Nicaraguan Uprisings Increase

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Gunfire crackled in the streets of Nicaraguan cities outside the capital Wednesday as foes of Anastasio Somoza clashed with soldiers. A general strike aimed at toppling the beleaguered president picked up support.

In Managua, which was generally quiet, a mob of 2,000 took over the offices of Nicaragua's largest bank.

In Matagalpa, a city of 40,000 people 100 miles north of here, the Red Cross was counting the dead and wounded from Tuesday's two-hour raid by the Nicaraguan air force. Four were known dead.

"There must be more dead, but we're not sure. There are hundreds of injured," said a Red Cross official.

Uprisings Reported
Armed insurrection also was reported in the cities of Esteli, Jinotepé and Diriamba.

Norman Wolfson, a New York-based public relations man representing Somoza, said the purpose of the air strikes was to strafe snipers who were in the hills out of reach of troops. He denied the city had been bombed and quoted military officials as saying the snipers were terrorizing the citizenry.

"I think they knocked off the snipers. The town was considered secure by the guard last night," Wolfson said.

The Red Cross said at least 24 people have died in fighting since anti-Somoza violence began after guerrillas took over the capital building Aug. 22 and seized 1,500 hostages. The guerrillas and nearly 60 political prisoners were given safe passage out of the country as ransom.

Under Siege
The military garrison in Matagalpa has been under siege for three days with the civilian population in virtual control of the streets.

The Red Cross source said it was impossible to determine the exact number of casualties because many victims were taken home by friends and relatives who feared the national guard, Nicaragua's 7,500-man army and police force, would raid the hospitals.

He said the town was blocked out by a power failure and an appeal had been sent to Managua for blood and plasma.

Opposition to Somoza's authoritarian administration has brought left-wing guerrillas and conservative businessmen into an unlikely alliance to try to oust him.

Somoza Accused
The guerrillas say Somoza, a multi-millionaire, has plundered the nation for its wealth, encouraged corruption and is responsible for massive human rights violations.

The businessmen fear the longer Somoza stays in power, the more people will look to the Sandinista guerrillas, who took their name from a man who fought the U.S. Marine occupation in the 1930s and who advocate a Marxist society.

In Managua, a mob composed mostly of bank employees took over the offices of Banica, Nicaragua's largest bank. Carlos Alvarado, a bank employee, said the bank's officers threatened reprisals if

President Reluctant On Move

WASHINGTON — President Carter returned from vacation Wednesday to fight for passage of the natural gas compromise and to host a Middle East peace summit that has raised a controversial new issue.

Leaving Idaho Falls, Idaho, for Washington, where he arrived Wednesday afternoon, Carter commented briefly on news reports he might offer to station U.S. troops in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip as a means of inciting Israel to withdraw from those areas.

"I'd be reluctant to do that but I'll have to wait and see," he told reporters at the Idaho Falls airport.

Hypothetical Option
The president declined to elaborate, but press secretary Jody Powell said the concept of an American peacekeeping force has been floating around for years as a hypothetical option.

"This has got to be viewed as something that might supplement an Israeli-Egyptian agreement," Powell said. "...but it is far too early to be talking about what form something like this might take."

Carter and his family left a rustic lodge in Grand Teton National Park, Wyo., and flew by helicopter to Idaho Falls, where they boarded Air Force One for the trip back to Washington.

The president shaved two days off his two-week vacation to return to Washington to lead the administration's fight for the delicate natural gas compromise legislation that faces serious trouble in Congress.

Meetings Set Today
He scheduled strategy sessions with key aides at the White House today as well as a meeting with a group of governors to discuss the energy bottleneck.

The compromise natural gas legislation became threatened when a coalition of Democrats and Republicans withdrew support. Carter has said a vote is expected soon after Sept. 11.

The measure would lift federal price controls from newly found natural gas by 1983.

It is opposed by some liberals who contend it would drive up gas bills and by conservatives from natural gas producing states who want immediate deregulation.

Carter also will use the time to prepare for the Mideast summit at Camp David, Md., that begins Tuesday with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Powell said the president would hold a

Fair Skies Due Over Area Today

THE BUILDUP of a surface high pressure system over the area today will leave skies cloudless for the first time in several days.

As the system builds, low-level moisture that could be used in cloud formation will be reduced, according to the National Weather Service.

Fair skies will prevail through Friday as temperatures continue to warm. This afternoon's high should reach the low 80s. Friday's afternoon high will be in the high 80s. Tonight's low will be about 65 degrees.

Southeasterly winds 10 to 15 miles per hour will fan the area.

Widely scattered showers dotted the South Plains early Wednesday afternoon, but no measurable precipitation was reported.

By 8 p.m., all storm activity had dissipated, reported the weather service. Flash flood watches were in effect Wednesday from southeastern Illinois and southern Indiana into central and eastern Kentucky.

A tornado watch was in effect Wednesday night for much of the eastern halves of Tennessee and Kentucky. A tornado plowed through a business district in Memphis, Tenn., Tuesday night, causing several injuries and considerable damage to buildings.

Four buildings were gutted and two others were heavily damaged.

"Today's fire was graphic evidence of the need for them to return to work," said City Attorney Marvin Clinin, who said the fire was "the straw that broke the camel's back and triggered this (court) action."

Leaders of the firefighters union were unavailable for comment. Danny Lever, one of the probationary firemen who answered the alarm, said, "I'm not surprised that they're not here. Why should they be? They told 'em they wouldn't respond to fire calls."

Ballinger said he was disappointed, but

City School Enrollment Down By 1,200 Students

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff
PUBLIC-SCHOOL enrollment picked up Wednesday, but it's still down by about 1,200 students. School officials said they will begin next week to investigate the no-shows.

Attendance by students involved in court-ordered busing was "relatively strong," Superintendent Ed Irons said. He was at a loss to explain why the Lubbock Independent School District's overall enrollment was so low.

"Although a small percentage (of no-shows) might be accredited to segregation over the desegregation plan, desegregation does not seem to be a significant factor," Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said.

Of the elementary pupils originally projected to be reassigned under the plan, 85 percent of the whites and 88 percent of the minorities actually made the switch to their "sister schools," Leslie said.

"To me, these figures are encouraging.

Davis' Defense Sees Wife Role In Case

FORT WORTH (AP) — A defense lawyer Wednesday attempted to forge a sinister link between Cullen Davis' estranged wife and two men who aided an investigation that led to the millionaire's arrest on a solicitation of capital murder charge.

Pat Burleson was the second defense witness called by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes during a weeklong bond hearing that has seen more sensational evidence than many trials.

The bulk of Burleson's testimony concerned meetings he had with FBI agents; David McCrory, a former business associate of Burleson and Davis' chief accuser; and Priscilla Davis.

Traces Meetings
Haynes carefully traced the sequence of meetings during the week before Davis' Aug. 20 arrest, but never asked the witness about the purpose or the nature of those meetings.

According to Burleson, he put McCrory in touch with the FBI after McCrory claimed Davis approached him to have several persons killed. McCrory has testified Davis had a "hit list" that included the names of Mrs. Davis; Judge Joe Eidson, the presiding magistrate in his divorce case; and witnesses at his 1977 capital murder trial.

Burleson said he called the FBI Aug. 17, the Thursday prior to Davis' arrest in connection with the purported plot against the judge. Later that day, he visited Priscilla Davis at the lush $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth, and then met with McCrory.

Visited Mrs. Davis
Burleson said he also talked with McCrory and visited Mrs. Davis again Friday.

But the witness claimed he did not tell Mrs. Davis of his meetings with the FBI or McCrory and maintains McCrory was unaware of his visits to the Davis mansion.

A defense attorney said outside the courtroom that the testimony as developed by the defense Wednesday indicates a "means by which three people could be communicating through one person...sometimes known as carrying water or messages."

The defense contends there was a "very close relationship" between Burleson and Priscilla Davis.

Burleson testified he was a close personal friend of Mrs. Davis and had known her for about eight years, though he maintained he never spent the night at the Davis mansion.

He said he visited Mrs. Davis a half dozen times while she was hospitalized after a shooting at the mansion in 1976. Davis was charged and cleared of one count of capital murder but still faces other charges in connection with the episode.

Burleson also testified he had loaned money to Mrs. Davis and that she had paid him back in cash, checks and gifts.

After several defense mentions of Burleson's financial records, prosecutors demanded to see the subpoenaed materials.

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson was given a portion of those records at the end of the session, and defense attorneys were also ordered to bring additional materials this morning.

Haynes' questions and Burleson's testimony at times became tedious, with Haynes suspending a line of questioning just at the point when it appeared to be headed for a conclusion. But the testimony "potentially" could have laid the groundwork for bringing Mrs. Davis into the case as a witness.

"We think that the financial activities

HAYWARD, Calif. (UPI) — Speedcall Corp., which pays its workers a $7 weekly bonus if they don't smoke on the job, reported Wednesday that 20 out of 24 former smokers have quit smoking on the job. The program began two years ago.

Striking Firemen Watch Blaze

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — Striking firefighters stood and watched Wednesday as fire engulfed a block-long section of a downtown area of this central Indiana city of 71,000.

"I hate to see this happening," said one fireman who refused to be identified.

"We're not too proud of ourselves."

Another fireman, who also declined to be named, said: "This is the worst thing to happen during my career. It's horrible. About the only thing I can keep down is Roloids. My stomach is just tied up in knots over this thing."

Fire Chief Ed Ballinger, who responded to the alarm with eight probationary firefighters, said the union ignored his

I think the community is accepting desegregation very well," he said.

Leslie said there may have been a "small amount" of flight to escape busing. But he feels the biggest part of the difference between projected and actual integration reassignments can be reconciled in other ways.

One possibility — which also applies to the overall enrollment decline — is that many families simply are late in registering their children for school this year.

"Traditionally, some parents do not put their children in school until after Labor Day," Leslie said. For that reason, he added, "we won't take our enrollment data too seriously" until next week.

Checks On Students Slated

Beginning Tuesday, when classes resume after an extended holiday weekend, each school will be responsible for checking up on known students who have not reported, Leslie said.

"We will follow up on every student who was in the public schools last year but has not registered, or had his records sent to another school, for the coming year," he said.

The initial low enrollment for the 1978-79 term cannot be blamed on dissatisfaction over the integration plan, because the vast majority of no-shows occurred among students unaffected by the plan, Leslie said.

On Tuesday, the start of the new term, the district had 28,573 pupils. (This is higher than the previously reported figure because accounting methods were changed to jibe with past years. Notably, half-day kindergarten students no longer are counted as fractions.)

In contrast, there were about 1,520 more students enrolled on the first day of the 1977-78 school year.

Gain Students Second Day
On Wednesday, the school system picked up 871 additional youngsters, for a second-day enrollment of 29,444. The new total is 1,480 students below the second-day figure of last year.

Last year's peak enrollment was 31,758. The district this year had been projecting a peak of 31,485, a 273-student decrease.

Even when accounting for the expected drop, Wednesday's enrollment was about 1,200 pupils short.

Kindergarten enrollment was down 181 youngsters from last year; elementary enrollment, down 826; and secondary enrollment, down 1,000.

New Orleans Teachers Go On Strike

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Teachers demanding higher pay went on strike Wednesday, disrupting the opening day of school for the city's 91,000 pupils.

"No dough, no work," teachers shouted at a meeting called by Nat LaCour, head of the United Teachers of New Orleans, to take an official strike vote.

"The system is opening and functioning well," said Superintendent Gene Giesert.

A spot check of the city's 140 public schools showed the situation varied. Some schools were near normal; others presented scenes of confusion as limited staffs struggled to achieve order.

Another labor dispute, meanwhile, affected students in Knox County, Tenn. A strike by school bus owner-operators seeking more money forced 25,000 pupils to find alternate means of transportation. The city of Knoxville, where schools open next week, was unaffected by the drivers' action, but faced its own labor troubles with police and firemen who have been staging slowdowns.

In New Orleans, nightlong negotiations broke off at 5 a.m. About 3,000 union members then gathered for a strike vote, but the actual decision to strike did not come until after classes had convened.

"I think tomorrow morning will tell the story," said Principal Vertle Robinson, whose elementary school was near normal, with most of the youngsters and all but one of 32 union teachers on hand.

At Walker High, Principal Bob Gaut said only 47 of his 100 teachers showed up, but he expected more of them today.

"I think a lot of them stayed out because, on this first day, they felt they had to say something," he said.

The union claims as members 3,400 of the city's 4,200 teachers, and 750 of 1,000 teacher aides.

LaCour said the union demanded an 8 percent raise and improvements in hospitalization and retirement benefits.

JURY CHOSEN

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A jury of seven men and five women was chosen Wednesday to hear the assault trial of Black Panther leader Huey Newton, accused of pistol-whipping his tailor four years ago. Three alternate jurors were to be chosen today and opening arguments will begin afterward.

The strikers, members of Firefighters Local 1262, met to decide their response to the temporary restraining order, which also directed the city to hold around-the-clock negotiations.

The contract talks resumed Wednesday afternoon.

Volunteer units which battled the Wednesday blaze were delayed while striking firefighters waited for approval from union leaders to let the out-of-town companies through picket lines at the edge of the city.

The fire broke out about two hours before dawn. Ballinger said damage would run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, but he had no specific figures.

Their refusal to help fight the fire on Wednesday led city officials to seek — and obtain — a court order against the four-day strike which centers on a pay dispute.

Arctic Explorer Looks To New Pole To Conquer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Still showing the effects of frostbite and windburn, the first man to make a solo overland trip to the North Pole says the latest adventure is over and he must find a new one, perhaps conquering the South Pole.

"I have to undertake something new, something challenging to satisfy myself," Naomi Uemura said Wednesday. "It's the personal challenge that makes me do these things."

The Japanese adventurer, wearing a gray business suit and blue tie at a news briefing, still looked like an explorer out of the wilds with his scarred face, orange socks and brown hiking boots.

Uemura, a youthful-looking man of 37, last week completed another "first" to finish his Arctic adventure — the solo, overland north-south crossing of Greenland.

The explorer, retelling tales of polar bear attacks, blizzards, sled dogs and loneliness, presented his navigation aids, charts and notes to the Smithsonian Institution, one of his supporters.

Uemura's adventure began March 5

when he left Ellesmere Island in the Canadian Arctic on a 57-day, 500-mile trek to the North Pole. He later was flown to the northern tip of Greenland and on May 12 began a 1,800-mile trek which ended Aug. 24 at Narsarsuaq.

During both stages of the trip, Uemura's progress was tracked by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Nimbus-6 satellite, which received signals from a 10-pound beacon on the dog sled. The device also kept track of time, temperature and barometric pressure along the way.

Uemura, who called himself more a journalist than a scientist, said he collected air, water and samples of 70 different kinds of snow and hoped it would make a contribution to science.

Speaking through an interpreter, Uemura said he feared for his life on two occasions. In one of several encounters with polar bears, a bear ripped his tent in 30 places and nudged him in his sleeping bag several times before leaving. He discovered his rifle wasn't loaded.

The second most fearful situation was at the North Pole during a storm. Uemura found himself on a chunk of ice swirling around in the water amidst thrusting ice floes.

Being alone except for the company of his dogs allowed him to reflect upon himself, Uemura said. "As a result, the trips are very satisfying to me."

To prepare for the trip, Uemura lived for a year in a Greenland Eskimo community. There he learned how to handle sled dogs and how to survive in the inhospitable Arctic.

To test what he had learned, Uemura last year drove a dog team alone on a 7,000-mile trek over a less difficult course from Greenland to Alaska.

Uemura's chilling Arctic experiences are the latest in his series of adventures, which included sailing a raft alone 3,728 miles down the Amazon River in 1968.

Postal Talks Set To Reopen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service and three unions embark Friday on a 15-day negotiating path that bargainers hope will lead to a new contract settlement and spare the nation a mail strike.

Under the bargaining arrangement, the two sides have until Sept. 16 to either reach agreement on their own terms or have their dispute settled by an arbitrator, whose decision will be final.

Government sources disclosed Wednesday that the first session between the Postal Service and its unions would begin at 10 a.m. EDT Friday.

The two sides agreed to that arrangement Monday, just hours before the start of a threatened nationwide postal strike.

The two largest postal unions, representing nearly 500,000 workers, had vowed to stage a walkout if the Postal Service stuck to its refusal to renegotiate the proposed contract rejected last week by the rank-and-file.

A key objection to the contract was the wage package, which provides raises of up to 6.5 percent a year through 1981. Many local union leaders complained that the wage boost was too small in light of the inflation rate, which has been running above 10 percent a year.

Local leaders also said the wage settlement appeared paltry compared to raises of more than 10 percent a year that workers had won in the coal and rail industries.

The bargaining procedure postponed a strike — which is barred by federal law — for at least the 15-day period. But a walkout could occur after Sept. 16 if the unions are dissatisfied with the new package that emerges from the session.

Chief federal mediator Wayne L. Horvitz, who had proposed the arrangement, met Wednesday with leaders of the three postal unions to discuss the ground rules. Too oversee the process, Horvitz has named veteran labor mediation expert James J. Healy from Harvard University, who will try to guide the two sides toward a new settlement. If Healy decides the bargainers cannot resolve their differences, he must settle the dispute for them by the Sept. 16 deadline.

A negotiated settlement would have to be resubmitted to members for ratification, while a settlement by arbitration would take immediate effect, although it could prompt labor strife if the unions are unhappy with the final terms.

Horvitz proposed the negotiation-arbitration process as a compromise between the unions' demand for a return to the bargaining table and the Postal Service's insistence that the dispute instead be settled through binding arbitration. Federal law calls for arbitration in such cases.

Kenyatta's Interment Due Today

NAIROBI (AP) — The body of the late President Jomo Kenyatta, his coffin draped with the Kenyan flag and carried in an open jeep, was taken to his private home in nearby Gatundu Wednesday, a day before interment in a glass-walled mausoleum on grounds of Parliament here.

The body, viewed by a half-million persons over the past week at the official presidential residence in Nairobi, was to remain Wednesday night in his private home, not far from where he was born more than 80 years ago.

Kenyatta, who led Kenya to independence from Britain in 1963, was a member of the Kikuyu tribe, which observes the tradition that the body of a dead person rest at home the night before burial.

Thousands of silent Kenyans lined the streets of the capital to watch the slow motorcade procession that included his wife, Mama Ngina, other members of his family and acting President Daniel Arap Moi.

Outside Nairobi, thousands of weeping Kenyans lined the highway, and in Gatundu a throng of Kikuyu tribe members turned out, chanting a lament for the dead leader.

The motorcade was guarded by armed, red-uniformed soldiers. A security helicopter hovered overhead.

Early today, Kenyatta's body will be returned here for a state funeral that will be attended by five heads of state and representatives from at least 82 nations.

The American delegation includes Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, President Carter's son Jeffrey and Jeffrey's wife, Annette, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and Coretta King, wife of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King.

Kenyatta died Aug. 22 in the coastal resort city of Mombasa. He never knew his real age, but was believed to be in his mid-80s.

Moi is said to be Kenyatta's likely successor. Kenya law calls for a decision on a new president within the next 82 days.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Transportation said Wednesday it found serious safety violations in more than half of the 711 trucks it checked during unannounced inspections on a Pennsylvania highway during the first two weeks of August.

Hijacker, Other East Germans Seek Asylum

BERLIN (AP) — An armed man accompanied by a woman and child hijacked a Polish jetliner Wednesday to a U.S. air base in West Berlin and asked for asylum. American military officials said seven others among the 63 passengers, apparently taking advantage of the incident, also sought asylum in the West.

The seven were all East Germans, the officials said. They said the hijacker was believed to be East German and sources said the woman was Polish. The nationality of the child, a small girl, was not known.

The gunman and his companions were being held by authorities, who said they were considering lodging a hijacking charge against him.

The Polish state news agency PAP identified the hijacker only as "a foreign tourist, Detlef Aleksander Tiade."

There was no information that the others who defected were involved in the hijacking. "I have no idea of any connection," said Gary Smith, an information officer at the U.S. diplomatic mission in West Berlin.

The East German news agency ADN said American and West Berlin officials detained East German passengers with no official explanation. It protested that the Western nations that control West Berlin "made no declaration that the air pirate will be extradited even though the three Western powers signed an agreement in recent months to energetically combat airplane hijacking."

But Smith said, "The whole question of charges and jurisdiction is still under consideration."

Besides the 63 passengers, a crew of eight was aboard the LOT twin-engine Tu-137 when it landed at West Berlin's Tempelhof field. It was detoured from an East Berlin landing on a flight from Warsaw and Gdansk, Poland.

Tempelhof, once the city's central airport, is the property of the United States, which with Britain and France still controls West Berlin. Soviet troops occupy East Berlin.

U.S. information officer Lt. Col. Gerald R. Roys said the hijacker threatened the pilot with a pistol to force the plane down in West Berlin, then surrendered peacefully as soon as the plane landed.

Six hours later, it took off to complete the short flight to East Berlin's Schoenefeld Airport, carrying 18 passengers, mostly Poles, and its crew. An additional 34 passengers, all East Germans, de-lined to fly and instead rode back to East Berlin by bus. Authorities said one passenger, a West Berliner, had been bound for West Berlin anyway, so he remained behind as well.

Roys said East German passengers were detained and questioned without force, adding, "You've got to have the questioning if you want to make an air piracy case."

It was the second hijacking of an East-bloc airliner to West Berlin, which is 119 miles inside Communist East Germany. Two East Germans forced a Brussels-bound LOT airliner down at a French military airfield here in 1969, but none of their 70 fellow passengers sought asylum.

Poverty Scandal

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — A Hidalgo County man who has pleaded guilty to charges of stealing federal money has resigned his post as director of a local anti-poverty agency. Eliseo Sandoval, 39, had been director of the Associated City County Economic Development Corp., here since 1969, according to new director Luis Ramirez. However, Sandoval took a leave of absence without pay earlier this year as multiple investigations led to state and federal indictments against him.

Curb On Optical Payments Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Wednesday it intends to put new limits on how much it will pay for eyeglasses and hearing aids for Medicaid patients.

It did not say what the new limits would be, but suggested that money could be saved by requiring the states to buy eyeglasses and hearing aids in bulk purchases or by setting a fixed ceiling on how much the government will pay for the devices.

Federal and state governments paid $100 million for eyeglasses and hearing aids for Medicaid patients in fiscal 1977, and rules allow states to pay an area's going rate for them.

"Many times these prices are unreasonably high," said HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. in a prepared statement. "These high costs must and can be held down."

He said some states and federal agencies had saved 50 percent or more through bulk purchases and other steps.

HEW, in a formal "notice of intent to publish regulations" being published in today's Federal Register, asked for suggestions from the public over the next 45 days.

It said the state of Washington saves $96,000, or more than one-fourth of its $362,000 eyeglass bill, by buying glasses directly from the manufacturer and dispensing them through eye doctors participating in the Medicaid program.

A group purchasing plan in Michigan allows the state to get glasses for $14 each, compared with average retail prices of $35, it said.

The Veterans Administration buys hearing aids for $200 that retail for $300 to $450, and buys single-vision glasses for $11 and bifocals for $15, HEW said.

The basic cost of unfinished lenses is $2 to $3, while the wholesale price of cutting the lenses to someone's prescription is $7 or more, it added.

Under Medicaid, states must pay for eyeglasses and hearing aids for poor children, but it is optional for adults. Some 33 states provide eyeglasses for adults under Medicaid and 27 pay for hearing aids.

"However, increasing state Medicaid budgets have recently forced a few states to drop the optional services," HEW said. "Unless costs can be reduced, other states also may be forced to drop them."

The HEW announcement said studies by the department, the Federal Trade Commission, Congress and consumer groups over the past decade "all have concluded that prices are often unreasonably high, which makes it difficult for many people who need these devices to get them."

Speaker Seeks Settlement In Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Jim Wright suggested to Mideast leaders Wednesday a solution based on Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai and establishment of a demilitarized homeland for Palestinians.

The Texas Democrat included his proposal in open letters to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, who are scheduled to meet with President Carter Sept. 5 at Camp David.

"The Congress would support you if you should jointly decide to make Gaza and the Palestinian desert bloom with the fruits of peace..." Wright wrote.

"Let Israel withdraw from the Sinai and Egypt reclaim its honor. Call upon Jordan to assume the prime responsibility for peace in the Arab villages and countryside of Judea and Samaria."

"Let it be as a homeland for the Palestinians, but without an army — a demilitarized zone. And let us all commit some resources to make that experiment work."

"Let Israeli forces maintain observatories, as a guarantee of Israel's future security, on the high ground of the West Bank and on the Golan Heights. Let Israel and Egypt join in a pact of non-aggression, and invite other states in the area to do so as well."

AN EDITORIAL:

Cambodia--Cry From Grave

MORE THAN A week has passed now since Sen. George McGovern in an unusual pose drew national attention to the slaughter of millions of persons in Cambodia.
His remarks, in which he went so far as to suggest that the U.S. might consider joining an international force to restore order in the bloody, Communist-ruled nation, created headlines for a day or so.
However, the emphasis among commentators was more on the fact that McGovern, the man who opposed U.S. participation in Vietnam, would be willing to switch as well as fight.

AND THEN, for all practical purposes, there was a deadly echo.
The State Department, as might be expected, said it had had no talks involving the possibility of attempting to do something about the genocide in Cambodia, and did not anticipate any such move.
Foreign nations and their spokesmen for the most part ignored the matter.
In next-door Vietnam, a group of touring U.S. Congressmen were given the red carpet treatment by their conquerors, handed 11 more bodies of missing American servicemen and got a pitch for more cooperation—with U.S. money, naturally.

BUT THE LOUDEST silence of all came from that citadel of hypocrisy in New York City, the United Nations.

There, where U.S. Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young is quick to hold the American people up to ridicule, or to defend the "stabilizing" influence of Communism in Africa, the army of Defenders of Dignity and Human Rights lost their tongues.
The Third World spokesmen, who of all groups should have a stake in what is happening in Southeast Asia today, offered no comment.
And the head of the UN said the idea of an international peace force—even to save millions of people—was out of the question in today's political context.

IN REALITY, it is of course. But, the matter should not be allowed to die so quietly.
What is happening in Cambodia, and to a lesser degree in the making over of South Vietnam, including Saigon—now Ho Chi Minh City—is a graphic object lesson in what the Communist Thugs will do to not only physically seize control of a nation, but the minds and souls of its people. As an aside, it is indeed strange that so many "do good" Christian church organizations in the U.S. can find so much to scream about in South Africa, yet remain so quiet about violations of the body and spirit in Cambodia.
We know who the victims and perpetrators of the tragedy are. But, what of those who stand idly by and do nothing about it?

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Zbig's Newest Role

WASHINGTON—The new get-tough policy in Jimmy Carter's White House surfaced in a confidential Aug. 7 memorandum to Secretary of Defense Harold Brown demanding "complete and unequivocal support" by the joint chiefs of staff for the treaty establishing a nuclear-free zone around Latin America.

The memorandum, signed by Zbigniew Brzezinski, was the first move in a clampdown to end what one Carter aide calls "guerrilla warfare" against the President's foreign and military policies—particularly from the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) and the Commerce Department.
The Pentagon is not exempt. Public opposition to the Latin treaty by the chiefs would have brought a Brzezinski recommendation for the President to request their resignations.
This hard line with the military is viewed in the Oval Office as essential for Carter to lay down the law everywhere else. A one adviser said: "To get tough with ACDA, we have to apply the same rule to the Pentagon."

THE AUG. 7 memo to Brown shows how far the President means to go in exerting muscle on administration officials who sabotage his foreign-military policies.

Linking the treaty directly to Carter's political welfare, the President's national security adviser admonished Brown that "unless DOD (Department of Defense) and JCS (joint chiefs of staff) are aggressively supportive of ratification, the Senate may decide to put off consideration until next year."

"I don't have to tell you it would be a significant accomplishment of the President's non-proliferation and Latin American policy" if the treaty is ratified this year.

In fact the JCS had privately assented to the treaty last December. Knowing this, and perhaps to avoid confronting them with a bare-knuckle political document, Brown did not show them the memorandum.

BUT THE DIRECTIVE remains on Brown's desk for possible use in the upcoming battle over a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT).
The memo to Brown was followed by a second Brzezinski directive—ordered by Carter—to all cabinet members and their top officials.

His warning: there will be complete compliance with the President's foreign policy in all public speeches, statements and testimony to Congress.
The clear implication: shape up or ship out.
"When Carter decides and someone can't go along," one presidential aide told us, "he expects that individual to change his mind or resign. He can take his views to the country as a private citizen."

The attempt to impose iron-fisted conformity is a natural culmination of Carter's steady retreat from an "open administration."
ALTHOUGH IT smacks of Richard Nixon's effort after his 1972 reelection to centralize control of the bureaucracy in his own office, the voluminous record of anti-Carter guerrilla war waged within the administration makes it inevitable.

The most recent presidential ire was aroused by the way final approval—now secretly rescinded—was given by the Commerce Department to the sale of a drill-bit factory to the Soviet Union. That included an export license for the electronic beam welder.

When word was leaked by Commerce that the deal had its final approval, Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger complained that his department was still studying strategic implications of the sale.
Without public announcement, Carter intervened and submitted strategic questions about the electronic beam welder to the Defense Department's science advisory board for more study. White House anger was intense.

"IF COMMERCE tries to force this thing again or any other export of strategic material before we're ready, somebody is going to be fired," one Carter aide said privately.

Criticism of Paul Warnke's ACDA has been smoldering for months. It started in January when Warnke wrote a confidential letter—soon leaked—to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance opposing advanced fighter planes for Saudi Arabia and Israel.

Although Warnke's letter said he could support the sale for "political" reasons, White House aides smelled sabotage of Carter's most important Mideast initiative at the time.

Today ACDA is losing one of the hottest battles in Washington: the comprehensive test ban treaty. Carter is switching from early support of Warnke's proposed five-year, zero-yield test ban to a treaty giving the U.S. protection against Soviet cheating.

In the old days, before the new era of conformity, Warnke's ACDA would be plotting a battle of political subversion with speeches, leaks and Capitol Hill plants to soften up the President. It was easy then. Today it might be suicidal.

So They Say...

A proud father says his daughter, who is in the fourth grade, came rushing into the house the other day to report that she had been playing softball with some boys and she almost made a home run.
"Almost?" her father answered.
"Yes," said the little girl. "If they had dropped the ball one more time I would have."

JAY HARRIS:

An Image Of Sorts

DO YOU HAVE confidence in the repair man? Your dentist? The Doctor? The head of a corporation? Big Business?
Do most office holders, from City Hall to Washington, really have what's best for the nation in mind? Or are they just trying to get reelected?
Do you think Big Business makes too much profit? Would you break up the multinationals? Should the U.S. move even more toward Socialism? What does the term mean to you?
The answers to some of those questions have undergone some dramatic changes in the past decade. And not all for the best interests of the nation. Major institutions, labor, business, or for that matter the average citizen.

IN A NATION which dotes on "Being No. 1" in athletics and which has "Thought Big" in the past, neither being No. 1 nor Mr. Big necessarily is seen as a virtue by many.

Instead, the person or company which makes it to the top these days all too often is perceived as having done so by questionable means.
Recently, Seymour Martin Lipset and William Schneider, who are professors at Stanford and Harvard respectively, examined the changing attitudes of Americans toward business in particular.

Their conclusions, which also appear in the August issue of Public Opinion, published by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, offer food for thought for anyone interested in the free enterprise system.
"Evidence of collapsing confidence in American business comes readily to hand from nearly every major survey organization," the two specialists assert.

WHAT THIS portends for the future of business and the free enterprise system is the $64 question.

In 1968, a nationwide survey by Yankelovich, Skelly and White found that 70 percent of those contacted felt business tried to strike a fair balance between profits and the public's interests.

In 1970, the percentage had dropped one third. And in the past two years, it was exactly 15 percent—down 55 points in 10 years!

In a similar vein, pollster Louis Harris found that public confidence in leaders of major companies had skidded from 55 percent in 1966 to little more than 20 percent in his most recent study. In brief, if one is to take these figures at face value, only a minority of Americans now profess much faith in big business.

BUT, BEFORE jumping to the conclusion that big business or its leaders alone share "the blame," some other factors must be considered.

The truth of the matter is that for whatever reason, a large number of persons today—caught up in the rat race of trying to grab a share of "the good life" and make ends meet—perceive things as being tough all over.

Lipset and Schneider argue that business, government and labor all have suffered comparable losses in public esteem, while government and labor unions show up the worst.

The reasons, they conclude, may be traced to the "dramatic national crises such as the events of the late 1960s and the mid-1970s which pushed confidence levels in all institutions down."

In the brief span of five years, 1966 to 1971, Vietnam, racial conflict, the anti-war protests and the growth of militant social movements seemed to change for the worse the perception many Americans had of their country.

IT WAS DURING this period that rabble-rousers with their often profane rhetoric, and those who should have known better, decided that they had a "right" to do their thing...

And the rights of others—often the majority—be damned in the process.

It was in these traumatic years, when discipline broke down in the home as well as the streets that confidence in people running Congress, the press, medicine, the military, religion, the executive branch, organized labor and major companies declined, according to the analysis by Lipset and Schneider.

Things sort of stabilized in the early 1970s, but plummeted again between 1973 and 1976, a period marked by Watergate, the energy crisis and the worst recession since the 1930s.

Then came President Carter, and the polls turned upward again. But, the recovery did not last. A Gallup survey in April this year showed lower levels of confidence in seven major institutions than a year earlier.

INFLATION AND disappointment over President Carter's inability to lead has created a new crisis of confidence.

Too, many now question the ethical standards and "self-interest" of those in business, labor and public life. Institutions devoted to "service" seem to fare much better in the public's mind.

But all is not lost. While "bigness" often is associated with "badness," 74 percent of the people oppose further government encroachment in their lives, and by a margin of 52 to 16 percent disagree that "the free enterprise system benefits the few."

A total of 62 percent say they oppose Socialism, a somewhat questionable figure in view of the fact many in fact do subscribe to the practice if it benefits them.

In the final analysis, it all hinges on the ability of the American system to "deliver the goods," to keep unemployment and inflation low and exposes and scandals to a minimum in high places—factors not prevalent the past two decades. Too, more and more people seem to fear a concentration of power, distrust those things over which they have no control.

If it all is coming apart at the seams, part of the problem may start with old No. One. After all, we too have jobs. How well are we doing them?

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. "CAN YOU TELL the age of a rooster by its comb?"

A. Not precisely, certainly. But the comb's color tends to fade a little with age. I lived in West Germany for a number of years after World War II. Still recall how the chicken raisers thereabouts then used to color the combs of their stewing chickens with lipstick before taking them to market. Made the birds look younger.

AN EDITORIAL:

The Postman 'Wrings' Twice

POSTAL WORKERS, already overpaid by contemporary standards, have every reason to expect that their rejection of a new three-year contract will bring them even more concessions from federal negotiators and mediators.

In forcing Postal Service authorities back to the negotiating table under threat of an illegal strike, the union rank and file probably risk nothing except further erosion of public support—and their attitude is one of the public be damned.

Like other special interest groups, the mail handlers want more pay, better benefits, less supervision and complete job security without any offsetting increase in productivity.

MANAGEMENT, of course, should have the obligation in the re-opened negotiations to insist that it have the authority to change work assignments and lay off superfluous workers at any time.

It also should insist on zero pay increases, if not an actual rollback in wages, until salaries paid in other lines of work catch up with those the postal workers get—but such fairness in management-union disputes is perhaps beyond all hope.

The pay for a postal employe in a non-supervisory position is $16,501 under the existing contract after eight years. This compares with a top pay of $16,565 for a Lubbock classroom teacher with a master's degree and 25 years of experience.

At the very least, however, the generously paid supervisors ought to have the right and flexibility to do what they are paid to do: supervise.

This should include the authority to assign whatever compulsory overtime is necessary to move the mails, to reduce the work force by enlarging routes and automating procedures wherever practical, to fire workers who don't produce and to re-assign personnel to promote efficiency.

THE THREATENED postal strike if the employes don't get what they want is a fresh reminder that collective bargaining by public employe unions is a serious internal threat to the nation.

Policemen, firemen and garbage workers in such cities as Memphis and San Antonio have provided earlier examples this summer of the chaos which smolders just under the surface if public services are cut off.

If the mails don't move, the damage is not as immediate as it is with the protection of life and property but economic repercussions are certain if bill-paying checks and other instruments of communication are delayed indefinitely.

Until the public's growing wrath, as expressed in California's Proposition 13, is redirected toward public employes who put their own desires above the public interest, we can expect more turmoil and disruptions ahead.

ART BUCHWALD:

It Wasn't A Paperboy 'Singing In The Rain'

EDITOR'S NOTE: Art Buchwald is an assignment for a few weeks trying to find out if there are any Cuban traps on Cape Cod. He left behind his all-time favorite columnist.

WASHINGTON—A man works hard all his life, trying to make something of himself, overcome his poverty-stricken years and achieve security and happiness.

And then all of a sudden one day his son takes on a newspaper route and the man finds himself back where he started.

This happened to me a while back. My 11-year-old son had managed to get himself a newspaper route, but on Saturday he went off on an overnight hike with the Boy Scouts.

At 3 o'clock on that rainy afternoon my wife informed me someone had to deliver his newspapers.

"BUT IT'S RAINING out," I protested. "And besides the North is playing the South in football."

"It's all right," she said, putting on her galoshes. "I'll deliver them. A little rain never hurt someone with a cold and a 101 fever."

"Okay," I said, "I'll deliver the damn papers. What really hurts is I don't even write for the paper he's delivering."

"Here's a list of the houses," my wife said. "Joel's written down the instructions as to where to take the papers and what to do."

I took the list, put on a raincoat, boots and rain hat and went out into the pouring rain.

The truck came along at 4:30. "Where's your bag?" the driver wanted to know.

"WHAT BAG?"

"To keep your papers dry, you idiot. How many times do I have to tell you guys to bring your bag when it rains?"

"That's a lousy excuse. Okay, keep them under your raincoat, and next time don't forget your bag."

"Yes, sir, I'll remember."

He roared off, splashing water all over my pants.

I studied the list, but it wasn't easy. Between the rain and my son's handwriting it was kind of blurred.

THE FIRST TWO houses didn't give me any trouble, but at the third a man came to the door. "We didn't get our paper last Friday," he said.

"That's a shame," I said. "Actually nothing much happened. You didn't miss anything."

"I'm not paying you for Friday."

"Suit yourself," I said, as the rain dripped down on my face. His wife came to the door and pulled her husband away.

As she closed it I heard her say, "You shouldn't yell at the poor man. It's probably the only job he could get."

By this time the list was pretty soggy and I couldn't read it any more, so I decided the only fair thing to do was to leave a paper at every other house until I ran out.

It worked until I came to one house where an 11-year-old girl ran out and said, "Hey, we don't take that paper."

"IT'S FREE," I said.

"You get off our property," she said. A boxer came to the door and started growling. I stopped running a block later.

In two hours, I had gotten rid of all the papers and was back at my house.

As I soaked my feet in a pail of hot water and drank a tumbler of hot rum, the thought occurred to me that it's much easier to write for newspapers than it is to deliver them. And healthier, too.

ANDREW TULLY:

Kiss Me, You Fool

WASHINGTON—Back in the days when I was in love with Gypsy Rose Lee, I was assigned by my editor at the Worcester (Mass.) Post to interview a lower-caste stripper whose name I have forgotten.

I bought her dinner at the Bancroft Hotel, a watering hole of impeccable respectability. Throughout the meal, I was flushed with self-consciousness. After all, the more well-to-do folks in my hometown 18 miles to the south often dined at the Bancroft, and my partner not only had a voice that could be heard in the upstairs ballroom, she was dressed in a style that must be described as flamboyant.

I kept looking furtively over my shoulder to make sure we were safely surrounded only by strangers. Finally, she took her last sip of coffee and I my last note.

I ESCORTED HER gingerly to the street where she beckoned to a taxi to take her to the theater.

Just as I was breathing my third sigh of relief, the stripper suddenly offered her mouth. "Kiss me goodnight, Andrew baby," she said. "I won't tell anybody." I did and she didn't.

I recite this piffle because I have lately skimmed through a paperback book written by Annabel Battistella about her relationship with Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., former chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. Annabel, now known on the stage as Fanne Fosse, tells all.

Mills told Jerry O'Leary of the Washington Star that he just didn't remember much about his so-called affair with Annabel.

BUT MILLS' memory is not at issue here. What should appall is Annabel's attempt to cash in on her alleged romance with the Arkansas legislator. Annabel's object obviously is to make a bundle by appealing to people whose literary tastes are limited to the works of those scandal-mongers who deal in the sexual adventures, real or fancied, of public persons.

We have had a lot of that sleazy stuff since the country's tastes declined, much of it concerning the Kennedy family. Its sells, and to its proprietors that's all that matters.

Annabel's book is a special horror because it was published at a time when Mills seemed to be winning his fight against alcoholism. He has already paid the public price for his dalliance by his forced resignation from the Ways and Means chairmanship.

HE ADMITTED HE was a boozier and went to work to rehabilitate himself, thus offering himself as an example to other alcoholics.

Curiously, Annabel has made Xavier Hollander look good. Xavier's reminiscences are spicier than Annabel's self-conscious drivel, but all the names in her books are fictitious. Relatively speaking, Xavier has shown a certain sensitivity.

Annabel's attitude was nuts to sensitivity, hand over the dough. The wretched female had only one man to write about, but his name was well known and thus saleable merchandise.

Until now, I have given it no thought, but I'm about to decide that my stripper was a lady.

Baker Says Texas Courts Too Lax With Sentences

JIM BAKER

Criminals in Texas virtually get away with murder because judges and juries in the state are not required to assess a certain length sentence for a particular crime, the Republican candidate for state Attorney General said here Wednesday.

Houston attorney Jim Baker advocated establishing "fixed-length sentencing" to remove some of the sentencing latitude given Texas judges and juries.

"Today in Texas a convicted murderer can get anything from probation to 99 years because of the wide disparity and very little uniformity of punishment," Baker said.

"There is no certainty of punishment," he said adding the vast discretion given judges and juries should be taken away. "The best deterrent to crime is swift, sure punishment," Baker said.

Currently, Texas has the "laxest sentencing in the nation" and 71 percent of its parolees are rearrested within two years after release from prison he said.

Baker, 48, faces former Secretary of State Mark White in the general election. A former Democrat, Baker said he became a Republican in 1970 to work in George Bush's U.S. Senate campaign.

"There's no home for conservative Democrats in the national Democratic Party," he said.

Baker gained national attention when he headed up former President Gerald Ford's re-election campaign in 1976 after serving as Undersecretary of Commerce in the Ford administration from 1975-1976.

A practicing attorney for 18 years, Baker is a managing partner in the state's fifth largest law firm, Andrews, Kurth, not have a lead which can't be overcome. The poll showed White with 37 percent, Baker with 22 percent and 51 percent remaining undecided.

If elected Attorney General, Baker said he would file suit to prevent the application of the federal energy bill to Texas if the government "seeks to allocate natural gas." He also said he would sue the Environmental Protection Agency over its "offset and significant deterioration" policies which have been labeled growth limiting as applied to Texas cities.

Baker said he believes in the need for consumer protection in Texas, but said it needed to be "tempered with the recognition that it's the consumer who often ends up paying for it (consumer protection)." As for minority deaths at the hands of law enforcement officers across the state, he said it is "important for the Attorney General of Texas to investigate these instances of alleged denial of equal justice."

If the state's chief lawyer finds equal justice has been denied, Baker said he should refer the case to the Justice Department and "monitor the results of the investigation."

However, Baker opposed giving the Attorney General pro sectorial power to pursue the alleged civil rights violations. Baker criticized White for receiving labor union endorsements from the AFL-CIO and Teamsters and said he "could be more aggressive in defending" the state Right-to Work law because he doesn't have ties to organized labor.

Judge's Sentence Includes Option, 'Get Out Of Town'

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — This city likes to call itself "the gateway to the West" and in keeping with that tradition, Judge J.C. Duvall, 80, likes to administer "western" justice.

Earlier this week the judge gave a convicted prostitute the option of paying a fine and going to jail or leaving town. The 21-year-old California woman, who had arrived in Texas only two weeks earlier, chose the latter. "You be back in court by 2 p.m.," he told Deborah Teresa Ballard of Fresno, Calif. "I'll have your plane reservations ready."

Contractor Bribes To GSA Employees Claimed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contractors working on federal buildings have paid millions of dollars in bribes to General Services Administration employees, the agency's top investigator said Wednesday.

And federal agents believe at least some of those bribes have been funneled to Swiss bank accounts, a source close to the investigation says.

At a news conference Wednesday, GSA Administrator Jay Solomon said he expects at least 50 GSA employees to be indicted as a result of the ongoing investigation into the problems of the agency, which serves as the federal government's main builder, landlord and supply house.

Vincent Alto, the former federal prosecutor hired by Solomon to investigate the allegations of fraud, bribery and extortion, repeated an earlier statement that at least $66 million a year is being wasted by criminal activities.

"This wouldn't necessarily mean that GSA employees were getting all of that,"

Alto said. "I think the lion's share of the money was received by contractors and vendors."

But a substantial part of that money was being returned to GSA employees as bribes, he added.

"I think the indictments...will show that it is in the millions of dollars," he said.

Both Alto and Solomon said they did not know anything about investigations of the bribe money ending up in Swiss bank accounts, except that the FBI was conducting such an investigation.

The FBI, U.S. attorneys in several cities, a congressional subcommittee and the GSA team head by Alto are investigating the broad range of alleged criminal activities within the agency.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said federal agents were piecing together the story of GSA employees funneling "big, big money" in bribes into the Swiss accounts.

The trail of illicit funds uncovered by federal agents is a complex one, leading from bank to bank and city to city, with the final destination for some of the funds apparently numbered Swiss bank accounts.

"They're over in Switzerland working on it through FBI liaison people," the source said.

Sources said sometimes the GSA employees demanded the payoffs from contractors and sometimes it was the contractors who initiated the crime.

Essentially, the repair and maintenance scheme worked like this:

A GSA employee would let a contractor for painting the halls of a federal building. The contract would call for painting a million square feet of wall at so much per square foot. But only 250,000 square feet of wall could be painted in the building.

Thus, the contractor would be paid by the government for painting 750,000 square feet of wall that did not exist.

Part of the crooked contractor's profit would go to the GSA employee as a bribe.

Although each contract was relatively small — under $10,000 generally — the total of the contracts could be large.

"Each contract might be worth $5,000-$6,000, but the GSA employee would let 300 of them a month," said another source close to the investigation.

Thus, large bribes would be paid to obtain several fraudulent contracts, the source said.

APPLES TO BE BARGAIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orange juice, canned peaches, grapes and pears probably will be more costly at the grocery store this fall, but apple lovers may find lower prices because of an abundant harvest, the Agriculture Department says.

Fruit crops this year generally have been smaller, with some varieties hurt by severe weather, but an 11 percent increase in the apple crop is foreseen, with a downturn in prices as the probable result.

Farm Riots Break Out In India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police on Wednesday arrested at least 2,000 farmers who threatened to lay siege to India's Parliament to protest the government's leasing of land to Untouchables and other landless peasants, authorities reported.

An estimated 4,500 protesters, many of them small-landholding farmers of the Hindu Jat caste, held a rally about two blocks from Parliament House. They were prevented from marching closer by 1,500 police, superintendent of police Kulbir Singh said.

Discrimination against Untouchables, the lowest Hindu caste, or class, was banned in 1955 but it remains widespread on an unofficial basis.

Shouting, "We will take club blows and bullets!" and "Truth will prevail!" the farmers used the traditional Indian protest tactic of seeking arrest. Rally leaders had expected only 200 persons to seek arrest, and police had provided vehicles for 500, but more than 2,000 demanded to be taken into custody.

"They think it's a festival," said one harried police officer. "Everyone wants to be arrested."

The farmers peacefully boarded chartered city buses and police trucks. They were expected to be held overnight at the National Stadium on charges of violating a ban against assembling in the area.

Wednesday's demonstration followed a violent Jat protest Aug. 13 outside Prime Minister Morarji Desai's official residence here. When Desai refused to intervene on their behalf, the Jats hurled rocks and clashed with police, who arrested about 160 persons.

The center of the dispute is Kanjhawla, a village about 19 miles west of New Delhi, where 120 acres of formerly communal grazing pasture was divided in 1970 and allotted to 120 families, about half of them Untouchables. Their leases expire in 1980.

The Kanjhawla dispute has rallied Jat farmers in many parts of northern India. They hope a victory there will fuel other protests against land reforms that benefit Untouchables and other minorities.

Houston Pair Arrested In Drug Seizure

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston attorney and a former investigator for the district attorney's office were indicted Wednesday on charges of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

Ralph Chambers, 52, the attorney, and Lannie A. Phillips, 46, also were accused of involvement in the theft of 4½ pounds of cocaine from a county courtroom July 12.

Chambers and his son, Mark, 20, were arrested Tuesday night. Police said about four ounces of a substance believed to be cocaine was found in their possession.

Phillips was picked up at his home. Authorities said tests will be conducted to determine whether the substance found in the possession of Chambers and his son could be part of the stolen cocaine.

State District Court Judge Thomas Routt set bonds of $50,000 each for Chambers and Phillips. Mark Chambers was not named in the indictment.

The cocaine was stolen during the trial of Arnulfo Ordonez Heath, 42, of Houston, a client of Chambers.

Heath has been convicted of trying to sell cocaine to an undercover agent. He was out on bond awaiting sentencing when rearrested Aug. 23 for questioning in the theft of the drug.

The missing cocaine, evidence in the Heath trial, was taken from a locked courtroom prior to the end of testimony.

Chambers was fined $100 and given a 30-day probation sentence in 1974 on a misdemeanor charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. He had pleaded no contest to taking a car from the Houston Police Department compound.

Phillips was fired by District Attorney Carol Vance in 1976 for allegedly soliciting payoffs from defendants. Phillips was cleared by a grand jury of any wrongdoing.

Trash Dig Upsets Workers

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — You think your job stinks? Some Michigan park workers say they are fed up with digging through garbage barrels as part of a "high priority" research project on throwaway bottles.

"It doesn't take long in warm weather for garbage to get 'ripe,'" complained Vernon Fitzpatrick, manager of a state park in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, in a memorandum to the state Department of Natural Resources. "In the parks this would include dog droppings, disposable diapers, you name it."

The experiment, authorized by the state Legislature, is an attempt to gauge the effect of a ban on most throwaway beverage containers which takes effect in December. About 35 workers at eight state parks and 26 other game, fish and public-access sites have been counting the number of bottles thrown away at campsites this summer. They will conduct the same survey next year and compare findings to determine the effectiveness of the ban.

Department officials have pegged the experiment a "high priority" task for the summer. However, Harry Doehne, head of policy development for the department, said workers were not ordered to dig through garbage "because that might be a violation of health standards."

"We can't ask them to pick through the trash. I would be upset myself," Doehne said.

He said workers were simply ordered to cordon off an area in their parks and count the number of bottles — without sticking their noses into trash bins.

"I guess somebody misunderstood what we had in mind," he said.

But Fitzpatrick said a department memo specifically ordered workers to categorize the contents of litter bins.

"I have gone into sewage manholes and wet wells to make repairs when it was necessary to provide service to park users," he said. "But the crew has objected to this job and I concur with them."

Meanwhile, Fitzpatrick said his crew's romp through 10 tons of garbage has turned up more than 12,000 drink cans, nearly 7,000 throwaway bottles, less than 2,000 plastic bottles and just seven returnable containers.

TIA Striving For Control Of National

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas International Airlines revealed Wednesday it has doubled its investments in its efforts to acquire control of National Airlines.

The Houston-based regional line said it now has invested $42,193,501 in acquiring 1,533,300 or 18.2 percent of the outstanding shares of National's common stock.

TIA said it had acquired in the past week an additional 536,800 shares at a cost of $21,018,945. The per share cost of $39.15 for the latest acquisitions, including brokerage fees, more than doubles the $18.20 average paid when TIA began its acquisition of National stock in July.

National stock on the New York Stock Exchange closed at $37.84.

Based on Tuesday's closing price, TIA's interest in National had a market value in excess of $58,776,000.

On Monday, the Civil Aeronautics Board formally authorized both TIA and Pan American World Airways to acquire 25 percent of National's stock and said it will decide in 30 days whether the two carriers can keep more than a 10 percent interest in their battle to take over the Miami-based line.

Pan Am offered two weeks ago to acquire all National stock at $35 a share. At that time, Pan Am was said to hold 4.8 percent of National's stock.

Prior to Monday's CAB order, National had asked the board to halt further TIA purchases so its directors could examine the Pan Am offer free from stock market pressures.

TIA also reported Wednesday the completion of a foreign issue of $24,175,000 in 7.5 percent convertible debentures due in 1983, with the revenues to go into general corporate funds.

In an Aug. 23 disclosure statement covering 1,016,500 or 11.9 percent of National's shares, TIA advised the Securities and Exchange Commission the $21,174,556 spent as of that date came from general corporate funds and included no borrowed funds. It added, however, that the convertible debenture issue was expected to augment corporate funds by Aug. 30.

James O'Donnell, TIA vice president, would not say Wednesday whether the latest purchases of National stock included debenture or borrowed funds.

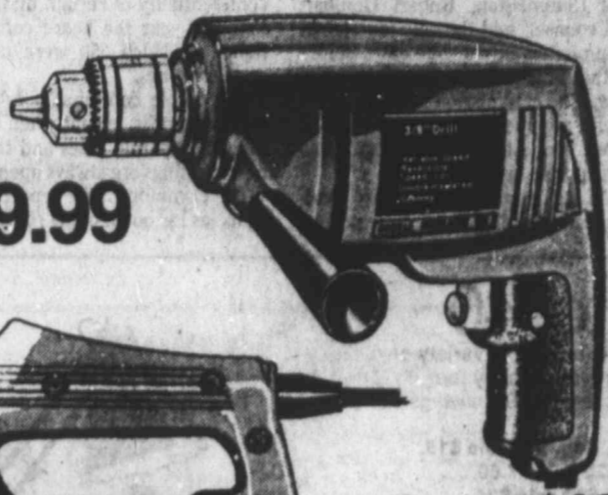

"We have not disclosed if any of the debenture moneys were used and no borrowings have been disclosed," he said.

Lobby Criticizes Agencies For Closed Meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer than 40 percent of the meetings of 47 federal agencies covered by the Sunshine Act were fully open to the public in the act's first year of operation, according to a Common Cause study released Wednesday.

"Government agencies are thumbing their noses at the American taxpayer," said David Cohen, president of Common Cause, a self-styled citizens' lobby. "They are often closing their doors to the public even when open discussion of the subject matter is clearly in the public interest."

The Sunshine Act, passed in March 1977, is designed to reduce the number of government meetings closed to public scrutiny. It permits meetings to be closed under certain exemptions, such as when they concern national security, trade secrets and financial information obtained from a person confidentially, or when a case is being decided before the agency.

Common Cause issued a list of what it called the "Secret Seven" agencies, which it said had the most consistent records of secrecy in the year ended last March 31. At the same time, Cohen said a few of them engage heavily in law enforcement and litigation and this might justify closed meetings.

"But these agencies have established records of secrecy that appear to go beyond a mere good faith use of legitimate exemptions under the act," Cohen said.

The list included the Export-Import Bank, the National Labor Relations Board, the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, the U.S. Parole Commission, the Federal Reserve Board, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

In commenting on their listing, spokesmen for the agencies said in general that they followed the law in holding closed meetings.

William T. Bagley, chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and a champion of open meetings, said, "We are the most open agency in town." Some meetings are closed by law, he said, but the commission holds an open public policy meeting once a week.

"Recently I found we had some 'confidential' stamps around," Bagley told a reporter. "I gathered them all up and I threw them into the Potomac River, simply as a symbol that government can exist without confidential stamps."

Since G. William Miller took over as head of the Federal Reserve Board last spring, he has made a policy of one closed and one open meeting each week, spokesman Frank O'Brien said.

At the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, Robert Gombar, general counsel, said the only function of the commission is to decide cases before it and that function is exempt from open meeting. The commission is encouraging more oral arguments in open session, he said, but requests for this must come from the parties involved.

The NLRB also said most of its meetings concern deciding cases. "We believe our exclusions are all supported by the Sunshine Act," spokesman Tom Miller said.

The Home Loan Bank Board said the Sunshine Act requires it to maintain the confidentiality of certain matters. It said that last year the board considered 599 items of which 350 were discussed at open meetings.

The parole commission said its meetings were open except when it considers individual parole cases and that its business meetings are always open.

The Common Cause report cited three agencies for outstanding compliance with the Sunshine Act. It said the Tennessee Valley Authority held all 27 of its meetings in open session; the Interstate Commerce Commission held 86 percent in open session; and the Civil Aeronautics Board, 82 percent.

Students Probe Red Scares Of 1950s

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — The post-World War II "red scare" became more than just a page in the history books for some University of Illinois students this summer.

The students took a step into the past by interviewing people who had lived through the McCarthy years and "red-baiting" on the U of I campus.

"Illinois, like other universities, was under attack by super-patriots who labeled as 'Communist' almost any non-conformity, including civil rights agitation," said Blair Kling, the history professor who conducted the class.

Professors, alumni and former staff people told the students — most of whom had not been born at the time — of their experiences and memories, Kling said.

"I think the biggest thing the students were surprised about was the treatment of blacks during that period," he said. "They were appalled to learn of the treatment and attitude towards blacks. The community was almost a part of the South in that blacks were not allowed to use establishments like barber shops or restaurants."

The period was the beginning of civil rights activism among young professors, and Kling said the students found it very difficult to believe that the civil rights activity caused such a stir in the community.

The "red scare" class project was the school's first oral history and Kling said it was extremely successful in bringing old and young together.

"Interviewing is both the oldest research method used by historians and the method most in keeping with the modern temper," Kling said.

Steel Imports Cause Concern For Federal Plan

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Steel imports jumped dramatically in July, sparking renewed concern over the effectiveness of a federal trigger price mechanism designed to curb dumping of cheap foreign steel.

The Treasury Department said imports reached 1.78 million tons in July, a 31 percent increase from June's 1.36 million ton figure.

U.S. Corp. Chairman Edgar Speer called the development "very discouraging" Wednesday and American Iron and Steel Institute Chairman Lewis Foy said he was "disturbed." Other major steel-makers declined comment.

A Treasury official Wednesday cautioned against premature judgment.

"The figures have to be viewed in relationship to the total U.S. domestic consumption," said Peter D. Ehrenhaft, deputy assistant secretary and special counsel, tariff affairs.

"It (the July import figure) was somewhat unexpected, but as long as the U.S. steel industry continues its very favorable condition, I don't know that there is cause for alarm," he said in a telephone interview.

AIISI said the industry was operating at 85.1 percent of capacity through Aug. 26. For the same period last year, the figure was 78.6 percent.

And after a dismal first quarter, the industry rebounded in the second three-month period. Earnings of the six largest mills rose 83 percent compared with the second quarter of 1977, Iron Age reported.

The July steel import figure was part of a total trade deficit of $2.98 billion, the fourth largest on record. About $599 million of that involved steel.

The Carter administration's trigger price program became effective in three stages and July was the first month fully covered under the plan.

The mechanism sets minimum acceptable prices for foreign steel sold in the U.S., which imported a record 19.3 million tons in 1977.

There was hope the plan would curb imports to between 12 million and 14 million tons. But that range is likely to exceeded since 12.5 million tons already has been imported this year.

When imports in May and June registered at a moderate 1.51 million and 1.36 million tons respectively, steelmakers were somewhat encouraged.

"There was hope after the May and June dips that the trigger price mechanism was having some effect. But evidently the July results indicate that it just is not so," Speer said in a statement.

Foy said the industry would carefully analyze the figures. "A continuation of the July level would mean a total of over 20 million tons of steel imports for 1978 and would imply a failure of the trigger price mechanism," he added.

Ehrenhaft, however, called the plan "very effective."

"We never promised the American steel industry that a certain share of the market would be reserved to them. What we said was we would apply the anti-dumping act."

He added that the department plans no action in response to the July import figure, although it is studying the effect of the increasing value of the Japanese yen on the trigger prices.

The reference prices were based on the cost of production for Japanese steel-makers, presumably the world's most efficient.

But due to increasing claims from other countries that their fair value is below trigger prices, the Treasury Department is "weighing a number of options" to deal with that, Ehrenhaft said.

Police Fail, Victim Nails Burglar, 18

CHICAGO (AP) — Three times Florence Fisk tracked down the teen-ager who burglarized her home, but it wasn't until this week that he was sent to prison.

"People have to stand up for ... (their) rights. You have to go to court and you have to make sure justice is done," said Miss Fisk, 53, after Alberto Mendez, 18, was sentenced Tuesday to five years in prison.

Her home was burglarized June 14, and police said they had no suspects. So Miss Fisk started her own investigation, found a witness to the crime and located Mendez.

Mendez was arrested, but jumped bond and failed to appear in court.

Miss Fisk found him again and Mendez was arrested again. But he failed to show up in court once more.

Miss Fisk found him a third time, and Circuit Court Judge John F. Reynolds handed down the prison term.

Mendez lived in Miss Fisk's neighborhood, and she said he wasn't difficult to find because he often strolled through the neighborhood and regularly ate at a nearby restaurant.

"I know I did the crimes and I know I have to pay for what I did," Mendez said.

"I'm not happy about sending an 18-year-old to prison to start his adult life," Miss Fisk said. "But I'm satisfied that he's where he belongs and that somebody else won't be burglarized."

Steel Firm Sets Price Rate Hike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ninth-ranked Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. fell into line with other producers Wednesday and announced price increases on tin mill products.

The company gave no percentage figure in its brief statement, but said the hikes would become effective Oct. 1 "in conformance with increases announced by other producers."

Tin mill products are used primarily in beverage cans.

National Steel, the third-largest steel-maker, was the first to announce price hikes averaging about 3 percent last week.

Kaiser Steel and top-ranked U.S. Steel followed with increases of 5.9 percent and 4.9 percent respectively.

Steel industry analysts say the differences in percentages reflects regional and product mix differences among the companies.

Tin plate accounts for about 10 percent of Wheeling-Pittsburgh's total product line. For the whole industry, tin mill products made up about 6.5 percent of the first half's shipments.

UNFAIR PRICING BARRED
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wilson Foods Corp. of Oklahoma City has agreed to a federal order barring it from using unfair and discriminatory pricing practices, the Agriculture Department says. The department charged that a Wilson subsidiary, Briggs and Co. of Landover, Md., had sold meat products to favored retailers and wholesalers at prices as much as 18 cents a pound below those charged other customers. While neither confirming or denying the charge, the firm agreed to avoid such practices in the future.

'Sick' City New York In Midst Of Building Boom

NEW YORK (AP) — New York, seen for years as the sick man of cities, is in the midst of a construction boom that will see a $172 million hotel rise from Times Square's tawdriness and office buildings put up by two of the nation's wealthiest corporations.

Some $1 billion in construction is scheduled in the city's five boroughs, including hotels and office and industrial buildings.

The construction — some underway, some only scheduled — is seen as the result of an improving economy for New York, and an improving image, and a tax incentive plan that has granted abatements on construction worth more than $500 million in the past 1½ years.

Whatever the reason, the construction is a complete turnaround from the middle years of the decade.

Then the World Trade Center — with its twin, 110-story towers — was seen as a white elephant. Now it is almost completely rented, and the glut in office space in general has disappeared.

Then, too, construction work was so dead that bricklayers voted to take a pay cut to avoid layoffs. "We had an average of about 50 percent unemployed," said Earl Fullilove of the Building Trades Employers Association; "everything from 90 percent unemployment for bricklayers and stone cutters to 10 percent for the boilermakers."

Fullilove said the industry's unemployment is still some 30 percent, but he expects it to improve as buildings now planned get under way.

Much of the construction will be in Manhattan, and many of the projects are hotels, prompting Mayor Edward I. Koch to say:

"Before long, with all the new development, you not only will need a reservation to find a hotel room in New York, you might very well need a reservation to build a hotel."

The most spectacular project is the $172 million, 2,000-room Portman Hotel to be built in the blighted Times Square area. Other hotels include a $41 million venture on East 42nd Street; a 22-story Hilton International Hotel near the World Trade Center and the 1,050-room, $75 million Palace Hotel behind St. Patrick's Cathedral.

A new Holiday Inn is planned, and Hilton has dusted off an old plan to add to the New York Hilton to make it the world's largest hotel.

Meanwhile, the old Commodore Hotel next to Grand Central Terminal is getting a $90 million facelift, and Dunfee Hotel Corp. is spending $16.6 million to refurbish the Hotel Berkshire on East 52nd Street.

A $300 million convention center — proposed but nowhere near the construction phase — could set off a wave of more hotel construction.

Hotels are not the only new buildings in Manhattan, of course. Citicorp, parent company of the nation's second-largest bank, recently opened a new headquarters building on the East Side.

Nearby, IBM is building a 43-story, $80 million office tower and ATT plans a 37-story, $110 million building. The ATT building is the creation of architect Philip Johnson and has been described as the most innovative skyscraper designed in years.

In assessing the building boom in New York, IBM president John R. Opel said, "New York is one of the world's most important centers of commerce and industry. It's a great place to do business."

Albert A. Formicola of the city's hotel association said of the improved trade, "Businesses are finally realizing that New York has not gone down the Hudson, that it is still a good place to come to and do work."

The city has 100,000 hotel rooms. Last year, they served 17 million visitors who spent $1.6 billion. This year, Formicola said, business is about 5 percent above 1969, the industry's best year. Europeans, attracted by the devalued dollar, account for much of the increase.

Visitors are still discouraged, of course, by New York's reputation for crime, high prices and filth. But Formicola and others also noted that New York has become a nicer place to live and visit in recent years, with street fairs and performers and more cultural attractions than ever. Its theaters are having an excellent year.

"People are beginning to realize that what happened in New York has happened all over the world," Formicola said. "New York is bigger, so it has bigger problems. But you pick up the paper every day, and see what's happening in Europe, and that's even more scary."

Roman Ferber, head of the city's tax abatement program, said his office has been pushing the city's strengths and services to lure new buildings and industry.

"We still have the most efficient transportation system of any city. We move more people through Grand Central in an hour than most cities move through their stations in a week," he said.

"We unquestionably have the finest labor pool — while it might be difficult to find a woman who speaks three languages and types in Baltimore, it's easy here."

Since it began in February 1977, Ferber's office has granted tax abatements for 145 projects costing more than $546 million. Ferber estimates these will bring 23,819 new jobs to the city and almost $172 million in tax revenues.

The program freezes property taxes for up to three years during construction. Then, 50 percent of the assessed value of construction is exempted from property taxes in the first year after completion. The abatement is decreased by 5 percent each year for 10 years. Incentives are even greater for fixing up existing buildings.

Ferber said the incentives are "crucial."

"The cost of construction in this city is totally atrocious, and if not for the tax abatement, they wouldn't build anything," he said.

Crickets Swamping California Town

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) — Crickets have invaded Coalinga.

So many crickets, in fact, that some stores have been forced to close temporarily.

"When I opened the doors (Tuesday morning), I couldn't step on the carpet," said Toby Castillo, owner of a restaurant in Coalinga Shopping Center. "It was covered with crickets. They were on the booths and tables. They were all over the pots and pans. The noise — it was like a swarm of bees."

(A movie about killer bees called "The Swarm" is playing at the local theater.)

Castillo, who stayed closed through Wednesday, said at least two other businesses in the shopping center had to shut their doors.

"It's a pretty bad situation," said Bob Semple, information officer for this community of 7,000 residents.

There are more crickets than usual this summer in the San Joaquin Valley because there was little frost last year to kill off some of them. A two-year drought left cracks in the ground which provided good nesting areas, and rains this spring provided good breeding conditions, said City Manager Glenn Marcussen.

The crickets are attracted to Coalinga because of street lights, a lack of moisture in mountain earth and pesticides sprayed on fields outside of town, Semple said.

The city has given homeowners permission to request that street lights be turned off in their neighborhoods. And Pacific Gas Electric Co. is being asked to speed installation of high pressure sodium lights which emit a wave length that does not attract insects.

Meanwhile, residents are hoping the crickets will die or go into hibernation by the end of September.

"I wish I could catch all the crickets and sell them for bait," Castillo added. "I'd make a mint."

Anti-Somoza Rebellion Breaks Out In Matagalpa

Editor's Note: Associated Press photographer Valente Cotera spent more than two hours Tuesday in Matagalpa, Nicaragua, where civilians have been battling the government's national guard for the past three days, demanding President Anastasio Somoza's resignation. Here is his story.

By VALENTE COTERA
MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (AP) — Men, women, the young and old are walking the streets of this city of 40,000, shooting — and hurling bombs — at national guard troops. When they aren't shooting, they are demonstrating for the resignation of President Anastasio Somoza.

Matagalpa, Nicaragua's third-largest city, 100 miles north of the capital, Managua, has been under a virtual state of siege since Saturday. On Tuesday air force planes bombed it, but officials say it is still largely under civilian control.

Eight have died here since Friday, Red Cross officials said, four of them in Tuesday's bombing. More deaths were feared. Many were reported wounded.

A two-hour visit to the embattled city showed that literally every civilian capable of carrying a gun seemed to be armed — with pistols, hunting rifles, vintage pieces. Sniper fire rang out constantly across the city.

The streets were carpeted with broken glass, and walls were pocked with bullet marks. Gunfire was punctuated by blasts from homemade bombs.

The national guard in Matagalpa was confined to a few square blocks around the garrison, in defensive positions, trading gunfire with snipers.

Many bands of youths wearing arm-bands controlled street corners, and red-and-black flags of the Sandinista National Liberation Front could be seen almost everywhere. The leftist guerrilla group has been trying to overthrow the Somoza family for almost two decades.

The Sandinistas attacked the national palace in Managua last week and held more than 1,500 hostages, forcing Somoza to release 59 political prisoners. The guerrillas and freed prisoners then flew to Panama.

Dr. Cesar Amador Kuhl of the Red Cross here said at least one of those killed here was a national guardsman. He said he did not know how many were wounded, but added: "They were more than several."

All shops are closed. There is complete compliance with a nationwide strike call by Nicaragua's 36 chambers of commerce, which are demanding the resignation of the authoritarian military president.

Ramon Rivera Galeano, Matagalpa's Chamber of Commerce chairman, said the city's second largest supermarket, owned by a Somoza supporter, defied the strike order, opened its doors, and was quickly looted by strikers.

The home of Congressman Juan Palacios, a member of Somoza's Nationalist Liberal Party, was burned to the ground. Palacios had urged local residents to support Somoza.

Several military helicopters landed in the garrison. Outside the city, a five-jeep caravan with at least 12 armed national guardsmen in each was on the highway between the town and Managua.

Kuhl said the disorders began Saturday and grew progressively. He said that each morning, between 6 a.m. and 8 a.m., a tacit cease-fire was observed so residents could take in supplies for their homes.

As soon as the cease-fire started, he said, hawkers appeared on the streets with such basic food as tortillas and cheese or vegetables, and housewives would rush out and stock up. Some hawkers even set up small stalls during the two hours of lull, Kuhl said.

There is running water, but electricity goes off for long periods in many sections of the city. Sometimes the outages last all night, sometimes a few hours, residents said.

The mission of Red Cross ambulances is respected by both sides, but the drivers proceed as though they are running a gantlet, fearing stray fire. Drivers wave flags from windows and use sirens liberally.

Near one street corner, a woman and her son lay on the pavement in pools of blood. Both were badly wounded by shrapnel from a homemade fragmentation bomb of the kind the Sandinistas use. Both were taken to the Monserrat clinical-surgical center, the city's main hospital for first aid.

Opposition Gets Heavy Support From Conservative Nicaraguans

Editor's Note: Tom Fenton, an AP correspondent based in Panama, has covered the fast-changing Nicaraguan situation for months and has been in Managua since last week's bold guerrilla raid on the National Palace. Here he examines the opposition to Nicaragua's beleaguered President Anastasio Somoza.

By TOM FENTON
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — "I'd kill him if I had the chance for what he's done to the Nicaraguan people," a young woman from a wealthy Managua family said of President Anastasio Somoza.

She's not alone, and Somoza knows it. He remains holed up in his heavily fortified office, known locally as "the bunker," in a military compound on a hill overlooking Lake Managua.

Outside his office entrance this week, soldiers were building a wall of steel and concrete — a clear symbol of Somoza's fear of the people out there who would like to drive him from office or worse.

Journalists who rushed here Aug. 22, when guerrillas seized the National Palace, are constantly surrounded by angry Nicaraguans anxious to denounce Somoza.

The 53-year-old president is a multi-millionaire whose family has ruled this lowa-sized Central American nation of 2.3 million people since his father, Anastasio Somoza Sr., took it over with the help of U.S. Marines in the 1930s.

Somoza, a 1946 West Point graduate, has refused widespread calls that he resign, and says he won't leave office until his term expires in 1981. Many of his opponents question whether he will actually give up the reins of power then.

The seizure of the palace by guerrillas of the leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front brought to a head years of unhappiness with the Somoza regime.

The guerrillas demanded, and got, freedom and passage to Panama for themselves and political prisoners in exchange for freeing the hostages in the palace. Tens of thousands of Nicaraguans cheered them as heroes en route to the airport.

"There is no doubt that if Cero (the guerrilla leader) were to run for president tomorrow, he would win by a wide margin," said one opposition businessman.

Hatred of Somoza has spawned the unlikely coalition of conservative businessmen and Marxist guerrillas, who have one common short-term goal: Get rid of Somoza.

Why? —Businessmen accuse him of mismanaging the economy, of monopolizing lucrative business deals and of condoning widespread corruption.

They say the longer he stays, the more people will shun moderation and turn to the Sandinistas, who advocate a Marxist state with no free enterprise, as an alternative.

—Untold numbers of ordinary Nicaraguans hate him because, they say, he has allowed the national guard, Nicaragua's army, to brutalize the population. Somoza, commander-in-chief of the guard, denies the charges.

—The Nicaraguan Permanent Commission on Human Rights says that since 1974 about 2,000 Nicaraguans have disappeared after being arrested by the guard and estimates that only 10 percent are alive.

The government has confirmed 145 persons killed in political violence since the beginning of the year, including at least 24 since last Friday. Opposition sources put the figures higher.

—Leftists say Somoza has sold out the country to foreign capitalists who exploit the people and export the profits.

Opposition forces have united to support a general strike call that has picked up support and been accompanied by street violence since it was announced, a week ago.

The usually conservative Nicaraguan Confederation of Chambers of Commerce has urged its 40,000 members to join the strike until Somoza falls.

Somoza responded by revoking the chamber's charter and ordering the nation's central bank to recall the loans of striking businesses.

The powerful Nicaraguan Development Institute, representing 700 of the leading executives, industrialists and companies, joined the strike late Tuesday.

Managua was relatively quiet, but in other cities armed flare-ups between civilians and soldiers were common this week.

Anti-Somoza sources said the Sandinistas had organized students to threaten and bomb businesses who didn't join the strike.

Political analysts say Somoza can stay in office if he keeps control of the national guard, a pillar of support which has been unwaveringly loyal to him in the past.

This week some cracks began appearing in the pillar.

U.S. Ponders Trying Role Of Mediator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government is considering offering its services as mediator in the growing anti-government crisis in Nicaragua, State Department officials said Wednesday.

The officials said the possible mediation role was only one of many ideas under consideration as the Carter administration monitored the conflict between the government of Anastasio Somoza and the apparently growing number of Nicaraguans who want him to resign and leave the country.

The State Department officials said the administration also might continue its posture of uninvolved neutrality.

The Nicaraguan crisis grew more violent Tuesday as government planes bombed Matagalpa, a city in virtual rebellion, and killed at least four persons.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said the department was trying to determine whether the planes or bombs were of American origin, supplied by the United States during the era when the United States helped keep the Somoza family dynasty in power.

They said first signs indicate the planes were Cessnas bought by Nicaragua from commercial sources, but they added there is little the United States can do to prevent Somoza from fighting the dissidents with weapons supplied in past years by the United States.

The Carter administration has moved to end its military aid to Somoza, although it has continued to supply economic aid.

When Carter took office, the United States had been supplying $2.5 million annually in military sales credits to Nicaragua, in addition to lesser amounts in military grants and training for officers of the Nicaraguan National Guard.

The administration has refused to sign contracts to allow the expenditure of the $2.5 million in the budget for the 1978 fiscal year.

For 1979, the administration did not ask Congress for any military sales credits or grants, and Congress appears likely to cut the only military aid the administration did ask for, $150,000 for training Nicaraguan officers.

The sources said the administration has decided to ask for no military aid of any kind for Nicaragua in its 1980 budget proposals.

Dollar Takes Slide On Japanese Mart

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar roller coaster took an abrupt swing down Wednesday because of the poor U.S. trade performance. The American currency lost in one trading session half the ground it had struggled to gain against the Japanese yen in recent days.

Tuesday's announcement of the almost $3 billion U.S. trade deficit for July had driven the dollar down sharply in Europe. But the Tokyo currency market was closed for the day by then and the backlash had to wait until Wednesday. It came quickly, the dollar plummeting by more than two percent.

At one point, the U.S. currency dropped to 188.20 yen before creeping up to close at 189.725 yen, down from Tuesday's mark of 194.30. The dollar continued to sag in Europe, and gold prices climbed.

In late New York trading, where the dollar posted its sharpest losses on Tuesday, it recovered a bit Wednesday, but dealers said the volume was light. As usual, tourists were among the first to feel the immediate impact of the currency fluctuations.

Based on the inter-bank rate, American residents Wednesday had to pay $26.35 for a moderate 5,000-yen meal for one. That was $1 below the dollar price they were paying Aug. 15, at the dollar's all-time low point, but it was well above the January, 1977 rate, when the same 5,000-yen meal cost $17.12 because the yen was trading at 292 per dollar.

For a cup of coffee with Wednesday's meal, add $1.65.

A 300,000-yen-a-month apartment, not unusual in Tokyo, rented for $1,027.40 in January, 1977. It rose to $1,640.70 on Aug. 15 and was at $1,581.24 on Wednesday.

And though the inter-bank rate was 189.725, Americans changing their money at hotel exchanges Wednesday were getting only 187.57 yen for their dollar.

Trade Deficit Key

The dollar upswing of recent weeks had been spurred by U.S. government supportive measures, but analysts here said Wednesday the key factor still was the trade results, and the July deficit was nearly double that recorded in June.

When America buys more than it sells abroad, it leaves a surplus of dollars overseas, forcing down the dollar's value. In July trade with Japan, the United States bought nearly $1.2 billion worth of goods more than it sold. The trade deficit with Japan this year totals $7.49 billion, compared with $8.1 billion for all of 1977.

The dollar, as high as 229 yen in late May, dipped to a postwar record closing low of 182.85 on Aug. 15. But it began edging up on reports of impending U.S. government measures to help it.

Measures Aid Dollar

After the U.S. Federal Reserve announced a higher discount interest rate, the dollar jumped more than four yen Aug. 21, closing at 190.15. The recovery continued, and when the U.S. government announced plans for increased gold sales, the dollar closed at 192.05 yen Aug. 23.

It rose to 194.30 yen Tuesday on the strength of new U.S. dollar-bolstering steps making it easier for U.S. banks to borrow dollars held overseas and allowing dollar-buying by oil companies and others.

The dollar bounced back a bit from its low point in Wednesday's trading because importers took advantage of cheap dollars to pay for their foreign purchases. But dealers said dollar-selling by foreign banks put on new downward pressure, and the dollar declined on other markets after Tokyo's close.

Closing Dollar Rates

Closing dollar rates in major European markets were:

Frankfurt — 1.9927 marks, down from 2.0045 at the close Tuesday.

Zurich — 1.6465 Swiss francs, down from 1.6555.

Paris — 4.36325 francs, down from 4.3750.

Milan — 836 lire, down from 845.55.

Amsterdam — 2.1630 guilders, down from 2.1920.

In London the pound sold for $1.9375, up from $1.93575 at Tuesday's close.

In less hectic New York trading, the Canadian dollar hit a 45-year low of 86.84 U.S. cents, down 0.27 from the previous day. Dealers cited no specific reason for the decline but, like the U.S. dollar, the Canadian currency has long been sliding partly because of Canada's high inflation.

Trading in the late New York market saw the dollar improve marginally to 1.9922 marks from Tuesday's 1.9885; rise to 1.6500 Swiss francs from 1.6325; and increase to 189.22 yen from 188.72. But it slipped to 4.3600 $1.9372, from $1.9432.

Uncertainty over the dollar kept gold trading steady in London and Zurich, the two major bullion markets. It climbed to $206.625 an ounce in London, compared with $204.125 at Tuesday's close, while in Zurich the price was $205.375, up from $202.75 the day before.

After Wednesday's close in Tokyo, Japan's finance ministry announced more bad news for the dollar: Japan's exports in the first 20 days of August rose 16.3 percent from a year ago while imports rose only 3.5 percent.

Enrollment Increase Expected Next Week

rollment, down 509. Enrollment in special education is up 36 students.

Those figures support Leslie's theory that the low enrollment has not been caused by the integration plan. "Kindergarten enrollment is down quite a bit, and yet the plan has nothing to do" with kindergarten reassignments, Leslie said.

The same can be said of most elementary and secondary no-shows, he added. Under the integration plan, the overwhelming majority of such students were to continue to attend neighborhood schools anyway.

"We believe the enrollment seems to be holding up well," said Leslie, predicting that many no-shows will reappear next week. "After Labor Day, I think we'll be fairly close to what our projection was."

Encouraging Sign

One encouraging sign, he said, is that the district gained more students during the first two days of this term than were gained during the first two days of the last term.

Leslie speculated that "some parents may be waiting to see how successful the integration plan is" before enrolling their children. This may have contributed to the increase between Tuesday and Wednesday — and may well continue through next week, he said.

Under the integration plan, about 2,000 elementary students were projected to be reassigned this semester — some due to school closings, but most (1,849) because of a cross-assignment between "sister schools."

According to original projections, 634 minority students were to attend elementary sister schools. On Wednesday, the actual number enrolled at their sister schools was 560, or 88 percent, Leslie said.

The original projections said 1,215 whites would undergo sister-school reassignments. Leslie said 1,023, or 85 percent of them, have materialized at their new schools.

The actual number of reassignments is about 14 percent under the projection. But Leslie said that deficit can be explained partly by the same factors that seem to have caused low enrollment throughout the city.

Also, he said the original projections may have been too high. For one thing, students were selected for reassignment based on the first letters of their last names (A through L, or M through Z). It may be that this system did not divide the students evenly, Leslie said.

The 85-88 percent enrollment figures on sister-school reassignments do not include voluntary transfers, Leslie added. Bill Parker, the district's pupil personnel director, said "numerous requests" for such transfers have been received. "A number of parents say that if one of their children is to be reassigned (to a sister school) then all of their children should be reassigned," Parker said. "They want to keep brothers and sisters together."

Such requests are approved automatically, he said. Because of voluntary reassignments, some elementary campuses are sending to their sister schools many more youngsters than projected.

More Buses Added

Irons said Wednesday more buses have been added to the Wester-to-Posey route because the number of students making that trip is 85, instead of the original projection of 72, and to the Rush-to-Mahon route, where the increase has been from a projected 78 to an actual 90 students.

The district also increased shuttle service between the twin campuses of Dunbar-Struggs High School. And more buses were added to the route that brings west-side students to the Dunbar-Struggs magnet program.

Leslie said enrollment at Dunbar-Struggs increased by 34 students Wednesday, to 735. The school also has about 50 part-time students. The percentage of whites in the fulltime student body remained steady at 43 percent, close to the school's goal.

Also in "good shape" was the enrollment of junior high students from the old Struggs zone who are being assigned to other schools, Leslie said.

Enrollment and racial balance at the Hles Elementary magnet program continues to "look exceptionally good," he said.

The percentage of whites at minority elementary schools being integrated by mandatory reassignments also was high — 65 percent at Guadalupe, 71 percent at Mahon, 72 percent at Martin, 71 percent at Posey and 66 percent at Wheatley.

Bus ridership has been very close to what was predicted," Robert Miller, the district's transportation supervisor, said. He said Wednesday's buses generally were on time, though some were running about 10 minutes late.

Some principals said enrollment is lagging in certain schools because students and their families still are occupied with migrant farm work.

Mrs. Davis Link Eyed By Defense

between David McCrory, Pat Burleson and Priscilla Davis are significant," said defense attorney Steve Sumner.

Burleson, 42, was the intermediary between McCrory and the FBI.

He testified McCrory took over a franchise at one of his Fort Worth karate studios in the mid-70s and operated it for perhaps two years, but said, "...McCrory has never been a partner in my karate school."

Split Of Profits

He said until McCrory surrendered the franchise in 1977 their deal was that McCrory kept 70 percent of the profits and turned over 30 percent to Burleson.

Prosecutors earlier accused Davis' attorneys of "sacrificing his freedom on bond" in their search for soft spots in the state's case against the millionaire.

The defense is now "eliminating any possibility of getting their client out on bond because the more evidence they put on, the more solid our case becomes," said Assistant Tarrant County District Attorney Jerry Buckner.

Haynes spent most of Tuesday grilling FBI agent Ron Jannings, and the defense subpoenaed two more witnesses, both FBI agents, dampening speculation the hearing is nearing a conclusion.

Buckner said Haynes was "just sacrificing his (Davis') freedom on bond for discovery. That will strengthen his knowledge of the case for the jury trial."

The calling of Jannings, he said, "was just one more nail in his coffin, in my opinion."

Buckner described Haynes' questioning of Burleson as little more than a "very, very expensive deposition."

Buckner said the defense in his opinion has uncovered no evidence or developed any testimony indicating that Davis was set up and framed.

Defense lawyers had claimed prior to the bond hearing they intended to develop that theme.

Buckner said there were no prints found on a silencer-equipped pistol recovered from the defendant's car at the time of his arrest Aug. 20.

added, "I like to believe that if someone had been in the buildings, the response would have been different."

The fire was believed to have started in the Courthouse Lounge, a tavern that closed about 3 a.m. There was no immediate indication as to what caused the blaze. Chesterfield Volunteer Fire Chief Larry Musser said there was no evidence of arson.

New Jersey Court Releases Newsman

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — New York Times reporter Myron Farber was released from jail Wednesday after the state Supreme Court stayed his indefinite jail sentence pending an appeal of his contempt conviction.

"I'm delighted to be out," Farber said. "It's enormously gratifying of the Supreme Court of New Jersey to take up the matter."

Farber, accompanied by executives and lawyers for The Times, said he believes he will be vindicated of contempt for not turning over his notes on a widely publicized murder case.

The court stayed all civil and criminal penalties against Farber and The Times pending an appeal of their contempt citations.

As a result of the ruling, Farber was released and a $5,000 a day fine levied against The Times also will be stayed.

Times publisher Arthur Ochs Sulzberger said, "We are gratified that the New Jersey Supreme Court has decided to release Myron Farber and grant us the hearing we have so long sought."

The Supreme Court took jurisdiction of the case from the Appellate Division of Superior Court. A hearing was scheduled for Sept. 5.

Farber and the Times were found guilty of civil and criminal contempt July 24 for defying court orders to surrender their files on the murder case against Dr. Mario Jascalevich.

Farber has been held in the Bergen County Jail since Aug. 4. The Times, thus far, has been fined $110,000 for civil contempt.

The newspaper turned over everything it says it has on the case, but Superior Court Judge Theodore W. Trautwein said he believed the files were "sanitized" and refused to lift the civil contempt citation. The Times vigorously denied the charge.

The Supreme Court said it would hear arguments on New Jersey Attorney General John Degnan's motion that the case be sent back to the trial level for a hearing on the statutory and constitutional issues raised by Farber and the newspaper. The request had been denied at the appellate court level.

Farber's articles in The Times had led to the reopening of an investigation and to the trial, still underway, in which Jascalevich is accused of three murder charges.

The reporter said surrender of the files would violate confidentiality and hamper the efforts of a free press to gather and disseminate information.

He based his arguments on the New Jersey shield law, which protects a reporter's confidential sources and unpublished information, and the U.S. Constitution.

The free press-fair trial controversy began at the start of court sessions in February when Farber, as a potential witness, was barred from covering the proceedings. It did not become heated until this spring, when Jascalevich's attorneys insisted they needed the files to assist the defense.

Trial Judge William J. Arnold said he would examine the files to determine whether the First Amendment and New Jersey shield law applied and whether the material was relevant.

Farber and the Times balked. Trautwein found both parties guilty of criminal contempt for violating Arnold's order and civil contempt for defying an "aid of litigants' action brought by Jascalevich's attorneys."

The civil penalties were designed to force Farber and the Times to turn over the documents. The criminal penalties, six months in jail and a $1,000 fine for Farber and a $100,000 fine for the Times, were meant to be punitive.

The criminal penalties had been stayed by the Appellate Division of Superior Court.

the employees remained on strike, but the workers voted to stay off the job.

Somoza earlier had asked the banks to recall loans to any businesses that joined in the general strike.

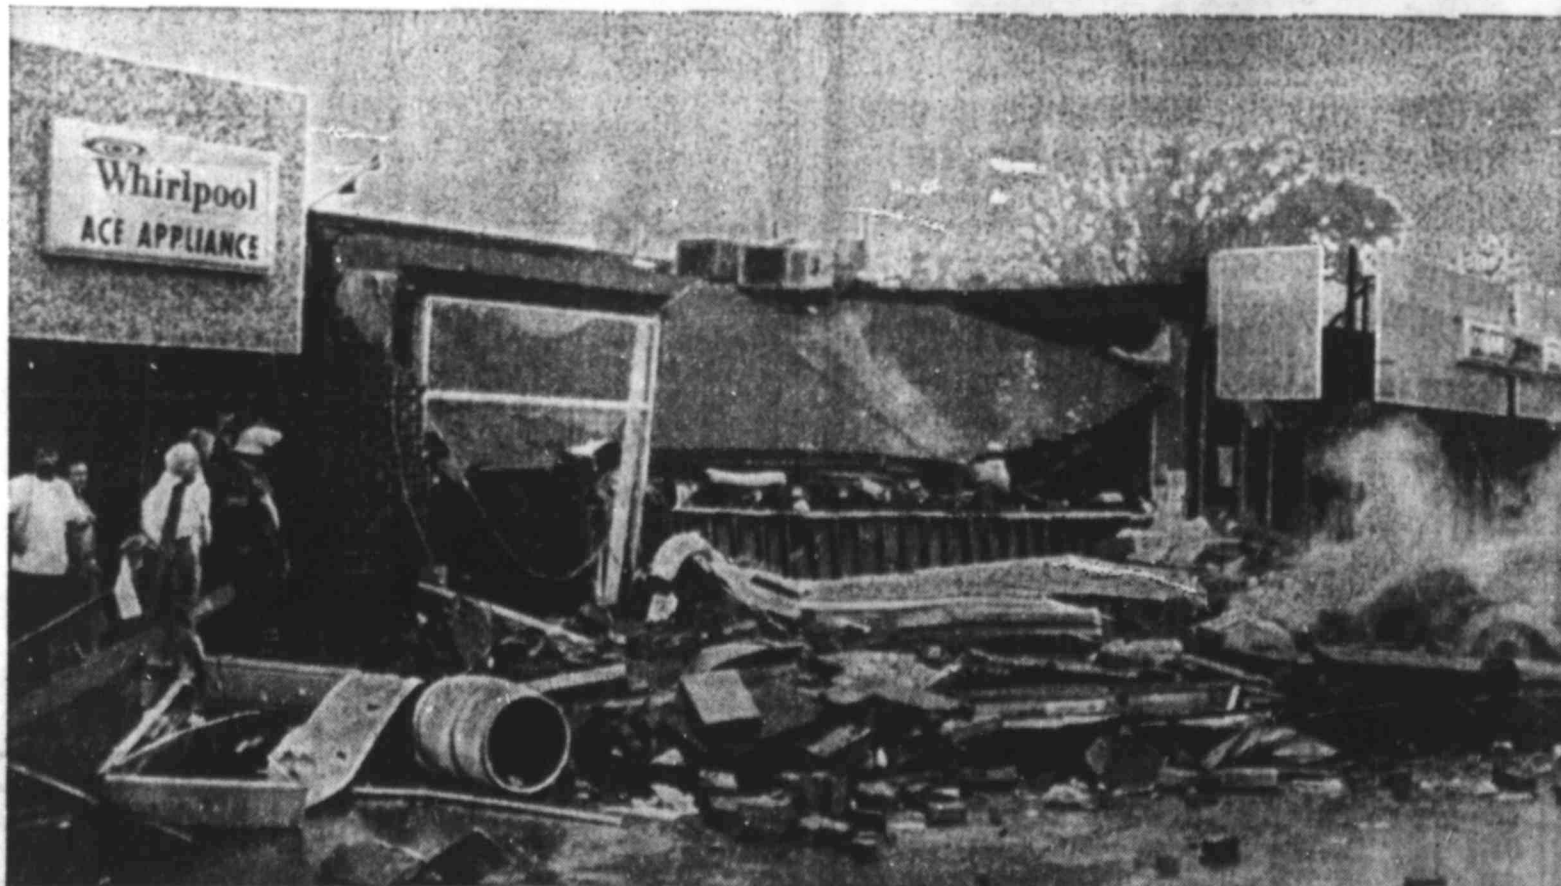

Frequent street battles were reported in Leon, a city of 50,000, and a Red Cross source here said the general strike had paralyzed business.

The country's most powerful business organization, the Nicaraguan Development Institute, urged its members to join the anti-Somoza strike.

"The government is extremely weak when compared to the morality of the Nicaraguan people," said Manuel Jose Torres Barrios, president of the institute, which supported another anti-Somoza strike in January that lasted two weeks.

A strike leader estimated 80 percent of Managua's businesses were closed Wednesday, the sixth day of the strike. It was reported more effective elsewhere.

Somoza defied his foes, telling reporters his resignation would invite "chaos and anarchy" and would "betray the aspirations of Nicaraguans who want to live in a free society."

Tour Flight Crashes; 10 Perish

NORTH LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A twin-engine chartered plane carrying nine members of an Australian tour group and the pilot crashed into a dusty, sage-covered field near a busy highway shortly after takeoff Wednesday. Authorities said all aboard were killed.

"It was climbing, but it violently and suddenly pitched to the right and crashed," said contractor Richard Jameson, who was flying into the airport and preparing to land when the Piper Navajo Chief took off from the North Las Vegas Air Terminal.

Cause of the crash was under investigation.

The plane was the last of three that had taken off on a flight to Santa Ana, Calif., carrying members of a 19-person tour group that had spent the night visiting Las Vegas, said Don Donohue, a spokesman for Las Vegas Airlines. He said the group had been picked up at Santa Ana on Tuesday and flew through the Grand Canyon before going to Las Vegas.

Coroner's deputies said it might be today before the victims were identified.

The plane crashed in clear weather about 7:50 a.m., raising a huge cloud of dust before bouncing and landing on its belly, witnesses said. There was no fire and the plane remained relatively intact.

"I was driving on the highway about two miles down the road when I saw the plane go into a very steep climb, then apparently he lost power and went into a tight dive," said Tom Jones IV, a professional photographer.

"My first thought was, 'That guy is doing crazy stuff and goes,'" Jones added. "Then he pulled the thing up parallel to the ground and then disappeared."

"The purpose of this summit is to get the (peace) process started again — to get the Israelis and Egyptians talking and to break the impasse." Powell told reporters aboard Air Force One.

"We will offer suggestions if it is constructive to help bridge the gap," Powell said, but added that nothing specific had been decided.

Gas Sales Talks

Meanwhile, even before Carter's return to the White House, his aides had begun a series of sales talks to win public support for the natural gas measure.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and anti-inflation spokesman Robert Strauss met a score of Wall Street financial executives at a White House luncheon meeting, and later huddled for more than an hour with about 30 executives of manufacturing firms that are heavy users of gas.

Teaming with Federal Reserve Board Chairman William Miller, they tried to allay Wall Street's doubts that the gas-price bill will have enough effect on energy supplies to reduce oil imports and lift pressure on the value of the dollar overseas.

Schlesinger and Strauss also tried to convince the executives of paper, pulp, glass and textile firms that the bill would result in ample supplies of natural gas.

Jury Frees Woman In Abortion Hearing

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — A 22-year-old woman, charged with performing an illegal abortion on herself, was found innocent on grounds of insanity Wednesday after the defense said she thrust a knitting needle into her body "during a moment of panic."

Upon hearing the verdict from a Warren County Circuit Court jury, defendant Maria Elaine Pitchford burst into tears. She is believed to be one of the first women to stand trial on charges of performing a self-induced abortion.

The slender, red-haired woman was indicted June 14 on a charge of performing an illegal abortion on herself. She could have been sentenced to 10 to 20 years in prison if convicted.

Flora Stuart, a public defender, said the testimony of Dwight Mundy, Miss Pitchford's former fiance, "tipped the scales on our side." Mundy, who testified Tuesday under immunity from a complicity charge in the case, told the jury that he had nothing to do with the alleged illegal abortion, but that it had been his idea to visit abortion clinics in Nashville, Tenn., and Louisville.

"Dwight Mundy sold himself for convenience. It wasn't convenient for him to have a child," Miss Stuart said.

Prosecutors sought to convince the jury that the defense merely wanted to divert blame to Miss Pitchford's former fiance.

In a statement Miss Pitchford gave police a day after the June 9 abortion, she said she had turned to self-induced abortion after being turned away from a Louisville clinic because her pregnancy was too far advanced.

The 1974 statute under which Miss Pitchford was prosecuted allows abortions to be performed only by a licensed physician except during the first three months of pregnancy, when a woman may perform the operation herself under a doctor's supervision.

Miss Pitchford was five to six months pregnant, according to testimony.

The Kentucky law was enacted in response to a 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision that said states may not prevent abortions during the first six months of pregnancy, but may restrict abortions beyond the first three months to protect the woman's health.

In his instructions to the jury, Judge J. David Francis told the panel to return an innocent verdict if they found Miss Pitchford was of unsound mind at the time of the incident.

Francis also said the jurors should disregard the statement Miss Pitchford gave police unless they believed she made it of her own free will.

But in the closing arguments Wednesday, Miss Stuart said the defense did not contest the substance of the statement. She said the defense also did not contest "that during a moment of panic, Maria Pitchford took the knitting needle and thrust it into her body."

Rather, Miss Stuart said, the defense contests Miss Pitchford's mental state at the time.

The defense attorney also recalled testimony by two psychologists and a psychiatrist who concurred that Miss Pitchford was not in control of her actions at the time of the incident.

The defendant does not remember details of the incident, Miss Stuart said. "She just wanted to destroy herself because she felt guilty."

Miss Pitchford never took the stand in her own defense. Kelly Thompson, one of her attorneys, said the defense did not want to subject her to the possibility of a rigorous cross-examination.

Throughout the closing arguments, Miss Pitchford cried frequently, wringing her hands and covering her face.

The jurors deliberated less than an hour.

U.S. Drops Lawyer Ad Lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Wednesday dropped an antitrust case designed to force the American Bar Association to remove restrictions on competitive advertising by lawyers.

The Justice Department said that the ABA restrictions "no longer dominate the regulation of lawyer conduct and to a very considerable extent lawyers are free to advertise today."

A motion to dismiss the suit was approved by U.S. District Judge Nicholas J. Bua in Chicago.

Federal officials said the two-year-old suit had become at least partly moot since the Supreme Court ruled in June 1977 that lawyers have a constitutional right to advertise their services and what they charge for them.

In a 15-page legal brief filed with the court in Chicago, the Justice Department said that to pursue the suit "simply appears unnecessary and wasteful."

But the department said that even with "the dramatic changes" of the past two years it is still not "a perfect world" when it comes to advertising by lawyers.

The ABA continues to place some restrictions on advertising, the department said.

It added that there was no guarantee that the ABA would not try to reinstitute tighter restrictions in the future. The government said it wished to be free to once again file suit were that to happen.

But the department noted the ABA last June amended its code to permit advertising in what federal officials described as "a significant contrast to those (regulations) in existence at the time this case was filed."

The ABA has approximately 200,000 member attorneys, according to the Justice Department.

The department also said that advertising codes for lawyers have been liberalized by various states.

Deputy Assistant Attorney General Joe Sims said, "As a result of these changes the ABA and its code no longer dominate the regulation of lawyer conduct."

Threat Against President Believed Hoax

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — A threat against President Carter, scrawled across a motel room mirror, was a hoax, the Secret Service said Wednesday.

The president left Idaho Falls aboard Air Force One shortly before noon, ending his vacation in Idaho and Wyoming.

Motel maid Kathi Lynn Wagner, 23, who had worked at the Ramada Inn for one week, told authorities Monday that she was knocked unconscious by an unidentified assailant after she entered a room at the motel and found written on the mirror: "The president will die Thursday."

Miss Wagner was originally identified by police as Kathy Wagoner.

The Secret Service removed the mirror and other evidence from the room, including a picture of Carter with an 'X' across it and two burned mattresses, motel employees said.

"We and the Idaho Falls Police Department believe the actions she described actually were done by her," said Tony Sherman, Secret Service spokesman in Salt Lake City.

Sherman said he doubted that any charges would be filed against Miss Wagner, 23. She was being held in isolation in an Idaho Falls jail cell because, deputy Bonneville County prosecutor Steven Hart said, she was believed to be a threat to herself or others.

Earlier, she had told television interviewers she was upset that authorities didn't believe her. She said the incident was not a hoax.

Magistrate Judge Mildred McClure issued a temporary order of custody for Miss Wagner. Hart said the order keeps her locked up until she is examined by a state-designated psychiatrist. He said the state has until 9:30 a.m. Thursday to conduct the examination.

Inflation Said Key Issue In Carter's Recovery

By LOU HARRIS

Inflation has become the dominant issue in this year's elections and is now the single most important key as to whether President Carter can come back from his poor showing in the polls.

The number of Americans who now say that prices are rising faster than a year ago has gone up to 74 percent, whereas only 46 percent held this view last summer. Over the past 12 months, President Carter's rating on his handling of the economy has dropped from 54-39 percent negative to 80-16 percent negative. On his handling of inflation, Mr. Carter receives even lower 84-12 percent negative marks from the public.

People are so worried about the unchecked spiraling of the prices of products they buy that a 54-24 percent majority now expects the country to be in a recession next year, the first time since 1975 that a majority felt that another recession was on the way.

By contrast, public pessimism about unemployment has abated somewhat, for the first time in more than a year, more people feel that joblessness is decreasing in their home area than feel it is going up. The results of a recent Harris Poll of 1,238 adults nationwide show that a 58-30 percent majority finds rising prices to be a more serious problem for the country than unemployment. As recently as March 1975, a 44-28 percent plurality gave top priority to unemployment over inflation.

Perhaps the single most important key to the public mood about inflation is the important community of interest it has created across the country, based on the conclusion that people can't beat inflation as individuals.

—When given a choice between "a pay increase lower than the rise in the cost of living but with some assurance that the cost of living were being brought under control" and "a pay increase higher than the cost of living but with no assurance that the cost of living were being brought under control," the public now opts for a lower hike in pay by a 68-24 percent margin. This is an increase from the 54-32 percent majority who felt that way last February. In explaining this preference, most people feel that they gain nothing by receiving a pay increase if they then immediately find that its effects have been negated at the local supermarket by commensurate price increases.

—Significantly, labor union members, by 68-27 percent, would be willing to take pay hikes lower than the rise in the cost of living, if they had some assurance that inflation were being brought under control. Many economists are convinced that the current round of price increases stems primarily from the impact of wage settlements that took place earlier this year. These latest results indicate that union members share the same view as the rest of the public that they simply cannot beat inflation by getting higher and higher wages, but instead must look to the government for a way to attack inflation centrally.

Easily the most popular approach to controlling inflation in the country today in the minds of both the public and the political leadership can be found in putting teeth into guidelines that would allow for tax advantages for those companies and employees who agree to price and pay increases of no more than 6 percent, but who would suffer extra tax levies on pay and price hikes of more than 6 percent.

such tax incentives as a way of containing inflation has risen sharply from 56-21 percent in February to 68-22 percent in the latest Harris-ABC News Poll.

There is no doubt now that inflation has taken over as the dominant issue for the fall of 1978. It is also likely that Congress will be pressing to take steps to enforce federal programs dealing with inflation during the upcoming September session, when members return from their Labor Day recess.

Husband Has Enough Of Wife Role Switch

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Football coach Bob Peters thought it would be an easy summer, all he had to do was handle his wife's homemaking duties while she went to work.

BOB PETERS

But after failing dismally to fulfill their contract for the "simple tasks" of housekeeping, child-rearing and spouse-pampering, Peters said he is ready to lead "a renaissance of respect and admiration" for motherhood.

Using the escape clause in his notarized "Motherhood Contract" to return to the relative ease of life on the high school gridiron, Peters confessed:

"I have come to the conclusion that there is no profession, career or occupation on earth which parallels motherhood in either degree of difficulty or importance of outcome relative to the future success of the world."

At a news conference, Peters admitted his failure to live up to terms of the contract which called for him to switch roles with his wife for 70 days and nights, taking primary responsibility for their four children — boys aged 4 and 5 and girls 6 and 16.

With two days to go, he couldn't hack it any more.

"I believe my failure as a mother could be construed by many (mothers) as their greatest success since Adam took a bite out of Eve's apple," he said.

Peters said that after he began the well-publicized experiment he decided to write a book about it — and now he's seeking a publisher.

"The idea for a book came about one day when I was cleaning house," he said.

"The kids were fighting over a TV station, smearing their lips and fingerprints on the windows, my back was sore from vacuuming, and I just came out and said — 'Wait until your mother gets home!'"

"Then I sat back and thought: 'What the hell did I just say?' I decided to make it the title of my book."

Peters's wife, Pat, worked as a secretary to the principal at her husband's high school while Peters was home slaving over a hot stove.

They've agreed that she should continue working part-time and that they will split the household chores.

Former UT Official Faces Sentencing

AUSTIN (AP) — The former director of the University of Texas Art Museum has pleaded no contest in state district court to charges of falsifying a travel voucher.

Dr. Donald B. Goodall entered the plea Tuesday after a six-month investigation by the Travis County district attorney's office. Goodall resigned as museum director in May after 15 years in the job.

The district attorney's office alleged Goodall was guilty of a misdemeanor for certifying that a travel voucher was unpaid, when he had been compensated for $395.

Judge Tom Blackwell is expected to sentence Goodall within 10 days. Prosecutors have recommended one-year probation.

The travel money in question involved Goodall's trip to New York in February 1977 to speak at the Martha Jackson Gallery.

The Austin American-Statesman reported that Goodall has agreed out-of-court to reimburse the university $1,326.33 for previous expense allowances.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married 14 years. It was wrong from the start and I knew it after two years. But we went ahead and had children, hoping it might help. Now they are 11, 9, and 6 years of age.

Last December "Fred" became involved with a divorced woman in our social circle. This was his third affair (that I knew of) and I thought it would blow over if I remained calm and pretended not to notice. This is how I had dealt with the others — but I misjudged the situation. Last week he asked for a divorce so he can marry her.

I am no longer in love with Fred — he killed my faith and trust many years ago. To complicate matters we are Catholic. I realize the Church has softened its position on divorce but it still bothers me.

I'm writing to you because I need to know what you think divorce will do to our children. I confided in my mother and she insists that I owe it to them to keep our marriage together — regardless. Mother pointed out what has happened to the children of some of our divorced friends. I countered with examples of children from "happy" homes whose lives were just as badly messed up (Truancy, drugs, runaways, arrests for burglary and two suicides.)

I am terribly torn, Ann Landers, and I desperately need some guidance from an unbiased party. Please tell me what you know about this subject. I am — Between The Devil And The Deep Blue Sea

Dear Between, I am going to quote from a book which I believe can be enormously helpful. It is "Living With Divorce," by Kathleen Sheridan. (Publisher, Thomas More Press, 180 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60601 — price $5.95.)

"No marriage should be sustained for the sake of the children. What colossal damage has been inflicted on children by the phony 'altruistic' decisions of parents who decided to stay together 'for the kids.' No child deserves to carry the burden of such scapegoating. Unfortunately, a great number of adults are now in therapy attempting to cope with conflicts that began with constant arguments between their parents — tearful, wrenching scenes by a mother who said, 'If it weren't for you I would have left your father long ago!'"

"This is not to suggest that children whose parents divorce suffer no ill effects. They do. They are affected by their parents' life decisions and will need help in understanding and coping. But they should not have to pay in terms of emotional health for their parents' unhappiness. They should not have to be raised in an atmosphere where parents barely tolerate each other, bicker, belittle or battle — where one parent promotes a conspiracy against the other — where a good front is put on for relatives and friends or where unhappiness and disillusionment are the predominant behavioral models to imitate. Children, from the moment of birth, are sensitive to the moods of those who surround them. They cannot be fooled."

This book deals with (1) Deciding, (2) Leaving, (3) Being Left, (4) Familiarity, Family, Friends and (5) Being Alone. I heartily recommend it as a practical, sensible and supportive guide for parents

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: To stay at my best weight I eat only 1,700 calories a day. But because I love sweet things, like pastries, cream pies, brownies, etc., I allow myself to eat some of these sweets nearly every day. I figure I can take my 1,700 calories in whatever form I like. I am naturally unable to eat much meat, vegetables, fruits, cheeses, grains, etc. To make up I take multivitamin capsules and some powdered protein every day.

Here's my question: a friend says that a diet heavy on sweets and light on other foods is a bad diet. She says the vitamins and protein in the bottles don't do as much good as ones you get from fresh food. I say that's ridiculous — that as long as I get the vitamins and minerals and proteins it doesn't matter how. Can you settle this? — W.E.

Your friend is correct in that your diet is not balanced, being too heavy on the carbohydrate side and lacking in bulk and protein. One serving of these sweets could supply you with a good portion of your 1,700 calories. A normal serving of a cream pie would account for about 400 alone. Indeed, unless you are counting carefully, the sweets could easily put you well over your 1,700 figure. These sweets also suppress your appetite so you don't have desire to eat any meat, vegetables and fruit. True, you can get your vitamin ration in a bottle (just as effective, as you say), but your powdered protein is likely to be inadequate.

You'll just have to get off the sweet hitch and take a more sensible, balanced diet. Your friend's conclusions are not as ridiculous as you make them out to be. You'll find what I mean by a balanced diet in my booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About five months ago I had a blood clot in my left leg and have been on Coumadin since that time. Does that dissolve the clot? Will I have to take this drug all my life? My doctor didn't tell me, but a little booklet I got advised against eating vitamin K. I have been unable to find list of food containing it. Can you give me a list? — B.M.

The Coumadin (Warfarin) is an anticoagulant (anti-clotting) drug. It will not dissolve the clot. Its purpose is to prevent the clot from growing and shutting off blood supply.

PROPER PREPARATION

If you are preparing kale, be sure to remove the woody midribs from the leaves; there is little loss of nutritive value and the kale will taste better.

Vitamin K contains blood-clotting factors so foods with vitamin K should be avoided, and certainly it should not be taken in any supplement form. Dark green leafy vegetables are rich in vitamin K. Some fruits contain vitamin K.

One cannot say how long a patient will have to continue the drug treatment. Yours may be discontinued once the danger of the clot traveling (an embolism) is over. Or your doctor may want to continue it indefinitely. The blood must be checked periodically to be sure it does not become too "thin," and cause bleeding.

Your doctor can tell you if you need to avoid Vitamin K foods. Until you find out, keep away from them.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend had her deafness cured by ear surgery. Can all deaf people be helped by surgery? How does a physician decide whether a deaf person needs a hearing aid? — Mrs. J.P.

Some hearing impaired individuals are helped by surgery, as with the fenestration procedure. In that, a tiny "window" is made in the bone surrounding the inner ear. The surgery is not always successful, however. Other surgery involves the stapes, a stirrup-shaped bone, the idea being to free this bone from surrounding structures and allow better hearing. Modern surgery allows implanting of artificial eardrums.

A properly-prescribed hearing aid helps most hearing impairment. One should first be examined by an otologist to see whether hearing can be improved. Perhaps something as simple as a cleaning out of excess wax can help. Tests determine whether one or both ears are affected, and this dictates the type of hearing aid needed. The decision ultimately is based on whether or not the aid actually does help one hear better.

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents. Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: While at a friend's house recently she demonstrated a super way to fluff those foam sofa and chair cushions right back into shape again.

She put a cushion in a large plastic garbage bag, put the fabric attachment on the vacuum cleaner hose, placed it in the middle of the cushion and held the bag around the cleaner hose.

Then she turned the vacuum on and the suction shrunk the cushion very thin but after the vacuum was turned off, the cushion raised higher and the sags were gone.

I tried it on my mother-in-law's couch cushion and 10 years of sags disappeared.

I even did the bed pillows and flattened throw pillows, and the results were amazing.

I think April is pretty swell for showing this to me.

Keep the hints coming. Your column is the best medicine busy housewives could get! — Jeanne Boyce Surprise! Surprise! This really works, but don't ask me why 'cause I don't really know.

You're pretty swell too for helping us solve this "saggy" problem. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I always keep a flashlight beside my bed but had trouble with it rolling under the bed.

Now I put the flashlight in a slipper and it is easy to reach when I need it. — Margaret

DEAR HELOISE:

Thank you for all the hints that make running our homes so much easier.

Here's one I hope will help with static electricity and tangles in the hair.

Simply rub one of the sheets of fabric softer (for the clothes dryer) over the hair a few times.

Electricity is gone and tangles come out easily. Works beautifully for little girls with long hair. — Helen Green

DEAR HELOISE:

I walked in to help prepare a big meal at the church last week, and the ladies were complaining about how their hands were going to smell after chopping onions and celery.

Chop your celery last, and there's no smell of onion on your hands.

No other odor-chasing product will be needed. — Mary Beth Dunn

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you have a favorite piece of jewelry that you won't part with, but can't wear because of tarnish? Don't throw it away.

Clean it with lipstick and a soft rag such as an old T-shirt, etc. But don't use terry cloth or other rough material.

Work with a small area at a time and coat the jewelry with red, creme-type lipstick — not frosted.

Polish away by rubbing until the tarnish is removed. Then buff with a clean soft cloth.

For filigree pieces or hard-to-clean spots, use a child's soft toothbrush to both clean and buff or, in very difficult places, use a wooden toothpick very, very gently to remove tarnish. Buff with toothbrush.

Hold lipstick cloth between thumb and fingers for chains and gently pull the chain through. Repeat with a clean cloth.

You can now show off that keepsake and bring those other pieces out of hiding. — "Mick"

I didn't really believe this would work so well — until I tried it. Polished up an old piece of silver-plated costume jewelry quick as a wink.

This little tip surely would be good to know for those times when some piece of silver needs polishing and you find yourself out of silver cream.

Doesn't scratch, either. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Keep that vegetable brush handy on the dish drainer to clean the fruit juicer, egg slicer, pastry cutter, shredder, grater, grinder, egg beaters, etc.

After using the brush, scrub with soapy water, rinse with hot water, dry on a paper towel and put away. — M.A.D.

DEAR HELOISE:

This is for all the knitters in your audience.

I have always found storing (and finding) round and double-pointed needles a nuisance.

The round needles pop all over the place and neither the round nor double-pointed needles are marked with the size. At last the perfect solution!

I use the self-sealing plastic bags to hold the needles. The quart size is just the right size for most of the needles.

Just mark the size on the bag with a permanent felt marker. — J.T.S.V.T.

DEAR HELOISE:

My husband taught me how to make mashed potatoes so they aren't cold when they reach the table.

Just heat the milk before adding to the potatoes. — Louise Kinsel

Another good idea is to add the milk and butter to the potatoes and reheat before mashing. Saves washing that extra pan used for heating the milk. — Heloise

THIS COLUMN is written for you...the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise, 235 E. 45th St., New York, N.Y. 10017. By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag Hamlet, the melancholy Dane, opened his jack of hearts against Polonius's four-spade contract.
The fair Ophelia won the trick with her king and promptly shifted to the four of trumps. Hamlet won with his ace over declarer's king and paused to soliloquize.
"To lead or not to lead a trump? That is the question. For whether 'tis better in the end to let him ruff and hope for another trick in addition to my jack of trumps or to stop the ruff and sacrifice a trump trick is the question."
Then Hamlet thought further. He knew that Ophelia was the best bridge player in all of Denmark. Could she hold the 10 of spades? Why not, decided Hamlet. In any event I must stop my heart ruffs. Back came the three of spades. Ophelia did produce the 10 and Elsinore castle resounded with the cheers of the kibitzers.
It was mighty good defense for Elsinore or any place of life or fiction.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON MICHAEL REED
NEW YORK — It's been a summer of mass cast turnovers and additions on soap operas and the people shuffle will continue throughout this month and next.
Don't get too enamored of the performances of David Reilly and Julie Montgomery as Richard Abbott and Samantha Vernon on "One Life to Live." Both actors insist that they won't sign new contracts when negotiations are due later this month. Both David and Julie are young and eager to flap their carrier wings in other projects. And another expected departure will be Peter Brouwer in the role of Joe Casack on "Love of Life."
As one production assistant was overheard to moan recently, "It's not like the old days when performers were content to stick with a show for four, five or more years. The new breed of serial performers simply don't want to remain on soaps longer than a year or two. And cast turnovers can pose potentially destructive elements in serials, which more than any other form of drama depends on audience familiarity with continuous performers."
On the other hand, it's often the case that replacements and newcomers are more exciting and attract more devoted fan followings than predecessors or "old-timers."

SHORT TAKES:
JILL ANDRE, who's appearing on "Guiding Light" as social worker Helen Wilson, is no stranger to the "GL" set. Several years ago Jill portrayed Sara McIntyre before the current Sara, Millette Alexander, took over. Jill was the second actress to play Sara and she was also the second Sandy Hughes on "As the World Turns" about eight years ago. Now Jill is creating her own character. She's also been romanced for the last 10 years by Ted Leplat (Elliott Lang on "Love of Life").
WAYNE TIPPIT, last seen on serials as Kyle Wilson, Maggie Powers' one-night lover on "The Doctors," is now emoting on "Search For Tomorrow" as Ted Adamson, a character last portrayed by Malachi Throne.
On "The Doctors," Lauren White is departing the role of M.J. Carroll to be replaced by serial newswoman Carla Dragoni.
WITHOUT VILLAINS soap operas wouldn't have antagonists who propel story action. Two recent troublemakers on "Day of Our Lives," Stephen Schmetzer and Elisabeth (c.q.) Brooks, are soliciting angry fan mail for their characters' devious deeds. Stephen, who plays Julie's brother, Steve Olson, hails from Boston and has extensive theatrical credits, including seasons with Joe Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival and the American Shakespeare Theater in Connecticut. Elisabeth, a native of Toronto, has appeared in over two dozen nighttime TV episodes. But nothing either performer has previously done prepares them for the scheming havoc their characters will wreck in the "DOOL" town of Salem.

EVER WONDER if serial actors pattern their characters after real or fictional loz? Dorothy Lyman, who adds spice and spark to the role of Gwen Parrish Frame on "Another World," admits that when she was cast as a female architect on the show she was reading the novel, "The Fountainhead." So impressed was Dorothy with the book's brash, ambitious and undefeated hero that she simply utilized his qualities for her soap role.
THE HOODS who terrorized and shot Kay Chancellor recently on "The Young and the Restless" are familiar from other soap opera roles. John Devlin (Leonard Allen on "Y & R") was devious Jason Maxwell three years ago on "All My Children." Jason had pursued Erica with a passion and when he was found dead, she was the prime suspect. It turned out that Erica's mother, Mona, had done the guy in during a mental blackout. Christopher Pennock (Jack Thorsen on "Y & R") is probably best remembered from his days on the late and lamented "Dark Shadows."
Regular viewers of "The Doctors" are accustomed to seeing James Pritchett with a pipe in his mouth. No more. Pritchett explains, "My dentist took one look at my mouth and said it looked like a big baked banana, so I've given up pipe-smoking."
But Matt on "The Doctors" hasn't given up worrying about his unwed pregnant daughter, as you'll see when you tune in tomorrow.

Turn, baste with remaining sauce. Broil for 5 minutes until lightly browned. Makes 4 servings.

Tropical Delight Pleases Finicky American Palate

NEW YORK, N.Y. (Special) — America's love affair with bananas is a many-splendored thing. We consume 306 million dollars' worth of them a year!

Back in the "olden days," when it was perfectly normal to be able to understand the lyrics of a popular song, a fellow by the name of Irving Conn wrote his one and only hit. It was called "Yes, We Have No Bananas." But long before we hummed about them, bananas had been a popular fruit delicacy, not only here but in many countries throughout the world.

The banana plant (really a gigantic herb) springs from an underground stem called a rhizome, and forms a false trunk 10 to 20 feet high. After the plants have fruited they die and are replaced by others from the underground stem, and the life of one stool can continue for many years.

The origin of the banana goes back to antiquity. Mentioned in early Sanskrit writings, its beginnings were traced to Asia and later, to Greek, Latin and Arab writers who expounded on its sweetness.

The technical botanical name for the fruit, Musa Sapientum (the knowing Muse), comes from the fact that sages are supposed to have reposed beneath its shade and eaten of the fruit for inspiration.

Bananas were brought to the New World by the Portuguese explorers back in 1492. Spreading from Santo Domingo and the other islands of the Caribbean Sea, it made its way finally to the tropical mainland. Today, it is a staple wherever it is available. And no wonder! A medium sized banana which contains only 88 calories has a supply of Vitamin A, Thiamine (B1), Riboflavin (B2), Ascorbic Acid (C), Niacin and Potassium. It is an exceptional food for those on low sodium diets and contains no cholesterol.

A popular dish which the Latins have introduced to the Americans up North is Fried Bananas. Easy to make, Plantains (green bananas obtainable in all Spanish grocery stores) are best for frying, but semi-ripe bananas may also be used. Slice them lengthwise and fry in vegetable oil until they are golden brown on both sides.

For your next dinner party, how about traditional favorite, the banana split? When making this easy dessert, in addition to the ice cream and sliced bananas, try a generous splash of Tia Maria, the islands' exotic liqueur before topping with whipped cream. A final and exotic touch would be a sprinkle of fresh, uncooked coffee grounds for extra taste and texture.

The banana, a most versatile fruit, can be served as an appetizer, in soups, combined with fish, meat and vegetables, and in salads. It lends itself to desserts and delicious beverages. Here are some recipes you may want to try.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I are in our early 30s. After working our way through college and graduate school, we have completed our education and have good jobs. Because everything we earned went into our education, we have virtually no savings and only a small investment in real estate.

A. But we have no debts and two incomes. In the next few years, we'll be able to put away at least $10,000 a year. How should we begin investing?

A. Yours is a great example of the value of education. Without knowing your salaries, it's clear that your years of effort in the halls of higher learning are now paying off. Congratulations. After living on a tight budget for more than a decade, you can now plan your financial future and, even, "live a little."

The first thing you should do is fatten up that slim savings account. For safety's sake, stash away the equivalent of three months' income in a savings account.

Then, start buying "equities" — tangible things that should grow in value in the years ahead. The logical choice would be common stocks or mutual fund shares. Do it slow and easy. Don't drop $10,000 at a time into anything.

My favorite method of systematic investment has always been "dollar averaging" — putting the same amount of money into the same security at fixed intervals. And it's made to order for a young couple with their lives and top earning years ahead of them.

Q. I average $25,000 a year as a salesman and would like to start planning for my retirement. Other than savings, we have no investments. I do have $25,000 of whole-life insurance and am considering buying $25,000 more — partly to protect my wife, but also with thoughts of providing retirement income. Can you give me your thoughts on this?

A. Sure. And then I'll brace for flack from those insurance salesmen who don't like my thoughts.

The biggest mistake the average buyer of life insurance makes is to confuse protection with investments or savings. You should buy insurance for protection and make your investments elsewhere.

Term insurance — which is protection, pure and simple — is far less expensive than "whole" life insurance. Whole life is sort of a combination of protection and savings.

But if you buy term insurance and put the money you save on premiums into almost anything else — even a simple interest savings account — you come out ahead financially.

Some people, of course, would never save a dime — if they did not have the "forced savings" feature of whole-life insurance. If you're one of those people, buy whole-life. You need it. But, if you can regiment yourself to put money into any other savings and/or investment vehicle, do it and buy term insurance for protection.

Q. Do you have a list of religious and charitable organizations which sell annuities?

A. No I don't. And, after checking around, I doubt that there is anything resembling a complete list, anywhere. Annuities, of course, are sold by insurance companies, as well as by religious and charitable organizations.

My suggestion is to contact the insurance and/or securities authorities at the state capital of the state in which you live. Ask for a list of annuity-writers licensed to do business in your state. And be cautious. There have been some problems with some of them.

Prime Interest Hits 9 1/4 Percent

NEW YORK (AP) — The prime interest rate was raised by some banks to its highest level in more than three years Wednesday, reflecting trends of tighter credit aimed in part at helping the ailing dollar.

The prime rate is the minimum interest charged on a loan to a bank's best corporate customers. While it is not directly tied to other types of rates, it often serves as a benchmark of general credit conditions.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third largest, took the lead by hiking its prime rate 1/4 point to 9 1/4 percent. The boost put the rate at its highest level since Feb. 10, 1975 and was the sixth increase in the rate this year.

Chase's rate increase was quickly followed by a number of other major banks around the country, including Chemical Bank of New York, First Pennsylvania Bank, First National Bank of St. Louis, the Bank of St. Louis and Ohio National Bank.

Bank of America, the nation's largest, and Citibank, the second-ranked, did not immediately join the move. Citibank normally reviews its rate on Fridays.

Economists say that prime rate increases are often accompanied or soon followed by increases in many other types of loans. Some consumer loans, which are subject to legal interest rate ceilings, may simply become more difficult to get.

Rising interest rates have become one of the Federal Reserve Board's major means of showing its concern over the dollar's continuing decline against major world currencies and combating stubborn inflation, which has been running at a rate of nearly 10 percent so far this year.

Citing both the dollar problem on international markets and domestic inflation, the Fed earlier this month began another round of credit tightening by increasing the amount banks must pay for the money they get. It did that by raising its discount rate a half percent to 7 1/2 percent on funds the Fed loans directly to member banks and indirectly by increasing the target federal funds rate from 7 1/2 to at least 8 1/4 percent. Federal funds are bank reserves which banks lend each other for short periods of times.

While there is no guarantee that rising interest rates will help stabilize the dollar, economists cited several reasons why they may.

In one sense, a move to increase interest rates is "as much symbolic as it is real. It has been traditional for a central bank to raise interest rates as a symbol of its own austerity," said David Jones, an analyst at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a Wall Street bond and securities firm.

Rising interest rates may also serve to slow the U.S. economy by discouraging buying and business expansion and in that way dampen inflation. Inflation, because it eats into dollar-buying power, has been one of the major reasons for the dollar's persistent weakening. In the past year, for instance, the Japanese yen has gained 41.5 percent in value against the dollar and the Swiss franc about 40 percent.

Higher interest rates may also improve the dollar's standing by encouraging foreign investors to put their funds in dollar-denominated Treasury bills, certificates of deposit or other investments, rather than in countries with stronger currencies but lower interest rates.

Sluggish Economy Seen For '79

CHICAGO (AP) — A panel of economic forecasters predicted Wednesday a sluggish U.S. economy next year but no recession.

They said inflation will be about seven percent, and one of them cautioned that the consumer will be the "most vulnerable" in an economic downturn.

Another panel member said, however, that everyone's consensus "doesn't mean anything. We're sort of huddling close and hope we're right," said Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council on Economic Advisors under former President Ford.

Greenspan, now a financial consultant, along with two other consultants and Lawrence R. Klein of the Wharton School of Business, said 1979 economic growth will be less than 3.5 percent, assuming a proposed tax cut is passed by Congress.

Interest rates will peak later this year and drop somewhat in 1979, said Michael K. Evans, of the Chase Economics Associates, Inc., and Robert Gough, of Data Resources, Inc. All the economists forecast an improving balance of payments for this country.

From recent indicators, Gough sees an "orderly deceleration process" in the economy. He said the housing market and personal income levels are "good" and de-emphasized the longer-run impact of recent declining sales of cars and other durable goods.

"There is no definite indication of a dramatic improvement in the momentum nor of dramatic weakness," he said. He warned, however, that the consumer is worried about the economy, particularly about inflation, and will find an "individual need for a retreat in spending."

"Every consumer will have to tighten his belt and we figure it will be in an orderly way — one notch a month, instead of three or four notches."

Evans said the tax measure pending in Congress is "the puniest tax cut of all" amounting to two-thirds of one percent of the gross national product. He predicted that by the time it makes its way through the Senate, consumers will win an addition $3 billion in tax cuts and corporations $2 billion.

"Even $20 billion is not enough to stop the economy from the doldrums," he said, however, and predicted a growth rate of 2 1/2 percent for 1979.

Klein predicted a growth rate of 3.4 percent or 3.5 percent with the need for another tax cut to stimulate the economy in 1980.

Greenspan, while stating caution over any economic forecast, said a recession is very unlikely in 1979 unless "significant softness" develops in the demand for capital goods.

Hill Seeks Veto On N-Wastes

By LARRY SPRINGER
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General John Hill Tuesday sought assurance from the U.S. Department of Energy that Texas will have a "right of veto" over possible disposal or transportation of high-level nuclear wastes in the state.

In a letter to Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, Hill requested "formal assurances that DOE will afford Texas a right of veto over any decision to dispose of nuclear waste in Texas or to transport them through the State."

"We are not seeking a ban on federal nuclear waste disposal projects," Hill said in a statement issued following release of the letter, but rather a guarantee the "Texas will have the final say over this matter."

DOE is investigating sites in the Panhandle and in East Texas as possible locations for the nation's first long-term deep underground repository for high-level nuclear wastes.

Additionally, the federal energy agency has acknowledged that toxic radioactive waste materials would be transported through the state en route to an experimental nuclear waste storage site near Carlsbad.

"Clearly," Hill wrote, "Texas has a large stake in DOE policy on nuclear waste management."

While the DOE is looking for "national solutions" to the nuclear waste dilemma, Hill said, this issue involves "extremely large and long-lived risks, and intense local concerns over those risks."

"National solutions," he wrote, "must incorporate appropriate assurances to states and localities that they will be able to protect the health, welfare and peace of mind of their citizens."

Hill said he is "encouraged" by the department's recognition of the rights of New Mexico and Louisiana to concur with federal decisions to locate repositories in those states.

"In view of this precedent," he said, "Texas should clearly be granted a similar veto authority, with the details of its implementation to be worked out with the relevant State officials."

Hill, as the Democratic nominee for Texas governor, may be in a position to exercise such a veto if successful in his campaign against Republican challenger Bill Clements. Clements has issued no formal statement on the nuclear waste disposal question.

"I understand that some members of Congress believe that specific legislative authority is needed to insure state veto power for the states with support of legislation to formally guarantee such powers."

Hill added that prior to federal acquisition of land on or near sites where studies are underway to determine the suitability of certain salt formations beneath Panhandle and East Texas counties for long-term nuclear waste disposal, "site-specific" DOE-sponsored environmental studies — both generic and site-specific — should be completed and published.

Pope Tells Cardinals He'll Be 'Humble Pupil'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Acknowledging his lack of Vatican expertise, Pope John Paul I told a gathering of cardinals Wednesday he will become the humble pupil of experienced church officials, learning how to "carry the cross" of managing the 700 million-member Roman Catholic Church.

In his speech, the new pontiff indicated that he will try to follow a middle course between those who seek more local autonomy for bishops and those who advise strict adherence to papal directives.

The pope said it was "no problem" for him to recognize his lack of experience in dealing with the Roman Curia, the backbone of the church administration.

During most of his religious career, John Paul worked as a local-level priest, educator and bishop. He is the first pope elected in 75 years without a background in the church's diplomatic corps or as a member of the Curia.

The pontiff said he intends to rely on the veterans in the Roman Curia. On Monday, he reinstated those whose executive jobs had expired upon the death of Pope Paul VI.

Departing from the text of his formal address, John Paul, elected by the conclave of cardinals last Saturday, joked that he knew "only the pontifical yearbook." The Who's Who listing of church officials.

"We plan, therefore, to treasure the suggestions that will come to us from our worthy coworkers. We will be placing ourselves, one might say, in the school of those who, through well-deserved experience and recognition in these matters of great importance, deserve our full trust and our appreciative recognition."

Among the 80 cardinals addressed by the pope were some who, because of the 80-year age limit imposed by Paul VI, had not taken part in the electoral conclave.

Vatican officials said the former Cardinal Albino Luciani of Venice won election as pope with many more votes than the minimum 75 out of 111 required.

John Paul said that the electoral support he drew "continues to surprise and confuse us."

He said he envied the cardinals who would be able to go back to their dioceses "and are anticipating the joy of seeing your (congregations), whom you know so well and love so deeply."

"This is a joy which will not be ours. The Lord knows the sadness that there is in our heart because of this. Above all, in His goodness, he knows how to temper the sadness of detachment with the prospect of a still broader paternal responsibility."

Again leaving his written text, the pope paused to chat with the cardinals about his election. He said that during the final balloting Italian Cardinal Pericle Felici gave him "a message for the new pope" in an envelope.

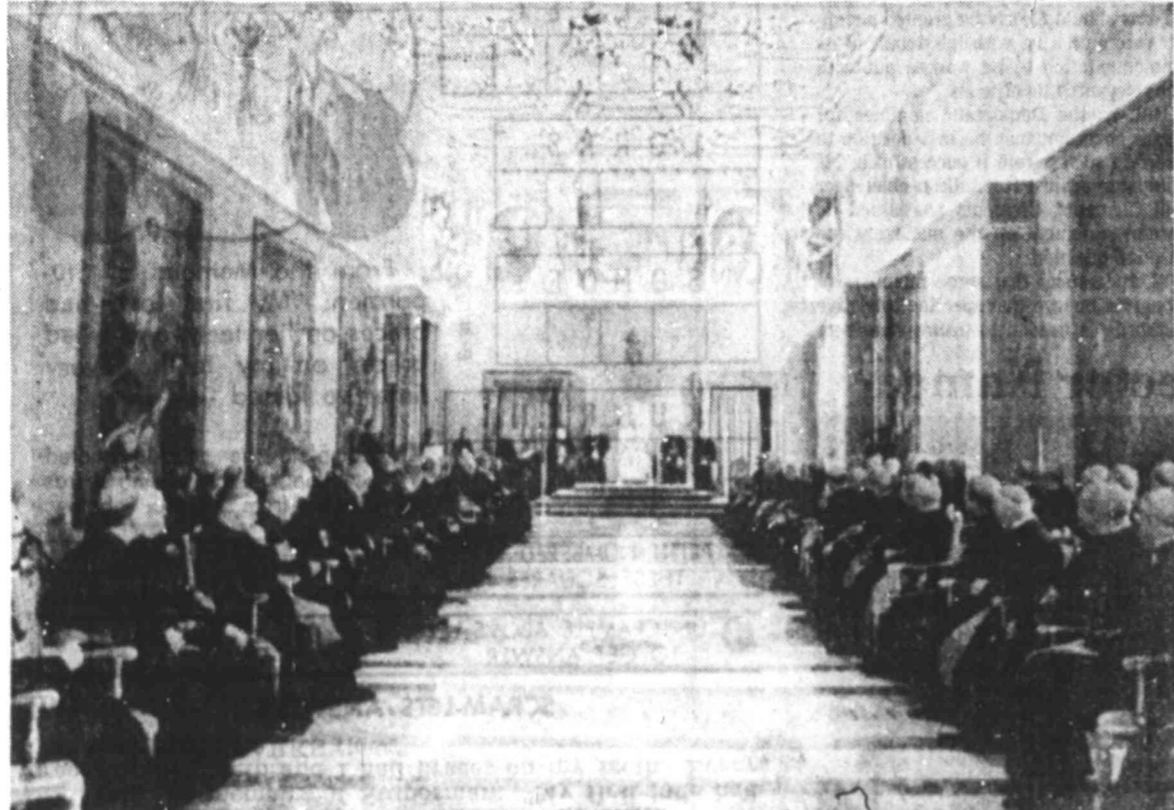

"I opened it and what was in there? A small way of the cross (on a leaflet). This is the road of the popes. But in the way of the cross one of the characters is also Simon of Cyrene. I hope my brethren cardinals will help this poor Christ, vicar of Christ, to carry the cross with their collaboration."

The new pope said that his predecessor, Paul VI, once reproached him for coming too seldom to meet him at the Vatican.

"I told him, 'I'm very busy in Venice. Besides, I believe Your Holiness has plenty of troubles. I, thanks to God, don't have many. Therefore, I don't feel like adding afflictions to one who already is afflicted.'"

Then, addressing the cardinals, John Paul said, "But you, you should not go the way I did. The bishops outside Rome, I believe that I need them greatly, too."

Today the pope will meet the diplomatic corps and on Friday he is scheduled to receive journalists and photographers who covered his election. He will be formally installed in a Mass Sunday consecrating his pontificate.

Congressmen's Votes On Major Issues Noted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes August 10 through August 16.

HOUSE

ERA EXTENSION Voted, 233 for and 189 against, to extend by 39 months the deadline for states to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment. The current deadline of March 22, 1979 would be extended to June 30, 1982. The proposed constitutional amendment has been ratified by 35 states. Three more must ratify it before it becomes part of the U.S. Constitution. The Senate has not acted on the resolution (HJ Res 638) to extend the deadline and there is doubt that a final Senate vote will occur this year.

Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Tex., a supporter, said: "Women have been going through the agony and ecstasy all their lives, and we will continue to do so until the words 'equal rights under the law shall not be denied because of sex' are part of the Constitution. We shall continue unrelentingly as long as is necessary." Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., an opponent, said: "Any retroactive change in the time frame because the desired result has not been achieved violates the solemn spirit with which any constitutional amendment should be approached. . . . Altering the ratification process because of pressure from the groups involved is a step I am wary of taking."

Members voting "yea" favored extending the time for ratifying the ERA. Reps. Charles Wilson, D-2, Jim Mattox, D-5, James Wright, D-12, John Young, D-14, Richard White, D-16, Barbara Jordan, D-18, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Robert Krueger, D-21, Bob Gammage, D-22, and Dale Milford, D-24, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Bill Archer, R-7, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, W. R. Poage, D-11, Jack Hightower, D-13, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Omar Burleson, D-17, George Mahon, D-19, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "nay." Reps. Manuel Lujan, R-1, and Harold Runnels, D-2, voted "nay."

Rep. Olin Teague, D-6, did not vote.

GOP TAX CUT Rejected, 177 for and 240 against, a proposal to reduce individual federal income tax rates across-the-board by about 33 per cent over the next three years. The measure, known as Kemp-Roth for its co-sponsors, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-NY, and Sen. William Roth, R-Del., is becoming a major campaign issue for the Republican Party. The vote, therefore, provided a clear choice between Democratic Party and GOP approaches to federal taxation.

The vote rejected a motion to send a tax bill back to the Ways and Means Committee with instructions that the committee report it back to the House with Kemp-Roth in it.

Kemp, a supporter, said the proposal would give Americans "incentive to work, save, invest, and take economic risks." He said that the massive tax cut "will expand the total amount of economic activity, expand the total tax base . . . providing additional revenues which would offset federal budget deficits."

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., an opponent, called Kemp-Roth "a glittering bauble of opportunism" that is "the irresponsible way to cut taxes . . . simply to slash them indiscriminately and without regard for the effect it will have on spiraling deficits and rampaging inflation."

Members voting "yea" favored Kemp-Roth. Collins, Archer, de la Garza and Gammage voted "yea." Lujan and Runnels voted "yea." Hall, Wilson, Roberts, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Poage, Wright, Hightower, Young, White, Burleson, Jordan, Mahon, Gonzalez, Krueger and Kazen voted "nay."

Teague and Milford did not vote.

BUDGET CUT Defeated, 155 for and 241 against, an amendment to cut fiscal 1979 spending by one per cent (about $5.6 billion) across-the-board in all government programs and departments. The measure was offered to the congressional budget resolution (H Con Res 683) setting overall ceilings and targets for government revenues and expenditures. The resolution sets a maximum federal budget of $561 billion in the fiscal year that begins October 1.

Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Tex., a supporter, said the amendment "may be the very best way to show that we are trying to tighten our belts" and is "perhaps the best, if not the last, chance today for us to make a meaningful cut in the overall budget deficit."

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., an opponent, said: "I have no objection to people coming in here and cutting specific programs, but this across-the-board, one per cent business is I think undignified. I think it is unreflective of the courage and business sense I know is in this House and I don't think we ought to do it."

Members voting "yea" favored the one per cent cut in federal spending. Hall, Collins, Mattox, Archer, Pickle, de la Garza and Gammage voted "yea." Lujan voted "yea." Wilson, Roberts, Eckhardt, Brooks, Poage, Wright, Burleson, Jordan, Mahon, Gonzalez, Krueger, Kazen and Millford voted "nay." Runnels voted "nay." Teague and Young did not vote.

Houston Workers Get Pay Hikes

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston City Council Wednesday gave tentative approval to 7 per cent pay raises for 15,000 city workers at a cost of $20 million annually.

The salary hikes will come before the council again next week for a final vote. Officials of the Houston Police Officers Association and the Firefighters Association said the increases actually are no more than cost-of-living boosts that were not received during the past several years.

Under the proposal, salaries for probationary police officers and firefighters will go from $540 bi-weekly to $572.40. Regular police officers and firemen will receive $709.30 bi-weekly, compared to the current pay of $656.20.

Other city workers will get a flat 7 per cent hike. Excluded from the increases were department chiefs and those who had received merit pay raises last week.

Members voting "yea" favored the one per cent cut in federal spending. Hall, Collins, Mattox, Archer, Pickle, de la Garza and Gammage voted "yea." Lujan voted "yea." Wilson, Roberts, Eckhardt, Brooks, Poage, Wright, Hightower, White, Burleson, Jordan, Mahon, Gonzalez, Krueger, Kazen and Millford voted "nay." Runnels voted "nay." Teague and Young did not vote.

SENATE

TUITION TAX CREDITS Passed, 65 for and 27 against, a bill allowing parents a tax credit of 50 percent of tuition and fees for each child in college or post-secondary vocational school, up to a maximum of $250 per student. The credit is retroactive to August 1, 1978, and will be increased to $500 per student on October 1, 1978, and will be increased to $500 per student on October 1, 1980. The bill (HR 12050) was set to conference with the House.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., a supporter, said: "The tuition tax credit says to the American taxpayer, 'Yes, we know you struggle for your children. We recognize your efforts. I think it is time to do something about it. Let us pass this bill.'" Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., an opponent, said: "We have to remember that college education is still a personal responsibility. . . . We should also remember that going to college is a highly profitable investment."

Senators voting "yea" favored the tuition tax credit. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, and John Tower, R, voted "yea."

Sens. Harrison Schmitt, R, and Peter Domenici, R, voted "yea."

TUITION TAX CREDITS Approved, 56 for and 41 against, an amendment excluding parochial and private elementary and secondary school students from the bill providing tuition tax credits. The bill (HR 12050) was later passed and sent to conference with the House (see vote above). This amendment limited the tax

Airline Snares High Ratings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delta Airlines captured first place for consumer satisfaction in June with the lowest complaint percentage of the nation's major domestic carriers.

The Civil Aeronautics Board reported that it received 1.92 complaints per 100,000 Delta passengers. Over-all, the CAB reported that complaints increased in June with fare problems leading the way. The agency said it received 1,852 complaints in June, 17 per cent more than in May and a whopping 76 percent higher than in June of 1977.

For the first six months of 1978 the board received 11,433 complaints involving airlines, 40 percent above the 8,175 complaints received in the first six months of last year.

Behind Delta, Hawaiian Airlines placed second with 2.03 consumer complaints per 100,000 riders, and its neighbor, Aloha, ranked third at 2.39 complaints.

Rounding out the top five were National Airlines at 4.28 and Ozark at 4.57 complaints per 100,000 passengers.

credit to college and post-secondary vocational schooling. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-No., a supporter, said tax credits for parochial school students violated "the constitutional requirement of separation of church and state."

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., an opponent of the amendment, said that " . . . what the founders of this country intended, at least as evidenced by their practice, was never to preclude the use of public funds to be given to churches to run schools for primary and secondary children."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to tax credits for private and parochial school education. Bentsen voted "yea." Tower voted "nay." Domenici voted "yea." Schmitt voted "nay."

CONGRESSMEN FOR D.C.? Agreed, 71 for and 22 against, to debate a proposed constitutional amendment (HJ Res 554) to give the District of Columbia two senators and one or more representatives in Congress. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a supporter, said: "We cannot talk about human rights to others in the world until we here at home can show we are recognizing basic human rights. One of America's fundamental rights is the right to participate in a democracy. Residents of the District are being denied that

Mother Drives Getaway Car

WINDSOR LOCKS, Conn. (AP) — A mother unwittingly drove the getaway car for her 17-year-old son in a bank robbery, police said Tuesday. Officials gave this account:

When Steven M. Cristelli asked his mother to drive him to a branch of the Suffolk Savings Bank on Old County Road on Monday morning, he said he wanted to withdraw money to buy a car. "She had no knowledge of what was happening, as far as we know," said police Detective John Murphy.

Cristelli handed a teller a withdrawal slip with a note on the back demanding money. When he came out, his mother drove him away as a teller and other witnesses got the license plate numbers of the family car.

Police later surrounded the blue luxury car but after questioning the boy and his mother they decided the two were not connected with the robbery and let them go. Murphy said the officers who stopped the car had believed they were looking for two men.

Further investigation led police and FBI agents to the Cristelli house. Steven was taken into custody and $500 taken in the robbery was recovered, officials said.

Former Webb Housing To Be Sold

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The Capehart housing area, consisting of 460 homes, will be offered for sale soon by the General Services Administration.

The houses, consisting of four-, three- and two-bedroom units, formerly was occupied by Webb Air Force Base personnel. The base was closed by the Department of Defense earlier this year.

Bids will be accepted on the entire addition, rather than on an individual basis, starting Friday and will be opened Sept. 1.

Harry Nagel, city manager, said the city would enter no bid on the property.

"We're not going into the housing business," Nagel said Wednesday, "we do not want a local housing authority and we have no desire to obtain the housing portion of the base. Just the upkeep is tremendously expensive."

"Also, we have all we can handle with the industrial portion of the base."

Fears had been expressed that the federal government's decision to sell the property could depress the housing market here. However, a severe shortage in rental housing has existed here for a long time, and Nagel predicted there would be a market for that type housing.

Nagel added, "The way things are looking now, the Big Spring Industrial Park is going to be completely filled by next year, and the release of the homes would be absolutely necessary to obtain new industry."

"Industry is not going to come into a community where there are no houses," Nagel said.

Upon completion of his training, Clanton said he will be assigned temporarily to Austin.

Schoolboard Sets Policies

By A-J Correspondent

SUNDOWN — Schoolboard trustees approved a number of items recently ranging from a new breakfast program to the issuance of free passes to senior citizens for all Sundown athletic events.

The school system's new breakfast program, mandated by the federal government, will kick off at 7:45 a.m. Friday and last until 8:15 a.m.

School will begin at 8:20 a.m. and kindergarten and first grade pupils will be dismissed at 2:30 p.m. Second and third-graders will leave at 2:35 p.m. and all other students will be dismissed at 3:40 p.m.

At the Tuesday night meeting, trustees approved the elementary wing of the new school which is still under construction. Students will use that wing until the entire school is completed in December.

Transfer applications from seven students who wish to enter the Sundown school district were approved, as was the policy to allow members of the marching band to receive one P.E. credit per semester for that activity. Trustees voted to allow only one such substitute credit per semester per student.

Convicted Rapist Gets 10 Years

By FRANK PATRICK

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Convicted rapist Dennis Keith Jackson was assessed a 10-year prison term Wednesday by a jury that deliberated more than four hours before reaching the punishment verdict.

Jackson, a 19-year-old who reportedly made an IQ score of 145 during psychological testing, had been found guilty Tuesday of the aggravated rape of a 28-year-old West Lubbock woman inside her apartment July 1.

The defendant has three other charges pending against him. He was charged last month with sexual abuse as the result of an alleged attack on a 22-year-old school teacher June 10.

Records show he was indicted Aug. 3, 1977, for burglary of a habitation. An attempted rape indictment was returned against him Sept. 8, 1977.

During the trial which ended Wednesday, the complainant said she had been attacked about mid-afternoon inside her residence.

She told the 10-woman, two-man jury in Judge Robert C. Wright's 137th District Court that the assailant, masked with a pair of panty hose, had held a knife to her neck and threatened to kill her unless she submitted.

Testimony indicated that Jackson was arrested at his 2002 5th St. residence after the victim discovered a billfold with identification papers inside it on the floor of her apartment near a living room couch.

The defense contended during the trial that Jackson should be found not guilty by reason of insanity, basing the contention on testimony from Dr. William Gordon, a neurologist.

Gordon testified he had examined the defendant in December, 1977, and believed Jackson is suffering from a condition known as psycho-motor seizure.

The state had earlier elicited testimony from Dr. Preston Shaw, a psychiatrist, who said in his opinion Jackson was an anti-social personality but did not suffer from the seizure syndrome.

Jackson had never been convicted of a felony offense, and court-appointed defense attorney George Thompson Wednesday requested probation.

"I don't believe there is one of you who doesn't believe we have a young man who is infirm of mind," he told jurors.

In an impassioned plea, Thompson cited his client's age and called the jury Jackson's only "hope," only "future" and only "tomorrow."

"We just want a little light at the end of a long, dark uphill tunnel," Thompson said.

Prosecutor Jim Darnell asked the panel to assess a punishment of from 40 to 60 years. "There is no reason we should force (the complainant) or any other woman in Lubbock County to face that again," he said.

Coast Guard Women Set For Duties Afloat

WASHINGTON (AP) — More women will be serving at sea and handling tougher assignments under a new policy announced Wednesday by the Coast Guard.

Coast Guard Commandant John B. Hayes said the service is removing restrictions based solely on sex in the training, assignment and career opportunities of its personnel.

Only 24 of 707 Coast Guard women now are on sea duty, but Hayes said many more are being assigned to cutters and other vessels.

Under the policy, all women graduates of the Coast Guard Academy, like the men, will be assigned to sea duty for their initial tours as commissioned officers, and mixed-sex crews may now be assigned to any unit, afloat or ashore, which can provide reasonable privacy for each sex in berthing and personal hygiene.

"Of course there are anatomical differences which cannot be ignored, but these can be accommodated as incidental matters, in areas such as medical support, and not allowed to override the really important factors," Hayes said.

Women now can train for ratings from which they have been excluded, such as fire control technician, gunners mate and sonar technician.

Numerical ceilings based on sex have been removed from recruiting quotas, and all officer career fields and all enlisted ratings will be open to both men and women.

Coast Guard women first went to sea last year, but until now they have been limited to duty aboard two large cutters. Twelve women serve on each vessel.

In July, a federal judge in Washington ruled that the Navy cannot bar women from serving aboard any of its ships only because they are women.

But U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica left it to the Navy to decide whether "women members should be excluded from shipboard combat assignments...or for that matter from all shipboard duties until such time as the vessels are properly equipped and crew members properly trained to accommodate their female counterparts."

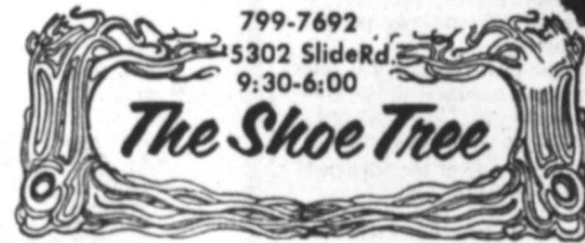

The Coast Guard is part of the Transportation Department.

Applicants Crowd Vet Schools

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Got a sick feline, canine, equine or bovine? Don't fret. Call a vet. He, or she, is probably just around the corner. And more are coming, trying to crowd into the nation's veterinary schools in record numbers.

Applications are so bountiful that only one of every five men and women who apply for acceptance into one of the nation's 22 vet colleges is ever accepted.

Dean George Shelton of Texas A.M. University's College of Veterinary Medicine says he isn't sure why veterinary medicine has suddenly become so popular.

"It may be because veterinary medicine provides a way to become your own boss — a sort of independence," Shelton said. "Or, it may be prestige, as well as being a profitable profession."

Whatever motivates a desire to administer to animals, people are finding their toughest hurdle is gaining admission into a veterinary school.

With about 600 applicants vying for the 138 openings each fall at A.M., Shelton said the pressure is sometimes on him to accept a favorite son or daughter who may not be one of the more qualified applicants.

"We realize our system for acceptance is tough and competition among applicants is tougher," Shelton said. "We feel that academics, aptitude scores, personal reference letters and interviews are the most reliable criteria for acceptance of a young man or woman to veterinary medicine."

Dr. Mike Tatum, chairman of the selection committee, said grades aren't everything in gaining entry to veterinary school.

"The computer selects 350 for interviews by our committee," Tatum said. "We can't control the computer. Our toughest job is selecting the best-rounded 138 from so many highly qualified applicants."

The grade point average for this fall's veterinary class at A.M. is 3.49 out of a possible 4.0.

Dr. William Bay, associate dean, said about 40 percent of enrollment in veterinary schools is women, compared with 25 percent in medical schools.

Lindsey Larberg, 23, of Houston, said she got into veterinary school because she felt like she would enjoy the work and was not cut out to be a housewife.

"I started with the idea of an equine practice, but being a woman, I realize I would be somewhat limited," she said. "Now I feel I'd like to try exotics and probably will end up with a practice."

Shelton said a graduating veterinarian has a minimum of five years in college, but many graduate with seven years or more. Three years cost a minimum of $10,000.

He said the state picks up the tab for about 250,000 to train a veterinarian.

Big Spring Gets New Ambulance

A-J Correspondent

BIG SPRING — A new ambulance service, owned by a husband-wife team from Dallas, will begin operations in the Big Spring area Sept. 15.

A contract with the Big Spring Ambulance Service, to be operated by Wayne and Diane Kohlenberg, Tuesday was unanimously approved by the city council and Howard County Commissioners.

Kohlenberg proposed a contract which, according to city manager Harry Nagel, will cost the city less than the present contract does. The new ambulance service owner says he plans to revive a diligent collection of fees rather than depend on a monthly subsidy from the city and county.

The contract provides for subsidy by the governing bodies only on a per-run basis, with city runs costing $15 each and county runs $18.50.

"The reason I computed the proposals for subsidy per run instead of by the month is that I am against big money subsidies. The ambulance business is a private business just like any other, not unlike a restaurant," Kohlenberg said.

"The problem is collecting and there's a right way and a wrong way to do it. The city shouldn't have to provide a profit for an ambulance company just because it can't collect," he added.

The contract runs only 90 days and will be renewed at the option of either the Kohlenbergs or the city-county officials after Dec. 15.

The Kohlenbergs, who have never run their own ambulance service before but who have worked for others in the business, are negotiating with Alert Ambulance owner L.A. "Red" Hiltbrunner for either the purchase or lease of his ambulance equipment.

Oil Firm Discussing Chinese Crude Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gulf Oil Corp. and Chinese officials are discussing possible Chinese sale of crude oil in the American market, according to a petroleum industry official.

Because of high transportation costs and unanswered questions about the quality and quantity of Chinese oil, no deal is imminent, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

"There's nothing going on of a concrete nature," the official said. "It's not economic."

Shell Would Buy Hobbs Waste Water

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS — The Shell Oil Co. has proposed to buy 50,000 barrels of filtered waste water per day from the City of Hobbs for its water injection system for oil recovery. The system is situated north of the city.

If okayed by the Hobbs City Commission at its Sept. 7 meeting, a contract between the city and Shell would call for a charge of 1 1/2 cents per barrel for the water.

The project would bring in $750 per day for the city beginning in the summer of 1979, Weldon Moore, production foreman for Shell, said.

Initially Shell will need 50,000 barrels per day, but as water injection progresses less water will be needed, he added.

nomical at today's prices to import Chinese crude into the U.S. The price probably would be higher than worldwide prices (currently about $14 a barrel).

But the official would not rule out purchases in the future. And neither would Gulf.

Gulf spokesman Tom Walker, reached Tuesday in Pittsburgh, said in a telephone interview: "Although the company is not doing anything today to import Chinese crude into the U.S. market, it is a buyer and seller of crude in the international market, and the situation could change."

The report of discussions came during a tour of Europe and the Near East by Chinese Chairman Hua Kuo-feng. His visits to Romania and Iran, two major oil centers, pointed up China's desire to further develop its oil industry.

China is on a crash industrial and technological expansion program to bring the country into the ranks of the industrial world by the year 2,000.

The Washington Post, citing a report in Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, said Wednesday the Chinese have traded oil to an American auto company. The Post said the unidentified auto firm has since offered the oil to refiners.

Interior Department figures show China's crude petroleum production increased by 13 percent from 1975 to 1976 — from 571.6 million barrels a year to 645.9 million barrels. A barrel is 42 gallons.

Korchnoi Threatens To Quit Chess Tourney

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi threatened to quit the world chess championship match against Anatoly Karpov Wednesday, claiming a Soviet parapsychologist has been trying to hypnotize him and has turned titleholder Karpov into a "chess robot."

Korchnoi demanded that Dr. Vladimir Zoukhar be barred from the playing area and a one-way mirror be installed between the players and spectators.

His threat threw the fate of the 18th game into question. Korchnoi asked that the game be postponed from Tuesday to Thursday after Karpov took a 4-1 edge in the match. On Monday, he came to Manila.

"I don't know who I am playing against ... He (Karpov) is not a chess player, he is a chess robot wound by Zoukhar. It's not his own strength, he plays with the strength of will of Zoukhar," Korchnoi said.

The 27-year-old Karpov, who won the world title by default from Bobby Fischer in 1975, is two victories away from winning the match and a $350,000 winner's purse. The loser gets $200,000. Draws do not count. The series began July 18.

"If the tournament jury doesn't change anything, why should I go back?" Korchnoi said at a press conference. "Under present conditions, I can't play."

The 47-year-old challenger demanded that a mirror be installed in the playing hall in the mountain resort city of Baguio, 125 miles northeast of here, to safeguard against a possible replacement for Zoukhar.

Korchnoi said he thought of the mirror after consulting Wednesday morning with the Rev. Jaime Bulatao, a psychologist at the Jesuit Ateneo University.

Korchnoi said Karpov would not like the idea of playing behind closed doors because it would mean "losing visual contact" with Zoukhar.

Korchnoi's fourth defeat began with an outburst against Zoukhar, whom the defector contends has been trying to disturb his concentration since the beginning of the tournament. Korchnoi said Zoukhar was disturbing him by sitting too close, so organizers had the first six rows cleared.

The next day match organizer Florencio Campomanes said any more such complaints would be rejected.

Korchnoi, who defected from the Soviet Union in 1976, accused tournament officials of being in the grip of a "Soviet chess machine."

"Because of its non-neutrality, the jury always takes the Soviet side, and my requests, no matter how right, are always described as rubbish," Korchnoi said.

Two hours after Korchnoi made his demands, his chief second, Raymond Keene of England, withdrew a formal protest in Baguio submitted by Korchnoi over Zoukhar's presence.

Keene presented a letter to the jury signed by Korchnoi saying he was empowered to act as Korchnoi's representative in all negotiations.

He then announced that he was replacing Korchnoi's chief negotiator, Petra Leeuwerick, and that Korchnoi would play Thursday's game. He said the match "will continue to a normal and dignified conclusion."

However, Keene told the Associated Press in a long-distance telephone interview he had no idea if Korchnoi had agreed to play or even if the challenger was returning to Baguio.

Mrs. Leeuwerick said she and Korchnoi were scheduled to return to Baguio Thursday but replied "no comment" when asked if Korchnoi would play. She also said Keene's post was only temporary because she had traveled to Manila with Korchnoi.

Tournament organizer Florencio Campomanes, a jury member, described Korchnoi's threat to quit the tournament as "unofficial and mere rumor."

"As far as jury transactions are concerned, statements other than those coming from Keene himself are only rumors unless they are put officially in writing," he said.

Specialist To Assume Tech Post

Dr. Leon L. Hopkins, whose teaching, research and administrative background end him a global perspective of the problem of feeding the world, has been named chairman of the Department of Food and Nutrition at Texas Tech University.

Home Economics Dean Donald S. Longworth announced his appointment and assumption of duties with the department, housed in the new Home Economics Annex.

With the recent move into new facilities and appointment of the new chairman, the department will expand its curriculum and research. This expansion will entail close cooperation with many other colleges and departments of the university, Hopkins said. There will be particularly close association with the colleges of Agricultural Science, Business Administration and Arts and Sciences and School of Medicine.

"Dr. Hopkins brings many years of teaching, administration and research into the areas of human and animal nutrition to the department," Longworth said. "He will make a remarkable contribution to our college and, we believe, to the entire university."

During the past three years Hopkins has headed the Animal Production and Health Section of the International Atomic Energy Agency, United Nations. From 1969-75 he served with Agricultural Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture as assistant to the director of the Human Nutrition Research Division and as assistant director, Colorado-Wyoming Area. From 1966-69 he was chief of the Micronutrient Research Branch of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Hopkins has been actively engaged in research for over 20 years and for 12 years was responsible for the research activity of other scientists at the Ph.D. level.

Probably most significant in his research were reports indicating the nutritional essentiality of vanadium in animals and chromium in humans. This work has since been substantiated by other groups of investigators.

A native of Colorado, Hopkins received the B.S. degree in 1957 and M.S. in 1959 from Colorado State University and a Ph.D. in nutrition-biochemistry from the University of Wisconsin in 1962.

Chemical Spill Brings Evil Days For Working Man

POINT PLEASANT, W.Va. (AP) — Until six months ago, Junior Gillespie was so strong that his friends called him "The Mobile Crane."

"I could pick up a motor and walk away with it," Gillespie recalled during an interview at his riverside home. "Why, I would climb 17 stories four and five times a day to repair the elevators at the plant."

But no more.

Although he's in the prime of life and still has a powerful body, the 28-year-old, 240-pounder is only a shadow of the man he was six months ago. Now, any exertion causes him to gasp for breath. He is frequently besieged by recurring headaches and severe bouts of vomiting. And his legs buckle without warning.

What's more, Junior Gillespie is a worried man. He's afraid his body soon will be riddled with cancer.

Gillespie's problems began without warning last Jan. 23, the day eight cars of a Chessie System train derailed about two blocks from his home, spilling 20,000 gallons of epichlorohydrin — a chemical so deadly that exposure can cause lasting damage, even cancer, to a person's lungs, testes, kidney, liver and other organs.

But Gillespie had no way of knowing that when he awoke that January morning. All he knew at that time was that because of the derailment he couldn't get across the tracks to go to his job at the Philip Sporn Generating Plant, where he worked as a master electrician.

"A neighbor called me and said the crossing was blocked," he recalled. "Being a volunteer fireman, I turned on my CB scanner and immediately called the fire department. I was told to take my van down to the derailment and block the street to keep traffic away from the spill. At that time, they didn't know what they were dealing with."

Gillespie did as he was told. And as he neared the derailment site, he was greeted by an odor reminiscent of garlic.

"A railroad worker was at the scene when I got there," he said. "We sat in my van for a while then went down to the track and tried to break loose an air brake on one of the railroad cars. It was frozen solid."

Gillespie said he was helping free the frozen brake when he looked up and saw three children heading toward the spilled chemical, which had seeped beneath the blanket of snow that covered the ground.

"I ran across the area, right through the stuff, and chased the kids away," he said. "And on the way back across, my eyes started burning and my head started to hurt."

About that time, he said, the authorities learned what had been spilled. State Police Supt. Harley Mooney, who was en route to the scene from Charleston, ordered that the area be evacuated.

"I stayed around and helped notify the people in the area that they'd have to leave their homes," Gillespie said. "Then I went down to the fire station. I wasn't there very long, though, before I was doubled over by pain in my chest and stomach. And I was vomiting my head off."

Gillespie was rushed to the hospital, where he remained for the next 11 days. "I went back five or six times a week for the next six weeks or so after that," he added. "But I never was the same. My body broke out in sores and I kept vomiting and getting headaches."

Mooney remembers the day — and week — that Gillespie's life changed so drastically. It was a week before the spill site could be dug up and before Chessie officials could find a dumping ground that would accept the dangerous cargo.

The state police superintendent told an investigating committee he was concerned that dangerous chemicals and explosives are transported though the state each day, by road and rail. He said his agency had no way of keeping track of potentially dangerous shipments.

"I got my master electrician's certificate last fall, just a few weeks before the spill," Gillespie said. "But I haven't worked since that day I came into contact with that chemical and I figure I'll lose about $30,000 this year, when you consider what my salary would have been."

Gillespie said he is getting $800 a month in disability payments from his company. But he said he's just been getting the disability check for only two months.

"Before that, I didn't get anything," he said. "If it hadn't been for my bank carrying my notes for me, I would have lost my house and car by now. The fellows at the plant took up a collection and paid my electric bill one month but my gas is still shut off and I owe about $3,000 in hospital bills."

Gillespie said the city paid $1,000 of his medical bills.

"That was the limit of their insurance," he said. "Since then, I've become a non-person at City Hall. Why, one councilman even accused me, in my face, of trying to rip off the railroad."

He paused, gasping for breath. "Believe me, I'm not faking. I wish I was faking. When I look ahead and think about what might happen, I get the creeps."

Clean Air Act's Legal Constraints Pondered At Tech

To escape a polluted environment people increasingly move into rural and wilderness areas without changing their basic lifestyles. Cars, parking facilities, shopping centers and other features soon start to cause the same problems people fled from. Can our natural regions be preserved?

At Texas Tech this question is being examined from a judicial perspective. Dr. Bruce M. Kramer, associate professor at the School of Law, is exploring legal constraints imposed by Congress and the courts on licensing, operation and construction of recreation-related development on wildlands under National Service jurisdiction.

The Eisenhower Consortium, a group of Western colleges and universities with headquarters in Fort Collins, Colo., has funded this project with $8,987. Its two specific objectives are to determine legal constraints on recreation-related developments in wildlands imposed by the Federal Clean Air Act and any state air quality program and to analyze judicial approaches to reviewing air quality standards in order to give the Forest Service clear guidelines for decision-making.

Kramer's research will continue through December 1979.

School Districts Expected To Appeal Appraisals

AUSTIN (AP) — A third of Texas school districts will be so unhappy with new estimates of their property values — crucial to state aid — that they will appeal, an official estimated Wednesday.

Kenneth Graeber, an associate director of the School Tax Assessment Practices Board, told the board he expects 300 to 350 of the 1,080 districts to appeal.

Board director Walt Parker will give district-by-district value estimates, including intangible property for the first time, to the Texas Education Agency on Friday.

"The appeals, I assume, will start arriving shortly after the figures are released," Graeber told the board.

The higher a district's values relative to other districts, the less state aid it will get in the 1979-80 school year, unless the Legislature again changes the system.

Figures used by the 1977 Legislature came from the Governor's Office of Education Resources (GOER), based on 1975 values.

"Percentagewise, ours will be considerably higher than the GOER figures, taking into account that we have had inflation. Inflation has gone at 12 percent a year, and I feel sure this will reflect that," Parker said.

GOER estimated the market value of all Texas real estate at $232.6 billion. Sources indicate the board figures, based on 1977 tax rolls, will total about $450 billion, including approximately $150 billion for intangibles and household goods.

"Every urban district is going to scream bloody murder about the intangibles," said one source.

Mike Moeller, head of Texans for Equitable Taxation, raised the possibility that counting intangibles — such as bank accounts, stocks and bonds — would cost urban districts all their state aid.

"What the figures are going to do is show your urban school districts as budget-balanced districts," Moeller said.

Budget-balanced districts are considered so rich they need no help from the state except for per capita payments mandated by the Texas Constitution from the Available School Fund.

Intangibles were estimated using Internal Revenue Service figures on income in each county from dividends.

"It will be substantial," Parker said.

The board appointed two three-member panels to hear appeals from school districts and recommend changes in values, if any, to the board. The panel members, all experienced in property assessment, Julius "Judy" Truelson, Fort Worth; Lonnie Jones of Texas A&M; W.J. Dodd, Huntsville; Luther Jasper, Edinburg; Gail Jackson, Spring Branch school district; and J.O. Burnett, Brownfield.

Truelson and Jones will chair the panels.

"We are only going to treat these people (school districts) the way they treat the taxpayers when they appeal their verdicts," said Parker.

Woman Given Death In Kill-For-Hire Case

WHARTON (AP) — Mary Lou Anderson, labeled by a prosecuting attorney as a "prostitute for most of her life," is the first woman in 17 years to face the death penalty in Texas.

The 35-year-old Lake Charles, La., woman was convicted Tuesday of capital murder in the kill-for-hire slaying of her father. A few hours later the state court jury of nine men and three women sentenced her to die by injection.

The last woman sentenced to death was Carolyn Ann Lima, convicted in 1961 of the murder of Houston real estate salesman Fred Tones. The conviction was overturned four hours before she was to die. Her sentence later was reduced to 15 years.

Keith Wall, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections, said two other women on death row had their sentences reduced to life in prison.

Wall said, "There may have been some women executed back when counties carried out death sentences, but none since the state took over in 1923."

A check of historical records indicates only one woman was executed in the state. She was Chipita Rodriguez, hanged Nov. 13, 1863, in San Patricio for killing a traveling salesman during a robbery.

Miss Anderson was accused of hiring Faryl Granger, 29, of Lafayette, La., to kill her father so she could collect a $5,000 insurance policy that contained a double indemnity clause.

Fort Bend County Attorney Bill Meitzen said Miss Anderson, "who has been a prostitute most of her life," needed the money to make restitution on $6,000 in bad checks and thus avoid a jail sentence.

Granger is to stand trial later on capital murder charges.

The bodies of Steve and Margie Anderson were found in their Sugar Land home Jan. 3. Anderson had been shot three times in the head at close range. His wife, Miss Anderson's stepmother, was shot five times in the head.

The trial was moved to Wharton on a

Harris Funds For Elderly May Be Lost

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County may lose $1 million in federal funds allocated to feed the elderly unless changes are made soon to improve the meals.

Alex Guerra, a spokesman for the Governor's Committee on Aging, said many complaints had been received from the state's most populous county that the food served the elderly is not up to federal standards, including "reports of rotten fruit and bloody chicken."

Guerra also said there had been complaints that "the quantities of food were not as large as required and that foods often are served at improper temperatures."

Roy Ybarra, owner of a Pasadena catering service that provides the meals for the elderly, said Wednesday, "everything is getting blown out of proportion. With 2,400 meals a day we cannot please everybody."

Guerra said the state committee is concerned that the federal grant pays $180,000 a year for a local administrative staff of 10 persons that apparently is not doing its job.

E.F. Green, local project director, said, "somebody is putting politics in it to give others the opportunity to take over."

Green earlier this month fired Margaret Sharp as the project's top nutritionist because "she developed a sense of priorities not conducive to her well-being."

Guerra said Mrs. Sharp had cooperated with a state investigation of the project last March and April.

Mrs. Sharp said her job was to make sure the food supplier met federal guidelines and "we had a number of problems, including insufficient quantities of food and food up and down in quality."

PARENTAL MALPRACTICE
BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A Boulder couple, sued by their son for parental malpractice, has filed a motion in Boulder District Court asking that the suit be dismissed. Tom Hansen, 24, filed suit in April, charging that his parents, Richard and Shirley Hansen, had inflicted him with "intentional emotional distress." He asked $350,000 in damages. The parents' motion argues that the suit does not meet a requirement of Colorado law that the alleged misconduct by the parents be "willful and wanton." change of venue because of publicity given the case.

Miss Anderson testified she feared for her own life and that of her 15-year-old son if she crossed Granger, and that she was not in the home at the time of the shootings.

Ron Taylor, a state prison system spokesman, said Miss Anderson will be housed at the Goree unit for women and not on regular death row, where there are now 94 men.

Taylor said, "She will be in a separate area set aside as death row. She will sleep, exercise, shower and be fed in the area. It's not a solitary situation, just a segregation. She will be allowed access to reading matter, smoking materials and so on. She just won't be allowed to mix and mingle with the general prison population."

Tale Of Rape, Violence Unfolds Before Jury

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

An Abilene teenager testified Wednesday she was raped and a male friend shot in the back of the head during what began as a post-midnight trip to get some marijuana, but ended as a journey into fear.

The tale of terror was unfolded by the teenaged girl and her friend — who said he was left legally blind as a result of the Aug. 14, 1977, incident—before jurors and spectators in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court.

On trial for aggravated rape in the case is William Hoyt Goolsby, 20.

The girl said she was driving on FM 2841 east of the Amarillo Highway, that a friend, James G. Gemberling, was beside her in the front seat and that Goolsby, who allegedly had offered to procure some marijuana, was in the rear when violence erupted.

"We were on a paved road, the radio was on and no one was talking," the witness said.

"I was driving and I heard a gunshot and I looked and Jim fell over on the dash towards the door, and I realized he had been shot."

She said she stopped the vehicle. "Bill said to me 'Tell him to get out of the car or I'll shoot him again,'" the witness, 17 at the time of the alleged offense, recounted.

The teenager said Goolsby then reached and opened the door and pushed the wounded Gemberling out.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Cindy Miller asked if Gemberling, 19, did or said anything.

"He said 'Oh God, I'm dying' was the last I heard..." the witness trailed off.

She said Goolsby directed her to turn north on a lonely dirt road, made her stop the car and ordered her to get out.

"I thought he was going to shoot me, too," the witness, whose voice occasionally quavered as she gave testimony, said.

"He pointed the gun at my face and told me to remove my clothes."

The young woman said she obeyed orders. "I lay there and he had the gun in his right hand pointing at my head, and then he had sexual intercourse with me," she recounted.

But, the softspoken teenager testified, her ordeal was not yet over.

The witness said that after she was raped, Goolsby began beating her with the pistol. "He hit me in the face, around the eyes—he hit me 10 or so times," she said.

She said she eventually was knocked unconscious.

"When I woke up I was off the side of the road in tall grass." The complainant said she was dizzy, that she found her shirt and shorts but was unable to find her underwear.

She said she didn't want to put her shirt on, because her head was bleeding. Shielding her torso with the shirt, she said, she walked down the dirt road seeking help.

Goolsby, a strapping 6-footer with tightly curled blond hair, stared down at the counsel table during much of the testimony.

Gemberling, meanwhile, said he also had been wandering for aid after the shooting.

The witness, also of Abilene, indicated he did not realize until later that he had been shot.

"We were riding in the car and it was kind of quiet," he said.

"All of a sudden I was just thrown against the windshield and my ears were ringing and I couldn't hear anybody."

Gemberling indicated he had a recollection of being sick and thinking that he might feel better if he could get outside and walk around.

"The door opened and I was out on the pavement on the side of the road," he said.

Gemberling said he wandered around in a daze, discovering that his vision was impaired. He said he thought about hitchhiking but was scared someone would steal the $20 he had.

He said police finally drove up and identified themselves, and that he was taken to the hospital.

Gemberling entered the courtroom without aid, and walked without apparent hesitation. He testified, however, that he had been declared legally blind.

He said he was attending a special school for the blind in San Angelo.

Gemberling also testified that he still carries a bullet inside his head.

"There's a blind spot I have to constantly move my head to look around," he said. "I can't drive or read too well. I sometimes trip over things."

According to earlier testimony from the two witnesses, the pair had met Goolsby earlier at a local bar. The alleged rape victim said she had met the defendant before, possibly five or six times, describing him as a friendly acquaintance.

Gemberling said he had never met Goolsby before the episode in question.

After bar-hopping, the duo testified, they had left from a motel room to purchase some marijuana.

According to the testimony, Goolsby had agreed to procure a quantity of the drug for Gemberling.

The two witnesses said they had driven to Lubbock on the afternoon of Aug. 13 from Abilene, and were staying at a local motel. The two said they were friends, but did not have a sexual or romantic relationship.

On cross-examination, defense attorney John Montford brought out that Gemberling had brought some marijuana from Abilene with him.

Gemberling said he had consumed some drinks and smoked from one to three marijuana cigarettes during the 12 hours preceding the alleged rape-shooting, but said he was "high," not drunk.

Montford bore down on the testimony that Gemberling had wished to procure marijuana.

"The purpose of the trip to the county was to commit a felony, wasn't it?" he asked Gemberling agreed that was correct.

Testimony indicated that Gemberling and Goolsby had shared a cigarette in the motel room before leaving in the car sometime after 2 a.m.

"The fact is, the defendant on the evening in question was acting normally until he smoked marijuana you furnished," the defense attorney asked. Gemberling agreed.

Testimony in the trial was to resume today.

New Industry Displaces Florida Sponge Seekers

REMEMBERING BETTER TIMES — Greek sponge diver Nick Skellas sits on the bow of a tourist boat leaving the Tarpon Springs dock recently, and probably remembers the better days. Once nearly 200 boats set out to seek sponges; now about half dozen remain, and Skellas dives for tourist demonstrations. (AP Laserphoto)

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — From this old world fishing village huge fleets once set sail to comb the ocean floor for sponges as the unending whir of cutter's tools wafted across the river from bustling boat-building factories.

Today, the sponge boats which used to number nearly 200 have dwindled to about half a dozen, and the factories that are left turn out more pleasure craft than fishing vessels.

But this "Venice of the South" hasn't lost its Mediterranean charm, or its hope that one day there will be a return to the sea.

"I love the industry. I've been in it all my life. I want to keep it alive," says George Billiris, who's been running sponge boats for 30 years.

"Tarpon Springs is known all over for its sponges. It keeps together 50 tourist shops and all these restaurants. They succeed because of it. Here is a whole community that lives on the past laurels of the sponge industry," he says.

Tarpon Springs, a community of 15,000 on central Florida's Gulf Coast, was born at the turn of the century. Divers were brought from Greece to fish the Gulf for sponges.

It became a multimillion dollar business in the '30s, with 2,500 men at work. But it's had ups and downs since then.

The younger generation, discouraged by hard, dirty work, long weeks at sea, blight that depleted the harvest and synthetics that replace real sponges, turned to the land for a livelihood.

"We have found more life in the last three years out in the Gulf than in the past 25 years," says Billiris. "But we have today only about a half-dozen boats and no crews. The demand in this hemisphere is five times greater than the supply. And the supply is there."

Shrimpers have claimed the docks on the quiet Anclote River across from the sponge exchange and the curio shops. At one end, an old-time diver dresses in a heavy rubberized suit and bronze helmet for regular half-hour cruises on a genuine sponge boat for sight-seers.

Although American customs have changed their lives, Greek descendants have worked to preserve their heritage.

Their culture still centers around St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Cathedral, built to resemble St. Sophia's in Constantinople, and around tiny St. Michael's Shrine.

Two or three decades ago, half the population was of Greek background. Today, it's only about one-third, as newcomers and retirees move to the area at the rate of 3,000 a year. The children of Greek heritage still are taught to read, write and speak Greek.

Epiphany, a holy day in January, remains a high point of the year. On that day, an archbishop blesses the water and tosses a cross into a bayou for Greek youths to dive for and retrieve. Those who find it are said to enjoy good luck.

In good times, a diver earned $15,000 to $18,000 a year for about 120 days work.

"We'd sell to industry, window cleaners, painters, stables, lithographers. The U.S. Government used to buy about one-half million a year. Now they only buy about 20,000 pieces," says John Koure-metis, who came to Tarpon Springs in 1927.

"We used to sell about $60,000-$80,000 a year. Now it's about $10,000. There are no sponges no more. We don't have production. When you can make $6-10 per hour on land, you can't pay that kind of price to compete. I don't think we'll ever have the industry again like we used to."

Firing Furor Upsets Official

WASHINGTON (AP) — GSA Administrator Jay Solomon has decided that once is sometimes enough.

At his news conference Wednesday, Solomon said future dismissals of employees of the General Services Administration will not be handled by him, but by subordinates.

"I've done enough dismissals myself," he said.

How many has he done?

"Only one," he said.

Solomon's one dismissal — firing his deputy, Robert Griffin — provoked a major confrontation between President Carter and House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, a personal friend of Griffin.

Carter has since given Griffin a $50,000-a-year job with Special Trade Negotiator Robert Strauss.

WORLD CAN DO IT

Words of encouragement sometimes are all that is needed to get us rolling in the right direction. If you want to go to COLLEGE and EARN while you LEARN, there is the ideal way to get started...

The Texas Daily Newspaper Association, the publishers of the daily newspapers in Texas, each year, present outstanding carriers with scholarships to the universities of their choice. From the top carriers in local "Carrier of the Year" programs, TDNA chooses nine carriers to receive $500.00 scholarships and selects one as "Texas Carrier of the Year."

The advantages of a newspaper carrier can go far beyond deliveries and collections...It will teach each boy & girl self confidence, it will develop good habits and they will be respected by friends, parents and elders. Best of all, you can say, "I did it on my own."

Dickey, A&M Have Chance To Be Great

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

COLLEGE STATION — Cody Risien looked like a normal guy as he slouched in a chair in the Aggie athletic dorm Wednesday. "Without a doubt, this could be the best offense since I've been around here," he commented.

Then the senior offensive lineman stood up. His 6-7, 262-pound frame suddenly became a human exclamation point to his evaluation.

Earlier his coach, Emory Bellard, had said it another way as he talked about the Southwest Conference race. Bellard named off Arkansas, Texas, Houston and Baylor, then added, "And I think we'll be in the picture."

First maybe? "Well," he said, "we're not going out there to finish second or third. We're taking dead aim on Dallas." Dallas is the Cotton Bowl, and he is banking on an offense "which has a chance to become great" and a defense which is "much improved, smarter, better tacklers, more cohesive, pretty darn fast, better athletes, and (with) sound depth."

Add to that the kicking of all-America Tony Franklin, and the Aggies do not appear hurting from the loss of 15 lettermen.

Bellard is experimenting with the I-formation, to go with his wishbone, and he has the two ingredients needed for an "I" in a quarterback and tailback.

Quarterback Mike Mosley is only a sophomore but started four games last year when David Walker was injured. Curtis Dickey is a junior but has been a starter since his freshman season. He gained almost 1000 yards last year despite playing in the massive shadow of fullback George Woodard.

Woodard is out for the year with a broken leg, and his backup, Eddie Hardin, has passed up his final football year because of injuries. This forced Bellard to reach over a couple of yards and grab a halfback for the full spot.

He called upon David Brothers (215), a junior with starting experience. The other halfback, when the Aggies line up in the wishbone, will be Adger Armstrong (up to 225 from last year's 210 pounds).

But, the prime ingredient is the tailback, and "Dickey is playing the kind of football to qualify him for any kind of award being mentioned," commented Bellard. With 9.2 speed and 205 pounds, Dickey possesses the equipment coaches covet.

Depth at halfback, however, could be a factor, Bellard said. He mentioned his lack of depth at quarterback, although he said Mosley's backup David Beal, had the same qualities of the starter, "except he's a step slower."

There are only three seniors on the offensive unit, but "we have a lot who haven't played a lot. Outside of Woodard, though, all the guys are coming back that put points on the board last year."

"If we avoid injuries and keep our people in the offensive line, when it jells, we'll be a darn fine football team."

In the line, tight end Russell Mikeoka

Injury Fails To Slow Reed; Lineman Still Going Strong

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

When wrapped up in adhesive tape and gauze, the fiberglass cast on Curtis Reed's right wrist appears to be big enough to hide a sack lunch, baby brother and a maybe even an illegal alien or two in—all at the same time.

But the discomfort hasn't seemed to slow Reed, yet.

Weighted down, maybe, but not slowed down.

Despite the inconvenience caused by the cast—which might be classified a deadly weapon in a few states, but not on the football field—, Reed continues to workout. Wednesday was no different.

"It's a little painful right now," said the 230-pound defensive tackle about the injury sustained during the first series of downs at last Saturday's scrimmage. "They're supposed to take X-rays and see whether it's a break or just a bad sprain."

The wrist has been something of a nemesis for Reed since injuring it during his playing high school football days in Round Rock.

"When I was a senior, I hurt it and never got it checked. I thought it was a bad sprain or something," recalled Reed. "Then my mother pulled on my thumb one day and the pain almost brought me to my knees. We had it looked at and I found out the bone had deteriorated so bad that I had to have a bone graft.

"I've had trouble ever since. Even now, I can barely move it."

In an effort to beef up the defensive line, the two-year starter at tackle for the Red Raiders, was switched to noseguard recently. However, Monday head coach Rex Dockery shuffled the standout back to his old home.

Jamie Giles, who impressed Dockery with his aggressive play, took over the noseguard slot.

"I'm glad to be back at tackle," Reed pointed out. "I didn't really feel at home at noseguard. I guess, because I knew all the techniques, and all, at tackle."

The last time Reed spent much time looking into a center's baby-blues, was as a Freshman. That was back when Ecomet Burley was the starter, though.

"Jamie has been doing an excellent job," Reed said. "Coach Patterson told me if Jamie could come through then chances were good they would move me back to tackle and that's what happened."

Texas Ag-I

COLLEGE STATION — As an innovator, Emory Bellard is well known. It was Bellard who, when an aide at the University of Texas, came up with the formation later labeled the wishbone.

Wednesday, between puffs on his ever-present pipe, Bellard, now the very successful head man at Aggieland, revealed a new concept. There is no catchy title for it as yet, but, if the Aggies follow it and Mike Mosley and Curtis Dickey to a string of championships a la Texas and the wishbone, there will be one.

Now, Bellard isn't ready to forsake his wishbone, but without his tank-sized fullback of last year (George Woodard out of the picture with a broken leg) the Aggies plan — now — to go it 50-50 with the wishbone and Bellard's version of the I-formation.

To run it, Bellard has a quarterback with sprinter speed, and a tailback with even more velocity. Also, there will be assembled around this tandem a unit which is rated now as good. "And a chance to be great," Bellard estimates.

The defense? Well, it could be even better. This adds up to one of those Aggie teams of recent years which should contest for the Southwest Conference banner and the host spot in the Cotton Bowl.

Royal for information on the wishbone, as devised by Bellard. "You don't want my formation," Royal is supposed to have replied. "You want my fullback (Steve Worster)."

That could be the case at A&M, but in this case, it is the tailback which figures so prominently in the I-formation. The man is Curtis Dickey, a true national-class sprinter (NCAA 60-yard indoor sprint champ, second in the NCAA 100-yard dash).

A year ago, Dickey carried 178 times in 11 games and averaged 5.3 steps per time. Wednesday he allowed that, yes, he would like to carry more, "maybe 15 to 20 times."

But, off the option, if Mike Mosley doesn't pitch to Dickey, he personally has the speed to make some things happen in the secondary, also. Last spring, the two lined up for a track-type 40-yard dash. Dickey crossed the line in 4.35 seconds, Mosley in 4.45. So the difference is only a step.

"Personally, I like the wishbone better," commented Mosley. "That's what we ran in high school, and I'm used to it. But, the 'I' gets us to the corner faster. And Curtis can get the ball a lot more."

"We practice it about half the time, and with George (Woodard, the 275-pound fullback) out, I imagine we'll run the 'I' more."

"I LIKE IT," admitted Dickey. "I can find the holes better. And we have some good backs for it, too."

"The fact that Mike has good speed takes more pressure off of me. But, since George is gone (after rushing for 1107 yards a year ago), there is more pressure on Mike and me. I've gotten used to the pressure, though."

In past years, Bellard has experimented with other variations of the I-formation, only to return to his wishbone when the season opened.

There appears to be more of a commitment to the new concept this time around. If it fits in, and if the Aggies use it successfully, folks better start finding a handle. Would you believe the Ag-I?

BUT THE CHANGE is from the wishbone which he has used so successfully and solely since his arrival here six years ago.

The I-formation in itself is not new; Bellard feels his concept of it is. And it's something, he said, he developed himself.

"The wishbone will be the basic set, but we'll go to the pro-style 'I' with two wide receivers. Both formations we'll use from goal line to goal line."

"It isn't a basically passing formation. It has the same basic running principles of the wishbone with the triple option. We'll use it for sprintout passes and the sprint draw."

As the head man diagrammed it, the formation will be used to flood the strong side with as many as four receivers, and getting the fullback out of the blocking scheme and into the secondary as a receiver.

The blocking will come from the linemen, with the tackles and guards pulling on occasions.

"We will probably call a minimum of 20 pass plays a game," Bellard commented. "but with the pass-run option, that doesn't mean we will throw that much."

Then Bellard paused, to relight his pipe, and went on with his offensive discourse. "We're still a basically wishbone team. That is something that is tried and true. But, we have confidence in the new concept. We did a lot of experimenting with it in the spring, then we drew it into focus and narrowed it down into a workable situation."

"I've been messing with it for a while. Change for change sake is really poor, but I am satisfied with it, in my mind."

"(In short), it will be an 'I' front, but I think it will be different. I'm very excited about what we're going to do."

Cowboys, Rams, Vikings Picked In NFC Races

By The Associated Press
The best and the worst things that could have happened to the San Francisco 49ers were head coaching changes — by the Los Angeles Rams.

When George Allen showed up, discontent set in among the Rams. And the 49ers, it suddenly appeared, had a very good chance of taking over as champions of the National Conference's Western Division.

But when Allen was canned, replaced by Ray Malavasi, the rejuvenated Rams rallied behind their former assistant, their spirit rekindled.

So San Francisco, with a new head coach of its own in Pete McCulley and superstar O.J. Simpson in the backfield, will once again be an also-ran while the Rams rack up a sixth straight division title.

The changing of the guard was supposed to take place in the Central Division with Chicago dethroning Minnesota. But the Bears, who settled for a wild-card playoff berth a year ago, will settle further down in the standings instead, dropping behind Detroit while the Vikings' string of division titles also reaches six in a row.

In the East it'll be Dallas in a runaway.

Vida Blue Inks Pact With Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Years of hassling over contracts appear to have ended for ace left-hander Vida Blue with the signing of a six-year contract with the San Francisco Giants.

"I'm glad the negotiations are over," Blue said at a news conference Tuesday. "The Giants dealt with me in good faith at all times. They have been a first class operation."

"I'm glad because this is the last contract I probably will ever sign," he added. "I never wanted to get into the free-agent route because then you're selling yourself for what you think you're worth. I never intended to do that."

After almost perennial holdouts in spring training with the Oakland A's, Blue continued following that script last spring after the Giants acquired him for seven players and an estimated $390,000 cash. Unable to reach terms with the Giants after the March 15 trade, he had talked of becoming a free agent.

But Giants co-owner Bob Lurie said Tuesday the long term contract was agreed upon, starting next season and including a four-year option. Lurie did not disclose details, but there was speculation the pact called for about $200,000 a year.

Blue, 29, leads the Giants in victories, with a 16-7 record, in earned-run average at 2.57 and in innings pitched with 217.

With the Oakland A's, Blue won the Cy Young Award in 1971, his first full major league season, and compiled a 124-86 record and 2.94 ERA, winning 20 or more games in 1971, 1973 and 1975.

A's owner Charles O. Finley tried twice to sell Blue but the sales were nullified by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn — the first to the New York Yankees in 1976 for $1.5 million, the second last December to the Cincinnati Reds for $1.75 million and infielder Dave Revering.

Prior to the trade, Blue and Finley were feuding over a three-year contract Blue signed with the A's in 1976. Blue claimed he was misled about the contract terms and sued Finley for $1.5 million and free agent status. The suit has not yet come to trial.

Ram Coaches Fight During Team Meeting

LONG BEACH (AP) — Troubles continue to plague the Los Angeles Rams, the latest a fight between two assistant coaches during a game-plan meeting Tuesday night.

Quarterback coach Charlie Waller and backfield coach Max Coley were the men involved in the scuffle at the meeting for the National Football League regular season opener Sunday at Philadelphia against the Eagles.

The Herald-Examiner reported the scrap in a page one banner story.

Although officially the Rams had no comment, the report was not denied.

Cause of the fight wasn't disclosed and other coaches separated the two before much damage was inflicted.

Both Waller, 56, and Coley, 51, joined the Rams staff this year after George Allen was appointed head coach to succeed Chuck Knox who resigned to go to Buffalo. After two preseason games, Allen was fired and Ray Malavasi took over as head coach.

But if you look carefully in the Cowboys' dust, you'll notice ... the Philadelphia Eagles.

Here, then, is what the National Football League's NFC standings will look like 16 games from now:

Running is still the name of the game in Los Angeles, with Lawrence McCutchen and John Cappelletti and a wealth of reserves that make Elvis Peacock's loss a minimal one. Pat Haden's steady growth at quarterback may be hampered a bit by the departure of Harold Jackson, but Ron Jessie and Billy Waddy are pretty good targets for Haden's passes.

The defense is star-laden with Jack Youngblood and Fred Dryer on the line, Jack Reynolds at linebacker and Monte Jackson and Bill Simpson in the secondary. It's a unit capable of shutting down almost any attack.

Whether the Rams will finally make their game as exciting as owner Carroll Rosenbloom wants it is another matter. Malavasi is in the conservative mold of his former boss, Chuck Knox. But if the Rams reach the Super Bowl, their tedious trek there will be forgiven.

With Simpson showing his stuff and Freddie Solomon and Ken MacAfee facilitating the receiving corps, San Francisco may be one of the NFC's most improved teams. The defense functions well only when it sacks the quarterback. Now the question is: with Jim Plunkett gone, do the 49ers have a quarterback?

Uncertainty over demoted Steve Bartkowski and inconsistency on offense is plaguing Atlanta. It's doubtful the miserly defense, so sturdy a year ago, can carry the Falcons again. New Orleans, with Dick Nolan in his first head as head coach, still has no defense to speak of, and Archie Manning and Wes Chandler aren't enough to turn things around.

premier quarterbacks. That alone makes Minnesota a contender. What makes the Vikings more is the arrival of running back Rickey Young from San Diego, taking the pressure off Chuck Foreman in the backfield. Both will also catch plenty of passes, along with Ahmad Rashad and Sammy White.

The defense, as always, is anchored by oldsters like Alan Page and Jim Marshall, but a few younger players are working their way into the lineup.

The arrival in Detroit of Coach Monte Clark, a one-season (1976) sensation at San Francisco, and the departure of Jack Pardee from Chicago (which has a tougher schedule this year as well as a troubled and injured Walter Payton) could be enough to boost the Lions past the Bears into second place.

The maturing of some kids and the arrival of others (like quarterback Doug Williams and fullback Johnny Davis) will make Tampa Bay interesting to watch. That's more than can be said for Green Bay.

The Cowboys are still the class of the conference, solid at virtually every position and two or three deep in most. The list of names — Staubach, Pearson, Dorsett, White Jones, Martin, Henderson, Waters, Harris — reads like an all-star roster ... which it is.

It won't be so much a rise by the Eagles that puts them into second place. They may only win two or three more than last year. But the ravages of time and a tougher schedule will take their toll on Pardee's Washington Redskins, while the departure of Terry Metcalf and a few other key players will more than offset what-

St. Louis. The defensive line is the New York Giants' only strong suit.

Forsch, Cards Whip Astros 4-2

By The Associated Press
Bob Forsch fired a four-hitter to snap a personal nine-game losing streak and Jerry Mumphrey capped a four-run St. Louis explosion in the sixth inning with a two-run home run as the Cardinals defeated the Houston Astros 4-2.

Forsch, 10-15, blanked the Astros on two hits over the final seven innings as he logged his first victory since June 30. Houston starter Joe Niekro, 11-11, was tagged with the loss.

Garry Templeton led off the decisive sixth for the Cards with a single and stole second ahead of a walk to George Hendrick. Both runners moved up on Keith Hernandez' one-out grounder and scored on Ken Reitz' single down the third-base line.

Mumphrey followed with his second homer of the season, a blast into the right-field seats, as St. Louis took its ninth triumph in its last 11 road games.

Aggies Plot Big Things

The (218), Risien, and Doug Holmes (227) drew Bellard's support for "all" honors, and he added that center Ed Pustejovsky could have been all-conference had he not been shifted from guard.

Risien, says Bellard, "is among the best in the country."
The defensive unit has two freshmen starting at linebacker, but the Aggie coach didn't appear overly concerned about that. Both Mike Little and Cal Peveto were on campus a year ago and are red-shirt freshmen.

Presence of better athletes is the reason for the defensive optimism. The Aggies have shifted some players on defense, with Eugene Sanders (272) moving from defensive end to tackle, and James Zachery from linebacker to tackle to end. Cornerback Darrell Smith previously played split end.

Peveto got his chance to move up when regular Frankie Lemons quit the squad earlier this week.
The improvement in the front four will allow the secondary more time to play support. Last year, free safety Carl Grulich led the team in tackles (100 solo shots, 30 assists).

"Last year, there were some cracks (in the defense) and we had to try to handle our responsibilities, as well as help out on others. But, this year," Grulich said, "the key is in the front four. We have big, physical people up there."

QUOTE BOX
Free safety CARL GRULICH, on the Aggies' improved defense: "We have the linebackers to be really quick. We'll do a lot of stunting and blitzes." On the tackle last year where Tech quarterback Rodney Allison sustained a broken leg: "It was a safety blitz and at first I didn't think I had him. I got him around the waist and thought I had lost him. But, I hung on, and my weight fell on him. Some people thought when I got up I was shouting about Rodney being hurt, but I was just proud we had stopped them on a key play."

Quarterback MIKE MOSLEY, on handing off to George Woodard: "He was so strong that when he grabs it, you're off."

Raiders

So does that mean he'll stay there for the remainder of his college career?
"I really don't know," he said. "I want to do what's best for the team. If that means moving back then I will."

"With the situation Tech's in, as far as the ratings are, we need to have the best 11 players on the field."
Reed said the defensive line—which has been drawing praise from Dockery—has been putting out a lot of extra effort so far.

"I know I came to workouts in the best shape I've ever been in," the blonde-haired lineman said. "That's about the way everyone was."
"I think we're further along now than we were at this time last year, too."

In less than two weeks, Reed and Co. will open the season against USC in Los Angeles. He said that excites him.
"Even if I'm dead, I'll get there," he said.

And the arm?
"Maybe by then it will be all right," he said. "If it's not, I guess we'll just wrap it up a little more. But I'll be there."
About Wednesday's practice, Dockery said the Raiders had had better ones.
"We were a little slow," he said. "They've been working hard for the past few days and now they're down a little, tired."

The session Wednesday concluded two-a-day practices for Tech, which will now work only once-a-day starting this afternoon.
The Wednesday practice was spent primarily working on the passing game.
"We wanted to find out if the quarterbacks could find the receivers in a crowd," Dockery said. "Godfrey Turner really looked good. He and Brian Nelson (who sat out the practice with a touch of the flu) really give us a pair of front line receivers."

Dockery also praised the work of defensive end Rick Kempf, a junior college transfer from Independence (Kansas) JC. Kempf was a JC all-America, collecting 147 tackles as a sophomore.
"He (Kempf) gives us some extra depth on the defensive line," Dockery pointed out about the 6-2, 215-pounder.

Randy Page, one of the top schoolboy quarterbacks in Oklahoma last season, began working out as a wide receiver.

MacPhail Sees No Need To Talk With Umpires

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — American League President Lee MacPhail testified Wednesday that major league baseball has no obligation to reopen negotiations with disgruntled umpires who staged a one-day walkout last week.

"We feel we have a valid agreement — that it's complete, that it has a no-strike clause," MacPhail told a federal judge.

"We don't think we should be forced by the threat of a strike to reopen negotiations. We negotiated every issue raised by the umpires during the contract talks and we have no obligation to reopen those talks."

The umpires, members of the American League Umpires Association, struck Friday after demanding 21 new benefits outlined in a telegram sent to MacPhail and National League President Chub Feeney on Aug. 16.

Both leagues obtained a temporary restraining order from U.S. District Court Judge Joseph L. McGlynn Jr., but it came too late to avert last Friday's work stoppage, which spread to night games in 13 major league cities.

The games went on as scheduled with amateur umpires, retired professional umpires and collegiate officials working the bases and home plate.

Wednesday's hearing was on a motion filed by AL and NL officials for a temporary injunction to prevent the umpires from striking when the 10-day temporary restraining order expires.

After three hours of testimony from the two league presidents, McGlynn resumed the hearing until 9:30 a.m. Thursday, when seven National League umpires are expected to testify.

The umpires' presence at the hearings Wednesday forced both leagues to cut officiating crews at some night games from four to three men.

MacPhail Sees No Need To Talk With Umpires

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — American League President Lee MacPhail testified Wednesday that major league baseball has no obligation to reopen negotiations with disgruntled umpires who staged a one-day walkout last week.

"We feel we have a valid agreement — that it's complete, that it has a no-strike clause," MacPhail told a federal judge.

"We don't think we should be forced by the threat of a strike to reopen negotiations. We negotiated every issue raised by the umpires during the contract talks and we have no obligation to reopen those talks."

The umpires, members of the American League Umpires Association, struck Friday after demanding 21 new benefits outlined in a telegram sent to MacPhail and National League President Chub Feeney on Aug. 16.

Both leagues obtained a temporary restraining order from U.S. District Court Judge Joseph L. McGlynn Jr., but it came too late to avert last Friday's work stoppage, which spread to night games in 13 major league cities.

The games went on as scheduled with amateur umpires, retired professional umpires and collegiate officials working the bases and home plate.

Wednesday's hearing was on a motion filed by AL and NL officials for a temporary injunction to prevent the umpires from striking when the 10-day temporary restraining order expires.

After three hours of testimony from the two league presidents, McGlynn resumed the hearing until 9:30 a.m. Thursday, when seven National League umpires are expected to testify.

The umpires' presence at the hearings Wednesday forced both leagues to cut officiating crews at some night games from four to three men.

Man Seeks To Clear Name

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Arne Ristol discovered that $927,000 had been erroneously transferred to his bank account, he took off. He now wants to return and clear his name, a lawyer friend says.

The Los Angeles Times on Tuesday quoted Santa Ana attorney Daryl D. Hansen as saying the 52-year-old accountant, who is named in a warrant for grand theft, wants to return under assurances of a bail reduction from the district attorney.

"He doesn't want to sit in the can for $100,000 bail because I don't think he can post it," said Hansen, who did not disclose Ristol's whereabouts.

The money was erroneously transferred to Ristol last May through a transposed digit in a United California Bank commercial client's account number. The error was not detected until early this month.

Ristol's request will only be considered after he returns, said Deputy District Attorney Kellogg Chan.

Anita Bryant Slates Benefit

BOSTON (AP) — Gay rights leaders plan demonstrations, but a spokesman for Anita Bryant says her appearance for a Senate hopeful has nothing to do with a candidate who is a self-described lesbian.

"Neither Anita nor Bob Green (Miss Bryant's husband and manager) nor myself knew there was a gay involved when she accepted the invitation to go to Boston," said Edward Rowe, director of Protect America's Children, a group growing out of Miss Bryant's campaign against a gay rights ordinance in Miami last year.

Miss Bryant is to appear in Boston Friday, for the first time in ten years, at a benefit concert for Howard Phillips, former director of the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity and a founder of the National Conservative Caucus.

Phillips is one of five Democratic candidates seeking the nomination to run for the seat held by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass. Another candidate is Elaine Noble, a two-term state representative from Boston's Back Bay section who is a self-described lesbian.

Cousin Congratulates Pope

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Gino Scardanzan, who says he is a cousin of Pope John Paul I, confesses he hasn't been to church since last year because his work as a carpenter has kept him too busy.

Scardanzan, 52, said he will send his wife and children to Mass this Sunday. When asked if he will go, he just shrugged. Scardanzan's mother is a sister of the new pope's mother.

He went to an Italian priest for help in sending a telegram to his cousin. "It just said: 'Congratulations from your cousin Gino and his family in Edmonton, Canada,'" he said. "I didn't want him to get tired reading it."

Pilfered Pet Back Home

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Charlie, the pilfered pet of the animal shelter's petting zoo, is home again.

Woodchuck Charlie is "the most lovable pet" in the zoo, said humane officer Kenneth Pauley, who retrieved the animal Tuesday.

After the story of Charlie's Sunday disappearance was published, a caller told authorities that a neighbor had come home with a groundhog.

Pauley and another officer went to the home, found Charlie looking out the door, and asked for his return. "The lady was nearly in tears," Pauley said. "She and her husband just adopted the little fellow for a pet."

The officers told the woman she could visit Charlie like anyone else. So Charlie is back with Pierre and Petunia, the skunks, and the goats, chickens, kinkajou, peacock, rabbits, ducks and geese.

Peace Computers Proposed

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dr. Henry Heimlich, developer of the "Heimlich Method" for dislodging obstructions in the throat, says computers could make the world breathe easier.

In a "Computers for Peace" proposal he has asked President Carter and Egyptian and Israeli leaders to consider at a Sept. 5 meeting, Heimlich suggested that computers could analyze resources and demonstrate the advantages of cooperation among nations.

"The method is surely more positive than present traditional attempts at armament control by regulating the number of warheads and missiles," he said.

Alligator Seeking Home

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Blinky, a one-eyed alligator, may have to find a new home.

The Florida Fish and Game Commission has given this central Florida city until Sept. 8 to limit public access to the 11-foot reptile, an unofficial town mascot who calls downtown Lake Mirror home.

Alligators in the lake could be dangerous, said Maj. J.O. Brown, head of the Fish and Game Commission's regional office. Not true, said City Commissioner George Burt.

"I've read two books on alligators by reptile authorities and they seem to feel that alligators are not that much of a threat to man," he said.

"There are people who keep them as pets and house-break them," he added. "I think it's probably more dangerous to cross the street down there."

The full city commission is to decide Blinky's fate Sept. 5.

Goodyear To Replace Blimp

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The damaged Goodyear blimp "Mayflower," torn from its moorings during a thunderstorm, will be dismantled and reassembled to make a new airship, a spokesman for Goodyear said Wednesday.

The blimp, one of five owned by the company, was torn away from a temporary mast Tuesday. It deflated and fell to the ground, injuring one of its crew members slightly.

Ron Bell, a spokesman for Goodyear, said the gondola and fins will be sent to Akron, Ohio, where they will be refurbished and then sent to Houston, where they will be reassembled.

He said the envelope which holds the helium was ripped into strips and could not be used again.

Wayne Denies Charges

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Actor John Wayne and San Diego businessman John Alessio have denied a Mexican political leader's charge that they are among several persons who illegally own land in Baja California.

"I wish it were true that I had control of land down there as it was reported, but I certainly don't," said Wayne.

Alessio said Tuesday he is the executive adviser for a Mexican company that owns 14,000 acres in the northwestern Mexican state.

Roberto Jaramillo, leader of the 2-year-old Revolutionary Socialist Party, made the allegations against Wayne, Alessio and other persons Monday to President Jose Lopez Portillo in Mexico City.

Mule Clips Ex-Governor

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — A mule clipped former Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown on the right ankle during a camping trip here, but no bones were broken, a park spokesman said Wednesday.

Brown was taken on horseback to a campground after the accident Tuesday, then was flown by helicopter to the park hospital in Yosemite Valley.

He was treated for a bruise and swelling, then released, said Herbie Sansum, park information officer.

Star's Manager Sentenced

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — George Fedorchack, singer-actor Ben Vereen's road manager, has been sentenced to two years in prison for jumping bail. He was sentenced to 10 years on his 1971 conviction for passing counterfeit money in South Carolina.

But Fedorchack, 36, left the country while his conviction was being appealed, and became Vereen's road manager in 1977. Vereen, who appeared in the television mini-series "Roots," sent U.S. District Judge J. Robert Martin a letter describing Fedorchack as a trusted friend.

Martin ordered Fedorchack to serve the new term consecutive to his previous sentence.

Wasp Stings Senator

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Sen. Claiborne Pell called his retirement from the Coast Guard "a sad occasion," after a wasp added a stinging touch to the ceremony marking the end of his 38-year career.

Pell, D-R.I., was stung on the right wrist Monday as he approached the podium to speak, but continued with his remarks.

Pell served in the Coast Guard during World War II and remained in the reserve on active and then inactive status. He faced mandatory retirement on his 60th birthday Nov. 22.

Ex-Mayor Teaching Class

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Moon Landrieu, returning to Loyola University to teach a class in government after two terms as New Orleans mayor, told his students that political practice is as important as political theory.

Landrieu, a Loyola law school graduate, stepped down as mayor this year. He has since taken a post with a development firm and is teaching one course to 25 students. During his tenure, he served a term as head of the National Conference of Mayors.

City Officials Muttering

ARLINGTON (AP) — A recent public hearing to generate interest in future public hearings still has city officials muttering.

City spokesman Gene Randall said the "normal process" was followed to advertise the hearing, which was designed to help the city in holding other hearings that would determine ways to spend $1 million in federal grant monies.

"The staff made its presentation and looked around for citizens to add to the presentation or comment on it," said Randall. "And we got no citizen input at that point" because there were no citizens.

Joggers Told To Ante Up

DETROIT (AP) — Joggers, athletic free spirits who until now had only to find a path to practice their sport, are being told to ante up.

For the sake of flora and fauna, Cranbrook Institution said on Monday that those plodding across its grass will have to pay $35 for annual permits.

As many as 300 joggers a day have been thundering across its grounds in the suburb of Bloomfield Hills, "interfering with activities, trampling grassy areas and clogging parking spots," said external affairs director Robert Matson.

On the whole, Cranbrook joggers are fairly considerate, he said. "It's just that there are too many of them. Only a limited number of permits will be issued, he said.

Leftist Guerrillas Kidnap Son Of Mexican Ambassador

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The son of the Mexican ambassador to the United States was kidnaped by armed members of a leftist guerrilla group who attacked the car in which he was riding, police said Wednesday.

Several police officials who asked not to be identified because they had orders from "higher up" not to release information said Hugo Margain Jr., 35, was kidnaped Tuesday night near his home on the south side of the Mexican capital by four armed men and a woman who shot at Margain's bodyguards.

One member of the family denied the report but two others said it was true.

The Mexican Embassy in Washington said it could neither confirm nor deny the report. A spokesman said Ambassador Hugo B. Margain was in Mexico City.

Margain is director of the Institute of Philosophy at the University of Mexico, the police said.

They said a bodyguard accompanying Margain and a friend riding in the same car were wounded in the shooting. The spokesman identified the friend as Justin Evans, an American.

Eduardo Margain, the victim's 29-year-old brother, said in a telephone interview: "My brother suffered an attack of appendicitis and is here in the house."

Two cousins of Margain who did not want to be quoted by name said the kidnaping had occurred. "It is true, unfortunately," one said.

Police also said Margain was still missing Wednesday night.

Ambassador Margain, serving his second tour as Mexico's chief envoy to the United States, also has been ambassador to London and secretary of the Mexican Treasury.

A police spokesman said the family had not made a formal complaint about the alleged kidnaping. A source at police headquarters said the family "asked for help with no publicity."

"We can give no information because a human life could depend on it," an unidentified Foreign Ministry employee said by telephone.

The police sources said the Margain family told high police authorities they "wanted no publicity."

A hospital spokesman confirmed Evans had been treated and released but said

"the case was not serious and we cannot give further details."

A police report said Margain's car, a 1972 Dodge, was intercepted near his home between 7:45 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. EDT Tuesday.

It said Margain's car was intercepted by "a black Galaxie without license plates with four men and one woman inside."

"When the bodyguards riding in another automobile behind tried to intervene, the attackers who identified themselves as activists opened up with a burst of sub-machine gun fire," the report said. "A bodyguard was wounded. Return fire by the bodyguards also presumably wounded one of the attackers, but they all managed to escape."

Police sources said the kidnapers left a leaflet in Margain's automobile signed by the September 23rd Communist League, an extreme left-wing guerrilla group that has been active in Mexico for about five years.

The sources said the leaflet said "Await instructions. The kidnaping is to obtain money for the struggle of the proletariat."

The guerrilla group, believed to be the largest and best organized in Mexico, has been blamed by police or has taken responsibility for many kidnappings, bank robberies and bombings.

It takes its name from the date of a shootout more than a dozen years ago between student activists and soldiers at an army barracks in the northern state of Chihuahua.

Community Forgives Bogus Medical Man

WELCH, W.Va. (AP) — The bright young man who went away and came home to practice medicine when his hometown people needed him most — during the 111-day coal strike — is no doctor after all. But the community doesn't seem to mind.

"The way I feel about it, if I needed a doctor, I can't think of anybody else I'd rather have treat me," said Sue Gray, owner of a drug store where patients of Charles Andriago Jr. filled some of their prescriptions.

Andriago, 30, pleaded guilty this week in Circuit Court to practicing medicine without a license. Sentencing is set for Sept. 22 and Andriago could receive up to a year in jail and a $500 fine.

Andriago told the court he began helping the sick late last fall after returning with a bachelor of science degree from West Virginia University. He said he helped a friend get over a mild illness, and then friends spread the word and his reputation grew.

His prescriptions were honored at drug stores. Doctors at the local hospital helped him when he needed advice.

"I just never thought he didn't have a license," said Dr. Stephen Mamick, chief of radiology at Stevens Clinic Hospital in Welch.

Andriago went to Mamick several times for consultations about patients, the radiologist said. Mamick invited him to staff meetings at the hospital and meetings of the county medical society. Andriago never attended.

"We have personnel here at the hospital whose father or mother went to him," Mamick said. "They said they were quite pleased."

Andriago told the court that the long coal strike led him to provide medical care free in an area where there were few paychecks and few doctors.

Fund Established For City Officer

A fund to help rookie Lubbock police officer Rick Robertson meet medical expenses has been established at Plains National Bank.

Robertson, 22, suffered a stroke July 24 and is undergoing therapy at Brivins Therapy and Rehabilitation Center in Amarillo.

Since Robertson's illness was not job-related he is not eligible for sick leave with pay, which would have maintained his medical expenses.

Robertson was granted leave without pay until Feb. 28, 1979, and almost $2,500 has been collected so far to help with the officer's medical program.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE DRIVE TO EXPAND GRAIN SORGHUM sales overseas will continue in September as a sorghum promotion team leaves for Europe.

Led by Elbert Harp, executive director of the Lubbock-based Grain Sorghum Producers Association, the team will depart Sept. 16. The seven European countries showing the most interest in purchasing grain sorghum will be visited with Harp will be Dr. Reed Richardson of Texas Tech University and Ben Baisdon of the Texas Department of Agriculture in Austin. Richardson is a livestock nutritionist and will discuss nutrition and grain processing. Baisdon is director of marketing for the TDA and will assist Harp in planning ways to remove trade restrictions on sorghum and of development of better marketing news services to keep foreign buyers informed of price relationships between sorghum and other grains.

THE TEAM WILL HOLD CONFERENCES to discuss feeding programs and problems. Visits will be made to England, Scotland, Germany, Norway, Poland, Romania and Spain.

Research data concerning the nutritional value of grain sorghum will be presented. Emphasis will continue to be placed on the difference in U. S. No. 2 yellow sorghum and the high tannin (bird resistant) sorghum being shipped from other countries.

U. S. No. 2 yellow sorghum doesn't have a tannic acid problem but much of the grain that has been exported from South Africa, Argentina and Thailand is of the type that is low in nutritional value because of tannic acid content. "The result is that livestock feeders overseas are afraid to use sorghum," Harp says.

THE GSPA AND THE TEXAS GRAIN SORGHUM Producers Board have been conducting a worldwide educational program since 1975 aimed at showing the difference in U. S. sorghum and the "brown sorghum."

The U. S. Feed Grains Council sponsors the sorghum promotional work overseas in cooperation with the Foreign Agriculture Service of the USDA.

This sorghum promotion mission will last 18 days. Sorghum exports have expanded rapidly in the last three years and now the output from one of every three acres grown in the United States is shipped abroad.

Harp says the GSPA-TGSPB believes proper promotion can increase sorghum exports by 50 percent in the next five years.

W. GORDON McCABE, CHAIRMAN OF THE New York Cotton Exchange, who was well known in High Plains cotton circles, died last weekend following a short illness.

A retired vice president of J. P. Stevens Co., McCabe had been a member of the exchange since October 1950 and served as president of the wool associates of the exchange from 1957-59. He became chairman of the Cotton Exchange in July 1977.

McCabe also was a member of the National Cotton Council board of directors and a member of the board of the New York Commodities Exchange Center, a joint trading floor shared by four New York exchanges, including the Cotton Exchange.

The funeral was Monday in Greenville, N. C.

Small Farmers Slate Regional Conference

LEVELLAND (Special) — Larry King will be one of ten Texas delegates to a special regional conference for small farmers in Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 6-7.

Sponsored by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Community Services Administration, the Texas delegation will join groups from New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, California and Hawaii.

Dr. Dempsey Seastrunk, assistant director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said the purpose of the conference is to provide small farm operators an opportunity to discuss special problems and to give views on how responsible government agencies can provide better assistance.

"Small farmers are a vital part of the total agricultural industry of this nation," Seastrunk noted. "And this conference is designed to get at the heart of some of their problems and concerns."

Delegates will identify, discuss and assess problems, and rank them according to priority during workshop sessions. Potential solutions to these problems will be developed.

According to USDA information, there are currently about 1.8 million small farm operators who own about 37 percent of the nation's farmland and control some 31 percent of all farm assets, including land, machinery and buildings.

The meeting at the Albuquerque Convention Center is the last of five sessions held across the country to determine small farmer needs.

Cattle Futures Decline After Profit Taking

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 20 to 57 points lower led by June on 22,800 cars. Nearby October was off 72 after distant October briefly gained 25, Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Profit-taking and other selling developed after Tuesday's jump to the highest since June, up six cents from lows. Traders were also wary of premium of futures to cash even though the latter gained. Beef, however, was only steady after reports of possible advances.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 80 cents a pound for all weights, which is a two week high. Cash cattle were steady to $1 with the best top $54 per hundred-weight at Peoria. Omaha's top was $53.50.

There were 330 deliveries and a slaughter Wednesday of 147,000 head. The markets expect 10,700 head today.

Feeder cattle futures fell 75 after an early gain of 40 before ending 10 to 72 lower. Volume was 2,333 contracts. March and April were the weakest with the two nearby contracts pacing the early upturn.

Outset buying spilled over from Tuesday as traders noted light feeder arrivals and some sharply higher cash feeder cattle along with steady beef trade. Much of the selling was profit-taking and some also in sympathy with live cattle futures.

Cash feeder cattle were steady to up $3 with the best top $104 per hundred-weight at San Antonio. There were 152 deliveries. The major markets expect 6,500 head today.

Hog futures skidded 67 in the nearby contract before finishing 40 higher to equal low. Sales totaled 5,054 cars. Distant October was up the most with distant December off the most.

Profit-taking and other selling followed Tuesday's gains with pressure stemming from heavy hog runs and lower prices along with sharply increased kill. Continued weakness in cash hams also weighed on the futures.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to 72 cent at 78 to 82 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, which is a five week low. Cash hogs were steady to off 75 cents with the best top at $49 per hundred-weight.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices managed moderate gains on the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday, largely on the basis of a couple of large purchases by commission houses.

Traders said there were strong rumors of an early frost made by a private forecaster which touched off buying in soybeans and some corn.

Drilling Density Appeal Rejected

AUSTIN (AP) — The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals rejected an appeal by Superior Oil Co. on Wednesday to drill an additional well on the Helen Pritchard "A" Lease in the East Texas oil field.

Superior appealed after the Texas Railroad Commission and an Austin state district court denied Superior's application. Superior sought an exception to the commission's density rule to drill a new well after one of 21 wells on the lease "went to water."

Opponents contended that the lease acreage — 99.56 acres — was not sufficient to justify an additional well. Superior then hired a surveyor and claimed the lease contained 106.48 acres.

The commission, in effect, held that Superior had failed to prove a good faith claim to 106.48 acres in the lease tract. The trial court affirmed the commission ruling.

The appeals court said, in upholding the commission-court findings, said, "Superior's surveyors of 1976 made no attempt to trace the steps of earlier surveyors whose descriptions are specific and unambiguous as to the boundaries of the lease."

Stratton 'Confession' Hanoi Blunder

EDITOR'S NOTE: Four months had passed since Lt. Cdr. Richard Stratton's plane from the USS Ticonderoga crashed after a rocket malfunction. Immediately captured and tortured, POW Stratton "cooperated" only by giving his captors as little or approximated information as possible. His interrogators kept pressing him for more facts, making impossible statements, and asking for his confirmation. Soon, they would ask him to make a "confession of war crimes" that would later make Stratton a worldwide symbol of Vietnam cruelty, intemperance, and duplicity. This now-famous confession is the subject of the fourth of a six-part series from the book, "Prisoner at War," by Scott Blakey. And published by Doubleday and Co. Inc.

(c) 1978 By SCOTT BLAKEY

Richard Stratton was confused. Apparently, someone had made the decision to cast him as a leader of terror bombing raids against Hanoi in December of 1966. The North Vietnamese wanted Stratton to confess to such "crimes" in writing and before all the world as a symbol of American brutality.

"They knew better: they knew the compatibility of weapons on aircraft like mine; they had shot down enough; they had tortured enough pilots to get information. They knew, basically, what we carried, but they were intent, once again, on molding world opinion against the Americans for using certain types of very effective weapons, such as napalm and phosphorus bombs."

Fourth In A Series

Stratton was frantic. In the presence of a camp commander, he bravely allowed that "confession" was "a bunch of —" and suggested the commandant try to prevent it from even seeing the light of day. He risked beating by further telling the man that his government stood to make a fool out of itself by presenting such nonsense.

"And he said, 'I know that. It doesn't make any difference. Some American pilot did it and you might as well take the credit for it because you are an American pilot.'"

Stratton then refused to have anything to do with the "confession." He would not read it. Yes, he was told, he would read it. He would be stood up before a political rally at the stadium filled with the citizenry, and he would tell what he had done; and then he would repeat it before a group of intellectuals. He refused. They badgered him all morning, apparently wanting him willing; he still refused. Finally, they compromised. He could tape record it.

"I reasoned I would rather make the tape under my own free will and try to screw up the tape then get tortured and do a good job of it."

He told his captors they could make him tape, but they could not make him say "confession" in public, nor could they make him appear in public. He was fluent, he blustered, in French and Spanish and English. He would tell whatever audience they put him in front of exactly what had been done to him. They could kill him afterward, they could kill him on the spot where he spoke, but he would tell of his torture and that the "confession" was false.

The taping date was scheduled for March 4.

"Three military types that I never saw before (or since) sat there with a tape recorder and earplugs. I realize we've got real English speakers here now. So what's my choice? My choice was to go back to a Toastmasters' lesson which focused on monotone, a lesson called vocal variety. I decided to take every negative aspect of that lesson and apply it to the recording. And that was, to a certain measure, a success because those who heard the tape, those of my friends who heard it back in the United States, my own family, were convinced that it was not my voice, that that was not me. And I tried to make it absolutely without any inflection whatsoever.

"That was the germ of the idea that I will appear to have been doped or under the influence of something.

"The night we finished taping, they said, okay, you are going to see a group of intellectuals downtown, and in the Orient it is the custom that you will bow. In the prison system the definition of a salute was a ninety-degree bow to the ducks, to the chickens, the VC, and everybody else.

"So, they said, now we will practice bowing. They said, 'Bow!' And I bowed at ninety degrees.

"Oh, no! You do a fifteen-degree bow. Now, bow prettily, bow prettily."

The press conference at which the tape would be played was set for March 6. Lee Lockwood, an American photographer, attended:

"Up front was a big loudspeaker...standing in the middle of the floor, and its wire running somewhere. On the righthand side was a curtained entryway. The curtain was drawn. You couldn't see behind it. There was a blackboard or a big mzp in the middle and there was a portable rostrum and a table, as I remember.

POW SYMBOL — Lt. Cdr. Richard Stratton's 90-degree bow, by which he ridiculed his captors at Hanoi, became the symbol of the American POW in Vietnam. (Note: permission for use other than in connection with "Prisoner at War" must be obtained from Lee Lockwood/Black Star.)

"The whole thing was really in three parts. The first part was before Stratton's tape recording was played, and that was a long lecture where they showed ordnance and they used a map. They handed out a press release on it; I believe it had to do with a bombing raid into another area which the Americans had said they would not bomb. It didn't seem terribly important to me and I wasn't paying enough attention to really know what was going on.

"Then a short, bald North Vietnamese officer said, 'we are going to listen to the confession of an American pilot shot down while infringing on the territorial air space of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.' And at this point all of the photographers rushed forward because we knew there was going to be an American prisoner — I thought prisoners of war — and when he said 'listen to the confession' everybody assumed a prisoner was going to come in at any second and read or speak his confession.

"So there is a surge forward, and the officer is shouting, 'No, no, no, no! Return to your tables! First we are going to listen to the confession of the American prisoner of war, and then we will see the American prisoner of war.'

"Then this loudspeaker shrieked with a lot of feedback and leveled down, and this voice came through, saying:

"I am Richard Allen Stratton, a lieutenant commander in the United States Navy attached to VA-192, CAV 19, U.S.S. Ticonderoga. The following are statements concerning my crimes committed on the Democratic Republic of Vietnam during November and December, 1966."

"He read it in a very flat, robot-like voice, automatic, almost drumming. Flat, a voice that was obviously American (and to me, then) calm and patently sincere. As he spoke, mimeographed transcripts in different languages were being passed out to the audience. Except for one or two points where the tape seemed obviously patched he read the entire five-page document without stopping. There was complete silence in the room during the broadcast. When it was over, the photographers leaped up and formed an expectant semicircle around the curtained entrance.

Stratton remembers, "I listened to my own words in the light of the new day and it doesn't sound as stupid as I thought it sounded when I made it. Now I've got to find some additional way to discredit that thing. They have said, you will not speak, you will just simply bow. You will bow and you will leave. They have got a guard behind the curtain with his AK 47.

"Now, the beauty of this situation is I'm still ill. All my bandages are covered, but every day at three o'clock I hit a high fever. I also have a ball in each nostril — just glorious."

From Lockwood's point of view: "I was stunned by his appearance. I was practically unable to take pictures, to function. I tried to catch his eye while he was doing all this bowing and to show somehow that...I thought if he could see me, he would see that I was...an American. I was clean-shaven, my hair was regular length, but I don't know what to do. I was at a loss. I was trying to make a decision. I was thinking about it and decided better not, because I might screw things up for him.

"Finally, perhaps after four or five minutes had passed total, the officer gave a command and the pilot did an about face and abruptly disappeared through the curtain.

"I was so shocked. The event was like some sort of oriental pageant. The prisoner had acted like a robot. It was impossible for me to connect the man who had walked out, bowed, and then disappeared with the firm, intelligent...voice recorded just two days earlier."

The full impact of Stratton's performance hit with the publication of Lockwood's photographs and article in the April 1, 1967, edition of Life. Lockwood's chilling description of the incident and a full-page, graphic black and white photograph of the bowing, seemingly mesmerized fiber-created an international furor. Life also included an emotional reaction to the Stratton incident from then-Ambassador-at-Large Averell Harriman:

"From the photographs, videotapes and descriptions by eyewitnesses that I have seen of the so-called 'news' conference at which Commander Stratton was exhibited, it would appear that the North Vietnamese authorities are using mental or physical pressure on American prisoners of war..."

"Hanoi has said its policy is to treat prisoners humanely. However, it has refused to allow the International Committee of the Red Cross or any neutral intermediary to visit the prisoners, a right required by the Geneva Convention to which Hanoi has adhered. Without such independent verification, North Vietnam's professions of 'humane treatment' cannot be accepted."

Hanoi had blundered. When the war was over, Hanoi had to produce Stratton no matter how battered he was, no matter how many scars he bore. Lockwood's bowing picture was constantly in use thereafter, the caption beneath it usually referring to Stratton as Vietnam's "most controversial" prisoner. As Hanoi had made Stratton a symbol of its charges of genocide and terror bombing, it had equally made him a symbol of Vietnamese cruelty, intemperance, and duplicity.

U.S., Cuban Detente Stalled

HAVANA, CUBA (UPI) — A year ago Friday the United States and Cuba opened "interest sections" in their respective capitals — their first direct, diplomatic contact in 16 years.

Tensions between the two countries separated by 90 miles of the Florida Straits were easing in 1977 and there were rumors that other diplomatic breakthroughs were imminent.

But one year after 10 American diplomats moved into the old U.S. embassy on Havana's Malecon and 10 Cubans set up shop in the Czech Embassy in Washington, unbending ideological differences have halted any further rapprochement.

The two nations' irreconcilability was demonstrated most clearly last spring when Cuba poured troops into Angola and Ethiopia, leading President Carter to protest Cuban meddling in Africa's internal affairs.

Lyle Lane, head of the U.S. interest section in Havana, has formally met only once with Cuban President Fidel Castro, and that was on May 19 when Castro called him in to deny Cuban troops took part in the invasion by Katangese irregulars of Zaire's Shaba province.

The Castro-Lane conversation was leaked to an American reporter in Washington — further straining relations.

"While the past year has shown that serious problems remain in the path of improving relations between the United States and Cuba," Lane told UPI during a recent visit to Havana, "the year has also shown that the establishment of the interest sections has been of value."

"The interest sections, the Cuban office in Washington and the U.S. office in Havana — provide channels for official communication and, on our part, the interest section provides a means to protect the interests of U.S. citizens (in Cuba)."

One of the U.S. interest section's first accomplishments was repatriating two planeloads of U.S. citizens from Cuba. About 200 others left Cuba for the United States in smaller groups or individually.

A month ago, the Cuban ministry of foreign relations approved the first list of dual (Cuban-American) citizens allowed to leave Cuba. There are about 500 families of dual nationals, and the Cuban list reportedly includes a "very generous" family nucleus.

Since the opening of the U.S. interest section, there has been an almost constant flow of congressional delegations, newsmen, businessmen, world affairs councils, university groups and tourists to Cuba.

The largest congressional mission was the 40-member House Banking committee, chaired by Rep. Henry Reuss, J-Wis., which descended on Havana Dec. 29 and stayed until New Year's Day. Smaller congressional groups have visited the Caribbean island at Cuba's behest.

Among the special interest groups visiting Cuba have been participants in two international fishing tournaments, a yacht tour of Cuba's northern coast and a birdwatchers group from Houston. Several groups of snorkelers have visited the coral reefs near the Isle of Youth.

"Cubatour (the Cuban state tourist department) does not encourage individual tourists to visit Cuba," one U.S. official said. "They prefer groups; they're not equipped to handle individuals."

Travel agencies in New York, Washington, Atlanta, California and Texas in the United States and at least one agency in Canada, which made its pitch to Americans living in the Midwest, brought about 8,000 American tourists to Cuba in the last year.

However, interest in travel to Cuba appears to be on the wane. Unitour, which took two planeloads of mostly American tourists to Cuba from Canada, discontinued flights. Other agencies have cut back their plans.

Life in Havana is not easy for the U.S. diplomats. Lane lived for seven months in a hotel before he was allowed to move into the refurbished former U.S. ambassador's residence. Ceiling light fixtures are still missing.

The Americans must submit to the Cuban foreign ministry lists of the Cuban officials they wish to meet. Months later only two or three of the officials may have been met. Most contacts are made at diplomatic receptions.

U.S. diplomats assigned to Cuba not only get an annual home leave, but they also receive a rest and recuperation leave. The State Department also is studying a revision upwards of the 15 percent hardship allowance now paid to diplomats in Havana.

Unlike some other Communist countries, however, U.S. diplomats do not live in a diplomatic compound.

"We're scattered all over the city," one said. "That gives us a better chance to get to know the people."

Rumored Trove Draws Gawkers, Burglars

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The word spread like quicksilver: there was a fortune in the old house where the widow lived. A crowd of gawkers gathered and grew. The police force grew to 100 officers. And the rumored "fortune" grew, too — from $35,000 to $45 million.

Police said there was nothing to the story, but the crowd stayed. The widow, however, left.

The object of all this furor is an ordinary looking row home on Orkney Street in a lower middle class neighborhood. Mabel Sheehan, 72, a reclusive widow, and her sheep dog live there.

The fuss began late last week, when the rumor started — police say wrongly — that the widow had bought a car for a friend and paid for several trips for other friends to their native Puerto Rico.

Soon, word had it there was $35,000 in the house.

People gathered. Attempted break-ins began Friday night.

So far, police say, they have arrested 12 people who tried to break in, one by knocking a hole in the roof.

The worst night was Monday, when several hundred people ringed the house. A hundred police, some on horseback and some in riot gear, stood watch.

By then, word had it there was $45 million in the house.

By Tuesday, police said, the crowd had melted away, but at least two policemen were being posted to guard the house overnight anyway.

Mrs. Sheehan left her besieged home Sunday and was still staying at a convent Tuesday. Police Inspector Paul Frankfield related her version of the story: her only income is a $287 monthly Social Security payment.

"She says the only thing that could possibly be construed as savings is that she's got her burial already paid for," Frankfield added.

"As far as I know — and I've been in the place — there's no money," said one detective. "It's only a rumor."

But a neighborhood youth wasn't having any of that: "If there is no money in there, then why are all these police guarding the house?"

Chorale Director Robert Shaw Reviews Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Shaw hears America singing, and thinks he may have something to do with it. "There has been an extraordinary enrichment in the last three to four decades, in personnel and repertory," says

Shaw. "There are a hundred places where it is happening — at North Carolina, Stanford, Tennessee, Ohio State — places where you might not think it would happen."

Although he has been music director of the Atlanta Symphony for the past dozen years, Shaw is probably still better known as the founder of the Robert Shaw Chorale and as a busy guest conductor of choral works. He was in New York recently while conducting an intensive two-week workshop in New Jersey. Stretching out on a shaded bench in Central Park one benign Sunday afternoon, Shaw reflected on his start as a choral conductor in the 1930s, marvelling at the distance traveled since then.

Back then, Shaw recalled, college choirs in national competition were performing school songs, show tunes and perhaps a short classical work. Now, a choir festival in Texas may resound with Beethoven's exuberant "Ode to Joy" from the Ninth Symphony or his Missa Solemnis, and the singers are still in high school, Shaw said.

Choral singing is still very much an amateur's domain, Shaw said, but the professional groups set the pace. "The professional chorus is extremely important to establish standards of performance, especially in baroque and early classical repertory," he said. "In a sense, I'm as responsible as anyone in the United States for starting the professional choir movement."

"I'm sure that the move by the early Robert Shaw Chorale from entertainment to Mozart masses and so on was a stimulus, but if audiences had stayed away, it would not have happened either."

Shaw gives much credit to Fred Waring, who hired Shaw in 1938 and whose Pennsylvanians were a radio fixture for years, five nights a week, 15 minutes at a time.

"That's a big dose of music," Shaw said. "He built professional competence into the American pop song that was as enthusiastically received as Glenn Miller."

The Robert Shaw Chorale, organized in 1948, also was on radio, toured extensively and recorded dozens of albums. The staples of the choral repertory are straight out of the Christian church: Requiems by Mozart and Brahms; masses by Schubert and Bruckner; Handel's Messiah, and the cantatas, passions and chorales of Johann Sebastian Bach, whose b minor mass is the acme of the choral canon.

How have these works won acclaim in a secular age? "It is also an age of humanism, people find religion in the secular," said Shaw, who once intended to follow his father into the ministry. "The great work VOLCANO LURES CURIOUS CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mount Etna, Europe's tallest volcano, spewed lava, rocks and ashes for the sixth consecutive day Wednesday and thousands of tourist sightseers climbed near the fissures on the 10,800-foot mountain. Officials said streams of lava had erupted from eight mouths on the volcano's southeast side and flowed 1.8 miles down its slopes. Villages in the area were in no present danger, officials said.

ROBERT SHAW

of art transcends the occasion of its creation." The proof, for Shaw, was in the Soviet Union. When the Chorale toured there in 1962, his hosts insisted on hearing the b minor mass.

"Institutions of religion and politics have slipped to second place; they have lost their legitimacy," Shaw said. "Somewhere, the arts are the custodian of the means to rise into humanity and dignity. "Most of this fragmented and fragmentary life we have is an attempt to establish relationships — with one human being, and with a social group committed to the same ethics and ideals we believe in."

"It is possible to join this sort of a group (choir) without sacrificing your integrity."

Limited Bell Rate Increase To Stand

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Public Utility Commission denied Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s request Wednesday to reconsider a $124.5 million rate hike ordered Aug. 2 for the utility.

The company had asked the commission for $214.3 million in new annual revenues.

Included in the new rate order are optional "lifeline" rates at approximately 40 percent of standard service charges. Customers in 15 cities will be able to pay a basic fee for up to 25 free local calls monthly. Each additional call would cost eight cents each.

Long distance, WATS and directory assistance rates were not affected, although fees for service connections and moves will be.

'Vegetable Soup' Returns On NBC Television

NEW YORK (AP) — "Vegetable Soup," the TV show that answers questions kids might be afraid to ask about the way people look and live, is back with some new ingredients.

"Between the ages of 4 and 12, kids have a number of questions that deal with race that are unexpressed, like questions about sex," says the program's executive producer, Yanna Brandt. "They wonder why one child is a different color or another's hair looks different.

"They often won't ask about these things," she says, "maybe because they consider the question too sensitive, or that it might embarrass someone, or themselves."

"Vegetable Soup" is based on the premise, she says, that "the more kids see of differences in people, the less prejudices there are."

The new series of 39 half-hour episodes, called "Vegetable Soup II," premieres on NBC Sunday at 8 a.m. EDT. About 160 public television stations also will carry "Vegetable Soup."

"Vegetable Soup" is aimed at children between the ages of 6 and 12, and attacks sexual as well as racial stereotypes. Each episode draws on real-life characterizations as well as animations.

The program's approach is magazine-style, smooth, often subtle, and cumulative, with emphasis on continuing stories and characters. "One of the reasons we built in serialization," Miss Brandt says, "is because we felt no one show could suddenly teach racial tolerance."

The series, produced by the Bureau of Mass Communications of the New York

State Education Department, was first broadcast in the fall of 1975. A $2.3 million grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education Welfare, helped pay for the current production.

Kids familiar with earlier episodes will recall character: like the Outerscope puppets and Eddie and his pet box constrictor. In "Vegetable Soup," the puppets' adventures are on earth, with real children and situations, and Eddie has outgrown his snake.

Woody the Spoon, Max the Marvelous X Machine and Long John Spoilsport are back, and new dramatic series have been filmed in Hawaii, in Florida with children of migrant workers, and in the Black Hills of South Dakota, with native American youngsters.

"Vegetable Soup," the show's producers have shown, works. In one study, a group of children saw 16 episodes of "Vegetable Soup" and a second group did not watch the program at all.

"There was a measurable, positive change in attitudes among the kids who saw the program," Miss Brandt says. "They were more welcoming, more open, more friendly in their attitudes toward others."

In addition, pilot episodes were shown around the country to 330 elementary school children from various backgrounds and, as a result, some segments were refined before broadcasts.

"We had to see what worked at what didn't," Miss Brandt said. "If they (kids) don't like it, you can forget your message."

Miss Brandt says the magnitude of the program's success has been something of a surprise to her.

"When I started with 'Vegetable Soup' 4 1/2 years ago, I had very modest aspirations for the program. I wondered how we would ever be able to come up with something that would meet our objective."

"Looking back, it has really exceeded my wildest objectives."

Historic Places Nominated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The boyhood farm of outlaws Jesse and Frank James is among sites in 16 states have been nominated for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places. Seven Texas sites were among those nominated.

The house in which the James boys were born has been listed in the register for several years, and the government is now considering adding the Missouri farm surrounding that house to the register.

If the nominated sites are added to the register certain federal funds and tax benefits can be made available for their restoration and preservation.

The government will accept comments until Sept. 8 on whether the nominees

TAX ROLLBACK

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Independent School District officials were attempting Wednesday to trim $6.4 million from the current budget to meet a loss of revenue brought by a rollback in city property taxes. The City Council had voted recently to keep property taxes at the 1977 level. And, the Houston school board, by a 5-1 vote, agreed Tuesday night to hold levies at the current level. Lou Harris, the only dissenter, said, "It is a sad day when the City Council and the mayor of Houston can decide the fate of thousands of children by arbitrarily rolling back the taxes and taking millions from the school district's revenues."

Over-Achiever In Varied Roles

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Phyllis George is a notorious over-achiever.

Being Miss America of 1971 was not enough for the Denton, Tex., beauty. She then went into broadcasting as co-host with Bert Parks of the Miss America Pageant (she'll be at it again Sept. 9), with Allen Funt on "Candid Camera," as entertainer and actress, as well as

PHYLIS GEORGE female pioneer in sports broadcasting ("The NFL Today"). "Going into sports wasn't easy," she admitted. "Many questions were raised: was I a threat to the male sportscasters? what did I know about sports? why was I there?"

"First I had to prove myself to me. I didn't know what role I was supposed to play, what questions I was to ask. I just had to learn to go in and try to get answers. Finally, with interviews with Jimmy Connors and Dave Cowens, I showed what I could do. People didn't realize that my Texas background gave me a thorough knowledge of sports."

She appeared destined for a career as the Columbia Broadcasting System's resident female jock until last January.

"I woke up after the Super Bowl and decided I'd had it," Phyllis recalled. "I told the people at CBS, and that's when they came up with a new contract, which involves appearances on comedy and dramatic shows as well as specials. 'People' provides a natural transition."

"People" will debut on CBS Sept. 18. It is based on the weekly People Magazine and is produced by Time-Life with David Susskind. Miss George will star as the principal narrator-interviewer.

She admitted that "People" drew brickbats from TV reviewers when the pilot was shown a few months ago.

"The show that we are doing differs from the pilot," Phyllis remarked. "The new format moves more quickly; most of the segments are three minutes long."

Much of the press criticism centered on a segment in which cameras followed the Manhattan wanderings of the premiere recluse, Greta Garbo. Critics considered it an invasion of the silent Swede's privacy.

"Perhaps the segment was not wise, but at the same time, it was not that bad," said Phyllis defensively. "I think the film is touching and flattering to her, showing how great she looks in her seventies. I did the voice-over, and I must say that I had tears in my eyes as I watched that fabulous woman."

"But if we did hurt her, I'm sorry." "People" will be like the magazine, Phyllis explained: "I can read it in 20 minutes and learn a lot." She was proud of a segment with country music superstar Willie Nelson, who is ordinarily shy of TV cameras.

"We went right into the bayou country of Louisiana and photographed him at a concert," she said. "I not only interviewed him on camera; I found myself on stage with him, singing and playing the harmonica." Another segment depicts Phyllis during a day at Southern California's La Costa resort being exercised, pounded and stroked in a fitness course.

"People" will be invading private lives such as Garbo's, and by the turnabout theory Phyllis George's should be fair game as well. She was asked what caused the breakup of her marriage (her first, his fourth) to film producer Robert Evans.

"Conflicting careers," she replied. "We were both going in 95 different directions."

Now would "People" settle for an answer like that?

Prisoner Transfer Plans Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans for a prisoner swap between Canada and the United States have been postponed until mid-October, a Justice Department official said Wednesday.

Steve Pontosso, an official with the Bureau of Prisons, said that "bureaucratic snarls" in Canada forced a delay in the transfer, scheduled to take place around this time.

There are approximately 200 Americans in Canadian prisons, including 150 who are eligible under a treaty between the two nations to return to this country if they wish.

COMPLETE STOCK MARKET INDEX

Mart Chokes Rally Off

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market recorded a slight gain Wednesday after concerns over interest rates, foreign trade and inflation choked off a prospective rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which showed signs of a possible advance late Tuesday and which was ahead by more than 3 points Wednesday afternoon, closed the day ahead 52 at 880.72.

Advances outnumbered declines by a slim margin among New York Stock Exchange issues, and Big Board volume rose to 37.75 million shares from 33.78 million in the previous session.

Many of Wednesday's big gainers were among the gambling industry issues. Bally, the leading slot machine maker, advanced 9 3/4 to 66 after Wurlitzer said it didn't plan to enter the gambling machinery business. Del E. Webb rose 3 to 34 1/4, while on the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International class A gained 5 to 117 and Golden Nugget advanced 43/8 to 39 1/2.

Ramada Inns, which owns 7 percent of Webb, led the NYSE most-active list, falling 3/4 to 12 1/2.

"This is one of the top fads of all stock market history," said Eldon A. Grimm at Burr, Wilson & Co. "There's been a lot of speculation. It's a crazy day, really."

Flight Attendants' Spokesman Pans New Video Series

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "coffee, tea or me" mentality of the new television program "Flying High" is an insult to the intelligence and morality of every flight attendant, the president of the Association of Flight Attendants charged Tuesday.

"The show concentrates more on bosoms than brains, and on sex more than safety," said Patricia D. Robertson after viewing Monday night's presentation of a pilot film for the series. Columbia Broadcasting System will air this season.

The pilot depicted the swinging life of three novice stewardesses, a portrayal Mrs. Robertson called inaccurate and demeaning.

"I can only say that the script used every stereotype and cliché that has ever been used in a derogatory manner toward flight attendants," she said. "We have worked for many years to dispel the mistaken image of flight attendants as sex goddesses, and this program is a real setback in those efforts."

"Flight attendants are on board planes not to be sexy stewardesses but for the safety of the passengers," Mrs. Robertson said. "If this first script is indicative of the rest of the series, we can only expect a reinforcement of the already negative image of flight attendances as brainless sex goddesses. Safety is our business — not sex."

A spokesman for CBS, asking not to be identified, said, "It certainly is not our intention to put flight attendants in a poor light or to downgrade them or embarrass them in any way."

"We would hope that they will keep in mind that this is really only the pilot for the series and we ask them to look at the next two or three episodes, and they might find something they'll enjoy."

If not, the spokesman said, "We would be delighted to sit down with them and listen to any criticism they might have."

Soviet Scientists Says Human Cloning Possible

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Soviet Geneticist said Tuesday there are no insurmountable technical difficulties to cloning mammals and eventually human beings, but he does not feel cloning humans is justified by scientific or social need.

Dmitri K. Belyayev, director of the Soviet Institute of Cytology and Genetics in Novosibirsk, in western Siberia, commented on the cloning issue during a news conference in connection with the 14th International Congress of Genetics held in Moscow.

Cloning involves reproduction of an organism asexually. The resulting offspring becomes an exact genetic copy of a single parent, rather than combining the genetic traits of two parents.

The publication last spring in the United States of a book claiming to describe the successful cloning of a human being touched off controversy over the potential implications of such sophisticated genetic techniques.

The book, "In His Image" by David Rorvik, presented no solid evidence to document the cloning claim. Many scientists have since said they believe the account was a hoax.

Belyayev noted that cloning so far has been accomplished only in lower animals such as frogs and salamanders.

"But the technique has been worked out," Belyayev said. "Maybe in the near future we can obtain exact copies of other animals, and even mammals."

"This technique is difficult to apply for the cloning of higher animals, but no special problems exist. Perhaps sometime this technique can be applied even to man, although some psychological, ethical and other problems would arise."

Asked about the advisability of striving to extend cloning methods to higher animals — cattle, horses and other mammals — and perhaps to humans, the Soviet scientist replied:

"Genetic copies of higher, productive animals are, of course, very necessary to obtain (in the interests of improved agricultural productivity)."

"Theoretically, it's possible to make such a copy of a man. But it is necessary to make such copies, even of very distinguished persons? I don't think so."

Experts Probe Works' Origins

LONDON (AP) — Those famous and oft-reproduced pastoral scenes of rolling green hills and lush meadows in the English countryside were painted by Constable, all right, but apparently not all by John.

Two leading British art experts have concluded that many works attributed to the great 19th-century English landscape painter were really from the brush of his son, Lionel, and others might have been painted by various Constable offspring, London's Daily Telegraph reported Tuesday.

The family, the experts say, was adept at mimicking the master, whose style over the years has been widely imitated by others and sometimes copied closely enough to fool and defraud art lovers.

Several years of research by Leslie Parris, deputy keeper of London's prestigious Tate Gallery, and Ian Fleming-Williams, the Tate's historian, means hundreds of Constables will have to be re-evaluated to determine identity of the painter, the Telegraph said.

The Tate, which confirmed the Daily Telegraph account, has roomful of Constables, and work attributed to him is also on exhibit at the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford, the Mellon Center of British Art at Yale University and elsewhere on both sides of the Atlantic.

The experts said the "Bridges on the Mole," one of two Constable works displayed in the Philadelphia Museum of Art, was painted not by John, but by Lionel, the Telegraph reported.

Donald Rosenthal, an assistant curator in the Philadelphia museum's department of European Painting, said he was unaware of the study and was checking on it. Of the two Constables on display he said: "I would really be surprised if they turned out to be someone else's work. But there's always that possibility in art."

Three others being attributed to Lionel are "The Old Barn," "Looking Over to Harrow" and "Brook, Trees and Meadows," oils in the Mellon Center of British Art at Yale University.

An assistant curator there, Susan Castoras, said the works had been suspect for some time, but she said of such turn-arounds in the art world, "In many of these cases, those paintings are no less diminished" by discoveries that the artist was really someone else.

The two British experts are declining comment until the full report of their sleuthing is published Sept. 5 in the Burlington Magazine, a respected art periodical.

Critics and dealers said Parris and Fleming-Williams have proved that at least 20 oil paintings, drawings and sketches attributed to Constable are the work of Lionel, his fourth and youngest son, who was 9 years old when his father died in 1837.

Many canvases were not signed, and as dealer Hugh Leggatt explained:

"Three other sons painted — John Charles, Charles Golding and Alfred. His daughter Isabel painted flower pictures. His grandson Hugh painted marine and country scenes. It is clearly possible that some of their work is masquerading as that of John."

Parris and Fleming-Williams say the Tate's famous "The Haywain" was indeed painted by John, but that the well-known "Near Stoke by Nayland," also in the Tate, was painted by Lionel, according to the Telegraph.

Other works now being attributed to Lionel include:

—A drawing of "Lookover over to Harrow" in the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard University.

—"View near Dedham," an oil in the Smith College Museum of Art, Northampton, Mass.

—A collection of sketches in the Staatliche Museum in Berlin and the Kunsthhaus in Munich.

—"Cornish Coastal Scene," an oil in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford, England.

Museum Offers Display Of Oriental Porcelain

Oriental porcelain, both Chinese and Japanese, for centuries has intrigued collectors, first in Europe and then in the United States.

At The Museum at Texas Tech the Collectors' Corner has on exhibit until Sept. 17 a portion of a collection owned by Mrs. Joe Brotherton, including a Japanese opium pillow, a delicate tea cup and even an artist's 1727 sketch book.

All of the Chinese porcelain is from the Ching Dynasty, which lasted approximately from 1644 to 1840. Of special interest is a tall wedding vase with blue on white Chinese characters meaning "double happiness." A jar with the same ideographs was used for storage, probably for wine.

A tiny brass box and a round cloisonne bowl exemplify the delicate artwork of the period.

Although each piece of porcelain was hand painted, great uniformity was achieved during the Ching Dynasty by allowing each workman to perform only one portion of the total task. As many as 70 people might be used to provide the complete piece, with each person performing just one specialized job.

The opium pillow, while only about 100 years old, is an oddity for westerners. The pipe was filled, lighted and placed in the bottom of the porcelain pillow, and the smoker was required to place his head sideways to inhale the fumes.

Two contemporary Japanese wood block prints add another art dimension to the exhibit. One of them is in color, the other black and white.

The program is aimed at bringing the two areas into compliance with the Federal Clean Air Act of 1970. The agreement, signed here Tuesday by U.S. District Court Judge Louis Bechtle, resolved a two-year-old federal court suit by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and a coalition of environmental groups.
