

Texas Milk Not Contaminated By Tainted Feed

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

No Texas milk has been contaminated by tainted cottonseed feed that caused a cancer scare in Arizona, Lubbock dairy companies and a state health official said today.

Bob Murphy and Mark Soderquist, managers for Bell Dairy Products and Borden Inc., said they had been working closely with Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) in Lubbock to ensure that no contaminated milk came into their companies.

Rex Mull, location and transportation supervisor for AMPI, said all 32 area milk producers have been given "a clear bill of health" by the Texas Department of Health since the cottonseed was traced to Texas and New Mexico.

Hundreds of tons of moldy cottonseed contaminated with cancer-causing aflatoxin were traced by the United States Food and Drug Administration to a ranch at Theba, Ariz.

The cottonseed was blamed for aflatoxin levels in Arizona milk which exceeded the FDA limit of .5 parts per billion for several weeks this summer.

Jerry Henderson of the FDA in Dallas said Tuesday that a Bovina broker bought 2,000 tons from Paloma Ranch in Theba and that agents were checking where it went from Bovina.

Henderson was not available for comment this morning.

Hugh Rundle, chief sanitarian for milk and dairy products with the state health department in Austin, told The Avalanche-Journal that evidently no Texas dairies have bought any of the contaminated feed for dairy cattle.

Four dairies in Arizona and two in New Mexico — one at Albuquerque and one near El Paso — did buy some, but were not allowed to ship any milk into Texas until they quit using it and their milk passed tests, Rundle said.

The FDA did extensive tests on milk coming into El Paso, he said, and the samples showed .1 part per billion of aflatoxin, well below the safety level.

Aflatoxin causes liver damage in people if taken over an extended period and is considered a carcinogen, or cause of cancer, if taken in large amounts, Rundle said. "I don't know of any Texas dairymen that received any of this feed at all," he said.

In Arizona, several tankers of milk were dumped, and most Arizona dairy farmers were ordered to stop feeding cottonseed last month.

The aflatoxin level then was brought within the federal standard, the FDA said.

Its Texas investigation is part of an effort to track down the rest of the feed, officials said.

Mondale To Join In Talks

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter met privately today with Egypt's Anwar Sadat and summoned Vice President Walter F. Mondale to the historic Mideast summit.

Mondale, who is conducting much of the federal government's non-summit business during Carter's absence from Washington, flew here in late morning, having been told he would join all three leaders at lunch.

However, word about the joint luncheon was erroneous, according to Jerrold Schecter, spokesman for the National Security Council. He said Carter had not yet arranged a joint session between Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin.

Carter and Begin conferred privately for 3½ hours Tuesday night, Israeli sources said, while lower-ranking officials from the United States, Egypt and Israel dined and talked together at an open mess.

The three leaders are in mountaintop isolation, with the Egyptian president and the Israeli prime minister at odds over summit goals and the role to be played by Carter.

"This is no time for maneuvers and worn-out ideas," said Sadat. He repeated his objection to Begin's limited goal of concluding the summit with an agreement to continue negotiations at a lower level — negotiations which Begin said might continue for months.

For his part, Begin said at an official arrival ceremony that he will pursue "all endeavors possible to reach an agreement so that the peace process can continue and ultimately be crowned with peace treaties."

Besides advocating a go-slow approach to the search for a Mideast settlement, Begin foresees Carter playing a limited role as a summit mediator.

But on his arrival, Sadat emphasized See SECRECY SHROUDS Page 14

Board Revamps Auto Insurance

AUSTIN (UPI) — The State Insurance Board voted unanimously today to permit insurance companies to raise rates for auto and other types of motor vehicle insurance $62 million effective Nov. 1.

The overall increases will average 3.2 percent statewide on private passenger vehicles, but rates will vary according to the territory.

Lubbock motorists will enjoy a $2 drop in premiums for standard coverage on a current model car, but Amarillo drivers will face a 6.9 percent increase, according to figures released by the board.

Wichita Falls motorists will get a 5.4 percent rate cut and car owners in Kaufman County, southeast of Dallas, will enjoy a 6.1 percent rate reduction.

The state's largest city, Houston will see a 3.9 percent increase in standard coverage premiums. Dallas, on the other hand, will face only a miniscule .4 percent raise for typical coverage on a car driven to and from work daily.

Private passenger premiums across the state will increase a total of $35 million. A 26.6 percent increase in rates for commercial coverages is expected to increase insurance companies' revenues another $27 million.

The insurance board voted to make the new rates effective Nov. 1 instead of Oct. 1 as originally proposed to allow more time to notify agents of the premium changes.

Insurance companies at a July 19 hearing requested a 10.7 percent, $125 million increase, including a 8.9 percent, $95 million increase for private passenger vehicles.

"We thought our actuaries did a better job, but if that's the board's considered judgment I have no further comment," said David Irons of Dallas, spokesman for the industry's Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office.

The increase is the first approved for auto insurance since Oct. 1, 1976.

Ned Price and Durwood Manford, both members of the board for more than 16 years, approved the increase in less than five minutes.

The third seat on the board has remained vacant since the Senate voted 27-1 last month to reject Hugh C. Yantis Jr. as chairman.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has given no indication when he will name a replacement for Yantis.

In July, Yantis suggested holding additional statewide public hearings, but Price Tuesday said the board must act quickly.

"Mr. Manford and I have not entertained that idea," he said. "We've got to reach a decision. We've got a statewide workmen's compensation (insurance rate) hearing in October. The staff is just as busy as it can be."

Including other classifications of motor vehicles, the insurance industry's requested increase came to 10.7 percent or $125 million, while the board suggested 5.2 percent and $62 million.

Insurance companies last year requested a 17.4 percent raise in rates for private passenger vehicles and the board staff recommended a 10.1 percent increase, but Yantis and his predecessor as chairman, Joe Christie, balked at approving any increase while industry profits were high.

The Oct. 1, 1976 increase of 7.1 percent came on the heels of a 17.1 percent jump in auto insurance rates on Jan. 1, 1976, and a 7.8 percent increase on Jan. 16, 1975.

Rates were cut 4.3 percent in 1973 and 11.2 percent in 1972.

Soviet Court Near Verdict

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet prosecutor today asked the judge to give American businessman Francis J. Crawford a five-year suspended sentence for allegedly buying rubles on the black market.

A verdict is expected today.

There was speculation Crawford would get a light sentence and be exchanged for two Soviet employees of the United Nations who are charged by the U.S. government with espionage.

A suspended sentence could mean Crawford would be free to leave the country. Under Soviet law, however, a judge can require a person who gets a suspended sentence to stay in Russia.

Prosecutor Mikhail Ilyukhin made the request after testimony ended in Crawford's two-day trial. Crawford and his Russian lawyer were to make final statements later in the day.

Ilyukhin cited mitigating circumstances in the Crawford case as a reason for asking for the suspended sentence. Maximum sentence on the charge carries an eight-year prison term. Ilyukhin told the judge it was Crawford's first offense and that he had grown up "in a different country with different customs and way of life."

He also said the judge should consider the short time Crawford had spent in the Soviet Union and the role his company, International Harvester, has played in improving relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Crawford technically is a co-defendant with three Soviets who pleaded guilty to charges of currency speculation. The prosecutor asked for five years in a strict regime labor camp for Vladimir Kiselev, the admitted leader of an international currency and contraband ring. He faces a possible death sentence on a charge of "large scale" currency violations.

The prosecutor recommended a five-year suspended labor camp sentence for Kiselev's wife, Ludmila, who said she helped her husband.

Ilyukhin suggested a four-year labor camp sentence for Alla Solovyan, 23, a cashier who said she had sold currency to the Kiselevs.

Earlier, Crawford clashed with the judge over a piece of prosecution evidence and the judge questioned the authenticity of a defense document.

Israeli Jets Give Syria Warning

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Two Israeli jets cracked sonic booms over Beirut today following clashes in the Lebanese capital between Syrian troops and Israeli-armed Christian militiamen.

The action was seen as an Israeli warning to Syria not to step up military activity in Lebanon.

The jets flew over the capital at a high altitude at 12:17 p.m. (4:17 a.m. CDT). Their jet streams then arched westward over the Mediterranean before they turned south toward Israel.

President Elias Sarkis has been attempting to patch together an unofficial truce between the Syrian troops and the Israeli-backed Christian militiamen, who have battled each other sporadically since last February.

Sarkis' government, meanwhile, took a tough stand on another trouble spot, the southern frontier with Israel, formally stripping all "authority... or legal command" from two rebel army officers leading the Christian militias in the region.

Residents of the southeast border area said both Christian militia areas and U.N. troop units were strengthening their positions in apparent fear the formal expulsion might revive violence.

Palestinian and Lebanese leftist sources said some 20 new armored vehicles could be seen crossing from Israel Wednesday to reinforce Christian militia positions in the towns of Marjayoun, Khiam and El Mei.

In southwest Lebanon, residents said three Israeli gunboats were sighted off the coast for the second time in three days.

The fighting today, the second eruption since Sarkis returned from a trip to Rome for Pope John Paul's inauguration, began before dawn around the Christian suburbs of Ain Rummanel and Tahouita, witnesses and police sources said.

As the thud of shells and the crackle of machine guns and automatic rifles echoed through the area, both Christian and Syrian officials said they had no immediate explanation for the fighting. However, observers noted hospital reports from northeast Lebanon that 11 of 15 Syrian troops have died since they were wounded in a bomb explosion two days ago.

One somber officer from the Arab peacekeeping force said, "It's the same song, the same gunfire, it just doesn't stop."

Miller Urges Solons To Delay Tax Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller today recommended that Congress defer scheduled increases in Social Security taxes for a year.

Miller, testifying before the Senate Finance Committee, said delaying the scheduled $8-billion increase due to become effective Jan. 1 would save the economy about half a percentage point in inflation.

The Federal Reserve chairman also suggested that Congress find a better way of cutting business taxes than was voted by the House last month. He recommended giving businesses a greater and quicker tax writeoff, or depreciation, for their machinery purchases and plant improvements.

And he also said he would not assign nearly as high a priority on reducing capital gains taxes as Congress apparently does.

"How much effect... the (capital gains) tax cut would have on the price of corporate stock and thus on the cost and availability of equity capital is unclear; and how this would translate into acquisition of new plant and equipment is a further uncertainty," Miller said.

Over-all, he added, the size of the $16.3 billion tax cut approved by the House is about right. And unlike he had indicated in a letter released Tuesday, Miller did not call for giving business a greater share of the total tax cut.

An aide to Miller explained that the letter, to Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and John Danforth, R-Mo., reflected Miller's thinking at the time it was written on Aug. 23.

About one-fourth of the tax cut voted by the House last month would go to business, a proportion endorsed by the Carter administration, but Miller had recommended in the letter that the business share be raised to one-third to encourage investment.

concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, killed Kennedy.

Although Connally has said he generally agrees with the Warren Commission report, he has publicly disputed its conclusion that the bullet that wounded him had first gone through Kennedy's throat.

If Connally's impression was borne out, it could raise the possibility of a second gunman.

The commission report acknowledged the difference of opinion, but said Oswald was the only person shooting and that he fired only three shots.

House Probers Hear Connally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally today gave the House Assassinations Committee a rambling account of the political motivations that brought John F. Kennedy to Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, the day the president was assassinated.

Connally, with his wife Nellie at his side, described Kennedy's persistence in urging Connally to arrange the trip.

Kennedy was worried about his slippage in the polls in the months following the Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba, Connally said. To mend political fences in the United States, Kennedy was particularly interested in visiting Texas, a state he had barely carried in 1960, Connally related.

Kennedy and his aides insisted on a presidential motorcade in Dallas, but Connally opposed it. He said he thought it would be an unnecessary strain on the president during a 15-hour day filled with other events.

Connally said the trip had been a success, "the crowds were larger than I had anticipated, more enthusiastic, more enthusiastic than I could have hoped for."

Then Kennedy was shot to death while riding in a motorcade. Connally was riding in the president's limousine and was wounded.

In later sessions, the committee planned to examine unanswered questions and points of dispute which have fueled conspiracy theories surrounding the case.

The committee also will examine the quality of the investigation conducted by the Warren Commission immediately after the assassination. The commission

McCrory, Family Get Protection

DALLAS (AP) — Charles David McCrory, the state's key witness in the upcoming solicitation of capital murder trial of Fort Worth millionaire T. Cullen Davis, has been moved with his family to "parts unknown," according to U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples.

Peoples confirmed that McCrory, his wife and two children were given new identities and moved to another city under the Federal Witness Protection Program. He said McCrory asked for the protection last week and was moved last Friday.

The prosecution's case against Davis on charges he solicited the capital murder of District Court Judge Joe Eidson is based largely on the testimony of McCrory, a former friend and employee of Davis.

Prosecutors also have tape recordings, video tapes and photographs of meetings between McCrory and Davis. McCrory testified that Davis wanted the judge and several other persons on a "hit list" killed.

Davis remains in the Tarrant County Jail, where he is being held without bond on a charge accusing him of solicitation of capital murder of Judge Eidson, who was presiding over the bitterly contested divorce case between Davis and Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla Davis.

Davis was acquitted on a capital murder charge at Amarillo last year in connection with the shooting death of Andrea Wilborn, Mrs. Davis' 12-year-old daughter. The girl and Stan Farr, Mrs.

Davis' lover, were shot to death and Mrs. Davis and two family friends were wounded in a shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth in August of 1976.

Peoples said McCrory asked the U.S. attorney's office at Fort Worth for the protection and the request was approved by the U.S. Justice Department.

Defense lawyer Steve Sumner said he believes federal prosecutors have been "conned" by McCrory.

"I hate to blast the federal government too severely, but I think that McCrory's character has been established to the point that it should be suspect," Sumner continued.

Calling McCrory "an incredibly effec-

Frank Sinatra Campaigns

BOSTON (AP) — Frank Sinatra says there's "a wonderful ring" to Sen. Kathleen Sullivan Alioto. "It sings," he says.

But Ol' Blue Eyes wasn't singing Tuesday — he was dabbling in politics with a visit to Boston to boost Mrs. Alioto's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

The singer topped the bill at a $250-a-plate fund-raising dinner for the wife of his old friend, former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto.

Sinatra said it was time "the ladies had a shot at government."

"One example of this is the fact women know more about budgets than men will ever know," he said.

Ex-Secretary Faces Charge

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Former Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton has been charged with exceeding the bag limit for mourning doves, according to police of the Maryland Department of Natural Resources.

The department citation was issued by an officer from the agency's headquarters in Talbot County on the opening day of the season Friday, police said Tuesday.

A hearing was set for Sept. 25. Conviction carries a maximum fine of $300, a Natural Resources spokesman said.

Asian Facilities Impress Kennedy

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was "most favorably impressed" with medical facilities he saw in the central Asian city of Tashkent, the official Soviet news agency Tass said.

The Massachusetts Democrat said he liked the enthusiasm of medical students he met there, according to Tass.

Kennedy is in the Soviet Union to attend a conference on health care sponsored by the World Health Organization.

The Soviet news agency said Kennedy told students Tuesday that "medical education in the United States is not free of charge and that Indians or Chicanos have few chances of becoming a doctor and getting a good practice."

Flip Wilson Guides TD Drive

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — He's not very tall, but he is a top comedian. And that's enough to get Flip Wilson into the starting lineup on the University of Kansas football team — temporarily at least.

Wilson is in Kansas this week filming a television special in which he plays a backup quarterback for the Jayhawks.

The script calls for Wilson to step in for the starting quarterback and lead Kansas to a touchdown against Texas A&M.

But that's only the beginning in "Flip Wilson's Salute to Football." Later, he is drafted by the St. Louis Cardinals and takes the team to the Super Bowl.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla. (AP) — What you see is not always what's in the can — with Ron Sarzier's novelty wrappers.

Sarzier makes plastic coverings that cool cans and disguise their contents: beer becomes soda pop; soda pop beer.

Three encounters with a law prohibiting consumption of alcohol on public streets and beaches prompted the labels, Sarzier says.

"One time I'd just walked out of the motel door with a beer and, wham, I got nailed," he said. He estimates sales at 440,000 so far.

Sarzier says soft drink makers have had mixed reactions: one cola distributor bought 10,000 wraps as giveaways, while another fired off a not-so-nice letter.

Computer Errs In Scheduling

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Students at the University of Colorado were stunned upon seeing their schedules this week. Thousands were scheduled for classes they never selected, and others were closed out of courses they did choose.

"The computer ran amuck," said CU spokesman Helen Masterson.

Mrs. Masterson said classes, which were to begin today, were postponed until Friday while schedules are reprogrammed.

"Some undergraduate students found themselves taking graduate courses and some students were taking upper division courses when they should have been in the lower division," Mrs. Masterson said.

"My own daughter called me crying and said she was forced out of 10 hours out of a total of 16," she said. "A woman working in the computer room finally realized something was wrong and called the deans."

"Some of the students who were affected by the computer error were told to drop the classes they were scheduled to take and to re-register for the correct classes."

Consultant Reveals Heavy Loss Of GSA Furnishings, Supplies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Furniture and office supplies worth at least $1.3 million a year have vanished from General Services Administration warehouses — apparently in employees' pockets and vans — with little apparent official concern, a former federal consultant says.

Philip Baridon, whose consulting firm made a mid-1970s study of GSA's 20 warehouses across the country at the request of the agency's police service, said Tuesday night he quoted the $1.3 million figure in his report only because he was required to come up with an "estimate" he could document.

"I think it was grossly underestimated but I can't prove it," he said.

"I heard undocumented stories of incredible theft — you'd place your order on the street almost on a contract basis. It was enormously suggestive of theft on a grand scale."

Baridon said his study team could not get better estimates of theft losses because of poor record keeping. He said he didn't know how many of the bad or missing records might have indicated incompetence and how many discrepancies might have been intentional to conceal illegal gain.

"I personally saw a ledger book with $1 million listed under 'miscellaneous.' The answer I got was a shrug of the shoulders," he said.

Federal investigations of alleged GSA corruption dating back 20 years are now under way, and GSA Administrator Jay Solomon has predicted the result will be at least 50 indictments for various theft and fraud schemes involving as much as $66 million a year.

But Baridon said his report apparently only gathered dust after he submitted it.

"The administrator was briefed around January of 1976," Baridon said, referring to Jack Eckerd, who led the agency at that time. Eckerd "was generally hostile to the findings of the report; he felt it was inaccurate, without foundation," Baridon said.

Eckerd, who owns a drug store chain in the South, is seeking the Republican nomination for governor in Florida. He "could not be reached for comment Tuesday night, but The Washington Post quoted him as saying recently he did not recall any such report."

Eckerd also was quoted as saying annual theft loss of about $1 million out of the $800 million in merchandise that passes through GSA warehouses each year

"would be fantastically low for that volume." He said his drug stores accept theft losses of 4 percent or more.

GSA figures show about $150,000 a year in warehouse losses from theft or inventory errors, but Baridon said his investigation showed such "incredible ineptness of inventory control" by GSA that it was almost impossible to decipher whether millions of dollars in merchandise had been stolen or misplaced or simply disappeared.

"If I had been the administrator, I would have said 'holy... we've got to do something,'" Baridon said.

Wildlife Expert Gives Advice On Treatment Of Snakebites

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A young man steps into some high grass and immediately feels something writhe under his foot. He looks down just as the rattlesnake strikes a stinging blow to his leg.

What does he do now?

The man's plight is repeated 2,400 times throughout the United States each year. Sometimes the snakes are poisonous; sometimes they're not.

The death rate from snakebite is very low — less than 1 percent of the 2,400 bitten will die. Most will recover quickly without side effects, says Charles Ramsey, a wildlife specialist at Texas A&M University.

"Above all, the thing to do if you are bitten by any type of snake is try not to panic," Ramsey said. "Bites of harmless snakes do not produce immediate swelling, discoloration, intense burning or any of the other symptoms usually associated with a poisonous bite."

But he said fear and panic can cause emotional disturbances which can induce any of those symptoms.

"Knowing what to do for snakebite will combat the fear of the unknown," he said.

Rather than searching for a weapon with which to kill the snake, he said a person should simply back away carefully.

"An average person can outrun an aggressive snake," he said.

Ramsey said the best advice he has is to learn to identify poisonous snakes and then leave them alone since snakes are rarely aggressive toward humans.

Poisonous snakes to avoid in Texas are rattlesnakes, copperheads, cottonmouths and coral snakes.

If bitten by a poisonous snake, a person should remain calm and avoid unnecessary movement, Ramsey said. The person should not drink any alcoholic beverages or use any home remedies.

"It is important to seek medical aid immediately," he said. "Identify the snake if possible since treatment is determined by the species of snake."

If it will take less than 60 minutes to reach medical aid, Ramsey said a constricting band should be applied two to four inches on each side of the bite.

Ramsey said the band should be loose enough to slip a finger through without difficulty.

If ice is available, Ramsey said it can be placed in a cloth and applied to the bite. The ice cools the venom and slows its spread through the body. But caution should be taken not to freeze skin tissue.

"Don't bind it to the bite or use the ice pack for more than one hour," Ramsey said.

He said three things should be considered when treating snakebite. They are the amount of venom injected, the size of the victim and the time required to reach medical aid.

A snakebite is more dangerous to a child than to an adult, he said.

Disco Making Mark In Soviet Union

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union may not have "Saturday Night Fever" yet, but it is certainly running a temperature.

"Due to the powerful law of youth demand, discos are growing like mushrooms," the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said this week.

More than 40,000 young people turned out during 1977 at one popular discotheque that was only open for four months. The fledgling disco scene is especially hot in the Ukraine, where operators of the nightspots recently turned out for a seminar.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, the newspaper of the Young Communist League, commented the meeting showed an urgent need to organize disco development. It said most operators are technicians who know how to set up lights and sound equipment, but are woefully lacking in "real deep musical knowledge."

Operators also complained about a severe shortage of special equipment — lights, turntables, speakers — plus a shortage of records with the disco beat.

The newspaper also noted some operators may also lack the proper attitude for dealing with the young.

"One disco categorically bans anyone wearing jeans," it said.

Komsomolskaya Pravda called for the establishment of disc jockey training centers.

"The role of the disc jockey is so complicated and so responsible that a special professionalism is needed," it said. "To a great extent the whole style of disco and its popularity depends on his competence."

The newspaper said the operators at the seminar find great possibilities in discos as a "mass form of leisure time for young people."

One British businessman who hopes to cash in on the trend is John Bunting, general manager of Intogr-London, a British export company.

Bunting, who was in Moscow with an agricultural exhibition, plans to meet next week with a number of Soviet organizations interested in buying disco equipment. He said a disco is planned for the Olympic Village at the Moscow Olympic games.

"There is a real shortage here of entertainment that people in the West are used to," Bunting said. "We are here with some proposals."

Komsomolskaya Pravda also noted the disco phenomenon has grown so quickly, many people don't know what it's all about.

"The word disco is just coming into the vocabulary of some Komsomol (Young Communist) officials," the newspaper said. "And not all understand well what the word implies."

Man Opposes Building Of Acid Tanks

KIRBY, Wyo. (UPI) — Harold Heeter has few illusions about the empty topography of the southern Big Horn Basin, where the sun rises behind one distant mountain range and sets behind another.

"Some people think it's kind of scrubby out here, but I like it," he said.

Heeter, however, has recently moved into a new $60,000 home and he is not pleased about the current construction of three hydrochloric acid tanks 400 yards away.

"I don't especially want to stare out the window at those things, and that's why I came here," said Heeter, who owns a plumbing business in Worland, Wyo., a few miles to the north. "I just finished building this house and I don't want my kids playing around there."

So a couple of days ago he began a petition drive to urge a Kansas firm, Vulcan Materials Corporation, to move the tanks, which will contain acid for use in oil drilling, farther from the town. He admits the effort has little chance of success, although he adds: "Stranger things have happened."

A meeting with company officials has been scheduled for Tuesday, and Heeter and his anti-tank people plan to present their petitions.

Kirby is one of many communities in Wyoming caught up in development of the state's energy resources. The source of development is petroleum discoveries in the region, and Heeter said the acid is used at some point in the process of drilling for oil.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Formula 409 Cleans Up

CARTER LOYALISTS at the Democratic National Committee are taking no chances that the party's mid-term conference in Memphis might turn into a rebellion against the beleaguered President.

Party Chairman John White and the DNC hierarchy have rigged the agenda and rules of the conclave so tightly that conference delegates will be all but precluded from mounting any significant challenge to Carter's leadership.

It's a risky maneuver. The procedural manipulation has angered activists within the party who had hoped to force a showdown on the failure of both Carter and Congress to fulfill the promises of the 1976 Democratic platform.

BUT IT probably will succeed, despite the grumbling now going on. The liberals, blacks, union leaders and others most disenchanted with Carter and Congress aren't ready to declare open warfare. Yet

They read the same opinion polls as the President, and they realize any major Memphis confrontation over issues would inevitably be viewed by the media as the start of a dump Carter movement within the Democratic Party.

The one issue that could ignite a revolt against Carter at the conference is probably national health insurance, where the President's prudent caution already has provoked an open split by liberal Sen. Edward Kennedy and his powerful allies in the United Auto Workers and other unions.

But no matter how many potentially hostile delegates wind up in Memphis, they will be hard pressed to create any real mischief. The first two days of the conference will be devoted to speeches, parties and workshops that have no power to submit resolutions to the floor.

ONLY ON Sunday afternoon—when most delegates will be anxious to head for the airport to catch the last planes out of Memphis—will the conference devote an hour or so to debating and voting on resolutions.

To qualify a resolution for conference consideration over the objections of the DNC executive committee, dissidents would have to submit petition signatures from 409 delegates to the DNC no later than Dec. 5.

That amounts to a four-day "window" for collecting and submitting signatures from delegates scattered all over the country—an almost insurmountable chore.

No doubt, those unhappy with the President's performance will find informal outlets for their sentiments, but a full-scale floor fight will be forestalled. Even if they had the stomach for a head-on collision with the Carter forces, party activists will have their hands full just trying to escape the November elections with their political hides intact.

The Thinker

James J. Kilpatrick:

Games Children Shouldn't Play

WASHINGTON—Twenty or 30 years ago, the Hatch amendment would have been regarded as inconceivable.

Even five or ten years ago, few persons would have understood "behavior modification" in the public schools.

But it is a measure of the weird goings-on in public education that last week the Senate understood perfectly what Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah had in mind.

The senator was determined to crack down on the arrogant curiosity of a gaggle of crackpot psychologists who have invaded the public schools.

With the eloquent support of Sen. Sam Hayakawa of California, Hatch succeeded in writing into the pending Elementary and Secondary Education Act an amendment that will put on the brakes.

There wasn't a dissenting vote.

THE HATCH AMENDMENT applies to every public school receiving federal aid, which is to say, to every school in the country.

It says bluntly that "no student shall be required, as part of any applicable program, to submit to psychiatric examination, testing, or treatment, or psychological examination, testing, or treatment, without the prior consent of the parent."

The ban will apply to tests or questionnaires that deal with political attitudes, sexual attitudes, and intra-family relationships.

No child may be interrogated, without his parents' permission, on any mental or psychological problems "potentially embarrassing to the student or his family."

Here and there, we may suppose, a few ultra-sophisticated parents will agree to putting their children through a sexual inquisition.

IN SUCH AN event, the parents and the inquirers will deserve each other.

The overwhelming majority of parents, said Sen. Hatch, will refuse absolutely to feed the prurient curiosity of the intellectual peeping Toms.

In his remarks to the Senate last week, Hatch cited as a typical example a sex education program in Wisconsin that starts at the kindergarten level.

In this "pre-evaluation training," children as young as ten are told how to get an abortion.

He could have cited a hundred other programs that involve invasions of privacy.

One questionnaire sent me from California asks of fifth-grade boys:

"Do you often play with your penis?" The same questionnaire asked of little girls: "Do you often see your father with no clothes on?"

SEN. HAYAKAWA, in his remarks to the Senate, inquired rhetorically how such attitudinal tests ever got to be a part of public education.

It is the result of a flourishing heresy, he said, a heresy that rejects the idea of education as the acquisition of knowledge and skills. Instead, the heresy regards the fundamental task of education as therapy.

"Everyone, it is believed, is to some extent neurotic because of repression, inhibition, reaction formation, symbolic displacement, or whatever."

"Everyone, there needs diagnosis, to examine the extent and seriousness of his or her illness. Everyone, it hardly needs to be said, needs to be,

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May Skools Shud Teech

Kenneth May

"BACK-TO-SCHOOL time is a tough time for animals," says the Animal Protection Institute of America. It recommends that dogs be "reprimanded for howling, praised for constructive play."

After seeing that this approach works on the pets, maybe the API could convince school teachers to treat the children like dogs.

In case you were unaware of it, last Sunday was "Working Mother's Day." At our house, we celebrated by keeping mother working all day.

"Lack of discipline" is the biggest problem facing public schools today, according to a new Gallup Poll. It wasn't made clear whether that's discipline of the students in the classroom or of the teachers in the picket line.

IT'S AN OPEN book that, nationally, the quality of education as measured by standard achievement tests has been going down as schools devoted more attention to civil rights and less to classroom teaching.

Lubbock has not been immune to this trend although we have what I believe to be one of the best school systems in Texas if not the nation.

Schools here face their severest test to date this fall, however, with the initiation of a more comprehensive court-ordered busing plan and a Legislature-mandated free breakfast program.

Schools ought to be in the business of teaching children, not feeding or transporting them unnecessarily.

Holmes Alexander:

Mexico Making Haste--Slowly

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO—U. S. Ambassador Patrick Joseph Lucey wasn't just whistling "On Wisconsin," a state he twice governed well, when he told me, "We're going to have an Arab as a next door neighbor."

He wasn't talking about a cold war or monarchy, but about the bonanza years Mexico stands to experience in the exploitation of its new wealth in petroleum and petrochemical products.

I learned later from another source that golden pools of oil have been known to exist for many years, but the government which is sole owner was shrewd enough to withhold extraction until the psychological moment when the Arabs ruthlessly quadrupled the world price.

Mexican oil and gas increased their value many times by resting comfortably underground, and now new finds are expected.

BUT THE GOVERNMENT of President Lopez Portillo is not the sort of get-rich regime to flourish in the Mideast. Mexico has a conservation philosophy and will become a major wealthy power by internal industrialization.

It is a land blessed with mineral deposits of modern utility, and Lopez Portillo himself is a man to make haste slowly. For instance, he is very unlikely to export natural gas to the United States or even to buy U.S. steel for the pipeline except on his own prudent terms.

This policy is not quite popular among Mexican businessmen despite the respect in which they hold his free enterprise ideas. But the President's sense of nationalism, as well as his campaign slogan of "Together," has turned off the rush of foreign investment that was expected.

As a Mexican business leader told me over breakfast, "Those foreign buyers have the ears of jackrabbits, the feet of deer and the memories of elephants."

MEXICANS CROSS the Rio Grande in regimental-sized numbers, looking for jobs, fading into the population without authorization to immigrate. Back in the early 1970s, a plan was vaguely conceived to create enough well-paying jobs south of the river to discourage illegal and stealthy entrance into the United States.

Bond industries, with U.S. capital investment and inexpensive Mexican labor were set up for plants to assemble or complete light work on televisions and other electronic gadgetry.

In the peak year of 1975, there were over 400 such plants and as many as 100,000 workers. But the Nixon depression, which hit Mexico later than it did the United States, cut the figures approximately in half.

In this respect, the nationwide Tax Revolt and the "back-to-basics" school movement are rooted in the same concern: The public believes it is not getting what it's paying for but is getting frills it doesn't want.

An estimated two million children are bused each day, for example, for no other reason than to provide a "racial balance" in the classroom.

A STUDY BEING released by the Rand Corp. this week shows that even the social goals of court-ordered busing are misfiring: It contributes to more "white flight" and, thus, to less rather than more racial integration.

Earlier studies already have concluded that there is no educational benefit from massive integration plans.

"Court-ordered mandatory plans, rather than desegregation per se, have been the primary causes of accelerated white flight in desegregating districts," Rand sociologist David Armor says.

"Voluntary busing plans...do not appear to have any significant effect on white flight."

In short: Even tolerant people don't like being ordered around.

Against that finding, Lubbock's acceptance of court-ordered busing despite widespread resentment is all the more a tribute to the community's social conscience.

It is especially commendable that this attitude flourishes despite the rabble-rousing of a few malcontents who continue to sow the seeds of racial hatred every time they can get a camera pointed in their direction.

IT'S INSIDE the classroom, though, where a different offshoot of the civil rights movement has been especially harmful.

Lack of discipline because of misguided beliefs that students have "rights" to flaunt authority and "do their own thing" has resulted in inferior education.

Dr. Hardy Clemons, pastor of the Second Baptist Church here, says that discipline is too often narrowly defined as punishment.

"The idea of discipline is to teach (a student) that life will be funner, fuller and freer if he learns the boundaries and respects them," Clemons says.

A STUDENT CAN not become a productive member of society unless he disciplines his mind to knowledge and disciplines his behavior to socially accepted standards.

There are perhaps some young people who, either because of the home situation or because of something inside them, are capable of self-discipline.

The vast majority, however, need help from a loving teacher who understands that discipline of mind and behavior must be enforced in the classroom if a student's education is to be complete.

When that discipline is a fact, the test scores will go up, the taxpayer will get his money's worth and—most importantly—the schools will be turning out graduates who are equipped to conquer life's challenges, even to the point of feeding their own children breakfast at home.

It wasn't until 1977, with Lopez Portillo in office, and the petroleum boom finding its momentum, that their turn came in the bond plant industry.

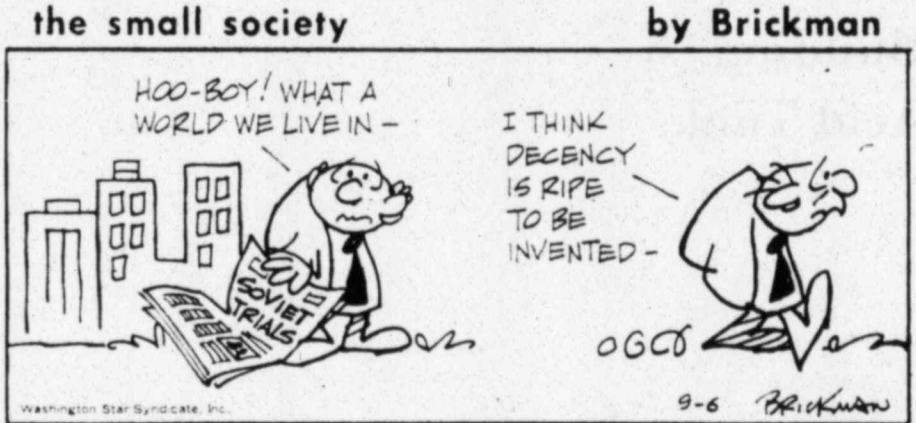

While the new wealth of petroleum in Mexico has slowed down the flood of "undocumented immigrants," and has been reinforced by the Mexican use of U.S. leased helicopters spray toxics on the poppy fields, there still remains a sizable migration, from the Caribbean as well as from Mexico.

Both Presidents Carter and Lopez Portillo, along with most of the Congress, but evidently with a minority of the sentimental Americans feel that the loophole to be plugged is the employers of known illegal workers.

The idea of punishing a small restaurateur for hiring a non-card-carrying dishwasher won't be tolerated, I asked Ambassador Lucey if it wouldn't set a good example for Atty. Gen. Bell to crack down on a few giant corporations to show what the Democrats are made of.

But the Ambassador countered that there wouldn't be enough federal prosecutors to carry the load. It's something we'll have to live with a while longer.

Sylvia Porter: IRS Rules Shackle Educational Mobility

A SECRETARY AT a medium-size corporation decides to study for a degree in business administration, with the goal of moving up to a better paying, more demanding job at the same company. Her employer, as many do, pays for her tuition.

A market analyst at the same corporation also takes advantage of the employer's tuition aid program and he, too, gets a degree in business administration.

But here the similarities between the two employees end. The secretary, under current Internal Revenue Service rules, must pay federal income taxes on the tuition support she receives from her employer. The higher-paid market analyst does not.

Q. WHY THE DIFFERENCE in taxation of education benefits?

A. Because the market analyst's training was related to his present job, while the additional schooling the secretary received could have prepared her for a new job or business.

Tuition fees paid by employers for education or training to maintain or improve an employee's skills in a present job are non-taxable, under today's IRS rules.

The employee need not report the payments as income, and if the payments are reported, they may be claimed as deductions.

But if the assistance helps the employee qualify for other jobs, the aid must be reported as income and is fully taxable.

If workers pay for the education themselves, the same distinctions on taxation apply.

IT IS THIS "job-related distinction" that is currently under attack in Congress.

Led by Sens. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., about 30 senators are co-sponsoring a bill to change IRS practice to make all education assistance provided by employers tax-exempt.

You, the employee, could then exclude from your income all tuition fees, cost of books, supplies, etc., paid for or provided in-house by your employer. It wouldn't matter whether the training was related to your present job or to a future one.

Backing this Employer Education Assistance bill are some unions, Motorola, Mobile Oil, the American Hospitalization Society, and the American Society for Training and Development as well as other groups involved in education.

THESE SUPPORTERS argue that the present job-related test hits hardest at those who most need new skills and can least afford to pay taxes on additional training.

Specifically, these are lower-level workers: the typist striving to become a secretary, the secretary eager to become a para-legal, the mechanic who dreams of being a mechanical engineer.

Today's IRS rules hinder the development and upward mobility of these workers.

The U.S. Treasury opposes the proposal, roughly estimated to cost about $23 million in '78, rising to $40 million in '83.

It argues that exempting employer-provided education assistance would discriminate against, say, full-time students or workers in firms without such programs.

These people would continue to pay for their education out of after-tax income, while some employees would receive schooling tax-free. It adds that highest-income taxpayers would receive the greatest benefits.

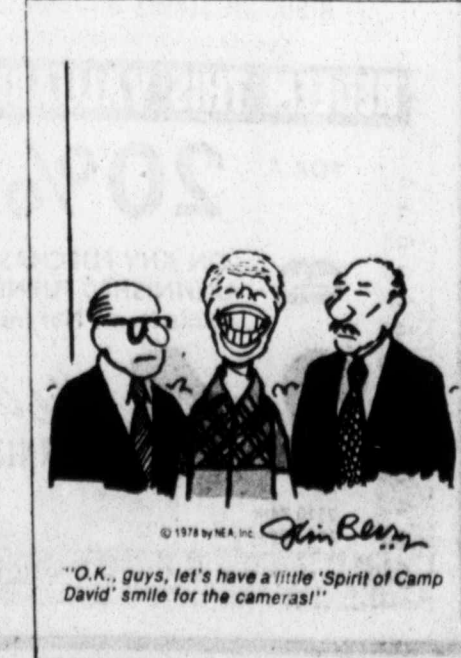

Raising the tax-exempt levels of income would be a more direct and equitable way of attacking the problems of the poor, it insists.

And it fears a growing loss of revenue if many people arrange to receive tax-free tuition aid instead of taxable higher pay.

THE MEASURE HAS strong support in the Senate and companion bills have been introduced into the House. But the administration offers little basis for compromise.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., powerful chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, will decide the fate of the bill.

Long wants a tax law in '78, is anxious to steer clear of any amendments which are controversial and might slow down the tax bill. His assessment of support and opposition to this measure is the key.

Flooding In India Brings River To Record Height

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The Jamuna River, whose rising waters already have forced more than 250,000 people out of their homes in the New Delhi area, crested at a record 15 feet above flood level today.

Flooding already has killed scores of people in the capital region, and D.R. Kohli, governor of the New Delhi Federal Territory, said "the city faces a night of crisis."

Muddy waters lapped at the tomb of the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and came within 1,000 yards of the majestic Taj Mahal, officials said.

More than a quarter-million people have been evacuated from flood-threatened areas. "The situation is terrible," Prime minister Morarji Desai told reporters after an aerial tour of the New Delhi area.

The Flood Control Office said the Jamuna stopped rising at dawn today with its waterline 15 feet above mean flood level, the highest ever recorded.

The official death toll in the New Delhi floods mounted to 47 when a rescue sailboat overturned Tuesday night, drowning 25 persons, officials said. Twenty other persons died Monday in a similar incident.

Even though the river stopped rising today, thousands of persons were still being evacuated.

Lubbock Area Readings To Remain In Mid-80s

A-J News Services
Temperatures were expected to hold in the 80s today and Thursday under fair skies as the South Plains moves closer to fall.

Weathermen predicted highs in the high 80s today and mid-80s Thursday and a low tonight in the low 60s.

Forecasts called for southeasterly winds at 10 to 15 mph today and five to 10 mph tonight.

West Texas was the only clear region of the state before sunrise today.

Thundershowers were widespread over Central Texas during the night from the Rio Grande River to the Oklahoma border.

Little rain was reported, however. Co-tulla had .15 inch, Midland .01 and Del Rio a trace.

Early morning temperatures ranged from near 50 in the western mountains to near 60 in the Panhandle and the mid-70s from Fort Worth to Brownsville.

Scattered showers were forecast for much of Texas today with north and far West Texas expected to miss most of the showers.

Forecasts call for fair skies in the northern part of the state, partly cloudy skies in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the lower Gulf Coast.

The agricultural forecast calls for 11 hours of sunshine today over the South Plains and 10 hours Thursday.

The extended forecast for West Texas predicts warm afternoons and mild nights Friday through Sunday and scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers west of the Pecos River.

The remains of tropical storm Norman, centered off the coast of California, continued to spread rain across much of the western quarter of the nation today.

Rainfall amounts have averaged about an inch.

Meanwhile, tropical storm Flossie showed little change as it moved slowly across the Atlantic, presenting no current threat to land.

Hurricane Ella faded in the North Atlantic on Tuesday as cold waters sapped its strength 700 miles east northeast of St. Johns, Newfoundland, forecasters said.

The kingdom of Ghana developed during the 8th Century and became a wealthy trading center, extending from Timbuktu to the Atlantic.

Shower and thunderstorm activity occurred early today in Oklahoma and Texas, along the eastern Gulf of Mexico and from Florida into South Carolina.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy from the southern Rockies through the central Plains, the middle Mississippi Valley and the Ohio and Tennessee valleys to the East Coast from Virginia to New England.

Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 33 degrees in Houlton, Maine to 87 in Las Vegas.

The forecast called for rain and thundershowers from the West Coast across the Plateau into the northern Rockies.

Widely scattered thundershowers will occur along the Gulf Coast, over Florida, across eastern South Carolina and through northern New England.

Skies will be mostly sunny over southern Arizona and from the central Rockies across the northern and central Plains, the Great Lakes and the Ohio Valley to the east coast from the Carolinas to southern New York state.

Temperatures will be hot over southern Arizona, the central and northern Plains and through most of the Great Lakes.

Cool to mild temperatures will prevail from the northern half of California and the Pacific Northwest across the Plateau into the northern Rockies. The rest of the country will be warm.

Paper Bag Shortage Expected

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

That universal staple of American food shopping — the grocery bag — is running into short supply, and some retailers are being told by their distributors to be prepared for an out-and-out shortage of paper bags in the months ahead.

One East Coast wholesaler told us he's having to wait eight to 10 weeks to get his bag orders filled, a far cry from the week or less it has taken to get delivery in the past.

The situation isn't likely to get bad enough to force American shoppers to resort to the string bags that Europeans are accustomed to carrying, but some retail establishments are getting worried about whether they will be able to obtain adequate supplies of the paper bags they use.

Fast-food chains, for example, like to pack take-out orders in white bags, which have a fresher, cleaner look than ordinary brown grocery bags. But unbleached kraft bags, as they are known in the trade, are in the shortest supply, and some fast-food operations may soon have to settle for brown bags, as they did during the serious bag shortage that developed in 1974.

In addition, some smaller sizes of paper bags may disappear entirely, as manufacturers stop making those lower-margin items and concentrate on more profitable larger bags.

The shortage of bags will get worse before it gets better, says Albert C. Lasher, president of Disposable Marketing Corp. His New York-based company serves as packaging consultants to the restaurant industry, whose fast-food segment is an increasingly large user of paper goods. "We probably won't see any relief before the turn of the year," Lasher told us.

At the same time, and not very surprisingly, paper bag prices have been shooting up. There have been several increases in recent months, with prices spurring ahead in 5 percent and 10 percent leaps. Although the shortage of bags and the higher prices they now command primarily affect the retailer at this point, they inevitably will be passed along to the consumer in the form of increased costs.

A major reason for the present shortage has been a substantial curtailment of paper bag production capacity over the last year. Following a strike that began in October, Gulf States Paper Corp., which once accounted for close to 10 percent of all paper bag output, announced in February that it was shutting down its plant in Tuscaloosa, Ala., and going out of the bag business entirely. San Francisco-based Crown Zellerbach Corp. closed down its paper bag plant in Bogalusa, La., and pulled out of the Eastern and Midwestern markets. These moves followed several years during which supplies of bags were abundant and prices were low.

"Considering the softness of the market and the capital investment that was needed to make our plant profitable, we didn't see the market getting strong enough to warrant staying in the bag business," Walter R. Adams, a Gulf States vice president, told us. The strike, he added, was not the primary reason for the shutdown.

The lengthy series of strikes that has hit the paper industry on the West Coast is also considered a contributing factor to the bag shortage. But because there was some inventory build-up in anticipation of those strikes, their full effect has not yet been felt.

Another factor adding to the price pressures is that the world wood pulp surplus of the last few years appears to be nearing an end. The world inventory, which peaked in the spring of last year at 3.3 million tons, has now dropped to about 2 million tons. That's still above the normal world inventory of about 1.4 million tons, but the steady decline in the total means that prices are losing the restraints imposed by excess supply.

The bag shortage in this country is likely to affect smaller stores more drastically than big chain operations, since producers are going to pay more attention to filling the needs of their major customers. At the New Jersey headquarters of Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., for example, a purchasing executive, while confirming to us that his bag suppliers had reported a "tightening" of the market, said he wasn't worried about facing a shortage. He pointed out that A&P spends between $25 million and $35 million a year on paper bags and sacks (in the trade, the larger, heavier-weight bags that stores use to pack full orders are called sacks).

He noted, however, that A&P is testing high-density plastic sacks at some locations "just to keep up with what's happening in the world."

Women Use Cans To Make Flowers

By GREG THOMPSON

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Penny Kemp and Marie Johnson produce brightly colored flowers that will never wilt, just bend. You don't have to water them and bugs are no problem.

These life-like flowers started out as beer cans and blossomed into a profit-making business.

That's right, beer cans. As in Schlitz, Budweiser, Lone Star and Coors. The stuff that made Milwaukee famous.

The two women collect the cans — with the gusto already removed, of course — and cut, paint and bend the aluminum into incredibly realistic daisies, buttercups, tea roses and daffodils. They produce a total of 38 varieties, all with the advantage inherent in aluminum flowers.

"You can't hurt them," said Mrs. Johnson, the daughter half of the mother-daughter team. "They bend, but you can bend them right back into shape. You can wash them. They won't fade and they won't rust."

The women ship the flowers to customers all over the United States. A recent shipment went to Anchorage, Alaska, while an order of eight arrangements went to the president of the American Can Co., who used them as Christmas gifts.

The award-winning arrangements have adorned tables at conventions and are ordered by interior decorators. They've been used in weddings and as graveside memorials.

It takes about 30 hours and 100 cans — or a little less than 17 six packs — to make an elaborate arrangement of 18 different types of flowers and leaves. It sells for $50. Other arrangements bring $30-$40, while a single daisy sells for 50 cents.

The women dreamed up the beer can flowers about six years ago for an arts and crafts bazaar. They said they don't know of anyone else who makes such flowers.

"We just started playing with it. The first ones looked awful. We had to draw all of our own patterns and it took a while to perfect them," said Mrs. Johnson.

Mrs. Kemp, who is retired, spends about four hours a day making the flowers. Mrs. Johnson works at an insurance firm, but often labors past midnight on the floral creations. Weekends are occupied either with arts and crafts shows or flower-making.

"We make our expenses and a little more, but not near enough to cover the time we spend on it. It's not a hobby where you'll get rich," said Mrs. Johnson.

To make a beer can flower, the women remove the top and bottom of the can, leaving a pliable sheet of aluminum from which petals and leaves are cut with ordinary scissors.

A base coat of spray paint is applied, followed by three or four coats of enamel spray paint.

Needless to say, the two women can't quaff enough suds to empty the hundreds of cans needed for their hobby. "When we first started, it was a little complicated to get enough cans," said Mrs. Johnson. "We can only use a recyclable aluminum can so we had to sort them. We put out the word that we needed cans and now we might wake up and find that a friend has left six or seven cases at our door."

Use Of New Language 'Spanglish' Growing In New York City

By ANDRES OPPENHEIMER
 NEW YORK (AP) — Until recently, Spanish-speaking people who wanted to get around in New York City had to be fluent in English, too. Not so today.

Now, almost anywhere in the city, they can make themselves understood in Spanglish. It's a sort of new language that — to put it in its own terms — is spoken by all over by Latinos who combine elements of English and Spanish because of the trouble of expressing themselves in either idiom.

"Spanglish is a continuous code-switching," says Dr. Gary Keller, professor of Hispanic linguistics at the City University of New York, and author of three books on Spanglish.

"We all talk faster than we think, and therefore it's easier for bilingual people to use the first words that come up in their minds, no matter whether they are in English or in Spanish," he explains.

Says Keller, Spanglish is not regarded by most linguists as an independent language because it has not created enough of its own grammatical rules.

But Keller acknowledges Spanglish has at least one key characteristic of an autonomous language — a lot of people speak it. In New York alone, almost 2 million Latinos have made Spanglish their everyday tongue, he says.

—A TV commercial on one of the city's Spanish language stations suggests, "Use el plan day-by-day savings del Citibank."

—A magazine for Hispanics called Nuestro runs a cover story with the headline, "The abogada for La Raza" (The advocate for La Raza).

—Another magazine, Latin New York, urges the purchase of a T-shirt by saying, "Que T-shirt!" (What a T-shirt!).

"In Spanglish there are certain domains where English words are used and others where Spanish terms are preferred," says Keller.

"For a Puerto Rican who is a Catholic, comes from a rural environment and moves to New York, it's easier to speak in Spanish about everything related to rural life and religion, and to use English terms when describing the urban and secular way of life."

Studies on Spanglish by Keller and other linguists have shown that terms like

"jet", "dish-washer" and "shopping center" appear almost invariably in English, while "fiesta", "hacienda", "rancho" and "guerrilla" are kept in Spanish and are even picked up by native English speakers.

Spanglish also has created new terms that lie in limbo somewhere between English and Spanish. Factory has become "factoria," teen-agers are "tinajeros," a market is "una marqueta." Gustavo Gonzalez, a professor of linguistics at the University of Texas, supports the teaching of what he calls "American Spanish" in schools throughout the country.

But Keller says most linguists disagree with that approach, on grounds that such teachings would foil the efforts made by bilingual education in preparing students to be fluent in both languages.

As it stands, at least one thing can be said — que only el tiempo will tell if el Spanglish is here to stay.

Texas Political Candidates Seek Funds To Finance Campaigns

By ANN ARNOLD
 AUSTIN (UPI) — Money is the key that opens the door to political office and Texas candidates are earnestly seeking more dollars as the final campaign stretch begins.
 Bill Clements says he will raise an unprecedented $2 million at a star-studded Dallas dinner Sept. 12 — but John Hill may have beaten him to a new record for campaign fund raising with an unpublished Houston luncheon.
 Hill raised $320,000 and obtained pledges for more at the Aug. 1 luncheon attended by only 40-45 individuals.
 Lowell Lebermann, Hill's finance chairman, said another 5 to 10 individuals who could not attend sent contributions.
 Although Hill and other candidates have raised more at one time with a statewide dinner or mass function, no one else appears to have collected so much from such a small group of individuals, Lebermann said.

 "We've talked to a lot of people and nobody knew of anything to match it," Lebermann said.
 Clements is counting on selling 2,000 tickets at $1,000-a-plate to his Sept. 12 dinner and is using former President Gerald Ford, ex-Govs. Ronald Reagan and John Connally and a veritable "Who's Who" of Texas Republican politics as drawing cards.
 Hill's luncheon featured only the candidate.
 Lebermann said he was amazed at the largesse of the individuals who contributed $5,000 to $10,000 each and promised to help raise even more for the attorney general's bid for governor.
 One man who backed Gov. Dolph Briscoe for re-election in the primary against Hill not only contributed $10,000 personally but promised to hold a fund raiser and collect another $50,000 to $70,000, Lebermann said.

 "As we were leaving I told Hill, 'Pardon me, but I don't remember ever having seen anything like that,'" Lebermann said.
 "Lowell, that's because there's never been anything like that," Lebermann quoted Hill saying.

 Lebermann said Houston contributors start donations at a higher financial level than most residents of other areas of the state.
 "In order to be a major player $5,000 is sort of the number where they start," he said. "They have a sort of peer group pressure and history of giving more and more freely than any people I ever saw."

 Lebermann said on the two-day visit to Houston when the luncheon was held, more than $400,000 was contributed to Hill's campaign.
 Many of the hefty contributions, Lebermann said, came from people who had donated with similar generosity to Hill's primary campaign.

 Lebermann said a number of the large contributions, however, came from some of Briscoe's longtime financial backers.

Stock Analyst Discovers Profits, Prices Different

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP)—A Wall Street analyst's study of stock prices over a 40-year span lends support to the argument that the market seldom moves in tandem with corporate earnings.

In theory, of course, profits — and the dividends which they generate — are what stock ownership is all about. And over the very long term, both the market and company earnings have climbed.

But David Upshaw, senior technical analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc., found that quarter by quarter, from 1936 to 1975, corporate profits and stock prices went their own very different ways.

In the one quarter in which Standard & Poor's index of industrial stocks rose more than 30 percent, earnings declined 24 percent.

In 18 other quarters during which the S

&P 425 had gains of 10 percent or more, earnings averaged an increase of less than 1 percent.

The index was unchanged to 9 percent higher in 80 quarters, during which earnings averaged a 2 percent increase.

And in 57 quarters of declining stock prices, earnings on average were unchanged to 2 percent higher.

What does tend to move along with the market, Upshaw concluded, is the level of price-earnings ratios, which go beyond the earnings numbers to measure what investors are willing to pay for those earnings. By implication, P-Es measure fluctuations in the intangibles of the market — greed and fear, optimism and pessimism.

"Many investors have observed the phenomena of the general market moving upward in the face of declining corporate earnings and of the general market falling on a pattern of strong increases in earnings," Drexel Burnham Lambert said in a report based on Upshaw's study.

"Ensuing price movements for these diametrically opposed situations are chiefly a function of either a narrowing or widening of the P-E."

The P-E ratio of a given company is calculated simply by dividing its annual earnings per share into its stock price. When investors are willing to pay high multiples of, say, 20 or more, as was often the case during the 1960s, they are obviously optimistic about prospects for future earnings.

When P-Es fall below 10, as has happened for much of the time in the 1970s against a background of bear markets and inflation worries, it is taken as evidence of investors' wariness.

Given the primary impact of P-Es on the course of the market, Drexel Burnham Lambert recommends that investors carefully evaluate the multiples of any stocks they own or might be considering buying.

The firm provides these guidelines for companies in three different categories of earnings history:

—High growth and stability: A higher-than-average P-E is warranted, and future earnings estimates can be used to calculate it. "However," the firm says, "the higher the relative premium to the averages, the higher the risk if the growth rate decelerates or if the consistency of the earnings stream declines."

—Average growth and stability: The multiple should be close to that of the market averages, using the most recent 12-month earnings.

—Low growth and stability: The multiple probably should be lower than average. The firm adds, "Since the earnings are erratic, a three- or five-year average should be used in computing the P-E."

The P-E ratio of Standard Poor's 500-stock composite index recently stood at 9.60, modest by historical standards but up from 8.14 earlier this year. Upshaw said the rate of increase has been rising lately, indicating that "some enthusiasm is coming back to the market."

Older Children Can Have Fun With Tots

By SHARI LEWIS
My daughter Mallory is 16. She wears all of my clothes. I don't mind that. I get to wear all of hers! She's bigger than I am. I don't mind that either. I'm only 5 feet tall, so just about everyone's bigger than I am.

What I do mind is the fact that we don't get to play together the way we used to.

When she and I were alone (which happened lots, because I took her with me wherever I went to perform) we never turned on the TV. We'd create things out of paper or make up stories.

The next time you're baby-sitting or alone with your younger brother or sister, try not turning on the TV set. It's really so easy to please a 3- to 5-year old, and you'll have as much fun as the little one.

Here are some things big kids can do with little kids:

Take a walk. Read a story. Cut pictures out of magazines. Draw paper dolls. Fold paper airplanes. Or make a Poke-a-Dot picture shine. Here's how:

On a sheet of paper, draw the outline of anything — a boat or bicycle, an elephant or rabbit, an apple or whatever pleases you. Draw it in pencil, and then poke pinholes all around the outline, right on the penciled line. Now erase the pencil marks, hold your picture up to a light and see your Poke-a-Dot picture shine.

Mallory and I remember how we loved to do that. Perhaps when your brother or sister is 16, you'll both remember and feel good about what you did together, too.

Wives Of Admirals Take Free Trips

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. Coast Guard admirals took their wives along on one-third of the trips they made at government expense last year, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., says.

Aspin said a check of travel records of the 12 Coast Guard district area commanders showed they made 74 trips aboard government aircraft last year and took their wives on 24 of the trips. In 18 of the 24 cases, the officer who approved the wife's flight was her husband, Aspin said.

"It's the kind of thing a big shot in a banana republic might do," said Aspin, adding he planned to raise the issue with Transportation Secretary Brock Adams, who has authority over the Coast Guard.

Gallbladder Operation

By LAWRENCE, E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 32-year-old female who is concerned about an upcoming operation to remove my gallbladder. In light of the following information, perhaps you can give me your opinion as to whether such an operation is necessary or not.

During the past two years I've experienced three attacks. These attacks followed periods of overindulgence in alcohol and greasy food. For example, at Thanksgiving and at Christmas. A normal daily diet causes no discomfort at all.

X-rays have showed the presence of two medium-size stones and my doctor's recommendation, along with that of a surgeon, is to have the gallbladder removed. However, since I have experienced no discomfort for the past month, I question the necessity of surgery.

DEAR READER — There is usually some difference of opinion about the necessity of doing gallbladder surgery in a person who is not having symptoms but does have gallstones.

Because of the complications which can occur, such as the attacks that you've experienced, the possibility of occluding the bile duct, or having an acute inflammation of the gallbladder that resembles appendicitis (except for its location), I am inclined to tell individuals as young as you are who have stones to go ahead and have them removed.

There is also suspicious relationship between the presence of gallstones and the subsequent development of cancer of the biliary tract. That's not to say you will develop this cancer if your gallstones aren't removed because the exact relationship has not been statistically proven.

Gallbladder surgery in young, relatively healthy people, in the hands of a good surgeon, is not very dangerous. An acute gallbladder attack which can rupture is another matter.

To give you more information about gallbladder disease I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-9, Gallstones and Gallbladder Disease. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has so much trouble with too much oil in his hair. You can just wipe oil off his forehead. I'd sure like your opinion on what to do about it.

DEAR READER — The oil comes from sebaceous glands in the skin. The best thing to do with excess oil is to wash it off. He doesn't need to worry about washing his hair too often. He can even wash it twice a day with a mild shampoo. Actually, his hair will do better if it's kept relatively oil free than if it is matted with excess oil production.

The forehead can be washed two or three times a day with warm water and soap. Another good way to clean off the oil is with a cotton sponge soaked in alcohol. Since oil is soluble in alcohol, the alcohol sponge is a good way to wipe off the excess amount. The alcohol also tends to dry the skin some and helps to decrease the excess production.

I think there are a lot of people who are afraid of excessive washing of the hair or skin. The best rule is to wash your hair as often as necessary to eliminate the accumulation of excess amounts of oil.

Birth Control Vaccine Developed

DENVER (UPI) — A birth control vaccine so effective that one shot a year would prevent pregnancy could be available within the decade, predicts a researcher who already has developed a vaccine that works on baboons.

Dr. John M. Stewart, a biochemist at the University of Colorado Medical Center, said a vaccine for men or women could be developed in five to 10 years and the vaccine probably would not involve risks associated with birth control pills.

Stewart, whose projects are funded by the World Health Organization and the National Institutes of Health, said last week that a single shot probably would be effective for at least one year — perhaps longer.

The scientist said his colleague on the project, Dr. Vernon C. Stevens of Ohio State University, has used vaccines based on Stewart's formula to prevent pregnancy in baboons.

One of the vaccines being researched would curb male potency by interfering with sperm production, Stewart said, but it would not reduce the sex drive.

He said another vaccine, for women, would inhibit a hormone essential for development of the embryo. When fertilization occurs, most embryos can grow to a size no bigger than about 12 cells without the hormone's help, he said.

The hormone, human chorionic gonadotropin, known as HCG, does several things vital to maintaining pregnancy. It causes production of a chemical to keep the uterus healthy and also coats the embryo. The coating may chemically prevent the mother from rejecting the tiny organism as a foreign substance, Stewart said.

Built from amino acids, the basic units of protein, the vaccine would make women immune to their own HCG, Stewart said.

The vaccine for men would follow roughly the same principles as the vaccine for women, Stewart said.

Hypnosis Helpful In Treating Some Problems Of Childhood

By AL ROSSITER JR.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although hypnosis is not a cure-all, two researchers report it is a useful approach to treating many childhood problems, ranging from bed wetting to asthma.

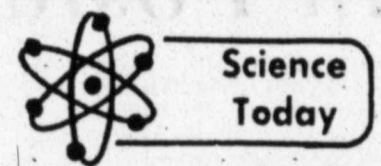

"We can say hypnotherapy is useful for some children when other therapies have failed," said Drs. Karen Olness, a pediatrician at the Minneapolis Children's Health Center, and G. Gail Gardner, a psychologist at the University of Colorado Medical Center.

They said hypnosis appears particularly useful with children because they are easier to hypnotize than adults, perhaps because youngsters are more willing to engage in imagery and fantasy and have fewer inhibitions.

As a matter of fact, Drs. Olness and Gardner said children apparently are able to go into hypnosis on their own, without the aid of an adult.

"Thus, when we speak of hypnosis in children, we are speaking of an innate capacity that we can help them harness to their own advantage. Reporting in the August issue of the medical journal Pediatrics, Drs. Olness and Gardner said hypnosis has been shown effective in helping children overcome habit disorders such as nail biting, gagging, thumb sucking, hair pulling, bed wetting, facial tics, insomnia and sleep-walking.

Furthermore, they said that hypnosis is useful in finding out whether the child really wants to get rid of a particular bad habit, or whether psychotherapy may be needed.

Drs. Olness and Gardner also said hypnosis sometimes is useful in combination with other therapy in treating problems such as asthma, nausea, vomiting, high blood pressure, recurrent hives, a fear of choking and hiccups. As with any other method of treatment, the researchers said it is possible to misuse hypnosis.

"In our experience, the pediatrician who maintains the same conservative attitude toward hypnotherapy as toward medication and surgery will find his problems with hypnosis to be generally fewer and more easily managed."

House Committee Challenges Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee voted 24-6 today in favor of overriding President Carter's veto of a $37-billion defense authorization bill that included a $2-billion nuclear aircraft carrier opposed by the chief executive.

Chairman Melvin Price, D-Ill., said he would lead the veto fight on the House floor Thursday, when an override vote is scheduled. Several of his supporters predicted victory, despite Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's forecast that the veto will be sustained.

"This is simply a case where the president has had some bad advice and where Congress is playing its proper role in providing for the defense of the nation," Price said.

The chairman and others hotly disputed Carter's original claim that Congress had trimmed some $800 million from the bill to make room for the carrier, which the president says is too expensive.

They also disputed his contention that the bigger nuclear carrier would cost nearly $1 billion more than a conventional carrier, which Carter endorses.

Price pointed to the Defense Department's own estimate that a conventional model would cost about $1.6 billion. The extra costs for oil fuel would add another $200 million over 13 years, analysts say.

Since Carter's Aug. 17 veto message, the Pentagon has asked that $457 million be added to a redrafted bill in place of the carrier, including more than $200 million for research and development work.

But Price said that even if the veto were sustained and a new bill drafted, such additions would not be likely. "The cuts made by Congress were based on a reasoned judgment of priorities ... and such reductions would have been made even if there were no carrier in the bill," he said.

Committee member Les Aspin, D-Wis., said that despite heated rhetoric between Congress and the White House, "the issue is simply one of whether we should have a nuclear carrier. It's not a constitutional crisis. I'm going to support the president. We've been spending billions of dollars for a handful of ships and I say we need more and smaller ships."

Earlier, leaders of a bipartisan veto override coalition predicted they would get more than the necessary two-thirds vote on Thursday. Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., and Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., pointed to the fact that the House earlier had voted 264-139 against substituting a conventional carrier in the bill, or only five votes short of those needed for an override.

Of those 139 votes, coupled with 29 others who were absent earlier, about 40 are "almost sure" to switch position and favor the override, they said, and another 60 or so votes are "persuadable."

Stratton said that if the House does override, prospects are solid that the Senate would do likewise. "With Sens. Stennis and Hart on our side, I don't see how we can lose," he said.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., is the conservative chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, while Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., is a liberal and frequent critic of defense programs.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown tried to head off override efforts Tuesday by sending a letter to Price in which he said Carter "did not reject or question the vital role of the Congress" in shaping defense policy.

"Let me add here most emphatically my own assurance that there is no thought or charge, express or implied, by me or by anyone else in the administration that you or any member of the committee or of the Congress would vote for a bill believing that it weakened our national defense," Brown wrote.

Carter complained in his veto message that the overall weapons measure "does not spend wisely" by eliminating money for NATO commitments and other high-priority requirements while adding funds for "the luxury of an unneeded nuclear-powered aircraft carrier."

anew that he sees the U.S. president as "a full partner in the peace process."

On that point Carter has seemed inclined to accept Sadat's position.

Sadat termed it "the crucial crossroads" and said: "The challenge is tremendous, but we have no choice but to accept the challenge. We cannot afford to fail ..."

First Sadat and then Begin got red-carpet welcomes Tuesday afternoon at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, then flew the 65 miles aboard Carter's helicopter to Camp David, the presidential retreat in the mountains of western Maryland.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter and Begin met privately Tuesday night, in advance of a similar

Reports By Church Schools Ordered

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A judge has ordered 63 church-sponsored schools in North Carolina to file reports to show they meet state education requirements.

Both visiting leaders made public statements at the Andrews ceremonies, which included artillery salutes, the playing of anthems and the presence of small groups of supporters who sang national songs.

In a ruling released Tuesday, a Wake Superior Court judge ordered the schools to report on their curriculum, promotion and grading practices, certification of teachers and the length of school day and term. The state took the issue to court when 11 of the schools refused to file the reports on grounds of infringement on religious freedom.

At Camp David, an ebullient Sadat hugged the president and his wife, Rosalynn, then kissed each on both cheeks — in keeping with Arab custom.

The more subdued Begin embraced Carter warmly and kissed Mrs. Carter on both cheeks.

Schools Hit By Teacher Walkouts

By The Associated Press

Teachers manned picket lines or threatened strikes in numerous school districts today in an effort to get more money and better contracts, disrupting the opening of classes for more than 600,000 students.

Progress Slow In Postal Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bargainers in the postal contract dispute resumed face-to-face talks today after an initial move to find a settlement and sidestep a threatened mail strike led nowhere.

But some aides to national union leaders here accused the local leaders of issuing hollow threats.

Some teachers faced potential fines and jail sentences in their defiance of state laws prohibiting strikes, while school administrators were deciding whether to bring in substitute teachers and non-union members or to call off classes.

Morning and afternoon rounds of talks were scheduled for the Postal Service and three unions, which face a self-imposed Sept. 16 deadline for either reaching agreement on their own or letting an arbitrator settle the dispute for them.

"We've talked to a lot of local people and they say they don't have diddley-squat people willing to walk out," said one union staff member.

Teachers were on strike today in some of the nation's largest cities, including Philadelphia, New Orleans and Seattle, and walkouts were being threatened in Boston, Cleveland, and dozens of other cities and towns across the country.

"The status quo remains," one union source said after the two sides ended a two-hour bargaining session on Tuesday, their first together since an earlier accord — later rejected by the rank-and-file — was put together on July 21.

Leaders of the two largest unions had threatened to call a nationwide strike last week unless the Postal Service returned to the bargaining table.

In Boston, school opened on schedule today in the 69,000-pupil district, a threatened strike having been averted. But the teachers have voted to strike Sept. 13 if satisfactory progress is not made in current negotiations with the city.

Sources close to the talks said the unions spent Tuesday's session laying down their demand for a bigger wage increase than the 19.5 percent boost — including cost-of-living allowances — contained in the proposed three-year contract rejected by postal workers last month.

The two sides averted a walkout by setting up a procedure giving them 15 days to work out a settlement with the help of a special mediator, Harvard professor James Healy, who would then settle the dispute through binding arbitration if the negotiations fail.

The opening day of school was postponed in Seattle, where teachers voted overwhelmingly on Tuesday to strike. School officials said a decision would be made on a day-to-day basis on when to begin classes for the city's 55,000 students.

The Postal Service, which had refused to renegotiate with the unions until the eve of a scheduled nationwide mail strike, reportedly made no response to the union demands, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified.

A negotiated settlement would have to be resubmitted to union members for their approval. A ruling by arbitration, however, would be final and not require a ratification vote.

Chicago's nine city colleges, which have an enrollment of about 112,000, remained closed by a strike that began Aug. 18, but elementary and high schools were operating. In Rockford, Ill., the state's second-largest district, teachers settled a strike kept 36,000 students away from classes for eight days.

The tentative contract's wage package, which provided for raising a typical worker's annual salary from about $16,000 now to $19,100 by 1981, was branded unsatisfactory by local union leaders and was a key factor in the pact's rejection.

Connally Tells Of Shooting

corded test firings two weeks ago in Dallas in an effort to determine whether a sound on a tape recording made during the assassination could have been a fourth shot.

In Marion, Ind., striking teachers were being called into court in bunches of 40, told to return to work by Thursday morning or be fined $25 and serve a day in jail for each day they continue to strike. Eight Marion strike leaders were jailed earlier.

Some local union leaders have revived calls for illegal wildcat walkouts after the settlement was rejected by members of all three unions — the 299,000-member American Postal Workers Union, the 181,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers and the 36,000-member mailhandlers division of the Laborers International Union.

Results of those tests may be dealt with at next Monday's session.

Teachers in New Orleans, who walked off the job a week ago, remained on strike today in an effort to get an 8 percent-pay increase, twice as much as the city says it is willing to pay.

Two days after Kennedy was killed, Oswald was shot to death by night club owner Jack Ruby in full view of television cameras at the Dallas police station. Ruby was convicted and died in prison of cancer.

Although still a Democrat, Connally subsequently served as Treasury secretary during the administration of Richard Nixon and eventually switched to the Republican Party. He was tried and acquitted on a charge of pocketing $10,000 to influence a milk price decision by Nixon.

He survived that potential scandal to emerge as a possible presidential contender in 1976 and says he will announce soon whether he will seek the GOP nomination in 1980.

Spy Ship Converted For Search Of Sea

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Looking more like a floating construction site than a spy vessel, the former CIA ship Glomar Explorer is being outfitted for a new job that lacks cloak-and-dagger intrigue.

It reportedly costs about $30,000 a day to lease the Glomar.

The new Glomar will sweep the ocean floor in an experiment for an international consortium that wants to mine minerals from the sea. That is similar to the disguise of the old Glomar.

What the mining firm wants to dredge up are manganese nodules — clumps of mineral deposits that have the look and texture of shriveled, overripe avocados. The nodules contain manganese, copper, nickel and cobalt, the metals used in steel production.

Howard Hughes built the ship in 1972 for the CIA's "Project Jennifer" — the code name of an operation that lifted a sunken Soviet submarine from the ocean floor. The Glomar conducted its secret 1974 operations while posing as a mining ship. Estimates of the total cost of the ship construction and CIA project run from $200 million to $550 million.

Scientists estimate that 1.5 trillion tons of these nodules lie beneath the world's oceans. If they can be commercially mined, the United States would be self-sufficient in the four metals by the 1990s. The United States currently imports these metals at a cost of $1.5 billion a year, Welling said.

Ship superintendent James Culp, when quizzed about the Russian sub caper, simply says: "I'm afraid you'll have to ask someone else about that. I'm here to talk about mining."

The Glomar, now owned by the Navy and sub-leased to the mining consortium, was chosen for the test mission because of its deep-sea capabilities.

The Glomar of 1978 is a maze of cables, cranes and winches. It is being rigged for a test run in the Pacific, where an experimental system will sweep 18,000 feet below the surface to see if a mining operation is feasible.

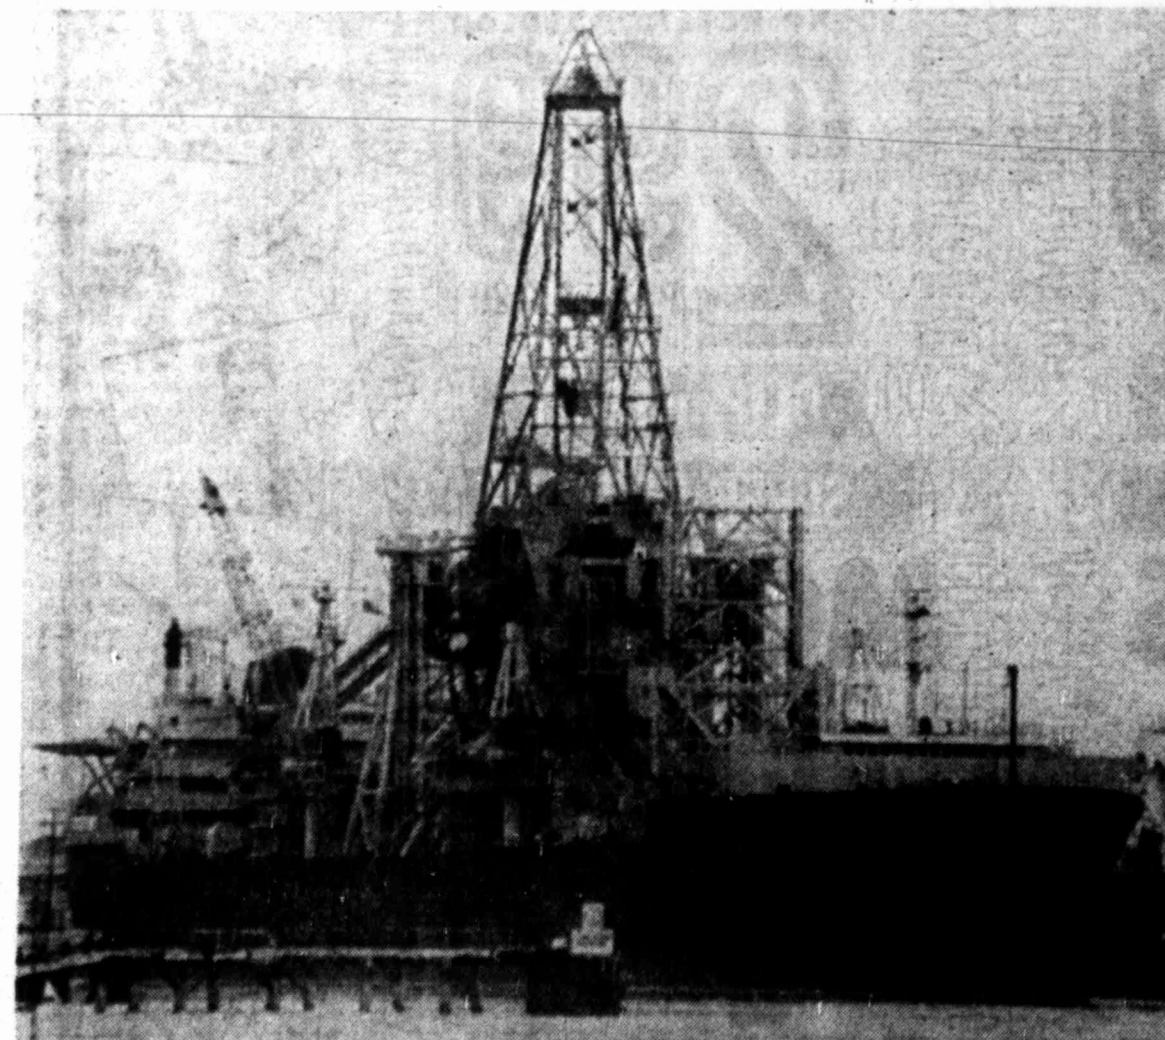

Ocean mining, however, has become something of an international controversy, with the United States on one side and Third World countries on the other. The Group of 77, a Soviet-backed bloc of 119 Third World countries, claimed in a United Nations sea conference last month that the riches of the world's ocean floors are "the common heritage of mankind" and should not be exploited until a comprehensive sea law takes effect.

Ocean Minerals Co. is using the Glomar for a 45-day test trip to start in November. The consortium is composed of Lockheed Missiles Space Co., Amoco Ocean Minerals Co. and two Dutch enterprises.

There is no law, however, that would block ocean mining, and the Carter administration backs a Senate bill that would allow American firms to begin mining after 1980.

If the voyage proves fruitful — and if international complications do not hinder matters — the consortium hopes to have Alexander the Great and his Greek troops entered India in 327 B.C., withdrew in 326 after troops revolted.

RIGGED FOR MINING — The Howard Hughes-CIA spy ship, the Glomar Explorer, is being rigged for ocean mining operations at the Bethlehem Steel shipyard at San Pedro, Calif. ## Handicapped Man Lobbies For Buses

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's state capital abounds with lobbyists, but none so determined as Edward Davenport.

Able to move only a crippled and twisted left hand, Davenport steered his motorized wheelchair 100 miles from his home in Norristown to the Capitol steps here, almost one-third of the way across Pennsylvania.

"The reason? To lobby for special buses in mass transit systems for handicapped people."

"I'm excited, I'm tired, I'm just glad to be here. It's been a long six days," Davenport said after his arrival Tuesday afternoon.

The tortuous trip, sometimes through heavy traffic without an escort, ended with people cheering, applauding and honking horns as Davenport's chair buzzed along Harrisburg's streets and up the Capitol's winding driveway. On the front of the chair was a sign, "Looking For A Bus I Can Ride."

He reached a speaking area in front of the Capitol by driving up a small ramp, hurriedly put in place just before his arrival. There is normally no way for wheelchairs to reach the spot.

A quadriplegic since he had polio at age 5, Davenport said he is lobbying government agencies to move ahead with plans for Transbus, a special vehicle built so handicapped people can get aboard without help.

Both the state and the federal government recently retrograded from commitments to provide the specially equipped buses.

Transbuses, still on the drawing boards, have wider doors and are 10 inches closer to the ground than existing buses. They also have a "kneeling" feature that lets them drop the front end another four inches closer to the ground to accommodate wheelchairs.

Transbuses are expected to cost at least $150,000 each, compared to the $80,000-$90,000 cost of existing buses.

REACHES GOAL — Edward Davenport of Norristown, Pa., relaxes in his motorized wheelchair on the steps of the main capitol building in Harrisburg Tuesday after traveling 110 miles from Norristown to dramatize the need for specially equipped buses for the handicapped. Celebrating in the background are Leah Rutter, facing camera, and Harriet Savitz, two members of Davenport's support team who followed behind him in automobiles during the six day trip, which averaged eight to nine hours on the road each day. ## Lubbock Pizza Parlor Robbed By 'Customer'

A "clean cut" man walked into the Shakey's Pizza Parlor at 4502 50th St., ordered a pizza and then took off with $522.57 from the restaurant's cash register, police were told early this morning.

Bill C. Carter, Shakey's assistant manager, said the suspect entered the parlor shortly before midnight Tuesday and placed his order. He said he went to the back of the kitchen to begin preparing the dinner, and while the register was left unattended, the suspect apparently emptied its money drawer and left.

Carter described the suspect as a "clean cut" black man, in his late teens or early 20s and about medium height. Police were still looking for a suspect early today.

In the city's only reported robbery Tuesday, a 76-year-old man told police a young black man came to his house Tuesday afternoon and said, "If you don't give me your money, I'll kill you."

Allen Demas of 2703-A Weber Drive said the suspect left after he gave him $60. The elderly man described the man as weighing about 160 pounds, medium height, with brown eyes.

Two policemen were slightly injured about 4:25 p.m. Tuesday while attempting to apprehend a mental patient at 50th Street and Avenue H, according to reports.

Police say officers Bobby Westmoreland and Ted Perez were trying to transport the patient to Methodist Hospital's mental ward when a struggle broke out and Westmoreland's gun was knocked out of his holster.

The patient's father reportedly picked up the pistol and placed it away from the scuffle. The man was finally handcuffed and taken to the hospital, police say, but not before Perez suffered a "considerable" loss of hair, a finger injury and scratches.

Westmoreland reportedly sustained cuts on the knees, hands and elbows.

A 27-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 9:20 p.m. Tuesday after he allegedly went to Douglas R. Hilburn's house at 1907 49th St., and began yelling, cursing and waving a gun.

The man fled the residence after officers arrived, but was arrested soon afterwards in the 4900-block of Avenue R. Reports show a loaded, chrome-plated .38 caliber pistol was concealed inside the suspect's pants when he was arrested.

A 25-year-old secretary said she did not tell police until Monday that she was raped Saturday night because she was afraid. However, when the alleged rapist called the woman again about 2 p.m. Monday, she decided to notify authorities, reports show.

The woman said she was jumped by the man about 10:30 p.m. Saturday as she entered her Lubbock apartment. She said she asked her attacker what he was going to do and he answered, "Don't worry, I'm not going to hurt you."

The receptionist said she was then dragged into the bedroom where she put up a struggle and hit the intruder in the back of the head with a glass ash tray.

However, according to reports, she stopped fighting after she became afraid that the man would do her serious harm.

She told police she was raped twice, and after the second assault, the suspect asked if he could have a date with her sometime, and if she could drive him home. After receiving a negative answer to both questions, the man asked for money and was given the victim's purse.

Police were told that the man took $7 from the purse and left, but not before apologizing to the woman for taking the money.

The woman described her attacker as a white man, about 20-22 years of age, about 5-feet-10 and weighing 210 pounds. She said he had dark brown shoulder-length hair, parted in the middle.

A salesman for Hemphill-Wells Department Store at South Plains Mall said a $4,200 diamond bracelet was stolen from the store's display counter or safe between 5 p.m. Thursday and 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Steve A. Bomay told police the "one-of-a-kind" platinum bracelet was laden with diamonds weighing 3.2 carats. Police were still searching for the piece of jewelry early today.

James A. Hare of 5601 16th St. reported $1,000 in guns stolen when his house was burglarized between 7:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Hare said his home was entered by breaking open his locked front door, and the guns were stolen after prying open a gun cabinet, which was also locked. He reported $200 in damage done to his residence and the cabinet.

Kelli Leigh Mullins of 4004-A Belton Ave. said her home was broken into between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tuesday, and $575 in property taken, including a television, stereo and clock radio.

A salesman for Caprock AMC & Jeep Inc., 1907 Texas Ave., told police someone stole a $610 front end axle from a four-wheel-drive vehicle parked in the dealership's lot. The theft apparently occurred between 5 p.m. Friday and 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Doug Pevey told sheriff's deputies he was away from his home, located about a quarter of a mile north of Quirt Avenue and 114th Street, only 30 minutes Tuesday afternoon when someone entered and stole a $535 microwave oven from his kitchen.

Pevey also reported 100 pounds of meat, totaling $150, stolen while he was gone from 3 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Someone is having a laugh at University Hospital's expense.

The hospital reported to Lubbock police Tuesday that a bottle of nitrous oxide, otherwise known as "laughing gas," was taken from a storage area behind the hospital over the weekend.

The blue tank of gas, valued at about $195, apparently was pushed under a chain link fence, according to police reports.

A rash of other thefts and burglaries occurred across the city recently, including the reported loss of a tool box valued at about $3,500.

Joe D. Jordan of 1215 58th Place told police Tuesday someone broke into a workshop in his backyard and took a box filled with tools. The 18-year-old student estimated the total loss at about $3,500.

Byron Hutto of the Ag Feed Bag reported the loss of a $400 sewing machine and $150 in toolboxes from the business warehouse at 1525 E. 25th St. Someone apparently entered the establishment through a sliding door sometime between Sunday and Tuesday, police reports said.

A 73-year-old woman, Francisca Garcia, reported a color television set missing Tuesday morning from her home at 3101 Second St., Apt. A.

The set, valued at about $450, apparently was taken from a bedroom after the thief entered through a window.

A witness told police she saw a dark tan pickup truck leave the residence.

Burglars entered the home of Wanell Dorothy Peel Tuesday morning, making off with about $30 in jewelry, a $300 tape deck, and a .38-caliber revolver that cost about $200, the homeowner told police.

Entry into the home, at 4121 17th St., apparently was made through an unlocked window, according to police reports.

Burglars apparently kicked in the door of Priscilla Young's 2641 Hickory Ave. home Tuesday, and made off with a television set, valued at $177, police reports indicated.

Gas Compromise Key To Energy Program

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejection of a natural gas compromise would scuttle hopes of passing an energy bill this year "or maybe for a long time to come," Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd declared today.

In a heated exchange on the Senate floor, Byrd clashed with opponent Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, over the necessity for the compromise the Carter administration claims is crucial to the success of the president's energy program.

"This bill does nothing," Metzenbaum said, claiming the proposed measure that would lift price controls on newly discovered gas by 1985 would increase gas supplies by less than 4 percent.

And he called it "a piece of legislation without a constituency," noting that both industry and consumer groups opposed it.

But Byrd argued, "While it's not perfect, it's at least the handiwork of thousands of man-hours of work." The compromise took House-Senate negotiators more than eight months to hammer out.

"It's this gas bill or it's nothing this year — or maybe for a long time to come," Byrd said.

The exchange was a prelude to the heated legislative battle expected to come when the Senate takes up the gas-pricing compromise during the next few days.

In an interview today, Metzenbaum said that he and other opponents of the measure want to begin debating it on Thursday — with the decisive vote on a motion to return it to committee to come as early as next Tuesday.

Byrd, however, said he isn't sure yet when the bill will be taken up and some Senate sources said debate probably would not begin until next week.

A large block of undecided senators still appears to be depriving either side from a clear cut majority.

And both camps were working hard to woo these lawmakers, with the administration sending Vice President Walter F. Mondale to the Capitol today to try to drum up support for the bill.

"I think the president has been working harder than we have," Metzenbaum said. "But we're optimistic, although I cannot tell you that I have 51 votes lined up."

However, he said he is ready to bring up the bill and see how many votes fall into place.

The motion to send the bill back to the House-Senate conference committee that drafted it would require a new bill be put in its place — one just giving the president emergency powers to deal with natural gas shortages.

Byrd claims this move would be the same as killing the bill outright.

But, he told senators, "Let's not kill it by parliamentary procedures — that's a copout. If we kill it (on a direct up-or-down vote) then at least the people will know where the fault lies."

Metzenbaum had called Byrd earlier in the week to urge a vote as early as Sept. 13 on the effort to recommit the measure.

Metzenbaum is among a handful of liberal senators who have threatened to filibuster the natural gas bill, which they say would be too expensive for consumers. Although prices for homeowners and other users would rise, supporters say the increases would be comparable to those that would occur anyway under the present system of federal regulation.

The compromise also is opposed by conservative Republicans and oil-state senators, who say it provides insufficient incentives for new production.

Police Link Two Pistols To Slayings Of Texans

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Two pistols found at the base of a tree have been linked to a slain Texas family of three and possibly the massacre of six persons at a steakhouse, police said today.

Police said Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation tests indicated one weapon, a .38-caliber revolver reported stolen from a Purcell, Okla., pawn shop, was used to kill the Melvin Lorenz family near Purcell in late June and the other, a .357 magnum, was stolen from the family pickup.

The weapons are of the same type used in the July 16 slayings of six employees of a Siroin Stockade restaurant in Oklahoma City, police said.

Additional ballistics tests were planned today. Officers said the weapons would be test fired and their projectiles compared with bullets recovered from bodies of the steakhouse victims.

"They have positively linked those weapons to the Lorenz family, and preliminary results have linked them to the Siroin Stockade," said police spokesman Tom Mundy.

A third pistol, a hoisted .22-caliber automatic, also was found. Police said it was not used in either of the mass slayings.

The weapons and some ammunition were found Sunday at the base of a tree in a rural area in far northeast Oklahoma City, police said.

The pistols had been defaced to remove serial numbers and other identifying marks, but laboratory experts used an acid solution to "raise" the numbers, police said.

A resident of the Green Pastures area found the guns and can of ammunition and reported them to police.

Bodies of Air Force Tech. Sgt. Melvin Lorenz, 38, and his wife, Staff Sgt. Linda Lorenz, 31, were found June 22 alongside Interstate 35 south of Purcell. Searchers found the body of their son Richard, 12, in a field the next day.

Investigators said .38-caliber bullets, possibly fired from a .357 magnum, killed the Lorenz family. Friends said Lorenz carried a .357 magnum and a .22-caliber rifle in the pickup in which the family was traveling from their San Antonio home to attend a funeral in North Dakota.

The pickup was found abandoned at an Oklahoma City motel a few days after the slayings.

Police said the six steakhouse employees, including four teenagers, were herded into a food freezer and methodically killed with .38-caliber bullets fired from two weapons.

The killers took $1,200 to $1,500 from a restaurant safe before shooting the employees, authorities said.

Killed in the restaurant robbery were David Lindsey, 17, Terri Holm, 15, Anthony Tew, 17, David Salzman, 16, Louis Zacarias, 43, and Isaac Freeman, 36.

Many States To Have New Governors In Office

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the end of the National Governors association conference last week, chairman William Milliken of Michigan intoned a long list of names, members of the NGA who were attending their last meeting.

There are 24 states that limit governors to two terms, five that forbid governors to seek a second consecutive term. With the governors whose tenures are expiring, plus primary defeats and personal decisions to seek other office or just pack it in, 14 current governors will not be on hand when the association assembles again.

That does not include incumbents who will be retired by the voters in November, so it is entirely possible that 20 or more of 50 NGA members will be freshmen at the next national meeting.

That would be two-thirds of the total and may be another reason that the nation's governors as a group have had problems exercising the political clout that their status and numbers seemingly should provide.

It is the conventional political wisdom that members of the Senate and House have had an advantage in presidential selection because of their access to the national media. That certainly is a factor, but the continuity that a couple of six-year Senate terms provides also helps a politician's image.

For the governors, there also is a problem of consensus. Collectively, they represent the same constituency as the president, but the trick is to get the governors to do something collectively.

It is true that in recent years, the NGA has been able to mobilize an effective governors' bloc to fight for specific legislation such as revenue sharing and welfare reform.

But in addition to the basic liberal-conservative philosophical split of American politics, the governors, as should be expected, remain a bastion of states' rights sentiment.

That means that many of them are suspicious of any federal solution to domestic problems and often makes it difficult for them to unite on any single alternative. When the governors speak on national issues, they frequently seem to be saying no more than "leave us alone."

To some, that seems to be a pity because it has been the states that have provided the United States with some of its most creative government.

However, it may be the dawning realization that good government can be found in the state capitals as well as in Washington that has, after several decades of obscurity, propelled governors into the front ranks of presidential contention.

The problem obviously is whether an executive whose perspectives were formed in state government can apply those ideas and skills successfully to national government. We are testing that proposition now.

Lake Drainage Order Granted

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Citing potential loss of life and property, U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward Tuesday issued an order granting the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service permission to drain Buffalo Lake.

The federal judge said the possibility of a flood disaster at the lake, nine miles northwest of Canyon, outweighed environmental and recreational considerations.

"It should be kept in mind that Tierra Blanca Creek flows eastward from the dam toward the south part of Canyon, Texas, and into the Palo Duro State Park, and any severe flooding of this area which might be caused by the breach of the dam would certainly impose a severe threat to life and to the destruction of property," an opinion accompanying the order stated.

Woodward said evidence had convinced him that "unless the proper steps are taken, loss of life and property could possibly result."

The ruling means that drainage of the lake, which had been halted by a temporary restraining order Aug. 28, can now be resumed.

A group known as the Buffalo Lake Survival Committee had gained the restraining order at an Amarillo hearing last week.

Woodward's Tuesday order dissolved the restraining order and denied the group's bid for a temporary injunction.

Plaintiff attorney Ronald E. Walker, Jr., indicated Tuesday he was disappointed at the decision. "The evidence was clear that the hazard was there whether the lake held water or not," he said.

He said testimony indicated that, in the event of torrential rain, the lake bed would, even if dry, be flooded beyond the capacity of the spillway.

But the Amarillo attorney said there probably will be no appeal, even though he feels an appeal would have merit.

"Unfortunately, it appears we have no remedy," Walker said. "Apparently, we cannot get a bond pending appeal."

Without some sort of stay agreement, Walker indicated, an appeal would be rendered moot because the lake would be drained before the appeal was decided.

Walker said that after learning of the decision he had telephoned a Department of the Interior official to see if a stay agreement pending appeal could be negotiated, but was turned down.

The government decision to drain the lake came in the wake of Memorial Day weekend floods in Randall County, which were blamed for three deaths and $15 million in damage.

Evidence indicated there had been four separate studies of the dam, constructed approximately 40 years ago, and spillway over the past 10 years.

After the May storm, the fish and wildlife service reportedly began draining the lake without filing an impact statement under terms of the National Environmental Policy Act.

Plaintiffs sought an injunction because of the reported failure to file the impact statement.

According to Woodward's opinion, however, the Council on Environmental Quality found an imminent emergency situation, making compliance with the act impractical.

The opinion says that, according to expert testimony, a 3.3-inch rain over the entire watershed for a period of six hours would destroy or wash away the uncontrolled spillway and perhaps weaken the dam so that impounded water would be released below the dam.

Woodward cited government testimony indicating that such a storm could occur once every 25 years, and noted that Texas requires in construction dams with a capability of withstanding floods having a frequency in excess of 100 years.

"Certainly a dam which falls so far below this standard could not be said to be sufficiently safe so as to excuse the government from taking any reasonable steps to alleviate the situation," Woodward's opinion says.

"The United States Fish and Wildlife Service has taken such reasonable steps in this case by draining the water before the emergency occurs."

The order further states: "Under the evidence before this court, the balance must be struck between the preservation of wildlife and recreational facilities on one hand against the possibility, under some circumstances, of the loss of life and the destruction of property on the other."

"In such a situation, the equities favor the defendants."

Miss Texas Poised For Pageant Win

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — There's a lot riding on Sandi Miller to win the Miss America Pageant because, partner, Texas plays for keeps.

Like a Dallas Cowboy primed for the Super Bowl, the 5-foot-10, 130-pound Miss Miller has been molded into a pageant contender by six weeks of rigorous physical and mental training.

"It's a very professional program. It's a business," says Miss Miller, 20, from Mesquite. "If you're going to be Miss Texas, you've got to do it."

Miss Miller has a $13,000 wardrobe, funded by a high-powered state pageant organization which told her not to worry about price tags. It is so big that Miss Miller doesn't know how many evening gowns she brought.

Miss Miller has different advisors for her clothes, hair, makeup, interviews and piano. In the six weeks since she was crowned Miss Texas, a state pageant official has been at her every public appearance to critique her performance.

She even listens to motivational tapes while she sleeps.

"You can't afford to think negative when you're up here," she said. "You can't worry."

The brown-haired, brown-eyed Miss Miller is in prime condition following a six-week program of rigorous exercise and a special high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet built around steak and tuna fish and designed to build up her 36-25-36 figure.

She lifted weights and performed calisthenics for two hours a day, six days a week.

"It was six weeks of pain and torture," she said. "They wanted to build up the muscle and take off the fat."

They did. She is happy that she has added two inches to the circumference of her long legs, which now now "touch where a woman's legs are supposed to" — at the thighs, knees, calves and ankles.

The Texas method apparently pays off. The state has had three Miss Americas, two in the past eight years — Phyllis George in 1971 and Shirley Cothran in 1975. The state is fifth in all-time finishers.

Miss Miller is easy-going and friendly. She is confident she can take home the prize — the $20,000 scholarship and more than $50,000 in personal appearances that go with the Miss America crown.

"I'm a better product because of the program," Miss Miller says. "Why should they send someone who isn't trained? It's a job like everything else."

School Rolls Down 1,000

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Public school officials said Tuesday enrollment still is down by about 1,000 students. They said the resulting reduction in state funds may necessitate paring personnel rolls.

"If our loss is indeed what it appears to be, we will have to look at our pupil-teacher ratio. As we receive teacher resignations during the year, it may be necessary to leave some of those positions unfilled," said Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration of the Lubbock Independent School District.

He commented on the matter after releasing enrollment statistics for Tuesday, the start of the second week of the 1978-79 school year. The report showed the district with 30,422 students, compared with 31,769 at the same time last term.

"We are still 1,347 students below the enrollment we had on the first day of the second week of the previous school year," Leslie said.

In one respect, he added, Tuesday's figure is encouraging. The district entered the new school term — characterized by large-scale court-ordered integration — with 1,517 fewer pupils than last year.

"In other words, we picked up 170 more students during the first week of this school year than we did during the first week of the previous year," Leslie said. He said he hopes the current pace of enrollment increases will continue.

Nevertheless, Leslie noted, "It would be unrealistic for us to think that we can make up" the entire loss of youngsters this year.

"We had anticipated a loss of approximately 300 students based on enrollment trends. What this means is that we are experiencing a loss of about 1,000 additional students," he said.

Overall, this is "not a terribly significant figure," Leslie said. He added that if new students continue to trickle in at a pace faster than last year, the deficit could be reduced even more.

The loss of students hurts financially because state public-education dollars are allocated on the basis of average daily attendance (ADA). Lubbock gets about $800 from state coffers per ADA.

"We are going to receive less money from the state," Leslie said. School officials could not say how much less because, even if the exact enrollment decline could be determined, part of the loss could be offset by good attendance among those students who are enrolled.

A drop of, say, 800 pupils in the Lubbock school system's year-end ADA could mean a loss of about $650,000 from the state.

The fiscal implications of enrollment decline "make it imperative that we continually evaluate our staffing," Leslie said. He said the district will try to maintain approximately the same pupil-teacher ratio that was plugged into the new year's budget.

Since the district will have fewer students than the budget projected, the district may need fewer teachers, Leslie said. However, any such staffing changes will be made only after "careful study," he said.

And if there is to be a reduction in personnel, it will be achieved through attrition. "It's possible that when we receive resignations (this year), some positions can be absorbed" without hiring more teachers, Leslie said.

A 1,000-student enrollment drop would

City Keeps Utility Bill Sales Tax

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock residents will continue paying a one percent sales tax on residential utility bills even though the state will stop collecting its four percent tax Oct. 1.

During the recent special session, the state legislature repealed the four percent state tax on residential gas and electric bills.

That law also automatically repeals the one percent city tax on utilities Oct. 1, 1979, unless the city council votes to continue the tax.

Already 39 Texas cities have decided to follow the state and repeal the tax, while another 46, including Lubbock intend to continue collecting the tax.

City Manager Larry Cunningham said the council approved a budget "which represents what the majority of citizens have asked for" before it was known what action the legislature had taken regarding the sales tax on utilities.

"The city will retain the one-cent sales tax on utilities which most property owners believe to be the fairest form of all taxation," he said.

Cunningham called the state's four percent reduction "an overdue decrease in the surplus of the state government."

"If the city were to drop the one percent sales tax at this time, it would entail again increasing ad valorem taxes or further cutting services to make up for the estimated $600,000 that this would take out of the general fund," he continued.

However, Cunningham did not rule out the city council repealing the tax later.

"How long the city will retain the optional one-cent sales tax depends on what services and growth the city expects from Lubbock," he said.

"Forty-five cities in the state of Texas have voted to retain this fair sales tax and the 39 cities that are dropping it, we are sure, did very little to cut ad valorem taxes."

Were the city to repeal the tax the state comptroller's office would have to be notified this week.

Comptroller Bob Bullock said cities that repeal the tax after that date will have to wait a full calendar quarter before the tax break goes into effect.

A majority of the council would have to approve an ordinance before May 1, 1979, in order to continue collecting the sales tax after Oct. 1, 1979.

Cunningham also said the council was "looking forward to visiting with candidates for state government to urge that the state reimburse cities for these impulsive reductions to local government revenues."

He added the council intended to pursue its request "for another penny of the general sales tax to be returned to the citizens."

Camping Gear Of Amarillo Couple Found

CORTEZ, Colo. (UPI) — The discovery of camping gear belonging to a Texas couple missing nearly a month and believed dead led today to a search for their bodies in southeast Colorado near Dolores, sheriff's officers said.

Sgt. Dean Stevenson of the Montezuma County sheriff's office said gear belonging to James Judge, 26, and his wife, Jeanette Margene, 24, both of Amarillo, was found Tuesday at a picnic site on private land about 18 miles northeast of Cortez.

Stevenson said the items included camping gear, some food and clothing.

"I can't tell you how we traced it, but what we found was positively identified," he said.

The couple have been missing since Aug. 8 when they called relatives from a telephone booth in South Fork, Colo., about 140 miles west of Cortez. The Judges, who were on a honeymoon camping trip, were believed killed by two convicted murderers from the Arizona State Prison and three accomplices.

The fugitives tried to crash a police roadblock in Casa Grande, Ariz., Aug. 11. All the fugitives were captured, except for Gary Tison, 42, who died after fleeing into the Arizona desert, and his son, Donald, 20, who was slain by police.

Handle With Flair.

The "handle" is actually the receiver on a striking phone that resembles a fine piece of modern sculpture. Descriptively named Sculptura, it's available in brown, yellow or white with either rotary dial or Touch-Tone® service.

And it's genuine Bell, which means you're getting top quality and you never have to worry about repairs. Since the working components are owned by the Bell System, we'll fix them anytime there's a problem. Without additional charge.

The Sculptura is on display at your nearest PhoneCenter Store, where you can also choose from a variety of other colorful and attractive styles. And all kinds of customized calling services. If there's not a PhoneCenter Store near you, call your local Southwestern Bell business office. Choose a phone that's genuinely you and genuine Bell.

The Sculptura. $13 a month for five months or a one-time charge of $65. Prices do not include taxes or, if applicable, installation and recurring charges. If necessary, hearing aid adapters are available from your telephone company.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK
Picking a lifetime career is pretty important. It must be a kick in the head when you've completed your education only to discover the supply far exceeds the demand.

It's happening to teachers who are facing a decline in population and journalists who are becoming disciples of Woodward and Bernstein and ending up in the unemployment line.

I read two stories the other day that are really discouraging. One said if crime didn't increase, they didn't know how they were going to take care of the lawbreakers as the jails are running at capacity. The other story said that future priests in the Episcopal Church far exceed the number of available congregations.

Now, if it doesn't pay you to be good — or bad — where do you turn for a job that you can count on?

I don't know about all of you, but I'm directing my sons into a career that never seems to have enough personnel, whose services are always in demand, and who are the darlings of every group where housewives gather: a washer repairman.

As I told my son, "Forget medicine. Forget law. Who gets rewarded for science and research that saves lives? You find out how to take a pair of training pants out of a clogged-up pump, boy, and you can write your own ticket."

"How would you like to turn the corner of a street in your truck and see women rush into the street with flowers and shouts of 'Liberator! Liberator!' I'm telling you a man never stands so tall as when he stoops to replace a timer."

"It's not an easy road, believe me. Women throwing themselves in front of you saying 'Me next! I've been waiting since a week ago last Wednesday!' Wading through dirty clothes up to your waist...working in a space so small the mice are crouching...blazing trails where no other man or woman has ever gone before...behind a woman's washer."

"But you'll never be out of work. Laundry, like leftovers and junk mail, will always be with us."

"But what about that washer repairman on television who says he's the loneliest guy in town?"

"You ninny," I smiled. "When you get to be really big you get an unlisted number!"

The Summer North American Championships held in Toronto at the end of July was the largest bridge tournament ever held. At some sessions, more than 1,000 tables were in play! Two relative newcomers to duplicate bridge reached an aggressive game on this hand from one of the secondary events in Toronto. South might have been content with a mere two-heart response to his partner's takeout double. Similarly, despite his four prime controls, North might have discounted some of his strength and passed three hearts because of his balanced shape.

South was Gary Mugford of Bramalea, Ont., and with a little help from the defenders, he read the cards perfectly to justify his optimistic bidding. West led the king of clubs, won by the ace. Declarer cashed three rounds of diamonds, discarding a club from his hand, then led a heart from dummy to his king.

The heart continuation was taken by the ace, the defenders cashed a club and continued with another club. Declarer ruffed and drew the last trump. His problem was to hold his spade losers to one — no easy task, for West was marked with the ace queen of that suit for his opening bid.

Declarer found a way. He led the jack of spades, and East carelessly covered with the queen. The king won, and declarer continued a low spade from dummy. When East produced the ten, declarer was home. If East was left on lead, he would have to yield a ruff-suff; and if West overtook the ten with the ace, dummy's nine would be high.

Note that West can defeat the contract. He must win the jack of spades with the ace and exit with a spade. Declarer will now be saddled with two losing tricks in that suit.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" ## The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

German cooking isn't all noodles and strudel and other worst stuff! You can cook with a German flair and still avoid a Zeppelin waistline. Here are some Slim Gourmet recipes to try:

MINIROULADEN

4 minute steaks (1/4 lb. each or 1 lb. boneless top round steak, lean, fat-trimmed)
1 tsp. prepared mustard salt and pepper to taste
1/2 tsp. marjoram
1 onion, chopped
2 dill pickles, in thin, lengthwise spears
1 1/2 cups beef broth fat-skimmed (or 10-oz. can)
1 1/2 tbsps. flour

If using round steak, cut into four equal-size servings and pound thin with a meat mallet. Lay the four steaks on a cutting board. Spread lightly with mustard. Season with salt and pepper. Lay the marjoram, onion and pickle spears on top of the meat, then roll the meat around the pickles and secure with toothpicks.

Spray a non-stick skillet, Dutch oven or pressure cooker with cooking spray for no-fat frying. Brown the rouladen over medium heat, turning to brown evenly. Add one cup of the beef broth. Cover and simmer over low heat until tender, about 1 and one-half hours or cook in pressure cooker 30 minutes according to manufacturer's directions.

Remove rouladen to a platter and keep warm. (Remove toothpicks.) Skim fat from pan liquid, if any. Stir remaining quarter-cup beef broth with flour and stir into pan liquid over low heat. Cook and stir until sauce is thick. Spoon over rouladen and serve immediately. Makes four servings, 195 calories each.

Next, try Oven-fried Southern-German-Style Cornish Hens or, as they say in Deutschland:

CORNISH HENS SUDEUTSCHER

1 small Cornish hen, split (or 2 chicken breast halves)
1 lemon
3 tbsps. cracker crumbs, or unseasoned bread crumbs
2 tbsps. Parmesan cheese, grated
1/4 tsp. ground ginger
salt and pepper to taste
Sprinkle poultry with the juice of half the lemon. Combine crumbs, cheese, ginger, salt and pepper in a paper bag. Add poultry; shake until coated. Arrange poultry skin-side up on a shallow roasting pan in a pre-heated 350-degree oven. Bake, without turning, until golden and tender, 45 to 50 minutes. Garnish with thin lemon slices, or serve with lemon wedges (and parsley, if desired). Recipe may be doubled or tripled. Serves two, 295 calories each with Cornish hen, 255 with chicken breasts.

GERMAN SPICED APPLESAUCE — Simmer 4 peeled, cored, diced apples in 4 tablespoons German wine, in a covered saucepan, for 3 or 4 minutes, just until soft. Sprinkle with cinnamon and nutmeg; serve warm or chilled. Recipe may be increased or decreased, proportionately. Serves four, 85 calories each.

Physician Stresses Need For Greater Knowledge Of Diet

The American diet is constantly changing and has been influenced by inflation, economic stress, and the ready availability of a variety of ethnic foods in restaurants and supermarkets.

George Christakis, M.D., made this observation at a medical symposium in Oak Brook, Ill. He stressed the need for re-educating Americans about their diet and said that this will require finding ways to motivate them to develop new behavior patterns. The goal is lower cholesterol levels, weight control, and longer lives, free of coronary artery disease.

He suggested that when diet is judged ineffective after a period of time — perhaps three months — drug therapy needs to be considered.

FIBER CONTENT IMPORTANT

Check the labels of clothing to know the true fiber content.

Many fashionable 100 per cent polyesters look and feel like cotton, wool, silk or linen, says Becky Culp, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Texas A&M University System.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: As a longtime faithful reader, I know that you have frequently appealed to employers to hire the handicapped. And now I see by your column that you object to the practice of using the telephone to solicit business.

Abby, you must surely be aware that a large number of handicapped people are employed as telephone solicitors.

How do you reconcile your attitude toward hiring the handicapped with your objection to the telephone solicitation — which provides so many handicapped people with jobs? (Sign me)

"ONE OF THEM"

Dear One: My best defense is expressed in the following letter from another reader:

DEAR, DEAR, ABBY: May I direct this to your readers who are employed as telephone solicitors: I realize that many of you are shut-ins, and that type of work is ideal for invalids, but please consider my circumstances.

I am also an invalid — confined to bed and wheelchair — and when my phone rings, sometimes just reaching for it is so painful that I let it ring.

I am on medication and pain pills most of the time, and I sleep irregular hours, so you can imagine how I reacted when someone awakened me to offer me a special rate for dancing lessons! So please be a little more understanding if I sound slightly irritated when you call.

LIVING WITH PAIN

DEAR ABBY: I am a man of 62, married 39 years, no children. I have never written to a columnist before, but we had an experience I think should be published.

Saturday our lawn needed mowing and weeding, the garage needed cleaning and I wanted to watch the ball game.

My wife saw four teen-age neighbor boys dawdling aimlessly in front of our house, so she called to them, told them our lawn needed mowing, and asked if they were interested in earning a little money. They almost mobbed her. One grabbed the mower, the other the rake, another the grass shears. The fourth went around the house, found the hose, washed down the garage and driveway, swept out the excess water, coiled the hose neatly and put it back where he found it. Then he started pulling weeds.

There was no arguing or bickering. They rotated all the jobs, and when they were finished, our lawn looked better than it had looked in years.

My point is this: If more people would hire idle teenagers to do odd jobs, and give them a chance to earn a little pocket money, it would add to their confidence and self-esteem. We might even see a sharp decline in juvenile delinquency and vandalism. There are always odd jobs they can do, and it wouldn't cost much.

Just give the kids a chance to prove themselves, and you might be pleasantly surprised.

J.B. IN MILWAUKEE

DEAR J.B.: I'm with you! ("For Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do.")

Zone Ordinance Changes Eyed

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Planning and Zoning Commission at its meeting Thursday will consider several amendments to the city zoning ordinance which would change the permitted zoning for self-service gasoline sales, quick-change oil establishments and quick tune-up businesses.

Commissioners forwarded an amendment to the city council last month which would have allowed convenience store gas sales in a local retail (C-2) zone rather than the current general retail (C-3) zone.

However, the council sent the amendment back to the commission with a request that all self-service gas sales, not just those at convenience stores, be placed in the same zoning.

Also at the 7 p.m. meeting in council chambers, the commission will consider allowing quick-change oil and quick-tune up businesses in C-3 districts rather than in commercial (C-4).

An amendment to the city's subdivision regulations would require alleys to be paved at the developers' expense when single family (R-1) or two family (R-2) zoning is adjacent to property zoned for apartments, commercial or industrial development.

The zone cases before the Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday include the request of W.D. "Dub" Rogers Jr. to change the zoning on property south of Loop 289 and west of University Avenue from C-2 to C-3.

Some opposition is expected to the zone change, which would permit the construction of a 100,000-square-foot family center.

E. Reuel Nash is scheduled to appear before the commission to request a change from apartment-medical (AM) to C-2 zoning south of 23rd Street and east of Quaker Avenue. The change would allow a shopping center to occupy the entire block between 23rd and 24th Streets on the east side of Quaker Avenue. James Gerdeman, representing 3 M&S Enterprises, will request a zone change from multi-family (R-3) to AM specific use to permit the construction of an attorney's office east of University Avenue and north of 46th Street. A similar request on the same property has been denied twice in the past.

Commissioners also will hear a request of Burl W. Masters, representing Harris & Cantrell, for a change in zoning north of 50th Street and east of Chicago Avenue.

Zoning on the property was changed to family apartment (A-1) when a request for C-3 zoning was denied. Now developers want the zoning changed to restricted local retail (C-2A).

Commissioners are scheduled to consider two requests of Billy Meeks, representing Tara Land Company, for zone changes.

One request, for a change from R-1 to R-2 and A-1 south of Loop 289 and east of North Utica Avenue, was continued from the last P&Z meeting. The zone change would permit the construction of quadrangles on the site.

Meeks will also request a change in zoning from R-1 to A-1 to permit the construction of townhouses north of 4th Street and west of Utica Avenue.

Others requesting zone changes include:

— Buddy Barron for a change from R-1 to R-2 south of 62nd Street and east and west of York Drive to permit duplexes.

— R.J. Givens Jr. for a change from A-2 specific use to C-2A north of East 9th Street and west of Quirt Avenue to allow the expansion of an office building into a shopping center.

— John F. Herzer, representing J. Frank Gray, for a change from light manufacturing (M-1) to heavy manufacturing (M-2) north of 50th Street and east of Loop 289. The change would allow a cotton seed oil mill to store cotton seed on vacant farmland at that location.

— John E. Orr, representing Communities Development Corporation, for a change from R-1 to A-1 south of Loop 289 and west of Topeka Avenue.

— Bill Fry for a change from R-1 to south of 79th Street and east of Avenue F.

Survivors Of Rhodesian Crash Tell Of Attack By Guerrillas

URUNGWE, Rhodesia (UPI) — Hans Hansen and his wife covered in a hole and watched black guerrillas come up to their fellow plane crash survivors and massacre them in a gully as they pleaded, "Please don't kill us."

"They didn't see us. If they had we wouldn't have survived," said Hansen, 35, who escaped both the crash of the Air Rhodesia Viscount carrying 56 persons and then the gunfire that killed 10 of the 18 survivors.

"How they didn't see us is one of these miracles."

Guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo said his Zambian-based Patriotic Front forces shot down the four-engine turboprop Sunday after it left Kariba on a flight to Salisbury because it was over a war zone, but denied his troops carried out the shooting on the ground.

Air Rhodesia said there was no evidence yet that the guerrillas downed the plane with a guided missile and denied there were any war zones in Rhodesia.

"It sits in my mind," said Hansen, who emigrated from Denmark nine years ago. "The most horrible action I've ever seen. I simply can't see how humans can do a thing like this."

His Rhodesian wife, Diana, said the terrorists came upon a group of survivors in a gully and at first said "they were friends of the people (and) would not harm them. Then they demanded jewelry."

Those in the gully pleaded, "Please do not kill us."

There was then a burst of automatic fire, she said. "They shot them while we were lying in the hole."

The plane's wreckage was scattered over an area 300 yards long by 50 yards wide on a cotton field in this tribal reserve in northwestern Rhodesia.

Lined up on one edge of the field were the charred remains of 15 bodies.

In Salisbury, Air Marshal M.J. McLaren, Rhodesia's deputy supreme military commander, said a full-scale "seek-and-destroy" manhunt involving regulars and off-duty soldiers who had volunteered had been launched.

"We have every intention of eliminating this gang of blood-thirsty butchers," he said.

Phone Workers Opt Against Strike Vote

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With differences between phone company workers and management resolved in Corpus Christi, members of the Communications Workers of America, local 12203 of Lubbock, decided Tuesday not to take a strike vote.

Sherry Lindsey, president, said the nearly 150 members of the local, representing Lubbock, Plainview, Floydada, Slaton and Lockney, were notified that the South Texas dispute had been cleared up about 2:30 a.m. Saturday.

Mrs. Lindsey stressed, however, that relations between CWA members and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. management remain "extremely strained and will continue that way for some time."

She said local and statewide union membership is "in a turmoil" over the July 26 dismissal of Mrs. Lindsey and Glenn W. Smith, union officials the CWA contends were singled out by management when they were suspended for two weeks without pay.

The suspension, union officials say, came when Mrs. Lindsey and Smith honored an International Brotherhood of Electrical Worker's picket line and other workers followed their example.

Separate grievances have been filed with two division level managers, Mrs. Lindsey said Tuesday, as the employees seek backpay and the removal of "references" from their employee files.

Asked if union members statewide were "shocked" by the recent two-week suspensions handed down in Lubbock, Mrs. Lindsey said "mad" would be more accurate.

The prospect of a strike "can't totally be put out of the picture," she said, although she indicated that no special meetings of union members were planned in the immediate future.

"We'll still have our monthly meetings," she added.

The local CWA membership claim the recent suspensions here were symptomatic of the "one-way policies of Southwestern Bell's vice president and general manager, C. L. Todd."

"It's a signal to us that the two-way street of labor-management understanding and cooperation is in danger of being closed off," the union said in a prepared statement Tuesday.

Differences between workers and management in Corpus Christi stemmed from another problem, Mrs. Lindsey said: "forced overtime."

She said management had suspended workers who had refused to work overtime in Corpus Christi.

Local 12203 of the CWA has about 800 members employed as accountants, telephone operators, installers and directory salesmen.

Registration For Driving Course Begins

Registrations are being taken for a defensive driving course to be given late this month and in early October at Westminster Presbyterian Church at 3321 33rd St.

Dr. and Mrs. A.W. Young will teach the three sections of the course, which has a minimum enrollment of 30 persons per section.

They are taking pre-registrations at 792-4794 and 799-0313.

The course allows participants to receive a 10-percent discount on automobile insurance for 36 months. It is sponsored by the Lubbock Citizens Traffic Commission, the National Retired Teachers Association and the American Association of Retired Persons.

Dr. and Mrs. Young teach the course at no cost for their services.

A $3 fee is charged to cover costs of study materials and the course completion certificate.

Each of the three sections will be taught in four two-hour class sessions.

Classes meet in Room 131 of the church.

Daytime sessions have been set for 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Sept. 26 and Sept. 28 for the first section and the same times Oct. 3 and Oct. 5 for the second section.

Night sessions will be from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Sept. 26, Sept. 28, Oct. 3 and Oct. 5 for the third section.

Interested persons should arrive 30 minutes before the scheduled first session of the section they pre-register for to register and receive study materials. Dr. Young said.

Ice three inches thick will support one man on foot. Seven and a half inches will hold an automobile and one foot of ice will sustain a truck.

Auto Dealers Recruiting Technicians

For the second straight year, the Lubbock New Car and Truck Dealers Association is spearheading efforts to recruit young persons into a program designed to help alleviate the shortage of auto service technicians in West Texas.

The association, according to president Jim Hickman, is working with several national, state and local agencies in promoting the program.

Night classes at South Plains College at Lubbock are being scheduled. Apprentice level employment during the day at local dealerships also would be a feature of the program.

The program, with pay, will require three years to complete. Successful completion qualifies applicants as auto technicians, Hickman said, with associate degrees being awarded.

"It's not going to be too many years before car repairs and maintenance pose a serious problem — not only for dealers — but for every motorist," Hickman said, "unless we give this program our best efforts and successfully recruit young people into it."

Hickman, Frank Brown and David Montgomery compose a committee of association members overseeing the program.

Although enrollment has been open for some time, more trainees are needed to fill classes. Details may be obtained by calling 747-8111 or 747-0576. Registration will be Sept. 14-15 and classes will begin Sept. 18.

Applicants must pay tuition and for a basic set of tools. The program has VA approval. Financing is available, if necessary. Under that plan, trainees would be paid for their work in city dealerships in the apprentice phases and could repay the loans on a withholding basis.

Applicants must be 18 to 30 years old, be a high school graduate (or the equivalent), be physically fit and achieve acceptable scores on aptitude tests administered prior to acceptance.

Savings Firm Seeks Office In Amarillo

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — An application by First Texas Savings Association of Lubbock for a branch office at 3300 IH 40 West in Amarillo has been set for the Savings and Loan Department's Oct. 2 docket call.

If protested, the application will be set for a full hearing, with all parties given an opportunity to present testimony and evidence.

If there is no protest, the application may be referred to Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff without a public hearing.

NEW TRIAL FOR KLANSMAN
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Louisiana Supreme Court has ordered a new trial for David Duke, a Ku Klux Klan leader convicted of inciting a riot and striking a sheriff's deputy. The unanimous decision Tuesday reversed the conviction of both Duke and a follower, James K. Warner, agreeing that the trial judge allowed irrelevant, inflammatory and prejudicial testimony.

Jury Selection Underway In Longoria Suit

LAREDO (AP) — Efforts began today to select a jury to hear the complaint of a member of a powerful northern Mexico family that his four younger brothers bilked him out of $400 million.

Several newsmen, including three members of the Laredo Times staff, were summoned to testify Tuesday concerning the defendants' claim the civil proceedings should be moved to another city because of what they said was excessive pre-trial publicity.

State District Judge Lazaro Garza-Gongora withheld a ruling and ordered jury selection to proceed in his 111th District Court.

Octavio L. Longoria, known internationally as "Tito," brought the suit. He accused his brothers — Shelby, Eduardo, Alfredo and Federico — of walking out with the assets of Empresas Longoria, a multi-million dollar worldwide conglomerate.

A team of attorneys from Laredo, San Antonio and other cities as far away as San Francisco are involved in the case.

The money struggle within the family has reached such proportions that it has been given a popular name — street people are calling it "The Dance of the Millions."

The plaintiff's son, Octaviano, was jailed Aug. 21 at La Loma Federal Prison in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, on charges he committed fraud and forgery. Those charges were filed after an investigation of several years — provoked by his four uncles, who said he bilked them out of $27 million.

The Longorias operate a global string of enterprises ranging from real estate to auto agencies. Their clout is such that they have been given blank certificates of credit from banks, some in the United States.

The civil suit is being tried in Laredo because the four brothers invested a substantial amount in restaurants, gas wells, ranches and a variety of other businesses in and around this South Texas border city.

Junk Food Cravings Worry University

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The craving for junk food that Brigham Young University students seem to have worries school officials.

More than 2 million candy bars, 500,000 snack cakes and 125,000 cans of soda pop were consumed last year by BYU students, who are not allowed to smoke or drink. And while BYU's policy forbids disclosure of financial matters, a student newspaper report placed the total spent by the school's 25,000 students on junk food in excess of $500,000. The school is owned and operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

Hospital Application Vote Scheduled

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission has set an application by University Hospital, Lubbock, to contract for cardio-respiratory services for its Thursday voting session.

The hospital is seeking to contract with Athora Corp. to conduct its cardio-respiratory department with no facility changes, and no capital expenditure for equipment on the part of the hospital.

The request is one of a number of matters set for the session.

Financial Analysts Continue Debate On Recession

By CHET CURRIER
NEW YORK (AP) — The passing of Labor Day, and the arrival of the so-called "Business New Year," finds analysts in the financial community once again debating the chances of a recession.

Australian Urges U.S. Business To Leap Into Chinese Market

By JACK V. FOX
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If someone had suggested a couple of years ago that Standard Oil, the epitome of capitalism, might be welcome in mainland China to help that most Communist of Communist nations develop its vast oil resources, they might have put him in a cage.

A bamboo cage.

Ronald Gale, an Australian who has made half a dozen trade trips to China in the past few years, says that today the idea is far from preposterous.

"That's an extreme example, of course, and not what you might call realistic," Gale said. "But the Chinese, in my opinion, would give it consideration and be willing to have exploratory discussion."

"The fact is there has been an astonishing turnaround in China's policy of isolation and self sufficiency to a desire to enter into trade with the non-Communist world on as large a scale as can be achieved. Their goal is to match the United States in productivity by the turn of the century."

From the point of view of capitalist nations, he said, the overriding and almost ungraspable factor is that it means opening up a new market with 800 million potential customers.

Gale, president of Parker-Kimberly Corp. of Sydney, in October will head a delegation of 20 Australian businessmen and Chamber-of-Commerce types on a visit to a number of Chinese cities to talk about trade.

American businessmen are just beginning to realize the potential, Gale said, and he urges them not to delay — one particular reason being that the Japanese are moving rapidly into what is almost a vacuum.

"At this stage, the Chinese are not thinking so much of consumer goods but of discussion of development of major industrial and capital projects with assistance from the West in expertise, equipment and financial assistance."

"Oil is the biggest and most obvious area. But China also needs assistance in developing its entire energy program, hydro-electric and all types of power. It is determined to develop transportation in a giant country that is almost immobile compared to the West. It needs agricultural equipment and expertise."

"It needs coal, uranium, iron ore for steel. It needs sophisticated electronic equipment. It is ripe for modern packaging and marketing techniques."

Gale, in an interview, said he knew little about Chinese internal politics but had been told repeatedly on the level at which he dealt that there had been a complete change of policy on opening up China since the fall of the so-called "Gang of Four" and the emergence of the new leadership that replaced Mao Tse-Tung and Chou En Lai.

"There are so many misconceptions about China. We tend to think of it as a grey, monolithic Marxist entity. But actually, for example, an average Chinese can go to a bank and borrow money to build a home. He can put his money in a bank and draw interest."

"At this stage, he said, approaches can be made most effectively on a low-level, businessman-to-businessman basis, rather than waiting for top governmental action."

"And you have to go there in person. Not once but two or three or four times until you have their trust and confidence. Then they refer to you as an old friend."

slump, because current evidence doesn't point to deep imbalances developing in the economy. Big imbalances cause big shakeouts."

A suggestion that the economy might be losing momentum came in the government's report last week that the index of leading economic indicators, which is designed to signal the likely future course of business activity, fell 0.7 percent in July.

But few panic buttons were being pushed on the basis of that one number. The rule of thumb is that it takes three consecutive monthly declines in the index to sound any clear warning.

"The leading indicator index has tended to decline by 2 percent to 3 percent within a three-month period before the post-war recessions," Richard B. Hoey of the brokerage firm of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, Inc., pointed out. "This has not yet occurred."

Even should it give a definitive warning signal, many observers are reluctant to put too much credence in the index. Last summer, they note, it dropped for three consecutive months, foreshadowing trouble that never really materialized.

It also has fallen sharply in each of the past two Januarys, depressed by the effects of severe winter weather which were largely dispelled by the time spring came.

As the Conference Board's Miss Collins put it: "Despite almost uninterrupted growth since the last recession ended, the general perception of the economy has included a chronic element of worry."

S. Jay Levy, Chappaqua, N.Y.-based author of an advisory letter called Industry Forecast, observed: "Unease over inflation, unemployment, the dollar's weakness and heavy reliance on imported petroleum are spoiling our country's enjoyment of the rather high degree of prosperity which it will continue to experience."

Book Claims Pensions To Stir Trouble

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The next decade in America will see pension funds move "onto the center stage of American political and economic debate," predict the authors of a newly published book.

In "The North Will Rise Again," Jeremy Rifkin and Randy Barber warn that America's economic instabilities, given the right combination of emergencies, could "touch off open rebellion" that "could easily ignite into militant political action."

"With the emergence of pension-fund capital," they say, "millions of American workers now have the power, through their unions and state and local governments, to claim control over their own economic destiny."

But the pension funds are being used against the very people who contribute to them, the authors say.

"Pension funds are presently undermining the very economic security ... of the older industrial, high-wage, unionized regions of the country."

"While they are accumulating billions of dollars of deferred wages from well-paid, largely unionized workers in the northern corridor of the country, the financial community is distributing this investment capital to the Sunbelt and abroad, where wages, taxes, social services and government regulations are low," they say.

"In city after city along an industrial corridor stretching from Back Bay in Boston to Chicago's lake front, factories are being padlocked and boarded up as company after company takes off for new industrial parks both overseas and in the nation's emerging Sunbelt," the book notes.

The authors claim that in America's 200-year history, "an entire economic epoch has run its course," and "capitalism is not likely to exist anywhere in the world a hundred years from now."

The catalyst for such a dramatic change in the American economic structure, they say, is the realization that pension funds "are now the largest single source of new capital for the American economy."

Rifkin and Barber say pension funds presently amount to $500 billion, "are growing by 10 percent a year," and own between 20 percent and 25 percent of the stock companies on the New York and American exchanges.

But the problem, the authors say, is that non-federal pension funds are turned over for investment purposes to banks and insurance companies who put their own interests before those of the pension-fund contributors.

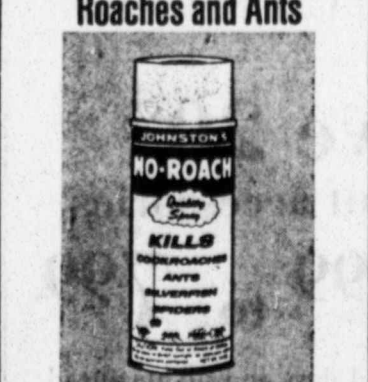

"At the end of 1975, the 100 largest banks controlled over $145 billion in pension funds and the top 10 controlled some $80 billion," they say.

Conservatives Lose Ground In England

LONDON (AP) — Support for Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party is falling, but the opposition's approval rating still is two percentage points ahead of the governing Laborites, an opinion poll indicated today. The Conservative edge was six points at the beginning of July and three points a month ago.

The Market and Opinion Research International poll, compiled for the Conservative Daily Express, said most of the 1,078 people it questioned Monday in 54 of 635 House of Commons districts were eager for an election. Prime Minister James Callaghan is expected to call one next month.

Americans Find Traveling Abroad Expensive

By MURRAY J. BROWN
United Press International Writer
 Travel may broaden the mind, but in these days of the declining dollar and increasing inflation it also can mean flatter purses or wallets for American overseas travelers.

With the possible exception of some trans-Atlantic air fares, they are finding the cost of almost everything has gone up these past months in many European countries and, even more so, in Japan.

That's because, in addition to inflationary factors, the value of the U.S. dollar has deteriorated on the foreign exchange markets. For example, at this writing (in August) the Swiss franc has gained nearly 33 percent against the dollar in the past year, the Japanese yen more than 30 percent and the West German mark about 10 percent.

The American tourist, therefore, is shelling out more money for hotels, food, entertainment, transportation, shopping, sightseeing and even taxes, tips and service charges.

One way to insure against possible further increases in basic expenses is to shop around for an all-inclusive package tour which guarantees a fixed price. Some tour operators already have "re-adjusted" prices in line with the drop in the dollar's buying power. But Olson-Travel-world Organization brochures carry a guarantee that 1978 prices will be maintained and honored. Read the small print in the contract before signing up.

If you are going on your own, there are some simple rules that could help you get full value for your dollar.

Before departure, try to familiarize yourself with the vari-colored, vari-sized foreign currencies and their value vis-a-vis the U.S. dollar. If there are no currency restrictions, buy a packet of foreign money from banks or foreign exchange dealers — there usually is a fee — in the U.S. Most include a conversion table which you can study on the way over.

The packets also will come in handy for tips, taxis and other minor incidentals on arrival at your destination. There are currency exchange counters at most international airports, but not all are always open around-the-clock.

If you are concerned about possible erosion of the dollar during your travels, consider buying traveler's checks in foreign currencies, such as West German marks, Swiss francs and Japanese yen. They are available at many banks and foreign exchange dealers at home or in gateway cities. Some charge a fee, others do not.

Incidentally, in some countries you will receive a higher rate of exchange for traveler's checks than for U.S. dollars while some shops also will offer discounts on purchases made with the checks. Ask the cashier or clerk.

Keep receipts of purchase and a record of the serial numbers of the checks in a safe place as a precaution against theft or loss. Such proof will help speed refunds or replacement of the missing funds. And don't forget to report losses immediately to the local police.

Do not, if possible, exchange dollars or traveler's checks at hotels, restaurants or shops. You will probably receive a lower rate of exchange than at a bank or other authorized money dealer. The day's exchange rate is usually prominently posted. Remember that foreign banking hours can differ from those in the United States, so don't get caught short, particularly on weekends.

Steer clear of black market money changers who offer to buy your dollars for a higher premium than the official rate. You could end up with a pocketful of worthless paper. If you complain to the police, or get caught making a deal, you could be arrested and fined or jailed. Convert only small amounts for daily expenses unless you plan a long stay or major purchases. You lose a little each time you exchange and you might have to convert unused foreign currency for another or for U.S. dollars on departure or return home.

Incidentally, many foreign banks will not accept small coins for conversion so use them for tips, etc., or keep them as souvenirs.

Some countries require visitors to produce all records of conversion transactions to reconvert to U.S. or other currency on departure. There are certain countries which restrict the amount of their currency which can be imported or exported and travelers must declare funds on arrival and departure. Be precise — you could be in trouble if you have more money on departure than on arrival. And there are others that limit the amount of local currency which can be reconverted.

Many veteran travelers also carry a quantity of U.S. dollar bills which can come in handy for tips and departure taxes (where dollars are accepted) rather than having to exchange a $10 or $20 bill.

And last but not least, remember it might look like "funny money," but it is the legal tender of the land and it costs you dollars, so don't spend it carelessly.

A&M Explains Dinner Mixup

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Officials at Texas A&M are trying to explain how a "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?" scenario starring Richard Nixon and former Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski almost reached fruition.

It turns out that both the former president and famous Houston attorney were invited to attend a Sept. 16 dinner at the university to honor retiring Rep. Olin Teague, D-Texas, according to a Dallas newspaper.

Jaworski was asked by the university to be master of ceremonies at the fete, unaware that Nixon had been included on a dinner guest list sent A&M by Teague himself, the Dallas Morning News reported.

An aide to the College Station representative said Teague issued the invitation to Nixon because the two served together in Congress. He said Jaworski's name was not included among the invitees.

However, the university was taking care of that. It said in a flier announcing the dinner. "It is only appropriate that a person of national prominence and stature set the tone as we honor Congressman Teague for his long and distinguished service, and we have just such a person in Mr. Jaworski."

But luckily for Texas A&M, the school was spared the makings of perhaps another Aggie joke by the former president, who turned down the invitation to attend the Salute to Tiger Teague Dinner.

American Loses Bid For Drug Appeal

NUKUALOFA, Tonga (AP) — Supreme Court Judge H.H. Hill rejected an American's appeal of a six-month jail sentence for possessing marijuana, saying Tonga is "reasonably free from this curse ... and I am going to do my utmost to make sure that it does not spread here."

Merle Anders, 32, an American working on the island in the southwest Pacific, was given the jail sentence last month for possessing the drug and fined $150 for growing it.

Anti-Cancer 'Diet' Unhealthy, Doctor Claims

CHICAGO (AP)—The so-called anti-cancer diet promoted by proponents of Laetrile is "as unhealthy for cancer patients ... as it is possible for the mind of man to conceive," says a New York medical authority.

Dr. Victor Herbert of the Veterans Administration Hospital in the Bronx analyzed the diet which is recommended by Laetrile supporters to accompany use of the chemical in the treatment of cancer.

His analysis is published as a letter in the Sept. 8 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Laetrile is a controversial substance which many medical authorities, including the Food and Drug Administration and the American Cancer Society, say has no benefit in the treatment of cancer. It is derived from fruit pits, usually apricots, which yield cyanide, a poison.

Herbert cites studies which have found that Laetrile itself may cause cancer.

The diet recommended to accompany its use bans meat, fish or fowl, dairy products and animal protein. It calls for increased consumption of fruits and vegetables, large doses of vitamins C and E and pancreatic enzymes.

Herbert says the high-bulk, low-calorie diet is just the opposite of what the cancer patient needs.

The physician says Laetrile has been proposed as a cancer remedy since 1845, "but was never found to be of any value against cancer."

Scotland Yard Debunks Train Robbery 'Heroes'

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — The Great Train Robbers, basking in a campaign to turn them into folk heroes, have been rudely characterized by Scotland Yard as bunglers who apparently were unaware police scientists might be able to find fingerprints invisible to their own eyes.

Most of the band of criminals who held up the Glasgow-to-Euston Royal Mail train on Aug. 8, 1963 and got away with some $7 million in cash have served their time and are now awaiting royalties from a book to which they contributed their first-hand experiences.

Ronald Biggs, another of the gang, who escaped from prison and is a fugitive in Brazil, recently made his debut as a pop singer with a punk rock record that was going to be called "Cosh the Driver" until it was pointed out the coshing (bludgeoning) received by the engineer may have contributed to his death.

Police Cmdr. G.T.C. Lambourne, head of Scotland Yard's Fingerprint Division, cut the train robbers down to size in a paper prepared for delivery to the annual meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science in Bath. He scoffed at the excuse they offered to explain their swift identification — particularly that it wasn't their fault their fingerprints were found in the remote farm they hired as a hideout.

"I do not propose to spend time talking at length about The Great Train Robbery," Lambourne said. "Over the years certain sections of the press, radio, television, book publishers and record publishers have done their best to turn the Great Train Robbery into folklore and the perpetrators into folk heroes. It is my honest opinion that, far from being heroes, these men are no different than any other common criminals who accede to the rule of violence for gain."

"As soon as the robbers' hideout was found, three fingerprint experts including myself were dispatched to examine it," he said. "Apart from eating and sleeping we worked continuously for five days covering every part of the farmhouse and outbuildings which housed three vehicles. Every item at the farmhouse was examined including 12 dozen eggs, scores of tins, a bottle of tomato sauce, a canister of salt and, of course, sacks of paper wrappings torn from the bundles of bank notes."

"The robbers would have everyone believe that they were let down by a person who failed to destroy the evidence of their presence at Leatherlade Farm. We found very strong evidence that they themselves had tried to clean the farm using two very large sponges, but they were at a disadvantage; they couldn't see their marks, we could.

"Within days the first fingerprint identification was made. All together nine of the train robbers were identified by marks found at Leatherlade Farm."

Lambourne, whose subject was "Forensic Aspects of Dermatoglyphics," recalled it was almost exactly 76 years ago that a thief named Harry Jackson became the first person to be convicted on fingerprint evidence in Britain. Three years later — in 1905 — Alfred Stratton's thumbprint on the cashbox of an elderly couple made him the first murderer to be convicted on fingerprint testimony.

In 1954 an 83-year-old widow was found dead after a rape attack and one James Robinson became the first person to be convicted on the evidence of a palm print. A year later when Mrs. Elizabeth Correll was found strangled on a golf course, Scotland Yard, as dogged in real life as in fiction, took 9,000 palm prints of local people. Print number 4605 was that of the killer.

Lambourne said that in 1975 with its manpower stretched by an Irish Republic

Army bombing campaign and the nationwide search for a kidnap-killer known as "the Black Panther", Scotland Yard still undertook to examine all the 25 million fingerprints in the National Fingerprint Collection in the search for the man who beat to death a 65-year-old widow.

This required some 300,000 comparisons but Charles Henry Derry, a carnival worker, was identified, tried and convicted.

"I feel it is an indictment of the prevailing liberal attitude among elements of our present day society," Lambourne said. "When I tell you that the fingerprints of over 200,000 new criminals were added to this collection last year and indications are that a similar number, if not more, will be added this year."

Pentagon's Employees 'Overpaid'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon overpays workers by $900 million a year, says a Brookings Institution study. It warns the waste must be cut for America to keep military pace with the Soviet Union "without unnecessarily increasing the financial burden of defense."

"If reform is not undertaken, the nation will continue to spend more than is necessary for defense," said the report, written by a three-man team headed by Martin Binkin, a Brookings senior fellow.

The Pentagon had no immediate comment on the report.

The study criticized the "steady enrichment" of the Pentagon's white-collar civilian employees and what it called overpayment of blue-collar defense workers.

It also contended that about 377,000 jobs now filled by military personnel could be handled by civilians, including private contractor personnel, to save additional money "without jeopardizing national security."

The Brookings Institution is an independent, non-partisan research organization whose studies have been influential in shaping government policies.

About 55 percent of the Carter administration's proposed $126 billion defense budget for next year is designated for personnel costs, mostly pay and upkeep.

The study said the present manpower mix of about 2 million military and 1.1 million civilian employees of the Defense Department is not cost-effective and, if present trends continue, "is likely to become less so."

The authors wrote that many civilian defense employees are "being compensated at unjustifiably high levels."

White-collar civil service employees include clerical workers and professional specialists.

The report also said "quirks in the formula now used to calculate pay increases for federal blue-collar workers have caused the pay of many ... to exceed the levels required to maintain comparability" with similar workers in private industry.

Blue-collar defense jobs range from custodial chores to aircraft mechanics.

The report said the military services keep more bases in operation than they need. "owing to political pressures," but it added that "preoccupation with base closure issues has diverted attention from potentially larger, and politically more feasible, savings that might result from operating bases more efficiently."

Protesters Attack Paper Firm Plant

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Six people were arrested and two injured when a group of demonstrators threw rocks and bottles outside a struck Georgia-Pacific paper plant.

Police Chief Terry Mangan said the two-hour incident Monday began after several dozen people from a Labor Day Georgia-Pacific employees' picnic headed to the plant. Two locals of the Association of Western Pulp and Paper Workers, with about 825 members, struck the mill on July 10.

Drug May Be Effective In Relieving Pain

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Medical School researchers say a treatment that stimulates the body's natural pain-killing powers may relieve chronic pain, a major problem for modern medicine.

Key to the treatment is a drug called d-phenylalanine (DPA), which is an effective stimulant to enkephalins, the body's natural pain-killing chemical.

"This is a completely new mechanism for dealing with pain, but further studies are needed to test its effectiveness," said Dr. Reuben Balagot, head of anesthesiology at the medical school. Balagot is conducting extensive tests with Dr. Seymour Ehrenpreis, chief of pharmacology.

Treatment provided relief to six of nine chronic pain sufferers who experienced low back pain, the effects of whiplash, muscle inflammation, nerve damage and osteoarthritis and were unable to be freed from pain by any other treatment, the researchers said.

Several of the patients continued to be free from pain after treatment was discontinued. Pain returned but was milder for others, Balagot said.

In the experiment, DPA, a synthetic amino acid, was given to the patients in 200-milligram capsules three or four times a day for one to two weeks.

The drug blocks the activity of two enzymes that break down the body's enkephalins.

"DPA completely knocked out the painful headaches from whiplash injuries and eliminated the pain from osteoarthritis but did not have much effect on rheumatoid arthritis pain," Balagot said.

Gas Pricing Becomes New Core Of Energy Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's April 1977 energy program has undergone some major surgery of late at the hands of its framers: it has been given a new centerpiece.

The centerpiece that came with the plan — long identified by administration officials as a tax on crude oil — has apparently given way to a complex natural gas pricing scheme unlike anything contained in Carter's original bill.

You do not hear much talk from the White House these days about the oil tax — apparently a silent acknowledgement of the obituary several prominent senators pronounced over it months ago.

Instead, the gas deregulation "compromise," which will be taken up in the Senate in the next few days, is now receiving the star billing. To Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, it is no less than "the axis on which our image turns abroad."

Jody Powell, the president's press secretary, calls the legislation "the culmination of two years of work."

It's true that Carter did make a campaign pledge in 1976 to work for gas deregulation. But since then, his administration has spent far more time arguing against decontrol than for it.

Just a year ago Carter was hinting that he might veto deregulation legislation then before the Senate — if it ever reached his desk.

About the same time, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a staunch supporter of Carter's energy proposals, issued a statement denouncing deregulation. Part of it read:

"There is absolutely no guarantee that deregulation will produce more supplies what it will produce is economic devastation."

It was not until early 1978 — after failure of repeated attempts by House-Senate negotiators to produce a compromise leaving price controls on natural gas — that the administration signaled its willingness to support gradual price deregulation.

The gas compromise that Carter has now adopted as his own would lift federal price controls from new-found gas by 1985 and allow a steady increase in the regulated price between now and then.

Although the bill contains features designed to cushion consumers against sudden price increases, it still bears little resemblance to Carter's original proposal to place federal price controls on all natural gas flowing in this country.

That plan would have continued existing price controls on gas in interstate pipelines — although at higher-than-present levels — while extending the lids for the first time to the 40 percent of U.S. gas now being produced and used in the same state.

Administration officials argued at the time that such a plan would give gas producers large-enough profits to finance exploration for new supplies of gas — without the runaway price increases they said deregulation would bring.

Well, a lot of natural gas has flowed through the pipeline since then.

Carter's plan, which was backed by consumer groups, passed the House. But the Senate rejected it in favor of a producer-backed bill to lift federal price controls over the next two to five years.

The current compromise is the product of more than eight months of touch-and-go negotiations between the House and Senate to reconcile those wide differences. And even though the president likes it, the compromise is being actively opposed by both consumer and producer groups.

So while the administration still wants a crude oil tax, it is clear the natural gas compromise has — at least for the time being — become the adopted centerpiece of the president's energy plan.

And Carter, who cut short his western vacation last week to mobilize support for the politically shaky plan, claims its failure would "have a devastating effect on our national image, on the value of the dollar, on our trade balance."

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and main opponent of the plan, is more skeptical.

"You can't take a blank piece of paper and write, 'energy policy' on it and fool those international bankers. Why, they're even more sophisticated than we are," he said.

Aged Pilot May Skip Tradition

CONCORDIA, Kan. (UPI) — There's no doubt but what Charlie Blosser can get his 1928 Lincoln-Paige biplane off the ground, but there is some doubt he can get it back down safely, and that is jeopardizing his 50-year birthday tradition.

Blosser will be 83 Thursday and for the past 50 years he has taken up the aging aircraft on his birthday, partly for fun and partly to keep valid his pilot's license. Annual physical examinations have given the thumbs-up to his eyes, heart and reflexes, but the tires on the vintage aircraft have not held up as well as he has.

"I feel good and I know I could do it, but I'm just taking a chance in landing," Blosser said. "I want to (go up) and I haven't definitely made up my mind. I'm getting a lot of static from my family because of the tires."

His wife interjected: "I'm one of them trying to keep him from doing it. I hope he doesn't."

Blosser, a pioneer aviator and Concordia businessman, explained that without good tires it's difficult to put the biplane down safely on grass — and he's forced to use grass landing strips because the biplane has no brakes.

"The year before last and last year, it blew the tires off the rim (when I landed)," Blosser said. "There's a straight bead tire on a clincher rim — the bead hooks in under the rim. But I don't have those tires — got a different kind on there."

"With any side play, it pushes them right off the rim. I've tried all over the United States to get the tires, but they don't make them anymore. Oldtime Fords used to have a clincher rim on them, but this is an odd size. It's an 18-inch by 4-inch tire, and the others just don't fit. I can't change the wheels because all the others have brakes, and there's no room for brakes and tires."

To land, Blosser said he slows the biplane by using the rudder to drag a tail skid through the turf. He uses grass strips beside runways at the Blosser Municipal Airport, named after him when he donated it to the city.

"If you get a little side wind, the tires go — you don't have any control," he said.

Blosser began flying in 1923 after only 2 1/2 hours of instruction, and has flown the Lincoln-Paige almost every birthday since 1928. The open cockpit of the plane forces Blosser to don helmet and goggles like other pioneer fliers.

He reports the Lincoln-Paige — which he said was the last such plane made in Lincoln, Neb., by friends of his named Paige — is still in good condition and sports a "1916 OX-5 engine" used in World War I.

"It flies," Blosser said, "but I just got to get some tires."

CAB Chief Opposes Airline Mergers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board is making it clear that he doesn't favor any airline merger which removes competition from a particular route.

Chairman Alfred E. Kahn said the board might eventually approve some mergers but warns, "We're trying to expand the industry not contract it." The CAB currently has pending before it cases involving the proposed merger of North Central and Southern Airways and the attempted takeover of National by Texas International.

Merger talks have also started between National and Pan Am and between Continental and Western airlines. The airlines are responding to a new CAB policy to increase competition.

Collection System Mutilates Money

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $3 million sophisticated bus fare collection system installed by the Washington-area transit system to prevent theft has one problem — it's making confetti out of some of the dollar bills.

The Keene Transit fare system uses huge fans to suck coins and paper money out of bus fare collection boxes into a sealed vault in less than 30 seconds per bus. The system was installed so that humans wouldn't be involved in transferring the money.

But transit officials say the money mutilation rate is running 27 dollar bills per thousand. To solve the problem, officials have hired workers to tape the dollar bills back together.

Metric System Used On Tires

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of new cars will start appearing in dealer showrooms soon and many of them will sport tires with strange-sounding new designations.

The so-called P-metric tires are the latest step in the American conversion to the metric system. They are being introduced to standardize tire sizes around the world.

The P-metrics first appeared on the 1977 Chevetttes and are expected to be on as many as half of General Motors' products this year.

The tires also are being provided as original equipment on many Chrysler and American Motors vehicles and will be available as options on some Ford products.

A typical metric tire designation would be P225-75R14, which is the equivalent of the HR70-14 or H70-14 in the current designation system.

The Tire Industry Safety Council warns that inches and pounds don't always convert into millimeters and kilograms in round numbers, so metric tires are not always exactly interchangeable with the tires that have been on sale.

But the changeover normally can be made if caution is used. Tire load and inflation tables should be checked as well as conversion charts supplied by tire manufacturers to make sure the new tire will do the job adequately, the council said.

Besides the metric size designation, tire pressure will be shown in metric units — kilopascals. One pound per square inch equals about 6.9 kilopascals. At least for the time being, the government is requiring that both metric and English pressure measurements be shown.

A typical marking would be 28 pounds per square inch (psi) and 190 kilopascals (kpa).

While the new tire designations may seem more complex than the current system, which has been in use for eight years, the metric numbering is simple when broken into its parts.

Using P185-75R13 as an example, the first letter tells you the intended use of the tire. In this case "P" stands for passenger cars. Some may carry a "T" meaning temporary tires, the small spares supplied to save trunk space.

Next is the number 185, which is the measurement of the tire's cross section in millimeters.

This is followed by the number 75, which is the ratio of the height of the tire to its width. The "R" stands for radial tires. Other letters used include "B" for belted tires and "D" for diagonal of bias-ply tires.

Finally the 13 is the size of the rim in inches. This is the only figure which has not been converted to metric because tire rim sizes around the world are in inches.

Pediatrician Finds Pica Treatment

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A pediatrician thinks he knows how to counter the curious condition known as pica in which children feel compelled to eat abnormal items.

Toddlers will put almost anything in their mouths — wood, dirt, magazines, even garbage or dirty diapers, but some children seem to have a craving for bizarre things.

In the past 10 years Dr. Gene H. Grabau said he has treated nearly three dozen pica patients and stopped their cravings in a month or less with simple doses of cobalt chloride, which he was given free by a chemical company.

But despite Grabau's efforts to popularize the use of cobalt to cure pica, the treatment is not well known. He discussed his experience with local officials on the lead poisoning problem here.

Grabau says cobalt chloride has been shown safe in other medicines, so there should be no question about its safety in use against pica. His own experience has shown its effectiveness, he argues, so no more testing should be needed.

But he said the medical community has a tendency to overlook simple solutions shown to be effective, but not subjected to the rigorous testing only an expensive government grant can provide.

"I think it's ridiculous to go to all the expense for funding," Grabau said in an interview during a break from his busy private practice. "The medication I use costs nothing. All it takes is time, and I'm willing to provide that."

The problem is persuading people to accept his method. Grabau said he may have to apply for government money he does not want so the cobalt treatment will win approval.

Grabau said the compound could help stop some of the nation's 80,000 cases of lead poisoning, many of which occur in children who eat wood coated with lead-based paint.

Grabau stumbled onto cobalt's effectiveness in treating pica when he read of sheep in Wales that ate so much of the underpinnings of a barn that it collapsed on them. The abnormal eating habits were cured, the article said, when cobalt was added to their food.

A short time later, Grabau was asked to cure a patient's tendency to gnaw on wood. Grabau prescribed a medicine with cobalt, and the pica soon disappeared.

Grabau said he has cured 34 other cases the same way — two teaspoons a day for two to four weeks — with no failures.

"It's a craving for cobalt. They don't recognize it as such, but when the cobalt level is high enough, the pica stops."

A check of medical literature showed that the cobalt treatment was not a traditional remedy for pica.

"They've been searching for a cure for 300 years," Grabau said. "There were all kinds of studies, but no cure."

Pica often may be merely annoying to the parent of a child who eats wood, dirt or other strange materials. Grabau remembered one girl "who used to pull her hair out and eat it. She had a bald spot the size of a cup on the back of her head."

But when pica leads to lead poisoning, it may also cause brain damage or death. The St. Louis area has ranked among the worst areas in the country in incidents of lead poisoning.

"Children can get lead poisoning from eating wood covered with lead-based paint, from eating slick magazine covers or from pottery mugs with the lacquer off," said Grabau, stressing that cobalt treats only pica, not lead poisoning itself. "Lead is in a lot of things."

Documents Required For Plant Imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Agriculture has issued a reminder that endangered plant species cannot be brought into the United States without documentation from the country of origin.

In recent weeks, the department said, 85 shipments totaling nearly 8,000 plants have arrived in the country without the required documents.

Both commercial and private travelers seeking to bring in plants such as orchids, cacti and cycads will need complete documentation from the foreign government, import permits from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and plant quarantine permits from the Agriculture Department.

Detailed information on importing endangered plant species can be obtained from the Federal Wildlife Permit Office, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C., 20240.

MAINTAINS INNOCENCE — U.S. Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., issues a statement reiterating his innocence at a news conference Tuesday in front of his Wilkes-Barre, Pa., home. Flood's statement came following his indictment by a federal grand jury in Los Angeles charging the 74-year-old congressman with three counts of making false statements to a grand jury and a trial jury there. ## Jury Indicts Flood On Lying Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., under indictment on charges he lied in denying he had received payoffs, says the charges against him are false and are the work of "desperate men under pressure."

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Flood Tuesday on three counts of giving false testimony at the trial of a former aide and before a grand jury.

In a statement, Flood said: "I completely deny all of these assertions and implications as well. For 30 years I have served the people who elected me in the best manner I knew how, and time after time they have demonstrated their confidence by returning me to office for 14 additional terms.

"I have never done anything to destroy that confidence, and, ever mindful of that fact, I am certain that these charges will be proven false, charges made by desperate men under pressure."

The Justice Department said no date had been set for Flood's arraignment.

Flood, 74, has been accused of lying when he testified on Oct. 11, 1977, at the trial of his former aide, Stephen B. Elko, that he did not know that William F. Peters, a former trade school operator, gave $5,000 to Elko.

Elko was convicted of taking $25,000 in bribes to influence Flood in connection with federal funds for a now-defunct chain of trade schools in California. Serving a three-year prison term, Elko is cooperating with federal authorities.

Flood's indictment said the congressman knew of the $5,000 payoff from Peters within a few days after Elko took the money in the spring of 1972.

Flood also was accused of lying when he denied to a federal grand jury on June 2, 1977, that he received $1,000 in the Congressional Hotel in Washington from former lobbyist Deryl Fleming.

The indictment also charged that Flood testified falsely when he told the grand jury he did not receive $5,000 from Peters at the congressman's command post for disaster relief in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., area.

It convicted Flood faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

Investigations involving Flood still are under way by a federal strike force in Washington and before a grand jury in Philadelphia.

Elko has accused Flood of taking more than $100,000 in payoffs. In his role as chairman of the House labor, health, education and welfare subcommittee, Flood exerts influence over the distribution of billions of federal dollars to schools and hospitals.

Last May, Rabbi Leub Pinter of Brooklyn, N.Y., pleaded guilty to paying Flood $5,000 in bribes for help in obtaining federal aid for a multimillion-dollar poverty agency and for a proposed school in Israel. Pinter said he paid Flood $1,000 apiece on five occasions between 1974 and 1976.

The Philadelphia investigation has focused on Flood's role in the award of a lucrative legal contract to the law firm of Rep. Joshua Eilberg, a fellow Pennsylvania Democrat. Eilberg has denied any wrongdoing in connection with the case, which involves construction of a $65 million addition to Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia.

Another longtime Pennsylvania congressman who is no longer in office was indicted by a federal grand jury in Pittsburgh on Tuesday on 13 counts of mail fraud, perjury and income tax evasion.

Former Democratic Rep. Frank M. Clark, 62, was accused of arranging congressional paychecks for two persons who maintained his home in Bessemer, Pa., and also was charged with arranging federal payments for 11 other persons who staffed his re-election headquarters.

He was defeated in a 1974 re-election bid after serving 20 years in Congress.

British Clothing Groups Criticize Carter's Duds

LONDON (AP) — President Carter's clothes are "surprisingly dull," says a critique by two British clothing organizations. They advised Carter to "try to make his clothes as cheerful as his smile."

Politicians the world over got a dressing down today from the Clothing Manufacturers Federation and the Shirt, Collar and Tie Manufacturers' Federation.

Only President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany rated real praise from the tailors, who placed Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa at the bottom of their list.

Vorster, said the report, "displays a complete and utter disregard for clothes — a classic example of how a political leader ought not to look."

Giscard d'Estaing, on the other hand, "has a superb sense of style and knows exactly what suits him. He doesn't put on the first thing that reaches his hand each morning."

And Schmidt is a "good stylist and a complete contrast to the dull and ordinary way many German men dress."

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada "regards clothes as a source of cheerfulness, but is inclined to be a bit too boyishly exuberant at times. Begging for votes does not mean that a would-be premier must be garbed in the outfit of a mendicant," said the report.

President Leonid I. Brezhnev of the Soviet Union "may have abandoned the awful Stalin style, but ought to have learned that a touch of elegance is not a sign of bourgeois decadence."

The report claims most politicians are unaware of the devastating impact a poor appearance has on the public and should appoint wardrobe advisers.

"Someone should tell them that not all the cliches in the world can eradicate the sight of a baggy pair of pants, a cloudy shirt and a wrinkled tie. Politicians are frightened to show a bit of flash, in case electors think they have been up to all kinds of tricks."

The report had this to say about other world leaders:

Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain: "A middle-of-the-road dresser, a cut above most of his cabinet and opposition rivals."

Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda of Japan: "Shows a welcome sign of breaking away from the dark suit, the white shirt and neat sombre tie which used to be regarded in Japan as the symbols of sobriety and stability."

New Law Could Bar Drug Suits Abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five major U.S. drug firms could avoid suits by foreign governments under legislation that's being considered on Capitol Hill. The firms are being sued for millions of dollars in alleged overcharges.

The State and Justice departments are opposing the legislation, which is aimed at overturning a Supreme Court ruling last year. The high court held that a foreign nation has the same rights as a U.S. citizen under this country's antitrust laws.

Supporters of the legislation say it is needed to avoid putting the United States at a disadvantage with nations that fix prices for oil or other commodities, but do not allow suits by the U.S. government. Opponents contend the bill would violate treaties authorizing the U.S. and foreign governments to sue in each other's courts.

Police Think Immigrant Tried To Combine Gangs

By PETER ARNETT
NEW YORK (AP) — Nicky Louie had a smile for everyone, but last week his charm failed. Somebody shot him in the head.

This may help him make a decision he told acquaintances he was wrestling with for some time: retire early or — at age 23 — move further into international gangsterism.

Police in the Chinatowns of New York, Boston, Chicago and Toronto are interested in his decision. But they'll have to wait. The bullet-ridden Louie, with serious wounds in the head and back, lies in a New York City hospital. He is in satisfactory condition but faces several weeks of intensive care.

"I don't trust anyone," he had told a reporter last year, and only his parents have been allowed past the round-the-clock police guard at his door to find out how he feels now.

Nicky Louie's fate is being watched by New York police who have for nearly a decade been attempting to stamp out Chinatown gangs.

Hired as thugs to protect the traditional illegal gambling that flourishes in Chinese communities, the aggressive teenagers soon went into business for themselves and profits grew into the millions.

Famous Chinatown streets such as Mott and Pell became prosperous turf for youth gangs calling themselves such names as the White Eagles and the Flying Dragons. They systematically demanded protection money from businessmen and their own rivalry sometimes erupted in gunfire.

Gangs sprang up in other American and Canadian cities, accompanied by public shootouts and private murders. Police seemed unable to penetrate the traditional Chinese silence toward outside authority, even though some Chinatowns were threatened with bankruptcy.

Police believe that Nicky Louie tried to link it all together. "He tried to be the Joe Colombo of Chinese ancestry," commented one detective, referring to a New York organized crime chieftain with national connections who was gunned down several years ago.

Louie doesn't seem the type. Pale and boyish, he is a dresser so natty that even his jeans are carefully pressed. He would smile disarmingly at reporters who sought to interview him at the Wha Sun coffee shop, his favorite haunt on Mott Street.

Police officers who have arrested him several times over the years — only to release him when witnesses fail to testify — say Louie is above average in intelligence and leadership qualities. But in other ways he is similar to most other youth gang members.

With the Chinese name Lin Poy Luy, he arrived in New York 12 years ago with his immigrant parents from Hong Kong. He left a dilapidated tenement to head a teen-age gang that called itself the Ghost Shadows and roamed one of the poorer neighborhoods of Chinatown.

By 1974, the Ghost Shadows had pushed out competing gangs and moved to the heart of the community.

They had power over the narrow, twisting streets pulsing with restaurants, grocery stores with dressed ducks in the windows, Chinese fruit and vegetable markets and movie theaters with patrons wearing the black costumes of old China.

By 1977, police estimated the Ghost Shadows were taking in more than a million dollars a year in extortion. Chinatown rocked with gunfights as other gangs competed, but Nicky Louie reigned supreme, avoiding at least one assassination attempt.

Then it all fell apart.

Police say one reason was ambition. Nicky's brother, Eddie, led a Toronto chapter of the Ghost Shadows, and the brother attempted to recruit gang members in Boston and Chicago. When these new recruits began arriving here, Nicky's formerly loyal, close-knit lieutenants rebelled because they felt threatened by the outsiders.

Two, nicknamed Mongo and Applehead, early this year formed another Ghost Shadows faction. Other gangs began moving in.

But a bigger reason for Nicky's downfall, police claim, is the success in an international campaign to stamp out Chinese gangs. Following a conference in Toronto last year, intelligence on gang activities is now routinely filed across the country.

A special task force of 20 New York officers was assigned to Chinatown in February, and they claim to have closed every regular gambling game in the community. "There may be a floating crap game or two, but that is all," said Capt. Allan Hoehl, who heads the Chinatown police precinct.

With revenues cut so drastically, gang members became even more unruly. "Nicky was clever up to a point," one detective said. "But he wanted too much and it blew up in his face."

On Monday night, Nicky was playing a friendly game of mah-jongg in the dimly lighted basement of the Gin Beck restaurant on Mott Street. It was supposed to be a safe haven, but a man with a .38 pistol walked through the downstairs kitchen and blasted Louie four times in the head and back.

Louie crawled and ran to the police station around the corner, splattering blood on the pavement. When he regained consciousness two days later, he declined comment on the crime, though police believe he knew his assailant.

"Nicky's already too old for the youth gangs," commented one of the investigating detectives. "I'd say it's time for him to retire."

TURF OF THE CHINESE YOUTH GANGS — Mott Street in New York's Chinatown displayed its usual activity recently. ## Fingerprint Device Interests Bankers

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Chances are you'll be fingerprinted one of these days whether or not you commit a crime.

The use of fingerprints to combat check forging and to confirm identification on many other kinds of documents is bound to grow rapidly, says Oscar Pieper, president of a company which makes a little fingerprinting device.

The device looks like a doorknob and is being used by a score of banks and many other businesses to deter forgers and impersonators.

Called Touchsignature, it has been on the market two years and several other companies are making similar devices.

Unlike the standard fingerprint system, it doesn't use messy printer's ink or leave any residue on your hands. Two inkless colors, yellow and orange, are blended by pressing a finger to each in turn but leave a mark only on paper.

Touchsignature is not a system of submitting fingerprints to be filed. If you are asked to put a thumbprint on a personal check and the check is good you get the print back on your canceled check. But if something's wrong, the print can be compared with police records.

Its big advantage is as a deterrent. No forger or check passer would dare leave a fingerprint on a bad check and once he learns that a particular bank or store uses Touchsignature he will shun that place, Pieper said.

"Since most of the estimated $4 billion a year bad check loss of American business is reaped by professional forgers and passers, Touchsignature could prove a powerful deterrent, he said.

Touchsignature is not intended for routine identification. The banks that use it do require it for opening new accounts and for what are called "officer referral items," any check or other money document on which the teller cannot verify identification satisfactorily by ordinary means.

Drivers licenses are the most common means of identification and the American Bankers Association claims 97 percent of all losses in the opening of new accounts with bad checks and many other bad check losses are accomplished by means of forged driving licenses.

Pieper said Touchsignature and competing devices are being used as deterrents to fraudulent identification on credit cards, cash and credit refund vouchers, employment applications, merchandise pickup orders, narcotic drug prescriptions, safety deposit box entry, gun registrations, customs declarations, hospital admissions, auto rental agreements, air passenger identification and a number of uses when circumstances of doubt arise.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York and various other users in the Midwest and Far West have asked some thousands of shoppers and bank depositors if they objected to inkless fingerprint identification and found fewer than 25 percent have any objections.

Pieper said there is one mistaken idea about fingerprint identification. People think it is entirely a modern science and it is true that its use has only become widespread in Europe and the United States in the past 75 years.

But pieper said convincing evidence now has been found that the Chinese had a fairly good knowledge of fingerprint identification as long ago as 200 B.C. and even the ancient Babylonians appear to have had a rudimentary knowledge of the science.

Women Complete Rowing Venture Early

The women took Skagway by surprise last Friday when they arrived 10 days ahead of schedule. Today they are still taking the town by storm, being paraded and praised for their exploit.

"We surprised everyone," Ginger Cox, 23, said. "No one expected us so soon."

Miss Cox and Miss Davis, 21, left Puget Sound on June 22 and took 72 days to make the trip along the coast of British Columbia and southeastern Alaska.

They rowed 1,089 miles and sailed 62 in a 20-foot-long, 5-foot-wide Norwegian faering boat dubbed "Vandrafalcken" — Norwegian for "wandering falcon." It was custom-made at a cost of $4,000.

The pair were greeted in Skagway by seaplanes and small boats. They celebrated with a swim in 45-degree water before mooring the boat.

"We figured we'd better swim for the last time, and we hadn't had a shower in 10 days," said Miss Davis.

The swim was followed by a champagne celebration, including dinner with the mayor of Skagway and gifts from townspeople. The two are being treated to free room and board at the Skagway Inn.

"They gave us a tremendous welcome," said Miss Cox.

The women plan to take a three-day hike along the 33-mile Chilkoot Mountain Trail used by gold miners 80 years ago. They expect to return to Seattle, by way of Alaska ferry, on Sept. 14.

The pair spent 20 days resting along the way, visiting fishing towns or hiding out from bad weather. They usually rowed 10 to 14 hours a day, making 2 to 4 knots.

Once a seaplane landed and served them coffee and sandwiches. Tour ships frequently announced while passing that the two women in the tiny boat were rowing from Seattle to Alaska.

Miss Cox dreamed up the trip nearly two years ago after the two met at Dartmouth in New Hampshire, where Miss Davis is still a student. Miss Cox graduated in May.

The two said they had only one fight in the 10 weeks.

"We'd do another trip together," said Miss Davis.

Venereal Disease Shows Increase

HOUSTON (AP) — Health officials fighting the war against infectious syphilis, the deadliest venereal disease, have suffered a setback after two years of success.

"Four of the largest cities in the country, including Houston, have experienced increases in syphilis, which is a change from the last two years, where a decrease had been noted," said Jerry Wheeler, a federal public health official on loan to the city Health Department from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.

Wheeler said there has been a 28 percent increase in the number of infectious syphilis cases reported in Houston in the first seven months of 1978 compared with 1977, when there were 754 cases reported.

"The question we have to ask, of course, is 'Why?'" Wheeler said. "The answers for Houston are varied. One reason is the population increase. Houston is growing extremely rapidly, and this is becoming more and more of a problem."

Wheeler said another possible variable was better cooperation from private doctors in reporting cases to health officials, which allows them to trace contacts made by these persons.

"Then we can make sure they receive medical evaluation from a clinic or private physician," he said. "The more cases we know about, the better handle we can have on the problem."

Another variable, Wheeler said, is people today are better informed about the signs and symptoms of venereal disease.

"If a person knows something about venereal disease, and what they should do, we're going to identify more cases," he said.

"But there's a lot of people out there who have syphilis and don't know it, and those are the people we're after," he added.

Wheeler said health officials are trying to find those people by cutting down all possible barriers that might keep a person out of a VD clinic.

"Anybody can walk into one of the three clinics we have in the city and get treated regardless of age, free of charge, day or night," Wheeler said. "We don't have to have parental consent, and any information we get is strictly confidential."

He said the rate of venereal disease in Houston is low compared to other large cities such as San Francisco, Atlanta or Washington, D.C., where the rate was two to three times higher.

"But we are on the increase, right now," he said. "What we're trying to do is look at every component of our program and try to improve on it."

"Our business is not trying to stop people from having sex," Wheeler said. "It's to stop the transmission of disease."

Courts May Ax Taxing System

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, predicts Texas' tax appraisal system — which he tried to change — soon may be overturned by federal courts, leaving the state in chaos.

Peveto, speaking Tuesday to the San Antonio Manufacturers Association, said appraisals and taxes now vary widely from area to area throughout Texas and some local appraisers are not qualified to make sound judgments on property values.

"In fact you don't even have to have an eighth grade education to be a tax appraiser in Texas," he said.

He said eventually the federal courts may declare Texas' method of property taxes unconstitutional, leaving the entire system in "total chaos" unless legislation — such as his — to reform the system is not approved. He said one such federal suit may be won in the next year.

The "Peveto Bill," which was unsuccessful in the recent special legislative session on taxes, would have established one property appraisal system for each county in Texas — rather than have several appraisals by the various taxing bodies — and would enforce uniform appraisal of property statewide.

It also would create one tax equalization board in each county and provide an administrative appeal system for taxpayers, eliminating the need for costly lawsuits by disgruntled taxpayers.

Peveto, who was a house conferee on the property tax amendment to be voted on by Texans in November, said while the amendment would tax agriculture property on its productivity instead of its market value, it also would benefit urban taxpayers because it would eliminate the valuation of intangible property mandated by the last school tax bill. If allowed to stand, the appraisal of intangibles would cost urban school districts millions of dollars in state funding, Peveto said.

Peveto outlined the tax reform amendment for the Manufacturers Association, saying it grants a $5,000 homestead exemption, plus up to $10,000 additional exemption for the elderly and disabled, and freezes assessments for the elderly at their present rates, and sets aside $450 million in state funds to reimburse local school districts for the taxes they would lose by the exemptions.

Peveto said it would be difficult to reduce spending by Texas government.

"Texas taxes are not high. There is a good fiscally conservative government in Texas. There's not a heck of a lot of fat to cut," Peveto said.

Peveto, chairman of the Legislature Council Property Tax Study Committee, said in a question and answer session that Texas ranks 47th among states in taxes levied and that the $7 billion withheld from California taxing entities by Proposition 13 amounted to twice the yearly tax bill in Texas.

The four-term legislator said, however, that Texas "is getting to the point that it is relying too heavily on the property tax."

Social Security Payment Plan Appeal Denied

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas' plan to help state employees by reducing their tax burden through Social Security contributions will be only partially successful, Comptroller Bob Bullock says.

Bullock said the Internal Revenue Service rejected state arguments against taxing Social Security contributions Texas as began making on behalf of state workers Sept. 1.

The 1977 Legislature appropriated $104.6 million to make Social Security contributions equivalent to 5.85 percent of each state worker's pay up to a maximum salary of $16,500.

The contributions are in addition to a $193.5 million, 3.4 percent pay raise that went into effect Sept. 1 for the state's 160,000 employees.

Proponents said by picking up Social Security contributions, the state could put more money into government workers' pockets than by putting the same dollars into regular pay raises.

IRS officials took a dim view of the attempt to circumvent income taxes, however, and ruled the contributions constituted taxable income.

Bullock appealed the ruling and a special legislative session in July rewrote some technical provisions of the arrangement. IRS officials called Bullock's office late Friday to serve notice the appeal was rejected.

Deputy Comptroller Ralph Wayne said the state could choose to challenge the IRS decision in court but now state agencies are being instructed to make deductions from employees paychecks to pay income taxes on the contributions.

"We don't want to put employees in the precarious position of not collecting it and then have them wind up owing more taxes," Wayne said.

Wayne said that there is no way to calculate how much the tax ruling will cost state workers because of differences in income tax rates for different income levels.

A worker making $10,000 a year in a 20 percent income tax bracket will have to pay $117 in federal taxes on the $585 social security contribution the state will make for him or her.

School Enrollment Decreases

translate roughly into a reduction of 40 teaching positions. A problem, Leslie said, is that the enrollment decline may be spread among all grades and all schools, making it difficult to eliminate a teaching post without combining some students into large classes.

The current drop does indeed appear to have occurred at all levels, Leslie said. As of Tuesday, kindergarten enrollment stood at 1,878 students, down 177; elementary enrollment, at 14,024, down 765; and secondary enrollment, at 14,262, down 461. Enrollment in special education programs was at 258, up 56 students.

"What caused these things, we don't know," Leslie said. He said it would be impossible to attribute the loss wholly to the district's new court-ordered integration plan.

Under the plan, most students continue to attend neighborhood schools anyway. The plan calls for busing only about 2,000 elementary children and several hundred secondary students — the vast majority of whom have stayed with the public-school system.

School officials said last fall they expected to lose some students initially to private schools over the integration-busing issue. But the district believes many students eventually will return to the public schools after their families see that the integration plan is working.

Leslie said each public school in the city will be checking on known students who have not reported, to determine why the enrollment drop occurred.

FBI, U.S. Treasury To Probe Bombing

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The FBI and the U.S. Treasury Department have started an investigation at the request of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., into the bombing of a Dayton area trucking firm.

Jeffrey Stone, an aide to the Senate Commerce Subcommittee on Monopolies, which Kennedy chairs, was dispatched here after the bomb blast Tuesday damaged a firm whose owners had been critical of lax enforcement of trucking industry regulations. Herschel Wimmer of Fort Thomas, Ky., an owner, said the blast at the Vandalia offices of Dayton Air Freight Inc. caused $50,000 in damage. There were no injuries.

Group Seeking Van Donations

The president of the local chapter (537) of the American Association of Retired Persons, is asking Lubbockites to contribute toward the purchase of a transport van for the Adult Senior Citizen Center, located at 26th Street and Avenue P.

Mrs. Eunice Stephens says the chapter's about "halfway there" in securing enough money to purchase a van, which would be used solely to transport retired persons to the center.

Many older persons have no transportation whatsoever, she said, and are in dire need of such a van. The conveyance eventually might be outfitted with a hydraulic lift, she said, to aid in boarding.

Mrs. Stephens said tax deductible contributions may be forwarded to Charlie Pope, finance chairman, at the First Federal Savings, 1300 Broadway. Mrs. Stephens also may be reached at 797-2517.

The American Association of Retired Persons has about 12 or 13 million members nationwide, Mrs. Stephens said.

RIVER SUPERINTENDENT

HARRISON, Ark. (AP) — The former superintendent of Padre Island National Seashore in Texas has been named superintendent of the Buffalo National River. John F. "Jack" Turney, 56, will replace Lorraine Mintzmyer, who has been appointed deputy director of the National Park Service's six-state Southwest Region.

Moscow No Vacation Spot For U.S. Businessmen

By NIKKI FINKE
MOSCOW (AP) — An assignment to Moscow for an American businessman means good pay, a restricted limited social life that turns many into workaholics, limited business opportunities and now, because of the Crawford case, the threat of arrest.

They live with other foreigners in segregated apartment houses. The only Russians most of their families come in contact with are the checkout girl at the supermarket, the cleaning woman and the militia guard who stands at attention outside the apartment house.

Once in a while a Soviet bureaucrat comes to dinner. But most officials politely decline invitations and other contact.

The wives complain of loneliness and boredom. For lack of anything else to do, many of the men open their offices at 8 a.m., don't close them until 9 p.m. and work most weekends. Most say they never spent such long hours on the job in Peoria, New York City or Rome.

Despite such long hours, Moscow is not a major market where a businessman can make a name with the head office.

"If you compared our international sales with how much business we do with the Soviets, you'd see the latter is peanuts," said one representative of an American firm.

Pontecorvo Denies Working On Bomb

ROME (AP) — Bruno Pontecorvo, the nuclear physicist who defected to the Soviet Union in 1950, returned today to his native Italy and said he had never worked on a nuclear bomb.

Saying he considered himself a "very peaceful man," Pontecorvo told reporters at the airport: "I'll tell you a secret. I have never worked on the atomic, hydrogen or any other bomb in the West, in Russia or in China."

He said he felt "very moved and very happy" to be back in Italy and hoped to return again in the future.

"The genius returns from the cold," said the magazine Domenica del Corriere in recounting the career of one of Italy's top scientific brains who fled to the Soviet Union after working in the United States, Italy, France, Canada and Britain.

Now a highly decorated Soviet physicist at the age of 65, Pontecorvo arrived by plane from Moscow to speak at a two-day meeting beginning Thursday in honor of Italian scientist Edoardo Amaldi on his 70th birthday. Amaldi and Pontecorvo were research associates more than 40 years ago.

Domenica del Corriere says Pontecorvo is remembered by many as "the one who brought the secret of the H-bomb to the Soviet Union." But this has never been confirmed, and except for a 1955 press conference at which he called for an end to nuclear experiments, nothing is known of Pontecorvo's 28 years in the Soviet Union.

He is visited occasionally by his brother Gillis, the leftist film director whose best-known work is "The Battle of Algiers." But Gillis has never given any indication why his brother left the West.

A doctor of physics at 19, Pontecorvo in the '30s was a member of the nuclear research team assembled by Nobel prizewinner Enrico Fermi. It also included Amaldi and another Nobel laureate, Emilio Segre.

The group disbanded in 1936 because of Fascist anti-Semitism. Pontecorvo, a Jew, went to Paris and in 1940 to the United States, where Fermi and Segre had settled.

After doing research for U.S. oil companies, Pontecorvo moved to Canada in 1943 and became a member of the joint Anglo-Canadian Atomic Research Commission and the Chalk River Atomic project, working with Alan Nunn May in the latter.

Nunn May was convicted of espionage in Canada in 1946. Meanwhile, Pontecorvo moved on to Britain, took up British citizenship and started work in 1949 in the Harwell Atomic Center. Klaus Fuchs, an associate of his there, was convicted of spying in 1950.

After 18 months at Harwell, Pontecorvo resigned to become a professor at the University of Liverpool but never took up the post. In the summer of 1950, he and his Swedish wife, and their three children left on an Italian holiday. He went secretly to the Soviet Union in August, via Stockholm, Helsinki and Leningrad.

Domenica del Corriere said Pontecorvo left Harwell because he was under close surveillance after the arrest of Fuchs and could no longer pass information to the Soviets. But Pontecorvo has never been charged officially with spying nor has he

China To Halt Soviet Treaty

TOKYO (UPI) — Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping said today China will announce the termination of its military treaty with the Soviet Union by next April. Japan's Kyodo News Service reported.

In a dispatch from Peking, Kyodo said Teng would also announce the dissolving of the 1950 Sino-Soviet treaty of friendship, alliance and mutual assistance.

Peking hinted strongly at its intention abandon the treaty when it signed a friendship pact with Japan last month.

Japan signed the treaty Aug. 12 after the Chinese leadership assured the Japanese government that China would discontinue the Sino-Soviet pact, aimed primarily at containing the re-emergence of Japan as a leading Asian military power.

Teng's remarks came 1½ months before he makes an official five-day visit to Japan on Oct. 23, when he will formally exchange instruments of ratification for the Sino-Japanese agreement with Japanese officials.

Opponents Of Park On Hunger Strike

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Former presidential candidate Kim Dae-jung and about 20 other opponents of President Park Chung Hee began a hunger strike today to protest alleged persecution of political prisoners, a spokesman for the group announced.

The spokesman said Kim, 52, who gave Park a close race in 1971 and is now serving a five-year sentence for open opposition to him, was fasting for an indefinite period at the Seoul National University Hospital. He was moved there from prison last December.

The others are fasting at Kim's home in Seoul. The spokesman said the wife of former President Yun Po-sun was among them, and Yun was to join them later in the day.

CONNORS SQUEAKS BY—Jimmy Connors returns ball to Italy's Adriano Panatta in the fourth round of men's single competition Tuesday in the U.S. Open tennis championships in New York. Connors outlasted Italy's premier player to win 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 1-6 and 7-5 and advance to the quarter-final round. Related photos on Page 7, Sec. D. (AP Laserphoto)

Panatta Gives Connors Scare

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors was one game away from being eliminated from the U.S. Open, the tournament he says he likes best of all because "it's my country's championship."

Trailing 5-4 and receiving serve in the fifth set against Italian Adriano Panatta, Connors blasted a forehand winner and did a feisty little dance along the baseline; he scorched a backhand past Panatta and strutted back to the service line; Panatta netted a volley and Connors skipped another jig; Panatta mis-hit a forehand and Connors threw his head back, raised his arms in jubilation and let out a shriek.

Game Connors, 5-5.
Can there be any disputing that Connors desperately wants to win this major championship?

No!
But there is much dispute as to whether Connors wants to win because he loves to win or because he's afraid to lose.

"For Jimmy this is a very important tournament," Panatta said after losing the fourth-round heart-breaker 4-6, 6-4, 6-

1, 1-6, 7-5 Tuesday. "Today he was worried about the match. He's lost a couple of finals and he wants to prove again he's No. 1.

"In Italy we say he does not want to die."

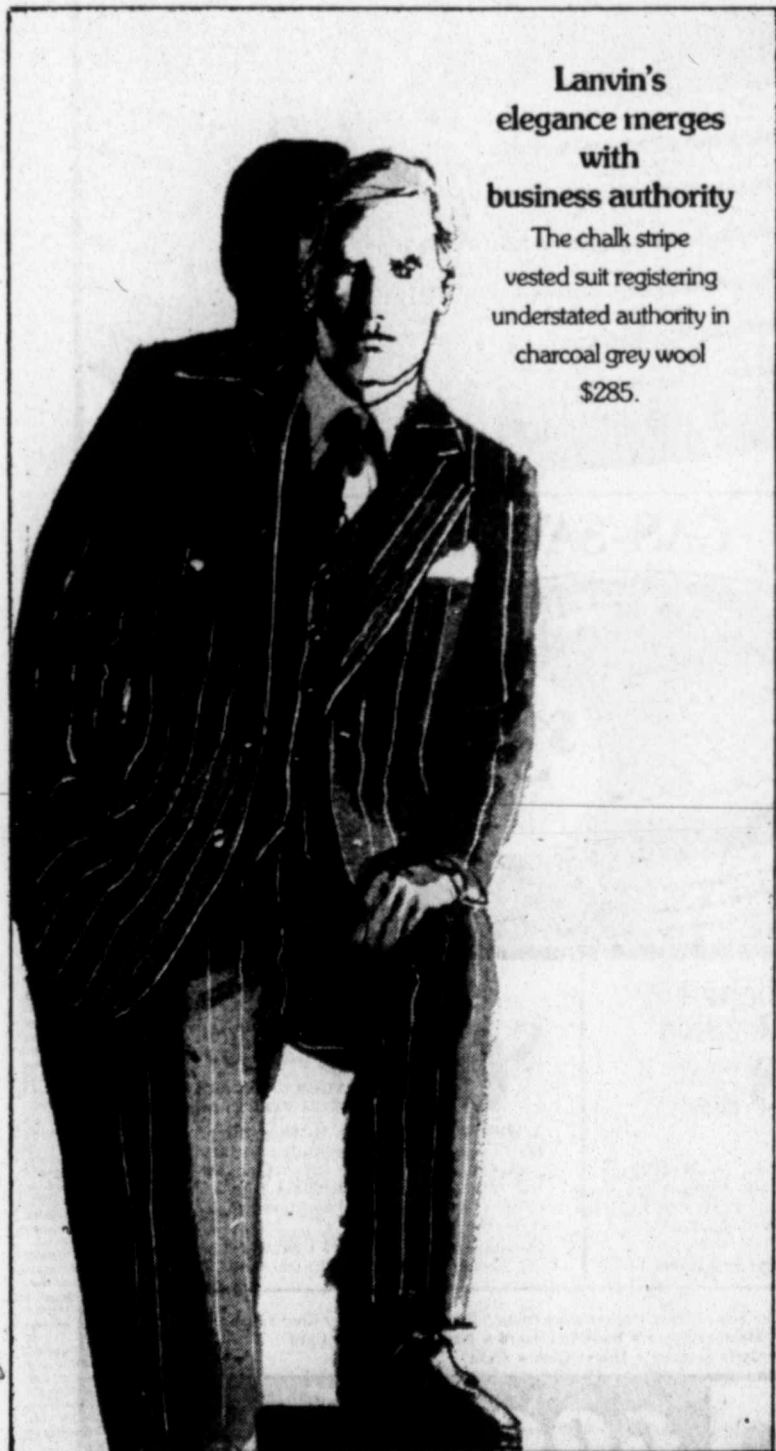

Panatta is among the growing group that thinks Connors has to win because he can't face losing again and providing his skeptics with more ammunition. It is a fact that Connors has won only one major championship since 1974 when he so convincingly won Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

Connors, of course, contends he still is on top of his game and shortly will be back on top of the tennis world.

"I'm not gonna lose, they're gonna have to win it from me," Connors said after the 3½-hour match. "I'm not gonna roll over and give it to them."

Today, Connors' former fiance, Chris Evert, was to take center stage against 15-year-old Tracy Austin in a quarter-final match. In men's quarter-final action, 15th-seeded John McEnroe of New York

Dockery Drills Tech Punters

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor
Over the thump-thump-thump of the football could be heard another sound: "Good-Good-Good."

It wasn't a contest of any sort, just the action and reaction on the end of the Raiders' Tuesday workout.

Head man Rex situated himself so as to watch his young punters practice, both kicking into a south breeze, then turned around and using the wind to their advantage.

Dockery put the stopwatch to the punts as they thumped off the toes of a trio, but he was also putting the clock clicks to the snaps.

"(Maury) Buford has a heck of a leg," Dockery remarked later, after Buford, Eric Jones and Steve Hollifield had completed their day's boots.

"Maury had four seconds or better on all his kicks with the team. You need four seconds or more (for coverage purposes).

"I was timing the snappers, too. They were getting it back in about two seconds. If it's 2.1 or better, you can't block it."

Dockery said that Buford, the freshman from Mount Pleasant, "right now," is the Raiders' punter, with the season opener against Southern California only days away.

Texas Tech will take on the Trojans in Los Angeles Saturday afternoon, and newcomers will handle all the kicking duties outside of snaps and holding for field goals.

Dockery said Ron Reeves, the versatile athlete from Monterey, will kick off. And Ted Watts, a transfer from Sun County (Fla.) JC, will handle kickoff and punt returns. "If he's well," Dockery said Watts had been slowed by an ankle injury.

"Maury has good leg snap." Dockery opined, concerning the freshman that Tech recruited strictly for his punting talents.

The Raiders worked in shorts and shoulder pads Tuesday, in tapering off toward Saturday's opener.

Only player definitely sidelined for the contest is offensive lineman Denny Harris.

Juco transfer George Smitherman was hobbled earlier by an ankle injury but is back at work in the offensive line.

"That's right, all the kickers and returns are new; we're just young, that's all there is to it."

Dockery indicated that the Raiders will have light workouts today and Thursday before flying to Los Angeles Friday.

RRC Schedules First Luncheon

The first of the weekly fall Red Raider Club football luncheons will be held Thursday, according to RRC president Fred Timberlake.

The sessions will be held at noon at Van's Koko Palace, and they are open to all RRC members and their guests.

Tech coach Rex Dockery will be featured speaker each week at the luncheons. Radio personality Bob Nash will again be master of ceremonies.

Timberlake said that the meetings will begin and be conducted so business men and women can be back on their jobs by 1 p.m.

The luncheons will be held weekly throughout football season.

Quarles Finds Strength In Coronado Backfield

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Jack Quarles could be one of those unique types that has been known to pop up every now and then in the coaching ranks.

You see, Quarles is a fella who likes his territory — which happens to be Coronado High School.

"I'll tell you," Quarles said. "This is really a nice place to be. The program here is run by a bunch of professionals who really know how to run an athletic department. It's a pleasure to be here."

Folks around 34th-Street campus might say it's a pleasure for Quarles to be there. Quarles, who took over the Coronado job last spring, has won 10 district championships out of the last 11 seasons, while guiding El Paso Coronado and Fabens.

So what makes a coach with that kind of record pull up stakes?

"We really enjoy Lubbock," said Quarles. "The people are really friendly, and we thought it would be a great place to live."

Also, there are those 18 lettermen and four offensive and defensive starters returning, he said.

"We've potentially got a fine football team here at Coronado," the coach pointed out. "We've got some speed in the backfield, a lot of enthusiasm and some kids who want to become winners."

For years, Coronado has been known as the school with the talent. But when it came playoff time, the Mustangs always found themselves left out.

"I think some of the trouble has been attitude," explained Quarles. "They would start off good and then lose a tight game. Then they would get down on themselves."

"This group isn't going to be like that. But it won't come overnight, you know. First we've got to win some games."

When talking about winning a few, Quarles likes to point to his offensive backfield — the men who will operate out of a 1-slot formation.

"We've got four quarterbacks who can step in right now and play on the AAAA level," said Quarles. "All four are really strong."

Comprising the group are Richard Davis (5-11, 175), Russell Murrell (6-3, 190), John McCormick (6-2, 180) and Donnie Arterburn (6-0, 190). Arterburn is also listed at the starting slot back.

Randy Lusk (6-0, 185) at fullback and Archie Moore (6-0, 170), the tailback, are also listed as starters. However, the two are being pushed by Steve Cox (5-9, 165) and Loy Lackey (6-0, 185).

Moore is a regional qualifier in the 220-yard dash (21.7). Meaning, the Mustangs possess a little speed to go with their size in the backfield.

"If we do a good job of planning," said Quarles, pulling a monkey on his back. "There is no reason why these backs can't move the ball. No reason."

What the offensive backs have in size, the line is a little short of. The men up front for Coronado are also lacking in another important ingredient — experience.

"If there's one thing that might hurt us," said Quarles, "it is the experience and depth in the line. And everyone knows those guys are important."

Starting in the trench are sophomore center Lan Lackey (5-11, 180), and lettermen guards Bob Carr (5-10, 190, 1L) and Dan Jacobs (6-0, 180, 1L), and tackles Ben Pollard (5-11, 175, 1L) and Jim Wells (6-2, 200, sr.).

"They may be small," the coach said. "But they're still the largest group I've ever had."

Heading up the receiving corp — another CHS strong point — are split end Troy Barron (6-3, 160) and tight end Darryl Man (6-2, 180).

Quarles said if the quarterbacks can get the ball to either Barron or Man, then they can catch it.

Talking about the defensive group, Quarles said the secondary is "as strong a group as I've ever seen. They are all just like linebackers who can cover the pass."

Three of the four defensive backs — cornerback Arterburn, free safety McCormick and strong safety Davis — are also Quarles' top signal callers.

"We like to put our smarter players in the defensive backfield," explained Quarles. "It just happened that our quarterbacks are our smarter players who are also extremely aggressive."

Because of defensive alignment, Quarles said, the group — which also includes Eric Santos (5-10, 165), will play a man-to-man coverage primarily.

"I think we can match them up with just about anybody," said Quarles.

Also adding to the defensive cause are ends Derek Smith (6-2, 180) and Dennis Ackles Joe Barnes (5-10, 196) and Mann Pusser 6-4, 195; and linebackers Mark Power (5-9, 170), Randy Lusk (6-0, 185) and Danny Jacobs (6-0, 180).

Quarles also pointed out he planned to play a lot of folks this fall.

"I'm only going to carry 39 on the varsity," said Quarles. "That way everyone will get a chance to play. If you get over that many, chances are, they'll be a lot of kids on the bench who aren't getting to contribute. About all they get to do is dress and eat a chicken fried steak."

Walton, Blazers Remain Silent

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton and the owner of the Portland Trail Blazers, Larry Weinberg, had another meeting Tuesday night, but nobody was talking afterwards.

The two met at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, but neither team officials nor people who had represented Walton in recent weeks knew the status of the talks.

It was the second meeting between the disgruntled National Basketball Association most valuable player and the Blazers' owner.

Last week, Walton's agent Jack Scott said the former UCLA standout was meeting with Weinberg to talk about a possible reconciliation with the team he led to the 1977 NBA title.

Walton met with Weinberg in Chicago Aug. 1 and asked to be traded. Weinberg agreed to try to make a deal, and there was no more contact between the two as Weinberg headed for a vacation in Eastern Europe.

Landry Forgives, Lauds Dorsett

DALLAS (AP)—Someone asked Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry Tuesday if he approved of Tony Dorsett's hand slaps with two teammates before he crossed the goal line Monday night on a 91-yard touchdown journey against the Baltimore Colts.

Landry gave the questioner a fleeting smile then said "Tony probably wishes he hadn't done that. It was a spontaneous thing. Drew Pearson and Tony Hill aren't the type of people who would try to bring discredit to another team."

"Tony (Dorsett) said later he didn't know why he did it. I know I've never seen someone that wide open. There was nobody else around so he was just accepting congratulations from Pearson and Hill. Next time I want him to wait until he gets to the end zone."

Dorsett caught a tipped pass intended for a wide receiver and zig-zagged the distance, leaving three Colt tacklers sprawled on the ground. The play gave Dallas a 14-0 lead which the World Champions eventually stretched to 38-0.

Landry said "That was the best game Dorsett has played for us. He broke two or three times. And he broke and scored with a pass. He has never done that before."

Dorsett became the first Cowboy ever to rush and receive for over 100 yards in each category in a game.

He rushed 15 times for 147 yards and caught three passes for 107 steps.

Dorsett had a mediocre preseason. His longest run was 25 yards.

"Tony showed more ability against the Colts than he did at any time last year," said Landry. "He is showing he can catch the ball and, of course, he is a very unusual runner. He can go through such a small spot. He has such great running ability."

Dorsett said after the game that his preseason pace "didn't bother me. I know with my God-given talents that sooner or later I'm going to do something big."

"I know what it takes to get ready to play football," said Dorsett. "I don't care if we play 100 games a season. I know my body and what I have to do to get in shape. I feel real good. I don't even have any bruises."

Dorsett agreed with Landry that this was the former Heisman Trophy winner's greatest game as a professional.

"I know more what's going on now," said Dorsett. "Last year, I was always thinking instead of doing things by second nature. Now, I know what the hell is going on out there."

Which is all fine and dandy with Landry just as long as Dorsett celebrates after his touchdowns—not during them.

Game Plan Not Faulty, Oilers Say

HOUSTON (AP)—Houston Oilers offensive coordinator Kenn Shipp says the Oilers game plan was not at fault in a 20-14 upset loss to the Atlanta Falcons last week.

The Oilers had intended to run more against the Falcons but quarterback Dan Pastorini ended up throwing 37 times and completing 20. The Oilers also hoped to get the ball to rookie Earl Campbell more but he carried only 16 times for 64 yards.

"Our problem wasn't our game plan," Shipp said. "It wasn't our play selection. Dan (Pastorini) called a good game. We would have liked to run Earl more but there was no opportunity. Not when they put nine men on the line."

"I think they have the best defensive scheme in the league," Shipp said. "It's the kind of stunting and blitzing defense that can keep all the quarterbacks in the league talking to themselves. They beat hell out of the Rams with it last season."

Shipp said the Oilers were forced to throw against Atlanta because "with so many people up close we couldn't run. We just didn't hit all our passes. If the two that were called back had stood, I'm confident we'd have scored both times."

Holding penalties wiped out Pastorini passes of 55 and 23 yards to Ken Burrough at the Falcon two and 12 yards lines.

Campbell scored a touchdown on a 73 yard pass play on his first pro reception and drew praise from Oiler Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips.

"It would be hard to improve on what he did," Phillips said. "He ran hard, he made good moves in the secondary and outran people too. And he did a lot of all on his own."

The Oilers play Kansas City Sunday before returning home Sept. 17 against San Francisco.

Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, still hobbled by a knee injury, may miss the Kansas City game. Safety C.L. Whittington definitely is out because of a severely pulled muscle he received against the Falcons.

Flanker Eddie Foster, who earned a starting position last year as a rookie, starting running Tuesday for the first time since suffering a bruised knee early in training camp.

Eller Returns To Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Minnesota Vikings said Carl Eller would rejoin the team today, following an agreement with General Manager Mike Lynn to suspend Eller's contract talks until after the season.

Eller, who skipped a team luncheon and walked out of practice last week, said, "I just decided it would be more important for me to get back to the team than continue the contract discussions at this time."

Eller met with Lynn Tuesday morning to discuss the disagreement, which reportedly stemmed from money squabbles and "past considerations."

Eller had been placed in the exempt category by the Vikings and was told he could not be placed on the 45-man roster until he reported for practice because Minnesota would have to release a player.

The Vikings did not say who Eller would replace, although the team has eight defensive linemen, including recently acquired Lyman Smith.

The extent of Eller's disagreements with Lynn and the Vikings are hazy, but Lynn said it was simply a matter of finances.

"The only thing Carl wants is to renegotiate his contract, pure and simple," said Lynn. "Nothing else was brought up at our meeting other than the fact he wants to renegotiate his contract. We don't renegotiate contracts."

Four Ex-Raiders Survive In NFL

Four of the five Texas Tech gridgers who were drafted last May by National Football League clubs have defied all the odds, survived the final roster cuts and made their debuts in the opening league games last weekend.

Another Raider draftee, tackle Dan Irons, is undergoing a knee rehabilitation program and will be competing for a place on the San Francisco 49er roster next season.

In addition to these players, quarterback Rodney Allison is playing at Toronto in the Canadian Football League.

As rookies, most of the former Techs are earning their pay the hard way — on the specialty teams often called "suicide squads." But that's the way that all of the hopefuls except the superstars get their chance to advance to a starting assignment.

Runningback Billy Taylor has impressed New York Giant coaches, however, and got to carry the ball twice for 20 yards in the victory over Tampa Bay. The speedster also picked up 22 yards on a punt return.

Defensive tackle Jim Krahl, also drafted by the Giants, has seen limited duty with the specialty teams.

Former Raider linebacker Mike Mock won a place on the New York Jets' squad despite an injury on the first day of training camp which curtailed his playing time in the exhibition season. But Mock impressed coach Walt Michaels as a hitter, even when slowed by a pulled groin muscle, and is listed as a backup outside linebacker.

"Mike probably will be used chiefly with the specialty teams for a while, like most rookies," a Jets spokesman told

The Avalanche-Journal. "But the coaches think he has a lot of potential. Mike's really aggressive."

Eric Felton, the former Lubbock Westerner who starred for Texas Tech the last four years, has earned a spot on the New Orleans Saints' roster at cornerback. Like his former teammates, he faces heavy duty on the kicking teams but is rated as a future contender for starting honors.

It is highly unusual for four players from one college team to win jobs with NFL teams.

GOLDEN RICHARDS

Dallas Plans To Replace Richards

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are expected to bring in another player today to round out their National Football League roster after trading veteran wide receiver Golden Richards to the Chicago Bears.

The Cowboys obtained two undisclosed draft choices in the Tuesday exchange with the Bears. Tex Schramm, Cowboy president-general manager, said however, the draft choices were in the "top five" rounds.

The Cowboys did not say who they would pick to fill Richards' numerical spot on their 45-player roster, although Coach Tom Landry said North Alabama free agent Robert Steele "would be a real possibility." Steele, also a wide receiver, was waived by the Cowboys in preseason.

Richards, a six-year receiver who has occasionally complained that the Cowboys' game plan didn't include calling his number, alternated at wide receiver with Butch Johnson on last year's 12-2 team.

However, Richards and Johnson—who each caught a touchdown pass in Dallas' 27-10 victory over Denver in Super Bowl XII—were beaten out this year by sensational sophomore Tony Hill, who took over the starting receiver post opposite Drew Pearson.

Hill was spectacular in Dallas' 38-0 victory Monday night over the Baltimore Colts, and that apparently assured Richards' trade.

According to Jim Finks, the Bears' general manager, trade talks had been going on between Dallas and Chicago since Richards lost his starting job about 10 days ago. Finks said the Cowboys wanted to wait until after their first game to see how Hill would work out.

Richards' reaction to the trade was "mixed."

"I hate to leave a team like this," he said Tuesday night. "But looking at it the other way, I want to leave. This could be a great opportunity," he said.

Richards said there was a "small doubt" he would report to Chicago but at age 27 felt he had "years left if I want them...and good ones, too."

Chicago's Finks said: "We feel Golden is a premier receiver. He has great quickness a receiver must have to be successful."

Landry said a reason for trading Richards was an aversion to allowing a long-time starter to fester on the bench when he might be improving himself professionally elsewhere.

Richards, who caught one pass for two yards in the Cowboys' 38-0 victory over Baltimore on Monday night, has said he felt the Cowboy offense would be more effective if he got the chance to catch more passes.

Pearson has been quarterback Roger Staubach's favorite receiver for the last several years.

Richards did not catch more than three passes in a game in 1977 and only had 17 receptions for the year as he and Johnson alternated as messengers.

Coronado Spikers Hope To Repeat...

This season, Coronado should be finally at the mercy of the rest of the opponents in the District 4-AAAA title chase.

After breezing to the district title the last two seasons with undefeated records, on paper this should be the year for the other teams to take revenge.

Let's see: Coronado lost 13 seniors. On a 15-woman roster, that alone should be enough to take the fire out of the best of teams.

However, before 4-AAAA teams pencil in a win against Coronado this season, coach Patty Jones has some news.

"We're not going to be in as bad shape as it may seem," said Miss Jones. "In fact, I feel that we have a chance to be real competitive this year."

Miss Jones draws her statement from the fact that she does have some experienced players back and some promising junior varsity players coming up.

"Yes, we had 13 players graduate," said Miss Jones. "But not all of them played. We have players back that have more varsity experience than many of the seniors that graduated."

In particular, Miss Jones points to spikers Lisa Spough and Misty Turner.

"Both Lisa and Misty are strong hitters. In fact, I feel we have a stronger hitting team this year."

Joining Miss Spough and Miss Turner in earning the Coronado coach's praise is spiker Becky Lovett.

"Becky is an excellent complement to Lisa and Misty," said Miss Jones. "She's tall and strong (5-9), but I would have to say the biggest factor against her, is the lack of varsity experience. She was on the junior varsity last year."

Other players from whom Miss Jones is expecting good things are spikers Rhonda Sproles, LaRonda Williams, and setter Jean Crooks.

In the two years that the UIL has recognized volleyball as a major women's sport, Coronado has never lost a district game. Last year, Coronado finished at 4-0 in loop play and was 12-11 overall.

In fact, until last year, Coronado had never lost a game against a Lubbock school. Estacado broke the string.

"I don't know why we have dominated," said Miss Jones. "I guess you would have to say we just have a good tradition."

That may be true, but how did Coronado develop a volleyball tradition faster than the other teams in the city?

"Again, I don't know," said Miss Jones. "For some unknown reason, we have had more interest in the program (volleyball) by our kids than the other schools. I just hope we never lose the reason."

Coronado will not only put on the court relatively new faces this season, but also will play a different style of game.

Miss Jones said that this year's team will be the tallest club she has ever coached.

"To take advantage of our size, we're going to switch from a 4-2 front line to a 6-2 front," said Miss Jones.

Miss Jones admits that there will be a lot of pressure on her kids this season, "because the other 4-AAAA schools seem to prepare a little harder to upset the top team."

If you stop and think about it, Coronado doesn't know what the situation is like for the other 4-AAAA teams, because they have never switched roles.

And frankly, Miss Jones would prefer to keep it that way.

...But LHS Plans To Stand In Way

Although Coronado has dominated girls' volleyball since 1976 when UIL competition began in the city, Lubbock High coach Sharon Morrow believes 1978 is the year that Coronado's stronghold might weaken.

Coronado won the district crown the past two years, last year with a perfect 4-0 loop mark. Monterey finished second at 3-1, while Lubbock High was third with a 2-2 slate.

"Both years it has come down to us and Coronado," the Lubbock High coach stated. "We played them good games and maybe even scared them a little. I really think it could have gone either way last year."

But Lubbock High has two all-district performers, Mary Jones and Linda Morin, returning this year, and they should help scare Coronado again.

"We'll rely heavily on Mary and Linda," Mrs. Morrow said. "Only four seniors have a lot of experience — Mary, Linda, Nora Fira and Shirley Sumner."

Two other seniors, Mickie Chavez and Ernestina Garcia, will contribute to the team effort also.

Add to that number seven junior-varsity graduates, and it equals a bundle of depth.

Sharon Herschberger, Sharon Herschberger, Dorothy Rodriguez, Delma Paez, Nickla Roberts, Carla Copelin and Carol Carrasco are all juniors.

"A couple of sophomores (Melanie Brookes and Ingrid Gibbons) should do us some good before the year is out," Mrs. Morrow added.

This year, the district foes — Lubbock, Coronado, Monterey, Hereford and Plainview — will play a round-robin schedule, a change from last year when the teams played each other only once.

"One of the best changes this year is that Lubbock is having its own tournament (Sept. 22-23 at Coronado)," Mrs. Morrow stated. "All of our JV teams will play in the tournament and they will get some tournament experience that they have never had before."

The JV teams play each opponent on the varsity schedule, with the exception of out-of-town tournaments. Junior varsity matches are scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by varsity matches.

LHS starts its season Thursday in Levelland. First home action will be Monday against Estacado, while district combat begins at home Oct. 16 against Hereford.

Although Mrs. Morrow's varsity squad boasts plenty of players, she is already looking to improve the JV training ground. A shortage of sophomores this year bothers the coach.

"We're to the point now of recruiting out of health and PE classes to find some more sophomores. Coronado and Monterey suit up more people (for one match) than I even see in a whole year," she said.

Mrs. Morrow, who played on the 1961 Dumas state championship team in volleyball, has guided Lubbock High through its first two years of UIL competition.

"Things have gotten better every year — coverage, organization, knowledge of the sport. And we have improved every year. This year should be the best year yet."

Meyer Pegs Seven Sophs To Start

DALLAS (AP) — Coach Ron Meyer says his Southern Methodist football team is going to be a youthful one again this year with seven sophomores expected to start on offense Saturday against the season opener against Texas Christian.

Meyer said that on the second team defense, six of the seven front-liners are freshmen.

One sophomore that Meyer is especially optimistic about is quarterback Mike Ford, who started for SMU in last year's game against Texas Christian.

"Ford was good last year, but he's improved a ton. He just knows the game a lot better and is much more confident," said Meyer, who is in his third year at SMU.

Meyer noted that last year, 29 of the Mustangs' 60-man travel squad were freshmen. "We've got a lot of freshmen who will play this year also," he added. "A lot of them are going to be starting. It's just a matter of when."

ROCKET SHOTS FROM ROD LAVER

Alborn Prepares Owls' Passing Attack

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University football Coach Ray Alborn has vowed to improve the Owls' running attack this season but says they'll have to pass against Iowa State in the season opener Saturday.

"We'd like to run the ball on them but I know we'll have to pass," Alborn said Tuesday. "Iowa State is a solid football team."

Alborn has junked much of the complicated triple pocket combination offense employed last season by Homer Rice when the Owls finished with a 1-10 record.

Alborn will be going into his first game as head coach of the Owls since replacing Rice shortly after spring training.

"We know the honeymoon is over," Alborn said.

Hecklers Upset Spinks' Corner

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heckling and jeering failed to ruffle Leon Spinks Tuesday, but some members of the heavyweight champion's entourage were visibly upset.

"Why don't you all leave him alone," shouted burly Leroy Diggs, chief sparring partner for Spinks.

The heckling came from a crowd of some 300 spectators watching Spinks in his first sparring session since Saturday.

Earlier Tuesday, Muhammad Ali worked before the same crowd, then discussed at length his theories about a black bottle that was in Spinks' corner when he won the title from Ali.

Ali has said repeatedly that he feels the bottle held an illegal stimulant that enabled Spinks to finish strong in their fight last February.

"You know, if I'd won my title with a little black bottle, they'd have thrown me in jail," Ali told the crowd.

Shortly after Spinks began to box his first round with Diggs, the sparring mate scored heavily with a series of quick lefts to the head.

"Better get the little black bottle," shouted a heckler. His jibe was rewarded with prolonged laughter from the crowd, but Spinks ignored it.

Later, Diggs scored again, and again Spinks was jeered. Diggs stepped back and shouted at the crowd to leave the champion alone.

A ring announcer admonished the crowd. "Show a little class," said the announcer. "This man is preparing to defend the heavyweight championship of the world. Class applauds class."

Michael Spinks, brother of the champion, leaned across the ring apron and let it be known he was ready to fight to defend his brother.

After the admonition, the crowd quieted then vigorously applauded at the end of Spinks' sparring session.

Ali, who took a holiday Monday, hit both the heavy and speed bags Tuesday, then went several rounds of shadow boxing.

The crowd cheered and clapped when he sent volleys of punches into his imaginary opponent.

"He's the only cat in the world who could do that and have the crowd love it," said Angelo Dundee, Ali's trainer.

was to play Butch Walts of Phoenix, Ariz. In a night match, No. 3 Vitas Gerulaitis of New York faces Johan Kriek of South Africa.

Miss Evert advanced into the quarter-finals Tuesday by beating Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-1 in the grandstand, while Miss Austin was in the more prestigious Louis Armstrong Stadium ousting Anne Smith of Dallas 6-4, 6-3.

While Connors was being severely tested by Panatta, Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg, the No. 1 seed, had it easy on the cement courts, beating baseline specialist Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md. 6-2, 6-2, 6-0. Steady Brian Gottfried, the No. 6 seed from Florida, parried the rocket serves of fellow American Roscoe Tanner, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1. All the winners advanced into the quarter-finals.

After squaring the fifth set 5-5, Connors hit a net-cord winner to hold his serve, then won the first three points of the 12th game. He had three match points to play with and used them all. The game then went to three deuces before Panatta double-faulted on match point.

Connors again thrust his hands toward the sky and pranced along the baseline. Panatta and Connors embraced at the net. "He only gave me a very long look," said Panatta.

"That's as good a match as I can play," Connors said, following an escorted trip to the locker room to get massage treatments for a muscle cramp in his leg. His escorts included a cop, a personal bodyguard and a practice partner, all of whom endeavored to keep adoring female fans from their conquering hero.

When he emerged from the trainer's room and made his way back to the stadium area for the press interview, he wore sneakers and no socks, his tennis shirt and a towel around his waist.

Those who think Connors has stood still while players like Borg have swept past him contend that Jimmy refuses to adjust his game and adapt to changing conditions and circumstances. In the Panatta match, he threw up more lobs than usual in offsetting the charging Italian—a tactic suggested from the stands by his coach, Pancho Segura.

"He doesn't like to be under pressure. That's why I kept coming in," said Panatta.

Other Tuesday winners who reached the quarter-finals were No. 8 Raul Ramirez of Mexico, who ousted No. 16 Arthur Ashe 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, 7-6, 6-2. Australian women Lesley Hunt and Wendy Turnbull, and Americans Kathy May and Pam Shriver.

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow to moderate. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was moderate.

Growers offered 1978 crop contracts at 1.40 to 1.50 points over 1977 loan rates. A total of 2,000 acres were booked last week.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotation held steady.

Quotations are the approximate prices reported to the Agricultural Marketing Service for qualities equal to the U.S. Official Grade and Staple Standards. Prices are for micronaire (mike) readings of 3.5 through 4.9 in mixed lots, uncompressed, free of all charges in the warehouse in the market.

Tomato Harvest In Full Swing As Migrants Continue March

MARION, Ohio (AP) — Migrant workers marching to Columbus to protest low wages for tomato pickers in northwest Ohio had completed less than half of their 100-mile trek to the capital city by early today.

In the absence of the migrant migrants, who last week slowed the tomato harvest by coaxing other workers to leave the fields, growers said picking was back in full swing.

The column of 140 men, women and children had traveled to just north of Marion by Tuesday night.

They hope to reach Columbus by Friday for a Statehouse rally to bring their plight to the attention of the governor and other state officials, according to Baldemar Velasquez, president of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee.

The workers are demanding a dime increase to 35 cents for picking a 30-pound hamper of tomatoes, a 60-cent hike in the hourly minimum wage to $3.25 and representation in contract talks between growers and canneries.

Just how successful the strike effort was depends on whether a striker or a farmer is asked.

Velasquez said the tomato harvest was stunted in one tenth of Ohio's 20,500 acres of tomatoes, primarily in Henry and Putnam counties.

Some farmers agree the harvesting was hurt, but say most tomatoes will be picked because the peak harvest period just began this week.

"Everybody is busy picking tomatoes," said Lewis Klass of Leipsic. "In fact, things are going so great that Libby is going to be on limitation, where each grower can bring in only so many tomatoes a day."

Klass referred to the Libby, McNeil & Libby Inc. cannery in Leipsic, which picketing strikers closed down on Aug. 26, the second day of their job action. Forty persons were charged with criminal trespassing and disorderly conduct.

and are free on $100 bond each pending a Sept. 12 trial.

Farmers say canneries normally place them on "limitation" during the tomato picking season, although the migrant

Doctors Fail To Report Child Sex Abuse Cases

CHICAGO (AP) — Fifty-eight percent of all doctors who responded to a recent questionnaire said they did not report cases of child sexual abuse, even though they are required to do so by law.

Reasons given by the physicians were that they thought reporting the abuse might harm the family, that the problem could be handled more easily privately, or that they were dissatisfied with the manner in which state social service agencies handle the cases.

The study, reported in the Sept. 8 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said, "Child sexual abuse is a more frequent and severe problem than presumed."

The researchers, Fred Stauss and Drs. Jennifer James and William Womack of the University of Washington's Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences in Seattle, said that "sexual abuse of children is a growing concern nationally."

They cited studies in a number of communities that show the number of reported cases has been growing dramatically.

Their study found 102 cases of sexual abuse, most often involving intercourse or molestation by the father or stepfather with a daughter. There were 57 such cases.

There were also cases involving sexual abuse by another relative, acquaintance, such as a babysitter, or stranger.

There were no reported cases of sexual abuse of boys by either male or female adults.

The research team sent a questionnaire to 300 general practitioners and pediatricians in the Seattle area. They received replies from 96, of whom 51 reported seeing at least one identifiable sexually abused child annually. They reported seeing an average of two and as many as five cases within the last year.

In addition, each of them saw at least one case and as many as seven that were thought to have involved sexual abuse but which were not reported to the physician as such.

The trauma from the experience was considered to be minor in only 7 percent of the cases reported. The others ranged from possibly serious to very serious.

Sixty-two percent of the children were referred to a counseling program; 17 percent were referred to a state agency and 21 percent were counseled in the physician's office.

The researchers said that "even though the trauma of the victimized child tended to be serious, only 32 percent of the physicians indicated that they urged the family to report the incident."

Less than half — 42 percent — responded that they would report any child abuse case involving sexual activity.

Firm Reveals New Computer

TOKYO (AP) — Hitachi Ltd. announced Tuesday it will start marketing the world's biggest and fastest general-purpose computers later this year.

The "M-200h" computers developed by Hitachi over the last five years are capable of processing information at a speed of 78 nano seconds, 1.6 to 1.7 times faster than IBM's "3033" computers, a Hitachi spokesman said.

One nano second means one billionth of a second, he said.
The newest Hitachi computers' capacity also is bigger than IBM counterparts, the spokesman added.

The computers will rent for $164,000 a month, which the spokesman said was below IBM's price.

The computer development program has been subsidized by the Japanese government, the spokesman said, but added that he did not know how much money the government and Hitachi had spent on the M-200h computers.

Guaranteed Loans Aid Small Businesses

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — The Horatio Alger success isn't dead in America yet, says Peter Frank, a Los Angeles consultant to small businesses.

But, he says, today's Alger-type hero has Uncle Sam for a miraculous benefactor instead of a rich old lady he has saved from being run over by a streetcar or the befriended tramp who turns out to be an eccentric millionaire.

Frank said government-guaranteed long-term loans for small businesses can be obtained readily, given the proper expertise.

Frank supplies the expertise. He packages the loans, finds a lending bank, gets the 90 percent government guarantee, then arranges the sale of the guaranteed portion of the loan to institutional investors so the bank gets its money back to lend to another small business venture.

"This sounds like a most useful service considering that the market for equity securities of small businesses dried up almost completely after the abuses of the 1960s in Wall Street."

Why should the government pledge taxpayers' money to guarantee loans for private businesses? And if the government does so, what incentive remains for bankers ever to lend money to small businesses without a government guarantee?

"The justification is that the country desperately needs small enterprises," Frank said, "plus the fact that these loans have remarkably low default rates. I've been putting them together for eight years and my loans have virtually a zero default rate."

Banks, he said, still are willing and eager to make loans to good small businesses without a government guarantee if the borrower can pay back on a short or medium term basis but many small businesses need loans running 15 to 30 years that can take the place of extra equity capital.

The government guarantees for this long-term financing are provided mainly by the widely-known Small Business Administration and the newer and less-known Farm Home Administration. Despite its name, FmHA is not limited to making loans on farm homes but can lend for many types of retail, manufacturing and wholesale businesses in communities of 50,000 or fewer inhabitants. Loans can be made to existing businesses for expansion or refinancing or to new enterprises.

Frank said FmHA will guarantee $1 billion in loans this year.

Frank's firm, PFO Financial Corp., has offices in Los Angeles, Dallas, Detroit, Atlanta and Boston. It claims to be the largest packager of small business loans in the country.

Frank said many bankers still have serious misconceptions about government-guaranteed small loans, both as to their purpose and the rules for issuing them.

Insurance By Mail More Expensive

By LARGENT PARKS JR.

QUESTION — What can I do to reduce the cost of my car insurance? I'm beginning to wonder if I can afford to continue driving.

ANSWER — Maybe you would be better off to get rid of your wheels. You could use cabs or public transportation for getting around town and rental cars for vacations and other out-of-town trips.

Insurance Adviser — First add up all your auto-related costs, including insurance, parking, repairs and fuel. Don't overlook depreciation, which is a very real cost.

If you usually keep a car five years (that's the normal life of most automobiles), you can figure depreciation by taking the initial cost of the car and dividing by five. If you ordinarily keep your car three years, take the original cost, deduct what the car is expected to be worth after three years and divide the remainder by three to get the annual depreciation.

Depreciation on an average car runs between $1,200 and $2,400 a year. After you have all your car cost totaled, divide by 12 to get the monthly overhead. The figure may shock you; it costs a lot of money to own and operate an automobile.

If you decide to keep your car, see the answers to the following question for some ways of saving on the insurance.

QUESTION — I bought my car insurance from a company that sells by mail. I figured I was saving money because the company did not have to pay commissions to an agent. After comparing my premiums with the amounts some of my friends pay, I am wondering if I really got a better deal.

ANSWER — After doing a bit of comparative shopping, I have come to the conclusion that you can get the best deals by working with a well-qualified agent.

A direct writer who sells only by mail quoted a cost of $270 a year, while an agent offered identical coverage for only $240.

Besides, I like dealing with an agent. Should I have a claim, he will give a lot of valuable assistance. It is much easier to talk to a person than a mailbox.

Of course, there are direct writers that charge less than some companies selling through agents. When you shop for the insurance, you will probably be surprised at the spread in costs.

Most people think all automobile insurance rates are the same; those who shop and compare know better.

QUESTION — Please give information about the discounts available on automobile insurance. What about deductibles? Can I save enough to matter by taking the large deductibles?

ANSWER — I'll answer the last part first. I suggest you take the largest possible deductible that makes good sense. Consider how large a repair bill you could afford to pay out of your pocket and what the chances are of your having a loss.

If it would be difficult to pay more than $200 to get your car repaired after rear-ending someone, better dig down now and pay a little more for the $100 deductible. If you consider yourself a safe driver and have some cash reserves, buy a larger deductible.

The average premium will be 35 percent lower when you go from a $200 deductible to $500 and 50 percent lower when you go from $200 to $1,000.

When you raise the deductible on your comprehensive coverage from $50 to $100 you will save about 20 percent. And remember, you may be able to take a deductible on your income tax for a loss of $100 or more.

Now to the first part of your question. You can receive discounts for completing a recognized defensive driver education course. Drivers below age 25 receive a 10 percent discount for taking driver's education.

Owning one of the newer cars with impact bumpers will earn you a 15 percent discount in most states. Discounts are available from some companies for cars with air bags.

If you have two or more cars, you can save by including both under one policy. In most states, people whose children attend college more than 100 miles from home can receive discounts on the theory that the youngsters will seldom use the family car.

A few companies offer discounts of about 10 percent to non-smokers. Teetotalers qualify for discounts from some companies.

Japanese Sailors Take American Good Will Tour

HOUSTON (AP) — When a sailor hits the beach in a new country, he usually has three or four things he would like to accomplish before he leaves.

One of the priority items is to attempt, at least, to do a little public relations with the local residents by getting to know them as well as possible.

The sailors of the training ship Katori and the destroyer Aokumo, part of the Japan Maritime Self-Defense Force, are in Houston this week to give 180 newly commissioned officers just such an opportunity — a chance to relate to Texas hospitality.

The ships docked at the Port of Houston after visiting Vancouver, San Diego, the Panama Canal and Veracruz. Remaining in the four-month cruise are stops at Baltimore, Halifax, Santo Domingo, the Panama Canal again, San Francisco and Pearl Harbor.

During their visit here, the officers have been doing what officers do—taking care of high-level public relations by rubbing elbows with Houston society at a variety of functions.

Meanwhile, the enlisted men have been doing what enlisted men do—taking care of the other levels of public relations.

Seaman 1st Class Eiji Ogawa, who speaks and understands absolutely no English, braved the wilds of downtown Houston with several friends and his trusty Japanese-English dictionary to do a little relating to the American public.

He told his sea-story through Takashi Ogawa, a civilian employee of the Japanese Air Force, who said he is on the cruise to "get some experience on the sea and to promote good will between the countries we visit and Japan." The similarity in their last names, he said, "is coincidence."

Eiji and several friends — "It's always a little better to go in a crowd," he said — headed out the port entrance and up the red bricks of 75th Street toward the waterfront bars and Houston's well-known Navigation Boulevard.

The 22-year-old seaman, who said he "likes to have five or six beers," decided not to patronize the bars because "the atmosphere was not very good."

So he and his friends took a taxi downtown to go shopping, but the stores were closed. And the bars in the part of downtown where he ended up also lacked atmosphere, Eiji said.

"He wanted to go to the disco," Takashi translated. "If he had found a disco, he would have gone there. He says he is a good dancer and likes to dance."

Since he couldn't find a place to dance, he chose the next best thing.

"We had supper at the bus terminal, then we went to see an adult movie," Eiji said. After the movie, Eiji was on his way back to the ship when he ran into a little trouble.

"I met a man who told me he would take me to the girls, but it was getting late and I didn't want to go," Eiji said.

"But the man insisted and wouldn't let me go."

"Luckily, a police car passed, then came back, and the man went away," he said.

"I would like to go back tonight," Eiji said Wednesday. "But I have the duty. I plan to go sightseeing by bus before we leave Friday. We are going to see NASA oil field, the Battleship Texas and the San Jacinto Monument."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) News you receive tomorrow may not be what you expect to hear. If you don't let that shake you, you have a chance for things to work out better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's possible you'll be consorting with VIP's tomorrow, but don't be disappointed if at first it appears fruitless. There's something good being offered under the table.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Being overly concerned with your own interests will be self-defeating tomorrow. Look out for the other guy and he'll look out for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Optimism normally becomes you, but tomorrow this might spill over into self-deception or even wastefulness. Look for the true meaning behind your thoughts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Have fun with your friends tomorrow, but skirt financial or materialistic issues. These are areas fraught with problems.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You will be much better off tomorrow if you do things quietly by yourself. Cohorts, unless selected with extreme care, could display unexpected greed.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be very creative tomorrow, but unless someone gets behind you with a big shove, you will be apt to waste the day away.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Tomorrow could be a reasonably gainful day if you're prepared to roll with the punches and not set your sights on expecting more than you should.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Hard feelings are sure to result if you fail to live up to a bargain. Be sure you're willing to deliver before committing yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Whatever you do tomorrow, you'll do well. However, it is not likely you'll accomplish what you have your heart set on. You'll take little pleasure in your accomplishments.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Again tomorrow you'll have a difficult time stopping yourself from indulging in frivolous whims. Don't pursue pleasure in expensive areas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Keep in mind tomorrow that pretentious or showy behavior is always resented. If you're trying to make a good impression, try a little modesty.

Cattleman Aims Plan To Cut Beef Prices

VACAVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Vince Shaw says he has a simple solution to high meat prices: a "pay-as-it-grows plan" for customers who bear the cost of raising the beef that eventually will grace their table.

Shaw's plan involves raising a feed-lot steer on almost nothing but grain to bring the animal to slaughter weight within a year, about half the time it normally takes.

"I call it a pay-as-it-grows plan," said Shaw, at his 40-acre farm west of Vacaville. He calls the meat "super beef."

Cattle grow the fastest during their first year, Shaw said. During the second year, the structure of the animal — the bones and sinews — grow faster than the rest of the body. Thus, after the first 12 months, the relative percentage of meat in a steer decreases.

Japan Loans Yen To Bank

TOKYO (AP) — A consortium of Japanese private banks and insurance firms led by the Bank of Tokyo will lend the World Bank 70 billion yen, equal to about $368.4 million, in an agreement to be signed Sept. 14, the economic daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun has reported.

Sources in the financial community confirmed the report today, but did not give any details.

The report said the loan is the biggest ever made to the World Bank by private lenders and is intended to finance modernization in developing countries.

The yen-denominated loan has a final maturity of 20 years, the longest term in the yen-syndicated loan market, and will carry annual interest of 7.6 percent, the report said.

Last month, the World Bank and a consortium of Japanese trust banks led by the Mitsubishi Trust and Banking Corp. signed a loan agreement for a World Bank borrowing of 30 billion yen, about $157.9 million, with a final maturity of 20 years.

More than 4,000 songs have been written about the rose, reports the Rose Information Bureau.

Shaw's plan is to bring the animal to slaughter weight — 1,000 to 1,100 pounds — within that first year when the ratio of meat to total weight is the highest. Cattle normally take 18 months to two years to reach this weight.

To achieve this goal, the cattle are fed almost entirely on grain from the time they are about 5 days old until the day they are slaughtered. Cattle are traditionally raised on grass or hay most of their lives and fattened in feed lots for 100-160 days before slaughter.

In Shaw's system, calves are brought from nearby dairies when they are 3 to 5 days old.

In the first of five pens, they are fed starter and grower pellets, milk replacer, cracked corn and processed grain. They also are given about 100 pounds of hay, primarily to keep them content, he said.

By the time the cow has moved through the other four pens, it has eaten approximately 3,500 pounds of raked corn and 1,500 pounds of diet balancers and processed grain.

This feeding plan results in a cow that, when processed, will produce 450-480 pounds of tender lean meat, Shaw said.

The consumer contracts directly with Shaw to raise his own steer. He pays $750 and is guaranteed a minimum of 450 pounds of packaged beef in 12 months. That works out to $1.67 a pound, or if 480 pounds of meat are packaged, $1.56 per pound.

Local meat markets sell a side of beef for $1.29 a pound, hanging weight. Using a 25 percent figure for waste during butchering (an estimate considered conservative by some experts), the customer actually pays about $1.72 for the packaged meat.

Shaw was raised on a farm in Iowa and got his start in beef raising seven years ago near Buffalo, N.Y., giving up his job as a government executive.

In 1977 he sold the New York farm and moved with his wife and four children to his present spread.

At the end of this month, Shaw will slaughter his first steer raised in California on the total grain diet. But it won't be the first he has raised.

In New York, he sold 327 head of the specially fed cattle, and said he had only one dissatisfied customer.

Blue Chips Push Mart Ahead 7.53

NEW YORK (AP) — Strength in blue-chip and gambling issues propelled the stock market strongly ahead today, continuing a rally begun late in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues shot ahead 7.53 to 894.14 in the first two hours.

Advances had a 4-1 lead over declines among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the rally was not predicated on any specific piece of economic news but appeared to be pushed ahead by traditional post-Labor Day excitement as vacations ended and the new season on Wall Street is considered to begin.

"The market showed excellent momentum after Labor Day, and that brought in a lot of new buying," said Eldon A. Grimm, an analyst at Barr, Wilson & Co. "A lot of people were waiting to see what the stock market would do after Labor Day, because Labor Day usually marks the start of a trend."

Firstrose held the most-active list, up 1/2% at 12% as two blocks totaling more than 300,000 shares moved 12%.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gained .47 to 59.38. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .89 to 171.85.

Volume on the Big Board was 18.99 million shares at noon, well ahead of the 13.37 million shares that changed hands in the same time period Tuesday.

Gambling stocks, which slumped early Tuesday before rebounding to contribute to the late rally, continued strong despite many brokers' recommendations that customers sell the volatile stocks as the markets act to stabilize them.

Bally Manufacturing rose 1 1/4 to 63 1/2; Harrah's gained 1 1/2 to 38 1/2 and Caesar's World picked up 2 1/4 to 44%. On the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International class A rose 4 to 121 1/2.

"Blue-chip strength came from General Motors, up 1/2% at 63 1/2; U.S. Steel, ahead 1/2 at 26 1/2; Mobil, up 1/2% at 67; Procter & Gamble, rising 1/2 to 88 1/2; and Dupont, up 1/2 to 128 1/2."

Man Ruled Guilty Of Indecency

A jury today assessed a 10-year probation and a $2,000 fine for a man found guilty of exposing himself to a 12-year-old girl at South Plains Mall.

Found guilty of the indecency with a child charge was Hector Rivera, 29, who lived at 1624 Elkhart Ave., Apt. C, at the time of the Aug. 11, 1976, incident.

It took the seven-woman, five-man jury in Judge Robert C. Wright's 13th District Court approximately one hour to decide on the 10-year probation and fine.

The panel had deliberated about the same amount of time before deciding Rivera was guilty of the charge.

The complainant, now 14 years old, said she and her mother were returning to their car in the mall parking lot about 4 p.m. after shopping for school clothes when she noticed a man seated inside a small auto parked next to a sidewalk.

Responding to questions from Assistant District Attorney Everett Seymore, the girl said the man exposed himself as she walked by the car.

The complainant said the man "kind of grinned."

"What did that mean to you?" Seymore said.

"It scared me," the girl replied.

The complainant said her mother had not noticed anything, but that she told her about the incident.

According to the girl and her mother, they drove by the area where the alleged incident occurred and made a notation of an auto license tag number.

The girl identified Rivera as the man who had exposed himself.

Rivera took the witness stand to deny the allegation. He said he had never seen the complainant.

"Did you do what that little girl said you did?" defense attorney Warren Gosk asked. "No, sir," Rivera said.

He testified he had been at the mall on the day in question to help a friend open a store, but said his car was parked nowhere near the spot testified to by state witnesses.

C-C Breakfast To Emphasize Football Theme

The Chamber of Commerce's monthly breakfast club meetings will be renewed Thursday at 7 a.m. at the Civic Center Banquet Hall with the annual football season kickoff session.

Mayor Dirk West and City Councilman Bill McAlister will be emcees and featured guests will be Texas Tech head coach Rex Dockey, his coaching staff, and players. Tech cheerleaders, Saddle Tramps, Tech twirlers and Raider Red, along with coaches from Lubbock's several high schools also will be on hand.

Head coaches from Christ the King and Lubbock Christian High School will give scouting reports for the upcoming season. Leslie Ann Thurman, the reigning Miss Lubbock, and the chamber's women's division Pompano Squad also will appear.

A $250 grand prize and other door prizes will be distributed.

Southwestern Public Service is the sponsor of this month's breakfast. Persons wishing to attend should contact the Chamber of Commerce.

Reservations may be made by calling the chamber at 763-4666.

Richard Speck To Make New Parole Attempt

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — Richard Speck, sentenced to a minimum of 300 years in prison for the stabbing and strangulation deaths of eight student nurses 12 years ago, will make another try for parole later this month.

Speck, 36, became eligible to apply for parole in 1976 after serving 10 years in prison. Because of an onslaught of public opposition, he was denied parole in 1976 and declined to apply last year — apparently realizing he had no chance for approval.

Under law, he is eligible to apply each September.

A former maritime drifter who now prepares vegetables in the Stateville penitentiary kitchen, Speck is scheduled to appear between Sept. 26-28 when members of the Prisoner Review Board will hear appeals for freedom.

A massive manhunt was conducted to find the slayer, and Speck was captured several days later.

He had tried to commit suicide by slashing his wrists in a seedy West Side apartment and was recognized by a Cook County Hospital physician who noticed the tattoo on his arm with the inscription, "Born to Rise Hell."

State's Attorney Bernard Carey and relatives of the slain nurses will be present at the parole hearings to oppose Speck's release.

CAB Eyes Increase In Passenger Load

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has proposed that air taxi operators be allowed to fly planes with a maximum of 60 seats, double the present limit of 30.

The board said Tuesday the increase would allow air taxis to meet increased demand for air service in medium-size and small cities. In recent years, larger airlines have dropped service to many smaller communities.

EX-RABBI — Jackie Mason, comic and ex-rabbi went through one of his routines recently in Los Angeles. Mason will make his acting debut in CBS' new television series "Flying High" this season. (AP Laserphoto)

Comedian To Make Acting Debut

By JAY SHARBUTT
BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — Jackie Mason, the comic and ex-rabbi, makes his TV acting debut this fall in CBS' "Flying High" airline series — as a rabbi interpreting for a Russian defector.

Why the actor bit? Mason, 47, a short, complex man who mixes a swift, cutting wit with self-deprecation, self-appreciation and a keen sense of the ridiculous, kept a straight face as he explained:

"I decided I'm not only the greatest living comedian, I'm also the greatest living actor. I didn't get this information from anybody else. I listen to my own opinions a lot and I figured that if that's my opinion..."

The New Yorker's rich East Side accent swirled upwards amid the lurching cries of others for chicken soup and lox at Nate and Al's delicatessen, Mason's unofficial office when he's in town.

He went on to say his urge to emote has smoldered ever since he got great reviews in his first acting job as the star of a low-budget 1972 film called "The Stooge."

"Every comedian thinks he's an actor," he sighed.

Mason, often sighted on the Tonight and Merv Griffin shows and in the clubs of New York, Las Vegas and elsewhere, gained much fame in 1964 during a controversial gig on the late Ed Sullivan's show.

He was accused of raising a certain finger that sportscaster Don Meredith says only means: "We're No. 1." Sullivan thought it obscene. Mason denied he raised that finger. Sued Sullivan, too.

The suit later was dropped, the two made up, but it was a strange row for the son of a Russian-born rabbi, a son who actually had been a rabbi and whose two brothers still are rabbis.

Mason said he found early in his religious career he was in the wrong calling: "Basically, I'm not that religious."

Why then comedy, why not sell aluminum siding or such?

He blames his congregation: "They always used to say, 'Rabbi, you ought to be a comedian.' I always did a few jokes at occasions where you didn't have to be too serious — weddings, bar mitzvahs, brotherhood nights.

"I did it to balance out the seriousness of my performance as a rabbi. I didn't want to bore them to death. I knew they didn't want to hear terrific sermons. They wanted to be entertained."

He decided to entertain full-time. His first pulpit as a rookie comic was at a hotel in New York's Catskill Mountains, where he started as a busboy and was quickly promoted to social director.

"It was a small hotel," Mason said. "They catered to about 112 80-year-old people. They could barely walk, they thanked God they were living at that age."

In the tradition of comics, he broke in on Amateur Night, having watched professional comics work at the hotel. Mason, whose confidence isn't in short supply, said this about them:

"I saw they stunk compared to me. I said, 'I can do that very easily.' My sermons were funnier than these guys trying to be funny."

In 335 B.C. Aristotle founded a school in the Lyceum at Athens known as Peripatetic from his practice of lecturing in a covered portico.

'Trekkies' Denied Details

NEW YORK (AP) — "The show that wouldn't die" attracted an estimated 5,000 "Trekkies" to a convention here, but they didn't get a sneak peak at the new Star Trek movie, based on the science fiction television series that was canceled 10 years ago.

Two actors from both the series and the movie spoke at the convention at the Statler Hilton over the Labor Day weekend. They plugged the movie, which is still being filmed and is scheduled for release next summer, but neither would give details.

James Doohan, who plays Scotty, the chief engineer of the starship Enterprise, declined to describe the ship's new engine room.

"You'll have to wait and see, lad," said Doohan, in his character's Scottish brogue, to 15-year-old Anthony Timpono of Queens, who had posed the question.

Walter Koenig — Ensign Chekov — was also tight lipped, according to Timpono and others at the convention, who said the stars had been sworn to secrecy about the movie.

The new film is something of a triumph for Trekkies, who have campaigned for new Star Trek adventures since 1968, when NBC canceled the program after 2½ seasons of mediocre ratings.

Regular conventions, too, have thrived, attracting not only youngsters and teenagers, but also middle-aged Trekkies who unabashedly wear Star Trek uniforms.

One 35-year-old man from the Bronx, who would not give his name, said he bought his "Capt. Kirk" gold uniform shirt for $15 at one of 10 conventions he has attended.

NBC Gives Sneak Preview Of New Series

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Namath turns teacher. Jack Albertson runs for the Senate, and a real-life doctor treats gravely ill children — those are among NBC's best hopes for the coming season.

The three shows make their debut Thursday as NBC breaks its own season premiere date of Sept. 18 with "Sneak Preview Week." They won't all be Thursday night entries on the regular schedule, however. The schedule for the new television season has been twisting like a roulette wheel — "round and round and round she goes, and where she stops nobody knows."

"The Waverly Wonders," a half-hour show to be presented Sept. 7 as part of a Joe Namath special in the 7:30 p.m. slot, presents Broadway Joe as a never-was basketball coach. He finds to his surprise he also is expected to teach history.

The show is a suburban version of "Welcome Back, Kotter," with Namath housing casual chess on a clutch of teenagers. Basketball coaching at this school is a more important skill than history teaching.

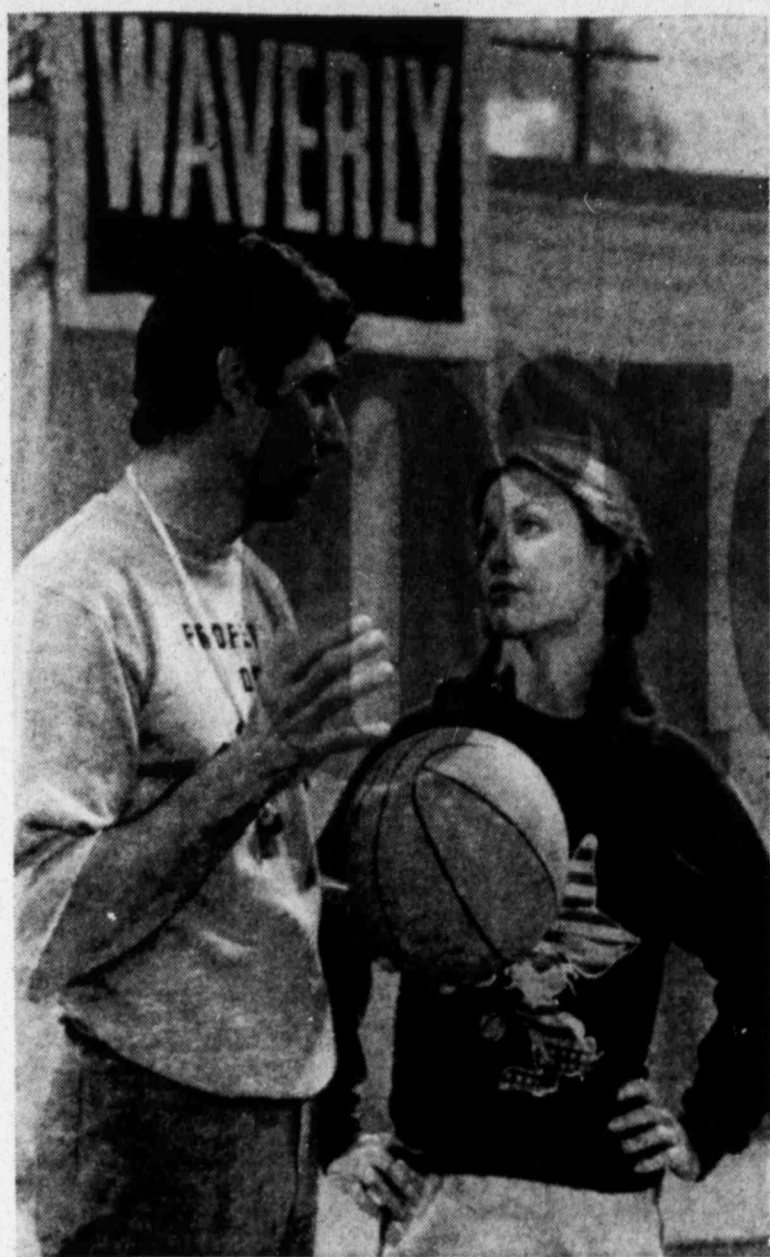

Albertson uses irascible charm as Prof. Joe Kelley, mandatorily retired college professor, who runs for the Senate and throws at least one racial out. When asked his reaction to the sexual revolution he wistfully replies, "Where was it when I needed it?"

By the end of this introductory episode, which airs at 8 p.m. Eastern time, Grandpa has indeed gone to Washington and is living with his two-star general son, Larry Linville, promoted from his day as Maj. Frank Burns on "M-A-S-H."

Grandpa refers to his son as a fathead, while his daughter-in-law, a shrewish food fanatic, insists on serving the family figs, kiwis and zucchini.

What "Grandpa" needs for stand-out success is good writing, lively with bipartisan political satire. It is more likely to get a steady diet of zucchini jokes.

As for "Lifeline," on at 9 p.m., the camera follows a real-life doctor around as he saves children's lives, sings with his family and worries about his patients. The AMA ought to love it.

STILL CARRYING THE BALL — Former New York Jets and Los Angeles Rams quarterback Joe Namath tries to persuade Kim Lankford, that the team does not need another player, but she has other ideas on NBC-TV's new comedy series, "The Waverly Wonders," that will premiere Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: We'd like to know more about our favorite actor, Robert Mitchum. Also, why did he turn down a Playboy interview? — P. Martinet, Denver.

A: "I didn't want to help them sell nightgowns," was the way Mitchum explained turning down one of the most sought-after publicity-breaks in showbusiness.

Never one to fraternize with Hollywood society, Mitchum concedes he acts mostly for the money. "I work cheap," he says. "As a result, I work all the time. At least as much as I permit myself. Acting," he added, "is just a charade. So that somebody can make money out of my hide." Since Mitchum's made more than 125 movies, he certainly proved what a valuable hide he has. Robert Charles Druan Mitchum claims he ran away from home for the first time when he was only 6. Early in his movie career, he played bit parts in the Hopalong Cassidy Westerns. He also was in a Laurel and Hardy comedy. And he strummed a guitar and sang love songs to Loretta Young in "Rachel and the Stranger" (1948). Though never considered a great actor, Bob was proclaimed one of the best by Charles Laughton who directed him in "Night of the Hunter." He copped an Academy Award nomination for best supporting actor in "G.I. Joe."

Mitchum did the cops-and-robbers Paramount classic based on "The Friends of Eddie Coyle" (1973), the best seller by George V. Higgins, an assistant district attorney in Boston, locale of the filming.

He played a tough Irish hood who wheels and deals with his "friends" on both sides of the law. His only worry was that some TV genius would try to use "Coyle" as a "pilot" from which to develop an entire series. He didn't want to work that hard.

Asked by a magazine reporter how he "does with women," Mitchum turned the question around and gave a little advice to other men: "If a woman approaches you, just stop and stare and invite her to your dressing room. Usually she'll flee, her performance over!"

Q: My grandmother insists that if your ear is burning, it's supposed to mean someone is talking about you. Are there any other superstitions of a similar nature? — Merilee R., Indianapolis.

A: Yes. When the eye twitches, it indicates a friend will be visiting you. When your palm itches, it's a sign you'll come into money or gifts. If you suddenly shiver, it's because someone is walking over the place which is to form your grave. Ancient Romans claim that mischief was at hand if you pricked your left thumb. And sudden pains and prickings where the warnings of evil on the road. But a sudden glow was the sign of good news.

Q: Isn't it true that Bobby Riggs claimed he had a gown designed to wear in that memorable tennis match against Billie Jean King? And didn't that news almost psych her out? — Mr.

DIDN'T WANT TO WORK HARD — Robert Mitchum's only concern when he made "Friends of Eddie Coyle" in 1973 was that some TV genius would try to use the film as a pilot from which to develop a series — Mitchum didn't want to work that hard!

& Mrs. S. O'N., Norfolk, Va.

A: Not at all. "I don't care if you show up in your jockstrap," retorted the indomitable Mrs. King.

Q: Hasn't Debby Boone signed to do a TV series in the fall? And won't her family, including Pat Boone, also appear regularly? — T. Starr, Miami.

A: Not yet. What Debby, her father Pat, her mother and her three sisters have signed is a long-term agreement with ABC-TV to tape holiday specials for Thanksgiving and Easter. If they're well received, then a weekly series could light up their lives.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Network May Shuffle Fall Programming

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, led by Fred Silverman, started its "Preview Week" Tuesday night.

NBC's schedule changes so often it is said all its shows are now called "To Be Announced."

But industry sources say NBC, which recently yanked the new "Runaway" series from its fall roster and put four series in new slots, now is mulling another ploy so radical even ABC is worried.

It may end all its program-shuffling, the sources say.

The real radical part is that NBC may soon shuffle six nights of the week around, instead of shuffling programs around. If adopted, this is how the new arrangement initially would look: Saturday night would occur on Tuesday, Monday night on Saturday, Thursday night on Monday, Wednesday night on Friday and Friday night on Wednesday, or whichever comes first.

Sunday night would continue to be on Sunday night until further notice, the sources said.

Under the current system, NBC's changes last week went this way:

"Grandpa Goes to Washington," set for Wednesday, was moved to Thursday; "Lifeline" went from Wednesday to Sunday; "The Eddie Capra Mysteries" ventured from Sunday to Friday night, while "Sword of Justice" went from Friday to Saturday night.

Had NBC adopted its plan to move nights, not programs, sources say, the changes it made last week would read thusly:

"Grandpa" is on Friday, which formerly was Wednesday; "Lifeline" stays put on Sunday; "Capra" is on Wednesday, which once was Friday, while "Sword" airs on Tuesday, which used to be Saturday.

Adoption of the night-moving plan by NBC could have serious schedule repercussions for the other networks. They might be forced to adopt it, too, to stay competitive.

It would mean, for example, ABC's popular "NFL Monday Night Football" would appear on Saturday, which used to be Monday.

And the hit "Love Boat" would be on Monday, which used to be Saturday until NBC moved Saturday to a new night.

CBS, the most conservative of the networks, probably would just take a whole bunch of aspirin and cancel Tuesday.

Industry sources point out that NBC's night-moving idea, while bold, has certain hazards.

For example, "Saturday Night Live" would have to air on Tuesday, since that's when Saturday used to be. True, NBC could alter its plan slightly and have Saturday occur on Saturday.

But a drawback to this, sources say, is that Tuesday would then have no place to go.

Question: If the ratings-crazed networks all take up night-shuffling instead of program-shuffling, won't this just further fuddle millions of viewers already bewildered by constant program-shuffling and pre-emptions?

"Who?" the sources explained.

Rumor Of Disease Found False

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (UPI) — The Labor Day weekend weather was beautiful, but vacationers stayed away from Martha's Vineyard in droves because of unsubstantiated reports of an outbreak of Legionnaire's Disease there.

Seven people, all of whom vacationed together at Chilmark, became ill after leaving the island and doctors have been trying to determine what is responsible.

There were reports Legionnaire's Disease was involved, but doctors now say it doesn't appear the disease, named because of a 1975 outbreak of it during an

Fisherman Catches Bone Of Mammoth

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Heinz Kretschmann, 50, cast his line into the Inn River in Munich, hoping to catch a trout. But he hooked a huge bone instead.

Investigation later revealed it was the thigh bone of a mammoth which died about 10 million years ago.

American Legion convention in Philadelphia, was to blame. Businessmen estimated news of the illness kept 20-40 percent of the weekend trade from the scenic island.
