Old-timer's letter filled with Midland vignettes

But, if wit counts, and it does, he's got more youth than most.

Now, Roustin' About has never met this gentleman-character. Many a Midlander, though, in the grave and still getting about has.

Flanigan, like his father before him, was a surveyor back when Midland wasn't much more than a cattle town: petroleum didn't start enriching the land until the late 1920s. And when it did, you can bet your wellworn walking boots that Flanigan was out sizing up this mushrooming niche of the Western world

Kindly Jim Flanigan dropped Roustin' About a for-what-it-is-worth letter, which provided a minute vignette into a mere fraction of the Midland-town as Flanigan remem-

It would be most enlightening to listen to him sometime. Maybe that time will come to pass if Flanigan ever gets out of Houston and returns home or if the Rouster ever drifts down to too-humid and too-peopled Houston. Flanigan moved down there last November.

In his typewritten letter, Flanigan mentioned building contractor Will Sinclair who, back in the 'teens. built a homeplace "in the 300 or 400 block of Carrizo or Pecos," he recalled. "I forget which, as back in those times," Flanigan wrote, "we knew that it was south of Mrs. Dr. McCall's and west of 'Timberline's' and Mrs. Wall's." Back then, he threw in for free, there were "no streets back west of Marienfeld.

Here comes the rub: Flanigan recalls Sinclair's hand-polishing to "a gloss that you wouldn't believe" his dining and living room areas. And it is the same today as back sixty Sinclair, Flanigan said, had two sons, George and Bill. And it was Bill who built Elliott and Fave Cowden's "house there on the corner of Texas and C streets.

Flanigan's figured that there's a chance for a story there. It's worth a genuine check and, no doubt, some column inches. So is Flanigan.

"I'm a newcomer to Midland - just wrote Flaniborn there in 1904. gan. "I have to chuckle sometimes when I read statements from some of those kids that call themselves the 'Historical Society.' Our old homeplace was on the corner of Texas and Weatherford (202 N. Weatherford St.), and when they come out with something about the old Z.T. Brown house, most statements (are) 'Bull.' I was across the fence a long time before any of Sarah's (Sarah Dorsey's) children were born.

That might be worth a line or two. "I've got to shut up," Flanigan said, as he was winding down his letter. "But it looks like an old man that has and still does love his hometown and friends likes to talk about and remember them even if 99 and 44/100 percent are out in the ceme-

And he said to step over and say "HOWDY" to Bill Collyns, a crony of Flanigan's and a newspaper editor who has got some years to go before he's the old-timer that Flanigan is.

Tell him, Flanigan said, "that everything is on the top shelf, but I can't reach it."

That's part of being an old-timer. Never mind. Youth has its draw-

Texas legislators approve resolution on U.S. budget

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Saying Congress should pay attention to the so-called "taxpayers' revolt," the Texas House today approved a resolution asking for a U.S. constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

A unanimous non-record vote sent the resolution to the Senate for fur-main objection by Texans has been high federal taxes and the Legislature should try to affect that situation.

He told the House the resolution should be the start of a nationwide effort to get Congress to submit such a constitutional amendment to the state legislatures for ratification. A number of other state legislatures have passed similar resolutions.

Von Dohlen said Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Attorney General John Hill and House Speaker Bill Clayton all were committed to contact officials in other states. In other action this morning, the House suspended rules to allow an immediate hearing on a bill establishing a non-binding referendum at the November election on increasing the state sales tax by one cent per dollar and using the proceeds to re-

Senators approved 24-5 Wednesday a proposed constitutional amendment requiring taxation of rural land on its productive capacity, not its value on the real estate market.

A similar proposal cleared the Senate in the 1977 Legislature but failed by one vote in the House because it extended the agricultural tax break to corporations.

Senators, however, voted 14-15 against dropping corporations this time, setting up a possible stalemate with the House.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and others have said the agricultural tax exemption, repeal of the sales tax on residential utility bills and increasing the inheritance tax exemption might be all the session can produce.

The sales and inheritance tax issues were headed for a conference committee, since senators substituted their own version of those relief measures for the House bill Wednesday.

A straw poll of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee showed a majority opposes Briscoe's proposals for local tax limits, a ceiling on state budget increases, a twothirds vote requirement for passing state tax bills and unlimited initiative and referendum.

Constitutional amendments must win committee approval before they can reach the House floor and, ultimately, the voters.

Briscoe scored points with some lawmakers Wednesday by opening the special session to a bill centralizing property tax appraisals in one office per county and setting uniform statewide appraisal standards.

The House Ways and Means Committee heard testimony on the bill, by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, shortly after Briscoe issued his proclama tion but adjourned until today without

Medical examiner says his testimony 'distorted'

By MARK VOGLER

An El Paso medical examiner, hired by the family of Larry Lozano to conduct a second autopsy of the inmate who died in the Ector County jail, Wednesday said District Attorney John Green tried to distort his testimony at an April coroner's inquest in Odessa.

Dr. Frederick Bornstein said after testifying before a federal grand jury looking into the Lozano death, "I have never changed my story." He suggested that Green tried to misrepresent his findings

Dr. Kris Challapalli, the Ector County medical examiner who conducted the first autopsy, also said after emerging from her grand jury appearance Wednesday afternoon that her initial findings had not changed. She said she agreed that a neck injury Lozano received in a scuffle with lawmen resulted in his death

However, Dr. Challapalli said she still believes "the cerebral hemhorrage caused by a blow to the back of the head was a significant in-

Landowners raise questions about potential problems with effluent

By LINDA HILL

"All I know to do is to blow it up," said Gale Pugh, a Midland County landowner who is fighting mad at the prospect of the city of Odessa's sending additional millions of gallons of sewage effluent across his land.

The effluent would come from a new sewage treatment plant the city of Odessa is considering building in southwest Midland County and from expansion of the city's present plant. The Odessa City Council this week authorized staff members to prepare documents necessary to call a bond issue to finance those and other city projects

Landowners in the area where the effluent would cross are concerned about the potential loss of land use, and about problems associated with stagnant standing water, such as breeding mosquitos and odor.

Currently, the city of Odessa sends some of its effluent down Monahans Draw, up to approximately five million gallons a day. The Texas Water Quality Board on Aug. 31, the last day of its existence as a separate agency, granted the city of Odessa a permit to dump 9.8 million gallons a day from its expanded existing plant and 5.22 million gallons a day from the new treatment plant.

Odessa City Manager Kerry Sweatt today said the actual discharge would be "the amount of the permit or less," initially. He said it is likely that an effort would be made to sell portions of the effluent, and that would affect the volume of discharge.

"It's a little premature to talk about flow and how much will be sold before we're even sure it (the new facility) will be built," Sweatt said.

Midland County officials and landowners opposed the discharge permit unsuccessfully, and County Judge Blake Hansen told The Reporter-Telegram this week that he believes there is nothing more to be done.

Pugh, however, said Wednesday he wrote the Water Quality Board a letter in which he said the plant "should be sabotaged or blown up" if its built at the proposed sight on the old Dora Roberts Ranch. "I might do it or have it done," said the crusty farmer who has been working his land in the Warwick community for about 30

District Judge Barbara Culver, who was county judge at the time the water board approved the Odessa permit, said Wednesday she thinks the project should be watched close-

"I think the project should be moni-tored by Midlanders to be sure that the residents who live in that area are justly compensated for any damage that might be done to their land or to the value of their land as a result of this installation. I also think all Midlanders should be concerned about the potential health hazard from flies and mosquitoes that we have encountered as a result of the one treatment plant," Judge Culver said.

She said precautions should be taken to make sure the insect problem doesn't increase. Also, she advocated requiring the city of Odessa to make the water available for agricultural or industrial uses.

Odessa City Attorney Joel Roberts refused Wednesday to respond to the "hypothetical question" about wheth-er the city would be liable for loss of income or value from land which the effluent crosses. "It is my understanding that there would be no damages, no repercussions," Roberts Vernon Chandler, who owns and

Prosecutor won't comment on charge that grand juror under indictment

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd is issuing a "no comment" on the report that one of 23 federal grand jurors probing into the Larry Lozano civil rights case is under a criminal

"Mr. Boyd is giving a 'no comment," said a spokesman for Boyd, the federal prosecutor who is presenting the government case to the jurors meeting in Midland.

Postal officials, unions avoid face-to-face, using mediators

By JEFFREY MILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a mail strike possible at midnight tonight, negotiators for the Postal Service and its unions today continued separate meetings with federal mediators rather than talking face-to-face

The mediators have kept the two sides apart since Monday when direct negotiations were halted. The mediators have talked to representatives of each side in separate rooms of a Washington hotel for the last three days and carried proposals back and forth. Wednesday's session lasted until about mid-

The upions won a no-layoff clause in 1970 and say it must be included in any new contract. Postal Service negotiators want to eliminate the 25-word phrase in an effort to trim the workforce and hold down future increases in postal rates.

National union officials refuse publicly to discuss whether they would call a strike - illegal under federal law - if the midnight deadline passes. But sentiment at several locals Wednesday indicated members would follow a national strike call.

"We're prepared to go out," said the president of one Boston local. Stephen Albanese of an American Postal Workers Union local said 100 signs had been printed and permits secured to picket several post offices. In Cincinnati, three locals representing 4,000 workers voted Wednesday night to follow a national strike Administration to inspect working conditions.

And Tucson, Ariz., Postmaster Arnold Elias said 90 percent of that city's 1,000 postal workers would walk out if a national strike were called.

If walkouts occur, Postal Service contingency plans call for Postmaster General William F. Bolger to ask President Carter to declare an emergency and order out federal troops to handle the mail.

Chief Federal Mediator Wayne L. Horvitz said Wednesday that differences over grievance procedures, arbitration and union recognition had been ironed out, but that "both sides ... are still far apart on several other issues.'

He was not specific, but sticking points besides the no-layoff clause reportedly included wages and changes in work rules.

And, the source said, "That's the one issue that really would unite postal workers across the country on a strike.

Andrews said late Wednesday that the Postal Service had cut 70,000 jobs, "but that ain't enough for them." The unions maintain normal attrition gives managment sufficient flexibility.

The talks were making progress until Monday night, when sources said the two sides divided bitterly on the no-layoff issue. Since then, they have not met face-to-face, and federal mediators have shuttled back and forth with proposals in an effort to get direct bargaining resumed. Report now says no agreement

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram, after reporting that Egypt agreed to continue negotiations with Israel, quoted Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel taay as saying he had made no tian meeting.

"We are ready to meet them in the event that Israel submits new ideas fulfilling her commitments to withdraw (for the occupied territories) and recognizes the rights of the Palestinian people." the revised report quoted Kamel.

Cairo Radio led its morning news broadcast with a denial of the report that Egypt had agreed to continue

There was no explanation of the change, and official comment was not available. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said after the end of his twoday meeting in Britain with Kamel and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan that he would go to Cairo and Jerusalem in two weeks in an attempt to set up another meeting of the foreign ministers.

rent situation, is that the discharge is sporadic, with what winds up in the draw being what is left over after sales to industrial and irrigation users in Ector County, he said. Chandler said he asked Odessa officials about the possibility of getting "a steady, certain amount." "In the first place, they wanted to sell the community the water. When first taiked about it, they wanted to know how much this community would pay for the water. Of course, we're not interested in paying. The community out here has to some way get back some of the land we're going to lose to draw water," Chandler Sweatt said he does not know of any such sale offer, but it is possible that someone in city government may have made the suggestion. In order to be able to pump water out, the draw would have to be channeled so it would not spread out so

J.D. Crawford's land is farther down the draw and not likely to be affected for several years, "until all that ground close to it is saturated," he said. But he is opposed to the plant's construction for the sake of his

The draw now is "like an open sewer," Crawford said. He, too, said he would not be opposed to a steady flow of water. "A standing stream stagnates in a hurry in this weather. That's the thing I'm opposed to." However, he also is concerned about the potential odor problem even if the effluent is running. "They can do everything they want to to effluent water, but they can't make it smell good," Crawford said. Landowner O.C. Collins Jr., whose property is across the road from Crawford's, said he would not object to the discharge so long as it were not polluted. But he said he had expressed a willingness to join other landowners in hiring a lawyer to explore legal ways of blocking the installation

Several landowners said a community group last year was considering the possibility of legal action, but, when asked Wednesday, none knew of any definite action planned.

Should Odessa voters approve the project, the city then would have to purchase land on which to build the new facility. Sweatt said today the city is negotiating with representa tives of the Dora Roberts Foundation about purchasing a one-section tract. City Attorney Roberts said Wednesday the state's eminent domain laws give the city of Odessa the power to condemn land, even if it is in Midland

Sweatt would not speculate on the need for condemnation.

Bonding procedures controlled by the Ector County Sheriff's Department prevented Larry Lozano from being bonded out of jail or transferred to an institution for psychiatric treatment, a witness reportedly has told a federal grand jury now sitting in session in Midland.

The federal grand jury reviewing circumstances surrounding Lozano's death Jan. 22 in Ector County Jail heard testimony Wednesday from a former bondsmanIwho said he attempted to bond Lozano out of jail, but decided not to pursue the matter after being informed by the Sheriff's Department that commitment papers were being prepared for a transfer to Big Spring State Hospital.

Lee Dallaire, formerly employed by the now de-funct A-1 Bonding Company of Odessa, said he told the grand jury that Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught has considerable power over bonding procedures and, in this case, made it difficult for the 27-year-old Odessa newcomer to be bonded out by Dallaire.

Dallaire reportedly told grand jurors he was informed by Capt. Tommy McMeans of the Ector County Sheriff's Department that "there was no sense in making bond on Lozano since commitment papers (to Big Spring State Hospital) were being

Although Dallaire said it is common in Ector County for bonding companies to approach inmates to be bonded out, testimony thus far reportedly has indicated no company ever approached Lozano orhis family to post the $26,000 bail.

Dallaire said he told jurors that, at least in the past, Ector County Sheriff's Department officials arbitrarily decided who could make bonds. In the case of Lozano, Dalllaire said he told grand jurors, A-1 Bonding was deceived by the sheriff's department with the result being that Lozano remained in

Dallaire said he told the grand jury that A-1 took an interest in the case because the officers involved in the scuffle with Lozano had a reputation of using physical force in making arrests. Dallaire also said Wednesday he told the grand jury that A-1 routinely referred complaint's of clients who alleged police brutality to the Midland FBI office. The bondsman said that, when asked by a U.S. attorney in Wednesday's grand jury session whether officers for the Ector County Sheriff's Department and the Odessa Police Department had a reputation

Lee Dallaire, a former bondsman in Odessa, maintained Wednesday that Larry Lozano was a victim of bail bonding conflicts. (Staff

Dallaire also said he told the jurors that A-1 had a history of referring clients complaining of alleged mistreatment by lawmen to the FBI.

He said he named an Ector County district attorney investigator who at one point, Dallaire said, told him "I'm tired of me and my boss having everybody

we arrest complaining to the FBI."

Dallaire said he told grand jurors that the FBI matter created some difficulties for A-1 Bonding in that the company later was accused by Ector and federal officials of "schooling" inmates to file complaints.

What kind of control does the sheriff have over bonding procedures?, the jurors reportedly asked

"He has total control as to whether a man can be bonded out. The sheriff can specify who may or may not make bonds at his discretion. The sheriff can make it difficult for us to get an individual (out) by getting the bond raised," Dallaire said he ans-

Green said the Brown Beret is misrepresenting its stand on Lozano. 'They don't care about the Lozano case," he said.

School administrators oppose bill with property tax ceiling intact

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Rep. Wayne Peveto courted the once-hostile real estate lobby by adding a limit on local tax increases to his property tax "reform" bill. Now the school men are mad.

Bedford Supt. Forrest Watson said Wednesday the Texas Association of School Administrators can support the Peveto bill only without the 5 percent ceiling on property tax increases.

Watson testified before the House Ways and Means Committee, which held a hearing on the bill shortly after Gov. Dolph Briscoe said the special session could take it up.

Committee chairman Joe Wyatt, D-Bloomington, said he was concerned that the state would have to replace as much as $1 billion in school district

one such provision would tax farm, ranch and timber land on its productive capacity rather than its market value, handing rural districts a cut in

"I think we would be committing ourselves to a tax bill in the future," said Wyatt.

Peveto's bill centralizes property tax appraisal at the county level and sets up a State Property Tax Board to issue appraisal standards and make studies to determine if property is being appraised miformly across the state.

Watson said the property tax limit would hamper school districts' ability to cope with inflation, new program requirements and state and federal man-dates.

"School budgets only have 6 to 8 percent discretion" because most spending is tied to state and federal requirements, he said. "In my case it is less than 6 percent.' "It would be ridiculous to have referenda on 6 percent of your budget," he said. Rep. Bob Davis, R-Irving, said the idea of referenda to roll back tax increases was a good idea but he thought a 5 percent limit seemed "unrealistic when

"If we do nothing, taxes on agricultural land, on a statewide average, are going up 46 percent this year," Peveto said.

He also tried to reassure those who fear the new state bureaucracy would dictate to local taxing "The state of Texas would not be dictating to local

Joel Whitmire, chief appraiser for San Jacinto County, said he opposed the state's replacing revenue local governments would lose from agricultural

Judges of merit

Members of the U.S. House and Senate have agreed to create 152 new federal judgeships, increasing the federal judiciary by one-third and giving President Carter and the Senate the largest judicial patronage package in history.

And the Senate representation in a conference committee struggling over differences in the House and Senate versions of the legislation has scuttled merit selection which would erode Senate clout in the selection process.

The House proposed that presidential nominees be chosen according to non-binding "procedures and guidelines" to insure that the best qualified candidates were considered.

But Senate conferees resisted even this mild admonition in seeking to preserve their traditional control over nominations. The conference bill calls only for "standards and guidelines."

Either form could be waived by the President, whose nominating power is spelled out in the Constitution.

A strong message from Congress, however, would make it difficult to bypass merit selection criteria - and President Carter pledged in his campaign to minimize "political aspect or influence" in his judicial appointments.

Standards of competence and experience are useful in reviewing nominees proposed by senators, usually resulting in judges who are qualified.

But the present system does not seek out the "best qualified."

The merit selection statement should be restored to the legislation in the continuing conference or in consideration by the full House, where it originated.

The impact of the massive increase in the judiciary gives added importance to finding the very best candidates.

Inflation, wage floor

A boost in the minimum wage to $2.90 an hour, scheduled for Jan. 1. is "in hundsight" a mistake, according to G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve

Miller told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress that he would like to see the increase postponed for two years as a means of putting the brakes on

Since any delay would have to be approved by Congress, the hike from the present rate of $2.65 seems likely to stand. Organized labor, which fought tooth and toenail for the increase, surely would battle a delay.

ponement of the increase would mean no more than a 0.05 percent shaving of the inflation rate, but his remarks serve to dramatize the need to control the inflationary fires.

Labor Department statistics released recently gave emphasis to Miller's fears. The inflation he envisioned as perhaps 7 percent this year could be as high as 11 percent.

Congress should get the message.

Park are anything but cuddly, according to Dick Riegelhuth, ranger in charge of bear management.

To impress upon park visitors that the 500-pound beasts are neither cute or lovable, the bears no longer will be given names like "Sugarplum" and "Sunset," the ranger said. Instead they will be assigned numbers to identify those which have become "unmanageable outlaws."

The bears in Yosemite National camps, steal food, break into cars and sometimes invade tents, terrorizing campers.

> Sugarplum now has been redesignated as Bear No. 242.

But the public is not easily convinced. Rangers have been harassed with protests over their policy of relocating or destroying animals that create problems.

The reaction should not be surprising. A generation of Americans recalls the era when vicious two-legged criminals were referred to affectionately as "Baby Face" and "Pretty Boy."

Stroessner's lackeys responded by denouncing Laino as a traitor. Then the docile Paraguayan parliament, under the tight rein of the dictator, took up a resolution that would revoke the citizenship of anyone criticizing the regime from abroad.

U.S. analysts in Latin America had no trouble grasping the intent of the resolution. The proposal, they cabled was a "poorly disguised effort to discourage future Lainos from criticizing the government abroad."

Earlier, on the eve of Laino's visit to the United States, the American embassy in Asuncion cabled the State Department that Laino and his compatriots were being denounced as "discredited opportunists seeking to curry favor with the USG (United States Government) and gain personal publicity by waving the banner of human rights."

The cable, dated April 12, also reported ominously that Laino had been accused of "sowing resentment and hatred." This catch phrase, the embassy warned, is normally used by the dictator when he invokes infamous Law 209. This is a sweeping measure that permits Stroessner to detain political prisoners at whim.

Informed observers now speculate privately that Laino may be tried under Law 209 on previous charges that were never prosecuted. So when terrorism emerged in West Germany, it struck the psyche even harder than the Germanic body. The murders of Siegried Buback, the public prosecutor; Jurgon Ponto, chairman of the nation's most powerul bank, and Hans-Martin Schleyer, a key industrial leader — all within six nonths last year — traumatized the Germans like nothing since the World War II catastrophe.

Actually, by comparison with the numbers of people killed or wounded through terrorism in other countries, West Germany has had a modest experience. But the very fact that terrorism could disturb the cravedfor order in the German state which toiled to an economic miracle, caused an enormous binge of self-doubt, soulsearching analysis, and even doomsday utterances.

women — had delivered in their seven compulsively liberal in terms of police actions, grappled with the challenge of tighter security measures. Naturally, the nations victimized by Hitler and the Nazis twitched.

The sight of armored vehicles, coils of barbed wire, fresh-faced young police bearing guns and checking i.d. cards, along with the Bundestag's fierce debate over anti-terrorist legislation, made some of WestGermanys neighbors shudder.

This bothered many thoughful Germans who have prayed and worked for the strength and success of the 29-year-old Federal Republic, and don't want to see it cruelly assaulted as in Weimar times.

A distorted opinion of the Federal Republic is painted abroad, Gunter Grass declared during the worst of the Schleyer affair, a picture that's often filled with hatred, as if people abroad do not wish to take cognizance of changes in the Federal Republic...a democracy has grown up here.

A Dutchman, Prof. H.W. Von Der Dunk of Utrecht, pooh-poohed the alarm over the outbreak of, and reaction to, terrorism in West Germany, as pharisaism. He noted that terror ism is no West German speciality, and came down hard on leftists who charged West Germany would use Fascist tactics to combat it. The professor cited West Germany's liberal educational policies and the fact that 60 percent of the population was born

But 60 percent or whatever, all

Hence, it doesn't take much to arouse identity pangs. Germans want order and democracy. In Weimar times, they had none of the former, so they lost the latter. When they got order and prosperity from Hitler, they also got a war which killed 10 million of them, and destroyed their country.

Now, like members of Alcoholics Anonymous, they view that one drink of excessive order as perhaps fatal, so they fret about it constantly.

Students charge that airport searches. American style, are a step toward Naziism and that the government is out to crush the universities. One young professor told me that because he had visited the Soviet Union, he was sure his career was severely damaged. A young woman, holding a good government job, said that because of terrorism, she is afraid to say anything positive about the Communist East German government. A substantial number of German young people, while deploring terrorist killing, complain that the government should spend more time studying why the killers became terrorists, than in developing techniques to cope with them. The progressive left here is a bunch of cry-babies, says Prof. Erwin Scheuch of Cologne University. They want a revolution with civil service protection, and retirement with honor at age 60. They are small-town Bab-bits — credit card revolutionaries.

The students are sulking now, he told me. The suicides of their heroes took the wind out of them. This country has an awful lot of reserve loyalty from people who want the nation to suc-

Between 1917 and 1947 the Germans suffered two horrible wars, devastating unemployment, the defeat of their first democracy during Weimar, and seduction and consequent destruction by Hitler.

In the 30 years since, the Germans survived the Berlin blockade and constant Soviet threat, and went on to build an economic miracle and a working democracy. But the Germans don't have full self-confidence yet, and there always seems to be a dark cloud over these remarkable

Anti-psychotic drugs: How bad are side effects?

By LEW SCARR Copley News Service

It is generally agreed that the single most important breakthrough in psychiatry in the last 25 years has been the introduction of antipsychotic drugs.

These are powerful tranquilizing drugs known as phenothiazines or neuroleptics, which effectively block hallucinations and delusions and permit patients to function relatively normally.

They are the treatment of choice by the majority of American psychiatrists who care for people suffering chronic schizophrenia or acute psychotic breaks.

It is estimated that 250 million people have been treated with fects were, physicians found that they phenothiazines throughout the world. It is not known exactly how they work, but they modify activity at all levels of the central nervous system.

The drugs have been given the major credit for reducing the resident populations of mental hospitals in the United States from about 600,000 in 1955 to less than 300,000 today.

The most notable of these mind medicines are Thorazine, Stelazine, Prolixin, Halidol and Mellaril.

But as quickly as they were administered to moderate wild fluctuations of the mind, they created undesirable side effects, the usual fringe liability of powerful drugs. Still, as frightening as the side ef-could prescribe other drugs to mask them and cause them to disappear entirely by reducing the dosage or eventually withdrawing them

Also, the physicians were quite willing to trade off side effects for marked psychic improvements.

Patients, too, were willing to live with convulsions, tics, spasms, nausea, a shuffling gait, drooling and symptoms resembling Parkinson's disease if it meant staying out of hospitals.

But now that there are growing reports of more and more serious illnesses and some sudden deaths attributed to the drugs, many physicians are beginning to wonder if the dosage required to make the shizophrenic functional may not be enough to destroy the human.

Too, an insidious disorder called tardive dyskinesia has cropped up. It is a drug-induced problem that acts like Huntington's chorea and is often irreversible.

Dr. Sydney Walker III, director of the Southern California Neuropsychiatric Institute in La Jolla, Calif... is critical of the psychiatrist who writes a prescription for a face and limbs, cheek-puffing, lipphenothiazine at the same time he smacking, chomping or chewing of writes one for Cogentin or Artane in the jaws, tongue movement, in-

"But the problem," Walker said, neck. "is that what the drugs are bringing out may not really be tardive but an patients who develop tardive early Parkinson's disease or early Wilson's disease (a liver disorder).

"Using drugs indiscriminately does not make sense. But it is the case rather than the exception, and it is becoming the standard of care."

At present there is no known treatment for tardive dyskinesia. other than taking a patient off the drugs completely.

Symptoms include slow, rhythmic and involuntary movements of the hopes of offsetting tardive dyskinesia. voluntary movement of the arms and

Studies show that the incidence of dyskinesia after long-term phenothiazine treatment ranges between 5 and 55 percent.

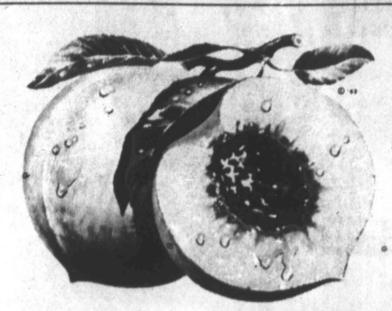

It is possible that in this country alone, 50,000 people might develop tardive brain damage in the next year

It is true, Joy Horowitz reports in Human Behavior (May 1978), that tardive dyskinesia can be reversed if found early enough and if preventive measures are taken.

Horowitz quotes Dr. George Crane, a leading authority on the disorder:

"If you are aware of the condition and you take prompt, corrective action as soon as this condition develops, tardive dyskinesia can be reversed.

Spontaneous action often pre-planned

By FRANK CORMIER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Presidents and their families sometimes do things in public on the spur of the moment, but it's not always easy to tell what's spontaneous and what's pre-planned. When President Carter went to West Berlin last weekend, a woman approached the outdoor platform where he was standing and waiting while his remarks were translated into German for his audience.

The president stepped from beside his bullet-resistant rostrum and reached down and smilingly accepted flowers.

or pre-planned?
If it wasn't planned in advance, it was a breach of normal security procedures. Presidents aren't supposed to accept bouquets from strangers, unless arrangements are made in advance - particularly in terrorist-conscious

The relative rarity of spontaneity in such situations was emphasized in Wiesbaden, West Germany when an Army major approached the president as he was about to leave and expressed a desire to give Carter a plastic white

A White House advance agent intercepted the major and announced: "The President can't accept that. It wasn't part of the plan."

So Carter accepted it any way, which proves even presidents don't always adhere to the scenarios prepared for

Presidential assistant

Hamilton Jordan was questioned in West Germany about prospects for an exchange of American-held prisoners for Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky,

Jordan acknowledged, eagle - symbol of the at least in jest, that this was correct but added, by Robert Strauss, 'Midge doesn't want to

Jordan, the most powerful of presidential assistants, referred to Margaret "Midge" Costanza, who long resisted top-level demands that she vacate her office closest to the president's private quarters when the senior staff was expanded a few months ago

During Carter's visit to the West German capital of Bonn, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance scheduled a meeting with reporters that was an on-the-record briefing tion, Strauss insisted the

in an effort to dispel critgotiator.

As the hour for the Vance session approached, one reporter after another got up and walked out the only exit - right beside Strauss' platform.

After at least half a dozen had paraded past him toward the exit, Strauss interupted himself to comment dryly, 'I'm going to empty this joint pretty soon."
After all that, Vance cancelled the meeting with the reporters.

In final negotiations for a seven-nation ecoto coincide closely with nomic summit declara-

French Premier Valery Giscard d'Estaing suggested this might be acceptable if the trade negotiators - and he was staring directly at Strauss — wanted to brag on themselves.

Strauss responded with one of his favorite stories involving base-ball Hall of Famer "Dizzy" Dean, a pitcher out of the Ozarks.

"It ain't bragging if you've done it," Strauss quoted Dean as saying

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market turned mixed today, erasing the morning's Spoint gain.

At noon, the Dow Jones index of 30 industrial stocks was unchanged at 840.70. But advances led declines by about a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchangelisted issues.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 15.49 million shares in the first two hours of trading, against 12.71 million at noon Wednesday.

Although many forecasters are predicting an economic downturn toward the end of the year, investor hopes have been buoyed somewhat by healthy second-quarter corporate profit reports. In addition, spending on durable goods and housing has continued strong, possibly because of buying in advance of expected price hikes. With inflation predicted to reach about 7 percent this year, consumers are spending because they have has no confidence in paper money or politicians anymore," said Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. Stovall also noted traders have been encouraged by suspicions that theFederal Reserve may have decided against further credittightening policies for the present.

Airlines, which have been recording earnings gains on booming passenger traffic and which have been placing sizable orders for new planes, were among the most actively traded Big Board issues. Pan American led the most-actives, up 1/4 at 7%, while Eastern Airlines rose 1/4 to 14. UAL Inc. rose 1/2 to 35. Eastman Kodak was down and was ahead 3½ in the previous session. Polaroid, after a published report said the giant computer maker may be near the top of the industry in growth over the next year.

Negotiators for 19,600 striking Philadelphia employees reached tentative agreement today that could end a week-long walkout. But wildcat strikes by some New Orleans garbagemen and some of Washington's 4,500 bus and subway workers continued to disrupt life in those cities.

And the threat of a nationwide postal strike starting at 11:59 p.m. today hung over residents of cities.

ing 18,500 policemen reached tentative agreement after six days of disruptive protests by off-duty Here is a brief look at the labor disputes:

NEW ORELANS — With the odor of uncollected trash beginning to spread through some neighborhoods, a few three-man crews took trucks out to make pickups today. But other wildcatters refused return-to-work orders from the mayor, a judge and their own union leaders. Mayor Ernest Morial, who had threatened disciplinary action against anyone who defied his orders said: "A handful of troublemakers are preventing the others from working. That's what it boils down

The strike started Tuesday over complaints about broken down trucks. Garbagemen here are paid an average of $30 per route, and many work only one route a day. If no truck is available, workers must wait for a truck or go home without pay.

PHILADELPHIA — Protesters were to vote Friday on a proposal to end their strike against the nation's fourth-largest city, which has been growing filthier by the day because of uncollected trash and unswept streets.

The strikers — who include garbagemen, recreation department personnel and health department workers - were not expected to return to work before the vote.

Issues in the strike by members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees had been demands for a guarantee of no layoffs and the same 9 percent wage hike given

WASHINGTON — Massive traffic jams at bridges leading into the nation's capital from Virginia followed a wildcat strike today that shut down Washing-ton's subway and 60 per cent of its bus service. The Metro system has about 500,000 riders, many whom use a combination of bus and rail service.

Bullock pleads guilty to drunk driving charge

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Comptroller Bob Bullock voluntarily appeared in County Court at Law No. 3 today and pleaded guilty to a first offense charge of driving while intoxicated.

A spokesman for Bullock said the comptroller was assessed a $500 fine and given a 10-year probated sentence. The judge also probated $225 of the fine for one year.

Bullock was stopped in the early morning hours of July 11 in north Austin by two patrolmen who said he drove over a curb several times. Bullock said he&had "a few beers" at a party elebrating his 49th birthday. He had not been scheduled to appear for arraignment on the charges until July 25.

Odessa man sentenced

ODESSA - A 19-year-old Odessa man was sentenced to 99 years in prison Wednesday morning after a 161st District Court jury found him guilty of the aggravated rape of an Odessa housewife on Dec.

Donnie Ray Mosley was sentenced after the eightman, four-woman jury deliberated for about 30 The only persons called to testify during the trial

Tuesday were three presecution witnesses. These included the victim, a neighbor and the Odessa police detective who investigated the case.

Defense attornies presented no witnesses.

Mosley was originally tried on the aggravated rape charge in 70th District Court before Judge C.V.

Milburn on June 21. Judge Milburn declared a mistrial at that time after the district attorney read the wrong indictment against the defendant.

NEW YORK (AP) — Equal Rights Amendment opponent Phyllis Schlafly said today that if Congress extends the deadline for ratification of the proposal, the ratification votes of 28 states may become invalid.

'The contract between the federal government and the states was in specific terms," she told a news conference here. "To change those terms is a violation of contract."

The 1972 congressional resolution which sent the proposed amendment to the states for ratification specified that state endorsements must be voted "within seven years." Mrs. Schlafly said that, of the 35 states which have ratified the amendment, 28 set the same time limit.

"Ratification by those states would be nullified by a bill that changes the terms of the contract," she said.

The House Judiciary Committee voted Tuesday to send the House a resolution extending the deadline for ERA ratification by three years and three months. The ERA deadline currently is March, 1979. Ratification by 38 states is required to add the amendment to the US Constitution.

Teacher has right to see records

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A school district employee has a right to a copy of a superintendent's memorandum concerning him, Attorney General John Hill said Wednesday.

Hill said, however, that the employee does not have a right to copies of the school district's communications with its lawyer. Hill's legal opinion went to Superintendent Gordon Cockerham of the Lancaster Independent School District.

"We do not believe that the governmental employee's special right of access to information in his personnel file extends to information protected by the attorney-client privilege, even if the subject of the correspondence relates to the employment relationship," Hill wrote.

The superintendent's memorandum mentioned expected litigation by the employee, and the district's lawyer told Hill it should not be made public.

"This memorandum does not relate directly to pending or contemplated litigation, but to the facts and circumstances out of which the litigation might arise," Hill said, in ruling the memo should be turned over the employee.

BRACKETTVILLE, Texas (AP) -The television producers didn't want too much from Happy Shahan, only a measly 500 Longhorn cattle for the filming near here of a Western mini-

That would have been no problem back in the 1870s, when millions of the rangy, rugged beasts were being driven thousands of miles to supply most of the nation's beef.

A century later, however, the television assemblage makes up the largest single herd of rare Longhorns since the days of the storied cattle drives, claims Shahan.

The lengendary, flesty beasts, which thrived among rattlesnakes and cactus in barren South Texas and easily endured harsh 2,000-mile trail drives, were no match for fenced-in pastures and the progress of the rail-

They nearly became extinct by the 1920s, as cattlemen turned to less hardy breeds that fattened faster, to trudge thousands of miles to Kan-sas railheads.

"They were just almost gone. There were only a few left," said Shahan, who owns a sprawling Southwest Texas ranch. "They're coming back, though. This is the largest herd of Longhorn cattle in modern history, since the days of the cattle drives."

The Longhorn has begun re-emerging in the American cattle industry, where its hardiness, disease resistance and ease in calving make it perfect for crossbreeding with Charolais, Angus, Herefords and other breeds, said Shahan.

There are more than 8,000 purebred Longhorns now, compared to less than 400 in the 1920s. Shahan said more than 10 million were driven up cattle trails to market from 1865 until Shahan provided his herd of 243 Longhorns — one of the largest in the world — for the television project. Thirteen other cattlemen added their Longhorns to bring the total to 520.

The cattle are insured for $520,000 during the filming. Shahan, president of the Texas Longhorn Breeders Association, estimates that they are worth more than $2 million

"The cattle get cranky in the sun," said Alex Beaton, producer of "The Longhorns" segment for NBC's 25hour mini-series, "Centennial." He added tongue-in-cheek, "They're not unlike Hollywood extras, except I think cattle are easier to handle.

The two-hour segment, depicting a cattle drive to Centennial, Colo., in the late 1860s, is being filmed this week in 100-degree temperatures on a dust-choked Southwest Texas ranch. It was those cattle drives that brought Texas' cattle boom of the late 1800s. Impoverished former Confederate soldiers found it relatively easy to get in the cattle business — just capture some of the millions of wild

Longhorns that were descended from the cattle brought by Spanish conquistadors and toughened by 200 years on the range.

"No animal can take care of itself on the range better than a Longhorn can. A Longhorn can starve any other breed to death on the same range,' said Shahan. "These cattle developed their own way of breeding and protected themselves."

By the 1920s, however, fewer than 400 survived, kept as a hobby by a few ranchers. Congress appropriated $3,-000 in 1927 to purchase some of the surviving Longhorns for a protected herd at the Wichita Wildlife Refuge in Oklahoma. Another protected herd was started a few years later at Fort Niobrara National Wildlife Refuge in Nebraska.

New law favors easy exemptions

JERUSALEM (AP) -The Israeli Parliament passed a controversial bill today making it easier for religious women to get exemptions from compulsory military service. The opposition Labor Party called the bill discriminatory and predicted it would lead to military manpower

Israeli women are drafted at age 18 for 24 months. Most serve as secretaries or in communications, although a few have joined a new tank program.

Previously, women demanding exemption on religious grounds were examined by rabbinical boards. The new amendment requires only that women sign an affidavit asserting that they abide by Jewish dietary laws and do not travel on the Sabbath.

TEXAS

BOSTON (AP) - When a man has a sexual problem, his wife probably knows about it, but the man rarely recognizes his wife's own problems, according to a published study of 100 "happily married" couples.

One-third of the women surveyed said they had difficulty maintaining excitement during intercourse, but only one husband in seven thought their wives had this problem.

The study of 100 white, middle-class Christian couples was conducted by the University of Pittsburgh's De-partment of Psychiatry and published today in the New England Journal of had difficulty getting aroused, and 46 of those questioned had difficulty reaching an orgasm. The women also said they could not relax during sex and complained of too little foreplay and too little tender-ness after intercourse.

The most frequent problem among the men, listed by 36 of them, was premature ejaculation. Sixteen percent said they had either difficulty getting an erection or difficulty maintaining one.

The average age of the women surveyed was 35, the men 37. The researchers cautioned that the 100 couples should not be considered

The study says that although wives may suffer their sexual dysfunctions in silence, sexual difficulties are apt to color the couple's relations.

"Among all the possible kinds of sexual problems it is clearly the wives' sexual 'difficulties' that was the least well tolerated," the study said.

'Indeed, they seem to have a ripple effect on all sexual relations. Although it was once thought it was the man who wrote, produced and per-formed the sexual scenario, with the wife acting the role of 'extra,' at least within this better educated, more affluent population, the wife emerged as the major influence on the course of the drama.

"If the woman was unable to relax, felt 'turned-off' or was approached at the wrong time, all sexual relations suffered as a result."

DEATHS William L. Kerr

Services for William L. Kerr, 74, of 1200 Country Club Drive will be at 10:30 a.m. Friday in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. Officiat-ing will be the Rev. Sam Hulsey, Burial will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Fairview Cemetery in Pecos directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Kerr died Wednesday at his home after a lengthy illness. Kerr, a practicing attorney for about 50 years, was the senior member of the law firm Kerr, Fitz-Gerald & Kerr.

He was born to Martha Jane and Monroe Thompson Kerr June 5, 1904, in Van Horn. His parents had settled in Eastern New Mexico and West Texas in the 1880s. He married Frances Hubbard in 1929.

Kerr attended Pecos public schools, Texas Christian University, The University of Texas and Cumberland University School of Law in Ken-

He was admitted to the practice of law in Texas in 1927, and, except for the years he was a state district judge, Kerr practiced law with his father-in-law, W.W. Hubbard, in Pecos from 1927 until 1944.

Kerr had served as county attorney of Reeves County and district attorney and judge of the 109th District Court, which included Reeves, Ward, Crane, Winkler and Andrews counties.

In 1944, he began his law practice in Midland. At first, he was a member of the firm of Whitaker, Turpin, Kerr, Smith & Brooks. Later, he became a member of the Kerr, Fitz-Gerald & Kerr firm.

Kerr was a former member and president of the Board of Regents of the State Teachers Colleges of Texas, former president of the State Bar of Texas and a past member of the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association. He was a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, fellow of the American College of Probate Counsel, fellow of the American and Texas Bar Foundations and was a member and former vestrymen of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. He is listed in the biographical dictionary, "Who's Who in the United States.'

Kerr was a past district governor of Rotary International and was a member of the Downtown Rotary Club. He was a former member of the Parents Advisory Council of Washington and Lee University.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Wm. Monroe Kerr and Ted M. Kerr, both of Midland; a sister, Nell Kerr Prickett of Lubbock, seven grandchildren, a great-grandchild and a niece.

The family has requested that any memorials be sent to the West of the Pecos Museum at Pecos or to the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame in Mid-

THURSDAY, JULY 20, 1978

MR. AND MRS. ANDREW TAYLOR STEPHENSON have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson were married in San Marcos July 15, 1928, and the couple repeated their wedding vows Saturday in the home of a daughter, Shirley Stephenson, with the Rev. Vance of the Free Methodist Church officiating. Other children of the couple attending the celebration were Mrs. Thomas Godfrey and Mrs. Robert G. Young, both of Midland; Taylor Stephenson of Clayton, N.M., and Jack Stephenson of Snyder. Also in attendance were the honoree's 10 grandchildren and a great-grandchild. Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson moved to Midland in 1975 from San Antonio, where they had lived 47 years. Stephenson is a retired employee of Exxon Refining Co., and is still active locally as a contractor.

Metric morass may muddle menus

By JEANNETTE BRANIN Copley News Service

Women of America, you are about to lose a national treasure in the morass of metries - your standard measuring cup of eight ounces or 16 tablespoons.

This was pointed out by Joyce Rubash, metric coordinator for the National Association of College and University Food Services.

"For some ridiculous reason, which no one can properly explain, the metric cup will hold 250 milliliters, as opposed to the standard 240 milliliters," she said in an interview. "That is going to be a 4.2 percent increase in volume.

'On the other hand, the metric tablespoons and teaspoons will be increased only 1.4 percent in volume over the standard teaspoon and tablespoon.

"That isn't going to make much difference in the average recipe for four or six servings, but consider the imbalance it is going to cause when food service industries attempt to multiply a recipe so that it will serve

Tui Flower of Auckland, New Zealand, also discussed metrics. Flower (her given name, Tui, is the name of an Australian bird) is food editor of the Auckland Star, and the legend has grown around her that she alone was responsible for converting New Zealand to the metric system overnight.

"No, it was not accomplished overnight at all," she said. "We spent about eight years. And there was some confusion. There's no use in thinking that going metric in this country is going to be dead smooth.

"Road signs were changed to kilometers overnight. Other conversions followed more slowly, but it seems that even the unwilling to learn are getting used to the words. Standardization will be as significant to the cook as to the engineer.'

The three main periods in the changeover to metrics, said Flower, were a year or two spent in early decision-making; a period of perhaps four years that was a "no-man'sland" given to studying factors beyond their control, such as available equipment; and then a year or two before the final conversion, during which she printed a simple metric recipe once a week.

"It's an extended exercise," she said. "The teaching process has to continue. But it will be a change forever for our 3.5 million people."

Rubash, who is putting on a campaign that might be called "save the standard measuring cup." said she will welcome the conversion to metric.

'But we are about to be conned out of a basic tool, the measuring cup, and we are being robbed of the world's greatest treasury of cookbooks. There are 3,600 cookbooks in this nation, all written for standard measurements."

Rubash reminded that our money system in this country is metric:

'Everybody knows there are 10 dimes in a dollar, and metric is just that simple. Automobile manufacturers are giving more metric specifications than non-metric measurements because otherwise the European Common Market won't accept them for sale. A major tire manufacturer is giving tires in metric size, and only recently I bought jeans for my son that were marked with centimeters."

Rubash said mercenaries are out to take advantage of an unsuspecting public in the "metric morass." Salesmen, she said, are promoting kitchen scales, declaring that they will be necessary in kitchen metrics.

"That's nonsense," said Rubash, who also is food service director for Rice University in Houston. "Scales will not be needed."

ning was a near necessity. But with all the developments in food technology, processing and distribution, canning is not nearly so

Surveys in widespread sections of the nation tell the same story-not since the victory gardens of World War II have families gone in so heavily for home preservation of food as they have in the last several years.

These same surveys also suggests that many families are rediscovering that, in addition to economy, there is something basically satisfying and rewarding in preserving food. And canned foods can be enjoyed at a later time when they are needed more. Also, fruits and vegetables can be available all year long, not just when they are in season. And most importantly, the home canner has complete control over which, if any, additives are put in the food-and home canned foods can be made to meet the specific tastes of the family.

Recognizing the increasing importance of home canning, two wellknown companies, Imperial Sugar of Sugar Land, and the Ball Corporation, Muncie, Indiana, each with over a hundred years of experience, have joined together in a program this summer intended to encourage more people to try their hand at home cannhighlight of the program is the Ball Blue Book which is being made available in a special offer from Imperial. Although they have been a reliable source for recipes and cookbooks since 1915, Imperial felt the 30th edition of the Blue Book, encompassing more than 70 years of canning knowldege, technical experience and scientific study, would be more helpful and meaningful to today's home canner.

This newest edition of the Blue Book is bigger and more extensive than any of the 29 editions published since 1909. Included in the full color book are illustrated step-by-step instructions on canning fruits, vegetables, jellies, jams; yield charts; processing times; types of equipment needed and instructions on the three basic canning methods: steam pressure, boiling water bath, open kettle.

The 30th edition of the Blue Book also contains a complete section on preserving foods by freezing. While freezing certainly isn't anything really new, develpments in convenient home equipment and containers have made freezing practical on a wide

This edition also has a special section on canning for special diets. And a new feature in this issue includes dual recipe measurements-both English and metric.

Here are home canning recipes for peaches, strawberries and sweet corn. They are typical of the more than 250 tested easy-to-follow recipes in the Blue Book STRAWBERRY LIME JAM

CANNED PEACHES

Canning of peaches may be done through cold pack or hot pack methods. The cold pack methods is the most desirable way to can evenly ripened peaches. Following is a stepby-step method for cold packing peaches .:

1. Select firm, evenly-ripe peaches. Sort, wash and drain just enough peaches for one canner load. Fill water bath canner half full with water. Heat.

2. Prepare medium or light sugar syrup. For medium syrup combine 3 cups sugar and 1 quart water into a saucepan. (Use 2 cups sugar and 1 quart water for light syrup). Cook until sugar dissolves. Keep syrup hot until needed, but do not let it boil down.

3. Using wire basket or cheesecloth. dip peaches into boiling water in canner ½ to 1 minute to loosen skins. Dip into cold water. Drain.

4. Cut peaches into halves, pit and peel. Drop halves into salt-vinegar solution (mix 2 tablespoons salt, 2 tablespoons vinegar in 1 gallon cold water). Rinse peaches.

5. Pack peach halves, cavity-side down, layers overlapping, in hot jars. Leave 1/2-inch head space. Cover peaches with boiling hot syrup (approximately 1 to 11/2 cups per quart) leaving 1/2-inch head space. Remove air bubbles in jar by running a flat, non-mentallic kitchen utensil gently between fruit and jar. Add more syrup, if needed.

6. Screw jar lids down evenly and tightly. Stand jars on rack in canner with water covering jars. Water in canner should be hot, but not boiling.

But every detail was lovingly crafted. Each dish was beautifully garnished. Cold food was served quite cold. On cold dishes. Hot food was piping hot, on hot dishes. Waiters noiselessly set down and removed plates. Simple, small bouquets of fresh flowers ; from the Broadmoor's greenhouses) were on each table. Wine and water glasses sparkled. Linen was spotless.

Dinner started with lobster cocktail, garnished with small spears of white asparagus. The dainty portion was dressed with a rather sweet ginger mayonnaise, instead of the usual tomato and horseradish dressing. Uerdigen, when asked for the recipe (he was asked for every one), said it was homemade mayonnaise with a little chopped fresh ginger, lemon juice and salt and pepper. That's as close as he could get to exact proportions.

Then came the consomme. "This is essence of pheasant," the waiter said. A perfectly clear consomme, with tiny bits of pheasant, and a hint of sherry. We wanted the recipe. "Start with 10 pheasants," Uer-digen said. (Actually, you could substitute pheasant in any consomme recipe, clarified with egg white, then add some sherry to taste if you want

The main course was a small filet mignon, topped with a slice of pate de foie gras and a mushroom sauce and served in a basket of fried, shredded potatoes. Side dishes were fresh, braised celery, peas and carrots and rice, served in a tomato half.

The potatoes are fried in small nesting wire baskets with long handles. They're available at cookware shops. The potatoes are spread into one basket (about 3 or 4 inches across at the rim). Then the second basket is pressed onto them. This forms a hollow "nest" of potatoes. They're fried in deep hot oil until brown and erispy, then drained and served immediately. (Potato baskets also can be used to serve vegetables, or creamed seafood.) Broil the filet until rare, then place it in the basket, top with pate (if you like it), and a little mushroom gravy.

Tarts are quiche cousins

By DARLA WELLES Copley News Service

Gourmet cook and food writer James Beard gets his back up occasionally about the widespread practice of calling anything baked in unsweetened custard in a pastry shell

Quiche, according to Beard's purist viewpoint, is a name that should be applied only to that classic dish of bacon and custard originated in the Lorraine region of France. Originally the dish did not contain the shredded cheese that has come to symbolize quiche to most contemporary cooks and diners. So in that respect, at least, quiche is certainly a misnomer for these cheese pastry dishes. CHEESE 'N' ARTICHOKE TART

Dissident's plight forces his wife into spotlight

By SALLY QUINN The Washington Post

'She was very hard for me to sell. Before the trial I had to like jump through hoops to get publicity for her. Now they're tearing me apart. You have no idea what they're doing to her. She collapsed on me once when she was here before.

-Irene Manekofsky, Union of Councils for Soviet Jews

WASHINGTON - You have seen her many times now, her soft sad doe-like features are etched in memo-

An Israeli Audrey Hepburn, she has graced the screens of practically every TV set and the pages of every newspaper in America over the past week as she met with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Vice President Walter F. Mondale, and appeared on major television talk shows. Occasionally a tear would slide down her pale cheek and she would choke with sorrow over the plight of her husband, Russian dissident Anatoly Shcharansky.

Always you would hear the same plea, her feathery voice barely audible, her shoulders hunched over with the weight of her problems.

"I am shouting for help, I am not a politician. I am not a diplomat. I am just living on hope. Hope that you will do something to help. All I want is for my husband to be saved.

The scenes are kaleidescopes of pathos:

Avital (nee Natalya) Shcharansky being met at the airport and told of her husband's sentence, Avital testifying before Congress, Avital posing for pictures with ambitious politicians, being kissed for the photographers (prints made up in 24 hours to be sent back home to constituents), Avital being talked to in reverent tones, Avital accepting awards for her husbands bravery, accepting promises of help and sympathy Avital enshrined.

Avital Shcharansky, an international media star.

The plight of the Soviet Jews, an international media event.

Anatoly Shcharansky, an international hero.

All of this is true. Anatoly Shcharansky is a martyr. He was injustly arrested, falsely tried and mprisoned for 13 years on trumpedup charges, according to Western egal authorities. He is a victim of Soviet political oppression as are many Jews and many non-Jews who eek to dissent or to emigrate. His wife Avital is deprived of her husband, forced to travel the world seekng help and publicity for her husband's cause, unable to resume a normal happy life.

Anyone who had no sympathy for these people and their situation would

But the Avital Shcharansky story is more complicated than this spotlit morality play, more touching in some ways and, in others, more manipulative of public emotion. It is a case study in the politics of sorrow, the packaging of martyrdom.

To begin with, Avital Shcharansky and her husband Anatoly - or "Toli" as he is called - knew each other only a little over six months before she had to leave for Israel. They were married for one day before her departure. It has been four years since she last saw him, a long time for a 27-year-old woman to carry an emotional burden like that.

She was preceded to Israel by her brother, Mikhail Stiglitz, 29, an archeologist who soon became involved in right wing politics and is said to be grooming himself for public office. He joined the Gush Emunim (Bloc of theFaithful) party, of Israel's radical right, further right than the party of Menachem Begin, comparable in American politics to the right-wing spectrum that runs from Ronald Reagan to the John Birch Society. The intensely religious and nationalistic Gush Emunim have settled much of the disputed occupied territories and its members have been conducting a sit-in in Begin's office for the last month protesting Israeli "flexibility" on the Arab-Israeli peace negotitions. When Avital Shcharansky arrived in Israel, she was a bewildered unhappy and very shy 23-year-old woman who had no family left but her brother.

Now, says Avital Shcharansky, "My brother spends all of his time with me and my problems. He is very close friends with Anatoly.

"My brother is not only helping me, he's a fighter like me. When I am in Israel he thinks and plans for me. What I should do. Now I talk to my brother every day. For me it is impossible to do it alone. I do it with his help. And I think God helps us, too." For the past several years, especially since Shcharansky's arrest, Avital has been dispatched all over the globe by her brother, who often travels with her. Her journeys have been financed by fund-raising efforts both abroad and in the United States by the Union of Councils for Soviet

In Israel, Stiglitz has tried to keep his sister away from the establishment parties and has done the same here, so much so that the 39 Jewish members of the establishment organization, the National Conference on Soviet Jewery, have had no connection wth Avital Shcharansky's latest trip here this week.

Some of these establishment Jewish groups, including the American Jewish Congress, are upset by Avital's any bad publicity. They are also quietly afraid that the attention to the Shcharansky case might anger the Soviets and erode recent gains made regarding the Jewish emigration problem. (The number of Jews alowed to emigrate has risen recently from about 1,000 a month to 2,000 a month, after a precipitous drop from the approximately 3,000 a month permitted several years ago.)

It was only after urgent communications between Israeli embassy here in Washington and Begin's office in Israel that Stiglitz reconsidered and allowed his sister to be greeted by Ambassador Simcha Dinitz, at the airport, and to allow the Israeli Embassy to hold reception for her Mon-

Finally, it is her private life that has caused the most comment by those who have dealt with her over the past year on her several visits to Washington. They talk about her keen understanding of the press and how her displays of emotion often come at a proper time, appearing fresh and touching and extraordinarily effective without seeming phony or super-

She is sometimes compulsive about dietary laws and sometimes ignores them. She sometimes speaks good English, yet other times, relies heavily on a translator.

An Isareli film crew which travels with Avital Shcharansky and the crew is led by a young man named Mordecai Gal. He says he is making a film about her and has been traveling with her for a year now. He says he has a grant for his film and that the CBS-TV show, "60 Minutes," has asked to buy it. With Avital he is protective and gentle. With him she is cheerful and gay. They tease each other and spar affectionately. He advises her, talks to her, kneels beside her chair as she testifies before Congress.

These appear to be the few relaxed moments of a woman who has found herself the object of the fears and anxieties of millions of people all over the world, a symbol who has protected herself with the only survival techniques she understands, the role of the martyred wife.

How could you blame her for sighing deeply, hunching her shoulders over, tearing up her eyes and saying in despair, "My life now is not normal. I only hope someday I can live a normal life."

She is exhausted to the point of collapse. She cries, sometimes simply out of fatigue. She is clearly not a natural public personality.

"It is against me," she says helplessly of her new-found fame. "I don't like traveling. I am private. I do this to help. But every time I must give my private story to people - I think if my husband comes back," she says, in a rare admission of doubt, "I will never speak again. I will close my lips forever. When I began this campaign I wanted to tell people he was in prison. It should be enough. But it's not enough. People don't believe."

In Russia she was an artist, a weaver and a restorer of antique Persian rugs, a quiet and lonely profession, which she adored.

Lydia Voronina, another dissident now living here, once loaned her apartment to Shcharansky after his wife left Russia. Voronina says this about her friend Avital.

"She is a person who has a very thin soul. It is very easy to break it. She's very sensitive, very human. Even small problems bother her, but it seems to me she is the proper person to be put forward for all this publicity, for the cause. Because she has no other purpose except to save her hus-

Voronina's story is also less than happy. Some three years ago her husband, who is Jewish emigrated to Israel. They had been advised to divorce before they applied for visas and did so. He went to Isrel to wait for her, but several months ago, he married someone else. She understands and, better than most, can foresee the problems facing the Shcharanskys even if they are reunited. "I am sure that they will be together again if he gets free," she says, and I'm sure they will have a very difficult time after they meet. Everybody who is human will understand. But it doesn't mean that they won't have a chance to understand each other and to talk to each other.

"Toli told his mother yesterday that he had destroyed Avital's life. And when I knew him after she left he was always talking about her. They both feel guilt now. But they shouldn't. It is not their guilt. It is the Soviets'

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, Fla (AP) - Elaine Farley is a choir singer. But when she is not singing at the First United Merthodist Church, she's working at the Clay County Sheriff's Department with a .38-caliber Smith and Wessson on her hip.

Miss Farley, 23, said she has been in the choir since she was in the seventh grade. When she first started school at Florida Junior College, she ma-jored in music, but then decided she wanted to keep up with music on her own. At St. Augustine's Flagler College, she took up psychology and sociology, and later attended the police academy at St. Augustine Technical

WASHINGTON — First lady Rosalynn Carter wears it. Television anchorwoman Barbara Walters

Publisher Kay Graham wears it. Actress Jennifer Jones wears it.

Even Jean Stapleton, who plays TV's most un-fashionable Edith Bunker in "All in the Family."

It's Ultrasuede, and it's become de rigeur for women in corporate board rooms, at the White House, in high diplomatic circles, in Congress, in Hollywood and at high-priced neighborhood afternoon teas.

Ultrasuede goes anywhere there is money or It divides the successful from the semi- and not-so-successful. You wear it if you've really made it on your own or you've made it though your husband. Ultrasuede is chic. It is "in." What "classes" it is its price. Skirts start at over $100; dresses usually over $300. Material retails at about $40 a yard. It's a luxury fabric. But that's not what sells it.

Crush it and it won't wrinkle. Pull it and it won't bag. Wet it and it won't spot. Brush it and it won't pill. Rub it and the color stays. Soil it and you have one of its biggest pluses.

Simply throw it in the washing machine, then tumble dry. It's ready to wear. No dry cleaning, no ironing needed.

Earthworms solving landfill problems

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - They can be baked, used as croutons in salads or as garnish for an omelet. But earthworms may not appeal to every palate — and they are quite useful in aiding the environment.

Daniel Doerflein, manager of Appalachian Ecosystems, Inc., an eight-month-old Beltsville, Md., company that grows and distributes earthworms, said that, while worms are edible, they are more valuable to a community because of their voracious appetite for organic waste products.

"Worms can help alleviate landfill (garbage dis-posal) problems because they can turn organic waste into usable fertlizer," he said. "They are an ecological wonder.'

Some companies have been conducting landfill experiments with earthworms. One, North American Bait Farms of Ontaro, Calif., has test sites near its plants. The company has been feeding the worms biodegradable trash — that is, refuse such as food products that have been decomposed by natural biological processes. The worms have been consuming up to 75 percent of it.

So it appears that the lowly earthworm, heretofore used chiefly as fishbait, could help cities cope with their garbage problems.

For would-be entrepreneurs, growing earthworms is relatively effortless. Farmers, lawyers, college students and doctors have made extra money in the earthworm business and one famous earthworm grower, Hugh Carter Sr., cousin of the president made a fortune as an independent earthworm grower in Plains, Ga.

Jerry Cunningham, a customer service employee of Allegheny Airlines, said it only takes him about es each day to care for his 12 earthworm beds, which are each about 8 feet long, 3 feet wide and 10 to 12 inches deep. Each bed contains about 100,000 worms.

When starting out in business, the entrepreneur buys 100,000 earthworms from one of the distributing firms for $695, and after that he is on his own.

"All I do is water the beds every other day and every two or three months I spend about half an hour harvesting the beds," Cunningham said.

When harvesting, Cunningham scrapes off the top three or four inches of soil, because the top layer contains the largest worms, which move to the Ultrasuede is just that - an "ultra" suede. It looks and feels like suede, but it goes beyond it in price as well as lack of need for special care.

It's a synthetic — 60 percent microfiber polyester and 40 percent non-fibrous polyurethane, according to Jennifer Butler, fashion and promotion coordinator for Spring Mills, the exclusive Ultrasuede distributor in the United States.

The Japanese came up with the Ultrasuede idea and hold over 100 patents on its secrets of production. Toray Industries of Japan introduced it in the United States in December 1971.

Spring Mills won't say, but apparel industry experts estimate that now over 1.5 million yards of Ultrasuede at a wholesale cost of $30 million are bought annually by the American fashion industry. The top designers use it.

Halston, Bill Blass, Molly Parniss, to name just three, but the list is very long. Halston was the first to fashion Ultrasuede into a simple shirt dress.

Today, Ultrasuede has every shape: jackets, jumpers, pants, skirts, blazers and dresses, long and short. It's gathered, it's wrapped, it's buttoned, it's

And Ultrasuede has moved into men's fashions - mainly blazers and jackets. But it is turning up everywhere. Ultrasuede is into luggage, handbags, shoes, boots, belts, jewelry boxes and umbrella covers. You can even coat your walls with it or cover your bed with it.

There are some drawbacks.

A saleswoman at one of Washington's highestpriced stores had this complaint: "It doesn't last forever. It's not a summer fabric. It can wear thin. And it won't last for 20 years like a good wool skirt." Still, for the vast number of American women and growing number of men - Ultrasuede works. And it means you've arrived - or at least that you are getting there.

New lens help men see 'red'

By BOB CORBETT Copley News Service

Millions of Americans, mostly males, never see the world in its true

They can't appreciate the beauties of nature, the turning of leaves in the autumn. They can't perceive the warning red and green, stop and go, signs at street corners.

They are the so-called colorblind. Color deficient would be a more certain colors.

It has been estimated that more than eight million males are affected by the genetic condition in the United States alone.

Now, it seems, that many of these people, although not all, can be helped back into the world of color, according to Dr. Joseph Lilley, an option exists. optometrist.

The help, he said, comes in the form of a new blood-red hard ontact lens called X

The lens, developed by Massachusetts optometrist Harry I. Zeltzer over the past 15 years, is just now becoming available to the public and it seems to be working in most cases, Lilley said.

Worn only on one eye, the lens seems to correct the basic genetic defect of vision by teaching the brain to perceive colors in a new manner, Lilley

Colorblindness, he explained, is a genetic defect, passed on through the mother, but affecting males predominantly. Some 6 to 8 percent of males are afflicted, he said, as compared to less than 1 percent of females. The defect, Lilley said, alters the balance of the millions of rods and cones in the retina of the eye which transmit color and responsible for the primary color — red. green and blue — to the brain, where they are mixed to provide true

The result, he said, is that the color message to the brain becomes disturbed. The colors become confused blended with others and hidden from real sight. The most conflict in this situation, Lilley said, is the opposition of red and green perception, where one or the other color is hidden. To lesser extent, he said, the same condition applies to blue and yellow and black and

Old art of brick carving revived

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've had some sort of fungus infection in the nail of my big toe for several months. The nail has become black and brittle and out of shape. I've been using an ointment that is supposed to kill the fungus-for about three or four weeks, actually-but my nail isn't a bit better. Do you know what I ought to do?-Lisa W

Dear Lisa: These fungus nail infections, which seem to be getting more frequent, can be extremely stubborn. And local treatment with an ointment may not help or can require a long time before showing any results. It may help if part or all of the nail is removed. This sounds worse than it is, as the nail is probably pretty loose by now anyway-and it grows right back. And the procedure is one that a podiatrist can do very easily and painlessly in just a few minutes. There is also an oral medicine which acts against the fungus infection. But it is apt to have some unpleasant side effects. I think it would be best if you checked with your foot doctor-or, if you do not have one, with your regular doctor-and see what course he suggests for you.

Dear Dr. Solomon: During the past month, I've noticed two or three people who perspire very slightly when they start eating. It's just a little on the face-generally the upper lip. Is this something unusual?-F.H.

Dear F.H.: No-in fact it is quite common, and has a name: gustatory sweating. It's likely to happen right after food is put into the mouth. Spicy foods often trigger this reaction. Gustatory sweating may also result from certain kinds of nerve damage, but these are special cases.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Just the other day, the little son of a friend of mine was badly hurt when he was thrown against the windshield of a car in an accident. I remember that you've stressed how important it is to have Welfare children in automobiles. Couldn't a law be passed to make this man-

Amid prescription scandal, Dr. Bourne on furlough

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

WASHINGTON (AP) - White House drug abuse fighter Dr. Peter G. Bourne is on paid furlough today after conceding he put a fictitious name on a prescription for an emotionally troubled employee who wanted to keep secret that she was getting the much-abused sedative Quaalude.

All day Wednesday, the White House press office, Bourne and other principals refused to comment about disclosure that police in suburban Virginia are investigating the matter and have charged a former roommate of Bourne's employee with a

At 7:45 p.m., White House Press Secretary Jody Powell handed out a three-page statement by Bourne and announced that the 38-year-old psy-chiatrist had requested the leave "because of my desire to clear my name as soon as possible and my concern that these implications do not interfere with the effective operations of the White House."

Bourne said: "I have consulted legal counsel and believe that what I have done was neither legally nor morally wrong.

But Paul Ebert, commonwealth's attorney in suburban Prince William County, Va., said he was considering prosecuting Bourne on either a misdemeanor or felony charge but would await completion of the investigation before deciding what to do.

According to Bourne's statement and that of his administrative assistant in the White House west wing, Ellen J. Metsky, here is what hap-

Ms. Metsky came to Bourne concerned about emotional problems which had caused her difficulty in sleeping. She asked that her name be kept secret.

Bourne gave her a prescription on July 7, made out to a fictitious name, for 15 tablets of the tightly controlled sedative methaqualone, also known by the brand name Quaalude.

Ms. Metsky found she did not have time to get the prescription filled and asked a former roommate, Toby M. Long, to get Bourne's prescription

It was learned that Bourne wrote the prescription in the name of 'Sarah Brown.

Ms. Long, a 26-year-old physical therapist, was arrested July 11 in suburban Woodbridge, Va., by Prince William County police when she tried to have it filled near where she

It was learned that Bourne's prescription did not specify which of two pill sizes to use, and the druggist became suspicious. He called the telephone number on the prescription and was unable to reach Bourne because the number was out of date. He then called police.

During a second briefing later Wednesday night, Powell disclosed that Bourne has written a total of 10 prescriptions for White House staffers, but only Ms. Metsky's methaqualone prescription was made out in a phony name.

Of the 10, five were for substances controlled by the federal government,

Bonds set for Chicago residents

HOUSTON (AP) — Bonds of $2 million each have been set for two Chicago residents accused of trying to smuggle 12 pounds of Mexican heroin into the United States at Hidalgo, Texas, according to the regional director of U.S. Customs here.

Albert F. Bazemore Wednesday said the heroin seized Tuesday night at the International Bridge was worth more than $9 million in street sales. Taken before U.S. Magistrate Cruz Tijerina were Angel Ruiz Flores, 52, and Louisa Flores, 45. Bazemore said the drug was found in 10 packages, each wrapped in cellophane and placed in secret compartments built under the 1976 Oldsmobile that was seized after the Powell said both Ms. Metsky and Jordan also got antibiotic prescrip-tions from Bourne. Others who received prescriptions did not waive their confidentiality, Powell said.

Ms. Metsky, who began working with Bourne in July 1975 during Carter's presidential campaign, was described by a campaign worker, who declined to be identified, as having recently broken up with a boyfriend. "Maybe she was very upset about that and that's why she neeeded tranguilizers," this woman said.

Ms. Metsky said she knew that records are kept of prescriptions and sought to keep her name secret, because "I know of the controversies in which Dr. Bourne becomes engaged regarding drug policy. His ... name as well as my name are well known in the area of drug enforcement. Consequently, I feared that my name would become known to those who might attempt to influence that policy."

Bourne, who said he is licensed to practice medicine in the District of Columbia and three states, said: "She and I were concerned about the protection of her confidentiality both with regard to her taking medication and to the creation of a record anywhere that she had been treated by a psychiatrist."

He cited canons of medical ethics emphasizing the confidentiality of doctor-patient relationships and said, "I took what I believed to be legitimate precautions The use of a pseudonym is one way of protecting confidentiality."

However, in Chicago, a lawyer for the American Medical Association, Bruce Nortell, said that "generally it is not lawful for a prescription to be written that contains any falsified

In Topeka, Kan., Dr. Herbert Klemmer, chairman of the ethics committee of the American Psychiatric Association, said, "I don't believe this question has ever come up before and I'd prefer to sit on that a while before making a judgment.'

Ironically, Bourne is a drug control expert

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dr. Peter G. Bourne once was described by his close personal friend, President Carter, as "perhaps the world's foremost expert on drugs...their use, the effect on the human body, how they might be controlled.'

Ironically, it was Bourne's prescription of the highly controlled drug Quaalude, using a fictitious patient's name, that has landed him in hot water at the White House and possibly within the medical

He returned from Vietnam, where he served as a U.S. Army research psychiatrist, "totally disen-chanted with the war." He helped found Vietnam Veterans Against the War and demonstrated in the streets of Chicago during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

When he met Jimmy Carter the next year, Bourne was a pro-civil rights, pro-abortion liberal running a mental health center in an Atlanta ghetto, and Carter was running for governor of Georgia.

Carter admired his work and, once he was elected governor, hired Bourne as his health and mental health adviser. Bourne later became chief of the state's much-praised drug abuse program. Bourne was the first man to suggest, during a plane ride with the governor in 1971, that Carter run for the presidency. From 1972 to 1974, while he was working as a drug abuse adviser in the Nixon White House, Bourne was cultivating the Washington politi-cal establishment in behalf of his friend in Georgia and helping map Carter's successful strategy for winning the Democratic presidential nomination.

After Carter entered the White House, he appointed Bourne as a special assistant at a salary of $51,000 a year, while Bourne's socialite wife, Mary King, was named deputy director of ACTION, the federal volunteer agency, at $50,000 a year.

From a small, windowless office in the White House basement, Bourne concentrated on a wide range of health issues, including national health insurance, drug abuse and world hunger, and stirred repeated controversy.

When Killanin, in a recent letter, rejected giving financial responsibility to the private businessmen's group, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley reacted by asking the City Council Tuesday to withdraw the city's Olympic bid.

Killanin said Wednesday that he thinks Bradley acted too hastily.

Killanin's message went to Robert Kane, president of the USOC. The IOC president said he agreed to a 21-day extension and added: "I do feel that the mayor's reactions were somewhat rapid and consider that you should both review my letter with care."

John Argue, head of the Bradleyappointed private Olympic committee that would accept the financial responsibility for Los Angeles, had sent a message to Killantn asking for a face-to-face meeting and an extension of the July 31 deadline to Aug.

But the message from the Irish lord appeared to reject face-to-face talks requested by officials of the private corporation.

Killanin said that the IOC could meet with USOC and Los Angeles officials in Europe in the next month to discuss the situation.

Councilman Ernani Bernardi tried without success Wednesday to get the city council to take action on the mayor's recommendation to withdraw the Olympic bid. Bernardi said the council was "stalling around because they are hoping there is some way of working this out."

In other Olympic developments, New York Governor Hugh Carey said he was ready to meet with the USOC to explore the possibilities of his state as a location for the 1984 Games.

In Munich, Mayor Erich Kiesl, whose city staged the 1972 Summer Olympics, said his city would be interested in hosting the 1984 Games if Los Angeles drops out.

LA city council may woo Rams

By The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - City officials have launched a last-quarter effort to keep the Rams, hopeful that the at-tempt will be helped by Mayor Tom Bradley's decision to ask the City Council to withdraw the city's bid for the 1984 Olympic Games.

The City Council unanimously approved a measure by Councilman Robert Farrell asking for $9 million in federal funds to modernize the old Memorial Coliseum, present home of the National Football League team.

Bradley's director of the city Office of Economic Development, Brad Crowe, immediately added the proposal to a list of projects for which Los Angeles is seeking aid.

COLISEUM GENERAL manager Jim Hardy said that withdrawal of the Olympics bid "would have a lot to do with the Rams staying here."

"The Olympics were never a factor in the bargaining and they're not a factor now," said President Carroll Rosenbloom. "Whether the Olympics are coming to the Coliseum had nothing to do with our negotiations with the Coliseum Commission.

Others believe, however, that a final decision by the city to drop out of the Olympics bidding would make it slightly more likely the Rams will

Rosenbloom, unhappy with the old Coliseum, has been negotiating with Anaheim officials about moving to the Big A, present home of the baseball Angels. Rosenbloom also has been investigating sites in Carson and in Inglewood. The Rams' lease on the Coliseum expires after the 1979 sea-

The federal money would come from grants available from the Commerce Department's Economic Developent Administration.

FARRELL, WHO represents the area around the stadium, said Coliseum renovation qualifies for the federal aid because it is "a public works project directed at the prevention of

Crowe, speaking for the Bradley administration, said "we estimate the economic impact (of the departure of the Rams) in the area around the Coliseum to be great."

The Rams have never publicly itemized stadium improvements they would require as a condition of staying. But lowering the playing field, to accommodate thousands of additional seats between the goal lines, is be-lieved to be a high priority. If the Olympics were held here, the field could not be lowered before hand because the added seats would occupy space needed for a running track.

Hardy said that he expected the Coliseum Commission, which operates the stadium, to move quickly if the city in fact drops its Olympic

"We will just have to get together with Rosenblom and USC and UCLA and say, 'Let's decide on what improvements we can go ahead with right now," Hardy said.

"BY RIGHT now I mean after this football season. The season is weeks away and we couldn't very well be knocking seats out of the place at this

As for lowering the field, Hardy said, "If we've got the money to do it - and the commission has already expressed themselves as wanting to move ahead with these things as soon as the Olympics are out of the way - I would say at the end of the next football season we ought to be able to move ahead with it."

Hardy also said that federal funds might be available to help finance stadium improvements. Luxury suites and an admission tax are other possible sources of revenue, he said.

The Coliseum announced plans for luxury suites about two years ago but demand was insufficient to warrant going ahead.

"I'm inclined to think they would sell now," Hardy said. "Business people who two yers ago were opposed to it now say, 'Hey, we'd like to buy those things."

SOURCES CLOSE to the Rams said the club considers two stadium improvements essential: lowering the field and moving the press box from the stadium rim to a lower level and installing luxury suites at the same level to help finance improvements.

In addition, the team is said to want new seating in front of existing stands at the partially open east end, to bring fans at that end closer to the field.

Shreveport blanks Midland's Cubs

SHREVEPORT -- Righthander Fred Breining was too tough for the Midland Cubs Wednesday night.

The Shreveport pitcher, just back for the Class AAA Columbus team, scattered four hits in blanking the Cubs, 7-0, for the Captains in Texas League baseball action. The win evens the five-game series at one game each.

Tonight, Rafael Vasquez (11-5), the ace pitcher for the Captains and All-Star starter last week, will face Midland's George Riley (0-0). Riley joined the Cubs from the AAA Wichita team last week and pitched five innings of scoreless ball in his first outing against Tulsa earlier this

The Captains called upon the long ball to tumble the Bruins with first baseman Bob Walterhouse hitting a pair of homers while teammates John Dean and Dave Littleton added solo

It was Dean's two-run homer in the first inning off loser Darrell Turner, that got the Caps off to a good start. Walterhouse powered a two-run homer in the sixth inning while Littleton had a solo blast in the eighth as Shreveport scored two more runs.

Stampeders score win over Lions

CALGARY (AP) - The Calgary Stampeders scored on their first two possessions, then hung on to edge British Columbia Lions 23-21 before 25,606 fans at McMahon Stadium Wednesday night.

Rookie James Sykes run for three yards and veteran receiver Tom Forzani grabbed a nine-yard pass from quarterback John Hufnagel to give Calgary its first two touchdowns.

Rookie running back Larry Key grabbed a 10-yard pass and veteran Jimmy Young hauled in a six-yarder from quarterback Jerry Tagge for the B.C. touchdowns, converted by Lui Passaglia, who also kicked two field goals of 45 and 19 yards and added an Men may get in line; Nancy Lopez wants to marry

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Okay men! Start planning ahead if you want to marry an attractive young lady whose quick stardom on the women's pro golf tour has produced a bank account that could help insure financial stability.

"I think I'm just like any other girl my age. I want to get married and have children," said Nancy Lopez, the 21-year-old rookie whose record five consecutive victories this year shot the popularity of women's golf to its highest level in history. "It's not in my immediate plans," said Lopez as she prepared for today's opening of the 26th Women's U.S. Open Championship at the Coun-try Club of Indianapolis, "but hopefully within the next four years I'll get

"I wouldn't want to have my husband and children following the tour like some families," she said. "I'd like to have them at home and spend a lot of time with them."

But she doesn't plan to leave the women's tour. In fact, this year's leading money winner with $135,564 in official earnings said she thinks she can play competitively for 15 more

"I don't think I've reached my peak," she said. "And I don't know when I will. I try not to think too far ahead. I find I'm getting a lot older quicker than I like.

Success on the golf tour is bringing additional rewards and making additional demands on the spare time of Lopez, who hopes to improve on last year's runner-up finish in the Open in her final tournament as a rookie.

"I've learned to say 'no' when I feel something interferes with my golf," continued Lopez. "Golf has put me where I'm at. I have to give all my time to it ... I always have a decision to make when someone asks me to do something. So far I've agreed to do four commercials.

Dallas veterans report to camp

"I turned down a chance to be on the Today show because the timing wasn't good for my schedule. I'm going to be on the Johnny Carson show ... I'm having a lot of fun and I'm kind of sad that my rookie year is going to be over."

Still, Lopez' face is not that familiar

"I remember flying a few weeks ago," she said. "I don't fly first class. I fly in the back like everyone else. I was sitting next to someone who was reading an article about me. My picture was on the cover. The man turned to me and said, 'She's a pretty good golfer, isn't she?""

"A woman on the same plane learned I played golf. She asked me, 'Do you know Nancy Lopez? She's on the LPGA tour too.''

Lopez said she doesn't think the winning score in the Open will be low, although two-time winner JoAnne Carner predicted that if someone drives well it might take a record low score to finish first in the $100,000, 72-hole tournament on the 6,115-yard, par-71 course. Louise Suggs set the record with a 284 at the Bala Golf Club in Philadelphia in 1952. A 287 by Mickey Wright in 1959 and Donna Caponi Young in 1970 are the closest anyone has come to the record.

"You have to position your iron shots and the greens are slower than they usually are in an Open," said Carner, about the course she and 152 other women will be battling in the tournament which ends Sunday.

"This is a fair golf course for all players," added Carner, who finished third, behind Lopez and champion

Hollis Stacy last year. "There are not too many bunkers and some short hitters may be able to bounce the balls onto the greens."

Rhubarb spices Boston's 8-2 win

By The Associated Press

There's no place like home for a good baseball rhubarb. And they cer-tainly had a good one in Milwaukee Wednesday night.

This particular argument took place between Milwaukee catcher Charlie Moore and home plate umpire Rich Garcia in the midst of a game-turning rally that helped the Boston Red Sox beat the Brewers 8-2. Ooh, was Moore mad.

Enraged when Garcia called George Scott safe on a play at home in the seventh inning, Moore dropped the ball and charged the umpire. Milwaukee pitcher Lary Sorensen had to restrain the catcher with a full Nelson

"I thought when Scott slid, he missed the plate," said Moore. "So I dove after him as he came back for the plate and tagged him on the hand way before he got back. But the um-pire said he got in the first time around because he called him safe

Garcia concurred that Scott was in fact safe the first time and that he didn't have to come back to make

"When Scott slid by the plate, he caught the edge with his hand," said Garcia. "I signalled him safe immedlately. The play was over there. I don't know why he came back, and obviously he would have been out then if he hadn't touched it the first time. But he did.'

Moore was burned twice on the play, for while he was arguing with Garcia he forgot to call time. Butch Hobson sneaked all the way around from first base to score the fourth run of the inning and the Red Sox soon had enough runs to win with a 4-2 lead.

Orioles 10, White Sox 3 Rick Dempsey and Doug DeCinces drove in two runs each to key a six-run rally in the fourth and Jim Palmer won his first game in more than a month as Baltimore defeated

The triumph snapped a four-game losing streak for Palmer, 11-8, who had last won June 18 against Oakland. The loss was the sixth straight for the slumping White Sox.

"I haven't been pitching well lately, but 10 runs makes it a lot easier," said Palmer. "You can throw those tworun home run pitches in the ninth and not worry about them.'

the fifth and seventh innings. With two out in the fifth, Mickey Rivers singled and stole second before scoring on a base hit by Thurman Munson to make it 1-0. Consecutive singles by Mike Heath, Willie Randolph and Rivers in the seventh gave New York a two-run cushion.

Angels 3, Indians 0 Struggling Nolan Ryan finally won a game after seven misses and regained the American League strike-out lead as he paced California over Cleveland with a six-hitter.

Ryan, 4-8, had dropped five games in succession since beating Chicago on May 23. He struck out 10 batters, reaching double figures in strikeouts for the seventh time this season and 111th time in his career. The hard-throwing right-hander surpassed New York's Ron Guidry with his 138th strikeout in the fourth inning, and added four more for the night.

Royals 11, Rangers 4 Frank White doubled and tripled and drove in three runs, Fred Patek collected three singles and two stolen bases and Darrel Porter hit two doubles as Kansas City whipped Texas. Clint Hurdle had two singles and lashed a two-run triple amid a seven-run outbrust in the third inning to chase starter Ferguson Jenkins, 9-5, who hadn't lost to the Royals since Tigers 5, A's 4 Jason Thompson's two-run single in a three-run seventh inning rallied Detroit over Oakland. Lou Whitaker's hit to deep short scored Phil Man-kowski from third base and tied the score at 3-3. After Matt Keough, 6-6, walked Rusty Staub to load the bases, Thompson drove in the deciding runs with a ground single through the right side of the infield.

Rose keeps streak alive

By The Associated Press

It was probably the game's least important hit — and yet it was clearly the biggest one of all.

One thing the Cincinnati Reds didn't really need in the ninth inning Wednesday night was a baserunner. After all, Ken Henderson had hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning and George Foster had unloaded a grand slam in the eighth, all the clout the Reds needed to wallop Philadel-

But with nobody on and one out to go in the top of the ninth, there was still the matter of Pete Rose's hitting streak. Rose had grounded out twice, had struck out once and in the eighth inning had received a controversial walk. With that, it appeared Rose's streak would end at 31 straight games, six shy of Tommy Holmes' National League record.

But that walk started what turned out to be the Reds' biggest inning and it brought him back to the plate one inning later. "That's what happens when you play with a great offensive team," he said later.

first with a bunt single, acknowledg-ing the cheers of 45,608 Phillies fans. The streak was still alive!

The first pitch to Rose from Phils' reliever Ron Reed wound up rolling tantalizingly down the third base line. "It was a perfect bunt," said third baseman Mike Schmidt, who tried a bare-handed scoop of the ball but pitch from Tug McGraw and, on 3-1, hit a liner foul - barely - down the right field line.

On the 3-2 pitch he appeared to swing and miss for a strikeout - but both home plate umpire Dutch Rennert and first base ump Lee Weyer said he's checked his swing for ball

Did the walk bother Rose? Obviously not. "Hell, I started a four-run inning," he said.

Ken Griffey's single, an intentional walk to Joe Morgan and Foster's fifth career grand slam then turned the nail-biter into a rout. It was Foster's 23rd homer of the year, tying him with Boston's Jim Rice for the major league lead. Glants 7-5, Cubs 4-7

In San Francisco's first game, Larry Herndon collected four RBI with a trio of singles to make Vida Blue a 13-game winner, but the Cubs rebounded in the nightcap with Larry Biittner's three RBI on two singles.

The split left the Giants two games ahead of the second-place Reds in the West and Chicago three back of the front-running Phillies in the East. Ellis Valentine hit his 17th homer of the year, a two-run rocket in the fifth inning, and Warren Cromartie unleashed his first career grand slam and fifth homer of the season to cap a five-run ninth that sent Montreal past the Braves in their opener. Jeff Burroughs' sixth-inning two-run homer, No. 13 for him, was all Atlanta needed in the finale as Buddy Solomon and Dave Campbell teamed for a four-hitter against the Expos. Astros 8-1, Mets 3-2

Bob Watson ripped a two-run single in the first inning and hit his 10th homer of the season, a solo shot, in the third to propel Houston to its firstgame victory over the Mets' Pat Zachry, 10-6. Luis Pujols had a pair of RBI for the Astros in the opener.

New York managed a split on the seven-hit pitching of Craig Swan and Willie Montanez's two-run double in the first inning of the finale. Pirates 6, Dodgers 3

The Pirates pounced on Doug Rau for three runs in the second inning and Dave Parker hit a two-run homer in the fifth to snap Los Angeles' three-game winning streak, drop the Dodgers into third in the West, 21/2 games back of the Giants and inch third-place Pittsburgh within four of the Phils in the East. Reggie Smith hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers.

Padres 5, Cardinals 3 first inning with an RBI triple and Gene Richards had an RBI double to cap a two-run fourth in San Diego's victory. All the scoring came off St. Louis right-hander Roy Thomas, making his first major league start.

Simpson's trade aided Don Shula

Martin lays down law to Yankees

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The law, according to Billy Martin, was neatly typed on 3½ pages of New York Yankees letterhead and placed in each cubicle of the team's dressing room at Metropolitan Stadium.

Rules governing "1) personal appearance, 2) personal conduct off the field, and 3) conformance with team requirements for reporting, travel and lodging" awaited the team after a 2-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins Wednesday night. Included in the text were specifics of the team curfew, "1 a.m., except after night games," and a prohibition of group card games after curfew at the risk of a $100 fine per partici-Martin said the memo was not an attempt to create stricter team discipline. "No," he said, "The rules just have to be spelled out in case the players have a grievance and go to the players' association. This just spells the rules out so that everybody knows what they are." Martin already has made one rule very clear: "All I ask of a player is that he hustles and obeys orders. They'll never have trouble with me if they do that."

That statement appeared aimed at the ears of Reggie Jackson, who reportedly spent the second day of an enforced five-day exile with friends in San Diego. Martin suspended the controversial slugger without pay late Monday night for bunting - ignoring orders to swing away - during New York's 9-7 loss to Kansas City.
"His lawyer has been notified, and he (Jackson) has been notified, by registered mail, that we expect him in Chicago Sunday, and there's no reason not to expect him to be in Chicago Sunday," said Yankees General Man-ager Cedrick Tallis. "We don't expect any problems, and everything is going to be normal, I certainly hope

There was a mild return to normalcy Wednesday night. Right-hander Ed Figueroa pitched a six-hitter for his first victory since June 13, and was supported with RBI singles by Thurman Munson and Mickey Rivers as fourth-place New York won for the third time in 12 games. There was an argument; that might have been most normal of all. Umpire Durwood Merrill called Minnesota's Rich Chiles safe at first on what seemed to be the back half of an inning-ending double play in the fifth. Figueroa, enraged, charged the umpire and bumped him twice. "I don't know whether he bumped me or I bumped him," said Merrill, who said the foot of New York's Chris Chambliss was not on the bag when the relay arrived.

Figueroa, 8-7 and troubled by muscle problems in his pitching arm, admitted bumping the arbiter. "I lost control of myself," he said, "but I hadn't won a game in so long, I wasn't going to let the umpire foul me up. I haven't pitched this good in two months and I got mad.'

That's nothing new where the Yankees are concerned. In a season marked by outbursts of temper, that seemed very normal, indeed.

to Saviano

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking a bite at a hand that fed him, Nick Saviano reached the third round of the $175,000 Washington Star Interns-tional Tennis Tournament and is basking in the glow of the biggest victory of his career.

Saviano upset second-seeded Brian Gottfried 7-6, 3-6, 7-5 Wednesday, and afterwards gave Gottfried a lot of the credit for his being on the circuit.

"Last summer, I was thinking about quitting," said Saviano. "I was really depressed about a lot of things," including a lack of home life and a losing record that had all but dropped him from the national rank-

Then he bought a house in Florida, giving him a stable anchor in the nomadic world of the touring pro. It also gave him a chance to practice with Gottfried and Harold Solomon, both of whom live in southern Flori-

"They helped me a great deal. On days when I couldn't get two balls in the court, they'd still practice with me, even though I wasn't giving them good practice," he said.

The improvement was evident Wednesday. Saviano served and volleyed aggressively, and kept control of his temper on critical points. Gottfried made the errors. "I'd get rolling and then he'd do something to stop the momentum," Gottfried said.

Saviano said he was confident the victory wouldn't disrupt his friendship. "Brian knows it's just business out there," he said.

Gottfried was the only seeded player to lose in the first two rounds of the tournament although ninth-seeded John Alexander of Australia was fighting a stiff challenge from Terry Moor of South Africa. Their match was halted by darkness after Alexander won the first set 7-5 and lost the second 7-6.

Wednesday was a good day for veterans. Both Australian Ken Rosewall and Arthur Ashe looked sharp, Rosewall defeating Erick Iskersky 6-4, 6-1, and Ashe destroying Ivan Molina of Columbia 6-1, 6-2.

Gottfried falls Herrera's future cloudy DALLAS (AP) - Efren Herrera's "I guess they feel because he's future with the Dallas Cowboys remained cloudy Wednesday as the deadline approached for the All-Pro kicker to report to the Cowboy's pre-season training camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Herrera, the Cowboys' leading scorer last season with 93 points, wants more money in a new contract. He made $32,500 last season and the Cowboys reportedly have offered him a contract of $40,000 this season with annual increases of $5,000 up to $55,-000 four years from now.

"I haven't been in contact with anyone from the Cowboys since a week ago Friday (July 7)," said Buck Woy, Herrera's agent.

"It's more or less a take-it-orleave-it situation. They've been stealing him for four years already," Woy Mexican he doesn't need as much money, or he can't make that kind of money anywhere else."

Woy, who said he's the only one who knows where Herrera is now, said the National Football League average salary a year ago was $55,000. He said Herrera wouldn't be making that much until four years from now. The average salary for kickers last season was $41,506. Will Herrera, a Dallas resident who is now in the Los Angeles area, report to training camp by the Thursday deadline? "That's not my decision," Woy said. "But it is something we are going to have to talk about in the next 48 hours. His chances of improving his situation with the Cowboys are not

may be searching for a kicking spe-cialist if Herrera doesn't show, said Tuesday, "I don't get involved in the negotiations of contracts, but after talking with Efren the other evening I didn't come away with the feeling that we're any closer to having the thing resolved than we were a week or so ago."

Woy said the Cowboys have Herrera "between a rock and a hard place" because the team could impose a $500 per day fine for each day of camp the kicker misses.

"It makes it very difficult for us. They say it's a substantial offer, a great offer," Woy said.

The agent said several clubs are interested making a trade for Herrera, who last season made 18 of 29 field goal attempts and 39 of 41 points after touchdowns.

Nicklaus wanted week off

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Jack Nicklaus is at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club for the $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic which started today, but the game's top attraction made it clear that he would rather be somewhere else — home.

Nicklaus accepted his responsibility to play on the tour this week, because the event has been given designated status, but he didn't like it. A designated tournament means the game's top players have to partici-

The others here, starting with money leader Andy Bean, are runnerup Tom Watson and in order, Lee Trevino, Nicklaus, Hubert Green, U.S. Open champion Andy North, Hale Irwin, Bill Kratzert and Lon Hinkle.

Nicklaus is fresh from winning the British Open, and has twice won on the tour this year. He won at Whitemarsh in 1964 and 1965, and in eight appearances here has earned $83,159. No wonder he likes the course.

The 38-year-old Nicklaus understands the concept of the designated tournament - to help bolster places that need golf's top draws to insure financial stability. He alone can be the difference between profit and Nicklaus likes to play in 12 to 15 tournaments a year, including the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA. Although there are only two designated events this year - there will be only one in 1979 - Nicklaus doesn't like to be told when he has to Tom Weiskopf, 12th on the money winning list and another of the game's leading attractions, also reluctantly accepts the philosophy of the designated tournament. He also said he wouldn't be at Whitemarsh if it wasn't a command performance for the Pro-fessional Golf Association.

Weiskopf suggested that the PGA not have a designated event after a major such as the British Open. "I was over there (Scotland) preparing a week before the British said Weiskopf, who finished Open," said Weiskopf, who finished tied for 17th at St. Andrews. "And usually after I come back it takes a week to be myself."

Thomas hides blood disease

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) - But for the sensitivity of 3-year-old Kimberly Nicole Thomas, the world might know what blood disease has stricken Pittsburgh Steeler cornerback J.T.

Steeler President Dan Rooney announced Wednesday that the 27-yearold starter will miss at least one season while undergoing treatment for the ailment.

But details of the disease were withheld because Thomas wants to protect his daughter. 'She's at an impressionable age.

This is his only concern," a team spokesman said. "We're respecting his wishes. He just doesn't want to talk about it," Rooney told reporters at training camp. He said the disease is not fatal.

He added, however, that Thomas, a 6-foot-2, 196-pounder who whose interception clinched the 1974 playoff game that led to Pittsburgh's first Super Bowl victory, may be gone longer than one year.

"We're not saying that he'll never return, but that's something he has to

Sockers shakeup Los Angeles, 4-3

By The Associated Press

Jean Willrich is finding happiness by giving in San Diego — assists, that Willrich assisted on three early goals Wednesday night as the San Diego Sockers defeated the Los Angeles Aztecs 4-3 in a North American Soccer League match and chalked up their third consecutive victory. Besides running off to an early lead, the Sockers are starting to run away with the American Conference Western Division, opening up a 43-point advantage over the California Surf. Julie Vee started San Diego off by taking a pass from Willrich and beating Los Angeles goalie Bill Mishalow at the 23-second mark. Willrich then set up goals by Heinz Stickel at 8: 47 and Walker McCall, his 10th goal of the season, at 13: 36.

Bob McAlinden put the Aztecs back in the game with goals at 16:58 and 19: 39 as George Dewsmit assisted on both goals.

But San Diego's Klaus Wolf added a goal at 48:21 before the Aztecs' Pete

Coyne closed out the scoring at 67: 41. Both teams had 37 shots, and goal-eepers Allan Mayer of San Diego and Mishalow each had seven saves.

In other NASL action, Detroit edged San Jose 4-3 in overtime, Toronto bested Portland 3-1; Fort Lauderdale blanked New England 2-8; Colorado suprised Dallas 3-1 and Chicago ipped Tampa Bay 3-2.

Tark goes to the movies

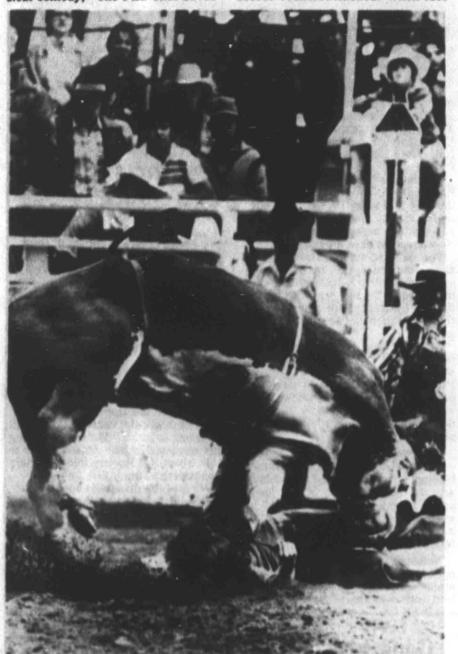

First, the bad news for the NCAA: Jerry Tarkanian, the University of Nevada-Las Vegas coach, is putting together a basketball team in semisecret in Burbank (Calif.) and come closer — the players are getting paid big salaries! Limos pick them up each morning and chauffeur them to practice, they get meal money, their hotel rent is paid, they don't even have to make their own beds or go to

Now for the good news: None of these guys will ever play a minute of college ball for Tark the Shark. One of them is Dr. J himself. Another is Meadowlark Lemon, and their presence is legit. Tarkanian is technical advisor on a basketball movie, a musical comedy, "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh," the story of the Pittsburgh Pisces, a team Dr. J leads to the championship through the magic of astrology.

The big news is that, if the NCAA had its way a couple of years ago, Jerry Tarkanian would no longer be a college coach. The collegiate athletics regulating body threw an all-court press on Tarkanian and his UNLV Running Rebels two years ago, and a condition of probation for the school was that it fire the coach.

You would have thought the NCAA wanted to take out the slot machines. The attorney general of the state, Frank Sinatra, Wayne Newton, the congressman from Nevada, Jimmy the Greek and a half a hundred pit bosses counterattacked. When last seen, the NCAA was trying to call time out. Tarkanian was claiming they had five personals already.

When Jerry Tarkanian moved from Cal State Long Beach to Nevada five years ago, it was inevitable he and the NCAA would meet in the finals. First of all, they, the NCAA, punished Cal State Long Beach posthumously, so to speak, putting them on probation after Tarkanian had left.

It was not difficult to imagine what was going through the minds of the collegiate association to have a crack coach moving into a Damon Runyon situation like Las Vegas. It was right out of "Guys and Dolls." Tarkanian moving into an institution where the 'Alumni" made its living off green felt tables and blackjack and most of them were named "Tony" or "Nick" or "Rico" or "Joe Knucks" or "Fat Tony" or "Lucky." They were afraid hotshot recruits might find Silver Cloud Rolls-Royces in their driveways' or rival coaches might find horses' heads in their beds.

None of this happened. Jerry Tarkanian pointed out Las Vegas had more Mormons than slot machines, more priests than pits. There was probably more betting on basketball in Boston than Vegas, and nobody was going to make anybody any offers they couldn't refuse. Tark had to convince mothers of 6-11 centers that they wouldn't be carried off by the entire front row of the Folies Bergere, and that nobody would hold anybody's hand over a hot stove, The town actually made a pet out of the Running Rebels, dinner shows were interrupted to flash halftime scores, and anyone caught tampering would be apt to find himself under escort to the state line by nightfall or barred from the casinos for life.

None of this convinced the NCAA, which kept waiting for Nathan Detroit or Arnold Rothstein to show up. Tarkanian was the most wanted man since Dillinger. The NCAA kept looking for his fingerprints on 7-foot basketball players.

When Tarkanian made the NCAA finals in 1977, it was considered proof positive that the dice were finally oaded. But Tarkanian regularly used to come within one basket of winning Western regional finals for the NCAA (UCLA beat his Cal State Long Beach 57-55 in 1971, and that was UCLA's closest margin on its march to the championship). Tark's junior college record had been an incredible 198-13, his Long Beach record 122-20, and his UNLV record 122-24 even with a probation.

UNLY comes off probation this year. But Tarkanian is not about to lift his sanctions against the NCAA. He proposes to sue — with a little help from his friends. If I were the NCAA,

Levin was a partner in the group,

Since then, Evert hasn't put all her energy into tennis. Before Wimbledon, she said she hoped to be able to achieve the same standard of play wihout the same intense committment. Now she's not certain.

"I almost can, that's for sure. It was that close," she said, holding her fingers about an inch apart. "A matter of two or three points. If they'd gone the other way, you'd be talking to the great champion."

BUT IT may be that a 100 percent commitment is what it will take for Evert to regain the position of No. 1. if that's the case, Evert isn't sure she'll ever be No. 1 again.

"Are you asking me whether it would be worth it?" she said. "To go back to the way I was to be No. 1 again? I don't know. Someday, maybe, it will hit me and I'll say: 'I need to be No. 1 to be happy.

Where has all the moon dust (soil) gone?

By GEORGE ALEXANDER The Los Angeles Times

It was nine years ago today that Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin gatherd up 47.4 pounds of rocks and soil from the surface of the moon and brought them back to Earth.

By the time the last Apollo crew (Eugene Cernan and Harrison "Jack" Schmitt of Apollo 17) returned from the moon in 1972, the total quantity of lunar matter transferred to earth amounted to 839.9 pounds of assorted rocks, pebbles and fine-grained soil.

According to Charles A. Biggs and Patrick Butler of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Johnson Space Center in Houston, it's all present and accounted for.

Actually some of the lunar material is absent, although accounted for, in the laboratories of scientists who are carrying out experiments on rock chips or pinches of soil.

And 30 grams, roughly the mass of a 100-tablet bottle of aspirin, is both absent and unaccounted for. The missing moon material has gone awry in the mails or in shipment. A plane crashed in the Atlantic Ocean several years ago and inside its cargo hold was a steel container containing a sample of a lunar rock, intended for a South African researcher, which accounts for some of the loss.

To the best of Biggs's and Butler's knowledge, none of the missing 30 grams was deliberately stolen Biggs is the manager of the Johnson Center's exhibit program and Butler is the curator of lunar samples.

Roughly 6,700 grams (14.7 pounds) of the material that once used to make the harvest moon shine on, have been set side for exhibit purposes and are Biggs's responsibility.

Each of the 50 state received a 1-gram lunar sample, embedded in a clear plastic container, after Apollo 11. A single gram is roughly the weight of a matchhead.

After Apollo 17, each of the 50 states, the 126 member-nations of the U.N. and eight other countries received another 1-gram sample from the federal government. Last May the U.S. sent a 1-gram sample of the moon to the People's Republic of China.

No individual person has received a gift of a moon rock, said Briggs, and one of the 12 astronauts who gathered up all of those nearly 840 pounds ever received a specimen for their private use. All gifts have been on a government-to-government or a government-to-institution basis.

About 50 lunar rock displays are traveling around the country for exhibits in museums, universities and other public institutions. These rocks range insize from 19 to 800 grams, or approximately from pecan to potato-sized specimens.

There are also a number of lunar rocks lent on long-term agreements with organizations such as the Smithsonian Institution (22 samples), the National Geogrphic Society (1), the National Cathedral (1), United Nations Headquarters (1), the Flight Research Center at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. (1), Ames Research Center south of San Francisco (3) and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. (1)

But the great bulk of the rocks and soil — 744.7 pounds — is still tucked away inside nitrogen-filled cabinets at the Houston center. It has all been studied carefully, but has never left the confines of the space center there.

Some 46.4 pounds of rocks and soil have been shipped to so-called "principal investigators" all over the U.S. and around the world for study and experimentation; all of this has been returned. And an additional 20.9 pounds is still out on loan to investigators, although these rocks and soil samples someday will have to be returned also.

Butler, who is responsible for the scientific lunar samples, said that a little more than 13 pounds of rocks and soil have been destroyed invarious chemical tests. Destructive tests, however, are the exception rather than the rule.

Along the way, the moon rocks have caused their share of incidents. "We almost lost one sample in a wastebasket," Butler recalled in a telephone interview last week. "The technicians here (at the Houston space center) were unwrapping a number of samples that had been returned to us from PI's (principal investigators) and one of them threw out a sample along with the wrapping material."

By the time the loss was discovered, custodians had already come through the receiving room and emptied out the wastebaskets. "So we all ran outside," Butler said, "and went though the dumpsters with a fine-tooth comb. We found it. So it was never a lost sample, just an almost-lost sample.

In a separate incident, a scientist who was studying and photographing wafer-thin sections of a moon rock under a powerful microscope accidentally placed a still-wet Polaroid print on top of one of those sections. The thinly-sliced moon rock stuck to the back of the print and stayed there until it was discovered-nearly two years later.

As for the widely-circulated, but poorly-documented, stories that terrestrial plants thrived in lunar soil, Butler said that it was his impression that the plants did fare a little better in the moon mix than in ordinary earthly potting soils.

ordinary earthly potting soils.

"But as I recall," he added, "it was found to be attributable to slightly higher levels of manganese in the lunar soil and the very fine-grain size of the lunar particles. Nothing magical about it, really."

particles. Nothing magical about it, really."

After dealing with the lunar materials for nine years now, it is clear that Butler has not lost his awe and sense of wonder about them.

Firearms law, jury duty top public queries

By GUY SULLIVAN

What are the questions most frequently asked of Midland Police Department and Midland County Sheriff's Department officers?

They range from queries about gun ownership to eviction to jury duty, according to Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon and Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith. Taling to the two men revealed that some of the questions asked are the same, and some are different.

For instance, Smith said people often ask him and his staff what the laws are about having firearms around the home.

He answers that poeple who feel they can safely use firearms have every right to have them as long as the weapons are kept in a safe place. Smith said people cannot allow other to just come into their home and steal property. "We cannot have a popula-tion which allows people to enter their homes and steal property, because simply to live in this world you must fight to protect your property and family."

He said he sees citizens and law enforcement officials as one group fighting against the criminal

Chief Gideon said people most often ask him if they can get a permit to carry a gun. Gideon answers, "No. The state does not issue gun permits." However, he explained that those who qualify to wear weapons in Texas include guards, National Guardsmen, private investigators and

When people ask Smith if they can get a gun permit, he, too, tells them there is no such thing in Texas. Those traveling between towns and those

Texas. Those traveling between towns and those driving around the city with rifles in pickup windows are within the law, he explained.

Sheriff Smith said people often ask if certain reasons allow them to "get out of jury duty." He said he explains his personnel are just following a court order when they issue a summons. However, his staff helps people reach the judge if it is determined they may qualify to be excused from such duty, Smith said.

Gideon said he also is often asked shout they duty.

Gideon said he also is often asked about jury duty. He answers those who ask him if they can get out of jury duty by telling them "they must take that up with the court. There are certain exceptions under the guidelines."

Gideon said people often ask him if it helps to mark their property with driver's license numbers and other identification. Gideon responded, "It sure does help us very much. We even loan people an engraver through our property identification program."

Smith agrees with Gideon on the marking of property. Smith, too, said such identification helps lawmen find missing items much faster.

Smith said citizens sometimes want to complain about a violation of law and ask if they have to get involved. He said if people do not sign a legal complaint "we can't do much." People ask Gideon's men if something can be done about snakes, rabid dogs and other such creatures. Gideon says his staff responds to all such calls. "We will do our best to help them." Smith said his staff often is asked if people must appear in a civil case. Smith says, "No. All we are doing is actually giving them personal notice to appear in court."

Gideon said his personnel often receive questions about abandoned vehicles in yards. He said there are laws governing such items and his department enforces these laws.

Smith said people often ask what a restraining order is. He tells them it is a civil court order, and not handled as a criminal matter. Smith said his deputies seldom have anything to do with restraining orders, beyond explaining the law in such cases. Gideon said his staff sometimes receives requests to evict someone who is not paying his rent. He said such people are referred to their family attorneys or to the peace justice. "That's more a civil than a criminal matter."

Smith, too, has told those asking him if someone can be evicted for not paying rent that it is more a civil matter than criminal problem. Smith said if two or more people make a written or verbal agreement, "there is no way we can move someone out or recollect the bill." go collect the bill."

Gideon said many times Midlanders ask what can they do in missing persons cases. He said his staff tries to locate the missing person. However, he added, there is no way his staff can legally detain someone if the person is 17 or older.

On a different note, Gideon said people often ask police to describe what marijuana looks like. His staff tells people and shows photographs of the illegal drug. "Many calls receive om this are from concerned parents of young people and curious

Smith says the question of reporting missing items often comes up in his office. "Yes, indeed, it is important to report missing items," said Smith. "It's still important to report everything that is stolen. It is true that the less there is to go by, the more difficult it is find and prosecute those responsi-

Many questions regarding traffic matters and regulations about loading zones recur daily in the Midland Police Department, Gideon noted. He said people are told that loading zones are good for 30-minutes while loading or unloading only. And the same zones are valid for three minutes if a driver is behind the wheel.

Smith says people often ask if it is worthwhile to purchase security devices for their homes or businesses. He tells them he sees nothing wrong with such devices. He said they are especially effective for businesses. The only problems which occur periodically with such equipment are false alarms.

"I certainly see such devices as a help to us," Smith said.

Smith said.

Chief Gideon said many times people approach his staff seeking ways to cope with either drug, alcohol emotional problems. In such cases, he said, people are referred to agencies which can help.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stuart Yetts has been making "incredible things with his magic fingers" ever since he was 3 years old, his mother reports, and his artistic talent recently paid off when the 11-year-old won top prize in a national glue-craft competition.

The Lynn, Mass., fifth-grader's prize-winning project, "Insects' World," depicts 19 insects molded in realistic detail from semi-dry glue and colorfully nainted.

His specimen box included a wasp, crane fly, black ant, queen bee, borer, earwig, termite, waterbug, horsefly, housefly, red ant, Japanese beetle, spider, roach, ladybug, dragonfly, butterfly, June bug and

Stuart, who migrated to the United States with his parents in 1970 from Liverpool, England, got the idea for his entry from a series of insect illustrations he saw in an older brother's junior high school biology

"It wasn't too hard," he says, "because glue can be molded like clay and I like to sculpture things."

The youngster, who is considering a career as "an artist, an architect, or a surgeon" also likes to paint, draw, make model ships, design costumes, take photographs, play chess and soccer and listen to classical music classical music.

As first prize winner, he will receive $1,500 in U.S. savings bonds from Elmer's Glue, which sponsors the annual contest, plus a five-day holiday in New York with his mother or father and his art teacher who supervised the project.

Theme of the competition was "See, Dream, Remember," and other entries among the 50 state finalists ranged from mobiles, dioramas and sculp-tured work to collages and dimensional posters.

The creations — made by youngsters in kindergarten through grade 8 in two divisions — included paper mache elephants, fantasy animals, ghost town and moonscape dioramas, miniature urban scenes, and even an intergalactical model.

The classroom craftsmen, responding to the free form of the contest, were particularly inventive in their choice of materials: everything from sawdust to rice, paper bags and metal shavings, with the only

All of the crafts entries, from inspiration to com-pletion, were solely the work of the students. An estimated 42,000 classrooms across the country be-came involved in the first phase of the competition as an in-school art activity.

Stuart was also named best in the grade 5-8 division of the contest among 50 state winners. Top national honors in the kindergarten through grade 4 division went to 7-year-old Annette Sabatka of Cere-sco, Neb., who created a miniature bride doll out of a glue mixture and paint.

Keith Gomillion, 13, of Jamaica, N.Y., last year's grand prize winner, took one of 10 honorable mention spots this year with a mosaic triptych representing prehistoric times, the present, and the space age. Keith used over 30,000 colored grains of rice individually glued on a wood-framed poster board to create the effects.

The space age was also on the mind of honorable mention winner Brad Skaggs, another 13-year-old, from Casa Grande, Ariz., who fashioned a futuristic model of three views of the planet earth in different phases out of glue, food coloring, paper and cardboard.

Seven-year-old Susanne Siefert, an honorable mention winner from Monroe, Conn., created a miniature tennis court scene with strings, toothpicks, rubber bands, baked clay, wood, paint, cotton

"This is my dream," she wrote on her entry form, to become a famous tennis player some day and beat Chris Evert!"

The other honorable mention winners were Susan Paucker, 13, of Los Angeles; Eugene Sargent, 11, of Pettigrew, Ark.; Lisa Meyer, 12, of St. Louis; Crista Lynn Vance, 5, of Bullhead, Ariz.; Christie Rodd, 7, of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Weston Green, 9, of Johnson City, Tenn.; and Shana La Trice Paul, 6, of Kansas City, Mo.

Migrant workers face many social problems

DENVER (AP) - Migrant farmworkers face severe financial, educational, and health problems, according to a report by the Rocky Mountain regional office of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. Regional Director Dr. Shirly Hill Witt said the report was prepared for release today.

She said the investigation showed that poverty, discrimination, and social exploitation of the migrant worker is the rule rather than the exception and has long been tolerated and supported by the laxity of governmental agencies.

The staff investigators also found abuse of child labor laws, inadequate compensatory education, and governmental failure to enforce applicable wage, housing, and sanitation laws, she said.

National Guard band to play Friday morning

The 49th Armored Division Band from Texas' Army National Guard headquarters at Camp Mabry in Austin, will visit Midland Friday morning, during which time the ensemble will play a concert in Dellwood Plaza Mall on West Illinois avenue.

The concert is scheduled for 10 a.m. and will be open to the public without charge. The band will then proceed to Odessa for a Friday noon concert. The band is currently on a 16-city concert tour that is taking it to cities in north and West Texas. The concert series will conclude with a Saturday musical event in El Paso, after which the band will return to Austin. The ensemble is directed by Chief Warrant Officer Paul T. Philippus Jr., who in civilian life is high school band director at Universal City, near The band's Midland visit is hosted by Midland's

Young actor ponders new role as top clone

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Steve Ross, a handsome young actor, has struggled to make it here for five years. He recently got the Big Break. Problem is, most everyone looks like him in his first TV movie.

It's "Clone Master." Steve plays one of 13 clones of the main event, actor Art Hindel. All were chosen by Paramount Television for their similarity in looks to Hindel.

Ross, 30, of Fremont, Neb., grinned when asked how those making the film for NBC, which hasn't scheduled it yet, described his role.

'They didn't describe it very well," he mused. "I walked in, they slapped a mask on my face and said, 'I think this one will do. Next!' Then I went and read for the producer."

Ah, show biz: Which is what Ross decided on when, after graduating from the University of Nebraska and teaching two years, he left it all to do what he'd enjoyed most in high school and college — act.

He and his wife, actress Alana anew. During this period, Steve, suffering a severe case of the fiscal shorts, could be seen at Hollywood's best and worst restaurants, waiting on tables. "A great training ground for actors," he intoned. "You name it, I've hit 'em all: Italian places, tuxedo-captain places, even jeans and dirty T-shirt places."

Last year, his luck changed. He says he did TV commercials and modeled for print ads. He guested on "Tonight," albeit among a squad of hearties toting a casket during a

He also taped a TV pilot, a musical version of "Adam and Eve." He played Adam. The grounds of Mount St. Mary's, a nearby women's college, played the Garden of Eden.

He concedes that in "Clone Masters" he felt a bit odd seeing so many himselves, or Art Hindels, as the case

"It was a strange sensation," he said. "I don't know how many times I reintroduced myself the next day when the mask was off, telling the guys, 'Went through this before, remember me?"

Did he and the director suffer a kind of identity crisis?

Marin County dwellers obsessed with 'self'

LOS ANGELES (AP) - It'd be hard to film a rampant partaking of fight in mellow Marin county. The serenity industry here in Marin there would move the County," Newman wryly most macho director to whisper through a pussywillow, "Lights...camera...meditation."

Well, tonight, NBC's Edwin Newman surveys all this tranquility in that lovely, affluent San Francisco suburb during a one-hour special entitled "I Want It All What he digs up, besides an opening shot of a stark naked damsel two guys stroke with peacock feathers, is a show of trouble in the paradise he calls this "golden ghetto by the Golden Marin is rich, one of the nation's 10 wealthiest counties, he says. It's beautiful, too, and "blessed with what is probably with best cli-mate this side of the Mediterranean.'

But it also has high rates of alcoholism, divorce, and, according to a suicide prevention spokesman interviewed for the show, a do-yourself-in rate well over twice the national aver-

Why all this grief amid the splendid scenery, hot tubs, laid-back life style and ample leisure time? The answer, it's suggested, is that having moved to what one witness calls "the end of the rainbow," many in the well-off, well-educated Marin Corps simply can't find much mean-

Surprise, it causes tent that I see it wreak-

(I once asked a pal, a Marin psychologist, what it was he did there. Said he, half in jest: "M'boy, I'm in the rela-tionship biz.")

A growing biz in Marin, the special notes, is what Mark Dowie of Mother Jones magazine calls "the narcissism business," the "tremendous proliferation of 'Me' groups..."

Such tribes, run by gestalt-tenders and mufti mystics, spawn what Cyra McFadden terms a "tremendous obsession with self," a Marin feature she spoofed in her fine book, 'The Serial."

She finds this self-hug festival "sad to the ex-

ing a fair lot of havoc...in very specific ways.'

The saddest example is the show's study of an attractive divorcee from Florida, mother of four kids aged nine to 16. A Marin newcomer, she accepts a guru's concept that it's okay to downplay "the parenting trip," emphasize looking out for No. 1 instead of her tykes, and not feel guilty about being self-ish.

"I'm not responsible for anybody but me," she says. "It's selfish. It's wonderful, though.

That it isn't wonderful for her kids and other offspring of Marin's "Me" generation is painfully obvious in the program's poignant interviews with these young victims of wealthy, bro-

In America, too, the novelty has worn off, as pornography operators concede.

Hurt most are the smallest operators, who produce a film in three days and show it the next; who often use a succession of assumed names for a succession of ventures; who go into and out of business withoutanyone knowing they've been there.

"Let's face it," says a former porn operator who's turned to low budget action films. "If you've seen rest is a parody of old movies. one of these things, you've seen them all. There's only a limited clientele, and if they get bored, then what are you left with?"

"The half-life of pornography is rather short," says Dr. Paul Gebhard, who succeeded the late Alfred C. Kinsey as head of the Institute for Sex Research. "So producers are always looking for something new and novel. You can exhaust heterosexuality rather quickly.

The new and novel that's needed, many porn operators agree, is "quality," or at least a story line that can hold a viewer's interest between the bedroom scenes. A semblance of taste, in other words, threatens to sneak in even if the over-all product would remain thoroughly offensive to most

"Quality," even by porn producers' definition, costs money. The shoestring smut film factories that are being squeezed out by slackening demand are being partly replaced by operators with Hollywoodish pretensions who often control production, distribution, and theater ownership in one operation. They're still making money, as much as $1 million a

But "Take Off," a professionally photographed film with a story based on Oscar Wilde's "Portrait of Dorian Gray," is unusual, like most of the past porn smashes — "Deep Throat," "The Devil in Miss Jones" or "Misty Beethoven." There are few such films, and not enough stars - most porn kings and queens can't act and legitimate actors want no part of skin trade

"Take Off" is an example of the new trends in the

Made for about $200,000, compared with $30,000 to $50,000 for the average porn film, it has been drawing very well and could, according to industry sources, earn more than $1 million. It has been released in three versions - hard core (explicit sex), soft core (standard "X" rating) and one with a sedate "R" rating. Yet even in its raunchiest version, only about 25 of its 103 minutes contain explicit sex. Much of the

Many of today's larger operators started in the business around 1960. By the end of that decade, with the moral climate of the country relaxed, and legal restrictions along with it, they were in a good osition to cash in and they did. By the early 70s, dozens of others were trying to reap the same quick bucks, and it's those people who are now being squeezed out.

One man, who has made dozens of films under dozens of names, remembers how it was at that

'We handled everything, and we had our own theater in a storefront. We'd get the actors - the girls are mostly hookers - and we'd rent a otel room. We'd shoot it in a day and have it ready to show in a week. It might cost $10,000 and we could make $100,000 or so. That producer is still in business, although inflation has raised the cost of a cheapie to about $30,000. And while that kind of operation still abounds in New York, theaters are disappearing every day, and others are cutting prices from the once-standard $5 to $3.99 and $2.99 and even, on occasion, 99 cents.

Small-time distributors also are in difficulty. The larger theaters used to pay distributors a percentage of the take. Now they simply pay a flat fee

Despite the shrinkage of smaller producers, porn industry sources still see money to be made in what they consider the hinterland between the coasts.

Dresser hits import rule

HOUSTON (AP) - A Dresser Industries Inc. executive said Wednesday it is unfortunate President Carter is placing exports of U.S. oil technology to Russia under federal controls.

Ed Luter, a senior vice president of the Dallas-based firm, said such controls "would simply be handing business to our foreign competitors." He said the controls would provide "another complexity to the American businessman's already frustrating task of increasing imports."

Dresser received an export license May 30 for a $144 million contract involving construction of an addition to a Russian plant for manufacturing

Officials of Cooper Industries Inc. of Houston declined comment on the controls, saying they wanted to study the matter.

Coal slurry pipelines killed by house vote

By RICHARD L. LYONS

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — A surprisingly controversial bill to move Western coal to Southern and Eastern markets by means of slurry pipelines was killed by the House Wednesday, 246 to 161, a victim of railroad clout and environmental fears

When a bill has cleared two committees, as this did, opponents usually have to settle for hitting it with a few weakening amendments. But in this case the opposition killed it with one punch. That should be the end of the ssue for this Congress.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., floor manager of the bill, said the action is typical of what the nation faces as it tries to evolve an energy policy and adjust to it. "Energy decisions will be tough, complex and tred on powerful interests," he said. "The result here was that the public interest got tram-

A coal slurry pipeline would provide an alternative to railroad cars for moving coal from mine to market. Pulverized coal mixed with equal amounts of water could be pumped hundreds of miles, chiefly from Wyoming to power plants in the Texas-Arkansas area. The bill would, when the secretary of interior decided it to be in the public interest, give pipeline com-panies the power of eminent domain-to obtain rights of way over land to build a pipeline. Udall told the House the sole pur pose of the bill was to make available a new technology for moving coal. In most cases, he said, it would still be cheaper to move coal by rail. But about 5 percent of the proposed doubled production by 1985 could be moved by pipeline, he said. He said the railroads would still get the bulk of new business from increased reliance on coal, that they need competition and that the power to obtain rights of way has been given gas and oil pipeline companies.

But opponents contended that it made no sense for the govenment to spend billions of dollars trying to make the railroads healthy and then turn around and create a competitor

Coast areas may get help

WASHINGTON (AP) - House-Senate conferees on legislation revamping offshore oil-leasing rules agreed Wednesday to earmark $135 million over the next ten years in grants to coastal states and communities.

The money is intended to help offset costs of additional public services such as roads, sewers or schools required because of increasing offhore activities.

Most of the funds would go to states like Louisiana, Texas, California and New Jersey where the most extensive offshore drilling activity is taking

It was a compromise between a House proposal for $200 million and a Senate measure calling for $70 mil-

Agreement came as the conference committee neared completion of its work on the first major overhaul in offshore oil and gas leasing laws in 25

Generally, the legislation would make it easier for smaller companies to compete for federal leases with the giant oil firms that now dominate offshore activities.

Conferees agreed to a provision under which no state with a coastline could get less than 2 percent of the

However, they remain in disagreement over a possible ceiling, with the House favoring a provision under which no state could receive more than 30 percent of all the funds and Senate conferees opposed to any

An attempt to compromise these differences with a 45 percent ceiling was rejected Wednesday.

to take away their business. Rep. Fred Rooney, D-Ap., chairman of the subcommittee with jurisdiction over railroads, said slurry pipelines would be "devastating" to the railroads. In addition, some environmental groups opposed the bill for fear that come polluted and pose a disposal problem.

Another issue was the fear that the pipeline would use up the water of the arid Western states, even sucking up underground water from neighboring states not involved in the coal busi-

After the bill was killed, Udall blamed the loss on the fact that only a few sections of the country stood to benefit in the foreseable future, that railroad management and unions worked hard and effectively against the bill, that a few "kneejerk" environmentalists saw a problem that wasn't there and because of the "pervasive influence of the emotional issue of Western water.

"Bakke means we can pursue a very vigorous affirmative action program, but we have to be very sensitive toward the court's opinion," said Mrs. Chayes, the only woman assistant secretary of the Air Force.

The U.S. Supreme Court recently held that Allan Bakke, a medical school applicant at the University of California-Davis, could not be barred from the school in favor of less qualified minority applicants admitted under a set-aside quota system.

The court did not knock down "properly devised" admission programs involving the consideration of race or ethnic origin and did not specifically address affirmative action in employsuit two weeks ago, charging reverse discrimination because he was allegedly denied a civil service promotion in favor of a less-qualified Mexican-

College professors 'clean up' on sample text books

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) - More and more college professors are climbing aboard a gravy train that could return as much as $10 million a year through the sale of free sample textbooks they receive, sources in the publishing industry complain.

'They're free to sell if they want to," says David Amerman, chairman of the college division of the Association of American Publishers, "But the question of ethics — a lot of professors think this is pretty cheap stuff."

He adds that it's a spreading nationwide problem that has grown in the past two years, especially in the Northeast and the Midwest.

"I don't think it's the right thing to do," says Jordan Kurland, associate general secretary of the American Association of University Professors, which has not formulated policy on the practice.

However, Wilbert McKeachie, a University of Michigan psychologist who is president of the American Association of Higher Education, draws a distinction between selling solicited or unsolicited samples.
"If the copy is unsolicited, I don't think it's wrong to sell it," McKeachie observes, "but I don't do it myself." It is "quite common" for professors attending professional meetings to go from one publisher's booth to the next indiscriminately requesting free books for the purpose of selling them later, the psychologist continues.

Providing sample books, sometimes as many as 7,000 for a promising new title, underpins the market-ing strategy of the textbook industry. The calculated gamble, a marketing expense, is that a professor will like the book enough to assign it to his

Although college bookstores have long dealt in used books to accommodate students, publishers say that itinerant dealers of secondhand books have begun an agressive effort to buy the samples by actually knocking on faculty doors and offering cash.

The professors receive roughly a quarter of the retail price for the samples, which are sold to stores as new books. The publishers say these middlemen can get a nearly 200 per-cent profit this way by slightly undercutting the publishers, which allow a 20 percent to 25 percent margin for the stores.

Even if a professor decides to adopt the new book as his course text, the store may have obtained so many samples that it's unnecessary to order any from the publisher, according to Amerman, who is an executive of Prentice-Hall.

"It's unethical," he maintains, "but it's not illegal."

The other side of this coin is that professors in big fields such as freshman English or sociology are inundated with books they neither request nor desire. Some professors literally throw them away. Others give them away. And still others profit from

"Eventually they come back to us and say, 'What are we going to do with these things?" concedes John Harney of D.C. Heath in Lexington, Mass. "What is the answer? We don't

The trade magazine Publisher's Weekly estimates that publishers distributed 11.7 million sample copies in 1976 and that a third of these, 3.9 million books, found their way back to the stores.

If the average book sells for $10 and if professors were paid an average 25 percent of the price, then they collected $10 million. In production costs alone, the publishers lost roughly $3 million, Harney relates.

se

They also lost the profits on the books, but it's the author who suffers most from unpaid royalties.

In one case cited by the Assocation of American Publishers, an author lost royalties on 400 copies of his new book at a single Midwestern college last year.

The AAP says that the publisher sent out 4,200 copies nationwide of the introductory text in mid-September and that it was adopted for a summer class of 400 students at the college. The bookstore manager, who ordered none of the books, said he had all he needed already.

You better believe it!

Fly's eye scope seeking secrets of earth, moon

By FRANK MACOMBER Copley News Service

A new telescope resembling the eye of a giant fly might help to unlock some additional secrets of both the Earth and the moon.

The lightweight telescope is the creation of James E. Faller, a physicist with the Joint Institute for Laboratory Astrophysics, an agency operated by the Commerce Department's Bureau of Standards and the University of Colorado at Boulder.

Faller was a member of a scientific team that first used laser beams in 1969 to measure the distance from the Earth to the moon via retro-reflectors placed on the moon by Apollo 11 astronauts.

The "fly's eye" telescope, located on Mt. Haleakala in Hawaii, serves as a receiver for laser beams bounced off the moon. It is teamed up with another lunar ranging station at the McDonald Observatory, Fort Davis,

With two observation posts. scientists now hope to acquire the first realistic measurements of drifting by the Earth's continents; reveal the position of the North Pole within one or two inches and find out why the pole "wobbles," or seems to.

Space scientists also believe they may be able to measure more precisely the moon's motion in its orbit and perhaps acquire more accurate data on the moon's distribution of mass, leading possibly to new knowledge of its history.

At NASA's Ames Research Center in California, meanwhile, scientists are trying to solve another mystery an extremely powerful burst of gamma rays from somewhere in the universe.

Gamma ray bursts, unknown until 1973, have enormous amounts of stored-up energy and occur about once a month, apparently from random points in our galaxy, or even beyond.

Pioneer Venus I, early in its sevenmonth voyage to orbit around the planet Venus, detected the gamma ray burst. Over the course of its 300million-mile mission, Pioneer Venus' measurements of these puzzling bursts may enable scientists for the first time to track down accurately their origins. So far they have been unable to come up with any clues. Some scientists have speculated the bursts could have come from "black holes" (dead stars), brilliant supernovae, neutron stars or from some entirely unxpected sources. They are hoping Pioneer Venus can provide some more definitive answers.

Designed to orbit Venus to study its weather processes, Pioneer Venus I carries six interplanetary instruments, including a gamma ray burst detector.

The detector's twin sodium iodide sensors picked up a two-second pulse of high-energy protons — called a burst by scientists — only 33 hours after the spacecraft lifted off from Cape Canaveral, Fia., last May 20.

Two other U.S. spacecraft also detected the gamma ray blast — VELA, a Department of Energy satellite circling the Earth, and HELIOS B, a NASA-European scientific satellite orbiting the sun.

Scientists are correlating the ob-servations of the Pioneer Venus spacecraft with data from these satellites to get a rough "fix" on the burst's position and perhaps learn more about its origin.

As Pioneer Venus I speeds toward Venus for an early December rendevous, and away from the Earth satellites, triangulation techniques can pinpoint the origin of gamma ray bursts with increasing accuracy.

James Kilpatrick: He walks along a delicate line

By DON FREEMAN Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD - There is about James Jackson Kilpatrick Jr. a sense of style and manner, an aura of courtly grace as he, with a bow and the airy smile of a gentleman, delivers the decapitating bon mot.

The court of Louis XIV would not have awed him. He would have loved debating in tandem with Clay and Calhoun. "Who's Who" lists him as a Whig and a member of the Black-Eyed Pea Society of America. He is as Southern as Dr. Pepper.

Jack Kilpatrick is a staunch conservative and a writer of vast and persuasive gifts.

He is also one of the polemicized voices on CBS Radio's "Spectrum." And with Shana Alexander as the other half of an ideological odd couple, he works the "Point, Coun-terpoint" segment of "60 Minutes."

The exposure to millions on a toprated show has brought to Jack Kilpatrick a measure of notoriety which he finds perplexing.

"Not long ago." said Kilpatrick in an interview. "I got introduced at some lecture as a 'TV personality." "What did you do?" I inquired.

"I clicked my heels in midair and did a fast buck-and-wing," Jack Kilpatrick said. "No, what I really did was. I damn near dropped through the floor. I declare, it was a shock. I've been a writer, a reporter, an editor all my life. I've written a few books but I never identify myself as anything other than a member in good standing of a noble calling — a newspaperman. And now, alas, I'm a "TV personality.'

And so he has been for the last six years, going back to 1972 when he first began the game of compressed parry and riposte with Nicholas Von Hoffman, a liberal journalist, on "60 Minutes." They remained in combat for two years until the occasion referred to by Kilpatrick as "Nick's little blowup.

As Kilpatrick recalls the day, the circumstances were unusual. "Generally, we taped our segments on a Thursday," he says, "but the him in the nearest sanitary recep-Richard Nixon story was rolling fast. tacle?" It was August 1974. Would he resign the presidency? They had us wait until Sunday to tape. So we did. But the producers were elsewhere. Nobody was minding the store. I did my taping, trying to say something Nick professed to a certain subdued nice about poor Nixon who was in a desperate fix. Then Nick did his piece, this man, this good friend of mine who, it must be said, looks so arrogant without even trying. After Nick did his piece: the crew left. Nobody looked at it. The buttons were pushed. And this is what Nicholas von Hoffman said: 'Nixon is a dead mouse on the kitchen floor of the country and the only question is. who's going to pick him up and put

"Shana," he said, "can say to me on the air, 'Oh, go soak your head,' but the criticism would rumble if I said it to her. I can be spirited but there's a delicate line I had better not trespass. She can get away with more as a woman than I can as a man. There's no way to demonstrate this em-

Personnel plan gets approval

By PEGGY SIMPSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's plan to streamline the federal personnel system has won House committee approval but it picked up some anti-administration riders that ultimately could endanger its passage by Congress.

Wednesday's 18-7 vote to approve the civil service revision bill was deceivingly lopsided.

The Post Office and Civil Service Committee actually is bitterly and narrowly divided and these sentiments and the political risks they carry are sure to spill over onto the House floor.

Until last week, there had been broad bipartisan support for the bill, with a significant handful of Democrats rebelling but with most Republicans backing the Carter plan as a vehicle to better manage the 2.8 million federal work-

But the addition to the bill of a controversial proposal the Republicans oppose, to greatly broaden the political rights of most federal the Hatch Act, changed the political climate of the committee over-

Most Republicans demonstrated their anger Wednesday by casting two key anti-administration votes. In each case, their votes provided the margin to thwart the administration.

In one case, they backed Rep. Herbert Harris, D-Va., in adding to the civil service bill a separate measure vetoed by Carter last month that would expand federal firefighters' benefits. Then they sided with Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Md., in refusing to strip from the bill her amendment that would gut Carter's plan for a systemwide corps of top federal executives.

The administration had thought it had the votes to block the firefighters amendment and to remove the Spellman move. Now it will have to take those fights, as well as the major one on the Hatch Act changes, to the full House.

But chief sponsor Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., called the committee bill 'a positive step

"I think it is a solid victory for the president. And I think it enhances the already good chances that we're going to get a civil service (bill) passed and in law this year," Udall said.

The Hatch Act controversy is a complicated

Currently, federal em-ployees are banned from most political participation - on or off duty - by the Hatch Act. Government unions had campaigned to give most federal workers the right to participate in politics on their own time. The House already has passed the Hatch Act changes but the bill is stuck in the Senate Gov-
