SCENE OF TRAGEDY — Lubbock firefighters make a final check Wednesday of the roof of the Emmerson Elliott home at 2422 23rd St. Earlier they had found 2-year-old Michael Haynie dead after he was trapped inside the flaming kitchen of the residence. Witnesses said the fire, which apparently started when vapors from a gasoline container in the kitchen were ignited by the pilot light of the stove, engulfed the area where the child was trapped and prevented rescue attempts. ## Record 23,000 Enrollment Due Tech This Fall

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A RECORD 23,000 students are expected to enroll in Texas Tech this fall, and dormitory space is in such demand that the university has leased a wing of a private apartment complex to accommodate more students.

In addition, admissions officials say everything is coming up roses in almost all facets of enrollment: summer, fall, graduate student and first-time freshman enrollment all have shown marked increases over last year.

Bill Haynes, assistant director of housing, said 7,200 dorm applications were accepted by April 10, with 500 applicants assigned to waiting lists.

An extra 300 women will be housed in a wing of the College Inn, a privately operated apartment high-rise at 10th Street and University Avenue, across from campus.

Haynes said extra security measures will be taken at the complex to insure the women "will be as safe as they would be at an on-campus dorm."

A 24-hour guard will be added to the first floor of the building, a security alarm will be installed at the entrance, doors will be secured at night and resident advisors will be hired for the group, Haynes said.

Although he feels the university's housing staff has done much to make the dorms attractive places in which to live, he adds that the major factor in students' decision to live on campus has to do with economy and convenience.

Dorms Attract Upper-classmen

Even with the rule change last year allowing sophomores to live off-campus, an increasing number of sophomores, juniors and seniors are applying to live in the dorms.

"More and more students discover that it is less expensive and more convenient to live on campus, so they decide to stay in the dorms even after their freshman year," Haynes said.

Earlier this year, the university's Board of Regents hiked dorm rates by almost 5 percent, citing the rising cost of utilities, food and wages as reasons for the increase.

Airconditioned rooms were upped by $60 per year and non-airconditioned rooms went up $50 a year. Rates for Tech's 18 residence halls now range from $1,045 to $1,335 annually, which includes 20 meals a week.

For dorm residents, this works out to $116 to $148 in monthly "rent" for room and board — a bargain when compared to Lubbock rental rates which can range from $185 to $215 for a one-bedroom apartment, or $200 to $300 for a two-bedroom, not to mention the added cost of utilities and food.

The upsurge in dorm applications also reflects the increase in fall enrollment applications.

The Coordinating Board for the Texas College and University System is predicting a record enrollment of 23,044 students for the fall semester at Tech.

The increase is predicted despite a national trend toward shrinking student enrollment at colleges and universities.

D.N. Peterson, director of admissions at Tech, said a record 5,961 freshmen have been accepted for the fall semester — 420 more than last year.

He also said graduate student enrollment is up about three percent and 300 more students than last year have enrolled in the second summer session which began Tuesday.

Protest Set For Friday By Iranians

A PLANNED protest march by Iranian students Friday will be confined to downtown and the Texas Tech campus, city officials said Wednesday.

About 1,500 persons are said to be coming from all over the country to participate in an Iranian Student Association protest of the flight training of the crown prince of Iran at Reese AFB.

The association has been granted permission to march Friday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. from the Civic Center fountain at 8th Street and Avenue Q, east on 8th Street to Avenue O, then south on Avenue O to Main Street. The procession then would proceed east on Main Street to Texas Avenue, south to Broadway, then west on Broadway to University Avenue.

The students plan to end the march with a rally on the Texas Tech campus.

However, march organizers are unhappy with the route the city has approved.

Originally association representatives had requested permission for a march from the Civic Center to Slide Road, down 21st Street past a house bought as a weekend retreat for the crown prince and terminating with a Tech rally.

However, the organizers requested a different route Wednesday. They asked the city for a march starting at Higginbotham Park at 19th Street and Slide Road, proceed down 21st Street in front of the prince's house, follow 19th Street to Boston, Boston to Broadway, circle a

Weather Blamed In Baby's Death

A ONE-month-old Lubbock girl apparently has become the city's first weather-related fatality.

According to Justice of the Peace L. J. Blalock, Cecelia Sains, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Sains of 5007 36th St., was dead on arrival at Health Sciences Center Hospital Wednesday at 3:40 p.m. Blalock who ruled the death was due to natural causes, said the child died of a cardiac arrest as a result of dehydration.

Services for the infant, who was born June 13, are pending with Smith Funeral Home in Levelland.

Child, 2, Perishes In Blaze

A 2-YEAR-old Lubbock boy died Wednesday afternoon when he was trapped inside the flaming kitchen area of a relative's home at 2422 23rd St.

Michael Lee Haynie of 1809 Main St., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Haynie, was pronounced dead at the scene about 2:45 p.m. by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy.

Flames leaping nearly 20 feet into the air, heavy smoke and the intense heat thwarted rescue attempts of neighbors, passersby and firemen.

After working for more than an hour to douse the smoldering blaze, fire officials found the charred and melted residue of a plastic gas container near the kitchen stove.

Fire Marshal A.C. Black said the fire probably began when the pilot light of the range ignited the gasoline vapors.

Alone In House

The youngster, who was at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Peggy Elliott, with his two sisters and a cousin while his mother was shopping, was the only one in the house when the fire broke out about 2:30 p.m. Mrs. Elliott was at work at the time of the blaze.

The other children were in the backyard preparing to mow the lawn when 16-year-old Janie Elliott said she heard a scream and turned to see flames engulfing the kitchen.

Shortly before the fire began Max Minter, who lives across the alley from the Elliott residence at 2421-B 22nd St., said he had seen the youngsters in the backyard working with the mower.

"My roommate and I were watching television and we heard the dog barking," Minter said. "I stepped out back and saw the kids trying to start the lawn mower."

"Then about two minutes later we smelled smoke coming through our air conditioning vent and thought we were on fire until we ran out of the house and saw (the Elliott home) on fire."

DEBT LIMIT EYED

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday narrowly passed a bill to increase the limit on the national debt to $798 billion, $16 billion less than its Ways and Means Committee had recommended.

Postal Talks Snag Over Layoff Clause

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract talks aimed at heading off a possible strike by postal workers remained snagged Wednesday on the question of layoffs, with bargainers reportedly refusing to bend on the issue.

"They just ran into a logjam," said one source close to the negotiations between the Postal Service and three unions representing more than 500,000 workers.

Federal mediators have been attempting to find a compromise so a settlement can be forged by midnight tonight, when the current three-year agreement expires.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said Wednesday that bargainers resolved many secondary national issues during the day on matters such as grievance procedures, arbitration and union recognition.

"Both sides, however, are still far apart on several other major issues," said Horvitz without identifying the areas of dispute.

Those issues reportedly include job security, wages and work rule changes.

For the past two days, the negotiations at a Washington hotel have been conducted with the two sides separated in different

City Mulls Demands For Tax Reduction

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

NEARLY 250 city employees would be laid off if all the demands by the Lubbock Property Owners Association are met, city council members were told Wednesday.

City Manager Larry Cunningham told the council that budget cuts of $5.5 million would be necessary to reduce the present tax rate by 25 percent, raise the homestead exemption for the elderly to $10,000 and remove the ad valorem tax on automobiles.

Because a fixed amount of the tax rate is allocated for paying off city bonds and for the Board of City Development, the 25 percent reduction in the tax rate means a 42.5 percent cut in the city's general fund.

That fund, which pays for most city operations, would be cut from $13 million to $7.5 million if such tax reductions are approved.

And that is a big if, Mayor Dirk West emphasized. He said the potential budget cuts Cunningham prepared were "for information only."

Possible Cuts Detailed

Cunningham presented the council with a 36-page document detailing possible cuts in all but six departments.

Those departments with the largest budgets would be hit the hardest if the entire $5.5 million is cut from the budget.

The police department proposed budget of $5.9 million for next year would be cut by nearly $800,000 and the fire department's proposed budget of $5.2 million would be cut about $450,000.

The elimination of brush collection would save $566,000 and the parks department budget would be slashed by nearly $450,000. The health department budget would be reduced by $320,000, sanitation by $114,300, zoning by $17,000, Municipal Court by $102,000 and an animal shelter by $90,000.

Cunningham assigned priorities to the reductions so the council could approve either a part or all of the cuts.

At the top of the list is not allowing Lubbock Power and Light to transfer revenues to the city's general fund. If the item were cut, LP&L would lose $146,000 which would have been retained for capital improvements.

A reduction in brush collection is second on the priority list for a savings of $276,000. At this level of funding, brush would be collected about two times a year rather than the current four times per year.

Downtown litter pickup would be cut for a savings of $9,300.

Cuts in the parks and recreation area are high on the list of priorities.

Those cuts would include eliminating the Golden Gloves supervisor, the track program, gymnastics, the Show Wagon and Municipal Band, cutting off the softball field lights, reducing playground programs, eliminating a new pottery program, eliminating ball diamond attendants at all little league and soccer fields, reducing season and operating hours at four city pools and eliminating Mae Simmons Pool, reducing the hours of operation of community centers and the Garden and Arts Center, reducing the water in the Yellowhouse Canyon Lakes and re-

PRESENTS TAX REVISION BILL—Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, is pictured as he presented to the Texas House Ways and Means Committee Wednesday his bill calling for a countywide appraisal for all local taxes, also setting a 5 per cent limit on local tax increases, unless approved by two-thirds of a governing body. It would also tax farm land on productivity. Gov. Dolph Briscoe earlier in the day opened the special session to consideration of such legislation. Story on Page 16, Sec. A. (AP Laserphoto)

Airport Accepts Bid On Parking Facility

THE AIRPORT board Wednesday accepted the low bid by the H. C. Lewis Construction Co. and Kerr Construction Co. for the construction of a two-level parking facility at Lubbock International Airport.

The board accepted the low bid of $1,538,623 by H. C. Lewis Construction Co. for the two-level parking structure and the low bid of $683,177.24 by Kerr Construction Co. for the paving of the roadway, which would be built adjacent to the two-level facility.

The proposed structure would be located southwest of the main terminal building at the airport.

Eight companies had submitted bids for the parking structure and two companies had bid for the paving of the parking lot and roadway.

City council members will take up the board's suggestion at their next meeting.

In other business, the board agreed to put up $3,900 for the expansion of the Southwest Airlines ticket counter at the airport. Southwest has agreed to take up the rest of the expenses towards the expansion.

Thomas Hoff of Southwest told airport board members Wednesday night that the airline had recorded 19,000 boardings last month and that they desperately needed more counter space.

The board also okayed Lonnie Hollingsworth's request for concession rights that would allow him to install a clean-operated blood pressure testing device in the airport.

The device would cost fifty cents per person to operate.

Soviets Warn U.S. Of 'Confrontation'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Wednesday that pressure on the Kremlin in trade or other areas is not in the interest of the United States and would lead to a "path of confrontation."

The article in the government newspaper Izvestia followed an announcement in Washington that President Carter has canceled a multimillion-dollar computer deal with the Soviets in apparent retaliation for recent dissident trials here.

The sale of a Sperry-Univac computer system was to have been made to the official Soviet news agency Tass.

Izvestia said any U.S.-Soviet "trade or business contracts are concluded for mutual interests."

"This is one more A-B-C truth which should be taken into account by these politicians in the U.S.A. who are hatching their plans of pressure on the U.S.S.R. in the economic field as well as in other spheres," the newspaper said.

Weber Case Could Be Bigger Than Bakke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Bakke is by now a household name. Brian F. Weber is not.

But it is Weber's court challenge that now poses the more serious threat to government efforts to improve job opportunities for minorities by giving them preference in hiring and promotion.

Bakke, the white Californian who wants to be a doctor, won a reverse discrimination case in the Supreme Court, and will be admitted in the fall to the medical school that had rejected him in favor of a minority applicant.

For all the attention focused on the Bakke case, government lawyers say it will have scant impact on federal efforts to combat job discrimination.

It is Weber, a white Louisiana factory worker seeking to learn a craft, whose reverse discrimination case has the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission worried now.

The people who run the EEOC say "affirmative action" programs won't be slowed by the Supreme Court ruling that Bakke was a victim of reverse discrimination.

EEOC lawyers say the agency still can make employers correct past job discrimination with affirmative action, giving preference to minorities and women.

The Bakke ruling voided as too rigid the California school's special minorities admission program, but it allows race to be considered in admissions decisions if it is not the sole factor.

"At the moment Bakke appears to leave the status quo for law enforcement and anti-discrimination work in the employment field," said Eleanor Holmes Norton, the EEOC's "chair" — a title she uses instead of "chairman" or "chairwoman."

She is less certain about Weber's suit, which has not reached the Supreme Court. In that case, a U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that giving preference to blacks is illegal, unless past bias against them by the organization involved has been proven.

Thus, the issue: May a company with no proven or admitted history of bias legally adopt an affirmative action program?

The Supreme Court has not confronted that question, and Miss Norton says that until it does, government efforts to eliminate job bias through affirmative action may suffer.

The EEOC contends that if the Weber ruling stands, employers may stop undertaking voluntary affirmative actions. If that happens, "the whole law enforcement system in anti-discrimination has gone berserk," says Miss Norton.

Weber, a white employee of Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Co. in Gramercy, La., sued after Kaiser sought to add blacks in some crafts by training one black for each white until black representation reached 39 percent. Weber was denied the training.

The program, under a new contract with the United Steelworkers union, did not result from any charge or admission of job bias.

A U.S. Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 in New Orleans last November that an employer who has not actually discriminated against blacks violates the law by preferring blacks for job openings.

The Weber decision puts employers in a bind:

If a company — after noticing a lack of blacks in supervisory jobs — decides to reserve a percentage of future promotions for blacks, it first must admit past bias to avoid reverse discrimination suits by whites. Such an admission, though, would open the firm to possible damage suits by blacks seeking back pay.

So, employers might do nothing and await a suit from the EEOC, which enforces job discrimination provisions of the Civil Rights Act.

That concerns Miss Norton: "The basic social policy behind law enforcement ... is to have a much greater number of companies than we can sue believe they must voluntarily keep us from suing them by adopting voluntary affirmative action."

"No law enforcement agency could ever sue everybody in violation. You must do most of it by deterrence. If they (employers) believe they have to wait to be sued, the whole law enforcement system in anti-discrimination has gone berserk," she said.

Underscoring this are agency statistics showing that the EEOC took legal action on fewer than 500 of the 80,000 job discrimination complaints against private employers last year.

Trying to skirt the Weber ruling, the EEOC advises employers to adopt affirmative action programs when there is a "reasonable" basis to believe the firm has discriminated in the past.

Meanwhile, EEOC attorneys are deciding whether to appeal to the Supreme Court. One said the Weber case "does not address the key issues as clearly as we would like," and thus risks a Supreme Court review that would not produce a definitive ruling.

The EEOC also is worried about a U.S. District Court ruling, now under appeal, in a suit brought by the Detroit Police Officers Association. It accused the city of reverse discrimination by reserving for blacks half of all promotions to sergeant.

Miss Norton said the district court judge ruled last February that "you not only have to come in and say you discriminated, you have to prove you discriminated."

An EEOC attorney, who asked not to be named, said this "could kill all future settlements."

Clouds Give Area Relief From Heat

Although near 100-degree temperatures again threaten to scorch Lubbock today, cloudiness kept the mercury from soaring above 95 Tuesday, offering a slight relief to Hub City residents.

A weak low pressure system which is extending northeast to southwest in the Panhandle is causing temperatures to remain near the century mark across the South Plains.

Previous to Tuesday, Lubbock recorded readings above 100 degrees five consecutive days.

The local forecast calls for continued hot afternoons through Friday. Otherwise fair conditions can be expected with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the evening.

Across the state Tuesday afternoon temperatures were in the upper 90s and 100s except in the 90s along the mid to upper coast. Wichita Falls again registered the state's high of 105 degrees.

Heavy thunderstorms occurred in the north central section of the Panhandle about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. Scattered showers and thundershowers spotted the mid to upper coast and inland to portions of south central and southeast parts of the state.

Shcharansky 'Hullabaloo' Hit

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet press Wednesday accused the West of violating the Helsinki accord for its "hullabaloo" defense of Anatoly Shcharansky and said Shcharansky was a "criminal" spy operating in the guise of a human rights activist.

Vladimir Bolshakov, a commentator for the official newspaper Pravda, compared Shcharansky to Anatoly Filatov, a confessed spy who was sentenced to death by firing squad on the same day Shcharansky was sentenced to 13 years hard labor for high treason.

"Certainly, not only the treason article in the criminal code brackets together Filatov and Shcharansky," Bolshakov said in an article under the headline "Concerning a Certain Hullabaloo."

"They betrayed their motherland, the country which fostered them, gave them education, employment, roof over their heads and bread grown by its toilers, all this they trampled under foot and finally, betrayed," Pravda said.

The article claimed the Soviet Union has strictly observed the provisions of the 1975 Helsinki Accords guaranteeing human rights. It said the Shcharansky trial was purely an "internal matter."

"The attempts of the foes of socialism to criticize Soviet justice from the position of the Helsinki agreements are really quite flimsy," the article said.

"If we are to mention these agreements it is the provocative anti-Soviet campaign that is contrary to the final act and the very spirit of Helsinki," Pravda said.

The article said that anyone familiar with the Shcharansky case would know he was "not an ideological fighter but a criminal who worked on assignments for one of the Western countries."

In an apparent reference to President Carter's public defense of Shcharansky,

Pravda said:

"Even after materials of the investigation and trial were published proving Shcharansky guilty of all counts there are still people abroad — and quite high-ranking ones too — who without any proof repeat a phrase said there that the accusation of Shcharansky is a lie."

The Pravda article also referred to Shcharansky's contacts with Western

British Soldier Killed By Bomb

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb blew up behind a stone wall at Dungannon Wednesday, killing a British Army private, and a sniper critically wounded a British infantry lieutenant in Belfast, the army reported.

The death of Pvt. Mark Carnie, 38, brought the Northern Ireland death toll to 1,853 in nine years of sectarian gang war and British efforts to control it.

newsmen and in an apparent reference to Robert Toth, former Moscow correspondent for the Los Angeles Times, said Shcharansky gave his "intelligence contact" information for a story on Soviet Jewish emigration.

"Shcharansky handed over (information) to the agent of a foreign intelligence service who at that time worked in Moscow under the cover of a foreign correspondent," Pravda said.

British Soldier Killed By Bomb

The five-pound explosive was apparently touched off by remote control as Carnie's foot patrol went by. The other two members were not injured.

The Irish Republican Army, which claims to represent Northern Ireland's Roman Catholic minority, has been waging a guerrilla campaign to wrest the province from British rule and unite it with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic.

Big Brother's First Cousin

THE ELECTRONIC age, while a marvel in some respects, also is proving to be a monster as far as personal privacy is concerned.

Millions of Americans who guard their bank accounts, charge records, medical information and even personal lives jealously, should be shocked to learn that most all such information is available to many sources.

This is especially so in the area of credit checks, job information and insurance. Often, the names and the "figures and facts" don't jibe.

MORE AND MORE, many citizens are learning, to their dismay, that there is little about their living habits that someone—and particularly a computer—isn't privy to.

Quite often, if one goes to a business for a credit card or just to charge an item, there is a central data bank the firm can draw upon. So far, so good. In many instances, this is a quick way to ascertain a person's credit status.

But, in the case of someone checking on one's possible employment, application for insurance or a personal loan, some funny things have happened from the data collecting process to the input into the electronic wizard.

THERE HAVE been cases reported where raw information, collected from neighbors

A Salute To ATC, Reese AFB

IT IS MOST appropriate that Lubbock and Reese AFB play host today to Gen. John W. Roberts, commander of the nation's Air Training Command.

The General will be honored in a formal ceremony at City Hall where he will be presented a special certificate by City officials. Later he will speak at RAFB.

His visit is one of the highlights of the city's and Reese's observance of the 35th Anniversary of ATC, the Free World's largest school system.

THAT SYSTEM, encompassing 14 bases, 85 field training units and 121,000 members, is marking its 35th birthday from July through October.

In so doing, it not only is paying tribute to those who have made the supreme sacrifice in defending this nation as graduates of the ATC, but to the countless thousands from cooks and ground crews to the men who fly the planes.

The ATC "team" has come a long way from the fledgling days of the Army Air Corps and the trauma of World War II to its present status.

THE ATC's mission has been and still is to turn out highly qualified pilots and support personnel to man the nation's Air Force. In its 35-year history, ATC has trained over 10 million young men and women for USAF careers.

That it has met this need more than satis-

ART BUCHWALD:

Ripe, Red Strawberries Are Girl's Best Friend

WASHINGTON—A lady in Virginia was arrested and found guilty of eating two strawberries in a supermarket. It was a gaudy story, and many people thought the arrest was outrageous.

That is because they didn't know what the stores are getting for strawberries this summer. The price of fruit is out of sight.

I discovered this the other day when I took my wife to Neam's Market to buy her an anniversary present. We went to the fruit and vegetable department.

But first we had to ring the bell before the guard opened the steel door.

"We're interested in fruit," we told him.

WE WERE USHERED into a carpeted room where Mr. Neam himself came out and sat behind his Louis XIV desk. We were asked to be seated across from him.

"Can I be of service?" he asked.

"We were looking for something in fruit for our 25th anniversary," I said.

Mr. Neam snapped his fingers and an assistant brought out a tray of strawberries.

"I have a matched pair that just arrived," he said, holding two of the most beautiful strawberries I have ever seen.

My wife's eyes glowed.

"How much are they?"

"With or without the sugar?" he wanted to know.

"With the sugar."

He wrote down the price on a piece of paper.

I GULPED. "Do you have anything else?"

He snapped his fingers again and the assistant brought out another tray.

"These are pears shaped like diamonds," he said. "Note the luster of the skin when I hold it up to the light. Elizabeth Taylor had one of these for breakfast when her husband John Warner was running in the primary."

and casual acquaintances reportedly had been used as the gospel truth.

In some cases, irate citizens, with the means to do so, have hired legal counsel to "clear" their names and then take after the agencies, credit and otherwise, which got the "facts" and electronic gadgetry involved in the first place.

Ironically, the current administration makes much of the fact that in some countries, South Africa is a favorite target, people have to move about under the cloud of a "passbook."

While the analogy may be stretched a bit, the truth of the matter is that Americans—also move under a cloud of numbers—Social Security, driver's license and credit card.

CONGRESS IS studying ways and means of giving the citizen more protection from the prying eyes of those who have no business looking at one's personal records.

And while some headway has been made in this area, more laws are needed, particularly in making those who gather, utilize and disseminate private data on the personal lives of individuals fully responsible for its content and any damages which may result in passing it on.

We often decry Big Brotherism in government. For whatever it is worth, Big Brother's First Cousin may turn out to be a pair of computers.

factorily is backed by the fact that it was air power that played perhaps the key role in the final crushing of Hitler's war machine and the defeat of Japan.

Throughout the ATC's impressive history, and before for that matter, Lubbock and this area in the nation's military air command accomplishments.

FROM THE early 1940s, with only a brief interruption, Lubbock has been home to the men who fly into the wild blue yonder.

More than 20,000 pilots of various kinds have graduated from what once was Lubbock Army Air Field, later Reese AFB, and from another wartime base here, South Plains AFB, a combat glider training facility.

Today, Reese AFB ranks among the most modern and advanced in the ATC. It is still turning out pilots for this nation and its allies. And it is doing so with top commanders, experienced pilot instructors and ground crew personnel, not to mention the latest in pilot training, the base's fantastic new simulator.

But, in the final analysis, it is the men and women who have been the backbone of Reese AFB, the ATC and the nation's preparedness program who have counted the most.

Not only that, but the ATC, and Reese AFB have been good neighbors, good citizens in the community—and good Americans. We salute them all!

I could see my wife's mouth watering. "I don't think we're in Elizabeth Taylor's class," she said. "Consider this diamond-shaped pear an investment. In three days when it's ripe it will be worth three times what you paid for it."

WE BOTH SHOOK our heads.

He snapped his fingers and the assistant took away the tray of pears and brought a tray of peaches, each sitting on its own piece of cotton.

"One of these would go lovely with your wife's complexion," he said.

"There are only 11 on this tray. Sophia Loren bought one when she was in town a few weeks ago. When these are gone, there won't be any more."

"As you can see, our designer has made it possible to either eat one as is, or cut it up into small pieces and add sweet cream."

He wrote down the price on a slip of paper.

There was no way I could afford it.

"We're hoping," I said, "for something that would take up more room in our Waterford fruit bowl."

"I have just the thing," said Mr. Neam, still smiling. He snapped his fingers and the assistant brought out a tray of bananas.

THEY WERE STILL green, but Mr. Neam explained the green ones had the most value because in time they would turn yellow. My wife picked one up, and I knew from the way she held it that this was what she wanted.

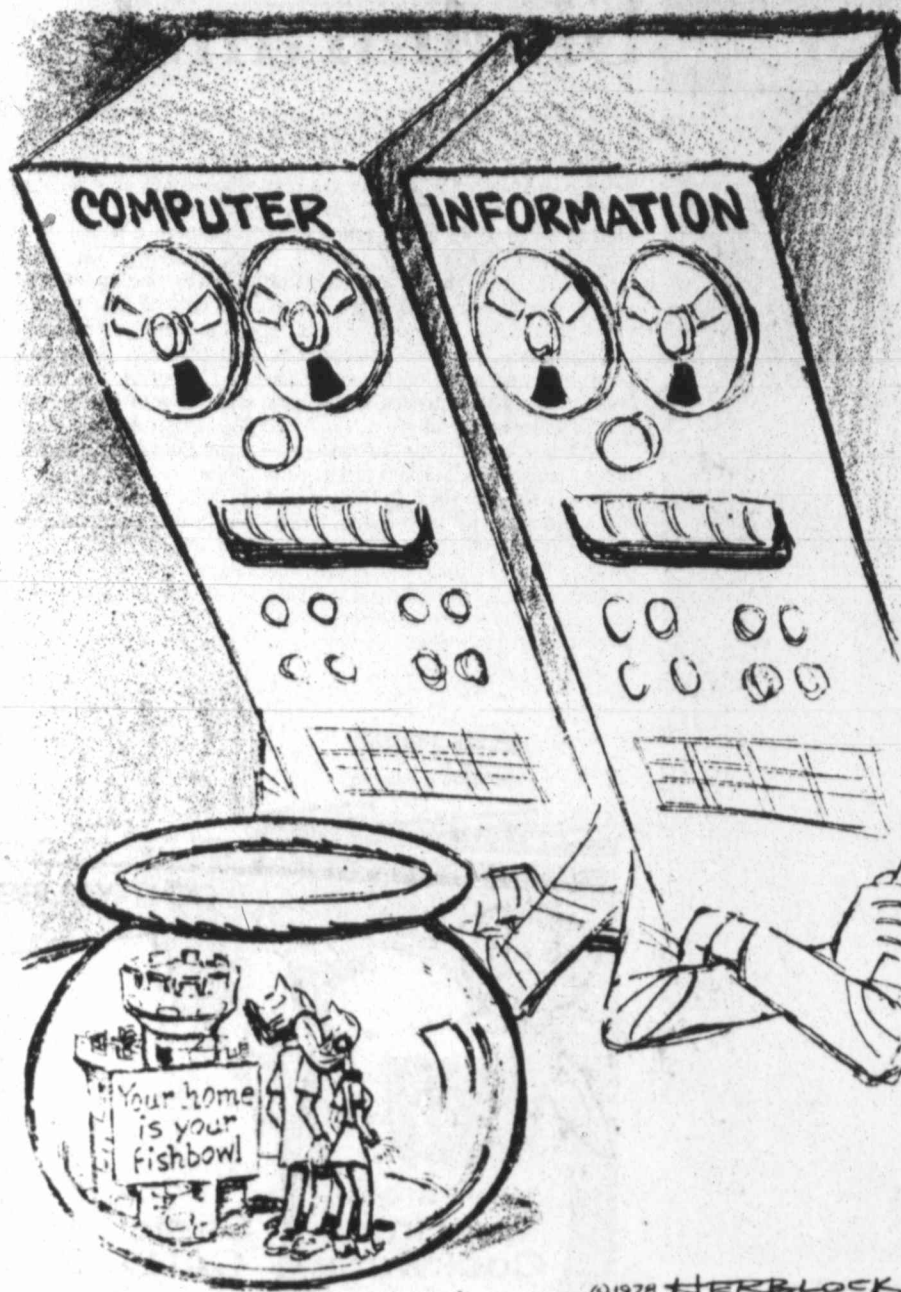

"What the heck," I thought. "A 25th anniversary only comes once in a lifetime."

I wrote out the check and they put the banana in a lined box.

Mr. Neam locked the safe and then escorted us to the door. "Come back next week," he said.

"We're having an exhibition of rare raspberries loaned to us by the Mellon family who grow them on their farm in Middletown."

Two Belts Unbuckled

NOVAK

CAIRO—A military map kept in a locked cabinet in the office of Gen. Abdel Ghany Gamaay, Egyptian defense minister, reveals more clearly than the words of politicians how far Soviet penetration of key African states has proceeded, which the U.S. plays by Marquis of Queensberry rules.

It shows that Soviet military advisers in Libya have doubled to 2,200 since Egypt gave Libya a swift blow last year in a bloody border dispute.

ANDREW TULLY:

Lend Me An ERA

WASHINGTON—Give Jeanne Connelly, a Philadelphia lawyer, a gold star for candor. A front-line Equal Rights Amendment captain, she told Rep. Tom Railsback, R-Ill., "You can find a legal argument to support us if you really believe in ERA."

I praise Jeanne Connelly because she has conceded that ERA proponents now have to soft-pedal all that lofty talk about justice for women. Congress will pass a seven-year extension for ratification of ERA if it's politically profitable.

However, I question the wisdom of that Washington march by 50,000 ERA supporters and the visits paid by 2,000 of them to scores of congressmen. What Jeanne Connelly and others have to do is campaign like mad to produce a flood of pro-ERA messages from Congress' assorted constituencies.

SO FAR, 35 states have ratified the amendment, three short of the 38 necessary for ratification. As of now, ERA's warriors have only until next March to meet the seven-year deadline set by Congress.

Extension of the deadline seems an absolute necessity to save ERA's life. But there is the very large complication of legality.

It is posed by the argument that if ERA gets another seven years of life, Congress should also permit states to rescind previous ratifications during that extension.

The Justice Department has said that states do not have the right to rescind approval once given, but Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell usually does what he's told by Jimmy Carter, who favors ERA.

Thus Tom Railsback, also an ERA supporter, wants the House to permit rescinding because allowing only ratification would "carry the appearance of impropriety."

"TO MANY AMERICANS such a move (denying the right to rescind) would say that Congress decided that regardless of the steps necessary, the Constitution will be amended, even if it means stacking the deck."

Lawrence Tribe of Harvard Law School, says he was "obliged" to support allowing rescission along with extension. Charles Black Jr. of Yale Law School says it would be "entirely impermissible" to extend one without the other.

Voting an extension, of course, would set a precedent; no other amendment has been given more time than that set by Congress. There's another rub.

WOULD THE SUPREME Court, which presumably takes a dim view of attempts to indulge in constitutional illicity, go along?

There is evidence the Court would disallow such a precedent. It is contained in a Supreme Court ruling 50 years ago which said Congress should determine if ratifications constitute a "contemporaneous consensus."

And one must question whether ratification 14 years after Congress passed ERA meets the definition of contemporary action. Ah, well, ERA will not go away, and that's good.

It's a vital issue that needs to be settled before it divides the country. But the way to settle that issue is to get a reading on sentiment outside Washington, not only on Capitol Hill.

It shows that these Soviet advisers are training Libyan troops down to the company level, with three to five "technicians" assigned each battalion.

Egypt today has little to fear from oil-rich but relatively powerless Libya, headed by the radical pro-Soviet leader, Col. Muammar Qaddafi.

But the legends on Gen. Gamaay's colored map point to this conclusion: while the U.S. flinches from any use of superpower power, the Soviet Union is penetrating key African countries with no such scruples, using money, propaganda, dirty tricks, guns and Cuba.

EGYPT IS A principal target. "They want to get even with President Sadat," Gamaay said, for Sadat's expulsion of Soviet influence here in 1972.

Speaking with diplomatic restraint, Boutros Ghaly, Sadat's chief African specialist, expressed the same point differently.

He told us that major African states south of Egypt, where for centuries Egypt has blocked potential enemies to protect its Nile River lifeline, fear that the U.S. has "drawn Korea-type defense lines" excluding Africa.

Another high Egyptian official said that "the cold war has moved to Africa, and any idea that the continent can be ruled off bounds in the U.S.-Soviet competition is an illusion."

SADAT WAS SPECIFIC: Soviet pressure in Ethiopia, Chad, Sudan and Libya, with an eastern anchor in South Yemen at the southern tip of the Arabian peninsula, is "the first belt" of Soviet influence across Africa.

The "second belt" is targeted across southern Africa, from Angola to Mozambique. Neither belt has been buckled. In the north, for example, France is successfully contesting the Soviets in Chad.

Sudan, Egypt's southern neighbor and close ally, has turned back Soviet efforts to exploit cultural, religious and racial differences between the Arab north and the black south.

But the new Soviet presence in Ethiopia is a mounting threat to Sudan—and thus to Egypt.

The problem for Sadat is the future, as the Soviet Union pushes its aggressive role and the U.S. keeps insisting that Africa is no place for East-West confrontation.

DURING VICE PRESIDENT Mondale's brief stop in Alexandria to see Sadat, the Egyptian president warned that Moscow's free hand in Africa was shredding confidence in the U.S. and creating Soviet strong points throughout the continent for future opportunities.

Sadat's worry seems reasonable. Ever since he ordered 15,000 or more Soviet advisers out of Egypt, cut dependence on the Kremlin and edged toward the U.S., Moscow has threatened retaliation.

Sadat claims that a dressing-down of then-Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow two years ago amounted to an "ultimatum."

He described this ultimatum to us as follows: "Tell Sadat we shall continue to have our plans in Africa and he will meet the consequences of trying to oppose us there."

THE "FIRST BELT" across north-central Africa, if completed, would threaten Egypt with encirclement, yet neither Egypt nor any other anti-Soviet country can begin to muster adequate resources in response.

In fact, however, Sadat knows that a U.S. counter-strategy of the kind envisioned by him is not today under serious discussion in Washington.

The fashionable talk among State Department political appointees is that, if given enough rope, the Russians will hang themselves in Africa.

Compounding Sadat's concern is the predictable turn to new anti-U.S. radicalism throughout the Arab world and across north Africa if the U.S. fails to win Israel's acceptance of a Mideast peace plan.

"If the U.S. now shows that Israel can deafen its ears to the president of the U.S.," one official told us "the future may belong to Moscow in this part of the world."

JAY HARRIS:

A Key To Survival

HAS THE U.S. military establishment been effectively muzzled by President Carter?

And have the Pentagon and Joint Chiefs of Staff, indeed the nation's security, been "taken over" by Sec. of Defense Harold Brown?

Those are life and death questions, not only for the U.S. military forces these days, but the nation's future.

The issues range from the amount of money to be spent on weapons as opposed to salaries to whether President Carter made a fatal mistake in killing the B1 Bomber, not to mention decisions on the Neutron Warhead, Cruise Missile, and other key weapons.

In brief, all across the land today, millions of Americans have said in surveys, and over their coffee cups, that they are worried about the growing Russian military threat, and what we are doing about it.

TO LISTEN to the "hawks," both in and out of the Pentagon, the answer is a resounding "not enough!" To others, who think more and more weapons lead only to war, the answer is "too much!"

Somewhere in between is the answer. We are convinced it is "not enough."

Although Vietnam has not been forgotten, Americans still believe in a strong defense, and despite tax revolts and inflation, are willing to pay for it.

It is a message which, like so many others, seems lost on Mr. Carter, who may blame for what many perceive as an approaching second rate status, and possible disaster, for the U.S.

SINCE WORLD War II, the nation's Defense budget has been one of the biggest items in U.S. spending.

Today, the Pentagon employs more persons than any other government agency and is second only to HEW in spending.

The Pentagon now controls over 2,058,000 in uniform, another 1,064,000 in civilian jobs. A total of $55 billion, almost half of the $112 billion total budget, goes for pay alone.

The other half goes for such things as goods and services—$1.3 billion for ammunition, a similar amount for food, and some $30 million for garbage collection. But, those figures do not touch on the stormy scenes behind what makes the U.S. Defense Department or its Nuclear Age weapons system tick.

MUCH OF THE debate today is centered on the alarming Soviet buildup across the board in its arsenal.

The Russians can match, or surpass, the U.S. in most key categories, and in such areas of naval power, strategic missiles and space warfare may well be ahead.

Close observers argue that Moscow's almost frantic military pace, which also includes extensive preparations for civilian defense against atomic attack, has only one goal—a conventional or nuclear confrontation of the West sooner or later.

Critics of the Carter Administration are just as quick to argue that decisions by the President, and his Secretary of Defense, have "played into the Soviets' hands," and that by the early 1980s, the U.S. could be vulnerable to a Russian gamble, either against NATO forces or a quick strike against the U.S. itself.

COMING IN for heavy criticism are several moves by Sec. Brown, one of the "whiz kids" of post World War II days.

Among these are plans to emphasize a buildup of conventional U.S. forces in NATO in hopes of deterring the Reds from taking a "cheap shot" in Europe.

Other controversial decisions include a downgrading of the Navy, "going along" in killing the B1 bomber, okaying the pullout of U.S. forces in South Korea, agreeing to a White House slowdown on the mobile M-X missile system and supporting the delay on deployment of the Neutron Warhead.

Particularly galling to top missile experts is Brown's seeming willingness to put the U.S. in a vulnerable position during the 1980s. Brown, while admitting the thought worries him, nevertheless is relying on the cruise-missile, some of which would have to be delivered by the aging B52s, and submarine launched missiles as deterrents to a Soviet attack.

IF THE PRESIDENT and Sec. Brown are so wrong, why hasn't the military "spoken out?"

The answer is that since the sacking of Gen. John Singlaub for denouncing Mr. Carter's plan to withdraw the 40,000 U.S. troops from South Korea, and subsequent criticism of the administration's overall defense posture, most military men are afraid to protest.

After his forced "retirement," Gen. Singlaub raised some key points about the responsibilities of a military officer in the best interests of his country:

"It seems to me," he said "that one of the key issues here is that a professional officer has to be able to distinguish the difference not only between proper and improper dissent, but also between proper and improper support. Blind, unquestioning obedience to decision on military matters which were made without reference to the nation's military advisers may not be in the best long-term interests of the U.S. For the military to remain silent under these circumstances is interpreted as consent."

"I believe," he added, "that the citizens of this country have a right to expect that important decisions affecting our national security have been made with due consideration of the best military advice available."

That's the life or death question. We can't wait until it's too late to find out the answer.

...Pass It On

THAT OLD CONTENTION that bankers are heartless doesn't hold up. Take the case of Wendy Westfall, for instance.

She was a teller at the First National Bank of Scotia, Lawmen took her by arm, though charging her with embezzlement, and the court put her on probation for two years. The bank then gave her a four-year loan to repay the money.

All grownups at one time or another in their lives have had mononucleosis. Or so the medics believe. That, they say, is why it rarely afflicts anybody over 30. Immunity sets in early. Once you've had it, you'll never get it again.

Researchers say their studies indicate 22 out of every 25 people of Caucasian heritage put on their right shoe first.

Outcome Of War In Ethiopia Could Give Soviets Stronghold

LONDON (AP) — The outcome of Ethiopia's Soviet- and Cuban-backed war against secessionists in coastal Eritrea could prove vital to free passage of the seas and oceans of the world, says the editor of Jane's Fighting Ships.

Capt. John E. Moore, who edits the authoritative annual reference work on the world's navies, writes in the latest edition published Thursday that Soviet warships already have sufficient control of the Red Sea to permit unchallenged bombardment of the Eritreans and reinforcement of the Ethiopians.

He said an eventual Ethiopian victory in the 10-year conflict could lead to a permanent base for the Soviet navy at the Eritrean port of Massawa and the facing islands of the Dahlak Archipelago. "With these in Soviet hands entrance to and exit from the Suez Canal could be cut with no difficulty," the editor asserts.

Ethiopian and Cuban troops are fighting several armies of secessionist guerrillas who seek control of the northern Eritrea province, adjoining the important Red Sea route.

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press, Moore said he had received fresh evidence of Soviet navy activity in the area after his book went to press.

He considers the northwest and western coasts of Africa "could soon become a Soviet paradise," with the Soviets expanding influence and bases from their present naval and air base at Conakry, Guinea.

He writes: "A Soviet presence in Libya, cutting the Mediterranean in two, could

Emissions Cleared In Flood

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Two federal agencies have concluded that power plant emissions in the Johnstown area did not trigger a freak storm that caused last July's crippling flash flooding.

"In my opinion, the large amount of rainfall that fell in the Johnstown area on July 19-20 was due to natural causes," said L.E. Niemeyer, director of the Environmental Protection Agency's meteorology and assessment division, Tuesday.

"The presence of industrial activities in the Johnstown area and large power plants nearby did not appear to contribute significantly to the occurrence," he added.

The storm last year dumped up to 12 inches of rain in a mountainous eight-county region of western Pennsylvania.

The flood claimed 77 lives. Eight people are still missing and the damage estimate has reached $300 million.

Ferris Webster of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration also found no link between the storm's intensity and power plant emissions.

"These factors would only make a negligible contribution to a thunderstorm cloud system such as the one that produced the flooding in Johnstown," he said.

The agencies investigated the cloud-seeding theory for six months at the request of U.S. Rep. John Murtha, D-Johnstown.

Murtha asked for the analysis after a constituent theorized that water vapor and heat from four Pennsylvania Electric Co. plants could have had a seeding effect that intensified the storm.

"I've carefully reviewed all the reports," Murtha said. "The bulk of evidence clearly leans against the smokes-tacks' or power plants' having a direct impact on the flood."

The Penelec plants at Keystone, Homer City, Seward and Conemaugh are within a 35-mile radius of Johnstown. They have a combined generating capacity of 5,468 megawatts.

The complex also has an extensive environmental monitoring system, including a fully equipped meteorological station at the top of Penn View Mountain.

School Meal Program Shift Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Agriculture Committee members Wednesday promised "an all-out fight" against transferring child-nutrition programs to a new department of education.

Those $3 billion worth of programs, such as federally subsidized school lunches and breakfasts, have been administered by the Agriculture Department since their creation. The laws establishing them originated in that committee.

The Senate Government Affairs Committee, however, has finished legislation to set up the new department, having narrowly defeated an amendment to keep child-nutrition programs out.

Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the agriculture panel, said in a floor speech that "it would be a grave mistake to take (the programs) away from competent, proven hands and place them in an untried and untested new federal department that will be run, as it should be, by professional educators."

The 18 committee members announced their opposition to that aspect of the proposed department when President Carter announced it in April. At their regular Wednesday meeting they endorsed Talmadge's vow that "this fight is far from over."

The amendment that lost by one vote in the other panel is to be offered again when the legislation comes before the full Senate, Talmadge said.

be linked via Chad and the southern areas of Sudan with Ethiopia and the closing of the Red Sea. A separate area of naval threat would be provided by the junction of Mozambique and Angola through Rhodesia and Zambia, giving an overland rail and road route for stores and personnel before the subjugation of the South African Republic.

He also suggests that Soviet strength in West Africa, supported by Cuban troops and naval task forces, could put all the vital Western trade routes around the continent at risk.

He writes that of the five countries in the world which have the most merchant tonnage — Liberia, Japan, Britain, Norway and Greece — "none is able to defend its own fleet on the whole stretch of the world's seaways."

The sixth largest merchant fleet in the world is that of the Soviet Union, replacing the United States.

On the perennial topic of comparative naval strength Moore writes that the all-volunteer U.S. force is superior. Developing American missiles like the Harpoon, the Phalanx, the Standard and the Tomahawk have the edge over the Soviet Union which has no strategic weapons on its surface vessels, he writes.

But until the American Trident I missile is at sea in the Ohio-class nuclear submarines the Russians are ahead in terms of submarine power, he says.

Moore writes that the Soviet Union, with more than half of the world's research and survey ships as well as weather and reconnaissance satellites, is geared for submarine warfare.

Moore calls for a greater integration of Western armaments, arguing that "advantage has been twisted to the Soviets' advantage."

Satellite Information Draws Chinese Interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communist China is behind a mysterious $105,000 foreign purchase order for "non-military" information gathered by U.S. satellites over much of the Soviet Union.

Officials of the U.S. Geological Survey acknowledge the purchase request but refuse to identify the "foreign applicant" and will not say where the data was collected by U.S. satellite sensors.

They do say the area covered was outside the United States. These officials, who declined to be identified, said the information picked up by Landsat satellites deals essentially with various earth sciences, is intended for peaceful purposes and is available to anybody who requests it. They said they do not provide details of the purchases, foreign or domestic, as a matter of policy.

But other U.S. government officials, who also asked to remain anonymous, said the $105,000 purchase request originated with Communist Chinese interests in Hong Kong and that the sought-after 2,860 "frames" of satellite-collected data covered a wide expanse of Russia.

The officials said it appears that the Chinese, who lack a reconnaissance satellite system of their own, are trying to gain information of potential military value about their bitter communist rival, Russia.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has two Landsat satellites in circular orbit about 570 miles in space. With two satellites aloft in different positions, experts said, each spot of the globe except for certain polar regions is examined every nine days.

The experts said the satellites are equipped with a variety of infrared and other sensors that detect temperatures, geological formations, areas of varying population densities, crop conditions and other phenomena on the earth's surface.

The data on the "frames" sent back from the Landsats can be formed into pictures, they said.

Officials at the Geological Survey's data center in Sioux Falls, S.D., say the satellites can scan areas as small as a football field and the newest Landsat has a resolution of only 40 meters — about half that size.

The Geological Survey officials also agreed in telephone interviews that the U.S. satellites can discern such things as airfields and highway systems.

One official at the data center said "I don't know" if the Landsat satellite data is militarily significant. But other officials in Washington say it has such value if it is studied by sophisticated military intelligence analysts.

The Geological Survey data center official in Sioux Falls said no request was made to the National Security Council or to the Defense or State Departments, to clear the $105,000 foreign request for satellite data.

"It's open to anybody," he said. "They don't have to say why they want it." He said the center currently has six million frames of data stored at the center and that it is available to individuals, companies and all foreign countries without restriction.

This official said the reason his agency refuses to provide the names of applicants, the areas of satellite coverage involved in their requests or other information is to protect the privacy of individual applicants and commercial rights of companies seeking the information.

He said he did not see why any requests originating with a foreign country should be treated any differently.

Engineer Urges Solons Reject Carter Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert D. Pollard, who quit his job as a government nuclear safety engineer two years ago in a dispute over licensing procedures, urged Congress Wednesday to reject President Carter's proposal to streamline the nuclear licensing process.

Pollard told a House subcommittee the administration's proposal "creates a smokescreen that hides the real problems now crippling the nuclear regulatory programs."

The administration bill is designed to cut in half the 10 to 12 years it now takes between the proposal of a new nuclear power plant and its completion. One of the ways this would be accomplished would be through speedy approval of reactors that conform to a standardized design.

But Pollard told the House energy and power subcommittee that the proposed legislation "addresses the wrong problems and should not be enacted."

Pollard, in a highly publicized case, quit his job with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as a reactor engineer and project manager in 1976, charging that agency officials cared little about nuclear safety issues.

Testifying in behalf of the Union of Concerned Scientists, Pollard said Wednesday that, based on his six years of work with the nuclear agency, "I believe that the core of this country's nuclear regulatory problems is the fact that the entire process is a charade designed to create the appearance of legitimacy."

He accused NRC officials of a "zeal to promote the growth of the nuclear industry."

Revamping the licensing procedure and standardizing designs "will not have any significance if the regulatory function — assuring safety — continues to be undermined," Pollard testified.

The administration and NRC officials get to present their position on the legislation — which congressional staff aides said Wednesday will likely not be approved this year — on Thursday.

Another witness at Wednesday's session, Oregon Gov. Robert W. Straub, told the panel he supports the general thrust of the bill but thinks states should be given an even greater say in the process than the expanded state role called for by the legislation.

Marijuana Buyers Pick Wrong Vendor

MIAMI (AP) — Two men who mistook Coast Guard officers for marijuana smugglers were arrested on the high seas Wednesday after they purchased bales of marijuana that had been seized the day before, authorities said.

Coast Guard crewmen aboard the 60-foot vessel Alvaro, seized Tuesday with 20 tons of marijuana, said they were approached by two men in a cabin cruiser who wanted to buy some of the cargo.

The officers told the men several bales of marijuana, then arrested them on charges of conspiracy to import illegal contraband, said Coast Guard spokesman Ray Baker. The officers also seized their 50-foot cruiser, Questar.

Baker said the unusual transaction occurred 90 miles east of Miami. He said the men apparently did not notice the Coast Guard Cutter Steadfast, which was some distance away, escorting the Alvaro to a Miami port.

The Coast Guard said the men arrested identified themselves as Felix Gonzalez, 27, and Jose Romero, 28, both of Miami.

The Alvaro was seized Tuesday 300 miles east of Miami. Eleven crewmen were taken into custody.

Energy Chief Chides Federal Counterparts

Alvin C. Askew, energy administrator for Texas, said Wednesday that Americans should not give up their economic futures to "some 35-year-old faceless bureaucrats who have never drawn a paycheck without an eagle on it."

Askew was in Lubbock to conduct the 14th of 24 seminars scheduled this year throughout the state to aid in trimming energy consumption.

"The government isn't smart enough and doesn't react fast enough," Askew said as he ridiculed the idea of energy production and conservation decisions being made in Washington.

Askew said energy and the economy are tied together, and he believes federal advisers who speak of cutting back to no economic growth are toying with disaster.

"We'll need 18 million new jobs by 1985 for persons who are in school now," he said. Askew says there is a correlation between energy consumed and employment.

"Our goal, then, is to achieve improved efficiency from the energy we do use," he said. "If we can't sustain the energy available, then we can't sustain employment."

But Askew is looking for energy consumption to increase, although the object of his work is to get the amount used in 1980 down by 5 percent from what it was expected to be.

"That's not the same as a plain cut-back," said Askew. "Nobody is saying we will use less energy overall. We're talking about more efficient energy use — less energy input for greater economic output."

Askew believes a stringent limitation, issued by Washington, would adversely affect all portions of the economy, and he doubts the wisdom of the decision-making process.

"These are the same people who brought us Amtrak and the Postal Service. We cannot allow the federal government to control energy because it is the economic lifeblood," he said.

According to Askew, the attitude in Washington often is "that people don't know what's good for them, but a government clerk does. Really, there is no way to substitute for individual decisions."

Another concern of Askew is the rivalry among states for energy resources. He said that other states are eager for a share of Texas's oil and gas production, not realizing that while Texas produces more than a fourth of the nation's domestic energy supply it uses one-tenth of the total.

"What we need to do is stop trying to outrun each other," he said of the state-against-state competition. "What we need to do is stop and kill the bear that's chasing us."

More than 100 persons, representing local governments, lending institutions, utilities, businessmen, schools and home-builders, attended the seminar workshops at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The Governor's Office of Energy Resources serves 24 planning regions, "because the person building an energy-efficient home in Brownsville is not going to have exactly the same problem as a builder on the South Plains," said Askew.

He said that energy conservation does not have to be expensive. The emphasis, rather, is on planning.

"Which way the house will face is a consideration," he said. "Windows might want to be kept to a minimum on the south and west sides, depending on whether you want to keep the house cool or warm most of the time in your climate. There are a lot of small things like this that need to be evaluated."

Askew also recommends that consumers work with reputable dealers who have solid financial backing.

"Most people will get burned when they buy something, such as a solar energy device, at a cost considerably less than the rest of the market prices," said Askew.

He warned against buying devices from "street corner salesmen" who drive away in their pickups after the sale.

"Sure, the thing has a seven-year warranty, but where do you go to get it fixed?" he said.

Information on energy conservation for various special interest groups is available through Home Energy Conservation Project in Lubbock, part of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Parents Neglect Facts Of Life

BERLIN (AP) — Only one West German teen-ager in four is learning the facts of life from his parents these days, according to an informal survey of 120,000 readers of a youth magazine.

The magazine, Bravo, said 22.8 percent of the respondents to the survey between the ages of 12 and 20 claimed they had learned about sex in school and 14 percent said the information came from friends. Twenty-six percent said they learned it from Bravo. 4.5 percent from books.

Short Slates Agribusiness Show Address

E.L. Short, candidate for the 28th senatorial district, will speak at the 1978 High Plains Agribusiness Exposition August 25 through 27 in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Short's lecture concerning the legislative assistance to agriculture will be part of an educational symposium Saturday.

The exposition will be open to the public from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from noon to 7 p.m. on Sunday.

Other state and local politicians scheduled to speak at the exposition are U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, Sen. Kent Hance, State Rep. Danny Hill, George Bush Jr and American Agriculture Movement representative Gerald McCathern.

Short, a Tahoka resident since 1925, served as a member of the Texas House of Representatives from 1969 to 1976. During his service in the Legislature, Short acted as chairman of the Intergovernmental Affairs Committee, the Joint Textile for Texas Committee and as vice-chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

THE PANTS STORY

The word pants is derived from a stock character of classic Italian comedy — "Pantalone." He wore a kind of leg covering that resembled our modern-day trousers. Later, in England, in Duke of Wellington gave the necessary impetus to the changeover from knee breeches to pants about 1815.

Rhodesians Urge U.S. Lift Sanctions

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith has urged the United States to lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia as a first step toward ending the six-year guerrilla war in his country.

Smith's call came in an interview Wednesday with the South African Press Association in conjunction with a new bid to get U.S. Senate approval for a six-month moratorium on sanctions against the central African nation.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has proposed an amendment for Senate consideration this week to temporarily lift sanctions after a similar proposal in June failed by 48 votes to 42.

Observers in Washington believe that even if the Senate does endorse the move it is unlikely to be passed by the House.

In the Zambian capital of Lusaka, the guerrilla-backed Patriotic Front nationalist movement said the United States would declare its hostility to the liberation struggle if it ended sanctions.

The State Department in Washington Tuesday declared that such a move would damage U.S. relations with other African states and also "undermine" its credibility as a negotiator for peace between the biracial Salisbury government and the guerrillas.

Prime Minister Smith, who jointly heads a transition government with black leaders, has promised black majority rule by the beginning of next year. A constitutional accord, reached four months ago between black and white leaders, guarantees the country's first popular elections in the next few months. But it excluded guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, who have pledged to step up the war.

Smith said in the interview that the lifting of sanctions would press the Patriotic Front to drop its militant posturing.

He also described as "incomprehensible" the refusal of Britain and the United States to support or encourage the transition government, which he said is trying to preserve Rhodesia as a democratic and pro-Western country.

The United Nations ordered sanctions against Rhodesia after the previous white minority government unilaterally declared the country independent of Britain in 1965.

"Lifting sanctions now, even for the temporary period proposed, would have the immediate effect of bringing it home to the Patriotic Front that they will have to change their present intransigent attitude and their stated policy of getting control of Rhodesia through the barrel of a gun," Smith said.

"It is beyond comprehension that in this regard the present American and British administrations share a common aim with Russia, namely to deliver Rhodesia to Marxism."

The Rhodesian guerrillas are mainly armed by the Soviet Union. Mugabe is an avowed Marxist.

Presidential Papers Bill Wins Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee approved a bill Wednesday giving the government control of White House papers but permitting a president to seal some records for up to 10 years.

The Government Operations Committee rejected a move to give Congress veto power over a president's ability while in office to dispose of records he felt had no historical or informational value. Opponents said the proposal raised many constitutional questions.

The overall measure was approved on a 33-2 vote.

The bill would require that outgoing presidents, beginning in 1981, turn over all official White House records to the National Archives.

However, a president would be empowered to restrict access — for up to 10 years — to classified documents or material regarding national defense, foreign policy or appointments.

The chief executive also could restrict access to documents dealing with trade secrets, advice from aides and personnel and medical files.

Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., proposed that the 10-year exemption be expanded to 12 years, but the committee rejected his amendment on a voice vote.

Under current practice, a president's official records are regarded as his own property. Under the bill, private records such as diaries or journals would remain the property of a president.

The bill would permit a president in office to dispose of records with no historical or administrative value, provided he notifies the archivist and gives Congress 60-days notice.

The committee deleted a provision that would require that such records be put on microfilm.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., proposed that Congress have power to block disposal of records. Although the amendment was rejected, Weiss and Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., said they planned to offer the same proposal when the bill reaches the House floor.

Cool, Relaxed Lifestyle One Means To Escape Heat Stroke

NEW YORK (UPI) — To avoid heat stroke or heat exhaustion, health experts advise shifting into a cool, relaxed lifestyle.

Older persons and those with respiratory or heart ills ought to be especially alert for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke. Heat stroke can kill if medical intervention is not quick enough, according to the American Medical Association's "First aid Book."

Here's what you should know about heat exhaustion:

— Signs: pale and clammy skin, profuse perspiration and rapid pulse. Victim complains of weakness, headache, nausea, and may have cramps in abdomen or limbs.

— What to do: move victim into shade or cool place but protect from chilling. Give sips of diluted salt water, one teaspoon of table salt to one quart of water. Do not give anything by mouth if person is unconscious. Make victim lie down with legs elevated. A chair turned on its side makes a good prop for legs.

— Contact a doctor or emergency medical service or the hospital emergency room. Proper, swift attention is called for. Do not give any alcoholic drinks.

Here's what you should know about heat stroke — which can strike a person indoors as well as out:

— Signs: flushed, hot and dry skin. Rapid and weak pulse. Often victim is unconscious. Contact a doctor or hospital emergency room and put in call for ambulance. Delay could be fatal.

— While waiting, cool the victim by spraying or sponging with cold water or apply towels dipped in buckets of ice water. Do not give alcoholic beverages. Keep victim prone but do not elevate legs. Keep a check on rapidly rising temperature. One first aid measure, if the stroke strikes at home: put person in cool, well ventilated room and wrap in wet, cold sheets until temperature is reduced.

For the greatest coolness possible, authorities suggest wearing light, loose-fitting clothing that reflects heat. Anything tight adds to discomfort as the temperature soars and one goes about the day's chores.

A hat with a broad brim also is a good idea.

The best bet is to stay in an air-conditioned place as much as you can. Persons with respiratory or heart ills should seek out such a place if their homes or apartments are too hot.

To cool off without air conditioning, try a fan and direct the air stream over a bucket of ice water. The air will push the cold from the ice water into the hot room.

Medical authorities suggest replacing liquids if you're perspiring heavily.

Salt tablets? Only on a doctor's advice. If you try prescribing them for yourself you may be unpleasantly surprised.

Lake, River Pollution Top Environmental Worry

By LOUIS HARRIS

Pollution of lakes and rivers has now risen to top place among the environmental worries of Americans.

When asked about 13 different kinds of environmental pollution, the public was clear about which ones it considers the most serious:

—69 percent feel that "pollution of lakes and rivers" is very serious, up from the 54 percent who felt that way in 1971.

—66 percent are very worried about "pollution of lakes and rivers by toxic substances from factories," up from 62 percent in 1976.

—63 percent feel that "pollution by chemicals" is very serious, up from 59 percent two years ago.

—55 percent are now deeply worried about pollution of the oceans, up from 46 percent in 1976.

Although water pollution is their greatest concern, Americans are still deeply troubled about air pollution:

—65 percent feel that "air pollution by industry" is a very serious matter.

—53 percent are very worried about "air pollution by trucks and automobiles."

Other forms of pollution are not as disturbing to the public as water and air pollution, according to a Harris Survey of 1,567 adults nationwide.

—47 percent feel that "solid waste disposal (such as garbage, bottles, etc.) from households" is a very serious problem.

—42 percent are deeply worried about

"pollution caused by liquid waste and sewage from households."

"Visual pollution caused by industrial plants" is thought to be "very serious" by 39 percent of the public, while only 13 percent feel that "visual pollution caused by telephone and other utility poles and cables" is a serious problem.

—Only 25 percent are deeply distressed by "noise pollution, such as caused by airplanes and construction machinery."

—An even lower 19 percent hold the view that "noise pollution caused by loud music" is a very serious problem.

—Since noise appears to be on the decline since 1975,

—36 percent are deeply worried about

"damage to the landscape by strip mining," identical to the number who felt that way in 1976.

It is significant that the only area of environmental pollution that has stirred increasing public concern is the one involving toxic chemicals that are discharged into the rivers, lakes and oceans. Recently, people have become either more worried or more aware about this form of pollution.

However, when asked whether they expect specific forms of pollution to get better or worse over the next few years, responses indicate that there has been an important growth of optimism among Americans:

—The number who think that "pollution by chemicals" will be less of a problem in the near future has gone up from 14 percent in 1976 to 36 percent now. Comparably, optimism about cleaning up lakes and rivers has increased from 19 to 39 percent. And the number who think that there will be less pollution of lakes and rivers by toxic substances from factories has risen from 20 to 39 percent over the same period.

While sizable segments of the public remain skeptical about an environmental cleanup in the near future, Americans show signs of optimism about ecological controls. They sense that their desire to clean up the environment is being heeded, and this feeling may contribute to dispelling some of the disenchantment that has pervaded American thinking in the 1970s. Indeed, an actual improvement in environmental cleanliness will help restore confidence that the system can work for positive change when its citizens press hard enough for reform.

Oil Mining Thriving In Canada

FORT McMURRAY, Alberta (AP) — In just one Canadian province, there are an estimated 300 billion barrels of oil, enough to supply Canada for 500 years or the United States for 43 years. And experts now are developing ways to mine the precious fuel.

That's right, mine it.

A $2.1 billion oil-mining operation will begin at the end of this week and is expected eventually to provide Canada with seven percent of its oil. Although none of that oil is likely to be shipped to the United States, the developments in Canada will have at least one benefit for Americans: there will be less competition for imported fuel.

Syncrude Canada Ltd.'s ambitious project will be by far the largest of its kind. But it's only one of about a dozen operations near this west-central Canadian city that are developing Alberta's staggering reserves of "oil sands," thick, black concentrations of oil locked in sand and clay.

The operations already are producing 75,000 barrels of high-grade oil each day from the trillions of tons of oil sands in the province. Canadian officials hope the sands will yield nearly 1 million barrels a day of oil by 1990.

"Oil sands development is this country's ace in the hole," said Peter Lougheed, Alberta's premier. "It is our major hope to develop economic stability in Canada."

Until 1975, Canada was a net exporter of oil. Now, Canada is importing about 590,000 barrels of oil each day, but the government is committed to becoming self-sufficient by 1990.

The Albertan oil sands, believed to be 200 million years old, were explored during the late 18th and early 19th centuries, but it was not until 1875 that the first government-sponsored geological expedition was conducted.

After several false starts, the "hour of development" began in earnest in 1964 with construction of the first major project by Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. The firm soon was producing oil, and now squeezes about 50,000 barrels of the 75,000 daily from the sands.

The Syncrude project, a joint venture of three oil firms and the governments of Canada, Alberta and Ontario, expects to produce 125,000 barrels of oil a day when it reaches full capacity in 1982.

The oil will flow via pipeline to Edmonton and then to other portions of Canada. Little, if any, is expected to find its way to the U.S., and our own oil sands deposits — primarily in Utah — are considered too inaccessible for immediate production.

"But every barrel that we produce will mean one less barrel that we have to import," said Syncrude official Murray Blakely.

That means less competition when the U.S. tries to buy foreign oil.

'Workfare' Program Granted Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation approved Wednesday by the Senate Agriculture Committee would give the Agriculture Department the extra 18 months it requested for experiments in making some food stamp recipients work off the aid.

The so-called "workfare" pilot projects in 14 states were mandated by last fall's overhaul of the entire $5.6 billion food stamp program.

That measure called for them to be completed and evaluated with a full report to Congress by the end of March 1979. But the Agriculture and Labor departments proposed the regulations for the projects only last week.

The experiments themselves would not begin until October, when the rest of the changes in the program are to take effect.

Identical legislation is pending in the House to change the deadline for a full report to October 1980.

Under the experiments run by states which volunteered to undertake them, heads of households receiving food stamps who cannot find work under stiffer job-search requirements would be assigned public-service jobs in their communities.

The number of hours worked would be geared to the amount of food stamps allotted the family each month.

Hot Water Heaters Blamed In Burning

CHICAGO (AP) — A medical research team warns parents to lower temperature settings on hot water heaters to avoid burning children.

In an article published by Pediatrics, the journal of the American Pediatrics Society, researchers in Seattle said tap water too hot for children caused 80 percent of the accidental scaldings it investigated. The doctors surveyed 57 young scalding victims and found 80 percent of their water heaters set higher than 130 degrees Fahrenheit, which can scald a child's skin in less than 30 seconds.

Coal Slurry Bill Loses In House

Absent Parents Targeted By Califano

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday killed a coal slurry pipeline bill aimed at providing competition for railroads in hauling coal to utilities.

Under the bill, the pipeline companies could have had federal eminent domain authority to clear corridors for pipelines linking coal fields with power plants.

Railroads contended they have the capacity to carry all the coal needed by utilities. Their refusals to allow the pipelines to cross their track networks, prompted the pipelines to come to Congress for the power to do so.

Several projects were planned for pipelines carrying a slurry mixture of crushed coal and water from Wyoming and Colorado to plants in the Northwest, Texas and Arkansas.

Backers of the bill saw it as a method of providing competition for the railroads whose soaring coal transportation bills are passed on to electricity consumers.

But opponents saw the pipelines as a threat to the financial health of railroads and the limited water resources of the High Plains states.

Defeat of the bill came on a 246-161 vote.

Managers of the bill said it was drafted to give states such as Wyoming and Colorado a veto on whether the pipelines could use their water. But many Western House members argued the protection was thin, maybe nonexistent when it came to courts ruling on complex water laws.

With pipelines carrying water away, agriculture, communities and economic development would suffer, they said.

The defeat of the bill "is the best thing that could happen to the West," said an opponent of the bill, Rep. Teno Roncalio, D-Wyo.

Others such as Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said the bill was vital to providing price competition for the railroads. Utilities in Arizona and Texas have had their coal transportation bills doubled and tripled in recent years, he said.

Pipelines were estimated as carrying 5 percent of the coal, and their spokesmen said there would be plenty of revenue for railroads as more utilities convert to that fuel and national production rises.

Udall said the railroads "want that extra 5 percent so they can have a price monopoly."

Some environmental groups opposed the bill, and it had only conditional support from the Carter administration.

Although several major railroads are among the most successful in the nation, the industry as a whole argued in House hearings that coal hauling was a major source of revenue.

Revenue losses would lead to less money for expansion and maintenance at a time when the government is committed to assuring a strong rail transportation system, through subsidies, if necessary, the industry said.

Alcohol Encourages But Also Discourages

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — Doctors say a study on alcohol and sex explains scientifically what Shakespeare said poetically — it provokes the desire but it takes away the performance.

Experiments on 16 male volunteers at Belmont's MacLean Hospital found that a good belt of vodka lowered the level of testosterone which controls sexual potency. When the level of testosterone dropped to its lowest point, doctors reported a surge of luteinizing hormone, which plays a major role in sexual arousal. The study was published recently in the Journal of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics.

Michigan and Utah as states with strong child support programs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announced plans Wednesday to intensify efforts to track down the missing fathers of children on welfare and make them pay child support.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said he hopes to double the collection rate to $1 billion annually by the end of fiscal 1979.

The joint federal-state Child Support Enforcement Program has located nearly 900,000 absent parents and collected $1.1 billion since it was set up in 1975, Califano said. It also has established paternity for 92,000 children.

The health, education and welfare secretary said he was launching "Project Responsibility." It will include a new training center in Washington for the federal, state and local officials who enforce the program, a model child support computer system for states, and creation of a clearinghouse to share information on the state programs.

Califano named Iowa, Massachusetts, ## jumped 32 percent in the first half of fiscal 1978 to 213,000, he said.

On other issues, Califano announced: — He will send all college and university presidents a letter notifying them that Friday marks the deadline for bringing their athletic programs into compliance with a law against sex discrimination in education. He acknowledged that HEW still has not resolved whether colleges with football teams must offer comparable numbers of scholarships to women athletes.

— A fourth and final public conference will be held here Wednesday to review plans for a federally funded program to immunize the elderly and chronically ill against the flu this fall.

— Joseph W. Bartlett, a Boston lawyer and former under secretary of commerce, will head a study of whether to bring federal workers and other government employees into the Social Security system.

Califano said the Carter administration is still considering whether to try to salvage its hospital cost containment bill, which was gutted in the House Commerce Committee on Tuesday, or whether to wait until next year.

He also said he would prefer to wait un## til next year to seek passage of a modified version of the administration's welfare reform bill, rather than to back a bill some senators are planning to give "fiscal relief" to states on welfare costs.

In fiscal 1977 it cost state and local governments $275 million to collect $985 million from absent parents of children on AFDC as well as families not on welfare. That amounted to an expense of $1 for every $3.20 collected.

Louis B. Hays, deputy director of the federal program, predicted that although the government is trying to double collections, the administrative costs will go up by half. That would still put those costs over $400 million.

Life Goes On Despite City Workers' Strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Trash heaps mounted, dung from police horses littered the streets, and stacks of paper gathered dust on the bureaucrats' desks Wednesday. But for most Philadelphians life went on as usual despite a six-day strike by nearly 20,000 city workers.

Employees of the nation's fourth-largest city walked off the job last Friday in a "contract dispute." The walkout has caused a mountain of inconveniences, some genuine hardships and some bitter feelings, yet city folks are learning to cope with such strikes.

"Our biggest problem is the trash," Victor Kendrick, city public relations director, said Wednesday. "In some areas it's piling up. It's unpleasant, it smells, there are flies. But there is no real health danger at the moment."

Philadelphia has had its share of strikes. In the past few years, school teachers, transit workers, school maintenance employees and bus drivers have walked the picket line. School teachers say they are going out again in the fall.

The current walkout, by members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, involves garbage men, prison guards, Recreation Department personnel and Health Department workers.

City health centers, which provide free service to the poor, are handling only emergencies. "If you have a heart attack, you're going to be taken care of," said Kendrick. "If you have a pain in your big toe you may have to come back next week."

But no matter what adversity, love finds a way. The marriage bureau is closed because of the strike, so people are getting hitched in the suburbs. Anthony Semerano, register of wills in neighboring Delaware County, reports that half of all marriage applications since Friday have been filled out by Philadelphia residents.

Philadelphians also can't get a copy of their birth certificate here, because that office is closed too. Kids can't go swimming because the public pools are closed.

And until Wednesday, people in jail awaiting trial had to wait a little longer because the courts were without prison guards and sheriff's deputies to lead them to the judge.

"You can't operate a criminal court system without the criminals," Dennis Moran, chief deputy court administrator lamented earlier this week. His problem was solved late Tuesday when a union leader told the guards and the deputies to go back to work, in compliance with a judge's order.

The city has designated 29 sites for citizens to dump trash. They were busy places Wednesday. Businessmen, with attached cases and green garbage bags on the back seats of their cars, deposited the family refuse on the way to work.

Marjorie and Steve Heitzman came to one dump together.

"It's a mess," she said, "but where are you going to put it? If you leave it in the back of the house, the rats come."

Said her husband: "These hot dogs (striking workers) are sitting in bars drinking. They ought to get rid of them all and give the jobs to people who are willing to work."

But most people just shrugged when asked about the strike. "What can you do?" said one.

At the dump, an unidentified man heaved four bags of trash from the trunk of his car. A reporter asked if he was annoyed by the strike.

"No. I don't care," he replied. "I'm a policeman. I make a lot of money."

For five days, before the union leaders sent the guards back to work, police manned the prisons, pulling in overtime while trying to keep the inmates inside.

At the Youth Study Center, a facility for juvenile delinquents, the kids treated the police like substitute teachers. They popped out of windows and slid down bedsheets to freedom. They smashed chairs, threw oranges and fought each other. At last count, 15 had escaped. Six have been recaptured.

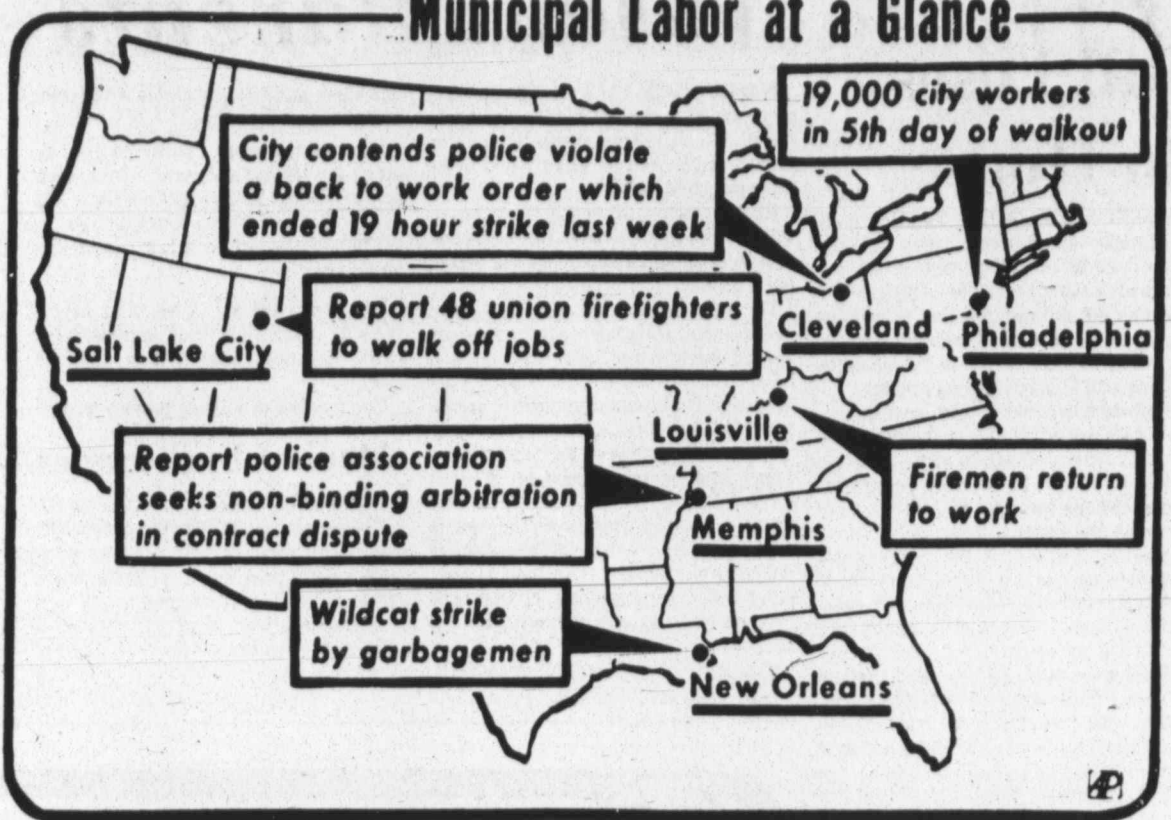

The old and the crippled who depend heavily on government have perhaps been affected most by the strike.

About 200 of the sickest patients at the city-run Philadelphia Nursing Home have been moved to area hospitals. The Navy Yard donated beds to help handle the increased admissions.

Most of the patients are chronically ill, many senile, and all non-ambulatory. Some cried and moaned when they were moved.

"They were panicked, scared, they didn't know where they were being taken," said Bunny Anderson, a nurse at Misericordia Hospital.

Krueger Denounces Tower Ploy

AUSTIN (AP) — Senate candidate Bob Krueger said Wednesday a recent John Tower letter illustrates that the Republican senator is "still playing tit-for-tat politics."

Krueger said Tower had reminded Leonel Castillo of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service that he had supported Castillo's appointment.

"For John Tower to imply that he expected political support in return for a job recommendation is a blatant abuse of the trust placed in him by the people of Texas," Krueger said in a statement.

He said the Tower letter was triggered by one from Castillo to Tower taking issue with the senator for using a photograph in his campaign of Castillo and Tower together.

Krueger said Castillo supports him in his race against Tower. According to Krueger, the Tower letter to Castillo said: "If the picture caused you trouble it distresses me, for I recall offering my unqualified support in your behalf during the Senate Judiciary hearings on your nomination to be commissioner of INS."

The Tower letter, Krueger said, is another example of Tower's "attitude of trying to convince the Mexican-American community he is a friend when in fact his friendship emerges only during an election year or when the passing out of political favors results in favors for him at the ballot box."

Hertz, Holiday Inn Sign Rental Pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Hertz Corp., the nation's largest car rental company, and the Holiday Inns hotel chain Wednesday concluded a three-year agreement allowing travelers to rent a Hertz car at more than 1,500 Holiday Inns in the United States and Puerto Rico.

Hertz Corp., a subsidiary of New York-based RCA Corp., and Holiday Inns Inc., headquartered in Memphis, said the car rental service will not be available at all domestic Holiday Inns. Travelers will be able to make reservations at Holiday Inns and reserve a Hertz car by calling the central Holiday Inns office toll-free.

Effects Of 'New' Johnstown Flood Still Felt

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — It was one year ago today that torrential rains again waylaid flood-prone Johnstown, and the effects are still being felt in the economy and the spirit of this lush mountain region of southwestern Pennsylvania.

Little physical evidence remains of the floods that killed 77 persons and shattered thousands of lives in a city that has survived 20 major floods.

Broken highways have been repaired, the ubiquitous mud has been flushed away and water-damaged buildings have been bulldozed into history.

"A visitor driving in here wouldn't even know the flood had happened," said George Fattman, editor of the Johnstown Tribune-Democrat.

But Don Mihelic remembers. He lost his home and bar in Tanneryville, where 41 persons died and 50 homes were lost when the Laurel Run Dam burst. His unemployment benefits run out this week. He's living in a trailer. Because he has no job, he can't borrow to rebuild his home.

"It's frustrating as hell," said the 49-year-old former steelworker. "You have to live this way after trying to achieve a place and position in life for all those years."

Mihelic could have got a Small Business Administration loan to rebuild his business, but he said he threw up his hands in frustration over the paperwork and regulations.

Another flood victim, Kay Ritchey, whose mill gate lunch bar business of 23 years was washed away in the swirling water, said she'll reopen in October with the help of a $100,000 SBA loan.

In the living room of her government-supplied trailer, family photographs surround a plaque that reads: "God is greater than any problem I have."

But for her, as for hundreds of residents, the flood is still a haunting force. "I get spells of depression and I cry a lot. I've been doctoring," she said. Many flood victims have sought psychological counseling.

"Once you get victims fed, clothed and housed, people think the disaster is over. It's not," said Kitty Gallagher, director of the 77 Flood Relief Center. "The real challenge is for people to put their lives back together."

Bethlehem Steel Corp. employed 11,000 workers before the flood. Its payroll now stands at 8,000, and the area's largest employer is contemplating more cutbacks.

Some retail businesses, including a major department store, simply boarded up their windows.

Unemployment in the immediate Johnstown area hit 13.3 percent in March with 14,400 out of work. The May jobless rate was 8.6 percent — or 8,900 persons — compared to a national rate of 5.5 percent.

"The impact hasn't been felt yet in the community," said Joseph Casale, manager of the state Bureau of Employment Security Office.

The state paid out $67 million in unemployment benefits to area residents through June, but most of the jobless benefits will dry up by the end of July.

"I really don't know what those people are going to do. They will have to either take lower-paying jobs if they can find them or go on welfare," Casale said.

No statistics were available, but Casale said that already out-migration has picked up in this city of 41,000 because of the area's stagnant economy.

Housing is also a problem. The Red Cross says 1,000 structures in the eight-county flood area were destroyed and more than 5,000 others damaged.

At the peak of the disaster, 12,000 persons were in mass care shelters. About 450 families still live in temporary trailer parks.

The federal government already has poured more than $280 million into the flood area, but city officials say more money is needed.

"In the city of Johnstown alone, there is about $100 million worth of work still outstanding and we're behind the eight ball for at least $50 million of that," said Barry Polster, head of the city's Department of Community and Economic Development.

After a devastating flood in 1936, the Army Corps of Engineers opened channels in the city's rivers to prevent future flooding. Johnstown called itself a flood-free city.

"People just couldn't believe that the flood-free city was flooded," said Scott Roberts, director of the Johnstown Flood Museum, dedicated to the 20 major floods here, including the 1889 disaster in which 2,200 died.

Thunderstorms, especially those at night, still set the community on edge. "The phone rings off the hook in here when we get a heavy rain," said Mrs. Gallagher.

City fathers haven't even got around to putting up a high water mark on City Hall, where plaques note the 1889 and 1936 floods.

Vance Sets New Talks On Mideast

LEEDS CASTLE, England (AP) — A two-day Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers' meeting ended Wednesday without any apparent progress toward peace in the Middle East, but with a pledge from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to follow through with more negotiations.

"I believe Egypt and Israel remain fully committed to establishing a genuine peace and we will continue to help them in that effort," Vance said in a statement issued at the 13th-century moated castle where the meeting was held.

Vance said he would begin his diplomatic visits to Cairo and Jerusalem in two weeks. No other details of his travel plans were announced but he also is likely to visit Jordan and Saudi Arabia, upon which the Carter administration is depending to support the U.S. mediation effort.

No Guarantee Given

Vance said that he could not guarantee his trip would produce another foreign ministers' meeting, let alone a breakthrough toward settlement.

Vance mediated the talks, which focused on the future of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

As the talks were ending here, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt declared in Khartoum, Sudan, that Israel was "still dreaming of expansion" and said it could be "the cause of grave damage" to the Mideast. Sadat made the statement in a speech to a meeting of the Organization of African Unity.

Israeli sources referred to the Leeds party, held in a sitting room once favored by King Henry VIII, as "a seminar" rather than a negotiating session. One delegate, however, said it was the first time he had thoroughly understood Egypt's position and felt Egypt understood Israel.

Proposals Reconsidered

Despite the U.S. failure to break the deadlock, Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel, the Egyptian minister, told reporters that his government's proposals for the West Bank and the Palestinians, dismissed earlier this month as totally unacceptable, would now be reconsidered in Jerusalem.

Kamel said Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan "agreed to take back the Egyptian proposal and reconsider it."

Vance also indicated that the Egyptians were increasingly aware of the security measures that Israel would need if it gave up the West Bank.

downtown block, then end the march on the Tech campus by way of 19th Street.

Rick Childers, a city administrative assistant who is charged with issuing parade permits, said the major point of contention is whether the students can march past the prince's house.

Childers has been emphatic that no parade permit will be issued for a march through any residential area, including where the prince's house is located.

Parades in the past have been confined to Broadway, Childers said, and that's a precedent he doesn't want to break.

If the Iranian students are permitted to march in other sections of the city, other groups will want to do it also, Childers said.

The parade permit controversy is not likely to disappear soon. Association representatives have said the protest over the prince's training may last the entire 50 weeks he is scheduled to be in Lubbock and they say the march will occur regardless of what the city does.

Enrollment

Peterson says, is due to more diligent high school recruiting.

"We've been working for it (an enrollment increase). I think we did a better job of presenting the programs to high school students this year," Peterson said.

Texas Tech is ranked 10th nationally in first-time freshman enrollment, according to a recent survey of 402 campuses of state universities and land-grant colleges.

Also high on the list of 79 priority items are closing the Godeke Branch Library, curtailing library service and decreasing materials acquisitions at the Mahon Library.

Midway down the list is the elimination of the Citibus system for a savings of $288,856. If the bus system were eliminated, the city would probably have to repay a federal grant of $705,000 used to purchase the buses and would have to pay $26,000 for the remaining time in a management contract. Part of those costs could be defrayed with the sale of the buses.

Among the possible Municipal Court budget cuts is the elimination of one of the two judges which probably would increase the court's backlog.

Despite a city attorney's opinion that it would be unconstitutional for the city to

Briscoe Backs Appraisal Plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe gave an apparent boost to his tax relief proposals Wednesday by telling the Legislature it could consider uniform property tax appraisals — the so-called Peveto bill.

"I think it's good and I think it will make consideration of a lot of other issues a lot easier," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

In a replay of 1977, senators approved, 24-5, a proposed constitutional amendment to give farmers, ranchers and timber owners a property tax break.

An effort to exclude large corporations — such as timber companies — from the tax benefits failed, 14-15, setting up a possible confrontation with the House.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who attempted to cut out corporations, said, "I hope the House sticks" and rejects the proposal. "I don't think the people will approve it with a loophole this size in there."

If the House approves the measure, it will be submitted to the voters at the November general election. Last year the House lacked one vote of the necessary 100 to get the proposal on the ballot.

The issue then was corporate tax benefits, and sponsors now indicate they are willing to leave out the corporations.

A companion bill implementing the proposed constitutional amendment was sent to the House on a voice vote.

The Senate also approved 30-0 for the second time proposals to abolish the sales tax on residential utility bills and to raise the inheritance tax exemption from $25,000 to $200,000 per estate.

The House has approved the proposals in different and more expensive versions, and a House-Senate conference committee probably will be appointed to work out the differences.

Briscoe's proclamation on the 10th day of the 30-day special session also asked legislators to consider a proposal to permit farmers and fishermen to form associations and to levy assessments on their members for promotion and research.

A law that had allowed this practice was declared unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court.

The main debate in the Senate was over Sen. Tom Creighton's proposal to allow farm, ranch and timber land to be valued on its productivity rather than speculative real estate prices.

Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, opposed Doggett's amendment, saying, "I don't think it's right to treat corporations differently than individuals if they are producing food and fiber."

Doggett, D-Austin, said, "The people won't pass it when they realize we're just creating another corporate tax dodge."

He said the "timber barons" are trying "to hang on the coattails" of farmers and ranchers, who desperately need tax relief.

His amendment would have excluded corporations with more than 10 shareholders unless the shareholders were related.

Hobby switched committees for the bill sponsored by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, which cleared the House in 1977 but stalled in the Senate.

Last year, Creighton held the bill in his economic development committee for weeks, before a floor vote was finally taken. The 17-14 vote to consider the measure was four shy of the necessary two-

Congress Election Financing Loses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House wiped out on Wednesday any chance of approving public financing for congressional races in this session by refusing to even vote on the question.

Although the decision was a relatively narrow 213 to 196, it was a sharp setback for supporters of public financing who have used a variety of maneuvers without success to bring the issue before the House.

Fred Wertheimer, vice president of the self-styled citizens' lobby Common Cause, which has helped to keep the issue alive, said the vote was the closest one ever taken in the House on public financing.

"That means the issue is viable. It's going to come back next year," he said.

thirds. In sending the bill to the jurisprudence committee, Hobby noted that nine of the 13 members of that committee voted to bring it up in 1977.

Peveto's bill includes something Briscoe wanted, a 5 percent annual limit on local property tax increases, unless local governing bodies can muster a two-thirds majority for a tax hike.

The bill centralizes property appraisals in each county and would enable the state to be sure that property is appraised equally across the state.

Chairman A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, scheduled a jurisprudence committee hearing on the bill for next Monday afternoon.

Peveto said he does not think there is enough money both to repeal the utility sales tax and enact the key provisions of his bill, such as increased homestead exemptions and the appraisal of farm and ranch land on productivity.

Senate proposals granting homestead exemptions and exempting autos from property taxes were stuck in a subcommittee Wednesday.

Postal Talks Snagged With Deadline Tonight

1970, when some 200,000 workers walked off their jobs in scattered wildcat actions, mostly on the East Coast.

The current talks have been stalled since Monday night, when bargainers stopped meeting face to face because of their bitter division over a no-layoff clause in the current contract that the unions have insisted must be retained if there is to be a settlement. Management is seeking elimination of the clause.

The two sides have been meeting apart since then at the request of mediators, who have been shuttling back and forth with proposals that might provide the basis for a new round of direct bargaining.

"The general mood seems to be better today (Wednesday)," said the source. "But nothing concrete has been accomplished."

The mediators have been meeting with the two sides nearly around the clock, and remain hopeful that a settlement can be reached by midnight tonight, said John Rogers, a spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

One union bargainer said Tuesday that agreement had been reached on 20 secondary issues prior to the snarl over the no-layoff clause. That, along with a dozen other major issues — including wages, overtime and work rule changes — remain to be settled, said James LaPenta, of the Mail Handlers division of Laborers' International.

It is the issue of layoffs, however, that appears to be the principal stumbling block. President Emmett Andrews of the American Postal Workers said flatly Tuesday that there would be no contract without the no-layoff clause.

According to sources, progress toward a settlement was halted Monday night when management began tying a number of proposed concessions to its demand to jettison the no-layoff clause.

That tactic prevented negotiators from dealing with other outstanding issues without locking horns over the no-layoff clause, said the sources.

The unions maintain that the Postal Service has been able to make substantial reductions in its work force over the years through attrition. Without protection from layoffs, thousands of postal workers would lose their jobs, the unions contend.

However, the Postal Service has argued that the ban against layoffs has prevented it from trimming its force as quickly as it would like to improve worker productivity.

Lubbock Boy Perishes In Home Blaze

2504 94th St. said he was driving down 23rd Street and saw the smoke and a man running from the residence.

"I slammed on my brakes and the man said there was a child inside the house," Leach said. "We broke out the (bedroom) windows and tried to get in but the heat was so intense it was impossible. And smoke was coming from everywhere."

The flames destroyed the kitchen and living room of the residence and also quickly spread through the wooden ceiling to an attic area. The rest of the home suffered heavy smoke damage.

While the blaze was controlled about 40 minutes after the eight fire units arrived on the scene, firemen remained until almost 4 p.m., working in the 92-degree afternoon temperature to extinguish a smoldering mattress in the attic which at one point re-ignited the roof.

Services for the Haynie youngster, who was the fifth Lubbock person so far this year to lose his life in a fire, are pending with Sanders Funeral Home.

Survivors, other than his parents, include two sisters, Shana and Jodie, both of the home; a brother, Scott, of the home, and his grandparents, Mrs. and Mrs. Pete Lang and Mr. and Mrs. D.L. McArthur, all of Lubbock.

Cowardly Police Dog Busted From Force

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — La Dur, a giant black schnauzer that acted tough in training, has been retired from the Orlando Police Force because he proved cowardly and his handler got tired "crawling around everywhere" doing the dog's work.

La Dur finally got his trotting papers three weeks ago when he tracked a robbery suspect to a garage, and then refused to go in and get him.

"He just wouldn't go up to bite them," La Dur's handler, officer Rick Grim, explained Wednesday. He and the 2-year-old dog were named Police Officers of the Year by the Orlando Exchange Club halfway through La Dur's 13-month tenure on the force.

But John Greene, who trains dogs for police work, said as La Dur's career progressed, it became apparent he was conscientious but "cowardly."

"He's super at everything else — tracking, sniffing drugs, finding evidence," Greene said. "And he'd always chew on me in training. But he knew that wasn't the real thing. When it came to the real thing he acted cowardly."

Greene said the dog would just sit and bark, or run and hide, when ordered to bite a suspect.

"I ended up going through cabinets, crawling around everywhere and doing Dur's work," said Grim. "It really has nothing to do with schnauzers. It's Dur's personality. I'm still proud of him, regardless of the fact he washed out."

NEW YORK — The United States Federal Reserve Bank Wednesday announced that it will pay $360 million for the purchase of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York's investment portfolio.

A federal judge charged the bank with paying $360 million for the purchase of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York's investment portfolio.

One of the bank's officers tried to hit the judge with a paper airplane, but the judge was not hurt.

The judge was appointed by President Carter.

Tonelli is a 600-member member of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York's board of directors.

Paperworkers Union Boss Indicted In New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of the United Paperworkers Union was indicted Wednesday on charges of embezzling $360,000 in union funds, and using part of the money to try to buy off a federal investigation of his conduct.

A federal grand jury in Brooklyn charged that union president Joseph Tonelli paid $50,000 of the money to an Atlanta law firm to intercede on his behalf with officials of the Justice Department to stop a grand jury investigation.

One of the attorneys Tonelli allegedly tried to hire was a former president of the Georgia Bar Association who once was appointed a judge by then-Gov. Jimmy Carter.

Tonelli and a fellow officer of the 300,000-member paperworkers union, treasurer Henry Segal, were accused of paying the $50,000 to the Atlanta firm of Swift, Currie, McGhee and Hiers to obtain the services of two of its members, Irwin W. Stolz, Jr., and W. Homer Drake, Jr., to intercede with the Justice Department.

Stolz, 49, president of the Georgia Bar Association in 1970 and 1971, was appointed to the Georgia Court of Appeals by Carter in April 1972. He has since resigned to go into private practice.

Drake, 45, a federal bankruptcy judge from 1964 until 1976, now is in private practice.

The grand jury charged that Tonelli and Segal sought to sidetrack a grand jury investigation into the diversion of union funds to them and three other defendants. One of them was George Carroll, 55, a deputy clerk and assistant to New York Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut of Brooklyn, one of the most powerful Democratic politicians in the state.

Named as defendants with Tonelli, Segal and Carroll were Anthony Loiacono, 66, of Plainview, N.Y., vice president of Local 318 of the paperworkers union and Joseph Yglesias, 55, of Brooklyn, a union representative.

Tonelli was appointed to the New York State Racing Commission by then-Republican Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and elevated to chairman of the commission by Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey.

Tonelli is a vice president of the Industrial Union department of the AFL-CIO, and a vice president of the AFL-CIO's International Executive Council.

He was appointed to the Social Security Advisory Board by President Lyndon Johnson in 1964, and was named by President Richard Nixon to the Air Quality Advisory Board of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Pope Paul VI invested Tonelli with knighthood in the order of St. Gregory the Great, and New York's Cardinal Terrence Cooke dubbed him a Knight of Malta for his services to the Roman Catholic church.

The first indictment charged that from last Jan. 4 to March 2, Tonelli and Segal embezzled $50,000 in union funds and paid it to the Atlanta law firm for the purpose of hiring Stolz and Drake "to intercede on defendants' personal behalf with officials of the United States Department of Justice in connection with the ... grand jury investigation."

Thomas Buccio, in charge of the federal Organized Crime Strike Force in Brooklyn, said the initial 28-count indictment also accuses Tonelli and Segal of embezzling more than $290,000 in union funds from Aug. 1, 1973, to March 2, 1978, together with an unindicted co-conspirator, Jack Stone.

Tonelli is further charged with embezzling $20,000 by submitting false expense accounts to the union. With the $50,000 payment to the law firm, the total involved is $360,000.

Conviction in the first indictment carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in federal prison under labor racketeering statutes, plus five years on the embezzlement counts.

A second seven-count indictment charges that from Aug. 1, 1973, to June 1, 1974, Tonelli, Carroll and Loiacono extracted kickbacks in connection with the deposit of union pension funds in the Banco de Ponce in Manhattan's Rockefeller Plaza.

According to the indictment, a $100,000 pension fund deposit in the bank was used as collateral for a loan to an unindicted co-conspirator, of which a portion was turned over to Tonelli, Loiacono and Carroll.

If convicted under the second indictment, Tonelli and Loiacono face a maximum five years imprisonment under the conspiracy counts, and three years under the kickback counts. Carroll faces a maximum five years if convicted of conspiracy.

A third indictment charges Yglesias with four counts of embezzling union funds from Aug. 1, 1973, through Dec. 31, 1976, by submitting over $5,000 in false expense claims to the union for reimbursement. He faces a maximum five years federal imprisonment if convicted.

Restaurant Wants Zone Exception

Zoning Board of Adjustment members will be asked at their meeting today to approve a request for an expanded dance floor at the Big Texan Steak Ranch located at 50th Street and Elgin Avenue.

Jack McClendon, representing Galaxy Catering, Inc., is scheduled to present the request to the board when it convenes at 8:15 a.m. Thursday in city council chambers.

ZBA members were supposed to consider granting a special exception to permit the expanded dance floor at their June meeting, but restaurant officials decided to re-evaluate the request in light of neighborhood opposition.

A lot of opposition is expected to a request by Reeta B. Self for a special exception to allow a mobile home to be used as a dwelling at 2808 30th St.

Mrs. Self is requesting the exception under a medical hardship provision so her mother can live in the mobile home.

Arnold Maeker will present First Federal Savings' request for a variance to allow a second free-standing sign — this one at the corner of 13th Street and Avenue L.

Southland Corp., represented by Carol Singletary, is requesting a special exception to permit the construction of a convenience store with self-service gas pumps at 2102 50th St., the site of an old service station.

Two unusual cases before the board involve next-door neighbors who built carpools too close to the street.

The required setback is 25 feet, but Hovey D. Musick built his carpool with only a 16-foot setback at 1310 46th St. and Charles F. Lemons placed his carpool 15 feet, 11 inches back at 1212 46th St.

The men are requesting a variance of the front yard setback requirement.

The board will be asked to approve a special exception to permit a church at 4402 Chicago Ave. Edward Haug will represent the Saint Germain Foundation, Inc., on the request.

Reed Loflin of the Urban Renewal Agency will ask the board to approve a special exception to allow property at 1520 E. 24th St. to be used as a parking lot for Lyons Baptist Church at 1702 E. 24th St.

LCC Names New Vice President

Larry Roberts, minister for the South Main Church of Christ in Greenville, Miss., has been named Lubbock Christian College's vice president of development.

Roberts began his duties last June, and took the place of Dr. Willis Starnes who resigned to enter medical school.

He is a native of San Angelo and El Paso and received his bachelor's degree from Hardin College in Searcy, Ark. He has also done further graduate work at the Hardin School of Religion, the University of Houston and Delta State University.

Roberts has served as minister for churches in New York, Sherman and Houston. In 1964 he helped coordinate the Exodus New Jersey Program. This program gained national media recognition because of 88 families (211 people) that moved to the Somerset County, New Jersey to establish a church.

Fuel Conservation Skylab Problem

HOUSTON (AP) — A critical need to preserve fuel is keeping controllers from immediately bringing the wobbling Skylab under control, a space agency official said Wednesday.

"We know that we can get into a minimum drag situation but we need to conserve the fuel," said Gene Kranz, deputy director of flight operations at the Johnson Space Center. "We have to have a base amount of fuel for later maneuvers."

Kranz spoke as space center controllers continued efforts to lock the 85-ton satellite into a position where all of its energy-giving solar panels are facing the sun. Controllers made several attempts early Wednesday to achieve that position but were unable to give the command because the craft was too far out of position.

Kranz said controllers could use the space lab's engine thrusters to get the craft into position as it passes over one of three tracking stations but it would cost too much in terms of fuel.

Instead, controllers are watching the craft in hopes that it will become closely aligned with the sun at a point when it is over one of the tracking stations and can be commanded to the hold position.

"We are going to keep a reserve of fuel that we will not touch," Kranz said. "We would be willing to lose attitude control and everything else for lifetime purposes."

"It would be dumb if we used up all the fuel and then sunspot activity tapered off to a point where we had a space craft up there but couldn't do anything with it."

The space lab wobbled out of control on July 8 when an onboard electrical failure caused its crafts three gyroscopes to lose power.

Scientists had maneuvered the craft into a favorable attitude position on June 11 in efforts to cut down on atmospheric drag and keep it in orbit until a Space Shuttle team can boost it into higher orbit late next year.

Space officials have said if Skylab cannot be returned to its minimum drag attitude, as many as 400 pieces of debris from the craft could fall back to Earth as early as next spring.

Court Says Unequal Access Did No Harm

AMARILLO (AP) — State District Judge Edward Nobles on Wednesday refused to lift restrictions imposed on Amarillo Globe-News reporters by District Attorney Tom Curtis regarding news from his office.

Nobles said the newspaper failed to show it had been damaged by the restrictions imposed earlier this month.

The judge's action came on part of a suit brought by the Globe-News seeking equal access to the district attorney's office.

The newspaper had sought an injunction against access restrictions imposed by Curtis on July 6. Curtis required Globe-News reporters to make an appointment with him or his assistants before seeing them in their offices.

"The restrictions apply only to Globe-News reporters and do not affect representatives of other media."

Nobles said equal access was the principal issue in the case but sided with Curtis because, in his opinion, the newspaper has not suffered "irreparable harm" as a result of the restrictions.

"The law and the facts were with us and the court agreed with our action," Curtis said after his motion for an instructed verdict was granted.

Curtis said appointment restrictions on Globe-News reporters will remain "in accordance with the judge's decision."

"Naturally, we emphasized that our office is still openly available and always has been to the news media," Curtis said. "The newspaper was never excluded."

Globe-News general manager James L. Whyte said the judge's decision will be appealed "as soon as we can get the papers filed."

Curtis imposed the restrictions after the newspaper's publication of a tape recorded telephone conversation between Curtis and a Potter County commissioner. In the conversation, Curtis allegedly threatened to sue the commissioners if they voted to cut the pay of his assistants.

The Globe-News filed suit last Friday against the restrictions, requesting an injunction against them until resolution of the suit.

Nobles began a hearing on the request Monday afternoon that continued until after 10 p.m. Curtis requested an instructed verdict Monday night and Nobles took it under consideration then.

Gasoline Production Hits Record Level

NEW YORK (AP) — Gasoline production was at a record high in the latest reporting week as the peak spring-summer driving season reached the halfway point, industry officials said Wednesday.

The American Petroleum Institute reported that for the week ended July 14, gasoline production hit a record 7.7 million barrels per day, up from the 7.2 million barrels produced daily a week earlier. The previous record was set in the week ended June 25, 1976 when 7.4 million barrels of gasoline were refined daily.

The increased production was reflected in gasoline inventories which increased slightly for the first time in a number of weeks. In the latest week, gasoline stocks rose to 226.2 million barrels from 225.6 million barrels.

An industry spokesman said gasoline was expected to remain in good supply throughout the United States.

"Here you are at the halfway mark in the driving season and you have this record production," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified. "We see only good signs in the supply picture."

The institute also reported that crude oil imports in the latest week declined to 5.9 million barrels daily.

Chicago Woman Shoulders Load To Raise Adopted Children

CHICAGO (UPI) — Taking care of a set of fair-haired triplets has meant more to Dorothy Johnson than money.

For several years, she has tried to adopt them, though she knew it would mean going on welfare and receiving food stamps.

But her wish was granted Tuesday by Cook County Circuit Judge Joseph Schneider, who told the 8-year-old children before leaving the courtroom they were lucky to have Mrs. Johnson as a mother.

"They are lucky," she said Wednesday. "But I'm luckier. I live for those kids."

She first laid eyes on the two girls and a boy in the summer of 1969 in a hospital incubator. They were born prematurely to a young Chicago woman. Each of the infants weighed about five pounds.

The children's father had disappeared when he heard there were three infants instead of one.

But Mrs. Johnson, then a 48-year-old divorcee with four grown children, couldn't say no when asked if she would move in to the household and help raise the children.

She had washed enough diapers and struggled to pay enough bills for her and her own children to fill a lifetime. But she moved in anyway, working days in a factory and spending nights caring for the triplets.

Several months later, the mother disappeared.

So Mrs. Johnson decided to quit her job at the factory and take care of the triplets full time. The children's grandfather bought a small bungalow in Cicero for the triplets and Mrs. Johnson.

When the children were four years old, their grandfather collapsed and died.

A distant relative inherited the house because the grandfather left no will. Mrs. Johnson and the triplets were evicted.

She eventually found a basement apartment in Cicero and arranged to receive support from the Department of Children and Family Services.

That was six years ago, and Mrs. Johnson hasn't said no to the children yet.

"People ask me if I've had any regrets and all I can do is roll my eyes," she said. "When they put their little arms around me and hug me, there's no way at all I could ever think of having regrets."

"I live these children more than a mother could love her own. I live for them. My husband and I got divorced several years ago. He's living with one of my daughters now. He's only got one leg and she helps out," Mrs. Johnson said.

She said her own children are proud of her and have often taken the children on outings and vacations.

"They haven't given me any financial support, though, since they have children and lots of bills, too," she said.

County Pair May Face Legal Moves On Signs

Two Lubbock County individuals who have illegal roadside advertising signs on their properties may be facing charges in the near future by the Department of Highways and Public Transportation. They are in violation of the Texas Highway Beautification Act of 1972.

The Act prohibits outdoor advertising signs altogether along state-maintained roadways in some areas, but in areas where signs are permitted, no signs may be erected unless the owner has a license and a permit authorizing each sign. According to Gary Bernethy, right of way administrative assistant in the Lubbock County Department of Highways and Public Transportation, the law states that the names of violators and exact locations of signs may not be released to the public until the charges are officially filed.

He stated, however, that the signs in question are located near Shallowater and Slaton.

Advertising signs are legal if they are erected in commercial or industrial zones or erected within 800 feet of a business in the rural areas.

They are illegal if erected any place else or if the owner does not have a license or permit.

Bernethy said the two individuals, according to the law, were given first notification of their violations. The notifications were accompanied by a booklet explaining the Beautification Act.

After they failed to respond to the notices, they were sent a second and final warning to remove the signs within 30 days or be prepared to face charges.

Bernethy said neither has adhered to the law.

"One has refused to talk about his violation," said Bernethy, "and the other feels that since he owns the farm property where the sign is erected, he is not in violation."

His sign advertises a business that he owns in town. The Lubbock County department and district attorney are waiting on approval from Austin to file misdemeanor charges.

If permission is granted, these will be the first such charges filed in Lubbock County as well as in the 17-county district that the Lubbock office serves.

In other cases prosecuted across the state, penalties generally have been fines on the lower side of the $25 to $200 range.

In a Smith County case, however, an illegal roadside advertising sign has cost its owner a $1,000 fine and drawn court orders to get the sign down by Aug. 1.

Five signs that are illegally erected on the Tahoka Highway will be removed within six weeks.

"The owners were notified and are being very cooperative in removing them," said Bernethy.

Bernethy said approximately 5,000 signs lined Lubbock's district of Texas highways when the Beautification Act was initiated.

All sign owners, both companies and individuals, were mailed information of the Act.

Approximately 2,500 of that total remain erected, but only about 100 of these are illegal. The owners of the illegally erected signs have been notified.

"Our office intends to enforce the Beautification Act because it is the law and upon the governor's strong insistence," said Bernethy.

He explained that the beautification program costs millions of dollars, of which 75 per cent comes from the federal government and 25 per cent from the state.

"If we do not enforce this law, the federal government has threatened to restrict its flow of funds into our state's highway program," said Bernethy.

To get a license the sign owner must file an application and bond form and $25 fee with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation right of way division in Austin.

After receiving the license, the owner must get a permit for each sign from the department's district office where the sign is to be erected. This, too, costs $25.

The owner then will receive a tin license, which must be displayed on the sign. A sign that is not accompanied by this plate is illegal.

The Beautification Act was enacted to bring Texas into compliance with federal highway beautification programs.

Brewer Reports Big Earnings

ST LOUIS (AP) — Strong market penetration produced record sales and earnings for the second quarter and the first six months of the year, Anheuser-Busch Inc. said Wednesday.

Net income in the second quarter for the world's largest brewer was a record $33.2 million, or 74 cents per share, on sales of $606.4 million. Sales gained 16.1 percent over the $599.6 million reported for the same period last year.

For the six months, sales were $1.3 billion, up from $1.1 billion in 1977. Net income totaled $53.6 million, or $1.19 a share, up from $44.7 million or 99 cents a share.

Chairman August A. Busch III said beer volume sales in the second quarter were 10.8 million barrels, up 9 percent from 9.9 million barrels in the second quarter of 1977. He said the volume represented the most beer ever sold in any quarter by any brewer.

For the six months, beer volume sales were 20 million barrels, up from 17.9 million barrels the year earlier.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I have spent a fortune on doctors and they still can't find anything wrong with me. Finally I came to this world-famous hospital in Boston for a complete checkup. Now I am furious.

I've been here for three days and have had every part of me looked into, up and through.

The final consultation took one hour. The doctor reviewed my X-rays and medical history going back eight years. He ended the consultation by saying, "You are in good physical condition. Go home and find something to keep yourself busy."

In other words, he is saying I am nuts — that all my headaches and stomach pains are imaginary. This burns me up. Why, when the doctors can't determine the cause of the problem, do they always intimate that the trouble is in the patient's head?

I am not the only person who has had this experience — and it's maddening. Will you please give me some explanation? — They Muffed It In Mass.

Dear Muffed: Your name is legion and I know you well. You will go from doctor to doctor until someone sells you an operation. Then you will complain about your adhesions.

I'm sure your aches and pains are real. You feel them and they hurt. If there is no organic reason for the discomfort, this means you have emotional problems which are causing tension. Tension and stress can create pain. A lot of it.

If your doctor did not get this message across to you he should have. Some people reject any suggestion that they have emotional problems. They would much rather have an operation or be given the name of an illness and avoid the "stigma" of not coping.

I wish more physicians would get this notion across to their patients in plain, ordinary, two-bit language. And it would be very useful if they suggested counseling to their overwrought, anxiety-ridden patients who need to ventilate their frustrations and fears.

Dear Ann Landers: A few days ago our bridge club met at Mrs. Z.'s house. We are all mediocre players, the stakes are low, and we just have fun. On this particular day there was a lot more gabbing and laughing than usual.

Just as we were getting ready to leave, the hostess said, "How would you girls like to hear what you sound like?" She showed us the tape recorder hidden behind the sofa. The machine had recorded everything that was said. In fact, Mrs. Z. even went back there to change tapes a couple of times on the pretext of looking for something.

When she began to play the tapes back we wanted to drop through the floor. We all sounded so gossipy and foolish. We asked her to erase the tapes but she refused, saying, "Not on your life! This is a collector's item!"

What do you think of someone who would do such a thing? — No Bleeps

Dear N.B.: It was a dirty trick, and in some states a violation of the law. Unless Mrs. Z. agrees to destroy the tapes in your presence you women have every right to replace her with another fourth.

Are you, or is someone you care about messing around with drugs — or considering it? Are all drugs bad? What about pot — in moderation? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs," separates the facts from the fiction. For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (28 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611. ## TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son has had sinus problems for years. We suspected an allergy, and so he had all the tests. None was uncovered. Finally, after an examination by an ear, nose, and throat doctor I was told he had a deviated septum. I looked this up and it said, "broken nose." My son's nose is perfectly shaped, so this puzzled me. Did the doctor mean a broken bone inside or what? And what should be done about the problem? — Mrs. J.S.

It is surprising how many "broken noses" doctors see in patients with perfectly shaped schnozzolas. Your doctor was referring to a bent septum, the septum being that partition between the nostrils. This can be disturbed by a minor childhood accident, as from a thrown baseball, or by a good jolt against a door. There need be no outward sign, but after healing there can remain a bend of the septum. This may remain to haunt the person throughout life, usually with sinus problems or polyps.

If an allergy enters the picture the problem becomes compounded. The bend can interfere with proper nasal drainage. When membranes become swollen, as with a cold (or an allergy) the fat can really get into the fire. If your son is bothered, he probably will continue to be so, and now might be the time to have the deviation corrected. You will find this discussed in greater depth in my booklet, "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You mentioned the Kegel exercises for urinary incontinence. Please, more information on this. — M.T.C.

I must apologize for not being specific. Anytime a specific exercise, or a diet, etc., is mentioned, many interested readers will respond, saying "Fine, but how do you do it?"

So for M.T.C. and the others who wrote, here it is. There is nothing at all complicated about the Kegel exercise. It consists of consciously closing off and re-starting the urine stream several times while urinating. It also should be done several times during the day (not when urinating) pretending to shut off the urine. One lady confided to me half humorously that she managed to do her exercise while sitting down playing bridge with her lady friends and no one was the wiser. The idea is to strengthen the sphincter muscle that controls urination just as one might any other muscle in the body — by use. However, the basic cause of the incontinence should be looked for.

The exercise will help some. In others the cause of frequency or incontinence does not lie in the muscles, but elsewhere. Infection must be ruled out. The doctor can advise you if the Kegel exercise will help.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know something about the possible effects of taking phenylbutazone and aspirin. Can they cause anemia? — Mrs. H.G.

No point in taking both drugs at the same time. Both are anti-inflammation medicines. Also, both can be irritating. One of the possible side effects of the phenylbutazone is a disruption of the blood-forming organs. Severe anemia can result from this. Phenylbutazone should not be taken by those over 50 or those who have stomach problems, such as peptic ulcer. Nor should it be used for long periods of time.

Aspirin, on the other hand, can cause anemia if it produces bleeding in the stomach, which it may in some. Either drug is best taken with a meal or a glass of milk to reduce the irritation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I understand that the female's ovaries at birth contain a finite number of eggs. About how many are there, and does she ever run out of them? — K.A.

As with the fowls of most species,

The student looked over dummy for some time before reaching over to play the queen of hearts.

Some minutes later the student got around to the club suit, played West for the queen and scored game, slam and rubber.

"Pretty good," he chortled. "Because I know that West likes to make attacking leads against slams, I decided he had led from a king."

"Pretty good for an idiot," replied the Professor. "If you want to practise finesse do it at home, not here at the club. Just what good did it do you?"

The student thought a long time and finally asked, "Didn't I need that finesse?"

"Not at all," retorted the Professor. "The whole success or failure of the slam depended on the clubs. If you located the queen of that suit you could discard your losing heart on dummy's fourth club."

"What about the diamonds?" asked the student.

"You had to lose a diamond no matter how you played," was the final comment.

Ex-Informant Given Job As Marshal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., whose former activities as an FBI informant on the Ku Klux Klan are now the subject of a federal inquiry, was rewarded with a job as a deputy U.S. marshal, the Justice Department said on Tuesday.
 Rowe, a key informant on the Klan during the civil rights movement of the 1960s, was linked in recent news accounts to shootings of civil rights workers and a fatal bombing of a black church in Birmingham, Ala., during that period.
 Justice Department spokesman Robert Havel confirmed on Tuesday that Rowe, after serving as an informant, was given a job as a deputy U.S. marshal. "but I don't think it was for a long period of time."
 William Dempsey, a spokesman for the U.S. Marshal Service, said "no records are available now," but that "Mr. Rowe was a deputy for about a one-year period in 1966."
 Former U.S. Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach told ABC News on Tuesday: "Oh, I would have preferred not to do it (give him the job) but given the duties of a marshal... I didn't really have great qualms about it."
 "He wanted a job in law enforcement, and we didn't really see how to get him a job in law enforcement. I think he wanted the job as a bureau (FBI) agent," Katzenbach said.
 Havel said last week the Justice Department began an inquiry into news reports that, while working as an FBI informant, Rowe participated in violent crimes.
 Havel said the department has "no evidence, after a check of the files, that gives credence" to the reports. But he said Alabama officials would be asked for any information they have and the FBI would look into the allegation.
 He also said the FBI would review the 1965 murder of Viola Liuzzo, a civil rights worker from Detroit, Mich., who was killed by shots fired from a passing car while she was driving a civil rights demonstrator from Selma to Montgomery, Ala.
 Rowe has testified that he and three Klansmen were in the car from which the shots were fired. He said he held a gun but did not fire.
 The three Klansmen were convicted of violating Mrs. Liuzzo's civil rights and were sentenced to 10 years in prison. Rowe was settled elsewhere under an assumed identity. It was then, in 1966, that he asked for and got the deputy marshal's job, Dempsey said.
 Birmingham Police Chief Jack LeGrand said recently that Rowe was a prime suspect in the Sept. 15, 1965, bombing of a Birmingham church in which four black girls were killed. Alabama Attorney General Bill Baxley said Rowe was never a suspect.

Son Born To Reagans, But Not 'Those' Reagans

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Ronald and Nancy Reagan became parents of a boy, Michael, at Salem Hospital during the weekend.
 "They are too old, you say?"
 This Ronald and Nancy are a 33-year-old logger and his 26-year-old wife, who are not related to the former California governor and his wife.
 The Reagans of Salem came to Oregon from Southern California last April.
 "I swore if he made president, I was going to change my name so that I wouldn't have to put up with the kidding," the Salem Reagan said about the California Reagan, an unsuccessful candidate in 1976 for the Republican nomination for president.

Dead Appointees Explained By Aide

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe's press secretary said Wednesday the governor did not make a mistake when he sent the Senate a list of appointments that included four dead persons.
 Bob Bain said he had received several inquiries.
 Bain's statement said, in part: "All appointments need to be considered by the Senate and, in the case of a deceased person who has served in some official capacity, that period of service needs consideration to eliminate questions which might arise concerning the validity of any action in which that person participated in their official capacity. The same applies to persons who resign prior to confirmation."
 Bain said the names of dead persons appearing on the appointment list include J.J. McCann, Mrs. Veda Hodge, Robert Grainger and John Bean.
 Last year Briscoe reappointed Dr. Maynard S. Hart of El Paso, who had died 1 1/2 years earlier, to the State Health Advisory Commission.

Spain May Ban Nuclear Bases

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A Spanish political envoy to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization said Wednesday that Spain may ban the basing of nuclear weapons on its soil if it joins the NATO alliance.
 Javier Ruperez told a news conference that the issue still must be discussed fully, but he said, "I think we would tend toward a negative response toward the stationing of nuclear weapons." Several NATO members, including Norway, Denmark, and West Germany, Spain already has asked four American air bases to remove nuclear weapons stockpiles on Spanish territory by the end of this year.

'Barefoot In Park' Dated In Portales

PORTALES, N.M. (Special) — "Barefoot in the Park," Eastern New Mexico University's Corral Playhouse comedy, will open today and continue through Saturday at 8 p.m. in the University Theatre.
 One of the most often produced plays by Neil Simon, it was written in 1964 along with "The Odd Couple." Simon, a master of witty dialogue and clever characterization, is author of countless other titles in recent years, including the award-winning movie script "The Goodbye Girl."
 Tickets for the final Corral Playhouse presentations of the summer are available for $2 at the Information Center in the Administration Building or at the door on performance nights.

Spain May Ban Nuclear Bases

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A Spanish political envoy to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization said Wednesday that Spain may ban the basing of nuclear weapons on its soil if it joins the NATO alliance.
 Javier Ruperez told a news conference that the issue still must be discussed fully, but he said, "I think we would tend toward a negative response toward the stationing of nuclear weapons." Several NATO members, including Norway, Denmark, and West Germany, Spain already has asked four American air bases to remove nuclear weapons stockpiles on Spanish territory by the end of this year.

Crystal City Pins Hopes On Wildcat Drilling

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Gas-starved Crystal City has only a "50-50" chance of successfully bringing in a wildcat gas well, but that's better than the normal wildcatting odds, says the engineer in the city's plan for a federally-funded drilling project.

"Any well-drilling operation is risky. I can't overemphasize the risk," said San Antonio petroleum engineer George wood for heating and cooking. Others have turned to butane and propane.

Crystal City, ironically enough, sits in the middle of Zavala County's rich natural gas fields. It is seeking a $650,000 grant to obtain leases and drill six wells nearby. The city would provide another $318,000, borrowed against the producing wells, to build a pipeline.

The grant application is slowing making its way to Washington, where the final decision will be made. Even if the project is successful, it will be late 1979 before the wells could be completed.

Ozuna's geologists have pinpointed 17 locations in the Southwest Texas county where geological formations indicate possible gas deposits. The nearest is about five miles away from the city limits.

Each successful well, geologists estimate, would produce up to 15 million cubic feet of gas per month for 22-55 years. City officials hope to hit two wells in the six attempts, giving the city enough gas to be self-sufficient. That's considered vital in this Raza Unida Party-controlled county.

"I didn't neglect to tell the city fathers they could drill six dry holes. A few inches either way could make all the difference," said Ozuna. "But if they use seismic exploration, it should bring the odds to 50-50. I'm almost confident enough to say the odds are even better. One outfit has hit eight of nine wells in Zavala County by using seismic exploration."

A San Antonio oil and gas geologist said statistics have shown the odds of hitting a wildcat gas well in Texas are about three out of 10.

The city might face some problems brought on by the uniqueness of the proposal, said Frank Bowie, program manager for HUD's local community development division. Other officials say the Raza Unida connection will also not help.

"It's an unusual case from the standpoint that we've never had a city request something of this nature. Since it is the first one, I would suspect there would be some problems," said Bowie.

Bowie's office provides recommendations on the application before sending it to Washington.

Raul Flores, Crystal City's city manager, said city and county officials fear large utility and oil companies will attempt to kill the project to prevent other towns from becoming self-sufficient. Officials also fear Raza Unida political foes will hurt the grant.

Neighboring Carrizo Springs, a town of 8,500 only 11 miles away in gas-producing Dimmit County, is watching Crystal City's application with great interest. It is also eligible for such a grant.

"We are very interested," said Carrizo Springs City Manager A.C. Gonzales. "The whole area is attempting to find a way to lessen the load on the people. If they are going to use federal dollars to develop a cheap gas supply, we're also very interested in that."

Eagle Pass, which is about 45 miles southwest of Crystal City, is also eligible for one of the HUD grants.

State News

Ozuna Jr. "But this is less risky than most."

"This is no pie-in-the-sky proposal. This is a project supported and recommended by people who are specialists in their field. This is a virgin gas field and not too many people know about it. I'm very confident," he added.

Crystal City's natural gas supply was shut off by Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. last Sept. 23 because of an unpaid $800,000 debt.

Most of the town's 8,100 residents, many of them poor Mexican-American migrant workers, have been forced to use ing its way to Washington, where the final decision will be made. Even if the project is successful, it will be late 1979 before the wells could be completed.

Enforced Legal Work Brings Court Ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Two San Antonio attorneys won a ruling Wednesday against a judge who ordered them to represent a defendant in a capital murder case without being paid.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said Bexar County District Judge John G. Benavides was wrong in forcing Cecil Bain and Thomas M. Thurmond to represent James Buffington in 1977.

Benavides "designated" the two to defend Buffington on charges in his wife's death. The lawyers were not officially appointed by the court and were not hired privately by Buffington.

The attorneys claimed they were not ready for trial on Nov. 7, 1977, and the judge held them in contempt of court. The judge later cleared them of the contempt charge after they agreed to represent Buffington.

Benavides said that the attorneys had received $44,000 "in the case" from civil law work performed for Buffington two months before he was indicted. The judge said the funds were adequate for criminal defense work.

Buffington had claimed he was broke and unable to hire a lawyer.

No circumstances "justify a trial judge imposing upon attorneys, previously retained and compensated for other matters, the duty of representing an accused in a criminal case without appointment and compensation," the appeals court said.

In another case, the court upheld Jesus

Eduardo Romo's murder conviction in the 1974 shooting death of Isuro Martinez in Laredo.

The appeals court reversed its earlier order which overturned Romo's conviction and 50-year sentence on technical grounds.

Romo and a co-defendant were charged in the case. The trial judge did not instruct the jury on the law concerning co-defendants.

In its earlier reversal the appeals court said the omission was a reversible error, but Wednesday changed its mind because neither the state nor the defense objected to the omission during the trial.

In other decisions, the court:

- Overturned Robert Campbell's aggravated robbery conviction and nine-year prison sentence because the Houston trial judge failed to instruct the jury on a lesser offense. The case was returned to Houston for possible new trial.
- Upheld life imprisonment as a just punishment for a defendant convicted of heroin possession and with a previous criminal record. Leonard G. Rocha had argued against his life sentence following a San Antonio conviction for second-degree heroin possession.
- Reversed Preston James Grant's conviction for burglary of a vehicle because the car owner's name was misspelled in the indictment. Grant's 10-year prison sentence was dismissed and the case returned to Delton for possible new trial.

Missing Infant Placed In Welfare's Custody

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state jury has granted Bexar County welfare authorities permanent custody of an allegedly abused 2-year-old child nobody can find.

The child's father, Air Force Staff Sgt. John L. Clark, 23, faces jail for not surrendering Shane Clark to the court. But he said Tuesday he hopes the boy is never found so the youngster doesn't have to be placed in the court's custody.

The infant and his mother, Gail Clark, 20, have been missing since June 22. Attorney Sam Bashara, appointed by the court to represent the best interests of the child, said he thinks Clark knows the whereabouts of his wife and son.

He asked State District Judge Carol Haberman to find Clark in contempt of court for not producing the child. Haberman has delayed a ruling on the contempt motion. If Clark is found in contempt, he could be jailed until his son is turned over to welfare authorities.

The child had been in temporary custody of welfare authorities since last November, when he was burned on his back, arm and leg by a hot iron.

His parents said the burning was accidental, but doctors testified that they thought the burns had been made deliberately.

The Clarks were granted visitation rights and it was during one of those visitations June 22 when the boy and his mother disappeared in the family car after a shopping trip.

County GOP Pushing Tax Relief Plan For Elderly

A tax relief program for elderly persons has been developed by the Lubbock County Republican Party and will be presented to the Texas Legislature during its special session, Ruth Schiermeyer, party chairman, announced at a news conference Wednesday.

Mrs. Schiermeyer said the proposal will be presented to the House Constitutional Amendment Committee by State Rep. Joe Robbins of Lubbock, a Republican and a member of the committee.

"I have just returned from Austin, where I testified before the House Constitutional Amendment Committee," she read from a prepared statement at the 10:30 a.m. meeting at party headquarters at 2606 Boston Ave.

"I recommended this for consideration. It was very strongly supported by the representative of the Senior Citizens of Texas (lobbyist Lyle Hammill).

"Rep. Joe Robbins is writing the bill and will introduce it as a constitutional amendment in this special session."

The proposal has eight points. It would:

—Freeze the appraisal of homesteads based on market value on Jan. 1 of the year the owners become 65 or retirement age as designated by the federal government.

—For persons now over 65, the appraisal would revert back to the Jan. 1, 1974, level or to that of the year they became 65, whichever is more recent.

—Homestead appraisals would remain the same until property ownership changed.

—If a person bought a home after age 65, appraisal would be based on market value Jan. 1 of the year of sale.

—Improvements to the homestead would be added to the appraised value and remain at that value.

—If market value dropped below the set appraised value, the appraisal would be based on the market value but not rise

—A duplex would continue to qualify as a homestead.

—An owner would have to render property yearly to qualify.

Mrs. Schiermeyer said the proposal purposely deletes any mention of an appraisal amount because "any set amount becomes obsolete over a period of time."

"Any time we're considering a constitutional amendment, I would prefer a permanent solution, not a stopgap solution," she said.

She said the Lubbock County party organization does not expect the amendment to be approved during the special session but that it might be approved to be placed before the voters when the general session convenes next January.

The GOP executive committee approved the program at a July 11 meeting, she said.

City To Take Club Access Complaints

Persons who have been denied entrance to nightclubs, bars, theaters or restaurants because of race or ethnic background may now file complaints at city hall.

The complaints will be forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, city officials said.

The city council asked that Human Relations Director Luciano Perez work actively with the public in receiving and referring complaints of possible violations of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Persons wishing to file complaints should call city hall at 762-6411, extension 2282, and arrange to give the information to Perez. Necessary information includes the date, time and location of the incident, along with a full description of what happened in as much detail as possible.

If there were witnesses to the incident, they should come to city hall also and make a corroborating statement.

FBI officials have said the best way to develop a case against any civil rights violator is to have enough complaints to show a pattern of discriminatory practices. This could prove difficult because of the different techniques used to avoid discrimination charges in the past, Perez said.

Probably the FBI will make its own investigation into any complaints referred to the bureau and will contact those filing complaints for interviews and further information.

Soviet Scientists Reprimand Sakharov For Court Scuffle

MOSCOW (UPI) — Nobel Peace laureate and human rights activist Andrei Sakharov was reprimanded Wednesday by the Soviet Academy of Sciences for a scuffle he had with guards at the trial of a dissident friend. Sakharov dared the Academy to expel him.

Sakharov, father of the Soviet H-bomb and a top member of the prestigious Soviet Academy before he turned to dissident causes, told Western reporters he had been formally rebuked for his shoving match with volunteer militiamen guarding the trial of Yuri Orlov in late May.

Sakharov, who won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his championing of human rights in the Soviet Union, was fined 50 rubles, or $71, and his wife Yelena Bonner, was fined a lesser amount by a Moscow court after the trouble with the trial guards.

Sakharov said academy Chief Secretary Georgy Scriabin summoned him to his offices and informed him that the leadership of the academy had approved a resolution which reprimanded him for "impermissible" conduct that undermined the prestige of his fellow scientists.

"I said that the decision of the presidium was taken without finding out my position on this affair, the real circumstances, and therefore is illegal," Sakharov said.

He said he was told that his only authority and status was based on his membership in the academy.

"I replied, 'So throw me out of the academy if you consider that necessary and possible,'" Sakharov told reporters.

He said Scriabin also informed him unofficially that the academy had received a number of letters complaining about Sakharov's human rights activities.

He said he lodged a counter-complaint, protesting the failure of the academy to take any interest in the case of Orlov, a fellow scientist, who was sentenced to seven years imprisonment for anti-Soviet activities at his trial.

The academy governs the life of Soviet scientists — with a coveted full membership such as Sakharov holds guaranteeing highly privileged treatment.

Sakharov enjoys a number of those perquisites and occasionally takes pleasure in summoning an official chauffeur-driven academy limousine to take him to the U.S. Embassy and other places on his rounds of activist chores.

Carter's Drug Adviser Admits Fake Medication

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Peter G. Bourne, who heads the president's fight against drug abuse, was granted a leave of absence Wednesday night after admitting that he wrote a prescription for a controlled drug made out to a fictitious person.

The leave was announced by President Carter's spokesman, Jody Powell, after a day of White House delay in reacting to the disclosure that police were investigating the case.

Bourne said he requested the leave "because of my desire to clear my name as soon as possible and my concern that these implications do not interfere with the effective operations of the White House."

Powell said he assumed Bourne's $51,000-per-year salary would continue while he is on leave. Bourne said he consulted an attorney and believes "that what I have done is neither legally nor morally wrong."

"This decision was Dr. Bourne's own decision," Powell said. "The president was informed after he had made that decision and, of course, agreed to his request to leave."

Powell said Bourne was not asked to resign. "It seems to us at least that in the interest of not prejudging the matter ... it would be somewhat excessive to fire him," Powell said.

Powell said Bourne, a psychiatrist, has written 10 other prescriptions for White House staff members, but none under false names. Two of the prescriptions were for top Carter aide Hamilton Jordan, one for an antibiotic and one for a diet pill.

Bourne, 38, a long-time Carter friend who helped engineer the president's successful campaign, conceded in a statement issued through the White House press office that he wrote a prescription made out to a fictitious person in order to supply a staff aide with 15 tablets of the much-abused sedative Quaalude.

The aide, Ellen Metsky, also issued a statement through her lawyer, saying her name and that of Bourne were well known "in the area of drug enforcement."

She said she is well aware "of the abuse to which drugs are put in our society" and also that a prescription in her name would become a matter of record. "Consequently, I feared that my name would become known to those who might try to influence" White House drug enforcement policy.

Suburban Virginia police are investigating and have arrested the person who tried to fill the prescription.

Powell said he did not know of any Bourne discussions with Carter Wednesday. He said he knew of no White House investigation of the case.

In her statement, Miss Metsky said that when she tried to get the prescription filled in the District of Columbia "there was an hour's wait." So, she said, she asked a friend, Toby Long, to get the prescription filled.

"She did me that favor in Virginia where she works," Miss Metsky said. Miss Long, 26, was arrested July 11 on a felony charge of "attempting to obtain a controlled drug known as Quaalude by fraud, deceit or misrepresentation."

It was learned earlier that Bourne had made out the prescription in the name of Sarah Brown for Miss Metsky.

Bourne said of Miss Long: "I understand that no one believes that she did anything wrong. She merely took a prescription to the drug store for a friend."

Miss Long, however, faces trial on the felony charge on Sept. 19.

A lawyer for the American Medical Association in Chicago, Bruce Nortell, said "generally, it is not lawful for a prescription to be written that contains any falsified information."

Miss Metsky has worked for Bourne since the days of the Carter transition before the new administration took office in January 1977.

A woman who worked in the Carter campaign but declined to be identified said she had heard that Miss Metsky had just broken up with her boyfriend. "Maybe she was very upset about that and that's why she needed tranquilizers," this woman said.

Dr. Robert DuPont, former director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, offered this possible explanation of why Bourne used a phony name:

"Everyone in the White House develops a kind of paranoid psychology about embarrassing the boss. And I can see it happening, particularly in the drug abuse area, where someone didn't want it getting out that they were using a drug for fear it would be misinterpreted."

It was learned the druggist who was given the prescription became suspicious of it because Bourne did not specify which of two possible sizes to use in filling the prescription. The druggist tried to call Bourne at the number on the prescription but could not reach him because the number was out of date, so the druggist called police.

Compromise On Capital Gains Tax Cut Proposal Gets Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Long-stalled legislation for a $15 billion tax cut got a boost Wednesday as President Carter's administration put out feelers for a compromise on taxation of capital gains.

Carter has denounced proposals to ease the tax on profits from the sale of assets held a year or longer as a give-away to the rich that would be worth only two bits to the average American.

The House Ways and Means Committee for weeks has suspended work on tax legislation at the administration's request, but scheduled a session today with one of the plans Carter objects to as its starting point.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal began a last-ditch effort late Tuesday with a round of discussions involving key committee members. He was described as still wanting to ward off across-the-board slashes in the capital gains tax.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters Wednesday the administration had made some offers toward a compromise. A Treasury Department source, however, said there were no commitments, except that Blumenthal would report back to Carter.

Other congressional sources, declining to be identified, said the principal capital gains tax modifications discussed Tuesday included ways to encourage investment in new and risky ventures; relief for persons selling residences that had acquired inflated values; arrangements by which a person selling a business could reinvest the proceeds in another without incurring heavy taxes, and possibly some revision of maximum capital gains tax rates.

At the White House, Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said of the reported discussions: "The president has authorized no one to commit him to any sort of compromise or agreement in this area."

"He has...allowed the secretary of the treasury to engage in discussions about what sort of agreement can be reached in committee in order to move a tax bill forward."

Powell began to stammer when asked flatly about whether a compromise is being prepared.

Q. You're saying now that the administration is not at this point preparing a compromise plan?

A. That's, that's, I, uh, yes. Yeah, well, well, I'm saying what I've said...I can simply say that the president has not authorized the secretary of the treasury or anyone to enter into agreements about what he will or will not accept.

Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., a member of the committee, said Blumenthal stood firm on the administration position that capital gains — except for the gain on homes — must continue to be subject to the minimum tax on preferred income.

This 15 percent tax was intended to insure that some forms of income otherwise receiving preferential treatment under the tax laws would pay at least some tax.

In general, one-half of capital gains is exempt from tax; the other half is taxed according to the taxpayer's bracket. But the exempt half, after the first $10,000, is subject to the minimum tax. As a result, the total tax on large capital gains received by an upper-income taxpayer can exceed 49 percent under present law.

The legislation already before the committee would remove capital gains from the preferences subject to the minimum tax. One bill would set the maximum tax on capital gains at 25 percent; the other, reportedly favored by a clear majority of the committee, at 35 percent. Carter has publicly opposed both.

The proposals to encourage venture capital investment centered on tax credits. For example, a person investing in a business described by law as a new venture might be given a tax credit of 10 percent of his investment, applicable either immediately or later, if he should sell out at a profit.

At present, a person who sells his home at a profit is subject to capital gains taxation unless he plows the profit back into purchase of another home. A special provision for those over 65 exempts a portion of the profit even if another home is not purchased.

Proposals reportedly under discussion would reduce the age limit, increase the exemption or both.

The proposal on sale of a business and purchase of another was described as similar to the present rollover privilege available to persons who sell a home and purchase another.

Insurance Firms Score Disclosure Guidelines

AUSTIN (AP) — Forcing insurance companies to tell what guidelines they use in denying good drivers auto policies would unfairly expose trade secrets, a spokesman for the industry said Wednesday.

David Irons of Dallas, counsel for the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office, testified at the board's annual auto insurance hearing.

Board chairman Hugh Yantis has maintained the so-called underwriting guidelines should be filed and approved by the board.

Some companies tell their agents, he says, not to write policies for divorced women, soldiers, musicians or people who drive sports cars.

Such drivers then are forced to buy their liability insurance from the assigned risk pool and can get other coverage only at higher than normal rates from county mutual insurance companies.

Irons said in prepared testimony that filing guidelines with the board would open them to public scrutiny under the Open Records Act.

He said the guidelines "can be trade secrets" of a company "and ought not to be displayed to other insurers under the Open Records Act. To that extent, the effect of such a rule, if adopted, would be anti-competitive."

Irons also objected strongly to Yantis' proposal requiring companies to cover anybody with a good driving record.

He said only 1.76 percent of the registered vehicles in Texas are in the assigned risk pool.

"This demonstrates that the insurance industry of Texas is already absorbing, on a voluntary basis, virtually the entire market," he said.

Forbidding companies to reject a driver because of the kind of car he or she drives, another Yantis proposal, would force the insurance-buying public to "absorb the cost of Detroit gimmickry," Irons said.

"Insurers have learned from experience that some automobiles are targets for theft and that certain high performance automobiles, either because of the characteristics of the automobiles themselves or the use to which they are put, result in higher loss experience," he said.

The board's statisticians have recommended a 3.2 percent average statewide increase in private passenger car rates, while the companies seek an 8.9 percent jump.

When all coverages — commercial and private passenger — are combined, the staff would give the companies a 5.2 percent — or $63 million yearly — increase while the industry wants a 10.7 percent hike.

Irons said the basic difference was "primarily on how we view the future."

Physicians To Join Childress Hospital

CHILDRESS (Special) — Two additional physicians will join the staff of Childress General Hospital, according to Bob Maynard, administrator.

Dr. Mike Henderson of Fort Worth and Dr. Reynold Perez of Wellington recently were accepted as hospital staff members.

Dr. Henderson is scheduled to begin a family practice soon in the newly-remodeled Family Clinic, formerly Butler Clinic.

Dr. Perez will be serving as an anesthesiologist at the hospital. Maynard said the two doctors will aid greatly in the community's plans to establish Childress as a regional medical center. He also said that the four physicians already practicing here have cooperated fully in efforts to recruit more doctors.

Dr. Henderson will be joined in his practice next year by Dr. Weldon Dee Green, who now is completing his residency at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth.

Similar Case Won't Affect Local Suit

A lawsuit challenging Lubbock's at-large city council election will be affected little by a Supreme Court decision on a similar case involving Dallas, attorneys on the Lubbock case said Wednesday.

Dan Benson, one of the lawyers, said the Supreme Court "apparently said we have to decide each case on its merits and facts."

The Supreme Court refused to declare the Dallas system of electing city council members from both single-member districts and at-large unconstitutional. The court remanded the case to a lower court for re-examination.

Attorney Gene Gaines filed a class action suit against Lubbock in 1976 seeking to have the city's at-large election method declared unconstitutional.

Gaines, who is moving to Dallas, has been replaced as one of the plaintiffs in the case by Rev. Roy Jones, local NAACP president.

Benson estimated the case would go to trial in October or November, but said any decision would probably be appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and possibly to the Supreme Court.

Mayor Asks Less Water Be Used

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Jim McConn, saying the heat wave has caused a critical supply problem, asked Houston residents Wednesday to voluntarily conserve water.

McConn also ordered that all public fountains be shut down immediately.

Residents were asked to use an alternate-day plan for lawn watering and car washing.

Other suggestions included taking showers instead of tub baths, waiting for full loads to accumulate before washing clothes and dishes.

Prime Time Carter Conference Slated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will hold his first prime time news conference at 7 p.m. CDT today. ABC, NBC and CBS all said they planned live radio and television coverage.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said the 30-minute session will be held in prime television viewing time because several important subjects, including last week's economic summit meeting in West Germany, had come up.

He said Carter plans no opening statement but will answer reporters' questions for the full half-hour.

Begin, Peres Engage In Knesset Dispute

JERUSALEM (AP) — A shouting match between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and opposition leader Shimon Peres in Parliament Wednesday heated up the already tense political atmosphere in Israel as the Jewish state approached tough decisions on Mideast peace issues.

Peres, in his first speech to the Knesset, or parliament, since his talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat 10 days ago in Austria, demanded a debate on the Mideast situation. The Labor Party chief accused Begin of "filling a prescription for Israel's isolation" and of failing to keep the Knesset informed on peace moves.

Begin's gruffly shouted response was heavy with sarcasm, asking Peres if he and Sadat had discussed the Labor Party's doctrine of territorial compromise. "You believe it is the high road, the only way to peace, and there is no other," said Begin.

Holding a sheet of paper, the prime minister asked: "What is the meaning of territorial compromise? Part for me and part for you." He then ripped the paper in half.

The harsh words in the Knesset also reflected divisions in Begin's Likud cabinet, which is scheduled to respond on Sunday to Sadat's latest peace proposals.

At Leeds Castle in England, Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers ended two days of talks with no sign of progress on a Middle East peace settlement. U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who said he will be traveling to the Mideast in about two weeks to pursue peace moves, said he anticipated more Israeli-Egyptian meetings.

Speaking at the Organization of African Unity meeting in Khartoum, Sudan, Sadat accused Israel of clinging "onto the ghosts of the past, still dreaming of expansion, still giving priority to appropriation of others' lands."

Opposition parliamentarians gleefully pounced on Begin's paper-tearing gesture and shouted: "It's not a peace poster."

For the past two days, Israeli newspapers have been full of reports that Defense Minister Ezer Weizman ripped down a peace poster in Begin's office building after last Sunday's stormy cabinet meeting.

Peres took note of the widely reported division between Begin and his defense minister, who also had talks with Sadat in Austria last week and brought back new proposals from Egypt. Begin and Weizman were talking during Peres' speech, and he broke off to chide, "I'm glad to see the prime minister is talking to the defense minister. But they should do it around the cabinet table, not in the Knesset."

Peres and Begin lunched together after their encounter in the Knesset.

At one point, Begin's minister of commerce, Yigal Hurvitz shouted at Peres: "You're trying to rise to power on Sadat's shoulders."

Peres shouted back: "The problem isn't who will be prime minister — that will be decided by the Knesset's vote. The problem is what will the political situation be — Israel isolated, or Israel enjoying the support of other nations, as it has in the past. Israel displaying political skill in working toward a settlement, or Israel entrenched in domestic conflicts within the cabinet, within the Likud, within the Knesset, in imaginary games of prestige?"

Trying to cast the Knesset and cabinet squabbles in the best light, one Israeli official commented: "No one said this period was going to be easy or smooth. This is a democracy, and we don't always agree."

Political sources say the cabinet tiffs have distressed Begin, who, according to reports in Wednesday's newspapers, warned against displays of temper in the cabinet. The Jerusalem Post reported Begin as saying: "There will be no more raising of voices at this table or this government will not be worthy of its name."

Much of the cabinet troubles originate with Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon and Hurvitz, both hawks, the political sources said. They describe Sharon and Hurvitz as jealous of Weizman and concerned he is being "duped" by the warm reception and moderate words he hears when he meets with Sadat.

Begin approved the Peres and Weizman talks with Sadat.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman on Wednesday made the first official revelation concerning Sadat's new proposals. "It is true," Michael Shiloah said, "that there was an Egyptian proposal put forward that El-Arish be returned to Egyptian civil rule."

El-Arish, a sleepy town of 50,000 people on the Mediterranean coast of the Sinai Peninsula, also has been mentioned as a possible site for continuation of Israeli-Egyptian peace talks. Sadat calls El-Arish "the capital of the Sinai" and apparently wants the town returned to Egyptian rule as a sign of Israel's good intentions in the peace process.

Rhodesian Widow Blames U.S. For Deadlock

VIRGINIA, Rhodesia (AP) — Tears brimming, Texan-born Michele Peech looks from the homestead of the farm her husband's family has run for three generations and declares: "I blame America for my husband's death. The United States, in all its smugness, sits there and lets this country go."

Mrs. Peech, 31, the daughter of a Dallas rabbi, is one of embattled Rhodesia's latest war widows.

She came as a bride nine years ago to this isolated community of some 30 white farmers, 90 miles northeast of Salisbury.

Their corn and tobacco lands adjoin the rambling Mangwende tribal reservation where her husband, Tim, was killed last Thursday while holding a peace parley with black nationalist guerrillas fighting to topple the biracial government.

She says she is determined to stay, to carry her husband's attempts to end the six-year war, and to raise their children Benjamin, 7, Samantha, 5, and Adrian, 2, in a black-ruled Zimbabwe — the nationalist name for Rhodesia.

"My children are fourth generation Rhodesian," she said in an interview with The Associated Press Wednesday. "They are Africans — white Africans as Tim was."

Her father, Solomon Kaplan, is regional director of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in Dallas. Tim Peech, 31, a long-time opponent of the policies of the previous white-minority government, decided to personally seek a truce with the guerrillas as proposed by three moderate black nationalist leaders jointly heading the four-month transition government with Prime Minister Ian D. Smith.

The government promises black majority rule for the first time by the beginning of next year, but guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe were excluded from the agreement and have pledged to step up the war.

The United States and Britain, cosponsors of a peace plan expressly including the external-based guerrillas, maintain the existing agreement will only prolong the conflict that has cost more than 10,000 lives.

Peech, accompanied on occasions by other farmers, sometimes with black police reservist volunteers, made numerous sallies from his Salama farm through Mangwende's mud hut villages.

From the back of a truck, using a loud-hailer, Peech appealed to tribesmen for racial trust, urging them to spread the peace message to guerrillas operating throughout this area, some 75 miles from the Mozambique border.

One June 9, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, one of the three black leaders in the government, shared a platform with Peech at a rally here attended by some 1,000 tribesmen.

Peech, who served for 10 years as a part-time army officer, appeared to be having some success. There had been no attacks on farms here for three months and guerrilla activity in the reservation reportedly declined.

"After much soul-searching, Tim concluded the army role should no longer be seek and destroy, but seek and discuss," said Mrs. Peech.

Last Thursday Peech set out, with two black reservists, after intelligence reports that new "hard-core" guerrillas were in Mangwende.

The reservists fled back to a nearby military base that evening and reported the truck was fired on from the village of Burri.

Peech radioed in shortly after saying he was "with the comrades" and would return the following day.

His body was found by security forces Sunday. His watch, identity tags and ring were missing, the truck was burned out and he died from a single blow to the head, apparently from a rifle butt.

Mrs. Peech says she feels bitterness mainly toward the Western powers. For the sake of peace she would talk now to the men who killed her husband, she said.

"This country is on its beam ends. America could help," she said. "But they won't and (President) Carter has the gall to talk about human rights."

Describing the wait before her husband's body was found, Mrs. Peech said: "I told the children he was with the terrorists and talking with them. It was at leastime. They were silent and then Benjamin said, 'Hurray, daddy's talking to them. We are going to have peace.'"

She added: "I was terrified they were torturing Tim, but the pathologist said Tim only had one blow and must have died straight away. They think it was just after he came on the radio."

After the interview Wednesday some 100 black laborers and wives, many weeping openly, gathered at the tobacco barns as Mrs. Peech told them: "I know in your hearts you are as sad as I am. We all know that when he went that day he wanted peace for our country."

Black foreman Kottass Mushani bent toward Benjamin and said: "All of us are your babbas (fathers) now."

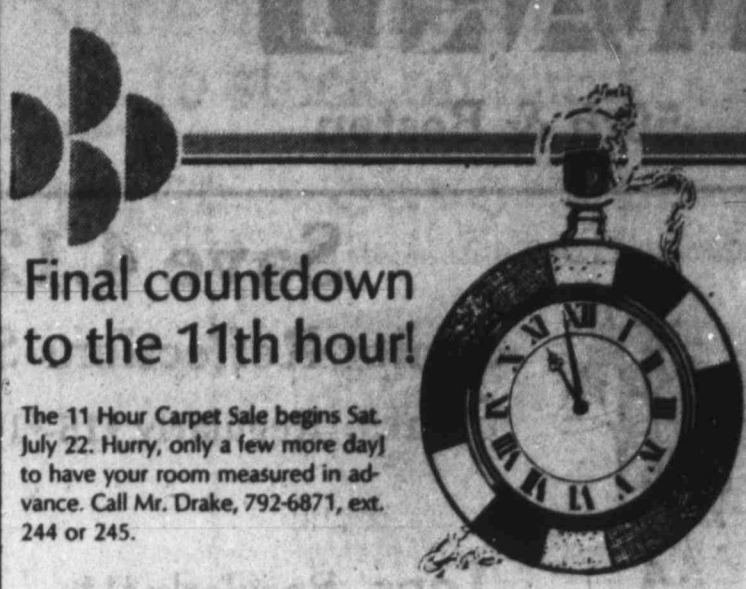

Mrs. Peech, one of eight children of Solomon Kaplan, met her husband while he was a student at Texas A&M. They were married in Rhodesia in 1970.

"I visited Rhodesia first. I loved it. Africa got into my blood but actually I would have followed Tim to the end of the earth," she said.

Peech, whose father and three brothers live in this area, will be buried Thursday on the main family farm, Waterloo, beside his grandparents.

At least eight blacks, aides of Muzorewa and the Rev. Ndabingi Sithole, another leader in the government, have been killed in the past three months while on peace missions in different parts of the country.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I had an idea the other day and thought maybe I'd pass it on to others.

Having bought a lot of washcloths at one time they all started to wear out at the same time. After going through my towels, I took some that had frayed or worn thin and cut them into the size of wash cloths.

Using knitting yarn in a comparable color to the towel, I placed two pieces of toweling together and sewed a blanket stitch all around them. Then I crocheted a small scalloped edging around the material over the blanket stitch.

Since I like thick wash cloths these were perfect. They are very attractive and suitable and really pretty enough to give as gifts too.

Hope this helps someone with a similar problem. — Mina Allen

I'm sure most everyone has had this happen to them too, Mina. Thanks for giving us your fabulous idea on how to stretch the dollar a little bit further. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's my solution to mildew on shower curtains.

I wash the shower curtains in the washing machine on a short cycle in soap and a good one-half cup of chlorine bleach.

The curtain is hung on a line outdoors and rehung when dry.

The first shower removes all the wrinkles and the mildew does not return as quickly following the bleach treatment.

— Janet Williams

A secretary in our office tested this on her dark blue shower curtain and was delighted at the way the mildew and dirt came off without any scrubbing.

She just tossed the curtain in her washer with a couple of old towels and the curtain came out looking like new. — Heloise

Agriculture Department Makes Own 'Bee' Film

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department held a preview of its new movie about killer bees Wednesday, and there wasn't a single scream of horror from the audience.

Unlike the movie "The Swarm," playing in theaters across the nation, the department's 14-minute production, "Killer Bees: Fact or Fantasy?" portrayed the insects as aggressive but manageable.

"The Swarm" is a film about killer bees that attack helicopters, cause a train wreck and kill thousands of people on the way to a final assault in which the military burns the city of Houston.

"I hope that the commercial movie industry does not consider this a war, one movie against another. We don't intend it that way," said James C. Webster, director of the department's office of governmental and public affairs.

Asked if it wasn't an odd coincidence that the Agriculture Department film was being released at the same time as "The Swarm," Webster replied that the government's film was "not produced as a counter-attack to the movie and was in the works long before the department learned of the Hollywood production."

Stories about killer bees materialized after 26 swarms led by queens from Africa escaped in Brazil in 1957. The hybrid "Africanized" bees have spread over much of South America and are headed north.

African bees reproduce swarms up to 12 times a year, compared with once a year for bees common to the United States. They can travel great distances and when disturbed defend themselves with persistence and ferocity not found among European types.

But one scene in the government's film depicted a worker handling a docile swarm of African bees without gloves or clothing from the waste up. Other scenes showed bees in more agitated moods and workers wearing masks, heavy coats, gloves and other protection.

Webster said "the audiences that see this are generally going to see this accompanied by someone who is somewhat expert on the subject" of bees.

The film, including 70 prints, cost $22,000 and soon will be distributed to beekeeping organizations and land grant universities.

If a motion picture distributor wanted to show the film in theaters "we would have to look at it in that context and see what additional information may be necessary ... to make it suitable for mass distribution," Webster said.

Dr. Orleigh R. Taylor of the University of Kansas, a leader of an entomological project which has been studying African bees in South America, said in the department film that "there is some proof" to stories that the bees have killed animals and people in South America but added that those cases have been relatively rare and usually could have been avoided.

The bees are expected to reach the United States in about 15 years. By then, scientists hope to have procedures set up to cope with the intruders.

One way, Taylor said, is to "re-queen" a swarm with a purebred European-type queen to genetically dilute Africanized bees so they are not so fierce.

The government film calls the killer bee a "much-maligned insect" and said that as they approach the United States, "reports of their behavior are certain to increase."

The film concluded: "An informed public and continuing research will make an easy path of separating fact from fantasy while waiting the arrival of the African honey bee."

Food Distributor Hit With Fine For Bribe Plot With Honduran

NEW YORK (AP) — United Brands Co., one of the nation's largest food distributors, was fined $15,000 on Wednesday after pleading guilty to conspiring to pay $2.5 million in bribes to a former Honduran official.

It was the maximum fine that U.S. District Judge William Conner could have imposed.

U.S. Attorney Robert B. Fiske Jr. said the conviction was "a significant precedent because the position has been taken by some legal commentators that the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act does not apply to payments, such as the one made by United Brands, made for the purpose of influencing legislation or reducing taxes."

The company said in a statement that "the grand jury spent almost 40 months investigating United Brands' foreign and domestic operations and the only charges resulting were based on facts which the company itself had voluntarily disclosed over three years ago.

"While the company still does not believe that this situation was actionable, management had concluded that it was far better to settle with the government for this modest amount than to engage in prolonged litigation of the matter."

The company admitted that Eli M. Black, its former chief executive officer, and other unnamed executives conspired to pay the bribes in 1974 to Honduras' former economy minister, Abraham Bennaton Ramos.

Bennaton has since been removed from office and is subject to criminal charges in his own nation, the U.S. government said.

Half the bribe money was paid to induce a substantial reduction in Honduras' banana export tax, according to the six-count indictment.

The second installment of $1.25 million was to be paid in return for a 20-year extension of a favorable contract covering certain United Brands banana-producing properties in Honduras.

The second payment was not made because the conspiracy was uncovered after Black committed suicide in February 1975 by leaping from the Pan American building in New York City, government officials said.

The information against United Brands included wire fraud charges because the bribe scheme was executed via interstate telephone calls and international cable communications.

Smoke Alarm Sets, Detects Home Fire

UPPERCO, Md. (AP) — A smoke detector short-circuited and caught fire in the hallway of a home here, setting off an alarm that alerted the owners.

Paul Sivert and his wife, Jane, discovered flames shooting from the smoke detector, installed in a hallway ceiling, and smothered the flames within minutes. The Siverts later discovered that their electrical smoke detector was the type that had been recalled by the manufacturer in June 1976.

Church Puts College On Real Estate Mart

BIG SANDY (AP) — The classified advertisement could read: "For Sale: 1,600-acre site with 23 outstanding homes, 50-acre lake, golf course, conference center, gymnasium, tennis courts, landing field, radio station, dormitory, agricultural unit, $10.5 million."

And, while it's not included in the listing, this valuable East Texas property probably also has a chapel tucked away somewhere, since it's owned by the Worldwide Church of God.

Until recently, it was the campus of Ambassador College, the southern branch of the school founded 13 years ago by radio evangelists Herbert W. Armstrong and his son, Garner Ted Armstrong, leaders of the worldwide fundamentalist group.

The elder Armstrong recently ousted his son from involvement in the church.

Now, Herbert Armstrong has decided the Texas college branch should be merged with the church's main campus in Pasadena, Calif., and its campus at Big Sandy in the Piney Woods put on the selling block.

The sale is being handled by Previews, Inc., an international real estate company that in its 45-year history has sold the Duke and Duchess of Windsor's chateau near Paris, two properties for singer-actor Dean Martin, former President Gerald Ford's home in Alexandria, Va., properties belonging to John F. Kennedy and Franklin D. Roosevelt, a lead mine and two lighthouses.

The firm specializes in handling unique properties, and the Ambassador College campus fits the bill. Writers have called it an "architectural and botanical splendor" and "the most beautiful campus ever."

The Armstrongs were never noted for thinking small as they built their religious empire, and Ambassador College was no exception. It has all the "extras," including a king-size garbage disposal.

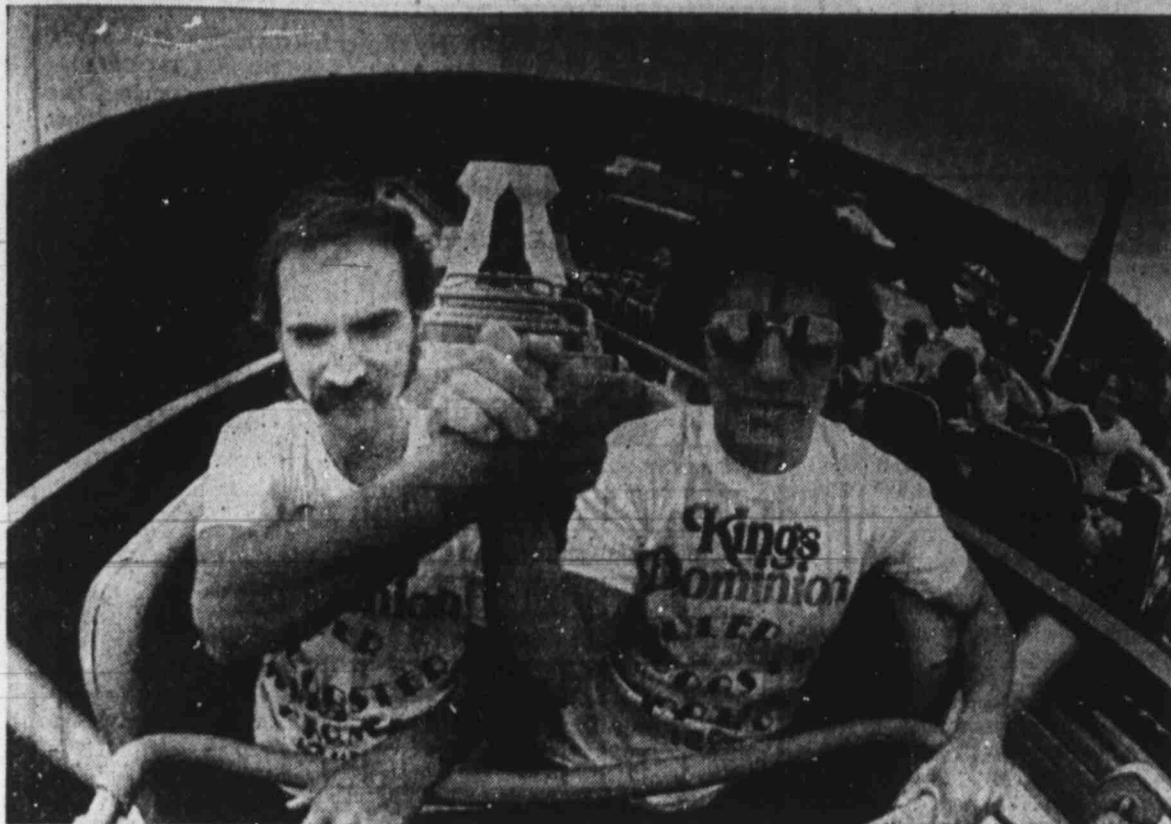

"It's a digester machine, a huge steel cylinder about 60 feet long that will process garbage, sewage and other wastes and turn it into fertilizer for the grounds," said H. Bob Fawcett of Previews.

"The 97,000-square-foot conference center seats 12,000 people, and the 25,500-square-foot library and student lounge are fantastic," Fawcett added.

"The school's experimental farm has been widely acclaimed, and the dormitories look like charming family dwellings. There are nearly 400 buildings in the package, and it took 900 pages of single-spaced typing to compile the inventory of furnishings," he said.

"The rolling, wooded campus, about 100 miles east of Dallas, contains natural springs and the lake provides swimming, boating, fishing and water skiing.

"The Big Sandy property is a bargain," he insists.

Sculptor Completes Massive Work For Washington Mall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even without the old locomotive cab that he originally intended to include, Mark di Suvero's sculpture titled "Isis" is a monumental addition to the national Mall.

And, as Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., said at dedication ceremonies Wednesday, "It will be with us for long time."

The sculpture, fabricated on the plaza of the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, stands about 43 feet tall, 65 feet long and 33 feet wide. Di Suvero started to assemble it with 35 tons of scrap-iron and steel. Since he decided for artistic reasons to leave out one major element, no one knows what it now weighs, but it is certainly less.

Many people will not like the work, in which the ship's bow is suspended from a tripod-like assembly of steel beams. "All of you will react to it differently," Di Suvero said.

Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus accepted the work, representing President Carter. He praised the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel, Inc., which commissioned Di Suvero to create the sculpture. It reportedly paid him $85,000 and met his travel and transportation costs.

They were considerable. He found a ship's bow at Terminal Island, Calif., the locomotive cab in Chicago and other elements throughout the country. The locomotive cab was transported to his studio yard in Petaluma, Calif., where he did preliminary planning. Then it and other items weighing 35 tons were transported to the capital on large trucks.

"Isis" is now drab gray, but Di Suvero said, "I do plan to paint it — but I don't know what colors." Isis was the most-revered female goddess in ancient Egypt. By a fortuitous coincidence, her name is also the same as the acronym for the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel.

Di Suvero, three professional welders and five other helpers fabricated the work since July 10 when the scrap material arrived from Petaluma, about 50 miles north of San Francisco. Crowds of tourists and other Mall visitors have watched daily, and approximately 2,000 showed up for the formal dedication.

Moynihan, who is chairman of the Hirshhorn trustees, summed up the work with appropriate senatorial oratory.

"I recall that on the occasion that Margaret Fuller declared, 'I accept the universe,' Carlyle remarked that she better," Moynihan said.

"Isis" achieves an esthetic transubstantiation of that which at is at once elusive yet ineluctable in the modern sensibility.

"Transcending socialist realism with an unqualified abstract range, Mr. di Suvero brings to the theme of his recycling both the hard-edge reality of the modern world and the transcendent fecundity of the universe itself: a lasting assertion both of the fleetingness of the living, and the permanence of life; a consummation before which we stand in consistorial witness.

"It will be with us a long time."

Pound To Hold Goat Auction

City Animal Shelter Authorities have got somebody's goat, and today they hope to give it back.

The city-operated shelter, located at 401 N. Ash Ave., will hold a public auction at 10 a.m. on two unclaimed animals — a brown-and-white goat and a brown gelding pony.

The horse was picked up by the city on July 3, wandering in the vicinity of East 50th Street and Loop 289. The goat was found in a backyard of a North Lubbock home on July 6.

Thomas Trombley, director of the shelter, said both are "good-looking animals. Normally someone would have come by to claim them."

Trombley said the animals have been grazing in a grassy, fenced-in area at the shelter.

Exiles Seek Funds For Zairean Revolt

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A Zairean exile group based in Brussels has asked President Carter for $1.5 million to finance the overthrow of President Mobutu Sese Seko's government and replace it by a "truly democratic government."

The appeal to Carter was delivered Tuesday to the U.S. Embassy and made public Wednesday by the group, the Action Movement for the Resurrection of the Congo. The organization is one of several competing Brussels-based groups attempting to unseat Mobutu. The United States is a supporter of Mobutu and is involved in extensive international efforts to rescue Zaire's failing economy.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Last August we purchased 40 shares of preferred stock of a well known utility company at $126 a share. That stock paid dividends of $12 a share. Then, through a rising market and despite the large dividend, the price of the stock began to fall. In May, we received a letter from the company that the stock was being "called for redemption" at $112 a share. By that time, the price of the stock had fallen to about $113.50.

Why were investors not informed about this, at the time they purchased the stock? We were not informed. Were other investors and brokers informed in advance? I'm ready to start a class action suit.

A. No one can stop you from doing that. It's your constitutional right. But the only likely result will be legal fees much bigger than the loss you took on that stock.

As is the case with many preferred stocks, the company which issued that preferred stock had the right — spelled out at the time the preferred stock was issued — to call that stock for redemption at a specified price and at a specified time.

Companies often redeem high-yielding preferreds or bonds which have "call provisions" when they have cash available. That's just prudent management. Wouldn't you get out of a 12 percent payment obligation, if you had the money to do so?

Your thoughts about "other investors and brokers" being "informed in advance" are more than far-fetched. Astute investors, who follow the company's financial affairs — as you had an opportunity to do — undoubtedly realized that a call was possible. As a result, they began selling the stock. When there's selling pressure on any stock, the market price drops.

I know you're unhappy about losing $566 — $14 a share — plus the commission you paid when you bought that stock. But you have no one to blame but yourself. You didn't investigate before investing.

Q. We are living on Social Security and pensions of about $720 a month. We also have $30,000 in savings certificates at 7 1/2 percent and $20,000 in savings accounts at 3.25 percent. Our son suggests that, when the savings certificates come due, we put the $30,000 into corporate bonds which yield upward of 9 percent.

Do you consider such bonds as safe an investment as savings certificates?

A. Assuming that the savings certificates are insured by an agency of the federal government or — in some states — a strong state insurance agency, the answer has to be a resounding "no."

You can always be sure of getting all of your dollars out of insured savings certificates — under the terms spelled out when you put your money in. Corporate bonds rise or fall in value, depending upon money market conditions. If you need money at some future date, you might get more or less dollars than you pay to buy such bonds today.

But that doesn't mean you should ignore such investments. As this goes through the typewriter, quality corporate bonds are yielding well over 9 percent. If you buy them and don't have to touch the principal, that kind of an investment can increase your income.

Your son, who certainly knows more about your over-all financial affairs than I do, seems to be trying to steer you in the right direction.

Q. We recently bought a new home.

When we furnish it should we buy on credit, so that we can claim the interest as deductions when we file our income tax returns? Or should we buy with cash?

A. Pay everything you can with cash. The interest rates on consumer loans could clobber you. The only way you could possibly come out ahead would be to put your money to work earning more money than the interest you would have to pay on those loans.

That's called "leverage." But mighty few ordinary mortals are able to accomplish it.

Malaysia Expands Canine Drug Corps

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The Customs Department plans to buy more dogs from Europe, Australia and the United States to expand its unit of dogs that sniff out marijuana, heroin and opium, a customs official said Wednesday.

Abdul Rahim Tak, deputy director general of customs, told reporters more officers would be sent overseas to study dog training and the latest methods of drug smugglers. The unit now has four dogs, gifts of the U.S. customs service. Abdul Rahim said 10 more would be bought from Europe, four from Australia and two from the United States.

NBC Tourney Resumes; Cardinals Face Chaps

The West Region NBC Tournament resumes play today at Mackenzie Park with the Town Draw Brewers of Lubbock and El Paso West Wind the only undefeated teams.

However, by the time those two potent units clash at 8:30 p.m. Friday, the double-elimination tournament, which began with 24 teams, will be down to only six squads.

Today, it's the Lubbock Cardinals against the Lubbock Chaps at 6:30 p.m. and the Brownfield Astros against the Lubbock Z's at 8:30. And then at 6:30 p.m. Friday, the Lubbock Bulls take on Abilene.

And, if everything goes according to the "book", it will be the Chaps, Z's and Abilene that survive those elimination contests.

But what about the biggie? Well, El Paso got superb pitching from Jeff Hogan (a six-hitter in an 11-3 win over Wichita Falls), Tom Airington (a one-hit, 10-strikeout, two-walk performance in a 14-0 win over Abilene) the first weekend.

However, over the last five years, El Paso has always been a fast starter in this tournament, but two treks from the Border City within ten days always seemed to take its toll the second week.

West Wind managed 12, 11, and 12 hits last weekend, with Bobby Alsop going 5-for-12 with two homers and 8 RBIs, Louis Llamas 3-for-6 with two homers and 3 RBIs, and Glenn Villarreal 4-for-10 with a pair of homers and 3 RBIs as the team blasted seven homers.

The Brewers have firepower, too, as Scott Leimgruber went 5-for-9 with 6 RBIs and Jim Horton 5-for-7 to pace the Lubbockites, who are unbeaten for the summer. Pete Mills hurled a two-hitter with eight strikeouts and without a walk in an 11-1 win over the Cardinals. Chad Johnson spun an eight-hitter in a 5-4 win over Brownfield, and Doug House had a five-hitter in an 11-3 verdict over the Z's.

Horner Selected Coach At Silverton

SILVERTON (Special)—David Lynn Horner has been hired by the Silverton school system as head basketball coach.

Horner succeeds Lyndel Norwood who resigned to accept a position at River Road High School in Amarillo.

A graduate of Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, Horner previously worked at Canyon Middle School in New Braunfels.

Tonight's opener could develop into a pitching duel between the Chaps Bob McNeil, a southpaw who allowed only two hits, walked two and fanned eight in two appearances totaling nine innings last weekend, and Cardinal flamethrower Larry Horn, who toiled professionally earlier this summer.

The first weekend was a hitter's paradise despite the few brilliant mound showings. Twenty-four homers flew out of Mackenzie Park over the first five days, including 16 Saturday.

The early games this week will determine the full weekend slate, but Wichita Falls will play the Bulls-Abilene winner Saturday at 3:30 p.m.

Golf World Watches Lopez In U.S. Open

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There are the usual brave noises about any one of a number of players being capable of winning the U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship.

"It's wide open — anybody's ball game," said the bubbly, bouncy defending title-holder, Hollis Stacy.

But the attention is focused sharply on a single figure: Nancy Lopez. Nancy of the flashing eyes and infectious smile; the 21-year-old girl who possesses the personality and owns the accomplishments that seem destined to lift the women's game to a plateau it never before has reached.

About 80 working press credentials have been issued, including two to Japanese newsmen, for the 28th women's national championship that begins today on the hilly, 6,115-yard, par-71 Country Club of Indianapolis course.

"That's well over double the number we've ever had before," said one official of the sponsoring U.S. Golf Association and does not include some 120 media badges distributed to the television network that will provide national coverage. By way of comparison, the women's Open in Worcester, Mass., in 1960, attracted less than a dozen newsmen.

"There's only one reason for it," the USGA official said.

"She's captured the public imagination as, perhaps, no one ever has before," said Frank Hannigan, a noted golf historian. Parallels have been drawn between this girl, still in her rookie year, and the effect legendary Arnold Palmer had on the men's game in the late 1950's and early 1960's.

"I don't recall that even Arnold had the immediate, personal appeal that Nancy does," Hannigan said. "Men's golf already was on the upswing. It may have gone on and reached its stage without Palmer. He probably just made it happen faster. Other factors were involved."

"Nancy, however, is the one single, lone factor. She's responsible. No one and nothing else. Nancy is phenomenal. I don't think anyone has ever had this effect, this immediate effect."

And, in a way, she's almost sad about it.

"It's sad to think that this is my last tournament as a rookie," she said. "It's hard to believe. It seems like it was just yesterday I was out there qualifying."

She's a long way from that now. She's won seven tournaments this year, including a record five in a row. She's set money-winning records for a rookie — man or woman — with more than $135,000. And she's remained the same little girl who learned the game at Cahoon Park in Roswell, N.M., a nine-hole public course, sometimes quiet and self-contained, sometimes a little playful, always correct.

And she's long dreamed of this title. "It's something I've wanted for a long, long time," she said. "It's particularly important this year since I've already won the LPGA (Championship)." She's been second twice and comes into this one in peak condition.

"I took a week off a couple of weeks ago. It did a lot for me. For a couple of weeks, after the streak ended, I was just kind of goofing around."

RACING ACTION CONTINUES IN THE COOL PINES

Ruidoso Downs sets the scene for an exciting weekend of racing action in the cool pines of New Mexico.

Four days of racing excitement begins Thursday and continues through Sunday. The $6,500-added ZIA STAKES for three-year-olds at 400 yards, highlights Saturday's racing action. ## Odds On Rose Drop As Hit String Stretches

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The odds have dropped slightly as Pete Rose draws nearer to the National League record for hitting safely in consecutive games.

The line was narrowed from 5-1 on Tuesday to 9-2 Wednesday when the Union Plaza Hotel's sports book opened for business after the Cincinnati Reds' switch-hitter got two hits Tuesday night against Montreal.

Those who placed $1 bets when the line went up Tuesday can win $5 if Rose sets a new record. Wednesday's bettors would win $4.50 on a $1 bet.

"If he gets a hit against Philadelphia tonight (Wednesday night) the odds will be dropped to 4-1 for Thursday night's game at Philadelphia," said hotel spokesman Jim Brann.

"And if it comes up to the tie on Monday he probably will be even money," Brann said.

Cincinnati was scheduled to play Philadelphia Wednesday night and tonight, then moves to Montreal for three games.

On Monday the Reds play the New York Mets, and the man Rose is chasing, Tommy Holmes, will be in the stands to see if his record of hitting safely in 37 straight games will be broken.

Holmes, who played for the Boston Braves in 1945 when he set the record, now is community relations director for the Mets.

If Rose ties the National League record, Brann said, "In all likelihood he will be a favorite for Tuesday to break it, but at what price we don't know at this time."

Brann said the hotel's 1,000-1 odds against Rose breaking Joe DiMaggio's major league record of hits in 56 consecutive games "might drop during the weekend," if Rose continues his hitting streak.

Schroeder Continues To Try Phillie Classic

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John Schroeder could be called a masochist when it comes to playing the 6,615-yard Whitmarsh Valley Country Club golf course.

The 33-year-old Schroeder from La Jolla, Calif., plays this par-36-35-71 layout as if he were handcuffed. Ironically, there isn't a happier golfer in the field than Schroeder for this week's $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic at Whitmarsh.

Schroeder said Whitmarsh's narrow fairways, small greens and difficult rough put the premium on accuracy. "It makes you play a lot of shots the pros usually don't have to make," said the 9-foot-

10 1/2 native of Massachusetts. Schroeder feels he has his game sharp and is ready for Whitmarsh this year. The 170-pounder has only one tour win.

BELTED IN—Al Unser, three-time winner of the Indianapolis 500 speed race and a man who understands safety, holds the door open for Robin McHugh in Washington Wednesday as she sits in an auto equipped with an automatic passenger-restraint system which secures the driver when the door is closed. ## Pac-8 Ace Joins U.S. Squad For Cage Tourney In Russia

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cliff Robinson of Southern California, who became the first freshman ever to lead the Pacific-8 Conference in scoring last season, is among the 12 players named to the U.S. National Basketball Team that will compete in the Yuri Gagarin Cup International Tournament in the Soviet Union next month.

Also selected were Gene Banks and Mike Gminski of Duke, who helped the Blue Devils to the runner-up spot in the NCAA Tournament last spring.

The team was limited to last season's sophomores and freshmen to prepare potential players for the Pan American Games next year and the Olympic Games in 1980.

The U.S. team, coached by Bill Vining of Ouachita Baptist in Arkansas and Texas Tech's Gerald Myers, also includes Roosevelt Bowie of Syracuse, Reggie Carter of St. John's, Earvin Johnson of Michigan State, Ronnie Lester of Iowa, Michael O'Koren of North Carolina, Greg Shelton of Georgetown, Darnell Valentine of Kansas, Danny Vranes of Utah and Mike Woodson of Indiana.

The Gagarin Cup tournament, a round-robin affair, will be held Aug. 23-30 in Moscow. Other countries entered are the host Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Italy and Bulgaria.

The U.S. team will then play a single game against the Soviet Union Aug. 31. The team will train at Colorado Springs, Colo., prior to departing for Russia.

Raiders Sign Four Tracksters

A quarter-mile from Hobbs, N.M., heads the list of five track athletes signed recently by Texas Tech.

Shaner is Clay Daniels of Hobbs, along with Steve White of Slaton, Reggie Harvey of Houston Jones, Ed Bruning of San Angelo, and Carl Heinrich of Houston.

Daniels had a top time of 48.0 in the 440-yard dash and was second in the New Mexico state meet.

Harvey, who will compete for a spot on the Tech football team this fall, has a best time of 9.4 in the 100 and 21.4 in the 220.

Bruning was regional runner-up in the 880 with a time of 1:54.0, and White was a state meet qualifier in the 880 in Class AA.

Heinrich finished third in the Class AAAA state meet in the pole vault with a height of 15-3.

Deeds Captures LCC Fem Tourney

Sis Deeds, who had led after the first day, held that top spot in winning the two-day women's handicap golf tournament at Lubbock Country Club.

Mrs. Deeds finished with a net score of 142, bettering Joanne Batson by 4 strokes. Katie Quest was third at 149 in the championship flight.

Emma Nell Neal had a 144 net to win the first flight over Sherry Godwin, 148, and Marsha Craig, 154. In the second flight, the winner was Kathryn O'Hair at 148, followed by Sandra Rushing, 148, and Ann Ahlenius, 151.

Grid Cards Sign Free Agent End

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have signed free agent tight end Bruce Blankenship, the National Football League team announced Wednesday.

Blankenship, 6-foot-4 and 232 pounds, was a three-year starter at Oklahoma State. He signed as a free agent with the San Francisco 49ers in 1977 but was cut.

The Cardinals also announced that tight end George Amundson would have to undergo corrective surgery for a knee injury received in Monday night's training camp drill.

The four-year NFL veteran tried out with the Cardinals last year and made it to the last cut.

Stoll Requests NCAA Probe Of Allegations

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — University of Minnesota football coach Cal Stoll says an investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association is needed to clear his name following allegations by a student newspaper that he made illegal loans to his players.

"I would welcome an investigation by The NCAA, because that's my recourse," Stoll said Wednesday. "Otherwise I've got to sit here and take it, I guess. The whole thing is full of lies, innuendo and hearsay, but what can you do about it?"

The Minnesota Daily reported in a copyrighted story Tuesday interviews with more than two dozen players who revealed Stoll's reputation as an available loan source.

The article also said Wendell Avery, a junior and Gopher quarterback, received undisclosed amounts of money from Stoll before the start of the 1977 season and during the season.

The article said an unnamed source close to Stoll and Avery said Stoll called Avery into his office the week before the Gophers faced Wisconsin in 1977 and told him he would be absolved of his debts to Stoll if Minnesota won the game.

Stoll's incentive, the newspaper said, was the Gophers' bid to the Hall of Fame Bowl, which bowl officials said depended on Minnesota beating Wisconsin in the last game of the season.

Former Gopher quarterback Tony

Dungy, a friend of Avery's confirmed the Avery incident, according to the newspaper, and also reportedly said, "Cal will believe a hard luck story and give a player some money."

However, Wednesday Dungy said from Pennsylvania, where he is at the Pittsburgh Steelers' training camp, that this was impossible.

"I couldn't have confirmed it," Dungy said. "I wasn't there. I was playing for the Steelers at the time."

Stoll said he didn't even know if Avery was going to start the Wisconsin game, and Avery said the Daily reporter got "carried away. I never borrowed any money from Stoll, ever."

Stoll also denied a report that he paid $900 of a player's $1,000 phone bill four years ago. He called that allegation "completely false: a blatant out-and-out lie."

University vice president Robert Stein said he would ask athletic director Paul Giel to investigate the charges in the article as quickly as possible, and he said the investigation results will be made public.

"We have every reason for confidence in Coach Stoll," Stein said. "But because of the questions these allegations raise about the integrity of our football program, we are taking this matter very seriously."

The article mentioned Keith Brown, a senior, and former Gopher Dexter Pride as among players receiving aid in violation of NCAA rules that prohibit benefits to athletes beyond financial aid from scholarships.

Brown was quoted as saying that if he told what he knew, the football program would be put on probation by the NCAA and future players would suffer.

The Daily also said players secretly bend NCAA rules outlawing part-time jobs and financially exploit female fans who seek romantic involvement, bilking them of thousands of dollars. The article did not identify the women or the players.

Niehl Selected Aide at WSU

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Bob Niehl, who captained the 1973-74 Cougar basketball team, has been named to coach Washington State University's junior varsity basketball squad, says head coach George Raveling.

Niehl replaces Tom Schneeman, who left after two years to become the top assistant at the University of Detroit.

After two years of coaching at Sprague High School, Niehl returned to WSU last year as one of Schneeman's assistants while continuing his graduate work.

Marty Giovacchini, another former Cougar captain, will assist Niehl, Raveling said.

Expansion Plan For Local Sporting Goods Store

Cleveland Athletics announced this week plans for 4,000 sq. ft. additional warehouse space. Joe Lombard, Store Mgr. stated that due to plans for larger inventories for soccer, softball & baseball the new two story structure was needed. Work is to begin in early July at the 34th Street location between Slide Rd. & Loop 289.

CHEERS—BACK-TO-BACK—University of Pittsburgh cheerleaders have won the title, Miss Cheerleaders USA for two straight years. Joyce Prokopovich, left, won this year's title in competition at Cypress Gardens, Fla., and Susan Murphy was the 1977 winner. It is the first time in the competition's 13-year history that one school has produced consecutive winners. (AP Laserphoto)

Herrera, Cowboys Remain At Distance

DALLAS (AP) — Efran Herrera's future with the Dallas Cowboys remained cloudy Wednesday as the deadline approached for the All-Pro kicker to report to the Cowboy's pre-season training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Herrera, the Cowboys' leading scorer last season with 93 points, wants more money in a new contract. He made $32,500 last season and the Cowboys reportedly have offered him a contract of $40,000 this season with annual increases of $5,000 up to $55,000 four years from now.

"I haven't been in contact with anyone from the Cowboys since a week ago Friday (July 7)," said Buck Woy, Herrera's agent.

"It's more or less a take-it-or-leave-it situation. They've been stealing him for four years already," Woy added.

"I guess they feel because he's Mexican he doesn't need as much money, or he can't make that kind of money anywhere else."

Woy, who said he's the only one who knows where Herrera is now, said the National Football League average salary a year ago was $55,000. He said Herrera wouldn't be making that much until four years from now.

The average salary for kickers last season was $41,500.

Will Herrera, a Dallas resident who is now in the Los Angeles area, report to training camp by today's deadline?

"That's not my decision," Woy said.

"But it is something we are going to have to talk about in the next 48 hours. His chances of improving his situation with the Cowboys are not very good."

Dallas coach Tom Landry, who may be searching for a kicking specialist if Herrera doesn't show, said Tuesday, "I don't get involved in the negotiations of contracts, but after talking with Efran the other evening I didn't come away with the feeling that we're any closer to having the thing resolved than we were a week or so ago."

Woy said the Cowboys have Herrera "between a rock and a hard place," because the team could impose a $500 per day fine for each day of camp the kicker misses.

"It makes it very difficult for us. They say it's a substantial offer, a great offer," Woy said.

The agent said several clubs are interested-making a trade for Herrera, who last season made 18 of 29 field goal attempts and 39 of 41 points after touchdowns.

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Youth Stuck After Chase

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A 19-year-old youth being chased by police got himself into a sticky situation when he fell through the screen roof of a flower shop. The fall Tuesday didn't hurt Daniel Lee Wranovics, but where he landed did. Police found him straddling a big vacuum plant. Paramedics had to extract scores of barbed spines from his body before police booked him for investigation of trespass.

Costly Outhouse Gets Okay

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Maybe, some people suggest, $66,850 is a bit much to spend for an outhouse. That's the price tag for a vandal-proof, rape-proof, modernistic, facility built on Boulder's downtown mall. The bathroom became so controversial that Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., asked the General Accounting Office to investigate its cost. The office's report is complete and city officials who authorized the outhouse can rest a bit more easily. GAO auditors, says Boulder City Manager Bob Westdyke, found the cost is "probably reasonable due to the requirements placed on the design by its chosen location, its necessary compactness, the need for a vandal-resistant, long-lasting, rape-proof and secure building."

Delayed Birth Worries Zoo

MIAMI (AP) — Zookeepers are pacing the corridors. When they're asking, will Cora, the pregnant rhinoceros, give birth? Cora has ballooned from about 1,800 to 2,300 pounds and it's not due to a penchant for rich foods. From careful calculation, zookeepers believe Cora should have delivered three months ago. Thirty-five volunteers from the Zoological Society of Florida have been keeping a 24-hour vigil at Cora's side since April 28 at Miami's Crandon Park Zoo. Bill Zeigler, the zoo's general curator, says information gathered during the anxious wait would help other zoos determine how pregnant their rhinos might be.

Cattle Gain Sweet Tooth

GRAND JUNCTION, Iowa (AP) — Roger Tolsdorf's 24 cows and 22 calves have developed a sweet tooth. "I sure don't have any trouble rounding up the animals when it's feeding time," says Tolsdorf, 42, who feeds his animals seconds from the Merit Baking Co. in nearby Boone. "All I have to do is pull in the driveway in my pickup, hook the horn once or twice and the cows just come a-bawling. They want their cookies," he said. Tolsdorf said his animals like all cookies except the ones with raisins in them. "Must be too gummy or something when they chew them," he speculated.

Nostalgia Wins Again

NISSEQUOGUE, N.Y. (AP) — Nostalgic Augusta Kemper remembers as a little girl racing up and down those steps of the elevated railway at 100 Street in Jamaica, Queens. Now she owns them. Miss Kemper says the Wrecking Corp. of America will deliver this week two sets of the old iron steps and a landing. It all will be installed at her estate, leading down to the beach on Long Island Sound. She won't discuss how much her acquisition cost. Sentiment knows no financial bounds, said an associate, who described Miss Kemper as "worth a great deal of money." Miss Kemper, who keeps her age to herself, says the new staircase will get plenty of use by friends and family, including nine nieces and nephews.

Dual Nation Concert Planned

NICE, France (AP) — Count Basie will play piano in two countries at the same time when he leads his famous orchestra during a concert on a Franco-Italian border bridge Saturday. The Count's piano will be set up to straddle the border. His right hand will strike keys in Italy; his left in France. Seats for 2,500 people will be available in each country.

Woody Allens Prefers Low Pay

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen, Academy Award-winner for "Annie Hall," insists he's the "lowest-paid writer-director-actor in the business." Allen, in an interview appearing in the August issue of Ladies' Home Journal, says "the less I take, the cheaper I can do my movies... I don't have to worry about being commercial." He says this way he needn't hire stars or "write down" to audiences.

Castro Receives Greeting

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Diana Nyad, still without permission from Cuban authorities for her planned swim from Havana to Florida, has sent a telegram of greeting to Cuban President Fidel Castro. Ken Gunderson, a member of the Nyad swim team, said the message was sent Tuesday but no response had been received. The swim already has been delayed twice and cannot begin until Cuba grants permission. "It was a friendly type telegram, just mainly saying, 'Hello,'" Gunderson said. "You could say we're starting to get a little concerned about this," he said. "It's tough, because we're all really gun-ho to start this thing." The crew gave a $65,000 shark cage to be used by Miss Nyad a preliminary test Tuesday. The 16-by-33-foot, self-propelled cage was scheduled to be tested in ocean waters today, he said.

Erin Gray's Diligence Paying Off

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For several years, Erin Gray flew to Los Angeles from New York every six months or so to test for roles.

Nothing much came of all that commuting, although she did land a few guest roles on episodic television. In New York, she's a top commercial actress and model with one of the most photographed faces in the world.

Earlier this year, she flew west to test for a part in a comedy western and was signed to a contract by Universal Studios. Three weeks later she had a starring role in a four-hour TV movie.

"After years of hard work and waiting, I don't want to say it's entirely luck," says Miss Gray, a tall, willowy brunette who stars in "Evening in Byzantium," the next presentation of Operation Prime Time.

Still, her story was not without its own changing climax.

"I was told the role had been offered to a big-name actress," she recalls. "I said, 'That's it, Erin.' It was the first role I had come across that I really wanted to play. It has strength and honesty. If something is on her mind she says it."

She drove home. I didn't know what to do with myself. A few minutes later I got a phone call. I had the role. I was hysterical. I was laughing and crying. I pulled out my phone book and started calling everyone I knew to tell them."

That was on Friday. She went to work the following Monday.

"Evening in Byzantium," from the book by Irwin Shaw, is the second offering this year of Operation Prime Time. OPT is a coalition of independent stations which banded together to contract for first-run productions to compete with network stations.

The first production, "The Bastard," ran up impressive ratings against network programs.

Miss Gray stars with veterans like Glenn Ford, Eddie Albert, Shirley Jones and Vince Edwards. The producers used the budget of more than $23 million to garner an all-star cast — with the exception of one newcomer. The two-part show will air in August.

"I feel fortunate working with such pros," she says. "Eddie taught me how to react with no dialogue. Vince taught me how to match a task like lighting a cigarette to the master shot. Glenn showed me how to do a slap."

Miss Gray plays Gail McKinnon, an aggressive young reporter who tracks a movie producer (Ford) to the Cannes Film Festival for a story and ends up having an affair with him. Shaw's book has been updated to involve the Arab-Israeli conflict and nuclear terrorism.

Her husband, Kenneth Schwartz, an agricultural real estate agent, has remained in New York, although they bought a house here. They also have a farm in upstate New York. He's visited her three or four times since production started.

WINS STARRING ROLE — Erin Gray, a top New York commercial actress and model, has a starring role in a four-hour TV movie "Evening in Byzantium." For several years, Gray flew to Los Angeles from New York every six months or so to test for roles, but nothing much came out of all that commuting. # Brazil Set For Next 007 Film

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Much of James Bond's next multimillion dollar spy movie will take place in Brazil — if nature and the Brazilian government decide to cooperate.

One of the main scenes in Brazil, says English director Lewis Gilbert, would be at Iguazu Falls on the Brazil-Paraguay border. But a severe drought in southern Brazil has left the normally spectacular falls a barren cliff with only a tiny stream of water.

Gilbert, whose last James Bond movie, "The Spy Who Loved Me," grossed, he claims, more than $100 million, says filming of the Brazilian part of "Moonraker" will begin in January and that by that time, he hopes summer rains will have filled the Parana River with water again.

The other problem the production company is facing is Brazilian bureaucracy. The scripts of all movies filmed in Brazil must be approved in advance by the government. So far, the "Moonraker" script is languishing on some bureaucrat's desk in Brasilia.

"I don't think we'll have any real problem with the Brazilians," Gilbert says. "This is the most fantastic advertising that Brazil could have."

He said that Brazilian authorities apparently are concerned that foreign movie producers might show the seamier side of Brazilian life.

"But they don't have to worry because we only show the beautiful part," Gilbert says. "James Bond is a creature of luxury and he doesn't hang around in favelas." Favelas are Brazilian slums.

Gilbert says tourism in Egypt jumped tremendously after "The Spy Who Loved Me," much of which was filmed there.

Other scenes from "Moonraker" will be filmed in Paris, Venice, San Francisco and Guatemala.

The movie will have little in common with the Ian Fleming novel of the same name, Gilbert says, except for Bond, to be played by Roger Moore, beautiful girls and the villain, Hugo Drax.

As for plot, Gilbert would only say it will deal with space, noting the whole concept of space has changed since Fleming wrote the book.

Carnival scenes from Rio's famous pre-Lenten celebration were filmed earlier this year. "We'll use them for backdrops and re-create our own carnival for Bond," Gilbert says. The famous Bond escapades are a "top secret" but Gilbert promises "they will top anything up to now."

Cost of the production will be considerably more than the $15 million the previous Bond movie cost, Gilbert says.

It will be Gilbert's third Bond movie and his 31st film.

Crosby County Tax Rate Hiked

CROSBYTON (Special) — The Crosby County Commissioner's Court has established a new tax rate at $1.25 per $100 evaluation for 1978.

The new rate is a 14 cent increase over last year.

The court also decided to charge $75 monthly for non-county radios which operate on the county radio tower.

Other action at the regular meeting included the appointment of election judges and alternates for all general and special elections.

The bonds of Billie Joe Freeman, newly appointed district clerk, and Tom Brian, assistant county attorney, also were approved.

The firm of Bolinger, Segars, Gilbert and Moss was employed as independent auditor for the county for 1979.

MARRIAGE TAKES ITS TOLL.

Marriage costs the typical American couple between $700 and $800 a year in taxes. The Conference Board observes. An unmarried couple making $12,500 each, for example, is taxed at $1,804 per person, for a combined figure of $3,608.

Indonesia To Free 10,000 Communists

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Indonesia will free 3,921 Communist prisoners next Wednesday as part of plans to free 10,000 communists this year, officials said Wednesday.

Gen. Yoga Sugama, chief of staff of the Command for Security and Order, said a ceremony will be held in the West Java capital of Bandung for release of the prisoners from the B category, which means they are considered dangerous but there is inadequate evidence for prosecution.

Fraser Quits Economic Council

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the 1.5 million-member United Auto Workers union said Wednesday the nation's unions are being victimized by a "one-sided class war" waged by business, resulting in new interest in a labor political party.

UAW chief Douglas A. Fraser also told a news conference the Carter administration has been ineffective in meeting the nation's needs, and he announced his resignation from the Labor-Management Group, a semi-official committee whose purpose is to work out joint approaches to economic problems.

"It really serves no purpose," Fraser said of the committee. "People may be thinking we're sitting in agreement on issues of the day, and nothing could be further from the truth...That's the reason for the resignation, to stop this facade."

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and other administration officials have met frequently with the committee in the past year to seek support and advice for administration initiatives, such as the voluntary anti-inflation program. However, it is generally regarded as not having been a successful effort.

Fraser said that in the last year "there has been a shift on the part of the business community toward confrontation, rather than cooperation...Where industry once yearned for subservient unions, it now wants no unions at all."

The UAW is the nation's largest industrial union and the second largest overall after the Teamsters Union. Fraser has been president about a year, since Leonard Woodcock stepped down to accept an appointment by Carter as the chief U.S. representative in Communist China.

Fraser's condemnation of the nation's business sector was voiced in unusually bitter terms. "I believe leaders of the business community, with few exceptions, have chosen to wage a one-sided class war today in this country — a war against the unemployed, the poor, the minorities, the very young and the very old, and even many in the middle class of our society," he said.

He said the confrontation can be seen in business' opposition to the labor law revision bill, its attempt to blame the minimum wage as a cause of inflation, and in its opposition to tax revision, national health insurance, the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill, a fair energy program, regulations of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and an equitable financing of the Social Security system.

Business leaders argue their positions on these issues are based on sound economic thinking.

But Fraser said, "Our tax laws are a scandal, yet corporate America wants even wider inequities. If people truly understood, they would choose not Proposition 13s, but rather an overhaul of the tax system to make business and the rich pay their fair share."

He said he is wasting his time on the Labor-Management Group, which includes eight leaders each from business and labor and is headed by former Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop.

Fraser said that "for the first time in years" there is discussion among some leaders in his own union of establishing a labor party as an alternative to the Republican and Democratic parties. He himself opposes such a move, but he said he will seek to re-establish old alliances, and form new ones, to back an "agenda of action" to help those who need help.

He said his resignation was not intended as a slap at Carter. But in answer to a question, he said he thinks the administration "is an ineffective administration, unable to come to grips with the problems of the nation."

Company Absolved Of Labor Charges

ATLANTA (AP) — Four unfair labor practice charges filed by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union against J. P. Stevens & Co. have been dismissed by the National Labor Relations Board.

Regional director Curtis L. Mack said he had notified the union and the company recently that Stevens had not violated the NLRB act at its Tifton, Ga., plants as charged by the union.

He said the particular cases involved employee Leon Pitts and former employees Gary Summer and Vickie Bennett.

Mack said evidence presented failed to support charges that they had been treated unfairly.

Mack said his decisions were limited to the complaints and facts involved in these cases only and had no bearing on any other cases pending against Stevens.

Harvesting Of Mesquite Studied

A new look at cost factors in harvesting mesquite has shown that this might be one of the most practical, economical means of controlling mesquite for Texas ranchers.

The cost analysis between harvesting and other mesquite control methods was conducted by Douglas G. Cauble, a graduate student in agricultural economics at Texas Tech. Cauble was supervised by Dr. Billy G. Freeman, agricultural economist.

Harvesting is more expensive than the most common form of mesquite control, aerial spraying. The annual cost per acre for harvesting was approximately $21.18 in the study, versus approximately 99 cents for aerial spraying.

Either is capable of contributing to increased livestock production by a much as 31 percent, according to recent research.

Harvesting, however, removes all the woody material from the pasture. This enables the rancher to put cattle on the cleared pasture immediately.

With aerial spraying the trees are killed, but the woody material remains an obstacle to cattle attempting to get to the forage underneath.

With other mechanical forms of mesquite control, such as rootplowing, raking, roller chopping or tree dozing, the forage is usually damaged to the extent that the pasture needs to be rested for a considerable amount of time before livestock can be grazed.

With all methods regrowth control is necessary, which average an additional $2.18 annual cost acre using a tractor harrower removal system.

The study proposed, however, that the ranchers only bear a minimal amount of the cost of harvesting, perhaps as little as $1 per acre.

The majority of the cost would be born by the processing plant, which would, according to Cauble, receive the wood from the rancher at no charge.

Cauble said the proposed uses for the chipped wood ranged from livestock feed to fuel to insulation material to cheap building materials.

The system would be beneficial for both the plant — which would have a continual, adequate supply of raw material — and for the rancher, who could increase the use of his pastures and the efficiency level of his labor, said Freeman.

The amount of profit generated by the system would be affected by several factors, including distance of the pasture from the plant, the density of the available mesquite, transportation and labor costs and equipment replacement costs.

Freeman said the technology already exists to operate such a harvesting and processing operation. All that is lacking is setting up such a system.

The plant itself could be begun either by a private business or by a cooperative of the area ranchers.

Such a system could be beneficial for all concerned, he said, by providing readily available, low-cost raw material for the plant, and by helping to increase rancher profits by helping increase livestock production.

By DUANE HOWELL

GLOBAL COTTON EXPORTS ARE PROJECTED by the International Cotton Advisory Committee to increase in 1977-78 by about 2 million bales from the 1976-77 volume of 17.2 million bales.

Purchases by importing countries for stock replenishment have been a prominent feature in the expansion. End-of-season stocks in net importing countries are expected to go up by around 1 million bales from the abnormally low level of 3.3 million last Aug. 1.

The high yields of the current season are not expected to be repeated next season, and world cotton production in 1978-79 probably will decline moderately, with most of the reduction in the United States.

WORLD COTTON USE FOR 1977-78 is estimated at 61 million bales, compared with last season's 61.5 million. The decrease is mainly in Western Europe and the Far East.

Cotton use in Japan could fall to 2.7 million bales from 3.1 million last season due to cutbacks in yarn output. Of the large textile producing countries in the Far East, only Korea is expected to increase cotton consumption. Korean use is pegged at 1.1 million bales, up from 1 million.

U.S. cotton consumption is projected at 6.6 million bales, some 100,000 bales below last season.

Cotton consumption in India is expected to continue its slight decline, dipping to 5.50 million bales from last season and 6.10 million in 1975-76.

Turkish cotton use may set another record at 1.50 million bales, compared with 1.44 million in 1976-77.

COTTON USE IN THE SOVIET UNION may be up 100,000 bales from last season's 8.8 million, but consumption in Eastern Europe is expected to remain at about 3.21 million bales.

Consumption in South America is not likely to vary from the 1976-77 level of 3.39 million bales. Use is projected to rise in Africa to 2.8 million bales, up from 2.6 million, due largely to an increase in Egypt to 1.3 million bales from 1.1 million.

Cotton imports by China are estimated at more than 1.8 million bales, compared with 625,000 to 700,000 last season, the ICAC said.

Major cotton export gains of 400,000 bales each are expected in Turkey and Pakistan, and increases of between 100,000 and 200,000 bales are likely in Iran, Sudan, Egypt, Mexico, Brazil and Uruguay.

Committee Pulls Ag Programs Out Of Fire With Bill Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate agricultural appropriations subcommittee approved on Wednesday an $80.5-million spending bill needed to keep open 2,700 county offices that handle federal farm programs.

The full Appropriations Committee was expected to act later in the day on the measure, which cleared the House July 11.

The full Senate was expected to act on it this week so President Carter can sign it before funds run out.

The measure covers office expenses and salaries of almost 17,600 employees until Oct. 1, when the new fiscal year starts.

The money is for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service of the Agriculture Department, which told Congress it would run out of funds July 4.

For the last several weeks, however, the agency has been holding down costs by such means as closing operations in one county and sending farmers to an adjacent county's facilities to, for example, sign up for grain reserve programs and apply for loans.

“But the end of the rope arrives this coming week” with the July 25 payday for one class of workers, she said.

The shortage in funds came about because Congress expanded farm programs last October. To put them into effect, the service had to increase its staff by 4,538 persons and to speed up the spending of funds appropriated last September for fiscal 1978.

The Carter administration notified Congress in January that the extra funds would be needed, but the House Appropriations Committee did not take its first action on the “urgent supplemental appropriations” until June 28.

Committee staff members said that they had planned to include those funds in the regular catch-up appropriations bill for the Agriculture Department this spring but that measure has been put off until late summer.

Producers Advised On Marketing

AUSTIN (Special) — Farmers are going to have to strengthen their own organizations to develop solutions to marketing problems, agriculture commissioner Reagan V. Brown said here in a recent meeting with commodity representatives.

The Texas Department of Agriculture has an ongoing program of foreign and domestic promotion of farm products, “but it is ultimately the producers themselves who can best direct their marketing efforts,” he said.

Bill Nelson, executive vice president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association; Elbert Harp, executive director of the Lubbock-based Grain Sorghum Producers Association; and Berwin Tilson of Plainview, vice president of the Texas Soybean Producers Association, met with Brown to discuss new directions for commodity groups in Texas.

Later meetings are scheduled with the other commodity organization leadership.

In recent years, the number of contributing members to some commodity organizations has decreased, mainly because of poor economic conditions.

Texas law provides for such organizations to vote assessments on sales of farm commodities. These funds are then used for research, promotion, education, and marketing projects designed by the membership. Payment of assessments is voluntary.

The TDA administers programs for producers of grain sorghum, peanuts, pecans, pork, soybeans, turkey, mohair and wheat.

Brown said believes that the future holds all types of innovations in marketing for these organizations, such as trading through computer systems and extending control over prices by processing, food, feed, or fiber beyond the harvesting point.

“These groups have been doing a good job, but they must convince all farmers that they can profit from their assessment investment,” Brown stressed.

He urged all producers to consider seriously the present and potential market conditions.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 20, 1978

PHYSICAL
 Criticals: 11, 22, 34, 45, 57, 68 — Unsteady movements
 Highs: 12, 21, 35, 44, 58, 67 — You brim with vitality
 Lows: 1, 10, 23, 33, 46, 56, 69, 75 — Rest and recuperation day

EMOTIONAL

 Lows: 6, 18, 34, 46, 62, 74 — Avoid trouble, you lose

INTELLECTUAL

 Highs: 11, 25, 44, 58, 77, 91 — Easy to convince others
 Lows: 1, 9, 27, 42, 60, 75, 93, 95 — Don't initiate new things

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Deposition Given By Accused Solon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. John Young, D-Texas — accused in 1976 of paying a female staff member a premium salary in return for sexual favors — gave a deposition Wednesday in connection with the allegations.

U.S. District Judge Howard F. Corcoran has ordered depositions and documents presented by Young in the case to be sealed after Young's lawyer asked for a protective order "to the effect that all documents produced shall be afforded confidential status and not be disclosed by the parties or their attorneys to any third party person whatsoever."

The claims by former Young staffer Colleen Gardner spawned three civil suits: Young vs. The New York Times, two of its reporters, Mrs. Gardner and her lawyer, Sol Z. Rosen; Young vs. Rosen and Rosen vs. Young.

In August 1976 the Justice Department announced it would not seek prosecution of Young after investigating claims of the 32-year-old divorcee.

Young, 61, won re-election to an 11th term in the House shortly after Mrs. Gardner's claims were initially published in The New York Times. He was defeated in the Democratic primary this year.
