CAIRO (AP) - More than 100,000 cheering Egyptians jubilant over the new prospects for peace with Israel welcomed President Anwar Sadat home Saturday. But in Darnascus, other Arab leaders put the final touches on a "rejectionist" plan

THE NATIONAL Weather Service Saturday dampened hopes of most South Plains farmers whose corn and milo harvest operations have been curtailed by several days of wet weather.

The combination of a shallow layer of cold air over the area combined with moisture moving northwestward from the Gulf of Mexico will continue the threat of rain through tonight, the servicer said. Rain activity should gradually end from the west Monday.

THE LUBBOCK COUNTY Hospital District is losing precious minutes getting emergency medical help to the city's southwest. And the delay could be the difference between life and death for the victim of a heart attack or severe injury. Stuart Haggard, director of the district's Emergency Medical Services, says the population shift toward the southwest and beyond Loop 289 has rendered the pre-nt location of ambulance stations obsolete. It takes two, perhaps three minutes longer for EMS to get to the scene of an accident in the booming southwest than in most other parts of Lubbock, Haggard esti-

"This is a significant difference when you are talking about critical cases," he said.

There is no question that we need to improve our response time by moving a sta-How far westward, Haggard isn't sure. He said he is making an analysis of the problem and possible solutions for presentation soon to the hospital district's board of managers.

The hospital district provides the only emergency ambulance service in Lubbock County. The district staffs three EMS stations in Lubbock and has volunteers manning outlying units at Abernathy, Idalou, Shallowater, Slaton and Wolfforth.

Within Lubbock municipal limits, Station 1 is in rent-free quarters at West Texas Hospital, 1401 9th St.; Station 2 is at the district-owned Health Sciences Center Hospital, 602 Indiana Ave.; and Station 3 is in a rented building at Avenue Q and 48th Haggard said the gap in coverage is obvious: none of the stations is close to the city's growing southwest quadrant. Residential subdivisions outside Loop 289, like Farrar Estates, are particularly remote.

Keeping up with the moving population is a problem being experienced by school and municipal officials, too. Especially analogous to EMS is the Lubbock Fire Department, which soon will start construction of a southwest fire station.

EMS has adjusted its zones of coverage to offset part of the problem, Haggard said. Station 1 continues to handle central and east Lubbock. Besides the northwest, Station 2 now also covers the south side west of Indiana Avenue. Station 3 serves the

Old Fiddlers Launch New Fair Before Strong Opening Crowd

FAIR FEVER hit the Lubbock scene in a big way Saturday as the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair opened to a regular oldtime trades day atmosphere, drawing 39,663 fan through the turnstiles. The 1977 first day total was 38,475. Oldtime fiddles Oldtime fiddlers were swapping licks behind Fair Park Coliseum while the 11th annual fiddlers' contest played off ible for the triumphant ride into Cairo, where he was cheered by tens of thou-

Patriarch of the Saturday competition was an oldtimer from San Angelo who learned his trade in the 1920s when the local music teacher traded violin lessons for her room and board. Bob Kendrick of San Angelo, who took the trophy in 65 years and older division Saturday, was 14 when the teacher came to board, and his father "borrowed an old Sears and Roebuck fiddle from a friend" so he could learn to play.

Charley Pride will be adding his own special sound to the fair today when he takes over the colliseum stage for the eighth time at 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. to open a week of star-studded country and western colliseum shows.

After a round of dance dates — with the 'Wang Wang Blues' and 'Pive-Foot-Two' kind of music in vogue in the Roosing 20s — he got his first long-term fiddling job with a medicine ahow that came to town.

By 1938, with the hill of country fiddle and the rise of swing music, Kendrick played tenor saxophone with a band tour-ing three states and "recording for the RCA Bluebird" label. "Pearl Harbor broke up the band, and

Musical appearances included some for his friend, Harley Sadler — "a wonderful man with a heart of gold" — as guest musician for Sadler tent shows.

With the rise of fiddling in the mid-1960s, he was back with his first love, where the competition was a bit tough because the "kids are so good and getting better."

Fiddler's contest winners in the 65 and over category besides Kendrick were Bill King of Shamrock, second; Staley Alsup of Gustine, third; J.G. Perkins of Austin, fourth, and B.W. Cox of Lockney, fifth. In the zero to 20 class, winners were Rickey Boen of Odessa, first; Wade

City Moving Landfill's Trash Blocking Radar

Avalanche-Journal Staff
SOMETHING AKIN TO BLACKMAIL by the federal government has got city sanitation workers moving mountains at a cost to taxpayers of $200,000.

Federal Aviation Administration officials say a mound of trash and dirt at the city's sanitary landfill is blocking radar coverage of low-flying planes, primarily from Reese Air Force

They gave city officials a choice: transform the 15-foot high mound into a valley or say goodbye to federal funds for future airport expansion. So recently the city council allocated $200,000 of the city's annual revenue sharing allotment to fund the equipment and manpower needed for the project, expected to take several

Progress in the placement of radar sites is one of the causes of the impasse between city and FAA officials.

Jim Chandler, FAA local coordinator, explained radar sites now are situated on the ground and pointed toward the horizon (rather than tower installation) to avoid picking up ears, trains and other objects on the ground and mistaking them for

"We put the radar in a low place and aim just above the horizon," Chandler said. "This is an ideal location, near the elevation of the land," he said of the present radar site.

So the mound, between the radar and Reese, now is higher than the radar site between the Lubbock International Airport and the landfill north of Lubbock.

Chandler said air traffic controllers noticed a gradual change in the coverage of low altitude aircraft as landfill workers transformed a valley into a hill.

Planes flying above Reese at 200 feet formerly could be monitored by radar, Chandler said, but the mound has raised the minimum altitude to 600 feet.

When planes are landing at Reese, controllers have no way of knowing if another plane is flying at a lower altitude in the path of the descending military plane, Chandler said.

Although the main problem is radar coverage at Reese, be said, the radar coverage of smaller airports in the area also has been affected.

Chandler said the FAA notified the city when the landing has been affected.

Chandler said the FAA notified the city when the landfill opened seven years ago that certain elevations could not be exceeded without radar interference.

The city exceeded those elevations by 20 feet in some spots and 10 feet in other parts of the landfill, he said.

"I don't know why they did it," Chandler said.

"We want them to bring it back to the terrain originally out there," he said.

It is the government's contention that because the city exceeded the elevations set out by the FAA, the city should bear the cost of correcting the situation.

Byrd's procedural step, accomplished early in the morning with only two other senators on the floor, will make it harder for ERA opponents to block the legislation from coming to a vote. Earlier this year, the House approved extending the ratification deadline from March 22, 1979, to June 30, 1982. Byrd's maneuver will also enable him to call up the ERA bill as early as Monday, although the senator said he hasn't decided vet on a firm date.

However, Byrd told reporters the way is now clear for Senate consideration of the bill before Congress' scheduled Oct. 14 year-end adjournment. And he said he intends to take it up - thus addressing concerns expressed by some ERA proponents that the Senate might not even con-

Majority Leader Vows To Enact Tax Cuts

er Robert C. Byrd vowed Saturday the Senate will act on a tax cut for the American people this year even if it has to return after the November elections to get the job done.

It is "absolutely imperative that a moderate tax cut be enacted, somewhere in the ballpark of $20 billion to $21 billion," Byrd said.

The West Virginia Democrat said the Senate would not adjourn for the year until it has acted on tax reduction legislation, even if it means coming back after the Nov. 7 congressional elections.

Byrd added that any substantially larger tax cut, such as a tax slash of about one-third of personal tax rates over three years, being advocated by Republicans, would only aggravate inflation.

"I think the American people are pretty well informed on this tax issue," Byrd told reporters. "While they want a tax cut, it must be a reasonable tax cut that will not fuel the fires of inflation which is the most cruel tax of all." The Senate Finance Committee is developing a version of the House-approved $16.3 billion tax reduction bill.

When Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal went before the committee last month, he complained that the House had been much too generous to taxpayers earning $50,000 or more. The House bill would give a tax cut of about $60 to a typical family of four earning $10,000 to $15,000. But the family earning $100,000 to $200,000 would get an average of $1,692. Blumenthal is not talking publicly about what has happened to the bill since the committee set out to better balance the tax reductions. The plan advocated by Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the committee. would give the $10,000-$15,000 family an extra $29, for a total cut of $89, without reducing the tax cut at upper-income levels. In fact, the high-income family would get a cut averaging $2,676.

Long's version, which has a good chance of winning committee approval in the next few days, would result in greater tax cuts for all classes of taxpayers than would the House bill. That, apparently, pleases the Carter administration.

But the tax on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of assets owned a year or longer, is another matter.

Carter denounced the $1 billion net reduction in capital-gains taxes voted by the House as a windfall for millionaires. The Finance Committee bill would triple that cut, to about $3.1 billion a year.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, an independent from Virginia who voted for the cut, cautioned that the committee might be going

"No one should count his chicks before they're hatched," Long said, noting that the compromise capital-gains cut that emerges from Congress next month is is likely to be somewhere between the $1 billion in the House bill and the $3.1 billion in the Senate.

The tax cut bill is probably four weeks away from reaching Carter's desk for his consideration. No matter what else is in the final version, the bill is virtually certain to contain a big cut in capital-gains

The Finance Committee attempted to make the capital-gains cut more palatable to Carter by coupling it with a new "minimum tax" that would limit the ability of high-income investors to avoid federal taxes altogether.

While Blumenthal and his associates at the Treasury Department have avoided making any veto threats to the Finance Committee, it is generally assumed the Carter administration considers a workable "minimum tax" an essential part of any tax bill. And the president does not consider the House proposal workable. A major cut in capital-gains taxes has been an objective of investors and business for 20 years. The movement gained momentum in Congress this year as lawmakers looked for a way to stimulate investment, increase worker productivity and cut inflation.

The Carter administration contends such a tax cut is an inefficient way of spurring investment because nearly half the tax reduction would go to land speculators and others whose activities do little for the general economy, including those who dispose of coins, art and other collections.

Too, a capital-gains tax cut runs counter to President Carter's campaign image as one who would endeavor to close tax 'loopholes" that benefit the wealthy.

Whatever benefits it might have for the economy, a capital-gains cut is sure to benefit mainly the wealthy - because it is mainly the wealthy that make large profitable investments.

In all, only 6 percent of America's taxpayers have capital gains. For most Americans, their only encounter with the capital-gains tax is when they sell their home and don't buy another one.

More than 95 percent of the capitalgains cut voted by the House would go to those with incomes above $50,000 a year. The Senate version earmarks 75 percent for that group.

The figures do not include the effect of a special capital-gains tax break in the House bill for those who sell their homes. The Finance Committee has not yet considered that provision.

Dig Finds Rhinos Still Standing At Water Hole

By JULES LOH

ANTELOPE COUNTY, Neb. (AP) - Once in the long ago a great catastrophe befell certain inhabitants of this planet.

The Great Plains of America were a tropical savannah in those days, where camels and zebras roamed, and beavers as large as bears, herds of rhinoceros. Yes, herds

Because of what Michael Voorhies has found buried in the Nebraska earth, we now know that the rhinoceros, thought always to have been the belligerent loner it is today, was once a herd animal, and we know a great deal more as well.

"It is an important find - a unique find," Voorhies said. "There is much yet to be learned.

We have that ancient catastrophe to thank

It happened 10 million years ago. A volcano erupted, probably in what is now Yellowstone Park. It blasted into the sky a huge cloud of volcanic ash, actually minute glass crystals. The thermals over the Plains caught the volcanic cloud and dumped it, suddenly, upon this section of Nebraska.

"This was a small lake, watering hole," Voorhies said, kieking at the powder-white earth where his digging has exposed a mass of bones, a herd of bones. "This is where animals gathered especially in times of stress."

And there they stand at the watering hole, their complete skeletons preserved in the suddenly smothering volcanic ash.

They face the same direction. The bull rhinoceros is in front. Cows with calves follow. Inside the skeleton of one cow is the skeleton of an unborn calf. Other animals were at the watering hole: horses, camels, turtles.

"We have found no new kinds of animals here," Voorhies said. "What we have found are complete skeletons rather than a bone here and a bone there such as we previously relied on.

"This gives us new details of anatomy that will help us learn the family tree. It gives us information about relationships, clues to habits, so many things un-

"There is some debate, for instance, about when the ancestor of the horse lost its toes. We now have a complete skeleton of a horse with vestigial toes. That's useful information," he said

University of Georgia and re-explore, with a paleontologist's eye, the haunts of his youth.

"One rainy day I was walking up this moraine and saw a bone exposed. I dug. It turned out to be the skull of a baby rhino. I dug some more, and found a foot. I dug more and found enough to know I had a real find on my hands. Then I covered it all up.

That was eight years ago. He spent the next six years raising money, recruiting helpers from among his students. Two years ago he began digging in earnest, using scientifically prescribed methods.

So far he has uncovered about 36 skeletons. They have been removed, the preserving ash atomically dated, the bones studied at the University of Nebraska. Many more remain to be uncovered, but he plans only one more sum-"I will leave a great deal for people smarter than I to do over the next 50

the government's smowcase oil storage facility raged for a third day Saturday, burning thousands of barrels of oil and prompting protests from area residents and Louisiana's governor.

Flames were shooting only about 30 feet above the wellhead Saturday but black smoke curled high above the site, and could be seen for miles. Some crude from the cavern has spilled into nearby Black Lake, but has been contained, said officials at the site. The blowout that set off the fire came

Thursday afternoon as workmen on a drilling rig were changing a casing during a routine workover above cavern No. 6. One man was killed and another seriously The vault, a cavern leached out deep inside a great salt dome, has a capacity of an earthen dike. A Department of Energy spokesman said it would be "two to five days" be-fore the flow stops and the fire is put out.

"A fire like this is one of the things they told us wouldn't happen — but it did," said Gov. Edwin Edwards, adding the state might sue if there was environmental damage: Some residents of the sparsely populat-

"We've been hearing that their safety rocedures weren't too good," said John L. Callahan of Sulphur, a veteran oil field worker. "I guess they just don't have the know-how for what they're doing." But federal officials and workers at the site deny safety procedures were lax.

AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold is soaring. This past week it hit an alltime high of just over $216 an ounce before retreating a bit, and some market-watchers predicted the price of the pre-cious metal could go past the $300-an-ounce mark before too long.

Gold traditionally has been a safe harbor in times of political or economic turmoil, taking the place of stocks, bonds or cash as a storehouse of value. But do uncertainties lie ahead for the precious metal? Some 150 financial analysts gathered in the penthouse dining room of a posh Wall Street-area club a few days ago to go over just these concerns.

"Our very existence is surrounded by innumerable questions with seemingly unknown answers," said Robin A. Plumbridge, deputy chairman of South Africa's Gold Fields group of mining firms.

Among the uncertainties he cited are what production will be in the future and at what cost, whether there will be unrest in South Africa, producer of three-quarters of the West's gold supply, and what Soviet and Western governments' gold sales will amount to.

Even attempting to gauge demand is difficult. Asked one analyst: "Demand is relative, and what's the demand for gold relative to? To industrial use? To specu-

Additionally, governments in the past periodically have outlawed private gold holdings, have imposed taxes on gold and have attempted arbitrarily to fix its value According to Citibank, sales of gold on world markets last year totaled 1,607 metric (2,200-pound) tons at an average price of $148 an ounce.

This year, however, with the price of gold already well above $200, the bank is predicting demand will soar by 9 percent to 1,750 tons while supplies available will hardly grow at all from the 1977 taily.

The situation may grow even tighter in 1979, Citibank said, with the bullion supply growing by under 1 percent while demand gains by 7 percent. The predicted scarcity may drive gold's price up; Citibank's report predicts a $230-$240 an ounce price in 1979, while mutual fund manager John C. Van Eck sees bullion at "over $300 in two years." over $300 in two years."

But would the price rise be checked if governments worldwide were to step up their gold sales? The United States, for instance, is selling nearly 5 million ounces of gold over a 12-month period in a program aimed at bolstering the dollar.

Bullion dealer Henry Jarecki, chairman of Mocatta Metals Corp., pointed out in a recent report that bullion reserves are "in great plenty," with private and government stocks probably "equal to 50 or even more years of current production and probably 75-100 years of current

Top business and economic developments in the past week included:

— The Federal Reserve Board boosted the discount rate from 7% to 8 percent; the federal funds rate apparently was allowed to rise %-point to 6% percent. The discount rate is the Fed's charge on loans to member banks while the fed funds rate is the cost of overnight loans between banks. Both upward moves are evidence of the Fed's desire to use higher interest rates as an economic brake.

— The Gross National Product, the fotal of goods produced and services rendered, increased at a greater-than-expected 8.7 percent annual rate in the second quarter after accounting for inflation. Personal income rose only 0.5 percent last month, however, indicating consumer spending might be slowing.

— United Technologies Corp. said it would like to buy a 49 percent stake in Carrier Corp. for $479 millions and then attempt to negotiate a merger. Experts Brace For Economic Slowdown

NEW YORK (AP) -- Wall Street has been bracing for an economic slowdown for some time now, but the storm has yet

Recent indicators on the behavior of business activity have shown a little less vigor than was evident in the second quarter, when the Gross National Product grew at a rapid 8.7 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation.

But neither have the data signaled the kind of marked slowdown in the economy that many analysts have forecast.

One reason for this, in the view of a number of Wall Streeters, has been the popularity of the six-month floating rate certificates, tied to Treasury bill rates, that banks and savings institutions have been permitted to offer since June 1:

These certificates seem to have helped keep money in relatively good supply for borrowing, even though interest rates have reached lofty levels and appear to be headed still higher. On Friday the Federal Reserve raised the discount rate - the rate it charges on loans to its member commercial banks - from 7 3/4 to 8

"The major development in the economy since last month is the rebound in saving inflows to mortgage lending institutions, resulting from the use of the new floating rate saving certificates," said Gary M. Wenglowski, economist at Goldman, Sachs & Co.

'This should soften the impact of rising interest rates on economic activity over the near term and result in higher housing starts during the next two quarters than we were previously expecting," Wenglowski wrote in the firm's monthly bulletin on the economy.

Despite the pleasant ring to all this, many analysts regard it as something less than an unmitigated blessing. As Wenglowski put it:

"Despite the generally positive effects of the new saving certificates on nearterm economic activity, there is a risk that they could sharpen next year's downturn by allowing a further buildup in already high consumer debt levels dur-ing the next several months." Stock market investors generally may be feeling similar misgivings, to judge by the behavior of prices lately. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 16.11 to 862.44 in the past week, after taking a 29.19-point drop the week before. The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 1.44 to 57.37, and the American Stock Exchange market value index tumbled 6.78 to 167.28. Big Board volume averaged 32.98 million shares a day, against 38.45 million the week before. Late Thursday afternoon, volume for the year to date passed the 5.36 billion mark on the NYSE, breaking the record set in 1976 with more than three months

Since the six-month certificates have kept money in relatively good supply, they worry, the Fed may find itself in the position of having to push interest rates

Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc. Following seven consecutive losing sessions, the stock market turned mixed Thursday and managed to close up slightly after losing more than 50 points in the previous week. Much of the decline was attributed to the continued pessimism over high interest rates and a weak dollar which could trigger a slowdown in the economy.

Analysts are looking for a technical rebound but many are concerned that any rise in stock prices may be short-lived. It is heartening to note, however, that when analysts as a group are looking for one particular thing to happen in the market, it usually doesn't happen. An example of this "contrary thinking" is the rally which occurred last April. More than 65 percent of all analysts surveyed at that time predicted the market would break 700 on the Dow. April saw one of the most explosive rallies in stock market history.

Analysts are increasingly concerned over the high and probably still-rising prime rate and short-term interest rates, which suggest that many of the same problems that plagued the nation during 1974 are with us today. Most analysts still believe that any economic slowdown will be short and will not result in a

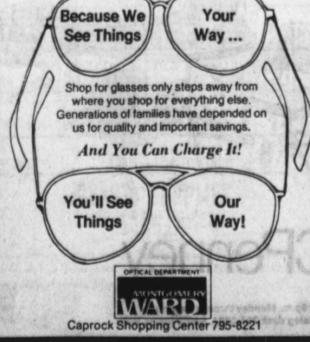

Another worry for market watchers has been the speculative binge in the gambling related stocks. Often such speculation as has been seen in these stocks are an indication of the end of a bull market and the beginning of a slide in equity prices. Market analysts maintain that such speculative excesses usually accompany a cyclical decline in stock prices. Even on the speculation in the gambling stocks, analysts are unable to agree if it is a blow-off in stock prices or merely a fad in one area of the stock market. Many analysts feel that prudent investors will contin to recognize th many values in the equity market and begin to take advantage of them. The Dow Jones Industrial Average lost 16.11 points this week, closing at 862.44. This time promoter Tony Vaccaro is armed with an opinion from Michigan attorney general that his "bloodless bullfight" is legal. And Vaccaro said Friday he assured state officials the bulls would not be harmed. Instead of killing the defeated bull, a crown of roses will be placed on its horns.

"I'll be frank with you, we don't want a bloody mess," Vaccaro said earlier in announcing the spectacle at Detroit's Cobo Arena. "Actually our fights will be demonstrations of the matador's art."

After Vaccaro announced plans for his bullfight, which is part of a Mexican festival, the Michigan Humane Society and state Rep. David Evans sought the legal opinion for the society and the Michigan office of the Fund for Animals.

The attorney general's office declared Friday that a 1931 law covering such events does not prohibit bloodless bullfighting. The decision turned on the definition of the word "baiting," according to Stanley Steinborn, chief assistant attorney general. He pointed out similar problems had arisen over rodeos. Definitions in dictionaries are con-

AUSTIN - Business matters came in for attention at the conventions of both major Texas political parties, with the Democrats and Republicans alike including statements on economic policy in their platforms.

One major difference in the two documents is the stress put by the GOP on "right to work," with the Republican platform stating that "the issue is not unions; it is freedom... to choose whether union membership is in one's own best interest."

The platform goes on to call for inclusion of right-to-work provisions in the Texas Constitution — and to state opposition to "proposed congressional labor law revision" which would give "unions more strength to increase membership" while "applying stiff punitive measures to business.

The Republicans also call for a onethird across-the-board tax cut for "all American taxpayers" and a delay of "at least one year" in both the increase in Social Security taxes and the minimum and wasteful government spending blamed as a major culprit.

In the Democrats' platform, the "spirit of free enterprise and state policies which encourage development" are praised for enabling "most Texans to prosper.

Support is given to "continued state policies which create a good business clithe proposed constitutional amendment on industrial revenue bonds, greater efforts to attract new industry to the state ("particularly to those areas... which have not been part of the recent economic boom") deregulation of oil and gas, reduced utility rates, and improved worker's compensation benefits - along with extension of those benefits, including unemployment benefits, to farm workers.

Also made part of the Democrats' platform, at the request of Sen. Bill Patman of Ganado, is a reaffirmation to an increase in interest rates on loans under

And the platform calls for study of means to reduce utility rates, deregulation of oil and gas, and development of an "ecologically sound" deepwater offshore terminal to accommodate supertankers "and thereby assure a steady sup-ply of raw material for our state's huge etro-chemical industry."

Although officials in the agency are optimistic that a new policy will emerge from the efforts, the policy isn't likely to be in effect until the middle of 1979.

Study Traces High Plains Archaeological Digs

A-J Austin Bureau AUSTIN — Nine High Plains archaeo-

AUSTIN — Nine High Plains archaeological sites, dating from the time of hunters of giant bison some 10,000 years ago to the days of the Comanchero traders of the 18th and 19th centuries, are described in a recently released report of the Texas Historical Commission.

"Archeology at Mackenzie Reservoir," by Jack T, Hughes and Patrick S. Willey, describes the results of the surveys and excavations conducted during the 1973-78 Mackenzie Reservoir Archeological Project in the area inundated through construction of that water supply facility on Tule Creek by Mackenzie Municipal Water Authority.

ter Authority.

Perhaps the major find during the excavations was at the "Rex Rodgers Site" (named for the landowner), where the remains of an extinct species of bison were found along with evidence showing they had been slaughtered by hunters some 9,000 to 10,500 years ago.

Found with the crumbling bones were stone artifacts resembling the implements used by the big-game hunters of that period, although the stone tools, probably projectile points or knives, do not correspond exactly to those identified with Paleo-Indian cultures such as those in Folsom, Clovis and Plainview.

Interestingly the bison bones, at least six bison were killed at the site, rested on top of the remains of an extinct species, the mammoth.

Food Stamp Cash Outlay Rule Ended

Texans participating in the food stamp program soon will no longer spend any of their own money for the coupons.

The Texas Board of Human Resources, Thursday in Amarillo, voted to end the cash outlay requirement for participation in the food stamp program.

Jerome Chapman, commissioner of the Texas Department of Human Resources (DHR), said he hopes to make the non-cash provisions effective Dec. 1, or as soon thereafter, depending on authorization to do so from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) which controls the food stamp program. The program in Texas is administered by DHR.

Chapman said he has been notified by Robert Greenstein, special assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, that authorization is granted to begin eliminating the pruchase requirement dependent upon the issuance of federal guidelines expected in early October. Chapman said that if the guidelines are received on schedule, DHR will end the cash outlay for food stamp mparticipants on Dec. 1.

Eliminating the purchase requirement is one provision of the Food Stamp Act of 1977. Other provisions of the Act will be implemented next year.

When the purchase requirement is eliminated, recipients will receive fewer stamps than they are receiving now. Under current food stamp regulations, participants pay out of their own pockets a specific amount of money depending on their net income. They receive an allotment of food for a great value which is determined by household size. The difference between what recipients pay and what they receive in coupons is called the bonus value of the stamps.

For example, a typical household of four now may be getting $182 a month in food stamps. For this amount, the household pays $58 of its own money, making the bonus value of the coupons $124.

When the purchase requirement is eliminated, the household will receive the $124 in food stamps as the bonus coupons, but will not have paid out the $56.

MEAT PRODUCTION DOWN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Red meat production in August dipped to about 3.27 million pounds, 4 percent below the 3.4 billion pounds of a year earlier, the Agri-

The mammoth bones, the report notes, are earlier than the bison, but "whether the time difference is a few years, centuries, or millennia is unknown."

And while it is known that Paleo-Indian hunters did kill both mammoth and bison, no evidence was found to show that the mammoth bones were related to the activities of prehistoric man.

activities of prehistoric man.

Archaeologists do believe, however, that the bison were herded into a gully and slaughtered rather than being stampeded over a cliff, a hunting technique which was practiced by Indian hunters up to recent times.

And that the bison were killed by man isn't in doubt, the report says.

"At least some of the points found associated with the bison were used to kill them," the report says, "although other implements and handy sandstone boulders may have been used as well."

The animals were then dismembered and "more refined processing" carried out in a nearby area.

On the other end of the long period of occupation and use indicated for the area is the "Sand Pit Site" where artifacts such as iron knives, "fleshers" and glass beads were discovered.

Those materials and a number of gun flints indicate the site was occupied during the last quarter of the 18th century, most likely by the Comanches. The

"white goods" probably came from Comanchero traders out of Santa Fe or French traders living with the Wichita allies of the Comanches at the Spanish fort villages on the Red River.

The report says the special interest of the site "stems in part from the fact that, aside from a few burials, it appears to be the only historic Indian site of the many known to exist in the Texas Panhandle that has thus far been excavated and reported."

Another site, labeled "Deadman's Shelter," produced a number of arrow points, pottery sherds and other bone, stone and shell artifacts, along with a human buri-

Archaeologists believe the site was occupied twice, between 120 and 210 A.D. and again from 465 to 710 A.D.

Because the artifacts found there appear to be similar to those of other sites and have a fairly distinctive character, the report suggests that a culture, tentatively christened the "Palo Duro" complex, can be described, although additional work is needed to define the culture.

One other site of particular interest discussed in the report is the "Sandstone Ledger Site," at which a number of petroglyphs, or rock engravings, were recorded. Some of the engravings resemble simple "stick figures," but no interpretation or dating of them is suggested in the re-

A-J Austin Bureau AUSTIN — John Hill's folks did their homework, and it showed.

By the time Texas Democrats concluded their state convention in Fort Worth, they had given Hill most of what he wanted, and hadn't given him much that he didn't want.

Hill's platform was approved by the platform committee with only minor changes, and when the document reached the floor, approval was given quickly, and without wrangling.

About the only thing which Hill received that he obviously wasn't pleased about was a resolution passed on the floor by 1.942 to 1.311 margin, calling for the right to collective bargaining for pub-

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby almost fielded that one for Hill - holding that the proposal failed on a voice vote.

But demands for a record vote immediately flooded in - and after an hour and a half, Hobby's ruling had been voided.

Hill met with reporters immediately after the vote - looking like a man mentally pulling on gloves to remove a distasteful object which he'd found in the

He hadn't, he noted, included that in the platform which he proposed - and, he said. he didn't approve of the resolution, adding that allowing delegates to act on such matters was in keeping with his promise of an "open" convention.

Hill's disassociation with that resolution obviously doesn't need much explanation, but Republican Party Chairman Ray Barnhart lost no time in trying to tie Hill to that issue Delegates had hardly had a chance to unpack before Barnhart was calling on Hill to veto any legislation supporting collective bargaining for state employees in the "unlikely event" that Hill becomes. governor.

Delegates were far from unaware that GOP gubernatorial hopeful Bill Clements and his friends were lurking about the convention center (metaphorically speaking) in hopes of finding some ammuni-tion which could be used in their cam-

In fact, one of the arguments made against acting on a vaguely-worded resolution on gay rights (without specifically using the term) was that Clements would

Hill's biggest problem appeared to be with some unhappy members of the Ru-ral/Agriculture Caucus, who started to take their fight to the floor - after showing up after the platform committee already had incorporated most of the matters they wanted on the platform.

That discontent appeared to be capitalized on to some extent by the conservatives who were attempting to assert control over the executive committee - but the potential revolt eventually fizzled.

One of the group's leaders said he wasn't sure there was any particular difference between what the farmers wanted and what they got - while at least one West Texas politician retreated from the group's meeting, saying he'd left because

"all they wanted to do was raise hell." Platforms, of course, are at best only broad indications of where parties stand and usually offer even less of a clue as to where a particular candidate stands.

But the 1978 Democratic platform is, to a great extent, the effort of Hill or his supporters, and there's probably not too much Hill - or for that matter, Clements would not support.

For example, the platform comes out against "new or additional state taxes," supports fair property tax administration and tax reform, supports the "tax relief amendment" on the Nov. 7 ballot, attacks inflation as "our nation's worst enemy" (and blames "government waste as a "major cause"), calls for respect for law enforcement officers, supports deregulation of oil and gas prices, urges im-proved health care, and praises free en-terprise, which Clements likely would find acceptable.

But, as the platform notes in its intro-duction, "perhaps only a few of us agree on every statement in the document" on every statement in the document"— and such items as importing water to West Texas, extending the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, creation of a State Human Relations Commission and community-based correctional systems might get some argument from Republicans as well as

What programs and policies might result from pursuit of those stated goals has to remain a matter of speculation.

But, as one observer noted, one of the main reasons for watching political conventions is to help get an idea of what to ask the politicians about a year later.

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) - Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi survived a pressure-packed five-hour battle Saturday then made a key sacrifice before adjournment of game 25 in his world chess match against defending champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union

Korchnoi fell into time trouble after 20 moves, but made a fierce flurry, capped by an impressive counterplay that saw him sacrifice a rook on the 39th move.

"It was a desperate move of Korchnoi in the fourth when he sent his queen to to beat the time," said international master Harry Golombek of England.

Korchnoi held on through a complicated game and sealed his 42nd move, to be played when the match resumes Sunday. He trails the 27-year-old Soviet champion 4 games to 2. The first to win six games is the champion and wins $350,000. The loser gets $200,000. "The game is very dynamic. This is the most original game so far in the match," said Yugoslavian international master Miroslav Radjocic.

After analyzing the adjourned board position, Golombek said "Korchnoi not only can save a draw but find a good line for a win, but basically, I think it's a

Group Says Coal Output Will Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Coal Association predicted Saturday that coal production and use will be lower this year than last.

In a revised forecast issued at the industry group's headquarters here, the NCA said domestic and export use of coal will be 667 million tons, or about 1 percent less than the 1977 level of 673 tons. Coal production was forecast at 650 million tons, or 5.6 percent below last year's 688.6 million tons.

D.W. Buchanan, chairman of the economics committee, said the report takes into account losses due to the United Mine Workers strike during the first three months of the year and the strike against the Norfolk & Western Railway, which began in mid-July.

Board members said they will take the information "under advisement for consideration in" future deliberations.

Mystery Woman Identified

AMARILLO (AP) - A woman found injured on a city street unable to remember her name or her past was identified by police Saturday as a witness in an Oklahoma robbery.

Police identified the woman as Linda Sue Wright, 35, of Tulsa, Okla., who was supposed to be in court last week as a witness against a man accused of robbing her.

Detective Hoyt Hugg said identifica-tion was positive, but he said the woman did not recognize her real name when she was told. Hugg said relatives were en route from Oklahoma to this Texas Panhandle city. They talked to her on the phone, but she did not remember

"A detective in Tulsa recognized her as a witness in a robbery trial. He saw her picture in the newspaper," Hugg said. "The identification is positive, but she still doesn't know that's who she is. She believes us, though.

Miss Wright was found Tuesday night on a traffic island in a busy intersection She had a bump on her head, had lost her purse, and could not remember her name or where she came from. She did recall a few sports scores, such as the Los Angeles Rams victory over the Dallas Cowboys last Sunday, and that she had once attended parochial schools.

Amarillo Police Lt. Derrell Garner said Miss Wright was supposed to have testified Wednesday in the Tulsa robbery trial.

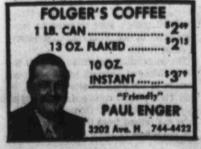

"We're sure about the identification. Everything matches - she even remembers the (Tulsa) detective's phone number," Garner said. "And her mother called and recognized her voice.

Garner said police also found the woman's car a few blocks from where the woman was found Tuesday.

Grand Falls; by night, he'd sing at every nightclub that would hire him. Then in late 1963, country singer Red Sovine wan-dered into the right club on the right night in the right mood. He heard Charley Pride sing, and he was impressed to the point of wanting to help,

You might even say it was at this point a star was born. But there was a lot of time spent in the delivery room.

"Red arranged for me to get a recording session in Nashville in 1964," Pride said. "And then in 1965, they gave me seven songs and said, 'If you can learn these, we'll record them.' I learned them and we had it recorded by the end of the year. The radio stations got the record and started playing it in the first part of 1966. And here I am."

Here he is, indeed. There's a bit more to it than that. In 1966, Pride had his first of many Grammy Awards. He debuted on The Grand Ole Opry in 1967. Since then, he has released 25 albums on the RCA label, a dozen attaining "gold" status with 500,000 units sold. More than one million copies of his recording of "Kiss An Angel Good Morning" were purchased across the country. Awards came tumbling in from the Country Music Association, the Music Operators of America, and the all important Billboard and Cashbox.

Only the hermits and the very, very young are unaware of Pride's status as one of the few black singers recording country and western music. And he has repeatedly scoffed at the use of labels, saying. "I've been known as a Negro country singer, a colored country singer and a black country singer. What I want is to be known is as JUST a country singer." Indeed, so devoted to the country field is Pride that he openly criticizes pop singers like John Denver, Olivia Newton-John and Linda Ronstadt winning coun-

CHARLEY PRIDE

He is of the opinion that if country stations are going to play songs by pop artists, then pop stations should reciprocate and play tunes by so-called country artists. According to Pride, pop deejays just sit back and pass judgment with, "This guy's good, BUT..."

He added, "I don't lose any sleep over the matter, though."

Panhandle South Plains Fair manager Steve Lewis revealed recently that Pride travels with his own opening act. To book Pride, one must book the entire package. Asked about this, Pride said, "The reason? I just think it makes for a better, more dependable show. We all work together and strive to give 1,000 percent at all times... But this will be the last year for Dave & Sugar to open my shows, though. These folks have just gotten too big and they're going to go off on their own. In fact, they're doing their own show in Mobile right now. We'll get together just before the Lubbock date."

And the reason for his consistent popularity in Lubbock?

"That's between the fans and myself," Pride answered. "I kwe what I'm doing. And I'm concerned with them having a good time. It's just that simple."

By the way, Pride hasn't filled away his baseball glove. He's been working out

Police Watch For Escapees

PALO PINTO (AP) - Law officers and volunteers on horseback pressed their search Saturday for three jailbreakers believed hiding in a wooded area along the Brazos River east of this West Central Texas town.

The three fugitives escaped from the Palo Pinto County Jail Thursday, stabbing a relief jailer and clubbing a woman dispatcher.

"Instead of standing back and waiting for them to make a move, we're trying to force them out into the open by thrashing the bushes and making a house-to-house search," said Palo Pinto County Sheriff Ray Patterson.

Patterson said 50 to 75 men were involved in the manhunt, including a posse of about 20 men on horseback, mostly volunteers. Law officers from surround ing areas and troopers from the Depart-ment of Public Safety also joined in the search.

Authorities were using four helicopters and an airplane to criss-cross an area around a ranch eight miles east of Palo Pinto where the trio was spotted in a large barn Friday.

But it was dark, and the jailbreakers were able to flee into a wooded area where they apparently spent the night. The outlaws were armed only with knives when they broke out of jail, but the sheriff said they must be considered armed and dangerous because "guns would be obtainable in the area they are in. There are quite a few residences in the area, and most would have firearms

Authorities believe the mastermind of the escape was Dan Taggart, 18, of Dallas, who was serving only a 30-day sentence on a misdemeanor marijunana conviction. The other fugitives were identified as Michael Bender, 23, and Karol McAtee, 24, both of Mineral Wells.

Bender was accused of burglary, and McAtee was being held on charges of armed robbery. But now the three face charges of attempted capital murder because of the attacks on the two persons when they escaped.

Jailer Jon Hutson was stabbed three times in the back and chest and listed in stable condition in a Palo Pinto hospital. Dispatcher Melinda McCoy, who suffered a concussion as well as knife cuts, ras in satisfactory condition. The trio took Ms. McCoy's car, but abandoned it outside of town when it broke down.

"will be the eyes of the physician," said Dr. Millard Carnrick of the Lubbock-Crosby-Garza County Medical Society.

Thirty EMTs are taking the paramedics course at Lubbock Christian College. Bonnie Jackson, who set up the program, said the rigorous training will give the technicians skills "much more advanced-

The aid an EMT can render is rather limited, explained Carnrick, who heads the medical society's emergency services committee. "They do a terrific job for the skills they have, but an emergency patient often needs something more sophisticated," he said.

south side east of Indiana Avenue Nevertheless, the arrangement still involves "very long distances" in making southside ambulance runs. Haggard said. Compounding the problem of distances is that, unlike the others. Station 3 is not staffed seven days a week. Budget cuts in 1976 forced the station to go on a four-day schedule. One day was restored last year, but Station 3 still is not in operation on Mondays and Tuesdays. The hospital district board, in its 1979 budget, decided to continue Station 3 operations on a five-day basis next year. Consequently, on Mondays and Tuesdays, the other two EMS stations - both in north Lubbock - must cover the entire south side, Haggard said.

Even worse, he said, is when the ambulances must back each other up. For example, if Station 2 is responding to a call in northwest Lubbock, Station 1 may have to go completely across town to answer an emergency in the far southwest area. To have adequate coverage citywide, Haggard does not believe it necessary to increase the number of EMS stations. Stations 1 and 2 should stay where they are, he said, but Station 3 must be moved closer to the southwest. There is no doubt about the need to relocate Station 3. We're in the process now of getting some data together for the board to consider. And we're continuing to pursue efforts to find possible new locations," Haggard said. He is conducting a study of the average EMS response time for each census tract in Lubbock. Although the study is not yet complete, preliminary findings support

Haggard's observations about southwest coverage. The average response time for an EMS city run is about five minutes, Haggard said. But he estimates that it is taking seven minutes or more for EMS to answer a call in some heavily populated parts of the southwest quadrant. If emergency medical technicians arrive much later than five minutes, chances of reviving a "full arrest" patient - one whose breathing and heartbeat have stopped fall off rapidly. At five minutes, for example, there's a 50 percent chance of bringing around a 'full arrest" patient. And it's possible, but not likely, that he won't have brain dam-

But after 10 minutes, few "full arrest" patients can be revived -- and those who are almost invariably suffer extensive brain damage, according to medical experts.

The EMS response time for the volunteer-staffed ambulances outside the City of Lubbock is seven to nine minutes. Both the in-city and rural response times here are considered excellent when compared with other communities, Haggard said. Besides moving Station 3, Haggard said he hopes eventually to staff the station for seven days a week. That decision, he said, will be up to the hospital district board if the extra operational monies can be found. For 1979, EMS will have a $438,861 budget. Collections from patients are expected to total $102,000, and the remainder comes primarily from hospital district taxes.

LONDON (AP) - A flurry of recent Western diplomatic setbacks in southern Africa is expected to bring new black African pressure on America and its allies, probably including stepped-up demands for an oil and trade embargo against white-governed South Africa.

Senior American and British authorities, who asked not to be named, said the pressure is anticipated in response particularly to South African rejection this week of a Western plan to make South-West Africa, or Namibia, independent under black rule.

Before announcing his resignation last week because of ill health, South African Prime Minister John Vorster announced that his nation, which controls the disput-own plan for Namibian independence through elections. South Africa previously had accepted the Western plan.

American, British, French, West German and Canadian pleas to the Vorster government to reconsider were ignored, leading to speculation that the United Nations, where the black Africans are the biggest single geographical bloc, will push for economic sanctions. A key Western diplomat commented:

'The West's strategy for Namibia became a casualty of the tactical struggle by politicians in South Africa maneuvering to succeed Vorster. Now we must await the outcome of that struggle for the succession before we can try again.

Conflict rages across southern Africa from Namibia, on the Atlantic, eastward to Mozambique on the Indian Ocean. In between lies Rhodesia, where an American-British program for resolving its crisis, some diplomats say, faces almost irreparable difficulties.

Carter's remark at a town meeting in this Pittsburgh suburb came in res to a questioner who asked why the PLO was allowed to retain a small informa-

The president responded by saying that many organizations "obnoxious to us" still have the right to free speech in America so long as they don't pose a threat to the nation's security.

"There are many groups like this that cause us concern — the Ku Klux Klan, the Communist Party, the Nazis," Carter said, adding: "It would be nice for us if they would just go away."

The PLO is recognized by most Arab governments as the sole representative of the Palestinian people. The PLO last April opened an information office in Washington despite State Department objections. At the time, a spokesman for the PLO denied it was "a lobbying office." Hatim Husseini, a Palestinian citizen of Jordan, said "we are simply an information office.

Within several weeks of the office's opening, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith called on the State Department to close it. The PLO maintains an office in New York as part of its observer's status at the United Nations.

At the town meeting earlier, the president said that unless the Palestinians and Jordan's King Hussein join Mideast peace talks, "the progress we can make will be limited."

But Carter, addressing some 900 per-sons at a high school, said Egypt's Presi-dent Anwar Sadat pledged to him in writ-ing to continue negotiations on the status of the Palestinians and the West Bank

Carter said he hopes that a self-govern-ing Palestinian authority on the West Bank can be set up in the next two or three months, as soon as Egypt and Israel conclude the peace treaty they commit-ted themselves to at the Camp David summit.

The president passed up a chance to spend a quiet veekend at the White House to make a new round of political appearances that began Friday. While visiting here, Carter was scheduled to attend a fund-raiser for congressional candidate Gene Atkinson.

Earlier at Pittsburgh airport, Carter said he had no immediate reaction to a report that Hussein had canceled a trip to

At the town meeting, Carter said he be-lieves Sadat will carry the peace process even forward even without's Hussein's released by the White House on Friday, constitutes a written pledge to continue bargaining with Israel on the Palestinian and West Bank questions.

Sadat's exact words were that he is prepared to "assume the Arab role" after consultations with Palestinians and Jordan concerning the West Bank.

Carter said Sadat "pledged to me in writing, in a letter released yesterday, that in the absence of cooperation or participation by King Hussein, he himself will continue to negotiate not just on the Sinai ... but also will continue negotiations the West Bank and Gaza Strip area."

"I believe we are making great strides" in the Middle East, Carter said. "I be-lieve we can do even more in the future when all the negotiating parties are ready when all the negotiating parties are ready to sit down and take advantage of the wonderful door that has now been opened because of the Camp David

TO FACILITATE RESEARCH - Dr. Jane Geders, left, assistant professor of foods and nutrition in the College of Home Economics, shows the food testing kitchen of the new Food Science-Home Economics building to graduate students Debi Buchanan, center, and Julie Trevino. In this area, consumer acceptance of various foods and food preparation techniques will be studied by researchers in the college.

WITH FOOD IN MIND — Dr. Helen Brittin, right, assistant professor of foods and nutrition at Texas Tech University, works with Debi Buchanan, a graduate student in the College of Home Economics, at one of the testing ovens which are part of the laboratory equipment of the new Food Science-Home Economics complex. Research in food science will include many facets of food preparation, nutrition and consumer acceptance of food preparation techniques.

Home Ec Increases Research Potential With New Building

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor
Dedication ceremonies at Texas Tech University Oct. 4 will mark the official opening of the newest facility of the College of Home Economics.
The event will place Tech in the front ranks of American colleges and universities in home economics education, training and research, with facilities second to none in the nation, according to Dr. Donald S. Longworth, dean of the college

The official dedication will begin with a luncheon in the ballroom of the University Center. Dedication ceremonies will start at 2 p.m. in the auditorium of the new building, presided over by Dr. Cetil Mackey, president of Tech.

Dr. Mary Ann Kight, of the human nutrition and dietetics programs at the University of Arizona at Tuscon, will speak during the dedication ceremonies for the new facility, a large area of which will be devoted to food science re-

The new food science-home economics building, designated "phase two" of the expansion and renovation of the college's facility, will add 77,000 square feet

The addition is a six-story tower between the Tech bookstore and the existing home economics building, to which it is linked by walkways and porches, and its architectural style conforms to the prevailing style of campus buildings. In addition to new suites of offices and modern classrooms, it contains laboratories and test kitchens for many kinds of research, a resource center and a distribution center for instructional materials.

Dean Longworth said the distribution center supplies materials of interest to the public, mostly through public school teachers, throughout the country. These materials, which are supplied by the college at cost, are an important means of disseminating consumer information and of educating the public, a primary goal of the college.

The home economics addition was designed by C. Berwyn Tisdel of Tisdel & Adling Architects and contracted by Morris Turner at a cost of $3,911,400, which included improvements to the existing building. Tisdel said that approximately 20 energy-saving features were incorporated into the design, for an estimated reduction in energy consumption of 15 to 20 percent.

Office suites and lounges in the new building are furnished in restful earth-tones, and laboratories and test kitchens provide large, cheerful and efficient working areas. Longworth noted that not all of the laboratories are fully equipped, and await future funding of research projects.

The graduate program in Tech's College of Home Economics, which was recently approved by the Board of Regents, is unusual in that it grants advanced degrees. Longworth said that more commonly, degrees are granted by other divisions of universities with emphasis in a home economics area.

Longworth said students at Tech can work toward advanced degrees in the areas of food and nutrition, home and family life and home economics education. The graduate degree program in clothing and textiles has been approved but not yet enacted.

Approximately 50 research projects are already in progress in the college under private, federal, state and university grants totalling more than $1.7 million. Longworth said the outstanding facilities of the new building and the excellent faculty are attractive incentives for bringing more faculty and research funding

Among currently conducted research projects which have implications beyond the university community are "Quality Housing Environment for Low-Income Families" and "Home Management and Housing for the Disabled and Aging." Through these and other projects, the dean noted, many lives are touched by research in home economics Research is also being conducted in cooperation with other areas of the university, including biology and engineering, which will benefit the public. Dr. Jane Coulter, associate dean for research, is coordinating ongoing research in such areas as acceptance of foods by consumers, lipids, consumer reaction to microwave cooking and many other aspects of diet and nutrition.

A major use of the new building, Longworth pointed out, will be for food science, and it has been equipped with test kitchens, laboratories and other facilities designed to encourage and facilitate these activities.

Especially interesting are the tasting area, where consumer reactions to various foods will be tested, and food processing units in which many kinds of ex-periments with food can be conducted. Safety features, such as high-pressure showers, have been incorporated into the design of the building to give researchers protection from accidents.

With the interest and support of a food science program by the Tech board of regents, the food industry of West Texas and a strong cadre of profession the potential (for food science research and teaching) seems to be unlimited,"

Dr. Cecil Mackey noted with pride the history of home economics education at Tech and the potential for service of the new facility.

"Texas Tech University has a history of educating students to help solve the social problems of society," he said. "While researchers at Tech have already made noteworthy contributions to the field of food and nutrition, I am pleased that the addition of better facilities in the College of Home Economics will permit us to contribute even more to efforts to help feed the people of the world."

The public is invited to attend the luncheon and dedication of the new building. Tickets to the luncheon can be obtained through Dean Longworth's office.

Open house will be held in the new building following the dedication ceremo-

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter, Debbie, has been living in New York for a year. (We live in California.) Debbie is a sensible, educated, single woman who has an excellent position. She's told us that she's romantically involved with John, a 33-year-old professional man. She says he is an outstanding person with fine malities. They are not engaged, but he's he first man she's ever been serious about. Our only objection to this match is that John is not of our religion.

Debbie phoned to tell us that John's mother called her from Portland, Ore., and offered to pay her air fare there for the weekend to meet John's father, who is dying of cancer. They've never met Debbie, but have spoken to her on the phone often. John's mother said she felt that her husband would die happier knowing that his only son was going with lovely girl.

Because my husband and I disapprove of our daughter's involvement with a man not of our faith, we told Debbie that we did not want her to go to Portland. Do

(48) THE POWER

GEM

OF JADE The power of jade led Chinese emperor to offer 15 cities in exchange for a small jade carving. The mystique of jade inspired men to speak through it to their gods. The magic of jade gave men the persistence to spend years carving a single object from it. What is jade? Jade is actually two different stones, jadeite and nephrite. Jadeite is a silicate of aluminuim; nephrite is a silicate of magnesium. Jadeite is the more fragile of the two but takes a higher polish.

Jade has probably been carved into more fascinating shapes and images than any other gemstone. Over the centuries it has taken the form of vases and urns, dragons and lions, bowls and tools, bracelets and beads, and the list goes on. For ages the Chinese have held a great reverence for the stone, fashioning it into spiritual and magical symbols, believing it held the power to influence their lives. Oddly enough, there is little evidence that jade has ever been found in China its... For over 2000 years China's chief source of nephrite has been the Khotan-Yarkand area in what is now Chinese Turkestan. Burma is the chief source of jadeite. The Chinese venerated nephrite long before they had ever seen jadeite. The Burmese material began to filter into the country in the 18th century.

Jade's magic has since infected the entire globe. It is seen on the shelves of collectors, on the wrists of well-dressed women, and on the fingers of m women of all ages.

NEW YORK (WNS) - Mary S. bought a bottle of hair dye from her neighborhood drug store. She put it away for later use. But a news broadcast that night gave her misgivings

It reported that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) was considering placing warnings on some hair dyes because one commonly used substance had been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals. Mary found the substances listed on her hair dye pack-

What were those test results that the FDA had found so convincing, she wondered. She wrote to the FDA, requesting the results. Several weeks later the information arrived.

Mary is not alone in wanting information from the FDA. More than 25,000 requests were logged last year. William Jackson, FDA deputy of acquisition, estimates that this year's total will swell to

The FDA's job is to set standards for the protection of the public. The agency determines how dangerous a drug, food, cosmetic or biological device is. FDA experts weigh the risks involved in leaving the item on the market or in approving a new product for saleh.

Says Jackson. "Very few things that touch the public aren't regulated by the FDA. From the disposal of waste to television radiation to human blood." all fall under the FDA's jurisdiction.

The FDA annually rides herd on some 60.000 cosmetics and more than $130 billion worth of food and drugs. Thus masses of information are filed away behind its doors. Until the Freedom of Information Act Amendments of 1974, very little of it was released

Once a most secretive government agency, the FDA opens many of its files to the public Since 1975, 98 percent of requests for information have been granted, and 90 percent of the files have been

'But it's not as if the remaining 10 per cent is locked away out of sight," Jack son says. The agency selectively edits out material from files that deal with such areas as trade secrets, experimental drugs and current investigations. The re maining material is available to the publ

"Let's say you are allergic to a certain ingredient found in drug tablets," Jack

"If you request the list of ingredients found in a particular tablet, and that certain ingredient is not an active ingredient but acts as a binder, holding the tablet together - then the manufacturer is not required to divulge that information and we must protect it as a trade secret.

"In a case like that, we recommend that the person write the manufacturer for the information, explaining why he or she needs to know. Another example Jackson cities is a request for the manufacturer's name when only the distributor is listed on the label. This commercial information is protested: the FDA connot release it. Who requests information these days?

Industry and those in the informationrequesting business make up 70 percent of the requesters. Lawyers fall in at 11 percent; the general public, 8 percent public interest organizations, 4 percent; the press, 3 percent and other sources, 4

Jackson says the public's interest appears to center around "how good or how bad a particicular product or substance

What kind of information is available? Categories of disclosure include food standards and additives, color additives acceptable levels for human use, drug establishment regulations over the count er drug information, new drug investigations and information on cosmetics and electronic products.

Available upon request are: adverse reactions to drugs (the names of doctors and patients are kept confidential); correspondence on drug labeling and advertising from company officials, operating manuals; summarized test data; all FDA research results and information on the safety and efficacy of many products.

The FDA also distributes weekly calenders of public meetings, periodically published reports summarizing judgments and court orders handed down through the agency

Such a summary might contain, for example, the recall order for a certain product or a suit filed against a company for violation of the Food. Drug and Cosmetic

Mouth Guards May

Reduce Injuries

NEW YORK (UPI) - Parents of children who play contact sports should consider custom-fitted mouth guards to protect the mouth and teeth, says Dr. M. David Issak.

The guards can cost as little as $25, Issak said. He is founder and director of The Denture Center. If a tooth is lost in an accident on the laying field or elsewhere, Issak sug-

- Wrap it in a wet cloth. Do not wash it or handle it more than necessary - Do not try to stick the tooth back in ourself. Re-implantation is often possi-le but requires a dentist's training.

"The more specific you are in your request, the better," Jackson says. "Some people write for all the materials we have on saccharin. You would need a fleet of trucks to haul out that much material."

If you're not sure exactly what information you need, ask for guidance. The FDA can recommend what documents with the first half-hour free. Jackson says that if the requested material's cost falls under $5, no fee is charged. From $5 to $25, the material is mailed and a bill is sent. For more than $25, the FDA will request payment first. One organization requested more than 100,000 pages resulting in nearly $60,000 in charges. This basic procedure for handling information requests is the same for all federal agencies under the Freedom of Information (FOI) Act. The agency has 10 days in which to grant or refuse requests. If the FDA refuses, you may appeal to the agency's director, who has 20 days to decide on the appeal.

If the director refuses, your only recourse is through the courts. You must bring suit against the agency for a possible violation of the FOI Act. Despite all this, the FDA is far from

Part of the problem lies in the size of the agency versus its responsibility - only 7,500 employees oversee tens of thousands of products. No one works on FOI requests full time.

Today many hospitals are opening the door to men, and family life can begin in the delivery room. One factor in the increase of men's participation in childbirth is an organization called Childbirth With Preparation, whose purpose is to provide expectant parents with information and techniques to make childbirth a rewarding experi-

Once childbirth was surrounded by myths and horror stories that kept the delivery room strictly 'off limits' to hus-

cation for the mother. The method, often labeled the 'Lamaze' method, is based on the concept that tenseness experienced during childbirth cuts off the amount of oxygen sent to the brain, she said. This deficiency then triggers more pain and the result is usually a need for medication.

"With body relaxation techniques, more oxygen reaches the brain, which allows the woman to maintain a higher level of energy for the hard-working uterus," explained Mrs. Romines. Breathing and panting at the beginning of a contraction also helps to offset the pain, and focal points in the room help distract the woman from pain.

Couples enrolled in Childbirth With Preparation classes are asked to practice the breathing and relaxation method for six to eight weeks before delivery, she said, so that breathing and relaxation techniques can become conditioned res-

"The mind sets up temporary nerve pathways that tell the woman to respond to a contraction with relaxation rather than muscle tension," noted Mrs. Rom-relaxation as a reflex reaction varies.

"The woman who practices 30 minutes a day is no better off than the woman who practices ten minutes," explained Dr. Rosemary Cogan, a psychologist at Texas Tech University. Even in the case of premature deliveries, the woman has been successfully coached through labor been successfully coached through labor even though she has not practiced the techniques long enough to establish a conditioned response.

While the importance of practicing the method has not been proven, the labor coach is essential during childbirth. Without the labor coach, a role often filled by the husband, the woman is more likely to demand medication.

"The woman is totally dependent on the coach because he's the one who keeps her in control throughout labor," explained Mrs. Romines.

important during the delivery. He is usually the person who can help the woman through a dificult contraction as well as use massages and hot and cold packs to relieve many of the side effects associated with labor, Mrs. Romines

But although the husband is important in the delivery room, he often views the experience from a different perspective,

Dr. Cogan said.
"Studies indicate that often when the woman is in the least amount of pain, the husband believes she is in the most difficult part of labor," explained Dr. Cogan.
The importance of the husband's participation in childbirth extends far beyond the delivery room, because the husband who begins fulfilling his role as a father at the delivery is often more involved with the family later, explained the method, and social attitudes surrounding childbirth are changing.

"The husband is beginning to feel like he is needed in the delivery room," explained Dr. Cogan. The idea that childbirth is such a horrible experience that husband cannot see their wives in agony is changing now, noted Mrs. Romines.

One reason the method is becoming widely accepted is its appeal to people from diverse backgrounds. Husbands are often leery at first, but at least 90 percent

Job-Seeking Women Get 'Bits Of Advice'

By DOROTHY MARKS WASHINGTON (WNS) - Should a woman over 50 seeking to enter - or reenter - the job market lie about her age?

Indeed ves. says author and family counselor Adele Nudel, if that is what it takes to get the job. A woman should also finesse questions about her educational background, if that is sketchy, and concentrate instead on her health and special

This is just on a hundred bits of advice Nudel has included in her book, "For the Woman Over Fifty - A Practical Guide for a Full and Vital Life" (Taplinger Press. $12.50.) a breezy, informal 436page manual replete with case histories aimed at women on the wintry side of 50 in every social and economic stratum.

No subject is too daunting for Nudel to meet head on. She may have left out some problems or options facing older women looking for work, but they do not come readily to mind.

Older women, frequently alone, have become almost invisible in our society but, fortunately, now are beginning to assert themselves, she says.

As for the older woman who lies about her age and gets the job, "she can level with her employer when she has proved herself. She will still have to tell the truth when she gets ready to retire.

Lawvers have told her, she says, employers have no legal redress against emplovees who fib about their age. She recommends telling the truth and nothing but the truth, though, when applying for a government job where sworn statements are required along with transcripts

Many older women who need to work Depression years and left high school without pursuing a college degree. That doesn't ruin their chances of employ-

For many jobs in many private businesses, employers won't even ask about that high school diploma. Nudel counsels. Her guidebook-directory explores problems in health, sex, marriage, divorce, widowhood, sexual relationships outside marriage, problems of aging parents, the child who won't leave home, and finally, retirement.

She tells women to fight the ravages of aging on all fronts and has her own breezy litany of how to look and dress younger than one's years. For those who can afford it, she recommends cell thera-

Female Bank Staff Increases Business

NEW YORK (AP) - Since the four Westchester offices of Barclays Bank of New York have been staffed entirely by women, business in those offices has doubled, reports John Whicker, president of the bank.

"Since our staff has been all female," says Sandra Ross, manager of the bank's office in Yorktown Heights, "turnover of personnel has been reduced dramatically, absenteeism has been curtailed and morale in terms of upward mobility opportunities has been greatly rein-py, facelifts, even procaine (which the Food & Drug Administration hasn't approved for sale in this country yet) even though she admits that all these measures can raise the anxiety level of a woman already traumatized by the fact

She recommends that women seek support groups, if not in structured therapy sessions, at least by meeting together in someone's living room and thashing out their options.

For women widowed, divorced or just alone who want sex (not wanting it is an equally valid option, she points out) she tells them how to make themselves physically available to men and urges them to explore the varieties of relationships women over 50 are seeking outside of marriage

She discusses the problems of aging men. too, and suggests sexual experimentation - and, in some cases, the use of sex manuals for older couples.

And she treats upon a relatively new phenomenon, the pairing of the older woman and younger man. It is a subject about which Mrs. Nudel can speak with some authority. After a bad marriage and going back to college for a degree in social work and a career in counseling the aging. Mrs. Nudel met and married a man 10 years her junior.

That was 11 years ago and everything is still great, she says, "because we are not in a role-defined marriage. My husband is of a younger generation and has different expectations of marriage.

We are both social workers and when we come home from our jobs we both cook and wash the dishes. If I had married an older man, he would expect dinner on the table every night and that I would take care of all his personal needs. My David doesn't expect that

Billy defended Carolee when the Powerses and Steve blamed her when Greta developed an infection. Nola and Colin shared their sexual miseries and left The Medicine Man together.

EDGE OF NIGHT: Deborah was suspended. She investigated a possible wife beating. The husband fell to his death, and the wife later stalked Deborah. April had nightmares about Raven's accusations, then flew the coop. Winter pushed Logan for a quick wedding, but admitted there is much he doesn't know about her past. Raven was warned by Kevin not to tip off the police that April is missing. FOR RICHER, FOR POORER: Roy fretted for Connie after Bill jolted her memory with the truth of her past deeds and his love for Megan. George learned he's infertile. Lee lost his job. Frank squired Tessa and Chris tested her paralysis. Laurie joined Jason in New York and Desmond followed.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Gary cried on Susan's shoulder about taking a back seat to Gina's career success. Scotty and Rick retrieved Laura from Fish and his gang and returned her to Port Charles, where Lesley insisted she'll protect Laura even if it means remaining in jail. Despite Peter's objections. Diana insisted on undergoing a dangerous operation to regain her sight. Jeff agreed to see Cal Jamison after the operation. Tracy took a shine to Howard. Bobbi laid into Scotty for her over-protectiveness of Laura. Dr. Todd Levine was brought in on Diana's

GUIDING LIGHT: Mike arm-twisted Dean's Madrid witness, Ramon, to return to Springfield and admit he'd been bribed to accuse Elizabeth of wild living. Roger told Rita that Ed wasn't man enough for her, while she accused Roger of using Hillary to prove his virility. Hillary blamed herself when Roger didn't respond sexually. Holly realized that there might be a chance for her and Ed again if he doesn't vacation with Rita. Alan grew fonder of Jackie but was irked by her sympathy toward Elizabeth. Amanda drooled while secretly gazing upon Ben's shirtless torso.

LOVE OF LIFE: Van agreed to a nostrings weekend with Andrew after giving up hope for Bruce. Zachary made a play for Lynn. Arlene and Ray advised Bambi not to marry a guy named Al. Andy conned Mary to consider hocking a sapphire and diamond ring he acquired. Kenter is a figment of Andy's imagina-

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Will and Pam announced their engagement. Jenny resisted the advances of an author and also rebuffed Brad, who was offered an illegal ob by one of his ex-cellmates. Karen didn't tell Larry she was in Phoenix and when he didn't confess about meeting Cathy, Karen took a bottle of pills. Paul called Dorian names when he learned she had set up Karen. Adam hired Alister Hughes to trail Pat and to also investigate Edwina's background. Jack noticed that Carla was jealous of his girlfriend, Lila. Larry and Cathy had decided to go separate ways. Richard refused Dorian's offer to hold his and Becky's wedding at Llanfair to impress Gwendolyn.

RYAN'S HOPE: Jack succeeded in retrieving Shiobhan's joke press release about Frank having an affair with Rae. Shiobhan used her womanly charms on the lone hold-out, Wes Leonard, to convince him not to publish it. In her delirithe Senate primary.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Janet turned over most of her stock to Gary and Lisa, who were still on the outs over Steve's death. Kylie turned down Tom's suggestion that they live together. Laine became Liza's roommate. Donna suspected that Chance caused David's accident when she found Chance sneaking into David's hospital room. Scott refused to tell John why his attitude toward David and Kathy changed, then Scott insisted on hiring another lawyer.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Kay decided to take a positive outlook, thanks to Brock's inspiration. Scott proved to Nikki that she has other assets than her body. Casey admitted to Snap-per that she hates men because of her womanizer father. Snapper realized his feelings for Casey, just as Chris returned home. Stu felt guilty about missing Liz's

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D.

If you would like to add some brightness to a room, you might want to consider some furnishings in yellows. Yellow is the color of sunshine and that color can bring some sunshine to your home. On the other hand, if you want to make a room seem quieter or more relaxed try some blues or greens If you want to add some warmth and excitement to an area, you might consider some oranges and reds. There are many things that the mere choice of color can do for you. Two identical pieces of furniture that are the same except for color can bring different moods and qualities to a room. Don't overlook the fact, however, that a color is affected by the color it is next to, so be sure to use a color in relation to that to which it will be adjacent.

And, there are other considerations, too. For example, pale colors on things can make a room seem bigger since pale colors recede and give a feeling of more space, while dark colors come toward you and make an area seem smaller or more intimate.

Program Emphasizes Parent-Child Communication

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT

Family News Staff
Puberty and adolescence are frequently times of difficulty for parents and their children. Young parents might worsy about how to handle the discussion of sex (when the subject comes to the child's attention in the form of questions or incidents which need explaining).

"Growing Together," a new program offered by the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA), might help open communication lines between parents and children during this stress-filled period of growth.

Dr. Greg Brock and Dr. Jeanette Cou-fal, a husband-and-wife team from the department of family life at Texas Tech University, will present a lec-ture/discussion series for children 9-to 12-years-old and their parents. There will be a 'Mother-Daughter' session Oct. 3 to 24, and a 'Father-Son' session, Oct. 31 to Nov. 28. The sessions will be 7:30-9 p.m.

The program format includes presentation of films, providing basic information, offering examples of other resources like books and pamphlets and group discussion. Topics to be covered include bodily changes, reproduction, menstruation and sexual values and attitudes. There will also be sessions of general discussion

The goal of the program is to encourage open discussion in the home, not to take over the role of the parent in sex education, said Dr. Coufal.

Parents might not know how to approach their children with the subject of sex or they might feel they do not know enough themselves to explain the process, and for that reason, many might try to ignore the topic altogether, she said. When this occurs, the child will gain this information elsewhere, generally from the media and peers, but his concept may be riddled with misconceptions, she said, and furthermore, the information the child receives may not be the information the parents wish him to know.

Pre-adolescent children were chosen for this group because, according to Dr. Coufal, this age group is more interested in doing things with their parents; once they reach adolescence, children tend to withdraw from their parents and become more interested in peer activities. Also, she added, this is the age at which good communication skills can be more easily developed between the parent and child if those skills do not already exist

The parent of the same sex (motherdaughter, father-son) will be present during the class to audit the material givenand to become familiar with the material for future reference so that he or she can continue sexual discussions privately with the child.

Essentially, the parent may be trying to prevent possible problems in the future by getting the facts straight about sex, lding trust so that the child will come

MUNCH A MUSHROOM

Munch a mushroom and you're in good company! The Egyptain pharaohs discovered them: the ancient Greeks, Romans and kings and queens of Europe enjoyed them. Some mushroom tips: Buy lightcolored, moist mushrooms and refrigerate but not in plastic. Never peel mushrooms or they'll lose flavor and nutritive to the parent with problems, and explaining and teaching the social values and sexual attitudes by which he wishes the child to abide, Dr. Coufal said.

The program cau also be important to the child's understanding of himself and his world, because, according to Dr. Coufal, these children may be at the point in their development where they are aware of their bodies and self-conscious about any changes, even though they might not understand those changes.

In order to help the child understand life is passed on from parent to child, how a baby is born, how children grow up and how the body changes from child-hood to adolescence."

School Time Difficult For Learning Disabled

Zesty Flavors Blend Smoothly In 'End-Of-Summer' Barbeque

Women's News Service

Gear up your grill, ready your range, or prepare your pit. It's still barbecue time - an excuse to corral a group of friends, herd a wandering family together, and marshal your outdoor cookery skills for an end-of-summer bash as great as the state of Texas.

Beef up appetites with succulent beef ribs sagely brushed with a daring combination of tomato, chili and cranberry flavors. You'll find it hard to believe that the cranberry — one of three native American fruits (Concord grapes and blueberries are the others) - was once eaten on long ocean voyages or westward trails chiefly to prevent scurvy.

RODEO RIBS WITH COWPUNCH SAUCE: Season 12 pounds meaty beef rib bones or short ribs with salt and pepper, then rub with pressed garlic. Let stand while coals on outdoor grill burn down to gray. Grill ribs an hour, turning frequently to prevent charring.

In a bowl, combine 1 can (29 ounces) tomato puree, 1 tablespoon chili powder, a 4-ounce can sweet green chilies, drained and minced, an 8-ounce can whole-berry cranberry sauce, 1 cup water and salt and pepper to taste. Blend well, then brush ribs with mixture on one side. Grill sauce-side down 10 minutes. Brush other side with sauce, turning and grilling 10 minutes more. Serve remaining sauce (heated) with ribs. Accompany with barely cooked corn on the cob or baked potatoes, stuffed baked onions, herbed green beans, zucchini and sauteed onions or other seasonal vegetables and a green salad with avocado, cucumber, onion and orange slices. Hot homemade biscuits are a must. Serves six to eight.

Boneless beef shoulder steak takes to baked beans like a cowboy to his horse, of course.

GRILLED MARINATED LONDON BROIL: In a large shallow glass dish, combine one-half cup dark corn syrup, one-quarter cup soy sauce, 2 tablespoons cider vinegar or dry white wine, 2 tablespoons grated fresh ginger root or 2 teaspoons ground ginger and 4 cloves pressed garlic. Put a three-pound shoulder steak in this mixture, turning several times. Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight, turning several times to marinate evenly

Grill on glowing coals, basting frequently with marinade, to desired doneness (test at 8 minutes on each side). To serve, slice thinly across the grain diagonally Serves six to eight

EASY BREEZY BEANS RANCHER-O: For 12 servings, heat 2 tablespoons corn oil in a skillet. Add 4 large sliced onions, 1 cup dark corn syrup, one-half cup cider vinegar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, and 2 pressed garlic cloves. Bring to a boil, cover, reduce heat and simmer 20

In a three-quart casserole, combine onion mixture with 2 one-pound cans, drained, cooked pinto beans, one 28-ounce can undrained New England-style baked beans, a 20-ounce can drained cooked chick peas, and one-pound can drained kidney beans. Stir in 3 table-spoons tomato ketchup, then bake, cov-ered, for half an hour at 350 degrees. Uncover and bake an hour longer. Serve with barely steamed minted carrot round(up) or a melange of grilled zucchini, green pepper, onion, eggplant and tomato wedges, brushed with oil, salt and basil. Begin with cranberry juice and serve toasted Syrian bread. For dessert, fresh pineapple and melon, laced with fresh lime.

Barbecuing lamb? Don't let your creativity go up in smoke: lamb should be cooked to a slightly pink stage. And to point up this meat's delicate flavor there's a range of mixtures to paint onto Garlic, soy sauce, sherry, honey, ginger and salt.

Polish or French prepared mustard, garlic, sauterne, basil, coarse salt and lots of freshly ground black pepper.
Minced onion, burgundy, Worcestershire sauce, thyme, marjoram, oregano and olive oil

Lemon juice, olive oil, garlic and basil or rosemary.

Pineapple juice or crushed pineapple, soy sauce, brown sugar and tomato sauce. Add snipped parsley, garlic and a little corn oil.

Similar marinades or brush-ons work wonders with poultry or pork spare ribs.

For the individual in whose life religion already fills a need, a specialized aspect of religion may provide an answer to a mental health question.

Many persons turn to their clergyman, a source of strength and advice long-accepted as a valid person to whom the troubled could turn. A new trend is developing, however, one in which the role of counselor-'help-giver' has become even more specialized.

"Studies show that people turn to a pastoral counselor because they are aware of a spiritual dimension to their 'problem," said Dr. Hardy Clemons, minister of Second Baptist Church of Lubbock. "Deep down they seem to be saying. 'I need a spiritual wholeness I don't have now."

He said most persons know their pastor better than they might know a professional counselor, and often their pastor is more available to them (the 'waiting time' might not be quite as long).

Certain areas lend themselves to counseling by a pastor, Clemons pointed out, including those of grief and guilt.

"Sometimes a pastoral counselor can help the person deal more readily with a problem, especially if the problem is spiritually based rather than emotionally based," Clemons said. "The pastoral counselor has Christian resources he can bring to bear on the case, especially where the problem of 'sin' or 'guilt' is concerned.

He was quick to point out that when an individual seeks out his help, there are limits to what he can do for that per-

"If someone is emotionally ill, and I realize what they need is psychological or psychiatric therapy, I refer-them to those persons who can provide the needed resources," he said.

Clemons said that some ministers choose to specialize in pastoral counseling after completing studies at a seminary, and that the specialized training is quite rigorous.

"A pastoral counselor is specially trained and certified by the American Academy of Pastoral Counselors," he said, adding that there are several certified pastoral counselors in Lubbock. (He also said that most seminaries are doing a 'very good job' helping students equip themselves for the counseling aspect of their ministries.)

"A person who has a problem does himself good by seeking (the help of) a minister," he said.

Clemons said the role of a pastoral counselor is "helping people get in touch with God as the source of life rather than convincing people to accept denom-inational ideals," and Ed Scarbrough, director of the Lubbock Baptist Association Center for Counseling, agreed with

"I don't use my office to proselytize or to promote Baptist theology," Scar-brough said. "We counsel from a Christian perspective - that's one reason people choose to come to us - but we don't label...we help people to under-stand 'where they are,' to examine potential solutions to their problem and to help them choose."

Scarbrough, who has pastored for a number of years, said the center, at 2601 Salem, has been in existence for about a year, and that, in a certain sense, "we're really trying to work ourselves out of

He said that the goal of the center's program is to help individuals solve their own current problems and to help equip them for solving other problems

"If they're 'hurting,' they get help now," he said, "but we don't try to get people addicted to us - we want them to feel responsibility for their own

Scarbrough said he deals primarily with communication and relationship problems, be they child-parent, husband-wife, divorce or any other type, but that he will try to help with any problem area.

"It saddens me that a lot of people stay in their homes and hurt, when there is help available," he said. "We're living in a very complex society, leading complex lives, and most of us can be better in our approach (to facing the complexi-

Like Clemons, Scarbrough said he has a definite referral system, and that if he thinks a client needs services he is not able to provide, he will not hesitate to refer that person to another source of

Not only does the Southwest Christian Counseling Center, at 2315 50th St., refer clients who need services to other agencies, but many clients are referred to them by physicians and ministers.

"Not all the churches here have a counseling program in which a person devotes his full time to counseling," said Glen Reddell, founder and director of the center. "One of our goals is to provide expert pastoral counseling care and relieve some of the counseling strain and pressure on ministers (here).

Reddell, who served on the staff of First Baptist Church here before starting the center, said his staff members have extensive training and experience in various specialized areas of counseling, but that their basic approach is the center offers is sex therapy, and Reddell said that might be 15 percent of the seling done at the center

"There are so few known Christian sex therapists who respect the biblical views of sex and sexuality," he said, "that that's one reason we sought to provide the service.'

I'd rather walk!"

Reddell and LaJune Buck, who works with him as a therapy team, in addition to having the Christian perspective on sex and sexuality, have completed advanced training at the University of Kentucky and at the post-graduate Reproductive Biology Research Foundation in St. Louis (with the well-known Masters and Johnson program). The guidelines they use in this therapy are very strict and extremely professional.

A person interested in talking to one of the counselors at the center can expect to get an appointment within pect to get an appointment within three days or so — "often within the day" - of making a call.

"Of course, if it's a crisis situation, we get to it as soon as possible," Reddell

After the initial 'get-acquainted' session, the counselors on the staff have an "intake consultation" to go over the aspects of a new case and to deterr which of them would be most qualified or most likely to help, Reddell said.

Like Scarbrough and Clemons, Reddell stressed that denomination is not impor-

"This is not an evangelistic or preaching outlet," he said. "We do not stand in

In addition to the center's individual counseling program, a number of small groups is also offered, including ones for personal growth, marriage enrichment, rational behavior training, rational assertion training and personal 'discovery and potential

The center also maintains a retreat lodge at White River Lake, and several retreats are scheduled regularly. Reddell said the retreats range from ones for marriage enrichment or the sexual aspect of human existence to ones for newly-single' individuals.

"Right now we are seeking to meet the requirements of the AAPC for that program," he said. The center is also in the process of expanding its counseling

process

McGovern noted that by 'spiritual,' the program directors do not mean 'religion' specifically, but rather 'all things which have to do with a person't discovery of himself, his values and the way he derives meaning from life.

He agreed with Clemons that there is more and more emphasis in the preparation of clergymen on the role of the pastoral counselor, and suggested that "if there's an open relationship between a person and his pastor, that's a good place to start.

"If his prefer cannot help, he'll know to

"If his pastor cannot help, he'll know to whom to refer the person for further help," McGovern said.

He added that there is "splendid cooperation among the many help-giving agencies in Lubbock, and that the more cooperation, the better we can help the person."

Spanish 'Sandwich' Combines Vegetables, Cheese, Sausage

New York, N.Y. (Special) — When the English invention, the sandwich, was adapted to Spanish taste, the result was a culinary delight called the "emparedado." Every nation claims many versions of the sandwich as its own. But, in Spain, the "emparedado" is much like America's sandwiches, prepared with popular local foods. Stuffed green olives, cheese, sausage and vegetables are most often ingredients between the slices.

In the recipe, "Eggplant-Olive Emparedados", breaded eggplant slices substitute for toast, and are filled with provolone cheese, covered with tomato sauce laden with the tang and texture of stuffed green olives. Serve this hearty lunch or sandwich supper in a casserole dish, with a tossed salad for a complete meal.

This diner-dazzling recipe can be made with fresh eggplant and tomatoes from your garden harvest, or you can substitute your fresh stewed tomatoes for a can of stewed tomatoes from the supermarket shelves.

A stuffed olive-cream cheese spread on bread, coated with beaten egg and fried, is a versatile sandwich for a light meal, snack or hors d'oeuvre. Sliced into triangles, "Olive-Cheese Emparendados" can also make attractive cocktail accompaniments. The color complement of the olives adds a gourmet touch.

It also focuses on the lack of awareness on the part of parents of the need for reading at home to reinforce skills taught in school.

Through the RIF program, a wide selection of books is made available to children in an attempt to pique their curi-

As I talk with many people in the area about their energy concerns, I find that there are many "bad rumors" around about energy conserving mea-

These mistaken and misleading ideas about saving home energy are costing consumers many wasted dollars. A lot of these ideas concern insulation, windows and fireplaces.

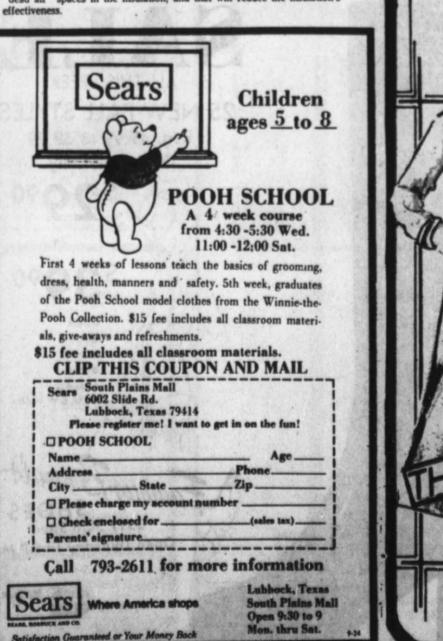

Insulation efficiency is a major problem area. To compare insulation, we should go by the "R value," not by inches. The "R value" is how we measure the insulation's resistance to air flowing through it. "R value" shows how much resistance the insulation has for each inch of its thickness. Different types of insulation have different R values.

Another mistaken idea involves "loose fill" insulation and the amount to buy. Loose-fill insulation should not be sold by the truckload. Federal specifications require that it be sold by the bag or by the bale. When having loose-fill insulation installed, decide first what "R value" you want to achieve. Then look on the bag label to find out how may bags it will take to reach that R value for each 1,000 square feet of area to be insulated. Make sure the correct number of bags are used regardless of the number of inches it makes.

A third mistaken idea concerns the outside vents in a home — such as gable, eave and turbine vents. All of these should be left open in the winter to give the home proper attic ventilation and control moisture in the attic. The belief that vents should be closed or covered is a mistaken idea because as the interior warm air from the house comes into contact with cold attic air, a condensation — or moisture — will form. If vents are covered or closed, the moisture might deterior are invulation and building materials in the attic.

In addition, when moisture vapor gets into insulation, it will take up the "dead air" spaces in the insulation, and that will reduce the insulation's effectiveness.

LONDON (UPI) — Women generally live longer than men but since this only means they survive more often into old age with all its unpleasant infirmities the male of the species has the right to ask: "If it really worth it?"

Dr. M.N. Hart of the Sociology Department of Eusex University posed the question in a paper prepared for delivery to the annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science

SAUSAGE AND CORN PANCAKES

1 cup all-purpose flour, fork-stir well before measuring 1 tsp. baking powder 1/4 tsp. salt 2 large eggs, separated 1/2 lb. bulk pork sausage, cooked (see Note below) 1 cup corn kernels and pulp, cut and scraped from fresh cobs

Stir together the flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks and milk to blend; stir in sausage and corn. Add the flour mixture; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold in. On to hot greased griddle, drop 1/4 cupfuls of the batter, well apart; when bubbles form on top, flip over to brown other sides. (We used an electric griddle set at 375 degrees; each batch of pancakes took about 5 minutes to cook through and brown.) Makes about 1 dozen. Serve with maple syrup.

Note: In a large heavy skillet, over moderate heat, crumble the sausage with a fork until it loses its light color and then cook gently for about 10 minutes. If there is an excess amount of fat in the skillet, you may not want to add it to the batter.

"Sex differentials in the human ageing process, leading to premature death among males, have been observed for more than a century," Hart said. "Today the gap is wider than ever before and the greatest differentials are found in the retirement phase of the lifetime which suggests that the body of the female is more durable and in a sense stronger than that of the male.

"Why does the body of the male wear out before that of the female? And why is this process not manifested in a greaterself-consciousness of suffering and disorder? Men appear to enjoy a greater sense

Hart, whose paper was the result of long research into the subject, said one answer was that men were more prone to fatal diseases while women seemed to some extent to fall prey to complaints and disorders which did not threaten life

This pattern established itself early in life with more boys dying at birth and up to the teens, reaching a peak in adolesc-ence and young adulthood when 2.45 males die for every girl. A puzzling fea-ture of this latter statistic is that the figures for 1850 show equal deaths among the sexes in that bracket. It was an equality that finally disappeared towards the end of the 19th century never to appear

Hart said there seemed to be genetic factors involved although the wear and tear on the male body of the more aggressive life of the breadwinner was also part of the answer. Men had higher rates of death from heart and respiratory diseas-es and smoking related conditions such es and smoking related conditions such as lung cancer. The only cause of death where women have a clear disadvantage is cancer in the 25-44 age group largely due to breast cancer, numerically the most important of the female cancers.

Hart said statistics showed members of the upper social classes lived longer than the working class, that married couples outlived bachelors or spinsters but divorced men did not partake of this benefit suggesting, perhaps, that the formerly married status carries more hardship for the male than the female.

one of his most interesting findings, he said, is that housewives tend to have higher rates of chronic sickness, higher not only than women who go out to work but also higher than working men.

Commenting on the conflict in the statement that more women solicit medical treatment yet more men die earlier, Hart said.

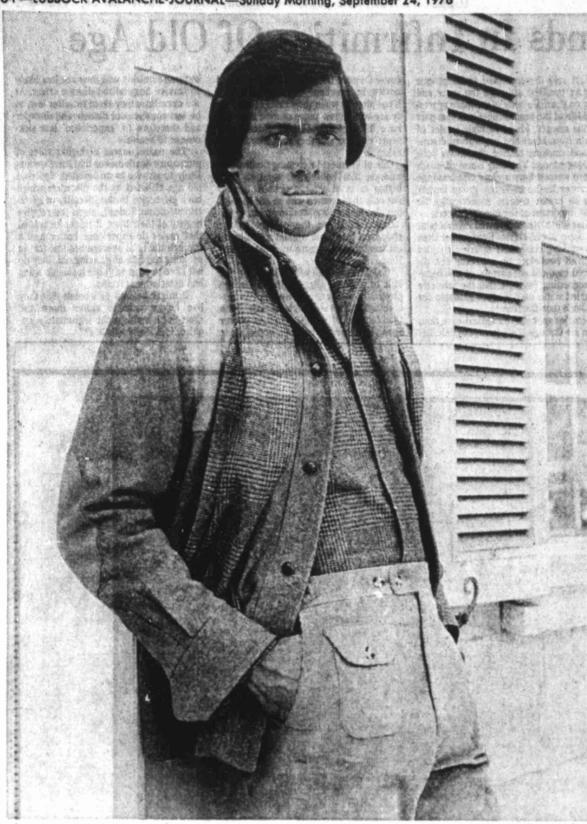

"Taking the life cycle as a whole the bulk of evidence suggests that males are physically weaker, less resistent to disease and more susceptible to early death than females. Men appear to have poorer health in the sense that their bodies wear.

Americans Now Tend To Resist Change, Want To 'Stay Put'

By BETTY YARMON NEW YORK (WNS) — If you turn down an offer for a better job in another town, don't feel you are doing something almost un-American. On the contrary, you are in keeping with a growing trend among Americans to resist change and to Right after World War II, perhaps because of the movement brought on by the war. American workers seemed restless and on the lookout for better opportunities. As a result, we were a population on the move, with more than one-fifth of all of us moving each year. That trend has been quietly reversed in recent years from 21.2 percent in 1951 to 17.7 percent 25 years later, according to Census Bureau figures -- and the trend toward a less mobile working force gets stronger each year.

Sociologists, struck by the change, have begun to look at it with some care. They have come up with a number of specula tions as to why it has happened:

- GROWING CONCERN OVER LIFE-STYLE. People apparently have become more conscious of the values of life. Perhaps as there has been a decline in the so-called quality of life, we have become more reluctant to let it slip away. This means that we have begun to appreciate more what we have, the jobs we hold, the people we work with, our neigh-

WORRIES ABOUT MOVING. So much has been said about the disruptions moving brings on, particularly to children in their most formative years, that most of us look upon such radical change with trepidation

INCREASING CONCERN ABOUT FAMILY. After many years of what seemed a lack of concern about family life. at least some of us seem back with the belief that the family as an institution has much to offer and should be preserved. This is translated into a reluctance to move to places where constant contact with family is difficult if not impossible.

- HIGH COST OF LIVING. While companies generally pay basic moving costs when a transfer is made, many families are understandably fearful of moving to a new home, where they will have to buy many new items at inflated prices. Likewise, a move may mean a change from a low-cost to a high-interest mort-

MOVE TOWARD SECOND-IN-COME FAMILIES. Years ago, when a transfer was suggested, only one person's career had to be taken into account. Nowadays, the wife's career may be even more important than her husband's, and he may be willing to compromise by staying put for the entire family's welfare.

IMPROVED ROADS. Even in the face of a 55-mile speed limit, building better roads has meant that people often are able to change jobs without having to move. A change can mean simply a slightly longer drive to work. LONGER UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS. With unemployment compensation lasting as much as 65 weeks, the person who loses a job is less likely to feel impelled to look for work in another location. Being able to manage financially in the interim, there is hope something ultimately will show up in the same community and make a move unnecessary.

It is hard to calculate the implications of this trend - or, rather, the reversal of a previous trend. Companies have to rethink policies based on the expectation that employees at all levels would grab at better opportunities, no matter where they were transferred. Often these firms probably are forced to overcome an employee's new reluctance to relocate by sweetening the pot.

On a different level, unemployement statistics may be affected. If men and women are unwilling to move from one part of the country to another as changing economic conditi ins dictate, we may find ourselves as a nation with labor surpluses in some areas, shortages in others.

All in all, both on a family level and on a social level, this substantial change in population shifting calls for careful

First, never bake a potato in aluminum foil. That gives it a steamy, watery texture instead of the dry fluffiness that is a true potato characteristic.

And never open potatoes with a knife. Open them with a fork, since a sharp instrument forces the potato down instead of fluffing it up, detracting from its nat-

Psychologist Tells Parents, 'Get Tough'

By REBECCA MOREHOUSE

NEW YORK (WNS) - What's the matter with kids today? "They don't know how to say no to themselves — they're spoiled rotten," said Dr. Dan Kiley. His advice to parents: Get tough.

Example: On a plane Kiley saw a 2-year-old run up and down the aisle for 30 minutes while his parents urged him again and again to sit down. As the plane neared landing a stewardess took the child to his parents.

"The kid went bananas and struck his mother," he said. "She popped him and apologized. I would have grabbed him by the nape of the neck and sat him down. the first time. No means no. You've got to start early; the years from zero to 5 are

"If you love children enough, you have to be tough. If you don't stop a kid, or if he doesn't stop himself, somebody else will - that's for sure. Parents contribute to a kid's decency or his deviance.'

"Drugs (including alcohol) and viol-

"Drugs (including alcohol) and violence upset me the most," he continued. "Next comes vandalism, mindless destruction. Kids demand material things and at the same time they hate materialism and express their resentment through vandalism. Material things are not a substitute for love."

What would be his response to a teen-age son who asked for $35 for an evening on the town?

"I'd say, "That's your problem. What are you going to do to earn it?' I wouldn't argue about it. Parents should not argue with kids, they should not try to be fair. Families are not democracies, they're benign dictatorships.

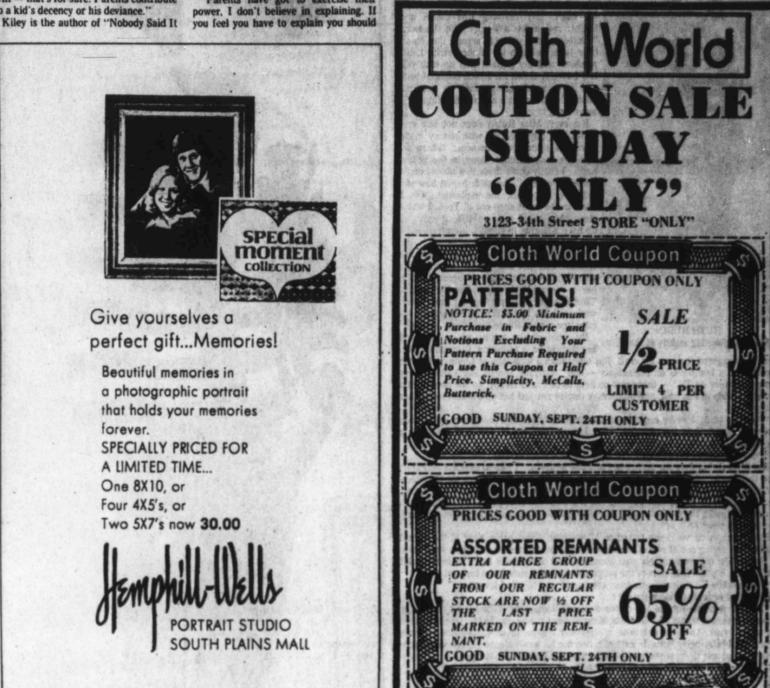

"Parents have got to exercise their power, I don't believe in explaining. If you feel you have to explain you should do it before the no and after the kid has calmed down.

ries feels enormous frustration if he's kicked out of college or can't get a job. He hates his parents for this frustration."

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

The Texas Tech University Center has plans to bring pantomimist Keith Berger back to Lubbock March 1 and 2, 1979. Tickets, of course, are not yet on sale — but when they are, look for Ruth Rubin to be standing at the head of the line. And why not? After all, it was Berger who (unknowingly) has made it possible for Miss Rubin to be giving mime presentations at 6:40 and 8:40 p.m. each night this week at the Panhandle South Plains Fair. It was Berger who inspired her to perform on a pro-

And yet Ruth Rubin has yet to even say hello to Keith Berger.

"I went to see his performance out at Tech a couple years ago," she said during a recent interview. "It was just by chance, you know, something to do. And I was just floored. I was amazed at his total body control, the incredible mind control he displayed. And I decided right then that I was going to try it." All the time she was explaining this, Miss Rubin's arms were constantly moving, her voice occasionally fluttering into laughter. She sat cross-legged, Indian style, in an office chair. Her clothing was casual and bright: red socks, a T-shirt with the word 'Philadelphia' printed across the front, blue jeans held up by rainbow-striped suspenders, and her pigtails tied up with yellow bows. A clown medallion bounced back and forth as she epitomized an unstifled youthful exhuberance and stated, simply, "I like colors." However, Miss Rubin does not buy groceries and pay the rent with money made from her mime performances. "There aren't too many mimes listed in the yellow pages; I really don't think that many people know about me," she said. Asked how she did meet expenses, she explained, "Oh, I work in the paint shop out at Tech. I was a clerk once, but I just couldn't sit still. . . I do have a degree in English literature, but I just lost interested in teaching."

Her co-workers at Tech, all of whom are familiar with her mime activities since she often mimics them while on break, desribe her as "crazy," she says. But she added, Working there is perfect for me. I can work with my hands and leave my mind totally free to plan things.

By "things" she means mime skits, and Mime performing nightly at the Fair her dedication is awesome. Inspired by Berter, she hungered to learn his craft. But other than a workshop at Lubbock Theatre

Centre and a few books on the subject - and "watching Shields and Yarnell every time they were on TV" - there was no help to be found locally. So she developed a work schedule of her own, one which may inspire not just her co-workers to dub her "I get up at 3:10 every morning to start my exercises and practicing, and I keep doing it until 6:30 in the morning. Then I work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. five days a week, and I take dance class three nights a week," she said. Some of us didn't even know there WAS a 3:10 in the morning

But Miss Rubin says she enjoys her practice sessions. "I like to exercise and practice this much," she said. "I enjoy it. I liken it to the kids training for the Olympics. I figure if they can put in four to eight hours a day at track or skiing or ice skating, then I can get up in the morning and put my three hours of practice in. The idea is to learn to make the body flexible, and then control it. But to get good at anything,

Fair manager Steve Lewis talked to Miss Rubin about performing at the annual event after seeing her at one of the Show Wagon performances staged by the Parks & Recreation department this past summer. And though she has a 20 minute skit worked up, it is the final part of the program which she most looks forward to. "That's when I'll take requests from the crowd, and boy do I love that."

What kind of requests does she get?

"That all depends on the age of the audience," she said. "The little kids ask for super heroes and things like Godzilla, King Kong, cat and dog fights. One kid asked me to do a tank. And then one time, at the Show Wagon, there was a request for me to act out a baby being born. It kind of threw me for a minute, and there were probably some people there wondering what in the heck I was going to do.

"So what I did was play the role of a stork."

What she'd like to do most, however, is earn a government grant to finance her going from school to school and giving mime workshops. She'd like most to work with deaf children. "It's been fun in the past, and I think it really helps," she said.

But when it comes right down to it, Ruth Rubin knows there hasn't been much call outside of the occasional birthday party to perform mime in Lubbock. So she'll lunge at any bookings she can get. She recently performed before a gathering of adults at the Hard Rock Cafe, where she discovered mime is not limited to children. 'It worked really well. I think that if you tap anybody hard enough, there's still a little kid inside waiting to get out. A free person not stifled by society. So look for her while you're enjoying the fair this week. She'll be the one with the whiteface, the brightly colored clothing and the complete attention of passing spectators. Following each show, she'll mingle with the crowds. And if you really want to make her happy, I'll give you a hint how you can accomplish just that. During our interview, Miss Rubin said, "I just hope somebody asks me to be a

Dempsey Dumpster. I've been practicing that one for a long time.' The University Center at Texas Tech has extended the deadline for the purchase of Artists Series season tickets through Wednesday. The Artists Series this year includes appearances by Vincent Price, Jimmy Driftwood, the Houston Ballet, Dudley Riggs' Brave New Workshop, the Canadian Brass, mime Keith Berger and the John Biggs Consort. Call the Tech University Center activities office for further information.

. Linda Ronstadt has announced her Christmas season tour plans, but Lubbock missed out. Barely. Her Texas dates are Dec. 15, University of Texas at Austin; Dec. 16, Dallas Convention Center; Dec. 17, the Summit in Houston; Dec. 19, New Mexico State Univer-The Austin date is the tour's opening concert. One Lubbock promoter tried to get her to town on that date, but said Lubbock lost the show because it didn't have a concert hall big enough to compete with Austin's. (The bigger the hall, the more ople — and the more people, the bigger the haul.) He then put in a bid to bring Linda to town on Dec. 14, but Miss Ronstadt evidently was against opening her tour

Of course, the Dec. 18 date is still open. But that is a Monday and the first day of final exams at Texas Tech University. So the promoter thought it best to pass. Linda Ronstadt is one of the more expensive acts touring, and a sellout (or super high ticket prices) would probably be an absolute necessity in Lubbock if the show was to turn a profit for the promoter.

We've already mentioned that Sylvester Stallone's new film "Paradise Alley" will open this Christmas at the South Plains Cinema. But Showplace will also be bringing in a Stallone film this winter. It has booked "Italian Stallion," an X-rated effort retitled after the success of "Rocky." The original title of this porno picture, which Stallone made during his "starving actor" days, was "The Party At Kitty And Another example of the same sort of capitalizing on a star's past is even closer at hand. The South Plains Cinema is now showing "Secrets," loudly proclaimed these days as having a "Jacqueline Bisset nude scene." After "The Deep," though, it's hard to see what everyone's in such an uproar about...

Filming on "Star Trek - The Motion Picture" (yes, that's the working title) got inderway August 7 with all of the TV series' main characters repeating their roles. Robert Wise is directing the Gene Roddenberry production from a screenplay written by Roddenberry and Harold Livingston. The cast includes William Shatner, Leonard Nimoy, DeForest Kelley, Stephen Colins, Persis Khambatta, James Doohan, George Takei, Nicholle Nichols, Walter Koenig, Majel Barrett and Grace Lee Whitney

The following release arrived in the mail recently from Electra Asylum Records: Roy Acuff Day is October 20. Acuff is one of the founders of country music, one of the staunchest defenders of its traditions — and he had Dressing Room Number One at the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville all to himself., ...He'll be presented the key to Nashville by mayor Robert Fulton on Oct. 20 and will appear on local NBC news. Many country radio stations have indicated the 20th will also be Roy Acuff Day on

Speaking of country music, though, please keep in mind that tickets are still available for all of this week's concerts at the Panhandle South Plains Fair. Fair manager Steve Lewis indicated a while back that The Statler Brothers were proving to be the most popular act in terms of advance sales, but that Charley Pride and Mel Tillis were nipping at their heels. Jim Ed Brown, Johnny Rodriguez and Eddie Rabbitt will also headline shows. It's one of the best Fair music lineups we've seen in years. Not that Charley Pride is a new name. He's opened the Fair's week of concerts and the past 10 years.

also sings regularly with the Florentine Opera Company of Milwaukee and last mer won accolades after appearing with the Santa Fe Opera, starring in "La Traviata" in the role of Georgio Germont. He has also starred with the Opera Companies of New Orleans, San Antonio, Toledo and Winnipeg.

In the summer of '76, he made his debut in Iceland (for the Festival) and in Stockholm. In October he will make his European operatic debut in Poland, starring in "La Traviata" and "Aida." It will necessarily be a short trip, since he must begin rehearsals for the Metropolitan Opera season in November.

Walker made his Metropolitan debut in 1962 after being top winner in the Met Auditions. Since then he has sung leading roles there and on the company's national tours ranging from Papageno in Mozart's "Magic Flute" to Prince Yeletsky in Tchaikovsky's "Queen of Spades" (Pique Dame). On Broadway he has starred as Lucille Ball's leading man in "Wildcat" and has appeared in starring roles in summer stock productions such as' "Carousel", "Damn Yankees", and "Showboat." As a recitalist, he has been unanimously acclaimed from coast-tocoast not only for his rich baritone voice and artistry, but also for his witty, warm personality and charm as as raconteur.

Opera, recital, Broadway and television - Walker does them all and continues to win audiences' accolades and critical raves from reviewers. Walker was born in Texas. He wore cue. His talent manifested itself at an early age and he sang a lot even as a boy. At Texas Christian University, from which he graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree, he was a voice student of John Brigham.

He made his operataic debut with the Fort Worth Opera as Schaunard in "La Boheme". It was a foretaste of things to come. Competitions are "bread and butter" for young singers on their way up and through them, they achieve their first recognition. Walker first won the National Teachers of Singing Award. He then went on to the "Met" auditions in the Dallas regionals winning third prize.

He next competed in New York, gaetting to the Met's semifinals and won.

FAMED BARITONE TO APPEAR - Baritone William Walker wll be the featured guest when the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra takes the stage at 8:15 p.m. Oct. 2 and 3 in the Civic Center theater. Less than 300 tickets remain for both evening's performances. Call the Lubbock Symphony office for ticket prices and reservations.

Bell To Sponsor Tours By Leading Symphonies

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company today announced a major commitment in support of the performing arts under which the Bell System will help sponsor nationwide tours by seven of America's leading symphony orchestras.

Touring symphonies will include the New York Philharmonic and Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Boston, Chicago and Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestras, and the Cleveland and Philadelphia Orches-

The tours will begin in 1979 and continue for four years. By 1982, the symphonies will have played in more than 100 towns, cities and college campuses across

ART TALK

On Drawing

One of the most interesting exhibits I've seen was a retrospective show with the artist's earliest drawings done on paper sacks and old newspapers. In the beginning, he could not afford to buy paper. In a life drawing class in New York, I met many other interesting people who dropped in on their way home to draw for 90 minutes on the afternoon paper.

In an aspen grove I discovered drawings in the soft bark, drawn with a pocket knife years before by a lonely, talented sheepherder.

Drawing materials are numerous Practice is what counts And locking at Drawing materials are numerous. Practice is what counts. And looking at what we see. Most people look, but never see the world around them. The artist learns to look in depth at everything he sees. He readily recognizes shapes, shades and colors that others fail to see.

Draw whenever you have a moment — while talking on the phone, at committee meetings, while waiting for the kids. Draw anytime, on whatever is Suppose you decide to draw a bottle. Mark two parallel lines the length the bottle will be. Above these two lines draw two more parallel lines where you want to place the neck of the bottle. Connect the four lines with curved lines. Now draw an elipse at the top for the opening and a larger elipse at the hottom for the base. If your bottle is below eye level, the elipses will be more round. At eye level, they will appear flatter.

Try varied lengths and spaces between the lines for several different types of bottles. This method is much easier than trying to accurately draw each side the exact way you think you see it before you.

Drawing can be done with lines or by placing light areas against darker areas. The latter technique requires no lines, just masses of light against masses of dark. Some people find mass drawing much easier than line drawing.

Look at a dark bottle with a lightly colored label. Look at the background immediately next to the bottle. After you have drawn the parallel lines representing the shape, begin shading in the light and dark places you see. A picture of what is in front of you will quickly appear. Squint your eyes and you will perceive masses of light and dark much better. The area around the bottle is called the negative space and is as important to the whole as the artcle it-

ART EXHIBITION OPENS TODAY - The Baker Gallery will open its first fall art greet the public during a reception from 1 to 4:30 p.m. today. They include Bill Harri- watercolor "Red River Riders" at left, and Butler's oil painting "Market Day At Tebition today, with over 40 artists featured. Eight of the artists will be present to son and James Butler. Examples of their work can be seen above, with Harrison's quis" at right.

Reception Opens Baker Gallery's Most Ambitious Art Exhibit

A reception from 1 to 4:30 p.m. today will open the largest art exhibition ever held at the Baker Gallery Of Fine Art, 1301 13th St. Forty-two artists will have work featured during the exhibition, and eight — Wilson Hurley, Glenna Goodacre, Clarence Kincaid, Mondel Rogers, Bill Harrison, Betty Lynch, James Butler and Sandy Scott - will be present at today's reception to answer questions and greet the public.

Hurley has three oils on display. One of the Southwest's foremost painters, his work consists of landscapes ranging from tropical jungles to the American Southwest. He recently won the gold medal for oil at the National Academy of Glenna Goodacre will have five new bronzes on display, among them a piece called "The Red Bonnett" which is only three inches tall; it is an unlimited edition. Her work in bronze has been recognized among the finest sculpture by contemporary artists. She won the gold medal at the National Academy of Design in 1978, and won an honorable mention in 1977 at the National Sculpture Society Exhibition.

Kincaid's new works include scenes of West Texas, the Hill Country, fishing ports and portraits. An art professor at Texas Tech University, Kincaid has not let his teaching duties quell his desire to create.

Capturing the ranching spirit of this region, Mondel Rogers will exhibit three new egg tempera paintings. His past work has been published in the book "Old Ranches Of The Texas Plains." His work has also been published in "Texas Architect Magazine," "Rendezvous Of Western Art," "Daughters Of The American Revolution" and on the cover of "The Cattleman" magazine.

Butler will have five new paintings on display, communicating his feelings toward the outdoors. Harrison will have four new works hanging. And Betty Lynch's new watercolors depict her unique approach of technique, composition and color.

Sandy Scott, who gave an excellent presentation on the etching process at the Baker Gallery's show in April, will also return.

Also to be featured are graphic artists Harold Altman, Gene Kloss, Lynd Ward, Reynold Weidenaar, Theodore Van Soelen and Thomas Hart Benton. Other popular artists whose works will be featured include Jack Drake, Henry Gasser, Frank Gervasi, John Pellew, Don Stone, Tony van Hasselt, Carroll Collier, Barbara Harmon, James Disney, Ray Knaub, Manuel Acosta, Milford Zornes, Ramon Kelley, Norman Kent, Walt Gonske, Ken Gore, Voris Hope,

Motor City Can Breathe Easier

DETROIT (UPI) - This Midwestern metropolis can put on airs over its air, according to a National Wildlife Federation

The federation's list of the nation's 20 most polluted cities - those with more than 25 days of bad air - didn't include Detroit, the nation's fifth largest city, points out its Chamber of Commerce.

Los Angeles led the list with 218 days of "unhealthful, very unhealthful or hazard-ous" air. Also included was Denver with 177 bad air days; Albuquerque, N.M., and Philadelphia, both 150; New York-New Jersey metropolitan area, 149; Boston, 147; Houston, 141; St. Louis, 140; San Francisco, 127; Spokane, Wash., 126; Phoenix, 118; Fairbanks, Alaska, and Washington, D.C., 90; Sacramento, Calif., 88; Louisville, Ky., 72; Steubenville, Ohio, 60; Cincinnati, 51; Omaha, 40; Memphis, 38; and Wichita, Kan., 25.

Dorn's Style 'Comes Through' In Redbone's Latest Album

By DOUG PULLEN

A-J Rock Correspondent

A review of Leon Redbone would be incomplete without mention of his producer Joel Dorn. His expertise in handling such diverse acts as Redbone, Asleep At The Wheel and Bette Midler demands an uncanny amount of both time and patience.

That Dern possesses these talents has been apparent on every album, but never more noticeably than on Redbone's latest LP called "Champagne Charlie" (Warner Bros.). Known mostly for his studio ability and knowledge of equipment, Dorn's style comes through in making the artists he produces very Redbone is out of place in the rock community, but that's the ilk with which he's associated. His devotion to the classic music of the 1920s and 1930s has been at the core of each of his three albums.

"Champagne Charlie" is more commercial in appeal and devout in character, at least when compared to Redbone's first two albums. It has all the trappings of the first LPs - a wide selection of classic and obscure musical history set in an oddly thematic manner.

But "Champagne Charlie" remains quite a bit different from its predecessors. The song list has been pared to 10, a substantial reduction from the first two LPs. Redbone has made himself more visible. The simple black and white packaging of "Champagne Charlie" harks back to the prosperous times when people didn't worry about crashing stock markets and the threat of war. Redbone tries to personify this.

"Champagne Charlie" is an album of change for the esoteric Redbone. He never allows himself to wander from that secret, dark image of the man who hides behind a thick black moustache and an acoustic guitar. But he seems to be emerging from his well-publicized and self-constructed protective shell.

Even his voice has become more supple, though I suspect Dorn played a part in this. Redbone's singing is of an enriched character only previously hinted at. This trait is apparent in nearly every song on "Champagne Charlie." Still, his voice is its customarily ebullient self.

The title track opens the album on a sprite note. Redbone's cloak of mystery pervades the piece, especially in that inimitable croak he calls a voice. His singing is as true to the spirit of this piece of public domain as a patriot's was to the war bond campaign.

One pleasantly distracting trait apparent in the first song is the jazzy, Dixieland instrumentation. Much of the work is Dorn's, who is doing for Redbone what he did for Asleep At The Wheel on its "Collision Course" album.

The added instrumentation, which ranges from horns and string sections to banjos and pianos, give "Champagne Charlie" a wider scope than anything Redbone has previously recorded.

This becomes even more obvious as the album progresses, "Please Don't Redbone has previously recorded.

This becomes even more obvious as the album progresses. "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone" is more yellowed than an old newspaper clipping. And it's just as authentic. Redbone lets out a few yodels and Dorn throws in a muted clarinet arrangement. Backup vocals accentuate the levity and mock melancholy of Redbone's rendition.

Dorn and Redbone must have had a blast recording "Champagne Charlie." The diversity of instrumentation, along with Redbone's deep-seated devotion to accurate interpretation of songs that have been around for ages, grants the album a pleasant feeling. One can picture an old movie where the heir to vast riches serenades his equally wealthy girl on the porch of daddy's richly decorated house.

"Champagne Charlie" isn't by any means a nostalgic album, though it does keep bringing those old movies to mind. It isn't a philosophical album either. It's a good times album,

The LP offers a seldom seen insight into the context from which most of these songs were received. Redbone performs the music of "Jelly Roll" Morton and Jimmie Rodgers. He's even released his version of "Alabama Jubilee" on a promotional 78 r.p.m. record.

And if that's not authenticity, what is? LINER NOTES: Leon Redbone: lead vocals, acoustic guitar, piano. Ken Whitely: banjo, percussion, mandolin, acoustic guitar, Sammy Price: plano. JOHNNY DUNCAN: Eyes Super Star Status

Duncan Goal Super Star

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Where Johnny Duncan is today looks like the top to many struggling musicians. But the top as he sees it, his face turned up and looking distantly past his upraised index finger, is "way, way up there."

With several number one country-western hits for Columbia Records in the past two years, the 6-foot-4 native of Dublin, Tex., is nominated with Janie Fricke for a Country Music Association award this year as best country singing

'Stranger," the Kris Kristofferson song that revived his career in 1976, and his recent "She Can Put Her Shoes Under My Bed" both sold 250,000 records and nearly crossed over into the lucrative pop market.

What he is looking for now is a million-seller like "Behind Closed Doors" to make him a big star instead of a medium-sized one.

While some of his Texas contemporaries have left Nashville in fact or at least in spirit, Duncan stayed and conquered with a mixture of talent, deter-The Nashville music world is cloistered and highly political, he said in a interview following his recent appearance at the Red Raider Night Club.

"I've swallowed my pride a lot in Nashville, but that's why I'm where I am

Duncan grew up in Central Texas and played all the high school sports be-fore taking his musical knack to Clovis, N.M., record producer Norman Petty. "I was recorded pop, which I'm not," he said. "My voice is smooth, but I'm

He attended Texas Christian University for a time before starting in the music business, and the English and speech he studied there still show up in his distinct and nearly unaccented speech and singing. He worked as a disc jockey for several years around the Southwest and finally went to Nashville in the early 1960s. He worked as a bricklayer for two years, singing at each opportunity until

Columbia producer Don Law heard him on a morning television show and signed him to a recording contract. "It was the biggest day of my life," he says, but success was still a long way

He got a few songs on country charts and got another break in 1969 when Charley Pride hired him to open shows.

At the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo not long afterwards, he wrote "I'd Rather Love and Lose You" for his boss, and it became the first of 10 Duncan songs to be recorded by Pride.

He had a couple of hits of his own, "Jo and the Cowboy" and "Sweet Country Woman," after leaving Pride in 1972 - but then went through a two-year During that dismal time, Duncan said, he commuted to Bowling Green, Ky., to sing six nights a week in a dinner lounge for $25 per night.

"I burned a lot of gasoline," he said. Then he heard Billy Swan singing "Stranger" on the car radio, got his producer Billy Sherill to help him record it and found himself out of the valley and back onto the mountain.

Duncan is lucky, he thinks, to have a big company and the legendary Sherill

Sherill also has produced Tammy Wynette throughout her career. "You'd think he'd be like God on a throne," Duncan said, "but he's a very laid-back, easy-going little dude."

"She Can Put Her Shoes Under My Bed" came in on a tape from the West Coast and was done in a slow tempo with piano accompaniment, he said, adding that he did not hear much in it. Only Sherill, whom he emphatically de-ing that he did not hear much in it. Only sherth, whom he emphatically describes as "a genius," heard it as a hit.

A devotee of the smooth country music practiced by Don Williams, Eddy Arnold and the late Jim Reeves, Duncan is not worried about the pop flavor of much of the Nashville music of the past few years.

The music of Loretta Lynn and her sister Crystal Gayle sounds different superficially, he said, but is basically the same and still inevitably country.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Rep. Barbara Jordan is one of the best-known women in U.S. politics today. But very little is known about her of a personal and intimate nature. Marilyn Gardner recently interviewed this dynamic black congresswoman, posing many of the questions readers ask. Here are some highlights of that inter-

MG: What do you think is the biggest misconception

BARBARA JORDAN: That I am cold and aloof. I have read that. And I've always been startled when I have read that. I do not view myself as cold or aloof but apparently some others view me that way. "I can recall a time very early in my life, as a teenager, when I perhaps stood aside from others. But I think that was more a lack of self-confidence on my part which grew and developed as I grew and developed. And thus made me more outgoing and self-assured.

MG: What do you like least about yourself?

JORDAN: I think it's my impatience with people I feel ought to be able to do a job and get it done immediately. And they seem to dawdle. I'm very impatient with inefficiency and dawdling. I don't know any better way to say that. Whether I'm talking about my staff or other leaders in government. I want to see them take hold and get things done and get them done now. And I don't like that because things don't move

NOT 'AMBITIOUS'-Texas Congresswoman Barbara Jordan, though she has been frequently mentioned as a leading candidate to be America's first woman president, insists she has no such ambition.

MG: When I interviewed you for New Woman you said it was necessary for a public figure to have a big ego. In view of that I wonder whether you find you get along better with men or with women. And which do you prefer to deal with?

JORDAN: "Oh, I wish you didn't ask me that ... I really deal with men better...That's probably just a personal preference, I guess."

MG: Do you feel that your strong personality can overwhelm most men that you meet?

JORDAN: Well, I think my personality does have a tendency to overwhelm men who are not engaged in the same line of work that I'm engaged in. MG: Do you think a woman has to lose her feminini ty in order to put up a strong front? JORDAN: Of course not. Men expect women to be feminine and I don't think that's sexist. It's just that we are feminine. And to lose one's femininity, I think, is to lose a dimension which could be helpful in making us become powerful.

MG: What qualities would you look for in a man?

JORDAN: A strong mind. And lots of self-confidence. But not to the point of being overbearing. And vet self-assurance.

MG: Is there any one man special in your life now? JORDAN: No. I couldn't say that.

MG: What do you do for relaxation? JORDAN: I usually just sit around with a group of friends, usually old friends, and talk about the past and listen to music, group singing and swapping sto-

MG: Do you watch much television? JORDAN: I watch the news all the time.

MG: Do you date?

JORDAN: Well, there's not much time for that, either. And if there is an event that requires two instead of one, I will find someone to go with me. And vice-

MG: You led a Redbook poll on "women who could be president." Is that one of your ambitions? JORDAN: No. I don't have an ambition to be presi-

MG: Is there anything a woman president could do as a woman that a man can't or hasn't done? JORDAN: No, I don't think so. I just believe that the office of president requires a person of a quality that defies any sexual differentiation. MG: When you finally became a congresswoman, was it worth everything you had to go through? JORDAN: Oh, without a doubt. I don't know of any arena of activity which has brought me more pleasure, a greater sense of fulfillment than my political work. And I believe that working through the trenches, getting defeated twice before getting elected to anything and then withstanding the contest which is necessary to get to Congress - I would says yes, it was worth it.

MG: What do you think is a woman's best age? JORDAN: Those years 20 to 30. Because at that point, you're usually developing into what may become your life's work. And the opportunities are there to take and hold and make them multiply or not. And I think if you don't do it in that time frame, you might be a little late catching hold. MG: Do you have any fears about growing old?

JORDAN: No. I look forward to it! Because there ought to be a time everyone can rest and relax. When you've strived long enough and you don't have any further goals you're trying to pursue. And then you just sit back and contemplate. And I see growing old as the coming of that time

MG: What do you like most about yourself?

JORDAN: I guess my ability to relate to other people and feel where they are, and regard them as human beings, and then see their favorable response to me. That gives me a great deal of pleasure. The Capitol Hill policemen, the elevator operators, the maids, the porters as well as my colleagues. I think if I have any strong point, it's being able to communicate with everybody across the spectrum and understanding them. And having them relate to me back in a positive

Homes Sold In Record Number

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special) -Undaunted by current high interest rates, American families still are buying resale homes in record numbers, according to the National Association of Realtors.

In its monthly existing home sales report, the association's Department of mics and Research reports July single-family resale transactions were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3,-890,000 units. This is a 2.9 percent gain over the June rate and 10.2 percent ahead of July, 1977. "Except for February, when winter olizzards put a damper on the existing single-family home market, resale activity this year has moved across a high plaeau," according to Research Director Kenneth J. Kerin. "If the current trend continues-and we expect it will-a record 3.8 million transactions will take place during 1978. This compares to the previous record of 3,572,000 units set last

The association report notes July-to-July sales increases in each of the four reions of the nation. In the South, the seasonally adjusted annual rate was 1,620,000 units (up 16.5 percent from last July); in the North Central region, 1,040,000 (2.0 percent); in the Northeast, 620,000 (8.8 percent); and in the West, 600,000 (9.1 percent).

The steady escalation in home prices shows no sign of abatement, the report says, as the median price of an existing single-family home jumped another $1,-000 in July to $49,400. This is 13 percent higher than last July's $43,700 median. Only in the Northeast was the July-to-July price rise under 10 percent, according to the report. In that region, the median price of a resale home was $47,600, up 7.2 percent from July, 1977. In the South, prices rose 11.6 percent to a $46,- 100 median; in the West, 13.6 percent to $67,700; and in the North Central region. 15.7 percent to $42,800.

"As home prices continue to climb," Kerin said, "sales in the $100,000 or more' category are becoming more commonplace.

Quality Line Connector Helps Cut Line Losses

By MIKE WENDLAND

Choosing the proper transmission line between the CB or ham rig and the antenna should not be the end of the radio hobbyist's concern. For almost as important as the coaxial cable are the connectors that are attached at both ends

Last week we talked about the need for selecting the proper type of coax (RG-58U for mobile installations, and the much heavier RG-8U for base set ups). We learned that no matter how good the rig or the antenna, line losses from the grong type of cable can steal the output

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: I really enjoy my CB radio and can't figure out why so many people spend so much time bad-mouthing it. Sure, there are a few jerks out there who louse it up. But I've been a CBer for six years now and I say 95 percent of the CBers are great people who'd do anything they could to help a person out in time of need. CB works fine and I wish you'd start being more positive. - G.T., Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear Mr. Wendland: How come you are so full of tales about the good that CB does and never write about the vulgar language, the illegal power and the useless noise that passes for conversation on Channel 19? All you have to say is CB is great. Well, I'm a CBer and probably always will be but CB is full of real problems and I wish you'd stop ignoring them. - T.S., Tulsa, Okla.

Dear CB Static: My biggest gripe is with the manufacturer of microphones. I've had probably a dozen over the years and they are all wired differently at the plug end. It's a real pain. My suggestion is that somebody ought to standardize microphone connections so the average CBer doesn't need an electronics library to wire up a new mike cord. - T.J., De-

But line losses can occur by other means. And a common problem area is the connectors that attach the transmission line to the transceiver and the anten-

The first rule a radio operator should follow when buying coaxial cable with connectors already attached is to cut them off. For almost invariably they are light-weight connectors that are poorly secured to the wire.

CB Break

For both RG-58U and RG-8U cable, the male connector that terminates both ends of the cable is a PL-259 plug. And the PL-259s supplied by most coax makers are machine attached. Cut them off before you string your transmission line and replace them with good quality plugs, available for about $1 each at CB and electronic parts shops. To attach new plugs, all you need is a soldering gun, a knife and a pair of longnosed pliers. Instructions come with the plug and are easy-to-follow. A good, soldered connection at the start will assure you that the plugs will hold. Another area that needs attention is at the antenna end, where the PL-259 attaches to its female version, the SO-239. That's an area that gets lots of stress from the elements. The wind pulls and tugs at the connector and, in time, will eventually loosen it. To avoid that, securely tighten the plug, using pliers. Then, tape the coax securely to the mast about six inches away from the spot where the PL-259 screws in to the SO-239. Taping the coax removes weight from the Rain can sometimes work its way inside the plug and into the line itself. Once water seeps in it causes oxidation, which can ruin a good line. To keep your line dry, apply a thick coating of silic pound all around the plug. Then, after the silicone hardens, wrap several layers of black plastic tape around the plug and down the line for an inch or two.

While the proper transmission line and connectors will assure you that what your rig is putting out is making it to the antenna, nothing is forever.

Transmission line does wear out and lose its effectiveness. It does need to be replaced. How long it's good for depends on a lot of variables like climate and usage. But, in general, coax should be replaced every three to four years

Realtor Berry says that in conversation with the West Texas Homebuilders he finds the Lubbock market is still strong and an inventory of new houses is beginning to build up. At this time last year, a buyer was having to select his new homes from plans and partially completed homes, where now the buyer has a selection of finished homes.

An adequate supply of home mortgage money in Lubbock is another sign that our real estate market is good and will continue to be good, Berry said. Interest rates are a little higher, but the buying ublic continues to ask for the lo wish for a vacation home has passed the talking stage, this plan may be your perfect answer. You can live in it part of the year and perhaps rent it for the remainder of the year. The additional income could pay for taxes and mortgage payments and would provide you with a livein caretaker. Later, when the children are grown, it could become a carefree retirement home.

The exterior creates an atmosphere of appealing warmth and charm. Vertical siding, a large expanse of glass surrounded by heavy wooden members is all enhanced by gambrel roofs. A porch surrounds nearly half the plan and is enclosed by an attractive wooden railing.

The imposing living room-dining area extends to the roof. An eating bar plus cabinets and a fireplace separate the compact and efficient kitchen from the dining.

A washer and dryer with wall cabinets above and a water heater are in the service. There is additional space for a freez-

Two bedrooms and a bath complete the first floor. This bath, as well as the second story bath, features a pullman lavatory and semi-private water closet.

Motor Bank Opening Set Wednesday

The Texas Commerce Motor Bank new addition to a revitalized downtown Lubbock, will be formally opened with ribbon-cutting ceremonies at 10 a.m. Wednesday, according to a statement from C. B. Carter, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the bank.

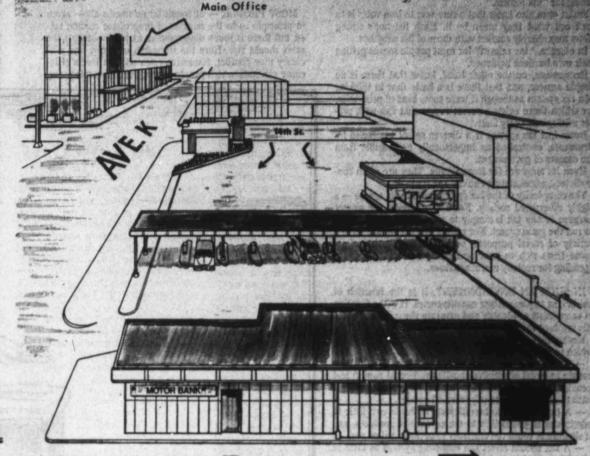

The white marble facility is located diagonally across the street from the bank's main office at 14th Street and Avenue K. It will feature visual auto teller stations with convenient carriers which will enable clients to transact business at their own pace.

In addition to the regular teller win dows which are reached from the 14th Street entrance, a separate window for commercial transactions involving bulky materials and a night depository are available. Entrance to the comnercial window and night depository is from Avenue K.

"The new motor bank design will add to customer convenience with increased teller stations and an easier and safer traffic flow," according to Tommie Stevens, bank president.

Smart Politicians Know Better Than Try To 'Spell Out' Meaningful Tax Reform

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of 15 articles exploring "Taxation: Myths and Realities." In this article, series cooridator George F. Breek, who is professor of economics at the University of California, Berkeley, discusses the criteria by which we can judge our tax system. This series was written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humantities.

By GEORGE F. BREAK Politicians know they can always stir up response by calling for "tax reform

Smart ones also know that a sure way to lose votes is to spell out what they mean by it. Each listener's strong views may sharply conflict with those of his neighbor.

In essence, "tax reform" for most people means getting their own burdens lightened. Economists, on the other hand, know that there is no simple answer, and that there is a basic flaw in thinking of a tax system as though it were some kind of prize cake, for which there exists a secret recipe that can with proper mixing suit every taste. Instead, a tax system is a diverse set of imprecise instruments, controlled as impersonally as possible from the centers of government. Even its aims are far from simple. They are often contradictory, necessitating choices and trade-offs. The complexity of the tax system reflects its source - a highly diversified society. For some people, the proper purpose of any tax is simply to produce enough revenue to run the government. For others, the tax should serve a variety of social purposes, such as redistribution of income from rich to poor and encouragement of private spending for socially useful activities.

IN SUCH AN ENVIRONMENT, it is the function of politicians to please their constituencies. It is the function of economists to identify and measure the costs and benefits involved in the vast array of trade-offs.

Economists have long agreed on certain basic tests by which to judge a tax system

- Above all, a tax should be fair and equitable, treating people in equal situatioNs equally (horizontal equity) and people in unequal situations differently, in accordance with their capacities to pay (vertical equity).

- A tax should also be efficient; it should cost little to administer in proportion to the revenue it produces, and it should not cause the economy to perform below par.

- A tax should affect the economic system as little as possible - that is, it should be neutral and not cause people to sTop working or investing or saving or to make other basic changes in their economic lives.

- The terms on which a tax is imposed should be certain and predictable, so that a person can know what tax he owes, and why.

- A tax should be set up and administered as simply as possible, so that it can be understood clearly and complied with easily. - Some people think that a tax should be elastic, responding automatically to changes in the economy, so that revenues rise and fall without changes in rates. Others, who do not like to see government revenues increase automatically, view this as a bad characteristic.

EACH OF THESE principles offers problems of inter-

Particularly controversial is the real meaning of tax equity, or fairness. Traditionally there have been two standards for this.

One kind of fair tax charges people for services in proportion to the benefits they receive from those services. Examples include public golf course greens fees, state university tuition charges, and sewer taxes. Where benefits from government services can be closely related to income or property or retail sales (streets, police, fire protection, etc.), a tax on that base is also an equitable benefits -received levy.

Not all government services, of course, can be billed to individual taxpayers, partly because of administrative difficulties in apportioning the fees, and partly because the benefits — national defense, the judicial system, etc. — are so widely spread throughout the society that it is virtually impossible to determine individual values.

In these situations, the appropriate standard of fairness is the taxpayers' ability to pay. Taxes levied on this basis can be either proportional or progressive. Our federal income tax, for example, uses "progressive" rates (higher percentages at higher income levels), while state sales taxes are "proportional" (the same percentages on all

MOST PEOPLE - although by no means all - agree in principle as to the fairness of progressive income taxes, but there is much disagreement as to how steeply the rates should rise. Here the standards of equity and efficiency may conflict. Excessive rates on high levels of income can induce rich people to stop further earning, saving, or investing. Such "disincentives" not only affect eonomic behavior, thus violating the tax principle of neutrality, but may also reduce total government revenues, thereby hurting the poor who depend heavily on government services.

Most informed tax arguments involve questions of equity about the income, sales and property taxes. Income tax arguments largely center on what constitutes income, or ability to pay. The more painstaking these definitions, the more complex the tax becomes, thus lessening simplicity

Efforts to improve the equity of the sales tax also mean trade-offs. Its simplicity and efficiency are greatest when it is applied to all sales, but taxing subsistence expenditures of the very poor would be unfair.

Hence some states exempt food and certain other essentials. Such exemptions not only complicate adminis tration but also subsidize the luxury food purchases of the affluent. A few states, therefore, tax all commodities and then rebate to the poor a sum equivalent to the tax on

THE PROPERTY TAX has drawn the hottest fire recently, largely because of its rapid growth, pushed by escalating housing prices and mushrooming costs of local

Many people criticize it as inequitable because they find it hard to see that home ownership contributes to their ability to pay. It is obvious, however, that home ownership saves them the cost of paying rent to someone else. Economists are less concerned about the general fairness of the property tax than about the inequities in its administration. If property were assessed accurately, many argue, the tax could be defended on ability-to-pay grounds. it would also have obvious merits as a benefitsreceived levy to support property-related services.

But too often properties of similar value are assessed quite differently for tax purposes, partly because those that have not recently been sold are hard to price correct-

Another property tax problem is that sudden, steep increases in value (often due to inflation) can push taxes up sharply, thus imposing hardships on many homeowners, especially those with fixed incomes. Frequent reassessments at such times certainly improve the elasticity of the tax, and possibly its horizontal equity, but create uncertainty about tax liabilities.

THE MAJOR TAX SOURCE of our three levels of government - federal income tax, state sales tax, local property tax - each score mixed ratings on the tests of a 'good' tax system. No single one is perfect nor likely to Tax reform therefore, really boils down to trade - offs. For either the income or the property tax to be made more fair to individuals with special problems it must become more complex and more expensive to administer.

Making the sales tax progressive in structure might increase its equity but reduce its simplicity.

How are these values to be weighted? Is neutrality, for example, sacrosanct? Or could a poorly functioning economy be actually improved by careful use of a non-neutral tax that might sacrifice some equity for the sake of eco-

"Tax reform" may, in fact, be more a matter of clarifying these trade-offs than of attaining some imagined ideal, and only the ebb and flow of politics can ultimately determine the balance among them.

Stock Judging At Fair To Begin Here Monday

from Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Colorado will compete for $36,500 in prize money here at the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair this week.

The number of livestock entered for the eight-day exposition is slightly down from last year's 1,404 head. Steve Lewis, general manager for the fair, said the hog and sheep competition was down the most, while the number of entrants in some shows is up.

Cattle numbers are slightly up with 240 entered this year compared to 223 last year. The barrow division has 367 entries, down from 398 shown in the 1977 fair. Sheep stand at 102, sharply down from last year's 170 head.

Entries in the junior lamb division drastically decreased from 532 head in 1977 to 386 this year, but the number of entries in the junior steer competition jumped from 81 the previous year to 102 at the 1978 show

Judging will begin Monday with the open barrow show which is terminal with no "take home" barrows. Exhibitors will compete for $5,650 in premiums. The grand champion barrow will draw $1,000 and there will be $750 for the reserve grand champion.

On Tuesday, 95 Angus cattle will be judged for $4,370 in prize money. About 150 dairy cattle are entered with competition for $2,790 in premiums in the Jersey, Holstein and Brown Swiss divisions and $3,905 in the Milking Shorthorn will total $4,100. Prize money in the junior dairy, beef, lamb and steer divisions will total about $10,105.

Jim Rucker of Lexington, Okla. will judge the barrows beginning at 9 a.m. Monday. Competition will continue on Tuesday with the Angus show at 9 a.m. judged by George Strathearn of Maripo-

Dairy breed judging will begin at 9 a.m. Tuesday with Jersey cattle competition. Holstein cattle will be judged at 2 p.m. that day. On Wednesday, Milking Shorthorn will be judged at 9 a.m. fol-lowed by Brown Swiss judging at 2 p.m. Larry Madren of Ames, Iowa will judge all the dairy breeds.

Breeding sheep exhibition will begin at 1 p.m. on Tuesday and conclude Wednesday at 9 a.m. J. Rex Stultz of Del Rio will judge the animals in the Swine

In junior competition, beef heifers will be judged at 11 a.m. Tuesday, with the lamb show at 9 a.m. and the steer show at 10 a.m. on Friday.

According to Lewis, about 75 horses will be present for the quarter horse show which will get underway at 7 a.m. Saturday. Mary Hopkins of Vicksburg Miss. will judge the event which will offer $2,350 in premiums.

Other judging events will include rabbits, poultry and pigeons, cutting horse and all-youth rodeo competition. All types of crops, vegetables, fruits and garden produce grown on the High Plains will be displayed in the Agricultural Building along with booths entered by area Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapters.

In addition, Lewis said a solar energy exhibition will be presented for the first year. The Texas Department of Agricul-ture and the Women Involved in Farm Economics (W.I.F.E.) organization will also provide displays.

Volunteer workers from across the region will supervise the activities in the agricultural and livestock departments.

General chariman of agriculture and livestock exhibits is Ken Cook, Lubbock County agent.

General superintendent of livestock is W. B. Griffin of Tahoka. Assisting Griffin is Ollie Liner of Plainview.

Joe Wise of Lamesa is head of the beef cattle department. Syd Conner of Post is in charge of the dairy cattle division assisted by Ernest Kiker of Gail.

Supervising barrows and junior lambs is Lee Roy Colgan of Lamesa. Billy Roach of Snyder will assist Colgan. Sheep are being overlooked by Kyle Smith of Seminole and his assistant Gordon Harris of Plains. Junior beef and dairy cattle are being supervised by John Farris of Littlefield and assistant Steve Herber of Crosbyton while the supervision of junior steer competition is under Stanley Young of Tahoka and assistant Denny Belew of

Farmer Quits Using Chemicals

VALLEY, Neb. (UPI) - K.C. Livermore, who farms 260 acres near this eastern Nebraska town, says he stopped using chemicals on his crops because organic farming is healthier for people, livestock and profits.

"Several chemical companies tried to talk us out of it when we started farming organically in 1967," Livermore said. When they saw we had our minds made up, one guy from a big chemical plant said — 'It's gonna be all right, you're gonna make it "

"They know we don't need their products. Dumping chemicals on land pollutes streams, underground water, crops, animals and, eventually, man."

Livermore, 60, was raised on an eastern Colorado farm and began working his Nebraska land in 1938. About that time, he said, virgin pasture, yielding 115 bushels of corn per acre on the first erally keep up or do better.

Soybeans can also be used as a "catch crop" when other crops fall because of weather, insect or disease problems, and as a "double crop" behind vegetables, small grains and grazing crops.

"Soybeans in Alabama also have a ready export market at the Port of Mobile which gives growers a 10 in 15-cent.

For years, one of the most popular statistics used by advocates and critics of U.S. food policies was one in which food spending was expressed as a percentage of disposable personal income

This figure - a national ratio of takehome pay related to the food bill - was used to illustrate how well off Americans really were in comparison with the rest of the world. In other words, if food bills took 50 percent of the national take-home pay in country A and 44 percent in country B, it was easy to say that Americans were much better off when only 17 or 18 percent of their disposable income went for

This kind of reasoning was frequently used by secretaries of agriculture - and many others in and out of government - to defend farmers during times of rapidly rising food costs.

Conceivably, the "low food costs" implied by such statistics have helped temper some consumer reactions to soaring grocery bills and, in a broad sense, may have influenced at least slightly some agricultural policy decisions in the past.

Armed with such an impressive statistic as "last year Americans paid only 16 percent of their take-home pay for gro-ceries,"it was easy for lobbyists and farmbelt members of Congress to seek higher federal price supports, direct sub-sidies and other benefits to help farm-

According to Dr. Don Orr, assistant professor of animal science at Texas Tech and swine specialist, the pig is actually a gilt with testicles attached probably to her uterus. "It is certainly not common, but it probably happens more often than we think," he said. Dr. Leland Tribble, a Tech animal sci-

What's In It For Old No. 1?

IT IS NOT only President Carter and his top aides who must make a decision of vital concern to the nation in the not distant fu-The American people stand at the crossroads of which direction this government and this society will go-toward more Liberalism or toward Conservatism.

There has been much talk of late about how the winds of change are blowing across the land, how the vast so-called middle-ofthe-road "majority" and what has been termed the "blue collar elite," are becoming more conservative.

HOWEVER, DESPITE all the talk, the tax revolt in the wake of Proposition 13 and the polls, there are still many disturbing signs that contradict the Conservative move.

It is true that not only the voters in California, but those across the nation have been "sending 'em a message," from City Hall to the Statehouse to the Halls of Congress. Lubbock has just been witness to a tax protest which brought results at both the City and School Board level.

And it is true that in recent elections, including those of the past week, Conservatives or those espousing greater fiscal and bureacratic restraint, won over those wearing more Liberal labels

However, with the Nov. 7 general elections little more than five weeks away, the outlook for major Republican or Conservative gains in Congress is considered dim. And, despite Mr. Carter's tenuous triumph at Camp David, Sen. Ted Kennedy, an avowed Liberal, is still regarded as a formidable challenger to the President for the 1980 Democratic nomination. Why?

ONE RELIABLE nationwide poll says that only 20 percent of Americans call themselves Liberals and only 4 percent radicals. Of the rest, 34 percent say they are middleof-the-roaders and 32 percent Conservatives.

Broken down in another survey, those who regard themselves as Independents outrank both the Democrats and Republicans. With such "voting strength," how come we have a Congress which continues to endorse deficit

How come we have a President whose major strength still comes from the motley assortment of special interest and pressure groups and minorities who stand to benefit the most from federal spending and federal handouts?

And how come the pattern is likely to be repeated Tuesday, Nov. 7, unless there is a major change of heart across the land?

THE ANSWER is both complex and simple. It also is one based more on "what's in t-for No. 1" rather than "what's best in the long run for the nation.

FORTUNATELY. FOR Lubbock and the South Plains, voters have shown they for the most part are willing to put their ballots where their mouths are.

For several years, this area-also known for its strong defense posture and patriotism -has moved more and more toward a Conservative stance, although deviating now and then in individual contests.

But, across the state and nation, many persons still associate voting Republican as akin to having some social disease, although generally speaking it is the GOP candidate who stands for what a majority of the voters claim they believe in.

THIS IS NOT to say that there are not conservative Democrats, and good ones.

There are, including some in this area. But, by and large, it must be remembered that it has been under a Democrat-controlled Congress and for the most part Democrat Presidents that much of this nation's Great Society spending programs have been enacted

'The Bomb' Poses Challenge To Mankind, He Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal I wrote this Nov. 1, 1977 with sadness in my heart. It was the 25th anniversary of the explosion of the first hydrogen bomb. Some of the most depressing news I have ever heard is talk by military men about survival after a nuclear war. To the common man this is an intolerable thought. They are talking about the incineration of hundreds of millions of human beings. There can be no compromise between war and peace. The neutron bomb is but another step in the wrong direction One might wonder if the arms race can ever be stopped. Yes, I think it can, if mankind cares-enough about the survival of the human race. The common man does not want war as a solution to the world's problems. The peacemakers of the world must protest by the hundreds of millions using any peaceful means to avert a nuclear disaster that is more certain with each passing day as the arms race We must find some way to convince the governments of nations that the majority of mankind does not want continued research and development of more terrible weapons of war. Little trees become big trees. Little bombs be come big bombs. We call this one a tactical weapon. Soon others will have it, then we build a deterrent to deter the deterrent, and on and on. Mankind has been given an "Island in Space. It is a home for us all. For the survival of mankind we must stop the nuclear arms race and use our time, money, energy and technology for the common good of all. Was not Enrico Fermi right a quarter of a century ago when he said, "The world will be sad now" upon hearing of the successful explosion of the 1st hydrogen bomb? I ask, has life become less important than things of steel, wood and stone? My God, where are we going? Our Father who art in heaven...hallowed be thy name.

Tax Me, You Fool

HERE'S HOW "the good life" seems to be shaping up, 1978 style: You get a big cost-of-living raise so you rush out to spend it, which creates demand, which ups the cost of living, which wipes out your raise.

Leaving you worse off than you were before you got richer.

And if your salary boost was big enough, you get yourself promoted to a higher tax bracket, causing you to wonder if you can afford to be so successful. Granted, this is "kitchen economics" (as opposed to the high-falutin' Laffer Curve and "macroeconomic" theories), but isn't that where we're hurting right now? Here's another bit of irony: Wages and jobs increased enough last year to cross 255,000 people UNION WAGES ARE up and will be a lot upper when the Teamsters get their licks in. Not only that, the Labor department says wages and salaries for non-union workers are going up even faster.

President Carter tried to set an example by holding the 3.6 million federal employes to a 5.5percent pay raise this year.

They screamed, but government salaries and fringes are still as good or better than private pay -and they're almost double what they were 10 years ago. Even the farmers are doing better, for the moment anyway. And forecasters are predicting this

ONE ECONOMIST, Dr. Karl Brunner from the University of Rochester, says flat out that the United States has lost the battle against inflation because the government never seriously intended to fight it in the first place.

Tinkering with interest rates won't do it, he says. What will is tight control over the growth of the nation's money supply, a lot less government spending, and bigger tax cuts. There are signs that maybe Jimmy's almost

Ups, Downs Of Feed Grains Govern Beef Industry

Cattle producers who move their animals off range or pasture and into the feedlots are influenced by grazing conditions. If grazing is poor, the feedlots are busier than if grazing in the United States is mostly good.

If grazing conditions remain good, feedlot managers might have trouble getting large numbers of cattle to feed, even if feed grain prices slip.

LOOKING AHEAD, the experts fully expect more fed cattle, taking an ever-larger share of total beef production through 1980, if grain supplies remain ample and favorably priced for cattle feeding.

The causes are traceable to public demand for grain-fed beef, along with the general movement in agriculture to raising animals in confinement.

Costs of production for feeder cattle have jumped dramatically in recent years, and that's had a kind of ripple effect on all facets of cattle production: If the cost of producing a feeder calf is higher, producers must receive higher prices for the finished product to stay in business.

Fully one-half the cost of producing feeder cattle is in land charges. In the past five years, land values have doubled, and while the price of beef was relatively low, producers suffered. They often were unable to wring their costs out of the selling price of cattle.

PEOPLE WHO AREN'T already in the business of raising feeder cattle find a discouraging word in the cost of land. For the new entrant, land values averaged $2,375 per cow in 1976. But for the ongoing producer who owned the land since the 1940s, the value per cow was under $800.

These values vary by region. In the Southwest, where more acres per head are needed because of the lack of grass and the dry climate, the land value per head for new entrants was an average $3,868, while the value of land owned by ongoing producers was $1,230.

by ongoing producers was $1,230.

At the low end of the scale was the West, where fewer acres of privately owned land per animal are needed, because public lands often are used for grazing. There, the land values were $1,450 per cow for new entrants and $461 for the old hands.

Considering these factors — land costs, the demand for grain-fed beef, and the movement to raising livestock in confinement — the feeder cattle and fed cattle industries of the future probably will be strong, experts say.

And home barbecues probably will continue to crackle with the sound of siz-

Beef Production Down, Prices Rising

beef at relatively low prices is over for now, as beef production is declining and prices are rising. Led by a reduction in beef supplies and a strong demand for meat, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture, meat prices will pull the food price index up. This is expected to continue during the next few years as beef herds are being rebuilt.

The beef cattle industry is at a critical point in the current cattle inventory cycle. Producers sustained heavy financial losses during most of the past four years, as their costs ran high while cattle prices when prices rise.

Of course, livestock producers can't respond overnight to a signal for higher or lower production. And there's no guarantee that the price situation won't be reversed before a producer can react to the previous signal. Thus these price signals tage, with only a three-month turna-

If the cattle producer wants to rebuild his depleted herd, the process takes even longer. If the first offspring of a heifer is retained to build the herd rather than taken to slaughter, 51/2 years could elapse from the time the first calf was retained until the new-born heifer matures and bears an offspring which reaches slaughter weight.

Thus, once the herd is being rebuilt, production increases will continue long after lower prices signal time to reduce the herd. And that's what happened in the 1974-76 period, when higher and higher beef production occurred despite lower prices, thus causing large financial losses to cattlemen.

NOW, THE CATTLE inventory cycle is nearing a turning point. The end of the herd reduction period soon will occur, with herd rebuilding to follow. Producers are now receiving the higher prices signals to expand herds.

The source of these price signals is the American consumer. The primary influences on long-run demand are consumer tastes, preferences, attitudes, and incomes. Current incomes and relative prices of other products affect short-run demand.

Americans show a growing taste for meat, with per capita consumption of red meats and poultry reaching 242 pounds in the 1975-77 period - up 19 pounds from a

This increase came despite rising meat prices. This may be due to an overall rise in inflation that has been so great that beef price increases have lagged behind.

When dollars are adjusted for inflation, retail beef prices in the first quarter of 1978 were cheaper than in 1971 and 1972. In other words, consumers could buy tion-adjusted money last March than during any quarterly period from 1971 through mid-1976. Even faced with fastrising prices, consumers still paid more for beef, thus supporting prices.

ANOTHER INFLUENCE on meat prices is the marketing system, which includes all steps in handling between producer and consumer. At each step in the process, each different handler must turn a profit in the long run. The cost of marketing is measured by the farm-retail price spread - total markup between farmer and consumer by the "middlemen" handlers.

While the farm-retail price spread has increased sharply during the past decade, government economists say this indicates rising costs rather than excessively fattened profits. Rising labor, energy, and other production costs, along with consumers' demands for more expensive convenience food forms, will continue to boost the retail price. All of these costs push retail prices higher.

The producers are largely price takers who have no control over prices they re-ceive for livestock in the short run. This is because once the animals reach slaughter weight, producers can only hold them back from the market a very short time. Thus their only control is to vary the level of supply over the long run.

PRODUCERS' PROFITS vary with price levels and production costs. Less than a decade ago, cattlemen enjoyed a period of strong demand and low and relatively stable feed costs - thus they were encouraged to expand their herds. Then, in 1973, production costs soared with grain price hikes.

In response to sharply higher grain prices, pork producers made massive liq-dropped drastically in 1975, forcing hog prices up. Hog prices remained relatively high through 1977 and are expected to average above the 1977 level this year. This should encourage higher production next

Meanwhile, beef cattle producers have suffered. A glance at the "net margin per head" since 1972 shows why. Cattle feeders lost money on most cattle sold during the past four years, with losses exceeding $100 per head at times. But this year, net margins have shifted in the black as fed cattle prices have risen. However, with feeder cattle prices rising, cattle feeding profits may be squeezed by year-end, US-DA economists say.

Four years ago, a weak demand for feeder cattle, coupled with a continued buildup of supply, pushed prices down sharply. Prices remained low through 1977 and compounded producer losses. During this period, many dropped out of

IN THE AFTERMATH of 1974, the massive liquidation of the cattle herd was launched in 1975 and continued even through last spring after the sharp runup of cattle prices. Producers may need an extended period of higher prices to regain losses of the past few years. In other words, such a period of higher prices may be needed to entice sharp production in-

Beef production is considered almost sure to decline during the rest of 1978. The reduced cattle inventory will yield smaller supplies over the next few years. Herd rebuilding — saving heifers instead of sending them to slaughter - also will contribute to lower beef supplies for the next few years. Prices will be trending upward, economists say, but at a lower annual rate of increase than in 1978.

Meat Label Can Be Deceptive

TO LABEL OR NOT TO label, that

And a not so easy one for consum ers, manufacturers, and policy makers concerned with U. S. meat im-

Currently, the only imported meats which are so designated are those which are processed and packaged abroad. A good example is canned

However, some processed meats are repackaged after they reach U. S. shores and thus lose their import label before reaching the consumer. An ex-ample is beef imported from Argen-tina. Because of hoof and mouth disease in the country, the meat must be cooked before it can be shipped to the United States. Here it is mixed with other ingredients to form processed products such as chili or stew.

Meats which come to the United States in either a fresh or frozen state are rarely identified as imports at the

Take, for instance, frozen bor beef - by far the major meat item imported. More than 90 percent of this is ground up and mixed with do-mestic beef for hamburger or sausage

SOME CONSUMERS are concerned about this imported meat that escapes their notice. They want to know if it's on par with the U.S. product in quality and price. Livestock producers are concerned that these 'undetected' imports compete with their product. Congress is responding to these concerns by looking at several bills which address the issue. And the U. S. to determine its origin. Effects on the consumer or the meat industry in general, though, would most likely be small, the study indicates. How much of an impact would depend upon how the cons er views a particular product.

For example, a Danish label on a ham lends prestige. However, consumers might balk at -- if they were made aware of — imported ground beef in a restaurant boasting a western motif.

Also, some people living in beef-producing regions of the country might shun the imported product purely on general principles.

Further, the NCA is opposed to a provision that would terminate the 1964 Meat Import Act on Dec. 31, 1988. The NCA also is in favor of the provision that would do away with the President's authority to suspend quotas be-cause "it would eliminate periodic pressures on Congress and the adminstration" to let more beef enter when retail prices are high.

BEEF CATTLE FEEDLOT - Since the U. S. Det Agriculture started keeping track of the number of cattle on feed in 1930, the share of total commercial cattle slaughter linked to the feedlot has more than doubled. In 1930, about 5 percent of the Jan. 1 cattle inventory included cattle on feed.

On the average, the United States imports about 7 percent of the beef Americans eat, depending upon demand here at home as well as import quotas. For 1977, this totaled more than 1.9 billion pounds (carcass weight), most of which - nearly 85 percent - was fresh or frozen bone-

And most of that beef goes into the processing till in the United States. Data for 1969-70, the latest survey, shows that about 90 percent is used as a processed product. Or put another way, 15-20 percent of the processed beef - including ground beef - that Americans eat is im-

The next biggest beef item is corned beef, accounting for 7 percent of U.S. beef imports. Veal accounts for only 1 percent.

Obviously, U. S. meat imports don't stop with beef, although they make up the bulk of them - 80 percent.

In 1977, the United States also imported 439 million pounds of pork - slightly more than 3 percent of total U.S. pork consumption. And canned hams and shoulders accounted for most of that.

LAMB, MUTTON AND GOAT make up the remainder of U.S. red meat imports, accounting for only a fraction of

So where do the imported red meats

The bulk of the pork originates from Denmark, Poland, the Netherlands and Canada, in order of importance. Virtually all the lamb and mutton imports come from Oceania - Australia and New Zea-

Australia and New Zealand also figure heavily in beef and veal shipments to the United States - they account for twothirds of such imports. Other suppliers of note are Argentina, Canada, Mexico and Brazil. North American neighbors even send some live animals On the other side of the trade coin, the United States does export some red meat, although imports far outweigh exports - by six to one.

However, if the total animals from which red meat comes are considered, the United States forges way ahead in shipments of variety meats, animal fats, and hides and skins (excluding sheep and live). And valuewise, these products offset the deficit in red meat trade so that the dollar figure fairly well balances out between exports and imports.

ALTHOUGH BEEF IS the leader in U. S. red meat imports, it takes a back seat to pork in exports. In fact, last year the United States exported 294 million pounds of pork (carcass weight) and only 103 million pounds of beef and veal. Lamb and mutton came in a distant third, with not quite 5 million pounds.

The biggest customer for U. S. pork was Canada, with more than a 60 percent share. Japan was next, taking nearly a fifth of that exported. Venezuela, Mexico and the Bahamas were others of note.

Japan bought nearly half of the U.S. exports of beef and veal in 1977. Japan has gone from a nominal taker of U.S. beef in the past decade to the No. 1 customer. In 1968, the United States sold the Japanese less than one-half million pounds; last year, nearly 45 million. As a result, total U.S. beef and veal exports have shot up, although some gain has come from other countries.

IN ADDITION TO JAPAN, other significant takers of U.S. beef and veal are Canada, the Bahamas and Venezuela.

There's more to the U.S. red meat trade situation than meets the eye, though - namely the 1964 Meat Import This act grew out of a concern to harness imports so that domestic cattle prices would not suffer unduly. The law itself came on the heels of a 10-year rise in imports and a sharp decline in U.S. cattle prices. Basically, the law sets up a formula for import quotas on fresh, chilled, or frozen beef, veal, mutton or goat meat. The formula is intended to keep such imports at the same percentage of domestic production that existed during the 1959-63 base period - about 7 percent. The quotas are allocated to individual countries on the basis of what they've shipped to the United States in the past. Only those countries certified to be free of hoof and mouth disease and up to U.S. inspection standards are supposed to be Imports of lamb, pork, prepared or preserved forms of beef, veal, mutton and goat meat, and other meats and meat products, as well as live animals, are not covered under the law. And about one-into these exempt categories.

HERE'S HOW THE law works: Each year, the secretary of agriculture is required to publish in the Federal Register the estimated quantity that would trigger the imposition of quotas under the law. He is required to estimate quarterly the quantity of meat that, but for the law, would enter the United States in that year.

If the secretary's estimate of imports exceeds the trigger level, the President is required to invoke quotas on imports of meats subject to the law. Quotas may also be suspended or the total quantity increased if the President determines and proclaims that any of the following exist: - Such action is required "by overriding economic or national security interests," giving special weight to the importance to the nation of the economic well-being of the domestic livestock in-

- The supply of articles of the kind described will be "inadequate to meet domestic demand at reasonable prices.' - Trade agreements entered into after enactment of the law ensure that the policy set forth will be carried out. Since the law was enacted, voluntary restraint agreements have been negotiated in six years at or below the level at which quotas would be imposed. On three other occasions (1972, 1973 and 1974), the President suspended quotas entirely, allowing unrestricted imports. The quotas have been imposed only once

THE NEGOTIATED VOLUNTARY restraint program for 1978 originally was set at 1,292.3 million pounds of regulated meat. It included agreements with 12 nations and an exchange of letters with Canada. However, in June, President Carter called for a renegotiation of the agreements to increase the amount by says the economic impacts of this move are not expected to be great for either retail meat prices or cattle prices. cient to meet consumer demands. The NCA, a prime mover of the counter-cyclical concept, is opposed to setting any minumum or floor at all on the amount of meat that can be imported. As it is currently, since the law is adjusted annually to reflect changes in U.S. domestic meat output, more foreign meat is let in when domestic production

City Church Installing Resident Pastor

Today at 4 p.m. Clark N. Ross is being installed as the first resident pastor of First United Church-UCC, 2412 13th St.

Founded in 1968 as a house church under the name "First Community Fellowship," the congregation has been served by two non-resident pastors in earlier years. Each of the two ministers commuted to Lubbock at biweekly intervals while serving Union Congregational Church-UCC Friona.

In 1975 the group began meeting on a regular basis at the University Ministries building on 13th Street. Though small, the group sponsored the resettlement of a Vietnamese refugee family, was active in support of the free breakfast program in the Lubbock public schools, and cooperated in the founding of the Citizens' Alliance for Successful Schools.

Rev. Ross comes to the Lubbock church following pastorates in Dallas, Portland, Ore., Wyandotte, Mich., Chicago and St. Charles, Ill. He received his bachelor of divinity degree from the University of Chicago Divinity School in 1955. In addition to his pastorate here, Rev. Ross is also administartor of the South Plains Child-

He is married to the former Lynette Carr of Chicago and is the father of four children, two of whom reside with the family at 5526 35th St. and two now living in California.

Participating in the 4 p.m. installation service today at First United Church are Rev. Rollin Russell, associate conference minister, South Central Conference, UCC; Rev. Kenneth Pheiffer, chairman of the church and ministry committee, North Texas Association, UCC; Rev. Norman Sirnic, minister of Union Congregational Church-UCC in Friona; Rev. Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

THERE ARE MANY opportunities for crises in a city as large as New York and it is not surprising that this area is occasionally the victim of a power failure. I remember a time in the 1950's when the lights of Manhattan suddenly went out; a section that usually blazes with electricy became as dark as pitch.

Engineers frantically searched for the cause of the power failure and soon found its source. Can you imagine why those lights went off? The engineers found that the power had failed because a little foreign body as small as the end of a man's finger had become wedged under a vital contact point in one of the power houses. In other words, a little bit of dirt was able to block off electric power in a large section of the largest city in the world.

If a thing like that can happen, imagine the damage a little dirt in an important contact point in a human mind can do. Living in today's world, it's very easy for any of us to pick up a wide variety of "foreign bodies" in our minds. As a result, off goes our personal power. Here's a suggestion for avoiding such a situ-

The average man, before he goes to bed, usually empties his pockets onto his dresser, desk or night table. And most of us, in those few moments, try to get rid of all the miscellaneous junk - scraps of note paper, ticket stubs, cards we pick up during the day. Personally, I always try to get rid of as much as I can; only women are lucky enough to have handbags with apparently unlimited

IT OCCURRED TO ME one night while doing this that it would be a good thing to empty my mind as I empty my pokets. During the day we pick up many mental odds and ends: a little worry, a little resentment, a few annoyances, some irritations, perhaps even some guilt reactions. It is important that these should be drained off every night, for unless they are eliminated, they accumulate. Then they can interfere with the really efficient operation of the mind.

And how do you drain these thoughts, these unwanted "foreign bodies?" I suggest that you think of your mind as a wash basin with a stopper in the bottom. Mentally remove the stopper and imaginatively "see" the mass of soiled material disappear down the drain. Then replace the mental stopper and fill the mind with clean, wholesome, spiritual thoughts.

You must be careful in performing this process not to take a thought back. When you have drained it out, conceive of it as gone. If your mind attempts to reach out for the old thought, stop it by saying, "That is gone forever, removed by God's grace, and I will not take it back.

ONE NIGHT. I came home to find my wife experimenting with some new appliances for her vacuum cleaner. She showed me a long arm attachment with which dust could be sucked out of hidden corners. It occurred to me that a similar spiritual mechanism could be employed to draw "dust" out of our thoughts.

So I worked out what I call a "vacuum cleaner" prayer: "Dear Lord, by the power of Thy spirit, draw now from the unseen crannies and crevices of my soul the dust of the world which has settled there." Try using that "vacuum cleaner prayer" for yourself. The resulting sense of cleanness will add to your inner peace, and to your effectiveness as well.

Another method of cleaning out your thoughts is to figuratively and imaginatively "reach" into your mind, as though you could put your fingers into your brain and pull out unhappy thoughts one by one. As you imagine yourself doing this, affirm: "I am taking out and throwing away that fear, that prejudice, that resentment, that impure recollection." Then, when the mind is thus emptied, continue to affirm, "I am putting into my mind creative and dynamic thoughts. I am filling my mind with God's goodness and power.

By cleaning out your mind in this manner, you will find peace and also new

The main objective is to increase drilling in western Siberia's Tyumen Province, where production far outstrips all other oil and gas areas of the U.S.S.R. An intensive effort is underway to speed second-stage development of the region's oil

Soviet news media are promoting a nationwide "Socialist competition" campaign calling on factories to "deliver western Siberia's orders ahead of schedule, with high-quality workmanship."

Besides giving Tyumen top priority for new exploration, drilling, pipelining and production equipment, Russia is transferring to western Siberia many drilling and rig building crews that previously worked in the nation's Volga-Ural and other older petroleum provinces.

The mobilization is taking place at an almost frantic pace for a simple reason: oil output by the world's top producer is about to reach a plateau.

It has become virtually impossible for Russia to reach even the lower limits of its 1980 crude-plus-condensate goal of 12.4 million to 12.8 million barrels a day. At best, production will be in the range of 12 million to 12.2 million barrels a day, the Journal predicts.

Accelerated development of western Siberian fields may slow the decline in Soviet oil output growth during the next two years, but it will take big discoveries to prevent a sharp drop by 1985.

A minimum decline of 1 million to 1.5 million barrels a day is shaping up for 1981-85. That would put the U.S.S.R.'s crude-plus-condensate output below 11 million barrels a day and well under the July, 1978, level of 11.445 million barrels

Conversely, gas flow is exceeding goals and is expected to equal or surpass the official 1980 target of nearly 15.36 trillion cubic feet. Output is expected to increase by at least 1 trillion cubic feet a year through 1985 and probably into the 1990s.

The gas share in total Soviet fuel production increased from 23.1 percent in 1976 to 24 percent in 1977 and is expected to continue upward through the 1980s. On an equivalent basis, gas production is likely to come close to oil output by 1985.

Western Siberia, led by the supergiant Samotlor field discovered in 1965, has been offsetting declining production from other regions since 1976. During that year, western Siberia provided a 674,000-barrel-a-day gain, while the nationwide output gain was only 576,000 barrels daily.

The three-day trip for two was won by the individual crewmen through accumulating safety points during the year on a system devised by the company

Winners and particpants of this year's award include:

Mr. and Mrs. Jack DeArmond, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Hester, Keith Sitton, Kathy Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Humphreys, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Monsey,

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Logsdon, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Greene, Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Rumbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Nunn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palomin, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Elder, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Mulkey, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. D. B.

Jerry Wilson and Dave Vance also achieved high points during the contest, but due to personal schedule conflicts were unable to make the trip.

"These individuals worked hard all year on safety," stated the president of the company, F. L. "Pete" Sitton. "Therefore, we feel as if this trip to Acapulco is a just reward for not only taking care of themselves but also looking out for their fellow crewmen."

Worldwide Refining Capacity Increases

HOUSTON (AP) — Worldwide crude oil refining capacity has increased more than 70 percent since 1970.

With Europe setting the pace, world capacity has increased in the 8-year period from 44.8 million barrels to 76.6 million from 44.8 million barrels to 76.6 million barrels aday.

The capacity of European refineries jumped from 16 million to 32.6 million harrels daily. North American refineries moved from 13.6 million to 19.3 million barrels a day. The Far East jumped from 5 million to 9.6 million.

In its annual report on industry trends, Hydrocarbon Processing, a trade publication, says the present growth trend in refining capacity bears out the increasing use of crude oil as the world's preferred energy source.

The publication forecasts that in 1979 worldwide capital expenditures on new refining projects will approximate $11.2 billion and that maintenance costs will add another $4.3 billion.

In two years the number of refinery consruction projects have increased from 857 to 1,014.

"This increasing refinery construction activity is directly related not only to the increasing dependence on crude oil as the major source of energy, but also to the rapidly growing worldwide demand for gasoline." the publication said.
"Similarly, U.S. refinery construction activity has been steadily growing, but with greater acceleration. Since June 1976, it has gone from a low of 183 projects to its present level of 255 pro-

The increased consumption of gasoline worldwide, the report added, is showing up in the rising level of construction ac-tivity of gasoline oriented refinery units. Since 1970, the publication said, the industrial areas have increased their share of world refining capacity from 77.2 percent to 80.3 percent.

"Their 26.9 million barrels a day capacity increase amounted to 84.6 percent of the total worldwide increase of 31.8 million brrels a day during this 8-year period." the report said.

Compared with the $11.2 billion for refining projects, the publication estimates other worldwide capital expenditures by the industry next year will include $13 billion for petrochemical projects, $3.3 billion for gas processing facilities, and $450 million for solid fuels projects.

Maintenance expenditure estimates include $5.7 billion for petrochemical plants and $490 million for gas processing

Capital expenditure projections for 1979 in the United States include $3.4 billion for refining. $2.6 billion for petrochemicals, $300 million for gas processing, and $150 million for solid fuels.

Anticipated expenditures in other areas of the world total $7.8 billion for refining projects, $10.4 billion for petrochemical facilities, $3 billion for gas processing, and $300 million for solid fuels projects.

eraged 91.3 percent for all of 1977 compared with 87.6 percent for all of 1976. "The increasing operating factors have been caused by greater demand for gaso-line and heating fuels," the report said.

"About 532,000 barrels a day should one on stream during 1978, of which bout 166,000 barrels a day already has seen completed," the report said.

Commissioner Critical Of Energy Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Jon Newton says he can't think of a more "short-sighted" approach to solving the nation's energy shortage than the natural gas bill that seems to be gaining support in the U.S. Senate.

The Senate beat back an attempt, 59-39, recently to send the bill back to a conference committee for redrafting.

Newton was asked to comment on the vote after the commission routinely set the October statewide oil allowable at 100 percent.

As usual, the large East Texas Field was restricted to 86 percent production in order to avoid possible waste.

Newton said the federal bill would be harmful to Texas consumers and produ

He said increased regulation would add two years to the time a gas producer would know what he could get for his gas. "It simply doesn't make sense," Newton said.

"I can't think of a more short-sighted bill from Texas' point of view or the country's point of view," he said. Major producers of Texas crude oil asked for 3,507,480 barrels a day in Octo-ber, a decrease of 20,797 a day from Sep-

He said the demand for gas declined 5 percent over the past 60 days.

"This is due largely to a seasonal drop," he said. "The major portions of the market is in Texas — where October weather is relatively comfortable without using energy to heat or cool.

Newton said, however, that government regulations designed to conserve gas have been partly response growing dependence by industry and utilities on crude oil as a substitute for

This leads to higher oil imports, he said, adding:

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE has criticized three government programs which it says could withdraw millions of acres of land from en-

API President Frank N. Ikard says the U.S. should not "close the doors" on energy by restricting the development of resources on public lands. In voicing API's position, Ikard said it is ironic that at a time when the U.S.

should be reducing oil imports, proposals are being made which would hinder the expansion of domestic energy sources. "Just at the time that we ought to have flexible, balanced policies to serve the diversity of interests in our nation, policies are being developed to serve narrow interests." Ikard said. "The lack of balance shows up particularly in our federal lands programs. Just when we ought to be exploring for and developing new energy, the government is placing 'off limits' signs on vast tracts of public lands which are potentially rich in petroleum," he added. Ikard was especially critical of the second Roadless Area Review and Evaluation program (RARÉ II). The program, he says, would withdraw millions of acres of prospective oil and gas lands from development in the Overthrust Belt, which stretches from Montana at the Canadian border south through Idaho,

Another program, the BLM Wilderness Review, could result in the closing off of even substantially more acreage, according to the API spokesman.
"It could involve anywhere from 120 to 170 million acres of land, which is almost entirely in the 11 Western states and Alaska. Both these existing programs

-RARE II and the BLM Review-could close out energy development, especially in the Overthrust Belt area," he said. THE ALASKAN PROPOSAL, currently in Congress, would designate about 100 million acres as wilderness areas, according to Ikard. He singled out the Alaska pipeline as a project that proves public lands can be used for many purposes.

In the case of Alaska, "stringent environmental standards were adopted and applied to the multitude of problems encountered during the pipeline construc-tion. As a result, the ecology and environment of Alaska remain intact, and the oil from Alaska is helping reduce imports. It's a balanced program, and it

The API spokesman said he agrees with the need to conserve natural resources, but "to focus exclusively on that objective is to adopt the kind of unbalanced approach that has served us so badly in the past."

Ikard said, "The next generation will want wilderness areas and parks. But tomorrow's people will also need the oil, natural gas, minerals, timber, grazing and agricultural areas that are to be found on the public lands. Surely we should not fully close those lands to economic development or prevent their use for

He said, "I believe we should also take a measured approach when it comes to the question of who should develop the potential energy resources of our country. In particular, I believe we should not tinker with the present structure of the petroleum industry-especially when the nation needs to develop all kinds

SUCCESSFUL OIL WELLS drilled in the United States during the first half of 1978 declined 5.4 percent, while the number of dry holes increased 11.4 percent,

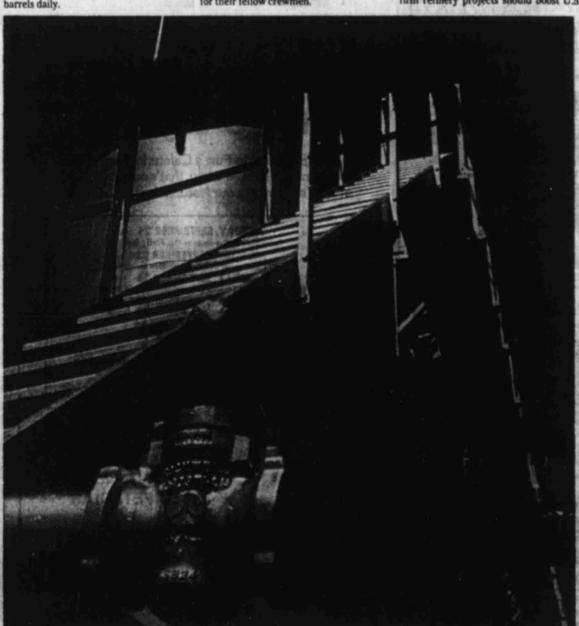

In its Quarterly Review of Drilling Statistics, API reported that the number of new producing oil wells during the first two quarters of this year totaled 8,549, compared to 9,036 during the same period last year. Dry holes, however, in-

Natural gas wells were high on the success scale, compared to the first half of 1977. Drillers completed 5,940 successful gas producers, compared to 5,068 last year, for a 17.2 percent increase.

While oil wells were declining and gas wells were increasing, the industry logged a 20.9 percent increase in the total number of exploratory wells.

Development wells drilled for oil and gas in areas of proven production showed an increase of 1.2 percent.

STORAGE COMPLETED—Oil storage tanks have been completed for a discovery well seven miles northeast of Lubbock.

Designated the No. 1 Countess, and drilled by McCormick Oil & mately two miles south of the Idalou (Strawn) field.

VINCENT PRICE DATE CHANGED — Texas Tech University Center officials have noted that the date has been changed for Vincent Price's upcoming Municipal Auditorium appearance in the one-man play "Diversions And Delights." The play was changed from Tuesday to Wednesday night at the Auditorium; the curtain time re-

Log Flume Finding Favor In Fuel-Saving Era

UNDERWOOD, Wash. (AP) - It is probably the last of its kind operating in the West - and company officials say it's becoming more valuable every day. It is the Broughton Lumber Co.'s log flume, built more than 60 years ago. The flume is a 9-mile wooden chute using water from the Little White Salmon river to shoot rough-sawn lumber from the company's Willard sawmill to its fin-

ishing and shipping plant at the railroad

The flume carries 130,000 to 150,000 board-feet of wood daily - enough to build a couple of dozen homes.

The flume is a penny-pincher. The company saves the cost of using huge trucks to haul the lumber on 13 miles of winding road.

"With energy-saving being so important, the flume becomes more valuable every day," says Don vanDeventer, plant

Over its course, the chute descends 1,-000 feet. In places, it is 70 feet above the ground. Its last 4 miles cling to cliffs along the Columbia River.

Along the way, porcupines cross the chute. Deer and bear roam below it. Rattlesnakes have been found on the 12-inch board path used to patrol the flume. Darel Baumgarden, 25, is flume fore-man. He and Mel Locke, 39, are believed

CENTER STAGE 'CAROL'

BALTIMORE (UPI) - Center Stage's 1978-9 season, Sept. 29-May 27, will show seven productions, including a new adaptation of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." The other plays are Michael Cristofer's "The Shadow Box," Garson Kanin's "Born Yesterday." David berry's "G.R. Point," English playwright Stewart Par-ker's "Spokesonon" "Measure for Measure," and the 1936 Kaufman and Hart comedy "You Can't Take it With You."

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, September 24, 1978-G-9 Tentmaker's Creations Cover Lavish Parties

By STEPHEN FOX
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Percy Fried-

Friedman, a spry 70-year-old, is foun-der and president of Canvas Specialty Co., a privately owned Los Angeles firm believed to be the nation's largest manufacturer of canvas goods.

If you've ever seen the Los Angeles Dodgers or Angels rained out, it's Friedman's tarps the groundkeepers were spreading. Same goes for the Coliseum, home of the Los Angeles Rams.

And if John Wayne invites you to his annual Christmas party this year, take a look at the wine-colored tent - it's Friedman's.

Friedman, an orphan, went to work for a Los Angeles canvas manufacturer at age 17 and started CanSpec in 1943 with a borrowed $100. Since then, he says, "I've guessed right oftener than not and used my imagination."

CanSpec, which now employs 150 people, is expected to gross more than $7 million this year with about one-third of that coming from its rental business. The firm makes canvas car covers, backs for director chairs, road tarps, noise reduc-tion pads for oil derricks, water bags, backpacks and duffle bags, baby carriers, portable potties, awnings, curtains — and CanSpec branched out into the rental business about three years ago and Fried-man's tents have since covered some of Hollywood's most lavish gatherings.

The producers of the "Pink Panth movie series ordered a hot pink tent from CanSpec for a post-production bash at LaCosta. Truman Capote called when he

"Hefrer wants the tent struck right attent the party," Friedman frets, "so he can olay croquet the next day."
Friedman's biggest tent is a 200-foot by 300-foot model that uses aluminum beams the size of telephone poles as oraces. Another covers 90,000 square

BEWARE THE BANANA SKIN Mistakes in the opening are made by all classes of players, and the run-of-the-mill chess fan can be forgiven for experiencing a degree of smug delight when a Grandmaster, or even a Master, slips on a banana skin in the early moves.

Even if you are sure that you can never be caught in the opening, NEVER take anything for granted at the board. Keeping this ever in mind, you can avoid a lot of chess pratfalls.

Black rolls 4-3. How should he play? ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

There is little about the Black game that is appealing. Black is behind in the race, his 5-point is owned by White, and the number he has just rolled does nothing to improve his position.

The one move that can be ruled out right away is to bring a man from the White 12-point to the Black 6-point. It does get a man home, but in the most undesirable way imaginable—there are already more than enough men

"railroaded" on Black's 6-and 8-points. Somewhat more appealing is to bring a man to the 4-point with the 4, and drop a man from the 6-point to the 3-point with the 3. But that has a serious drawback-White can then afford to run his men with relative impunity because of the two blots in Black's home board, and the man on the 3-point will be out of play for a while. The one feature that Black does have is two points deep in White's home board. That suggests the possibility of a back game, but Black will need to improve his timing if he wants to try for that.

For the moment, Black can't be sure how he wants to play, so it is a good idea to look for the sort of move that will enable him to be flexible in his approach. We must look for a move that combines the advantages of a blocking game with

Dropping a man to the Black 4-point is a good idea-that is a key point and should be made as quickly as possible, and the easiest way to accomplish that is

For the 3, I would bring a man to the Black 10-point from the White 12-point. That move allows for all kinds of play. Should White hit that blot, he will have slowed Black down and improved his timing for a back game. At the same time the man on the 10-point will serve to contain White's men on the Black 5-point. And the man is also another possible builder for the 4-point. It's hard to find a more flexible move.

Alaska's Proposition 10: Land For Homesteading

By ROBERT C. MILLER

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) - Dr. Michael Francis Beirne, pathologist, conservative Republican and unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor of Alaska, wants to give away 30 million acres of land Nov. 7.

His creation, Proposition 10 on the general election ballot, would give Alaskans varying acreage based on the length of their residence. Beirne's Homestead Initiative follows the trail blazed in California by Howard Jarvis and Proposition 13.

Beirne, too, offered it to the Alaska Legislature and watched it suffocate in the quicksands of legislative committees. He then circulated petitions which were enthusiastically endorsed, forcing the issue before the voters.

Beirne, like Jarvis, blamed "over-government" and capitol bureaucracy for the delay in making public lands available to private owners. Also. Alaska's Gov. Jay Hammond is as opposed to 10 as California's Edmund G. Brown Jr. was to 13, and, like 13, the pollsters predict 10 will pass by a large majority. Beirne struck a responsive chord when he proposed that every Alaskan 18 years or older be given acreage in proportion to the time he has lived here Three years of residency would qualify for 40 acres, five would be worth 80 acres and a decade in the 49th state entitled those sourdoughs to 160 acres. When granted statehood, Alaska was given the right to select 104 million acres from the 375 million federally owned lands comprising the state. But the delays and federal land freezes have slowed the transfer much to the frustration of the

"The cheapest thing in Alaska should be land," said Beirne, "but it's the most expensive. Farming up here has all but disappeared as farmers are selling their land to real estate developers for fantastic prices. The state government is merely the trustee of these lands; it is only holding the acreage and managing it for us. Now we want it back."

Beirne says cheap land will not only help Alaska agriculture, but will also make for a "happy and industrious people. Hammond refuses to endorse Proposition 10, but the man who defeated him in his bid for re-nomination in the August primary, former Interior Secretary

"Sure there are lots of things wrong with the Beirne initiative," Hickel said, but the people are entitled to land. There are those who say it will bring chaos. Well, if free people bring chaos, then it's government's chaos. There will probaeation and some legislation needed but we'll clean it up. The idea of getting land to the people is paramount. That's what we're all up here for." Hammond calls the Beirne initiative "a bummer" and presents statistics showing he has turned more state land over to private owners than all his prede-

"It's a phony issue to this extent," Hammond explained. "There are going to be mass conveyances of land, far more than all the lands that have been conveyed since Statehood whether I or someone else is governor. But the Beirne thing is loaded with inequities and legal frailities.

"To begin with it is totally unconstitutional. Second, when the word gets out in the lower 48 that land is available in Alaska, we'll have a land rush that will make the Oklahoma rush look like a Sunday school picnic."

Beirne, who got into the state Legislature via a Hammond appointmett and was later elected, describes Hammond's administration as a "rat's nest of so-

"All the lands in the original 13 colonies were in private ownership," Beirne said, "and each new state was supposed to come into the state with the same privileges as the original 13. 'But not here in Alaska. Here the state is holding title to the land, they don't want to give it to the peop Hickel points out that one third of 1 percent of Alaska is in individual hands.

'We have 375 million acres of land in Alaska," he said, "and less than a million of it is in private hands. Think of any other state where they only had I percent! What in the name of God could be wrong if 10 percent were in private hands; the 13 colonies had 100 percent." Beirne is not disturbed at the prospect of a mass immigration of people from the lower 48 seeking free land. "Why not?" he asks. "Let them come. We've been trying to get people up here ever since statehood. My initiative will stimulate the Alaska economy even more than the transAlaska pipeline.

"Land in Alaska today is selling for as much as $10,000 an acre. It just doesn't make any sense, particularly when you can buy better land in my birth state, Pennsylvania, for $500 an acre. Why should land cost more than a dollar an acre

Under the terms of Proposition 10, the acreage would be given to residents absolutely free. The only requirement would be proof of residency. Unlike previous homestead acts, nobody has to live on the land or develop it to get owner-

Former Republican attorney general Edgar Boyko said the popularity of the Beirne initiative stems from Alaska's failure to obtain land.

"The people up here have been given only lip service to their demands for land," Boyko said. "The politicians in Juneau have agreed that more lands should be made available to Alaskans, and they've told us how wonderful the old fashioned homestead laws were; yet they've fought both ideas consistently and thwarted every move to convert them to reality.

"Juneau seems to think private ownership is the ultimate lock-up of the land, while many of us feel private ownership of the land is the ultimate freedom, not the ultimate lock-up.

Longhorns Doze To 17-3 Victory Over Wyoming

Churchman and Johnnie Johnson and linebacker Lance Taylor recovered fumbles inside the Wyoming 25-yard line that sixth-ranked Texas' sputtering offense cashed for all its points in a 17-3 intersectional victory over the spunky Cowboys.

Texas, now 2-0 for the year, had to drive a grand total of 25 yards for its three scores.

Trojans Shock Crimson Tide In Reversal Of Last Year

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) Charles White made up for two costly fumbles by shredding Alabama's vaunted defense for 199 yards, including a 40-yard touchdown run, as seventh-ranked Southern California knocked off No. 1 Alabama 24-14 and ended the nation's longest ma-jor college winning streak at 12

The outcome was a direct reversal of last year's meeting between the two intersectional powers when Southern Cal was ranked No.1 but dropped a 21-20 decision to Alabama in Los Angeles.

Frank Jordan kicked a 40-yard field goal early in the second period to give Southern Cal a 10-0 halftime lead after a goal line stand stopped Alabama twice at the 1-yard line. The Trojans then marched to the Al-abama 23 on a drive that lasted almost 8 1/2 minutes and was aided by a fourth-down penalty that ena-bled them to keep the football.

winning touchdown. Fusina completed passes of 7, 13 and 12 yards that moved the ball for a first down to the SMU 30. Freshman Joel Coles ran for 12, Booker Moore raced 15, and Suhey then cracked three yards into the end zone. Bahr converted to make it 26-21.

SMU sophomore quarterback Mike Ford's pinpoint passing keyed two second-quarter touchdowns that sent the Mustangs off at halftime with a 14-12 lead. All of Penn State's first half points came on field goals by Bahr - 25, 26, 41 and 30 yards. The Penn State kicker now has 13 three-pointers in 15 attempts this

SMU trailed 6-0 in the second quarter when Ford finally unlimbered his arm in a seven-play, 72-yard touchdown drive to take a 7-6 lead. Darold Turner scored from the one, but the score was set up by 17 and 49 yard pass completions by Ford. Eddie Garcia kicked the point.

After Penn State regained the lead on Bahr's third field goal, Ford completed three passes totaling 64 yards, the last for a 12-vard touchdown to Emanuel Tolbert, and Garcia converted to give SMU a 14-9 lead. In the third quarter, defensive back David Hill intercepted a Fusina pass and returned it 40 yards for the touchdown that sent the Mustangs to a 21-12

It was the first loss for SMU after two

The 6-foot, 3-inch Ford completed 18 of 36 passes for 289 yards and kept SMU in contention since the tough Penn State defense made the Mustangs' running game ineffective. Fusina wound up with 13 of 24 for 129 yards for Penn State. Penn State took a 3-0 lead with 9:18 left in the first period on a 25-yard field goal by Bahr. The Nittany Lions had a first down at the SMU 10, but a penalty and three running plays left State with a fourth and eight

Then Ford threw for 17 yards to Elton Garrett, and connected with Tony Smith for 49 and a first down at the Lions' three. On third down, Turner scored from the one. Garcia's conversion sent SMU ahead 7-6.

Penn State moved ahead with 6:30 left in the second quarter on Bahr's 41-yard field goal. State had moved to the SMU 24 when the attack again bogged and they had to go for the field goal. Three plays after Penn State kicked off.

Ford completed a 40-yard pass to Tolbert, then hit Robert Fisher for 12 and sent SMU back in front 14-9 on a 12-yard toss to Tolbert in the end zone. Again. Penn State snapped back, rolling for four first downs to the SMU 13. But again, the Mustangs' defense refused to budge and Bahr came out to kick his fourth field goal of half. This one was for 30 yards with 1:45 left in the second one minute and 21 seconds. Eckwood bolted for 51 yards and two plays later Cowins raced into the end zone from the 25 with a pitchout from quarterback Ron Calcagni.

Ish Orndonez' conversion kick made it 10-0 and the Southwest Conference power appeared in control of the game.

But the Cowboys of the Big Eight stormed back on an 80-yard pass play from senior quarterback Scott Burk to freshman receiver Ron Ingram of Dallas that cut the deficit to 10-7 and put the outcome in doubt for a time.

An illegal substitution penalty against Oklahoma State kept an Arkansas drive alive and resulted in a 14-yard field goal by Ordonez to make it 13-3. He hit on a 25-yarder in the second period.

The victory was preserved when Jimmy Walker recovered a fumble by Worley Taylor on the Oklahoma State seven. One

It was perhaps a moral victory for Okla-homa State, which suffered its seventh straight loss over two seasons, including losses this year to Florida State and Wichita State

The Big Eight Conference team played Arkansas on even terms in the first half, but could not get its offense on track as Burk was pressured by an extremely quick Arkansas defense.

The Razorbacks, 48-17 winners over Vanderbilt last week, blew two chances to score when Ordonez missed on field goal attempts of 37 and 42 yards in the first half.

It was a defensive duel for all but a few moments, and both Holtz and Oklahoma State Coach Jim Stanley said their teams played well enough on defense to win. "I thought our defense played excep-tionally well," said Holtz. "We blew our

Lott was replaced in the middle of the second quarter after rushing for 102 yards and hitting two of five passes for 32 more yards.

Rice never managed to put together much of a challenge as a series of first-half fumbles recovered by Oklahoma blunted any effort to keep the contest

The Sooners' first score came with only four minutes and five seconds gone as Billy Sims went in from 11 yards out.

Oklahoma, which substituted freely after intermission, also scored on a beautiful pitchout from Lott to Jimmy Rogers when Lott was hemmed in after romping 30 yards to the Rice 13. Rogers took it the rest of the way in.

Other Sooner scores came on a one-and 25-yard runs by Lott; a 49-yard field goal by Uwe von Schamann; eight-and 12-yarders by Watts; a 12-yard run by Freddie Nixon: a second-half one-yard plunge by Barry Joyner and a three-yard run by Boston, Mass.

Even if your house has been thoroughly insulated, you're probably still throwing away heating dollars by the bagful.

Dollars up your chimney.

Virtually every gas furnace has a chimney flue opening that can be as wasteful as an open window in letting expensively heated household air escape. (This was discussed on "60 Minutes.")

And your furnace probably has a continuously burning pilot light that burns 6000 cubic feet of gas a yearmore dollars up your chimney.

How our furnaces save.

Carrier energy-saving furnaces are available with a Chimney-Lock flue damper, which automatically closes when the furnace is off and keeps heat inside your house instead of letting it escape up the chimney. And they have electronic ignition-no wasteful, continuously buming pilot light.

How our Year-round One heat pump saves.

Depending on your fuel prices Dallas, Texas and climate, the Carrier heat pump could also save you a lot. It burns no oil or gas, and at freezing (32°F), it puts out 21/2 times more heat per dollar* than electric-resistance heating.

In summer, it reverses to give your family the comfort of high efficiency wholehouse air conditioning. And if you already have an aging central air conditioner, our heat pump could be a wise replacement now because of its higher efficiency.

What's it costing you to have a stream of heated household air flowing out of your chimney flue, or having a pilot light that burns continuously? How much expensive energy are you consuming that could be saved by operating a heat pump instead? Don't guess and worry. Find out for sure by calling your Carrier dealer listed below. He'll run a Heat-Savings Analysis of your system at no obligation to you, and tell you how much you could save with

New England Still Remembers 1976 Playoff

By The Associated Press
It is not among the longest rivalries in the National Football League — but it is one of the bitterest. And the nation will get yet another chance to see it when Sunday Night Football makes its debut. The Oakland Raiders, accused by some of being a less-than-dainty team, hosts the New England Patriots in a game that figures to be played at fever pitch from opening kickoff to final gun.

A couple of years ago, the Raiders beat the Pats in the American Conference mpionship 24-21 game on a controversial call, a roughing-the-passer penalty that allowed Oakland to maintain possession and score the winning touchdown.

New England tight end Russ Francis also received a broken nose in the game, and no penalty was called against the

In this year's exhibition season, when the Patriots won 21-7, Francis was injured again. And New England's star wide receiver, Darryl Stingley, was para-lyzed when he and Oakland defensive back Jack Tatum collided.

Sunday's afternoon games are Los Angeles at Houston, Cleveland at Pittsburgh, the New York Jets at Washington, St.Louis at Dallas, San Francisco at the New York Giants, Baltimore at Buffalo,

Two of the game's best tight ends, Francis and Oakland's Dave Casper, also will be showcased.

The Raiders, who started off with a loss to Denver, then managed to eke out a victory against San Diego on Stabler's controversial "fumble" to Casper on the game's final play, hit their stride last Sunday by steamrollering Green Bay. The Pats, opening-game losers to Washington and winners over St. Louis, were stung last Monday night when the Baltimore Colts, scoreless in their first two games, rallied to wn in the rain on halfback Joe Washington's touchdown pass, touchdown catch and, finally, touchdown run of 90 yards with a kickoff in the clos-

Georgia Tech Rambles By Tulane 27-17

ATLANTA (AP) - Freshman Mike Kelley fired one touchdown pass and set up another score as Georgia Tech took advantage of Tulane mistakes and downed the Green Wave 27-17 in college footbally.

Tech's longest scoring drive covered only 49 yards following a six-yard punt by Tulane and the Jackets also scored following two pass interceptions and a furnble recovery at the Green Wave one.

It was the first victory in three games for the Yellow Jackets and the third straight defeat for Tulane, which hasn't won here in 45 years.

Tech, trailing 17-13 going into the final period, erupted for two scores within a 3:19 span to take control of the game.

The first score came on Bucky Shamburger's one-yard run on a fourth down to cap the 49-yard drive after the six-yard punt by Frank Wills.

Moments later, Lawrence Lowe intercepted a Roch Hontas pass, returning it seven yards to the Tulane 17 to set up Gary Hardie's five-yard touchdown run.

Tech's first two scores came within a 3:49 span, the first a 36-yard pass from Kelley to Drew Hill after an interception by Donald Patterson and the other on Eddie Lee Ivery's one-yard run after Mackel Harris recovered a Hontas fumble at that spot.

Tulane's scoring came on Willard Browner's 10-yard run, a 19-yard pass from Hontas to Darrell Griffin and a 35yard field goal by Ed Murray.

Leach Tosses For 3 TD's In Second Half

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Rich Leach hurled three second-half touch-down passes, two to Doug Marsh, and a 40-yard clincher to Ralph Clayton to lead fifth-ranked Michigan to a 28-14 victory over Notre Dame.

It was the second loss in a row for the Irish and the first time they have lost two consecutive season games in 15 years. The Irish lost their last game of the 1972 season and subsequently were beaten in the Orange Bowl.

Trailing 14-7 at the half, the Wolverines turned a recovered fumble and two pass interceptions into second-half touchdowns against the mistake-prone Irish.

The victory was the second straight for the Wolverines, who opened last week with a 31-0 triumph over Illinois while Notre Dame, the defending national champion, was unable to come back from its 3-0 loss to Missouri two weeks ago.

The Irish struck for a quick lead when Russell Davis fumbled on the first play from scrimmage and three plays later, Joe Montana hit Dennis Grindinger with a three-yard touchdown pass.

Leach bolted four yards for a touchdown in the second quarter, to pull Michigan into a tie but Notre Dame came right back with a 75-yard drive to regain the lead on Vagas Ferguson's four-yard touchdown run.

The Irish took the second-half kickoff and marched to the Wolverine 26 before Ferguson fumbled and Curtis Greer re-

yard touchdown pass.

Jerry Meter then picked off a Montana pass and returned 14 yards to the Irish 33.

Five plays later, on the opening play of the fourth quarter, Leach connected with Marsh for 17 yards and a touchdown, Gregg Willner missed the conversion attempt and Michigan led 20-14.

Mike Harden then intercepted another Montana pass and two plays later Leach unloaded with his bomb to Clayton to put the game out of reach.

Michigan failed to make the conversion

Except for Notre Dame's quick touchdown after the fumble recovery, the first half was fairly even, Scott Zettek recovered Davis's fumble on Michigan's 17-yard line. Jerome Heavens carried twice for 11 yards before Montana connected with Grindinger for the score. It was the first career reception by Grindinger and the score.

tion by Grindinger, a senior.

Aided by a series of penalties, Michigan moved from its own 20 to the Irish 34 but Leach threw three incomplete passes and the Wolverines were forced to punt. Notre Dame then drove to the Michi-

before Michigan got into gear.

Early in the second quarter, the Wolverines marched 49 yards for a touchdown capped by Leach's four-yard slant into the end zone. Harlan Huckleby headed the drive with runs of 11 and 13 yards.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) - Jeff Hines fired a pass to Kirby Criswell in the end threw two touchdown passes and scored on a 3-yard run as Kansas shocked UCLA with three touchdowns in a three-minute span of the second quarter and held on to defeat the 8th-ranked Bruins 28-24.

UCLA, a 17-point favorite over the previously winless Jayhawks, fumbled two kickoffs which Kansas converted into quick touchdowns and saw its final opportunity die when quarterback Rick Bahore was sacked for a 10-yard loss on a fourth-and-three situation with 2:09 re-

Theotis Brown scored two second-half touchdowns and Peter Boermeester kicked a 25-yard field goal before UCLA's rally fell short.

With the score knotted at 7-7 early in the second period, Hines found fresh Kevin Murphy all alone for a 51-yard pass to the UCLA 1. Two plays later, freshman Sam Smith plowed into the end zone to give the Jayhawks a 14-7 lead with 6:25

The Bruins, who had allowed only one touchdown in defeating Washington and Tennessee, staged a 59-yard drive to tie the score at 7-7 with 3:30 left in the first quarter. Brown keyed the drive with a 24yard burst to the Kansas 18 and on fourth-and-goal from the 1, Bashore kept for the touchdown.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) - Junior tailback Gregg Rhett scored on runs of 18 yards in the second quarter and 26 yards with 3:07 left in the game to lift Duke to a 16-12 victory over South Carolina. South Carolina took a 12-10 lead midquarterback Mike Dunn, making his first start following a preseason mb injury, then directed the Blue Devils on an 80-yard drive climaxed by Rhett's 26-yard blast over the right side of the line for the decisive score. Dunn keyed the drive with two 15-yard runs nd left end and a 14-yard keeper around right end.

South Carolina's scoring came on a 39yard by fullback George Rogers in the first period and Eddie Leopard's 36-yardfield goal in the second quarter.

Rhett led the Duke rushing attack on 23

The Gamecocks marched 73 yards for a touchdown on their second possession, with Rogers bursting through the right side of the line and cutting down the side lines for a final 39 yards.

Duke, stymied in the opening period, tied the game on a three-play, 53-yard drive. Dunn, who sat out the Blue Devils season opening victory over Georgia Tech, passed 35 yards to flanker Derrick Lewis at the Gamecock 18, and Rhett took a pitchout around left end and dived into the corner of the end zone for the touchdown on the first play of the second

Columbia Surprises Harvard In Opener

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Quarterback Cal Moffie passed 51 yards to wide receiver Fred Sullivan for a touchdown in the third quarter and reserve tailback Pat Britt scampered seven yards for a fourth-quarter score as underdog Columbia upset Harvard 21-19 in the teams' Ivy League football opener.

Trailing 21-12, Harvard struck back with 1:02 left in the game on a 50-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Larry Brown to halfback Ralph Polillio, as Brown injured his right shoulder on the play. But Harvard flubbed an onside kick and Columbia ran out the clock.

Down 6-3 at halftime, Harvard tied the score early in the third quarter on Gary Bosnic's 35-yard field goal, but Moffie struck connected on bomb to Sullivan and fullback Joe Ciulla added a two-point conversion run for a 14-6 Columbia lead. Halfback Wayne Moore dashed 73 yards on the first play from scrimmage for Harvard after the kickoff following the Columbia touchdown pass, but a try for two points failed when Brown was tackled short of the end zone. Holding onto the 14-12 lead, Columbia took a Harvard punt at the Crimson 35 and marched in with 4:03 left in the gaame to ice the contest on Britt's touch-

Harvard had scored first, taking a 3-0 first-quarter lead on Bosnic's 25-yard field goal. But in the second quarter, Cuilla scored from the 2 with 51 seconds left in the half.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston linebacker David Hodge returned an interception 21 yards for a touchdown and Emmett King ran 74 yards for another score as the Cou-gars overcame three first-half fumbles to defeat Utah, 42-25, Saturday night. King, who rushed over 100 yards in the first quarter alone, unreeled his long TD run in the first period and the Cougars toss to Turner on the right. From the 4 on the drive's tenth play, Reeves rolled left, and stretched his 6-1 frame over the goal for the score. It shoved Tech into the lead and the Wildcats never saw the commanding side of Tech's new electronic scoreboard.

First play after the kickoff, free safety Johnny Quinney picked off a pass deflect ed by Arizona tight end Ron Beyer. Quin ney's theft occurred on the Tech 45, and he returned to the Arizona 21. This time, the Raiders went in in five plays.

Fom the 10, Reeves waited and hit wide receiver Brian Nelson right at the goal. Nelson outwrestled Wildcat linebacker Corky Ingraham for possession at the goal and fell in for the score with 4:42 left in the third

Next time Tech got the football, it didn't score; Aizona did. Mark Streater fielded Maury Buford's punt at his 16 and didn't stray too far from the right side-lines in zipping 84 yards for the score, putting the Tech lead to 28-23.

It was a 3-pointer first, as the Raiders moved into kicking distance, and Adams drilled a 50-yarder, following a delay-ofgame penalty which added 5 yards to his

out, to run the count to 34-23. Then, to make the story even more impressive, Reeves slipped over the goal for the final points from the 1 after Arizona

Arizona had opened the game with an awesome show of running power, taking the opening kickoff and drilling 73 yards in 11 plays, a methodical march with tailback Lary Heater ramming left guard for Adami, the Raiders' starting QB, had limped off earlier, but the quick Johnson cut back on the option play and threaded his way 45 yards for a score with 26 seconds left in the opening quarter.

Adams' kick put Tech in front 7-6 -Raider linebacker Don Kelly having blocked Arizona's first PAT - but the Wildcats bounced back behind reserve quarterback Gary Guisness to score, as Guisness faked to Heater and slipped through the left side standing.

Three posessions later. Reeves entered the game, for his first collegiate effort.

The win snapped a four-game losing streak for the Raiders, stetching back in-to the 1977 season, and it was the first for new head coach Rex Dockery. Next week, the Raiders must take on the University of Texas.

Probably the best and just about the only comment from the members of the Arizona football team came from fullback Brian Sanders.

As the Wildcats walked up the ramp to the dressing room after the final seconds had ticked off the clock at Jones Stadium Saturday night, Sanders kicked a Texas Tech Red Raider plastic cup. The cup drew Sanders' attention because it was laying on the Astroturf walk way.

Boston Wins; Moves Within One Of New York

By The Associated Press Jim Rice belted his 43rd home run of the season and Carl Yastrzemski and Jack Brohamer added run-scoring singles as the Boston Red Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-1 and moved within one game of the first-place New York Yankees in the American League East. New York was routed by Cleveland 10-1 in its game Saturday.

Luis Tiant, 11-8, scattered seven hits to get the victory for the Red Sox. Dave McKay's leadoff walk in the sixth followed by Alan Ashby's double into the leftfield corner produced the lone run off the veteran right-hander, who struck out six and walked five.

Rick Burleson singled to open the game, stole second and scored Boston's first run on Yastrzemski's two-out single. The Red Sox made it 2-0 in the fourth when Butch Hobson doubled to left-center and scored as Brohamer lined a single over the head of Jesse Jefferson, 7-15.

Rice lined the first pitch from Jeffer-son over the leftfield fence with one out in the fifth to account for the third Boston run. It gave the Red Sox slugger 386 total bases for the season, tops in the league and the most in the AL since Jimmy Foxx' 398 in 1938.

INDIANS 10. YANKS 1

Rick Manning's two-run bloop single ignited a 15-hit attack that helped David Clyde and the Cleveland Indians to a 10-1 victory over the New York Yankees.

The Yankees grabbed a 1-0 lead off Clyde, 8-11, in the first inning on Lou Piniella's RBI single. But the Indians struck back for four runs in the second inning off New York starter Jim Beattie, 5-

Manning's bases-loaded single put Cleveland ahead to stay and Jim Norris added a two-run triple on a line drive that was misjudged by center fielder Mickey Rivers.

Rookie Wayne Cage added his second solo homer in as many nights in the third inning and the Indians came up with three more runs in the fourth and single runs in the seventh and eighth, the latter on Cage's infield out.

Clyde, who worked his way out of a couple of early jams, wound up with a nine-hitter, four of those being singles by Willie Randolph.

Glenn Hubbard's bloop double drove in two runs, keying a five-run Atlanta burst in the fourth inning and Garry Matthews, Bob Horner and Hubbard each hit home runs in the fifth as the Braves rolled to an 8-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds' loss, coupled with Los Angeles' 5-3 victory over San Diego, assured the Dodgers of at least a tie for the National League West title. Cincinnati trails Los Angeles by 71/2 games. The Dodgers have seven games reamining, the Reds have eight.

ORIOLES 6, TIGERS 1

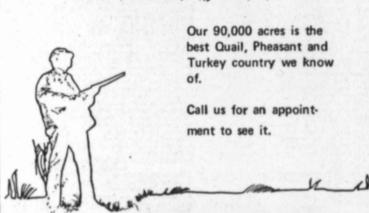

Jim Palmer stopped the Detroit Tigers on four hits while hurling the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-1 second-game victory and became the third pitcher in the 78-year history of the American League to record eight 20-victory seasons.

The Tigers won the opener of the twinight doubleheader 4-3 on a two-run ninth-innning pinch single by John Wockenfuss.

Palmer, who has lost 12, notched his sixth consecutive triumph as he became the league's first eight-time 20-game winner since Lefty Grove in 1935. The last of 12 such seasons for Walter Johnson came in 1925.

A total of 16 pitchers have reached or exceeded that level.

Buffalo Springs Lake— Bass, weighing 3-4 pounds, are being found in the cattails and near the rocks. There's good action for channel catfish in most areas of the lake. Carp continue to provide excellent action, even on the overcast days with cooler temperatures. The crappie remain scattered but are moving a little better. Some of the larger crappie are being taken with minnows and jigs near the bridge and cattails. Perch action has slowed down a bit. The lake is in good condition.

Lake Corpus Christi- All species are biting. Catfish are producing most of the action with a 13-pound channel, 15-pound blue and 30-pound yellow being reported. Bass and crappie continue to bite. Fishing improved last week when the gates to the dam were opened.

Lake Stamford- A.J. Ashburn of Hale Center used a trotline baited with minnows and shrimp to bring in 75 channel cats; several of the channels hit the scales at 5 and 6 pounds. W.O. Pringle of Haskell landed several nice channels by using shad for bait while drift fishing in shallow water. Crappie action has been slow. Veda's Camp reports the lake is clearing and water is still going over the White River Lake- Leo Moore of Pampa landed the biggest lunker of the Pampa Bass Club Tournament. Moore used top water bait in shallows covered by moss to attract the 5-pound 8-ounce black bass. The Pampa angler returned his live catch to the lake after the tournament. Johnny Dobbs, a lake resident, has had very good results jug fishing for cat-fish. Some catfish in the 4-pound range are being found by anglers in the shallow water while bank fishing. Crappie action continues to be slow, but a few big ones have been caught. The lake is in good

Lake Whitney- Fishing slowed down in areas of the lake this past week as a result of the windy conditions. Striper fishing still leads the scene in all areas, with confirmed reports over 12 pounds. Sand bass, crappie and channel cat were also reported throughout the lake. The lake level is approximately a foot below nor-

Bass Fishing Takes Time, Survey Shows

AUSTIN (Special) - A recent six-month survey of bass club tournament results conducted by the Parks & Wildlife Department has turned up some findings which - among other things - showed that successful fishing is not an instant

The survey analyzed the results of 377 tournaments held across the state Jan. 1-July 30 and which involved 9,027 fisher-

One of the most noticeable findings was the suprisingly large number of manhours required to catch bass. Fishermen caught an average of less than .2 of a bass per hour fished, and likewise, they caught only .2 of a pound of bass per our, on the average.

Of course, statistics can be misleading. and officials point out that these figures were obtained by utilizing total tourna-ment hours and number of fishermen, and some of the participants may not have fished quite the total hours allowed. However, tourney fishermen managed to catch 18,147 bass and had a success rate (persons catching one or more bass) of $6.4 percent.

The average weight was bass caught was 1.84 pounds, which appears to confirm that many tournament fishermen attempt to achieve a high total catch weight by concentrating on catching a large number of fish.

The lakes had an effect on the survey, however, As expected some of the more owever. As expected some of the more rnous lakes of East Texas, such as Toledo Bend and Sam Rayburn, had good average catches. But some of the smaller lakes showed remarkable averages.

Two touraments at Lake Colorado City turned up a catch average of 2.7 pounds.

Hunters Find Bird Harvest Too Bountiful

Parks & Wildlife Dept.

Most traditional areas in northwest Texas are reporting few doves, but seven Lousiana hunters found a hot spot in Jones county and an even hotter judge in Taylor County.

Each out-of-state hunter entered a plea of guilty for over the possession limit of rning doves and received a fine of $414 from the judge after Curtis Jones, warden supervisor, had completed his

A call from Zane Williams, lake patrolman, prompted the investigation of the Louisiana hunters after Williams had stopped their vehicle which had no license plate displayed. Williams became suspicious when the out-of-state told of hunting in Jones County and that they were headed home. Williams contacted Jones who found 456 dove iced down in a chest in the vehicle.

Jones obtained assistance from Dale Evans, another warden, and the men were escorted to the judge where the fines totaled $2898 before the Lousiana men could continue their trip back home.

The hunters were allowed their possession limit of 140 doves (10 per day and 20 in possession), but 316 doves were confiscated by the P&WD Officers.

The 1978-79 hunting season on sandhill cranes has been set for Oct. 31-Jan. 31, 1979, in Zone A and Dec. 5-Jan. 31, 1979 in Zone B. Each crame hunter, regardless of license requirements, will be required a crane permit.

The free permit printed by the U.S. Fish andd Wildlife Service and issued by the Parks & Wildlife Department, will be available only from the P&WD office in Austin.

Requests for each crane permit must include the applicant's name, current mailing address and county of residence. One person may apply for other persons as long as the required information is included for each hunter. Applicants must write TP&WD, Wildlife Division, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, 78744.

Crane hunters should pick up a new copy of the 1978-79 Texas Migratory Game Birds Hunting regulations which lists the counties and the two zones for crane hunting.

A duck stamp is not required for sandhill crane hunting. If the hunter wants to bag waterfowl such as ducks and geese, however, a federal migratory waterfowl stamp must be in his possession signed by the hunter.

Persons sending for their crane permits should check hunting license regulations before going afield as age and county

Last year, more than 4,900 crane per-mits were issued to Texas hunters. This year's applicants can expect their free permit to be issued from Austin within ten days.

Drought and flood have had their affect on wildlife this summer and archery hunters will have to utilize all their hunting skills as the bow and arrow deer season opens statewide Oct. 1.

The archery season will continue through Oct. 16 in the Panhandle and Oct. 31 for most of the remainder of Texas, except for mule deer hunters in a few counties. A nine-day season will be held in the Trans-Pecos district of far West

Several West Texas counties have been closed to deer hunting including archery, and sportsmen should check the new 1978-79 Texas Hunting & Sport Fishing Guide for detailed county information.

Bow hunters will again be required to use equipment that meets the state regulations. The bow must be capable of shooting a hunting arrow equipped with a broadhead hunting point for a distance of 130 yards while taking game animals and

The broadhead hunting point must be at least seven-eights inch in width and not more than 11/2 inches in width. Arrows must be marked with the name and address of the user in some non-watersoluble medium. The arrows cannot be poisoned, drugged, or explosive.

Crossbows are not legal for taking game animals and game birds at any time in regulatory counties or during archeronly seasons in non-regulatory counties.

All persons who hunt wild deer, bear, turkey, or javelina during any open archery season in which longbows and arrows may be used are required to purchase a $3.25 Texas archery stamp in addition to other hunting license requirements.

The archery stamp must be signed by the person using it. Part of the money from the sales of archery stamps is designated for wildlife management and research as bow hunters help pay their

The overall outlook for antelope is "average" as the Parks & Wildlife Department issued a total 1322 permits to the landowners with huntable populations of antelope on their property.

In the Trans-Pecos, 865 permits were issued, 21 in the Possum Kingdom and 436 in the Panhandle. Last year, 700 permits were issued in the Trans-Pecos with 408 pronghorns bagged by hunters.

Dove Season Gets Soggy S

AUSTIN (Special) — The mourning dove hunting season is getting off to a slow and soggy start this year.
Widespread rains and abundant food have kept the shifty-winged birds scattered so far, but Parks & Wildlife Department officials believe hunting could im-porve significantly in the shank of the

The dove season in the North Zone opened Sept. 1, and while some hunters reported good shooting, most reported that birds were scare, with no heavy concentrations over grain fields or water-

South Zone shotgunners encountered the same conditions on opening day, Sat-urday, so they might do well to plan some later hunts in addition to the usual opening-weekend effort.

Jim Dunks, dove program leader, said there were plenty of birds in the state, but the weather has kept them scattered, "If it doesn't rain too much from here on, I look for the shooting to improve by the first week of October," Dunks said.

Dunks added that states to the north are reporting good numbers of doves, so Texas hunters may see a larger overall dove population later in the season when these migrating birds arrive on the scene. In fact, the best shooting in some parts of the state could well be during the latewinter segment of the split season (Jan. 6-14 in the North Zone, Jan. 6-23 in the South Zone).

Ector Posts 6-0 Win Over Javelinas

ODESSA (Special) - In a low-yardage game, plagued by fumbles on both sides, the Odessa Ector Eagles managed to slip past the Crystal City Javelinas 6-0, leaving both teams with one win and two

The only score came in the second quarter when Eagle tight end Edward Williams nabbed a 48-yard pass from quarterback James Ricks. The extra

Tear Gas Disrupts Tilt; Host Killeen Gets Tie

By The Associated Press
An exploding tear gas grenade sent fans pouring out of the stands and delayed a high school game in Killeen Friday night. However, authorities said no serious injuries resulted from the prank.

And when the literal tear gas - and the figurative dust - had cleared, Killeen had a 13-all deadlock with visiting Lo-

In Abilene, top-ranked Temple provided the tears. Paced by Carl Robinson's 107 yards the Wildcats rolled up 245 yards rushing and another 105 in the air to defeat Abilene 49-0.

It was a good weekend for all the topranked teams in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll. Class AAA leader Huntsville blasted New Caney 41-12, Mount Vernon routed Rains 35-7 and Grapeland, in Class A, defeated Westwood 26-14.

Tailback Kenny Jones rambled for 172 yards and three touchdowns as Huntsville amassed 328 yards total rushing in its romp over New Caney. Quarterback Lloyd Archie hit on five of six passes, including a 57-yard bomb to Larry Mock to set up a touchdown.

In class AAAA, eighth-ranked Houston Forest Brook and 10th-ranked Abilene Cooper were the only teams in the top ten to fall. Aldine ripped Forest Brook 30-6 and Haltom City slipped by Cooper 21-15.

Second-ranked Garland dumped Hurst Bell 28-17; Arlington Lamar, No. 3, blasted South Grand Prairie 40-6; San Antonio Churchill, No. 4, edged San Antonio Highlands 14-6; and ninth-ranked Corpus

Seventh-ranked Plano remained unscored upon in 14 quarters and controlled both the ball and the tempo of the game as it sprinted past Sherman 24-0. Plano faces undefeated Highland Park next week in a rematch of last year's quarterfinal game that Plano won 29-28 in the dying minutes of the contest

Klondike Derails Garden City 32-6

KLONDIKE (Special) - Lonny Ferguson and quarterback David Cox paced Klondike to a 32-6 pasting of Garden City here Friday. Ferguson cut through the rain-shrouded field for 179 yards rushing, while Cox ran for two touchdowns and threw for another. Klondike led 20-6 at halftime.

Cox scored first on an 11-yard run. Ferguson then scored the first of two touchdowns by knifing in from the 3. Cox escaped on a 71-yard run to up the Cougar lead to 20-0

After a scoreless third period, Ferguson set sail on a 57-yard TD jaunt late in the final stanza. Then, with 29 seconds left to play, Cox connected with halfback Tommy Hayes on a 40-yard TD pass.

Beaumont Hebert clung to its No. 2 rating with a 13-0 win over Houston Washington in Class AAA; Brownwood, No. 3, outdistanced Round Rock 48-21; Gonzales trounced Yoakum 40-7; Raymondville routed Laredo United 35-8; Friendswood defeated Cypress Creek 36-20; and Fort Stockton beat El Paso Andress, 34-Gregory Portland, No. 7, fell to Corpus Christi Ray 9-6 and 10th-ranked Kilgore lost it second 36-8 to Palestine. Sixthranked Bay City did not play.

In Class AA, second-ranked Newton bested Buna 19-7; Tahoka, No. 3, romped over Dimmitt 36-0; Muleshoe, No. 5, glided past Tulia 21-0; and seventh-ranked Port Isabel had it easy with Los Fresnos

Cameron's 10-5 victory over Bellville featured the only battle between two ranked teams Friday. Ninth-ranked Cameron scored in the first quarter and held on, while Bellville dida't, losing five of 11 Sixth-ranked Breckenridge fell to Stephenville 7-6: and eighth-ranked Wills Point dropped a 14-9 decision to Quitman. Bridgeport, No. 4, did not play.

Farmersville defended its No. 2 spot in Class A with a 34-7 romp over Kennedale, while fourth-ranked Pilot Point devastated Coppell 61-0. Haskell, No. 5, outdistanced Seymour 34-21; DeLeon rolled over Eastland 34-0; Garrison nudged San Augustine 7-0; and ninth-ranked Lexington had an easy time with Smithville 40-6 Charlotte, No. 8, fell to Dilley 6-0 and IT'S HOTEL LIFE FOR THEM — Michael Rose, 9, and his brother Richle, 6, sho off their electric train set to visiting Jeanette Kallan, 5, in their room at the Summi Hotel in New York recently. The brothers, along with Jeanette, who lives at Ne York's Warwick Hotel, agree hotel living has some drawbacks. But, as Michael es plains, "You never have to clean up your room or make your bed. The maid does it. (AP Laserphoto)

Children Say Life In Major Hotel Has Advantages

NEW YORK (AP) — Once there was a storybook child named Eloise who lived in the Plaza Hotel and ordered room service whenever she liked. She found much to do at the Plaza, most of it trou-

There is, indeed, much to entertain a spirited child in a Manhattan hotel, according to some real, flesh-and-giggles children who live in hotels. But these children add — as Eloise did pot — that hotel living has its drawbacks.

There is, for instance, an apparently infinite parade of hotel guests who inevitably inform 6-year-old, tow-headed Richie Rose — who wrinkles his nose in disgust at the thought — ohat he is "cute." Truth, says Richie, is no defense.

His 9-year-old brother Michael says the most bothersome part of hotel life is that "everybody knows who we are. I can't

"everybody knows who we are. I can't even sneak a piece of chocolate." Michael is allergie to chocolate. The staff at the Summit Hotel knows it. They The boys point out that a child's staple — thumping, giggling, bumping raucous-ness — is banned before noon because, as Michael notes, "We might disturb the hotel guests." The Rose boys, whose father manages the Summit, have lived in New York hotels since memory began. As a result, they are rather more blase about hotel living than is Jeanette Kallan. Until her father became manager of the Warwick Hotel 18 months ago, 8-year-old Jeanette lived in an apartment. She remains utterly, unequivocably enthusiastic about hotel living. "When you live in a hotel there's more room," the bespectacled child reports. "I like to go to the lobby and I can go b the front desk."

She ticks off the hotel delights that apartment life lacked: For instance, Faberge rents a suite next to the Kalla 27th floor quarters. One of the firm's offi-cers has promised Jeanette — who wants to be a Playboy bunny when she grows up — that she will meet Farrah Fawcettup — that she will meet Farran Fawcett-Majors.

Jeanette's Warwick rounds include visits to the kitchen now and then, to watch the clattering hubbub. But she prefers the front desk, where she is pals with a clerk who once let her answer the phone — toss of blonde head, hand to ear: "Front desk, may I help you?"

When the desk operation grows tedi-ous, Jeanette ambles just 10 feet and pops into the wood-paneled office where her father, Henry Kallan, labors. The Rose boys say they often drop in on their dad, too.

The boys long ago explored the Summit's hidden nooks and crannies, roof to basement. They don't roam much now, prefering activities much like other children's — playing with friends, reading and watching television in the family's 18th floor quarters.

Eloise planned to pour water down a Plaza mail chute, but such pranks haven't much appeal to Jeanette and the Roses.

Nor do they think to compare their lives to that of Eloise — the fictional 6-year-old in the 1985 book written by Kay Thompson and Hilary Knight. In fact, none of the three children has read the Storybook Eloise phoned room service every morning to order a bone for her dog and raisins for her turtle. Also breakfast. The Kallans and Roses have kitchens. Jeanette says she was allowed to or-der from room service once. Michael and

Eloise delighted in tormenting the Plaza's elevator operators. Her technique 5th floor, dash up the stairs and punch the 8th floor call button in time to board the same elevator. the same elevator, still going up.
The elevators at the Warwick and the Summit have no operators. Neither Jeanette, Richie, nor Michael thought that Eloise's elevator capers merited so much as a rnigger.

Dark-haired, glib Michael Rose says he always wants to live in hotels and explains why in a way that would please Eloise. "You never have to clean up your room or make your bed," he says. "The hotel maid does it."

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You now have a considerable amount of energy and many good ideas that will help you to make long-range plans. There are some ideas that come to you later, but don't depend upon your judgment then.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good time to be with family. Invite friends you have not seen in some time and have a happy evening together.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Listen to sermons that inspire and raise your level of consciousness. Showing more affection for loved ones can bring excellent response. Avoid one who wants to get you down in some way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Know what your desires are and how best to attain them. Be systematic. Think out how to add to present abundance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You are thinking clearly now and can plan the future more intelligently, know just what it is you want to accomplish.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan time to be with trusted advisers and gain fine suggestions from them. Meditation can also be of great help to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact good friends early and plan to be together for a delightful and constructive time. Be courteous with everyone instead of criticizing and all goes fine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take care of outside affairs early and then meet with a good adviser and follow suggestions. Accept some invitation later that will be good for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22 to Nov. 21) Contact the wisest individuals of your acquaint-ance and get advice you need from them. Pollow intuition, also. Good day to plan that trip you have in mind for a little later on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to suggestions of an associate and plan to cooperate for best results. Your judgment is not too good now, so rely on those you trust.

Twirling Winners Announced

Kim Hunt, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hunt of Lamesa, will reign over the 25th annual West Texas Twirling Festival which climaxes the 61st annual Panhandle South Plains Fair Sept. 30.

The seventh-grade student was selected over 15 other contestants for the title of Twirling Sweetheart, it was announced Saturday. She plays the flute in her school band and enjoys horsback riding and gymnastics. In addition she sings with a girls' group at her church.

Miss Hunt will be a guest twirler in the traditional Parade of Bands, heading out Broadway at 10 a.m. Monday, which is School Day at the fair.

First runner-up for the sweetheart title was Tege Lyn Stephenson, 13, of Lubbock, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Don Stephenson of Rt. 3.

Rounding out the top winners was 8-year-old LaDeane Verett, daughter of Melba Veritt of Ralls.

Reorganization Of State Workers Dominates Race For Governor

By CARROL W. CAGLE

A-J Correspondent SANTA FE - Reorganization of state government remains an important issue in the New Mexico governor's race muted on the surface level but much-discussed in political and state government

"Reorg," as it is often called around the capitol complex, was perhaps the most substantial achievement of outgoing Democratic Gov. Jerry Apodaca. The state-level bureaucracy may only be slightly more entrenched than the one Jimmy Carter is wrestling with in Washington - and some say it may even be

Committee Rejects Farm Union Motion

AUSTIN (AP) - A House committee has refused to recommend to the 1979 Texas Legislature proposed legislation that would guarantee collective bargaining rights for farm workers.

Rep. Tony Garcia, D-Pharr, failed Friday to get a second on his motion to recommend a Texas agricultural labor-rela-

"Why do the farm workers need a special law?" asked Rep. Forrest Green, D-Corsicana. "Why can't they just organize like boilermakers? They have two unions now. You would think that if the situation is so desperate, they would go ahead and organize effectively."

Garcia argued that farm workers work for very low wages and "they just can't make a living. They want to establish contracts with the growers. I don't see anything wrong with the premise.'

The State Personnel Act, which went into effect in the early '60s to curb previous political abuses of the agencies, also has made it harder to get rid of poorly performing employees.

During the same intervening period, the bureaucracy in Santa Fe has grown rapidly - fed by Federal "matching" programs, a growing state treasury, demands from constituent groups and agreeable legislators. While the capitol offices once were centralized in a downtown campus-like setting, they now are sprawling in sometimes obscure locations throughout the city. Making even modest power alignment changes within this system is difficult.

But Apodaca, an exceedingly aggressive chief executive, managed to push a comprehensive reorganization bill through the 1977 Legislature. The effective date for his new cabinet system was April 1 of this year.

Now, Democrat Bruce King and Republican Joe Skeen are vying to succeed Apodaca and are coming under intense pressure from certain quarters to make changes in the reorganization scheme of

Some interest groups would like to see the "old" ways returned, especially the re-establishment of "citizen boards" which oversaw the operations of some agencies. Some state employees are complaining privately that the mission of their agencies are being diluted under the Significantly, neither King nor Skeen has roundly criticized reorganization. In fact, both have indicated general approval of it.

Skeen, the Republican who might be expected to make political hay by attack-ing the current Administration, is in fact courting the Apodaca wing of the Democratic party for support because of the governor's long enmity with Bruce Kng.

Skeen has limited his criticism to the $40,000 salary level Apodaca set for the 12 department secretaries in the cabinet

He also told this column, hever, that he would pick up a proposal of Apodaca's that went down the drain in the 1978 Legislature: legislation to create a 13th department, a Department of Labor.

Organized labor strongly supported Apodaca in 1974 and it is just as ardently backing King this year. But for King to agree to introduce the measure shows things are not all bad between the two Democrats who have had their rifts in the West Texas is one such area where the regional water crisis has preceded the energy crisis, which raises a number of unique and serious questions regarding future development.

In response to these questions, Texas Tech University is sponsoring two conferences, the first on water and the second on energy. The first symposium, slated for Nov. 8-9 at the Lubbock Civic Center, will focus on "The Multi-Faceted Water Crisis of West Texas." A date for the energy symposium has not yet been finalized.

The water conference is de The water conference is designed for personnel from local governments, school districts, water districts and governmental agencies dealing with this problem. Areas to be covered emcompass the regions from Wichita Falls and Abilene on the east to El Paso on the west and from San Angelo northward through the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles.

The two-day meeting will feature four major sessions: "Stretching the Water Supplies of West Texas;" "Public Water Supplies, Quality and Quantity;" Federal Studies of Water Resources for the High Plains;" and the "Carter Administration's National Water Policy.

"More than 30 experts from federal, state and local agencies, underground water districts, Texas Tech University, private management consultants, and other water-related groups will address various aspects of the water problem," Dr. Frank L. Baird, associate director of the Center for Public Service and organizer of the symposium, says.

The conference is supported by a grant under the Title I, Higher Education Act of 1965, through the Division of Community Colleges and Continuing Education of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

A regional emphasis for the conference is important "as West Texas has some unique water problems and national or state conferences do not necessarily focus on West Texas' problems.

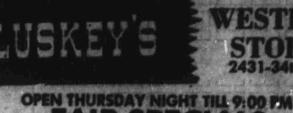

Registration will begin Nov. 8 at 7:30 a.m., with welcoming remarks by the conference director at 9 a.m.

Big Spring Hangar Contract Set

BIG SPRING - McCree Building Systems of Levelland has been retained to build a hangar shell in the Big Spring Industrial Park, reassurance Lockheed Aircraft Service Co. needed in order to bid on an aircraft modification contract for the U.S. Navy. A representative of McCree met with city officials Thursday to assure the city council and the Big Spring Steering Committee that the contractors could hire extra crews to see that the Feb. 1 target date is met. Lockheed, should it win the Navy contract, could use existing facilities at the industrial park only for the initial phase of its operation but would need all 90,000 square feet in the proposed building no later than late February

The McCree firm will expedite construction of the building for an extra consideration of $56,000. McCree must notify steel companies of its building needs no later than Oct. 1 in order to guarantee shipment in early December.

The bids on the government contract will be opened Dec. 1 in Washington.

MONEY FOR BUSES

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Transportation Department on Friday announced a $19.5 million grant to help New Orleans buy 185 new transit buses. Ten of the buses will have wheelchair lifts for use by handicapped and elderly persons. Richard S. Page, administrator of the department's Urban Mass Transportation Administration, said the 185 buses being replaced are all more than 13 years old and have logged a high number of miles.

Hill's platform was approved by the platform committee with only minor changes, and when the document reached the floor, approval was given quickly, and without wrangling.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby almost fielded that one for Hill — holding that the proposal failed on a voice vote.

But demands for a record vote immediately flooded in — and after an hour and a half, Hobby's ruling had been voided. Hill met with reporters immediately after the vote — looking like a man mentally pulling on gloves to remove a dis-tasteful object which he'd found in the his promsise of an "open" convention.

Hill's disassociation with that resolution obviously doesn't need much explanation, but Republican Party Chairman Ray Barnhart lost no time in trying to tie

Ray Barnhart lost no take and Hill to that issue.

Delegates had hardly had a chance to unpack before Barnhart was calling on Hill to veto any legislation supporting collective bargaining for state employees in the "unlikely event" that Hill becomes

Delegates were far from unaware that GOP gubernatorial hopeful Bill Clements and his friends were lurking about the convention center (metaphorically speak-ing) in hopes of finding some ammuni-tion which could be used in their cam-

In fact, one of the arguments made against acting on a vaguely-worded reso-lution on gay rights (without specifically using the term) was that Clements would like that "better than anything," as one delegate put it.

Hill's biggest problem appeared to be with some unhappy members of the Rural/Agriculture Caucus, who started to take their fight to the floor - after showing up after the platform committee al-ready had incorporated most of the mat-ters they wanted on the platform.

That discontent appeared to be capital-ized on to some extent by the conservatives who were attempting to assert control over the executive committee:—but the potential revolt eventually fizzled.

One of the group's leaders said he wasn't sure there was any particular difference between what the farmers wanted and what they got — while at least one West Texas politician retreated from the group's meeting, saying he'd left because "all they wanted to do was raise hell."

Platforms, of course, are at best only broad indications of where parties stand—and usually offer even less of a clue as to where a particular candidate stands.

But the 1978 Democratic platform is, to a great extent, the effort of Hill or his supporters, and there's probably not too much Hill—or for that matter, Clements—would not support.

For example, the platform comes out against "new or additional state taxes," supports fair property tax administration and tax reform, supports the "tax relief amendment" on the Nov. 7 ballot, attacks inflation as "our nation's worst enemy" (and blames "government waste as a "major cause"), calls for respect for law enforcement officers, supports deregulation of oil and gas prices, urges improved health care, and praises free enterprise, which Clements likely would find acceptable.

But, as the platform notes in its introduction, "perhaps only a few of us agree on every statement in the document"—and such items as importing water to West Texas, extending the deadline for
