oung master machinist Kim Miller who has earned a place on the United States team competing in International Skill Olympics in Utrecht, Holland, this summer figures he can win - if only he can raise the money to get him there.

Miller, a 1976 graduate of Coronado High School, already has spent $350 on tools with metric measurements in preparation for the European system. By the end of this month, Miller and his high school instructor Richard Wadsworth will have to pay $3,250 to make the trip.

Wadsworth, who teaches machine shop skills at Lubbock High, where Mill-er learned his basics, has been drawing financial support through contacts. Do-nations from local machine shops, metal supply companies, some out-of-town businesses and a $500 contribution from Texas Instruments where Miller has been employed, boosted the collection total to $2,150.

Lubbock arises from disaster of May, 1970

By Ira Perry Update Staff Writer

locks stopped at 9:46 p.m. It was May 11, 1970. Outside Lubbock homes, a summer storm brewed overhead. Blackened skies lit by fiery lightning bolts hung ominously above the city's rooftops. The storm was not a major concern, though. It hadn't even made page one news that day But by 9:47 p.m., it was the news. The Lubbock Tornado had hit.

Three minutes later, whirling winds from a black, death-dealing tornado still raged through city streets, but the damage was already complete-$200 million destruction, 20 deaths (six more persons would die over the next few days) and countless injuries. The city lay in ruins.

ON MAY 12, 1970, as city officials surveyed the rubble, Lubbock was devastated. But today the city stands, in many places a monument to those who died in the state's worst disaster since a similar funnel struck Waco in 1953 and killed 114 persons.

Ironically, it was also May 11 when twisters struck that city, exactly 17 years before funnels would destroy the heart of Lubbock.

Stormy scenes enacted that year left Lubbock in disaster, but ended in dreams that earlier were considered only figments of imagination becoming

"This will go down in history as a time when Lubbock was at its best," an Avalanche-Journal editorial read the day after the storm struck. "The shock of this disaster will remain for a long time, but so will memories of the manner in which so many hands pitched in to make it right again in their city."

ONLY DAYS AFTER the storm left Lubbock in piles of rubble, city leaders had already mapped out plans for a "better Lubbock, a new city.

"Hopefully through the city council and the leadership of the community, out of this we'll somehow build a better city than we had," then chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission Arnold Maeker, told the council members in an emergency planning session late May 14, 1970.

WHERE ONCE THE RUBBLE of 300 homes and more than 100 businesses cluttered streets and lots, a $14 million civic center stands as a continuing memorial to those who died in the disaster.

A $1.4 million public library opens daily, a reminder of the faith and persistence of the Lubbock people.

Office buildings, a new hospital and offices of the Texas Department of Public Safety occupy the site where National Guardsmen once searched for bodies of more storm victims

Economic aid made available through disaster relief funds has revamped substandard housing made that way by the 200 mph winds and raging flood waters that swamped the city.

But more importantly, the city's attitude still has not changed.
As 880 bowed heads filled the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center earlier this year to dedicate the facility to those who died, James Granberry, mayor of Lubbock when the tornado struck, reiterated the same commitment made seven years ago when cityfathers sat down to rebuild their city.

Twenty-six immeasurably valuable people were killed, and the civic center should be a continuing memorial to those who died. We've got to say to them we've done our best to experience this tragedy with hope.'

ime was when "on top of old Smokey" had a different connotation. But in the parlance of the 70s there's only one thing that phrase could mean: the unwitting driver is just about to bump up against "the man."

Well, these days "the man" is attuned to contemporary airwave lingo himself—at least, Lubbock police officers are. In fact, according to Sgt. F. D. Barnhill, 75 per cent of the uniformed men in the patrol division locally have citizen band radios mounted in their patrol cars.

During off hours, officers have begun installing sets in their cars at their own

Thus far, police have restricted their CB chatter to channel 11, Barnhill said, but that may change.

"There's just too much garbage (on channel 11)," Barnhill said. He indicated that CB use is sanctioned by the department, although no policy-written or otherwise-has been Thus far, he said, patrolmen have not abused their CB/police radio capabili-ties. In fact, Barnhill said, officers use their units primarily for non-emergency conversations—talk which otherwise might clog emergency police channels.

A typical transmission between offi-cers involves requests for traffic infor-mation, a notice to meet another patrol-man somewhere or the familiar coffee

"Lubbock is getting pretty big,"
Barnhill observed, and with that growth there is a corresponding need for CBs in

editorial-Jail reform: hard but fair

IT'S A SHAME that inmates of the Lubbock County Jail had to go into federal court to secure their rights against what Judge Halbert O. Woodward found to be "cruel and inhuman conditions."

No man or woman should be mistreated, but before anybody gets all maudlin about the situation it would be well to remember one thing:

Nobody goes to jail unless he has been accused, at least, of violating somebody's rights.

It would be refreshing if all prisoners everywhere would show as much concern for other peoples' rights as for their own—and if the courts, civil rights groups, lawyers and politicians would like-

CONCERN OVER a spiraling crime rate, however, is no excuse for operating a jail facility in a manner that permits anyone to be abused or his health to be threatened.

Unrebutted testimony in the case here alleged that to be the fact, though, and Judge Woodward was rightfully scathing in his rebuke of Sheriff C.H. (Choc) Blanchard and the Commissioners Court.

If, as the prisoners claimed, homosexual activity and drug use are "prevalent" in the jail, it shows a lack of proper supervision.

If, as was further alleged, some of this homosexual activity and other physical abuse was forced upon some prisoners by others, it shows a shocking and totally unacceptable situation.

If, as even further alleged and as found by Judge Woodward in his 28-page decision, there was "physical abuse by jail personnel," a clean-up is long overdue.

DESPITE WHAT he called "totally inadequate guard supervision" and deteriorated facilities, Judge Woodward nonetheless ruled that the defendant county officials have not shown "bad faith" in operation of the jail.

He recognized that they have taken steps-although they "have not been adequate"-to improve conditions.

He ruled, in effect, that the County must do what it had planned to do anyway: Comply with requirements of the state Jail Standards Commission in building new facilities and in staffing it.

To have built a new jail or to have totally renovated the old jail before those standards were set down just a few weeks ago would have been fiscally impractical, the court recognized.

BUT THIS DID not excuse the County from its failure to protect the prisoners at all times and to provide them with sanitary conditions, fresh bedclothes and three meals a day, Judge Woodward

He ordered immediate steps to guarantee that nobody's constitutional rights are violated again.

Among his directives are that no mail be censored, that visitation rules be relaxed, that prisoners be permitted to have TV sets and more reading material, that they have easier access to telephones and that they be provided with at least three hours of outdoor exercise each week.

THE JUDGE ALSO ordered an end to segregation by race, no mass punishment—such as by withholding a proper hearing, better medical care,

"This court does not take the position that it should at this time order the County defendants to expend large sums of money," Woodward ruled. "However, let there be no mistake, appropriate moneys must be expended in order to bring the operation of the Lubbock County Jail and the maintenance thereof within Constitutional conditions and practices."

That is an order with which there can be no argument, either legally or morally.

TO TAKE THOSE steps mandated by the judge will be expensive, indeed. The Commissioners Court already had faced up to that fact by granting Sheriff Blanchard's request for more jailers so that there will be one on each floor of the jail at all

The Commissioners Court had, in fact, substantially increased the sheriff's budget during each of the last several years but, as Judge Woodward noted, the problem had grown faster than the solu-

For his part, the sheriff had complained repeatedly of understaffing, saying he could not meet his responsibilities without more money, but the court still found no excuse for "serious mismanagement" permitting the inmates to in effect "control the internal functions of the jail in many instances."

NOW THAT STERN orders have been issued that the jail be as safe and sanitary place to be, it behooves Lubbock County to make sure that everybody who deserves to be there is.

The rights of all citizens daily are abused by rapists, robbers, thieves, muggers and assorted other riffraff who are void of any humane concern for anybody but themselves.

It is time now to take a look at loopholes in the law, at enforcement procedures, at courtroom delays, at criminal trial procedures which permit defense attorneys to slide guilty clients through loopholes to freedom-and to put the lawbreakers behind bars where they belong.

Society is paying a heavy price to make jail life tolerable. It deserves to get its money's worth.

Reader questions plan on substandard housing

Editor, Update: How we enjoy Update! Thank you for last week's issue concerning the city council's discussion of a rental escrow

The article states, "...only after the tenant's complaint is verified" would the building inspector red-tag it. Why would tenants decide a dwelling was substandard? Does a marriage counselor ask a couple's youngest children how to save a marriage?

This discriminatory plan requires ten-ant's payments be put in escrow. If compliance is not given immediate attention, his money would be refunded. Who believes in Free Rent, at the expense of those whose livelihood depends on their receipts? While monies are held, the landlord would have no funds to make repairs. Imagine a school system withhold-ing a teacher's June salary check, until attendance of classes gained re-certifica-tion in August! How could be pay sum-

Many older people would be forced onto welfare lists. Is this the justice mentioned in our Constitution? Our judicial system, in recent years, has given more consideration to the wrong do-ers, than to the law-abiding citizens. Isn't it time we changed this trend?

We often hear about codes, but at the building department, nothing is offered for study. Could copies of present codes be made available to each property and rental owner? Many would be willing to comply, if they "knew the facts", just as a student must study his text, if he is to learn the material and pass the tests.

Hasn't America realized the value of people, after retirement, keeping busily occupied? Yes! As contributing members of society, their longevity is the re-

Dunbar High School's yearbook, pre-sented in an assembly last week, is dedicated to the entire school under the theme of "Family Reunion."

The purpose of the book is to illustrate that at Dunbar, each student is part of a family and can be special.

The yearbook carries a dedication that "we're small but we compete and often bring back trophies for the Dunbar family as other generations have done before

More than 850 pictures were produced by the school's yearbook staff. This year's edition with 200 pages is the largany previous yearbook. The maroon cover with white design reflects school colors.

Question: Why do moths eat clothes?

CASE-MAKING

Answer: Clothing materials, such as wool, hair, feathers, furs and leather, as well as upholstered furniture, make up the diet of three species of moth larvae. These moths are closely associated with man and are serious economic

They are worldwide in distribution. Material damaged by clothes moth larvae usually have holes eaten through them and may be partly covered by tiny silk threads which the larvae spin.

The adult moths are small, usually measuring 1/4 to 3/4 of an inch across the wing, and do not feed on clothing. However, the females lay from 100 to 150 tiny whitish eggs on material on which the larvae feed after they hatch. The eggs hatch in about five days but the length of the larval stage may last about six weeks to nearly four years.

The most destructive kind of clothes moth is the case-making moth. The adult is brownish and has three tiny dark dots in a triangle near the center of its forewing. This moth's larva constructs a small, portable case out of its food. In this case, the larva lives and goes through the pupal stage. Two other species are the webbing clothes moth and the carpet moth.

The ego and madness of the Pied Pipers

The rash of brutal abduction-murders plaguing the Detroit suburbs in the last 18 months has left seven children dead, and seemingly slim hope of catching the unbalanced person (or persons) responsible. Because of the modus operandi suffocation in three instances - the police are convinced most of this heinous work stems from one man.

Yet the prospect of the killer being a woman or other men is quite possible. Jack the Ripper's London murders have been attributed to many persons, a small legion of lethal maniacs who took to the streets once the Whitechapel killing spree began. In most similar historical cases the killer corresponds to the Michigan murders; one in particular is an astounding twin.

The first sensational abduction in American history occured on July 1, 1874 when two men stopped their buggy in front of a Germantown, Pennsylvania mansion and induced 4-year-old Charles Brewster "Charley" Ross to accompany them to nearby Philadelphia.

They promised little Charley firecrackers and a balloon for the up-coming Fourth of July celebration. He was never seen again, even though his kidnappers attempted an awkward ransom collection.

And, as is the pattern of such abductions, the identities of the kidnappers were revealed only by the culprits themselves. Six months later, Joseph Douglass and William Mosher, shot while burglarizing a Brooklyn home, admitted the abduction with their dying breaths. "We done it," gasped Mosher, "We did it for money," heaved Douglass.

The mastermind of this abduction, an ex-policeman in Manhattan, one William Westervelt, was convicted of the kidnapping on circumstantial evidence, and was sent to prison for seven years. Strangely enough, Westervelt, the underworld grapevine had it, was not at all eager to collect a ransom for little Charley. He had simply drowned the boy in a river for personal satisfaction or sexual Stranger still were the exploits of Albert Fish, termed by the press of his day as "the moon maniac." (Fish ate raw meat, his bizarre confession later detailed, by the light of the full moon before embarking upon his horrendous

Examined and released many times by psychiatrists in New York's Bellevue Hospital as disturbed but sane, Fish, from about 1910 to 1934, abducted, killed, ravished, and cannabalized many children, 400 by his own raving account. Not once did he demand a ransom. His own ego led to his capture.

Albert Fish took to writing the parents of some of his victims, chiefly the mother of Grace Budd, a 12-year-old he had abducted and dissected in 1928. Police traced the letter and were soon leading the killer to prison.

Fish appeared harmless to the world; he looked like everybody's kindly grandfather. But beneath his placid physical

Fish's colossal ego and seethingly insanity found duplication in the terror of Peter Kurten in Dusseldorf, Germany, whose gruesome crimes and mental mawere enacted by Peter Lorre in Fritz Lang's classic 1931 motion picture

Kurten, whose actions appear alarmingly identical to the Michigan murderer of present day, preyed especially upon children, first killing and ravishing an 8year-old girl on the night of May 25

For 17 years following that brutal assault, Kurten walked calmly through Dusseldorf's streets, murdering at will. He was at heart a thief; he stole children to possess them, to rob their parents of their lives. He took immense pride in his ability to terrorize an entire city. In his tortured mind, the killings made him important.

Kurten was an ordinary looking man who held the simple job of a molder. He lived quietly with his wife and kept regular hours, until he slipped into the night to commit the acts of a vampire. Often, he would visit the graves of his victims and, without remorse, converse with the dead

In May, 1930, Kurten's vanity in murder and escape backfired. He bungled a rape-murder, and the would-be victim, accompanied by scores of police, was soon hunting him in the streets. His identity discovered, the killer insisted he be credited with the nine deaths he had brought about to assure his place among the arch fiends of criminal history. Kurten confessed all to his wife who

Like the psychological profile of the Michigan murderer as being "a fanatic of cleanliness," Kurten's interregators found him extremely fastidious. His clothes were always cleaned and pressed like those worn by the Michigan victims. He washed his hands repeatedly up to the time of his beheading.

And like Albert Fish, Kurten eagerly looked forward to his own death. He said, "When I think about my deeds, and in particular about the children, then I loathe myself so much that I am impatient for my own execution.'

Government purchasing agents have begun to learn the lesson that the cheapest buy may turn out to be the costliest buy over the long run. It is a lesson I am

Rep. Froy Salinas

The House of Representatives debated House Bill 510 (the appropriations bill) most of last week. The House Thursday put finishing touches on a state budget bill adopting a two per cent across-theboard reduction in general revenue spending, that cut $118 million dollars from the bill.

In all, the House cut $362.1 million dollars from the original $15.7 billion bill, or slightly over two per cent. If the House bill were adopted intact, a $1.1 billion budget surplus would be left to finance teacher pay raises, teacher retirement benefits, public schools and proposed new programs.

But the Senate this week will substutute its own version of a budget, which probably will leave only $856 million for other programs. The final appropriations bill will likely be written by a 10-member House-Senate compromise commit-

It cuts the general revenue budget of every state agency by two per cent, forcing internal economics throughout the

Some federal aid may be lost as a result of the cuts, but there was no immediate estimate of how much the loss might be.

Agencies got a reprieve of sorts, however. The House also voted to rescind a previous amendment freezing state employment at the August 31st levels, and instead allowed individual agency payrolls to grow up to 10 per cent during the next two years beyond September 1st levels.

Theoretically, that would "save" about $20 million over the next two years in the form of payroll funds that can't be used for that purpose but might be shifted to programs. As the House gave to agencies, it also took away from state employes. Lawmakers rescinded the part of the payroll freeze that would have re-allocated the $172.1 million "savings" to pay raises for existing state employes.

a year pay raise.

I personally voted against the bill for several reasons of principle, namely the bill was re-written on the floor of the House by a handful of legislators who could have done a better job in the appropriations committee. The process used takes away from the committee system, which I believe in. Also, the two per cent across-the-board reduction is an arbitrary figure which cuts spending, but it hurts those agencies that ask for only what they need and no more.

An example of this is our own Texas Tech University which I believe asked for an amount that is reasonable and within the realism of fiscal responsibility and they have to take this 2 per cent cut in their requests funded by general reve-

Other universities that receive some of their monies from the Permanent University Fund such as the University of Texas system and Texas A&M are not affected as much as Texas Tech because Tech doesn't share in this fund.

I am hopeful that the final bill, which will be a compromise bill written by both Senate and House members, will be a fair bill and one that I can support. I'm also hopeful they will cut the areas that need cutting and have some money left for the worthy projects.

Rep. Joe Robbins

Maneuvering on the House appropria-tions bill last week took on the appearance of a shell game, with a new twist. Finding out who was moving the shells was almost as difficult as finding out which shell the pea was under.

Take, for example, the $8 million apropriation for program initiation at the Health Sciences Center Hospital in Lubbock. An omnibus amendment offered with the Speaker's blessing would have cut the entire $8 million, as well as the nearly $2 million earmarked for the Texas Tech medical school program in Amarillo

After a quick shuffle, the $8 million for Lubbock was restored but the $2 million for Amarillo was still out.

Another legislative sleight of hand cut $2 million from Lubbock and sent it to

An amendment I sponsored to restore the $2 million to Lubbock was tabled by 12 votes, with the Speaker's "team" including 21 of his committee chairmen - voting to table.

But the really remarkable maneuvering was done by Texas Tech officials, who went to great lengths to impress upon House members that the $2 million wasn't really all that important to them or the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The hospital will operate at an $8 million-plus deficit over the next two year, but a Tech lobbyist, a Tech regent and a Tech medical school official freely "gave away" $2 million which wasn't theirs to give. Tech can continue to operate its medical school program in El Paso and Amarillo, but the Lubbock County Hospital District needs $8 million to get the Health Sciences Center Hospital off the

One can't blame the Tech establishment for looking after its interests, but when the hospital district abdicated to Tech the responsibility of looking after the teaching hospital, its interest began to be lost in the shuffle.

Speaking of appropriations, the House cut about $360 million out of the $15.7 billion appropriations bill, leaving us about $1.1 billion for other spending programs. Foremost among these are a salary increase for public school teachers and revision of the teacher retirement system. However, much of the money is already committed to other priorities, primarily highways and sales and inheritence tax relief.

Now that the governor has realized that he is going to have to push for his anti-crime legislation, the bills are beginning to make rapid progress.

Most of these bills come through the committees of which I am a member: comstitutional amendments and criminal jurisprudence.

The constitutional amendments committee last week reported favorably a bill which would deny bail to persons accused of a felony if they are already on bail for a felony or are accused of using a deadly weapon in the commission of a felony.

The criminal jurisprudence committee sent to the full House bills to deny bail to some convicted felons appealing their cases, to provide for mandatory supervision of certain parolees and making certain felons ineligible for early release and to allow law enforcement officers to get warrants to search for "mere" evidence of a crime.

The Legislature is on the verge of taking the first real step toward water importation, something which is vital to West Texas and which was part of my campaign platform.

A bill which may come to the House floor shortly would authorize the creation of water import authorities. By local election, the authorities would be allowed to levy and collect taxes and issue revenue bonds. The bill would authorize the state to spend funds or donate its services to the water import authorities.

Air Force asks panel to resume appraisals

The Air Force has asked the Fort Worth office of the U.S. Army's Corps of Engineers to resume appraising proper ties located within the proposed expanded clear zone for Reese Air Force Base.

Within the next 30 days, representatives of the government will begin contacting land owners and their agents.

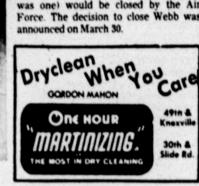

Each individual appraiser will have a letter identifying himself as a representative of the government.

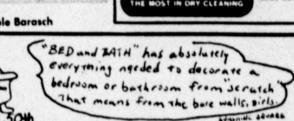

A letter over the signature of Michael Cottrell, chief of the real estate division for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Office in Fort Worth, was mailed out to all known land owners in the expanded clear zone on May 3. The letter explained that the property appraisal program was being resumed, and requested cooperation with it and the proposed acquisition.

The acquisition of land in the expanded clear zone for Reese AFB was suspended on Aug. 17, 1976, while still in the property appraisal stage. The suspension was called for during the evaluation process to determine whether Webb AFB in Big Spring, or an alternative base (of which Reese AFB was one) would be closed by the Air Force. The decision to close Webb was

what's cooking?

Men do not always necessarily concentrate their efforts on business matters and such. Many males find enjoyment and relaxation through cooking.

Each professional — be it the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker or even mayor pro tem - takes the time to express his own creativity in the kitchen, on the patio or over the campfire.

SUKIYAKI

This recipe takes an hour or more to prepare for cooking and 10-12 minutes to cook. Serves six.

Plenty of rice (recipe follows) 2 med. vellow onions, sliced 2 bunches green onions (scallions), sliced

1/2 can waterchestnuts, sliced 1/2 can bamboo shoots, sliced 11/2 lbs. spinach, coarsely chopped 1 large Chinese cabbage, chopped

11/2 lbs. fresh mushrooms, sliced 1/4 lb. beef suet 11/2 lbs. beef fillets, sliced very thin (You must be very demanding to the butcher or these won't be thin enough) 1 tbsp. sugar soy sauce 1/2 cup beef stock (canned consomme can be used) Boil the rice. (There's only one way to do it ... as follows.) Bring a kettle of water to a full rolling boil. Salt it generously. Pour white rice in a stream into the water. Give it a quick stir. Put on a cover, leaving about an inch for the steam to escape. Boil the rice just 17 minutes. Turn it into a collander and run cold water through it, fluffing the rice with your hands. Now or later, reheat the rice in a very slow oven in a covered buttered vegetable dish for 25-35 minutes, or until very hot. The result is the kind of rice which each kernel is completely separate. One cup of raw rice will yield four cups of the cooked variety.

For the Sukiyaki preparation chop, cut, dice or slice remaining ingredients. Arrange them in separate piles on one or more large platters. Heat a large iron skillet. Saute the diced suet to get fat.

Saute the yellow onions briefly. Add the cabbage, sugar, soy sauce and some of the stock. Stir gently. Add the green onions, the mushrooms, bamboo shoots. Stir. Add the water chestnuts, spinach and finally the beef.

Stir and toss the ingredients frequently with chopsticks or a wooden ladle. Keep the mixture moist with beef broth and soy sauce, added as necessary. When done, the beef should be tender but not stewed. The vegetables should be crisp. Everything should retain its own individuality. Serve immediately in rice-laden bowls, giving each guest his fair share.

Never attempt more than six servings at one time. If seconds are needed, start again from scratch

SMOKED TURKEY

1 12 lb. turkey

1 cup white wine 1 stick butter, melted

In a barrel type barbecue grill prepare coals to build a moderate fire. (About three pounds of charcoal.) Add wet hickory to smoke well. Place turkey at opposite end of heat (near the smoke stack) so meat won't cook too fast. Mix wine and butter together. Baste with mixture every half hour and rotate the bird to cook evenly. Smoke for eight hours.

HUNTER'S STEW

Brown 2 pounds of cut up round roast in skillet until you have at least two tablespoons of drippings. In large pot, fill with water two-thirds of the way to the top. Cut up four potatoes, one green pepper, one large chopped onion, 2 or three large carrots, and stalk of celery. Add to water on medium heat.

Add one teaspoon of salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, large can tomatoes, medium can of tomato sauce and two teaspoons of

Bring to a slow boil, add browned meat and grease drippings. Reduce heat to low, cover and cook for a couple of hours or until carrots and potatoes are well done. Never put in bay leaf or gartic as this will ruin everything.

CHILI PIE

Cook enough grits to serve six people and spread into casserole dish (wide long dish so that grits cover 1" layer on bottom). Spread large can of chili beans that have been mashed with potato masher

We design landscapes to reflect the architecture of your home or office 795-0182 10000 W. 38th Street

Spread layer of hot chili over this, then cover all with a layer of fritos and chopped up green onions.

Spread grated Longhorn cheese generously over fritos. Make sure your chili has plenty of liquid so the pie will not be dry. Put into 400 degree oven for about 20 minutes or until bubbles are coming up through the pie. Serve red hot.

Add the chicken to the onions and cook under lid till the meat becomes tender.

· Tornadoes can occur any place in the United States at any time of the year. They happen most frequently in the midwestern, southern and central states from March through September.

· Tornado "weather" can be hot, sticky days with southerly winds and a threatening, ominous sky. Familiar thunderstorm clouds are present. An hour or two before a tornado, topsy-turvy clouds appear, sometimes building down instead of up. The clouds often have a greenish-black color. Rain, frequently hail, precede the tornado with a heavy downpour after it has passed.

 Tornadoes generally occur between 3 and 7 p.m., but they have occurred at all

• In most cases, tornadoes move from a westerly direction, usually from the southwest. The tornado's path is usually 10 to 40 miles (the average length is 16 miles), but they may move forward for 300 miles. The average width of the path is about 400 yards, but they have cut swaths over a mile in width.

• Tornadoes travel about 25 to 40 miles per hour, with wind speed estimated as high as 500 miles per hour within the · Tornadoes cause destruction with violent winds which uproot trees, destroy buildings, and which create a serious hazard from objects blown through the air; and by differences in air pressure which can cause buildings to collapse.

-TEXAS DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

Tornado safety rules...

The Texas Department of Public Safety recommends the following safety rules in case of an approaching tornado:

IF YOU ARE NEAR A TORNADO CELLAR: When time permits, go to a tornado cellar, cave or underground excavation which should have an air outlet to help equalize the air pressure. It should be kept fit for use, free from water, gas or debris; and preferably equipped with pick and shovel. There is no universal protection against tornadoes except underground excavations

IF YOU ARE IN OPEN COUNTRY: 1. Move at right angles to the tornado's path. Tornadoes usually move ahead at about 25 to 40 miles per hour. 2. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest depression such as a ditch or ravine.

IN A CITY OR TOWN: 1. Seek inside shelter, preferably in a strongly reinforced building. Stay away from windows. 2. In homes: The corner of the basement toward the tornado usually offers greatest safety, particularly in a frame house. People in houses without basements can sometimes be protected by taking cover under heavy furniture against inside walls. Doors and windows on the sides of the house away from the tornado may be opened to help reduce damage to the building. 3. Standing against the inside wall on a lower floor of an office building offers some protection.

IF IN SCHOOLS: 1. In city areas, if the school building is of strongly reinforced construction, stay inside, away from windows and remain near an inside wall on the lower floors when possible. Avoid auditoriums and gymnasiums with large, poorly-supported roofs. 2. In rural schools that do not have strongly reinforced construction, remove children and teachers to a ravine or ditch if storm shelter is not available.

IN FACTORIES AND INDUSTRIAL PLANTS: On receiving a tornado warning, a lookout should be posted to keep safety officials advised of the tornado's appraoch. Advance preparation should be made for moving workers to sections of the plant offering the greatest protection.

KEEP CALM. It will not help to get excited. People have been killed by running out into streets and by turning back into the path of a tornado. Even though a warning is issued, chances of a tornado striking a particular home or location are very slight. Tornadoes cover such a small zone, as a rule, that relatively only a few places in a warned area are directly affected. You should know about tornadoes, though, "just in

Do not call the Weather Bureau, except to report a tornado, as your individual re-quest may tie up telephone lines urgently needed to receive special reports or to relay advisory notices to radio and television stations for dissemination to thousands in the critical

Leadership Lubbock proves successful

By Ray Westbreek Update Business Editor

eadership Lubbock, a program designed by the Chamber of Commerce to build a reservoir of capable leaders for the city's future direction, has ended its first season as a successful venture. Perry Gott of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce said his office already has a file of eight persons who have expressed interest in participating this fall when the second program gets wnderway.

One of the city's banks has also selected its representative for the 1977-78 orientation series

The Chamber of Commerce originally contacted businesses in Lubbock by letter, announcing the opportunity to sponsor a candidate for the program. From the response, 28 persons were chosen, of which 24 were able to at-

The program has consisted of monthly meetings emphasizing various sectors of the community, such as city government, law enforcement, courts, education, medical, United Way, and the economy.

Gott said the program was instituted to provide background information on the community to a group of potential leaders, so that they could form the beginning of a resource pool which would help provide direction for the community in the future.

The program recently concluded its six-month tenure with an evaluation meeting at the Lubbock Civic Center where the participants themselves took a candid view of the city's various functions.

Gott said the Chamber saw a need for such a continuing program in order to facilitate the selection of board and committee members.

Six Lubbock businessmen formed an advisory committee to provide the curriculum for the first year's endeavor. They include: J. C. Chambers, Roy Furr, W. R. "Bob" Denbar, Walter Taylor, Larry Shortes and Bill McAlister.

Persons making up the inítial class, include:

Gott said businesses will again be contacted for the fall program, and indicated that applications will be taken from persons interested in serving in the program.

Fourteen students from Lubbock's seven high schools recently received awards from the U.S. Air Force and Southwest Kiwanis Club, designating them as outstanding students.

The choices were based on academic excellence, citizenship and outstanding leadership qualities.

The students were honored at a luncheon last week.

Students named were: Judy Hart and Steve Meyer of Christ the King High School; Lisette C. Badell and Les Brewer of Coronado High; Darla Boyd and Delton Deal of Dunbar High School; Tina Moore and Jerry Turner of Estacado High; Denise Kay and Byron Rogers of Lubbock Christian High School; Gal-en Bevel and Karen McClung of Lubbock High; and Moses Monclova and Beth Stiles of Monterey High.

Lubbock District Parole Officer J. Norvin Sides was honored by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles recently for his 10 year service to the Texas parole system. Sides was awarded a plaque at banquet ceremonies at the Oak Cliff Sheraton Inn in Dallas.

Longhorns favored in track meet

The best in Texas Tech basketball, volleyball and tennis are shown here following their selection as most valuable players. They were presented at last week's Tech all-sports banquet for women

Outstanding players

By Don Henry Update Sports Editor

The University of Texas is almost unbeatable in Memorial Stadium. Most foot ball fans will agree. Most track fans will, also.

Last time the Southwest Conference track was held there, in 1973, in Memorial Stadium, the Longhorns won. Of course, the Longhorns winning the Southwest Conference in track anywhere is not so uncommon.

And, heading into this year's championships, slated in Austin Eriday and Saturday, the Longhorns are again favored.

Texas has won the last five SWC track titles in a row and seven of the past nine. Last year, at Waco, the Longhorns won with 119 points, to 106 for host Baylor. This year, the margin is expected to be about the same, although more schools are expected to pile up points, cutting down on the winner's aggregate.

And, just as last spring when the state high school meet was held there, the eyes will be on a sprinter by the name of Johnny Jones. A year ago, Jones, running for Lampasas, led his team to the state Class AAA championship. He went from that levelto the 1976 Montreal Olympics and a gold medal as a member of the U.S. 400-meter relay team.

Now, he will be favored for whatever events he and his coach, Cleburne Price, elect to enter. Going into the meet, Jones is the leader in the 100-yard dash, 220 and 440. Also, he will run on both the mile and 440 relays for the Longhorns.

How Jones plans to use his energy will determine the favorites. Jones is not the only one who will be involved in several events. If he enters the 440, he could engage Baylor's Mark Collins, However, Collins could run the 880, as he has most of this season. Now, if Collins is in the 880, he could get the scissors treatment, as Arkansas' Niall O'Shaughnessy will be favored in the 880 or mile, depending on which he enters.

He has run below 4 minutes in the mile on a relay-and at Memorial Stadium,

Texas Tech's chances ride with the long jump, its relays, the 440, mile and

Tech finished seventh with 24 points a year ago, a position and point sum it could match this year. Tech comes in with Jim MacAndrew, a Canadian Olympian who is cofavored with Houston's Cecil Overstreet for the long jump gold medal. Both have cleared 25 feet 114 inches this season-and MacAndrew made his jump at Austin. MacAndrew has been bothered by leg problems for several weeks, although he only missed one meet. Tech has not had a meet since winning the Wayland All-College Meet at Plainview April 29, so possibly, he will be returning to full speed by Saturday Freshman Greg Lautenslager has the school record in the three-mile run and could place there. In the 440, Tech will send senior William Pierson and freshman Edwin Newsome. Both have run 47.3s this season In the mile, Terrell Pendleton will be competing, although he has been injured most of the season. He is the school record holder in the mile. Freshman Charles Green will be Tech's top prospect in the sprints. Green has run 9.5 in the 100 this year and holds the school record at 21.0 in the 220. Green will also run the sprint and mile relays for the Raiders.

The sprint relay will have Pierson, MacAndrew, Green and either Garye Price or Tommy McIntyre. The mile relay unit will be Luther Mays, Green, Pierson, and Newsome. The mile relay has run 3:11.59, a school record this year-also at

This week's meet will wind up the season for the Raiders, except for possibly the U.S. Track Federation meet at Wichita, Kan., May 27-28 and the NCAA meet at Champaign, Ill., on June 2-4

Lubbock entertainment dwindles as summer nears

critic's voice

By William D. Kerns Update Fine Arts Editor

Summer is fast approaching and though it would not be fair to say the entertainment scene is dwindling completely - not with the University Theater planning its summer repertory season and the Lubbock Theatre Centre already getting their "Summer Mumideas organized - it seems obvious there has been a reduction in the offerings. Texas Tech University brings in a lot of class acts over the year and, indeed, many promoters look to the student dollars for much of their profits.

Thus with Tech paroling its students for a few months, some have shied

There have been some top acts hit town. Steve Fromholz, who used to be a folk singer and is now progressing into the rockin' country genre, offered a surprising free concert out on the Tech campus last week. It was a loose set, but as enjoyable as ever.

Arnett-Benson - "Logan's Run."

is clumsy at best. There's really not even that much in the way of fine special effects. Fact is, the only saving grace comes in Peter Ustinov's appearance with a few hundred cats toward the end. Playing on a double bill with Robert Baretta" Blake's "Electra Glide In Backstage I - "Sex On The Groove Tube." Who cares?

Backstage II - "Fantasex." I repeat,

Cinema West - William Shatner's "Mysteries Of The Gods." Captain Kirk returns to tell us about UFOs and visits from outer space. What's more it's billed as non-fiction. These "miracles" pictures usually turn out dull, but I'll admit I haven't caught this one. Frankly though, there are too many good movies in town to worry about it.

Fox Four " "The Song Remains The Same." Rock band Led Zeppelin's movie with a lot of their songs and a lot more bad reviews thus far. Haven't seen it.

Fox Four II — "Airport '77." I have seen this one. I only wish I hadn't. Boring, boring, boring. On top of that, it's dull. Just thinking about this movie is an act soporific enough to put a speed freak to sleep. Avoid it like the plague. Pre-tend it's a tornado and dodge out of its

Here's a film which is failing at the box office nationwide. And for no good rea-son. Director John Frankenheimer has given us a bloody documentary approach which is riveting, though the acclaimed ending seemed exaggerated to this critic. Still, not to be missed.

Fox Four IV - "Islands In The Streams." This film seems to resemble more the author than his novel but, nonetheless, it is a fascinating film and sweeping entertainment. It helps if you're a Hemingway buff, yes, but you're crary these days to turn down any George C. Scott performance. David Hemmings is also outstanding, a definite Supporting Actor candidate.

Lindsey - "The Godfather" and "The Godfather, Part Two." If anyone has the stamina to spend six hours with the Corleone family, odds are he'll leave the theater both drained and impressed. The first film was brilliant entertainment, but the sequel was nothing short of a film classic. A work of art. A brilliant piece of cinema. If you need me to point out the best film in town, it's "The Godfather, Part Two."

Showplace Four I - "The Last Tycoon." Starring Robert DeNiro, one of our finest actors, this is the latest film adaptation of an F. Scott Fitzgerald

Showplace Four II - "Silver Streak." This film has been here since before Christmas, and I would have rather seen it make its departure than the brilliant "Late Show" (which left with no warning at all after only two weeks). Still, if there are any recently awakened hermits out there who have not seen "Silver Streak," it might help you wake up with a few laughs.

Showplace Four III — "Uptown Saturday Night" and "Let's Do It Again." These Sidney Poitier-Bill Cosby films which are related in character and form, are far from perfect, but just the thing for those seeking light entertainment.

Showplace Four IV — "The Eagle Has Landed." This one should have been titled "The Turkey Has Landed." Michael Caine's wonderful acting is wasted in this hokey trumped-up war effort which doesn't know when to go for drama. Village — Same fare as Arnett-Benson.

Winchester - "Rocky." This is it, folks. Stallone's extended stay at the the class theater is winding down, with "Audrey Rose" slated to open already in the works), but try to catch it on the big screen if you haven't already.

I am one, and yet I am all, for I am a creation of every one who raised a voice in song as this new land became a mixing pot for the people of the world.

My songs echoed through the deep woods, the mountains and the plains, through the ancient chants of Indians as they sat about tribal campfires and worshiped this land with its clear-flowing rivers and forest full of game. They were the first, true Americans who saw the greatness of this land, before other came and wanted the greatness for their own.

Although I was born in this nation, I also came here with the conquering Spanish soldiers who sang in their travels like the American soldiers who sang in the many wars and conflicts that fol-

The Revolutionary War ended, and the people who had won the victory set about making something of the land they had won.
