HEATED DISCUSSION, FRESH AIR — A Texas Tech University speech class adjourns to the great outdoors today after the air conditioning system on the campus failed. The emergency classroom was not expected to be much more comfortable than the regular one this afternoon, though, as temperatures head

Court Action Backs Dallas Voting Setup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, by a 6-3 vote, refused today to invalidate as unconstitutional the way Dallas elects its City Council.

But the justices sent the controversy back to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals with orders to study it under federal law, the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

"The impact of the Voting Rights Act on the city ordinance and on the charter amendment approved by referendum will be open on remand, and we deem it appropriate for the court of appeals to deal with these questions," Justice Byron R. White wrote in the court's main opinion.

The court set aside a ruling by an appeals court which last year had invalidated the city's election system as racially discriminatory.

The effect of the lower court's ruling had been held in abeyance pending today's decision, and it appears that the challenged system will remain in effect until the 5th Circuit reaches a new decision.

White said the appeals court had applied too stringent tests in deciding the case.

Only Justice Potter Stewart joined fully in White's opinion. But Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist and Lewis F. Powell Jr. concurred in an opinion the voting system was a "legislative plan" that should not have been subject to such strict scrutiny.

Trial of a similar suit brought in Lubbock was postponed last year when attorneys for the city and plaintiff Gene Gaines agreed to wait for today's Supreme Court decision.

City Attorney Fred Senter said he expects that any action locally will be put off again while the 5th Circuit Court reconsiders the matter.

"We'll just have to wait and see," was all Senter would say officially, but his comments were, "Ah, good," as he read a wire service account of the Supreme Court finding and "hot ziggety" when his eyes reached the phrase "...had applied too stringent tests in deciding the case."

Gaines, president of the local NAACP, said he would reserve comment until after he had a chance to read the full opinion of the court.)

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William J. Brennan Jr. and John Paul Stevens voted to strike down the City Council voting system.

The appeals court had ruled that Dallas' 11-member City Council election system resulted in a dilution of minority voting power.

Eight seats on the City Council are selected on a district basis — with candidates having to meet residency requirements in a specific district. The voting for those candidates is limited to district residents.

The other three seats, including the mayor's job, are selected on an at-large basis, with no residency requirement in a certain district and providing for city-wide voting.

All elections for Dallas offices are non-partisan, with candidates running on slating groups rather than as Republicans, Democrats or members of some other political party.

The 5th Circuit had ruled that only the mayor's job could be filled by a city-wide vote, and that the other 10 council seats

Carter Plans Oil Tax Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is prepared to announce in mid-July that he will act to raise oil prices through increased import fees unless Congress shows it is willing to enact his year-old proposal for a tax on domestic oil, Sen. Henry M. Jackson said today.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger agreed minutes later that such an announcement, at the planned economic summit meeting in West Germany July 16-17, "is an option" for the president.

Schlesinger said the decision on whether to impose higher import fees depends on Carter's assessment of whether Congress is likely to enact the crude-oil tax before it recesses for the November elections.

The statements came as Schlesinger, Jackson and others emerged from an hour-long meeting at the White House, Jackson, D-Wash., is chairman of the Senate Energy Committee.

Carter called the meeting to discuss with key members of Congress the prospects for action on the crude-oil tax and other energy measures before he departs for the July summit.

Carter has been pressed by America's chief trading partners — including West Germany, Japan, France and Britain — to take action to stem the huge U.S. trade imbalance, which hit a record $7 billion for the first quarter of 1978, according to new figures released Wednesday.

The proposal for a crude oil tax would effectively raise the price of American-produced oil, now held below world prices by governmental controls, to or near the level of oil imported from other countries.

The idea is to discourage consumption of petroleum products by raising the price. Carter has the legal authority to impose higher fees on imported oil, which also would boost prices, and has said repeatedly that he might do so if Congress failed to enact the crude-oil tax.

However, until today the president had not come so close to setting a deadline for enactment.

Jackson told reporters after the White House meeting with Carter: "He did not indicate any time, but I felt it would be imminent. I think he may well announce at the summit that's what he's going to do."

Schlesinger, asked whether Carter would indeed make such an announcement then, said, "I think that that is an option for the president." He said it would depend on Carter's assessment of "the likely response of Congress" before it goes home in October.

Both Jackson and Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said they would support Carter if he feels it is necessary to impose higher oil import fees.

Ullman said what is needed is "a national crusade to awaken America" to the need to curb oil imports.

Alarm Systems Target Of City

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council this morning asked that an ordinance be drafted to curtail the number of false alarms Lubbock police must answer.

The ordinance, suggested by Councilman Bill McAlister, would require the licensing of burglar alarm companies and the registration of all alarm systems in Lubbock.

McAlister said the ordinance would let police know "where the alarms are and who they belong to" as well as giving police "some assurance they (the alarms) are maintained properly."

Alarm companies would be required to respond to repair an alarm within one hour under the ordinance, a provision McAlister hopes would encourage alarm firms to monitor the alarms more carefully.

McAlister said the few alarm companies which already monitor their alarms 24 hours a day often can save police from being dispatched on a false alarm call by discovering why the alarm was triggered.

Currently, Police Chief J.T. Alley said the alarm companies "are getting paid for what we do."

Alley said one Lubbock resident set off his alarm at a party to show his guests how fast the police responded.

The alarm ordinance likely will be voted on in two weeks.

Also this morning, representatives of the Overton South Neighborhood Association asked the council to take back $156,600 in Community Development funds which were allocated for use in that neighborhood.

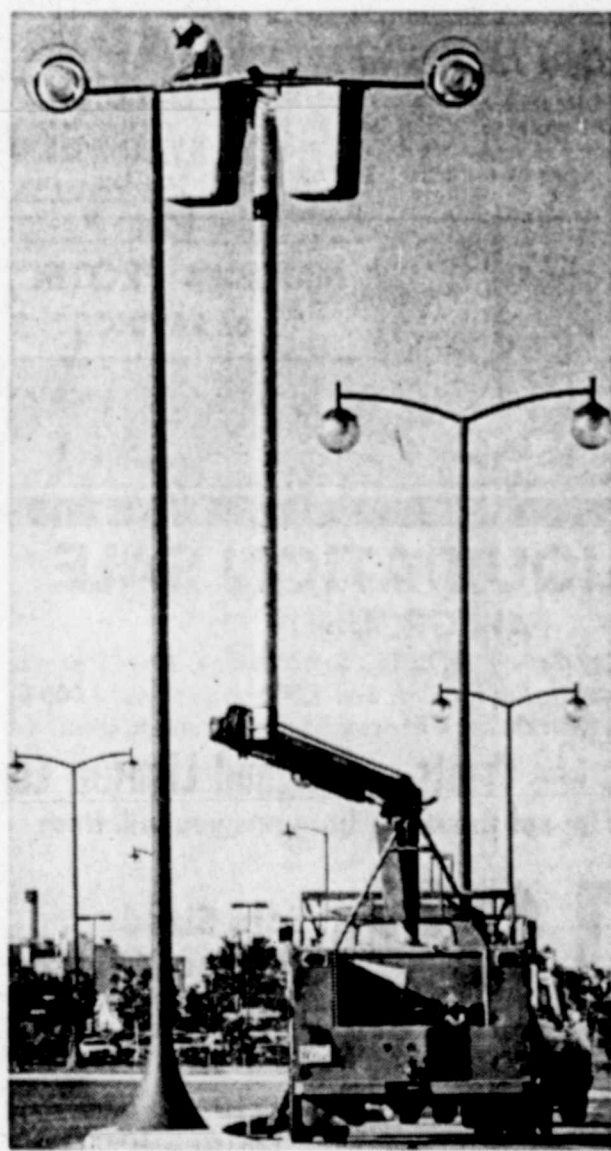

Larry Glazner, representing the association, said most of the substandard housing in the area is owned by absentee landlords, thus would not qualify for the funds, which only can be used to rehabilitate owner-occupied housing.

In addition, Glazner said, "We are proud and independent taxpayers. We

Boy Found Safe Here

A 5-year-old boy really was in the doghouse here this morning.

Lubbock police spent all night and most of the morning today looking for the child, reported missing from an E. Cornell Street residence. An aunt with whom the youth had been staying told investigators he was last seen about 7 p.m. Wednesday.

After an exhaustive search of the area, police again were questioning neighbors this morning in an attempt to get any clue to the boy's disappearance. Officer William H. Britt walked into the home's back yard, made a startling discovery — and suddenly, everyone rushed through the house.

The youth was fine, but he had to give up his makeshift bed in the doghouse in which he had spent the night.

Standby Gasoline Rationing Plan Ready

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Department sources say the administration today was prepared to send Congress a standby gasoline rationing plan more fair and less subject to abuse than earlier proposals.

The plan, required by law, would be used only if the United States suffered another emergency such as the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

Another embargo could cause an even worse energy pinch than the last one, officials say, because U.S. reliance on foreign oil is much greater now than it was four year ago. The nation now imports almost half its oil.

The Federal Energy Administration drew up a standby rationing program in 1976 under Ford energy chief Frank Zarb, and was about to send it to Congress when President Carter took office. Carter halted submission of that plan pending a review and revision.

Sources identified two key changes made by Carter's energy staff:

—Where the Ford plan would have assigned ration coupons to each licensed driver, the Carter plan will assign coupons based on vehicle registration.

—Coupons under the Ford plan would not have carried serial numbers, while coupons under the Carter plan will be numbered and less subject to counterfeiting.

Sources said issuing coupons on the basis of vehicle registration rather than licensed drivers would assure more equitable distribution.

Under the old system, a family with many licensed drivers but only one car would have been eligible for many more coupons than a family with only one or two licensed drivers and one car. Under the new system, both families would get the same number of coupons.

The Ford plan called for giving an equal number of coupons to each recipient, but allowed certain categories — the handicapped, low-income persons, long-distance commuters, migrant workers and others with unusual hardships — to apply for extra coupons.

The value of coupons was not fixed. Business consumers were divided into three categories:

—Police and fire departments, ambulances, food producers and transporters, the Defense Department and passenger transportation firms, who could get 100 percent of their needs.

—Sanitation services, energy producers and telecommunications firms, who could get 100 percent of what they used in a base period before rationing started.

—All other firms and government agencies, who could get 90 percent of what they used during the base period.

Quote ... Unquote

"He did it willfully, deliberately and surreptitiously. He did it for money, but he didn't want anybody to know about it until a certain time." —U.S. District Judge OREN R. LEWIS, commenting on ex-CIA agent Frank W. Snepp III's book "Decent Interval," the writing of which, the federal government claims, was in violation of Snepp's CIA contract.

Councilman Ready For Wedding

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — City Councilman Jack Kelly tried on his new formal tails and high hat that he'll wear at next week's wedding of his niece, Princess Caroline of Monaco, to French businessman Philippe Junot and called them "just perfect."

"What kind of girl goes with that suit?" a reporter asked Kelly, a former Olympic rowing champion who is known to prefer blondes.

"My daughter, Maura," said Kelly, whose sister, Princess Grace, is the bride-to-be's mother. "The trip is going to be her 21st birthday present."

Kelly bought a full-dress tuxedo, a black velvet dinner jacket, a white polyester jacket and complementing accessories Wednesday for the round of parties that will precede and follow the civil and religious wedding ceremonies on June 28-29 in the tiny country adjoining France.

Nixons Celebrate Anniversary

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon and his wife, Pat, celebrated their 38th wedding anniversary at a restaurant in this city of the swallows.

Linda Jenkins, an employee at the El Adobe de San Juan Capistrano restaurant, said the Nixons were accompanied Wednesday night by their eldest daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and her husband, David. The couple are expecting their first child soon.

It was believed to be the first public appearance for Mrs. Nixon since recovering from what her doctor described as acute viral asthmatic bronchitis. The illness hospitalized her for four days last month.

Miss Jenkins said the Nixons often eat at the El Adobe, and had been there last to celebrate Nixon's 65th birthday on Jan. 9.

"It's supposed to be their favorite restaurant," she said.

Sinatra's Concert Postponed

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Airplane troubles grounded entertainer Frank Sinatra's concert at Huntington Civic Center Wednesday night. But promoters said he would make up the concert tonight.

Civic Center manager Bill Lillyman said some 8,000 tickets sold for the Wednesday concert would be honored at tonight's concert.

Lillyman did not learn of Sinatra's transportation problems until a few hours before the singer's scheduled appearance. He immediately locked the doors at the civic center and made the announcement outside, using a police cruiser's amplified speaker.

Several hundred patrons reportedly received refunds. The majority, however, said they would be back tonight.

Demonstrators Jeer Crown Prince

ASCOT, England (AP) — The crown prince of Iran got a mixed reception when he appeared at Ascot Race Track in the royal carriage with Queen Elizabeth II.

Four dozen demonstrators, attacking the regime of his father, the Shah of Iran, jeered the prince, but he smiled nonchalantly and raised his top hat to the protesters.

The protest Wednesday was organized by the Confederation of Iranian students in Britain. Student critics in many countries accuse the shah of suppressing political freedom and torturing and killing political prisoners.

Racegoers nearby tried to drown out the chants of the demonstrators with cheers as the horse-drawn royal party passed by. The Iranian prince sat next to his British counterpart, Prince Charles. The queen smiled and waved at the crowd without discrimination.

Woman Suing Foyt, Singer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Los Angeles woman has sued racing car driver A.J. Foyt and singer Keely Smith in connection with a car accident involving a 1970 Cadillac registered in both their names.

The Superior Court lawsuit, filed Tuesday by Cheryl Melvey, also names as defendants Luanne Prima, Miss Smith's daughter from her marriage to Assemblyman Arthur J. Edwina Shew, driver of the car in which Miss Melvey was a passenger when the accident occurred June 23, 1977.

The suit alleges that Miss Prima was driving the Cadillac when it collided with a car driven by Miss Shew. Miss Melvey seeks compensation for medical expenses, loss of earnings and other damages incurred in the accident.

Race To The Finish — Barely

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — With much huffing and puffing, a relay team of four Republican assemblymen beat four Democrats around the fountains at the South Mall to win $500 plus sidebets for their re-election campaigns.

Wednesday's First Annual Legislative Mile Run — actually two miles — was designed to encourage physical fitness, stir up a little partisan competition and work off some of the tension that builds up by the end of the annual legislative session, said Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut, who cheered his fellow-Democrats from the sidelines.

"Would you like me to send for an ambulance, Mr. Cooperman?" a sergeant-at-arms asked Assemblyman Arthur J. Cooperman, as the contestants filed out of the chamber before the race.

Cooperman smiled, but at the end of his leg, the 45-year-old bespectacled assemblyman had been easily out-distanced by Assemblyman John Zagame of Oswego, the Republicans' 27-year-old lead-off man.

The Democrats never recovered, finishing more than two minutes behind and saved from being lapped only by the quick feet of Assemblyman Pete Grannis, who trained in New York City's Central Park.

Cooperman smiled, but at the end of his leg, the 45-year-old bespectacled assemblyman had been easily out-distanced by Assemblyman John Zagame of Oswego, the Republicans' 27-year-old lead-off man.

How were the teams selected? Said Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, who ran the second leg for the Democrats: "It wasn't by ability, or I wouldn't be here."

Mexican Officials Seize Marijuana

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A Mexican coast guard patrol stopped the small Panamanian-flag freighter Migan in the Caribbean and found 10 tons of marijuana believed bound for the United States, a navy spokesman said.

The spokesman said the freighter and its 10 crewmen were taken to Isla Mujeres, off the Yucatan Peninsula, for investigation.

Skokie Makes Plans To Curb Violence

SKOKIE, Ill. (UPI) — Officials are moving ahead with plans to turn the village into a bastion against violence if a small band of Nazis demonstrate Sunday in the heavily Jewish Chicago suburb.

Village President Albert J. Smith said Wednesday the 140-man Skokie police force, the Illinois National Guard, state police and policemen from 12 surrounding communities would be on hand to keep peace between Nazis and the thousands of Jews and sympathizers who are expected to protest.

Smith ordered a large area of central Skokie cordoned off to automobiles Sunday. Seven National Guard helicopters, he said, will patrol the area.

Sol Goldstein, organizer of a massive counter-demonstration planned five blocks from the Nazi march in front of the Village Hall, said 18 ambulances and 46 doctors had been mobilized to act in case of violence.

"We expect 50,000 people here," he said. "There are 400 to 500 from Cleveland alone. What else can I do... they are coming."

"We have a commitment to a peaceful rally. No one asked for this. But if people — Jews and Christians — feel they must take to the streets, there is no power in the world that can achieve stopping them."

Legal maneuvers shrouded whether the Nazis actually would march.

Frank Collin, leader of the National Socialist Party of America, has said he will not take his followers to Skokie if they can demonstrate in the southwest Chicago neighborhood of Marquette Park, where they have sought in the past to stir conflict between blacks and whites.

A federal judge Tuesday lifted requirements for heavy insurance guarantees for a Marquette Park demonstration. But Collin said he would not make up his mind until late today and the Chicago Park District said it was studying the judge's decision, debating whether to make an appeal.

Skokie is the Nazi target because it has a 35 percent Jewish population and a large number of them are survivors of Nazi concentration camps.

Militant Jews led by the Jewish Defense league have threatened violence if members of the Nazis demonstrate in Skokie. If the Nazis cancel their march, the JDL threatened to march on their Chicago headquarters. They indicated they would not be part of Goldstein's demonstration at Niles East High School.

Smith's security arrangements were designed to keep the two demonstrations apart.

"The only hard news we have is that the demonstration is still on," he said. "There is tremendous interest in this throughout the world. We hope we can come off in the best possible manner. I think we can show the whole world protest can occur without anyone getting hurt."

Skokie people, on the eve of what has become an international cause celebre, waited to see what would really happen and played things very cool in the meantime.

In perfect summer weather, sprinklers soaked the lawns and sidewalks, sunburned children tried to sell a sweaty handful of candy to passersby for a dollar, and adults took care to speak low and carry on as usual.

Restaurant owners around Oakton Avenue, where the demonstration is scheduled to take place, said they would be open Sunday.

By JAY B. LEWIS
FORT HOOD (UPI) — The first word came June 5 of the visit this Saturday by President Carter — the ultimate VIP — to the Army's largest post, and it hurled nearly 50,000 men into a frenzy of fort cleaning.

Officials of the III Corps, which runs Fort Hood, said preparations for the president's visit is routine maintenance at a stepped-up pace. The soldiers carrying the sand-blasting machines and wire brushes called it hard work.

The soldiers, unwinding from a long and busy week and bracing for a longer and busier one, discussed what goes into a presidential visit over drinks at a disco in nearby Killeen.

It was payday night, the music was loud, the drinks were strong and the local talent was well turned out. The club was plainly an enlisted men's club with a well-muscled, somewhat weary cross-section of the Army represented.

When did the troops get the word that the President was coming?

"The same time everyone else did — when we heard it on the news," said a military intelligence sergeant, who, like the others, asked not to be identified in print.

"There were a bunch of meetings all of a sudden," he said. "Monday morning (June 5), the CO came down with the info. Tuesday morning we started cleaning."

The III Corps commander has kept no estimate of the cost of painting, gardening, repairs and building new facilities at the huge Central Texas reservation. A corps spokesman said most of the work had to be done anyway, and the rest will be written off as training.

Carter will arrive Friday at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth and fly to Houston later in the day. Saturday morning he will appear in Beaumont and then finish his Texas trip at Fort Hood Saturday afternoon.

A driver from a transportation company, who said cleaning began in his barrel on the off-chance the president wanted to inspect troop quarters and picked his out of the hundreds on post, said preparation was measured in blisters.

"It's the pits, man," the driver said, taking a loog pull from his drink. "They had us up until 1:30 in the morning. You've got to strip and wax the floors, and hope like hell they're still shining when he gets here."

The rancor didn't run too deep, though, and the troops still had their sense of perspective. A cocktail waitress who looked a little like Farah Fawcett-Majors sauntered up to the bar with a long order to fill, and the soldiers paused in reverent silence until she left.

"They haven't made us do anything inside the barracks, yet," said an aviation specialist. "But there's still next week."

"We had to sandblast the flightline and paint new stripes and signs and that," he said. "Then we had to move all the aircraft out of the hangar because some federal guy came around and made us. We had to move all of the desks out of our maintenance office and tear out all the partitions to make room for the television people."

In the background, the disc jockey switched from disco music to a country-western set, and a few of the troops started out for the club next door to dance. The rest came off the dance floor to cool off for the next set.

An combat engineer who had spent the week on Blackwell Mountain, where Carter is to watch firepower demonstration, said the short notice gave his outfit time to do everything but plan.

"Right now everything's in a state of confusion because nobody knows what's going on," he said. "We've been working late because the sun doesn't go down until nine o'clock."

"We were out there the other day with a back-hoe trying to level off the mountain, but we couldn't do it because it's solid rock," he said, tapping his foot to a Jerry Jeff Walker tune. "We could have shaped charges on the rock, but they didn't want to do that."

"We had details all day Tuesday and into Tuesday night," the intelligence sergeant said. "The CO wanted the grass mowed, but all the company's lawn mowers were down, so we had to bring them from home."

Area beautification, as the Army calls gardening accounted for much of the preparation for the visit. The aviation specialist said he and his comrades spent a day pulling marijuana plants that grow wild out by the airstrip.

There have been some good side effects. "We had trouble getting parts for our vehicles until now," the intelligence sergeant said. "Everything we've been requesting for months has suddenly appeared. But we only have the week to get everything running."

The cocktail waitress returned, and conversation paused.

What, exactly, is going to happen during the president's visit?

"He's going to be up there about an hour, and during that time the 2nd Armored Division is supposed to fire everything in its arsenal."

"We'll have a few people at the display," the engineer said. But most of us will be hiding in the barracks so the President won't see us (idle)."

"Saturday is not a duty day," the aviation specialist said, "but the CO 'recommended' that we all show up."

"We've had inspections to cull out the (troops) they don't want the President to see," said the intelligence sergeant. "Representing our battalion will be 25 men and 25 women, even though that's not the ratio in the army."

There were nods all around. In the background, the disc jockey had put on a square dance number. Soldiers who had met girls were coaxing them toward the door with hopeful restraint.

What was the consensus toward the president's visit?

"It's definitely more hassle than it's worth," the drive said. "I have a buddy who got his leave canceled because the lieutenant said he needed him. That's too much, man. Next time I'm voting Republican."

Postal Ruling May Curb Term Paper Purchases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is making it easier for professors to catch students who turn in term papers they have bought instead of written themselves.

In a case involving a New Jersey company that sold research materials to college students, the Postal Service announced Tuesday a consent judgment that may form a pattern for other firms.

The judgment makes it possible for colleges and faculty members to learn if their students are using papers by the firm, Academic Research Group, Inc. of Rutherford, N.J.

The Postal Service had accused the firm of using the mail to misrepresent, naming college professors as the victims.

Museum Celebrates 45th Anniversary

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Museum of Science and Industry celebrated its 45th birthday in 1978.

The museum, founded by philanthropist Julius Rosenwald, opened in 1933, and it still occupies the reconstructed Palace of Fine Arts from the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition.

The museum was visited by some 300,000 people its first year and currently draws about four million visitors a year.

The government agreed to drop the case in return for the firm's agreement to:

—Keep files that will enable it to identify the subject and purchaser of research material.

—Furnish the information to any college or professor who asks.

—Refrain from advertising in college newspapers or posting flyers on campus bulletin boards.

Walter E. Monaghan, attorney for the firm, said that the company acknowledged no illegal acts in the consent judgment "and there has never been any proof that we did anything illegal."

The government had filed the case last month saying it was a test of its ability to end the mail-order term paper business, which has grown in recent years. Rather than pursuing the case to a judicial determination, federal attorneys decided in favor of an agreement that could be used as a model for other companies.

The government says at least six companies sell term papers nationally. The companies advertise in campus newspapers and have a full catalog of term papers for sale at about $3 a page. Custom-written term papers can be had on virtually any subject for about $7 per page.

Postal Service attorney Tom Ziebarth said the consent judgment is "tossing the ball into the academic court. If they (colleges) choose to use the tools, they should be able to do something against the cheats in their midst."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

It's Time To 'Move It'

NOW THAT A court challenge finally has worn itself down, the City of Lubbock can get on with construction of some badly needed capital improvements.

James G. Marshall's decision not to pursue his contest of the $26.4 million bond issue to the Texas Supreme Court, after predictably losing at the district court and civil appeals court levels, was welcomed enthusiastically at City Hall.

No one doubted the ultimate decision would be in the City's favor, but the appeals process would have added at least several more months to a delay that already has cost taxpayers nearly a year's inflation-packed time.

CITY COUNCILMEN will be setting priorities for which projects to start first from among those to be financed by the bond issues which voters approved in May, 1977.

Without question, however, expansion of sanitary sewer facilities—already overloaded—must be gotten underway as soon as possible.

New water wells, street improvements, a fire station and sanitary sewer lines to serve growing residential areas and storm sewers in various parts of the city are among other projects which have been delayed.

City Mgr. Larry Cunningham, in a recent memo to the City Council, said that because of rising costs the bond proceeds won't cover everything that was anticipated when the voters approved the issues.

This is unfortunate and makes it incumbent upon city officials to take an even closer look at possible non-essential frills that do not add materially to the usefulness or economic operation of the planned bread-and-butter facilities.

THE LARGEST SINGLE item in the "Back to Basics" bond election, of course, was for water improvements.

A total of $16,775,000 was approved for water, including $5,250,000 to be used as "seed money" for securing a new source of supply.

Dry weather during the last year has served to remind all that, while Lubbock has no immediate water supply problems, it cannot afford to dilly-dally any longer before taking steps to augment existing sources.

Worsening traffic congestion likewise is a daily reminder that the minimal amount of money—$4,781,000—included in the bond issue for street improvements is long past due for being put to good use.

With the unavoidable delay behind it, though, the City Council now can look to the future and aggressively pursue all of the capital improvement projects.

'But Not Sex...In Every Case'

WASHINGTON—There are times, working in Washington, that one longs for a modern-day Jonathan Swift to satirize the lunacies of our times. We cried out for Swift the other day in the matter of the Great Brigham Young Memorandum of Sexual Settlement.

The question will not go away: How in the world—how in the name of the Founding Fathers, the 14th Amendment and the Commerce Clause—how in the dear name of limited government do we get involved in idiocies such as this?

The answer, I suppose, is that only the Lord and the liberals know.

THIS MARVELOUS affair originated in July of 1976 when an unidentified female undertook to rent an apartment in Provo, Utah.

The landlord said, sorry, but the only vacant unit was in a wing of his building reserved for single men under the terms of his agreement with Brigham Young University.

The unidentified female went off in a huff and filed a formal complaint with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In the spring of 1977, HUD backed the complaint to the Department of Justice.

Brigham Young University is sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. The Mormons impose strict standards of morality upon those who accept the discipline of the church and share in its undertakings.

One of the rules of the university is that single men and single women, if they choose to live off campus, must live in facilities segregated by sex.

About 13,000 of the university's 18,200 students do indeed live off campus, and until the one disgruntled female came along two years ago, the rules had caused no problems worth serious notice.

BUT ONE TROUBLE with bureaucracy is that it rarely evidences any sense of proportion. There is a sensible maxim in jurisprudence, "de minimis non curat lex," but it's often ignored.

The maximum teaches us that the law does not concern itself with trifles, but the trifling matter is one of the things bureaucracy is all about.

The Justice Department took the female's squawk very seriously. It dispatched an ominous letter to Brigham Young University, alleging that the school's requirement for sexual segregation off-campus housing was a violation of the Fair Housing Act of 1968, 42, U.S.C. Section 3604 (a).

Furthermore, unless the violation were ended forthwith, if not sooner, it would be hoops-copus, mandamus, schmandamus, and possible jail terms for the president, the elders and the alto section of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

BRIGHAM YOUNG'S president, Dallin H. Oaks, responded to this intrusive and peremptory assault with a spirited letter of his own, defending the university's right to impose residential rules upon its unmarried students. Oaks pointed out something that Justice had overlooked:

Even the Education Amendments of 1972, prohibiting sex discrimination in programs receiving federal financial assistance, allow for separate men's and women's housing units on and off campus.

19th Street Revival

SAYING BEREAVED families need protection, the Gov't has proposed that funeral homes be put under federal regulation. Together with free abortion clinics and distribution of The Pill, that'd give us Before and After cradle-to-the-grave protectionism.

OPEC oil ministers say they'll have to increase oil prices next January because, thanks to their earlier increases in the price of oil, the dollar isn't worth much any more.

Note to City Mgr. Larry Cunningham: Congratulations on a well-coordinated structure; the police sirens at 3 a.m. wake up the dogs, whose barking then wakes up the motorists, who in turn wake up everybody else as they va-room through residential areas, so that the taxpayers will get up early and go to work so they can pay the taxes to hire the policemen to roar through town at 3 a.m., waking up...

ENLIGHTENED self-interest seems to have sparked something of a renaissance on 19th Street.

Once a shambles of rundown buildings, bulky billboards, atrocious store identification signs and weed-grown sidewalks, the street is taking on an improved appearance.

It still has a long way to go, to be sure, but enough of the property owners have improved their facilities to make a difference in the overall effect and perhaps to serve as an inspiration to the rest.

I was struck by all this while driving westward out 19th Street from Avenue J to University Avenue the other day.

What Happened To Class Of '28

PRINCETON, N.J.—Our Princeton University class of 1928 celebrated its 50th anniversary, having lost about 40 percent of the originals to the Grim Reaper and some dozen living alumni, who did not attend for various reasons, chiefly financial.

This is a once-in-a-lifetime experience which no graduate should miss, and I think the reasons are worth some pontification.

First, the half-century's reunion will almost surely convince the attendant that his life, while shorter than ever, is also sweeter. It can now be looked back upon as a marvelous adventure, no matter what mishaps and sorrows have touched it.

The very beauty of a June campus, even if less floral and verdant than Old Nassau, is tonic from the fountain of youth. There are memories to refresh the weariest soul.

I WENT TO THE university library and leafed through the card catalogue of my books on file, wishing I had done better, but grateful to recall Harry Truman's epitaph at a friend's graveside: "He done his damndest."

I went into the magnificent University Chapel and prayed for those I loved, the quick and the dead. I went to my old dorm, Class of 1879 Hall, which was also used by my brother and saw there on the window sill the gold star that marked his World War II death in Germany, 1945.

I give this brief itinerary because I feel it is universal with men and women who have been lucky enough to make their 50th reunion.

Each will have different scenes to revisit, different memories to recall, but every one of us will reflect upon life and re-evaluate it from the advantage of experience.

I USED TO BELIEVE (and have written) that the challenge to make a fashionable university club, or any club, was preparation for life's satisfactions and disappointments. But I look back upon it as needless torture which our elders should not have tolerated.

I was witness to it in scores of persons. There were undergraduates of a half-century past who were nothing short of being jerks. They lawned on campus personalities who flattered their vanity, and they treated the campus non-entities with disdain.

By far the best satisfaction of my reunion was to find these disagreeable qualities all but expunged by the years.

I think there could not have been two members of the reunion who did not rejoice to meet again,

Suddenly it occurred to me that taking an important visitor along that route might no longer be a personal and civic embarrassment.

Improvements have been coming along gradually, and have been partially offset by deteriorating conditions at a couple of points.

But this stretch of 19th Street clearly demonstrates that an aging commercial strip zone can be revived and preserved as an inviting environment.

ONE STRIKING improvement is the new facade of the Empire Pawn Shop at 19th St. and Ave. K.

Tastefully identified by signs flat against the front of the building, the appearance is a welcome change from the hand-lettered signs that once plastered the site.

The new appearance, if it is maintained, will make the business a much more inviting one.

Alderson Cadillac has improved the corner at 19th St. and Avenue L. The El Charro restaurant, farther up the street, is evidence that old quarters can be kept presentable and contrasts sharply with the weed-infested frontage nearby.

Removal of a nearby wrecking yard has improved the vicinity.

WESTERN MOTORS at 19th St. and Ave. Q should set an example for similar types of businesses wanting to attract customers off the street.

Farther along, Parramore Upholstery caught my eye. Instead of looking like the junky image of an upholstery shop, it gives the appearance of a first-class business run by people who take pride in themselves and their work.

and who did not feel the companionship that should have been there all the time. If I have conveyed any thought here, I hope it is that the world is a much better place than we have allowed ourselves to believe.

Instead of a handbasket bound for hell, instead of communists making any headway at corrupting the decent democracies, instead of cities rotting and poverty rampant, things are better than they were.

No Backing Out Of 'Reverse' Mortgage

SAY YOU ARE AN elderly couple or individual near retirement or actually retired. Your income is relatively low, yet you live in a mortgage-free home which is valued far above its original cost to you.

It's a larger house than you need or want, but you don't want to move. How can you turn this asset into cash without selling it?

One possible answer: the so-called reverse mortgage.

In effect, the plan—under study and experimentation by a few financial institutions—works like this:

You retain the right to live in your home, with the lender sending you the loan principal either in one lump sum or a stream of monthly payments.

Thus, the reverse mortgage enables you to get back some of the equity in your home without your having to move elsewhere.

THE CONCEPT SEEMS simple and certainly appealing to millions of Americans—but there are so many ways to design these mortgages and they are so new that they pose many legal, tax and regulatory problems for both borrowers and lenders.

A major study of alternatives to the familiar mortgage is underway by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, D.C.

"I can see the potential for a lot of good but also for a lot of problems," says Tom Borsilleri, an economist with the American Assn. of Retired Persons. "There are millions of possibilities and millions of pitfalls."

Among the questions to be considered:

• DO YOU WANT TO sacrifice part of your estate that otherwise would go to your heirs?

• If you suddenly came into a sum of money you could profitably invest, can you get out of the reverse mortgage plan, and what would it cost you?

• What would be the total costs of fees to cover appraisal, title insurance, points, other related expenses?

Traditional home financing is itself complicated and the variations of reverse mortgages are almost unlimited. With a type of mortgage so new, untried, unregulated, unstandardized, it's even more essential that you fully understand all details of any plan.

Among the few reverse mortgage programs actually underway today is that offered by the Broadview Savings & Loan Co. in Cleveland, Ohio.

UNDER BROADVIEW'S "Equi-pay Loan," you, a homeowner, may borrow up to 80 percent of your property's value.

You are charged the going mortgage rate (cur-

Even the Good Old City of Lubbock seems to have caught the spirit. It has put out new trees in front of the Goedeke Library, the landscaping around which it had let go to pot in recent years.

Still farther west, a Pizza Hut sign which conforms to the new sign ordinance graphically illustrates that a business can make itself fully visible without exceeding the size or placement restrictions of the new rules.

Long John Silver's, next door, is attractively landscaped but its free-standing sign is out of scale.

A MONSTROUS billboard which dominated the intersection at 19th St. and University Ave. for years has been taken down, making the tasteful front put up by Mister Doyce all the more appealing.

There still are several oversized and mislocated billboards and signs along the street, including an irritating flashing portable sign, but when the courts are finished with the challenges and the sign ordinance is in full force, the street will look even better.

Design Today, Azteca Nuevo, the Texas Bank and other businesses I haven't mentioned are helping convert 19th Street into an attractive business street.

On my drive, I turned left off 19th Street onto University to 34th Street. Driving out 34th Street, were not so many improvements have been made, caused me to appreciate all the more what the 19th Street property owners and merchants are doing.

They're proving that you don't have to make a federal case out of urban renewal.

I don't think anybody would be able to look back 50 years to his campus days and not find improvement in every phase of life.

People are enjoying themselves as never before, if only because the sexual taboos are phasing out. Industrial capitalism is still the technological champ. U.S. agriculture is the cornucopia of foodstuffs. Racism is passe. God has never allowed us to stop believing in him.

What more is there to ask of life?

by Whipple and Borth

Thanks to ALFRED J. PAPON, TONAWANDA, N.Y. — PAPON'S LAW: IT'S A PRINT-OUT, NOT AN OUT OF PRINT.

Yugoslav Communists Bored By President Tito's Speech

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Comrade Fyodor Kulakov of the Soviet Politburo drummed impatiently on the table with his pencil eraser, a thoroughly disdainful expression clouding his features.

On the floor of the vast glass and steel conference center, president-for-life Josip Broz Tito was gently scolding the United States and the Soviet Union for leading the world toward global war.

Comrade Kulakov stifled a yawn. He'd heard it all before.

More eager guest delegates to the 11th Congress of the Yugoslav communist Party from the smaller communist Parties of Asia and Africa struggled to keep attentive gleams in their eyes. But they doodled frantically on their notepads.

The more than 2,000 representatives of Yugoslavia's 1.6 million communists squirmed uncomfortably in their seats and anxiously sought openings in the speech for applause.

They got their first chance when the 86-year-old Tito, casting a wary eye at his audience, announced he would read only selected passages of his 92-page prepared text.

Communist Party congresses, like the congresses of all political parties the world over, are a great big bore.

Western diplomats said their only concern when such a congress was upcoming was to "make sure we don't get stuck attending."

Asked about reaction to Tito's warning that detente between Washington and Moscow had broken down, seriously threatening world peace, one diplomat shrugged: "Oh, that's what he always says."

What of Tito's complaints that the Soviet Union is trying to keep independent Communist parties under its ideological thumb? Or that the United States is using the human rights issue as an excuse to interfere in the internal affairs of other nations?

"Yeah, both these points have come up before — about a hundred times."

"If Tito has something to gripe about to Moscow, Washington or anyone else he'll pass the word along privately," explained a ranking western diplomat as he took a casual stroll to pick up a copy of Tito's speech — more than 12 hours after the text was released.

"Nothing is ever said at these congresses that hasn't been hashed out for months before — within the party and with leaders of the countries to be criticized," he added.

"If there are going to be any surprises, they nearly always let us know in advance."

The diplomat picked up his copy of Tito's speech, thumbed through it and, like comrade Kulakov, yawned.

U.S. Government Offers Tips On Trips To Communist Lands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans traveling to communist countries might as well leave their suitcases unlocked in their hotel rooms, because official snoops probably will search through them anyway.

Tourists in Moscow should "think before taking photographs" and avoid pictures of slums. Russians are sensitive about their image.

One Bible in a tote bag usually will make it past Soviet customs officials, but a tourist runs the risk of being arrested or expelled if he is carrying too many religious articles.

These are some of the tips prepared by the U.S. government to help keep travelers out of trouble when visiting communist countries. Tourists can learn all the do's and don't's from pamphlets issued by the State Department's Passport Office. Government employees with security clearances receive special vacation briefings.

"Anyone who leaves the United States and enters a foreign country becomes vulnerable to its rules and regulations, whether we know them or not," said Loren E. Lawrence, deputy assistant secretary of state for passport services. "That kind of vulnerability we try to neutralize by providing as much information as possible to the traveler," he said.

A four-page pamphlet, available at passport offices and travel agencies, stresses that travelers should change dollars into rubles only at official exchange centers and should always keep the receipts.

Other helpful tips:

- Be prepared to pay customs duties on gifts for Soviet relatives.
- Don't bring in magazines with photos of nudes. They are regarded as pornographic and will be confiscated.
- Don't try to take out of the Soviet Union any artifacts or antiques such as samovars unless they have been cleared for export by Soviet authorities.

The pamphlet notes that "the overwhelming majority of Soviet citizens who approach a traveler do so from motives of friendliness and hospitality, and the traveler should not feel impelled to look for ulterior motives behind such signs of friendship."

But when Americans have been working with classified information and decide to visit communist-controlled countries, they are warned against being "lulled into a false sense of security by friendly people" because there might be a spy around every corner, a microphone behind every painting and "possible exploitation attempts" everywhere.

A tourist who is being followed should not become unduly excited or concerned, the briefing advises, but "don't try to show how sharp you are by challenging your tail."

If hidden eavesdropping devices are discovered, the briefer says, do nothing. Hidden closed circuit television, telephone lenses and infrared cameras "can catch you in the utmost privacy, and their version of candid camera isn't played for laughs."

Travelers should give a polite but firm "no" to any request to take a letter or package to a relative living in the United States.

As for sex and liquor, given their use in entrapment, "the first should be avoided and the second taken with moderation."

Mathematics Council Devises Plan To Improve Subject's Image

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer
Math has an image problem. Mom or Dad tend to excuse a child's poor performance in the subject with: "So what, I was a dunce at math. The kid inherited no math ability from me."

The National Council of Teachers of Mathematics thinks math deserves better treatment. At its annual meeting in San Diego, the council voted for a five-year plan to improve math's image and the public's attitude toward it.

President John C. Esgard, who "teaches children not math" in Ontario, Canada, said the goal is "a generation of boys and girls happy in math."

To be good at math is to be happy at it. However, Esgard said children can't be proficient without homework — a not-so-happy word with many of today's boys and girls.

In math, as in many other fields, practice makes perfect. Without the practice, the student can't learn to be good at square roots, fractions, division, addition and all the other sometimes puzzling mathematical things.

Esgard also told the math educators they must find a way to interest students in geometry.

An update on hand-held calculators, presented at the annual session, shows they do not hurt student performance. Some math teachers feared that might be the case when the calculators became fixtures in classrooms.

Marilyn Suydam, head of the Calculator Information Center at Ohio State University in Columbus, reported:

—About 50 percent of studies on calculators favor the calculators, showing that students with calculators apparently do better than students without —About 50 percent of studies came to the conclusion there is no significant difference between students who use calculators and students who do not.

"As long term studies come in, 'the no-significant-difference' figure may go to 60 percent," she said.

A proponent of calculators, George Immerzeel, University of Northern Iowa, told the math teachers he believes the calculators help young children to learn basic math facts.

Multiplication tables, for one example, are learned by repeating, according to Immerzeel. They are repeated until they form a picture in the mind.

He said the picture is formed much faster by seeing it repeatedly on a calculator dial.

An urgent question for the math teachers, according to Suydam, is this: "Are we going to teach math differently because of the calculator?"

The Council plans to nurture development of materials that use calculators and other computing devices.

The math teachers also took on the minimum competency movement — launched as an outraged public demands that graduates of the nation's public schools have at least survival skills in math.

President-elect Shirley Gill, from the University of Missouri, cautioned against teaching for the competency tests. In other words, making the goals of math teaching only good performance on the tests.

The easiest course, she said, would be to raise math scores by "teaching rote learning in a mechanistic way."

Chinese Industry Enjoys Better Times

By H. L. STEVENSON
CHUNGKING, China (UPI) — In this city of soaring hills, Lei Hung's life in the machine tool factory he runs has been on a roller coaster in recent years.

Leading a parade of American visitors through a sprawling complex of buildings, several the size of football fields, he points with pride to the drill presses, lathes and assembly lines turning out gear-cutting equipment taller than a man's head.

These mainstays of heavy manufacturing produced by the Chungking Machine Tool Plant are exported to 23 countries, including Sweden, Canada, North Korea and several in Africa.

Last year's results were excellent, Lei reports when the formal tour is finished, with a 26 percent increase in production.

That translated, he says, into a profit of 3.1 million yuan ($1.8 million) for the state, which owns the plant, sets the production quotas and markets the output.

Lei's job is to meet the quotas with his 3,600 employees, and he's ahead of schedule for this year. If things go well, his factory will finish its 1978 goal in November. Profits should hit 5 million yuan.

The picture has not always been as rosy, he explains to the visiting editors representing United Press International on a 17-day tour of the People's Republic of China.

Production started falling in 1973, and during the next four years the plant turned out 1,200 fewer machines, and this, according to the director, meant a loss of 60 million yuan ($34.8 million).

The chief cause, Lei proclaims, was the "interference" by China's "Gang of Four," the radical group which sought unsuccessfully to seize power prior to and after the death of Mao Tse-tung, chairman of the Chinese Communist Party. All four, and many of their followers, are now under detention.

Lei's story is familiar to the touring editors. Followers of the "gang" caused widespread disruptions at hundreds of plants, they are told. Production nosedived. Other plant directors have complained of the constant interference and time lost by endless committee meetings and complaint sessions.

The radicals also succeeded in the abolition of a fledgling system of incentive pay and bonuses to workers who excelled in their work.

Under the "gang's" plan, everyone drew the same salary, depending on the job performed.

"To each according to his work," was a phrase heard often on the recent tour, signalling a new direction for industrial compensation and part of the country's goal to move ahead.

Workers in factories such as the one Lei runs make up to 105 yuan ($61.90) per month.

They also receive free medical care and, in many instances, subsidized housing and other benefits.

Since the first of the year, the Chungking tool factory has been paying bonuses of 8 to 10 yuan per month, with some as high as 15, for exceptional work and high yields.

Spot checks at other factories, including a steel plant, another machine tool works and a glass factory, indicate bonuses are in the neighborhood of 10 percent.

Lei proudly points out small red banners tacked to a large display board in each assembly building. They list the name of the previous month's top achievers, and bonus winners.

Elsewhere in the factory, production quotas and each worker's "scorecard" is prominently posted. Bright red banners strung to the rafters exhort the various departments and challenge other departments.

The incentives have been widely publicized within China in recent months.

The People's Daily, the official party organ, editorialized in April: "It must be realized that there should be differences in pay for workers because of the differences in work and production."

"To deny these differences means negating the socialist principle: 'To each according to his work and more pay for more work.'"

The daily also acknowledged the pay of Chinese laborers is still relatively low, and a 10 percent bonus for a worker making 100 yuan is not exactly approaching capitalist standards.

"Even if the wage system is raised in the future, it will still be a low-wage system," the paper said.

Two or three managers or supervisors told the UPI group that the "revolutionary committees" set up in most factories during the Cultural Revolution of the 1960s, and carried forward until the "Gang of Four" power maneuver, have been abolished. These committees were comprised of management, workers and members of the People's Liberation Army.

Several managers complained privately the process was cumbersome and inefficient.

The abolition means that the running of major industrial producers is back in the hands of professional management, a move undoubtedly tied to China's announced goal earlier this year to achieve parity with the United States and the Soviet Union by the end of this century.

The incentive system has caused headaches in some plants.

In Canton, the provincial economics association held a long discussion earlier this year. A text broadcast later posed several questions, including whether veteran workers would receive consideration if their output, and wages, dropped. Should complicated jobs receive special favor over lesser tasks?

And in Anhwei province, another broadcast reported the dismissal of a party official and a warning to another who participated in a scheme to add more than 300 workers to a list of those eligible for incentive pay or salary increases. It resulted in the doubling of pay for those actually eligible, and "created serious chaos" in the wage revision plan.

Almost everywhere, Peking Radio has reported, the enthusiasm of workers has been "greatly aroused." Describing the situation in a coal mine in South China, the broadcast said: "The number of absentees and workers who abuse their leave or refuse to work hard has sharply dropped."

Labor Force Definition Enlarges Jobless Rate

By JOHN CUNNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes we shouldn't try to puzzle out the meanings of what appear to be almost inexplicable economic problems or phenomenon. Not when an "explanation" may lie right before our eyes.

— Why do we often fail to balance the federal budget despite repeated promises from our presidents?

James McIntyre Jr., the president's budget director, provided a sparkling explanation. Presidents, it appears, can be procrastinators. In an interview with U.S. News & World Report, he stated:

"The president remains firmly committed to balancing the budget, and so do I. But if you have to defer it a year or two, that is something we may just have to do."

— Why is it so difficult to bring down the unemployment rate?

Because it is a ratio of the total civilian labor force, which tends to enlarge itself when job prospects improve. This often results in a rising jobless rate while thousands of new jobs are being created.

Do not misunderstand: We, the people are not caught in a diabolical dilemma; the statistics are. And they are because of the way we define the labor force.

A woman, for example, is not part of the labor force if she is not actively seeking work. When the jobless rate improves she might decide to look. If she does not connect immediately, she is "unemployed."

More than 94 million Americans, 59 percent of the working-age population, had jobs in May. Both figures are records. Still, the jobless rate rose to 6.1 percent from 6 percent in April.

— If consumers have been getting more pessimistic, why have retail sales held up? Hasn't it been considered axiomatic that pessimistic consumers consume less?

Well, yes, it had been. Confronted by uncertainty or doubt, it was said, consumers would sit heavily on their folded wallets or keep their pocketbooks clasped. But it has not been happening.

Analysis

The consumer sentiment index at the University of Michigan has been slanting down for close to a year now, and sales have not followed. Wouldn't that seem to fracture the maxim?

The consumer behaviorists claim it does not. They explain it as a temporary phenomenon, characterized by frightened consumers buying in advance of higher prices or of other fears about the future.

But, they insist, the rule still holds. Richard Curtin, director of the survey, says the buy-in-advance syndrome "is inevitably a source of future weakness." That is, the downturn has merely been postponed.

— Why does government grow?

Because there is no limit to the number of desirable benefits we seek to achieve.

The control of cancer, military security, improved medical care, safer highways, a healthy work environment, Social Security.

The bureaucracy that administers these chores may add to the problem by inefficiency and an inherent tendency to grow larger. But the problem begins with the demands made by the public, or segments of it.

Alex McMahon, American Hospital Association head, once reminded the public it could continue to spend in a never-ending quest for better medical care, but that the end result would be to go broke.

He said hard decisions eventually may have to be made, if they are not already being made, as who should live and who should be permitted to die.

Amsterdam's canals are crossed by some 1,000 bridges, compared with Venice's 700.

Letter Links Ford To Purchase

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A letter was introduced into evidence today indicating W. Jaye Ford was the behind-the-scenes purchaser of the Slaton Savings and Loan Association in 1972.

The letter — purportedly signed by Ford — was to "acknowledge" that buyer Edward T. Miller was acting for Ford when Miller gained control of the financial institution July 13, 1972.

The brief document said Miller was acting for Ford and in his behalf.

The letter was addressed to Frank R. Young, who at the time reportedly controlled 7,500 shares of stock.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Slough asked Young, one of the chief witnesses during the first day of Ford's jury trial in U.S. District Court here, why he had requested the letter from Ford.

"I wanted to make sure Ford was acting for himself and no one else and asked for a letter as confirmation," Young testified.

Slough asked Young for his understanding of Miller's role in the purchase. "That Miller was acting for him (Ford)," the witness replied.

Ford, 36, of Dallas, is accused in criminal charges of conspiring to embezzle and misapply funds of Slaton Savings and Loan in 1973.

Miller, 45, who was scheduled to be a co-defendant in the trial, pleaded guilty to one count of the indictment and is expected to be a key witness later in the trial.

Miller served as the savings and loan association's chairman of the board.

An indictment returned in April alleged a conspiracy by the defendants followed this scenario:

— On July 30, 1973, defendants were alleged to have caused an appraisal to be made of approximately eight acres of land near the intersection of Loop 289 and Quaker Avenue. A written statement submitted to the savings and loan showed the market value of the land as $625,000 and was intentionally over-valued, the government contends.

— The indictment charges the alleged false statement was made in order to influence the association to make a $500,000 loan to Bay Tree Investments, Inc.

— On August 23, Ford and Miller were alleged to have caused the association to convey the property to Bay Tree and to loan Bay Tree $500,000 for the purchase.

— On or about on the same date, defendants allegedly caused the association to sell a participation in the Bay Tree loan to the Franklin Bank of Houston.

— On or about August 28, Ford allegedly received $94,000 of the proceeds of the association loan to Bay Tree in the form of a check from Bay Tree payable to Bankers Financial Services, Inc.

The government charges that Ford was connected with the savings and loan and acted as its agent while at the same time being connected with Bay Tree Investments, Inc.

In an opening statement to jurors, attorney Tom Sims of Houston indicated that Ford's defense is that, basically, he was not connected with the Slaton Savings and Loan or its operations.

Sims pointed out that purchased documents were signed by Miller as trustee and said stock was transferred to Miller.

Ford, Sims indicated, did guarantee a note to Young and therefore did have an interest in seeing that the association was properly run.

Among specific points, the defense attorney said he believes evidence will show Ford had nothing to do with the purported $625,000 appraisal or with the alleged transaction in which a loan was made to Bay Tree and note allegedly sold to the Houston bank.

Ford was not aware of the origin of the $94,000 to Bankers Financial Services, Sims said.

After opening statements, the prosecution concentrated on presenting evidence to try and show that Ford was the behind-the-scenes purchaser and a controlling force in the savings and loan.

Along with Young, the government presented testimony from Lubbock real estate man and developer W.B. "Dub" Blankenship.

Blankenship testified that Ford had approached him about buying the savings and loan for a price of about $1.6 million.

The witness said he believed several discussions of the matter between him and Ford took place in late 1973 and early 1974.

At one point during the same approximate time span, Blankenship testified, Ford had discussed with him the possibility of putting Blankenship's son on the board of directors. The witness said Ford told him he would have to discuss the matter with Miller.

Blankenship said his son later served on the board.

Local Woman Dies In Fall From Truck

A 39-year-old Lubbock woman, mother of four children, was killed early today in Tennessee when she apparently fell out of the cab of a moving tractor-trailer rig driven by her husband.

The woman was identified as Mary Ann Gould of 206 51st St. She was traveling with her husband, C.L. Gould, west on Interstate 40 about 38 miles east of Memphis, Tenn., when the 1:45 a.m. accident occurred.

Mrs. Gould apparently choked on some coffee, opened the cab door and accidentally fell out while the truck was moving about 60 miles an hour, according to investigating Fayette County Deputy Bob Gaither.

Mrs. Gould was pronounced dead on arrival at Fayette County General Hospital and then taken to Fayette County Funeral Home. Her body is to be transferred to Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home here, where arrangements are pending.

A family member said Mrs. Gould was "just along for the ride" with her husband, who is a truck driver for Goulds Pumps Inc. He had taken a shipment to Cleveland, Ohio, and was on the way back to Lubbock when the mishap occurred.

Mrs. Gould is survived by her husband, two daughters, Gwendolyn and Glee Ann, and two sons, Timothy and Russell, all of the home; her mother, Mary Alice Blackwell of Newton, Miss.; two sisters, Diane Bryson of Newton and Bonnie Black of Fort Worth; four brothers, D.B. and John Blackwell, both of Newton, Dannie Blackwell of Meridian, Miss., and Sonny Blackwell of Borger.

Greek Earthquake Deaths Number 26

SALONICA, Greece (UPI) — New tremors shook this devastated biblical city today as the death toll from Tuesday night's earthquake rose to 26, with 20 other persons reported missing.

More than 100 others were injured in the quake which left Salonica, a nearly deserted city with about three-fourths of its population of more than 700,000 having fled to safety.

Nineteen of the known dead were killed in the collapse of a modern eight-story apartment building, one of the few modern buildings severely hit by the quake. Rescue workers found 10 bodies under the wreckage of the building today and a police spokesman said another dozen of the occupants were still unaccounted for.

Nicholas Martis, minister for Northern Greece, said he feared the death toll would rise as rescue workers cleared the wreckage.

"If we are struck again with a quake as strong as Tuesday's we may face a tragic page in our history," Nikos Ermis, member of parliament for this industrial city in northern Greece told reporters.

As aftershocks at the rate of several an hour kept the city trembling, hundreds of residents fled. Salonica airport was crowded with travelers seeking to fly to Athens. Olympic Airways put on extra flights to handle the rush.

Hundreds more lined up at bus stations for buses out of the region. City officials estimated 75 percent of Salonica's 720,000 population had already fled the city. Most of those remaining camped in open spaces or moved to one-story homes of relatives, considered safer.

Wednesday's powerful quake, which measured 6.5 on the open-ended Richter scale, toppled or severely damaged scores of buildings in the city whose history goes back to the time of Alexander the Great.

Among the damaged buildings was the American Consulate general building. It suffered cracks running all the way from the basement to the sixth floor, which is used to accommodate American personnel.

Consul General Dan Thackeray has asked Washington to send a government engineer to inspect the building to determine if it could continue in use.

Fears of frightened Salonica residents were stirred by the fact that three government seismologists did not exclude the possibility of further major earth tremors similar to Tuesday's devastating quake.

Costas Papapazahos, professor of seismology at Salonica University, said apartments and other buildings already cracked in Tuesday's quake could not resist another like it. The major tremor registered 6.5 in the open-ended Richter scale.

Foster Homes Planned For Elderly In Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Like friendless orphans, old folks who are too sick to live alone but too well to stay in hospitals will be placed in foster homes.

The unique program is being set up by Massachusetts General Hospital to take care of elderly patients who have no place else to go. The hospital wants to find a place for dozens of old people who fill its beds but at the same time keep them out of nursing homes.

"We want to prevent the institutionalization of people when they are leaving the hospital," said Nat Butler of Massachusetts General's Social Service Department.

"Right now, if someone is elderly and needs some kind of care — no matter how minimal it might be — he by default has to go into a nursing home if he doesn't have a family," Butler said. "That usually means he will be institutionalized for the rest of his life."

During a typical month, the 1,084-bed hospital has 23 patients who do not need to be there. They are admitted for treatment but have no place to go when they get better. The total bill for these people adds up to $1.1 million a year.

The hospital is now recruiting families to take the patients and plans to begin turning them over to the foster homes in September. Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore is also planning to start a similar experimental program.

The foster homemakers will receive training in how to take care of their elderly guests.

"We hope to provide an alternative to nursing homes so that the quality of their lives will be higher," Butler said.

The new program will be cheaper, too.

A nursing home that provides basic health care charges $810 a month, Butler said. The foster homes will receive about $300 a month for each patient.

The elderly people will pay for most of that cost with their social security checks, he said. The rest will be made up by two private foundations.

In a one-year trial, the hospital plans to place about 30 patients in foster homes.

Butler said the ideal foster home is too big for its owners, who include someone with nursing experience and want the companionship of an older person plus some extra income.

He said hospital workers will check on the discharged patients regularly to make sure they are happy and well cared for in their new homes.

Delacroix Painting Brings $813,000

The Delacroix brought the top price among 100 canvases and sculptures sold for a total of $1.86 million at an auction Wednesday night.

Airline Seeks Service Halt

HOUSTON (UPI) — Texas International Airlines announced today it would file an application Friday with the Civil Aeronautics Board to suspend service to Clovis, Carlsbad and Hobbs in eastern New Mexico.

Airline Vice President David L. Brown said the suspension, if granted by the CAB, would be effective July 1.

Airline officials cited "sharply decreased passenger revenue and traffic" as the primary reason for seeking the suspension.

The airline said it began its efforts to suspend service to the eastern New Mexico points in March.

"At that time, it indicated to the cities that it would work with them to find a solution to their air transportation needs," a company release said.

The airline said at least three commuter airlines, Air Midwest of Wichita, Kan., Zia Airlines of Las Cruces and Crown Airlines of Clovis, "have expressed an interest in serving these points."

"Under TIA's proposal, all three carriers would have the opportunity to serve the cities and Texas International will work with whichever carrier or carriers initiates services," the airline release said.

Braniff Claims CAB Approval

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International said Thursday the Civil Aeronautics Board has tentatively approved its application to provide supersonic Concorde service between Dallas-Fort Worth, Washington, London and Paris.

Braniff said it hoped it could start service by October.

The CAB told its staff Thursday to draft an order to show cause why Braniff's application to provide the SST service with Air France and British Airways should not be granted.

Under an interchange agreement with the two foreign airlines, Braniff would operate the Concorde subsonically between Dallas-Fort Worth and Washington, Air France and British Airways will assume operations of their respective Concordes at Washington, with the Europe-bound passengers remaining on board for the trans-Atlantic flight at twice the speed of sound.

Braniff's flight from Texas to Washington would be at 95 percent of the speed of sound as compared to the 80 percent of the speed of sound of conventional jets. This would reduce the flight time by 12 percent to two hours and eight minutes.

Border Cities Have Long History As Vacation Spot

First came the Spaniards in the 1600's. Next, it was the Indians who accompanied the Spaniards to the famed "Paso del Norte." Finally, it was the cowboys and the notorious gunfighters that came to El Paso ... shaping the Rio Grande city into the exciting tri-cultural metropolitan city that it is today.

Spaniard Cabeza de Vaca in search of the seven cities of gold; the Tigua Indians, who built the still standing missions that formed the beginnings of El Paso; the notorious like Billy the Kid, John Wesley Hardin, and Pancho Villa ... all came to the twin cities of El Paso and Juarez for more or less the same reason — to enjoy the activities of the most exciting city the West had ever known.

From those wild early days El Paso has developed into a city unlike any major city in the country, complete with all the facilities of any metropolitan center including a $22 million convention complex. El Paso is served by four international airlines with Amtrak, Greyhound and Continental Trailways available for the ground traveler. Included in the area is a major university, community college, 80 hotels-motels, excellent sporting activities and a climate that has caused El Paso to become known as the "Sun City."

One hundred years before the Pilgrims shivered through their first New England winter, the Spanish Conquistadores were basking in the mountain-cooled of El Paso. The altitude (3,500 feet) is high, but not too high and the dry climate combines to make mild temperatures average 75 degrees year-round. It is interesting to note that the sun has failed to shine only 22 days in the last 14 years.

Straddling the Rio Grande River at the tip of the only year-round snow free pass in the Rockies, an international city has been carved consisting of the sister cities of El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico. As the Mexican bean jumps, so do the activities abound. From football to bullfights, Mariachis to country music, jets to donkey carts, bustling market places to awe-inspiring vistas, it only happens where two nations meet.

Recognized as the largest U.S. city on the Mexican border, El Paso still retains its individuality and flavor of Spanish-Mexican heritage. Under the rule of Spain until 1821, El Paso became a part of the Mexican Republic in 1824.

It was in 1827 that the first known residents of El Paso, as distinguished from the earlier city south of the Rio Grande, settled around a ranch house in the heart of present day downtown El Paso.

In 1836, El Paso officially became a part of the newly formed Republic of Texas and in 1845 the U.S. State of Texas. However, local government remained essentially Mexican until the Gadsden Purchase of the strip of Arizona and New Mexico by the United States. Army troops came through El Paso in late 1846 and a small garrison was stationed in the area between 1849 and 1851. In 1854, the military post at El Paso was permanently established and named Fort Bliss.

As a strategic location on travel routes, Paso del Norte became an important stage coach station. In 1857, the Southern Overland Mail and Butterfield Stage used the city of El Paso as a vital link in their operations. Railroads arrived in El Paso in 1881, connecting California and St. Louis.

Following the fall of Mexican Dictator-President Porfirio Diaz in 1910, Pancho Villa became a revolutionary in the Mexican state of Chihuahua. El Paso served as the headquarters for Villa's junta and base for obtaining munitions and supplies.

Villa was often seen in El Paso until reports of brutalities caused support from the U.S. to be withdrawn. Following Villa's raid on Columbus, N.M., El Paso became the base for a U.S. expedition into the Mexican state of Chihuahua, led by General John J. Pershing, with the purpose of capturing the bandit. The year-long expedition was unsuccessful in capturing Villa, who was later fatally shot from ambush by enemies.

With such a history, especially with people like Villa, Hardin and Billy the Kid, it is easy to see why El Paso was considered wild and wooley. El Paso today, although not as wild, is still one of the most exciting cities to be found anywhere.

An integral part of that excitement is El Paso's sister city ... Juarez. From a little church of "branches and mud and a monastery thatched with straw," the City of Juarez, has grown to a bustling meropolis of over 600,000. Along the way, over 440 years of history have intertwined two cultures and built a friendship of two nations.

Juarez has the echoes of clanking Spanish armor, squeaking leather saddles, the rippling sound of ripe earth being plowed, and the hawk of market vendors. Much has changed, and yet has not changed. Juarez is just as unique in many aspects as when Conquistadores strode its land.

Juarez was founded by Fray Garcia de San Francisco y Zuniga, a brown-robed Franciscan priest, on December 8, 1659. He named his settlement El Paso del Norte, the Pass to the North.

It already served that function for the Spanish for over 100 years. Among the early visitors was Juan de Oñate, who crossed the sand dunes south of the site, made camp 17 miles south of the present city, and claimed possession of "all the kingdoms and provinces of Mexico on the Rio del Norte in the name of Lord King Phillip." That was in 1598.

Fray Garcia's mission was dedicated to the Virgin of Guadalupe, the patron saint of Mexico. Grains and fruits flourished in the rich soil, and the mission grape made the region renowned for its superior wine.

Wagon and mule trains plied the long trail from Mexico City to Santa Fe, and the Pass became an important stopping point. Gold and silver ore from New Mexico mines made the return trip through Juarez.

El Paso del Norte became the provisional capital of New Mexico during an Indian uprising in the north. It later was the provisional capital of Mexico when President Benito Juarez fled from the French troops of Emperor Maximilian.

The city changed its name in 1888 to honor the little Indian president, becoming Ciudad Juarez. Soon after, the American city across the Rio Grande took the name El Paso.

In 1909, President Porfirio Diaz met with American President Howard Taft in Juarez. That same Diaz was swept from power in the Mexican Revolution track, two bullrings, and two "lienzos" for charreadas or Mexican rodeos.

Visitors find the best in Mexican handicrafts in artistic glass factories, curio shops, stores, and silver factories, as well as boot, saddle and leather shops. Most international credit cards are accepted in Juarez.

From Juarez, trains go to Mexico City and branch through the high Sierra Madre mountain range to brush the rim of Mexico's Grand Canyons — Las Barrancas — so big, five of Arizona's canyons can go in them.

Visitor attractions include: the Customs House at Juarez and 16 de Septiembre Avenues, where Pancho Villa and others held sway; the Mission of Guadalupe, just west of the Customs House; the Anthropology and History Museum in the Pronaf Shopping Center where the National Handicrafts Center and other shops are also located; the Chamaizal Monument Park commemorating the treaty returning land to Mexico from the U.S.; and the Juarez Market.

No longer just a pass to the north — El Paso is a tri-cultural gateway to entertainment, excitement, and adventure. Old Spanish missions, the University of Texas at El Paso, the Sun Bowl, golfing great Lee Trevino and his Santa Teresa Country Club, western-style trail rides into the desert, tennis, polo, horseracing, boating, hiking, mountain climbing, pine forests, breath-taking rock formations, Juarez — the list is endless — El Paso is the gateway to it all!

For general tourist information, write: The Convention and Visitors Bureau, 5 Civic Center Plaza, El Paso, 79601. The bureau has information for both walking and auto tours. Gray Line features bus tours of El Paso and Juarez.

OLD MISSIONS — The San Elizario Mission in El Paso is one of the oldest in the U.S., established in the 1680's and antedating California missions. Another mission, is the oldest parish church in Texas.

SHOPPERS' FAVORITE — La Villita, a popular stopover for shoppers and tourists, is one of El Paso's most unique shopping centers. Composed of re-conditioned old homes, La Villita's shops remain one of the few remembrances of the past in El Paso.

TRI-CULTURAL GATEWAY — Colorful desert mountains surround the Rio Grande City of El Paso, where winters are always mild and summers are warm. Situated in the famous "Pass of the North," the 1.3 million residents of El Paso and Juarez, Mexico's fourth largest city, bask in the desert sun.

BIG AND BEAUTIFUL — One of the most modern facilities anywhere, the $20 million El Paso Civic Center is equipped for almost any event, convention, theater or symphony. The El Paso Symphony Orchestra features free summer concerts.

AERIAL TRAMWAY — An enclosed cable car takes El Paso visitors to a view of three states and two nations for a panoramic scene of 7,000 square miles.

DESERT BEAUTY — All around El Paso is some of the most beautiful desert and mountain scenery found anywhere. From towering mountains to rolling sand dunes stretching as far as the eye can see, it's all there to be enjoyed El Paso.

Winds, Hail Slam Areas In Midwest

A-J News Services
Thunderstorms packing high winds, hail and heavy rains slammed into sections of the Midwest Wednesday night and early today, as Texans braced for scorching temperatures on the first full day of summer.

The heaviest storms on the Great Plains were in Nebraska, where tornadoes damaged property west of Atchworth, hail as large as golf balls broke car windshields near Ashton, and 2 inches of rain fell at Long Pine.

Thunderstorms moved out of Oklahoma early today after a series of twisters and heavy rains. A school at Calumet was damaged by high winds Wednesday, and gusts damaged homes at Yukon, Elgin and Anadarko. No injuries were reported, however.

A severe thunderstorm was indicated by radar near Tatum, in eastern New Mexico, Wednesday night, but it missed populated areas.

Heavy rain and hail hit the Kansas City area this morning during the rush hour, snarling traffic.

Meanwhile, residents of Lubbock and the South Plains braced for another blistering day.

The summer season officially opened Wednesday with 100-degree readings in Lubbock and a number of other cities around the state.

And Lubbock is expected to have its hottest days of the year so far with temperatures near 102 today and Friday.

The previous high reading was 101 last Friday.

After Wednesday's Summer Solstice at 1:10 p.m., temperatures reached 100 at Big Spring, Dimmitt, Locketville, Olton and Plains.

It was 101 at Seminole.

Elsewhere over Texas, it was 100 at Abilene, Alpine, Marfa, Wichita Falls and Alice.

El Paso was the hottest major city at 105, and Presidio was the hottest place in the state at 110.

The wind today was predicted to be southerly to southwesterly at 15 to 25 miles per hour and gusty and from the same direction tonight at 10 to 15 mph.

Wind warnings are out for area lakes.

The low tonight should be in the low 70s.

Overnight low temperatures ranged from 77 at Dallas and 81 at Galveston to 57 at Marfa in the Southwest Texas mountains and 65 at the Muleshoe Wildlife Refuge and 66 at Brownfield and Hereford.

Hijackers Abandon Big Haul

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (AP) — After abandoning an all-night stakeout, state police opened a hijacked tractor-trailer today and found its cargo of $1.6 million in gold and silver intact.

Two armed, masked men hijacked the truck early Wednesday on I-95 in North Stonington, chaining the driver to a tree. The driver, who was alone, was not injured. The truck was found about seven hours after the hijacking.

Hoping the hijackers would return for the loot, police kept the truck under surveillance until early this morning. The stakeout was abandoned after word leaked out that the truck had been found.

Carrying precious metals in impure form, the truck was headed from Handy Harman's metal fabricating plant in Fairfield to the firm's refinery in Attleboro, Mass.

There was no explanation why the hijackers apparently made no attempt to open the truck. A seal on the door had not been broken.

With a massive air and land search, police located the truck at 1 p.m. about 10 miles from the hijack site Wednesday. It was partially hidden in a heavily overgrown area, state trooper John McLeod said.

The hijack occurred at 6 a.m. Wednesday when the truck driver, George A. Smith, had stopped to check an unspecified possible defect. Two masked men armed with guns forced him out of the truck and tied him to a tree, police said. He freed himself and called police after 15 minutes, officials said.

Handy Harman makes daily shipments of precious metals between the two locations, said Richard Daniel, company vice president. The firm is the largest single producer of silver in the United States and the primary fabricator of silver and gold, he said.

There was no security guard traveling with the 4,000-pound shipment, authorities said. But Stephen Mudd, the treasurer of Handy Harman, said the company has an extensive security system that had "been circumvented in some manner."

Joseph Yablonski, an assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Boston office, said "The mechanics involved (in the hijack) are no slicker than taking a truckload of Coca-Cola."

Daniel said if it became clear that security procedures for the daily shipment have been compromised, they will be revised.

did not feel we could accept tax money if there are more and better uses for it."

The council approved the request and asked that the funds be reallocated into the contingency fund until another need for the money is found.

Representatives of the American Association of Retired Persons told the council what features were needed when a new senior citizens' center is constructed here.

Community Development funds have been approved for such a center, and a search for a site is currently underway.

The council also approved an urban renewal plan for the Stubbs School area, but no funds were allocated for the neighborhood.

Later today, the council was scheduled to:

- Consider selling the auditorium-coliseum to Texas Tech University.
- Take action on a resolution directed at city club owners who discriminate against minority customers.
- Discuss revisions in Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan's proposed substandard housing ordinance.
- Set a schedule for the sale of $26.4 million in general obligation bonds.
- Consider a zone change request from residential to commercial by W.D. "Dub" Rogers Jr. for property located at 78th Street and Indiana Avenue.

Officers' Gunfire Spoils Violent Escape Attempt

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — One deputy sheriff was killed, another was seriously wounded and a courtroom fugitive was hospitalized under police guard after a series of chases and a hostage standoff of almost five hours.

Police Chief David Couper said Wednesday night that Filemon Amaro Jr., 33, was hospitalized in satisfactory condition with a shoulder wound. Police shot him after he stepped from the car of an alleged hostage. Officers said Amaro had a pistol drawn.

County social worker and former Milwaukee police officer Nellie Gurrath, the hostage, survived several exchanges of gunfire that began in the Waukesha County Courthouse 60 miles east of Madison and ended when Amaro stepped out of her car and was wounded, police said. Authorities said Amaro was in court for a hearing on a sex charge and was to be returned to jail when a scuffle broke out between Amaro and Michael Geszvain, 52, a Waukesha County deputy sheriff serving as a courtroom bailiff.

Geszvain's pistol was seized and he was fatally wounded during the struggle with Amaro, who then took Mrs. Gurrath hostage, police said.

Deputy Quin O'Brien, 50, was hospitalized in critical condition, shot in the head and leg when he tried to assist Geszvain.

Officials said no charges would be filed until after all parties involved in the case could be questioned.

Officers said Amaro used an unidentified attorney as a shield to leave the courtroom, then forced Mrs. Gurrath into an elevator. Several shots were fired from the elevator before Mrs. Gurrath and Amaro were seen walking to her car in a parking lot.

An auto wrecker driver who heard a broadcast description of Mrs. Gurrath's car reportedly notified police when he saw it in Madison about an hour after the Waukesha shootings.

Policeman Dennis Reno said the car was pursued about 10 blocks, then was disabled at a business boulevard intersection by gunfire. With at least one tire flat and with dozens of policemen crouching behind cars, a team of plainclothes officers tried to persuade Amaro to surrender.

When Amaro suddenly pushed open his car door, Mrs. Gurrath thrust open the door on her driver's side of the car and dropped to the pavement, police said. Then police fired on Amaro.

"He pointed a gun at one of our hostage negotiators. There is kind of a breakdown in negotiations when that happens," Police Chief Couper said.

Hughes Case Rejected By High Court

side which state was Hughes' "home" when he died.

Noting that each state was under no obligation to respect the findings of the other as to Hughes' domicile, California lawyers said the Hughes estate could be assessed more in death taxes than its total assets.

Texas officials, however, have argued that there is no chance of over-taxation.

Three justices today wrote opinions explaining why they concurred in the court's action.

In essence, Justices Potter Stewart, William J. Brennan Jr. and Lewis F. Powell Jr. said the court's "original jurisdiction" should not extend to controversies over states' competing claims to death taxes.

Court documents in the Hughes case indicate that the estate's administrators have estimated its taxable value at $51.7 million to the Internal Revenue Service.

Estimates of Hughes' fortune, official and unofficial, range from more than $166.8 million to $2 billion.

If California and Texas both were to tax the estate, the empire's taxable assets apparently would be liable to a 16 percent bite from Texas and 24 percent from California — as well as a 61 percent taking by the federal government.

Hughes' heirs have contested the tax claims of both Texas and California, asserting that Hughes was a resident of Nevada — the only state without death taxes.

Just who will receive what in the bizarre Hughes' case remains clouded. A long trial in Las Vegas ended with a finding that the so-called Mormon will supposedly left behind by Hughes was a phony.

As noted by California officials who sought Supreme Court help, the matter is complicated by "the unusual, indeed, bizarre, way in which Hughes lived."

"As far as is presently known," California told the justices, "home for Hughes during the last 10 years of his life was a series of barren hotel rooms which fulfilled only the most primitive function of a home... shelter against the rain."

Four Urban Guerrilla Suspects Flown Back To West Germany

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Bulgarian authorities acting on a tip from a vacationing Berlin prison official and aided by a terrorist-hunting computer have arrested four West German urban guerrilla suspects and shipped them back to their homeland, West German officials said today.

The Bonn government said they included escaped prisoner Till Meyer, 34, and Gabriele Rollnik, 28, suspected of taking part in Meyer's daring rescue from a West Berlin prison May 27.

The two others, both women, were not immediately identified. But West Germany's interior minister, Gerhart Baum, told a news conference that one may have been involved in the 1975 kidnapping of Berlin politician Peter Lorenz, as well as in the Meyer jailbreak May 27, and the other may have been involved in the kidnapping last November of Vienna lingerie merchant Walter Michael Palmers.

Baum said he hoped positive identifications could be made later today. Contrary to an earlier unconfirmed report, Baum said, the two unnamed suspects definitely were not Juliane Plambek and Inge Viett, who are suspected of having helped Rollnik and a fourth woman, Ingrid Siepmann, 34, stage the Meyer escape.

It was the third major arrest of West German terrorist suspects in recent weeks, and the second time that the arrest took place with the cooperation of Communist East European authorities.

The four were arrested Tuesday after a sharp-eyed West Berlin prison official spotted Meyer on the beach at a Black Sea bathing resort, Berlin city officials said. The unnamed official notified the Interior Ministry in Bonn, which then assigned a computer-assisted "target detection commando" to help Bulgarian security forces track down the four.

Target detection commandos are small units hunting for individual suspects in a string of Red Army Faction assassinations, kidnappings and other violence that culminated in the slaying of top industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer last Oct. 18. They use a computer at a Wiesbaden police data-gathering center.

Baum said the four were deported to West Germany Wednesday night, and Meyer and Rollnik were then flown on to West Berlin. The two unidentified women remained in a secret location in West Germany, he said.

In the first of the recent series of arrests, French police picked up suspect Stefan Wisniewski at Orly airport May 11 with a plane ticket to Zagreb, Yugoslavia, in his pocket.

O'Neill Backs Carter On Restrictive Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill agreed today with President Carter that Congress has gone too far in seeking veto rights over executive branch actions. O'Neill's comments may help to defuse a potential constitutional fight.

In a special message to Congress, Carter said Wednesday he believes such vetoes are unconstitutional. And he served notice that generally he will no longer feel legally bound by legislative vetoes "over the execution of programs."

Without specifically endorsing Carter's message, O'Neill told reporters, "I personally think in some instances we have overstepped our rights."

He referred especially to provisions written into some authorizing legislation that would submit to possible congressional veto the regulations an administrative agency might issue in carrying out the authorized program.

O'Neill said such procedures result in delay and paperwork "and nobody (in Congress) reads the regulations anyway except some legislative aide."

He said that beginning about 15 years ago, Congress and the public became conscious that presidential power had grown to the point of upsetting the balance between the executive and legislative branches.

But he said this has been largely corrected through legislation trimming the president's power to impound funds voted by Congress, limiting his war powers and establishing a congressional budget procedure.

The legislative veto is a device built in to laws affecting the operation and financing of the executive branch. It enables Congress to reject presidential proposals without giving him an opportunity to override the lawmakers. Congress, on the other hand — through constitutional authority — can override a presidential veto on a two-thirds vote by both houses.

The first law containing legislative veto authority was enacted in the early 1930s. The power now is an element of some 300 provisions in about 200 laws.

The president's message cited situations in which Congress insists that "each decision or regulation under a program" be delayed for a specified period, during which time "a majority of both houses, or either house, or even a single committee is authorized to veto the action."

Attorney General Griffin Bell told reporters at the White House that if Congress had exercised a legislative veto last month over the $4.8 billion jet warplane sale to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel, Carter "would not be bound, in our view" to accept the rejection as legally binding.

However, Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief domestic affairs adviser, said that "as a matter of comity," Carter would continue to abide by any legislative vetoes exercised under the War Powers Act or laws governing foreign military sales.

Rick Neustadt, an aide to Eizenstat, said the message was sent to Congress at this time because some 40 to 50 bills awaiting House action contain provisions for legislative vetoes.

Many of these provisions were introduced by Rep. Elliott R. Levitas, D-Ga.

Slovik's Widow Doubts Passage Of Bill

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A year ago, Antoinette Slovik made national headlines when she parked her wheelchair outside the White House in an appeal for government benefits.

But today, Mrs. Slovik, whose husband,

Pvt. Eddie Slovik, was executed in France in 1945 after a military court convicted him of desertion, has nearly given up hope of winning government aid.

For the past two years, Mrs. Slovik has been seeking the $10,000 face value of her husband's GI life insurance policy, plus interest — a sum of about $70,000.

Mrs. Slovik, 63, suffers from emphysema, arthritis and epilepsy. Her hopes now are pinned on congressional passage of a private bill that would award her about as much as the military benefits she has sought.

But Mrs. Slovik, who lives on Social Security in a Detroit motel, does not know when Congress will act.

"I think if they take another four or five weeks, I ain't going to see any of it. If they don't get the bill through the legislature now, they'll be off until November," Mrs. Slovik said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "God only knows what will happen with me before November."

The longer they wait, the sooner they'll get their wish. They won't have to award that money. I'll be dead and gone," she said.

The bill, HB 9114, is pending in a House Judiciary Committee subcommittee and may be acted on after the committee clears up its backlog of public legislation, said William Shattuck, a committee staff member.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Slovik's lawyer, Bernard Edelson of Media, Pa., said he doubts that the U.S. Court of Claims will rule favorably on a petition arguing that the Army board for the correction of military records failed to consider some of the 22 points of evidence presented at two hearings on Mrs. Slovik's case in June 1977. The board denied her request last Aug. 12.

"The government has filed a petition to dismiss the action, urging that the statute of limitations has expired," he said. "It contends that if she learned in the 1950s that her husband had been mistreated, she had ample time to have acted."

Mrs. Slovik has said she did not learn of her husband's fate until 1953, when news of his execution — the only one of any American soldier since the Civil War — was released in a book by William Bradford Huie. A copy of her husband's trial record was not made available until 1974.

Writer Seeking Hillside Killer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If the police can't find the Hillside Strangler, maybe a writer offering a lot of money can.

"Hillside Strangler wanted," read a classified ad in Tuesday's Los Angeles Times. "Well known writer wishes interview with strangler or associate with reliable information about murders. Imposters need not respond as this writer has reliable source to verify information. Interviews and information in confidence. Enormous financial potential."

The 10-line ad concluded by saying responses should be sent to Subline Inc., P. O. Box 1519, Kailua, Hawaii, 96734.

Lt. Ed Henderson, head of the Hillside Strangler task force, said investigators are looking into the mysterious ad and are "wondering what the outcome will be."

The strangler is believed responsible for killing 13 girls and young women in the hills above Los Angeles between September 1977 and February 1978.

Man Poisons Self With Tea

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — A man who took his 8-year-old daughter out of school to teach her how to live in the wilderness died from drinking a tea he brewed from Jimson weed, authorities said.

Sheriff's deputies said Tuesday they found the body of Patrick Chapman, 33, of Lancaster, Ohio, Monday when tipped by a telephone call from his daughter, Michelle Chapman and his daughter were camping in the Box Springs Mountains 10 miles out of Riverside.

The girl told deputies her father had been teaching her how to live in the wilderness and had eaten some of the poisonous Jimson weed roots, then boiled some of the plant and drank the brew.

Chapman had taken his daughter out of the Pacific Beach school near San Diego 2½ months ago to teach her about nature, she said.

Soviet Court Exiles Jewish Dissidents

MOSCOW (UPI) — After brief trials in courtrooms closed to their supporters, two prominent Jewish dissidents have been sentenced to Siberian exile on charges of "malicious hooliganism" for hanging protest signs out of their apartment windows on June 1.

Vladimir Slepak, 50, a bearded electronics engineer, was sentenced Wednesday to five years exile and Ida Nudel, a 40-year-old economist active in Jewish causes, was sentenced to four years.

The British government today called the sentences a breach of the Helsinki agreement and other human rights documents.

There was no word about the procedure during Slepak's trial, but dissident sources managed to circulate a copy of Miss Nudel's closing statement.

She said she was not being tried for the June offense, but for her seven years of activity on behalf of Jewish causes.

"During these seven years, I learned to step with proudly raised head as human being and as Jewess," Miss Nudel told the court.

"These seven years were full of struggle for myself and for the others. And every time when I managed to save the next victim alive, my heart was filled with the unusual feeling which has no equal. It is possible that it was close to the feeling of a woman who had given birth.

"And no one of you, my judges, can think up punishment for me in order to have your revenge for triumph and victories of these seven years," she said.

Miss Nudel was dragged into the courtroom Wednesday after she refused to enter when her friends and supporters were not allowed to attend.

Slepak's friends never got to see him. It was learned he "looked cheerful and calm" as he faced the court and defended himself. His wife, Mariya, later will face trial on the same charge.

The "malicious hooliganism" charge resulted from a June 1 incident in which Slepak and Miss Nudel hung banners out of their apartment windows.

School Discipline Policy Successful

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock Schools are getting tough with troublemakers, and the results benefit both kids who act up in class and kids who don't, a study on student discipline says.

The report said the school district's new strategy — keeping troublemakers in school but away from their classmates — contributed to a reduction in delinquent activity and the dropout rate last term.

And the strategy permitted a "firmer policy on the part of school officials in meeting the problem of school disruptions. Principals and teachers indicate that is having a major positive impact on the schools' attempt to deliver an adequate education to all youth."

1976-77 school term, 1,049 juveniles were referred to the department; last term, 944.

—The Lubbock Independent School District's dropout rate was reduced by 6 percent in the 1976-77 year, 719 students quit school; in the 1977-78 year, 677. The report said the drop wasn't much but "at least was a step in the right direction."

Those three findings are related, school and juvenile authorities believe. They say students who are suspended or expelled from school often get involved in delinquent acts and eventually drop out of school altogether.

That is why keeping problem youngsters in school — and providing them counseling and extra instruction — should reduce delinquency and dropout rates, the report said.

The study also cited other benefits of the new disciplinary tools. Apparently, when out-of-school suspen-

researchers frustrated in an attempt to produce more lifelike prostheses for patients with disfigured faces who, for some reason, cannot undergo plastic reconstructive surgery. (AP Laser-photo)

Movie Makeup May Relieve Disfiguring

By GREG THOMPSON

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Some of the nation's most eminent dental researchers, frustrated in the attempt to produce more lifelike facial prostheses for disfigured patients, are turning to Hollywood makeup maestro Dick Smith.

Smith, famous for his extremely realistic makeup that transformed Dustin Hoffman into a 121-year-old man in the movie "Little Big Man," is conducting a two-day symposium on his makeup techniques at the University of Texas Health Science Center here.

"We just don't have the perfect prosthesis. I hope that by exposure to someone who has created the perfect disguise, we might be able to develop something," said Dr. Steve Parel, head of the center's Division of Maxillofacial Prosthetics.

Artificial facial parts are created for patients disfigured by birth defects, accident or cancer who are unable to undergo plastic surgery to rebuild their features with living tissue.

But these devices, usually constructed from rigid, durable, silicone-based material, do not blend well along the edges with surrounding skin, seldom produce an exact color match and aren't pliable enough to appear truly lifelike.

"We really don't have a material that will give a lifelike mobility, texture and color that he (Smith) does," Parel said.

"The drawback of the traditional approach is that by trying to attain durability, you limit the realism," Smith said. He created the makeup for "The Godfather," "The Exorcist" and other movies and television shows.

"I can do it very easily with foam latex, but it would last only a day," he added. "The crazy thought I have is that maybe in some of the extreme and difficult cases, the individual himself might be taught to make his own applications daily or that they might be mass-produced so that they could be worn one day and thrown away."

"It might relieve some of the really tragic cases from their hideousness," he added.

Smith molded foam latex into realistic facial portions that were attached to Hoffman and covered the actor's entire head, transforming him into a stooped, bald, wrinkled old man for the movie.

That makeup took three months to develop, Smith said, and required five hours to apply each day.

But Smith said he thinks the application of one facial part — a nose, for example — could be simplified to where the disfigured patient could do it himself in about an hour.

"I don't honestly know if what I'm proposing would be practical. I'm thinking more of a young patient who has been terribly disfigured, but who would still have the dexterity and desire to apply it," said Smith. "All of this is just in the very beginning thinking stage. It would take a lot of work to develop it."

Parel, however, is encouraged by the idea. In fact, he seized upon the idea of inviting Smith to the symposium after his 9-year-old son purchased a Smith-designed gorilla toy makeup kit with molded facial parts simple enough for a child to apply.

The study was prepared by the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Department, the district's partner in Project Intercept, an alternative school for youngsters who severely misbehave in regular classes.

Until mid-1977, the school system had no alternatives to suspending or expelling such students from school. Since putting "problem youth" out on the streets may do more harm than good, school and juvenile authorities last August developed two new programs.

First, using its own monies, the district set up an in-building suspension program at each secondary school. This consists of a closely supervised classroom for students whose infractions — like excessive tardiness or minor truancies — otherwise would merit a short-term out-of-school suspension.

Project Intercept, a centrally located academic and counseling program, was established to handle more severe rule-breakers. The Governor's Criminal Justice Division provided $83,000 in "seed money" for the project.

In accordance with guidelines for the grant, the county juvenile probation department has just completed an evaluation of the first year's progress of in-building suspensions and Project Intercept.

Among the findings: —The number of students kicked out of school was cut by 90 percent. During the 1976-77 term, 751 youths were given out-of-school suspensions or expulsions; last year, it was only 78.

—The number of youths referred to the juvenile probation department was down 10 percent, suggesting a reduction in delinquent activity. For the nine-month

Solar Collector Contract Signed

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The U.S. Department of Energy has signed a $2.5 million contract with Texas Tech University for the construction of a 65-foot solar energy collector expected to be located in Crosbyton.

The large mirrored dish is a test phase of a proposed system of 10 200-foot solar dishes which would supply electricity to the 2,500 residents of Crosbyton.

Dr. John D. Reichert, professor of electrical engineering at Texas Tech and director of the Crosbyton Solar Energy Project, said groundbreaking for the model solar collector should begin in October.

The steel framework for the project is scheduled to be erected in November or December, he said.

The project was conceived in 1974 when representatives of Crosbyton approached the Tech Department of Electrical Engineering seeking assistance in planning for future energy needs.

The model solar dish about to be constructed will give engineers and scientists an opportunity to study the properties of the steam it produces.

Reichert calls the project's concept a "solar gridiron." Shaped like a cereal bowl, each gridiron follows the sun, focusing its rays on water circulating in nickel alloy pipes. As the rays strike the pipes, the water heats up, reaching 1,000 degrees as superheated steam.

Gushing out at a pressure of 850 pounds per square inch, this steam eventually could drive a turbine to produce electricity.

The only other known project similar to Crosbyton's is located in Marseilles, France.

Reichert, who visited with French project engineers, scientists and government officials, said oil is used there instead of water. It is limited, therefore, to considerably lower temperatures, but still could produce enough energy to supply one building with power.

The contract Tech just signed with the federal government had been scheduled to be inked March 1, Reichert said.

A subcontract with E-Systems of Dallas, a company which develops and produces high-technology electronic systems, still has to be negotiated and signed, Reichert said, which means work on the solar project is several months behind schedule.

A public announcement of the exact location of the test solar dish is expected by next week.

Originally, four sites were being considered for the project, including the Tech campus, Sandia Laboratory in Albuquerque, N.M., Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., and Crosbyton.

United Way Sets $1.68 Million As Goal For Fall Campaign

The United Way Board of Directors approved a goal of $1,682,369 for the fall campaign and added two new members to its fold of agencies at its June board meeting Wednesday.

The total goal for 1979 agency operation amounts to 11.4 percent over the $1,509,535 raised in last year's campaign. The target figure was approved after recommendations by the budget division to the board. Agency budget study began in April with final recommendations Wednesday.

Newly approved for inclusion in the campaign is Neighborhood House, 2009 E. 13th St., an agency dealing with children's programs, emergency aid and assistance and contact with the elderly. The agency has operated in the Posey area since 1968.

The second approval went to the Reading Is Fundamental organization that provides a program designed to encourage reading for enjoyment as a means of reinforcing reading skills. Books are distributed to students in cooperation with public schools.

Both agencies were approved by the board after recommendations from study groups appointed by the Community Planning Council and recommendations from the Council to the United Way board. Neighborhood House will receive $10,404 and Reading Is Fundamental will receive $4,816. Upon acceptance of the budget division See UW GOAL SET Page 9B

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

The contract seemed so easy that declarer did not take the time to study his line of play. As a result, he paid the usual penalty.

Looking only at the North-South hands, a grand slam is an excellent proposition. But since South was void in diamonds and North void in his partner's second suit, it is understandable that both were reluctant to explore the full possibilities.

This is perhaps just as well, for the 4-0 trump break placed even six spades in some jeopardy. West led the jack of hearts, and South was a bit agitated that his side had missed a "cold" grand slam. To get the hand over with quickly, declarer ruffed in dummy and led the ten of trumps. East's hearts discard was a rude awakening. Suddenly it dawned on declarer that he would be unable to use dummy's diamond suit because West's trumps were longer than dummy's, and there was no entry to the table outside the trump suit.

Declarer tried to cash some diamond tricks, but

West ruffed the second diamond and simply led another heart, and no matter what declarer did, he could not avoid going down.

Declarer's line was correct if he were playing a grand slam. However, since he was only in six spades, he could have afforded to guard against the remote possibility that West had all four missing trumps.

As happens so often, declarer's error was at trick one. All he had to do to ensure his contract was discarded from dummy. East can win the ace of hearts, but no return embarrasses South. Assume East shifts to a club. Declarer rises with the ace, cashes the king of spades and enters dummy with a trump to the ten.

Now, to protect against the possibility of a 4-1 diamond split, declarer ruffs a low diamond with the queen of trumps, then uses the ace and jack of spades to draw West's last trumps. The diamond suit is now established, and dummy's long suit takes the rest of the tricks.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive girl who likes sports, and I'm exceptionally good at them. When I compete with a man I usually win, but it's a bitter victory because from then on, the fellow I beat promptly loses interest in me — romantically.

It happens every time, Abby. When a man competes with me and loses, his ego takes a beating, and no man is inclined to get turned on by a woman who's athletically superior to him.

I would like a romance, but I also like to win. Will romance ever bloom if I keep winning? To lose a game or lose a boyfriend — that's the choice. What do you say?

LIKE TO WIN

Dear Likes: Always play to win. A real man will enjoy the challenge. And those who would lose interest in you romantically because they lost aren't men, they're crybabies.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 3-year-old daughter whom we adore. We were unable to have more children, so we adopted "A" — a 2-year-old girl who had been in several foster homes before we got her.

The problem is that we honestly don't feel the same about "A" as we do about SUNDOWN (Special) — Shannah Diane Hogue became the bride of Jerry Don McKee in a 7 p.m. ceremony Monday in the First Baptist Church. The Rev. Randy McDonald officiated.

Honor attendants were Suzanne Miller, sister of the bride, and Mike McKee, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride attends Sundown High School. The bridegroom was graduated from SHS.

Following a wedding trip to Dallas, the couple will live in Sundown.

our own child. "A" whines constantly and seems generally dissatisfied and contrary. (When I'm holding her she wants "down," and when she's down she whines until I pick her up.)

Our own child is always cooperative and lovable. My husband and I feel guilty for our thoughts. Is it natural for parents to favor their own child over one who's adopted? And can parents be blamed for favoring the child who's more cooperative and lovable?

I can't sign this for obvious reasons, but I need to know if other adoptive parents feel as we do? And what can be done about it.

FEELING GUILTY

Dear Feeling: Whether the child is your own flesh and blood or adopted, the least lovable child is the one who needs your love the most. Don't feel guilty for honest emotions. Ask the agency from which you received the adopted child if they provide counseling for this problem.

(It's not uncommon.) Or write to Parents Anonymous, 2810 Artesia Blvd., Redondo Beach, Calif. 90278 for the address of a chapter near you.

Sharing your experiences and feelings with other parents who have learned how to deal with "unlovable children" can bring blessed relief. And please let me know the outcome. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at the neighborhood beauty shop which I patronized for years, I was irked by the new operator who did my hair. She did a good job, but when she finished, she said, "That will be $10, plus $2 for the tip."

Is it accepted procedure in some areas to state the tip expected? I have never encountered this before and it annoyed me. Unless you tell me that I am off center here, I plan to speak to the manager about this. Perhaps it's a new policy.

PHILADELPHIAN

Dear Philadelphian: Although customs may differ in different areas, I know of no area where it's "accepted procedure" to ask for a tip for ANY service.

New Books Provide Readers Diet, Exercise Information

By CONNIE MORTELL
American Library Assn.

With summer upon us and fat-concealing trench coats back in the closet, calorie-conscious Americans are buying books to battle the bulge as fast as publishers can print them. The variety of approaches is truly mind-boggling — and sometimes body-numbing.

If there's one thing on which the experts agree it's that "miracle methods" simply don't exist. Weight loss requires a reduction in calories, exercise and downright determination.

Frank Lavery's "The O.K. Way to Slim: Weight Control Through Transactional Analysis" offers help in the determination department. "Fat fever," Lavery contends, is a disease that's programmed from childhood, a program that can be rewritten only when the individual accepts responsibility for being fat. By guiding the reader into a probing self-examination, there's space provided for personal reactions. Lavery forces him to confront the hidden causes of his obesity.

"Self control is a skill that can be learned," writes Dr. Richard B. Stuart, author of "Act Thin, Stay Thin." The book, a behavioral modification approach to weight loss, is an elaboration of the Personal Action Plan that Stuart developed for Weight Watchers International. Successful weight losers, he says, need an objective and a plan for change.

Stuart teaches the reader to tell the difference between hunger (a physical need for food) and appetite (the mind's reaching out for food). Those things that trigger appetite are briefly explored and reactions — other than a mad dash to the refrigerator — are suggested. The reader can record progress on charts scattered throughout.

Once the determination is there, several new books supply sensible approaches to calorie reduction and exercise. The heart of the famous La Costa diet plan (La Costa is the fashionable and expensive California spa) is included in the "The La Costa Diet and Exercise Book" by Dr. R. Phillip Smith, the spa's medical director. The diet is based on the exchange system — foods are divided into categories such as vegetables and milk and the dieter can exchange any food in one category for any other in the same category.

Exercise instructions are clear and well illustrated. Bonuses include exercises for couples, shopping tips, calorie counters and food preparation diagrams. Best of all are the menus and the recipes for such goodies as frozen yogurt.

Dr. Frank Field, science editor for NBC in New York and co-host of "Not for Women Only," took it all off on TV — so to speak. In "Take It Off With Frank" he shares the secrets of his success.

Challenged by his NBC colleagues to lose 15 pounds in one month, he started hunting for a diet. He wanted one that would be nutritious, inexpensive, easy to follow, easily incorporated into his day-to-day routine and up-to-date medically. The diet he chose and followed — along with thousands of home dieters — is described in detail. Field also offers menus (including cheats) and tips for the dieter's family — gleaned from Frank's wife and daughter. Exercises and a maintenance plan are also included.

Managed snacking is the key to "The Nibbling Diet" which author Stanley Englehardt claims is the only natural way to lose and keep off excess pounds. We are conditioned to eat three meals per day, he says, but three meals overload the body circuits and eventually produce fat.

Nutritious food, eaten in seven or eight meals, he says, will induce weight loss — as long as the accumulated calories stay within the individual's daily calorie allotment. Each dieter should eliminate junk food, eat a cross section of foods from groups such as milk, starches, fruits and vegetables and drink plenty of water.

Such favorites as peanut butter and graham crackers are allowed.

Barbara Pearlman's "Dance Exercises" are designed to tone, shape and strengthen the body. The only equipment required is floor space. The 64 clearly illustrated dance exercises — so called because they're similar to the warm-ups practiced in dance classes — are integrated into an eight-week program designed to take 15 minutes daily. Maintenance is based on individual preference but always includes limber-ups and deep breathing exercises.

Families that exercise together not only have fun together but also avoid heart attacks together — so says "Suzy Prudden Family Fitness Book." Her book shows how people of all ages — literally, from babies to senior citizens — can stay physically fit by exercising only a few hours every week (30-40 minutes per day). Topics covered include directions for group exercise and hints on making exercise appealing to children.

Shirley Linde's "The Whole Health Catalogue" features a section on "The Whole Health Diet" and another on "The No-Formal-Exercise Program For People Who Don't Have Time to Exercise." Both sections focus on how specific diets and exercises can alleviate specific problems.

CHILDREN'S SHOW — Miriam Holler, with puppet, will present a free children's puppet show at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Community Room of the Lubbock City-County Library, Mahon Branch. The performance is scheduled as part of the National Puppetry Festival to be held at Texas Tech University June 23-30. For more information call the 762-6411.

Lainie Kazan Launches Comeback After Hiatus

By ALAN TIGAY
Women's News Service

NEW YORK (WNS) — Something not so funny happened to Lainie Kazan on her way to stardom.

A decade ago the buxom brunette from Brooklyn was a rising entertainer. Her voice had landed her the job of Barbra Streisand's understudy in "Funny Girl" and her figure had landed her in Playboy magazine. Nightclub appearances and some TV and films followed; there seemed to be nowhere to go but up.

But when she opened "Lainie's Room" at the Los Angeles Playboy Club last year and an eastern branch of the room at the New York Playboy Club recently, Miss Kazan was on a comeback trail far removed from her original rise. What happened in between reads like a chapter out of the blues repertoire that has been the vehicle of her comeback.

Her career started to skid in 1971 when she broke her foot. While recuperating, she gained 50 pounds and has never recovered her famous dimensions. She suffered a pair of Broadway bombs, during which the temper for which she became famous flared.

"For four years I felt ashamed and humiliated," Miss Kazan says. "I couldn't perform anywhere, I couldn't even face my grocer. In 1975, I declared bankruptcy. That was my rebirth."

"Now I feel like my two feet are on the ground. I just want to walk a little to make sure there's not a cliff."

She is sitting in a corner booth in a restaurant a block from the Playboy. She's still plump, but her white smile radiates against the black background of her dress. She says she's dazed from taking the "red-eye" flight from the West Coast, followed by a morning of interviews, but her eyes, also outlined in black, sparkle.

"I'd say I'm a dramatic blues singer, a singing actress," she says. "I have Jewish soul — a style that's dark, intelligent, with a little breast beating and a lot of humor."

"I'm not as volatile as I used to be," she laughs. "I found it was self-destructive. I've never been inhibited about expressing my emotions. As an artist, that's great. As a person, it's not so terrific."

The roller-coaster career has left Lainie with both useful knowledge and regrets. Not only does she plan to perform in her Playboy Club rooms on each coast, she's running the business end of the rooms and booking the talent for when she's away. No, she never studied business (she got a degree in speech therapy from Hofstra). "I learned about business when I had to do it for myself — when I couldn't get jobs and couldn't even get an agent."

Her biggest regret is never having made it big on Broadway, despite her promising start.

"Night clubs have allowed me to do my thing," she says, "but they're not the answer. Broadway was the only image I had of show business when I was growing up. I want to see my name in subway stations. I want to come out of that tunnel and see my name on that sign."

The subway signs were the ones she saw as a girl in Brooklyn, where Lainie grew up, the daughter of a Russian-Jewish father and a Palestinian-Jewish mother. She traded the family name of Levine for Kazan, her mother's maiden name.

She recalls her childhood as unusually joyful, perhaps not the best preparation for the blues. "I idolized Judy Garland," she recalls. "On an emotional plane she was such an honest performer, so giving. It destroyed her."

"I've never been compared with her, and it had an ending that I don't want my career to follow. I don't want my talent to self-destruct."

In the days when she thought her talent was about to do just that, Miss Kazan says she considered going back to speech therapy — but "only for about an hour."

"My mother still thinks I'm going to settle down — that this is a hobby," she says. "But this is what I am."

THE WHITE HOUSE

Translator Voices Complaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter can take solace in the fact he's not the only chief of state to have problems with translators.

Carter, who experienced much-publicized translation difficulties in Poland last December, was toasted by Colombia's Spanish-speaking president at a state dinner in Panama last weekend.

White House reporters listening to a simultaneous English translation of the toast by President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen were startled to hear the woman translator interrupt herself with the exasperated explanation, "I can't hear this!"

Carter, before offering a toast of his own, was overheard saying into an open microphone — he had trouble with one of those in India, remember — "I'll be briefed in one minute's time."

The listening reporters, who were in another building, could not guess at the cause of Carter's comment. However, the U.S. president began his toast about a minute later.

Rosalynn Calling

Walking out of Sunday school at the First Baptist Church here this week, Carter was brought up short by a woman's voice behind him saying, "Jimmy, Jimmy."

Pausing and tilting his head, the president responded, "Yes, ma'am."

Reporters got the impression he did not immediately recognize the voice of his wife, Rosalynn. Understandable, perhaps, because she was not alone in calling out to him.

Presidential Error

Carter continues to battle, not always with success, for clarity and proper grammar in federal documents.

Earlier this month, the president sent the Senate a message urging ratification of an agreement involving North Pacific fisheries "between the United States, Canada and Japan ..."

A spokesman for the National Security Council, which sent the message to the Oval Office for Carter's signature, acknowledged that the rules of grammar are not suspended in diplomatic usage.

Spokesman Ed Penney said the document obviously should have referred to an agreement "among" the three nations.

Playground Expanded

The White House playground has been expanded. First there was Amy's new tree house to go with the tennis court and swimming pool Daddy inherited from previous tenants.

Now a sandbox and child's swing have been added for the president's grandson, James Earl Carter IV, who lives upstairs with his parents, Chip and Caron Carter. Jimmy IV, at age 16 months, is beginning to take an interest in outdoor recreational facilities.

Second Time Around

Just because the administration has announced a new program once is no bar to seeking a second round of publicity by doing it again. In fact, some government press agents have found they occasionally have better luck on a second try.

Which explains why Vice President Walter F. Mondale announced in Atlanta on Tuesday the submission to Congress of draft legislation that would create a National Development Bank.

Administration tub-thumpers took this development so seriously they set up special press briefings in Atlanta and at the White House.

But the only news they really could offer was the actual submission of a proposal that had been promised last March 27 in a presidential message to Congress on urban policy. They even conceded the proposal hasn't changed in any substantive respect since March, when reporters first were fully briefed on the plan.

White House To Aid Rural Americans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is moving to better the lot of rural Americans by improving their access to health care, transportation, housing, and water and sewer services, White House officials said Wednesday.

The initiatives, being drafted under the direction of presidential assistant Jack Watson, are aimed at allaying widespread rural frustration and concern. Officials expect the programs to show tangible results within the next several months.

They said Watson is developing methods to better relate urban programs to the problems of rural areas and small towns.

One of the goals is to develop an agreement between the Agriculture Department and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare under which HEW will direct funds for health clinics, medicare and Medicaid, and other resources sufficient to provide greater health pre-

ACLU Seeks Court Action Against Club

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is going to court to try to force Rotary International to reinstate its coed chapter in suburban Duarte, Calif.

The Chicago-based service group, which claims 800,000 members in 152 countries, voted at a convention in Tokyo on March 16 to remove the Duarte chapter for violating Rotary's worldwide ban on female members.

Sanford Smith, a volunteer ACLU attorney and Rotary member, contended Tuesday that the ban violates California's civil rights law.

Carol Agate, another volunteer ACLU lawyer, said California law, unlike federal civil rights legislation, does not make a distinction between public and private organizations for purposes of discrimination and that the right of private association does not apply in California.

Smith said an organization as large as Rotary probably would not be found by the courts to be a private organization. Precedent, he said, exists from court decisions involving the huge Young Men's Christian Association, which was determined to be a public group.

The suit was filed in Superior Court on behalf of three female members, Donna Bogart, Mary Lou Elliott, both elementary school principals, and Rosemary Freitag, a psychologist. A fourth woman joined the Duarte club after the ouster.

The suit contends the women's ability to pursue business careers is being impeded by their inability to join the service group.

Jack Davis, president of Rotary International, said after the ouster that any club not following rules of the parent body would jeopardize the unity of the worldwide organization.

He has said Rotary members are free to attend meetings at any chapter in any country, and that the appearance of women in some nations where women are not integrated into the business community could cause dissension.

Richard Key, president of the Duarte Rotary Club, said the approximately 30 members of the group continue to meet and work as a service club.

dictability than has been the case in the past.

Under the plan, the Agriculture department would fund construction of clinics and long term care facilities, not just hospitals.

In the field of health manpower, officials said a meeting will be convened with selected deans of medical schools serving rural states to explore ways to encourage those schools and their students to devote more attention to rural practice, and to encourage graduates to locate in rural areas.

In addition, HEW is clarifying the administration's policy on the placement of national Health Service Corps personnel in rural and urban areas. Officials said rural interests fear a decrease in the number of corps personnel.

Officials also said HEW is promoting expanded use of physicians' assistants and nurse practitioners as alternatives to doctors.

Watson has asked HEW to take the lead in developing a demonstration program in emergency medical communications which involves a number of other Cabinet departments.

He also is working to coordinate rural public transportation and to develop programs to help transport workers in rural areas to job training centers in nearby communities.

Refinery Production For April Noted

AUSTIN (UPI) — Fifty-four Texas refineries processed 132,163,637 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during April 1978, the Railroad Commission announced Tuesday.

The volume was 5,059,335 barrels below the April 1977 mark.

April 1978 manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 53,198,137 barrels, compared to 58,496,188 barrels the previous April.

Texas refineries manufactured 9,670,428 barrels of home heating oil in April, a decrease of 3,133,618 barrels from April 1977.

'Abandoned' Dog Causes Stir For New Residents

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Bando is not exactly a name to put alongside Bob, Son of Battle, Lassie and Rin-Tin-Tin, but the little dog is certainly becoming a cause celebre all the way from Ohio to West Texas.

It all started after the Theodore Whaley family moved from South Russell, Ohio, to Lubbock and an Ohio newspaper reported — in touching detail — that the family dog, Bando, had been abandoned.

Now Bando's in a foster home and the Whaleys think they've had a bad rap hung on them.

The Whaley family moved here May 31, and 15 days later the Chagrin Valley Herald Sun came out with a front page story saying, in part, "Old Bando probably didn't think too much about it when the Whaleys packed up their belongings over the Memorial Day weekend and pulled out of the driveway, leaving him tied to his red, white and blue dog house."

The Ohio weekly newspaper reported that South Russell Police Chief Robert Hamilton verified "old Bando" abandoned and Valley-Save-A-Pet picked up the dog.

But Whaley, now quality control manager at G&H Castings Corp. in Slaton, said Tuesday the 7-year-old dog was being cared for by his oldest daughter, Sue Matsik, who lives near the family's former house in Ohio.

Whaley said his daughter had been feeding the pet and had found a home for it when Bando came up missing from his patriotically painted doghouse. He explained that the dog, which had never known other masters besides the Whaleys, could not be brought to Lubbock until he found a house that would accommodate Bando.

The Whaleys now rent a house on 55th Street, and their landlord will allow only one dog and a cat. The family took Bando's 15-year-old mother, Frisky, and a cat named Ebony.

The Chagrin Herald Sun paints a sad picture in parts of its story; such as, "Bando, you see, is — or was — the Whaley family dog. He had it pretty good, too, for a while there. His own hand-painted red, white and blue dog house, with his name over the door and everything."

The story is accompanied by a picture of Bando — a cute, long-haired animal — tied up to a for sale sign post in front of the Whaley's old home.

"The family is attached to it (Bando)...just a nice gentle dog that's very friendly and very playful," says Whaley.

"I lived in that community for 10 years and have quite a few friends living there. It hurts quite a bit to see something like this (the Sun's article) happen when you move out," he said.

Whaley's 16-year-old son, Mike, who claims Bando as mainly his pet, said his family learned of the weekly newspaper's article through friends in South Russell, a town about 20 miles east of Cleveland.

"We had figured he was already in a safe home, and when we got the article we were very shocked," Mike said. "Now we don't know how we're going to be able to get him."

Timy Sullivan, a Herald Sun reporter who authored the first story on Bando, told the Avalanche-Journal Tuesday that Bando was staying at a "foster home" — a kennel in the backyard of a Save-A-Pet member. The group, which takes care of injured and abandoned pets, took Bando from his old home on June 6, she said.

Mrs. Sullivan stands by her story, but said she was unable to contact the Whaley family about their alleged abandonment of Bando. She said she based her story on accounts from the neighbors, the police chief and Jackie Kaplansky of Save-A-Pet.

The Geauga County dog warden was going to pick up Bando, "but Jackie Kaplansky of Save-A-Pet got there first. She put Bando in a foster home, where he is now waiting to be adopted," Mrs. Sullivan's story reads.

However, Mike said he talked to Mrs. Kaplansky three times, and each time was told Save-A-Pet could not help find Bando a home.

Mrs. Kaplansky could not be reached by the A-J.

Mrs. Sullivan said neighbors told her they worried that "packs of wild dogs" might hurt Bando while he was chained up. She said she was told the dog had not been fed or watered for five days.

However, she said that Bando appeared to her to be "in good health, very friendly and certainly did not look mistreated."

Mike said he has written and sent the "true story" to the Herald Sun, whose acting editor said the weekly will follow up on the story since the A-J decided to print the Whaley family's version of the incident.

As for Bando, well, he's probably thinking it really is a dog's life.

California Democrats Reject Welfare, Employee Pay Hikes

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The 57-member Democratic caucus of the state Assembly has bowed to Proposition 13 and Republican pressure by voting to deny $233 million in cost-of-living increases for government employees and welfare recipients.

Republicans, the minority party in the Legislature, had demanded there be no cost-of-living increase for the state's 1.4 million recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children in return for supporting Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s $5 billion state surplus funds rescue bill for local governments.

The Democratic caucus voted Wednesday to go along with the Republican position but took it one step farther, deciding there should be no cost-of-living increase for recipients of all other welfare aid and state employees, judges, legislators and local government employees as well as Aid to Families with Dependent Children recipients.

Assemblyman Gary Hart said only four Democrats cast dissenting votes. He would not identify them, but said they generally objected to denying local pay raises.

After a two-hour, closed-door session of the majority party caucus, Assemblyman Dan Boatwright said: "It was our binding caucus position that no one be treated differently, and our clear intent that no pay increase be granted to any of those categories."

There are 2.17 million Californians on all categories of welfare.

The six-member legislative committee drafting the rescue bill was scheduled to vote today on major provisions, including allocations for schools, counties, cities and special districts.

The rescue proposal would provide $4 billion in one-time grants and $1 billion in loans to cities, counties, special districts and schools hit by the $7 billion annual property tax cut mandated two weeks ago by the 2-1 landslide for Proposition 13.

The package was described by both Democrats and Republicans as a one-time measure to give local government leeway to adjust to Proposition 13's severe revenue limits.

State support for future years was expected to range between $2 billion and $3 billion annually.

The GOP plan to limit state and local government revenues is contained in a proposed Senate-passed constitutional amendment pending in the Assembly.

LULAC Leader Claims He's On President's 'Enemy List'

HOUSTON (AP) — Ruben Bonilla, the head of the Texas League of United Latin American Citizens said he was not invited to a Friday meeting in Houston with President Carter because he is on what he termed the president's "enemies list."

Bonilla, of Corpus Christi, said Mexican-Americans who have criticized Carter were placed on an enemies list and not invited to the meeting.

Carter is to arrive Friday for a Democratic fund-raising dinner. He also is to speak Saturday in Beaumont at the dedication of a new federal building and post office.

"People were not invited based on their past knowledge or their intensive community involvement," Bonilla said. "The meeting seems to be one of a partisan nature."

Bonilla said those invited to the meeting are Mexican-American Democratic Party loyalists. He also said the invitations smacked of "cronism."

However there are many people upset about the invitations, according to state Rep. Ben Reyes of Houston, who was invited.

"The invitation list leans heavily toward the Houston community," Reyes said. "I think the people invited are a good cross section of Democrats actively involved in the community."

Reyes said he did not know what Bonilla meant by the term "loyalists," but he believes those invited to be "loyal Democrats."

He said he does not believe the invitations smacked of "cronism."

"These are not cronies," Reyes said. "These are grass roots people who have worked hard within the party. "All I can say is he doesn't know anything about who the people in Houston are. And if he doesn't know what he's talking about, he should keep his mouth shut."

Rick Hernandez, White House special aide to Carter, said persons invited to the meeting include LULAC officials, a former chairman of La Raza Unida, the chairman of Texas Mexican-American Democrats and a women's activist. Also invited is Hugo Berlanga, a state representative from Bonilla's district.

Hernandez said it appeared to him Bonilla's displeasure was more personal than political, Reyes agreed.

"I think there are some sour grapes as far as Bonilla's concerned," Reyes said.

Ethnic Groups Draw Fire

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — The League of United Latin American Citizens and the American GI Forum, who are complaining they have been snubbed by President Carter, ought to practice what they preach, the La Raza Unida Party candidate for governor said today.

Mario Compean said he agreed with state LULAC director Ruben Bonilla of Corpus Christi that Carter had invited mostly members of the Mexican-American Democrats to a meeting in Houston Friday while ignoring several well-known organizations. But Compean said he found the complaint "kind of ironic."

Compean said Bonilla invited Democratic governor's candidate John Hill to speak at the recent Texas LULAC convention at Laredo, but did not invite Compean.

The La Raza candidate added that Hill spoke to the GI Forum convention at McAllen and, again, Compean was not invited.

"It's kind of ironic that he (Bonilla) talks about courtesies being extended when I was a candidate for governor. He talks of fairness and equal opportunity. They're not practicing it themselves. And I don't mean this to be an attack on LULAC or the GI Forum."

Compean said La Raza Unida Party was joining several other Mexican-American groups who were planning to picket outside the Houston hotel Friday while Carter conducts a meeting with Hispanics.

Local Home Damaged By Intruder

A Lubbock man told police that whoever broke into his apartment late Wednesday failed to steal anything but succeeded in causing $1,500 worth of damage.

According to Ted Logou of 1509 Ave. S, No. 24, the entire residence was ransacked and mattresses and a couch were cut open. Reports indicated the dwelling's front door was pried sometime between 7 p.m. and 11:45 p.m.

A 23-year-old Lubbockite said another man fired three shots at him after a traffic-related disagreement late Wednesday.

Ronald Ray Walker of 1330 E. 24th St. told officers a car pulled up next to his vehicle in the 3300-block of Quirt Avenue about 8:45 p.m. and the driver asked the soon-to-be victim if he had just passed him. When Walker responded that he had not, a passenger in the stranger's car reportedly fired the shots in Walker's direction.

Walker, however, suffered only small cuts from flying glass when the three bullets hit the car.

Danny Gray of 2716 63rd St. told Lubbock County Sheriff's Department deputies someone kicked a hole in the wall of a shop located behind his mobile home, southwest of Lubbock, to get to more than $8,500 worth of goods Wednesday.

Gray listed as missing a rifle, two air compressors, electric saws, nail guns, air hoses and extension cords.

Frances Rangel said whoever broke a window in her 3010 Baylor St. home made off with goods totaling $4,072, including jewelry, two stereo systems and a television set.

Jerry Brent of 5414 27th St. told police someone took a $2,000 air compressor from a business at 2101 Clovis Rd.

Charles E. Robertson said someone took $600 worth of tools from a truck parked at his 7410 Quaker Ave. residence.

Earlier in the week, thieves cut power lines on two air-conditioning units at a construction site at 5401 54th St. and took the units, together valued at $370, according to John Benton of 2815 43rd St.

Richard Buckner of 1909 15th St. said burglars who broke into his home late Tuesday took a $250 man's watch, a $75 calculator and a $15 radio.

Air Controllers End Slowdown; Flights Normal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Flight schedules returned to normal Thursday after a work slowdown by air-traffic controllers that delayed airline flights across the country, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said.

"We've been involved in some degree of slowdown since the Memorial Day weekend. It's over. It ended last night," said Gerry Luce, the FAA chief at the San Francisco International airport control tower.

Luce said the slowdown involved a dispute over controller access to cockpits on aircraft making international flights. The purpose of allowing controllers in the cockpits is to allow them to familiarize themselves with cockpit activity for professional purposes, Luce said.

"The dispute arose between controllers and the Air Transport Association over the issue," according to Luce, who said the Air Transport Association represents the majority of airlines.

"What transpired to end the slowdown I don't know, but there have been negotiations going on, and as a result of those activities the slowdown ended last night," he said.

Airline flights in California had been delayed up to an hour in recent days when Luce said the slowdown had been most intense. Previously, the airlines, controllers and the FAA said they were unaware of a slowdown and blamed the San Francisco area delays on overcast weather conditions.

Nancy Caywood Gets Fellowship

A Texas Tech Law School graduate, Nancy L. Caywood of Palo Pinto, is the only American receiving the 1978 Shulte zur Hausen fellowship of the Georgetown International and Foreign Trade Law Institute.

This award is a two-year program with one recipient from the United States and one from West Germany each year. It includes $10,000 per year plus transportation costs to Germany and enrollment fees for a course at a German university.

Miss Caywood will spend one year studying at the Max Planck Institute in Heidelberg and working part-time with a German law firm. She will return to Washington to finish her studies toward an L.L.M. degree in international law.

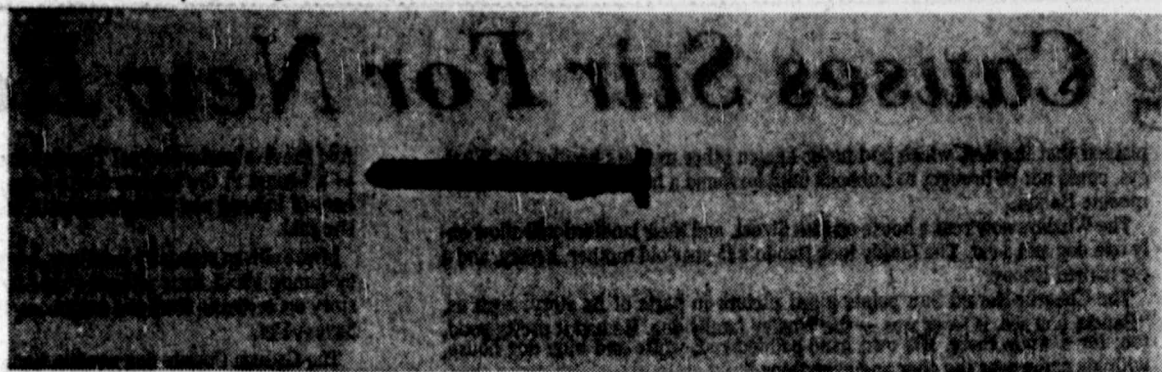

She began her study of German at Texas Tech while a law student in anticipation of studying and practicing law in Germany.

Airline Union Ends Three-Day Strike

TOKYO (AP) — The Japan Air Lines cabin crew union called off its three-day strike today and returned to the bargaining table in an effort to negotiate higher summer bonuses.

Airline officials said all 125 domestic and international flights scheduled for today would operate normally.

The strike began Monday after union and company officials failed to agree on the bonuses.

MISSILE TEST A SUCCESS — Secretary of Defense Harold Brown watches closely as the first public demonstration of the Navy's cruise missile get underway. # Jim Ed Brown's Show Troupe Slated At South Plains Fair

The Jim Ed Brown Show, featuring Helen Cornelius and Wendy Holcombe, has been added to the entertainment lineup for the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 23-30.

Steve I. Lewis, fair general manager, said Brown and company would appear for one performance only, at 8 p.m. on Sept. 27.

Earlier, Lewis announced that country music star Johnny Rodriguez and singer-songwriter Linda Hargrove had signed for a Sept. 26 appearance.

Brown is a show business veteran with a consistent string of this records. Brown and duet partner Helen Cornelius have racked up two straight number one records.

Brown joined the Ozark Jubilee with Red Foley in 1955 and signed with RCA Victor in 1956. Then in 1959 Jim Ed and Maxine Brown recorded "Three Bells," a county version of an old French classic, and it made an explosion in the industry, selling more than a million copies.

Other top hits have include "Pop-a-Top Again," "Love of the Common People," "Morning," "The Old Lamlighter" and "Scarlet Ribbons."

The late Jim Reeves and Chet Atkins have been strong influences on Brown's career. He is an international star, frequently making appearances in Europe and the Far East. He has recorded in Japanese.

Brown and Helen Cornelius currently have their own syndicated television show, "Nashville on the Road," currently shown in more than 100 markets.

Brown's duet partner has recorded more than 150 songs on her own, beginning with "All I Want for Christmas is My Two Front Teeth" when she was 5.

Many of the songs she has written have been recorded by such stars as Connie Smith, Jeannie C. Riley, Skeeter Davis, Dottie and LaCosta.

Teen-aged banjo whiz Wendy Holcombe also will appear on the show.

Solar Storms To Have No Affect On Skylab

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A flight controller at Johnson Space Center says solar forecasts show no serious storms that would affect the path of Skylab until it can be boosted into higher orbit late next year.

"Our only variable now is the solar activity," said Bill Peters, who made important maneuvers June 11 that will allow the 85-ton satellite to remain in orbit an extra six to 12 months. "We feel we have removed the variable of the space craft."

Peters said solar charts do not predict any sunspot activity that would endanger the attitude of Skylab but the predictions cannot be considered 100 per cent accurate.

"We can forecast solar activity statistically speaking," Peters said. "The only problem is you are given a band on either side of the figure and the prediction may vary as high as 50 per cent. It's similar to predicting the weather. You can't always be sure."

Solar storms heat the atmosphere and can cause more drag on Skylab, forcing it back earthward.

Ground controllers at the Space Center added several months to Skylab's life by shifting its position to cause less atmospheric drag that has been slowly pulling it back to Earth.

Space officials hope the maneuvers will keep Skylab aloft until late next year when a proposed mission of the space agency's Space Shuttle series could attach a rocket that would boost its orbit by about 70 miles.

The massive Skylab, the world's largest man-made satellite, could have plunged back to Earth as early as next spring if the maneuvers had failed.

"It's holding its attitude pretty good now," Peters said. "We have to update its orbital position occasionally but it's just a regular maintenance thing."

Successfully attaching a rocket to Skylab could keep it in space an additional five years.

"We have a long way to go but if they equipment holds out we shouldn't have any problems," Peters said. "It's like walking across the ocean on a tight rope to Europe. So far, we are four miles east of New Jersey."

Malaysian Elections Draw Candidates

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — More than 1,000 candidates have submitted eligibility papers for the July 8 election, in which they will be vying for 154 parliamentary seats and 276 state assembly seats.

The National Front Party of Prime Minister Hussein Onn is unopposed in nine parliamentary and 17 state assembly seats. His 11-party coalition government is expected to return to power. Five million people are expected to vote.

Brown Watches Missile Test

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (UPI) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown, impressed with the performance of the cruise missile in recent tests, sees it as a reminder to the Soviet Union of U.S. military strength.

Brown watched Wednesday as a two-ton gray Tomahawk missile streaked at 600 miles per hour at heights of 100 feet or less past air defense radar systems at this desert range in a test designed to see how it would perform against Soviet defenses.

Saying it is "a very effective weapon" and that the missiles should be able to penetrate any defense the Russians would be able to throw against them in the 1980s, Brown declared their recent tests have "completely vindicated" last year's decision to produce them instead of the B1 bomber.

Wednesday's flight, in which the missile used a "map" in its computer brain to loop around a 900-mile course without orders from the ground, was open to reporters. The tests are usually highly secret, leading to suggestions the step was a warning to the Soviets, who have recently taken a harder line in relations to the United States.

Brown declined to describe the test in those terms and said the Soviets already are aware of U.S. strength, but added, "I think perhaps they need to be reminded that we are confident of our military capability."

The United States plans to have the first squadron of B-52 bombers armed with nuclear-tipped cruise missiles by 1982, with sea- and ground-launched versions also under development.

The U.S. cruise missile fleet is expected eventually to number from 3,000 to possibly as many as 11,000 weapons.

Brown said last year's decision to cancel the B-1 that "the more effective way to go was to introduce large numbers of cruise missiles in the force. Everything we've learned since has re-enforced that conclusion."

Brown also referred to another recent test in which a cruise missile located an air strip after an 800-mile flight and cut the runway precisely in half with a dozen small bombs. He termed it a "remarkable achievement" and said it indicated cruise missiles might be more effective than manned aircraft in some conventional uses.

White House Praises Elections In Peru

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is calling Peru's first national election in 15 years a first step in the return to democracy.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter noted Wednesday there was a large turnout in the election, which was held despite a severe economic crisis. Voters selected a constituent assembly that will meet starting next month to write a new constitution. An elected president and congress are to take office by July 1980.

Man Stages 'Suicide' In Attempt To Avoid Paying Child Support

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — James Smith left his wallet and a suicide note on a Schuylkill River bridge recently, but later had to call his mother to tell her he wasn't dead.

Police said an anonymous caller told them a man had jumped from the Walnut St. bridge about 7:10 a.m. When they arrived, they found his wallet and a suicide note and marine units spent the morning dragging the river for the body.

Later in the morning, police said, Smith's mother, Hazel King, was shocked when she received a call from her son, who told her, "No matter what the police tell you, I'm not dead."

Mrs. King then called police, who told her Smith had better turn himself in.

Smith, 27, of the city's Cobbs Creek section, surrendered that afternoon and was charged with making a false report. He told police he had staged the suicide because he owed $6,000 in child support.

Texas Firms Suing Montana

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — Three coal companies have joined 10 utilities serving the Midwest and Texas in a suit asking that Montana's coal severance tax be declared unconstitutional.

The companies also asked a refund of nearly $5.5 million in coal taxes paid under protest in late April.

The long-expected challenge argues that the coal tax, the highest in the nation, is an unfair burden on interstate commerce which ultimately raises consumer bills. The tax also "frustrates" the federal government's policy of expanding coal production, the companies said.

According to the suit, which was filed Tuesday, the tax is expected to raise $34 million for state government in fiscal 1978 and $40 million in fiscal 1979.

RRC Announces Quarterly Hearings

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Railroad Commission will hold statewide hearings to establish legal rates at which Texas crude oil may be produced on a quarterly basis in 1979.

The commission announced Tuesday that it would abandon the monthly pattern in effect for the past 40 years.

All the 1979 hearings will be held in Austin, according to Commission Chairman Mack Wallace.

Stock Watcher Claims Market Rally Aided By Proposition 13

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

The stock market's rally since the middle of April has surprised a lot of people — analysts and investors — because it has taken place in spite of economic news that usually pushes prices down. The experts, though, may be concentrating too much on the details and missing the broader picture.

Since the record-breaking turnaround two months ago, the Dow Jones Industrial Average has gone up more than 100 points. In the same time, though, interest rates have continued climbing — banks' prime lending rates are moving toward an expected 9 percent level. Inflation has moved back to a double-digit pace. The dollar stage a brief rally but is sliding again in currency markets. The U.S. is still shipping a lot more money out of the country than it's taking in, and the business community still isn't especially comfortable with the Carter administration.

In the face of all that, the stock market, by general consensus, is looking stronger than it has in years, and most analysts expect prices to rise even more.

One theory on why the traders have been ignoring the economic indicators comes from Robert Ritter of L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin, Ritter, who has had a good record in calling market turns, says that, for now at least, the details aren't too important because there's been a significant change in the overall environment.

"The market is recognizing a swing in the pendulum to less antagonism in government toward business," he told us. "At the least, that implies an end to the extension of government into the business environment."

Ritter, who also does technical market analysis for the Rothschild firm, says the change is based in a shift of public attitudes, which became most visible in the overwhelming passage of tax-slashing Proposition 13 in California.

But he says the trend began earlier. "You look back at things like Bill Green beating Bella Abzug (for a congressional seat in New York City), at the liberal Democrats who've decided not to run this year, at the Republicans' winning Brock Adams' seat in Washington and Bob Bergland's seat in Minnesota (Adams left Congress to become secretary of Transportation and Berglund to become secretary of Agriculture in the Carter Cabinet). Even in Georgia, (U.N. ambassador) Andy Young's seat was won by a Democrat, but he's a white conservative."

Ritter contends the shift in public attitude isn't revolutionary and has happened many times before.

"The idea that government can do it better has been around since Andrew Jackson," he says. "There was Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt. It came up again in the Depression and it might have run its course by 1900 except for the war, so it ran out around 1950 instead. People who bought the market in the early 50's made a lot of money."

"There was more of a pro-business attitude when Eisenhower was President," he says. "Remember Charlie Wilson and what's good for General Motors is good for the country." Not only did business take over, there was a revolt against the reformers. There were the extremes like McCarthyism, but even the average man talked about eggheads. There was little government involvement in business, and the market liked that."

The Kennedy-Johnson era, he says, brought another anti-business swing, although "Kennedy's tax-incentive program was the last benefit for business."

"The academicians moved into Washington then and business became an ogre," Ritter says. "The kids in college were anti-business. There was a big increase in activity by regulatory agencies."

That tide might have run its course by 1972, Ritter feels, but it was kept alive by the Watergate revelations, which rekindled suspicions of the country's institutions. Now, he says, attitudes are swinging back in business' direction.

"What awakened everybody to that fact was Proposition 13," he says. "Not that every state will have a Proposition 13 on its ballot, but it will become more difficult to increase taxes. One of the problems in the market has been an imbalance between institutional and individual investment, but now there's a growing feeling that something needs to be done to increase investment in business. There's Carter talking about how inflation is a more serious problem than unemployment."

"The implications are that there's a better climate developing for business and that's what's making the market go up. For the time being, the other things are secondary."

Ritter's own current target for the market are fairly modest. "Right now, I'm looking for a move to 800-900 (in the Dow Industrials). I like to take one step at a time. But I'm not arguing with people who think it's going much higher. I really think the market looks good," he says.

'Trash' Fish Regarded As Protein Source

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Barbara Ford is a former senior editor of "Science Digest." The squid, a 10-armed marine invertebrate that was once regarded as a monster, may soon be a source of protein on American dinner tables along with a number of other unfamiliar aquatic animals.

Not too long ago, these creatures were looked on as "trash" to be tossed back when they were pulled out of the water along with more popular species.

Their lowly status frequently arose from unattractive features such as excess bones, although some species seem to have been relegated to the trash heap without much reason.

But the day of the trash fish has finally arrived. Due to a shortage of popular food fish, trash fish — now referred to politely as "underutilized species" — are being studied by marine scientists for possible use as food.

A few have already moved out of the laboratory and onto the fish counter. More will undoubtedly follow.

Besides the squid, some of the under-utilized marine and freshwater species you're likely to find at the fish counter soon are the skate, the mussel, the red crab, a deepwater clam known as the ocean quahog, the sea urchin, an assortment of small, sardine-like fish called clupeids and a group of finfish, including the pollack, hake, ocean pout, dogfish, Lake Erie white sucker, hogchoker and croaker.

A few are already available, although not always under the names given. The Lake Erie white is being test marketed in some areas, and is now officially referred to as the freshwater mullet. Species with names like the hogchoker and dogfish could obviously benefit from a name change, too.

The ugly squid may be the strongest candidate for increased usage thanks to a long list of virtues. It's abundant, readily harvestable with existing equipment (most squid, in fact, are caught when fishing boats are trawling for other species), easily cleaned, good tasting and adaptable to a wide range of traditional recipes.

In addition, the squid offers more meat per pound than most other aquatic creatures.

At present, though, the squid's faults — while not nearly as specific as its virtues — seem to rule out its wider use. The squid is, well, funny looking.

Its tube-shaped body and long tentacles make it resemble a space missile with arms, while its big, human-looking eyes give it a sort of monstrous glare.

This peculiar appearance is probably what gave the squid its reputation as a sea monster because it is not really a very dangerous animal.

Nutritionally, the squid is an excellent source of protein. The protein content is about the same as that of fish, 16 to 20 percent, but the squid has more usable meat than most other edible creatures.

Fish yield about 20-to-50 percent edible flesh, shellfish 20-to-40 percent. Squid, lacking bones (their only rigid internal structure is the small chitinous "pen," which is shaped like an old-fashioned writing pen), have 60-to-80 percent edible flesh.

Although most Americans disdain squid, the same isn't true in some other areas of the world.

"The squid is probably the most universally eaten marine animal except for the United States and Canada," says Robert A. Learson, a food technologist at the Northeast Fisheries Center in Gloucester, Mass. According to Learson, squid is eaten in most of the countries bordering the Mediterranean and in many countries in Asia.

The ugly but nutritious invertebrate is particularly popular in Italy, Greece and Japan. The word calamari that appears on some Italian menus means squid. Many Italian restaurants in this country regularly offer it.

Someday soon, however, our reluctance to eat squid may change.

The verdict of taste panels at the Northeast Fisheries Center is that squid is a tasty meat with a firm texture, delicate taste and a white color that makes it suitable in a range of traditional recipes.

In fact, the panel gave the squid such high marks that the center has decided to make the neglected invertebrate one of its prime candidates for augmenting our fish supply.

To that end, it has made up a poster called "The Joy of Cooking Squid" that includes six recipes and instructions on cleaning squid.

If you make all six dishes and so inform the center, it will send you a certificate of accomplishment. The poster can be obtained by writing the National Marine Fisheries Center, Marketing Services Division, Dale Avenue, Gloucester, Mass., 01930.

Gov. Briscoe May Soon Make Decision On Special Session

AUSTIN (AP) — It appeared today that Gov. Dolph Briscoe — pondering hours of talks with legislative leaders — would decide before the weekend whether to call a special summer session to cut taxes.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton both favor a 30-day session, probably starting July 10.

Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements also urged the governor to call lawmakers back to town "to provide meaningful tax relief."

Clayton said he had talked to Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic nominee for governor, by phone to "assure him we want his participation in the process."

In a Chamber of Commerce address in Dallas Wednesday, Hill said he favors the special session and thinks legislators ought to address themselves to at least four areas of tax reform.

He suggested that if the session is called, it should address repeal of the 4 percent state sales tax on residential utility bills; consider tax assessments on small farms and ranches on the basis of productivity and not market value; consider an increase in inheritance tax exemptions on farms and ranches from $60,000 to $200,000; and consider establishing a mandatory $5,000 school district property tax exemption for elderly homeowners.

Hill proposed delegating a "reasonable amount" of state oil and gas taxes to local school districts to relieve district property taxes.

Hill said he spoke with Clayton last week on the idea of a special session, and he told reporters he was "not concerned" with the cost of an off-year legislative meeting.

"It doesn't matter whether Gov. Dolph Briscoe or Gov. John Hill passes special legislation in favor of the taxpayer," he said.

The surge of legislative interest in reducing taxes began after Californians approved Proposition 13, a referendum to cut taxes.

In July it will have been a year since the last special session, which was primarily concerned with adopting a school finance bill.

Hobby met with Briscoe for 2½ hours on Wednesday and told a news conference the governor had not "made a firm decision" to call a special session, but if Hobby had to speculate he would say there would be one.

Hobby said he favored a session to repeal the 10-cent state property tax and the sales tax on utility bills and to raise the amount of inheritance that is free from estate taxes.

He also said he favors submitting a proposed constitutional amendment to the people in November on limiting taxes.

"It is an issue whose time has come," said Hobby.

Hobby met with Briscoe for 2½ hours, and Clayton joined them for the last 1½ hours. Clayton talked to the governor for two hours on Tuesday.

Asked if he thought there would be a special session, Hobby said, "Yes, it's quite likely."

Hobby said he thought it would be "much more practical" to limit taxes rather than to limit government spending.

Asked if he had any reservations about a special session, Hobby said there are "downsides to a special session" and one must ask "what kind of a session can we have in rather heated times." He said he thought the Legislature was "reasonable" and could handle it.

Clayton said the House could finish work on tax relief within two weeks, but "if someone tries to demagogue," the session would run the "full 30 days or close to it."

"It looks as if" tax relief "is the issue of the day," said Clayton.

Houston To Defy Opinion

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston school district still intends to grant additional tax exemptions to senior citizens with fixed or low incomes despite an opinion by Atty. Gen. John Hill that such exemptions are not constitutional, according to board president Bill Harwell.

"His opinion is, of course, just that," Harwell said. "It is an opinion issued by the attorney general, but this does not change our board policy nor does it mean our board policy is illegal."

The Houston Independent School District board voted in February to increase the homestead property tax exemption paid by persons 65 or older from $5,000 to $15,000 beginning with the 1979 tax year.

The additional $10,000 exemption increase would be granted to homeowners with single incomes of $5,000 or less annually or $7,000 for two-person incomes.

Acting on a request by Rep. Ben Reyes, D-Houston, chairman of the House Committee on Rules, Hill issued his opinion

Wednesday which said the courts have found the state constitution allows exemptions on the basis of taxpayers' age and residence on homestead property but not on the basis of income.

Harwell said successful court action would be necessary to change the board's policy on exemptions.

"I would hope that because of the attorney general opinion, whether there is court action taken or not, that the state legislature would do their respective jobs and establish by statute a uniform senior citizen ad valorem exemption for the entire state," he said.

Some school districts in the state grant $3,000 tax exemptions to senior citizens while others grant $15,000 exemptions and still others grant none.

Charles Best of the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) said the group has recommended an across the board $10,000 exemption for all elderly taxpayers.

Slaton Museum 'Garage Sale' Highlighted By Bargain Prices

SLATON (Special) — The Slaton Museum's semi-annual garage sale will be a half-price event today.

Doors on the benefit for the museum's building fund open at 9 a.m. and close at 6 p.m. today and Friday at the intersection of 7th Street and Lynn Avenue.

So far, each sale has poured about $1,000 into funds to acquire and restore the museum building, a block west of the sale site.

Sale items range from a massive clothing display to vintage magazines, toys, and anything else a Slaton area resident or Lubbock and Slaton businesses want to donate.

Baby clothes are about the hottest item going at any sale, volunteers agree, though any children's clothing goes like hotcakes.

Volunteers spend about three months gathering donations and many hours sorting and pricing before sales get underway.

Workers turn out to be about their own best customers sometimes, buying an armload of whatever they figure they cannot do without and bringing it to donate for resale at the next session.

A Lubbock variety store and a department store are heavy contributors to each benefit, and all Slaton residents save everything imaginable to help out the museum.

Even items not salable go into the recycle stack to be sold for more funds. A paper drop outside the building adds more material for recycle drives.

Full items gathered during the summer drive are put up for the cold weather sale, so everything will be usable right off the sale floor, from patterns and notions for building clothing to the finished product on the racks.

Bonuses in the gathering happen when old items suitable for the museum come and are whisked immediately into the collections, plugging a hole in needed supplies for display or backup showing.

Integration Group Receives Support

LOOK, which now stands for Lubbock's Opportunity for Our Kids, says it has been joined by several organizations in promoting smooth implementation of a court-ordered integration plan for the city's public schools.

Among the groups that have endorsed the LOOK platform are the Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools, the Junior League of Lubbock, the Lubbock branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Overton South Neighborhood Association and the Young Women's Christian Association.

Roy Bass, former Lubbock mayor and current LOOK chairman, said such community groups are lending their names and support to helping the Lubbock Independent School District implement the integration plan.

LOOK, which will recruit parent volunteers to publicize the plan and assist school activities, had been called Lubbock Organizing for Our Kids. But officials substituted the word "opportunity" to portray an even more positive image.

Support from the Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools, a tri-ethnic group that has been very critical of the school district's plan, came in a recent letter, Bass said.

CASS leaders Harry Stokley, Bidel Aguerro and Kathy Dietz said their organization "endorses the general purposes and stated goals of LOOK. Individual members are encouraged to participate within their particular areas of interest. A symbiotic relationship between LOOK and CASS would be in the best interest of all children" in Lubbock.

Bass told the school board Tuesday that "some in our group feel the court order went too far, others feel it didn't go far enough, and some believe it was just about right. But since it is the only order we've got, we've got to make it work for the benefit of our children."

He said the purpose of the group is not to debate the merits of the plan but to see that it is "implemented in an orderly fashion."

LOOK offers "an opportunity to demonstrate a mature quality of citizenship," Bass said.

Braniff International Announces Initiation Of Reduced Air Fares

Braniff International has initiated "small potatoes" air fares, which will allow travelers to save as much as 60 percent on Braniff flights.

UW Goal Set

(Continued From Page One) report, Howard Yandell, budget division chairman and Tom Locke, vice chairman, were commended for the work of their 24-member volunteer group over a period of two months.

"This is really citizen review," board chairman Owen Gilbreath commented. "Budgeting and allocating are two of the most important functions of United Way in insuring confidence in agency operation."

The United Way campaign division is led by Don Douglas, chairman, and Joe Price, vice chairman. They, and hundreds of volunteers in the campaign divisions, will seek the contributions to fund 34 agencies in 1979.

Agencies and approved allocations are as follows: American Red Cross, $123,135; American Social Health, $200; Big Brothers, $47,940; Boy Scouts — South Plains Council, $130,233; Boy's Clubs No. 1, $66,835; Boy's Clubs No. 2, $30,942; Boy's Clubs No. 3, $25,992.

Camp Fire Girls, $74,147; Carver Heights Day Nursery, $39,399; Christmas Clearance Bureau, $2,248; Community Clothing Center, $24,150; Community Planning Council, $40,458; Family Service Association, $46,768; Girl Scouts — Caprock Council, $76,890; Goodwill Industries, $32,400.

In announcing the change Wednesday, airline President Russell Thayer said that customers can request the "small potatoes" fare "and our computer has been programmed to instantly provide the smallest Braniff fare to that city."

Thayer said Braniff offers about 70 different fares, the costs of which depend on the season, destination, flight time, and time of week.

"Saying 'small potatoes' will slice through the confusion about airfare bargains, which have so many different names and conditions," Thayer said.

The special fare will be available for each of the 43 American, European and Mexican cities Braniff serves, he added.

As an example of the "small potatoes" fare, Thayer cited the airline's flight from Lubbock to Dallas/Fort Worth. The trip will cost $25 one way, which is a 48 percent discount with no advance purchase restrictions.

Braniff's lowest fare between Lubbock and Chicago will be $132 roundtrip, a 40 percent discount with a 30-day advance ticket purchase.

The special roundtrip fare between Lubbock and London will cost $397, a 62 percent discount utilizing a combination of the super coach fare to Dallas and the standby fare on Braniff's non-stop flight between DFW Airport and London.

Return To China Worried Ozawa

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Seiji Ozawa, 42, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has just completed his second visit to China in two years. He was born in China, but left there at the age of 6, though he has always maintained his interest in his birthplace. The following article was written for UPI by Ozawa, with the assistance of UPI correspondent Frederick M. Marks.)

By SEIJI OZAWA
Written For UPI

PEKING (UPI) — When I arrived at the Peking airport, I was worried. I was worried about the language difficulties, but even more important, I was worried that because I'm Oriental — a Japanese born in China — I am supposed to be closest to the Chinese, and I knew that as a representative of Western music I had an enormous responsibility to meet.

Or, to put it in simpler terms, I'm an orchestra conductor and I didn't know what sounds I was going to get from the Chinese musicians.

The first morning after my arrival, I drove to the hall where the Peking Central Philharmonic played. The orchestra was waiting outside in the street, applauding. They wanted to have a formal ceremony, but I didn't. Instead, I went inside the hall and took the podium. The orchestra sat down and I gave a down-beat.

It was one of the most unorganized rehearsals I've held. The rehearsal was emotional, but it was completely unstructured.

We played Brahms. Before I left for China, they asked me what music they should prepare themselves for. I gave them a choice of Brahms or Beethoven, and they chose Brahms' "Second Symphony."

They had practiced for two weeks, and during that first rehearsal, I didn't stop them playing until the middle of the first movement.

It was difficult. I thought they were very well prepared for what they did. But it wasn't good. On the other hand, I should be fair to them, to myself and to other people who will follow me. They didn't know anything about interpretation, so they just played notes. Very careful notes, but it wasn't Brahms' music.

So I stopped them, and tried to explain Brahms as I know him. I pointed to my stomach and pantomimed that it was a big stomach, because Brahms' music is heavy. But sometimes it should be light, so when we got to a light section, I pointed to a young girl. The members of the orchestra weren't laughing. They were very serious.

But then after about 10 minutes, I sensed that they were loosening up, responding. I asked for a sustained note, which is very important in Brahms, and they tried. Then, when the music should have gotten heavier again, I pointed to my stomach again, and they laughed.

They were beginning to understand Brahms, and from then on they kept changing their style according to what I asked. To me that was amazing — that they learned so quickly.

That was my introduction to conducting western classical music in China, and I was enormously gratified. It was like the musicians were absolutely thirsty, and I gave them a little water and they were ready to drink it.

The reason the Chinese musicians are so thirsty is that China today is just emerging from a period of cultural repression. By that, I mean that the artists I met were experiencing almost complete freedom after 13 years of not being able to express themselves.

For example, Wu Zu-chiang, the composer of the "Biva Concerto," probably China's finest example of modern music, spent seven years in a sanatorium during which time he composed his concerto.

Even more dramatically for me, Yang Bing Sun, the present concert master of the Peking Central Philharmonic, spent nine years and four months in a criminal prison where he didn't even have access to a violin. He was still in prison on my last visit in 1976, but he was released in 1977, and now is working, successfully, to regain his technique.

But the Chinese weren't completely repressed. I heard one 14-year-old violinist who astounded me with his technique. I asked him what his repertoire was and he confessed to knowing an array of Bach, Mozart, Wieniawski, Mendelssohn and Bruch concertos. When I asked, did he study these pieces? He was hesitant, but he finally told me that he had studied secretly for seven years under his father, whom I believe was a member of a Chinese orchestra.

What really encouraged — and excited — me was the obvious determination on the part of the Chinese to rejuvenate their music education. To be frank, they are essentially starting from zero, but the enthusiasm is there.

In 1976, the Chinese were reluctant to show me the music school in Peking; in fact, they were in danger of having the building taken over by the government for other purposes. But now the school is extremely active. This year 17,000 students applied, and 228 of them successfully passed the test.

With regard to the status of the concerts, the Chinese musicians are hampered with poor instruments. They are old, and often of cheap quality, but the Chinese recognize this and they told me that they planned to spend $60,000 on new instruments. I told them that $60,000 wasn't much for quality instruments, and suggested that they concentrate on woodwinds and brass for now, and wait until later for the string instruments.

In fact, the Chinese unexpectedly asked me back next year, and when I noted that the conditions for performing concerts in China were difficult, they talked about building new concert facilities. I had been alerted to this problem before my departure by a Japanese TV crew, who said the acoustical conditions were pretty bad, and we came equipped with blueprints and other technical information to assist them in constructing an acoustically acceptable concert hall. I spent an entire morning meeting with Chinese architects and they promised that a converted concert hall in Peking would be ready by next fall.

All of this, of course, was extremely exciting for me, a Japanese born in China. But what really impressed me was the total change in the mood in China.

When I was here in 1976, women didn't wear dresses, and the clothes they did wear were made in drab colors. But the wives of the musicians on this trip did wear dresses and colorful blouses. I saw couples walking hand in hand, and even an occasional couple kissing.

One day, I went to the Peh Hei (North Sea) Park in Peking which, I was told, had been closed to the public during the reign of the "Gang of Four." In fact, it was told, that Mme. Chiang Ching, the widow of Mao Tse-tung, had closed off the park for her personal pleasure.

But now the park is open to the public, who can rent rowboats and generally enjoy themselves, and from what I could observe, they were doing just that.

African Bishop Wants Threat Rescinded

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A South African bishop wants the government to rescind its threat to imprison a popular black spokesman, warning that the white regime will "never stifle the aspirations" of its black majority by silencing its leaders.

The warning came this week from Bishop Desmond Tutu, secretary-general of the south African Council of Churches, who asked the government to lift its threat of "permanent detention" against Soweto physician Dr. Nthato Motlana. Justice Minister Jimmy Kruger had threatened Motlana, a popular black leader, with the "permanent detention" — life imprisonment — because of a speech he made recently at a memorial service marking the second anniversary of the bloody Soweto riots.

Lamenting the closing of The Voice, a weekly black newspaper shut down by the government censorship office, Motlana said, "The twilight of a little freedom is over. All the lights are dimming. ... All the lights are going out."

The next day, Kruger warned Motlana he would be "permanently detained" if he spoke out like that again. In Motlana's defense, Tutu said South African blacks had informally designated him as the spokesman for their "aspirations, longings and grievances."

"I want to point out that gagging black acknowledged spokesmen will not remove black grievances and black aspirations. These will never be stifled," he said.

"There will be no real peace and security in South Africa until black views are taken seriously, and Dr. Motlana was only articulating these, and not advocating violence or subversion. We appeal to the authorities to lift the gag on him for their own sakes," Tutu said.

Other prominent blacks also rallied to Motlana's defense.

Percy Qoboza, editor of the daily paper the Post, said he was "absolutely shocked" by Kruger's threat. "He (Motlana) is not a flaming radical," Qoboza said. "He is not a flaming Marxist. He is a beautiful man."

Qoboza and Motlana were detained together for about five months last year when Kruger launched a nationwide crackdown on black dissent. The World, which at that time employed Qoboza, was banned.

The black editor said Motlana's imprisonment again would be "the last straw."

"This (threat) is another nail in the coffin of dialogue," he said.

Children's Eating Habits Better Than Parents'

CHICAGO (UPI) — A physician says children often refuse to finish their dinner for a good reason — they have better nutritional habits than their parents. "Children will eat a relatively hearty breakfast and lunch, but to get them to clean their plates after a large dinner is difficult," Dr. Murray Favus of Michael Reese Hospital said this week.

People should eat breakfast like a king, lunch like a prince and dinner like a pauper, Favus told a health workshop sponsored by the hospital's Medical Research Institute Council.

Favus, of the hospital's Department of Endocrinology and Metabolism, advised dieters to watch the eating habits of small children before they become conditioned to believe that dinner is the main meal of the day.

He recommended that the largest meal of the day be eaten in the morning or afternoon, before the most physical activity is expected.

Favus compared the body to a 5 million-year-old machine trying to function in the 20th century. He said that while people in general are much healthier, their environment and lifestyle have changed, causing a reduction in the normal amount of physical activity.

Those who work eight hours a day behind a desk must go out of their way to find activities that burn up calories, he said. Air conditioning and eating have diminished one natural form of using up calories — the body's adjustment to temperature variations.

People also are tempted by a wider range of foodstuffs, many of which stress convenience rather than nutritional value, Favus said.

"We're bombarded with advertisements on the convenience of food," he said. "While the average person can go into his local food store and find every-

Medical Group Favors Deficit Spending Ban

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The American Medical Association has called for a constitutional amendment prohibiting deficit spending by the federal government.

The action by delegates to the AMA's 127th convention reflected a strong sentiment that government policies are responsible in large part for the soaring increases in the cost of medical care.

"This country is on its way to bankruptcy," Dr. F.W. Dowda said. "I know of no doctor here who favors deficit spending."

Dowda, a delegate from Atlanta, urged adoption of the deficit spending resolution. He noted more than two dozen state legislatures have called for a constitutional convention on the matter.

The convention urged that doctors, patients, hospitals, insurance companies and other health care professionals be made more aware of ways to hold down health costs.

"Strengthening price consciousness in the health marketplace offers one hope for cost containment," a resolution said.

The statement was adopted only after it was amended to read "one hope" instead of "the greatest hope." The original wording quoted the findings of a special AMA commission that spent two years studying health care costs.

"Most of the increase in recent years in health care is caused by government regulation," Dr. W. Charles Miller of New Orleans said in arguing for the amended wording.

"The greatest omission in the commission report is that it does not identify government as the major contributor to the increase."

Both Sides Claim Victory In Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Kennecott Copper Corp. and Curtiss-Wright Corp. each claimed victories in their bitter three-month proxy fight after a meeting Tuesday to announce results of the May 2 contested election of the Kennecott board of directors.

Kennecott declared it was successful in the election of its slate of 17 incumbent board members, after receiving the final report on the proxy count from the Corporation Trust Co., which tallied the vote, at a reconvened annual meeting.

But Curtiss-Wright officials challenged the acceptance of the report at the meeting on grounds that it was inaccurate. Initially they complained that they had been unfairly overruled on that motion. But hours later, Curtiss-Wright issued a statement saying officials "believed" they had been successful in rejecting the election report after all, based on disputed procedural votes taken during the meeting.

"As a result of the rejection of the report, there can be no final determination of which slate was elected until these challenges are resolved," the Curtiss-Wright statement said.

Curtiss-Wright already has litigation in progress challenging the circumstances of the May 2 proxy vote and seeking a new election.

Francis E. Falon, secretary of the Curtiss-Wright, said earlier in Tuesday the company was reviewing the situation to determine whether separate litigation would be filed to contest actions at the reconvened annual meeting.

Curtiss-Wright, a Wood-Ridge, N.J.-based conglomerate, bought up about 9.9 percent of Kennecott's stock, or 3.2 million shares, and has been involved in a fight with Kennecott management for control of the copper company since last March.

The disputed inspector's report showed Kennecott's slate of directors won by a margin of 1.6 million votes over the slate nominated by Curtiss-Wright. The report showed that each of Kennecott's incumbent directors received at least 12.6 million votes, compared to 11.01 million for the Curtiss-Wright nominees.

Kennecott Chairman Frank Milliken immediately claimed victory.

Curtiss-Wright had attempted to reject that report on grounds that the vote overstated by at least 830,000 votes the number actually received by Kennecott. It claimed those votes, from one large shareholder, had been revoked but that the election count did not reflect that.

But Milliken said he ruled that motion out of order on grounds that it violated a written agreement which said the election report would be presented at the reconvened annual meeting and that challenges to its contents should not be part of the meeting. Both companies had time to challenge rulings prior to the final report and either may contest them in the courts.

Empty Hospital Bed Plan Aired

NEW YORK (UPI) — It costs money to keep fresh sheets on empty hospital beds, to clean and heat or air condition the rooms — expenses that push up bills of patients occupying beds in any given hospital on any day. There are an estimated 250,000 vacant hospital beds among the nation's one million and the "blues" of America — Blue Cross, Blue Shield — want to pay hospitals to retire the excess beds. Walter J. McNeerney, president of the giant insurer covering health care bills for 85 million, in an interview Tuesday told UPI retiring the extra beds could help cut hospital expenses.

What the "blues" propose, according to McNeerney, is paying of debts still on the books for construction of facilities housing the beds. That is if the hospital wants to cooperate in such a cost-cutting step.

McNeerney said paying hospitals to eliminate the excess beds fits with cost containment projects launched by the nation's largest health care insurer over the last decade — a policy that's beginning to pay off.

Health care economists figure every empty bed aids $20,000 a year to the nation's hospital bill. Closing 200,000 of the excess beds could shrink the bill by $4 billion.

Costs of maintaining the empty beds are figured in setting daily hospital room rates — now averaging $181 a day.

McNeerney said some vacant beds must be kept in "go" condition. Demand varies from season to season and region to region. Beds also must be ready for disasters and epidemics.

But health care economists say this necessary number would only be a small portion of the current total of excess beds.

One of the "blues" cost containment programs — shifting patients from inpatient to ambulatory procedures where medically possible — may be contributing to the empty bed problem.

This tactic has produced a 15 percent decline in the number of hospitalization days per 1,000 subscribers over the last 10 years.

During the same period, the days of ambulatory care shot up 155 percent, procedures done on an ambulatory basis are less costly. There is no daily room charge, for one.

McNeerney expects further advances in cost control from health promotion programs run by the "blues" nationwide.

"We're talking about promoting healthier lifestyles," he said. "It's a slow evolutionary approach — going against the grain of high living."

"There is no reasonable person who doesn't know part of the answer to health care cost containment is to live differently, a healthier lifestyle."

"There is a generational thing here. The younger persons are more tuned into this than the older."

He told of programs soon to be activated by Blue Cross and Blue Shield in cooperation with the President's Council on Fitness and Sports and the American Association of Fitness Directors in Business and Industry.

These health and fitness promotion programs will reach "two of the largest captive audiences — school students and people at their places of work."

Suffers Swelling Problem

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About three years ago my doctor discovered that I have lymphadema and said it had been coming on for many years. This has affected both my legs and my feet. I was finding it more and more difficult to walk. All he prescribed was to lose some weight and to wear measured elastic leotards at all times.

I went to an orthopedic surgeon who performed a bunionectomy ten months ago. He said he never saw legs that were so badly swollen. In his opinion I should be taking pills for water although my doctor won't prescribe them for me. What causes this condition and is there a cure?

DEAR READER — Although lymphadema is simply tissue swelling, it is a fairly complex problem. Most people don't know that in addition to the arteries, veins and the capillaries that connect them there is still another part to the circulation. That is the big lymphatic system.

These tiny little vessels are throughout your entire body. Fluid leaves the capillaries in your circulation to go out and bathe tissues. A good part of it is returned to the circulation through this enormous lymphatic system. These are little tiny channels which are very thin walled. The fluid oozes into them and is gradually collected and returned to the circulation.

Whenever these channels are blocked for any reason the fluid begins to back up behind them and produce swelling. This can even occur after surgery or any injury when the lymphatic system is damaged. That's why swelling may be prolonged for months after a fracture or swelling may persist because the lymphatic channels have been cut during surgery. You can hardly make an incision anywhere on the body without cutting them so there is nothing that the doctors could do to avoid that problem.

The swelling is quite different from that that you might get from heart failure, but somewhat more similar to what people have with varicose veins. To give you more information on the whole mechanism of swelling and what people can do about it I am sending you The Health Letter number 11-6, Swelling: Causes and Management.

Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, 78292.

As explained in the Health Letter I'm sending you, one of the factors that permits swelling is the tension or pressure in the tissues around the lymphatic and capillary channels.

That's why fluid accumulates in the loose tissue around the ankle, or if you're lying down around the eyes. The elastic bandage increases the pressure within the tissues and helps prevent this. That's what your elastic leotards are doing.

Another important factor is posture. You can help prevent swelling of your feet with the problem that you have by lying down and putting the feet above the heart level.

You might get a little benefit by taking water pills to cause you to eliminate sodium and water. But because the problem lies in the mechanical mechanism of the lymphatic channel, merely dehydrating your body is not going to solve the problem. That may be why your primary physician has not suggested that to you. You would be wise to limit your salt intake.

Mother Shocked By Publicity Surrounding Birth Of Quads

ALPINE, N.J. (AP) — She swishes herself in the sun's warmth on a small hill overlooking her tennis court and swimming pool. It's just another pretty summer day for Sharon Prussin.

Or is it? Inside her eight-bedroom house, tucked away in two small corner bedrooms, four Raggedy Ann and Andy dolls await the new tenants of four cribs. They're for Sharon's 2-week-old quadruplets. Two were expected home today, the other two by week's end.

She comes in out of the sun, deeply tanned. The big, chunky rollers in her raven hair are in sharp contrast to the diamond posts in her ears. At 28, she is a tiny woman and her diminutive frame belies the fact that she has sheltered four human beings for so many months.

Her husband, George, a 33-year-old marketing vice president for OPM Leasing Services, Inc., is away in his New York office. Her two older children, Liza, 5, and Chad, 2½, scamper about downstairs, waiting to have their pictures taken for the umpteenth time with their celebrated mom.

"It's all been very exciting and exciting to share with the rest of the world," Sharon says, finally settled — minus the rollers — in the wheat-hued living room on the first floor. Frankly, she adds, she's a little "shocked" by all the publicity attached to having quadruplets. "It was special to me, but I didn't think it was special to anyone else."

Besides the four cribs, the Prussins have purchased two twin carriages, four infant seats and automatic swings for the babies. They've also hired two nurses who will live in the rooms with the quads for as long as they're needed.

Mrs. Prussin, who had taken a fertility drug to have one more pregnancy, said she learned in January that she was carrying triplets. "On Valentine's Day I found out about the quads."

Before the births of Alexis, Brooke, Jarret and Ross, Mrs. Prussin spent 96 days in New York Hospital. This is not unusual in cases of multiple births, medical experts say. Bed rest is recommended for this length of time prior to labor in order to reduce pressure on the cervix. And to ensure proper bed rest, hospitalization is prescribed.

"I suppose I had a while to digest it,"

Mrs. Prussin said. "I thought about all the things that could go wrong. But I was optimistic." For the next six weeks, there will be limited physical activity for Sharon Prussin.

The sun went into its afternoon descent as Mrs. Prussin described plans for extending the house. The upstairs will be enlarged to form two more bedrooms so each child will have his or her own room.

As for future family outings? Well, she says, "taking a plane will be different and going on car rides will be crowded."

Firm To Pay Settlement

CHICAGO (AP) — The Yamaha Motor Corp. has agreed to pay $417,500 to a woman who lost a leg in a motorcycle accident and contended the cycle should have had crash bars.

The out-of-court settlement to Deborah Croft, 25, of San Diego, Calif., was approved Tuesday in Circuit Court by Judge Dom J. Rizzi. She lost a leg in 1971 when the motorcycle on which she was a passenger was sideswiped by an auto near downtown Carbondale.

Attorney Philip H. Corboy argued during a four-week trial that Yamaha, of Buena Park, Calif., was negligent in not making safety bars mandatory equipment. He said the bars, which extend on each side of a motorcycle, would have made it impossible for the car to hit the woman's leg.

Several witnesses testified for Corboy that the vehicle was unsafe without the optional safety bar. Witnesses from Japan testified that Tokyo police use the same type of motorcycle and all are equipped with crash bars.

The motorcycle driver was not injured.

Discipline Plan Works

sions and expulsions were the only recourse, most principals felt those disciplinary measures were too severe for minor rulebreakers, the report said. Consequently such students continued to stay in the regular classroom.

Now, with the in-building suspension program, principals have a way of removing minor troublemakers from the classroom — without having to kick them out of school.

"In-house suspension was used in 2,471 occasions this year. This is more than three times the number of youth who were put out of school the previous year," the juvenile probation department's report said.

"Class disruptions have been greatly reduced, and the teachers report that the quality of education has improved as a result of this phase of the program."

In-building suspensions alone are not enough, however.

"Removing a youth from the normal classroom to a study room, for some, is only transporting their disruptive behavior from one room to another. Some youth have almost zero motivation toward any kind of schoolwork," the study said.

That is why the school system needs Project Intercept, which is located apart from other campuses and is staffed by four teachers and a juvenile probation officer experienced in working with and motivating problem youth, the report said.

Students are accepted into Project Intercept after the regularly assigned schools have exhausted in-house counseling and other methods. They stay in Project Intercept for at least the remainder of the quarter.

Admissions and dismissals are made by a special school district committee.

During the 1977-78 school year, the committee reviewed 140 students and assigned 100 to the alternative school. Most of them eventually were placed back in regular classrooms.

Project Intercept has been located in the annex of the school district's administration building. This fall, the program will be put in the former Sanders Elementary School building.

When the county's proposed juvenile detention center opens in the fall of 1979, it will be the permanent headquarters for Project Intercept.

The county and school district are seeking a second-year criminal justice grant

Wheat Harvest Graded Here

The first carload of hard red winter wheat of the High Plains harvest arrived at Lubbock Grain Inspection and Weighing Wednesday, according to Ray Anthis, chief inspector.

Cut along the Lubbock-Hockley County line, the grain graded No. 2 and had a test weight of 59.7 pounds per bushel. Moisture content was 10.5 percent and protein was 12.4 percent.

"Normal weight from this area is around 61 pounds per bushel," said Anthis. "But this wheat was a little on the shriveled side because it received moisture at the wrong stage of growth."

He explained that recent rains fell as the kernels were ripening just prior to the harvest. The grain began to shrivel in the direct sunlight and high temperatures that followed, thus lowering the test weight.

Wheat farmers across the South Plains, particularly those with dryland grain, face low yields and relatively poor quality this year as a result of inadequate rainfall, agricultural officials say.

Court Orders School To Accept Student

GALVESTON (AP) — An emotionally handicapped child has a right to a free and appropriate education that allows him as much contact as possible with his non-handicapped peers, according to a ruling by a federal judge which is expected to have a far-reaching effect.

In a preliminary injunction Wednesday U.S. District Court Judge Finis Cowan ordered the Friendswood Independent School District to provide an education for a 16-year-old youth expelled from school for behavioral problems in 1977. In their suit against the district, the youth's parents claimed his behavior was attributable to his emotional disorder.

In keeping with recent federal legislation on the rights of handicapped persons, Cowan ordered the district to evaluate the youth, named only as Douglas S. in the suit, immediately and draw up a plan for his education. Cowan said the district could take on responsibility for Douglas' education or pay someone else to provide it.

The judge also said the district has to pay the $2,400 a month it costs to keep Douglas in a private institution in Austin until his new educational program is underway. In addition, Cowan said the district is responsible for the cost of Douglas' education since he was expelled in January 1977.

Douglas' parents brought suit against the Galveston County district when the private institution threatened to discontinue his education because they could no longer pay the tuition.

Patrick Wiseman, attorney for Douglas S., said the youth has normal intelligence but suffers from minimal brain damage which affects his attention span and makes it difficult for him to follow instructions.

Wiseman had argued the school district and state education agency had failed to implement provisions of recently adopted federal legislation guaranteeing all handicapped students a free and appropriate education.

"There are about half a dozen to a dozen cases like this around the nation," Wiseman said. "This case is most significant because it protects a particular child. It has collateral benefit of putting school districts on notice to stop obstructing the law," he said.

Cowan said the district's program for Douglas must provide him with "contact with non-handicapped children in a normal setting to the maximum extent possible."

Ruling that the district had denied Douglas an impartial due process hearing when he was expelled, Cowan ordered the FISD to establish a procedure for such hearings in compliance with federal law.

Cowan also ordered the state education agency to begin enforcing legislation concerning handicapped students.

Major Art Dealers, Collectors Flock To Von Hirsch Auction

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
LONDON (AP) — Excited art dealers and collectors from around the world overflowed auction rooms today and clamored to place bids for the von Hirsch collection, paying record prices in one of the most spectacular art auctions in history.

"It's more like a casino than an art auction," said one dealer as drawings, watercolors and miniatures from the collection were put on the block at Sotheby Parke Bernet on New Bond Street.

Other bidders used leased telephone lines from the firm's Madison Avenue headquarters in New York.

Today's highest bid of $925,000 went to the 15th Century "Branchini Madonna," a record price for a painting by its Italian master, Giovanni Di Paolo.

Twenty-seven old masters, including paintings by El Greco, Rubens, Tintoretto and Tiepolo were sold.

Today's sale reaped a total of $2,925,405. That brought the proceeds of the first two days of the sale to $8,063,040.

Bidding has run so high the auctioneers now expect the sale to glean at least $18.5 million, $3.7 million more than originally predicted for the six-day auction.

The Norton Simon Foundation of Los Angeles won the bidding for the Di Paolo masterpiece, dated 1427. The price far surpassed the previous record auction price of about $144,000 paid at Sotheby's for Di Paolo's "Christ on the Cross" in 1973.

The madonna, a six-foot picture of the virgin and child on an arched wooden panel, is the second earliest work by Di Paolo. It was painted for the chapel of the Branchini family in Siena, Italy.

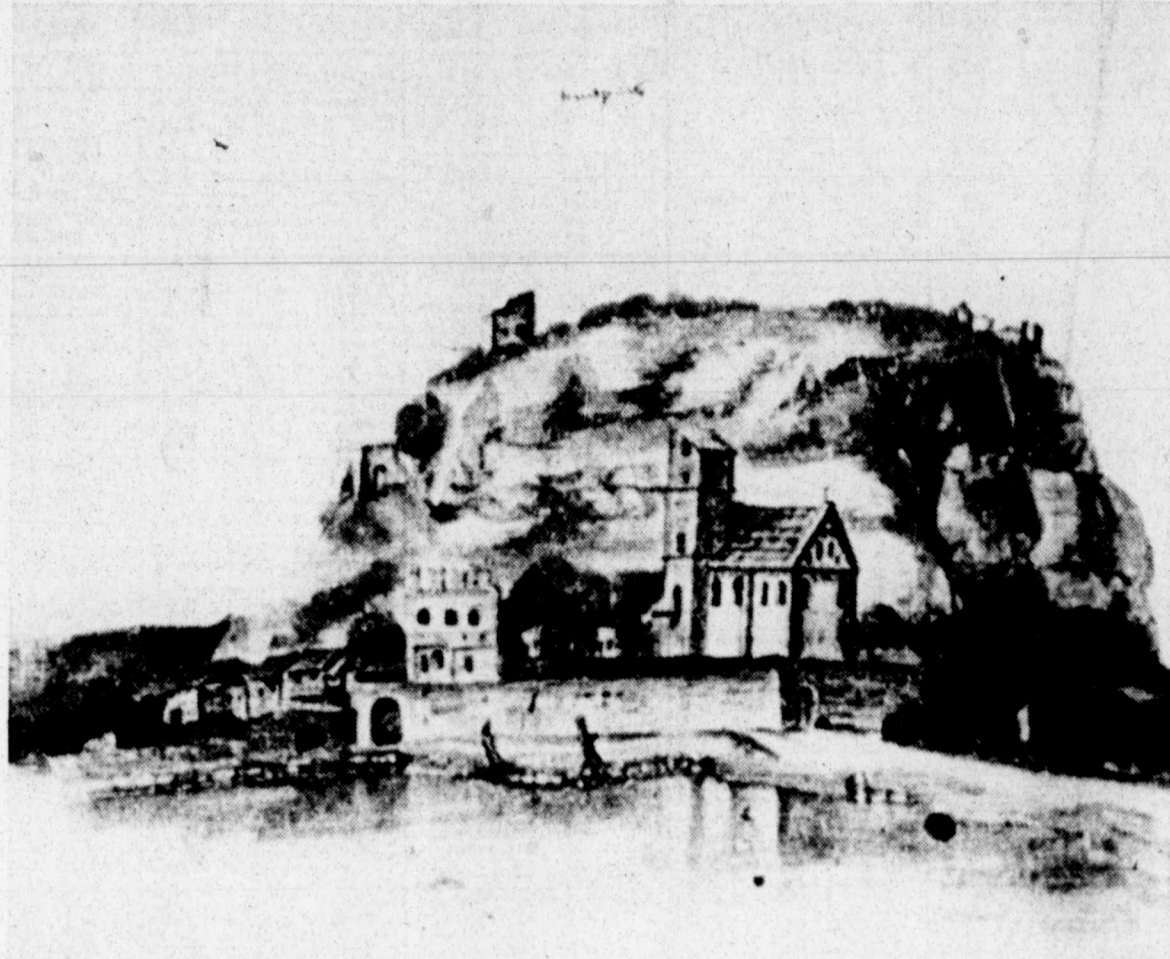

Tuesday night's opener bore out the advance conclusion that the von Hirsch sale would eclipse Sotheby's record $11.6-million sale last year of the contents of Mentmore Towers, a former Rothschild estate in Buckinghamshire.

The stunner of the opening session was a record auction price of $1.2 million paid by Swiss dealer Marianne Feilchenfeldt for a small watercolor landscape by the German artist Albrecht Durer. Painted in 1495, it depicts the rock and church of Doss Trento in northern Italy and will go to a West German museum. Sotheby's presale estimate was $370,000.

"The Virgin as Queen of Heaven" by the 16th-century painter Hans Baldung was purchased Wednesday for $453,250, a record price for the painter, who was a student of Durer's. The 1514 wood panel painting was bought by the London and Paris art dealers, Essoldo Fine Art.

An El Greco, "The Flight into Egypt," fetched a record price for an anonymous European collector for $166,500, surpassing the $200,000 paid at Sotheby's in London in 1959 for "The Apostle St. James."

The collection was left by Robert von Hirsch, a German leather millionaire who fled from the Nazis in 1933 and died last November at home in Basel, Switzerland, at the age of 94. In addition to paintings and drawings, it includes sculpture, carvings, porcelains, ivories, furniture and other art works.

WATERCOLOR SOLD FOR $1.2 MILLION — This Albrecht Durer watercolor sold for $1.2 million this week on the first day of Sotheby's auction of the Robert Von Hirsch collection. The six-day-long sale is expected to be the richest art auction ever. Durer's watercolor of the Swiss village went to Swiss dealer Marianne Feilchenfeldt. The price was almost four times the pre-sale estimate. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Official Optimistic About New Trade Pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's major industrial nations have a good chance of hammering out a tentative new world trade agreement in time for the seven-nation economic summit conference in Bonn in July, the chief U.S. trade official says.

"The odds tilt in our favor on our getting there (an agreement) on that date," Robert S. Strauss told a news conference Tuesday following three days of talks here with negotiators for Japan, Canada and the European Common Market.

Strauss will go to Geneva, where the trade negotiations have been underway for more than three years, on July 4 to make the final push for an agreement in advance of the economic summit, scheduled for July 16-17.

President Carter will attend the summit, along with leaders of France, Germany, Japan, Great Britain, Italy and Canada, and they hope to have a tentative trade accord ready to discuss.

Although the Geneva negotiations involve 97 nations, the countries represented at the talks here during the past three days have the major influence in shaping the accord, since they jointly represent nearly 60 percent of the trade in the non-Communist world.

Strauss declined to specify remaining areas of disagreement. He said the negotiations are basically 85 percent complete.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Tomorrow it will be important that you know when to stop selling and when to start asking for the order. Excessive verbalizing may cost you a deal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Serious business agreements should not be conducted on a handshake or verbal commitment tomorrow. For everyone's sake, put everything in writing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a strong possibility tomorrow that you will underestimate the worth of your services or expertise. If you do, you'll be rewarded accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Business and pleasure will mix like oil and water tomorrow. Don't try to push any transactions on potential prospects you're mingling with socially.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Leave well enough alone tomorrow or you may disrupt something that's presently working to your advantage. Erratic changes could be counterproductive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It will not be in your best interests tomorrow to talk about things you hope will happen as if they already have. Should something go awry later, you'll feel foolish.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Left to your own devices, you'll be quite capable tomorrow in situations where you could turn a profit. Matters where partners are involved will be another story.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do nothing tomorrow in opposition to your high standards and ideals. Trying to pull a fast one could severely damage your reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Success is likely tomorrow if you maintain a low profile. In instances where you seek the spotlight you're not apt to get rave reviews.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A close companion may have some domestic difficulties tomorrow and put you in the awkward position of taking sides. Be wise. Remain silent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Praise isn't all that important, but tomorrow a coworker might try to take bows for something you achieved. Let the boss know you had a hand in it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In most situations your logic will prevail tomorrow, and you'll do a yeoman's job. Your grades won't be so nifty in managing your personal resources, however.

Mex Likes Odds In Canadian Open

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino, the happy collector of national titles, would like to start a third sweep this week in the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I've won two Canadian Opens, two U.S. Opens, two British Opens, two Mexican Opens," Trevino said before teeing off today as the defending champion in the Canadian National championship. "This would be as good a place as any to start a third time around."

And, he said, his chances are very good. "It's a long course. There aren't all those lay-up holes like last week (in the U.S. Open). They won't be standing up there with irons in their hands. They're going to have to pull the driver out of the bag."

"And they're looking at a lot of rough. If they get in the rough, they're going to lose a shot. That's fine. That's the way it's supposed to be. And that gives me an advantage, 'cause I can hit it as straight as anybody."

"I'm hitting the ball as good as I ever have, both with my irons and off the tee. I'm just a little concerned about my putting. It's not as sharp as it could be, but I've been working on it a lot — hell, working on it for hours a day, on the golf course, putting on shag carpets in the hotel room, everything. It's coming around."

Trevino won the Colonial National Invitational, has been a runner-up four times, has collected $166,570 in earnings this season and comes off a strong performance in last week's American National Open.

Most of the same field of Americans are on hand, along with George Knudson heading a 21-man Canadian contingent.

In addition to Trevino, the top entrants are Jack Nicklaus, who designed the 7,096-yard, par-71 Glen Abbey course that will serve as a permanent site for this national championship, plus two-time Canadian champ Tom Weiskopf, South African Gary Player, newly-crowned U.S. Open champion Andy North, and J.C. Snead, who chased him to the title last week in Denver.

Strangely, neither Nicklaus nor Player has ever won the Canadian Open, though Nicklaus has finished second four times and third once. Player, making his 15th consecutive start, has won the Masters and two other titles this year in his best performance ever on the American PGA Tour. Nicklaus is a two-time winner this season.

Other standouts include big Andy Bean, a two-time winner, Hubert Green, former U.S. and Canadian champion Jerry Pate, Jim Simons, Bill Rogers, Arnold Palmer and Bill Kratzert.

Portions of the tournament's final two rounds will be televised nationally in Canada by CBC-TV and in the United States by CBS-TV.

PROFESSIONAL ADVICE — Arnold Palmer (right) and Lee Trevino kept golfing fans laughing during Wednesday's practice round before this week's Canadian Open golf championship. As the two discussed putting on the 10th tee, a fan behind Palmer asked him to turn her way for a photo. Trevino quipped that Palmer was already showing his "best side." (AP Laserphoto)

Q. I am not a prude, but I was shocked last Sunday when Pat Summerall was interviewing Andy Bean, after Bean had won a golf tournament. Bean had a young lady by his side who was identified as a stewardess and his traveling companion, whom Bean said helped him "relax" on the tour. I turned my set off in mid-interview. I don't have a question, except doesn't anybody care about this kind of blatancy? — Mrs. E.G.B., Gary, Ind.

A. Maybe the lady was along to arrange Bean's airline tickets.

Q. Jim Fregosi, the manager of the California Angels, as I recall, was a starting high-school football player in the Bay Area years ago. I remember he was a very good runner, and I wonder now if he ever debated going into college football instead of baseball. — Joe Kirstanzo, San Mateo, Calif.

A. Fregosi was an all-district halfback in high school, and he was offered a deal by Eddie Erdelatz, then coach of Navy, similar to the one accepted later by Roger Staubach. Erdelatz wanted Fregosi to attend Menlo Park College for a year to get his scholastic requirements in order. (Staubach did so at New Mexico Military Institute.) Fregosi signed instead with the Red Sox. "But," he recalls, "I was better at football than baseball."

Q. I have a catalog published by the National Football League that lists all of the things you can buy with team insignias on them. I have written to the catalog listing with these questions and received no reply: Which teams sell the most things and which the least? Or don't they keep such figures? — Frank Whisenant, Des Moines, Iowa.

A. NFL Properties will only divulge such information to participating companies, and then reluctantly. The fact is, the Dallas Cowboys' items draw about 18.6 percent of the business. Next closest are the Pittsburgh Steelers, with 11.8 percent. Several clubs are bunched at the bottom with the Houston Oilers, at sales of 1 percent.

Q. I have read stories about the new group of cheerleaders for the L.A. Rams called "The Sundancers." Where can I write to get pictures of them? — Johnny Oliver, Albuquerque, New Mex.

A. Well, first, they are no longer "The Sundancers" because that name had already been claimed by an entertainment group in Southern California. The girls are now to be known as the "Embraceable Ewes," possibly because no one has realized this would inevitably be shortened to "The Rams' Ewes."

You can write to the football team at 10271 West Pico Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060. We understand group pictures of the Ewes (unshared) will be available to fans sometime in July.

Tech To Sign MHS Pitcher

Texas Tech will sign Monterey pitcher Derek Hatfield to a baseball scholarship this afternoon.

Tech coach Kal Segrist indicated to The Avalanche-Journal that Hatfield would become the second signer within a week from the class AAAA state finalist team. MHS catcher Jeff Harp signed Saturday. Segrist also said that MHS pitcher Ron Reeves expressed an interest in playing baseball for Tech. A football signee, Reeves would have to participate in spring football during his freshman season.

An all-city and all-district selection each of the past two years, Hatfield compiled a 25-5 career pitching mark with the Plainsmen varsity.

Angels' Rookie Thrilled By Auspicious Debut

By The Associated Press
It took Dave Macher seven years to reach the major leagues and more than a week to get in a game, but when he finally did it was well worth the wait.
California's 27-year-old rookie third baseman, called up from the minors early last week when Carney Lansford was injured, was the first batter of the game Wednesday night.
He lined a 3-2 pitch from Minnesota's Geoff Zahn just inside the left field foul pole, becoming the 46th player in major league history to homer in his first at-bat. Don Baylor added a two-run homer in the first inning, his 17th, and the Angels went on to defeat the Twins 5-2.
"It's a great thrill," Macher said. "I was really happy running those bases, as you could probably tell. I was just looking for a pitch to hit and luckily I got a fast ball up. I hit it good. I was just hoping that it would stay fair."
Elsewhere in the American League, the Cleveland Indians beat Kansas City 4-2, slicing the Royals' lead over California in the AL West to one-half game; the Boston Red Sox crushed the New York Yankees 9-2, the Milwaukee Brewers cooled off the Baltimore Orioles 5-3 and the Detroit Tigers outlasted the Toronto Blue Jays 10-8.
After the Angels grabbed a quick 3-0 lead, Minnesota's Roy Smalley countered with a two-run blow in the bottom of the first. Don Aase settled down after that and pitched his first complete game in 13 starts, scattering five hits. Rick Miller drove in the Angels' final two runs with a seventh-inning triple.

The last player before Macher to homer on his first major league at-bat was Toronto's Al Woods on April 7, 1977.
"Actually," said Macher, "I'm mostly a line drive hitter. I'd only had two home runs at Salt Lake City before being called up. I spent seven years in the minors, so it's taken me a while to get here. Now I just want to stay here."
Indians 4, Royals 2
Paul Dade's checked-swing grounder scored Jim Norris with the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and newly acquired Dan Spillner hurled three innings of one-hit relief. Spillner, acquired last week from San Diego, replaced Don Hood with the bases loaded and two out in the fourth, retired Pete LaCock on a fly ball and did not give up a hit until Fred Patek's one-out single in the seventh.
The Indians scored the go-ahead run without getting a ball out of the infield. Norris walked, Duane Kuiper bunted safely, Tom Verzyer forced Kuiper, with Norris taking third, and Dade followed with his grounder to short. The Indians, who tied the score in the fourth on John Grubb's two-run triple, added an insurance run in the ninth on singles by Norris and Kuiper and Verzyer's grounder.

Red Sox 9, Yankees 2
Carl Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk keyed a six-run third inning with consecutive doubles and Butch Hobson, Fred Lynn and George Scott homered as the Red Sox whipped the Yankees behind the six-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley.
The victory, Boston's 11th in the last 13 games and 21st in 27, enabled the Red Sox to take the rubber match of a three-game series in their first 1978 showdown with New York's defending world champions, who are in third place in the AL

East, eight games behind Boston.
The Red Sox picked up a run in the second inning on a single by Lynn, a walk, a sacrifice and a Hobson's sacrifice fly. They nailed down the victory while shelling New York starter Jim Beattie and Dick Tidrow in the big third, which Hobson capped with a two-run homer. Lynn and Scott hit consecutive homers in the ninth off Catfish Hunter, just off the disabled list and making his first appearance since May 9.
"We usually don't play these type of games with the Yankees," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "We won two games easy and they won one easy."

Brewers 5, Orioles 3
Larry Hise slapped a two-run single in the third inning and Buck Martinez drove in the decisive run with a sixth-inning sacrifice fly as Milwaukee ended Baltimore's four-game winning streak. Winner Larry Sorensen took a 5-0 lead and a three-hitter into the eighth but was chased when the Orioles scored three times on five consecutive singles and a sacrifice fly.
Paul Molitor singled, stole second and scored on a single by Sal Bando in the first inning and the Brewers scored what proved to be the winning run in the fourth on a double by Robin Yount, a sacrifice and Martinez's sacrifice fly.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 8
Alan Trammell's solo homer triggered a five-run sixth inning for Detroit that erased a 6-5 Toronto lead. After Trammell's homer, consecutive singles by Lou Whitaker — his third hit — and Ron LeFlore plus a double by Steve Kemp chased Don Kirkwood, who had taken over in the fifth from starter Tom Underwood. Jim Crawford got the win in relief of starter Jack Billingham, who gave up four runs on six hits in the first inning. Jason Thompson also homered for Detroit while Otto Velez connected for the Blue Jays.

DISCUSSING THE GAME — New York's Reggie Jackson and Boston's Jim Rice do a little clowning before Wednesday night's game in Boston. The division leading Red Sox won two of three games in the series. Spinks Arrested Again
JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For the third time this year, heavyweight boxer Leon Spinks has been fined for driving without a license.
Spinks, who holds the World Boxing Council's version of the heavyweight crown, paid a fine and court costs totaling $52 Wednesday after he was stopped by a Jacksonville policeman.
The officer said he pulled Spinks over about 2:50 a.m. Wednesday after noticing the car he was driving had expired license plates. Spinks was charged with driving without a license and operating a vehicle with an expired registration.
The 24-year-old boxer was arrested at St. Louis in April and charged with possession of one hundredth of a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana and driving without a license. The drug charges were dismissed last and he

Garrett Wins Sedan Race Class
Malcolm Garrett Jr. of Lubbock, one of the chief contestants for the Sports Car Club of America's B Sedan Class U.S. Road Racing Championship, scored another major victory last weekend as he took first in class at Dallas's Greater Southwest Raceway.
Garrett's Datsun 710 not only won in its division but finished second overall, trailing only the Alfa Spyder of Houston's Tom Mankin in the 50-mile "Sunburn National."
Next date on the racing trail for Garrett will be July 1-2 at Texas World Speedway, College Station, and the "Plain Vanilla" USRR event. Garrett already holds a win at the Texas track this season and has led the Southwest B Sedan championship division since the season's outset.
Garrett's car, which he maintains himself as well as drives, negotiated the nine-turn, 2.3-mile Dallas course at speeds ranging from 30 to 145 m.p.h. Powered by an 1,800 cc (106 cubic inches) four-cylinder single overhead camshaft engine that pumps out 224 horsepower at up to 9,200 rpm, the car ready to race weighs in at less than 2,000 pounds.

A national drag racing champion before turning to other forms of racing, Garrett races under Nissan Japan sponsorship, with assistance locally from National Distributing Co. and Dubose Automotive and Machine.
Hub Netters
Four doubles teams from Lubbock won in Wednesday's competition and will advance to district play in the Equitable Family Tennis Challenge.
Winning in the local competition were Jane Irons and daughter Amy, Eleanor Catugno and son Philip, Joe Garner and daughter Lisa, and Murray Coulter and son Kenneth.
The district competition will be held July 15 at Hillcrest Country Club.
The district winners will advance to the sectional competition, scheduled for July 24-25. The victors there will receive all-expenses-paid trips to play at the U.S. Open Sept. 6-9 at the new U.S. Tennis Association Center in Flushing Meadows, N.Y.

RACQUETBALL WINNER
BELLEVILLE, Mich. (AP) — Top-ranked Shannon Wright of Las Vegas, Nev., has defeated ninth-ranked Rita Hoff of St. Louis to advance to the women's semifinals of the $30,000 U.S. Racquetball Association National Championships.
Spinks defeated Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight title Feb. 15 in a split decision. He has agreed to a return match Sept. 15 in New Orleans.
The World Boxing Council stripped Spinks of its version of the title because he decided on the rematch with Ali rather than a promised bout with Ken Norton. The WBC crown is held by Larry Holmes.
Spinks began his boxing career in the Marine Corps, undergoing training at Camp Lejeune near Jacksonville. He was reported to have been en route to Hilton Head, S.C., to begin training for the Ali bout when he was arrested.

Rice Ends Racism Talk By Issuing Statement

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The subject is an ugly one, racism, and Jim Rice finds himself caught in the middle.

On one hand, Rice comes out and says there's no racism on the Boston Red Sox today. On the other hand, he's quoted in the current edition of Sport Magazine as saying his progress with the Red Sox was not as rapid as it might've been had he been white instead of black. Rice's statements in the magazine are the result of a spring training interview in March.

They couldn't have come out at a worse time as far as the Red Sox officials are concerned because the club is riding along nicely on top in its division ... and no one wants to rock the boat at this point. Particularly on such a sensitive subject as racism.

In the magazine piece, Rice, talking about Fred Lynn's winning a regular job ahead of him three years ago, says, "Race has to be a factor when Fred Lynn can hit .240 in the minors and I can hit .340 and he gets a starting job before I do."

In my personal experience with Jim Rice, I've found him to be honest and completely above-board. I believe he has no personal resentment toward Fred Lynn, nor Lynn against him.

Occasionally there is a situation, or a rivalry if you like, as that between Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris and Hank Aaron and Rico Carty. Everybody likes to outdo the other fellow. Years from now, when they're in their 40s or 50s and get together at some Old-Timers Game, I'm sure Jim Rice and Fred Lynn will talk about the "old days" and have a good laugh over these stories now.

As Boston's designated hitter, Rice leads the American League in home runs and runs batted in and ranks in the top 10 among the circuit's hitters.

In Boston Wednesday, Rice said he hadn't read the magazine article but he did have a prepared statement about the story.

"I have the highest regard for (Manager) Don Zimmer, (part-owner and general manager) Haywood Sullivan and the entire Red Sox organization," Rice's statement said. "Furthermore, I've always been treated fairly by this organization ... There may have been a time through the years when racism was an issue on this team. It certainly does not exist today."

Rice said he considered all his teammates his friends and was "deeply hurt" by what he called his "alleged quote" which said he associated with Tiant and Hobson, but wouldn't call them friends. I'm pretty sure I know what Jim Rice meant there, too. What he was trying to say, I believe, is certainly he's friendly with Tiant and Hobson but that basically he's a loner. Nothing wrong with that.

Rice is absolutely right when he suggests there was a time when the Red Sox were lily white. The first black player they ever brought up was Pumpsie Green, and that wasn't until 1959.

One thing I can't buy is that the Red Sox advanced Lynn more quickly than Rice because of the difference in their color. Both were brought up from Pawtucket late in 1974. Darrell Johnson, managing the Red Sox then, designated Lynn as his regular center fielder at the start of 1975 after Lynn hit .419 in 15 games for them at the tail end of the previous season.

Rice had better figures than Lynn at Pawtucket but batted only .269 in 24 games for the Red Sox at the end of the 1974 season. He started the 1975 season on the bench while Tony Conigliaro tried a comeback but, but Rice took over the regular job in June.

The entire situation, I feel, is placed in proper perspective by Larry Whiteside of the Boston Globe. Whiteside covers the Red Sox regularly and is one of the best baseball reporters in the country. The fact he's black is only incidental.

"You can't refute history," he says about the Red Sox' past policy on black ballplayers. "It's there. In that regard, there are still inequities in baseball, as there are outside it, but to accuse the Red Sox of racism 1978 is grossly unfair." That's the way my I see it, too.

Halicki's Mean Streak Halts Seaver's Streak

By The Associated Press
Tom Seaver's winning streak finally came to an end — only because Ed Halicki started a mean streak.

"I just decided to go out there with hate," said Halicki after pitching the San Francisco Giants to a 3-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and their ace pitcher Wednesday night. "I decided no more buddy-buddy stuff."

Of course, the spindly Halicki was in the right frame of mind for the Reds after the kind of sorry work he's done against them in the past — a 1-7 lifetime record and inauspicious 6.53 earned run average.

Plus, he had the added incentive of facing Seaver, an illustrious pitcher who had won seven straight games, including a no-hit beauty his last time out against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Another classic performance was not in the cards this time for the fancy right-hander. Seaver gave up a second-inning single to Jack Clark to break up any no-hit intentions he might have had, then he allowed three runs in the fourth.

It might have been a 1-0 game had not a fourth-inning drive by Roger Metzger gone between center fielder Cesar Geronimo and right fielder Ken Griffey.

"When the ball went up I thought it would be caught," said Seaver.

So did the two outfielders, but each thought the other would make the catch.

"I looked at him and thought he would catch it and he looked at me and thought I would get it. No one called for it. It was just a lack of communication," said Griffey.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1; the Montreal Expos defeated the New York Mets 2-1 in a game shortened by rain in the seventh inning; the Atlanta Braves blanked the San Diego Padres 2-0 and the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the Houston Astros 5-4 in 11 innings. The Philadelphia St. Louis game was postponed by rain.

Halicki allowed leadoff batters to reach base in four innings, but no Cincinnati baserunner got past second. He walked just one batter and struck out four.

With one out in the Giants' fourth, Seaver walked Willie McCovey and Clark followed with a double into the left field corner. An intentional walk to Jim Dwyer filled the bases. Metzger then got his double between Griffey and Geronimo for two runs and Marc Hill knocked in the Giants' third run with a grounder.

The victory increased the Giants' National League West lead to two games over Cincinnati.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the third on an RBI single by Gene Clines. The Pirates tied the game in the bottom of the third on Omar Moreno's RBI single.

Expos 2, Mets 1
Steve Rogers, weakly supported by Montreal bats the last eight times he has pitched, drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning single to lead the Expos over New York.

The game was held up three times, the last in the bottom of the seventh inning after a delay of one hour and 21 minutes. There were Mets on first and second with one out in the seventh when the game was called.

Rogers has allowed just 12 earned runs in his last 62 1/3 innings and has given up just four in his last 22 1/3 innings. But the eight-hit victory snapped a personal two-game losing streak because of paltry offensive support.

Pirates 2, Cubs 1
Frank Taveras hit a tie-breaking, two-out single in the ninth inning to back the six-hit pitching of John Candelaria and lead Pittsburgh over Chicago.

Loser Ray Burris was locked in a 1-1 tie with Candelaria going into the ninth. But with one out, Phil Garner singled. Candelaria followed with a sacrifice bunt and Garner raced all the way to third as nobody covered the base. Taveras, batting near .400 the past 10 days, lined his single to left to bring Garner home.

Braves 2, Padres 0
Gary Matthews collected three hits and drove in two runs and Adrian Devine and Gene Garber combined on an eight-hit leadoff to lead Atlanta over San Diego. Devine gave up six hits, struck out five and walked one before needing relief help from Garber in the eighth. Bob Shirley absorbed the loss.

Devine and Shirley had a scoreless pitching duel going through the first four innings, but the Braves took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Matthews' RBI single. In the seventh, Royster doubled for his second hit of the game and Matthews knocked him in again with his third straight single.

Dodgers 5, Astros 4
Pinch-hitter Steve Yeager singled home Bill North from third base with one out in the 11th inning to boost Los Angeles over Houston.

North led off the inning with a double off loser Joe Sambito, took third on a sacrifice bunt by Jerry Grote and came home on Yeager's single.

Bob Welch, the fourth Dodger pitcher, earned his first major league victory as he pitched two innings, giving up one hit and striking out four.

ALREADY OUT — Los Angeles second baseman Dave Lopes catches the first relay from his shortstop Bill Russell but uncorks a high throw to first base in an attempted double play during Wednesday night's game with Houston. Enos Cabell was retired at second base and the Dodgers won the game 5-4 in 11 innings. (AP Laserphoto)

SA Ties Diablos For Lead

By The Associated Press
Gerald Hannahs struck out ten and gave up only four hits Wednesday night in pitching San Antonio to a 4-2 Texas League baseball victory over Amarillo.

The victory moved San Antonio into a first place tie with El Paso in the Western Division of the Texas League.

In other Texas League action, Tulsa edged Shreveport, 10-9, Midland and El Paso split a doubleheader with Midland taking the opener, 6-2 and El Paso winning the nightcap by an 8-2 margin, and Jackson and Arkansas split a twin bill. Jackson took the opening game, 5-0 and Arkansas bounced back for a 4-1 victory in the second game.

Hannahs, who pitched seven and two-thirds of an inning, boosted his season record to 2-1. Gary Lucas, now 3-8, took the loss for Amarillo.

Marty Scott slammed a home run in the top of the ninth inning to give the Tulsa Drillers a 10-9 victory over Shreveport. Murry Littleton drove in four runs for Shreveport with a homer and a triple and Juan DeLiza added a home run for the Captains. Steve Bianchi, the fourth and last pitcher for Tulsa, picked up the victory. He is 3-1. Rusty Johnston, now 2-3, took the loss.

Bill Ewing's 11th homer of the year helped El Paso to an 8-2 victory in the closing game of the doubleheader with Midland. The victory enabled El Paso to hang on to first place and remain tied with San Antonio. Chuck Porter, now 4-0, took the victory. Tom Butler, now 2-4, was tagged for the loss in the second game.

Lopez Recalls 'Younger Days'

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — When Nancy Lopez was 8, her Mexican-born father, Domingo, placed a little white ball on the ground and said, "Let 'er fly!"

Boy, did it, and so began the Cinderella career of the best rookie ever to hit the women's professional golf tour.

"As a little girl, I used to tag along behind my parents on a public course in Roswell, New Mexico," Lopez said at a news conference Wednesday, her almond eyes twinkling over all the fuss stirred up by her LPGA record-smashing spree of the last few weeks.

"Daddy was a pretty good golfer," she said. "He just put the ball on the ground and told me to hit it in the hole. I've never had any formal lessons."

At age 9, she won her first tournament

— by 110 strokes! At age 11, she beat her father, an auto body shop operator with a handicap of three.

She played on the boys' golf team at Goddard High School in Roswell, helping it win the state championship, and took the girls' national junior title in 1972 and 1974.

On Friday, Lopez, now 21, tees off here in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open, hoping to extend her all-time women's professional golf record to six straight victories and close in on the men's record — 11 in a row by Byron Nelson in 1945.

Since turning pro last July 29, she has won seven tournaments and earned $153,336, making her the all-time rookie money winner in both men's and women's professional golf.

Her fifth straight win at Rochester, N.Y., last weekend broke a LPGA mark held, among others, by Mickey Wright, who did it twice, and all-time money leader Kathy Whitworth.

Wright, among the 74 golfers entered at Hershey, has won 81 tournaments. Her 13 wins in one year is a record within Lopez's grasp.

On Wednesday, Lopez played in a pro-am and practiced. And everywhere she went, she was followed by a gaggle of sports writers and photographers.

She never stopped smiling, her pearl-white teeth flashing against a deep tan as she answered every question. A few:

Q. Do you detect jealousy among the other players on the tour?

A. None at all, and I thought I would.

Q. Where do you get your power?

A. I'm regarded as one of the long hitters. It's timing, I think, and I used to drink a lot of milk when I was young.

Q. How do you account for your hot streak?

A. I don't know if you can call it that. I just think I am playing really well.

Q. How do you relax?

A. I like to lie in the sun.

After the 45-minute news conference she granted one-on-one interviews, always gracious, always patient.

As she put it in an interview the other day: "If I'm asleep, I hope I never wake up."

Latin Stars Fall In London

LONDON (AP) — The Queen's Club tennis international, a warm-up for next week's Wimbledon, has proved a disaster for two of the game's Latin stars.

Many of the world's top players decided not to play in the $125,000 tournament but Raul Ramirez and Adriano Panatta, both highly rated, entered and already have been eliminated.

Mexico's Ramirez, the top seed, was knocked out of the tournament in the first round Tuesday. The Italian Panatta, while practicing Wednesday, injured himself and will have to miss Wimbledon.

Panatta, like his doubles partner Ilie Nastase, had been beaten in the first round.

Practicing with his compatriot Giorgio Occhipinti, Panatta injured a nerve in his back.

For a number of up-and-coming American players, however, the Queen's Club event has proved a very useful testing ground.

Last year John McEnroe and Hank

Pfister were the discoveries at Queen's. Pfister went out early this year, but fourth-seeded McEnroe, who only turned pro this month, is one of four Americans who qualified for the quarter-finals by winning Wednesday.

McEnroe dropped only 7 points in the second set Wednesday in beating another American Gene Mayer 7-5, 6-0.

He qualified to meet another promising young American, unseeded Tom Gullikson, in the quarters.

Gullikson beat the ninth seed, Jaime Fillol of Chile, 3-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Another American, Nick Saviano, who isn't ranked in the top 50 in his own country, also qualified for the last eight when he beat young Australian John James 6-4, 6-2.

Saviano will meet Tony Roche of Australia, who beat American Billy Martin 7-5, 6-1.

Second-seeded Sandy Mayer, yet another American, defeated Ross Case of Australia 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 to qualify for a match with Britain's John Lloyd. Lloyd defeated the veteran Australian John Newcombe 6-4, 6-4.

No. 6 John Alexander of Australia defeated Terry Moor 4-6, 6-1, 6-4. American Victor Amaya, who'd topped Ramirez Tuesday, fell Wednesday to Australian Colin Dibley 6-1, 7-5.

Billie Jean Seeks Net Mark

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Billie Jean King wants to break the record she shares with Elizabeth Ryan. Both won 19 Wimbledon titles.

Ryan won hers — all in doubles — between 1914 and 1934. Billie Jean started her collection in 1961 and has won six singles titles, nine in women's double and four in mixed doubles.

Earlier this week she said she would "evaluate things" in September to see if she wants to keep playing.

"That extra title means a lot to me," she said. "It may be a long, long time before it is beaten if I don't do it."

A couple of years ago King, who's undergone three knee operations, decided she had had enough of singles play, but this year she is as competitive as ever, although slower at age 34 than in her heyday.

She has just recovered from a respiratory ailment that lasted several months — but that was a good thing, she maintains.

"Eventually it forced me to rest and the result is that I'm feeling as fit as ever now."

King dropped a third round set — the first she has lost in the tournament so far — to the Swedish youngster Elisabeth Ekblom — but it was only a momentary lapse. She came back to win 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

The two top seeds, Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova, won their third-round matches easily. Evert defeated American Lea Antonopolis 6-3, 6-1 and Navratilova beat American JoAnne Russell 6-1, 6-4.

But for little Tracy Austin, the 15-year-old from Rolling Hills, Calif., the day was a disaster.

She lost to Michelle Tyler of Britain 7-6, 0-6, 7-5.

Another British girl, 18-year-old Ann Hobbs, advanced to the quarter-finals by defeating seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

All the other seeds made it to the last eight except for Dianne Fromholtz, who was beaten by another seed, fellow Australian Wendy Turnbull, who won 6-3, 6-4. Betty Stove of the Netherlands beat Francoise Durr of France 6-4, 6-3.

Louisville Tops Hopefuls Group

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Buffalo Braves co-owner John Y. Brown would like to move the NBA franchise to his hometown of Louisville, but says he is still considering San Diego and Minneapolis.

Holmes Fulfills Dream

CLEVELAND (AP) — Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council's new heavyweight boxing champion, says "winning the title was a dream come true for me." The 28-year-old boxer from Easton, Pa., was in Cleveland Wednesday to confer with his manager, Cleveland Rich Giachetti, and make several personal appearances.

He was in an expansive mood as he relaxed in his room at a suburban motel. "It took me nine years to win the title and I'm not going to do anything to spoil it now," Holmes said happily. "I want to be an example for kids." "I came from no education and no background. Now, I'm the champion. If I could do it, they must now feel there's a chance for them in what they're trying to do." "I would like people to say, 'There's the heavyweight champion and he's a very nice person.'" Holmes two weeks ago wrestled the WBC version of the heavyweight crown from Ken Norton in a 15-round split decision, although Holmes felt he won by a wider margin than that. "I didn't think it was that close. Whether I won or lost, though, I could have said I tried. So I would have been satisfied." The 6-foot-3, 220-pounder said no plans have been made for a title defense, although it could come in September or October. "I had two hard fights and took a lot of banging and pounding," explained Holmes, who got his shot at Norton after beating Earnie Shavers in April. "I want to be completely healed." Holmes, who currently weighs about five pounds more than his fighting weight, runs five miles a day while preparing for a fight. He was asked if he enjoyed that part of the ring routine. "I don't," he said with a smile. "It's work. The running isn't so bad, but it's getting up so early in the morning to do it."

He said he didn't want his team playing in the city's temporary arena and having to compete with the Dallas Cowboys for fan attendance.

While officials of Louisville, Minneapolis and San Diego were bidding for Brown's attention, Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom was noncommittal over Brown's decision to eliminate the Texas city.

"Brown's decision to go someplace else is his loss," said Folsom, who had worked hard to try to obtain the franchise. "I know this. When our new arena is finished, the NBA will be here knocking on our door. Dallas has got to be on the top of the list for everything so we'll be hearing from them."

"And who knows," the mayor added, "maybe we'll be hearing from them (Buffalo) again next year."

Brown would like nothing better than to see an NBA team in Louisville, where he was boss of the Kentucky Colonels of the now-defunct American Basketball Association. He wants to give officials in his hometown a decision by the end of the week.

"They're trying to create a lot of interest here (in Louisville) in the 11th hour," Brown said. "Louisville would be the smallest market. I don't want to bring it here unless it's going to be successful and there's going to be the right kind of commitment."

"I want to have it in Louisville if the support is there," he added. "They're trying to mount a campaign. In the next two days, we'll know if it's going to be viable."

Meanwhile, Brown intends to send staff members to Minneapolis and San Diego in the next few days to complete studies of the two cities.

Minneapolis Mayor Al Hofstede said Wednesday he had personally talked with Brown and said he was "excited" about the prospect of having the Braves relocate in his city.

In San Diego, where Bill Quinn, manager of the San Diego Sports Arena, claims to have "more than two thousand" pledges for season tickets, Mayor Pete Wilson assures the Braves would be given strong fan support if they move to his city.

"We definitely want the Braves here," Wilson said Wednesday. "Bringing them to San Diego, they would be given strong fan support, and even more than that, we think we have a special advantage because every owner, player and coach in the NBA wants to get San Diego on the schedule."

Brown was granted a 20-day extension by the league board of governors last week to give him additional time to decide on a location for his team.

Ali Calls Brezhnev 'Greatest'

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali, who usually reserves the title "the greatest" for himself, has bestowed it upon his recent host — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

Returning here from a 10-day trip to Moscow, where he was feted wherever he went, Ali said Wednesday that his 35-minute talk with Brezhnev on the subject of world peace was "a heck of an honor." "I felt humble," the former heavyweight boxing champion said during a brief stopover at Kennedy Airport, en route to Chicago. "He was the greatest."

Ali would not disclose exactly what he and Brezhnev had discussed, but said he had no message for President Carter.

In the Soviet Union, Ali said, "everybody was humble; no big shots." He said he was surprised not to find "policemen with rifles on every corner, agents following you around, bugging your room."

What he did see was "100 different nationalities living in peace," and clean streets devoid of prostitutes and homosexuals.

Saying he had seen houses of worship for Moslems, Jews, Catholics and others, Ali denounced as "a lie" the view that Russians are not free to worship.

Ali cautioned, though, that he could only tell about what he saw in Moscow.

"I don't think a whole country can put on a fake that good," he said. "In a few days Ali starts training for his September rematch with Leon Spinks, who won the heavyweight title from him earlier this year."

Ali had some early verbal jabs for Spinks, who was arrested Wednesday in Jackson, N.C., for driving without a license. That was just Spinks' way of trying to get some pre-rematch publicity, Ali said.

"I can talk to presidents. He's gotta get locked up," said the former champ.

The Russians, he said, "don't know Leon Spinks. They don't know Ken Norton."

Holland, Argentina Meet For World Cup Crown

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — For a man who makes a monkey of himself, it's always nice to come back and be the hero — especially when the whole world is watching.

Ernie Brandts, the Dutch soccer star, made one of the blunders of his career Wednesday and thought he had cost his team its chance of winning the World Cup. But later he made one of the plays that sent Holland into next Sunday's final against Argentina.

In a vital game against Italy, Brandts tried to stop ace forward Roberto Bettega from scoring and accidentally sent the ball rolling into his own net.

In scoring against his own team he crashed into his goalkeeper, Pieter Schrijvers, and put him out of the match. Schrijvers was carried off and a substitute took his place.

"This kind of thing doesn't usually happen to me," Brandts said. "I only looked at the ball and didn't realize Schrijvers had come out of his goal so far. I was shocked by what happened."

In the 49th minute the world suddenly looked a bright place again for Brandts. With an Italian challenging him on either side, he took aim from about 100 feet and sent a wonder-shot flashing into the top corner of Italy's net.

"This never happened to me before either," the red-haired Dutchman said. "I don't normally score goals. That is the job of the forwards. But when I saw that one go in it was the greatest thrill of my life."

Arend Haan completed the good work for Holland by firing one in from 120 feet and the Dutch downed Italy 2-1.

In the other Group A match, Austria downed West Germany 3-2, and in Group B, Argentina swamped Peru 6-0, and Brazil beat Poland 3-1.

The two spectacular Dutch goals were as good as anything seen in the 3-week-old tournament.

But for Argentine soccer fans — and at this feverish time that means the whole nation — the goals that mattered most were the six scored by Argentina over Peru.

Under the complicated scoring rules of the tournament, Argentina needed to win by at least 4-0 to overhaul Brazil and reach the final.

As each goal went in, Argentines watching the game on television throughout the land became more frenzied. The center of Buenos Aires became a seething mass of noisy revelers.

Brazil, three-time winner of the trophy, was the only team among the 16 starters that went through six games without being defeated — and yet it didn't make the final.

Brazil beat Sweden 1-1, was 0-0 against Spain and downed Austria 1-0 in the first round, and in the second round defeated Peru 3-0, tied Argentina 0-0 and was 3-1 against Poland.

It was goals that counted in the end. Brazil and Argentina were even in points, and it was a matter of which team scored most. Leopoldo Luque and Mario Kempes, the Argentine goal scorers, each claimed two in the night's triumph.

While the whole of Argentina went crazy, Coach Cesar Luis Menotti was cautious.

"Holland has been one of the best functioning teams in this tournament," Menotti said. "They play strictly as a team, and we must respect them. But we have a chance to win the Cup."

CLEAR VISION — Jaki Stefanovski, 32, of Skopje, Yugoslavia, looks through a newly fitted pair of glasses resembling a small pair of binoculars. The new glasses make it possible for him to read small print for the first time in his life. He has had less than five percent vision since being stricken with a disease of the optic nerve at age 6. Fixing the glasses is Dr. William Feinbloom at Philadelphia's College of Optometry. (AP Laserphoto)

Man Regains Vision With Special Lenses

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jaki Stefanovski squinted through glasses bearing two-inch long miniature camera lenses, read the tiny numbers in a newspaper baseball box score and exalted that the first thing he would do upon his return to Yugoslavia was learn to drive.

It was the first time the 32-year-old petroleum plant worker had been able to see anything so small since age 6, when a disease known as optic atrophy left him with less than 5 percent vision.

"I'm so very happy," Stefanovski said after Dr. William Feinbloom adjusted his invention, which he claims can improve the vision of every legally blind person who is neither totally blind nor suffers from shadow vision.

Feinbloom, a New York City optometrist who is on the faculty of the Pennsylvania College of Optometry, said his device could help more than 15 million people alone in the United States.

"He could see faces and colorations and movements but couldn't make out details," Feinbloom said.

The device is actually a miniaturized camera lens — his first model was 14 inches long — that magnifies an image 36 times the size seen by a normal eye.

It is made of nine lenses and two prisms, and Feinbloom said it takes a photograph of what the patient is looking at.

Stefanovski, whose trip to the United States was paid for by his employer, said that when he returns to his home in Skopje he is going to learn to drive an automobile.

"For 26 years I only see a little," he said through an interpreter. "It feels so good to see, but my head hurts."

Feinbloom said it would take a few days to get used to the two-inch camera lens that protrudes from the center of each eyeglass.

"With those telescopes he has to lift his head a few inches higher than normal to be able to see on level," the 74-year-old doctor said.

Feinbloom tested his invention — which he declined to patent and is offering free to science — on more than 200 patients in the past six years before deciding to offer it to the public.

Tax Protester Convicted

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A Kansas City, Kan., man who says the Constitution doesn't require him to pay income taxes was found guilty in federal court of failing to file income tax returns for 1973, 1974 and 1975.

"I believe in the Constitution," Omer W. Ware, 53, testified, nervously thumbing a copy of the document in one hand and a silver dollar in the other. "I believe in this country and I believe in freedom."

Ware contended that the legal requirement to file tax returns was eliminated in 1968 when the United States abandoned the gold standard.

He argued that he no longer earns dollars in his job at the General Motors Assembly Division. He said he is paid in federal reserve notes, which are not the same as dollars because they lack backing in gold or silver.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank G. This Wednesday ordered a pre-sentence investigation of Ware, who was released on $2,500 bond. No date was set for sentencing.

James P. Buchele, U.S. attorney for Kansas, said Ware could be sentenced to a year in prison and fined $10,000 for each of the three counts, which claimed Ware had a gross income of about $31,000 for the three years.

O'Neill Fears Washington Tax Rebellion

By JONATHAN WOLMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tip O'Neill knows which way the political winds are blowing, and he seems apprehensive about the one that blew Howard Jarvis in to town this week.

Jarvis, the blustery California tax-cut crusader, took a triumphant two-day tour of Washington on Monday and Tuesday, creating ripples of "Potomac panic" in the $500 billion federal establishment.

His message, a California political warning that is bolstered by national public opinion polls, is clear and simple: Government collects too much in taxes and spends too much money.

"If you had time, you could make a list of 25,000 things that the federal government ought to get out of tomorrow," says Jarvis, who led the successful California referendum which cut property taxes by 57 percent and put a lid on their future increase.

O'Neill, the House speaker and a blustery character himself, is afraid Jarvis will fan the flames of California's tax revolt to Washington. O'Neill is a staunch believer in government spending to help people. His main concern now is the future of a $3.4 billion foreign aid bill before the House this week.

O'Neill wasn't keen about embracing Jarvis.

"I don't know of any reason that I should talk to Mr. Jarvis," the speaker told reporters Monday morning. Not much later, Jarvis was escorted into O'Neill's office for a long session with the House Democratic leadership.

"I don't think anyone could have had a more courteous, cordial reception," said Jarvis. "I had a marvelous hour and 45 minutes of the scheduled 15 minutes with the House Democratic leadership."

Jarvis said O'Neill told him: "Don't go away thinking that you convinced me," and Jarvis told O'Neill, "If I didn't, maybe the people will."

It was Jarvis' first meeting with the Washington establishment — like two dogs who meet and for a while they just sniff one another.

But the public opinion polls say Jarvis is a winner, and Washington politicians of every stripe are wandering onto the Jarvis bandwagon.

Take Alan Cranston, the Senate majority whip, a California Democrat and a prominent liberal. An early opponent of Jarvis' California tax-cut measure, Cranston escorted Jarvis on his Monday excursion to Capitol Hill. He now is riveted to the Jarvis bandwagon, saying the people have spoken.

He took Jarvis to see Sen. Floyd Haskell, another liberal Democrat. Haskell is facing a tough re-election race in tax-conscious Colorado this fall. He hopped aboard the Jarvis bandwagon.

Cranston introduced Jarvis to Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Frank Church, D-Idaho. Sen. Russell Long, D-La., a powerbroker of O'Neill's stature, went by to say hello.

"Victory works wonders for your popularity," Jarvis said Tuesday as he met reporters at the Washington Press Club.

President Carter avoided Jarvis, ignoring the Californian's desire for a brief talk. He was greeted with the most enthusiasm by Republicans.

Republicans have been trying to cut federal spending for years and see Jarvis as Moses come down from the mountain, not with tablets, but with public opinion surveys and one very loud, very dramatic election victory.

Jarvis says tax activists in 40 states are seeking his help in engineering tax-cut campaigns. If there are a string of successes at the state level, the fever will surely spread to Washington.

For 15 years, Howard Jarvis was the quintessential Don Quixote, tilting at California windmills.

"They were clobbering the hell out of us with taxes, but it was hard to get people excited," he says, adding in a speech later, "I was just a little farmer from Utah, wandering around the state saying, 'for God's sake, get off your duff and do something.'"

He believes it won't take 15 years to mount a successful tax-cut campaign in Washington where federal spending has reached the $500 billion-mark.

It might not even take 15 months. Already, in the wake of the California vote, Washington is responding. Not only with sudden respect for Jarvis, but with spending cuts for federal agencies.

Because of Jarvis' successful Proposition 13, Congress has pared the budgets of the departments of Health, Education and Welfare, Labor and Justice as well as some money for public works.

And O'Neill fears for his foreign aid bill. House Republican Leader John Rhodes says the Washington reaction to Proposition 13 amounts to "panicville on the Potomac."

On Monday, as Jarvis was making his rounds on Capitol Hill, the House finally put its foot down in front of a spending cut proposal.

After approving the slight cuts in agency appropriations last week, the House rejected efforts to trim the already small — by Washington standards — Department of Housing and Urban Development spending package.

Meanwhile, there is a lot of talk about legislation promoted by Republican Rep. Jack Kemp of New York that would reduce income tax rates by an average of about 33 percent over three years. Even Jarvis found it tough to endorse that broad a cut.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee has put his staff to work trying to develop a workable and winnable legislative proposal that would clamp a lid on federal spending.

Jarvis is the stalking horse for the movement to cut federal spending. He's sounded the charge, but he isn't leading the troops. Not yet.

First of all, he says, he's seen no proposal that seems reasonable and that also might pass the Congress. But he says he's talking to the Baker people.

Second of all, Jarvis is 75 years old, and isn't sure whether he wants to take on the federal government the way he took on California.

But Jarvis' ego and energy belie his age. And he is a believer: A man who thinks and says that the federal government has gone off in the wrong direction.

"The constitution talks about life, liberty and property."

"Not life, liberty and welfare. Not life, liberty and food stamps. Not life, liberty and illegal aliens," he said.

Welfare Aid Hike Tops Tax Battle

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — One issue — cost-of-living increases in aid to welfare families — has become the focal point of the battle over a plan proposed by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to rescue local governments from the effects of Proposition 13.

Republican leaders said Tuesday they will vote for Brown's $5 billion grant and loan package only if the 7.65 percent inflation increases are excluded from the Aid to Families with Dependent Children grants. The increases would cost $50 million and go to 1.47 million recipients.

Democrats, led by Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy of San Francisco, resisted the Republican attack on AFDC.

But the GOP lawmakers hammered repeatedly at the comparison of state employees going without pay increases because of Proposition 13 while welfare recipients get increases averaging $30 monthly for a family of four.

The AFDC grants currently cost the state $622 million annually and provide a family of four a monthly grant of $423.

A committee vote on $4 billion in grants and $1 billion in loans could come as early as today. The aid is intended as a one-time "transition year" rescue for local government, which loses $7 billion in property tax funds from passage two weeks ago of Proposition 13.

On Tuesday, a morning session of the six-member committee writing the aid bill deteriorated into a bitter battle between Democratic and Republican leaders. An afternoon session was canceled.

Assembly Republican floor leader Paul Priolo of Malibu said welfare was the one point preventing agreement between the four Democrats and two Republicans on the committee.

"Eliminate cost of living on AFDC, and he's got himself a bill," Priolo said in an interview after McCarthy complained Republicans appeared to be backing away from earlier agreements. "We want to be conciliatory. We only have one area of disagreement."

Priolo and Sen. William Campbell, the other Republican committee member, said they did not want to cut similar 7.65 percent increases for 600,000 aged, blind and disabled welfare recipients.

Group Gives Information On Starting Tax Revolt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Now available from the group that brought you Proposition 13: information on how to start your own taxpayer's revolt.

"I've heard from every place you can think of," Leona Magidson, secretary-treasurer of the United Organization of Taxpayers, said Tuesday. More precisely, requests had come in from 24 states and two foreign countries, Canada and Denmark, she said.

The UOT is the group that circulated the petitions placing Proposition 13 on the ballot. Howard Jarvis, who co-authored the property tax limitation initiative, is state chairman of the organization.

Proposition 13, passed by Californians in the June 6 primary, cuts property taxes by 57 percent by limiting them to 1 percent of market value and rolling assessments back to 1975-76 levels.

Mrs. Magidson said inquiries about the measure came in primarily by telephone and by mail. But she said a representative of one tax crusaders' group flew in from South Carolina.

"They want to file suit," Mrs. Magidson said. "They want all the assistance they can get and they're so proud of us they don't know what to do."

The office is located at 554 S. Oxford St., Los Angeles 90020.

Large Property Taxpayers Due Most Benefits From Proposition

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Residents of Alpine County are the targets of a door-to-door campaign to donate $150,000 to save the jobs of 22 firemen — victims of Proposition 13's forced cutbacks on government spending.

But there are 69 Superior Court judges in Southern California and five Los Angeles County supervisors who are in line to share $437,000 in automatic pay raises under provisions of a charter amendment approved by voters in 1952.

Just as Proposition 13 is affecting county government throughout the state, the tax assessor's office in San Francisco disclosed some mind-boggling figures on how the city's 10 biggest property taxpayers will reap $27 million in benefits as a result of the Jarvis-Gann Initiative.

For example, the Pacific Bell Telephone Company's share of property tax savings will total $8.3 million and the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. will get $6.7 million.

Such is the confusion — and apparent unequal application of the effects — surrounding the property tax limitation initiative passed by California's voters June 6.

Some public opinion samplings since election day show voters did not expect that reducing taxes would mean reducing services. Nor did they favor cutting the kind of vital services now threatened, and there is already a move in the Legislature to allow Californians to vote on an amended version of Proposition 13 to restrict its tax benefits to home and apartment owners and exclude businesses.

Proposition 13, which still faces challenges in the courts, rolled back property taxes assessments to 1975-76 levels, pegged taxes to 1 percent of assessed value and slowed assessment increases to 2 percent annually.

Some city and county governments, fearful of drastic reductions in operating revenues, have begun belt-tightening procedures — some say prematurely. Scores of school districts already have closed their doors for the summer, termination notices have been sent to employees, including policemen and firefighters, and there is talk of possible local tax hikes.

In a move to allay fears of massive unemployment, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has urged the legislature to delete proposed pay raises for the state's 150,000 employees and said he will recommend that trustees of the state's vast university and college system to forego wage hikes for another 100,000 workers.

Brown, in asking local officials to follow his soft-step lead, chided them, saying some have panicked by prematurely laying off police officers and firefighters.

There have been positive notes resulting from passage of Proposition 13, despite an expected $7 billion annual loss in tax revenues.

L. B. Nelson Corp., a large builder and apartment operator, recently announced $25 to $30 cut in rents for tenants. And members of the Sonoma City Council cut their salaries by 15 percent.

But the Santa Rosa City Council, which earlier cut library services to a two-day schedule and proposed firing hundreds of workers, voted to give its city manager a 5 percent raise and other top-level officials increases ranging up to 6.4 percent.

Nations Approve Pollution Pacts

By JOHN A. CALLCOTT
GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Environmentalists are hailing as an example to the rest of the world the speedy agreement by oil-rich nations of the Persian Gulf on action to save their common sea from death by pollution.

The eight countries concerned took just 18 months to cut through political red tape and legal nit-picking to approve two treaties on cleaning the Gulf and protecting it from further damage.

Officials at the U.N. Environment Program (UNEP), which drafted the treaties for the oil-producing states, say they were amazed at the fast action.

"It is an example of how quickly governments can act if they want," said Stephen Keckes, director of UNEP's regional seas division.

UNEP would like the same action taken by countries of the Caribbean, the western coasts of Africa and Latin America, and the Far East, especially in the Straits of Malacca.

Mediterranean countries, after one century of gradual pollution which has almost reached the point of no return, finally acted last year in adopting an anti-pollution program. But UNEP fears they may fail to take decisive follow-up action.

Some Mediterranean nations are dragging their heels for political and economic reasons, officials complain. Many report on pollution to UNEP but only on a confidential basis.

UNEP first proposed pollution action to the Gulf states in 1976. They were signed April 23 this year after just 18 months of study and negotiation.

UNEP says the Gulf countries reacted quickly when told their sea is badly polluted by oil, although it isn't yet as bad as the Mediterranean, where most of the pollution is caused by industrial waste and sewage from the land.

"The extraordinarily rapid industrial development" of the oil-producers will make the Gulf's pollution worse unless action is taken, UNEP warned.

Averaging about 100 feet in depth and salty and warm, the Gulf has an extremely limited capacity to break up and absorb industrial waste and sewage, experts explained.

"Fortunately the oil-producing nations are at the beginning of industrialization and also have the money to start with clean industries from scratch," Keckes said.

Industrial investment in the Gulf currently runs at $40 million per kilometer (five-eighths of a mile) of coastline on the Arabian side and $20 million per kilometer on the Iranian side.

Further, some 1 billion tons of oil a year, or 60 percent of all oil carried by tankers throughout the world, comes from the Gulf.

Most of the oil is carried in tankers as large or larger than the 233,000-ton Amoco Cadiz, which ran aground and broke up on the French coast in March.

"They've been lucky to have had no accidents up to now," Keckes said, although the Gulf does have the advantage of not having the same rugged coastline and high seas — except during the monsoon — as other seas.

The two treaties signed by the eight Gulf countries firstly spell out recognition by all of the threat caused by pollution and secondly set out action to reduce the pollution and prevent further damage.

Strict regulations were drawn to stop the discharging of waste by ships and aircraft and the disposal into the sea of waste from coastline industries.

A marine environment protection agency will be established in Kuwait and Bahrain will host a "marine emergency mutual aid center" to coordinate joint action against oil spills.

The Bahrain-based center, if the project works out well, will then be turned into a full operations facility equipped with pollution-fighting vessels and aircraft.

Finally, the Gulf countries set up a $5.3 million trust fund.

The biggest complication in achieving agreement, UNEP says, involved what to call the Gulf in the treaties.

Iran wanted to call it the "Persian Gulf," an acceptable United Nations name for the sea. This was unacceptable to the Arab countries, which proposed simply "the Gulf." Iran rejected this, as well as another idea to say "the Islamic Gulf."

But in two hours, everyone agreed to say "the region" and leave it at that.

Retired Rider Cares For 'Retired' Horses

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

PALATINE, Ill. (AP) — Most broken down horses make a quick trip to the dog pound. But thanks to 60-year-old Art Thompson, worn out livery horses, old track ponies and gimpy thoroughbreds get a chance to grow old gracefully, frolicking in a lakeside pasture.

Thompson, a leathery-faced little man who was a jockey in his youth in his native Britain, is stable superintendent at Arlington Park. A couple of miles away he has operated his old horse retreat for 19 years at a rented farm, which is home now to 13 horses.

"I wish I could take in more of them and it makes me sad that I can't, but space is limited and so is my money," says Thompson. "I spend $7,000, about half my yearly salary, to keep and feed the horses so they can live out a carefree life. I've always loved horses, it's as simple as that. I can't bear to think of them being carted off to be ground into pet food after they've broken down and are of no more use."

Seven horses that died of old age while on the farm have been buried secretly by Thompson around the countryside.

His "family" consists of track ponies that are bowed and no longer can accompany skittish race horses on the track, worn out livery saddle horses and thoroughbreds, all geldings, that broke down racing and were to be destroyed.

His favorite is Francis, a livery horse he rescued from a van of old nags being hauled off to be killed. "Francis is 36 years old and I've had him eight years. He was just plum worn out," said Thompson. "He loves bread and gets two loaves a day."

"I buy old bread from a bakery. I get apples from an orchard and carrots from farms when they are in season. Otherwise, I buy apples, sometimes for 15 cents each, and bunches of carrots at food stores. My horses have to have them, along with their regular feed of oats and hay, because they enjoy them."

Two thoroughbreds, Lawpic and Prince Ganzer, broke down right on the track and Thompson got them before the meat wagon could. He paid the owners for their papers.

His other thoroughbreds are Tequila, Chocolate Boy and Our Papa Joe, and Thompson has a story for each.

"Take Our Papa Joe, for instance," he said. "I open the stable door and he's at the gallop by the time he reaches it. He could go back to the races, but it would just be a question of time until he broke down again."

"Our Papa Joe won at least 25 races, many of them stakes and handicaps, and $20,000," Thompson said. "His last race

USDA Reports 'Adequate' Beef

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says consumer supplies of beef will be only "adequate" next month, the first time in almost three years they haven't been "plentiful."

A monthly report called the "Food Marketing Alert" said Wednesday beef supplies are declining but should "continue adequate" in July.

By the report's definition, a product is rated plentiful if it is "more than enough for requirements" of consumers. When it is adequate, an item is considered only "enough to meet needs" of shoppers.

A third category says that if a food product is in light supply it is "less than adequate" and is "not enough for normal needs."

Retail beef prices have soared to record levels the past two months, mainly because of a reduced cattle inventory. But the USDA report has continued until now to rate consumer beef supplies as plentiful.

The revision to an adequate rating is the first since September 1975, according to department records. Beef supplies three years ago also were rated as adequate in June, July and August.

In a related report, the department said that beef production in May actually rose 4 percent from the same month of last year and that total red meat output was up 5 percent from a year ago, due mainly to more pork.

However, in the first five months of this year meat output by slaughtering plants was down 1 percent from January-May of last year, including a decline of 2 percent for beef production.

Neither report included comments on prices, but earlier USDA forecasts point to sharp increases in both farm and retail prices of meat animals this year, including a 16 to 23 percent hike in supermarket beef prices over 1977.

The food marketing report is circulated among big-volume food buyers such as schools, hospitals and other institutions. It said that beef output next month will be 4 to 6 percent below a year ago.

Production of higher grades of beef which make up the choice quality cuts on store counters are expected to be "a little larger" than in July of last year "but not enough to offset a smaller output" of the lower grades used to make hamburger.

The first Librarian of Congress was engaged in 1800 at $2 a day to organize the 740 volumes ordered for its fledgling Library.

sausage, frozen dinners and similar products, the report said.

Pork production by the nation's meatpackers was forecast to be "light" in July or not enough for normal needs, compared with a rating of adequate in June. Part of the decline in pork is seasonal and production is expected to pick up in the fall.

Despite Rains, One Region Still In Drought

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Recent rains have brought improvements over the past week to most Texas crops, ranges, pastures and livestock, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The only region still showing sharp drought distress is a strip from East and Northeast Texas, running through the center of the state and out to the Pecos country. Pastures and ranges are deteriorating fast in the area, stock tanks are running low, spring-planted crops are distressed and hay cuttings and small grain yields are down. Livestock, however, continues to hold up fairly well and marketing is steady, the service said in its weekly report.

Elsewhere, peaches are plentiful and prices are favorable. Pecan crop prospects also are solid, although some areas report serious insect problems. Second cuttings of hay are starting, with yields about average.

In the Panhandle, Plains and north central areas, ranges and pastures are improving fast because of recent rains. Wheat is reaching maturity, and cotton, sugarcorns, sorghum, corn and vegetables are making progress. Wheat harvesting is already underway in the lower plains, but yields of all small grains are down because of earlier dry weather.

Down in the Rio Grande Valley, a few northern counties are still short of moisture. Pastures are much improved due to recent rains, but more will be needed soon. Cattle are fair and marketing steady. Harvesting of melons, pepper and grain sor

NBC Reveals New Noon Show

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Notes on NBC affiliates meeting, at which Fred Silverman made his debut as the network's president and chief executive officer: Silverman's speech to the affiliates was called "statesmanlike" by someone whose salary is paid by NBC — which means it was a "no news, no bombshells" pep talk — but it also hit at what is behind all the attention paid television. "This is a diversified and sectional country," he said, "but the nearest thing to a national community is the television audience. Through television, that audience shares a common experience, in entertainment and sports, as well as information programs. We provide a very previous resource to the public and to the nation... television can enhance the role of the individual in our free society — not smother it." NBC went on to prove its sense of responsibility by cancelling "The Gong Show," as well as reruns of "Sanford and Son," as of July 21, to make way for "People to People."

The affiliates were assured that "People to People," the new noon hour show, would be set up in two segments so stations could use only half if they preferred to stick with their own programming for the remaining 30 minutes. Edgar Griffiths, president and chief executive officer of RCA, which is the parent company to NBC, spoke to the affiliates Tuesday and affirmed his backing of Silverman with a strong vote of confidence that the new NBC president would have the talent, leadership ability and know-how to haul NBC out of the ratings cellar.

"I can assure you he has from me all the time he needs to do this job," Griffiths told the affiliate representatives, who applauded vigorously. Griffiths not only promised Silverman time and personal support, he also promised him money.

In baseball, when the owner gives the manager three votes of confidence, he's out.

During a session between the affiliates and network executives, the question of cutting Johnny Carson came up. Carson has complained that stations delay his start or cut into his monologue in order to squeeze in extra commercials and he asked viewers to write in and complain if that was happening in their areas. About 50 letters from viewers came into the network last week and while some just didn't understand, others made it obvious stations were cutting into Carson without the network's knowledge or consent. They are looking into it.

Man Uses Classified Ad To Meet New Friends

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Maurice says he's found a bunch of new friends this week — 39 women and one man. The 49-year-old Dubuque man placed a want ad in an Iowa newspaper last weekend seeking a female companion. "I do things a little differently — for instance I don't have a car. So, this seemed to fit right in," said Maurice, who refused to give his last name. He said the ad was a cheap way to meet new people. "I have grown children and am divorced and was looking for a woman to have some fun with," he said. "I don't want to get married again. But I want to keep it on just a first-name basis because it's none of my children's or friends' business what I do." In the first few days after he placed the ad in the personal column, he claims to have received 40 calls — all serious. The ad said he was a single male, "retired, educated, wealthy and considered handsome. Unlimited opportunities." Maurice said he took notes on all the callers, including a description, what they like to do for fun and whether they have any children — and plans to make a tour in his motor home around Iowa to meet them. Almost one-third of those who called him were redheads, he said, and many were nurses. "I offered to pay for the call and most of them didn't accept that. They paid their own way." Many were lonely, he said, interested in talking more than actually meeting. "One woman in Grinnell who called me had four children. She sounded so lonely. I hope maybe I cheered her up. She might be gorgeous, but with four kids, I have no interest," Maurice said. The lone man who called wanted to do a little matchmaking — for a price.

Songwriters Warned About Publishing Ads

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — "Write the words for a song! We revise poems, write music and publish for you. Submit poems on any subjects. Big profits."

If this ad seems enticing, beware of the "song shark," because chances are you are about to be taken.

"There is a problem in Nashville," says Charles Bradley, a consumer affairs coordinator for the state of Tennessee. "We get calls — both inquiries and complaints — from all across the U.S."

"Music complaints are becoming one of our top priorities."

The consumer protection office is relatively new. The law was passed for consumer protection in August 1977, and the attorney general's office has just filed its first suit. Officials said they are contemplating more.

The Better Business Bureau believes that most Nashville firms who provide publisher services for songwriters are ethical. But the BBB reports an increase in the number of complaints concerning misrepresentation.

"We had 79 complaints filed with us last year," a bureau spokeswoman says. "We had 2,455 inquiries on music companies in the Nashville area."

According to Postal authorities, the "song shark" takes millions of dollars annually out of the pockets of new and inexperienced songwriters.

The Nashville Songwriters Association warns that the racket has grown to phenomenal proportions in the U.S. and Canada.

Companies can usually be divided into two distinct types: Those which deal with established professional artists and those which advertise and promote services and various "plans" designed specifically to appeal to amateur artists.

Companies in the first class do not accept a song for publication or sign an artist to record unless they believe the song, as well as the songwriter, has a good chance to make money.

It's companies in the second class that cause the most grief for the amateur artist, consumer affairs spokesmen say.

The state Consumer Affairs Division warns that companies designed for the amateur artist reach their clients through advertising. They do not publish music. Instead, they print several copies of the completed song for the use of the artist.

The agency offers some tips to the new artist.

—Be wary of any advertisement that promises to make you a star overnight. It just doesn't work this way.

—Successful producers and record companies don't go from town to town looking for new talent.

—Watch out for the guy who for $1,500 allows you to sing over a music track, with the promise to try to get you on a record label.

—Never pay a publisher to publish your song.

—Check up on any company you are thinking about signing a contract with.

To make a record, you need good songs, a studio, musicians and background voices. The single most important factor in coordinating these details is to find a talented, reputable producer.

A three-hour session would cost about $2,000 and would include recording time, remix time, six musicians, two background singers and a roll of tape. That price doesn't include the cost of the producer. Add another $500 and you've got 1,000 mastered, plated and pressed 45 rpm records.

It took Johnny Cash years to make it big. Roy Clark didn't sign a large contract when he broke into the business. Even Dolly Parton wasn't an overnight sensation.

Carter Aims Sugar Aid Promise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told eight members of Congress today he will participate personally in seeking a compromise aid plan for U.S. sugar producers. Carter did not commit himself on any specifics, participants of a meeting with him said, but promised to search for a "reasonable balance" between producer demands and the desire of consumers for low sugar prices.

Three Receive State Pardons

AUSTIN — Gov. Dolph Briscoe has approved the release on parole of three persons convicted of crimes in area counties. Acting on the recommendation of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, he approved the release:

Development Bank To Help Industries Get Loans

ATLANTA (AP) — The new National Development Bank will do for a city needing an industry what the Federal Housing Administration and the GI Bill have done for millions of families in need of a home.

It gets a little more complicated than that, but for Chicago or Detroit, just as for the Smiths or the Browns, the result is the same — nothing for free but help from Uncle Sam in swinging a loan.

New details about the proposed bank were described here Tuesday by Vice President Walter F. Mondale at the same time that President Carter was sending the bank legislation to Congress, where it faces stiff opposition.

The general principles underlying the bank proposal were disclosed in April when the president announced his urban program.

The idea behind the bank is to encourage free enterprise to go where it might not venture otherwise by sweetening the pot and sharing some of the risks.

For example, if a factory in Baltimore, about to close because its machinery is old and it costs too much to retool, could get good terms on a loan, it might stay open after all.

A neighborhood in St. Louis with abandoned land that is suitable for a new industry could compete with suburban industrial parks by offering better financing.

A community with a lot of people too unskilled to find work and too poor to move on might lure jobs in the same way.

thing that would not displace other jobs in other distressed areas.

But, he added, "any venture that would produce long-term employment in places where it is needed most would have a chance."

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

During the past three months, this column has been receiving a lot of mail. Frankly, much of it has gone unanswered. But it has been so darn interesting to hear from people who have ideas, who love CBing and want to speak their minds, that this column might be the best place to answer some them.

Do you remember our column about Lep Wenzler, in Decatur, Ala., who had created a "Yellow Code" utilizing all channels for various businesses and professions? Very similar to the yellow page section of your telephone book. Well, he called the other day.

"I'm getting requests for the yellow code from all over the country," he explained excitedly. "I'm going to have to get more printed. I've run out of my original batch. This is great!"

When we discovered the Forth Worth "Bear on the Air," we did two columns about the effect the police force was having there by using 24-hour daily monitors. The monitors are all volunteers.

Mrs. Kattie White, who assists Tom Atterbury, there, wrote: "I get the column from a newspaper outside Fort Worth, but the column on our monitoring program was really great. I got started in it after I had recovered from a serious illness that forced me to retire. My husband bought me a base unit, and that hooked me on CB."

"When the CB monitor program began, it was the answer to my life — it got me busy and it had me CBing. I think this program could work in most any medium to small-size city. There are thousands of people who would like to participate. The first member of our volunteer group to receive the 1,000-hour pen (for hours monitoring) was a freight company dispatcher who had retired. His wife has now become interested and will soon earn her pen."

As a result of the exposure given in his column to the Fort Worth monitor program several cities across the country have written asking us to advise them on how they can get a similar project going in their town. One of these came from Louis Glomb, chairman of the El Paso Community Development Corporation.

"As a member of the El Paso Citizens Committee for the Prevention of Crime, as well as the Patrol Association, we would like to start a comparable program here," he writes. "I've contacted Officer Tom Atterbury there for details. Any suggestions you can give on how CB operators can help their local police force would be appreciated."

Col. Ronald Martin (retired) and several other CBers from Napa, Calif., have written. You may recall we had a column devoted to some suggestions made by Col. Martin which we thought were very good and worth every CBers attention. In that column we mentioned that, because of clutter, the Chicago police force was instructed not to have CB units in their police cars, even though many of the officers had purchased the gear with their own money. At least one result of this action was the death of a young truck driver who was found dead, falling from his cab, clutching his CB micro-phone in his hand. Police were within two blocks of the incident, but they couldn't hear his call for help.

Jim Bean ("Napa Drifter") of Napa wrote that "while it may be true that the channels are cluttered, the saving of a life is worth all the cluttered noise in the world."

"Tell your readers about the CBers who lost their lives in Rapid City, N.D., while they worked to save others during that terrible flood there. Tell them about the CB clubs that came to the aid of the Yuba City bus crash victims."

Sharing these thoughts with you is, of course, a great pleasure. All the mail isn't flattering, nor is it always in agreement with ideas we've expressed. But if we've got some extra thinking going on as a result of these efforts, that's great.

Laser Beginning To Play Big Role in Advertising, Theater

NEW YORK (UPI) — The laser, widely used in engineering and in scientific research, is starting to play an important role in entertainment and advertising.

A New York firm, Laser Physics, Ltd., is leading its development in this area.

The firm supplied special laser beam on-stage lighting effects for the appearances of Mephisto in a production of Berlioz's Damnation of Faust by the Boston Opera under the baton of Sarah Caldwell.

The company also has used laser beams for special lighting effects in various events at New York's Madison Square Garden and for a Star Wars concert at the Minskoff theater.

(A number of states have laws restricting the use of laser beams where exposure of the public is involved, and others require a permit or license for all laser beam operators.)

"The laser beam can do a lot of things from a standard projection booth that traditional complicated stage lighting can't accomplish," explained Randy Efron, head of the company, and Dr. John Gergli, a laser physicist.

Rock and similar music groups were quick to employ the company's laser lighting effects to heighten the mood for music at their concerts.

In turning to laser lighting effects for advertising and marketing, Efron and Gergli employ continuous systems driven by a small computer to produce at less cost and at night lighting displays on the clouds that are more vivid and have greater impact than the daytime effects of planes skywriting with smoke trails.

The laser can put an image in the heavens in two colors (three colors if a separate laser beam is used for red) at a height of only 3,000 feet. Messages, company logos and line-drawn cartoons can be projected and the image will be steady, not wobbly like daytime skywriting, for which the plane must fly at a very great height.

LAFF - A - DAY

"Don't forget to check for water in the basement...."

Soon after World War II, a number of marketing men bought surplus anti-aircraft searchlights from the Air Force and used them as night crowd-gatherers at fairs and similar events. The novelty was quite effective for a while, but the air raid searchlight could not project a worthwhile advertising image in the sky.

"The laser beam can," said Efron. "It also is possible to use animation in the images."

Another down-the-road use for the laser beam is for animated billboards. An animated billboard, using ordinary motor and clock controlled lighting, has been used in the past, but proved expensive and difficult to keep operating. With fewer or no moving parts, the laser beam billboard may produce reliable animation at reasonable cost.

Curiously, Laser Physics' first sale of the advertising laser beam was not to a commercial customer but to a political party.

"The system is to be used in soliciting votes for a presidential candidate in a third world country, which we are not yet permitted to identify," Efron said.

The system is lightweight and portable, and Efron and Gergli say they now are getting many commercial inquiries about it.

'Sam' Victims Aiding Group

NEW YORK (UPI) — Judy Placido and Robert Violante — two of the seven young people wounded by "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz — are working for the Crime Victims' Rights Organization, a group that aids crime victims.

Miss Placido, 18, hit in the temple, neck and shoulder by bullets from Berkowitz' 44 caliber pistol, said Tuesday, "I've stepped out of the public light since the accident, but I felt I could benefit from this."

Miss Placido, a Pace University student, said she and Violante are now friends and spend their days calling businesses seeking donations for the 2-year-old non-profit organization.

"We help crime victims in any way possible — legal aid, counseling and court action if necessary," she said.

Miss Placido said she still needs medical treatment once a week for her wounded shoulder.

Berkowitz, of Yonkers, N.Y., was sentenced June 12 to 25 years-to-life for each of the six "Son of Sam" slayings of young people during a year-long reign of terror through New York's lovers' lanes.
