Pay Boosts For Nurses Urged Here

A LUBBOCK County Hospital District committee has recommended that salaries and fringe benefits for nurses at the district's teaching hospital be increased immediately to enhance recruitment of such scarce health-care professionals.

Without the extra incentives, nurses can't be drawn from other cities and states to work at the new Health Sciences Center Hospital, district officials said.

Without more nurses, additional beds cannot be opened. Without more beds—and the revenue-producing patients that fill them—the tax-supported hospital will continue to run a huge deficit, the administrative committee of the district's board of managers was told Thursday.

Holding Up Expansion

"I don't want to start a wage war with Methodist Hospital or anybody else," committee chairman Jack Strong said. "But we need to get the people (nurses) here so we can fully open this hospital and get our cost per bed down."

The committee's recommendations, to be considered by the full board on Monday, would provide:

—A five percent pay raise for nurses. Excluding special shift differentials, the district now pays its beginning nurses $936 per month ($11,232 a year). The recommendation calls for a starting monthly salary of $982 (or $11,784 annually).

—Help with future educational costs. For starting nurses, the district would pay the tuition costs of three semester-hours of college credit a year. More aid would be given more experienced nurses. According to the district staff, three hours' credit at Texas Tech University costs $50. A nurse who takes a course while employed at the hospital would get such reimbursement only upon successful completion of the college credit.

Relocation Expenses Asked

—Reimbursement of relocation expenses of nurses hired from outside Lubbock County. The district currently advances nurses a month's salary for moving here, but the money must be repaid. Under the proposal, the nurse would get the money—up to $982—without having to repay it.

—Reimbursement for pre-employment traveling. Gerald Bosworth, executive director of the district and its hospital, said some out-of-Lubbock nurses are interested in coming here but are reluctant to sign up because they haven't seen the city.

The recommendation would allow such nurses to come to Lubbock to look over the city. And, if they agree to join the hospital staff, they would be reimbursed up to $100 for this traveling expense.

Foreign Recruitment Tabled

The committee considered but tabled temporarily Bosworth's proposal to contract with a San Antonio firm for recruitment of nurses from England, Germany, South Africa and other foreign countries. Representatives of the firm are to meet with the board later.

The pay-and-benefits package, if approved by the board, would apply only to nurses because they are the employees. See PAY BOOSTS Page 14

THEY DID IT—Three American balloonists, Maxie Anderson, Ben Abruzzo and Larry Newman, all of Albuquerque, became the first balloonists to conquer the Atlantic Thursday as they set their giant silver craft down in a wheatfield near the tiny hamlet of Miserey, 60 miles West of Paris, France. Traffic is at a standstill on a nearby road as passers-by rush to greet the three New Mexican aeronauts. The trio left Presque Isle, Me., last Friday and set down Thursday at 12:50 p.m. (CDT) (AP Laserphoto)

American Balloonists Get Paris Heroes' Welcome

PARIS (AP) — Three jubilant Americans eased the Double Eagle II into a Normandy wheatfield Thursday, where it was torn apart by an ecstatic crowd seeking souvenirs of the first successful Atlantic balloon crossing, then were whisked to Paris to see their wives.

"My God, did we have a welcome!" the pilots exclaimed as they were surrounded by crowds of Frenchmen who thronged the Rue du Faubourg St. Honore outside the residence of the U.S. ambassador. The crowd included a half dozen statuesque Paris showgirls wearing little more than smiles.

"There's nothing left of the balloon, the gondola or anything else," said Ben Abruzzo, 48, one of the adventurers.

Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson, 44, and Larry Newman, 31, all of Albuquerque, N.M., landed their huge silver balloon in a wheat field 600 yards from the farming village of Miserey, 60 miles west of Paris. The pilots' wives, red-eyed with tears of joy, flew from Deauville on the English Channel coast to Paris in a private jet for what Mrs. Abruzzo said was going to be "one hell of a celebration. Then we'll all be as high as kites." After landing at Miserey, the pilots flew by helicopter to Le Bourget Airport and were driven to downtown Paris for the reunion with their wives.

In the wheat field near Miserey, French and American flags flapped from the gondola of the 112-foot-high balloon, which had wilted to the shape of an exclamation point but stood upright briefly against the fading evening light.

Cheering crowds abandoned their cars and rushed to the balloon to congratulate the pilots as they jumped from the red and yellow gondola to secure the balloon in a stiff evening breeze.

Two bottles of champagne, one from the balloon, were opened and sprayed on the cheering crowd. Before they landed, the pilots jokingly radioed ahead for hamburgers and French fries. But they appeared to be in line for French champagne and the best cuisine France has to offer.

About 50 policemen stood in an arm-in-arm cordon around the crew after landing. But before police could restrain the enthusiastic mob, the balloon's gondola was ripped apart and children tore and bit off pieces of the balloon to take home as souvenirs.

"I did it, dad, I did it, dad," said Newman, burying his head in his father's shoulder and weeping. His father Herb had come to Europe to greet his son.

"We ran into trouble four times on the flight," Anderson said.

The only problem he described was "when we iced up badly about halfway across the Atlantic. It cost us a lot of ballast and height."

"Last year we went down off Iceland," he said, "and we're kind of glad to be here in France this time."

Anderson's remarks were often interrupted by cheers from the crowd.

Anderson and Abruzzo tried the crossing last year but ditched five miles off the coast of Iceland.

Asked why they didn't set down in Ireland once they had made the crossing, he said, "I guess Ireland would have done it."

but we flew across Ireland last night, and it was real beautiful."

"The reason we wanted to come to France was Charles Lindbergh," Anderson said. "He's an inspiration to many generations of Frenchmen and Americans."

The balloon touched down at 7:50 p.m. Paris time (12:50 p.m. CDT) 137 hours, 18 minutes after it lifted off Friday from Presque Isle, Maine.

The three appeared in good health and spirits after succeeding where 17 other teams had failed since the first try in 1873. Six men and a woman died in earlier attempts.

The spectators had been following the balloon, often with the help of binoculars, as it drifted across the checkerboard fields of western France on the last leg of its journey. More poured in from nearby Evreux as the radio announced a landing was imminent.

Airman, Wife Win Lindbergh Bed

PARIS (AP) — Triumphant balloonist Larry Newman and his wife Sandra won the right to spend Thursday night in the single bed Charles Lindbergh slept in after his solo trans-Atlantic airplane flight in 1927.

"We drew straws and Larry won," Ben Abruzzo announced at a victory party Thursday night where he, Newman and Maxie Anderson drank a lot of champagne.

All of the fliers and their wives spent the night at the U.S. ambassador's residence in downtown Paris, where Lindbergh slept after his solo feat.

Injunction Planned To Bar LP&L In Southwest Sector

DIST. JUDGE William R. Shaver has informed attorneys he will issue a permanent injunction barring Lubbock Power and Light (LP&L) from expanding service into a recently annexed sector in Southwest Lubbock.

The decision means a legal victory for South Plains Electric Co-op, which had sought the injunction on the grounds that the city's utility had not received permission from the Public Utility Commission to expand service.

The city contended, however, during a trial in Shaver's 140th District Court last month, that the act creating the PUC does not provide the machinery for a city-owned utility to seek such permission.

During the trial, City Atty. Fred Senter had argued that the city was "obligated" to provide electric service to annexed areas and accused the co-op of trying to maintain a monopoly.

The area in question is about 960 acres bounded by 82nd and 98th Streets and by Quaker and Frankford Avenues. The acreage was annexed by the city last fall.

Testimony indicated it could be the site of up to 8,000 residences, if fully developed.

In a letter to attorneys, Shaver indicated he would grant the injunction. The letter indicated Shaver found:

•His court has jurisdiction over the case.

•Commission certificates do not violate constitutional prohibition against monopolies.

•The co-op has no adequate remedy but injunctive relief.

•A provision of state civil statutes prohibits the city from providing utility services to the annexed area without first obtaining a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the state utility commission.

Assistant City Atty. Jim Brewster said the ruling means the city will be enjoined "from providing any service out there until" the case, or an analogous one, is reversed on appeal or until the city obtains certification.

"I expect our recommendation will be to appeal," Brewster said.

Co-op attorney Dale Johnson had argued in court that the key issue was whether the city could serve the disputed area without a PUC certificate.

Johnson said the co-op gained sole authority to serve the area in question two years ago when it entered an agreement with Southwestern Public Service Co. and LP&L over service boundaries.

Extension Clause Cited

The attorney said the utility act stipulates a utility "can't extend service to an area already served by another utility without first obtaining certification of service from the PUC."

Senter had argued the city's financial position might be adversely affected if Shaver granted the injunction.

Bill Woods, city director of electric utilities, testified the city already had sold about $18 million in bonds to serve the city's growing populace, including those who will eventually live in the annexed territory.

He said it was "possible" the city might be unable to pay off those bonds if not permitted to serve the new area.

Tax Limits Plan May Be Unconstitutional

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

TAX LIMITS that an anti-busing group wants to add to the City of Lubbock charter may be unconstitutional. But if the group obtains enough signatures on its petitions, the city must let the public vote on the charter proposals anyway.

That is the opinion of the city's legal department concerning the charter proposals being pushed by an organization called We the People.

Leaders of the group concede some of their proposed tax limitations and policies may indeed conflict with state laws and the Texas Constitution. But such matters can be settled by the courts if voters approve the propositions, the organization says.

"All we want is for people to have a voice — to let them say for themselves whether they want to limit government taxing and spending," said Dana Vowell of We the People.

And so on Saturday, she said, the group will be out in force to gather signatures on petitions calling for a special city election on the charter proposals.

From 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., We the People will have booths set up at 34th Street and Toledo Avenue, and at 50th Street and University Avenue, at which the petitions may be signed, Mrs. Vowell said.

She said the group already has about 1,

500 signatures. The organization is shooting for 10,000 signatures so that "even if some of the names are struck, there will be no doubt that the election must be called," Mrs. Vowell said.

Mrs. Vowell disclosed Thursday that the city's legal department already has responded to the group's efforts. An opinion on the matter was written July 20 by Fred Senter, before he retired last month as city attorney.

Senter drafted the four-page opinion for Mayor Dirk West, at the request of City Mgr. Larry Cunningham.

Senter stressed he is "not expressing an opinion as to the legality or validity" of the propositions, though he does suggest that the proposed charter amendments appear to be in conflict with Texas law.

In any event, he said, that doesn't really matter.

"The city council has no authority to pass upon the validity of any proposition and has no discretion but to call an election upon being presented with a legal petition to call a charter amendment election," Senter stated.

He said there are about 56,000 qualified voters in Lubbock, and that an election must be held if at least five percent of them — or 2,800 — sign a petition.

The We the People proposals consist of four propositions.

The first proposition is that "the maxi-

War Fear Seen If Talks Fail

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Thursday a rapid deterioration in the search for Middle East peace left him no choice but to convene an admittedly risky summit at Camp David. But he conceded that failure "could result in a new conflict" in the area.

"It is a very high risk thing for me politically," the president said in his first public comment on the summit scheduled to begin at the presidential retreat on Sept. 5.

At a nationally televised news conference, Carter also took a tough line with Congress, announcing a veto of a $37 billion military authorization bill, and hinting of several more vetoes to come.

Good Faith Cited

Carter said he was "absolutely convinced" both Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat want peace. Both men swiftly accepted invitations to the summit, showing their good faith, the president added.

"We do not have any assurance of success," Carter said.

Since Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem last year, Carter said peace initiatives have "broken down completely." He said he sent both leaders a letter outlining a framework of working toward peace.

On other foreign matters, Carter said his administration is "constantly exploring ways to have better relationships with China." He said the pace of negotiations for normalization of relations "must be one that is mutually set."

Soviet Sales Eyed

Asked about possible trade sanctions against the Soviet Union, the president said he would evaluate individual sales to see whether they would enhance the Soviet's military capability and whether Moscow was "the only reasonable source of supply for that item."

Carter used the news conference to announce his fifth presidential veto, and virtually promised more in the future.

He said he was rejecting the weapons bill because it contained $2 billion for a new nuclear aircraft carrier the nation did not need. "This is not a question of money," Carter said. "It's a question of how that money is going to be spent."

Carter said he wanted more money spent on U.S. forces in NATO, research and development and maintenance of conventional forces.

Saying a veto is "not an abnormal authority ... it should be a routine part of the interrelationship between the White

Stocks Cross 900 Level In Big Rally

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Dow Jones industrial average, despite late profit taking, crossed the 900 level Thursday for the first time in nearly 13 months as stocks rallied behind President Carter's pledge to aid the dollar.

Trading was heavy as the Dow gained 5.54 points to 900.12, the highest level since it finished at 908.18 on July 28, 1977.

The New York Stock Exchange volume of 45,270,000 shares was the 11th heaviest in the Big Board's 186-year history.

Institutions and foreign investors surged into the market when the dollar rebounded abroad in response to Carter's announcement Wednesday that he had ordered his cabinet to take steps to remedy the currency's weakness.

But some traders took profits prior to Carter's news conference at which the president urged Congress to pass his energy program to aid the dollar and said he would veto an "unsatisfactory" tax cut bill.

The Fed intervened to support the dollar on foreign exchanges and tightened credit at home. Late in the day, the Fed reported the nation's basic money supply rose $600 million in the latest week and that its long-term growth was down.

num of all taxes levied upon the citizens of the City of Lubbock, for city purposes, shall not exceed 80 cents per $100 valuation." The city tax rate last year was $1.41; the coming year's rate has been proposed at $1.12. Dropping to 80 cents could cost millions of dollars in revenue.

Senter said the Texas Constitution also provides for a maximum 80-cent rate for cities, but this provision is overridden by another constitutional passage that allows for a city tax rate of up to $2.50.

"Although there is no direct conflict between establishment of an 80-cent tax rate per $100 valuation, nevertheless it may be found that such a limitation imp-

Carter Vetoes N-Carrier Weapons Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter Thursday vetoed a $37 billion military weapons authorization bill which included $2 billion for a new nuclear aircraft carrier because, he said, "cuts into the muscle of our military defense."

The president told a nationally televised news conference that the money authorized by the bill should be redistributed to give greater emphasis to military readiness.

"This is not a question of money," Carter said. "The Congress reduced only slightly the amount of money I recommended. It's a question of how that money is going to be spent."

Reaction on Capitol Hill was generally mixed, with Republicans mostly attacking the president's decision and Democrats split.

Carter said that as commander-in-chief of the armed forces he is obligated to see that American troops are combat ready and properly equipped.

"The nation's interest and my oath of office require me to veto this bill," the president said.

It was over Carter's objections that Congress voted to authorize $2 billion for a new aircraft carrier. "We cannot afford to waste our defense dollars," the president said.

In his veto message, Carter said the authorization bill "would lead to less defense capability than I have requested... by eliminating funds for high priority defense requirements and adding funds for purposes which do not meet our defense needs."

The House scheduled a vote on overriding the veto for Sept. 7 after completing a three-week recess.

Carter's public announcement of the veto followed a White House session earlier in the day in which he notified congressional leaders of his intentions.

According to congressional and Pentagon historians, it was the first presidential veto of a defense authorization bill — although there have been a few vetoes of appropriations measures involving Army programs.

After Carter passed the word to key lawmakers, House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas said he doubted that Congress would override the veto. Wright's Republican counterpart, John Rhodes of Arizona, said, "I think most Republicans would vote to override."

Sen. John C. Culver, D-Iowa, said the president's veto would "allow us to put our tax dollars where they can do the most immediate good to preserve our strength."

However, another Democrat, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, said he believed "the president has made a serious mistake."

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said the chances of the Senate overriding the veto would be "good at least."

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee called Carter's announcement "another in a long list of ill-advised presidential decisions which will collectively undermine our national defense."

13th Chess Match Adjourned

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — The 13th game of the world chess championship between defending champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi was adjourned Thursday after 40 moves.

Play resumes Friday.

Korchnoi sealed his 41st move just before the break. Three moves earlier the 47-year-old Soviet defector kept up his bold play with the white pieces as he exchanged a rook for Karpov's knight.

Michael Stern, a Korchnoi second, called the move "an interesting sacrifice," saying he felt it gave the challenger a chance to gain a victory over the 27-year-old Soviet.

International chess master and author Harry Golombek of England said "Korchnoi has a winning chance. Maybe he has the edge in position, but it all depends on their analysis."

Each man has won one game. The first to win six gets $350,000 and the title. The loser takes home $200,000. Draws do not count. The tournament began in this rainy resort city July 18 and could last several months.

Korchnoi was playing white, which opens, for the seventh time. As in their first game, he led with a pawn to queen bishop four and Karpov responded with a queen's gambit declined.

Stern called it a tame move "to bore his opponent to death."

Before Thursday's game began, chief arbiter Lothar Schmidt of West Germany said a compromise had been reached between the players on procedure for offering a draw in the current game.

He said they will do so directly, but added he hopes the question of offering draws on future games will be settled in the next few days.

A misunderstanding between Korchnoi and Schmidt caused confusion in the 12th game when Schmidt thought the challenger was offering a draw before the game was adjourned. Eventually the game ended in a draw.

Firemen No Match For Skunk

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Ten firemen learned a lesson Thursday when they went to the aid of a San Diego man who reported a skunk had taken up residence under the hood of his car.

Fire Capt. Roy Knowles said the skunk, who moved into the car several weeks ago, had built a nest behind the battery using insulation material from underneath the hood.

"There they were, 10 firemen out in front of the station," Knowles reported. "And one guy with a skunk in his car."

Knowles said firemen sprayed water in the engine compartment, beat on the car, yelled at the little creature and even raced the car around the parking lot — slamming on the brakes occasionally — to try and jar the skunk loose.

But the skunk remained in his home. And, to show his determination, when firemen opened the hood for one last effort, the skunk lifted his tail and sprayed, narrowly missing them.

"The little guy took one look at 10 firemen and let us have it," said one of the men on the scene.

"It's the fire department zero, the skunk 10," Knowles concluded.

Weak Cold Front To Lessen Heat's Grip

Blistering temperatures that broke records for the hottest maximum and minimum recordings Thursday, are expected to return today with an afternoon high of 103.

Tonight's low is expected to be in the upper 60s as a weak cold front moves into the area to hold temperatures in the upper 90s Saturday. Winds should be southerly to southwesterly at 10 to 15 mph.

Thursday, temperatures soared to 103 under clear skies from a warm morning low of 75. These temperatures broke a record of 102 set in 1943 and a record of 73 set in 1970, respectively.

Even though temperatures are expected to drop some by Saturday, readings are expected to remain unseasonably warm through Tuesday across West Texas.

The rest of the state is expecting clear to partly cloudy skies today with some isolated thunderstorms in the mountains of the West Texas region.

Atlanta Evidence Might Be Wrong, Ray Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray told House investigators Thursday he would take the blame for Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination "right here on television" if they could prove he was in Atlanta three days before.

The House assassinations committee displayed evidence that he was, but Ray countered by saying the committee's evidence was wrong. In response to the presentation, Ray suggested that the evidence "might be a mistake ... or some kind of forged document."

The exchange came as lawmakers zeroed in on the convicted assassin's oft-told story that he was framed for King's slaying by a man identified only as Raoul.

The committee suggested that Ray, who is serving a 99-year prison term for King's assassination, had been stalking King. The committee produced evidence that Ray was in Selma, Ala., the day after King visited there two weeks before the assassination. And it submitted evidence purporting to show that Ray was in Atlanta just days before the murder.

"I know I didn't return to Atlanta," Ray swore under oath, "and if I did, well, I'll just take responsibility for the King case right here on TV." Ray, who pleaded guilty to killing King but recanted three days later, was referring to live television coverage of the hearings.

The committee then displayed a huge blowup of two laundry tickets showing Eric S. Galt, the alias Ray agreed he was using, put clothes in the Piedmont Laundry in Atlanta April 1.

And then it produced a transcript quoting Jimmy Delton Garner, operator of Garner's Rooming House in Atlanta, as saying Ray was there the day before and paid him $10.50 rent.

"Well, he's in error," Ray told Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio.

Ray said he is sure he put the laundry in March 25 and that the laundry slip is either forged or the clerk wrote down the wrong date.

The committee produced a page from the laundry counter book with the same date but Ray insisted they are wrong. "I went into the laundry," he said, "but I did not go in April."

Earlier, the committee had produced a motel receipt showing Ray stayed in Selma, Ala., March 22, the day after King was there.

Ray said he simply got on the wrong road while driving from New Orleans to Atlanta "and I wound up in Selma so I stayed there."

But Stokes continued that line of questioning — over loud and repeated objections by Ray's lawyer, Mark Lane — suggesting that Ray stalked King all the way from Los Angeles.

"Mr. Ray, isn't it true that from the time you left Los Angeles to the time you left Memphis on April 4, 1968, that you were in the process of following the movements of Dr. King?" Stokes asked.

"No sir," Ray replied.

Ray repeated his assertion that he was several blocks away at a service station when King was killed.

Lane said statements of two men confirming Ray's whereabouts have been turned over to the committee. Ray said other witnesses at the murder scene, including a number of policemen, should be able to confirm it was not him who dropped the murder rifle and fled the area.

Ray said he did not know Atlanta was King's home city, and said he was going there because Raoul had summoned him to begin a gun-smuggling operation to Mexico.

He said he and Raoul then went to Birmingham on March 29 to buy a rifle that Ray said he was told was to be a sample for the Mexico customers but which is identified as the gun that killed King.

He said Raoul told Ray to meet him in Memphis on April 3, and swore he "killed time" in small Alabama cities for the next four days and did not return to Atlanta.

Author William Bradford Huie concluded that Ray stalked King to kill him, basing the conclusion largely on the evidence that Ray returned to Atlanta where King was before the assassination.

The committee also displayed a huge blowup of a postal change of address card proving that Ray was wrong when he testified under oath that he thought he was going from Los Angeles only to New Orleans, not Atlanta.

The card, with Ray's handwriting on it and a Los Angeles cancellation stamp, requested his mail be forwarded to general delivery in Atlanta, Ga.

Ray said he is still convinced he filed the change of address card in Birmingham or Atlanta, after finding out in New Orleans that he was going to Atlanta. But he conceded that the card shows otherwise.

Stokes concentrated his opening questions on contradictions in varying versions Ray has given of the Raoul story for 10 years. And Ray conceded he has made mistakes and even lied to writers on occasion.

Ray said he turned the rifle over to Raoul in Memphis the day before the assassination, and that when King was shot the next day he had already left the rooming house from which the shot was believed to have been fired.

Stokes told Ray that committee investigators have not been able to find anyone who ever saw Raoul in Ray's company.

Ray said one waitress in Memphis, one waitress in Birmingham and the rooming house operator in Atlanta might have seen him with Raoul.

Stokes indicated the committee found only the rooming house operator and said he told the committee he does not remember seeing Ray with anyone.

Stokes also asked Ray about his admission that his fingerprints are on the rifle that killed King, and that no one else's are.

"Doesn't that raise doubt about the existence of Raoul?" Stokes asked.

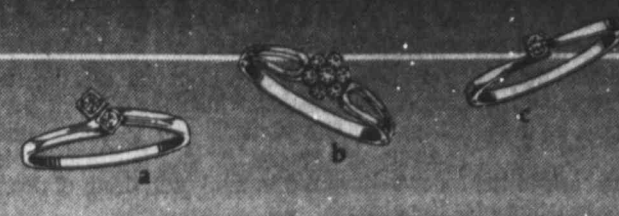

"Not to me," Ray replied. "I wouldn't leave fingerprints on a rifle if I was going to use it in a serious crime."

"How would he wipe off his fingerprints without wiping off yours?" Stokes asked.

"I wouldn't put them on," Ray said. "I would use Band-Aids on my fingertips."

AN EDITORIAL:

A Word For FBI And CIA

WHILE TAKING note of the fact that both the CIA and FBI have been guilty of actions which were better left alone, we think it is far past time for someone to speak up in the defense of the two agencies.

For several years now, dating back to the days of Watergate and the assassination of former President Kennedy and Martin Luther King, it has been a popular pastime for someone—from would-be "expose" authors to Congressmen to minority leaders and liberals—to downgrade both organizations.

TO HEAR and read much of the verbiage of the past few years, one would have to believe that both the FBI and CIA were much greater threats to the U.S. than the Communists.

Another chapter in this charade has been added by the appearance this week of James Earl Ray, the onetime confessed slayer of Martin Luther King.

As he has done previously, Ray related an involved, at times confusing story of how he was only a pawn in the hands of some sort of conspiracy, apparently funded and headed by undercover FBI agents, bent on doing away with the controversial Civil Rights leader.

WHAT MAKES his story more palatable is that it is no secret that King was certainly no favorite person of then FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

So much for the Ray episode for the time being. A special House Assassinations Committee is looking into the matter and presumably will come up with some sort of

AN EDITORIAL:

Faberge In The Footlockers

TAKING ADVANTAGE of the new Women's Armed Services Integration Act, six women enlisted in the "regular" Navy and one in the "regular" Army 30 years ago.

But the diamond anniversary of the historic event hasn't prompted any official celebrations.

Indeed, the very identities of these women appear to be hidden away in some dusty military archive.

OF COURSE, women previously had been part of the military in separate auxiliary units—the Navy WAVES, Army WACS and during World War II, the Yeomanettes.

In these groups they had filled support positions, operating with the men's armed services, but not as an integral part.

The 1948 transition was accomplished with a "paper shuffle" and quiet swearing-in ceremonies, according to military spokesmen.

THE ROLE played by women in today's armed forces gets a lot more attention. Traditionally, women have held jobs in supply, communications, clerical, medical and personnel units.

But coming years may bring an increase of

M. STANTON EVANS:

News Manipulators Fond Of 'Fairness' Doctrine

WASHINGTON—Among the many aspects of the Watergate affair that horrified right-thinking people was the reported effort of the Nixon regime to manipulate the national media.

Such, at any event, was the program spelled out in a memo from a Nixon campaign aide concerning the steps that could be taken to bring unfriendly media spokesmen more closely in line with official opinion.

Included in this list of proposals were suggestions that the antitrust laws be focused on the TV networks; that the Internal Revenue Service take a careful look at certain tax reforms; that the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and its "fairness doctrine" be brought to bear on media dissenters.

Though there was never much attention given it, this Nixon-era memo closely paralleled a similar memo written a dozen years before, in the regime of President John F. Kennedy.

THIS EARLIER MEMO also urged the use of government powers against dissenters from official doctrine, with conservative rather than liberal spokesmen as the principal targets.

Again, the major stress was on the use of the FCC and its "fairness doctrine," permitting regulation of program content, as the handiest method of repression.

Despite the lessons allegedly learned from Watergate, the potential for abuse suggested by these episodes has never been corrected.

The FCC retains the power to grant or withhold licenses from all broadcasters in the United States, on the grounds that somebody has to apportion out the frequencies.

FROM THIS authority has flowed the "fairness doctrine," asserting the power of the agency to monitor content, to make certain the "public airways" are not polluted with one-sided commentary.

Now, however, there is legislation before the Congress which would correct the situation and finding. However, in the background are the rumors and innuendos that the FBI, or perhaps the CIA, actually was somehow—the novels and "inside" stories fail to pin this down—inolved in the Dallas death of John Kennedy.

TO ADD TO the "factual" aspects of the case against the FBI and the CIA is the evidence linking both to illegal acts during the Watergate years and to some foreign events.

In brief, we are beset from within and without by our own security and spy systems, to hear some tell it. While granting that mistakes have been made, we feel that far too much emphasis has been placed upon unfounded rumors, accusations and "sensationalism for sale" as regards what the FBI and the CIA has or has not done.

No one, least of all the media which should know better, has taken the trouble to point out the excellent job the FBI has done and continues to do in fighting domestic crime.

No one, including the politicians who sometimes probably couldn't at a moment's notice tell you where certain nations are located, is willing to defend the CIA as an agency which operates in a nether world of real-life spies and terrorists who do not play by the rules and whose final goal is to bring down Freedom and this nation as we know it.

In short, it's time to speak up for what's right about two key and necessary arms of keeping this nation free from those who would do it in.

women in more physically demanding positions. The Defense Department has asked Congress to remove bans on women filling a number of combat-related jobs, including fighter pilots, destroyer and aircraft-carrier duty, and the infantry.

America's future space probes could well include female astronauts, as several have been accepted for training in that heretofore all-male bastion.

THE REQUEST for removal of the ban on women in combat-related jobs reflects the Pentagon's concern about an expected decline in the number of military-age males during the 1980s.

The pool of eligible men is predicted to be 1.7 million by 1987, down from an estimated 2.1 million in 1979.

Furthermore, studies show women not only are less expensive to recruit but often bring better credentials to many jobs than their male counterparts. Accordingly, the Pentagon hopes to increase the number of women in the armed services from the current 105,000 (6 percent) to 200,000 (11 percent) by 1983.

Oh, excuse me, Sarge, but you have a runner in your hose.

greatly limit the power of the politician to regulate the media.

The bill in question is HR 13015, "The Communications Act of 1978," cosponsored by Reps. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., and Louis Frey, R-Fla.

THE CORE OF the Van Deerlin-Frey proposal is deregulation, especially in the realm of radio.

Under HR 13015, licenses for radio broadcasting would be issued on an indefinite basis, revocable only for cause rather than being subject to three-year renewal by the FCC as is the case today.

In addition, as suggested some years ago by former FCC Chairman Richard Wiley, radio broadcasters would be exempted from the "fairness doctrine," on the plausible ground that there are more than sufficient radio stations (7,000-plus nationwide; 30 and more in each of the major markets) to insure diversity of opinion.

The authors adopt a more restrictive view of TV stations than of radio, reasoning that there are fewer TV outlets and thus a greater need for government surveillance.

STILL, THE BILL envisions transferring the deregulatory approach from audio to video in the relatively near future, after there has been sufficient experience with deregulation.

Also—among the most important pluses in the bill—it would open the way for full-scale competition by totally exempting cable television from the restraint of federal regulation.

There are some negative features of the bill, including an obvious antipathy to vertical integration in the broadcast industry and some other features which cut against the grain of deregulation.

All in all, HR 13015 is an excellent example of liberals and conservatives reaching a consensus on the need for deregulation, and taking some practical steps to achieve it. Here's hoping the bill, in some form or other, eventually passes.

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Ford's Long Knife

WASHINGTON—Intimates of Gerald Ford, fearful that publication of his memoirs early next year will crack Republican harmony wide open, are quietly trying to soften the former President's attack against Ronald Reagan.

No one directly connected with the book (now about half finished) will discuss the matter with outsiders. But insiders, in talks with Ford and his entourage, have learned Ford is using his book to blame his defeat by Jimmy Carter squarely on Reagan's challenge.

Publication of the book is scheduled for next May, just as presidential campaigns are getting underway. Reagan is a certain candidate, Ford a possible one.

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Kelly Is The Best

DIAMONDS MAY BE a girl's best friend, but emeralds go back to about 1600 B.C. Upper Egypt's miners dug them in Alexander the Great's time and, later, emerald mines showered their gems on Cleopatra.

An emerald stomacher brooch, with enameled flowers on gold, was among the treasures of Spanish mid-17th century Pilar.

Diamonds are the hardest substance known to man. Forming them requires enormous pressures and temperatures found only in our earth's deep innards.

But emeralds—six-sided crystals—are more rare than diamonds. However, you rarely find a flawless emerald. Nearly all have internal imperfections. The emerald trade calls these imperfections a "Jardin" (garden) and they are the blights of the trade.

THEY ARE CONCOCTED in our earth's melting pot and consist of beryllium silicate, aluminum, iron, chromium and oxygen. Traces of chromium make emeralds green. The green color is vital. The finest emeralds—the richest, brightest green—are those which the trade calls "Kelly."

Without the chromium, emeralds are comparatively worthless, merely an aquamarine. Emeralds are mined by hand. Nature distributes them unpredictably. The mining takes place on horizontal terraces, like giant steps up the faces of slopes. You find emeralds in pockets of vein clusters, shale deposits, sandstones and even on the beds of our oceans.

Today emeralds are mined chiefly in the Caribbean nation of Colombia, larger than Texas and California combined.

SPAIN RULED Colombia for 300 years. For centuries Spanish galleons groped to the Colombian coast, their return trip contained emeralds consigned to the Spanish King.

A hurricane sunk the first ship off the coast of what is now Texas. Ultimately, the salvage included uncut emeralds and three astro-lobes—a rare navigational instrument for many early Spanish explorations unrivaled at the time.

Colombia's emerald deposits represent the overwhelming majority of the world's deposits. The mines are at Cosquez, Gachala and Penas Blancas, but the main digging is at Chivor and Muzo. They are all within 200 miles of Bogota. And 95 percent of the world's emeralds are found within a 100-mile area.

FOR THE MOST part the same mines were worked by the Chiba Indians and then Spain's conquistadores hired native men and women to work them.

The mines produce each year about a million carats of gem-quality stones. The output is worth about $250 million on the wholesale market. But it costs the government of Colombia about $12 million a year to protect the mines.

Poachers, thieves and illegal mining have always been a terrible problem. In Colombia, the natives call the local gangs the "Emeraldos." They made a no-man's land out of the Colombia mountains around the mines. They are well armed and fight running battles with the government police or make direct raids on emerald convoys.

Emeralds are in turmoil in Colombia. As one result, emeralds are about five times more valuable than a diamond of equal carats. Even a normal fine emerald, flaws and all, is worth as much—and more—than an equal-size diamond.

Ford's intention to use his book to "prove the case" that Reagan's challenge against an incumbent Republican President elected a Democrat will release political hobgoblins.

Cool heads inside the Republican party are trying to dissuade Ford. But considering what one intimate calls Ford's "hatred" for Reagan, success is questionable.

THE UNMISTAKABLE rise of Gerald Raftshoon within the White House is coming not at the expense of his supposed rival, press secretary Jody Powell, but rather domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat.

The reason: Raftshoon, the advertising executive in charge of rehabilitating President Carter's image, is now preparing the briefing papers for Carter interviews and other performances.

That job previously had been done by Eizenstat.

The obvious change is one of style. Raftshoon insists on terse, easily handled formulae for the President on inflation, energy, tax reform/reduction and other questions.

In contrast, Eizenstat used to give him long, detailed memoranda.

THE CHANGE COULD become one of substance. Eizenstat's programmatic liberalism has been a major cause of the chain of "comprehensive" proposals streaming from the White House.

The Raftshoon briefings are greatly diminishing this doctrinal tone.

A footnote: Rumors of a Raftshoon-Powell power clash are premature at the least, but there was one dispute between them on Carter's European tour.

Powell urged a softer tone than Raftshoon in presidential reaction to the conviction of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky.

The President took Powell's advice.

AMBASSADOR MIKE Mansfield, the former Senate Democratic leader now representing the U.S. in Tokyo, is delivering somber warnings to visiting Carter administration officials about Japan's growing fear of the President's Far East policies.

For the first time, Mansfield says, Japanese politicians and military leaders are privately complaining about the relative decline of U.S. naval strength compared to the Soviet Union.

Despite Mansfield's assurances to the Japanese government, concern is rising about the steadfastness and reliability of Carter's policies.

Such concerns have been publicly expressed by many Americans—including Maj. Gen John K. Singlaub, forced into retirement because he questioned U.S. troop withdrawals from South Korea. But Mansfield, a leading Vietnam war dove, did not join the alarm-pointers until the Japanese themselves began conveying their fears to him.

SAVAGE FIGHTING between Syrian peace-keeping troops and Israeli-armed Christian militia in east Beirut is ringing an alarm bell that could drown out the Sept. 5 Camp David summit between Israel and Egypt.

If Syria feels obliged to stamp out the Christian militia in even harsher attacks by its 30,000-man force, Israel may again invade southern Lebanon.

But a new Israeli invasion into tragically war-torn Lebanon is perceived here as certain to force direct Syrian opposition. Last spring, Syrian and Israeli forces deliberately avoided each other.

A flashpoint in Lebanon is dangerously real. If it comes, the Camp David summit—a long-shot effort by President Carter to renew Egyptian-Israeli peace talks—will be short-circuited by the bloody battlefield of Lebanon.

TO PREVENT this from happening, the Carter administration is pushing the Syrians hard to tone down their artillery attacks against reputed Christian strongholds (which have resulted in indiscriminate civilian casualties).

JAY HARRIS:

It's Third And Long

THE NEXT TWO and a half months are going to be hectic and of high interest in Texas and the Lubbock area, for more than one reason.

Late Summer and approaching Fall this year will bring more than just falling leaves, chrysanthemums and forced busing. There'll be Texas Tech's traumatic entry into really big-time football, the Dallas Cowboys and their cheerleaders and Texas politics.

And while more will be written and spoken about the former two, it is the latter which will affect more people where it hurts the most—the pocketbook.

Actually, the games the politicians play and the scores on Nov. 7 are far more important this year than most Texans realize, dyed-in-the-Red Raider and Cowboy fans included.

TEXAS POLITICS this season will be watched by the top pros at the national level.

What happens could well signal the way the state may go in 1980. And how it goes could help decide the way the nation, and eventually, the world goes.

If the Republicans make a major dent in the voting, and especially if GOP candidate Bill Clements upsets Atty. John Hill for the governor's job, then "the message" will be viewed as an omen for 1980.

If the Democrats win, and especially if Demo Rep. Bob Krueger manages to upset Sen. John Tower, then the pros will say that all that anti-Carter talk in a state which went for the President in 1976 is just that, so much talk.

The reason what happens in the state's two major races, as well as the one involving George Bush and State Sen. Kent Hance for Cong. George Mahon's 19th Congressional seat, is so important is that Texas has two men who will could be on the GOP ticket in 1980. Their fate also is involved.

BOTH FORMER Gov. John Connally and former UN Ambassador George Bush are among top GOP possibilities at this point.

And while the effete Eastern press likes to joke that "one Texan a century" in the Presidency is enough, both men already are campaigning with good credentials.

Quite frankly, we think both are qualified and are the type "take charge" men it is going to take to turn things around from impending disaster for the U.S., both on the domestic and foreign front. But, before that happens, a lot of water, words and worry will go under the proverbial political bridge.

Just for gum-chewing purposes, here is how we see this Fall's campaigns, from the Governor's race between Hill and Clements, to the Senate clash between Krueger and Tower to the successor-to-Mahon contest between Hance and Bush...

AT THE MOMENT, Atty. Gen. Hill has the inside track over Clements.

But, it is a nebulous lead that could fade in a hurry if the latter gets his act together and the voters' attention long enough to articulate some key issues.

John Hill's camp is the first to recognize this. His swing through Lubbock and the Panhandle last week was on an all-out, full-steam ahead basis.

The man who upset Gov. Dolph Briscoe, "a man nobody was mad at," is moving quickly to consolidate support, establish himself as a "moderate," not a liberal tied up with Texas teachers, farm workers and free-spending do-gooders.

Hill's pitch is homey and easy going. He has shed some of what seemed a touch of impatience since we last met him. In all candor, he seems like a man willing to listen. How much he hears is the $64 question.

At the moment, Clements' camp is seeking to hang the Carter label around Hill's neck, arguing that the Democratic governor would have no choice but to support the President in 1980. Hill counters by saying he at the moment could not support Carter for renomination, but would back him if he is the nominee.

THE CLEMENTS forces are zeroing in on Hill's role on three fronts, and are aligning some big name backers in the process, including some Briscoe supporters.

The Dallas man says Hill is a spokesman for Texas Liberals, that he and his aides blocked moves in the recent special session which would have given Texans a chance to decide their own financial future and that he would stand idly by and let Texas' Right-to-Work law go down the drain.

That's pretty strong medicine. But Clements is going to have to come up with a more positive approach for himself, as well as the minus one for his foe.

As a matter of fact, the man who rose from roughneck to head one of the world's top drilling firms talks good, hard-nosed sense about how a government should run its business—like a business. But, even Clements' closest friends admit that he does so in an at times abrasive, lecturing pose that turns some people off.

THE BITTER contest between Sen. Tower and Demo challenger Bob Krueger is going to get more so before it's over.

Quite frankly, a lot of people would like to see the "bantam rooster" Tower get his come-uppance. But, while recognizing Krueger as probably one of the best "brains" in Washington, many are leery of sending another Democrat to the Senate for fear his arm would be twisted on such an issue as the Panama Canal.

Still, the likeable Krueger has a chance of pulling it off.

Closer home, the same sort of thinking prevails. As of now, Hance has to be a narrow favorite to succeed Mahon. Yet, a sidewalk survey turns up a surprising number of persons who "don't want any more damn Democrats up there..."

In the meantime, in the back rooms of the Presidential hopefuls on down to the Cowboys and Red Raiders, it's Third and long and anything can happen...

Drivers Beat Odds, Collide

DAUFUSKIE ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — There are only about 15 cars on Daufuskie Island, but two managed to collide. Residents of the seven-mile long, sparsely inhabited island said it was probably the first motor vehicle collision on the island. No one was hurt, and the drivers' names were not available — there's no law enforcement on Daufuskie. Many of the cars aren't even licensed. There are no paved roads on Daufuskie, which is accessible from the mainland only by boat.

Garage-Door-Art Popular

CHICAGO (AP) — Robert Hemlock thought his neighbors might complain when he painted an outlandish design on his garage door. Instead, they asked for garage-door-art of their own. Hemlock, part-owner of a graphic design company, painted the door because the garage was about to be torn down anyway. When he finished, there was a change in the alley. Cars slowed as they drove past, litter began to disappear, dogs were kept away, garbage men swept the alley after collecting the trash. So far, Hemlock and neighborhood painting parties have completed seven garage doors, including a portrait of Don Quixote, a jungle scene, a horse-drawn carriage, a pink elephant and a blue crocodile. And a utility pole was transformed into a purple polka dot serpent. Garbage men call the area "Picture Alley."

Props Auction Scheduled

BOSTON (AP) — It's the nostalgia of the 50s and the aura of Hollywood; the razzle dazzle of Dino DeLaurentis and the mystique of memory lane — all wrapped up in a four-day auction of movie props. Billed as the first auction of its kind on the East Coast, Brink's Productions Ltd. is selling off some 20,000 props used in the Boston filming of a yet-to-be-named movie about the 1950 Brink's robbery of some $2.7 million in cash and bonds. This weekend, the antique cars used in the film go on the block. Among them is a 1937 Buick that sports a sign that would send modern-day seafood fans reeling. Advertising the former Faneuil Hall Lobster House, it reads: "BROILED LIVE LOBSTER — 50 CENTS."

Star Makes Walk

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor James Caan has joined hundreds of entertainers on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. A brass and marble star, bearing his name was implanted in the walk Wednesday as his wife and son looked on. The 39-year-old actor is known for his roles as Sonny Corleone in "The Godfather" and pro football player Brian Piccolo in "Brian's Song."

Legislator Named In Poll

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Ned Pattison says he has smoked marijuana on occasion. And he says he's surprised to be the only congressman to allow the use of his name in an upcoming magazine poll on marijuana use. "Although tempted to avoid the question because of obvious political implications, I have always, when asked, stated that I do not use it," the Democrat from New York's 29th congressional district said in a statement. Pattison says he first tried marijuana several years ago during a visit to the Caribbean. "I have the same feeling towards it as I do toward the over-use of alcohol — it's not something I consider advisable. In no way do I recommend the use of any intoxicant for myself or anyone else," Pattison said.

Elevator Wedding Planned

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Jerry Hakala and Shirley Crouse decided to get married where they met — in an elevator. They'll tie the knot Saturday in elevator No. 1 at the Washington Trust Financial Center. It will be the second marriage for both. Elevator operators don't have the authority to perform marriages, so the Rev. Marilyn Witherspoon of the Unity Church will unite the upward-bound couple in a double-ring ceremony. The bride-to-be is a lunchroom attendant in the building. She met Hakala in the elevator four years ago. Hakala is a service technician for U.S. Western Elevator.

One Peek Costs Robber

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — One peek proved too many for a robber who entered a Riverside doughnut shop with a gun in his hand and a pillowcase over his head. Police say the man took $60 from the shop cashier Wednesday. But he was forced to raise one corner of the pillowcase to make his escape — he'd forgotten to cut eye-holes in his disguise. A customer in the shop got one good peek. Police later arrested Ralph Graves, 27, at his nearby home. The money and a gun were confiscated, police said. The pillowcase was still at large.

Motel Robber Sentenced

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff
A Lubbock man was assessed a 25-year prison term Thursday after being found guilty of aggravated robbery in connection with a June 25 holdup at a local motel.

It took a 140th District Court jury approximately 25 minutes to return the punishment for Lonnie Joe Moore, 28, of 2611-D Weber Drive. Moore was found guilty earlier Thursday of participating in the 5:45 a.m. robbery at the Astro Motel at 501 Ave. Q. The defendant had received a three-year probation for burglary in 1970. The seven-woman, five-man jury apparently heeded the words of Asst. Dist. Atty. David Nelson, who asked the panel to let the city know that "nobody can get off lightly" with armed robbery. "If you give him a light sentence this time, consider the deterrent, or lack of it, on him next time," Nelson argued.

The prosecutor pointed to the earlier probation as evidence that an extended period of confinement was necessary. Motel night manager Howard Reuse, 60, indicated he was confronted by a suspect who wore a ski mask and carried a pistol. The robber reportedly forced Reuse to hand over about $100 in cash and also took Reuse's watch, valued at $50. Moore and a co-defendant were arrested about 20 minutes after the holdup, after police Cpl. Dale Holton stopped a car containing the two men in the 1100-block of Avenue Q. Holton testified that at one point, as the officer was in his squad car requesting information over the radio, he saw Moore, seated on the passenger's side of the suspect vehicle, get out of the car. The officer said Moore bent over, held his hand to his mouth, and appeared to be coughing. The officer said a roll of dimes, roll of pennies, a quarters wrapper and a nickels wrapper with one nickel in it were found underneath the right side of the car. Testimony indicated that a roll of pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters were reported taken in the holdup, in addition to a $20 bill, two $10 bills, four $5 bills and 21 $1 bills. Holton testified that approximately $46, including 19 $1 bills and 42 quarters, was found in Moore's possession. Approximately $81 reportedly was found on the co-defendant.

Nelson argued that the key issue in the case was whether Moore had aided the co-defendant. He said evidence indicated the defendant was caught within a few blocks of the motel with stolen money in his possession.

Reuse made no identification when he viewed the two suspects later. Testimony indicated he had not been able to view the holdup man's face because of the mask.

Defense attorney Floyd Holder argued that there were too many holes in the circumstantial evidence case. He pointed out that circumstantial evidence did not include a ski mask, whereas that the holdup man reportedly wore

Senate To Decide Oil, Gas Drilling Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed and sent to the Senate on Thursday a compromise bill making the first comprehensive overhaul of offshore oil and natural gas drilling laws in 25 years.

House offshore bills came on a vote of 338 to 118.

The legislation is intended to increase oil company competition in developing publicly owned offshore reserves of oil and natural gas, a greater say in drilling operations for coastal states and improved environmental protection.

Lower Demand For Texas Gas Predicted

AUSTIN (AP) — Demand for Texas natural gas in September will be considerably below the capacity of the state's wells, a railroad commission statistician said Thursday.

Don Jones, a statistician in the commission's oil and gas division, said September's demand for Texas gas is "below capacity—substantially."

"The interstate market has declined somewhat. The intrastate market is fairly constant compared with the interstate," Jones said.

The commission held its monthly oil and gas hearing and set the oil production allowable at 100 percent of market demand, the factor it has used since April 1972.

An 86 percent allowable was set, as usual, for the East Texas and Kelly-Snyder fields to avoid waste that might result from more rapid production.

Commission chairman Mack Wallace announced that gas purchasers say they will buy 23 billion cubic feet of gas in September, down 4 percent from their August forecast.

Part of the drop is seasonal, with cooler weather meaning smaller demands on electrical generators fueled with natural gas, he later told reporters.

But economic factors indicate a longer range trend toward reduced gas consumption, Wallace said.

"It has something to do with increased technology and conservation. Personally, I think it has something to do with the gross national product. Consumption of gas parallels the gross national product... and the economy has declined," Wallace said.

Lloyd Rolan, a revenue estimator for the state comptroller, said gas prices in new contracts have hovered around $2 to $2.25 per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf) for more than a year, indicating some leveling off.

But 3.6 percent of Texas gas is sold for $2.26 to $2.50 per mcf, compared with virtually none two years ago, "so you can't say it has stabilized completely at $2.25," Rolan added.

Wallace said Texas should make it through the winter without gas shortages and asserted that the Northeast should be in better shape because of higher volumes of gas in storage.

"The idea that the United States is out of gas is a myth," Wallace said.

He said eastern seaboard drilling, particularly in the offshore Baltimore Canyon, was not proceeding as rapidly as it should.

Israel Dedicates West Bank Outposts

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel dedicated two Jewish outposts on the West Bank of the Jordan River on Thursday, pushing ahead with its controversial plan to settle occupied Arab lands whether the Arabs agree or not.

Israeli officials and the settlers, hoping to avoid repetition of past criticism from Washington and the Arab world, emphasized the settlements had been approved by the government in January and, strictly speaking, were not new. Previous announcements of new Jewish enclaves on land captured from the Arabs in the 1967 Mideast War have drawn sharp denunciations from Arab capitals and statements from Washington that they were an "obstacle to peace."

"I hope people will understand that this is not politically important, because the government decided long ago to settle here," an 18-year-old settler, who identified herself only as Rivka, told a reporter at Tapuah, one of the West Bank outposts.

"This is not a move against the Camp David summit. We are moving in now because houses weren't ready for us before," said another woman who declined to be identified. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will meet with President Carter at his Camp David, Md., retreat Sept. 5 in an effort to revive the stalled peace talks.

Few other settlers at Tapuah would speak to reporters, and the gate at Tel Haris, the second village, was strung with barbed wire to keep away outsiders.

The two women at Tapuah said 12 families moved in there two days ago. Trucks were seen moving furniture and appliances Thursday to the two outposts, five miles apart in the Samaritan hills, 20 miles north of Jerusalem.

The Mideast peace plan proposed by Begin's government includes a demand that Jewish settlements remain in the West Bank. Egypt has rejected the plan but Jerusalem officials say it will be Israel's starting point in the Camp David negotiations. Sadat has demanded that the settlements be dismantled.

The Israeli peace plan offers limited self-rule to the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs on the West Bank and in the Gaza Strip, but with a continued Israeli military presence. Israel also wants freedom of movement for its 5,000 settlers in 50 West Bank enclaves and says Jews must be allowed to continue acquiring land for settlement.

Begin says Israel must control the West Bank to guarantee its security. He also believes Jews have a biblical right to settle in territory, which he refers to by its Old Testament designation of Judea and Samaria.

On Monday, the Israeli Cabinet shelved a plan, secret up until then, to build five new military settlements in the West Bank's Jordan River Valley. Begin said the plan was sidetracked because Israel didn't want to hurt the psychological atmosphere at Camp David.

But while shelving new outposts, Israel has not stopped settlement activity already under way.

Zvi Slonim, spokesman for the ultranationalist organization that provided the settlers, said there was little special about Thursday's dedication. "We just picked today to invite some friends in and to bring the Torah scrolls to the synagogues," he said.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan has been talking about moving ahead with another aspect of the proposed peace plan — abolition of Israel's military government in the West Bank and Gaza — even if there is no peace agreement with the Arabs.

Dayan has said in the past he believes this is the kind of "radical change" needed in Israel's relations with the Palestinians, now in their 12th year of Israeli military occupation. He repeated that argument Wednesday night, saying Israel should stop interfering in the daily lives of the Palestinians but should keep the army in the West Bank to protect Israel's security.

Technological Changes Astonish Mapmakers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — The mapmaker is no longer the little old man, his nose to a drafting board. He's now reading computer printouts and changing boundary lines by altering information in a data bank.

"The technological developments are unbelievable," said Arthur H. Robinson, a 63-year-old cartography professor at the University of Wisconsin. "If you had put a man in a deep freeze 25 years ago and then put him in a drafting room today, he wouldn't even know where he was."

"It's a revolutionary period and I can't even predict what will happen in the next 10 years. We don't worry about the political problems which change boundaries. We just change the lines. The problem is managing all the technical aspects. Data is coming in by bucketfuls."

The need for detailed maps has grown rapidly since World War II, said Robinson, who worked for the map division of the Office of Strategic Services in 1941.

Maps are used by banks to determine if loans should be made to underdeveloped countries. Banks also require maps to make sure loans are not approved for flood-prone lands.

Governments use maps to watch population patterns, determine the quality of cropland, check on the availability of water resources and install underground lines.

"Urban mapping is extremely critical for cities," Robinson said. "You have to work closely with tolerances and show where boundaries are and where to dig. There's no question about government being the biggest consumer."

"They're also important to keep a record of what was put where underground," added Joseph W. Wiedel, who is experimenting with maps for the blind and handicapped.

In addition, Wiedel said cartographers must keep up with areas which need to be charted as they become important.

"Take offshore drilling," he said. "These areas were not important, but now they must be mapped quickly. They used to be like the middle of the desert."

Robinson said the cost of maps is becoming a major expense for governments, but added: "We're relatively cheap. I don't know what the Navy pays for a battleship, but it would probably pay for all the mapping in the United States in a year."

Robinson, the author of "Elements of Cartography," a basic textbook on mapmaking which is used worldwide, and Wiedel, were among 550 participants from 44 countries at the 9th International Cartographic Conference at the University of Maryland.

The third world countries, in particular, have shown a recent interest in maps. "There are resources and things they must learn to manage," Wiedel said.

Both men said they find the rapid pace of their profession astonishing. "The more we scratch the surface, the more than comes out," Wiedel said.

He added, however, that the field is becoming so extensive that cartographers must specialize to a point where they seem to know "a lot about nothing. We'll be students the rest of our lives."

"There's no way to keep up with literature. And that's what really scares me about the future," Robinson said. "We have to find a way to insert the information into people's brains."

Robinson speculated that in the next decade or so, a satellite hanging on a sky hook will allow someone to watch an animated map which shows everything that is going on at the moment.

Water Issue Spurs Policy Probe

Lubbock city planners, believing some home buyers could find themselves up a creek without any water, much less a paddle, are wondering whether to adopt a protective annexation policy or take things as they come.

Officials are concerned about rural subdivisions built on land holding perhaps no more than a 10-year water supply. In one way or another, they say, the matter will have an impact on Lubbock.

"That magic city limits line doesn't apply," Jim Bertram, planning director, told a meeting Thursday of the rural land use study committee. "They're really a part of urban growth."

Based on projected water supplies and use, Bertram and his staff are looking at 4,000 acres to be annexed to the city. Lubbock's growth areas, however, encompass about 50 sections of land, stretching around the city's north, west and south like a giant "C."

Bertram said most buyers probably do nothing more than ask, "Is there water under it?" when purchasing a rural home. He said many would be scared if the developer honestly answered that the water supply had a life of expectancy of 12 to 18 years.

All this has a short-range effect on the prospective buyers and the money lenders, Bertram said, but there are "implications to citizens at large if water plays out." Lubbock, which used more than two billion gallons of water last month, would be expected to come to the rescue.

"Ultimately, it will come down to economics," said Jim Ratliff, committee chairman. "Realtors willing to build, mortgagors willing to lend and people willing to buy."

Public Works Director Sam Wahl told the committee that regardless of the direction of growth, there will be a need for additional water.

"Any area we have seen outside the city that develops to density will draw on outside water sources," he said. "It's no different from Lubbock drawing water from outside sources." "Where there is the least water lies in the direction we're growing," said Bertram, expressing concern about the time element. Annexation would mean an extension of city services — water, sewer, police and fire protection — within a three-year period. If there is to be a development policy, Bertram believes it should be acquisition of the least populated areas which can sustain themselves for a time.

"Can we form a policy, or do we put an estimate (of the life of water-bearing strata) on a plat and forget about it?" asked Bertram in the exploratory session filled with more questions than answers.

The Planning and Zoning Commission currently requires a statement of estimated aquifer life on all plats outside the city. "Should we try to set the density of development based on the life of the aquifer?" he said.

There was also concern about growth spurred simply by the act of annexation. Committee member Med Hunt, a Realtor, said "developers would go for it," but individuals still might go beyond the annexed areas.

"We need to educate people on available water," he said. "They may end up buying a small dry land farm."

The committee, sent homewith maps and water and growth projections, will meet again at Bertram's call to suggest policies and actions.

North Dakota's economy is based on agriculture and mining; but manufacturing industries, particularly processing of food, have grown in number and size in recent years.

Sharpstown Bank Suit Settled

HOUSTON (AP) — In what could be the last legal chapter of the Sharpstown Bank scandal, a jury Wednesday awarded $1.2 million to Houston Educational Foundation Inc., operators of Strake Jesuit Academy.

The settlements grew out of a $10 million suit filed by the foundation against former Houston financier Frank Sharp and 77 others.

The foundation claimed Jesuit priests who operated the academy were defrauded by Sharp and others in a complex stock deal.

Sharp's financial empire, built around

Sharpstown State Bank and Sharpstown Realty Co., collapsed in the wake of a 1971 investigation by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

Other prominent Texans, including former Gov. Preston Smith, former state House Speaker Gus Mutscher and former State Insurance Commissioner John Osorio were also defendants in the suit.

Settlements approved included $90,000 from Sharp and Sharpstown Realty, $150,000 from Osorio and $100,000 from Joseph Novotny, former president of Sharpstown Bank.

Other defendants in the suit had settled earlier. None of the defendants admitted any wrongdoing.

The foundation's lawyers said they do not expect to collect from Sharp because he has no funds to pay the millions of dollars outstanding in other judgments against him.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

In cleaning out one of the boys' closets the other day I was knocked senseless by a coconut with an Indian face painted on it.

This was followed by an avalanche which included an alligator dressed up like a grand parade marshal, a human skull with a raven perched on top that said, "Have a Good Day," a snow and water paperweight showing the New York skyline in which the water had evaporated, a beer stein that played "White Christmas" when you lifted the lid, and a funky light that flickered on and off and said, "Lite Up Las Vegas."

As I sifted through the rest — backscratcher, totem poles, key rings and a blowfish (that brought me into my first contact with acupuncture) — I tried to imagine how many man hours went into acquiring, transporting, and maintaining of these souvenirs. Then I saw it: the Robin Hood hat with a feather from the Ionia State Fair.

It was 10 years ago. The family was en route to a camping trip when we were attracted by the Ionia State Fair. As we started to leave the grounds, my son said, "Could I buy this hat where they sew your name on it?"

I shrugged. "Why not?" My husband said, "You don't need it."

I said it was only $1.39. My husband said it was logic like mine that drove the European nations into bankruptcy and besides the kid would forget about the dumb hat in 10 minutes.

The kid cried all night long keeping everyone awake.

I awoke the next morning with enough wrinkles to plant crops. The kids were surly and my husband had a flat tire (I told him he'd be punished for his cheapness.)

Finally, he gave in and said, "Okay, we'll go back and get the hat." The first officer cited us for an illegal left turn into the Fairgrounds. The next officer at the gate said the fair wasn't open until noon and suggested we turn around and go out the same way we had come in. In turning the trailer, my husband scraped a tree that punctured our water tank in the trailer and eventually cost $35 to weld.

We were forced to go into a nearby trailer camp, pay the fees, wait until 11, pay admittance for the family to the grounds, have lunch and get the hat. The other kids complained that since he got the hat, they should get the cane with the bird on the end that chirped when you waved it around the car.

The $1.39 hat cost a total of $112.00. They misspelled his name.

Some Couples Aided By New Treatment

CHICAGO (UPI) — More than 50 percent of couples with infertility problems can be helped to achieve parenthood, says a new pamphlet from the American Medical Association.

Fifteen percent of American marriages are involuntarily childless and another 10 percent of couples have fewer children than they desire, the AMA publication says.

Through research and experience in clinical practice in the field of infertility, we now have better diagnostic and therapeutic measures and greater knowledge of the intricate process of reproduction. Today, as a result of this advancement, more than 50 percent of couples with infertility problems can be helped to achieve parenthood.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My skin has been itching in the strangest way. First I will itch on the right hand, then the left. I scratch and a small pinpoint hole appears. The same on my hand and my back. Sometimes aspirin relieves the itch, and sometimes cold applications. The pinpoint holes look like bites. Could this be nerves? I've used scabies remedies and others, but nothing helps. Can you suggest something? — D.N.S.

Certainly could be scabies. It's caused by the itch mite (Sarcoptes scabiei). The impregnated female tunnels into the skin and deposits her eggs. The tiny holes you see are likely these burrows. It is not surprising that your remedies haven't worked. They seldom will unless great care is taken. You may need help in applying the lotion, and you should get a prescription for a good one from a doctor. You should not miss any vulnerable part of the body, from the neck down. Thus you may need help in applying the material.

Take a thorough tub bath before applying it. This procedure is repeated the following day. You shouldn't have more than two consecutive treatments, however. The two are sufficient. Any itching afterwards would indicate a problem other than from the mites.

Nerves play no role in the infection, but certainly can alter one's it. Scratching can become so severe that the telltale mite infestation appearance of the skin is obliterated by welts. Skin scrapings confirm the presence of the mites. Scabies is an all too common skin problem that probably accounts for a high percentage of unexplained rashes and itchings.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard of occupational diseases, like "black lung" by miners, etc. Now our doctor says my husband has "farmer's lung" from hay dust. Have you heard of this? — Mrs. P.G.

Yes, I've heard it also called "barn lung". It may result from chronic inhalation of hay dust. But all farmers do not get it. It is an allergic reaction of lung tissue to certain molds found in the hay. When inhaled, a dry cough results. Difficulty in breathing, lack of appetite and weight loss are the usual consequences. Repeated exposure may produce actual lung tissue damage.

Your husband is probably one of those especially sensitive to the molds. He may, indeed, have to avoid the environment that causes the symptoms. In severe attacks, corticosteroid drugs help lessen the inflammation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My oldest grandson's wife is expecting her first male offspring and he asked me if I thought his new son should be circumcised when he is about eight days old, and I told him I'd ask you — S.L.

The timing of circumcision varies according to the desires of the family and their doctor. There is nowadays a tendency to perform circumcision less on a routine basis. It is best done within the first few weeks. Some prefer to perform it immediately after delivery. I'm curious. How has the sex been determined?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 35-year-old female. One thing puzzles me. Why is a Pap test still taken on doctor visits even though I have no uterus? — J.S.

Because the cervix is probably present even though the uterus has been removed. The chief value of the test is in detecting cervical cancer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you tell me about vagotomy and how effective it is in treating peptic ulcer? — Mrs. R.I.

This is cutting of a portion of the vagus nerve, a major nerve with many branches. It extends from the brain to serve various abdominal structures (including the stomach and duodenum). Stimulation of the stomach, to produce substances in response to smells, tastes, odors, even the sight of food, comes through this nerve. Thus, severing certain branches can reduce the stomach activity and aid in peptic ulcer healing. However, vagotomy is not a simple operation and is reserved for special cases, as in ulcer that does not respond to conservative treatment.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I contracted gonorrhea in my tubes, but was treated for it. I want to know if I ever will be able to bear children. — Miss M.

Can't answer, because it depends on whether your tubes were obstructed by adhesions or scar tissue. The state of the tubes can be ascertained, but that is an extensive procedure.

What are ulcers? How can you help yourself get rid of ulcers and stay rid of them? Read Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "How to Heal Peptic Ulcers." For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a victim of multiple sclerosis and have been for 25 years. I have raised two children and functioned in every way normal women do. It is not easy to fight M.S. but an even tougher battle is getting a job.

When I fill out an application and see the part of the form that says "medical history," my heart sinks. I know M.S. will count against me. Any handicapped person is viewed as a poor risk.

I was a secretary for a publishing house but now I can do only light office work in my home town because I cannot travel long distances to and from a job.

Surely there are some companies who will hire us. I speak not only for myself but for all handicapped people. We NEED to work for morale purposes as well as for the money.

Will you say something in your column that might help? — S.R. Of Smithtown, N.Y.

Dear S.R.: Statistics show handicapped employees are more dependable, more conscientious and are absent from work less frequently than those who have no physical disability.

Handicapped employees almost always improve morale, increase productivity and inspire admiration in their fellow employees.

Your best bet is to check with the nearest Rehabilitation Institute and ask them to help place you. Most Rehabs do an effective job in this area.

You can also contact the Multiple Sclerosis Society at 205 East 42nd Street, N.Y., N.Y. 10017 — or a local M.S. chapter in your city. While the Society is not in a position to provide jobs, it can make referrals to the local office of vocational rehabilitation. Good luck to you, dear. And please let me know how you come out.

Dear B.T.: Sorry, I still think I'm right. Mary's mother is not taking her daughter off the hook. She is merely notifying the senders that their gifts have been received so they can stop wondering and pay their bills. The slob still has the obligation of saying "Thank you."

Dear Ann Landers: Anyone who attempts to get chewing gum out of hair with gasoline has got to be crazy. A salad or cooking oil will do the trick, even if the kid has slept on it all night. I know because I've used it many times and it works. — Grand Forks, N.D.

Dear Grand: At least 500 people wrote to tell me about this neat trick — and I'll admit it was news to me. My mother used to use a scissors!

Another suggestion from 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.: Try peanut butter.

Discover how to date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. Send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

DEAR HELOISE:

For Moms who want to keep information for their baby's book but never have the baby book handy, do like I did:

I picked up a small date book (free) from the card shop for each child and put the books by the phone so that they are always near a pen and within convenient reach.

I put in anything I want to remember for the baby book such as first tooth, first word, etc., and jot it down on the appropriate day on the calendar.

When I finally get around to working on the baby book I can fill it in easily from the date book. — Karen Yost

DEAR HELOISE:

Whenever I bought matched towel and washcloth sets the towels always lasted so much longer than the washcloths.

To make my matched sets last longer I buy twice as many washcloths as towels.

After laundering them I stack the washcloths on the bottom of the pile. This way the matched sets last about twice as long — Helen A. Carriker

West bid up to five hearts and then retired from the auction. He had two good reasons to stop at that point. The first reason was that he might well have pushed his opponents one too high. The second reason was that for all he knew, it might turn out that a further push would get them to a makeable slam.

West opened his king of hearts and continued with the ace after his partner played the eight spot. When that held he looked around for new worlds to conquer. He had to shift to a minor suit. Which one?

It appeared to be a guess. At least West did guess and guessed wrong. He led a diamond and South had no trouble romping home with the rest of the tricks.

We aren't going into the merits of West's diamond lead except to point out one thing. It would be hard to visualize a holding where a club play would cost the contract. We do criticize West for his lead at trick two, however. He should have led a low heart. His partner had raised him, had played the eight and almost surely held the queen. Put East in and he would have had no problem at trick three.

expression, "Rubber bridge."

It goes back to whist where you would play the best out of three games. In case each side won one, then the third game would be called the "rubber" game.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

In cleaning out one of the boys' closets the other day I was knocked senseless by a coconut with an Indian face painted on it.

This was followed by an avalanche which included an alligator dressed up like a grand parade marshal, a human skull with a raven perched on top that said, "Have a Good Day," a snow and water paperweight showing the New York skyline in which the water had evaporated, a beer stein that played "White Christmas" when you lifted the lid, and a funky light that flickered on and off and said, "Lite Up Las Vegas."

As I sifted through the rest — backscratchers, totem poles, key rings and a blowfish (that brought me into my first contact with acupuncture) — I tried to imagine how many man hours went into acquiring, transporting, and maintaining of these souvenirs. Then I saw it: the Robin Hood hat with a feather from the Ionia State Fair.

It was 10 years ago. The family was en route to a camping trip when we were attracted by the Ionia State Fair. As we started to leave the grounds, my son said, "Could I buy this hat where they sew your name on it?"

I shrugged. "Why not?" My husband said, "You don't need it."

I said it was only $1.39. My husband said it was logic like mine that drove the European nations into bankruptcy and besides the kid would forget about the dumb hat in 10 minutes.

The kid cried all night long keeping everyone awake.

I awoke the next morning with enough wrinkles to plant crops. The kids were surly and my husband had a flat tire. I told him he'd be punished for his cheapness.

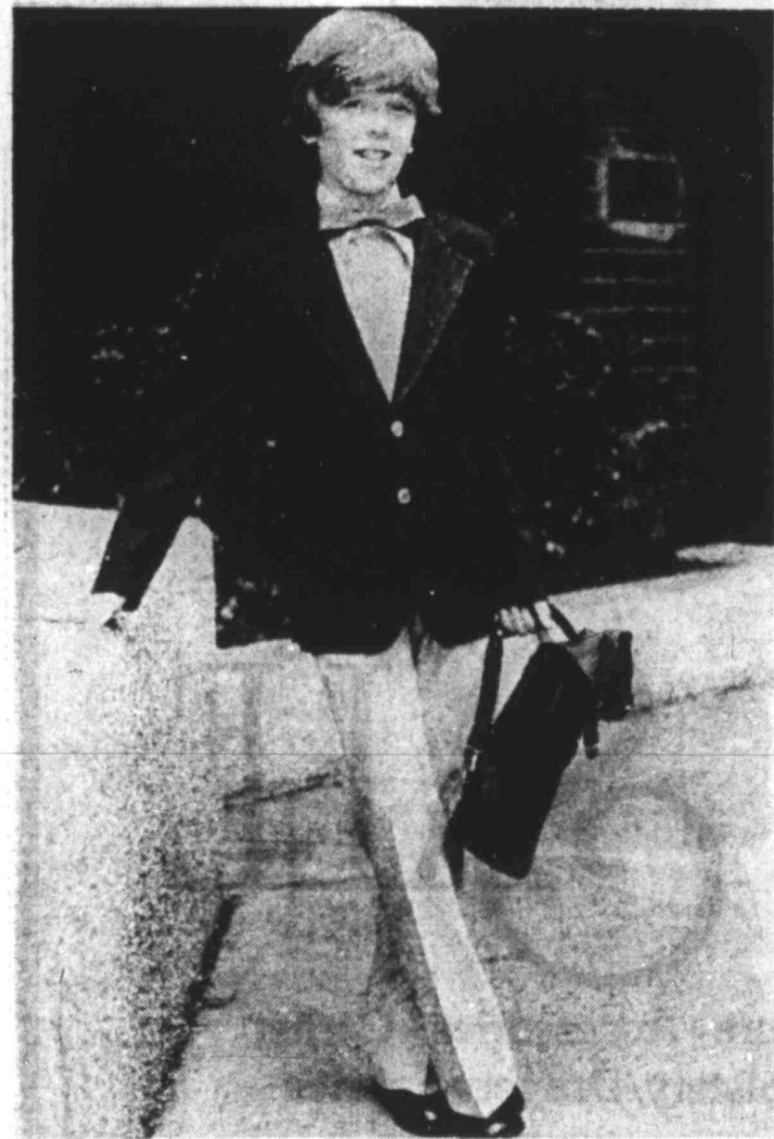

Finally, he gave in and said, "Okay, we'll go back and get the hat."

The first officer cited us for an illegal left turn into the Fairgrounds. The next officer at the gate said the fair wasn't open until noon and suggested we turn around and go out the same way we had come in. In turning the trailer, my husband scraped a tree that punctured our water tank in the trailer and eventually cost $35 to weld.

We were forced to go into a nearby trailer camp, pay the fees, wait until 11, pay admittance for the family to the grounds, have lunch and get the hat. The other kids complained that since he got the hat they should get the cane with the bird on the end that chirped when you waved it around the car.

The $1.39 hat cost a total of $112.00. They misspelled his name.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a victim of multiple sclerosis and have been for 25 years. I have raised two children and functioned in every way normal women do. It is not easy to fight M.S. but an even tougher battle is getting a job.

When I fill out an application and see the part of the form that says "medical history," my heart sinks. I know M.S. will count against me. Any handicapped person is viewed as a poor risk.

I was a secretary for a publishing house but now I can do only light office work in my home town because I cannot travel long distances to and from a job.

Surely there are some companies who will hire us. I speak not only for myself but for all handicapped people. We NEED to work for morale purposes as well as for the money.

Will you say something in your column that might help? — S.R. Of Smithtown, N.Y.

Dear S.R.: Statistics show handicapped employees are more dependable, more conscientious and are absent from work less frequently than those who have no physical disability.

Handicapped employees almost always improve morale, increase productivity and inspire admiration in their fellow employees.

Your best bet is to check with the nearest Rehabilitation Institute and ask them to help place you. Most Rehabs do an effective job in this area.

You can also contact the Multiple Sclerosis Society at 205 East 42nd Street, N.Y., N.Y. 10017—or a local M.S. chapter in your city. While the Society is not in a position to provide jobs, it can make referrals to the local office of vocational rehabilitation. Good luck to you, dear. And please let me know how you come out.

Dear B.T.: Sorry, I still think I'm right. Mary's mother is not taking her daughter off the hook. She is merely notifying the senders that their gifts have been received so they can stop wondering and pay their bills. The slob still has the obligation of saying "Thank you."

Dear Ann Landers: Anyone who attempts to get chewing gum out of hair with gasoline has got to be crazy. A salad or cooking oil will do the trick, even if the kid has slept on it all night. I know because I've used it many times and it works. — Grand Forks, N.D.

Dear Grand: At least 500 people wrote to tell me about this neat trick—and I'll admit it was news to me. My mother used to use a scissors!

Another suggestion from 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.: Try peanut butter.

Discover how to be date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. DEAR HELOISE:

For Moms who want to keep information for their baby's book but never have the baby book handy, do like I did:

I picked up a small date book (free) from the card shop for each child and put the books by the phone so that they are always near a pen and within convenient reach.

I put in anything I want to remember for the baby book such as first tooth, first word, etc., and jot it down on the appropriate day on the calendar.

When I finally get around to working on the baby book I can fill it in easily from the date book. — Karen Yost

DEAR HELOISE:

Whenever I bought matched towel and washcloth sets the towels always lasted so much longer than the washcloths.

To make my matched sets last longer I buy twice as many washcloths as towels.

After laundering them I stack the washcloths on the bottom of the pile. This way the matched sets last about twice as long — Helen A. Carriker

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever get a bread wrapper too close to the toaster and have the wrapper melt?

To remove it, first let the toaster cool, then take a cotton ball with some rubbing alcohol on it and rub over the melted plastic.

West bid up to five hearts and then retired from the auction. He had two good reasons to stop at that point. The first reason was that he might well have pushed his opponents one too high. The second reason was that for all he knew, it might turn out that a further push would get them to a makeable slam.

West opened his king of hearts and continued with the ace after his partner played the eight spot. When that held he looked around for new worlds to conquer. He had to shift to a minor suit. Which one?

It appeared to be a guess. At least West did guess and guessed wrong. He led a diamond and South had no trouble romping home with the rest of the tricks.

We aren't going into the merits of West's diamond lead except to point out one thing. It would be hard to visualize a holding where a club play would cost the contract. We do criticize West for his lead at trick two, however. He should have led a low heart. His partner had raised him, had played the eight and almost surely held the queen. Put East in and he would have had no problem at trick three.

Famous Photography Writer Now Publishing Newsletter

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

You meet such interesting people in photography — or get letters from them from different parts of the world. Like the one that came recently from Japan from Simon Nathan.

My name was emblazoned in poster paint so I knew it was from Simon — that's one of his trademarks.

You know Simon Nathan, don't you? The guy with two first names? You should. He's a one-of-a-kind character, like the cameras he dreams up, has built, collects and uses all around the world.

Maybe you met Nathan when he wrote a column for U.S. Camera magazine — or when he bounced to Camera 35 — or switched to the Donnybrook Photo Report — or changed to Modern Photography — or landed at Popular Photography? Well, he's writing again.

This time it's for his own publication, "Simon Says: Photography Newsletter," a bi-weekly report. It contains offbeat items and behind-the-scenes news about cameras, films, techniques, personalities, rumors and ideas. It's distinctively illustrated with pen-and-ink drawings by his associate, John West.

This latest issue of SS:PN was mailed from Japan where Simon was visiting before heading for Cologne, Germany, for the world's largest photo bash, Photokina, which opens Sept. 15.

Here's an interesting item Simon discovered at the Dai-Ichi Hotel, at Shimabashi — an unusual film processing service.

The hotel distributes to its guests a brochure printed in English entitled: "Wait Until Morning." What you're waiting for is their color print service. If you give them a roll of film by 8 p.m. — and it can be Kodak, Fuji or Sakura in either 35mm, 126 or 110 cartridge — color prints will be ready by 8 a.m. next morning. Or, if film is left by 8 a.m., it will be ready by 8 p.m. that night.

The brochure cites four reasons why this overnight printing service is valuable for camera fans. 1. You get excellent color balance and brilliant prints. 2. Your film will avoid damage from X-rays going through airports. The danger is greatest for exposed film that has not yet been processed. 3. It can detect camera malfunction immediately. The prints are a check against a possible tendency toward over- or under-exposure and make sure the camera is working properly. 4. You can travel with colorful prints and have something to look at, talk about and share with others.

After further sleuthing in Japan, Simon peered into his crystal ball and ventured that: "There could be a made-in-America Nikon SLR. Where would it be made? California, possibly. It has year-round favorable climate — the labor force is available there, especially in electronics, and well trained — air freight from West to East tends to be faster and rates lower — and the 200-or-less-yen dollar makes it economically attractive. We're talking about camera bodies at first and perhaps three or four of the most popular lenses."

I mentioned that Simon dreams up cameras and has them built. One of his favorites is the Simon-Wide, a camera that uses normal 120 roll film and delivers a 2 1/4-by-7-inch transparency or negative. He gets four pictures on a 12-exposure roll of 120 film.

His latest Simon-Wide version (there were at least three others) was built in Japan by a machinist. It incorporated parts of camera bodies from British naval surplus and from Mamiya, interchangeable lenses from Schneider in Germany, film holders from a Dutch inventive genius and a Linhof viewfinder. Then Simon added a Linhof handle which he purchased in Munich and installed in a bicycle repair shop in Amsterdam. That made it a hand camera — an international hand camera.

He used it all over the world, producing special "wide-screen" still pictures for 15 different motion pictures on location globally. Its special format makes it particularly useful for innovative annual reports, as wrap-around book covers and other assorted projects.

There you have a short introduction to Simon Nathan. If you want to know more about him, write: 316 W. 79th St., New York, N.Y. 10024.

Giraffe Growth Chart Makes Good Gift

Going to a bundle of baby showers this fall? That's not surprising since more babies are born in the month of August than any other month.

Instead of giving the usual rattles, sleepers, and crates of disposable diapers, here's a special project that won't take long to make, yet will show your own personal touch.

Give this brightly colored, golden yellow, red and black Giraffe Growth Chart picture above. The felt padded giraffe can be hung from a wall or door, and with the 60-inch tape measure running from the tip of his toes to the top of his neck the toddler's height can be charted from his first step through grade school years.

Since all you order is the pattern with directions, you can show your creative flare by choosing your favorite colors of felt, yarn, and cotton print. Or you can use the pattern's suggested materials list.

To make this unique gift, cut the body out of golden yellow felt, stitch polyester fiberfill between the front and back body piece, attach the red braided tail, floppy ears, button eye, and of course, the giraffe spots.

The spots are just one area where you can add your personal touch. The pattern calls for a "cotton print fabric." You can be traditional with a gingham or bold with paisley.

The giraffe is attached to the wall by the metal eyelets in the horns.

The Giraffe Growth Chart pattern, and instructions are available by ordering pattern 01188 for $2.49 plus 95 cents postage and handling.

Send your name, address, order and remittance to Creative Home Crafts, Dept. 88B, P.O. Box 1281, Locust at 17th, Des Moines, Iowa, 50336. If you wish to use your Visa, Master Charge, or American Express, please give the master charge interbank number, credit card number and expiration date.

Stamp Features Rebuilt Blockhouse

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

The reconstructed blockhouse at Fort Nisqually, Wash., founded in 1833 by Hudson Bay Co., is featured on a new 28-cent "Remote Outpost" stamp issued at Tacoma, Wash.

The new U.S. stamp in the Americana Series has the 28-cent rate for two ounces of first-class mail. The first ounce costs 15 cents and the second is 13 cents.

The Fort Nisqually blockhouse is the central design in the vignette. Across the top and down the right side of the stamp appear the words: "Remote Outpost. New Nation Building Westward." In the upper left corner is the inscription "USA 28 cents."

Collectors may obtain first-day cancellations of this stamp if they send their requests prior to Aug. 26.

You may purchase the stamps at your local post office and affix them to your own envelopes. These covers will be given preferential treatment. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right corner of the envelope. Return addresses should be placed on the right side of the envelopes. Send your envelopes, no later than Aug. 26, to: "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Tacoma, Wash. 98402." No remittance is required.

Proper Insulation Keeps Walls From 'Sweating'

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q — I would like to avoid a problem that plagued us last winter. One of the walls in our house gets cold when the temperature outside falls below 40 degrees or so. This wall then starts to sweat and the water drips down the wall to the floor. Is there any way of preventing this, so that we won't have the same trouble all over again next winter?

A — Presumably this is an outside wall. It gets cold because it does not have sufficient insulation (perhaps none) to prevent the passage of the cold air. Have a professional check it for you. If you need insulation, you can have it blown into the walls, as with cellulose, mineral wool and other loose fills, or pumped in, as with one of the foam products. Why does a cold wall sweat? Because the heated, moist air in the house settles on it and condenses. If both the air and the wall were cold, there would be no condensation. Ditto if both the air and the wall were warm. There might not be any problem, either, if the warm, moist air were permitted to escape quickly, via an exhaust fan or vents in the exterior wall, or if it were trapped, via a dehumidifier. But your best solution is insulation, since this also will help to save fuel costs.

Q — Because steel-wool pads were used on our laminated plastic countertop next to the sink, much of the red color has come out. Can this type of material be painted?

A — Yes, but if there are any glossy spots, sand them down, otherwise the paint will not grip properly. Painting a laminated plastic top doesn't always produce the anticipated excellent results, but you may be satisfied with it if you use an enamel and work carefully.

Q — The poured concrete foundation that shows above ground for a foot or two on the outside of our new house has a few small cracks in it. The builder says these can't be fixed now because the house is still settling. Is he right?

A — Probably. Wherever there is a crack, mark each end of the crack with a pen or something that the rain won't wash out. Examine the marks every week or two to determine whether the cracks are lengthening. If they aren't, then a repair can be attempted. Try to get your builder to promise to fix the cracks as soon as the settling has ended. That will depend on how "new" your house is or what contract arrangement you have with him.

More than 50,000 price changes and 1,800 new-issue listings are noted in Vol. I of Scott's 1979 Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue. The price changes include 4,000 for U.S. and Administration areas, 46,300 for Great Britain and Colonies, and 230 for the United Nations. The biggest increases are listed in U.S. 19th-century, Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand. The catalogue sells for $16 in soft cover and $20 hard cover.

DID YOU KNOW THAT — India has just issued a new stamp honoring the late film comic Charlie Chaplin.

Scientists Urge Early Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three prominent American nuclear scientists urged President Carter Thursday to push for a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty, saying that the treaty's foes have exaggerated its dangers.

The scientists, all with experience in American nuclear bomb programs, said the United States could improve the reliability of its nuclear arsenal without periodic testing.

"We believe the Department of Energy can (without exploding nuclear devices) provide continuing assurance for as long as may be desired of the operability of the nuclear weapons stockpile," Drs.

Norris E. Bradbury, Richard L. Garwin, and J. Carson Mark said in a letter.

They made their letter public to refute the objections raised earlier this week to a proposed treaty by Dr. Donald Kerr of the Department of Energy. Kerr told the House Armed Services Committee that without tests, "confidence in the U.S.

stockpile would degrade."

The debate on the comprehensive test ban treaty has been going on quietly within the Carter administration for several months, ever since some concessions by the Soviet Union made a treaty seem feasible.

The Soviets, in negotiations at Geneva, dropped their insistence that peaceful nuclear explosions be allowed. Informed sources say they have also agreed to allow some type of detection devices to be stationed on Soviet soil, although the details have yet to be worked out.

The United States had been saying since 1963 that those Soviet concessions would clear the way for a treaty that would ban all nuclear tests. Tests under way and in the atmosphere have been banned since 1963, but both countries have continued to test underground.

Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has said he would not favor a treaty that did not allow some reliability testing.

President Carter has directed the negotiators at Geneva to bargain for a treaty of limited duration, from three to five years. After that time, both sides could assess their situations and there might be a limited time for testing before a new treaty went into effect.

Garwin, who presented the scientists' letter to reporters, said he thought ten years would be a better time period for a treaty.

He said that the government need not explode bombs to improve them, since improvements can be made in the non-explosive firing mechanisms of the weapons.

HEARTLINE: I have recently started to work for a large corporation. This company has a group health insurance program here I have to pay the premium. Can you give me any advantages on having this instead of a regular policy?

—N.S.

A group health insurance plan is one usually made available to people by employers, labor unions, professional or other organizations. You may be covered automatically or, as is more common, after a specified waiting period, such as 30, 60 or 90 days. Your protection may end when you leave the group. However, it is often possible to convert your group coverage to an individual or family policy when you leave the group. If you leave a group plan, you should check with the representatives of that group plan to see if you can convert the policy.

Advantages of a group plan: (1) There are lower premiums because insurance companies can administer group plans more economically; (2) payroll deductions are usually available for paying your portion of the premium, in the case of an employer-employee relationship; (3) the employer or organization often pays part or all of the premium; (4) individuals are eligible or group protection regardless of physical condition (normally here must be 10 or more people involved before this is true).

Heartline has developed a book to assist you in your purchase of health insurance. To order, send $1.50 to Heartline's Guide to Health Insurance, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, IL, 60611. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

HEARTLINE: My wife and I are both 66 years old. We draw our Social Security benefits and my company pension. Since my retirement I have been thinking about moving to a warmer climate. We have now found a place in Florida and are planning to move there in early 1979. I heard from a friend that moving from one state to another could change our Social Security benefits. Can you tell me anything about this? —N.E.

Moving from one state to another has no effect whatsoever on Social Security retirement, spouse, disability or survivor's benefits. However, you should always report a change of address to your local Social Security office in advance of moving. Notifying your post office is, of course, necessary as well. The post office can forward a Social Security check but only Social Security can actually change the address on your check.

HEARTLINE: My husband worked for many years in the Civil Service-covered job. He always paid into the retirement fund. I was wondering if it was possible for me to receive a lump sum on what he has paid in. —C.T.

Probably not, but it depends upon your special case. A lump sum death benefit is payable only when the deceased employee had less than 18 months of civilian service, or if the employee leaves no widow (or Widower) or children who are eligible for a survivor's annuity.

If you are eligible for the Civil Service lump sum benefit, you would receive the amount your husband paid into the fund plus any accrued interest.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Zone Request Denied

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Members of the Overton South Neighborhood Association chalked up another victory Thursday in battling what they called the further deterioration of one of the city's older residential areas.

After hearing complaints from the association, the Zoning Board of Adjustment turned down a variance request for expansion of a garage apartment at 2324 15th St.

The fact that contractors had made curb cuts and were about to fill in the garage door spaces without benefit of a building permit also irritated ZBA members.

The variance was requested by Louis O. Woodward of Odessa, who recently bought the property and whose children wanted to live in the house and apartment.

"I can go back and cite numerous instances (of house conversions) so children can go to Tech," said Roger Loter, chairman of the neighborhood group. "Later, after graduation, it's turned into three or four rental units. This is what has caused deterioration of our neighborhood."

The ZBA approved the other seven items on its agenda, including additional sign space for the Lubbock National Bank. The LNB facade is being refurbished.

Motel 6 representatives asked for permission to construct a 50-foot sign to rival the attention given the nearby Holiday Inn at 66th Street and Highway 87. The board concluded that a 30-foot sign was all that was necessary, although the message portion can be as large as 124 square feet.

The following requests also were approved:

- Dail H. Sanders to enlarge an apartment for his ailing father-and mother-in-law at 38th Street and Avenue S;
- Burl Kizer to build a duplex at 7925 Albany Ave., which slightly exceeds lot coverage requirements;
- St. John's Baptist Church to use a lot at 1708 E. 29th St. for parking;
- S.B. Campbell Jr. to place a mobile home at the site of his trucking company to serve as a lounge and sleeping quarters for his drivers;
- Sundial Properties, Inc., to have fewer parking spaces than normally required for a six-story, 95,000-square foot office building on South Loop 289.

Bomb Dismissed As Hoax Hits Station

LACONIA, N.H. (AP) — Two minutes after officers received a telephone warning they dismissed as a crank call, an explosion Thursday shook the Laconia police station "like an earthquake." It caused no injuries and slight damage.

Two policemen in a room adjacent to a station annex where the pipe bomb went off escaped injury, Sgt. Joseph Schillinger said.

Police said someone — possibly a girl — called to warn of the explosion but officers ignored it. Schillinger said the call "was not unusual at all. When I received the call, I didn't think anything of it, because ... we receive these kind of calls all the time."

Schillinger said he and patrolmen Gary Kitching and Dave Gunter were the only ones in the station when the bomb exploded.

He said he and Gunter "hit the floor and drew our pistols," thinking the explosion might have been a close-range shotgun blast.

Income Ranking Average For Local Area

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Permian Basin was near the top, the Lower Rio Grande Valley at the bottom and the South Plains in-between in a recently released 1976 government study on per capita income around Texas and the nation.

Midland, in the midst of a drilling boom, was the only Texas city making the list of the top 10 American cities in per capita income.

Midland residents averaged $7,701, ranking ninth, and Lubbockites averaged $5,680 to rank the Hub City 203rd on the list.

Cities in the lush Lower Rio Grande Valley — McAllen, Pharr and Edinburg — rank at the bottom of the 228 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas studied by the Commerce Department Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Bert Darden, Texas Employment Commission manager in Lubbock, said Lubbock ranks under Midland because it has neither the oil industry nor the large manufacturing work force that Midland has.

"We have a lot of things related to the agricultural industry that do not come up to what the wage is in Midland," Darden said.

Amarillo was 66th on the list at $6,753 per capita.

Darden said the largest industrial employment group here is wholesale and retail trade, which employs 26,000 persons, while Amarillo has 20,800 in that category.

However, he said Lubbock has been booming economically for the past three years and probably has improved considerably since the study was made.

Lubbock has 12,900 manufacturing workers making an average of $177 per week, Darden said.

Amarillo, with the Atomic Energy Commission Pantex warhead manufacturing plant a major employer, has 8,300 manufacturing workers earning an average of $238 per week, he said.

Darden predicted that the Lubbock County work force will increase from 97,740 now to more than 100,000 by the end of the year.

The Lubbock SMSA includes only Lubbock County while the Amarillo SMSA takes in Potter and Randall counties.

The national average per capita income was $6,824 two years ago, up from the 1975 average of $6,230.

Residents of seven Texas cities made above national average income.

Twenty-three Texas areas were included in the survey.

Midland was Texas' highest ranking SMSA, but McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg was at the bottom with an average per capita income of $3,338.

Laredo was next-to-last at $3,575, and Brownsville-Harlingen-San Benito was a notch higher at $3,825.

The remaining Texas cities are Houston, 12th, $7,617; Dallas-Fort Worth, 36th, $7,096; Galveston-Texas City, 58th, $6,808; Wichita Falls, 74th, $6,652; Bea-mont-Port Arthur-Orange, $4,597; Odessa, 94th, $4,474; Tyler, $6,328; Longview, 152nd, $6,069; San Angelo, 157th, $6,003;

Abilene, 161st, $5,930; Waco, 168th, $5,920; Sherman-Denison, 199th, $5,688; Corpus Christi, 204th, $5,668; San Antonio, 205th, $5,654; Austin, 213th, $5,632; Bryan-College Station, 258th, $4,871; and El Paso, 269th, $4,733.

Young Man Grows Rich Off Other People's Debts

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Schultz became rich at 24 by collecting other people's debts.

Four years later he is richer still — head of a company he founded in 1973 that last year collected $100 million in unpaid bills for a profit of $3 million. Schultz has become an expert in getting people to pay bills while not alienating them so they never return to the store or business that extended them the credit.

"Anybody can be a debtor. There's no typical person," Schultz told an interviewer during a business trip to New York. About 65 percent of his business comes from companies unable to collect debts owed by other firms. The rest involves individuals trying to duck payments on washing machines, cars, televisions and other consumer goods.

Schultz' National Revenue Corp. is one of about 5,000 debt-collection agencies in the United States that last year handled 44 million accounts and 11 million bad checks; all of which totaled $5 billion in bills people or companies were not paying. Americans last year owed $225 billion in installment loans — about 2 1/4 times the amount 10 years ago. Corporations last year owed another $675 billion, according to the Federal Reserve.

RICHARD SCHULTZ

"When people don't pay their bills, it increases the cost of doing business, causes interest rates to go up and slows the economy," Schultz said.

He got into the business in the summer of 1971 while working as a law clerk before entering law school. "I was offered a better-paying job with a collection agency and took it. It's a lucrative business. About the fifth week I was making more than the lawyer I had been working for. I decided to take a term off from school."

By 1972, Schultz had become a manager for the agency. He began NRC after the president of the company rejected his suggestion to work with businesses to show them how to collect late bills before they become too old to trace.

The key that has made NRC, which is based in Columbus, Ohio, the largest collection agency in the country, he said, has been the influence of his wife, Marva, who was Miss Majorette of America and National Baton Twirling Association national champion in 1974.

"The turning point in my life was when I got married two years ago," he said. "She has an inner discipline that has helped me."

They met in 1973 aboard a flight from St. Louis to Columbus. She was returning home after a personal appearance in Las Vegas and he from a business meeting. NRC is based on the theory that the easiest debts to collect are the ones that are the most recent. But because most agencies charge a large percentage for collection — 33-50 percent for bills owed by individuals and 20-33 percent for those owed by companies — most companies try for six months to a year to collect the bills themselves. If they fail, they they turn to an agency, but by that time the chances of collection have greatly diminished. Last year agencies were able to collect an average of 28 percent of the bills turned over to them, down from 30 percent the year before.

By sharply discounting his service, Schultz has been able to entice 40,000 businesses in 40 states to bring their unpaid bills to him while they still are fresh, vastly enhancing the chance of collection. "On a $5,000 bill, I'll charge $150 and most other agencies will charge about $2,000," he said.

Schultz has about 600 consultants around the country that go into a client's business, analyze how the company handles its accounts and shows it how to prod tardy bill payment without driving them away.

"By doing that, we get the bills while they're still easy to collect. We're successful with 80-90 percent of the money owed the company," he said.

This spring NRC collected $50,000 an Arab sheik owed Business Material Inc. of Grand Rapids, Mich. The fee was $150, Schultz said.

Success has given Schultz rare opportunities for indulging personal interests. He's an avid pilot and NRC owns a Lear jet for business trips. It also will have a heliport at a new headquarters building now under construction. A leased helicopter will ferry prospective customers to and from the new building.

He and Marva live on a 20-acre estate near Columbus. It includes an indoor Olympic size swimming pool — part of the family room of the house — and sunken tennis courts.

Only Action Will Save Dollar, Javits Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States must be ready to intervene in world money markets to prop up the falling dollar, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., told the Senate Thursday.

He said that the possibility must be accepted that the world monetary system eventually will be restructured in a way that would gradually replace reliance on the dollar as the key reserve asset.

President Carter on Wednesday expressed "deep concern" over the dollar's decline and asked the Treasury Department and the Federal Reserve Board what steps can be taken to reverse the slide.

Javits applauded Carter's statement and noted that it was followed by an immediate rise in the value of the dollar on foreign exchanges.

But he said expressions of concern are not enough for the long term. "Unless followed up by concrete action to deal with the causes of the dollar's instability, the dollar will quickly resume its steep decline," he said in his speech delivered to the Senate.

Javits outlined his own short-and-long-term plan to deal with that decline. And he urged Carter to begin serious discussions with the world's finance ministers "on a monetary plan that would gradually replace the present exclusive reliance on the dollar as the key reserve asset."

Javits said this would include the currencies of the major industrialized countries.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Where can I find those "insured six-month savings certificates, now yielding better than 8 percent," which you wrote about? Neither my bank nor my savings and loan association offers them. The only 8 percent insured savings certificate I can find is at the S&L and it is for eight years.

A. As I put this through the typewriter, you can no longer get 8 percent on six-month certificates. The yield on those certificates was above 8 percent, at some thrift institutions, for about a month. But it dropped below 8 percent, when interest rates came down a bit.

We're talking about what have been nicknamed both "money market" and "T-bill" certificates — because the interest they pay is pegged to the interest on 26-week U.S. Treasury bills.

Every Monday, the U.S. Treasury Department holds an auction, at which it sells 26-week and 13-week Treasury bills — as one method of financing the horrendous federal debt. The "average" yield the Treasury pays on the 26-week bills determines the interest rate that will be paid on six-month savings certificates.

Each Thursday, banks and savings and loan associations begin selling savings certificates with interest rates based on the 26-week T-bill yield of the previous Monday's auction. If you had shopped around a few weeks ago, you could have obtained an insured savings certificate yielding a shade better than 8 percent for the six-month life of the certificate. Now that interest rates have dipped, you have to settle for a bit less.

Commercial banks are allowed to pay interest on six-month certificates equal to the yield on 26-week T bills. Savings banks and savings and loan associations, however, are allowed to pay interest on their six-month certificates at the 26-week T-bill rate, plus 0.25 percent.

So, for the highest yield, the trick is to find a savings bank or savings and loan association which offers the highest permissible interest rate on its six-month certificates — and which also continuously compounds interest. Continuous compounding can raise the effective annual yield by about 0.4 percent.

One last thought. These six-month certificates are available in minimum denominations of $10,000. The eight-year certificates you mentioned — on which commercial banks can pay interest of up to 7 3/4 percent and savings banks and savings and loan associations can pay up to 8 percent — come in amounts of $1,000 and up. If you put your money into the latter, you should also look for an institution that compounds interest continuously.

Because you are seeking the highest possible yield, the obvious thing to do is shop around. This column cannot be put in the position of naming individual banks and/or S&Ls.

Q. Is the interest collected from a six-month savings certificate taxable by the state?

A. It's subject to federal, state and local income taxes. And, because your letter comes from an area where there is a city income tax, you would be stuck with all three.

Even though the interest on six-month savings certificates is pegged to the yield on 26-week U.S. Treasury bills, those certificates are not T-bills. The interest on T-bills, of course, is not subject to state and local income tax.

Q. Are what you call "real certificates of deposit" — issued in amounts of $100,000 or more — insured by an agency of the federal government? Can they be obtained in amounts smaller than $100,000?

A. You get the same answer to both questions: No. Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. coverage stops at $40,000. Real CDs — issued by big banks and which pay higher interest than insured savings certificates — don't come in "pieces" less than that large round number, $100,000.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Hill Wants Assurance N.M. Waste Site Safe

Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Attorney General John Hill says an environmental impact statement on the Department of Energy's proposed nuclear waste storage facility near Carlsbad, N.M., should consider "all potential environmental, economic and social impacts of the project on the State of Texas."

Hill, in a letter to the DOE's office in charge of developing the impact statements, said his office has been "closely monitoring developments with the Waste Isolation Pilot Project (WIPP) in New Mexico," adding that "a thorough evaluation of the impacts on New Mexico and Texas... must be made to determine the safety of the project."

He stressed the evaluation "must be completed prior to the Department's commitment of significant funds for the project development."

Hill listed seven points he feels DOE should consider in drafting an environmental impact statement:

• Because the WIPP site is located 25 miles from Texas, "all potential environmental, economic and social impacts of the project on the State of Texas should be evaluated fully and to the same extent as the impacts upon the State of New Mexico."

• Specific impacts of the transportation of nuclear waste through Texas must be evaluated, Hill said. "Reliance upon generic impact statements on transportation of nuclear wastes will not suffice."

• Precise transportation routes must be determined before a "meaningful environmental assessment can be made." This cannot be done until the DOE determines the type of waste to be stored in the WIPP. Yet, Hill said, DOE appears to be planning "to proceed with the analysis, prior to determining from what locations nuclear wastes will be moved."

• Consideration should be given to using a single source of experimental waste since this alternative would require only a single transportation route for high level radioactive waste.

• Any alternative which would result in the reduced transportation of nuclear wastes must be considered, including the use of heaters or other types of simulators which might avoid the need for the transportation of waste materials to the WIPP site altogether.

• Since the WIPP is proposed as a storage rather than a permanent disposal site, "potential impacts of the retrieval and future transportation from the site must be considered."

• "Full consideration must be given," Hill said, "to the effects of cleanup, evacuation and temporary storage resulting from any transportation accidents involving nuclear wastes."

Hill said he looks forward to a "full public airing" of the environmental assessment of the project.

Court Reverses Maxey Judgment

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo has reversed the Homer G. Maxey case, remanding the lengthy and bitter court dispute back for trial at the local level.

A former Lubbock multimillionaire, Maxey, as plaintiff, was granted an approximate $2 million judgment against the old Citizens National Bank (CNB) following a 1976 jury trial.

Jurors voted to award the plaintiff a $3.7 million verdict Oct. 22, 1976, but presiding 72nd Dist. Judge Denizl Bevers lowered that amount to $1,961,936, plus nine per cent interest on the award amount starting from the date of judgment.

Maxey attorney Harold Hammett, contacted in Fort Worth, said his client will now appeal the Amarillo court's ruling to the state supreme court.

"Absolutely," he said, when asked if the reversal would be appealed.

The $3.7 million jury award was the largest such verdict in Lubbock County history.

The jury trial centered on whether CNB disposed of Maxey's properties for an adequate price after a Feb. 16, 1966, foreclosure.

The appeals court reversed the case primarily on a jury finding of the liabilities of a formerly Maxey-owned company, Plaza Building Corporation.

The liabilities dispute revolved around approximately $1.2 million which, testimony indicated, the company owed Maxey personally.

Maxey's attorneys successfully contended at the jury trial that the $1.2 million should be construed as capital contributions rather than as debts.

"We have received all of the evidence, including that favorable to the jury answer, and conclude that the overwhelming weight of the evidence is that Maxey's advances to Plaza Building Corporation were loans rather than capital contributions."

"It necessarily follows that the jury finding that Plaza's liabilities were $2,562,475 is against the overwhelming weight of the evidence," the appeals court opinion stated.

Bevers, in entering the $1.9 million judgment, had found as a matter of law that the jury had erred in its finding of Plaza liabilities.

That finding, in fact, accounted for most of the difference between the $3.7 million jury award and the final $1.9 million judgment.

But the appeals court decision held that Bevers erred in substituting his own finding for that of the jury. Bevers should have instead granted a bank motion for mistrial, the appeals court ruled.

While upholding the bank's contention concerning the Plaza liabilities question, the Amarillo court said there was "ample evidence" to support the jury finding that the bank had failed to exercise good faith in stock sales of both Plaza and Maxey Lumber Company.

The jury found consideration paid for the collateral was grossly inadequate, and that the alleged failure to exercise good faith at the foreclosure sale was a contributing factor.

The appeals court also said the trial court erred in not allowing prejudgment interest in the case.

If the case does come to Lubbock for trial again, it will mark the fourth time it has been tried at the local level.

Appeals court Associate Justice Carlton Dodson, formerly of Lubbock, did not participate in the decision.

Maxey filed suit in 1966, some six years before the acquisition of CNB by Texas Commerce Bancshares, Inc. Neither that holding company nor Texas Commerce Bank is involved in the suit.

Lindbergh Remembered As Balloonists Land

MISEREY, France (AP) — "Lindbergh was a much bigger thing, of course, but this is really something too," said Emile Lasne, 73, moments after three American balloonists landed in a wheatfield near his village in western France.

Lasne remembered the landing of Charles Lindbergh in Paris in 1927 and the sight of the gigantic silver balloon that arrived, like Lindbergh, from the other side of the Atlantic, jolted his memories.

"Lindbergh was an extraordinary man," he said, "but many Americans are. I'm particularly fond of them."

A few hundred yards away, the 11-story high balloon wilted gracefully as it lost the last of the helium that had carried Ben Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman of New Mexico from Maine to the field 60 miles west of Paris.

The balloon came down by a highway and a huge traffic jam developed as it dropped slowly out of the sky.

A few hours earlier the balloon was 13,000 feet up as it approached France and the crew was sure of reaching Paris. But suddenly it lost altitude, possibly running low on helium, and the adventurers were forced to land in the verdant countryside under a brilliant dusky sky.

Hundreds of Frenchmen who had been tracking the balloon visually and through radio broadcasts rushed across the farm fields toward the balloon.

Women held their babies high, youngsters brandished autograph books, and Newman's father, Herb, had to bellow to get the crowd back.

"We never knew the balloon was coming down until my husband said, 'Look at that things in the sky,'" said a woman who had been on a family outing.

"This is fantastic, terrific," she said. "Someone elbowed her in the face and the crush became so thick that police had to form an arm-in-arm cordon around the red and yellow gondola in which the balloonists stood."

Two bottles of champagne were popped, spraying the balloonists and adding a pungent odor to the bucolic surroundings. Newman raised his arms in a gesture of triumph.

"This is fabulous, fabulous," marveled Gregoire Mussayan, a motorist who stopped to watch. "This is a victory for the American people."

In Paris, Youth and Sports Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson called the achievement "a new bridge between America and France" and announced he had awarded the men his ministry's gold medal.

The mayor of nearby Evreux, the region's leading town, clambered onto the gondola to shake hands with the crew. The balloonists, all unshaven and red with sunburn, donned fresh T-shirts prepared for their flight with slogans saying "First Trans-Atlantic Crossing by Balloon."

A helicopter, whipping up hurricanes of trampled wheat, arrived to take them to Paris and a reunion with their wives.

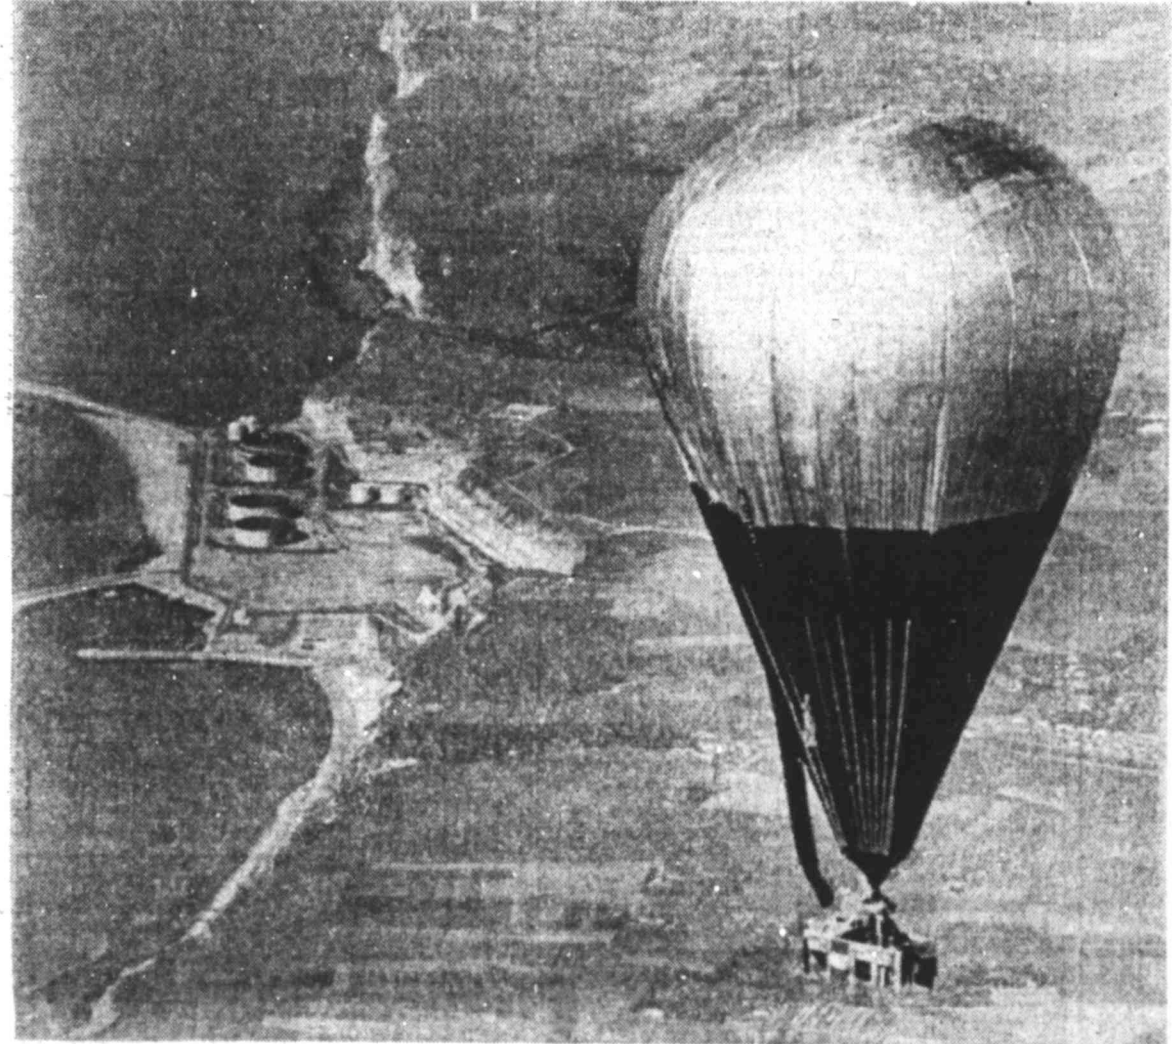

The balloon, which in the air looked like a triumphant giant gracefully sailing to victory, now lay deflated, strewn useless on the wheatfield, guarded by police.

As they left, Anderson explained the reason they wanted to end their flight in France instead of being content with a crossing to Ireland.

"Charles Lindbergh was an inspiration to many generations of Frenchmen and Americans," he said.

Ballooning's Birthplace Opens Heart To Intrepid Travelers

PARIS (AP) — A half-century after they thundered in welcome for Charles Lindbergh, the people of this balloon-loving nation opened their hearts Thursday to the American crew of the Double Eagle II — the first men to span the North Atlantic in a balloon.

"Lucky Lindy" piloted his one-engine airplane Spirit of St. Louis to a safe landing at Le Bourget Airport outside Paris on May 21, 1927, after flying solo from Long Island, N.Y., in the first trans-Atlantic crossing by air. He was greeted by swarms of delirious Parisians.

Fifty-one years later, hundreds of expectant Frenchmen welcomed three adventurers from Albuquerque, N.M., as they set their towering silver balloon down in a wheatfield near the tiny village of Miserey west of Paris, completing a journey that men have dreamed of since the French brothers Montgolfier first sent a hot air balloon into the heavens in 1783.

"The Atlantic in a Balloon!" screamed the banner headline atop the Paris daily France-Soir, presaging the hero's welcome that awaited Ben Abruzzo, 48, Maxie Anderson, 43, and Larry Newman, 31.

"This is the triumph of the gas balloon," declared the curator of the Balloon Museum in Normandy, the world's only such archive. "In the history of the balloon, it's the hot-air technique that has prevailed since 1783."

On June 4th of that year, Joseph and Etienne de Montgolfier launched the first controlled hot-air balloon on a hillside in Annonay in central France.

Later that year, on Oct. 15, a Frenchman named Jean-Francois Pilatre de Rozier rose from the Earth in one of the Montgolfiers' balloons, but remained firmly anchored to the ground by cables.

The intrepid Pilatre made the first real balloon voyage on Nov. 21, 1783, with the Marquis d'Arlandes. Their 20-minute flight covered 7.4 miles at an altitude of 360 feet.

The first hydrogen-filled balloon made its maiden voyage on Dec. 1, 1783, and the first woman to sail aloft in a balloon was a Madame Tible from Lyon, on the 4th of June, 1784.

Those were the modest roots of the Double Eagle II, a 10,550-pound craft that went aloft from Presque Isle, Maine, last Friday night and came down 137 hours and 18 minutes later in a field 3,200 miles to the east.

The historic journey eluded more than a dozen balloonists over more than a century. Starting in 1873, there have been 18 known attempts to cross the Atlantic by balloon. But none went the distance and six men and one woman gave their lives to the challenge.

Senators Preparing For ERA Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crucial question of how many votes it will take in the Senate to pass the measure extending the time to ratify the proposed Equal Rights Amendment apparently will be up to the senators themselves, says Murray Zweben, the Senate parliamentarian.

Backers of the proposal, which would prohibit discrimination based on sex, have indicated they would muster a simple majority but not a two-thirds margin, if that is required.

Albuquerque Planning Balloonists' Welcome

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Chamber of Commerce and city officials Thursday planned a heroes' welcome for three New Mexico men who became the first persons to cross the Atlantic Ocean in a balloon.

"I admire their spirit of adventure and courage," said Mayor David Rusk, who promised "a marvelous welcome home" for balloonists Ben Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman.

Officials of the Chamber of Commerce, which was coordinating homecoming events, said tentative plans included a reception at the airport, a parade through the city and a banquet.

Gov. Jerry Apodaca, members of the state's congressional delegation and numerous Albuquerque balloonists joined Rusk in praising the balloon flight that began near Presque Isle, Maine, last Friday and ended in a wheat field 50 miles west of Paris Thursday.

"I'm tickled to death," said Paul Woessner, who won the world ballooning championship in England earlier this year.

Another balloonist, State Sen. Tom Rutherford, called the successful flight of the Double Eagle II "amazing."

"They were clearly well prepared with their equipment, their experience and their attitude exactly right," Rutherford said.

Apodaca, who said the state would join the city in officially recognizing the achievement, said the state "can be very proud that New Mexicans were involved in this successful attempt."

Balloonists' Backgrounds Listed

By The Associated Press
Here are brief sketches of the three men who became the first balloonists to cross the Atlantic:

Ben Abruzzo

— Ben Abruzzo, 48, is a native of Rockford, Ill., where his family operated a restaurant. He first came to Albuquerque 26 years ago when he was in the Air Force, after he was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1952 with a degree in business administration. He later went into business as a developer, building housing, a tramway and running a ski resort at Sandia Peak, about 10 miles from Albuquerque. He and his wife, Pat, have four children. He is a veteran pilot and balloonist.

Besides ballooning he has been involved in hang gliding, scuba diving and flying.

"Anything that was dangerous he was interested in," said his mother, Mary Abruzzo, 76. "As a little boy, he was always into something. He never stood still. He still doesn't."

Maxie Anderson, 44, is president of a uranium and copper mining company. A native of Sayre, Okla., he is an industrial engineer and a pilot with 29 years of experience. Maxie and Patty Anderson have four children. He was graduated from the University of North Dakota in 1956. Anderson is an expert skier who met Abruzzo five years ago at the time both became interested in ballooning.

Anderson was piloting airplanes when he was 14 years old even though he was not supposed to be able to get a license until he was 16.

"I'm not talking," said his mother, Louise Fowler, of Siloam Springs, Ark., when asked how he got the license early.

She said she was involved in one of her son's earlier adventures, accompanying him when he was 15 and flying to a football game in Missouri.

As Mrs. Fowler recalled the incident, oil began spurting from the engine, blackening the windshield. Anderson opened a side window, leaned out so he could see, and said, "Mother, now don't you get excited, and I wasn't about to. He said he would land on the highway over the mountains and I didn't know how he was going to do it, but he did."

Larry Newman, 31, is president of one of the largest hang gliding companies. A newcomer to ballooning, Newman planned to arrive on the European continent via a hang glider that had been attached to the gondola. The glider was jettisoned over the Atlantic due to ballast problems. A former airline pilot, Newman and his wife, Sandra, have been married five months.

He is a pilot with 6,000 hours flying time.

Newman "has something inside him that's always made him strive to be more outstanding, to have a sense of achievement," said his mother, Anne Ozell, 57.

of San Francisco. "As a teen-ager, he would be surfing all day, come home exhausted, bloody from being gouged by the rocks... Then, the next morning, he'd be up bright and early to repeat the same performance... until he had mastered it to the point where he got bored with surfing and went on to the next thing," she said.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible

Mark 13:15-37, The Living Bible

15,16 Hurry! If you are on your rooftop porch, don't even go back into the house. If you are out in the fields, don't even return for your money or clothes.

17 Woe to pregnant women in those days, and to mothers nursing their children.

18 And pray that your flight will not be in winter.

19 For those will be days of such horror as have never been since the beginning of God's creation, nor will ever be again.

20 And unless the Lord shortens that time of calamity, not a soul in all the earth will survive. But for the sake of His chosen ones He will limit those days.

21 And then if anyone tells you, "This is the Messiah," or, "That one is," don't pay any attention.

22 For there will be many false Messiahs and false prophets who will do wonderful miracles that would deceive, if possible, even God's own children.

23 Take care! I have warned you!

24 After the tribulation ends, then the sun will grow dim and the moon will not shine,

25 And the stars will fall—the heavens will convulse.

26 Then all mankind will see Me, the Son of Mankind, coming in the clouds with great power and glory.

27 And I will send out the angels to gather together My chosen ones from all over the world—from the farthest bounds of earth and heaven.

28 Now, here is a lesson from a fig tree. When its buds become tender and its leaves begin to sprout, you know that spring has come.

29 And when you see these things happening that I've described, you can be sure that My return is very near, that I am right at the door.

30 Yes, these are the events that will signal the end of the age.

31 Heaven and earth shall disappear, but My words stand sure forever.

32 However, no one, not even the angels in heaven, nor I myself, knows the day or hour when these things will happen; only the Father knows.

33 And since you don't know when it will happen, stay alert. Be on the watch [for My return].

34 My coming can be compared with that of a man who went on a trip to another country. He laid out his employees' work for them to do while he was gone, and told the gatekeeper to watch for his return.

35,36,37 Keep a sharp lookout! For you do not know when I will come, at evening, at midnight, early dawn or late daybreak. Don't let Me find you sleeping. Watch for My return! This is My message to you and to everyone else."

Regulars Return To Pro Lineups

By The Associated Press

When the regulars get off the bench and into the game, the National Football League regular season cannot be very far away. Two weeks to be exact, which is why veteran quarterbacks Fran Tarkenton and Bob Griese will both get starts tonight when the Minnesota Vikings travel to Miami to play the Dolphins.

In the other game tonight, the Washington Redskins move down the parkway to meet the Colts in Baltimore.

Tarkenton will be making his first start for the Vikings since breaking his leg in a game Nov. 9. It was the first disabling injury for the 38-year-old Tarkenton in his record-breaking 17-year NFL career, suggesting to some that he had scrambled for his last yard.

But Tarkenton still has the urge to play and build on his statistics of 3,341 completions and 317 touchdowns in 5,895 attempts. And he still touches off the same alarm in opposing coaches, who often must construct unique defenses to contain the elusive scrambler.

"I'm glad to see that he's healthy again," said Dolphin coach Don Shula. "Otherwise, no, I'm never happy to face Tarkenton."

Griese, in his 12th season with the Dolphins, will be barking first-quarter signals. He is glad to see, period. Griese's effectiveness was minimized several years ago until he began wearing eyeglasses.

Glasses or no glasses, Griese has no trouble looking over his shoulder and seeing Guy Benjamin, the strong-armed quarterback from Stanford who was the Dolphins' top draft pick this year.

Last week against New Orleans, Benjamin completed all nine of his passes for 58 yards and one touchdown.

"It was enjoyable to watch him run our offense," said Shula. "He's a very aware young man. He has played well in practice but didn't in the first two games. He was on the money against the Saints."

Washington coach Jack Pardee, who coached Chicago the past two seasons and before that in the ill-fated World Football League, continues to get some mileage out of the WFL. Runningback Tommy Reamon, who played for Pardee with WFL's Jacksonville franchise in 1975, was signed by Washington as a free agent.

In NFL games Saturday, Philadelphia plays at Atlanta, Denver is at Buffalo, Pittsburgh meets the New York Giants, Chicago is at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay is at New Orleans, St. Louis is at Green Bay, Houston is at Dallas and the New York Jets play at San Diego.

On Sunday, Kansas City meets New England and Oakland plays San Francisco. Detroit is at Cleveland Monday night.

Sore Shoulder Stops Lopez In Fem Tourney

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — While favorite Nancy Lopez dropped out because of a sore shoulder, Kathy Whitworth and Sandra Post surged into the first-round lead Thursday in the $150,000 Lady Stroh's LPGA tournament at the Dearborn Country Club.

Miss Whitworth and Miss Post, who have 29 years of pro golf experience between them, carded nines of 36-33 for 3-under-par 69s at the 6,411-yard course outside Detroit.

They were a stroke in front of Sue Roberts and local favorite Sharon Miller of Marshall, who was 4-under and owned the lead after 15 holes before three-putting the next two for bogeys.

Two other golfers were under par in the four-day quest for the $22,500 top prize. Patty Hayes and Debby Massey shot 1-under 71s.

Miss Lopez, the superstar rookie who has already won eight tournaments, withdrew because of a sore right shoulder. She said she would take two weeks off for treatment and rest.

Also dropping out from the field of 102 pros and six amateurs was Jan Stephenson. She was bothered by the flu but was disqualified and will be fined $100 for failing to notify officials of her withdrawal.

Miss Whitworth, the 39-year-old from Richardson, who has won 79 Ladies Professional Golfers' Association tournaments, joined Miss Post for the early lead and waited to see if any afternoon finishers could fare better.

Miss Miller and Miss Massey were the only two who challenged.

Whitworth had six birdies, one bogey and one double-bogey in her round.

Jaeckel Grabs Golf Lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Barry Jaeckel, who scored his first career victory earlier this season in Tallahassee, birdied the last two holes for a 6-under-par 65 and a one-shot lead Thursday in the first round of the $300,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

"It was just one of those days when everything was positive," said Jaeckel, the 29-year-old son of movie actor Richard Jaeckel. "When you shoot 65 you have to make a lot of putts. I made a lot of putts."

"The putter was the name of the game today. I was so confident in it I really didn't care if I hit a bad shot. I felt I could get it in anyway."

Jaeckel, in his fourth year of tour activity, one-putted 11 times on the hot, humid day on the 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course. He holed from 15 feet on the last hole to break a tie and take sole control of the top spot.

A single shot back was longshot Jim Albus, a club pro who hurried away from the course after shooting his 66 to give an afternoon lesson at his Piping Rock Club in nearby Locust Valley, N.Y.

Jack Nicklaus, winner of the British Open and three American tournaments this year and a two-time Westchester champ, played his front side in 4-under-par 32 and headed a group at 67.

Former Texas Tech golfer Jeff Mitchell had one of his best rounds of the season, firing a 69 in the first round to stand four strokes off the leading pace.

Also at four under par on the tight, hilly little course that was blanketed by haze for most of the sweltering day, were veteran Don January, Ed Sabo, Rex Caldwell, Alan Pate and Jay Haas, the winner of the San Diego Open earlier this season.

"I played fairly well," Nicklaus said. "I just didn't get the ball close enough to the hole on the back nine to shoot a score."

John Mahaffey, who won the PGA national championship and the Pleasant Valley Classic in his last two starts, birdied his last two holes for a 68 that left him very much in contention for a rare third consecutive victory.

"I don't think I was concentrating very well the first part of the round," said Mahaffey. "But the last few holes I got back to where I was the last couple of weeks."

"I'm not tired. I guess I'm in what you call a scoring habit. I'm looking forward to the next hole and the next birdie chance. When and if that ends, I'll probably be drained."

Tom Watson shot a 70. So did Hubert Green. Andy North, the current U.S. Open title-holder and the defending champion here, had a 72. Leading money-winner Andy Bean matched par 71.

Jaeckel holed birdie putts of 30, 8, 10, 10 and 5 feet on the front nine and had a par-saving putt of 12 feet to make the turn in a spectacular 31.

But he sandwiched a pair of bogeys around a birdie on the next three holes, then made his decisive rush at the end, flipping a sand wedge shot to three feet on the 17th and then dropping a 13-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

POWERFUL RETURN — This was just one of several returns for Leigh Mires in the Lubbock Closed Tennis Tournament now under way at the Municipal Tennis Center. Miss Mires was returning while playing with Chuck Rodgers in 14 mixed doubles. But, she was successful in this match, as well as gaining the semifinals in 14 singles and doubles. Don Henry . . . Of Dorms And Diamonds

WHEN TIME AND space run short . . . When is Duane Griggs going to slow down on this hole-in-one business? It's getting to be embarrassing for us older folks. Griggs, the 15-year-old golfer from Wolfforth, scored two more aces at Treasure Island Thursday. According to TI pro Wilson Swinney, that makes nine holes-in-one for the youngster since Apr. 22. And it's the second time he's had two in a day at Treasure Island. All except two have come at TI, the others being at Meadowbrook and at Plainview. "Man," says Swinney. "I've been playing just about all my life, and I've only had four." Duane is just a shortie; he has to use women's clubs, because the men's are too big for him.

And this developed even before he starred in last Saturday's Oil Bowl. Sports Illustrated is running the picture of Monterey's Ron Reeves in its Faces in the Crowd section this week, listing his dual baseball-football exploits. And Saturday, he steps into a Tech uniform for the first time. . . Bud Casey, the Tech recruiting coordinator, zipped in Wednesday from a recruiting trip into the Dallas-northeast Texas area. And if the trip didn't leave him breathless, the athletes did. "Do you realize," he asked, "there are four kids in my area alone that have run 9.2? Those are legit 9.2s, too."

LUBBOCK CHRISTIAN COACH Larry Hays, returning from his trip to Korea and Taiwan, found good baseball diamonds in that part of the world, but there were some differences. The pitching mounds—in Korea, at least—were flat. "That gave our pitchers some trouble at first," he said of his NAIA all-stars. "And the infields are like softball fields over here, no grass on the infield. The crowds are very attentive, too. They're all there when you begin batting practice. Umpires? It didn't do any good to argue; they didn't understand what you were saying. But, it was like anywhere else; you don't get the good calls at home."

Don Knodel, the little guy who coached Rice to the SWC basketball championship in 1970 but resigned a couple of years later? He's still in Houston and only recently hired on as head coach of that city's new team in the women's pro basketball league. . . All Raider coaches hit the highways last week on recruiting. Head man Rex Dockery made 16 official visits in two days. "I've told it so much, I have that Tech speech down pat now," he commented after the stretch. Dockery appeared pleased with his activities, however. "But," said Casey, "you have to be out now (in early August); everybody else is. Everywhere I went, there was Ron Meyer (SMU). That guy is really getting around."

All-American Futurity Adds 17 Late Entries

17 Late Entries

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Seventeen supplemental nominees were certified Thursday for the 20th running of the $1 million dollar All-American Futurity, billed as the richest horse race in the world.

Entries secretary Dorothy Dillard said the 17 late payments, due Tuesday, were for $14,250 each. The $242,250 represented the largest single late payment ever made for the $1,280,000 Labor Day race.

Some 513 colts and fillies are eligible for the Aug. 25 trials, with 270 to 290 horses expected to try to qualify for the 10-horse All-American Futurity, the final leg of the Quarter Horse Triple Crown.

There were 1,380 original nominees for the race a year ago, with 50 added by late supplemental fees.

Thirty-three of the colts and fillies were made eligible June 1 with the payment of a $6,000 fee and added $206,250 to the All-American kitty.

Included in the latest supplemental nominees is Easy Treasure, owned by Robert Spreen of Downey, Calif.

Easy Treasure won the $400,000 Kindergarten Quarter Horse Futurity in Los Alamitos and the $18,450 Las Ninas Handicap. The horse sold for $67,000 in the All-American Futurity Quarter Horse Sale here a year ago.

Ruidoso Downs officials said the Aug. 15 eligibility date still is in effect for any late nominees mailed and postmarked on that date, but that few if any were expected.

Track officials said that because of the $1,280,000 ceiling set for this year's race, any funds collected over that amount will be transferred to next year's race.

Tucker Prefers Football

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

BROWNFIELD—Do you know the similarity between being a head football coach and the oil business?

Answer: Both deal with drilling.

But Cub coach Bob Tucker will tell you the similarity ends.

Last year, Tucker was working for an oil company in Midland. He had decided to leave coaching after building Coleman High School's football team into a winning program.

"I guess I left to make money," said Tucker. "In the oil business I could afford to buy cars and televisions. But not in coaching."

However, last season Tucker went to a Midland High football game before the opening kickoff, Tucker was ready to return to coaching.

"My wife and I were sitting in the stands," recalled Tucker. "When the Star-Spangled Banner was being played both my wife and I began to cry. That's when I knew that coaching was what I really wanted."

Tucker will be inheriting a team that has not exactly set District 3-AAA on fire. For the past two seasons the Cubs have only been victorious twice.

Tucker, however isn't concerned about Brownfield's bad fortune the past couple of seasons. As he puts it: "I got here at the right time."

Tucker smiled and added, "The townspeople are behind us and are hungry for a winner. I think that's helped us (his coaching staff) to build confidence."

Such community projects that have rallied the people of Brownfield around the football team have been — to name a couple — carpeting the dressing room and making improvements on the football stadium.

"I really don't know why our kids haven't won many football games at the varsity level," questioned Tucker. "After all, junior high school to the junior varsity level, our kids have been very successful."

This season, Tucker will install the wishbone as the Cubs' offensive attack.

Tucker is going to line his players up in the wishbone to take advantage of speed.

"We've got 4.5, 4.6 and 4.7 speed in the 40-yard dash in our offensive backfield," said Tucker. "We're hoping to break a few."

The Cubs quick backfield, where Tucker is looking for leadership, includes halfback Tony Franklin (4.5), and quarterbacks Kelly Reid (4.6) and Lyn Goldston (4.7).

Defensively, Brownfield will be small but quick, "by choice," said Tucker. "We'll have four down linemen and three linebackers that will run out of many different formations. We're definitely stressing ball pursuit."

If Brownfield's lack of defensive size results in injuries, will the Cubs chances for winning the district crown be jeopardized?

"We hope nobody gets injured," said Tucker. "But I will say that if we are hit by injury, we have sufficient depth. We have 75 kids out for workouts this season and I feel we'll have plenty of speed on the bench."

Watson Edges Bobby Unser At Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Local favorite Dave Watson of nearby Milton, Wis. painstakingly built up a 100-yard lead through 140 miles of racing, then protected it the final 10 miles for victory over persistent Bobby Unser in Thursday's Fair Stock 150 for U.S. Auto Club stock cars.

Watson, who started third, trailed pole position starter A.J. Foyt and Unser until the 106th mile around the Wisconsin State Fairgrounds Speedway when he inched ahead. Foyt and Bobby Allison had dropped out of contention a few laps earlier when each made unscheduled pit stops for tires.

Joe Ruttman was third, the last car to finish all 150 miles. Foyt, who set a track record of 110.974 mph in qualifying Thursday morning, was fourth.

Watson, the top rookie last season in USAC stock car racing, captured his third USAC feature here, with an average speed of 95.346 mph. Watson won this race a year ago.

The race got off to a slow start with a nine-car pileup on the third lap. Roger McCluskey started it with a blown engine. One of the drivers involved, Indianapolis car veteran Al Loquasto, ultimately figured in three other caution periods before retiring from "driver fatigue" midway through the event.

Mires Reaches For Net Triple

Leigh Mires will play in the finals of two events and in the semifinals of a third today in the last day's action in the junior portion of the Lubbock Closed Tennis Tournament.

Miss Mires will face Christy Gruber in the finals of the girls' 14 singles and will team with Amy Irons against Louise McNamara and Cindy McKee in the finals of the girls' 14 doubles.

She will also play alongside Chuck Rodgers in the quarter-finals of the junior mixed doubles.

The tournament began Wednesday, and competition will resume again today at 9 a.m. All junior events will be finalized today. The adult segment of the tournament will be held next week.

MAKING IT LOOK EASY — Brownfield split end Bud Holmes keeps his feet inbounds and hauls in a pass during a workout session this week. He will be helping the Cubs try to rebound from a 1-9 season. (Staff Photo)

MUST MAKE A CHOICE—Littlefield coaches must decide between these two quarterbacks to lead the Wildcats as they defend their share of the District 3-AA championship. Eddie Elms (10) was the starter last year until he sustained a broken ankle and Eddie Gregory (15) stepped in as a freshman to lead the Wildcats the rest of the season. (Staff Photo)

Wildcats Look To Tradition

BY SCOTT SUDDUTH
Avalanche Journal Sports Staff

LITTLEFIELD—With tradition providing the extra lift, the Wildcats are once again in contention for the District 2-AA title.

Beginning his eighth season as the Wildcat head mentor, Jerry Blakely has directed Littlefield to the playoffs four times including last year when the tri-champs won a coin toss and advanced to the bidistrict playoffs.

Although 16 lettermen from the 1977 team are gone, Blakely thinks his team can overcome a lack of experience and depth and become contenders. "Our kids always believe they can win, and with that kind of attitude they can overcome inexperience," explains Blakely, who has posted a 46-26-4 record in Littlefield.

Blakely's list of strengths includes the offense with four returning starters. Heading the list of returnees is senior tailback Rudolph Smith. With 4.7 speed in the 40-yard dash, Smith will be depended upon heavily in the Wildcat's I-formation offense.

He will be joined by either Eddie Gregory or Eddie Elms at quarterback. Elms was the starter last year until an injury sidelined him early in the season and Gregory came on as a freshman to direct the team. Presently, because of experience, Gregory (150) is considered the probable starter, but Blakely adds, "I feel we can win with either quarterback."

Leadership will be another strong point for the Wildcats as senior tackle Richard Soria (205) is expected to lead in that department for the team. "With key people like Soria back, if we build around this nucleus, our team can be competitive," added Blakely.

With a respectable number of linemen in the 200-pound range, Blakely considers his trenches as adequate in size but lacking in game experience. "If the defense plays aggressively, we will be competitive," explained the coach.

To help his young team mature rapidly, Blakely concentrates on short and intense practices.

"I like for the players to think and think positive, so we have skull sessions everyday."

"This improves our attitude," said the Eastern New Mexico graduate.

With a strong schedule to test his young group, Blakely hopes the Wildcats will be seasoned by the time they meet Muleshoe in what promises to be a tight district race.

Tigers Hope To Contend For 3-AAA Title

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

SNYDER — Once again it looks like San Angelo Lake View is the team to beat in District 3-AAA. And Snyder is among the teams hoping to do it.

One big thing coach Mike Jenkins has going for him in his third year at the Tiger helm is eight returning offensive starters from last year's squad that went 5-5.

Leading that crew of experienced veterans are a pair of blocky tackles, Scott Crenweige (6-3, 220) and Baron Land (6-0, 220) have both been starters since their sophomore years.

Also coming back are both guards, an end, the quarterback and two other backs. The problem area for the Tigers looks to be the defense where only two starters return.

"Our defense," Jenkins replied immediately when asked his team's weak spot. "We've got to have some seniors come around. We graduated eight kids who started for us on defense last year."

"We also need more consistency on offense. We moved the ball well at times but we really need more consistency."

"Lake View is definitely the team to beat. They've won it for the last two years. As much as anything else that really gives them the winning edge. Over the last two years they must be 20-0 in the regular season."

In addition to Land and Crenweige, Jenkins is looking to senior veterans Clay Johnson at quarterback, Richard Crayton and David Lee at two other backfield spots, Mitch Mackey at tight end and C.B. Edmiaston and Cary Welsh at guards. Edmiaston and Welsh are a pair of 5-8 bookends, one weighing 180 and the other 185.

"Those people are all good football players," Jenkins said.

"I don't like to call our offense a problem because it will come around, but it is something to work on. I'm an optimist. I hate to call anything a weakness. Call it lack in experience rather than a weakness."

"I fully expect some of these young kids to step in and do a job for us. That'll be what makes us district contenders."

The only two defensive starters returning are 5-11, 170-pound linebacker Wes Partain and scrappy 5-7, 130-pound defensive back Sid Sullenger.

But there are some experienced players ready to fill in the holes. Also back are defensive lettermen Perry Robertson (6-2, 170) and Mike Hicks (6-5, 195) at ends and Robert Dupuy (6-0, 185) at linebacker.

Peterson Backs Andretti For Race Championship

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Swedish Formula 1 race driver Ronnie Peterson said Thursday that American Mario Andretti is the No. 1 man on his Lotus team and that Peterson will do all he can to help him win the world driving title.

Andretti and Peterson have dominated this year's championship with their Lotus racers. Although the two drivers are teammates, the Swede is considered the only potential threat to Andretti's bid for his first world crown.

The possibility of a split between the two drivers has been mentioned by several newspapers in Europe after Peterson won the Austrian Grand Prix last Sunday, jumping to 46 points in the championship standings. Andretti, who ran off the track and picked up no points, leads the standings at 54.

Peterson was quoted by a Milan daily as saying that if they had "equal chances" to win the title, he was ready to step aside in favor of Andretti.

The Swede was interviewed after testing new tires at the Monza autodrome, near Milan, in preparation for the Sept. 10 Grand Prix of Italy.

Andretti was also in Monza to test new tires for his Lotus. He said he was not sure whether he could have his badly damaged racer ready for the Aug. 27 Formula 1 race at Zandvoort, Holland.

Andretti was the fastest of several drivers who tested tires in Monza Wednesday.

Although driving a training model, Andretti turned a lap in 1 minute, 39.23 seconds, ahead of John Watson of Britain in a Brabham-Alfa Romeo, who clocked

1:40.05. Peterson had 1:41.56. The pole position in the Grand Prix of Italy last year was won by James Hunt with a lap time of 1:38.8.

'Hee Haw' Spinoff To Feature More Cornfield County Humor

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — More pickin' and grinnin' is headed your way from Cornfield County. 'Hee Haw Honeys,' a 30-minute spinoff of the 'Hee Haw' television show, will premier this fall on some 100 television stations across the country.

"I think it will do very well," she said. "It's pre-sold for 24 shows, and this is a good sign because some go for only four. You can't get too much of a good thing. There are lots of doctor shows and detective shows, but not a lot of country shows. There has always been a country audience that wasn't tapped, people who love country music and country humor. And the country audience is very loyal. This show should run for years. We'll have the same 'Hee Haw' audience and pick up more eventually."

"because the company just wasn't hungry enough. But things are going so well for country music and our kind of comedy that we figured we just as well jump into it," he said. "I have some reservations," Lovullo acknowledged. "Hee Haw is on 52 weeks a year, and now we've got the new show. But I'm sure people will accept it. We'll have longevity — it's good for a few years. I don't think this will go for 10 years like 'Hee Haw,' but who knows? After all, they said 'Hee Haw' wouldn't last past 12 weeks."

Television Fills In For Schools

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television, typically cast as the villain by teachers and parents for its lack of quality children's programming, has earned the role of hero this summer in California. Public TV stations from San Francisco to San Bernardino have come to the rescue of thousands of youngsters who found themselves with time on their hands after revenue-slashing Proposition 13 forced school boards to find ways to trim their budgets.

criticized for its lack of substantive programming for young people. "I think television can be an added resource to teachers to help them cope with Prop. 13," Ms. Schooley said. For example, she said, a greater use of TV could help offset the effects of larger class size. In an effort to make television a real substitute for school, the Regional Educational Television Advisory Council put together a guide to KCET's summer school TV similar to the one prepared by KQED in the San Francisco Bay area.

Station KLCB in Los Angeles, operated by the city school district, has taken the idea of televised summer school one step further than the others — high school students attending "classes" in their living rooms are receiving credits for their viewing time. The district surveyed students who had hoped to graduate with summer school credits and then decided to offer an English elective and a required government course on television. About 350 students registered for the classes and were loaned textbooks by the district. They watch movies, listen to presentations by teachers and special guests, keep daily logs and do homework assignments.

"The students call our office with questions or to get the homework assignments they missed," said Douglas MacDonald, coordinator of the TV program. Audrey Cohn, 17, of suburban Canoga Park, would not have been able to graduate without the credits she'll earn from the televised English and government courses. "I think it's fantastic," said the teenager, who will attend California State University at Northridge in the fall. "It's a great opportunity for myself and all the other high school students since summer school was canceled. It's enjoyable because it's a different aspect of learning," she continued. "And you can phone in if you have problems."

Sister station KQED in San Francisco had planned "Vacation Video" — three hours of educational programming — before passage of the property tax limitation measure. Then when summer school was shut down, an activity book that supplemented the program was revised to emphasize parental involvement instead of classroom projects.

"A RIOT OF A THING. ONE OF THE GREAT CROSS-OUTS OF ALL TIME. RAW, RIBALD, FRANTIC, UPROARIOUS! YOU'LL LAUGH TILL YOU CRY."

"ENOUGH SOLID LAUGHS HERE TO MAKE 'ANIMAL HOUSE' WORTH VISITING. RAUNCHILY RECOMMENDED."

"RAW, RAUCOUS AND GLEEFULLY VULGAR, 'National Lampoon's Animal House' has but one redeeming social value... IT IS CONSISTENTLY VERY FUNNY! At a time when our nation's screens positively drip with either goo or gore, it comes as a healthy and most welcome kick in the solar plexus!"

Claire Schooley, KQED's director of instructional services, said parents who came to the station to buy the $2 activity book were grateful for the summer programs. "They would always make some kind of comment about how they really need it at this time," she said. KQCE in Huntington Beach, which broadcasts programs that reach 112,000 students during the regular school year, added a special one-hour "summer school" to its schedule.

"VERY FUNNY! The film makers have simply supplied the appropriate party-girdles, crew-neck sweaters, frat-house initiation rites and rituals of the toga party, AND LET ALL THAT IDIOTY SPEAK—VERY ELOQUENTLY, AND WITH A LOT OF COMIC FERVOR—FOR ITSELF!"

"'ANIMAL HOUSE' IS HILARIOUS! The movie has much the same sensibility that made Lampoon's High School Yearbook such a hit! The characters are all stereotypes, but such accurate ones that you recognize everyone you went to college with."

"IT WAS THE ONLY TIME IN MEMORY THAT AN AUDIENCE WAS SCREAMING SO HARD WITH LAUGHTER THAT A SIGNIFICANT PORTION OF THE DIALOGUE WAS LOST. An intense identification with time and place, combined with the perverse and piercing state of mind of the Lampoon writers—MAKE 'NATIONAL LAMPOON'S ANIMAL HOUSE' SEEM DESTINED TO BE THE BIG MOVIE OF THE YEAR!"

Crippens said the live show is carried by four other PBS stations in the state: KVCR in San Bernardino, KVIE in Sacramento; KETH in San Jose and KMTF in Fresno. The program can be edited and local segments inserted. "It's a live participatory show," Crippens said. "We have kids on the show in every segment. We want to help kids learn how to make things, do things. We have a segment on things to do in the Los Angeles area. The whole show is based on trying to get young people to participate and stretch their imaginations."

"FRATERNITY BROTHERS OF THE WORLD UNITE! You have nothing to lose but your reputations, which will be worthless anyway after National Lampoon's first venture into film-making... An uproarious satire on frat life in the early 1960's. THE FILM NEVER STOPS FOR A BREATH. THERE IS ALWAYS A NEW SURPRISE TO TICKLE YOUR FUNNY BONE."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rural Electrification Administration says at least 46,000 new jobs were created last year through federal financing of rural electric and telephone systems and the 1,300 community-development programs of the agency.

Most public broadcasting stations air instructional programs such as "Measure Metrics" (math) and "Cover to Cover" (reading) during the regular school year for use in classrooms, but do not continue them through the summer. Although the intent of the summer school programming was to fill an unexpected gap, broadcasters like Crippens and Ms. Schooley said they hope one side-effect will be an increased awareness of television as an educational tool — instead of only as a medium harshly

Crafty Plots Please Film Maker

FOR YOUR WANT ADS CALL 762-8821

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nowadays it's as hard to get into UCLA and USC film schools as it is to enter Harvard Medical School, and no wonder. Film schools are the largest source of new movie makers. Colin Higgins is the latest to join Francis Coppola, George Lucas, John Milius, Hal Barwood, Matthew Robbins and others who have graduated from filming 8mm shorts on campus to spending millions on wide-screen features.

For his master's thesis at UCLA, Higgins wrote the script of "Harold and Maude," and that would have been enough to ensure his fame. Last year's surprise smash, "Silver Streak," was written by Higgins. He is responsible for both the script and direction of this summer's release, "Foul Play," starring Goldie Hawn and Chevy Chase.

All of Higgins' films have been strong on plot, and he admits: "I like the role of story teller. I can imagine myself in another civilization telling tales around the campfire and having others say, 'What happened next?'"

"I like the big entertainment, where the audience can sit back and have a rollicking good time. I also like to play cat-and-mouse with audiences, to let them get ahead of what the actors know, and then — whammy! — show them their clues were wrong."

He does just that in "Foul Play." Goldie Hawn is in possession of a roll of film that seems to be the reason the crooks are trying to kill her. The roll seems to be the McGuffin-Alfred Hitchcock form for the crucial evidence, but it comes to a surprise ending.

The stout figure of Hitchcock is ever-present in "Foul Play," which owes its climax to the concert-hall assassination in "The Man Who Knew Too Much." Likewise, "Silver Streak" had obvious overtones of "North by Northwest."

Higgins readily confesses his debt to Hitchcock: "He wrote the book on the grammar of film, just as E.B. White wrote the grammar for writing. The only difference is that Hitchcock uses movie shots instead of words."

Colin Higgins, 37, has bushy brown hair and the handsome face of an actor, which he was in his college years. He was born on the French island of New Caledonia, where his American father worked for Pan American Airways. The boy spent the war years with his Australian mother in Sydney, and grew up in both California and Australia.

He gained his education from Stanford University, the U.S. Army, the Sorbonne, hiking through Europe and shipping to the Orient as a seaman. Finally, he landed at UCLA, working his way through film school as pool and tennis court cleaner and part-time chauffeur for producer Edward Lewis.

For his master's thesis, Higgins turned out an audacious comedy about the love match between a free-spirited woman of 80 and a suicidal young man. "Harold and Maude" not only won his degree, but a $100,000 sale to Paramount — "it sold on a weekend to Bob Evans," Higgins happily recalled.

Bud Cort and Ruth Gordon starred in the film. Hal Asby's second as director. On its first release "Harold and Maude" received almost international disdain.

"Time and Newsweek refused to review it," Higgins said. "Most reviewers wrote along the lines of 'a black comedy from a warped mind.' The only favorable reception was in Paris. Francois Truffaut recently told me it is still running there."

"Harold and Maude" would not die. It became more than a cult film; it proved a phenomenon. Now Paramount is planning a release in 300-400 theaters next February.

But the initial failure submerged Higgins' new career. After writing a TV thriller for producers Tom Miller and Eddie Milkis, Higgins left for Paris, where Jean-Louis Barrault commissioned him to convert "Harold and Maude" into a play for his wife, Madeline Renaud. The play is also still running.

When I came back to Hollywood in 1975," Higgins said, "I figured the way to get back into the movie business was to write a comedy entertainment. In the beginning I called it 'Super Chief.' Later it became 'Silver Streak.'"

"I wanted to direct, but I realized it was beyond my expertise to start on a $6 million production. I vowed that if it was successful, I would refuse to sell my next script unless I could direct. Several years ago, I had written one called 'Killing Lydia.' I rewrote about 50 percent of it and that became 'Foul Play.'"

"Fox turned it down. (Paramount chief) Barry Diller had a moment's hesitation about my direction until I said, 'I wrote it and I can see it.' That sold him."

Casino Dedicates Hughes Memorial

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The Desert Inn Hotel and Casino paid tribute to Howard Hughes with the dedication of a memorial plaque that will make the image of the late millionaire more conspicuous in the resort's lobby than he ever was when he lived on the ninth floor.

The dedication Wednesday marked the first formal tribute to Hughes' Las Vegas legacy since his death in April 1976. Hughes moved into the penthouse of the Desert Inn in late 1966 and bought the hotel in March 1967 as his first Las Vegas resort property.

New Heart Keeps Man Going

DALLAS (AP) — Lindell Hill has wrestled with death for 11 years. And while the fight has been long and exhausting, the 38-year-old Denison resident says he has the heart to battle to the final bell.

Hill became the first American to receive a second heart in South Africa when surgeons trained by South African heart specialist Dr. Christiana Barnard transplanted a second organ into Hill's chest a year ago this month.

"I'm feeling better now than I've felt in the last 11 years," Hill said in a telephone interview from his home in Denison. "I walk three to six miles a day. Last year I could barely walk from my chair to the bathroom."

Prior to the seven-hour "piggyback" transplant procedure last Aug. 5, doctors gave Hill just six months to live.

"Now doctors tell me I could live for five or 10 more years," Hill said.

The surgery promised a new lease on life, but two minor rejections undermined the fragile terms of that new contract.

Rejection is the body's process, employing its immunological system, to repel foreign tissue.

Hill spent 17 days last winter and three weeks this summer in a hospital while doctors pumped high concentrations of anti-rejection drugs into his body. Because the drugs reduce the body's resistance to disease, Hill was forced to spend the time in semi-isolation.

"It's very depressing," Hill said. "Before the transplant, when they told me how much time I had left, I could be cold and calculating. I could accept it and deal with it. Now I get a little more scared when something goes wrong."

While fighting for his life, Hill lost the ability to make a living.

He has been unable to work since his first major coronary 11 years ago. Barnard's team performed the surgery at no charge. But Hill, his wife Lily and their three children still face the high cost of medication and continued treatment. Because the procedure is experimental, health insurance will not foot the bill.

"Financial problems are very great. They're bearing down," Hill said. "I spent three days in the hospital this month because of nerves. I just shook so bad I couldn't hold a cup of coffee."

Despite the pressures and the heartache, Hill's outlook remains bright.

"I've got a whole new life," he said. "I've learned what the quality of life is. And I wouldn't trade this past year for anything."

Alan Bates Stays On Top As Hardy's Mayor

"THE MAYOR OF CASTERBRIDGE" — Alan Bates, right, plays the "Mayor of Casterbridge," and Anne Stallybrass, the woman he marries, on Masterpiece Theatre, a Public Broadcast Service seven-part dramatization of the Thomas Hardy novel. Bates starred as another Hardy character in the 1967 movie version of "Far From the Madding Crowd." (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sozzled laborer auctions off his wife and baby daughter at a county fair. Eighteen years later, he's the rich, feared mayor of an English town — until the selcees come calling.

"It's one of the best stories I ever read and one of the best parts I ever had," says Alan Bates, the British actor who won Jill Clayburgh's heart in the recent film "An Unmarried Woman."

In the family-sale matter, Bates was referring to his role as the laborer-turned-mayor in a seven-part TV version of Thomas Hardy's "The Mayor of Casterbridge."

The show, a co-production of Time-Life Television and the BBC, will start Sunday, Sept. 3, as the lead-off piece in the new season of public TV's "Masterpiece Theater" series.

It's not Bates' first job as a Hardy character. In 1967, he starred in the movie version of the writer's "Far From the Madding Crowd."

Bates, 44, was praised by critics for that, also for "The Fixer," "Georgy Girl," "Women In Love" and his stage work in such plays as "Butley" and John Osborne's "Look Back In Anger."

It's happening again because of "Unmarried Woman," even though he, as a pxy-humor painter romancing a freshly divorced lady in New York, isn't seen in the film until it's half over.

Yet Bates seems unaccustomed to all the goodies of success. When interviewed in the luxurious, fern-bedecked dining room of the Bel Air Hotel here, he cased the joint in the marvelling manner of a visiting the Garden of Eden for the first time.

A short, gentle man with a soft voice, he hails from Derbyshire, 200 miles north of London. His father was a cellist, his mother a pianist, he said. He decided to be an actor at age 11.

"Don't know why," he said. "I'd always been almost paranoid about not wanting to stand out, of avoiding any kind of spotlight at all. But one day I just thought, 'I want to be an actor.'"

So instead of being far from the madding crowd, "Yes, I joined it," he said, his eyes twinkling.

At 17, he enrolled in London's prestigious Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts, or "RADA," as he calls it, served two years in the Royal Air Force, then returned to the academy and graduated at 22.

His roots still are in the London theater, and so are those of most rookie English actors, he said, "though television has gotten a lot of actors early in their careers now."

"Because you become pretty well known, make more money. But it's kind of like going into repertory, in a way. I did 10 television plays in a row and for me, it was like rep."

"Some were good, some not. You did them quickly, you did them live with huge audiences. It was terrific," he grinned. "You got slightly better pay, too."

It's generally agreed among actors that their careers tend to resemble a roller-coaster ride — ups and downs and, with luck, ascents again.

Bates agrees the ride is pretty good now, what with "Unmarried Woman," the "Mayor" miniseries on PBS, and a just-finished new film, "The Rose," in which he co-stars with singer Bette Midler.

"Yes, when it gets good, it gets frightening, oh, hang on," he laughed. "It does, yes, it does. But some of it's by choice. I mean, I do things because I like them."

"So when they take off like that, it suddenly gives you a slight shock because you can't anticipate those things. I've done three, four shows I thought would be a success, good for me."

"But in every single instance, they've crashed, gone straight down on me. So the things you really like, the things you take a gamble on, are the things that work."

Inquiries were made as to how Bates keeps success, fame and all that in perspective, knowing that failure, no fame and worst, no work, are part of the actor's life, too.

"I think it's because I've never really made the absolute pitch for that type of fame," he mused after a moment of thought. He had no reference to being what fan magazines call a superstar.

"I'm more drawn to the theater than I am the movies, anyway," he said. "It just doesn't have the pressure of that almost insane world we have here. It just doesn't."

He was preparing to return to London, his wife, Victoria, and their twin sons, when interviewed. Unlike some of his famed countrymen, he has no plans to relocate in Hollywood.

Oddly, Bates says that until "The Rose," he'd never even worked in Tinseltown. He finds the place mighty seductive in climate, but fraught with hazards in matters of reality.

He neatly summed up Hollywood this way: "You just go up into the clouds and it's hard to see the floor. And I don't think that's true anywhere else, not even in New York."

Groups Contribute More To '78 Races

DENVER (AP) — Special-interest groups already have contributed $7 million more to this year's U.S. House and Senate races than in all of the 1976 campaigns, says the chairman of the Federal Election Commission.

Joan Aikens said here Wednesday that the 1,700 labor, business and professional political-action groups who must file reports with the commission have contributed $39 million so far toward the 1978 election campaigns. By contrast, interest-group contributions to House and Senate campaigns for all of 1976 totaled $32 million, she said.

Annual rainfall drops more than 4 million tons of sodium chloride, 2.5 million tons of sodium sulphate and 36 million tons of calcium compounds on the United States.

Publisher Buys Novelization

The paperback book rights to "The Champ" have been sold by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to Dell Publishing Co. for $236,500 — the highest price ever for a novelization in the studio's history.

To be published next spring as a Dell mass market paperback, "The Champ" novel is presently being written by Richard Woodley.

The announcement was made jointly today (11) by Mark Canton, MGM Executive in Charge of Creative Affairs, and William Grose, Editor in Chief of Dell Books.

"The Champ," a modernized version of the 1931 screen classic that brought Wallace Beery an Academy Award and earned stardom for Jackie Cooper, is currently being brought to the screen by Franco Zeffirelli as his first American film with a cast headed by Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway, Ricky Schroder, Arthur Hill, Strother Martin, Joan Blondell, Jack Warden and Sam Levene and with Elyson Lovell producing. The new screenplay is by Spencer Eastman and Walter Newman.

Pop Singer Seeking To Revive Career

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The rock 'n' roll career of Tommy Roe was certainly one of the minor miracles of the 1960s. He was silly in a time of seriousness, superficial in a decade dedicated to Deep Thought.

It was a time when guru Bob Dylan stirred fires in the breast of America's Army-jacketed, sober-minded youth with morally uplifting songs of alienation and oppression. It was a time when any kid worth the patches in his jeans could quote liberally from Mao's "Little Red Book" and spent three evenings a week pensively contemplating the predicament of the modern human conscience.

Happily, it was also the heyday of social enigma Tommy Roe, the master of light-weight, bubblegum pop. Remember "Hooray for Hazel," "Sheila," "Dizzy"? And of course, the memorable "Sweet Pea."

"Oh, Sweet Pea, come on and dance with me."

"Come on, come on, come on and dance with me-ee-ee."

Roe was a manufacturer of lyrical junk food — you knew it wasn't good for you, but it was so hard to resist.

"Among all the protest songs and psychedelic rock, I made hit records," says Roe, now 36 and more than a little proud of the island of fun he carved out of that somber decade. "What I did was the exact opposite of what was going on in the '60s. With hippies, everyone dropping out and all that."

Roe was a hit machine. Turn him on and he'd churn out a string of three-minute-long, refreshingly mindless, bubblegum hits. He was the inventor of formula pop.

"I used to get really upset when they said the songs I made were bubblegum," he recalls. "But I realized I had a knack for writing three-minute formula songs. I admit that. It was like selling a bar of soap. I wrote for the market."

"That was my business. I made a lot of money doing that."

In 1972, Roe had one of his biggest successes with "Jam Up and Jelly Tight."

TOMMY ROE

Then the hit machine began to sputter.

"I was getting fed up," he recalled. "I just didn't want to be in show business any more. I had accomplished a lot, and it seemed that I had nowhere else to go. I was working Las Vegas — you know, the stereotypical thing, with the tux, patent leather shoes and all that — I'd just had it."

He awoke one morning and discovered he had turned into Wayne Newton. He packed his bags and went home to Georgia.

"I didn't work for four years," he says. "I was making good money writing and running my publishing firm."

It was all nice and comfortable ... and boring. Predictably, it wasn't long before Roe was struck by that urge that eventually hits all retired performers.

"I wanted to perform again."

Last year he assembled a band and began working any club that would have him.

"I found it very difficult to start working again," he says. "In this business, you're forgotten overnight."

But Roe was lucky. He hooked up with a man named Mike Curb who made a living by resurrecting old pop careers. Curb brought Sammy Davis his first hit in years — "Candy Man." Curb was a man hell-bent on bringing his tastes in music to the rest of the world — songs like Roe's '60s hits, the Osmonds' songs and Debby Boone's "You Light Up My Life" — and he promised Roe a hit if Tommy would sign with Curb's successful Warner-Curb label.

Roe agreed, and his first single with Curb, appropriately called "Dreamin' Again," will be released this month. An album follows.

With Roe singing and Curb making the records, you can be sure Roe's comeback album won't be too great a departure from the cheerful, though not necessarily consciousness-raising, little tunes he's famous for.

"They'll all be Tommy Roe songs," he says, with a laugh. What made him a success in the tormented '60s, he believes, will work for him again.

"They're fun songs. People just love hearing those songs."

Committee May Alter Alaskan Park Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy Committee was poised Thursday to radically alter a House proposal for a centerpiece national park in Alaska — to the chagrin of conservationists and representatives of the Carter administration.

Under the House version of the Alaska lands legislation, some 8 million acres of wilderness would be set aside as the Gates of the Arctic National Park, a preservation area embracing predominant peaks on either side of a valley leading to the North Slope beyond the Brooks Range.

While Energy Committee members put off settling the issue until next week, no one was pushing the House approach.

Instead, panel members were considering ways to accommodate potential mining interests at the southern edge of the proposed park as well as sports hunting within the House boundaries.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., the committee chairman, offered a plan that would retain the approximate House acreage while removing legal obstacles to hunting and development.

The peaks would be grouped into two national park units, flanking a 2.7-million-acre preserve run by the park service but open to hunters. A national recreation area would be established along the southern edge to allow mining development.

"It's curtains for the park," said Jack Hession, a representative of the Alaska Coalition of Conservation Groups.

"It's one of the great wilderness parks," said a source in the Interior Department. "Gates is symbolically important to our morale, which is down."

Conservationists see Gates of the Arctic as the first major test in the committee's work on the legislation to set aside some 100 million acres of federal land in Alaska as parks, preserves, refuges and wild river corridors.

Pushing hardest for changes in the House proposal were Sens. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and John Melcher, D-Mont.

Melcher seeks to assure a transportation corridor across the southern portion of the park in the event several mining claims are developed.

Stevens advocates a much larger national recreation area. Conservation groups regard the national recreation area as one of the lowest forms of federal land protection. Stevens sees the classification as a flexible approach to allow development as well as Alaskan use in the park area.

In a Wednesday night session, the committee approved a Selawick Wildlife Refuge of 1.8 million acres, approximately half the size approved by the House.

Also, a Kobuk National Park of 200,000 acres was approved, compared with a House boundary including 1.6 million acres. The bulk of the House's Kobuk area was designated as a park service preserve, and left open to hunting.

Another 500,000 acres was dropped from the Noatak National Preserve approved by the House, leaving a preserve under park service supervision of 5.5 million acres of wilderness.

Prestige Car Plan Pledged By Sadat

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat, who leads his own political party, is on the campaign trail saying he will take all prestige cars from government service and sell them to their drivers.

In a speech to public transport workers in the city of Alexandria, Sadat said American Chevrolets and German Mercedes would be sold to the drivers under installment payment plans through trade unions.

The land dropped from the Selawick and Noatak units was grouped into a classification known as a Bureau of Land Management Conservation Area, where mining would be allowed. Included in this area were the Squirrel River, Agashashak and lower Noatak river drainages.

All the committee's decisions were made by voice vote.

Fabled Arctic Passage Eludes Sea Adventurer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tristan Jones, a quiet, unimposing sort who enjoys his pipe and a tale or two, mentions matter-of-factly that a whale sank his boat off the Azores and cast him adrift in the sea 'til the Portuguese navy plucked him out seven days later.

Oh, but he had collided with a whale off the coast of Peru, too, he says.

Such modesty is understandable; these are small events in the life of a man who's been trapped in an Arctic ice pack for 366 days — alone in a 36-foot ketch, except for a three-legged Labrador retriever.

on course to Iceland after planting his own poked-out eyeball back in its socket, then fought off an angry polar bear with a harpoon and flare gun, is likely to shrug away just about any event within the human imagination.

Jones, born at sea 54 years ago, writes of his unsuccessful effort to conquer the dream of European explorers and sail across the Arctic Ocean in "Ice!," published this summer by Sheed Andrews and McMeel.

"It's not just an adventure story," the author says of his solo exploration. "I believe in self-reliance; that's my whole message."

Dressed in a double-breasted navy blazer and faded blue jeans with rolled up cuffs, the black-bearded Jones looks every bit the sea captain. He even keeps a sailor's knife, specially equipped with a spike for splicing ropes, tied to his belt with a green cord.

"It's not a question of me being a hermit or anti-social or anything like that," he says of that two-year voyage. "Being alone is a matter of logistics — I couldn't afford (financially) to have anyone with me. If you are only responsible for yourself, you have half the anxiety."

"Ice!" describes the Blasket Islands, Greenland and the hazards of the seas in a colorful, Welsh diction touched with humor and steeped in history. But the self-probing and personal philosophy a reader might expect from a man so close to danger is absent.

"In a small boat there's not much time to be introspective," Jones explains. "And it's a good thing. Introspection leads to self-pity. If you don't feel sorry for yourself, you don't get into trouble."

"Ice!," the second part of an autobiographical trilogy, was preceded by "The Incredible Voyage." Published in 1977, it recounts Jones' trip around Africa and South America, in which he sailed from the lowest water level on earth — the Dead Sea — to the highest — Lake Titicaca in the Andes. His third book, scheduled for publication next year, will describe voyages in Europe and across the Atlantic.

Jones, proud that he can finance his own explorations through his writings, plans to have another go at crossing the top of the world "because I failed the last time." The second time around, he'll approach the Arctic Ocean through the Bering Straits.

"It's very difficult to explain failure to Americans," the sailor says. "They're brought up to abhor failure. Anything apart from utter success is a complete failure."

For Jones, the "physical failure" of his first attempt is "very unimportant." It's the survival of a dream, made possible through his very own survival, that really matters, he says.

ICE SAILOR — Modern day explorer Tristan Jones poses for ice sculptor Gerry Lynas outside a New York City bookstore where he was promoting his book "Ice" recently. Soviet Authorities Eye Grain Thieves

MOSCOW (AP) — Grain thievery during harvest time in a major producing region of the Caucasian Republic has led Soviet officials to launch a crackdown on those who "try to reap what they didn't sow."

A regional newspaper, in a rare admission of official corruption, cited cases of storehouse managers dipping into supplies, workers cheating on weighing scales and others "using the fruits of the farmers' selfless work for their own selfish aims."

Opposing Extremes Initiate Dialogue

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The chief of South Africa's secret society of white Afrikaners and a leading black opponent of apartheid have opened what is described as the first significant such dialogue between whites and blacks in this nation.

Gerrit Viljoen, rector of the Rand Afrikaans University and the leader of the Broederbond — the Afrikaans-language word for "brotherhood" — met for four hours here with Dr. Ntsho Motlana, the black leader confirmed Thursday.

Motlana, a physician, is chairman of the Committee of 10, an officially banned organization regarded as the popularly recognized leadership of Soweto, the segregated township of 1.2 million blacks on the outskirts of Johannesburg. He spent five months in jail last year for his political activities against apartheid, the South African system of racial segregation.

"It was a corial and frank discussion and, I think, the first of its kind," Motlana told a reporter. "It covered a wide range of topics. There was agreement and also some major differences of opinion."

"We agreed to release a general kind of statement next week in which no remarks will be attributed to individuals. That's really all I can say at this time."

Viljoen was out of town and unavailable for comment. Precisely where and when the meeting took place was not known.

The shadowy brotherhood numbers among its members the elite of white Afrikaners, descendants of South Africa's 17th-century Dutch settlers. The generally conservative Afrikaners make up the majority of whites and have a strong hold over the political structure.

Viljoen has publicly called for a softening of some of the harsher aspects of apartheid, saying whites must consult with blacks, instead of dictating to them, if future racial turmoil is to be prevented here.

"We must learn from our past mistakes and build on the present system to cancel them out," Viljoen said in a recent newspaper interview.

Motlana has publicly called for a one-man, one-vote policy for blacks and whites.

South Africa's 4.4 million whites have assigned the country's 19 million blacks to separate, semi-autonomous tribal trust areas comprising about 13 percent of South Africa's area. Blacks are not allowed to vote in national elections because the government says they are citizens of their separate Bantustans, or trust territories.

The Viljoen-Motlana meeting was arranged by Willem de Klerk, editor of the Afrikaans newspaper Die Transvaler, and regarded as one of the nation's most liberal Afrikaner journalists. Afrikaans is the Afrikaners' Dutch-derived language.

The Transvaler and the English-language Rand Daily Mail splashed stories of the meeting on their front pages Thursday. Editors of both papers sat in on the session and took notes and both papers said would carry detailed reports of the meeting beginning Monday.

South Africa's ruling white National Party is currently split into two main factions, the "Verligtes," or enlightened, and the "Verkrampes," or conservatives.

Government officials said again this week they plan no changes in the apartheid policy.

Connie Mulder, minister of plural relations, the term used by the government to describe separatism, reaffirmed that blacks are not regarded as South African citizens.

And J.T. Kruger, the justice minister, told a National Party security conference on Wednesday that the police are closely watching black movements which he said were regrouping after being banned last year.

"When I banned them, I knew these organizations would not fade away," Kruger said. "They are always there, busy reorganizing and moving forward. Let me tell them directly: We are also there, busy seeing that our country and people are safe."

Trial Requests Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Thursday refused to dismiss indictments against three former FBI officials accused of authorizing break-ins against the left-wing Weatherman underground during the early 1970s.

Judge William B. Bryant issued a 15-page order in which he also refused a request by the defendants that they not be tried together.

The defendants are former Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and two of his top assistants when he headed the FBI from mid-1972 to mid-1973, Edward S. Miller and W. Mark Felt.

Bryant noted that Gray sought to be tried separately because Miller and Felt are expected to contend at the trial that they were only acting on orders from Gray.

"To the extent that conflict of defenses exists in this case it does not appear to be of such a nature that it will lead the jury to believe that all defendants are guilty," the judge said. Bryant explained that separate trials are called for only when the conflict between defendants is such that there is a danger the jury will unjustifiably infer that the conflict alone demonstrates the defendants are guilty.

Bryant granted some of the motions by the defendants, directing the government to produce confidential documents that the defense says will show they were only acting on orders from either former President Richard M. Nixon or former Attorney General John N. Mitchell.

The defendants sought dismissal of the charges on grounds of prejudicial pretrial publicity.
