U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward is not expected to give final approval to Lubbock's proposed new school integration plan until later this month. But on the basis of Woodward's tentative okay last week, parents have a good idea how the plan will affect at least grades three through six.

NOW THAT the grim statistics are in, the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration is ranking the winter of 1977-78 for most of the country as the most frigid ever in the 100 years of official weather-record keeping.

The good news is that this particular one for the books is behind us. The bad news is that there may be more, and possibly worse,

Some weather experts are predicting that the world is entering a prolonged period of severe weather after a number of years of comparatively balmy worldwide conditions.

UNIVERSITY OF Wisconsin professor Reid Bryson, for example, believes the weather patterns of the past few years will hold for the Northern Hemisphere in particular for at least the next five years.

That would mean, of course, more very cold winters plus hot summers and droughts endangering crops in the American Pacific Coast, Midwest and Southeast.

Bryson's forbidding report is the product of his experiments with a new forecasting system, an activity in which he has plenty of expert company.

Satellites (currently three) have kept an orbital eye on earth's weather patterns for the past decade or so, but have lacked the precision of instrumentation and accuracy to much more than supplement weather balloon readings.

SOME ASSESSED CHARLES WAS ASSESSED.

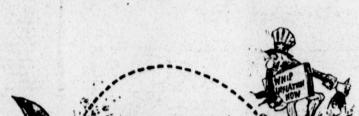

During the next decade, however, four new and greatly improved satellites will go into service with the potential capability of replacing the balloons.

Radar is also being refined as a weather tool, to measure winds and to warn of developing crisis situations such as tornadoes and IMPROVED forecasting of the weather still doesn't mean being able to do anything about it. That may remain for a long time -or forever-beyond man's capabilities

But the capability to forewarn of impending weather-related perils-whether in terms of hours or minutes, in the case of floods and high winds, or months and years when dealing with droughts and killer winters-still represents a considerable measure of progress.

It will enable man to do much more about his preparation for the weather, with the benefits ultimately to be measured in hu-

Bass' sense of humor sees him through as mayor

By Paula Tilker date Staff Writer

Wave after wave of enthusiastic applause reverberated in the city council chambers, rising noisily above the standing-room-only crowd and prompting a beaming smile from the man being ho-

It was the last official tribute to Roy Bass, paid only minutes before he for-mally resigned as Lubbock's mayor, a position he held for four years.

Typically, and in his best emcee form, Bass laced his farewell remarks with sprinkles of broad humor. As is often the case with his constant jests, Bass' remarks were not notably quotable but they were neatly delivered verbal sallies that kept the audience chuckling.

Bass cannot resist injecting a humorous note in any viewpoint he expresses or occasion over which he presides. The bantering witticisms and hearty belly laugh are Bass trademarks that livened council meetings, grand opening ceremonies and interviews.

Over the years, he scored his most telling sallies against the federal bureaucracy. Before his successor, Dirk West, was sworn in last week, Bass warned the assembled council members and audience that the city needs to retain an "independent spirit and rassle with the federal government" as the need arises.

In an earlier interview with Update, Bass was asked whether his four years in office had destroyed prior illusions.

Rocking back comfortably in the chair in his City Hall office, feet propped on the uncluttered desk, he sipped from a soft drink bottle and thoughtfully considered the question.

"No," he said, pausing before slowly adding with fervent conviction, "Except that I did find the federal government is in a more idiotic state than I had

He likened the federal government to

"It's got no body for a fella to kick and no soul for God to damn and sometimes it's hard to see," he said.

His views on the federal government are unequivocal and legendary in Lub-

"The federal government just can't insulate everyone from all risks of life. A government that is big enough to do that is big enough to crush you and me like

His warning continued. "We're letting it happen to us. It's slowly destroying the backbone of this country. I believe it's a terrible price to pay for short-term benefits. Being mayor was a mixture of fun and weighty responsibilities, Bass said. On one side of the coin, he explained, he found a "great deal of pleasure in meeting and greeting and shaking hands with the great and near great and those that think they're great and those that want to be great." To temper the pleasures were the responsibilities, Bass said. He received surprisingly few midnight calls from drunks and others," he said. But he felt the weight of office often, especially at budget time because "you know there's never enough money to go

One of his biggest frustrations while in office, Bass said, was that he noted "so many things that we could if we had

For example, he said, he believes the city government, working through the parks and recreation department and through the Civic Centers Board, could promote the "quality of life" here - if there was enough money.

And, he said, he wishes more money couldspent on zoning code enforcements and housing rehabilitation. "It's easy to say spend the money, but it's awfully hard with the money available," he said.

But for all the problems, he added, Lubbock is well off. "We've got here in Lubbock the gravy train with the biscuit wheels," he quipped.

Bass pledged his services to the city if the council should ever call on him. And he plans to remain active in civic affairs by chairing the Arts Festival Committee. The group is organizing an arts festival to be held next spring.

Bass could name only one regret about leaving office. "I'll miss the parking spaces at City Hall," he joked.

QUESTION: How many languages are spoken in the world today?

ANSWER: People who study languages estimate that there are well over 3,-000 different spoken languages in the world today. Many of these languages are spoken by only a few hundred or thousand people, but there are more than a hundred languages with a million or more speakers each.

Over 60 percent of the world's population speak one of the 13 major languages. English reaches into almost every corner of the world and is spoken by over 250 million, Spanish by 140 million, Russian by 130 million. The five other major languages are Arabic, Bangali, Portuguese, French and Italian.

In their studies, linguists have found that most European languages and some in Asia grew from a common tongue. Linguists think that the European family of languages began in the grasslands of Asia. As people moved east and west and further apart, their speech became different. This theory is further supported by the fact that the root of many worrds is similar in several languages. For example, mother is "mutter" in German, "mater" in Latin, 'meter" in Greek, "mater" in old Persian, "muscar" in Central Asia, and 'mata' in Sanskrit.

Bristol Myers was liked because of the growth in both its consumer and ethical drug divisions. The company makes such well-known products as Clairol, Bufferin and Excedrin, as well as ethical drugs.

Squibb and Schering Plough were not rated a highly as others because their earnings have not risen as rapidly as expected Smith Kline, on the other hand, was seen as having excellent prospects for long-term growth because of its new anti-ulcer drug, Tegament. The company also manufactures Contac, the leading over-the-courser cold remedy.

In summary, analysts said that the rate of earnings growth was slowing in the pharmaceutical industry because of government regulations and the high cost of new product introductions. On the other hand, the industry stocks appear to be stable in price and analysts seem to expect that fluctuations for most companies will not exceed 15 percent. Warner Lambert had the highest expectation of rise in the next six months, 22 percent, and Smith Kline was most often mentioned as having potential for a long term rise. Result of the Survey Dermatologists here, all of whom preferred not to be identified, stressed measures guarding against sunburns. They did not share, nor appreciate, the common want for that rich, golden tan.

Doctors said persons getting set for their yearly sunbathing should buy a lotion with para amino benzoic acid (paba) - the best chemical agent for blocking out the sun's ultra violet rays. Another good ingredient to look for is benzophen-

Many lotions don't give a long-lasting protection because they are easily washed off once the sunbather - or person working outside in the sun - begins to perspire or takes a dunk in the pool.

One dermatologist pushed a sun screen labeled "Sundown," made by Johnson & Johnson, which he says gives long-lasting protection and will not come off except with soap and water.

Most of the popular brands of tanning lotion also carry an agent which will protect against skin burns. But skin specialists don't believe the lotion ads promising a quick tan. They say the oils do nothing more than lubricate the skin and will help prevent against peeling.

Skin specialists said people are wasting their time when they try to promote a tan by spreading on a mixture of iodine and baby oil. All that recipe does is stain the

Roy Smith — convention director

By Frank Coats Update Staff Writer

The room used for the interview was a large, expansive one somewhere deep inside the Civic Center. The office of the new director of the Visitors and Convention Bureau still showed his newness to the job; boxes and papers piled up in the office he was still trying to move into.

"Is this all right?" Roy Smith asked. He seemed a little nervous; he hadn't had a long interview with anyone from the press since he assumed the duties March 1.

And, he kept saying, he kept getting off the subject. "I know this is off the subject," he said, "but I've noticed you're wearing

The reporter hastily explained how he had been trapped in the mud in the one mud-hole in Lubbock, and how the mud had nearly ruined his boots.

'No, no, I run, too," he said. Smith then started talking about his own running, how He'd been running regularly and dropped 30 pounds.

'I ran in a marathon Dec. 17," he said. "I didn't finish (a marathon is 26 miles, 385 yards) but I went 17 miles and I was proud of that.

He talked more about running, about the benefits and so on, and the ice, the nervousness melted away.

Roy Smith, a youngish-looking 28, is now in charge of one of the underrated but important jobs in a growing Lubbock: bringing conventions to the city. Conventions bring in money, and require little spending on the part of the

Conventioneering is really an industry; one that has no pollution and one

ROY SMITH

In 1978, according to the Convention and Tourism figures, there will be 107 conventions booked into the city with a total of 102,505 delegates

The economic impact of these delegates will be $82,239,505.37, according to the formula used to figure such things.

Smith moved here from Huntsville, Ala., after working as a sales manager for the Huntsville Convention and Tourism Bureau. He's been quite happy with the place so far, he says.

"People out here are absolutely, incredibly cordial and hospitable," he said.

"They go out of their way to do anything for you." The change still wasn't easy for him; it took a while for him to adjust to the new environment. "The geographic change was incredible," he said. "I came from an area with beautiful trees and lakes... He also was surprised at "the utter vastness of Texas." He has to do a lot of business in Austin, and when he got here he asked how far away it was; "400 miles down the road" surprised him. Everyone out here, he said, measures how far away a place is by air time how long it takes to fly there.

"But there are outstanding convention facilities," he said, citing hotels and

"The Lubbock International Airport is a marvelous facility...definitely a plus for bringing conventions here.'

Americans are traveling more now, and conventions and tourism have become the number one national industry, he said. On the local level, last year the Convention and Tourism Bureau, under the direction of Lew Mullins, worked with a budget of about $100,000 and brought in conventions "which generated millions and millions of dollars," he said. "A corporate manager would love to get that kind of return," he said. One reason for Lubbock's success, Smith said, is that Lubbock is still a growing city which appreciates conventions. "Other cities expect them and take them for granted," but Lubbock is still grateful for them and hustles a little bit more.

He's going soon to a "Discover Texas" meeting of convention bureau directors who are planning to cash in on the fascination with Texas of those on the East Coast and Europeans.

"These people are fascinated by the mystique of the cowboy thing," he said. Naturally, as a new man, he has plans for his job with several ideas for building up the bureau. He's going to try to go after more of the agribusiness conventions because of the large groups of farmers in the area who would attend. He also wants to work on taking more advantage of Texas Tech, bringing more seminars and other types of convention possibilties inherent in a major

But perhaps his most ambitious plan is to attain a full, professional membership in the International Association of Convention and Visitors Bureaus (IACVB). The local bureau now has only an affiliate membership, which means it does not get any information about the conventions going on nation-

Such information, he says, could help them get more and bigger conven-

To qualify for the full, professional membership, the Lubbock bureau must bring in at least 15 mobile conventions — conventions which meet in a different state each year - annually.

Another goal, perhaps as important and just as difficult and ambitious, is to achieve recogniton in the city; to let other Lubbockites know what the bureau

"We want people to know how we fit into the big picture of Lubbock and what is good for Lubbock," he said.

"We want to get a better line of communications with the other agencies in the area," he said

He's lively, nearly animated in fact, and has the enthusiasm of both youth and the natural enthusiasm inherent in a new job. His wife, Anne, is still in Alabama working as a teacher. She wanted to fulfill her requirements and finish the year before moving out here. With her is their son; Tadd, who will be five years old in May. After the interview was over he went back to his office and worked a little more on unpacking.

Traffic Update: 19th gets new look

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is presented by the Lubbock Citizens Traffic Commission in cooperation with Update to help keep local motorists better informed on traffic-related matters.)

NINETEENTH STREET, from Raleigh Avenue to the Brownfield Highway-Tech Freeway intersection, is getting a new look, according to James King, Texas Highway Department engineer. That portion of 19th Street is being reconstructed and widened to 86 feet. When completed, there will be six lanes, with a continuous two-way left turn lane.

When the widening portion of the project is finished, the intersection of the Brownfield Highway-Tech Freeway-19th Street, will be resurfaced.

OUR TRAFFIC ACCIDENT TALLY this month reveals good news and bad news. The good news is that we had fewer accidents this month than we had in February, and we have had fewer accidents with injuries and fewer fatalities than we had at this time last year.

However, the bad news is that we recorded four traffic-related fatalities in

IF WEIGHT IS A PROBLEM - Rita Pence of the Diet Center for details regarding a great dieting program."

Diet Center, In Terrace Location, Tells 'How To Win At Losing Game'

Take it from folks who know:

"Happiness is a counselor who really cares; she's been there!"

So . . . meet Rita Pence, counselor and owner of the already-acclaimed Diet Center, Terrace Center in Lubbock (in Suite 306, 4902 34th St.).

Rita, a lifelong Lubbock resident, points out that the Diet Center she heads was established here in early January, with purpose of helping people lose weight quickly, stabilize their weight at the desired goal and to teach them how to maintain this weight loss.

Response has been most heartwarming, as dozens have benefitted in the short weeks since the firm's founding.

Rita is the daughter of Lubbock businessman Jack Ridpath who is a partner in the firm. A graduate of Lubbock High School in 1969, Rita attended college in Rexburg, Idaho, and while there became acquainted with the revolutionary but very practical Diet Center program that actually was initiated in Rexburg. "With a weight problem myself, I tried several methods, only to be disillusioned or disappointed . . . until I learned of the Diet Center plan which I heartily recommend from first-hand experience."

What better testimonial or recommendation could be given?

Rita Pence followed through by taking extensive training in the Diet Center home office in Rexburg, and she returned to Lubbock to establish her own center and to assist a rapidly expanding clientele here.

(Find out for yourself how Rita Pence and the Diet Center at 4902 34th St. can help you, too, to win at the losing game. Multiple-length programs are available, and there is no obligation to full inquiry Come by the Terrace suite or call 793-5211 for appointment at earliest convenience; it could open a whole new world for you as it has others.)

'It Works' Why is the Diet Center so successful, aside from Rita's own knowledge and interest? It is because the diets work!

"Our diets are especially designed for a sensible weight loss. A carefully planned combination of protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins goes into our diets. Thus, they are not fad diets, and are designed to establish and maintain good eating habits."

A four-phase program is involved:

(1) The conditioning diet helps prepare the dieter for the reducing diet.

(2) On the reducing diet, trained counselors see you on a daily basis, checking the food intake each day, the weight loss being recorded and graphed.

(3) The stabilization diet consists of a high protein diet designed to stabilize your new weight, and counseling is continued twice weekly for three weeks.

(4) Then, a maintenance program involves weekly weigh-in classes instructing regarding nutrition, exercise, relaxing, buying and storing foods.

'Feel Good While Dieting' How long does it take to lose weight at the Diet Center, 4902 34th St.?

This, of course, mainly depends on the extent of one's weight problem. On the average, one can expect to lose six to 10 pounds in two weeks, 11 to 15 pounds in 25 days, and 17 to even 30 pounds in six weeks! This is for women; men average one pound per day. "If you recognize that happiness is feeling good while dieting, then by all means make the initial step now of getting full details from Rita Pence, a counselor who really cares, at the west-Lubbock Diet Center, 4902 34th Street, Suite 306, in the Terrace Center, phone 793-5211."

Brother role rewarding

During the work day Lt. Donald G. Barton teaches men to fly at Reese Air Force Base. It's rewarding.

After hours, sometimes five hours a week, he shows a Lubbock youngster how it is to have a big brother to do things with. It, too, is rewarding, extremely so.

"It's just you and the little brother get ting together and doing something. It gives him an outlet away from home which is very much needed when there is not a father in the home "We've done some golfing, some bowling and we'll be getting into some photography," Barton said of his spare time spent with a Lubbock boy.

Barton, who hasn't been a Big Brother very long, is one of about half a dozen Reese persons involved in Big Brothers. Big Sisters of Lubbock activities

Big and little brothers fill out cards noting favorite subjects and activities with persons of like interests paired off to share three to five hours a week in some

In addition the organization plans one group activity a month for all.

This month Barton was the host for a tour of Reese where big and little Brothers and Sisters thoroughly enjoyed a close look at the firefighting operations, the new instrument flight simulator and the aerospace physiological segment of the base before winding up at the officers club to top off the evening

The group was the 21st this year to take advantage of tours at Reese. So far, 575 persons have made the Reese tour scene

As of Wednesday, the season's last episode of this smash series was still incomplete and Shaun, who was committed to a concert in Birmingham, Ala. on Thursday, just left the set.

Naturally, now the lawyers have gotten into it, as well as Shaun's fearless manager, Ruth Aarons. (Those lawyers better watch it; Aarons was once the table tennis champ of the United States, and she can still beat most comers, even playing the game sitting on the floor.)

When Ruth and the lawyers finish their various lobs and smashes, something will surely be arranged so that Shaun can finish that last episode. Unlike the old days of movie serials, TV doesn't like cliff-

City teacher presented top award

By Jeff South Update Staff Writer

Gerald Judd has long helped his students at Bayless Elementary School feel good about themselves. This month the pupils, staff and Instructor magazine returned the favor.

In ceremonies at Bayless last week, Judd was presented Instructor's prestigious "Teacher Plus" award, an honor given annually to only nine educators selected from throughout the United States and Canada.

A profile on the Bayless first-grade teacher appears in the April issue of Instructor, a nationally circulated journal read by more than 1 million elementaryschool educators.

With the award presentation were testimonials by Judd's faculty colleagues and students, past and present.

"One of the most important things I remember about Mr. Judd is that he gave us PMA — positive mental attitude. We learned to have confidence in ourselves and believe in ourselves," Gina Webster, a Bayless graduate now attending Atkins Junior High, told the hundreds of parents and teachers gathered for the ceremony. Added another former student, Darinda Darr: "He's the greatest!" Not that Judd particularly needed all this ego-building. He practices what he preaches his students - the value of positive thinking - and, he says, helping children grow and learn with PMA is reward enough in itself. Nevertheless, last week's award, Judd said, is something he'll never forget.

Judd was nominated for the honor by Linda Kinman, who has received much recognition herself recently for her work as a parent volunteer at Bayless and service to other such volunteer programs throughout the city.

"I have worked with Gerald Judd all three of his years teaching first grade, and it is remarkable what super students he turns out in May," Mrs. Kinman told Instructor magazine

She attributes this to Judd's emphasis on a positive mental attitude for himself and his students. "Some of the things Judd does: He encourages kids to relate 'good news' to classmates, not bad. He helps each child think independently and assume responsibility. He praises students constantly and uses class discussions to collectively solve problems," the Instructor profile

"He has a rocking chair which serves as a seat of honor for a student helper of the day and as a special place to listen to a child's story. A different youngster is chosen each Monday as student of the week. There is a sofa which kids can use when reading or visiting with a friend.

'There's also a small house in the classroom in which they can read. Judd has helped organize a student council and student newspaper at Bayless. There are birthday crowns for kids and cards and visits to those sick for any length of time. And there's a lot more, because Judd believes in making his kids feel good." Judd, who in 1973 was named Outstanding Elementary Education Student Teacher at Lubbock Christian College, spent his first two years teaching the Bayless sixth grade. He is in his third year as a first-grade teacher.

Judd made the switch from sixthgrade to first-grade because he felt that establishing PMA at an early point in a child's life was vital," the magazine said. The journal called Judd "a go-getter who works overtime to develop in his kids an enthusiasm for learning and a healthy self-concept.

The "Teacher Plus" honor is given to those who best exemplify teaching professionalism, said Charles M. Gibson Jr., publisher of Instructor. Award-winners are selected from among thousands of nominations made each year to the magazine by educators citing co-workers in Gibson, who traveled to Lubbock from company headquarters in Dansville, N.Y., to make the presentation, said the award is "quite a tribute to Gerald. The award is a credit not only to Gerald Judd but to Bayless school, the administration of this school, the administration of the school system and the City of Lubbock.

The "Teacher Plus" honor, Gibson said, goes to the teacher who "stands out, makes a real difference, touches the lives of kids in a special way.

Among his other honors, Judd recently was nominated for Outstanding Teacher of America by his principal, Dan Mindy Ainsworth, who was in Judd's sixth-grade class and now attends Monterey High, said Judd did "things for ussome teachers just can't do. He made school fun, more interesting and more challenging."

Youths smoking in shed may have caused fire

Youngsters stopping at a storage shed to smoke a cigarette before going on to school may have touched off a $200,000 fire at a Lubbock motel last week that imperiled nearly 80 persons.

Wednesday April 12, 1978

Though lodgers in 32 rooms of the south wing of the Village Inn, 4925 Brownfield Rd., had to scramble out of bed at 7:44 a.m. Friday, none was injured. Some had hurt pride, however, when they had to face the world sans clothes at the early hour.

The fire, which grew to two alarms and necessitated calling in 23 firefighters, four fire engines, a snorkel truck, a ladder unit and two booster trucks, officially was under control at 8:22 a.m., though mop-up operations continued three more

The damage estimate was offered by Tom Butcher, part-owner and general

Assistant Fire Marshal Robert Stokes theorized that youngsters smoking in a shed behind the motel, where rolls of carpet are stored, may have caused the fire.

Though no one was seen in the shed Friday, Stokes said nearby construction workers said they had watched youngsters enter the structure in the past to

Though the bulk of the fire damage was restricted to the roof, Butcher said the 32 units were damaged by water and smoke.

The roof fire apparently was touched off when soaring flames, some of them reaching a hundred feet into the air, ignited the roof and burned through high oltage wires strung above the building.

Though firemen and police quickly herded 75 to 80 persons from their rooms, explosions caused by the snapping, serpentine voltage wires were plenty effective in rousing the lodgers.

Houstonian Paul Harbison, in Lubbock as a prospective Texas Tech student said, "I was just sleeping and then there was this explosion and I heard someone yelling, 'Get the hell out.'

Aiding firemen at the scene were members of the Explorer Post 502. Post members Robby Christopher, 15, and Clarence Sharrick, 18, both Coronado High School students joined with Mike Treadwell, 17, to aid firefighters at the

The fire was Lubbock's worst since a February blaze ravaged Sides Printing Co., 1509 34th St., and Davis Floral Co., located next door.

Rex Dockery smiles — briefly close, Texas Tech head coach Rex Dockery found reasons to smile, if only brief-

"We looked pretty good for the first real big scrimmage," the first-year head coach said. "I was pleased with the way the backs ran and blocked, and the defense looked the best it's looked so far. The first-team line did a good job of coming off the ball in the second half, too. But we've still got a long way to go."

Dockery expects to make some decisions regarding personnel this week, particularly at quarterback and in the offensive and defensive lines.

None of the quarterbacks stood above the rest during Saturday's scrimmage, but Dockery said the staff would have to pare down the list of candidates this week anyway.

Currently, the candidates being worked with the most are Mark Johnson, Tres Adami, Richy Ethridge, David Stone, Darren Reagan and Johnny Johnson. Dockery wants the list to be narrowed down to three or four names this week.

The pace has been slow since the Raiders began spring drills March 30, and Dockery said it will probably pick up some this week, but not a whole lot. "We're just so young that we can't go really fast," Dockery said. "We're trying to do a lot of teaching this spring. If we throw these guys out there without knowing what they need to do, we couldn't get Dockery expects to install more of the team's passing game this week. Most of the running game has already been put

A good deal more of the defense will be put in this week, too. Very little had been installed before this week.

The Red Raiders will scrimmage today and Saturday this week, as they will the following week. Spring training will close with the Red-White game April 27.

Chinese cooking 'routine' for Lubbock couple

Chinese cooking is not even remotely related to opening a box of frozen egg rolls or heating a can of chicken chop suey - just ask Mrs. David (Annie) Sun.

"Chinese cooking makes use of lots of fresh vegetables - much more than meat - prepared correctly and precisely, then cooked just long enough so they keep their texture and flavor," she said.

For Mrs. Sun, born in Hong Kong, and her husband, a native of mainland China, Chinese cooking is an everyday routine. They both prefer oriental cuisine to American fare, although their year-old son Damon has developed a somewhat peculiar affinity for canned ravioli ("I think he likes the spices!" Mrs. Sun said with a chuckle)

Mrs. David Sun demonstrates how dinner guests in her home often find themselves actually doing the cooking. With the "hot pot," each person selects from an assortment of cut meats and vegetables, then puts the items in the "basket" she is holding in her left hand. The basket in then held in a simmering savory broth until the foods are done to taste. Accompanying sauces are prepared to taste by each guest from the condiments on the table.

A typical dinner menu at the Sun home is oyster beef (beef in oyster sauce), peppered chicken and prawns (shrimp), plus tea and rice, although Mrs. Sun admits that she cooks "whatever strikes my fancy - whatever is in the refrigerator!

Tea is a basic component at all meals, although not any exotic variety.

"I prefer red tea (orange pekoe), probably because I got used to it when I was in high school and art school in Eng-

Mrs. Sun, an accomplished artist, and and they still order many of their foods to be shipped to them from San Francisco.

"I use sesame oil for all my cooking, and peanut oil instead of margarine, and the large jars of these are not available here," she said. "While I can get many good vegetables locally, there are still many I would like to use that are not carried here - Chinese cucumbers, green carrots and white carrots, and others.'

She uses a wide variety of vegetables and meats when she entertains, because "I like to cook something fancier when we entertain.'

One of the most popular meals at her home when company is planned is the hot pot, or "Chinese fondue

"I prepare a broth from chicken broth, Chinese mushrooms, bones, tofu (bean curd), vegetables, dried prawns, salt, pepper and sesame oil," she said. "Then I cut up beef, lamb, pork, squid, prawns and all kinds of vegetables."

The foods are carefully cut up for several reasons: to fit into the long-handled 'basket" each person is given to hold foods in the broth for cooking, so that the foods are bite-sized and easily lifted with chop sticks, and because "it is considered inhospitable to have sharp things - like a knife - on the table in a Chinese home."

The hot pot keeps the broth simmering. and each dinner guest holds his basket of food selections in the broth until the items are cooked to his taste. He is free to make up his own seasoning sauce from condiments on the table.

'The hot pot is popular here because it is David's favorite meal, too!" Mrs. Sun said. She explained that the pot itself is available at many gourmet shops.

Although like many experienced cooks, Mrs. Sun cooks "free hand" - a little bit of this, a tiny pinch of that - she recommends these traditional Chinese dishes to the readers of Update:

SHRIMP AND GREEN PEAS (Ching Tao Ha Jan)

1 tsp. salt 1 tsp. sugar

2 lbs. shrimp 1 tsp. corn starch

1 tsp. soy sauce

3 tbsp. cold water 2 cloves garlic, minced

tsp. sherry or rice wine 3 tbsps. peanut salad oil

3 sprigs green onion (chopped or diced)

11/2 cups frozen or fresh peas 1 small piece ginger (1-inch) chopped fine or 1 1/4 tsp. powdered

Wash shrimp, remove shell and black vein. Dry on paper towel. Heat oil in skillet until it bubbles; pour the shrimp into oil and brown quickly on both sides, then remove from pan. Add onion, ginger, garlic and peas in frying pan to cook. Combine corn starch, salt, sugar and sherry in a cup or bowl; add soy sauce and water and mix into a smooth paste. Pour into pan, then add shrimp gradually and stir constantly until boiling point is reached. Serve immediately. Serves 4 to

views and opinions

By Janice Jarvis Update Staff Writer

Fitness fads have swept the nation and Lubbock is no exception. On almost any day, under almost any weather conditions, runners race through parks, tennis players swing at balls and swimmers take to water

For some people, an exercise kick has become part of their everyday routine, for others, exercise was a passing thought. It's easier to watch television than put on a pair of running shoes.

Lubbock residents were asked their opinion on exercising as well as their view on how exercising effects a person's attitude toward life.

Whether exercise programs consist of a few runs around the block or a training program for the Boston Marathon, one thing those interviewed expressed a common interest in was staying in

Mrs. Burle Clayton noted that she thinks exercise is very important. "I work in the garden and I always feel better after I have worked," she explained. Mrs. Clayton noted that she believes exercise plays a ng longer as well.

"If your body isn't ealthy and in good shape your mental attitude isn't going to be very good either,' said Robert Kaub. A jogger, Kaub noted that over a period of time he can tell a difference between how he feels when he exercises and when he

"I definitely think exercise is important," explained Mr. Anderson Tennis and gardening are his main forms of exercise. "After playing three sets of tennis I always feel tired, but I think it's good as a vascular work out.

Isabel Salazar noted hat she believes exercising is important pecause it can help a person later in life. A runner, Miss Salazar said that running with someone is more fun than running alone. "My boyfriend doesn't think running is necessary and I run too much," she said. "But I'm running because he has a heart condition and I think running is important," she added

"Exercising has a lot to do with your mental state because it helps to develope your body and it makes your mind more alert," said Wayne Willey. A runner, Willey noted that people who exercise in the morning wake up alert and ready to go. "A person who drags himself to work has a harder time working and thinking, and he makes more mistakes than someone who exercises," he explained. Willey added that anyone who exercises doesn't need a cup of coffee to get him started in the morning.

The film opens with Neptune, a nuclear submarine, surfacing 60 miles off the Connecticut coast in fog-covered sea. Almost immediately, it is rammed by a radar-less Norwegian freighter. The stern splits open. The sub sinks to the virtually hull-crushing depth of 1,450 feet and crashes onto a ledge of mud above an ocean canvon.

The sub is doomed if it slips off the ledge, which is probable since the area is known for geological disturbance. There is air for 36 hours.

The Navy sends a DSRV - Deep Submergence Rescue Vessel - from San Diego. But earth slides make the rescue impossible ... unless plastic explosives can put the sub into the right position. Like so many films involving sea rescue, this one is a story of courage, commitment and sacrifice.

The Columbia release is the story of a Louisiana Cajun, his three sons and their fleet quarter horse that makes it all the way to the All-American Futurity at Ruidoso, N.M. A horse-racing story might seem like a peculiar assignment for a woman screen writer - and her first feature movie at that.

But I was born in Amarillo and grew up around horses," she explains.

She also earned degrees from Smith and Trinity colleges and worked in Midwestern theaters before coming to Hollywood in 1964 for the formidable task of breaking into television as a writer. Luckily, an uncle was president of the Writers Guild and he helped her land an assignment on the well-remembered 'Mr. Novak" series.

"I swore I wasn't going to get married, but of course I did," says Carol, whose husband manages restaurant, computer and construction companies. They have two daughters, 11 and 10, and a son, 7.

Four years on "Peyton Place" gave her a solid education in script writing, and she progressed to TV movies - "The Neon Ceiling," "Reflections of Murder" (an Americanized "Diabolique") "Plain Speaking" (the Harry Truman monologue by Ed Flanders) and last season's "Amelia" (Earhart).

"I started writing in the coffee shop because I like to be around activity and it's too quiet at home in the morning," she explains. "I work at home in the afternoon so I can be with the children; if I

Lubbock residents attend A&M course

COLLEGE STATION (Special) - Two Lubbock residents were among 82 professionals and volunteers attending a basic industrial development course at Texas A &M University.

Attending were L.W. Curfman, economic development representative, Economic Development Administration; and Ruth Ann Stautzenberger, economic development assistang, Economic Development Administration.

The five-day program was tailored for new industrial development professionals and volunteer civic workers, with emphasis on problems associated with attracting new industry.

Faculty members were from universities, governmental agencies and successful industrial development organizations.

Sponsored by the Industrial Economics Research Division at Texas A&M, the course attracted nationwide participants from chambers of commerce, utility companies, banks, municipal governments, development offices, governmental agencies, education and media representatives.

Besides, her children provide material for many of her scripts, especially the short-lived series "Sunshine" and "Paper Moon," for which whe wrote the pilots. "I should claim my children as a business deduction," she observes.

Carol had given no thought to writing theatrical movies. A friend recommended her to producer Ray Stark ("Funny Girl," "Murder by Death"), who had become intrigued with quarter horse lore.

Stark sent Mrs. Sobieski to the small town of Ruidoso, where quarter horse owners of the nation converge at summer's end for the All-American Futurity, the aggregate purse amounting to $1

"I had thought of tracing the story of four horses and their owners and their the big race, marks. "But I became more and more interested in a Cajun from Louisiana and his family. They had only one horse while others had as many as 30.

'My original notion was to do a kind of 'Nashville' with multiple stories. The more I wrote, the more I focused on the Cajun. And Marty Ritt, who was directing, is an old-fashioned craftsman who likes a linear script, straightforward and direct. So that's what it became.

Carol enjoyed working with Ritt, who wanted her on hand throughout the filming in New Mexico and Louisiana. But although she has another assignment for Stark, she yearns for a return to televi-

"I really think TV allows more freedom to write about subjects in a frank manner," she reasoned. "Television is free. Features have to make money, and so compromises have to be made. In 'Casey's Shadow' the track talk of the boys is not real. I had to tone down the language because the company wanted a PG rating. An R picture with children would not make money, they argued."

What do her own children think of her

"Well, we were all in Ruidoso living in a trailer when 'Amelia' appeared on TV. Ray Stark got us a television set, and we all watched it. When it was over, my son's only comment was: 'Well, I liked the commercials."

Today, at age 26, he has "functional heart murmur" and high blood pressure, but thanks to friends and a good wife, Kenny Dale is on his wqay to becoming a major name in American music.

Not long ago, I said the Artesia, N.M. native and Houston, Tex., resident sounded like Marty Robbins going through a change of voice. He has a smooth-flowing, easy-listening style which caused a quick chart rise for his single, "Bluest Heartache of the Year." His recent single was "Red Hot Memo-Dale's family, including three brothers and a sister, moved from New Mexico to Odessa, Tex., for a couple of years. They then moved to Houston, where Dale has made his home every since. He was good in school at first -especially in art -but let his education go down the drain when he started running with "some crazy people all young who didn't know any better.'

HE REMEMBERS, "By my early teens, I was in a motorcycle group called "The Vagabonds," but nobody owned a motorcycle. We had blue jeans and jackets and tried to look tough. It didn't last long. Another motorcycle group called "The Banditos," who were like the Hell's Angels ran all over us."

Dale quit school -a move he now describes as the "dumbest thing I ever did." At 17, he was working at a drive-in theater taking tickets and cleaning the lot. By 18, he was "boozingit up with peo-

The worst period of his rebel-withouta-cause days came when he was 20. By then "a friend" had helped him get on drugs, with a bad needle resulting in hep-atitis which almost cost him his life. "A doctor told my parents I wouldn't live. He said, 'Your boy's to far gone.'" DALE RECOVERED, however, and decided it was time to turn his life around. "Getting hepatitis was the turning point in my life. I realized how bad off I had become.

Two years later, Dale's life really started on the upswing when he met two la-dies, Kay Keveton and Bee Rittersbacher. Kay became Dale's wife ("We now have two beautiful girls, 5 and 2"), and Bee became his fan, friend and finance backer. Bee is listed on the back of Dale's Capitol Records Album as "executive

Lubbockite returns from conference

Robert R. Robinson-Zwahr of 3801 57th St. has returned from San Marcos where he was one of 20 speakers presenting papers at the recent special conference, "Multicultures of the Southwest: A Symposium on the Texas Germans.

The symposium was sponsored by Southwest Texas State University at San

In addition to his paper, "German-Texan Genealogy: A Positive Tool for the Development of Ethnic Identity," he chaired a special workshop on German-Texan research. Robinson-Zwahr, a researcher, historian, genealogist and author on German-Texans, serves as an associate editor of the "Journal of German-American Studies."

More than 300 persons attended the two-day symposium. Also attending from Lubbock were Mr. and Mrs. Rex Robinson and Bobby Weaver of Texas Tech's Southwest Collection.

Love. She had lived in Lubbock in the late 1920s and early 1930s. She worked for The Avalanche-Journal briefly in the 1930s before going to New York to work for NBC, where she did publicity for such personalities as Judy Canova, Paul Whitman and Robert "Believe-It-Or-Not" Ripley

During World War II, she was a feature writer for the First Army Information Office in New York, and during the Korean War served as a writer at General Headquarters Public Information Office, Far East Command, in Tokyo.

Funeral services were conducted in Whitesboro, Tex., where she was born. Survivors include two sisters, Mrs. J.C. Pyle of Tucson, Ariz., and Mrs. Jerry Belcher of Larkspur, Calif., and three brothers, Sterling of Sun City, Calif., William F. of Culver City, and E. Russell of Yakima, Wash.
