

Railroads Fined By ICC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission today announced civil fines totaling $2.77 million against two railroads for failure to respond to federal orders to move freight cars to sections of the country where they were critically needed.

The Consolidated Rail Corp., a federally subsidized corporation, was assessed $2.3 million, the largest fine of this type on record, and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co. was penalized $445,800.

ICC officials said they will go to court to prevent Conrail from future alleged violations of the same sort. A recurrence, they said, could result in criminal penalties against the corporation and its officers.

The commission said the two railroads violated a car service order issued in March to expedite the movement and return of freight cars to alleviate an acute shortage across the nation.

Conrail was accused of more than 4,000 violations and the Santa Fe with 824. The fines range from $100 to $500 for each violation plus $50 for each day an offense continues.

Joel Burns, director of the ICC's bureau of operations, said the commission had been working with Conrail since March in an effort to expedite the movement of freight cars to areas where they were needed.

"Conrail had about 217,000 cars on its system on a daily basis," he said. "We helped reduce the inventory by about 13,000 cars. But it wasn't enough. As a result we were forced to take more stringent action."

"We feel Conrail management could have taken more decisive action to correct the problem," Burns said.

Peter Shannon, director of the ICC's bureau of investigations and enforcement, said the commission is investigating other railroads for similar violations.

There was no immediate comment from officials of Conrail, which has headquarters in Philadelphia, or Chicago-based Santa Fe.

Ford Extolls U.S.

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — From his looks, there appeared to be no way former President Gerald Ford would miss Flag Day.

There he was Wednesday bedecked in a red, white and blue tie reminiscent of Old Glory itself.

From a platform at the edge of the famous fields where Gen. George Washington's army spent the bitter winter of 1777-78, Ford extolled the virtues of the United States.

The nation, he told a Flag Day audience, "offers more freedom to more people than any other country."

Ford told reporters he didn't want to make partisan comments "in this atmosphere," but proceeded to criticize President Carter's handling of relations with Russia and Cuba.

He also called the California tax revolt a message "from the people to the politicians ... that they want a better return for their taxes."

Haldeman Parole Set

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — H.R. Haldeman, former chief of staff to President Richard Nixon, will be paroled only days before Christmas.

The Dec. 20 release date was set Wednesday by the U.S. Parole Commission, which acted on recommendations of examiners.

Haldeman will have served 18 months of a four-year sentence for perjury and obstruction of justice in the Watergate cover-up.

The commission could have paroled Haldeman as of June 20, but no explanation was offered as to the December date.

Haldeman, 51, who wielded enormous power as Nixon's closest confidant, was described as a model prisoner at the minimum-security facility near Los Angeles.

In his recent book, "The Ends of Power," Haldeman suggested Nixon was involved in the cover-up "from Day One."

Although he was originally sentenced to a 2½-to 8-year term, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica cut Haldeman's sentence after hearing taped statements of contrition.

"I'm sorry for what I've done and for what I've been responsible for, for what's been the result and the damage it's caused to many, many people and to our governmental system," Haldeman said in the tape.

Pearl Bailey Gets High Marks

WASHINGTON (AP) — All her life, 59-year-old Pearl Bailey has read reviews of her performances, but this was a first.

There in front of her were four B's and an A. Probably the tersest critique of her illustrious career.

And not bad either, considering they were marks for her first semester as a French major at Georgetown University here.

The woman who has sung to presidents and starred in "Hello Dolly" began her freshman year in January, 40 years after she dropped out of school to pursue a show business career.

Her one A was in religion, to which the beaming Miss Bailey said,

"As long as you have A's with God, honey, that's all that matters."

Ex-Senator Marries

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — Former Missouri Sen. Stuart Symington, who is 77, has married the 59-year-old

Symington, who served 24 years in the Senate before retiring in December 1976, said "I do" Wednesday to Anne Hemingway Watson, who he met last year in California where both were visiting Bob Hope.

Newman Speaks At U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Moviegoers may remember actor Paul Newman immersed in Arab-Israeli conflict as the star of "Exodus." But Wednesday, Newman's involvement was much more real.

In his first speech as a U.N. delegate, Newman reported that U.S. monitoring operations in the Arab-Israeli disengagement zones have proven successful.

"Despite high levels of tension in the region, the (monitoring) program has contributed significantly to the growth of mutual confidence among the countries involved," Newman told the U.N. General Assembly's special session on disarmament.

While describing the success of U.S. technology in the tension-filled Middle East, Newman said the key to peace lies with the region's leaders.

Monitoring devices cannot replace "political will and negotiating flexibility," said Newman.

Death Bed Purchased

PARIS (AP) — The late Maria Callas' marriage to 62-year-old Giovanni Battista Meneghini was constantly stormy. But that didn't stop Meneghini from buying at auction the 18th century bed on which the opera diva died.

"This auction is a scandal," Meneghini said before it began. "They had the cold-blooded nerve to put on auction the bed on which Maria died. I could do nothing to stop them."

But he did pay $1,520 to make certain nobody else owned it. The Italian double bed boasted a flower-painted and carved headpiece and embroidered bedspread.

Just Horsing Around

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Even people accustomed to the normal political horsing around in this state capital never saw anything like it.

A man rode a horse into the Capitol rotunda Wednesday, and as crowds gaped, the animal performed stunts and bowed to on-lookers.

The next step was a trip up the elevator to the second floor. There horse and rider encountered Gov. James R. Thompson. The governor climbed aboard the horse, rode it around the floor, and gave it an apple.

The horse belongs to Darryl Wallen of Des Plaines. Both were in Springfield for a charity performance to raise funds for a local hospital.

One Democratic lawmaker cracked that by riding the horse, Republican Thompson finally was giving his party some direction.

China's Goals Misunderstood, Businessman Says

By JOHN CUNIFF
 WASHINGTON (AP) — We have badly misunderstood China's desire for normal diplomatic relations with the United States, said Christopher Phillips, America's unofficial business ambassador to that nation.

Phillips, who heads the National Council for U.S.-China Trade, made up of 400 companies involved in business with China, believes the consequences could be serious to trade and other American interests.

Saying it was a matter of leadership, he criticized President Carter for failing to bring the facts and issues before the American people, and said "nobody less than the President can do so."

Phillips, former deputy United Nations ambassador, feels an erroneous notion persists that the People's Republic, the Peking government, is not pressing for a resolution of the Taiwan issue.

While the United States agreed in the Shanghai Communiqué of February 28, 1972 that only one China existed, it has continued to officially recognize the government of Taipei, Taiwan, rather than Peking.

Phillips, preparing for his fifth visit to the mainland since 1973, claims the issue is far more emotional to the Chinese than we seem to realize, and that it represents a serious misunderstanding.

"It is as important symbolically as it is practically," he said. "In a sense, we continue to take a stand on their civil war."

By delaying, he continued, "we may make difficult the steps we're eventually going to have to take," that is, recognition of Peking. "If not done within two years there might be a retrogression," he said.

If the People's Republic decides that its policy of closer ties with the United States is bearing no results, Phillips feels, they could turn elsewhere, with adverse consequences to the United States.

Already, he maintains, the United States has benefited, for example, because the Chinese no longer attack the U.S. presence in Japan, and because of their cooperation in helping to stabilize Korea.

If the Chinese additionally felt the United States wasn't standing up to the Soviet Union, it could seek an accommodation with its Communist neighbor, Phillips feels, allowing the Soviets to put pressure on NATO. Provoking emotions in the United States is that recognition of the People's Republic would automatically strip Taiwan of official recognition, and most likely of military aid as well.

Phillips contends that this should not deter a continuation of trade with Taiwan and that the mainland Chinese agree. He maintains they seek only a slow assimilation of Taiwan, which they consider a province.

What about the mutual defense treaty with Taiwan? "The probability of Peking attacking is nil, now and in the next 10 years," Phillips said, adding that the 1954 defense treaty was outmoded.

For one thing, he said in an interview, invasion "would create a fearful reaction in Japan," perhaps encouraging rearmament. It might also turn Southeast Asia against China and invite Soviet mischief. Furthermore, said Phillips, an invasion of Taiwan could be accomplished only at great cost, especially in the lives of Chinese on both sides. And it would end their relationship with the United States.

"Having made these points, I agree the United States has a moral obligation," to Taiwan, but he indicated a Presidential statement, plus our continuation of trade there, would be an even better defense.

While Phillips is concerned about "our failure to come to grips with the basic problem," he is also eager to spur the development of trade, which many businessmen hope will eventually reach huge proportions.

Two-way trade with the mainland reached a peak of $934 million in 1974, a good deal of it representing Chinese grain purchases. By 1977, trade had fallen to $374, but should top $500 million this year.

Phillips says he is encouraged by the growing ability of the Chinese to export to the United States — most of the early trade was in U.S. exports — and their growing interest in U.S. manufactured goods.

abroad. He feels the People's Republic will be a nation to contend with by the turn of the century.

Woman Wins Suit Against Bus Firm

AUSTIN (AP) — The daughter of a 71-year-old man who was struck and killed on a highway after being ejected from a Continental Trailways bus today won her suit for damages.

The Texas Supreme Court upheld a Dallas Court of Civil Appeals decision rendering a $4,660 judgement for Lucille Lee, daughter of the late Andrew Lee of Fairfield.

Lee was fatally injured by a vehicle on an Interstate highway outside of Cohoma, near Big Spring, after the bus driver ejected him from the bus at 1:30 a.m. on July 5, 1975.

The bus driver said Lee had created a disturbance, molested passengers and urinated in the front of the bus and on the driver.

The appeals court said there was evidence to support a finding that the driver was negligent in putting Lee off the bus on a dark highway in the middle of the night when he was in poor physical condition.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW®

Country Music Writer Says He Never Lacks Song Ideas

By MARIAN E. McQUIDDY
DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — It's easy to find something to write a country song about today, one composer says, because there are plenty of stray dogs, unhappy men and good-looking women running around.

Billy Porter, 50, said the problem with the profession is getting people to actually know who wrote the song — and keeping food on the table and a roof over his head.

"It's got to be a labor of love," Porter said. "There really isn't a whole lot of money in it — unless you make it real big. And that happens so far and few between."

"Songwriters are starving in Iowa as they are in Nashville. I have been working at the business for upwards of 20 years and now am working with a pretty big company in New York, but I am still working at the dry cleaners to make sure I can still eat and have a place to live.

"I suspect I will do it until I die — or make enough money songwriting to live on."

Porter's first published song was 'Hon-

ky-Tonk Waltz.'

When he started, Porter said, he chose country and western music because it is "real."

"It's about the common people, what bugs them, what they like and what hurts them," Porter said. "And as long as there are trains, lonely people, stray dogs there will be things to write about. It is truly amazing."

NY Papers Find Ad Offensive

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Statue of Liberty hitchhiking to Jacksonville?

Unthinkable, say The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal, both of which rejected a Jacksonville Area Chamber of Commerce advertisement with a drawing depicting Miss Liberty with her thumb out in the standard appeal for a free ride.

The Times also rejected two other chamber ads, part of a series designed to lure business and industry to this northern Florida city of 535,000 people.

"This is dirty pool. The ads are very offensive," said Bernard Stein of the Times' committee on advertising acceptability.

The Journal accepted two chamber ads but rejected the Statue of Liberty drawing, saying it was in poor taste to show the monument, which stands at the entrance to New York harbor, in "an unlikely manner."

The headline on the disputed ad says: "Everyone's leaving New York for the big city."

In terms of land area, Jacksonville is the second largest city in the United States, behind only Juneau, Alaska.

Stein said the Times does not accept "ads that disparage one city to promote another city."

In a letter to Gerald Bartels, executive vice president of the Jacksonville chamber, Donald Moore, a New York chamber official, wrote that New York residents and organizations generally do not respond to "jibes that come so often from other and lesser places."

But, he added, "The fact that it is signed by a Chamber of Commerce should be an embarrassment to chamber executives everywhere."

Jim Vaughn, marketing director of the Jacksonville chamber, said he is bewildered by the indignant reaction to the hitchhiking ad.

Referring to a town with a population of 5,000 just west of Jacksonville, Vaughn said, "This is like MacClenny running an ad saying how cheap it is there compared to Jacksonville, and the Jacksonville people getting uptight about it."

U.S. cities increased their population by less than one-half percent a year over the last decade. Population in the suburbs jumped by 2.4 percent a year, according to The Conference Board.

Filipino Diplomat Gets New Career At Age 79

BY VICENTE MALIWANAG
MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Carlos P. Romulo, diplomat, soldier, journalist, author, educator, has become a brand new politician at 79.

The Philippine foreign secretary, who has worked for all Philippine presidents since the 1930's, was one of the winners in this spring's elections for representatives in the interim National Assembly.

It was Romulo's first consummated venture into the rough and tumble world of Philippine politics after an abortive bid in the late 1950's.

He stumped and scored points with voters with the same flair and polish he has exhibited in international forums which had been largely his milieu for more than three decades.

"This is the first time I submitted myself to the electorate," Romulo said, a physical fitness buff who showed no sign of strain after the hectic 45-day election campaign.

"I wanted to know from my people if what I've done abroad had their approval. I wanted a stamp of approval from the ballot box and you see what the result was," he said.

Although comparatively a political neophyte whose reputation is perhaps better known abroad than at home, Romulo finished second to President Ferdinand E. Marcos' wife, Imelda, among winning candidates in the bitterly contested metropolitan Manila polls.

The administration coalition party headed by Mrs. Marcos won all 21 seats at stake in the Manila area — out of 165 elective seats nationwide — in a rout of the only complete political slate put up by the opposition party.

Romulo said he was aware of the opposition party's charges of fraud and vote-rigging, and added:

"We're still politically underdeveloped when it comes to elections. In politics, we're always poor losers. We've not yet learned how to accept defeat graciously."

In the heated aftermath of the elections when the opposition was charging alleged irregularities and was getting extensive publicity in news media abroad, Romulo accused foreign correspondents of aiding and abetting opposition maneuvers.

The accusation, however, appeared to have died away along with the ebbing of political passions and Romulo, the only Filipino to win the Pulitzer Prize (1942) for distinguished correspondence on Japan's military resurgence, has not repeated his attack on foreign journalists.

In the world where Romulo moved in the past, diplomacy, rather than politics, was his strong point. He was the first Asian president of the U. N. General Assembly, in 1949-1950, was twice president of the U. N. security council and was ambassador to the United States and the United Nations for more than 15 years.

Romulo, who has authored more than a dozen books and has more than 70 honorary degrees from universities all over the world, was aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur in World War II, rising to the rank of brigadier general. He also served as president of the University of the Philippines.

Rap Brown Remembers 1960s; Now Owner Of Atlanta Store

ATLANTA (AP) — H. Rap Brown, the young revolutionary who exhorted blacks to get guns and shoot whites 10 years ago, now is a Muslim merchant who runs a small grocery in the West End.

"I can't prevent you from writing a story. Masha Allah (it was the will of God)," Jamil Abdullah Al-Amin said as he sat in front of the brick building that has three locks on the door and burglar screens on the windows.

A Coast Guard recruiting poster hangs on the wall around the corner.

Al-Amin talked at length to reporters from the Atlanta Constitution, but refused to allow them to take notes or tape-record the conversation.

"I was the most arrested man of the decade (the '60s)," he said. "I was probably arrested in all the 50 states."

The struggle then, he said, was not just to sit next to white people. It was a problem of right and wrong, and he said that is still unsolved.

"This is 1978, and anyone who still thinks that 'I'm black and I'm proud' is enough is in a sad situation," Al-Amin said. "It is not sufficient."

The bearded Al-Amin, 34, wears a crocheted cap and overalls as he sits in front of his store, watching children play basketball across the street. He regularly joins the game.

The children buy candy and cookies from the store, which also carries everything from tissues to a kosher leg of lamb.

He said he converted to the Muslim faith while doing five years in prison in 1971 on charges of trying to rob a bar.

The new name, he said, came from a fellow inmate and follower of Islam. Al-

Amin means trustworthy and Abdullah means servant of Allah. Jamil means beautiful.

"Your name signifies what you strive to do in your life," he said.

After his parole from prison, he moved to Atlanta two years ago. He said his purpose now is to serve Allah, run the store and serve his community.

It "shouldn't surprise anybody that the FBI was working in the movement," he said when asked about recent revelations that the agency had infiltrated even the upper ranks of the civil rights movement in the 1960s.

Armenians Still Claim Mountain

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is another in a series of periodic reports from Associated Press correspondents on their travels about the Soviet Union.)

By SETH MYDANS
YEREVAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — On a clear day, biblical Mount Ararat seems to hover over Armenia's capital city like a vision of its past.
The twin-peaked mountain, crisply white in the spring sunshine, where, according to legend, Noah landed his ark after the great flood, is just 60 miles from Yerevan.
But the Soviet-Turkish border, traced by strings of barbed wire and studded with minefields, passes between them 40 miles from the city and separates the 3 million Soviet Armenians from the symbol of their culture and from much of their ancient territory.

"It is still our mountain," one young Armenian recently told a visitor.
"They are all our people," said a priest referring to the estimated 2 million Armenians on the other side of the border and around the world.
The Armenians have maintained their cultural ties and their sense of nationality over centuries of dispersal.
One of history's ancient cultures, Armenia has been conquered repeatedly by Persia, Rome, Greece, the Mongols, Turkey and Russia, and its people have scattered throughout the world.

A strong sense of nationalism has kept the Armenians identity alive in other nations, and many return to visit or to stay.
While thousands of Jews emigrate from the Soviet Union each year to Israel, thousands of Armenians have immigrated here from around the world — 250,000 since the end of World War II, according to official figures.
One of the Soviet Union's 15 republics, Armenia joined the U.S.S.R. in 1918, a year after the Russian revolution, and is one of the nation's three trans-Caucasian republics along with Georgia and Azerbaijan.
Despite a strong Russian influence, more than 80 percent of the republic's population is Armenian, and Armenian is the primary language for most of its people.

Yerevan, the capital, shows signs of the homogenization that has affected most parts of the Soviet Union, with acres of Soviet-style apartment blocks, propaganda banners and statues of Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin mixed among those of ancient Armenian heroes.
But its lively marketplaces are distinctly non-Russian, and the villages surrounding Yerevan are age-old, with shepherd-boys tending their flocks along the route to the city's small airport.
In the mountains around icy Lake Sevan, northeast of Yerevan, the dusty villages look more Turkish than Soviet, and life appears unaffected by the passage of time or history's changes in rulers.
Overlooking Yerevan, on a bare peak rising amid a sea of gray apartment blocks, are the ruins of Erebuni, the 2,760-year-old capital of Armenia's ancient civilization, Urartu.

American Journalists Observe Soviet Shepherds' Simple Life

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN
TSELINOGRAD, Kazakhstan, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — It is about 1 p.m. on the plains of Kazakhstan and we are in a yurta — a tent that looks like the overgrown cap of a giant mushroom.
The sky is a pale blue. For as far as the eye can see are huge fields waiting to be planted in wheat.
The yurtas are practical little white tents used by shepherds. They are gaily decorated on the outside.
Two women, each wearing black, white and gold traditional dress, meet us at the door of one yurta. One is a little older than the other, but both have deep brown eyes and tanned skin. The young woman has a line of freckles marching across her nose.

The inside of the tent is lined with tapestries — rich woolen hangings of brilliant red, brown, black and green. A thick wool carpet covers the floor. The roof is white cotton cloth on a birch frame. A round hole in the center is about the size of a basketball hoop. We can see the blue sky through the hole.
We are traveling with U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, who has come to toast his Soviet counterparts and talk about grain. He and U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon go to another tent — where we learn later the traditional mutton meal was staid and official.
Our tent is for Soviet and American reporters, and the tension and formality that usually plague such meetings have all but disappeared.
On a round table in the center of the tent are four bottles each of vodka, regional wine, champagne, cognac and mineral water. There are two huge bowls of tomatoes, cucumbers, garlic cloves and bright green onion tops.
Among the American reporters in the tent there is a feeling of a time and a place we will probably never again experience, and the mood of this handful of strangers is best expressed in their toasts.
Craig Whitney of the New York Times offers a toast. It recognizes the good feeling in the tent and calls for a day when we can meet and talk as friends — abandoning politics. We drain our glasses when he adds a prayer for world peace for our children.
Our opposites respond, this time with a moving toast to our wives. We stand for this toast and raise our vodka toward the blue skies peeping through the top of the tent. Again we are asked to drain our glasses, for wives deserve such a tribute.
Next, James Gallagher of the Chicago Tribune, a lyrical Irish Brooklynier, offers a toast contrasting the vastness of Kazakhstan to the intimacy inside the tent.

He says the friendship in the tent makes us feel large despite the vastness of the land.
The response is a toast to beloved Kazakhstan. A Kazakh reporter says he feels love and peace when he returns to his homeland and he wishes us the same love and peace and warmth when we eventually return to the United States.
By this time, the toasts have made us all very warm and more than a little sloppily-sentimental. A Russian across from me says I remind him of a bear — big and strong and loud but gentle with his cubs. I respond with a non-denominational and apolitical toast to the bears of the world.
"May we sleep through the cold, have many fine cubs and may our enemies on the trail run at the very sight of us."
All semblance of difference seems to have disappeared by this time. We toast the great common denominators of our lives — our love for our homelands, our children, our blue skies and the feeling of friendship that surrounds us in the yurta on the Kazakh plains.
We ride many miles after the luncheon of toasts and mutton and fruit. Eventually we return to the world of tensions, politics, worries, deadlines and pressures.
But we return to the real world changed people, reporters who looked at counterparts for a few hours in terms of what united us instead of what separated us from one another.

Zoo Offering Wolf Cub Sale

BROOKFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Brookfield Zoo is providing a rather unusual Father's Day gift — a wolf cub for $10.
Six wolf cubs born recently at the zoo now are available for adoption as Father's Day gifts, the zoo announced Tuesday. However, the cubs will never leave their pack, housed in a wooded area of the zoo grounds.
Each cub can be adopted for $10 or more, a zoo spokesman said. In return for adopting a cub, each person will receive an animal adoption certificate, two decals, a name plaque on display at the zoo and an invitation to a zoo outing. Each cub can be adopted by as many as 50 persons.
Beta Wolf, who sired the six cubs, has been named father of the year at the Brookfield Zoo. Beta, who is 9 years old and is the second dominant wolf in the pack, is the father of two recent litters of three cubs each.
Brookfield, which has the oldest wolf pack in captivity, has not had surviving wolf cubs in six years.

He says the friendship in the tent makes us feel large despite the vastness of the land.
The response is a toast to beloved Kazakhstan. A Kazakh reporter says he feels love and peace when he returns to his homeland and he wishes us the same love and peace and warmth when we eventually return to the United States.

Firms Eye Move Back Into Cities

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Corporate enchantment with suburbia may be waning under pressure of the energy crunch. Soaring transportation costs are forcing more workers — and executives — out of their cars and into mass transport where it is possible.

The problems of workers who drive to their jobs in Chicago's suburbs have caused the state of Illinois to start moving offices with 8,000 employees back into the city's rapid transit loop district.

The Continental Bank, one of Chicago's biggest, is moving its computer operators into the loop district for the same reason — so employees can get to work by elevated train or bus.

Eva Maddox, Chicago office designer and planner, sees these examples as manifestations of a developing trend which may see hundreds of offices and other commercial and industrial facilities move back into urban areas served by rapid transit or high density bus lines as the price of gasoline and the cost of buying and maintaining automobiles becomes more and more burdensome.

Her firm, Massox Associates, has just completed a survey of publicly-held corporations in the Chicago area which indicates 60 percent of the companies are considering a move.

Of those who intend to move, 61 percent said the main purpose would be to locate on the city's rapid transit lines so employees would not have to drive their cars to work. The companies said 67 percent of their workers presently arrive in their own cars, 18 percent by elevated or commuter trains and 15 percent by bus. The average firm surveyed employs 1,400 current and potential mass transit riders.

Should this trend become general around the country, Miss Maddox said, there could be significant impact on the urban real estate market.

The downtown industrial districts and areas near the railroad stations in virtually every city in the country contain abandoned or half-empty buildings soundly constructed years ago. These buildings, she said, could be remodeled into offices, showrooms and even manufacturing facilities if the cost of driving to work goes so high companies are forced to turn the clock back half a century and depend on buses and rapid transit systems to get people to work.

Miss Maddox said a lot of other office planners around the country are well aware of the problem and are busily re-evaluating buildings and vacant land lying close to railroad stations, the remaining trolley lines and high density urban and interurban bus lines for office and light industrial use.

The Maddox company asked workers and junior executives how high the price of gasoline would have to go before they would be compelled to give up driving to work and find a job they could reach by bus or train.

Twenty-six percent wouldn't hazard a guess. Forty-four percent said gasoline at $1.50 a gallon would be more than they could pay. Ten percent said even 85-cent gasoline would force them to look for jobs they could reach by public transportation and 20 percent said they couldn't pay $1 a gallon.

Court Upholds Prison Term

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals today upheld a life sentence for Valdemar Sanchez De La Garza for allegedly delivering heroin to a San Antonio undercover agent in 1975.

Officer Luis Martinez testified he had a conversation with De La Garza at a lounge and asked him if anyone had any "stuff," which Martinez indicated was heroin.

According to court records, De La Garza said he did and asked for money. Martinez said he paid the defendant $14, and the defendant gave the money to the bartender. The bartender handed a red balloon to De La Garza, who gave the balloon to Martinez.

The substance in the balloon was found to contain 17.18 percent heroin.

De La Garza argued that there is no showing that he knew the substance was heroin since it was merely referred to as "stuff."

The appeals court said that argument was "without merit."

De La Garza also contended that the trial court should have required the prosecution to disclose the name, address and whereabouts of the informant.

Martinez testified that an informant drove with him to the bar but waited outside.

The law provides, the appeals court said, that if the "informant was present at the time of the offense, participated in the offense, or was a material witness, the state must disclose his identity."

In the instant case, the informant was not present in the bar at the time of the offense, the informant did not participate in the offense, nor is it indicated the informant was a material witness to the transaction.

Court Overturns Robbery Conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — Joseph Lee Brewer won a reversal today of his life sentence on an aggravated robbery conviction because of improper instructions made to the jury.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals sent the case back to Houston, where Brewer was convicted in the Oct. 25, 1975, robbery of Sharon Cotrone.

The judge told the jury it could convict Brewer "under theories not alleged in the indictment."

Book Fails To Explain Tape Gap

NEW YORK (AP) — The editor of Richard Nixon's best-selling memoirs concedes that the former president's version of an 18½-minute gap in a White House tape is not convincing.

And, says Robert Markel, Nixon rejected a suggestion to elaborate on his explanation of the erasure, which could have shed additional light on the Watergate scandal.

"He knows it's unconvincing," said Markel, editor in chief of Grosset Dunlap. "But he believes he's telling the truth."

In an interview this week, Markel also said:

—The National Security Council asked that some parts of Nixon's original manuscript, originally 1.5 million words, be deleted to prevent breaches of security. But Markel minimized the nature and number of the deletions by saying that only gratuitous material was removed.

—He and Nixon decided against responding to contradictory claims in other Watergate accounts to avoid "getting into a debate with other people in the pages of his book. I think that took a certain amount of willpower on his part."

Despite the mystery surrounding the creation of the gap in the key Watergate tape, Markel said Nixon was loathe to "invent anything more convincing" for his book. "RN: The Memoirs of Richard Nixon."

Nixon's secretary, Rose Mary Woods, testified before the Senate Watergate committee that she might have accidentally erased about five minutes of the tape, but Markel said Nixon declined to explore with her circumstances that might account for the full 18½ minutes.

"My thinking here as an editor was that maybe this is a way to clarify, to show a willingness to grapple with this thorny problem," Markel said, adding that he took up the matter with Nixon's aides.

Their response, he said, was: "It couldn't be done because it just couldn't be... I was told that's not going to work as a way of doing it."

Markel said he then resorted to assuming the role of prosecutor in dissecting Nixon's account with the aides.

"That got nowhere," he said. "It helped me to understand why the passage had to be the way it is. It is a statement of his abiding conviction of what has happened."

Without offering any explanation for the gap, Nixon simply said in his book that others have speculated that it may have been caused by either the Secret Service or electronic defects.

Nixon wrote that he was aware that the only explanations of the gap "that would readily be accepted" were that either he or Miss Woods deliberately erased that section.

"But I know I did not do it. And I completely believe Rose when she says that she did not do it," Nixon wrote.

House Panel Mulls End Of Worm Tariff

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ways and Means Committee has waded into a slimy business — worms, imported and domestic — and those who make a living selling the wiggly beasts to fishermen.

Up for committee consideration, after approval on Tuesday by its trade subcommittee, is a bill to suspend for the next three years the tariff on imported live worms.

The measure was introduced by Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., who has interested himself in the problems a constituent, Weekley's Wholesale Bait Inc., of Hamburg, N.Y. The company complains it is having problems with unethical Canadian worm purveyors.

The situation is full of twists. It would not appear that a U. S. dealer in night crawlers — fighting unfair foreign competition — would be helped by the elimination of the duty on imports. The tariff works out to about $1 for each 1,000 worms.

But Kemp aide Sherry Grossman said Weekley's, which imports large and lively quantities from legitimate Canadian sources, would get needed financial relief, even though the duty suspension would also help what she called the worm bootleggers.

Meanwhile, with Kemp's help, Weekley's is assembling data to support a requested investigation by the International Trade Commission which is charged with cracking down on illegal import competition.

As the Kemp office describes the operation, some — but by no means all — Canadian worm salesmen arrive at the U.S. border with their truckloads of worms, pay the $1-per-1,000-worm tariff and then fan out to conduct an untraceable business done directly with bait retailers.

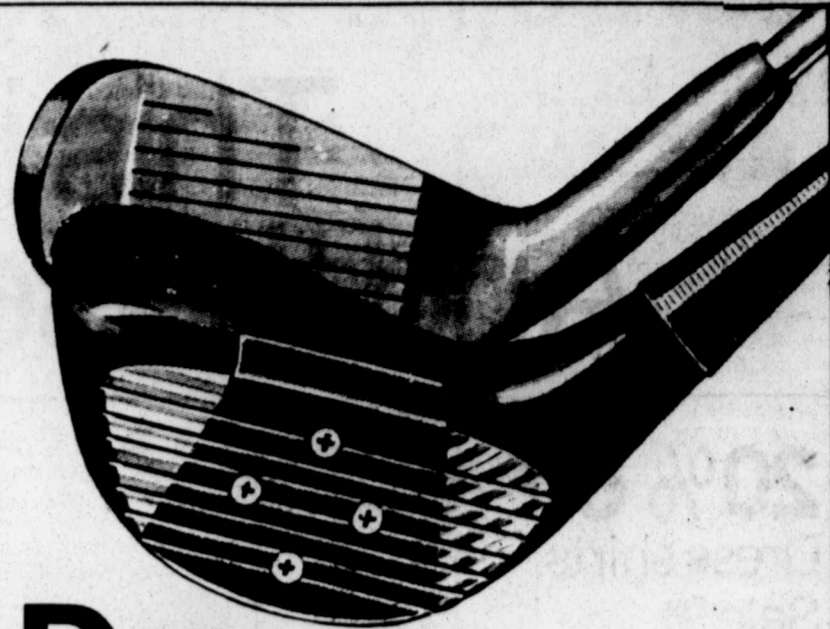

The transactions are in cash, the Weekley's complaint says, and so unscrupulous worm men are able to slither around both the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and its counterpart in Canada both of which have tax claims on the income. Since the dealers avoid paying taxes, the complaint goes, they can undersell those who grub out a legitimate living from worms.

Kemp aide Chris Krelich said Weekley's business, once $1.5 million, has been cut 30 percent by the slippery deals. Knocking out the import duty, the argument goes, would aid Weekley's by saving it the $1 per 1,000 worms.

The night crawler business is no fly — or crawl — by night operation. Estimates of annual imports range up to $10 million, with more than 99 per cent of the supply coming from Canada, the remainder from Britain, Africa and Taiwan.

Carter Critical Of Castro

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, facing Fidel Castro's repeated denials that he abetted the Katangan invasion of Zaire, is outlining secret intelligence reports to back up its charge that Cuban troops accompanied the rebels almost to the moment of the attack.

The release of the summary of the highly-classified reports came as President Carter reiterated his charge at a news conference Wednesday that the Cubans were deeply involved in the rebel invasion of copper-rich Shaba province last month.

Carter cited a list of steps Castro could have taken to block the invasion and contended that the Cuban leader's failure to stop the attack was, in effect, proof of Cuba's complicity.

The administration's summary, outlined to some of the news media on Wednesday, was described as similar to the intelligence material furnished to several congressional committees. It claims that Cuba had been assisting Angola-based Katangans as early as 1975 and at least until last month's invasion of Zaire.

Some members of Congress have described the administration's evidence as inconclusive, although others have said they are convinced that the president is correct about Cuban involvement.

A senior White House official, who asked not to be named, said the president was not disturbed by lingering doubts over his claim that Cuba was involved in the attack.

"The president sees it as a legacy of what has gone on before," the official said, referring to what he called widespread public distrust of other recent administrations.

"It (the doubt) comes from a time when more credibility was given to other governments than our own, no matter how spotty that country's record (for honesty)," he added.

The official said the administration's summary was based on "reliable intelligence sources," but — to protect the sources — they were not identified even in general terms.

The summary contends that Cubans helped reorganize Katangan troops in Angola as early as 1975 and provided equipment and planning for an abortive invasion of Zaire in March 1977.

After that invasion failed, the summary says, Cubans trained Katangan troops at five bases in northeastern Angola and accompanied them to the launching point for last month's attacks.

However, the summary does not contend — and neither does the administration — that Cubans actually took part in the incursion into Shaba, formerly known as Katanga. The invasion was driven back by French, Belgian and Zairian troops.

The summary also says Cuban and Soviet advisers asked Angola's Marxist government in 1976 to permit raids into Zaire. Cuba has an estimated 20,000 troops in Angola and, the administration contends, has considerable influence on the Angolan government.

The summary adds that early this year Katangan leader Nathaniel M'Bumba was claiming Angola's support for his effort to overthrow the government of Zaire.

Castro has acknowledged that Cuban forces had helped the Katangans, but stopped two years ago. He insists that Cuba has rejected more recent requests from the rebels for support.

Castro also reportedly told a U.S. diplomat in Havana several days after the invasion that he tried unsuccessfully to head off the attack by contacting Angolan leader Agostino Neto.

At his news conference, Carter disputed that claim, contending that since Cuba effectively controls Angola's transportation system, Castro could have stopped the attack had he wanted.

"The fact is that Castro could have done much more had he genuinely wanted to stop the invasion," Carter said.

"He could have interceded with the Katangans themselves. He could have notified the Organization of African Unity. He could have notified the world at large that an invasion designed to cross and to disturb an international border was in prospect. And he did not do any of these things."

"So there is no doubt in my mind that just on the basis of these facts alone my statement if true."

Family Physician Links Ailments To Lifestyles

ual has a moral obligation to preserve his own health as a sanctimonious air, and it is a meaningless thought unless the person has been informed.

"Americans know more about preventive maintenance for their cars than they do about preventive maintenance for their bodies," he told seminar participants. Franks challenged health program administrators and educators to develop programs with significant impact on human behavior.

"Somehow it is easier to sell deodorants, panty hose and cold remedies than it is good health habits," said Franks.

He said his views probably would not be popular among health educators. Franks is one, a clinical assistant professor in family practice with the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston. Senior medical students work with him in serving 3,000 patients in neighboring Terrell, Upton and Crockett Counties.

"We have met the enemy and it is us," he said, quoting the comic strip character Pogo to his fellow physicians. "You and I have not placed health education at a sufficiently high priority to see that it is done well."

According to Franks, the techniques of persuasion are far more complex, the results far less dramatic in individual health habits than the need for immunization, adequate sewage disposal and drinking safe water.

Franks, citing figures from a conference earlier this year on school health education, said studies indicated life expectancy might be increased by 11 years if persons follow seven basic health habits.

The regimen is: three meals a day at regular times and no snacking; breakfast every day; moderate exercise two or three times a week; seven or eight hours of sleep a night; no smoking; moderate weight and no alcohol or only in moderation.

If those rules were followed, he said, "the savings to the country would be billions of health care and disability dollars, a vast reduction in human misery and a marked improvement in the quality of life."

Franks said parents should reassert their authority with their children to provide for their best mental and physical development, and they, themselves, should follow the guidelines for healthy living.

"If he (a parent or individual) is unwilling to do these things, he must accept the steadily rising costs of medical care," said Franks. "This is his primary choice: to change his personal bad habits or stop complaining. He can either remain the problem or become the solution to it."

As for those rules, Franks said that he does well with six of the seven.

"I do have to watch my weight," he said. "Again, I have to be an example to my patients who have the problem."

Franks said he uses diet, exercise and educational material in helping overweight persons.

"I even use appetite suppressants at first," he said. "The first 10 pounds is important. Usually if they can lose that, they can go on from there."

Franks keeps a watchful eye on his persuasive techniques as he does the scale.

"I don't fuss. It's their problem I do encourage them to stay with it when they don't lose," said Franks.

Stress can be as much a problem in rural West Texas as Houston, "although the stress comes mostly when we don't get rain," Franks joked.

Franks escapes the rigors of being a doctor by going to his farm at the end of the day.

"I can put up with a lot just by knowing I can go there later and ride with my 9-year-old daughter and tend the sheep and cows," he said.

Franks also visits the Colorado mountains each summer.

"I seem to draw strength from them," he said. "It puts me in my place. You realize the world has gone on before you and will keep on after you've left."

"With any problem — just living — first, you have to be at peace with yourself," said Franks.

sweet. The severity of his crisis depends on the extent to which he questions his life structure and feels a strong need to modify or change it.

Launching a second career in the 40s, or beyond, may well be the wave of the future, according to some experts. Even now a rapidly increasing number of men are starting over in their middle years. Moreover, there is much evidence which indicates that countless others would like to do the same, even though they have not yet summoned the courage, or figured out the way, to make a meaningful change.

Despite the many valid reasons that prompt men to change careers at mid-life, however, one major problem confronts them: Sanctions and guidelines are not readily available. Starting over is difficult and inevitably fraught with stresses, uncertainties and questions. But the services that now exist to help a man thinking about, preparing for, or already launched on such a venture are scant indeed.

The man who changes direction at mid-life cannot count on much help. He must gather information and search out existing resources on his own, and then, with ingenuity and persistence, bend them to his purposes. Too, he must rally his own sources of support among friends and intimates. Starting over is still a solitary venture for most American men, a venture that requires both courage and determination.

Not long ago, a magazine article portrayed five mid-life men who had quit their jobs for something radically different because work that was once enjoyable had now become intolerable. Each man's switch was unusual: A salesman from Ohio became a teacher in Alaska; a Chicago stockbroker, fascinated by ecology, earned his doctorate in marine sciences; a Wall Street insurance broker opted for managing an inn in Maine; a Dallas veterinarian chose physical labor on a department store receiving dock; and a New Orleans policeman became a painter.

The most striking note in these stories was that all these men were plagued by disturbing symptoms before deciding to make their move.

The salesman found that earning $30,000 a year had given him a nervous stomach, and kept on the road four nights a week "going like the hammers of hell."

The veterinarian became so jangled by people tracing him down on the telephone all hours that he chose simple manual labor to avoid such tensions.

The insurance broker said the computer's grind not only caused him to drink and smoke and eat too much, but also fanned his anger to the point where he began saying "awful things" in sales meetings—and then ripped an office phone from the wall and even punched someone before deciding to quit.

As for the policeman, his work in the homicide division was so demanding that he rarely saw his family and hadn't had a real vacation in years. Exhausted from overwork, he finally slammed his fist into a wall, breaking two fingers, because "everything became too much."

One month later he quit and turned to painting.

These men changed the direction of their life because pain pushed them out of a situation that had become unbearable. They did not discover a better alternative until after making this break. Other men change because they feel pulled toward something more meaningful: a deeper commitment, a different intellectual interest; more creative freedom; or a calmer way of life. Even so, they too will experience pain. They are

Two Still In Serious Condition

A 21-year-old Slaton man and a Slaton policeman remained in Lubbock's Methodist Hospital today following a late Wednesday night shooting in Slaton.

David Arthur Vaughan was described in critical condition near noon today, while police Lt. Gerry M. Eaton's condition had improved to satisfactory.

Eaton, 35, was shot in the upper left chest and Vaughan was wounded in the groin during the incident which occurred about 10:15 p.m. at the Slaton Police Department.

Police Chief Robert J. Estes issued a brief prepared statement containing only that information and said no other details of the shooting would be released as of this morning.

Other sources, however, said Eaton and Vaughan were in an office at the department during the course of an investigation of an earlier reported disturbance in Slaton.

Vaughan reportedly was in Eaton's office to give a statement to the police lieutenant.

Because there was no typewriter in the office, Eaton reportedly went out into the police department lobby to use the machine there, and as he was typing, Vaughan reportedly walked out of the office carrying a gun.

Sources said Eaton, who was not armed, had left his .357 magnum in his office before going into the lobby.

Reportedly, Eaton was shot first, a scuffle ensued and Vaughan was wounded.

The two men and a police department dispatcher reportedly were the only persons in the area at the time of the shooting.

A spokesman for the Criminal District Attorney's Office in Lubbock said no charges had been filed at midday.

Paramedic Training Funds Donated Here

about 10 cities in Texas with a paramedic-staffed EMS system.

The idea for the project came after Lubbock Christian College announced it will offer a paramedic-training course beginning July 25. Tuition for the course is $650.

Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the hospital district and its hospital, said he is "reluctant to let the opportunity pass for our emergency medical technicians to be trained" as paramedics. But he noted that the district has too many fiscal uncertainties to foot the tuition now.

So Bosworth asked the auxiliary to consider contributing $9,750 to cover the tuition for 15 technicians to attend the course.

In the program, he said, the technicians will learn a variety of medical procedures that "have been successful in saving lives in other parts of the U.S. People of all walks of life would benefit from an EMS paramedic program."

The course, which runs through April of 1979, requires a minimum of 492 hours. Most of them will be spent in clinical training in hospital emergency rooms throughout the city.

The course is divided into three sections — administration of intravenous fluids, advanced airway (breathing) management and cardiovascular care.

"As the technicians complete each segment, their expertise in that field will be applied and placed into use in our service," Haggard said. "This means that when they complete the first segment in January, we will be able to administer intravenous fluids in the field."

The auxiliary will present $3,000, the first installment of the tuition pledge, to the hospital district board of managers Monday.

Bosworth said he will ask the board to put in next year's budget enough money to implement a paramedic program. That will mean upgrading salaries and buying drugs and equipment, he said.

Haggard said EMS hopes eventually to institute telemetry, by which an emergency patient's vital signs can be broadcast to an emergency room and a physician can instruct paramedics what to do via radio.

In approving the donation, the auxiliary said it will ask EMS technicians who take the course to stay with the hospital for at least a year as paramedics.

Treasury Secretary Blisters Solons For Energy Bill Lag

PARIS (AP) — Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told the West's leading economic powers today that the administration is "deeply frustrated and embarrassed" by the "inability of Congress to act" on President Carter's energy bill.

"Progress is being made," he said, but he recalled Carter's pledge to take administrative action if the bill fails to pass.

Blumenthal was speaking on the closing day of a two-day ministerial meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

He continued and expanded on the attack made by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on Wednesday on new aspects of protectionism.

Blumenthal singled out the financing of civil aircraft exports — an apparent reference to the recent sale of the Franco-German Airbus to Eastern Airlines, alleged to have had heavy government aid — and a recent export credits agreement.

The agreement is a pledge among leading nations not to engage in cut-throat competition in credit offers to win export contracts, mainly to Eastern European nations.

But Blumenthal said that "the first few months' experience ... strongly suggests it needs to be strengthened and expanded."

"If there are no restraints agreed this year on predatory official export credit competition, and such competition continues to escalate, there will be swift and effective U.S. reaction."

Blumenthal also took up the theme that domestic subsidies to ailing industries are dangerously protectionist.

"There has been an accelerating, destructive tendency to subsidize production in inefficient plants and industries," he said, equating this with traditional protectionist measures such as tariffs or quotas.

Reviewing the U.S. economy, Blumenthal said the inflation rate seems to be stuck between 6.5 and 7 percent.

"There are thus real limits to continued rapid expansion of U.S. domestic demand," he said.

Sun Bakes Southwest

A-J News Services

Skies were clear over most of the entire Southwest region this morning after thunderclouds faded over North Central Texas, and another hot, humid day was forecast for the South Plains.

Storms in the north central and far southwestern parts of the state ended shortly after dark Wednesday night, weathermen said.

Fair skies and temperatures in the upper 90s are predicted for the Lubbock area today and Friday, with overnight lows in the upper 60s.

READY FOR FREQUENT A NIGHT

But, in addition, some men could not possibly embark on new ventures that require returning to school or reducing their salary unless their wife contributed financially as well.

From a woman's point of view, the pressures become greater when her husband leaves the business world for an entirely different way of life, renouncing his former standards of success and security for a more independent existence in the great outdoors. Such dramatic departures from city or suburban life do not necessarily lead to divorce. They may even strengthen a couple's relationship in time.

Whether a wife goes to work, however, her willingness to accept a reshuffling of priorities and tolerates financial uncertainty is crucial. Harding Lemay and his wife, Dorothy, now live comfortably because she supplements his income by writing a television soap opera, and by teaching. But when he first left his publishing job, things were not so rosy.

"There were times we were down to three dollars," says Dorothy, "but then something always rescued us." Despite such moments of anxiety, she is delighted with the change and feels the family is much closer now that her husband has more time for them. When he first quit, she recalls, "A couple of my friends said, 'I don't see how you dared to let him do it.' As if I could have stopped him! But even if I could, I didn't want to. It's not fun to live with a man who is miserable."

Men who have made such moves say the rewards ultimately outweigh the risks. But, they insist, uncertainty and sacrifice are part of the package. If a man who makes a major change ignores either, he will be sadly disillusioned.

Trail Leads To LeConte Lodge

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

America's most popular national park is the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. The scenic wonder straddles the back of the Smoky Mountains covering portions of Tennessee and North Carolina and attracts more than six million people a year to visit the forest paradise and see some of the highest and most rugged mountains in Eastern America.

Many tourists return each season to see the countless varieties of wild flowers, look at black bear and deer, recall the days of Cherokee Indians and early white settlers, or take part in nature activities. Some fish the 600 miles of trout streams, or ski hills on well-packed snow, or just lie in the summer sun and breathe the pure mountain air.

Don't worry about the smoke of the Smokies; it's a natural haze that envelops the mountains. You can breathe deeply of the good, clean air. But, if you are concerned with crowded campgrounds and roads — head for the high country.

This writer went to the popular national park to hike a trail leading up to LeConte Lodge named for a nearby peak that reaches an altitude of 6,593 feet. The trail is easy and continually tempts hikers to stop and enjoy the changing flora.

The great golfer Walter Hagen used to offer this thought for living each day, "You're only here on a short visit, so be sure to smell the flowers." I did exactly that — pausing to fully appreciate high banks of mountain laurel bordering both sides of the trail as far as I could see.

It's advisable for hikers to carry plastic ponchos as protection against the short summer showers. I was just digging a poncho out of my pack when I noticed a movement further up the trail. A black bear paused in the middle of the trail; it was the first bear I had seen while outside the safety of my car. I froze, not even allowing myself to reach for a camera. For all I knew any movement might have been taken as a gesture of violence or an offer of food.

Tourists along the park roads have established a bad practice of feeding the bears. The animals are now accustomed to taking handouts and not having to forage for natural foods. Why bother with berries when a peanut butter sandwich is available? This practice has conditioned the bears to not be afraid of humans. Consequently a roadside bear might keep approaching you even after no more treats are available. After all, as far as the bruin is concerned, there might be another sandwich or cookie in your pocket. That's when he takes a swipe at your pocket and consequently you too.

My bear moved on after a brief glance in my direction and soon I was approaching my objective high above the park's main stream of traffic. On the trail for four and a half hours, I had taken time for a leisurely lunch and to follow Hagen's advice. Chimney smoke from LeConte Lodge was now visible.

The highest guest lodge in the Eastern United States provides plenty of home-cooked food (breakfast and dinner) for guests and rugged, but comfortable, overnight accommodations. The lodge is surrounded by several hand hewn log cabins. The cabins feature bunks with warm Hudson Bay four point blankets.

"Coffee or hot chocolate?" asked Herick Brown as he greeted me inside LeConte Lodge. (Now retired, Brown sold the lodge after managing the mountaintop retreat for approximately 15 seasons.) Lean and tanned from hiking the wooded trails, Brown proved to be a charming, outgoing man interested in nature, conservation and his guests.

We walked outside and Brown pointed at a nearby cabin. "The oldest structure was built in 1933." He looked up at the sky. "The sunset should be beautiful because of the clouds. Cliff Top Trail will take you to the best viewing area; just follow the other guests." He counselled, "Tomorrow you should head for Myrtle Point a mile from here for the sunrise."

Leisurely walks and brisk hikes along forest trails filled the following days. Rainbow Falls was an easy hike to see water leap from a thicket of rhododendron; a spray of rainbows arched to the rocks 84 feet below.

Boulevard Trail, southeast from the lodge, joins the famed Appalachian Trail. At the junction to the Appalachian Trail I met hikers who had followed the mountain trail for days or weeks, and some for over a month. The trail from Maine to Georgia draws hikers and outdoor enthusiasts from all over the world.

Hikers and backpackers make a habit of making some kind of human noise as they travel in bear country. I usually have a police whistle and Sierra cup hanging from my belt. The continual clinking sound keeps me from suddenly surprising a bear. The whistle also is a good emergency signal if a hiker needs to call for help.

All too soon it was time to start back down the Mount LeConte trail. I took one last look from a point above the lodge. Over the open glade was a spectacular view of the park. If you could see all of the park at once it would be a scene 54 miles long and 19 miles wide. You'd see Chimney Tops, Huggins Hell, Mingo Creek, Chunky Gal Mountain, Breakneck Ridge, and Charlie's Bunion. You'd also see Clingmans Dome and its spectacular drive, 140 different kinds of trees, 28 different kinds of orchids, 200 different birds, and pioneer structures from a time when few people knew of the Smoky Mountains.

Down the trail, following Alum Cave Creek past Arch Rock, I descended from 6,593 feet to 3,800 where I had left my car at a public parking area. The walk had passed through the same zones of plant life as if traveling from Canada to Georgia.

Because of increased interest in the out of doors and an attempt to "get away from it all" — LeConte Lodge has become a popular destination for visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

The traffic prompted the National Park Service to consider closing LeConte Lodge and tearing down the structures to disperse the heavy concentration of visitors to the mountaintop. The use of fallen trees for firewood, rather than allowing the timber to return to the soil, along with a problem with flush toilets, initiated the plan to close the lodge.

LeConte Lodge is now using kerosene for heating, gas for cooking, and pit type toilets have replaced the modern conveniences. The new environmental practices have prompted the park service to allow LeConte Lodge to remain in operation.

Jim Huff, president of LeConte Lodge, Inc., said in a telephone interview, "The National Park Service has done some studies, and I think the studies have shown that overnight use during our short season is not having a great impact on the mountain." Huff added, "I believe the park people are now basically mighty happy with our facility and operation."

The National Park Service has adopted a policy of deciding on a year to year basis whether to allow the lodge to provide accommodations for visitors to the mountain.

A lodge brochure states, "The basic charm of LeConte Lodge lies in the friendly spirit of the people who come here — people who find relaxation and renewed energy in the cool, majestic solitude at the top of the Smokies."

People who have been to LeConte Lodge will always remember that basic charm and friendly spirit. Now it is the responsibility of our generation to respect the environment so LeConte Lodge will provide a special welcome to the generations to come.

READY FOR BEAR — Visitors to LeConte Lodge prepare to photograph bears that frequent a nearby area.

Lodge Provides Information For Making Reservations

Enquiries for LeConte Lodge reservations should be addressed to LeConte Lodge, P.O. Box 350, Gatlinburg, Tenn., 37738, or phone (615) 436-4473. The lodge is open for guests from the last weekend in March through the first weekend in November. Room rates, single bed occupancy is $17.49 per adult, and $12.83 for each child under ten years of age. The rates include breakfast and dinner. The lodge also may be reached by horseback. Gatlinburg has accommodations for 25,000 guests each night. Reservations are advised, especially in the summer. The Mobile Travel Guide lists many hotels and motels in the city, and lists the rates for accommodations. The guide also describes various attractions in the city including the Smoky Sky Lift, a half mile cable car ride up Crockett Mountain.

Park information is available from Park Superintendent, Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Gatlinburg, Tenn., 37738.

POPULAR RESORT — Gatlinburg, Tenn., (resident population 2,329) is noted for its mountain handicrafts.

The city on US 441, southeast of Knoxville, serves as the western entrance to the Great Smoky Mountains

National Park and provides accommodations for 25,000 visitors to the area each night.

Unused Packaged Disaster Hospitals Gathering Dust Across U.S.

By C.C. MINICLIER
 DENVER (AP) — Gathering dust in mines, fairgrounds, supermarket basements and warehouses, they stand as monuments to an age of fear about the possibility of nuclear war. America's Packaged Disaster Hospitals are obsolete now, their equipment idle, their outdated medicines useless.
 During the Korean War the federal government prepared for a possible nuclear holocaust by putting together 2,750 PDHs and distributing them around the country.

Only a single copy has ever been found of the book, printed in Barcelona in 1493, containing a letter Christopher Columbus wrote King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella telling of his discovery of the New World.

Each contained 200 beds. They were designed to be set up in any building and came complete with surgical equipment, gloves, drugs, blankets and bedpans.
 But two decades later, confronted by outdated drugs, rotting rubberized equipment and rust, Congress in 1972 denied funds for the maintenance of the PDHs.
 A year later they were declared obsolete.
 The hospitals still contain usable stainless steel surgical equipment, operating tables, hospital beds and the cots and blankets.

"It was felt that a doctor might do more harm with that equipment than if he did not have it. We should either do it right or not do it," recalled A. A. Gunnels, staff director of the House subcommittee that made the recommendation that no funds be provided to maintain the packaged hospitals.

 Some of the packaged hospitals were used. The Washington-based Pan American Development Foundation received 29 PDHs from seven states and sent them to Panama, Haiti, Colombia, Belize, the Dominican Republic and Uruguay.
 Four units have been modified in California for disaster use. But Woody King of the state's Disaster Health Service reports that most of the other 189 PDHs in the state remain in storage.
 Officials in Washington estimate that 1,300 PDHs remain intact. But the Pentagon's coordinator for civil defense, Ken Christenson, says many have been cannibalized for generators, blankets or other items.

 A typical packaged hospital — there were at least six different models — is contained in 660 boxes and crates, weighs about 45,000 pounds and requires 7,500 cubic feet of storage space.
 Several plans for their distribution in Colorado to local medical facilities, ambulance services and research units were prepared by a special medical committee headed by Dr. J. Cuthbert Owens, professor of surgery at the University of Colorado Medical Center.

 "It all faded into oblivion because there were no funds or manpower," Owens said.
 In the remote Colorado Rockies town of Creede, civil defense director Harry Larson said his PDH arrived in 1962, before the county had a doctor, and has remained stored since then in a tunnel of the Empress Mine.

Reese AFB Looks To Easements

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Easement, not outright purchase, makes up most of the negotiations now underway to secure a clear zone for Reese Air Force Base.

Of the 258.6 acres of the Hurlwood community involved in the Air Installation Compatible Use Zone (AICUZ) project, only 71 acres are set for outright purchase by the Air Force's real estate agent, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Bob Seaman, corps negotiator now contacting owners of Hurlwood property within 3,000 feet of the end of Reese runways, explained upon arrival in Lubbock that easements will be obtained for acreage now in farmland.

Farming and roads are the only activities to be allowed in clear zones with high hazard potential. Land now in cultivation will continue as farms under the same owners, but the easements will insure that no structures will be built in the zone.

Farm houses within the zone, Seaman continued, must be removed as no habitations will be allowed.

The Reese clear zone involves 67 tracts of land.

The AICUZ concept was developed after intensive study of aircraft accidents around military and civilian facilities.

The Reese clear zone is the fifth such project Seaman has undertaken under the AICUZ program. Like the others—two in San Antonio, one in Austin and one in Louisiana—the Reese acquisition will take time, Seaman noted.

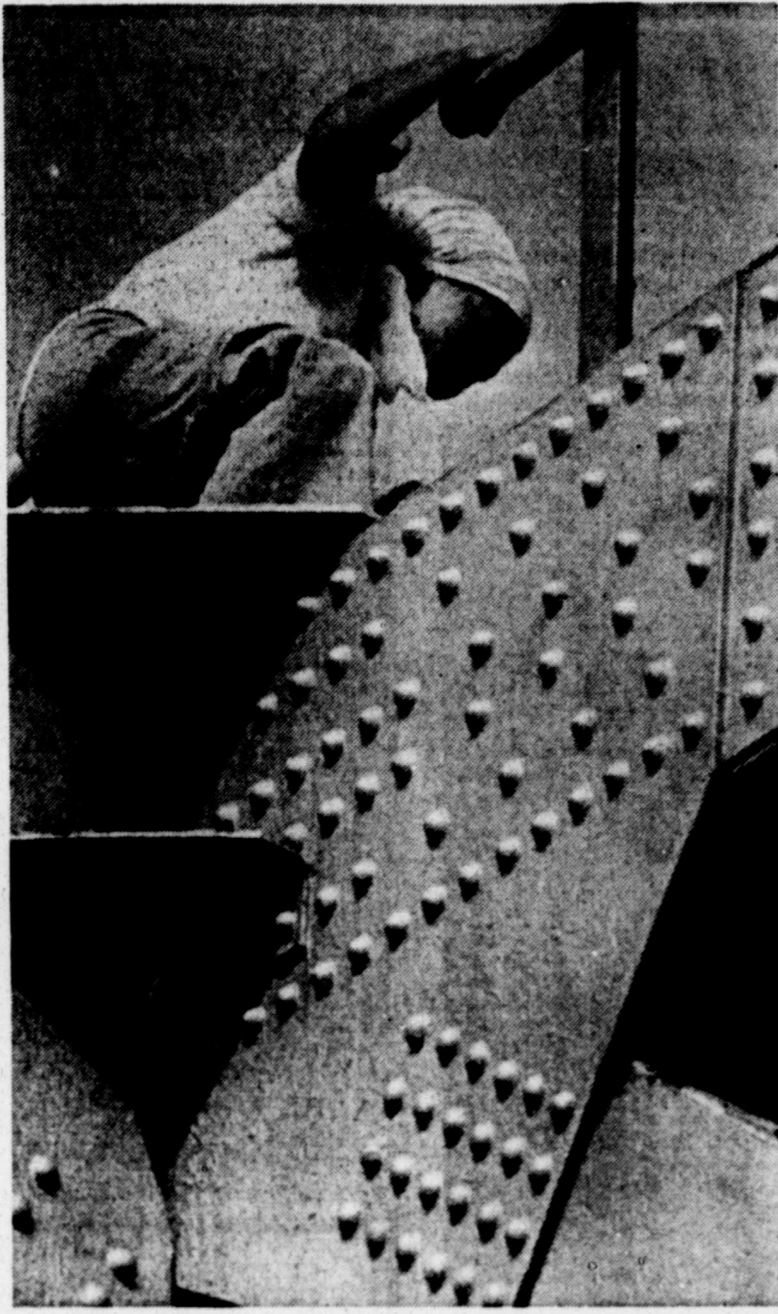

Proposed acquisition of the clear zone, where the majority of mishaps occur, was announced first two years ago. Procedures ceased soon after until funds already appropriated could be authorized for spending.

Implementation of the AICUZ program around Air Force bases, the initial report stated, will insure the safety of civilians and make sure the base maintains enough air space to perform its mission.

Seaman will be contacting owners of land to the north and south of Reese over the next few weeks.

The AICUZ program is an Air Force-wide concept to deter civilian encroachment while maintaining safety of the civilian community in areas of greatest tragedy potential.

If wild turkey did not immediately become the superstar of Thanksgiving, part of the reason may have been some Pilgrims' vague suspicion that eating the bird would cause leprosy.

Some 'UFOs' Launched In Texas

PALESTINE (UPI) — Some of those unidentified flying objects Americans see in the night are launched at the National Scientific Balloon Facility on the edge of the East Texas piney woods.

Ralph Harju, spokesman for the agency operated by 43 universities and the National Science Foundation, said NSBF is not widely known, but reporters sometimes call to ask if a local UFO sighting could be a balloon.

"We have gotten calls from radio stations as far away as North Carolina," Harju said.

Balloons, he said, can be confused with UFOs because of unusual visibility, occasional rapid movement and their translucent, uninflated shape at altitudes lower than the usual 140,000 feet.

"If you see one at sunrise or sunset, you can see it a long way away. We had one over Jackson, Mississippi, and you could see it from here, just before termination (of the flight)," Harju said.

"A person can look at it and it doesn't seem to be moving at all. Then they take their eyes off it and it's gone."

The balloon facility, which occupies a few acres on the edge of the Palestine airport, was opened in 1963 and through 1977 had launched more than 1,200 balloons for 35 universities, 23 research agencies and 33 foreign nations.

Director Alfred Shipley said the remote location was chosen because of little air traffic, climate and a central U.S. location allowing full use of east-west stratospheric winds that often blow balloons along as fast as airplanes.

NSBF spends about $1 million annually launching, monitoring and retrieving balloons researching such areas as atmospheric and astrophysics. Currently popular research topics are the effect of aero-

City Officials Fear Local Tax Revolt

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Proposition 13, California's tax revolt, may serve as encouragement to local property owners to protest their assessments when the Lubbock city-school tax equalization board convenes next month, officials fear.

"I'm afraid Proposition 13 will have a psychological impact. Taxes seem to be on everybody's mind as a result of what happened in California," said John Brooks, chief tax assessor-collector for the City of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District.

"Property taxes have become a very personal and emotional issue."

The problem is, the tax equalization board is no place to vent such emotions, Brooks said. "The board must go strictly by factual evidence. Board members try to answer one question: is your property assessed fairly with respect to other properties in the city?"

Simply complaining to the board that taxes are too high, or that the property owner will be hard-pressed to pay them, won't do any good, he said.

That message often is difficult to get across to the public. Brooks expects a "very large number" of property owners to protest increased tax assessments to the equalization board. The board will hear complaints on business personal property July 5-7; residential property, July 10-21; and commercial property, July 24-27.

Proposition 13, which California voters passed overwhelmingly last week, may have something to do with it, Brooks said. The proposition cut property taxes in that state by about 57 percent.

The hubbub in California "gave people the impression that all property taxes are unfair. We're going to have to work extra hard to overcome that impression," Brooks said.

Another factor in the "tremendous volume" of anticipated complaints is that tax assessments on many properties have changed drastically this year under the city-school tax department's rotating re-evaluation cycle.

In the 1978 program of the four-year cycle, the department has reappraised commercial property in the city's northeast quadrant (north of 19th Street, east of University Avenue) and residential property in the southwest quadrant (south of 34th Street, west of University Avenue).

The effect on commercial property has not been too great because inflation in the northeast has been relatively low, Brooks said. But the southwest, where the inflation rate has been "shocking," is a different story.

Homes in the southwest quadrant were last appraised in 1973-74. Due to inflation, the revised values — to be used in the 1978 tax billing, which goes out in October — are anywhere from 25 percent to 100 percent higher than the previous values.

An Avalanche-Journal survey of 100 houses indicated that the average residential assessment in the city's southwest will rise about 50 percent due to re-evaluation.

Brooks said his office is helpless but to follow the market trends in reappraising property. And while the increases are large, he said, taxpayers should remember it has been four or five years since their last re-evaluation — and it will be another four years until their next one.

Brooks said notices of increased assessments on business personal and residential property will be sent out the week of June 26, and on commercial property, about July 7. "All property owners whose assessments are going up should receive a notice at least 10 days before the tax equalization board hearings," he said.

If a southwest homeowner fails to receive a notice, he should contact the tax office, Brooks said. He said it is possible that the notice got lost in the mail.

Brooks anticipates sending out 20,000 to 30,000 notices of increased assessments.

Persons who disagree with their assessments should first contact the city-school tax office. "Many times we can satisfy the problem by explaining how we arrived at a value," Brooks said.

"The property owner may still think that the value is high, but we can demonstrate to him that it is a fair value and equal to the values on comparable properties," he said.

Property owners who still have objections then can sign up for a hearing before the tax equalization board, composed of 20 citizens appointed by the city council and school board.

Homeowners whose assessments are going up also might want to check with their bank or mortgage company.

Home-loan officers are urging property owners to make provisions for paying their higher taxes now so that they won't be socked with huge increases in monthly mortgage payments next year.

"I think we've had 180 Ph.D. dissertations written," Operations Director Bob Kubara said. "That's rewarding."

Some launchings occur at remote sites like Australia. Most are at Palestine, near sunrise or sunset. The slow inflation, release and ascent — a graceful lofting into the sky — can be as arresting as a rocket launch.

But launch, which has to occur according to a flight plan filed with the Federal Aviation Administration, is just the beginning.

Then there's monitoring at Palestine and remote centers in Tuscaloosa, Ala., (if its winter when stratospheric winds blow east) or Pecos (if its summer when the winds blow west). A chase plane follows in the air.

At termination, when the scientific package parachutes down and the balloon automatically deflates, the NSBF "roadrunners" go into action.

They are responsible for recovery of the balloons and packages wherever they land. Harju remembers one in West Texas that landed on the side of a mountain far from the nearest road.

"I went into Van Horn and we hired 10 people to climb out there and haul it out," he laughed.

"We've never had any large damage or hurt anyone with any of our flights. About the worst thing that's happened is we've torn up some cotton fields with our recovery vehicles."

Synthetic Blended Denim Causes Cotton Controversy

By RANDI ROSENBLUM
NEW YORK (AP) — Calling it the first big improvement in years, most of the nation's denim manufacturers are gearing up to go blended, and some even think the days of 100 percent cotton denim are numbered.

The new product, a combination of cotton and polyester called a minblend, takes dye like cotton, looks like cotton, fades like cotton but doesn't shrink like it, according to the Denim News Service.

"In making this blend we found we could accomplish what our customers wanted us to accomplish," said Larry Addison of Swift Textiles which, he says, will be producing only blended denim by the end of the year. "The advantage," he says, "is that if you buy a size 7, it will stay a size 7."

Blended denim has stirred up a small controversy with the cotton growers, and Cotton Inc. has mounted an advertising campaign against adding synthetics to denim, noting that it takes five or six times more energy to make a pound of polyester which is petroleum-based, than to make a pound of cotton.

Polyester advocates counter that if you have to weed it or feed it, the fiber costs too much.

There will be an extensive TV and radio campaign addressed to the consumer, starting during the back-to-school buying period, supporting the "virtues of 100 percent cotton as the true denim," according to Don Kleckner, vice president, marketing services, of Cotton Inc.

"Cotton Inc. is telling people to look at the label," he says. "That's what they've been getting, been satisfied with and if they want the traditional type of denim jeans or new neat look, they can get them in regular 100 percent cotton or the new 100 percent cotton with the new shrink reduction finish, 'Sanforset,' that overcomes shrinkage."

Although some mills have been making a synthetic denim for years, it has only been in the last 18 months that they have developed a mixture they consider suitable, industry sources say. "In the early days we couldn't get total dyeability," noted Ben Sampson of Cone Mills.

In the new fabric, which is 65 percent cotton and 35 percent polyester, the cotton is forced to the outside of the yarn when it is spun so that the finished product takes dye and feels like cotton, the manufacturers explain.

"We didn't want to lose any of the esthetics of cotton," said Sampson, adding that the day may come when all denim will be polyester blended.

Although all of the seven top mills are now experimenting with blended fabrics, some are still cautious about its acceptance. "I doubt if we ever will go entirely to the blend," said Brian Clarke of Burlington Industries. "There are still a lot of people who want cotton."

Canton Textiles is continuing to make only cotton denim, although it is now running blend samples. "If the market demands blends, we can make them," said spokesman Jim Wheeler.

Both Burlington and Canto are using similar chemical processes to give cotton denim an easy-care finish and to reduce shrinkage, but they admit this is more costly than going synthetic.

The seven mills — Burlington, Canton, Cone, Dan River, Graniteville, J.P. Stevens and Swift — supply most of the denim used in the United States. They report an increasing percentage is blended to meet consumer demands.

"The minblend is here," said Chester Braman of Graniteville, "because of the desire of the consumer for greater neatness."

"The consumer will ultimately decide," said Sampson. "Only when he comes back for the second pair will we really know."

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: This is probably just like a million other letters you've received from women who have had affairs with married men. But this one contains a piece of advice that hasn't been emphasized nearly enough.
Last year I started seeing an absolutely fantastic guy from work. I knew he was married, but we played it cool and thought we could handle it. It was terrific while it lasted, but it had to come to an end. (The old story. We got too serious. He didn't want to hurt his wife and kids. Then he got "noble" and told me he couldn't allow me to invest any more time in a man who couldn't marry me.)

I'm not blaming anybody but myself. I'm a mature woman and should have known better. The moral to this story is: If you must have an affair, don't choose someone you will see at work every day. When it's over, the daily contact is torture.

STILL HURTING

Dear Still: You seem to have overlooked another "moral" or two: "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and "Thou shalt not steal."

DEAR ABBY: For the man who promised his wife on her deathbed that he would never marry again and then, broke his promise and felt guilty, I urge him to heed these wise and lovely words from the Talmud:

"Man shall be called to account for all the permitted pleasures he failed to enjoy."

Sign me...
"IN LOVE AT 60 IN BURBANK"

Dear In Love: I knew about the "sins of omission," but that a person shall be called to account for all the permitted pleasures he failed to enjoy is joyous news indeed!

DEAR ABBY: Your advice is desperately needed if my wedding, which is two months off, is to be a happy occasion.

My father is dead and my mother insists that I have my only brother walk me down the aisle and give me away.

Abby, my brother is a foulmouthed, ill-mannered, chronic alcoholic who spoils every gathering he attends with his drunkenness. I rarely see him for this reason.

I am marrying a fine man. Members of his family who live out of town are coming to our wedding. I suppose every family has a skeleton in their closet, but I don't want to put mine on display. I am paying for my own wedding and don't want it spoiled.

My mother had made excuses for my brother all his life, and she has given me an ultimatum: If I don't have him give me away, she won't attend. I want my mother there. What should I do?

SOMETHING BLUE (ME)

Dear Blue: I think your mother is being grossly unfair by issuing such an ultimatum, but why not issue her one? Tell her that if she will assume the responsibility of keeping her son sober on your wedding day, fine. But you will have someone else waiting in the wings to do the honors — just in case. (P.S. Your brother might rise to the occasion and surprise you — and I sincerely hope he does.)

Declarer was on the right track when he tried for an end play to bring home a risky slam. Unfortunately, he was a little careless in his execution.

South had the values for an opening no trump bid, but with so much strength concentrated in the black suits, he preferred to open one club. North made a waiting bid of one diamond, causing rebid problems for South. Now South elected to temporize with one spade, and North revealed his true colors with a jump raise in clubs. South showed his diamond support, then leaped to slam when North responded with a cue-bid in hearts.

West led his top heart, and when dummy came down, declarer saw that he would have no problem if trumps were 2-2. Therefore, he won the queen of hearts and cashed the ace and king of clubs. When West showed out, declarer was faced with a sure trump loser and now had to avoid losing a diamond to make his slam. His only hope was to strip the hand of major-suit cards and then throw East in with his master trump, hoping that East would have to lead away from the king of diamonds or yield a ruff and sluff.

Declarer started by cashing the ace, king and queen of spades. Unfortunately, East ruffed the third spade and exited with a heart, and declarer could not avoid losing a diamond trick for down one.

Declarer was careless. Since he held five hearts and six spades between the two hands, he should first have cashed his top heart tricks, discarding a diamond from his hand. If East is short in a major suit, it is more likely to be in spades than in hearts. After the two hearts go through, declarer can cash his spades.

It does not help East to ruff the third spade, for then he would be forced to lead away from the king of diamonds. But discarding simply delays the fatal moment. Declarer now exits with a trump, and after winning his master trump, East must commit hari-kiri no matter what he does.

Geologist Expects Big Uranium Find In Big Bend

By K. MACK SISK
United Press International Writer
 One geologist, possibly optimistically, suspects the remote Big Bend — one of Texas' most scenic areas while barely supporting enough vegetation to feed a jackrabbit — may become one of the state's richest regions.

"Some day I firmly believe that the largest uranium deposits in the world will be found right here in West Texas," says Frank Woodward Jr.

Woodward retired to a ranch 15 miles south of Alpine after working eight years as a senior explorationist for Gulf Oil Co. and eight years for the Air Force at the Nevada Nuclear Testing Site, and has become something of an expert on the area.

Geologists at Texas Tech University, the University of Texas-Austin and University of Texas-El Paso contend that Woodward is overly optimistic, perhaps the product of wishful thinking, and that the data from uranium explorations are not sufficient to make such a broad projection at this time.

Uranium fever, however, has prompted recent and continuing exploration by firms such as Westinghouse, Oxo of California, Arco Steel Co. of Middletown, Ohio, the Meeker Co. of Fort Worth, and Agip Mining Co. and Rampart Exploration, both registered in Wyoming. The firms have taken several leases in Brewster County, including on the O-2 ranch which Gov. Dolph Briscoe leases from Lykes Steamship Co. for grazing purposes.

Attempts to question the companies about what their test drillings revealed last week resulted in several "no comments." Dr. Chris Henry of the UT-Austin economic geology department said the firms, naturally, were "about as tight-lipped as any companies you'll find."

Several geologists agreed last week that the Big Bend area does contain widespread uranium deposits, which have been no secret for several years, but they said the problem is finding the mineral in significant quantities to making mining profitable. They said exploration in the Big Bend area so far is merely in the frontier stage.

Several exploration companies have been excited enough by the potential to drill test holes throughout Brewster County — the state's largest county at roughly the size of Connecticut and Rhode Island — over the last several years, and there are indications the hunt for uranium is becoming more frenetic.

Charles Groat, head of the UT-El Paso geology department, said exploration companies become secretive "especially in a frontier area like this where they think nobody knows they're out there. They're the only ones who think nobody knows they're out there, because everybody does."

He said discovery of a large uranium deposit south of the border near Chihuahua City, Mexico, in the same geological structure had "stirred things up" in the Big Bend.

Geologists agree that Texas' only known mineable uranium — in a belt extending from Fayette County through Karnes, Live Oak, Duval and Starr Counties of South Texas into Mexico — came from Mexico and West Texas area when volcanoes erupted eons ago, spilling their ashes down to the Gulf of Mexico. The South Texas uranium was discovered by an airplane with scintillating instruments canic rock which is very difficult to drill, very costly. Just a few feet of that can run in a drilling budget."

Reeves presented his paper at a four-day geological meeting at Sul Ross University in Alpine last weekend.

He concluded that many of the geological formations that could harbor uranium appear to be available in the Big Bend.

"Some day I firmly believe that the largest uranium deposits in the world will be found right here in West Texas."

in 1954 and is being mined in the Fall City, Karnes City and Three Rivers area.

"Frank (Woodward) likes to make the comparison that all the South Texas uranium came from the Trans-Pecos area," said C.C. Reeves, a Texas Tech geologist who has prepared a paper on the Big Bend uranium potential.

"That may be so. Of course, you might look at it two ways. He (Woodward) says if it came from the Trans-Pecos there still must be a hell of a lot there. And I could turn around and said if it all came from there, it all left and there's nothing there. I don't see any comparison at all."

However, Reeves does agree the area has potential.

"There's been a great deal of exploration. A lot of holes have been drilled and a lot of people have gone broke looking for it," Reeves said. "As the price continues to climb (from $8 a pound to $40 and in some instances $80 a pound for yellowcake), the quantities continue to be smaller and smaller that you need for it to be productive."

"There are several definite real good possibilities that haven't been looked at out there. The reason of course is because of depth. A second consideration is in the Trans-Pecos you have a lot of vol-

"We have all the things down there in the Marfa Basin we find lake sediments and, of course, the big thing for uranium today is the uranium that's occurring in lake sediments."

The Big Bend, along the Caprock in the Lubbock area, in the red beds of the Canadian River on the High Plains and South Texas all have been known to contain radioactive anomalies since the 1950s, according to Murphy Hawkins, Texas liaison for the U.S. Bureau of Mines in Austin. Hawkins said most of the state's estimated 28.8 million pounds of known uranium reserves, based on the old buying price of $8 a pound, were located in South Texas.

Last year, the French American Mining Co. took out several leases and did some prospecting on the South Plains, but has not revealed its findings.

The Big Bend appears to be the next best hope for uranium in Texas, which ranks behind New Mexico and Wyoming in known reserves.

"There are several prospects," Henry said. "There are little prospects all over the place out there, but there are a couple of major ones. One is in a place called Pino Canyon west of Marfa and another one called Rimrock, under Sierra Vieja, also kind of west of Marfa. Those are the two I'm familiar with."

"Now there are others. Several different companies at different times have looked at both these prospects, kind of drilled around, and they found some uranium. But they never really found enough they thought they could mine."

"There are significant uranium concentrations, and now another company has claimed in an area out there they've made several pretty important discoveries that are mineable and they are going to get their leases all set up and then try to mine them."

Henry, like the exploration companies, did not name the area where the mining might take place.

Dr. William Fisher, head of the UT-Austin economic geology department, said a preliminary report on Trans-Pecos uranium exploration would be issued soon, but he was quick to be cautious.

"We have not drawn any conclusions at this point in terms of actual volume," he said. "I don't think anyone could say. You can be optimistic on these things or you can be pessimistic. But I think until there is a little more drilling, we won't be able to know that well."

Fisher said the companies did not broadcast their findings because "they're trying to maintain a little bit of a competitive edge on it."

As for Woodward's projection of huge unbound reserves, the UT-Austin geologist said, "Our data base, until there is a lot more drilling, is not in the position to make the kind of projections. It could very well be and so on, but we don't have the data in hand to make those points on it."

Heads they weren't really sure what to look for."

But Woodward, who has done consulting work with several firms and claims he has mapped more total miles of the Big Bend than any individual, said he had some suggestions, including one for companies to monitor all the water wells.

"People out here have been drinking uranium for years without knowing it," he said.

Tape Recorders Help Carter With Speeches

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — If President Carter's speechmaking style seems improved lately, and many observers agree that's the case, part of the credit should go to Japanese technology.

Carter began to worry about his somewhat leaden delivery about six months ago and set out to do something about it.

His solution: to tape his practice recitals of speech texts, both for timing and delivery. By listening to the tapes, he often detects rough spots in time to polish his presentation before facing an audience.

Initially, Carter read his texts into large, professional recorders manned by technicians of the White House Communications Agency.

But he soon discovered that if he wanted to listen to the tapes in his living quarters after normal working hours, he had to summon the technicians and their bulky equipment.

Seeking a more convenient system, the president got himself a small Japanese-made recorder — the kind that fits in a suit pocket and uses tape cassettes about the size of a book of matches.

Now reporters can tell in advance when Carter is planning a speech he considers important. His tiny recorder usually has a prominent place on his office desk.

First Grandson

Year-old James Earl Carter IV, accompanied by household employee Mary Fitzpatrick and a Secret Service agent, walked to the presidential helicopter at Camp David, Md., on Sunday while his grandfather followed in a limousine.

A Marine in dress blues greeted the trio of hikers with a snappy salute. Since agents and staff members don't generally get saluted, it presumably was for the baby, who was wobbling along holding Miss Fitzpatrick's hand. He didn't return the salute.

Jordan On Vacation

About two minutes after Carter left Camp David, top aide Jordan arrived in a station wagon filled with folks he identified as family. The vehicle also had a cargo of vacation accoutrements, including a bicycle.

Jordan told a reporter he was starting a week's vacation at the presidential retreat and planned no business-related activities. He looked relaxed and was smiling broadly.

Old Plates

Timothy Kraft, recently promoted to Carter's senior staff after serving as appointments secretary, has been driving around Washington in a 10-year-old sedan with Indiana license plates that expired in April.

Kraft, who shares bachelor quarters with colleague Hamilton Jordan and pollster Patrick Caddell, said by way of explanation:

"I've got new plates in the trunk, but at 'halfway house' I can't even find a screwdriver."

Fishy Fridge

Press secretary Jody Powell opened his office refrigerator to get ice for a cooling drink at the end of a long day last weekend. But the stench coming from inside the box drove him away.

It seems one of Powell's aides, Randy Lewis, had caught two bluefish on Chesapeake Bay two weeks earlier and had expected them to remain perfectly preserved indefinitely in his boss' refrigerator.

An angry Powell summoned Lewis by telephone to remove the offensive remains. A chastened fisherman entered the office with his head hidden in a paper sack that had holes only for his eyes.

At Powell's insistence, Lewis not only got rid of his catch but also scrubbed out the refrigerator.

NOMINATION REVEALED

Outlook Grim For Woman In Coma For Six Months

AMARILLO (AP) — At 21, Ricky Goforth has a wife who may never again call his name, an infant daughter living 50 miles away with her grandparents and $24,000 in mostly unpaid hospital bills.

Goforth's 18-year-old wife, Laurie, was hospitalized Dec. 18 after she suffered a heart attack and made medical history Jan. 8 when she gave birth while in a coma.

The baby, Susan, is 5 months old now. Her maternal grandmother, Mrs. A.L. Butcher, said pediatricians have found the brown-haired, blue-eyed baby happy and normal in every way.

Doctors say Mrs. Goforth has never recognized Susan as her daughter and probably never will.

"Each day, I show Susan pictures of Laurie, but she's too little to realize what's happened yet," Mrs. Butcher said through tears. "I'm the only mother she's ever known."

Since Laurie was hospitalized, Goforth has quit his job as an apprentice machinist and found work in this Panhandle city, 50 miles from their home in Borger. A small apartment near Northwest Texas Hospital is now his home during the cruel vigil. "Late at night when I think about Laurie, I wonder if she's ever going to come out of her coma, and when," he said softly. "I'm not bitter about what happened to her. It could happen to anybody."

Benefit dances and rodeos in Borger have raised about $2,000 toward the Goforths' expenses. The money is sorely needed since an insurance policy taken out five days before Mrs. Goforth's heart attack that brought on the coma was canceled.

"There is no way Ricky can pay for everything," said Mrs. Butcher, "not unless he works until he's about 75. We went to Social Security and they sent one $50 check, but that was all. They stopped because they said the hospital was state-county assisted. Medicaid did the same thing."

Englishmen Publicly Flogged For Breaking Ban On Alcohol

LONDON (AP) — Two Englishmen, convicted of moonshining in Saudi Arabia, have been publicly flogged and sentenced to six month jail terms for breaking the Moslem ban on alcohol and selling their home brew to the Arabs, the British Foreign Office said today.

Angry British legislators called on the Labor government to pull its ambassador out of the Saudi capital, Riyadh, to protest the flogging.

"This is an appalling and outrageous piece of barbarism," said John Lee, a Labor deputy who introduced a motion in Parliament urging Foreign Secretary David Owen to recall Ambassador John Wilton.

"It's time Saudi Arabia's laws were brought into harmony with those of the civilized world," said Martin Flannery, another laborite.

The furor was heightened by a Foreign Office report that seven other Britons in Saudi Arabia face the same punishment for making alcohol.

Alexander Howard, a British diplomat in Saudi Arabia, said in a telephone interview broadcast by a London radio station that the two Englishmen — Nigel Maidment, 27, and Brian Cooper, 35 — have been released from jail and are expected to fly back to London within the next 24 hours. He did not elaborate.

Press reports said the two may have gotten as many as 70 strokes of the cane. The Foreign Office said it has protested the sentences and is trying to ensure that the other Britons are not flogged.

A spokesman said he could not confirm the number of strokes, but said the men chose flogging and six months in jail over longer prison terms.

They are engineers for Prismo Universal, a British firm enlarging an airport at Ha'il, a caravan crossroads town 250 miles north of Medina.

The Foreign Office said they were arrested in December for manufacturing and selling alcohol, and were flogged in the town square of Ha'il May 15.

A British vice consul visited the men three days ago and found them fit and well despite their ordeal, the spokesman said. "They took the punishment philosophically," he added.

Observers said it was not likely the British government will make too much of the flogging since Maidment and Cooper broke Saudi Arabia's strict no-alcohol laws and themselves opted to be caned.

Britain has built up good relations and lucrative trade deals with the oil-rich kingdom and is not likely to jeopardize them. Although Arabia's ancient Islamic law forbids making, selling or drinking alcohol, authorities permit foreigners to drink in private. Britons have expressed concern and horror in the past at harsh penalties for lawbreakers and offenders of Saudi law.

Students Should Know More About Real Cost Of Loans

By CHRIS CONNELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — A college student asking her bank for a loan is told the annual interest rate, the total repayment costs and the amount of monthly payments after graduation.

Having provided that information, the bank has discharged its duties under the truth-in-lending law. But has it told the student enough? No, says Massachusetts Commissioner of Banks Carol S. Greenwald, who feels that students are a different kind of borrower and need different information.

The standard information is "fine for a working adult who is purchasing an automobile or buying a home, but it largely misses the point of revealing the truth about the financial burden of this loan to a student," she told the Student Loan Marketing Association on Wednesday.

The consumer knows how much that car she is buying costs and how much it will take out of her income, the commissioner said. But the student usually does not know how many loans she will need for school nor what her income will be after graduation.

Student ignorance about indebtedness may play a role in what Mrs. Greenwald called the "legendary" student loan default rate, running at 13 percent in the government's Guaranteed Student Loan Program and 20 percent in its National Direct Student Loan Program.

Mrs. Greenwald suggested that banks and colleges give student borrowers after-graduation estimates of what the average graduate earns and how much is paid for housing and auto loans.

The student then could see if these monthly loan payments would exceed one-third of her predicted gross income, which is generally considered the maximum a person should borrow, she said.

"Going through this exercise would help a student put her loans in a real-life context," and might convince some to take a year or two off to earn money for college rather than take out loans, she said.

Contrary to its bad reputation, she said, the guaranteed loan program is a good investment program for banks, currently yielding 10 1/2 percent.

Hike In Energy Prices Favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western industrial nations and Japan should push their domestic energy prices to world market levels, and maybe even higher in some areas, a group headed by a former federal energy administrator said this week.

New Carter Aides Go To Work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two new top White House staffers are moving to shore up President Carter's sagging polls and party relationships — while he continues to insist he has not made up his mind whether to run in 1980.

He's not worrying about a second term, I can tell you that," said Jerry Rafshoon, Carter's advertising adviser since his 1966 campaign for Georgia governor.

"When he asked me to come to work, he told me 'don't think of this as a reelection because I have not dealt with whether I'm going to run again.'"

Despite that, Tim Kraft, new political liaison, has just completed a series of small breakfast meetings with all Democratic state chairmen.

Rafshoon will seek to apply to such stalled programs as energy and anti-inflation the same hard sell used to win ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

Kraft, Carter's 1976 campaign field director, took over from Hamilton Jordan the liaison between the White House and the Democratic National Committee.

Kraft said in an interview he found that state chairmen were not critical of Carter's stands on issues, and none told him they would prefer Carter not campaign in their states.

Instead, they were upset at not being consulted about federal appointments in their areas and not being informed when an appointment was about to be announced, or when Carter planned a trip into their state, he said.

Kraft invited the state chairmen in groups of about 10 to White House breakfast meetings and asked them to bring anyone else they wanted — fund-raisers, the vice chairman, a state labor leader.

He told each of the senior White House staff members he expected them to be present for at least part of the meetings. Carter attended the last few minutes of each meeting. Rosalynn Carter attended the last meeting.

Rafshoon's high-ceiling office in the Old Executive Office Building was once Richard Nixon's hideaway office. Wires for the secret taping system still protrude from the floor.

"My mandate is to spend more time in more comprehensive communications," said Rafshoon, whose Atlanta advertising firm has $10 million in billings.

Although ratification of the Panama treaties was "blood, sweat and tears" that involved boosting the approval of the people from 17 to more than 50 percent in a year's time, Rafshoon said, "we did a good job."

"Everybody in the White House worked on it," Rafshoon said, adding that there were citizens meetings, regional meetings, talk-shows. "We changed the atmosphere so that when legislation comes up people are better informed."

Rafshoon conceded Carter sent Congress an energy program "without really having sold it to the American people." Fourteen months later, the proposal remains stalled in Congress.

"I'll work with (anti-inflation czar Robert) Strauss in getting better information out on the economy," he said. "These are not things just to bring the president's ratings up, but to have people get more confidence in the economy."

The energy task force submitted a draft report to the Trilateral Commission, an organization of some 200 private industrialists and executives that studies issues and policies of the industrial nations of North America, Europe and Japan.

The study was headed up by John C. Sawhill, federal energy administrator in 1974.

The report expressed concern at the continued possibility of disruptions of world petroleum supplies, economic recession, and especially the long-term danger that the depletion of oil and gas reserves could trigger large and sudden price increases and plunge the world into a depression.

"At a minimum, therefore, we recommend that each Trilateral government review its domestic energy pricing policies and take steps necessary to move domestic prices as rapidly as possible to world market levels," the report said.

For the United States, it said, this means ending federal price regulation of new natural gas and gradually removing oil price controls.

For Japan, it said, it means removing price controls on household kerosene; it said Britain should "discontinue artificially low prices on natural gas", and Canada should "continue its present policy of moving oil and gas prices to world market levels."

Congress enacted legislation in 1975 aimed at gradually ending oil price controls in the United States and the Department of Energy, successor to the Federal Energy Administration which Sawhill headed four years ago, has been carrying out that plan; Congress has been working on proposals to end federal regulation of natural gas for the past year.

But the task force report went beyond such measures into new, and even more controversial territory by recommending consideration of a deliberate effort to drive energy prices even higher, to achieve policy aims.

"It may be appropriate," said the report, "for the Trilateral countries to (a) consider various mechanisms for increasing prices gradually over the next several years in those areas of the economy where it is desirable to encourage conservation and (b) provide special incentives to industry (e.g., loan guarantees, price guarantees, etc.) for the development of alternative sources of energy."

Explaining its endorsement of high prices, the report said that world oil prices today are below the cost of possible substitute fuels.

If prices remain at or near current levels, it said, there will be little economic incentive to develop readily substitutable alternative sources or to reduce demand growth as rapidly as would be desirable under the more pessimistic longer term forecasts.

The report urged the "Trilateral" governments to "develop specific energy taxes for those products where significant savings (in consumption) are possible."

An obvious example here is a higher federal excise tax on gasoline in the United States," the report said. This, however, has been an unpopular suggestion, quickly rejected by Congress after President Carter proposed it last year and widely suspected as one reason former President Gerald R. Ford replaced Sawhill.

IT'S DANCIN' TIME AGAIN — Actress Carol Channing and Allan Carr, producer of the nostalgia-based movie musical "Grease," recently got together and both kicked up their heels in animated fashion at Studio 54, a discotheque located in New York City. (AP Laserphoto)

Consumer Group Reports Flaw In Autos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dodge Omni and the Plymouth Horizon have serious handling problems that make them unsafe, the non-profit testing group Consumers Union says. Chrysler Corp., manufacturer of the sub-compact cars, denied the assertion.

The consumer group called a news conference Wednesday to announce the finding and show a film illustrating the problem. The findings are expected to be the subject of a future article in Consumer Reports, the organization's magazine.

In advance of the news conference, a source who asked not to be named said the problem is that "the steering wheel doesn't recover from a sharp turn."

Wright Fails To Notice 'Panic'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mood of fiscal conservatism that's gaining momentum in the House didn't start with last week's tax revolt referendum in California, Majority Leader Jim Wright says.

Wright, D-Texas, told a news conference Tuesday the congressional mood was evident in earlier attempts to cut the 1979 federal budget resolution. The legislation outlines spending and taxation for the financial year starting Oct. 1.

Wright said he saw "no sense of panic" in the House as a result of the California election, where voters backed a constitutional amendment to slash property taxes.

So far, Wright said, appropriations passed by the House are $3.5 billion below the level requested by the White House.

Still, the California vote has brought on a new surge of House proposals for financial restraint. More than a third of all House members are co-sponsoring proposed constitutional amendments requiring the government to balance its budget.

When a driver has to make a sharp left or sharp right turn, such as to avoid a child running into the street, it is exceedingly difficult to recover. The average consumer can't control these cars after a sudden maneuver," the source said.

A second source said the "not acceptable" rating has not been given to an American-made car in at least a decade.

The Omni and Horizon have virtually the same design. They recently were chosen "car of the year" by Motor Trend magazine.

The source said the magazine does not consider safety considerations in making this designation.

The two cars are the first American-made subcompacts with front-wheel drive.

In a statement denying the Consumers Union findings, Chrysler said:

"There is no handling problem with our new Omni and Horizon cars. As a matter of fact, the cars' steering and handling has received enthusiastic praise from professionals and consumers alike. Chrysler has built millions of front-wheel-drive cars in Europe and has received awards both here and abroad for these vehicles."

Chrysler builds the Simca in Europe.

The Omni and Horizon have been selling well since they were introduced in January. Chrysler hopes the cars will help stem the company's financial problems by getting the company a larger share of the subcompact market. The company has made recent gains in that market.

Farmers' Limits Promote Co-Ops

The star of swine farrowing cooperatives and corporations may be rising because of farmer restrictions on time, money and space.
 Glenn Grimes, extension livestock marketing specialist at the University of Missouri, believes that farmers interested in producing young pigs for feeding out could, by combining efforts, farrow large numbers of feeders pigs without large individual investments of time and money.
 Grimes will address Texas Tech University's 26th annual Swine Short Course on June 29. The course will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Farmer's Cooperative Complex.
 Grimes defined a feeder-pig-farrowing corporation as a "large confinement unit producing feeder pigs for the farmers jointly owning it."
 The farmers generally interested in participating in such feeder pig-producing organizations are grain-producing farmers interested in a new source of feeder pigs and who lack facilities or time to produce their own, tenant farmers or young, beginning farmers who lack the capital to invest, and older farmers who want to avoid the labor of farrowing feeder pigs.

 Grimes said some of the chief advantages are efficiency in the use of capital, labor and management, and market price advantages in buying and selling.
 The disadvantages, he said, are in risk of disease, high-risk capital requirements and the need for constant management.
 Should young pig production move in the direction of farmer cooperatives or even corporations with absentee owners, Grimes said, several major changes could be made in the hog industry.
 He foresees a reduction in the importance of terminals, auctions and local markets as the majority of sales would be made direct to packers.

 Cash flow and income in the cooperatives would be affected by fluctuations in hog and feed prices to a larger extent than the small operations, he said.
 Patterns in prices and price reporting would also be changed considerably with a trend toward cooperative farrowing operations.
 Grimes also will discuss other changes in the future for the swine market at the short course.

Filipinos To Get U.S. Apology

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The United States "deeply regrets" a police search of the Philippine center in New York City during which Filipino personnel were reportedly manhandled, and is preparing a formal apology, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

The American statement came a day after the Philippine government filed a "strong protest" here and in Washington over a disturbance Sunday at its New York trade and tourism office. The wording of the protest was not disclosed.

"The U.S. government deeply regrets this incident and a formal apology is being prepared in Washington and will be sent shortly to the Philippine government," the embassy spokesman said. He added the embassy did not learn of the incident until Wednesday when Ambassador Richard W. Murphy was summoned to the Foreign Office.

The Philippine government claims that policemen broke down the door of its trade and tourism center on Fifth Avenue, ransacked desks and pistol-whipped and clubbed Filipino personnel. The building also houses the Philippine consulate and the Filipino mission to the United Nations.

The New York Police Department said officers knocked the door down to come to the aid of fellow officers locked inside while pursuing four men who ran into the center after a sidewalk brawl. The department denied the other charges.

The Philippine government radio station said the police incident was reported to the Foreign Office by Ernesto Pineda, the Filipino consul general in New York.

The broadcast said Pineda reported police officers, with pistols drawn, broke down the center's front door and "without provocation or explanation, pistol-whipped and handcuffed" a Filipino security officer who protested that their entry violated the center's diplomatic status.

Pineda said the policemen replied to the security officer's protest "in the most offensive words," then pushed him against the wall and beat him with a nightstick on the back and arms while other officers ransacked the desks in the trade and tourist offices.

"When they could not find what they were looking for, they pushed their way to the Maharlika Restaurant in the basement and pointed their guns at the heads of ... the manager" and other personnel, including the cook, "who was dragged to the lobby and assaulted and manhandled," Pineda said.

A Foreign Office spokesman refused to comment on the report and declined to reveal the wording of the protest, saying President Ferdinand E. Marcos was handling the matter personally.

The police department gave this account:

Shortly after midnight, two policemen saw eight men fighting in front of 556 Fifth Ave. and subdued two of them. Four of the brawlers went into the Philippine center and two fled in another direction. Two other officers ran to help and entered the building with drawn revolvers.

One officer had his nightstick kicked away by one of the four brawlers but managed to arrest the man. He was then assaulted by another brawler from behind and the door was bolted. Officers outside then kicked the door in and helped the other policemen make the arrests.

The Fifth Avenue center is a showcase to attract traders and tourists to the Philippines. The United States has three such centers in Manila and in the central and southern Philippines.

Sen. Proxmire Sees Passage Of NY's Bond Guarantees Bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire said today that New York City looked like a certain winner in its fight for long-term federal bond guarantees, as his panel began its final work on a bill designed to save the city from bankruptcy.

A vote was not expected today. "To my judgment, the long-term guarantees are going to pass the committee by 12-3 or maybe 10-5," said Proxmire, D-Wis. "The votes are there, and I don't think there's any purpose in being coy about it."

Proxmire also predicted that the bill will "probably pass the Senate by a bigger margin (proportionally) than it passed the House."

City, state and Carter administration officials have testified that the guarantees are essential to New York's overall economic recovery. Until Wednesday, however, committee staffers said it was impossible to predict how the panel would vote.

Such predictions not only became possible but abundant Wednesday, after Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., introduced a compromise that would provide the city with $1.5 billion of the $2 billion in 15-year guarantees it wants and which the House passed last week.

Lugar's bill would also require the city to meet much tougher conditions before the guarantees became effective.

Its effect was described as immediate. After the measure was circulated, aides said the discussion shifted from the merits of long-term aid versus short-term aid to the conditions that should be attached to long-term assistance.

The committee, which had been divided for weeks over the Carter administration bill, suddenly had a new purpose. As one aide put it, it was to "put the city's feet to the fire."

Committee aides said if the conservative Indiana Republican could support the concept of a long-term federal guarantee to New York, than other reluctant committee could do so as well.

Typical was the reaction of Sen. H. John Heinz, R-Pa., who for weeks has refused to commit himself on the city's stated need for the bond guarantees. Late Wednesday, Heinz said through a spokesman that he is "reluctantly accepting the necessity of long-term guarantees, provided New York can be kept on a short leash."

Perhaps the best evidence of the committee's apparent shift were moves by Proxmire's staff to draw up their own amendments setting down tougher conditions on any guarantee.

Aides took that as an acknowledgement by Proxmire that he could not block the guarantee plan and said Proxmire now may end up supporting a limited guarantee plan.

Data Shows Appointment Percentages

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Of 1,140 top appointments made by President Carter, 10 percent went to blacks, 4 percent to Hispanic Americans and 18 percent to women, White House documents revealed today.

Five states have black U.S. attorneys and three have women U.S. attorneys, the documents showed. There are black U.S. marshals in 12 states, black ambassadors to 6 nations and women ambassadors to 6.

The percentages of blacks and Hispanic Americans is about the same — or slightly less — than their proportion of the U.S. population. The percentage of women, of course, is far less.

Tim Kraft, former White House appointments secretary, recently was named presidential assistant with responsibilities for liaison between the president and the White House personnel office as well as liaison with the Democratic National Committee.

Kraft said he will look very carefully at vacancies that arise constantly at the sub-Cabinet level and on the various boards and agencies. He said he would have luncheon meetings with departmental representatives to keep abreast of vacancies that might be filled with "persons who have been helpful to us."

The breakdown of presidential personnel in the Cabinet departments:

Agriculture — 10 appointments, including 1 Hispanic and 2 women. Commerce — 25 appointments, 2 Hispanics and 3 women including Secretary Juanita Kreps. Defense — 23 appointments, 2 blacks including Army Secretary Clifford Alexander, 1 Hispanic and 2 women. Energy — 20 appointments, 1 black and 2 women. Interior — 12 appointments, 1 black, 1 American Indian, and 1 woman.

Justice — 170 appointments including U.S. attorneys and marshals, 21 blacks, including Solicitor General Wade McCree and U.S. attorneys in California, Illinois, Oklahoma, North Carolina and Ohio and marshals in California, New York, Alabama, Illinois, District of Columbia, Arizona, Missouri, Wyoming, Tennessee, South Carolina, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

Labor — 13 appointments, 2 blacks, 1 American Indian, 1 Hispanic and 3 women. State — 118 appointments, 8 blacks including ambassadors to Romania, Burma, West Germany, Algeria, Kenya and Spain, 7 Hispanics and 10 women including ambassadors to Cameroon, Finland, Surinam, Honduras, Belgium and the Netherlands; Transportation — 11 appointments, 2 blacks, 2 women; Treasury — 21 appointments, 3 blacks, 1 Hispanic, 4 women; Health, Education and Welfare — 32 appointments, 3 blacks, 2 Hispanics, 9 women.

There were hundreds of other appointments for various agencies, boards and commissions.

'God's Will' Credited For Stripper's Career

By JANET McCONNAUGHEY
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Kellie Everts is about to go on stage at the Plaza Burlesque Theatre to do the Lord's work.
 God, she says sincerely, wants her to work as a stripper — in fact, he told her last July to quit her $150-a-week job as a social worker in Brooklyn's slums and return to the stage.
 "I asked him, 'How am I going to help humanity as a strip tease?'"
 "He told me, 'Anyone from any walk of life can serve God. You're a minister if you praise God.'"
 So wherever she goes, Miss Everts, who describes herself as "a better strip tease than I am a social worker," praises

God.
 "I talk in parks, on television, on radio talk shows. I always say what God prepares."
 This Friday, she will preach in Lafayette Park, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.
 President Carter, she feels, will be "more than happy" at her appearance there, "because he loves God."
 Although she's "always scared to preach," she knows God will speak through her.
 "I have a holy mission: to remind the world of the words of Our Lady of Fatima. She said men must become better and we must pray the rosary to convert Russia or there may be a danger of nuclear war."

 Miss Everts quotes from a religious pamphlet describing a prophecy attributed to the Virgin Mary, who appeared in 1917 at the Portuguese town of Fatima.
 According to the pamphlet, the Blessed Virgin said that "great punishment will come to all mankind in the second half of the 20th Century. Great scholars will invent weapons with which one-half of mankind can be defeated in 30 seconds."
 Miss Everts was brought up in the Roman Catholic Church, but feels she truly found God 6½ years ago.
 Asked how old she was at the time, she is as elusive as when asked her age now, which she gives as 25, 27, and — when pressed — "no older than 28."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Usually you work well in unison with others, but tomorrow you're likely to get better results if you perform your tasks alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Some self-discipline may be required tomorrow to keep extravagant tendencies in check. Don't let temptation override your prudent judgment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) No matter how right you are about how things should be done, remember: Others have feelings, too. Take care how you give orders or pass on suggestions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're capable of accomplishing much tomorrow, but perhaps you'd be better off working alone. Someone could hurt your feelings if they don't understand your methods.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're not careful, an opportunist could easily take advantage of you tomorrow when he sees how generous you are to those who are less fortunate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Goals will not be denied you tomorrow nor will people let you down. However, you could leave a bad impression if you're overbearing in striving to achieve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A secret desire is within your capabilities tomorrow so long as you have faith in yourself and don't let negative thinking sidetrack you.

CAPRICORN (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Just because you're ready to back up your words with action tomorrow, don't expect others to be equally reliable. Try to go it alone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Once you've set a goal tomorrow, it's not probable you'll take your eye off the target. You'll probably underplay your hand so you won't appear too grasping.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It would be unwise tomorrow to use your wonderful abilities of selling your ideas on one who has proven unreliable. Find a new prospect.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You put yourself out for others tomorrow and that's commendable. However, looking for more thanks than they're prepared to give could disappoint you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Associates will go out of their way to be friendly tomorrow, but don't mistake this as an excuse to pursue only your desires. Continue to be cooperative.

June 15, 1978

Events or situations that you may find yourself in this coming year could at first appear intimidating. However, you'll rise to the occasion and satisfy many personal desires.

Ticker Rumor Proves Right

WASHINGTON (AP) — There were no newspaper ads, no radio spots and less than a dozen people in the capital supposedly knew about the show.

But by 6 a.m. Tuesday, 33 people were waiting in line at the Warner Theater. They heard rumors the Rolling Stones would appear in a concert Thursday night.

They were right.
 At 6:10 a.m. promoter Sam L. Hommedieu asked one of the guards to put the announcement on the marquee: "Rolling Stones Tickets on Sale Here."

The original crowd of 33 cheered and the sale of the $10 tickets got underway. Then word really got around. Cars flew up to the curb; taxis came in droves; people rushed down from work with $20 in their hands for two tickets.

Hydrogen-Powered Vehicle In Service

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The first operational automotive vehicle in California to use hydrogen as a fuel has begun service here.

It is a 21-passenger bus, part of the city's fleet of seven vehicles serving senior citizens.
 Unlike conventional automotive vehicles, which have fuel tanks filled with gasoline, this bus has a series of cylinders containing the silvery-gray compound, iron-titanium hydride.

The heated hydrogen gas is ducted to the engine, mixed with air and ignited, driving the pistons. The exhaust is water vapor and very small quantities of oxides of nitrogen.

Labor Agency's Probe Of Teamsters Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unusual move, a Senate subcommittee is calling for an immediate congressional inquiry into the Labor Department's investigations of troubled Teamsters pension and health and welfare funds.

Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., of the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, want the General Accounting Office to undertake a review of the Labor Department's handling of the investigations and report back by early September.

Nunn, the subcommittee's vice chairman, and Percy, its ranking Republican member, asked the congressional watchdog agency in a letter to evaluate how thoroughly the Labor Department has pursued its investigations. A GAO spokesman indicated the inquiry would begin promptly.

Sources, who asked not to be named, said the request stems from dissatisfaction over the Labor Department's handling of the inquiries into the $1.7 billion Teamsters Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund and the union's health and welfare fund.

The sources also said the letter complained that department officials had not abided by a promise to keep the subcommittee informed of the progress of the investigations.

Walter Shapiro, an aide to Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, said: "Obviously, we will cooperate with the GAO investigation. Nonetheless, we hope that this investigation will not interfere with the important and difficult work of preparing for our pending civil suit."

Shapiro said Marshall and other department officials had testified regularly before congressional committees about the Teamsters funds investigations and had "provided these committees with all the information they have requested."

Despite their public pledge of cooperation, department officials have privately expressed concern that frequent public hearings by House and Senate committees would hamper the complicated Teamsters investigations and resulting legal proceedings.

The pension fund, with 480,000 beneficiaries, has been under investigation for more than three years by the Labor and Justice departments and the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS revoked the tax-exempt status of the fund last year. The exemption was restored after trustees agreed to place fund assets in the hands of independent managers. In addition, four trustees including Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons agreed to resign.

The government filed suit earlier this year seeking to recover millions of dollars in alleged bad loans made with trust fund money. Fitzsimmons was one of 19 persons named as defendants in the suit.

The newer inquiry into the health and welfare fund is reported to center on a contract the fund maintains with a corporation involving Allen Dorfman, convicted in 1971 of accepting a loan kickback.

A GAO spokesman, Martin Fitzgerald, said the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee request for an inquiry into an executive branch investigation was unusual but not unprecedented.

In addition to evaluating the Labor Department's investigations, Nunn and Percy want the GAO to determine how well the department is cooperating with the Justice Department. Questions also were reported to have been raised about the Labor Department's handling of the lawsuit.

A House Ways and Means subcommittee held hearings last week on the status of the government investigations. Some panel members expressed fears that trustees were trying to wrest control of the funds from independent asset managers appointed with the government's blessing.

Labor Department officials say they will move swiftly to head off any such attempt.

Justice Department Opposes Contempt Citation Of Bell

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department contends that Attorney General Griffin B. Bell should not have to face a threatened jail term on contempt of court charges for his refusal to disclose the names of FBI informants.

The department is drafting legal arguments in an effort to convince U.S. District Judge Thomas P. Griesa in New York City that there is an alternative to a contempt citation that would allow Bell to take his case to a higher court.

Griesa said he will hold a hearing on June 27 to determine if the attorney general should be held in contempt for refusing to obey a court order to turn over files containing the names of confidential FBI informants.

The question has arisen in a $40 million civil damage suit against the attorney general and several other high government officials by the Socialist Workers Party and an affiliated group, the Young Socialist Alliance.

The suit, filed in 1973, charged that the government has been harassing the letting organizations since 1938, using such tactics as infiltration, assault, breaking and entering, blacklisting and wiretapping.

Griesa ordered the FBI to turn over files containing names of 18 confidential informants. The judge said lawyers for the Socialist Workers would be permitted to examine the files on condition they not divulge any of the names.

Bell said he was willing to turn over only four of the 18 files mentioned in the order, because 14 informants would not give their permission to be identified.

Bell argued that disclosure of the names, even under the judge's conditions, would jeopardize the government's confidential relationship with informants and would endanger their future cooperation in FBI crime-fighting and intelligence-gathering activities.

The Justice Department appealed to the Supreme Court to overturn Griesa's ruling on the ground he had exceeded his authority. But on Monday, the court voted 6 to 3 not to review the case, at least at this time.

It is Bell's contention he should have an opportunity to argue the merits of Griesa's order before an appeals court before he is forced to comply. He says the Supreme Court's decision was on a procedural question which did not get to the heart of the case.

In the hope of avoiding a contempt citation, Bell is proposing that Griesa take some other sanction against the government.

For example, said Terrence B. Adamson, a spokesman for the attorney general, Griesa could award damages to the Socialist Workers Party, in effect deciding the case without having access to the FBI files.

Under this approach, the attorney general would then have a new opportunity for appeals court review of the case on its merits.

In a 12-page affidavit filed with Griesa's court on Tuesday, Bell said his refusal to turn over the documents was not prompted by disrespect for the law or the judge.

"In my opinion, contempt is not an appropriate sanction in this matter," Bell said. "This is not a decision which FBI officials, any other government officials, or I have made in a spirit of defiance of court orders or out of a contemptuous attitude toward this court or its authority."

House, Senate Battle Looms Over Abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen are predicting a new House-Senate battle over Medicaid abortion payments as the House has again voted for tighter restrictions on the program.

Sen. Edward Brooke, chief Senate proponent of a more liberal abortion policy during a six-month debate on the issue last year, has already served notice that he will oppose the language adopted by the House on Tuesday.

"There is no question that I would oppose this humane and realistic discrimination as strongly as I did last year," the Massachusetts Republican said in a statement.

"And, I am confident that the overwhelming majority of my colleagues in the Senate would once again join me in refusing to accept such discriminatory legislation — no matter how long or how hard the fight would be."

Brooke is the ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations subcommittee which handles the budgets of the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

The restrictive House language was adopted as it set up spending targets for Labor and HEW during the coming 1979 fiscal year. It would permit Medicaid abortion payments by HEW only when a woman's life is in danger, a provision that was the law of the land until December when the House and Senate agreed to loosen the restrictions slightly.

The House rejected an opportunity Tuesday to extend the life of that House-Senate compromise which expires Sept. 30. It added two additional circumstances under which abortion payments would be made. A woman could receive payments if the pregnancy resulted from rape or incest which was reported to authorities, or when two physicians said she would suffer severe and long-lasting physical health damage.

By a vote of 212-198 House members refused to adopt the compromise language and stuck with the more restrictive version which had been written into the bill.

Neither the time pressures representatives are feeling in this election year, nor the fact that the Senate is certain to reject the language moved House members from their insistence on the restrictions.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., the majority leader who proposed the extension of the compromise language adopted just six months ago, reminded the members that it took six months and 28 votes to settle this question in 1977 and that the membership of the House and Senate has not changed.

"I offer it in suggestion that members of Congress might desire to save themselves the agony of prolonged debate and bitter discussion," he said.

"I don't know of any reason to expect that if we were to delay and debate and consume the prime time of this Congress that we would come to any different decision."

In other action, the House approved a $1.8 billion across-the-board cut in the $58 billion allotted for Labor and HEW. Coupled with a $1 billion cut approved earlier as an inducement to eliminate waste and fraud, the vote means the budget proposal has been reduced by about 5 percent.

An amendment to allow affirmative action programs to continue but without the use of goals, quotas, timetables or similar numerical targets for minorities and women was approved 232-177. The House approved a similar proposal last year, but it was killed in conference.

Suspect Charged In Girl's Death

HOUSTON (UPI) — A 13-year-old girl abducted from a bowling alley parking lot was found bludgeoned to death Tuesday. Police arrested an 18-year-old laborer and charged him with capital murder.

The body of Vicki Lynn Wright was found about 4 p.m. Tuesday by children playing in a vacant lot. Police charged Anthony Charles Williams, 18, with capital murder. He was jailed without bond.

Investigators said the victim's head was battered, apparently with a blunt object, and her halter top was off. An autopsy was ordered. It was not known whether she had been sexually assaulted.

Officers said Williams was arrested in the attic of a vacant house about 8 p.m. Tuesday on information from his neighbors, witnesses and other evidence. Officers said Williams had been questioned earlier Tuesday about a rape.

Indochina's Royalty Encountering Difficult Times

BY ALAN DAWSON
BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — In the fall from riches to rags and worse, the kings and princes of Indochina have been humbled, humiliated and removed from the spotlight.

The best known of them all, ex-King and ex-Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia, is under house arrest. The former King of Laos lives in a modest house at the edge of his former royal capital of Luang Prabang, with guards to keep him there.

But other royal family members have fared even worse.

Laos' crown prince rowed to political refuge in Thailand, an ordinary refugee from the Communists. Sihanouk's two oldest children were last known working the fields as common peasants.

Vietnam has not officially had royalty since World War II, but the former emperor and would-be politician Bao Dai left for France in the mid-1950s. The queen mother, however, has been isolated in her Hue home by the new administration.

Information on the fates of Indochinese royalty has been hard to come by since 1975, when communists took control of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

But continuing interest in the men and women by influential foreigners has resulted in occasional and reliable information on their whereabouts.

Yugoslav President Tito, for example, is an old friend of Sihanouk's, and when he asked where his former ally in the non-aligned movement was, even Cambodia's leaders were moved to help.

Diplomatic sources said the Yugoslav ambassador in Phnom Penh recently was taken to see the 56-year-old Sihanouk. The ambassador reportedly saw Sihanouk, and his French-Vietnamese wife Monique, at a villa in Takmamau, a satellite city of Phnom Penh. Diplomats said Sihanouk, clad in the black pajamas worn by virtually all Cambodians, was working in his private vegetable garden.

Other sources said Sihanouk's new home was the former residence of Takhamau's governor, Brig. Gen. Dien Del.

Children of the formerly fun-loving, pudgy prince have fared worse than Sihanouk, who said a week before the Khmer Rouge victory in 1975 that he would be chief of state for life under the communists.

Some have sought refuge abroad, like the daughter who is a checker in an Australian supermarket. But at least two of his 14 children were sent out of Phnom Penh in 1975 to work the fields.

There have been no further reliable reports of their fates. But persistent reports said the two sons were forced into a colony of former Cambodian royalists on a harsh collective farm northeast of Phnom Penh.

Sihanouk himself "resigned" April 3, 1976, on a pension of $8,000 a year, according to a letter allegedly written by him and broadcast by Radio Phnom Penh.

Since then, he has been mentioned twice by the new rulers, once to praise the Cambodian Communist party and once to vilify Vietnam. He has personally not been seen nor heard publicly since 1975.

Other royalists have fared worse. Former prime minister and U.S. supporter Sisowath Sirk Matak was killed by the Khmer Rouge. Sihanouk's former prime minister, Penn Nouth, has disappeared from view.

Laos has been more gentle with its former king and royal family, but no less effective than Cambodia in removing their influence.

French-educated Savang Vatthana became king in 1959. On Dec. 2, 1975, the new communist authorities of Laos seized power and broadcast King Savang's abdication speech.

The ex-monarch, now 71 and said to have periods of senility, was placed in a house on the outskirts of Luang Prabang, the small, pastoral former royal capital, according to diplomats.

He was given several servants but placed under house arrest because communist authorities believed — or said they believed — he was active in anti-communist resistance.

"The king is alive and well under the protection of the government," said Sis-anan Saenyavong, the Laotian director-general of information, when asked about Savang during a news conference in Bangkok recently.

Savang's son, former Crown Prince Vong Savang, 46, also was accused in Radio Vientiane broadcasts of involvement with the resistance. But in early 1976, he evaded guards and in a small boat he and his family made it across the Mekong River to Thailand.

His royal connections in Laos and Thailand — still a kingdom — kept him out of the refugee camps here. But his presence was an embarrassment to Thailand and he was sent quickly to France as a refugee.

When he fled Laos, some observers believed the boat actually was provided by the Pathet Lao, who were more relieved than embarrassed by his departure from the new communist nation.

Ironically, a royalist is the titular head of communist Laos. President Souphanouvong, a once-removed member of the royal family and long the front man for the Pathet Lao and dubbed the "red prince" has little real influence on communist policy, however.

His half-brother and longtime neutralist Prime Minister-Prince Souvanna Phoua, also remains in Laos with the official title of government adviser. By all accounts, he has no influence.

Vietnam ended its system of emperors while Laos and Cambodia were still kingdoms, and the trauma of losing royalty to the communists has been slight.

The "queen mother" Doan Thuy, well into her 80s, remained in her Hue villa through the 1975 communist takeover as she had all through the months of savage fighting in the 1968 Tet offensive in the former imperial capital.

Her son Bao Dai, Vietnam's last emperor and even then virtually a puppet of French colonialists, lost all power and left Vietnam for the last time in 1955.

Since then, he has lived mostly in France, where his activities along the Riviera earned him a reputation as a philanthropic playboy.

He has dropped from public sight in recent years. A Vietnamese source in Paris told UPI Correspondent Arthur Higbee recently the former emperor appeared to be keeping a low profile.

"His phone is not answered, but apparently he has some income and isn't starving," Higbee reported.

The fall of royalty in Indochina has caused concern in Thailand, whose king and large royal family have much influence on most facets of Thai life.

It has been used here as propaganda against Thai communist insurgents.

"Communists and kings don't go together," said a Thai official. That has been proved conclusively in Indochina.

Carter Sets Three Conditions For Full Chinese Recognition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will speed up the process of seeking full diplomatic relations with Communist China, but is insisting on three conditions to safeguard Taiwan's future, administration officials say.

National security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski told Peking's leaders last month the United States is determined to move toward full relations, but did not start negotiations, officials said Tuesday.

Rather, he sought to widen political consultation between Washington and Peking on strategic issues, and in the process outlined the administration's view of Soviet military strength as contained in a National Security Council study known as PRM-10.

In a related development, UPI learned Peking has invited Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., to visit China for three weeks beginning June 28. Wolff, a backer of full ties, is chairman of the House International Affairs subcommittee on Asia and Pacific affairs.

During the past two days, Carter and his aides have outlined to the Trilateral Commission, an elite private group, the conditions on which the United States will insist before replacing the historic U.S.-Taiwan tie with full ties to Peking.

—Continued U.S. trade and aid to Taiwan. This would mean Taiwan would continue to enjoy U.S. trade privileges, Export-Import Bank credits, uranium supplies for its nuclear power plants, and military co-production arrangements.

—Establishment of a U.S. trade office — possibly unofficial — in Taiwan after diplomatic relations are severed and the 1954 mutual defense treaty is abrogated.

—A pledge that China would not seek to reunite Taiwan to the China mainland by force. Various formulas have been considered by the administration in this respect.

The proceedings of the commission are off the record, but several participants were willing to describe to UPI the substance of the U.S. strategy. UPI also sought elaboration of U.S. China policy from officials in the executive and legislative branches.

The administration expects the Nationalist Chinese government of Premier Chiang Ching-kuo to react negatively.

But officials believe Taiwan will reject it — declaring it cannot survive withdrawal of formal U.S. ties and, instead, bow to the inevitable — protesting sharply but taking concerted actions to make the best of the situation and protect the foreign investments which are vital to its vigorous economy.

There also is the possibility Taiwan might eventually declare itself a new, independent state, but that is not seen as an immediate development. Until now, both the Nationalists on Taiwan and the Chinese on the mainland have said Taiwan is part of historic China.

Norway's Oil Economy Still Not Yet Realized

OSLO, Norway (AP) — When Norway got into the North Sea oil business, the government warned of a Klondike-style boom and Norwegians had visions of becoming the sheiks of Scandinavia.

Those were the days of "oil fairy tales," after large reserves were discovered in 1968 under Norwegian waters that previously had provided only salmon and halibut.

Now, however, it has become clear here that the glowing predictions were premature. Norway, which spent heavily on the promise of sudden wealth, has piled up record trade deficits because of production delays and now is bracing its economy hard.

This year, when the boom was supposed to be in full swing, the government has had to splash cold water on Norwegians' hot spending habits. Labor unions are telling members not to expect any rise in their standard of living for the next few years.

Oil and gas revenues that were supposed to amount to more than $3 billion by last year turned out to be only half that much. For this year, the Norwegian Petroleum Directorate has slashed predictions of $4.5 billion to $2.7 billion.

The reason, Norwegian officials claim, is that American oilmen drastically underestimated the difficulties of extracting oil in numbing Nordic cold and seas where 50-knot winds commonly kick up 35-foot waves.

"We are learning over the years that these oil people are not geniuses. We're not so impressed as we used to be," said Bjorn Skogstad Aamo, state secretary of the Finance Ministry. "They were experts in oil, but they were not experts in the North Sea."

Besides the North Sea weather, environmental concerns and the eight-day blowout of a Phillips Petroleum Co. well in the Ekofisk North Sea oil field in April 1977 also contributed to the unforeseen delays. Norwegians aren't bitter about the shortfalls — but they are now making their own production estimates.

The trouble is that the country had been banking on predicted revenues. Private consumption soared 22 percent from 1973 to 1977, largely on the strength of "oil fairy tales."

To meet the demand for new goods, imports almost doubled in the same four years, from $9 billion to $17.6 billion. The spending spree — with inadequate oil revenues to foot the bill has left Norway saddled with a record foreign debt expected to reach $18.2 billion by the end of the year.

"Maybe we didn't know enough about it," said Paul Engstad, a state secretary and top aid to Prime Minister Odvar Nordli. "It's a new thing, a new experience here. But the wealth is there. We haven't lost a drop. We're just going it more slowly than we thought."

Now that the Norwegians have a better idea of the long lead time, they are selling concessions to 12 new exploration blocks equal in area to the fields already under production. These will provide revenue for the next decade.

But the delays, combined with unexpected drops in traditional exports such as shipping, have for the moment left Norway with a record $4.7 billion trade deficit and heavy foreign debt.

Nordli's socialist government has been forced to cut back subsidies to troubled industries. Half a dozen factories have closed or reorganized this spring. Workers are being held to an 8 percent wage increase and credit is so tight buyers have to put down 80 percent cash to get a new car, then pay off the remaining 20 percent within six months.

"People here are getting pretty upset with the government," complained Bjorn Ovardfordt, a 21-year-old Oslo appliance salesman. "I would like to buy a new car but I can't afford it now. I'll have to wait two or three years until I can pay cash."

A price freeze was imposed on essential food such as bread and milk to hold back 9 percent inflation. It is expected to drop slightly this year but the price of a pint of beer at an outdoor cafe is already the equivalent of $2.50, a Norwegian-made color television $1,300 and a Swedish-built sedan $25,000.

HEW To Pay For Home Dialysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Persons with kidney disease now may have transplants or dialysis treatment at home and be eligible for reimbursement by the federal government. President Carter signed legislation permitting such payment Tuesday.

Previously, only kidney dialysis in a medical center was covered by government health insurance programs.

LA Woman Charged In Fraud Case

COMPTON, Calif. (AP) — A woman accused of defrauding Los Angeles County of a record $240,000 in welfare payments surrendered to authorities but did not enter a plea at her arraignment.

Barbara Jean Williams, 33, of Ladera Heights, charged with claiming 47 children as dependants in order to obtain the welfare checks, appeared Wednesday before Municipal Court Commissioner Hugo Hill, who set a preliminary hearing in the case for July 10.

County welfare officials told the court that Mrs. Williams established eight separate identities at eight different welfare offices, beginning in 1971.

A computer readout was her undoing when it showed that more than one of the welfare checks was going to the same address, said Joan Manley, welfare fraud investigator for the county Department of Public Social Services.

Mrs. Williams faces up to eight years in prison if convicted on charges of 10 counts of welfare fraud and 13 counts of perjury, including nine false statements on welfare applications and four on driver's license applications, said Deputy District Attorney Ronald Wheeler.

Along with non-cash benefits — food stamps and medical services, the $239,587 in welfare payments Mrs. Williams is accused of collecting, is believed to be the largest amount ever in any welfare fraud case.

The previous record is believed to have been occurred in Chicago where Arlene Otis, 30, was indicted on 614 counts of welfare theft for allegedly receiving $150,840 in medicare claims and food stamps.

The Otis case surpassed a previous welfare theft mark of $150,000. On May 12, 1977, Linda Taylor, 50, of Chicago was given a two-to six-year prison term in that case.

Prosecutors said both Chicago women obtained the illegal benefits by using multiple identities.

SURRENDERS IN WELFARE FRAUD CASE — Barbara Jean Thompson, 33, left, who authorities say allegedly collected $240,000 in welfare overpayments is accompanied by officials as she surrendered Wednesday. Police in suburban Compton, Calif., booked her and described the case as perhaps the biggest welfare fraud in history. They said she claimed 47 children for the overpayments. (AP Laserphoto)

India's Prime Minister Gives Longevity Secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Morarji Desai's visit to Washington has not yielded agreement on nuclear non-proliferation, but it has produced some advice on how to lead a long and healthy life.

"It's easy," said the 82-year-old Desai, who demonstrated his spryness on Wednesday by spurning a limousine and walking to the White House for his meeting with President Carter.

The Indian leader was scheduled to leave Washington for New York today.

Desai was speaking to the National Press Club when he was asked why India refuses to export rhesus monkeys, which are in demand by American research laboratories for medical experiments.

"We ought not to inflict cruelty on any living being. Otherwise, we have no claim to being superior to the animals," Desai said.

Besides, he added, medical science was not as effective as "natural means" in fostering health. Desai said he did not take medicines or vaccines, and that he had been given a special permit by the United States to enter the country despite not being vaccinated.

What, he was asked, was his secret?

"If one is at peace with oneself, one controls one's mind, and one has control of the food one takes," Desai said in his soft, professional monotone.

"One observes the natural laws. And if you do, you can never be ill. One decides he will live on fruit and milk only, and he will not get ill," Desai said.

Desai said he and Carter "have come absolutely close together" during their two meetings, but he also indicated that India has yielded nothing in its determination not to accept nuclear inspections and safeguards demanded by the United States as a condition for continuing to supply nuclear fuel to India's Tarapur reactor after 1980.

"We are being asked to accept discriminatory safeguards by nations with arsenals which could destroy the world," he said. "Why should India be singled out?"

But the House International Relations Committee voted on Wednesday against a measure to prohibit the Carter administration plan for transfer of 7.6 tons of uranium to India. The full House still must take up the matter.

Desai reiterated his frequent pledge that India had no intention of diverting nuclear fuel, upgrading it, and using it to make bombs, as its scientists did in 1974, when Indira Gandhi was in power.

And he said that even if the superpowers reach agreement on a comprehensive test ban treaty and strategic arms limitation, India will not agree to the international safeguards.

He said that the superpowers would have to also accept inspection of their nuclear sites and reach agreement to eliminate nuclear weapons within 10 years.

Civella Gets Med Parole

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Appearing haggard and walking with a cane, reputed underworld leader Nick Civella left the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners at Springfield, Mo., Wednesday on a medical parole.

The aging Civella, who is suffering from cancer, has served 10 months of a three-year sentence for conspiracy to establish a gambling operation in Kansas City.

David Bailes, the Medical Center's associate director, said members of Civella's family picked him up at the prison gates and later flew to Kansas City by commercial airliner.

Bailes said the 66-year-old Civella was smiling and seemed to be "happy to leave our care."

Judge William R. Collinson sentenced Civella in July 1975 on the gambling charge.

Before he appeared to begin serving the sentence he had undergone two abdominal operations for cancer. His surgeon testified at a hearing in March 1977 that if Civella had not had the surgery in December 1977 he would have "been at the end of his life span."

The U.S. Board of Parole met in Atlanta in April and decided Civella should be given a medical parole.

More Viet Refugees Admitted To U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another 25,000 Vietnamese refugees will be admitted to the United States in the next 11 months.

In making the announcement Wednesday,

Attorney General Griffin B. Bell also authorized admission of 12,000 East European refugees by next May 1 and 500 South Americans over a two-year period.

Unique National Identities Threatened By Tourism

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Not long ago you could step back in the centuries with a visit to one of Europe's four mini-states. Today, their ancient isolation is all but gone, and their quaint ways are threatened.)

By MORT ROSENBLUM
And EDWARD CODY

SAN MARINO (AP) — They once stood aloof, Europe's mini-states, tiny reflections of the past, tucked away in the continent's peaks and corners, immune to time and change.

But good roads and airports and the world economy's disdain for borders have unraveled that studied isolation of several centuries.

They are still separate from neighboring nations, to be sure, but their story-book splendor survives mainly in stamp albums and tourist literature.

There is still a crossbow arena in downtown San Marino, but residents of this mountaintop enclave in Italy have to walk sideways in summer because of all the tourists.

Andorra, once so protected by the snowy Pyrenees it needed no forts, is often riddled in population by Spaniards buying $4 Scotch and by Frenchmen exploring new ski slopes.

In Monaco, the plaid golf pants of Americans have replaced the silk lapels of Europe's old rich. The opulent casino that once made taxes unnecessary now provides just a pittance of the principality's earnings.

Liechtenstein, no longer just a letter-box for corporate tax-avoidance, is one of the most industrialized countries in Europe, exporting false teeth and rivet guns around the world.

"We must look very seriously at the future," says San Marino foreign minister Giancarlo Ghironzi, echoing a sentiment heard in all four states. "Before there was isolation. Now it is much harder to preserve our identity."

Each state is different but all face common problems.

None controls the economic climate in which it lives, and any can be forced to yield to its neighbors' wishes with a simple police roadblock. All depend largely on curious tourists and international money men.

And, despite the changing times, the mini-states must find ways to defend cultures never very different from those around them.

San Marino

Anyone taking a wrong turn at Rimini on Italy's Adriatic Coast could stumble into San Marino without knowing it. A banner in Italian over the highway reads "Welcome to the Ancient Land of Liberty." Tourists must find an official and pay $2.50 to get their passports stamped.

The enclave is 38 square miles — 32 San Marinos could fit in Rhode Island. There are only 20,000 residents, including 2,000 foreigners. At least as many San Marinese live abroad as at home, including 1,600 in the United States.

It is the world's smallest and oldest surviving republic. The 40 elected members of the Great and General Council make law and name two captain regents as co-heads of state for six-month terms.

According to legend, ever since a Dalmatian stonecutter named Marino fled Yugoslavia to Mount Titan, it has defended itself, carefully preserving its reputation for tranquility, hospitality, tolerance.

But the three Medieval forts atop the peak are no longer enough. The once arcane politics and economics now reflect Italy's troubled situation.

Double-digit inflation cannot be avoided. The constitution forbids unemployment, but state-provided jobs tend toward manual labor. And 80 percent of San Marino's budget is for personnel costs.

Christian Democrats square off with Communists and Socialists, as in Italy. And modern campaigning includes flying emigrants back from New York, Detroit and Sandusky, Ohio, to cast ballots.

There is even crime, which outrages the oldtimers. "In winter," one says, "I'll leave a TV set in my car with the windows open. But when the season starts, everything is padlocked."

San Marino has few means to preserve its real independence. Italy pays about $3 million a year — one-tenth of government revenue — and keeps a close watch on its tiny neighbor.

In 1957, during one crisis, Italy helped topple a Communist government by sealing the border for a few days and sending troops up for "maneuvers."

Tourists are essential. One-third of government income is from postage stamps and coins, and most families depend in some way on the tiny boutiques among the crevices and nooks of the ancient stone walls.

Young people must leave San Marino for secondary education. The newspapers, like radio and television, are Italian. Residents regularly drive down to Rimini to the beach or to shop.

"We are definitely tied to the world," said one government official. "But, after all, who is independent these days?"

Andorra

Sandwiched between France and Spain, Andorra has struck it rich on a single guideline: Provide what the neighbors don't. The tiny principality turned itself into a giant duty-free shop, with few zoning laws and little pollution control.

As a result, a two-mile row of elaborate but shabby storefronts runs like a garish scar along the gentle Valira River. Lighted signs advertising Japanese radios and French perfumes blot out the mountains on either side.

A red brick building masks a Romanesque chapel which has survived eight centuries. The old quarter of Andorra la Vella, the capital, is engulfed by modern urban sprawl. A "Tourist Circuit" runs past a foul-smelling incinerator and up over a valley used to dump wrappings left by bargain hunters.

On the French frontier, Pas de la Casa resembles a Mexican border town, with dark stairs to sleazy hotels and modern supermarkets selling whiskey and cigaretties.

"If we had any real government, we could control all this," says a politician in Andorra where political parties, as such, aren't permitted. "But we have no say about anything."

Andorra, smaller in area than Chicago with 28,000 inhabitants clustered in a few other refugees had moved in and married local women. They opened shops and began a thundering boom. Between 1960 and 1969, when China's yearly population growth was considered enormous at 1.3 percent, Andorra's was 9 percent.

Now more than a million cars a year enter Andorra. About 2,400 shops and 200 towns and villages, lives by a political system set up 700 years ago. Its co-princes are the bishop of Seo de Urgel, down the mountain in Spain, and the president of France. An elected council suggests laws and appoints a superintendent as head of government.

... despite the changing times, the mini-states must find ways to defend cultures never very different from those around them.

But the real power rests outside. When a French company wanted to build a parking lot for its 10-story department store, local authorities refused. The decision was overruled by delegates of the co-princes.

Some reform is expected this year, perhaps with more direct suffrage and local autonomy, but even the extremists agree the co-princes must stay to prevent Andorra from being swallowed up by France or Spain.

Until the Spanish Civil War, a handful of Andorrans lived in peaceful seclusion, visited only by a hearty few. By the end of World War II, a stream of Catalan and gas stations do an estimated $300 million in business annually, not counting the huge turnover by gold and diamond smugglers who do little to hide their operations.

"No one has any idea how much money his business earns," says one accountant. "There are no taxes, so there are no books." The boom outstripped the means to support it. Embezzlement is common and customers often abuse old-style trust.

Andorrans have an even harder time than the San Marinese in preserving their heritage. France and Spain support most of the schools, pushing their own languages over the official tongue, Catalan. Foreign residents outnumber Andorrans 4 to 1.

The law says businesses must be controlled by Andorrans, but foreigners "rent" names for a share of the earnings.

Monaco

"It's no longer the good old days, all that elegance, long robes, tuxedos and all those jewels, everything shining," lamented Alex Del-Taglia, recently retired after 47 years as groom and doorman at Monaco's baroque Hotel de Paris.

Prince Rainier III still rules his 469-acre realm — just over half the size of New York's Central Park — nestled under a cliff on the French Riviera just across the border with Italy. He is aided by French tolerance and smiles from Princess Grace.

But in a city-state where apartment towers now outnumber villas, Rainier's publicists have to work overtime to preserve the gloss of salad days when a few hundred long-staying bluebloods, including King Farouk and his harem, had the principality to themselves.

"We're not changing our image," says tourism director Louis Blanche. "Not the image, maybe, but the fact? The grands dukes of Russia have faded into history, and 1978 tourists driving into Monaco need a map to tell the difference from the hyper-developed French coast."

Fully a third of the 200,000 persons who checked into Monaco hotels in 1977 were Americans. Their number rose sharply following the opening in 1975 of Loews Hotel, a 660-room pastel palace on a landfill in the Mediterranean. The modern establishment has none of the old world elegance that made Monaco famous. It features instead shiny American-style bathrooms, coffee shop dining and Las Vegas craps.

The prince, realizing that mass tourism had replaced class tourism, is credited with the change in direction. He fought a long and bitter battle with the late Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis in the 1960s to modernize facilities and seek more business from the shorts-and-sandals crowd.

Rainier got his way in 1962 by buying out Onassis' shares in the Societe des Bains de Mer, which runs the principality's casino and best hotels. Monaco residents say Onassis never came back after that — but the hotels are now running in the black with 60 percent occupancy after a number of losing years.

The thousands of ordinary Americans, Frenchmen, Italians and Germans who pass through in summer, however, rarely drop more than a few hundred francs at the famous casino. Most just peek in for a look. Despite occasional big rollers from Italy or Arab oil countries, the venerable 114-year-old hall brings in only 3 percent of Monaco's $112 million revenues, compared to 95 percent at the turn of the century.

U.S. Farm Show Baffles Soviets

AN EXTRA MOUTH TO FEED — Charley Janek's eight-week-old Hereford-Charolais calf is the talk of the town in Rockdale. The 180-pound calf has a curly red coat and is two faced. He was named Freddy, after veterinarian Fred Kuzniarek, who delivered him. Shown here slurping away happily on his mother's milk, fed to him in two bottles, unmindful of all the attention showered upon him. (AP Laserphoto)

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — The red tractor sat like a shiny new toy in the corner of a section of an exhibit on American agriculture.

It was about 10 feet away from a yellow pickup truck that had an arc welding unit sitting on its bed.

Off to the side was a demonstration showing how a popular American reaper works, and beside that some examples of life on a farm in the United States.

"And how much does such a tractor cost in America?" an old man in a gray wool cap asked Elsa Djab Burchinow, a 23-year-old Russian literature graduate of Cornell University who was acting as a tour guide.

She came up with the answer, about $6,000, and the old man shook his head. "It is impossible, nobody could afford such a tractor. I don't believe it."

The "I don't believe it" part is probably one of the most often heard comments at the Agriculture America exhibit touring the Soviet Union.

"I've had that kind of thing at least 10 different times," said Elsa.

"You tell them farmers can buy it on credit, and they don't know what credit is. Then they want to know if the tractor was made especially for the exhibit and if it was painted red because this is the Soviet Union."

She and other tour guides at the exhibit said many of the thousands of Ukrainians who have walked through the displays can't believe they are seeing examples of the lives of average American farmers.

One section of the display traces the lives of several generations of Midwestern farmers. The guides said guests at the exhibit couldn't believe it was an average farm family.

The guides also were astounded by the reaction to a film on buying food in supermarkets. One of the guides said the Soviet guests couldn't believe there was such a variety of foodstuffs and that there were no long lines.

"Basically, they think we have trotted out the very best of American agriculture," said Julie Zavan, 22, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

"They say things like 'Oh, you do have these things, but they are so damned expensive, how can anyone possibly enjoy them?' These people have listened to so many slogans it's almost impossible to reach them."

The young guides at the exhibit are not trained in agriculture and have difficulty handling anything but the most basic questions.

And Soviet citizens interested in agricultural matters leave their basic questions at home, firing away with the most difficult ones. For example, "How many hectares of wheat are planted in the United States each year?"

Some of the guests get angry because the tour guides don't have the answers to such questions.

There was a shouting match early in May between an old woman and a guide. The woman yelled, "You don't know anything. How can you come here with an agricultural show and not know anything?"

They also ask personal questions, some innocent and some embarrassing. "One woman asked us 'How much does a kilogram (2.2 pounds) of narcotics cost in New York,'" said Olya Lupan, 25, of Bridgewater, N.J.

Other guides have collected a long list of strange questions, one of which dealt with sexual practices. "Someone asked us 'What are teeth like in America?' and another person wanted to know about the weather in Wilmington, Del.," one guide said.

They are also getting their fill of questions about a controversy that has become the focus of a major propaganda campaign in the Soviet Union — the death sentence for Alabama prison inmate Johnny Harris.

Harris was sentenced to death after a conviction on charges he killed a prison guard. The Soviet press calls Harris a civil rights leader and a victim of racial prejudice in the United States.

"They claim the whole world is up in arms about the Johnny Harris case," said Laura Kennedy. "There's not a great deal of conviction among the questioners. They just raise the question and then let it drop."

One of the guides displayed an artist's rendition he was given of Harris. It showed an emaciated black man chained to the walls of his prison cell.

They also asked questions about an issue that would appear to have nothing to do with agriculture — the neutron bomb. "We tell them that nobody wants war. It calms them down when you tell them a lot of Americans don't want nuclear weapons either," said one of the guides.

Peanut Oil Sale Set By USDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Wednesday that it plans to sell the last of its peanut oil acquired under federal peanut price support operations several years ago.

Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said about 11 million pounds of peanut oil will be offered for sale soon.

The sale of peanut oil will be the first since the Agriculture Department tightened its sales policies for disposing of surplus commodities on March 30. The crackdown was a result of an investigation into how the department's Commodity Credit Corporation handled the sale of 81.9 million pounds of peanut oil last fall.

In that sale, Camilla Cotton Oil Co., Camilla, Ga., was the successful bidder for 78 million pounds of the surplus peanut oil owned by CCC, paying a range of 20.251 cents to 23 cents a pound for it.

By early January peanut oil prices rose to 42.5 cents a pound and there had been accusations from some other companies and members of Congress that the Georgia firm made windfall profits because of the way the Agriculture Department handled the sale.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, meanwhile, directed department investigators to look into the peanut oil sale.

The investigation report, released March 30 along with tighter rules for commodity sales, said there was no scheme to cheat the government but did say that there had been some bungling on the part of the department in handling the sales.

Peanut oil prices currently are more than 40 cents a pound, up from last fall because of a reduced supply. The 11 million pounds remaining to be sold are the last of about 560 million pounds of peanut oil acquired by CCC under peanut price support operations in 1974 and 1975.

However, the production of peanut oil — which results when peanuts are crushed into meal and oil — has dropped from 476 million pounds in 1975-76 to 363 million pounds in 1976-77 and to an estimated 150 million pounds this season.

Fountain Attracts Girls, Watchers

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI — At noon the office girls by the thousands in their summer dresses sit by the sparkling fountain in the square, surely one of the most beautiful in the world, sipping their No-Cal sodas and slurping yogurt.

As night must follow the day, construction hardhats and pencil pushers fettered to an office stool and off-duty muggers who love to hear the little brook a-gurgling and see a pretty shoulder a-tanning, pour into the square with their brown bag lunches to feel the cooling spray and view the passing scenery.

Maybe a fountain in the square is the secret of saving all of downtown America and inner cities everywhere. In Cincinnati, that fine day, a Dixieland band was pumping away up on the recreation department platform. Chimes from a nearby bank tower tolled the quarter hour across the crowded square. An executive-type poet in a three-piece seersucker suit read poetry to a dazzling blonde nymph cooling her painted tootsies in the water pouring from a turtle's mouth, while above them, larger than life, bronzed draped female figures with urns and jugs carried out the sculptor's theme of man's needs and uses for water.

All of Cincinnati seemed to be gathered there, but no one in Cincinnati seemed to know how the fountain got there or what it was called.

"What's the name of that big fountain down the street?" I asked the girl perching the convention visitors information desk in the hotel.

"What fountain?" she asked. She had all kinds of statistics on Pete Rose, the "skywalk" elevated sidewalks, the chili parlors run by Greeks, the mating habits of the 5,000 animals at the zoo and the suspension bridge over the Ohio River which was the out-of-town trout for the guy who built the Brooklyn bridge, but nothing, not even a small publicity splash, on that exquisite fountain.

Mayor Gerald Springer, who welcomed us to his fair city, wasn't much help. "Isn't that fountain downtown named after the sculptor or maybe the donor?" I asked him as we shared a water pitcher at the head table. "Not unless his name is Ruben Square," chortled His Honor. "We just call it Fountain Square."

But the World Encyclopedia had a name for it, the Tyler-Davidson Fountain, agreed it was "one of the finest in the world," said it was cast in bronze in Munich, Germany, at a cost of $200,000, which must have been the best bargain thrifty burghers of the "Queen City of the West" ever got before Pete Rose.

Anyhow, despite water shortages, I'm convinced fountains are the answer to municipal blight and high-rise atrocities. Violence seldom flourishes in the midst of such mobile beauty, as if the miscreant on his way to mayhem had heeded the poet's prayer:

"Glorious Fountain
Let my heart be Strong, upward, friendly
Like thee."

Even the type of hoods who hang around fountains have a certain roguish charm, like the pickpockets who infest the Trevi Fountain in Rome, or the mini-mobsters with the magnets who divided up the turf between foaming dolphins and snorting sea horses to scoop up the coins tossed by tourists.

Rome is full of glorious fountains, outdoor settings for restaurants and pizza houses against a backdrop of magnificent baroque churches. Piazza Navona has three fabulous fountains. In the middle is Bernini's famous Fountain of the Rivers, which he designed to hold an obelisk swiped from the Egyptians and which, because he thought one of the churches in the square was too ugly to behold, even by statutory, had all his noble figures facing in another direction.

The Germans think the Schoenbrunn in Nuremberg is unsurpassed. The French alternate between the fountains at Versailles and the Fontaine des Innocents in Paris. Amsterdam, below sea level and with canals meandering all over, still has room where quality like to frolic nude on New Year's Eve, used to be one of the world's fairest until the local bureaucrats turned it into a traffic circle.

Chicago boasts two splendid fountains, the Buckingham Memorial, which is the world's largest lighted fountain, and "The Spirit of the Great Lakes" with five water sprites by Lorado Taft. And New Orleans has its melodious Pete Fountain.

In the early days of Greece and Rome and far back into Biblical times people like Rebecca, who were too poor to have water brought into their homes, took a jug to the many beautifully designed fountains that still are among the glories of ancient sculpture.

Even then they regarded fountains as a nymph who bathed in the river every day and inflamed the passions of the lecherous local river god. To preserve her innocence and thwart the old water buffalo, Diana changed Arethusa into a lovely fountain.

So, city planners, forget about the parking garage and the shopping mall to save your downtown business district: pipe in a fountain with lots of water nymphs, marble and life.

Hong Kong Asks Civilians To Fight Crime

HONG KONG (UPI) — Police have launched a campaign to bring members of every family into their crime-fighting ranks by encouraging them to use their eyes and ears.

Already off to a good start, 210,000 youngsters belong to the Junior Police Call Club. They report suspicious happenings and information they think will help police.

Now, officials want to impress upon parents that failure to report crime because of indifference, laziness or business helps another criminal get away.

This American concept of civilian volunteer crime-fighting is new to Hong Kong, and the project's originator is confident his Beat Crime '78 program will succeed despite years of publicized police corruption.

Drew Rennie, the chief community relations officer who founded and coordinates the program, says it is the most intensive crime prevention effort ever attempted by the Hong Kong Police Department to generate widespread and active public support.

He is trying to turn the public apathy of Hong Kong's 4.5 millions, who live in a congested, urban area, into the concern typical of a village community.

Figures indicate a 30 per cent decrease in violent crime has already occurred and overall crime has gone down 17 per cent over the past three years.

But, Rennie said, "We don't know how much crime may have gone unreported. If our campaign works, we could be deluged but receive a much more honest to tal crime picture. And that's what we want."

Members of the children's club already have made almost 1,000 successful reports. They also distribute "Beat Crime" cards in English and Chinese. Some youngsters hand them to passersby on busy corners, but most distribute them door-to-door in huge housing projects.

"Carry this at all times," they tell recipients. The cards contain emergency numbers that do not require callers to identify themselves; hot lines for drug abuse, victims of rape, assaults, burglaries and robberies; and phone numbers of the nearest neighborhood police unit.

"This is only the first step to get people to take an interest," Rennie said. "No matter how well-equipped, efficient and trained a police force may be, it cannot succeed in the fight against crime without support from the public."

The program's mobile light crime display unit, a 30-foot-long van, carries the message to schools, high-rises and remote areas. It is packed with demonstration crime-fighting equipment and information answering a wide range of queries from how to protect one's own home to qualifications for beginning cops. It also carries recruitment facilities, films and a projector and a screen to show movies inside and out.

"We're dedicated to winning over the people by answering their questions honestly," Rennie said, citing the prevailing fear that a witness or a victim will be retaliated against if he reports and the criminal eventually goes free.

To help generate a "village attitude," neighborhood police units use streamlined reporting procedures to make officers less formidable and more like friendly, helpful town patrolmen. The unit is always manned. Rennie hopes residents of the huge housing blocks will feel at ease stopping by, even if it's just to say hello.

Mutual Aid Committees in housing projects where occupants patrol the floors are key factors in the self-help part of the campaign.

The committees are not police-controlled, Rennie said, but are informed of such basics as the citizen's powers of arrest, preserving the scene of a crime and reporting to the Neighborhood Police Unit as quickly as possible. Avoiding violence is a cardinal rule, unless it is absolutely necessary for self-defense.

"All through this fiscal year ending next March will be events to focus attention on the public helping police beat crime," Rennie said. "Hopefully, thugs will think twice if they know a community carrying reporting cards is on the alert and against them."

Lee Likes It Hot, Eyes Open Crown

DENVER (AP) — Although the temperature during practice rounds had climbed unseasonably and uncomfortably into the 90s, Lee Trevino said he hoped it would get to 100 for the 78th U.S. Open Championship, which was scheduled to get under way today.

The heat was good for his back, now almost fully recovered from surgery in November 1976. Trevino's game, meanwhile, already was sizzling.

There was no mistaking the confidence of this two-time Open winner. And, while this year's event had no clear-cut favorite, it was hard to overlook the stocky Trevino as a top choice.

"I'm playing the best golf of my life right now," said Trevino following a practice round Wednesday. "I've won $160,000 and the Open is just starting. I haven't done that in 12 years.

"I feel very confident. That 65 I had last week really gave me a boost. I almost stole that tournament," he said, referring to his final round in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic which vaulted him into the lead for a while. He finished second, losing Andy Bean on the first hole of the playoff.

Trevino admits he's lost one of his main advantages over the competition. "I think I'm the straightest driver on the tour, but unfortunately I won't be using a driver that much here — maybe on six holes at the most," he said. "My chances would be better if I could put a driver in my hands 14 times a round, with the other guys doing the same. That won't happen here."

Cherry Hills, ironically, is the longest Open course ever at 7,083 yards. But the thin air at Denver's mile-high altitude has afforded the players 7-10 percent more carry on their shots, whittling the course down to something more like 6,400 yards. Because of its relative shortness, as well as the narrow fairways and treacherous rough, the players planned to use irons off the tee on many of the par 4s.

Jack Nicklaus, for example, said he probably would pull out his driver less than five times a round.

Because of the preponderance of iron play off the tee, Trevino felt the longer hitters must be favored in this year's Open. "They're capable of hitting their 1- or 2-irons up to 270 yards, so they don't need to use the driver," he said.

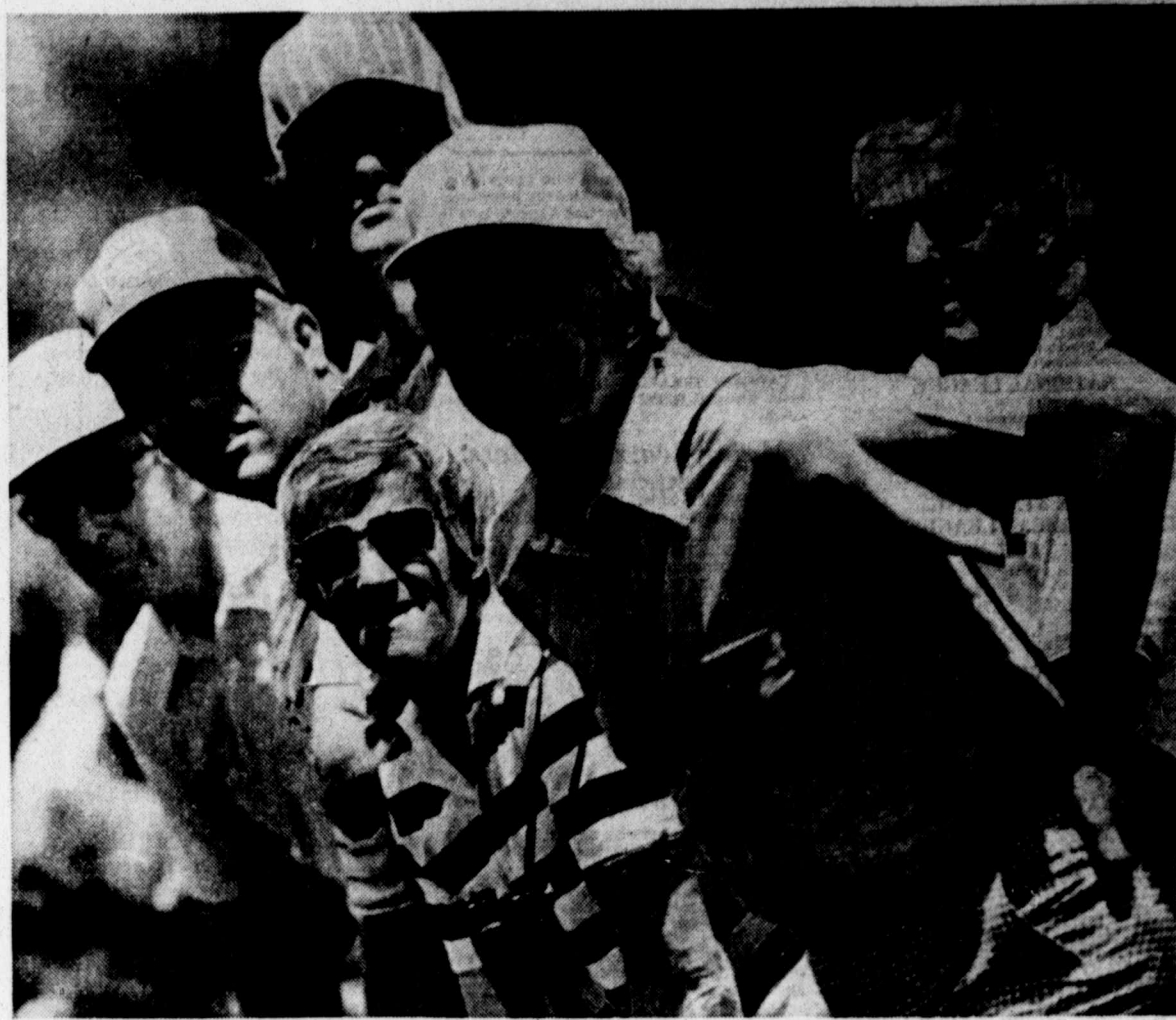

Nicklaus, golf's all-time leading money winner and holder of 14 major titles, falls into that category, of course. He's overdue, too, not having captured a major tournament since 1975.

Bean, the Florida strongboy who won the Kemper Open two weeks ago along with Memphis, also should be a factor.

But perhaps more suited for an Open course are the games of Trevino, 1974 winner Hale Irwin and defending champion Hubert Green. All are extremely accurate strikers of the ball, have strong competitive instincts and have been playing well recently.

Irwin grew up in nearby Boulder, starred in football and played at the University of Colorado and golf here often as an amateur. He said having a hometown following "won't hurt, but it's hard to say how much bearing it will have on my play. They don't want me to win any more than I do."

Green, a two-time winner already this season, said the course "forces you to use your head a lot out there. You have to lay up. Sometimes you must lay back when you want to attack."

PROS-EYE VIEW—Fans, many hiding behind colored glasses, lean over the restraining ropes to get better views of the pros during Wednesday's practice rounds at Cherry Hills Country Club at Denver, site of the U.S. Open which began this morning. (AP Laserphoto)

Where's Mr. Feller?

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. Has there been any explanation as to why the Red Sox got taken on the sal. of Ferguson Jenkins back to the Texas Rangers? He looked like he was on his last legs up here, yet this year he has done nothing but win at Texas.

—Jake Stanton, Quincy, Mass.

A. Jenkins (5-2 at this writing) has a quick answer, which expresses his opinion of Boston manager Don Zimmer: "I was shoved in the bullpen last year by an ugly, fat, old bald-headed man who knows nothing about pitching."

Jenkins was slated for long relief with the Rangers, until the staff got in early season trouble and he was added as a fifth starter. There's also an off-field reason for Jenkins' turnaround in Texas: He can go fishing every day when the club is home, and Jenkins loves to fish.

Q. Can you give me some current information about Bob Feller? Married, job, number of kids, pitching record, mail address? I'd appreciate it because my dad went to the school and played against Mr. Feller in Iowa.

—Jerry Swihart, Anaconda, Mont.

A. Feller, 59, is director of sales (sports) for the Hilton Inns, has three sons by his first marriage and two stepchildren in his current marriage of four years. He has been in the news in recent years due to various lawsuits. "One guy sued me for stealing his wife, another for stealing his airplane," Feller told us. "Anybody can sue anybody, but if they sue me, they better bring money."

Feller won the alienation-of-affections suit and countersuit and is now suing the fellow who accused him of flying away in his airplane. His address is 736 Standard Building, Cleveland, Ohio, 44113. His major-league pitching record was 266-162.

Feller says he will be in Butte and Helena, Mont., on Aug. 26 and 27 and invites you to look him up.

Q. Recently at the Houston Open I noticed a number of the players had Michelob identification on their bags. Accustomed to seeing golf equipment names, I was curious about this endorsement. Can you shed any light on the arrangement?

—R.L. Tallman, Houston.

A. Anheuser-Busch is sponsoring 16 golfers on the tour this year, among them Lee Elder, Dave and Mike Hill, Fred Marti, Terry Dight, Jerry McGee, John Schroder and Steve Melnik. Additional fees are added according to where the golfers finish each week. The brewery even gets out a newsletter about the "Michelob Team."

Q. In what sport, besides horse-racing, is the most money bet on?

—Israel Goodman, Louisville, Ky.

A. "The Churchill Downs Sports Book" in Las Vegas tells us the handle turns in this order: horses, football (college and pro together), baseball and basketball.

Q. Can you tell me when the NFL first started deciding title games by the sudden-death playoffs?

—Eddie Quinlan, Norfolk, Va.

A. The rule was adopted for playoffs and championship games for the 1947 season, but of course it never had to be employed until the famed 1958 collision between the Giants and the Colts.

Godine To Leave A&M

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Karl Godine's controversial basketball career at Texas A&M has ended, according to the former schoolboy all-America who says he'll transfer this fall to an NAIA school.

Godine, one of two former Houston Kashmere stars declared ineligible two years ago by the Southwest Conference because of illegal recruiting, told the San Antonio Express that he didn't feel he was playing enough.

Texas A&M basketball coach Shelby Metcalf said Wednesday that Godine's decision not to return for his senior season is "a wise one."

The 6-3 Godine would have a year and a half of eligibility at an NAIA school after sitting out the 18-week waiting period.

Godine and high school teammate Jarvis Williams, who combined to lead

Kashmere to 75 consecutive victories and three straight Class AAAA schoolboy titles, signed in 1975 to play for the Aggies.

But in February 1976, the SWC declared them ineligible for a season because Texas A&M was found to have given them illegal inducements.

The two players returned to play last fall, but Godine suffered a knee injury on Jan. 28 that finished the season for him. He had been hitting 9.6 points in just an average of 17 minutes per game before the injury.

Williams, meanwhile, said he plans to remain at Texas A&M.

"The knee is coming back," said Godine, who averaged 13.2 points per game before being declared ineligible during his freshman season. "I'm running a little now. It will be on the right track by the time school starts.

"That first year I enjoyed it, because I got a chance to play and we were winning. The next year we couldn't play, but we got to practice quite a bit. The third year they didn't really give me the playing time I needed," he added. "I feel like if I went back they would probably give me the same amount of playing time and that wouldn't be enough to show people what I can do."

Metcalf said, "I think it was a wise decision. Two years of work would be best for Karl. When we talked about it, I recommended that if he did choose to leave that he go to an NAIA school. That way he'll have two years of eligibility remaining."

First-Place Battle Due At Speedway

A showdown for first place in the late model stock car racing standings at Lubbock Speedway looms when the green flag falls on Friday night's program.

Jim Culppepper of Hereford, the leader from the outset, now holds but a 15-point edge over J.D. Hughes of Sundown, who in the second of two clean sweeps last Friday night moved into second place.

Racing in the senior division has been close all season, though, with the outcome always in doubt. From a mathematical standpoint, even the 10th place driver could advance to a lead-challenging spot in only one outing on the fast banks of the 3/8-mile paved oval.

In a special pre-Father's Day feature, the track on South U.S. 87 will admit fans for $5 per carload. Thirteen races are on tap, with two heats, a trophy dash, semi and main in both late model and street stock divisions plus a trio of races for the fast-growing Volkswagen class.

Here are the point standings going into Friday night's program:

World Cup Madness Strikes—In Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outside in brilliant sunshine, Washington went about its usual business, while inside darkened Constitution Hall emotions seethed quietly or burst into uproarious sound.

The events being shown on big screen closed circuit television were games of the World Cup soccer competition in Argentina.

Limousines deposited ambassadors and other diplomats from the capital's embassies. A German priest ran panting up the street worried he would be late.

The presentation in the hall owned by the Daughters of the American Revolution just around the corner from the White House, was a study in national response to this most national of athletic competitions.

In a first game Wednesday, West Germany, the defending champion, tied Italy 0-0, a tensely taut struggle more Verdi and Goetterdaemmerung than what was to follow.

What came next was Brazil defeating Peru 3-0 and the Brazilians in the audience of some 3,000 exploding.

Hunched forward Germans had limited their utterances to a half loud, "Schies," an exhortation to shoot issued through clenched teeth. Italians crossed themselves when the ball rocketed off the German goal.

But the Peruvians and Brazilians were in full cry even as their game began. They almost knocked down a television cameraman who flooded them with bright light in an effort to record the scene.

Then as Dirceu turned a free kick into Brazil's first goal, the Brazilian partisans spilled into the aisles, their cry, "Brazil, Brazil, Brazil," rolling through the hall.

The samba music from the actual site in Argentina was so loud that you could dance to it here. Many did just that.

"It's like that everywhere," Fred Land-

Cardinal Official Returns To Work

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals' director of operations has returned to limited duty with the National Football League team, and revealed it was a brain hemorrhage that caused him to fall at his home more than two months ago.

Joe Sullivan, 54, said he suffered five broken ribs in the mishap and was hospitalized for several weeks. He said the hemorrhage involved a ruptured blood vessel but was not related to a previous bypass surgery he had undergone in a heart operation.

"I didn't know what was wrong with me for the first five weeks," he said. "I guess when you get one of those hemorrhages, you lose everything. I didn't know how severe it was, but I came out without having to have surgery, and that's the big thing."

Sullivan's full recovery is expected to take several months. "I heal fast," he maintained.

An estimated 800 million viewers from around the world watched the 1974 World Cup final game played in West Germany. Landman said that it was expected that this year's championship game would attract a live audience of more than one billion people.

Landman listed New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Washington, San Francisco, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit and Miami as primary U.S. centers of interest with Montreal and especially Toronto big in Canada.

A cross-section of those attending, Landman observed, usually includes mostly foreign and ethnic groups and young American soccer players from the country's growing youth programs.

Tickets in Washington's two locations cost $3.50 and 2.50 for opening-round matches, even more for the final game. Children under 16 get in for half price.

North America is one of the few major areas in the world where the games are not being shown free on home television. Landman said rights for the games are sold years in advance and that American television networks showed little interest at the time. "The American soccer boom," he said, "has been with us for just the past year or two."

Oklahomans Confirm OSU Funding Group

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Three former members have confirmed the existence of a club to provide a slush fund for recruiting football players at Oklahoma State University, the Tulsa World said today.

Each was reported to have involved football coach Jim Stanley although Stanley has denied knowing of any such unannounced club.

J.W. Lewis of Tulsa produced a letter from Stanley thanking Lewis for "giving Charlie Alexander your time and consideration," the World story by Sports Editor Bill Connors said.

Alexander was identified by the newspaper as chief executive of the North Central Business Development Association Inc. Alexander, a former pilot for OSU, was quoted as saying that he acknowledged soliciting members, but denied Stanley knew of the club.

Lewis said he joined the club after meeting with Alexander last August and that Stanley arranged the meeting.

Lewis produced an invoice for $508.80 in membership dues plus a letter signed by Alexander under the letterhead of "North Central Oklahoma Business Development Association Inc." It had a Stillwater, Okla., address.

Jim Treat of Tulsa told of the club Tuesday and said it was unannounced and in violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules. Treat said Stanley was implicated and had knowledge of dispersing funds.

Dean Stewart of Broken Bow and Alvin Roberts of Tulsa joined Lewis Wednesday in substantiating Treat's contention, the World said.

Stanley said Wednesday night that "something of this nature should not be tried in the newspapers. It should be presented to the proper authorities." The World said.

"I feel confident, if and when such a presentation is made, that the situation can be explained in a satisfactory manner," the quotation continued.

Hudson Rolls Perfect Game, Grabs Lead

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Defending champion Tommy Hudson of Akron, Ohio, rolled a perfect game in his third-round score of 1,996 — second best eight-game block so far — as he took the lead in the $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association National Championship Wednesday.

Hudson put together games of 201, 228, 279, 213, 234, 265, 300 and 246 in amassing a 93-pin lead over second-place George Pappas of Charlotte, N.C. Hudson's 24-game total was 5,518; Pappas', 5,425.

"I used a new ball for the first two games and shot 201 and 228, but that was nothing compared to the 250s being shot by the other guys," Hudson said. "So I pulled out an older ball that had a wider track area on it, and bang, I shot a 279."

His perfect game was the fourth in the tournament. John Reeser of Daly City, Calif., Fred Conner of Mar Vista, Calif., and Dennis Lane of Kingsport, Tenn. had 300 games Tuesday.

Mark Roth of North Arlington, N.J., the 1977 PBA Player of the Year, dropped from second to third at 5,401, followed by Warren Nelson of Downey, Calif., 5,387 and Bossie Huber of St. Louis, 5,379.

The field of 264 was cut to the high 64 who roll today in an eight-game block that will cut the field to 24 for match play Friday.

The top six bowlers will bowl in Sunday's televised finals for the $15,000 first prize.

Treat said he notified the Big Eight Conference by telegram of his allegations. Chuck Neinas, Big Eight commissioner, said later Wednesday he not received the telegram.

The NCAA permits booster clubs only if they are sanctioned and administered by the school in question.

Stewart, Lewis and Roberts said they joined the club in 1977.

Local Super Stars Signup Under Way

Men and women, ages 16 and up, may sign up through the remainder of the month to enter this summer's Lubbock Super Stars competition at Maxey Park.

Interested participants may obtain information and entry blanks at any municipal community center or sporting goods store. The annual event is sponsored by the Lubbock Parks and Recreation Department.

A $5 entry fee is required no later than 10 p.m. July 1. All competition will be completed on one day. Men in the 16-18, 31-33 and 34-36 age groups will open the four-day session at 2 p.m. Sunday July 9. A week later, men in the 19-21, 22-24, 25-27 and 28-30 groups will compete. On July 23, the 37-39, 40-42 and 43-and-up men will compete. Women of all ages will compete the following week. All entries will receive a Super Stars T-shirt.

Each contestant shall choose seven of 12 events in which to participate. Awards will be given to the top three places in each age group. Entry fees are not refundable after July 1.

Stewart, an automobile dealer, said he was on the board of directors of the club, while Roberts claims to have been a member.

Stewart and Roberts said they attended club functions at which Stanley spoke, the World said. Stewart and Roberts said they did not know if Stanley dispersed any funds.

"But for him to say he doesn't know anything about the club is a lie," Stewart was quoted as saying. "He came to a cocktail party the club had before one of the home games last season and thanked everyone for their help."

Roberts, who is president of an authorized OSU booster club (Posse Club of Tulsa) said Stanley knew of the club. "He spoke to us twice at gatherings at the Stillwater Country Club," he said.

Stewart said he withdrew from the club "because I could never find out where the money was going. As far as I know there never was any accounting or book-keeping records of how the money was spent."

Stewart was quoted as saying that he was a $1,000-a-year member. Lewis said he was a $500-a-year member.

Treat says that at one time the club had 187 members, mostly from Oklahoma City.

Rosul Helps Memphis' 4-1 Soccer Win

By The Associated Press
The Memphis Rogues may not win many more North American Soccer League matches this season, but for Roman Rosul Wednesday night's 4-1 victory over the San Jose Earthquakes will do for now.

Rosul, an all-America forward from Cleveland State, knocked in three goals to help the Rogues to only its fifth victory in 16 outings.

Rosul scored two of his goals in the first half, then completed the three-goal evening at 79:05 with an assist by Paul D'Agostino.

Henry McCulley scored first for Memphis at 15:10 on an unassisted kick from about 30 yards out.

Rosul's first score came at the 26-minute mark with assists from forwards Jimmy Husband and Tony Field. Field was credited with an assist on Rosul's second goal at 33:05.

The Earthquakes' only goal came on a penalty kick by Ilija Mitic at 33:05.

In other NASL matches Washington beat New England 2-1, Tampa Bay stopped Chicago 5-4, Houston edged Oakland 3-2, Seattle got past San Diego 3-2 and Detroit defeated Colorado 2-0.

Washington goalkeeper Bill Irwin withstood heavy New England pressure in the final minutes of play to preserve the victory for the Diplomats. Paul Cannell and Ken Mokojoja scored for Washington while New England's Keith Weller scored on a penalty kick.

Tampa Bay tallied three second-half goals as the Rowdies handed Chicago its seventh straight defeat at home. The Sting has won only two of 16 matches.

Gerry Morielli's goal with 13 minutes remaining provided the Houston Hurricane with its triumph over the Oakland Stompers while Micky Cave scored two goals to lead the Seattle Sounders over the San Diego Sockers, including a tie-breaking marker at 47:50.

Goalie Steve Harkwick picked up his sixth shutout of the season in the Detroit Express' whitewash of the Caribous of Colorado.

NBA Delays Action On Dallas

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Roy Boe's back is squarely up against the wall.

For years a master at juggling his creditors, Boe now faces the prospect of losing control of his basketball team, the New Jersey Nets, as well as his hockey team, the New York Islanders, unless he can put his financial house in order—and soon.

Boe may have to sell his principal partnership in one of those teams in order to stay in charge of the other. Or he could lose them both.

Boe, whose debts are estimated at more than $25 million, was told Tuesday that he had until July 18 to come up with a viable plan of economic reorganization for the Islanders or else face the revocation of his franchise.

On Wednesday, the National Basketball Association's Board of Governors gave Boe a July 28 deadline to show that he can meet his basketball-related debts — some $7 million or more — or else face league sanctions which could ultimately mean the loss of the franchise.

The Governors, at the opening session of their annual summer meetings, adopted a resolution authorizing NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien to take actions necessary "to begin to implement all remedies and procedures available. . . to protect all the rights and interests of the NBA and its member teams, including the termination of the New Jersey Nets franchise."

The move is being pursued under terms of the 1976 expansion agreement rather than the NBA by-laws. The agreement allowed the Nets and three other clubs admitted into the NBA from the American Basketball Association.

This way, only a majority vote would be needed to revoke the Nets' franchise and only the 18 older NBA clubs would vote on the matter — not the other ex-ABA teams, who have a strong vested interest in keeping the Nets afloat since they would have to pick up the Nets' share of common debts, a sizeable sum.

Harvey Benjamin, an attorney representing the NBA, said the league would shortly issue a 30-day notice required by law in cases where someone is in default. The league contends Boe is in default in several obligations, especially to former players.

"We have to start the process to terminate the franchise, if that is what is ultimately decided to do," explained Benjamin. "This is the start of that process."

Another vote will be taken July 28 to determine the future of the Nets — with or without Boe, who owns 25 percent of the club and may try to raise enough money from his partners to buoy the team.

Ironically, Boe's woes could be a blessing for Buffalo Braves co-owner John Y. Brown, who received a 20-day extension from the NBA Wednesday regarding his plans for relocation of his franchise.

If the Nets fold, Brown could move the Braves to New Jersey, where they would eventually play in the 20,000-seat arena planned in the Meadowlands Sports Complex. Brown reacted enthusiastically to that idea, saying he would gladly pay a $4 million territorial indemnity to the New York Knicks if he could move to the Meadowlands.

At this point that is only conjecture, however. The three cities still in the running to land the Braves, according to

Brown and O'Brien, are Dallas, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Louisville.

Co-owner Harry T. Mangurian and club president Norm Sonju are on record as favoring Dallas.

HE AIN'T HEAVY—Texas Rangers second baseman Bump Wills falls on Chet Lemon of the Chicago White Sox during a first-inning pickoff attempt in Chicago Wednesday night. Lemon was safe, in spite of the added weight of the play. (AP Laserphoto)

White Sox Trip Rangers 4-1

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox are two games below the .500 mark. But manager Bob Lemon isn't complaining because the Sox 28-30 record puts them just 2½ games out of first place.

"I don't care about .500. To be in first place and be .490 that's all right with me," Lemon joked after Ron Schueler and Jim Willoughby teamed up Wednesday night to three-hit the Texas Rangers 4-1. It was the Sox' 16th victory in their last 18 games.

In the wacky world of the American League's Western Division, Oakland and Kansas City are in a virtual tie for first place and both are just three games above .500. Texas, at 30-28, is one-half game out and California, 30-30, is 1½ games behind.

"It's a blessing" to have such a mediocre record and be so close to the division lead, said Texas manager Billy Hunter. "I just feel that all the clubs (in our division) are not doing near their potential. We just try to make it interesting for the fans. The only thing is, it kills the manager."

"I think everybody's had their pitching carrying the clubs. The hitters haven't got it going yet," said Lemon.

Schueler, 2-1, carried the load for Chicago. Making only his second start for the White Sox after being signed as a free agent in the off-season, he no-hit the Rangers until Toby Harrah's one-out single in the sixth. And he shut them out until center fielder Henry Cruz spiked himself going for John Lowenstein's deep fly and fell as Lowenstein circled the bases for an inside-the-park homer in the eighth.

"After the sixth inning, Lemon asked me if I was tired. I said 'a little, but keep me in there.' I had a good seventh inning" when he struck out two, said Schueler. His best pitches were a sidearm curve to right-handed hitters and an overhand curve to lefties.

"I asked him at the end of seven. He said 'I'm out of gas but I've got good stuff.' If the fellow hadn't slipped in center field, he might have gotten out of that inning," said Lemon.

Willoughby came on after Jim Sundberg singled and got his seventh save by retiring all five batters he faced.

"Schueler was good. I haven't really determined whether it's the pitching or the hitting. We got one hit last night and three tonight," Hunter said.

"What's the answer? I don't know," said Texas' Richie Zisk, who played for the White Sox last season and struck out twice Wednesday night. "If I had the answer I'd tell Billy Hunter. I'd go out and buy six cases of it immediately."

Chicago scored in the first when Ralph Garr walked and was forced out by Alan Bannister. Loser Jon Matlack, 5-7, had Bannister picked off, but second-baseman Bump Wills dropped first-baseman Mike Hargrove's throw as Bannister slid in safely. Chet Lemon's single scored Bannister.

A single by Garr, a triple by Bannister, who had three hits, and a single by Lemon added two runs in the third. Garr's double and Bannister's single finished Chicago's scoring in the seventh.

Streaks Abound In American

By The Associated Press

Streaking may not be very popular these days elsewhere, but it is the going craze in the American League.

Actually, the streaking by the Baltimore Orioles, Milwaukee Brewers, Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox, along with several individual players, has been done fully clothed and with the approval of everybody in the league except their opponents.

The Orioles remained unbeaten in June by taking their 13th straight game and 12th this month, a 5-2 decision over California Wednesday as Jim Palmer won his sixth in a row. Palmer, 34, hasn't been scored on by anyone except the Angels since May 20 and has a 0.30 earned run average since then.

"When you're going like this, you have got to be doing something right," said the three-time Cy Young Award winner, who saw his shutout bid end in the seventh inning when Carlos Lopez misplayed a ball in center field, leading to two runs, one earned. "But you also need the breaks and support from the other guys."

"Once you reach the sixth or seventh inning with a shutout, you obviously try for one," added Palmer, who's tossed five shutouts already this season. "But I've always said shutouts are pure luck."

But a prolonged winning string like the Orioles' involves both luck and a great deal of skill.

"The streak means nothing," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver. "If we pick up three or four games on Boston, that will mean something."

Despite their triumphant ways, the Orioles have gained just 3½ games on first-place Boston in the AL East.

The Red Sox increased their latest winning streak to six with a 9-0 whitewashing of Oakland, while Milwaukee extended its victory skid to eight with a doubleheader sweep of Toronto, 7-5 and 5-0, and the White Sox won for the fourth straight time and the 16th in 18 outings with a 4-1 beating of Texas.

At the other end of the streaking spectrum, the world's largest high-wheel bicycle, owned by a New Canaan, Conn., collector of antique bikes, cost $3,500 to buy and restore.

trum, Seattle dropped its seventh in a row, an 11-9 10-inning loss to the New York Yankees. Cleveland's David Clyde saw his four-game win string snapped by Minnesota, 8-2, and Kansas City stopped Detroit 7-1 to edge into first place in the AL West by .001 percentage points.

Red Sox 9, A's 0

Oakland's winless skid reached seven as the A's slipped from the top in the West. The Red Sox used Luis Tiant's four-hitter and homers by Jim Rice and Carl Yastrzemski to capture their 16th victory in the last 20 games.

Yastrzemski's homer, a three-run shot, was the 370th of his career, tying him for 23rd place with Gil Hodges on the all-time slugging list. It also propelled him past Billy Williams into 21st place on the RBI list with 1,477.

Brewers 7-5, Blue Jays 5-0

Milwaukee swept Toronto with Gorman Thomas smashing his 14th homer of the year to highlight the Brewers' opening-game victory and Sixto Lezcano getting three hits to back the shutout pitching of Jerry Augustine and Randy Stein in the nightcap.

"When I took over this club I thought we could play .500 ball or possibly better," said Brewers manager George Bamberger. "Now I think we can play the 'possibly better'."

"We have good depth this year, which means we don't have to go with the same nine men night after night. Tonight we rested Lezcano in the opener and didn't have to use Bando at third all night."

Bando played first base in both games as the Brewers moved eight games over .500. Despite their winning streak, Milwaukee has gained just one game on Boston.

Toronto lost its ninth straight.

Yankees 11, Mariners 9, 10 innings

Seattle looked as if it was about to win for the first time at Yankee Stadium, taking a three-run lead into the eighth and then grabbing a 9-7 edge in the 10th on Leon Roberts' pinch-hit homer and Ruppert Jones' sacrifice fly.

It was Paul Blair, however, who ended a negative streak and gave New York the game. Blair had been 0-for-23 against right-handers when he hit a three-run homer off Enrique Romo with his team down 9-8 and two out in the 10th.

"I didn't realize I was 0-for-23," said Blair. "Most of the time I'm not in there against them. But Billy's got so much confidence in me. He rebuilds by confidence every day. I was only hitting .190 and I was 0-for-6 and I'd never faced Romo before."

Actually, Martin wasn't so super-confident in Blair; "I didn't have anyone left," he said.

Twins 8, Indians 2

Clyde, 4-1, was beaten for the first time this season after returning from the minor leagues as Dan Ford hit a two-run home run and rookie Roger Erickson, 7-4, went the distance.

Royals 7, Tigers 1

Paul Splittorff tossed a nifty four-hitter and Amos Otis had a two-run homer to boost the Royals ahead of Oakland and into first place in the West.

Frenship Ace Gets Two In One Day

By SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Although he is not quite big enough to grip a regular size club, Duane Griggs has enough gusto to earn himself two hole-in-ones — all in the same day.

Only 15 years old, Griggs used a 5-wood in a hole No. 9 at Treasure Island golf course early Tuesday morning.

That afternoon he hit the jackpot again, this time on the 90-yard hole No. 18. Just barely 5-3, the sandy blond kid admitted that he plays with girls' clubs because he is small for his age.

Playing alongside Homer Franklin on the 181-yard ninth hole, Griggs did not see his tee shot go in the hole. "It was early in the morning (10 a.m.) and I couldn't see my ball because of the dew on the ground," remarked Griggs.

"I couldn't believe it," blurted out Griggs.

After accomplishing that unbelievable task, he said, "I tried to shake it off and play my game, but I got too nervous and muffed the next hole."

By the time he reached the final hole, Griggs was calm enough to do it again, this time with a sand wedge.

"I decided to try something new (on the last hole) that I read about in a golf book," claimed young Griggs.

Attempting to get a backspin on the ball, he changed his grip and—bingo. "I couldn't believe that one, I watched it for a long time," confided the grinning youngster.

The tremendous performance was not totally new to Griggs; he scored his first hole in one last April on the same course.

Treasure Island seems to hold some magic for his younger brother also. Cody Griggs, 12 years old, aced the first hole he ever played. As if that were not plenty, Cody proceeded to plug the 18th hole with a putter on a different outing.

The older Griggs plays golf at Frenship High School. "I played last string last year," he admitted, "but I want to play professional... if I can."

Perhaps the Griggs brothers have found some mystical secret left behind by Captain Cooke that helps both of them accomplish the unusual — again and again and again.

By the time he reached the final hole, Griggs was calm enough to do it again, this time with a sand wedge.

"I decided to try something new (on the last hole) that I read about in a golf book," claimed young Griggs.

Attempting to get a backspin on the ball, he changed his grip and—bingo. "I couldn't believe that one, I watched it for a long time," confided the grinning youngster.

The tremendous performance was not totally new to Griggs; he scored his first hole in one last April on the same course.

Treasure Island seems to hold some magic for his younger brother also. Cody Griggs, 12 years old, aced the first hole he ever played. As if that were not plenty, Cody proceeded to plug the 18th hole with a putter on a different outing.

The older Griggs plays golf at Frenship High School. "I played last string last year," he admitted, "but I want to play professional... if I can."

Perhaps the Griggs brothers have found some mystical secret left behind by Captain Cooke that helps both of them accomplish the unusual — again and again and again.

Mantle Proud To Approach 50

By MILTON RICHMAN
DALLAS (UPI)—Every morning he wakes up, Mickey Mantle, who is 46, counts his blessings. He never thought he'd make it this far. "I'm almost 50," he says. "If I knew I was gonna live this long, I'd have taken better care of myself." He shows no trace of becoming a victim of Hodgkins disease, which was responsible for the early deaths of his father, two uncles and a grandfather. Mickey Mantle has had to cross over that perilous chasm of having grown accustomed to the thunderous cheers and adulation of the crowd and then suddenly no longer being a part of it. He has made that transition exceptionally well. He looks like a million bucks, feels twice as good, and doesn't have to worry about how he's going to come up with the next mortgage payment that way so many other ex-ballplayers do. "I'm lucky," he says. "My name happened to be Mickey Mantle. People still recognize me in airports. Maybe it's because of the TV commercials I make. Whatever it is, I don't have the feeling like I'm suddenly out of the limelight." Mantle maintains a busy calendar, keeping involved with appearances, speaking engagements and with such things as a mobile home community in Wildwood, Fla. His chief source of income, however, comes from his job as vice president of marketing with an insurance company of Dallas. "It's mostly public relations," he says.

Mantle earns more money now than he did with the Yankees, who were paying him $100,000 a year when he quit in 1968. "The one regret I have is that I couldn't play past 35," he says. "My last three years... I was over the hill. I couldn't run anymore and I couldn't swing the bat right-handed. If I didn't have all those physical problems, though, I think I could've hit 600 home runs." As it was, he wound up with 536 and a lifetime batting average of .298. During most of his career with the Yankees, Mantle was that shy, quiet kid from whom you usually had trouble getting more than six words. All that has changed. He's much more outgoing now. The former Yankee center fielder also plays a great deal of golf, although his short game will never get him into the U.S. Open. Two men Mantle frequently speaks about are his father, Elven, whom everybody called "Mutt," and former Cincinnati outfielder Harry Craft, his first manager in the majors. "My dad was the one who made me a ballplayer. He died when he was 39. His two brothers also died in their 30s and my dad's father lived only until he was 50 or so. Hodgkins disease was responsible. That's why I didn't think I'd make 40. I don't worry about it anymore, though." As far as Craft, who managed his first two years in pro ball, with Independence, Kan., and Joplin, Mo., Mantle says he couldn't have broken in under a finer man. "He was patient and understanding. Then when I went up to the Yankees, I was 18 years old, and coming from Commerce, Okla., that was a helluva big step. That's why I clammed up. I just didn't want to look like I was sounding off." The Yankees send Mantle back to the minors briefly but after he came up to stay, Billy Martin became his regular roommate. An unusually strong bond grew between them and still exists today. "We just hit it off right away," Mantle says. "He's like part of my family now. We enjoy doing things together like hunting and fishing. I feel the same way about Whitey (Ford)." Mantle names three accomplishments that brought him the most satisfaction in baseball. Winning the Triple Crown in 1956 was one. The other two were being named to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown on the first ballot four years ago and having his No. 7 Yankee uniform retired along with those of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio. But there's something in his life that he's even more proud of than all of that. "Staying married, and sticking with my family," he says, referring to Marilyn Louise Johnson Mantle, who has been his wife the past 28 years, and their four sons. "Pretty good for an Okie, isn't it?" says Mickey Mantle.

Heavyweight Bout Proves Successful In Ring, On Tube

AP Sports Writer
ABC's telecast of the Ken Norton-Larry Holmes heavyweight fight was a success artistically—it was a marvelous fight—and also in the ratings—which is what really counts. The bout did not have the giant publicity buildup that heavyweight championships usually get. Muhammad Ali was not involved. Norton is not a particularly colorful figure. And who knew about Holmes? And ABC was going against one of the basic rules of TV sports—a boxing match without Ali will not sell in prime time. But it did sell. It sold enough to make Friday night ABC's biggest night of the week in the ratings. Norton-Holmes out-drew such network mainstays as The Fonz, Laverne & Shirley, and Charlie's Angels. And it completely overwhelmed the entertainment competition on the other networks. Norton-Holmes pulled a 19.7 rating, meaning 19.7 percent of homes with TVs were watching, and a 40 share, meaning 40 percent of the TV sets in use were tuned to ABC between 7-10 p.m. CDT. Both CBS and NBC, with a lineup of situation comedies, adventure and detective shows, averaged about a 23 share each. During the final hour, when the Norton-Holmes bout was in progress, ABC drew a 26 rating and a whopping 47 share. That means that almost half the people in the country who were watching TV were tuned in to the fight. ABC estimates that 45 million people saw some portion of the telecast. Those numbers do not approach the records set by Ali's fights with Earnie Shavers and Richard Dunn, but they are awfully impressive nonetheless. And if Norton-Holmes did well, wait till Ali's rematch with Leon Spinks in September.

Black Coach Faces Ouster At St. Louis
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ron Coleman, the first black head coach in the history of St. Louis University basketball, says he may not be back at the helm of the Billikens next fall. "I don't know what's going to happen or what I'm going to do," said Coleman, whose one-year contract expires June 30. "The situation here seems to get worse day by day. Is it worth staying for? I deserve the opportunity to coach next year." Coleman, who guided St. Louis to a 7-20 record in the tough Metro Conference, said he has been told by athletic director Dick McDonald of pressure to terminate his job. Evidence of lack of support is the absence of summer jobs for his players, he said. And a bone of contention among Billikens supporters was the school's failure to land any of the top high school athletes on its recruiting list this spring. McDonald, 44, declined to tip his hand on his plans but did not rule himself out as a possible successor to the 32-year-old Coleman. "I'm against coaching again," said McDonald, the former coach at St. Peter's College in Jersey City, N.J., "but as of July 1, if there is no one else, I may be it." Coleman, a former all-Big Eight star at the University of Missouri, was hired in 1977 to succeed Randy Albrecht as St. Louis' third coach in nine years. Previously, he coached at the high school level and was a Billikens assistant for three years. "One year is hardly adequate," maintained Coleman, whose team lost two games by a single point and three others by two points in 1977-78.

Buick Open Kicks Off Without Money Leaders

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — The Buick Open returns to Warwick Hills Country Club today for the first time in nine years and the golfers who teed it up found the course had changed as much as the tournament. The tournament used to be a regular stop on the PGA tour before the sponsors dropped out. Now, the best the PGA can do is schedule the event opposite the U.S. Open, the country's most cherished golf trophy. That means names like Nicklaus, Player, Palmer and Watson played in Denver today while pros like Jerry Heard, Orville Moody and Homero Blancas scrambled for the $20,000 winner's share of the $100,000 purse in this Flint suburb about 60 miles north of Detroit. They found the course had been shortened by more than 200 yards to 7,001 yards and agreed they would have to fiddle it, not fight it. "The changes are nice, but I liked the course the way it was, too," said Bob Goaly. "Number 17 is a good change, though. The old 230-yarder was a little long." Blancas agreed that the par-3 17th hole, over a lake, was an improvement now at 185 yards. "But even though the course is short in yardage now, I think it's gonna play longer," Blancas said. "It's got maturity now." "I remember when I played here in '68 the course was very hard," Moody said. "I remember No. 18 out here, hitting a drive and 7-iron. Now I hit a drive and a 2-iron." Julius Boros holds the tournament record of 274 — 14 under par, but Moody said he felt it might take better than that to win this time. Moody, the 1969 National Open winner who admits he'd rather be in Denver than Grand Blanc this week, had to be considered among the favorites on the eve of the tournament after firing a 68 in Wednesday's pro-am event. Heard, who won the Atlanta Open just three weeks ago, also was given a good shot at the top prize here inasmuch as he played dozens of rounds at Warwick Hills while recovering from being struck by lightning last year. "This is a fairly weak field," Heard said. "The greens here are fast and hold shots well. I've played a lot of golf here and it suits me real well." The tournament name has been changed as well as the course. For the record, it is the Buick-Goodwrench Open, reflecting the addition of a new co-sponsor.

Pros Gripe Over Way Open Courses Altered
DENVER (AP) — There are golf tournaments and there is the U.S. Open. Any resemblance between the two is purely coincidental. "I don't know why they can't leave traditional golf courses alone," complained Jack Nicklaus, preparing to tee off today in the 78th U.S. Open Championship over the revamped Cherry Hills course. "Everything is done to keep making courses tougher and tougher. There's no sport where players are not bigger, stronger and better, yet golfers keep shooting the same scores in the Open." "We have no way to relate our skills with those of the great players of the past. Why is it a crime to shoot a low score in the Open?" He and other big hitters of the modern game would have cherished the opportunity to drive the 348-yard, par-4 first hole, as Arnold Palmer did in the final round in 1960 to trigger his dramatic winning surge from 7 shots back. But they won't get the chance. Since that day, the hole has been lengthened 50 yards, the tee set back to form a dogleg and the green put out of the reach of the hottest sluggers, including Tom Weiskopf and Andy Bean. New strategic hazards have been sewn into the layout since Arnie made his now legendary charge 18 years ago. The U.S. Golf Association disapproves of athletes taking liberties with its Open courses. So golf's horde of sun-chasing gypsies play one game when they come up to the Open. That's the reason you normally can hear the pros screaming from here to Nantucket. "The fairways are so narrow that you have to walk them Indian fashion single-file. When you applaud you have to move your hands up and down," they said of Oakland Hills outside Detroit in 1951 when only Ben Hogan ad one other man, Clayton Heafner, had a round under par. Local softball enthusiasts formed an association to promote softball throughout the city. Membership is solicited from players and non players alike — to improve existing parks, secure new ball parks and to work with City Parks and Recreation Dept. in any way possible. Downey, Calif. Each of the 109 contestants will shoot six more qualifying games today, leaving 24 finalists for eight games of match play tonight and 16 more Friday. The top five finishers will compete Saturday afternoon for the $6,000 first prize. A 264 second game Wednesday night followed by a 236 helped Danli take the first-day lead. Her first game score was 188 with her final three games being 215, 203 and 209.

Ex-Indiana Cager Realizes Pro Game Changes Quickly

The Indianapolis Star
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana Pacer coach Bobby Leonard had just announced Wayne Radford was his second pick in this year's college basketball draft when the crowd on the ninth-floor pool deck at the downtown Hilton Hotel stopped eating and drinking to cheer loudly. Quickly, there were bodies three-deep in a semicircle around the 22-year-old Indiana University guard. Microphones were thrust forward. A dozen television and radio interviews were conducted. Middle-aged businessmen in three-piece suits waited like schoolboys for autographs. Radford had been chosen 27th in the National Basketball Association draft last Friday, and he was going to play as a pro in his hometown for more money than he had ever known. It was one of those moments that never return. Five minutes later and one block away, in the lobby of the Indiana National Bank Tower, a tall, young man in a dark business suit walked purposely toward a row of elevators. No one turned to stare or wish him well or shake his hand. In fact, no one recognized him, even though he, too, was an IU guard who was picked in the second round of the NBA draft. His picture had been on the cover of Sports Illustrated, and he once was sought for autographs. But that was three years ago. "Yes, I know how Wayne is feeling right now," said John Laskowski. "It's an exciting time. You think of how you've watched professional basketball for years on television and that now you're actually going to be a part of it. Oh yes, I know how he feels." Laskowski, a native of South Bend, was drafted by the Chicago Bulls in 1975. He was a starter at guard his rookie season and averaged 9.5 points a game. Before his second season, Ed Badger replaced Dick Motta as Chicago coach, and Laskowski became a substitute, averaging only five points a game. Before the start of his third season, he was cut from the team. "The first thing you have to learn about prosketball is that the situation changes so very quickly," the 6-foot-5 Laskowski said. "You're a valuable property one day and expendable the next." "When the Bulls released me last October, I waited 10 days to see if any other team wanted me. I could have made contact with other teams, but I didn't want to just hang on." "The first night after I was cut, I couldn't sleep because of worrying about what I would do. The second night, I couldn't sleep either, but his time because I was so excited about starting my real life."

SF's Blue Gets Help In 2-1 Win Over Phils

By The Associated Press
When Vida Blue was pitching for the vastly depleted Oakland A's in recent years, the running wisecrack was usually, "Blue, then who?"

Now that he's pitching for the San Francisco Giants these days, nobody asks such questions.

The Giants have one of the best staffs in baseball and those infrequent times when Blue is in hot water, there's usually someone efficient like Randy Moffitt to bail him out.

Like Wednesday.
"That was a super job, just beautiful," said Blue after the Giants' ace relief pitcher preserved a 2-1 victory for the Giants over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Blue was aiming for his first National League shutout before running into trouble in the ninth. Pinch-hitter Dave Johnson doubled and scored on Jerry Martin's single and after Martin was moved to second base on a sacrifice, Moffitt came into the game.

"When I was throwing in the bullpen, I didn't think my slider was good at all," said Moffitt. "I said to myself, 'If there's one day I'd like to see Vida go nine innings, it's today.'"

But Moffitt didn't waste any time, striking out two dangerous batters in Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski on a total of seven pitches.

"I guess I got my adrenalin up, or something," said Moffitt. "I had a great slider once I got on the mound."

The Phillies were unable to get a runner past first base until the ninth against Blue. The left-hander walked one batter, the first one he faced, and struck out two.

Phillies starter Larry Christenson pitched a four-hitter, with three of the hits coming in the first inning when the Giants scored their runs. The right-hander retired 20 consecutive batters between the first and eighth innings.

The Giants failed to hit a ball out of the infield during the 20-batter stretch. Blue broke Christenson's string with a single to right field in the eighth.

Reds 3, Cubs 1
Manny Sarmiento, making only his third start of the season, teamed with two relievers on a four-hitter to lead Cincinnati over Chicago. Sarmiento, one of the Reds' most effective relievers this year, struck out four and walked two in five innings of two-hit ball. Dave Tomlin and Doug Bair blanked the Cubs the rest of the way with Bair recording his 11th save.

The Reds scored all the runs they needed in the first inning on a pair of RBI grounders and Dan Driessen's run-scoring single.

Dodgers 5, Mets 3
Bill Russell's two-run, tie-breaking double in the seventh triggered Los Angeles over New York. Steve Garvey belted two home runs off loser Jerry Koosman, his second homer tying the game in the sixth inning.

Pirates 6, Astros 4
Dave Parker slammed a three-run homer and reliever Ed Whitson gained his first victory of the season as Pittsburgh rallied from a four-run deficit to beat Houston.

Trailing 4-0, the Pirates scored four fifth-inning runs on a solo home run by Ed Ott and Parker's three-run blast. The Pirates took the lead in the sixth on a two-out double by Garner and pinch-hitter Manny Sanguillen's RBI single off loser J.R. Richard.

Braves 7, Cardinals 1
Jeff Burroughs and Dale Murphy belted home runs to power Atlanta over St. Louis. Adrian Devine, making only his second start of the year, stopped the Cardinals on five hits before giving way to reliever Rick Camp in the eighth inning.

Burroughs drilled his sixth homer of the year over the right field fence in Atlanta Stadium to open the fourth and, one out later, Murphy hit his to the same spot off Cardinal ace Bob Forsch, 7-6. It was Forsch's fourth defeat in his last five decisions.

Padres 6-1, Expos 2-0
Gene Tenace knocked in two runs and Dave Winfield hit a solo homer to pace San Diego's first game victory over Montreal. Eric Rasmussen pitched 61-3 innings to gain the victory while John D'Acquisto finished up for his third save of the year.

The Padres completed a sweep in the nightcap behind Gaylord Perry's four-hitter and Winfield's RBI single.

Eastwick Changes Caps; Twins To Keep Carew

By The Associated Press
Jay Johnstone is a New York Yankee. Rawly Eastwick is a Philadelphia Phillie and Rod Carew is still a Minnesota Twin.

Carew, the six-time American League batting champion, was taken off the trading market by Twins president Calvin Griffith Wednesday. Griffith said Carew, the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1977, would remain in a Minnesota uniform, at least for the remainder of the season.

While Griffith was pulling his prize merchandise off the block, Philadelphia and New York swung into action as the Thursday midnight trading deadline draws closer.

The Phillies acquired relief specialist Rawly Eastwick from New York in exchange for outfielder-first baseman Jay Johnstone and minor league outfielder Bobby Brown.

Eastwick, the National League Fireman of the Year with Cincinnati in 1976, signed a $1.1 million, five-year contract with the Yankees as a free agent last winter. He appeared in eight games this year with a 2.1 record and 3.28 earned run average.

"He'll join our relief corps," said Ozark, "and (Ron) Reed will become a starter. I just have to see what kind of condition he is in."

"The best part of the deal is the kid they got (Brown). He can run like the devil, he's a contact hitter and I think he can be a superstar."

Johnstone, a 10-year big league veteran, has a .308 average since he returned to the majors in 1974. Brown will move to the Yankees' farm club at Tacoma.

"We needed a left-handed pinch-hitter," said Yankee manager Billy Martin. Eastwick became expendable when Dick Tidrow was yanked from the starting rotation and returned to the bullpen while Johnstone could not break into the Phillies' crack outfield.

"If I had to be traded, it might as well be to a place like Philly," said Eastwick, who comes from nearby Haddonfield, N.J. "A trade was in the back of my mind, but I didn't really expect it."

"My stay with the Yankees was great. I enjoyed it tremendously. I was really happy here and I hate to leave."

Griffith, who said Monday he was trying to trade Carew at the player's request, refused to discuss his reasons for halting trade efforts. The Twins issued a brief statement saying that after talks with team executives and manager Gene Mauch, they had decided to terminate efforts to trade the 32-year-old first baseman.

Carew had given Griffith a list of five AL teams with which he would play, and Griffith received offers from four: the Kansas City Royals, Texas Rangers, Yankees and a team the Twins declined to name.

Both Carew and Mauch indicated that they weren't surprised when the trade talks were stopped.

"I really felt there wasn't enough time," said Carew. "If you're going to make a big trade you have to have time when you can really get involved and give the players that you need."

"No club in baseball could give you what Rod Carew is worth and then pay him what he is worth," said Mauch. "I never thought for an instant that Rod would be traded."

Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog agrees with Mauch.

"I didn't really think we'd get him," Herzog said. "I think Calvin did the right thing. He's got to get as much as he can for him, and apparently nobody was willing to give up half their bullpen."

"At least now, if the Twins don't draw well this year he'll have a good excuse to trade him during the winter. And now he has the whole National League to deal with, too."

Herzog was referring to the inter-league trading market which will be in full swing this winter.

"Anybody would be silly if they would not like to have Rod Carew on their club," Texas manager Billy Hunter said.

"The question is what do you have to give up to get a player like Carew — player-wise and financially?"

"I'm just glad Kansas City didn't get him," said Hunter, alluding to the fact that the Royals and Rangers are co-favorites to win the AL's West Division title.

Carew, who grew disenchanted with Griffith when the Twins' president left Larry Hise and Lyman Bostock get away in the free-agent draft without compensation, said earlier in the season he would never sign another contract with Minnesota.

But Wednesday, Carew left open the possibility for further negotiations at the end of the season.

"I'm just glad that it's over with," said Carew. "A lot has been taken off my shoulders and I really feel good."

"Hopefully, at the end of the season we can get together and talk some more about a contract settlement."

A deal involving Cleveland and San Diego also was completed Wednesday night with the Indians sending rookie reliever Dennis Kinney to the Padres for reliever Dan Spillner.

Spillner, 27, is currently 1-0 with a 4.86 ERA in 17 appearances this season. Kinney has appeared in 18 games for the Indians, compiling a 0-2 record with five saves and a 4.42 ERA.

All the players involved in both the Cleveland-San Diego and New York-Philadelphia trades had to clear waivers in their respective leagues.

Baseball Players In Big Demand Across Border

JUAREZ, Mexico (UPI) — It may not help the balance of trade any, but the United States has created an eager market south of the border for another kind of export — baseball players.

For the players defecting from the U.S. major leagues and their farm clubs into Central and South American teams, Latin-style baseball often appeals to the pioneer spirit.

For pitcher Mike Paul, who put in time with the Texas Rangers, Chicago Cubs and Cleveland Indians, the introduction to Mexican baseball was odd. That was in the summer of 1976, opening night with the Tampico Aljadores.

"The park held about 10,000, and we had about 15,000 in it," he said. "I got the first batter out on a fly."

Then the teams took a five-minute break while a railroad train pulled through the outfield.

"I said, 'Welcome to Mexico, Mike,'" he recalled.

Paul pitched 5 1/2 years of major league ball in the States. Tampico offered more money than either of the triple-A farm clubs of the Oakland A's or the San Francisco Giants, and so he made the change. After two years with Tampico, Paul is now one of four imports with the Indios of Juarez, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

He had prepared for Latin American play long before he left the major leagues in the states, leaving out his regular season experience with tours on teams from Puerto Rico and the Mexican cities of Los Mochis and Culiacan. The experience helped — some.

"When I come down here, I have to speak Spanish," he said. "My Spanish isn't real correct, but it's good enough to get by. I know how the Latin players feel when they go to the States."

The ability to speak Spanish is more of a problem for another import to the Juarez Indios, Jose Del Moral, from Puerto Rico.

"If you know Spanish," Del Moral explained, "you know what they're saying about you in the stands."

Mexican fans are an adventure in themselves, said John Matias, a tobacco chewing Hawaiian and another Juarez import.

"The fans are really great here when you're good," Matias said. "When you're bad, they're like animals."

Walt Williams, a veteran of six years in the Chicago White Sox outfield, said he finds the zeal of the Mexican crowds a refreshing change from the quiet and restrained audiences he played for in two years with a team in Tokyo, Japan.

"I like fans. I kid around with fans," he said. "I know fans are fans. They are going to boo you and they are going to cheer you."

But while the home crowds are fun, the imports agree that the road trips are not

The Indios don't travel by air, for one thing. Tours are made from Juarez by bus — with trips over Mexican roads as long as 24 hours to Mexico City and 40 hours to Villahermosa.

Still, the Juarez team is a choice berth for the American players, Paul said.

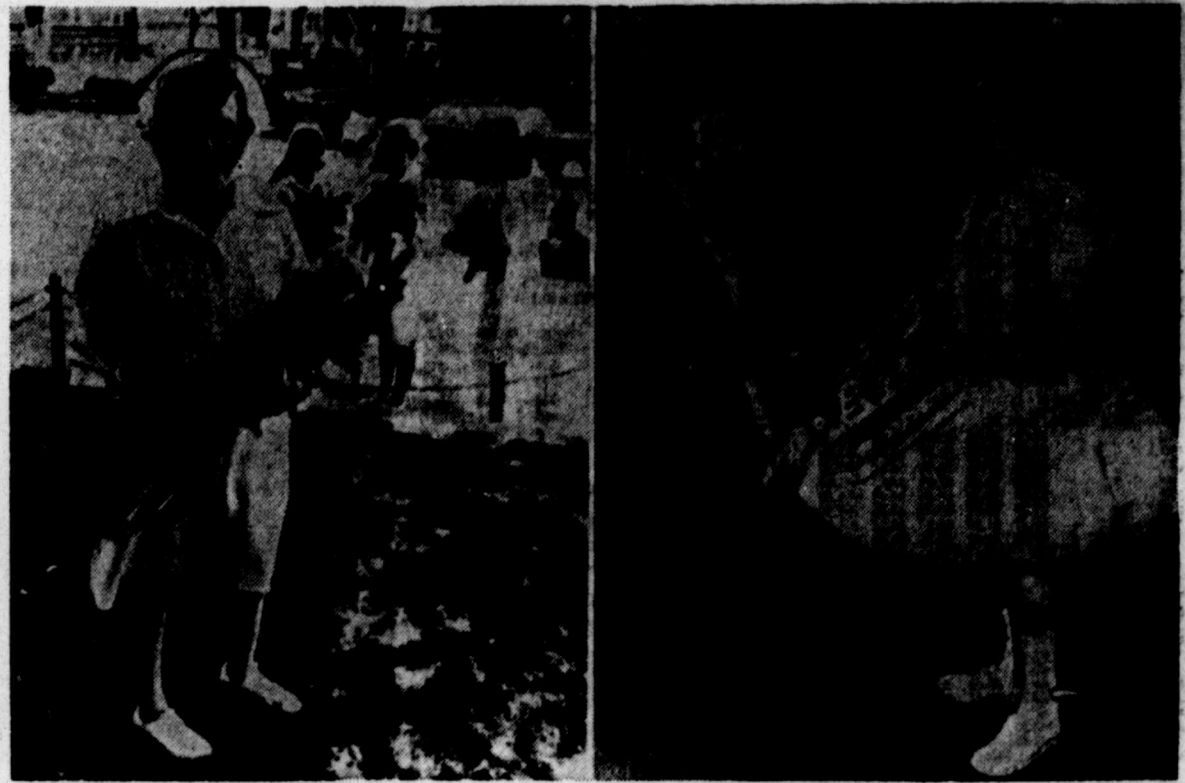

"The good thing about it for a gringo is that when you come home and get off the bus, you're close to the United States," he said. "Every gringo who comes to Mexico, seems like they want to play in Juarez, because of the beautiful ballpark, the weather is good and you're close to the states."

A 1968 graduate of the University of Arizona, Paul remembers his first year with the Texas Rangers, 1972, as the "best year I ever had in baseball in the major leagues." He was rated sixth in the American League with an earned run average of 2.17.

He is doing well in Mexico, and so is Juarez.

The Indios have double the number of wins over losses, and have the best record in the Mexican League. Paul is rated the fourth best pitcher in the league.

Paul, 32, said he plans to play two more years and then retire to a teaching position or a job in the restaurant business in Tucson, where his wife and daughter live.

A satellite is orbiting 560 miles above your head right now. Its sole purpose is to make possible worldwide communications for amateur radio buffs.

OSCAR, as it is named, is the brainchild of hams throughout the world. Messages on a unit that costs as little as $75.00 can be received from this 65-pound ball.

No series of articles about the future of citizens band radio would be complete if it did not delve into the activities of amateur radio fans. Many of them are CBers who have expanded their personal communications from the guy down the road (with whom they still talk) to a guy in Europe or Asia.

Actually, the OSCAR (Orbiting Satellite Carrying Amateur Radio) up there right now is the eighth one to have been launched by the hams, their donations and their energies. Students in classrooms of the United States, Canada, West Germany and Japan are utilizing this satellite as a means of studying the practical applications of astronomy physics, mathematics and engineering. They can use it 17 minutes daily as it passes over their particular area in its circular orbit around the earth.

"I would never have heard of telemetry, I guess, if it had not all started when my Dad got a CB unit for the family station wagon," explains Kirk Harris, 16, of Clermont, Fla., about his interest in OSCAR. "That was about seven years ago. And we grew from a mobile unit to a base station in the den of our house. The next step was into amateur radio — and now we're using the satellite. We're getting QSL cards from all over the world. It's terrific."

OSCAR is powered by batteries and uses solar cells to recharge its "heart." It cost about $45,000, all donated, much in nickels and dimes. AMSAT (Radio Amateur Satellite Corporation), a non-government, non-commercial organization, is made up of individuals in the United States, Canada, the Netherlands, Italy, Mexico, Australia, West Germany and the United Kingdom. OSCAR was launched by NASA from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California and rode piggy-back on two other satellites until it was ejected into its own orbit minutes after the launching.

The first OSCAR, incidentally, cost only $63, and lasted three weeks before it ran out of power. But that was back in 1961. The success of OSCAR has been so great, not only for students but for hams all over the world, that it is rumored that the Soviet Union will launch one this fall.

It's expected that the present OSCAR will last for about four more years. At that time AMSAT plans to put another in orbit, only this one will operate in an elliptical pattern rather than circular. The reason for this more sophisticated plan is that nine out of 10 hams are located in the northern hemisphere and the next OSCAR's pattern will pass more closely to that mass, giving probably as much as 40 minutes of communications time to the hams sending and receiving messages.

CB has added to the dimension of personal communications. And many CBers who want to expand their sphere of operations have turned to ham radio. How do you say "Good buddy" in Russian?

CPAs Debating Need For Audits

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

There's a war heating up in the button-down world of certified public accountants that could have important implications for investors, government regulators and auditors themselves. So far, the arguing has been mostly in private, but it could break into legal fighting almost any time.

The dispute centers on the need for audit committees at corporations that have stock trading in public markets. An audit committee is made up of company's directors — at least a majority of them "outside" directors who are not employed by the company — and acts as an overseer and liaison with the company's outside accountants. By July 1, every company listed on the New York Stock Exchange must have an audit committee — just about all of them already do — and there have been calls by the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants for audit committees at every publicly-owned company.

Audit committees are supposed to make accounting firms more independent of the companies they work for. The CPA's are supposed to represent the shareholders, who own the company, but in fact they are hired by the management, are approved by mostly rubber-stamp votes of the stockholders and spend most of their time working with management. The audit committee is supposed to break up that cozy relationship, although it often doesn't work that way because the outside directors themselves usually are tight with management, too.

There trend to audit committees got its greatest impetus with the revelations that hundreds of corporations had paid bribes, made political contributions or made other improper or illegal payments, while their auditors either didn't know anything about it or didn't say anything in their reports.

There isn't any argument among accountants about the value of audit committees at the biggest corporations, but there is a battle over extending the requirement to every publicly — owned company. Bernard Z. Lee, for one, is dead set against it, and he spends a lot of time explaining why.

Lee is the managing partner of Seidman & Seidman, which is about the 12th largest accounting firm in the country. He says that, if every public corporation has to have an audit committee, it will mean that the "Big Eight" firms — of which his own shop is not a member — will dominate the accounting field even more than they do now. And he says that the requirement, which is being considered by the AICPA, would make it harder to build small companies, make it more expensive to run them — and not serve much of a useful purpose.

(The "Big Eight" — names like Peat, Marwick, Mitchell; Arthur Andersen; Arthur Young; Price Waterhouse, and others — audit the books of the vast majority of the country's biggest corporations. Because of their size, they carry enormous weight in writing the rules for the profession.)

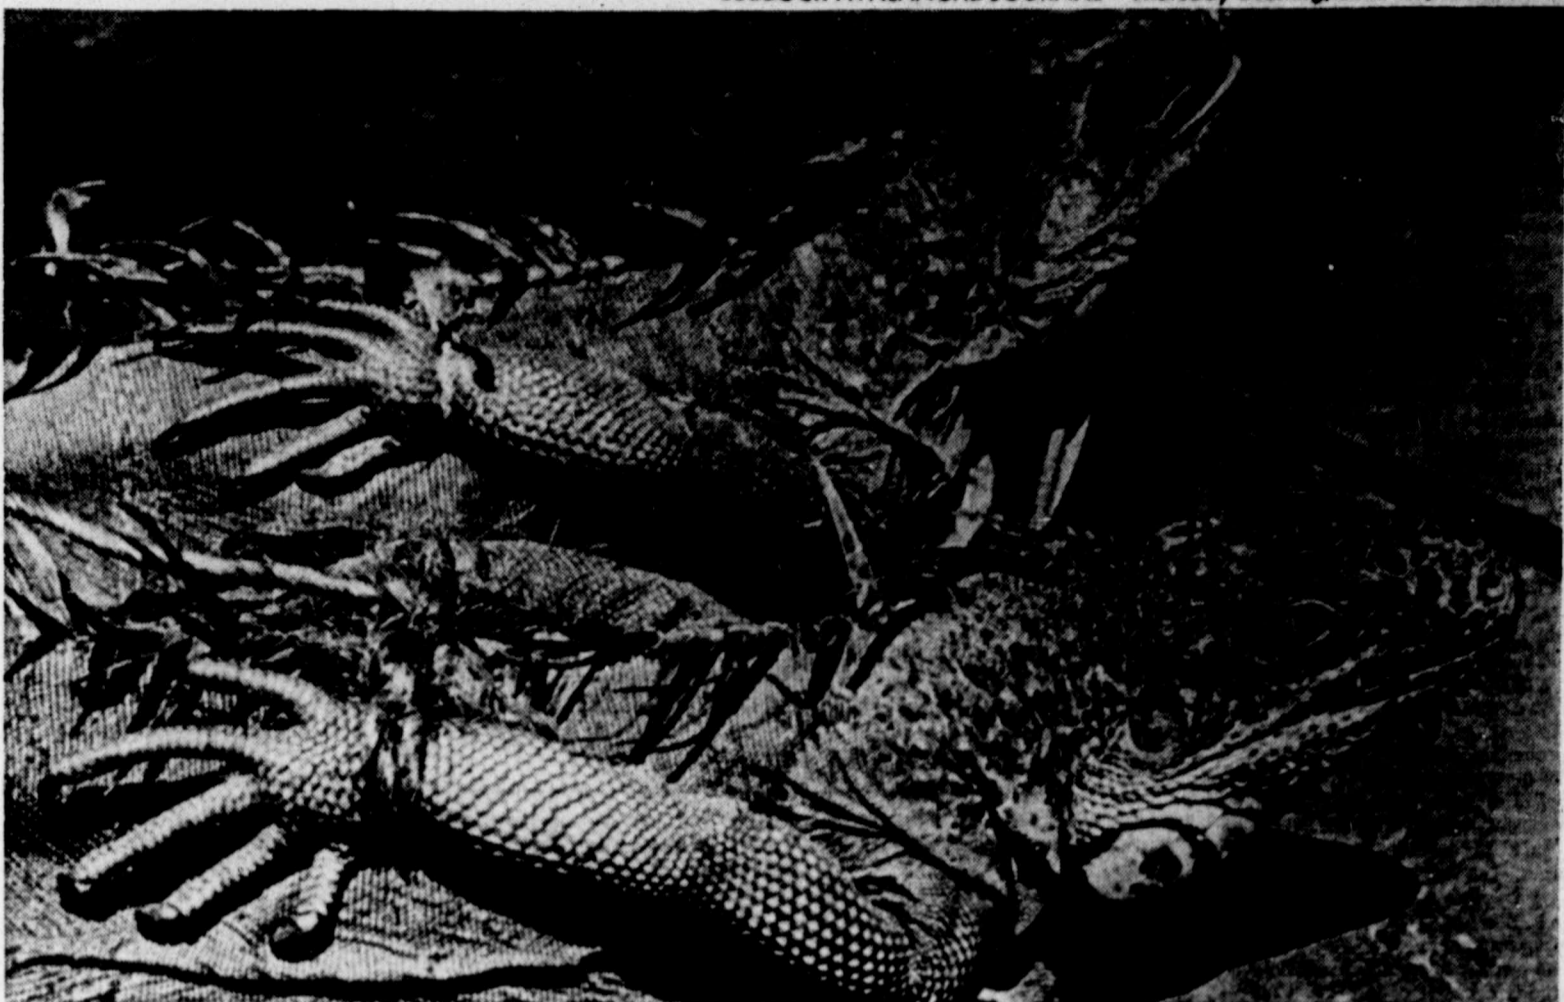

"If the purpose of the audit committees is to assure independence, it won't," Lee says. "It will just mean that the Big Eight firms will get more and more of the business. An audit committee brings a bias with it. The members don't want to take any chances, so the first thing they do is hire a Big Eight firm. Then if something isn't right, who can criticize them?"

Conceding that his chief concern is "the movement of our larger clients to the Big Eight" (although he said firms like his would probably take clients away from smaller shops), Lee said audit committees could stifle the growth of smaller companies, which usually depend on entrepreneurial skill for their success. "The nature of dealing changes when they are audit committees," he says. "They tend to be a good deal more formal. But when a person buys stock in a small company, he's usually buying management. The management could be avant garde, trying new ideas, but that's what he's looking for."

Lee said he also thinks the public could be misled by the concept of audit committees. "There shouldn't be the idea that just because there's an audit committee, the audit is great," he says. "How many qualified people are there willing to serve on boards of public corporations. There are thousands of companies that would be looking for outside directors."

"What we're saying," he added, "is that all of the factors have to be considered. I don't honestly think the solution for more disclosure is just in mandating audit committees. I think a line has to be drawn somewhere. To be honest, I don't know where that is, but I don't think this is the answer."

Banks To Finance Automakers' Projects

NEW YORK (AP)—Major U.S. banks will provide substantial financing for domestic automakers as car producers undertake large capital-spending projects to comply with mileage and emissions guidelines, an officer of the nation's largest bank predicts.

Charles J. Cavaliere, head of the auto section of Bank of America's corporate-service office here, says U.S. car makers will seek more external financing in the years ahead, with major banks the beneficiaries.

When American Motors, General Motors, Chrysler and Ford retool their plants, "banks will have substantial opportunities to participate in the financing," Cavaliere said.

The Bank of America vice president currently is preparing a study of the world's auto industry to determine the future role of U.S. banks.

Midway through his work, Cavaliere believes that U.S. automakers will look to the largest domestic banks for money on a short-and medium-term basis. In the past, the auto industry has not relied on sizeable bank loans, he said. Instead, car producers have used internal financing and large lines of credit.

New loans could reach "nine figures," he said.

Cavaliere also cited several new trends in the industry: —Graduated price boosts will become standard. "It makes more sense for Detroit to increase prices in smaller increments, like 1 to 2 percent at a time. The consumer will accept increases more if they are staggered instead of coming in one substantial increase at the beginning of the model year," he said.

—The diesel engine will receive widespread attention, but the all-electric car remains many years away. "Detroit seems pretty confident that consumers will be more inclined to purchase autos with diesel fuel because they get more miles-per-gallon and are cheaper," he said.

—The "down-sized" car is here to stay. Inroads in technology will allow Detroit to produce a first-rate small auto. "I think that the small-car market will show the largest growth in the industry," he said.

DR. LAMB

Potassium Prescribed

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor has prescribed potassium in a liquid form on a daily basis. I take a diuretic and he said my potassium level was dangerously low. My doctor told me that I need not worry about taking too much potassium. He also told me that I would have to continue taking it for the rest of my life. I'm 59.

I find this hard to believe. For one thing, I voluntarily cut back on my dosage because I felt that I was getting too much. I am now taking less than the doctor prescribes for me and I feel better than I did when I was taking exactly what he prescribed. Is there any way to determine the appropriate dosage?

DEAR READER — The kidneys normally eliminate a reasonable amount of excess potassium. That's fortunate because many of the foods we eat do contain quite a bit of potassium, particularly the fruit and vegetable group. It's only when a person also has kidney disease or is grossly overloaded with potassium, as might be given by vein, that a problem may occur. Why you feel better is another matter. Perhaps that's coincidental.

Your letter isn't completely clear whether you cut back on the liquid potassium you're taking or whether you have cut back on your diuretic. Both are related to your salt balance. To give you a better idea of how important your body salts are I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-12, Salt: Your Vital Sodium and Potassium Balance. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

I'm sure what your doctor meant was that as long as you had to take a diuretic you would require some additional potassium. That's not too surprising. You might talk to him about your problem and see if you can't get a reasonable amount of your potassium from fresh orange juice or fresh fruit. Usually three 8-ounce glasses of orange juice a day will provide as much potassium as is commonly prescribed. It is true that some patients don't tolerate potassium medicine such as the liquid form that you may be taking. On the other hand, they usually tolerate orange juice or a banana.

There isn't any good way to know how you're doing in terms of the potassium you're taking and the diuretics you're taking and the diuretics you're using except by blood tests and other laboratory procedures. If you are not taking a strong diuretic or very much of a diuretic then there's not much danger of washing out potassium along with the sodium. But if you're taking a lot of diuretic the problem often becomes important, as in your case.

I would suggest that you rely on your doctor's judgment and if you're not doing well, consult him so that he can repeat your tests and see how you are doing rather than guessing about it.

I'd also like to add, as you will see in The Health Letter that I'm sending you, that much of the commercial food processing eliminates a lot of the natural potassium in foods we would normally eat, and adds sodium.

This is true of freezing procedures, canning procedures and other food processing. That suggests that many people who are on diuretic would do better to prepare their own food in their own kitchen rather than relying on commercially prepared products.

Documents Debate May Affect U.S. Arms Embargo

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF
 WASHINGTON (UPI)—A bitter battle of documents is going on in Washington over what happened on the island of Cyprus four years ago. It may have an impact on congressional debate over the U.S. embargo on arms for Turkey.

The Carter administration believes it has an uphill fight to get the embargo rescinded. The documents, officially secret but obtained by United Press International, involve atrocities and conflicting claims of who did what to whom, and who started it all. Both Greek and Turkish diplomats are gearing for the storm to break.

The foreign aid bill that will provide the framework for the debate would prohibit new military aid to countries which engage in "gross violations" of human rights.

According to one confidential report on the 1974 Cyprus conflict, Turkey carried out what some observers insist was a policy of systematic brutality in intervening to protect the Turkish community.

The document is a report compiled by a panel of eminent jurists named by the European Commission on Human Rights in 1974 to investigate the atrocity charges. The allegations were publicly raised by the government of Cyprus which represents the majority Greek Cypriot community.

The panel, restricted in its movements to the Greek part of the bi-national island, said it found evidence that Turkish forces engaged in murder, rape, plunder, mistreatment. It forwarded its explosive findings to the Council of Europe at Strasbourg, France in 1976.

The report has never been officially made public, for fear it could rekindle old animosities, undermine recent efforts to promote a resumption of the Greek-Turkish talks on a peaceful Cyprus settlement, and possibly raise calls for Turkey's expulsion from the Council.

The Council, a parliamentary body of European states, reaffirmed its decision last year to keep the report under wraps. The decision has stuck.

However, UPI was able recently to obtain a copy from sources in Washington.

Would-Be Hijackers Sentenced To Jail

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP)—A court in Brno has convicted three men of conspiracy to hijack a plane and sentenced them to prison terms ranging from one to eight years, the official CTK news agency reports.

It said Ladislav Sevec of Brno got eight years "for his attempt to hijack a plane abroad" and two others got one-year terms each for helping him.

UPI then requested an authoritative reply from Turkish officials. Sources other than the Turkish embassy eventually made available a second secret document held at the Council of Europe.

The second document, dated May 24, 1977, is entitled "Memorial by the government of the Turkish Republic on Questions of Human Rights." It is a direct rebuttal to the first report.

Read together, the two documents retell the story of murder, terror, and hatred which has wracked Cyprus since independence in 1960, and even before.

Item from document No. 1: "Mrs. Kyprianou stated that in this killing she lost her husband, her father, two brothers-in-law and an uncle. When the officer arrived, he seemed to be in an an-

Denying any systematic, pre-planned brutality, the report reproduced two orders from military headquarters in Ankara instructing the invading Turkish armies to protect life and property.

The report conceded some brutality may have occurred, but said the responsibility lies with individuals who had been injured over the years by Greek Cypriot terrorism.

"The fact that isolated instances of theft and looting should have been committed by members of the Turkish Cypriot community when their rights had been flaunted for years past is a matter of personal responsibility," the report said.

The Turkish government also used its rebuttal to launch its own counter charges. n

Denies writes: "Turkey has never violated human rights in Cyprus and in any case she cannot be accused of any violations alleged to have taken place... after 18 May 1976—because her role in Cyprus is confined solely to peace keeping operations through the Turkish peace forces..."

The House is expected to begin considering the arms embargo issue when it debates the $2.7 billion foreign military aid bill late this month.

The embargo was imposed by Congress because Turkey used American arms in invading Cyprus in violation of U.S. aid provisions.

Opponents say lifting the embargo now, without Turkey withdrawing its 24,000 troops from the island, would violate the rule of law.

The embargo is also seen by some legislators as a way to pressure Turkey to cooperate in promoting a Cyprus settlement.

A Turkish government spokesman told UPI in Ankara the leaking of the first confidential report on Turkish atrocities was a lobbying effort by Greek Cypriots to convince Congress to maintain the embargo.

The panel...said it found evidence that Turkish forces engaged in murder, rape, plunder, mistreatment.

gry mood and ordered the soldiers to lie down, which they did, loading their rifles.

"Another soldier, whom she described as a 'good man,' intervened and the Turkish soldiers discussed for a half an hour. Then they separated the men from the women and, in front of the women, they started shooting at the men, killing 12 of them."

"Some of the men were holding children while being shot and three of these children were wounded..."

The report also said: "Turkish soldiers, under the command of an officer, executed the 12 civilians Mrs. Kyprianou referred to on July 21, 1974 near Elia, Cyprus."

"Some women were repeatedly raped by groups of soldiers. In one instance, a mentally retarded girl was raped by 20 soldiers, then thrown out of a window. Women were raped in front of their children. At least one 17-year-old school girl was killed when she resisted."

"One prisoner held by Turkish forces was thrust a glass of urine when he asked for water and brutalized when he protested. Some witnesses said Turkish soldiers cut off the ears of their prisoners; others were hung by their feet over latrines."

"Turkish forces looted Greek Cypriot property on a large scale, the exact extent of which could not be determined."

The second document containing the Turkish rebuttal attacked the competence of the European Commission to carry out its probe at all. The Turkish government refused to cooperate with the panel and attacked the investigation as one-sided, hastily prepared, and incompetent.

These included the allegation that Greek Cypriot fanatics, bent on joining Cyprus to Greece with support from Athens, drew up an infamous "Akritas Plan" to liquidate the Turkish Cypriot community.

Between 1963-1974, sporadic terrorism hit Cyprus. During that period, too, the Turkish side said, the Cyprus government forced Turkish officials out of the political process.

Turkey, which with Greece and Britain is a guarantor of Cyprus' independence and integrity, planned invasions in 1964 and 1967 to protect its ethnic citizens. But on both those occasions, the United States moved to stop Ankara.

Among specific Turkish grievances: "In 1956, Greek terrorists attacked 33 Turkish villages in Cyprus, leaving 6,000 persons homeless. In December 1963, 103 Turkish villages were attacked, and 25,000 persons were dispossessed."

"Invading Turkish forces uncovered several mass graves of Turkish Cypriot villagers who were killed by terrorists."

"The Turkish report also complained that 'the Council of Europe unfortunately remained almost indifferent to the violations of human rights which occurred in Cyprus between 1963-1974 before the eyes of the whole world and to the unilateral oppression and killings which took place.'"

The two reports were supplemented by detailed observations provided to the European Commission on Human Rights in 1977 by Rauf Denkash, a Turkish Cypriot leader.

The effect of Denkash's remarks was to shift the blame to the Greeks.

Operators' Profits Stay Low

A BIT OF THE BUBBLY — Charlie Gladstone pours champagne atop a gasoline pump at his north Baltimore service station. Gladstone was celebrating the Supreme Court's upholding of Maryland's law barring oil companies from operating their own stations. Gladstone was one of the leaders in pushing the bill through the 1974 state General Assembly. (AP Laserphoto)

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
 NEW YORK (AP) — Earlier this year, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg estimated that just over 10 percent of the retail price of a gallon of gasoline goes to the average dealer, with the rest going to the wholesale supplier or for taxes.
 That means the dealer gets to keep about 6 cents for every 60-cent gallon pumped. Out of that, the dealer must make rent or mortgage payments, pay salaries, and take care of utility bills and other expenses. The dealer also will try to make a profit on the 6-cents-a-gallon gross.

The issue of that slim margin, and the question of whether adequate supplies are available for the small retailer, surfaced Wednesday as the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a Maryland law barring oil companies from operating retail gasoline outlets. In addition, the court upheld a provision of the law that forced oil companies to make only "across-the-board" wholesale price reductions, rather than apply discounts selectively.
 But the high court decision also focused attention on another issue: the change away from company-run gasoline stations.

The Maryland law was prompted by the 1973 Arab oil embargo, when "high-volume (company-operated) stations got all the gas they needed and the lower-volume lease dealers couldn't get gas," said Marvin Bond, assistant to the state's comptroller.

In California, an association of small gasoline dealers continued the battle. "We have been fighting for this for a long time," said Mobil dealer Art Paul, a member of the Gasoline Retailers Association. "The oil companies were forcing us out of business by driving down prices at company-operated stations."

While the gasoline supply crunch has eased vastly since 1973, Bond contends the Maryland law still will protect small dealers. But some industry sources believe the small retailer, who leases a gasoline station from an oil company, may be fading away. The sources say a new group of aggressive independents, rather than the oil company-run outlets or the dealers who lease stations from suppliers, has become a major competitive force in the gasoline business.

Because these independents own their stations, they don't have the lease costs that small dealers face. They can afford to bargain over prices and supplies because of the large quantities of gasoline they sell, and they can run their self-service operations with just a handful of employees. Thus, they can squeeze greater profits per-gallon out of that 6-cent margin.

According to analyst Lundberg, in the past six months, "there hasn't been one conventional station built in the United States and there's no evidence of an oil company-operated full-service station opening."

Lundberg, the Los Angeles-based publisher of an authoritative industry newsletter, said that during the embargo, oil companies, with some assurance of constant supplies, tended to open their own stations. Since then, however, "big companies have tended to give up that kind of idea. Now they're looking for the most efficient independent jobbers."

"The trend is toward considerably fewer" company-operated stations, and "most of the gasoline is being sold through independent operators, said regional marketing manager Don Johnson of Phillips Petroleum Corp., one of 10 oil companies challenging the 1974 Maryland law.

 Shell Oil Co. operates 80 of the 17,000 stations carrying its products. Exxon Corp. runs 1,000 of its 22,000 outlets, and Gulf Oil Corp. has 18,000 stations nationwide but operates just 800 itself. Continental Oil Co. said 800 to 850 stations of a total of nearly 14,000 would be affected if the Maryland divestiture law were applied nationwide.

Most of the companies contesting the law said they were disappointed by Wednesday's ruling, maintaining it will lessen competition and protect the small independents at the expense of other sectors of the industry.

But Lundberg predicted it would have little effect on retail prices. "There may be some momentary turbulence as the supplying companies retire from (company-run) operations, of which there are comparatively few," he said.

Dealer Celebrates Decision With Champagne, Free Gas

By LARRY SIDONS
 BALTIMORE (AP) — Charlie Gladstone thought he might be serving hot dogs when the Supreme Court finished with a Maryland law forbidding oil companies from operating their own gas stations.
 Instead, he served champagne.
 "I just want to share my excitement with all the people that helped me and let them know I care," Gladstone said as he poured a glass of the bubbly at his Citgo station in north Baltimore Wednesday.
 Hours earlier, the Supreme Court had ruled 7-1 that Maryland's 1974 law was legal and does not interfere with interstate commerce, as the oil companies had argued.
 Gladstone, then an officer of the Maryland Independent Service Station Dealers Association, had helped convince the General Assembly of a need for such a law after the gasoline shortages that accompanied the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

 The measure prohibits oil companies from operating retail gasoline service stations. Delaware, Florida and the District of Columbia, like Maryland, reacted to the 1973 shortages by enacting similar laws. Similar legislation is being considered by 32 other state legislatures.
 Once Maryland's law was passed, the statute was immediately attacked by eight oil companies and the Petroleum Marketing Corp. Gladstone said he was convinced the law was just, but he started looking at other lines of employment just in case.
 "I let tire stocks at my station run down because I didn't know what I'd do if the law was thrown out," he said. "I seriously considered going into some other line of work. I thought maybe I'd sell hot dogs."
 Striking down the law would have spelled disaster for independently run stations, which make up about 95 percent of the gasoline outlets in Maryland, Gladstone said.

 "There's no way a small retailer could compete with the big oil companies," he said. "Not when they're controlling the product from the wellhead to the nozzle. They can say what price will be charged."
 One oil industry analyst, Dan Lundberg, publisher of an authoritative industry newsletter, said the court's ruling may have a "momentary" effect on prices at the gas pump, but Maryland Attorney General Francis B. Burch said it will ultimately lead to lower gasoline prices.
 Gladstone also said the decision would lead to lower prices for motorists, although he stopped short of predicting a return of the gasoline price wars of the 1960s.

California Vote Follows Trend

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

The press tax revolt puts schools in the crossfire of a school financing battle that has been building across the nation for some time now. California's Proposition 13, limiting property taxes, boosted the conflict into news headlines. But what's going on in that state follows rather than leads a nationwide trend.

In school district after school district for almost a decade taxpayer discontent has been showing up as a stampede of "no" votes on questions about increased spending for public education.

The crusade to put a lid on spending may be good for the taxpayer, but it's sure to modify what goes on in the schoolhouse. Anne C. Lewis, editor of "Education, U.S.A.," a prestigious newsletter, says there is every sign the schools will hurt a lot.

The newsletter is published in cooperation with the American Association of School Administrators, Council of Chief State School Officers, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and National Associations of Elementary and Secondary School Principals.

"Schools receive, on the average, 60 percent of the revenue raised by property taxes," she reports.

"State and local taxes have been rising at the rate of 14 percent a year for more than a decade, and state leaders who didn't take the public's grievances over taxes seriously are facing mandates from the public, many of which are direct but inadequate reforms."

A favored choice with voters is to cap spending, limiting expenditures by the state governments. Several efforts are directed only at school spending. In Ohio, for one example, schools may not approve a deficit budget. They can't plan to spend what won't be coming in.

The week Californians were approving proposition 13, Ohio voters faced 198 tax issues on the ballot. Eighty-one were approved—40.9 percent.

Cleveland and Columbus asked for new money from taxpayers. Both proposals failed. The crisis point will be in September—school opening time.

There are these other major school financing developments for the scorecards of interested citizens, taxpayers and parents. —The public's mood to get away from spiraling property taxes is responsible for the Washington state legislature's push for full state funding of schools by 1980.

—Last month a New York court of appeals prohibited the use of exemptions from the limit on property taxes. This amounted to a cut of $10 million for about 50 city school districts.

—The Pennsylvania legislature is considering bills that would replace local property taxes with a surtax on income of those living in the school district. The legislative proposals in the "keystone state" also would increase the state share of the public school bill from 50 to 80 percent.

—A referendum that is expected to have enough signatures to be placed on the ballot in Michigan in the fall would repeal the portion of property taxes going to local schools. But that's not all. The state, if the proposition passes, would give parents of each school child a voucher to be spent—something like food stamps—at the school of their choice, public or private. The voucher would be turned in by the school which would get so much money from public sources for the child's education bill.

Proposals similar to the voucher are opposed by many education organizations, such as the National Education Association. The fear: a voucher system of spending public funds for education would threaten survival of the public school system in America. The voucher system also would bring new focus on the matter of public support of church-related schools. They could be spent in parochial schools.

—New Jersey, California and Connecticut, in another development on the school finance front, are under orders from federal courts to equalize school financing. The courts have said in effect that it is discriminatory to pay school ills in those states mainly from local property taxes. The towns in those states with low incomes and lower property values, the courts observed, can't spend as much on schooling as the richer towns can with their higher incomes and their very much higher property values.

"And that, the courts figure, means a poorer quality of education in the less affluent towns. Equalizing school financing would mean all school districts in the states would spend the same number of dollars on each pupil. Equalizing spending would give less affluent black and white children in inner cities the same dollars for schooling spent in the rich suburbs.

If dollars buy quality education, in theory at least, the educational opportunities also would be equalized.

Insurance Companies' Attitudes Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Too many insurance companies view themselves only as funnels through which premiums are collected and losses paid, with no thought of controlling underlying costs, a state insurance official says.

Harold B. McGuffey, president of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners and insurance commissioner of Kentucky, said today these companies "think cost containment is somebody else's job, and they're wrong."

Unknowns Get Chance At Stardom On ABC

By JAY SHARBUTT
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Once, as I idled in Nashville, Gayle Hill, who runs a jingle firm there, had me hear a tune touting a phone company. The melody was lovely, ditto the singer's voice.

The singer, Marie Cain, the tune's composer. Now, one album, one "Tonight" show, countless club gigs and five years later, she's finally getting her first prime-time shot on national TV.

It comes Saturday on "ABC Presents Tomorrow's Stars," a talent contest hosted by John Ritter. Miss Cain, competing with Arnetta Walker in a vocal category, is one of 16 show-biz unknowns in the show.

If she wins, it could mean a grand prize of $10,000 and even propel her to the stardom now enjoyed by such ex-jingle singers as Melissa Manchester and Barry Manilow.

It she proves an overnight success, this is how it began:

Miss Cain, a strawberry blonde with an infectious laugh, says she started playing piano at age 5 and turned professional at 16 as a pianist-singer in her older brother's band.

"We did everything, rock, jazz, country; anything to pay the rent," recalled Miss Cain, born 28 years ago in Great Bend, Kan., the daughter of a constantly traveling construction worker.

She decamped to Nashville in 1972 to sell songs. She also broke in there as a jingle singer, warbling praises of such wares as Coca-Cola and Buicks. Why Nashville and not Hollywood first?

"I was concentrating on song-writing Saturn's rings cannot be seen except through a telescope of at least 3-inch aperture

ABC Returns To Top Spot In Nielsens With Reruns

NEW YORK (AP)—ABC regained first place in the prime time ratings race in a week heavy in reruns. A C. Nielsen Co. figures show, NBC, which had been No. 1 the two previous weeks, dropped to last.

CBS shared the spotlight with ABC for the week ending June 11 with the three most-watched shows. Reruns of three of CBS' Monday night programs, "One Day at a Time," "Lou Grant" and "M*A*S*H," were one-two-three in the ratings.

ABC took the next six places, and NBC's best was No. 16, a rerun of "Quincy, M.E."

Former FBI Official Blasts Rosenberg Film

By DANIEL F. GILMORE
 WASHINGTON (UPI)—A former FBI official directly involved in the Rosenberg-Sobell atomic espionage case today demanded the withdrawal of a "propaganda film" scheduled to be telecast on the 25th anniversary of the execution of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

Former FBI agent Robert Lamphere, now vice president of an insurance company in Boston, sent protest telegrams to the National Public Affair Center for Television and Public Broadcasting Service affiliates WETA-TV in Washington and KTCA in St. Paul-Minneapolis, co-producers of the film which was previewed Monday for reporters in Washington.

"I protest your reissuing the slanted documentary on the Rosenberg case," Lamphere said. "I object to its being used to support claims by the (Rosenbergs) National Committee that the Rosenbergs were framed by the FBI and were innocent."

"I strongly resent the use of federal funds in this manner. I urge you to withdraw this propaganda film and to investigate this entire matter and the tie-in between producer Alvin H. Goldstein and the so-called National Committee."

Lamphere is depicted in the film as describing how he had British atomic spy Klaus Fuchs identify chemist Harry Gold as his go-between with the Rosenbergs for collecting nuclear secrets.

The very same government which 25 years ago spent close to a million dollars prosecuting Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and Morton Sobel provided the funding, through The Corporation for Public Broadcasting, for the contemporary re-examination of the case," he said.

"The Rosenberg-Sobell Case Revisited" is a 90-minute rerun of "The Unquiet Death of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg," a prize-winning PBS program four years ago, with an update commentary based upon new documents obtained from the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act.

Sobell was a co-defendant who is now free after serving 19 years of a 30-year prison sentence.

Goldstein produced the original 1974 program and did the commentary on the latest production.

Cuban Ballet Troupe Gets High Praise

By MARY CAMPBELL
 NEW YORK (AP)—Probably the most beautiful "Giselle" done by any ballet company in the world, starring Alicia Alonso, was Tuesday's opening night offering of the Ballet Nacional de Cuba at the Metropolitan Opera.

The company is the first major cultural group sent to the United States by Cuba since the thaw in the two countries' relations. It just finished a two-week engagement at the Kennedy Center in Washington, where it also opened with the full-length "Giselle."

Miss Alonso was not the only asset in "Giselle." The leading man, Jorge Esquivel, is marvelous, princely but human. Four men who partner six women in Act 1 are phenomenal. Each has the technique of a star. The large corps de ballet in Act 2 danced beautifully.

Every company performs "Giselle" a bit differently. This one is unusually warm and unusually romantic. The queen of the Willis is traditionally presented as cold as steel. Aurora Bosch, in this version, made her sympathetic.

Miss Alonso and Esquivel made their duets the essence of first love by an unspoiled young couple. Her dancing projected purity, sweetness and unsophistication. Her legs went up in high extensions, but with seeming weightlessness.

Miss Alonso is 56, but she does not merely do "Giselle" well for a woman of her age, she dances it marvelously, compared with the best ballerinas of any age.

In Act 2, the emphasis was not on Esquivel being danced to death by the Willis, but on Miss Alonso's dancing in gentle supplication to the Willis to let him live.

Models Object To 'Charlie's Angels' Tag

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Three tall, slim, beautiful models wrinkled their elegant noses in unison at being called "Charlie's Angels" of the air.

The girls are $100-an-hour models for Wilhelmina Inc., a top New York model agency, who were on their way to California for the CBS series "Flying High," in which they will star in the fall.

As men reporters wandered by the interview room in sufficient numbers to wear a rut into the carpet, Pat Klous (blond and blue-eyed), Connie Sellecca (brunette and green-eyed) and Kathie Witt (brownette and green-eyed) talked about the show in which they play airline stewardess.

"I play Marcy Ann Bowers — she's a crazy Texan from Sweetwater," said Pat, who grew up in Wichita Falls.

Her total lack of acting experience shouldn't be a handicap for Nat. The male audience will be too busy looking to notice, and as for the personality of her flighty character, "You're looking at her," Pat said. "We're so similar except that Marcy almost flunked out of flight attendant school and I'm a high achiever who never flunked out of anything. I always got As."

Sultry Connie, who in real life grew up in a middle-class suburb of New York City, said of her character, "I play Lisa Benton, a wealthy girl from Greenwich, Conn. As Lisa, all my life I've just taken money from my family. I'm at the point where I must make it on my own. My boyfriend warns me to be careful because they could end up making me a flight attendant in coach."

Kathie's character is "Pamela Bellagio, a young Italian from New Jersey, the oldest of seven children and trying to escape the situation."

In real life Kathie first performed in television commercials at age 4 in Florida.

EPA Wants To Alter Illegal Smog Level

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday proposed to change the level at which smog becomes illegal, saying the existing level is needlessly stringent.

The primary standard for smog would be 0.10 parts per million per hour, compared to a level of 0.08 which has been in effect since 1971.

In addition, the agency said smog would now officially have a new name — ozone. In the past, the agency had used the term "photochemical oxidants" to describe what happens when hydrocarbon and nitrogen dioxide from car exhaust and other sources are exposed to sunlight.

EPA said one result of the proposed change is that some of the 103 cities with populations over 200,000 which it identified last March as not meeting the existing ozone standard would now be in compliance.

They are Pueblo and Colorado Springs, Colo.; the central Florida area including Orlando; Omaha, Neb.; and the south-central Michigan area including Lansing, Ann Arbor, Kalamazoo and Battle Creek.

"New health effects data, as well as a better understanding of existing data, calls for this change in the ambient standard," EPA Administrator Douglas Costle said.

"For example, the people most sensitive to smog now appear to be asthmatics; the point at which they incur asthmatic symptoms is called the effects level," he added. "In 1971 the effects level was presumed to be 0.10 ppm.

"EPA then set the ambient standard at 0.08 ppm to provide a 'margin of safety' as required by law," Costle said. "re-evaluation of the evidence indicates that the incidence of asthmatic attacks is greater above 0.25 than below. This re-evaluation does not justify a substantial relaxation of the standard, however, since other effects have been demonstrated at concentrations as low as 0.15 ppm."

"Therefore EPA proposes a standard of 0.10 ppm."

Costle said cities, the auto industry and others subject to regulations designed to meet the ambient standard must still pursue aggressive clean-up programs to meet the 0.10 standard.

BACK TO EARLIER TIMES — Workmen put the finishing touches on a flatboat for use in the filming of "Centennial," an NBC television mini-series. Several days of filming on the program was done in Augusta, Ky., a small river town near Cincinnati. Nancy Addison Reflects On Roles In Soaps

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nancy Addison, a cheery, pretty lady, is asked how life is going nowadays. She takes a deep breath and says: "Well, I'm between two characters now, Frank and Seneca."
"They're both in love with me. It's the same old triangle, and I still have Frank's child (born out of wedlock, it seems). But Frank has no time for me. He's running for the Senate."
This is no case for Dear Abby, though. It's just the woe of Jill Coleridge, the sensitive lawyer Miss Addison essays five days a week on ABC's Emmy-winning soap opera, "Ryan's Hope."
Miss A., who does the series in her native New York, has been tripping in the show for nearly three years now.
She broke into soapdom six years ago, after studies at New York University and Boston's Fisher College. She began her acting career in a play, "The Impossible Years," with Tom Ewell.
Her soap-opera start was as a schizophrenic in "Guiding Light."
How did she wind up in this daytime angst arena? Simple, she said by phone from Fun City: "My agent just sent me over, the same way you go up for theater auditions, for 'Guiding Light.'"

"I did that a while, then this (the Coleridge) part came along. I'd told my agent I didn't want to do another soap unless it's really interesting, something I can identify with."
It was, and so she joined the 15-character caperings of "Ryan's Hope," a modern saga set on New York's Upper West Side — where she lives, incidentally — and involving three families.
While it's quite rare for a daytime star to do nighttime TV, Miss Addison last month appeared in her first major primetime role — as a morphine addict — in CBS' "The Dain Curse."
Question: Does the fact you are on the tube in the daytime hamper efforts to secure roles on evening TV shows, do the prime-time moguls dismiss you as just another soaping star?
"Well, unfortunately that happens sometimes," she conceded. "This kind of work involves the most pressure. You have to put out a product, the scenes, each day after a very short rehearsal time."
"But I did 'Dain Curse,' so I guess somebody thought I was good enough to do that." Did "Curse" get you blessed with more Hollywood offers of work in evening TV shows? The actress laughed.

"People have called, but nothing solid yet," she said. "I'm in negotiations now for another year here, anyway. But I'm hoping somebody calls me out there to do work now and then."
It-Must-Be-Summer Note: We're advised the cast of ABC's "Carter Country" competed this weekend with police from Plains, Ga., at the Fifth Sometimes Annual Luckenbach World's Fair in Fredericksburg.
Their event: The First Intergalactic Chicken Flying Contest, where they see how far a chicken can fly. Results aren't here yet, somebody ate the carrier pigeon, but we will keep you posted. Honest.
