DALLAS (AP) - Ervie Gipson sat on her front porch fanning herself, quietly praying for the end of an oppressive dome of hot air that has spread across the northern two-thirds of Texas and killed at least 21 people in Dallas and Fort Worth. Unless the heat wave eases, Texas can expect to break last year's mark of 22 heat deaths, said Dr. Raymond Moore, deputy state health director. Moore said 68 people died of heat stroke from 1972 through 1977.

Police said the heat had brought people out into the streets more at night. Murder and rape rates were up for the first 15 days of July.

"The only thing we know to blame it on is the intense heat," said police spokesman Bob Shaw. There were 13 murders in the first 15 days of July, compared to nine for the same period in June. Rapes were up to 60, from

What the city dwellers could not get fixed, they were buying new. One harried air conditioner salesman estimated window unit sales were up 65 percent in Dallas alone.

"We're selling just about all we can get our hands on," said Sears' depart-ment manager Barney Taylor. "Some people are buying window units to supplement central systems that were designed for use in 95-degree temperatures and just can't cool under these extended temperatures. We're trying to shift air conditioners from other parts of the nation to this Business was also booming for area ice companies. Bob Russell, manager of Fort Worth's Crystal Ice Co., said, "We're selling it faster than we can make it."

Grand jury expected to review recording

By MARK VOGLER

A secret tape recording made by the Ector County District Attorney's Office, purportedly for the purpose of discrediting Attorney General John Hill, is expected to be reviewed as evidence in a federal grand jury investigation into circumstances surrounding Larry Lozano's death.

Jackie Perkins, a jailer who was present the night of Jan. 22 when Lozano died outside his jail cell, reportedly had asked District Attorney John Green to have electronic eavesdropping devices installed at his home to tape a conversation between himself and an investigator for the state attorney general's office.

That incident led to Green's charges that Hill was withholding information and had tampered with a witness. However, the methods employed by the prosecutor in compiling the tape and in other aspects of his probe have raised some legal questions in the minds of investigators for the U.S. Attorney's office, according to a source close to the investigation.

After consulting with Green, Perkins contacted John Stringer, then owner of the A-1 Bonding Company in Odessa, to arrange a meeting with a state attorney general's office investigator to discuss information he had which might be helpful to John Hill.

According to several sources who have given their story to investigators of the U.S. Attorney's Office, a meeting was arranged for the evening of April 10 at Perkins' house. This was on the eve of an Ector County coroner's inquest into Lozano's death.

Dan Maeso, the former state attorney general's investigator who, with an assistant and Stringer, met with Perkins, is now an assistant U.S. attorney. He is helping present the Lozano case to a federal grand jury which opened its third day of hearings gram that the grand jury probe is not directly focusing on any alleged illegal activity involving Green or other high level Ector County officials. But the source did say that the manner in which Ector County officials conducted the Lozano investigation is germane to the federal investigation and may be studied.

Neither Maeso nor anyone else connected with the attorney general's office knew that Perkins taped his coversation with Maeso and Stringer, and none of them have since listened to the recording, according to the government source. Perkins, who is scheduled to testify before the grand jury this week, turned the tape recording over to Green, who the next day assailed Hill before reporters for allegedly withholding evidence and tampering with a prospective wit-

Green told The Reporter-Telegram Tuesday that the inquest was the occasion of "my first conversations with the deputies" who were witnesses at the hearing.

A government source Tuesday told The Reporter-Telegram that Green on other occasions had not cooperated fully with the state attorney general's Stringer, who claims he has been accused of setting up the meeting between Maeso and Perkins, reportedly has told U.S. Attorney investiga-tors that an employee of A-1 Bonding company received Perkins' call. Lee Dallaire, the employee, received a last minute subpoena Tuesday and was expected to testify sometime Dallaire is the bondsman who claims to have approached Capt. AcMeans of the Ector Count Sheriff's Department about the possibility of bonding Lozano out four days after Lozano's arrest. However, he says he was advised by McMeans that commitment papers were being prepared for Lozano's transfer to Big Spring State Hospital.

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd is presenting the government's case in the federal grand jury investigation into the death of Larry

McMeans, who has not been subpoenaed in connection with the case, has confirmed Dallaire's statements on the possible transfer. Connie Lozano, Lozano's mother, reportedly told the grand jury earlier this week that the sheriff's department deliberately blocked attempts to either have Lozano committed or bonded out Dallaire reportedly has told investigators that, when he went over to post bond for another inmate at about 9 p.m. on Jan. 22, he saw Perkins, who blood-spattered shirt. At that time, Dellaire is reported to have said, he was told he could not post the man's bond because there had been an injury in the jail. He also claims to have seen a funeral home hearse leaving the jail at about's a.m. the next day.

"Back in 1952 or 1954, during Au Marfa-Mexico booster gust, we had 26 or 27 straight days of Ector County district attorney 100 or more," he said. "The way things look now, I'm afraid it's not now traveling new road going to get any better." launches attack on area newsmen MARFA - Ann McCallum, that

By ED TODD R-T Staff Writer

ODESSA - Ector County District Attorney John Green lashed out Tuesday at newsmen after having an area television reporter called before a district court bench on the basis of a Monday broadcast.

"It's now 'Get John Green Week," he said after making threats of lawsuits against news reporters who he said questioned his integrity.

Green said he will not be indicted by a federal grand jury meeting this week in Midland because "I am not under investigation. I'll assure you of

His reference was to the grand jury which is checking into whether Ector County Jail inmate Larry Lozano's civil rights were violated prior to Lozano's death in the jail on Jan. 22.

Green, however, suggested Tues-day that he might be investigating Texas Attorney General John Hill, whom he described as a "little sawed-off Democrat." Green said Hill cannot investigate him.

Green's comments came moments after KMID-TV News Director Paul Pryor, who had been subpoenaed at Green's request, surrendered tapes of a segment of a Monday newscast in District Judge R.L. McKim's court. The newscast said:

-"Sources close to the Attorney General's office ... and the current grand jury...tell Big Two News that several indictments have already been prepared in the Lozano case...and the sources add...Ector County government officials are among those named."

-That Green appears to be "the main target" of Attorney General John Hill's investigative efforts. -That Hill is the "master mind" of the federal grand jury investigation.

-That Hill "reportedly also plans a close examination of the Ector County structure of government power." -That Green, in an interview with Dallas Morning News reporter Dan Watson, called Ruben Sandoval, a San Antonio lawyer representing the Lozano family, a "fat enchilada . . who drank too much tequila . . . and

-That "sources in the attorney general's campaign organization told Big Two News that Green's reluctance to probe" Lozano's death..."coupled with what some would consider racist remarks made to reporters...angered Hill...and several of his keystaff members."

Pryor, 28, was served the subpoens by Green's chief investigator, Jerry Davis, at 2:15 p.m. Tuesday, while Pryor was covering the federal grand jury's probe in Midland. Pryor brought the tape of the broadcast to Green at about 4 p.m.

"We're going to give him (Green) the tapes and script," Pryor said just before he turned the material over to the court and appeared before Judge McKim of the 161st State District Court. "We have nothing to hide."

However, Pryor said he has "promised that we would not reveal the names of sources," even before a grand jury, of information used in that newscast.

Later in the afternoon, Green said Pryor will be required to divulge his news sources before a grand jury. "He will be required to reveal his sources," Green said. If he doesn't,

Pryor will "go to jail, so he had better

Sometime later, Pryor said, "It's common knowledge that Hill is upset with the way Green is doing it (han-dling the Lozano case)."

The newsman remarked on Green's threats to sue: "I'm not too worried, (not) that worried about it," Pryor said. "I'm going to get a lawyer this weekend."

Pryor said about five minutes after the 6 p.m. broadcast, Green called the station and threatened "to sue us!" for $1 million for libel. He said Green also used a $100,000 figure, and strongly suggested that that segment of the newscast not be repeated during the 10 p.m. news. It was. Pryor said Green talked to assistant news director Mike Barker.

At 4:20 p.m., Judge McKim swore in Pryor. And in hushed voices, Green, McKim and Pryor talked. Later, Pryor said he declined to give Green names of anysources.

McKim issued Pryor a verbal sub-peona to appear before a 9 a.m. Monday session of the Ector County

Grand Jury. Green declined to say what the grand jurors might be considering, but he hinted at an investigation of the WASHINGTON (AP) - With two strikes against them, Mexican-American leaders are launching a last-ditch attempt to have civil rights indictments returned in the Santos Rodriguez case.

The statute of limitations on the case runs out Monday.

But Ed Pena, the national League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) president, said Tuesday that the Justice Department had given "such strange, such feeble rea-sons," for not prosecuting Cain that other avenues had to be tried before the Monday expiration date.

The proposed legal avenue involves presenting the case to a federal grand ury in Dallas later this week, according to Pena and Ruben Sandoval, the Texas legal advisor for LULAC. Nor-mally, a U.S. attorney presents cases to the grand jury.

"We're saying that a federal grand jury has the authority to initiate an investigation on its own accord and can return an indictment, ' Sandoval told The Associated Press in San Antonio on Tuesday. "That indictmentSis not active, of course, until the U.S. attorney signs it."

Tuesday, U.S. Attorney Ken Mighell in Dallas threw them another curve. He cannot sign it.

"The attorney general...denied me that right," Mighell said, when the Justice Department ruled that the case would not be prosecuted.

Mighell, acknowledging that anyone can petition to appear before a grand jury, said it would take a judge to call the body into session before Tuesday, which in itself "is not an easy thing to do."

PHILIPPIANS 4:8

After being away from my work for two months due to personal illness, I am happy that my life has been spared and I am able to resume my work as a preacher and defender of the truth. We trust that you have missed the articles in the paper. I am sorry that my return will disappoint the enemies of truth and righteousness but those whose minds are still open to honest investigation will welcome our return.

While taking a number of weeks to recuperate I had occasion to do a lot of reading. Through the years I have observed that truth has always been under fire by those who are more bent on following the wisdom of man than the truth. History affirms this fact without fear of contradiction. Then there have always been some who will leave error and take a stand for the truth, while it is a fact that some who professed to be strong will leave the truth and embrase error. We can think of many reasons why one should leave error and accept the truth. However, we shall use just one of the many reasons. Jesus said in John 8:32, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you That is enough reason for one to accept the truth!

There are many who will leave the truth for a number of reasons and there is not a valid reason that man can come up with when he takes cognizance of the fact that embrasing error will separate him from God. Sometimes men will leave the truth because they cannot take the pressures that comes from without.

pressures that comes from without.

Sometimes one will leave the truith because he thinks it will hurt his buisness relationships if he stands firm in the faith-so he compromises until his conscience is seared. Others leave the truith, though not often, because they think someone has offended them personally. They have allowed satan to fill thier heart with hatred and as one man said to this scribe years ago, "I know you folks are right but I would die and go to hell before I would become a member of the church of Christ" And he did!!

our readers what it means to almost pass away. We never know what tomorrow holds for us and I am convienced that that is why it should be. But whether we have thirty days or thirty years, one needs to stand for the truth. Now if you don't; if I don't; let us not be so self-righteous as to think that others cannot do without our presence, and especially, God. Have you been driven away from the truth? If so, will God excuse you. Better think about it!

The garbagemen are paid an average of $29.72 per route, with a beginning pay of $22.20.

The walkout began when workers at one yard showed up and discovered only six of their 28 trucks were working. "That kind of lit the fuse," said Sanitation Director Patrick Koloski.

Mayor Ernest Morial said striking garbagemen would be paid while the trucks were being repaired. They were being worked on early today. The Philadelphia prison guards had defied a court order to return to

Industry, panel differ on new insurance rate

AUSTIN-State Board of Insurance staff proposals and the proposed auto insurance rates of the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office. which were to be considered by the board today, show an overall difference of 5.7 percent in the suggested increase in private passenger rates.

Under the staff proposals, private passenger coverages would increase 3.2 percent statewide, while the TAISO proposals would raise rates 8.9

As the TAISO notes, in its exhibits, there's no such thing as "an average driver," with rates varying among the 40 rating territories, types and ages of vehicles, age and sex of drivers and other factors.

Moreover, comparison of the exhibits is further complicated this year because the TAISO calculations were prepared without use of personal injury protection (PIP) coverages and bumper discounts, as was done by the SBI staff, and the two exhibits use different types of vehicles.

> THE STRAIGHT LINE TO WANT ADS & ACTION DIAL 682-6222

However, the figures do provide some idea of the costs involved under the proposals-although the threemember board is free to reject or modify either set of suggested rates.

TAISO's exhibit is based on a 1977 Chevrolet Nova or Ford Granada, not used for business but driven to and from work, with no male operator under 25, no unmarried female operator under 21 and no operator 65

In Midland and Ector counties, present rate for the following coverages for such a vehicle is $243 total, and would be $285 under the TAISO and $276 under the SBI proposals. Other respective figures are:

Bodily injury and property damage, $82 present; $92 TAISO; $89 SBI.

$200 deductible collision, $96 present; $129 TAISO; $124 SBI. $50 deductible comprehensive, $65 present; $64 TAISO; $63 SBI. The SBI proposal uses a 1978 medium-priced Ford, Chevrolet or Plymouth with the same factors for operation and drivers as the TAISO, but includes PIP coverage and bumper discount calculations. Those SBI staff calculations that for Midland and Ector counties, there would be a dollar change of $7 from present rates and a percentage union leaders and city officials scheduled a formal signing cermony today of a contract that ended a five-day strike by 600 firefighters.

The contract was tentatively approved by negotiators early Tuesday and was ratified by a 358-30 vote in pre-dawn balloting.

Sedative forgery revealed

WASHINGTON (AP)

— President Carter's chief medical adviser wrote a prescription to fetitious person so a staff employee could obtain the drug Quaalude, but another person who later tried to pick up the drug was arrested, the Washington Post reported today.

The use of Quaalude, which produces sleep or sedation, has been tightly controlled under federal law because in recent years it has been widely abused by narcotics users. The Post said police in suburban Prince William County, Virginia, on July 11 arrested a woman after she attempted to purchase the drug using a prescription allegedly signed by Dr. Peter G. Bourne.

Bourne, the president's chief adviser on health and drug abuse, could not be reached for comment early today. The White House declined to comment and a spokeswoman, Pat Bario, said Bourne would have a statement later. Prince William County police would not confirm the arrest, saying no records were available until later in the day.

The Post said the woman was arrested July 11 after she attempted to fill the prescripion for 15 Quaalude tablets at a drug store in suburban Woodbridge,

The newspaper said police were treating the arrest as a routine investigation of prescription forgery, a crime that carries a penalty of one to five years imprison-

Carter toughens up on Soviets

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's unannounced decision to impose trade reprisals against the Russians serves to underscore both his displeasure over recent Soviet trials and his desire to avoid provoking a further deterioration in Soviet-Ameri-

The president issued his order canceling a multi-million-dollar computer sale to the official Soviet news agency Tass without the rhetorical fanfare that usually accompanies a retaliatory move by the United States.

And in placing new controls on export of U.S. oil technology to the Soviet Union, Carter fell short of demands by a group of senators led by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., that he specifically cancel a controversial, $144 million deal to sell the Russians a modern plant for producing bits for oil well drill-

Both moves were taken in retaliation for the harsh sentences given Jewish dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg by Soviet courts last week, and for a Moscow judge's guilty ruling against two American journalists on Tuesday."

But in keeping with the low-key and unemotional tone of Carter's response, the White House and State Department steadfastly refused any comment Tuesday night on the president's decision. Word of his action was quietly leaked to selected reporters, and Commerce Department official.

And all available evidence suggests the president's move was known to only a few close White House ad-

Robert S. Strauss, the chief U.S. trade negotiator, said in a telephone interview that "I know nothing about it." An aide said Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher had heard nothing about the president's decision.

Cancellation of the proposed sale of a sophisticated Sperry Univac computer to Tass, on orders from the president, came a few hours after a Moscow judge found two American journalists guilty of slandering Soviet television.

The two are Craig R. Whitney of teed to pay court costs, the equivalent of $1,675. The Times said it had made no decision on whether to pay the fine.

Representatives of Tass, which had planned to use the Sperry Univac computer for test editing in connection with the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow, were to be summoned to the State Department this week for a review of the fate of the news agency's San Francisco bureau. Avital Shcharansky, wife of the dissident who faces 13 years' imprisonment on treason charges, was leaving Washington today for San Francisco, her next stop on a cross-country public relations tour in behalf of her husband.

She suggested such concrete action as moving the Olympic Games from Moscow to a Western city, or cutting off sales of sophisticated American technology to the Russians. Marcuss, senior deputy assistant secretary of commerce, said in an interview that a key undecided portion of the drilling bit package, negotiated by Dresser Industries of Dallas, Texas, was still under review by the government.

But Carter's order, he said, means that all future sales of oil production equipment to the Soviet Union and other communist countries — including such previously exempt items as submersible drilling pumps — must be licensed by the Commerce Depart-

Such sales technically were placed on the so-called commodities control list as being "sufficiently sophisticated to raise a national security concern,' Marcuss said. It was on those grounds that the Sperry Univac sale presumably was canceled.

Jackson had charged that the Russians could use the advanced computer system to harass and monitor the movements of dissidents and for other purposes that have nothing to do with dissemination of

Feds want 'Walk' mail investigated

By MIKE ROBINSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal agency wants to know if it illegally provided postage to American In-dians for mailings used to ask support for their "Longest Walk" protest which now is focusing on alleged violations of their human rights.

The Indians, from more than 80 tribes, planned to meet today in La-Fayette Park across from the White House. They have criticized President Carter for being out of the country when their protest march from Cali-fornia arrived in the capital on Satur-

Russell Means of the American Indian Movement that helped stage the 3,000-mile trek said on Tuesday that Carter, "has met with women's groups, Chicano groups, Appalachian groups and others. He refuses to meet with Indians."

Meanwhile, Sam Brown, director of ACTION, the federal volunteer agency, ordered an investigation into whether his staff broke the law by using government-paid postage to help the Indians.

provide food, housing and transporta-tion for the Indians. Enclosed in a government-printed envelope marked "Penalty for private use $300," the letter said the request for support for the demonstrators "is not an official agency function."

The author of the letter was Lynn Miller, coordinator of ACTION's former volunteer project. The letter said a number of ACTION staffers would work on their own time over the Aweek

ACTION spokesman John Pennington said it was possible the letter violated no laws or rules, even though he acknowledged that the activity was not official business.

Begin, Peres in shouting match over policy

JERUSALEM (AP) - A shouting

match erupted in Parliament today between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and opposition leader Shimon Peres during a debate on the Begin government's peace strategy.

Peres, who met with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt last week in Austria, accused Begin of "filling a prescription for Israel's isolation." Responding with scathing sarcasm, the prime minister asked the Labor Party leader if his discussions with Sadat had included the idea of territorial compromise between Israel and the Arabs.

"You believe it is the high road, the only way to peace and there is no other," shouted Begin, who took the rostrum after Peres spoke. "What is the meaning of territorial compromise? Part for me and part for you,' Begin asked, then ripped a piece of paper in half, apparently showing his belief that Sadat would not accept such a compromise

The prime minister asked how Peres could have missed "the historic opportunity" to bring it up with Sadat, "and afterwards with the proud Jew, Bruno Kreisky?"

Kreisky, the Austrian chancellor who arranged the Peres-Sadat meeting, was born to Jewish parents but does not practice Judaism. He is often criticized by Israelis who dislike the fact that he does not support Israeli policy in the Mideast.

Peres complained that the govern-ment was withholding information from the Knesset, or parliament, and that Begin's peace plan, offering limited self-rule to Palestinians in the West bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, held the seeds of a Palestinian state, which the large majority of Israelis oppose.

Labor Party members of the Knes-set leaped on Begin's gesture of tearing the paper, shouting: "It's not a peace poster." That was a reference to a poster saying "shalom," or peace, which Defense Minister Ezer Wizman tore from a wall in Begin's office building after a stormy cabinet meeting on Sunday.

The outburst in the Knesset was the latest sign of disunity in the Israeli government over the peace issue. Begin found it necessary Sunday night to defend himself against what he termed a worldwide "campaign for my resignation." He said he was being called "an obstacle to peace," but considered himself only "an obstacle to surrender."

The statement showed Begin was stung by Sadat's stated preference for talking to Israelis other than Begin. After Weizman returned from a hastily arranged trip to Austria for talks with Sadat, the cabinet felt compelled to tell the Egyptian president that if he wanted to talk about Mideast peace, he should address himself to Begin.

Both the Peres and Weizman talks with Sadat were approved by Begin over the objections of Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

Peres had asked that the Knesset hold a political debate over the government's peace plan, but Begin refused, saying he had not had a report yet from Dayan, who is meeting in Britain with Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohammed Ibrahim Kamel and U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R.

Begin said the Knesset would have a debate on the Mideast situation after Sunday's cabinet session, where a decision is expected on Sadat's new proposals which Weizman brought back from Austria last week.

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) - Johnnie Jordan pushed a green baseball cap back on his head and squinted into the sun, eager to return to the game behind the Boys' Club.

"I had a punctured lung," the 12-year-old said softly. "I feel all right now. I play ball most of the time 'cause that's what I like to do."

Johnnie was a passenger on a 10year-old school bus that crashed in southern Georgia last April 11, killing three members of the Ypsilanti Boys' Club on a trip to Disney World in Florida.

The bus, carrying 56 people, smashed into a tree after rolling down a six-foot embankment at the Inaha, Ga., exit off Interstate 75.

Now - more than three months after the crash - the only visible memory of the tragedy is a tree planted at Chapelle School in memory of one victim, 11-year-old Sam Bates, who was a sixth grader there.

Most physical hurts have healed. but some emotional scars remain. Sue Condon, the 24-year-old club staffer who was driving the bus, was hospitalized with a separated shoul-

"Things are just now starting to get put back into perspective," she said. "Things are fading a lot more. I don't relish thinking about the accident. There are parts I do not attempt to

"I can't allow myself to be hung up with 'what ifs' and all of that stuff,"

Although the crash is still under investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board, it is believed the bus' brakes failed. Miss Condon was not ticketed.

The accident occurred just before 10 a.m. on a clear, dry morning. Ernie Slater, 33, the club's executive director, recalls he had gone to the front of the bus to confer with Miss Condon about where to stop for

"Physically I'm OK," Slater said, fingering the scar over his left eye. "I don't know where I am mentally yet. Now the kids, they're all doing well. They all want to go back - if we go

Garvin Freeman, whose son, Jasen, 11, was killed in the crash, said he would allow another son, Gerard, 14, to take another trip "if he wants to."

"Gerard is doing better," Freeman said. "It was a great shock to him at first. When they finally told him Jasen was dead, he got violently sick. He's just now getting where he's riding his bike and playing baseball."

Tony Sablowski, 13, an orphan, was a ward of Bob Wallack, a 34-year-old clinical social worker who runs Vaughn House, a home for troubled adolescents in nearby Ann Arbor.

"That kid was so bright. I can't believe he was killed," Wallack said, his voice breaking. "He was a little red-headed kid. Real assertive. He knew he wanted to be something. He was feisty, but he was never bad." Another of Wallack's wards, LeRoy Trice, 17, suffered head injuries and cracked vertebrae. When LeRoy first came back, he was in a state of depression," Wallack said. "But as time went by, he came

"He doesn't seem to talk about it much anymore," Wallack continued. "I don't know if he's suppressing it or if he's really over it. He seems over it (but) that's up to a psychologist."

Nell Mills said her 12-year-old son, Larry, who fractured his skull in the wreck, had nightmares for about a week after the crash.

"He's doing fairly well now, though," she said. "He's a little afraid of going fast. I don't think he'll ever go fast." Larry was a close friend of Sam Bates.

Much of the credit for the childrens' rapid emotional adjustment is given to psychologists from Ypsilanti Area Community Services. Four counselors flew to Georgia to accompany the shaken club members on the long bus

"That ride to Ypsilanti was viewed as a critical part of the adjustments to be made and having our staff ... on board ultimately turned out to be very important," said psychologist Sheila

Social worker Joan Allen said several families were also provided psychological counseling.

"I would say that the children are adjusting well," Miss Allen said. "I think anyone involved in a tragedy such as this one is certainly going to have memories of it for a long time to

New trial for victim of pearl

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - A young woman who shattered three teeth because she had a yen for oyster soup had no reason to "gingerly graze through each oyster hunting for a pearl," the Oklahoma Court of Appeals ruled in ordering a new trial of her damage suit.

Sylvia O'Dell, a 30-year-old Oklahoma City graduate student and parttime secretary, had sued DeJean's Packing Co. Inc. over injuries she claimed she suffered from a pearl in

She lost the suit in Oklahoma County District Court, but the appellate court said she is entitled to a new trial because "the average, ordinary, reasonably prudent person eating pro-cessed oysters ... would not nibble her way through each oyster because of the possibility of finding a pearl."

The court cited the history of similar lawsuits, saying a case should be judged on whether a consumer should "reasonably expect" to find harmful materials in food. Someone buying oysters in a shell, for instance, would be more inclined to watch for pearls, the court said.

Miss O'Dell says she purchased a can of oysters July 22, 1976, and shattered three teeth when she ate them in a soup she made two weeks later. She filed a lawsuit seeking $350 in dental expenses and $9,500 for pain and suf-

Senate nearing decision to alter endangered list

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate is nearing a final vote on legislation to change the Endangered Species Act in an attempt to avoid future disputes like the one in which a threatened three-inch fish has blocked completion of Tennessee's $119 million Telli-

Final Senate action on the measure, delayed on Tuesday when conserva-tives and environmentalists alike attacked the proposal, is expected

Similar legislation is pending in the House of Representatives, although no schedule has been set for floor

The proposal calls for establishment of a seven-member high-level federal committee authorized to grant exemptions under the law. Current law prohibits a federal agency from taking any action which threa-tens an endangered plant or animal species or its habitat - no expections

The Carter administration and most environmental organizations oppose establishing the committee, claiming no change is needed.

On the other hand, Sen. Jake Garn,

R-Utah, arguing that the current law is inflexible, said, "Nature in her wisdom, or God, if you prefer, in his wisdom, endowed nature with a redundancy at lower forms of life.

But an effort backed by Garn, Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., and other conservative senators to permit wholesale exemptions under the law was soundly defeated, 76-22.

Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, principal sponsor of the legislation, said Stennis' proposal would have exempted at least 650 projects fro8m coverag under the law

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., saying no exemptions were necessary, argued the law should not be changed.

"Not a single event, not a single episode, not a single problem has arisen during the five-year experience under this law that furnishes a valid basis for compromising or weakening the Endangered Species

Return flights from Europe make American economy travelers wait

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) - Hundreds of young Americans are being stranded in Amsterdam for as much as two days waiting for a $74.50. Pan Am flight to Boston.

About 100 young people, most of them Americans out of money, are camping out in the basement section of Schiphol Airport every night. Others with money wait in Amsterdam hotels.

Officials of Pan American World Airways said more than 1,000 passengers still hold the return half of the special, $149 roundtrip tickets. They expire at the end of the month, and no more are being sold.

"We're afraid that there will be problems if hundreds of these people start turning up at the same time," one airport official said.

Last week, the government stopped a numbers priority system introduced by Pan Am to clear the backlog, saying it amounted to allowing reservations for a standby flight.

The airline then tried to add extra or larger planes, but the Dutch government refused permission. So the passengers set up a waiting list of their own for the one-a-day, 184-seat Boeing 707 flights. The system has been working smoothly, but the airline says the wait is about two days.

A four-man team sent by the Massachusetts Port Authority last week to aid stranded passengers has returned to Boston, but authorities said it would be back if the situation worsens. It blamed the problem on "inadequate education of a new category of traveler by Pan American World Air-

Court asked to reject suit linking TV violence to death

MIAMI (AP) - The three major television networks asked a federal judge to dismiss a $25 million civil suit filed by a lawyer who claims TV violence led his teen-age client to kill an elderly neighbor.

Attorneys for ABC, CBS and NBC filed detailed defense motions Tuesday before U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler, asking him to drop the suit filed May 8 by lawyer Ellis Rubin on behalf of 16-year-old Ronny Zamora and his parents.

Rubin claims network programming clouded Zamora's "ability to distinguish right from wrong." The youth was convicted of shooting to death an 83-year-old Miami Beach widow in a robbery attempt at her home and has been sentenced to life in "The claim is on a direct and impermissible collision course with the First Amendment," argued ABC attorney William Frates. "The collision will be sufficiently violent to alter the concepts of free speech and a free press in ways approaching the unimaginable.

LOS ANGELES - "Now playing offensive tackle for the New York Giants: Gordon King, Inc."

That's just a practice announce ment. King is not a corporation yet, but hopes to become one, to ease his tax burden.

The hangup is that the National Football League has a policy against player incorporation. But King's agent said Monday that the Giants have agreed to let him "carry the fight to the commissioner's office." In other words, incorporation is OK with the Giants if it's OK with Pete Ro-

King's agent, Los Angeles attorney Leigh Steinberg, would not confirm the numbers but said: "With the size of this contract there's no viable way other than incorporation to help a player in an age where tax shelters have closed

So, perhaps within a few weeks, Steinberg will lay some pro-incorporation arguments on Rozelle. If he wins the commissioner over, King's personal contract with the Giants will be replaced by an agreement between the Giants and a corporation, of which King would be an employee.

Chances are, one would guess, that Rozelle will resist Steinberg's arguments. And if he does?

"Well," Steinberg said, "there are obviously things you can do outside the league, perhaps other legal re-course. But I think there's an arbitration procedure for appealing the commissioner's decisions under the collective-bargaining agreement. Of course, I wouldn't want to threaten him with that ahead of time.

Steinberg was asked why he didn't try to incorprate players he represented before King.

"The Giants showed no initial opposition to it," he said. "I've raised the question with other teams but it was dismissed very early in the negotiations. They said no. Also, Steinberg said, incorporating is more attractive than it used to be.

"Alternative methods of tax plan-ning are closing up," he said. "The Carter administration has closed many shelters. I believe movie deals have been closed up pretty heavily. Gas and oil deals to certain extent. Certain kinds of land deals. And in certain situations you have to put money up at actual risk. There used to be a concept that you were risking a loss when it was just on paper. Now you have to show an actual risk

A deferred-payment plan is one alternative to incorporation. A player signs for several years but some of the money due him is held back and paid out over a long period beginning, say, on his 45th birthday. The effect is to reduce present taxable income while guaranteeing the player will get something later, when he may be in a lower tax bracket.

"There are two problems with deferred income," Steinberg said. "One is that the club holds the money and makes interest on it. It is in essence a loan back to the club from the play-

"The second thing is: Once you get those deferred dollars, what are they worth in purchasing power? And the answer is not much, if we're talking about deferred payments that start in

Of course a player gets a pension if he lasts four years in the NFL. If he takes his pension starting at age 55, he gets $110 a month for each year of service. But Steinberg said the probable continuation of inflation would make the pension inadequate.

"Even if King plays 10 years and gets a pension of, say, $13,200 a year at age 55, do you know what the value of that will be in 30 years? Inflation would make it worth like $3,000.

"So what can you do? Well, take the pension plan I'm talking about (one that would be set up for King by his corporation). If you put $25,000 a year into the plan over 10 years and left it in till age 55 at 6 percent, you would have $1.5 million. If you left it in at 8 percent, you would have $2.3 million. There would be a good tax hit when you took it out but it would still give a player like Gordon something like $100,000 a year.

"Any doctor, any lawyer, any person with a lot of money in this society knows that one of the best taxplanning devices is incorporation. Say you have a player with $100,000 coming in this year. If you don't find a way to shelter that money he may be taxed as much as 40 to 50 thousand."

Under a corporate setup, Steinberg said, money put in the pension plan would be tax free (until it was later collected).

"And there are a number of things you could purchase for the corporation which would not be deductible items if purchased by a person but would be for a corporation," he said. 'It's hard to calculate those things. But I believe we could probably effect a tax saving of like $60,000 over the (three-year) term of the agree-

Steinberg said there is some debate whether such a plan would be approved by the Internal Revenue Service. But he said doctors and lawyers are allowed to incorporate for tax purposes. And they normally have many more high-income years than football players.

But Rozelle's counsel, Jay Moyer, sees many problems.

"No NFL player has this kind of arrangment and to my knowledge none ever has," Moyer said. "We think it would raise serious problems on a number of levels. We don't necessarily believe they can't be resolved some day but now we see the problem potential and we don't see the solutions and we think it would be foolish to abandon traditional policy. "For one thing, the entire pattern of eperations in the league presuposes an employer-employee relationship between club and player. A player place in a $250,000 tournament would result in any actual loss to winners

because PGA purses will be doubled over the next three years as the result of television contracts negotiated with the three major networks. The commissioner previously disclosed a

could conceivably lose all his collectively bargained benefits if he became an independent contractor furnishing services through his corporation rather than an employ-

And a rash of player incorporations could weaken the NFL Players' Association, Moyer said. Labor law provides that unions may represent only employees and employees are defined as individual persons.

"On another level," Moyer said, "there are serious questions whether this kind of plan would work for any but a handful of players, if even for them. If most of your income is personal-service income, you cannot get the tax benefits these people seek to

'And if a club were to go along with this arrangement, and the IRS ultimately decided the corporation was a sham to evade taxes, the club would be liable not only for the (income) taxes it should have withheld but for a 100 percent penalty besides." Still anothe problem, Moyer sajd, is how a club would discipline a corporation, or trade one. Also, a club's contract with an incorporated player would be no better than the underlying contract between player and corporation, and the league would have no control over that contract. Nor would it have control over who owned interests in the corporation. Conceivably, Moyer said, interests could be obtained by "people who would be objectionable.

"Finally," he said, "if players were not employees of a club, the club. could be subject to a rash of ordinary negligence suits by players who felt aggrieved. An employee is confined to workman's compensation and is not able to sue his employer for ordinary negligence. If you substituted negligence nliability, the clubs would have a burden they couldn't rationally be expected to bear."

Young, a star at North Carolina State, suffered a knee injury in training camp last year and was sidelined for the season

After a rookie year in which he gained only 205 yards, Young under-went surgery in his second season to remove ankle bone chips.

He was so far behind in the Cowboy system by then that he saw only spot action in his third season. "Young may be a guy who's snake-

Doctor and trainer combine to patch up wounded birds

PGA reduces prize money

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Patching up birds of prey, shot from the sky by careless hunters, is a team effort. It takes a doctor, a trainer and a little help from the U.S. Interior Depart-

For 30 years, Carl Schreiber has handled wounded red-tailed hawks, broad-winged hawks, screech owls, great horned owls and bald and golden eagles.

He takes them to veterinarian Mark Ingram, who cuts, pins and stitches until they're ready for training and, perhaps, release.

Too often, as with a golden eagle wounded last winter, the birds are shot too severely to ever leave captivity. Some die after months on the mend

"This one was shot in the wing with a high powered rifle," Schreiber said. "Its bones, similar to those in our forearms, were broken."

In shock and nearly comatose, the eagle underwent 90 minutes of surgery.

"He came to me first for amputa-tion," Dr. Ingram said, "Then we tried to save it. We pinned both broken bones in the right wing and kept it wrapped for about three and a half weeks, checking for movement periodically.'

"He's jumping to my fist and exercising as much as he can," Schreiber said. "And he's got his breast muscles built up as much as possible."

But there'll be no more soaring or swooping down on prey for this bird. "He's not going to make it back in the wild," Schreiber said. "The damage from the shots destroyed the blood supply to an area. But he's strong, healthy and eating well." The bird is living on a diet of rodents, and doves confiscated by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"We feed him just as natural a diet as we can get for him," Schreiber said. "He needs high calcium content for the bones and a supplement with cod liver oil, of course.

"He lost too much blood in what corresponds to our fingers," Ingram said. "I'll be shortening his wing so he can use it better. He's using it fairly well now but I'm afraid it might break on him. When he leaves for the zoo I want to make sure I don't see him

But the bird died before its recuperation was complete. Dr. Ingram said the bird died in the first week of June as it was being prepared for the last surgical procedure which had been planned for it.

"He went into shock again, probably because it was being handled by people who were strange to it," he

Another golden eagle Schreiber nursed and trained died en route to

"We have three priorities in mind in crippled eagles," Willie Parker, an agent of the U.S Fish and Wildlife Service, said. "The foremost is re-turning the bird to the wild. The second is a captive breeding ground if it can't be returned. The third is placing it in some municipal zoo or something of that nature where it'll be cared for for the rest of its life.

"But if the dang fools stopped shooting them we wouldn't have to be concerned with them, would we?"

Our previous steel cord used only five steel filaments

Now there are ten. It's an all new steel cord that starts out with two filaments with seven more wrapped around them. Then, one more steel filament binds the cord together. That's how the tire received its name seven over two plus one - or, 721.

New stronger steel

Coke's empire includes much more than pop

By ROBERT FURLOW

ATLANTA (AP) — Until 1955, says a Coca-Cola executive, the American soft-drink giant had "one product in two packages — Coca-Cola in a 6½unce bottle or fountain glass." Twenty-three years later that's changed.

There's an armload of competing Coke-owned soft drinks in a wide variety of containers. There are land-locked, shrimp-farm experiments, Minute-Maid orange juice plants, coffee, wine and nutritionally charged drinks, a huge water-desalting company, an archeological project in Egypt and embarrassed memories of an expensive Broadway musical

"There's no buy-a-company-a-day philosophy here, but we have been diversifying," said John White, supervisor of corporate services at Coke's Atlanta headquarters.

Soft drinks still dominate at Coke, accounting for $2.7 billion of the company's $3.5 billion sales last year. And a lot of the apparently unrelated diversification backs up production and marketing of those soft drinks.

For example, White said Aqua-Chem was a pioneer in desalting equipment, but that company now a Coke subsidiary — also has scientists pushing against technological boundaries in various areas of water purification.

"We're certainly interested in water as an impor tant ingredient in our product," White noted.

Another, more subtle example involves the archeological expedition and an agreement to begin a multi-million-dollar program to revitalize Egypt's citrus industry. Whatever other reasons might be involved, Coke officials acknowledge such projects are goodwill-builders valuable to a company fighting to get off the Arab boycott list that Coke got on for doing business with Israel. Coca-Cola Co. began branching out in Florida orchards in 1960, acquiring Minute Maid, which also includes the Snow Crop juice brand. Now company publications call Coke "the world's single largest grower and processor of citrus products."

In 1970 Duncan Foods Co., a coffee-importing firm, came aboard. Coke now markets numerous coffees and teas, including the Butter-Nut and Maryland Club brands. Aqua-Chem was acquired in 1970.

Later in the 1970s Coke began buying wine businesses, first purchasing New York's Taylor Wine Co., the nation's sixth largest, then Monterey Vineyard and the small but prestigious Premier Sterling Vineyards, both in California.

Those vineyard purchases brought protests from abstemious Methodist Church stockholders, but that

Coke also has come up with soft drink competitors for its most famers brand. Now there are Fanta, Sprite, TAB, Fresca, Mr. PiBB and Hi-C.

The company has bought out a few of its bottlers over the years and owns about 10 percent of them now. But officials say they don't really want to be in the bottling business, and their main business remains the selling of soft-drink syrup to bottlers or Coke officials have grimaced for decades as detractors questioned Coca-Cola's impact on health. But a company attempt to market a beverage jam-packed with nutrition is one of its few ventures that hasn't caught on.

Drinks made from bases such as soybeans and whey extract have been tested in the United States another test is under way in the Soviet Union - and are being sold in South America, White said. White said company technologists are overcoming objections that the drinks weren't tasty enough, adding that it's now a matter of getting people to accept something that's good for them - as much a problem for business as for parents.

English invasion irks Czech press

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) - English words have long since crept into French, German and other languages. Now they are in the mouths of chic Czechs, and the Communist-controlled press is furi-"We shall not permit the Westernization of our republic," the weekly Tribuna said. The use of terms like "make-up" in Czech is a subversive capitalist plot to corrupt East Europe with petty bourgeois values, the weekly said.

It was the latest and most colorful of media attacks against the seemingly irreversible tide of incorporating English words into Czech, sometimes in their original form, sometimes in a phonetic approxima-

One of the ways English creeps into Czech is through products made by state-run industry. Despite media attacks, English appears as popular as ever in this field, especially in cosmetics. "Fluid Make Up" is well established Pruboj, a North Bohemia daily, recently took exception to baby bibs sold with the inscription "My Darling" and cosmetics labeled "For Man." Tribuna said much of the English was "pettybourgeois, consumerist, snobbish terminology copied from the glossy packages and bags made in the West.' It said it was all part of "anti-Communist infiltrations which imperialist subversives and disrupters would love to take root here." The weekly said attempts to persuade industry to stick to Czech names "fall through empty skulls." Czech attacks on English began about 10 years ago. At first they were directed mostly against the use of English in pop music. In the early 1970s, the group Blue Effect had to change its name to Modry

Now the English terms are lurking everywhere. A government-sponsored physical fitness program has the name "Bud Fit," which means nothing in Czech but was coined from "be fit."

Food from the West has brought its English names: krekers (crackers), grepy (grapefruit), lancmit (lunch meat), rosbif (roast beef) and even heminex (ham and eggs).

major companies - the "Seven Sisters" - it long has been apparent that at least some have been providing white Rhodesians with their lifeline.

The two published descriptions of the trade agree that the companies have observed carefully the division of the Rhodesian market that existed when Smith declared independence. It has been split, down to the decimal point, by BP and Shell acting as a unit; CalTex, a partnership of Standard Oil of California and the Texas Company; Mobil, and a sibsidiary of Compagnie Francaise des Petroles, according to the report.

This last company has sometimes been called an "eighth sister" because it collaborates so frequently with the seven who dominate exploration, production, transportation, refining and marketing of the non-Communist world's oil.

(The U.S. Senate Subcomittee on Foreign Economic Policy is in the preliminary stage of an inquiry into American firms' involvement in the Rhodesian sales. Karin Lissakers, of the subcommittee staff, said initial evidence suggests that African subsidiaries of Mobil and Caltex have sold oil to Rhodesia since the issuance of a presidential order in 1968 prohibiting such transactions by American (Spokesmen for both CalTex and Mobil said that none of their subsidiaries is trading with Rhodesia. A Treasury Department probe of Mobil in 1977 found no evidence to suggest Mobil products were going to Rhodesia. Mobil's South African subsidiary, however, refused to provide documents or testimony for that investi-

After sanctions were imposed on Rhodesian trade in 1965, the oil companies are said to have worked through thinly disguised intermediaries to bring in their product. According to Bailey and Rivers, the most important conduit worked this way: Shell-Mozambique, jointly owned by Shell and BP, took oil from tankers docking at Lourenco Marques (now Maputo) the capital of Mozambique. Shell-Mozambique sold it to a specially created South African firm, Freight Services. This outfit then delivered the oil by rail to GENTA, the Rhodesian purchasing agent. That simple technique made a monkey of the British Navy which was blockading another Mozambique port, Beira, for nine years, threatening to intercept tankers that never

A variant of the scheme was described by Jardim, the ex-minister in Portugal's Salazar government. Under this arrangement, the French concern took over Shell's Rhodesian orders and placed a matching order with Shell

Bailey and Rivers estimate that BP and Shell alone have supplied Rhodesia with 100 million pounds or nearly $190 million in oil products. Their share of the trade, the U.N. aides wrote, has held at a remarkably steady 42.5 percent.

The New Statesman writers insist that the parent companies in London had to know what their Shell-Mozambique subsidiary was up to. This is because the Portuguese government insisted that Shell-Mozambique countersign customs documents in which Freight Services declared that the oil was heading for Rhodesia.

In the late 1960s, the heads of BP and Shell, William Fraser and Frank McFaden, began worrying about the arrangements, according to memos and cables quoted by the U.N. aides, They tell how the oil chiefs explained to George Thomson, then the commonwealth secretary, that the great concerns could not be certain that their oil was not reaching Rhodesia.

Lord Thomson, as George Thomson is known today, now says that the companies had been "less than frank" with him.

Concept unique

SAN ANTONIO, Texas-The unique concept of federal dollars financing a city's risky search for natural gas might cause problems, said Frank Bowie, program manager for HUD's local community development division. Other officials say the Raza Unida connection will not help either.

"It's an unusual case from the standpoint that we've never had a city request something of this nature. Since it is the first one, I would suspect there would be some problems," said Bowie.

Bowie's office provides recommendations on the application before sending it to Wash-

Raul Flores, Crystal City's city manager, said city and county officials fear large utility and oil companies will attempt to kill the project to prevent a rash of towns from becoming energy self-sufficient. Officials also fear Raza Unida foes will hurt the grant.

Neighboring Carrizo Springs, a town of 8,500 only 11 miles away in gas-producing Dimmit County, is watching Crystal City's application with great interest, since it is also eligible for such a grant.

"We are very interested," said Carrizo Springs City Manager A.C. Gonzalez. "The whole area is attempting to find a way to lesser the load on the people. If they are going to use federal dollars to develop a cheap gas supply, we're very interested in that, as well.'

Eagle Pass, which is about 45 miles southwest of Crystal City, is also eligible for one of the economic development grants.

Carter's promise tied to tax

By STAN BENJAMIN WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's promise at the Bonn summit meeting to raise U.S. oil prices to the world level by 1981 relies mainly on the crude oil tax proposal that Congress has avoided for the past 14 months, an administration spokesman said Tuesday.

But Energy Department spokesman James Bishop Jr. said Carter still holds in reserve the power to discourage U.S. oil imports by imposing an import fee, as the administration has frequently threatened.

And actually crude oil price controls under present law become discretionary as of May 1979, at which point Carter could let U.S. oil prices jump to the world level.

Carter prefers to continue limiting the producers' crude oil price and raise the cost to refiners and consumers through a tax, instead, to avoid handing the producers what he considers a huge windfall profit.

What Carter's pledge means to the consumer is simply what his policy has has meant since it was proposed in April 1977: an increase in the average price of gasoline and other petroleum products of around 6.4 cents per gallon over the next couple of years.

Carter told reporters, after two days of meeting with the heads of six other industrial nations, that "each one of us was cautious not to promise things he could not subsequently de-

But the fact remains that Congress, not Carter, has the power to deliver or withhold the promised increase of U.S. domestic crude oil prices by passing the proposed tax, or modifying or even extending the present price control law.

So far, Congress has been so reluctant to consider the crude oil tax that it split this proposal out of the comprehensive energy bill to give the other segments a better chance of passage.

Fishing job fruitless

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - An electronic instrument accidentally dropped into an offshore well may prevent Texaco from testing for oil and gas to the bottom of its 15,025-foot exploratory hole, company officials

Texaco spokesman Vernon R. Shorter said Tuesday that the company will test the seabed geological formations above the well's 14,800foot level "to determine if hydrocarbons are present."

A "logging tool," an electronic in-strument used to measure the presence of hydrocarbons, accidentally was dropped into the well July 7. Shorter said efforts to recover the tool, which is lodged at 14,800 feet, have failed so far.

Texaco sparked a flurry of activity last week when it implied in a cryptic statement that it had found oil or gas, or both, in its first exploratory well 106 miles offshore.

The company said last Thursday said it would test the well "to determine whether hydrocarbons exist in commerical quanities." Company spokesmen would elaborate.

The statement came after two other firms, Continental and Shell, announced their first wells in the Baltimore Canyon Trough were dry. Exxon, Mobil, Houston Oil & Minerals and Gulf also are drilling exploratory plan awaits house vote mous, said on Tuesday a "lame duck" session after the elections to deal with the tax measures is a growing possilater this month. "Natural gas will be a tough fight," said Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee. "And if you knock out natural gas, you've knocked out half of the president's program."

However, Jackson said that Tuesday's vote at least signals some longawaited progress on the Carter energy plan. "At least we've found the tunnel. And there may even be some light," he said.

Carter, at the conclusion of the economic summit in Bonn, talked about raising U.S. oil prices to worldmarket levels — now about $13.50 a barrel — by late 1986, which would be accomplished by the crude oil tax. The president also promised to work toward reducing U.S. oil imports by 2.5 million barrels a day.

Administration officials said Tuesday that while certain direct steps were availble to Carter to achieve these goals, such as import fees or quotas, he was still counting on Congress to pass the bulk of his energy program - including the crude oil

Backers of the so-called "coal conversion" bill approved in the Senate said it could reduce oil imports - now at about 8 million barrels a day - by as much as 1.3 million barrels daily. But critics said they doubted the savings would exceed 250,000 barrels a day, citing numerous exemptions in the bill and claiming that many industries are switching to coal anyway. A barrel of oil holds 42 gallons. U.S. oil consumption now is supported at least 43 percent by foreign oil.

Crystal City' chances on strike stand 50-50

By GREG THOMPSON

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Crystal City's odds of hitting a wildcat gas well are "50-50" - better than normal in the risky business of wildcatting, says the consulting engineer in the gas-starved city's proposal for a federally-funded drilling project.

"I can't overemphasize the risk," said San Antonio petroleum engineer George Ozuna Jr. "Any well drilling operation is risky. But this is less risky than most. "This is no pie in the sky proposal.

This is a project supported and re-commended by people who are spe-cialists in their field. This is a virgin gas field and not too many people know about it. I'm very confident," he Lo Vaca Gathering Co. shut off the natural gas supply to the city-owned gas system last Sept. 23 because of an unpaid $800,000 debt. Most of the town's 8,100 residents, many of them poor Mexican-American migrant workers, have been forced to use wood for heating and cooking. Others have turned to butane and propane. Ironically, Crystal City sits in the middle of Zavala County's rich natural gas fields. That's why the city is seeking a $650,000 federal grant to acquire gas leases and drill six wells. Crystal City would provide another $318,000, borrowed against the producing wells, to build a pipeline.

The local office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development has approved the preliminary appli-cation. The Middle Rio Grande Development Council, which oversees disbursement of federal grants, has approved the full application. The final decision will be made in Washington.

Ozuna's geologists have pinpointed 17 sites in the county where geological formations indicate possible gas deposits. None of those are inside the city limits, the nearest being about five miles away.

Geologists estimate that a successful well would produce up to 15 million cubic feet of gas per month for 22-55 years. City officials hope to hit two wells in the six attempts, which they feel would make the city energy self-sufficient. That's considered vital in this Raza Unida Party-controlled "A few inches either way could make all the difference. I didn't neglect to tell the city fathers they could drill six dry holes," said Ozuna. "But if they use seismic exploration, it should bring the odds to 50-50. I'm almost confident enough to say the odds are even better. One outfit has hit eight of nine wells in Zavala County by using seismic exploration. A San Antonio oil and gas geologist said statistics have shown the odds of hitting a wildcat gas well are three out of 10.
