Begin Sees Prospects For Peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Wednesday that Egypt has ordered Israel's military delegation to leave Cairo, but he dismissed the ouster as a minor matter and said chances for a Mideast peace settlement are excellent.

Begin disclosed the Egyptian demand in an interview on Israeli state television. "We'll take them out," Begin said referring to the 10-member military team that went into Cairo six months ago.

There was no immediate explanation of the Egyptian action, which came only hours after Begin's Likud coalition easily defeated an opposition motion of no-confidence stemming from Labor Party charges that Begin has not made sufficient efforts to reach a peace agreement with Egypt.

Offers To Resume

In Egypt, Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel offered to resume direct talks with Israel "at any level" if Jerusalem "shows real willingness to reciprocate our peace initiative."

The Israeli military delegation was dispatched to Cairo in January to take part in direct military negotiations that followed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Israel last November. The military talks paralleled political negotiations between Israeli and Egyptian delegations in Jerusalem.

Sadat recalled his political negotiators Jan. 18, claiming the talks were blocked by Israel's refusal to withdraw completely from captured Arab lands and allow the creation of a Palestinian homeland.

Group Cools Heels

Since then, the Israeli military group has been cooling its heels, but there have been reports it was used occasionally to funnel peace feelers between Jerusalem and Cairo.

Begin said he received a telegram saying the mission should leave and said Israel would recall it today. "They don't have a central role. If their hosts don't want them... we'll receive them back here happily," Begin said.

Despite the surprise demand, Begin said he sees "excellent chances for the peace process." He noted that U.S. Mideast mediator Alfred L. Atherton was on a Mideast tour and U.S. Secretary of State was expected to visit Cairo and Jerusalem next week.

Meetings Hoped

"The Americans aren't sure but they believe that it will be possible to bring further meetings (between Israel and Egypt)," Begin said. Israeli and Egyptian negotiators met under U.S. aegis in Britain last week, holding their first direct talks since January.

"I believe peace will come out of all this, though it may take some time," Begin added.

The no-confidence motion against Begin's government was introduced in Parliament by former Foreign Minister Abba Eban. It was killed by a vote of 70 to 35, with three abstentions. The voting, as expected, was along party lines.

"I was elected by the people," Begin said in his television interview, "and today confidence in me was confirmed."

The motion came after a period of especially bitter relations between the government and the opposition. Begin's Likud angrily attacked opposition leader Shimon Peres for his meeting with Sadat in Austria earlier this month — a meeting approved by Begin. The Labor Party was enraged by what it called "defamation."

Eban criticized the government for failing to suggest to Egypt a territorial compromise in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, taken

'Test Tube Baby' Stirs Hope, Debate

OLDHAM, England (AP) — The birth of the first baby conceived outside its mother's body was hailed Wednesday as a major breakthrough for women who cannot normally bear a child. But arrival of the "test tube baby" also was expected to open a fierce debate over the morality of reproducing human life in the laboratory.

The baby girl, nine days premature, was delivered Tuesday by Caesarean section to 30-year-old Lesley Brown, the wife of Gilbert John Brown, 38, of Bristol, a truck driver for British Rail, the state-owned railway system. Britain's National Health Service is paying the medical expenses.

The 5-pound, 12-ounce girl, named Louise, arrived "crying with her head off," doctors at Oldham District General Hospital said. She was described as normal and in "excellent" condition.

"She's so small, so beautiful, so perfect," said Mrs. Brown, sitting in her hospital bed and holding the infant. She was quoted in the Daily Mail, which paid a reputed $601,250 for exclusive rights to the story.

The newspaper ran a front page picture showing a chubby-cheeked, blond-haired child.

The father said his daughter was "beautiful, with a marvelous complexion, not red and wrinkly at all."

Brown told the Mail: "I came out of hospital. It was raining and I just stood in the rain wanting to get wet to try to calm down, my heart was beating so fast."

Brown, who has a 17-year-old daughter by a previous marriage, was described by his cousins as "over the moon with joy."

"I have never seen a man so excited," said a hospital worker. "He was laughing and crying at the same time. Everyone in the hospital has a smile on their face today. All he would say was, 'It's fantastic, unbelievable!'"

Millions may get the chance to see the baby girl being born. Film of the birth was made by Britain's Central Office of Information, and press reports said it would be made available to television.

Dr. Patrick Steptoe, 59, the leading British gynecologist who pioneered the procedure, objected to suggestions the birth heralds a new age of selective breeding.

"I'm not a wizard or a Frankenstein tampering with nature," Steptoe said. "We are not creating life. We have merely done what many people try to do in all kinds of medicine — to help nature. We found nature could not put an egg

Rain, Sand, Funnels Prowl Across Area

By PAULA TILKER

GRITTY sand that blasted Lubbock late Wednesday quickly became mud in a lashing rain, part of an extensive front that taunted Dickens with funnel clouds and more than an inch of rain in an hour.

Tahoka also received more than an inch of rain in a short period. Marble-sized hail reportedly caused some crop damage near the Lynn County community.

Dickens County Sheriff Bill Stone reported sighting a couple of funnel clouds. They did not touch down, he said.

Farm Roads Flooded
The sheriff and Department of Public Safety officials also reported flooding on farm roads and in low-lying areas as more than an inch of rain inundated the county shortly after 8 p.m. About .25 of an inch fell in 20 minutes.

No hail accompanied the storm, and no wind damage was reported.

Lubbock's weather problems flared shortly after Dickens as the ragged edge of the front pushed blowing dust before it. The dust reduced surface visibility to about a quarter of a mile in East Lubbock and to about a mile in other sections, the National Weather Service said.

The Lubbock Police Department noted no traffic mishaps caused by the reduced visibility.

Lubbock Gets Dusting
The blowing dust spread across Lubbock in less than 30 minutes, propelled by winds that gusted to 33 mph. About an inch of rain was reported south of the city on the Lubbock-Lynn counties line.

As the Lubbock storm advanced on Lynn County, and the wind speeds kicked up to 50 mph, Tahoka patrolmen reported the gusts blew out some windows in the town.

The turbulent activity flared suddenly across the South Plains as a weak cold front that had stalled over the Panhandle earlier in the day marched on the area. It left behind numerous reports of pea-sized hail and locally heavy storms in the Panhandle.

Accompanied by vivid lightning and noisy thunder displays, the front, which eventually stretched from west of Hereford southeasterly through Snyder, dropped rain on some counties and only threatened others.

About .03 of an inch fell between Hereford and Friona, and Tulla recorded .15 of an inch in one hour. Matador's .04 was not enough to put out a pasture fire believed ignited by lightning. The fire department was called out to control the blaze, which caused little damage.

Paducah received about .25 of an inch, while small hail pelted the area south of Hale Center and a cloudburst dampened Plainview.

Less than a quarter inch of rain fell on Guthrie. Floydada had 21 of an inch, and high winds.

The dust that kicked up just northeast of Lubbock blew east through Motley and Dickens counties before settling.

The storms that originated in the Panhandle Wednesday afternoon stretched eastward to Wichita Falls before midnight.

Today's weather will not be a repeat of Wednesday evening's. Skies generally will be fair and the afternoon temperature will reach the low 90s.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The worst of the huge rises in food prices is over and Americans can look forward to relief from the headache of double-digit inflation, President Carter's top economic adviser said Wednesday.

Charles Schultz, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, made no specific prediction on inflation for the remainder of the year.

But he told the Senate Budget Committee he looks for "considerable improvement" over the current annual rate of about 10 percent.

He also said, "The rise of food prices should slow substantially."

School Tax, Salary Decisions Reached

Budget Proposed At $41.35 Million

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AFTER dangling before their constituents a possible 23-cent tax cut, Lubbock school trustees Wednesday tentatively decided to reduce their rate only 18 cents.

And after raising teachers' hopes for 10 percent pay hikes, the school board again retreated — trimming the proposed salary increases one to four percentage points.

The result, said board president Charles Waters, was a compromise between "conflicting interests": relief-minded taxpayers versus salary-minded employees.

Compromise Reached

"We probably didn't cut the tax rate as much as taxpayers want, and we didn't raise salaries as much as teachers want," Waters said. He added: "This is the most difficult budget I've ever been through."

Compromise was evident in the divided nature of the school board's votes. Waters and ex-teacher Lynn Stafford voted against down-scaling the pay hikes; Harold Harriger and Mrs. Stafford voted against down-scaling the tax cut.

The product was a $41.35 million local operating budget that, in Waters' words, "includes something for everybody."

The budget still is tentative. Superintendent Ed Irons said a public hearing probably will be held next month after the city-school tax office has produced a final tax roll.

More Tax Relief Possible

If the actual roll is higher than the estimate plugged into the budget, some trustees indicated they may push for additional tax relief.

On Monday, Irons presented the school board with a proposed local operating budget of $41.3 million for the 1978-79 school year. That represented a 7.6 percent increase over the previous year.

The major increase in Irons' proposal was for salaries. Under his plan, the school system would pass on to teachers a slight increase in state base salaries ($90 to $150 each); teachers would go up a step on the experience ladder ($280 to $380, mostly from the state); and the district's "local increment" — a supplement to the state minimums — would be increased $200 to $300 per teacher.

In effect, most teachers would have received under Irons' plan pay hikes of about 7 percent — 4.5 percent from the state, 2.5 from local funds.

Budget Hike Asked

On Tuesday, Mrs. Stafford proposed that the budget be increased to about $42 million, so that teachers could get an extra $300 each. Harriger fought to hold the budget to $41.5 million.

The school board compromised: it instructed Irons to come up with a $41.5 million budget that included pay hikes close to what Mrs. Stafford suggested — around 10 percent, instead of the originally budgeted 7 percent.

On Wednesday, Irons revealed his plan. By making various cuts within the original budget, he freed up enough money to give teachers with four or more years' experience the extra $300 Mrs. Stafford proposed.

Irons also illustrated how, by using their reserves, trustees could reduce the district's tax rate by 23 cents — the magnitude Mrs. Stafford and other school board members were kicking around.

On a motion by Harriger, the board voted 5-2 to trim the extra $300 raises to $225. This reduced the overall budget from $41.5 million to $41.35 million, and put more money back in reserves.

Then, in addressing tax rates and budget reserves, the board decided not to cut its reserves as low as once proposed. The district's 27-cent debt service tax rate was cut to 20 cents, instead of 15 cents; the district's maintenance and operations tax was cut from $1.31 to $1.20 (but leaving in reserves the money earlier marked for pay hikes).

Trustees and administrators had feared that cutting the debt service tax below 20 cents — Harriger was holding out for 18 cents — eventually would necessitate a tax hike once the district gets court approval to sell bonds authorized by voters last year.

The board ended up giving low-experienced teachers raises of 6-7 percent; middle-experienced teachers 9-10 percent; and top-experienced teachers (who can't move up a step) about 5 percent.

The cut in the tax rate represents an overall reduction of about 11.3 percent. However, Harriger noted "that's not such a big cut when you've got a 50 percent increase in your property valuation," as experienced by homeowners in the city's recently reappraised southwest quadrant.

New Tax Rate May Snip $43 Off $40,000 Home

LUBBOCK school trustees have proposed cutting their per-$100 tax rate from $1.58 to $1.40. Here is an explanation how that would affect taxes on a $40,000 home.

The school system assesses property for tax purposes at 60 percent of its value. Thus, a home last appraised at $40,000 is being taxed at an assessed value of $24,000.

At the old tax rate of $1.58 per $100 assessed value, school taxes on that home would have been $379 a year. Under the proposed rate of $1.40 per $100 assessed value, taxes would be only $336.

That represents a tax decrease of $43, or 11.3 percent, on a $40,000 home. Most homeowners pay their property taxes through their monthly mortgage bills. As a result, the $43 cut would be spread over 12 monthly mortgage payments — meaning a savings of about $3.60 in each mortgage bill.

For most parts of Lubbock, the school tax cut would be an actual savings. But in the city's southwest — where residential property has just been revalued for the first time since 1973-74 — it is a different story.

Assessed values of southwest homes are going up an average of 50 percent. Under the school board's proposal, instead of increasing by the same proportion, school taxes will rise only about 33 percent for those homeowners.

City Sign Ordinance Supported By Court

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE CITY'S controversial sign ordinance, enacted in mid-July of 1975 and challenged in court soon after by the Lubbock Poster Co., has been declared valid by the Seventh Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

Writing for the court, Justice Carlton B. Dodson said Monday the "challenged provisions of the ordinance constitute a constitutionally valid exercise of the City of Lubbock's police power."

Plaintiffs Iva Edington and Homer L. Hensley, co-owners of the Lubbock Poster Co., a billboard agency, contended in their original suit filed in Sept. 1975 that the ordinance deprived them of due process, denied freedom of speech to non-commercial advertisers and amounted to seizure of company property without just compensation.

Enforcement Halt Asked
At the time the suit was filed the plaintiffs asked the court to enjoin the City of Lubbock from enforcing any provisions of the sign ordinance until the issue was settled.

In their suit the partners contended the ordinance—which set guidelines on the location, erection, construction, reconstruction, alteration and use of buildings, structures, etc.—would through its economic impact destroy the company.

The original non-jury suit was tried in Judge William Shaver's 140th District courtroom in May 1975 and was not concluded for 10 days.

Eight Days Of Testimony
Eight days of actual testimony and a string of witnesses from the city and nation paraded to the stand during the trial.

The trial culminated with Judge Shaver declaring a portion of the ordinance, that section dealing with the "nonconforming use and amortization provisions," void. That appealed the billboard company.

However, the dual nature of the judgment satisfied neither the city nor Lubbock Poster Co. and both parties subsequently appealed.

The city wished those provisions ruled void by Shaver to be affirmed by an appellate court, while Lubbock Poster Co. owners wanted the entire billboard section of the ordinance voided, which the trial court did not do.

The most recent judgment means the city's provision relating to "nonconforming use and amortization" has been affirmed, as has the balance of the sign ordinance.

The combined aspects of the court's decision amounts to a total victory at the appellate level for the city.

However, a higher appeal is a virtual certainty, observers say.

Under the proposed sign ordinance, the city would give companies a 6 1/2-year

Income Tax Ban Voted By House

AUSTIN (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to outlaw personal and corporation income taxes and to exempt one car per family from property taxes.

Both decisions added new provisions to a property tax relief package of constitutional amendments that represents a weakened version of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's recommendations.

To reach the Senate, the package must get 100 votes. Any constitutional amendment that receives a two-thirds vote in both chambers will be submitted to the voters Nov. 7.

House members worked on the package (HJR) for about seven hours Wednesday but adjourned until this morning. More than two dozen proposed changes or additions await action.

An amendment by Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, to exempt one car per family from property taxation was approved on voice vote after an attempt to table it failed, 89-47.

"Tax collectors spend more time chasing people to pay this tax than they do collecting it. . . This is an exemption for

Improvement Seen In Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The worst of the huge rises in food prices is over and Americans can look forward to relief from the headache of double-digit inflation, President Carter's top economic adviser said Wednesday.

Charles Schultz, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, made no specific prediction on inflation for the remainder of the year.

But he told the Senate Budget Committee he looks for "considerable improvement" over the current annual rate of about 10 percent.

He also said, "The rise of food prices should slow substantially."

A second top government economist, Congressional Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin, also said inflation should moderate somewhat during the second half of the year.

Even so, she predicted inflation for the year will be between 6.8 and 7.8 percent — "substantially" above last year's figure of 6.5 percent. Prices will continue to rise next year, but not as swiftly, she said.

Looking ahead to 1979, she said no "shocks" in food prices similar to this year's rise is expected.

Inflation has been rising at an annual rate of about 10 percent for the past several months, fueled in part by huge increases in food prices. The rise in prices, coupled with a sharp decline in unemployment, has prompted the Carter administration to label inflation its No. 1 economic problem.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported good anti-inflation news when it announced a sharp drop in the U.S. balance of trade deficit for June.

The department said U.S. businesses sold a record $12.1 billion in products to other countries as the monthly trade deficit fell to $1.6 billion, the smallest in more than a year. The deficit was $2.2 billion in May and $2.9 billion in April.

The news was encouraging because a growing trade gap contributes to inflation at home and the decline of the dollar overseas.

Schultz termed the balance of trade information "unusually good news."

The president's chief economist noted that the prices consumers pay for food shot up at an annual rate of 18.5 percent between December and May, but said relief is on its way.

"Cattle prices are below their earlier peak levels. Moreover, strong production of poultry and increased output of pork in the second half are expected to moderate the rate of meat prices for the remainder of 1978," the economist said.

In addition, he said, "Vegetable supplies should increase significantly as the summer crops are harvested, and prices of some of them should decline."

Both Schultz and Miss Rivlin told the Senate panel Wednesday that they do not expect an economic recession in the next 18 months, despite predictions of some private economists that one is imminent.

Schultz said the administration is anticipating a growth of the Gross National Product of between 3.5 and 4 percent this year and about 4 percent in 1979.

Reese Training Rigorous, Thorough

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff
Winning wings at Reese Air Force Base is more than qualifying for a job. With the wings comes the gift of the deep blue sky and the right to fly through it.
"Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth and danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings," wrote John Gillespie Magee Jr. in "High Flight," wherein he described some of the side benefits of sending the supersonic jet through "footless halls of space" to "join the tumbling mirth of sun-split clouds."

Joy at the gift of "the high untrespassed sanctity of space" glows in the face of the instructor pilot on the giving end and the student pilot as the recipient. The joy and freedom of flying keeps the purpose steady through the rigorous training of the student in undergraduate pilot training.

The program is much like a two-week short course that lasts all year — concentrated, demanding, all-consuming, intensified study.
Twelve hours a day five days a week make up the required instruction, with that time expanded as needed to fulfill course requirements within a 50-week limit.

Outside the 12 hours of supervised instruction comes the individual's study — two or three hours extra a day plus half the weekend.
Into this program at Reese come about 300 students a year, so dedicated and so qualified that few fall by the wayside in the modern rate of competition for the training slots.

Into the newest class came Reza Pahlavi, crown prince of Iran, and five other Iranian cadets to meet the same pace set for other student pilots.
And, into this same system in the fall will come Reese's first women student pilots to face and meet the same standards set for men winning silver wings at graduation.
"It's a very intense program of study," says Maj. Art Christie, who heads the academic section.
There is no college effort with which it can be compared, he added, because the individual "is called upon continually to perform."
The flight line, where actual flying instruction is underway, has the lion's share of the student's time: Christie schedules "none to three hours a day classroom time, depending on what phase of training the student is in on the flight line."
Scheduling for each class, done by Christie before a group begins, sticks closer to the original syllabus with the new instrument flight simulators. Little rescheduling is necessary now because of weather.
Training comes under three squadrons — the 64th Student Squadron for academics, the 35th Flying Training Squadron for the T37 Tweet basic jet and the 54th Flying Training Squadron for the supersonic T38 Talon.
In the classroom, the student learns all about his aircraft and its systems, then goes to the flight line for practical application of book knowledge.

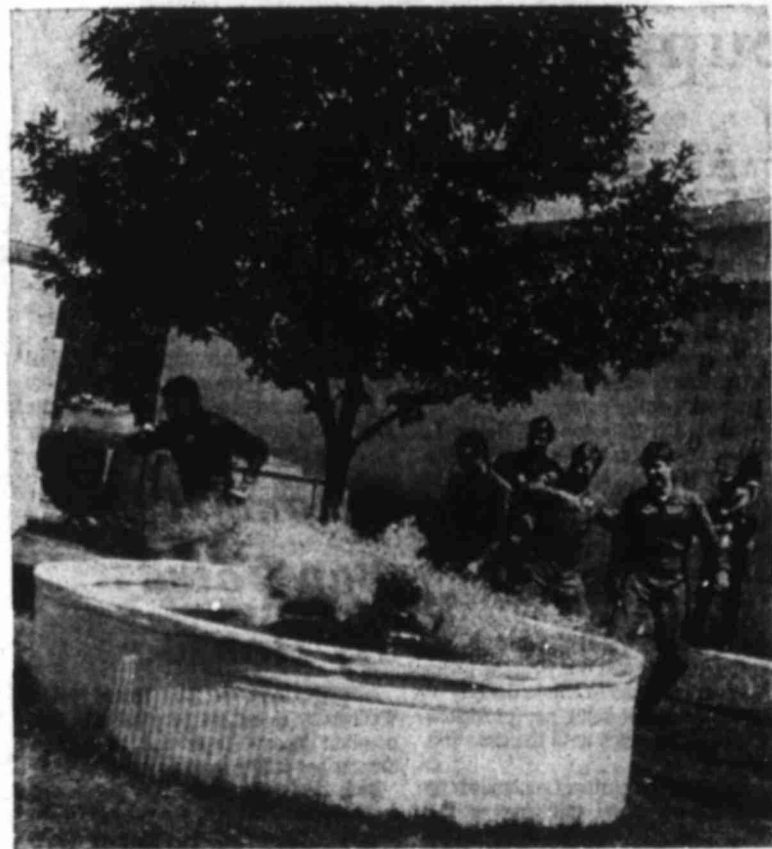

A student receives 70 actual flying hours in the T37 and 98 in the T38 along with 35.2 hours in the T37 simulator and 38.4 in the T38 simulator.
In addition, there are all the preflight and postflight details.
In his 180 hours in the classroom, the student pilot learns, from instructor pilots — doubling as academic professors — about electronics, aerodynamics, instruments, navigation, weather, hydraulics, air conditioning and more.
In the Aerospace Physiology Training Unit he experiences the sensations of oxygen and flight changes in body senses, learns to trust his instruments when his mind says otherwise and practices ejecting and controlling his parachute.
Each phase of training has its classroom time and its practical application on the flight line.
To help develop personal continual approaches to physical fitness, 103 hours are set aside for physical training, a part of the 12 hours daily "filled to the brim" with scheduled happenings.
In addition to the individual sports and team activities during the duty day, there are volunteer intramural games after hours which involve all base personnel, not just students.
If all goes well, a student day of instruction begins at 7:15 a.m. and ends at 6:50 p.m. with a few minutes snatched, according to the day's schedule, for lunch.
If all does not go well for any reason, the days get longer and weekends get involved so the student will win his wings as scheduled 50 weeks after he comes in the Reese gate.
Classes begin and graduations occur each six weeks.

AN EDITORIAL:

Peace And A Grain Of Sand

IT SHOULD BE obvious by now to just about everyone, except perhaps Washington, that some new approach will be necessary to get the stalled Mideast Peace talks off dead center.

The approach just as obviously, unless there is a major change of heart on both sides, must revolve around two issues which have been there all along—the West Bank problem, and how to give iron-clad guarantees for Israel's future security.

Anything else pales by comparison, although return of the Sinai and how to handle those Israeli settlements are thorns in any final arrangement.

BASICALLY, THE Israeli government wants to put off any final decision on the occupied territories for at least five years after a peace agreement is signed.

Egypt, on the other hand, is seeking some sort of symbolic gesture on the part of Israel, a gesture which is not to be forthcoming if Prime Minister Begin's latest "not a single grain of sand" stand is maintained.

As a followup to what appeared a "no compromise" position, Begin reportedly made an overture to Egypt's President Sadat for a resumption of summit talks between the two leaders, a bid seemingly rejected by Sadat.

IN THE MEANTIME, the U.S., seeking to play the role of mediator in the bogged-down talks, is stepping back into the picture.

In the wake of several days of shuttle meetings by lesser State Department officials, U.S. Sec. of State Vance will go to the Mideast in a few days to lend Washington's prestige to efforts to resolve the increasingly vitriolic views of both sides.

His task will not be an easy one. The secretary, in an appearance last Sunday on a nationwide talk program, made it clear the U.S. thinks Israel must eventually give up much, if not all, of the occupied territories.

Falling back on the controversial UN Resolution 242, Sec. Vance argued that Israel in effect had no claim to the lands, Sinai, West Bank and Golan Heights. But, it was the Sinai and West Bank which were in the spotlight.

Part of the problem all along has been that the Carter administration has sought to impose its will, and therefore Made-in-America settlement on Israel, without really offering those peace and territorial guarantees which Jerusalem says are "musts" to any settlement.

PRESIDENT CARTER himself has often muddled the Mideast sands with his ambiguous and vacillating statements on the PLO and a Palestinian homeland. There are those who say had the U.S. left Mr. Begin and Mr. Sadat to themselves, just maybe they might have come to terms of some sort.

While not that optimistic by any means, we do think that the Carter State Department is most naive if it thinks it can force any sort of settlement on Israel which doesn't take into account—from the Jewish standpoint—continued nominal control of the West Bank and especially Jerusalem, and some sort of "buffer" land or settlements in the Sinai. Anything less would be, rightly, seen as a major gamble by the Israelis.

Not Now, I'm Out Of Energy

CONSERVATION HAS always seemed the simplest and easiest way out of dependence on imported oil.

If America could just consume less energy, it would buy the time needed to develop alternatives to a petroleum-based economy.

Everybody seems to favor energy conservation—in principle. But conservation has turned out to be easier to praise than to practice.

SOME 75 ENERGY experts from around the nation gathered at New England College in Henniker, N.H., this week to discuss "the economic impact of energy conservation."

Sponsors include the Engineering Foundation and the House Subcommittee on Advanced Energy Technologies and Energy Conservation. Conferees represent government, industry and the academic community, according to news accounts.

Keynote speakers noted-how, for example, the auto industry favors peak-load pricing for electrical use—highest user rates when the demand is greatest. But it doesn't care for gas-guzzler taxes.

Does Andy Young Speak With 'Tacit' Approval?

WASHINGTON—Despite the impression that Ambassador Andrew Young has backed off his statement about political prisoners in the United States, Young in fact has retracted nothing.

What our outspoken UN envoy has actually said is that he regrets the timing and impact of his statement but not the statement itself.

Indeed, he has reiterated the essence of the comment and promised to give us more of the same in the future.

"I didn't overestimate the number of people," he says.

IT WAS A CASUAL statement which perhaps should not have been made, especially at this time, and I'm reluctant to discuss it now.

"But I assure you that I'll come back to the question of what is a political prisoner in the United States."

Thus Young has in no way repudiated the substance of the statement he made to the French newspaper "Le Matin."

In that interview, he minimized the significance of the Soviet trials of Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg which, he said, "will not prevent the continuation of the SALT talks."

Besides, he added, "We don't know what will become of the dissidents. After all, in our prisons there are also hundreds, maybe even thousands of people I would call political prisoners."

THESE REMARKS, equating justice in the United States with repression in the Soviet Union, neatly undercut the effort of the U.S. government to focus world opinion on the show trials of the dissidents.

As a result, it was widely reported that President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance CONFEREES SAID the electric utilities provide a good example of how conservation in one sector can lead to bankruptcy in a related one.

If demand for electricity were to slow down substantially, the equations the utilities use to justify spending billions on new generating plants would change.

If the changes were large, construction plans might have to be scrapped—which, according to several studies, is precisely what happened with nuclear power.

Things aren't as bad as they seem; they're worse.

Bishop On His Knees

WASHINGTON—Bishop Abel Muzorewa, undoubtedly Rhodesia's most popular political figure, was in a state of distraught perplexity last week when he confided with U.S. policy on Africa as crafted by Andrew Young.

Muzorewa was not surprised by the cold-shouldered treatment from administration officials during his visit to Washington, even though he is the most important black in the biracial Rhodesian transitional government.

What baffled the bishop was insistence on keeping economic sanctions against Rhodesia even though the white minority regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith finally has accepted black majority rule.

ANDREW TULLY:

Black In A Corner

WASHINGTON—One critical comment on the activities of Andrew Young—whether he is still our Ambassador to the United Nations as this is read—is that he has fallen into the trap that catches so many of our public figures.

Where cool objectivity is called for, Young is too subjective. Young's thinking is too much flavored by the color of his skin.

It is not that Young can't forget he is black. He would be less than human if he failed to do so. Indeed, Winston Churchill could not shake off a certain patronizing down-the-nose attitude toward foreign statesmen whom he saw as inferior because they weren't British.

BUT CHURCHILL WAS never obsessed by his prejudices to the point that he let them interfere with his pursuit of British interests. He detested many public men. But he did business with all of them—even, for a time, extending his pragmatic politesse to Adolf Hitler—because he was trying to get the best deal he could for his country.

But Young is guilty of blind provincialism. His gaffes are entirely emotional. When he speaks of "hundreds, perhaps even thousands, of American political prisoners," he is speaking from his background as a black civil rights activist who paid his dues in a number of jail cells.

But more harmful than Young's equation of American justice with the lack of due process in the Soviet Union, is his influence on American policy in Africa.

AN EXAMPLE IS provided by the situation in Rhodesia. Two groups there are competing for power.

Group 1 is avowedly Communist. It is pro-Soviet and pro-Cuban, supported and trained by Russian and Cuban "technicians."

It has rejected free elections and has announced that its goal is the establishment of a Communist dictatorship that would drive out of the country the whites who have a monopoly on Rhodesia's managerial and technical skills.

Group 2 is to a considerable extent Western-oriented. It is committed to free elections and representative government.

It wants the whites, with their skills and general competence, to stay on so that the new regime will benefit from their educational, economic and financial resources.

Group 2 wants nothing to do with the Russians and Cubans except on the proper level of diplomatic relations.

AND YET THE Carter administration is supporting Group 1. And the reason is found in Andrew Young's inordinate, brother-to-brother influence on his old friend and ally, Jimmy Carter.

Against the advice of Secretary of State Vance and other professionals, Carter has bought a Young package that would destroy Rhodesia's economy and probably make it a long-term protégé of the Soviet Union and its dirty-tricks surrogate in Havana.

More than any other American official, Andrew Young should be fighting to make diplomacy, as well as justice, colorblind. Instead, he has thrown his support to a Rhodesian faction that in effect has declared war on people with white skins.

Young's pride in his blackness is both refreshing and praiseworthy, but he has tarnished that pride by seeming to argue that the time has come for blacks everywhere to savor a little revenge for their past sufferings.

They Call It Iran...

WHAT SORT OF place is Iran, the nation about which so much has been spoken in recent days?

Well, first, it is a "never never" land located some 8,500 miles almost due east of Lubbock, give or take a little, as the crow and jets fly.

Iran, until 1935, was better known as Persia. And it was under that name that its ancient past and part of its present was written. And like so many other Mideast and Near East kingdoms, it has had its share on the stage of world history, both bloody and colorful.

In countless tents and across miles of its burning sands, in its castles and along its multi-faceted borders, there has been enough intrigue, romance and riches to draw the envy of past conquerors as well as today's great powers.

TODAY, IRAN is one of the major suppliers of oil to the U.S. and Free World.

It also boasts one of the most powerful military machines in the area, and is a growing industrial giant, an emerging nation in the so-called Third World and a pro-western buffer against its northern neighbor, Soviet Russia.

In many ways, Iran—with its ruler, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi—is one of the most important nations in that part of the world. A study of its geopolitical status easily shows why...

The country is located in an area more or less straddling the Caspian Sea on the north, sharing a border on each side with Russia.

On the east is Afghanistan and Pakistan, on the west, Iraq and Turkey, and on the south, the vital Persian Gulf and the Gulf of Oman, key gateways to the Indian Ocean.

IRAN IS A country of some 636,296 square miles.

It has a population, estimated in 1977, at 34.8 million, made up of Iranians, Kurdish and Azerbaijani people, according to Information Please Almanac.

The capital is Teheran, a metropolis of four million. Other cities include Isfahan with 700,000, Mashhad, 600,000, and Tabriz, 510,000. The rural areas are sparsely populated, population density being 54.7 to the square mile.

Its monetary unit is the Rial. Languages include Farsi (Persian), Kurdish, Azerbaijani. The religion is Shi'ite Moslem, 93 percent, and Sunni Moslem, 5 percent.

The country has a constitutional monarchy, with the Shah exercising the powers of the head of a parliamentary state. Executive power is handled by a Cabinet, headed by the Premier, named by the Shah, but who is responsible to Parliament.

THE LOWER house of Parliament, or Majlis, is made up of 268 popularly elected members. The upper house, or Senate, has 60 members, half of them named by the Shah.

The nation has a one-party rule, imposed March 2, 1975. And although there are opposition voices in Parliament, as well as the streets these days, the Shah is the supreme ruler.

The nation's history is intriguing. After being ruled by the Assyrians, Median and Achaemenid empires, Persia first became a powerful empire under Cyrus the Great, its reign reaching from the Indus to the Nile at its peak in 525 BC. In succeeding times, Persia fell to Alexander, the Seleucids, the Arabs, Mongols and Turks.

In 1907, an Anglo-Russian pact divided Iran into two spheres of influence. British efforts to impose a protectorate over Iran were blocked in 1919. And on Feb. 26, 1921, Gen. Reza Pahlavi seized the government and was named hereditary Shah in 1925, thus setting the stage for the current regime.

IN WORLD WAR II, the increased Axis role in the area, with Iran's tacit approval, brought on an Anglo-Russian occupation.

In August 1941, the Allied forces moved in and deposed the Shah in favor of his son, the current ruler, Ali Razmara became Premier June 26, 1950, and pledged an efficient and honest government. But he was slain in March 1951.

At that point, Mohammed Mossadegh took over and Parliament finished nationalizing the oil industry, much to Britain's chagrin. Mossadegh was kicked out Aug. 19, 1953 by Fazlollah Zahedi, whom the Shah had appointed as Premier. A year later the oil dispute was settled.

It was at that point that the U.S. and the Western nations started a vast program of economic and military aid to Iran. It was in 1955 that Iran joined the Central Treaty Organization, then known as the Baghdad Pact.

It was at this time that the Shah pushed a broad program of reform, including agrarian land changes in which some crown lands and estates were distributed to landless peasants.

HOWEVER, it also was at this point in time that the seeds were sown for much of the current controversy.

The Iranian students, as well as guerrilla forces and others inside Iran, claim that the U.S., with the use of the CIA and massive sums of money, paved the way for the downfall of Mossadegh and the strengthening of the Shah's hand.

Iran, a non-Arab Moslem nation, has not participated in the efforts to strangle Israel, nor did Iran take part in the 1973 Oil Embargo against the West. Currently, Iran is one of the largest purchasers of sophisticated military weapons from the U.S., including jet fighters. The country was among nations cited by the U.S. in January 1977 for the abuse of human rights, but continued arms sales were justified because of its strategic position.

Iran is the gateway from Europe and the Mideast to Asia, and it blocks Russia's longtime dream of a path to the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean. Hopefully, with its oil wealth and its rulers exposed to the West, its peoples gradually will share more and more in its role in the industrialized world. However, it will not be done through mob action 8,500 miles away.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

MANY FARMERS HESITATE TO TREAT for cotton bollworms this early because they want to save their beneficial insects and avoid the risk of a costly season-long spray program.

There are several biological insecticides available which will kill worms without hurting predators.

"But we still don't have enough data to give endorsement of these materials," says James F. Leser, area extension entomologist.

Three materials are registered for use on cotton which have a bacteria as an active ingredient and another has a nuclear polyhedrosis virus. These include Bactur, Dipe and Thuricide and the virus Elcar.

"BEST RESULTS HAVE BEEN OBTAINED against early infestations which are light to moderate and in which the target is small worms," Leser says. "Timing the application at egg hatch would be ideal."

Results have been highly variable to date, but Leser says effectiveness probably can be enhanced if these suggestions are followed:

- Apply against small worms only.
- Use three to five gallons of water per acre if flown on or 15 to 20 gallons if applied with a ground rig.
- Use a spreader-sticker such as Biver.
- Apply late in the day when the temperature drops below 95 degrees.
- Apply close to or after dark if possible.
- Turn off sprinklers for six to 12 hours if possible to prevent wash off.
- Do not apply in the face of a heavy egg lay and expect control unless large numbers of beneficials are present.

"THESE MICROBIAL INSECTICIDES probably can be used to give at least 30 percent control of small worms — maybe more — if applied properly," Leser says. "Used in conjunction with beneficials, overall control may be satisfactory."

Don't expect a quick knock down, the entomologist advises. Worms stop feeding soon after ingesting the material, he says, but won't die for one to four days. He advises checking for results about 72 hours after treatment.

Meanwhile, scattered infestations of beet armyworms continue to be reported. These infestations tend to be spotty and probably shouldn't be treated, Leser says.

Cotton fleahoppers have shown an increase and in some cases fields have required treatment. Older cotton probably is beyond the fleahopper damage stage and can take more than 15-25 percent damaged pinhead-sized squares and 25-50 hoppers per 100 terminals before a decision to control needs to be made, Leser says.

"Later-planted cotton and cotton under moisture stress probably cannot tolerate this many fleahoppers and may need to be treated sooner," he says. He adds, however, that producers should take care to avoid creating a bollworm problem.

High Plains Cotton

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow on Wednesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy but demand was light.

Growers sold mixed lots at 87.5 to 1200 points over loan rates.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations remained unchanged.

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9, in mixed lots, unprocessed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Price trend: steady on Wednesday.

Test-Tube Baby Raises Complex Issues

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal ethics advisory board will begin gathering information next month on complicated "test-tube baby" issues that include the discarding of fertilized eggs, donor eggs and even the question of using another woman's womb to carry a baby.

"I feel fairly clear there will be a marked increase in requests for this procedure from couples whose marriage is sterile," the Rev. Richard McCormick said Wednesday. "There should also be a marked increase in requests for federal funds for research."

McCormick, a professor of biological ethics at Georgetown University in Washington, is a member of the new federal Ethics Advisory Board, which will meet formally in September.

"This is the first project we're going to undertake," he said. "The staff will begin to gather background information in August."

One of the many thorny questions that will be examined, McCormick said, is that of discards, embryos grown in the test tube but not implanted.

"What happens to the embryos which are discarded at the end of the day — washed down the sink?" one scientist has written. "There would necessarily be many. Would this amount to abortion — or to murder? We have no law to cope with this kind of situation."

"Who decides what are the grounds for discard?" said another bioethics specialist who did not want to be named. "What if there is another recipient available who wished to have the otherwise unwanted embryo? Whose embryos are they? The woman's? The couple's? The geneticist's? The obstetrician's?"

"Another question," said McCormick, "is where do you stop? If there is no serious moral objection to donor eggs, then do you take the next exotic step and use a host womb?" The bioethics specialist called this "womb rental."

With all the questions, it is not clear when test-tube births might take place in the United States, where perhaps 10 percent of married women who want to become pregnant are unable to.

One leading specialist on reproductive biology, Dr. Carl Pauerstein of the University of Texas Health and Science Center in San Antonio, said he could not hazard a guess.

"It can be done here technically, I'm sure," Pauerstein said. "But in our country, we're concerned about the unknown possibilities... We're concerned that we might induce some congenital defects in the baby... I think that's one of the reasons for the moratorium imposed by the National Institutes of Health on funding such work."

Test-tube baby research has been curtailed in this country since 1975 when federal funding was barred unless the projects are approved by the Ethics Advisory Board.

Established in 1975, the board had no members until last fall when HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. selected 12 persons from various fields, including medicine, law and education. Two others are still to be named.

Just before midnight Tuesday, Lesley Brown gave birth by Caesarean section to a 5-pound, 12-ounce girl in Oldham, England. The baby, conceived by removing an egg from one of Mrs. Brown's ovaries and fertilizing it in a laboratory, is believed to be the world's first "test-tube baby."

Newspaper's Earnings Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post Co., publisher of newspapers, magazines and books, Wednesday reported second-quarter earnings of $17.2 million, or $2.11 a share, up from $10.8 million, or $1.28 a share, for the same period last year.

The earnings figure includes non-recurring gains of about $3.8 million, or 46 cents a share, from the sale of property.

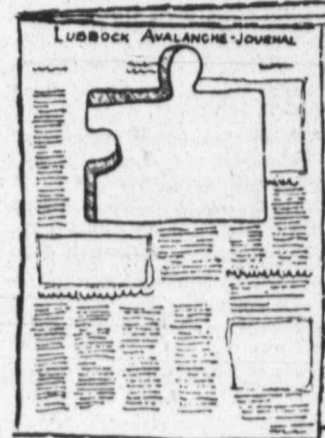

Asked if the English doctors had merely been lucky, Pauerstein said, "While that's a possibility, from the very strong rumors coming out of Cambridge about women in various stages of pregnancy, I would guess that they have achieved some methodological breakthrough. In other words, I don't think it was a lucky shot, but a change in methodology."

The company had revenue of $135.1 million in the latest quarter compared to $113 million last year. The company publishes The Washington Post and newspapers in Trenton, N.J., has broadcast outlets in Connecticut and Florida and publishes Newsweek magazine and Newsweek books.

Korea Truce Tenuous 25 Years Later

SEOUL (AP) — A quarter century after the armistice was signed in the bloody, three-year Korean War, officially it is still only a temporary truce: no formal treaty binds North Korea and South Korea.

One factor which South Korea and many U.S. military men assist helps maintain the fragile peace, agreed to on July 27, 1953, is the continuing presence of 40,000 U.S. troops. President Carter says he intends to pull out up to 32,000 troops over four to five years, although Congress has been closely examining his withdrawal plans.

In the past 12 months, there have been no major clashes along the 136-mile demilitarized zone that stretches across the waist of the strategic peninsula bordering China and pointing toward Japan.

But on each side, men and arms guard against some of the skirmishes which have marred the armistice in the past.

Fifty-two Americans have died in clashes since the armistice was signed and tensions along the frontier remain potentially explosive. North Korea keeps up its daily denunciation of the "puppet clique" of President Park Chung-hee in the South, and calls for the immediate and complete withdrawal of "American imperialist" forces.

The official North Korean News agency, in a dispatch from Pyongyang Wednesday, described the anniversary as commemorating a great victory over the "imperialists."

Anti-Communist South Korea points out President Kim Il-sung has never renounced his intention to unify the peninsula under a Communist government and says the Americans are essential to its security.

When the Korean War broke out on June 25, 1950, the United States was the prime mover among 16 United Nations allies that sent in troops to help the South repel the invasion from the North.

Now, 25 years later, there still is a U.N. command, headed by the United States. Formal armistice commission meetings are held at the truce village of Panmunjom to deal with charges of violations. The U.N. Command has accused North Korea of 42,883 since the armistice was signed. The North has charged the U.N. side with 217,171.

But sources here say they see no signs of deterioration of the truce or of an imminent attack from the North.

One American official here, who declined to be named, said there have been subtle changes, "slight improvements," on the part of the Pyongyang regime in its relations with the U.N. command. He said it was possible Kim Il-sung did not want to harm Carter's withdrawal plans.

South Korea's growing strength — military, economic and political — is seen as another stabilizing force in area.

The South has an army of about 520,000 men and the North 440,000. North Korea is regarded as having an edge in air and naval strength, but these gaps are filled by American support.

On the economic front, South Korea is rated far ahead of North Korea. The South's gross national product jumped from $3.6 billion in 1966 to $31.4 billion in 1977, averaging an annual growth rate of 10 percent. The nation's booming exports rose to $10 billion in 1977 from $3 billion in 1961 when Park Chung-hee came to power in a bloodless coup.

Recently reelected to a six-year term, Park's political position is firm, although his rule has come under criticism, sometimes at home and often from abroad. Charges of alleged Korean influence buying in Washington and of violations of human rights in South Korea have put strains on the relationship between Seoul and the United States.

In the North, Kim Il-sung has at times sought to drive a wedge between Seoul and Washington, proposing to end the state of war by concluding a peace treaty between North Korea and the United States but excluding the South.

Such suggestions have been rejected and the armistice goes on.

Labeled Insulation Data Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home insulation buyers would get information on labels and in advertising about how effective the product is under a recommendation Wednesday by the Federal Trade Commission staff.

The key part of the proposal, to be voted on this year by the five-member commission, would require disclosure of the R-value of the insulation. The R-value, a measure of an insulation's ability to retain heat, permits the consumer to compare the performance of insulation products.

The recommended rule would be in addition to a law signed by President Carter earlier this month that applies a federal safety standard to cellulose home insulation, one of the major types. Cellulose insulation has been linked to fire hazards.

In addition to R-value, the FTC staff recommendation would require disclosure of the coverage area, the thickness and an explanation of what R-value means.

The federal interest in home insulation is increasing as the product gains popularity, in part because Carter has proposed tax breaks for installation of insulation.

To ensure that the R-values are accurate, the rule would require that insulation be tested under procedures developed by the American Society of Testing and Materials, a voluntary standards-setting organization.

R-value is a measurement of the ability of insulation to resist heat-flow. The greater the R-value, the less mixing there is between warm and cool air and the lower heating and cooling costs are. Sometimes the R-value reveals that one kind of insulation is more effective than another that is thicker.

Manufacturers, retailers, new-home sellors and insulation installers would be required to provide fact sheets to consumers explaining R-values and how to decide how much to buy, under the FTC staff proposal.

The staff also recommended that insulation advertisements that state a price, thickness or an energy savings would also have to tell the R-value and explain what R-values are. Any ad giving an R-value would also have to state the thickness needed to attain it.

Dollar savings claims would be prohibited because the staff said they are "inherently deceptive." Climate and other factors vary so much that these claims cannot be accurate, the staff said.

The recommended rule covers insulation sold for use in homes, apartments and other residential dwellings. Insulation sold to do-it-yourself installers as well as professionals would be covered.

U.S. Gasoline Stocks Drop During July

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's inventories of gasoline fell sharply in mid-July, despite continued high production levels, the American Petroleum Institute reported Wednesday.

"People are just driving more," an spokesman for the industry organization said. Gasoline consumption normally rises during the peak of the summer vacation period, but the 4.4 million-barrel decline in the week ended July 21 was higher than typical seasonal drops.

API said gasoline output was 7.5 million barrels daily in the week, down slightly from the record level of 7.7 million barrels a day reached a week earlier.

But gasoline inventories declined sharply to 221.8 million barrels from 226.2 million in the previous week.

Crude oil imports rose in the week ended July 21 to 6.6 million barrels daily from 5.9 million daily a week earlier. API said the increase probably was due to a change in shipping schedules rather than higher domestic demand.

Brewer Planning New Departure In Soft Drinks

ATLANTA (AP) — Beer sales are booming, but Anheuser-Busch Inc. is branching out into the soft drink business with a lightly sweetened beverage aimed at 35-to-55-year-old consumers, its chairman says.

"We think there is a market for another beverage," said August A. Busch III, the 41-year-old head of the brewing company, which is headquartered in St. Louis, Mo.

"People could and do look for another beverage that isn't there today — not a soft drink and not a hard drink. So we are coming out with a drink that is in a different taste direction," he said.

Anheuser-Busch will begin testing the new drink in six weeks, Busch said in an interview here. He declined to reveal the ingredients of the drink. But published reports, which Busch said were close to accurate, have said the beverage is made from ginger and apple juice.

Anheuser-Busch produces Budweiser, Michelob and Natural Light beers. In the first half of this year, the company produced 20 million barrels of beer, an 11.7 percent increase over the same period last year, Busch said.

The executive said he believes now is the time the company should be exploring new markets.

"Unless you keep new things into the hopper all the time, the company won't have things to expand into in later years," he said.

Ex-Nazi Guard To Keep U.S. Citizenship

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A judge ruled Wednesday that 71-year-old Fedor Fedorenko may keep the U.S. citizenship he won by concealing his past as a guard at the Nazi death camp Treblinka.

U.S. District Court Judge Norman C. Roettger said the native Ukrainian had himself been a "victim of Nazi aggression" and ruled that prosecutors failed to prove that Fedorenko committed any atrocities against Jews while at the camp.

Fedorenko, who lives on Miami Beach with Jewish retirees for neighbors, was tried without a jury on a civil charge of lying on his naturalization papers when he became a U.S. citizen in 1949.

He admitted lying in order to come to the United States by claiming to be a Polish farmer who was forced to work as a laborer for the Germans. But he said he lied only to avoid being sent to Soviet-dominated territory and denied that he ever committed any atrocities.

During the emotional trial, held for two days near Fedorenko's old hometown of Waterbury, Conn., and for 13 days here, six Israeli survivors of Treblinka testified that they saw Fedorenko torture and shoot Jewish prisoners. But Roettger said he questioned their credibility and said it was possible some had even been coerced.

The judge said he believed Fedorenko was sincere when he testified that he was a guard only because the Nazis forced

Liberace's Plans

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Liberace has found a home for a personal museum, but there's one obstacle. Someone's living there and doesn't want to move.

The owners of the Austin mansion in Wauwatosa, Wis., agreed Tuesday to sell it to the pianist for between $100,000 and $150,000.

But persons close to the negotiations say the museum's creation depends on whether Abe Smith Austin Jr., 82, a tenant, can be persuaded to leave. His lawyer, Patrick T. Sheedy, says Austin has a legal right to remain in the mansion.

Lawyers will have to settle the issue, and Liberace says he wants Austin treated as gently as his own 85-year-old mother.

Liberace placed his 17 pianos and other personal items on display at his Hollywood mansion several years ago and charged a $5.90 admission fee for adults, $2.40 for children. But it was closed when neighbors complained that the area was not zoned for museums.

him to be one after taking him prisoner.

"The court is firmly convinced that his answers were given guilelessly," Roettger said.

Roettger said Fedorenko's lies on his naturalization papers were not grave enough to warrant his being stripped of his citizenship.

Had Roettger ruled otherwise, Fedorenko could have been deported and forced to stand trial in Europe on war-crimes charges.

Fedorenko is one of a number of persons recently charged by federal officials with falsely concealing Nazi pasts when they entered the United States. Frank Walus, a Polish immigrant, was recently found guilty by a judge in Chicago of lying about alleged activities as a Gestapo agent. He has been stripped of citizenship and is now subject to deportation, but he has appealed the conviction.

Roettger said that if he had been convinced Fedorenko was guilty of atrocities, "there is no doubt that the defendant would not be entitled to citizenship in a country which prides itself on its adherence to principles of equality and human dignity, and whose citizenry largely comprises descendants of immigrants who sought refuge from political oppression."

"However, this court must decide this case on the record before it," he added, "and the strict burden of proof has not been met. Neither is the equitable balance tipped against the defendant by his answers in 1949."

The judge described Fedorenko as a "victim of Nazi aggression, fearful of repatriation, many years and many miles from a home he thought to be empty of his wife and children and longing for a chance in America."

Roettger termed the trial a "Hollywood spectacular" with gruesome testimony, "tearful theatrics" and demonstrators bused to the courthouse to wave signs and yell for Fedorenko's death.

At least two of the elderly witnesses vacillated on their identification and Roettger said, "The record on Fedorenko's conduct 35 years ago is inconclusive."

"The court was convinced the witnesses were discussing the trial among themselves, at least," he said, "and at worst, someone was coaching them."

Fedorenko came to the United States under the Displaced Persons Act, saying he believed his family had been killed in the war. A State Department official said it was common for persons to lie about their county of origin to avoid returning to the Soviet Union.

Fedorenko learned in the 1960s that his family lived through the holocaust and he was even a grandfather. He has since visited his family in Russia.

Resale Probe May Last Into '79

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Attorney Tony Canales said Wednesday a grand jury investigation of allegations that some lower-priced crude oil is being resold as high-priced "new oil" could continue into next year.

"We are not working on a target," he said. "I will not be rushing to return a premature indictment."

Canales first revealed the investigation on June 22, saying attorneys from his office were being aided by FBI agents.

The investigation, he said, focuses on allegations that certain small companies have purchased "old" oil obtained from wells that were producing by 1972 and resold it as "new" oil from wells that began production after 1973.

Under federal two-tier price controls, the so-called old oil sells at about $5.25 while the so-called new oil brings about $11.90 a barrel.

Canales said his use of the word "certain" when referring to the small companies under investigation is important in that "there is nothing wrong with being in the reseller business."

He added, however, that violation of the federal oil pricing regulations is subject to a $5,000 fine and that a five-year prison sentence could be imposed if fraud were proven.

As had been indicated in June, Canales said any prosecution that might develop could be carried out under federal racketeering statutes in that they cover such crimes as bribery and mail fraud.

"I am not sure when we will get an indictment," he said, adding that he is not ready to present a case.

He said one assistant is now assigned to the investigation full-time and another probably will be assigned. He said that as many as six FBI agents are assigned to the probe, and the number could be increased.

He described the investigation as strictly local, saying, "We are in a unique situation in Houston because there are so many oil companies here."

"We are not going to harass the oil companies or anyone else," he said. "It is not against the law to make money." Canales said the situation is quite complicated and that he and his staff are getting an education about some aspects of the oil industry. He said he may have to ask that auditors be brought in to assist in the investigation.

Solon Bows To Panel On Records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward Brooke has turned over records of his financial dealings during the past few years to the Senate Ethics Committee, a committee spokeswoman said Wednesday.

The voluntary turnover followed negotiations between lawyers for Brooke and the committee on how far the panel intends to go in looking into the Massachusetts Republican's financial dealings.

The committee met Wednesday to review the progress of both the Brooke investigation and a similar inquiry into the affairs of Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. Special committee counsel Carl Eardley advised committee members that a final report on Talmadge's financial affairs should be complete "in the near future."

In the Brooke matter, the committee is looking into a broad range of alleged financial irregularities, most of them disclosed during an acrimonious divorce settlement in Massachusetts courts.

Among them is Brooke's admittedly misstated declaration under oath that he owed $49,000 to a Boston businessman when in fact the size of the loan was $2,000.

In an official report to the Senate, Brooke listed no loans. Debts over $5,000 are required to be reported under Senate rules.

Members of Brooke's family suggested he was attempting to lessen the apparent size of his own holding to reduce the size of the divorce settlement, a charge denied by Brooke.

The Talmadge probe also originated with a disputed divorce settlement, but has broadened to include allegations of mishandling of the Georgia Democrat's personal office account and land dealings in Georgia.

The committee investigation at this stage is comparable to a grand jury inquiry, but if enough evidence of wrongdoing is found public hearings would be likely.

Integration Information Center Training Slated

Training sessions will be held next week for about 60 volunteers who will staff a telephone information center on Lubbock's court-ordered school integration plan, a desegregation support group announced Wednesday.

Betty Anderson, information center chairman for Lubbock's Opportunity for Our Kids, said the sessions will be conducted Aug. 3-4 at the Wesley Foundation, 2420 15th St.

For a six-week period beginning Aug. 7, the organization will sponsor the information center. The phone number will be 765-8546.

"Since there may be some apprehension and uncertainty in implementing the desegregation plan, we feel the center can minimize the problem by providing complete, accurate and honest information to parents and the general public," Mrs. Anderson said.

"In several communities where court-ordered integration systems have been implemented, it has been found that rumors significantly aggravate tensions. The harmful effects of rumors can be offset if police, public officials and community leaders quickly and effectively verify and circulate facts," she said.

The U.S. Justice Department's community relations office is assisting in the information center. Through the center, volunteers and school officials will be able to answer questions about desegregation on a 24-hour basis, Mrs. Anderson said.

Test-Tube Birth To Figure In Woman's Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A gynecologist for a woman suing over destruction of a test-tube embryo five years ago said Wednesday that the birth in England of the world's first test-tube baby will bolster their case.

"Now no expert can come in here and say it can't be done, it has been done," said Dr. William J. Sweeney III, in an apparent reference to defense plans to call such witnesses in the $1.5 million damage suit.

"It's tremendous for us," added Sweeney, who was to have implanted the embryo in Doris Del Zio, a Florida woman who was unable to conceive normally because of a blockage in her Fallopian tubes.

Dr. Landrum B. Shettles, who prepared the laboratory culture that was slated to be implanted in Mrs. Del Zio, said the England birth would "help to substantiate what we were trying to do."

"I feel what we knew and the way we were approaching it, we had excellent possibilities," he said.

Shettles claims he successfully implanted an embryo in 1962, but that it had to be removed after two days because the woman needed a hysterectomy. He said his work in that case is used in classes at the Harvard University Medical School.

The 34-year-old Mrs. Del Zio told reporters while entering court that she wept tears of joy at the news from England.

"I started to cry," she said. "They were tears of joy, not of sadness. I feel so happy for Mrs. (Gilbert John) Brown and her husband and their precious little bundle of joy. I am more confident now that I would have had a baby."

Before commencing the trial's eighth day of testimony, U.S. District Judge Charles E. Stewart admonished the four-woman, two-man jury not to consider Tuesday's test-tube birth in England as evidence here.

Mrs. Del Zio and her husband, John, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., brought suit after a test tube culture was seized and put in a deep freeze at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center before it was implanted in her.

Dr. Raymond Vande Wiele, director of the hospital's obstetrics and gynecology department, and a defendant along with the hospital in the suit, claims he ordered the seizure to protect the woman's life and because the experiment had not been approved by the proper hospital committee.

Del Zio, a 59-year-old dentist, said the test-tube birth Tuesday night "showed it could be done, and I am confident that my wife would have had a baby if the procedure was allowed to go ahead."

When their suit was filed in 1974, the couple alleged that Mrs. Del Zio entered the hospital on Sept. 12, 1973, for surgical removal of ovarian tissue and eggs. At the same time, sperm samples were taken from her husband.

The egg and sperm were put in a laboratory incubator tube to be implanted four days later, according to the suit.

The day after the mixture was made, the suit alleged, Vande Wiele claimed the cork on the tube was removed because of a "proscription" from the National Institute of Health against the fertilization method.

The plaintiffs asserted that there was no such ban and filed the suit.

Council Hires New Sundown Constable

SUNDOWN — Mike Pearce, a 28-year-old deputy in the Levelland sheriff's department, was hired Tuesday night by the city council here as deputy city marshal and constable in Sundown.

Pearce, who has lived in Sundown 13 months, replaces former constable Woodrow Wilson who died June 27, and former deputy Gary Langford who resigned June 30 to move to another city.

Pearce began his duties this week. He was a criminal justice major at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches. He also attended Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

GM Overtakes Exxon As Biggest Firm

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors Corp., surpassing Exxon Corp. returned to the No. 1 spot for the first time since 1973 in Fortune Magazine's ranking of the world's 50 largest industrial companies, according to an advance copy of the latest issue, obtained Wednesday.

The ranking, based on 1977 sales figures, showed General Motors Corp. with worldwide sales of $54.96 billion and net earnings $3.33 billion, compared to sales of $54.12 billion and earnings of $2.42 billion, for the former top-ranked Exxon Corp.

Sales and profits of the world's biggest industrial companies did not show such strong gains in 1977 as in the previous year. Sales rose 12.5 percent and profits were up 10.7 percent, compared to a sales gain of 13.4 percent and profit increase of 23.5 percent for the group in 1976, the business magazine said.

For the third consecutive year, automakers did better than the 50 largest industrial companies as a group. Among the nine auto companies listed, sales rose 17.4 percent and profits increased 13.4 percent.

Oil companies, as a group, fared somewhat worse than average. The average for the 18 companies listed was an 11.3 percent increase in sales and 11.1 percent profit rise in 1977.

The Royal Dutch Shell Group, ranked third-largest by Fortune, was the only foreign-based company among the top six biggest firms in the world. The magazine listed Ford, Mobil and Texaco as the fourth-, fifth- and sixth-largest companies.

'Throw Down Gun' Probe Underway

HOUSTON (AP) — An investigation of allegations a "throw down" gun was used in the police death of a Houston teenager was begun Wednesday by a federal grand jury.

Four police officers have been fired in the 1975 case in which Billy Keith Joy-vies, 18, was shot to death in a high speed chase with police.

The federal grand jury is checking for possible civil rights violations.

In a similar case, four former police officers were indicted June 2 on civil rights violation charges in the 1977 death of Randall Alan Webster, 17, Shreveport, La.

Webster also was shot to death in a high speed chase that also involved allegations a throw down gun was placed near the body.

Turtle Species Win Protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government moved Wednesday to give legal protection to three species of sea turtles whose populations are dwindling rapidly.

"This should have been done long ago," said Richard Frank, chief of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The species affected are the green, Pacific Ridley and loggerhead turtles. Excessive commercial exploitation and loss of habitat are blamed for the declining populations of the species.

Under the proposal:
— Green turtles, which breed in Florida and the Pacific Coast of Mexico, will be classified as endangered. All other populations are classified as threatened, which means they soon could become endangered.

— Pacific Ridelies, which breed on the Pacific Coast of Mexico, will be classified as endangered. All other populations will be classed as threatened.

— Loggerhead turtles throughout the world will be classified as threatened.

The effect of the action is to close off the United States as a market for turtle meat, turtle leather and other products such as cosmetics that contain turtle parts.

Scientists believe that no more than 600,000 greens survive in the world and that only 100 greens still live in Florida where they once were abundant.

No precise estimate has been made for the Pacific Ridley. But Mexican hunters last year are reported to have killed 70,000 females out of a nesting population once estimated at 150,000.

The loggerhead population is estimated between 25,000 and 50,000.

In addition, Frank said research would be conducted to develop ways to stop turtles from becoming entangled in the nets of shrimp trawlers and drowning. Hawksbill and Atlantic Ridley turtles already are classified as endangered.

In addition, the Commerce Department will classify areas as critical habitat to protect turtles from harm, Frank said.

Senator Suggests Bigger Capital Gains Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee handed President Carter's tax program a major jolt Wednesday by endorsing a far bigger reduction in capital gains taxes than the president wants.

Sen. Russell B. Long, the most influential member of Congress on taxes, proposed that Congress go even farther than a Republican plan, which Carter has characterized as a windfall for millionaires and peanuts for the average American.

Regardless of what the House does, Long said, "The Senate Finance Committee will recommend a large cut in the tax rates on capital gains."

Capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stock, real estate or other property owned for at least a year, now are subject to a theoretical maximum tax of 49.1 percent.

Congressional Republicans and most senators favor a maximum tax of 25 percent. A majority of the House Ways and Means Committee apparently favors reducing the top rate to 35 percent. Long called for a maximum rate of 19.5 percent.

The Louisiana Democrat, in a speech to the National Press Club, also endorsed a large across-the-board tax cut for individuals and corporations.

However, he was not specific on how big a cut, and he stopped short of endorsing the Republican Roth-Kemp plan for cutting taxes by one-third over the next three years.

Despite Carter's current opposition, Long said, the president would be wise to follow the lead of his predecessors. If Congress passes the bill, the senator said, when Carter signs it into law "he ought to take full credit for it."

Long's remarks came as the House Ways and Means Committee showed no sign of breaking the three-month stalemate over capital gains that has blocked action on a tax-cut bill.

The committee diverted its attention from capital gains for more than two hours Wednesday while debating — and finally killing — a proposal that would have prohibited businesses from claiming a tax deduction for entertaining any federal, state or local government official or employee.

As Republicans have been doing in recent months. Long used the late President John F. Kennedy's 1963 tax-cut program as an example of how the economy can be primed by a tax reduction.

The part of that program that Congress enacted reduced tax rates for individuals and corporations and resulted in more new jobs and, in the end, more tax revenues for the government.

The unsuccessful part would have sharply cut federal income taxes on capital gains to a maximum 19.5 percent.

The Kennedy proposal still makes sense 15 years later, Long said, and similar action today would spur new investment, create more jobs and send more revenue to the government.

As high-level officials from Carter's budget office and the departments of treasury, labor and commerce looked on,

Long told his audience:

"Hopefully, the present treasury staff might at least muster enough affirmative thinking to find the positive results so confidently predicted by the John F. Kennedy team."

The Carter administration contends the Kennedy program and the current Republican tax-cut plans cannot be compared because, unlike today, inflation and utilization of industrial capacity were very low in the mid-1960s.

Hobbs Dorm Construction Pact Okayed

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS — The College of the Southwestern Board of Trustees has decided to name the first of several new student housing units to be built on the campus Jane Adams Hall in honor of the late Jane Manley Adams, a benefactor of the school.

The contract for the construction of the building has been awarded to the firm of Richardson and Richardson of Carlsbad.

Completion is scheduled in December and its cost is estimated at $141,248. The architect is Herman Riherd of Lubbock.

Each housing unit, a quadruplex, will consist of four separate apartments. The exterior will be finished in the same style as the other buildings on campus, featuring white brick construction with red trim.

Additional quadruplex units will be built as enrollment increases and funds permit.

Mrs. Adams, because of her interest in education, provided that her estate be used for this purpose. The estate's value is about $200,000.

Houston Police Receive Equal Treatment

HOUSTON (AP) — Police Chief Harry Caldwell said Wednesday the Justice Department has found there is no discrimination in Houston against female officers.

A 1975 complaint alleging discrimination in height requirement, agility tests and advertising for police recruits was filed by the Houston Chapter of the National Organization for Women.

Caldwell said Lenis W. Taylor, director of the office of civil rights complaints in the Justice Department's Law Enforcement Assistance Act division, sent him a letter saying the alleged discriminatory practices have been changed or eliminated.

Caldwell said height and weight requirements have been eliminated and an agility test based on actual on-the-job physical requirements has been developed.

President's Trips Slated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will make trips to Norfolk, Va., and Columbia, Mo., next month, the White House announced Wednesday.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter will fly to Norfolk on Aug. 5 for the commissioning of the cruiser USS Mississippi and to Columbia on Aug. 14 to address a convention of the Mid-Continent Farmers Association.

Powell said either or both trips could be extended to include other stops, but reported no such decisions have been made.

Free Flu Shots Said Dependent On Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and local health agencies can do very little to provide free flu shots to the elderly and chronically ill this fall unless Congress agrees to finance such a program, health experts said on Wednesday.

Government doctors said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's $15 million plan to immunize the elderly and chronically ill could save 1,200 lives this winter.

Last Thursday, however, the House voted down an HEW request for the money to start a regular, annual flu immunization program. A Senate appropriations subcommittee also killed the fund request, but HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. may try to get the full committee to restore the funds.

The House did vote to provide $3 million for further testing of flu vaccines, and HEW lobbyists say it is unlikely that any more funds will be voted this year.

Dr. William F. Foege, director of the U.S. Center for Disease Control, said his agency has conducted a survey showing that three quarters of the states have expressed an interest in an immunization campaign, but only 10 states plan to offer shots at public health clinics unless federal money is provided.

Califano opened the conference on health strategy by appealing to the experts to help him rebuild public confidence in flu immunizations. That confidence was shattered by the 1976 swine flu fiasco.

Dr. Kenneth McIntosh of the University of Colorado Medical Center, said flu vaccines are safe and effective and can prevent the flu for one to two years in at least seven of every 10 persons who get shots.

"The vaccines work, although they do not work perfectly," said McIntosh, adding that the benefits outweigh risks, particularly for the elderly and chronically ill.

He said one of every 5,000 flu victims dies, while only one in two million persons can be expected to die from the flu shot itself. Those deaths are usually caused by the Guillan-Barre syndrome, a rare paralyzing disease that afflicts one in every 100,000 persons who receives a flu shot.

It was this disease that brought the ill-fated, $135 million swine flu program crashing to a halt in December 1976 after 45 million Americans received shots to ward off swine flu, a disease that never materialized.

The government is now being sued for $735 million by more than 1,400 persons who claim the shots caused injuries or death. Some 120 cases involved deaths, not all from Guillan-Barre.

Califano acknowledged "the deep public and congressional skepticism and misgivings produced by the experience of the swine flu program. Our ability to set a rational flu policy has been badly damaged by the backlash from that program."

An estimated 12 million Americans are expected to get flu shots from private physicians this fall, as they do every year. They include eight million of the estimated 42 million in the elderly or chronically ill group. HEW's goal was to immunize another eight or nine million of those high risk persons by the end of the 1979-80 year.

The survey by the Center for Disease Control found that 10 states, the District of Columbia and the Virgin Islands plan to administer 678,500 doses of vaccine on their own this fall. If federal funds are made available by late August, most states would participate and distribute 4.8 million doses, the center said. If the program were delayed until late September, some 3.6 million doses would be distributed.

The flu experts from inside and outside the government wound up their session by endorsing the original $15 million HEW plan for a public drive to immunize the elderly and chronically ill.

The conference also approved the plans for a trivalent vaccine that will protect against the A-Texas, B-Hong Kong and A-Russian strains of flu.

Foege said after the conference that "I just don't know" if the government will finance a flu drive this fall. HEW still will seek funds to start the program next year even if it is blocked for now.

California has the largest program among states and will give an estimated half million shots this fall. Other states with programs are Alabama, Alaska, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Nevada, Oklahoma, Virginia and Washington.

Balloonists Hail Queen En Route

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland (UPI) — Two British adventurers traded radio greetings with Queen Elizabeth Wednesday and gave themselves over to the wind on the first day of their trans-Atlantic voyage in a computer-designed balloon.

A Canadian search and rescue helicopter trailed them for the first 80 miles after their morning liftoff from the coast of Newfoundland and reported that "They seemed to be sailing along quite happily."

In the aluminum gondola beneath the 100-foot high Zanussi balloon, Don Cameron, 37, and Major Christopher Davey, 34, cut through the clouds with the help of favorable winds in their bid to be the first balloonists to cross the Atlantic.

"They have absolutely no control once airborne," said Diana Hughes, a member of the ground crew. "They go exactly where the wind takes them."

The yellow, pear-shaped balloon, draped with the Union Jack and the Canadian Maple Leaf flag, was reported flying at 3,300 feet in clear skies with southwest winds between 15 and 28 miles an hour.

At 12:30 p.m. EDT, the radio in the gondola crackled to life and the balloonists heard the voice of their monarch, Queen Elizabeth II, wishing them good luck as she soared overhead toward Canada to begin her 11-day visit.

"Prince Phillip and I send our warmest good wishes for a successful landfall," the queen said from her Boeing 707.

"Please thank Her Majesty the Queen for the warm message and we will do our utmost toward a record," Cameron radioed back.

The two Britons said they didn't mind being on the short end of the 10 to 1 odds against them being offered by a London betting house.

Part of their confidence stems from the computer-assisted design of the balloon. Davey said the $275,000 balloon and auxiliary equipment — paid for mainly by Zanussi, the firm that made it — had passed tests that convinced him it could cross the Atlantic.

Some American balloonists have complained that the expected distance to a landfall would be 1,000 miles less than the distance they would have to go from U.S. territory.

Miss Hughes defended the balloonists. "As Britons," she said, "they are entitled to take off from British (Commonwealth) soil."

Two American attempts last year failed. Dewey Rienhard, 47, and Steve Stevenson, 44, lasted only two days in their 85-foot balloon last October. A month earlier, Ben Abruzzo, 47, and Maxie Anderson, 44, ditched their balloon in the Atlantic off Iceland, after staying aloft for three days.

Testifying Ex-Smuggler Doffs Hood

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flanked by two escorts, a hooded former drug smuggler appeared before a House subcommittee Wednesday to tell how he once ran marijuana shipments past the feds.

As television cameras rolled, he answered a couple of questions through the pillowcase he wore as a hood — necessarily, according to a press release from Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., to protect the witness's identity.

Then he asked, somewhat plaintively: "May I take this mask off?"

With that, Robert Guy Ebey doffed his pillowcase and proceeded to answer questions.

Ebey's identity never was a secret. The official witness list distributed by Biaggi's subcommittee identified him by name, former occupation (convicted drug smuggler) and residence (Richmond, Va., city jail).

And he said during the hearing he had no objection to the television cameras taking his picture.

Asked after the hearing why he wore the hood, Ebey said only: "I'd rather not get into that." It was not, he said, his idea.

Ebey's appearance before the merchant marine subcommittee on Coast Guard and navigation was to discuss legislation coauthored by Biaggi and Rep. David Treen, R-La. Their bill would give the Coast Guard new powers to board trawlers suspected of carrying drugs.

Most of Ebey's previous smuggling experience was in airplanes instead of boats, he said, and most of his flights carried not marijuana but orchids.

But he backed the Biaggi-Treen bill, suggesting that "if you want to just stop trawler traffic (carrying huge loads of marijuana), fine, you could probably do that with enough money."

He added that most smugglers using trawlers are foreigners who don't really know when and under what circumstances the Coast Guard can board them. Locking these people "in our jails is like putting them up in a hotel compared to what their standard of living is," he said.

As for drug smuggling in general, Ebey offered the congressmen this primer:

— The bolder the operation, the better its chances of success will usually be. The guys who dump their cargo on secluded beaches are often the ones who are caught. Those who carry the shipment in as if it were normal cargo usually fare better. In fact, he said, he once hired private security guards to accompany a load of marijuana from his plane to the warehouse.

— The planes he used for marijuana smuggling were purchased through aviation want ads. Once the marijuana has been delivered, the plane is sunk in the ocean. Since an old DC-6 can usually be bought for around $100,000 and since it can carry marijuana with a wholesale value of $4.5 million in one trip, the loss of the plane is no big thing.

— One of his favorite tricks to avoid detection was to find someone filing a flight plan in the general direction of where he wanted to go and then follow that flight plan. This kept him from being singled out on radar scopes as an unidentified plane. Another method, he said, is to fly directly over large cities during the day when air traffic is heavy.

— So many planes go into Colombia each day for loads of marijuana, he said, that "you need a traffic controller to find your way in through all the other aircraft."

Ex-Lubbockite Optimistic About Treasure Quest

MULLIN (AP) — The "Jackson Crossing Treasure" has been legend here for more than 150 years. Some — perhaps sheepishly — have even dug huge holes hunting for it.

So far the rugged canyons and rocky, rattlesnake-infested hills have failed to surrender a single nugget.

But cattleman Bill Murray, whose 640-acre ranch just southeast of Brownwood includes the legendary treasure site, feels he has a reasonable chance of recovering the buried treasure, estimated to be worth more than $2 million, with the help of an inventor from Colorado.

Excavation is set to begin in October. "If I get that gold I'll really dress this place up," said Murray, 55, standing on a ridge overlooking the flatrock bottom of a small river.

"That river is the Pecan Bayou... and those rocks are the original Jackson Crossing," he said, stabbing the air with his pipe. The river cuts a ragged canyon on the edge of his land for a mile and half. "That's where those Spaniards were moving gold on 10 burros.

"Some Indians were camped nearby, and they attacked the Spaniards. They had one hell of a battle for two or three days," Murray said, holding onto the limb of one of the thousands of pecan trees that crowd both sides of the river.

The Spaniards took the buckskin bags of gold from the donkeys and hid them somewhere in the area, he said, apparently hoping to come back later and recover them.

"Some of them did get loose," and lived to tell the story of the Jackson Crossing Treasure in New Orleans, the rancher said.

Murray has heard the legend of the buried treasure since he and his wife Ann moved here from Lubbock in 1949. But rearing two daughters, tending cattle and goats and making it through the droughts left no time to dig for the gold himself.

While on vacation in Colorado last year Murray caught the interest of inventor-engineer Maylon Scow.

Negotiations followed. A contract was signed. "I get half, and they get half if they find it," Murray said.

"That old boy knows what he's doing," Murray said during a bumpy pickup truck ride over a weather-rutted hill.

"It's serious business with old Maylon. He thinks the gold is here. He's got one hell of a machine — that son a gun can read and write. It'll tell you where to go. It'll reach out there. It'll talk to you."

Scow, owner of the Rio Grande Mineral Development Corp. of Denver, says his machine, called a "Gamma Ray Scanner," could revolutionize modern treasure hunting.

The scanner combines the principles of radar and a laboratory device that analyzes the electron flow of ions in minerals. Each mineral has its own electron flow pattern, which Scow says "is just like a blood type. You can't mistake it."

Scow brought his suitcase-size machine here last winter and scanned the entire ranch. He said the scanner "indicates several potential gold deposits," but he was not specific.

"He went out with his machine four different times," Murray said. "He wouldn't let me go with him, and he wouldn't tell me where the gold is at. But I don't mind — I can see his point." If Murray knew where it was, he could dig it up himself.

Scow's assistant, Clarence Gregory, said that when the Colorado firm returns in October it will bring heavy drilling equipment.

"We can drill to the deposit in a number of days," Gregory said. "There will be some pick and shovel work." He said he anticipates digging to depths of between 15 and 50 feet to recover gold nuggets and bars the company expects to be worth at least $2 million, not counting the value of some silver that he said showed up on the scanner.

Gregory said the scanner indicated the Jackson Crossing treasure was not all buried in the same underground spot. "Let's just say there are two or more locations," he said. "We feel it's going to be a valuable find."

The Rio Grande company, which originally dealt mainly in mineral surveys and geophysical studies, has added treasure hunting as a major operation since the invention last year of Scow's machine.

Gregory said several scans have been made off the coast of Florida and the Bahamas in search of sunken galleons, and he said the location of a ship with an estimated $1 billion in gold was pinpointed by Scow's machine.

However, the company declines to confirm the actual recovery of any gold yet.

Back near his ranch house, Murray parked in front of a rustic building. A sign read: "Whoop 'n' Hoiler Ranch."

"That's my dance hall," he said. "We have square dances here two or three times a month. If we find that gold I'm going to dress this place up," he said, relighting his pipe.

Court Upholds Reversal Of Privacy Invasion Suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has upheld the reversal of a $1 million invasion of privacy judgment awarded to a fired Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. executive who claimed his telephone was tapped.

The court on Wednesday turned down an appeal by James H. Ashley, who claimed his home telephone was tapped after he was fired Oct. 31, 1974, from his job as Bell's general commercial manager in San Antonio.

Ashley claimed Bell bugged his phone to learn his legal strategy in another suit.

The high court did not write an opinion but merely stated it could find "no reversible error" in a decision of the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals.

Ashley and his wife won the $1 million verdict from a San Antonio trial court, but the Eastland court said there was no evidence to substantiate it.

Evidence at the trial created "nothing more than mere surmise or suspicion on the Ashley's allegation of eavesdropping and wiretapping," the Eastland court said.

In his appeal to the Texas Supreme Court, Ashley presented as "new evidence" the April 1, 1978, affidavit of Royce Brookmole, Bell's district manager at Midland.

Brookmole said he was bugged in late 1974 and early 1975 and actually found the device.

"This was during the time that I was regularly communicating by telephone with Mr. James H. Ashley in San Antonio," he said.

Brookmole said Bell's chief security man, Edwin McKaskel, called him to San Antonio and "told me that he was wiretapping Mr. Ashley's telephone in behalf

Alligator Victim Leaves Hospital

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Eight-year-old Eric Glatt, attacked by a 100-pound alligator last month, has been allowed to return to his grandmother's home after undergoing eight operations.

Eric, who lives with his parents and an older brother in Hillsdale, N.J., was visiting his grandmother here when the attack occurred on June 28. He was scooping minnows from a canal when the alligator lurched from the water and grabbed his arm.

Since the incident, Eric has been besieged by reporters and photographers.

of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and in connection with his investigation for the company of Ashley."

He said he and Ashley tested Ashley's phone around Jan. 1, 1975, and found it was tapped.

Brookmole's affidavit said he was told if he testified at the trial of Ashley's wiretap suit he would be fired.

Ashley and the widow of T. O. Gravitt, former chief of Bell's Texas operations, won a $3 million verdict in September 1977 in a slander suit. Gravitt, under investigation at the same time as Ashley, committed suicide Oct. 17, 1974.

Ashley has called himself the "Ralph Nader of the telephone company" and has made numerous allegations that Bell maintained a political slush fund to make contributions to various candidates.

HER HONOR DUMPS TRASH—San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell delivers her family's three-day accumulation of trash to a temporary dump at a city park. # San Antonio Police Protect Trash Men

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Shadowed by police cruisers, garbage trucks rolled through San Antonio on Wednesday as substitute crews began clearing away mounds of rubbish accumulated for five days during a strike by more than half the city's garbage men.

Elsewhere, 15 supervisors made limited trash collections Wednesday in Tuscaloosa, Ala., where 245 striking sanitation workers were threatened with mass dismissals if they refused to return to work by today.

And Detroit's 650 garbage men scheduled a meeting to decide whether to strike in a dispute over the city's mandatory overtime policy. The workers were on the job Wednesday, but union leaders predicted a full-scale walkout today if an agreement were not reached with the city.

to bar the ex-workers from threatening working garbage men or impeding trash collection.

"Things went extremely well today," Assistant City Manager Louis Fox said Wednesday at the beleaguered North Loop Service Center. "We moved 28 trucks out of this center today, more than we've had since last Friday. None were sent out Saturday and Monday and only eight left Tuesday."

"The added protection and the restraining order really helped," said Fox. "We'll do whatever it takes to resume total garbage service."

A review board began hearing appeals Wednesday afternoon by some of the dismissed garbage men. Fox said he felt some of those ex-workers had walked off the job because of threats and might be reinstated.

Councilman Rudy Ortiz, who plans to ask the council today to fire Huebner, says Huebner is promoting violence with his tough stance. "I told him I would hold him responsible for any violence," Ortiz said Tuesday night.

More than half of San Antonio's 313 garbage men walked off the job Saturday after the city council approved a 6 percent wage increase for all city workers. The strikers, members of the San Antonio Refuse Collectors Association, had sought a 9.3 percent increase.

Texas House Approves Ban On Income Taxes

the common folks — the people who just have cars," Salinas said.

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, objected that "30 percent of the revenues in some taxing districts is raised from the personal property tax on autos. . . This would force a property tax increase on your real estate taxpayers."

The House also voted 80-56 to limit the property tax exemption for household goods and personal effects to $30,000 per category.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said without the ceiling, someone could own $5 million worth of personal effects without paying taxes on it.

"You talk about a rich man's paradise!" said Hollowell. Personal property is taxable now, but few if any tax collectors enter homes to appraise it.

Issues before the House today will include whether to place a specific homestead exemption from school taxes — Briscoe wants a $10,000 exemption with twice that amount for the elderly — in the Constitution.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee recommended leaving the specific figure to the Legislature, where it can be changed readily. An amendment on which the House probably will vote today would limit the exemption to $10,000, while mandating another $10,000 for persons 65 and over.

Included in the package before the House were provisions taxing farm and ranch land on productivity, not market value; allowing local voters to roll back property tax increases; requiring a majority of the Legislature — not just those voting — to approve tax bills; and dropping the seldom obeyed requirement that intangibles, such as bank accounts, be taxed.

A 114-25 record vote against tabling the income tax amendment was the key roll call on the issue. The amendment itself was approved on voice vote.

"We are all aware of why Texas is prospering so much. The reason industry is coming to this state is because we don't have a corporation income tax," said Rep. Doug McLeod, D-Galveston, the amendment's author.

Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, tried to trim the amendment down to forbid only passage of a personal income tax, but failed, 94-43.

"I realize the bind you are all in on this amendment," Waters said. But, he added, the Legislature should have the potential of a corporate income tax as a "tool to balance personal and business taxes."

Some members who voted for McLeod's amendment said privately they opposed it because Texas might need such a levy some day when oil and gas reserves — which produce much of the state's tax revenue — dry up.

Rep. Bill Sullivan, D-Gainesville, failed, 77-54, to add an amendment restoring the requirement that intangibles be taxed.

He said intangibles in Texas are worth $210 billion to $220 billion, more than the estimated $190 billion worth of real estate.

"How would you enforce a tax on intangibles that we have always found uncollectable?" challenged Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving.

"If Texas really wants to collect a tax on intangibles, it can be done," Sullivan replied.

He also spoke against McLeod's amendment, saying it would prevent a "productivity tax on intangibles" such as savings accounts, stocks and bonds that produce income for their owners.

While the House debated its version of a property tax relief package, the Senate Finance Committee approved the Senate version 12-0. Sen. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris, said he would bring up the proposed constitutional amendment for debate this morning.

"Taken with HB1, this would give us a tax relief package of almost $1 billion," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. He made an unusual committee appearance to support the bill. "This will give some genuine relief to taxpayers and we can go home."

Hobby, who helped draft the Senate package after talks with the governor and Speaker Bill Clayton, said earlier he felt there was little chance the special session could adjourn this weekend. He said, however, he was sure it would quit before the Aug. 8 deadline.

House Bill No. 1 has been approved by the Senate and House in different versions. It repeals the four-cent state sales tax on home gas and electric bills and increases inheritance tax exemptions for estates from $25,000 to $200,000.

An effort by Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa, to add an amendment exempting agriculture livestock in the hands of the producer from taxation failed 7-5.

The Senate package would be presented to voters Nov. 7 if it is approved by the Legislature.

It has provisions which would:

- Clarify the law on intangible property taxation and allow the Legislature to exempt household goods and "personal effects" not used for the production of income. Aikin said this would exempt family automobiles not used for business purposes.
- Provide for appraisal of farm, ranch and timber land according to production, not real estate value.
- Provide a general $5,000 exemption from school taxes for home owners, plus another $10,000 for those over 65 years. Disabled persons living alone could be given a $3,000 exemption by cities and school districts. Property taxes could not be increased on homesteads of those over 65, except because of improvements other than repairs.
- Provide that property taxes may not be increased without proper notice and hearing.

Begin Calls Mideast Prospects Excellent

by Israel in the 1967 Mideast war.

"Sadat's willingness to make peace and to agree to small modifications in Judea and Samaria is not enough for us either," said Eban. "But it is significant movement on Egypt's part." Judea and Samaria are the biblical names for the West Bank of the Jordan River.

In Alexandria, Egypt, Foreign Minister Kamel said Egypt is ready to resume direct talks with Israel "at any level" if Israel "shows readiness to change its old conceptions and shows real willingness to reciprocate our peace initiative."

Kamel issued the statement after a four-hour meeting of Egypt's National Security Council and was responding to a comment Tuesday by Begin in an American television interview that he would "gladly" visit Cairo as early as August to continue talks with Sadat.

But Kamel said "the declarations and statements of Begin lately show that while he is seeking to resume contacts with us, he is taking positions which make these contacts or negotiations a waste of time."

During Monday's debate in the Israeli Parliament that preceded the no-confidence motion, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Israel would be willing to discuss peace treaties based on territorial compromise.

Eban said the Labor Party believes peace can be achieved through an agreement in the Sinai and a declaration of principles to guide future agreements on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Dayan opposes negotiating a declaration of principles because he says the same ground would have to be worked through again in negotiations over a detailed agreement.

Begin did not speak during Wednesday's debate, but Moshe Nissim, minister without portfolio, criticized the Labor formula and defended the government's peace plan which calls for Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai and limited self-rule for the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs in the West Bank and Gaza.

"There are more elements in our peace plan to conduct negotiations on than in the idea of territorial compromise," Nissim said.

It was the second no-confidence motion brought before Parliament this month. On July 4, the Labor Party challenged the government over an amendment to the conscription law providing easier army exemptions for religious women.

"Such frequent no-confidence motions cause concern," said Nissim, apparently referring to relations with the Labor Party. But he said they brought no "political worries" to the government, which holds a 78-seat majority in the 120-seat Parliament.

In Washington, the Carter administration praised Israel for trying to find solutions to the impasse with Egypt. But in complimenting Israel for its efforts, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said it is not clear if Israel has shifted its position on the future of the West Bank.

The praise was for Dayan's statement to Parliament on Monday that Israel is prepared to discuss the question of sovereignty on the West Bank and Gaza after five years of limited self-rule for the Palestinians. Dayan made a similar statement to U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance last week at Leeds Castle, England.

Lake Spillway Mishap Fatal To Brothers

One man was dead at the scene and his brother was pronounced dead on arrival at West Texas Hospital late Wednesday as a result of an incident at a Canyon Lakes spillway about 10:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Pronounced dead at the scene was Flores M. Flores, believed to be about 30. His brother, Nacario, also believed to be about 30, died en route to the hospital.

Witnesses said the pair apparently had been drinking at a north Lubbock club before deciding to visit a third brother, Martin, at his 126 Ave. M address.

Upon leaving the brother's home, Flores and Nacario Flores went to the nearby spillway, where one apparently plunged into the water. The second man apparently drowned in an attempt to rescue his brother.

It was the city's third and fourth drownings of the year and came 33 days after a 2-year-old boy died at Methodist Hospital following a June 10th incident.

Four Shipwreck Survivors Found

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Four shipwreck survivors were pulled from the Atlantic Ocean early Wednesday as sharks attacked the body of a woman killed when their 22-foot pleasure boat exploded and sank, authorities said.

Spokesmen for the U.S. Coast Guard said a search-and-rescue vessel found two men and two boys floating in life preservers about 8 a.m., five to eight miles off Edisto Island.

A helicopter crewman fought off the sharks with a boathook and pulled in the body, he said.

Conditional Rhodesia Ban Lifting Voted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved on Wednesday a proposal that would allow lifting of economic sanctions against Rhodesia if there was clear progress toward majority rule in the African nation.

The proposal was attached to a $2.8 billion foreign military aid bill which the Senate approved by a 73-13 vote Wednesday night and sent to the House for floor action, probably next week.

Before the final vote on the bill, the Senate adopted, 81 to 7, an amendment declaring the "sense of Congress" that the administration's proposed pullout of 36,000 U.S. troops from South Korea by 1982 poses "serious risks," including a possible upset of the military balance in North Asia.

The amendment, a modified version of a stronger declaration introduced by Sen. Charles Percy, D-Ill., stressed the Senate's demand for prior consultations with President Carter on any further withdrawals or other changes in U.S. policy toward Korea.

Under the Rhodesian amendment approved earlier in the day, sanctions against that white minority-ruled state would be ended if Rhodesian leaders held free elections and moved to achieve a settlement embracing all parties, including anti-government guerrillas.

The key vote was 59-38, on a compromise offered by three senators to block a move by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. to suspend U.S. participation in the United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia for the rest of this year.

Helms said his proposal would help the Salisbury government's interim ruling council establish a viable economy and thereby encourage a political settlement.

Fearing that Helms' plan — similar to one narrowly defeated last month — might succeed, the White House reluctantly and privately endorsed the compromise.

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., principal author of the compromise, said he thought it "reflects that which most Americans think should happen in Rhodesia... as close as you could come to defining the right U.S. position — morally, politically and diplomatically."

School Trustees Okay Suit

In a carefully worded motion, Lubbock Independent School District trustees have authorized their attorneys to defend them against a lawsuit challenging the district's at-large election system.

But it's still unclear whether the school board has come to grips with the issue of at-large vs. single-member district elections.

On a motion by trustee Brad Crawford, the board Wednesday unanimously instructed its lawyers to take "whatever legal steps are necessary to successfully defend this suit." The vote was taken after a 15-minute closed session with school attorney Tom Johnson.

The lawsuit in question is a class-action complaint filed in federal court Friday by eight minority voters. They contend their constitutional rights are violated by the present method of electing school board members.

The current system is at-large, meaning citywide voting with no residency restrictions. The plaintiffs are seeking a single-member district system, by which certain seats on the board would be designated for particular geographic areas of the city.

The suit, similar to action pending against the Lubbock City Council, says at-large elections dilute the voting strength of minorities. The plaintiffs are asking $31 million in damages due to alleged past discrimination.

Most current school board members say they back at-large elections. But at least two trustees — Lynn Stafford and Jose Ramirez — advocate a combination of at-large and single-member district systems.

Depending on their stance, trustees seemed to interpret Wednesday's motion differently.

School board president Charles Waters said the action was the board's way of saying it will "not at this time" change its election process. He said trustees want the suit to "run its course" through the courts.

"We're going to fight it," said Waters. While he has "no personal objections" to single-member district elections, he believes the public wants at-large elections.

Mrs. Stafford sees Wednesday's vote in a somewhat different light. She said the action was the board's way of "defending ourselves against allegations of past discrimination" — and against the claim of damages.

Mrs. Stafford stressed that her vote was "not a vote against single-member districts." She said she still hopes that the school board adopts an election system that ensures one representative from each of the city's five high school zones and two at-large members.

"amortization" period to comply with the ordinance's provisions. The gradual time-frame is provided, in theory, so that businesses can recoup any losses incurred during the period.

If the ordinance is affirmed in toto, billboard advertisers would have until Jan. 1, 1982, to comply with its provisions.

Specifically, the ordinance sets forth guidelines on the location, proximity, size, separation, setback and height of billboards. It is this comprehensive nature of the ordinance that the sign company has opposed from the outset.

No one associated with the case expects the decision handed down this week to be the final word in the nearly three-year-old case.

Hope, Debate Rise Following Birth Of 'Test Tube Baby'

and sperm together, so we did it. We do not see anything immoral in doing that in the interests of the mother. I cannot see anything immoral in trying to help the patient's problem."

And Dr. Robert Edwards, 52, the Cambridge University physiologist who worked 12 years with Steptoe to develop the method, exulted: "Last time I saw the baby it was just eight cells. It was beautiful then and still beautiful now."

In Rome, a spokesman for the Vatican said the Roman Catholic Church considers artificial human insemination illicit. Jewish and Moslem spokesmen saw no conflict with their religious laws — so long as the procedure involves married couples.

The Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Pierfranco Pastore, said the Roman Catholic ban on artificial insemination was based on the belief that "fecundation must be carried out according to nature and through reciprocal and responsible love between a man and a woman."

Giles Eccleston, secretary of the Board for Social Responsibility of the Church of England, said he "welcomed the development," because the birth represents an advance in meeting the problem of childlessness for married couples.

Bishop Augustine Harris, a British Roman Catholic leader, gave cautious approval to the procedure. "Science can support the loving and natural ambitions of the couple to produce new life... a pro-life expression of life is to be commended and supported," he said.

Gordon Cardinal Grey, president of the Scottish Roman Catholic bishops, said: "I have grave misgivings about the methods and the possible implications for the future."

Medical authorities said that the birth of an apparently healthy girl to Mrs. Brown does not guarantee an immediate solution to the one married woman in 10 who is said to be infertile because of reproductive problems.

"It is obvious this is not immediately available to everybody," Steptoe said.

Edwards said, however, that the implications would be felt by childless couples all over the world.

"I would hope that within a very few years, instead of this being a seven-day wonder, this will be a fairly commonplace affair," he said.

The physician said 40 percent of the infertile women all over the world suffer from the cause of Mrs. Brown's infertility — malfunctioning fallopian tubes.

"If the methods we have developed continue to be developed further, the whole approach to infertility will be changed," Steptoe said.

"The baby came out crying its head off," he said. "She is a beautiful normal baby in a very good state breathing normally. She is in a perfectly healthy state, although for the first few hours after the birth she was put into the hospital's special baby care unit which we do with all Caesareans. But then we transferred her to her mother."

Although Steptoe and Edwards said the details of their technique wouldn't be published for a few months, other researchers said that the new "test tube" technique might be so far advanced that others can learn it quickly.

The baby was conceived by removing an egg from one of Mrs. Brown's ovaries with a specialized laparoscope, an instrument that allows the physician to see inside the abdomen and remove the delicate egg.

The egg was placed in a sophisticated piece of laboratory glassware where it was fertilized with her husband's sperm. After five days of nourishment in the test tube, it was planted in Mrs. Brown's womb to develop normally.

Mrs. Brown had undergone surgery in the past to attempt to remedy the blocked fallopian tubes that caused of her infertility. The tubes usually carry a fertilized egg to the uterus.

Non-Indian Vendors Ousted

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Non-Indian jewelry vendors screamed in protest, but left the portal of the Palace of the Governors Wednesday when told they would be trespassing if they remained among the traditional Indian vendors.

Two state police officers were on hand to make arrests if necessary, but non-Indian vendors Paul Livingston and Brian Joyce didn't carry the confrontation that far.

Livingston, acting as his own attorney, lost a decision by U.S. District Judge Edwin Mechem that the Museum of New Mexico's Indians-only policy for the portal is constitutional.

Livingston and his wife have continued to spread their blanket on the ancient porch and sell jewelry besides the museum since the decision, which Livingston says he will appeal.

Museum Director George Ewing publicly read a declaration Wednesday morning that any vendor under the portal who isn't an enrolled member of a federally recognized Indian tribe would be arrested for trespassing.

Officers Confiscate Alleged Narcotics

While making arrests in a forgery case about 3 p.m. Tuesday, two sheriff's deputies confiscated an unknown amount of what is believed to be narcotics.

The substance, discovered on the persons of two out-of-towners in a Parkway Drive motel room, was being analyzed Wednesday at a Department of Public Safety laboratory, said deputy Ernest Hector, who along with deputy Alton Roberts, arrested the couple.

The arrests originally were to be in connection with the May 22 theft of 492 checks from the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza County Medical Auxiliary. Some of the stolen checks were thought to still be in circulation.

Lubbock Deputies Arrest Man Charged In Slaying Last May

Lubbock County Sheriff's deputies Wednesday arrested a 19-year-old Lubbock man who was charged in May with the slaying of Javier Gutierrez.

Deputies found Joe Martinez Cabarrubio shortly before 2 p.m. in an apartment in the 400-block of N. University Avenue. Cabarrubio reportedly was digging an "escape tunnel" in the dirt floor of one of the apartment bedrooms when deputies arrived.

The alleged suspect told lawmen he threw the pistol used in the incident into the Canyon Lake on N. University Avenue and, according to reports, took deputies to the scene. A diver is scheduled to begin a search of the lake today.

Cabarrubio was charged May 25 with the shooting death of the 17-year-old Gutierrez of 1831 San Jose Dr. Police found Gutierrez, who was shot once in the back of the head, in the 2100-block of Emory Street about 9:30 p.m. May 23. He died about four hours later at Methodist Hospital.

A woman at the scene told police the victim had fought with another man in front of an apartment just before the shooting. Other witnesses provided the same description of the suspect and of the vehicle — a light-blue 1968 Ford pickup with a white left door — that left the scene.

A nearby resident reported hearing four shots and police recovered a bullet near the front door of the apartment where Gutierrez was found.

Elsewhere, in the city's fourth armed robbery in just two days, a 29-year-old

Special Tax Session Has City Officials Mulling Alternative

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

State legislators, called into session to provide some tax relief for Texans, so far have suggested few bills which would help cities and suggested many which could hurt municipalities, Lubbock city officials said Wednesday.

Specifically officials object to taxing agricultural land according to its productivity rather than its fair market value, allowing local voters to repeal a tax increase by referendum and limiting the increase in local government tax revenues to 5 percent a year.

However, the Lubbock City Council and State Rep. Froy Salinas may have discovered a winning combination.

The council will discuss today sending a resolution to the Legislature asking that cities receive an additional penny of sales tax revenue.

However, Salinas introduced such a bill Wednesday which would permit Texas voters to decide whether to give incorporated cities and towns the permission to increase their local sales tax by one cent on the dollar.

Cities would receive the extra revenue only if they reduced property taxes by an equal or greater amount than the increase.

"This would give the citizens of Texas at the local level the opportunity of choosing the type of tax they prefer paying, to pay for their necessary services," Salinas said.

If Salinas' bill is successful, voters would cast ballots in a non-binding referendum on the extra sales tax in the general election in November.

Currently the city receives one cent of every five cents of tax collected in the city, with the remainder going to the state.

An extra penny of the sales tax would generate an additional $7 million in Lubbock and would permit a 56-cent reduction in the $1.41 tax rate.

For the owner of a $40,000 home, that would mean a savings in city taxes of $134.

Councilman Alan Henry emphasized the city's resolution was not an attempt to shift the tax relief burden from the city to the Legislature. "It's not in lieu of close scrutiny of each budget," he added.

The extra cent on the sales tax would allow cities to "move away from their dependence on property taxes," Henry said.

Although Salinas seems to have read the minds of city officials in sponsoring the bill, other legislators have been introducing bills which are particularly distasteful to those working in city government.

One example is a proposed constitutional amendment to permit the taxation of agricultural land on its productivity rather than its market value.

Vaughn Hendrie, city community relations director, said he fears land speculators and developers would benefit from the amendment more than farmers.

Currently, those who earn the largest portion of their income from farming are eligible for tax breaks on agricultural land.

"That has excluded corporations or real estate developers with farm land designated for commercial or residential development from the tax relief."

Although details are sketchy on the proposed constitutional amendment, it is likely that any farm land in the city which is in production would be taxed at a lower rate than fair market value.

John Brooks, city-school tax assessor-collector, said there are about 16,000 acres in agricultural production within the city limits. The land has an assessed value of $20.4 million, he said.

The legislature's determination of a formula for productive value will determine how much the taxes on farm land within the city would decrease, but Brooks said, "I'm afraid we would lose considerable money."

Some farm land inside the city limits, destined for development is assessed at more than $1,000 an acre, he said. Taxed on its productive value, the assessment would be closer to $400 an acre.

Both Hendrie and Brooks noted that a decrease in the taxes which could be assessed on agricultural land would require an increase in taxes for everyone else.

"If you exempt one class, you shift the burden to another class," Hendrie said.

City officials are also not pleased with a proposal to permit local voters to repeal a tax increase by a referendum.

If taxes approved to pay for municipal bonds are subject to repeal, the city's bond rating might be seriously impaired, city finance director Sterling Miller said.

In addition, the city would have to begin its budget deliberations earlier in anticipation of such a referendum, Miller said, because the tax rate must be set in September.

Legislation which would limit city tax revenues to a 5 percent increase each year would force the city to actually reduce its operations, Miller said.

If the city increased spending only 5 percent a year for 10 years, expenditures would increase 50 percent, he said. However, if inflation increased 7 percent a year, the city's purchasing power would decrease by 70 percent — a 20 percent loss.

With revaluations in southwest Lubbock, the city is forecasting an 8.2 percent increase in revenues if the tax rate is cut by eight cents as originally proposed by the city council.

Juan Zarazua Jr., 34, of 3115 Emory St. was in serious condition Wednesday in Methodist Hospital with injuries he suffered about 1:15 p.m. Saturday in a two-car collision near the intersection of Clovis Road and Avenue T.

Roger Bell, 21, of 2601 Ave. K was in satisfactory condition Wednesday in Methodist Hospital with injuries he suffered July 6 in a motorcycle accident.

Sid Hill, 19, of Levelland was in serious condition Wednesday in Methodist Hospital with injuries suffered July 3 when his car ran off the road and struck a power pole near Levelland.

Whoever ripped the coin boxes from a pool table, cigarette machine and juke box at the business got only about $30 in change for his trouble. But the burglar did cause about $300 damage to the machines, she said.

In one of three armed robberies Tuesday, a 16-year-old Lubbock boy relinquished a tape recorder-radio after being confronted by a man wielding a chrome-plated .45 automatic pistol in the 300-block of Detroit Avenue.

The youth told police he was held up after he and two other teen-agers got off work about 10:45 p.m. from a 4th Street cafeteria.

The three employees reportedly were walking to a nearby convenience store when they were confronted by four or five black males traveling in a late model, red and white Monte Carlo.

While two of the employees kept walking, the youth said he stopped and a passenger in the car got out and flashed the gun, demanding, "give me that (the tape player), or I'll blow your head off."

The suspects fled the scene after taking the tape player-radio. The teen-ager described the man with the gun as about 25 years old, 7 feet tall, weighing approximately 140 pounds and having an afro haircut. He was wearing blue jeans but no shirt or shoes.

About an hour earlier, three women and a man were robbed by two armed teen-agers at the Neighborhood House, 2009 E. 13th St.

The victims, who reported a wallet and three purses stolen, were identified as Herbert Frederick Janssen, 29, of 3612 27th St.; Carolyn J. Anderson, 39, of 3102 81st St.; Connie Nall Kuratko, 24, of 4413 56th St.; and Juanita June Kuehn, 32, of 5410 25th St.

The four said they were leaving a meeting and walking to their cars when confronted by the suspects.

One of the teen-agers allegedly struck Janssen over the head with a stick, and the other suspect was said to have pulled a pistol and shot in the air.

Along with the wallet and three purses, $110 in cash was reported taken. The suspects were last seen heading north toward E. Broadway.

African Settlement In Jeopardy

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance flew to New York Wednesday to try to hold together the fragile agreement the Carter administration hopes will lead peacefully to independence for the Namibia.

On the eve of the United Nations Security Council meeting to ratify the agreement, there were signs that South Africa and the Namibians were having second thoughts.

State Department officials were hurriedly seeking to arrange meetings between Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen and South African Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha to try to smooth out the differences.

The South Africans and the Namibians both have agreed to a plan sponsored by the "contact group" of the United States, Great Britain, Italy, West Germany and France.

The plan sets a six-month timetable for holding elections in the country under U.N. supervision. South Africa would be allowed to keep 1,500 troops in specified bases in the country until the election results were certified.

The resolution takes no position on the future of Walvis Bay, the only deepwater port available to Namibia. Namibia is the old German colony of South-West Africa, which South Africa has administered under a League of Nations mandate since 1917.

But Walvis Bay was never part of the German colony. Britain claimed it, then turned its claim over to the colony that eventually became South Africa. South Africa insists that it retains sovereignty.

South Africa has protested about a resolution that other African nations plan to introduce immediately after the main resolution is considered by the Security Council. It would call on South Africa to take steps to integrate Walvis Bay with Namibia.

The United States has indicated it plans to vote for that second resolution. The South Africans consider this a betrayal. But the African states insist that Namibia is not a viable nation without a port.

If South Africa refuses to go along with the resolution because of the Walvis Bay issue, it could throw into jeopardy the chances of a peaceful transition to independence.

State Department officials said Wednesday they still think Sam Nujoma, the leader of the South-West Africa People's Organization, is sticking to the agreement despite some reports that he, too, is dissatisfied.

The Carter administration, anxious to chalk up a foreign policy success in Africa, is determined not to let the agreement fall apart. Officials say a peaceful Namibian settlement could set a precedent that would help lead to peaceful transitions to majority rule in Rhodesia and South Africa as well.

The Security Council is scheduled to consider the Namibian resolutions Thursday or Friday.

In negotiations earlier this month the Western nations promised SWAPO leaders they would back a resolution to have the Security Council call for "re-integration" of Walvis Bay into South-West Africa.

That resolution reportedly was to be introduced after the council endorsed the overall independence formula.

Secretary of State Vance arrived at the United Nations Wednesday, on the eve of the council debate, for talks aimed at saving the plan, worked out in 15-months of negotiations.

Last minute efforts to smooth over differences on the peace formula began on a sour note Wednesday when British Foreign Secretary David Owen upstaged Botha, who had scheduled a news conference in the lobby of a hotel across the street from United Nations headquarters.

Moments before Botha arrived, Owen came through the lobby and began answering questions from reporters. He said he was confident the agreement would stand, a view Botha has questioned.

"We've gone too far to let it slip away," Owen said.

Botha, who arrived at the hotel while Owen was speaking, stood for a few minutes watching. Then he strode past Owen's back, tight-lipped and silent, to a waiting elevator and went to his room.

"He's mad as hell," said one South African delegation official. Botha later held a news conference, in which he rejected the Walvis Bay formula.

Suspect's Alibi Reported Good

WACO (AP) — Waco police said Wednesday night that a man questioned in connection with the Oklahoma slayings of six restaurant employees appeared to have a solid alibi.

"It looked good for a while, but now it appears the alibis are checking out," said police Lt. Robert McCollum.

Waco officers arrested the man on a traffic violation Wednesday morning. The vehicle he was driving matched a description given Oklahoma authorities in connection with the slayings, in which victims were shot to death one-by-one and piled in a meat locker.

The man was still in custody on a weapons charge late Wednesday and officers said he had consented to take a lie detector test early Thursday. Sgt. Tom Mundy, police information officer at Oklahoma City, said a pistol was confiscated from the man when he was arrested.

Waco Police legal advisor Richard Carter said the man was cooperating with police. Carter said it did not appear that he owned the (Oldsmobile) Vista Cruiser station wagon impounded by Waco police.

An Oklahoma FBI agent said a suspect vehicle in the slayings is a "dirty green" Vista Cruiser station wagon.

PASSENGER RESCUED — Fireman atop a ladder assists a passenger in leaving one of 27 cable cars stranded as a result of a mishap at an amusement park near St. Louis Wednesday. ## Six Flags Cable Car Kills Three, Hurts One EUREKA, Mo. (AP) — A cable car fell 75 feet to the ground at a Six Flags amusement park Wednesday, killing at least three persons, injuring one and stranding 32 more on the ride, authorities said.

Fire trucks with rescue booms were called in to rescue the stranded, St. Louis County police said.

Two girls about 10 and 15 years old were dead on arrival at St. Joseph's Hospital in Kirkwood, the hospital said. St. Louis County Hospital said a man in his late teens was dead on arrival there.

Another girl, about 12, was listed in serious condition and undergoing surgery at St. Joseph's.

The ride, called the Skylift, runs across most of the width of the Six Flags Over Mid-America amusement park about 25 miles south of St. Louis. Passengers are carried in small, individual cars suspended on a moving cable about 75 feet high.

Reporters at the scene said an arm apparently broke off one of the poles supporting the cable, dumping the car to the ground.

The car reportedly fell into an area of bushes and through part of the fence on the park's perimeter.

Six Flags immediately began stopping all rides and closing parts of the park.

The contractor, Clark Electric Co., agreed to discuss the picketing with the union and the line was removed at 10:10 a.m.

No TV In Court, Judge Says

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The federal judge in the trial of former Nazi Feodor Fedorenko said Wednesday the emotion-charged atmosphere generated by the proceedings proves that television cameras should be kept out of courtrooms.

The Fedorenko trial was not televised.

Failed Test Won't Cost Teacher Job

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas teachers who flunked a required intelligence test — all 52 per cent of them — won't lose their jobs because of their failure, Superintendent Nolan Estes said Wednesday.

Estes said even the 11 who could not answer more than 10 of the 60 test questions correctly would not be dropped.

The tests were given to 535 first-year Dallas teachers.

Asked how he would feel about an Algebra teacher who flunked the mathematics portion of the test, or a literature teacher who did poorly on the verbal questions, Estes said, "I don't. I'd have to see the study first."

He added that the district has no plans to establish remedial classes to teach the teachers who had low scores on any portion of the test.

It was reported last week that more than half of the 535 teachers tested failed to answer 35 questions correctly, the cut-off score established by the district.

Estes could not say when the administration would release a promised report on a possible link between teacher intelligence and student achievement. He said the purpose of testing teachers hired in August, September and October of last year "was to establish a norm" against which the scores of job-seeking teachers could be compared.

Now that the "norm" has been established, Estes said, it may be included as part of the criteria used by hiring examiners when they consider applicants for teaching positions.

However, he added, "We may find there is no relationship. If we find out there's no relation, we'll junk it."

Despite the scores, Estes said with "10 applications for every (teaching) position," Dallas has no problem securing the best educators.

GARAGIOLA HOSTS CANINES

Joe Garagiola will host the "Canine Hall of Fame," a prime time entertainment special spotlighting dogs of all kinds on Channel 11.

For a year until June 30, the state Supreme Court allowed a test of television and still cameras in state courts.

"If ever a case supported the Judicial Conference rule barring cameras from the courtroom, this case does. From the beginning it was like a Hollywood spectacular and polarized the residents of South Florida," U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger said in a footnote to his 54-page opinion allowing Fedorenko to retain his citizenship.

Roettger pointed out that security was a problem from the start of the trial because of demonstrators and anti-Fedorenko local newspaper ads paid for by the Jewish Defense League.

"Lamentably, defendant's counsel was briefly attacked by women spectators at the courtroom entrance at the close of the trial," the judge said. "If the trial had been brought into South Florida homes by television, the incidence of such confrontations likely would have increased."

In October 1977, the murder trial of 15-year-old Ronny Zamora, whose defense was based on "TV insanity," was televised almost from gavel to gavel. Zamora was convicted of murdering an 83-year-old neighbor.

The judge, prosecutors and defense attorneys in the Zamora case all lauded the television coverage, excerpts of which were rebroadcast nationally by the Public Broadcast System network.

The state Supreme Court will hear arguments later this year on whether to change the state's judicial conduct code to allow cameras in state courts on a regular basis.

At least 14 states have initiated or are considering steps similar to Florida's test, and a similar proposal for federal courts is under consideration.

Roettger credited U.S. marshals and Fort Lauderdale police with maintaining order in the courtroom and outside the courthouse, where dozens of people marched and waved anti-Fedorenko signs. Police said one demonstrator was arrested when he used a bullhorn for chants in defiance of Roettger's admonishment that the noise could be heard in the courtroom.

A demonstrator waving a sign that said "Stop Jewish Witch Hunts" also got in a noisy skirmish with about a dozen spectators. At least 10 policemen surrounded the demonstrator and let him post his sign on the courthouse lawn, but it was quickly destroyed.

Compromise May Open Way For Adding Federal Judges

WASHINGTON (AP) — A deadlock that is holding up congressional authorization of 152 new federal judgeships moved toward possible settlement Wednesday in a House-Senate conference committee.

Senate members of the committee, who favor splitting the federal appeals court serving the Deep South, agreed to look at a compromise that would leave the court intact, but streamline its operations.

Advocates of dividing the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals argue that such a move is needed to keep the court from being too large. The court would have 26 judges after the new ones are authorized.

consisting of Texas and Louisiana. Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi would remain in the 5th circuit.

Opponents of the division argue that any redistribution of manpower on the federal appeals court bench should be considered on a national rather than a piecemeal basis. In addition, civil rights spokesmen have expressed fear that the diminished 5th circuit would be dominated by conservative judges.

Disagreement over the 5th circuit has stalled legislation that would create 117 additional U.S. district judges, bringing the total to 517, and 35 additional appeals court judges.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, in a letter released Sunday to Eastland and Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said "trials of civil cases in some districts may stop completely" unless the new judges are authorized this year.

The latest compromise, put forward by Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., would provide a new mechanism for reviewing the decisions of the three-judge panels that hear most appeals court cases.

Under the existing law, decisions of the panels may be reviewed by the full court. The Jordan plan would provide for review by a panel of at least eight judges but fewer than the entire 26.

Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and a leader in the move to divide the circuit, said Senate conferees would consider the Jordan compromise and let the House members know when they want another meeting to discuss it.

Eastland has been supporting another compromise, proposed by Attorney Gen.

Britain Expelling Iraqi Officers

LONDON (AP) — Britain is expelling eight Iraqi intelligence officers and barring three others from re-entering the country, government officials said Wednesday night.

A Foreign Office statement said the reason was Britain's "increasing concern at the threat posed by terrorist activities in London particularly against Arab targets. The presence in London of a number of known Iraqi intelligence officers has led us to the conclusion that it would be best that they should leave."

eral Griffin Bell, a former judge of the 5th circuit. The Bell plan would split the circuit but provide for a nine-member panel to settle questions on which the two new appeals courts reach conflicting decisions.

Eastland told the conferees, however, that he was willing to "settle this thing on any reasonable basis."

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., objected to creation of a "supercourt" to mediate between the two new courts. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said circuit court rulings should be subject only to Supreme Court review.

"Let's not follow a system that indicates distrust of the judges of any one part of the country," Thurmond said.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I had two tall climbing plants that were really going, and wood just didn't look right to stand these up by.

I ran across an old round kitchen curtain rod, separated the two extender rods (about two feet long each), and painted them black. Then glued on ice cream sticks every six inches. Fantastic for long, trailing plants. Looks like wrought iron. — Jackie Lawson

For years now I have worn a watch and I have had problems. Mainly it has to do with sweaty arms. The watch left marks on my arm and sometimes the marks even had pus in them. I was at my wits' end.

Then about a year ago I thought that there had to be a better way. So I put sticky transparent tape on the back of the watch. I trimmed the edges. And since then, no problem.

I have to change the tape about every four or five months. But at least I don't have the marks anymore. — Ed Morzy

DEAR HELOISE:

A friend of mine and I came up with an idea I thought was worth sharing.

We were going shopping, taking her 4-month-old baby with us — diaper bag, stroller, etc. We didn't discover until we took the stroller out, that she'd forgotten the strap to hold the baby in the stroller.

We were in a jam until I hit on the idea of tying two diapers together as a substitute strap. My friend went one better, and pinned them. Worked great! I wonder how many other new mothers have faced this problem? — Barb

DEAR HELOISE:

Would you believe, many? If you have one for Barb now, just write to me. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's one for den mothers. If your Girl Scouts have old pantyhose, they can use them to tie up their sleeping bags. — Roberta Hess

DEAR HELOISE:

I have saved buttons for years. Now, with them the price that they are, I find myself going to my button box to see if there are any I can use.

Yesterday I took some white buttons out for a blouse. After soaking them in bleach, rinsing and drying, they were dull.

I took a cotton swab and "painted" them with acrylic floor finish — the kind I use on my linoleum. It restored the beauty and shine to the buttons. — Helen II

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of harsh cleansers, I use powdered laundry detergent to scrub all tubs and sinks in the house.

If stains persist, pour a little bleach on the cloth used for scrubbing. (I wear gloves, naturally.)

I put detergent into shaker containers and have one for each washing area. The family also uses the shakers for greasy and dirty hands. — S. Sidorski

DEAR HELOISE:

I've ruined more sunglasses by getting them scratched in my purse. Then one day I discovered the perfect answer right in the bottom of my purse, my mittens — leftovers from cold spring mornings.

They're soft, so won't scratch and you can pull the thumb inside so it will look like a case. — Diane Skiba

That's a nifty idea. You sure deserve a gold star. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Hand lotion, applied just a minute or two after using nail polish, is great polish drier and nails do not tend to smudge as easily. Makes them shiny. — Bee

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: After kidney X-rays, the doctor (a urologist) told us our five-year-old son was born with spina bifida. We asked if it was anything we should worry about, and he said he didn't think so. Since then we've been told to have this reevaluated by further examinations. Will you please give us your opinion of this? He seems healthy and normal. — Mrs. S.M.

Spina bifida is a congenital defect (present at birth) in which segments of the vertebral column fail to fuse properly. This can occur in varying degrees. We hear more about the serious forms in which there is gross defect and in which paralysis occurs. But a mild form (spina bifida occulta) can be present with no untoward effects. It shows as a tiny dimple in the middle of the lower back.

Having said this, I should advise you that such a defect might cause urinary tract disorders in youngsters, and so that should be investigated. It is interesting that your child had to have kidney X-rays. But you don't tell me why. It may be that there is a connection between a kidney problem and his mild case of spina bifida, one so slight as to cause no concern. Discuss this with the physician.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a six-year-old with urinary problems. He rarely makes it through the night without wetting his bed. He will also wet his pants in the daytime before he can make it to the bathroom. Can you suggest help for him? — Mrs. W.A.M.

There are many causes of bedwetting — and many cures. The problem is to match the cure to the cause. Allergy to certain foods is a prime one — milk, citrus fruits, wheat or eggs, for examples. Chocolate and cola drinks, of which children are so fond, can cause it. There can be a functional problem, such as malformation of the urethra or its muscles. My source says functional problems lie at the root of as many as 60 percent of bedwetting cases after age three. A third area is psychological.

I suspect non-psychological factors in your boy's case, especially since you imply that he attempts but fails to "make it" to the bathroom during the daytime. This indicates one of the functional problems mentioned above. He should be seen by a urologist, a doctor who specializes in disorders of the urinary tract. For reading in this, I suggest my booklet, "Bedwetting: Ways to Stop It." For a copy, send a quarter and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a problem with my annual internal examination. It is painful and my doctor says it is my age (71). I am so dry, and lubricants cannot be used because the Pap test would not be effective with it. What shall I do? I dread it. — M.T.

It is true that lubricants cannot be used prior to the Pap test. It confuses the results. Well after menopause there can be formation of adhesions in this area. If there are adhesions (fibrous bands) you might consider having them removed. There is nothing to do yourself about the situation, which is most distressing for women your age.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is temporal arteritis? — Mrs. C.C.

Arteritis is inflammation of an artery or arteries. Temporal arteritis is inflammation of arteries in the temple area of the head. It's also called cranial arteritis, and is featured by throbbing pain and noticeable pulsing of the arteries. It requires prompt treatment with high doses of corticosteroid drugs. The eyes can be affected by this. Often other arteries are also involved, so there may be symptoms elsewhere in the body.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 25-year-old male with very little facial hair. I would like to grow a beard, but can't. Is there some medicine I could take that would grow facial hair? — J.R.

None that you would want to fool around with for such a frivolous reason.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there an organization one can write to for information about fertility problems? Can you give me an address to write to? — L.D.

One group is the American Fertility Society, 1608 13th Ave. South, Birmingham, Ala. 35205.

Although cholesterol has been implicated in heart attacks and other circulatory troubles, it is also vital to human life. For this reason Dr. Thosteson has entitled his booklet, "Control Your Cholesterol Sensibly." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes readers mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

THOUGHTS ON HOPE

"Lord, dismiss us with thy blessing. Hope and comfort from above: Let us each, thy peace possessing Triumph in redeeming love." (Robert Hawkin: "Benediction")

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — New serials are fewer and more far between these days than in the 1950s and early '60s when debuting soaps popped up and disappeared in six-month or less cycles. Production suppliers keep mum about "serials in development" and most of the top-secret projects never see the daylight screen.

A few years ago it was rumored that the 1957 film, "An Affair to Remember," was being brushed off as a possible serial vehicle for CBS. Nothing ever came of that, but Mike Ogiens, vice president of CBS daytime programs, admits that a serial is currently being developed by veteran Bill Bell, who created "The Young and the Restless." But most of the CBS serials are ratings rich and don't appear to be likely cancellation candidates. And since "Search For Tomorrow" will probably be expanded to a full hour before the end of the year, there's not much room in the CBS daytime lineup for a new soap opera.

NBC seems to have cooled its ardor regarding the development of "The Afternoon Novel" concept which would have presented best-selling novels in six to 13-week daytime cycles. The network is instead gambling on a "news magazine"-type daytime feature, "America Alive" (formerly titled "People to People"), which debuts later this month.

At ABC there's a serial project created by Ann Marcus, currently head writer for NBC's "Days of Our Lives," which has made the rounds of rumored consideration to replace a currently failing serial unless the ratings numbers pick up by fall.

On the syndication route, a political-themed serial that was tentatively named "Potomac Fever" two years ago never got beyond the planning stages. And more recently a Miami-based "Grand Hotel"-type soap, "The Gold Coast," seems to have hit the skids. But Claire Labine and Paul Avila Mayer, who created "Ryan's Hope," have a serial concept on the drafting boards that insiders report shows great promise. Tune in tomorrow to see if it comes to naught or yea.

SHORT TAKES:

JUST LAST week this column reported that it was unlikely Judith Barcroft (ex-Anne Martin on "All My Children") would return to the serial scene in the near future. This week we eat our words since Barcroft is stepping into the role of Susan Stewart on "As the World Turns." Marie Masters, who originated the part of Susan, has decided to take a two-months' leave of absence, "for no other reason than that I need a long sun-drenched rest," as Marie told us, and is on her way to California. Barcroft is no stranger to serials. Besides "AMC," she created the role of Lenore Moore Curtin on "Another World" several years ago. Another newcomer to "ATWT" is toddler Claire Doyle as baby Amy, who was mysteriously left on Carol Stallings' doorstep with a note claiming that it was Natalie Hughes and Jay's (Carol's husband) baby.

ON "One Life to Live" Nat Polen plays Jim Craig, who recently underwent open-heart surgery. Coincidentally, Nat played in a celebrity golf tournament last week with castmates Al Freeman Jr. (Ed Hall) and Michael Storm (Larry Wolek) in order to raise funds for St. Francis Hospital on Long Island, New York. The proceeds were used to transport a child from a foreign country to the hospital for corrective surgery for a heart disorder.

SKITCH HENDERSON reveals that prior to becoming a renowned bandmaster he played the organ on the radio serial, "One Man's Family." But Henderson became so enthralled with what was going on in the story that during a dramatic highlight he accidentally slipped his elbow across the keyboard. That was the beginning and the end of his one-day organist job on a soap.

Tune in tomorrow to see why he had cause to lose concentration.

(Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," 230 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Questions cannot be answered personally but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.)

Union Wants Showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees said Wednesday it is rejecting a conciliation agreement offered by the Federal Election Commission and wants a court showdown in a dispute stemming from the 1976 presidential election.

Jerry Wurf, president of AFSCME, said he had instructed the union's lawyers to refuse to sign the agreement and thereby challenge the FEC to drop the case or file suit.

The case, which Wurf said had been under investigation for 16 months, involves a cartoon poster distributed by the union two years ago poking fun at then President Gerald R. Ford.

The union said the election commission claims the mailings represented political activity covered by federal election law and therefore their costs should have been reported to the FEC.

Under the Federal Election Campaign Act, a union or other membership group spending more than $2,000 on political communications which advocate the election or defeat of a candidate must submit an itemized report of such expenditures.

But the union claimed the poster was an internal communication among union members and not a campaign effort.

"Certainly, the poster did nothing to enhance Mr. Ford's candidacy for re-election," Wurf said. "It obviously was a sharp kind of criticism. It might even be seen as an implied statement of opposition to Mr. Ford's candidacy. But I would defy anyone to look at that poster and identify any express advocacy of his defeat in the election."

The union said FEC lawyers had asked it to admit it was in non-compliance with the election law and to pay a fine of $963, the amount spent on the posters and not reported.

David Fiske, spokesman for the FEC, said the commission is forbidden by law to comment on a pending compliance case. But under the law, the next step is now up to the commissioners.

Resident Asks Council To Consider Annexing

The Lubbock City Council will be asked Thursday to consider annexing an area southeast of the city or extending city water service to the area.

Meeting in regular session beginning at 9:30 a.m., council members are scheduled to hear the request of Mrs. R.L. Gibson of 4215 E. 61st to be annexed into the city or to receive city water service.

Mrs. Gibson, who lives one block outside the city limits in the Yellowhouse Canyon addition, gets water from a 15-year-old private system which she says is inadequate.

Also Thursday, council members for the second time will mediate a dispute over an ordinance requiring certain electrical cable to be enclosed in plastic conduits.

Henry Huneke, representing the West Texas Homebuilders Association, claimed at the last council meeting the conduits are too expensive for builders and do not protect cables from being cut accidentally as they are supposed to do.

An ordinance designed to cut down on the number of false alarms Lubbock police must answer should be put to its first council vote Thursday. Council members are also scheduled to discuss an ordinance which would require railroad companies to place cross arms and lights at hazardous railroad crossings.

The council is expected to accept bids for constructing a parking building at the Lubbock International Airport and for roadway and parking improvements at the airport. The parking building is expected to cost $1.6 million to construct.

They are also scheduled to consider bids for air conditioning and heating the Godeke Library, for purchasing a second "jaws of life" rescue tool for the fire department and for buying tennis court lighting equipment for the parks department.

EPA Approves Grasshopper Pesticides

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency gave its permission on Wednesday to use four pesticides to kill grasshoppers plaguing crops and rangelands in the West.

The four pesticides are Dimethoate, Furadan, Dursban and Orthene. EPA spokesman Larry O'Neill said.

Both Nebraska and Kansas requested permission to use new pesticides to kill the grasshoppers.

The pesticides already are approved by EPA for use on some crops, and their use was simply extended to new crops that are being ravaged by hordes of the insects, O'Neill said.

EPA refused to permit the use of Endrin, and said it would make a decision later on whether Heptachlor could be used. Both pesticides hold the potential for possible damage to human health.

EPA said the four approved pesticides could be used on winter wheat, alfalfa, sorghum, corn, soybeans, pasture grass and range grass.

O'Neill said the four pesticides are safe and effective. However, O'Neill said the EPA could not give either state assurance the approved pesticides would not harm wildlife, bees or livestock.

Court Denies Marrow Transplant Order

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A judge ruled Wednesday that the cousin of a critically ill man cannot be forced to submit to a bone marrow transplant, even though it might increase the patient's chances for survival.

"In our law, there's no duty to rescue someone or save someone's life," said Allegheny County Judge John P. Flaherty. "Our society is based on the right and sanctity of the individual."

Robert McFall, 39, went to court Monday after his cousin, David Shimp, 43, refused to agree to further tests to determine whether his bone marrow was compatible for a transplant.

McFall suffers from aplastic anemia, a disease that blocks formation of blood cells in the bone marrow. Without a transplant, doctors say his chances for survival are slim.

A preliminary examination showed Shimp was the only likely family donor. He refused to cooperate for health reasons, his lawyer said. Shimp's health problems have not been disclosed.

"Forcible extraction of living body tissue causes revulsion to the judicial mind," said Flaherty. "You can picture the man being strapped to the table and then the extraction."

"This is not our society. The rights of the individual must be upheld, even though it appears to be a harsh decision."

"I love my cousin, we're like brothers, but he has a fear in him," McFall said in a hospital interview after the ruling.

He said he had little hope of winning the case, and had pondered whether to raise the legal issue at all.

"I thought about it good and hard," he said. "I have a moral obligation to fight for my life. Whether you're religious or not, there is a moral obligation. I'm no philosopher, but I'd like to stick around for a couple more years."

McFall has not spoken with his cousin since Monday. He related that Shimp told him of a dream during a visit last week.

"He told me that he saw two men in the operating room and one got up and walked away," McFall said. "I think he interpreted the dream the wrong way."

McFall's sister, Beverly Hope, was in the courtroom as Flaherty's decision was announced. She remained composed until after talking to reporters, then burst into tears.

"I think the judge did the only thing he could do," she said. "I respect his decision, but I also respect my brother's right to live."

McFall, an insulation worker, was admitted to Mercy Hospital in June for a nosebleed. Doctors then discovered his illness.

Dr. Louis Pietragallo testified Tuesday that McFall's chances of living one year are less than 25 percent unless he receives bone marrow to manufacture adequate blood cells.

A transplant, requiring about 100 to 150 bone punctures in the donor's pelvis, would increase his chances to 40 percent or 60 percent, he said. Pietragallo described the procedure as a minor operation.

Shimp's attorney, John Studeny said there would be a "significant medical risk to my client if he undergoes the operation. He believes he has a health problem that could be affected by the transplant."

Doctors are expected to try experimental chemical treatment on McFall, which Pietragallo said is not as effective as a transplant. "Perhaps he'll live out a year, but his quality of life may not be described as quality," said Mrs. Hope.

top shape for the auction. The car will go to the highest bidder during the auction, which airs from 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday on Channel 13. Proceeds from the auction will go to approximately one dozen charities. (Staff Photo)

Hawaii, Guam Dope Entry Points

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hawaii and Guam have become key points for movement of heroin into the United States now that supplies from Mexico have largely been shut off, the House Select Committee on Narcotics reported Wednesday.

Committee members recommended a substantial increase in customs personnel assigned to Hawaii and Guam to help local officials crack down on traffic in heroin and cocaine.

They characterized their findings as the preliminary results of a 17-day trip to major drug shipment points, including Hawaii, Guam, Thailand and Hong Kong.

Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., the committee chairman, said Hawaii and Guam have grown in prominence as relay points for heroin from Southeast Asia's "Golden Triangle," and cocaine from Latin America, due to their location and the "successful poppy eradication program in Mexico."

Wolff said the switch in heroin traffic routes into the United States shows "that the war on drugs is a guerrilla war," where the best hope is breaking up traditional routes to make narcotics movement more costly and difficult.

Rep. Daniel Akaka, D-Hawaii, said Hawaii's location has made it a "significant link" in major narcotics trafficking by air and sea.

The Honolulu airport ranks second in the nation for the number of daily foreign arrivals and departures, he said, and about 60 extra customs agents are needed to do "an effective job."

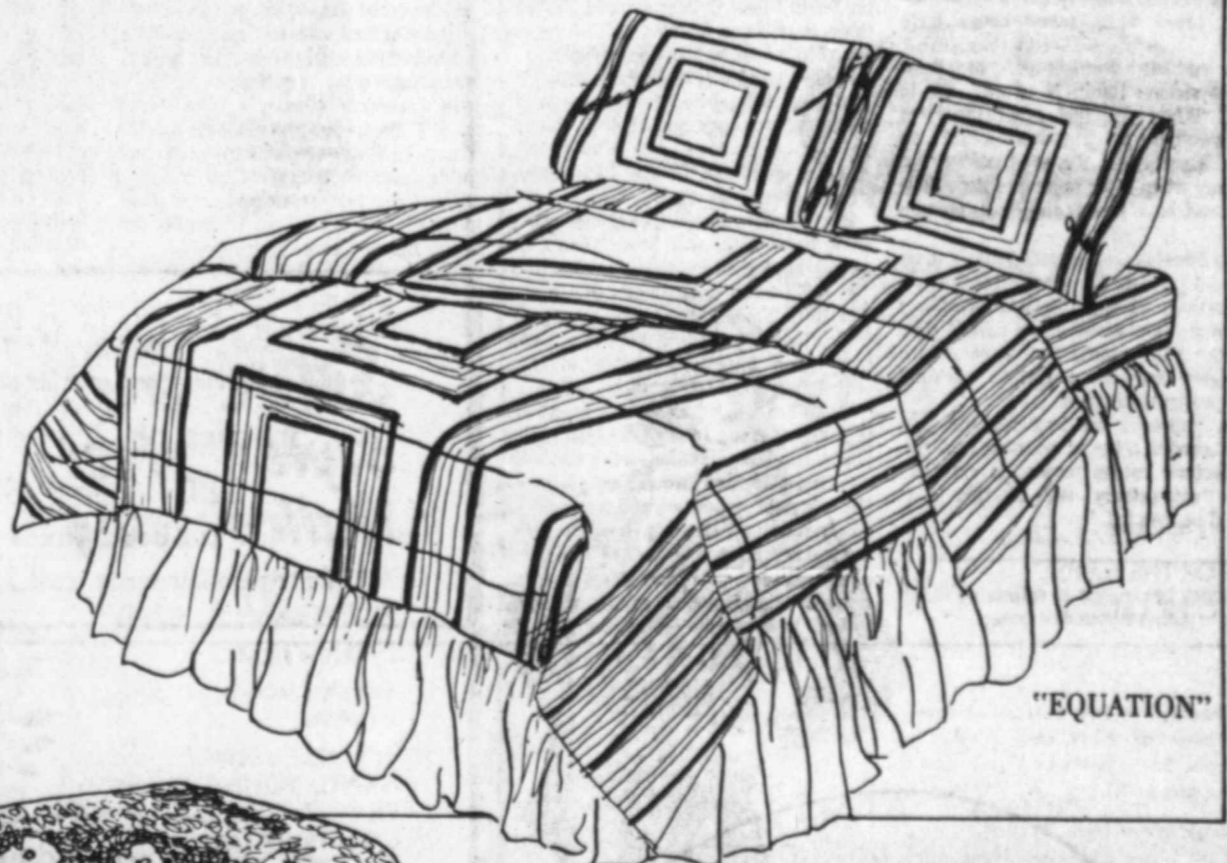

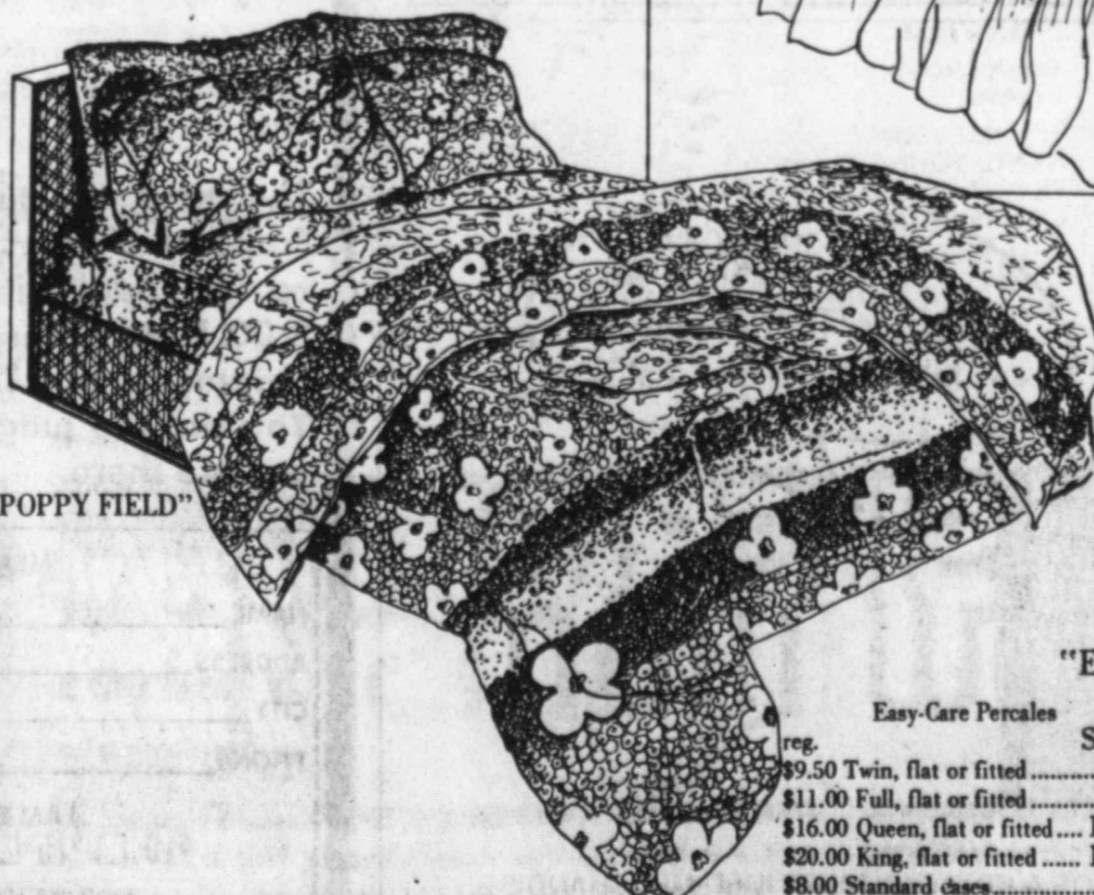

"I am truly amazed that there is only one narcotics sniffing dog in Hawaii to cover all airport, seaport and postal facilities," Akaka said.

The committee said the health and safety of Guam residents is threatened by drugs and drug-related crime, and a stepped-up U.S. enforcement effort is of "great urgency."

Antonio Won Pat, the non-voting delegate from Guam, said, "I couldn't go out at night by myself because I was afraid I might become a victim."

Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., said of Guam: "Heroin is readily available on the island. It comes in from all directions ... The island has become a transshipment point for smuggling this deadly drug into the United States."

FDA Wants Drug Ads Corrected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has informed G.D. Searle & Co. that its advertisements for two anti-hypertensive drugs are misleading and should be corrected.

Eileen Sheehan, an FDA spokeswoman, confirmed on Wednesday that the giant pharmaceutical company was cited for misleading radio and magazine advertising in a letter from the FDA last week.

She said Searle was asked to withdraw its ad and submit proposed remedial ads to the FDA, as well as proposed letters to physicians clarifying the status of the two drugs.

O.B. Parrish, president of Searle's pharmaceutical group, said: "I simply don't think the FDA's position is warranted. We will be making that position clear in our responses and other action under the procedures provided for in the law and regulation."

The substances were identified as Aldactazide and Aldactone, which contain the chemical spironolactone, an ingredient shown to cause tumors in animals.

Miss Sheehan said the two drugs are for use only as a last resort in cardiovascular cases when other drugs have failed.

She said the advertisements, broadcast by Physicians Radio Network, said in part, "When you feel other measures just won't do..." The ads should have stated clearly that the products are for use only when other measures have been tried and have failed, the spokeswoman said.

Miss Sheehan also quoted from a magazine ad published in professional trade publications which called the substance "a unique potassium safety valve." She said the FDA maintains that potassium imbalance may be a serious problem when using Aldactazide.

The approved labeling for the two drugs carries a boxed warning that spironolactone causes tumors in rats and that "unnecessary use of this drug should be avoided."

NEW EDITORS NAMED — Three students at South Plains College in Levelland have been named editors of 1978-79 student publications. Clyde L. Hance, left, of Shallowater and Robbie Thrash of Levelland will be co-editors of the "Plainsmen Press," and Dee Sanderson of Knox City will head the "Caprock."

Levelland College Editors Named

LEVELLAND (Special) — Editors for the South Plains College student publications have been named, according to John McCarroll, publications sponsor.

Robbie Thrash, 1978 graduate of Levelland High School and former editor of the LHS newspaper, and Clyde L. Hance, an SPC sophomore from Shallowater, will be co-editors of the "Plainsmen Press," the college newspaper.

Miss Thrash is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Thrash of Levelland. Under her editorship at LHS the "Lobo Lair" won numerous awards in high school journalism competition.

Miss Thrash went to state competition in the University Interscholastic League journalism contests. She earlier had won one first place and two second places in UIL district competition and won first in editorial writing, second in headline writing and second in news writing in regional competition. She won third place in news writing and placed in the top seven in both headline and editorial writing on the state level. Hance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Hance of Shallowater. He is a graduate of Shallowater High School and a four-year veteran of the U.S. Navy.

He has served as secretary-treasure of the SPC Press Club and made the Dean's Honor List during both the fall and spring semesters last year.

Hance is a journalism major and plans to transfer to Texas Tech University following his sophomore year here.

Sanderson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L.D. Sanderson Jr. of Knox City. He is a 1977 graduate of Three-Way High School in Maple.

A journalism major, Sanderson has won district, regional and state awards in UIL journalism competition while in high school. In addition, he has served as a photographer for the "Hockley County Free Press" in Levelland and works as a darkroom technician for the SPC relations office.

Countries Advised To End Differences

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Member nations of the troubled non-aligned movement were warned Wednesday to patch up their differences and steer clear of both Western and Soviet power politics.

"Fears have been expressed about the movement's being deflected or straying from its appointed goals," Sri Lankan Foreign Minister A.C.S. Hameed told delegates from 83 other member nations and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Hameed's remark, apparently aimed at a Cuban-led attempt to promote a pro-Soviet version of non-alignment, was echoed by Indian Foreign Minister A.B. Vajpayee.

"We must guard against any deviation from non-alignment," Vajpayee said in the first full business day of the Belgrade meeting of non-aligned foreign ministers.

Cuba's delegates were expected to speak Wednesday, but did not. No explanation was given, but conference sources said the Cubans probably would speak Thursday.

Arab foreign ministers held their countries' first meeting together since their ranks split last November after Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's peace mission to Israel.

The Arabs reportedly set up a committee of ambassadors to consider PLO, Syrian and Iraqi proposals on the Palestinian issue.

"We met and that is the most important development," an Arab source told Tanjug, the official Yugoslav news agency.

The meeting was the first such gathering of Arab diplomats since Sadat's peace campaign separated Egypt from the so-called "Rejection Front," composed of Libya, Syria, Algeria, the North Yemen and the PLO.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hum-madi urged members of the movement to press for an end to American aid to Israel. He said American policy in the Middle East had the "hallmarks of the colonialists of the last century."

Vajpayee raised the issue of foreign military intervention, a touchy issue at the convention because of Western military intervention in Zaire and the presence of Cuban troops in Angola and elsewhere in Africa.

The movement, Vajpayee said, "should not allow a situation to develop which will lead to a vicious cycle of external military defenders or involvement."

"If we do," he said in his speech, "we bring in the cold war by the back door, having all but succeeded in rejecting it frontally."

In earlier closed sessions that ran almost a day behind schedule because of internal disputes, delegates accepted Pakistan and San Marino as guest members of the organization, but tabled action on an application from Bolivia. Cuba and others had objected to the Bolivian application, which at one point was withdrawn and then later resubmitted.

The non-aligned movement is an organization of non-bloc states set up by Yugoslav President Tito, former Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and the late Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt. It held its first summit in Belgrade in 1961 and is to hold its sixth in Havana next year.

Hameed urged the organization to stick to its 1961 principle of staying out of Eastern and Western power blocs and spheres of influence.

"The movement has not sought to enforce ideological uniformity on its members," he said. "Our unity is a unity of purpose and of principles."

Toledo Worm Market Busy

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A shortage of night crawlers has turned the local bait shop business into a miniature Wall Street.

The fat, reddish-brown worms, so delectable to fish, are in such short supply and in such demand in Toledo that prices have soared and bait suppliers are trading with one another.

A two-month drought in Canada, which usually supplies the Toledo market, has left the ground too dry and hard for the worms to surface.

Prices are as high as $40 per 1,000 and $1 a dozen, with worm pickers in Canada holding their own auctions and selling to independent wholesalers for almost double the going prices during the spring.

Wormkeeper James Thompkins said he's "up a tree right now" since the store is completely sold out. The business had 33,000 night crawlers July 17 but sold that supply within two days.

IRS Won't Pay Moving Expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Ohio man has been denied an income tax deduction for moving expenses because he did not work for at least 39 weeks at his new location.

William N. Church Jr. had sought to deduct the cost of moving from Chicago to Detroit when transferred by his employer in 1974.

According to papers filed in U.S. Tax Court, 37 weeks after moving to Detroit, Church left his job and moved to Akron, Ohio to take another position.

The tax court upheld the denial of the moving expense deduction by the Internal Revenue Service because, under the law, an individual has to work in his new location for at least 39 weeks for his moving expenses to be deductible.

Dollar Declines To New Lows On Foreign Exchanges Abroad

By The Associated Press
The dollar continued to plummet to new lows against the Japanese yen but gained against European currencies on foreign exchange markets Wednesday as news of the lowest monthly American trade deficit in more than a year was announced.

The price of gold dropped slightly. Gold closed in London at $194 an ounce against $194.60 Tuesday; in Zurich, gold closed at $194.375, compared with $193.875.

In late New York trading, the dollar dropped to 193.90 yen, down from Tuesday's 196.05. Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar had fallen to 195.05 yen, down from 195.525 Tuesday and from 201.25 yen Friday.

The 200-yen level long was considered a psychological barrier, but one trader at a Japanese bank said Wednesday that "there aren't any psychological barriers left."

American tourists and residents in Japan have been feeling the pinch. A 6,600-yen tiny single room in a major hotel, which cost $28.82 two months ago, now costs $33.85.

The dollar's fall against the yen late Wednesday came despite the announcement that the U.S. trade deficit in June totaled $1.6 billion, down from $2.2 billion in May. The report compared favorably with forecasts of a gap of up to $2.5 billion between U.S. imports and exports.

But the Commerce Department said June's trade deficit with Japan totaled $1,003 billion, virtually unchanged from May's $1,001 billion gap.

Earlier, the Bank of Japan had purchased an estimated $200 million in an unsuccessful attempt to prop up the dollar on the Tokyo exchange.

Bank of Japan Governor Teichiro Morinaga charged at a news conference that the market "has gone too far" and "has reacted too sensitively to speculative views." And Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, meanwhile, asked government ministers dealing with economic affairs to come up by Sept. 2 with plans to stimulate Japan's economy.

The government is trying to boost domestic demand in an attempt to increase imports and cut the large Japanese trade surpluses. But Fukuda said, "even if we promise not to go beyond our 1977 export levels, the dollar value of what we sell overseas increases because of the decline of the dollar's worth and the consequent inflation in the United States."

The dollar's decline has made imports more expensive for Americans, contributing to inflation. But it also means American exports are becoming more competitive and American investments possibly are more attractive to foreigners. In Japan's case, the appreciating yen makes its exports more expensive abroad but also makes imports of critical raw materials cheaper, canceling out some of the currency revaluation's impact.

Although the dollar lost some ground against European currencies in late New York trading, it closed above Tuesday's levels. Traders said the afternoon decline began after Robert Strauss, President Carter's chief inflation-fighter, predicted that the cost of living might "very easily" rise more than the 7.2 percent that the administration is predicting for 1978.

Dealers also said nervousness over today's anticipated announcement of West German trade surplus figures trimmed some of the dollar's gains.

In New York, the dollar closed at 2.0520 West German marks, up from 2.0515 Wednesday but down from 2.0575 at midday. The dollar closed at 4.4010 French francs, up from 4.4013; and at 1.7830 Swiss francs against 1.7810 the day before. The Canadian dollar was quoted at 88.98 U.S. cents, compared with 88.91 cents Tuesday.

It took $1.9145 to buy a British pound in New York Wednesday, against $1.9234 the day before. In London, the pound dropped to $1.9113 from $1.9245 Tuesday.

Closing dollar rates at other major financial centers included: Frankfurt, 2.0575 marks, up from 2.0488 Tuesday; Zurich, 1.7870 Swiss francs, up from 1.77825; Paris, 4.4070 French francs, up from 4.3985; Amsterdam, 2.2245 guilders, up from 2.2190; and Milan, 844.50 lire, up from 844.10.

Carter Pledges Support Of GSA Cleanup Move

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has added his clout to efforts aimed at cleaning up the General Services Administration, hit by allegations of fraud, bribery and corruption.

In a memo to GSA Administrator Jay Solomon, Carter said Wednesday he has asked the Justice Department to provide whatever help is needed to correct the problems in the $5 billion annual operation of the federal government's main landlord and central supply store.

"I am deeply disturbed by the allegations of wrongdoing within the General Services Administration that have recently come to my attention," Carter wrote. "These allegations describe a pattern of misconduct extending over many years and ranging from abuse of federal authority to criminal practices such as fraud."

"If these charges are true, an extremely serious breach of the public trust has occurred."

Allegations of wrongdoing at the GSA have been aired at hearings by a Senate subcommittee and in stories by the Washington Post, The Associated Press and others.

Investigators have turned up evidence of thefts, fraud, kickbacks, extortion and waste across the country amounting to more than $100 million a year. Hundreds of employees of GSA and other federal agencies are targets of ongoing investigations by the GSA and law enforcement officials.

The accusations range from payment for work never done and misuse of 80,000 government gasoline credit cards to thefts from GSA self-service stores.

A major area now under investigation is the possibility of large bribes by contractors to high-level GSA officials and others, sources say.

Carter said he fully supports Solomon's efforts to root out the corruption. Solomon, Carter's appointee to the agency's top job, has brought in a former federal prosecutor to ramrod an internal investigation of the scandal.

"I support and commend the steps you have taken so far to bring this matter to light and to bring those responsible to justice," Carter wrote. "I will back you fully in whatever procedural, personnel, organizational and other actions are needed."

Carter said he was sending a copy of the memo to Attorney General Griffin Bell, asking Bell to provide Solomon with whatever assistance is needed "to complete your investigations and to take appropriate and rapid remedial measures."

Richard Vawter, a GSA spokesman, said Solomon was happy with Carter's interest.

"He is pleased that the president knows the situation at GSA and that he has given his support to whatever steps will have to be taken to clean the situation up," Vawter said.

Postal Union Leaders To Decide On Contract Proposal Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — As wildcat mail strikes subsided in New York and California, local leaders of the nation's largest mailers union met Wednesday to decide whether to endorse or reject a new proposed contract.

National officials of the 280,000-member American Postal Workers Union plan to submit the accord to the membership for ratification even if local leaders vote their disapproval, said one union source.

But a rejection by a majority of the APWU's 49-member national bargaining advisory committee would fuel mounting calls for the contract's rejection and make ratification more difficult.

The local officials who compose the advisory committee were expected to debate at length on the tentative accord at union headquarters here, possibly delaying a vote until Thursday.

One union source acknowledged that the outcome of the committee's vote was in doubt.

Meanwhile, U.S. Postal Service officials said Wednesday that worker attendance has improved at bulk mail centers for New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where some employees walked off the job last Friday to protest the proposed contract.

Postal Service spokesman David McLean said 72 percent of the work force showed up at the New York center in Jersey City Wednesday morning, up from 61 percent the day before.

Attendance at the San Francisco center in Richmond, Calif., reached 81 percent for the Tuesday night shift, up from 70 percent earlier that day, while attendance at the Los Angeles center reached 89 percent by Tuesday night. McLean said attendance at those centers for Wednesday was not immediately known.

The Postal Service has sent letters of dismissal to 72 employees at the three centers for participating in the walkouts, which are prohibited by federal law. More dismissals were likely, said McLean.

He added that delivery of packages and second- and third-class mail was running close to normal despite the walkouts. First-class mail is not handled at the centers.

The walkouts followed settlement early Friday on a three-year contract covering 554,000 workers represented by three unions.

The new agreement includes a continuing ban against layoffs and provides a 19.5 percent wage increase spread over three years.

In addition to the wildcat strikes, a number of union locals have taken straw votes calling for a rejection of the contract and have indicated they would join a New York-initiated walkout.

That possibility hangs on the outcome of a strike vote scheduled for next Monday by the militant New York Area Postal Union, the nation's largest local, which led an illegal strike in 1970.

The contract rejection votes by the locals are not recognized by leaders of the APWU, the National Association of Letter Carriers and the Mailhandlers division of Laborers-International. The three unions hope to mail official ballots to the membership by early next week. Tabulation of the votes is expected to be completed by mid-August.

APWU officials said their union's constitution requires that the advisory committee meet to discuss the proposed contract and help conduct the ratification vote.

APODACA SELECTED

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced on Wednesday the appointment of Gov. Jerry Apodaca of New Mexico as chairman of the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

Junior Rodeo Queen Selection Planned

The queen will be determined by the number of advance tickets sold by each contestant for the Aug. 8-12 rodeo.

The contestant who sells the most advance tickets will win a specially designed trophy buckle valued at $200 and will be crowned during Friday night's performance of the rodeo finals at the Scurry County Coliseum here.

Texas-Style Dominoes World Tourney Slated

A-J Correspondent
BIG SPRING — Seventy-two two-man teams, representing half a dozen states, will be in competition in the first World Championship Texas-Style Domino Tournament here at 7 p.m. today.

The finals of the unique tournament will be on closed-circuit television at the Brass Nail Supper Club Saturday afternoon.

Entry fee is $100 per team. Cash awards and trophies will be awarded to the top 24 teams.

George McAlister, who relied on a computer to arrange first-round pairings, is director of the tournament.

Added attractions during the meet will be a Saturday night country and western show in the high school auditorium, featuring a regular on the Hee Haw television program, Jana Jae. That will be followed by a 15-minute practical demonstration on the domino toppling theory, featuring Bob Speca, a Pennsylvania collegian who has already appeared on the Johnny Carson TV show three times.

Speca will set up 20,000 dominoes in the high school gymnasium, a challenge that will require seven minutes before the last domino falls.

At least 42 Texas communities, as well as the states of Georgia, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Arizona and Missouri, will be represented in the tournament. Included in the field is an all-female tandem. Several mixed teams also will vie for the championship.

The first round of competition, which will be held in the Dora Roberts Community Center, will be preceded by a barbecue for contestants and special guests.

At least one magazine is sending a reporter here to cover the event, as are the syndicated TV show, "The Eyes of Texas," WFAA-TV, Dallas; and two West Texas television stations.

It will require an estimated 20 hours of competition to determine the eight semi-finalists.

Sponsoring the event will be the American Petrofina Co., whose president, Paul Meek, will present awards Saturday night in the high school auditorium. Meek, an avid domino player, has indicated he will play in the tournament.

"Texas-style dominoes" differ from similar games in that entries draw seven dominoes and use only the first double played as a "spinner." Only that spinner can be abutted on all four sides.

McAlister collaborated with Lloyd McLeod to author the book, "Texas Style Dominoes."

Foolproof Odometers Rapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government regulation requiring tamper-resistant mileage counters in automobiles was criticized Wednesday as inadequate or unnecessary.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., joined an inventor and a General Motors official in attacking a regulation issued by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to prevent persons from rolling back the mileage on car odometers.

The government estimates that consumers pay up to $1 billion a year in inflated auto prices because of mileage rollbacks — an illegal practice commonly known as "spinning."

Ford, presiding over a Senate consumer subcommittee hearing, compared the reliability of a standard proposed last March to that of information gained by kicking a car's tires.

A revised version of the regulation is to be published today.

"This new regulation on first reading seems inadequate," Ford said. "If this new standard does not work, I assure you that I will call NHTSA up here again — until we get a tamper-proof odometer, before we impose a financial burden on the consumer and the industry."

NHTSA Administrator Joan Claybrook said it may not be possible to develop a totally tamper-proof odometer. "However, we believe that a tamper-resistant odometer would be of substantial benefit to consumers."

She estimated that "unfair profits of from $200 to $400 can be made for every 10,000 miles an odometer is rolled back."

The new regulation would require that distance counters be able to move only in a forward direction, and that any attempt to reverse the numeral wheels render the mechanism permanently inoperable.

An alternate system approved by the agency would put an indelible mark on each numeral of the ten-thousand-mile wheel as the numeral rotates forward and disappears from view.

Thomas Regan, an inventor of an odometer system, demonstrated ways to manipulate supposedly tamper-proof mileage counters. He installed new numeral wheels on systems whose wheels could not be moved in reverse, or that marked the wheels as they passed a certain mileage figure.

Systems that put indelible ink on the mileage wheel can be thwarted simply by bending back the ink pad, he said.

Regan said the industry and NHTSA have ignored his invention, in which, he said, the mechanism for resetting is enclosed and can be reached only by breaking the odometer.

David Martin, General Motors' director of automotive safety engineering, said GM opposes the proposed rule. He said motorists already are protected by federal laws banning odometer tampering. "A safety need has not been established for this additional rulemaking," he said.

Martin also said the regulation would preclude the introduction of an electronic speedometer that GM is developing for future use. In addition, he said, GM's present odometer designs could not easily accommodate the 100,000-mile indicator requirement.

Donald Wolleslayer of Chrysler Corp. raised no objection to the NHTSA standard. He said Chrysler believes that an odometer system it began installing in 1970 meets the new rules.

The commission said it did not believe that Parkers' conduct "constituted mere negligence." It pointed out that at the hearings, he acknowledged his mistakes, claimed he knew what his responsibilities were and promised to do better in the future.

Yet, barely two months later, the FCC said he again filed with the commission an official document replete with misrepresentations — concerning the same subject scrutinized in the 1974 hearings.

Golden was authorized to continue operating the station until 12:01 a.m. Oct. 16 to conclude the station's affairs. However, if Golden seeks judicial review, Parker may continue operation until 30 days after the court has jurisdiction to review the proceedings issues its mandate.

Black Radio Station Operator Denied FCC License Renewal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission announced Wednesday that it is reluctantly taking a radio station license away from one of the nation's few black broadcast license holders because of rule violations.

It denied the application by Golden Broadcasting Systems Inc. for renewal of the license of KOAD in Lemoor, Calif., for misrepresentations to the FCC in 1971 and 1974 renewal applications. The commission said Clark E. Parker, who owns the station jointly with his wife, had established by his pattern of conduct that renewal of the license would not serve the public interest.

The commission said Parker's carelessness was so "wanton, gross and callous, and in total disregard of (the licensee's) obligation to the commission, as to be equivalent to an affirmative and deliberate intent."

The FCC expressed concern that its action would decrease the number of minority-owned broadcast facilities and would deprive Lemoor of one of only two small radio stations in a small community.

So the commission issued a public notice inviting minorities or others to file for either interim or regular authority to operate the station.

There are now 57 black-owned radio stations and one television station. In only one previous case has a radio station been taken from a black.

An FCC administrative law judge granted KOAD a one-year renewal in 1975 to enable the FCC to review more closely the station's performance.

In 1976, the judge denied the renewal. He found that Golden's 1974 application contained serious misstatements on past performance and conveyed a totally misleading picture of KOAD's news and public affairs programming.

Parker appealed and the commission heard the case last March 28.

The commission agreed with the judge that Parker did not make even the most perfunctory effort to ascertain the accuracy of the programming figures supplied by his broadcast consultant.

The commission said it did not believe that Parkers' conduct "constituted mere negligence." It pointed out that at the hearings, he acknowledged his mistakes, claimed he knew what his responsibilities were and promised to do better in the future.

Yet, barely two months later, the FCC said he again filed with the commission an official document replete with misrepresentations — concerning the same subject scrutinized in the 1974 hearings.

Proposed Aircraft Plant Ups Real Estate Activity

VIENNA, Ohio (AP) — Anticipation of construction of a proposed jet aircraft plant near Youngstown Municipal Airport is giving rise to wary land speculation in the Youngstown area.

"Realtors have been everywhere combing the township pretty good," said Vienna township trustee Aubrey Hayes.

But there is also much speculation on whether ICX Aviation of Washington will build the plant here and "property owners are sitting tight," said Hayes. "I know I am."

ICX announced with much fanfare last month that it was seeking the American rights to the Yak-40, a jet aircraft built in the Soviet Union designed for short hop commuting. The company said the Youngstown area was the prime site for the $150 million plant that eventually would employ 4,500 workers.

However, the Akron Beacon-Journal and the Wall Street Journal say the venture is flimsy.

They have pointed out that ICX is not an aircraft company but a "project management firm." It had no payroll in 1977. Its assets are such that, of the $150 million investment, ICX is only committing $21 million to the project.

Max Baumgarten, a Liberty Township realtor, said there was a flurry of inquiries from investors after the June 22 ICX announcement. However, he said the Wall Street Journal story "has cooled off potential investors for the present."

The Liberty realtor said there still is considerable enthusiasm in the real estate business about the venture.

The commission said it did not believe that Parkers' conduct "constituted mere negligence." It pointed out that at the hearings, he acknowledged his mistakes, claimed he knew what his responsibilities were and promised to do better in the future.

Yet, barely two months later, the FCC said he again filed with the commission an official document replete with misrepresentations — concerning the same subject scrutinized in the 1974 hearings.

Golden was authorized to continue operating the station until 12:01 a.m. Oct. 16 to conclude the station's affairs. However, if Golden seeks judicial review, Parker may continue operation until 30 days after the court has jurisdiction to review the proceedings issues its mandate.

Science Advisor's Tour Cancelled By Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Wednesday the U.S. decision to cancel a scheduled trip here of President Carter's science adviser because of dissident trials "doubtlessly damages Soviet-American scientific and technical ties."

The announcement that Carter aide Frank Press and a U.S. delegation was cancelling a mid-July trip to the Soviet capital caused postponement of a meeting at that time of the Soviet-American commission on scientific and technical cooperation.

The commission said it did not believe that Parkers' conduct "constituted mere negligence." It pointed out that at the hearings, he acknowledged his mistakes, claimed he knew what his responsibilities were and promised to do better in the future.

Yet, barely two months later, the FCC said he again filed with the commission an official document replete with misrepresentations — concerning the same subject scrutinized in the 1974 hearings.

Government Supports Detroit Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — An affirmative-action program in Detroit requiring that an equal number of whites and blacks be promoted to sergeant is a legitimate means of redressing past discrimination, the Justice Department said Wednesday.

The government filed a friend-of-the-court legal brief on the side of the city in a controversy that could become a test case for affirmative-action programs in employment in the aftermath of the Supreme Court's Bakke decision.

The 90-page brief urges the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati to overturn a federal judge's ruling that struck down Detroit's affirmative action plan. The department's civil rights division said the purpose of the program was "to remedy voluntarily past violations of the law and thereby bring about a condition of true racial neutrality. When unlawful racial discrimination has been practiced by the state, the Constitution and the civil rights acts...impose upon the state the affirmative duty to eliminate the present effect of past discrimination."

On June 28, the Supreme Court ordered the University of California Medical School at Davis to admit Allan Bakke, a white applicant, on grounds the school's minority-group quota system was illegal. However, the court in a 5-4 decision upheld the principle of affirmative action.

In its legal brief filed Wednesday in the Detroit case, the Justice Department argued that the Bakke ruling left open the question of how far an employer may go to remedy past discrimination that the employer admits took place.

Under the Detroit plan adopted in 1974, the city has promoted 159 whites and 152 blacks to the rank of sergeant in the police force through the end of last year. The program has increased the number of black sergeants to 15.1 percent of the total number of sergeants. The force has 103 blacks in a city where about 50 percent of the population is black.

The Justice Department said the city should be permitted to continue promoting one black for every white until an appropriate goal, set by the court, is attained.

The plan was challenged by the Detroit Police Officers Association, which claimed the program discriminated against whites because whites were passed over for promotion in favor of less qualified blacks.

Federal Judge Fred Kaess ruled last February in favor of the association, holding that the city had failed to prove past discrimination.

The Justice Department said Kaess had ignored overwhelming evidence, including statistics that showed as late as 1968 — before the city began hiring more black police — that there were fewer than 5 percent blacks on the force and only 2.6 percent of the sergeants were black.

Grocery Gets First License

ABILENE (AP) — A Circle C grocery in Abilene is the first store to take official advantage of this West Texas city's new status as an oasis.

Taylor County Judge Roy Skaggs approved Wednesday the first liquor license for the store since commissioners ended the wet-dry controversy by canvassing all votes last week in the June 17th election.

The wet forces won, but canvassing was held up as dry opponents fought the result.

Circle C will be selling beer and wine — provided state approval is granted Skaggs' recommendation.

More requests for licenses are pending.

Air Force Officers Receive Awards

Lightning Ignites Refinery Blazes Two Days In Row

HOUSTON (AP) — Although it did not strike in the same place twice, for the second day in a row lightning hit a refinery storage tank Wednesday, causing a spectacular fire but no injuries.

The blaze, at the Charter International Oil Co. near the Houston Ship Channel, spread to four tanks containing highly flammable solvents, according to police.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said a few residents who live close to the tank area were evacuated.

The Ship Channel area was in no danger, according to the captain of the Port of Houston.

Air-Railroad Station Planned For Area Near Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak's board of directors approved a $2.85 million appropriation Wednesday for the nation's first interconnecting air-rail passenger station.

The station is to be built near the Baltimore-Washington International Airport adjacent to the main line of Amtrak's Washington-New York rail corridor.

Passengers will be transported between the two facilities by shuttle bus.

The concept for the intermodal station was initiated by the Maryland Department of Transportation, Congress earlier appropriated $3 million for the project.

Amtrak will construct the 2,850-square-foot station, platforms and an under-track tunnel. The state of Maryland will provide the land, a parking lot, road access and a passenger lounge at the station.

The facility will be operated and maintained jointly by Amtrak and the state. Construction will start this fall and is expected to be completed next July, an Amtrak statement said.

Maryland planners predict the new station will draw airline passengers originating from or destined for any of the cities accessible by rail in the Washington-New York corridor.

South Plains College Will Award Six $250 Scholarships

Six $250 scholarships will be awarded this summer to students planning to attend South Plains College.

Deadline for students to apply for the scholarships is August 8, and the winners will be announced August 15. Two scholarships will be given to students enrolled in SPC academic transfer programs and four will be presented to students enrolled in the Technical-Vocational-Occupational programs.

To be eligible for the scholarships, which are being given by the American Petroleum Institute, the student must be connected in some way with the oil industry and must plan to major in some area of the petroleum industry.

Application forms for the scholarships may be obtained from Dean Frank Hunt's office in the Technical Arts Building or by calling 894-9611.

Houston Awarded Top Credit Rating

HOUSTON (UPI) — The city has become the nation's only metropolis of more than one million inhabitants to receive Triple-A bond ratings from both Standard & Poor's and Moody's rating services.

Standard & Poor's notified Mayor Jim McConn Tuesday it had raised Houston's bond rating to the highest available.

"It's a tremendous prestige thing for the city," McConn said.

The higher rating will allow the city to borrow money at a lower rate and to sell bonds at a discounted interest rate. Houston's next bond sale, $40 million worth, is scheduled Aug. 2.

Suspect In Hospital Following Shooting

HOUSTON (UPI) — A 16-year-old suspected shoplifter, shot and wounded by a pursuing policeman, was hospitalized in fair condition Wednesday.

Police said Detective Steve Felchak gave chase after seeing the youth flee a convenience store with a gun in his pocket about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The boy allegedly stole several six packs of beer and jumped in a waiting car. Felchak pursued the youth and two juvenile companions in his car.

The suspects' car ran over a manhole and careened to a stop. Felchak said the youth whirled in the darkness to face him and Felchak fired one shot, grazing the boy in the chest. Names of the juveniles were withheld.

Oil-Filled Barges Collide On Canal

FORKED ISLAND, La. (UPI) — Two barges filled with oil and carbon black collided Wednesday on the Intracoastal Waterway, closing a seven-mile section and posing a pollution threat to nearby wildlife refuges.

Both barges were torn open in the pre-dawn collision and at least 100 barrels of carbon black were spilled. The second barge was leaking toxic fumes.

Empty barges were summoned to off-load the cargoes and a Coast Guard anti-pollution team was to begin cleanup operations.

Salinas Tax Amendment Would Exempt Family Car

By LARRY SPRINGER
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Local governments would be prohibited from taxing the family car under an amendment successfully added by Lubbock Rep. Froy Salinas Wednesday evening to the omnibus tax-cutting measure under consideration by the Texas House.

The Salinas proposal was opposed by bill sponsor Rep. Tim Von Dohlen of Go-liad who warned that the ad valorem tax on motor vehicles generates as much as 30 percent of the tax revenue in many districts.

Von Dohlen suggested the motor vehicle exemption would cause taxing authorities to boost taxes on real property to make up for the loss.

The city of Lubbock receives about $600,000 from the property tax on automobiles and members of the Lubbock Property Owners Association have urged the city council to remove the tax.

Salinas initially proposed that all "automobiles for personal family use" should be exempted from local taxation.

"This," he said, "would give a tax break to senior citizens and to the common people of the state."

Rep. Bill Sullivan of Gainesville, however, offered a substitute for Salinas' motion, limiting the exemption to "one motor vehicle not held or used for production of income and owned by a family or individual who is not a constituent of a family."

Salinas, who later said he probably had support for exemption of two automobiles, agreed to the Sullivan substitute wording and urged its approval.

Von Dohlen moved to table the proposal, but that motion failed 46-88. The House then approved the measure on a voice vote.

Afterward, Salinas said he offered the amendment in an effort to equalize taxes.

He noted that while Lubbock and the local school district do tax motor vehicles, many other taxing entities do not.

He said the measure likely will have "some impact on them (Lubbock and the school districts). I don't know how much."

"The local governments may need to look closer at what they're spending money on," Salinas said.

Debate on the tax-cutting bill will continue Thursday morning.

Physician Murder Trial Defense Case Rests

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — The state rested its case Wednesday against a physician charged with murdering five patients. The defense charged that the last prosecution witness to testify had collaborated with a reporter to bring about the doctor's indictment.

Dr. Mario Jascalevich was indicted in 1976 after the bodies of five of the alleged murder victims were exhumed.

New York City Medical Examiner Dr. Michael Baden, who supervised tests on the bodies, was called to testify Wednesday.

Defense attorneys Raymond Brown and Henry Furst had said they needed New York Times reporter Myron A. Farber's notes to effectively cross-examine Baden.

Their request for a stay of the 22-week-old murder trial until Farber surrendered his notes, however, was denied by Judge William J. Arnold, a three-judge appellate panel and state Supreme Court Justice Morris Pashman.

Farber, whose 1975 investigation of a series of mysterious hospital deaths led Bergen County authorities to reopen a dormant probe of Jascalevich, and the newspaper have been convicted of contempt for refusing to turn over the files.

Arnold has said he would review the notes confidentially to decide if they should be given to the defense.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has stayed Farber's indeterminate sentence on the contempt conviction until noon Friday, his attorneys have until then to obtain a stay from the U.S. Supreme Court pending appeal to a New Jersey appellate court.

Jascalevich is charged with murdering five patients at Riverdel Hospital in Oradell 12 years ago. If convicted, he faces a maximum sentence of five consecutive life terms.

Baden testified Wednesday he appeared before a Bergen County grand jury on May 18, 1976, the day Jascalevich was indicted on murder charges.

Baden told the jury a concern arose in 1976 that "any finding positive or negative could be vulnerable to charges of a self-serving nature because persons who had dropped the investigation were still acting in Bergen County."

Petition In Childress Requests Bond Vote

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — Public reaction by way of a petition objecting to a recently-announced school tax increase has surfaced here.

Petitions are now available in several business firms, as well as at the courthouse, requesting rescinding of recent action by the school board that will increase the tax rate from 94 cents per $100 assessed property valuation to $1.45.

The petition, placed by Paul Ord, suggests an alternative school bond issue election in an amount not to exceed $500,000 to make necessary improvements at Lamar Elementary School and Childress Junior High School.

The petition refers to the tax hike as "an excessive tax burden," and states that it is the opinion of many voters that a bond issue in the amount of $500,000 or less would meet with approval at the polls and give the schools adequate funding for the most urgent repairs and improvements needed at this time.

The petition is on the heels of recent action to increase taxes by the school board in an effort to accumulate funds for improvements on the elementary and junior high levels.

Two bond issue elections, one in April for an educational complex to house kindergarten through junior high, and a second earlier this month to construct an elementary school, were defeated at the polls by a margin of more than three to one.

After the defeat of the second election, the school board announced the creation of a renovation fund, which is to be accumulated by the increase in school taxes. Supt. Glen Lowrance said the board has repeatedly called for suggestions and advice from residents.

"I would want to know the board's wishes before making any comments on the petition's request," he said.

While posting the copies of the petition, Ord said the documents will be presented to the school board when it meets in regular session next week.

Officials say a renovation program approved after the defeat of the bond elections calls for total remodeling of restrooms at Lamar Elementary School as the first priority. The renovation is expected to cost about $28,000.

In second priority is an estimated $18,000 in plumbing pipe replacement at Lamar. A longer-range goal is construction of 10 classrooms at the elementary school, with a price tag of about $350,000.

Keep your eyes on the stars and you'll drive into a bridge abutment.

League Urged To Rewrite Summer Cage Camp Rule

HOUSTON (UPI) — A federal judge Wednesday granted 6-11 high school basketball player Greg Kite a temporary injunction he sought to attend a summer basketball camp in opposition to the rules of the state's athletic governing body.

U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan also urged the University Interscholastic League to rewrite its rule which prohibits varsity high school athletes from taking part in summer basketball camps.

"The rule is the only one in these 50 states which is as broad and prohibitory," Cowan said.

Boston Celtics center Dave Cowens, who runs a basketball camp in Texas, had entered the case and sought $30,000 injunctive relief. Judge Cowan denied that petition but suggested that Cowens file for relief next year if the UIL had not changed its rule.

UIL Director Daily Marshall refused to comment after the ruling.

"I have to talk to my lawyers," he said. Kite, 16, was one of the best players in Texas last season as a junior. He said he hoped the judge's action would open the way for others in his situation to attend the intensive training camps.

"I hope this will help marginal players, too, the ones who just want to make the varsity," he said.

Kite, as well as other high school varsity high school players in the state, was prohibited from attending a summer camp under a 1963 rule which was instituted to prevent entire teams from practicing together during the summer.

The Dallas Jefferson High school team of 1962 was taken to Colorado for a summer camp and then returned to win the Texas state championship with ease.

Judge Cowan said he ruled in Kite's favor because the teenage athlete, who would be seeking a college basketball scholarship in a year, and his parents, who could not fully pay for a college education, would be harmed if Greg did not develop his skills fully.

"The plaintiffs will suffer irreparable harm," Cowan said. "Exception talent is rare, very rare. The inability to develop that talent is a severe deprivation."

Cowan continued: "The public interest is never served by state action which seeks to deprive an individual of his constitutional rights."

An attorney for the UIL, in his final argument Wednesday, defended the rule as one which made competition in Texas' high schools fair to persons too poor to go to summer basketball camps.

In a day-long hearing last week, Cowan, Houston Rocket coach Tom Nissalke and SMU coach Sonny Allen testified in Kite's behalf.

The ruling marked the second time in three months that a federal judge sitting in Houston has granted an injunction overriding a UIL rule. On April 27, a judge allowed a teenage girl to play on an all-male team high school baseball team.

In that case, Marshall said the UIL will continue to enforce the separation of the sexes in sports.

Lubbock Squad Eyes NBC Title

Ernie Helweg, who has seen his Town Draw Brewers win all 13 times he's taken the field this summer, rates his squad's chances as "good" as the Texas State NBC Tournament opens a four-day run at Mackenzie Park today.

The Brewers, who captured the West Region championship here Sunday, will face the Del Rio Mustangs, the runner-up at Kerrville, in an 8 p.m. contest tonight.

The teams learned Tuesday they could add three players to their 22-man rosters after Regional play, so Helweg was busy trying to locate new bodies.

"We've got excellent play out of personnel this summer," Helweg pointed out. "We've got an A-1 mound staff in Pete Mills, Chuck Johnson, Jimmy Huffman and Doug House. But House is primarily a reliever should one of the other three get in trouble."

"And in a tournament of this sort, you've got to win four or five games, so everyone needs more pitching and we're no exception."

"I think we'll be able to hit with anyone in this meet," said the manager of the

Brewers—which is comprised mainly of former and present Red Raiders. "(catcher) Scott Leimgruber, (left fielder) Bryan Cowan, plus Foster turned some excellent defensive plays last weekend."

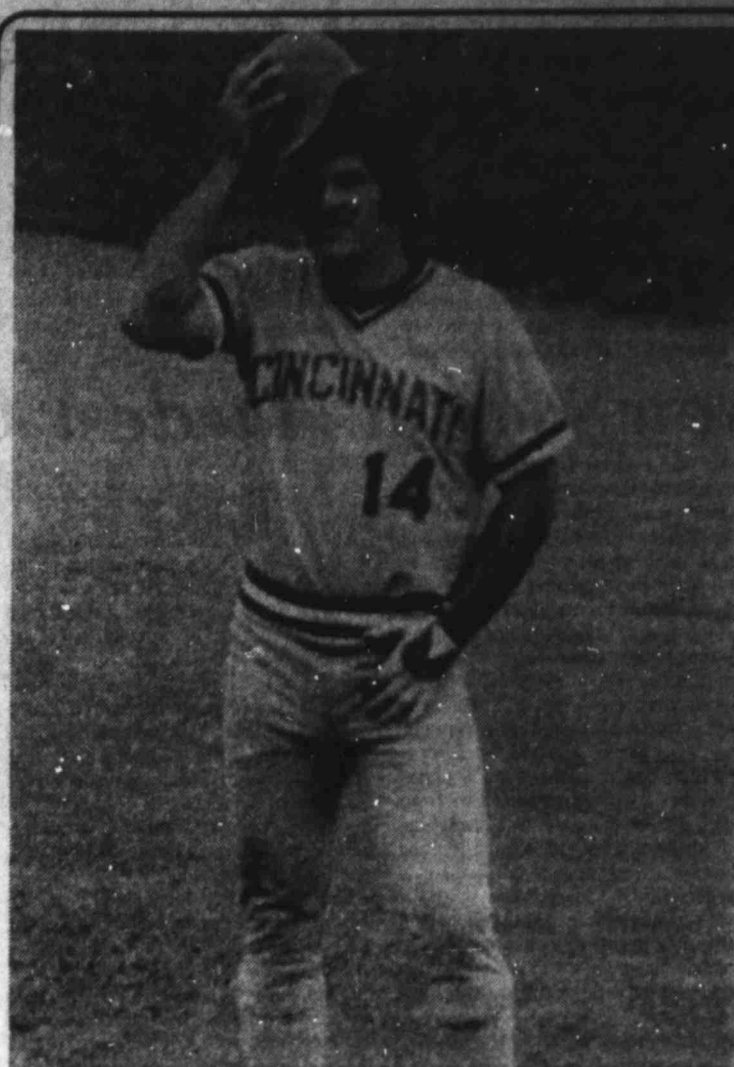

Other first-round games today pit the Lubbock Z's against the Austin Senators, who were an at-large selection, at 4 p.m.; the Bryan Bombers, the runner-up at Brenham, will take on the Abilene Salta Bulls, the third-place finisher at Lubbock, at 4 and the 10 p.m. game will match a pair of regional winners, Austin Family Life (Brenham) against the Kerrville Kats (Kerrville).

The Z's, who finished fourth in the Lubbock Regional, have been designated as the home team.

There will be four games Friday starting at 4 p.m. and five games Saturday beginning at 1 p.m. Sunday's finals, a possible doubleheader, will begin at 6 p.m.

The winner of this tournament will receive a berth in the NBC National Tournament at Wichita, Kan., starting Aug. 4.

Admission will be $2 per session—four games—or $5 for a tournament pass.

Rose Goes After Number 40 Friday

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose heads home for Cincinnati with a modern National League record 39-game hitting streak, but with an admittedly tough job ahead of him — trying to get No. 40 off Philadelphia's Steve Carlton.

"I haven't gotten a hit off Carlton all year," Rose said of the Phil's left-hander, the man he figures he'll face Friday in the opening game of a two-night doubleheader. "He'll be pitching in twilight, so I have my work cut out."

"I'm due against him," Rose added. "I'm swinging good. I feel like I'll hit every game. I'm seeing the ball well, too."

Rose, the Reds' 37-year old third baseman who broke Tommy Holmes' 37-game NL record streak Tuesday night, doubled off New York's Nino Espinosa in the fifth inning of the

Don Henry Crystal Ball Checking

REX DOCKERY, a few weeks back, got an advance copy of this football magazine which circulates widely over the state, and in it, his Raiders were picked above only Rice in the conference.

Rex immediately spilled a cup of coffee, stumbled on the rug and thought he saw a rain cloud outside.

For two days, then, Dockery carried that magazine around, not so much looking at it as realizing what it said inside.

But he didn't give up coffee, didn't give up reading magazines, he didn't ask for new carpeting in his office, and like the rest of us, didn't give up hoping that one of these days one of those rainclouds would leave a little dew on the lawn.

But, Dockery didn't need the magazine to tell him that Tech, for the first time in several seasons, is not picked near the top of the league, or at least in the top half. He could see it coming as he saw the seniors of last year going. Too many of them (14) departed, in relation to the numbers graduating at other SWC institutions. (Outside of Tech, Houston was the hardest hit, but it returns 11 guys. Every other team returns at least 15 starters.)

Talent is what football coaches seek, and talent is what folks use in making predictions.

THE RAIDERS' HEAD man didn't stutter, didn't cry, as he responded to a question about the eighth-place peg. (It is expected that Tech will wind up from fifth to seventh in most polls, however.)

"If a guy is to base (his evaluation) on the number of players we lost, he can't rate us very high," Dockery admitted. But he came back with his argument. "The end result is what counts."

"That (predictions) is just a part of football." And what Dockery was intimating was that sometimes you'll be rated high, sometimes low, depending on what's on paper, the returns vs. the losses.

"But, our players... We know what we have to do to win. And I think they're intent on what we have to do."

"In the Southwest Conference," he observed, "three people last year could have won. Now, there may be four, not because the better teams are losing something but because the lower teams are getting better..."

"Look at Baylor—18 starters back.

They pick up four, five good athletes, and they're capable of winning it all."

THEN, THE RAIDER chief returned to his own reservation. "We knew we had a lot of good football players. We were picked first by some last year and didn't make it."

"But, then and now, the players don't worry about predictions. Our objective is to play well, and a lot of it has to do with what the players do this summer."

"And I know a lot of them around here are working hard. Tres (Adami) and Mark (Johnson), and Ron Reeves (the signee from Monterey), have been out here throwing every day, working hard."

"And a lot of guys have been pushing 250 pounds (weights)."

Then, Dockery looked back a couple of years. "I think the key to '76 (when Tech tied for the championship) was we worked hard in the summer. We made a commitment."

BETWEEN TRIPS TO the coffee pot for refills, Dockery has spent his time conference-roomed with his new staff, preparing for the season, his first as a head coach.

The runningback spots—with the dropping of Sam Bailey for disciplinary reasons—are "up for grabs" among five squadmen and any fast-out-of-the-gate freshmen...

Adami and Johnson will start the fall "all even" at quarterback.

A freshman (Maury Buford of Mount Pleasant) will be one of the top two candidates for the punting position.

Steve Dawson has been returned from cornerback to runningback.

Rick Kempf (a juco transfer from Booneville, Mo.) has been shifted from linebacker to defensive end ("We need help there").

This week, Dockery is in Houston, scouting his and other schools' recruits in the high school all-star game and creating goodwill for his program among some 7,000 high school coaches there. From there, his staff will retreat to a lake lodge for almost a week of uninterrupted footballing.

Evidently, the prediction didn't ruin his summer. And the commitment didn't cover only the players.

Steelers Hope To Excite Fans Without Girls

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — The scantily-clad, disco-dancing cheerleaders are the latest fad in the National Football League. But the Pittsburgh Steelers say they can excite their fans without them.

"We feel there's a better alternative to entertaining our fans than using party clad women who do not contribute anything other than appearing," said Steeler Publicity Director Joe Gordon.

"They do not generate the type of entertainment generally associated with football games."

The craze started when the Dallas Cowboys introduced the bumping, grinding

Cowgirls. The cheerleaders were an immediate television success and shortly afterward Los Angeles, Miami and Cincinnati jumped on the bandwagon.

"We just feel that 'cheerleaders' is a misnomer in the National Football League," Gordon said.

"They don't lead cheers in the traditional sense and if you would dress them in sweaters, skirts, bobby socks and white bucks, I don't think they'd be too popular. They're primarily for television."

A team of 30 women, 21 of them models, recently formed a cheerleading squad in the hopes of dancing on Pittsburgh's sidelines. But they were rebuffed and so far have performed only at outside engagements wearing the Steelers' gold and black colors.

"The players don't pay any attention to what's happening on the sidelines," quarterback Mike Kruczek said during a break in practice at the Steelers' St. Vincent College training camp.

"As far as entertainment for the people, it would be an added feature to the game. There's enough good looking girls in the city. It wouldn't be too hard to find 30," he said.

"I can't comment on that," chimed in quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who is married to ice-skating star JoJo Starbuck.

"My wife would get mad if I said anything. I personally don't think they can find 20 girls pretty enough. Do you?" he said, laughing.

But to wide receiver Lynn Swann, football is business and dancing girls are distractions.

"In college, organized cheers and cheerleaders are great," Swann said. "But the only pageantry in the National Football League is the Super Bowl. Otherwise it's business.

"I don't think it would motivate our ballclub one bit," Swann added.

And Franco Harris? "I never thought about it," he said, lifting a soft drink bottle to his lips.

But even though the Steelers don't want cheerleaders, they're looking for some kind of sideline entertainment to keep the fans happy during slow game times.

"You want the fans to enjoy themselves as much as possible," Gordon said, adding the team has explored several alternatives to cheerleaders. He did not elaborate.

"Our fans are the most enthusiastic in the league," Gordon said. "They don't need any stimulus."

New Season Hardest On Coaches

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Playing two more games for keeps this season isn't likely to affect the health of National Football League players, but it will make it tough on their coaches, says the trainer of the Buffalo Bills.

"Nowadays the coach wants you to come into camp in condition, so I don't think the shortened preseason will make any difference (for athletes). But it will be harder for the coaches to evaluate the players," Eddie Abramowski said Wednesday.

This year, the NFL will count 16 games in division standings, stealing two from the pre-season schedule and stretching the traditional 14-game season for the first time.

Earlier, Coach Chuck Knox set up a pair of scrimmages against the Cleveland Browns as a means of evaluating rookies and other players whose status normally would have been determined in training camp.

Inter-team scrimmages "are unprece-dent, but they're necessary because of the shortened training period," Knox said.

The most physically demanding part of the new setup is the introduction of another Thursday game for television, he said. Departure from the professional football tradition of Sunday afternoon contests breaks the rhythm of recuperation.

The NFL has one time-honored Thursday playing date, Thanksgiving Day, but this year the league has added an Oct. 26 contest between Minnesota and Dallas for national television.

"When you play Thursday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday in the same season, it's tough," Knox said.

Rookies will find their endurance tested to a greater degree than the veterans, said Jack Donaldson, who coaches Bills' receivers.

"The guys who have been around a while will pace it, but the rookies will have a heckuva time," he said. "It's almost two seasons for them because they have to give maximum effort to make the team and then they play another 16 games. Some could run out of gas."

Abramowski, the Buffalo trainer since 1960, does not believe the 16-game schedule will increase the injury potential at the tag end of the year.

"I think injuries run in cycles," he said. "When you're snakebit, you're snakebit. And when the cold weather sets in, the cold and slippery footing cuts down on the traction. You're not as likely to get hit with a leg locked; the play is a little less enthusiastic."

The strain imposed overall should balance by late December because "when you start the season early you take less out of them (players) in training camp. The coaches have to cut down on the two-day practices earlier," Abramowski said.

Martin Quiet About Leaving

NEW YORK (AP) — Among the memorabilia that Yankee employees removed from Billy Martin's office was a sign that Martin didn't heed and finally caused his managerial downfall.

"Rule No. 1 — The boss is always right."
 "Rule No. 2 — If the boss is wrong, see Rule No. 1."

Martin has lost the one job he really wanted because he lost his head over owner George Steinbrenner's handling of the Reggie Jackson affair.

Martin wanted a harsher punishment for Jackson, who defied managerial orders to swing away 10 days ago during a game against Kansas City. Steinbrenner opted for a five-day suspension, and when Jackson returned last Sunday and wasn't contrite, Martin became enraged, eventually making his fatal remark: "They (Jackson and Steinbrenner) deserve each other. One's a liar and the other's convicted."

While Martin's office belongings were being shipped to his Texas home Tuesday, the ex-Yankee skipper arrived at New York's LaGuardia Airport. Looking drained and sounding subdued, Martin spoke to CBS-TV's Jerry Nachman.

Martin said that alcohol and the medication he was taking for a liver ailment had no role in his decision to resign.

"Booze has no effect whatsoever," he said without emotion. "I don't take any pills. I'm my own man. All this other stuff makes for good reading, but it's a lot of baloney."

Martin, proudly showing his Yankee medallion, refused to blame anyone in the Yankee organization for his departure, particularly Steinbrenner who has battled with Martin throughout the ex-manager's 3-year reign.

"I have great respect for George Steinbrenner," Martin said. "He's been a friend. It (our relationship) has been misconstrued by the press. I have no ill feelings toward anybody."

He reiterated that he was misquoted on his fatal remark about Steinbrenner, although the two reporters who heard it stuck by their stories, which were believed by Yankee President Al Rosen.

Martin said he planned to go fishing.

For what?
 "Sports writers."
 What would he use for bait?
 "Sharks."

Meanwhile, calls continued pouring into the Yankee office, critical of the Martin resignation. The Yankees planned no additional security for Wednesday night's game at Yankee Stadium, the first home game since the resignation.

Marsh Samuels, a Yankee vice president, said he expected a couple of hundred members of the "Billy Martin Fan Club" to march outside the gates, urging people to boycott the team.

"We (the fans and Martin) relate to each other," Martin said. "They relate to me as a person battling for them. They're battlers themselves...The Yankee fans are the greatest in the world."

The Yankees don't expect Martin to appear at Saturday's Old Timer's Game, even though he was invited weeks ago and, according to a team spokesman, "He's still welcome."

Bean Heads Hartford Field

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The top money-winner on the PGA, Andy Bean, heads the list of golfers who will tee off today in the opening round of the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open.

Bean has won $245,558 this year, including three first-place finishes at the Kemper Open, the Memphis Classic and the Western Open. Also among the favorites is the defending champion, Bill Kratzert, whose 72-hole total of 265 gave him the $42,000 first-place prize.

But the big names on the Professional Golfers' Association tour are absent from this, the 27th, tourney. Such premiere players as Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer aren't among the competitors. In addition, the popular Lee Trevino is not in the field of 142 golfers, nor is Andy North, winner of this year's U.S. Open.

In fact, 10 of the 72 golfers who have won PGA tournaments in 1978 are not competing in the GHO, and four of the top 10 money-winners are not here.

There are eight former GHO champions in this year's event. In addition to Kratzert, they include George Archer, Don Bies, Gene Littler, Bob Lunn, Rik Massengale, Bob Murphy and Dave Stockton.

Kratzert, who shot a 67 Wednesday, said, "I'm trying to get my game in shape. I think I can repeat."

The defending champion said his wife, Cheryl, had accompanied him on the tour until about a month ago when she returned to their Fort Wayne, Ind., home to await the arrival of their first child. Kratzert said the baby is due "any day now."

Massengale, who won in 1976, says he has "played the worst this year since being on the tour. I've hit my driver everywhere but straight."

He said he hit the ball fairly well in last week's tournament in Philadelphia, "better than I have in the last few months."

"The guy who wins this tourney is going to have to make a lot of putts. That's hard to do here," Massengale said.

One pro who made a strong showing at last weekend's Philadelphia Golf Classic is also among the starters. Dr. Gil Morgan, who made a brief run at Jack Nicklaus and finished second behind him at the Philadelphia event, is trying to raise his earnings on the tour from the 10th position he now holds. The 31-year-old optometrist from Oklahoma won the Campbell-Los Angeles Tournament earlier this year.

Another golfer to be considered is Hubert Green, winner of the Hawaiian Open and the Heritage Classic, who is sixth on the money winners list.

While tournament play on the 6534-yard Wethersfield County Club course begins today, Wednesday's Celebrity Program attracted the largest single-day crowd in GHO history. The key attraction was a twosome playing with Stockton, former President Gerald Ford and comedian Bob Hope.

Bees Attack, Kill Horse

LONGWOODS, Md. (AP) — Hundreds of honey bees, normally very docile while swarming, apparently went berserk and killed a 1,100-pound race horse at a Talbot County farm.

The 10-year-old standardbred, valued at an estimated $15,000, died Monday, about four hours after he was stung by the bees in his paddock on the farm of Phil Schlotzauer.

look off. They (the bees) were crazy. I've never seen anything like it," she said, adding that her hair was matted with bees by the time they reached the house where her husband hosed her off.

The horse was down when Schlotzauer returned to the animal's aid, but he managed to get the horse to the barn, where contingents of a dozen bees continued to attack the horse, according to Dr. Terry Corkran, a veterinarian who treated the horse for four hours before it died.

"The horse was peppered with white stingers," Mrs. Schlotzauer said, adding the couple hurried their other horses into the barn.

She said she had returned to the house when she heard her husband yell, "I've been yanking him up but he keeps going down on me. I'm losing him."

Schlotzauer, who was flat on his back Tuesday night from a back injury, spent several hours trying to keep the horse on its feet, his wife said.

"Unfortunately, the horse stumbled into a swarm of honeybees and he was stung to death," said Tony Evans, a spokesman for the state Department of Agriculture.

"The horse went into anaphylactic shock which occurs when the venom reaches a certain level. The throat swells and cuts off breathing," Evans said, noting the honey bee's venom is the most potent of the stinging insects.

Dianne Schlotzauer said she and her husband were watching the horse when "we saw it acting funny."

She said he was "eating from his black bucket when he was attacked." The horse has been housed at the farm since the first of the year.

"We thought he was choking," she said, refusing to identify the invitational trotter, which came in fourth Friday night in a race at Ocean Downs.

"We got there as fast as we could and then Phil yelled, 'Oh, God, bees,' and he

Heinsohn In Bind

BOSTON (AP) — Former Boston Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn said Wednesday he doesn't want to be forced to move to San Diego to collect the $100,000 his past National Basketball Association team owes him.

Heinsohn is seeking a court order that would determine if he must take a new coaching job under terms of his old Celtics contract.

U.S. District Court Judge Andrew Caffrey said at a court hearing he will decide in a day or so whether Heinsohn should have extra time to negotiate with former Celtics' owner Irv Levin.

Levin swapped the Celtics for the Buffalo NBA franchise, owned by John Y. Brown. Levin then moved the Buffalo team to San Diego.

Heinsohn was fired by the Celtics this year with a year remaining on his $100,000 per season contract. He claims Levin

Texas Halts Losing Skid, Stops Boston

By The Associated Press
Bobby Bonds' opposite field two-run homer in the eighth inning backed Doc Medich's two-hit pitching and the Texas Rangers snapped an eight-game losing streak with a 2-0 victory over the slumping Boston Red Sox.

Bonds' homer, his 15th of the season, came on a 1-1 pitch after Dennis Eckersley, 11-4, had yielded a one-out single to Al Oliver. The blast carried 400 feet into the right-center field stands against the wind and sent the Red Sox down to their seventh loss in the last eight games.

Medich, 5-5, allowed only Fred Lynn's

METS 12, REDS 3

Pete Rose extended his modern National League record consecutive game hitting streak to 39 games with a fifth-inning double, but the New York Mets overwhelmed Cincinnati 12-3 on former Red Joel Youngblood's bases-loaded triple and two-run homer.

CARDS 2, GIANTS 1

St. Louis pitcher Silvio Martinez beat the San Francisco Giants 2-1 with a two-hitter and stopped Jack Clark's hitting streak at 26 games.

Clark's hitting streak, a team record, ended before a crowd of 18,769, which pushed San Francisco's home attendance over the one million mark for the first time since 1971. Clark was 0-4 although he hit the ball well in two at bats.

ROYALS 12, MARINERS 3

Doug Bird and Steve Mingo held Seattle to two hits and Pete LaCock homered as the Kansas City Royals pounded the Mariners 12-3 for their 11th victory in 12 games.

BRAVES 4, PHILLIES 2

Right-hander Phil Niekro pitched his 12th victory of the season as the Atlanta Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies, sweeping a three-game series from the

Lubbock Colts Grab Victory

The Lubbock Colt all-stars squeezed past the Lawton, all-stars 5-4 in first-round action of the Colt League Sectional All-star Tournament Wednesday night.

The Hub team will meet Abilene tonight at 8:30 at the Colt league field on 40th and University.

Abilene downed Tulsa, 5-4 in eight innings in Wednesday's first game. Tulsa will meet Lawton at 6:30 tonight in the double elimination four-day affair.

Lope Vasquez was the winning pitcher for the Lubbock Colts. He relieved Jimmy Duran in the third inning and collected six strikeouts. Kent Potts went 2-for-4 for the winners.

In the earlier game, Kurk Russell collected the win for Abilene. Eric Bejcek hit a home run for victors.

Dixie Cruises Past El Paso

PECOS (Special) — Lubbock's Dixie League All-Stars cruised to an easy 14-5 win over El Paso Wednesday night during the opening round of the Texas Regional Pony League tournament here.

The Hub group meets the winner of the Hereford-Pecos matchup tonight at 8:30 p.m. for the right to advance to the state finals in Austin Aug. 3-5.

Mike Reed was the winning pitcher for Lubbock, collecting eight strike outs. He also added a home run to help the cause.

Dixie, which managed 12 hits, was led by Reed's three hits, along with a homer by Doug Hatch.

Rose

Mets' 12-3 victory Wednesday. It put Rose within one of Ty Cobb's 40-game streak, the third longest in history. Beyond them are George Sisler's 41-game streak and, ultimately, Joe DiMaggio's major league record 56-game streak.

Rose has a day off Thursday to thank about his streak and Carlton.

"We have an optional batting practice tomorrow," he said. "I'll take hitting, try to get at least one base hit in batting practice. I want to keep the adrenaline flowing."

"I have to be optimistic. I figure if I get five shots, I'll get a hit. If I don't get one in five shots, I don't deserve to keep the streak going."

Ironically, in the 32nd game of the streak, Rose faced Carlton in Philadelphia and failed to get a hit off him. And it appeared his streak was at an end until the Reds batted around in the eighth inning. He batted a fifth time with two outs in the ninth and kept the streak going with a bunt single off Ron Reed.

National League Eastern Division leaders.

Niekro, 12-10, got support on a second-inning two-run homer by Dale Murphy, his 16th of the season and fourth against Philadelphia pitching.

YANKEES 3, INDIANS 1

Lou Piniella crashed a three-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving New York a 3-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians and giving Bob Lemon a triumph in his home debut as manager of the Yankees.

The Indians had broken a scoreless duel with a run in the top of the ninth but Mickey Rivers opened the Yankees' half with a scratch hit past the mound. After Willie Randolph sacrificed, Thurman Munson grounded a single off the third base bag, with Rivers stopping at third.

ASTROS 5, EXPOS 0

Joe Niekro tossed a four-hitter and drove in two runs with a double and a single as the Houston Astros completed a three-game sweep of Montreal.

Niekro, 7-8, did not allow an Expos runner to reach third base as Montreal dropped its sixth straight game.

Bob Watson's 11th homer of the season, a solo blast over the center-field wall, staked the Astros to a 1-0 fourth-inning lead against losing pitcher Ross Grimsley, 12-8.

ANGELS 11, BREWERS 9

Joe Rudi drove in five runs, four of them with a grand-slam homer in the first inning, to help the California Angels outlast the Milwaukee Brewers 11-9.

After a single by Carney Lansford, a walk and a hit batsman, Rudi belted the first pitch to him by Bill Traber, 7-5 into the left-center field bleachers. It was his seventh homer of the year.

TIGERS 9, ORIOLES 6

Jason Thompson and Aurelio Rodriguez drove in two runs each while Jack Billingham won his fifth consecutive game as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 9-6.

Detroit jumped on Mike Flanagan, 13-8, in the first inning with Thompson hit a two-run homer after Rusty Stobbs had singled home a run for his 83rd RBI of the year.

Baltimore got two runs back in the second when Lee May and Doug DeCinces hit consecutive homers. DeCinces also homered in the two-run seventh.

A's 8, CHIXOS 4

Glen Burke's two-run single in the fourth inning gave Oakland a lead it never lost as the A's pounded out 15 hits and defeated the Chicago White Sox 8-4.

Dave Revere began the fourth with his 13th homer to cut Chicago's lead to 2-1. Mario Guerrero then singled, Taylor Duncan doubled and Burke's single to left gave the A's a 3-2 edge and chased Wilbur Wood, 10-8.

Oakland added three runs in the fifth off Rich Hinton.

Brewers Lacking 'Doe', But Still Have Bambi

MILWAUKEE (AP) — While The Best Team That Money Can Buy — remember that description of the New York Yankees? — has been self-destructing amid a poison of personality clashes, baseball's most surprisingly successful team this summer is one of its most harmonious.

Statistics tell only part of the story of the Milwaukee Brewers, the expansion-born erstwhile whipping child of the American League, a 67-95 team last season. High spirited and hard hitting, the 1978 Brewers have hit more home runs than any team in the majors except Boston, and are challenging the Red Sox for first place in the AL East.

"Boston has the best club," Brewers Manager George Bamberger says. "New York and Baltimore will be heard from before it's all over."

"But I'll tell you this," he said. "These guys believe they can win. And if they believe they can win, I believe they can win."

George Irvin Bamberger, who will be 53 Aug. 1, has a face lined like cracked leather. His gray hairline is receding and his sloping shape would probably rattle a $350 suit. With his New York accent, mangled metaphors and butchered syntax, he looks and sounds not unlike Archie Bunker.

But unlike the middle-aged churl portrayed by Carroll O'Connor in television's long-running hit, Bamberger is more like an aging flower child. Known to his cronies as "Jovial George" and "Bambi," the man who developed 18 20-game winners in 10 years as Baltimore pitching coach preaches positivism, tells one-line jokes and relates as few his age do with the younger generation.

Bamberger evoked his first laugh in Milwaukee last winter when he took the Brewer job and predicted the team would play .500 baseball.

Now that the team has surprised even Bamberger and long since has re-set its goals, Bamberger was asked how much credit should go to his managing. He prefaced his reply with one of his typical torrents of profanity which, while almost always good-humored in context, would make a Marine drill instructor blush.

"I hear some of these managers talk about how great and how smart they are, but how many things can you do during a game, really?" Bamberger said. "You can't throw the ball or swing a bat. If you don't have the players, you don't stand a chance. That's number one, and the coaches do all the work."

"I say that to be a successful manager is to get the maximum ability from each player, to mold a team together," he said. "That's the manager's job, plus making lineups and that stuff, but usually the lineups are cut and dried. It don't take no genius, that's for sure."

"If you can't handle men, you're not worth a damn," he said. "Anybody who's played baseball any length of time knows baseball, but not many know people. If you don't know people, you better have coaches who do. Otherwise you're up a creek."

Bamberger's style of hearty backslapping, barracks humor and sensitivity to others' feelings is appreciated by his players. One is Charlie Moore, the Brewers' vastly improved catcher who let a run score in a costly defeat by Boston last week when a runner sneaked home from first base while he argued with the plate umpire.

"If this was last year, I could have been on the bench for a week," Moore said after his homer and two-run single had helped beat the Red Sox the next night. "But George isn't like that. He was confident I could do the job and he kept me in the lineup. I appreciated that. He doesn't kick you in the face."

"George is funny. I mean, he really cracks me up," said pitcher Lary Sorensen, who had blossomed as a 12-game winner midway through his third professional season.

"When there's a tough situation, I get all tensed up," Sorensen said. "Then George comes out and I figure I'm out of the game. Instead he cracks some joke. I crack up and then the tension is gone. He believes we can do the job."

Bamberger pitched in only 10 major league games in his 18-year playing career.

"I played under Charlie Dreese and Leo Durocher and I coached under Earl Weaver," he said. "People ask me who I'm going to follow. I ain't going to follow anyone. If I do I'm a phoney. I'm an easy going guy. That's the way I am. I got to be myself."

"The player that's going bad, that's the player you have to spend some time with," he said. "I've seen some managers go over to players like that and scream ... If the player don't like it he's gone. Well, you don't do that today. You got to tell the players why the rule is the way it is."

"You know who I think would be a great manager today?" he said. "Charlie Grimm. I don't even know much about him, but I heard about how all the players liked him."

Bamberger said he hasn't fined a player all season and has called only two special clubhouse meetings. Both, he said, were to try to relax the players because he thought they were trying too hard.

"I think this team has more togetherness than any club I've been with," he said. "You know why? Our veterans are outstanding individuals. Sal Bando, Don Money, Larry Hisle, Cecil Cooper, Mike Caldwell. They're not just good players, they're good people, they're gentlemen."

"You get a couple of veterans who are negative, who fight every rule there is, before you know it, the kids say, 'They can do it, why can't I?' I haven't had any problems like that."

Bamberger also recognizes gimmicks that can promote team unity and support for the team. When someone recently started merchandising T-shirts with the inscription "Bambi's Bombers," he was one of the first to wear them, and he gives one to each Brewer who hits a home run.

Now they are seen all over Milwaukee. The players' wives wear them instead of halter tops. Kids wear them, along with Brewers caps, as they imitate Cooper's crouched swing or Paul Molitor's belly slide in playgrounds and parks. The going steady set wears them with cutoff jeans and sandals.

"Times have changed, but I don't find it hard to adapt," Bamberger said. "The only reason I don't grow my hair long is I don't get much more hair."

Chicago Slates Second Opener

CHICAGO (AP) — It's not uncommon for major league teams to declare at mid-season that they're forgetting about the past and starting anew. But seldom is the occasion celebrated by conducting opening day festivities for a second time.

Leave it to Bill Veeck, Chicago White Sox president, to do something out of the ordinary.

"The whole idea is to get the players to forget about what's happened so far and get their minds on turning things around the rest of the year," Veeck said Wednesday. "We'll have bands and introduction of players—the whole bit. Just like on the regular opening day."

The White Sox, who have played well in streaks so far, were amid a nine-game losing streak Monday when Veeck made a rare appearance in the team clubhouse and gave a brief pep talk.

"I wasn't complaining. I told them to forget about the mistakes they've made. I told them that the mistakes have not been all their fault. I've made some too," said Veeck. "I told them that I'm starting over just like they are."

"I'm excited about it and I think the players will respond too ... At least I hope so," he added.

The players may have already responded. After the clubhouse chat, the team swept a two-game series from the Milwaukee Brewers, who came to town with the second best record in baseball. The Sox will play two more games against the Oakland A's before the "second" season opens Friday night against Texas.

Hurt seriously by the loss of outfielders Richie Zisk and Oscar Gamble to the free agent market during the off-season, Chicago opened the 1978 campaign in April with a new look.

Now, they have an even newer look with a change of managers — Larry Doby replacing Bob Lemon; a major trade, Bobby Bonds for Claudell Washington; key injuries—loss of All-Star Chet Lemon for several games with a leg injury, plus the acquisition of several minor leaguers.

The visit to the clubhouse, while rare, was not unprecedented. Veeck said he could remember one other occasion when he addressed one of his teams.

"That was in 1949 when I had the Cleveland Indians," he said. "I had to explain to the players that nobody made any money from the movie 'The Kid From Cleveland' which was about Lou Boudreau. It was possibly the worst movie ever made."

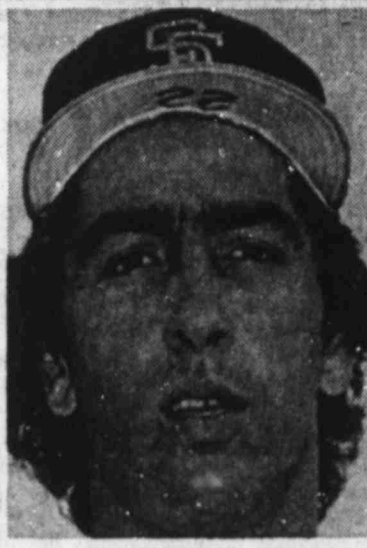

Veeck said the season opener is not just another promotional stunt. "We feel it's important that we try to get on the right track. If having another opening day does it, then our mission will be accomplished."

STREAK HALTED — Jack Clark of the San Francisco Giants may not have gotten the same attention Pete Rose has received, however, the SF outfielder still managed to hit safely in 26 consecutive games. ## Massive Event Opens COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The National Sports Festival, a massive, ambitious, expensive operation aimed at a broad-based improvement of America's sagging Olympic fortunes gets under way today with some 2,100 athletes competing in 26 sports.

"You can't fire a cannon from a canoe," said Don Miller, executive director of the sponsoring U.S. Olympic Committee. "You have to have the solid base."

And it is with that principal in mind that the U.S.O.C. has poured some $1.3 million into the establishment of these games. The goal is the long-range improvement of the American Olympic teams — not necessarily in 1980," Miller said. "We're taking the long-range view — toward 1984 and 1988."

They're the first-of-a-kind. Similar — but expanded — National Sports Festivals are planned on an annual basis, except in Olympic years. And they'll be on a roving basis. "We will entertain invitations from major metropolitan areas wanting to host the Festival," Miller said.

The inaugural Festival, admittedly a hastily established operation, has some problems. In essence, the Festival asked the governing federations of each sport to send its best personnel. In some cases, that wasn't possible. A number of world-class track and field athletes are committed to compete in Europe. The country's best swimmers are in the final stages of preparation for the world championships. The premier basketball players weren't available.

But many sports will be represented by the very best this country has to offer. And that is of particular interest to officials.

"We have classified sports into three categories," Miller said, "developed, emerging and under-developed."

BUICK AND OPEL

1917 TEXAS, 747-3281

Oerter Wants Fifth Medal

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — You're Al Oerter. You're 41 years old, the only athlete in Olympic history to win four gold medals in the same event.

You have a secure place in sports history and should be satisfied with that distinction.

But you want a fifth gold and you are pursuing it with extreme fervor.

You will take another step toward that goal in the inaugural National Sports Festival, a four-day extravaganza beginning Thursday.

Your event, the discus, does not go off until Saturday. Meanwhile, you have been practicing and working on your technique since last Friday at the Air Force Academy, the site of the track and field competition, one of 26 sports on the wide-ranging program designed to give the United States an early start in an effort to improve its performances in the 1980 Olympic Games at Moscow.

Your last gold medal, your fourth in a row, came in the 1968 games in Mexico City. Then you retired for eight years. It was highly unlikely that you would ever make a comeback.

You quit because you were suffering from neck and rib injuries, because people were setting goals for you instead of you setting them for yourself and because you wanted to spend more time for your family.

But in 1976 you began throwing the discus again. Your comeback stirred the juices of both young and old. You knew it would be a long and tedious road toward making the Olympic team again but you were determined.

You set goals for yourself. They were 180 feet the first year; you reached 181. Then it was 200 last year; you reached 205. This year it's 215; your best so far is 203-6.

You say, "I am fairly confident that I will do what I want (215) before the end of the year."

You have your skeptics, most notably Mac Wilkins, the 1976 Olympic champion and world record holder at 232-6. Wilkins has scoffed at your chances of making the Olympic team. But you maintain that your relationship with Wilkins is amiable.

You say, "Mac has told me that he is glad he finally has met someone who goes at it as competitively as he does."

Your skeptics, however, do not bother you. You feel comfortable as long as you are not embarrassing yourself, and you don't believe that you have done that so far.

"I'm doing alright, I think," you maintain about your remarkable comeback.

"Some coaches who have watched me feel that I am as fast in 1958 and that is reassuring," you add.

But your big hangup remains technique. As a 280-pounder, you know you have the strength to throw the discus long distances. However, you never were a technician, and you are trying to correct some flaws in that area.

"I've been over-rotating, turning too much at the beginning of my throw," you say you have been told by observers, including Julie Martin, who became your coach and confidante earlier this year while she was doing a thesis on discus throwers for the Laban Institute for Movement Studies in New York.

"I sometimes throw in a disoriented fashion," you say, "and when I do, she can spot it. Then, we go through a series of exercises to try and correct the movement."

Also, you are still being plagued by injuries. You were supposed to take the Oath of Athletes Wednesday night at the Festival's opening ceremonies, but you asked to be excused because if you stand too long you get back pains. Your excuse was granted.

To relieve the pain, you take moist heat treatments and have hot packs applied to your back before workouts. After practice, it's ice and additional heat.

Despite everything, you have competed heavily, from all-comers meets to invitationals to national championships, and you plan to continue on a rigorous schedule all the way up to the Olympic Trials. Then will come the big test.

The odds of you making the team are not good. But you have been the underdog so often in the past that such dire forecasts don't faze you. The odds against winning a medal are even higher, and those against your capturing a fifth gold are astronomical.

You admit, "I have a long way to go."

You have no illusions.

You're Al Oerter, and nobody is going to take away those four gold medals.

Disabled Athlete Proud Of Record

STOKE MANDEVILLE, England (AP) — "Just imagine what it meant to me to set a world record," said Sharon Rahn, who will spend the rest of her life in a wheelchair.

"World record, 60 meters for disabled women athletes, Class 4." It doesn't mean much in the big world of sport. You won't find it listed in any of the record books.

"But it started a new life for me, aiming for this record and finally achieving it," said Sharon.

"Sport has really changed my life since I took it up three years ago. It has made me a more complete person. It's not just a matter of developing physical strength, but mental strength as well."

Sharon, 22, is studying for a health degree at the University of Illinois. She is one of 610 wheelchair athletes from 30 countries competing in this week's Olympics for the Paralyzed at the sports complex adjoining Stoke Mandeville Hospital.

She laughs and jokes and talks of her chances in the week's track and swimming events and the pentathlon, and never hints at being a figure of tragedy.

When she was 9, playing with other kids, a loaded gun went off by accident and she was shot in the spine. She never walked again.

Sharon took part in this year's Boston Marathon, pushing her wheelchair along for the whole 26 miles.

"And I finished," she said, laughing. "Some of those who ran on two legs never completed the course, but I did."

"My arms ached, and my neck and back too. But I finished."

She set her 60-meter world record in last year's games at Stoke Mandeville. Tuesday she scored 3,948 points and won the gold medal in the pentathlon, which comprises track, swimming, archery, shot put and javelin.

Captain of the U.S. men's team is Dale Wiley, 34, of Nashville, Tenn., who has been in a wheelchair since an automobile accident at age 17.

Before it happened, Wiley was nominated for the All-America High School basketball team. But as a wheelchair occupant, it took a lot of persuasion by well-wishers to get him back into any kind of sports participation.

"For a long time I never wanted to compete in sports again," he said. "It was because of the way people thought of me, the way the world thinks of a disabled person. I just didn't want any part of it."

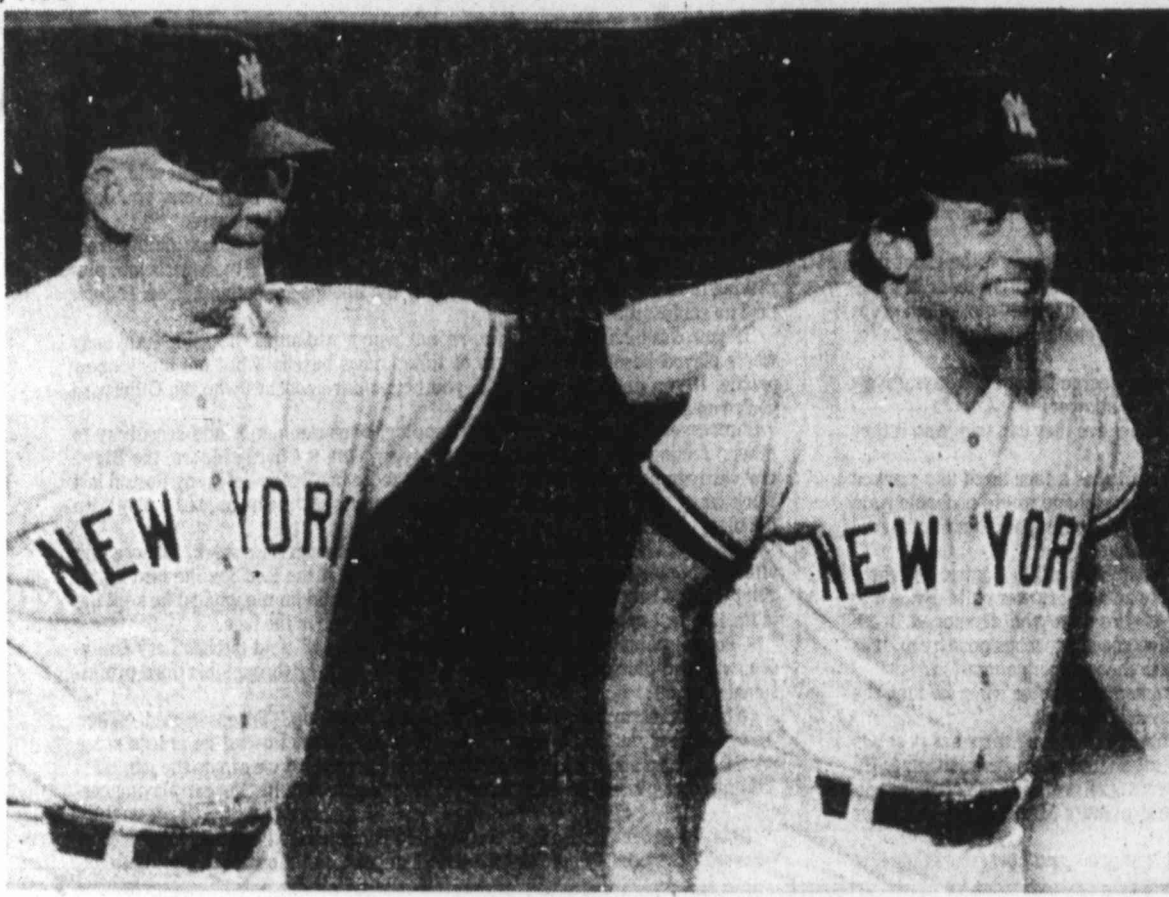

Wiley is still playing basketball — from his wheelchair. He scored 10 points as the U.S. team defeated France 63-48 in the opening game of the basketball tournament.

"I'm 6-foot-6, though I may not look it," Wiley said as he maneuvered his wheelchair beside Sharon's and joined in the discussion.

"Wheelchair sport requires much more coordination and balanced effort in some ways than sport involving able people," he said. "I know, because I have taken part in both."

Benjamin H. Lipton, who has devoted most of his life to helping disabled people, is manager of the 20-member U.S. team. He talked to Sharon Rahn about her chances and encouraged her to develop her archery.

"It is the one sport in which disabled people can compete on equal terms with everyone else," Lipton said.

Vikings Open Training Camp

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings will build on strengths and not try to replace weaknesses, says head coach Bud Grant, when the team opens its 1978 training camp in Mankato.

As usual, the Vikings are the last team in the National Football League to report, a factor which has never seemed to bother Grant, or his veteran-packed squad.

"The season is five and a half months, seven days a week," Grant explained. "Why tack on an extra month?"

"We can go to Mankato and start running plays the first day."

There are three basic questions, however, which need to be answered by the defending NFC Central Division champions as they prepare for the exhibition opener against Washington Aug. 5.

The biggest, of course, concerns the recovery of quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who suffered a broken ankle last season.

The 38-year old signal caller says the ankle has responded well recently to therapy and he is anxious to try one more time for the Super Bowl ring which has eluded him three times.

"He says he is ready, and I'm sure he is," said Grant.

If Tarkenton decides he is not fit to play, veteran Bobby Lee and second-year man Tommy Kramer are waiting in the wings.

The Vikings do not have the luxury of a proven backup for retired placekicker Fred Cox, though Freddie the Foot, as he was lovingly called for 15 years, finished his career with 1,365 points, second only to George Blanda in all-time NFL scoring.

Although not known as a distance kicker, he was consistent and dependable, two qualities Grant will be looking for in his predecessor.

"On kickoffs we could depend on Cox kicking away from the other team's best return man," Grant noted. "He could kick straight ahead end-over-end, or he could kick his line drives with a soccer kick. Cox was also one of the three best field goal kickers in the NFL. It won't be easy to find a man who can do all of that."

The prime candidates are Rick Danmier, who spent part of 1977 with Chicago before rejoining the Vikings, rookie Mike Wood of Southeast State, free agent David Alred from England and free agent rookie Tom McNamara.

Speaking of Chicago, the Bears could be the Vikings' biggest problem in 1978. A six-game winning streak at the end of the season enabled the Bears to record a 9-5 record, giving them a wild card berth in the playoffs.

Nigeria To Skip Contest

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Nigeria's new minister for youth and sports, Sylvanus Williams, announced Wednesday that his country will boycott next month's Commonwealth Games in Edmonton, Alberta, because of the participation of a New Zealand team which maintains sports relations with South Africa.

The surprise announcement came only four days after the executive committee of the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa, meeting on the sidelines of the African Games here, had decided to allow African countries to compete in the Edmonton Games.

It was not immediately clear whether other African countries would follow the Nigerian lead and boycott the Commonwealth games, which could deprive the games of some of the world's top track stars, particularly Kenya's Henry Rono, holder of four world records set earlier this year.

New Zealand's continuing sports relations with South Africa led to a total African boycott of the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

Briton Not Miscast With Rock Group

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — At first blush the presence of Donald Pleasence in the cast of "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" would seem an anomaly akin to Shelley Winters playing right field for the Dodgers.

Pleasence is the distinguished British character actor, a native of Nottinghamshire, educated at Sheffield, a member of the Bristol Old Vic Company and a trouper with Sir Laurence Olivier's company of "Anthony and Cleopatra."

"Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" is a rock opera starring Peter Frampton and the Bee Gees. So far as Pleasence knows, neither Frampton nor the Bee Gees had ever acted a day before in their lives.

One imagines Pleasence stuffing his ears with cotton before reporting to work.

One also conjectures that he reconstitutes his innate, middle-aged conservative British taste by listening to Beethoven at the end of the day's work with the pop music specialists.

One reflects on Pleasence giving acting instructions to his costars with avuncular concern.

But no. Pleasence shatters all the illusions of his previous screen roles. He is a closet rock freak who was enchanted with the apparent miscasting.

"I actually like the music of the Bee Gees and Frampton a very great deal," said the balding actor, bearded for his role as B. D. Brockhurst, a miserably mean and oily record company mogul in the picture.

"I have two teen-age daughters who play rock music throughout the house morning, noon and night. I find myself listening and enjoying it all."

"My wife, Meira Shore, is a professional singer who writes her own stuff and is about to sign a recording contract. She specializes in folk-rock. I suppose, Meira is from Israel and her music has a Middle-Eastern sound."

It turns out, moreover, that one of Pleasence's close pals is none other than Ringo Starr, the erstwhile Beatle.

"I wrote the lyrics for a recent Ringo album," said Pleasence with no little pride. "And I recorded the narration for 'Scouse The Mouse,' taken from a children's book."

"Mark you, I don't claim to be a singer, although I've been told I have a rather good voice. When it was my turn to sing in 'Sgt. Pepper,' I stood next to Maurice Gibb of the Bee Gees. He would nudge me with an elbow whenever I joined in the chorus. I'd have been lost without him."

script and no spoken dialogue so I improvised my dialogue against the background of the music.

"Of course, none of it can be heard in the finished film. I've done improvisation on stage in the past and on British television."

"Now that I think of it, improvising dialogue that is never heard makes you realize why people in silent films had a tendency to overact."

Pleasence mulled the thought in his mind for several minutes. Obviously, he enjoyed kicking over the discipline to which he was accustomed in "Look Back In Anger," "The Caretaker," "The Great Escape" and "The Madwoman of Chailot."

As with all actors, there is a large slice of ham in Pleasence. He is quick to say that he is versatile and therefore perfectly acceptable in the cast of any film, including a rock music opera.

"Michael Schultz directed 'Sgt. Pepper' and he is a friend of mine," Pleasence said. "I did a Broadway show for him. A comedy. I was in drag throughout the play. I suppose Michael assumed I was the right person for his movie because I could be funny."

Network Blocks AP Satellite Project

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press expressed disappointment Wednesday over a request by Mutual Broadcasting System that the Federal Communications Commission deny AP's application to install 25 earth stations for tests of the AP voice radio network by way of satellite.

Roy Steinfort, vice president in charge of broadcast services, said "Mutual's unjustified objection can only delay the many benefits of satellite delivery to the entire broadcast industry. It does nothing to speed up action on its own satellite plan, which is now before the FCC."

"The AP is in favor of any plan, including Mutual's, which moves broadcasting onto satellite," Steinfort said. He added, "Mutual's last-minute objection saddens us, and we can only see it as a petty, competitive action to the detriment of our members and all of broadcasting."

Mutual filed its objection Tuesday, the final day of a 30-day period allowed by the FCC for responses to the AP request.

The AP applied last month for permission to conduct the test of equipment manufactured by California Microwave Inc., Farinon Satellite Systems, Harris Corp. and Hughes Aircraft Co. The satellites are operated by Western Union and RCA.

In its response, Mutual said such tests are not necessary because of Mutual's own request for a satellite distribution system. Mutual also claimed that the reason for AP's petition was to protect RCA Americom and Harris, and that AP will be the "principal beneficiary of this 'developmental' boondoggle at the expense of the public interest."

The AP said it would file a formal reply to the FCC soon outlining its reasons for considering Mutual's complaint invalid on all counts.

David L. Bowen, AP vice president and director of communications, said, "It sounds from the tone of the objection that Mutual is more interested in sandbags than satellites. It is unfortunate that this narrow vision will delay AP's effort to advance the application of satellite technology to the broadcasting and newspaper industry."

New Regulations To Aid Oil Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy has announced new regulations that will make it more profitable for the petroleum industry to recover hard-to-pump oil and increase production from low-yield wells.

The timing of the announcement — made Wednesday — raised some speculation on Capitol Hill that it was an attempt to generate new support among oil-industry interests for the president's energy legislation, but energy officials denied this.

Energy officials claimed the steps would have no effect on the price consumers pay for gasoline or other petroleum products.

They claimed this is because the additional quantities of domestic oil that would be permitted to receive higher world-market prices under the new regulations would not have been produced otherwise. Thus, it theoretically will take the place of imported oil, which already gets a world-market price.

The first new regulation, announced by David J. Bardin, administrator of the department's Economic Regulatory Administration, would provide price incentives to encourage the use of advanced techniques to recover crude oil which cannot be produced by conventional drilling methods.

The proposed rule would allow some producers to charge the world market price, now about $14 a barrel, for hard-to-obtain oil produced through such exotic recovery methods.

The government says using conventional methods alone can leave as much as two-thirds of the oil in the ground.

Most crude oil produced by experimental or advanced — sometimes called "tertiary" — methods is subject to the same price controls which apply to other domestically produced oil, ranging from $5.72 to $12.29 per 42-gallon barrel.

The other rule change would allow owners of "stripper" wells to combine their operations without giving up price breaks for any increased production that would result. Stripper wells, defined as those which produce 10 barrels or less a day, are now exempted from price controls.

By combining their operations, owners of such wells producing from the same oil reservoir could improve their efficiency and increase overall production, energy officials said.

Reaction on Capitol Hill from oil-state senators generally was favorable, although some said the steps did not go far enough.

"There are a lot of things they should have done a long time ago that they postponed because they felt to do so would help pass an energy bill," Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La., said. "And there are a lot more things they can do."

This was a reference to repeated offers to the oil industry and its allies in Congress by Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger to take administrative steps to increase oil prices — in exchange for their support of the president's embattled crude oil tax.

However, Energy Department spokesman Jim Bishop said Wednesday's actions had nothing to do with the president's energy bill.

Traffic Circle Work To Resume Here

Resurfacing of the traffic circle at the intersection of U.S. Highways 84 and 37 here will resume Saturday, State Department of Highways and Public Transportation officials said today.

Traffic will be routed through the construction area but may be temporarily delayed. Work will be suspended during the rush hours of 7 a.m. to 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday in an effort to minimize delays.

The resurfacing is expected to be completed by Aug. 3, weather permitting.

Tests Continue Despite Army Chopper Crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army said Wednesday a $3 million Black Hawk utility helicopter crashed on a test flight because airspeed sensors had been disconnected during maintenance work.

Three crewmen employed by the Sikorsky Aircraft Co. were killed when the prototype helicopter crashed into the Housatonic River near Stratford, Conn., on May 19.

"There is no major design deficiency in these aircraft," the Army said. It still has two prototype Black Hawks for testing. The Army authorized testing to resume immediately.

However, the Army statement said acceptance of production models of the new utility helicopter will be delayed two to three months because of what it called minor design changes resulting from the crash. It also said procedures have been modified.

According to the announcement, an Army board concluded that the stabilator, a stub-like wing surface at the tail section, did not function properly.

"This was caused by the airspeed sensing devices not providing the signals to cause the stabilator to rotate to the proper position," the Army said. "These devices were inadvertently not reconnected prior to the flight..."

"The sensing devices were disconnected the night before the flight during maintenance on the aircraft. Since these devices were not reconnected prior to the flight, they could not transmit the appropriate signal to change from hover to forward flight."

Therefore, the statement explained, the stabilator remained in position for a takeoff but did not automatically rotate upward for forward flight.

"With increased forward flight airspeed," the statement said, "the deflected stabilator forced the nose down and

Viets' Status Review Slated

An officer from the district headquarters of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas will be in Lubbock Aug. 7 to meet with Vietnamese refugees who wish to have their status reviewed.

A spokesman for the Border Patrol here said the immigration official will be in the grand jury room of the Federal Building from noon until 5 p.m.

He urged all Vietnamese in the area with questions about their status as aliens in this country or about citizenship applications to be present.

Lubbock Students Receive Counseling

Vocational counselors and cooperative vocational program teacher-coordinators are on duty at Lubbock high schools to talk with students, parents and participating business firms.

Counselors are available to discuss the variety of vocational programs offered through the Lubbock schools, officials said.

School personnel can discuss job opportunities available in the coming year through distributive education, cooperative health occupations, cooperative office education and industrial cooperative education.

Cooperative coordinated vocational academic education and home economics cooperative education also provide jobs.

Persons interested in the cooperative classes or other vocational programs should contact the counselors or teacher-coordinators.

Siamese Twin Dies Following Surgery

DALLAS (AP) — Siamese twins, described as joined in one of the worst ways possible, were separated by doctors Wednesday in a delicate four-hour operation here, but one later died.

The surviving twin was reported in critical condition at Children's Medical Center late Wednesday.

Dr. Ted Votteler, a pediatric surgeon who headed a team of 40 doctors, nurses and others who assisted in the complicated procedure, said the two girls were joined through the lower chest, through some abdominal organs and at one leg.

They shared a liver, intestinal tract, bladder and leg, Votteler told a news briefing after the surgery.

"It's about the worst connection you could have," said Dr. William Dammert, a surgeon who assisted in the operation.

Doctors and hospital officials, at the request of the girls' family, identified the infants only as "A" and "B." They were born prematurely about three weeks ago.

Activist's Wife Given Suspended Term

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court convicted Jewish activist Maria Slepak of "malicious hooliganism" Wednesday and gave her a three-year suspended labor camp sentence. The court said she could join her husband in internal exile.

The 51-year-old brunette, crying with tears of relief, emerged from the courtroom in the arms of her brother and sister who had been allowed to attend the 5½-hour trial.

She told Western correspondents and supporters gathered outside that the unexpectedly lenient sentence was given "because my people are supporting me."

Her husband, Vladimir, 50, was sentenced to five years of internal exile after his trial June 21 on the same charge. He was ordered sent to a remote area of the Soviet Union, believed to be Siberia, as punishment for protesting the government's refusal to let him and his wife emigrate.

Observers said that even though Mrs. Slepak was given a suspended sentence, her fate will be the same because she will join her husband in exile.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter welcomed the suspended sentence "from a humani-arian point of view," and said Soviet authorities could help improve relations by not imposing prison terms on other dissidents.

On Tuesday, the U.S. administration imposed a moratorium on most high-level official trips to the Soviet Union because of recent dissident trials.

Meeting with correspondents at her Moscow home after the trial, Mrs. Slepak said she was "very surprised" by the verdict. "I didn't expect it. I'd even brought a bag with my things in it" in anticipation of a sentence of labor camp or exile.

"I really can't believe I'm free. I thought they'd take me to prison."

The couple was arrested June 1 after they hung a banner from the balcony of their eighth-floor apartment on Moscow's central Gorky Street demanding that they be allowed to emigrate to Israel.

Mrs. Slepak told reporters that in handing down the sentence the judge had taken into account her recent hospitalization for stomach ulcers. But she was warned that another arrest on the same charge could bring her the maximum sentence of five years at hard labor.

Looking pale and drawn in the rainy, overcast weather, Mrs. Slepak reached out and embraced the dozen supporters who had waited for the trial's end, including Ida Milgrom, mother of imprisoned Jewish activist Anatoly Shcharansky.

The trial came less than two weeks after Shcharansky was convicted of espionage and sentenced to 13 years imprisonment and leading Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg received eight years in a labor camp on charges of anti-Soviet activity.

The Slepaks were active with Ginzburg and Shcharansky in the Helsinki human rights group formed to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords. The Slepaks also were leading members of Moscow's Jewish emigration movement.

The American and British embassies sent representatives to Mrs. Slepak's trial, but like Western reporters and supporters, they were barred from entering the courthouse.

Two of Mrs. Slepak's relatives were allowed inside — her brother Zinoviy Shcharansky and her sister, Lilli.

A radio electronics engineer and the son of a Bolshevik revolutionary, Slepak has two sons — Alexander, who married an American and emigrated and Leomid, who now is in hiding to avoid the draft.

Air Force Officers Receive Awards

Six persons received the Air Force Commendation Medal in recent ceremonies at Reese Air Force Base.

The medal with one oak leaf cluster went to Maj. John A. Harvell while M. Sgt. George W. Lyons Jr. and S. Sgt. William R. Goodrich made their third award, receiving their second clusters.

First time winners were T. Sgt. Jimmy D. Clark, T. Sgt. Richard Despault and S. Sgt. Timothy L. Gibson.

Airplane Builder Changes Hobby

CLOQUET, Minn. (AP) — For the past seven years, Marvin Melanson of Proctor, Minn., meticulously built his own single-engine airplane.

He finally completed it Tuesday and the Federal Aviation Administration certified it ready to fly.

With his family watching, Melanson climbed into the cockpit and took off from Cloquet Airport in northern Minnesota.

The flight went well until he came in for a landing. Engine trouble developed and the plane went down in a field, bouncing across a road just short of the runway.

Melanson was not hurt, but his homemade craft was damaged, and his family decidedly upset.

Does he plan to immediately rebuild his plane? "No. I think I'll just go fishin'," Melanson, 44, said Wednesday.

Cyclist's Plans Include Rest

MEADE, Kan. (AP) — Tom Floener, fresh from a 30-month globe-circling bicycle ride, says he plans to rest for a while before returning to work on the oil rigs of western Kansas.

Floener left his southwest Kansas home Nov. 14, 1976, on his 20th birthday. When he returned to a welcoming ceremony in this town of 1,900 Monday he had visited 42 countries and cycled 16,000 miles.

His most harrowing experience came in Austria when he crashed into a mountainside to avert a truck cutting in front of him. He was knocked out, but suffered no serious injuries.

In Honduras, sticks and rocks were thrown at him. "I didn't stop to look," he said.

Lawsuit Filed Against Insurance Ads

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — "And now the big winners in today's lawsuits..." begins an Aetna Life & Casualty advertisement. In the background is a television logo for a hypothetical program called "Liability Jackpot."

Aetna says that ad and others in a series are designed to tell the public about issues that contribute to the rising cost of insurance premiums.

But a Bridgeport law firm, believing the ads are "misleading" and "deceptive," has filed a class action suit against Aetna and three other major insurance firms. The lawyers say the ads constitute jury tampering.

"What they're asking is for jurors to violate their oath. ... Jurors are supposed to evaluate a case not on the basis of their own self-interest but on the facts and the law," said Theodore Koskoff.

Besides Aetna, others named in the suit are Travelers Insurance Cos. of Hartford, St. Paul Cos. Inc. of Minnesota and Crum and Forster of New Jersey and its subsidiary, the North River Insurance Co.

The suit, filed early this year in Superior Court on behalf of four Connecticut residents involved in damage suit litigation, claims the ads have hurt the plaintiffs' chances of receiving monetary awards from juries.

Filed by the Koskoff, Koskoff & Bieder law firm, the suit claims the ads are "unfair, deceptive, untrue and/or misleading." It seeks an unspecified amount in damages, attorneys fees and corrective advertisements.

The case probably will go to trial in the fall.

Most of the 13 ads, which ran in newspapers, magazines and other publications, linked rising jury awards and increased premiums.

One Aetna ad says: "Too bad judges can't read this to a jury." An accompanying picture shows a judge with a note reading: "When awarding damages in liability cases, the jury is cautioned to be fair and to bear in mind that money does not grow on trees. It must be paid through insurance premiums from uninformed parties, such as yourselves."

The Aetna ads end with "Aetna wants insurance to be affordable."

A St. Paul Cos. ad begins "You really think it's the insurance company that's paying for all those large jury awards?"

In defense of the ads, an Aetna statement says, "We feel we have a right and an obligation to publicly comment on issues affecting the rising costs of liability insurance."

The suit says "despite the over-all implication that insurance companies are losing money left and right ... assets of property and casualty companies have continually increased since 1952."

High jury awards were "only one of a myriad of things" contributing to the rising cost of insurance premiums, said George Hinckley, vice president of marketing services for Travelers. "We're not trying to single out one cause of high costs."

The issue involves "corporate freedom of speech," he said.

"The system was being explained rather than being accused of anything," Hinckley said.

Koskoff disagreed, saying the ads "tamper with the judicial system." "It's all right to explain the system provided you're truthful about it." But he said the ads contain "lies" and "half truths."

"Furthermore, when they are doing it for the purposes of influencing juries, under the cloak of the 1st Amendment, and not for the purpose of debate, it's dishonest," he said.

"It's about time there was a complete overhaul of the insurance industry. They've had a license to steal too long."

Poison Spreading Charge Goes To Trial

MASON, Mich. (AP) — A college chemist and mother of three, suspected of scattering noxious chemicals in the homes and cars of several families, was ordered Wednesday to stand trial on a breaking and entering charge.

Rosetta Reusch of Okemos, a suburb of Lansing, was ordered by District Court Judge Robert Bell to be arraigned Friday in Ingham County Circuit Court.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of four years in prison.

Prosecutors have argued that Mrs. Reusch, a chemist in a microbiology laboratory at Michigan State University, methodically dumped toxic chemicals in the cars and homes of Okemos residents for a year and a half.

Prosecutors have suggested that Mrs. Reusch was attacking families whose children competed against hers in the Okemos High School orchestra. Almost all the 20 families — who reported more than 100 instances of chemical attacks — include music students or their teachers.

Mrs. Reusch, 47, faces a single charge of breaking and entering the home of Lansing School District music coordinator Duane Smith with the intent to commit a felony — causing harm to him and his family.

Smith and his family testified at the preliminary examination that their cars had belched fumes and odors from their air ducts, causing eye irritation, shortness of breath and nausea. Samples of substances found in the cars turned out to include zinc, lead, arsenic and mercury.

The Smiths said the incidents often occurred after they attended a concert, or after newspaper-reports of their children's music awards.

Smith testified last March 17 he lay in wait for the intruder in his darkened home — and surprised Mrs. Reusch when she entered the garage with a paper sack. State police analysts said the sack held traces of mercury chloride.

During the preliminary examination last month, Mrs. Reusch's attorney denied she was responsible for the chemical attacks. She was released on personal recognizance bond.

Senate Okays Move To Restrict Banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee approved by voice vote on Wednesday a proposal by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., to restrict operations of foreign banks in the United States.

The measure would bar some foreign banks from accepting in their branch offices in the United States any deposits except those from overseas sources and those related to international trade and financing operations.

Stevenson's proposal, an amendment to the Banking Act, would apply only to new branches of foreign banks operating in the United States. Institutions that already have established such branches would be exempt. The measure also would leave foreign banks free to accept any type of deposits in their main U.S. offices.

Aides to Stevenson said the measure was sought because foreign banks have sometimes gained an unfair advantage over their U.S.-owned counterparts. They said that by having branches in several states, the foreign banks can offer lower prices for their services to commercial customers.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Does a stockholder benefit or not, when a company splits its common stock two for one?

A. There's no direct benefit in a stock split. But a split usually produces indirect benefits. Before you accuse me of giving an evasive answer, we should have a reasonably detailed explanation.

A stock split does nothing more than cut stock — which represents ownership of a company — into smaller pieces. Let's say that XYZ Corp. has exactly one million shares of common stock outstanding — owned by investors.

If XYZ common stock is split, two for one, there will then be two million shares of stock outstanding. Each of the two million shares after the split will represent exactly half the amount of ownership of XYZ Corp. as each of the million shares did before the split.

Now, let's say that you owned 200 XYZ shares before the split. The two-for-one split will make your 100 shares 200 shares. Your ownership of the company will be unchanged.

See! No direct benefit! But stock splits are often accompanied by increases in dividend payouts. Say that the regular dividend on XYZ was $1 a share before the split. After the two-for-one split the regular dividend would be 50 cents a share.

If the dividend is raised to, say 55 cents a share, your dividend checks will be 10 percent fatter. That, of course, would be a benefit. The same thing, however, could have been accomplished by simply raising the dividend on the pre-split stock from $1 to $1.10.

One more thing. Stock splits are popular in the market. A split draws attention to a stock; lowers its price; potentially broadens the base of company ownership. All this sometimes brings on buying demands, which can send the stock's market price higher.

Q. We are a newlywed couple and would like to know how much life insurance we should carry. Should there be a percentage of our salary involved? What type of insurance — whole life or term?

A. Although some people — mostly insurance salesmen — claim otherwise, there is no pat formula that will answer your question. You need insurance for protection. You're the best judge of how much protection you need.

Some families don't have enough life insurance protection. Some have too much — so that they almost go broke paying the premiums. Don't make either of those mistakes. Buy what you need but only what you can afford.

What type? Term is less expensive than whole life. Don't get trapped into thinking of insurance as an investment. Buy insurance for protection. Make your investments elsewhere.

Q. When a person is in the 32 percent federal tax bracket, does that mean that he pays 32 percent of his income in federal income taxes?

A. No. It means that the top part of his income is subject to a 32 percent tax bite. The rest of his income is taxed lower.

From the 1977 tax rate schedules included in the federal income tax forms, we find the following line. A married couple, filing a joint return, is in the 32 percent bracket when their "taxable income" — after all exemptions and deductions — is between $32,000 and $27,000.

They paid Uncle Sam $4,380 on their first $23,000 of taxable income and 32 percent on the rest.

Q. Do any savings banks pay 7 percent interest on federally insured, two-year savings certificates?

A. No. But you can get better than 8 percent these days on six month savings certificates, if you shop around.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.
