hanna's homer opened the fourth off Cardinals starter Silvio Martinez, 2-1.

Hanna, 5-1, worked seven innings, allowing six hits.

Orioles Need 11 Innings To Keep Win Streak Alive

By The Associated Press
Baltimore manager Earl Weaver said it was a longshot, but pitcher Mike Flanagan had a better name for it — Eddie Murray.

The Orioles, saved from the brink of defeat by Murray's two-out 10th-inning homer, won in the 11th on Larry Harlow's RBI single and stretched their winning streak to 12 with a 3-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners Tuesday night.

And Weaver didn't bother to hide his surprise.

"That's what you hope for, but deep down you don't expect it," Weaver said of Murray's homer that wiped out a 2-1 Seattle lead. "That's the kind of stuff pennants are made of."

Pennants and wins, as Flanagan knows, "I wasn't leaving the dugout until after Eddie hit," Flanagan said after firing a five-hitter, chalking up his ninth victory in 13 decisions and winning his fourth consecutive game.

He (Murray) won two games for me last year with homers and this year he beat Boston with a two-run homer in the ninth."

Murray, who has hit five of his 11 homers in the last nine games, said he probably hit a slider for the tying homer.

"It was a breaking ball of some sort... slider, maybe," last year's Rookie of the Year said.

Pat Kelly, who knocked in Baltimore's first run, opened the 11th with a walk.

stole second and took third on a bunt single by Billy Smith. Rick Dempsey walked to load the bases and one out later Harlow lined a soft single off the glove of first baseman Dan Meyer to score Smith, giving the Orioles their 20th victory in the last 25 games and the Mariners their sixth straight loss.

A home run by Leon Roberts gave Seattle a 2-1 lead in the 10th before the Orioles tied it in the bottom of the inning on Murray's homer off Seattle starter Glenn Abbott.

Red Sox 5, Angels 0
George Scott homered and drove in three runs and Butch Hobson drilled a solo homer to back the two-hit pitching of Jim Wright as Boston whipped California and rolled to its fifth straight victory.

Wright allowed a second-inning single to Joe Rudi and a single to Lyman Bostock in the sixth while striking out six and walking one.

Yankees 5, A's 3
Switch-hitter Roy White slammed home runs from both sides of the plate as New York edged Oakland.

White's first blast, batting right-handed against A's starter John Johnson, came in the third and tied the score 1-1. The second, with the score knotted 2-2 in the fifth, came when White was batting left-handed against reliever Rick Langford. It was the fifth time the veteran outfielder had homered from both sides of the plate in the same game.

Brewers 7, Tigers 2
Charlie Moore and Ben Oglivie hit home runs and Mike Caldwell scattered eight hits as Milwaukee defeated Detroit and posted its sixth consecutive victory.

Moore blasted his third homer of the year, a two-run homer in the second, and Oglivie drilled his ninth home run of the season with Hulse aboard in the seventh.

Twins 2-7, Blue Jays 0-2
Dan Ford drove in three runs with a homer and a single leading Minnesota to a 7-2 win over Toronto and a sweep of its two-night doubleheader.

In the first game, Willie Norwood had two hits and scored both runs as the Twins defeated Toronto 2-0 to snap a six-game losing streak.

Geoff Zahn, 6-4, scattered seven hits in chalking up the victory in the second game while Dave Goltz went eight innings in the opener to pick up his third victory in seven decisions.

White Sox 10, Indians 9

Chicago rallied from a nine-run deficit, riding 61-3 innings of brilliant relief pitching by Rich Hinton to a 10-9 victory over the Cleveland Indians and their 15th triumph in the last 17 games.

"They had to stop at 10," Chicago manager Bob Lemon said referring to his team's run production. "They couldn't go out and get three or four more and make it easy on the manager. They're going to make an older man out of me."

have to have." The Angels and Red Sox have not submitted bids.

"I'll sit down with Gene Mauch (Twins manager) on Wednesday and show him what's been submitted. If there is a deal, it won't be made until Thursday." The New York Times quoted Griffith as saying Tuesday night.

"The price they are asking seems outlandish," said Al Rosen, president of the Yankees. "I don't think anyone will go for it."

The Yankees, along with the Rangers, have freely spent their money in the past. But big money won't be part of the Carey deal because of Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's ceiling of $400,000 on any trade.

Mauch, who would hate to lose Carey, said, "Mr. Griffith would have to make a sensational deal to give up Carey. He's just asking too much."

Carey, an 11-year veteran with veto power over any trade, wants to see all the speculation end so he can get back to what he does best.

"I'm getting a little tired of it — with all this going on I just can't concentrate. I don't really care what happens at this point. If I have to go, I'll go. There won't be any bitterness."

All the teams on Carey's list are pennant contenders, but the Rangers seem to be the hungriest, having also expressed interest in California's strikeout king Nolan Ryan.

Texas owner Brad Corbett has signed several free agents, including Richie Zisk for almost $3 million, in the past two years and desperately wants a winner.

Ryan, currently 3-6 with a 4.04 ERA, reportedly wants to be traded to the Rangers, but Angels general manager Buzzie Bavasi says the report is untrue.

"I told Buzzie that if the Angels had the opportunity to improve the club by dealing me to Texas, I would probably approve the deal," Ryan was quoted as saying. "The change of scenery might do me some good."

"I haven't heard anything about what the trade would be, just what I've seen in the papers," added Ryan. "I have a hometown here (Akin, Tex.), and I think it would be better for my overall situation, with my family at the age they are and at this stage of my career. It's not that often you get the opportunity to play near your home."

Corbett was quoted as saying, "Bavasi told me Saturday Ryan was ours. I plan to talk to Buzzie and try to work this out."

"Corbett's crazy to say something like that," Bavasi said. "That Ryan thing is a figment of his imagination. We talked and nothing happened. Nothing's going to happen."

at the beginning of the seventh that if I could get by Oliver I might do it for me. It wasn't a bad pitch. It was in a pretty good spot, a slider low and in."

Oliver seemed more impressed with Gale's candor than his pitching arm.

"I respect him even more now," said the Texas outfielder. "He's right. It was a good pitch. But lots of pitchers wouldn't say that."

Gale got 12-hit support from his teammates. Frank White collected two doubles and a single, and Tom Poquette drove in three runs in handing Ranger starter Duane Alexander, 5-4, the loss. The Royals batted around in the fourth to take a 4-0 lead.

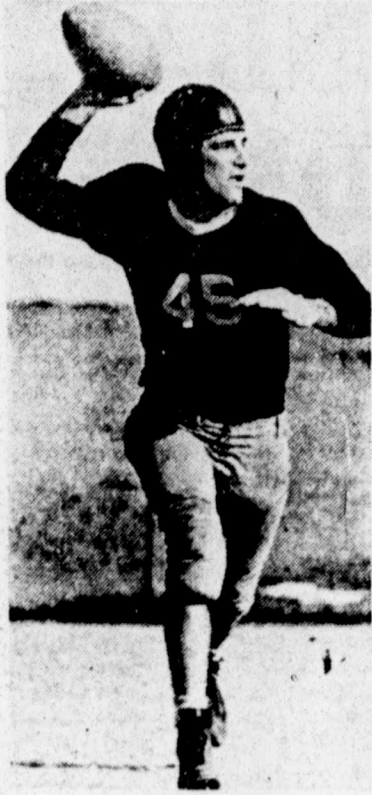

Ironically, Gale came within eight outs of no-hitting the Rangers last Wednesday in Texas. In that game, won by the Rangers in extra innings, Richie Zisk broke up the no-hit bid with a clean single in the seventh.

Ranchin' Replaces Throwin' For Slingin' Sam

SAMMY BAUGH
... In College Days

By MILTON RICHMAN
ABILENE (UPI) — Sammy Baugh hasn't touched a football in 12 years but he figures he has thrown enough of them to last him a lifetime.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh, they called him, and every time his name was mentioned it was instantly associated with only one thing — the bullet pass. Nobody in the world could whip that football like Slingin' Sam.

Baugh's first coach in the professional ranks was Ray Flaherty. He was handling the Washington Redskins and on the very first day he saw his prize prospect fresh from TCU at practice in 1937, he decided to find out about him.

"They tell me you're quite a passer," Flaherty said.

"I reckon I can throw a little," Baugh answered in that soft Texas drawl of his. "Show me," Flaherty commanded. "See that receiver over there. Let's see you hit him in the eyes."

Baugh looked at the receiver 30 yards downfield.

"Which eye?" he inquired casually.

Most such stories are manufactured somewhere along the line to make the personality involved appear bigger than he actually is. This particular story about Sammy Baugh happens to be completely true, though. Nobody ever had to bother building up his reputation.

Toothpick-thin as a player, Baugh, a 6-footer, played at 175 and is 172 now. The crow's-foot around his eyes are a little deeper and his face is somewhat more leathery than it was during the days he wore No. 33 uniform, but otherwise of Sam hasn't changed that much.

At 64, Baugh spends most of his time running his ranch at Rotan, 70 miles up the line, and any time he finds a chance, he drives to Sweetwater, where he was raised, to play a round of golf.

Twice named an all-America at TCU, Baugh is enshrined in both the college and professional Football Halls of Fame. He led the NFL in passing six different times, throwing the ball for 21,886 yards and 186 touchdowns during his career. He not only could pass, but could also kick and his 45.1 yard punting average still is an NFL record. In 1943, he led the league in passing, punting and pass interceptions, and if you ask him which achievement he's proudest of, he singles out those intercepted passes.

"When I first started in the pros, you had to play both ways," says Baugh, who was used as a tailback and later quarterback on offense for the Redskins and a safety on defense.

"They didn't pay a helluva lot when I came in the league, either. I got $8,000 my first year with the Redskins and that was considered good money. Best I ever made was $19,000."

Of all the men he met in football, Baugh says he respected George Preston Marshall, the late owner of the Redskins, most.

"He got a lot of good things done for the game. Passers had no protection at all when I first came into the league. Marshall called me into his office my second year and told me we had to get some rule passed to protect the passers or all of us would be killed. He worked on it and finally, he and George Halas (of the Bears) got a rule passed that helped."

The best two football players he ever saw, says Baugh, were Ace Parker and Bob Waterfield; the best passer around today, in his opinion, is Baltimore's Bert Jones, and the one who reminds him most of himself is Houston's Dan Pastorini.

After he was through playing, Baugh served as head coach, first at Hardin-Simmons University then with the old New York Titans in the original AFL. He also was backfield coach at Oklahoma State and Tulsa and with the Houston Oilers and Detroit Lions.

Baseball actually was his first love and he went to spring training with the St. Louis Cardinals in 1938 as a third baseman. They converted him to a shortstop and sent him to Rochester of the International League. Later he also played for Columbus of the American Association.

"With Columbus, the fellow I remember best was Ted Williams. He was a rookie with Minneapolis and our players always would get on him because he'd go out there to the outfield, stick his glove in his pocket, turn his back to the plate and do exercises while the game was going on. But when he got up there to bat, man, oh man, I never saw a hitter like him. He'd hit the ball so hard, it would knock a board off the fence.

"Me? I just couldn't hit the curve ball and changeup."

UT To Concentrate In State

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns went out-of-state this year to recruit two of the nation's top runningbacks, but football coach Fred Akers says he and his staff will still recruit Texas "first and foremost."

Texas only sought four non-Texans and signed runningbacks A.J. Jones of Youngstown, Ohio, and Rodney Tate of Beggs, Okla.

Next year, Akers said in an interview with Lou Maysel of the Austin American-Statesman, the Longhorn staff will seek four to eight out-of-state players.

"We're not going to recruit wholesale outside of the state of Texas," said Akers. "We're going to recruit Texas first and foremost, but there are some outstanding individuals around the country we're going after, too."

"You have to find a young guy who's wanting to leave the part of the country he's in," said Akers. "That's the kind you've got a chance on. They've made up their mind they're going to leave home."

Akers' main out-of-state recruiter, Charlie Lee, said, "Everybody's coming to Texas (to recruit), so why should we leave our own home state? I think you've got to sell your program in your state."

You've got to develop good rapport with the high school coaches."

He added, however, that the approach Southern California follows is the one to attain excellence.

"The reason they have been able to compete for the national championships for so many sports is that they commit themselves to going after the great athlete wherever he might be," Lee said.

Moegle Named To Coach All-Star Nine

Two of the state's winningest coaches are not through facing each other from the opposing dugouts.

Bobby Moegle of Monterey, and Ray Knoblauch of Houston Bellaire have been named to coach the annual Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association all-star game, to be played in the Astrodome in Houston next Saturday.

It will be their second confrontation in eight days, too.

It was Knoblauch's Cardinals who defeated Moegle's Plainsmen for the state Class AAAA baseball championship at Austin last Friday night.

Moegle is now the state's winningest baseball coach in history, having reached that position earlier in the season. Moegle's total climbed to 340 victories before the state finals.

And Knoblauch has 407 for his career, following the win at Austin. Knoblauch has won four state championships, Moegle two.

Ron Reeves, who guided—with bat and pitching arm—Monterey to the state finals, will be playing in the all-star game, along with Lubbock High's outfielder Ernest Day. They will be playing for the north squad coached by Moegle. Only one player will be in the game from a school.

Last year, Coronado's Chuck Johnson performed in the game.

TALE OF TWO RHODAS — That's Valerie Harper, star of television's hit show "Rhoda," on the left, and Valerie's best friend, Penny Almqvist on the right. Penny is the woman the Rhoda character is based on, according to Miss Harper. Valerie had just gotten a new hairdo, but Penny, a former New Yorker who now lives in Virginia, had no trouble recognizing her when the two had a reunion recently. (AP Laserphoto)

New British Comedy Starts Three-Week PBS Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — I'm not sure civilians will dig it, but fans of British drawing-room comedy have an example of it afoot in public TV's "The Norman Conquest" being sent PBS stations tonight. Written by Alan Ayckbourn, it's a three-parter about middle-class lust, infidelity and a leech of a librarian named Norman. The opener runs two hours, followed by other chapters on June 21 and 28. Set in a house in the English countryside, "Conquests" is what you'd call comic soap opera, minus long pauses and organ music. It's also the enter-and-exit kind of British comedy. Such occurs when all the talk takes place in one arena. Tonight, the arena is a dining room, next week it's a living room and the week after a garden. It makes things a bit static. So the author keeps the six-member cast busy entering and exiting as well as talking. I counted 12 arrivals and departures in the first half-hour tonight before giving up. During the comings and goings, it seemed the play revolved around a weekend at the country house, where the only full-time residents are a comely spinster, Annie, and her unseen, bed-ridden mother. In from the city come Annie's brother, Reg, his wife, Sarah, and then Norman, a bearded free spirit. He's married to Ruth, sister of Annie and Reg, but has left her at home this weekend. Seems he once seduced Annie. She describes it as "wham-thump on the rug." Now, he and she secretly plan to spend the weekend at a distant hotel and resume this hanky-panky at a leisurely pace. She is doing this because she is lonely and also because Tom, a handsome, eligible, dense neighborhood veterinarian, won't give her a tumble. He apparently is more interested in animals.

Things start happening when she shocks Sarah by telling her of the affair. More happens as Reg and Tom learn of it, still more as Norman's wife arrives unannounced, summoned by Sarah, who, at show's end, is set up for seduction, ditto Annie, by Norman. (Stop me if you've heard this plot before.) Some lively lines do flash about in all this, such as "Oh, nun's knickers," "Norman's getting drunk and Tom's looking thoughtful" and "Oh, do put a bun in it, Norman, there's a good chap." And the acting is good, with Penelope Wilton as Annie, Penelope Keith as Sarah, Richard Briers as Reg, Fiona Walker as Ruth, David Troughton as Tom, and Tom Conti as Norman the Rascal. But at two hours, "Conquests," first done on the London stage, then Broadway, tends to drag, is only fitfully funny. It would have been far more effective if served up in a one-hour-a-week portion.

Economic News Show In PBS Fall Schedule

By TOM JORY
NEW YORK (AP) — A new program designed to knock down sex and ethnic job stereotypes and another examining news topics from an economic standpoint are among eight new series to be offered this fall to stations in the Public Broadcasting Service network. "Freestyle," produced by KCET in Los Angeles, will be aimed at youngsters exploring career choices, while "Economically Speaking," from WQLN in Erie, Pa., will feature Marina Whitman, a former White House economic adviser. PBS told network stations in a closed-circuit presentation Monday. PBS said the new shows would be available in the fall along with 24 currently on the network schedule, including "Masterpiece Theater," "Once Upon a Classic," "Soundstage," "Visions" and "Great Performances" series. In addition, the non-commercial network said the popular weekly programs "Washington Week in Review," "Wall Street Week" and "MacNeil-Lehrer Report" would continue with the new season, beginning Oct. 1.

PBS suggested a daily schedule, which will be made final after comments from network stations are analyzed. Stations are free to select broadcast times for network programs. "We have promise of public broadcasting's best fall schedule ever," Chloe Aaron, PBS's senior vice president for programming, said in a statement. "Over three-quarters of the proposed PBS prime time schedule will be new programming, including some of the most exciting performance programs and powerful documentaries ever offered on public television," she said. In addition to "Freestyle" and "Economically Speaking," PBS said the new offerings would include: —"Cinema Showcase" from KCET in Los Angeles, a film series including Lina Wertmuller's "Sweet Away" and "Seven Beauties," "Monty Python and the Holy Grail," "Pumping Iron" and "Harlan County, U.S.A." —"The Long Search" from KCET, a study of the world's religions. —"Congressional Outlook" from WCET in Cincinnati, a documentary-style look at national issues. —"Sneak Previews" from WTTW in Chicago, a look at current movies. —"The Cinematic Eye" from South Carolina ETV, a study of films and filmmakers. —"Marie Curie" from WCET, a five-part drama based on the famous scientist's life. In addition, the network said "Black Perspective on the News," "Firing Line," "Over Easy," "Turnabout," "Nova," "Evening at the Symphony" and the "Mark Russell Comedy Specials" would be back. "Julia Child and Company" will return, PBS said, and the "Dick Cavett Show," now shown at 10 p.m. CDT, will be offered twice each evening. PBS suggested it be run back-to-back with the "MacNeil-Lehrer Report."

The "Great Performances" schedule will include, PBS said, Beverly Sills in Rossini's opera "A Turk in Italy" and a five-part dramatization of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra."

California Sets Wine Record

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — California vintners shipped a record amount of wine to the nation in the first four months of 1978. The Wine Institute reported at its annual meeting this week that California shipped a record 97.3 million gallons — nearly 5 million gallons more than during the same period last year. Institute President John De Luca said table wine took the biggest jump. "Some 66.8 million gallons were shipped, which is a gain of 11.4 percent over the first four months of 1977," De Luca said. "Additionally, in the intervening year, table wine's share of the market has increased to almost 70 percent. California table wine is clearly on the move." Sparkling wine also showed gains with 4.4 million gallons shipped, up 16.4 percent. Appetizer and dessert wines gained slightly with 12.7 million gallons shipped, up 1 percent. De Luca said the only decline in the first four months of the year was registered by vermouth and special natural (flavored) wines with 13.5 million gallons shipped, down 18.7 percent.

Red Buttons Rebuilds Career With Dinner Jokes

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Four words and hundreds of banquets have given new life to comedian Red Buttons' career.

The words: "Never got a dinner."

Testimonial dinners, a growing American phenomenon, are especially popular in Hollywood where show folk use the ritual rite as a means of raising money and a little hell all at the same time.

The dais usually is loaded with comedians — George Burns, Don Rickles, Milton Berle, Jack Carter, Buddy Hackett, Redd Foxx and many others. The funniest guy is left for last because nobody wants to follow him.

Right now Red Buttons, who won a best-supporting Oscar in 1957 for "Sayonara," is inevitably the closing act because it takes a roomful of people considerable time to stop laughing once the diminutive comedian does his stuff.

Seven years ago Red was sitting on a dais at a testimonial for some underserving soul and wondered why on earth the honoree was being extolled when so many great and famous persons had never been given a testimonial dinner.

"I got sick and tired of doing affairs where everyone is the man of the year," Red said. "I asked myself why they were giving this klutz a dinner when some of the biggies of the world never got a testimonial."

"So I began naming famous people who never got a dinner:

"Ponce de Leon, the first man to go to Florida without his wife, never got a dinner."

"Moses, who said when he saw the Red Sea, 'Surf's up!' never got a dinner."

"King Solomon, who said to his wives, 'For better service, take a number,' never got a dinner."

"Amelia Earhart, who said, 'Stop looking for me, and see if you can find my luggage,' never got a dinner."

"Blue Beard, who said to Scotland Yard, 'How do I know how many women I've killed. I'm a murderer, not an accountant,' never got a dinner."

The never-got-a-dinner gags became the basis of Red's act at banquets, roasts and testimonials. He starts out slowly, indignantly that the honoree is being toasted while great men past and present have been ignored.

Red's wrath gathers steam until, at the end, he is raging that so great an indignity has befallen him and others gathered to pay homage to an unworthy.

He behaves as if getting a testimonial dinner is the most important event in the world, ending each one-liner with, "Never got a dinner!"

In the old days of vaudeville and his weekly TV show Red was recognized everywhere by his catchphrase, "Ho, Ho, strange things are happening." People shouted the phrase at him on the streets.

Now they holler, "Hey, Red, I never got a dinner."

Buttons took time out from his role in the new movie, "C.H.O.M.P.S.," to say that the dinner gimmick has accelerated his career beyond his wildest dreams.

"Reaction to 'Never got a dinner' within the business and with the public is unbelievable," Buttons said.

"I do about 100 dinners and six Dean

Martin TV roasts a year and I change the jokes all the time. It's all part of the career. If you get hot in one area, like the variety area, it rubs off everywhere else. I'm also an actor."

"It's kept me very busy. I just did 'Movie, Movie' with George C. Scott and Art Carney. I did 'The Users,' a new TV movie and a big part on 'The Love Boat' and now 'C.H.O.M.P.S.' It keeps going and going."

"It's due to the heat generated by 'Never got a dinner.' When you're hot, you're hot. When you're cold, you're cold. I know the difference. I've been luke-warm, cold, freezing and now I'm paying the rent and laughing."

"Having a catchphrase helps. It always helps a comic to have something extra going for him that people can identify with."

"I have been using the biggies of history, the Bible, politics and contemporaries with 'never got a dinner.'"

"It's funny to think of Moses getting a roast with the 14 children of Israel on the dais. Look, Moses gave us the 10 Commandments, why don't we throw him a dinner at the De-Sea Lodge of the B'nai B'rith? That's a fun idea."

"Sometimes the name alone is funny."

They start laughing when I say Toulouse-Lautrec. Even before I add, 'who never got a nosebleed, never got a dinner.'"

"Another one that gets big laughs is, 'Billy Carter, who said to his brother Jimmy, 'Can you get me on the Gong Show?' never got a dinner.'"

Although Red adds new names and gags with every appearance, one of his favorites is, "Eve, who said to Adam in the Garden of Eden, 'What do you mean the kids don't look like you?' never got a dinner. Not even an apple!"

After almost seven years of rolling them in the aisles with his routine, Red himself was given a dinner benefiting the City of Hope. It was the largest roast in Hollywood history with the most celebrated dais in memory.

Red, remembering the big night, grinned and concluded, "I finally got a dinner."

Canine Saved By Pacemaker

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Moo, a pekingese, has to rely on his family to keep him away from electrical devices such as microwave ovens and automobile starters.

That's because veterinarians at Purdue University's small animal clinic implanted a heart pacemaker in the dog about a month ago.

The device, common in humans but rare in animals, remedies an ailment known as sick-sinus condition, which affects both humans and animals.

"We diagnosed the condition and determined that Moo would need a pacemaker to live out a normal canine life," said Dr. Walter Weirich, who inserted the battery-run pacemaker in Moo.

The dog's owners, who live in Madison, Wis., said they knew something was wrong when Moo started passing out 10 to 15 times a week.

China Reports Rise In Food Production

TOKYO (AP) — China's food production now totals 286 million tons a year and will increase to 400 million tons by 1985, a Chinese official says.

Wang Tian Hang, deputy director of the Agriculture Bureau of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry, said that by the end of the century China's agricultural crops will equal or surpass those of industrialized nations. Wang is in Tokyo with a Chinese agricultural mission.

ABC Replaces '20-20' Co-Hosts With Hugh Downs

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — With perfect hindsight ABC has yanked the co-hosts of its news magazine show "20-20" after only one broadcast and replaced them with Hugh Downs.

Downs, best known for his years as co-host with Barbara Walters of the "Today" show and currently hosting a PBS program for the over-55 set, "Over Easy," has taken over for Harold Hayes and Robert Hughes in the anchor spot on the hour-long show, starting with the June 13 broadcast.

The first broadcast of "20-20" June 6 earned a 12.4 rating and a 22 percent share of the audience, which is within shooting distance of the 25 percent share executive producer Bob Shanks said he hoped for when the program was announced in May, with everything but ruffles and flourishes.

But it is 12 points lower than the "Carter Country" episode that preceded it and that, combined with bad reviews, apparently made Rooney Arledge, ABC news and sports president, decide on immediate surgery.

Shanks said he hoped Hughes, an Australian who also is arts editor of Time magazine, and Hayes, a North Carolinian and former editor of Esquire magazine, would remain with the show "either as on-air contributors or as editorial members of the program's production staff." Hughes had served as a production executive, aside from his co-host duties.

"20-20" is scheduled for weekly broadcast Tuesdays, 9-10 p.m., CDT, through the summer, then shifts to monthly scheduling until January, when ABC will decide whether to go weekly again.

Fred Silverman addressed the NBC affiliate stations this week over closed circuit television, and the most startling announcement the new president of NBC made was, "Good afternoon." In brief remarks he stressed the need for teamwork, the importance of news and information, of commitment to innovation, quality and responsibility.

"We are not going to follow anyone," Silverman said. "We're going to lead."

ACTRESS AFTER SURGERY — Movie actress Maria Berenson is pictured in Rio de Janeiro, Brasil, this week after plastic surgery was performed on her at the clinic of famed surgeon Dr. Ivo Pitanguy. Miss Berenson's face was cut by broken glass in an automobile accident 12 days ago. She was in Brasil working on the Alex Ponti production, "Greed." (AP Laserphoto)
