Egypt won't elaborate on new peace plan

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt offered Israel a new six-point peace plan today calling for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories and insisting that East Jerusalem return to Arab control. It also offered agreement on security before Israeli troops actually leave.

Unofficial Israeli reaction was cold. Ahmed Maher, a spokesman for the Egyptian Foreign Ministry, said there would be no elaboration on the written text. "We have no comment on the proposals," Maher told reporters. "I think when you read them you will find them very clear."

The proposals were delivered to the Israeli Government earlier in the day by U.S. Ambassador Samuel W. Lewis in preparation for a meeting of Egyptian and Israeli foreign ministers in London in two weeks.

Many questions remained unanswered, but the plan apparently was an attempt to skirt Israeli objections on the withdrawal issue by offering to discuss security arrangements first and return of land later. Israel had said Egypt's demands for withdrawal were an unacceptable precondition.

The plan calls for "freely elected" representatives of the Palestinian people to administer the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip during a five-year transition period under the supervision of Jordan on the West Bank and Egypt in the Gaza Strip.

This appeared similar to Israel's earlier proposal to give the 1.1 million Palestinians limited self-rule under the guidance of Israel and Jordan.

Both the Israeli and Egyptian plans call for abolition of the current military government in the occupied territories.

However, the Egyptian demand that Israel divide Jerusalem and abandon settlements in the occupied territory appeared to have little chance of Israeli acceptance.

A key difference in the Egyptian and Israeli plans is that Egypt has suggested security arrangements be negotiated. Israel has proposed retaining responsibility for security in the occupied areas.

Questions remain on who the Palestinian representatives will be at the U.N. supervised talks between the Arabs and the Israelis. The plan omits any reference to the Palestine Liberation Organization, with which Israel has refused to negotiate. Questions also remain on compensation for Palestinian refugees and how immigration would be handled. These points presumably would be negotiated.

There was no immediate reaction from Israeli officials. But the conservative newspaper Maariv termed the Egyptian proposal "a non-starter."

"It's hard to assume that President Sadat will find even one person in Israel who can accept the peace plan as it is," Maariv said. But it said "if the Egyptian proposal does not demand that Israel obligate itself to anything as a precondition to the London conference, then the government is obligated to consider any proposal or idea in any plan, even the most fanciful."

Briscoe, leaders hold quick, closed session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe held a quick closed session with the lieutenant governor and the Speaker today as legislative attempts to cut taxes got under way.

There was no announcement of the meeting and none afterwards.

"They (the lieutenant governor and speaker) slipped in his office and slipped out about an hour later," a spokesman for Briscoe said.

First public hearings on legislation to be considered at the July 10 special session were set during the afternoon.

The 30-day session begins at noon next Monday, so there is virtually no time for legislators to prepare any new comprehensive tax relief proposals.

Briscoe has indicated, however, that he has been briefed on several proposals by his staff.

The two House committees — ways and means and constitutional amendments — had orders from Speaker Bill Clayton today to talk about property taxes and a limitation on how much government can spend and tax.

Briscoe called the session Friday, saying its single objective "will be to construct a tax reduction and limitation program consistent with the long-range best interests of Texas."

The governor has not said what specific proposals he will allow legislators to consider.

"I shall ask the Legislature to act on several items which reap tax benefits now and particularly in the future," he told a news conference Friday.

Early indications were that his tax reduction proposals would total some $257 million a year.

Staff members of the governor, speaker and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby were expected to meet Wednesday in preparation for the third special session in Briscoe's six years in office.

Clayton told the ways and means committee to explore the abolition of the state sales tax on utilities, the 10-cent state property tax and increasing the inheritance tax exemptions.

Hobby favors passage of such proposals, but he says he has "serious doubts" about Briscoe's proposal to require a two-thirds vote of the Legislature to enact a tax bill.

Sen. Frank Lombardino, D-San Antonio, has pre-filed a bill to eliminate the sales tax on utilities and to hike the inheritance tax exemptions.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, also has offered a proposal to save Texans inheritance taxes, and he has proposed a constitutional amendment limiting increases in valuations of residential and nonresidential property.

Krueger 're-announces' his Senate campaign

By LINDA HILL
R-T Staff Writer

NEW BRAUNFELS — U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger Tuesday called on Texans to declare their "independence" from U.S. Sen. John Tower.

In what was billed as a "re-announcement" of Krueger's campaign to unseat the Republican senator, the congressman from New Braunfels attacked Tower's voting record during the senator's 17½-year tenure in office.

Krueger spoke to something more than 3,000 supporters at a Fourth of July picnic at his home in New Braunfels.

Braunfels. About two dozen state Democratic officials and candidates, including U.S. Rep. Jim Wright, House majority leader, were on hand to lend support.

Krueger charged that Tower had been ineffective, insensitive and inaccessible to Texans.

"If there is one consistent pattern to John Tower's record of ineffectiveness, insensitivity and inhumanity, it's this: a consistent appeal to the fears, prejudices, divisions and smaller constricting aspects of our nation, rather than to our better hopes and visions," Krueger said.

He called for "vision and not construction."

Krueger said Tower's votes against Medicare and against minimum wage increases showed neglect of our older and less fortunate citizens.

Tower's voting record, Krueger said, has been dependent on "who's been in the White House." Krueger said Tower favored aid to New York City when "his friend Gerald Ford" was in the White House, but this year has voted against such aid.

On the topic of government spending, Krueger said he will work to limit increases in government spending to the inflation rate. He said the U.S. needs a simplified tax structure "that not only is fair but appears to be fair."

If Americans want less government spending, they must realize it "means more individual responsibility," the candidate said.

In his Tuesday speech to the approximately 500 volunteers who helped put together Tuesday's event, Krueger said, "there's not a tougher race in this country" this year than his against Tower, but, "we are going to win," he said.

Introducing Krueger, State Democratic Party Chairman Calvin Guest said Krueger can beat Tower "if we all get together and realize we have got a hell of a fight on our hands."

Krueger hosted a private luncheon for the Democratic dignitaries before the main event Tuesday.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright said in an interview he does not think President Jimmy Carter's popularity level is a factor in state races this year.

"We (in Texas) don't depend on presidential coattails. In fact, it's the other way around," Wright said.

The majority leader predicted passage of the House-Senate conference committee's energy bill. He said passage of that bill would be "the single most important thing we can do to restore confidence around the world in the U.S."

The energy bill will not be a perfect one, Wright said, but "it will be a beginning" toward solving the energy problems.

Also attending Krueger's luncheon was former U.S. Senator Ralph Yarborough, who said he supports Krueger now, although he backed Joe Christie in the Democratic primary.

Yarborough said his support for Christie was not "anti-Krueger." Rather, he said, he owed support to Christie because of Christie's support for him in past campaigns.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, dressed in a Krueger T-shirt, also was at the luncheon.

A lot happens in Lamesa on Fourth

LAMESA — What was purported to be the "good ole days" returned to Lamesa on Independence Day.

And there was more to see — and do — on this day than a mischievous preacher's son could possibly get around to on one afternoon.

Enough goings-on were happening to keep a restless Tom Sawyer home another day before he took flight.

It was a combined occasion: the celebrating of Lamesa's diamond jubilee and, timely enough, that of the Fourth of July.

There were many sideshows abounding in the tree-shaded Forrest Park, and the main show probably was what you happened to be watching at any given time.

Just about anything country, except for fooling around in the haystack, was going on: picnicking, turtle racing, jogging, water poloing, tobacco spitting, slow-pitch softball, egg-tossing, domino playing, gun fighting and just lazying around.

Lamesa's 82-a-year friendly constable, Glenn White, plunked himself permanent-like on a stage and went through some fun routines, as if he were auditioning for Matt Dillon's sidekick on "Gunsmoke." He was holstering a for-real, low-slung six-shooter and was wearing a broad-rimmed straw hat and sunglasses. He needed 'em.

"All right, come on now," he'd say, and then would shuffle around and sing something like "Tear Drops in Her Eyes" and "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," while the backup western swing or country band kept up . . . or vice versa. He wasn't quite ready for Ted Mack and "The Original Amp-teur Hour," but he was entertaining and was primed for an honoring of Lamesa's yesteryears.

Hundreds of folks were just looking around and watching the constable, who was under the shade of a parachute canopy spread from tree to tree.

Youngsters eagerly were taking free rides on the Lamesa Volunteer Fire Department's 1928 American-La France fire engine driven by fireman John Martin.

"It'll nearly out-perform our new stuff, just about," said Capt. Charles Gore.

Up the park road, youngsters and grown-ups alike were looking over a 1928 Model A Ford sports coupe, a '32 Chevy with a rumble seat, a black '56 Thunderbird and a few other cars — some antiques, some just old — and Benny White's crop duster, which he had landed on Houston Avenue and taxed on to a grassy spot on the park.

Beyond the herds of people in the fair-like atmosphere and in the Dawson County Fair Association barn, kids and their mostly-farming fathers were engaged in a miniature tractor-pulling contest.

BODYPAINTING is the winning combination Tuesday for at least two youngsters in this year's bicycle parade, sponsored by the Col. Theunis Dey chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Winners in the category for grades one

Two Puerto Ricans face charges of kidnapping in 20-hour siege

By RAFAEL D. MATOS

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Two Puerto Ricans were held on kidnapping charges today after abandoning their siege in the Chilean consulate without winning any of their demands.

The armed man and a woman accomplice surrendered Tuesday after holding two hostages for 20 hours. They demanded the release of four Puerto Rican nationalists jailed in the United States and cancellation of the Fourth of July celebrations on the island, but all they got was a statement from Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell.

The pair, Pablo Marcano Garcia,

26, and Nydia Cuevas Rivera, 24, were taken to court and charged with abduction. Bond was set at $500,000 for Marcano Garcia and $250,000 for Miss Cuevas Rivera, and neither one could raise it.

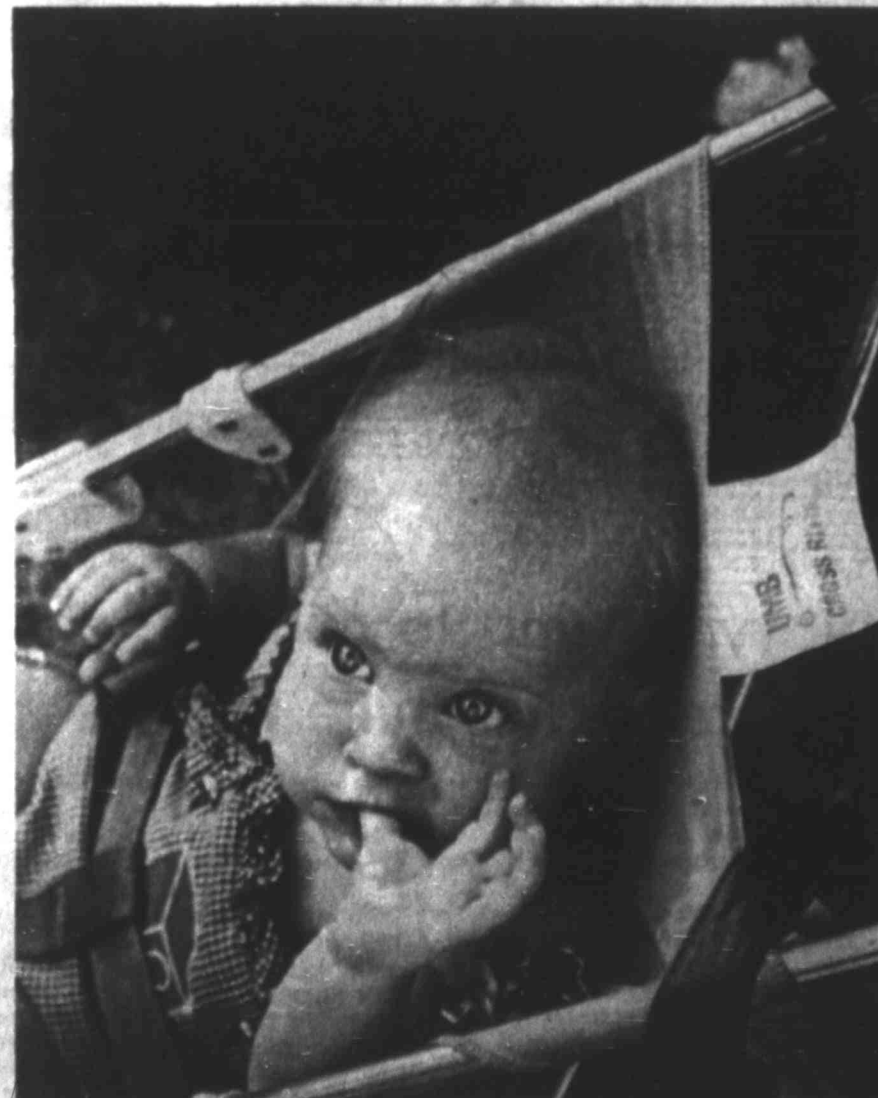

Defense attorneys Ricardo Rechany and Steve Segal said they would file a motion today asking that the bond requirement be set aside and the pair be released on their own recognizance.

The hostages, Chilean Consul Ramon Gonzalez Ruis and Sergio Alejandro Nunez, were freed unharmed. Alejandro Nunez had been in the consulate on business when Marcano Garcia and Miss Cuevas Rivera invaded the fourth-floor office Monday.

During telephone negotiations with FBI representatives, Marcano Garcia claimed that two other men as well as the woman were with him and that they were holding four hostages. But he was lying.

He also reduced their demands during the telephone negotiations, saying they would be satisfied if the White House would promise to work for the release of the four imprisoned nationalists and if the Puerto Rican government would issue a statement urging the people to boycott its Independence Day celebration.

She may not know why her parents brought her to the park, but 9-month-old Casey DeFee knows whether she's having a good time in her stroller. Casey, daughter of Jay and Gene DeFee of Lamesa, was being pushed around the park in that city, while fellow denizens were celebrating the town's 75th anniversary and the Fourth of July. # 202nd birthday little more than long weekend to many

NO DAMP SPIRIT for Steven Lopez, 9, left, and Matthew Anselom, 8, on the bike, as they show the colors by dawn's early light Tuesday on the Brooklyn Heights Esplanade. New York skies were cloudy and wet on July 4. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP)— Good day, America. You may have been wondering what happened on our 202nd birthday.

Well, in Cincinnati, they re-enacted a Civil War battle which few will remember.

In Boston, Arthur Fiedler led the Boston Pops through a splendid Tuesday evening culminated with the "1812 Overture" by Tchaikovsky. About 300,000 people applauded wildly.

In Seattle, American Legion Post No. 1 couldn't come up with a parade because, a spokesman said, interest wasn't what it once was.

Two years ago, America responded to its 200th birthday as a family. This year it seemed to revert, as perhaps it should, to a nation of families. This Fourth of July was less a celebration than a long weekend.

From the 15th floor of an apartment house in Manhattan, one could look down on 66th Street and see a fire engine frustratedly sounding its sirens at some 200 cars that clogged its way to answering an alarm. Children and adults in the cars were already late for a fireworks display over the Hudson River.

Two years ago, it seemed, we were all going in the same direction and no one got in anyone's way.

Most of New York's holiday celebrations were washed out, including "Op Air 1978" — an aerial parade of antique and classic aircraft above New York Harbor. Two years ago it was the parade of tall ships.

Nevertheless, it was a terrific fireworks show over the river and with the Boston Pops playing on the television set, no one would have known it was not 1976. Except if it were, everyone would have been at the riverbank, not indoors.

It was, incidentally the 100th anniversary of the birthday of a man named George M. Cohan who wrote "Yankee Doodle Dandy," born on the Fourth of July.

A fireworks display at Candlestick Park, sponsored by the San Francisco Chronicle, was threatened until the last minute because the city said it could not afford the clean-up. Blame Proposition 13. At the eleventh hour, the cavalry came to the rescue. Police and firefighters' organizations pledged to pick up the sanitation costs.

In Bristol, R.I., about 20,000 people braved the wet, cold weather to attend what has been called the oldest Fourth of July parade in the nation.

There were 100,000 last year, 300,000 in 1976.

Sculptor's mission reminds Americans of first inhabitants

IOWA FALLS, Iowa (AP)— Peter Toth is an adopted American who has taken on the mission of reminding fellow citizens of the plight of the first Americans.

For nearly eight years, the Hungarian-born artist has been working his way across the country, leaving a trail of log and stone sculptures as memorials to the suffering of American Indians.

Iowa Falls is the site of Toth's 28th monument, dedicated on the Fourth of July to the Sac Fox and other midwestern tribes that have disappeared in the last 100 years of "expansion and progress."

The 33-foot Indian head was carved from a century-old cottonwood felled by a lightning bolt. The monument stands in the city's midsection on a bluff overlooking the Iowa River.

Toth, 31, says the sculptures are his silent, artistic protest against the "betrayal" of the Indian.

"I am protesting against the plight of the Indian," he said. "Against the theft and trickery through which we took this land. We left them with barren waste to suffer poverty and prejudice. "But, my protest is constructive ... one of giving, not destruction," he said. "I want also to honor the Indian as the proud, brave and dignified people they are."

Toth said he has studied Indians since before he "adopted" the United States at age 11, when he moved with his family from Europe to Ohio 20 years ago.

His interest turned to an inspiration that in 1970 led him to leave his college studies for the open road to tell of the Indian's plight in his special way.

Toth set out on the mission he believes is his destiny with a mobile home, a five-pound mallet, a chisel and a dream of sculpting a monument for every state in the union.

Missing money raises brows

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)— Some say Willie and Floyd Mayweather blew a $3.5 million Oklahoma oil inheritance on women and gambling. Others say they never got that much.

But the two brothers didn't change much over 40 years; they continued to work as hod carriers and kept the same friends. Now that they're dead nobody's sure what happened to the money.

"They blew the money," said Leo McKamey, who heads the hod carriers union local in Kansas City. "It ain't hard to do if you got a drinking habit and like the girls."

But on reflection, McKamey doubted they went through $3.5 million. "If they did that kind of gambling on the street it would raise the economy of this whole area."

The two brothers were divorced on the same day in 1947. "Sometimes he would have from $2,000 to $5,000 in his pocket and I would have only $5 or $10," said Willie's wife during the proceeding. "He drank a lot and gambled with his money. He would come home sometimes at night and at other times he wouldn't."

The wives got $1,500 each. Floyd remarried. Willie never did.

"There's none of the money left," said Floyd's second wife, Nona Mae Mayweather. "I don't really know what happened. He (Willie) didn't really live high, at least not what I would call high."

Chester Sampson, a friend and drinking companion of the brothers, said Willie, who retired on a $123.50 monthly pension in 1974, would get religious and begin to preach after a few beers. "We'd have to threaten to pull him out."

Floyd died in 1970 and Willie died late last month.

They left Floyd's wife and daughter very little. "I don't think anybody knows (what they did with the money)," said Robert Powell, a funeral director and friend of the brothers. "A lot of people would like to know the answer to that question."

The fortune came from the brothers' uncle, who was married to an Indian woman who owned land where oil was discovered near Drumright, Okla.

There was a court fight over the money but no one knows the details, and only the docket sheet on the case is left in the U.S. District Court's offices in Tulsa, Okla.

Anthony Nugent, an assistant U.S. attorney and the son of the lawyer who won the fortune for the brothers, provided some information in a recent interview.

"My dad was always very proud of that case and always willing to let people know he made a million dollars on it," Nugent said of his father, Anthony Nugent Sr., who died recently. "I don't think he did."

Pot protest in capital

WASHINGTON (AP)— Some 1,500 demonstrators couldn't make marijuana legal, but they did what they considered to be the next best thing: They smoked their joints 50 feet from the White House gates.

The demonstration for legalized marijuana was held Tuesday in Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

One young man, shirtless with long hair and cutoff jeans said, "On every other day of the year you would get busted for smoking a joint. Not today. We're having a party."

Throng without end

Approximately 10,000 persons massed at the site of the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant, and the proud organizers called it "the largest anti-nuclear safe energy alternatives demonstration" ever held.

We prefer to term it the oldest established permanent floating protest group in the U.S.A.

Once the issue was civil rights. Then it was the Vietnam War. Now it's nuclear power, but the figures out in front haven't changed. There's Dr. Benjamin Spock, the specialist on child care. There's Dick Gregory, the comedian. There's Pete Seeger, the folk-singer. We get the impression they're never satisfied unless there's a crowd to lead, preferably a crowd of youngsters with backpacks and the stamina to keep waving protest signs as long as there's a camera trained in their direction.

Two years ago the relatively small Clamshell Alliance raised the question of whether hot-water discharges from the Seabrook plant might have a harmful effect on marine life along the New Hampshire coast.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have been bending over backward to establish — from authoritative scientific opinion — whether Seabrook is acceptable from that standpoint.

We're supposed to believe that a turnout of 10,000 protesters has some relevance to that purely technical question.

It doesn't, of course, and it is hoped that the EPA and NRC will listen to the marine biologists and not to the anti-nuclear poets and professors and pediatricians marching by in protest.

All that Dr. Spock and his cohorts are telling us is that the oldest established, permanently floating, protest group has latched on to a new cause.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if all those associates of Dr. Spock and company could find something for which they could and would wave "FOR" signs for a change, with or without benefit of camera.

Dose of own medicine

In the wake of a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision requiring the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to obtain court orders for private plant inspections, OSHA has decided belatedly to investigate its sister agencies of the federal government.

OSHA wants presidential authority to inspect conditions at government work places — authority which would not require a search warrant.

OSHA says government agencies are among the worst violators of health and safety standards, with losses due to work-related sickness and injuries totaling $5 billion a year.

Under present regulations, each agency is supposed to conduct its own job safety program. Obviously, much is left to be desired.

As OSHA noted in a recent report to Congress, a majority of the agencies showed a pattern of unresponsiveness.

While we, along with a whole lot of other folks, often have been dismayed by OSHA's guidelines and practices, it very well could be that it is on to something big in going after negligent federal work practices.

Why, in the first place, should government agencies escape the sometimes overzealous scrutiny directed heretofore only at private interests?

It would seem that civil servants also should require protection from unsafe and unhealthy conditions.

A dose of the government's own medicine might help cure some serious occupational maladies and give certain bureaucrats a taste of life as it is on the outside.

A new twist of general interest, isn't it?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rendezvous for 'death squads'

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It appears that Washington, D.C., is slowly becoming a gruesome rendezvous for secret death squads sent by Latin American dictators to eliminate those who oppose their iron-fisted regimes.

On Sept. 21, 1978, former Chilean foreign minister Orlando Letelier and a companion were killed when a bomb planted under their car exploded as they drove along Washington's embassy row. An American expatriate closely linked with Chile's secret police and a group of anti-Castro Cubans have been indicted for the murders.

From investigative sources, we have learned that the life of a prominent Uruguayan exile is now being threatened. He is Juan R. Ferreira, son of a former opposition leader in Uruguay. Ferreira works for the Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA), a civic-religious organization which monitors human rights violations.

Uruguay came under the control of a brutal military junta in June 1973. Ferreira spoke out against the dictatorship and was tossed into jail eight times over a two-year period.

He finally fled to Argentina in November 1975. Six months later, a military junta took over that country, also, and Uruguayan security agents were given free rein to pursue the exiles living in Argentina. Two of Ferreira's closest friends were kidnapped and assassinated. He and his father sought refuge in the Austrian embassy and barely escaped the fate that befell their friends. The Ferreris left the country under the protection of the Austrian government. Father and son came to the United States full of hope that their days of terror were behind them. Events have proven them wrong.

Last September, Juan Ferreira testified before a congressional conference about the arbitrary arrests, torture and murders that have become a way of life in his native country. Later that day, he received an anonymous telephone call. The caller loudly berated Ferreira as a liar and a traitor to his country. It was merely the beginning.

Over the following months, anonymous callers left ominous messages with the secretarial service at Ferreira's apartment. "Toba called you and wants to see you," said one message. "Michellini called and hopes to see you soon," said another.

Toba and Michellini were the two friends who had been executed in Argentina.

Several callers left the name of Acosta y Lara. He was the founder of Uruguay's death squads, who was himself assassinated in 1972. Other message slips stated that "Escuadron de la Muerte" had called. This is Spanish for "death squad."

Last November, Ferreira appeared before the human rights commission of the Organization of American States. Shortly thereafter, an anonymous caller angrily ordered Ferreira to leave the United States. Subsequent callers threatened him with death if he didn't leave before Dec. 31.

The deadline passed but the menacing calls have continued to come on an average of five or six times a month.

ART BUCHWALD

Lobbying against liberty: as it might have been

WASHINGTON — As we celebrate at this season a thought occurs to me. What if the 13 colonies had to deal with the number of lobbyists we now have registered when they were trying to come up with an acceptable Declaration of Independence?

The delegates then meeting in Philadelphia would have to hold hearings on it.

The first spokesman would be president of the God Save the King Assn. He would read from his notes, "Gentlemen, my organization opposes this Declaration as an affront to everything these great colonies stand for. It is full of accusations and half-truths about His Majesty. If this Declaration of Independence is passed, we will see nothing but chaos, violence and a drop in the Gross National Product."

"This document invites anarchy. It is seditious and a call to overthrow the government by force. The God Save the King Assn. will not stand idly by and see it passed. We intend to raise a war chest to see that it is defeated. Anyone who votes for it will be opposed by our organization in any future elections."

The next witness would be the president of the British-American Chamber of Commerce. "Gentlemen, I cannot tell you how strongly the British-American Chamber of Commerce feels about the Declaration of Independence. It is the most anti-business document ever presented to a legislative body."

Art Buchwald

"If it is passed by this Congress we can expect to see American businesses fail, factories shut down, a disastrous decline in trade that will lead to inflation, a balance of payments crisis, and an inevitable rise in the price of tea. While some charges against the King may be valid, we have to look at the big picture. The very life blood of our commerce is England. In order to do business with her we have to put up with some petty inconveniences."

"It's true that taxes are high, but are they going to become any lower if we break away from the mother country? Our economists estimate that an independent country will raise the base tax in this country by 30 percent. This tax will have to be passed on to the consumer. You people must come to your senses. The business community cannot afford a revolution."

"Before you vote on this, ask yourselves: 'Do we want liberty, justice and the pursuit of happiness, or do we want a sound and healthy economy?'"

A third witness would be the commander of the Veterans of the French and Indian Wars.

"I am here to speak for the soldiers who served His Majesty during the great North American war. We believe that the Declaration you are planning to sign is a left-wing radical plot, financed by unnamed European powers who have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the States and Britain going at each other's throats. We ask that a congressional committee investigate the people behind this subversive attempt to overthrow the system. They are spitting on the Union Jack and must be brought to the bar of justice and hanged, and left slowly twisting in the wind."

The last lobbyist to speak would be Roger Nader, who would say he could not support the Declaration because there was no mention in it of seat belts for 1776 two-horse carriages.

After the hearings, the Declaration of Independence committee would decide to adjourn until July 10. When asked why, the chairman would reply, "The Continental Congress never works on the July 4th weekend."

Bakke won. Blacks won. Liberals won. Whites won. Conservatives won. It's the kind of definitive decision that could only come during the Carter Administration.

Thanks to the Supreme Court, Allan Bakke cannot only pursue his M.D. but he will eventually get a C.D. — "Celebrity Doctor."

The Bakke decision was The Big Event — a legalistic Super Bowl. It pleaded for Howard Cosell intoning — "The scrappy but aging future practitioner of the hippocratic art emerged with the blessings of the nine jurists in a 5-4 obfuscated marathon."

Everyone is claiming victory in the case — liberals and conservatives alike. Now it can be told — there are two Allan Bakkas.

NICK THIMMESCH

'Why people should vote Democratic in November'

By Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

When the American voters choose their representatives to the 96th Congress, the Democratic party deserves their continued support. We promised results for the American people, and we produced them.

Two years ago we promised that people would be working, and today they are. The 95th Congress and President Carter have generated more than 5.5 million jobs in all sectors of the economy. In May, 1978, more than 100 million people were employed. The unemployment rate has been cut from 8 percent on Election Day to 6 percent now as 1.3 million unemployed Americans found work.

Two years ago we promised to pull the economy out of recession and stimulate a strong recovery. The record speaks for itself. Our gross national product grew 4.9 percent in 1977, compared with an average of 2.4 percent for the eight years under Republican Administrations. While we had a severe winter as well as a coal strike that slowed the GNP, we intend to do as well in 1978 and 1979.

Nick Thimmesch

Two years ago we promised to end the bickering between the President and the Congress, and we have. We have left behind the days when a recalcitrant Republican White House blocked initiatives of a Democratic Congress. We have replaced conflict with cooperation.

We said we were committed to stable economic growth, and we have worked to achieve it. We cut income taxes in 1977, and we will cut them again in 1978.

Our tax cut this year is going to be in line with our fight against inflation: enough to increase consumer spending without overburdening the federal budget.

We will continue to battle inflation. Through our budget process, we have cut the deficit by $10 billion. We cut the spending target for fiscal 1979 by $1.4 billion. Our appropriation bills for the coming fiscal year, as in most previous years, have been several billion dollars below the budget requests.

We are grappling with one of the most difficult problems facing this country — energy. We achieved a major breakthrough when conferees reached a written agreement on the natural gas sections of the legislation. We are putting together the most comprehensive energy package ever to come before the Congress.

Last year, in the first session of the 95th Congress, we put together the finest record for any new team in Washington since 1933, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt came into office. We enacted into law major tax-cut legislation; a major economic recovery package; a clean air law extending compliance deadlines, which averted shutdowns in the auto industry; a Medicare-Medicaid law that cracked down on fraud and abuse; a food stamp law that did the same; legislation setting up a Department of Energy.

We have passed and sent to the Senate the Humphrey-Hawkins bill, which combines strong anti-inflation measures with goals for reducing unemployment.

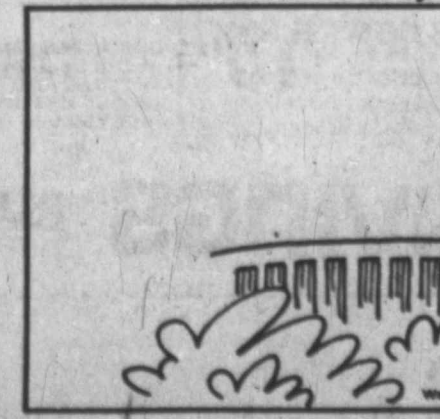

Already in 1978 we have enacted new laws to raise the mandatory re-irement age to 70; improve the black lung program and shift its financing from the federal government to private industry; provide nuclear anti-proliferation guidelines for the President, and many others.

In every field, the Democrats in Congress have established a record to be proud of. We have only begun our work with a new President. We intend to add to this record of progress and responsible legislating in the 96th Congress.

We are confident that the people will choose to support the kind of responsive, progressive and responsible lawmaking that has been the hallmark of the 95th Congress when they elect their representatives to the 96th Congress.

Texas senators split on oil import fee increase

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 22 through June 28.

The bill authorizing $755 million for operating Amtrak in fiscal 1979. This amendment was addressed to a requirement that Amtrak buy American products with any purchase of $100,000 or more. The bill was later passed and sent to conference with the Senate. Members voting "yea" were opposed to the "Buy America" requirement.

Rep. Mike McCormack, D-Wash., a supporter, said, "The solar power satellite system is a technology that may hold a great deal of promise as a viable option for base load electric power in the future, but it is also a technology requiring a great deal of research and development."

Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., an opponent, said he favored solar energy but viewed the bill as "a classic example of taking a simple solution and unduly complicating it...when the beauty of solar energy is its simplicity." He added: "A solar satellite program could cost the taxpayer $40 to $80 billion for research alone. The cost of implementing such a program could be in the trillions of dollars."

Members voting "yea" favored the bill.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-2, Ray Roberts, D-4, Bill Archer, R-7, Bob Eckhardt, D-4, Jack Brooks, D-9, W. R. Poage, D-11, James Wright, D-12, Jack Hightower, D-13, John Young, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, George Mahon, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Bob Gammage, D-22, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "yea."

Rep. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Jim Mattox, D-5, Omar Burleson, D-17, and Barbara Jordan, D-18, voted "nay."

Rep. Olin Teague, D-4, Jake Pickle, D-10, Robert Krueger, D-21, and Dale Milford, D-24, did not vote.

"BUY AMERICA." Rejected, 93 for and 207 against, an amendment to strike "S Buy America" language from

Rep. B. F. Sisk, D-Calif., an opponent, said he was as concerned as any member with the integrity of the House. "But is this any way, to go out and start kicking our friends in the teeth worldwide, to retain our honor?"

Members voting "yea" favored the aid cut-off.

SENATE FEDERAL WORKERS PAY. Rejected, 21 for and 69 against, an amendment to remove a proposed 5.5 per cent cap on pay hikes for federal blue-collar, white collar and military workers. The temporary cap would last through Oct. 31, 1979. The amendment sought to remove the cap, thus allowing normal "comparability" raises which would be in excess of 5.5 per cent. President Carter has called for the 5.5 per cent limit, saying the federal government should set an example for the rest of the country in the battle to slow the wage-price spiral. The amendment was proposed to HR 12930, an appropriations bill later sent to conference with the House.

Unable to get Congressional passage of his energy plan, President Carter has threatened to achieve energy conservation by imposing import fees he says would raise prices and thus discourage domestic consumption of oil and petroleum products. This vote expressed Senate opposition to such action by the President.

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, a supporter of tabling, said that to tie the President's hands "is an embarrassing statement to the world that the Congress is not willing to curb American oil imports or consumption or support the President in his effort to achieve energy conservation."

Senators voting "nay" favored tying the President's hands on oil import fees.

Bentsen voted "yea." Tower voted "nay."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, sponsor of the amendment, said: "Just going through the act of putting a 5.5 per cent cap on these salaries...is making a scapegoat of the federal employe to try to solve a situation that has arisen out of poor economic policy."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent of the amendment, said: "I happen to believe if Congress says loudly and clearly that it is going to put a pay cap on all federal workers...such a message could have a beneficial ripple effect throughout the economy."

Senators voting "nay" favored the 5.5 per cent pay cap for all federal workers.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D. and John Tower, R, voted "nay."

OIL IMPORTS. Rejected, 39 for and 49 against, to table an amendment to prohibit the President from increasing import fees on foreign oil. It came during consideration of HR 12930, an appropriations bill later sent to conference with the House.

Unable to get Congressional passage of his energy plan, President Carter has threatened to achieve energy conservation by imposing import fees he says would raise prices and thus discourage domestic consumption of oil and petroleum products. This vote expressed Senate opposition to such action by the President.

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, a supporter of tabling, said that to tie the President's hands "is an embarrassing statement to the world that the Congress is not willing to curb American oil imports or consumption or support the President in his effort to achieve energy conservation."

Senators voting "nay" favored tying the President's hands on oil import fees.

Bentsen voted "yea." Tower voted "nay."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent of the amendment, said: "I happen to believe if Congress says loudly and clearly that it is going to put a pay cap on all federal workers...such a message could have a beneficial ripple effect throughout the economy."

Senators voting "nay" favored the 5.5 per cent pay cap for all federal workers.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D. and John Tower, R, voted "nay."

Carter job rating still slipping

By EVANS WITT

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans' trust in Jimmy Carter increased in June, but their rating of his performance as president continued at the lowest levels of his administration, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

The rise in Carter's trust rating is a reversal of a long slide that started when Carter first began work in the Oval Office.

Forty-five percent of those questioned said they trust Carter to do what's right at least "most of the time." That's up five points from the 40 percent rating found in the May AP-NBC News poll.

But 53 percent said Carter can be trusted only "some of the time" or "almost never." That is down two points from May.

Two percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed by telephone June 27 and 28 were not sure.

Trust in Carter stood at its highest point in February 1977, days after he took office, according to an NBC News poll. At that time, 70 percent expressed trust in Carter, while only 25 percent said they lacked confidence in him.

From that poll until the latest survey, his trust rating had dropped steadily.

Seven out of 10 Americans polled said Carter is doing a "poor" or "only fair" job as president. That's up 1 percent from the finding of the AP-

NBC News poll in early May.

Only 27 percent of those questioned last week said Carter is doing an "excellent" or "good" job, down 2 points from the last poll. Three percent were not sure.

The changes in the Carter job rating are smaller than the sampling error margin of 3 percent for a poll of 1,600 interviews. This means that one cannot say the changes are an actual decline in Carter's job rating. They could simply be chance variations in the sample.

Although not necessarily statistically significant, the change in Carter's job rating in June was in line with its downward trend over the last year.

Similarly small declines were found in people's ratings of Carter's performance in specific areas.

On the economy, only one in five Americans rated Carter's work excellent or good, while more than three out of four — 76 percent — rated him only fair or poor.

The public gave Carter a 22-72 percent negative rating on foreign policy, and a 25-69 percent negative mark on handling energy problems.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News polls could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans with telephones because of chance variations in the sample.

'Come-and-go' plant clinic slated Thursday in city

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

High winds and temperatures placed stress on crops and rangelands in the West Texas area during the past week. Moisture reserves are very slim for crops and native forages and rain is needed to assure anything like normal production.

Cotton, which ranges from only several weeks old to squaring over the Midland area, generally is making fair to good progress in growth. Moisture reserves are slim however, and continued development will depend on future moisture supplies.

The season has been a frustrating one for home gardeners. Insect, disease and soil and water problems have developed with ornamentals, fruit, shade and nut trees, for many gardeners. Many individual calls for assistance with such problems come to the Extension office, but time and limited personnel do not permit handling them in the manner that I would like.

In an effort to give more personalized assistance to gardeners the Lancaster Garden Center and the Midland County Extension Service will conduct a Come-and-Go Plant Clinic Thursday, between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. and 2:00 until 6:00 p.m.

You can bring your gardening problems and questions, actual specimens of bugs and/or diseased plants and consult personally with specialists of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University. The following specialists will be available for consultation: Vernon Sikes, horticulturist; Dr. Harold Kaufman, plant pathologist and Charles Nebb, entomologist. I will also be present to assist. If something has been "bugging" you in your garden or home landscape come by and visit with an expert.

Michael Bardon Vineyard was established in Midland County in 1975 by John Crosby Jr. who has a vision of developing wine grape production as a profitable new agricultural enterprise for the area. Crosby planted twenty some-odd varieties of mostly vinefera or European grape varieties in his 12-acre experimental grape vineyard. This year will be the first year of production.

Some of the varieties are bearing heavily and looking good. Many persons have been following the progress of the project with interest, so we have planned a program on July 15, open to the public, to acquaint all interested persons with the possibilities of the venture.

Roy E. Mitchell, with B.S. and Ph.D. degree in chemistry and five years experience in wine research at Texas Tech University, will teach a one-day course in wine production in the home emphasizing the production of dry table wine from fresh grapes. The course considers the following points:

Assumes some experience in tasting wines but no background or experience in winemaking.

Describes equipment, procedure and raw materials necessary to produce high quality wine at home.

Utilizes and booklet, "Beginner Book of the Wine Making" by W.M. Konnerth and supplementary material by Roy Mitchell.

Includes wine tasting session to show wine qualities important to the winemaker.

The day will start at 9 a.m. in the Community Room, Commercial Bank and Trust Co. From 9 until 11 will be the winemaking class. The tasting session will be from 11 until noon. After a break of two hours for lunch, a tour of the vineyard will be conducted from 2 until 4 p.m.

Firefighters, city officials resuming talks, hope to avoid 'holocaust'

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Union and city officials are resuming negotiations in an effort to avoid another "holocaust," as Mayor Wyeth Chandler described the three-day, arson-plagued strike by firemen.

The 1,400 firefighters, obeying a Chancery Court order, ended their strike Tuesday. All pickets, including two informational pickets at each station allowed under terms of Monday's back-to-work consent decree, were removed.

In good faith we took down all the pickets.... The only way a picket will go back up is if we strike again," Sam Posey, vice president of Local 1784 of the International Association of Firefighters, said Tuesday.

At today's talks, the union was expected to renew its request for a federal mediator. The union had asked for a mediator before striking, but Chandler refused.

Meanwhile, the Memphis Police Association, which represents 1,200 officers, also was to resume negotiations today. The police union's contract with the city also expired at midnight Friday.

As the strike ended, Chandler lifted a two-night curfew and ended a state of civil emergency he had declared Sunday.

Across town, most of the 800 National Guardsmen called up when the firemen walked out headed home. The last of the guardsmen were to be out of the city by noon today.

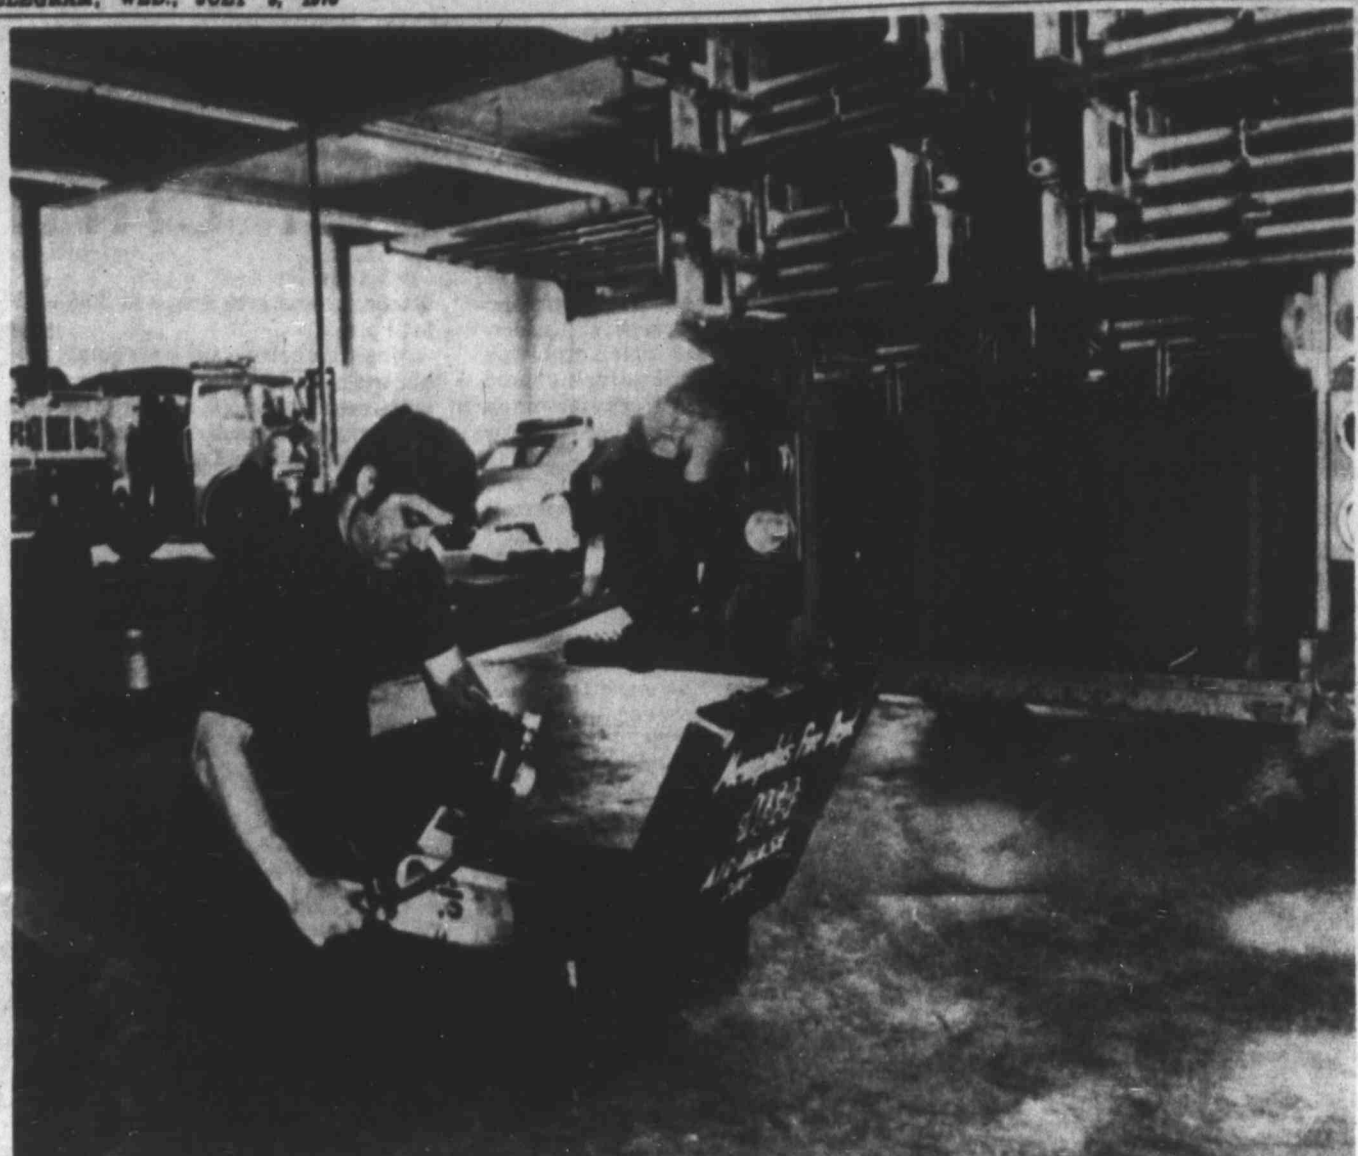

At Fire Station No. 7, the 10 firefighters had a relatively slow day Tuesday, reporting three minor calls.

"I'm glad to be back to work," fireman Rick Finney said. "None of us really wanted to strike, but we had no choice. We can't work for nothing."

Fire officials said the city was relatively quiet on Tuesday, in sharp contrast with the situation over the weekend when more than 400 fires erupted, most of them in abandoned buildings. Memphis averages about eight fires on a normal Saturday night, officials say.

Arson is suspected in 95 percent of the weekend fires and city officials blamed striking firemen for some of them. Two firemen were arrested on arson charges, but the firemen's union said it advised members against any acts of violence.

"I never thought I'd see this in Memphis," said Fire Director Robert Walker, who estimated the fire damage since Saturday at between $5 million and $6 million.

three-day strike. More than 1,400 firemen were on strike in a dispute over shift differential pay. (AP Laserphoto)

Illegal aliens finding entry into United States now safe

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — Illegal aliens sneaking into the United States are finding the way safe for the first time in years — thanks to American officials.

"We had to do something," says one officer who helped launch a counter-attack on bandits who prey on the aliens.

The frightened Latin Americans, mostly Mexicans, carry their cash savings as they slip across the border at night. But they have been susceptible to robbers who know the aliens are afraid to report thefts for fear of being detected themselves.

There were 128 reported assaults on illegal aliens on the San Diego side of the border last year and possibly thousands more that were unreported, authorities say.

In late 1976, a special undercover force of 10 San Diego police officers offered themselves as decoys to lure the bandits into the open. In the first five months of this year, there were 38 reported robberies, two rapes and a killing.

In mid-May, the U.S. Border Patrol took over the protection job, and since then there have not been any reported attacks on aliens, says Albert Franco, deputy agent in charge of the Border Patrol's Chula Vista sector.

He added that federal agents arrested an average 950 illegal aliens daily during June.

The Carter Administration has assigned an extra 100 men to the San Diego region — bringing the total to 151 — to halt the attacks. They go into the hidden canyons and high brush east of the San Ysidro port of entry from midnight to 8 a.m.

"We call it high visibility, and it's working," says Franco.

While San Diego police were patrolling the border, officers were engaged in a dozen gun fights and four of them were wounded.

One of the shootouts involved two Tijuana police officers who San Diego Police Chief William Kolender said crossed the border in an apparent attempt to rob illegal aliens. One was wounded by Kolender's men and charged, but he was later released to Tijuana authorities.

Solons score low in poll

NEW YORK (AP) — Only one in five Americans believes Congress is doing a good or excellent job, while 76 percent give the lawmakers a poor or fair rating, a poll indicates.

Four percent said they were not sure when interviewed by telephone in The Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The results changed dramatically when the 1,600 adults called were asked about their own representatives.

Forty-seven percent gave high marks to their representatives while 45 percent rated them fair or poor. Eight percent were uncertain.

The pollsters also asked which party would do a better job of holding down taxes: Thirty-one percent said Democrats, 29 percent named Republicans and 26 percent said neither.

Forty-one percent said Democrats would do a better job of keeping the country prosperous while Republicans were named by 38 percent.

Asked which party would do better in keeping the nation out of war, 41 percent gave the nod to Republicans and 35 percent said the Democrats.

In each question, the remainder said they were not sure.

The poll was conducted June 27-28, except for the tax question which was asked during a June 15-16 poll.

New commitment to battles urged

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two prominent black leaders say the drive for civil rights for minorities has reached a crisis because whites are retreating from a commitment to equal opportunity.

In separate speeches on Tuesday, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris and NAACP chief Benjamin Hooks both urged blacks to recommit themselves to the struggle against poverty and racism.

Hooks criticized the U.S. Supreme Court for the ambiguity of its Allan Bakke decision and charged that nothing in the Civil Rights Act of 1964 requires absolute color blindness.

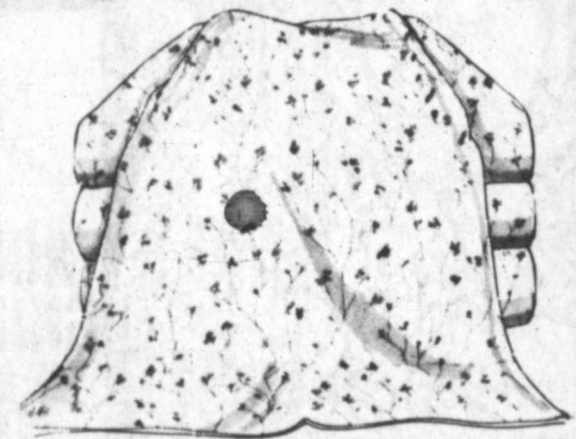

He told delegates to the 69th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People that their gathering "is a grim testimony that this equality is yet a will-o-the-wisp."

He called for economic sanctions against apartheid in South Africa, a stop to the property tax revolt and an energy policy that provides a full-growth economy.

"We cannot allow a message like Proposition 13 to pass in another state in this union," Hooks said to a standing ovation. He said the limitation of California property taxes to 1 percent was a "reckless and unthinking act."

Father vows to continue fighting state

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John Singer, who claims public schools would teach his children immorality, says a judge's ruling that his children can be taught at home is a partial victory.

But Singer, who faces a contempt-of-court charge, says he "would definitely resist" if law enforcement officers came to his 2½-acre Marion farm to arrest him.

"It's a little funny that someone is telling me to keep my children when my children are mine to begin with," Singer said of Monday's ruling by Second District Juvenile Court Judge John Farr Larson.

"It seems like they gave some today, but they still have me on the list as a bad egg," said the 47-year-old Singer, father of four boys and three girls whose ages range from 2½ to 13.

An excommunicated Mormon who believes in polygamy but does not practice it, Singer has said that sending his children to public schools would expose them to sex, drugs, homosexuality and general disease. He took his five school-age children out of school in 1974 to educate them in a one-room schoolhouse he built on his farm 60 miles east of Salt Lake City. The South Summit School District at first allowed the home education, but Singer then objected to having to take roll and banished district monitors.

The district obtained a court order to take the children into protective custody and to arrest Singer and his wife, Vicki, 35, for child neglect. On Monday Larson vacated that arrest order, but kept in effect an arrest order for Singer, who has missed previous hearings in the case. Singer, who has not left his land in seven months, was not present for the latest hearing in Salt Lake City.

"I feel more and more like the pioneers. They constantly had to be on the alert. They constantly had to bear arms in order to be ready for any conflict at any minute's notice," said Singer, who carries a gun and has said he would rather die than be taken into custody.

"I would definitely resist," he said. "I feel that I have committed no crime and therefore I should not pay a penalty."

Larson said it would not be in the children's best interest to be taken from their home, placed in foster homes and sent to public school.

He said Singer could educate the children at home and urged him to set up an adequate education program.

Larson also recommended that Singer file a suit challenging Utah's compulsory education law. But Singer said the law does not concern him.

He said he would wait to see what the court ruling contained before deciding whether to comply. However, he said, "This is a closed and shut case as far as I am concerned."

Robert Orton, court-appointed attorney for the Singer children, said he would ask Singer to turn himself in to authorities, but said the last time the sheriff approached Singer, the sheriff had a gun pointed at his face.

In Israel, guns will soon be more in evidence

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Guns soon will be even more in evidence in Israel, which already has more weapons per capita than television's image of the American frontier.

The chief of staff of the Israeli Defense Forces has ordered sergeants and officers to carry weapons whenever they are in uniform, even in cities such as Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

Before Gen. Rafael Eitan made his ruling there were complaints from civilian circles that it would make Israel look like an armed camp, and some military men expressed fears that the proliferation of weapons might lead to an increase in firearms accidents.

But Eitan decided to go ahead with the ruling as an anti-terrorist measure — encouraged, apparently, by an incident a month ago in which an armed civilian guard opened fire on a band of Palestinian guerrillas attempting to infiltrate a Jordan Valley cooperative farm. The Palestinians fled, leaving one dead behind.

The ruling will mean thousands of additional guns on the streets. This presumably would make it more difficult for terrorist-type attacks to succeed.

Automatic rifles and the little Uzi submachine guns already are much in evidence in Israeli cities. Under standing orders any soldier traveling through the occupied territories must go armed, and troops passing through towns and cities on pass or leave from bases in those territories carry their weapons as casually as college students do books.

It is not uncommon to see a soldier on Jerusalem's main street with an

M-16 rifle on one arm and a girl on the other. A driver who stops for hitchhiking soldiers gets his car filled with guns, as well. Tour bus drivers have pistols on their hips and civil guards, volunteers who take shifts protecting downtown areas, sit chatting on benches with submachineguns in their laps.

Tourists are shocked at their first sight of the weapons — how many young men with machine guns does one see at an American bus stop? — but soon get used to the presence of arms. Increasing the number of guns is not expected to decrease the number of tourists, who passed the 1 million mark for the first time in 1977.

"I see Swiss soldiers with guns on the streets of Zurich," a tourism official said, "and I don't believe a few more guns here will bother anyone".

The number of terrorist attacks in Israel has been on the increase this year. Most involve the planting of time bombs. There also have been cases of firebombs thrown at vehicles, and in one incident a hitchhiking soldier was fatally shot from a passing car in East Jerusalem.

"The presence of an armed man nearby might have prevented some of these attacks," an officer said.

Hundreds of pistols are being issued to officers, and all of them, up to and including Eitan himself, soon will be carrying them. Senior noncommissioned officers will be issued automatic weapons, army sources said. The weapons will be carried any time the soldiers are in uniform.

Despite the prevalence of arms in Israel, shooting incidents are few. Police reports rarely mention accidental or intentional shootings among the general populace.

Mrs. McGill

SAN ANGELO — Services for Mrs. Bruce (Martha Florence) McGill, 68, of Rankin, will be at 10 a.m. Thursday in Johnson's Funeral Home here with the Rev. Neal Brillhart, pastor of the Baptist Temple, officiating. Burial will be in Fairmount Cemetery here. Mrs. McGill died Monday at her residence. She was born Jan. 10, 1910, in Irion County. She married Bruce McGill Nov. 17, 1936, in San Angelo. She was a Baptist. Survivors include her husband; two sons, Jessie B. Farris of Odessa and Emmett B. McGill of Satellite Beach, Fla.; a daughter, Ruth M. Rife, of Melbourne, Fla.; a brother, George Lee Williams of San Angelo; a sister, Mrs. V.M. Hodges of Parker Heights and eight grandchildren.

Mrs. McCord

COLEMAN — Services for Mrs. J.P. McCord, a lifetime Coleman County resident and mother of Mrs. Tom (Mary Velma) Sealy of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Walker Funeral Home here with the Rev. Charles Schuler, a Presbyterian minister, officiating. Burial was to be in Coleman City Cemetery. Mrs. McCord died Monday in her home here. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.B. Beaumont. She married J. Presley McCord April 27, 1910, in Coleman. Her husband, a prominent Coleman County rancher, died Oct. 9, 1967. Mrs. McCord attended Kidd-Key College at Sherman, now Southern Methodist University. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Daughters of the American Revolution and the Coleman Garden Club. She was included in the book "Texas Women of Distinction" for her work in art, poetry and gardening. Survivors, in addition to the Midland daughter, include a son, J.B. McCord of Coleman, three grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Southward

Graveside services for Fredricka Southward, 67, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Resthaven Memorial Park directed by Newline W. Ellis Funeral Home. Officiating will be Donald Hafemann, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church. Mrs. Southward died June 26 in Tulsa.

Parker K. Humes

Services for Parker K. Humes, 77, of 2900 W. Illinois Ave. will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in Scott's Funeral Home in Gatesville with burial in Westland Cemetery there. Local arrangements were handled by Newline W. Ellis Funeral Home. Humes died early Tuesday in a Midland hospital. He was born Dec. 16, 1900, in Turnersville and spent his early life in Coryell County. He attended schools there and was graduated from Baylor University in 1926 with a B.A. degree. Humes started out in the teaching profession and became superintendent of schools, serving in that capacity several years. He moved to Southland, and in 1937, he moved to Dawson County where he was county superintendent of schools through 1968. In later years, Humes earned an M.A. degree from Texas Tech University. He moved to Waco in 1967 and then to Midland in 1977. Survivors include a son, Parker M. Humes of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Worley of Midland and Mrs. Rex Timms of Santa Monica, Calif.; a brother, Lester Humes of Turnersville; a sister, Mrs. John Bushnell of Austin, and five grandchildren.

Ethel Hawkins

STEUDEVILLE, Ohio — Services for Ethel I. Hawkins, 79, of Salleville, Ohio, mother of Franklin Hawkins Sr. of Midland, were held June 27 in Mosti Funeral Home here. Burial was in Union Cemetery here. Mrs. Hawkins died June 24 in an East Liverpool, Ohio, hospital. She was born May 19, 1899. Her husband, Frank M. Hawkins, died in 1969 in Sweetwater. Survivors also include three other sons, a daughter, two sisters, 21 grandchildren and 31 great-grandchildren.

Tornado kills four

ELGIN, N.D. (AP) — A tornado tore through 17 residential blocks of this small ranching community, killing four persons and injuring about 40 others. "The tornado touched-and-skipped through the north quarter of town," said Ray Staiger, North Dakota Disaster Emergency Service deputy director. "It took some houses, mobile homes and a six-unit apartment." Phil Miller of disaster service said one of the victims was killed Tuesday in a senior citizens housing unit, two others in their vehicle and the fourth while en route to Bismarck for treatment. The names of the victims were withheld pending notification of relatives. The night supervisor at St. Alexius Hospital at Bismarck, Helen Fischer, said one victim was listed in critical condition today and six others satisfactory. Approximately 35 to 40 persons suffered minor injuries and were treated at the Elgin hospital.

Five-year-old runner paces solid marathon run

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) — Bucky Cox stretched his little legs over a 26-mile, 385-yard course for more than five hours on a hot Fourth of July, and took his place among the fastest 5-year-old marathon runners. Bucky, a first-grade student from Lawrence, crossed the Sundown Salute marathon finish line in Junction City five hours, 25 minutes and nine-tenths of a second after he started the race Tuesday. His time was good enough for 64th in the field of 100 runners. Heat took its toll as temperatures hovered in the 90s and 32 runners, including favored Bob Busby of Kansas City, did not finish the course that wraps around Milford Lake and Junction City. "I'm tired ... My legs hurt a little bit ... but I feel fine," Bucky said during a break at the 24-mile mark. Bucky finished about 2 1/2 hours behind the marathon's winner, Stephen Brumit of Slater, Mo., a runner at Central Missouri State University who was clocked in at 2:50:56. Marathon records are unofficial, but the California-based publication Runners World has reported two 5-year-olds in times of 4:56:36 and 6:56:39. Bucky started training for distance running at age 4 by running about 100 yards. He gradually worked to longer distances, finishing his first 18-mile run two weeks ago. Ray Foster, a research psychologist who is Bucky's trainer, and the boy's mother, Joan Maxwell, charted Bucky's mile-by-mile times at around 10 minutes a mile. He stopped every three miles for water and walked for five minutes before running again. Foster and Doug Baker, another research psychologist at the University of Kansas, took turns running with the boy, and his mother bicycled with him through much of the race. Foster said Bucky would have finished in under five hours if it had not been so hot.

Time capsule pilfered?

BALTIMORE (AP) — A group of railroad officials lifted a 225-pound marble stone guarding an 1828 time capsule, but instead of a cache of 150-year-old memorabilia, they found only a 1953 newspaper and railroad timetable. The capsule was lifted from underneath the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's dedication stone by B&O officials in a small ceremony Tuesday at the Transportation Museum. The sealed glass cylinder was buried by the Baltimore businessmen who launched the railroad on July 4, 1828. "I was hoping against hope that the original things would be in there," said Franklyn Carr, museum curator, who added that the items found in the crypt appear to have been buried at the dedication of the museum itself, in 1953. But Carr added that he plans to X-ray the crypt for other compartments. He said the original time capsule containing the 1828 documents may have been hidden away in another compartment chiseled into the granite block on which the marble stone sits.

Protest in Carter's hometown focuses on local 'human rights'

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Calling on President Carter to fight for human rights "in his own backyard," about 150 protesters staged a Fourth of July rally to focus attention on the case of a black woman convicted of killing a white man she said was trying to rape her. No incidents were reported Tuesday as the demonstrators marched 1 1/2 miles through the president's hometown amid heavy security. About a dozen state patrol cars were parked along the route, and sheriff's deputies and local police followed the procession. Local residents and tourists watched as the marchers, a coalition of several groups — many from out of state — filed by in the 90-degree heat. Many stores were closed for the day at the request of town officials.

Hiccups: Only cure is time, hope

By BOB DORN
Copley News Service

The hiccup demon is implacable and relentless. It strangles expression in mid-sentence.

Its spasms leave the stomach battered and limp, the lungs aching from repeated shock.

It swallows thiazine — the powerful tranquilizer that brings back to earth those in freaky LSD orbit — but it keeps on ticking. Tigan, compazine and other relaxants only sometimes smother it.

Just when it seems to have flown the body, it returns to shake the esophagus again, and again, and ... hic ... again.

A 10-year survey by a New York doctor resulted in his finding that there are at least 33 physical ailments that are accompanied, sometimes, by hiccups and 10 psychological conditions that are, sometimes, accompanied by hiccups.

But he couldn't say what caused the hiccups.

About the most that can be said about hiccup causation is that something called the phrenic nerve, which starts in the neck and continues into the chest, becomes irritated and sends a message to the diaphragm that makes it recoil like a howitzer.

The trick for the doctors and researchers, apparently, is to determine just why a host of physical conditions — from overeating and overdrinking and on to stomach, pancreas, intestinal and liver disorders, as well as pregnancy — irritate the phrenic nerve.

Unborn babies have been known to hiccup.

A young man from Northumberland, England, was admitted in 1789 to the infirmary at Newcastle upon Tyne with a case of hiccups that could be heard from as far away as a mile (according to Guinness).

A good, strong case of the hiccups is liable to turn back time-honored remedies the way steel-armored trucks turn back bullets.

Hiccups are considered perpetual, according to one medical encyclopedia, when they continue more than 48 hours.

Short of radical medical procedures, the only remedy at the 48-hour mark is patience, a sense of humor and an abiding faith that one of the following measures will finally, fortunately, earn its reputation.

COUGHING — And sneezing and vomiting. The idea is that the sudden jolting of the diaphragm will interrupt the vagrant firing of the phrenic nerve that causes the hiccup.

HOLDING BREATH — Do it as long as you can, or have somebody pinch your nostrils shut and hold your mouth closed so that you are denied oxygen longer than you think you can stand.

BAG BREATHING — Take a brown paper bag, not too big, and breathe from it without letting new air in from the outside. This is closely allied to holding the breath because both techniques are based on increasing the amount of carbon dioxide in your blood. Doctors put people in carbon dioxide inhalation tents because the gas somehow affects the nerve impulse.

ICE — Apply a bag of it to the back of the neck. Or chew shattered chunks of it. Who knows why?

THINGS TO EAT — Black licorice, teaspoon of sugar, lemon, lemon with angostura bitters, teaspoon of vinegar, bicarbonate of soda (which may be necessary after trying all the foregoing).

ORANGES — Cut an orange into quarters or eighths, then slowly suck the juice. Don't bother eating it. A popular remedy among health food and natural cure believers.

SLOW DRINKING — Use water or milk, or any other bland liquid.

This seems a combination of swallowing and breathing remedies because when you drink slowly enough from the glass you're also breathing your own exhalation which contains carbon dioxide. It doesn't work if you have clogged nasal passages.

SIMPLE SYRUP — Pour as much as three ounces of sugar into a glass, then add only enough room-temperature water to form a thick liquid and then down it in one throw.

EARS — Have someone plug yours while you drink a glass of water. A variation is to have that someone press their thumbs firmly enough in the crooks just below your ears to cause you pain, lifting upward slightly while you drink a glass of water.

MEDITATION — Some people say they can will the hiccups away. Try being very still and breathing very deliberately and deeply while assuming the next hiccup will not come.

Will this cure work? Don't hold your breath!

DEAR ABBY

Loving, considerate husband becomes hostile, abusive

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I don't know which way to turn. My husband started having a cocktail before dinner every night. Then it was two. Then doubles. Now, he sometimes gets so drunk, he falls asleep at the table. (Thank God our children are grown and gone.)

Now he has taken to drinking on weekends, and if I say anything to him about it, he becomes hostile and even abusive. He never used to be this way, Abby. When he sobers up and I tell him what he has said and done, he can't believe it. Then he begs me to forgive him and promises it won't ever happen again. But it does.

I've suggested Alcoholics Anonymous, but he insists he isn't an alcoholic. It's a mystery to me how he can function so well in his business.

When he's not drinking I couldn't want a more wonderful, loving, caring, considerate husband, but his personality changes completely when he drinks.

How can I help him, Abby? He's getting worse.—DESPERATE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I recently came upon a wonderful little booklet titled, "Alcohol: A Family Affair," by John E. Keller. It's written in plain, everyday language and is by far the best thing I've ever read about how to deal with a drinking problem (yours, or that of someone you care for).

OPERATION CORK
P.O. BOX 9550
SAN DIEGO, CALIF. 92109

Ask for the booklet, and please enclose $1 to help defray the cost of publishing and mailing. If you can't afford $1, they will send you the booklet anyway. (They are a nonprofit organization.)

Good luck and God bless. And please let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: We have received an invitation to an anniversary celebration for 25 years of marriage—to three different wives! The first is deceased, the second divorced and the third is the present wife. The invitation reads: "Don't try to understand me—just love me."

What is your opinion of this type of celebration?—PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: If your friend wants to celebrate the total number of years he has been married, that's his privilege. But it can't be properly considered a "25th wedding anniversary" unless all the 25 years of marriage were spent with the same spouse.

If you love him, don't try to understand him; he's just doing his own thing.

DEAR ABBY: For centuries the Catholic Church did not permit its members to join the Masons, but in 1974, Pope Paul VI ruled that Catholics can now be Masons, except in communist countries. Thought you should know.—A CATHOLIC MASON

Connections can be made by drilling one hole

By AL CARRELL

To a lot of people, the idea of adding a faucet to their plumbing system or hooking up an icemaker would sound impossible. They'd think they had to cut into the pipes, resolder fittings and end up with a major project. While it may be true in some cases, many times such a connection can be made in a matter of minutes by drilling only one hole. The secret is a saddle-type tee that fits around the pipe and clamps in place. With the water supply in that pipe cut off, you drill through the opening in the tee, being careful not to go through the backside of the pipe. Then you attach the tube for the icemaker or screw the threaded faucet into place or add whatever it is you desired. A gasket in the tee seals against leaks. Just be sure to talk with your dealer to get the right size and type of tee, and you're in business. These are also called quick tees and saddle clamps. Now you can buy the kits for icemaker installation that have these tees, plus the tubing and everything else you need. Knowing about this little device may let you add a washing machine, an extra hydrant or maybe even a shower in the basement.

Dear Al:
I know you should not pour oil down your kitchen sink drain. However, my sink disposer was making a grinding noise. Having no idea what I was doing, I figured it would need oiling. So I poured a little cooking oil down the disposer and turned it on. The noise tuned down considerably and hasn't returned. Maybe this will help some other poor soul with a noisy unit. — Mrs. B.S.

It's possible you lubricated whatever was rubbing. Usually just keeping these units clean will keep them as quiet as they are capable of running.

Dear Al:
As you know, there are several ways to attach abrasive discs to the metal wheel of a disc sander. I have found a spray-on glue at the art supply store that is quicker and easier than any other way, and it holds. Use the dry mounting method on the label, which means letting the glue dry until tacky before pressing the abrasive in place. — D.W.

A SUPER HINT — Did you ever saw through a hidden nail while reclaiming used lumber? That noise will sure wake you up. Plus the fact it's not all that good on the saw teeth. Where there might be a nail lurking around, why not make a pass along the intended cut line with your magnetic stud finder? If there are any nails, the stud finder will point them out before you cut into them.

Dear Al:
After the fuel is gone in a throwaway butane lighter, it bugs me to throw it away when there's a perfectly good spark mechanism left. So I now keep one to start my propane torch. It's a lot handier than the conventional spark lighter, plus it's colorful and easier to spot among a maze of tools.—K.K.B.

SHOP TALK — Do you remember those big, ornate cast-iron plates that used to be in the back of fireplaces a long time ago? (If you do, you're even older than I am.) They not only looked good, they had a purpose. They radiated considerably more heat than the bricks did. With the energy problems, and with the popularity of fireplaces, these plates are now back on the market. They're called firebacks. Your fireplace dealer should be getting them in. Now while the fireplace is idle is a good time to install these and also to do any repairs. If you wait on repairs you may not be able to have a fire next fall.

Got a question or a handy tip? Write to Al Carrell in care of this newspaper.

California grapes can satisfy the most fussy nibbler easily

Summer brings a return to outdoor living and with it, a call for light and refreshing snacks. Crisp California table grapes can satisfy even the most fussy nibbler, neatly and conveniently.

Sprightly table grapes from California are available in at least one variety throughout most of the year. But late spring heralds the arrival of the popular Perlette and Thompson seedless varieties — both perfect for anytime snacking!

There are so many delicious ways to enjoy refreshing grapes during the warm days ahead. You might even consider buying an extra supply of fresh grapes next time you visit the produce department. Place half of your purchase in a covered container in the freezer. Keep the remaining half in a bowl in the refrigerator to nibble by the clusters, or to add to a fruit salad or even to garnish a barbecued chicken platter. The frozen grapes, when snipped into tiny clusters, become edible non-diluting ice cubes in fruit drinks or iced tea. And children of all ages love to snack on frozen grape "drops;" the grape becomes even more refreshing and sherbet-y smooth when frozen.

When you shop for California grapes, be sure to select full clusters with plump berries that are firmly attached to pliable green stems. Keep fresh grapes refrigerated and wash them under a gentle spray of water just before serving.

Crisp grapes are not only the perfect snack, they're also a tasty addition to many meal plans. For example, you might center a patio buffet around a selection of cheeses and chilled wines, accompanied by a bowl full of frosty fresh table grapes. Or you can serve our Grape Growers Salad Platter, a toss of sprightly grapes and greens, lightly marinated in prepared vinaigrette dressing. Topped with a creamy smooth dressing and flaked tuna, the salad becomes an easy, out-of-the-ordinary summer luncheon.

At 100 calories per cupful, fresh grapes can even be nibbled with a clear conscience by those of us who are calorie counters. However you enjoy them, by the cluster or one by one, fresh table grapes from California are wonderfully suited for snacking.

GRAPE GROWERS SALAD PLATTER

- 1 cup (16 ounces) cut green beans, drained
  - 1 cup sliced, celery
  - 1 cucumber, sliced
  - 1 jar (6 ounces) marinated artichoke hearts
  - 1 pound California seedless grapes
  - 1 can (7 ounces) tuna, drained or cubed cooked chicken or ham
  - Sour Cream Dressing (recipe follows)
  - Salad greens
- Several hours before serving, combine beans, celery and cucumber in bowl. Pour artichoke hearts (and marinade) over vegetables. Add 1 cup grapes, pulled from stems. Cover and chill. Prepare and chill dressing. To serve: line serving platter with greens. Arrange vegetable salad and tuna on greens. Garnish with clusters of grapes. Pass dressing in small bowl. Serve with french bread, if desired. Makes 4 to 6 servings.
- Sour Cream Dressing: Blend ¾ cup sour cream, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon each white wine vinegar and chopped parsley, ½ teaspoon each salt and dried tarragon and a dash of pepper. Makes about 1 cup.

MINI RECIPES

PINEAPPLE IN CREME DE MENTHE

- 2 (20-oz.) cans pineapple chunks
- One-half cup green creme de menthe
- 1 (12-oz.) pkg. frozen pineapple chunks

Day before serving: Drain one can pineapple chunks. In large bowl, combine drained pineapple chunks, one can undrained pineapple and creme de menthe. Mix well; refrigerate, covered, overnight. Stir several times while pineapple is marinating.

To serve: Turn into attractive serving bowl; mix well. Thaw frozen pineapple chunks as package label directs. Drain; toss lightly with pineapple in bowl. Makes eight to 10 servings.

Reading machine may change education of blind

By BART BARNES
The Washington Post

BALTIMORE—Twice a week Marie Larson, 25, who has been blind since she was 3 years old, places a book on the top of a machine near her office, throws a switch, and takes a seat to "read" for two hours.

Then, deliberately and in a stilted, almost robotic voice, the machine reads aloud. If there is a passage that is particularly complicated or hard to understand, Larson can throw a switch and the machine will repeat it. If the machine says a word she doesn't recognize, she can throw yet another switch and the machine will spell it for her.

She is using a device called the Kurzweil Reading Machine, a new and experimental product that has the potential for dramatically changing the nature of the rehabilitation, education and training of blind people.

"We think it's the greatest development since Braille," says Michael Hingson, a blind person and chairman of the National Federation of the Blind's committee on research and evaluation.

"The reading machine will make a lot of material available to blind people that just hasn't been available before."

"It's probably one of the biggest breakthroughs in blind educational aids we've ever had," said James Johnson, marketing director for the U.S. Office of Education's Bureau of Education for the Handicapped.

In the last year, 30 of the machines have been placed in schools, libraries and departments of education around the country by both the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped and the federation of the blind.

There, they are subjected to an ongoing process of criticism and evaluation by blind users. Those reports are sent on to Cambridge, Mass., where the machines are designed and undergo continuous modification.

Initially, for example, each machine cost $50,000 to produce and weighed 150 pounds. By next month a desk top model will be available for less than $20,000.

It will be about the size of two large attache cases and will be easy to carry, its designers say. Within three years, they hope to have the cost down to less than $5,000 and eventually, they say they want to make the machine available to every blind person who needs one.

Invented by Raymond Kurzweil, a 29-year-old graduate of MIT, the machine can read most common styles of type at a speed of about 150 words a minute — the normal rate of speech.

When a user places a book, memorandum, letter or pamphlet face down on the machine and throws the "read" switch, a specially designed system scans the page and transmits electronic images to a computer.

The computer is programmed to recognize letters on the page, group the letters into words and then compute the pronunciation of each word.

To enable the machine to pronounce words properly, the computer's memory has been fed more than 1,000 linguistic rules, plus 2,000 exceptions to those rules. The actual speaking is done with a speech synthesizer.

"The voice is a little bit tough to get used to, but we find that with an hour or two of practice, you can understand it easily," said the federation of the blind's Hingson.

"It's like getting used to a foreign accent," said Dorothy Harris, 48, who's been blind for the past 13 years.

Two or three times a week, Harris spends an hour with the reading machine at Blind Industries and Services. She's had "The Bermuda Triangle" read to her and she's about halfway through a book of reflections by a Baltimore area disc jockey.

"It does what any (human) reader would do for you," said Harris.

One of the machine's real benefits, say blind people and people who work with them, is that it gives the blind access to a wealth of written material that is not available in Braille or on tape recordings.

"A lot of blind students who previously had to hire people to read to them or rely on volunteers will now be able to do it themselves," said Marilyn Mortensen, special services supervisor for the Virginia Beach, Va., public library.

Virginia Beach has had one of the reading machines for about a month. "It's marvelous. It has tremendous potential and it's going to be a real assistance to the entire blind community," said Mortensen.

MINI RECIPES

PETITE

SALMON LOAVES

1 can (15½ ozs.) salmon or 2 cans (7¼ ozs. each) salmon
¼ cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper

2 tbsps. minced onion
1 tsp. minced parsley
1 egg, beaten
¼ tsp. seasoned salt
¼ tsp. pepper
4 lemon slices

Drain and flake salmon. Combine salmon with remaining ingredients except lemon slices. Place lemon slices in bottom of 4 oiled 6-ounce custard cups. Divide salmon mixture evenly among custard cups. Place in pan of boiling water and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Turn out on individual plates. Serves 4.

SALAD CUP

1 can (30 ozs.) fruit cocktail
1 jar (4 ozs.) sliced pimento
¼ cup sliced celery
3 tbsps. lemon juice
1 tsp. seasoned salt
Lettuce cups

Drain fruit cocktail. Combine with all remaining ingredients except lettuce. Mix gently and spoon into lettuce cups. Makes 4 servings of ¼ cup each.

She finally pays debt

DALLAS (AP)—After 44 years, Florine Townsend, 65, paid a bill for $30.75 from the Dallas County's Parkland Memorial Hospital. The bill covered an unpaid balance for her husband's appendectomy in 1933.

She and her husband, A. W. Townsend Jr., 69, a former Methodist minister in Louisiana, now live in retirement near St. Petersburg, Fla.

While going through some old papers recently, said Mrs. Townsend, she came across the 1934 bill.

Farewell party held in Midland home

Mrs. Dan Cotten was hostess to a farewell coffee in her home, 2303 Neely St., honoring Sally Davis, who has lived in Midland the last 10 years.

Refreshments were served from a lace covered table, centered with a floral arrangement and accented with yellow candles. Gifts were presented to the honoree by members of Beta Eta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha and Mrs. Cotten.

Attending the coffee were members of Beta Eta Chapter and other friends of Mrs. Davis. She has worked in the Department of Community Services at Midland College the last three years. She is moving with her family to Topeka, Kan., where she will operate a bookstore.

A diet shouldn't leave you feeling deprived of food. Pictured are three low-calorie, but completely satisfying dinner menus, featuring meatballs, to serve with cottage cheese, individual salmon loaves to accompany with fruit salad, and crab claws and marinated celery, which may be topped off with a fruit cup.

Proper diet fits into menu plans

By JEANNETTE BRANDIN
Copley News Service

Nutritionists and doctors who are waging a war against overweight say a balanced diet which includes foods from the "Basic Four" groups will keep a person from hunger pains and a feeling of being deprived. The weight loss comes by cutting amounts. Calories do count, and a calorie counter is a valuable weapon in the battle for a trimmer figure and better health.

The "Basic Four" food groups, recommended on a daily basis for all persons, regardless of age, are (1) Fruits and vegetables; (2) Meats or meat substitutes such as dried beans and peanut butter; (3) Whole grain breads and whole grain cereals, and (4) Dairy products.

Meals at home can be planned to meet high nutrition standards but still be low in calories. Three are pictured here: An economical meatball and cottage cheese supper; a moderate-cost meal of salmon loaves and fruit salad; a luxury dinner featuring crab claws.

TANGY MEATBALLS
1 lb. lean ground beef
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tbs. prepared horseradish
1/4 cup finely chopped onion

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Roll meat mixture into 36 balls, 1 inch in diameter. Thread 3 meatballs on each skewer, and broil 4 inches from the heat for 5 minutes. Use 2 skewers (6 meatballs) for each serving.

ing. Serves 6.
Calories: Approximately 124 per serving.

SNOW CRAB CLAWS GOURMET
2 pkgs. (12 ozs. each)
Alaska Snow crab claws
1 tbs. butter
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tbs. chopped green onion

1 tbs. minced parsley
1 tbs. lemon juice
1/2 cup dry white wine
Thaw and drain crab claws. Melt butter with remaining ingredients.

Add crab claws. Simmer 3 minutes, basting frequently with sauce. Serves 6.

Scout garage sales, auctions for items to decorate home

Secondhand style is when you go at it as was done here in this casual room where an old dentist's chair was reupholstered in bright red vinyl. Collecting at garage sales, auctions and second-hand shops can produce marvelous finds.

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We're about to start finishing a basement in our home which we'd like to make into a den and guest room. But we really are pretty strapped for decorating funds because our construction work is costing more than we estimated.

What ideas might you suggest for creating a 15x15-foot room, making our dollars stretch as much as possible?

A. One of the best ways I know is to scout garage sales, church fairs and auctions as well as secondhand shops and thrift shops where you can often pick up offbeat items and lavish some care on them to create unusual and decorative furnishings for your home.

For example, even an old dentist's chair becomes a conversation piece when it is reupholstered in flame-red vinyl fabric with brass nailheads adding a bit of luster.

If you keep your eyes open you can often come upon somebody's castoff that is just right for you. Chests that make handy storage for television sets and stereos can provide a traditional accent across a wall. Old Franklin stoves make grand instant fireplaces.

If you're planning this as a guest room, I'd plan for at least one twin bed and two if possible. Instead of using traditional bedspreads, you might buy bolsters and tailored covers to create sofas out of the beds — grand for guests as well as the family which may use the room when your guests are gone.

Plan plenty of color in the room with lots of white or another light color because basements are always on the dark side and can be dreary with too much dark paneled wood.

Bright chalky white walls are always a good start and provide a crisp background for all kinds of color combinations which you can establish in the bolsters and spreads. Red, white and blue is a gay color scheme, as well as blues, greens, yellows and whites, or go into the naturals with browns, white, blacks and rusts.

Just don't be discouraged that you haven't a big budget for decorating. Some of the most imaginative rooms can evolve out of shopping sprees to unlikely places on the weekends.

Q. Our master bedroom has an old brick wall which is just beautiful but stands out too much for us with the other white walls.

Our new bedroom set is a burlied fruitwood in a grayish brown and the bed is placed against the brick wall. What color would you suggest for the walls and the draperies?

The floor is natural wood and we have a beige shag rug we will use. The one window in the bedroom looks out into a private walled-in court. I would like to keep to rather muted earthen tones in the room. — T.G.

A. You are indeed fortunate to have a brick wall in your bedroom because brick is so interesting to look at and has a great texture.

Perhaps a lightened version of the brick red or a goldish, mustard shade would be a pretty warm color that would blend your furnishings and your wall together.

Then you might accessorize with touches of deeper, hotter orange in pillows and even a chair.

Use a solid earthen-toned beige spread (or a light oatmeal beige) and repeat the light oatmeal in a lacey, architectural netting at the windows to give you a filtered light.

It is never too late for adults, keyboard

CHICAGO (AP) — Middle age and older can be prime time for piano lessons, says an education specialist for the National Piano Foundation here.

"It's never too late for an adult who wants to play piano for enjoyment to take up the keyboard," says E.L. Lancaster, assistant music professor at Harper College in Palatine, Ill., and the Piano Foundation's continuing education project director.

"The sense of individual accomplishment, and the exhilaration a person feels after mastering a musical piece, are as important to an adult as to a small child," Lancaster points out.

Witness Michael Goldman, 41, a beauty-products manufacturer. He had never played the piano when he started to take lessons a few years ago as a release from daytime job tensions. He got an instructor who specialized in teaching adults, set aside about three to four hours a week for practice, and barred his family from listening.

"Playing the piano is something I like to do alone. It seems to help me relax after a particularly tense day and I wanted the challenge involved in calling on completely different skills. I can forget everything at the piano," Goldman says.

Goldman is just one man in what seems to be a national movement. According to a recent Gallup survey, there are 14 million adult Americans who play the piano regularly, and the number of amateur pianists has increased by more than 2 million in recent years.

An Oak Park, Ill., teacher also began piano lessons for the first time as an adult. Ed Hayes, 48, still finds his lessons fun, he says. "I use the piano socially," the Spanish teacher notes. "I like to play at parties — the old tunes from the '30s and '40s."

"One of my future goals when I retire," Hayes adds, "would be to play in a cocktail lounge or joint like that. I wouldn't use this as a second career, but it would supplement my retirement income and be lots of fun besides."

Age has nothing to do with desire to learn, with an ear for music or with achievement level, according to Cornelia Hurlbut, a piano teacher in Des Moines, Iowa, for 50 years. Some of her beginning students, who in the past have included Cloris Leachman and Andy Williams, have been as old as 75.

"If they are starting from scratch, most adults come out playing for their own pleasure," she says. "They want something to do, and they want to improve themselves, instead of spending that time watching TV or reading."

Lancaster claims it is not difficult for adults to pick up piano tricks. "If you developed motor skills as a youngster, chances are those skills haven't been lost, they are just dormant," he says. "The older beginner can learn to play for fun by spending a minimum amount of regular practice time at the piano."

Specialist gives advice

For auto repairs, ask for a written, itemized list of all parts, labor and other charges — along with the bill.

Also, ask to have replaced parts returned to you, suggests Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Unusual store exists near Arizona church

GUADALUPE, Ariz. (AP) — The food store behind a church here does not offer green stamps, and no fluorescent lights glare upon narrow, food-lined aisles.

At the store called La Tiendita, shoppers choose from a sparse selection of boxes and cans neatly stacked on a few wooden shelves.

The store was opened five years ago by a local priest and has been managed for the past four years by 22-year-old Aurelia Paderez.

She stocks the place with goods that are donated or purchased wholesale. Although running the store is a full-time job, she takes no salary for herself.

The store extends credit to all its approximately 300 customers. Each item is assigned two prices: A higher one for those who can afford it and a lower one for those who cannot.

Catholic sisters live in trailer, travel with circus

The Los Angeles Times Sister Joseph Alice, dressed in a traditional blue habit and brown leather sandals, stood at the stove stirring a concoction called Japanese curry she learned to make in Alaska. It is her turn to cook the Sunday dinner for the group of nuns of the Little Sisters of Jesus, she explains, and this is her specialty. Their food is usually not so exotic.

The other women are seated on small wooden stools around a card table. The room is sparsely furnished with wooden benches with cushions that double as bunks. The sisters have made the red slipcovers, the red curtains at the windows. They also built the wooden altar and the tabernacle in their chapel next door. After the meal, says one of the Little Sisters, they will all offer their evening prayers, read or perhaps simply relax from the day's chores.

It would have seemed a normal day for nuns of any Roman Catholic order, except that these Little Sisters of Jesus are not in a convent. Their quarters are in a small trailer, their chapel in the back of a van. And they travel with a circus.

A most unusual order, the Little Sisters of Jesus was founded in September, 1939, in a Muslim city in the Sahara by Little Sister Magdeleine of Jesus. They are contemplative (devoted to prayer and penance) nuns who do not live in cloistered communities, but reside in small groups, three or four to a group, among impoverished peoples, or travel with nomadic bands.

Throughout the world there are 1,300 Little Sisters, of 39 nationalities. They live in 60 countries, 25 percent of them in the Sahara or in other Muslim countries. Only 25 reside in the United States. Their mission is to live as close as possible to the manner of Jesus Christ, living as workers among the poor and/or nomadic. Each group is called a fraternity. This one — made up of Little Sisters Joseph Alice, Joel and Priscilla — is the first to go on the road with a circus in the United States but other Little Sister fraternities have traveled with circuses, carnivals and Gypsy caravans in Europe for 15 years and with nomadic tribes even longer.

A woman can join the Little Sisters of Jesus at 18, but most enter the order between 25 and 30. There are a few sisters who are grandmothers and widows, one mother-daughter twosome. They live on junkies in Hong Kong harbor, in poor sections in Brazil, in fishing villages in the West Indies and with nomadic tribes of Arabia and Africa. Some are employed in factories or on farms, others do charity work. There are a few adoration fraternities, where the sisters are more particularly consecrated to prayer. Those who travel with various groups or work with prisoners or prostitutes are members of the specialized fraternities.

"For many of the girls today," says one of the Little Sisters, "it is hard to make the commitment in a sense of not being able to settle for anything else. They think of too little — are too shallow. For those of us who join, it is what we needed to do. Nothing else would satisfy the need. Faith is really the key word."

These three Little Sisters seem shy, hesitant to talk much about their lives with the Circus Vargas, now touring Southern California. They signed on only a few months ago; they try to maintain a low profile to the public while they get to know the circus people. The sisters had contacted the circus early in the year to obtain work; they joined up in Tucson.

Sister Priscilla, a Swiss member of the order for 25 years, traveled with several circuses in Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Luxembourg, Yugoslavia and Italy before coming to California. She is reluctant to talk much about them because, she explains, the Little Sisters with the European circuses once had a bad experience with the press there. She believes that they were exploited. Here, they are wary of publicity and seek no promotion. They prefer to go about their daily chores quietly — they sew costumes and sell soft drinks in concessions. They do not preach or teach the gospel to circus members. They feel their very presence with the circus is "like a sign that God is here."

The sisters take turns working, as they do in other fraternities, such as those who work in factories and live in tenements in Chicago and Boston. Only two Little Sisters work at one time. The third can then spell the others, so each will have time for the three or four hours she spends each day in prayer and meditation. There are morning and evening prayers, an hour of silent adoration and Mass. They say some psalms or read the gospel together and also have a time of silent prayer.

Before she takes her final vows at St. Peter's in Rome, eight to 10 years after she enters the order, each Little Sister of Jesus is asked if a particular people or kind of life attracts her. "We can be sent anywhere in the world," explained Little Sister Michele Edith, a supervisor who has come to California from the Little Sisters' regional headquarters in Washington, D.C., to visit the circus household. "We go to become part of the people. Put our whole selves into it. Sometimes we have to learn a new language, a new culture. To be real and go deep, it takes all of you."

Little Sister Michele Edith, a pleasant young woman originally from St. Louis, has been a nun for 10 years. She is assigned to Washington, but visits each fraternity in this region three times a year. There are one each in Boston and Chicago, a retreat in Pennsylvania, three in Alaska and two in Martinique. Plus this new one with the circus. "I try to go often to keep the fraternities together, in touch," she said.

"People always ask us why we use the word 'fraternity' instead of 'sisterhood,'" the Little Sister said. "That is because the first little brother — Little Brother Charles of Jesus — called the households fraternities. He wanted them to be places where everybody was received as a brother."

A gifted and amusing storyteller, Little Sister Michele Edith ("I had to add Edith because there are so many Michele's") decides to "start from the beginning" and acquaint the visitor with the life and times of Little Brother Charles of Jesus, the man from whose writings and teachings their order, and the similar order of Little Brothers, was founded.

Brother Charles, she relates, was a well-to-do Frenchman who lost his faith in the church when he was 18. That was in 1874. "Everything became empty to him," said Little Sister Michele Edith. "He was in military school, St. Cyr, the French West Point. He graduated 388th out of 389. He quit the army almost as soon as he was commissioned and devoted his life to pleasure. A playboy."

Later, on, according to the story, he rejoined the French army because his old regiment was fighting in the Sahara

He resigned again "over a lady named Mimi." After his service, he disguised himself as a rabbi in order to get into Morocco (in 1883) to make maps to take back to France. In those days Little Sister Michele Edith says, Europeans weren't allowed into Morocco. "There, Brother Charles experienced poverty for the first time and was treated with contempt because he was disguised as a Jew. But there, he also experienced the faith of the nomads who stopped (in their travels) and prayed five times a day. He wasn't sure God didn't exist anymore." Charles returned to Paris with his maps, for which he received a commendation from the French government.

"He hung around the churches in Paris, saying, 'All right, God, if you exist, tell me,'" Little Sister Michele Edith continued. Charles returned to the Roman Catholic faith in 1886 and spent the rest of his life trying to live his life "exactly like that of Jesus." He spent four or five years with the Trappist monks in France, lived as hand-ymen in Nazareth and entered the priesthood in 1901. He returned to the Sahara desert and lived, until his death in 1916, with the Tuareg tribe, nomadic Muslims.

"Brother Charles believed his union with Jesus made Jesus present to these people," she said. "He felt he owed his own faith to the Muslim people. And he was crying the gospel with his life. He prayed among them. Prayed in their name."

In his lifetime, Brother Charles never made a convert, never had a follower. But after his death (he was assassinated in a tribal war in the Sahara desert) some seminarians in Paris read his writings. They went to the Sahara and started the Little Brothers order in 1933.

"Brother Charles had written all the rules, but they had to be modified," Little Sister Michele Edith continued. "Even the Trappists he lived with weren't poor enough, he felt. He was a man of absolutes. The rules he made were too austere, too inhuman."

In 1936, Sister Magdeleine left France for the Sahara and founded the Little Sisters of Jesus three years later.

Bicentennial memories fade fast across America

NEW YORK (AP) — The paint has faded from birthday bright to weather-beaten bland on bridges, skyscrapers and fire hydrants. How proud they looked on that red-white-and-blue day two years ago, in the grandest celebration ever.

Today, the nation still has reminders of the millions of dollars spent on the pageantry of its bicentennial, July 4, 1976. But many projects have been abandoned.

The $1.5 million Bicentennial Barge sits quiet and empty in a Hudson River lock near Waterford, N.Y., its hull creaking the memory of a million laughing school children.

The $17.5 million Freedom Train, which had about 7 million visitors during the bicentennial year, has been renamed the Discovery Train and now tours Canada. The U.S. exhibits have been sold.

And no one has heard "Angel of Repose," an opera specially composed for the nation's birthday, since it was sung in San Francisco in July 1976.

But the American Bicentennial did create a sense of history, and inspired many communities to continue restorations and exhibits.

"The Bicentennial was a turning point in the history of the nation — when people took charge of their own destiny in their own community," said John Warner, who was director of the American Bicentennial Administration.

"The Bicentennial marked an end of the melting pot theory," he said. "People became proud of their roots but took great pride in the nation and began to respect one another as individuals."

His own agency failed to survive, however, going out of existence a year ago. The original commission, created in 1966, was to have lasted through 1983, the 200th anniversary of the Treaty of Paris, which ended the American Revolution. But the agency that replaced it was restricted to events for 1976.

On the other hand, Ohio's state bicentennial commission is still active, continuing educational projects on the American Revolution.

"The American Revolution did not end with the Declaration of Independence. It started," says its administrator, Michael Devine of the Ohio Historical Society. "It would take a multi-million dollar campaign to counteract the three major networks' impression that the Bicentennial ended when John Warner rode off into the sunset."

Ohio appropriated $500,000 to the commission in 1976. Another $1 million came from private contributions and the federal government.

New Jersey celebrated its final bicentennial activity in June with re-enactment of the Battle of Monmouth. In other states, communities are expected to mark similar 200-year anniversaries as they occur. Virginia plans to operate bicentennial visitor centers through 1983.

Many areas also designed projects that would have a lasting effect.

Tennessee spent $75,000 for three television documentaries now on loan to schools. Seattle created many small parks and plazas. San Diego and Mexican cities in Baja California formed Fronteras, an effort to promote tourism. Rhode Island's Bicentennial Foundation has published 12 historical books and plans two more this summer.

"The legacy of the Bicentennial is that people are aware of Rhode Island history far more than they ever were. People are joining historical societies and local preservation activities," said Ronald G. Tracey, executive director of the foundation.

One of the highlights of the 1976 celebration was Operation Sail, the parade of tall ships in New York.

"The bicentennial effort was worth it," says Frank Braynard, who helped conceive the square rigger event and now is general manager of an offshoot, the New York Harbor Festival. "Not a week goes by without someone telling me that was the happiest day in their life."

Still, he added, the interest has not been the same for the smaller harbor festivals held on the Fourth of July last year and this year.

Some ambitious communities undertook costly construction projects as their bicentennial effort, but in many instances, the projects failed to become permanent fixtures.

Philadelphia's $11 million Living History Center was such a financial failure that it turned to playing host to bar mitzvahs, wedding anniversaries and other parties. The center closed last month.

The $42 million reconstruction of California's 109-year-old capitol is still under way, but it has been slowed by a lawsuit seeking to require that minority contractors get a percentage of the dollar value of subcontracts over $250,000.

Houston's $5 million Tranquility Park was scheduled for completion two years ago but is not finished yet. Neither is the major bicentennial effort in Utah, a $17.5 million performing arts center.

And then there is the fact that nothing lasts forever.

Baltimore fireplugs have been restored from red, white and blue to their pre-Bicentennial orange.

Maryland will consider Bicentennial license plates illegal after next March. Michigan will drop its patriotic plates and return to staid black and white. By then, more grass will have overgrown the 200-foot UFO Landing Pad in Lake City, Pa., a futuristic Bicentennial effort. And if any extraterrestrial visitors do land, they would have to ask what country they are in. The flagpoles around the pad are already broken.

Renewal protest

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Beverly Glueckert doesn't like some of the books at the Lewis and Clark County Library. And she doesn't like working outside the system, either, to get them out of circulation.

So, she checks out large numbers of books she finds objectionable, and then repeatedly renews them "to spread the word and keep them off the shelf and out of the hands of children."

When Mrs. Glueckert tried to check out some books and renew eight others Thursday, she was refused.

Egypt's Green Revolution progresses, but slowly

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — On land that once was flat, hard sand and supported only desert scrub, about 2,000 families now live in 44 villages growing wine grapes, vegetables and clover—some earning almost three times as much as Egypt's average annual income.

The 42,000-acre project 100 miles northwest of Cairo is part of Egypt's Green Revolution—a government program to reclaim the desert in an effort to feed a population that is expected to reach 100 million by the year 2000.

The nation's present population of 40 million is crowded into a narrow strip of fertile land along the Nile River.

The Green Revolution, President Anwar Sadat's rallying cry for agricultural expansion, is designed to increase Egypt's farmland by nearly 50 per cent.

Egypt launched a land reclamation program in 1954 but it lost momentum in 1967 when the war with Israel slowed an already faltering economy. Few reclamation projects were launched in the past decade.

This year, Egypt set aside 324,000 acres for land reclamation efforts by the government, private companies, community councils and individuals. By the year 2000, a total of 2.5 million acres are to be reclaimed.

Today, Egypt has a total of 7 million acres of farmland—less than 3 percent of the whole country. It includes 1 million acres of reclaimed land and 6 million acres of traditional farmland along the Nile. But there has really not been a gain, since in the past 25 years, 1 million of the traditional farmland has been lost to urban sprawl.

While land reclamation is the government's publicly announced policy, some agricultural experts privately express doubts about its success and cite many problems: high costs, slow rate of return, difficulty in persuading city dwellers to move to barren lands where they must spend years turning them into productive fields.

The average cost of reclaiming land in the past 24 years was $923 an acre. Today, the government estimates, it will cost $2,100 an acre and the land will take at least 10 years to reach the break-even point.

But even if the new land reaches peak production, it is not expected to have as high a yield as the traditional farmland along the Nile, cultivated since the time of the Pharaohs and nourished by river mud.

This has prompted some agricultural experts to suggest Egypt should concentrate on improving yields in the traditional farmlands along the Nile instead of trying to reclaim the desert.

Egyptian officials say the cost of improving those lands is only about $36 an acre and results are achieved in a year or two.

But some of the desert reclamation projects have been successful—although long in bringing

The government's showcase example of the program is the North Tahrir Agricultural Co., with its 44 thriving villages in the desert.

Some of the farmers at North Tahrir say they earn as much as $715 a year selling their crops, a good salary in a country where the average annual income is less than $250.

Abdul Azim el-Said, North Tahrir's general director for agricultural affairs, has worked in the new lands since the beginning of the reclamation program. He recalled that in 1956, he went to poor villages to help recruit settlers for a new project near Alexandria.

At first, he said, the people were skeptical of the promise of new houses and schools for the desert pioneers, but finally some agreed to leave the villages where their families had lived for generations.

"When they left their old village, it was like 50 people had died on the same day. All the women were weeping. We began by trucks to transfer them with all their cows and donkeys and dogs and cats and chickens. After one week they began to get their land. And do you know, every one of them stayed."

At West Nubaria, a 10-year-old government reclamation project 85 miles northwest of Cairo, about a third of the 4,000 people are Bedouin Arabs whose nomadic ancestors camped in tents and herded goats on the land where their sons now drive tractors and harvest wheat with combines.

Egypt has no choice but to look to the desert for increased food production, some officials maintain.

Children retain fat

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: If children are overweight, isn't this something they outgrow eventually? Our son, who is 12, is quite plump for his size and my husband feels we must do something about it in order to get him into shape. But I hate to make a big fuss about it if he is going to get over it anyway.—Deborah H.

DEAR DEBORAH: Overweight can be a passing phase in adolescence, but unfortunately anywhere from 50 to 85 percent of children who are too fat remain so when they grow up, according to government figures. So it isn't a good idea to assume it is a problem that is going to take care of itself. If I were you, I would get your son interested in a program involving plenty of exercise—and less of those high-calorie snacks that so many kids go in for every couple of hours.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: My elder daughter, who is almost 15, has picked up some new craves for sucking lemons. And I am just afraid that it is really too much acid for her system. What do you think?—Dee W.

DEAR DEE: There was an interesting survey of this problem quite recently in the "Journal of the American Dental Association" by Drs. James Fuller and Wallace Johnson of the College of Dentistry of the University of Iowa. They warned the excessive use of lemons and other fruits containing citric acid—such as oranges, grapefruit and limes—can seriously erode tooth enamel. The lemon seems to be the main culprit, especially if there is prolonged contact of the fresh acid juice and fruit pulp with the teeth.

One case cited by Dr. Fuller and Johnson involved tequila drinking—and the custom of following each sip by sucking on fresh lime or lemon halves. The patient's testimony indicated that enamel destruction occurred in the course of a single tequila party.

If I were you, I would tell your daughter that she may be damaging her teeth. And I would have your dentist check this the next time she is examined.

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: Many, many blind and handicapped individuals, from all over the country, who had never before heard of our service are now "Choice Magazine Listening" subscribers—thanks to the item in your column describing our free anthology on phonograph records. We want you to know how very much we appreciate your help in informing this special audience of their opportunity to enjoy free access to the exciting world of ideas from the contemporary printed page.—Ms. Marion C. ## Kodak loses in suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Berkey Photo Inc. has been awarded $87.1 million in the final judgment of its successful anti-trust suit against Eastman Kodak Co.

The judgment, signed Monday by U.S. District Judge Marvin E. Frankel, cleared the way for an appeal that Kodak lawyers said would be filed before the end of the year. Frankel's ruling stipulated Kodak did not have to begin paying the $87.1 million until the photo firm had exhausted its appeal.

Midland Cubs topple Diablos again, 9-4

Manager Jim Saul must be using mirrors.

First, he lost his best hitter to Wichita. Two of his starting pitchers have their arms in slings and the Midland Cubs are locked in a series with the first-half champion El Paso Diablos, a team that loses baseball over fences like the 1927 Murderers Row.

A sure ticket to last place and oblivion, right?

Wrong! The supposedly punchless, pitchless Midland Cubs are in first place in the second half West Division Texas League race by a half game after handing El Paso a third straight loss, 9-4, at Cubs Stadium Tuesday night.

In order to retain the lead, the Cubs must knock off the Diablos in the final game of the series at 7:30 p.m. today and Saul has named Lee Smith, 5-5, for the task of keeping the Diablos' barking bats at bay just one more night.

That has been the secret of Midland's success to date. Tom Butler started things with an eight-hitter Sunday while David Overstreet and Larry Groover teamed up for a five-hitter Monday.

RANDY MARTZ and Bob Clark combined for Tuesday's win, although Martz, now 8-6, was forced to retire after five innings. "He felt a little tightening up in his shoulder. He wasn't right in Amarillo last week when he pitched with a cold. Those things can effect you in so many ways, there was no point in taking a chance," Saul said.

Clark, the lefthander, came on in the sixth and had the Diablos hypnotized on one hit until the ninth, when it began to look like he might never get them out, but the third year pro from Walnut Creek, Calif., hung for the save, his second.

Brian Rosinski slams homerun

JAVIER FIERRO connected for a two-run homer to left in the second and Brian Rosinski, who hit the ball solidly three times, rifled a solo bolt over the right field barrier to open the fourth, his seventh roundtripper of the season.

Kevin Drury delivered three hits, doubling in the sixth to score on a double by Aaron Randall, and then singling home two runs in the three-run seventh.

In all, the Cubs collected 13 hits off three El Paso hurlers. Rick Foley, just reporting from Salt Lake City after signing off the campus of Santa Clara, went six innings to take the loss.

Fierro's homer in the second came after Greg Keatley doubled with two out and made it 3-0. After Rosinski homered in the fourth, Drury singled, took second on an infield out, boldly swiped third and scored on Fierro's rbi single.

Martz, who hadn't won since beating El Paso 6-2 June 21 in El Paso, surrendered just four hits and the lone run off him in the fourth was unearned.

THE CUBS reeled off four double plays and none was bigger than the Macko-to-Seibert-to-Randall twin-killing in the ninth. As far as Clark was concerned it was a "save" saver. "One more run and I would have had to make a change," Saul admitted later.

Strangely dormant for two nights, the Diablos bats came to life suddenly in the ninth when Scott Moffitt singled, Jay Peters and Terry Stuppy tripled and Bob Slater singled home a third run to make it 9-4 and one out. Clark got Steve Whitehead to hit into a double play before Bob Clark and Danny Goodwin singled as Groover heated up in the bullpen. Bill Ewing, however, skied to left for the final out.

BRUN BREWIN'S—Ralph Botting, 4-3, goes for El Paso tonight...San Antonio follows the Diablos in five games starting Thursday...Manager Moose Stubing got Foley from Salt Lake, but lost starter Rob Millsop and reliever Dan Boone to the PCL club and Jim Dorsey, who went up to SLC a month ago,

Richard halts Cincy by 3-1

By The Associated Press

When Sparky Anderson says that an All-Star team couldn't beat J.R. Richard on his better nights, believe it.

Anderson speaks from a position of authority, since many of his Cincinnati players will be on this year's National League All-Star team.

"That guy's awesome," said the Cincinnati manager after watching the Houston strikeout king whip his Reds with a four-hitter, 3-1 Tuesday night. "Nobody has a chance in the world against that guy when he's hot."

"He's overpowering. When he's right, he's unbeatable and tonight he was unbeatable. Good thing he's not always like that."

Richard, the major league leader in strikeouts, improved his total to 145 with nine against the Reds.

"I had to pitch tough to these guys all the way to get out of there," said Richard. "They are tough hitters and they can hurt you. I wanted the game bad enough so I went out and got the win."

In other National League games, the San Diego Padres beat the San Francisco Giants 7-5; the Los Angeles Dodgers whipped the Atlanta Braves 4-1; the Chicago Cubs turned back the St. Louis Cardinals 7-5; the Pittsburgh Pirates swept a double-header from the Montreal Expos 3-1 and 4-3 and the New York Mets trimmed the Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 in the first game of a double-header before losing the nightcap 3-2.

Richard retired 14 consecutive batters between a walk to Junior Kennedy in the second and Johnny Bench's leadoff single in the seventh.

Terry Puhl hit a leadoff triple in the first off Cincinnati starter Tom Hume and scored on Dennis Walling's fielder's choice grounder. Walling singled in the Houston third, moved to second on Cabell's single and scored on Cruz's RBI single.

In the Astro seventh, Art Howe reached base on an error by Dave Concepcion and went to third on a double by Luis Pujols. He scored on pinch-hitter Dave Bergman's single. The Reds scored their only run in the first when George Foster's single scored Pete Rose from third.

Padres 7, Giants 5
San Diego's Dave Winfield cracked a first-inning grand slam homer and Eric Rasmussen and John D'Acquisto protected the lead to give the Padres their victory over slumping San Francisco.

The triumph was the fourth in a row and 12th in the last 15 games for the Padres, who went above the .500 mark at 41-40. The National League West Division-leading Giants lost their third game in a row and eighth in the last 11.

"I don't think anybody realized how good a club we've got until now," said San Diego Manager Roger Craig. "If the Giants, Dodgers and Reds keep beating each other and we can keep close, you never know what could happen."

Dodgers 4, Braves 1
Don Sutton and Bob Welsh combined on a five-hitter and Dusty Baker led the Los Angeles attack with two doubles and a single as the Dodgers beat Atlanta. The victory was the fifth straight for the surging Sutton and improved his record to 9-6.

The Dodgers got all the runs they needed by scoring three times in the fourth inning against Preston Hanna, 6-5. Doubles by Baker and Joe Ferguson produced the first run. Bill North then beat out an infield single and one out later, Dave Lopes doubled both runners home.

Lee Lacy, who replaced third baseman Ron Cey after he was hit in the face by a pitched ball, singled to lead off the eighth, stole second, and scored on Baker's second double of the game. Sutton gave up a homer to Gary Matthews in the ninth before needing relief help from Welsh.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 5
Bobby Murcer's leadoff home run in the fifth inning snapped a 4-4 tie and triggered Chicago over St. Louis for the Cubs' eighth triumph over the Cardinals in as many meetings this season.

Murcer's homer, his fourth of the year, offset a four-run St. Louis rally an inning earlier and keyed a 12-hit Chicago attack that featured two doubles and a single by Larry Blittner.

"There's really no explanation," said Blittner of the Cubs' domination over St. Louis this year. "It's just one of those things in the game. We play great against them. It just seems like every year there's one or two teams you play where things seem to go your way."

Pirates 3-4, Expos 1-3
Pitcher Bert Blyleven rapped a three-run double and scattered five hits over eight innings to lead Pittsburgh's first-game victory over Montreal.

Former M-Cub slams two homers for A's

By The Associated Press

Joe "Tarzan" Wallis being one of baseball's resident flakes, it figures that he's happy to hook on with Oakland's Charlie Finley when most players are glad to get away from the unpredictable owner of the amazing A's.

Since the A's acquired him from the Chicago Cubs last month, Wallis has rapped out 18 hits in 49 at-bats for a .367 average — including six doubles and four homers — and driven in 12 runs in 14 games for the former Midland Cub.

The 26-year-old outfielder cracked a pair of two-run homers and Tony Armas hit one to lead the A's to a 9-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners Tuesday night and into second place in the American League West.

The A's vaulted past the Texas Rangers, who lost to the Chicago White Sox 2-1, and are only one-half game behind the California Angels, who bowed to the Kansas City Royals 4-3, after trailing by five games just one week ago. California, Oakland, Texas and Kansas City are separated by only 1 1/2 games in the nip-and-tuck West while the White Sox are 4 1/2 games out and the Minnesota Twins trail by six after trimming the Milwaukee Brewers 7-2.

The Brewers dropped into a second-place tie with New York in the AL East. The Yankees were rained out in Boston while the Baltimore Orioles downed the Cleveland Indians 6-4 and the Toronto Blue Jays trounced the Detroit Tigers 9-2.

The A's jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning when Larry Murray walked and Wallis homered. In the second, Jeff Newman doubled, Armas homered, Mike Edwards doubled and Glenn Burke singled to make it 5-0. Wallis' second homer came in the eighth.

"It's been a great Fourth of July," Wallis said. "We said before the game that we were going to start out with a bang. We wanted to start our fireworks in the first inning and it just turned out that way."

"I'm sure happy that Charlie Finley got me over here. He's done more for me in one move than anybody has. I'm deeply indebted to him."

Oakland Manager Jack McKeon, whose club lost 11 games in a row last month but has won seven of its last eight, said:

"We think we've got as good a chance as anybody in the division. If we continue to hit like we have, we'll be in it. We think we're going to win it. After that bad streak, we've bounced back and we're playing much stronger. We're getting good pitching from both the starters and our bullpen. That's been our strength all season."

Royals 4, Angels 3
George Brett doubled in the bottom of the ninth inning and Clint Hurdle singled him home with the winning run as 6-foot-7 rookie pitcher Rich Gale

Geiselman captures Clark golf title

Heading into the final round of the Midland Country Club medal club championship golf tournament, Randy Geiselman sat at the top of the pack with a very comfortable seven stroke lead. Evidently, he wasn't satisfied with that margin.

Tuesday he fashioned a three-under-par 69 to win that championship by 14 strokes. During the course of the three-day tournament, held in connection with the George Clark golf tournament, Geiselman fired rounds of 68-72-69—209, to finish seven under par.

Kelly Cox shot 75-72-76—223 to finish in the runner-up spot.

In the final round Geiselman, who led the tournament from start to finish, had little difficulty with the rugged 7,000 yard course. At one point, he birdied four consecutive holes, beginning the string at 12.

It also marked the first time in the 14-year history of the George Clark tournament that the medal play champion turned in a better score than anyone in the two handicap divisions.

A pair of handicappers, Ed Watts and Rodney McDaniel, were co-winners of the overall Clark title. Only players in the two handicap divisions were eligible to compete for that title.

Watts, playing in the under-14 handicap division, and McDaniel, in the over-14 bracket, each finished at 210. Both were two strokes behind the leader in their respective divisions at the outset of the final round.

In the under-14 handicap division, Buddy Redden finished one shot off Watts' pace with a 211. Second round leader Bob Boyd ballooned to 75 on the final round and finished at 212.

Tommy Thomason watched his second round lead in the over-14 flight disappear after a final round 76. He finished second to McDaniel with a 213.

Amarillo nips San Antonio

By The Associated Press

A bases-loaded single by Paul O'Neill and an error on the same play Tuesday night gave Amarillo a 2-1 Texas League baseball victory over San Antonio.

In other Texas League action, Midland blasted El Paso, 9-4, Jackson beat Tulsa, 8-4, and Arkansas edged Shreveport, 6-5.

O'Neill's single brought home Bill Hallstrom and when San Antonio outfielder Myron White mishandled the ball, Joe Hicks scored on the error. Gary Lucas, now 4-10, was the winning pitcher. Bill Swiacki, now 0-1, was the loser.

Jackson used home runs by Butch Benton, Mookie Wilson and Randy Rogers to beat Tulsa, 8-4. Benton had a two-run homer in the fourth, Wilson a two-run homer in the fifth and Rogers had a solo homer in the eighth. It was Jackson's fourth straight victory and was the fifth consecutive loss for Tulsa.

Arkansas scored the winning run without a hit in the ninth inning as the Travelers edged Shreveport, 6-5. The victory broke a four-game winning streak for the Captains. The winning run came home in the ninth after the Travelers got two walks, a sacrifice and an error by Shreveport.

John Dean and Genio Cotex each had two-run homers for Shreveport, but the Captains fell a run short of extending the winning streak. Dan O'Brien, now 10-3, was the winning pitcher, but needed relief help from Brett Houser in the ninth. Rusty Johnston, now 2-4, was the loser.

TOKYO (AP) — Former Milwaukee Brewer Bob Mitchell blasted a three-run homer in the first inning and the Nippon Ham Fighters breezed to a 6-1 victory over the Lotte Orions in Japanese baseball. Mitchell now has 23 homers this season, tops in the Pacific League.

Moreno and Bill Robinson highlighted the Pittsburgh offense in the second game.

Mets 4-2, Phillies 0-3

Pat Zachry tossed a two-hitter and Lee Mazzilli blasted a grand-slam homer in the eighth inning to pace New York over Philadelphia in the first game of their double-header. Zachry had a no-hitter going until Gary Maddox singled with two out in the seventh inning.

Jose Cardenal's pinch-hit, two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning gave the Phillies a victory in the second game.

Carew heads AL stars

NEW YORK (AP) — The Minnesota Twins' Rod Carew, batting a paltry — for him — .341 and Boston's slugging Jim Rice will lead the American League into baseball's annual All-Star Game July 11 at San Diego.

Carew, who has been named to the AL squad all 12 years that he has been in the majors, topped the fan balloting with 4,010,136 votes, easily outdistancing Cecil Cooper of the Milwaukee Brewers for the first baseman's spot on the roster.

The Minnesota star was the AL All-Star second baseman for his first nine years in the league and for the past three seasons has been the first base selection.

Rice, who will be making his first All-Star Game start, is leading the AL in home runs with 23, runs batted in with 68, hits with 102 and triples with nine. He polled 3,445,524 votes, second highest.

Joining the Red Sox outfielder and Carew are previously elected starters Carlton Fisk, Boston catcher; George Brett, Kansas City third baseman; Richie Zisk, Texas outfielder, and Reggie Jackson, New York Yankees outfielder. Carew, Fisk, Brett, Zisk and Jackson were all elected AL starters in 1977.

First-time starters will be Don Money, Milwaukee second baseman, and Fred Patek, Kansas City shortstop.

Zisk is also among the league's RBI leaders. In fourth place in the next-to-last tabulations, the Ranger slugger jumped up to second place among the outfielders while Boston's Carl Yastrzemski dropped from second to fourth, eliminating him from the starting trio.

Zisk will be making his second start in as many All-Star selections while Jackson will be on his eighth AL All-Star squad, the seventh time as a starter.

Money won the second base job over the Yankees' Willie Randolph with a late surge of votes. A four-time All-Star selection, the Milwaukee infielder made his only appearance in the 1976 game.

The league leader in doubles with 24, Fisk had to beat out Jim Sundberg of the Texas Rangers, who finished only 34,547 votes behind the Boston catcher. It is Fisk's fifth selection to the All-Star squad and his fourth time as a starter. He missed the 1974 game with an injury.

Pollack sets swimming mark

BERLIN (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Andrea Pollack set a second world record in the East German swimming championships Monday, breaking her own 200-meter butterfly mark with a new time of 2 minutes, 9.87 seconds, the state news agency ADN reported.

Evert, Borg win at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Thunder rumbled and lightning flashed over the Wimbledon tennis courts Tuesday night, and Bjorn Borg demolished American Sandy Mayer with thunderbolts of his own.

The dynamic Swede, trying for a third straight Wimbledon title, won 7-5, 6-4, 6-3 and galloped into the semifinals.

As the skies darkened and the thunder became louder, Borg hit the ball with tremendous power as if determined to finish the match before the deluge.

He just managed it. Two minutes after he left the center court the heavens opened and the covers were spread over the grass.

Jimmy Connors crushed Raul Ramirez of Mexico 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 while Vitas Gerulaitis won a see-sawing thriller with Brian Gottfried 7-5, 4-6, 9-7, 6-2.

And Tom Okker, the only unseeded player still in contention, upset Ilie Nastase 7-5, 6-1, 2-6, 6-3.

So the Americans celebrated the Fourth of July by winning two of the last four places. It's Borg against Okker and Gerulaitis against Connors in Thursday's semifinals, and the way is open for a repeat of last year's Borg-Connors final.

Top-seeded Chris Evert dropped Billie Jean King 6-3, 3-6, 6-2 to sweep into a women's semifinal against Virginia Wade, who beat Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec 6-0, 6-4.

Wade won the crown last year after dumping a listless Evert in the semifinals.

In the other semifinal, Martina Navratilova will play Evonne Goolagong. Navratilova beat South African Goolagong eliminated Romanian Virginia Ruzici 7-5, 6-3.

The Borg-Mayer duel was one of the best of the tournament. Mayer played bravely and often brilliantly and brought out the best of the defending champion's tennis.

But in the end, for all the excitement and the roars of encouragement from the crowd, Mayer was swept away by the explosive power of Borg's top-spin forehands and his bold attacking shots.

The thunder was first heard at the start of the first set and came ominously closer, game by game. Borg had a long and tough job holding his service in the second game, but immediately afterwards Mayer wilted against the heavy fire and dropped service to trail 1-2.

Borg played with impatient fury and won the fourth game to love and then led 40-0 against service. But he was pressing too hard and Mayer temporarily came back.

The American pulled up to 2-3. Then Borg, racing into position between points and playing like a man possessed, double-faulted twice and Mayer levelled at 3-3.

But that was the end of Mayer's challenge. Borg rushed through the next three games for the match — just before the rain came down.

Connors whipped Ramirez by taking complete command at the net and volleying crisply, with scarcely an error. The Mexican raced about the court and made some spectacular retrieving shots, but it was always Connors who called the tune.

Connors got an early service break in each of the three sets. Ramirez broke service only once, in the third set, and climbed from 2-5 to 4-5 but failed to get further.

The 14,000 fans on the center court loved the fluctuating Gerulaitis-Gottfried contest. It saw-sawed through three sets before the agility and classic stroke-making of Gerulaitis settled the argument.

Gottfried's game reached its peak in the second set, when he broke service for a 5-4 lead and went on to level at one set all, then broke through with two fine backhands for an early lead in the third. But he was under constant pressure and Gerulaitis broke back at 4-4. Gottfried saved two set points in the 12th game and kept the battle going for 3 hours, 3 minutes.

Okker, who seems to be making a comeback at age 34, followed up his third-set upset over Guillermo Vilas by playing beautiful tennis and eliminating Nastase.

It was a sad day for the tempestuous Romanian. He came off court to learn that the Professional Tennis Council had recommended he be banned for three months and fined $5,000 for misbehavior on the Grand Prix Circuit. It means he will miss the U.S. Open.

The council cited incidents in six tournaments. But at Wimbledon these last eight days Nastase has limited himself to a little mild clowning and an occasional discussion with an umpire over line calls.

Evert ended the comeback hopes of King by winning a tame and tentative match. Both women played cautiously and defensively.

"We intimidate each other," Evert said afterwards. "I'm scared of Billie Jean. I can't look at her out there."

Forego anxious to race

NEW YORK (AP) — Forego was walking around the paddock when a fan flashed a sign: "Goodbye Kelso. You been kool! But from now on the king will reign."

But Kelso still is king. Forego was just an also-ran Tuesday in the $106,400 Suburban Handicap.

Forego, the great 8-year-old gelding, went into the 1 1/4-mile test at Belmont Park with earnings of $1,938,897 and a chance to pass Kelso's all-time record of $1,977,896, becoming the first racehorse to win $2 million.

But he struggled home a mud-splattered fifth as the $63,840 first prize went to Upper Nile, a 4-year-old colt whose previous earnings totaled $74,781.

"He just did not run his race today," Forego's jockey, Bill Shoemaker said. "On the middle of the far turn he did not make his move like he usually does and I knew that that he was not going to do it today."

After the first half mile, Forego, carrying 132 pounds — he now has carried 130 pounds or more 24 times and won 13 — was fourth, just a head behind Upper Nile, who was 1 1/2 length behind Family Doctor and 3/4 in back of Nearly on Time.

With a half mile to go, Forego was fifth and at the quarter pole he was last in the six-horse field. The "old guy," without any urging from Shoemaker, got to the wire a head in front of Cox's Ridge, 130, who had injured a heel in his previous start.

Upper Nile, 113, ridden by Jorge Velasquez, moved into second, a length behind Nearly on Time, 109, at the quarter pole, took the lead after straightening for the stretch drive and won by 1 1/2 lengths. Great Contractor, 114, finished third, another 2 1/4 lengths back and three lengths ahead of Family Doctor, 107.

Upper Nile, who paid a winning mutual of $7.20, raced the distance in 2:04.5 on the sloppy track to earn the victor's cheers. But there were a lot of applause left for Forego from many in the Fourth of July crowd of 33,697.

Racing fans aren't fickle when it comes to Forego, who has earned their adoration with Horse of the Year performances in 1974-76, and 34 wins, 24 of them in stakes. He has failed to get a piece of the purse — a finish worse than fourth — only three times in 57 starts.

pped his record to 8-3 with a five-hitter. Joe Rudi and Don Baylor homered for the Angels while Pete LaCock connected for Kansas City.

"Before we went to California last week, Whitey (Manager Herzog) and Galen (pitching coach Cisco) told me I was trying to make the perfect pitch all the time," said Gale, who beat the Angels for the second time in nine days. "They said to just throw strikes and make them hit my pitch."

"That's what I've done these last two games. I am trying to throw the ball mostly down the middle of the plate. If I aim for the middle of the plate, it's very rare it will be in the exact middle. The natural movement of the ball should be enough. If my fast ball isn't moving, it doesn't matter where I try to throw."

White Sox 2, Rangers 1

Ron Schueler and Mike Proly combined to pitch a four-hitter and Eric Soderholm smacked his ninth home run of the season, a solo shot off Ferguson Jenkins that snapped a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning. Schueler walked six but limited the Rangers to two hits in five innings before leaving with a finger injury.

Twins 7, Brewers 2

Gary Serun fired a five-hitter and Dan Ford had three hits, scored two runs and knocked in two. The Twins staked Serun to a 2-0 lead in the second inning on consecutive singles by Larry Wolfe, Roy Smalley, Butch Wynegar and Bombo Rivera. They added two more runs in the third on a two-run single by Wolfe to kayo Bill Travers and Ford had a two-run double in the sixth.

"We owed those guys something ... at least I did," said Serun. "They pounded me pretty hard back in their country last week."

Orioles 6, Indians 4

Lee May, Doug DeCinces and Pat Kelly delivered RBI singles to highlight a five-run sixth inning that helped Baltimore overcome home runs by Cleveland's Johnny Grubb and Andre Thornton. The Orioles combined five consecutive singles with two errors to erase a 3-1 deficit. Baltimore relief ace Don Stanhouse pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the eighth and a bases-loaded, one-out situation in the ninth.

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 2

John Mayberry rapped out four singles and Luis Gomez and Roy Howell drove in two runs each as Toronto blasted four Detroit pitchers for 17 hits. The Blue Jays scored five times in the fourth inning on seven singles and a sacrifice fly. Rick Bosetti delivered the sacrifice fly while the other runs scored on singles by Willie Upshaw, Gomez, Bob Bailor and Howell.

Clark grabs honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Clark, the hot-hitting outfielder for the San Francisco Giants, was named the National League Player of the Week for the week ending July 2. NL President Charles Feeney announced today.

Clark, who has won the award twice this season, blasted six home runs and drove in 15 runs, taking over the NL lead in RBIs with 58. The 22-year-old right fielder batted .311, with 9 hits in 28 at bats and scored seven runs.

Clark is tied for fourth in the NL home run race with 14 and his batting average for the season stands at .305.

Braves' teammates Jeff Burroughs and Dale Murphy followed Clark in the voting. Burroughs had 10 hits in 22 at bats, including two homers, while driving in seven runs. Murphy drove in nine runs, including six in one game, and hit .346 for the week.

Frank Taveras of the Pirates, with 11 hits and five RBIs; Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos, with two complete-game victories; and rookie Roy Thomas of the St. Louis Cardinals, with a win and two saves, also received consideration in the voting for the weekly honors.

Bean now top golfer

CHICAGO (AP) — Andy Bean still bristles when someone mentions his reputation for wrestling alligators, but now he smiles and says, "I guess maybe people will stop thinking I'm some kind of freak."

"Now that I've won some tournaments and have won a lot of money, maybe they'll start to believe that I'm a good golfer," he said Monday after winning the Western Open at the Butler National Golf Course in suburban Oak Brook.

Bean has reason to be proud, coming from eight strokes behind with a final-round 66 to tie Bill Rogers at 282, the lowest 72-hole score since the tournament was moved to the par-72 Butler in 1972.

Bean then rolled in a three-foot putt for a par on the first extra hole to beat Rogers for the $45,000 first prize, enabling him to pass Tom Watson as the leading PGA money winner this year with $240,058.

Until recently, Bean, 25, was better known as a hot-tempered country boy who couldn't cope with a triple bogey or a three-putt.

"I used to get quite emotional," he admitted. "And I still get upset when I three-putt, there's no doubt about that. But I wish people would forget about the past and realize that I've calmed down a bit, that I'm learning patience more and more."

"Right now, I have to believe I'm playing the game as well as it can be played," he added. Bean has won three tournaments in the past five weeks, and last month beat Lee Trevino in sudden death in the Memphis Open.

Bean fell eight shots behind Rogers when he three-putted for a bogey at the third hole Monday. Minutes later, Rogers sank a six-foot birdie putt at the first hole to drop seven-under-par.

Hale Irwin, who was playing with Rogers, made a run at the leader when he dropped to six-under-par on the front side and no one was concerned about Bean.

Cox takes marathon win

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) — Five-year-old Bucky Cox was among the finishers. Stephen Brumit of Slater, Mo., a runner at Central Missouri State University, won the marathon in a time of 2:50:56. He was followed by Jay Helgeson of Foster City, Calif., in 2:53:29, and Capt. Howard Guscar, a military instructor at the University of Missouri in Columbia, in 2:58:43.

Marathon records are all unofficial, but the California-based publication, Runners World, has reported two 5-year-olds in times of 4:56:36 and 6:56:39.

Ray Foster, research psychologist with the Bureau of Child Research at the University of Kansas and trainer for the young distance runner, said the times are both unofficial because the courses they were run on are not certified.

Bucky's time will also stand as unofficial pending certification of the Sundown Salute marathon course. Co-ordinators of the race have applied for official certification and expect to receive notice on the application by week, stuck to his running plan and was among the finishers.

Sixty-eight runners completed the course that wraps around Millford Lake and Junction City. One who didn't finish was favored Bob Busby, a teacher at Oak Park High School in Kansas City.

"I'm tired ... My legs hurt a little bit ... but I feel fine," Bucky said after leaving the race at the 24-mile mark. Temperatures were in the 90s and the heat took its toll on other runners also. But Bucky, who will turn 6 next week, stuck to his running plan and was among the finishers.

Stephen Brumit of Slater, Mo., a runner at Central Missouri State University, won the marathon in a time of 2:50:56. He was followed by Jay Helgeson of Foster City, Calif., in 2:53:29, and Capt. Howard Guscar, a military instructor at the University of Missouri in Columbia, in 2:58:43.

Bucky's time will also stand as unofficial pending certification of the Sundown Salute marathon course. Co-ordinators of the race have applied for official certification and expect to receive notice on the application by late fall.

Bucky started training for distance running at age 4 by running about 100 yards. He gradually worked to longer distances, finishing his first 18-mile run two weeks ago.

Both Foster and his mother, Joan Maxwell, charted Bucky's mile-by-mile times at around 10 minutes per mile and he stopped every three miles for water and walked for five minutes before running again.

Foster and Doug Baker, also a research psychologist at KU, took turns running with the boy, and his mother bicycled with him through much of the race.

Foster said that if not for the heat, Bucky would have gone under five hours.

"The heat was just tremendous, but we didn't have much doubt he would finish after 21 miles," Foster said. "We kept wet towels over his head and kept up a good pace considering the conditions."

Roche takes Peachtree Race

ATLANTA (AP) — Shrugging off the Fourth of July heat and humidity, Mike Roche of Cranford, N.J., outdistanced a field of about 12,000 seasoned runners and jogging enthusiasts to win the 10,000-meter Peachtree Road Race in record time.

"I wasn't surprised I ran as fast as I did," said the 1972 Olympic steeple-chaser, who ran the course in 28 minutes and 59.3 seconds, eclipsing the previous record set by Don Kardong of Spokane, Wash., in 1976. Kardong finished sixth in Tuesday's race.

"I was surprised everyone else didn't come on as fast as I thought they would," said the 26-year-old Roche. "I guess it was the heat."

Greg Meyer of Grand Rapids, Mich., finished second, 15 seconds behind Roche. Ralph King of Atlanta was third.

"Mike was just too strong today for the rest of us," Meyer said at the finish line in Piedmont Park. "With about two miles to go, I think the rest of us who were up there were just glad we could still see him."

Mary Decker, 18, of Boulder, Colo., running in her first 10,000-meter race, won the women's division in a record time of 33:52.7, almost three minutes ahead of her nearest rival.

About 100 persons were treated at first aid stations for twisted ankles, stubbed toes and heat exhaustion as the mercury rose into the low 70s and the relative humidity rose above 90 percent.

Seven persons were admitted to local hospitals, but race organizers said there were no serious injuries.

Many runners, apparently heeding earlier warnings from Atlanta-area physicians about the danger of competing in the muggy weather, walked slowly through the more difficult portions of the north Atlanta course.

The front-runners eagerly scooped up the coveted road race T-shirts awarded to those finishing in less than 55 minutes.

But the clear favorite of the spectators was not among the leaders. She was 32-year-old Margie Sloan, a program specialist for the U.S. Rehabilitation Services Administration, who covered the 6.3-mile course in the wheelchair to which she is confined.

As Mrs. Sloan crossed the finish line to the cheers and applause of the crowd, the motorcycle policeman serving as the rear-escort reached over and grasped her hand.

"I intended to finish and I finished," said Mrs. Sloan, her face red from the exertion. "I was shooting for an hour and a half, and I made it."

Tulsa nabs soccer win

By The Associated Press

Chicago's Arno Steffenhagen stung the Tulsa Roughnecks and David Irving struck repeatedly to pace Fort Lauderdale over the Toronto Metros, highlighting Tuesday night's North American Soccer League matches. Steffenhagen tallied three goals as the Sting downed Tulsa 5-2. He scored at 10:20, 32:05 and 64:25 to give Chicago only its sixth victory in 22 games.

A three-goal performance by Irving led the Fort Lauderdale Strikers to a 4-0 victory over Toronto. Irving struck at 2:31, 76:22 and 84:31. Bill Ronson tallied Fort Lauderdale's other goal.

George Best of Fort Lauderdale and Ivan Kocjancic were ejected after a fight between two other players following a foul call. Best and Kocjancic were thrown out for joining in the melee. Each must sit out his team's next home game.

In other NASL matches Tuesday night, Tampa Bay edged Rochester 1-0, California nipped Philadelphia 1-0, Dallas squeezed by Seattle 2-1, San Diego eased past Los Angeles 2-1 and Portland blanked Oakland 1-0.

Tampa Bay captain Rodney Marsh slammed his sixth penalty shot of the season into the goal with just two minutes remaining to lead the Rowdies over Rochester. The Lancers, including their trainer and several others who left the bench, protested the penalty call at 102:33 in the foul-plagued game.

A penalty kick by Al Frost gave California its victory, while John O'Hare came off the bench late in the game to score the winning goal for the Dallas Tornados.

Derek Smethurst scored at 65:05 following a corner kick to give San Diego its victory over the Los Angeles Aztecs before an estimated crowd of 36,000. The crowd reported was boosted by a postgame fireworks show.

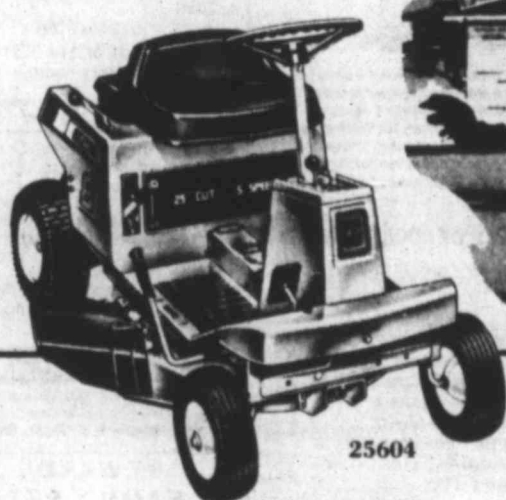

Mike Flater scored late in the first half and goaltender Mick Poole stopped five shots as the Portland Timbers shut out the Oakland Stompers 1-0.

Flater, a former Stomper, tallied from about eight yards out at 37:51 after Brian Gant's shot was blocked by goalie Shep Messing of Oakland.

Bikes still lead hazard list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skateboards are continuing their rapid climb in the government's ranking of hazardous products, but bicycles still have a firm grip on the No. 1 spot.

Lawn mowing equipment and cookware made large jumps on the list, which rates both the number and severity of injuries.

"Skateboards have been going steadily upwards for years," said Nancy Johnston, director of the National Injury

Information Clearinghouse. Noting that "kids find it a lot of fun," she added that, "as in a lot of things, the fun is associated with increased hazards."

Mrs. Johnston's office estimated that 140,070 injuries were associated with the boards in 1977, five times the 27,522 injuries reported in 1975. Some 3,682 injuries were logged in 1973.

The new Consumer Product Hazard List for fiscal 1977 ranks skateboards seventh among products with which people hurt themselves, a climb from 18th place the year before.

On the other hand, the danger from liquid fuels — gasoline, kerosene and charcoal starter, for instance — seemed to decline.

Bicycles, with an index of 40.686, remained atop the list.

"I think the real source of most of the bike accidents is traffic," said Ken Giles of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, who added that programs to get bicyclists and drivers to take an interest in each other may substantially reduce both cycle deaths and injuries.

The top five places on the hazard index remained the same as last year. Stairs ranked second, followed by football, baseball and a combination of swings, slides, seesaws and other playground equipment.

Lawn mowing equipment jumped from 17th to 6th place. While the number of injuries didn't change appreciably, there were more severe injuries and more young people were hurt while using such equipment.

Cookware — metal, ceramic and glass — jumped from 85th to 19th place. "The number of injuries has increased, but I don't know why," Mrs. Johnston said.

Liquid fuels, however, dropped, from 9th to 17th place, perhaps indicating the public is taking more care with these fuels, Mrs. Johnston said.

The index ranks only those products regulated by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, but statistics on other products are also compiled.

If they were included in the list, foods would have ranked third in danger and motor vehicles fourth. Tobacco products would have been rated 37th, firearms 46th and alcoholic beverages 125th.

California Assembly approves $15.1 billion state budget

By BOB EGELKO

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The California Assembly approved a $15.1 billion state budget early today after anti-abortion forces scored a major victory by cutting abortion funds for poor women by more than two-thirds.

The Assembly vote was 70-10. A Senate vote which would either send the measure to Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s desk or back to legislative committees — was scheduled later today. Opposition to abortion financing was strongest in the Senate and the outcome there was uncertain.

The breakthrough came shortly before midnight Tuesday near the end of a 15-hour Fourth of July session as the state ended its fourth day without a budget.

The lack of a budget caused no serious disruptions of state government over the holiday weekend. But state Controller Ken Cory said it was not passed by today, he would notify businesses supplying the state, with goods and services that the state might not be able to pay its bills.

Supporters of abortion funds for poor women agreed to major restrictions on how public funds could be used for such operations to end a deadlock that had tied up the entire $15.1 billion state budget and forced the state Senate and Assembly into the first July 4th sessions in their 128-year history.

"We're trying to salvage what we can," said Democratic Assemblywoman Leona Egeland of San Jose, a supporter of public financing of abortions for the poor.

The plan sent to the Senate and Assembly floors for final votes would allow abortions only in cases of incest, rape, pregnancy of unmarried women under age 16 or severe danger to the mother's health from any of several specific medical conditions, such as diabetes.

That plan was unanimously approved by the budget committee, ending nine days of negotiations on issues ranging from abortion to welfare grants to pay for state employees.

All parties said the agreement was a victory for the anti-abortion forces, although the exact degree of restrictions on abortions was uncertain.

A proposal by Brown to use $34 million to replace funds that the Carter administration cut from Medicaid programs for poor women was cut to $5 million.

Earthquakes again strike Greek city

SALONIKA, Greece (AP) — The third powerful earthquake in a month shook this northern Greek city early today, falling debris injured 16 persons, and one died of a heart attack.

The seismological service said the quake measured 5.0 on the Richter scale. It was an aftershock to the 6.5-intensity tremor that hit the city June 20, when 48 persons were killed and nearly 150 injured. The epicenter of all the quakes was at Lake Volvi, 30 miles east of Salonika, the service said.

Police said one empty three-floor apartment house collapsed and others suffered additional damage. They said the casualty toll was low because most of the city's 600,000 people are still spending the nights in open spaces outside the city.

Shocks of varying intensity have been shaking Salonika since early May. Authorities estimate that up to a third of the population has fled, and seismologists predict there may be worse quakes.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. An earthquake measuring 5 is considered capable of causing considerable damage.

RRC issues 1st permit for gasification project

AUSTIN—The Railroad Commission of Texas has accepted a reclamation performance bond from Basic Resources, Inc., and issued to the Dallas firm the first permit to conduct an insitu coal gasification operation in Texas.

Chairman Mack Wallace and Commissioners Jon Newton and John H. Poerner approved a self-insuring performance bond of $45,639.80 and authorized issuance of the permit during a conference on Surface Mining and Reclamation Division matters.

Division Examiner Chesley N. Blewins, who conducted a public hearing on the permit, recommended the action taken by the commission.

Site of the experimental project is in the western part of Anderson County where 33 acres have been designated as the permit area for the test.

The action clears the way for Basic Resources, a subsidiary of Texas Utilities Generating Co., to drill an ignition well to a lignite seam of approximately seven and one-half feet thick and about 270 feet below the surface. One or more wells will be drilled to produce gases resulting

Midlander researches project

Gulf Energy and Minerals recently announced a pilot fire flood for the North Ward Estes field of Ward County the results of which will be of great interest to oil and gas operators in the Permian Basin.

Peter L. Bauerlein, now with The Midland National Bank, worked on an insitu research project at Texas A&M University while serving as a research technologist for the Texas Petroleum Research Committee.

The fireflood project announced by Gulf is similar to the process Bauerlein helped research. In the insitu process air is injected into the reservoir and a fire is started in the oil sand at the air injection well. The fire moves through the rock pushing the oil to nearby producing wells.

Oil recoveries in the laboratory have exceeded 85 percent. Field recoveries would be less due to the irregularities in the rock.

The novel oil recovery process is one of several supervised by Dr. Paul B. Crawford, assistant director of the Texas Petroleum Research Committee and professor of Petroleum Engineering at Texas A&M University.

Reagan, Runnels wildcats set; field work reported

A new wildcat has been scheduled in Reagan County and a re-entry wildcat has been planned in Runnels County. A discovery potential in Concho County and offsets, stepouts or outposts have been spotted in Crockett, Edwards, Stonewall and Yoakum counties. A field extender was finalized in Crockett.

Production is from the pay section behind perforations from 3,578 to 3,583 feet after 1,000 gallons of acid and 22,500 gallons of fracture solution.

Wellsite is 930 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of section 45, block 9, University Lands survey.

Total depth is 3,750 feet and 4.5-inch casing is cemented at 3,744 feet. Hole is plugged back to 3,742 feet.

Parking gas guzzlers just oil embargo dream

By HARRY ANDERSON
The Los Angeles Times

It sounded good at the time. Squeezed by scarce gasoline and soaring new-car prices, Americans were supposed to park their guzzlers and ride off in ever-increasing numbers aboard putt-putt motorbikes.

That was in 1974. Thanks to the overwhelming success of cheap, lightweight, small-engine cycles from Japan, the motorcycle industry had just come off a record year, with 1.5 million cycles sold in 1973. At the same time, the oil embargo was creating long lines at filling stations and in cycle showrooms.

Motorcycle company executives, as a result, were poised for an era of unprecedented growth. Which hasn't happened.

"It was an Arab oil pipe dream," sighs Gene Trobaugh, marketing director of U.S. Suzuki Motor Corp., Santa Fe Springs, Calif.

Instead of a boom, motorcycle sales dropped off in the 1974 recession and have remained relatively level ever since. Cycling executives now speak more cautiously of the "maturing" market with fewer first-time buyers and the need for broader product lines to satisfy a generally older, more affluent customer.

Inflation, soaring insurance rates and tough government noise and air pollution standards have taken their toll on the motorcycle industry.

And, perhaps most ironic in view of the predictions made five years ago, the hottest trend in motorcycle sales lately has been to the big "touring" bikes which often cost $4,000 or more and to a new breed of high-performance "superbikes" which are often capable of exceeding the 55 m.p.h. national speed limit in low gear and may reach 130 m.p.h. in high.

"I think perhaps that right now everybody who wants a motorcycle has one, so the industry is attracting the customer who wants to trade up and get rid of the smaller bike he bought a few years ago; there aren't a lot of first-time buyers out there," comments John A. Davidson, president of Harley-Davidson Motor Co. Inc., Milwaukee, the only major U.S.-based motorcycle manufacturer.

The industry is dominated by four major Japanese competitors: Honda, Yamaha, Kawasaki and Suzuki. Harley-Davidson, last survivor of a small but once robust U.S. motorcycle industry, takes about 6 percent to 7 percent. Several dozen lesser known, mostly imported and usually expensive makes take the remainder.

Honda revolutionized the U.S. motorcycle market in the mid-1960s by introducing a series of lightweight motorbikes which appealed mostly to teenagers. Until then, cycles were often considered "outlaw" vehicles used by gangs and shady characters.

"Motorcycling was something you just did not do," says Allan Girdler, editor of Cycle World, an enthusiast magazine based in Newport Beach, Calif. "Then Honda came in with a nice small bike and all the young people who had fantasies of riding a cycle went ahead and did it."

Honda's boom was fueled by a highly successful advertising campaign—"You meet the nicest people on a Honda"—which altered the cycle's image and made it acceptable to a growing number of people, especially parents of teenagers.

The other Japanese competitors soon moved into the U.S. market. Sales, which had never really been significant in the United States, began to climb rapidly. From 1969 through 1973, cycle sales were growing by about 25 percent a year.

The Motorcycle Industry Council, a trade group, estimates that there are about 20 million cycle riders in the United States now and about 8 million cycles in use.

But in the past several years, the average age of cycle buyers has been rising sharply. The median buyer age was about 28 last year—compared with 24 in 1974. Nearly 80 percent of those who bought a new cycle last year had owned one in the past—a sharp rise from 55 percent in 1975.

Industry observers say the trend is due in part to inflation, which has pushed up cycle prices at least 25 percent in the last three years. Suzuki's highest priced model in 1973, for example, was listed at $1,695. In 1978 the most expensive Suzuki carries a suggested retail price of $3,295.

"Cheap" motorbikes which sold for under $600 five years ago now go for $900 or more.

"It's a maturing of the motorcycle market," says Trobaugh. "But in the last two or three years all the manufacturers have added large machines—about 750cc engines—selling for $3,000 to $4,000. That's not to reach the younger or the blue-collar worker; we're selling to a more mature, affluent guy."

(The male-oriented use of "guy" and "man" in motorcycle industry talk isn't really incorrect or a slap at women; 94 percent of all cycles sold last year were purchased by men.)

The move to bigger, more expensive machines is part of an overall shift in buyer preferences away from dual-purpose "dirt" or offroad bikes and dual-purpose cycles to "street" motorcycles which are used strictly on the highway.

Strict new air and noise pollution control standards and the closure of vast amounts of public land to "dirt" bike use has caused much of the shift, industry officials say.

But the move by the various manufacturers to top each other by producing the biggest, fastest motorcycle has drawn criticism from government regulators.

In much industry advertising recently the manufacturers have touted the almost incredible speed of their latest "superbikes"—some of which can cover a quarter mile in 12 seconds or less.

Last April in a sharply worded speech to the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, a nonprofit industry group, Joan Claybrook, director of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, took motorcycle manufacturers to task for trying to "out-horsepower" each other.

She claimed that the move to "superbikes" was adding to the nation's motorcycle death toll, which increased to 4,067 persons—a record—last year from 3,312 in 1976.

Calling motorcycling "the most hazardous form of personal transportation," she hinted that the manufacturers should take steps voluntarily to stem the move to bigger bikes or the government would move in with regulations.

Industry spokesmen disagree that "superbikes" have increased the death toll. They say generally that most purchasers aren't buying the big, powerful cycles just to go 100 m.p.h. Most, they say, want the bigger engines because of their reliability and "comfort" on the road.

"Nobody buys a motorcycle to go slow," Trobaugh concedes. "But performance is a relative thing; we all like to have the capability of speed and power to pass in a car. We're trying to get across that you can enjoy a motorcycle without riding at 100 m.p.h. Everybody who buys a Porsche sports car doesn't drive it like Mario Andretti."

And, in the "maturing" motorcycle market, some buyers of big, powerful cycles are buying optional equipment which just about requires a large engine. One example is a six-foot camping trailer which can be towed behind a 1,200cc Harley-Davidson model.

"A lot of people in the market today are experienced cyclists who use their bikes a lot on weekends for trips of 200 or 300 miles," says one company executive. "Although there are some who buy 'superbikes' just to take off like a rocket, the majority are older 'touring' enthusiasts."

Others draw a parallel between the "superbike" phenomenon and the "muscle" cars produced in the 1960s by the Detroit auto makers.

Many industry analysts note that although fewer young persons are buying new motorcycles these days many have moved into the growing used-cycle market. Precise statistics aren't available, but it is estimated that more used motorcycles are sold each year than new ones.

And, because the millions of small motorcycles sold in the early 1970s are now several years old, they have created a health used-cycle market. In fact, the strong used market may be one reason sales of smaller new motorcycles haven't fared as well in recent years.

Because their market has remained flat, the motorcycle manufacturers have been forced to become much more aggressive and competitive to attract the more experienced customer. That in many instances has led to severe price discounts on strong new advertising campaigns.

RE-ENTRY TEST

Desert Oil Co. of Abilene plans to re-enter its No. 1 S. Alexander in Runnels County and plug back to 3,896 feet from 4,018 feet for tests of the Gardner zone in an attempt to reopen the Vanderlaan-Freedman (Gardner oil) pool.

The location is 1,800 feet from the most southerly north line and 5,289 feet from the most westerly west line of Juan H. San Miguel survey No. 72. The project originally was completed as the opener of the Rich (Gray sand gas) pool, 10 miles east of Winters.

METHANE WELL

Methane Gas Co. of Dallas No. 1-M Ward (formerly No. 1 Ward) has been completed to extend the Adams-Baggett Ranch (Canyon sand gas) pool two miles west.

The well flowed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 820,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 5,401 to 5,555 feet. The pay was acidized with 5,000 gallons and fractured with 24,200 gallons.

Location is 1,913 feet from south and 2,256 feet from east lines of section 36, block TG, GC&SF survey. It is 15 miles southeast of Ozona.

STONEWALL STEPOUT

A. L. Sauder Jr. of Wichita Falls announced location for a 3/4-mile northwest stepout to the Ben S. (Tannehill) field of Stonewall County.

The project, No. 1-C Bill McMeans is eight miles northwest of Swenson and 2,327 feet from north and 1,283 feet from west lines of section 360, block D, H&TC survey.

CONCHO STRIKE

Universal Minerals Corp. of Amarillo filed potential test on an unidentified gas opener in Concho County, 7.5 miles west of Eden.

The strike, No. 1 Russell Green, was completed for a calculated, absolute open flow of 940,000 cubic feet of gas per day, with a gas-liquid ratio of

MESA PROJECTS

Mesa Petroleum Co. of Midland staked a pair of outposts to the Ozona (Canyon sand gas) pool of Crockett County, 26 miles southwest of Ozona.

The projects are contracted to 7,500 feet.

No. 1-49 Hoover will be drilled one and one-quarter miles northeast of production and 1,182 feet from south

YOAKUM TESTS

Amoco Production staked two tests in the six-well Ownby (Wichita-Albany) area of Yoakum County, nine miles east of Plains.

No. 2-E N. C. Clanahan is one and one-eighth miles northeast of production and 1,787 feet from north and 2,173 feet from east lines of section 6, block D, J. H. Gibson survey.

Amoco No. 4 N. C. Clanahan is 7/8 mile north of production and 2,293 feet from south and 1,973 feet from west lines of section 6, block D, J. H. Gibson survey. The projects are contracted to 8,900 feet.

Long-dead language keeps proving there is life after death

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Side by side with the lawn mowers to rent, the baby sitters for hire and the used canoes on sale, the notice on the bulletin board in the supermarket was arresting in its antiquity:

"Increase your vocabulary, polish reading skills, become familiar with a fascinating ancient culture: Learn Latin This Summer."

A junior high school across the line in New York State was offering Latin as a summer cultural diversion, like clog dancing or basket weaving, and for me, not counting "I Claudius" on TV, it was the third time in a month that the old dead language had come alive.

At a wedding in Buffalo, a young lady was running around collecting Latin jokes from the guests. She had just graduated in classics from Wesley, already had five teaching offers, and was preparing a syllabus (sillybus?) of silly sayings out of Cicero, Caesar and Catullus (Gaius Valerius to be cognoscenti) to break the ice with her first class.

It was surprising how many members of the wedding could recall Roman knee slappers from their amas, amat days.

"Ubi O ubi est meus sub ubi?" intoned the best man, which rather indelicately translates as "where oh where is my under-where?"

Not to be outdone, the bride's father, a professional pedagogue who rereads "Goodbye Mr Chips" every semester to recharge his academic batteries, told the one that good old Chips told every term at Brookfield to explain Lex Canuleia, the Roman law that permitted patricians to marry plebeians.

"So you see," the father of the feast harrumphed in a passing fair imitation of Robert Donat playing Mr Chips, "if Miss Plebs wanted Mr. Patrician to marry her, and he said he couldn't, she probably replied: 'Oh yes, you can, you liar!'"

A drunken uncle on the bride's side of the aisle hic haec hoc-ed his way through "mica, mica, parvula stella," which when Pliny the Elder was younger was "twinkle, twinkle little star," and one of the ushers reached into his wallet and unfurled a tattered pseudo-Latin word puzzle about 40 buses in a row, except the vehicles were spelled "fortibusis" in mock imitation of Caesar's mother's mother tongue.

At which point the bartender, a Yale man, put down his martini tremens (martini shaker) long enough to inquire what Julius Caesar had to say when he came back in the room to discover only five out of seven apples were left in the fruit dish at his villa.

"Et tu, Brutus?" He was pelted with pitted olives, swizzle sticks and anchovies after the old Roman custom.

Lastly, getting back to Latin's sudden revival in this age when Johnnie is supposedly incoherent in any language, the local bookstore had on display earlier in the week a Latin version of A. A. Milne's "Winnie the Pooh," starring ursus Edwardus, the teddy bear.

I made some inquiries at some of the nearby groves of academe, and, sure enough, Latin is bigger these days than driver ed, which went into reverse when gasoline and insurance costs accelerated, or sex education, which always goes into decline when the drive-ins reopen.

At Yale a decade ago, only 121 undergrads enrolled in Latin courses. This past semester saw 205 Yalies come to grips with "agricola terram colit" (the farmer tills the soil) and "vide canem currit" (see the dog run). Professor Gordon Williams, the Oxford don who is chairman of classics at Yale, attributes Latin's sudden popularity to a number of factors, chiefly "doing away with the boring old method of teaching Latin as a linguistic discipline and making people aware that the whole literary culture of the West, from Russia and Poland all the way across Europe to America, derives from the rich literature of the classic tongues."

Cheap airfares to the Continent also have whetted tourist appetites to learn about the Forum and the Appian Way in the language of the original travel folders. Williams said he had just returned from Boston and was "amazed how many people from all walks of life were crowding into the Pompey exhibit."

The University of Connecticut enrolled 80 students in introductory Latin, double the total 10 years ago. At Wesleyan, a course in Classical Myths offered for the first time drew an overflow 90 students. Educators are rediscovering Latin as a tool for learning English. Tests showed that when daily Latin instruction was introduced in grades 4, 5 and 6 of a Philadelphia elementary school, the kids gained a year in English vocabulary. In an Indianapolis 6th grade, after five months of Latin, the class gained a year in reading skills, four months in spelling and seven in social studies and math.

For the last couple of years Marlboro College in Vermont has been importing a classics professor from Oxford, the way other schools sign up a soccer coach, an ex-secretary of state or a trendy poet.

Trio graduated from NTSU

DENTON — Marvin Baker, Sandra Moore and George Moseley, all of Midland, recently were graduated from North Texas State University here.

Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Jackson, received a bachelor of science degree in physical education, while Miss Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jess E. Moore, was awarded a bachelor of fine arts degree in filmmaking and photography. Moseley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lee Harris, was given a master of fine arts degree.

Ostrich far more than feathers

By JANE SEE WHITE

NEW YORK (AP) — The ostrich can't fly. The creature's hearing isn't any good and he can't see in the dark. But in South Africa, the long-legged, long-necked bird is the core of a booming enterprise.

"It's not a very big industry. It's a small area, but it's a good income for the area — a total of $9.9 million, if you include the leather," said J. J. Schoeman, a South African ostrich farmer and a director of the nation's only ostrich products marketing business, the Klein Karoo Agricultural Cooperative.

During a recent U.S. visit, Schoeman and the co-op's marketing manager, J. P. Fourie, ticked off a list of their ostrich products: Ostrich venison is popular in Switzerland. The bird's sturdy eggshells are used for decorative eggs. Handbags and luggage made of ostrich leather tanned at the co-op's tannery are catching on around the world. In Florida and Texas, ostrich leather cowboy boots are a hot item.

But the creature is most renowned for simply sprouting feathers — long, soft, thick plumes coveted by flashy costume designers and pragmatic feather duster makers.

"The odds are 99-1 that if you buy a fashion ostrich feather, it's South African," Fourie said. He estimated that 45 percent of the feathers his country exports end up in the United States.

Despite worldwide attacks on the South African government's apartheid policies — officially sanctioned separation of blacks and whites — the ostrich men say business is great.

"So far not one person has said he's stopped buying ostrich feathers or any ostrich product because of it," said Fourie. Schoeman added: "Actually, I've been rather surprised by the comments of support."

Ask a feather duster-maker or a costume designer whether he's troubled by doing business with a country like South Africa and he'll tell you the ostrich's is the only feather worth sniffing at and South Africa is the only place to buy it.

"Ostrich feathers have a look that designers want. Turkey feathers are heavier and coarser. Why use chifon instead of canvas," said John Ridge, manager of Brooks-Van Horn Costumes, Inc., of New York.

Ask Ridge about apartheid and he snaps: "No one has brought it up and if you do, I won't appreciate it."

In Omaha, Neb., Nate Mantel runs the H-K Specialty Co., which makes a wide variety of ostrich feather dusters and sells them coast to coast — mostly, he said, to national chains for store maintenance.

"The ostrich feather is the only kind that absorbs dust. Turkey and chicken don't really pick it up," he said. Mantel said he's "not troubled at all" by apartheid.

Van Potter, executive vice president of W. Pearce & Bros., a New York leather importing and marketing firm, said ostrich leather costumers have worries about the product, but apartheid isn't one of them.

"There is a concern about whether the ostrich is protected as an endangered species — and the domesticated birds they farm in South Africa aren't," he said. "But political qualms? No, none."

MC offers nurse training courses

Applications are being accepted now through Aug. 18 for the fall vocational nurses training program, offered by Midland College in cooperation with Midland Memorial Hospital.

The one-year program includes 17 weeks of training in the classroom and 35 weeks of training at the hospital, where students observe medical procedures and practices under the supervision of registered nurses, physicians, surgeons and paramedical personnel.

Students who are graduated with a 70 grade average will be qualified to take the state board examination and receive their licenses to practice as licensed vocational nurses.

Classroom instruction will be held in the nursing laboratories in the Occupational-Technical Building at the college, beginning Aug. 28. The course, directed by registered nurses Pat Myers and Virginia Land, is limited to 30 students. The fee is about $400, including tuition, books, uniforms and incidentals.

Interested persons can call 684-7851, extension 185, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays.

New York's big gamble fails

Copley News Service

NEW YORK CITY — The big gamble didn't pay off.

Legalized bookmaking, now eight years old here, has not helped New York City make money. In fact, there is growing evidence that offtrack betting — called OTB — has cut into New York City and state revenue.

That wasn't supposed to happen. In 1972, when Howard Samuels opened the city's first neighborhood bookmaking parlor in midtown Manhattan, he told reporters: "Offtrack betting will save New York City from financial disaster: it will produce needed revenues to help tax relief."

Howard Samuels isn't around anymore. He went off and ran (unsuccessfully) for governor. And the animal he created — OTB — is still doing business. But a questionable business at that.

New York City hasn't been saved by legalized gambling. At least not the brand Samuels invented. The city is in more financial hot water than ever, asking recently for some $2 billion in loans from the federal government to keep it from going bankrupt.

In Atlantic City, the good fathers are trying to do with gambling what New York could not.

Atlantic City — as bad off as New York — opened its first gambling casino recently, without offtrack betting.

"We don't think it would help us," said one Atlantic City casino spokesman. "Studies show the person who bets at the bookmaker downtown is the same one, most probably, who would go to the racetrack and do the same thing."

"You don't gain any new money, any new customers. You siphon off from your tax revenue, actually."

That's what has happened in New York City. Offtrack betting hasn't been so much a failure as a misplaced toy. Its daily business is substantial.

"Our business is down; our betting is down since OTB came along," says Sam Kanchuger of the New York Racing Association, the non-profit corporation that runs the state's three Thoroughbred race tracks. It is the bettors who forsake the tracks.

"Why spend $3 for a train to the track, another 35 cents for a program, then the booze and the burgers when I can do it all here during my lunch break and watch the race on TV at home?" said one.

A lot of people think the same thing these days. They have stayed away from the "live" racetrack and become "closet" gamblers. In the process, the legalized gambling operation has not increased revenue substantially. (Seventeen percent of all racetrack wagers go to the tax man in New York.)

The tracks get very little in operating percentage from OTB (they are in the process of trying to increase their share).

As a result, there is resentment between the two racing factions. The New York Racing Association ignores OTB and ignores NYRA.

New York City is, of course, not waiting around for OTB to catch on. More tax relief is needed now.

A straw poll in the New York Post revealed that 81 percent of those contacted wanted something like California's Prop. 13, not OTB, lotteries and such, to bail them out. They say they want fewer government services.

Ironically, such a reduction could hit hardest at New York's gambling bureaucracy. There are five separate commissions or bodies that help control gambling in this city.

There is the New York state Racing and Wagering Board, the state Racing Commission, the New York state Tax Commission, the New York Racing Association and the Offtrack Betting Corp.

All of them overlap.

Actor James Daly dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran actor James Daly, who played a leading part in the television series "Medical Center" as well as hundreds of other television, stage and film roles, is dead at age 59.

Daly's agent, Bill Haber, said Tuesday the actor died Sunday night in Nyack, N.Y. He was stricken on the way to Connecticut to appear in the stage play "Equus." Cause of death and funeral arrangements were not immediately known.

A native of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., Daly began acting in 1946 and appeared in more than 600 television shows, including episodes of "Gunsmoke," "The Fugitive," "The FBI," "Ironside" and "Mission: Impossible."

Benny successful singer, has trophies to prove it

HAYWARD, Wis. (AP) — At 57, Benny Jensen has made his mark in the musical world. But it isn't a note most people would — or could — try to top.

For the third straight year, Benny has been proclaimed the worst Irish tenor in the world. To prove it, he has a number of first-place trophies from area bars.

Benny's pitch ranges from a screech that rattles glass, to a cross between a bellow and a grunt. He doesn't need a microphone to belt out his favorite tune: "Yoooo-re cheee-tin' heeeart!"

Benny always has enjoyed singing. He said he used to sing while his mother played the piano and while he rode a tractor on the family farm in Sterling, Ill.

But he admits he probably always was awful.

"I'm surprised I never got to where I could break glass," he said, looking at his mobile home. "Well, at least nothing ever shattered."

His "talenti" wasn't discovered until he was singing along in a local tavern one night in 1965.

"The trumpet player said: 'I hear someone with a funny voice out there — come on up to the bandstand.' So I did."

AIMS test spots open

Three openings still are available for persons interested in taking the Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service tests July 11, 12 and 13 at Midland College.

Test results from AIMS provide information to young people about their special skills and aptitudes, allowing them to pursue an education that may lead them to a more satisfactory career.

August testing dates have been set for Aug. 8, 9 and 10 at Midland College.

For more information, persons can call Dr. Liz Robinett, college counselor and AIMS coordinator for the Permian Basin, at 684-7851, extension 123, from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays.

Midlanders elected at UTA

ARLINGTON — Two students from Midland recently were elected to positions on the Student Activities Board at The University of Texas at Arlington.

Michael R. Bozzell, son of Dr. and Mrs. James D. Bozzell, was named chairman of the entertainment council. A sophomore, he is majoring in political science.

Marshall N. Surratt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Surratt, was chosen films chairman and will be in charge of selecting films to be shown on campus. He is a senior majoring in English.

Unimportant trick can't hurt defense

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Should you cash a trick as a defender when this sets up a later trick for declarer? The answer depends on which side needs the trick more.

Opening lead — ♥ 2

East's ten of hearts forced out the ace at the first trick. South then led the ten of clubs for a finesse, losing to the king.

East saw that if the abandoned hearts dummy's queen would never win a trick. East therefore switched to the queen of spades.

South played the king, and West could take only three spade tricks. Four defensive tricks were not enough to defeat South.

SHOULD CASH KING

East should cash the king of hearts before leading the queen of spades. The defenders would thus get one heart, one club and three spades.

East could tell that South had the king of diamonds or some sure way of getting to his hand for a diamond finesse. Otherwise South would tackle diamonds first rather than clubs.

South was therefore sure to win five diamonds and three clubs as soon as he regained the lead. Since that would give him nine tricks, dummy's queen of hearts would not be important.

The queen of hearts didn't matter, but the king of hearts might be the setting trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your right, bids one spade. You hold: S Q 2 H K J 10 7 6 4 D 7 5 2 C K 7. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two hearts if not vulnerable and if the opponents are reluctant to double. Otherwise pass. You might win only four tricks with this hand, so it's risky to bid for eight tricks.

New 'aide', computer to track down constituency

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using newly lettered charts and, pretty soon, a spiffy new computer, Anne Wexler is trying to get a handle on the kind of faux pas President Carter would rather have avoided.

If she does her job correctly, perhaps the president will not offend the nation's mayors again, as he did last month when he refused to address their national convention in Atlanta. Because Ms. Wexler is now in charge of drumming up support for the Carter administration's policies before and after they are enacted, a group of Greek-Americans was invited to a White House meeting with the president.

Perhaps they did not like what they heard. They went away saying they were unconvinced by Carter's argument that the embargo on arms shipments to Turkey should be lifted. But the session showed that the president may be learning from his critics who have said the White House has not followed through after pitching controversial policies to the Congress. In its biggest personnel maneuver since settling down nearly 18 months ago, the Carter administration brought into the White House Ms. Wexler and a media-master, Gerald Rafshoon, to improve the president's image, and placed Carter's former appointments secretary, Tim Kraft, in a post overseeing political operations. Ms. Wexler is responsible for "constituency building" — the nifty-gritty work of lining up interest groups with built-in power to help win public support and congressional approval for the president's programs.

To help her, she will soon have a computer that will keep track of all national conventions taking place around the country. Are bankers, who might have something to say about mortgage aspects of the urban policy, meeting in September? Check the computer.

When an assistant secretary of the treasury will be in Chicago to talk to some stockbrokers, will there be any other group he might want to say hello to? Check the computer.

How is the president's urban policy legislation doing in Congress? Check the charts leaning against the wall in Ms. Wexler's sunny, second floor office almost directly above Carter's private study in the White House west wing.

All this is part of the effort to get a handle on the president's problems. Ms. Wexler conceded in an interview that "people are a little unclear as to what the president has done and why he is doing it."

A recent Associated Press-NBC News poll showed that approximately two-thirds of those questioned disapproved of the job Carter is doing.

"We understand what the polls are telling us," Ms. Wexler insisted. As an example of the administration's problems, she cited something she discovered at the mayors' conference in Atlanta.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who filled in for Carter after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was booked as the principal speaker, told the city officials that the administration had added 5 million jobs to employment rolls since it took office.

After the speech, she recalled, a number of mayors approached her, said they had been unaware of such progress and asked why the administration did not brag a little more often.

So, the charts help her keep track of what the president and Congress have done and the computer helps her find people to talk to about what the charts are saying.

"We've got time," Ms. Wexler said. "This president is going to have a substantial track record by 1980."

Sets for new movie indeed 'Alien'

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — The reproductions unrolled on the office floor look like slides of malignant cells, enlarged to carpelsize, or like the surface of a dying pond, green with algae through which weird creatures crawl, or like glimpses of a bestiary positioned in some grotesque and horrific time before evolution began or after it ran amok.

"Gross," a child of this generation might well say in review. But brilliantly gross, like the Albright portrait of Dorian Gray, bug-eyed and suppurating, for the movie.

"It's truly primal stuff, like most fear is," Ridley Scott was saying. Scott made a name in documentaries, a tidy sum in commercials and an international reputation as a filmmaker to watch with his first feature, "The Duellists," which was the British entry at the 1977 Cannes Festival.

Scott is scheduled to start principal photography Monday on his second feature, a space fantasy called "Alien." The look and, so far as pictures can provide, the feel of the bizarre planet on which it takes place has been provided by an intense young Swiss artist-illustrator named H.R. Giger.

Giger, a very pale gentleman with long black hair and totally black ensemble, including rain cape, to match, looks slightly like a dress extra for "Dracula," but he has the cheerful enthusiasm of a fan whose dreams are about to come true.

He has been painting for eight years, after beginnings in industrial design, and although he is not yet widely known here, his posters are collectors' items in Europe and an English-language edition of "Necronomicon," a book about him and his work, is about to be published.

Giger did designs for an earlier movie, "Dune," by Jodorowsky, who did "El Topo," but the project was aborted. One of the people who worked on it was Dan O'Bannon. He wrote the original script of "Alien" with Ron Shusett and brought Giger to the attention of Scott and of Walter Hill and David Giler, who are co-producing "Alien."

Giger came over from Zurich, where he lives, and has been painting furiously at Shepperton Studios, where "Alien" is being filmed.

Scott and his associates are, as is the custom, playing their cue cards close to their vests, and all that can be gathered about the story at the moment is that seven earthlings (five men and two women) are wrecked on a very original planet which has a living membrane for a surface and is populated by the most monstrous monster Giger and the special effects wizards at Shepperton can come up with. If any considerable fraction of Giger's vision survives on the screen, that could be very monstrous indeed.

"Alien," says Scott, is essentially intended to be a suspenseful thriller which happens to happen in deep space. The space fantasy has become, like the western, an anthology form in which almost anything can happen, from Greek tragedy to slapstick, with or without message. Horror is what we'll have here.

Scott was never a sci-fi freak or a monster fan, he says, partly because he never saw convincing evidence of vitality in the forms, at least on screen. In the last year he has become a science-fiction-fantasy enthusiast, he admits.

"Two films have opened it up wide," he says. "Kubrick's '2001,' which I saw four or five times, and then nothing until 'Star Wars' came along. The documentary realism in Kubrick knocked me out, and 'Star Wars' is a great, even an amazing, fantasy."

"Fantasy as a word has been used a lot to try to cover up failed nonsense. But George Lucas brought it off astoundingly. I mean, you hear a line like 'May the Force be with you,' and you say, 'Do me a favor, will you?' that's downright silliness. But it works."

"It's very daunting, is fantasy. You have to carry it in your head like a very large whim, and keep it pure and consistent, like a comic strip. It's expensive, too. Can't just use a long gray corridor. Can't cheat, either, there're too many sci-fi buffs around, and I'm one of them now. There are laws of science-fiction. You can go faster than the speed of light, and when you do, this and that happens."

George Lucas, who was shooting "Star Wars" in London exactly two years ago, using stages at Shepperton and other studios as well, spoke about wanting to create a used future, instead of the customary shiny new one. Something similar is afoot here.

Scott and producers Hill and Giler have worked over the characters O'Bannon and his co-author Ron Shusett created, trying to make them more real.

"I'd like them to be truck drivers in space," says Giler. The more identifiable the characters are with humankind, I presume, the greater shock value whatever happens to them will have on the humankind in the audience.

Among the male performers will be Tom Skerritt, Yaphet Kotto, Harry Dean Stanton and Ian Holm, with Sigourney Weaver and Veronica Cartwright (from "Inserts" and "Goin' South") as the women.

Scott, red-haired, red-bearded, actor-handsome, spent seven years at art school, then joined the BBC and became a production designer. He worked with Ken Russell on Russell's highly regarded documentaries on Delius, Elgar and Rossetti. "The Duellists" confirmed Scott's gifts as a designer. On a budget of less than $1.5 million, he captured the flavor of the Napoleonic era with an elegance and fidelity that recalled "Barry Lyndon," at a fraction of the cost.

He had left the BBC after three years to start a firm that makes TV commercials (a form whose production values are the best in the world,

"I used to make between 120 and 150 commercials a year," says Scott. "All with creative directors who had axes to grind. It occurred to me it would be nice to have only one axe to grind."

His younger brother took over the firm and Scott hopes never to make another commercial again. "I'd rather do a small movie," he says. "It's not that much more grief. If you could stay and work only in Europe, you could indeed do two films a year at no more than $1 million apiece, and it would be bliss."

The power and the responsibility are "monolithic and immense, whether you're doing good or a piece of dreck. You might as well be doing something good. But whether you're trying for the thick end of the wedge or the thin — the mass audience or only a part of it — it's irresponsible to do your seeking without any thought or hope of recoupment.

"Listen, it's entertainment whether it's Wagner or something else. You can't, can't think you're doing a private poem for your mirror. Those chaps who say they only make films for themselves can't be serious. If you're not communicating, I don't know what you're doing."

"I think of Bergman with his 45 films by age — what is it, 35 maybe? — and I say, hey, I've got to get going."

Sewage facility opened

LONDON (AP) — A band played and sherry was served as Environment Secretary Peter Shore opened the largest sewage treatment plant in Europe at Beckton, in London's East End.

Built as part of a campaign to bring life and purity back to the River Thames, the plant will clean up 220 million gallons of sewage daily.

Thames Water Authority Chairman Peter Black said a salmon had been seen recently swimming up the river near Shepperton Lock, 30 miles upstream from London.

Many lose electricity

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — About 4,600 customers of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. lost electricity for about two hours early today after a power failure of undetermined origin that utility officials said "corrected itself."

For many utility customers, it was the second blackout of the week. Mike Dunstan, public information officer for the utility, said work crews would check underground equipment to try to determine the cause of the outage, which began shortly before midnight Tuesday and darkened homes and businesses in about 28 blocks northwest of the city's downtown business district.

Using electricity rerouted from other areas, power was restored to about half of those affected by 12:45 a.m., Dunstan said.

At 1:26 a.m., the electricity suddenly came back for all 4,600 customers. "The problem corrected itself," Dunstan said.

Despite many 'disasters,' most passengers show up

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite reports of cockroaches, flooding toilets and other disasters on the SS America's "cruise to nowhere," only 40 of 600 passengers who signed up for the ship's next voyage have canceled out.

This trip was not to nowhere, but to Nova Scotia, and the voyagers paid $249 or more a person for passage. The America weighed anchor Monday just hours after its return from nowhere, and two hours after it was cited for minor sanitation violations. Inspectors said the violations — which included a faulty dishwashing machine and refrigeration system, and plugged drains in the crew's quarters — did not endanger the health of the passengers.

The America ended its earlier cruise at luxury line Pier 88 on the Hudson River at 48th Street. A handful of the 700 disembarking passengers rendered a chorus of "God Bless America" as the 26,000-ton ship nosed into her berth.

Earlier, 250 fellow passengers had jumped ship, protesting that the Panamanian-registered vessel was infested with cockroaches, its plumbing was inadequate and such promised amenities as movies, a gym and swimming pools either were not available or not working.

Venture Cruise president Leonard Lansburgh conceded that the company had "goofed" in overbooking the ship. "Our right hand did not know what our left hand was doing," he said. Passengers who demanded to be put ashore before dawn last Friday are to receive refunds on the $149 to $399 apiece they paid for passage.

One passenger, Robert Shawlowsky of Ringwood, N.J., said the cruise was a "voyage of the damned." He complained of a lack of toilet facilities. Jean Trembley of Linden, N.J., said passengers circulated petitions seeking at least 50 percent refunds on their fares.

Others had few complaints. "We didn't eat on schedule," said Pearl Guyer of West Orange, N.J. "People waited in line like cattle. But we had a sense of humor. We made a good time."

Assistant state Attorney General Stephen Mindell said the U.S. Public Health Service cleared the America to set out for Nova Scotia via Martha's Vineyard, Mass., because "passenger safety is not in jeopardy."

Man fined $20 for cat deaths

MIAMI (AP) — A man who describes himself as Florida's biggest breeder of jungle animals has been fined $20 for his part in a hunting operation that state officials say claimed the lives of at least two dozen big cats.

Jamie Zito, 24, of the central Florida community of Indian Lake Estates, said Monday he did not know he needed a permit to sell jungle animals to two ranchers who then charged people up to $1,600 to shoot the animals on a remote island.

"I raise animals," he said. "I don't kill them, but if an animal is old and doesn't have a use, he should be put to sleep. I didn't have the heart to go out and kill them myself."

In a Bartow courtroom Friday, Zito pleaded no contest to possessing wildlife for commercial purposes without a state permit, a misdemeanor.

Florida game officials said animals were shipped to the wooded island on Lake Kissimmee, where they were released and killed, sometimes at point-blank range and in their cages.

The Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission ordered the operation halted in mid-May.

Even the deaf listen when E.F. Hutton talks

By RON S. HEINZEL
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — "When E.F. Hutton Talks, People Listen," according to the brokerage firm's slogan.

Now, thanks to Ardy A. Thayer, account executive at the firm's Universal City office, more people are listening — namely, the deaf.

In addition to her regular customers, Mrs. Thayer has built up a clientele of deaf persons, communicating with them via a special machine next to her desk.

The machine, a TTY Phonotype, was designed by two Southern California men who are deaf: Dr. James C. Marsters, an orthodontist, and Robert Whitebrook, an astronomer and electronics engineer. The machine is basically a converted teletype machine which is linked to a telephone.

When Mrs. Thayer has some investment information for a deaf client she dials the customer's phone number and she punches out a message on the TTY. A light in the client's home flashes, signaling an incoming message. The client places his phone on a black box on his machine and the two-way link is completed. The customer is then able to discuss the investment advice and even complete a transaction.

"As far as we can determine, I'm the only broker in the nation with a TTY machine," Mrs. Thayer says.

There are about 50,000 deaf in this area who belong to the Greater Los Angeles Association for Deaf (GLAD). About 3,000 Phonotype machines are used by them at home or work. Teletypewriters for the Deaf Inc., Washington, D.C., prints a directory for subscribers consisting mainly of phone numbers of deaf persons and emergency numbers such as police and fire departments which have TTY machines.

"They don't normally allow solicitation in the directory," Mrs. Thayer says. "But they felt I was performing a service and accepted my number."

She became interested in the deaf when she was a girl living in a small town in Wisconsin.

"My father owned a restaurant," she says. "One of our regular customers was a deaf printer who worked down the street. He taught me sign language so he could order his meals."

This skill went unused for years. Then, in 1973 she received a phone call at E.F. Hutton from a woman who wanted to place a substantial order for her husband. I explained that I couldn't take the order over the telephone but I offered to stop by her house. The woman said her husband was deaf. When I told her I knew sign language, she nearly collapsed." She still has the couple's account.

About a year and a half ago Mrs. Thayer persuaded E.F. Hutton to invest $500 to purchase the TTY.

Air Force move ends in sand trap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire criticized the Air Force on Tuesday for spending $18,799 in tax funds to buy 2.8 million tons of sand for the golf course at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas. The Wisconsin Democrat said the purchase did not violate any regulations. But he said he believes that facilities such as golf courses should be maintained through user fees, not with tax dollars.

"If local use by military personnel is not heavy enough to produce funds for normal upkeep, then consideration should be given to opening the golf course to non-military personnel, for a fee, and on a lower priority than military personnel," Proxmire said in a statement.

He said the Air Force made the purchase to replace sand that had been washed away from sand traps by rainwater over a period of time.

Blue-eyed former slave hits 136; gets greeting from President

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Former slave Charlie Smith is 136 years old today and still maintains a glimmer of his quick wit although he appeared weak when he was visited at a Central Florida convalescent home.

Birthdays greetings, including one from President and Mrs. Carter, filled his room, but Smith hardly could muster strength to talk with a reporter who attempted to interview him Monday.

Smith, the oldest person on Social Security rolls, has said he was kidnapped from Liberia by slave traders when he was a teen-ager. He recalls being sold in New Orleans on July 4, 1854.

Not remembering exactly when he was born, the blue-eyed Smith picked July 4 as his birthday long ago.

Smith, freed from slavery by President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, only nodded and mumbled as a reporter from The Ledger at Lakeland, Fla., asked questions.

Yet Smith did manage one audible answer when asked his age. "Twenty-two," he said clearly.

Rhodesia's mixed government not living up to expectations

By JACK FOISIE
The Los Angeles Times
SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Burning with great expectations of bringing peace to the war-torn countryside, Rhodesia's interim, mixed-race government is not working well. There is growing belief by whites and blacks that settlement of the escalating insurgency must include negotiation with guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

The transitional government, composed of Prime Minister Ian Smith and three moderate black leaders, came under stinging criticism this week as Parliament sought to find money to finance the country's defense against guerrillas infiltrating from adjoining black-ruled states.

The war already is costing Rhodesia's 7.5 million people an estimated $1 million a day. Whites, although outnumbered 24 to one by blacks, provide most of the tax money. Virtually all white males up to age 50 perform full or part-time military duty. Loyal black citizens make up the bulk of the armed forces.

Both black and white lawmakers struck at the seeming inability of Smith and his three black partners — the Salisbury Four — to bring about the promised cease-fire.

Black members of Parliament also expressed doubt about the willingness of whites to end racial inequality or to move steadily toward black majority rule.

Since the March agreement in which Smith accepted power-sharing with Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Ndabaningi Sithole and tribal Chief Jeremiah Chirau, the fighting has intensified. An average of 30 persons a day are now dying in the struggle, including casualties on both sides, but the chief victims are non-involved civilians, both black and white.

Guerrilla terrorism reached a new level of savagery recently when 12 members of missionary families, including six women and three small children, were beaten and stabbed to death. All were living at a school only 10 miles from the large town of Umtali near the Mozambique border.

This atrocity, and recent killings of white missionaries elsewhere in insurgent-infested border areas, appeared to be a calculated campaign — although perhaps not authorized by Nkomo and Mugabe — to spread fear among all whites living in rural areas.

These killings, whether authorized or not, are an extension of Nkomo and Mugabe's intent to close all schools and other missionary or government institutions in areas that the guerrillas are seeking to dominate. A total of 36 white missionaries have been killed.

The campaign of terror is affecting morale in some endangered regions despite often successful government troop reaction to catch the killers.

In the area west of Bulawayo, Rhodesia's second most populous city, the Seventh Day Adventist Church has pulled out completely. Their sizable missionary undertaking involved 40 whites, mostly Americans, and included a food-raising program for blacks. Now a herd of cattle and acres of newly-planted wheat have been abandoned.

Criticism in Parliament this week also came from whites of Smith's own party as well as the black parliamentary group. The black representatives complained that the three black leaders are unable to work well together in the government-by-consensus and are being dominated by Prime Minister Smith, who has headed the Rhodesian state for 12 years.

And the white lawmakers, who gave Smith a vote of confidence last November, expressed fear that Smith is failing to provide the safeguards promised for whites in a future black-majority government.

In Rhodesia, where patriotism is rated among the highest of virtues, Parliament member Esmond Mickleth of Smith's party questioned whether Rhodesia is worth fighting for indefinitely.

Another white, Jan Buitendag, said the ordinary Rhodesian is becoming disillusioned over the capacity of Smith and his black co-rulers to make progress in bringing about a cease-fire.

A black member of Parliament, Thomas Zaiwaira, said his people believe removal of racial-discriminatory laws is the first test of sincerity for Smith and his fellow whites. The failure of the Salisbury Four government to take this action indicates, Zaiwaira said, that whites are not prepared to accept black majority rule.

Some observers consider the barrage of critical debate in Parliament part of a campaign to convince moderate black leaders, as well as Smith, that there must be talks with guerrilla leaders Nkomo and Mugabe if there is to be peace — in line with British and American proposals.

British diplomat John Graham and American Ambassador Stephen Low were here this week. They held talks with each member of the Salisbury Four in their continuing effort to bring about a meeting of all parties in the Rhodesian dispute.

Holiday weekend, lower fares boost air travel

By LARRY KRAMER
The Washington Post

The Fourth of July weekend was the biggest in commercial aviation history, with more than 3 million people boarding airplanes across the country.

The combination of an escalating number of new discount fares and a pilots' strike that has all but grounded Northwest airlines, has led to several airlines also setting individual passenger records.

United Airlines, for example, set highs for passengers traveling in one month (June, 3.96 million), one week (week beginning June 25, 1.02 million) and one day (last Friday, June 30, 166,107 people). The weekly total marks the first time any airline carried more than 1 million people in one week.

Eastern Airlines also reported several records, including the best six-month record in its history. During the first half of 1978 Eastern reported 18.3 million boardings, up 17.4 percent over the same period last year.

And last Friday Eastern said its 136,156 passengers represented a single-day record for the 50-year-old airline. The Eastern shuttle from Washington to New York had to add 38 planes on Friday — in addition to the scheduled 15 — to take up the extra business. In addition, Eastern's June figures were running a whopping 34.4 percent ahead of last year.

Promoters didn't fare so well

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Country music fans got what they came for at a three-day music festival, but promoters said they didn't do as well.

"The festival was not a financial success, but we think it was definitely a creative success," Marshall Fallwell, spokesman for Castle, said Tuesday in an interview. "Everyone who came got a damn good show for their money."

Country music fans who flocked to the festival, staged on a site which sprawled over more than 500 acres, were treated to performances by some of country's biggest names. Those performing Tuesday included Merle Haggard, Kenny Rogers, Tammy Wynette, Don Williams, Larry Gatlin, Danny Davis and Earl Scruggs.

Castle Investment Corp., which promoted the event, had hoped for a total audience of between 60,000 and 100,000 persons. But at the show's end Tuesday night, the final tally hovered at around 20,000, with an estimated 10,000 attending on the final day.

Promoters said the extent of the festival's losses will not be known until next week. Tom Moon, who produced the event, said all performers were paid in full and that all other debts would be paid.

"Nobody's going to get stuck," Moon said. "It's been an A-1 concert from the very beginning, even if it was a baptism of fire for me."

He said a legal fight over ownership of the festival venture and some initial bad publicity hurt the turnout.

The festival also was moved from an early location farther north to the Maury County site, some 50 miles south of Nashville. Officials at the first site had demanded that the event's promoters provide stringent sanitation and security measures.

"When you start something, people tend to be skeptical," Moon said. "It takes three years in the red for a festival like this to get in the black."

During the course of the three-day event, fans endured thunderstorms, ankle-deep mud and temperatures in the 90s to clap their hands and shout for their idols.

"It appears that America's sudden fling at air travel could be turning into a lengthy phenomenon," said Russell L. Ray, Jr., Eastern's senior vice president for marketing. "It's already lasted four solid months and from our advance bookings it should continue through the summer."

He attributed much of the increase to the new discount fares but said that business travel was also showing a steady increase over last year.

Dan Hankin of the Air

Transport Association said that the 3 million weekend travelers made this "the biggest weekend in aviation history."

"We have seen during the first five months of this year that traffic is going up almost 2 million a month," he said. The first five months of 1978 saw 15.5 percent more passengers than the same period of 1977, while May 1978 traffic was up 18.8 percent over May 1977.

Another crucial barometer of airline profitability as well as volume increase is what is known as the load factor — the percentage of seats taken up on any given airplane at take-off.

The historical average load factor has been about 55 percent. According to Hankin, this year's average load factor has been 62.1 percent, compared to 54 percent last year.

"And now we are running into the high 70's, with each month higher than the next," he said. "One airline, Allegheny, even hit 84 percent last

Hankin said that there "is no question that lower fares are a major part of the increase." He said that more than 40 percent of all air travelers today are using discount fares of one type or another.

At the United ticket counters in Washington's National Airport, where five striking Northwest airline employees were moonlighting to help handle record business, long lines were present much of the weekend. One of the major problems caused by the rapid increase in the number of available fares is the increased time it takes to book a flight for a passenger.

"We have to explain a whole range of fares now," said United customer-service supervisor Richard Thieleman. "It takes three times as long to process a ticket than it did a year ago."

"And," he added, "we get a lot of weekend shoppers here, who come by to pick up reservations that have to be purchased in advance for the discount fare. We also get a number of people who come down because they can't get through on our telephone lines."

Consumer activists have long claimed that airline business would increase dramatically in the face of lowered fares. Airline officials, however, fearing widespread economic deregulation of their industry, until recently had disagreed.

tives have changed their tune.

"Lowered fares have caused people to take trips," said United Airlines official Tony Schoepf. "Volumes have been of such a nature as to offset the drop in yield on each ticket. But I don't think anyone knows the potential."

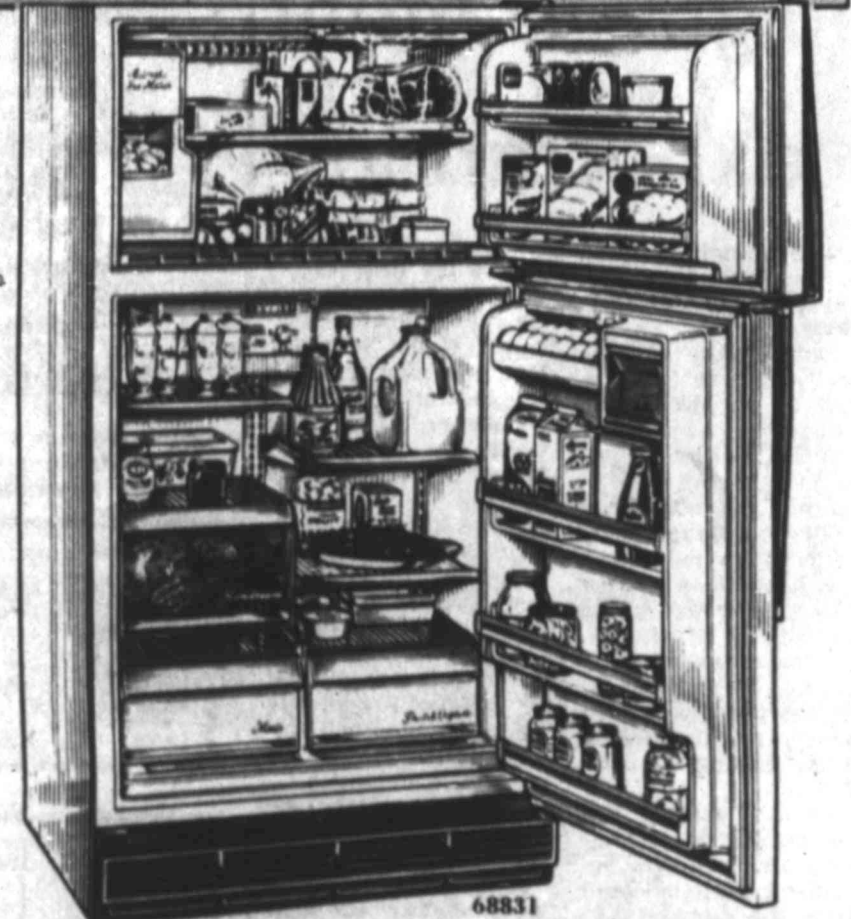

But at least one consumer advocate is not entirely happy about the way things are going.

Ralph Nader helped the consumer cause considerably when he successfully sued an airline for "bumping" him off a flight on which he had reserved a seat. (The airline got caught giving out too many confirmed seats — a regular industry practice.) But Nader himself was a recent victim of the sudden upsurge in passenger travel.

According to one United Airlines employee, Nader asked permission to board a flight he could not get a reservation for in an attempt to buy a ticket from an already-seated passenger. The airline refused.
