Hunting Cool Spot In Lubbock Proves To Be Chilling Job

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE MERCURY slowly inches up to 103, walking outside is like stepping into an open furnace, and in northeast Lubbock men stand bundled in parkas and boots to withstand the cold.

The cold? Not only cold, but freezing cold. A bone-chilling eight degrees below zero. It's the Furr's Frozen Food Department and its employees take the honors for having the coolest job on the Hub City's hottest days.

Wearing insulated coveralls, boots, gloves, caps and knee-length parkas, the men stack frozen food in a vault cold enough to make winter seem like a heat wave.

Warmup Procedure

To warm up, the men always can come out of the vault onto the 35-degree loading dock, where food is piled inside specially refrigerated trucks.

The temperature inside the trucks? Zero degrees.

But foreman Jim Ham says he doesn't mind working in the frozen food department. "At least it's the same temperature in here all year round," he comments.

During these scorching hot days, though, Ham says it's rough going home. "I keep my home at 76-degrees, which still feels too hot to me, although my wife needs a sweater."

A Real Cool Job

For a cool job, meat packers don't fare too badly on hot days.

The meat freezer at Ben Grantham Meat Packers is 10-degrees below zero and the meat cooler, where beef is hung, is kept at 34-degrees.

Grantham says his employees wear coats and gloves to protect them from the frosty temperatures, but adds they don't spend prolonged periods of time in the really cold areas.

Compared to the frozen food loading dock, Grantham's meat processing area is kept at a mild 50-degrees.

How about being an ice salesman? Think it would be a good way to keep cool while everyone else roasts? Guess again.

"Everyone tells me, 'You got the coolest job in town,'" says 20-year-old Greg Goforth, a route salesman for Host Ice Co.

Truck Cab Sizzles

"They're crazy. They don't know the real story. Man, the cab of my ice truck doesn't even have air conditioning," he says.

21 Deaths Attributed To Heat

A-J News Services

A BLAZING summer sun continued to roast almost all of Texas Monday, sending temperatures soaring once more and prompting renewed warnings from state health officials that those scorching temperatures can kill.

"We're thinking it's going to be the worst we've ever seen if things continue the way they're going," Dr. Allen Fain, Dallas County health director, said Monday in urging that city's residents to remain indoors and in the shade if possible.

By Monday night, Dallas-Fort Worth medical authorities already had attributed 21 deaths to the three-week-old heat wave, 14 in Dallas and 7 in Fort Worth. Another 16 persons remained hospitalized, three in critical condition, with heat stroke symptoms.

Area Residents Endure

Lubbock hospital officials said South Plains residents appeared to be tolerating the blistering conditions better, with the only noticeable weather-related cases being an increase of bad sunburns.

Temperatures leveled off at 103 degrees in Lubbock Monday, breaking the 1947 record of 101 degrees and placing the Hub City on a long list of hot, record-breaking Texas cities.

A barely tolerable 110-degree reading in Abilene and Presidio topped the state's high marks, but at 4 p.m., 26 of 40 cities reporting to the National Weather Service were sweltering under temperatures above 100 degrees. The state's lowest high temperature was an even 90 at Galveston and Corpus Christi.

Amarillo matched Lubbock's 103-degree temperature, busting the 1929 record there of 102 degrees. That city's morning low of 76 degrees also topped the 1963 mark of 75 degrees as the highest low temperature for the day.

San Angelo residents suffered under a 104-degree reading, also a record breaker, while Midland reported 103 degrees

The only respite from the heat Goforth gets is when he pulls up at the ice company's storage vault on Lehigh Street in northeast Lubbock.

The vault keeps the ice at about 10 to 20 degrees. Goforth enters the chilly warehouse, wearing only a T-shirt and jeans, and begins stacking 10-pound bags of ice on a dolly.

His breath forming misty clouds above him, he pushes the dolly back out into the 100-degree weather, shoving it across the loading dock into the back of his insulated truck.

The truck will keep the ice between 20 and 30 degrees, but none of that cool air reaches Goforth in the un-air conditioned cab.

After a dozen or so trips back and forth between the vault and the truck, Goforth will lock up the truck and then drive through the late afternoon heat to Plainview to deliver the ice.

When he arrives there, he said, he'll probably get out of the truck with sweat dripping from his face and hear someone say, "Man, I bet you have the coolest job in town."

I ONLY HAVE ICE FOR YOU — Greg Goforth, a route salesman for Host Ice Co., probably tries to spend as long as he can inside the company's storage vault to escape the outside 100-degree plus temperatures. But stacking 10-pound bags of ice is only part of Goforth's job. The other part is driving in 100-degree plus weather in an un-airconditioned truck to deliver the ice. "It's the coolest job in town only half the time," Goforth says. (Staff Photo by Holly Kuper)

Oil Prices In U.S. To Take Leap

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Carter and the leaders of six other non-Communist industrial powers jointly agreed at an economic summit conference Monday on measures to increase employment worldwide and reduce U.S. oil consumption by raising prices and cutting imports.

Carter, expressing satisfaction at the outcome of the two-day session, said a "base of common purpose binds us together."

He pledged to increase the price of U.S. oil — now as low as $5.23 a barrel — to world levels — now approximately $13.50 — by the end of 1980, a move that could increase gasoline prices by seven cents a gallon.

Carter also pledged an energy program by the end of this year that would reduce oil imports by 2.5 million barrels a day by 1985.

Oil Increase Unspecified

He did not specify how the price increase or import reduction would be accomplished but they could be achieved through administrative steps or by congressional approval of his energy legislation, in which the goals are outlined.

The joint strategy provides for increased growth in the Japanese and West German economies and a slower growth rate of about 4 percent in the United States, where the worsening inflation rate has become a dominant concern.

The United States has wanted the Japanese and West Germans to speed their economies. Obtaining their commitment was considered a major success for Carter.

Trade Deficits Success

Another success was the joint declaration that countries with large trade deficits, a category that includes the United States, need to increase exports and that countries with surpluses, among them West Germany and Japan, need to increase imports.

Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda committed his country to keeping a lid on exports this year so they will not exceed the 1977 level, but he didn't rule out the possibility that the exports' value would continue to rise because of the decline in the value of the dollar.

He called the lid "an unusual, extraordinary measure" that he said will contribute "very importantly to the solution of our balance of payments problem," a reference to the Japanese surplus and the U.S. trade deficit that was a record $25 billion last year.

Carter told reporters that the results of the summit, the fourth in four years, "exceeded the expectations of all of us." He said the commitments by seven nations were "substantive and specific" and that "each one of us was cautious not to promise things we could not subsequently deliver."

Carter and the leaders of the other nations — German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, British Prime Minister James Callaghan, Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and Fukuda — spoke at the lavish city theatre after the final session in the West German capital. Each endorsed the commitments listed in the summit communiqué.

They said they would hold another summit next year, but did not say

Prince Arrives For Reese Duty

THE CROWN Prince of Iran, cadet Reza Pahlavi, arrived at Reese Air Force Base just after 8 p.m. Monday, accompanied by five other Imperial Iranian Air Force students.

Cadet Pahlavi and the five Iranians will begin a 50-week Undergraduate Pilot Training course at the base immediately.

Prior to his arrival, the prince had undergone a general orientation session at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The anticipated arrival of the prince earlier had prompted a demonstration by Iranian students here who have traditionally opposed the reign of the Shah of Iran.

Hospital's Collections Lag

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ON PAPER, the finances of the Health Sciences Center Hospital look good. But in the bank — where it really counts — things may be a bit different.

This was the impression the Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers got Monday upon examining the profit-and-loss statements for the medical facility's first five months in business.

The biggest worry is collections. The hospital so far has billed patients for some $3.5 million in services but has collected less than $500,000.

"That disturbs the heck out of me," board member Jack Flygare said. He said the hospital district must start cracking down on collections and possibly suing patients who don't pay up.

It's not as bad as it sounds. Most of the $3 million in outstanding accounts is attributable to insurance firms and the Medicare and Medicaid programs. Hospital administrators said they have just squared away reimbursement procedures with such third-party payors and that this money should be rolling in soon.

Nevertheless, "private pay" patients — people not covered by insurance or government-subsidized programs — account for $1.3 million of the outstanding bills. This represents an "area of vulnerability," said Ben Robinson, chairman of the hospital board's finance committee.

Robinson said his committee is "not alarmed" but is concerned about the backlog in these unpaid accounts.

To date, the hospital has budgeted a reserve of $458,000 — about $90,000 a month — to cover "bad debts," the bills the hospital won't be able to collect, Robinson said.

Bad Debt Fund Boosted

At his recommendation, the hospital district agreed to increase that reserve by another $25,000 a month. For the 1978 year, this would give the hospital a total allowance on "bad debts" of about $1.45 million — vs. the earlier budget of $1.32 million.

Bill Stinnett, the district's associate director for finances, said the hospital's collection problems are not unusual. He said he has just assigned a four-member staff to step up collection efforts.

Stinnett said that beginning early in 1979, he may refer long-overdue accounts to a private collection agency.

But Flygare remarked: "If they don't pay by January, I hope we turn them over to (hospital attorney Charles) Galey to sue them."

Other Money Woes

Unpaid bills weren't the hospital board's only money problem Monday.

The board awarded $487,000 in contracts for various hospital equipment and supplies. The figure was barely within the hospital's budget for those items, but board members still were complaining.

For one thing, they griped, 10 of the 21 contracts attracted only one bid. Flygare urged that follow-up efforts be made in seeking competitive bids to ascertain that a "mistake wasn't made or that we're not paying through the nose" on one-bid items.

Hospital administrators attributed part of the lack of competitive bids to the high level of specialty and sophistication of equipment demanded by the hospital and its medical staff.

Some hospital board members also complained that their management firm, Hyatt Medical Management Services Inc., isn't saving the district much on purchases anymore.

Hyatt was hired in April, 1977 — at a two-year cost of $305,000 — to help run the district and the new hospital. Board member Jack Strong noted that "one of the biggest selling points" was that Hyatt would save the district $200,000 through purchasing discounts.

But of the contracts awarded Monday, only two involved Hyatt discounts, for a savings of about $7,000, board member Joe Stanley said. Strong said this should be considered when renewal of Hyatt's contract comes up for discussion.

J.C. Rickman, hospital board chairman, said that when the board hired Hyatt, it didn't realize its eligibility for

State Plan May Slash School Tax

LUBBOCK and other Texas public school systems could cut local taxes almost 40 percent and still have more money to spend on students under new state legislation proposed Monday.

The proposal, tentatively backed by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, would give school districts a share of the state's sales-tax revenues — with orders that they use most of the money to slash their own property-tax levies.

Sen. Kent Hance of Lubbock says he will carry the legislation in his chamber. The House sponsors are Reps. Jim Nugent of Kerrville and Lynn Nabers of Brownwood.

Hance said the governor still hasn't decided whether to include the measure in his agenda for the legislature's special session, which convened last week to consider tax relief.

Quick Action Possible

If the proposal is put in the "call" and passed during the session, the legislation could go into effect Sept. 1, Hance said. It would provide "immediate relief" to taxpayers, he said.

The bill would dedicate one-fourth of the revenue from the state's general sales and use tax to reduce school ad valorem taxes through Texas.

The state sales tax is four percent, meaning four cents on every $1 purchase of goods. The Hance and Nugent-Nabers proposals would divert the revenue generated by one penny of this tax.

The money would be distributed to school districts according to their numbers of students in average daily attendance. Under the bill, each district would get $220 per student.

In turn, however, school districts would have to return $200 of each $220 to taxpayers by lowering the property taxes they levy for maintenance and op-

Police Seek Leads In Slaying Of Six

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Police said Monday they had no leads in the execution-style slaying of six restaurant employees during a weekend robbery and pleaded with the public "to let us know anything" about the mass murder.

The bodies of the restaurant's assistant manager, cook and four other employees were found late Sunday stacked atop each other in a small meat locker located in the rear of the roadside steakhouse.

Four of the victims were high school teen-agers earning summer money.

"This is probably the most horrendous crime ever committed in the Oklahoma City area, certainly since I've been on the force," police chief Tom Heggy grimly told reporters during a morning news conference.

"We will leave no stone unturned to find the killer or killers. I'm prepared to use any manpower necessary within reason. I urge all citizens who have been in or about that restaurant to let us know anything that could be the lead that we're looking for."

Meanwhile, lines of police officers standing shoulder-to-shoulder marched through the shopping center and neighborhood surrounding the Siroin Stockade in search of clues to the identify — or whereabouts — of the slayers. Heggy said every available detective, patrolman and technician were on the job.

The slayings were discovered by the restaurant manager Michael J. Click, 25, who returned to the steakhouse about 11 p.m. CDT. He entered the restaurant expecting to find his six fellow employees busy cleaning up in preparation for closing.

Instead, he found a silent, empty, unlocked restaurant with some tables still cluttered with dishes. In the rear freezer room lay the six bodies.

Bodies In Heap

"They were piled in a heap like they were just stood up one at a time and executed on top of each other," said patrolman Lannie Mitchell, one of the first policemen to arrive at the scene.

The victims were identified as assistant manager Louis Zacharias, about 40; Isaac E. Freeman, 56, a custodian; David Lindsay, 17, a cook; Anthony Teu, 17; David Salzman, 16; and Terri M. Horst, 16.

Championship Basketball

Miss Horst, a member of a Moore High School's state championship basketball team last season, was found alive beneath two colleagues. But she died less than two hours later without regaining consciousness.

All six had been shot once in the head "at fairly close range," Miss Horst also was shot in the abdomen.

The victims were neither bound nor gagged.

Session's Tab May Be $33,000 Daily

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TO TWIST an adage, to save money you have to spend money. And that's what the 181 state legislators are doing in Austin as they labor over tax relief measures.

In their struggle with bills to put money back into taxpayer pockets, the legislators are spending it at a rate some figures indicate may total about $33,000 a day.

Not until the end of the specially called session, which may last up to 30 days, will the final tab on costs be in. But when the additional costs of a special session are added to usual government expenses, the amount runs to almost $1.5 million a month, even using conservative estimates.

Even when the Legislature is not in session, it costs more than $1 million a month for salaries and office expenses to operate the House and Senate. House costs average about $700,000, while Senate expenses add up to about $300,000.

The $1 million run during the special session is inflated immediately by legislators' living expenses, which amount to about $1,000 daily for senators and about $4,500 for representatives. Each legislator receives $30 per day.

Of the estimated $10,000-a-day extra the special session will cost taxpayers, the per diem makes up the largest single item, an administrator told The Avalanche-Journal.

Tom Treadway, a General House Administration official, said other expenses include the cost of telephones, messengers and additional printing costs for bills.

Also, the legislators, who receive $3,000 a month for office expenses when not in session, will get an additional $1,000 for the special session. The money is to cover costs of office help and office incidentals such as paper and stamps.

South Plains legislators say their additional office expenses for the special session will total less than $1,000.

State Sen. Kent Hance and representatives Froy Salinas and Joe Robbins, all of Lubbock, said they expect to keep their extra expenses to about $650 — the average salary of a secretary. Rep. James "Pete" Laney of Hale Center said he believes he will break even on costs because one of his Austin office workers left recently.

All agreed that few of their colleagues are running up high office costs because of the special session. Most are just hiring temporary office help. Other extra costs will be for incidentals such as more stamps on letters to constituents.

Officer's Shooting Latest Clue To Town's Alleged Corruption

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (AP) — The arrest of the top police official here in the shooting death of an undercover policeman has added fire to a controversy over allegations of vice and corruption in this rough mining boomtown.

The undercover agent, 29-year-old Michael Rosa, had been scheduled to testify Monday before a Wyoming grand jury investigating the allegations.

Rock Springs Public Safety Director Ed Cantrell, 50, was arrested shortly after the early morning shooting Saturday. Authorities say the shooting occurred in the parking lot of a Rock Springs bar.

Rosa, Cantrell and two other policemen were sitting in an unmarked police car when the fatal, .38-caliber shot was fired from within the vehicle, Sweetwater County Coroner Peter Vase said.

Rosa's widow, Becky, was brought to Cheyenne on Monday to testify before the grand jury. She said her husband had told her recently, "I'm getting into some things that could put people higher up behind bars."

The shooting is the latest in a series of developments that have focused attention on this city where:

— Last April, the mayor, who is an accountant, was charged with 72 counts of embezzling money from a drug store whose books he was keeping. The charges later were dropped. The county attorney said a key witness was reluctant to testify.

— The mayor also has been criticized for his friendship with a bar manager, Earl Dotsey, convicted of providing prostitution and gambling.

— Cantrell's predecessor, Clyde Kemp, resigned last July after only three months on the job. He has said city officials ordered him not to arrest prostitutes.

— A statewide grand jury empaneled last November to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by state officials turned its probe to Rock Springs in January. Indictments in Rock Springs are expected this week.

— A grand jury special investigator was arrested last week and charged with being drunk, creating a disturbance and resisting arrest in an after-hours bar being investigated by the grand jury.

City fathers contend Rock Springs is a typical Western boomtown trying to cope with an influx of workers hired to develop the area's mineral resources for an energy-hungry nation. New coal mines, construction of a huge power plant and expanded mining of the mineral trona — used to make soda ash — have nearly tripled the city's 1970 population of 12,000.

But Rock Springs always has been a tough town, earning the reputation 93 years ago as the place where angry white miners massacred 28 Chinese recruited as strike-breakers.

A town dominated by the Union Pacific Railroad and coal mines within its boundaries, Rock Springs has been known as a place where either side of the tracks is the wrong side.

"There is a pervasive aura of fear that permeates the entire community," says Bill Luzmoor, general manager of radio station KRKK, which has been a strong advocate of reform in the city.

Grand jury special prosecutor Lawrence Yonkee says the panel has learned the problems of Rock Springs go beyond those of other Western boomtowns.

"There are some complex problems in Rock Springs that justify the grand jury investigation," Yonkee said. He would not say whether the panel has found evidence of official misconduct in the city. Nor would he say whether Rosa's shooting is related to the panel's investigation.

"We're just fitting it together at this point," Yonkee said.

The county sheriff's office, where Cantrell was undersheriff before being appointed public safety director, is heading the investigation of Rosa's death, but the state attorney general's office and the FBI have been called in to assist.

"I called in the FBI and everyone because I didn't want anyone to say we were whitewashing this," County Attorney Robert Bath said.

Mayor Paul J. Wataha denies ordering Kemp not to arrest prostitutes, who have become as much a part of the local scene as construction workers.

Police have said one of the prostitutes eyeing a likely customer as he emerges from a tavern in downtown Rock Springs, Wyo. The subject of year-long state grand jury investigation, Rock Springs residents to seek a continuation of the probe.

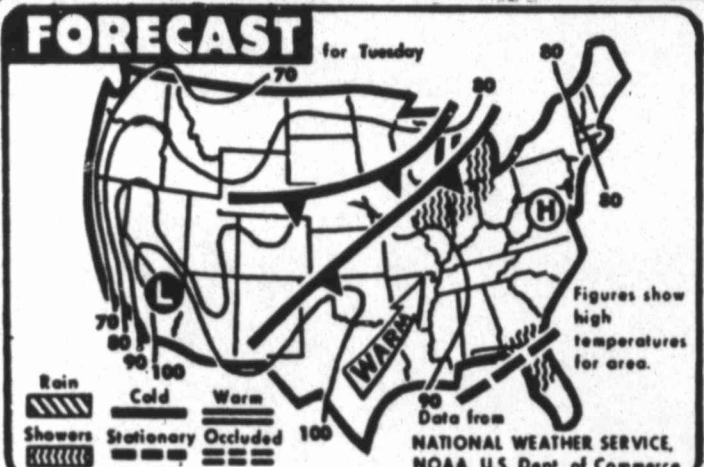

"Mr. Cundy had a number of things to do in Rock Springs and interviewing Mr. Dotsey was one of them," investigator Vic Vickers said. "When one goes to interview Mr. Dotsey, one does not expect to meet him in Sunday school."

The grand jury reconvened Monday for what Yonkee says probably will be its last session. The panel's limited financing is about to run out, but the shooting has prompted some Rock Springs residents to seek a continuation of the probe.

Former Employee Sought In Shooting

A 38-year-old ex-employee, who apparently went berserk at mid-morning Monday and made a shooting gallery of the office complex at the Plains Co-Op Mill, remained at large late in the day after wounding an assistant office manager.

Glenn Barbee, 48, of 1919 34th St., was listed in serious condition at West Texas Hospital late Monday, following surgery on a bullet wound to his lower back. Barbee also was struck on two fingers of one hand, police said.

Witnesses said the firing began about 10 a.m., after a small, thin man walked through the double doors of the office at 2901 Ave. A.

After shooting toward the rear of the open-space business area, the assailant — who left his job at the mill June 22 — reportedly took aim at an employee standing in front of an open vault. The man, however, ducked and avoided a spray of bullets, one of which was found lodged in the open steel door.

Barbee reportedly stood just outside his cubicle as the gunman entered the westside doors. When he heard the gunfire, the victim reportedly wheeled and ran to his desk.

According to witnesses, the gunman walked over to a chest-high wooden railing around Barbee's desk, pointed the gun at the victim and fired.

Next, the assailant walked down a short corridor and disappeared through a northwest door as several employees hid in the vault area.

A custodian at the mill told police he saw the suspect walking north along Avenue A moments later.

Two truck drivers, Tom Newton and Dutch Hines, were standing just inside an east door when the gunfire erupted.

"I had my back to the (west) door and I didn't see him come in," Newton said. "I turned around, and then he shot a couple of times. Everybody by then was down on the floor and then he went over and shot that man (Barbee)."

"He pointed back here, and I ducked down and then that man (Barbee) ducked down," Hines said. "Then he fired again a couple of times."

Investigators later found five live cartridges and four hulls in another enclosed area adjacent Barbee's office. It was theorized that the assailant may have tried to reload his .22-caliber weapon.

Despite possessing an address for the former employee and the custodian's statement that the man had fled north along Avenue A, police had no suspect in custody late Monday.

"We checked out all the addresses we had for him," detective George White said Monday. The search for the assailant was expected to continue today.

Police said only through talking to Barbee today could they hope to glean any indication of a motive for the shooting spree.

Women's Bank Deposits Heavy

DENVER (UPI) — The newest bank in downtown Denver, which also is the nation's second nationally chartered women's bank, broke the $1 million mark in deposits on its opening day.

The Women's Bank President B. LaRae Orullian said 23 minutes after the bank closed Friday, the staff calculated first-day deposits totaling $1,194,000.

Miss Orullian said the bank's organizers, who are mostly women, had been canvassing the metropolitan area for months, talking with groups and handing out deposit pledge cards to prepare for the opening Friday.

Pledges totaled between $2 and $3 million, and people were waiting in the small lobby for a chance to open accounts.

First Lady Tours Ancient German Castle, Samples Fruit Of Vine

BURG ELTZ, West Germany (AP) — Rosalynn Carter sipped wine with a German count Monday on the terrace of his 800-year-old storybook castle perched on a slate cliff near West Germany's Mosel valley.

"I'm glad you like my wine," said her host, Count Jakob von und zu Eitz, whose family has owned the turreted castle throughout its history.

"I love it," replied the first lady, who drank about half a glass of the white Rhine wine bottled under the count's own Schloss Eitz label. "It's delicious."

Mrs. Carter, along with her daughter Amy and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's wife, Grace, visited Burg Eitz, one of West Germany's best-known castles. The ladies were on the final day of a four-day trip to West Germany with President Carter, who was attending an economic summit meeting in Bonn.

Unlike the thousands of tourists who visit the castle every year, Mrs. Carter did not have to walk the 500 yards from the hilltop parking lot down a steep, winding road to the castle. Instead the first lady, who was wearing a turquoise dress, was driven in a van down the hill and through the arched gate of the castle to the outer courtyard where she was met by the count and his wife.

A dozen employees of the castle, which is open to tourists during the summer, welcomed the first lady with a trumpet salute. The count led Mrs. Carter on a tour of a few of the ancient rooms, including the armory, bedchambers and the keep, which is the oldest part of the complex.

"All the objects you see here, the swords, the furniture, are not from museums," he said. "They were owned by my family and used over the centuries."

The tour was interrupted briefly while Amy fished through a large handbag carried by an aide in search of her contact lenses. After a brief detour to install the lenses, she resumed the tour.

Count Jakob, who lives in the castle during the summer, explained that its isolated location, about 40 miles southeast of Bonn, was largely responsible for its remaining intact.

Marauding armies that destroyed more strategic castles along the Rhine, Mosel and Neckar rivers bypassed Burg Eitz, whose location amid the Eifel hills made it too much trouble to attack.

The construction of Burg Eitz was begun about 1100 A.D. and completed about 500 years later. It was besieged only once — in 1336 by Elector Baldwin of Trier. The elector finally conquered the defenders but allowed the castle to remain in the possession of its owners as long as they swore allegiance to him.

The castle was owned jointly by four branches of the Eitz clan until the count's ancestors gained complete control early in the 19th Century after other families died out.

Extra Baggage At The Economic Summit

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

No Fair Peking

TODAY'S LESSON is a little complicated, but let's have a go at it. We need a passing grade in Peking 101 to figure out President Carter's game plan for Moscow. Here's the plot—er—back-ground:
We are officially declared, signed-and-sealed ally of Free China, hereafter referred to as Taiwan. Got a treaty to prove it kicking around somewhere in the archives. But we are, or at least President Carter is, thinking seriously of signing on with Red China, hereafter referred to as Red China.
We need to be diplomatic buddies with the Communists in Peking, it seems, to keep the Communists in Moscow from taking over the Asian world.

THIS INVOLVES A periodic snubbing of the democratic government in Taiwan, at the express bidding of the powers in Peking. And here is where we have perfected the high art of the official insult.
In the past seven years, two U.S. Presidents and several State Department heads and national security advisers have visited Peking, but not a single government big shot has dropped in on Taipei. We topped that off a few weeks ago when Chiang Ching-kuo was inaugurated as president of Taiwan.
Carter didn't send anyone to represent him, but on the very day President Chiang took his oath, Zbigniew Brzezinski was huddling with the Communists on the mainland.

MEANWHILE, BACK at the diplomatic cash registers, things have not been quiet. First, a little background footnote:
Over the years we have refused to sell certain geological survey systems to the Soviet Union because they have a strong potential military use. No sense giving the Communists all our secrets, right?
But now we have decided it's okay to sell them to some Red Chinese request for $2.8 billion in geological survey equipment, infrared scanning system and all.
Peking says it plans to use the infrared light to measure hot spots in the earth to help predict earthquakes, of which it has had several disastrous ones in the past few years.

THAT'S NOT ALL. Carter is also thinking about approving the sale of another bit of geological technology known as the array processor. The Red Chinese say they need it to explore their ocean beds for oil.
The Pentagon, which isn't happy with the idea, says it's also a dandy way to sniff out any submarines floating around China's 4,000-mile coast.
Brzeznev thinks so, too, and he's not only unhappy with the technological trade-off, he's jumping-up-and-down mad. So mad he even dropped his peacenik cover long enough to warn Carter he was playing a "dangerous" game that he may "bitterly regret."

NYET, NYET, says Mr. C. Playing the Chinese against the Russians is the farthest thing from his mind. And he can't imagine why Brzeznev would be upset. It's not as if he was okaying any sale of military weapons to Red China.
Of course, he has notified Peking it's now all right with him if the Chinese dictators buy planes and anti-tank weapons from France or Britain or wherever they can make a deal. But he thinks it's right small-minded of Mr. B. to object to his reversal of policy, sudden though it may be.
It doesn't mean he's not eager to talk arms limitations with the Russians. Also, he hopes the Kremlin won't take undue umbrage over the science mission huddling with the Red Chinese in Peking.

ALL THAT IS, he says, is technical talk about agriculture, energy and medical research. And the fact that the head of NASA is along is merely because "we have some very important relationships with the Chinese that need to be pursued, such as trade, exchange of science and technology, etc."
What's the Russian equivalent of "Oh, yeah?"
The Taiwanese, who can read the handwriting on the Great Wall as well as Brzeznev, are waiting for the ax to fall and wondering how soon Carter will fell brave enough to cut them off from American protection.

THEY ARE WELL aware that anything that smacks of total abandonment is sure to stir up a storm in Congress, and among Americans who feel that dumping Free China gives treachery a bad name.
So the question, students, is how to promote hanky-panky with Peking without losing face at home, and how to promote "a strong and secure China" without forcing the Russians to do something foolish in retaliation.
So, while we hold our breath, anyone for Chinese checkers?

AN EDITORIAL:

Solons Play Tax Shell Game

IN ITS OWN version of the ageless chicken-and-egg debate, Congress is spending the summer squabbling over which should be cut first: Taxes or spending.
Our advice: Why not the both? And now? Maybe the weary taxpayer should be happy that the question of clamping a lid on either the income or the outgo of federal budgeting has been opened to debate.
Decades of demagogic rhetoric by politicians on both the Democratic and Republican sides of the aisle have hardened the taxpayer, though, to expect no miracles from Capitol Hill.

ADDING HIS OWN dimension to the issue this past week, Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller advised Congress not to enact two GOP-backed tax proposals.
"We should not cut taxes first," he said. "We can't be sure Congress will later reduce spending..."
Miller thus proved himself a master of understatement. The last time Congress cut spending the Grand Canyon was just a gully.

"The easy decision is to give people money," the Fed chairman said. "The hard decision is to cut spending and produce the budget dividends that can be given to people."
While there could be widespread agreement on that, Miller's argument against a rollback in capital gains taxes is considerably weaker.

He opposes the proposal by Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., and Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., for reducing the maximum tax on capital gains from the current 49 percent to 25 percent.
Reducing the tax on profits from the sale of assets, Miller argued, "would not have an efficient and direct impact on capital spending by business."
Backers of the measure contend it would spur business investments, thus creating jobs and improving the economy.

ANOTHER PROPOSAL by Miller is worthy of acceptance by Congress, though, notwithstanding what it does about the capital gains tax.
He suggested the scheduled Jan. 1 increase in the minimum wage be postponed. The 25-cent per hour increase, to $2.90, on top of this year's hefty boost would accelerate the inflationary spiral, the Federal Reserve chairman said.
If Congress has been listening to the sounds of a Tax Revolt and watching the positive response to every effort that is made to hold down inflation, it will pay careful attention to what Miller says.

It boils down to this: "Quit being so liberal with the way you handle money or risk economic collapse."

AN EDITORIAL:

Bonn Voyage Is Chicken Soup

THERE WERE no surprises reported out of the economic summit at Bonn this week. The problems today are essentially those that have dominated discussions at three previous gatherings.
To wit: inflation and a weakening dollar in the U.S., strong but slow-growth economies in West Germany and Japan, a chronic trade imbalance between those two and the other major nations and chronically weak economies elsewhere.
All seven are agreed on the problems, but not on how to deal with them.

IT HAD BEEN hoped that detailed trade talks underway in Geneva would produce a broad agreement on a number of key points which could be ratified in Bonn.
But U.S. negotiator Robert Strauss indicated that the Geneva bargaining is only "80 percent of the way home." The most that can be expected from Bonn is a few sore arms from additional twisting outside the meeting room.
Under the circumstances, we may ask why a summit at all.

A VETERAN diplomatic observer, Joseph C. Harsch, commenting in The Christian Science Monitor, sees in the current disarray a comparison with the London economic conference of 1933, the failure of which historians see as leading directly into World War II.

But the West has learned a number of lessons since 1933—not perfectly, perhaps, but well enough to know the danger of attempting to go it alone and the importance of communication and cooperation.

Bonn and its like may be short on accomplishments, but they do institutionalize communication at the top. And that, as they say of chicken soup, at least can't hurt.

These two people love each other and don't want to divorce, but when faced with the choice of Mrs. Nini's life and marriage, her life will probably be their choice.
This nation can give food stamps, welfare, and social security to millions of people who can, but won't work, but this nation can't give two people who have worked all their lives, the money that might save a life.
I know that this nation had a problem concerning Welfare. But when two people who still believe in the institution of marriage are being forced into divorce, that is ridiculous!!

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

This Is Not A Revolt, This Is A Revolution!

FRIDAY WAS Bastille Day in France, equivalent there to our Fourth of July. In 1880 the French government chose Bastille Day as the French national holiday. This has been the case for 98 years and it has become to the French people a symbol of royal tyranny.
The Bastille is on the east side of Paris. It fell to a roaring mob on the morning of July 14, 1789. This signaled the spread of the French Revolution to the peasants and the countryside.
However, in simple truth, on July 14 only seven prisoners were confined in the Bastille. They were guarded by the Marquis de Launay (Bernard Jordan), who was drunk. Angered by Launay's stupidity, the seething people captured the prison.

year he had appointed a man named Jean Sanson to be the public executioner. And Sanson guillotined him.
THE REVOLUTION spread eastward. It ignited the Balkans. One after another, the people rose against the Turks and won their freedom—the Greeks in 1829, the Serbians in 1830, the Romanians in 1856 and the Bulgarians in 1878. It awakened even the Arabs from their ageless sleep to a new sense of national purpose.
Within France, the years of intermittent revolution demolished the Bourbons, dethroned the Orleanists, discredited the Bonapartists. And through all this, the French nation became the trunk of democracy in continental Europe.
Our oldest ties are with France, our oldest ally. In the American Revolution Count de Rochambeau commanded the French forces. The Marquis de Lafayette, in turn, returned to France wearing his uniform as an American major general.

KING CHARLES began the Bastille April 22, 1370 as a fortress to protect Paris against English attack. In the 17th century Cardinal de Richelieu was the first to use it as a state prison, the prisoners averaging 40 a year.
They included Cardinal de Richelieu's political opponents and those held under the infamous "lettre de cachet."
Under King Louis XIV the Bastille became a place of judicial detention where the lieutenant of police could hold prisoners. And under the regency of King Philippe II, duc d'Orleans, prisoners being tried by Parliament were detained. Actually, banned books were also placed in the Bastille.

CIVIL DISORDERS forced Lafayette to flee to Austria. He was caught and imprisoned at the Moravian fortress of Olmutz. Lafayette tried to escape, but failed. And today he is buried at Paris' Picpus Cemetery in Virginia soil brought from Virginia aboard the battleship "Virginia."
Several kings came and went—as did Napoleon, whose genius we admire but whose despotism we abhor. He was supremely wise on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays an absolute fool.
In fact, when this Corsican adventurer, a true mystic, saw a throne vacant, he put a relative on it.
Then the limping Talleyrand—partly avaricious, very civilized and all French—raised France like a phoenix from the ashes of Napoleon's consuming ambitions.
In every emergency, including the Cuban missile crisis of a few years ago, France was the first to join in by announcing her defiance of the Soviet Union.
Bastille Day—and France—should have a place in the hearts of all Americans.

Pompous and impossible King Louis XVI called himself the "Sun King" and declared, "I am the state." He told his courtiers, bent nearly double in obsequiousness, that he wanted a hunting lodge. They came up with Versailles.
BUT TO PAY for Versailles and his many other extravaganzas, King Louis wrecked the French economy.
When the Bastille fell King Louis said: "This is a revolt." A courtier corrected him: "No, sire, this is a revolution." And so it was. The Revolution brought what the French call "le jeu de poux"—the wearing effect that erodes things.
French revolutionary Georges Jacques Danton said: "The metal is boiling over; unless King Louis XVI watches the furnace he will be scalded." The King was guillotined Jan. 21, 1793. That

Tech Play Dispute Seen As First Amendment Issue

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
Two recent letters have criticized a play at Tech that has a nude scene. I realize that such primitive minds as these find that the human body is obscene and sinful.
However, the play is in an enclosed auditorium where no one will be offended except those who freely choose to buy tickets and who are already aware of the scene. The players have also freely chosen to participate.
This is a First Amendment issue that involves responsibility with freedom. We must be responsible in not perverting the human body nor flaunting it at those who do not wish to look, but we must also be free to glorify it in the arts for those who do choose to look.
I would hate to think of us destroying the museums that hold the nudes painted and sculpted by the great Masters throughout the ages.

Reader Upbraids White House For 'Brush Off' On Complaint

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
Here is an open letter to a White House aide of President Carter:
Dear Mr. Landon Kite,
Your letter in behalf of President Carter arrived today. How disappointing. Here is a President with a zero public image and he couldn't care less.
He listens to special interest groups, but never the American people. He has time to consult with the foreign relations council, but not our elected officials. Be patient, we are told.
Congress has had anti-busing bills since 1971, but every year more children are forced into dangerous traffic. How can the courts continue to declare decisions based on the 14th Amendment when technically the 14th Amendment has not even been ratified?
How can strangers from Washington, D.C., legally rule on schools in Lubbock, Texas? When did the courts and Congress lay claim to our children?
There is no justice in the Lubbock desegregation plan. The court trial was one big laugh. The resulting plan is a game of musical chairs.
There are millions of mothers just like me in this country. We are the ones in P-T-A and scouts and church. We are the ones the children come to for answers to their questions.
Children are practical—they don't understand busing. Why must they do without air conditioning and heat to conserve energy and yet buses burn fuel needlessly?
Don't people in Washington realize that smart kids are not made in just one color? How sad for this country to be run by people who do not know the children today, nor care about their future.
It would take a miracle for your boss, President Carter, to get re-elected. He shakes hands with America's enemies. Surely, they do not outnumber parents.
When you send me my form letter from the White House, I would appreciate it if you would address me as Mrs., not Ms. I am proud of my job as a wife and mother and pray that someday you and everyone else in Washington, D.C., can understand this.

Dilemma Of Aged Couple Stirs Protest By Reader

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
I am writing pertaining to an article and picture that ran in the morning edition on Tuesday, July 11th. The article was about Howard and Marie Nini, of Flushing, N.Y.
The Ninis have been married for 36 years, but may have to get a divorce so that Mrs. Nini will be able to get Medicaid for hospitalization. She has suffered from Huntington's Disease for 10 years.
These two people love each other and don't want to divorce, but when faced with the choice of Mrs. Nini's life and marriage, her life will probably be their choice.

Man Urges Taxpayers To 'Say It Where It Counts'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
For years now, we the tax-paying citizens of Lubbock have been screaming at our Federal Government for not listening to us when, at the same time, the City and School officials of our city were not listening to us either.
Both City and School and the Federal Government's function is to do what the taxpayers tell them to do.
We elect them to office. We pay their salaries. They are supposed to work for us—not against us.
So, what I am proposing to the citizens of Lubbock, Texas, is to ask for the resignation of those officials who will not conform to the wishes of the people who pay their salaries. What Lubbock needs at this time is upright and backboned leadership.
Ask for it, Lubbock. You deserve it. You pay for it.

Another View On Nudity, Horses And Free Choice

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
I am writing in response to Mr. Nislar's letter which appeared in the July 11 editorial section of the Avalanche-Journal. In his letter, Mr. Nislar objects to the University Theatre's forthcoming production of "Equus." There are a couple of points in need of rebuttal.
First, he reasons that if symbolic horses are used why not use symbolic nudity (whatever that is). The reason for using symbolic horses is obvious. Bringing live horses on stage and gouging their eyes out would be a bit tasteless. It might also irritate the S.P.C.A.
Secondly, is the issue of the nudity itself. This is not some exploitative flick. This is a powerful, highly acclaimed drama. The boy's nudity is an integral part of the play. The theatre department has expressed its wish that anyone who might be offended by the nudity stay away.
Mr. Nislar encourages us to try to repress this play. Instead, we should be encouraged to support freedom of expression. We should encourage anything which helps us to understand our fellow human beings.

He Is Not Impressed By Tax Rollback For Some

As usual Wednesday morning I opened one eye and looked at the headlines in The Avalanche-Journal. I almost broke the main spring on the other eye lid as I read "Residential Section In South West Lubbock Gets Tax Rollback."
I thought boy, oh boy maybe we have won. Then I read further and saw that instead of a 7% to 90 percent boost in taxes they were only going to get an increase of 60 to 80 percent. Those lucky people. Their cup runneth over. That is something like your Doctor telling you that he is only going to cut off half your leg, not so severe but crippling just the same.

Wilson Man Says Tech Is Headed Down Wrong Path

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
May I express my appreciation for the recent series of articles written about problems arising at Texas Tech?
We have seen changes being made which cause much concern about the image of the University.
If the trend in higher education is to eliminate all interested supporters except the state and national governments, then Tech is directing its efforts in the right direction.

Children Targeted In Local Assaults

As usual Lubbock homeowners took the brunt of recent city crime, but Lubbock police also were investigating a pair of crimes inflicted on children.

A 13-year-old East Lubbock youth told officers he'd gone to the store for his parents Sunday afternoon, when he noticed a man, in his early to mid-20s, walking ahead.

Without warning, the child told police later, the man spun and grabbed him as he cried, "What did I do?"

"You're about the right kind of type," the youngster said the man told him. "What did I do?" the youngster asked again.

"Nothing. You'll find out in a minute," the man said obliquely.

With that, the suspect dragged the youngster toward a weeded area where the child reportedly was sexually abused by the man.

The youngster said at one point he offered the older man money in hopes the suspect would leave him alone.

"Ain't worth the money," the man reportedly replied.

The youngster said he finally freed himself from the man's grasp by hitting the suspect in the head with a brick that lay nearby.

Another East Lubbock 13-year-old phoned her sister recently to complain of an assault at the hands of an older woman.

The youngster said she'd used a "dirty" word and the woman had beaten her with a doubled extension cord.

A witness told police she had observed marks on the child's arms and back. Police are investigating.

Mikel C. Davis of 2628 63rd St. said someone was so determined to empty the gas tanks of four dump trucks recently, he climbed over a 6-foot-high chain link fence to get to them.

An estimated 80 gallons were emptied from the trucks at 308 Municipal Drive, Davis said, and a microphone was ripped from a fifth truck. Some shovels also were stolen, reports indicate.

Guns belonging to Russell Nelms' father were stolen Sunday or Monday from the younger Nelms' 2209 15th St. apartment. The firearms, including five shotguns, were worth an estimated $1,630.

Kelly Rudisill said she left her $400 violin at an Assembly of God Church camp recently, but the instrument reportedly was found by a worker and placed in a cabinet for safekeeping. Despite the precautions, the 18-year-old said someone removed her violin from the cabinet.

Bennie Yett of 819 E. Erskine St. said he screamed at two burglars hauling away a $600 television set Monday and caused the men to drop the set. However, the burglars apparently succeeded earlier in snatching a second set worth $250.

Someone broke into the Quality Finance Co., 2811 Ave. Q, Monday and stole a $65 revolver. In doing so, the intruders caused an estimated $1,000 damage to the firm's wall and two doors, reports indicate.

Bill Groux of 7000 Indiana Ave. said someone smashed a 5 1/2 foot-by-6 foot plate glass window at his business over the weekend, causing damage estimated at $150.

Burglars walked up to Ed Robertson's front porch at his 1601 58th St. residence recently and stole a $600 air conditioner.

Dennis Gray of 1105 Ave. X said someone stole his $60 television recently and Gerald Carter of 4222 13th St. reported the theft of his $160 bike.

According to James Troy Bass of 2316 14th St., rear, someone removed a screen from an unlocked window at his home this weekend and made off with $600 worth of stereo equipment.

The same type goods, along with a television set, reportedly were stolen from Arthur Lee Cherry's residence at 2020 5th St., No. 42, recently. The $950 haul came after a burglar reportedly reached through a previously broken window and unlocked a rear door.

La Vaughn Nelson

Services for La Vaughn Nelson, 49, of Hereford will be at 10 a.m. today in Sanders Memorial Chapel.

Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nelson, a former Lubbock resident, died at 6 p.m. Saturday in her home.

Mrs. Nelson had lived in Hereford 16 years.

Survivors include her husband, Bill; a son, John of Roswell, N.M.; and her father, W.O. Bearden of Lubbock.

Troys D. Riddle

HEREFORD (Special) — Services for Troys Dean Riddle, 28, of Hereford, will be at 2 p.m. today in St. Anthony's Catholic Church here with the Rev. Frank Etheridge, associate pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in West Park Cemetery here under direction of Gilliland-Watson Funeral Home.

Riddle was killed Sunday afternoon when the single-engine plane he was piloting crashed six miles south of Brownfield.

He was a Hereford native and was employed by Riddle Welding Works here. He married Loraine Reinard Oct. 15, 1977 in Hereford.

Survivors include his wife; his parents, Troys Riddle of Hereford and Betty Randell of Midland; two brothers, David of Midland and Tim of Hereford; three sisters, Dana Sue Enabitt of Lubbock, Holly Randell of Midland and Gene Riddle of Hereford; and his grandparents, Frank Carl and Iva Riddle, both of Hereford.

F.M. Roberson

Services for F.M. Roberson, 107, will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Ford Memorial Chapel of the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. J.T. Bolding, a retired Baptist minister, will officiate. Burial will follow in the City of Lubbock Cemetery under the direction of Rix Funeral Directors.

The body will lie in state from 8 a.m. Wednesday until 10 a.m. Wednesday at Rix Funeral Directors.

Roberson died Sunday evening in a Dublin home where he had lived the past few months.

The Henderson County, Tenn., native married the late former Maude Barnett Aug. 22, 1891, in Comanche County. She died in 1955.

The couple moved to Lubbock and farmed northwest of the city from 1926 until his retirement. He was a member of the First Baptist Church for more than 50 years.

Survivors include two sons, Earl of Dublin and Don of Odessa; two daughters, Nena Roberson of Bryan and Lady Clare Phillips of Littlefield; 18 grandchildren; 50 great-grandchildren; and 21 great-great-grandchildren.

Vincente Robles

Services for Vincente E. Robles, 58, KWGO radio personality, are pending with Rix Funeral Directors.

Robles, known to listeners as "El Compadre," died about 7 a.m. Monday after an apparent heart attack at his home at 1608 York Ave.

The Pharr native had been a radio announcer for station KWGO since he moved to Lubbock in 1970.

Robles had been active in numerous activities in Lubbock's Mexican-American community, including the annual local celebration of Mexican Independence Day. He was a member of Comerciantes Organizados Mexico Americanos and an honorary member of the Reese Air Force Base Mexican-American club.

He was in the military during World War II and was a member of the Bethel Methodist Church in Raymondville.

Survivors include his son, Robert Antonio of Mercedes; three daughters, Rebecca Zamora, Ruth Marie Robles and Rose Ann Warwick, all of Lubbock; four brothers, Sylvester, Jose, Lazaro and Florenzo, all of Raymondville; a sister, Natividad Alvarado of Raymondville; and four grandchildren.

Survivors include his son, Joseph M. of Las Vegas, Nev.; three daughters, Joann Roten and Lois Strange, both of San Antonio and Lorena Ashcroft of Lubbock; two sisters, Velma Grigsby of Canyon and Alma Harrison of Portland, Ore.; two brothers, John of Marietta, Okla., and Odus of Ardmore, Okla.; eight and Odus of Ardmore, Okla.; eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Survivors include his mother, Ruth Young Sparks and his stepfather, Jimmy Sparks, both of Lubbock; two brothers, William of Arlington and John of Austin; and a sister, Dorothy Feeley of Madison, Wis.

Services for John Allen Wood, 81, of Smyer are pending with the Resthaven-Singleton-Wilson Funeral Home.

Wood died at 12:15 p.m. Monday in Lubbock's Colonial Nursing Home after a long illness.

The retired farmer had lived in Hockley County since 1937. He was a member of the Levelland Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Clara Robertson, Mrs. Ella Elkins and Mrs. Margaret Smith; three sons, Doug, Woody and Virgil; two sisters, Mrs. Annie McDonald and Mrs. Clara Roberts; a brother, Warren; 24 grandchildren; and 22 great-grandchildren.

Services for Tom F. Young, 34, of Fort Worth and formerly of Lubbock, are pending with Sanders Funeral Home here.

Young died about 3 p.m. Sunday in his home after suffering an apparent heart attack. Medical examiner Felix Gwozdez ruled the death of natural causes.

Young had lived in the Dallas-Fort Worth area several years where he was in the restaurant business. He graduated from Lubbock High School and attended Texas Tech University.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 18, 1978

PHYSICAL
 Critic: 9, 20, 32, 43, 55, 66 — Susceptible to infections
 High: 10-18, 33-42, 56-65 — Hop to it, it's your day
 Low: 1-8, 21-31, 44-54, 67-75 — Fatigue easily, rest

EMOTIONAL
 Critic: 3, 17, 31, 45, 59, 73 — Don't make quick decisions
 High: 1-2, 18-30, 46-58, 74-85 — In good mood, enjoy
 Low: 4-16, 32-44, 60-72 — Try being calm

INTELLECTUAL
 Critic: 8, 24, 41, 57, 74, 90 — Probable anxiety
 High: 9-23, 42-56, 75-89 — Count on your mind
 Low: 1-7, 25-40, 58-73, 91-95 — Ponder choices carefully

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

| 9 | A16 | 20 | 24 | A11 | 4 | 13 | A7 | 17 | 3 | | | |

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

| Jan. | Feb. | March | April | May | June |
|------|------|-------|-------|-----|------|
| P | E | I | P | E | I |

| P | E | I | P | E | I |
| A | 20 | 13 | 16 | 5 | 16 |
| B | 21 | 14 | 17 | 6 | 17 |

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Business Booming For Antiques

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A miniature, 200-year-old child's desk with the original nicks and scrapes sold at an auction in Gardiner, Maine, this spring for $17,000.

Just a month later, after passing through the hands of at least one other dealer, the prized 22-inch desk turned up at an antiques show with a $28,500 price tag.

It all goes to show that in the antiques business, "dealers will always go after what they think is rare," says Sam Pennington, the editor of Maine Antiques Digest.

These days almost everything is scarce — even advertising space.

Pennington's 5-year-old monthly had a waiting list of 70 advertisers last month who wanted to put ads in the 128-page magazine. Ad space was sold out 10 days before the deadline.

The editor says the space crunch is partly due to the success of his ad-inspiring willing buyers with sellers. But the shortage also illustrates a booming antique market marked by record prices that have been accelerating for about 10 years.

With inflation devouring savings accounts and with the stock market shaky, "there's a great feeling that money isn't worth anything anymore," says Pennington. "So people are turning to things."

Antique jewelry, country furniture and American folk art are some of the hottest selling items on the market, he says. But collectors can be found for almost anything, from old peg legs to bottle caps.

Gray Boone, editor of Antiques Monthly, said the volume of business in antiques in the country last year was $4 billion, and she expects to see at least $5 billion, "maybe pushing $6 billion" this year.

Sotheby Park Bernet, one of a few elite international auction houses, handled $70 million in business in 1977 and expects to handle $112 in the season that has just ended. The traditional antiques "season" runs from autumn to late spring.

The soaring prices may be good for the market and are contributing to a greater abundance of antiques in circulation, but the experts caution that the high prices reflect more than rising value.

Pennington says inflation accounts for a sizeable chunk of the margin, and the knowledge that people are willing to pay dearly for antiques has given dealers the confidence to pay the higher prices. Dealers must be wary that their replacement stock doesn't cost more than what they just sold, he warns.

The experts advise that not all antiques are a good investment. They say it takes years of collecting — and getting burned — to be able to determine subtle differences between valued pieces and copies.

Pennington says flatly that, except for high-priced items, antiques are not necessarily good investments.

"They don't pay a dividend, you have to buy at retail value and sell, for the most part, at wholesale to a dealer," he says. An auction house will demand a commission of up to 25 percent.

The experts advise that the inexperienced collector is better off buying from a reputable dealer, unless he has time for "antique picking" in the barns and old estates where the prized family heirlooms are hidden.

Nixon Tapes, Papers Given To Archives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tapes and presidential papers used in the Watergate trials of former President Richard M. Nixon's top aides have been turned over to the National Archives, but officials say the public may not have access to them for some time.

Richard Jacobs, acting director of the Nixon materials project at the Archives, said Monday the material must be processed and a Nixon lawsuit over the materials resolved before the public can listen to the tapes and read the documents.

But, Jacobs added, "We are working toward that goal."

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, who presided at most of the trials, ordered presidential evidence used in the cases turned over to the Archives during an unpublicized hearing last week.

Sirica was acting on a petition filed by James B. Rhoads, archivist of the United States, who requested the material after the Supreme Court ruled that the courts should not be charged with responsibility for deciding what materials should be released.

Jacobs said that after Sirica issued his order, "We then went to the vault and the clerk of the court turned over to us all the presidential materials that had been used in the trials."

The Archives received 38 original reel tape recordings plus 176 duplicates, some transcripts, some notes made by defendants. These materials were added to Watergate and other Nixon administration records turned over to the Archives earlier — in all, 18,000 cubic feet of material.

In the aggregate, it amounts to 36 million pages of documents, not all of it used in the Watergate trials and thus not all public evidence.

Notes made by former Nixon aides H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, John W. Dean III and Charles Colson while they were on the White House staff also were among the material turned over by Sirica. There also are some Dictabelt and cassette tapes.

"We have retrieved everything that was used in the trials," Jacobs said. The materials that Sirica turned over amount to about six cubic feet.

Jacobs said highly sensitive materials in the entire Nixon records "are stored in a high security vault at the Archives, in steel cages in a vault within a vault."

PBS Program Examines Controversial Sculptor

NEW YORK (AP) — Capturing the life and work of sculptor Mark di Suvero on film was, says Francois de Menil, a "battle won little by little."

"It was the artist saying everything was to be found in his work," the filmmaker recalls, "and me telling him there was more, that was not all there was to it."

"It was a struggle and it was an intrusion, but at the same time, we finally did get an intimate picture of the artist," says de Menil, whose film, "North Star: Mark di Suvero" will be telecast Tuesday at 9 p.m. CDT on many Public Broadcasting Service stations.

It's an intimate portrait, indeed, of the controversial American artist whose sculptures often are composed of huge construction beams and other iron and steel materials.

"It was done by hanging out with Mark, staying as close to him as possible, and making the experience as little an intrusion on him as possible," says de Menil of the production. "The whole idea was to have something intimate, to see what he does what he does."

"North Star," as it turned out, went beyond the why to study how di Suvero works. The artist permitted de Menil to film for the first time the actual piece-by-piece development of a huge metal sculpture.

"Never before had anyone watched di Suvero create a piece, actually figure it out as he put it together," de Menil says.

The idea for the film, says de Menil, came from Barbara Rose, the art critic, who helped in the production.

It was Rose who arranged for a French factory town to provide di Suvero with space, materials and equipment with which to work, de Menil says, "and Mark said that he allowed us to film him there because he was grateful that she had put the project together."

Even then, filming was not always easy, the producer says.

"He was always aware of the camera, and nothing was done to trick him or relax him. He was certainly aware when the camera was running, and often he would wave his hand and shout, 'Cut!'"

"North Star" is an intriguing profile of the artist — following di Suvero's career through a near-fatal accident in 1960, his two years at work while confined to a wheelchair, his recovery by 1965 to walk without crutches.

The film considers the artist's decision to leave the country in 1971 in protest to U.S. involvement in Vietnam, and his vow not to return until the war was over.

Perhaps as important to "North Star" is the de Menil's attempt to catch the artist's work on film.

"The problem is to make the work come alive in a different medium," the filmmaker says. "With something like a painting, with a flat surface, you simply examine the details from several angles."

"Sculpture is three-dimensional, and that requires a whole new set of perspectives," de Menil says. "We got up in a crane to look at his work from views people normally don't have."

Skelton Carrying On Comedy

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Red Skelton celebrates his 66th birthday Tuesday vowing that "as long as I've got a breath in my body, I'm going out and try to make people laugh."

Skelton's routines have changed little from 20 years ago when he lit up the television screen. Gertrude and Heathcliff, Klem Kadiddlehopper, the pantomimes all remain.

Only a knee injury impairs his slapstick humor. "I have to wear a brace on one leg from the falls over a period of years," he said between shows at John Ascuaga's Nugget in nearby Sparks, Nev.

Skelton has no kind words about retirement at any age. "It's all part of a plot. Young people ... shut elderly people off at a certain time because they're afraid our wisdom will get to them and they can't control people."

Skelton's 66th birthday also marks his 55th year in show business. He's conquered minstrel shows, circuses, burlesque, vaudeville, radio, television and the movies.

Commission Offers Investments Guide

WASHINGTON (AP) — One promoter raised more than a million dollars selling abandoned wells while another lured in investors with only a map and list of estimated drilling costs.

The Securities and Exchange Commission warns that persons interested in the potential for rich returns should also be aware of the risks involved in investments in coal, oil and gas exploration.

Most investment opportunities are legitimate but many involve risks the average consumer may not anticipate, officials said, with consumers in some cases even responsible for losses beyond their original investments.

The commission urges investors to be wary of unsolicited phone calls offering investment opportunities, be hesitant to send money by mail and resist pressure to act quickly. Seek proof in writing for all claims and check the background of the person involved in the venture.

To help, the commission has prepared a booklet listing your rights and responsibilities before spending money. "Investing in Oil, Gas and Coal" is available without charge from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 687F, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Conspiracy Said Crushed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Spyros Kyprianou said Monday an anti-government conspiracy had been crushed, but no details were announced. Government critics demanded proof of the alleged conspiracy and punishment of those involved.

At the same time, Kyprianou announced the dismissal of Tasos Papadopoulos as the Greek Cypriot representative to the peace talks with the Turkish Cypriots, but said there was no link between the dismissal and the conspiracy. The president accused Papadopoulos of "blinding and sick ambition, of envy and hatred." A government announcement Friday claimed the existence of an anti-government conspiracy. Life continued normally on the divided island Monday.

Dissident's Wife Appeals To Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of Soviet Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky called on Congress Monday to take concrete actions against the Soviet Union on behalf of her husband, who was sentenced last week to 13 years at hard labor for treason.

"Probably the Soviet Union does not understand words," Mrs. Avital Shcharansky said in an appearance on Capitol Hill. "It is our turn to act; the rest of the world is watching us."

"I appeal to members of the U.S. Congress," she said. "It depends on you now whether people back in the Soviet Union will get help or whether the same catastrophe that happened 40 years ago will be repeated."

She apparently referred to mass trials that occurred in the Soviet Union during the Stalin era.

Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., chairman of an ad hoc committee seeking Shcharansky's release, said the most effective action the United States could take would be to refuse to send an American team to the 1980 Olympic games in Moscow.

Receives Standing Ovation
Mrs. Shcharansky, speaking through an interpreter, received a standing ovation from some 50 congressmen who attended the session at Drinan's office.

Although her appearance had been billed as a news conference, no questions were permitted. Instead, Drinan announced that all congressmen present could have their photographs taken with Mrs. Shcharansky.

Though no questions were allowed, Mrs. Shcharansky told a reporter later that she knows nothing specific about speculation that her husband might be exchanged for two Soviet citizens accused of spying in this country for Russia.

Husband "Not A Spy"
"You must understand, he is not a spy," she said of her husband. "But if it happens, I'm happy. Now I think it is very important for him to be free."

Rabbi Ronald Greenwald of New York, who helped arrange an earlier three-way prisoner exchange between Mozambique, East Germany and the United States, said Sunday that he has been involved in negotiations to swap Shcharansky for the two Russians.

The State Department has declined comment on the statement, however, and White House press secretary Jody Powell said he knew nothing about any such negotiations.

Olympic Games "Impossible"
Mrs. Shcharansky was asked what specific actions Congress might take to put pressure on the Soviet Union, but declined to give recommendations because, "I am not a politician. But I think it is impossible to have the Olympic games in Moscow," she added.

She said participating in the Olympics in Moscow would have "bad associations, just like the games in Germany in 1936."

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., the House Democratic whip, said relations between the United States and the Soviet Union will be "dangerously impaired" if Shcharansky and other dissidents are not released.

And Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., chairman of the House Republican Conference, said that for the United States to stand idly by would place it in the role "of an accomplice who has permitted the offense to take place. And this we do not intend to do."

Speaking into a thicket of microphones, Mrs. Shcharansky told the congressmen: "I hope I appeal to the right people because in your hands is the fate of the Jewish people in the Soviet Union and the fate of my husband."

She said the recent trials have been intended to show the Soviet population the worthlessness of the rights supposedly guaranteed them in the Helsinki agreement. She said her husband survived 16 months of imprisonment and "horrible" treatment before his trial began. Nonetheless she said, "he pleads to the rest of mankind that he is not guilty."

At the White House earlier, Mrs. Shcharansky personally thanked Vice President Walter F. Mondale for the efforts of the U.S. government in behalf of her husband and other imprisoned Jewish dissidents.

eration purposes. Districts would be free to spend the remaining $20 per student however they'd like.

The maximum amount by which a school district would be required to reduce its taxes would be 50 percent, Nugent and Nabers said.

The lawmakers said that according to preliminary statistics, the Lubbock Independent School District would get more than $6.4 million in additional state aid.

Light Company Gets Tough With Police

CLOVIS, N.M. (UPI) — Electric company officials thought the state hadn't paid its bill, so they pulled the plug Monday on a state office building housing the state police office.

Electricity to the Bruce King State Office Building was shut off for about 20 minutes because of a dispute concerning the payment of the electric bill.

The building houses several state agencies, including the state police office. A spokeswoman said the state police lost radio communications while the power was off from 3 p.m. to 3:20 p.m., but said no emergencies occurred during that time.

A spokesman for the utility attempted to minimize the halting of service to the building.

"It was a matter of quite a lot of misunderstandings," said Gerald Dorough, manager of Southwestern Public Service Co. "They had gotten behind (in paying the electrical bill)."

"We talked to Sante Fe and got everything straightened out," Dorough said. "There's supposed to be a check in the mail."

Insurance Board Sees Rate Increase

AUSTIN (AP) — The price of family and personal car insurance should rise an average of 3.2 percent, well below the current inflation rate, the State Insurance Board's staff says.

"It (the increase) is not automatic. I think the board is going to look at that quite deeply and quite vigorously," said board chairman Hugh Yantis.

Actual premium changes would vary widely across the state, ranging from a 17 percent increase for a typical driver in Jefferson, Potter and Randall counties to a 15 percent cut in Kaufman County.

Board members will receive the staff recommendations, as well as the insurance companies' request for an 8.9 percent average statewide increase, at Wednesday's annual auto insurance hearing.

The hearing also will cover Yantis' proposals that would, in effect, require companies to cover all drivers with satisfactory traffic records. Yantis contends there is too much discrimination based on such factors as marital status, occupation and kind of car.

For all coverages combined, private and commercial, the staff recommended a 5.2 percent increase and the companies want a 10.7 percent jump.

Company income from premiums would jump $63 million, to $1.278 billion, if the board grants all the increases proposed by its staff.

Board statisticians define the typical driver as over 25 and owning a new Ford, Chevrolet or Plymouth, which is driven to work but not used in business.

Staff recommendations include these average statewide changes for different categories of private passenger coverage:

- Bodily injury liability, basic $10,000-$20,000 limits, down 2.8 percent.
- Bodily injury liability, extra coverage, down 27.1 percent.
- $5,000 property damage liability, up 5.9 percent.
- Medical payments, down 19.4 percent.
- PIP, down 19.8 percent.
- Uninsured motorist coverage, up 8 percent.

discounts through the General Services Administration (GSA). In many cases, the GSA discounts are as good as or better than Hyatt's.

However, Rickman still believes Hyatt will be able to show it has saved the district $200,000 or more on purchases, as the firm has promised.

Also Monday, the hospital board unanimously passed a resolution urging the state to pick up the costs for medical care to indigents. The resolution recently was approved by the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association at the request of Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw.

Hospital board members said they doubt the state will go along with such a proposal.

Arms Talks To Resume Despite Dissident Furor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, despite its indignation over Soviet treatment of dissidents, will resume negotiations with Moscow today on ways to limit the export of conventional weapons.

Declaring that international arms traffic poses "serious risks to regional stability and thus to world peace," State Department press officer Thomas Reston said that issue is too important to be linked to Soviet performance in the human rights area.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance used similar language last week in justifying a resumption of strategic arms limitation talks with the Moscow during the trials of Soviet dissident leaders Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

The announcement of the talks on conventional arms negotiations came just three days after Shcharansky was convicted and sentenced to 13 years imprisonment and hard labor. An eight-year sentence was handed to Ginzburg last week.

Some members of Congress vigorously opposed Vance's decision to continue the SALT talks in light of the trials of the dissidents.

Reston said he was not aware whether any congressional leaders had been advised of the decision to resume the talks on conventional arms. But officials were prepared for another round of protests from Congress.

Officials said the administration had planned all along to withhold the announcement of the conventional arms talks until shortly before they were scheduled to start.

MURDER SITE VIGIL—Sirlint Stockade manager Mike Click, 25, watches with an unidentified fellow employee as police officers comb the restaurant and its parking lot for clues in the murders of six persons in Oklahoma City Sunday night. change believed dropped in the killers' flight was found outside the back door.

"The motive obviously was robbery," said police Sgt. Tom Mundy.

Mundy also said police believed there was more than one killer and that the slaying was not the result of a sudden unplanned frenzy.

"I would venture to say there appeared to be a little planning involved," he said. "They obviously were very intent people."

Heggy suggested the restaurant might have been picked because of its location beside I-240, a link to I-35 running north and south into Kansas and Texas.

Customer Information Sought
Click told police several persons, including a deaf couple, had been seen at the restaurant a short time before the killing. Police were seeking further information about any other Sunday night customers.

Steve Gattenby, 16, told police he had visited his friend Lindsay last Sunday and apparently left 15 to 30 minutes before the shootings.

"I guess if I had stayed in there a couple of minutes longer talking with David I would probably have never made it out, and the police would be carrying me out with the rest of them," he said, his voice quivering.

"I heard it on the radio," he said. "I was in my car, going home. I knew David was in there and I came back."

Chuck Warner, 17, had worked with two of the victims as a busboy.

Shock Expressed
"I can't believe someone could kill that many people in cold blood," he said. "A person like that has to be deranged."

John Wright, 20, a former employee who is moving to Little Rock, Ark., could barely control his outrage at the "totally stupid" killings.

"It's a shame," he said. "They are all just kids going to school. Man, it's the most horrible thing I've ever heard of."

Summit

where. Schmidt, host of the summit, said a follow-up meeting of officials of the seven nations would be held later this year to monitor how well each was meeting the commitments.

Schmidt also declared West Germany was "very satisfied with our results" and said his country was prepared to make a "substantial contribution to stimulate" its economy and increase growth by one percent beyond the current 1978 growth target of 3.5 percent.

The pledge by most of the nations to stimulate their economies is aimed at increasing employment internationally. Most of the nations, except for the United States, have relatively high unemployment rates.

President Carter left Bonn shortly after 8 p.m. (2 p.m. CDT) on his way home to Washington.

and Wichita Falls recorded a 106-degree high.

Through Saturday, forecasters on the South Plains and in most parts of the state predict no relief from the soaring temperatures and dry, parched winds.

"As far as we can tell, we're going at it for at least another week or so anyway before anything even looks like it might change. And then we don't even know for sure about that," a not-too-hopeful Lubbock weatherman predicted Monday. "It's just hot and it'll probably get hotter," another said.

Protest Gatherings Favor Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Everything starts someplace else but it finishes right here," said Police Capt. Joseph Mazur, a mild undertone of complaint in his voice.

"Take the Bakke decision. It began in California, but where do the protesters come? New York City went broke, where did their policemen and firemen demonstrate? The Shah of Iran visits. Who gets the pickets and the bricks? We do."

Get Capt. Mazur rolling on the subject of protest marches and he'll rattle off a decade's worth. Vietnam. Postal workers. Yuppies. Human rights in this country and abroad. Pro-abortion. Anti-abortion.

"This is the capital and this is where people come to," Mazur says.

"Expect any trouble with the latest group?"

"You mean the Indians? Nah!"

"No, the traveling salesmen."

"Traveling salesmen?" Mazur replied.

"You kidding?"

There was indeed such a demonstration planned for Tuesday as Salesmen's Awareness Day — a serious matter for traveling salesmen wanting to impress congressmen that some pending legislation will hurt their income and retail sales generally.

At the time of the conversation, the police department's Special Operations Division was preparing for a group of Indians who had marched across the country to plead their case for regaining lost lands, water and fishing rights.

As Mazur says, Washington is the place people go to when they've got a beef. Last year the police department issued 252 parade permits. That, of course, includes such benign spectacles as the Cherry Blossom parade, but it also leaves out the sometimes-hairy demonstrations at embassies that arise without benefit of permit.

The British probably started the custom by marching on Washington in 1814, leaving a bigger mess than any later demonstration. They burned the Capitol, the president's house and most other public buildings.

In 1861, Virginia threw in with the South, and the cry was "On to Washington." For the rest of the Civil War, the city was a target.

The first major political protest apparently was Coney's Army — some 300 unemployed workers who marched from Massillon, Ohio, in 1894 to "petition the government for a redress of grievances." Coney and others tried to speak from the Capitol steps and were jailed.

At the time, the entire federal work force consisted of 130 clerks.

The 20th Century's first notable protest gatherings, in the latter part of Herbert Hoover's administration, were the hunger marches that seared the capital with the country's acute economic distress.

The first ones, in December 1931, were relatively peaceful. Then in June 1932, a "bonus army" of unemployed veterans came to petition Congress for immediate payment of a war bonus, and they stayed.

As former soldiers, organized in semi-military fashion, they set up crude camps. One group took possession of condemned buildings on Pennsylvania Avenue and while resisting efforts of police to evict them on July 28, one man was killed and several were injured.

Later the same day, Hoover ordered federal troops to drive out the demonstrators. The soldiers burned the huts and tents and the unarmed bonus marchers were routed. Two soldiers in command positions that ignoble day: Douglas MacArthur and Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In 1963, a quarter million people stretched from the Washington Monument to the Lincoln Memorial to hear Martin Luther King Jr.'s Dream, a dream of a day when black and white would live together.

A commemorative book of that day includes this paragraph:

"One remembers most the faces and the feet. There were feet of every imaginable description, some of them bare, some of them stylishly shod; the feet of old women who had stood long over white folks' stoves and the feet of old men who had stood long in mines and factories; feet used to the outdoors ... feet that ached easily and were favored gently as the people walked ... the feet of the young, feet fresh from college campuses and offices, feet modestly shod."

There was no counting the marches of the '60s, the years of Vietnam and war protest and defiance of the draft. Capt. Mazur says some of the crowds in those days were bigger than in the 1963 march. They were certainly more raucous and hostile.

Then came the Richard Nixon regime and the 1969 March on the Pentagon by the people Norman Mailer called "The Armies of the Night"; May Day, when the White House encouraged thousands of arrests; the Saturday Night Massacre, when crowds exhorted motorists to "honk for impeachment."

There have been poor people's encampments, mother's marches, "Honor America Day" rallies, "Right-to-Life" vigils. There have been demonstrations against the Soviet Union, against the leaders of Iran and Israel and Egypt; there have been mass marches for symbols such as Hungary's Crown of St. Stephen.

In recent weeks, 50,000 to 100,000 people jammed the Mall to support an extension of time for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The crowd Tuesday won't be anywhere near that — probably under a 1,000. But it may start a new line of jokes that begin "Hear the one about the traveling salesman and the congressman's daughter ..."

Tiny El Salvador in Central America claims it has more paved roads per square mile than the United States.

Ship Adrift Near Florida

MIAMI (AP) — A 605-foot tanker filled with 8 million gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel lost power after an engine room fire Monday and was adrift in the Florida Straits, the Coast Guard said.

One crewman was picked up by a Coast Guard boat and transported to Marathon, Fla., where he was taken by ambulance to Fisherman's Hospital, said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Schenck.

Jasper Farr, 54, of LaMarque, Texas, was listed in satisfactory condition suffering from "fume inhalation," a hospital spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Schenck said the tanker, Mount Explorer, reported the engine room fire at 6:30 a.m. EDT as it was about 40 miles east of Key West. The fire was extinguished a short time later.

There were no reports that the tanker's 14,000-ton cargo of volatile fuels was in danger of catching fire or leaking.

Schenck said the U.S.-registry Mount Explorer, on a trip from Texas City to North Carolina, is owned by Eller and Co. of Miami.

A Coast Guard cutter from Key West was sent to monitor the disabled tanker, which Schenck said was drifting to the east away from any nearby land mass.

He said plans were for commercial tugs to tow the disabled tanker to Port Everglades, Fla., later this week for repairs.

BUS PLUNGES INTO NILE — Workers use cables Monday in an attempt to recover a bus from the Nile River near Cairo, Egypt. The city bus, packed with soldiers and workers, swerved to miss a truck, smashed through a retaining wall and plunged into the river, killing more than 50 passengers, police and witnesses reported. (AP Laserphoto)

56 Die In Nile Plunge

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A jammed city bus bounced off a cement-lined truck, crashed through a roadside wall and tumbled into the Nile River early Monday, killing at least 56 passengers, it was reported by police and eyewitnesses.

At least 11 passengers and the bus driver, who leaped free before the plunge, survived. Police said most of the dead, many of them young soldiers, drowned when trapped in the bus as it sank into 25 feet of water.

One survivor, hotel waiter Abdulla Gabrel, 35, said the busdriver swerved to avoid the truck but struck it anyway and smashed through the iron-and-stone restraining wall to the river four feet below.

"One minute I was joking with another passenger and the next we were all at the muddy bottom," Gabrel said.

"I tried to squeeze myself out the nearest window. I don't know how to swim. So I put one hand across my mouth and with the other pushed myself up."

"I found a leg and grabbed it. It was a fellow passenger who was hanging on to a fishing boat. It was hell," he said. Gabrel suffered slight injuries.

Witnesses said the accident occurred at about 6:10 a.m. as the bus headed from the Giza pyramid area to downtown Cairo.

Police said the legal capacity was 49 passengers but that a later ticket count showed about 70 had been aboard. One police officer who saw the accident said passengers packed in the front of the bus may have blocked the driver's view of the truck.

Boat crews and divers were searching for possible other victims hours later. The red bus was hauled to the surface several hours after the accident.

Some early official accounts said the bus had plunged off a Nile bridge.

The busdriver was hospitalized for shock, and the truckdriver was taken in by police for questioning. No charges were filed immediately.

Water Use For City Sets Record Level

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

City officials are looking to the weatherman for help in reducing the record amount of water being used by Lubbock residents this month.

Sam Wahl, city public works director, said more than 70 million gallons of water was pumped Saturday, the highest daily amount ever in the city's history.

But Saturday's 70.3 million gallon usage broke an all-time record set just last Thursday when 70 million gallons was pumped.

July usage was expected to average about 55 million gallons a day, Wahl said, but "it looks like now it will average close to 60 million."

Wahl said the water use has been high for 12 straight days, and he blames the hot, dry weather for all the water being used.

"I don't see any let-up until the weather changes," he said. "Until we get a shower or a break in the temperature, the water usage will stay around the 68, 69 or 70 million gallon rate."

Wahl said he can't remember a past summer when so much water has been used for so long. "We've just not had sustained use like this in the past," he said. "It's just not let up at all."

If the weather doesn't change before the end of summer, Wahl said residents might be asked to voluntarily cut back on water use and they might face problems with water pressure.

"But I can't believe it's going to continue at this rate through August," he said.

Wahl said he doesn't foresee any "severe curtailment of water unless there are bad mechanical problems."

Nevertheless, Wahl is concerned about the record use of water because "it is reducing our capability in the sandhills."

Wells in the Bailey County sandhills are one of two water sources for the city.

But Wahl is more concerned about water usage problems next summer.

Bonds approved by Lubbock voters for water improvements and later tied up in litigation may create pressure and shortage problems in 1979.

"We need additional wells in the sandhills and pumping stations," he said.

How soon the wells can be drilled will be determined by when the city council decides to sell another group of general obligation bonds, he said, adding that will determine whether there is an adequate supply of water next summer.

Southwest Lubbock already is experiencing some problems with water pressure. Wahl said, because the pump station to be constructed with bond money was held up.

Sewer Crew Acts As Bloodhounds For Manholes

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Barbara O'Brien is a sewer detective, and she always gets her manhole.

"We're always looking for little clues," says Miss O'Brien, a member of an Atlanta firm hired to evaluate Valdosta's municipal water system.

Miss O'Brien, who must descend into as many as 30 dark caverns a day, says many of the manholes here are hidden from view because of road repaving.

"We'd look on the map, pick out a manhole and go; but, we couldn't find it. It just wouldn't be there," said the Cornell University graduate.

That called for Remer Herring's services. He's Valdosta's water and sewer superintendent.

"Remer can sniff out a manhole better than anybody I've seen," Miss O'Brien said. "He can jump out on top of it and that manhole will be three feet under the street."

Seminar On Energy Conservation Set

The Governor's Office of Energy Resources and the state Public Utilities Commission will sponsor a day-long seminar here Wednesday designed to help local government and private businesses conserve energy.

Registration for the event, to be held at the Civic Center, will begin at 8:30 a.m. Alvin Askew, administrative assistant on energy for Gov. Dolph Briscoe, will make the keynote speech at the 9 a.m. general session.

Following the general session, concurrent workshops will be held for specific groups such as local government officials, public school officials, office building owners and managers, retail business owners and residential builders and contractors.

The aim of the state's energy conservation program is to effect a five percent net decrease in energy use by 1980. The Lubbock seminar is one of 24 being held throughout the state to encourage voluntary conservation efforts by demonstrating the money which could be saved by conserving energy.

The seminar is free of charge.

Hill Cites Counties For Land Trade

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill said today the Texas Constitution does not authorize the use of county machinery or labor to build or maintain bridges on private land in exchange for a drainage easement.

Hill said, however, state law gives counties the right to condemn property to acquire drainage easements.

Zairian Railroad To Reopen

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire and Angola have ended their first official meeting of reconciliation by agreeing to reopen the Benguela railroad that was once the lifeline of Zairian copper exports, an official joint communique said Monday.

The agreement, also envisaging exchanges of refugees, was seen as an important step toward easing tensions in this part of central Africa.

The communique was made available by officials following a weekend meeting between high-ranking delegations from Zaire and Angola mediated in Brazzaville by Congo President Joachim Yhombi Opango.

The railroad line from the copper mining center of Kolwezi in Zaire's southern Shaba province to the harbor of Lobito on the Angolan coast is the fastest and cheapest route for Zairian ore, which accounts for 65 percent of the Kinshasa government's foreign earnings.

The 800-mile Benguela line has been closed since a civil war erupted among three rival Angolan political movements in 1975, forcing Zaire to transport most of its copper by the longer and costlier southern route through Zambia and Rhodesia to South African ports.

The reopening of Benguela probably would help Zaire's economy, shattered by mismanagement and official corruption. It would also be symbolic of a thaw in relations between Zaire and Angola, which have in the last few years supported armed movements against each other.

Twice in the last 18 months Angolan-based Katanga rebels have briefly invaded and occupied areas of mineral-rich Shaba province — the homeland of the raiders, who refer to it as Katanga.

Zaire blamed Angola both times for assisting in the invasions, charges the Launda government denied.

The joint communique made no mention of a possible date for the resumption of traffic on the railroad line. Several sections including bridges were destroyed or badly damaged during the 15-year struggle against colonial Portugal and the civil war that followed.

Anti-government guerrillas of Jonas Savimbi's National Union for the Total Independence of Angola operate in southern Angola where the railroad runs and have often sabotaged the line. There was no immediate indication how President Agostinho Neto's government, supported by some 20,000 Cuban troops, might act to prevent renewed attacks.

The Brazzaville meeting was the first serious attempt to establish normal relations between the two countries, which have never been diplomatically tied.

Zaire and Angola have been at odds since the early 1960s when three Angolan guerrilla armies began fighting the Portuguese to hasten the country's independence.

Zaire supported the National Front for the Liberation of Angola (NFLA) whose leader Holden Roberto is Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko's brother-in-law.

After the Portuguese withdrew, it was Neto's Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA) that seized power. Neto became Angola's first president.

A reconciliation between Western-backed Zaire and Soviet-Cuban-supported Angola raised hopes for an early Mobutu-Neto summit meeting, according to Zairian officials.

The joint communique said both parties agreed a control commission under the auspices of the 49-member Organization of African Unity to normalize their relations.

They also agreed to seek help from "competent international organizations" to arrange the return of thousands of refugees who fled in both directions from conflicts in the region.

The communique characterized the talks as "frank and cordial" and expressed the political will for a settlement voiced by Mobutu and Neto.

Hughes Suit Length Uncertain

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal District Judge Jack Roberts said it looks like "a long winter" as he took under consideration Monday a suit involving the legal residence of Howard Hughes.

"It could be two or three months, two or three years or even 10 years," he said at the end of a preliminary hearing on a motion by heirs of the late multi-millionaire to consolidate all parties fighting over which state may claim him as a resident.

A Houston probate court jury already has declared Hughes a Texas resident for estate tax purposes, but California is also claiming Hughes as a resident. The Hughes family is seeking to have him declared a resident of Nevada.

"The facts are overwhelming that Howard Hughes was a resident of Texas," Hill told Roberts in the Monday hearing. "We won a case in state court fair and square. It was a clear court verdict with abundant evidence to support it."

Hill said the case is now being considered by the Houston court of civil appeals and probably will go to the Texas Supreme Court after that.

Hill noted that the U.S. Supreme Court refused by a vote of 9-0 to accept a California case against Texas that would have let the nation's highest court settle the residency question.

Jim George, Austin attorney for the Hughes estate who filed the suit, said four of the U.S. justices signed an opinion saying that the residency question should be tried first by lower federal courts.

"These four justices made it clear how they think it should be done, we want to follow them," George said. "If these people are allowed to go on with their prosecution and file more law suits this case will get a lot more complicated than it is now."

Steven Mayer, representing California officials, said California would not be bound in any way by the verdict of a Texas court. "I predict the ultimate decision will be made in the U.S. Supreme Court. . . If this matter comes to trial here, I anticipate Mr. Hill will want a jury. In that case every single person in Texas would have an interest in the case and that would not be due process. The same would be true in California. I would like to insulate this case and later I will make a motion to transfer this to a forum which had no previous contact with Mr. Hughes."

MAGAZINE REAPPEARS

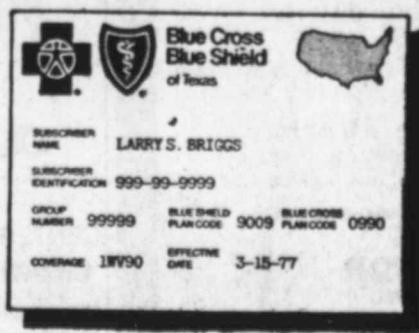

TOKYO (AP) — The monthly magazine Women in China, which began publication in 1949 but was banned in 1967 by radicals led by Mao Tse-tung's wife Chiang Ching, reappeared Saturday in Peking, the official Hsinhua news agency reported. An agency dispatch received here said Madame Sun Yat-sen, chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, urged the journal to "infuse women with enthusiasm for the four modernizations (science, industry, agriculture and military) to build socialism."

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm a nursing mother who found that regular breast pads were too expensive and too inconvenient.

Now all I do is cut an adhesive-backed feminine mini-pad in half and stick one half in each bra cup.

These pads are less expensive and I don't have to remove them to feed my baby. For me they are also more comfortable. — Bonnie

These little pads are soft and absorbent and with the adhesive strip will certainly stay in place better.

I think you have stumbled on a splendid idea, Bonnie! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

In mending the fingers of a glove it is easy to stitch through leather without hurting one's own fingers if you slide a thimble inside the finger where the action is to be.

The thimble can take the needle pricks and both hands are free for the actual stitching up. — M.F.M.

DEAR HELOISE:

This may or may not be a new idea to you but it surely is to me.

Some time ago we had a new ceiling installed and as usual some of the tile blocks were left over. The blocks we used were 12 inches by 24 inches and after trimming off the soft edges I have some very handy and inexpensive bulletin boards.

I placed one on a kitchen wall with double-stick tape, one over a desk and one in a hallway where pictures of all of my grandchildren, grandnieces and grandnephews are tacked.

I use the small school pictures that are too small for wallets.

Makes a nice display and it is interesting to see how they grow. — Ethel

DEAR HELOISE:

I have one of those wooden clothes-drying racks. Well, one of the dowels broke. My husband got a replacement in one of the do-it-yourself home decorating centers, cut the dowel to size and screwed it in place using the same screws as were used originally.

The wood dowel proved to be a little rough so I covered it with some adhesive-backed paper. — A Reader

Smooth and smart, sweetie — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have just confirmed the most marvelous discovery! I tried it three times to be sure before I wrote you.

If you have some old but well-loved pans which just can't be cleaned up any more, put them in your self-cleaning oven. After the cleaning cycle they are absolutely like new.

I have tried this with my favorite aluminum roasting pan, an iron frying pan deeply crusted from years of camp fires, and some smaller pots and pans.

Of course, you can't do this with pans that are not all metal — no plastic or wood handles!

If you don't have a self-cleaning oven, find a friend who does! — Mrs. A.J. Beimler

DEAR HELOISE:

You know the super-great stuffing that can be made on top of the stove? Well, when I make it I substitute meat broth for one-third to one-half of the liquid.

I use turkey or chicken broth with the chicken stuffing. When I make a pork roast I use the broth or pan drippings with pork-flavored stuffing.

Taste more like homemade! — Jan

The broth does pep up the flavor! — Heloise

THIS COLUMN is written for you...the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: You must be off your rocker to agree with the person who said it would be a good idea if kids were taught in school some of the practical things in life such as the dangers of shoplifting, how to handle hostility, anger and grief. You are also strong for sex education, counseling on nutrition and even manners.

I've been a teacher for 16 years and I sharply disagree. We are catching it in the neck because so many kids these days are getting into high school (some graduating) and they can't read. Colleges are screaming that students can't write or spell. I say stick to the basics and let the kids learn the "fine art of living" someplace else. Like at home — from their parents. — On The Firing Line

Dear Firing: I received thousands of letters from teachers from every one of the 50 states — all screaming, "This is the parents' job — not ours." I couldn't agree more. BUT, I repeat — and I am asking the typesetters to put it in bold type so you won't miss it this time: TOO MANY PARENTS ARE ILL-EQUIPPED, TOO INVOLVED WITH THEIR OWN UNRESOLVED PROBLEMS OR JUST PLAIN LAZY. IF THE KIDS DON'T GET SOME BASIC GROUNDING ON THESE VITAL SUBJECTS IN SCHOOL, THEY MAY NEVER GET IT ANYPLACE.

I am not suggesting that credit courses be given. The information could be worked in with other subjects. Another suggestion: instead of having general assemblies to entertain, why not invite speakers who can offer practical information to help children cope with life? Every city has authorities who would be happy to speak to the students on special topics, if invited.

I agree, it's a crying shame that the schools should have to pinch-hit for parents, but when parents fail, it's the kids who lose and society pays the price.

The next letter says a mouthful. It's from a 13-year-old.

Dear Ann: I am in the eighth grade and have already learned in school about some of the things that person was talking about.

Our teachers have helped us understand what smoking cigarettes, drinking alcohol and taking drugs can do to our lives. They have talked about anger and fear and guilt and jealousy and how it can make people mentally sick.

I know reading and writing and arithmetic are important and so are history and geography and spelling, but these other subjects are even more important when you get right down to it and I am glad I go to school in — Reno, Nev.

Dear Reno: Thanks for a letter plugging a city whose national reputation is synonymous with divorce and gambling. How refreshing!

Dear Ann Landers: Do you think it is decent for the vice principal of a school to walk into the girls' bathroom whenever he feels like it just to see if we are smoking pot? Some of us change clothes in the bathroom and it's pretty darned embarrassing to have the vice principal walk in right in the middle.

What do you think about this? — Innocent Bystander

Dear Bystander: It seems to me that the vice principal could ask a female faculty member to check the girls' bathroom. If this alternative hasn't occurred to him, someone (a parent) ought to suggest it at once.

How young is too young for a child to learn about sex? That's just one thing you'll find in Ann Landers' new booklet.

EGGPLANT SALAD

- 1 eggplant, about 1 lb.
- 2 tbsp. olive oil
- 1 small onion, finely chopped
- 1 medium tomato (skinned, seeded and diced)
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 2 tbsp. lemon juice or red wine vinegar
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Lettuce, minced parsley, oil-cured ripe olives

Prick the eggplant all over with a fork and place on a sheet of foil with the edges turned up; broil, turning as necessary, until the skin is charred and the eggplant is soft. Weigh and drain. Remove pulp, discarding skin. Brown the onion in the olive oil and add to the eggplant with the tomato, garlic, lemon juice and salt and pepper. Serve on lettuce, sprinkled with the parsley and garnished with the olives. Makes 4 servings.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 60-year-old female. I lost my upper teeth but was able to save 12 lower ones. After two years of trying to use the upper dentures I am about to give up. I have started cooking the mushy foods I can eat without them. The problem is gagging. Can you advise? — Mrs. J.W.

While this is a matter for the prescribing dentist to evaluate, I can offer a suggestion. The gagging problem is usually correctible with a bit of extra grinding to eliminate a ridge. The usual cause, I am told, is a bulge at the top that places pressure on the center of the palate. A denture manufacturer told me that this is the most common reason for adjustment need. Properly fitted dentures should not cause gagging.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read your answer about fungus of the nails and the use of griseofulvin for it. I too have this, and a dermatologist advised that drug. I explained that I am allergic to penicillin, because I understand that griseofulvin is related to it. He suggested it anyway. After a month, I became depressed, so I discontinued the medicine. After a time I returned to normal. But I still have the unsightly fungus on my finger and toenails. What can I do? — V.L.

It is true that griseofulvin is made from a species of penicillin and that a cross sensitivity is possible. But I question whether your depression was due to it. Despite the relationship between the two drugs, griseofulvin has been used in known penicillin-sensitive persons with no ill effect. Discuss this further with the dermatologist.

Some fungal infections can be treated with local applications of the drug. Others cannot and require oral medicine. Both local and oral medications must be taken for long periods for best results. Sensitivity would have produced some physical symptoms. And incidentally, sensitivity can be confirmed by tests. You may find some pertinent information on your problem in my booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: All my friends thought this story should be passed on to you.

A fellow walked into a doctor's office and the receptionist asked him what he had. He said, "Shingles." So she took his name, address and medical insurance number and told him to have a seat. Ten minutes later a nurse's aide asked him what he had. He said, "Shingles." So she took his height, weight, medical history, and told him to wait. An hour later, a nurse came in and asked him what he had. He said, "Shingles." So she gave him a blood test, an electrocardiogram, took his blood pressure, and told him to take off his clothes for the doctor. A half-hour later the doctor came in and asked what he had. He said, "Shingles." The doctor asked, "Where?" He said, "Outside in the truck. Where do you want them?" — H.G.

That might even draw a chuckle from a person with shingles.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What can you tell me about congenital cataract in infants?

What can be done for this, and is there treatment to insure sight? The child is six months old. — Mrs. A.L.

Congenital cataract is so-called "developmental disorder." That is it begins in the womb. It is not nearly so prevalent today in modern societies because of better pre-natal care and because of the maternal protection available against rubella (German measles), the chief cause of it. If the rest of the eye is normal, surgery can be performed with reasonably good eyesight resulting. It is best treated as early as possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was having trouble with my hip that my doctor thought was gout. Then he found it was calcium deposits and suggested cortisone shots for it. Does this help? Does one get these shots in the veins or in the flesh? — K.H.

This is called pseudo-gout. The injections are made locally into the tissue. Other drugs may be taken orally.

Unless properly treated, both glaucoma and cataracts can lead to blindness. If you are afflicted with either of these ailments, or know someone who is, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611 for his booklet, "Cataracts and Glaucoma." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Bridal Courtesies

KARLA BABCOCK

A mother-daughter supper was given Monday honoring Karla Babcock, bride-elect of Mitchell Hankins, in the home of Mrs. Bob Lile. Cohostesses were Shannan Lile, Mrs. Bob Brashear and Ann Brashear.

Special guest was Mrs. George Babcock, mother of the bride-elect. The couple plans to be married Aug. 12 in the First United Methodist Church.

JO ANN KOSUB

Jo Ann Kosub, bride-elect of John David Bumpas, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday in the home of Mrs. J.M. Shackles. There were six cohostesses.

Special guests were Mrs. David Bumpas and Mrs. George Kosub of Moulton, mothers of the couple, and Mrs. John Dunn of Byers, grandmother of the future bridegroom.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 26 in Houston.

CINDY DICKENSON

Cindy Dickenson, bride-elect of Tom Arnett Jr., was honored with a toasting party Saturday at the Lubbock Club. There were nine hostesses.

The couple plans to be married July 29 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Ogle.

Miss Dickenson will also be honored with a miscellaneous shower Wednesday in the home of Mrs. Steve Reis. Mrs. Bob Stumbaugh, Mrs. Jim Bradley and Mrs. Pete Miller will cohost.

Special guests will include Mrs. Jack Wheat and Mrs. Tom Arnett, mothers of the couple, and Mrs. B.E. Winder, grandmother of the future bridegroom.

TERRI HODAPP

Terri Hodapp, bride-elect of Royce Malick, was honored with a bridal shower Sunday in the home of Mrs. Harold L. Spragins.

Special guests were Mrs. Dennis Hodapp and Mrs. E.P. Malick, mothers of the couple.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 26 in Christ the King Catholic Church.

MARY AGNEW

A bridal shower honoring Mary Agnew, bride-elect of James M. Chance, was given Monday in the home of Mrs. Lewell Fuller. There were 11 cohostesses.

Special guests were Mrs. Jack Agnew and Mrs. Bill Chance of Wheeler, mothers of the couple, and Mrs. S.M. Key, grandmother of the future bridegroom. The couple plans to be married Aug. 4 in the Monterey Church of Christ.

TERRY CHRISTIAN

Terry Christian, bride-elect of Jess E. Ellis Jr., will be honored with a miscellaneous shower today in the home of Mrs. Ardis Montgomery. There will be five cohostesses.

Special guests will be Mrs. Lee Christian and Mrs. Jess E. Ellis, mothers of the couple, and Mrs. Vera Fisher of Abilene, grandmother of the bride-elect. The couple plans to be married Aug. 19 in the Sunset Church of Christ.

FLOYD—JOHNSON

The Monterey Baptist Church honored Carol Floyd and Randy Johnson with a fellowship shower Sunday in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 5 in the First Baptist Church of Conroe.

One of the classic situations in which finessing is for the birds occurs when declarer can work an elimination play.

South winds up in six spades. He can make seven by simply guessing the correct way to finesse in both clubs and hearts. He can also wind up one down if he tries and loses finesses in both suits. Not only could he wind up one down, but there is no telling what action his unfortunate partner might take.

No matter how confident a player is of his own ability to guess two-way queen finesses he should realize if he wants to live a long and happy life, that a slam bid and made is worth almost fifty 30-point overtricks.

Then declarer takes dummy's ace of diamonds, ruffs a diamond, draws trumps, ruffs dummy's last diamond and plays out three rounds of either hearts or clubs.

It doesn't matter which opponent wins that losing trick. He is caught in an end play and the slam makes.

A Michigan reader asks what he should have bid after he opened one diamond in the South seat. West overcalled one spade. North bid three diamonds and East three spades.

We recommend a three-notrump bid. The contract should surely make easily against a spade lead and almost surely against any other.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — Soap opera-related merchandising received a booster shot this month with the release of the first installment of a projected series of original, waxed, serial sob stories produced by a new company, Soap Opera Records.

SOR is the stepchild of Neil Warner and Larry Levinson, the jingle geniuses whose Warner-Levinson Productions won four Clio Awards (the commercial field's equivalent of the Oscars and Emmys) last year for their musical ad scores. The record company is geared to the "primary sense of sound — sounds of all types which include musical soundtracks, as well as the words and subtle background noises, such as those used in the old-time radio soap operas," says Levinson. "Radio soaps, in which listeners had to use their imagination and sound rather than visual senses, were the starting point of our new project."

The first release of Soap Opera Records is entitled "Reunion." One side of the 45 rpm disc features a segment of a multi-part soap opera, penned by Levinson, complete with dialogue, background music and cliff-hanger that will hopefully hook fans to purchase the next installment in the five-records series. The flip side features a vocal version by Jefferson Lee of the episode's background score, "The Theme-From Reunion," with music and lyrics by Phyllis Levinson and Warner.

After the "Reunion" sequence is complete, the company will produce a new story and series of related pop tunes.

The first installment tells the story of Jeff, who meets his former sweetheart, who's now a famous Hollywood actress, at a high school reunion. It's a hackneyed plot that's a throwback to the radio serials and bears slight relation to today's contemporary soaps. But the music is lush and sentimental. Although the expected cliff-hanger is nonexistent, the plot may appeal to some shoppers in supermarket aisles where the record will be stocked next to the detergent section. Turn on your record rather than tuning in your TV to see whether Jeff admits his love for the actress.

SHORT TAKES:

"LOVE OF LIFE" has added a genuine Hollywood "show biz child" to its cast. Elizabeth Stack, who's making her daytime TV debut in the role of Cherie Manning, is the daughter of Robert and Rosemarie Stack. Pappa Bob has done numerous films and is probably best-remembered as TV's Eliot Ness on "The Untouchables."

CLAIRE MALIS, who many fans think ought to be locked up for her shady dealings as Dorian Lord on "One Life to Live," was almost put in the poke for an on-screen incident. In the storyline, Dorian's portrait had been mysteriously slashed to ribbons. The night watchman where the show was being filmed unfortunately wasn't aware that the action had taken place during a taping and while making the rounds he spotted the damaged oil painting. Assuming that vandals had been at work he called the local precinct who sent over an investigative crew. The following morning the cast arrived to find that the finger-printing experts wanted to know if anyone knew a certain Claire Malis who had left her paw marks all over the painting. The situation was cleared up but Claire almost ended up with a police record.

VAL DUFOUR and Mary Stuart (John Wyatt and Jo Vincente on "Search For Tomorrow") attended a CBS affiliate meeting in Hollywood recently. When they entered a reception room filled with CBS nighttime stars, Val heard a shriek, saw a woman rush toward him, and didn't realize that it was Mary Tyler Moore until after she broke away from an embrace and said, "I've been in love with you for years." Mrs. Moore introduced Val to Carol Burnett who reacted as passionately as her pal, explaining that she too grew up loving him as Walter Curtin on "Another World" some 10 years ago.

"You were so pitiful," said Carol, "and so vulnerable even though you were nasty, that I've always wanted this opportunity to put my arms around you and baby you." Tune in Tomorrow to see what kind of babying he receives on "Search." (Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Clip 'n' Cook

MY SPINACH SPREAD

- 10 oz. bag fresh spinach
- 4 large eggs, hard-cooked and shelled
- 1 small scallion, minced (about 1 tsp.)
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 2 tsp. prepared hot mustard
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- Pepper to taste

Rinse the spinach. Rapidly cook it, uncovered, in the water clinging to the leaves, turning them over with a long-handled fork until they are wilted and still green. Drain, pressing out enough liquid to yield 1 1/3 cups spinach; knife-chop a medium-fine. Shred the eggs through the coarse disk of an electric food processor. Stir together the spinach and eggs with the remaining ingredients. Cover and chill (even overnight) to allow the flavors to blend. Makes 2 cups. Serve with melba toast as a crunchy base.

Senior Citizen Center Assists Area Elderly

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

NEW YORK (WNS) — Everywhere senior citizens go these days they butt up against bureaucracies and often are shunted from one to the other, says Fritzie Kort, director of the Hudson Guild Fulton Senior Center in New York City. This is one of the largest senior centers in the country and often is used as a demonstration center for federal and state projects for the elderly.

Mrs. Kort reports that seniors frequently need help in filling out Social Security and other forms; applying for state medical aid programs for the medically indigent and, if eligible, for Social Security supplementary payments, and getting legal services for their specialized needs.

Even with Medicare, for which seniors don't have to show medical indigency as they do for state medical aid, problems occur, Mrs. Kort says. One problem is that Medicare at best is limited; many health needs simply aren't covered. Another is that less than half the doctors accept "assignments" of the medical bill. The elderly patient then has to pay the doctor and apply for reimbursement to the Medicare agent or intermediary; often receiving only half or less the amount the doctor charged.

Judging from the experiences reported to us, we'd go even further than Mrs. Kort and say that for many seniors, Medicare has become a disaster. Many of the problems arise because of the ambiguity, whether deliberate or not, of some of the regulations, and because of lack of uniformity among the intermediary agents that decide on the payments.

Seniors need to be told to read the Medicare booklet over and over to become familiar with all the benefits to which they're entitled. They also need to know that they have the right to ask the disbursing agent to review the claim and even take it to the Fair Hearing division and that sometimes asking for a review and submitting additional evidence does bring a larger payment.

In one case that came to our attention, an elderly woman had received a reimbursement from Medicare of only $100 for a bill of $400. She was very distressed. At this point her daughter intervened and called the local Social Security office. They sent her a claim form.

The form asked what additional evidence the claimant had to submit. The daughter noted that the doctor had lumped together a complete physical exam, case history and 10 office and hospital visits as "consultation and visits."

They did get another $125, sent, curiously enough, with no explanation or even a note that the claim had been reviewed.

Seniors and their families can get two useful clues from this and similar incidents. If the doctor won't accept an assignment to collect payment for his bill, at the very start you should get a specifically detailed statement of his services. If the reimbursement from the social agency is still limited, despite the detailed statement submitted with your reimbursement request, go back to the doctor and ask him or his nurse for more details to support your request for an agency review of your reimbursement request.

In some Florida communities, where many people are on Medicare, community-wide committees as well as senior centers help make out the applications. Such committees also may be able to bring influence to bear on local doctors to be more willing to accept the bill collection assignments.

Medicare-aware doctors also can be helpful in other ways. The more specific a doctor is in his instructions to labs for reports, the more the patient may be able to recover from Medicare for this expense.

One doctor even gave a patient a note to Medicare stating that because of her vascular illness he did not allow her to cut her own toenails. He thus made eligible for Medicare reimbursement the professional podiatry services he insisted she require.

Home health care is another often misunderstood and overlooked Medicare benefit with which there often also are bureaucratic problems. Some home health benefits are available under both Part A, which is the hospital insurance, and Part B, the doctor bill insurance.

In general home health benefits pay for medically necessary services provided in your home by a part-time nurse, a physical therapist, a home health aide or other health workers. The services must be provided by an agency participating in Medicare. Medical supplies and use of medical appliances furnished by the agency also are covered.

There are rules. As well as the requirement that a doctor must order the services and review the plan of care, you must be confined to your home.

Part A can pay the total cost of up to 100 medically necessary home health visits if you first were in a qualifying hospital for at least three days, and the care is being given as further treatment of a condition treated in the hospital or extended-care facility.

If you can't meet these conditions but have Part B insurance, it can pay 80 percent of the cost for up to 100 home visits in each calendar year.

Expert Emphasizes Danger Of Adolescence Obesity

By GAYNOR MADDOX

If you have pre-school children, don't let them get obese. Otherwise, the outlook may be grim for them.

"If a child enters adolescence obese, chances are one-to-four against his ever having a normal body weight," says Dr. Ralph A. Nelson, associate professor of nutrition at Mayo Medical School. "If a child leaves adolescence obese, chances increase to 28-to-1 against ever achieving a normal body weight."

"Thus a program directed toward preventing obesity in children also would be extremely valuable in preventing obesity in adults," declares Nelson.

At a recent General Mills Family Forum, Nelson emphasized the importance of preventing obesity among pre-school children: "Obesity can blight the child's future personally, socially and economically," he comments.

"There are many methods besides a calorie-controlled diet to control obesity, although calorie control is the best form of therapy," says Nelson. "Other methods such as starvation, diet pills and food fads have met with little or no success and some have proven harmful."

Careful selection of foods for the 2-to-3-year-old group can help prevent youthful obesity. Therefore, parents should be concerned about the types of food their child eats.

"Although a 2-year-old needs only about 1,300 calories, many of his vitamin and mineral requirements are nearly the same as his parents.' In fact, the 2-year-old needs 50 percent more iron than his father does," says Dr. Mary B. McCann in the February issue of The New Physician.

She continues, "The requirement for iron - 10 to 15 milligrams - probably will not be met by following the four food group plan unless foods are carefully chosen."

For example, she claims that consuming large quantities of milk instead of foods from other groups can lead to iron deficiency anemia, a major nutrition problem among young Americans.

"Unlike iron-rich foods like meat, eggs and fortified cereals," says McCann, "milk contains only 0.1 milligrams of iron per eight ounces. Thus, parents should not allow or force children to drink large quantities of milk to the exclusion of other foods."

According to McCann, foods with high nutrient density - that is, foods with a high nutrient to calorie ratio - are important to pre-schoolers' diets.

"If these children are to obtain the necessary nutrient from relatively few calories, empty calorie foods or foods with low nutrient density should be limited," McCann points out. For instance, she suggests replacing potato chips with potatoes, which pack more vitamin C, niacin and iron into fewer calories.

'Political' Chess Battle Begins Today

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — A "man without a country" faces the cool-headed young hero of Soviet chess Tuesday for the world title and the richest purse in chess history — a grudge match whose moves involve world politics and "secret rays" as much as castled rooks and knight gambits.

The challenger, 47-year-old Russian defector Viktor Korchnoi, calls it "a political war." The defending champion, 20-year grandmaster Anatoly Karpov, 20 years Korchnoi's junior, says he is here to play chess, not politics.

The setting in this rainy mountain resort is tropical, but chessdom observers say the atmosphere will be icier than the last world championship match, the famous 1972 showdown between American Bobby Fischer and Russian Boris Spassky. Fischer won the title but later refused to defend his crown and it went to Karpov by default in 1975.

Korchnoi, who left his homeland for good in 1976, wants revenge against a Soviet chess system he claims robbed him of victory against Karpov when they last played in 1974 — the match that put the younger Russian in line for the title. He claimed the KGB security police shook his concentration by aiming electronic rays at him.

The expatriate grandmaster also claims Moscow is holding his family "like hostages," refusing to allow them to join him in his new home in Switzerland.

Fischer's defeat of Spassky was a "tragedy" for the Russians, said a European chess expert, but a Korchnoi victory here "would be a catastrophe."

Said one well-known international grandmaster, who asked that his name not be used: "To lose is always terrible, but you see, Korchnoi left Russia because he said he couldn't play good chess there. Now, if he wins, it would prove he was right — and I think it would create bad political problems in Russia."

At stake is a purse of $550,000, of which $350,000 will go to the champion, the man who first wins six games. Organizers say the money was raised from private business. Experts say the match, in a new $3.5 million convention center here, will probably last two or three months and take 20 to 30 or more games.

Since both players arrived here about two weeks ago to acclimate themselves to Baguio's 4,921-foot altitude, a psychological struggle has been waged — sometimes quietly and sometimes in the press.

Korchnoi has called Karpov "a toy of the Soviet state" and says he and the champion "talk a different political language."

Korchnoi wanted to play under the Swiss flag, but the Soviets objected that he was not a citizen of that country. An International Chess Federation jury found a compromise — neither one will have a national flag beside him on the playing table.

At Monday's formal opening ceremony, Korchnoi and his delegation defiantly sported red-and-white Swiss national emblems on their lapels. When the Soviet anthem was to be played for Karpov, Korchnoi remained seated. When it turned out that instead the organizers mistakenly played the "Internationale" anthem of international communism, the challenger broke into a wide grin.

Korchnoi also said he fears again the Soviets will use technical warfare to muddle his thinking. An angry Karpov delegation suggested that the organizers install an airport-style security system to check for electronic devices.

The two men have contrasting playing styles. The young champion takes a steady, unflappable approach to the game, establishing his positions coolly and waiting for his foe to lapse into a mistake. Korchnoi, on the other hand, is an aggressive and brooding counter-attacker who often relies on intricately constructed traps.

Since their 1974 match, Korchnoi said, "we are both stronger, so I think it's a 50-50 chance."

Act Exemptions Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate began debate Monday on a bill designed to head off Tellico Dam-style controversies of the future by permitting exemptions under the Endangered Species Act.

While no final vote was expected until Tuesday at the earliest, sources said the Senate appeared ready to approve creation of a committee authorized to grant exemptions under tightly controlled conditions.

It appeared unlikely that the outcome of the debate would directly affect the snail darter, a three-inch endangered fish species, or the Tellico Project that it stopped.

But 1,800 plant varieties and 100 animal species are being considered for protection and backers of the proposal for the Endangered Species Interagency Committee say there may be more "irresolvable" conflicts in the future.

"It appears likely that a growing number of other projects will not be completed" because of the law, Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, said as the Senate took up the bill.

Culver, a sponsor of the measure with Republican leader Howard Baker, said his proposal "does preserve the integrity of the Endangered Species Act, yet it does provide the flexibility we need."

The measure is opposed by the Carter administration as well as environmental organizations, who say the law doesn't need changing.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., is backing an attempt to kill the plan and leave the law unchanged.

Current law forbids a federal agency from taking action that harms an endangered species or its habitat.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., on the other hand, promised an attempt to permit wholesale exemptions under the law, passed five years ago to protect endangered plant and animal life.

The proposed committee could allow completion of a project regardless of its threat to an endangered plant or animal.

An exemption could be granted if five of the seven commission members decide the benefits of the project "clearly outweigh" the benefits of protecting the species and if there were no "reasonable and prudent" alternative to the project design.

While hundreds of projects have been built since the law passed in 1973, the law has been most controversial because of Tellico, a $119 million Tennessee Valley Authority dam and reservoir project.

The Supreme Court ruled earlier this year that the floodgates of the completed dam could not be closed, saying that to do so would wipe out the habitat of the snail darter and thus violate the law.

The TVA and Interior Department are studying possible alternatives to the original design of the proposal, and TVA Chairman S. David Freeman has said environmental concerns aside, it may be more sensible economically to redesign the project.

Congressional sources also say the Tellico project would be unlikely to meet the tests for exemptions under the proposed law.

The committee proposed by the law would be composed of the secretaries of Agriculture, Interior and the Army, as well as the heads of the Council on Environmental Quality, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Smithsonian Institution. The governor of a state affected by a project also would have a seat on the board.

Stennis' proposal would automatically exempt from the Endangered Species Act any project that was "under way" at the time the 1973 law was passed. It also would grant an exemption in all cases in which a project or any part of it were 50 percent complete before a species is given protection.

Bids To Open On Airport's Auto Facility

Construction of a $24 million two-level parking facility to alleviate crowding of auto lots at Lubbock International Airport will come one step closer today with the opening of formal bids on the 670-car project.

Airport officials said bids on the structure, to be located southwest of the main terminal building, will be opened at 2 p.m. today at the airport and then will be turned over to the project's engineers for review.

Airport Board members also will review the bids at their regular meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the airport conference room.

Also on the board's agenda will be a request from Southwest Airlines for additional counter space and a request from Lonnie Hollingsworth for concession rights that would allow the installation of coin-operated blood pressure testing devices.

Bids on the parking structure could go to the city council as early as their August meeting.

The airport now has 709 parking spaces available to the public, 350 spaces in an overflow lot and 58 spaces for airport employees.

Official Advocates Motor Gas Decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — An energy official told a panel of skeptical congressmen Monday that removal of price controls on gasoline will not increase motorists' fuel costs and could have a positive effect on the environment.

John F. O'Leary, deputy secretary of the Department of Energy, told a House investigations subcommittee. "The evidence is overwhelming that continued controls on motor gasoline are both unnecessary and unwise."

Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the panel, and other members challenged O'Leary's statements and repeatedly questioned the accuracy of department data on pricing and supplies.

Over and over, O'Leary was asked whether he really believes that decontrol would not lead to price increases.

He replied that competitive forces — not government regulation — control the price of gasoline, and that gas has been selling below ceiling prices.

"Competition is working in the leaded and unleaded markets, better in the leaded than in the unleaded," he said.

Removal of controls, he said, could lead to perhaps a cent-a-gallon increase in the cost of unleaded fuel at the refinery, but he argued this would be absorbed in the chain of distribution and not passed along to motorists.

"Normally a cent a gallon at the refinery level would translate into more than a cent a gallon at the service station," Moss said.

"Mr. Chairman, I don't think so," O'Leary replied.

"It won't be passed on ultimately to the consumers?" Moss persisted.

"No," replied O'Leary.

He said removal of controls would spur greater industry investment in refinery capacity for unleaded gasoline, thereby expanding the pool of unleaded gasoline. An increase in the availability of unleaded gasoline also would increase competition and would dampen prices, he argued.

The Environmental Protection Agency had testified Friday that removal of controls almost certainly will worsen air pollution — a claim disputed by O'Leary.

The EPA expressed fears that the differential between leaded and unleaded fuel at the pump — averaging about four cents a gallon — will widen and cause motorists to stop using unleaded gasoline. Moss said that after a few tankfuls, "leaded gasoline poisons the catalytic converter on vehicles designed to use unleaded gasoline, resulting in up to a tenfold increase in emissions."

O'Leary said, however, that decontrol can be done "with no adverse environmental impacts, indeed with favorable impacts" as more motorists use unleaded fuel.

He said that in the long term, market forces should cause unleaded gasoline prices to become lower relative to leaded prices.

He said gasoline supplies should be adequate up to and perhaps through 1979, and that any shortage in 1980 could be made up with imports.

Use Of Fluoride Mouthwash Shown To Reduce Tooth Decay

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide test with more than 70,000 children shows that weekly use of a fluoride mouthwash can cut tooth decay by 35 percent, government scientists said Monday.

The National Institute of Dental Research said all of the children in the demonstration programs were in communities without fluorinated water.

More than half the nation's population lives in communities without fluorinated water and those people could easily reap the benefits of a school-based mouthwash program at relatively little cost, said Dr. James P. Carlos, associate director of the institute.

"We estimate there are at least 20 million children in non-fluoride communities who could be helped," Carlos told a news briefing on the $2.5 million demonstration program.

"Dental caries (decay) is the leading chronic disease in children, affecting more than 90 percent of them," Carlos said. Even though the nation spent more than $10 billion in 1977 on dental services, about half the population got no professional care at all, he added.

Carlos said the three-year project with elementary school children in 17 communities confirmed earlier research trials, which showed a 20 percent to 50 percent reduction in tooth decay under controlled conditions.

Among children who drink fluorinated water from birth, tooth decay is reduced 55 percent to 60 percent compared with those who don't, he said.

Dr. Ann J. Miller, program coordinator for the institute, said the demonstration showed it costs only about 50 cents per student to supply mouthwash, cups and paper towels for the 32-week school year.

However, costs varied to as high as $8.17 per student depending upon how the community set up its school program. When unpaid volunteers such as parents ran the program, the main cost was for materials. But when aides had to be hired to supervise the weekly rinse exercises, salaries significantly boosted costs, she said.

The results from the demonstration program also varied from location to location, based upon a random sampling of the children involved. One community showed no added caries reduction after two years and others only 1 percent or 8 percent. But the majority had reductions as high as 46 percent.

She blamed low figures in a few communities on sampling errors and active local dental programs that boosted the amount of decay measured.

For example, Charles City County, Va., showed only a 1 percent improvement in caries reduction. But she said interest in dental care improved markedly during the trial and dentists filled many suspected cavities, which had to be counted in the statistics.

"These demonstration projects were not to show that the fluoride rinse worked — that was proved before in the controlled trials," Carlos said in an interview. "We were trying to show that a school-based preventive approach worked and we did."

Carlos said 17 percent of the population lack central water systems to fluoridate and about 33 percent are in communities that could treat the water if they wished.

Children in these communities still can get many of fluoride's benefits through a school program, he added.

The U.N. General Assembly voted in 1967 to set up a council to take over Southwest Africa from South Africa and lead it to independence.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. A few years ago, I inherited 100 shares of electric utility stock. The company has a plan allowing stockholders to reinvest their dividends to buy more shares and also allows stockholders to invest up to $1,000 every three months to buy still more shares. I have been taking advantage of both of these plans.

As a self-employed person of 55, I think it might be well for me to continue these programs. When I retire, I plan to start taking the dividends in cash, for extra income. But I would like to know if this company is of good financial standing. Can you advise?

A. Glad to. The company you named in your letter is a typical solid utility company — with a good record of gradually increasing its earnings and dividend payments. Like most utilities, it's the kind of stock that fits in nicely for investment planning.

The utility stocks, however, have not been favorites in the market lately. Because they are counted more as income producers than out-and-out growth situations, the market prices of utilities go down when interest rates go up — as has happened during recent months.

But that shouldn't bother you and other readers who have been sending worrisome letters. The utilities' dividends remain strong and you have the opportunity to buy more shares at reduced prices.

The dividends reinvestment and stock purchase plans you are using are just about the best ideas to come down the investment pike in a long time. Most such plans allow stockholders to purchase more shares without any commission or other charge. Some even provide for discounts, below going market values.

Readers who want the names of companies with such plans should visit the research sections of their public libraries. Ask to see Standard & Poor's Corp.'s "Outlook." The Feb. 6, 1978, issue of that publication has a long of companies with such plans.

Q. I have just retired at 70 but am continuing to work on an assignment basis. I have been examining my investments in Series E U.S. Savings Bonds. It seems to me that E bonds do not have any compound interest features. Am I right?

A. No. The current rate of interest on E bonds is 6 percent, compounded semiannually, if held to maturity. The last phrase in that sentence is the key to the entire situation.

E bonds now being sold reach maturity in five years. Interest accrues and is added to the value of each bond every six months. But that interest is not at the same rate each year.

It starts at 4.5 percent during the first year, then gradually increases — resulting in a yield of 6 percent from issue date to maturity.

Q. We are senior citizens and receive about $350 a month in Social Security. We have $31,000 in a 5 1/4 percent savings account and collect 6 percent on a $27,000 contract for deed. How can we increase our income, so we can live on the interest without going into the principal?

You can start by moving most of the money from your savings account into insured savings certificates, which pay higher interest. About $3,000 to $4,000 should be enough to keep in the regular savings account, for emergency purposes. You can get better than 8 percent on six-month savings certificates at many savings and loan associations and savings banks.

And, if there's any way you can get the $27,000 out of that contract for deed, you should do so and put the money into higher-yielding situations such as savings certificates.

There are many other places you could put your money. But, for safety sake, nothing really beats insured savings.

THE COST OF GOING IN TO BUSINESS FOR YOURSELF JUST WENT DOWN. DRASTICALLY.

IT used to be that the cost of becoming an owner/operator with north American Van Lines was $4300. That included the down payment for a NEW tractor. But right now and for a limited time only the cost is only $2500.

Atlantic City's Famed Steel Pier Purchased

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Steel Pier, where showmen from W.C. Fields to the Beatles have delighted boardwalk crowds, was sold Monday to Resorts International, operators of the first of the casinos on which this tourist town has staked its future.

Resorts International said it purchased the 2,250-foot-long pier, birthplace of scores of show business careers and noted for its diving horse act, from a group of local businessmen for 45,000 shares of its class A stock. The stock closed at $86 on Friday, making the deal worth about $3.87 million.

Company officials would not immediately reveal their plans for the 80-year-old pier, one of the longest amusement piers in the world, stretching from the Boardwalk into the Atlantic Ocean.

The pier is across the Boardwalk from Resorts International Hotel Casino and next to the 56.6 acres of vacant urban renewal property where the Florida-based firm plans to build a new $75 million, 1,000-room casino hotel within the next few years.

Resorts International spokeswoman Suzanne Epps said the sale would be completed before Aug. 1 and the company would take over the pier on Sept. 10, after its current summer season closes.

Opened as a Victorian-style amusement and music pier on June 18, 1898, the pier featured W.C. Fields in its first season. Fields, who then billed himself as William C. Fields, had some of his first show business jobs here, working as a juggler and a drowner — a person who faked a drowning to gather a crowd.

Later, in its glory years, the pier served as the stage for big band leaders Glenn Miller, Jimmy Dorsey and Tommy Dorsey, Abbott & Costello, John Philip Sousa, Rudy Vallee, Betty Grable, Bob Hope and Frank Sinatra, among others.

The Beatles also played on the pier during their first American tour in the early 1960s.

It has had a succession of owners over the years, but its most flamboyant was showman George A. Hamid Sr., who rose from an acrobatic tumbling act in the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show to ownership of the pier in 1949. Hamid, who owned a number of Atlantic City piers, booked some of show business' biggest names into his biggest venture, the Steel Pier.

As this resort declined in the past few decades, the pier fell on hard times, drawing fewer name acts and depending more on rides and honky-tonk amusements.

After casino-gambling for this resort was approved in November 1976, the pier went on the market. The last owners were a group of local businessmen led by Maxwell "Sonny" Goldberg and Milton Neustadter, owners of the Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel, recently leased by Caesar's World Inc.

Tour To Sample Energy Methods

Energy conservation in the home will be the main focus of a tour for city residents through three Lubbock energy-related businesses at 8:45 a.m. today.

Sponsored by the Lubbock League of Women Voters' natural resources committee, the bus tour will begin at the Mahon Library, according to Ruth Lauer, third vice president for the organization.

The tour will cost $1.50 per person and will include stops at Sigma Engineering Company, Inc., a city firm working with wind generation and solar power, and at two energy efficient houses under construction.

Lubbock builder Sunny Arnold will point out ways modern houses can be built to conserve energy at those sites.

The program will end with a sack lunch at the Mahon Library, with energy specialist Jeannette Hodges of the Texas A&M Extension Service speaking on specific ways to conserve energy in the home. Participants should bring a sack lunch.

ARRIVE FOR TEST-TUBE EMBRYO SUIT — Doris Del Zio, 34, and her dentist husband, John, 59, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., arrive at court Monday in New York for jury selection in a $1.5 million suit filed by them for the alleged destruction of a test-tube embryo five years ago. A jury of four women and two men was selected Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Jury Picked For Test-Tube Baby Case

NEW YORK (AP) — Four women and two men were selected Monday to hear a $1.5 million suit filed by a Florida couple over the destruction of a test-tube embryo five years ago.

The jury and four alternates were chosen by federal Judge Charles E. Stewart in Manhattan Federal Court after a session in his chambers. He also rejected a defense request for a postponement because of publicity in the case.

"I just wanted my baby," said Doris Del Zio, 34, as she and her dentist husband, John, 59, arrived for the trial. Her attorney then asked that she decline further comment, and she complied.

The Del Zios, former New York City residents, now live in Fort Lauderdale.

The damage suit alleges that a laboratory-fertilized embryo was "maliciously and arbitrarily" destroyed on Sept. 13, 1973, three days before it was to have been implanted in Mrs. Del Zio's womb. Mrs. Del Zio had been unable to conceive normally because of blocked Fallopian tubes.

A British woman, Lesley Brown, is awaiting the birth in Oldham, England, of what would be the first known successful test-tube baby.

The suit names Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center and its chief of obstetrics and gynecology, Dr. Raymond L. Vande Wiele.

Vande Wiele said at a pre-trial hearing that he killed the embryo without consulting the parents because "the doctors performing the procedure lacked the experience, skill and expertise" necessary to produce a test-tube baby.

Attorney Stephen O'Leary, who is representing Vande Wiele, said as he entered the courthouse that the doctor also believed the experiment in the fertilization and initial development of an egg outside a woman's body violated hospital rules because it had not been cleared with hospital committees that oversee experimental procedures.

Attorney John Bower, representing the hospital, added that the pioneering procedure was terminated because "it was so unsophisticated" it might have endangered Mrs. Del Zio's life.

"It's like comparing the Wright Brothers and the Concorde," Bower said when asked why the Del Zio case was different from the British experiment.

The procedure is known as "in vitro," Latin for "in glass." Eggs were removed from Mrs. Del Zio's ovarian tissue and mixed with sperm taken from her husband.

... it just won't fit in a textbook.

Nor, does it stand still. So much happens each and everyday that regular school textbooks would have to be up-dated and printed continuously to keep up with the daily newspaper. Each day, the Avalanche-Journal contains enough information to fill an average size novel. The Avalanche-Journal Newspaper in Education (NIE) program is designed to use this information to help students study math, science, social studies, reading and language arts while keeping abreast of current events and changes throughout the world.

The program includes teacher's guides and a Living Textbook Conference which simplify teaching with newspapers. The Newspaper in Education/Living Textbook Conference is conducted by specially trained educational consultants. New ideas and techniques for using newspapers in the classroom are covered and any interested teacher or administrator is invited. The Avalanche-Journal is delivered to the school at a reduced rate.

For information on the complete Avalanche-Journal NIE program contact the Educational Services Department at:

Rose Responds To Pressures

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds third baseman Pete Rose has encountered pressure throughout this season, first in his pursuit of his 3,000th hit, and now with a consecutive game hitting streak which reached 30 when he singled to right in the fifth inning of Monday night's game with Montreal.

"I knew I was going to get 3,000 hits some day with no trouble. This thing is a little different," Rose said. "Right now, the streak isn't all that big a deal. If I get to 34, 35 games, then it will be."

If he gets that far along, Rose would be within range of Tommy Holmes' National League mark of 37 consecutive games. Ironically, if the hitting streak still is going, Rose would have a chance to break Holmes' record in New York, where Holmes works in community relations for the New York Mets.

(Related Stories, Pages 2-3, Sec. D)

Joe DiMaggio holds the major league mark of 56 consecutive games, but Rose certainly isn't looking that far down the road yet.

"It's going to end for sure," said Rose of the streak. "That's the philosophy you've got to have."

Rose's string appeared to be in jeopardy Sunday before he doubled in the seventh inning. It was the fifth time Rose saved the streak with a hit in his last at-bat, and it was his 47th hit during the streak that began June 14.

The hit also was the 3,081st of his career, tying him with Cap Anson for 10th place on the all-time hit list.

The Reds' captain was in the spotlight during the first month of the season while he piled up enough hits to reach the 3,000 plateau. He reached that goal May 5.

With Sunday's double, Rose also topped the former consecutive game record for switch hitters that had been set by former St. Louis infielder Red Schen-dient.

Rose has been nursing a sore knee since before the All-Star game and Anderson offered to let Rose sit down after the team built up a 9-0 lead Sunday.

"I would never have taken Pete out before asking him. He has earned that money," Anderson said.

Naturally, Rose declined the offer. Ironically, the streak began as Rose was pulling out of a slump which had dropped his batting average to .307.

THREE FACES OF DAVE—Pittsburgh slugger Dave Parker is shown in three poses as he returned to the lineup Sunday after being out for more than two weeks with a broken cheekbone. At

Campbell Develops Case Of Fumblitis

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Houston Oilers rookies, sluggish in a weekend scrimmage, will get a chance to redeem themselves today when they fly to Kansas City to scrimmage the Chiefs rookies.

Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell was less than spectacular when coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips sent the Oilers rookies through their first scrimmage at Angelo State University.

Campbell fumbled once, slipped twice and dropped two of the three passes Football Camps Roundup, Page 4, Sec. D) thrown to him. He ran 12 times for 38 yards but had trouble keeping his feet.

Phillips said the Bermuda grass was slippery, causing his runningbacks to lose balance.

"Like the guy whose wife ran off with another man, I don't know how to feel," Phillips quipped.

Following today's scrimmage, Phillips will make the first cuts from the rookie crop. Phillips said as many as 20 rookies and free agents could be gone by Wednesday.

Phillips hopes to get a good look at his two backup quarterback hopefuls, Tommy Duniven, a second year man from Texas Tech, and rookie draftee Gifford Nielsen of Brigham Young.

Duniven completed five of eight passes for 61 yards and Nielsen hit five of 10 for 64 yards in the scrimmage.

Veterans are expected to be in camp by Friday but the deadline apparently is meaningless because many of the veterans already have reported.

The Oilers' preseason opener will be Aug. 5 in the Astrodome against the Super Bowl runnerup Denver Broncos.

Meanwhile, at Kansas City, the No. 2 selection in last year's NFL draft isn't looking at tonight's game against the Houston rookies as a special confrontation between him and No. 1.

"The only thing I'm worried about is the game itself, man, not Earl Campbell," said Art Still, Kansas City's 6-foot-7, 250-pound defensive lineman. "I guess it's good publicity to say it's No. 1 and No. 2 but that's not really it."

Judged the best offensive and defensive prospects among last year's seniors, Campbell and Still were the first players collected in the draft.

Campbell said from the Oilers' training camp in San Angelo, he was "just looking forward to the game and just playing."

"I'll be playing my best and I know Art will be out there to do his best and play his game," Campbell said. "We'll both be out there to play some ball."

It was uncertain how much playing time Campbell and Still would see. Kansas City coach Marv Levy and Phillips both indicate they will try to look at as many players as possible.

Texas Hurler Helps In Saving Fan's Life

BALTIMORE (AP) — Quick action by Texas pitcher George "Doc" Medich apparently saved the life of a baseball fan in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium prior to Monday night's game between the Rangers and the Baltimore Orioles.

Medich, a first-year resident in general surgery at Pittsburgh's Allegheny General Hospital, stopped his pregame running in the outfield after hearing public address announcer Rex Barney say that a doctor was needed in Section 7, which is near the third base dugout.

"When I got there," Medich said during an interview in the Texas clubhouse while the game was in progress, "there was no spontaneous movement and no palpable pulse. He was not getting enough oxygen."

Medich, who said he had been involved in 25 such cases since starting his medical training, immediately took charge at administering the emergency treatment.

This involved what he called "CPR", Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation, in which the victim is given mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and heavy pressure on the chest bone above the heart.

After achieving some success with the CPR, Medich turned the treatment over to someone else while he began administering lines to administer fluids. The victim was Germain Languth, 61, of Pasadena, Md. He was taken to nearby Union Memorial Hospital, where he was reported in serious condition.

"He responded pretty good to the medicine," Medich said. "He was stable enough so that he could be sent to the hospital. He had a palpable pulse, a minimum response, and was breathing on his own."

Medich said he had later called the hospital and was told that the patient had no previous history of heart attacks, although he had high blood pressure.

Medich was involved in a similar incident in Philadelphia in 1976, when he was playing for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I was walking off the field at the time when I saw a man in difficulty near the dugout," Medich said. "I went into the stands and worked on him. It was his fifth heart attack, and he eventually died."

Medich, who started for Texas Saturday, was not due to play Monday night. Asked if he would have been able to pitch following such an incident, he said: "It's tough to concentrate on baseball after something like that. I really can't answer."

Beniquez Homers In Rangers' 2-0 Win Over O's

By The Associated Press
A sacrifice fly by Bobby Bonds snapped a scoreless tie in the 11th inning and Juan Beniquez followed with a home run, giving the Texas Rangers a 2-0 victory over the homestanding Baltimore Orioles Monday night.

Bump Willis singled with one out in the 11th off Mike Flanagan, 13-7, stole his 28th base in 32 attempts and continued to third when he kicked catcher Rick Dempsey's throw into left field.

Bonds, who had two of the nine Texas hits, lined out to center field and the throw from Larry Harlow struck the mound and bounced high into the air as Willis scored.

Gossage just missed the plate on a 3-2 delivery to walk Wilson and then was ejected from the game after disputing the call. Gossage had first argued with home plate umpire Larry Barnett, then stomped off the mound towards second and was thrown out by second base umpire Durwood Merrill.

's Holmes Received Help From On High (Attic)

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Holmes had help from a high place when he set the National League consecutive-game hitting record in 1945 — Boston Braves manager Del Bissonette's attic.

"I broke my good bat about the 19th game," Holmes said Monday, reminiscing about his record 37-game streak as a Braves outfielder.

"Del said, 'Tommy I'm going home and look in my attic. I'm going to get you one of my old bats.' He brought it down, and it was just what I like, and I hit like hell with it right through my streak."

The latest to take a crack at Holmes' modern NL record—Willie Keeler hit in 44 straight in 1897—is Cincinnati's Pete Rose, who has hit in 30 straight games through Monday.

If his record is broken, Holmes would like to be by a player like Rose.

"He gives you $1.10 for a $1," said

Holmes, who now works in community relations for the New York Mets. "He has given a lot to baseball. This is not a freak (Rose's streak). He has the consistency. He's a two-field hitter. He is great at hitting that ball where it's pitched, and I mean great. God knows if he breaks the record, he could go to 40 or 50 games.

The major league mark is 56 games set by Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees in 1941. "Joe was the greatest that ever lived in my opinion," said Holmes.

Tommy Holmes understands and appreciates consistency. His hitting streak wasn't a freak either.

"You've got to hit the ball good seven out of 10 times to be a .300 hitter," said the man who in 10 major league seasons, nine with Boston, from 1942 through 1952, compiled a .302 average. That includes averages of .241 and .139 in 1951-52 when he mostly pinch hit as a playing manager with the Braves and with the Brooklyn Dodgers after he was replaced in 1952 as Boston's field boss.

In 1945, Holmes hit .352, drove in 117 runs and hit 28 of his 88 career homers.

"I had a 345-foot fence up there with the wind blowing in," (Braves Field in Boston). "Holmes, who was a left-handed hitter, said in explaining his unusual power explosion in 1945.

"One day I hit a homer against the wind and they said, 'Can you hit more homers?' I said, 'Give me a target like Ebbetts Field, the Polo Grounds or Greenberg Gardens (Forbes Field) and I'll pull. They brought the fence in to 320. They doubled my pay—you can guess at about $25,000. The next year they moved the fence back. Maybe they didn't want to pay me any more or maybe the enemy was hitting it (the shorter fence) more than we were."

Holmes tied and broke Roger Hornsby's record of 33 straight games in a doubleheader against Pittsburgh in Boston. "Frankie Frisch (Pittsburgh manager) told me 'Good luck. I'm throwing two left-handers against you,'" Holmes recalled. "I doubled off Al Deershauser in the first game to tie the record. In the second game, I hit Preacher Rowe's first pitch for a double. That day I got six hits."

The streak ended July 9 when he went 0-for-4 against Hank Wysz of the Chicago Cubs in Wrigley Field.

Holmes still has the ball he hit off Rowe, and the memories. Nobody can break them.

LAST TIME AROUND—Outfielder Tommy Holmes of the old Boston Braves releases his bat and breaks for first base after hitting a ground ball during the 1945 game against the Chicago Cubs when his National League-setting hitting streak ended at 37 games. Cincinnati's Pete Rose is now closing in on Holmes' record. (AP Laserphoto)

Hunt Says Low Attendance No Problem For WCT Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — The site was the famed horseshoe stadium at the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills, for nearly 60 years the home of the U.S. Championships and U.S. Open, a mecca for the world's best players.

The event: a $300,000, 12-man tennis tournament, a $100,000 first prize for the man who could survive three rounds, the semifinals and a final. The spoils made this tournament one of the richest events in the tennis world.

Yet only two players — Vitas Gerulaitis, the eventual winner, and Ilie Nastase, the runner-up — who could be considered top-flight agreed to play. The field was not completed until two days before the event, and then people wondered, "Who's Victor Pecci?" The biggest crowd the players attracted in seven days totaled 7,332 people, 7,120 of them paying customers, a far cry from the usual 12,000-plus throngs in the ivy-covered stadium.

The biggest issue of the tournament was the great tennis ball controversy. The players condemned and eventually got rid of a lively ball they couldn't control.

And the man behind it all, oil millionaire and sports promoter extraordinaire Lamar Hunt, was happy.

"I'm never completely satisfied until every seat is sold," said the mild-mannered, thoughtful Texan. "But I would consider a total attendance of 55,000-60,000 very good for the first year."

The seven-day total was 62,532, paid and unpaid.

"There's a good chance that's the highest first-year total of any new tournament," he guessed.

Hunt's World Championship Tennis, Inc., bore the entire financial brunt — the prize money, the operational costs and other considerations. The losses couldn't immediately be calculated but a deficit was certain.

"I'll be satisfied if we're in the black by the third year," said Hunt. "But I think there's a good chance we'll make it next year."

Hunt says a reasonable attendance goal for 1979 would be 100,000 with better promotion locally and more lead time to attract a star field.

This time, the deal with the West Side Tennis Club and ABC-TV wasn't consummated until early March. "Most players make their commitments about six months ahead of time, at least mentally," said Hunt and proceeded to reel off where the world's best were instead of New York.

Jimmy Connors didn't wish to compete so soon after his loss in the final at Wimbledon to Bjorn Borg the weekend before. Borg had to play a Davis Cup round for Sweden against Spain. Guillermo Vilas, last year's U.S. Open champion was making a movie at Wimbledon and commuting to a small tournament in Gstaad, Switzerland — an easier commute than a trans-Atlantic run.

Dorsett's Knee 'Responding'

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP)—Gil Brandt, executive vice president of the Dallas Cowboys, said Monday that runningback Tony Dorsett's highly publicized knee injury was responding to treatment.

"Tony thinks his knee in great shape and I don't think there is anything wrong," said Brandt.

Dorsett suffered a bruise behind his knee in the fourth quarter of the Cowboys' Super Bowl victory over Denver. Dorsett, the former Heisman Trophy winner from Pittsburgh, gained over 1,000 yards in his rookie season and was named the National Football League's rookie of the year.

He pulled up lame in a recent practice session and said he was still feeling some pain.

The Cowboy veterans report to the California Lutheran training camp Thursday.

Brandt had praise for rookie Gene Washington of Georgia, a wide receiver who caught two touchdowns in a recent scrimmage.

"He can run," said Brandt. "He's as fast as anybody we ever had including Bob Hayes."

Washington can run a 4.4 in the 40.

Brandt said the progress of runningback Todd Christensen of Brigham Young University "had been beyond expectations." "Todd has been a real pleasant surprise."

Lemons Reaps Cage Honors

DALLAS (AP)—Abe Lemons of the University of Texas is the runaway selection as senior college coach of the winter by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Lemons' Longhorns won the NIT basketball tournament after finishing as co-champions in the Southwest Conference. Lemons received 66 first-place votes and 435 points in the preferential balloting.

Guy Lewis, basketball coach at the University of Houston, was second with 281 points. His Cougars upset Arkansas and Texas in the Southwest Conference post-season tournament.

Don Hood of Abilene Christian was third with 249 points. His Wildcats tied for the NIAA indoor track championship.

Other nominees were track coaches Ted Banks of Texas-El Paso and Tom Tellez of Houston and basketball coach Jim Gudger of East Texas State.

DON'T BE A LITTERBUG—Mike Cabbage (26) of the Minnesota Twins walks to the dugout after being ejected from Sunday's game with the Boston Red Sox, and the litter of the scene indicates the way that Twins manager Gene Mauch left the field. Cabbage was called out on a pickoff play at first base, and he and Mauch were thrown out of the game for protesting the umpire's call. Mauch didn't go peacefully, as he emptied the bat rack onto the field before retiring. (AP Laserphoto)

Sutton Misses NL Penalties

CHICAGO (AP) — Don Sutton said Monday he was not surprised that National League president Chub Feeney did not suspend him after he was ejected from a game Friday night for pitching a defaced ball.

But, on advice of counsel, Sutton said little else.

The Los Angeles righthander said E. Gregory Hookstraten, his attorney, phoned him in the Dodgers' clubhouse during Monday's game with the Chicago Cubs and informed him of Feeney's decision.

Sutton said Hookstraten told him, "I met with Mr. Feeney. You're not suspended. Keep your mouth shut, and I'll talk to you later."

Sutton is scheduled to pitch tonight against the Pirates in Pittsburgh.

He had said he planned to sue umpire Doug Harvey and the National League on grounds they are trying to deprive him of the right to earn a living. He did not say Monday whether he would file the suit in light of Feeney's decision.

Feeney issued a statement Monday saying that the umpires took the proper action in ejecting Sutton but that "no further disciplinary action appears appropriate at this time."

But Feeney added that Sutton is being warned again that disciplinary action may be taken if "repeated violations of this nature are detected."

Harvey said that during Friday night's game with the St. Louis Cardinals, he found that three balls which Sutton had pitched were defaced. After the third incident, in the seventh inning, Sutton, who has been accused several times of doctoring baseballs, was ejected.

"I'm very enthused" about Feeney's decision, said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. "It makes me feel good to know they're not penalizing Sutton. We just cannot lose a pitcher the caliber of Don Sutton."

"It's no surprise. I wasn't thinking one way or another. I just said I hoped when they made a decision it would not hurt us or Don."

McNally, Wood Take Golf Crown

LITTLEFIELD (Special)—Allan McNally and Kent Wood of Lubbock defeated Fred Owens of Littlefield and Richard Perry of Levelland on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to win the Littlefield Country Club Partnership Sunday.

Both teams finished the 36 holes with 14-under-par 128. The winning duo shot a 64 each day.

Kip Cutshall Littlefield aced the fifth hole during the tourney. It marked the second consecutive year that he has scored a hole-in-one in the tournament.

Raiders Sign EP Golfer

Texas Tech signed its third golfer to a letter-of-intent, coach Danny Mason announced Monday.

Signed is Brad Powell of El Paso Eastwood. Powell was all-regional after competing in the Class AAAA regional meet here last spring.

Is a six-time qualifier for the state amateur tournament and finished second in the recent Sun County Junior Golf Tournament at Socorro, N.M.

Earlier, Mason signed junior college transfers Chris Brown of Midland and Kevin Foster of Plessanton.

Giants Coach Seeking Winning Record First

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — The Giants have to worry about a winning record before they can start thinking about the playoffs, coach John McVay warned Monday as the National Football League team went through its first day of double workouts.

"We have to get out of the red first," said McVay, who is starting his second full year as coach. "You can't make two steps in one season. If you can, it's beautiful. I look at the other teams in our division and we can play pretty even with them. I think our division will be close."

"I feel the commitment we made to the kids was right and we'll be better this year because of it," he said. "But we have to take one step at a time before we can start talking about the playoffs."

The Giants are coming off a 5-9 record and have not had a winning season since 1972. Since that time they are 17-52-1.

The transformation of Gordon King from offensive tackle to guard was the talk of the day as 40 rookies and free agents and 17 veterans worked out at the Pace University campus.

King — the mammoth 6-foot-6, 275 lineman from Stanford — was the team's first pick and the 10th overall in the May collegiate draft. McVay stressed that the Giants' needs would be better suited with King at guard.

"He fits in very nicely at right guard, it's like he's been there before," McVay said. "Everyone uses the right hand of offensive formation and playing left tackle is like being out on an island."

"Left tackle is the most difficult pass blocking position. He's a heckuva guy to have stepping in and playing for us. We've spent more time since the draft discussing where to play King than anything else. We feel he is better suited for guard right now. We don't want him to feel any discomfort in adjusting to the pros."

The relatively low number of players in camp allowed McVay and his staff a closer look at some key performers, including quarterbacks Joe Pisarcik, Jerry Golsteyn and Randy Dean.

Included in that group are last year's first round pick, defensive lineman Gary Jeter; defensive backs Larry Mallory, Beasley Reece, Ernie Jones and running-back Willie Spencer.

Saints

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tinker Owens is bigger and stronger this year, and he hopes the added bulk keeps him from breaking.

Owens finished last season with the New Orleans Saints at 166 pounds. He checked into training camp here at 182 after a summer of weight training and running back home in Oklahoma.

On his first day of training camp two years ago, the 5-foot-10 wide receiver injured his back. Later that rookie year he cracked some fingers during a preseason game and still later, Houston defensive back Zeke Moore jammed some fingers in Owens' eye.

Last season, he ripped ligaments and tendons during a preseason game.

"I don't think you can say I'm injury prone, because most of the things I've had haven't really kept me out of games," he said Monday. "The only serious injury I had was the knee last year, and a knee can happen to anybody at any time."

"But I do think the extra weight is bound to help me, though."
"In college, I could play lighter, because I was on a team that didn't pass much. Here in the National Football League, the chances for an injury are greater because we pass more and a receiver is subjected to more of a pounding."

"When I went home in January, I felt so weak and frail, I knew I'd have a long road if I was going to come back. I still wanted to play football, and I knew I'd have to work on football every day."

Currently, Owens is in an eight-man fight for a wide receiver's job with the Saints.

Figured to start this year are first-round draft choice Wes Chandler and Ike Harris, acquired in an off-season trade with St. Louis.

Tennis Tournament Slated At Dimmitt

DIMMITT (Special) — The 1978 Castro County Open Tennis Tournament will begin July 26 at the Ruskin Racquet Club.

Deadline for entering the five-day tourney is next Monday. The fee is $5 for singles and $10 for doubles.

Divisions will include junior high singles and doubles (through age 14), high school singles and doubles (through age 18) and women's beginning singles and doubles, men's and women's singles and doubles, mixed doubles, and an over-35 singles, doubles and mixed doubles for men and women.

Boys and girls (12-and-under) singles and doubles will be featured too.
Fees must accompany entries and can be sent to Joe King, Box 26, Dimmitt, 79027. King can be reached at 647-4441.

Owens said he's not afraid of the competition.

"I've got 4.6 speed, which is fast enough to get open deep, and I think I have better than average routes and hands," he said. "Plus, I was the starter last year when I got hurt."

"I've always been confident in my ability, and I think I'm a little more confident now with the added weight and strength."
"I certainly feel better."

KC Chiefs

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — Offensive lineman Darius Helton, for the second year in a row, has suffered and injury and will be lost for the season to the Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

A club spokesman said Helton separated a shoulder in practice Sunday and would undergo surgery next week. A fourth round draft choice out of North Carolina-Central, Helton missed the 1977 season when he injured the same shoulder.

The 6-foot-2, 260-pounder was given a good chance of winning a spot on the Chiefs roster.

"This is really a shame for him," said a team spokesman. "Next year at this time he'll be a three-year veteran without one game of experience."

Seahawks

CHENEY, Wash. (AP) — With one exception, the Seattle Seahawks passed physical examinations and began two-day workouts Monday under the watchful eye of coach Jack Patera at the club's National Football League training camp at Eastern Washington University.

Tony Benjamin, a second-year fullback from Duke, was placed on the unable-to-perform list because his knee, which underwent surgery last fall, has not fully recovered.

The 6-foot-3, 225-pound Benjamin will continue to work out individually under the supervision of Seahawks head trainer Bruce Scott.

Seattle general manager John Thompson said Dr. Ivar Birkeland told him Benjamin should be ready for duty in two or three weeks.

Eighteen veterans began workouts Monday along with 40 rookies. The rest of the veterans are scheduled to report to camp Saturday.

Steelers

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — Rookie wide receiver Andre Keys needed 25 stitches to close a wound on his right hand Monday after trying to catch a Mike Kruczek pass at Pittsburgh Steeler training camp. A team spokesman said the ball ripped open the skin between two of Keys' fingers.

Keys, a 6-foot-6, 223-pound California Polytech graduate chosen by the Steelers in the eighth round of the draft, will be out indefinitely, the team said.

Meanwhile, free agent runningback Ron Scott pulled a hamstring.

Slaton Slates Tennis Meet

SLATON (Special) — A tennis tournament including open and closed divisions will be staged here Aug. 9-13 at the Slaton City-County Park courts.

Divisions will include brackets for junior high-aged players on through 25-and-over in men and women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles.

There will be men's and women's singles and doubles restricted to players living in Class AA areas or smaller school districts.

Entry fee is $5 per player per event. Fees may be mailed to Box 278, Slaton, 79364.

For more information contact Fred Smith or Craig Smith, the tournament directors, at 828-6217 or 828-3540.

Jayton Schedules Partnership Tourney

JAYTON (Special) — Kent County Golf Club is staging a partnership tourney Saturday and Sunday, and entries are now being accepted.

The 36-hole lowball tourney will be limited to the first 60 teams registering. The entry fee is $50 per team, and persons interested in competing should contact Gus Fincher at (806) 237-3553.

Players will be divided into four flights, and closest-to-the-pin and longest drive contests will be featured, along with the regular competition. Golf merchandise prizes will be given in each flight.

Scott, a 6-foot-1, 220-pounder from North Carolina A&T, was the eighth player placed on the injury list since preseason camp opened last Friday.

Rookie punter Craig Colquitt participated in workouts Monday for the first time. He reported to camp suffering from a mild case of food poisoning, but team doctors say he has recovered completely.

Coach Chuck Noll reduced the squad to 55 by placing defensive back Jack Phelan on waivers. Phelan, who played guard for the St. Francis of Loretto basketball team, also tried out with the Steelers last year.

Second-year safety Tony Dungy stayed away from practice again Monday after doctors told him he is still suffering from mononucleosis. He will be tested again this week.

LA Rams

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Seven veterans arrived at the Cal State Fullerton training camp of the Los Angeles Rams Monday, including second-year defensive tackle Larry Bailey, who signed as a free agent.

Bailey, who played college football at the University of Pacific, was a member of the Atlanta Falcons last season.

Also reporting to camp were offensive guard Dennis Harrah, runningback Rod Phillips, cornerbacks Pat Thomas and Rod Perry and safeties Jackie Wallace and Windlan Hall.

Two free agent rookies walked out of camp — runningback Mark Davis of Colorado State and tight end Don Pederson of UCLA.

There are now 29 veterans and 40 rookies in camp.

"We're right on schedule," said coach George Allen. "I'm pleased with the progress we made last week. I hope the practices this week are as good as they were last week."

Allen said a shortage of tight ends and offensive linemen had slightly hindered the drills.

This morning, the Rams will fly to Santa Rosa, Calif., practice there upon arrival, scrimmage the Oakland Raiders in the afternoon and fly back to their training camp tonight.

Broncos

DENVER (AP) — Three free agents were signed by the Denver Broncos Monday just before the National Football League team was to report for training camp at Colorado State University, the team announced.

They are Gary Silvestri, a 233-pound defensive end from the University of Pittsburgh; Bobby Brooks, a 202-pound defensive back from Bishop College, and kicker John Choukair of Fullerton State College.

Silvestri played with Calgary in the Canadian League in 1978.
