

Solons Hear Ray Deny Guilt In Slaying

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray took the witness stand before Congress today and swore, as expected, that "I did not shoot Dr. Martin Luther King."

Ray, in his first public accounting under oath of the events surrounding the April 4, 1968, murder of the civil rights leader, told the House Assassinations Committee: "My testimony is the same that I would have given to a Memphis trial court if I had had that opportunity."

The 50-year-old Ray, accompanied by a phalanx of U.S. marshals, was brought in to the committee's chamber under severe security provisions. Spectators, including photographers, were cautioned they would be expelled if they so much as stood while Ray, wearing an ill-fitting sport coat and gray tie, entered the room.

After his attorney, long-time assassinations buff and writer Mark Lane, engaged acting chairman Richardson Preyer in battle over Ray's treatment by federal authorities, Ray launched into a long and rambling preliminary statement, his voice quick but halting.

Ray pleaded guilty in 1969 to King's killing, but almost immediately recanted that confession after receiving a 99-year sentence in a Tennessee state prison.

"In respect to my guilty plea," he said, "it is not a difficult matter for an attorney to move his client to a guilty plea. I'm sure every member of this committee knows this." Ray's attorney at the time of his sentencing was Percy Foreman, a nationally-known trial lawyer.

Then Ray turned to what apparently will be the underlying theme of his claim to innocence: that he was a mere pawn in what he thought was a gun-running scheme by a mystery man named "Raoul" and may have been set up, moreover, by undercover operations of the FBI. The story is one which Ray has long aired via prison interviews.

In a rambling account, Ray told the committee about breaking out of Missouri State Prison in 1967 and traveling in zig-zag fashion to St. Louis, the Chicago area, Indianapolis and ultimately to Canada, where he spent one night with a prostitute and robbed her pimp the next — then met "Raoul" by chance on the Montreal docks.

In return for money and a never-fulfilled promise of travel documents, Ray said he carried items across the Canadian and Mexican borders for the Spanish-accented "Raoul," who had mysterious telephone numbers in New Orleans and no last name Ray could remember.

After smuggling the items, which Ray did not specifically identify, he said he went to Los Angeles, took a bartending course, tried unsuccessfully to go to work for the Internal Revenue Service, traveled to New Orleans to agree to the gun-running scheme with the mystery man — and ultimately returned to Los Angeles. "I was taking a lock-picking — rather a locksmith course at this time," Ray told the committee. At another point, he said: "I robbed the — I was robbed of a watch."

He told of trying to contact a girl who advertised herself in an underground Los Angeles newspaper "as a nympho-something." Apologetically, Ray added, "Of course, I had been in jail for about six years."

Without detailing any actual gun-running scheme with the mystery man — See JAMES EARL RAY Page 16

Memphis' Woes Hiked By Blackout, Looting

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A massive power failure blacked out Memphis early today and police arrested a private guard hired to beef up security at a utility substation during a strike by police and firemen.

The already-reeling city was further threatened by labor leaders who warned of a general strike unless a settlement comes soon.

Scattered looting was reported across town during the blackout, and a baby had to be delivered by flashlight at one hospital before emergency power could be connected.

Police Inspector W.L. Maley Jr. identified the arrested man as Richard Hyder, 29, of Nashville. He was arrested at 3:35 a.m. — about three hours after the blackout began — at a power company substation and was charged with interfering with power lines.

Private guards had replaced National Guard troops on duty at the Memphis Light Gas & Water Division's Cordova substation on Monday.

The blackout also left some areas without water pressure because electric-powered pumps were out. Memphis International Airport had to shift to standby power.

County police said between 15 and 20 adults were arrested on charges stemming from the looting, which was concentrated at northside liquor and convenience shops. They said five juveniles were in custody on charges of burglary or attempted burglary. National Guard troops, already on duty for the strikes, were dispatched to the county jail to beef up security.

Mayor Wyeth Chandler had been able to maintain calm the previous nights by imposing a dusk-to-dawn curfew. Some pickets have been arrested each night when they refused to disband by the 8 p.m. deadline.

The blackout came on the first anniversary of singer Elvis Presley's death. Thousands of his fans had come to this city of 650,000 to pay tribute at his grave at Graceland Mansion, but this was far fewer than had been expected before the strikes.

On Tuesday, Chandler modified his negotiations stance and offered to place the strikers' wage demands on a November ballot, giving voters a chance to pay for the settlement with a sales tax increase. The strikers rejected the idea and called for binding arbitration.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman said at a pre-dawn news conference that the blackout was "probably due to sabotage." The FBI was assisting investigators in the sabotage at the Memphis Light Gas & Water Division's Cordova substation.

Utility spokeswoman Paula Payne said someone entered the big plant and threw a series of switches — a complex procedure requiring knowledge of the system — which cut off a main electrical link with the Tennessee Valley Authority. The TVA's Allen Steam Plant on Presidents Island in the Mississippi River could not carry power demands alone and automatically shut down.

It took about 2½ hours to restore power to all of Shelby County.

The blackout came at 12:32 a.m., about 12 hours after Gov. Ray Blanton stepped into the dispute, demanding payment for National Guard services back to 1968 and calling for a quick settlement.

Chandler, asked about the governor's remarks this morning, said they suggested an attempt at "blackmail."

More than 1,000 National Guardsmen have been patrolling the city with about 100 non-striking police officers and 75 sheriff's deputies, while 200 Fire Department officials and non-striking firemen have kept 23 of the city's 48 fire stations open.

Roving pickets temporarily kept some garbage men and teachers off the job Tuesday. School is scheduled to start Thursday, but the teacher union has urged its 5,500 members to respect any picket lines.

The head of the Memphis AFL-CIO Labor Council, Tommy Powell, said he would ask the council on Monday to call a general strike and boycott of the city unless progress is made toward settling the disputes.

Some 1,100 policemen walked off their jobs Thursday night after rejecting the city's latest wage offer. They were followed Monday by most of the city's 1,400 firemen whose three-day strike in early July was interrupted by a court's back-to-work order.

The city had previously offered a wage increase package including an immediate raise of about 6.5 percent and additional raises in steps of $22.50 and 7.5 percent by Oct. 1, 1979.

The package would raise a journeyman patrolman's pay from $1,148 to $1,224 a month. A fireman's base pay is now $1,108 a month.

Case Clouds Sign Rules

Prosecution of an alleged violation of the city's controversial sign ordinance was thrown into confusion during a pretrial hearing, recessed today, which could have a major impact on pending cases.

Wright Gets Dallas' Top School Post

DALLAS (AP) — Linus Wright of Houston has been selected to succeed Dr. Nolan Estes as superintendent of the Dallas Independent School District.

Wright, 51, is currently serving as assistant superintendent for administration and support services in the Houston Independent School District.

WRIGHT

The decision, announced late Tuesday after a five-hour closed-door meeting of the DISD board, was made on a 6-3 vote split along racial lines.

Board chairman Bill Hunter had asked for a unanimous vote following Wright's nomination. The three minority board members who voted against confirmation announced after the vote that they favored Manfred Byrd, deputy superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools.

Other candidates still being considered by Tuesday night were Dr. James Adams, superintendent of Winston-Salem-Forsyth County, N.C., schools and Ramon C. Cortines, former superintendent of the Pasadena, Calif., Unified School District.

Wright will replace Estes, who resigned effective Jan. 1, 1979, to accept a professorship at the University of Texas at Austin. Estes will remain on the pay- See WRIGHT Page 16

Attorney Bill Wischkaemper, representing a client in County Court-at-Law No. 2, is seeking dismissal of misdemeanor charges, with one of his claims being that the sign ordinance has been unequalled enforced.

The defense lawyer earlier during the hearing apparently stunned prosecutors with the revelation that a local pharmacy which, according to testimony, has not been the subject of continued citations, had not in fact acquired an injunction against the city to prevent citations.

The fact not only caught assistant District Attorney Hollis Browning by surprise, it also surprised Jerrel Northcutt, city zoning administrator.

As a result of the development, Browning today requested and was granted a continuance in the case by presiding Judge J.Q. Warnick Jr.

Browning today said he was surprised by the evidence showing no injunction had been granted in a case involving L&H Drugs, Inc.

Wright said his information when he came into the courtroom to begin trying the case was that there was such an injunction.

"The reason (for the requested delay) is to find out the situation on L&H Drugs," the prosecutor stated.

The prosecution also said it was sur- See SIGN RULES Page 16

Balloonists Near Goal

BEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — High winds pushed three American adventurers in their helium balloon to within 275 miles of Ireland at noon today.

Spokeswoman Sue Bernard at the crew's land headquarters at Weather Services Corp. today said the trio could decide to touch down on Ireland in their huge silver and black Double Eagle II if they want to, or they can keep on going to their intended destination in France.

She said Ben Abruzzo, 48, Maxia Anderson, 44, and Larry Newman, 31, have completed more than 2,150 miles of the 3,500 mile trip.

ANNIVERSARY OF DEATH

Thousands Honor Elvis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Thousands of the faithful, ignoring picketing policemen and enriching an army of souvenir peddlers, swarmed to Graceland Mansion today to honor Elvis Presley on the first anniversary of his death.

The King of Rock 'n' Roll's death by heart attack at Graceland (Related Elvis Presley Stories on Pages 2, 3, Sec. A) land last year triggered an outpouring of grief unprecedented for an entertainer.

The pilgrimage to Memphis to commemorate that event this week was drastically cut by the police and firemen's strike that led city officials to clamp on a strict dusk-to-dawn curfew, rendering the town lifeless after dark.

"I think the curfew has slowed the number of visits," said Presley's uncle, Vester. "The people who've been coming through have seemed a little bit like a nervous bunch of cattle. They've been a little anxious to get up there."

Nonetheless, 7,000 persons, many clutching carnations and some weeping as though they had not stopped since they first heard the news, filed through the ornate gates of Graceland to view Presley's grave Tuesday. His uncle said he expected 10,000 today.

Keeping pace with the emotional involvement with the dead singer was the commercial cash-in.

Robert Barnett of Wausau, Wis., said he had spent more than $1,200 on Presley souvenirs since arriving in Memphis late last week.

"As long as it's got Elvis' picture on it, I'll buy it," Barnett said.

"The name of the game's money," Shelton said. "The more competition here the better, because we're all here to make a buck."

Senate Approves Carter Plan For Student Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today approved President Carter's plan to expand college grants and loans, making them available for the first time to middle-income students.

The 68-28 vote followed approval Tuesday night of a rival $500-per-student tuition tax credit that Carter opposes.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Rex Granum said the president's position "has not changed. He is strongly opposed to such."

But Granum did not say whether Carter would veto the bill.

The Carter program would provide aid to an additional 1.4 million students, with about 64 percent of the benefits going to students from families with incomes of $15,000 to $25,000 a year.

Carter's bill, approved with little debate, would allow a student from a typical four-member family earning as much as $25,000 to qualify for a tuition grant of about $250 a year. Depending on family size and disposable income, the grant could go as high as $1,800.

Present law generally allows such direct federal assistance only for students from families earning less than about $16,000.

The bill, which is pending in the House, also would make needy students regardless of family income eligible for subsidized guaranteed loans, which average about $1,000 each. The government would pay the interest on the loan while the student is in college.

Carter says his plan is far more equitable because it targets education aid to those who need it. In contrast, the tuition credit, which was approved 65-27 Tuesday, would be available to all, regardless of need.

The president says the nation cannot afford both programs. Although the vote on the tax credit was lopsided enough to override any presidential veto, the margin by which the House approved its version of the credit last June was far short of the two-thirds majority necessary to override.

Even so, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., chief sponsor of the bill, said the Senate vote was "a clear signal that tuition tax credits are preferred to the costly, cumbersome Carter proposal."

Before approving the tuition credit, the Senate ended three days of arguments over constitutionality by eliminating a provision that would have provided a credit for parents of pupils attending private elementary and secondary schools.

The House-passed bill includes tuition aid for those lower level schools and, thus, the issue will be among those to be decided by a House-Senate conference committee. But backers see little hope for retaining the elementary-secondary aid provision this year.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, urged rejection of all tuition aid bills this year — credits and grants alike — because of the need to cut federal spending.

Fans Beat Memphis Curfew By Remaining Inside Estate

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Their pilgrimage completed, two New Yorkers passed a dusk-to-dawn curfew encamped at the shrine of their idol who excited millions with the swivel of his hips and sneer on his lips.

The 1,500-mile journey for the first anniversary of the death of Elvis Presley was the fourth time Al and Maria Zappala of Syracuse, N.Y., pounded the blacktop to Graceland Mansion, where the king of rock 'n' roll and his mother are buried side-by-side.

"We had never been anywhere before Elvis died," Mrs. Zappala said Tuesday. "My husband said, 'If I can get the time off, do you want to go to the funeral? Did I want to go? We just threw some things in the car and we were off."

On this latest visit, Tennessee's largest city was embroiled in a strike by firefighters and policemen and Mayor Wyeth Chandler clamped an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew on its 650,000 residents.

The Zappalas, who were unable to make hotel reservations, and about 50 other fans were told by the gatekeeper they had to either spend the night on the 13-acre estate or leave. Vester Presley, Elvis' uncle, said if the fans left once the gate was closed, they would not be allowed back in.

While several people passed pillows, blankets and soft drinks to him over the mansion's wall, Zappala said he and his wife journeyed to Memphis just to visit Presley's grave in October and April before arriving Sunday for the anniversary.

Mingling and chatting with the fans, some attired in sequined T shirts proclaiming love for Elvis, Mrs. Zappala said she never thought policemen would still be on strike when she and her husband reached their destination.

"I can't believe they did this thing, considering all Elvis did for this city and especially the police," she said as several teen-age girls scribbled their names on the wall by the wrought-iron gates adorned with musical notes.

A Shelby County sheriff's deputy, who asked not to be identified, said he didn't believe anyone near the mansion would be arrested.

"I just can't believe I'm here," Mrs. Zappala said while talking with a woman whose left wrist sported an Elvis Presley watch and her upper arm a tattoo of "The King."

Although weaned on Presley's music and gyrations, she said she managed to see him only once in concert.

"He was supposed to be in Syracuse the Saturday after he died," Mrs. Zappala said. "We had driven around from Rochester when we heard about the concert on the radio and headed back to Syracuse for tickets. I stood in line for about 18 hours waiting. But he never made it."

"I never thought I'd be at the funeral but I had to do something. Now, I've seen him more times in death than in life."

A MAD CRUSH — Dolores Flores has a crush that won't go away, though the object of her affection, Elvis Presley, has been dead for one year today. "All that matters is Elvis," Mrs.

Flores says. "I don't care if people laugh at me. They can make fun of me, make fun of my weight, as long as they don't say one bad word about Elvis." (AP Laserphoto)

ELVIS FANS STRANDED — Tourists from Belgium joined about 50 Elvis Presley fans at Graceland Mansion in Memphis Tuesday morning when a citywide curfew prevented them from going to hotels. With city police and firemen on strike and national guard troops roaming the city, the Elvis fans were caught inside visiting the gravesite of their idol. They camped out on the lawn even after authorities said they could leave. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Strike Hurts Several Businesses

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — With thousands of Elvis Presley fans jamming the city for the first anniversary of their idol's death, it should have been gold rush days, but Ulysses Nesbit, manager of the Friendly Cab Co., was gloomy, and so was all night market security officer Eugene Fields.

Their expected bonanza was drowning in red ink as rifle-packing National Guardsmen and non-striking police officers enforced a dusk-to-dawn curfew this week that has turned Memphis into a ghost town after dark.

The city was caught in the grip of a combined strike by police and firemen.

With the exception of continued arrests of strikers, primarily for violating the 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew ordered by Mayor Wyeth Chandler, the city was silent, its streets deserted.

The city's 1,100 union policemen have been on strike since midnight Thursday and about 1,400 firefighters joined the walkout Monday. That left a skeleton crew from both departments, backed by 1,200 heavily armed guardsmen, to provide protection for the city's citizens.

The curfew sharply reduced revenue of businesses that normally operate at night by curtailing activities planned to commemorate the first anniversary of Presley's death today. Anyone found on the streets between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. was subject to arrest.

"It's really putting a load on us," Nesbit said. "About 70 percent of our business is at night. The kind of people who really kick the money to us usually ride the cabs at night to bars, restaurants and movies. It's really hurting the city."

Fields, regional security officer for the 10 all-night Majik Markets in the Memphis area, said he was having no unusual problems with burglaries or break-ins, but noted the chain was losing money.

"I can tell you right off the bat that our sales are way down," Fields said.

Handel Durham, assistant manager of the Hyatt Regency, said the hotel's exclusive Hugo's restaurant had to be closed Monday night. And he said guests were complaining because the hotel bars all have been closing at 8 p.m. since the curfew began last Friday.

The owner of an amusement arcade near Memphis State University, Morris Stock, said his night business has been seriously slowed. But he said he supports both striking firemen and police.

"I still think they're right in trying to get what they want, especially the police, because they protect me, my friends and my business," Stock said.

Retired Memphis electronics worker J. Milton Allen saw the situation differently.

"I'd like for them to stop this striking business and get back to work," he said. "I think the public's sick and tired of it. If the Guard sees somebody trying to start a fire, they ought to shoot them."

Members of both the police and firefighters unions have accused Chandler of taking a "paternalistic" attitude during futile attempts to negotiate a new contract. Men walking the picket lines Monday vowed to remain on strike until their demands are met.

And one fireman picketing a firehall said, "if Memphis goes up in smoke, it's not our fault."

Local Fans Still Mourn On Date Of Elvis' Death

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A year after Elvis Presley's death, Viola Kirksey of Levelland still speaks of him with a quaver in her voice and says she'll stay home from work today in remembrance of the singing idol.

Mrs. Kirksey, president of a Presley fan club, may typify thousands of Americans who quietly will observe the anniversary of the singer's death today.

Presley, who enthralled audiences worldwide during a 21-year crooning career, died of a heart attack at age 42 last year at his home in Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. Kirksey says she went to Memphis on Elvis' birthday in January, but says it would be too traumatic to go there in observance of his death. "I just can't go," she says in a hushed voice.

But she adds she is even more upset over the commercialism that has sprung up over Elvis' death.

"It's gotten so commercialized," she said of her recent trip to Memphis. "Everywhere you go — groceries, motels — they all have Elvis items for sale. And they don't talk about Elvis himself, but about what they have to sell. This is the very latest in souvenirs, they all tell you. Everyone wants to get in on the thing now that he's dead," she said.

But A-J correspondent Donna Rannels of Sundown, who recently visited Elvis' Graceland mansion in Memphis, said she was struck by the peacefulness and serenity of the late singer's home.

"As you walk up the drive you can see the white columns (of the home) through the tall trees; peacefulness and solitude make you feel as if you left the rest of the world behind.

"To one side you see the horses Elvis kept for his daughter and friends grazing in the pasture. The house is prominent yet not quite as big as you might expect, with white columns and the exterior done in the traditional Southern style," Mrs. Rannels observed. "People seeing (Graceland) for the first time approach it as if they would a national shrine."

Here in Lubbock, the anniversary of Elvis' death seems to be passing almost unnoticed. Record stores report no jumps in Elvis record sales and a survey of local florists turned up no orders for commemorative flowers.

Impersonator's Career Booms

By MARIAN FOX

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The day after Elvis Presley died, Bill Haney predicted his Presley-impersonist career would boom. A year later, a wearier, wiser and richer Haney says it has — but so have the problems.

"The pressures are so much greater, that's the biggest thing," Haney said after he brought his show to a local motel to mark the first anniversary of the rock idol's death last Aug. 16.

"I know a little of what he had to live under. I see now that getting to the top is hard. And I can see after getting on top the kind of pressure he would have to live with to stay there. I'm sure that's what caused him to die young."

The past year has brought the former real estate salesman problems with management, travel, personnel and scheduling. The demands on his time have tripled and he has found himself away from his West Memphis, Ark., home more than he would like.

But for all his troubles, the 36-year-old Haney said the year has brought money.

"I've actually worked less this last year than the year before Elvis died, but it's more beneficial because we're playing bigger places. The money is — there's no comparison to the money. Without getting right down to it, I'd say it's 10 times better."

Florida Solon's Trial Delayed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The trial of U.S. Rep. J. Herbert Burke, facing misdemeanor charges arising from an incident at a nightclub featuring nude dancers, has been delayed — probably until after the Sept. 12 primary election.

Broward County Judge George Shaheed granted a continuance Monday at the request of Burke's lawyer, Peter Aiken, who said he has "an inordinate amount of investigative work" to do before the trial.

Aiken agreed to waive Burke's right to a speedy trial, which would have required that proceedings begin by Aug. 24.

The delay allows Burke, 65, to concentrate for now on his challenger in the Republican primary, Anthony Contenni. However, Aiken denied that he sought the delay for that reason, though he admitted that he thought Burke stood a better chance in the primary if the trial were postponed.

Burke, who was not at Monday's hearing, is charged with disorderly intoxication, resisting arrest without violence and trying to influence a witness to lie about the incident.

Burke, who is seeking his seventh term in the 12th Congressional District in Broward County, was arrested May 27 after a disturbance at the Centerfold Club, a night spot featuring nude go-go dancers. Burke has said he went to the club to watch two men he had heard discussing a drug deal.

estimated his income at $50,000. He said he now earns about $500,000. "But my expenses are a lot heavier now. Some of my jumpsuits cost $2,000 each and I have 12 people on the payroll."

Part of Haney's discontent results from his having to handle the business as well as the entertainment ends of his career. He has not found a manager.

"I thought before all this came on that it would be great to see a lot of things happen," he said. "Now I see the reason why Elvis was so isolated from his business. If you don't stay away from the business end of it and stay on the entertainment end, it will drive you up the wall."

And being den mother to his dozen employees has not been easy. "Worrying about if they will make it to the show that night, if they're well," he said. "Some of them are so immature, and I'm responsible for them as well as me."

Haney says, however, the good outweighs the bad.

"The good is in the money situation and the fans. The admiration is nice. Everybody likes to be recognized. I've gotten spoiled by it."

THE KING — At age 42, Elvis Presley, "The King of Rock 'n' Roll," died at his Memphis, Tenn., home a year ago today. Elvis' career spanned more than two decades, irreversibly changing the popular music industry, and drawing literally millions of fans under his spell. He is shown here performing at a concert several years before his death. (A-J file photo)

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

An Eye On The Sparrow

IT MAY HAVE come as a mild surprise to many persons to hear church leaders of all persuasions of faith express sorrow at the passing of Pope Paul VI and to take note of his successor.

On the contrary, it should be recognized for what it was, an outpouring of sympathy for the passing of a man with untold influence on the lives and thoughts of millions.

POPE PAUL VI sought to make his beliefs and his religion a "working religion."

He traveled extensively, spoke out on many subjects.

And while one might not always agree with the minute details, his broad concept of the needs of mankind, his role as a responsible citizen based on individual performance and acceptance of the results of his action was a theme to which all could relate.

His efforts in seeking to bring peace to the world, especially in the strife-torn areas of the Mideast, his appeal to reason and sanity in a world that seemed to border at times on terrorism and anarchy, all were goals the man in the street could understand.

POPE PAUL VI ruled at a time of vast change, including that within the Roman Catholic Church itself.

A less tolerant spokesman for the 700 million Catholics around the world might have tipped the controversy over various church beliefs and functions into an era of even greater confrontation.

Instead, he steered a steady course, urging reasoning, yet never compromising his basic beliefs nor those of the church which he headed.

HIS SUCCESSOR will have to be a man of most unusual talents and understanding.

It is not enough to choose to prove anything to the rest of the world, such a person from the Third World or a black pope, for instance.

Surely, after the ages, the Roman Catholic Church is past such tokenism.

In many ways, the departed Pope himself set the path—keep one's eyes, mind, heart and soul on the ultimate goal, the betterment of mankind.

If we all do this, regardless of race or creed, then as we leave for a better life, those left—as was the case for Pope Paul VI—will have reason to applaud.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Aw, Who Cares How They Vote?

WASHINGTON—A recent study from the Historical Research Foundation confirms a conclusion that less scholarly analysts reached a long time ago: Politics can be a wacky business.

Wacky in this sense: In congressional elections, and in many other areas also, things that theoretically ought to matter simply don't matter.

At least, they don't matter decisively. And the corollary proposition is that things that shouldn't greatly matter in a representative form of government often make all the difference in the world.

Those of us in the pundit business put great store by issues. Public opinion pollsters do the same thing.

Such diverse outfits as Americans for Democratic Action and the American Conservative Union are forever drawing up neatly tabulated box scores of how members of Congress are hitting or erring.

BECAUSE WE commentators tend to get all wrought up about national health insurance, aid to education and the Equal Rights Amendment, we fondly suppose the voters are equally concerned with these issues. Well, they're not.

The Historical Research Foundation set out to study some apparent inconsistencies in the House of Representatives.

Directors of the project first identified 16 congressional districts in which voters apparently had acted in some inexplicable way.

A presumptively liberal district had elected a conservative, or vice versa. A team of interviewers undertook to find out why these anomalies had occurred.

In the end, the researchers settled upon six districts for intensive analysis. Their findings would make a political scientist cry.

What matters most is not a congressman's voting record. It's his style. Is he friendly? Energetic? Accessible? Does he have a nice smile? Does he answer his mail?

AGAINST THESE considerations, party labels pale into insignificance. Political philosophy matters little. Did the nice young congressman get Uncle Joe's Social Security straightened out?

Did he look after LeRoy's benefits under the GI Bill of Rights? Did he send us the baby book?

Two factors have replaced many of the old, rational reasons for supporting a particular candidate. One factor is personality; the other is constituent services.

For a specific example, consider the Second District of Colorado. It is a predominantly affluent suburban district to the west of Denver with a record of supporting conservative Republican candidates.

Yet the Second District has twice elected Timothy E. Wirth, a liberal Democrat.

ON ONE ISSUE after another—public works spending, common site picketing, natural gas, repeal of the Hatch Act—Wirth has voted the liberal line.

How come he wins? Wirth is handsome, articulate and energetic. He holds graduate degrees from both Harvard and Stanford. He is a former White House fellow.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, except that your health insurance doesn't cover it.

ONE MAN'S OPINION 'The Dean' Is Back!

BILL KLATTENHOFE, among others, wants to know if a federal judge's order permitting Iranian students to march here while wearing masks isn't in contradiction of state law.

Back in the heyday of the Ku Klux Klan and maybe as an outgrowth of a Cisco bank robbery in the mid-20s, Klattenhoff recalled, Texas passed a law forbidding the wearing of masks in parades and other public gatherings.

He's right, assistant City Attorney Ken Jones says. Texas did have such a law. However, when the Legislature revised the state penal code in 1973, it wiped the anti-mask law off the books.

No, Virginia, the movie "Dirkie" is not about a mayor trying to survive in the municipal wilderness.

A North Texas economist contends that housewives are over-compensated for their domestic duties. The interesting part about his theory is not so much that he came up with it but that he lived to tell about it.

TODAY'S MAY BOUQUET: To Dean Killion, who has recuperated so well from brain surgery in March that he'll be back on the field leading his Texas Tech band in the halftime shows at Jones Stadium this fall.

"He's getting better every day," says an associate, "and is working on new shows just like always at this time of year."

A band student jokes: "He's better than before: now he doesn't talk quite as fast!"

Killion's fans, who number into the tens of thousands, will be glad that he won't have missed

Holmes Alexander:

'I-Like-Ike' Guys Like Haig

WASHINGTON—The next President of the United States could very well be Alexander Meigs Haig Jr., presently United States and Allied Commander in Europe.

Says who? Says the Old Eisenhower Brigade, the surviving I-Like-Ike Republicans of the 1950s when the party and the country confronted situations shockingly similar to what we've got today.

Name names, I hear it dared. I shall name only one and only because Hugh Sidey, TIME's man with the Upper Crust, has done so first. Bryce Harlow is talking Al Haig to the old Eisenhower clubmen who have spoken to me and who will soon speak up for themselves.

U.S. senators who have visited Haig in his Belgium headquarters say well of him as something new enough in American politics to be exploited.

HAIG IS A geopolitician. He has experience in the war theatres of Europe and Asia. It is not generally known, but Haig was a CIA plant on Nixon after the ex-President had to fire Halde-man and Ehrlichman.

Haig isn't exactly what the floundering country needs—which is a domestic bossman with a big stick—but Haig is next-best, a military executive who can govern.

It couldn't happen if there weren't a will in dynamic history for it. Haig was there to persuade Nixon to resign before the meshing knives of the impeachment process cut him forever out of American life. We can still use Nixon.

HAIG WAS ON DECK when General Goodpastor's tenure as Supreme Commander ended and President Ford owed Haig the job he got as Supreme Commander.

As in 1952, the White House seat in 1980 almost surely will have an outgoing Democrat, a one-termer this time. In 1952, the country was so partisan that we had the Thurmond Dixiecrats and Wallace Progressives, as well as Democrats and Republicans.

The wheel has totally revolved so that today the State of Maine elected a no-party governor and, by every sign, the American people yearn for a no-party Congress and national leadership.

If I am right, Al Haig is lucky he was around at Watergate, and close to Nixon, because it put him in a sanctified group who came away spotless from that mudstorm.

Haig now finds himself, not just with Bryce Harlow and Henry Kissinger, but with Melvin Laird, George Schultz, Jim Schlesinger, Robert Bork, Rogers Morton, Don Rumsfeld, Anne Armstrong, Elliot Richardson, Bill Timmons, Pat Buchanan, Bill Simon, Caspar Weinberger, George Bush, and others who remained mudless.

a single game. Rosalynn Carter will be 51 Friday. Jimmy ought ask her advice on how to get the country into as good a shape.

My Neighbor Twice Removed says that the thing which worries him most about the striking police demonstrators in Memphis is that "they're setting a bad example for our farmers."

Dr. William M. Pearce, the former Texas Tech vice president, and Mrs. Pearce have retired to Lubbock after a long and highly successful tenure in Fort Worth as president of Texas Wesleyan.

Sen. Edward M. Brooke is among the latest to predict that Sen. Ted Kennedy will be the Democratic nominee for President in 1980.

"It's a plot," says the Neighborhood Reactionary. "They're just trying to make us think how lucky we are to have Carter."

Burle Pettit wonders if the ERA promoters are going to press for selection of a "Popeperson." Yeah, and the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals probably will rule that Baptists, Methodists and Orthodox Jews have to be given "equal access to the political process."

If Houston has its way, Lubbock area motorists soon will be subsidizing auto repair shops there. Using its growing political influence, Houston wants car insurance rates to be uniform statewide.

With a higher accident rate, and higher body shop prices, Houston motorists now pay higher insurance premiums than do others, as they should, because the state now is divided into districts for insurance purposes. But Houstonians want to goase us to help them pay their bills.

POLICEMEN, firemen, garbage workers, nurses and other protectors of our lives, properties and health have a responsibility not to walk off their jobs en masse and leave the public unprotected.

Memphis policemen and firemen who have violated the law and defied a court order by going out on strike should be fired, required to forfeit all accrued benefits and, if they persist, be carted off to jail.

Individually, the strikers probably are pretty nice guys for the most part. But mob psychology is strange.

IN THE CASE of public employees, the Memphis experience proves again that collective bargaining by unions should be outlawed; it is not enough merely to outlaw strikes.

If a policeman or fireman doesn't like his pay, he should quit—after giving due notice—rather than become a lawbreaker putting his own desires above his responsibility.

If the pay actually is too low, the turnover rate and the difficulty in getting qualified applicants soon will force appropriate salary adjustments on a city.

But unionized policemen and firemen who decide to take the law into their own hands are unworthy of the public trust and should be barred from further public employment.

Art Prices Booming As Inflation 'Hedge'

IN ALL HISTORY, there never has been a more monumental season for the world of art than the summer of 1978.

In London in June, bidders from all over the world poured out a record $34.1 billion at Sotheby Parke Bernet's auction of the Baron Robert von Hirsch collection of splendid art.

Walter Feilchenfeldt, a Zurich dealer, paid the highest price ever at auction for a watercolor by an artist—$1,177,600 for an Albrecht Durer work.

"I was amazed at the prices here," said Feilchenfeldt, "but I paid them because we will never have another chance at some of these things."

In New York City also in June, Sotheby Parke Bernet reported its first nine-figure month—record-smashing net sales of $112 million. Sales skyrocketed 40 percent on the strength of American bidding in such areas as Impressionist and Modern painting, European Old Masters, French furniture and jewelry.

IN LOS ANGELES at the same time, a new high was set for any American work of art—$980,000 for "The Jolly Flatboatmen," by George Caleb Digham, circa 1848.

In April, a world peak was reached for an American portrait with the $265,000 sale of a Thomas Eakins.

Sales of paintings of major importance in the $1 million range are actually becoming commonplace! A Van Gogh has sold for $1,300,000 and a Rembrandt self-portrait for $1,519,200.

These prices are hundreds of thousands of dollars above the levels they would have commanded only a few years back and, if brought to today's feverish auction market, the odds are they would bring substantially more.

Among individual artists, the upsurge also has been sensational for Renoirs, Monets, Picassos and Braques.

You can find art prices published weekly in many newspapers and art departments in big-city department stores.

FRANCHISED ART galleries have been set up across the nation. While art investment funds have not multiplied as expected in Paris and in New York, investment counselors are offering advisory services in investment in art works.

Adding to the frenzy is the entrance of the young American into the investment-in-art sphere, investing thousands of dollars a year in paintings and sculptures, for aesthetic as well as money-making potentials.

Then there are the corporations—not only the famous giants who display contemporary sculpture and paintings in and around most, if not all, of their buildings, but also small companies following the lead in investing for gain as well as for status.

"What are the key factors behind this raging art boom?"

(1) INFLATION, obviously. During this whole phase of rapidly climbing living costs, favorite investments have been tangible, rare, valuable assets—ranging from rare books to old wines.

(2) The growing American sophistication along with the funds to satisfy the yearning for culture. As museums and universities buy art works, they, too, help drive up prices.

(3) And there are the basics behind every price upsurge: a growing demand coming head up against a steadily shrinking supply of the acknowledged, familiar masters.

And if you're an amateur in the market to buy? Study good American paintings on subjects of unusual historical, social or geographic interest for investment. Prices range from $1,000 to $10,000 and up.

Artists of the German 19th century are strong—at prices from $600 to $6,000 and beyond.

Primitive art works, such as authentic African wood carvings and pre-Columbian works are worth your time—but buy only from top-rated galleries.

ALSO STUDY classical antiquities such as small bronzes, pottery, and sculptures from the Mediterranean.

A large, significant collection can be built for about $50,000 (against $30,000 in the early 1970s) and antiquities are viewed as solid investments, with most individual art objects in this category priced at only a few hundred dollars.

Specialize and become known in a specific field to other investors with whom you can exchange information and items.

More Competition Than Money In Business, Sailmaker Says

By LES SEAGO

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The smell of salt air is distinctly absent, and there doesn't appear to be a scrap of canvas in the house. But hidden deep within an office complex near the airport is a genuine sailmaker's loft.

"There's more competition in this business than money," Chris Rooke, perhaps the only professional sailmaker between Atlanta and Dallas, said.

Rooke's clientele are hobbyists who take their sailing seriously, racing small craft on weekends for trophies and prestige. A sailmaker whose sails show up on enough winners soon finds boat owners standing in line at his door.

Rooke, 30, still waiting for the line to form, has been involved in sailing since he was a boy. His father was one of those serious sailors who taught his son the difference between a jib and a halyard when he was barely old enough to climb over the gunwale.

"Everybody was out playing basketball and baseball and I'm out sailing," Rooke said in an interview.

When he finished high school, he headed for Mississippi State University to study aeronautical engineering.

The link between aeronautical engineering and sailing, Rooke said, is that a sail is nothing more than an airfoil. The wind blowing across a sail creates suction that pulls the boat along. And much of the theory that applies to low-speed aerodynamics applies to sail design.

"What I wanted was an aeronautical engineer's calling card and to be a sailmaker," Rooke said.

After graduation, he worked for a while at a New Orleans sailmaker's loft, then returned to Memphis where he set up his own.

"I actually began in my mother's ballet studio," he said. "They had these nice wooden floors that were perfect for laying out sails. ... I'd lay out a suit of sails in the morning and go home in the afternoon to sew them up on my sister's sewing machine."

His business, augmented by the manufacture and sale of small boat covers, soon outgrew the studio. He presides over a large, cluttered unit in a row of offices with a small fleet of sailboats, another sideline, outside the door.

Manufacturing a suit of sails begins with a roll of nylon which years ago replaced canvas as the sailors' choice. Laying an acetate template on the fabric, Rooke marks and cuts, pinning the nylon down along a series of colored lines marked on the floor.

Accuracy is important, he said. Movement of a seam by less than an inch can mean the difference between a mediocre boat and a winner.

Once the sail is pinned, it is sewn together by a seamstress with an electric sewing machine.

"We can't make a living just making sails right now," Rooke said. "The boat covers and the sailboats keep us going. ... But the way this sport is growing, in a few years there'll be such a demand."

Stress Hinders Air Controllers

GALVESTON (AP) — Work stress, job dissatisfaction and alienation are associated with a variety of physical and psychological disorders among air traffic controllers, a Boston University School of Medicine study says.

The five-year medical study was commissioned by the Federal Aviation Administration and conducted by Boston University researchers.

The study surveyed 416 male air traffic controllers in the Boston and New York areas. They ranged in age from 25 to 49 and had worked at their jobs from 3 to 20 years.

The researchers said air traffic controllers are two to four times more likely to have hypertension than the average for the general population. Of the controllers who participated in the study, 135 had borderline or definite hypertension when the study began and an additional 36 developed hypertension during the study.

However they said results of the study should not be interpreted to mean air traffic control work itself causes hypertension.

The researchers said less than 1 percent of the controllers had physiological symptoms of alcoholism, significantly lower than the national average, and the rate of alcohol abuse was about the same as that of men in other occupations.

However, the report noted a potential health problem in the high use of alcohol in social drinking after work.

Dr. Robert M. Rose, one of the researchers connected with the study, said the younger men who have less experience with the FAA experienced more mild and moderate health changes.

He said the high illness group claimed to have more invested in their work and that their work "cost" them a lot subjectively.

The same group also reported the least satisfaction with management and consistently rated their supervisors as showing less than adequate consideration for others, Rose said.

"The men who were more likely to develop psychological problems or minor illnesses were more likely to be dissatisfied with their job situation and feel alienated on the job," Rose said.

"Also, the air traffic controllers in general expressed a much more negative attitude toward the FAA than did other groups." Rose said the job dissatisfaction and feeling of job alienation probably were strongly related to a lack of positive feedback concerning work performance.

West German Tour Set For Cardinal

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński, the Roman Catholic Primate of Poland, will tour Mainz, Munich, Cologne and the former Nazi concentration camp at Dachau during a visit to West Germany next month.

The cardinal will head a Polish church delegation to West Germany Sept. 20-24, the German Bishop's Conference said.

West German Catholic churchmen have frequently visited Poland over the years, and the cardinal's visit is regarded as a return visit.

The Polish delegation will include Cardinal Karol Wojtyła, the archbishop of Krakow, Bishop Jerzy Stroba of Stettin and Vladislav Rubin, the primate's delegate for emigrant's affairs.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning star is Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus, Mars, Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

Robert Ringling, of circus fame, was born Aug. 16, 1897.

On this day in history:

In 1896, north country gold rush fever began. Gold was discovered in the Klondike region of Canada's Yukon Territory.

In 1948, baseball Hall-of-Famer Babe Ruth died in New York City of cancer.

In 1971, New York stocks broke a 197-year price and volume record in response to President Nixon's wage-price-rent freeze announced the day before.

In 1977, rock music idol Elvis Presley died of a heart attack at his home in Memphis, Tenn., at the age of 42.

A thought for the day:
American naturalist John Burroughs said, "Time does not become sacred until we have lived it."

Carter Aide Quits Post As Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's speechwriter has resigned and his television adviser may be reassigned as a major reshuffling continued today in the way the president is presented to the public.

Deputy press secretary Rex Granum confirmed that James Fallows, 29, informed Carter in June he would leave the staff after the November elections to return to journalism. Granum added, however, the departure was "on the best of terms."

"The president thinks highly of Fallows and Fallows thinks highly of the president," Granum said.

Fallows formerly was editor of Washington Monthly and associate editor of the Texas Monthly, both political journals. He succeeded novelist Pat Anderson as Carter's chief speechwriter after the inauguration.

Granum would not comment, however, on the future of Barry Jagoda, 34, a presidential special assistant who has advised Carter on television appearances for three years.

But it was believed significant that Granum did not deny the gossip column report in the Washington Star that Jagoda would be assigned to the National Security Council staff in some capacity.

Both Fallows and Jagoda earn $42,000 a year. Both have come under the responsibility of Gerald Rafshoon, Carter's long-time advertising adviser who joined the White House staff this summer as presidential assistant for communications. Since he joined the staff, there has been a spate of resignations and reassignments.

Greg Schneiders, who was Carter's aide-de-camp during the campaign and who had been destined to be White House appointments secretary until disclosure of some financial difficulties, has become Rafshoon's deputy. He had been serving as White House director of projects, supervising such things as presidential reaction to disasters throughout the nation.

Kevin Gorman, who was a press aide during the campaign, also has joined the Rafshoon operation. He has taken over such duties as helping local television stations obtain interviews with high administration officials.

The first lady's staff also has changed. It was learned this week that Ann Anderson, wife of Patrick Anderson, has departed as deputy press secretary Mary Finch Hoyt.

Barbara Heineback, a black from south Georgia, also resigned from Mrs. Hoyt's staff several weeks ago to spend more time with her child. Mrs. Hoyt said she will continue to work part time.

Shooting Fatal To Ralls Man

A 24-year-old Ralls man died about 5:20 a.m. today at Methodist Hospital from a gunshot wound he suffered about two weeks ago during a fight in Lorenzo.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack identified the dead man as Robert Lincoln Ybanez. He reportedly had suffered one gunshot wound in the head.

Crosby County Sheriff Fred Owen said Ybanez was shot during a fight in some field hands' barracks in Lorenzo. He said a suspect in the shooting was thought to be in Mexico.

Ybanez was taken to Carter Funeral Home in Ralls where services were pending this morning.

Drivers Urged To Use Caution

With the first day of school this fall only a few weeks away, the Texas Department of Public Safety here urged drivers to exercise extreme caution.

"Many of our youngsters will be going to school for the first time and will not be aware of the many hazards existing on Texas' busy streets and highways," said Major C.W. Bell, regional commander of the DPS.

"Precautionary measures such as traffic signs and signals, safety zones and pedestrian crosswalks are virtually useless if the children have not been taught good pedestrian habits," he said.

Children should be instructed to observe all traffic signs and signals, to walk against the flow of traffic and cross streets only at designated crosswalks, Bell said.

Consumer Affairs Post Expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Esther Peterson, President Carter's consumer adviser, now has an additional job and a larger staff.

Mrs. Peterson will head the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs in the Health, Education and Welfare Department, while retaining her White House staff job.

CRUEL SEA THAT WON — Diana Nyad, huddled in blankets and being comforted by her head trainer Margi Carroll, heads away from the sea that defeated her Tuesday as her boat makes its way to the dock at Key West, Fla. (AP Laserphoto)

Two Swimmers Lose To Ocean

MIAMI (AP) — The two swimmers seemed oceans apart — one a gabby extrovert who unabashedly hustled sponsor money and publicity, the other a devout woman who stepped into the surf with determination and a soft prayer.

But in the end, Diana Nyad and Stella Taylor shared a common fate. Each challenged the sea, and lost.

It was Miss Nyad, 28, who first gave up — weeping, swollen and screaming at her trainers Tuesday as they insisted she abandon the 103-mile crossing from Cuba to the Florida Keys.

She had covered more than 70 miles in 41 hours, 49 minutes since Sunday afternoon, but was pushed off course by winds and had not made it halfway to her targeted landing.

"I can't quit now," she begged from the water inside her heavy mesh anti-shark cage. "You don't understand." She had overcome violent nausea, jellyfish stings and terrible swelling of the lips and tongue caused by salt water.

She pleaded to swim on, but navigator Rich du Moulin shook his head. "The wind just pushed us too far west," he said. When du Moulin patiently repeated that it was useless to go on, she wept.

Miss Taylor, 46, had been swimming strongly since leaving Gun Cay in the Bahamas Monday morning.

She had a brush with a shark, which her attendants shot and killed, but pressed on with a song. "There's nothing in the ocean that can hurt me," she sang.

She, too, was bothered by nausea and jellyfish stings, but had stroked smoothly to within 18 miles of the Florida coast by Tuesday afternoon. Then, just as victory seemed certain, the current began pulling her north.

The land curved westward and the gap from her to the shore widened. She called it quits about 3 p.m. "I am tired," she admitted when she came ashore. "I would have continued the swim, but the boys made me give it up."

She was 32 hours and more than 100 miles from her starting point.

Miss Nyad had said frankly all along that she was swimming for money. She retained an agent, sold rights to news organizations and signed sponsorship deals with makers of toothpaste and bottled water.

Her entourage at sea included trainers, navigators, a helicopter supply service and a $55,000 shark cage, built as part of a $134,000 budget.

"This swim could set up my whole future," she said before starting.

Miss Taylor emerged from obscurity. She had solid credentials in marathon swimming, including two successful swims across the English Channel, but she received only sparse publicity before the swim. She had a pair of support boats and two men on paddleboards to shoot away sharks.

Miss Nyad met reporters and cameramen at poolside in Havana before her swim. Miss Taylor prayed alone in her room before leaving Bimini and recited rosaries for herself and Miss Nyad. She had once studied to become a nun, stopping just before final vows.

Both women swam more than 60 miles, the distance Miss Nyad said is recognized by marathon swimmers as the record. But whether either set a record is unclear. Miss Nyad said she followed rules of the International Marathon Association. But, she said, she was not in a marathon race; therefore, no record.

Miss Taylor was not in a race either and got out of the water three times when the shark menaced her.

Dick Mullins, spokesman of the Swimming Hall of Fame in Fort Lauderdale, was asked about records. "As far as this swim being recognized, who can say?" he said. "It will be a public opinion type of thing."

Miss Nyad, coming ashore at Key West, said simply, "I don't think there is another swimmer alive who has done what I've done today."

Priest Predicts Episcopalians To Have Woman Bishop In Future

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — The U.S. Episcopal Church could have a woman bishop within 10 years, a woman priest predicted after the Anglican Communion's decennial Lambeth Conference voted overwhelmingly to approve the ordination of women priests by the four national churches that are already doing it.

"This means we could see a woman bishop within 10 years, perhaps first in Washington, D.C., or in New York," said the Reverend Martha Blacklock, 38, who is Episcopal archdeacon of Newark, N.J.

But the Rev. Elizabeth Wiegner of Washington, D.C., who is on the staff of the National Cathedral, said she didn't think there would be a woman bishop in the U.S. church "for quite a long while."

"There has been too much division, and a period of healing and reconciliation is now needed," she said.

The conference of Anglican bishops from around the world, held every 10 years to discuss the work of their churches, voted 316-17 with 17 abstentions to accept the ordinations in the United States, Canada, New Zealand and Hong Kong.

"The vote was the right one," said Bishop John Coburn of Massachusetts, who has ordained three women priests. "I was somewhat surprised at such an overwhelming majority. I believe it will further the cause of women's ordination and deepen the sense of unity in the life of the church."

But the conference in a complementary resolution cautioned that any decision to consecrate a woman bishop "should have overwhelming support in that member church... lest the bishops' office should become a cause of disunity instead of a focus of unity."

The primary resolution said that half of the Anglican Communion's 25 provinces either have ordained women or decided there are no fundamental or theological objections to their ordination. It also pointed out that Anglican churches are autonomous and can make their own decision on the admission of women to holy orders.

The resolution asked Anglican churches that do not ordain women to respect those that do. It said diversity was part of the Anglican heritage, and a dialogue on Christian unity should be continued with churches that oppose the practice.

Anglican churches have 64 million members in 165 countries, and about 150 women priests have been ordained. Some other Protestant churches have women pastors, but the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox Churches have told the Anglicans that the ordination of women would upset discussions of eventual reunion.

Bishop Ronald Bowley of Newcastle, England, predicted it will be four or five years before the Church of England and the Church of England in Australia approve and ordain women priests.

During the debate on the resolution, Bishop William Sheridan of Northern Indiana said the issue had "bitterly divided" the church and had led to an "angry and growing schism." But Bishop Coburn said the latest figures on the U.S. church didn't support Bishop Sheridan's contention.

"Among our 3-million-member church, 25 congregations or splinters of congregations have left us, meaning some 5,000 members and about 50 clergy," he said.

Nixons Become Grandparents

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon has announced his candidacy — for babysitter. A spokesman for the former president and his wife, Pat, said they are "anxious to babysit at anytime" for their first grandchild, a 9-pound, 4-ounce girl born Tuesday to daughter Julie Nixon Eisenhower. Spokesman Jack Brennan said Mrs. Eisenhower's husband, David, assisted in the 3:32 p.m. CDT delivery at San Clemente General Hospital. Eisenhower, the Nixons and the former president's other daughter, Tricia Cox, visited the new mother in the afternoon. "Mother and baby are both doing well," a hospital spokeswoman said. Mrs. Eisenhower is expected to be released within three days, Brennan said.

Patty's Claim Challenged

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Calling her allegations "rank speculation," the federal government is disputing Patricia Hearst's assertion that her former lawyer failed to provide adequate counsel at her 1976 bank robbery trial because he contracted to write a book about the case. Assistant U.S. Attorney Ed Davis Jr. made the statement in a response filed to Miss Hearst's earlier request to examine F. Lee Bailey's deal with the G.P. Putnam Co., a New York publishing house.

In that request, Miss Hearst, 24, charged that Bailey's $225,000 contract for a book about her actions during her captivity by the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army constituted grounds to set aside or reduce her seven-year prison sentence. In an earlier motion, Miss Hearst's new lawyer, George Martinez, contended that the 1976 trial had been "reduced to a mockery, a farce and a sham because of ineffective assistance of counsel." In seeking to block Martinez's efforts, Davis said: "The only tenuous attempt to connect ... the book contract with the counsel's performance at trial is the defendant's rank speculation that the only reason she was required to testify at trial was to supply material for Mr. Bailey's book."

Amy Visits Disney World

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — It was a day of delight for the 10-year-old girl — plenty of rides and few people noticing her. And when you are Amy Carter and the site is Disney World, that's the way you like it. The daughter of President and Mrs. Carter went largely unrecognized as she inspected the attractions Tuesday with a party of nine Carter family friends from Georgia. Amy's favorite attraction during the trip was Space Mountain, a simulated space journey in the dark, which she rode three times.

Gladys Knight Target Of Lawsuit

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Gladys Knight is facing a $75 million suit that charges she breached a contract she had with Arista Records Inc. when she signed with CBS last June.

MISS KNIGHT

The suit, filed Tuesday in state Supreme Court, also names CBS as a defendant. Arista's suit seeks to enjoin CBS and Miss Knight "from engaging in recording, production, manufacture or commercial exploitation of phonograph records or tapes" of her performances. It charges that CBS "unlawfully interfered with, counseled, aided and abetted" Miss Knight in signing a contract. CBS is being sued for $50 million in punitive damages, and both CBS and Miss Knight are being sued for $25 million in compensatory damages.

Peggy Lee Hospitalized

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Singer Peggy Lee has been ordered into St. John's Hospital for at least a week as a result of a bout with viral flu. Miss Lee, 58, came down with the infection Saturday and was listed in fair condition Tuesday, her spokeswoman said. The singer had to cancel an appearance at a new nightclub where she was scheduled to be the opening night act. It was not known when she would be released from the hospital.

Pollution's Worse When It's Hot

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — When the thermometer tips 104, everybody looks for a quick way to beat the heat.

Even skunks, one of whom was discovered paddling in Katherine Wolfe's backyard pool Monday just as her daughters were about to take a dip.

"He's just swimming around out there having a great time," Mrs. Wolfe told officers from the dog pound responding to her call.

"He was probably just taking a little dip," said animal warden Otto Dunn. "They like to swim." But when one of the dog pound employees captured the skunk with a wire loop on the end of a stick, he found out they like to do something else.

No End In Sight For NY Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The week-old newspaper strike against the city's three major dailies shows no signs of ending, as printing pressmen and publishers take tougher bargaining positions and leaders of three other newspaper unions threaten to call strikes of their own.

After a meeting of the Allied Printing Trades Council Tuesday, the Machinists Lodge 15 and Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers said they were on the verge of expanding the strike. Union photo engravers said they might consider such action today or Thursday.

Meanwhile, talks between leaders of Printing Pressmen No. 2, publishers and a federal mediator were set to resume today after ending on a gloomy note Tuesday, in contrast to Monday's eight-hour session termed constructive by the mediator.

The Times, Daily News and Post stopped publication a week ago after printing pressmen walked out over management's posting of new work rules calling for personnel reductions up to 50 percent.

Mediator Kenneth E. Moffett, deputy director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, called the situation "crucial" by the end of Tuesday's talks. "They have hardened up on their positions since yesterday," Moffett said Tuesday, offering no reason for the change.

Moffett said the number of jobs at stake, between 700 and 750 pressmen's positions, made a settlement "unusually difficult." Other newspaper unions also anticipate the personnel pinch, he added.

All but one of the nine newspaper unions have been without contracts since March 30. If the others struck in sympathy, the domino effect would prevent a quick settlement by adding to the number of contracts requiring settlement and by making the union side more "militant," Moffett said.

However, he said, the situation was already so grave that the other unions "can't strike the papers any worse than they're striking them now."

France Refuses To Halt Russian Computer Deal

PARIS (UPI) — France declined today to go along with President Carter's request to join the U.S. refusal to sell a sophisticated computer to the Soviet Union.

This cleared the way for French computer manufacturers, who sell $16 million worth of computers a year to the Soviet Union, to bid for the canceled U.S. order.

France withdrew its military forces from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization 12 years ago and has considered itself less and less obliged to follow rulings by the NATO coordinating committee on selling strategic material to communist countries.

A spokesman for the French foreign ministry said Paris will notify Washington that "it is not the French practice to subordinate the sale of civilian industrial material to political considerations."

The United States had requested that France, West Germany, Britain and Japan join it in refusing to sell the computer, scheduled to be used for the 1980 Olympic games, in reprisal for the convictions of Soviet dissidents Alexander Ginzburg and Anatoly Scharansky.

Although France has made its own protests to the Soviet Union about its failure to observe the "Spirit of Helsinki" on human rights, it has done so discreetly. French diplomats have privately deplored public U.S. protests as counterproductive.

The French also see Washington as inconsistent, pointing out that for example earlier this month it approved the sale of $144 million worth of oil drilling machine tools to Moscow. And they see Carter's request as a clumsy attempt to mollify U.S. business irritation at being deprived of lucrative Soviet orders. The refusal comes two months before a meeting of the French-Soviet cooperation committee to review commercial transactions and initiate new ones.

Bodies Of Drowned Brothers Found

FREEPORT, Texas (AP) — The recovery of two more bodies ended the search for four Houston brothers who disappeared Sunday in the treacherous currents of San Luis Pass.

The bodies of Darrell Brown, 17, and Dean Brown, 18, were found Tuesday on a beach on the Galveston Island side of the pass that separates the island from the mainland.

The bodies of the two other brothers, John Brown, 27, and Chris Brown, 21, were recovered Monday.

Terrell Brown, Darrell's twin, said Darrell was surf fishing on the mainland side when he got into trouble with the swift currents. The other three brothers disappeared while trying to help him.

Five Houston area youngsters drowned in the same general area while on a beach outing in June.

The Sunday drownings bring to 10 the number of persons drowned in the San Luis Pass area since April 23.

Pension Fund Trustees Doubtful About Economy

BY JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP)—The people who run the nation's employee pension funds, which constitute the biggest single category of stock ownership, are pessimistic about the economy's immediate future.

Their mood is revealed in a soon to be released survey showing that fund trustees, managers and advisers believe that:

—Interest rates will continue to rise and the inflation rate will not decrease during the remainder of 1978.

—A recession will occur some time before the end of 1980.

—Unemployment will fail to decline during the rest of the year.

—The nation's investment climate is not likely to improve prior to the end of 1978.

The assessment has a direct impact on the stock market, since pension funds in 1978, the latest year of official figures, owned more than $100 billion of the $685 billion of New York Stock Exchange shares.

Because of this investing power — no other domestic category had even half that amount — the investment mood of pension fund personnel has to some degree the element of a self-fulfilling prophecy.

Asked if inflation would weaken by the end of the year, 88.2 percent said no. Some 65.7 percent said a recession would occur by 1981. Nearly 60 percent felt unemployment would not decrease in the second half.

Slightly more than half — 51.1 percent — said the climate for investments would fail to improve during the second half of 1978.

A breakdown of survey results, however, shows that investment counselors, as distinguished from fund actuaries, trustees, attorneys and consultants, were more optimistic about the investment climate.

The survey, by the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans, found 55.6 percent of counselors, those directly involved in investment choices, felt the atmosphere would improve in the second half.

Simultaneously, however, 88.9 percent of the counselors said a recession was likely by the end of 1980, and 66.7 percent said interest rates would continue to rise in the second half of this year.

The latter opinion contrasts with views expressed lately by securities analysts that the peak of high interest rates already has been reached. That view is credited with recent stock market strength.

The results were obtained in the first two weeks of July by surveying a representative panel of 250 personnel of private pension funds with assets ranging from under $1 million to more than $20 million.

The foundation, based in Brookfield, Wis., is the largest membership organization in the field of employee benefits. Established in 1954, it claims 19,000 high-level fund personnel as members.

Respondents split in response to a question of whether the Social Security system should be financed in part by general revenue funds. The most support, nearly 78 percent, came from labor trustees, while 82.3 percent of actuaries opposed such a move.

A majority, 61.7 percent, agreed their own pension funds are pursuing a "more conservative investment policy" because of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

Surprisingly, only 28.8 percent said they felt the government's lack of precision in interlocking the "prudent man" rule was an important reason for the more conservative investment attitude.

The prudent man principle states that fiduciaries should exercise the same good judgment in choosing investments for others as a prudent man would in handling his own estate.

Since 1974, investment institutions have struggled to determine the will of Congress in assigning them that responsibility. The survey results, therefore, suggest the meaning is becoming clearer.

A majority — 55 percent — of fund personnel also expressed themselves as believing the administration's proposed health insurance plan would "adversely affect existing health and welfare funds."

In response to the question, "Is there a need for a federal law to regulate public employee benefit funds?" 76.1 percent said yes with a plurality indicating the Labor Department should be the regulator.

Navigation Periodical Shortens Long Name

WASHINGTON (AP)—Suppose you were publisher of a periodical called The American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac and decided to change its name.

Would you junk that awesome word "ephemeris"? Call the publication perhaps the Handy Sky Guide?

Well, the U.S. Naval Observatory, the publisher, wants to change the name, and the House has passed a bill letting it do so. The new name:

The Astronomical Ephemeris.

The idea is to recognize the cooperation of other countries and encourage more.

An ephemeris, as all navigators who use such things know, is "an orderly collection of information relating to the assigned places of celestial bodies at regular intervals."

Clothing Is Key

How do you tell which committee hearing you've wandered into on Capitol Hill?

Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., suggests you might look at what the audience is wearing. He wrote to constituents about two committees that were holding hearings on drugs, one with the announced title of "women and substance abuse."

"I believe they were talking about the use of drugs by women, not the abuse of women by men," Pike wrote.

"While I did not attend any of the hearings on drugs, a spy told me that the audience included quite a few young people, who wore long hair, blue jeans, sloganed T-shirts and sandals.

"The hearing I was attending, in the Ways and Means Committee, was on a different subject, and the audience dressed for the occasion. We were talking of taxes, of reducing taxes and that means money and that's how the audience dressed.

"Even the union representatives wore vests. There were Gucci loafers and initial pinky rings.

 "The language matched the couture."

Funny Business

But sometimes the language of tax debates lapses into witticisms.

The House was wrangling over the big tax cut proposed by Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., and Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del. Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, reached for a way to dramatize his contention that it would force slashes in worthwhile programs — even a $50 billion reduction in defense funds.

"Yes, yes, you can vote for Kemp-Roth," Vanik told his colleagues, "but if you do, you better buy yourself the Kemp-Roth home defense kit. Get a slingshot, a flashlight and a stick and plan on defending yourself."

Change Of View

While he attended the special United Nations session on disarmament, Rep. Paq Simon, D-Ill., opened a dialogue with Vietnamese delegates. When he returned to Washington, he invited them to dinner at his home, along with other congressmen and officials, and later reported a frank conversation.

Simon also reported the reaction of his 17-year-old daughter, Sheila:

"You don't realize how horrible war is until you think: just a few years ago we were fighting those men who sat in our living room."

Now, liquidate cotton worms with liquid Thuricide.

Railway Fights ICC Order

WASHINGTON (AP)—Southern Railway Co. went to court Tuesday to contest an Interstate Commerce Commission order that it continue running the Southern Crescent passenger train for another year.

The railroad filed a suit with the U.S. Court of Appeals in Richmond, seeking a judicial review of the order.

The commission on Aug. 3 directed Southern to continue running the train until Aug. 4, 1979. It said it had authority to order only a one-year extension, and if Southern wishes to stop service after that period, it must again seek ICC approval.

The Washington-Atlanta-New Orleans train is the nation's last privately-run long-haul passenger train, and Southern says it has been losing more than $500,000 a month on it.

The Crescent runs daily between Washington and Atlanta and three times a week between Atlanta and New Orleans. It uses refurbished 1949-vintage cars and offers passengers free morning newspapers and fresh-cut mums on the neatest dining tables.

In its order, the ICC expressed hope that in the next year an agreement can be reached to have the Crescent taken over by Amtrak, the federally-subsidized national rail passenger corporation.

Termination would affect service at 30 stations in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

32 Injured By Blast Of Small Balloons

TOKYO (AP)—About 300 small hydrogen-filled rubber balloons exploded and injured 32 persons, mostly children, at a Buddhist festival in Izumo, western Japan, police said Monday.

Police said five of the injured were hospitalized in serious condition with burns.

The explosions occurred at a festival dancing party in a high school in Izumo, about 400 miles west of Tokyo. About 1,000 persons were attending. Dancing is part of the traditional Buddhist ceremony to pray for ancestors at this time of the year.

Police said the eight-inch balloons were tied to iron wires near the stage. The cause of the explosions is under investigation.

Boeing, Aeritalia Join Forces

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. has a new partner in the development and production of its new 767 jetliner.

The aerospace firm announced this week that Aeritalia has signed a contract with Boeing making the Italian firm a major participant on a risk-sharing basis in the Boeing 767 program.

The contract was signed by T.A. Wilson, chairman and chief executive officer of The Boeing Co., and Renato Bonifacio, Aeritalia deputy chairman and managing director.

The Boeing 767 program was launched a month ago when United Airlines ordered 30 of the new 200-passenger medium range twinjets. The first 767s are scheduled to be delivered to United in mid-1982.

Aeritalia is the largest aerospace company in Italy and the major military aircraft supplier in that nation. The company also produces parts for commercial aircraft and is involved in major national and international space programs, avionics and instruments.

Under terms of Monday's agreement, Aeritalia will manufacture wing control surfaces, wing trailing edge flaps and leading edge slats, wing tips, elevators, vertical tail rudders and radomes, the covers on radar apparatus.

In addition, Aeritalia personnel will participate in the overall engineering effort. They will design the portions of the airliner to be manufactured by Aeritalia and the required tooling and will assist Boeing in other engineering and in component testing.

They also will become familiarized at the Boeing plant in Renton, Wash., with Boeing engineering procedures and with new-material technologies.

The peak Aeritalia work force at Boeing will be about 100 persons in the first quarter of 1979.

Plans call for Aeritalia personnel, now assigned to Renton, to return to Italy along with Boeing engineers when engineering of the structural design is about 25 percent complete.

The majority of the work will go to Aeritalia plants in the area of Naples in southern Italy.

Boeing personnel skilled in manufacturing operations also will be assigned to Aeritalia plants in Italy to assist in introducing Boeing procedures and specifications.

Aeritalia has been cooperating with Boeing since 1971 in studying airliners suitable for meeting commercial airline requirements in the 1980s. The company already produces parts for Boeing's 727 and 747 jetliners.

University Develops Map For Blind

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — Some students literally will be feeling their way around the Wichita State University campus this fall, but the task should be easier for visually impaired people because of a Braille map developed by a blind WSU graduate.

Shirley Smith, who was bewildered by the campus when she was first a student nearly 20 years ago, recommended and helped produce the map since she returned to the campus last fall as a student and assistant in the WSU office for handicapped students.

The notebook-type maps in Braille and large print for the visually impaired will be available at no cost for the handicapped students this fall. The blind Miss Smith graduated in 1952 with degrees in both psychology and sociology, without the aid of a map.

"Perhaps if I'd had one of these maps when I was a freshman, I wouldn't be so gray-haired now," she said.

The free maps were six months in production by Miss Smith and Carl Martin, a volunteer from the Braille Association of Kansas who transcribed the campus maps into Braille and raised line drawings. Miss Smith developed keys to the maps that identify buildings both alphabetically and by location.

The slender notebook volume contains explanatory material in both Braille and large print for the visually impaired, and five maps. One is of the entire campus.

Political Items Buffs Stage Convention

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — They were all there — the curious, the avid collector trying to add to his memorabilia, the dealer wanting to make sales and the skeptical family members, wondering what had brought this crowd together.

But more than 750 American Political Items collectors members, relatives and friends crowded rooms of the Chase-Park Plaza Hotel for three days of viewing, buying, trading and learning about campaign buttons and other political paraphernalia.

"I've never seen anything like it. It's incredible!" one astonished visitor exclaimed as she looked at the bourse — the trading area of several thousand square feet with tables containing thousands of buttons and other items for sale.

During the three days, two auctions were held, members were instructed on how to spot fakes and told of the fine points of collecting newspaper clippings, posters and other paper items. Hours were spent among members either trading or buying.

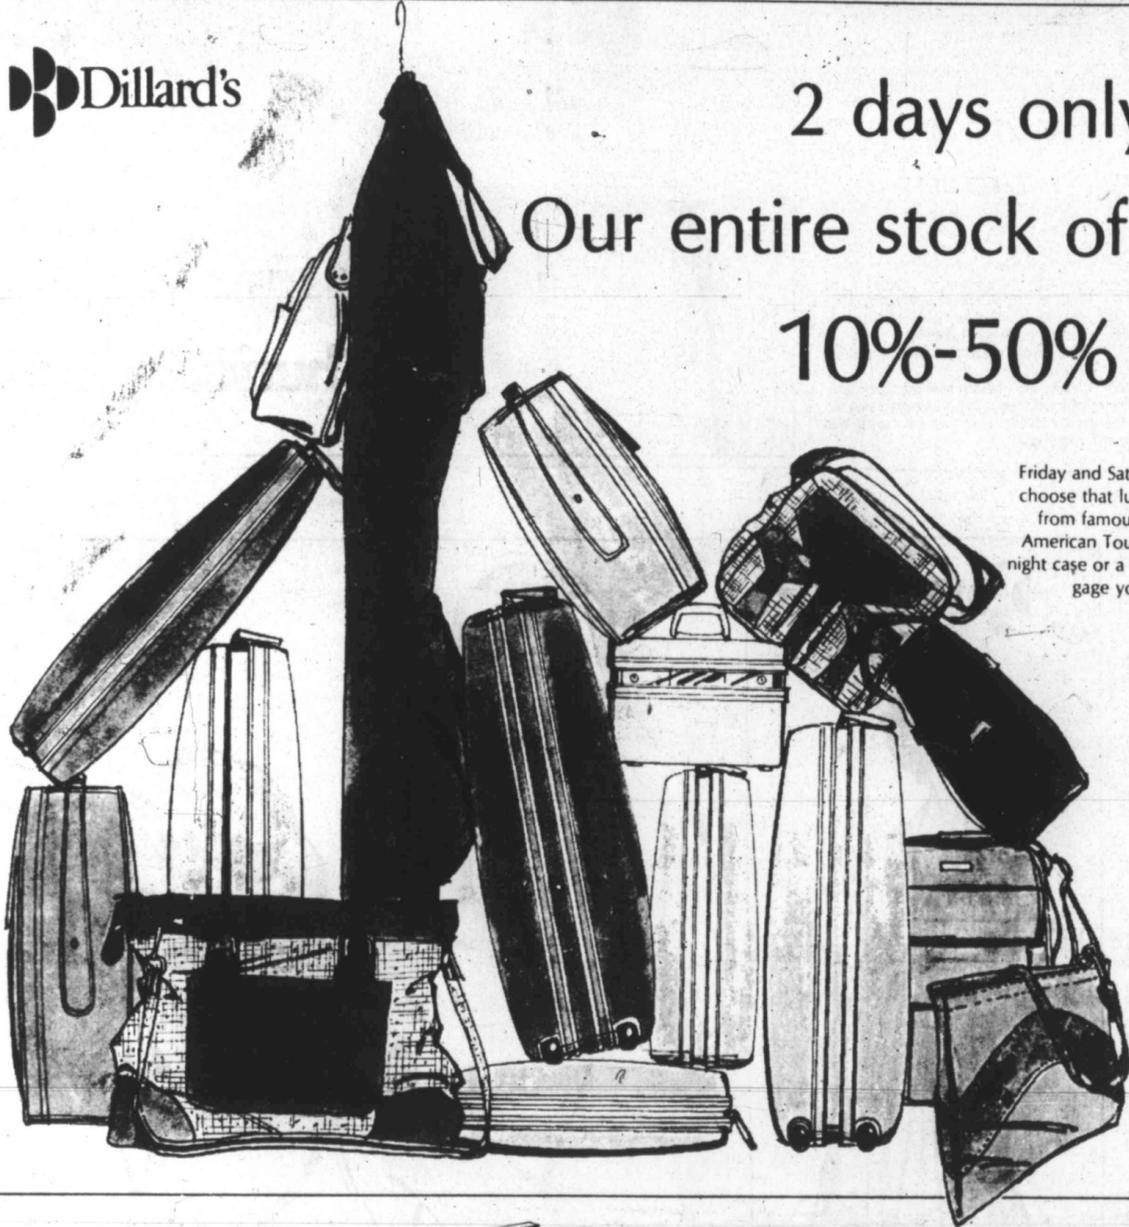

Displayed prominently — and carefully guarded by the hotel security force and insured by the local APIC chapter for more than $1 million — were collections from throughout the United States.

Among them were items dating back to the inauguration of George Washington, the first time political buttons were used. Also included were materials from the campaign of one of the least-known presidents — Millard Fillmore.

An elaborate display of women's suffrage items contained a mannequin dressed in early 1900s style with her skirt hiked up to reveal long, black socks emblazoned with a message to give the vote to women.

Onlookers who had spent most of a lifetime throwing out items, saw what they had considered junk sold for hundreds of dollars.

A large McGovern-Shriver button went for $500, while an oval-shaped button proclaiming President Wilson to be "a sure goal-kicker" brought $210.

Nations Dispute Antarctic Treaty

By DIANA PAGE
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The Antarctic treaty members are finding it hard to agree on a treaty to conserve marine life in the icy southern oceans.

The 13 nations decided in London last year that a treaty should be drawn up during 1978 to allow the rational utilization of live marine resources while preserving the Antarctic ecosystem.

Delegations met in Canberra, Australia, in March, drew up a working text and then went back to consult with their governments. They met again for two weeks in Buenos Aires in July, but failed to agree on the draft treaty.

At the end of the secret talks July 29, delegates talked about the great progress made in working out a conservation system. But privately they admitted that they couldn't agree on the question of territorial rights over the Antarctic oceans.

Seven nations claim territory on the Antarctic continent, and by extension, a 200-mile territorial waters limit. Argentina, Australia and Chile lead the group loudly, followed by France, New Zealand, Norway and the United Kingdom.

The countries that neither make nor recognize claims are the United States, Belgium, South Africa, Japan, Poland and the Soviet Union.

The Japanese, Russians and Poles have a special interest in the marine resources treaty because they already fish the southern oceans for krill.

Krill — a small shrimp-like creature rich in protein — is the key to the concern about conservation in Antarctica. Besides being a potential food source for mankind, it is the basis of the food chain in the Antarctic, sustaining whales and seals.

No one knows exactly how much krill would be harvestable, because there are still problems to be solved in processing and marketing it. But, the Japanese caught 22,000 tons on an experimental basis last year and the Russians are believed to catch twice as much.

The delegations to the Buenos Aires conference did agree on a scientific committee to be set up under the proposed treaty to make studies and report to the commission that would determine catch levels.

While the Russians and the Japanese may express some disagreement about catch level or inspection systems, they are in favor of a conservation treaty.

The stumbling block is the use some nations wish to make of these treaty discussions to promote their positions on sovereignty.

Argentina timed a barrage of publicity about its Antarctic claims to coincide with the conference. Argentine diplomatic sources seemed pessimistic about the chances of agreeing on a treaty both before and after the Buenos Aires meeting.

The Antarctic treaty, drawn up in 1959, freezes all claims to the continent for a 30-year period. Sea rights, however, are being treated as a whole new kettle of fish.

The fact that the Antarctic marine life ecosystem extends beyond the 60th latitude, the treaty's border, further complicates the matter.

Convincing claimant nations to transfer their alleged control over Antarctic waters to an international commission is no easy task. Any decision by treaty members must be unanimous.

The efforts to draft the conservation treaty are unique because the convention is looked at as a whole, instead of trying to protect just one species. It is also the first time an attempt is being made to conserve before man has ruined the balance of nature.

Russian Blasts U.S. Emphasis On Sports

MOSCOW (AP) — A "widespread idolatry of sports" seems to be the chief pursuit of the American school system, says a Soviet economist stationed in the United States who sent his 12-year-old son to school in Washington, D.C.

"Americans apparently do not mind the fact that participation in sports leaves youngsters without enough time for doing homework assignments, reading books, visiting museums and engaging in other activities that are essential to cultural and intellectual development," Yuri Malov wrote in the monthly youth magazine Yunost.

He said many youngsters are led to put all their hopes in a career in professional sports, but that most are not talented enough and are left after their graduation "to the whim of fate."

Malov wrote: "Children in the lower grades of American schools spend most of the school day outside of the classroom, either outdoors or in gymnasiums, engaged in athletic games..."

"I came to the conclusion that the primary business of American secondary schools is physical education."

In the Soviet Union, secondary schools devote two 45-minute periods a week to athletic training in gymnasiums. During the winters, one of these periods is spent outdoors in winter sports.

Soviet youngsters who show exceptional athletic talent are put into special schools at an early age, where most of their time is spent in sports.

Malov wrote that in America "a secondary-school graduate may not even know his multiplication tables and may be barely literate, but if he is a top athlete he will be actively recruited" by colleges.

But he added, "One must admit that not all U.S. colleges and universities admit students merely because they are good athletes. The country has a number of privileged, prestigious universities to which applicants are admitted essentially on the basis of their family's social status."

For the urban poor, he said, professional sports can provide the only means of success. "But of the vast flood of aspiring athletes, professional sports skim off the top prospects and leave the rest to the whims of fate."

"Alas," he said, "fate is unkind to most of them," and many "turn to crime once their hopes of becoming professional athletes are dashed."

Despite Losing Election, James Symington Stays In Washington

By JOHN RUTHERFORD
WASHINGTON (UPI) — James Symington, defeated in a bid two years ago to inherit his father's Senate seat from Missouri, did what many congressmen do when they suddenly find themselves out of office.
Instead of returning home to St. Louis, he stayed in Washington and opened a general law practice specializing in many of the areas he concentrated on as a congressman — such as public health, energy and transportation.
"A law practice tends to go into areas of your government familiarity," he said in an interview. "People need help in trying to prepare proposals or in trying to get better understanding from an agency or possibly ultimately — if that's not possible — new initiatives legislatively to sort out their problems."
Symington, chief of protocol during the Johnson administration, served eight years as a Democratic congressman from Missouri before finishing third in the 1976 Missouri Democratic senatorial primary.

For Symington, 50, the decision to remain in Washington was the same made by many other former public officials who catch "Potomac Fever" and don't want to go home.
"I haven't said goodbye to home, politically or any other way," he said. "It's just that given my background I think it's easier here to repair the financial damage of a long public life and an expensive election than back there."
Symington still maintains his voting residence in St. Louis and returns there occasionally.
"I do get back home and make appearances — not so much politically, although occasionally I'll do that — but just to talk to groups that want to hear from me on a certain subject. I've spoken to health groups, science groups and I'll be speaking to the CPAs in October."

"I'm trying to think: How do you make a CPA laugh?"
One subject that's not a laughing matter to Symington is his chance of getting back into public office.
"I have no real plan to do that, but I wouldn't rule it out," he said. "It's just that I have no current plan to do such a thing."
"Our state (Missouri) is in a state of flux politically at the moment. It's hard to know what type of opportunities would arise out of it. But I'm not really staying up nights thinking about it."
If Symington does run, he said he'd probably try again to follow in the footsteps of his father, Stuart, who served 24 years in the Senate before retiring in 1976. He also lives in Washington.
"But, mind you, you have some pretty strong contenders both in and out of office for that seat," he said. Sen. Thomas Eagleton is a close friend and fellow Democrat, and Republican Sen. John Danforth has the advantage of being an incumbent with a large personal fortune to spend on re-election.

"There might be an opportunity to serve in the executive at another time, too, but I hasten to add that I'm not hurrying to that intersection," Symington said. "I don't know, I guess elective office is more enjoyable."
"It's in my blood."

Non-Smokers Achieving Recognition Of Their Rights In Europe

By WELLINGTON LONG
 BONN, West Germany (UPI) — "You don't mind if I smoke?" a man asks a fellow diner, striking a match without waiting for the reply to his rhetorical question.

"I mind a great deal," the other fellow snarls. "Please wait until I have finished my dessert."

An airplane traveler calls the stewardess, then points silently to the man in the next seat.

"This is the non-smoking section," the stewardess says curtly, and waits and watches until the offending passenger has extinguished his cigarette.

Unthinkable scenes just a short time ago, when non-smokers had the same relation to smokers as the skinny weakling to the beach bully.

But in the wake of increasing acceptance in Europe of the argument that smoking is injurious to one's health, non-smokers are turning militant and winning growing recognition of their rights in capitalist and communist countries alike.

Only in Spain have the non-smokers suffered a serious setback. Since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco in 1975, smokers puff openly on the floor of the Cortes — even when the king is speaking. They never dared do that as long as the old non-smoker lived.

Italy has prohibited smoking in most enclosed public places except restaurants since 1976. That same year, the Moscow municipal council banned smoking in restaurants except in designated smoking rooms.

Demel's, Vienna's most famous pastry shop, always has banned smoking — except in one small back room — on grounds the fumes spoiled their product and soured the taste buds of customers sitting at the little round marble-topped tables.

Sluka, Vienna's second-ranking pastry shop, finally banned smoking last year, too. Despite dire predictions, business has not fallen off.

In most of Europe except Spain, smoking is prohibited in subways, buses, cinemas, theaters, operas and hospitals. Only one cinema in Vienna permits smoking and advertises the fact. It is a soft porn house.

All European airlines, except for Spain's Iberia, now have non-smoking sections.

Most railroads have increased the number of non-smoking compartments and have started reserving part of each dining car for nonsmokers, too.

Katharina Focke, West German minister of health from 1972 to 1976, went to a health resort for three weeks before she took up her appointment and broke herself of the smoking habit. "cold turkey."

"I could not be a credible minister of health and still smoke," she said.

She pushed through the Bundestag the low banning tobacco advertising from radio and television but did not succeed in efforts to extend the prohibition to printed publications. Her attempts to talk Chancellor Helmut Schmidt into not smoking while on television also were unsuccessful.

French Minister of Health Simone Veil mounted a vigorous anti-smoking campaign in 1976. As a result, tobacco consumption in France increased by only one-half of one percent in 1977, compared to an increase of 5 percent the year before she started her campaign.

Mrs. Carter Needs Aides On Duty All Week Long

By MAUREEN SANTINI
WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is searching for two new employees who are willing to work seven days a week for Rosalynn Carter.

The search for two workers to do scheduling was begun after Mrs. Carter's deputy press secretary was eased out of her job mainly because she tried to keep 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. hours.

Ann Anderson, one of the few married persons with children on the first lady's staff, confirmed Tuesday that she resigned after her $29,500-a-year job was eliminated in a reorganization plan. She was not asked to stay on in another capacity.

In the reorganization plan, Mrs. Anderson's duties will be assumed by two current aides to the first lady and scheduling duties will be taken over by the two employees now being sought.

That White House employees not give up their family lives for their jobs, Mrs. Anderson will be replaced mainly because she tried to keep a normal, eight-hour schedule.

"The press office is a pressure cooker seven days and nights a week," said a high official in Mrs. Carter's office who did not wish to be identified.

"This is a seven-day-and-night-a-week job," said the source. "This is not a 9-to-5 place."

"It makes it difficult in this particular office to have a family and children," the official said.

Earlier this summer, Barbara Heinbeck quit Mrs. Carter's staff because her job as a press advance worker required too much time away from her 5-year-old son.

Faith Collins and Paul Costello will take over Mrs. Anderson's duties. Miss Collins, now assistant press secretary, will hold the title of deputy. Costello, who replaced Miss Heinbeck, will be assistant press secretary.

Since they are single, they are "able to be more flexible," the official said.

Mrs. Anderson, a 42-year-old former reporter for the Nashville Tennessean, is the wife of author Patrick Anderson and the mother of two small children. Like many working spouses, she has felt torn between her family responsibilities and those of her job.

"The demands are tremendous. The pressure is tremendous. The job is more arduous in the amount of pressure generated than is anything else," she said in a telephone interview.

That kind of pressure isn't good for anyone, Mrs. Anderson said. "But that is the way it is to work in the White House."

The pace will only get worse, Mrs. Anderson said, because Mrs. Carter is stepping up her travel schedule. The first lady plans to spend about 12 days campaigning this fall, followed by a trip to publicize her urban project.

Carter himself recognized the toll long work hours can take on family life. In February, 1977, he told Cabinet members he didn't want their families breaking up "because you felt a loyalty to me."

He gave them some advice he takes himself: "You will be so much more useful to me and to the country if you do have some recreation, get some exercise, and see your children and your spouse."

Mrs. Carter has said that the president long ago stopped going to his office after dinner in the evenings, and frequently does not even open his briefcase during the weekends at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

Firefighters Douse Blaze At City Home

Firemen fought for more than an hour early this morning to quell a house fire, thought to have started from a faulty water heater, at 920 E. Tulane St.

Lubbock Fire Department Dist. Chief Lee Turner placed the loss at more than $1,000, with heavy damage throughout the vacant house.

Firefighters were dispatched at the scene about 3 a.m. and did not return until shortly after 4 a.m.

Chinese Party Chief Arrives In Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Hua Kuo-feng flew around his enemies in the Soviet Union today and arrived in Romania on his first trip to Europe since succeeding Mao Tse-tung as chairman of the Chinese Communist Party.

Romania's Communist government, walking a neutral tightrope in the Moscow-Peking feud, gave him a warm welcome.

After spending the night somewhere in western China, Hua skirted Soviet territory and flew over Pakistan, Afghanistan, Iran, Turkey and Bulgaria to reach Romania, on the western coast of the Black Sea, the official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported.

Hsinhua said he sent the customary greetings to the leaders of the countries he flew over.

Hua, 57, smiled confidently as he strode down the ramp from his plane, and he and President Nicolae Ceausescu embraced warmly.

Hua shouted, "How are you?" in Chinese into a microphone, and the Romanian honor guard responded with a loud "Long Live Comrade President!" in Romanian.

Then the soldiers and many in the crowd of thousands began the customary rhythmic chant for notable visitors: "Ceausescu! Hua Kuo-feng!"

Thousands lined the motorcade route to Scintea Square, where Mayor Ion Dinca welcomed Hua, and to Victory Square, where another stop was made. A Romanian TV announcer estimated 100,000 people were in the streets, about the same number that greeted President Ford in 1975 and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in 1976 but only a tenth of the estimated million who turned out for President Nixon in 1969.

Mingling with the crowd in Victory Square, Hua kissed a small girl who draped a Young Pioneer's scarf around his neck and a boy who gave him flowers. Then he was swept into a line of hora dancers, squeezed between two young women.

Hua's five-day visit to the maverick of the Soviet Bloc is his first stop on a three-nation tour and the first trip by a Chinese Communist Party chairman to Europe since Mao visited Moscow 21 years ago.

After a tour of Romania's oil fields and factories north of Bucharest and port facilities on the Black Sea, Hua goes Monday to Yugoslavia, the first Communist country to break away from Soviet domination. He will stay there about a week and then go to anti-Communist Iran.

One Western diplomat said Ceausescu was a "master of judging the limits of Soviet tolerance" and is playing "the great Romanian balancing act" between the two giants of the Communist movement.

Three months ago Ceausescu received a tumultuous reception in Peking, and a week ago he called on Brezhnev at his Crimean summer retreat.

Romania deplores the tensions between the Russians and Chinese and strives to maintain good relations with both sides. But the Soviets and their more subservient allies have been accusing China of an "hegemonist course," including attempts to win influence in southeastern Europe.

The Soviets have been irritated recently with Romania's friendship treaty with Cambodia, supported by China in its border war with Soviet-backed Vietnam, by Ceausescu's visit to China and by Bucharest's criticism of Cuban military intervention in Africa.

But Ceausescu "feels he is still within the bounds of Soviet tolerance," one Western diplomat said. "The Soviets must feel their basic security interests are not in jeopardy."

In a speech Aug. 3, the Romanian leader underlined his country's close ties with the Soviet Union, the importance of its relations with China and its neutrality in the Moscow-Peking feud.

"Romania will not let herself be involved in any public polemics, in blaming one socialist country or another," he

Extradition Of Church Officials Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is seeking to extradite from England two of the 11 members of the Church of Scientology who have been charged with breaking into government offices, planting bugging devices and stealing official documents.

The other nine have been issued summonses to appear before a federal magistrate here on Thursday for a bail hearing.

A federal grand jury indicted the church officials and members on Tuesday. They included Mary Sue Hubbard, wife of the church's founder, L. Ron Hubbard.

Hubbard, who established the church nearly 30 years ago, was not indicted. The Justice Department gave no explanation. Mrs. Hubbard, described as the second-ranking official in the church, lives in Sussex, England, where the church's international headquarters are situated. She has agreed to appear in court here, Justice Department officials said.

The government began preparing extradition proceedings against two other Scientology officials in England, Jane Kember and Morris Budlong. The remaining eight defendants are in this country.

The indictment accused the church of a plot against the government and charged some of the defendants with lying to a grand jury and obstructing justice.

The church, which previously announced that it expected the indictment, said in a statement the case "will backfire on the Justice Department by bringing to trial the federal agencies which have been carrying on a 28 year genocidal campaign against our religion."

The church, with national headquarters in Los Angeles, claims more than 3 million members who are reported to pay more than $100 million to the church each year for counseling, booklets and courses in Scientology. There are 73 Scientology churches throughout the world, including 23 in the United States.

The most serious charges in the indictment carry maximum penalties of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The indictment alleged that the church planted agents in the Internal Revenue Service and the Justice Department to obtain information on the government's review of the church's application for tax-exempt status. The church has admitted copying government documents, but said it did so to counteract alleged government harassment and only after the documents were denied under Freedom of Information Act requests.

The FBI raided Scientology churches in Los Angeles and Washington on July 8, 1977, and seized thousands of pages of documents. The raids also prompted a $7.8 million damage suit by the Scientologists who claimed their constitutional rights were violated.

The other defendants are Duke Snider — who is not the former major league baseball player and is not related to him — of Hollywood, Calif.; Richard Weiland of Van Nuys, Calif.; Gregory Willardson of Beverly Hills, Calif.; Henning Heldt and Sharon Thomas of Los Angeles; Mitchell Hermann and Cindy Raymond of Hollywood, and Gerald Bennett Wolfe of Areleta, Calif.

The indictment said Wolfe and Miss Thomas were church agents who were planted in the government, Wolfe as a clerk with the IRS and Miss Thomas as a secretary in the Justice Department.

U.S. Officials Urge Tass To Close Office

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The United States reportedly has given the Soviet Union "a fairly unsubtle warning" to close its Tass news agency office here.

The San Francisco Examiner quoted State Department spokesman Hodding Carter on Tuesday as saying the United States issued the warning to protest the treatment of American reporters in Russia.

Carter reportedly said the State Department told Tass that its San Francisco bureau was "at peril" and "it would be a good idea" to close it.

A State Department spokesman in Washington contacted by The Associated Press said he knew nothing about the Examiner story.

The Examiner reported the State Department's statement was less than an explicit order to close the two-man news bureau, but that Carter called it "a fairly unsubtle warning."

The Soviets maintain three Tass bureaus in this country — in New York, Washington and San Francisco. American correspondents in Russia are accredited only to Moscow.

The Examiner reported that Carter said the action was contemplated to protest both the recent slander judgment against two American reporters in Russia and the Soviet closing of a United Press International office in Leningrad.

The reporters, Craig Whitney of the New York Times and Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun, were found by a court last month to have slandered the Soviet State Committee on Radio and Television. They were fined in the civil action and ordered to print a retraction, which their papers refused to do.

Piper returned to Moscow on Tuesday after a month's vacation and said he understands Judge Lev Almazov will no longer continue to hold hearings on the case. The judge said after an Aug. 3 hearing that "different measures" would be invoked if retractions were not printed. "I don't think anything much else is going to happen," said Piper. "They've made their point."

UPI voluntarily withdrew its correspondent from Leningrad, but Carter was quoted as saying the news agency did so only after it was "fairly well harassed."

In Paris today, French officials left open the possibility of selling a computer to the Soviet news agency Tass despite a U.S. request for a Western embargo on such sales.

The United States asked the French to withhold the sale to protest Soviet jailing of dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg.

"Generally, French practice is not to subordinate the sale of civilian industrial materiel to political considerations," said a French Foreign Ministry spokesman.

Federal Employees Picket White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pickets outside the White House are a common occurrence, but the 100 who showed up Tuesday have the same employer as the occupant: The U.S. government.

The members of a federal employees union were protesting President Carter's plan to hold federal pay raises this year to 5.5 percent. The National Federation of Federal Employees seeks an 8.4 percent raise.

Marvin Sartin, area economist-management specialist, will lecture on area beef cattle economics. Tommy Welch, area range specialist, will address the group on brush and weed control.

The selection of 10 cattle brands to represent each Texas county at the Kleberg Center will also be discussed at the meeting.

Sponsored by the Floyd and Briscoe counties' beef cattle committees of the program building committees, the program is open for the public.

Daredevil Worried About Latest Stunt

LAURENS, Iowa (UPI) — Alan Jones has jumped from bridges, hiked across Iowa in the middle of winter, swum rivers and lakes in handcuffs and been run over by a barge while swimming the Mississippi River.

Still, Jones felt "a little apprehensive" when he dove — handcuffed and on fire — 30 feet from a platform into a water pit that contained 13 rattlesnakes.

And it didn't exactly ease his mind when the only medical crew on duty had to leave with an injured spectator five minutes before his dive.

Jones, a 31-year-old ex-Marine, performed the snakepit dive Sunday in Burke, S.D., and came away without so much as a nibble from the rattlers.

The stunt, cheered by a crowd of 3,000, highlighted the community's annual Threshing Days celebration.

"Any time you plan something like this, there are so many variables to contend with, but fortunately, it went real well," Jones said in a telephone interview from his parents' home.

"I had done a practice attempt the week before, but that was with only two snakes and the jump wasn't quite so involved. I'll admit I was a little apprehensive entering the water and then leaving."

Wearing swimming trunks, a long-sleeved shirt and a cape that had been set on fire, Jones leaped from a truck boom in a swan dive position that allowed him to belly flop into the pit, which was only five feet deep. He landed in the middle of the pit, swam under water to the far end and was pulled out by two cousins — directly over several snakes which had crowded at the edge.

Jones, who bills himself as Captain America, said the theory that snakes won't bite in water because they're so involved trying to swim was some reassurance, but it still didn't allay all his concerns.

"They seemed to be very at ease in the water. They even lifted their heads out at times," Jones said. "Everyone seemed to agree they were capable of swimming to something and, in their excitable state, strike out."

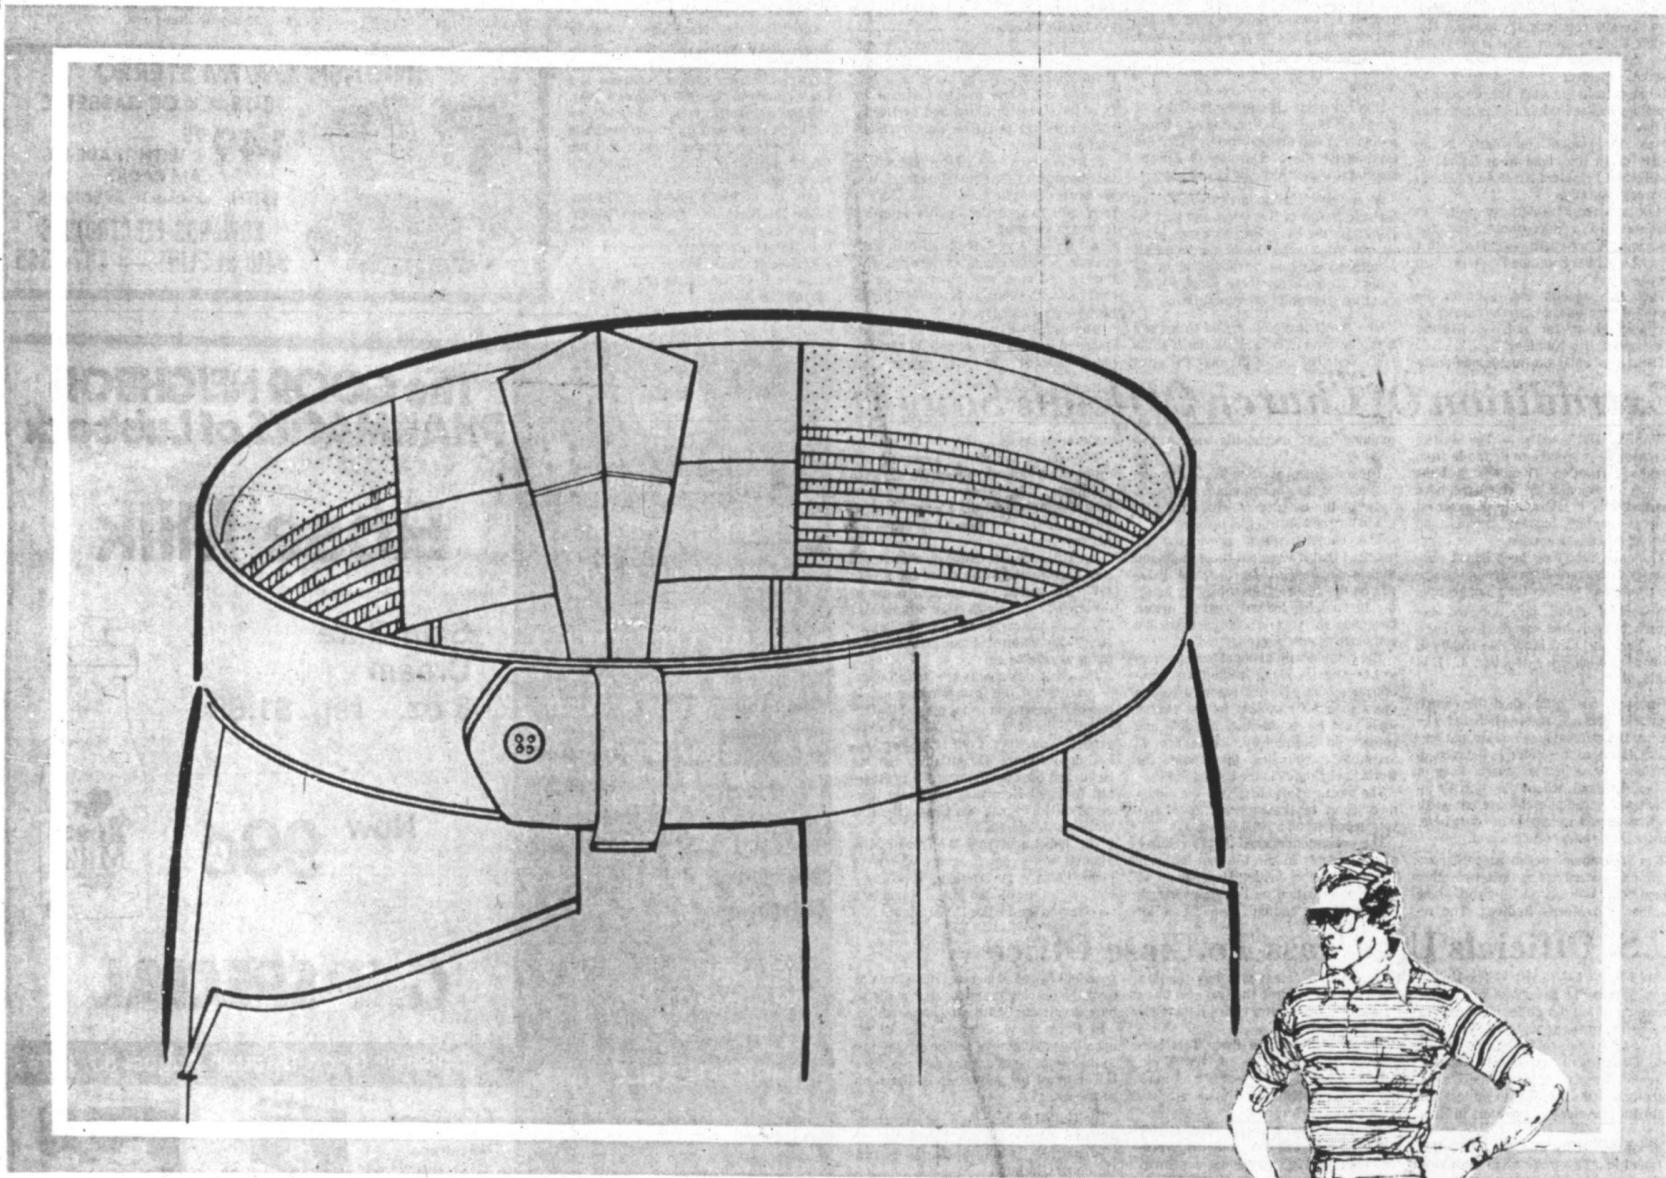

"And then there was such a large crowd that one of the bleachers collapsed and a lady was injured slightly. They had to take her away, so all the medical people left."

"Believe me, having those snake handlers still there was very reassuring."

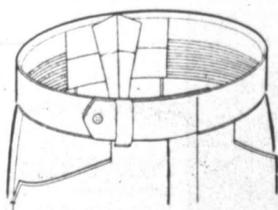

The chief handler was a friend, Tom Smikle, who rounded up the snakes.

Smikle is good at that sort of thing. His hobby is catching rattlesnakes and selling their skins.

Smikle and Jones conceived the idea for the dive last winter while Jones visited relatives in the Burke area. But Jones couldn't try it out until last week at a fair in his home town, Le Mars, after he gave a rope-jumping exhibition, skipping 20,000 times in three hours.

Insurance Shakeup Suggested

AUSTIN (AP) — House investigators have been told the State Insurance Department needs a shakeup that would separate the rate-making board from the agency that looks over thousands of Texas insurance companies.

"I think it would be best to let the governor appoint the state commissioner of insurance instead of the board," former State Insurance Board chairman Hugh Yantis told the House Investigating Committee Tuesday.

"I don't think the board has the time to be a truly rate-making body and at the same time be as close to the agency as it has been in the past. There needs to be a further separation of the board and the agency. This means the role of the commissioner would be far more important than it has been."

Yantis was recently turned down by the Texas Senate as Gov. Dolph Briscoe's appointee. A new State Insurance Board chairman has not been named.

Yantis was called by the investigating committee after Monday testimony by C. Daniel Hurlburt, former Houston insurance agent who lost his license for selling unapproved group health policies. Hurlburt said he and his partner, A. C. Hovater, were duped by Gulf Atlantic Life Insurance Co. in 1974-75. Hurlburt said they sold Nation-Wide Health Insurance Trust plans after being assured by Gulf Atlantic Life Insurance Co. the plans had been approved by the state insurance board. Gulf Atlantic denied this.

Yantis said the Hurlburt-Hovater incident happened during the time that Joe Christie was state insurance board chairman. Christie resigned in September, 1977, to make an unsuccessful race for U.S. Senate and Yantis took his place.

"In summary, everything that Hurlburt wrote to the board while I was there was turned over to the Travis County district attorney for use as he saw fit," Yantis said. He said the Travis County grand jury made an investigation of certain actions of the State Insurance Department at the time.

Yantis said there was no indication during the 11 months he was chairman that any favoritism was given any insurance company.

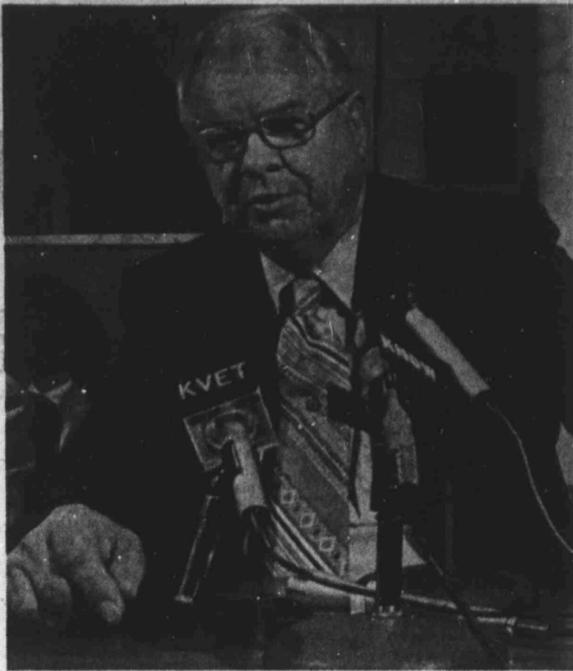

He was asked if it was a "common practice" for insurance policies to be sold without prior approval by the insurance board.

"I would not say it was 'common practice,'" Yantis said, "but it does happen from time to time and if it does it should be corrected."

He said such action is under the direct supervision of the state commissioner. The board has general knowledge of what the commissioner does but not specific knowledge.

Tuesday afternoon, Richard Crook, state liquidator for Nation-Wide Health Insurance Trust, said he had never been able to locate a group insurance policy among the firm's papers, or anything other than documents to show "this was

Information Day Slated On School Busing Plan

Parents and children who are to change schools this fall under court-ordered integration will get a preview of the coming semester Friday.

An "Information Day" will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at all elementary and junior high schools affected by the Lubbock Independent School District desegregation plan.

At the elementary level, buses will be available to carry parents and students to and from their court-ordered "sister schools."

The event is co-sponsored by the school system and Lubbock's Opportunity for Our Kids (LOOK), a coalition supporting smooth implementation of the integration plan.

At a press conference Tuesday, the LOOK steering committee said principals and Parent-Teacher Association members will be on hand at the affected schools Friday to answer questions and provide tours.

Parents visiting the campuses will be able to obtain printed information on the desegregation plan, school procedures and bus routes, said Louise Cummins, general coordinator of the coalition.

In addition, she said, parents will have a chance to ride buses along the exact routes their children will be taking to school next year.

Mrs. Cummins said that on Friday, buses will make three round trips between each neighborhood elementary school and its corresponding sister campus. The buses will stay at each sister school long enough for parents and students to tour the facilities and pick up information, she said.

The buses will be departing the neighborhood schools at 10 a.m., noon and 2 p.m., Mrs. Cummins said.

The exchange program is designed primarily for families that will be affected by integration-related assignments during the first semester of the 1978-79 school year, she said. However, parents and students who will be affected the second semester, or in later years, also are invited to participate.

Parents with questions about Friday's activities or other aspects of desegregation may call the LOOK Information Center, 765-8546.

Willie Washington is chairman of the "Information Day" event. Dudley Strain is coordinating bus activities, and Jane Quade and Mary Vines are coordinating PTA activities.

Area Solons Urge Taxing Uniformity

By ROBERT M. COCKRUM
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock's two state representatives Tuesday hailed uniform, countywide assessment of property values as a fairer means of distributing the tax burden, if not actually easing it.

Democrat Froy Salinas and Republican Joe Robbins fielded questions about the recently concluded special session of the Texas Legislature during a meeting of the Greater Lubbock Press Club.

Salinas, in suggesting a uniform system of assessment in each county, praised the operations of the city and school district, but he was critical of county government.

"In Lubbock, we have atrocities committed every day," he said. "The county is liable to have a $100,000 home on the tax rolls for $10,000."

Robbins said his constituents had expressed fear of too much control in the state capital, and that problem was met in the package of constitutional amendments to be submitted to voters in November. It prohibits a central tax assessment authority in Austin, he said, although state guidelines for computing uniform assessments is likely.

Both men agreed that estimates of the state's surplus — $1 billion to $3 billion — often depend on who is doing the figuring, but Salinas said, "If we're continually having a surplus, that means we're over-taxing."

He said that he would like to see a penny of the 5 percent sales tax returned to school districts, and that direct relief to taxpayers is possible with the state picking up the cost of mandated school programs.

"We're getting raped by people taking our natural gas and oil reserves," Salinas said, moving on to discuss another possible hike in a revenue source. "We need to increase the severance tax as Louisiana has done. That would raise $1 billion and could do away with a property tax for schools."

"The severance tax would work temporarily," Robbins said, adding that 15 years from now its revenue "would not be a significant contribution."

Robbins said his tax relief efforts are aimed at what he termed "a cancer" — the growth of government. In calling for taxes to government growth, spending and taxation, he said, "You've got to cut out the root cause of growth — no limitations."

The legislature's apparent concentration on helping schools has angered many municipal leaders who feel the cities are entitled to aid as well.

Robbins said that such help is often blocked by constitutional restrictions, and Salinas said he sensed a distaste by Texans for a state revenue sharing program entangled in bureaucratic red tape.

Salinas said he wanted to offer a non-binding referendum to determine whether

Threat Made On Life Of School Official

HOUSTON (AP) — School Superintendent Billy Reagan has been asked to keep a low profile after a threat on his life, the president of the Houston Independent School District said Tuesday.

William Harwell said a security investigation is under way. But, the board president refused to give any details of the threat.

Harwell said the treat came after last Saturday's board meeting.

Reagan was in Lincoln, Neb., Tuesday and not available for comment.

The school board was to meet in an emergency session Tuesday night to discuss the threat and the general security of school officials.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

As a grandmother, I intend to be an absolute bore about my grandchildren. I intend to travel with a projector, a screen and 200 lifelike slides showing them chewing on clothespins and standing on their heads. I will produce from my handbag (with or without request) recent urine samples, a tape of them gargling milk at the dinner table and clever sayings that will put Art Linkletter out of business.

As a mother, however, I refuse to inflict my children on anyone. (God knew what he was doing when he gave them to a dictator.)

Consequently, I often find myself at the mercy of women with Super Children. Super Children are unmitigated joy. They can always be counted on to do and say the right thing. They always make the team, have fewer cavities, skip acne, know what they want to be in the third grade, have their paper displayed at Open House, and always remember to bring home the Mother's Day card from art class.

I have made a study of super children and have come to the conclusion that the only difference between Super Children and Normal kids is in the interpretation.

For example:

NORMAL KIDS	SUPER CHILDREN
Forgetful	Preoccupied
Fat	Healthy
Sloppy beasts	Academically geared
Weirdo who won't get a haircut	Nonconformist
Lazy bum	Deep thinker
Flunked out	Victim of a poor teacher
TV addict	TV critic
Cut from the team	Saved from a prejudiced coach
Forgot me on Mother's Day	Is saving his money for my operation
Oversleeps in the morning	Has a recessive gene

I recently decided to test my theory on two mothers of Super Children with kids away at college. I ambled over to one and said, "Does Martha write home much from school?"

"No," she answered, "Martha is so well adjusted and secure that she can cope with independence. What about you daughter?"

"She doesn't write either."

"Too bad," she sighed, "I guess that tells you where you rate."

I went on to the other woman and asked, "Does Phyllis write home often?"

"Oh, yes," she said. "Three times a week. Phyllis is a very loving girl. She has always been close to me. What about your daughter?"

"She writes three times a week, too," I said.

"What a pity," she said. "I'd worry to have a child so dependent."

I got the feeling I lose the minute I open my mouth.

The Slim Gourmet

What's one of the leanest and least-fattening "steaks" a calorie-counter can consider? Are you ready for this? Pork steak!

Porksteak?
Yes, pork! Despite its pudgy image, many cuts of pork are lower in calories than the most popular beefsteaks. And of all pork cuts, lean porksteak is among the lowest; only 667 calories per pound.

Also known as a "fresh ham slice," pork steak is a lean and meaty, mostly waste-free slice of meat cut from the leg. It has one small center bone. What little fat it has is around the outside, where it's easily trimmable.

Fresh ham steak — or pork steak — looks like cured hamsteak, except, of course, that it hasn't been cured, cooked or processed. Like all fresh pork, it must be cooked through to a well-done stage before serving. To prevent the possibility of trichinosis, it must never be served rare! (Be especially fastidious about cleaning up counters, cutting boards and knives that have come in contact with raw pork, to avoid contaminating other foods.)

Pork steak is terrific on the barbecue — simply broiled or sliced into cubes for skewers. Here are some slimmer-down recipes:

BRILLED OR BBQ FRESH HAMSTEAK

Trim the fringe fat from a lean pork steak. Marinate steak 1 hour at room temperature (or all day in the refrigerator) in unsweetened fruit juice (apple, pineapple, orange...your choice!). Broil or barbecue until well-done — until no inner pinkness remains. Baste frequently with reserved fruit juice. Each quarter-pound serving, under 250 calories (cooked, lean meat only).

SKEWERED PORK, ISLAND-STYLE

1 thin fresh ham slice (pork steak, cut from the leg, about 1 1/4 lbs.)
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/3 cup water
4 tbsps. soy sauce
1 tbsps. honey (or equivalent sugar substitute)
1 tsp. curry powder
1 cup sliced onion
2 cloves garlic

Put meat on cutting board. Slice into one-inch cubes. Trim and discard border fat and center bone. Put the meat in a plastic bag and put the bag in a bowl.

Combine wine, water, soy sauce and seasonings in blender. Add the onion and garlic. Cover and blend to a puree. Pour the puree over the meat and mix well. Refrigerate all day or overnight.

Thread meat on skewers. Broil or bar-

APRICOTS

Apricots are fully ripened on the tree to develop their best flavor and texture. Therefore, look for apricots that are plump, slightly soft and golden skinned. Avoid apricots that have green showing, as they will not ripen properly. If apricots are still firm when you buy them, they will soften slightly if left at room temperature for a few days. They should then be stored in the refrigerator until ready to use.

Dear Charlie:

Sorry you couldn't make it down to New Orleans for the Fifth World Pair Olympiad. I found the city delightful and the hospitality unequalled, except at the bridge table where no one seemed to want to give me anything.

Every now and then I wonder whether I am beginning to lose my touch. I can remember days when a smile at the charming lass at my table would cause her to lose her aplomb and do the strangest things against me. No more! Either they're producing a tougher brand of female or I'm getting old.

Consider this hand from the Open Pairs, where my left-hand opponent was a delightful Parisian, Nadine Cohen. As you can see, my partner and I had reached a quite respectable five heart contract and, with the spade lead I had expected, I would have made an overtrick.

Nadine led the king of clubs and continued with the ace to give the defense their book. At this point I smiled very sweetly at her and prepared to table my cards and claim—after all, she knew I had no more clubs, so surely she would try to cash a spade in hope that that would produce the setting trick.

How cruelly I misjudged her. She knew from her partner's spade preempt that he had six and that, therefore, I was void in spades. Since there was virtually no chance for a trick in diamonds, she decided that her only hope was to find her partner with the jack of hearts.

So she continued with a low club, and her partner's ruff with the jack meant down one.

Should I give up smiling? As ever, Omar

A hot game of tennis often leads to a hot foot — tired and aching, too. After removing sneakers and before slipping into regular shoes try this professional locker room ritual.

Soak the feet in a basin of warm water to which you have added three or four tablespoons of plain baking soda. Our little Curemaster ham weighs only 1 1/2 to 2 1/4 pounds. But you can do a lot with it. There's no fat to trim, no excess water weight. Just lean, solid meat.

If you see a bigger ham for about the same price as Curemaster, remember this: It's not how much ham you can buy that counts, it's how much you can eat.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am going to marry a man I've gone with for many years, but due to circumstances I'll not go into here, we weren't able to marry until now.

This will be my second marriage. I have two sons, 12 and 17, and a daughter 15.

While discussing our marriage plans, my fiancé remarked that I should warn my daughter not to run around in front of him in scanty attire when we are all living together because, being human, it might arouse his "manly instincts." (I can't recall his exact words but his message was very clear.)

When I reacted with surprise and chagrin, he said I had nothing to worry about, but he thought it only fair to warn me of what his reaction might be, and I should be thankful that he warned me beforehand.

My daughter, who is very well developed for her age, is sometimes careless about keeping properly covered. I've had to remind her to be a little more modest in front of her teen-age brother.

My fiancé has known my children since infancy, and this remark has caused me to wonder if perhaps my daughter would be "safe" with him.

Do you think I have a legitimate cause for concern?

SECOND THOUGHTS

Dear Second: No. If your fiancé had any unhealthy thoughts about your daughter, he wouldn't have asked you to warn her about her tendency to run around scantily clad. Let her know that more composure and less exposure is in order.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my ex-wife. We were married for less than two years, never had any children, and then were divorced. That was 10 years ago, but she is still calling herself "Mrs. Sidney Feinbohm."

It is causing a lot of confusion because I am married again, and my wife is constantly being confused with the ex-Mrs. Sidney Feinbohm. To make matters worse, my ex-wife and my present wife have charge accounts at many of the same stores, and my wife gets bills that should have gone to the other Mrs. Feinbohm.

Is there any way I can force my ex-wife to quit using my name and take her maiden name back? She is still not remarried.

ONE WIFE TOO MANY

Dear One: There can be only ONE "Mrs. Sidney Feinbohm" at a time. After your divorce, your ex-wife became "Mrs.

her first name Feinbohm." If she isn't aware of this, have your lawyer inform her officially in a letter.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to DOGGONE MAD, who objected to the neighbor's dog doing its dirty tricks on his lawn: In order to discourage dogs from coming over on your property, just sprinkle a package of mothballs on the area that the dog has chosen for its dirty tricks.

One year our front yard looked like a cow pasture. Then a friend told me about the mothball remedy. I tried it, and it worked!

Fast Food Chains Gain Popularity In China

By AGNES CHEN and ANGELA TANG

HONG KONG (UPI) — In a crowded brightly lit fast food center, John Chan, 17, sank his teeth into a ketchup-smothered hamburger.

He washed the bun and New Zealand ground beef concoction down with a quick gulp of a cola drink and said: "Hao yeah (yummy)!"

American-style fast food has established a beachhead in Hong Kong, a Chinese gourmet center.

Thousands of Chinese, mostly youths, flock to them daily. The centers, about 1,000 of them, are the only places beside the Jockey Club's off-track betting window that do standing room only business on any street.

On the Chinese mainland, the Peking government recently called for a revolution to snap the chopsticks and break the rice bowls. To save time and improve nutritional values of its 900 million population's diet, Peking plans to build factories to mass-produce bread and hamburger buns, the New China News Agency reported.

Western-style fast food caught on with Hong Kong Chinese teen-agers about four years ago.

"Since 1975 we have sold more than 30 million hamburgers," said Mrs. Tammy Sin, marketing manager a leading fast food chain.

"There is still room for expansion in this colony with 4.5 million population," she added.

The firm recently opened its ninth branch, the third in the past six months.

"They (the customers) are mostly youngsters," says Icy Yu of one of the chain's restaurants in Hong Kong Island's busy central district. "We sell about 6,000 hamburgers every day."

Culinary traditionalists who spend two hours at a yamchar, a leisurely tea, while sampling meat or shrimp-stuffed dumplings or crepes shake their heads in despair.

But in Hong Kong, even to many not-too-young, time is money and gulping down hamburgers saves both.

A hamburger is about 30 cents. Cheeseburgers have not caught on with the Chinese yet. French fries, also popular with the young, are 25 cents a serving. Add a 10-cent soft drink and the bill comes close to that of a bowl of noodles — 50 cents to $1 depending on size. And the western meal is nutritionally far superior.

"Plenty of white-collar and blue-collar workers, as well as students rush in here during lunch-break and dinner time," said Mrs. Yu.

Kwok Sau-lan, a 23-year-old secretary, agreed: "It's so hard to find a seat in restaurants during lunch hours," she added.

TOGETHERNESS — Noah and Mary Barnett of Tomahawk, Ark., are shown on their horse "Bob," left, on their way to church at Pilot Mountain around 1963, and together, right, circa 1905. The couple has been married for 79 years and they have 151 grandchildren. (AP Laserphoto)

Couple's Marriage Proves Mother Wrong

BY EDDIE ADAMS
TOMAHAWK, Ark. (AP) — Noah's mom feared it might not last, and didn't attend the wedding. But Noah Barnett and Mary have been married 79 years now. They have 151 grandchildren to prove his mother wrong.

Her objection to Noah's marriage was his age.

"You should marry at 36, a man ain't boss until he gets to that age, he ain't got enough sense to boss a woman before then," Noah remembered his mother saying.

But Noah said that he had been in love with Mary from the age of 5 when he saw her playing in a barn. "She was the prettiest girl I ever saw, and was wearing pair of red tap boots with bright copper toes. Her hair was braided and hung down to her waist."

So on February 2, 1899, the year the Spanish American war ended, Noah and Mary were married here in Tomahawk. They were both 19.

Today, they spend their hours quietly together in the frame house they built 71 years ago on their 40-acre Arkansas farm within sight of Pilot Mountain. Holding hands often, they are making modest plans for their 80th wedding anniversary next year.

The Barnetts have five children, ranging in age from 66 to 78. The couple love to talk about their life together.

"We've been married almost 100 years and never had a quarrel," said the 98-year-old Noah.

His formula to prevent angry words? "Don't say nothing when an argument starts. Just turn around and walk off by yourself, saying there ain't nothing to get mad about, that she didn't mean no harm. Stay outside a little while, then just come back like nothing ever happened," Noah said.

The day begins at 7 a.m. Breakfast is supervised by their 72-year-old daughter Dorothy. At mid-morning they have a short nap, then lunch and another afternoon nap. By 7 p.m. they are in bed after an evening snack of ice cream.

The couple love to recall their courting days. Mary was born in 1879, the year Thomas Edison invented the electric light, and Noah was born a few months later.

At the local Methodist church one Christmas, Noah pinned a large candy heart on the tree with Mary's name on it. In school they wrote poems and notes to each other using code numbers instead of letters.

"Early one morning I went to Mary's house and I saw her sitting all alone," Noah recalled during a recent interview. "She ran out to the porch and gave me a hug, and I tell you that was the sweetest hug I ever got... Everytime I would see her I wanted her a little worse than before. She just kept getting prettier all the time. Even now she is pretty, not to you, I suppose. But to me she is."

Noah says with pride: "I have never smoked, chewed tobacco, been drunk or arrested. We have lived on these 40 acres all of our lives and have been out of the state only once for only an afternoon, across the border in Missouri."

"We have really never been out of sight of Pilot Mountain all our lives."

LASTING LOVE — Noah Barnett, 98, put his hand to the cheek of his wife, Mary, in their Tomahawk, Ark., home recently. Seventy-nine years ago Noah's mother was afraid the marriage would not last and so she didn't attend the wedding. (AP Laserphoto)

HAND HOLDERS STILL — Noah and Mary Barnett hold hands as they sit on the porch of their farm house at the foot of Pilot Mountain in Arkansas. Noah says, "Everytime I would see she just kept getting prettier all the time. Even now she is pretty, not to you, I suppose, but to me she is." (AP Laserphoto)

Insurance By Mail More Expensive

By LARGENT PARKS JR.

QUESTION — I receive a lot of mail-order advertisements for health insurance. Are they worth the money?

ANSWER — If you are in good health and need hospitalization coverages, talk to a qualified agent. Chances are he or she can get you better protection for less money.

Insurance Adviser — Because a mail-order plan is offered to everyone, the company assumes the average buyer is not in tip-top condition. Therefore, it must restrict the coverage, charge higher premiums and impose longer waiting periods.

These policies usually pay only when you are confined to a hospital. Even then, most pay no more than $20 or $40 a day. Some cover only accidents or cancer. Or they may impose other restrictions.

If you only need supplemental coverage — such as an extra $40 a day when hospitalized — you may want to look into these plans.

But shop around. As with all kinds of insurance, be sure you get the most for your dollar. But don't expect the policy to provide comprehensive coverage.

Some people look on these plans as mail-order lotteries because most are offered at little or no charge for the first month. You have no obligation to keep the policy by paying the regular premium when it comes due.

I know of a man who paid 25 cents for a mail-order accident policy and was seriously injured in a collision a few days after the policy arrived. He collected more than $6,000. I don't know if you can say he was lucky, but he was a big winner in this two-bit lottery.

QUESTION — My mother bought a cancer policy that the salesman claimed would pay up to $1 million if she was stricken with cancer. The policy costs about $75 a year. Was she ripped off?

ANSWER — Read the policy. It may be true that the policy will pay up to $1 million.

But keep reading. It says it will pay $75 a day for the first 90 days she is in the hospital — plus some other benefits such as doctor's calls, operating room and medicines. If she is still in the hospital after that, it will pay up to $5,000 a month, while hospitalized.

The important point to consider is that people are not kept in hospitals forever — not even cancer victims. The chances of collecting $1 million — or even $10,000 — is remote.

But should she ever have to use the policy, she will probably collect more than she will have paid in, even if she keeps the policy for five or 10 years.

QUESTION — I am covered by a major medical plan where I work. But I plan to go into business for myself one of these days. Is it a good idea to buy a private plan or should I wait until I quit my job?

ANSWER — Thinking of doing something before you quit is sound. If you wait until you get your last paycheck, you will not have adequate coverage for a while. Also, you could find you are not eligible for a private major medical plan.

If you buy a policy while you are still covered by the group plan, be sure your new policy will pay in addition to other insurance. Otherwise you will not be able to collect on the new policy if you have claim that is covered by the group plan.

Most private plans have waiting periods of six months for sickness and 10 months for maternity benefits. If you know when you will quit your job, try to time the purchase so that you will have full coverage when you leave the group.

Check around. Depending on your line of work, you may be able to get in on an association plan — that is, a major medical offered to members of certain groups or associations, such as real estate agents, accountants or traveling salespeople.

There is even a major medical plan designed for people between jobs. If you quit or you are laid-off or fired, you may be able to get this temporary coverage until you get your next job.

Another Kennedy Now Searching For Limelight

By PHILIP PULLELLA
 NEW YORK (UPI) — At 24, Robert F. Kennedy Jr. is a man trying to make a first name for himself.
 Living in the legacy of an uncle who was the country's first Roman Catholic president and a father who wanted to be the second, Robert Jr. has written a timely book as a calling card to introduce himself formally as an active Kennedy.
 The book is a biography of Alabama

Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., the man President Carter wanted to head the FBI and Attorney General Griffin Bell wanted as his deputy attorney general. Johnson accepted the FBI post but failing health forced him to withdraw.
 Kennedy drove south during his last year at Harvard intending to write a senior thesis on Alabama politics. If there was to be a central character in the work, he expected it to be George Wallace, not Frank Johnson.

 He's not the first Kennedy to turn a Harvard senior thesis into a book. John F. Kennedy did it with his senior opus, "White England Slept." It became a best seller.
 In a recent interview, young Kennedy freely discussed his book, his admiration for Judge Johnson — and the pressures of being a Kennedy.
 "Every direction I took, every path I'd take, I'd find Johnson at the end of it," he said. "I found him affecting every department from the schools to the police to voting booths to jury boxes. Johnson had his hand in everything."
 "Wallace is a very charming man," he said. "He doesn't seem like the violently racist piranha we saw in the 60s. He's a very nice man, a kind person. I didn't meet him until after his accident. Everybody is saying how much he's changed."
 "I think he's a political creature. I think he's got some very decent human feelings under that shell but that shell is what he's become. For what it's worth, he's a political animal."
 Kennedy casually slouched back in his chair and looked at the ceiling. He emphaticated the last drops of soda from a paper cup and tore it into neat little strips as he spoke.

 As the third child of Robert and Ethel Kennedy, Robert Jr. was not shouldered with assuming his father's family role when the senator was assassinated in 1968. Robert Jr. was only 14.
 "My brother Joe sort of stepped into my father's shoes," he said. "I think my whole family sort of looks at him as the head of the family ... he and my uncle."
 "I think I have an advantage over other people who lost their father early. I was able to read about my father and had a lot of friends who were willing to talk about him. I could get a good idea of what he stood for and what kind of man he was."
 "I think probably everybody in my family was raised with the idea that my father struggled to accomplish certain goals that the rest of my family believes are worth pursuing."
 The pains of June 1968 are deep for all but the youngest family members, and Kennedy says he has no interest in reopening assassination investigations. "I think it's tough on my mother to read about it everyday in the papers," he said.

Kennedy feels he can overcome some adverse publicity he received when he was younger: a 1971 marijuana bust; spitting ice cream in the face of a policeman who told him to stop loitering; and a speeding charge.
 "I don't know how that will affect me," he said. "I think there are a lot of kids who take some time to find which way they want to go. It took me a couple of years. I think it's something I can transcend."
 "I think I have a pretty clear idea of how to proceed from here. I've made some decisions about what I'd be happy at and I think I'd probably go into some form of public service. I'm not necessarily going to restrict myself to politics."
 He took a long drag on a cigarette and exhaled, letting the smoke mix with his words.

"I think we all made mistakes and I've had my share," he said. "I think I enjoy a lot of the advantages that other people don't. I dealt with problems of publicity and having a famous last name when I was younger and I decided that the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages. A lot of doors are open to me that wouldn't be open to other people."
 Slavery was outlawed in Saudi Arabia in 1954, but the law did not free existing slaves.

New Study Explains Paradox Of Alcohol

BELMONT, Mass. (UPI) — Shakespeare, as usual, said it best.
 Talking about the paradoxical effect of alcohol on sexual desire, the porter tells Macduff in Act Two, Scene Three of Macbeth:
 "It provokes and unprovokes; it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance; therefore much drunk may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him and it mars him; it sets him on and it takes him off; it persuades him and disheartens him ...

 For years the usual explanation has been that alcohol unleashes the beast within but dulls skin sensitivity.
 A new study of what happens in the testes — the body's chemical factory for the sex hormone testosterone — suggests that explanation is not only simplistic, it's wrong.
 Sixteen healthy adult men in their 20s took part in the study at McLean Hospital's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Research Center, a joint project with Harvard University.

Science Today

Testosterone is the chemical which produces puberty in boys and then regulates a man's sex drive and potency the rest of his life. LH is a chemical secreted by the pituitary gland, a pea-sized gland at the base of the brain, and serves as a messenger from brain to testicle. It carries the brain's work order to produce more testosterone.
 Dr. Jack Mendelson director of the research center, describes in an interview what the study found:
 "First we found that testosterone levels fall with alcohol consumption and are at their most depressed levels when blood alcohol levels are highest. Alcohol is broken down in the liver but also in other tissues, including the testes. Important constituents of the testes which usually work in testosterone production are diverted to breaking down alcohol, and when the fall in testosterone level occurs, the compensatory response of the brain is to signal the pituitary gland to put out a large amount of luteinizing hormone to raise the testosterone levels. The surge of LH activity, we think, is associated with increased sexual desire."
 Does that mean that LH is the body's own aphrodisiac?
 "Not exactly," Mendelson said. While LH seems to make men more responsive to sexual stimuli, it is the testosterone which is necessary for the actual physical performance.
 Thus the contradictory effect of alcohol is a chain reaction: It cuts the testosterone level; the brain reacts by sending out a "work order" to the testes in the form of LH, but nothing happens because the testosterone-producing cells in the testes are still preoccupied with breaking down the alcohol. But the brain doesn't know its work order wasn't carried out.
 There is yet a third hormone involved with sexual arousal, the one which signals the pituitary gland to make the LH to send to the testes. That is called GnRH, gonadotrophin releasing hormone, and it's secreted by the gland called the hypothalamus, the part of the brain that regulates many basic functions like sleep and body temperature.
 According to Mendelson, European investigators have successfully treated male impotence by giving men artificially produced GnRH. It hasn't been tried yet in the United States.

Man's Gorilla Act Eases Tensions

DENVER (UPI) — He still wears a three-piece suit, but Alan Kelly has given up the life of a business magazine editor to carry off fair ladies and dance on board room tables for a price.
 Kelly, who once edited "Petroleum Information," now makes his living by adding a large ape mask and hands to his three-piece suit. He charges $15 an hour to deliver messages, sing songs or whatever his customers request from his "Great Gorilla Experiment."
 His targets have included Gov. Richard Lamm, a golfer, a shy suitor and an oil company's board of directors.
 Friends of the golfer hired Kelly to dilute the sportsman's seriousness during a game. Wearing his gorilla outfit, Kelly hid in a clump of bushes near the third tee.
 "When his ball landed, I ran out, scooped it up, hopped into a golf cart and sang 'Born Free' at the top of my lungs," he said. "The golfer got his ball back with the advice, 'You can hit it farther than that.'"
 The board of directors, meeting in great seriousness, was another target for the ape-suited Kelly. Bursting through the doors with a roar, he jumped atop the long conference table, did a tap dance and sang "Goodnight Irene."

A slight deviation from the gorilla act was inspired by Lamm's staff, which hired Kelly to slip into a bumble bee costume, buzz around the governor's desk and prod the state's chief executive with a feeler.
 "Then I sang 'Happy Birthday' at the top of my lungs and about a hundred people came storming in," said Kelly who added Lamm was surprised.
 Kelly said the non-gorilla activities are available at a higher fee.
 But Kelly said his favorite job involved an office party where he slung a female employee over his shoulder and ran shrieking into the woods.
 "Her date was really a shy guy. He really didn't know what to make of it," he said.

Professor To Study Budget Law Impact

ATLANTA (AP) — A political science professor at Emory University has been awarded a $73,000 grant to try to determine if the 1974 law that allows Congress to develop its own national budget has had any effect on the legislative body's ability to control federal spending. The Twentieth Century Fund awarded the grant.
 "The 1974 act allows Congress to develop its own budget along with the president," says Professor Dennis Ippolito. "What I want to know is whether this procedure enabled Congress to control spending more effectively. No one has looked at this act's impact on the budget."
 Before 1974, Congress acted on presidential budget proposals.

Each drank about four shots worth of 100-proof vodka and then had his blood tested at 20-minute intervals for the next few hours. The researchers measured changes in the amounts of alcohol, testosterone and another hormone, luteinizing hormone (LH), in the blood.

U.S. Shows Support For Guzman

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Bolstered by U.S. backing, landowner-businessman Antonio Guzman becomes president of the Dominican Republic today in the island country's first peaceful transfer of power to an opposition party.

Twenty-one gun salves boomed early this morning as the ceremonies began in the capital on the Caribbean. More than 600 dignitaries were expected, among them Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to head a U.S. delegation including Ambassador Andrew Young and baseball great Hank Aaron.

There were no indications of any special security arrangements. But Santo Domingo was cleaner than it has been in months after a scrubbing and sweeping by special crews.

Guzman was to be sworn in by the president of the Senate, of which his opponents retained control in the election May 16, and then was to attend services at the Santo Domingo Cathedral.

Guzman says his biggest worry will be the shaky economy and that he will try to increase the national income and avoid a devaluation of the Dominican peso. The economy has been hit by the low price of sugar, the country's largest export, and the high price of oil, its biggest import.

U.S. support for Guzman, 67, and his Revolutionary Dominican Party was demonstrated when President Carter put pressure on military officers who attempted a coup by stopping the counting of votes in the presidential election when President Joaquin Balaguer, seeking a third term, fell behind.

The count resumed after Carter warned of possible economic reprisals if the military disrupted the electoral process. Final returns gave the presidency and control of the lower house of Congress to Guzman's party but a majority in the Senate to Balaguer's Reformist Party.

On Tuesday, Lt. Gen. Dennis McAuliffe, commander of the U.S. Southern Command, called on Guzman, and the call was interpreted as a warning to the Dominican military not to make another coup attempt.

Balaguer received the chiefs of the foreign delegations Tuesday, and Young told him he admired "what you have done for the Dominican Republic to make this possible."

Guzman was agriculture minister under Juan Bosch, the center-leftist elected president in 1962 after the assassination of dictator Rafael Trujillo. Bosch was overthrown by the military after seven months in office. Three years later, after a civil war and U.S. military intervention, the United States suggested that Guzman head a provisional government, but he refused.

Ex-Terrorist In Israel

PARIS (UPI) — A repentant West German terrorist who was a lieutenant of the notorious "Carlos" is living on a kibbutz in Israel, the newspaper Aurore reported today.

The conservative Paris daily said the reformed terrorist, Hans Joachim Klein, moved to Israel after providing details to authorities that enabled West German police to foil two planned terrorist attacks.

The paper, which gave no sources for the story, said Klein had negotiated with the Israeli secret service, who gave him a borrowed name and installed him on a kibbutz in the Negev.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli authorities said they were investigating the report that Klein might be hiding on a Negev kibbutz.

Klein, who also was a member of the Baader-Meinhof gang that terrorized West Germany, has a Jewish mother and invoked this as grounds for settling in Israel, Aurore reported.

The paper said Klein was a lieutenant of the elusive Venezuelan terrorist "Carlos" — known also as "the jackal" — in the raid on the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna Dec. 21 1975.

Klein was wounded in the stomach in the OPEC raid and convalesced in Algiers and in Italy where he repented and mailed his pistol to the West German weekly Der Spiegel, Aurore said.

"Tracked from then on by the police and by his former companions who considered him a renegade, Hans Joachim Klein looked around for protection," Aurore said.

President Enjoys Signing Park Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said legislation he signed Tuesday to designate part of the Chattahoochee River in Georgia as a national recreation area "gives me more personal pleasure" than any legislation he has signed.

The new law makes a 48-mile segment of the river adjacent to Atlanta a national recreation area and authorizes $72.9 million to be spent for land acquisition.

The president recalled enjoying the river for many years as a resident of Georgia and as the state's governor when he lived in Atlanta.

Pentagon Reports Weapons Cost Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon on Tuesday reported a $665.3 million increase in the cost of its major weapons programs during the April-June quarter.

The increase was attributed chiefly to inflation and various program changes.

The quarterly report estimated it will cost $210.6 billion to complete 52 major weapons projects. Some programs will take up to 10 years to finish.

Israeli Hospital Switches Babies

HAIFA, Israel (UPI) — Every new mother's fear has come true for two young Israeli women — each had raised the other's daughter for two months due to a series of hospital errors.

Lawyers stood by as the two weeping mothers reluctantly exchanged their infants Tuesday. Only a series of blood and tissue tests convinced the two families that a mistake had been made.

Five doctors and nurses at Haifa's Rambam Hospital face negligence charges in the mixup. An investigating committee found the infants' cribs had been switched no less than three different times.

The bizarre affair involved two first-time mothers, both 21, and three baby girls — a pair of non-identical twins and a third girl born a day later.

"Switching sounds so simple, but only a mother knows what it means. It's terrible," one of the mothers said after the final swap.

"I stayed up all night looking at her," the mother of the twins said of the girl who was returned to her, "and for the first time saw the resemblance to her twin sister."

Neither family was identified. The twins were born on a Friday, one in a forceps delivery and in the other in a difficult birth. The third baby was born the following day by Caesarean section.

Because of the birth complications, all three babies were kept away from their mothers until the next Tuesday, a busy day in which trainee nurses and immigrants who had trouble reading Hebrew name tags were working on the infant ward.

One of the new staffers probably made the initial switch without knowing it — separating the twins and handing one to the mother of the baby born by Caesarean section, and delivering the second twin to the other mother.

When the babies were returned to the infants ward later that same day, a head nurse noticed they had been switched because of a discrepancy in the twins' weights. She corrected the mistake but failed to record the correction.

The next day the babies were delivered correctly. But the mothers, unaware they were seeing their own daughters for the first time, reported to a nurse they had not been given the right infants.

The nurse again switched the babies, repeating the error.

At that point the hospital named a doctor, a nurse and an administrator to investigate. That team compounded the confusion by basing its decision on the

Palestinians Win Stay

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Two Palestinians convicted of killing an Egyptian newspaper editor at the Nicosia Hilton hotel in February won a second stay of execution today.

The Cyprus Supreme Court postponed the execution date from Aug. 22 to Sept. 30 to allow time for a new plea for clemency to President Spyros Kyprianou, who is not scheduled to return from a vacation in Greece until Aug. 20.

The two Palestinians, Samir Mohammed Khadar, 28, and Zayed Hussein Ahmed al-Ali, 26, originally were sentenced to be hanged June 27.

U.S.-Built VW's Cost More Than Imports

DETROIT (AP) — The first U.S.-built 1979 Volkswagen Rabbit to go on sale in this country costs $200 more than its 1978 West German-built predecessor, according to VW of America.

The middle-of-the-line Rabbit Custom two-door built at New Stanton, Pa., will carry a suggested retail price of $4,899 compared to $4,699 for a comparable '78 model built overseas, said VW spokesman Herbert Williamson.

Nearly half the $200 increase is because a radio is standard equipment on the domestic 1979 model but was not on the 1978 imported car, and the rest is the result of minor improvements and a normal model change-over price increase, he said.

Soviets Convict, Exile Dissident

MOSCOW (UPI) — Using traditional czarist tactics of banishing opponents to prison or Siberian exile, the Soviet government has effectively strangled the Moscow dissident community and swept virtually all its foes out of the capital.

A Soviet court in Elektrostal, a village 40 miles from Moscow that is off-limits to foreigners, convicted Alexander Podrabinek of anti-Soviet slander and sentenced him to five years in exile Tuesday.

The 24-year-old dissident's conviction was the latest in a series of moves against the small but vocal group of protesters who decry human rights violations in the Soviet Union.

The only prominent dissident who remains free is Nobel Peace laureate Andrei Sakharov. He apparently has escaped the harsh treatment that befell the others because of his eminent position in Soviet society.

Podrabinek's sentencing capped a summer of trials that saw the most active of Moscow's dissidents shipped off for years of prison or exile. All the charges were directly related to dissident activities.

Most of the criminal charges stemmed from the dissidents' membership in a group set up to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords.

Podrabinek, who was convicted and sentenced because of his work to expose the use of psychiatric hospitals as detention centers, headed a branch of the Helsinki group that monitored psychiatric abuse in the Soviet Union.

Despite the loss of Podrabinek and the others this year, the remaining dissidents insist that others will step forward to take the place of those who are in prison or exile.

But the list of the men and women who have been removed is weighted with people who for years spoke out against the system and gained reputations in the West. It could take years for the movement to replace them.

A partial list of the dissidents who have been punished:

—Anatoly Sheharansky, 30, a computer scientist who was convicted of treason and sentenced to 15 years in prison and exile. His arrest and restricted trial in Moscow brought the focus of the West, including President Carter, to Soviet repression of the dissident movement.

Alexander Ginzburg, 41, a founding member of the Helsinki group, was sentenced to eight years in a labor camp on a charge of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. He was tried in Kaluga in July, at the same time as Sheharansky.

—Vladimir Stepak, 50, a Jewish activist who was also a prominent dissident and active in the Helsinki group. Sentenced to five years in exile for hanging a protest banner from his Moscow apartment.

—Yuri Orlov, 52, a nuclear physicist and founding member of the Helsinki group. Seven years in prison and five years' exile for charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

—Fyotr Orlov, 71, stripped of his citizenship while visiting the United States for medical treatment. Banned from returning to the Soviet Union.

—Valentin Turchin, 47, a computer scientist who founded the Moscow branch of Amnesty International. Exiled in October 1977, he currently is in the United States.

—Lyudmila Alekseyeva, 50, a historian who emigrated from the Soviet Union more than a year ago. One of the Helsinki group founders, she currently acts as its representative abroad.

—Anatoly Marchenko, 40, a writer sentenced to four years in exile in 1975.

—Vitaly Rubin, a professor and Jewish activist who emigrated from the Soviet Union in June 1976.

'Genetic Slavery' Charges Leveled

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The International Human Rights Front Tuesday accused industrialized nations of "genetic slavery" for what it called a campaign to reduce the birth rate among American Indians and black Africans.

The organization, in a letter to a Geneva U.N. conference against racism, called for the approval of a resolution urging the end to birth control devices and surgery that it said were designed to wipe out entire races.

"The 'genetic slavery' through which indigenous Americans, black African nations and other people are condemned not to reproduce themselves is a very serious form of discrimination and genocide that must be eliminated right away," the letter said.

Harvard Professors Eye Dean's Ouster

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — In an unprecedented uprising, senior Harvard faculty members of the university's School of Public Health are calling for the ouster of Dr. Howard Hiatt, the school's dean.

Saying they were moved by "intolerable provocation," 17 tenured professors demanded Hiatt's removal in a formal petition sent to Harvard President Derek Bok.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for today through early Thursday predicts rain for New York and most of the New England states. Rain is also forecast for parts of Montana, Idaho and Wyoming.

Panel Recommends Licensing Of Two Health Care Agencies

By JEFF SOUTH. A health advisory committee has recommended that two more agencies be licensed to provide home health care to the elderly in the South Plains area.

The group also voted 9-2 in favor of a similar application by the Visiting Nurse Association of Lubbock.

The panel's recommendations will be considered Thursday by the executive committee of SPHS, a federally designated regional health planning agency.

Earlier this year, the state commission turned down the two applications. However, the commission recently decided to refer the applications to SPHS for local comment.

West Texas Home Health Care, the only non-profit firm now providing visiting nurse services in the region, attempted to block the applications of the two newcomers.

But Pat Patton, administrator of Home Help Care, claimed that the "monopoly" held by the existing agency is dangerous.

He said West Texas Home Health Care charges too much for its services and refuses to serve indigents.

In contrast, Patton said his agency — if allowed to operate here — would serve non-paying patients who "fall between the cracks" of Medicare-Medicaid coverage.

According to the SPHS staff, the existing agency now has a cost of $28 per patient visit, compared with a projected $20

Man Reports Robbery Attempt By Hitchhiker

A Big Spring man told Lubbock County sheriff's deputies Tuesday he escaped being robbed when he jumped out of his car and ran to a nearby liquor store at U.S. 87 and F.M. 41.

Raymond Elmer Davis said he picked up a hitchhiker in Amarillo Tuesday morning, and when the two men neared the liquor store, the passenger told Davis he was going to rob him, and then hit Davis over the head with a small stick.

However, the wallop was not hard enough, only prompting Davis to jump from his car and run to the store where he called authorities. The suspect reportedly ran south from the store, and was arrested a short time later at a nearby residence.

Deputies this morning were also looking for suspects in a reported theft at Kevin McCain's home in New Deal, where about a $1,000 in guns were stolen.

McCain said his wife left their house about 1 p.m. Tuesday, and when she returned at 5 p.m. that day she found the front door open and the firearms missing.

Several Lubbock residents took a heavy loss in stereo equipment and jewelry when their houses were recently broken into.

Dana Best of 1902 42nd St. told police a television, jewelry and stereo equipment, valued at $1,630, were taken during a break-in of her home between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday.

A high-priced stereo system was reported stolen in a burglary at Paul B. Gaunt's 2009 4th St. residence. Gaunt said he apparently became one of Lubbock's many burglary victims between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday.

John H. Hawley of 2615 Ave. K lost a little faith in his watch dog after his home was burglarized Tuesday. He reported $750 in stereo equipment and jewelry stolen. Hawley told police entry was through the back door, and he thought anyone going that route would be scared off by his dog.

Billy F. Stafford of 302 E. Purdue St., Apt. 2, said he was missing two diamond rings valued at about $1,000 when his home was broken into Saturday.

A 20-year-old Texas Tech medical student told police she was met by a man with his pants down to his knees Tuesday afternoon as she walked down the 3400 block of 68th Drive.

She said she called for several of her brothers in the area who caught and detained the man at a nearby park until police arrived.

Lubbock Police Tuesday were looking for two white men who are suspected of taking $800 worth of goods from an automotive shop.

James Simpson, a salesman with Billy's Auto Sales No. 2 at 1711 Ave. Q, said he discovered the burglary Tuesday about 9 a.m. when he opened the shop. The burglars broke a door window to get inside the building, Simpson said, and took a stereo, battery charger, tools, radio and cassette tape deck.

Simpson told officers two men came to the shop three times Monday "just talking and looking around."

In other burglary reports, Christoval T.

Lopez told police that whoever broke in to his home at 4702 Vanda Ave. took $625 worth of property, including a television, sewing machine and clothing. Reports indicate the intruders kicked in the back door of the residence.

According to Thomas Johnson, two televisions, valued at $200, were stolen from his 3309 E. Cornell St. home sometime Tuesday morning.

Burglars who apparently wanted to get a head start on Halloween preparations broke into the "spook house" at the South Plains Fairgrounds, 500 E. Broadway.

Manager Kevin Hart said he discovered Tuesday that five masks, including the likenesses of Frankenstein, Dracula and a gorilla, were missing from the facility. He valued the masks at $100. Hart said the burglars also caused about $100 damage to the structure by breaking light fixtures and daubing paint on the walls.

The purpose of the project is to connect General Telephone's long distance facilities with Southwestern Bell's," said Bell division manager Bob Dunbar. "This will enable General Telephone customers to dial into the Bell network."

Dunbar said the aerial cable presently being used by General Telephone will be replaced with buried cable that eliminates many maintenance problems, is less affected by storms and is better able to provide for future growth.

Bounds Construction of Lubbock is contractor for the project, due to be completed next June.

No major inconveniences to the public are expected, Dunbar said.

Bell To Begin Cable Project

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is scheduled to begin construction later this month on a $573,600 cable project that will provide long distance trunking facilities to serve General Telephone Co. customers around the Idalou exchange area.

Attorney Says Tax Limits Illegal

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston city attorney thinks the Tax Board of Apportionment's 10 percent limit on 1978 property tax increases is illegal.

Bob Collie said Tuesday he would tell the City Council today why he came to that conclusion. He added, however, that his opinion would not affect tax rollbacks in seven northwest Houston subdivisions revalued twice in four years.

The limit would mean a large tax savings to residents of 250 subdivisions where this year's revaluations increased taxes as much as 400 percent.

Mayor Jim McConn and Councilmen Homer Ford and Jim Westmoreland agreed the limitation might be arbitrary and illegal, and should be changed.

But Councilmen Frank Mann and Louis Macey, both members of the board, said they plan to go ahead with the limitation if it means fairer and more equal taxation.

Mann said Collie's opinion is "irrelevant" and has no effect on board actions to decide what is equal and fair taxation.

He said the board, which hears final appeals of high revaluations, needs no motions or ordinances to make decisions using the limitation scale devised by Mann and unanimously approved by the board on Monday.

But McCann said Mann's motion was passed with the stipulation that it would be void if Collie found it to be illegal.

The mayor, who said he hasn't analyzed the effect the limit would have on city tax revenues, said he thinks it could be devastating to the Houston Independent School District.

HISD official Linus Wright said earlier the tax reduction would cost the district $8 million in 1978-79.

Westmoreland said he would like to see a city tax department analysis of the effect Mann's plan would have on city revenues, and Ford suggested a plan of his own that he said would clarify the "clouded issue."

Aviation Firm Sets Open House

Avtech Aviation will sponsor an open house to celebrate National Aviation Day and the Diamond Jubilee of powered flight from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at the Lubbock International Airport.

Included in the program, which is open to the public, will be a showing of new business aircraft. "Discovery" flights also will be offered.

National Aviation Day was instituted by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939.

The original purpose of the day was to honor American aviation heroes, particularly Orville and Wilbur Wright. Since then, the annual fete has broadened its perspective to include stimulation of interest in general aviation and to show the development and progress of the aviation industry.

Traditionally, National Aviation Day has been celebrated on Aug. 19, the birthday of Orville Wright.

Avtech Aviation was chosen by the Aviation Distributors and Manufacturers Association to officially celebrate the occasion in the Lubbock area.

Chef To Make Big Omelet

PEEKSKILL, N.Y. (UPI) — If you like omelets, you'll like the one chef Victor Eichenauer has in mind.

Eichenauer, assisted by six other chefs, plans to cook the world's largest omelet, a 10,000-egg creation, Sept. 23, on the first day of a two-day food festival on the Peekskill waterfront green.

Eichenauer, a research specialist for General Foods, has written the recipe to raise money for the Peekskill Health Center and to break the Guinness record for the world's largest omelet.

On the second day, Eichenauer said he's going to set at least one other record for which there is no Guinness entry.

Eichenauer plans to carve a replica of Henry Hudson's Half Moon — out of a 8,000-pound block of ice.

Eichenauer's omelet recipe: Take 10,000 eggs. Mix with six gallons of milk. Add 4.65 pounds of salt and 2 pounds of pepper for seasoning.

Stir in large stainless steel bowls. Pour into a skillet 24 feet long, 12 feet wide and 2 feet deep. Make sure pan is well greased with 16 gallons of oil or butter.

Cook slowly until fluffy and light. Turn with a snow shovel.

Scientists Say Mars Mission Successful

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory searching for life on Mars cheered when the first picture from the red planet's rocky surface spread across television monitors.

That was on July 20, 1976. If anything lives on the red planet, it still lives in secret. The search for life on Mars has ended for now.

The two Viking landers which transmitted that picture and others remain on the Martian surface, sending data back to about 200 scientists and technicians — all that remain of the 750-person Viking team of 1976.

"There's no question the mission was a complete success," said Dr. Conway Snyder, Viking's current project scientist. "The only sense in which it was not a success is that we tried very hard to discover life and did not."

Asked if scientists can say flatly that no life exists on Mars, Snyder replied: "Most certainly not. We're not likely to be in that position (to reject some form of life on Mars) for centuries."

If the search had been near the Martian ice cap, he said, "we would have had enough water available that it might conceivably have given us a different answer."

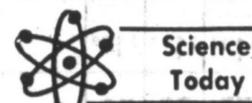

"The most dramatic thing we found,"

Computers Sometimes Inefficient

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI) — Contrary to what many may believe, the widespread use of computers in the operation of local governments has not made government more efficient or less expensive to run, according to a social scientist.

It fact, said Dr. James Danzinger of University of California, Irvine, they have occasionally had the opposite effect.

Danzinger said he is not against computers, but would like to find a way to make them more efficient and less disruptive. He said the current literature about computers and electronic data processing is too one-sided.

In his view there are two types of people writing about computers. "One is the vendor who is selling the hardware and the software. The other is the academician who is strongly committed to seeing computer use pushed to its furthest capacity."

Danzinger's work on computer use was part of a UCI public policy research project on the impact of technology on local governments.

"A certain litany has developed surrounding computer use so that the negative aspects are rarely talked about," he said. "No one is willing to take a critical look at computers."

He said both sides of the issue must be discussed, because computer use is growing each year. He noted that county and city governments last year spent more than $1 billion on electronic data processing systems.

There are several fallacies. Among them is the belief that such systems reduce personnel and cut costs.

"Staff reductions are the exception on most of the more complex tasks which have been computerized," he said. "Data coding and entry often involve more staff time per transaction than did the manual system."

He said also that in the political areas of government there is reluctance to eliminate jobs that might be affected by automation and other jobs are protected by Civil Service.

And when staff is not reduced, costs are not reduced. In addition, people who operate the computer systems are usually paid high salaries.

It is generally believed, he said, that computers efficiently store available data, which he terms the "mountains into molehills" theory. Not so, because the system stimulates government employees into accumulating a lot of unnecessary data.

Also, he said, computer systems do not always generate better information for making decisions. They are not better nor worse than manual systems.

Another common belief is that computer technology increases a supervisor's ability to manage subordinates. While it does allow more complex monitoring of workers, "most subordinates are uncomfortable, if not unhappy, with the increased measurement of their behavior."

Danzinger said computers do not necessarily expedite the transfer of information from one system to another, because local governments often try to maintain uniqueness. So systems reject those used elsewhere in favor of developing one of their own.

"There has been a rather uncritical acceptance that long-run impacts of computer systems are overwhelmingly beneficial," he said. But the information network has been heavily biased toward promoting computer system success stories, with lack of empirical research.

In fact, he said, there is evidence that the impact of electronic data processing on many local governments might be negative.

L. C. "Hap" Dalton, the man who supervises the Youth Hall for the annual New Mexico State Fair, has been associated with the annual exposition since it started in 1938.

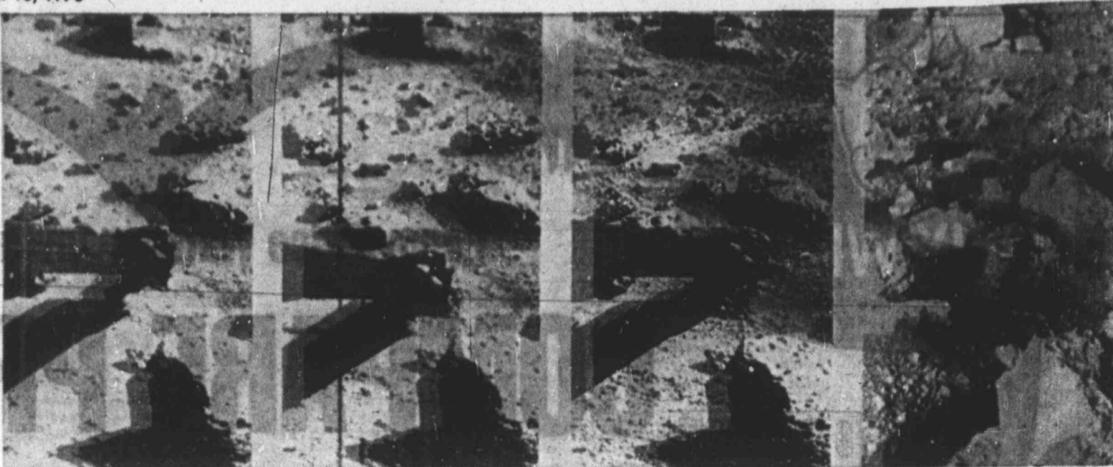

said project manager Kermit Watkins, "was the total absence of organic compounds (essential to life on Earth). That was a result everyone was completely unprepared for."

Mars has been photographed, mapped, sampled, tested and probed by the two Viking landers and the orbiting mother ships that carried them on the year-long journey from Earth.

"We still have what appears to be one healthy orbiter and two reasonably healthy landers," Watkins said.

Snyder said that since the search for life ended, the mission's emphasis has shifted to Mars' weather and climate — "One area ... that is most important to understanding our own planet."

He said Viking operations should continue through next February, with the mission scheduled to end officially in September 1979.

shows the area after the sample was taken. The first Viking landed on Mars on July 20, 1976. Emphasis has shifted from the search for life to the examination of weather and climate, and operations should continue through February of 1979, with the mission officially ending in September, 1979. (AP Laserphoto)

EPA Casts Eye Toward Chemical Dump Areas

By ANDREW A. YEMMA
United Press International Writer

The 300 residents of Wilsonville in southwestern Illinois have won the first skirmish in what may be a long legal battle with a mighty industry that has been dumping highly toxic chemicals in a pit near their tiny town.

But residents in many other areas of the nation seem unaware of fights being waged to protect them from deadly substances that could one day rise from the ground — like ghouls of the chemical age — at a tremendous cost in human suffering and money needed to clean up the disasters.

The chemical dumps are blamed for cancer cases, miscarriages, birth defects and allergic reactions.

Some instances:

- In Niagara Falls, N.Y., an oozing chemical mess may drive more than 200 families from their homes.
- In North Carolina, officials are trying to find who dumped deadly PCBs along highways in 15 separate counties.

—In Lowell, Mass., federal officials warn that thousands of barrels of chemicals are rusting and leaking into the ground.

—In Strabane, Pa., a dump is emitting dangerous levels of Radon gas — exceeding federal levels.

Anywhere from 18 million to 40 million tons of hazardous wastes are being disposed of improperly each year, experts say.

—In Washington, W.Va., a plant is sitting on the site of radioactive and combustible wastes so volatile that the ground explodes like a volcano.

—In Louisville, Ky., and New Jersey chemicals have been dumped clandestinely for the past two years.

—In Michigan, officials still are attempting to clean up the mess caused five years ago when the toxic fire retardant PBB accidentally was mixed with livestock feed, and the contaminated animals were by humans.

Industrial dumps are not isolated. There are thousands of them across the country. And government experts around the nation fear that 1,000 or more of them may be potential manmade disasters.

Steffen Plehn, deputy assistant administrator for solid waste at the Environmental Protection Agency, said 90 percent of the 345 million tons of hazardous wastes being produced by American industry each year are not disposed of "in accordance with proper environmental standards."

Published estimates of the number of potential problems — where dumped chemicals or other wastes surface years later as a threat to man and environment — have ranged as high as 1,000. Anywhere from 8 million to 40 million tons of hazardous wastes are being disposed of improperly each year, experts say.

Plehn said one site of current concern to EPA and local health officials is called Silresin in Lowell, Mass.

"There are literally thousands of barrels of chemicals. Some are rusting and leaking into the ground and up to now, no one knows whose responsibility it is or what to do about it," he said.

This week, a huge clay-lined burial pit holding the rotting carcasses of 1,400 head of cattle contaminated by PBB is being sealed near Mio, Mich., despite picketing protesters and threatened lawsuits.

A sudden resurgence of 95-degree weather caused some of the bodies to bloat and work their way to the top of the pit.

"You couldn't, with your wildest imagination, think up a more ghastly sight," one official said. "There's a 10-foot mound of them with a sand covering on top. The blood and body fluids are spilling out of the top like springs or geysers. Anything that runs over the top is collected. Because of the heat and pressure, bodies were beginning to come up out of the mound."

Another problem is the "midnight dumper" — someone paid to illegally dispose of wastes. That was the case in the recent North Carolina incident where PCB was dumped along 250 miles of highway in 15 counties. Other major clandestine dumpings have occurred in recent years in New Jersey and Louisville, Ky.

North Carolina officials still aren't sure what to do about PCB contamination, but they do know some tests have shown levels more than 500 times above federal limits. Options include removing contaminated soil or attempting to neutralize the chemical with activated carbon. If the soil is removed, it, too, must be stored somewhere — at a tremendous expense to taxpayers.

Officials said the North Carolina PCB's entered the food chain in chickens where the chemical was dumped and the water and fish life will be monitored for PCB content "for a long time into the future."

One of the nation's worst radiation dumps is located in Strabane, Pa., a town of 1,700, 30 miles south of Pittsburgh. Its 17 acres emit radon gas at levels exceeding federal limits. During the last 54 years, the plant has dumped radioactive sludge into a ditch leading to the lake in the town's industrial park. The lake later was filled with dirt and clay in compliance with 1967 radiation standards. Last year, government scientists fenced off a baseball field because radon in air exceeded state standards.

The L. B. Foster Co. plant at Washington, W.Va., is sitting on soil that is laced with radioactive and combustible wastes. The radiation was discovered by workers digging at the pipemaking plant last spring who encountered violent, volcano-like explosions each time a shovel chewed at the earth.

The oozing chemical mess near Niagara Falls caused a federal emergency to be declared last week. Health officials found severe health problems, including an increased incidence of miscarriages, birth defects among children, and allergic reactions. Chemicals from an old, abandoned landfill operated by the Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corp. seeped into backyards and basements in the area. The state warned pregnant women and children under 2 to move out, offering to reimburse residents who must abandon their homes.

State Judge John Russell Monday closed the Wilsonville, Ill., dump — at least temporarily, since the ruling will be appealed — and required the Earthline Corp. to remove its hazardous wastes and all contaminated soil.

Illinois Attorney General William Scott, who joined the town and county's suit against Earthline, said the case "demonstrates that the citizens of a tiny community can take on a powerful industry and redress their grievances within our system."

But Scott said other solutions to hazardous waste disposal must be found before the problem can be remedied.

"Whatever the additional cost is to industry to properly take care of their industrial wastes, it will be a minimal amount in terms of the health and lives of the public," Scott said.

Attorneys for Earthline maintained adequate protection was provided at Wilsonville, the wastes' burial was not a hazard and state and federal rules were followed.

Wilsonville residents learned in April 1977 Earthline was accepting hazardous wastes, including the toxic, cancerlinked substance PCB (polychlorinated biphenyl), from a polluted Missouri dump. Residents said their health and safety was jeopardized by the landfill and demanded it be shut down with all contents removed. Their protests included residents flying American flags upside down and raising money for legal fees and technical advice.

Macoupin County State's Attorney Kenneth Boyle said he thinks it is the first time a "circuit court has closed down this type of operation."

CIA Reports On Russia's Gas Future

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA says the Soviet Union has a bright natural gas future which will ease — but not solve — Russia's energy problems during the next decade.

Natural gas will not match oil as a hard currency earner by 1980, but it probably will become the leading Soviet trade commodity well before 1985, with hard gross currency receipts of $2 billion likely, a CIA report says.

"Soviet natural gas reserves of 28 trillion cubic meters (1 cubic meter equals 35 cubic feet) are possibly the world's largest and would provide more than 80 years output at the 1977 production level of 346 trillion cubic meters annually," said the report. "USSR: Development of the Gas Industry."

In contrast, the United States has natural gas reserves estimated at only about 6.2 trillion cubic meters, which would last about 11 more years at the 1977 yearly production rate of 565 billion cubic meters.

But the CIA said the Soviet Union's natural gas future, though bright, is not a panacea and will ease, but not solve, Russia's energy problems during the next decade.

For one, the United States and other Western industrial powers have much of the technology needed by the Soviet Union to develop its potentially richest natural gas fields in western Siberia.

This dependence on Western technology, according to the CIA report, increases the importance of Soviet natural gas wealth even more because it will help cover the rising costs of that technology and equipment, which the Soviet gas industry's expansion in the 1980s will require.

Western Europe has been a Soviet natural gas client since 1968 when a branch of the Bratsko (Brotherhood) gas trunkline — which feeds Eastern Europe — reached Austria.

Since then, the Soviet Union also has signed export contracts with West Germany, France, Finland and Italy guaranteeing natural gas shipments, which by 1980 may reach 25 trillion cubic meters.

WORLD NEWS

Negotiations For Aquino Hit Snag

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Negotiations for the release of imprisoned opposition leader Benigno S. Aquino Jr. have reached a stalemate because Aquino refuses to guarantee what he will do if allowed to seek exile in the United States.

Months-old talks to get Aquino out of jail and the Philippines now center on whether he will be a quiet exile or a fervent spokesman for forces opposing President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Aquino has been offered — and has accepted in principle — a teaching job at Harvard University.

China's Labor Tapped

TOKYO (UPI) — Chinese Chairman Hua Kuo-feng's pragmatic government is giving Japanese manufacturers the okay for the first time to tap China's vast pool of cheap labor.

Two big Tokyo trading companies are negotiating deals to put up factories in Shanghai for manufacture of shoes, underwear and shirts. It will be an "entrusted processing trade" in which Japan ships in raw materials or semi-processed products for the Chinese to turn into finished goods.

Chinese wages are far lower than those in South Korea, Taiwan and other Asian points where Japan also has these kinds of plants.

Indian Election Fight

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Elections within India's ruling Janata party this fall seem certain to produce some bitter fights and a change of leadership.

There has been increasing criticism of the current party president, Chandra Shekhar, for not concentrating on building the party and recruiting new members.

One possible successor to the party leader being mentioned often is Foreign Minister A. B. Vajpayee, but whether he would be willing to give up his Cabinet post is uncertain.

Diplomatic Ties

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Indonesia's decision to establish diplomatic ties with Cambodia may pave the way for Singapore to set up relations with the Communist regime in Phnom Penh soon.

Singapore is the only member country of the association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) which still has no formal ties with Cambodia, although it maintains economic and trade links.

Singapore believes that it is best to be the last of the ASEAN countries to establish relations with Communist countries in Asia and the way is now clear to open negotiations with Cambodia.

Influx Of Refugees

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Thailand, which already is harboring 17,000 Cambodian refugees, is worried about a new influx in the past few weeks across the western border.

Khmer Rouge troops have taken heavy losses in fighting along the border with Vietnam and some units have been moved from west to east to fill the gaps.

Insurrections against the Phnom Penh regime are growing under the leadership of former Communist Cambodian Vice President So Phim. What worries Thai officials is the prospect of further weakening of Khmer Rouge control of the countryside, leading to a massive influx of refugees into Thailand.

Maine Easier On Speeders

BANGOR, Maine (UPI) — A survey of 12,000 truckers shows the nation's truck drivers like rural Maine — because they say the state has the most lenient enforcement of speeding laws in the nation.

The four-month survey was conducted by Mother Trucker News, a national magazine of the trucking industry.

The state police are the easiest to get along with. It also said truckers say Ohio "smokies" are the most hard-nosed, handing out tickets for traveling 57 miles per hour in a 55 mph zone.

Seventy-nine percent of the truckers named Ohio as the strictest state for traffic law enforcement, followed by Virginia, (77 percent), Missouri (69 percent), Pennsylvania (56 percent) and California (54 percent).

But Maine State Police Lt. Col. Ronald Hiltz told the Bangor Daily News that truckers are not getting preferential treatment in Maine.

Hiltz said state police issued 1,415 tickets last month and truckers got 96 of them. But he also said Maine is a large, sparsely populated state and there are long stretches of road patrolled by only one trooper.

"We have about 250 people on traffic duty," Hiltz said. "At any one time a third of them are off duty or on vacation."

Union Chief Asks Binding Arbitration

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The head of the International Association of Fire Fighters says legislation is needed to provide binding arbitration in labor disputes involving government employees.

W. Howard McClennon, a former Boston firefighter, told the organization's biennial convention Monday that organized labor in both the public and private sectors faces unprecedented challenges and said public employees would continue striking to achieve their goals.

Crew Blames Captain For Sub Mishap

BOSTON (UPI) — With sardonic humor, the crew members of the U.S. nuclear submarine Tullibee called the pile of sand on the engine room floor the "Charles Arnest Memorial Beach."

But when the ship's propeller shaft broke a few days later while submerged in the Mediterranean, some crewmen said they didn't want to return to the sea with their captain, Cmdr. Charles Arnest.

The snapping of the shaft June 16 caused the Tullibee's engine room to flood and the Navy termed the incident "near-catastrophic." The ship is now in drydock at the Polaris submarine base in Rota, Spain, undergoing repairs.

In interviews with the Boston Globe, crewmen said soon after the Tullibee left Naples, Italy, on June 8 they noticed sand coming into the engine room from the shaft bearing. They said they called the captain and told him they suspected it was from the propeller shaft, a steel tube filled with sand to give it stability. But he said the sand came from the harbor, they told the newspaper.

When the shaft broke, an inch of it remained inside the bearing, providing enough of a stopper to slow the flooding so the Tullibee could surface.

"One more inch and I would not be here talking to you," one crewman said. The crewmen said Arnest did not mention receiving the warning in his report on the incident.

Master Chief Petty Officer George Papillard began compiling a journal a month after Arnest took command of the ship in March 1977. He told the newspaper he had planned to submit it to the Navy as soon as he retired early last month.

"I destroyed it because some of the entries were colored by personal rancor," Papillard said. "But I'll say this. I considered Cmdr. Arnest to be a borderline Captain Queeg-Captain Bligh."

Papillard, the senior enlisted man on board, would not discuss details but said, "In my opinion Cmdr. Arnest had a style that has no room in the modern Navy."

The 78 or 80 men aboard were to him just so many pieces of machinery.

Other crewmen said the shaft failure was the last in a series of incidents, including a man allegedly being kicked and the removal of six crewmen from the ship while it was moored in New London, Conn., on Feb. 8.

A statement prepared by the Navy in response to the allegations said the captain "does not recall ever having kicked anyone." The Globe said crewmen with whom the newspaper talked were adamant that the incident occurred at battle stations one day.

The crewmen also alleged that Cmdr.

Arnest ordered the forward hatch, one of three, be reserved for officers and chiefs. They said the other hatches were dangerous because of power lines and being on ramps in the winter.

The crewmen interviewed by the Globe "ranged from men on their first hitch to seasoned veterans," the paper said.

Scarring Of The Liver

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know more about cirrhosis. I have had it since January of 1974. I have been in three hospitals and each one adds to my diet. I am on a very low protein, sodium and potassium diet. It must help some as I have not blacked out in over a year. Before that I would black out about every 10 days, sometimes even in the hospital.

I don't have good balance and I forget a lot. I go to the hospital for a check-up every three months. My feet swell up and are discolored and they have been doing this for about four years. Any information you can give me would be appreciated.

contract and deform the liver. The important point in the presence of cirrhosis of the liver is how much liver function is still present. A mild degree of cirrhosis is compatible with a relatively good state of health. If you've had a lot of damage to the liver that is associated with the scarring, then abnormal liver function may cause the body to retain fluid and seriously affect digestion, including how the body handles proteins.

hol. That means that at least 40 percent of the people develop cirrhosis who have no alcohol problem. These can occur from gallstones, infectious illnesses that affect the liver and even nutritional problems.

Once you have developed cirrhosis of the liver you should certainly avoid alcohol, and if the cirrhosis of the liver is severe you might need vitamin supplements and special diets as in your case.

To give you more understanding of the liver and how it works I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-8, Living With Your Liver. Other readers who would like this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

You didn't state your age, but your dizziness may be related to other problems. If you have poor circulation, that may be a factor, too. Any major illness — and you do have one — can increase a person's tendency to faint or cause a dizzy sensation.

(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

DEAR READER — Cirrhosis of the liver means scarring of the liver and it literally follows injury of the liver cells. Remember that scarring occurs if you injure your skin or any other part of the body so don't be surprised if scarring occurs in the body's organs if their cells are injured.

KUWAIT (AP) — Crude oil production by the 10 members of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries averaged 19,897,000 barrels a day in 1977 compared to 19,128,000 in 1976. The organization's annual report said the group's total refining capacity increased only 135,000 barrels a day.

The group's members are Algeria, Bahrain, Egypt, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syria and the United Arab Emirates.

CACTUS KING — Charles Fitzpatrick, 74, of Edinburg is known as the "Cactus King." He is shown with some of the many varieties of thorned plants he ships all over the country. He claims he doesn't keep an inventory. (AP Laserphoto)

Cactus Tycoon Too Miserly To Clean Up House, Yard

By KEN HERMAN
EDINBURG (AP) — Charles Fitzpatrick's 23-room house and 20 acres of land look as though they have not been cleaned up for five years.

Not so, says the 74-year-old entrepreneur.

"It's been about seven years since the house was swept out — since my mother died," he said.

But what looks like a hopeless maze of junk to an outsider looks like money in the bank to Fitzpatrick.

Woven into the tangle is Fitzpatrick's money crop — cactus.

"I've advertised as the largest cactus garden in the world for 20 years. No one ever called my hand. I must be right," he said.

For 35 years the Georgia native has specialized in cactus — about 2,000 varieties. He has sold untold millions of the thorny plants throughout the nation. The former traveling salesman's business philosophy is simple and indisputable. "If it don't make money we don't do it," he said.

Hence, the mess.

"The money's laying in the bank that I would've used to clean up. I'm a cheapskate," he said.

The cactus is everywhere on his land. But, from looking, you'd never guess it had been intentionally planted. There does not appear to be any rhyme or reason to the planting method.

"I got one friend that drives me crazy. He wants me to bulldoze it up and plant it in straight rows. I'm too tight to have them dig it up and replant it," the cactus king complained.

The cactus business is good these days. Northern dealers grab it by the truck full.

Fitzpatrick, otherwise glib, is tight.

Texas Med School To Receive Grant

HOUSTON (AP) — A grant of almost $2.2 million is going to the University of Texas Medical School at Houston to help expand research into the development of a male contraceptive.

Dr. Emil Steinberger, a medical school official, said Tuesday the grant came from the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development.

lipped about his profits. But he is proud of his ability to beat the taxman.

"This is the best business in the world. Ain't nobody gonna take inventory here," he boasted.

Fitzpatrick started out with one-tenth of a city lot 35 years ago. He was looking for something "the oil companies couldn't put me out of business with." Of all his money-making schemes, none hit like cactus.

"I don't have to do anything with them. They grow better if you water them a little, but that's all," he said. "Some of them you just lean up against a tree. See those, that's five bucks each."

His advertisements appear in magazines across the nation. The semi-defunct retail store is called Cactus Land. The wholesale business is The Cactus Garden. But the place has gone by a few other monikers.

"I advertised in 35 different magazines and used a different name in each one. Everyone thought I was as crooked as a rattlesnake. I used Cactus Pat, Cactus Jack ... Anything with cactus in it," he said with a cunning grin.

His plants are imported from throughout the Southwest (and some from as far as Japan). He said he has about 100 peo-

Arizona Gang Indicted On 19 Counts By Jury

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — While some 200 law enforcement officials and civilian volunteers were winding down a desert search for escaped killer Gary Tison, the Pinal County grand jury was returning 19 felony indictments against members of his gang in connection with his and Randy Greenawalt's escape from Arizona State Prison.

Greenawalt, 29; Raymond Tison, 19; and Ricky Tison, 18, were charged with 15 counts of assault with a deadly weapon for allegedly forcing 15 guards and visitors into a broom closet at gunpoint during the July 30 escape.

Greenawalt also is charged with escaping and possessing a firearm while a prisoner. The Tison boys are charged with helping Greenawalt and their father escape, and with bringing prohibited articles — sawed off shotguns — into the prison. Both Gary Tison and Greenawalt are convicted murderers.

Meanwhile, a federal complaint was filed Tuesday charging Gary Tison, who remains at large, with unlawful flight to avoid confinement.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dale Danne-man, who filed the charge, said it mainly was a legal maneuver designed to keep the FBI involved in the case. The action was requested by the Pinal County Attorney's office, he said.

Arraignment for the Tison boys and Greenawalt is scheduled for Monday. They also face murder and kidnap charges in Yuma County, and face a preliminary hearing Friday.

A five-day manhunt for Tison, 42, involving about 150 volunteers ended Tuesday in the Sawtooth Mountains south of Casa Grande. But Colorado authorities continued the search for two more possible victims of the escapees.

Search and rescue and communications volunteers paced the Arizona desert from dawn to noon, but found no trace of Tison.

Tison's oldest son, Donald, 20, died Aug. 11 when he tried to drive a van owned by a Texas couple honeymooning in Colorado through a roadblock near Casa Grande. Greenawalt and the other Tison boys were captured then, but authorities believe the elder Tison escaped into the abusive desert.

A small force of deputies continued to search the mines and patrol roads, but roadblocks were removed and volunteers were released.

Before the volunteers began the search effort Tuesday, they received instructions from Pinal County Sheriff Frank Reyes.

"We will be looking for bodies out there," he said. "If Tison is still in the area, he's probably dead or too weak to offer resistance. There also is a chance that an Amarillo couple whose van was commandeered by Tison might be lying out there somewhere."

None of Gary Tison's fingerprints was found in the van, and he has not been spotted, according to Reyes. But his sons claim he was in the back of the van when it crashed the roadblock.

Reyes told the searchers to be careful.

"You are not a lynch mob," he warned. "I don't want to hear rumors that we're out there to string Tison up."

But several volunteers promised they would shoot the fugitive on sight.

"I wouldn't hesitate one moment to shoot him," said Bill Daniels, 31, of Casa Grande. "Most of us feel the same way. That's why we're here."

A special Department of Public Safety squad and Bureau of Indian Affairs police checked out abandoned mines in the area.

Pima County Sheriff's deputies also searched unsuccessfully near Ajo, 100 miles southwest of the major hunt area, after a family reported seeing a man resembling Tison.

The van used by the Tison gang was believed stolen from James and Margene Judge of Amarillo. The newlyweds were camping near South Fork, Colo., when the disappeared Wednesday, investigators said.

The FBI and Rio Grande County sheriff's deputies have been searching the high mountains for the Judges since Friday.

"We're going to keep it up until every lead just fizzles out," said Undersheriff Barnett Bauer.

The gang also is charged in the killings of Marine Sgt. John F. Lyons, 24, of Omaha, Neb., his wife, Donna, 24, and their 22-month-old son, Christopher.

Another murder charge is pending in the shotgun death of the Lyons' niece, Teresa Tyson, 15, of Las Vegas, Nev. Her body was found near the scene of the Lyons murder after Greenawalt and the Tison brothers were questioned Friday.

Amarillo Man's Family Thinks Couple Still Alive

AMARILLO (AP) — A bullet-riddled van is the only trace law enforcement officials have of an Amarillo couple who disappeared while honeymooning in Colorado last week.

But while the families of James and Margene Judge have maintained a phone-side vigil, they don't agree on the couple's fate.

Although Colorado authorities offer little hope, James Judge Sr. of Amarillo is convinced the newlyweds are still alive.

He said he believes it is "only a matter of time before he and his wife get official confirmation of their faith."

But Margene's father, F.H. Davis of Borger, said he and his wife have "all but given up hope."

"If it wasn't for all the phone calls from friends and people I don't even know, I don't know how we would have ever made it this far," Davis said.

However he said the family no longer expects a phone call with good news. Instead they are prepared and waiting for a call confirming their worst fears.

"We haven't given up on them," Judge said. "I really and truly believe the kids are still alive. You wait and see. James is going to outsmart that fat son-of-a-dog and come out of there and snap right back into life."

Judge's faith is unshakable. Even if their apparent abductors tried to kill them, Judge said, he believes "James was able to get away."

Judge said he and his wife are "standing up pretty good" during their long waits by the phone. "Sure there are times when we both break down. But we are both holding up. I am still able to grin."

And Judge said no matter what the news, they will accept it.

"Whatever it is, it will be God's will and we must all obey God's will. If we didn't, we would be just as bad as the men who did this."

Churches across the nation have called the families to tell them special prayer services are being held until definite word is heard.

"Something like that makes a fellow stand a little bit taller," Judge said.

Cigarette Smuggling Becomes Big Business

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Nearly 1.2 billion packs of cigarettes were sold by retailers in North Carolina last year, but only about 740 million of them likely were inhaled in this tobacco state.
 The rest, 38 percent, were taken to other states — by tourists who filled car trunks with cartons by the dozen while passing through the state with the lowest cigarette tax, or by smugglers who hauled cases by the hundreds in huge trucks and made staggering profits.
 "Buttlegging" it is called, and it's big business.
 Law enforcement efforts to stop the trade are hampered by the legality of most sales here and by the difficulty of tracing the cigarettes once they get to high-tax states where resale is illegal.

The illicit industry has flourished because of simple economics — North Carolina, which manufactures 52 percent of the nation's cigarettes, pays homage to the economic importance of tobacco by levying the nation's lowest cigarette tax, two cents a pack.
 It doesn't take many illegal sales to generate a profit when packs bought at those prices, or as little as $3.50 a carton, are resold in places like New York City, where the tax is 23 cents a pack, or Pennsylvania, where it is 18 cents, or Florida, where it is 17 cents.
 "Anybody'd be foolish not to do it at those prices," said a cigarette dealer.

one of hundreds along the main North-South routes. He asked not to be named for fear of the growing interest in smuggling by the FBI and officials here and in northern states.
 "If you're paying $7 or $7.50 a carton in New York and see them here for $3.50, you'll get a year's supply and maybe call Uncle Bob and see if he wants some too," he said. "So you end up getting about 300 cartons and pretty soon you've paid for your vacation."
 But investigations in other states say that smuggling is not just a tourist operation but is often run by organized crime figures.

Legislation now before Congress would make the interstate traffic a federal offense, giving the FBI jurisdiction in the trade. Another proposal would replace state cigarette taxes with a uniform federal tax, with a rebate to the states to compensate for lost tax revenues.

In New York, meanwhile, the State Assembly has passed a bill to reduce the state tax by one cent and eliminate the eight-cent New York City tax on cigarettes. The measure, which is stalled in the state Senate, is intended to reduce the smuggling.

The trade has meant an estimated $400 million in lost cigarette tax revenues for states other than North Carolina and, some fear, has given organized crime a foothold in legitimate businesses.

The cigarettes are resold at discounted prices on city black markets or are sold through legitimate retailers with fake state tax stamps.

"We think that clearly it's big business. Tourists are just a small part of it," says Milt Lopus, secretary of revenue in Pennsylvania, where three gangland-style slayings have been linked to cigarette smuggling in the past two years.

It ranges from organized crime to individuals who just come down on their own and bring back a truckload. But we are seeing now that individual territory is being carved out here," he added.

Bulk cigarette sales are legal here, as long as North Carolina taxes are paid and the tax stamp affixed, and most cigarette stands will sell unlimited amounts, no questions asked. One investigator noted:

"There's no secret about it. One dealer said it'd cost $2,000 to fill a car, and he'd throw in a blanket to cover it up."

For big operators, a full truck might carry 60,000 cartons and, in Pennsylvania or New York, a smuggler could resell them with a 50 cent discount and still clear $1.30 or more a carton.

"You're just dealing with fantastic sums of money," said J. Phil Carlton, North Carolina secretary of crime control and public safety and the man in charge of the state's anti-smuggling efforts. "A $150,000-profit transaction is not unusual."

The trade has dramatically affected legitimate cigarette sales. A recent study by the North Carolina audit office, which estimated the amount of cigarettes going out of state, also found that based on taxes, 138 packs were sold for every person nationwide in 1977.

In North Carolina, however, per capita sale was 217 packs; in New York, it was 126 packs, and in Pennsylvania, 120 packs.

The state estimate says that of $19.5 million collected in cigarette taxes here last year, $8 million was from packs smoked elsewhere.

But North Carolina cigarette revenues have declined 10 percent in the past two years while smoking nationally has been on the rise, and some officials have credited crackdowns on the trade in other states.

The state this year began a new campaign to cooperate with other states, mainly out of concern that failure to might damage support in Congress for the federal tobacco loan-price system.

 The FBI has investigated and organized crime, and agents from northern states routinely watch large cigarette transactions and follow them home.

But barring a change in laws or a federal crackdown, as long as the large discrepancy in state cigarette taxes exists there is likely to be a black market for cigarettes. And there is little political sentiment here for raising North Carolina's tax.

HEADED HOME - Commuters board one of the state-run express commuter buses to Hartford's suburbs. The federal government has ruled the service must be revamped to give more service to inner-city residents who want to commute to suburban jobs. It is the first such federal ruling and may affect other commuter bus programs. (AP Laserphoto)

Federal Officials Tell Hartford To Improve City Bus System

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - The Greater Hartford express bus system was born amid desires to cut pollution and traffic congestion by enticing suburbanites to abandon their cars for air-conditioned comfort.

But the system also discriminates against inner-city blacks and Hispanics by cutting them off from suburban jobs, the federal government says.

The U.S. Department of Transportation, which has provided Connecticut with $17 million in the past two years for the Hartford area bus service, has given the state until Sept. 15 to improve its commuter service for city residents.

The federal report, noting 76 percent of the blacks and Hispanics in the region live in the city itself, said there are a total of 94 inbound express trips in the morning and only 23 outbound. In the evening, it said, there are 101 outbound trips and 33 back into the city.

While not intending to discriminate against minorities, the system has that effect, the decision said. That alone is grounds for corrective action under the 1964 Civil Rights Act, it said.

State Transportation Commissioner James Shugrue said the delivery of 59 new buses this fall would help the state meet the deadline. He said that at that time was discrimination ever a factor in devising the system.

"From our data, you are aware that the commuter express program was developed primarily to keep private automobiles out of the city," he said in a letter to the Department of Transportation.

Ellen Feingold, director of the Department of Transportation's civil rights office, said the decision "is saying to other areas that if you are using a large amount of federal money to provide express service, you should examine the kind of service you're providing for minority residents in the city."

"From our data, you are aware that the commuter express program was developed primarily to keep private automobiles out of the city," he said in a letter to the Department of Transportation.

Migrant Workers Change Careers To Coal Mining

WASHINGTON (AP) - Migrant workers will abandon the farm fields of California for the coalfields of Appalachia under a novel job training program sponsored by the federal government.

Under the program, 350 to 400 migrant and seasonal farm workers chosen from around the country will go to coal-mining school in Illinois starting Sept. 1 and, with luck, will get full-time jobs as miners.

The idea behind the project is to open up jobs for farm workers seeking to escape their restricted agrarian lifestyles, low pay and lack of advancement opportunities.

According to the Labor Department, a typical migrant worker earns the minimum wage of $2.65 an hour, or about $5,300 in a full year of 40-hour weeks.

An apprentice coal miner under the government's program, by contrast, would be guaranteed a starting salary topping $15,000 a year.

The program, a joint venture of the Labor and Energy departments, is being financed under a two-year, $3 million training contract awarded to the Illinois Basin Coal-Mining Manpower Council.

Workers selected for the program — 40 percent of them women — will receive nine months of training at Wabash Valley Junior College in Mount Carmel, Ill.

Their education will range from the technical aspects of surface and shaft mining to a cultural orientation in the close-knit mining communities to a short history of the United Mine Workers union.

One of the program's local sponsors, the Amax Coal Co., has several mines in the area and presumably would hire some trainees after they graduate next year.

"We think it will be quite exciting," said Margaret Crosby, an official with the Labor Department's farm workers programs office.

She said a pilot training program recently completed in Tennessee was successful in opening up high-paying, skilled jobs to migrant workers. That program, conducted by a Union Carbide Corp. division in Oak Ridge, Tenn., trained 25 farm workers for a variety of skilled occupations.

Since that training course ended in June, 13 graduates have been placed in machining, welding and other industrial jobs at salaries averaging $6.46 an hour and ranging up to $10.15 an hour.

In one case, a 24-year-old mother of two left the potato fields of Oregon to take a job as a machinist in Nashville, Tenn.

Conservatives Can Receive Mailing List

WASHINGTON (UPI) - "Approved conservative candidates" now can rent the names of contributors who in the past have given $1,000 or more to causes on the right.

Richard Vigueire, the fund-raising whiz whose computerized mailing list brought in $3 million for the George Wallace presidential campaign, is making himself available to the public — with some rather strong restrictions.

Vigueire now handles scores of conservative candidates and such groups as the National Right to Work Committee and the gun lobby.

He took out a full page advertisement in the current "Conservative Digest" — a magazine he publishes monthly.

"You want to win the 1978 election, the ad begins. "here — for the first time — is a powerful mailing list to help you do it."

Vigueire claims his list averages about 10,000 "conservative names" per congressional district. They can be bought by selected candidates for $60 per thousand names "paid in advance."

"It is the most comprehensive compilation of names and addresses of U.S. Conservative activities — from $1,000-plus campaign contributors to other citizens who have supported conservative candidates or causes," the ad claims.

But there are restrictions: "Approved conservative candidates who wish to use the Vigueire list must sign a legally binding list-rental agreement that specifies all conditions on the use of Vigueire names ..."

"The Vigueire company must approve the entire text of the proposed mailing in advance."

"They are rented for onetime use and cannot be copied or given to anyone else."

Vigueire explains the restrictions "are meant to protect the integrity and effectiveness of the country's best conservative mailing list."

Vigueire, who is believed to have become a millionaire from his mailing lists, said in the ad that he is making the list available to approved conservatives because "we cannot handle more candidate clients than we already have."

Smithsonian To Get Rare 1913 Nickel

BRATENAHL, Ohio (AP) - The Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., is getting a 1913 Liberty head nickel, one of five known to exist.

The wife of R. Henry Norweb made the gift in recognition of her husband's 32 years in the diplomatic service.

Mrs. Norweb said she recently turned down $300,000 for the coin, which was illegally struck at the Philadelphia mint. The minting of nickels was temporarily suspended in 1913, pending the U.S. Treasury Department's approval of the design for the Buffalo Indian head nickel.

Mrs. Norweb obtained her coin in 1954 at an auction held by the Egyptian government to dispose of the deposed King Farouk's coins and stamps.

Martin Milner Returns To Court In Tennis Movie

By JAY SHARBUTT
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — On Sept. 5, Martin Milner appears in NBC's "Little Mo," essaying the first tennis teacher of the late champ Maureen Connolly. But he says tennis is not his racket.
 He played it in high school and for a year at USC. Then he quit. Still he doesn't speak of the game with malice anymore.
 "I don't hate it. It just doesn't do much for me anymore," says the actor. He conceded he may be the only one not now flailing away in those celebrity smash-and-lob festivals running rampant here:
 "I seem to have the unhappy facility of liking things when they're out of fashion and not liking them when they're in."
 Milner, 50, a tall, easy-going man who was born in Detroit, lived in Seattle and went to high school and college here, is a veteran of some 60 movies, starting in 1947 with "Life With Father."

But he's best-known as one of TV's steadiest visitors. "Little Mo" being his most recent visit. He began it all in the 1950s as a regular in the "Life of Riley" and "Stu Erwin" series.
 He also has starred in series on all three networks — four years in CBS' "Route 66," another seven in NBC's "Adam-12" (still popular in syndication) and very briefly a few years ago in ABC's ill-fated "Swiss Family Robinson."
 But he doesn't pine for the weekly route now unless he can spend most of each week with his attractive wife, Judy, an actress, and their three kids at home in Del Mar near San Diego.
 "The only way I'd do another series would be if I only had to work a couple of days each week," he said. "Jack Webb offered me a role like that last year, but I had another commitment."
 "It would be fun. But I don't want to work very hard anymore."

He spoke with the certainty of one who still gets residual checks from "Adam-12," still in reruns across America. It's given him enough fiscal security to not sweat out casting calls anymore.
 Right now, he says, the plan is to do two or three TV movies a year and appear in dinner-theater plays with his wife.
 They teamed up on stage for the first time last spring in "The Tender Trap" in Raleigh, N.C., he said, and plan to do it again this November in Jacksonville, Fla.
 Meanwhile, they're keeping a parental eye on their daughter, Amy, 19, who's becoming a second-generation Milner in entertainment as a singer in a rock band just starting in the San Diego area.
 "When she insisted on it, I just resigned myself to the inevitable, and now I'm very proud of her," said Milner, who always tried to discourage his kids from entering the show-biz game.

 "I think it's a very precarious business," he explained. "I don't think the number of people who succeed — compared to the number of people who try — make it a good gamble."
 But you gambled and succeeded, no?
 "Well, I was a kid," he said. A grin rept across his face. "By the time I was at an age where I'd be making serious career decisions, I was working all the time. And making a good living."

There are television shows that could make the Emmy performance a real contest. Four PBS productions each earned three Emmy nominations. There was the superb "I, Claudius" from Masterpiece Theatre; the delightful "Verna: U.S.O. Girl"; Steve Allen's "Meeting of Minds," and "Acter," a play in the Hollywood Television Theatre Series. Don't you think "I, Claudius" has a chance of winning? Maybe if the Television Academy voters could be persuaded to view "I, Claudius" as an Italian "Roots"....

Writer Says Competition Weak For Television's Top Awards

By JOAN HANAUER
 NEW YORK (UPI) — There almost weren't any Emmy Awards last year because of an internal squabble at the Television Academy, and maybe there shouldn't be any this year — but for other reasons.
 Just possibly, there aren't enough contenders to make the whole production worth the viewer's time.
 NBC's "Holocaust" dominated this year's nominations — to no one's surprise — by garnering 16 nominations, almost twice as many as any other show.
 For the rest, the Emmy Awards show may wind up looking like a rerun.

It was expected that the nine-hour drama about the fate of a Jewish family at the hands of the Nazis in World War II would be the big winner, just as "Roots" was the previous year.
 "Holocaust" wasn't called the Jewish "Roots" for nothing. The ethnic similarities were vague, but the ratings success of both limited series was solid.
 Much drier is a look at the other network shows that were high in nominations — CBS' "All In The Family" and NBC's "King" with nine, eight for NBC's "Saturday Night Live," CBS' Carol Burnett Show (deceased) and "M-A-S-H," and ABC's "Ben Vereen — His Roots." "M-A-S-H" may be one of the best shows on television, and "All In The Family" and Carol Burnett have certainly proven their popularity over the years. That's the point — isn't there anything new to nominate? The awards show will be like a repeat, particularly given the devolutive nature of the Vereen entry.
 That leaves only "King," a box office disaster, and "Saturday Night Live," almost alone of its type, as the only fresh fare among the frontrunners in the Emmy sweeps.

 For the record, network shows receiving seven Emmy nominations included ABC's "Family," no newcomer to the small screen; NBC's "Our Town," a remake; ABC's "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," which held a post-Watergate fascination, and NBC's "Ziegfeld, The Man and His Women," which hardly ranks as first rate material.

Wolf Receives Strong Support

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Three Little Pigs and Little Red Riding Hood take note: the "Big Bad Wolf" is a very popular huffer and puffer.
 More than 70,000 signatures have been gathered since mid-July in a campaign to make the wolf the national mammal.
 "It's hard to believe," said Doris Dixon, who started the campaign to honor the miscast villain of folklore. "We're averaging about 1,500 signatures a day. 'Evar since we went national in mid-July, we've been flooded with mail."
 The drive, sponsored by the Fund for Animals, is intended to call attention to the annihilation of the wolf, especially the timber wolf, which is threatened with extinction in the United States.

 "As our national mammal, the wolf would serve as a reminder of what we have lost in our environment and what we must preserve in the future," Mrs. Dixon said.
 The campaign also focuses on exonerating the highly persecuted wolf from its tarnished record.
 "They are really very decent animals," said Mrs. Dixon. "They aren't particularly sly, nor do they like eating grandmothers or little children. And most certainly they can't blow down houses."

Liquor Laws Prompt Bootlegging

By OLE WALBERG
OSLO, Norway (UPI) — There was more than meets the eye in the recent arrest of a bootlegging ring headed by a man called "The Gambler". Underneath was Norwegians' frustration with tough temperance laws which make alcohol very scarce in parts of Norway and expensive everywhere.

"The Gambler" and five accomplices are thought to have smuggled more than 45,000 bottles of whisky and other liquor into Norway — but not by small boat, the usual run-runner route. Instead they set up their own company in Hamburg, West Germany, and shipped legally purchased booze into Norway in customs-sealed trucks.

On the open market the gang received an estimated $830,000 for the liquor — three times as much the purchase price.

Norway's many smuggling cases in recent years are directly related to high prices in the state-run wine and liquor monopoly stores, where customers pay $20 for a bottle of whisky and up to $40 for cognac.

Such prices are part of deliberately tough regulations on the sale and distribution of liquor pressured into law by the strong temperance movement from its strongholds along the southern and western coasts.

In certain areas of the so-called missionary coast, the majority Christian People's party in municipal councils had not only outlawed the sale of all kinds of alcohol, but vetoed the sale of soft drinks at Saturday public functions. They fear the pop would be mixed with booze brought by guests.

In other southern areas, local authorities have organized beer sales through special monopoly stores. Or they have ruled that customers cannot buy a single bottle, only a whole case.

Restaurant and bar owners have shown great inventiveness in getting around the restrictions.

Liquor sales have long been banned on Sundays, but until about 18 months ago Irish coffee was sold as a "dessert." When every other snack bar in Oslo started promoting its Sunday "dessert", authorities ruled Irish coffee was an alcoholic beverage and banned Sunday sales.

Authorities also ruled that pubs could not sell strong wines. The owner of "Andy's Pub" in Oslo promptly changed the name to "Andy's Bar" — and now has no problem.

Whisky advertising is banned, resulting in the appearance of many strange ads in newspapers and magazines. One of the most popular shows two Scottish terriers — one white and the other black — without mentioning the word whisky or any brand name.

The results of the restrictions have not always been encouraging for the temperance movement. Like other Scandinavians, Norwegians have the reputation of two-fisted drinkers.

While the sale of wine and liquor is channeled through state-run monopoly stores, there are only five such stores on the 300-mile coast from Bergen to the southern tip of Norway — in the main towns.

The rugged coast has tempted scores of yacht owners or fishing skippers to do their booze-shopping abroad. But an increasing number are being caught as police and customs are tipped off, especially by authorities on the West German island of Helgoland, where most of the liquor has been bought.

While coastal dwellers are busy trying to outsmart customs, the inland population sticks to moonshining. In the counties of Hedmark and Troendelag every other household is believed to make its own illegal booze, though no statistics are available.

A spokesman for the state Institute of Statistics said moonshine accounts for about 20 percent of the total consumption of alcohol, adding that the figure may be much higher.

Yeast and sugar are the main ingredients in the production and a local newspaper figured out that, if the population in the town of Elverum is using all that yeast and sugar they buy for baking, then they are eating five times as much baked goods as the average Norwegian.

Production of the 180-proof moonshine is strictly forbidden by law, but as long as homemade booze is produced for private use only, no policeman would dare to harm his reputation by hunting the so-called "home-burners."

Still he is forced to act if tipped by an angry neighbor, and once in a while local newspapers disclose that a moonshiner has been fined and his distillery equipment confiscated.

Until recently, the necessary equipment could be bought in regular stores and was advertised in most newspapers. But the authorities finally stopped sales when they realized that they were used for moonshine production only.

Critic Applauds Shakespearean Performances

By WILLIAM GLOVER
NEW YORK (AP) — Something wonderful is happening these nights up in Central Park to "The Taming of the Shrew."

Quite simply, what has come to pass is that without detracting one bit from all the usual boisterous uproar, macho Petruchio and spitfire Kate turn out to be a couple locked from the first in romantic, deeply sensual love. Stormy confrontations subtly become ardent, inverted wooing.

The interpretation doesn't rank as sudden revelation — there have been previous champions of such a notion — but the miracle of the New York Shakespeare Festival production is the splendid way in which the idea has been achieved.

Meryl Streep and Raul Julia, two of the most admired members of the younger acting generation, are bewitchingly believable as the fiery, irresistibly attracted combatants.

Wilford Leach, who came a cropper with the park's preceding exhibit, "All's Well That Ends Well," has directed with hilarious impact all the ragtag elements of plot and subplots, and only occasionally indulged in cutesy excess.

Leach has kept most of the setting he designed for "All's Well" in place and erected an interior, commedia dell'arte stage that intensifies the impromptu thrust of the current presentation.

Among the other performers, John Bottoms, Larry Pine and James Lally are grotesquely merry as suitors for Kate's sister Bianca, all ingenue gush in the person of Deborah Rush.

The rest of the company chimes in with suitable verve, clad in Patricia McGourty's droll Renaissance costumes and with faces painted in a rainbow of hues, some incidental music by Richard Weinstock comically complements the romp.

The production, to which admission is free, is scheduled to run only until Sept. 3. A month later, Julia replaces Frank Langella in the Broadway hit "Dracula." Before all that happens, this dazzling "Shrew" deserves to be put on tape for television.

Spanish War Vets Hold Reunion

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — Seven veterans of the Lincoln Brigade from California joined Spanish Civil War veterans from the Republican side in a reunion at the nearby town of Villalba de los Arcos to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the Battle of the Ebro River.

The Lincoln Brigade was the American contingent in the international brigade that fought for the republic against Franco's rebels in the 1936-39 civil war.

The Republican Air Force Association presented an award to Milton Wolff of El Cerrito, Calif., the last commander of the Lincoln Brigade, and a commemorative stone monolith also was unveiled.

The other Lincoln Brigade veterans attending were Frank Brown, Berkeley; Archie Brown, San Francisco; Clifton Amshury, Richmond, and Sid Harris, Giacomino Apice and Al Tanz, all of Los Angeles.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

"Dear Mr. Gardner," writes Thomas C. Martin, special FBI agent in Seattle, Wash., in answer to our letter requesting some inside information on the city's decoy squad. "To clarify the enigma of an FBI agent writing an article about a police unit (for the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin which prompted your request) I must explain that I have no official connection with the Seattle police. I was merely the reporter and photographer for the article, in my function as an associate editor of the magazine, one of the many hats given agents in addition to their regular duties.

"Thanks to the cooperation of the commander of the 'decoy squad,' Lt. Larry Holder, I was permitted to interview several other fine officers on his team and am enclosing my rough notes that paint a colorful picture of some of their brief encounters in the streets of the city.

"For example, officer Leon O. 'Lee' Libby told me of his first night on the squad. 'I was disguised as an old man with a cane,' he related, 'and dollars sticking out of my pocket, inside a window envelope. Also a half pint of vodka which I had drawn from the police liquor locker. And was carrying a portable record player when a suspect began eyeing me. I went into an alley and 'collapsed' into a position where I was leaning against a building: arms folded, but one hand on my gun.

"The suspect bumped me a few times. Then took the money from my pocket and threw the envelope down. I hadn't seen my two back-ups, so, afraid the sneak thief picking on old men might get away, I leapt up, crept up behind him and hooked him around the neck with my cane. The forward motion of the suspect quickened at the same instant he saw the two back-up men, straightened out in mid-air, feet first, and ended flat on his back, having just been given 'the hook!'"

"On another night a woman, somewhat resembling the pictures of Tugboat Annie, walked by. Lee continued, 'she stopped, did a double-take and scolded me. "You ain't no bum," she exclaimed, "you got white socks on!" The following day I bought a brand new wardrobe from Goodwill for $7. Authenticity is everything!"

"Sgt. Jim Won," our FBI correspondent writes, "told about a 'regular' on the street who was incensed that a dirty old bum like me would be around that pretty rough neighborhood which already had its share of derelict bums. As Officer Won describes the scene, the bum came rushing at him waving his fists in a menacing manner and shouting, "Get off the street, you!" "Not wanting to blow my cover I depended on the personality I had adopted. Bulging my eyes out and craning my neck, I screamed incoherent ravings and banged the stick end of an old torn Placard. The man stopped in his tracks and backed off. I never saw him again."

"Lt. Holder, the unit commander," Martin continued, "frequently does his own decoy duty. 'Sometimes,' Holder said, 'we were too good. We had gone down to an area in a predominantly black neighborhood where we had had numerous reports of muggings of the aged and/or helpless. Our "little old man with a cane" (that was me!) started walking in the general direction of a bus-stop. A pair of husky black men emerged from the shadows: while my two back-up patrolmen tensed in readiness. Coming up on both sides of me, they caught hold of my arms. Then one of them said, "Listen old man, this is a rugged area. You could get mugged here." Then they led me to the bus-stop, waited until a bus arrived and put me safely on it."

squad. Not to make the situation too obvious, Officer Lee Libby curled up in a doorway like a "sleeping drunk." The cameras, meanwhile, were set up on the second floor of a garage opposite a park where bums meet before going to "work." The cameras caught two men who walked by, then retraced their footsteps — one saying, "That old guy's got money!" "The other reached down and rifled my pocket," said Libby, "taking two dollar bills. Apparently disappointed at the small amount of money, they returned and went through the other pockets. I pretended to sleepily 'come to' and pushed them away, still in my 'stupor.' This angered the second man as he heaved to take a swing at me with his fist. Gauging his swing, I countered from my semi-crouch and handed him a haymaker, hitting him squarely between the eyes, knocking him clear out into the middle of downtown Seattle. The two backup officers immediately converged on a very bewildered drunk-roller and handcuffed him. He had never seen a 'drunk' sober up so fast before. And all this was neatly covered by the 'cameras."

Environmentalists Shake Up Politics In Germany

By ROBERT H. REID
BONN, West Germany (AP) — Environmentalists, claiming that politicians are more concerned about economic growth than clean air and water, have shaken up the political scene in prosperous West Germany.

Their popularity seems to reflect a growing concern among West Germans about their heavily industrialized country, where 62 million people live in an area the size of Oregon.

Groups known collectively as "Green Lists" won enough votes in recent elections in Hamburg and Lower Saxony to

Labor Eyes New Ideas For Bill

By OWEN ULLMANN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Like a boxer still dazed from his last fight, organized labor is stumbling around in search of a way to avenge the dramatic defeat of its labor law reform bill.

So far, union leaders seem to be punching at the air.

"There's the feeling we have to do something," an AFL-CIO strategist conceded recently. "But no one knows what. We're groping for new ideas."

Labor, which had made passage of the administration-backed bill its top legislative priority of the year, was dealt a stunning blow in June when a Senate filibuster by opponents sent the measure back to a committee, where it likely will die.

For some union officials, the loss was significant enough to prompt a re-examination of the labor movement's objectives and political strategies.

The AFL-CIO conducted a postmortem at its executive council meeting in Chicago last week. But out of the discussions came no redirections or new tactics. So, labor's veteran leaders fell back on their tried-and-true formula: help elect your friends and defeat your enemies in the congressional elections and then try to pass the bill in the next Congress.

The problem with retracing such a route is that it does not recognize signs that organized labor's clout on Capitol Hill may be weakening, as the labor law defeat suggests.

And, it does not confront labor's long-standing tactical flaw of backing congressional candidates who, despite a record of anti-union votes, pick up labor endorsements because their opponents are even more anti-union.

The AFL-CIO, a master of lobbying techniques, won House passage of the labor bill last fall. At the time, labor had contended that it was seeking only modest changes to stop employers from using loopholes in the law to violate rights of workers engaged in union organizing.

The symbolic importance of the bill grew, though, as a coalition of business interests jumped in to do battle.

Labor still had the edge. Backed by a Democratic president it helped elect, the federation mounted one of its most intensive arm-twisting campaigns on behalf of the bill in a Senate controlled by its friends.

In the end, the labor and administration forces found themselves out-lobbied by business, which mobilized a potent counter-offensive against a bill it claimed would put small employers at the mercy of big union organizing drives.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, who fought at labor's side, said he had never seen so extensive a lobbying effort as that by business, and blamed Congress for being "too responsive to single-issue lobbyists."

AFL-CIO President George Meany grumbled that it was a "resurgence of right wing feelings throughout the country" that had grabbed the Senate's ear.

As Meany saw it, that same right wing fervor is behind the "taxpayers revolt" and the opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment.

"I'm sure that this battle will go on and we will be in there fighting as we have been in the past," Meany told reporters after huddling with his executive council last week.

"Mr. Meany, do you have any new ways, any new plans to join the battle?" asked one reporter.

"Well, actually there is no new plan," the aging labor boss responded.

Instead, there is the old plan. "We have had setbacks in legislation for many, many years, but we keep right on, and when you look back over the years, the progress has always been in our direction," Meany said.

That kind of talk came as a disappointment to some of the AFL-CIO's younger lieutenants, who had hoped Meany and his council would be working on a new knock-out punch.

Lebanese Refuse Peace Ship's Gifts

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Israeli peace crusader Abie Nathan's pirate radio ship docked at Larnaca Monday after failing to deliver a cargo of gifts to war victims in Lebanon.

Nathan sailed for Cyprus after being rebuffed by the Lebanese government in his quest to distribute the ship's $30,000 worth of medical supplies, toys and an ambulance.

Thais Impose Stiff Drug Sentences

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan has ordered life prison sentences for a policeman and three other men convicted of trafficking in heroin.

Radio Thailand said the four were arrested in April in the parking lot of a Bangkok hotel after they tried to sell 15½ pounds of heroin to agents of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency.

oust Free Democrats from state assemblies. The Free Democrats are the junior members of the national coalition government of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a Social Democrat.

A Green List success in the Oct. 8 elections in the state of Hesse could force the resignation of the Free Democratic Party chairman, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the country's vice chancellor and foreign minister.

Although some of the Green List organizations also include women's rights, gay liberation and other causes on their platforms, protection of the environment is their main voter attraction.

Their supporters include veterans of demonstrations organized by a citizens group against nuclear power stations after the three major parties — Social Democrats, Christian Democrats and Free Democrats — endorsed their construction.

"Our policies have to take into account our children and grandchildren and future generations," said Herbert Gruhl, a former Christian Democrat member of parliament and founder of the Green Action Future Party, the best organized of the Green List groups.

"Conservation of the ecological bases of all life — air, water, earth, the plant and animal world — are preconditions for survival."

A poll by the Allensbach Institute and the Science Center of Berlin indicated last June that protection of the environment was a major issue among liberal

Union wages
WASHINGTON (AP) — Union wage rates for building trades workers in cities with populations exceeding 100,000 increased an average of 4.3 percent in the second quarter of 1978, the Labor Department says. The average hourly wage for the group was $10.63 as of July 3.

Electricians led the way with $11.73 an hour, followed by plumbers at $11.54, bricklayers $10.97, carpenters $10.87, plasterers $10.61, painters $10.47 and laborers $8.39.

Germans under age 30, ranking behind the economy and national security.

According to the pollsters, 20 percent of the 2,038 voters surveyed said they were considering supporting the environmentalists at the polls and 6 percent already had decided to do so.

The survey report said Green List supporters "have little confidence in the mechanisms of party democracy" but look to "solutions from extra-party groups instead."

"We see no alternative but to put up a joint front against the established parties," Holger Strom, leader of a Hamburg coalition of environmentalists and others called the Bunte Liste, meaning motley list, said in a newspaper interview.

"Our party includes women's groups, conscientious objector associations, environmentalists and Communists."

The environmentalists made their debut last March during local balloting in the country's northernmost state, Schleswig-Holstein.

Capitalizing on opposition to a local nuclear power plant, they polled more than 5 percent of the vote in two districts, enough to win representation.

Three months later, Green List candidates won 3.9 percent of the vote in Lower Saxony, site of several controversial nuclear power plants, and about 1 percent in Hamburg.

That was enough to drop the Free Democrats, who had been represented in the governing coalitions of both states, below the 5 percent mark necessary to remain in the legislatures.

Genscher told an interviewer after the returns were announced that the impact of the environmentalists on his party's losses "cannot be underestimated."

Gruhl, author of a best-selling book called "A Planet Plundered," said in a television interview that he formed the Green Action Future Party because major political organizations "acted as if many problems did not exist."

His party supports a nuclear-free zone in Europe, opposes atomic power plants and "the life annihilating neutron bomb" and has called for an end to the "striving for growth" of free market economies.

Politicians from both major parties have portrayed the Green Lists as a single-issue movement that offers no comprehensive program for the country and can only play a spoiler's role.

Despite their new-found popularity, the Green List groups face organization problems which may cost them support in Hesse.

Efforts by several Green List groups to join forces have failed because of differences between leftists and rightists over specific platform planks.

One group, the Green List Hesse, nominated Daniel Cohn-Bendit, the notorious "Red Danny" leader of the 1968 Paris student uprising, for a seat in the state assembly.

More conservative environmental groups have demanded that Cohn-Bendit, who has lived in Frankfurt since his expulsion from France, be removed from the list of candidates in return for their support.

LCC Baseballers Recall Trip To Korea, Taiwan

By DON HENRY

Executive Sports Editor
Lubbock Christian College coach Larry Hays remembers those pitchers, but Tim Leslie remembers all those hot Cokes.

Although both coach and player made the same NAIA-sponsored tour of Korea and Taiwan, their memories differ.

Both returned over the weekend from the trip, after a brief stopover in Hawaii.

Leslie started every game on the tour, playing first base or being the designated hitter. Hays, the LCC coach, was one of the coaches on the tour. Another Chaparral, Steve Brigante, made the team, started every game at second base and was named the outstanding defensive performer on the Korean part of the trip.

Leslie recalled the first game, since the team learned when it arrived at the ball park that it was not allowed any water to drink. "We went through eight cases of Cokes the first six innings. Then, we didn't have anything else to drink the rest of the ball game," he remarked.

That left him with not much interest in soft drinks when he returned to the United States. However, one of the first stops for the players, once they reached Hawaii on the way home, was a fast-food stand, for hamburgers and milkshakes.

But, for Hays, the memories were of the players. And he even thought some of recruiting.

"Their (the Korean) pitchers really impressed me," the LCC coach reported. "In fact, I checked into it (recruiting) on a couple of their pitchers, but because of their educational situation, it would be difficult to get them over here."

"Besides, one of the pitchers was going to Japan to play in their pro league as soon as we finished the series with them."

Korean baseball is a game of pitching and hit-and-run, said Hays. "They send a lot of runners. They depended on that—that and the pitching—while we seemed to have more speed and more power."

"But, the Korean team was definitely well coached and well prepared. That was their national team and the best of their college all-stars together."

The NAIA team played seven games in Korea and six exhibition games in Taiwan. Against the Koreans, the U.S. won two, lost four and tied one.

"Over there, you play nine innings, if it's tied, you bow and walk off," chuckled Hays. "There aren't any extra-inning games."

"But, that was really big (the series) for them. The first day, the game drew 17,000, and every other one went about 20,000 people. Six of them were on national TV. To the Koreans, it was their opportunity to display their baseball."

Hays spoke of the educational advantage of the trip, with tours sponsored by the Koreans, "to the DMZ, to meet the mayor and different dignitaries. The Koreans definitely treated us like guests, put us up in the best accommodations."

After the Korean games, which were played in the form of a tournament, with trophies for the winners, MVPs, and the national fanfare, the games in Taiwan were more exhibitions. The NAIA teams went 2-2-2 in that series.

Average attendance at Taiwan was about 7,500.

The tour was the second sponsored by the NAIA, with the Korean team to come to the U.S. on alternate years. Hays said that LCC has a chance to host some of the games next summer, "if we want to take advantage of it. But, that'll be decided later."

Tingelhoff's String To Snap

By The Associated Press
Mick Tingelhoff didn't lose his job Tuesday like a lot of other National Football League players, but he did learn that something he has built for 17 years will come crumbling down Friday.

After 17 years in the NFL, Tingelhoff will miss a game.

The 38-year-old center was hospitalized Monday with an infection in his leg. He was kicked two weeks ago in the Vikings' preseason opener against Washington.

Tingelhoff reportedly is responding to antibiotics, but is definitely out of the Dolphin contest Friday, which will snap a string of 328 consecutive preseason, regular season and post-season games in which he has played.

But Tingelhoff will return, which can't be said of a number of other NFL aspirants and veterans who were cut Tuesday as teams reached the mandatory 60-player limit.

Veterans Lydell Mitchell of the Baltimore Colts and Mike Kadish of the Buffalo Bills were among the familiar names who were at least temporarily dropped.

Mitchell and Kadish, both involved in contract disputes, were placed on their clubs' reserve lists, an administrative category for players who have not reported to their training camps. Should either player settle his problem and show up, the clubs would have to drop another player.

Two other veterans were among the Colts and Bills cuts. Baltimore released six players, including kick return specialist Howard Satterwhite, while veteran defensive tackle Marvin Upshaw was among the eight players dropped by Buffalo.

The Bills also were active in the trade market, swapping veteran tight end Paul Seymour to Pittsburgh and sending running back Stan Winfrey to Detroit. In exchange, the Bills obtained wide receiver Frank Lewis from the Steelers and an undisclosed draft choice from the Lions.

Seymour was Buffalo's No. 1 draft choice in 1973. His best receiving season was 1976 when he caught 16 passes for 169 yards. Last year, he was used mostly in running situations and caught just two passes.

Lewis, a seven-year veteran, has caught 128 passes for 2,086 yards and 16 touchdowns in his NFL career.

In another cut day trade, New Orleans swapped veteran defensive back Chuck Crist to San Francisco for linebacker Skip Vanderbundt. Crist was one of the Saints' leading defensive players last season with 102 tackles, while Vanderbundt has started every game for the past three seasons with the 49ers.

New Orleans also waived six players including veteran wide receiver Don Herrmann.

In one of a plethora of releases, the Philadelphia Eagles released 15 players, including Larry Marshall, the leading punt returner in the National Football Conference last season, and veteran punter Spike Jones.

The Los Angeles Rams, fresh from the short reign of George Allen, announced the retirement of former Pro Bowl cornerback Robert James, while placing quarterback Carlos Brown on waivers and trading backup center Rick Nuzum to Green Bay for an undisclosed future draft choice. The Rams also placed quarterback Mark Manges, their fourth-round draft choice from Maryland, and offensive tackle Charles Peal of Indiana, a 10th-round draft pick, on waivers.

Allen's old organization, the Washington Redskins, signed veteran quarterback

Zisk's Homer Lifts Texas To 1-0 Win

ARLINGTON (AP) — A single mistake against a player he has handcuffed in the past, caused Steve Stone to lose one of the best games he's ever pitched, he says.

The Chicago White Sox right-hander hung a curve ball against Richie Zisk in the seventh inning of Tuesday night's game with Texas, and Zisk "jumped on it" for a home run and a 1-0 Ranger victory, despite Stone's two-hitter.

"That's the first hit I ever remember Richie getting off me. I faced him for years in the National League with very good success, but he's a good hitter, and if you make a mistake against him, he's going to hurt you," Stone said.

Jon Matlack, 11-9, took the victory as Texas won its sixth straight game and 10th in the past 11, staying 5 games off Kansas City's division-leading pace. The loss was Chicago's 10th in 13 games.

Matlack struck out seven, walked only one, scattered seven hits and pitched out of jams in the third, fifth and seventh innings, when Chicago got runners to third but couldn't score.

"I threw a very good game, an exceptional game, but Matlack just threw a better one," Stone said. Stone, 9-9, struck out four and walked seven, which let Texas threaten several times. But the walks never hurt him.

Zisk struck out in the second with Bobby Bonds at second and hit a fly to center in the fourth after Jim Sundberg had doubled and moved to third on a wild pitch. Stone quickly ran the count to 0-and-2 on Zisk his next time up in the seventh before hanging a curve over the heart of the plate.

"He always seems to make good pitches against me, but he made a mistake and

By WILL GRIMSLEY
NEW YORK (AP) — The tube, the tube — the inevitable tube: George Steinbrenner, the New York Yankees' unpredictable boss, wrestled with his conscience for nine months before finally saying "yes" to the now celebrated beer commercial with his fiery on-again, off-again manager, Billy Martin.

The commercial, briefly destined for the cutting room floor, was saved when Martin, who resigned his job under duress on July 24, was dramatically rehired four days later, effective 1980, at the Yankees' Old Timers Game.

Now you can catch the 30 seconds of titillating, if ironic, dialogue on any of the networks — and join us all in wondering what went on behind the scenes.

"They approached me nine months ago with the idea," Steinbrenner explained. "I was reluctant. I wasn't sure about the propriety of an owner doing something like that with his manager."

Then Cliff Robertson and Dina Merrill came to me with a story about the Mission Society in the Bronx. This is a project dedicated to motivating young people. It gets them involved. The mission was about to close for the summer for lack of funds.

"I asked myself, 'Why not do the commercial and give the money over to the mission?' I knew I would be criticized. But I didn't care. I felt the kids were more important than my reputation."

So the commercial was filmed. The scene was set with the two Yankee personalities sitting in a pub, and the conversation went something like this:

Steinbrenner: "A lot of people say we argue all the time. Actually, we agree on about everything. Right, Billy?"

Martin: "You betcha, George."

Steinbrenner: "We drink the same beer."

Martin: "Lite beer from Miller's?"

Steinbrenner: "Billy, it tastes great."

Martin: "No, George. The best thing is, it is less filling."

Steinbrenner: "No, Bill, it tastes great."

Martin: "Less filling, George."

Martin: "Yes, George."

Steinbrenner: "You're fired."

Martin: "Not again."

The bizarre aspect of this little tete-a-tete is that it was filmed July 14, 10 days before Martin called his boss a "convict" and quit before he could be fired. It was almost prophetic.

McCann-Erickson, the advertising agency out of whose head the whole thing came, said the film was still in the editing stage when Martin resigned. Miller Brewing Co. said it wasn't sure whether the commercial could have been salvaged, but Martin's sudden rehiring rendered the problem moot.

"I think the thing would have been shelved out of courtesy to both me and Billy," said Steinbrenner. "I think business people ought to do more for kids. I got $35,000 from Louisville Slugger for that smoke stack in the stadium. I put all the money back into fixing up the handball courts in the area. If the kids go bad, we're to blame."

Tony Trabert is a fine Dave Cup tennis captain but he must almost choke when he announces over TV that "Jimmy Connors is No. 1 in the world on the ATP computer."

Tony knows there's only one No. 1 — Bjorn Borg. What else does Bjorn need to do to prove it?

What really was in that little black bottle that Leon Spinks sipped from between rounds in his fight with Ali? Television reruns are making it look suspicious. But maybe it's just a hypo for the Sept. 15 return bout.

Speaking of hypos, Henry Longhurst, who died recently in England, was a master in golf commentary. Hysterical, hypo-ingrained American broadcasters could learn from his beautiful, restrained style. If they would only try.

Analysis

Analysis of the Steinbrenner-Martin commercial. The commercial was a mix of irony and sincerity. Steinbrenner's initial reluctance to fund the mission society project was a key element. The dialogue between the two men was a carefully constructed performance. The commercial's timing, just days before Steinbrenner fired Martin, added a layer of dramatic tension. The commercial's success in being salvaged and aired was a testament to the power of television. The commercial's message was a powerful statement about the relationship between a manager and an owner. The commercial's impact on the public was significant. The commercial's success was a major factor in Steinbrenner's decision to rehired Martin. The commercial's legacy is a lasting one. Four Southpaws Gain American Victories

By The Associated Press

Left-handers have a reputation for outlandishness rather than consistency. But four American League southpaw pitchers were incredibly steady Tuesday night.

The New York Yankees' Ron Guidry became the winningest pitcher in the majors with his 17th victory, a four-hit, 6-0 shutout of Oakland.

Not to be outdone, California's Frank Tanana posted his 16th triumph of the year, a six-hitter, as the Angels beat Boston 5-2.

Down in Texas, Jon Matlack threw a seven-hitter in outdueling the White Sox' Steve Stone, a right-hander who hurled a two-hitter, in the Rangers' 1-0 triumph.

And Jerry Augustine eased to a 9-1 victory over Toronto with a five-hitter.

Elsewhere in the AL, Minnesota nipped Cleveland 9-8, Kansas City beat Detroit 4-2 and Baltimore was a 7-4 winner over Seattle.

Yankees 6, A's 0

Guidry, 17-2, took the American League lead in strikeouts with 191 after fanning nine in recording his sixth shutout of the season, the best in the league. His phenomenal 1.79 earned run average leads the majors.

"It seems like I've pitched against the A's as much as anyone," said Guidry. "I guess I know their hitters pretty well."

He must. The second-year major leaguer is 3-0 against Oakland this season and has allowed one run in 26 1/3 innings vs. the A's. In his two seasons with the Yankees, Guidry had a 5-0 record against Oakland and has allowed four runs in 50 1/3 innings.

Whatever magic Guidry works on the A's, Tanana has been using against the Red Sox in Anaheim. Tanana had a string of 47 scoreless innings against Boston at home snapped in fifth inning but still managed a seven-strikeout, complete game performance.

"I like pitching against Eastern Division teams," said Tanana, who is 39-25 lifetime against the East. "There is a lot of excitement when you play them. The crowd didn't pump me up. Just having Boston coming in was enough.

"I don't know what the Red Sox' hitters thought, but I thought my stuff was as good as I've had in a long time."

"I've got 16 wins without great stuff," he concluded, and that has to scare the rest of the American League.

Joe Rudi's three-run homer and a two-run double by Don Baylor did the damage against Boston's Dennis Eckersley, 13-5.

Brewers 9, Blue Jays 1

Larry Hise's 37th homer of the season, a three-run shot, and a six-run fourth-inning powered Augustine and the Brewers to victory. It was the first win for Augustine, 11-11, since July 18.

"He's been pitching pretty good ball," Brewers manager George Bamberger said. "He just didn't have anything to show for it until tonight."

"I haven't been pitching as well as I should have, but all I can do is take it from here and try for a good finish," Augustine said.

"I've had as many downs this season as I could have," he added. "I'm sure at one point I was looked on as the worst pitcher on the staff, but no one has seen me giving up. I'm going to prove some day that I'm the pitcher a lot of people thought I could be."

"No one even looks at me," he added. "I'm 11-11 and it's like I'm not even here. If you read the papers, you wouldn't even know Jerry Augustine is on the staff."

Twins 9, Indians 8

Jose Morales' eighth-inning homer was the decisive blow for Minnesota. Ace reliever Mike Marshall, who injured himself diving to make a tag on a squeeze bunt and had to leave the game, was the winner.

Royals 4, Tigers 2

Kansas City remained in first place in the AL West thanks to Al Hrabosky's 15th save and Steve Braun's run-scoring single in the seventh. Darrell Porter homered for the Royals' final run.

Orioles 7, Mariners 6

Four hits and three runs scored by Rick Dempsey and a pair of RBI for Eddie Murray and Ken Singleton led the Orioles to victory.

Zisk's Homer Saves Texas

I was able to capitalize on it," Zisk said of his homer over the left field fence, his first homer in six weeks.

Matlack got stellar defensive play from Bump Wills at second base and Toby Harrah at shortstop. In the seventh, Ralph Garr came up with an infield hit and moved to second on Mike Spinks' sacrifice bunt. But Wills stopped pitcher Eric Soderholm's shot before it could get into the outfield, making Garr hold up at third.

With one out, Greg Pryor hit a hard grounder that came on a high pop to Harrah, who went to Wills for one out, and Wills wheeled and fired to the stretching Mike Hargrove at first to nip Pryor for the double play.

In the third, Pryor followed Kevin Bell's walk with a single, and a double steal put runners on second and third with only one out. But Matlack got both Tom Spencer and Thad Bosley on infield pop-ups.

In the fifth, catcher Mike Colborn hit a ground-rule double and went to third on a passed ball, but Matlack whiffed Spencer for the third out.

Hrabosky Creates 'Mean' Portrait

KANSAS CITY (AP) — On a raw, windy day in Cleveland last April, Ted Cox had the stark misfortune of being Al Hrabosky's first American League batter.

The missile he rifled toward Cox's head carried a message for Cox, the St. Louis Cardinals, the Kansas City Royals, the American League and anybody anywhere who thought Al Hrabosky was just a washed-up relief pitcher who spelled his name funny.

Cox dusted off the seat of his pants and meekly struck out.

But the next batter reached base. So did another. And Cleveland fans howled when the terrible bearded one, seemingly in an impotent rage, walked home a run and indignously walked to the dugout.

But such is the paradox of Al Hrabosky, who couldn't make his eighth grade team but became the best left-handed relief pitcher in baseball in 1975. He traces the turnaround in his career to the first day he ever asserted himself in a uniform. Yet his need for the appearance of ferocity drove him from the scene of his greatest triumphs.

Despite that setback in Cleveland and a bit of a current slump, Hrabosky has convinced the skeptics Cox was justified in striking out. Sporting an ERA well under 2.00, he also has five victories and 13 saves and has stirred more fan interest than any other member of the Kansas City Royals.

How he does it is a mystery. Are the beard, the Fu Manchu moustache and all the acts of intimidation mere theatrics? Or, as Hrabosky suggests, did a character he calls the "Mad Hungarian" take hold of him four years ago and create a menacing, effective pitcher out of a guy who just spelled his name funny?

Opposing hitters themselves aren't sure.

They loved him in St. Louis, which traded him to Kansas City this year after a bitter dispute with then-manager Vern Rapp over beards and mustaches. And they adore him in pennant-hungry Kansas City, long in need of a hard-throwing lefty reliever.

When he's pitching, he's all hate and fury, a portrait of what mean looks like.

A game crisis usually cues his entrance. After a few warmup tosses, he stalks behind the mound, bows his head low and rubs up the ball. He rubs and rubs, seemingly working himself into a furious lather. The fans shriek as he suddenly turns, slams the ball into his glove and charges toward the mound.

The batter by now is either intimidated, amused, angered or winking at the blonde in the third row.

Hrabosky's catcher, Darrell Porter, is checking his eyes.

"I can tell right away if he's got his good stuff or not, by whether or not he's got that fire in his eyes," Porter said. "Ninety-eight percent of the time it's there. But I guess the guy's only human. Every once in a while, when the fire isn't in his eyes — well, it's just not quite the same pitcher. His fastball just doesn't seem to move as much. His curve's not quite as sharp."

"It's just an act," said Reggie Jackson, who also struck out the first time he faced the Mad Hungarian. "But I like it."

"Sure it's an act," said another hitter. "Stomping around doesn't put that good movement on his fastball."

Lamar Johnson of the Chicago White Sox, after hitting a three-run home run to beat him, expressed nothing but admiration.

"I did something every American League hitter would like to do," he said, "get a hit off Hrabosky in the late innings."

Boston strong man Jim Rice, surly after going 0-for-2 against Hrabosky and stranding several baserunners, said simply, "Is it working for him? Then that's the reason he does it."

Hrabosky — whose family spelled it Hrabosky when they immigrated from Hungary in the 1930s — labored in the Cardinals minor league system four years before he came up for good in 1973. Early that spring a Cardinals official watched Hrabosky and complimented his progress.

"Then he said I would be ready for the big leagues when I learned to turn the ball over," Hrabosky recalls. "Always before, I had gone along with everything they said. But I was getting mad because I knew I was the best relief pitcher they had and I just let go with my feelings. That was the first time I had ever stood up to anybody in the organization."

"He was mad, but a few weeks later I was called up."

Shortly afterward, he says, the Mad Hungarian began emerging.

"One day I just walked behind the mound. It seemed like the thing to do. Then everything just sort of followed naturally."

Two years later he was the National League's Fireman of the Year with a gilded ERA of 1.67, a 13-3 record and 22 saves.

After the trouble with Rapp he skied last year to a 4.40 ERA and 6-5 record, claiming all the while that without the facial hair the Mad Hungarian could not exist.

That was one of the messages imparted by the first offering to Cox.

"I was really pumped up that day," he said.

Doc 5-4

By The As

You can always... and Philadelphia Ozark certainly left criticism.

With the score tied in the third, the Los Al runner on third with a switch-hitting Reg right-handed Dick lies.

"I thought they'd win," said Smith. "So did everyone else Tuesday night."

Normally, baseball is an intentional walk, fielding, allowed, right-handed Ron C. But that wasn't C. "We had some other pitcher Ozzie," only I pitches where he's Smith — he didn't. Smith, however, enough out of the fly and the winning 4 triumph. Earlier mer — another go to him in the cruci.

"He's meant a l Dodger manager T. "He's a superstar earned."

Dolphin Center To Miss Game

Billy Kilmer to a two-year contract, while the Denver Broncos signed punter Mike Burke to the New England Patriots for an undisclosed future draft choice.

The New York Giants waived 10 players and placed veteran offensive lineman Tom Mullen on the voluntarily retired list.

Mullen has been troubled by a series of shoulder and knee injuries in his four NFL seasons and played only eight games last year. Among those placed on waivers were running back Gordon Bell, a third-year player from Michigan State, and second-year tackle Bill Kahl-Winter from Princeton.

Green Bay placed quarterback Lynn Dickey on its reserve list. Dickey has been slow to recover from a broken leg suffered last season. The Packers also dropped veteran wide receiver Ollie Smith, who caught 22 passes for 357 yards last season, and asked waivers on veteran linebacker Fred Carr, who has been involved in a dispute over possible knee surgery.

Carr has requested the operation but the club has refused and General Manager Coach Bart Starr said the linebacker had "failed to honor verbal commitments and made a mockery of our conditioning and training program."

Atlanta cut 10 players, including No. 6 draft choice Rodney Parker, a wide receiver from Tennessee State, while the New York Jets dropped six players, including second-year wide receiver Shelton Diggs.

NFL teams must cut their rosters to 50 players by next Tuesday and to 45 before the start of the regular season.

Pokes Trim Roster, Eye Oiler Contest

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboy coaches have waived one rookie and placed another on the injured reserve list to trim the roster to 60 and meet the National Football League's first cutdown date.

Frank Dudley, a rookie free agent tight end, was waived Tuesday and third-round draft choice David Hudgens was placed on the injured reserve list after the offensive guard went down hard Monday on an already troublesome knee.

But while Coach Tom Landry bid farewell to the rookies, he also welcomed back veterans Larry Cole and Golden Richards to Tuesday's workouts.

Cole had not worked out for more than a week because of a twisted knee and Richards missed Monday's practices with a knee sprain. Both are probable starters for the Cowboy's third pre-season game Saturday against Houston.

In preparation for that contest Landry sent his team through extensive pass protection, team offense and punt return work Tuesday. He also shifted number two draft pick Todd Christensen from fullback to tight end.

Landry said he moved Christensen to give the rookie some work at a position he appears capable of filling. Christensen caught 50 passes last fall at Brigham Young.

Veterans Thomas Henderson and Randy Hughes sat out Tuesday's workouts. Henderson is suffering from a tight hamstring and Hughes from an injured foot. But team doctors say both are probable starters for Saturday.

Rookie Dave Kraayeveld, who scored on a 61-yard interception return in the pre-season opener against San Francisco, was excused from afternoon drills because of illness. Veteran defensive tackle Bill Gregory, recovering from an off-season knee injury, also was held out of afternoon workouts.

Latest Firing Uproots Allen's Family Again

PALOS VERDES ESTATES, Calif. (AP) — "Maybe next week I'll get mad," said Eddy Allen, wife of one of pro football's most successful coaches, as she talked about the latest crisis in their lives.

While she was unpacking the first load of two moving vans bringing the family's belongings from Washington, D.C., Eddy Allen learned her husband George had been fired by the Los Angeles Rams, after directing the team for just two pre-season games.

It's 28 years since Eddy Lumbroso, a native of Tunisia, married George Allen, then a coach at Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa.

Allen's rise through the college and pro football ranks has meant that his family has been uprooted regularly, including three previous firings.

But after 12 years as a head coach in the National Football League without a losing season, winning more than 70 percent of his games, Allen's dismissal late Sunday put his wife "in shock," she said.

"I think we should relax and assess the situation," his wife said Tuesday. "I hope he'll rest. He hasn't had much rest since we came here."

"It's amazing how George manages to be controversial. He doesn't even try. I think he's very conventional, very considerate. Last night he was talking about how bad he felt disrupting the families of his coaches who came here with him."

Allen was coach and general manager of the Washington Redskins for the past seven years, after five previous years as coach of the Rams. When they went to Washington, the Allens did not sell their home near the seacoast in the mountainous Palos Verdes area southwest of Los Angeles.

"We still have a lot to be grateful for," Mrs. Allen said in an interview. "Some people have no parents, no children. We call our children our oil wells. Because we've had so many reverses, we are even closer."

The Allen children range in age from 17 to 24. Bruce, 21, has just entered college coaching at Arizona State.

"He was at a football banquet when he heard the news," Mrs. Allen said. "You should have heard him talk to his father. He said, 'You're the best coach. The best father. The best everything.'"

Although the Los Angeles team had won divisional championships each of the past five years, Mrs. Allen said she thinks his accomplishments in building a consistent winner at Washington were greater.

"It was a tougher division. It was more glorious for the Redskins to win eight games than for the Rams to win a division. I don't think George should lose his pride over this. I think what he should do is start a football coaches' union."

"Oh, they say we'll pay you," she added.

Casanova Took Pills 'Like Candy'

CINCINNATI (AP) — Former All-Pro safety Tommy Casanova, who recently retired after six National Football League seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals, says players ate amphetamines like candy during his college days at Louisiana State University.

Casanova, 28, said he retired this summer because "I couldn't stand the pain anymore and I was scared what it would be like 15 years from now."

"Through the awareness and intelligence of football players — and physicians — they found they don't need that stuff."

"It's a very useful drug when used properly. But it doesn't have any place in athletics," said Casanova, who now attends the University of Cincinnati's medical school. He was Cincinnati's No. 2 draft choice in 1972.

He blew the roof off when he found out they were amphetamines, stimulants for the central nervous system, supposedly to make us run faster and jump higher."

Casanova said he stopped taking the pills after "a half dozen games."

Casanova said he was never offered any amphetamines during his pro football career. "I'm sure you could get them if you wanted them. But I don't know of anyone at Cincinnati who uses them."

But, he added, "It's fair to say a large majority of professional and college players have knowingly used them."

to regain his title from Spinks in New Orleans in September, told the youngsters: "That man is too ugly to represent us." (AP Laserphoto)

Blazers' Officials Fail To Dissuade Walton

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A lawyer for the Portland Trail Blazers says Bill Walton rejected team officials' efforts to talk him out of trying to leave the National Basketball Association team. "We analyzed with him his complaints and tried to dissuade him from his views, but he was intractable," attorney Frank Rothman said Tuesday. "We finally decided that under the circumstances we'd attempt to see if we could arrange a trade."

say they want a deal that would leave them with a player or players to compensate for Walton's loss. "We haven't decided to give him up," Rothman said. "We decided to attempt to work out a trade ... He will be under contract to Portland until we can make a trade that is acceptable to us ... It is for us in Portland to decide what trade we want to make, not for Walton."

would not play for the Portland Trail Blazers again. Basset said Walton, 25, may get a five-year contract with Golden State that would let the Warriors pay Walton no money until he begins playing for them. Walton's left foot is in a cast for a break suffered last season. His agents have indicated he thinks the Blazers rushed him back into action too soon after an earlier foot injury. Rothman said Walton told the Chicago meeting he had reflected on the Blazers handling of his injury and "did not think it was good medical treatment."

Sixers, Nuggets Trade At Hand

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A trade involving the Philadelphia 76ers' George McGinnis and the Denver Nuggets' Bobby Jones and Ralph Simpson that has been in the works for three months was expected to be finally consummated today. The 76ers scheduled a news conference for this afternoon. Sources close to both teams said Tuesday formal announcement of the trade was at hand. Both McGinnis and Jones had no trade clauses in their contracts, and the primary problem has been the matter of special bonus payments to the two. Both players are ready to or already have signed releases.

to the Buffalo Braves in the playoffs. The following year, when Julius Erving joined McGinnis, the 76ers won their division with a 50-32 record, but were eliminated by Portland in the sixth game of the best-of-seven championship series. This past season, McGinnis averaged 20.3 points and 10.4 rebounds in 32.5 minutes a game. Jones, 26, was acquired by the Nuggets, started nearly every game last season for the Nuggets, averaging 14.5 points and 3.5 rebounds per game in 32.5 minutes per game. He was second on the team in rebounding and is recognized as one of the top defensive players in the NBA. Jones, 26, was acquired by the Nuggets from the now-defunct ABA Carolina Cougars in an exchange of draft picks and signed in June 1974.

Taylor Introduces Rugby League

NEW YORK (AP) — Tough-guy Jim Taylor is not the best player to talk to about excessive violence in the National Football League. Taylor, former workhorse running back for the Green Bay Packers, inflicted severe punishment on defenses around the NFL from 1958-67. Football obviously looked safer from his perspective than from the vantage point of a bowled over defensive back.

Taylor, a recognizable football name for an organization scrambling for investors and fans, is the league's commissioner and a friend of Mike Mayer, the league's founding father. Rugby consists of two 13-man teams attempting to carry one overstuffed football, with no laces, across the other side's goal line. Blocking is not permitted, nor is forward passing. Movement is made by either running with the ball or passing it sideways or backwards to a teammate, who then does the running. Only the ball carrier can be tackled. And it is apparent, since no one wears helmets or pads, that rugby's contact is different from the kind in American football. Some say football is scarred by too many disabling injuries, like the one that has New England wide receiver Darryl Stingley partially paralyzed in a California hospital following a violent collision with Oakland's Jack Tatum last Saturday.

collision sport," said Mayer, former college football standout at Wisconsin and now the president of the league, which will hold tryouts in Chicago Aug. 26-27. "It's a definite contact sport, so there are plenty of cuts and bruises," Mayer said. "But since one object is to prevent a player from passing off to a teammate, the tackling is much different. Often a tackler will pin the ball carrier's arms, so he can't pass off. It's more like a bear hug. In football, tackling is extremely high velocity," he said. "The collisions are at strange angles and at intense rates. Some of the most serious injuries happen when a player is trying to pull away from somebody's grasp and gets blind-sided by someone else."

Mahaffey To Attempt Westchester Classic

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — John Mahaffey, who has changed from a hard-luck guy to a major force in golf, goes after a rare third consecutive victory this week in the $300,000 Westchester Classic. "This is hard to believe," Mahaffey said after a practice round over the hilly, 6,003-yard, par-71 Westchester Country Club course, the heat-damaged site of the rich event that begins a 72-hole run Thursday. "It's unbelievable, but I'm loving every minute of it," said Mahaffey, who won the PGA National Championship and the Pleasant Valley Classic in his last two starts.

"I'm not making any predictions. Winning two in a row is unbelievable. I just want to keep it going as long as I can," said Mahaffey, whose gritty, come-from-behind victories in the last two weeks has given him a chance to match Player's string. The triumphs also have worked a 180 degree swing in Mahaffey's golfing fortunes and confirmed the bright promise of his earlier years. His personal and professional life went into a decline after his losses in the 1975 and 1976 U.S. Opens. Injuries and ailments kept him off the tour most of last season. Now, however, he has won $95,000 in the last two weeks and holds the hottest hand in the game. "This makes it all worthwhile," Mahaffey said. His chief challenger for the $60,000 first prize is Jack Nicklaus.

"A dirty player does illegal things when the officials aren't looking," the burly 42-year-old said. "A hard-nosed guy plays by the rules, playing every down as hard as possible." Taylor said the late Vince Lombardi, Green Bay's dictatorial, demanding and highly successful coach, never preached violence to maim the opposition. "He was a tremendous motivator. He taught us to be aggressive and deal out punishment instead of receiving it." Taylor has been doing public relations work in his native Louisiana since retiring from the NFL, leaving the coaching to other former players. His personal feelings about modern athletes may have disqualified him from a successful sideline career. "I was Marie Lombardi's escort at last year's Super Bowl, and we got to talking about Vince," said Taylor. "We both felt that he'd have a real problem with today's athletes. They have more money and more independence and just don't care as much as we did."

'Dogs Face Shortage Of Players

ANTON—Things don't look too bright in Anton this year. To start with, the Bulldogs only managed three wins last season and only return seven lettermen from that mediocre squad.

Add to that that only four of those returners were starters and then heap on the fact that Coach Bobby Richardson only saw 23 players come out for his first practice, and you can easily see that they have trouble in Rabbit City.

"We ain't got but about 23 kids, and that just ain't gonna cut it," Richardson lamented. "We ought to have around 40. But what can we do? We've got all but about three of the boys in the school out."

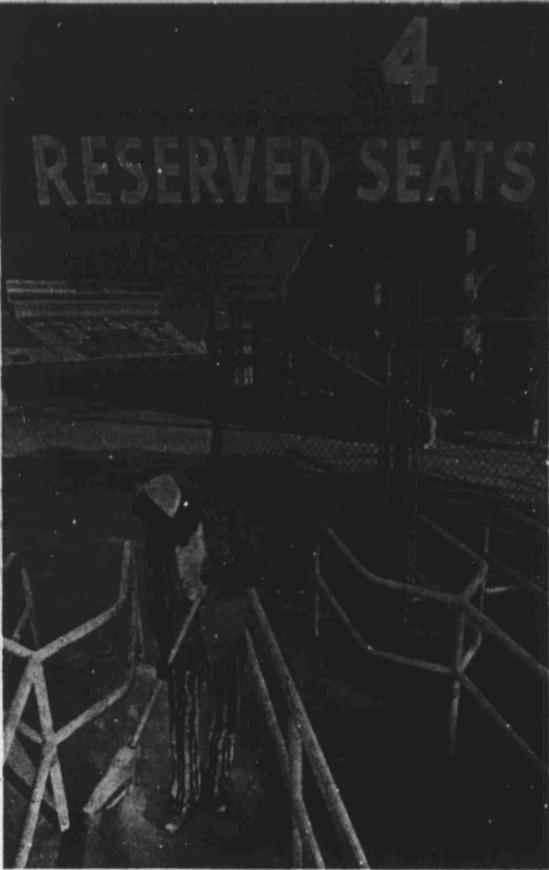

"It's just a small school and there's a lot of girls."

That may sound like heaven for the boys six days out of the week, but it will probably make for some awfully long Friday nights. Richardson says that his squad's main weaknesses (besides the obvious lack of numbers) are "Size, speed, experience, and depth." That leaves a lot to be desired, but Richardson and the rest of the Bulldog faithful are hoping that quarterbacks Gary Bullard, a 5-10, 170-pound senior, and Tommy Decker, a 5-8, 155-pound junior up from last year's B-team, can overcome those handicaps and get a successful passing attack under way.

If they can, the probable receivers are backs Roger Harrell and Johnny Martinez and ends Johnny Rendon and Lonnie Dutton. Dutton, a 6-3, 180 junior, is the identical twin of center Donnie Dutton. He will anchor the offensive line.

The Duttons are two of only three Anton players who stand taller than 6 feet. They are also two of the three heaviest players on the squad. The third, in both instances, is Buddy Bishop, a 6-0, 180-pound tackle who started for the B-team last year.

Amherst Eyes District Crown

By SCOTT SUDDUTH

Avalanche Journal Sports Staff AMHERST — Although he can't see much of the outside world from his office under the basketball bleachers, Dwayne Gray still has a bright outlook on the upcoming fall.

The Bulldog head mentor welcomed 13 returning lettermen to practice on Monday, and he confides, "I think the players smell a possible district title this year."

With five players returning to familiar positions on offense, Gray expects a potent attack from the corps. "I feel our running game will be our strong point," said the coach. And Jim Bagwell, returning at fullback, is expected to provide much of the running explosives.

Standing 6 feet, the 200-pound senior is described as a power runner by Coach Gray. "He's (Bagwell) a tough runner, has good quickness and can churn out 3 to 5 yards per carry easily," Gray said.

Because of Bagwell's bowling-ball abilities, the Bulldogs have added a new formation to this year's playbook. In addition to the wishbone, the team will run out of the I-formation too. "We felt the 'I' would help us utilize Bagwell as a blocker... he's a great blocker... for (halfback Ronald) Johnson," Gray explained.

A two-year letterman, Johnson is the Bulldogs' speedster. As a sophomore last year, he competed on the school sprint relay team that advanced to the state Class B finals. The 5-9, 160-pound youngster team doubles as a cornerback for the Bulldogs too.

Directing the attack will be Alvin Mills. Although the junior has only JV experience, he is considered a top newcomer for the Bulldogs. "He is a fine passer, and we plan to use his throwing ability out of the I-formation," Gray remarked.

On offense, the four-year head coach list tackles as the main weakness. "With the exception of Goyle Roberson, most of our tackles only weigh about 165 pounds," he added.

At 6-8, 331 pounds, Roberson anchors the defensive line. "Yeah, we just let him take care of one side by himself," the coach jokingly added.

Roosevelt Opens Door To New Head Mentor

By RUSS PARSONS

Avalanche Journal Sports Staff The welcome mat is still hot for new Roosevelt High School football coach Dean Elliott.

Elliott was an assistant at Turner High School in Carrollton last year when that team piled up a 10-1 regular season mark and advanced into the state playoffs.

Roosevelt, at the same time, was suffering through a 3-7 season mark (only 1-5 in District 4-AA play) under coach Houston Powell, then in his 11th year at the school. Powell left after the season ended, taking his career 65-49-2 record with him to Canyon High School.

Just four weeks before the start of the season, Elliott got the call and came to his first head coaching job on the run.

The Eagles will be running the same offense (veer) and defense (4-3) that Elliott learned at Turner. Roosevelt fans are hoping the results are much the same too.

If they are, it'll most likely be because of the quarterbacking of 120-pound senior Roger Lindsey. Despite being one of the thinnest football players in West Texas this year, Lindsey looked like he was running the team well during the first week's practice and was picking up the veer offense quite smoothly. He is also an accurate passer, Elliott feels.

If he doesn't have the bulk for the heavy-duty running, junior fullback Junior Vasquez certainly does. Vasquez is a bull-shouldered, 200-pounder who saw a lot of playing time last season. Another strong runner is 165-pound tailback Dennis Price, up from last year's junior varsity.

It's the offensive line that has Elliott worried, but it looks as if he has some weighty prospects. Three tackles that weigh more than 200 pounds came out for practice this year.

"We've put in a new offense and defense completely from last year," Elliott said. "I don't really understand how we can be a good squad until the middle of the season with all of these new things."

The Eagles will have until Oct. 6 to work out the kinks in their new systems. That's when they play their first district game at Seminole in Seminole.

When asked what he thought his squad's most outstanding characteristic would be this year, Elliott said "I don't know. We've got a little speed and one back with some size. The line seems to be a little slower than I'd like but they've been putting out a real good effort."

Ralls' Coach Says Health Top Concern

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche Journal Sports Staff RALLS — Alton Fields says there is only one key that will unlock the door to a successful season for the Ralls Jackrabbits.

"We've got to stay healthy this year," the mentor of the Ralls Jackrabbits said. "We don't have a lot of depth. So if any of our starters get hurt we could be in trouble."

That is exactly what happened to the District 4-A team last year, as Fields recalls.

"We played Post a good game at the start of the season," Fields remembers. "And we only lost to Petersburg (the district champ) by 1 point. Then we started getting some people hurt. We had seven starters hurt at one time last year."

"I think if we can stay healthy this year we'll be extremely competitive."

With the return of 16 lettermen off a team which finished 1-9 overall and 0-6 in loop play, it is easy to understand why Fields feels this could be the year Ralls emerges as a threat to win the district title.

"This is our third year to be here," Fields said. "The seniors have been exposed to our way of doing things for three years and that helps a lot."

During Fields' first year at Ralls, only three seniors played on the team. Last year there were only four upperclassmen.

men. But things are different this time, now there are 14 seniors on the club.

"With the fine group of seniors we have now," Fields said, "leadership is going to be one of our strongest points. We've got some kids who will take charge."

Not only does Fields have some "take charge" players, he also has 60 graders gracing the premises this year — an unheard-of number at Ralls.

"We've never had a lot of football players," Fields said. "For us, 60 players is quite a few. That really gives us something to work with."

Among the group are quarterback David Heitrich, the area's top Class A signal caller last year. This will be the third year the 150-pounder has guided the Rabbits.

Joining Heitrich in the backfield are fullback Jimmy Gillen (170) and halfback Willie Paul Anderson (155).

Gillen was a hard luck story last year. During two-a-day practices, the hard running ballcarrier was injured, requiring knee surgery. However, this year he's back, and Fields is glad.

"Gillen is what we really needed last year," Fields said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany shared some secrets of his longevity as he celebrated his 84th birthday Tuesday night with a thousand friends, including Vice President Walter Mondale.

"The basic foundation was being brought up on oatmeal and potatoes," said the Bronx-born plumber who has been the only president the labor federation has known in its 23-year history.

And now, he adds, the credit also goes to an occasional martini and keeping his mind as busy as a machine.

"I never stop thinking, even at night when I go to bed," said Meany. "I'm always thinking of what I'll be doing tomorrow. Either that or I'm doing mental arithmetic."

One of the best things about being 84, he said, was that "I can talk about what happened in 1910 and no one dares contradict me."

As for growing old gracefully and quietly, the outspoken labor leader growled,

"I only bought half of that line."

But Meany was very quiet about politics at his birthday party, attended by long-time associates, business and civic leaders, members of Congress, sports figures, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and other members of an administration he has not been hesitant to criticize.

"I never work on my birthday," said Meany, waving aside with his ever-present cigar questions about his recent complaints that the White House was anti-labor and that Carter was a weak and ineffective president.

Carter reportedly was furious over Meany's remarks, and Marshall publicly chastised him last week for what the secretary called unwarranted attacks on the administration.

But in the party ballroom, festooned with red, white and blue balloons, everyone was being gracious.

The president sent a birthday greeting for Meany, praising his efforts "to insure a better, stronger, more compassionate America... goals I share with you."

Mondale said Meany was not only a great labor leader but a powerful voice for the young, the old, the sick and minorities. Said Marshall: "Meany is a good friend of mine. We might have our differences but they're minor. There's nothing that needs any patching up."

The birthday dinner benefited No Greater Love, an organization that provides various programs for children of servicemen missing or killed in action in Southeast Asia and for hospitalized and paralyzed veterans of the Vietnam War.

Most Newsprint Makers Rule Out Price Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a pending increase in the cost of newsprint announced by one major producer, industry observers see little prospect of an immediate industry-wide move in the same direction.

Bowater Sales Co., an Greenwich, Conn. marketing subsidiary of Bowater Corp. Ltd. announced early this month that on Oct. 1 it would raise the average price of its standard 30-pound weight newsprint by $15 a ton to $335 for U.S. customers.

But so far it appears to be alone in that decision.

Some major competitors have ruled out price hikes for at least the balance of the year. Others say they are studying the situation.

"We made that decision based on increased manufacturing costs. It was thoroughly reviewed then. We're going ahead with it," said a Bowater company official, who asked that his name not be used.

Bowater Corp. Ltd., a London-based holding company with mills in Canada and the United States, is ranked as one of the five largest suppliers of newsprint to the United States.

Such pricing decisions in the past have been followed by an industry-wide move. The latest widespread hike last spring saw average prices increase by $15 to about $320 a ton.

But sentiment this time appears far from universal.

"We have no intention of increasing the price of our newsprint before the end of the year even though we are feeling the cost pressure as most newsprint manufacturers are," said Denise Dallaire, a spokeswoman for Consolidated-Bathurst of Montreal.

Abitibi-Price Sales Co., a New York marketing subsidiary for another major Canadian producer, and MacMillan Bloedel of Vancouver, B.C., also reported no immediate plans to increase their prices.

Canadian manufacturers provide about 70 percent of the newsprint used by U.S. newspapers and have been filling the gap created by strikes that have closed a number of plants in the Pacific Northwest and halted production at Great Northern Company's newsprint facility in Millinocket, Maine.

At the same time, however, a strike by pressmen last week halted publishing at three New York newspapers, the New York Times, New York Post and New York Daily News. That could temporarily reduce demand for newsprint on the East Coast, analysts say.

The Pacific Northwest paper mill strike, that began in early July, closed 28 mills, five of them producers of newsprint. Disputes have been settled in three mills, two of them newsprint producers.

While supply problems have created increased demand in some areas, Edward Dunleavy, an analyst at the Wall Street firm of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith says price hikes may not become widespread until early next year when newspaper inventories run low and many papers begin reordering.

Bowater, however, isn't taking much of a risk, he says, noting that many contracts allow flexibility for negotiation. "If they don't get it, essentially they can back off."

Union Ratifies Paper Pact

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Publishers Paper Co. plant in Newberg, Ore., was to reopen today following ratification of a new contract by striking pulp and paper workers.

The vote by members of the Association of Western Pulp and Paper Workers was "by a very substantial margin," a union spokesman said Tuesday. The strike had lasted three weeks.

The ratification followed a similar AWPPW vote Monday at the Publishers mill in Oregon City, which resumed operations Tuesday.

About 12,800 workers still are on strike at 25 West Coast paper mills. Three of the strikes involve the United Papermakers International Union, and the rest involve the AWPPW.

Meanwhile, Crown Zellerbach Corp. announced that a meeting was scheduled today in Kelsey, Wash. in hopes of resuming contract negotiations in the Wauna strike.

The walkout at Zellerbach's Wauna mill, a major newsprint producer, began July 6. No talks were scheduled in strikes by the AWPPW at seven other Zellerbach plants in Oregon, Washington and California, the company said.

Ex-Sheriff Acquitted Of Montana Death

HAWTHORNE, Nev. (AP) — Former Douglas County Sheriff Dick Canatsey was acquitted Monday of all charges following a 1977 accident in which a Montana man was killed.

The district court jury deliberated about seven hours before finding Canatsey innocent of drunken driving, involuntary manslaughter and two counts of trying to get his deputies to lie about the accident.

Canatsey's car slammed into a vehicle driven by Donald Boutiller, 28, of Great Falls, Mont., in March 1977 at Lake Tahoe. Boutiller died following the accident and a passenger, John Rogers of Bozeman, Mont., was injured severely. Canatsey was recalled from office three months after the wreck.

House Victory Surprises ERA Extension Backers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a 39-month extension for ratifying the proposed Equal Rights Amendment hope the momentum of an unexpectedly large House victory will hold up when the measure reaches the Senate and a threatened filibuster.

The House voted 233-189 Tuesday to extend the ERA ratification time limit to June 30, 1982. The current deadline is March 22.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., principal sponsor of the extension, said the 44-vote margin was "larger than any of us anticipated."

"The size of the House vote will give tremendous momentum to the effort in the Senate," said Mrs. Holtzman, who is scheduled to meet with pro-extension senators on Thursday.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., floor leader of the pro-extension forces, said, "We thought we were going to win by 25 or 30 votes."

In the Senate, a version of the extension measure — pushing back the ratification deadline by seven years — has become stuck in a subcommittee that is divided 3-3 on the bill. That means the Senate likely will ignore its measure and deal directly with the House-approved 39-month extension when returning from the Labor Day recess early next month.

Had the Senate been able to decide on its own version, the ERA question now would have been headed for a Senate-House conference committee to iron out differences in the two versions.

However, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who helped stall the Senate extension measure in the subcommittee, predicted a filibuster he said he would not lead but would support.

"I suspect there is going to be one awfully extended debate," Hatch said.

Leading anti-ERA lobbyist Phyllis Schlafly, who had an appointment in Hatch's office after the House vote, said she did not think the extension would pass the Senate and that opponents would challenge it in court if it did.

An aide to Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chief Senate champion of the extension, said he was not sure if there was the required three-fifths majority for cutting off a filibuster.

The House vote marked the first time either house of Congress had approved extension of a time limit for ratifying a constitutional amendment. Until the prohibition amendment in 1917, Congress did not impose any time limits. The Constitution does not require a limit.

Before passing the extension, the House rejected 227-196 an amendment to allow state legislatures that have already ratified the ERA to reverse their votes. A similar amendment is expected to be offered in the Senate.

The ERA, which would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex, has been ratified by 35 state legislatures, but those of Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee later voted to withdraw their approval. The Kentucky action was vetoed.

The amendment needs the approval of 38 state legislatures to become part of the Constitution. The Justice Department says it does not believe a state legislature can change its mind once it has ratified, but also says this will be a question for Congress to decide if the required three-fourths of the states approve the amendment.

All 18 women in the House voted for the extension. In the Senate, Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., supports it, but the only other woman senator, Democrat Maryon Allen of Alabama, is against it.

Meanwhile, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows that 55 percent of Americans questioned oppose the stalled Senate measure, which would extend the deadline by seven years. Nevertheless, the poll found, 54 percent of those interviewed Aug. 7-8 still support the ERA.

Congressional Debate Lacks Fiery Orations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House debate on giving the Equal Rights Amendment more time for ratification had all the eloquence and emotional fire of a bankruptcy proceeding.

There was no Daniel Webster, no Patrick Henry to stir the fires of emotion.

It was a debate of legal skirmishes, of lawyer-legislators setting the stage for future appeals.

Any sense of history to this production came mostly from the hundreds of spectators who lined the galleries, many dressed in the white worn by suffragettes of years ago.

The House debate, which touched only briefly on women's search for equality, ended with supporters of the ERA given an extra three years and three months to gain ratification by 38 states.

The amendment, which would prohibit discrimination based on sex, has been approved by 35 state legislatures. But those of Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Tennessee have rescinded their approval.

The Kentucky action, however, was vetoed. The Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide if states can legally rescind ratification.

During Tuesday's debate supporters of the extension wanted to talk about the search for human rights. Opponents, however, insisted that the real point was "an unwarranted intrusion into the constitutional process."

Some of the best oratory was turned in by Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas, in a short but emotional appeal on behalf of the extension.

"You will not cause any disturbances among the founding fathers if you decide that on this day you are going to give the people of this country a little more time to find themselves," she said.

And as for an opponent's complaint that the House was going through "this agony and ecstasy" without reason since the Senate might not vote on the extension this year, she replied, "Women have been going through agony and ecstasy all their lives. And we will continue to go through that until there is equality for all."

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., also gave a strong performance as an equal rights supporter caught between his desire to help and his love of precedence.

"The problem with the proposal is that it is unprecedented," he said, adding that he feared an extension would "force all sorts of litigation on the courts."

The measure goes to the Senate after Labor Day. There the senators' own bill, a seven-year extension, is stalled in a subcommittee and not likely to see floor debate.

SEC Approves Policy Change

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Without much fanfare, the staff of the Securities and Exchange Commission has changed an historic position and agreed — with conditions — that mutual funds can be tapped for the costs of bringing new investors into the funds.

In a brief filed last month in an administrative hearing, the SEC staff said that the Vanguard fund group of Philadelphia should be allowed to use fund money to promote and distribute fund shares.

The change, which hasn't received any attention except in the fund industry, is a landmark, although it actually applies only to this one case, because:

—The staff and the commission itself have historically resisted all proposals to make funds pay for selling their own shares. The SEC's traditional argument has been that bringing more money into the fund doesn't benefit the fund shareholders, but only increases the fee paid to the manager, so the manager should pay the costs. As one source put it, "The staff has fought against it; the commission has simply refused to allow it."

—The brief marks the first time the SEC staff has said in writing that there is nothing in the Investment Company Act of 1940, under which funds are regulated, that prohibits the funds from paying their own distribution and promotion costs.

The 135-page brief (with 40 pages of legal and fact findings) recommends restrictions on the amount of money that can be taken from the funds — one tenth of 1 percent is the benchmark — and how the costs should be shared by groups of funds advertising together. It even asks for a prohibition against calling the funds "no-load," the term used when there is no sales charge for buying fund shares.

An SEC staffer told us that the term no-load has a particular meaning in the fund business and, since some of the shareholders' money would be used for distribution, the term shouldn't be used. One fund executive commented that "It's OK to call it no-load if the distribution costs are included in the management fee, but when you pay for those things separately you can't use the term."

The Vanguard group includes the Wellington, Windsor, Westminster and Invest funds, among others. All of them dropped their sales charges early last year and at the same time Vanguard applied for clearance to dip into fund assets. Operations of the funds, except for investment advice, have been internalized — taken over by the funds themselves — with a temporary OK from the SEC.

The fees paid to Wellington Management Co., the advisor, have been cut in half to an average of 24/100ths of 1 percent (each fund pays a different percentage, based on its size). John Bogle, head of Vanguard, said that while the funds paid $1.3 million for promotion and distribution last year, they've reduced their management fees, through two renegotiations, by $3.7 million over the last few years. Bogle said the fee reductions were possible because of the internalization. "You have greater negotiating power if you can negotiate each function separately," he added.

While the Vanguard plan and its progress through the SEC have been watched closely by all fund managers, the idea isn't likely to be widely adopted, even if it gets final clearance. David Silver, president of the Investment Company Institute, the mutual fund industry's trade organization, said that while the SEC position breaks new ground, he isn't sure that many other funds would be willing to accept all the restrictions that would be imposed in the SEC staff's recommendations.

The head of one fund group said he would not consider the Vanguard plan, explaining that he feels the costs of starting and operating funds should be paid by the management company. He said the plan reduces the chance for profits and so takes away incentive for starting new funds. "The fact is, there's no way to build a business on the amount of money you can take out of the funds," he said.

Vanguard is still ways from a permanent green light. One shareholder in Wellington has jumped into the cast to oppose the idea, claiming that Wellington's money (it's the biggest fund in the group, with about $700 million) would be used to promote other funds (the SEC proposal calls for each fund to pay in proportion to its sales).

The stockholder and Vanguard filed their own final briefs earlier this week. The administrative judge hearing the case will take at least 60 days to go through all the filings and testimony. Once he rules, any party can ask the commission itself for a review, which means a whole new set of briefs and hearings.

And of course, there's always the possibility of court action after that.

Steel Firms Need New Technology

NEW YORK (UPI) — Only a massive government-supported drive towards radical new technology can rescue the American steel industry, a team of international experts has advised the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

The team's report, written by Prof. Julian Szekely of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, says while tariff barriers and anti-dumping prosecutions against foreign steel imports may be necessary temporarily, they will not really help solve the critical problem.

American steelmaking technology is lagging far behind technology in Japanese steel mills, and American labor productivity and managerial productivity in the steel mills is so inferior the Japanese can produce steel for at least $60 a ton below the $300 it costs in the United States even though the Japanese are short of energy and have to import iron ore long distances.

The team, including representatives of the major American steel companies, met at MIT last April. Szekely took some months to write his report. He concedes that not all his information about Japanese costs is precise, but says it is clear the Japanese use less energy in making steel, their labor is more productive and cheaper and their political climate more favorable to the steel producers than in the United States.

Szekely sounded a note of almost desperate urgency by saying neither the federal government, the steel-producing states nor the American steel companies have any long-term plans for solving their steadily worsening problems. He criticized government agencies dealing with the steel industry for being interested solely in matters of ecology and conservation.

The MIT meeting heard talks by experts on the possibilities in such advanced technologies for steel as hydrometallurgy, powder metallurgy and plasma technology. It concluded that totally new methods of making steel must be adopted if the U.S. industry is to hold its own in the domestic market, much less ever regain part of its once vast export sales.

Investing money in the newest current technology would be wasteful because the capital costs would far outrun the possible savings in production costs, the study said.

Both labor and energy costs in steelmaking in the United States must come down, Szekely wrote. The sad fact, he said, is that nobody in the United States is engaged in any substantial research to develop radical new steelmaking technology.

The fields the report urges be investigated include:

—Plasma arc steelmaking: Has low capital costs, economies of scale start at low tonnages, easy to make special alloy steels. But power consumption is high.

—Direct casting of sheet steel: Would eliminate rolling mills with big savings in capital, energy and labor, but feasibility so far has been proved only in narrow sheet widths.

—Oxygen-injecting direct steelmaking: No coke or coke ovens required and blast furnace and oxygen steel furnace steps are combined. But there are technical bugs and problems to be eliminated before this process becomes feasible and for the present, no one appears to be seriously working on this.

Szekely also said top management in the nation's steel companies is composed of non-technical people who are strangely uninterested in the grave technological dilemma the industry is up against.

Media Experts Give Censored Stories List

ROHNERT PARK, Calif. (AP) — The worsening conditions in black ghettos and the failure of expensive cancer research to produce any spectacular results were among the "10 best-censored stories of 1977," a panel of media experts says.

The 10 stories were on a list of 25 submitted to the group by a class in mass communications at Sonoma State College in Rohnert Park, 50 miles north of San Francisco.

Among those on the panel were J.F. terHorst, former White House press secretary in the Ford administration; columnist Shana Alexander, media analyst Ben Bagdikian, Professor Noam Chomsky and Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y.

Deteriorating conditions for many black Americans was chosen as the top under-reported story of 1977.

The panel listed the following in rounding out the 10 most under-reported stories:

—Cancer research is a billion-dollar business, but the results are far less spectacular.

—Since the fall of 1973, Jimmy Carter has been associated with David Rockefeller and other members of an international power elite through his association with the Trilateral Commission, one of Rockefeller's policy-making organizations.

—Eleven licensed nuclear plants and reactors have been shut down because of unresolved problems.

—Some major infant formula manufacturers are pushing their products, with explosive and deceptive tactics, in Third World countries.

—Cambodians and some Vietnamese are being executed and tortured or are suffering from starvation and disease because of Cambodia's rulers, the Khmer Rouge.

—Ending industrial pollution will not cause factories to shut down but would create new jobs and reduce health-care costs.

—Acid vapors, caused mainly by oil and coal burning, smelting and auto exhaust, are causing enormous environmental damage on most parts of the East Coast.

—A race to control the lucrative ocean floor is under way, with high stakes an estimated 1.5 trillion tons of mineral wealth at stake.

—U.S. employers are profiting from hiring illegal aliens at below-minimum wages.

Twenty-two Nazi leaders were convicted of war crimes by the International Tribunal in Nuremberg in 1946.

California Family No Longer Fears Earthquakes

PALO ALTO, Calif. (UPI) — The neighborhood creeps.

The climate is short-sleeved. The streets of the Leland Manor area are American the Beautiful, tree-shaded minmansions more of Andy Hardy than All In The Family.

But here the earth does not stand still. It moves three-fourths of an inch a year. Leland Manor, in the shoptalk word of the U.S. Geological Survey, creeps.

"I used to worry about living in the earthquake zone," Mrs. W.J. Kockleman said. "Was it right to raise five kids along the San Andreas Fault?"

She set lunch plates on the dining room table for her husband, Bill, and for the children, John 19, Ann 17, Peter 16, Kara 9, and Paul 8. She pulled back Paul's plate; he was not to be interrupted with his birthday present model train on the patio.

The beagle dog, Sarge, tried to claim Paul's place at the table. He wagged his tongue. Valerie Kockleman shook her head. Sarge retreated.

"Scared I came. But I decided that living in an earthquake arena is like childbirth — the more you know about it, the more you can deal with it," she said.

Bonwit Teller, the cat, leaped to the table, inspected and rejected the carrot cake and ignored Sarge's tongue-wagging plea for cake. Let Sarge eat no cake; cats are not in the business of feeding dogs.

"Sarge is no help," Mrs. Kockleman said. "Animals sense a quake coming. Just before our Thanksgiving Dazz 1974 quake a friend's German shepherd howled and moaned for hours. Sarge? He just eyed the turkey."

"In the San Francisco quake of '06, people understood why their dogs had been whining, why the coyotes up at Mount Shasta had been yelping and why the trout were clustering in the streams. But Sarge? Well, Bonwit Teller's more intelligent. Maybe the cat will bark."

She smiled. "But we're not waiting for the cat to bark."

Her husband is a city planner, employed by the Geological Survey in California to advise mayors and other local officials how to prepare for the day the earth shakes.

"Actually, it shakes most days," Bill Kockleman said. He was home for lunch and wearing a polo shirt; ties fare poorly under the palm trees.

Kockleman pulls his coffee cup in a circle on the dining table. He is mapping the Pacific Ocean's ring of fire, a rumbling round of earthquakes, tidal waves, volcanoes, floods and other haves.

The cup comes to rest alongside the cake knife, which is California. This part of the havoc, the San Andreas and sister earth faults, is his. It is his work. And it is his home: eight miles west of his house is the mile-wide fault, a crunchy belt of terrain broken and rubbing together like two Boy Scout fire-making sticks.

The earth's movement, that usual three-fourths of an inch a year, is too slow and soft to make dogs whine. The howling comes only when the bumping flick's big and bad for an instant — the 1906 San Francisco horror or the lesser turkey-day trot of 1974.

Leland Manor shows its tremor scars in small ways. A chunk of concrete curbing is higher than its neighbor. "We're due a disaster quake every century. The creeping is only the long intermission."

"The last heavy was 1906. Figure we have one percent a year chance of having the biggie. Since '06 was 72 years ago, that one percent is piling up. It could happen anytime now."

The earthquake man smiled.

"Back in '06 California wasn't so tightly populated. Up there on the spine, on the heights above the spreading houses, they built stadiums, hospitals, institutions. Bad place for a quake. And Daly City, that San Francisco suburb, is sitting right on the fault."

"Daly City's already seen some woe from the ring of fire. Erosion. The old coastal highway's gone. Every year a couple more houses slide down to the sea; but when the big quake comes, it's best not to be in Daly City, atop the fault."

The earthquake is a thing even the insurance companies regard as God. "A piece of the rock" is no prevention. Kockleman, earthquake man, preaches prevention. And acts on it, too.

Sampler of the Kockleman life at a fault:

—The bedroom walls are bare. Nothing to tumble on sleepers when the earth moves.

—The children are taught to shut off gas, electricity and water upon a quake. "San Francisco suffered some in the '06 quake; it suffered hell in the aftermath fire caused by unstoppered gas," he said.

—Two fire extinguishers hang on the wall. The family flashlights have fresh batteries.

—Kockleman picked his house not only to be away from the fault but located in an area free of the dangers of erosion by the sea, of landslides and of floods. n

—The house has less glass than sunshine homes outside the creep area. And it is of wood, not brick that can crack and tumble. The wooden frame is not just up and down; timbers, too, are slanted, the better to withstand quakes.

The Kocklemans regard themselves as exceptions. Talking about the possibility of earthquakes is as socially a popular topic as venereal disease. "People seem more concerned about it outside of California than people here," Mrs. Kockleman said.

"It is, of course, a way of non-Californians to put this state down," Bill said.

His wife said community officials expressed surprise that she bothered to check on quake conditions when the family moved from New Mexico in 1974.

Valerie Kockleman is the kind of housewife who keeps a file on earthquakes, who raises the topic at a school parents' meeting, who writes letters and goes to city council meetings. She grinned. n

"Before my marriage, I worked for Sargent Shriver at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago. Worked for Bobby, too. In New Mexico I voted for Shriver and in Palo Alto I talk about quakes."

Kockleman put his right arm over his wife's shoulders. "My wife, the activist," he said.

"The realist," she said.

Their realist, she said, led them to vacation in Russia, Poland and other Eastern European lands last year. A paper-light souvenir of Krakow in allowed on the dining room wall. "Realistic since we said let's do it now because once the kids are in college..." she said.

"And she's a realist this way," her husband said. Bill called out to the patio, asking Paul what he would do in case the earth suddenly stopped standing still.

The boy looked up from his toy train.

"One, don't panic. Two, shut off the gas. Three, get under the table..." Valerie smiled. "If you worry about earthquakes and get, you don't have to worry about quakes any more," she said.

"Tossles," her husband said. He kissed her.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're the type who likes to have a hand in the management of events, but tomorrow this role could be taken from you. Relax and you'll enjoy the change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Let your achievements speak for themselves tomorrow rather than talking of them in advance. Just do a good job and all else will take care of itself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A little more thought may be required for a project you're involved in before you make any cash outlays. Plan now, pay later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In spite of yourself tomorrow, your chances for accumulation look good. People steering things through on your behalf accounts for this.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friends will find you a very pleasant companion tomorrow provided you don't tactlessly blurt out something that's better left unsaid.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Devote your efforts tomorrow to things that can either enhance your career or expand your financial base. These are your luckiest areas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your intuition and judgment regarding the outcome of events is quite astute tomorrow. Heed your small inner voice in all activities.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The only thing that blocks success tomorrow is your own self-doubts.

Ignore them. Their message is inaccurate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends will be supportive of your ideas and will try to cooperate in all ways tomorrow as long as you don't try to spring any surprises. Resist impulsive behavior.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be imaginative tomorrow without getting too outlandish. Rube Goldberg methods and devices could cause you more work than they'll save you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Those in your charge will require a few pats on the back from you tomorrow or they're not likely to go along with your ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Changes can be brought about tomorrow if all aspects are logically analyzed previously. Unplanned, impulsive alterations could fail.

Air Safety Institute Disturbing To FAA

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The president of the very unofficial Aviation Safety Institute says the Federal Aviation Administration wants to see his organization go out of business. He likes that.

The ASI is not headquartered in a suite of federal offices in Washington, D.C., funded courtesy of the U.S. taxpayer. Instead, it operates on a shoestring out of a few cubic feet of space in suburban Worthington, Ohio, and has only 50 actively contributing members.

Yet, from a cubbyhole above a dry cleaner and a pizza parlor, this independent, non-profit organization is waging an aggressive crusade for better accident prevention in the airways.

"The FAA would like to see me out of business," says ASI President John B. Galipault. "That's great. It means I'm doing my job."

The source of their confrontation is simple: The FAA is charged with preserving safety in the National Airspace System. Galipault and his group don't believe the agency is living up to its responsibility.

"The FAA is governed by inertia, special interests and red tape," Galipault says. "It's also a classic in all the U.S. bureaucracies for covering up its own mistakes."

Japan Opposes Fish Controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese fishermen hope the United States will not further restrict the amount of fish they can catch next year within 200 miles of the U.S. coast, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Tomoyoshi Kamenaga, president of the Japan Fisheries Association, told a news conference. "We would not wish to see any policy that would lower the amount given in 1978."

Kamenaga noted that since 1976, when the United States assumed jurisdiction over most fishing within 200 miles of the U.S. coast, the amount of fish Japanese fishermen have been able to catch has been steadily reduced.

Japanese fishermen expect to catch 1.18 million metric tons of fish, exclusive of salmon, within 200 miles of the U.S. coast this year, he said. Salmon are controlled under different regulations.

The government will set 1979 quotas for foreign fishermen later this year.

Kamenaga, who heads a 9-member delegation that has been meeting with U.S. officials, said the restrictions imposed by both the United States and Soviet Union have caused unemployment in the Japanese fishing industry.

Ford Motors Sets Lincoln Price Hike

DETROIT (AP) — Ford's 1979 Lincoln Versailles, to be introduced at dealerships Friday, will cost buyers at least $399 more than last year's model, the automaker says.

Ford Motor Co. officials announced this week that the sticker price of the luxury auto would be boosted to $12,939. The increase amounts to a 3.2 percent increase over the base cost of last year's model carrying similar equipment.

The new version adds a radio and tape player as standard equipment. However, it does not have a body side molding that was standard on the 1978 model.

Prices on other 1979 Ford models are expected to be announced in September. Those cars are to be introduced Oct. 6.

Presidential Dreams Start Early

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington Answer Man is back today to tell us about some developments on the political scene.

Question: Sir, you appear somewhat disturbed. What is the problem?
Answer Man: Presidential politics. I told you in 1976 that I would answer no more presidential campaign questions until 1979 at the earliest. But here we are just midway through 1978 and those turkeys are at it already.

Question: It does seem awfully early to start a 1980 presidential campaign. What seems to be the reason?
Answer Man: I analyze it as an outbreak of the Christmas Shopping virus, which was first discovered when a department store Santa Claus died of heat prostration while trying to practice his calling before Thanksgiving. Then the networks started promoting fall TV shows along with the Fourth of July fireworks and auto companies unveiled next year's models before the first of August.

When the New York Yankees announced the return of Billy Martin 21 months in advance, it became inevitable that the first 1980 presidential candidate would surface before the 1978 mid-term elections.

Question: Well, there seems to be no way to avoid it. Just what is new in the presidential campaign picture?
Answer Man: Rep. Phillip Crane of Illinois has created an entirely new art form for announcing by just hiring a hall and declaring his intentions. Crane has hit on the idea of visiting former presidential candidates and telling them what he plans to do.

Question: Well, Crane talked to Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford and then made a public announcement, but isn't that it?
Answer Man: Oh, no. He's really just begun. He can't get media attention if he holds another announcement news conference, but he can keep on visiting former Republican candidates to tell them he plans to run.

I understand he plans to visit Richard Nixon, Barry Goldwater, George Romney, William Scranton, Nelson Rockefeller, All Landon, Harold Stassen and the Lincoln Memorial. He may even call on Mamie Eisenhower. If he decides to start on the former Democratic candidates, that would keep him busy until the 1980 New Hampshire primary.

Question: So Rep. Crane is in it. Any one else?
Answer Man: Reagan and Ford, of course. However, they are traditionalists and have not yet progressed beyond the stage of refusing to say that they are not going to discourage speculation that they are considering whether to look into the possibility of testing the waters.

Question: We heard a lot about Sen. Howard Baker right after the 1976 election? What has happened to his prospects?

Answer Man: Sen. Baker differs from Reagan and Ford in that he is currently employed, but we can look for him to become a firm "maybe" as soon as his campaign for reelection in Tennessee is over.

Question: What about Gov. James Thompson of Illinois?
Answer Man: Gov. Thompson also is in the "don't ask me now" phase. However I predict he soon will be saying "It is an office that no man can seek but no man can shirk." That comes shortly before the "Some of my friends are importuning me to enter the race" stage.

Question: Well, how will we know if Ford, Reagan, Baker or Thompson decide to run?
Answer Man: You'll know they're in it when they make appointments to see Crane.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn futures, in the final moments of hectic trading on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday, surged up to the 10-cent daily limit and finished sharply higher.

Traders said major commercial users were buying consistently throughout the session, but attributed the late surge to technical factors.

Basically, many traders and speculators had sold contracts after last week's crop report projected a record harvest. When prices rose sharply, they were forced to repurchase the contracts.

In other developments, the Agriculture Department announced that China had bought a million metric tons of wheat. Initially, traders took their profits made during the recent upswing that accompanied rumors of such a purchase.

But the government's report of hefty wheat exports last week more than offset the profit-taking. Weekly exports of corn exceeded 52 million bushels, also influencing the demand in that pit.

Exporter buying in the soybean oil pit and more speculation about potential business with China or the Soviet Union spurred a rally in soybean and soybean product futures.

At the close, soybeans were 9 1/4 to 12 1/4 cents higher, with August contracts quoted at $6.49 1/4 a bushel; wheat was 6 cents higher to 1/2 cent lower, September $3.30 1/4; corn was 6 1/4 to 8 1/4 cents higher, September $2.22 1/4 and oats were 1/2 to 1 1/4 cents higher, September $1.28 1/4.

Army Delays Action On Courts-Martial

FORT JACKSON, S.C. (AP) — No decision is expected for at least two weeks on whether two drill instructors should face court-martial proceedings in the deaths of two recruits, a Fort Jackson, spokesman says.

Sgt. Willie L. Alexander of Timmonsville, S.C., and Sgt. 1st Class Lawrence Chapman Jr. of Pickett, S.C., are charged with involuntary manslaughter, dereliction of duty and maltreatment of two recruits who died of heat stroke shortly after their first day of basic training.

Spokesman Bruce Andrae said two weeks will be needed to transcribe the testimony of the 30 to 35 witnesses who appeared during closed hearings, which began July 20 and ended Friday.

'Dreaded' Fire Ants Control Boll Weevil

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Where man's chemical research has failed in controlling the devastating cotton-boll weevil, the notorious South American fire ant may succeed.

A seven-year testing program conducted by Texas A&M University at the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville showed as many as 85 percent of young boll weevils and 93 percent of bollworms were eliminated by predator fire ants without damage to cotton crops.

"All of this is greatly surprising to us," said Dr. Winfield Sterling of A&M's Entomology Department. "We read for years that the boll weevil has no effective biological control agent. And here, in the fire ant, is a predator we didn't even know about already existing in nature."

"It gives us great hope that the cotton insect pest management program can be developed without

Local URA To Help In Relocations

The Lubbock Urban Renewal Agency approved Tuesday a policy to provide "last resort housing assistance," and designated a committee to review the cases involved.

Under the Uniform Relocation Act, the agency can provide up to $15,000 toward obtaining new housing for the displaced resident.

Upon approval of the new review committee—composed of the agency's executive director, legal counsel and chairman of the board of commissioners, along with the city's community development coordinator—an additional $6,500 would be available for relocation help.

Robert Stack, deputy director of urban renewal, said he did not anticipate use of the new policy in the near future, but the action was taken to make the board aware of the assistance provision.

The board, following up last Thursday's move by the City Council, amended a resolution dealing with the sale of a five-acre tract at 9th Street and Avenue Q.

The council agreed to give Billy Ray Wilder of Henderson a 60-day free option to purchase the land, during which time he hopes to obtain a Holiday Inn franchise. If he wants a four-month option after that, Wilder will have to put up $13,000 in forfeiture money. Total price of the land, part of the Memorial Center acreage, is approximately $455,000.

In other action, the board:

- Authorized a $43,000 contract with the city for water line improvements in the Arnett-Benson area and near Bean Elementary School.
- Authorized purchase of remaining interests in completed construction at 1307 E. Stanford St., and approved advertisement for bids for purchase and completion of the two-bedroom house.
- Authorized eminent domain proceedings against two land parcels in the Arnett-Benson area, although negotiations with the owners may continue.
- Approved a $2,000 supplemental loan to Ignacio Aguero, 4716 Emory St., for improvements to his home, and
- Authorized a change in a demolition contract with J.L. Kuback, so the agreement could be closed.

Foes Criticize One Textbook On Two Sides

AUSTIN (AP) — Can a high school literature textbook be guilty of both "tearing down family and country" and "overemphasizing traditional family roles?"

At least one text proposed for use in Texas public schools has caught criticism from both ends of the spectrum in materials pre-filed for the annual State Textbook Committee hearings that began today.

Two simultaneous hearings on the more than 40 texts will last through Tuesday Critics' objections and the publishers' responses have been pre-filed.

The State Textbook Committee meets Sept. 11 to recommend selections to the State Board of Education, which votes on final textbook adoption Nov. 11.

As in previous years, American history, biology and literature books generated vigorous objections from reviewers.

A Russian short story in a 12th grade literature book elicited disapproval from Mrs. Thomas Snow of Mansfield.

"I do not feel it is wise to encourage sympathy towards our avowed enemies," she wrote of the author's nationality.

Publisher Scott, Foresman & Co. replied:

"The story about a young man soon to enter the army and his last night with his girl friend has universal appeal and does not in any way encourage sympathy for the Russian government."

Other literature selections under attack by various reviewers are works by Ray Bradbury, J. R. Tolkien, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Stephen Crane, Anton Chekhov, Carl Sandburg, Sara Teasdale and the Beatles.

The Texas chapter of the National Organization for Women objected to use of a New York Times 1933 cartoon that used a woman to depict government appropriations for the New Deal.

NOW also charged that a high school industrial arts text was "sexist" because 93 women were included in photos compared to 642 men.

"Each industry that these textbooks provide information on has been and is primarily male-dominated due to the type of work involved," the publisher responded, adding that faked photos would be among the only solutions.

City Man Appointed Abilene Postmaster

R. Jarrell Young of Lubbock has been appointed postmaster at Abilene, it was announced today.

The 44-year-old Lubbock native will replace Clyde Grant, who has served as Abilene's postmaster since 1951.

Young, who will have 25 years of postal service in November, served in several capacities here. They include letter carrier, foreman of mails, tour superintendent, station superintendent and most recently as director of mail processing for the Lubbock Management Section Center, encompassing 91 post offices in the area.

Young and his wife Peggy, who reside at 7405 Toledo Ave., will move to Abilene as soon as they can acquire a home there. Their children, Rodney and Linda, will remain in Lubbock as students at Texas Tech University.

Upon approval of the new review committee—composed of the agency's executive director, legal counsel and chairman of the board of commissioners, along with the city's community development coordinator—an additional $6,500 would be available for relocation help.

Robert Stack, deputy director of urban renewal, said he did not anticipate use of the new policy in the near future, but the action was taken to make the board aware of the assistance provision.

The board, following up last Thursday's move by the City Council, amended a resolution dealing with the sale of a five-acre tract at 9th Street and Avenue Q.

The council agreed to give Billy Ray Wilder of Henderson a 60-day free option to purchase the land, during which time he hopes to obtain a Holiday Inn franchise. If he wants a four-month option after that, Wilder will have to put up $13,000 in forfeiture money. Total price of the land, part of the Memorial Center acreage, is approximately $455,000.

In other action, the board:

- Authorized a $43,000 contract with the city for water line improvements in the Arnett-Benson area and near Bean Elementary School.
- Authorized purchase of remaining interests in completed construction at 1307 E. Stanford St., and approved advertisement for bids for purchase and completion of the two-bedroom house.
- Authorized eminent domain proceedings against two land parcels in the Arnett-Benson area, although negotiations with the owners may continue.
- Approved a $2,000 supplemental loan to Ignacio Aguero, 4716 Emory St., for improvements to his home, and
- Authorized a change in a demolition contract with J.L. Kuback, so the agreement could be closed.

Foes Criticize One Textbook On Two Sides

AUSTIN (AP) — Can a high school literature textbook be guilty of both "tearing down family and country" and "overemphasizing traditional family roles?"

At least one text proposed for use in Texas public schools has caught criticism from both ends of the spectrum in materials pre-filed for the annual State Textbook Committee hearings that began today.

Two simultaneous hearings on the more than 40 texts will last through Tuesday Critics' objections and the publishers' responses have been pre-filed.

The State Textbook Committee meets Sept. 11 to recommend selections to the State Board of Education, which votes on final textbook adoption Nov. 11.

As in previous years, American history, biology and literature books generated vigorous objections from reviewers.

A Russian short story in a 12th grade literature book elicited disapproval from Mrs. Thomas Snow of Mansfield.

"I do not feel it is wise to encourage sympathy towards our avowed enemies," she wrote of the author's nationality.

Publisher Scott, Foresman & Co. replied:

"The story about a young man soon to enter the army and his last night with his girl friend has universal appeal and does not in any way encourage sympathy for the Russian government."

Other literature selections under attack by various reviewers are works by Ray Bradbury, J. R. Tolkien, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Stephen Crane, Anton Chekhov, Carl Sandburg, Sara Teasdale and the Beatles.

The Texas chapter of the National Organization for Women objected to use of a New York Times 1933 cartoon that used a woman to depict government appropriations for the New Deal.

NOW also charged that a high school industrial arts text was "sexist" because 93 women were included in photos compared to 642 men.

"Each industry that these textbooks provide information on has been and is primarily male-dominated due to the type of work involved," the publisher responded, adding that faked photos would be among the only solutions.

City Man Appointed Abilene Postmaster

R. Jarrell Young of Lubbock has been appointed postmaster at Abilene, it was announced today.

The 44-year-old Lubbock native will replace Clyde Grant, who has served as Abilene's postmaster since 1951.

Young, who will have 25 years of postal service in November, served in several capacities here. They include letter carrier, foreman of mails, tour superintendent, station superintendent and most recently as director of mail processing for the Lubbock Management Section Center, encompassing 91 post offices in the area.

Young and his wife Peggy, who reside at 7405 Toledo Ave., will move to Abilene as soon as they can acquire a home there. Their children, Rodney and Linda, will remain in Lubbock as students at Texas Tech University.

Local URA To Help In Relocations

The Lubbock Urban Renewal Agency approved Tuesday a policy to provide "last resort housing assistance," and designated a committee to review the cases involved.

Under the Uniform Relocation Act, the agency can provide up to $15,000 toward obtaining new housing for the displaced resident.

Upon approval of the new review committee—composed of the agency's executive director, legal counsel and chairman of the board of commissioners, along with the city's community development coordinator—an additional $6,500 would be available for relocation help.
