

'Chocolate Factory' helps city youngsters with reading skills

Reading impact, like that of one school's fourth- and fifth-graders drawn into the fantastic world of "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory," will be the focus on this weekend's Texas Association for the Improvement of Reading conference.

Some of the youngsters among those at Williams Elementary who spent hours on special projects related to their reading will help with the presentation by team teachers Alexis Gray and Dianna Stouffer.

During a four-week unit on "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory," the elementary pupils studied grammar, vocabulary and other language skills using words and passages drawn from the book.

They also completed characterizations, workbooks, built factory facsimiles and whipped up some of their own recipes.

The teachers, who consider the chocolate factory story by Roald Dahl "a modern day classic," said school-wide interest in the students' project lasted over the summer with younger children asking this fall if they also would get to study about Charlie's adventures.

On the last day of unit study, imaginative impersonations, songs, and extra credit projects climaxed with a box of candy sent especially to the class by manufacturers who popularized Charlie and Willy Wonka, the factory's originator.

The impetus of interest generated in reading about Charlie has carried over to other lessons, the teachers say, and it is this enthusiasm which they hope to impart to other teachers at this weekend's reading conference.

Sixteen "interest showplaces" created by educators will disseminate ideas, materials and information to improve interest in reading.

A special parents' meeting to recruit them in the reading goals will be held at 10:45 a.m. Saturday in the Coronado High School auditorium.

The conference entitled "The Wonderful World of Reading" and fashioned after Walt Disney's creative genius, begins at 3:30 p.m. Friday.

That evening's address, "Teacher, Can You Help Me - I'm Kinda Mixed Up," will be given by nationally-known educator Ted Clymer.

He also will be dinner lecturer with "Questions Reading Teachers Ask."

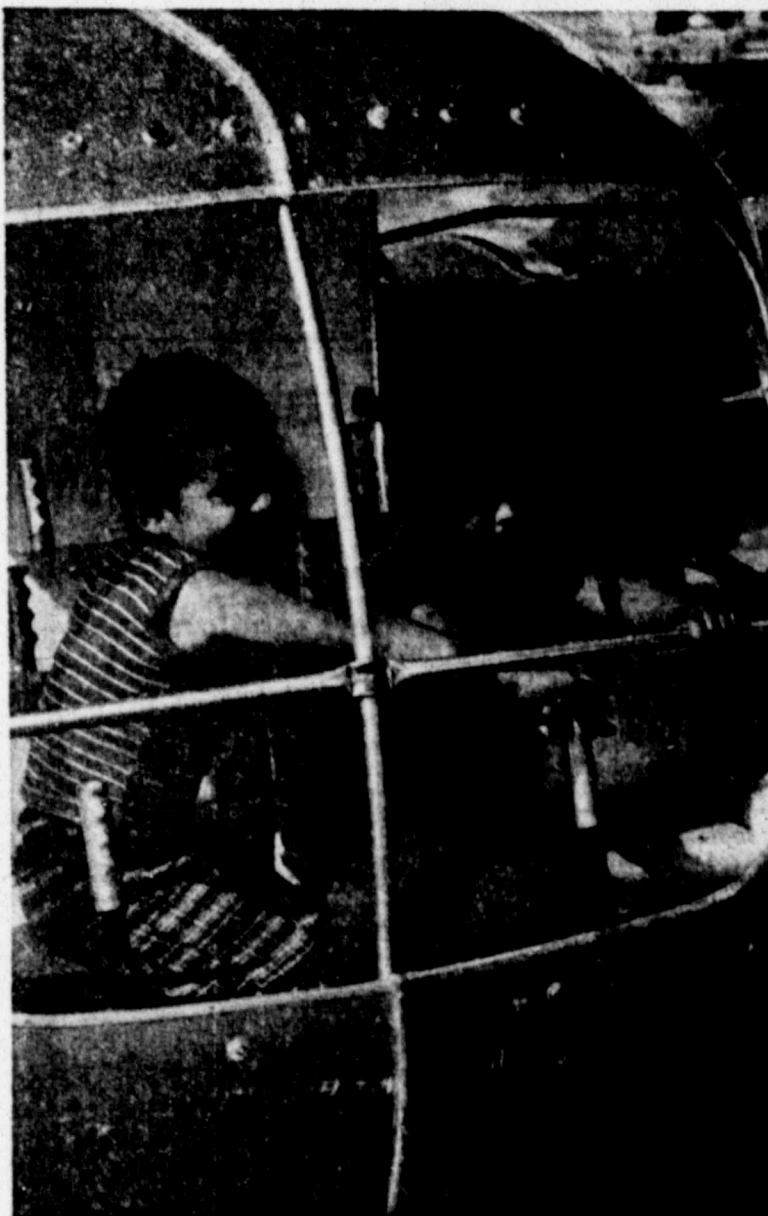

Saturday's session begins at 8:30 a.m. with Bonnie McCullough, TAIR second vice-president and former president, presiding.

Walter Barbe, editor of Highlights magazine, will speak on "Reading - Fun With A Purpose."

Arnett-Benson area residents protest city council decision

By Esther Longoria
Update Staff Writer

More than 100 Arnett-Benson area residents Sunday protested what they call city council insensitivity toward housing problems in northwest Lubbock.

Gathered on the patio of Rodgers Community Center, the crowd expressed dissatisfaction regarding Thursday's city council action to exclude housing rehabilitation from proposed third-year Community Development (CD) projects.

David Kitten, the city's CD coordinator, said that about $950,000 of the third-year funds will be used for housing rehabilitation in Arnett-Benson, adding that approximately $1.17 million has already been spent in the addition over the past two years.

However, Bidal Agüero, executive committee member for the Arnett-Benson Neighborhood Council, alleges that the city is ignoring housing problems in the community.

Agüero and Carlos Longoria, Arnett-Benson committee chairman, repeatedly told Sunday's gathering "to keep on complaining until the city finally does recognize our housing needs."

"I advise you to write the council and keep telephoning them with your housing problems," Agüero said. "We must continue to move and remain united in our efforts to achieve our rights."

Agüero told the group that the neighborhood committee has repeatedly petitioned the city council to allocate part of $543,600 in CD funds for housing rehabilitation in Arnett-Benson.

instead, the federal money will be used to buy part of an emergency power system for the city's water pump stations, build and equip a new central fire station, make preliminary studies for another day care center in East Lubbock and improve a house weatherization program for low and moderate income families.

"The city has chosen to ignore us just like we were a bunch of dogs. Perhaps we should resort to burning some of our houses down in order to get some attention," Juanita Castro, an Arnett-Benson resident for the past 20 years, said Sunday.

Representatives of the local Raza Unida Party attending the Sunday rally also voiced their support of the residents' grievances.

Eliseo Solis, Lubbock County RUP chairman, called for the city council to "reassess its priorities and think of the people first instead of parks and streets. The people deserve that money; the council should display more sensitivity."

Agüero told the crowd that the neighborhood council has contacted officials at the Dallas office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development concerning the matter and advised them to write their congressmen.

The Arnett-Benson addition is bound by Clovis Road, University Avenue, 4th Street and Indiana Avenue and has about 10,000 residents.

According to the Urban Renewal Agency, about $14 million would be needed to rehabilitate all the houses in the 10-block area.

'Eagle Eye' gives children refuge

By Jeff South
Update Staff Writer

In a world of bullies and bloody noses, threatening strangers and fast cars, an early-morning walk to school can be scary for small children. So parents in some Lubbock neighborhoods have banded together under "Operation Eagle Eye" to provide an emergency refuge for young pedestrians to and from their local schoolhouse.

Various Parent-Teacher Associations in the city are recruiting adults who usually are home early in the morning and when school lets out in the afternoon, to participate in the safety program.

Under Operation Eagle Eye, the participating homes are given a poster — brightly colored, green-and-gold signs — to display prominently in their windows.

Those posters, PTA officials explain, serve as a signal for children walking to or from school. Should there be trouble, youngsters know they can find help by knocking on the door of any house featuring a green-and-gold sign — with an eagle superimposed over an eye — in the window.

"The program is designed to give help to any child should some emergency arise — whether it be an illness, harassment of younger children by older ones, a ride or piece of candy offered by a stranger, or an encounter with a child molester or exhibitionist," said Rojeane Wood, safety chairman for the Lubbock City Council of Parents and Teachers.

"THE CHILD COULD RUN to the door of any home displaying the 'Eagle Eye,' and know there would be assistance and help given," Mrs. Wood, who notes there already has been a case of a young student accosted by a child molester this school year, said she hopes to get most of the local PTAs involved in the program.

"We have hopes of having at least two 'Eagle Eye' homes on each block — one at each end — and it would be great to have as many as possible in the middle," she said.

Mrs. Wood is encouraging PTAs throughout the city to join in the program by recruiting the help of "parents, grandparents and retired persons" in establishing Eagle Eye homes.

"In this age and day, children really are threatened — and it doesn't matter which neighborhood you live in," Mrs. Wood said.

The most common cases involve young children being picked on by older youngsters, or girls being chased by boys. Occasionally, there are incidents of adults trying to lure children into a car.

MRS. WOOD SAID Eagle Eye homes offer "safety and security" for frightened children. Not only do the Eagle Eye parents provide some immediate comfort, but they can take down information — license plate numbers and car descriptions — that can be used in police investigations of child molesting and other crimes, she said.

"I really feel that if those who might try to do any harm know there is help and that someone is watching out for these children, it may deter them," Mrs. Wood said.

School officials in Lubbock neighborhoods with active Eagle Eye programs say the safety network is a great success. Schools complement the Eagle Eye operation with filmstrips, written material and other educational programs on safety and avoiding strangers.

Mrs. Wood said she is contacting PTA officials at each elementary school about the Eagle Eye program. Parents interested in participating should call their neighborhood school or Mrs. Wood at 797-4914.

Attention first-graders

Those who have been there tell how to make it through the year

By Mona Harvey
Update Staff Writer

If you want to make it through this year, first-graders, listen to the teacher and behave yourselves.

That's what second-graders in Mrs. Edith Waits Dupre Elementary classroom had to say when Update asked them for advice.

"Don't rush through your work or you'll have to do it again," said Paula George, 6.

"You shouldn't talk at lunch," said Anna Johnson, 7.

"Listen to the teacher and take the books out when she says," Sheila Cavarubias, 8, offers.

Academics are very important, the second-graders reported.

"You go to the library and learn how to read," said Armando Arigjo, 7.

"You learn your colors and ABCs," said Julie Veyro, 7, "and how to write and spell pretty good."

But the primary concern is good behavior, the experienced students stressed.

"Don't shove or run in the hall," Anna Johnson, 7, said. She also is quite concerned about safety. It is necessary to be "careful with not falling or rushing downstairs" in the two-story building, she said.

Jeff Brannen, 8, added his admonishments about the stairs: "Don't jump the steps."

Thoughtful Anna Johnson, 7, had all the rules down for lunchtime. "Stand straight, keep hands to yourself and wait your turn in the cafeteria line," she listed.

"Don't run in the classroom or push anybody at the drinking fountain," said Ronnie Rice, 8.

"Never get into a fight," said Vu Ha,

7, after his first comment. "School is fun."

Machelle Petree, 7, apparently already has had dealings with the younger kids.

"Whenever they sit by me at lunch and talk, I tell them to be quiet or they won't have time to eat all their food and I like to eat all my food ... I tell them good things they can do."

Tommy Hibdon, 7, pipes up. "They always ask me what time it is."

Regina Pesina, 7, adds. "I tell them not to scream so much in the cafeteria."

Helpful hints from some less vocal second-graders included encouragements from Yolanda Sanchez, 7, to perform well in writing and reading.

George Thomas Ellis, 7, summed up. "Just be nice."

With an inspirational note, 7-year-old Julie Veyro said, "First grade is fun and I liked it myself."

Taking up some academic 'slack'

THE TIGHTER grading and promotion standard just endorsed for primary students by Lubbock school trustees signifies a quantum step forward back to basic education, if the board plans to do more than just pay lip service in its quest for academic excellence.

Parents are getting more information daily on the outcome of the so-called educational "innovations" of the 1960s, and they're realizing the only results of unstructured educational techniques are bad results.

It's almost to the point where a youngster can do poorly on an exam and still improve his grade average.

ALTHOUGH SCHOOL administrators disagree with board president Charles Waters' assessment that teachers here are handing out too many "social promotions," i.e., passing students routinely from one grade to the next, Waters is well within reason for denouncing even the hint of such a practice.

Compliance with a uniform grading policy is nothing more than a matter of equity and fairness to everyone, especially to the student who is awarded grades and promotions he doesn't deserve.

Of course it is going to be tough initially on youngsters who've become accustomed to working at their own pace, but eventually they're going to have to face reality.

Special exceptions may need to be made for children with learning disabilities, of course, but elementary school is not an inappropriate place to start realizing everyone can not be his own boss, whether in the classroom or in the business world.

Promoting students who aren't ready, in fact, does them a major educational disservice.

GRADES AWARDED but unearned aren't worth the diploma paper they're printed on and the recipient is cheated out of a chance to compete to the best of his ability for a higher rung on the economic ladder, if that be his wish.

No where is the deteriorating condition of the educational system more apparent than in skidding test scores on the College Entrance Examination Board's scholastic aptitude test (SAT)—a test that is given to help forecast how a high school student will perform in college.

SAT scores have fallen steadily during the past 13 years for which results are available. And the average composite scores on tests administered by the American College Testing Program (ACT) also have fallen in recent years.

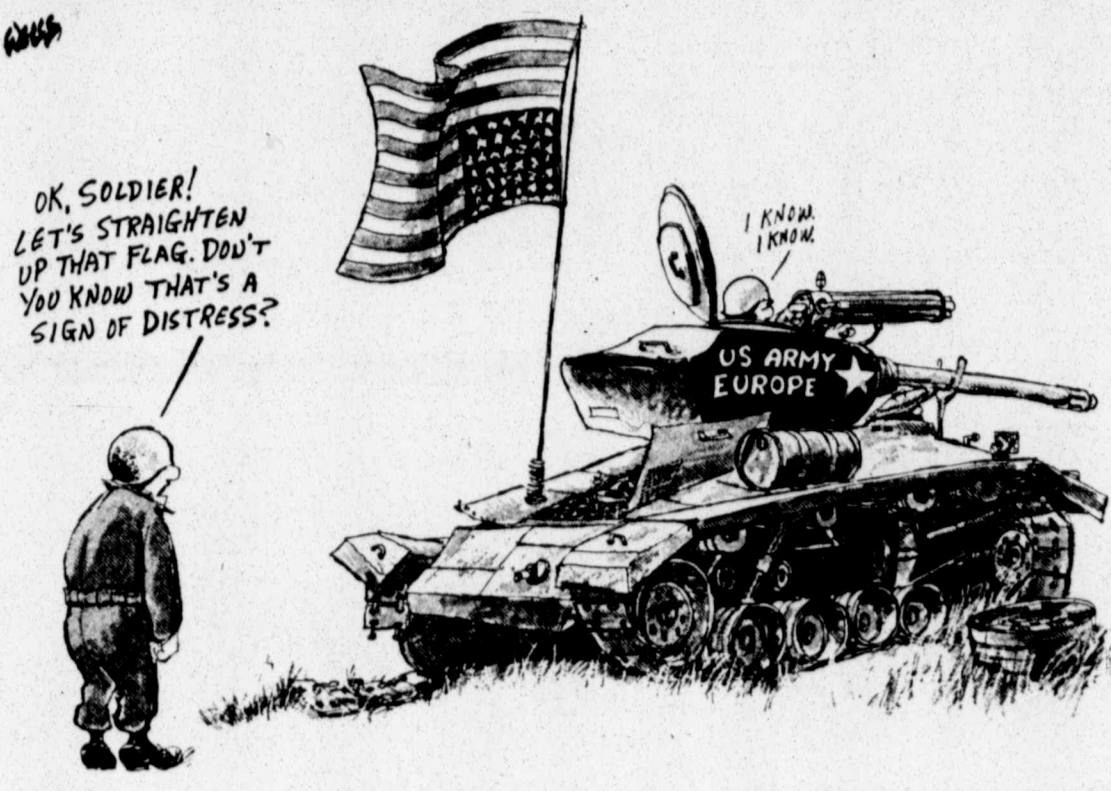

PRESSURE FOR more emphasis on the basics of education at the elementary and secondary levels continues to come from the colleges.

Increasingly, they are forced to make adjustments for entering freshmen who are deficient in basic reading and writing skills, the acquiring of which was once considered the fundamental purpose of going to school.

"Fun and relevant" courses are being offered at the expense of composition, math and reading. College admissions director Richard W. Moll, says the result is "that a good many bright students are quite conversant with local, national and international problems, but they can't write three consecutive declarative sentences in the English language."

It's not unreasonable to worry that our schools are slipping into academic as well as social permissiveness. It is reasonable to want to recapture the stable, traditional values that have somehow gotten lost in the shuffle.

If the board backs up what it says, we're on our way back where we should have stayed in the first place.

Ronald Thomason

Museum to display western art

An exhibit of paintings by Ronald Thomason, who calls himself "an artist from the West," will open Saturday at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

The exhibit is sponsored by the West Texas Museum Association. The Weatherford artist was honored by the Texas Legislature in 1973 as "Texas Artist of the Year." The citation credited him with bringing worldwide attention to this state with his paintings and for preserving on canvas a portion of the disappearing landscape.

Thomason's work is detailed and features vast windswept prairies, weather-worn windmills and lonely, two-story frame homes that have outlived their builders. Cattle heading for water and other scenes of the West are favorite subjects.

With his interest in the West, however, he combines an ability to depict other subjects. His drybrush watercolor painting, "The Federal City," hangs in the rotunda of the National Archives in Washington.

A former teacher, John McCoy, says of Thomason that "he gives us thorough technique" and a feel for light, texture and landscape that "is truly communication."

Thomason, a former football player, was born in Shawnee, Okla., and did not begin his serious study of art at an early age. Although he had been interested in the field for a number of years, he had to give up a secure full-time job and move with his wife and three children to Pennsylvania when he first enrolled in the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts.

He later studied with McCoy, with Francis Speight in Philadelphia, and with John Chumley in Virginia, at the University of Nagasaki in Japan with K. Sakamoto and with many other artists of note.

He is well known in Texas as an art lecturer, and his paintings have been exhibited in galleries across the nation.

The exhibit at the Tech museum at 4th Street and Indiana Avenue will be open until Nov. 7. There is no charge.

Architecture trio gets scholarships

The Lubbock chapter of the American Institute of Architects have selected three students from Texas Tech University as recipients of $500 scholarships.

Selected for scholarships are Lonnie Gary, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gary of Big Spring; Mark Drake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip C. Drake of Abilene, and Billy Lorange, son of Mr. and Mrs. Johnie F. Lorange of Euless.

All are fourth-year students in the architectural design option program.

Sept. 28, 1957: GOVERNOR MAY SEEK OUSTER OF TROOPS. The governor of Arkansas was threatening to seek a court injunction against troops at Central High in Little Rock, placed there to control racial conflicts as nine black students completed their third day of attendance there. The governor had also accused the FBI of bugging his phones and illegally questioning Central High students.

In other news: The Texas Tech board of directors met to discuss and speculate on the effect the dismissal of three professors earlier in the summer would have on the school's future.

In other news: Armed bandits of differing descriptions, robbed two service stations within a half-block of one another. Cash registers at the stations were emptied by the robbers within a three-hour time span.

Sept. 28, 1972: PEACE HOPES SPURRED ANEW. U.S. officials refused to comment on reports claiming that the U.S. and North Vietnam had agreed upon terms creating a cease-fire. The reports, even though unconfirmed, had caused the stock market to jump 10 points.

In other news: The city council approved a billboard ordinance that restricted the size of new signs posted in areas near the proposed Memorial Civic Center.

The land for Reese Air Force Base, over 2,900 acres, was donated by the City of Lubbock. In 1941 construction began on Lubbock Army Air Field, as it was then called.

Small business workshop slated

Philip J. O'Jibway, director of the Lubbock District of the U.S. Small Business Administration, has announced a one-day workshop for small business managers Oct. 6 in Lubbock. John Landreth, past chairman of SCORE, will be coordinator. The workshop will be in the Blue Flame Room of the First National-Pioneer Gas Building, 1500 Broadway, and will be jointly sponsored by SBA and SCORE. SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives) is a volunteer group of retired men and women whose purpose is to provide management counseling to small business owners and managers, or to anyone who is considering starting a business. The program will begin at 8:30 a.m., following registration at 8 a.m. Topics to be discussed include financial factors, sources of capital, business opportunities in the Lubbock area, marketing, business regulations and taxes and insurance. The discussion leaders are specialists in problems relating to small business, and the purpose of the workshop is to help small business owners and managers avoid business losses due to inadequate recordkeeping, insufficient knowledge of business tax procedures, and weak management. According to Landreth, "Management knowledge is essential for business success, and it is our aim to inform business people of potential problems and of some things they can do to achieve success." There will be a $2 fee to cover all materials. For further information, write or phone SCORE, Room 616 Federal Office Building, 1205 Texas Avenue, Lubbock.

Mezak given post on television panel

Michael Mezak, director of the Division of Continuing Education at Texas Tech University, has been named to the state Advisory Committee for Instructional Television Services. One of the duties of the committee is to advise the Commissioner of Education, M.L. Brockette, on how best to distribute money allotted to public schools for use of educational television. The committee's aim is to involve as many students as possible in the educational process through TV's use, Mezak said. The advisory committee, authorized in the Texas Educational Code is charged to make recommendations regarding governance, needs, criteria for eligibility and a process for program and fiscal accountability. Members generally are from both broadcasting and educational areas, according to Mezak.

FIRST TECH PRESIDENT
Paul Whitfield Horn, the first president of Texas Technological College, set the basic guideline for the institution in 1925. "Let us make the work of the college fit the scope of our country," he said. "Let our thoughts be big thoughts and broad thoughts. Let our thinking be in world-wide terms."

Bridwell memorial started

A Harry T. Bridwell Memorial Fund has been started at Westmont Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) here. The memorial will honor the late Harry T. Bridwell, who was interim pastor of Westmont from May to December in 1976. The late Rev. Bridwell and his wife came to Lubbock in 1972. At that time, he was a retired minister, having served parishes and interims at various churches in the U.S. Mrs. Marie Bridwell, widow of the late minister, lives in Lubbock. There are two sons: Dr. Travis Bridwell, a Lubbock physician; and Dr. John Bridwell, senior minister of First Christian Church in Amarillo.

Tech rodeo scheduled Oct. 26-29

Some of the largest cash prizes in America college rodeos are awarded to top contestants in the annual Texas Tech University National Intercollegiate Rodeo. More than 500 contestants are expected to participate in the 1977 Tech Rodeo Oct. 26-29 at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. Cowboys and cowgirls from 16 colleges in this region will compete for top awards in various roping and riding events. Participants come from areas ranging from Stephenville to Las Cruces, N.M., according to Craig Bessent, chairman of the Rodeo Association Board. The Professional Rodeo Cowboys' Association stock to be used in the rodeo is produced by Harry Vold of Fowler, Colorado. Vold provides livestock for rodeos throughout the United States and Canada. Special guest to make an appearance will be Walt Garrison, former Dallas Cowboy football player; Kim Henderson of Wichita Falls, Miss Rodeo Texas, and Cindy Shelton of Vernon, Miss Rodeo Texas Tech.

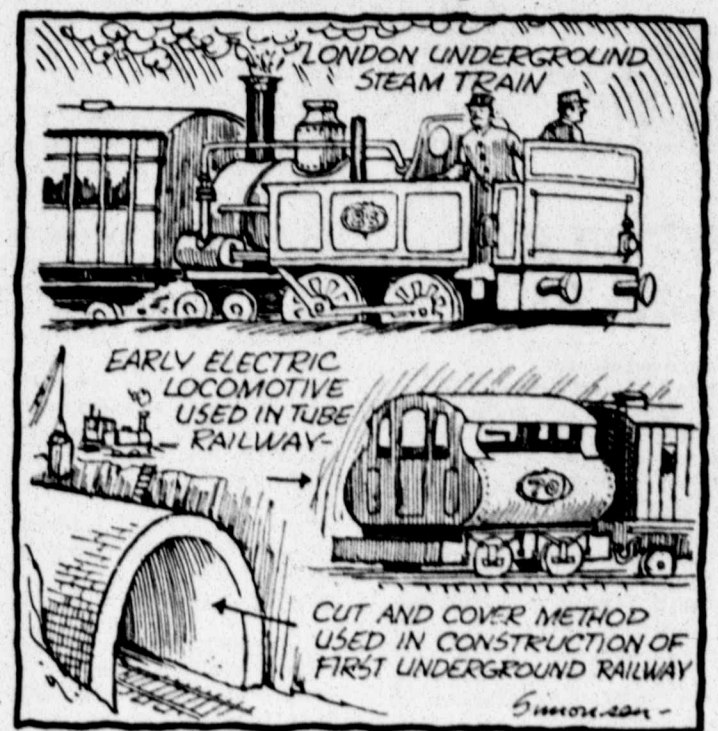

The first three nights, Oct. 26-28, will be regular competition. Contestants holding the top four places in each event will receive cash prizes the night of Oct. 28. The 10 participants with the highest scores in each event will compete for cash prizes in the finals Oct. 29. Winner of each event will receive a belt buckle. The college rodeo team which has accumulated the most points during the rodeo will be awarded a trophy. Team points won at the Texas Tech Rodeo count toward sending the winning team to the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Finals next June in Bozeman, Mont. Faculty sponsor for the Texas Tech Rodeo Association this year is Dr. Billy G. Freeman, assistant professor of agricultural economics. "In order to avoid conflict with the Texas Tech-Rice game and Dads Day festivities, we have changed the date for the intercollegiate Rodeo to the weekend of Oct. 29," Bessent said. "We are expecting big crowds and a topnotch rodeo."

Senior citizen events planned for Thursday

Special activities are being planned at the Lubbock Adult Center at 2600 Ave. P for the Panhandle-South Plains Fair Senior Citizens Day Thursday. A pancake breakfast will kick off activities at the center from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. At 9:45 a.m., transportation will be furnished from the center to the fair so all senior citizens may take part in the special events planned by the fair on aging. There is no charge for transportation and admission on this day. Buses will be available to return participants to the center in time for lunch at 1 p.m. These activities are open to any senior citizen. For more information call Ray Pectol at the Lubbock Adult Center at 762-3629.

junior editors' quiz Subways

QUESTION: Where and when was the first subway put to use?
ANSWER: The first underground passenger railroad was begun in London in 1863. This 3.7 mile-section of the London Underground was completed in 1863. The cut-and-cover method of construction was used. The arched brick tunnels were built in open trenches. Dirt was then filled around and over the top of the tunnels and the street was rebuilt. Because these early subways were powered by steam, the tunnels and stations smelled of sulfur. Nevertheless, the London Underground carried 10 million passengers in its first year of operation. In 1886, the London subway system was expanded by using a shield in the construction. Tunneling through clay under the Thames, a cylindrical tube of steel about 10 1/2 feet in diameter and 15 feet long was forced forward into the ground by hydraulic jacks pumped by hand. After the London Underground was electrified in 1905, great expansion took place. By the early 1970s, London has 102 miles of underground track, the second largest in the world. New York City has the most extensive subway system in the world on the basis of miles of track. Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Washington, D.C. also have subway systems.

Legend convicted Lizzie Borden

By Jay Robert Nash

Fifty years ago, an austere lady died a recluse at her elegant estate, Maplecroft, in Fall River, Mass. From a fortune of more than $200,000, the deceased left $30,000 to a society to prevent cruelty to animals. She had been kind and gentle in life and her will expressed high-minded grace. This woman was Lizzie Borden, whose name is unjustly synonymous with murder.

Yet, from all the circumstantial "evidence" mounted against Lizzie for the gruesome murders of her father and stepmother, none of it proved her guilt. In fact, most of the prosecution's case went far to prove Lizzie's innocence.

It all began about 11:15 a.m. August 4, 1892 when Lizzie Borden stood at the foot of the stairs in her home and shouted to the maid, Bridget Sullivan:

"Come down quick! Father's dead! Somebody came in and killed him!"

Andrew Borden had died on the living room sofa. His head was caved in and his features obliterated, as if someone had taken an ax to him. (The 3 1/2-inch penetrations into the skull determined the use of an ax, investigators said later.)

Lizzie's stepmother, the former Abby Gray, was found on the floor of the upstairs guest room about an hour later. Her head and also been bashed in.

Mr. Borden apparently had been napping when he was killed, and Mrs. Borden had obviously been making the bed when murdered.

Lizzie said she was in the barn loft looking for fish-line sinkers at the time of the killings. Bridget was in her attic room dozing through the intolerable heat of the day. Emma Gorden, Lizzie's older sister, was away in Fairhaven, and John Vinnicum Morse, a visiting uncle, was out of the house on business when the murderer entered.

LIZZIE CAME UNDER suspicion within days of the murder and was subsequently indicted and tried in June of 1893. The prosecution strove mightily to affix guilt with strictly circumstantial evidence.

District Attorney Hosea Knowlton's case was all roar. After noting that Lizzie claimed to be near the house during the murders, Knowlton said she had told the wealthy Andrew that her stepmother — a woman she and her sister ardently disliked — had received a note from a sick friend and had apparently hurried off to administer care. (At that moment, Mrs. Borden was sprawled dead upstairs.) However, the note was never produced and the sick friend never came forward. Knowlton concluded that Lizzie was afraid of being disinherited in favor of her stepmother and therefore had reason to slay the couple.

The defense was conducted by George D. Robinson, a former Massachusetts governor. Robinson pointed out that though Lizzie was in and out of the house at the time of the murders, anyone could have entered the building through an unlocked side door. He stated that Andrew Borden had made many enemies through his cagey banking tactics and one of these could have easily killed Mrs. Borden before slipping downstairs to murder the patriarch while Lizzie was in the barn.

The ax alleged to have been used on both Borden's was never produced, although the prosecution did unearth a broken hatchet in the basement. This tool was covered with ashes but was without a trace of blood. Also, anyone killing the Borden's probably would have been coated with gore, yet Lizzie had no blood on her.

(It was later claimed that she washed twice within an hour and a half — the estimated time between the two murders — and changed her dress. But, given the known movements of the 32-year-old spinster, such actions would have been impossible.)

It was alleged that Lizzie burned a blood-spattered dress after the crime. She did burn a dress some days after the killings but it was covered with paint from decorating done the previous May. The dress was examined by both Bridget and Emma, and they said no blood was on it. Also, it was Emma who found the dress in a closet and urged Lizzie to burn it.

FEW INVOLVED IN the case then or the millions of detective writers who followed decades later remembered that the Borden house had been burglarized repeatedly only months before the murders and that several witnesses swore they had spotted strange men sneaking about the house before the double slaying.

After an hour's deliberation, the jury found Lizzie innocent. However, certain reporters and gossips would have it otherwise and Lizzie's guilt was established scheme. All displays must reflect a fire prevention theme and may be constructed of any readily available material. No electrical components may be used. Displays may be free standing or mounted.

The Fire Prevention Section, ext. 2311/2686, must be notified as to the location of displays for judging. Judging will begin at 2 p.m. Oct. 14. Winners will be notified by Oct. 19.

A new training concept in the field of electronics, labeled "Bright Spark," will be fully implemented in the Air Training Command (ATC) by the end of the year. The concept grew from a long-held consensus of many ATC training experts that airmen learning basic electronics maintenance skills were receiving more instruction, usually theoretic electronics, than they needed to work effectively during their first enlistments. Bright Spark, which permits students to work on actual equipment earlier in their training, involves 80 basic airmen courses and will affect about 12,000 students annually.

Bright Spark stresses instruction in basic principles that apply to specific hardware the students will maintain in the field. As a result, along with a reduction in training time that will average about 25 per cent, higher student motivation and lower elimination rates are anticipated. Evaluation of both the courses and graduates will continue.

The program is succeeding in its primary purpose: to graduate students who, although trained for a shorter period, perform as well as, or better than, previous graduates. Other derivative benefits include projected savings of $20 million to $25 million annually, a yearly reduction of about 1,300 student pipeline spaces and approximately 280 instructor and base operating support manning spaces.

National Fire Prevention Week will be Oct. 9-15, and the base fire department is sponsoring a fire prevention display contest in conjunction with the week.

The contest is open to all squadrons and organizations. Cash prizes of $50 for first place and $25 for the runner-up will be awarded. Entries will be judged on originality, aptness of thought and through innuendo and rumor. In place of convicting the real killer, Lizzie would do. What most damned Lizzie for the ages was the following bit of doggeral (sung to the tune of "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay"):

"Lizzie Borden took an ax
And gave her mother 40 whacks.
When she saw what she had done
She gave her father 41."

It did not matter that the actual number of "whacks" consisted of 29 or that Lizzie was legally innocent. The clever quatrain, which became universally accepted, insisted Lizzie was guilty. She still is today in the minds of the uninformed.

A bit of charity is obviously due for Lizzie. The following verse was penned by A. L. Bixby during the agonizing trial:

"You have borne up under all,
"Lizzie Borden
"With a mighty show of gall,
"Lizzie Borden.
"But because your nerve is stout
"Does not prove beyond a doubt
"That you knocked the old folks out,
"Lizzie Borden."

CRIME NOTES: Two excellent studies of drug addiction and methods used to combat drug distribution can be found in "Collura: Actor with a Gun," by Bill Davidson (Simon and Schuster), and "The Pleasant Avenue Connection," by David Turk and Ira Silverman (Harper and Row).

The Davidson book presents the gripping, hair-raising account of TV actor Steven Collura, who doubled as a undercover narcotics agent at night on the lethal streets of New York. Collura helped to close down a score of pushers through 126 felony narcotics buys, only to be shot by the Mafia for his efforts.

from October this year to September 1978 as a part of a one-year test program to determine the feasibility of establishing a permanent internship program in the Air Force," said Lt. Col. Kixie K. Childs, Air Force Nurse Recruiting division chief.

"Nurses selected to participate in the internship program must have recently passed the state board examination and have less than one year of nursing experience," stated Col. Childs.

After selection, nurses will be offered commissions as second lieutenants in the Air Force Nurse Corps and will be scheduled to attend a 10-day orientation course at Sheppard AFB before beginning their internship at one of five Air Force hospitals. Hospitals participating in this program are at Andrews AFB, Md.; Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio; Keesler AFB, Miss.; Scott AFB, Ill.; and Wilford Hall Medical Center, Lackland AFB.

Sets celebrations

Donna Kay Jackson, student body secretary of Estacado High School, helps pick the dates for homecoming and the tenth anniversary celebration. For weeks, students, faculty and staff have prepared for the festivals. Homecoming is slated Friday, with the anniversary celebration scheduled Oct. 15.

EHS planning homecoming, anniversary

Lubbock's Estacado High School will celebrate its homecoming Friday, and will follow with an official Tenth Anniversary Celebration on Oct. 15.

Students, faculty and administrative staff have been in the preparation for weeks planning, decorating, making murals, symbols, drawings, signs, and other indicators of what the period 10 years since the school opened its doors means to them.

The entire school is expected to be involved in one project or another designed to emphasize the school's short but dynamic history during the weeks leading up to homecoming and during the weeks between homecoming and the formal dedicatory weekend.

The homecoming weekend also will mark a re-dedication to the spirit which helped Estacado launch its varsity athletic competition with a state football championship in its first year of varsity competition.

Lowrie completes Purina training

Recent graduation exercises in St. Louis, Mo., climaxed a week of intensive training for Ron Lowrie of Lubbock.

He and 22 other salesmen of the Ralston Purina Company took part in a headquarters school designed to update the sales force in the chow division.

Lowrie graduated earlier from the basic sales school in St. Louis. As part of a continuing training program, he will return later in his career to participate in the business management school.

OTHER TECH CENTERS

Texas Tech University also operates the Texas Tech University Center at Amarillo, a research and agricultural activity in the Texas Panhandle, and the Texas Tech University Center at Junction, an educational facility in Kimble County.

Vocational honorees

Girls receive vocational honors

Five young women selected as September vocational students of the month represent diverse fields.

Jana Rea Adams of Lubbock High and Sandy Rosas of Dunbar both are seniors in their respective home economics departments.

Jana, the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Adams of 3307 Auburn St., plans to become a home economics teacher. She is finishing four years of study in homemaking, including summer courses. She also completed related courses in consumer education, child development, home and family living and home furnishings.

Sandy, 17, is the daughter of Guadalupe Rosas of Shallowater, and her guardians are Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Garcia Jr. of 2431 E. 29th St. She is employed by Goodner's Family Steak House.

Sandy served as a representative to the state FHA convention and is president of the Home Economics Related Organization. She plans to major in business in college.

Both girls are members of the student council.

Monterey's Linda Nixon works as a medical laboratory assistant at Methodist Hospital as part of her training program in cooperative health education. She plans to pursue a career in that field.

The 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nixon of 3404 46th St. is the president of her school chapter as well as the area organization of the Texas Association of Health Occupation Students of America.

Coronado's honoree, Denice Strube, is employed at Taber's Jewelry in the South Plains Mall, where she has received training in jewelry sales for two years.

She placed third in sales demonstration and second in merchandise information manual at the area Distributive Education Clubs of America contest this year. She is serving as president of her local club chapter.

Denice plans to study to become a certified public accountant. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Quinton Strube of 4901 41st St.

Fifteen-year-old Lana Fisbeck was one of the first girls to take the three-hour vocational mill cabinet course. Her project last year won first place in the district and state Vocational Industrial Clubs of America contest.

The Estacado junior plans to attend East Texas State University and major in industrial education. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Fisbeck of 722 E. Fordham.

Tech duo grabs awards

Jim Langford and Lonnie Gary, architecture students at Texas Tech University, are among the four winners in a national design competition for a "Catwalk System for Mt. Rushmore."

Contestants designed a catwalk to allow visitors at Mt. Rushmore to get a closer view of the sculptures of historic figures without obstructing the beauty of the monument.

Twenty-seven schools were represented in the contest, conducted for the Association of Student Chapters of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) for the National Institute for Architectural Education. Judges made their selections for the four finalists at the AIA's 1977 convention in San Diego.

Langford won second place and a $300 award. Gary won $100 and honorable mention.

After the convention, the designs were sent to the National Institute for Architectural Education in New York for exhibition.

The seventh annual convention of the Classical Association of the Southwestern United States (CASUS), is slated Saturday in the University Center at Texas Tech University.

The convention, a group of educators and hobbyists studying the classics, is co-sponsored by the department of classical and romance languages, the department of English, the College of Arts and Sciences and the Graduate School of Tech.

The conference will include presentations of papers centering around the convention theme, "Virgil and His Influence."

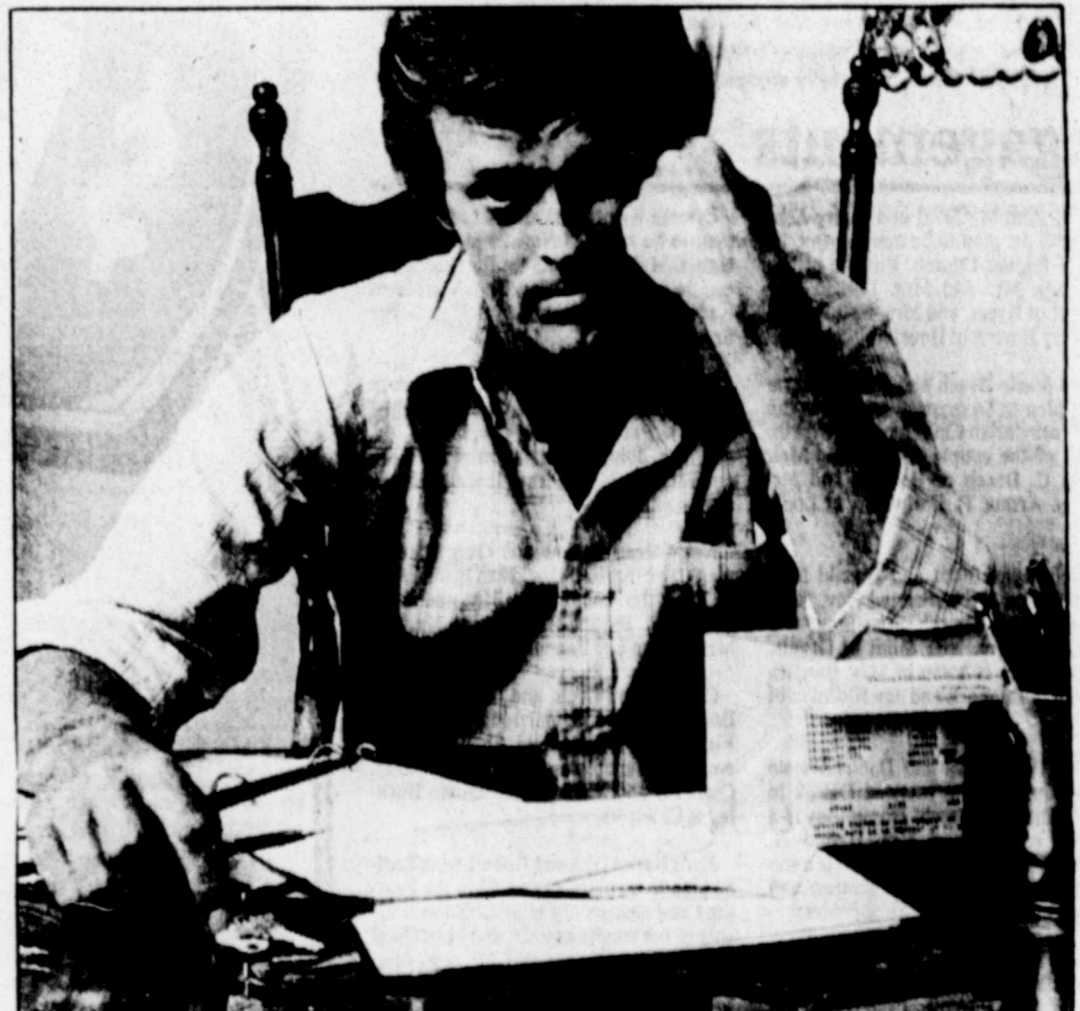

About 50 persons are expected to attend the convention.

Mrs. Murfee named by national panel

The 1977 Outstanding Young Women of America program has selected Mrs. Marilyn Murfee of 3113 28th St. as one of 51 members chosen from each state.

She was picked from women between the ages of 21 and 36 who have made exceptional contributions to their communities, states and professions.

The Lubbock woman will appear in "Outstanding Young Women in America," the organization's annual award program, and is eligible for selection as one of the Ten Outstanding Young Women in America.

What you don't know about heat pumps can be costing you plenty.

The heat pump is a heating and air-conditioning system pioneered by General Electric since 1935.

In view of today's energy situation, the GE Heat Pump is among the most efficient of ways to heat and cool your home or business.

In summer, with the GE Heat Pump, air-conditioning savings from 12% to 20% are common compared to many systems presently in use. In winter, the heat pump operates for 40% to 60% less than regular

A "cabaret" of cabbage

Slowly stirring her preparation of sweet-sour red cabbage (one of many favorite dishes she brought home to America from Germany while her husband served a tour of duty in the Air Force there), a thoughtful smile crosses Mrs. Dave Galloway's face. Dining is a form of entertainment, Mrs. Galloway explained in a recent interview, and a real "cabaret" dish is this sweet-sour cabbage she says her family especially enjoys.

By Martha Bowden
Update Staff Writer

"When in Rome, do as the Romans do," is an old, familiar saying, but it shouldn't be limited just to Rome, according to Mrs. Dave Galloway. Living in Berlin, Germany, when her husband S Sgt. Dave Galloway, served a tour of duty there with the Air Force, she found it necessary said to "do as the Germans do."

One of the biggest adjustment for her as an American wife and mother of the couple's two daughters, Becky, 8, and Lora, 4 was the size.

"Germany is really a country of miniatures, almost a 'dollhouse' wonderland in free Germany," she said.

Since the majority of the family's time was spent in Berlin, it was there she first noted the 'Lilliputian' nature of Germany. The apartment the Galloways rented typical of the majority of Berlin apartments, was a good deal smaller than an average American apartment. Refrigerators were half the size of their American counterparts and had small freezing compartments, usually with room enough for only one ice tray and storage space for only a few packages of frozen food.

"As for the stoves," Mrs. Galloway said, "they resembled camping hot plates mounted on porcelain."

The compact, limited living space of the Germans accounts for their method of grocery shopping, which Mrs. Galloway said was also new to her as they shop every two or three days.

Huge supermarkets as we know them in America are not the German way, Mrs. Galloway noted. Depending on what food one needs, one goes from market to market. There are fruit and vegetable shops, meat markets, bakeries — each with its own specialty.

What is impressive about Germany, Mrs. Galloway said, is walking down the street, sauntering from one shop to the next and window gazing, the whole scene is one of impressive cleanliness. As crowded as Berlin is, Mrs. Galloway said, the polished "manicured" look of Germany's home and business areas never ceased to amaze her.

"We have many happy memories from our stay in Germany," she said with a smile. Always a pleasurable experience for us when we lived there was dining in the evening. The Germans, she explained, eat out frequently, and there are, indeed, so many restaurants in Berlin that we were told when we arrived that were we to eat out every night in Berlin for two years, we still would not have exhausted all the restaurants there are to visit.

Dining in Germany Mrs. Galloway said, is regarded as an art. Anyone dining out should plan on it's being an all-evening event because the service is leisurely, and savoring and appreciating the atmosphere is as important as enjoying the cuisine.

The German food is not highly seasoned as a whole, Mrs. Galloway remarked, remembering particularly the first potato salad she was served in Germany. It was a white, creamy mixture and looked like mayonnaise, but the mixture was delicious. The German beer, of course, is highly flavorful and served as a "matter of course" at virtually every meal. German wines are delicious, too, she added, and served on many occasions.

The German people as a whole are sturdy in body. They are hard workers and industrious, but they love life and good times, too. They are not as calorie-conscious or diet-watchers as Americans are she noted.

"We enjoy reflecting on our tour of service while in Germany," Mrs. Galloway said. "Communication at first was difficult, but once the Germans realized you were serious in desiring to learn their language they were very helpful and amicable, she said.

Among the many memories the Galloways brought home to America, a number are in recipe form.

WIENER SCHNITZEL

4 slices veal fillet
(4 oz. each)
Flour
1 large egg
Salt, pepper
2 tsp. water
Breadcrumbs
Cooking oil
Lemon wedges

Beat fillet thin. Place small cuts around the edges to keep meat from curling. Coat veal with flour seasoned with salt and pepper; then dip veal in water and egg (which should be well beaten). Add fresh white breadcrumbs to mixture and leave them for 15 minutes so crust will harden. Fry veal in pan of deep, fresh cooking oil, two pieces at a time for 8 to 10 minutes. Drain on a paper towel and serve.

SWEET-SOUR RED CABBAGE

1 firm red cabbage
(about 2 lb.)
3 level tbsps. sugar
2 oz. lard or bacon drippings
1 medium onion, grated
1/2 lb. cooking apples, chopped
1/2 pt. water
1 to 2 level tsp. salt
1/4 to 1 level tsp. caraway seed
1 level tbsp. cornflour (cornstarch)
4 tbsps. vinegar

Shred cabbage while heating drippings in a large saucepan. Add cabbage, sugar, onion, apples, water, salt, caraway seed and cornstarch, mixed to a cream with vinegar. Reduce heat and simmer for 1 1/2 to 2 hours. Add boiling water if mixture becomes too dry. Serve with roast duck, goose or pork. If desired, prepare mixture in advance. Reheat when ready to serve.

ROULADEN

2 lb. top round of beef, thinly sliced
(or 1 flank steak)
4 slices bacon diced
3 dill pickles, sliced lengthwise
1 tsp. mustard
2 or 3 tbsps. flour
2 tbsps. fat
2 cups beef broth

Cut meat into 4 to 6 thinly sliced portions in rectangular shape. Pound each with mallet or edge of plate until thin and all tissues have been broken down. Place bacon, pickle slices and mustard over each. Roll up and dip in flour. Secure each piece of rolled steak with a toothpick. Saute in hot fat. Transfer to a casserole dish. Add remaining flour to pan drippings. Slowly add broth. Simmer till thick. Pour over meat. Cover lightly, simmer 1 1/2 hours or until tender.

One usually thinks of a barber as someone who just cuts or styles hair. Terry Bradshaw, a barber at Sebring Hair Design and Products in Indiana Gardens Shopping Center, does more. He cooks, too. "At home, that is," Terry said with a smile, when asked in a recent interview if he had any special recipes to share.

"My wife is the real cook at our house," Terry said. She works in the Book Department of Hemphill-Wells in the South Plains Mall, he explained, and comes across new recipes often in cookbooks which she sells.

"I don't really have that many recipes to share," Terry apologized. One of his favorite recipes, though, a recipe for sauerkraut, he agreed to share and then suggested we contact his wife for additional recipes. We did as he suggested and are happy to be able to share the following recipes with our Update readers.

SAUERKRAUT

2 cans sauerkraut
1 or 1½ cups of brown sugar
¼ stick margarine

1 pkg. frankfurters
Wash the sauerkraut thoroughly three to four times. Put the sauerkraut in a baking pan and cover with brown sugar, dotted with margarine. (The amount of brown sugar and margarine may be dictated by one's own taste preferences.) Top with sliced frankfurters. Bake 15-20 minutes in a 350 degree oven.

STUFFED PORK CHOPS

6 pork chops
Flour
Salt and pepper (to taste)
¼ cup cooking oil (approximately)
1 large onion
1 large can tomatoes
2 cans tomato sauce
Instant rice
Bell peppers
Salt, pepper and flour pork chops. Fry the chops in a small amount of cooking oil (approximately ¼ cup) in a large pan. Add onion, tomatoes and tomato sauce. Simmer till onions are tender. Add as much instant rice as desired to thicken mixture. Garnish with sliced bell peppers. Cover pan with lid and let mixture cook until peppers are soft.

HOMEMADE CHILI CON QUESO

3 lb. box process cheese
1 small jar picante sauce
3 tbsp. water
Pepper
Cut cheese into chunks and melt. Add sauce and water. Season with pepper according to taste preference. Stir mixture continuously until smooth and ready to serve.

CHEESE POPCORN

Popcorn
Process cheese
Pour melted cheese over popped corn. (Amount of cheese should be determined based on amount of popcorn and taste preference.) Do not butter popcorn. Serve popcorn after pouring melted cheese over it.

Visiting with various shoppers in Furr's Supermarket in the Town and Country Center recently, we met a gentle lady at the meat counter who just "looked like a cook." Introducing ourselves as members of the Update Staff for the Avalanche-Journal, we asked Mrs. Gentry if she perhaps had some recipes to share with our readers.

Smiling, but somewhat astonished (since, as she explained, no one had ever stopped her and asked her for recipes before) she emphasized politely that she really wasn't a cook.

"My husband likes steak and gravy, and we eat a fairly standard American diet," she said. With their son grown and now attending Texas Tech University, there isn't the same need to prepare big meals for just her husband and herself.

Her husband, she noted, keeps busy as owner of Lubbock Brader-Blade Company, and she enjoys gardening. "Eating is just not a main event in our lives," she said.

One recipe she has always favored, however, and taken pride in making is for a rum cake. With a little persuasion, Mrs. Gentry agreed to share it and we are happy to be able to add it to our file of Update recipes.

RUM CAKE

½ cup chopped pecans
1 pkg. yellow cake mix
1 pkg. vanilla instant pudding
½ cup light rum
½ cup water
½ cup salad oil
4 eggs
Grease and flour 10-inch bundt pan. Sprinkle pecans in bottom of pan. Mix cake, rum, vanilla, salad oil, and eggs. Beat two minutes at medium speed. Bake at 325 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes.

recipe special

ROAST LOIN OF PORK WITH PRUNES
Sprinkle a 4 pound boneless loin of pork with salt, pepper and ginger and rub the spices into the meat. Tie the roast at 1-inch intervals with soft twine. Force as many pitted dried prunes as possible into the slits where bones were removed using the fingers if necessary. Put the meat in a roasting pan and roast it, uncovered, in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees), allowing about 40 minutes to the pound, until it is well done. Transfer the meat to a heated platter, remove the string. Strain the pan juices and pour off the clear fat, reserving 2 tbsps. of the fat. Put the reserved fat in the roasting pan, blend in 2 tbsps. flour, and cook the roux over low heat, stirring constantly, until it is lightly browned. Measure the skimmed pan juices and add enough water to make 1 cup liquid. Stir the juices into the roux and add ½ cup sour cream, stirring the cream in carefully from the center of the pan outward. Cook the sauce, without boiling, until it is smooth and thick, remove it from the heat, and add salt and ginger to taste. Add 1 teaspoon red currant jelly, if desired.

Promising signs — pompons and hurrahs!

polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — I always keep a pair of gloves handy in my bedroom and put them on before putting on nylon stockings and this keeps my rough hands from making runs in the hose.
 When I wipe my hands on a paper towel in the kitchen I drop the used towel in a container kept for just that. The crumpled towels are later used to wipe out dirty or greasy pans and dishes so they are ready to be washed. We are now told to save paper and this is one easy way. — MRS. E. A. E.

DEAR POLLY — I like to have fresh parsley to use throughout the winter, but then it is so costly. So I grow my own in the summer. I cut the parsley in my garden and by so doing get three crops a summer. I wash it, put in boiling water, boil for two minutes, drain well, place on a dry towel, press out moisture, place in a plastic bag and freeze. It chops up better when NOT defrosted and retains its green color if well wrapped for the freezer. — OLGA.

DEAR POLLY — This is the season when I get the deep freeze cleaned. I find a quick way to defrost it is to fill my long spouted watering can with hot tap water and pour this slowly down the side of the freezer where the ice is accumulated. The ice absorbs the water and before long I can carefully pry the ice loose with a spatula rather than leaving it all to thaw and then have to mop out so much water at one time. — Kathryn

Church groups active at fair

If you get tired feet and are thirsty at the Panhandle-South Plains Fair, find the "rest stop" booth of the Lubbock District of the United Methodist church, and you will receive a free cup of cool water and a comfortable place to sit down.
 The Methodist booth is one of more than a dozen exhibits and booths manned by churches and religion-related organizations at the fair.
 The exhibits feature attractions ranging from Bible machines and quizzes for both children and adults in the Children's Barnyard to hot dogs and hamburgers at concession booths.
 One church will present a youth choir group singing gospel songs outside the Merchant's Building each night.
 Another church will have puppets performing in a tent location.

Fair shoots for new attendance record

By Gerry Burton
Update Staff Writer

Update photo PAUL MOSELEY

David Merrifield waves to fans from 120 feet above the fair grounds. He performs at 7 and 9 p.m. each day.

Turnstiles are clicking merrily by the tens of thousands each day as the 60th annual Panhandle South Plains Fair shoots for a new record attendance topping the 324,721 record set in 1976.

More family fun than ever before greets fair visitors with a full eight days of judging set to garner a tubful of ribbons for animals, vegetables and anything else created or grown on the South Plains.

Fiddlers kicked off the coliseum entertainment with a free dash of roof-raising country and western sound, launching the week's lineup of the best in the professional country and western field—Charley Pride, Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass, Mel Tillis and Barbara Mandrell.

Closing out the coliseum fare will be another free musical gift from fair directors. Texas Gold, an ensemble from South Plains College, takes the coliseum spotlight Saturday.

Quarter Horses and twirlers close out competition at the fair along with the final round of a three-day all-youth rodeo which gets underway Thursday.

Cattle, sheep, barrows, poultry, pigeons and rabbits are meeting the judges as regularly as fair gates open at 9 a.m. each day.

Free midway entertainment provided by the fair this year includes David Merrifield's helicopter trapeze act and Vandermeide, billed as Europe's fastest hypnotist.

Merrifield performs 120 feet above the fairgrounds at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. while Vandermeide takes over the outdoor stage at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m.

About everything grown on the South Plains is displayed in the agriculture building while the coming things in agri-business cover the grounds in outdoor exhibits.

Cattle judging winds up with milking shorthorns taking the arena today and grand champions in the breeding sheep competition are to be named today.

A cutting horse contest highlights activity in the livestock pavilion at 4:30 p.m. Thursday which also is Senior Citizen Day at the Fair.

Crowds roam the exhibit buildings, checking all the blue ribbon winners in crafts and collectables in the women's building and signing up for all free giveaways in the merchants building.

Show barns attract young and old alike, the young to stand in awe at animals there, the old to remember when farm animals weren't just things to see at the fair for most town folks.

Cotton candy, candied apples, pink lemonade, jumbo hamburgers and foot-long hotdogs provide needed nourishment and fun as visitors head for the rides and booths on the independent midway and inside the big one, the Gene Ledel Million Dollar Midway.

Lubbock churches, clubs and other organizations have permanent buildings at the fair grounds where, each year, they make the bulk of funds for favorite benefits.

More than $60,000 is being distributed in premiums this year for fair exhibitors in the biggest old-fashioned fair to date in Lubbock history.

Coliseum reserve tickets are $6 with general admission tickets $5.

Council to propose rural fire flat fee

The Lubbock City Council this week formally will propose to the county commissioners that emergency rural fire service be provided for at least $62,500 a year.

The flat fee would cover up to 30 calls, with each additional run to cost $1,250, decided council members, who reasoned last week that the city would have to have fire equipment and men ready always whether the county called for help once or a dozen times.

Only if the county paid the "front money," which would not be refundable if fewer than 50 calls were made, could the city provide for the extra burden, council members said.

THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS will not comment on the offer until it is tendered. They had appealed to the city council to draw up a plan for emergency backup service in case of a "holocaust."

The $62,500 figure was named after council members noted that each of 50 calls would cost city taxpayers $1,250. Last year the city and county discontinued their fire service contract after commissioners said they could not pay $1,250 a call.

The city asked for that much, instead of the former $400 a call arrangement, because of higher expenses and insufficient fire department manpower.

Also at Thursday's meeting the two groups named a joint committee to investigate the possible merger of the city and county jails.

BY LATE OCTOBER the committee is expected to recommend the feasibility of combining the jails for increased efficiency.

Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin, City Atty. Fred Senter, Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard and Police Chief J.T. Atley will study ways to accomplish the merger.

At its Oct. 13 meeting the council will consider an ordinance that would stop automatic fuel cost adjustments.

At Carolyn Jordan's urging, the council also decided Thursday to review an ordinance that would bring the city in compliance with a state law requiring monitoring of all contacts by utility company representatives with council officials or city employees.

A $1.1 billion tax roll for fiscal year 1977-78 also was approved. The roll will yield about $500,000 more than first predicted.

MOST OF $543,600 in third-year Community Development (CD) funds will be used to build and equip a new central fire station, the council decided.

About $378,000 will be used for the station, which was to have been built with bond sale proceeds. But the bond sale has been indefinitely postponed because of pending litigation filed by James Marshall.

Also to be funded with the CD money will be preliminary studies for a new day care center in East Lubbock, a home insulation weatherization program for low and moderate income families and an emergency backup power system for the water pump station.

A 90-day moratorium on the issuance of mixed alcoholic beverage zoning certificates also was approved. The delay was requested by the city staff because of pending ordinance amendments that would change beverage permit regulations.

The Planning and Zoning Commission will study the proposals Oct. 6.

kegler's corner

By Walt McAlexander
Update Sports Staff

NOPE. THE PRESSURE didn't get to James King during Oakwood's Moonlight Doubles last Friday. King's name was drawn out of the strike pot and he was able to roll a strike, which netted him $231. This week, the strike pot will start at $231 and a kegler can win half that amount by rolling a strike if his name is drawn.

RICKY FREEMAN posted the week's high series, a 654 accomplished in 231-216-207 fashion, to lead Lubbock Bowl's kegglers. Raul Rocha had a 207-257-624. Homer Stout checked in with a 246-580. Ricky Martin 576, John Witt 575, Robert Terry 579, Bobbie Johnson 221-574, Glenn Meyers 571, Glenn Davis 214-565, Jim Walker 212-563, Bobbie Boy 560, Shirley Odom 555, Wanda Welch 552, Fred Huskey 222-551, Shirley Largent 548, Jesse Valerio 210-545, Robert Turner 220-539, Tony Salanda 233-535, Pearl Shelton 208-535 and Joyce Shue 214-526.

JAMES SNOOK and Mary McElwee took top honors at Imperial Lanes. Snook rolled a 215-208-202-625 and Mrs. McElwee a 236-623.

Junior bowler Rickey McKin had a 202.

Jodie Snook also had a 236 game. Others with top games include: Walter Bumpass 225; Jesse Horton 220-202; Wayne Jones 220; John DeLeon 219; Ray Binder 217; Tommy Snodgrass 214; Barbara Harris her first 200, a 212; Don Wilson 211; Coy Watson, Linda Hobbs, Buddy Jobe, Jack Biddle and Dennis Brossman 210s; Shirley Tracy, Lane Odom and Jim Howell 208s; Bob Rosenbrook and Jack Cook 205s; Freddie Hogan 204; Mingo DeLeon, Louis Hobbs, Parke Neill and Archie Whitaker 203s; Jim Turner, Al Sebesta and Roy Rogers 202s; Duane McBea and Evelyn Perkins 202s; and Rosenbrook, Lloyd Dickson and Dollie Clark 200s.

JOHN GARRETT and Nancy Buffard were Oakwood's headlines. Garrett went 174 pins over his 135 average with a 235-175 and Miss Buffard, a 124 kegler, went 145 pins over her norm with a 226-517.

Sid Babbitt had a 257 game and Benny Bennett a 644 series accomplished in 203-217-233 fashion.

Others cracking the 600 barrier were David Nelson (212-605) and Jerry Cooper (230-602), although Babbitt (596) and Berle Stark (239-594) just missed that plateau.

Roger Fisher had a 223-209-589, Rick Bennett 238-583, Bill Steward 582, Larry Boyd 216-580, Glen Mann 214-576, Frank Hernandez 230-561, C. N. Harrison 200-561, Mike Autrey 210-559, Jerry McNutt 202-558, Carl Curtis 202-552, Mike Cooper 226-550, R.W. Wilson 214-548, Dick Winner 207-547, Leon Anderson 213-543, Phil Landrum a 222-536 that bettered his 141 average by 103 pins, Russ Gest a 534 that topped his 137 norm by 123 pins and Warren Waldrup 222-528.

Beverly Thompson went 113 pins over her 143 average with a 542. Marcellie Farwell posted a 206-525, Tommy Berryhill 215-526, Dot Gordon 203-510, Paula Ream 209-505 and Nita Cook went 121 pins over her 127 norm with a 206-502.

Volleyball team places third

DENTON (Special) - Lisa Love and Connie Pittman both hit eight points each to propel the Texas Tech University women's volleyball team to a 15-11, 13-15, 15-13 win over Texas A&M here Saturday for third place in the North Texas State volleyball tournament.

Earlier Saturday, the Techs were beaten by Southwestern Missouri State in the semifinals 15-6, 9-15, 9-15.

Power and beauty

Both power and beauty highlighted high school football action in Lubbock last week. Left, the Estacado Matadors, paced by a 69-yard scoring run by Kinzey Burrell, almost upset the Monterey Plainsmen. But Monterey battled back and captured a 10-7 victory. Right, Glen-

Monterey edges Estacado 10-7 in tight grid battle

By Tom Halliburton

"When two teams are equal, it always comes down to the kicking game," said Texas A&M coach Emory Ballard after last Saturday's win over Texas Tech. That same statement could have been echoed on the previous night by either Monterey coach James Odom or Estacado coach Louis Kelley. The unbeaten Plainsmen, 3-0-1, needed a 28-yard field goal just before halftime to edge EHS 10-7 in one of the tightest Hub City grid battles of the young season.

The Matadors switched from a splitback formation to an I-formation for the Monterey game. The change worked as tailback Kinzey Burrell scooted around the vacant corners for 175 yards in 26 carries. One 69-yard touchdown scamper by Burrell lifted Estacado up 7-0 after one quarter.

Then Monterey countered with its powerful defense and quarterback Ron Reeves for some key plays. With the aid of five Estacado fumbles, the Plainsmen scored enough in the second quarter for their defense to handle the rest of the work.

Another powerful local unit, Christ King (3-1) carries a three-game winning streak into its district slate, which begins Saturday at Muenster against Tyler Gorman. The Trojans rushed for an impressive 320 yards in last week's 8-0 win at Wilson. Halfback Mark Halsell rushed for 187 yards and turned the complexion of the game around with a 75-yard scoring run.

Another unit with a good long-distance runner is Dunbar (2-1) with swift tailback Kenneth James. The Panther star leads local rushers with 369 yards and local scorers with 25 points. And the senior hopes for a few long journeys this Friday in a vital District 3-AAA opener with arch-rival Estacado (1-3).

Also with 1-3 marks are Coronado and Lubbock Christian followed by Lubbock High (0-3-1).

The Mustangs were knotted 6-6 until the final minute of the first half with unbeaten Tascosa last Thursday in Amarillo. Then the Rebels relied on a 30-yard pass and a 76-yard run for their scores in a 21-6 victory. CHS gets another chance against an Amarillo team when it hosts Palo Duro Thursday night at Lowrey Field.

Lubbock Christian fell victim to a stout Bovina offense which ran for 157 yards and threw for 106 more. The Eagles couldn't stop the running, throwing and kicking of quarterback Ronnie Carley, who had a hand or a leg in all of the Bovina scoring plays.

Lubbock High didn't consider its 14-14 tie a win by any means, but the Westerners certainly won the second half as reserve quarterback Ricky Moreno sparked LHS from a 14-0 halftime deficit. Moreno ran 4 yards for a score to narrow Dunbar's lead to 14-12 with 15 seconds left in the game. Then his two-point pass to Kelly Roberts evened things up on the conversion. The substitute replaced starter Ernest Day, who left the game on the first series with a neck injury.

The Westerners try for their first win Saturday night at Odessa Ector while the Plainsmen entertain Hobbs at the same time in Lowrey Field.

Cher-Shan art gallery opens

Yet another art gallery has opened in Lubbock, the latest being the Cher-Shan Gallery at 2610 Salem in the Cactus Alley shopping mall.

Director Kay Mitchell says the gallery will exhibit original art by local and area artists. Those currently being featured include Virginia Whitten of Big Spring, Peggy Lang of Hereford and Fred Cowart of Lubbock.

Mrs. Whitten has won various merit and purchase awards at art shows in Big Spring, Amarillo, Lubbock, Snyder, Levelland and Midland. She also taught art at Howard College.

Peggy Lang only began painting in 1968 but has had her work displayed in a number of south Texas cities, as well as Fort Worth, San Antonio, Amarillo and Taos. N.M. She has won a number of awards and through one-man shows and gallery displays her paintings now hang in collections in Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and other southwestern states.

Fred Cowart is a Texas Tech University graduate who majored in art history. His ink graphics are described as very unusual.

It never was acknowledged publicly, but when William McKinley became the 25th President of the United States in 1897 his wife had been a victim of epilepsy for 25 years.

During White House dinners President McKinley always kept a handkerchief at the ready in case his wife should have a seizure. When she did, he would carefully place it over her face and explain to guests that she had suffered a "fainting spell."

In Buffalo, in 1901, when McKinley was mortally wounded by Leon Czolgosz, legend has it that his first words were: "My wife, be careful how you tell her, oh, be careful!"

The Epilepsy Foundation of America reports that many famous people down through history are thought to have suffered from epileptic seizures, including Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, St. Paul, Buddha, Napoleon, Socrates, Tchaikovsky and Alfred Nobel.

The Commission for the Control of Epilepsy and its consequences — which recently published the results of a two-year study in the United States — reports there are more than 2 million American victims.

Epilepsy takes many forms, it is not a single disease or condition. In fact, it is not a disease at all, but a symptom of some other problem. Sometimes the problem cannot be identified, but many times it can — a brain tumor or a head injury.

Automobile accidents alone, according to statistics in the commission's report, result in one new victim of epilepsy every 26 minutes.

This is one reason I have testified and debated in the Senate in favor of a requirement by the Department of Transportation that air bags or other passive restraint systems be installed in all new cars by 1983.

Every year 540,000 Americans receive serious head injuries in auto accidents, and some 20,000 of that number eventually will suffer from epilepsy.

The Department of Transportation estimates that passive restraints can save as many as 9,100 lives each year and can prevent as many as 65,000 serious injuries.

As chairman of the Senate subcommittee on transportation, I find those figures extraordinarily persuasive.

It is argued that the requirement for these passive restraint systems will add to inflation by driving up the cost of new automobiles. But the evidence shows that higher costs for new automobiles will be more than offset by lower costs for automobile insurance.

According to Transportation Department projections it would cost $112 to install an air bag in a new auto and $25-$50 for passive shoulder belts. However, reduced liability insurance claims can be expected to lower auto insurance costs by about $30 a year for each motorist, for a savings of $120 over a four-year period.

I am not persuaded, either, by arguments that the passive restraint requirement is an improper area for government involvement. The decision was made years ago that it is appropriate to require automobile manufacturers to adhere to certain minimum safety features for the protection of drivers and passengers.

Existing federal passenger protection standards include shatter-proof windshields, padded dashboards, head restraints, safety bumpers, door lock standards, impact protection for steering wheels, fuel system integrity standards and roof and side door strength standards.

Every one of us who drives or rides in an automobile, every time we go onto the road, faces the risk of death or an injury that could result in epilepsy or some other crippling medical problem.

It is only fitting and proper that we work to reduce that risk.

duce the attic temperature greatly and reduce your energy loss.

If you have a faucet leaking one drop per second, you can waste 650 gallons in a year. Usually, a new washer is all that is needed to stop the leak.

Fluorescent lighting is far more efficient than incandescent lighting. You can save 75% on your lighting power consumption by converting to fluorescent lights wherever possible. Light colored walls and draperies do a better job of reflecting light, and clean fixtures and lamps deliver more light per watt.

Drapes are not only decorative, but serve as insulators to prevent temperature changes caused by window exposure. In the summer, closing the drapes can reduce heat from the sun by 50%, while leaving the drapes open in the winter lets in heat from the sun, but if they are left open at night, 30% heat loss can result.

Your thermostat funnels the majority of energy into your home. For every degree you dial down your thermostat below 70 degrees, you should save 2% to 3% on your heating bill. In the summer, 78 degrees should be an adequate inside temperature. Also, a dirty filter makes your unit work harder to circulate the air.

Installing storm windows can provide a 22% savings by cutting down the amount of heated and cooled air lost through windows. And don't overlook the damper on your fireplace. Keep the damper closed until you are ready to light a fire and prevent 20% of your warm air from escaping. Even your landscaping can be energy efficient. Leaf-shedding trees on the south, east and west sides of your home help shade the sun's heat in the summer and allow heat from the sun's rays to enter through the windows in the winter after the leaves have fallen.

Higher energy costs are forcing the prospective homebuyer to investigate the total living expenses of the property he is considering. When you list your property for sale, emphasize the energy conservation features and prepare for the question, "May I see the utility bills?"

Geosciences unit names chairman

David K. Davies has been named chairman of the Department of Geosciences at Texas Tech University.

Davies served as a professor of geosciences at the University of Missouri at Columbia before accepting the position at Texas Tech.

Davies said he plans a series of lectures in the U.S. and Canada, which he hopes will strengthen the department's contacts.

Davies was a Fulbright Scholar at Louisiana State University and received the "Purple Chalk Award" for excellence in science teaching at the University of Missouri.

Real estate classes set in Lubbock

Don Harris, president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors, has announced that the board and the Texas Association of Realtors will conduct a Texas Realtors Institute Course I Oct. 31-Nov. 4, and Course II Oct. 17-21, in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

"The Institute curriculum will take the student from the most basic real estate matters to the more advanced," Harris explained. The institute is expected to attract students who are looking over the field of real estate as a possible career and those already in the profession interested in meeting the requirements of the 1975 Texas Real Estate License Act.

Harris said that Course I "generally covers professional standards, law, appraisal, marketing, finance and closing, and construction. This course can be used to help meet the salesman license requirements, in other words, it is a beginning."

Bill Stinson, education committee chairman for the board here said that the faculty for the program will be led by Dan Baker of San Antonio. Others on the faculty will be Brownie Brownlee, Tom Sawyer, H.P. Hawkins, Benny McMahon, and Ken Flagg. All the faculty was chosen for and ability to project the subject in a clear, comprehensive manner, and approved by the Texas Real Estate Commission, he said.

Taking and completing Course I, II, and III examinations with satisfactory grades enables the student to earn the designation of GRI (Graduate of Realtors Institute). The designation is given by the National Association of Realtors.

Cost of the Institute will be $125 for members of TAR and $150 for all others, with both categories due a $25 discount if registering at least 10 days prior to the start of the courses. All inquiries should be sent to John Brummel, director of education, Lubbock Board of Realtors, 795-9533.

Literature talks begin today

Mrs. Eleanor Kline will begin her 10th year of "Conversations On Contemporary Literature" at 10 a.m. today in the Community Room of the Mahon Library.

The series of talks involves an informal group which meets monthly to exchange thoughts on current literature, though not necessarily best sellers. Attendance is open to the public at no charge; active participation is optional.

Mrs. Kline will comment on such books as Jane Gilmore Rushing's "The Raincrow," John MacDonald's "Condominium," Chaim Grade's "Yeshiva," Susan Howatch's "The Rich Are Different," William Safire's "Full Disclosure" and John Cheever's "Falconer."

The second meeting is slated for 10 a.m. Oct. 26 at the same location.

'Colorama Days' scheduled here

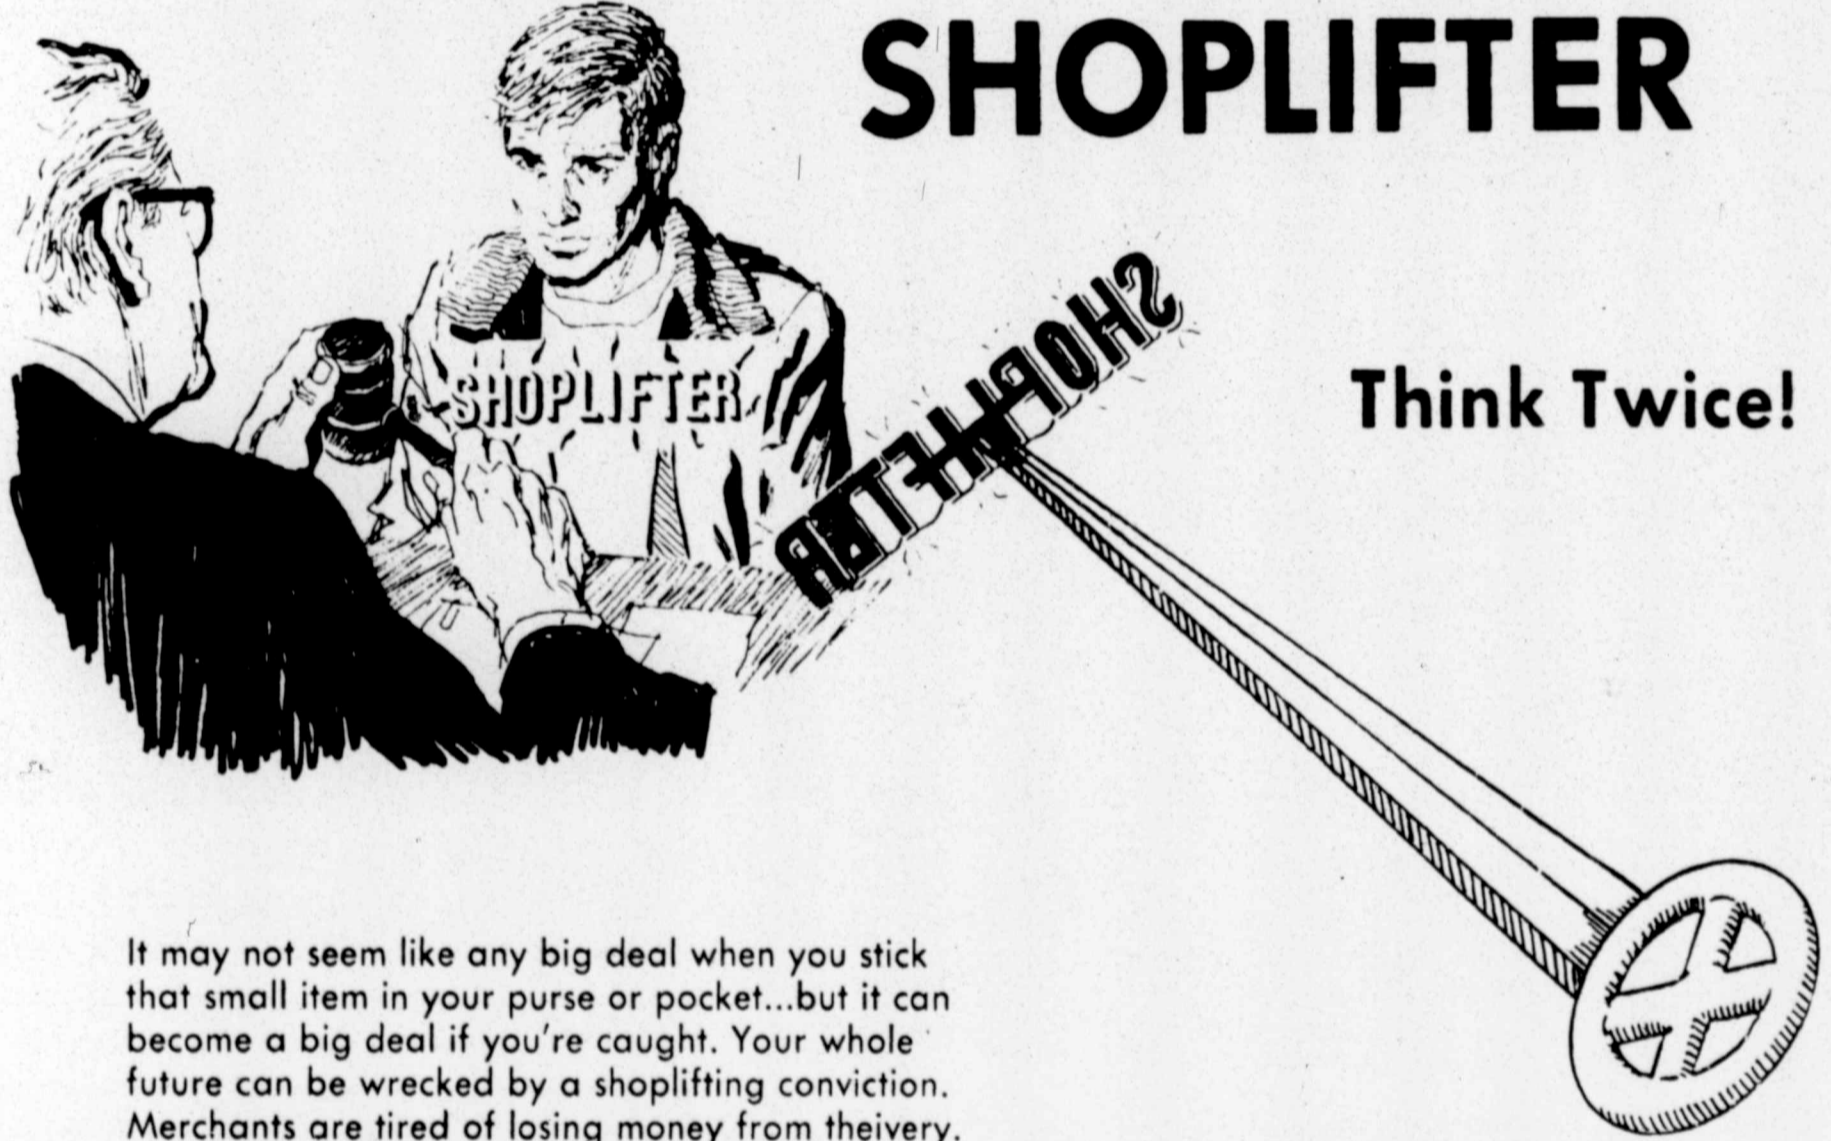

"Chrysanthemum Colorama Days" are just around the corner in Lubbock. The colorama committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce has designated Oct. 9 to 23 for the promotion here.

Held during chrysanthemum blooming time, Colorama Days will promote the floral beauty as a tourist attraction for the city.

An art exhibit at Lubbock International Airport is scheduled during the promotion.

In the late-1920s, Lubbock had eight railroad outlets, seven bus outlets and seven highway outlets. In 1928 another spoke in the transportation wheel was added with the completion of the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad connecting the city with the Santa Fe and Burlington systems.

Don't Be Branded A SHOPLIFTER

Think Twice!

It may not seem like any big deal when you stick that small item in your purse or pocket...but it can become a big deal if you're caught. Your whole future can be wrecked by a shoplifting conviction. Merchants are tired of losing money from theft. Even small items add to millions of dollars a year, so they will prosecute for even minor thefts. Think about it and remember...DON'T GET BRANDED!

The King is back

Practically every city in the nation has succumbed to audience demand and returned Elvis Presley movies back to the wide screen. The Fox Fourplex in Lubbock made two prior announcements of Presley film bookings, but both were cancelled. Now manager Harold Lieck says he has lined up a definite double bill, starting Friday. The first picture is "Double Trouble." The second bill is the documentary "Elvis, That's The Way It Is." The photograph is from "Double Trouble." Call the Fox Fourplex for times and prices.

'One on One' film star has trouble with fans

STAR WATCH Associated Press

NEW YORK — He is currently starring in "One on One," a film he co-authored about the evils of college sports. He is also rehearsing his first Broadway lead in the upcoming musical "King of Hearts," about an adolescent's rebellion against the insanity of the world. And he has learned to handle hecklers in nightclub appearances as a singer.

But 21-year-old Robby Benson, who began his stage career at age 5 and starred in his first film ("Jory," a western) at 15, still feels the hurt that comes after confrontations with fans who recognize him on the street.

"If they're nice about it, it's good — I've given some kind of pleasure and that's great, 'cause that's what I do," said Benson in an interview. "Most people are very cruel, maybe if they read this they'll understand I don't know if they get defensive, if they're really nice people, but they come up to you and say the meanest things."

"I've had people almost attack me because their girlfriends like me. Or someone will say, 'Aren't you? Right, you're that kid.' And they'll say you look better on screen than you do in person."

Benson's adolescent appearance makes him perfect for the role of Henry Steele, the hero of "One on One," a naive, small-town Colorado boy who arrives in Los Angeles in a new, red sports car, courtesy of the athletic department at fictitious Western University.

Henry soon discovers the fringe benefits of his athletic scholarship. They include a do-nothing but lucrative part-time job and his academic tutor (Anette O'Toole), a senior who welcomes him with biting sarcasm but eventually has an affair with him.

Benson, who is 5-foot-10 and was captain of his varsity team at Lincoln Square Academy in New York, does all his own basketball scenes in the film.

Benson says he's finished with school, "not with schooling, but with school."

"If I wanted to learn something, I would try to read about it, research it on my own. I don't think I'd be very good at learning in college," said Benson, who wrote the script for "One on One" with his father, Jerry Segal. Segal came up with the story idea and they collaborated on the screenplay.

"We locked ourselves in a motel room and didn't come out for a week. We were really havin' a good time even though it was really hard work."

"It's a collaboration, nobody came up with more or less," Benson said of the script. "We've worked together ever since I was little."

"LIFE IS A HOUSE which we all burgle. We enter it uninvited, take all we can lay our hands on and then go out again," wrote P. G. Wodehouse.

Now speaking of life, you Mary Hartman fans take note. Tom Hartman, on TV's silliest series upcoming—"Forever Fernwood"—will have a new romance named Eleanor, to be played by actress Shelley Fabares (in real life, Mrs. Lou Adler, wife of the record tycoon). Shelley is going to be a tennis player who trips over her shoestring and ends up in a wheelchair.

But what you would never have known about before is how "Forever Fernwood" had an episode scripted to dispose of the problem of the missing character of Mary Hartman. Only now we'll never see this scene.

It had Tom going into Mary's abandoned room and feeling so bad that he threw himself out the window in despair. In so doing, Tom was to fall on top of his repentant returning wife, Mary, thereby killing her for good and all, slamming the door on any possibility of a return of Mary to the series. The cast and crew literally cheered when told of this episode.

But cooler heads prevailed. It was junked. Norman Lear thus left the door ajar for Mary Hartman—like General MacArthur—to return. Whether she ever will or not, only Louise Lasser knows.

'Peyton Place' back in new TV movie

TUBE TALK Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Television has reached an age where it wants to go back and relive its past.

NBC looked at its first 50 years. Charles Kuralt toured the nostalgic early days for CBS. Lucille Ball and Bob Hope revived old skits. "Dobie Gillis" tried to update his show, to indifferent results.

"Father Knows Best" had better luck and a second sequel is in the works. "Laugh-In" is back and "Star Trek" is heading into production. The Brady Bunch came back and the Addams Family is coming back.

Now comes a revisit to "Peyton Place," and, as you might guess, things are still not going smoothly in that hotbed of passion. It's called "Murder in Peyton Place" and will be seen at 8 p.m. CDT Monday on NBC.

Five of the original major cast members are back for the reunion. Two others who went from "Peyton Place" to movie stardom are also back, in a manner of speaking.

Ryan O'Neal, who was Rodney Harrington, and Mia Farrow, who was Allison McKenzie, are there in body if not in spirit. It is the murders of Rodney and Allison that is the occasion for the movie.

Christopher Connelly is back as Norman Harrington, Rodney's brother. Dorothy Malone as Constance McKenzie, Allison's mother, Ed Nelson as Dr. Michael Rossi, Tim O'Connor as Elliot, and Joyce Jillson as Jill.

The producers felt it would be a waste of time to ask O'Neal or Mia Farrow to the reunion. Lee Grant and James Douglas had other commitments and Barbara Parkins declined.

Connelly admits he wasn't happy about returning to Peyton Place, but, as often happens to an actor, he was otherwise unoccupied.

"It was like going back while everyone else was moving on," he said. "Like Ryan and Mia and Lee. It was like going back and doing your first job over again."

"But I wasn't busy. It can only really do me good, which it has."

Connelly said that while making the movie he made contacts that landed him the role of Mark Twain in another NBC movie. It's "The Incredible Race," and in it he and Forrest Tucker are pitted against each other in a race from St. Joseph, Mo., to the Pacific Ocean.

Nor was he overjoyed about reviving the character of Norman, who began "Peyton Place" as a "misguided youth" and ended it "happily married at the age of 19."

"Peyton Place" ran for 514 half-hour episodes on ABC between September 1964 and June 1969. For a time it was on twice a week and then later three times a week in prime time.

The series was adapted from the 1956 novel by Grace Metalious and two movies. At the time it was on the air it was regarded as "controversial." Read that sexy. By today's standards it would be considered tame, if ABC's new series "Soap" is any comparison.

The plot of "Murder in Peyton Place" finds Rodney and Allison dead under mysterious circumstances. Apparently they were done in by a multi-millionaire after they discovered his plans to take over the town.

"We all play detective and ask a lot of questions," said Connelly, now wearing a moustache for his Mark Twain role.

"The really strange thing was sitting around the set with the other original cast members and trying to figure out who was who. Trying to remember what character was married to who, who was the father. It became hysterical."

Adding to the confusion, he said, was the fact a few lesser-known members of the original cast now appear in other roles. For instance, Kimberly Beck, who was a deaf mute in the original, now plays a promiscuous high school senior.

"Peyton Place" was the second series for Connelly, now 35. Before that he had a recurring role as a Marine recruit in "The Lieutenant." He said, "I was the kid who came in and saluted."

"But I finally worked up to being a guest star on one show."

For that one, about a drill instructor, he was still the awkward recruit. He said, "They actually put us through boot camp for two weeks."

Connelly also starred in "Paper Moon," the TV series made from the hit movie that starred, incidentally, Ryan O'Neal. Jody Foster played Addie, the role which won Tatum O'Neal an Academy Award as best supporting actress. The series lasted only half a season on ABC.

Connelly has devoted most of his time to guest star roles on TV and to parts in such films as "They Only Kill Their Masters," "Benji" and "Hawmps."

But I doubt it.

THIS ONE'S FOR YOU REX, as Louis Armstrong said in saluting King George V. Well, this one's for the other king, Rex Harrison. He is up to his old tricks in London and even his closest friends don't seem to have caught onto the gag yet.

Rex, getting ready to go out to India to make a movie "Shalimar," has been putting up at the Savoy, registered as Mr. and Mrs., with a beautiful brunette who speaks perfect French, is widowed or divorced, said to be very rich and obviously someone he met in the South of France.

Who is this mystery beauty? Rex introduces her as Mercier Tinker and in London people buy that. But do they know it's the same name he used when in New York doing "Caesar and Cleopatra"? Only that time, Mercier Tinker was a blond — the ex-Mrs. Harrison, Elizabeth Harrison.

Mercier Tinker is just a name Rexy fields whenever he doesn't want anyone to know who he is really with. And like Greta Garbo's Harriet Brown, this joke has probably outlived its usefulness.

TRES CHER: Now they are saying that Cher's original nine-hour surgery in New York was, as previously stated, for extra bosom work and some work on her chin. But she is kind of annoyed at reports elsewhere that she emerged from the hospital swaddled in bandages and says that the tizzies made about the whole deal was out of proportion to the reality.

She says she isn't to do the Don Kirshner rock concert.

ENDOQUOTE: Julie Andrews was interviewed by a journalist from England's Woman magazine, who asked whether she thought that 10 years from now, her songs would be prized as High Camp. The star of "Mary Poppins" looked perplexed and inquired coldly: "What is High Camp?"

UM WAS FIREMAN WAS JUST ANOTHER BROWN-CROWN PITCHER WHEN I INVITED HIM TO STAY AT HOOPLE MANOR. AFTER I GOT HIM INTO SHAPE WITH THE HOOPLE TRAINING METHOD, I LOOKED FOR A SELLING POINT.

I PRESUME YOU'VE READ OF HIS BUNTLESS ROAD TO WEALTH?

HOOPLE CLAIMS INVENTION OF EVERY THING BUT CRABS.

LISTEN TO HIM LONG ENOUGH AND YOU GO THE WRONG WAY ON THE SOUNDING THE ALARMS.
