Integration Plan Appeal Looms

U.S. Hits Israel On Settlements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration protested Israel's decision to expand its West Bank settlements Thursday as new doubts arose about the possibility of concluding a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

President Carter sent a personal cable to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to convey the U.S. view of the settlements decision, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said.

The American view, expressed publicly in a statement by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, was that the expansion of the settlements was "deeply disturbing."

The Israeli Cabinet voted Wednesday to spend the equivalent of about $15 million to build a reservoir and new housing in existing Israeli settlements on the West Bank.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan defended the decision as consistent with Israeli policy and within Israel's rights. Dayan said Israel agreed at the Camp David summit only to refrain from establishing new West Bank settlements during the current period of negotiations with Egypt.

On his return to the United States late Thursday, Dayan said Israel was forced to move to expand the settlements by the "bad negative reaction" in Israel to statements by the Carter administration on the future of Israeli settlements in the occupied areas.

Hussein Questions

Several weeks ago, King Hussein of Jordan asked the administration to answer a number of questions about the Camp David accords, including the ultimate fate of those Israelis now living in the occupied territories.

Last week, Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders went to Jordan, Israel and Saudi Arabia to deliver the administration's answers, which still have not been made public.

But Dayan quoted Saunders as having said that "the remaining Israeli settlers in the West Bank and Gaza" would have their status determined by the countries involved in the ultimate settlement.

Causes "Uproar"

Dayan said Saunders' use of the word "remaining" implied that at least some Israeli settlers would be forced to leave. This caused "such an uproar in the country, you can't imagine," Dayan said. He explained that the Cabinet took its position so that Israeli citizens and the rest of the world would know that Israel has no intention of agreeing to any plan that would force the settlers to leave the occupied territories.

But Dayan also said the influx of settlers under the newly announced Israeli Cabinet plan would amount to no more than a few hundred families during the next few months.

"What we have decided is not bombastic and is not to torpedo the negotiations," the foreign minister said.

State Department officials, speaking privately, said they were unsure whether Israel actually intended to put substantial

Travel Pay Error Bared By Salinas

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

DAVID HESTER Thursday morning dropped a bombshell on State Rep. Froy Salinas, his opponent in the District 75-B House race, but Salinas caught and defused it Thursday afternoon.

Hester accused Salinas of taking $476 in travel expenses during February, 1977, when Salinas flew free of charge over part of the mileage claimed. Salinas, who could not be reached for comment Thursday morning, called a news conference in the afternoon and said yes, he had claimed too much money but belatedly discovered the error and paid back the extra $179 last summer.

Proof Produced

The one-term representative produced a canceled check and correspondence with the House Business Office to prove his innocence of the Hester charge.

In a 10:30 a.m. Thursday news conference at the Villa Inn, Hester handed out copies of a House travel expense report signed Feb. 28, 1977, by Salinas and flight logs showing Salinas as a passenger on three Austin-to-Lubbock flights aboard a Texas Tech University airplane during that month.

Hester, a Republican, said state records in Austin show that Salinas claimed four round trips from Austin to Lubbock and back and collected $476.16 for 2,976 miles of travel at 16 cents per mile.

Salinas said the error stemmed from a staff member being misinformed by the House Business Office.

"At the time I claimed travel, a former staff member checked to see if I was entitled to travel pay although I had received a free ride on Thursday, explaining that my family drove my car to Lubbock after the children got out of school on Friday and back to Austin on the following Sunday," Salinas read from a prepared statement at 3 p.m. Thursday at his 1108 Avenue J campaign headquarters.

Error Discovered

"A person in the House Business Office incorrectly told my staff person that I was entitled to travel pay, so I claimed it. Later I found the error and contacted the House Business Office immediately."

Salinas told newsmen as the meeting was breaking up that the error was made partly because he was new in office, and he said it was discovered after

ACTOR'S BARGE TOWED

Trade Loss Eases In September

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit grew slightly in September as Americans bought $1.69 billion more from foreign countries than they sold abroad, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

The trade deficit was larger than the $1.62 billion in August, but substantially better than the deficit buildup at the start of the year.

The excess of imports over exports has been a big reason for the sharp decline in the value of the dollar against foreign currencies this year. That, in turn, has contributed to inflation in the United States.

Dollar Hits Low

Before the latest trade figures were announced, heavy dollar sales by money dealers around the world drove the U.S. currency to new lows against the West German mark, Dutch guilder and Danish kroner. The dollar plunged below 180 yen in Tokyo, a postwar low.

The September trade figures, released a day early, may provide some encouragement to the Carter administration in its attempts to convince other countries that the U.S. trade situation is improving. Last month's $1.69 billion deficit is smaller than the average deficit this year of $2.5 billion a month.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said the September figures "reflect the continued improvement in our trade position." Although monthly data varies considerably, he added, "we are confident the latest figures reaffirm the basic significant improvement in our external position."

Improvement Predicted

At a news conference Wednesday, Blumenthal predicted a big improvement in the trade balance next year. So far, in the first nine months of this year, the trade deficit is $22.67 billion, approaching the record $26 billion deficit last year.

In September, exports increased about 8 percent to a record $13.4 billion, the department said. Imports, also a record, increased about 7 percent to $15.12 billion.

Oil imports, which have been the main cause of the U.S. trade problem, grew substantially, from $3.54 billion in August to $3.82 billion in September, the department said.

Imports of coffee, sugar, fish, meat and other food increased sharply, the department said. American buyers also showed renewed demand for foreign autos, television sets and machinery.

Auto imports rose by $170 million to $911 million after falling off by about the same amount in August.

Importers brought in $29.4 million

Carter To Sign Tax Reduction

MIAMI (AP) — President Carter, allaying fears he might veto the controversial tax cut bill, said Thursday he has decided to sign the $18.7 billion measure.

Carter announced his decision on the tax bill in response to cheers from a crowd here at a Democratic Party rally.

"Do you want a government that cuts your income taxes?" he asked. "O.K.!" he said as the crowd cheered.

"Last year we cut federal income taxes $8 billion. This year Congress has already passed a bill to cut our income taxes about $19 or $20 billion more. When I get back to Washington and get that bill, do you think I ought to sign it?"

The crowd cheered affirmatively and Carter said, "I'll take your advice. I've decided to sign the bill.

The president had traveled to Florida on the last leg of a one-day campaign swing that had taken him earlier to Tennessee.

Carter had been reported leaning toward signing the measure which earlier had been the object of many veto threats as it worked its way through Congress. Carter had expressed special concerns with the bill's capital gains tax cuts and that it did not provide enough breaks for lower-income wage earners.

Carter also said at the political rally that he was hoping an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty could be signed in December.

"I pray that before Christmas I will be going to the Middle East to join in signing a peace treaty," the president said, adding, "It's not going to be easy to conclude the details of a peace treaty. I need your help, your support and your prayers."

Carter said he had "one of the greatest opportunities of any president" to help bring peace to the Middle East. He noted the negotiations on the final details of the treaty will resume in Washington today and said Secretary of State Cyrus Vance will be working on the treaty almost full time.

After the Miami rally for Democratic candidates, Carter attended a $1,000-a-person fundraiser for state Sen. Robert Graham, who is battling for the governership against Republican Jack M. Eckerd, former head of the General Services Administration. Incumbent Gov. Reubin Askew is not eligible for a third term.

Brief Filing Scheduled For Today

BY JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE U.S. solicitor general has told government lawyers to proceed with a "far-reaching" appeal of the Lubbock Independent School desegregation case, sources said Thursday

A detailed brief is expected to be filed by 5 p.m. today with the New Orleans-based 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, a Justice Department spokesman said.

Solicitor General Wade McCree Jr., who has responsibility for such decisions, this week authorized the department to submit the brief, according to government officials.

The document will outline a "rather far-reaching appeal on both the scope of the violation and on the remedy," Lawrence Wallace, deputy solicitor general, told The Avalanche-Journal.

Argument Expectations Listed

That is, the Justice Department is expected to argue that:

—Racial segregation here has been systemwide, and a systemwide remedy involving integration of all schools is needed. In contrast, U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward on Jan. 27 found only nine schools to be remnants of unlawful segregation. The resulting integration plan is aimed at correcting those relatively few violations.

—The present remedy, as proposed by the school board and approved May 8 by Woodward, is unfair to minorities. The Justice Department contends that the plan puts a "disproportionate burden" of busing on minority students, sources said.

Elaborating on the two-pronged approach, a government source said that even if Woodward's Jan. 27 finding is upheld, the department will seek to "better distribute the burden within the confines of the schools currently involved" in the plan.

School Construction Opposed

The source also said the department will continue to oppose the proposed construction of three elementary schools in predominantly white residential areas south and southwest of Loop 289.

The present court-ordered integration plan, a combination of voluntary transfers and mandatory reassignments, involves busing about 2,000 elementary and several hundred secondary students a day.

School board president Charles Waters says the Justice Department's systemwide integration approach would require "many times the amount of busing we have now."

Waters has said he is confident Woodward's rulings will be upheld because they parallel recent desegregation doctrine set by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Board May Appeal

If the Lubbock school board loses at the 5th Circuit, the board may appeal to the Supreme Court, Waters said.

The Justice Department filed a notice of appeal July 6 as a means to buy time to make up its mind whether to actually go through with an appeal.

Originally the department had until

Hance, Bush Argue Residence Issue

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ALTHOUGH BOTH 19th Congressional District candidates embraced basically a conservative dogma, a few differences emerged between George Bush and Kent Hance during Thursday night's Candidates Rally aired live over KTXT (Channel 5.)

The League of Women Voters sponsored the telecast, and Louise Cummins, a state board member of the league, shot questions at the two men.

When asked whether Bush's background was an issue, Hance, a one-term state senator, replied, "I think it's an important issue. He (Bush) has only lived in the district four years of his adult life, and I've lived here all my life. I know the problems of the farmers and Texas Tech. I know this district because I've represented it before."

Bush, sitting only inches away, countered, " I think it's a very foolish issue. I had lived in West Texas earlier, and it shouldn't be an issue that I've seen another part of the world besides West Texas. But, having seen the world, I chose to start my own company in West Texas. I think the real issue is who can be effective."

The two also differed on the methods needed to balance the federal budget.

Bush, a 32-year-old Midland oil producer, said he supports the Kemp-Roth bill, which calls for a reduction of taxes by one-third in three years.

"The recent tax cut was not a cut; it was basically window dressing," Bush, a Republican, said. "I also think a measure like Proposition 13 is good for the people and ought to be transferred to the federal government."

Hance agreed with Bush that taxes should be cut by one-third in three years, adding there also must be a cut in deficit spending to balance the budget.

Those cuts should be made in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Democrat claimed, saying, "Look at the vast amount of money that's been lost in the past few years."

He also called for cuts in foreign aid and for a five to six percent across-the-board reduction in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Hance claimed effectiveness in Congress will mean getting along with its Texas delegation, most of whom are Democrats. Bush rebutted that by saying he won't be obligated to go along with them. "I'm trying to change the philosophical course of the federal government and be a part of the reversal of power in Washington," Bush said.

Second Union Endorses Inflation Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new anti-inflation program picked up tentative support Thursday from a second major union, while a third union voiced defiance of the president's wage guideline.

The United Auto Workers generally endorsed the program but said there should be more flexibility built into Carter's 7 percent ceiling on wage and benefit increases over the next year.

The huge Teamsters union issued a similar statement of conditional support on Wednesday.

But William Winpisinger, president of the 950,000-member International Association of Machinists, has instructed his regional negotiators to ignore the wage guideline because he contends the program is unfair to workers.

And, on the business side, one steel industry official who requested anonymity said of the program: "We'll be looking at it with a wary eye. Our experience with guides in the past is that they have been used as a tool of repression of steel prices."

In related developments Thursday:

—Carter said he has set a limit on the hiring of civilian federal workers by instructing agencies to fill only half their job vacancies for an indefinite time. He said the objective was to improve government efficiency, which helps restrain inflation.

—GOP National Chairman William Brock said a cut in taxes and in the growth of government spending is the best way to reduce inflation. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., called for a year's delay in raising Social Security taxes.

—Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said it will take at least 6 months before the program shows any tangible results, and then any decline in inflation will be gradual.

—The dollar sank to record lows, losing 2 percent of its value against the Bri-

Anton's Residents Relax After Tanker Car Capped

ANTON — A highly explosive chemical sloshing from a Shell Oil Co. railroad tanker car threatened this small town for about four hours Thursday night, as law enforcement officials remained on alert for possible evacuation of the town's 1,134 residents.

But by midnight, Santa Fe Railroad officials said the valve had been capped and "everything was under control."

The tanker car is expected to be moved early today to Baniner Switch, an isolated area six miles south of here.

The 100-car Santa Fe train, on its way to California from Alabama, was pulling a tanker filled with a chemical known as styren monomer inhibited — a highly flammable polymer used in plastics.

Officials, who diverted traffic around the site for fear of a spark from a passing vehicle, said if the chemical exploded it could "devastate everything within 2,500 feet around it." The chemical reportedly could ignite at 90-degrees.

The leak first was discovered by a crew member who noticed a peculiar odor coming from the huge black tanker.

When the train came to a stop just 300 yards outside of Anton about 6:50 p.m., it was discovered the clear chemical was sloshing from a partially opened valve at the top of the car.

After Santa Fe officials in Amarillo were notified of the problem, a special team of Shell Oil troubleshooters were dispatched from Odessa to cap the faulty valve.

But before the team arrived, Santa Fe crewmen apparently repaired the valve. The tanker, however, was uncoupled from the train for a final check by the Odessa team and the remaining cars continued on to Clovis, N.M.

Anton Constable George Brock said residents were not asked to prepare for evacuation "because we didn't know exactly what we had."

But he said officials were ready to evacuate the town if the situation had worsened.

The Anton Volunteer Fire Department washed down the tanker twice as a precaution, and Texas Air Control Board representatives from Lubbock were called to the scene as a "secondary, precautionary measure." The TACB members brought with them gas masks and oxygen tanks.

MISSILE LAUNCHED

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An experimental Trident missile roared from a launch pad Thursday at the U.S. Air Force station here in a test firing the Navy termed successful. The test was one of a series that Navy officials hope will bring the Trident to operational status by 1980.

Main Street Shut For Repair Work

Main Street will be barricaded between Avenue T and Avenue S beginning at 7 a.m. today and continuing until midafternoon.

The temporary street closure is so that concrete trucks can work on the expansion of the Broadway Church of Christ.

Angling In Mexico Dream Experience

For the special breed of Texan who wakes before dawn and reaches for that "lucky fishin' hat," a sportfishing expedition into Mexico's Sea of Cortez is an experience straight out of a dream.

But even for those who don't know a goldfish from a sailfish, a day spent on one of the comfortable cruisers which venture daily into the deep blue Mexican sea is a relaxing and exciting adventure.

The deep-sea fishing off Mexico's 5,500 miles of beautiful coastline is undeniably some of the best in the world. The ocean there spawns an incredible collection of marlin, sailfish, broadbill, cabrilla, sierra, roosterfish and yellowtail.

Formed more than 10 million years ago, the Sea of Cortez is still the youngest of the world's seas, a fact which may account for its vitality. On the west is Baja California; the mainland of Mexico forms its eastern shore. It is here, on a peninsula thrusting into the sea, that you will find Mazatlan, one of Mexico's largest and most favored fishing resorts.

This relaxed, take-it-easy town is in the northwestern part of Mexico in the state of Sinaloa. The peninsula divides the Pacific Ocean from the quiet harbor, which supports a vigorous shrimping and fishing industry as well as a thriving port, the second most important in Mexico.

There's no need for careful planning to arrive at the peak of the fishing season — it lasts for 12 full months. Some of the world's most spectacular sportfishing is available here all year 'round.

The friendly people of Mazatlan are proud of their natural resources, and many make their living working for the numerous fleets of charter boats which take visiting fishermen into the ocean to try their luck with the big ones. Prices for a daylong expedition into the ocean range from $100 to $150 (7 a.m. to 3 p.m.) including tackle and bait. The price becomes more economical when it is shared by two anglers. Iced soft drinks and beer, cerveza, are extra. All boats have the latest equipment, an experienced crew and two to three fighting chairs.

Arrangements for a sportfishing expedition are remarkably simple and usually can be accomplished with a telephone call. Most charter services have employees who speak creditable English and can help with translations. An even easier way to arrange a fishing trip is through your hotel's activities desk. They will be glad to handle all arrangements, including requesting box lunches for your party from the hotel's kitchen.

By the time you reach the dock, the boat captains and mates have readied their vessels for the day's activities. All equipment is shipshape and ready to go. The fleet office will even take care of issuing members of your party a Mexican fishing license. All you have to do is step onto the boat and settle down for an exciting day of sun and enjoyment.

Mazatlan's various charter fleets have boats of varying sizes and can accommodate both large and small parties. The cruisers are quipped with everything needed to insure a successful fishing expedition.

The gentle rolling of the boat and the warm Mexican sun can lull you into a peaceful half-sleep as your charter boat heads toward the open sea. On the run to the fishing grounds, the mate sets the lines on the big deep-sea rods. For the inexperienced fisherman who is unsure about even the basics (such as baiting the hooks with mullet or flying fish), everything is carefully and quietly taken care of during the trip.

Up on the flying bridge, the sharp eyes of the captain and his mate sweep the sparkling waters for the inevitable flock of sea birds that gracefully circle the game fish of the Pacific. Out of sight of land, the only other things visible on the horizon are fishing boats. An occasional school of dolphin will break the calm, frolicking just above the surface of the blue water.

All is quiet until the captain's voice announces "Marlin," and the anticipation and excitemnent of the moment take over. Instantly everyone is alert, searching the sea for a glimpse of one of the magnificent fish.

Suddenly, one of the big reels begins to scream with line being taken out at a remarkable speed — a "strike!" The boat comes alive with action as a lucky angler grabs the rod and settles quickly into the fighting chair fitted with a butt-socket to secure the pole during the struggle ahead.

As the fisherman takes in line, fighting against the weight of the fish, the big pole bends in an arc, often looking as though it may break in half. The captain and mate keep a sharp eye on both the fish and the angler, ready to offer advice and encouragement or step into the action if necessary. Skillful maneuvering of the boat is essential in the test between angler and fish. Often, just as you think the fish is ready to be brought in, he takes the line and heads out to sea and the struggle begins again.

One of the most thrilling sights is the fish breaking the water, gracefully leaping into the air as he fights against the line. Brilliant flashes of irridescent blue are visible as he comes nearer the surface of the sea, twisting and turning in his struggle.

Finally, after minutes or hours, the fish is brought alongside. The mate grabs the leader and the catch is either thrown or brought aboard. Congratulations and cold drinks are in order for the tired, but happy, angler.

On the return trip, the mate raises a flag to signal the catch of the type fish caught. As the fleet begins to converge in the harbor, most of the boats are flying one or more of the flags, telling those on shore that the anglers have landed a marlin, a sail, or a dorado.

Weighing the catch and photographing the angler with his or her trophy are both traditional dockside activities. If your striped marlin weighs in close to 140 pounds, he's of average size. But trophies of between 220 and 300 pounds are not uncommon. (The standing record is a 720-pound, 14-foot black marlin taken in 2 1/2 hours near Mazatlan.)

The entire experience is an unforgettable one, both for the novice as well as the veteran fisherman. For many, it may cause fishing expeditions into quieter, inland water to pale by comparison.

As one experienced Texas angler remarked after landing a 280-pound blue marlin off Mazatlan, "Bass fishing back home will just never be the same!"

Mazatlan Offers Much More Than Fishing For Year 'Round Visitor

Mazatlan, with the finest harbor facilities on Mexico's Pacific coast, long has been a favorite port of call for cruise ships. Now with excellent airline service, the city is becoming a favorite resort for Texans who don't have time for an ocean cruise.

The port is one of the few in the world from which sailfish and marlin can be caught in all seasons. In the backwaters south of the city anglers can go for barracuda and snook.

Sportsmen will find the Mazatlan area offers much more than just fishing. A literal translation of the Nahuatl word Mazatlan means "place of the deer." The nearby hills have deer, jaguar, mountain lion, ocelot and wild boar. Four species of duck, plus dove, quail and pheasant are in the area. The major hotels have hunting representatives with guides for hire.

Mazatlan is an all around tourist center. Bird watching and shell collecting are favorite pastimes. There are harbor, island and jungle cruises. A three hour bay cruise features a quick swim at one of the small islands. A memorable excursion visits a nearby mining town. The all day trip by bus and burro crosses majestic mountains and beautiful rivers to visit a quaint village with cobblestone streets.

Bicycles, motor scooters, sailboats, surfboards, plus water skiing and skindiving equipment can be rented. A parachute ride over the bay is especially exciting.

A unique form of transportation in the city is by Pulmonia. The open-air motorized rickshaw-type vehicle (sometimes referred to as "Pneumonia") can carry three people. Many visitors ride a Pulmonia to the Mazatlan Arts and Crafts Center to see craftsmen at work. Good buys can be found in wood, leather and silver.

During the fall and winter months, reservations for accommodations should be made well in advance. Accommodations range from plain to plush.

Average daytime temperatures range from 66 degrees in winter to 82 in summer. The months of October through December have the least amount of rain. Any humidity in the city is usually offset by a cooling breeze from the ocean.

Information pertaining to rates for accommodations and services is available from your travel agent. General tourist information is available from Mexican National Tourist Council, 304 N. Saint Mary's Street, San Antonio 78205. The telephone number is 512/223-6612.

Jet Crashes In Arizona Street, Killing One

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — One person was killed and at least six others were injured Thursday when an Air Force jet fighter crashed in a street, narrowly missing a junior high school and University of Arizona buildings.

The dead person, and an unidentified woman who was severely burned, were riding in a car that was hit by the plane, police said. A man hit by debris was hospitalized in guarded condition.

"The plane went down right on the street between the football practice field and the school in an explosion and big ball of flame," said Tom Duddleston Jr., who was bicycling on the university campus when he saw the crash.

The force of the explosion threw an unidentified 12-year-old boy to the ground in the school yard. He suffered chest injuries, police said. Four other persons were treated at local hospitals.

Police said Air Force Capt. Frederick Ashler, 28, ejected from the A-7D Corsair as it passed over the campus. Witnesses said the plane tumbled in the air and landed on its tail. Ashler was not seriously injured.

Sue Lafuk, a college student waiting for a bus near where the plane hit, said she began running as the craft was coming down and saw the pilot on the ground moments after the crash.

"Oh, my God. Is anybody dead?" she quoted the dazed pilot as saying.

Michael Weinstein, a university student, was riding in a car when he heard "a big screeching sound. Then the plane hit 25 to 30 yards in front of where we were."

Two persons remained hospitalized Thursday evening. The unidentified woman was in extremely critical condition with third-degree burns over most of her body, hospital officials said.

AN EDITORIAL:

Real Culprit Still At Large

THE BEST thing that can be said about President Carter's latest efforts on the inflation front is that he at least recognizes that the nation, and his administration, has a problem.

Past that point, the assessment of the latest White House economic package stirs mixed reaction, much of it in the dubious category.

At home, many, including some leading Democrats, felt it was "too little, too late."

The man in the street didn't jump through any hoops. He will wait and see.

THE PRESIDENT, warning that the nation must face "a time of national austerity," laid out a plan for holding down prices and wages.

To say the least, it is complicated, not likely to engender widespread public support nor to be especially palatable to business or big labor.

Generally speaking, the new guidelines would set a limit of price boosts of no more than 5.75 percent for 1979, with a limit on wage boosts of 7 percent.

The President coupled this goal, which he said would translate into an inflation rate of 6 percent to 6.5 percent, with a "wage insurance" tax rebate to supposedly protect pay checks in case the inflation spiral soared over 7 percent.

Currently, it is running from 8 percent to 10 percent.

IN OTHER AREAS, Mr. Carter pledged to cut the federal budget to $30 billion or less next year and to fill only one of each two jobs which become vacant in the vast federal bureaucracy.

While efforts to cut federal spending are at the core of most inflation problems anyway, the President's promise to cut the budget is welcome.

The problem is that it should be noted that when he was running for office and even after assuming the post Mr. Carter was claiming he would have no budget deficit in 1980.

And while cutting back on the burgeoning federal bureaucracy, the plan to replace half of those who quit is one of those things which will make only a minor dent in the overall problem.

THE PRESIDENT is correct in saying that "everyone" must share in the sacrifices needed to combat the ever increasing cost of living.

He is wrong in his half-way approach, which does not address itself to the real problem.

Most polls these days show a majority of those contacted saying that federal spending is the major culprit in the inflation scourge.

With this knowledge, the President is missing a golden opportunity to really start cutting back in numerous areas and making longrange plans for reform in such areas as Welfare, bureaucratic red tape, which is costing business billions, and generally restoring the feeling that Washington is doing something at the root of the problem.

TO THE President's credit, he continues to avoid what many persons regard as the inevitable—mandatory wage and price controls.

Not surprisingly, a majority of the American citizens now say they favor such a program, although they have not worked in the past.

The carrot and stick approach Mr. Carter has proposed deserves a chance to work.

But, even if it succeeded within the framework envisioned, the pressure of deficit spending and bureaucratic waste would again wreck it.

'I Talk To Them Constantly'

AN EDITORIAL:

The ABCs Of Office Politics

CRACKING THE books and a top classroom performance may land a blue-chip job for a college graduate, but building a career from that point on requires a different approach.

Or so goes the theory behind a career counseling seminar which, a wire report informs, has been instituted at Northwestern University this fall.

It's entitled "Office Politics: Where Are You, Machiavelli, When We Need You Most," and the advice offered students for developing their professional careers lives up to the title. To wit:

* When it comes to getting ahead, hard work at the desk is the hard way; a drink after work with the boss can do more for you;

* Don't wait to be discovered; let the upper echelons know how good you are through memos and personal feeding of the office grapevine;

* Cultivate secretaries and clerks to find out where company bodies are buried;

* Better yet, get to know if possible a retired executive who can tell you how the present men at the top got there.

Students are advised to be realistic about advancing their careers, and that means recognizing that it is less a matter of what an individual knows and does than what the bosses think he knows and does.

It was not indicated under what traditional academic discipline the course was listed. Presumably it was not ethics.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Rhodesian Ills Deeper Than Black And White

WASHINGTON—Ian Smith and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole may not have become the toast of the town in the nation's capital but for a two-week period they have certainly been the talk of it.

The two leaders in the Rhodesian plan for internal settlement recently completed a whirlwind tour of Washington—and other U.S. cities—where they did an effective job of communicating their message to American audiences.

The forums they addressed include the National Press Club, the American Security Council, the American African Affairs Association, and numerous press conferences and receptions.

Both Rhodesian statesmen proved to be eloquent, inspirational speakers, conveying a common viewpoint rendered the more impressive because they had previously been so bitterly at odds.

THEY MADE IT plain that the internal settlement in Rhodesia commands wide-ranging support from blacks and whites alike, and that the black members of the executive council among them represent the vast majority of the Rhodesian population.

As Smith put it at the National Press Club, "this is a government which...will lead to the bringing in of our new constitution and the ultimate election of a new government on the basis of one man, one vote.

"Included in this constitution are all those ideas—such as freedom, decency, fair play, the maintenance of law and order, equality before the courts in our land irrespective of race or creed" which have been cherished by the West.

OVER AGAINST THIS transitional government, Smith and Sithole charge, are two bands of Marxist-supported terrorists, headed by Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, and known collectively as the Patriotic Front.

Mugabe is supported by Red China, Nkomo by the Soviet Union. Their troops are equipped with Soviet and other Communist weapons, and are assisted by Cuba's roving mercenaries.

They are staging an armed invasion across the country's borders, committing numerous acts of terror including the slaughter of innocent women and children, the vast majority of whom are black.

Surveying this situation, the United States and Great Britain have professed neutrality between the advocates of peaceful majority rule on the one hand and the Marxist-supported terrorists on the other, which if true would be sufficiently appalling.

BUT THE FACT of the matter is that our Rhodesian policy is actually tilted in favor of the terrorists, inasmuch as we support the United Nations and the African states which back the terrorist operations, and take part in UN economic sanctions which seek to destroy the Salisbury government.

An additional point nailed down by Smith and Sithole was that the Mugabe-Nkomo forces, contrary to media comment in this country, have repeatedly been invited to take part in the transitional government on a basis similar to that of the other participants.

The Patriotic Front has refused the offer, demanding that total permanent power be handed over to them as the price of bringing the bloodshed to a halt.

AS SMITH OBSERVED, they believe in the Maoist dictum that "political power grows out of the barrel of a gun."

Add the fact that Mugabe and Nkomo detest each other, and the ingredients for total bloody conflict in Rhodesia are complete.

"These terrorists," says Smith, "have committed such unmitigated bestiality and brutality that they have caused civilized men the world over to recoil in horror. Yet these are the men who have been given a veto power by the United States and British governments over any settlement in our country."

Sithole sums it up when he says that what is occurring in Rhodesia is "not a liberation struggle but a power struggle."

And the forces struggling for power against the transitional government are first cousins to those that have recently seized control in Angola, Mozambique and Indochina.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Weight Out Of Line

IT'S A BIT unsettling, after my militant stand against bureaucracies, to find myself on the side of a government agency. Even (mea culpa) cheering it on.

If this keeps up, I might even find a kind word for federal regulation (I'm not promising anything, though).

What set me off is the news that the Interstate Commerce Commission is poking its investigative nose into the moving business. And it's about time. Ask anybody who's changed addresses lately.

Putting yourself and your household goods into the hands of a moving company is an act of total helplessness, hopelessness, frustration and defeat. You know you're going to wind up with the short end of the stick and you know there's not a doggone thing you can do about it.

No matter how many estimates you get, no matter which company you sign on with, when the man on the other end tells you your piano, books, refrigerator and bric-a-brac add up to 20,000 pounds, how are you going to prove they don't?

After all, he's got it down there in black and white on his handy-dandy clipboard. In triplicate. What you pay depends partly on weight, and it's his scale against yours. (That mysterious scale you never get to see in action.)

Question its accuracy, complain that the "estimate" wasn't anywhere near that high, and you find out quick what real helplessness is. There's absolutely no recourse; you pay on the spot or the men shove your furniture back in the van and haul it off to storage. (For which you pay extra.)

LEGALLY, MOVING companies are allowed to collect up to 10 percent more than the quoted estimate. And if they find that's not enough, they have 15 days more to come up with additional charges.

But now, praise be, the ICC is beginning to crack down on the mysterious ways of moving companies. It has filed suit against at least three of them, charging excessive delays in pickup and delivery, overbooking practices, and downright cheating on weight totals.

It comes right out and says what a lot of us have suspected for a long time: Abuse of the consumer is a way of life for many interstate haulers, local agents, and weigh-station operators. Now, thanks to the ICC, we are getting the inside dope on things like "bumping" and "lowballing."

"Bumping" is where they rip you off by illegally fooling around with the scale or by secretly padding the load with extra weight.

FEDERAL INVESTIGATORS say their hidden cameras have actually caught movers sneaking as much as 2,000 pounds of junk metal into a van on its way to a weighing station.

"Lowballing" is where most of us get it. That, says the ICC, is the trick of deliberately underestimating a household load to get more business. I found out about this more than 20 years ago when we moved cross country on an estimate of $2,000.

Came the call from the driver that he was only a day away and to please have the cash ready upon his arrival. Old Dad, cynic that he is, said it would be "double the estimate."

I scoffed, the van pulled up, and the tab was $3,998.

That was before moving companies were limited to the 10-percent extra charge on interstate hauls.

ON STRICTLY local moves, they bill you by the hour and you can't win there, either. A year ago when we moved everything half a mile up the hill, the estimate was $600. When the empty van pulled away, I was $1,300 poorer.

Deliberate overbooking is another flagrant abuse that leaves families on the spot.

When they beat their furniture to the new address (and they almost always do) they can either check into a hotel, bunk with friends or sleep on the floor in an empty house.

The ICC says excessive delays in delivery are routine with movers who try to "hog the business," knowing they haven't enough vans or crews to meet their delivery dates. This doesn't seem to worry them overmuch.

A NEIGHBOR whose daughter has been camping out for six weeks in a distant apartment, waiting daily for her sofa, bed, pots and pans, etc., got this explanation when she called to complain:

"You're lucky, lady. We've got stuff that's been stacked up in the warehouse here since July. It's just a busy time of year."

But the ICC has been busy, too. In a recent six-week spot check of moving vans carrying 4,659 shipments in Florida, California and Arizona, it found 5,960 violations, ranging from phony weight tickets to bumping.

Next come the criminal prosecutions and proposed new rules that would hold movers to the actual price of the estimate. Then maybe we can get around to the subject of broken bedframes, scratched antiques and cracked crockery—little things like that.

ANDREW TULLY:

A Capital 'Offends'

WASHINGTON—One reader denounced this space for "embracing the policies of King George III." Like other correspondents, he bled for residents of the District of Columbia "who are subjected to taxation without representation."

All were annoyed at a column opposing the Congressional amendment that would give D.C. full voting representation in the U.S. Senate and House. The amendment is now before the 50 states for ratification.

Any response must address itself to the question posed in most of the letters: What difference will it make to the rest of the country if the amendment is ratified.

The answer is simple. It will make no difference to people who don't give a hoot how big the federal government gets.

FOR THE MAJORITY of D.C. residents are the federal government. This is a one-industry town; most of its inhabitants work for Uncle Sam.

So, the bigger that industry, the more jobs there are. And, of course, the bigger the federal government, the heavier the burden on taxpayers from Main to Hawaii.

Thus, ratification of the amendment would present the paradox of the D.C. representatives in Congress representing the interests of the federal government to the federal government.

For example, consider President Carter's efforts to establish a separate Department of Education. If the bill's sponsors needed only three votes for passage, those three votes would come from the District's two senators and one House member.

An elected official does not vote against more jobs for his constituents.

There are certainly underprivileged people in the District. But the majority—the government workers—is a privileged class.

The bureaucracy is inflation-proof thanks to annual cost-of-living adjustments in their wages. Their pension systems are astonishingly generous.

WASHINGTON IS also a rich city. Only Alaska has a higher per capita income. It is laughable when Sen. Ted Kennedy declares that the "equal representation (amendment is needed) to help the poor."

Thanks to bighearted welfare and unemployment compensation systems, the District's poor are much better of than those in most other states.

Anyway, the Constitution limits representation in Congress to "the several states." Washington is not a state, but a federal enclave. It is, therefore, more to be compared to a Congressional district.

In short, the amendment is a bummer. We need Big Brother government voting in Congress for more Big Brother government like we need cancer

JAY HARRIS:

A War Of Words...

THE OTHER DAY, we mentioned that the battle for men's minds, as well as their souls and riches, was being waged on many fronts.

This is so, in Washington, in the Kremlin, in the jungles and cities of Southern Africa, the caldron that is the Mideast.

It also is being waged in the streets and on college campuses across the land, Lubbock and Texas Tech included. And in some instances, it is being waged in sincere, and also strange, ways by the churches.

The "war of words" and emotions came to Tech and Lubbock again this week. On one hand, hardly anyone noticed. On the other, there were those who did.

IN ONE instance, a group of Iranian students again donned masks and marched to protest Air Force training of Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi at Reese AFB.

In the other, a self-styled exile from the Republic of South Africa told "the other side" of the story from that key part of the world. It is the latter with which we deal today.

Donald Woods spoke on Texas Tech's Speakers And Artists Series Tuesday. Approximately 250 persons turned out to hear him lecture on "Biko, Apartheid, And The Crisis In South Africa."

Donald Woods is the former editor of The Daily Dispatch in East London, South Africa. He was the author of a widely syndicated column and for much of his 13 years as an editor was a constant critic of the ruling regime in the RSA. He eventually was banned—put under virtual house arrest—and later fled with his family to the U.S.

TODAY, WOODS, who has authored a book on Steve Biko, the black activist who died in a South African jail, is traveling across the country, relating his views of his homeland and urging all but outright revolt within the RSA as well as widespread protest in the U.S.

His theme is a simple one. He wants the U.S. government and Western world to impose stiff economic sanctions against the white regime in South Africa. He wants all multinational companies to shut down in South Africa and all colleges and others holding stock in such firms to divest themselves of such interests in an effort to topple the white government.

The former East London editor paints a grim picture of things to come—increasing unrest and a bloody racial war pitting the nation's 23 million blacks against the RSA's five million whites within four years, unless the West steps in on the side of the blacks to avert it.

This can be done, he argues, by the U.S. "leaning on" the white regime to turn over South Africa in the near future to the black majority.

MR. WOODS is poised, persuasive, urbane and articulate. He paints a dark picture of the past and holds little hope for the future.

We sat in on his discourse, often amazed at some of his slanted viewpoints and solutions to one of the world's most complex Gordian Knots.

Finally, near the end of his question and answer session, after being drawn into the comments, we were given time for rebuttal.

This newspaper's views on U.S. policy in this key area of the world are well documented. They did not come from hearsay, but from three extensive, in-depth trips we made to South Africa, to other parts of the continent, to the Mideast and much of Europe in the past three years.

In more than 280,000 miles of travel in that period, we have been privileged to talk with those in the highest echelons of government, the man in the street, the Bantus or native blacks. The problem is not one so simple that it can be solved by closing the factories of South Africa—which won't happen anyway—nor by students marching in the streets of America.

THE KEY FALLACY in Donald Woods' presentation was his naive assessment of the role of Communism in South Africa, indeed all of the huge continent.

That, plus his ignoring the hypocrisy and obvious domestic politics of the whole thing by Amb. Andrew Young and President Carter.

While noting the vast riches of the huge land, its millions of people, its gold and diamonds and its vital minerals, such as chrome, which the West must have to survive, he passes off Russian and Cuban involvement as one of helping the racially put-upon, a sort of magnanimous gesture of aid refused by the U.S. as it were.

What hogwash! Almost 50,000 Cuban soldiers have been transported some 8,000 miles by Moscow to a land where they had no interest other than conquest, hired guns for a Red Cause.

And in those many nations where black rulers have taken over, usually at the butt of a gun, the economy, education and human rights have suffered beyond belief. In brief, one-man, one-vote, one party, one dictator and one hell of a mess!

TO BE FRANK, we disagree with the contention that the whites in South Africa are obligated in any form or fashion to turn over their government to anyone. To paraphrase a familiar theme, they built it, they paid for it and it's theirs.

Certainly, changes are in order in this beautiful land—broader education for the blacks at all levels, and it is taking place every day, a move toward more equal pay, and it is being brought about on a broad scale, a greater voice for urban blacks in the RSA itself.

But, to argue that the U.S. should nakedly interfere in the affairs of this powerful and independent industrial nation—which would fight Communism to the death—is idiocy at the highest level.

As for Mr. Woods' lecture, he was entitled to his opinion for which he was well paid. But, in such instances, we think Tech and other colleges should make it possible for both sides of a question to be presented.

We would hope educated persons would want to hear both sides of the issue. Some don't, of course. But, hopes for a better world must come through brotherhood and dialogue, not through violence or taking to the streets.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

IT'S BELIEVED that the ancient sailors were inspired to spin yarns about beautiful mermaids after sighting that sea animal known as the manatee. Said sailors must have been out to sea for a long time.

An uglier critter than the manatee would be hard to envision. Its sunken eyes, bristly mustache and blubbery upper lip are revolting turnoffs in themselves. And its seven-foot waist measurement is none too enticing, either.

Former Mill Employee Found Guilty Of Attempted Murder

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Former mill employee Jones Weldon Daniels Thursday was found guilty of attempted murder as the result of a shooting spree inside the Plains Co-op Oil Mill July 17.

It took jurors in Judge Denzil Bevers' 72nd District Court approximately three hours and 15 minutes to decide that the thin, 38-year-old defendant had tried to kill assistant office manager Glenn Barbee.

The silver-haired Barbee, 48, had earlier during the trial made a positive identification of Daniels as the man who walked into mill offices at 2901 Ave. A, leveled a pistol at him and began firing.

Barbee said he was shot in the back as he crouched beneath his desk.

The same nine-man, three-woman panel which declared Daniels guilty was expected to assess his punishment today following arguments from attorneys.

In finding Daniels guilty, jurors rejected an alibi account offered by the defendant and two other defense witnesses.

Daniels had taken the witness stand earlier Thursday to say he had no idea why Barbee had accused him of the crime.

The defendant said he had gone to a cafe at 15th Street and Avenue C about 7:30 or 7:45 a.m. the day Barbee was shot. He said he stayed at that location until approximately 10:30 p.m., except for a 30-minute interval around 1 p.m.

The shooting reportedly occurred around 10 a.m.

Daniels stated he had quit work at the mill in late June because of job dissatisfaction, but denied he bore any animosity toward Barbee.

"Why would he (Barbee) lie?" Asst. Dist. Atty. Jim Darnell asked on cross-examination.

"I don't know—I have no idea," Daniels replied.

In addition to the defendant's testimony, witnesses James Brigham and Samuel Myrtledove both said they were at the cafe with Daniels July 17.

Myrtledove said he saw Daniels at the cafe about 7:30 p.m. and remembered that the defendant remained there until late that night.

Brigham indicated Daniels was at the cafe when he arrived there about 10 a.m.

Both witnesses said they remembered the day because a patron had been arrested inside the cafe by police.

The defense also elicited testimony from a deputy, who, referring to jail records, confirmed the customer in question had been arrested and jailed July 17.

Barbee had testified that he knew Daniels and recognized him instantly upon seeing him inside the mill office.

"Is there any doubt in your mind who shot you that day?" Darnell had queried the complainant. "There never has been any doubt," Barbee had answered.

In final argument, defense attorney Don Curry argued that the testimony of the two defense witnesses who said they saw Daniels at the cafe at the time Barbee was shot had to raise a serious doubt about the defendant's guilt.

"I don't believe they would risk a perjury charge by coming here and testifying for an acquaintance," Curry stated.

Curry also noted that, at a direct question, Barbee had indicated the gunman was fairly clean shaven.

Russian Catholicism Lingers Despite Harassment

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — They are few and fervent, but some Russian Roman Catholics, who practice their religion in defiance of the state, view the election of Pope John Paul II as a mixed blessing.

While proud that a fellow Soviet bloc churchman made it to the top of the Roman Catholic Church, several Catholics here expressed worry his ascension might trigger a new crackdown on their religion if the Kremlin believes it will lead to a rebirth of faith.

There has been no indication that any such campaign is planned, but the election of the Polis cardinal has focused international attention on Catholics behind the Iron Curtain.

As one elderly Catholic said, "Vatican City seems closer to me now than ever before."

But it is too early to tell whether the new pope can help reduce the fear most Russian Catholics have about openly practicing their religion or inducing nonbelievers to join.

In this officially atheist country where the constitution guarantees "freedom of religious worship," Soviet authorities say only 10 to 15 percent of the population believes in God.

"We have children growing up today with no understanding whatsoever of religion," said Father Polivinius, 64, of Our Lady of Lourdes Cathedral, this city's only Catholic church.

Once a stronghold of Catholicism before the 1917 Bolshevik revolution, Leningrad once had 13 Catholic churches and about 30,000 followers in this traditionally Russian Orthodox nation. Now, the priest estimates, about 5,000 dare to call themselves Catholics, and of these, "we have many that don't practice."

Catholicism is strongest in the Baltic republics, particularly in Lithuania, with some followers in Latvia, the Ukraine and Byelorussia. Western estimates put the total number of Catholics in Russia at four million, out of a population of 250 million.

The problem is not that people are "losing their faith," the Catholic sources say, but that younger people are taught to disdain the rituals and teachings of Catholicism as "anti-Soviet" and to reject any religious heritage.

An elderly woman who had just attended Mass at the Catholic church here said religion is splitting up her family.

"My son, he won't step into this house of God with me," she said. "I plead with him every Sunday, but he won't listen."

She said her son asks "blasphemous" questions, such as, "if there is only one God, why are there so many religions?"

As part of the government's anti-religion campaign, young people are taught in schools that religion played a reactionary role in the history of society. Children are taught that church leaders intentionally kept the masses poor and illiterate to maintain power over them.

The message reaches the general public through many museums on the history of religion and atheism. The oldest of these is in Leningrad, in the former Kazan Cathedral.

Just a few blocks from Father Polivinius' church, about 500 to 600 visitors daily see torture tableaus depicting the Spanish Inquisition and instruments of death used in the crusades.

"We just want to show what the truth is," said a young female museum guide. "When you know the truth about religion, then you know why we are atheists."

The Committee on Affairs of Religion under the Soviet Council of Ministers regulates the Roman Catholic Church in the Soviet Union and maintains authority over the country's several bishops.

"They run the show," a Catholic source said. "They have their hand in whatever the church may do."

In an example of just how pervasive the government's control is, Our Lady of Lourdes Cathedral has a triple-locked metal collection box near its doorway. All proceeds go to the state.

Communist Party members are required to renounce religious ties, and many Catholics say they are harassed at work or denied jobs because of their beliefs.

Sunshine, Warm Weather Expected

Sunny skies and warmer temperatures will reign across the area today as a high pressure ridge settled on the South Plains Thursday night.

The mercury will climb to the upper 60s for today's high, with readings expected to drop to the mid-40s by tonight. Temperatures will be even warmer Saturday with the high expected to reach the low 70s.

Winds will be southwesterly today at 10 to 15 mph.

Thunderstorms broke out and then faded in South Texas Thursday as a cold front crept toward the coast.

The cold mass of air left clear skies and cooler temperatures behind it.

Temperatures Thursday afternoon were in the 50s in the southern Panhandle and southwest Texas and in the 60s and 70s over the greater portion of the Lone Star State.

The forecast today is calling for fair skies and mild temperatures across North and West Texas, with decreasing cloudiness over the southern portion.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

Luke 4:1-14, The Living Bible

And Jesus, full of the Holy Spirit, now left the Jordan River and was urged by the Spirit out into the barren wastelands of Judea, where Satan tempted Him for 40 days. He ate nothing all that time, and was very hungry.

3 Satan said, "If you are God's Son, tell this stone to become a loaf of bread."

4 But Jesus replied, "It is written in the Scriptures, 'Other things in life are more important than bread!'"

5 Then Satan took Him to a place where he revealed to Jesus all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

6, 7 And the Devil told Him, "I will give You all these splendid kingdoms and their glory — for they are mine to give to anyone I wish — if You will only get down on Your knees before me and worship me."

8 Jesus replied, "We must worship God, and Him alone. So it is written in the Scriptures."

9, 10 Then Satan took Him to Jerusalem to a high roof of the Temple and said, "If You are the Son of God, jump off! For the Scriptures say that God will send His angels to guard You

11 And to keep You from crashing to the pavement below!"

12 Jesus replied, "The Scriptures also say, 'Don't experiment with God's patience!'"

13 When the Devil had ended all the temptations, he left Jesus for a while and went away.

Kent Hance.

When Kent Hance began work in the Texas Senate, he did not sit on the sidelines like most freshman Senators. He sponsored Legislation to remove a State Supreme Court Judge from office following his indictment for perjury. He led the fight in the Senate trial to impeach a District Judge from Duval County for misconduct in office. This was the first such trial in more than 30 years, and was the first major effort to clean up corruption in Duval County. He sponsored measures to remove the Senate's top employee for questionable conduct.

Wherever Kent Hance found waste in government, he acted. He sponsored and passed into law "sunset legislation" that abolishes state agencies on a periodic basis unless they are re-established by the Legislature. This helps to keep agencies from getting out of hand, and to eliminate those that are no longer needed. He made welfare fraud or food stamp fraud a felony in Texas.

In his four-year term, Kent Hance never missed a day in the Senate's five sessions, regular and special. In four of those five sessions he didn't miss a vote. In the fifth, he had a 96% voting record.

In Congress, Kent Hance will continue this kind of representation where it is needed most . . . at the Federal level. Kent Hance has proved that when he sees evidence of corruption, waste or inefficiency in government he does not look the other way . . . HE ACTS. West Texas needs Kent Hance in Congress.

Let's make sure the man we send to Congress is the man with qualifications we can measure–and count on . . . !

Authorized by the Kent Hance for Congress Committee, Mike Higgins, Treasurer.

Pope Proposes Lebanon Visit To End Bloodshed

RELUCTANT PARTICIPANT — Pope John Paul II holds an unidentified boy during the general audience in Vatican City Wednesday. The boy shrieked but seconds later smiled. It was John Paul II's first general audience. (AP Laserphoto)

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II told Lebanese bishops Thursday he would be willing to visit Lebanon if it would help end the bloodshed in their country.

"The pope's visit to Lebanon could take place after very careful preparations," Antoine Pierre Khoraiche, Antioch patriarch for the Lebanese Maronite Christians, told reporters after the papal audience.

John Paul received the patriarch and three other Maronite bishops in what Vatican officials described as an "unusually long" audience that underscored Vatican concern for Lebanon, which has been devastated by sectarian warfare.

Earlier, in his first working meeting with a foreign head of state, the new pontiff and President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France discusssed what the French leader called "burning world issues," including prospects for peace in "a unified Lebanon."

About 37,000 persons were killed in the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war that pitted leftist Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas against Christian militias. A Syrian-dominated Arab League peacekeeping force went to Lebanon 23 months ago to police the cease-fire that ended the war and saved the Christians. But right-wing Christian militias protested Syrian peacekeeping curbs in Christian enclaves, precipitating intermittent fighting that has claimed more than 1,500 lives since July 1.

John Paul, clad in white papal robes and white skull cap, received Giscard d'Estaing in the pontiff's private library for 45 minutes and the pope gave top priority to Lebanon in their discussions.

"I was deeply moved by the beaming personality of John Paul II," said Giscard d'Estaing, a Roman Catholic. "We also discussed and agreed on the universality of the faith and that each person is free to accede to the spirituality of his own faith."

France, a former colonial ruler of Lebanon, has been playing a role in trying to bring peace to the Mideast country. The pontiff's predecessor, John Paul I, reportedly had planned a trip to Lebanon in an attempt to bring peace. After his death in September, cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church issued several urgent pleas for a halt to the fighting.

Lebanon's population of three million includes 424,000 Maronite Christians, who were unified with the Roman Catholic Church in the 12th century.

The French president, on a brief trip to Rome, told a news conference before returning home that "France's position is that when peace is broken it must be re-established, and when it is re-established it must be maintained."

He said France wants Lebanese authorities to take more responsibility in solving their own problems and that he fully supports efforts by Lebanese President Elias Sarkis to end the fighting. Sarkis has promised a "national reconciliation" program aimed at restoring order and bringing peace to his country.

The French president said he and the pope discussed "the necessity to re-establish a dialogue between Christians and Moslems. I hope a political and spiritual influence exert themselves in the next few weeks."

Pope John Paul also met with his countryman, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, the primate of Poland. The Vatican gave no details of their talks.

Monolith To Honor State Senator

PARIS (AP) — A monolith honoring retiring State Sen. A.M. Aikin was unveiled Thursday during ceremonies at Paris Junior College.

Aikin, the retiring dean of the State Senate, is a graduate of Paris Junior College and is well-known in educational circles for his leadership in legislation relating to education.

"In honoring the senator, we are not only paying tribute to his past service...but endorsing the preservation of his ideas as a guide to the type of state, nation and world that we would like to live in and see preserved," said Dr. Harold E. Hunt, Paris Junior College Board of Regents president.

Thursday afternoon, Gov. Dolph Briscoe was to formally dedicate the Mike Rheudasil Learning Center and the A.M. and Welma Aikin Regional Archives complex.

Judge Keeps Boy's Case In Adult Court

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge on Thursday swept aside defense objections that would have taken the case of a 13-year-old Bronx boy accused of murder out of the adult court where the case is to be tried under the state's new juvenile crime statute.

Justice Louis Cioffi of the state Supreme Court ruled that Robert Davis can be tried for the robbery and murder of John Hernandez, 19, even though Davis is not accused of actually pulling the trigger of the gun that killed Hernandez last month in a Bronx subway station.

Davis is the first juvenile charged under the new law.

Two other youths sought in the crime have not yet been apprehended.

The defense had argued that, unlike adults, juveniles can not be charged with murder in the commission of a felony unless they actually pull the trigger. But Cioffi said the law passed by the legislature "in its full import and intent and capacity" was meant to deal with juveniles as adults.

Gunman Opens Fire In City Restaurant

Police say a man, apparently with robbery on his mind, opened fire on a pizza parlor about 12:25 a.m. Thursday, prompting the restaurant's six "very frightened" employees to take refuge in a walk-in freezer.

The 18-year-old suspect, was taken into custody when police arrived at the Pizza Hut, 3525 34th St., and saw the armed man standing next to the cash register.

After apprehending the gunman, later identified as an employee of a local liquor store, officers found the Pizza Hut employees huddled inside the freezer.

According to reports, restaurant workers Rebecca White, Patricia White and Nancy Tuttle were standing behind the counter when a blast of gunfire shattered a northwest window and struck a wall near the employees.

Police were told all the employees ducked down and headed for the freezer, but not before assistant manager Robert A. White called police. Officer James L. Gill, the first to arrive at the scene, said he heard a gunshot when he drove up and saw the suspect with a shotgun standing next to the register.

Gill said he pointed his gun at the man and told him to climb out the shattered window through which the suspect apparently gained entry.

White said after he and his employees heard a second shot, they locked themselves inside the freezer. White emerged several minutes later but ran back in after being confronted by the suspect. The gunman allegedly chased White and attempted to get inside the storage room, but failed.

The man reportedly fired a total of six shots from inside and outside the restaurant. He was taken to Methodist Hospital for treatment of a cut on the hand and then transported to the county jail.

Reynaldo Mendoza told officers that three teen-aged Mexican-American youths beat him, and that one of the boys threatened to cut him with a knife, Thursday afternoon.

The 15-year-old Alderson Junior High School student said the trio accosted him about 1 p.m. in the 1800-block of Parkway Drive.

Mendoza said the youths stopped their attack, however, when a passing motorist stopped and drove Mendoza from the scene.

In recently reported burglaries, Bene Prado said whoever pried the back door of his 2824 Fordham St. residence Thursday took a $1,000 console color television.

Josie C. Sulaica said that while she and her family left their 2808 Emory St. home unattended last week while repairs were being made to the house, someone took $530 worth of goods, including shoes, a movie camera and two rings.

Jim Clopton, owner of a gas station at 2920 4th St., said someone kicked in a window in the overhead door at the station and took $319 worth of tools, $20 worth of anti-freeze and $27 in cash from the firm's register.

Verna Avery said she went to her cafe at 9 a.m. Thursday and discovered that someone had entered the 310 17th St. business overnight. Mrs. Avery said $400 worth of goods, including food and an undetermined amount of cash, were missing from the cafe.

In another assault, Robert Gibson of 312 E. 34th St., No. 10, said he was walking out of an Avenue A bar about 1:45 a.m. Thursday when he was attacked by three men and two women.

Reports indicate the men held Gibson down while the women hit him with a shoe and bottle. The suspects were described as three white men, a white woman and a Mexican-American woman.

Gibson was taken to St. Mary's Hospital where he was treated for minor injuries.

Eva Jewell Robison of 1208 36th St. said his house was struck by burglars between 7:15 p.m. and 10:10 p.m. Wednesday and $1,030 in property carried off, including jewelry, household goods and a television set.

City Police Arrest Man Accused Of Raping Girl

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Police Thursday were investigating two reported rapes — one of them an attack on an 11-year-old girl on her way to school.

Officers said the schoolgirl's attacker was arrested when he was caught in the act of raping her. However, a suspect in the second incident, an attack on a housewife, was still being sought late Thursday.

Ten minutes after the 7 a.m. assault on the schoolgirl, police were dispatched to a residential area where a 23-year-old housewife reportedly had been raped. Both victims were taken to Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Officer James Howard arrived at Iles Elementary School, 2401 Date Ave., where he met a 7-year-old girl who said her sister had been grabbed by a man and dragged to a nearby park.

The girl led Howard and a teacher to Washington Park at E. 22nd Street and Cedar, where the officer turned on a spotlight.

Reports show the suspect jumped up and fled and the officer chased down and nabbed the suspect while the teacher went after the child. But the girl ran to the school, where she was taken to the principal's office.

"The officer got out of the car and I went to get the little girl," the teacher said. "(The victim) ran all the way to school; she didn't wait for me to come and get her. I guess she was scared and that was the only thing that she knew to do," the teacher added.

Asked about the girl's condition when she was at the principal's office, the teacher said, "She was shaking very hard and appeared to be very scared.

"The officer asked her what happened and she said the man had raped her." Howard also asked the student whether the suspect had hurt her and she said "no."

The suspect was taken to the county jail.

The 7-year-old told Howard she and her sister were walking to school when the man approached, grabbed her sister and dragged her to the park.

"When I saw the man in the park, he was wearing something that looked like overalls that were undone, and he did appear to be trying to pull his clothing up," the teacher said.

The witness added that after the black man was apprehended he repeatedly said, "I didn't hurt the little girl," and "I didn't do anything to her."

At 7:10 a.m. officers went to a residence where a 23-year-old woman said she had been raped by a knife-wielding black man between 20-and 30-years-old, of medium height and a heavy build.

The woman said her husband had just left for work when she heard a noise outside and went to lock the front door. But when she reached the entrance, the suspect pushed open the door.

Police were told the housewife ran into the kitchen, where the man caught her and forced her to the floor.

After the assault, the man fled on foot. The woman's 3-year-old son slept on a couch in the living room during the entire attack, according to police.

Club Sets Annual 'Punk'in Bust'in'

Punk'in bust'in, marshmallow roastin' and country music will highlight the third Annual West Texas Sagebrush Burn'in and Punk'in Bust'in Sunday from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. at the Red Raider Club, 6025 Ave. A

A $3 donation is required for admission.

In addition to the bustin' and roastin' and toastin', area bands will provide music. Those bands scheduled include Larry Trider, South Plains Blue Grass, Maines Brothers, Dovey Quilter, Mel Way, Bobby Allbright, Outlaw Express, Free Whiskey, Country Company, Larry Kinney and Vintage Wine.

Smashing specially-made guitars and banjos on pumpkins seems like an appropriate autumn rite, but where does the sagebrush burn'in come in?

According to Gayle L. Bush, event organizer, the burn'in began as a benefit to replace bandmembers' instruments destroyed in a fire at the Golden Spread Club (now the Red Raider Club). The benefit was so successful (approximately 400 people attended) that plans were made to stage an annual event.

Proceeds from last year's show went toward the purchase of a sign for Boys Ranch. This year's profits will go to the new Girls Ranch located north of Lubbock.

Tickets may be purchased for $3 at the Red Raider Club, or reservations may be made by calling 795-6400 or phone pager 765-1251.

Power Plant Engine House Bid Accepted

TULIA (Special) — The City Council here accepted Tuesday the bid of Nelray Construction of Lubbock to build a new engine house at Tulia Power Plant.

The Nelray bid was $52,375, which was $3,725 less than the P&B Contractors of Goodland, Kan., bid of $56,100.

The council accepted also the $4,621 bid of John Wilkerson Ford for a new pickup for the city. The price includes trade-in value of a 1972 pickup.

Other bids submitted were $4,741.72 by Howard Wright Chevrolet and $4,840.65 by Earl Cosby Motor Co.

Councilmen discussed the annexation the building of Interstate Highway 27 could cause and decided to meet jointly Nov. 14 with the planning and zoning committee for further discussion.

John Gayle, city manager, said he received notification that Tulia and Swisher County were awarded $36,000 by the Texas Aeronautics Commission for the construction of a new runway, purchase of land for Tulia Airport, and other improvements.

All new trash containers will be out and in use by Nov. 10, Gayle said. City trucks are picking up containers and plastic bags at this time.

'Two-Year-Old Brightens Up Nursing Home

RIDLEY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Every Wednesday morning Stephen Chapman visits his grandmothers, all 48 of them, whom he calls his "mom moms."

Stephen, who turns 2 Friday, has been a "surrogate grandchild" to the women of a Ridley Park nursing home since he was just 3 months old.

Florence Mulvaney, activities director at the Conner-Williams Nursing Home, said Stephen "gets through to even our most senile patients."

"Stephen and Santa Claus, that's who they will smile for," she said.

Several years ago, Mrs. Mulvaney began looking for parents who were willing to share their babies with the residents of the nursing home for a little while each week.

Maureen and Larry Chapman of nearby Sharon Hill heard about the search through their church. They talked it over, met with Mrs. Mulvaney and decided to give it a try.

"All my ladies remember the happy times they had when their own children and grandchildren were babies and they love to talk to one another about it," Mrs. Mulvaney said. "The effect of Stephen's visits lasts a long time after he has gone home."

When Stephen arrives at the nursing home, he is greeted with hugs and kisses.

Often he will join one of his "grandmothers" at the piano and bang away on the keys. Or, he will dig into his toys and offer a picture of an alligator which he tore out of a magazine.

"I'm lost if he doesn't come to visit," Mrs. Reba Ryan said. "I just love him so.

"He is our surrogate grandchild," she said, "and the light of our lives. Really he is like a crown prince."

Like grandmothers everywhere, the women love to brag about Stephen.

"He's wonderful," Anna Shapiro said. "A marvelous child. I wish he was mine."

Slaton Residents Hurt In Collision

A two-vehicle accident near Woodrow about 8 a.m. Thursday sent two Slaton residents to Methodist Hospital, including a 13-year-old girl who was listed in critical condition Thursday night.

Lana Meurer was injured when the car in which she was traveling collided with a pickup truck at U.S. 87 and County Road 76. Her 16-year-old brother, Mark Allen, who was driving, was listed in satisfactory condition in Methodist.

The driver of the truck, Willis Landers, 30, and a passenger, Billy Williams, 33, both of Lubbock, were not seriously injured.

Meurer was westbound on 76 and Landers was traveling south on 87 when the two vehicle collided, according to the Department of Public Safety.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Tough Competitor Takes Helm

NEW YORK (AP) — "I am competitive," says Charles L. Brown.

That's a personality trait that's going to come in handy for Brown, who moves from the presidency to the chairmanship of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. on Feb. 1.

Brown, 57, will take over the $36 billion utility — the world's largest — at a time when the Bell System's virtual monopoly over the nation's telecommunications business is facing its most serious challenge.

Regulatory and court decisions are opening up AT&T's formerly private domain to many other companies who are all too happy to step in. Where the phone company once competed with a handfull of small companies selling telephones and switchboards, it's now facing competition from electronics giants at home and abroad.

Other companies are now able to produce equipment that can plug into AT&T circuits, something unheard of a few years ago. And businesses needing long-distance lines to transmit data between computers and for other applications now have their choice of companies.

Although AT&T isn't yet looking over its shoulder — it does have more than 130 million telephones and the volume of business rose 10.7 percent in the third quarter — it is facing a different situation. It now has to convince companies to buy its services.

"There's very little doubt that the Bell System is in a posture where it can meet change with change," Brown said. "We've decided we're going to be as good from a marketing standpoint as we've been from a technical standpoint. And when we decide a thing like that we usually get it done."

While AT&T is being forced to adapt to a new environment, industry experts don't expect the company to have serious difficulty meeting the challenge.

"It's a whole new ballgame," said Daniel L. Tulis, a utilities analyst at Loeb Rhoades, Hornblower & Co. But he added that "the company is positioned, in terms of growth of competition, in a very good way."

Part of that favorable position comes from a restructuring of the company's management that changed its emphasis from service to marketing. The reshuffle streamlined the company's bureaucracy to sharpen concentration on each of the company's main types of service — residential, business and long-distance lines.

Brown was instrumental in that reorganization, something that probably gave him an edge over the two other candidates sources say he beat out for the chairman's job.

One of Brown's biggest challenges will come early next decade, when a Justice Department antitrust suit against AT&T comes to trial. The govenment wants to break up the company to further competition, similar to what was done to monolithic Standard Oil earlier in the century.

"We fully expect to win the case on its merits," Brown said. But he complains that the Justice Department hasn't yet spelled out just what it wants. "They're throwing the kitchen sink back at us all the way back to when the telephone was invented," he said.

Part of the antitrust case would require AT&T to sell its enormous manufacturing arm, Western Electric. "The case for the divestiture of Western Electric is so weak, I can't understand why it keeps coming up," Brown said. "If the object is to supply high-quality, low-cost telephone service to serve the American people, divorcing the manufacturer doesn't make any sense."

But the company's competitors charge that substantially deregulating telecommunications service — as has been proposed in the Congressional rewrite of the Communications Act of 1934 — while leaving AT&T intact would be like letting a hungry shark into a tank full of minnows.

"They're not minnows," protests Brown. "They're companies like RCA, Litton, and the Japanese and Canadian electronics companies."

But Brown is so confident about emerging victorious in the antitrust case and other efforts to break up the company that he doesn't place them at the top of his list of worries. "I think the largest problem is to untangle the ground-rule problem in Washington," he said.

Facilities and Coronado High and nearby Smylie Wilson Junior High will be used for the regional tournament. Competition beginsthis afternoon and will conclude Saturday night. A dance for contestants is scheduled tonight.

Judges will include local teachers, Texas Tech University debate students, Coronado alumni, parents and members of the League of Women Voters.

ARSON PLAGUES COMPLEX

MONROE, Mich. (AP) — At least 23 persons were injured, some of whom jumped from third-floor windows, in a fire at an arson-plagued apartment complex, authorities said. Two were hospitalized in serious condition with broken backs.

Q. Before my dad died, about 20 years ago, he told me to start a steady investment plan in order to have some additional income when I reach 65. I started a plan in a mutual fund, in the beginning with some hardship. It's now worth $25,000 and still growing. I am 65 now, still working and don't need extra income yet.

Along came a very pleasant fellow, a broker, who tells me my father's idea was good 20 years ago but that I should have made a change a long time ago. He wants me to put $20,000 into "discount bonds," which he says yield 8 to 9 percent. Your advice, please.

A. Even though that broker might put you into some bonds that would produce much higher yields than the mutual fund whose shares you now hold, I would caution against making a sudden, big switch in your investments.

Your mutual fund has not been a particularly great investment performer over the years. But, at least it got you into the steady investing habit. And you stayed with it. If you hadn't, you would probably be like all too many people with no investment nest egg to fall back on as retirement time approaches.

When you retire, however, you should move into higher-yielding investments. I would suggest either bonds, savings certificates or an income mutual fund. You have to face facts. Your fund is not a big income producer.

Q. I have a stock that the brokers never mention and I can't understand why. This stock has split every year. In three years, I have made around $12,000. Why don't these financial wizards ever let their clients in on the goodies?

A. I suspect you would like to see the name of that stock in print, in this column and elsewhere, often, so that it would be tabbed as a "glamour stock" and run even further up in market price. That trap I'm not about to get caught in.

There are tens of thousands of different stocks on the market. Assuming yours is as good as you say, the research departments of brokerage houses will "discover" it sooner or later and start recommending it. They don't keep "goodies" secret. They keep trying to come up with winners to keep their clients happy. Didn't your brokerage house find that one for you?

Q. I have quite a number of municipal bonds, the interest not being subject to federal income tax. How many municipal bonds should a person hold in order to avoid a 50 percent income tax?

A. That depends on the person's income, especially his or her taxable income. Because there is no federal income tax, nor, in most states, any state income tax on the interest paid on municipal bonds issued in the state, municipal bonds do provide a big "keeping money" advantage for people with relatively high incomes.

But there's no formula for avoiding a 50 percent income tax bite by investing in municipals. The closest thing I know of is the sound theory that people should not invest in municipals unless they are in at least the 32 percent federal tax bracket.

Q. I have been reinvesting all dividends from the stocks I own to buy more shares through dividend reinvestment programs. Would it be better to use this money to buy municipal bonds?

A. Again, that depends on the tax bracket you happen to be in. If you're in a very high tax bracket, the answer is yes. Otherwise, it's no.

But, because I'm such a firm believer in dividend reinvestment plans, I hate to see anyone pass up the opportunity to reinvest dividends and build their investments.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Stenholm Blames Inflation On Deficit Spending

By ESTHER LONGORIA
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Congressional candidate Charles Stenholm Thursday said that the widest separation of thought between his opponent and him is in how the federal budget should be balanced.

"I believe federal spending should be cut first rather than taxes," the Stamford Democrat said during an interview with the Avalanche-Journal. "Deficit spending is the primary cause of inflation, and to reduce taxes without first cutting spending (almost certainly) provides that the federal deficit will increase and inflation go up."

Stenholm and Republican Bill Fisher, 34-year-old Abilene attorney and former Taylor County GOP chairman, are vying for the 17th District seat being vacated this year by Omar Burleson.

The 39-year-old Jones County farmer pointed out that Fisher has endorsed the Kemp-Roth bill approach to balancing the federal budget, which calls for a reduction of taxes by one-third in three years.

"The bill says that with a reduction in taxes there'll be an increase in economic activity which will in turn produce more taxes and balance the budget," Stenholm said, adding that he thought cutting taxes without cutting spending is taking "too great a risk" to balance the budget.

He says he would cut federal spending within the government regulatory agencies like the EPA and OSHA "which are costing every business so many dollars of non-productive costs" and in the social welfare area.

He said, according to his calculations, that the total amount of dollars being spent on social welfare activities divided among the 25 million persons who are in need of federal assistance would equal $8,000 per person, or $32,000 for a family of four.

"But I would suggest that there is no truly needy family in Lubbock that is receiving close to $32,000 a year. The bureaucracy is consuming the biggest percentage and not helping those who need it. But it's costing the taxpayer nevertheless."

Stenholm called President Carter's recently announced anti-inflation program "one small step in the right direction."

"I was disappointed that it didn't address the deficit question more because I just can't get too excited about the $30 billion deficit projected for 1980 if the program succeeds," he said.

Although Stenholm said he doesn't have a great deal of faith in voluntary wage controls because of previous similar efforts, he still hopes they'll work.

"We have the program, so let's give it a chance," he said. "Inflation is just too serious a problem not to give it our fullest attention and support."

Stenholm feels that his agricultural background in the sprawling, rural, 30,000-square-mile district will aid him in the election.

Concerning the American Agriculture Movement, Stenholm said the protest achieved its goal of bringing the farmers' problems to the public's attention.

"I think any more tractorcades, such as those planned for January, will only be counter-productive. I don't see anything helpful to be gained by this type of activity.

"The leaders of the movement now have the responsibility to come up with a program that will be supported by the majority of farmers, and I hope to be in Congress in January to meet with them to construct a program to allow the farmer to get a fair price," he said.

Stenholm Monday will be stumping through much of the far western edge of the district. The bus caravan of Stenholm supporters will begin at 6:30 a.m. in Stamford.

The district encompasses much of North Central Texas, including Floyd, Crosby, Lynn, Garza, Kent, Borden, Scurry, Howard and Mitchell counties and the southeast corner of Dawson County.

Third World Cities Face Strangulation

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Mexico City — with 32 million people — will be the world's largest city within 22 years, the International Labor Organization predicts.

And like other cities in the Third World it faces the threat of urban strangulation, the ILO said.

By the year 2000, the agency said, Sao Paulo, Brazil, will have 26 million people. Bogota, Colombia; Manila, Philippines; Karachi, Pakistan; and Jakarta, Indonesia, will triple in size and Kinshasa, Zaire, and Lagos, Nigeria, will quadruple, all of them reaching around nine million people.

The ILO said such "Third World metropolises will be increasingly threatened with urban strangulation due to inadequate road networks, inextricable traffic jams, flooding and other shortcomings."

Seagoing mammals can function under water without breathing for up to 30 minutes.

UFO Mystery Search Called Off

MELBOURNE (UPI) — The ground, air and sea search for a pilot who vanished after radioing his small plane was being pursued by an unidentified flying object has been called off by authorities.

A Federal Transport Department spokesman said eight civil aircraft and an air force reconnaissance Orion plane had searched 1,000 square miles of ocean without success for Frederick Valentich, 20, and his Cessna 182.

It now will be up to ships and planes crossing Bass Strait between Victoria and the island of Tasmania to spot the wreckage, if it exists.

Valentich was flying the single-engined plane from Melbourne's suburban Moorabbin airport to King Island, 130 miles south of Melbourne, when he told air traffic controllers he was being followed by a strange craft.

Valentich's flight recording, held by the Transport Department, will be reproduced to include, as a spokesman said: "Every hiss, crackle and metallic noise" recorded in the 53 minutes from the time Valentich took off from Moorabbin until he reported what he said was interference from an "unindentified object."

At one point Valentich said: "It's not an aircraft...it's..."; then the transmission broke off. The mystery has revived reports of UFO sightings in eastern Victoria and southern New South wales by vacationers and residents of King Island, a lobster fishing and mining community halfway across Bass strait between Australia and Tasmania.

Residents of King Island have reported strange sightings of bright and trailing lights over the past six weeks.

Female Climbers Die In Annapurna Bid

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Two members of a 10-woman American expedition have been killed in a climbing accident on the 26,545-foot Annapurna main peak, officials said Thursday.

The Ministry of Tourism said it had no further details of the deaths thst occurred more than a week ago. But a spokswoman for the group in San Francisco, kickoff point for the expedition, identified the dead women as Vera Watson, 46, of Stanford, Calif., and Alison Chadwick-Onyszkiewicz, 36, of Leeds, England.

Spokeswoman Lorraine Rorke said all the women "had a great depth of experience in climbing."

"All we know is that they died in a climbing accident. There has been no further explanation."

Colin Miller, another spokesman in San Francisco, said the deaths occurred Oct. 17, two days after two other members of the expedition reached the summit. He said it took several days for news of the tragedy to come from the expedition's base camp at 13,000 feet.

The deaths were confirmed Tuesday in a phone call from Christy Tews, base camp manager for the expedition, to John McCarthy, Ms. Watson's husband.

Miller said the rest of the expedition was now down from the mountain but he did not know where they were. Miss Tews was expected to return to San Francisco Thursday.

Officials said a helicopter was sent to the camp 100 miles northwest of Katmandu and was expected to return Friday morning. There is no radio communication between Katmandu and the base camp.

Irene Miller, 42, of Palo Alto, Calif., and Czechoslovakian-born American Vera Komarkova, 35, reached the summit on Oct. 15 with two Sherpa guides. They were the first Americans and the first women to climb the Himalayan mountain. The team radioed the base camp they planned to stay on the mountain and other expedition members would try to make the top.

Miss Watson is a computer programmer for IBM Corp. in San Jose, Calif. She was the first woman to climb Argentina's Aconcagua mountain alone. Aconcagua, at 22,834 feet, is the highest peak in the Western Hemisphere. Ms. Watson also was part of the all-women teams that climbed Mount Robson in Canada and Mount Sajama in Bolivia.

Miss Chadwick-Onyszkiewicz is an art lecturer. She has participated in expeditions to the Hinyu Kush and the Karakorum ranges in Central Asia and was the first to reach the summit of Gasherbrum 3, in Kashmir.

British-French bombardment of Sebastopol began in 1854 in the Crimean War.

'Super' Woman Climber Scales Peak

— A 33-year-old woman described as "a super, super climber" reached the summit of El Capitan Thursday and became the first woman to solo climb the sheer 3,000-foot-high vertical wall.

A Yosemite National Park official described Beverly Johnson of Los Angeles as "safe and probably very tired" after she finished her nine-day climb at mid-afternoon. She then hiked down a back trail to Yosemite Valley.

Chief park ranger Bill Wendt, describing the climb, said, "It's risky to climb it with a dozen people. We had a triple fatality May 14. All three came off."

The victims he referred to were three Minnesota men who plunged 1,400 feet to the bottom of the valley.

"To do it solo is really quite a feat," Wendt said. "So far as we know, Bev is the first woman. I'm sure it's been done by a male before. I'd be willing to bet more than one."

Ranger Tim Setnicka, supervisor of search and rescues, called Miss Johnson "a super, super climber."

Miss Johnson was five to seven "pitches" from the summit of the 3,000-foot-high granite monolith, rangers said. A "pitch" ranges between 50 and 150 feet. The remaining "pitches" were described as the most difficult because of many overhangs.

Miss Johnson, a Maryland native, was on the difficult Dihedral Wall route pioneered in 1962. But all routes up El Capitan are difficult, Wendt noted. "One route may be the championship while others are routine gains, but they're all big league," he said.

He described El Capitan's vertical wall as "an extreme bit of rock climbing, one of the longest continuous vertical faces of granite in the world, if not the longest."

Remington Recalls Defective Firearms

OTTAWA (AP) — Remington Arms Canada is recalling approximately 10,000 guns made before February 1975 so trigger assemblies can be replaced, company president J.E. Millhofer says.

He made the announcement Wednesday shortly after Remington Arms Co. of Bridgeport, Conn., recalled 200,000 firearms for the same reason.

The recalls follow a damage suit in which Remington agreed to pay $6.8 million to a Texas lawyer paralyzed from the waist down after being shot by a rifle whose trigger had not been pulled.

The four models being recalled in the United States and Canada are: Mohawk 600 rifles, Remington 600 and 660 rifles and XP-100 pistols.

Dealers no longer have these guns on their shelves, Millhofer said. "So we have to get in touch with the users."

In the Texas case a Remington Mohawk 600 rifle fired when the safety was pushed to the off position even though the trigger was not pulled.

The company settled Monday with John Coates, 42, of Austin. The $6.8 million agreement is one of the largest lump-sum personal injury settlements ever.

Argentina exported 12,848 tons of fish, worth $12.1 million, to the United States last year, according to government sources. It was the largest such export in the past five years, with more than 80 percent of the shipment consisting of fresh and frozen fish.

Engineer Warns Of Oil Loss With Lake Closing

AUSTIN (AP) — At least 42,000 barrels of oil would be lost monthly if salt water dumping were stopped at Whalen Lake in Andrews County, a petroleum engineer said Thursday.

"Many oil leases (using Whalen Lake) are run by independent operators," said Ronnie Platt of Austin. "And it's not feasible for these operators to invest large amounts of money (for alternate waste disposal.) They'd simply shut the wells."

Platt testfied at a Texas Railroad Commission hearing on whether salt water dumping at Whalen Lake is killing migratory birds and should be stopped.

The lake is located in the oil-producing Permian Basin, where an estimated 200,000 barrels of brine and chemicals are dumped monthly.

The commission Monday ordered Whalen Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Petroleum Corp. of Texas to halt dumping.

Disposal was stopped after a commission official inspected the site and found "substantial pollution" and that the area had been cleaned up since an earlier hearing.

Much oil in the area, Platt said, is located under a large layer of salt water. The water rises to the surface with the oil and must be disposed either underground or at surface sites.

The 42,000 barrels that would be lost come from either marginally producing wells or on leases with only one well, Platt said. Those operators have no alternate disposal method, he added.

Environmentalists and U.S. Interior Department officials claim oil deposits on Whalen Lake injure or kill hundreds or thousands of game birds.

"Everyone who's been there knows it's detrimental," said Richard Endess, special agent with the U.S. Interior Department in San Angelo.

Endess said during a break in the hearing that he first discovered the problem in December 1976 while looking for a reported whooping crane.

"Under the federal migiratory bird treaty act, its illegal to take migratory birds by any means and in any manner," he said. "It's been determined that if they land in an oil sludge pit and die, that's 'taking' them."

Midge Erskine of Midland operates the Eos Bird Rehabiltation Center and said she found 15 dead birds in as many minutes Thursday at the lake.

Abandoning the lake could mean an illegal waste of oil reserves, Platt said, in addition to loss of state severance taxes, state royalties from state-owned leases and a blow to local economy.

Brine from 624 oil wells with a total oil allowable of 709,830 barrels monthly use the lake, he said.

Another Whalen Corp. witness said pollution of underground or surface water has not occurred since April 1977, when the commission indefinitely extended the dumping permit.

Before dumping began, said hydrologist Ron Hardin, the lake's high salt content made water unusable for domestic or animal use.

Lab To Investigate Cause Of Exploding Pipeline

HOUSTON (AP) — A section of the natural gas pipeline that erupted in the predawn hours of Tuesday near Houston, killing at least five persons, will be shipped to a metallurgical laboratory for detailed testing.

Federal and state safety officials said Thursday the lab would be selected later and a report could be received by late next week.

When the 30-inch high-pressure line exploded, a wall of fire burned across a mobile home park. Five bodies were discovered and an elderly woman, missing since the disaster, is presumed dead by authorities.

Philip Hogue, director of the National Transportation Department's Safety Board, said the break may have been caused by a weakness in the steel pipe, but the possibility of a defective weld remains.

Hogue said the preliminary investigation showed no maintenance or operating failure by United Texas Transmission Co., owners of the pipeline.

The federal safety official also was critical of the pipeline inspection programs of the Texas Railroad Commission, which handles the job for the state.

Railroad Commission spokesmen said they have eight engineers and technicians to inspect the 1,500 natural gas system in Texas and are trying to check each unit every 24 months.

"Rip Van Winkle will be tripping over his beard before the job is done. None of them will live long enough to do it once.

Dealers Allowed To Raise Gas Prices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Energy Department, in a rules change that could boost gasoline pump prices a penny a gallon, said Thursday dealers may raise their prices to offset rent increases, the cost of environmental protection equipment and higher refining costs.

David Bardin, head of the department's Economic Regulatory Administration, said the new rules replace regulations that unfairly penalized dealers and should help pave the way for eventual removal of federal gasoline price controls.

Bardin said cost increases caused by the new rules should be minimal. Although he gave no estimate of the amount of the increase, Energy Department analysts said privately average prices could go up about a penny a gallon nationwide.

"Under the changes, which are effective Dec. 1, (service station) retailers will be allowed to reflect in their prices service station rent increases and costs of vapor recovery systems which retailers are required to install for environmental reasons," a department representative said.

"Refiners will be allowed to reflect in their prices for gasoline the increased costs of refining gasoline, particularly unleaded gasoline."

In the past, refiners and service station operators have been allowed to reflect only part of their operating cost increases in the price of gasoline.

"The previous regulations were unfair to gasoline dealers and refiners by disallowing some actual increased costs they must incur," Bardin said.

"While competition may restrain prices (under the new rules) and prevent full reflection of the increased costs, it is in the interest of fair regulation to end the freeze on such cost pass-throughs."

Agency Deadlocks On Lawyer Status

AUSTIN (AP) — The Sunset Advisory Commission failed by one vote Thursday to recommend abolition of the requirement that all lawyers join the State Bar of Texas.

It left the commission in a deadlock, with nothing to suggest to the Legislature as to the bar's future. Commission members meet again, however, on Nov. 10.

If the 1979 Legislature fails to pass a law extending the life of the bar, it will go out of existence as a state agency in 1980.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, made the motion to transform the bar into a voluntary association of lawyers and give its job of regulating attorneys to a new agency supervised by the Texas Supreme Court.

Voting Listed

Reps. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas; Lee Jackson, R-Dallas; and Lance Lalor, D-Houston, voted with Doggett and Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, for the motion. Voting "no" were Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, and Sens. Bill Meier, D-Euless, and Pete Snelson, D-Midland.

Commission rules require the votes of three of the four members on both the House and Senate sides to adopt a recommendation on an agency's future. Meier's vote or Snelson's would have put Doggett's motion over the top.

Bock said that while the bar had not made its own recommendation yet, he understood it would have one shortly.

"Compulsory Unionism"

Doggett said his motion, based on a commission staff recommendation, would remove the "compulsory unionism" coloration of the bar and protect lawyers from "supporting political activities they disapprove of."

"It would be consistent with the right-to-work proposition," Doggett, a lawyer, said wryly.

His motion also would have turned over to the state the bar's $6.8 million Texas Law Center — which lawyers still are paying off with special assessments that have set some to grumbling.

"Umbrella Agency"

The commission received a staff proposal to establish an "umbrella agency" to be called the "Department of Occupational Licensing." It would provide most of the administrative, examination, investigation and complaint processing services now provided by more than two dozen licensing agencies. Licensing boards would be categorized as types I, II or III.

Type I boards would be merely advisory, with no employees of their own. Type II boards would have policy and rule-making power but would rely on the umbrella agency staff. Type III agencies would have an identifiable staff and power to make its own investigations and enforce its rules and the laws under its jurisdiction.

The commission voted overwhelmingly, with only Snelson dissenting, to limit the Board of Barber Examiners to licensing barbers and take away its authority over barber schools and instructors. The board would be relegated to a Type I — advisory — body if the umbrella concept is adopted by the Legislature.

Schwartz said there was little need to license such businesses and persons as barber colleges and instructors since the Legislature passed the Deceptive Trade Practices Act in 1973.

Eliminating occupational licensing requirements "will give back a little free enterprise," he said.

"It is just going to change the bureaucracy from the agencies to the courts, Senator," Bock said.

"But in the courts, you can get triple damages," Schwartz replied.

Snelson observed, "You have to have a lawyer," to take advantage of the deceptive trade practices law.

"You can get a lot of these remedies without a lawyer. ... A letter from the attorney general does a lot of good," Schwartz said.

The commission deadlocked and made no recommendations on the future of the State Cosmetology Commission and State Real Estate Commission.

It recommended continuation of the Board of Law Examiners but said it should stop its detailed probing, through application form questions, into the private lives of those wishing to take the state bar examination.

The commission also voted to retain the Texas Turnpike Authority as a separate agency but require it to hold public hearings at the locations of proposed new tollways before building them.

U.S. Protests Israel Settlement Expansion

numbers of new settlers on the West Bank, or whether the decision was a politically symbolic move to allay the opposition of conservative members of Begin's Likud coalition. These persons have objected to some aspects of the draft treaty that would end a 30-year-long state of war between Egypt and Israel.

Whatever the case, the U.S. officials indicated they were dismayed by the timing of the Israeli Cabinet's decision. It came as peace talks between Israel and Egypt were due to resume here, and as the rest of the Arab world prepared to consider its response to the Camp David accords at a meeting in Baghdad.

"It's going to make things a lot more difficult for us," said one official, declining to be identified. He predicted the decision would adversely affect the possibility of Jordan and the West Bank Arabs joining the peace talks called for by the Camp David accords.

The first task facing the State Department was to hold the Egyptian-Israeli talks together. Reports from Cairo indicated that Egypt was considering recalling its delegation.

Dr. Usama Al-Baz, the legal expert in the Egyptian delegation, said the Israeli Cabinet move was "a very unfavorable, negative development." He said the Egyptian delegation was awaiting instructions from Cairo.

Al-Baz would not predict that the peace talks, which were on the verge of success five days ago, would conclude with a treaty. "That remains to be seen," he said.

The Egyptian-Israeli peace talks were scheduled to resume here today.

State Department spokesman George Sherman said, "We'll just have to wait and see," when asked whether the meeting today among the Americans, Egyptians and Israelis will take place.

Before he left Israel, Dayan acknowledged to reporters that the Israeli decision would make the talks more difficult. He also indicated that the reservations expressed by each government were in direct conflict.

"The same things the government of Israel does not desire, the government of Egypt is trying to strengthen, and vice versa," he said.

The settlements issue has been an irritant to U.S.-Israeli relations for several years. The official American position is that the settlements are illegal, since international law prohibits settlements on occupied territory.

At Camp David, Carter and Begin reached an oral agreement on a freeze on new settlements on the West Bank. But after the meeting, the two leaders disagreed about how long the ban would last.

School Case Appeal Set For Today

Sept. 28 to submit its appeals brief. But the department recently was granted a 30-day extension. Today is the final deadline for submitting the brief.

Wallace said the department had waited so long in making its decision in part because of the "complicated" nature of the case and because the solicitor general was tied up with other Justice Department matters at the Supreme Court level.

Mark Gross, an attorney in the appellate section of the Justice Department's civil rights division, said authorization to file the appeals brief came across his desk Thursday afternoon. "I expect to get it (the brief) to the 5th Circuit Friday," Gross said.

Wallace said the Lubbock Independent School District case is "very similar" to a lawsuit involving Kansas City, Kan., public schools. The Kansas case is pending before the Denver-based 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Justice Department is using almost the same arguments in both appeals, Wallace said.

Like Lubbock, Kansas City has more than 50 public schools, and the department alleged systemwide violations. A federal judge found only five Kansas City schools — three elementaries, a junior high and a senior high, all of them predominantly black and located in the northeast part of the city — to be vestiges of illegal segregation.

Magnet School Created

The Kansas City school board closed the junior high and turned the senior high into a magnet school — the same tools used in Lubbock. At the elementary level, Kansas City avoided busing by using a voluntary transfer plan. School officials there concede that the plan has failed to improve racial balance at the three cited black elementaries.

As in Lubbock, Kansas City still has several predominantly minority schools untouched by court-ordered integration because violations were found to be limited to a few specific campuses.

The Justice Department's brief in the Lubbock case is expected to be lengthy. The 5th Circuit has granted the department permission to file a brief as long as 75 pages.

The department filed the Lubbock desegregation suit in 1970, forcing limited integration at eastside secondary schools. The department came back to seek a comprehensive plan after the school board last year asked Woodward to allow the district to proceed with a voter-approved $11.9 million building program.

Dispute Blocks Bond Sale

Although Woodward has approved the program as part of the desegregation package, bonds cannot be sold until the case is resolved once and for all.

An appeal by the department is not expected to have any immediate effect. The existing desegregation plan would remain in force until the 5th Circuit makes its ruling and gives Woodward instructions, if any, for a new plan.

Union Supports Inflation Fight

tish pound and the French franc, while gold bullion prices surged in the opposite direction.

Carter's program includes a 7 percent limit on wage and fringe benefit increases and a less specific target for price rises, although the administration hopes to limit price increases throughout the economy to 5¾ percent, excluding food.

The program's goal is to reduce inflation from an anticipated rate of more than 8 percent this year to less than 6.5 percent next year.

Carter, who hopes to win compliance by threatening goverment sanctions against violators, picked up important backing on Wednesday from Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller, who called the plan "a balanced, concerted and sustained program."

Miller's support is important to the White House anti-inflation effort, which needs compatible policies on interest rates that are set by the independent Federal Reserve.

Iranians File Suit On Protest Ban

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Southern Univrsity's ban on campus demonstrations by Iranian students following a visit to the school by President Carter's son resulted Thursday in a federal suit against TSU.

The lawsuit filed by the Iranian Student Association charged TSU with violating the Iranian students' rights of free speech, assembly and petition.

It also alleged school administrators forced the students to converse only in English while on campus or be subject to arrest by university police.

The university president, Dr. Granville Sawyer, imposed the ban after he said 60 to 70 Iranians blocked all entrances to the TSU student life building for one hour Oct. 13 while Chip Carter was speaking.

The students claim in the suit that they were turned away after they sought admission to Carter's speech.

The Iranians asked for an injunction and at least $60,000 damages.

Salinas Clears Air On Travel Expense Error

an argument with another representative about travel expense regulations.

The check paying back the excess expense money is dated June 1, 1978.

Asked if it bothers him that the money was not repaid until 15 months after the error was made, Salinas said, "No, it doesn't bother me. I didn't know it was an error."

Salinas was highly critical of Hester for accusing him of wrongdoing.

"My goal has always been to run a high-level campaign," he said. "I do not want to lower my standards and get in the gutter with him and his mud-slinging, dirty tricks and Watergate-type tactics.

"Everyone that knows me knows I wouldn't even keep the change if I got incorrect change at the grocery store."

Accusations Pushed

Hester said during his news conference that "four different persons, two in Austin and two in Lubbock," contacted him about the expense report and urged him to make accusations against Salinas in the campaign.

He refused to say who contacted him, but he said two "are Democrats and the other two are possibly independents.

"I'm sure it might be interesting to know, but it was something told to me in confidence," Hester said.

He met with Tech officials about the airplane flights in late September, he said, but waited until now, less than two weeks before the Nov. 7 general election, to make the accusations because he was still checking facts.

Hester was checking state records in Austin "as late as yesterday," he said, "to see if there was anything in connection with this."

He made no mention of finding evidence that Salinas had repaid the excess payment, however.

Asked why he thought the four persons wanted allegations made against Salinas, he said, "I assume that they were wanting to clear up honesty in government."

He said he did not know why they contacted him instead of House ethics officials or law enforcement authorities.

Salinas, asked if he had any ideas about who contacted Hester, said, "I imagine you ought to ask him. I don't know who his friends are."

Salinas Not Contacted

Salinas said Hester never contacted him about the expense report before making his accusations.

"He never asked me anything," he said. "I haven't talked to him."

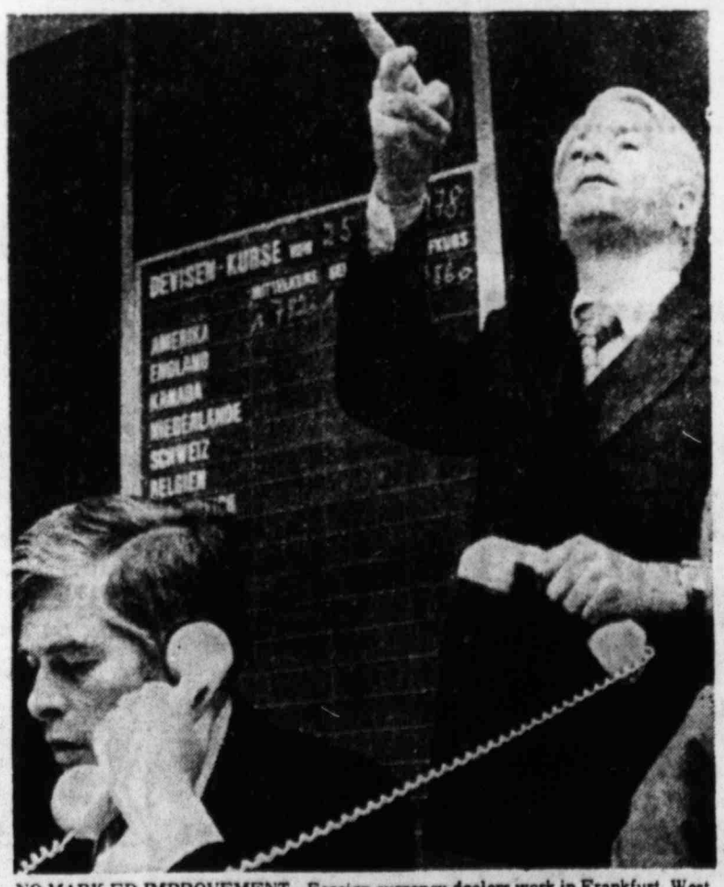
Trade Deficit Rises Slightly more in television sets, $24 million more in motorcycles and bicycles and an additional $5.2 million in metal machinery.

American businesses sold less food abroad last month as exports of food and live animals dropped $95 million to $1.68 billion.

However, exports of machinery, cars, tractors and office machines rose by $313.4 million to $5.4 billion. But overseas sales of airplanes declined $30.7 million after rising substantially in August.

The September trade deficit was the 28th consecutive monthly deficit for the United States. The $22.7 billion so far this year is a faster rate than the $17.9 billion by this time last year.

The monthly figures are adjusted to account for seasonal variations.



NO MARK-ED IMPROVEMENT—Foreign currency dealers work in Frankfurt, West Germany, where the U.S. dollar sank to a record low of 1.78 marks Wednesday. Dealers said the drop reflected traders' disappointment with President Carter's latest anti-inflation proposals. (AP Wirephoto)

MUSCLE-bound cowboys, "duded-up" cowgirls and zany but skilled clowns captivated the attention of some 919 rodeo fans Thursday during the second night of the 33rd Annual Texas Tech Intercollegiate Rodeo in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

As spectators sat back and watched — or in some instances sat on the edge of their seat — cowboys and cowgirls from 17 colleges and universities in the southwest region put their skills and talent to the test.

The 330 competitors entered in this year's rodeo will be pared to the top 10 finalists in bull riding, bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding and steer wrestling by the end of Saturday's show.

Stiff competition in calf roping, barrel racing, goat tying and break away roping also will continue in the arena during tonight and Saturday night's shows, beginning at 8 p.m.

The climax of the competition Saturday will be the appearance of country star Moe Bandy along with awarding the top ten finalists in the eight events.

Additional entertainment is being provided by the Steen Sisters. Connie, 17, Kelly, 13, and Cory, 11, will be performing daring acrobatic stunts on horseback.

Awards Presented

During Thursday's program, Rodeo Association president Dusty Johnston received the Doug Parks Award. The Tinnell Award went to Craig Bessent, a member of the Rodeo Association board and Nina Powers, board treasurer.

Harry Vold Rodeo Company stock proved to be made up of high kicking broncs and bulls, along with twisting and dodging steers, calves and goats, which made good scores and short times difficult for competitors.

Leading in the bareback bronc riding event were Kris Brown of Tarleton State University with 73 points on Denver, closely followed by Lane Foltyn of West Texas College with 72 points on Cracker Jack and Charley Burns of Tarleton State University with 67 points on Storm Trooper.

Quick-dodging calves allowed John Clifton of Roscoe Junior College to rope the best time with a time of 12:31, followed by Skipper Strickland of Western Texas College with 23.32, and Wes Smith of Howard College with 29.23.

The best times in girls breakaway roping were 4:30 by Kay Sewell of Eastern New Mexico University, 5:65 by Scharlene Harris of Sul Ross College and 5.74 by Koell Primrose also of Eastern New Mexico University.

Top riders in saddle bronc riding competition were Ed Brown of Tarleton State University with 64 points on North Dakota, Larry Fawyer to also of TSU with 61 points of Yellow Grass and Jeff Knight of Howard College with 56 points on Santina.

The fastest times in the goat tying event were by Koell Primrose of Eatern New Mexico University with 10.12, Vickie Snodgrass also of ENMU with 10.55 and by Margo Powell of Sul Ross with 10.96.

Lane Foltyn of West Texas College had the best time in steer wrestling with with 8.37 in steer wrestling, followed by Jeff Flores of West Texas State University with 9.09 and Tony Thompson of Cisco Junior College with 9.87.

Only three roping teams were able to bring down a steer Thursday with Mark Kenney and Mike Kelley of Sul Ross taking the lead with 9.88 on the clock, with Lee Plummer and Andy Wilholt of Eastern New Mexico University following with 14.15 and Cricket Lowry and Hank Jordan of West Texas State University with 18.96.

Scharlene Harris of Sul Ross and Kay Sewell of Eastern New Mexico University tied with the fastest time of 15.37 in Thursday's barrel racing competition. Other top times were 15.63 by Regina Benyshek of West Texas State University and and 15.90 by Tawna Grey of Eastern New Mexico University.

Only two cowboys managed to ride on top of their bull for the full 10 seconds required with Danny Mason of Texas Tech scoring 65 points on Sugar Bear and Tom Cribbs scoring 61.

Convicts Battle Unplug Order On Stereos

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Prisoners at the Kentucky State Penitentiary are going to have to unplug their stereos and hair dryers.

They also may have to turn off some of their television sets, radios, and electric fans.

And that's downright unconstitutional, say two convicts who have filed a lawsuit to block a new prison regulation which will limit the number of appliances a prisoner can have in his cell.

Safety inspectors fear the prison's electrical circuits are overloaded.

So after Dec. 1 each prisoner will have to make do with a small television set, a radio, a fan, a cookpot and a manual typewriter.

John Benton Preston, an inmate serving as an aid in the prison's legal services department, and Otis Strain, a student in the prison school, have filed a suit in a U.S. District Court challenging the order of prison Superintendent Donald E. Bordenkircher.

The suit claims the order is unconstitutional, and asks the court for a permanent injunction preventing its being carried out.

Carter Plans To Sign Income Tax Cut Bill

ries the president has made since Labor Day, campaigning in what the White House views as key Democratic races. The appearance came less than 48 hours after Carter announced his new anti-inflation program to the nation.

In Nashville, Carter got a boost from Tennessee's gubernatorial candidate Jake Butcher, who promised to announce a major state program to fight inflation and "put money in the pockets" of Tennesseans.

Butcher called for cooperation by government and private citizens "to end the dreadful spiral of inflation that threatens this nation. The president is right when he says his program can help if given a chance."

Carter said Butcher is "a man who came from humble beginnings ... a competent, successful businessman" who deserves election.

Carter also praised his party's Senate nominee, Jane Eskind, as tough and competent even though Miss Eskind has said she would have opposed ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

Earlier, White House press secretary Jody Powell had emphasized that Carter was campaigning for the Democratic ticket, not against Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker, whom Miss Eskind is challenging.

Baker angered some of his Tennessee constituents by supporting the Carter administration's position on the Panama Canal issue.

Carter called Butcher "a true treasure" and said of Senate candidate Eskind, "She's tough, competent. She knows government. She'll come with a clean eye and a clean sweeping broom ... She'll bring to Washington the spirit of Andrew Jackson."

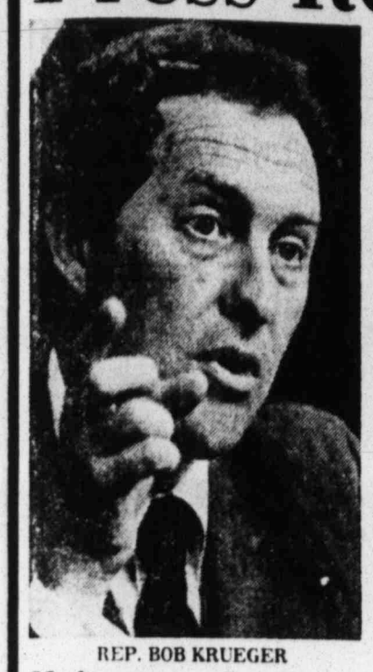
After speaking to the downtown rally, the president appeared at a $250-a-person party fundraiser.

Accompanying Carter on the two-state tour was GSA Administrator Jay Solomon, whom the president has repeatedly praised for getting at the bottom of recent scandals involving the nation's housekeeping agency.

During the Nashville visit, the president repeatedly invoked the name of former President Andrew Jackson, whom he called "the founder of our party." Carter noted that Tennessee had furnished him with one of the biggest electoral margins in his campaign for the presidency and said, "I've come to thank you for that."

Carter noted that he comes from neighboring Georgia and said, "As Tennesseans, I consider you my brothers."

Press Release 'No Big Deal,' Krueger Asserts



REP. BOB KRUEGER

By The Associated Press

It was a mistake, but "not a big deal," to release copies of a newspaper column casting aspersions on an unnamed senator's morality, Democratic senatorial candidate Rep. Bob Krueger said Thursday.

Meanwhile, the campaign manager for Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., accused Krueger of distorting the senator's words on school desegregation.

"If it had been my personal judgment, we wouldn't have sent out the Anderson thing," Krueger said of the syndicated column. It did not identify the senator, but Krueger's staff said it was Tower.

At a state Capitol news conference, Krueger denied Tower's charges that he violated Federal Election Code rules for listing advertising and media expenses.

The expenses were bookkeeping errors listed in the wrong columns, Krueger's campaign manager Gary Mauro said.

Krueger said there was not "that much secrecy" surrounding a Wednesday night cocktail party in Washington, which President Carter attended. The $1,000-a-head affair raised about $94,000.

"It is customary for the president of the United States to release his own schedule," Krueger said of the president's unannounced appearance.

"Maybe it's pretty obvious we were going to win," the congressman said of why Carter was there.

Krueger said he thinks the president's call for voluntary wage and price controls can work if the people "want to make it work."

Personality clashes have dominated issues in the campaign, Krueger conceded.

"Sure I'd like to see it continue on a higher plane," he said.

Tower's campaign manager, Ken Towery, told the Fair Campaign Practices Committee that Krueger has further twisted a "distorted" version of Tower's 1970 comments to the New York Times Magazine.

"He is against dual school systems, but believes that 'for the most part blacks are less capable of learning' for environmental reasons," the article said.

A Krueger flyer distributed to Mexican-Americans has changed the quote's reference from "blacks" to "minorities," Towery said.

Tower also criticized Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano for claiming the Republican senator was uninvolved in formulation of rural hospital guidelines. Tower released copies of a Jan. 28 letter that Califano wrote thanking the senator for being "helpful to me in revising the proposed guidelines."

In the governor's race, Attorney General John Hill said that two more states show interest in filing suit to nullify parts of the 1978 Natural Gas Pricing Act.

New Mexico and Kansas, the fourth- and fifth-largest gas-producing states, sent representatives to a New Orleans meeting of Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma officials, he said.

Republican Jim Baker, candidate for attorney general, attacked his opponent, Mark White, on his record as secretary of state.

"A report by the state auditor in 1976 cited 111 separate points of complaint on Mark White's management," Baker said in Dallas.

Instances of careless purchasing, apparent falsification of state records, disregard of ex post facto compliance with bid procedures and other practices were cited, he said.

"I'd be ashamed of that type of report if I were him," Baker said, "and I think it raises serious question about my opponent's administrative fitness to run the office of attorney general."

Helicopter Crash Kills Navy Crew

HORSHAM, Pa. (AP) — Three persons died Thursday evening when a Navy helicopter crashed in this Montgomery County community and exploded within 100 yards of area homes, local police said.

Horsham Township police officer Bernard Schaffer confirmed reports that three persons died in the fiery crash. Their names were not immediately available.

There were no civilian casualties, Schaffer said.

Officials at the Willow Grove Naval Station said the helicopter was based at the station.

Art Book Offered 'Free' By Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Slap down $12.55 and you can have an eye-catching new book on art in the U.S. Capitol, or you might get it for nothing by writing your senator or congressman.

House and Senate members spent about $400,000 in taxpayers' money so they would have the books to give away "free" by the thousands.

Handsomely bound in two-tone brown, the book contains more than 400 pages of art reproductions in color and black and white.

Everything you ever wanted to know about portraits, statues, busts, plaques, stairways, friezes, vases, eagles, fountains, columns, clocks, frescoes, murals, doors, mantels and decorative windows in the Capitol and congressional office buildings.

Each senator has 100 copies to give away. The 435 members of the House got 50 each.

It's not the first time they've done it.

"Art in the United States Capitol" was printed two years ago to coincide with the bicentennial celebration. It was so popular that members of Congress soon ran out of copies.

So the House and Senate voted later in 1976 to pay for a second edition, which the Government Printing Office recently printed.

There are a few changes from the first edition.

There's a new portrait of former House Speaker Carl Albert, who retired after the congressional session in 1976.

And there's a new statue of former Alaska Sen. Ernest Gruening, unveiled in 1977, that wasn't in the first edition.

But for the most part, the book is the same as the one printed two years ago.

"It's just that they had run out of copies and they were looking for more," said one aide, who asked not to be named. "It's strictly a congressional giveaway," he said.

Some distribute them to high schools or libraries.

Others haven't decided yet, so the books are in storage.

Others give them away to constituents who write and ask for them. "Word somehow gets out about them," said one aide.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., gave his copies away to high schools and libraries in 1976. He is giving his new books away to constituents who ask for them.

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., brought a few books out to his desk on the Senate floor one day near the end of the 95th session of Congress earlier this month.

While debate went on around him, Cannon sat at his desk and autographed the books before having them shipped out.

St. Louis Teamsters File Station Suit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A Teamsters Union local has filed an $11 million suit, alleging that a television station accused its members of planning criminal actions to keep Coors beer out of the city.

The suit was filed Wednesday in St. Louis Circuit Court in behalf of Brewery Drivers, Chauffeurs & Helpers Local 133, an affiliate of Teamsters International. The defendant, station KTVI, is owned by the Newhouse Broadcasting Corp. of New York.

On Oct. 5 and Oct. 6, the suit contends, the station broadcast reports that were aimed at exposing alleged union attempts to halt the introduction of Coors beer to the St. Louis area.

Hill Country Hamlet Gets First Phone

LUCKENBACH (AP) — Civilization is slowly creeping into this Hill Country community, immortalized in song and legend.

First, the police chief of Plains, Ga., donated a parking meter that usually reads "time expired" until weekend fun-seekers arrive.

Now, General Telephone of the Southwest has installed a pay phone to provide a 25-cent link with the world outside this hamlet.

Established in 1849, Luckenbach attained national prominence only recently through the promotion of the late Hill Country humorist, Hondo Crouch, and the popular song by Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson.

The new phone hangs on the corner of the general store run by the town's owner, Kathy Morgan, who doesn't think it will change things much.

"Despite all the modern new gadgets, indicating economic growth in the community, Luckenbach will remain a place 'Where everybody is somebody,'" she said.

Should anyone wish to call Luckenbach, the number is area code 512-997-7711. There's no telling who might answer.

Interned Japanese Asking $3 Billion

SPENDING THE WAR BEHIND BARBED WIRE — In this 1942 file photo, first arrivals at the Japanese evacuee community in Manzanar, Calif., are shown being assigned to quarters in the barracks. 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry were imprisoned from 1942 to 1946 as "national security risks," because of their heritage.(AP Laserphoto)

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It's a dingy page in United States history, left out of most textbooks. But Japanese-Americans who spent World War II behind barbed wire fences in American concentration camps insist the story can't be so easily forgotten.

To help jog memories, they are asking Congress for $3 billion to compensate them for the years they spent in the desolate camps.

Officials of the Japanese-American Citizens League, headquartered here, say the size of the request is intended to raise eyebrows — and make headlines. They hope the headlines will tell those who never knew — and remind those who have forgotten — that 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry were imprisoned in 1942-46 as "national security risks" because of their heritage.

It has been 32 years since the last family straggled from the last camp at Tule Lake, Calif. And league officials say too few people know about executive order No. 9066, signed by President Franklin Roosevelt, that opened the way for the legal imprisonment of Japanese not charged with a crime.

"We hear so many people, especially from the Midwest and East, who didn't even know there was an evacuation. They say, 'We never read it in the textbooks,'" said Dr. Clifford Uyeda, league president.

"Educating them is really our primary objective. Money, I always say, is secondary."

Under the order, thousands of families were hustled from their homes, with only what they could carry, and moved to one of 10 fenced and guarded camps built by the federal government in California, Arizona, Utah, Wyoming, Arkansas, Idaho and Colorado.

Most of the prisoners were held in those 10 camps, but about 8,000 were kept at 26 smaller camps, some in the East, South and Midwest.

Dozens of Japanese who tried to escape or ventured too close to the fences were shot, and eight were killed by guards.

Uyeda believes it could happen again. "In the hysteria of war, I think anything is possible. If there were a major war between the U.S. and China, it might be the Chinese who are incarcerated next," said Uyeda, 61, whose parents and sisters were imprisoned while he was at school in the East.

The $3 billion the league wants from the government would amount to $25,000 for each of those incarcerated, an estimated 90,000 of whom are still alive. A survey of the league's 32,000 members showed most want the money to go to them, but about 15 percent said they would give their shares to a trust fund.

The amount is not unreasonably large, said Raymond Okamura, a chemist who spent the war years in a camp in Arizona.

"It is something I can't ever forget," said Okamura, a member of the league's Redress Committee. "I feel the government owes me for false imprisonment."

He noted that 1,200 Vietnam War protestors arrested in Washington in 1971 were awarded $10,000 each for false imprisonment after just a few days in jail. "We're talking about three years," Okamura said.

The Redress Committee, most of whose members are camp survivors, has lobbied for compensation for about a year.

The Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco has estimated that Japanese forced into the camps lost more than $400 million in property and assets when put in the camps. A 1948 law returned about $34.5 million to some of those jailed.

Uyeda said response from legislators has been mixed, with many pessimistic that such a huge appropriation could pass. So far, no bill has been introduced.

Particularly vexing has been the bitter opposition of Sen. S. I. Hayakawa of California, who is of Japanese ancestry. He has called the campaign "ridiculous" and said the incarceration was "perfectly understandable."

Hayakawa, born and raised in Canada, also suggested the campaign would "rekindle old resentment and racism that no longer exists."

But leaders of the campaign believe those feelings linger.

"When we talk about redress, one of the responses we get from whites is, 'But look at what happened at Pearl Harbor!'" said John Tateishi, a college instructor who was imprisoned at Manzanar, Calif.

"It ignores the fact we are American citizens. We had nothing to do with that. I'm a third-generation American citizen. I've never been to Japan. Yet people say, 'Look at Pearl Harbor, you people have to take some responsibility for that.' But we don't."

The league does not try to equate the American concentration camps with the World War II Nazi death camps. Imprisoned Japanese-Americans were not tortured or separated from their families.

But, said Uyeda, there are chilling similarities.

"In both instances, the people were put behind barbed wire fences in a compound, surrounded by armed guards. In both cases, they were there without any charges ever brought against them. In both cases, it was their own government that did this to them. And in both cases, they were there only because of their ancestry," he said.

Executive Order 9066 was not officially rescinded until Feb. 19, 1976. President Gerald R. Ford called the incarcerations an "error (that) shall never be made again."

Said Uyeda, "It's too easy to say you're sorry."

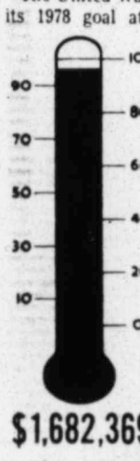
City United Way Effort Misses Goal; Chairman Sets Campaign Extension



The United Way campaign fell short of its 1978 goal at its scheduled victory meeting Thursday, and as the report board showed $1,620,919 for 96 percent of the $1,682,369 goal collected, chairman Don Douglass immediately announced an extension of the campaign.

A fifth report meeting was added for Nov. 8 at a new location, Vann's Koko Palace, because of prior commitment at the civic center.

After receiving an appreciation plaque by United Way vice chairman Kay Houser, Douglas commented on the year's campaign.

"We knew we faced a big task when the budget division set an 11.4 percent increase, but with the addition of two agencies, it could not be otherwise. The campaign cabinet, captains, volunteer workers and especially the contributors have given so much time and certainly sacrificial contributions in order to keep our 34 agencies operating. We will not let them down."

Two United Way groups were honored at the luncheon for outstanding performance. The Pacesetter division, led by R.P. Fuller and Wayne Finnell, was recognized for going over its assigned quota. Speakers' Bureau members also were given special notice for providing campaign talks for group solicitation meetings.

Also introduced at the luncheon were provisional members of the Junior League, who started the morning with a tour of United Way agencies.

Two campaign divisions exceeded quotas at the report meeting. Pacesetters, headed by R.P. Fuller and Wayne Finnell topped their $387,000 goal and the residential division, led by Mary Ann McKay and Caroly Matthews, went over its $14,000 goal.

Volunteers receiving symbol awards for quotes reached included Loaned Executives Debby Adair, Tony Balios, Bill Curry, Roland German, B.J. Hackler, Rich Henderson, Jeff Hively, Kenneth Jones, Time Lancaster, Joe MacLean and Lou Prothro. Others receiving the award included Jack Alderson, Art Cook and Doug Moore in Advance Gifts; Dick Gosdin and Kenneth Hensley in Metro; Laurie Killgore, Mitchell Railborn, Veronyka Vance, Steve Watt and Joe Wilson in Employee; David Dea, Charles Cathy, Lisa Greer, Julian Simpson, Barbara Blankenship, Dave Darden, Arden Hawkins, Steve Shanklin and Matt Malouf in Business; and Earlene Garland and Patsy Whipple in Residential.

Employee groups receiving Good Citizenship awards were Borden, Inc. Brooks Super Market, Brazos Transport, Furr's Inc., GE Housewares and Audio Electronics, Hygeia Water Company, Lubbock County Court House Maintenance, Reese Accounting, Finance and Travel Section, Reese Pay and Collecting Section, Service Title Company, Southwestern Bell Telephone and Communications Workers of America, Local 12203, Texas Distributors, Inc., Texas Commerce Bank, Western Electric Company and Communication Workers of America, Local 12290.

Cottonseed meal, soybean meal, coconut meal, lineseed meal, beet pulp, almond hulls, grape pumice and bone meal are some of the many by-products that are used in livestock feed.

APPRECIATED EFFORTS — Don Douglas, campaign chairman of the 1978 United Way drive, Thursday receives this appreciation plaque from Kay Houser, vice chairman, during a victory meeting in the Lubbock Civic Center, while Mrs. Douglas looks on. Douglas extended the campaign deadline to Nov. 8 to reach the $1,682,369 goal. The campaign fell short of the goal Wednesday by four percent. (Staff Photo)

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Last night at a rather grand party, another guest (male, about 44) was asked by the hostess what he'd like to drink. He made a big deal out of the fact that he did not indulge in alcoholic beverages nor did he care for a soft drink or fruit juice. He stated his position in such a loud voice and with such vehemence that it was a real put-down to those around him who were enjoying their highballs.

I feel a person who does not drink should take a Scotch and soda or a dry martini just to be sociable. He can hold it for the entire evening, or set it down after a while and walk away, or he can dump it in a potted plant when no one is looking. The point is, if he pretends to drink he will not make others uncomfortable with his "holier-than-thou" attitude.

I understand that you are a total abstainer. Do you agree that my concept is more gracious than setting oneself on a pedestal and making everyone else ill at ease? — Long Island

Dear Long: No, I don't believe a nondrinker should carry a drink around and pretend he's drinking for any reason whatever.

I made my decision not to drink very early in life and I'm perfectly willing to let others make theirs. If a person wants to drink, it's HIS liver, HIS stomach, HIS motor mouth and HIS hangover.

Dear Ann Landers: I was born in Europe but am a U.S. citizen who travels extensively on the North American continent.

I am amused by the fact that so many Americans and Canadians look down their noses at other cities. In fact, I've seen fist fights over it. For example, Seattle considers Tacoma a "suburb." San Franciscans look with disdain at Oakland. They also view Los Angeles as a monstrosity.

The residents of Reno think Carson City is a joke. Folks who live in Phoenix consider Tucson and Yuma "primitive." Denver folks laugh at Colorado Springs and think Rapid City, S.D., is really the boonies. Minneapolis treats St. Paul like a poor relative. Ditto Omaha, Neb., and Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Cleveland snubs Akron and Akron snubs Steubenville. Fort Lauderdale, Palm Beach and Boca Raton consider Miami gauche — wouldn't think of even going there for dinner.

Bostonians are so "culture-hung" they view Springfield and Worcester as illiterate territory. Atlanta doesn't consider any other city in the state worth mentioning.

Toronto upstages London and Hamilton and thinks Calgary is uncivilized. Montreal gives the back of its hand to every other city on the continent, even Quebec City, which is actually pretty spectacular.

Dallas considers every other city in Texas "a cow town" and Houston thinks the same of El Paso and San Antonio.

In my opinion, the only city in the world that has a right to feel superior is New York. It is clearly the most magnificent city in the world. — I Ben Around

Dear B.: "I ben around," too, and I love the Big Apple, but the most vital and exciting city in the world is unquestionably Chicago.

Couple Receives Presidential Congratulations

The Rev. and Mrs. George Dale, who celebrated their 80th wedding anniversary October 18, have received messages of congratulations from all over the country.

Among them was a letter received this week from President and Mrs. Carter.

Dated October 18, the letter from the President and first lady read:

"We are pleased to join you and your family in sending you our warmest congratulations on your wedding anniversary. May love and devotion continue to bless your marriage."

The letter was signed Rosalynn Carter and Jimmy Carter.

Mrs. Dale said that some 200 people, including some of their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, attended the reception held for them at the nursing home where they have lived for the past two years, as well as friends from Lubbock, Tahoka — where the Rev. Mr. Dale once served as pastor — and Homestead neighborhood, where the Dales lived for two years.

They also received more than 300 cards and letters from all over the country, some of them from old friends, some from strangers, Mrs. Dale said.

Mrs. Dale celebrated her 96th birthday on Saturday and her 80th wedding anniversary the following day.

WALNUT CHEESE BITES

Any time you need a tasty nibble, fix these good quickies. Secure bite-size cheese chunks on picks. Dip lightly into mayonnaise, whipped salad dressing, plain yogurt or sour cream. Follow with a crunchy coating of finely chopped walnuts for a treat in taste and texture.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I heard a man remark the other day that he did not know how his wife could go to the supermarket, purchase $85 worth of groceries, come home and have nothing to cook for dinner.

Isn't that just like a man? Men like that probably don't even understand why a woman has a closet full of clothes and still has nothing to wear.

Grocery shopping is one of the last of the little-known sciences in the world. All the experts know is it's demanding, requires great concentration and split-second timing.

Researchers a few years back tried to pin down why women bought as they did in supermarkets. They discovered that when women entered the store and their hands curled around a cart handle, something happened. Their "eye-blink" rate dropped to 14 a minute, putting them into a hypnoidal trance, which is the first stage of hypnosis. (One researcher said it was incredible how women passed by friends and neighbors without realizing they were even there.)

At the check-out, however, their consciousness seemed to be triggered by the cash register bell which brought their "blink-rate" up to 45 a minute. (Which is normal.)

Women spent 20 seconds on each aisle, tossing and throwing. The list-makers went around mumbling. "Do I have oregano?" and answering themselves, "What kind of a question is that? Of course, you have oregano. You're Italian, aren't you?"

Every woman has her "system." I am not a list-maker. I found that when I made out a list of everything I needed for well-balanced, attractive meals I had to arrange for financing at the check-out.

I tend to stick to the basic things I've been buying for the past 20 years and hope that something wonderful will happen to it during the week.

As for not having anything to cook when you've just returned from the supermarket, I have a rather interesting theory about that. I equate shoppers with the pioneer hunters who dragged home a 300-pound moose, lugged it to the log cabin door and said, "I shot it. Now YOU cook it!"

If you don't understand that, then you deserve to have frozen pizza, a set of cookware, a room deodorizer and an encyclopedia for your dinner!

South's bidding wasn't at all scientific but his play was.

Not that it really looked scientific. At trick two he led his 10 of spades. West showed out and the finesse against East's queen became automatic. Later on he had to lose the club finesse, but that just meant no overtrick.

What was scientific about his lead of the 10 rather than the king of trumps? Suppose West held all three trumps?

Would South have gone down?

No, he wouldn't. Give West those three trumps and South must lose a trump trick after playing dummy's ace, but he won't have to lose a club. He will simply cash the king of trumps and the ace and king of hearts. Then he ruffs dummy's last heart and plays out all the diamonds.

If West trumps in he must give South a ruff and a club discard in dummy or lead from his king of clubs. If West doesn't ruff, South throws him in with the queen of trumps.

Hearts are trumps. South leads and must take all the tricks.

South cashes the ace of diamonds and plays the jack from dummy. Then he ruffs a spade in dummy, cashes the last trump while discarding his 10 of clubs. West has been forced to hold both clubs and the queen of diamonds. East must be holding the jack of spades and 10-8 of diamonds.

The ace of clubs lead squeezes East. He has to discard before South and either discard is fatal.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am on a no-meat diet. Please advise me what precautions to take and what vitamins I need to make up for the lack of meat. — M.S.

Well, it's encouraging that you realize that a vegetarian diet is more complicated than just avoiding meat.

No one should embark on a no-meat diet without some knowledge of the nutrition. Meat provides many of the more complex proteins, as well as valuable minerals and vitamins — all part of a rounded diet. Other protein sources can include nuts, legumes (peas and beans), and soybeans. You should probably have multiple vitamin capsules. The lack of vitamin B-12 is a serious one in the vegetarian diet. There have been unfortunate cases of malnutrition in babies born to improperly-educated vegetarian mothers. Read up on vegetarian programs in your library or join a group of vegetarians with organized diet programs.

Some have the mistaken notion that proteins are proteins, no matter the source. Various proteins are made up of combinations of amino acids. Some non-meat foods do not contain a full quota of acids. Meat protein is the most complete source of the amino acids.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am one of those women who has a Pap test yearly. Since my question can be of interest to thousands, perhaps you will answer it. Before going in for a Pap test should a woman refrain from douching for a better reading? A friend was scolded by her doctor for having douched. If it interferes with the test maybe I shouldn't. — S.P.

You should not douche before a pelvic exam — Pap test or otherwise. Some women are so obsessed with the idea of cleanliness that they douche and remove important evidence of discharge or other abnormalities. Cleansing the external genitals is sufficient.

OVERCROWED CORN

If you find a "dud" (an unpopped kernel of pop corn) in the bottom of your popper, it may be caused by overcrowed conditions. Follow popper directions closely for the correct amount of oil and popcorn. When using a heavy skillet, make sure the popcorn kernels are only one layer deep.

Festival Shows New Cameras

By IRVING DESFOR
Associated Press Writer

I could not attend Photokina 1978 in Cologne, Germany, recently but had my own private eye, ears and legs there to negotiate the immense distances that make it the largest photo fair in the world, to see the newest offerings and hear the latest news.

This is a succinct persoal report from my proxy, Norman Lipton, executive manager of the Photographic Manufacturers and Distributors Association.

Among the news-making breakthroughs:

The Auto 110 pocket camera system, with interchangeable lenses and attachable motor drive by Asahi Pentax.

Two variable focus enlarging lenses from Burleigh Brooks: a 50-80mm (f-4.5 at short end, f-5.6 at long end) covering 24x36mm to 6x7cm negatives; and 105-150mm (f-4.5 to f-5.6) covering 6x7cm to 4x5-inch negatives. Both lenses with Leica screw-thread mounts.

A 35mm SLR camera with an exposure rate of 9.5 frames-per-second. The Nikon F2H camera's rapid operation, achieved with an innovative half-mirror, is called "Titan," because its wearing parts are reinforced with Titanium alloy.

The Flash Fujica Auto Focus 35mm camera, with a "beam sensor" to facilitate autofocus operation in the dark or in dimly lit situations. It incorporates a memory system which permits autofocus setting on any position in the picture area by depressing the release halfway before composing the scene in the viewfinder.

The motorized film back by Kodak to permit use of their PR10 instant print film with 4x5 cameras and recording equipment with Graflok backs.

Among new items from familiar companies:

Two new professional camera systems from Polaroid, the 600 and 600 SE, which use peel-apart film material, in addition to its Sonar Autofocus instant cameras.

Four solid state exposure meters from Vivitar in addition to new lenses, electronic flash units and a new enlarger.

The first enlarging system with electronic color scanner and exposure light mixer by Philips of Holland, to be imported in the United States by Hindapho-to.

The Ilfobrom Galerie, a new deluxe fiber-based paper with deep rich blacks and wide exposure latitude. Also from Ilford: HP5 in 400 ASA rollfilm; and Cibachrome PS "brilliant" and RC "pearl" professional color print materials from Cibachrome P-3 chemistry, a new self-masking process for improved color renditions with slightly less over-all contrast.

The first series of Bosch-Bauer 35mm still cameras: the RX reflex system with eight interchangeable lenses and four electronic flash units.

A new shift lens to correct perspective for medium format cameras, from Jos. Schneider optics: the 55mm f-4.5 Super Angulon PCS with a floating optical element.

The Leica R3-MOT 35mm SLR camera, a motorized version of the R3; and the Leitz Focomat V35 autofocus enlarger.

The Sekonic View-Spot L-438 exposure meter, from Copal with a 3-to-10 degree viewing angle based on a silicon blue cell for faster, more sensitive reading.

And from Hanimex, from their new plant in Jackson, Mich.: a motorized dual-8 Sound Editor-Viewer for all 8mm movie film formats; five new zoom lenses in all popular SLR lens mounts; and the VXL 110 camera, a vertical format pocket version, with f-1.9 lens for available light photography with 400 ASA film and shutter programmed to 1-800th sec. and down to f-16.

In trend-setting areas, there were surprises and advances.

Surprise: No new instant photography systems were introduced by Fuji (reported to have one ready), Agfa-Gevaert (ditto) and Hanimex (which had promised twice in last year). Explanation by Jack Hannes of Hanimex: It would be suicidal for any company to be caught between the Kodak and Polaroid battle lines without a radically improved system over what they are doing now.

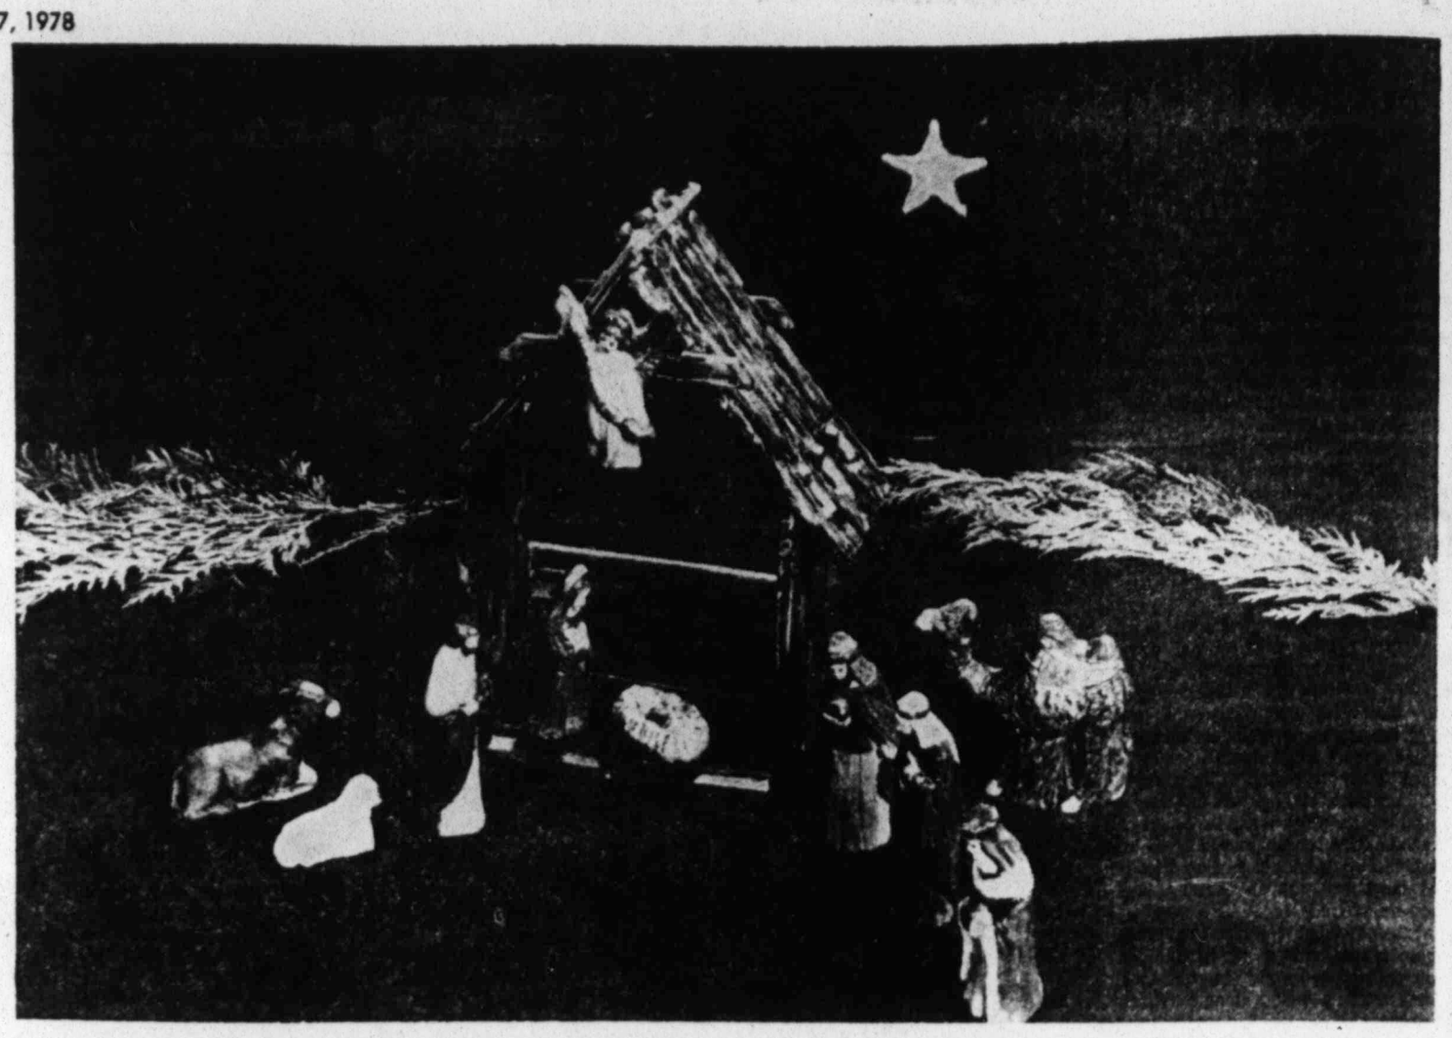
Advances: The video cassette and video recording fields. Giant Hall 12 was crammed with VCR and VTR hardware and with companies providing services in converting movie film to video tape, many from the U.S. exhibiting at Photokina for the first time.

Also, the "ultraminiature 35mm" or more compact full-frame 35mm rangefinder cameras. Most ingenious: the Olympus XA, labeled the "clam-shell" because its front cover closes over the rangefinder and lens. It features full automation, aperture priority from 1 second to 1-500th, 35mm f-2.8 lens, LED battery check, 100 or 400 ASA automation without manual override, and flash module accessory.

Others with retractable lens systems: Ricoh FF-1 and Vivitar 35 EM.

General observations: With the U.S. dollar sagging, prices in Germany were extremely high. Single admission tickets to Photokina were DM 30 or about $15.46 but it didn't prevent determined amateurs from jamming the halls, making the aisles impenetrable on Saturday, Sunday and even Monday.

A helpful pamphlet was distributed to visitors pinpointing 25 specific locations of historic importance in the City of Cologne which would make good shooting for camera fans.



Nativity Scene Kit Contains Everything

"Mom, there's nothing to do."

Sound familiar? Now that fall has brought the cooler temperatures and the kids are indoors more than out, you are probably busy inventing some keep-'em-busy Saturday afternoon projects.

Why not entertain the children constructively by getting them interested in holiday decorating. With Christmas only a little over a month away, the whole family can get involved.

Start out with standard favorites. Construction paper, glitter, string, and imagination will make some great tree decorations.

Or get a head start on your holiday baking with the family's help. Make your Christmas cookie shapes, line up colored icings, and let the decorating begin. Of course, you'll have to supervise this project or there may not be any cookies left to stick in the freezer until Christmas.

One project that allows each family member to help — and will remain to create your personal holiday tradition for years to come — is our Nativity Set.

Available in an easy, fun-to-do kit, the creche nativity scene kit includes everything you need — flexible reusable molds of 10 well-loved figures and stable, whiteware compound, paints, brush, glue, overglaze and instructions. Completed figurines are 1-4 inches tall; creche is 10 in. high by six inches wide by three and a half inches deep.

You may have to help the youngsters cast the figurines, but once they've hardened and have been removed from the molds, they're ready to be painted. There is a color chart that can be followed for decorating the pieces, but imagination and personalization are welcome. How about making an extra set in all-gold, or simply pure white, for a special gift?

Order Creche Kit No. 11332 for $7.99 plus $.95 postage and handling.

Send your name, address, order and remittance to Creative Home Crafts, Dept. 8BB, P.O. Box 1281, Locust at 17th, Des Moines, Iowa 50336. If you wish to use your Visa, Master Charge, or American Express, please give the Master Charge interbank number, credit card number, and expiration date. On orders of $10 or more, credit card users can speed delivery by phoning toll free: 800-228-2048.

Our Policy: You are protected by Creative Home Crafts' policy of complete satisfaction or full refund.

Carvings On Display At Colorado Springs

By ANDY LANG
Associated Press Writer

Q — A couple of years ago, you mentioned something about a National Carvers Museum that was expected to be opened somewhere in Colorado. Since my hobby is woodcarving, I would like to visit the museum sometime in the future. Was it ever opened? And where is it located?

A — A non-profit foundation, the National Carvers Museum is located on an eight-acre site north of Colorado Springs, directly adjacent to the United States Air Force Academy. It houses the work of more than 2,000 American artists and craftsmen. The address is 14960 Woodcarver Road, Monument, Colo., 80132, in case you want further information.

Q — We have just moved into a house which has a furnace with a glass water gauge on the outside. The gauge appears to be about half-filled with water. Is that correct? And how can I tell when the boiler requires more water? It's a steam heat system.

A. — Most gauges have some kind of mark on the glass to indicate the proper level of water. It's usually about halfway up the glass or slightly higher. The level in your gauge is about right. During the heating season, keep an eye on the gauge. If the water drops below the halfway mark — and especially if it isn't visible at all — the boiler needs more water. Before refilling, turn off the heat for about an hour. When a boiler requires frequent refilling, it usually means that steam is escaping from one or more of the radiators, probably through a defective valve.

New Singapore Stamps Feature Monuments

By SYD KRONISH
Associated Press Writer

Since its founding in 1819, Singapore has been a multi-racial and multi-religious society. As immigrants came to its shores, churches and cathedrals were built as well as mosques and Hindu temples. Many of these edifices remain today as monuments of Singapore's past.

Four new stamps have been issued by Singapore featuring these national monuments — an Armenian church, Hajjah Fatimah mosque, Sri Mariamman temple and the Thian Hock Keng temple.

The first adhesive depicts the Armenian church completed in 1835. It is the oldest Christian church in Singapore. Today there are very few Armenians remaining in Singapore, thus the declaration of the church as a national monument seen on the stamp.

The second shows Hajjah Fatimah mosque, built in 1845 and beautified by a single prominent minaret but influenced by the architecture and spire of St. Andrew's Church.

The third illustrates the Sri Mariamman temple, the oldest Hindu house of worship still in use in Singapore. Since 1827 the temple has been refaced and redecorated. The last renovation took place in 1972.

The fourth stamp pictures the Thian Hock Keng, the oldest Chinese temple in Singapore. The present temple building has had very few changes since it was built in 1839.

Each of the stamps is a 10-cent denomination and thin rectangular shape. A souvenir sheet of the same designs also was issued.

A new 22-cent U.S. aerogramme will be issued Nov. 3 in St. Petersburg, Fla., on the opening day of FLOREX '78, the annual convention of the Florida Federation of Stamp Clubs. It is also the site of the annual meeting of the U.S. Postal Stationery Society.

Barbed Wire Show Slated In Vernon

The "World's Largest" Barbed Wire Collection Contest and Show will be hosted by the International Barb Wire Collections Historical Society Nov. 3-5 at the 4-H grounds in Vernon.

Set-up time for contestants will begin at 8 a.m. Nov. 3. Tables for collection displays will be provided free, and trade tables for the three days will cost $10 each.

A Texas-style barbeque will be held the night of Nov. 4. Admission to the contest is free.

Chicken Droppings Converted To Fuel

ELK RIVER, Minn. (AP) — Poultry farmer D'Wayne DeZiel and United Power Association are working on a way to use chicken manure to manufacture energy.

UPA Board President Jacob Nordberg said the Elk River-based power cooperative will pay $90,000 — about one-fourth of the cost — toward construction of a machine that will use droppings from DeZiel's 36,000 chickens to produce methane gas. DeZeil will use about 20 percent of the expected 30,000 cubic feet of gas produced daily, Nordberg said.

Army Gunships Buzz Tennessee Commune

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Army said Thursday it was investigating why a squadron of its helicopter gunships flew low over a southern Tennessee commune for several minutes, frightening many of its 1,100 residents.

Matthew McClure, a spokesman for the 1,750-acre commune called The Farm, said the olive-green camouflaged Cobra helicopters dropped out of a low cloud bank at lunchtime Tuesday.

"They came in flying fast and low," he said. "They split into three groups and they flew down lower into the fields and hovered over the fields. And then they went and ... they hovered outside our houses for as long as five minutes. They also hovered around our school and around our office ...

"They were low enough sometimes flying up the ravines to look into the windows of our houses," McClure said. "The vibrations from their propellers knocked a spice shelf off a wall of a house. They covered pretty much the entire populated portion of The Farm. All of this happened with no warning at all ..."

The Farm is an agricultural community that supplements its income with publishing and outside employment. About half of its residents are children. Members have been the object of some scorn by their more conservative neighbors who dislike their long hair and unconventional lifestyle.

The Army acknowledged shortly after the incident on Tuesday that six helicopters from Fort Campbell, Ky., were in the area, but at first, military spokesmen declined to confirm they were the ones shown in photographs snapped by The Farm folks.

On Thursday, however, the fort's deputy public information officer, Margaret Chamberlain, said: "They were our helicopters...We are not denying."

She added, however, that "until the investigation is over we do not know what happened. We have no idea of them doing this maneuver. They are not supposed to do this maneuver. I'm not saying that hot-shot pilots do not do otherwise.

"Appropriate disciplinary action will be taken if it is determined they defied regulations in taking part in this maneuver," she added.

The Army said the helicopters belonged to the 101st Airborne's 2nd Battallion, 17th Air Cavalry, and were on their way to a training exercise at Eglin Air Force Base in Florida when the low ceiling forced them to drop to a lower-than-normal altitude.

Computer Forecaster Designed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The weather bureau is experimenting with a computer that delivers up-to-the-minute weather forecasts and temperatures over the telephone in a human-like monotone.

If the month-long test in Washington succeeds, the system may be put into nationwide use.

"Our goal is to achieve some uniformity in presentation," said Don Kuhnsman, a scientist for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. "We are not saying it's going to be better than what man does today."

The weather bureau has worked on the system for two years and contracted out about $100,000 worth of work, Kuhnsman said.

A professional broadcaster, speaking into a tape recorder, provided the speech fragments that the computer assembles as it gets the information.

A caller in the Washington area can get the computer-generated forecast from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Why let you girls have all the fun!

I tried that biscuit doughnut deal you had in your column a while back. Worked pretty good, but I made it better!

Instead of just frying a canned biscuit (after having made it into a doughnut shape), I took a biscuit, put a dab of apricot preserve in the center, sealed the stuff in (just one biscuit) and dunked it in the hot oil.

When it was done, I got a glass of milk and gobbled it down!

Gave the rest of the biscuits the same treatment. When I finished, I'd eaten all 10 of 'em. Nuff sed.

Some fun! Apricot inside, cinnamon sugar outside. Yummy! — Vic Beverford

Well, Vic, sounds like you had yourself a humdinger of a time! Wish I could have been there to have shared at least one of those tempting delights with you.

Happy eating anyway. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I'd like to pass on a hint for new mothers that a friend shared with me.

When giving your new infant a bath in a bathinette or small tub, roll up a clean bath towel and place it at the head of the tub.

Place the baby's head on the towel. This allows both hands to be free to wash the baby, and secures baby from slipping.

It works great! — Sandy Hyde

But, remember, Moms, a firm hand holding onto a wiggly, slippery baby is safer. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Are your favorite dress patterns torn or out of date?

Save them by cutting them out of that woven interfacing material. It's very inexpensive and lasts. — Mrs. Lucille Lain

DEAR HELOISE:

I got tired of making a grocery list every week, and many times going off and forgetting it.

So I made a "master list" and put it on the side of the refrigerator with a magnet.

Now, when I'm in a hurry, I grab this list and take off. All I have to do is run down the list to remember which items I need.

From time to time I add something I have read about or seen on TV that I would like to try out.

If discount coupons are needed, I attach them to the refrigerator along with the list.

Saves a lot of time, and I stay cool. — Vickie Carey

DEAR HELOISE:

It will soon be time to be thinking about Christmas gifts.

For those in nursing homes, bibs made from colorful, printed terry cloth would be a welcome change from the white bibs furnished by the home.

A pattern can be cut from one of the bibs used by the guests there at the nursing home. — Indianapolis

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a way I press those newly washed sheer panels that are too wide for the ironing board.

After washing and rinsing them, I hang them back up on the window rods, while they are still damp (not dripping).

I line the bottom hem with my husband's fishing sinkers. The more you put in the hem, the better they pull the panels to drape just right.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be some confusing incidents today, so be sure to have your facts and figures correct. Then you will be able to make rapid headway toward gaining your goals.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep busy at regular work and forget about going off on a tangent that could lead in the wrong direction. Be more cheerful.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Do only that work that is important and devote yourself to recreation today. Think along happier lines and be cheerful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Strive for increased happiness. Do some entertaining of friends and relatives later in the day. Show that you are generous.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Contact good friends and come to a fine understanding with them. Plan the future wisely. Think constructively.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Concentrating on how to make your business affairs more profitable is wise today. Avoid the expenditure of too much money.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) There are fine opportunities for you to advance in the business world so don't get bogged down with personal matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get together with advisers and find out how to handle your business affairs more efficiently. Avoid a temptation to brag.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Endeavor to please friends you admire and gain their goodwill. A private matter can now be resolved to your satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are not thinking very clearly today, so get advice from a higher-up where an important matter is concerned.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new project if fine to engage in without further proscrastination. Make sure you show more kindness to your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be silent for a while early in the day and let your intuitive faculties work so that you will know to proceed in important matters.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Know what your true position is with the one you love and try to please. Obtain the data you need from the right sources.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will be one who is very good at whatever is standard, so don't try to push your progeny into something radically new or you will meet with opposition. Sports are good here, and religion is a must.

Friends Want Singing Driver Reinstated

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — The singing bus driver who was fired for allegedly swiping $8 in fares had a song in his heart Thursday as community leaders mobilized to get his job back for him.

Benford "Benjie" Stellmacher, 25, an employee of the state-owned Connecticut Transit Bus Co., was dismissed last week when two company "spotters" gave him $3 worth of marked $1 bills. The money did not turn up in his day's receipts.

The company management said Stellmacher, who preaches the gospel on Sunday in the Mount Olive Baptist Church, "mishandled funds." Stellmacher said he was just being friendly by giving change to passengers who didn't have the exact 50-cent fare for the Hartford to New Britain run.

Company rules say no drivers should handle money.

Stellmacher said he cashed the bills but sometimes forgot and left them on the bus. At least one man on his run, barkeep Jimmy Cooney at The Marble Pillar, said Benjie often rushed in to change the bills.

No money was found on him the day he was fired.

"I'm moved and I'm touched," said Stellmacher when the city's Human Relations Commission told him it had received 100 or so signatures from sympathetic passengers.

The father of two walked out of a commission meeting, his eyes welling with tears.

"People keep calling," he said, looking shyly down at the floor. "They tell me, 'Keep your chin up Benjie. We know you didn't do it.'"

The commission will represent him when the state Human Rights Commission holds a hearing Nov. 6. Stellmacher said his union has filed a grievance. And a group of black ministers have joined the cause.

"The company said it was comparable to driving a bus while drinking," said Arthur Johnson, executive director of the city commission. "But fellow drivers allege white drivers in the same incidents were not fired.

"It would be different if Mr. Stellmacher were just another driver. He's not just another driver," he said. "Would a similar man of lesser notoriety be handled the same way?"

Passengers who've grown fond of their entertainer-bus driver want Gov. Ella Grasso to intervene. She praised Benjie for what his on-board medleys, birthday parties and personal touch have done for the image of mass transit.

Rev. Richard Battles of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance of Hartford said the bus company refused to meet with his group. The company said the firing is an internal and union matter.

"We have this question, If the money was stolen, why didn't they arrest him?" Battles asked.

Alternative DWI Plan Possibility For Hobbs

A-J Correspondent

HOBBS, N.M. — First-time DWI (driving while intoxicated) offenders in Hobbs could have their own alternative to stiff penalties and loss of driver's license, according to Edward L. Riordan, director of New Mexico's DWI School Program.

The alternative is voluntary participation in a program designed to educate and rehabilitate persons charged with DWI.

New Mexico already has 11 such DWI programs which present facts about ethyl alcohol and its effects on the body. Particular emphasis is placed on alcohol's impairment of driving ability and the varying degrees of alcoholism.

Getting the drinking driver off the road is the main objective of the program, Riordan said.

The program is not a free and easy way out for offenders, however. Legislation establishing the program requires that a DWI school be self-sustaining.

The Albuquerque school charges $25 per person, the Clovis school charges $45 per person, and some schools charge as much as $100 for the one day program.

Municipal court records in Hobbs show an average of 30 drivers per month are sent to the DWI school in Clovis. "Saturday Special Class," from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., is the Clovis program, and judges usually dismiss participants' DWI charges upon completion of the program.

Riordan says less than six percent of drivers who go through the program are arrested again for DWI. Statistics cited include data on more than 10,000 persons who have attended the Albuquerque school.

Barbara Porter and Veldon Law, instructors at New Mexico Junior College in Hobbs, say NMJC may be interested in sponsoring a local DWI school, if it would really be self-sustaining.

LCC Board Post Goes To J.W. Hamby

J.W. HAMBY

Plainview native J.W. Hamby has been named vice chairman of the Board of Trustees for Lubbock Christian College. Hamby was elected to the board in 1972.

He graduated from Plainview High School in 1942. Hamby and his wife, the former Dorothy Jean Merrifield, have four children, all of which have attended LCC.

Hamby is the owner of The Hamby Company of Plainview and is a member of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce, National Chamber of Commerce, Toastmasters, Farm Equipment Manufacturers Association and the Texas Plant Food Institute. He is an elder in the Garland Street of Christ.

B.R. "Rip" Griffin will continue as secretary-treasurer of the board.

Corporation Plans To Restore Avenue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp. has selected a plan that will preserve the National Theater for the first stage of a program to revitalize Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House to the Capitol.

An alternate plan proposed by the National Press Club which would have demolished the theater was rejected by the federally financed development corporation. The National, founded 140 years ago, claims to be the nation's oldest continuously operated theater.

Quadrangle Development Corp. and Marriott Corp., both based in Washington, were selected late Wednesday to build a 16-story, $110 million building on most of the city block surrounding the National Theater. The building, containing a hotel, offices and stores, will be the tallest commercial structure in Washington.

Fuel Cylinder Recall Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cleanweld Products of Los Angeles is voluntarily recalling its yellow CleanBurn Fuel Cylinders, Model CB-1000, manufactured from June 1977 to April 1978, because of potential leaking problems, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said Thursday.

A separation at the point where the threaded connector meets the cylinder may cause a fuel leak, resulting in possible ignition and burns to the user, the commission said. Fuel leakage could also depressurize the cylinder quickly enough to propel it.

The cylinders, used to fuel portable torches, were sold nationwide as part of the "Whirlwind Torch Kit" (PR-3600).

Nicaraguan Politicos Groom For Somoza's Job

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — At least five opposition leaders are grooming themselves to succeed President Anastasio Somoza if and when he leaves or is overthrown.

They range in age from 37 to 55, all are highly educated and articulate, and form a new breed of leaders and presidential hopefuls emerging in Nicaragua as Somoza's authoritarian dynasty weakens.

"For years people seriously thought Somoza was irreplaceable. They used to say if Somoza goes, who is there to replace him? The Communists? " a retired U.S. diplomatic observer said.

"All this is changing, and fast," he added. "A lot of bright business people who got rich under Somoza have turned against him, and the new leaders are coming from their ranks. And they're certainly not communist."

For years, the Somozas — Anastasio Jr. now, his brother Luis before him, and his father Anastasio Sr. who founded tme dynasty in 1933 — never allowed anyone outside the family circle to amass too much power or popularity.

The violence that has shaken Nicaragua since the Jan. 10 assassination of La Prensa newspaper publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, a leading Somoza opponent, and two weeks of fighting between rebels and Somoza's national guard have weakened Somoza's support.

Nearly 2,500 people have been killed and 5,000 wounded, according to Red Cross count, in the 10 months of violence.

Somoza insists he will finish his term as scheduled in 1981. A Broad Oppostion Front of 16 political parties, labor unions and business and professional organizations is trying to negotiate his early resignation and warn of more violence if he doesn't quit.

These are regarded as his possible successors:

ALFONSO ROBELO — Of the five presidential hopefuls — three of whom form the Front's three-man negotiating team — 37-year-old Robelo, a member of the Nicaraguan Democratic Movement, is considered the boy wonder. He amassed a fortune as a business executive at the age of 30, then seven months ago gave up business for politics. He went into hiding all of last month, fearing reprisals from the government because of his role in organizing a 30-day business strike against Somoza.

In an interview with The Associated Press Robelo pointed to neighboring Costa Rica, without an army and a democracy unique in Latin America, as a model for Nicaragua. He is one of the Front's negotiators. Although detractors claim he is still too young and maybe too much in with leftist groups, he is considered to have a following that is growing within the opposition.

SERGIO RAMIREZ — Just a year younger than Robelo and considered Nicaragua's top author, Ramirez calls himself a Sandinista, but says to him the name — taken from the Marxist-organized Sandinista Liberation Front — does not mean guerrilla fighter, but a patriot working for an end to the Somoza dynasty. He has never said he was a member of the Liberation Front, but he represents its interest in the Broad Opposition Front because he is a member of the Group of 12, which includes Sandinistas as weml as priests and intellectuals.

The Sandinista Liberation Front was organized by a small group of Marxists, but as the Somoza opposition grew it attracted people with a wide variety of ideological viewpoints.

Ramirez, who had been in hiding until his appointment to the Front's negotiating team, claims the United States must bear a responsibility for past support of the Somozas, whom it placed in power after an occupation by U.S. Marines in the 1920s. He told The Associated Press in an interview true democracy must be achieved without interference from the United States.

RAFAEL CORDOBA RIVAS — A lawyer and former professor, Cordoba Rivas, 55, is the third man on the Opposition Front's negotiating team. He is a conservative and is considered very influential. His detractors claim, however, he is not capable of leading the country out of the crisis and in his ways smacks too much of the traditional Nicaraguan politician.

RAMIRO SACASA — A businessman with political experience, Sacasa, 52, once was associated with the Somozas. He is widely considered a compromise candidate who could bridge the gap between the Opposition Front and Somoza's Liberal Nationalist Party.

He served as education minister in Luis Somoza's 1956-62 administration, is still a member of one of the party's factions, but has become a vocal critic of the current Somoza.

ADOLFO CALERO PROTOCARRERO — Probably the most forceful of them all, Calero, 52, is chairman of the local Coca-Cola bottling firm and a member of the Authentic Conservative Party. He has been a life-long opponent of the Somozas and speaks passionately about "the corrupt political system" he charges they created.

He was jailed for three weeks for closing the Coca-Cola plant and helping organize the businessmen's strike in September.

Calero demands an honest government in Nicaragua based on a real democracy and a capitalist economy. His ideas on Nicaragua's future have gained him the support of several top-ranking officers in the national guard, many Liberal Party members and the U.S. government. He leads the moderate faction in the Broad Opposition Front, but still stands firmly in favor of Somoza's resignation.

OPPOSITION TO SOMOZA — Three of at least five opposition leaders grooming themselves to succeed President Anastasio Somoza of Nicaragua, if and when he leaves or is overthrown are, from left, Rafael Cordoha Rivas, Sergio Ramirez and Alfonso Rohelo. The three are pictured in Managua, Nicaragua earlier this month. (AP Laserphoto)

Better Results with Comet Long Grain Rice Is Well Worth a Little Extra Effort

Betty L. Torre, author of Rice and The Complete Beginner's Guide to Everyday Italian Cooking.

How much time do "instant" or "quickie" rice products really save you? Very little in my mind. To make Comet Long Grain Rice which has better flavor and a firmer texture, all you have to do is measure the ingredients and bring to a boil. Then lower the heat, cover and simmer for 15 minutes. While the rice is cooking, you are free to prepare the rest of your meal. And you save about 50% on the cost of rice. Here's a recipe for Rice Croquettes with surprise variations I think you'll like.

Betty L. Torre

Rice Croquettes

INGREDIENTS
4 cups cooked Comet Long Grain Rice
3 tablespoons freshly grated Romano cheese
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 or 3 medium eggs
Dry seasoned bread crumbs
Oil for frying

DIRECTIONS
In a large bowl mix together cooked rice, cheese, parsley and black pepper; add 1 egg at a time until mixture sticks together. Wet hands in oil; shape rice into oblong or round croquettes.

Roll croquettes in bread crumbs.

Heat ¾-inch oil in a skillet; fry croquettes until golden brown all over. Drain on absorbent paper. Serve hot.

VARIATIONS: Rice Croquettes can be made ahead of time and reheated in a 375° oven for 10 minutes. They also freeze well.

Oklahoma City Weathers Baby Boom

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Last January the city streets were clogged with snow and ice, and bone-chilling cold limited most outdoor activities.

Now, nine months later, a check of local hospitals indicates the forced indoor togetherness may have contributed to a baby blizzard.

At University Hospital, officials said births are up 21 percent from the same month last year. Audrey Hill, service director for obstetrics and neo-natal care, said the baby boom "could be economic; it could be a lot of women are coming off the pill because they consider it unsafe.

"And, of course, people have alluded to the weather."

Births at Presbyterian Hospital numbered 102 through Oct. 14, compared with 130 for the entire month of October last year, a 58 percent increase, said obstetrics nurse Pamela Duncan.

Births were up 37 percent at South Community Hospital and Mercy Hospital reported the largest increase in births, 69 compared with 58 during all of October last year.

Obstetricians at Mercy were reluctant to blame the weather for the baby boom. They said instead that the 67 percent increase merely reflected a steady growth of births the past few months.

A check of state records indicated otherwise, however. According to the Bureau of Vital Statistics, there were 200 fewer births statewide in September than for the same month of 1977.

The obstetrics department at Deaconess Hospital, which reported a 20 percent increase in births this month, is living proof of the baby boom.

"Would it help if I told you that there are nine OB nurses here that are pregnant?" asked Connie Furr, assistant administrator of the Deaconess obstetrics department.

MEDICAL COLLECTION DAMAGED

Computer Big Help To Terry Farmer

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

BROWNFIELD –When Terry County farmer J. W. Hawkins writes a check, people notice.

The checks, with itemized enteries under family and farm operation categories, are a part of a computerized farm management system Hawkins began using in 1970.

"Each month I receive a computer printout from Agro Systems Corporation telling me what my profit and loss figures are," Hawkins said. "On the printout is an itemized list (obtained from the checks) of each expense for both the family and the farm."

Agro Systems is a Lubbock-based corporation that was established in 1968 to help farmers, ranchers and agribusinesses manage finances.

According to Agro Systems spokeman Hal Evans, the 10-year old company is currently keeping records on 1,200 farms nationwide.

Five different alphabetic setups of the system are available to meet the needs of the individual operation. Hawkins uses a system that pinpoints expenses such as auto, dues, food, gifts, household and medical under the family category and fertilizer, fuel, insurance, seed, supplies and taxes, to name a few, under the farm operation.

The printouts are easy to read because all the items are listed by the actual word, not as numerals or codes.

Instead of a bank statement being sent to Hawkins at the end of the month, the cancelled checks are sent to Agro Systems where they are fed into a computer. From this, a printout is made and sent to Hawkins.

"One of the advantages of having the printout is being able to watch the profit and loss each month to balance income from year to year," Hawkins, who farms 1,400 acres of mostly irrigated cotton, pointed out.

"For example, during a given year I am able to see on the sheet by adding or subtracting profit or loss and depreciation from cash expenses how much cotton I can sell before taxes begin to cut in. You don't have to wait for a five year income tax average to show you which years were good and bad," he stressed.

The monthly printout also shows what percent of the dollar is going to what expense.

Using the October printout, Hawkins added, a farmer can figure how much it is going to cost to produce next year's crop.

"By this time of the year, all the expenses, except for harvest expense, are in. The cost for the 1979 crop could be computed by figuring each expense on the current list multiplied by the rate of inflation.

"Looking at last year's computer sheets I knew I had to cut production costs and I knew which areas had been high in expense. I cut down on the amount of chemicals used and applied them with the fertilizer which saved about $4,000. I also cut back one full-time hand."

Hawkins said another benefit of the system is being able to show hired hands what the expenses are.

"That way the employee is able to see that the owner is not getting rich off of his labor. It often comes as a shock to the help to actually see how much it costs to produce a crop," Hawkins added.

From the information on the computer sheets, charts can be made either by the farmer or with the assistance of Agro Systems. Hawkins said the charts can show the farmer what time of the year the most expense occurs and therefore what time of the year the most money is needed.

In addition, the information on the sheets aids the farmer in confrontations with the Internal Revenue Service, bankers and some government agencies.

"One time my system was used to figure the current cost for producing one acre of cotton," Hawkins said.

"Also by having this system, I have gone into estate planning. I took the printouts to a planning consultant and said here's what I have," he said. "I think that it's very important to plan for retirement and for the payment of taxes and debts in the event of my death so that my family wouldn't have to sell the land."

Although the corporation offers two certified public accountants to the farmers, Hawkins prefers to use a CPA in Brownfield for convenience.

The cost of the management program ranges from $29 to $305 a month depending on the type of system desired and the number of enterprises listed on the checks, according to Evans.

"My system costs less than $85 per month," Hawkins said. "But I figure that I save about $5,000-6,000 a year in taxes alone. Plus, I would have to hire a full-time bookkeeper to keep records like these."

Within a year, Agro Systems hopes to have TV-like screens called terminals available to farmers and agribusinesses to keep payrolls and other pertinent information readily available.

Hawkins said the size of the operation would be a determining factor in the use of terminals. "Of course farms are increasingly getting larger. Many farmers are having to quit farming and some farmers are having to increase the size of their operation. Hopefully, with this type of management system, I will be one that is able to stay in the farming business."

BEET HARVEST UNDERWAY — The 1978 sugar beet harvest is underway in the Hereford area, with growers hoping to complete the work of getting their beets out of the field by the end of November. Beets are shown being loaded onto a truck by a four-row harvester in a field south of Hereford. Although there were problems with beet armyworms in the latter stages of the summer, timely rains sparked a recovery of the beets and prospects are for a harvest improved from that of 1977, according to spokesmen for the Holly Sugar Corp.'s Hereford plant. New Means Of Insect Control Studied

By ROBERT HANEY
Texas Agricultural Experiment Station

Whether you're an average householder or an agricultural producer, you have at least one thing in common with the other: you both spend a lot of time, energy, and money each year in efforts to control insect pests.

Chemical insecticides, at one time thought to be an invincible weapon that would enable man to eradicate any insect pest, are now seen to have limitations and to be just one of the many devices man must use to maintain control of insects.

Some chemical insecticides were found to pollute the environment. Some were found to be marvelously effective in controlling the target insect, but they also killed the natural enemies of some minor insects.

Without their enemies to keep them in check, the "minor insects" soon blossomed into major pests.

Insects in many cases have developed a resistance to insecticides so that 10 times as much insecticide as was used initially will no longer kill. This growing resistance of insects to insecticides, problems of pollution, and the rising costs of buying and applying insecticides point up the need for alternatives.

For a number of years, entomologists with The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) have been developing alternatives to total dependence on chemical controls. Ordinarily, the natural enemies of an insect species keep it in check. Scientists have sought to identify the natural enemies of various pests species and have sought ways to conserve them.

Such natural enemies include parasites, predators, and pathogens. The first, parasites, can be best described by the old saying, "Fleas have fleas."

Actually, parasites of insects come in many forms. One interesting one is a tiny wasp which parasitizes cockroach egg cases. These wasps are harmless to humans and wildlife; they attack only roaches. The adult femal wasp lays her eggs in a roach egg case.

The wasp eggs hatch, and the larvae feed on and eventually destroy the roach eggs. About 70 wasps develop in and emerge from such an attacked egg case.

Research shows that the parasitization rate of the eggs varies between 25 and 75 percent.

This is not enough to eradicate roaches, else the wasp would be eliminating a needed part of its own reproductive process. But combined with other control methods, this tiny wasp is one aid in many that can help us gain and maintain control of roaches.

Other parasites of insects may feed, inside or outside, on their host rather than on the eggs.

Insect predators catch and eat other insects. TAES's scientists are identifying useful predators of harmful insects. A recent discovery of a station entomologist is that a feared and hated pest, the red imported fire ant, is deadly predator of bollworms and bollweevils in the cotton fields.

Pathogens (disease agents) of insects also can be an aid in control. One insect pest that scientists hope to be able to control by natural means is the white grub. White grubs destroy turfgrass by feeding on the roots.

The adult form of this insect, the May or June beetle, lives in the soil and comes out once a year to mate. After mating, females bore back into the earth and begin laying eggs, which eventually produce larvae that feed on grass roots.

At one time homeowners were able to effectively control white grub populations with insecticides, but apparently the insects in some areas have developed a resistance to chemical controls.

Scientists are now investigating the use of certain disease-producing bacteria to control grubs. This form of biological control is much more effective than chemical control since the chemicals may kill beneficial organisms such as earthworms as well, wheras the bacteria affect only the grubs.

A new way to control mosquitoes too has been discovered by Experiment Station scientists at Texas A&M University. Mosquitoes have become increasingly resistant to insecticides in recent years.

Such resistance poses a real danger to humans since encephalitis, yellow fever, elephantiasis, and malaria, feared diseases throughout the world, are all transmitted by mosquitoes.

Biological control agents are being assesed as a means of reducing mosquito populations to tolerable levels. Many predator and parasite species show promise as mosquito control agents.

Parasitic species of the nematod (round worms), fungi and protozoa (single-celled animals) groups are being studied intensively because they frequently occur in natural mosquito populations and have demonstrated their deadliness to mosquitoes, under laboratory conditions.

Station scientists found one of the protozoan species belonging to the genus Lankesteria is lethal to certain species of mosquito. It parasitizers the immature stages of the mosquito.

Based on laboratory studies, confinement of mosquito larvae close to the parasite appears to be an important condition for effective mosquito control. Several mosquito species in Texas pass their larval stages in confined habitats such as old cans, tree holes, rock pools and animal tracks. These species are the most likely subjects for parasitic control.

Such an approach is being taken by scientists at the University of Notre Dame who have adapted the protozoan discoveries made at Texas A&M to a tree-hole-mosquito effort in the Midwest.

Another station scientist has discovered a weakness in the fire ant that has a potential for control of this insect. Natural sterility in some males may be exploited to hold down the numbers of fire ants.

These examples are only a glimpse of the vast, complex research being done to protect our food supply sources, both livestock and plants, along with human health. Whole new systems have been and are being developed to integrate and coordinate all means of insect control so it's effective, safe, economical, and as pollution free as possible.

Full-grown hogs commonly tip the scale at 800 pounds, but the heaviest on record was a pig in North Carolina that weighed 1,904 pounds.

COMPUTER FARMING — Terry County farmer J.W. Hawkins studies the monthly computer printout sheet on his farm operation to check his profit-loss statement. The management system itemizes both family and farm expenses and can be used for planning next year's crop, determining production cost cutbacks and determining how much cotton to sell. PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE MOST WIDELY USED HERBICIDE to control brush on millions of acres of Texas ranchland — 2,4,5-T — has received a vote of confidence from Texas A&M agricultural leaders.

The herbicide has come under review by the Environmental Protection Agency as a possible health hazard.

In a position paper representing three Texas A&M divisions — the College of Agriculture, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service — Dr. Perry Adkisson, vice president for agriculture and renewable resources, said:

"The economic and biological benefits of this chemical, when used according to instructions, cannot be disputed. Few agricultural chemicals have a longer record of safe use than 2,4,5-T on domestic livestock or wildlife — or to humans who have consumed crops or animal products from lands treated with 2,4,5-T.

"THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT 2,4,5-T itself is poisonous to humans or any other animals when used according to the label."

The herbicide has come under widespread controversy as a possible cause of birth defects and miscarriages when used in high concentrations. The ingredient that has been linked to the problem is a chemical called TCDD. One of the most toxic substances known, TCDD is found in minute quantities as an unavoidable contaminant during the production of 2,4,5-T.

"The chemical 2,4,5-T is one of the most efficient, most economical and safest rangeland brush control agents used in Texas today," said Adkisson.

"It is not like an insecticide that is sprayed on cotton five times a year," he explained. "The chemical is sprayed just once every five to 10 years or more as a control agent for rangeland brush like mesquite.

"LOOK AT THE AMOUNT USED in relation to time," he added. "It is infinitesimal."

Adkisson stressed that 2,4,5-T is the most regulated chemical pesticide in Texas. He said it is a chemical that can be purchased and used only with stringent qualifications, noting it can be applied only by certified applicators under very calm weather conditions.

"On the basis of present information, the benefits of 2,4,5-T greatly outweigh the risks," he said. "This doesn't mean the chemical does not carry some dioxins (poisons), but the manufacturers have cleaned up the dioxin problem substantially. There are methods being pushed in the industry right now to make a much cleaner 2,4,5-T."

The rangeland variety of 2,4,5-T should not be confused with a high dioxin level "agent orange," a type of 2,4,5-T that was used in Vietnam and from which much of the current controversy concerning its health hazards stem.

AGENT ORANGE WAS A "DIRTY" 2,4,5-T, said Adkisson, former head of the Texas A&M Entomology Department. The chemical has a substantially greater amount of dioxins than the commercial product sold in the state.

"As I see it, one of the big problems is that the public is being presented a one-sided view," Adkisson said. "It is a view without regard to the herbicide's use here in the Southwest for over 30 years."

The importance of 2,4,5-T in Texas brush control cannot be minimized, he said.

"In reality, there is no effective herbicide currently available that can be used to replace 2,4,5-T in integrated brush control systems," Adkisson added. "In many cases, 2,4,5-T application rates are reduced by 50 percent when applied in combination with other herbicides such as dicamba or picloram. However, the continued availability of 2,4,5-T is essential for the economic and biological effectiveness of the herbicide mixtures."

CHARLES FISHER, A 40-YEAR VETERAN of brush control field study and former head of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's field team, said he has worked with 2,4,5-T since it first came on the market in 1948.

"You have to understand what the rancher is up against," said Fisher. "Mesquite has gradually taken over 30 million to 40 million acres of the most productive rangeland in Texas and literally threatens to choke the land to death."

Fisher, now retired and a former head of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Lubbock, conducted brush control studies on every major ranch in Texas and also has completed research in South America and South Africa.

"Once mesquite and other shrubs and plants begin to develop, the difficulty of working and gathering livestock becomes more costly and often impossible," he said. "Where only a few hours are required to work cattle on an open pasture, it may take days and even weeks in heavy brush."

U.S. Farm Exports Hit Record Value

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of U.S. agricultural commodities last fiscal year totaled a record value of about $27 billion, 2 percent more than experts predicted just two months ago, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Thursday.

Bergland disclosed the export total as he talked about the huge buildup of U.S. grain supplies.

Agriculture Department officials, asked about Bergland's figures, said they were unoffical projections for the 1977-78 year based on the trade reports through August and making an allowance for September, the final month.

In August, USDA projected the year's export value at $26.6 billion, up 10.8 percent from almost $24 billion in 1976-77, the previous record. Total volume then was projected at 117.6 million metric tons, up from the previous high of 102.2 million in 1976-77.

A metric ton is equal to 1,000 kilograms, or approximately 2,204.62 pounds.

Cattle Futures Up Limit At Close Via Strong Rally

By Reuters

CHICAGO – Cattle futures shot up 15 points to the daily limit level of 150 at the close, led by February and April at the limit, Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Exceptionally, distant January was off 7 after slipping 50. The market rallied after breaking to new lows since August, off more than eight cents. Volume was 30,882 cars.

The rebound was mostly technical after the recent strings of losses and came on the face of continued easy tone to cash cattle and beef. Short profit-taking also was a big factor.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 78 1/2A cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. There were 560 deliveries and slaughter was 140,000 head. The major markets are expecting 5,600 head today.

Feeder cattle futures closed up 85 to the daily limit level of 150, led by August. Sales totalled 2,518 contracts.

The market rebounded an early loss of 27 in March. Short profit-taking touched off stops which fed the upturn. The rebound was termed technical after prices fell to the lowest since August on easiness in cash cattle and beef.

Cash feeder cattle were steady with the best top $77.25 per hundredweight at Oklahoma City. There were 324 deliveries. Receipts at the major terminals are expected to be 3,700 head today.

Hog futures finished 85 lower to 32 higher on 8,494 cars.

February paced the decline, losing 110 early, with August up the most after July gianed 40 earlier.

The discount under cash attracted some buying but follow-through was lacking as traders noted increased hog runs and lower prices coupled with unsettled trend to pork porducts. But traders ignored sharp gains in other meat pits.

Wholesale hams were off 1-1/2 to up 1 cents at 94 3/4 to 102 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off 25 cents to $1. The major markets are expecting 21,000 head today.

Pork belly (bacon) futures ended 37 to 62 higher paced by February. Volume totalled 7,453 contracts.

The market recovered after a loss of 102 and briefly climbed 107 in May before some of the gain was erased.

The upsurge in cattle futures touched off late support after the market fell to new five week lows despite firmness in cash bellies. Outset selling followed heavy hog runs and continued storing of product.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to up 1 cent at 54 to 5 7 57 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Tech Horse Judging Team Wins First Place In Ohio Contest

Texas Tech University's horse judging team scored 2,582 points to take first place in team judging at the All-American Quarter Horse Congress in Columbus, Ohio.

The Congress is one of the world's largest horse shows. Twenty-six university horse judging teams from around the country participated in the contest.

This was only Tech's second year to participate at the Congress. Last year, the team placed ninth among 43 teams.

The team as a whole placed first team judging, second in halter judging and fourth in performance judging to take top overall honors. The team is directed by horse specialist Jim Heird of Tech's animal science faculty.

Team members Jan Horton, junior animal business major, Frederick, Okla., placed fourth overall, followed by Sandy Mandel, sophomore mass communications major, Parker, Colo., who placed fifth.

Other team members include Blake Shuttlesworth, sophomore animal business major, Lubbock; Charlie Hemphill, sophomore in agricultural economics, Coleman; and Melinda Weatherbee, senior in pre-veterinary medicine, Childress.

Other team placings were Texas A&M University, second, 2,562; North Carolina State University, third, 2,556; Ohio State University, fourth, 2,555; and Colorado State University, fifth, 2,544.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed 75 cents to $3.75 a bale lower Thursday.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 69 points to 65.93 cents a pound Wednesday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading in the Lubbock spot cotton market Thursday was moderate. Supplies of cotton for sale were heavy and demand was moderate.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat led across-the-board price increases Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade as the dollar's weakness continued to spark speculative interest in grains.

Heavy commission-house buying in wheat pushed prices higher early in the trading session. A decrease in stocks of wheat at ports in Chicago, Toledo, Ohio and Duluth, Minn., also spurred buying, analysts said, partly because of heavy export shipments against earlier purchases.

Reports of foreign demand for U.S. grains continued, with higher cash prices reported at Gulf shipping points. The dollar's weakness, with accompanying trader expectations that U.S. produce cheapened by the dollar decline would attract more buyers, triggered rumors of increased export demand.

Corn prices rose on some buying by large users, and commission-house purchases came after December contracts cleared the $2.35-a-bushel mark. Analysts described the market as technically strong.

Soybean prices were slightly higher and passed the psychological $7-a-bushel barrier in all contract months as speculative buyers met few sellers. Country grain sales generally were slow, and reports of rain in Ohio and Indiana led to some fears of minor delays in harvesting.

HEARTLINE: Sometime last summer I noticed an article in the newspaper about reforms for VA benefit recipients, their dependents and survivors. Could you please refresh my memory about this current legislation? — T.M.

By vote of 85 to 0 the Senate, on July 31, 1978, passed S2384 — Veterans and Survivors Income Security Act. The House, in prior action on June 28, 1978, by a vote of 398 to 5, passed HR 10173 — Veterans and Survivors Pension Improvement Act of 1978.

The two bills, while somewhat different, would create a new pension system applicable to all veterans of the Mexican Border Service and subsequent wars and for their dependents and survivors. The bills would restructure the needs-based pension program to provide greater assistance to those in need and to remove a number of inconsistencies, anomalies and problems which prevent the current program from operating in all cases in the equitable manner intended by Congress. The new pension system would:

1. Assure a level of income above the minimum subsistence level allowing veterans and their survivors to live with a measure of security and dignity;

2. Prevent veterans and widows from having to turn to welfare assistance;

3. Provide the greatest pension for those with the greatest needs;

4. Guarantee regular increases in pension which fully account for increases in the cost-of-living; and,

5. Permit a complete pass through of Social Security benefit cost-of-living increases.

It is to be noted that there are several differences to be resolved in the Senate and House measures. Such differences will be ironed out through conference of the two bodies within the coming weeks.

HEARTLINE: I retired last May on my Social Security work record. I had worked a few previous years for Civil Service. Would I be eligible to withdraw the money I paid into Civil Service since I am not eligible to receive an annuity? Would a withdrawal include the money the government paid into my account? — D.R.

Persons who worked for the federal government but were not eligible for an annuity based on the Civil Service retirement plan are able to withdraw money they have paid into the plan in a lump sum. To do this you should contact the Federal Civil Service Retirement Office in your area and request the Civil Pension Refund form.

You should remember that when you withdraw this money from your account, you are no longer eligible for any kind of Civil Service annuity in the future.

The money withdrawn would include only what you paid into the pension fund and not the matching amounts your employer paid.

HEARTLINE: I am 53 years old and my doctor has pronounced me disabled. I cannot return to work because of a heart condition. Will Social Security accept my doctor's statement and give me a disability benefit? — S.H.

A statement by a physician that a person is disabled is not controlling for the purpose of meeting the disability requirement of the Social Security Act.

When you apply for Social Security disability, your local Social Security office will send your claim to an agency in your state which is under contract to determine if you are disabled under the law. This agency will consider all the facts in your file. They will request medical evidence from your physician, hospital, clinic or institution where you have been treated.

Your physician is asked to report the medical history of your condition (such as what is wrong with you, how severe your problem is, what test results have shown and any treatment you have received). Your doctor is not asked whether you are disabled under the Social Security law.

BAR MITZVAH DEDUCTION

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A U.S. Tax Court judge has ruled a Rhode Island tax lawyer cannot take an $1,800 tax deduction on the $4,200 cost of his son's bar mitzvah. Arthur I. Fixler of Cranston argued that the reception was an opportunity for him to help establish himself in the Rhode Island business community, and 67 of the guests — about 43 percent — were business and professional associates, thus entitling him to deduct the same percentage of the expense.

China To Purchase Mexican Refinery Equipment

By ISABEL ZAMORANO
For The Associated Press

PEKING (AP) — China plans to buy equipment from the Mexican Petroleum Institute for use in Chinese oil refineries, an official visiting Peking with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo said Thursday.

Jose Andres de Oteyza, Mexican minister of Industrial Development, said "tomorrow we will finalize an agreement whereby the Republic of China will buy technology from the Mexican Petroleum Institute to test it in China's refineries."

He said the two governments are studying a plan to invest mutually in petrochemical plants in China and Mexico.

Lopez Portillo was greeted at the refinery by children tossing and waving flowers. A band played martial music, and workers waved Mexican flags.

China's oil wealth was not reflected in the complex toured by the Mexican president. Machinery at that complex, dating from 1968, shows the wear and tear of heavy use. The complex employes 37,000 workers.

The Chinese official told Lopez Portillo the complex has 11 factories that process seven tons of crude annualy, taking out 60 derivative products including gasoline, kerosene, diesel fuel and lubricants.

The Chinese official said petroleum production doubled between 1960 and 1965, doubled again by 1969 and that production reached 1.7 million barrels daily in 1976. China began exporting oil in 1974, he said.

Under an agreement with Japan, he said, China will export 140,000 barrels of oil daily to Japan this year and increase sales to that country to 300,000 barrels a day by 1982. He said China doesn't want to reveal the amount of its oil reserves.

Meanwhile, U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger's presence in Peking was seen here as a sign of American interest in Chinese oil reserves. Details of his talks were not available to reporters covering the Mexican president.

VIETNAM WARFARE

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence sources say Vietnam has sent 10,000 to 15,000 reinforcements to its army facing Cambodia amid expectations of intensified fighting within the next few weeks. These sources estimated that Vietnam now has about 100,000 fighting men in position to push deeper into Cambodia if Hanoi decides on such a move.

Your Personal Biorhythms

by Bernard Gittelson

For your own permanent biorhythm number for the Physical (P), Emotional (E), and Intellectual (I) cycles, just follow these steps:

	P	E	I
STEP 1 YEAR OF BIRTH
STEP 2 A-B MONTH OF BIRTH
STEP 3 DAY OF BIRTH
TOTALS

YOUR PERMANENT NUMBERS

BIORHYTHMS FOR OCT. 27, 1978

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 5, 18, 23, 41, 52, 64, 75 ... Your timing off today
Highs: 1-5, 19-28, 42-51, 65-74 ... Oodles of energy
Lows: 7-17, 29-40, 52-63 ... Take it easy, you're

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 9, 20, 34, 48, 62, 76 ... You're up before dawn
Highs: 7-19, 35-47, 62-75 ... Great day emotionally
Lows: 1-6, 21-33, 48-61, 77-85 ... Stay under control

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 10, 26, 43, 58, 76, 92 ... Curb decisions
Highs: 11, 27, 44-57, 77-91 ... All intellectual systems go
Lows: 1-9, 27-42, 59-75, 93-95 ... Information delayed, lost

Shep Messing's permanent numbers are 45, 50, 42

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Recent Votes Of Area Congressmen Recorded

HOUSE

SNAIL DARTER Adopted, 231 for and 157 against, an amendment to permit continued construction of the Tellico Dam in Tennessee by removing it from the reaches of the Endangered Species Act. A recent Supreme Court decision is blocking work on the Little Tennessee River public works projects on grounds that the dam threatens the habitat of the snail darter, a fish protected by the endangered species law. This vote came during consideration of HR 14104, a bill later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

The version of the bill approved by conferees and sent to President Carter continues to apply the Endangered Species Act to the Tellico Dam. However, unless a special executive branch committee takes action within 90 days to affirm that jursidiction, the project automatically will be exempted from the law.

Rep. Marilyn Llody, D-Tenn., a supporter, said "every indication available points to the fact that the snail darter is surviving and in fact prospering in habitats other than the Little River, specifically in the Hiwassee River."

Rep. Edwin Forsythe, R-N.J., an opponent, said "it is not yet determined whether the transplanting of the snail darter (in the Hiwassee) is actually effected..."

Members voting "yea" favored exempting the Tellico Dam project from the Endangered Species Act.

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, James Collins, R-3, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5, Bill Archer, R-7, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, W.R. Poage, D-11, James Wright, D-12, Jack Hightower, D-13, John Young, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Omar Burleson, D-17, George Mahon, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, Robert Krueger, D-21, Bob Gammage, D-22, Abraham Kazen, D-23, and Harold Runnels, D-2 (N.M.), voted "yea."

Reps. Olin Teague, D-6, Dale Milford, D-24, and Manuel Lujan, R-1 (N.M.), did not vote.

ENERGY BILL Voted, 207 for and 206 against, to consider the five major energy bills not separately but as a package to be approved or rejected on a single up-or-down vote. The bills deal with coal conversion, natural gas pricing, electric utility rate reform, conservation and the setting of incentives and penalties on energy use.

Although procedural, this vote was virtually a referendum on the President's national energy policy. The 206 opponents wanted separate votes on each of the five bills, in hopes of defeating one or more of them. The natural gas bill, eventually removing all price controls, was the most vulnerable.

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, a supporter, said that all five bills taken together form "a solid, logical platform on which to build for the future... a start in coping with our energy problem."

Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., an opponent, said the administration's strategy to lump the five bills together is an admission that the natural gas component "is too weak to stand on its own merits."

Members voting "yea" favored enactment of the five-part program.

Wilson, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Poage, Wright, Young, Kazen and Milford voted "yea."

Reps. Teague, Gonzales and Lujan did not vote.

ATTORNEY FEES Rejected, 153 for and 222 against, an amendment allowing banks and individuals sued under federal banking laws to be reimbursed by Uncle Sam for attorney fees and court costs — if they win the lawsuit. It was proposed to HR 13471, a bank regulatory bill which later was set aside.

Although the amendment addressed itself only to civil suits brought under certain banking laws, its supporters hoped to established a precedent that eventually would benefit successful defendants in other areas of government litigation — such as parties who win suits brought by the IRS or OSHA.

Rep. Ferdinand St. Germain, D-R.I., an opponent, said that if the legislation had merit a similar proposal would not be firmly lodged in a Judiciary Committee pigeonhole.

Members voting "yea" felt the government should pay the defendant's litigation costs when it unsuccessfully brings a civil law suit.

Roberts, Mattox, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Mahon and Gonzalez voted "nay."

Teague, Wright, Young, Krueger and Lujan did not vote.

SENATE

SUNSET PROVISION Tabled, 50 for and 41 against, an amendment to establish a periodic congressional review and justification of tax loopholes (or, as they are also called, tax incentives). This voted prevented inclusion of the amendment in the tax bill (HR 13511).

The measure stipulated that tax loopholes (incentives) would come up for review on an individual basis every 10 years and would expire unless extended by affirmative action of the House and Senate. The Senate Finance Committee or House Ways and Means Committee could exempt from the review process any tax loophole (incentive) it wished to perpetuate.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., a supporter of tabling, said the procedure is "dangerous and wrong" because it would "put into our economy that feeling you cannot depend upon the permanency of the tax law."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent of tabling, said the drafting of tax legislation is already "chaotic," and that "if the business world of America could sit in these galleries and watch how tax policy is written, they could not invest another nickel in America."

Senators voting "nay" favored establishing the review process for tax loopholes (incentives).

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, and Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), voted "yea."

Sens. John Tower, R, and Peter Domenici, R (N.M.), did not vote.

HOSPITAL COSTS Failed, 42, for and 17 against, to table and thus kill a proposal for standby controls on hospital costs. Left unchanged by the vote was language to impose mandatory government controls if the American Hospital Association's voluntary controls prove ineffective. The association urges its members to cut the rate of cost increases by 2 per cent this year and another 2 per cent in 1979.

This vote occurred during debate on HR 5285, a health bill that died when the 95th Congress adjourned. It marked the first time either house had voted approval of federal controls on hospital costs.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., a supporter of tabling and thus killing the proposal, said it takes "the bludgeon rather than the carrot-and-stick approach."

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., an opponent of tabling, called the standby authority "a reasonable compromise" between mandatory and voluntary controls.

Senators voting "nay" favored the standby authority for federal hospital-cost controls.

Bentsen and Schmitt voted "yea."

Tower and Domenici did not vote.

THREE-MARTINI LUNCH Voted, 49 for and 9 against, to retain the present tax deduction for business meals such as the fabled "three-martini lunch." This vote tabled and thus killed an amendment to disallow 50 per cent of the deduction. It came during debate on HR 13511, the major tax bill later signed into law.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, a supporter of the tax deduction, said that "for the business community, business meals are one of the tools of the trade."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., sponsor of the amendment, said: "If there is any symbol in our society of two-class system it is on the one hand the working people who pay for their (meals) and on the other hand those who have the opportunity to write off their (meals) on their expense accounts which are subsidized by the taxpayer."

Senators voting "yea" favored the tax deduction for business meals.

Bentsen and Schmitt voted "yea."

City Council Passes Discrimination Ordinance

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council Thursday passed an ordinance on first reading which makes it illegal to discriminate against persons at public facilities, but decided against passing another ordinance which would have required the railroads to install safety devices at hazardous crossings.

The much-discussed "public accommodations ordinance" passed on a vote of 4 to 1 with councilman Bud Aderton voting "no."

The ordinance makes it illegal for any person to be refused "accommodations, advantages, facilties or services offered to the general public" because of race, color, religion, ethnic background or national origin. Age, sex and physical handicapps will be added to that list before the law is considered for the final reading.

Clubs will be required to post entrance requirements under the modified ordinance, a provision aimed at preventing clubs from selectively enforcing dress codes or identification requirements to exclude minorities.

Those violating the ordinance, which is based on a similar law in El Paso, would be subject to a fine of up to $200 per violation.

City Attorney John Ross, who worked with the ordinance while El Paso city attorney, described it as the "bullet rather than the shotgun approach — approach it and hit it head-on."

However, Vivian Mendez, representing the Coalition for Equal Justice, urged the council to specifically mention identification and dress code requirements in the ordinance. Without those specifics she said the ordinance "was not worth two cents."

She said some club owners admit minorities, and ask them to leave for no apparent reason. One friend of hers was denied admittance to a local tavern because he was told patrons were not allowed in wearing high-waisted slacks.

Ross said the ordinance would cover both situations because it specifies patrons cannot be denied services offered to the general public and says it is illegal to indirectly discriminate against someone.

"The ordinance is very broad and would cover any form of discrimination," Ross said.

Another coalition member, Steve McIntyre, said he thinks the ordinance "is inadequate," but said it should help "develop a record of a pattern of the violations" to help in a federal civil rights case.

Council members also decided an that an ordinance to have safety devices installed at hazardous railroad crossings was unnecessary after hearing from attorneys representing both railroads which operate in Lubbock.

The proposed ordinance would have required the railroads to install and maintain devices at crossings deemed hazardous by the city director of traffic.

Bob Moody, representing the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad, said he was "shocked at such an ordinance because I felt the relations between the railroad and the city were good."

The attorney for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, Owen McWhorter Jr., echoed those sentiments, adding that if problem crossings exist the railroad would be glad to work with the city to solve the problem.

"Santa Fe is as much interested in safe crossings as the city," he said.

"The council already has the means to take the crossings on a case by case basis," McWhorter said, adding the city can place any crossing device they wish at an intersection according to state law.

Council members agreed to encourage a systematic method of identifying hazardous crossings and finding ways to pay for needed safety devices.

As councilman Alan Henry summed up the feeling of his colleagues, "Mutual cooperation is always better than passing a law."

Council members decided Thursday to send city staff members to Albuquerque, N.M., to get first-hand information on that city's program of rewarding informants.

Mayor Dirk West had suggested implementing a similar program in Lubbock, in which persons who provide information leading to the arrest, conviction or indictment of a felon would receive rewards of up to $1,000.

"We've got to do everything we can to help the police department," West said. "There's no way this program would not work."

By rewarding informants, West said he hoped criminals would become nervous and worried, and some habitual criminals would move on to other areas.

West said the tipster's identity would be protected, with only the police knowing the names of the informants. A board of business people would be responsible for determining the amount of the reward to be paid and who should be paid.

West learned Thursday the Chamber of Commerce has been toiling over a similar program, but pledged the city would work closely with and consult the chamber.

But the mayor emphasized the "teeth" of the program, the rewards, are necessary and predicted failure for any program missing that element.

Chamber manager John Logan, who said the chamber's "citizen's awareness program" would be unveiled in two or three weeks, foresaw the two campaigns complementing each other.

In addition the council:

— Approved a city policy allowing adjacent property owners to pay for the removal of concrete medians which meet certain guidelines.

— Raised the loading zone fees and established an additional installation fee. The changes are expected to generate an additional $1,860 each year.

— Transferred $4,500 from Community Development contingency funds to the Community Development department for additional office equipment and a part-time law clerk.

— Endorsed the passage of a proposed constitutional amendment which would permit the city to issue industrial revenue bonds to attract industry from out-of-state.

— Accepted a $380,456 grant from the Federal Aviation Administration for the reimbursement of an airport land purchase.

Layers of grasshoppers found embedded in glaciers of the Rocky Mountains prove the insects swarmed over the area centuries before the first settlers arrived.

Private Hunting Site New Hampshire Mystery

CROYDON, N.H. (AP) — Townspeople talk about it, Rudyard Kipling wrote about it, presidents visited it and people passing on Interstate 89 see it. But it may be New Hampshire's best-kept secret.

Officially, it is the Blue Mountain Forest. To most, it's Corbin's Park.

Said to be the largest private hunting preserve in New England and one of the largest in the country, the park's 20,000 acres are stocked with deer, elk, bear and boar. It is surrounded by a 10-foot-high wire fence and impenetrable woods.

"It's like taking part of New Hampshire history and ringing a curtain around it. It's like walking back in time," said a visitor.

The forest, about the size of Manchester, New Hampshire's largest city, is owned by the Blue Mountain Forest Association, which limits membership to 30 people who pay big money for their privacy.

The preserve was created in the late 1800s when railroad, land and bank baron Austin Corbin, founder of the Long Island Railroad and Coney Island, returned to his native western New Hampshire to build a place where "all the animals of the world can live harmoniously."

Since then, association members, town officials, state fire tower watchmen, selected guests — and poachers — are the only people who've been inside. "They have their own little kingdom up there," a Croydon resident said.

The fence, 30 miles of it; the people, including Theodore Roosevelt, Herbert Hoover and Woodrow Wilson; the animals, including elk, imported boar, western bison, added to the park's mystique.

Kipling, who visited in 1890, mentioned the park in "Captains Courageous." "Slant Beeman" owns "about every railroad on Long Island, they say, and they say he's bought 'bout half Noo Hampshire an' run a line fence around her, an' filled her up with lions an' tigers an' bears an' buffalo an' crocodiles and such all," he wrote.

The account may be exaggerated but, "Beeman" (Corbin) bought 63 farms and other land, including about half of Croydon and parts of Cornish, Grantham, Springfield and Plainfield.

Stories say Corbin mapped out where he wanted the park and started buying land. One account says he paid everyone his asking price and more, but others said uninterested farmers were forced to sell after their land was surrounded by the fence.

FENCED OUT — The main gate of the Blue Mountain Forest, about one and a half miles deep into the woods, leaves no doubt that uninvited guests are not welcome. (AP Laserphoto)

But now, "It is like it just doesn't exist," said a local woman, who, like others, did not want to be identified. "The old-timers are gone and the younger people just don't think about it."

Association members avoid publicity. The president, who also asked that he not be identified, said it is policy not to talk about the park because every time someone does, poaching increases.

It is rumored that association members pay as much as $100,000 for the privilege of passing through the wire fence, which extends two feet into the ground to thwart escapes by the snout-nosed boar.

No one will confirm that, but no one has denied it.

"We are just a pretty ordinary bunch of guys," said one member. "Some are retired doctors, we have a couple of automobile dealers, and a gun manufacturer, mostly just ordinary people who like to hunt."

New members are admitted only when members die or leave the association. Candidates must be recommended by members and interviewed by a committee.

In a brief filed in the New Hampshire Supreme Court in a tax dispute, the association said it exists for "recreational facilities for its members and incidentally thereto, for cultivation, improvement and conservation of forest lands and timber."

The association adjusts hunting seasons according to the number of animals in the preserve. Sometimes the seasons are longer than the state's hunting seasons, sometimes shorter.

Perhaps the best known story about the preserve concerns the release of wild boars during the 1938 hurricane. The storm blew down sections of fence and the boars escaped — and have roamed the hills nearby since.

The park's most famous animals were western bison. Corbin kept about 200 head, which provided 50 to 60 calves a year, the association president said. Corbin sent the animals back west and to zoos and museums when the western animals became extinct. "We wouldn't have buffalo in the United States now except for the New Hampshire buffalo," he said.

Salvage Diver Set To Recover Yacht, Possible Fortune

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (UPI) — Sixty-seven years after the Gunilda slipped into the icy depths of Lake Superior, the only living diver to .each the luxury yacht is ready to raise the sunken prize and avenge the death of his partner.

Reports that the 700-ton wreck holds a fortune in jewels are very much on his mind, but it's the challenge of recovering the 196-foot yacht of millionaire William Lamont Harkness that has driven Fred Broennle since 1970.

Alongside his dock bobbed a Broennle-designed submersible that can operate at depths of 1,550 feet, a salvage barge with crane and massive floating tanks. All was in readiness for the salvage operation 90 miles to the east.

Harkness, a Cleveland multimillionaire associated with Standard Oil, was on a holiday cruise in October 1911 when he made an unwise decision to save money.

"The owner refused to pay a small fee ($15) for a pilot to navigate them through the rocks into Rossport," Broennle said. "He went on an uncharted rock called McGarvey shoal."

The mistake was compounded when Harkness "was so sure she wasn't leaking he had all the ports open. When the tug pulled him off, she rolled over on her beam. She took water through the portholes, filled with water and sank."

Off McGarvey shoal, Broennle said, "It's not a sheer drop but just about ..."

Only 14 years after she slid out of a Scottish shipyard at a cost of $200,000, Gunilda settled to the sloping bottom some 300 to 400 feet below.

Harkness was reportedly accustomed to travelling in style and some reports from the time say his yacht carried $300,000 in china and silver and $500,000 in jewels.

But there is more than cargo to draw Broennle.

"I lost my friend, my partner, down there — King Hague," said Broennle, a gruff, stocky man, who gave up an electrical contracting business to open a salvage firm after the death.

In the summer of 1970, Hague, using compressed air for a depth of 300 feet and wearing only a wet suit for water five degrees above freezing, dove into the lake to search for the Gunilda. He never returned.

"There's nobody alive who can go to that depth with compressed air and come back alive," Broennle said. He almost proved the point when he dove in to look for his partner and ran out of air.

While Broennle failed to find Hague, he was amazed to learn he was only 25 feet from the almost perfectly preserved yacht. It was not until six years later — during which Broennle twice reached the Gunilda — that he found Hague.

While scanning the Gunilda's silent hull with an underwater television camera Broennle's crew spotted something. "You could tell right away it was him. He had hardly changed at all," crewman George Wymer said.

In the near-freezing waters of Lake Superior, bodies — like ships — are preserved in near perfect condition. That could make the recovery of the Gunilda very lucrative.

Exactly what she carried will be known only when she's raised. "It's not really known," said Broennle, who purchased all rights to the vessel from Lloyd's of London last year for an undisclosed sum.

"We paid out quite a bit of money," Broennle said. He added that at the time of the sinking "some payments were made to individuals."

Broennle won't speculate on what's aboard the wreck. He said his goal was just to "bring the whole ship up, maybe restore it — I don't know."

But Wymer, one of the men who will operate the two-man, deep-diving submarine to attach cables to the Gunilda, is very aware of the reported $500,000 cache of jewels. "You can imagine what they're worth now," he said.

Broennle's intent seemed clear when Wymer glanced at pictures of the luxury yacht on the wall of his chart-filled room. "We've been ordered not to set foot on it," Wymer said with a smile.

Senator Complains About Water Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Charles H. Percy has complained to District of Columbia Mayor Walter Washington that his city water bills are "outrageously high."

In a letter to the mayor, the Illinois Republican said his water and sewer bills exceeded $2,000 in one recent 12-month period — much higher than nearby residents in the exclusive Georgetown neighborhood where he lives. Percy, a millionaire, also protested the failure of city officials to correct what he contends are errors in the bills.

"By any administrative standard, this matter has not been handled in a satisfactory manner," complained Percy, who is the ranking Republican on the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which oversees the city's government.

Late Field Goal Gives Tech Win

First Texas Tech and then West Texas State called times out. Tech wanted stop the clock (with seven seconds remaining) to get in its kicker and go for a field goal.

Then WT wanted to make the Picador kicker, John Greve, think about his 30-yard try.

But, the sophomore from Bethany, Okla., powered the football just over the horizontal bar for the 3-pointer, and the Picadors pulled out a 22-19 verdict over the WT junior varsity in the annual Khiva Shrine football game for charity.

The winning points came just five minutes after Greve had tied the count with a 22-yard effort.

It was a game which took more time (thanks to a steady stream of penalties) than the nationally televised battle between Dallas and the Minnesota Vikings. And that front-room contest probably affected the crowd at the charity affair. The sponsoring Shriners, however, stand to gather in a healthy sum, via advance ticket sales and program profits. All proceeds from the game will go to the Shriners' fund to support their burns institutes and crippled children's hospitals.

It was a case of the Picadors leading most of the way, but getting in trouble with mistakes and the Baby Buffs re-

LCHS Beats Borger JV

BORGER (Special)–Runningback Gary Paul Miller scored four second half touchdowns as the Lubbock Christian High Eagles defeated the Borger junior varsity 49-14 here Thursday night.

Besides four touchdowns, Miller rushed for 223 yards.

And when Lubbock Christian quarterback Ken Allison didn't give the football to Miller, Steven Sykes' number was called. Sykes gained 102 yards and scored one touchdown.

However, though the Eagles won the football game by a 35-point margin, the two teams played a close first half. The two teams went to the first half dressing room with LCHS sporting a 15-6 lead.

"Gosh, they were a big football team" said a happy Lubbock Christian coach George Harper. "It was a physical football game."

The win raises Lubbock Christian's record to 7-1 on the season. The loss drops the Borger junior varsity to 4-3.

Borger puts its points on the board in the second and third quarters, while the Eagles were able to score in each of the four periods.

Cowboys Look Paltry As Vikes Win 21-10

DALLAS (AP) — Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton says he is playing quarterback better than he has in his 18-year National Football League career, and he made believers of the Dallas Cowboys Thursday night.

Tarkenton, operating from a new Vikings' offensive alignment, mastered every important third down situation and stung the world champion Cowboys' defense with two touchdown passes in a 21-10 Minnesota victory.

Tarkenton did some of his damage from a formation in which Coach Bud Grant put in a special shift to confuse the Cowboys.

"This is the first time we used the shift extensively," Tarkenton said. "I like multiple play formations. I'd like to have something different every week.

"Tom Landry is a genius," he said of the Dallas coach. "Why do you think he has a shifting offense? Why, it's to confuse the defense."

But Tarkenton added, "We didn't beat them on the new formation. We beat them by playing well."

Grant said, "We thought we had to do a little something different for the Cowboys, because they are a great football team."

Chuck Foreman, who flashed his old all-pro running form, said of the shift, "We only had two days to work it up. With a shift, you have to remember just exactly where you line up. But I think we made it look more difficult than it really is."

Tarkenton vowed before the game, "We'll throw the ball on first down, second down and third down."

And he did until he had the Dallas defense dizzy. Then he called on Foreman, who did the job on the ground.

LHS Takes 10-7 Win Over MHS

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For the Lubbock High Westerners, it didn't matter if the Monterey Plainsmen were 1-5-1 or oh-and-60 for the season when they entered Lowrey Field Friday night.

What did matter is Lubbock High whipped their 50th Street rivals 10-7. And you can quote coach Rusty Talbot on that, if you want to.

"We realized that Monterey's down quite a bit this season," said Talbot, sporting a rather large smile. "But that doesn't matter a bit. Whenever these two teams get together records don't mean a thing.

"We're just happy we won."

Gosh, oh gee, were they.

The way the Lubbock High crowd gathered around Talbot and Co., following the game, it appeared more like V-J Day than just another win. For Lubbock High, though, it wasn't just another victory.

Lubbock High, which entered the game with a 3-4 mark, used a 20-yard field goal by Andy Vasquez with 4:29 left in the game and then held off a strong Plainsmen comeback try, to post the win—their first over Monterey since 1975. That same year, LHS went on to capture the District 4-AAAA crown, too.

And for Talbot, it was his first win over Monterey since taking over as head coach at Lubbock High back in the bicenntinial year, 1976.

Asked if the win was the biggest for him since coming to LHS, Talbot replied: "There's no doubt about it."

With the victory, also goes the coveted Silver Spurs–an item the two schools have battled for since 1956.

For most of the chilly evening, Talbot wasn't smiling—particulary when his offense was on the field turning the ball over and over again to Monterey. Six

. . .Of Aggies And Amateurs

WHEN TIME AND space run short. . . Think those guys at Alabama don't listen when The Bear gets ready to speak at halftime? "It's so quiet (in the dressing room), you could hear a cockroach dying," says soph noseguard Byron Braggs. . . Nothing succeeds like winning: SMU's home crowd of 64,871 against Houston last week is the largest for the school since the '65 Arkansas game drew 68,500. And four years ago, the SMU-Rice game brought in 6,918 folks. . .

Maury Buford's punting average remained at 46.7 yards last week, as he booted but once. But the Tech freshman's nearest competitor for the national punting lead, Ray Stachowicz of Michigan State, dropped off a bit, to 45.3 yards. James Hadnot, with that 139-yard game against Rice, is now 16th in the country in rushing, with a 107.8-yard average. Mike Ford of SMU leads the nation in total offense. And fifth? Brad Wright of New Mexico, the guy who decimated the Raider secondary two weeks ago. . .

REMEMBER CHARLES BREWER, the old Westerner quarterback of '51 state championship days? The talent must run in family; his son, Robert, is quarterback at Richardson High, and rival coaches term him "outstanding." . . . Tech this fall advertised for a non-paying job as batgirls for the baseball team. Tech officials need 14 — but they received more than 180 applications from coeds. They'll pick the cuties this weekend. . .

Now, if the alumni and school officials will just give Tom Wilson a chance to show what he can do. It will be difficult for Aggie officials to overlook Wilson if his team performs well the rest of the year. It would be unfortunate if the hiring committee went that big-name route, starting with the Ara Parseghians and John McKays and working down, as has been the feeling as some schools through these parts. Going half way across the country doesn't always produce better results. . . The coaching change didn't affect the stadium improvement at Aggieland, though. Already, equipment is being moved in for start of the project (a third deck) in late November. . .

THIS BUSINESS OF nabbing mascots sometimes backfires. A couple of decades ago, some playful SWC rivals stole one of Baylor's bears, but by the time the night was through, the bear had stripped the inside of the getaway car. Then a few weeks ago, some naive Air Force cadets spirited away Cam the Ram, the Colorado State mascot. First the he-goat butted down the door of a stable where he was being hidden. Then, transferred to another stable, he butted down a wall. Finally, it took a stronger room and a truck to block the door. So? So Colorado State got its ram back, and the football Rams butted down the Air Force 31-13. . .

Arkansas coach Lou Holtz, after the loss to Texas: "It was a disappointing loss, and we could make a lot of excuses but we won't. Thse who complain about having two many bad bounces are usually the ones who dropped it." . . . Canada is snow and ice country, and little time to get outdoors, right? Well, the leading amateur sport, for those over 14 years of age, is swimming; 32 percent of those involved in amateur games major in that sport. And, surprisingly, tennis is third in interest (13 percent, behind ice skating). Golf (11 percent) even tops ice hockey (8 percent). . .

IT'S NOT ONLY time for conference confrontations, but for bowl reps to start spotting prospcts. Presence of these folks in the press box sometimes has decided effects on both teams. . .

Baylor at TCU — After all the frustrations of the season, both the Bears and Frogs came up winners last week. Both were upsets, but the Baylor win over the Aggies had to be the bigger win. With that one under their belt, the Bears will be almost unstoppable this week. Baylor by a comfortable margin. . .

Rice at Texas A&M — This will be Tom Wilson's team, and again it isn't. There are only so many changes that can be made in a week. The way the Aggies perform will be strong indication of their feelings toward Wilson — and Bellard. But, Rice will be the unfortunate victim. A&M by a big bunch. . .

SMU at Texas — Johnnie Johnson and his defensive mates will have plenty of time to prove their worth. Mike Ford has passed on some good clubs this year, and he will hit some over and through the Longhorns. The question is if he can complete enough. The 'Horns won't lose many more, if any. UT by a few. . .

Arkansas at Houston — If this one doesn't decide the eventual SWC champion and Cotton Bowl host, then it will rank near the top. Houston is rolling, the Porkers are rebounding. Arkansas, remember, knocked UH out of an undisputed championship two years ago, and revenge is a factor. But, so is the rebound matter, after the Razorbacks lost that heart-breaker last week. Playing in the Dome could have some affect, but not as much as such folks as Danny Davis and Emmett King and David Hodge and Hosea Taylor. UH 24, Arkansas 21.

Wishbone Going Out A&M's Wilson Says

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — New Texas A&M coach Tom Wilson says Aggie fans will be seeing less of the wishbone formation that was pioneered by Emory Bellards during his career as assistant coach at Texas.

Wilson, 34, was one of the leading candidates for the head coach at Texas Tech last year and has a reputation as advocating a wide-open offense. He had served as offensive coordinator at both Texas Tech and A&M, calling plays from the press box.

Wilson suddenly ascended to the head coach's job Tuesday after Bellard resigned and the new coach said he would make some changes in the Aggie offense.

"I'm not one of those pass-happy guys," Wilson said at at news conference called less than 24 hours after he was named interim head coach. "Any offensive strategy has to be running first and complemented with the pass."

Bellard's wishbone offense, which relies heavily on running and is a poor vehicle to catchup when behind, apparently will be used sparingly by Wilson to the delight of legions of Aggie fans.

"We'll be prepared to go with the wishbone, especially in short yardage and goaline situations," Wilson said. "But the main thrust of the offense should be to get in the endzone."

Wilson, a native of Corsicana, learned college football as a running quarterback for J T King's Texas Tch Red Raiders in the late 1960s.

Wilson said he spent his 13 years as an assistant college coach since then preparing to become the head coach at Texas Tech.

"That had been a major part of my thinking, that I was going to be head coach at Texas Tech. No question about it, I was upset (when Rex Dockery was chosen)," Wilson said.

Wilson said he had no inkling that Bellard would resign. He said a rumored slowdown by Aggie players in support of Bellard had not come to his attention.

"I've certainly heard nothing to that, and I would be disappointed if that was true," he said.

Floydada Meets Idalou In Key District Game

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Floydada plays Idalou tonight for what could well be the District 3-AA football championship, but Whirlwind coach L.G. Wilson says he's worried his people aren't excited enough.

It's not the players that are pressing on Wilson's mind, it's the crowd.

"We're kind of numb about it (the Idalou game)," Wilson said. "We had a tough one last week. It took a lot of excitement out of us. We might have some problem getting excited for this one — not the boys, no, but we have had a little trouble getting the townspeople up."

The problem, as Wilson sees it, lies with Lockney. The Longhorns, because they live only about 10 miles away, are about as popular in Floydada as crop blight.

And, even though this seems to be the Whirlwinds' year in the rivalry, the animosities still make for a good game.

Floydada had to come from behind to win 10-7 over Lockney last weekend.

"We knew Lockney would be a tough one," Wilson said. "But this one will be for the marbles. Well, let's say whoever wins it will be in the driver's seat for the district championship."

Floydada is now 6-1 on the year with only an early loss to Muleshoe blotting it's record. Idalou is undefeated after six games and, in its last outing, beat Muleshoe 21-7 on the road.

The only other common opponent for the teams is Olton. Floydada beat it 24-7, Idalou 21-7.

That shows the improvement the Whirlwinds have made since that second-game loss.

"We've improved considerably," Wilson said. "Especially on defense. But we look pretty good offensively at times too. Our passing game is really coming around to what we want.

"But we've also got a lot better poise. We used to get rattled easily. We're getting better field position now, because of our defense, and because our kicking game has improved."

On the other side of the area, Littlefield will match up with Muleshoe in another possible district-decider.

Muleshoe has only lost to Idalou. Littlefield has lost twice — back-to-backers to Lockney (10-7) and Floydada (17-7).

"I feel like we're a young football team that has gotten better as the season has come along. I hope we'll continue to do that," Littlefield boss Jerry Blakely said.

"We've got a great deal of respect for Muleshoe. They have a lot of quality ball players. They play good defense and they have an exciting option football team.

"They're dangerous any time you let them touch the ball. Overall, it's hard to find a weakness in their program."

Blakely said star tailback Rudolf Smith will be back in the starting lineup for the first time in two games.

"We're a different team with him in there," Blakely said. "He's a real quality running back."

In other key games on the area slate:

Tahoka will try to get back on the winning track against Denver City. Seminole, the team that beat Tahoka last weekend, will try again, hosing Frenship.

The Indians have been up one week, down the next since the district 5-AA season started. The opening weekend they beat Roosevelt 47-7. But then they fell down, losing the Denver City 27-7. Then last weekend they tipped defending champ Tahoka 14-12.

In 5-A, Stanton visits O'Donnell as the undefeated (in district) Buffaloes try to keep pace with Seagraves. The Seagraves Eagles, meanwhile, will be picking on Plains with wins over Shallowater and O'Donnell already under their belts.

In Class B, Valley continues its drive to conquer 2-B North, taking the crusade to Motley County this time.

In the southern part of the district, Amherst visits Lazbuddie and Sudan rests with a forfeit from Smyer. Sundown visits Whiteface, winless and scoreless in six starts with 309 points allowed.

In 3-B West, Meadow visits Sands, Wilson is at Klondike and Dawson travels to New Home.

Borg Battles Fibak

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Swedish tennis star Bjorn Borg will visit Poland Dec. 2 for a special charity match against Polish player Wojtek Fibak, the sports newspaper Sportowy said Thursday.

The match will take place at the 7,000-seat indoor court in the city of Poznan.

Estacado Hosts Borger, Dunbar Visits Canyon

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

While, most of the city's high school football coaches were comparing notes about strengths and weaknesses of particular foes prior to a press conference, Estacado mentor Louis Kelley silently sat in the corner with arms crossed and a smile on his face.

Kelley's silence resulted from the fact that he'd rather let the Matadors' record speak for itself—5-1, including a five-game winning streak.

Tonight, however, Estacado will get its second district test of the season, when the Borger Bulldogs challenge the Matadors' heavenly bliss at Lowrey Field. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

In other action, the Dunbar Panthers will travel to Canyon to battle the Eagles, while Western Hills Baptist Academy will visit Amarillo to play Wheeler Christian Academy.

As immune as the Matadors seem to be towards losing, the Bulldogs, on the otherhand, have been anemic when it comes to winning.

After beginning the season with three victories, Borger has dropped its last three encounters including one district game. Estacado, meanwhile, is 1-0 in loop play.

Kelley expects Borger to run a balanced offensive attack against the Matadors.

"They like to pass and trap you," said Kelley during an interview at the Coppercreek Mine restaurant. "Which is going to keep our defense on its toes."

The Matador defense has not only been on its toes since the season opening loss to Plainview (40-6), but they've been on opponents' toes as well.

During Estacado's five game winning streak, the Matador defense has only relinquished 14 points.

"We're not stunting more in one game than another," said Kelley. "It's just that we're sending different people."

Borger Coach Butch Henderson doesn't plan on altering the Bulldogs game plan against Estacado.

"We're going to continue doing the things we've done all year," said Henderson. "Our losing streak has been do to the fact we've had some injuries and bad breaks. But our kids haven't lost their confidence."

Henderson also agrees that the Matador defense isn't blitzing more.

"I think that their defense is just reading the plays better," said Henderson.

Although, Kelley has been having trouble finding fault with his defense, the Matador coach didn't have any trouble pointing our flaws in the offense.

"Mainly, we've been having trouble with our passing game," said Kelley. "We had receivers open all night against Dumas. We just couldn't get the ball to them. But we've been working on it."

Kelley expects a physical game from the Bulldogs. After all, last week Borger scored 14 points points against Canyon. Until that time, Canyon had only given up one touchdowns. Canyon and Estacado currently share the 1-AAA lead with 1-0 records. The Eagles, also, are the only 1-AAA team to finish the non-district season without a loss. Canyon sports a 5-0-1 record. The Eagles defeated the Bulldogs 21-14.

"If we can take advantage of scoring opportunities, then I feel we'll have a chance to win," said Kelley.

"We've had some problems with turnovers the first couple of weeks of the losing streak," said Henderson. "But that wasn't the case against Canyon. The key to the football game will be ball control."

DUNBAR-CANYON

When Dunbar Coach Van Jefferson began to talk about the Canyon Eagles offense, he had to laugh to keep from crying.

"They trap, lead and pass well," said Jefferson. "They're quick, strong and big."

What don't they do well?

"Lose," said Jefferson.

Tonight, the Eagles will put their undefeated 5-0-1 record and 1-0 loop mark on the line when Canyon hosts the Dunbar Panthers. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

Dunbar will bring a 1-5 and 0-1 mark into the contest. And just as bad as the Panther's record, has been Dunbar's injury situation.

In Dunbar's district opener against Levelland last week, seven Panthers were carried off the field. However, Jefferson said only one of those forced to leave the game will miss the Canyon tilt.

"Dewayne Williams (quarterback-free safety) suffered a knee bruise and will be the only one unable to play," said Jefferson. "The rest of our team is bruised up, but they'll play."

Williams will join Daryl Green, Jimmy Davila and Fred Garza, all hurt earlier in the year, on the sidelines.

Thus, with starting quarterback Green out for the rest of the season with a knee injury, and subsitute Williams missing from tonight's contest with a knee bruise, who will direct the Panther's offensive attack?

"LeRoy Adams will start," said Jefferson.

Will Dunbar still run out of the veer offense?

"Yep," said Jefferson. "LeRoy has a pretty good arm, so we may throw more."

But before Jefferson would say any more about Dunbar's game plan, the Panther coach changed the conversation.

"Darrell Harris also will share the quarterbacking duties with LeRoy," said Jefferson. "Darrell executes our veer a little better than LeRoy."

After watching Canyon game films, Jefferson is impressed with Eagle quarterback Jeff Welshort.

But even though the records and home field advantage aren't in the Panthers' favor, Jefferson still likes Dunbar's chances against Canyon.

"Just as sure as you can put a football team on a field, you have a chance to win the game," said Jefferson.

WHBA-WCA

The Western Hills Baptist Academy Eagles will travel to Amarillo tonight to battle Wheeler Christian Academy. The game will get underway at 5 p.m. in Glennwood field.

Wheeler is undefeated in seven games, while Western Hills must win for a chance at the second half championship. Both teams bring 2-0 second half records into the game. Western Hills is 5-2 on the season.

Lubbock High JV Whips Coronado

David Wynn scored three touchdowns as the Coronado junior varsity ripped past Lubbock High 25-6 Thursday night.

Wynn scored on runs of 2, 4 and 31. Abel Castro added another on a 1-yard jaunt as Coronado upped its record to 3-4 on the year.

Lubbock's TD came on an 11-yard run by Thomas Romero.

The Monterey Blue team downed the Tahoka JV 34-6 behind the passing of Glen Roberson.

Roberson through TD passes of 40 and 20 yards. Troy Callender caught the 20-yarder and ran for another TD, this one 2 yards.

Other Monterey scores were turned in by Daryle Sutter on a 7-yard run and Casey Stewart on a 2-yarder. The 40-yard pass was thrown to Joel Bruedingam. Monterey is now 4-4.

Harriers Compete

GEORGETOWN (Special) — Three of the strongest teams in the state, Texas A&M, Texas and Houston, will be vying for top honors when the finals of the state women's cross-country meet gets underway Saturday.

Also entered is Texas Tech, headed by Isabel Navarro, a state competitor here last year in the high school division.

Tech Fems Compete

ABILENE (Special) — The Texas Tech women's tennis team will spend another weekend in tournament play, starting today when it competes in the Abilene Halloween Tournament.

Leading will be the doubles team of Karen Schuchard and Debbie Donley which won the doubles championship at last week's Sooner Invitational. Tech finished second in the tournament.

Final Games Set

The Texas Tech women's volleyball team will plays its final regular season matches of the season today and Saturday when it plays hostess to the Texas Texas Invitational tournament.

Also competing in the two-day affair are Lamar, Angelo State, Eastern New Mexico, Lubbock Christian College and West Texas State.

Lubbock Christian meets Eastern New Mexico at 5 p.m., Angelo State takes on Lamar at 6:15 p.m., Tech plays Lubbock Christian at 7:30 p.m. and Lamar goes against West Texas State at 9 p.m., in opening action.

Cage Clinic Scheduled

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Six girls basketball teams will be gathering at Wayland Baptist College on Nov. 18 for games in connection with the 21st annual Flying Queens Basketball Clinic.

Defending Class AAA champion Canyon will play AA power Spearman at 3:15 p.m., with hostess WBC taking on Texas Tech at 4:45 p.m. in a college contest. At 6:30, AA champion Slaton will face AAAA semifinalist Monterey.

Lecturers for the clinic will be MHS coach Phil Hood (speaking on the double-post offense), Lockney's Marsha Sharp (fast break), Slaton's Cathy Wilson (pressure defense), Allan Simpson (zone defenses), Me-Lynn Hunt of Plainview (fundamental drills), and WBC coach Dean Weese (defensive pressures).

Street Fight Slated

Adrian Adonis will take on Ted DiBiase in a New York Street Fight match, to top the weekly wrestling card at Fair Pair Coliseum tonight. The program will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Special referee for the match will be 605-pound Haystack Calhoun.

A tag-team match will send Mr. Pogo, Oliver Humperdink and Mr. Sato against Super Destroyer and Larry Lane. Losers of the match will not be allowed to wrestle in Lubbock for six months.

In a special match, Bruiser Bob Sweetan will take on Ricky Romero. Two preliminary bouts will have Bill Ash facing Doug Somers and Roger Kirby meeting Noah Jones.

Late Boot Gives Raiders Win

bounding to tie the count, then go into the lead in the fourth period.

WT had tied the count at 16, when Danny Clark, a 180-pound runningback from Lockney, skipped outside to the right and sped 37 yards to score.

Clark reached the sidelines and did a series of expert dances to evade tacklers and still stay in-bounds to score with 14:02 left in the game.

Then, on their next possession after holding the Picadors, the Baby Buffs got the ball at the Tech 22. A punt and personal foul moved them into scoring range.

However, the Picadors held, aided by an 8-yard loss on a sack by defensive end Victor White. On fourth, Larry Martin kicked a 42-yard field goal for a 19-16 lead.

Tech took the kickoff and consumed five minutes in moving to the WT 4 on fourth down. This brought in Greve for the tying goal.

Tech allowed but one first down to WT before forcing a punt, and from their 39, the Picadors went to work with time running low. Kenneth James carried six of seven plays on the drive which set up Greve's winning goal.

James, the freshman from Dunbar, was the game's leading rusher, picking up 117 yards on 26 carries. Clark had 69 for WTSU.

Tech got its first points as Leonard Duncan intercepted a Matt Patterson pass and returned it 12 yards for a touchdown, but the point was missed.

With 5:47 left in the half, Greve came in to toe a 22-yard field goal for a 9-0 lead. But, WT bounced back to score on fourth from the 1 with all time expired before intermission. Martin's kick made it 9-7.

James extended Tech's lead with a 32-yard burst early in the second half. Tech had moved from its 45 to the WT 32 and faced third and just inches for a first. Against the bunched-in WT defense, James hit right guard, found room and was out of reach of the secondary before it react. He went into a victory prance at the 10.

WT tacked on 2 points with 1:14 left in the third when quarterback Rex Jones was trapped in the end zone for a safety. Safety Jim Jones raced in to collar Rex Jones as the Picador quarterback rolled left from the 7.

WT received the free kickoff and set sail for the matching points on Clark's run.

Since the JVs have little time to work together, the offenses were erratic. Tech lost three fumbles, WT one. And the hosts were penalized 117 yards, WT 94.

Cowboys Lose

loss knocked Dallas out of a first-place tie with Washington in the NFC East. The Cowboys now are 6-3.

Jittery Dallas committed two blunders in the first period and Tarkenton made the Cowboys pay with two touchdown drives.

Tarkenton hit Chuck Foreman with a 4-yard touchdown pass after Larry Brinson had fumbled away the opening kickoff. And he whipped the Vikings on a 37-yard scoring drive after Tony Dorsett had lost the ball on the next series.

Rickey Young scored on a 4-yard run after Dallas' second turnover and the Vikings led 14-0 midway through the first period.

The Cowboys' intricate offense finally got into gear in the second quarter with a long drive to the Vikings' 8-yard line, where a third down Roger Staubach pass was underthrown. Rafael Septien drilled a 25-yard field goal, making the score 14-3.

Tarkenton's 12-yard touchdown pass to Sammy White with 29 seconds left in the second period gave the Vikings a comfortable 21-3 lead at halftime.

Tarkenton came out throwing again in the second half but the embarrassed Dallas defense stiffened and Staubach took control for a 63-yard scoring drive in eight plays.

Tony Hill ran 29 yards with a punt return and snared an 18-yard pass from Staubach to put the Cowboys on the Vikings' 1. Robert Newhouse barged across for the score at 5:03 of the third period and it appeared Dallas was poised for a comeback.

However, safety Phil Wise intercepted a Staubach pass to blunt another Dallas drive and the Vikings coasted home, playing a tight defense before a disappointed turnout of 61,848 in Texas Stadium and a national television audience.

It was a game when everything went wrong for the Cowboys. Staubach, who started the game by falling down while dropping back to pass, suffered a final indignity by having to tackle cornerback Bobby Bryant with a minute left in the game after the Vikings' defender had intercepted a pass at the Cowboys' 20.

Dorsett, back in the starting lineup after being benched by Coach Tom Landry last week for failing to show for a practice, had a rough game.

Besides fumbling the ball away to set up the second Minnesota touchdown, he was booed heavily by the hometown fans. The Vikings keyed on him early and held him to only 7 yards in six carries in the first half, when Dallas could only muster five first downs.

Vikings Coach Bud Grant gambled from the start. With Minnesota ahead 7-0 and fourth-and-one at their 48, the Vikings went for it and Foreman jumped over the top of the Dallas line for the first down.

The Cowboys' defense was hobbled when end Harvey Martin limped off the field in the second period, having aggravated a thigh injury he suffered two weeks ago.

Monterey Falls 10-7

times to be exact.

However, the Plainsmen, who rolled up only 154 yards against a sparkling Lubbock defense, could take advantage of only of the the boo-boos.

After Lubbock had taken a 7-0 lead on a 19-yard from quarterback Larry Walker to end Jimmy Garza with 8:15 left in the third period to break a 0-0 deadlock, Monterey managed to come alive.

Jack Carmen hopped on a Rudy Barrera fumble on the LHS 11, putting the Plainsmen in the driver's seat. And this time, Odom's crew took advantage of it. Kent Potts, the Monterey signal caller, got the Plainsmen's lone TD of the night when he sneaked over from the one with 11:37 left in the game.

Potts matched Vasquez' PAT kick, tying the game at 7-7.

Potts' TD drive put the capper on a five play drive. For most of the mini march, Monterey used the hard inside running of fullback Dwayne Smith.

"We had our chances all night," said Odom, obviously dejected. "This is the first time this season we've got the ball that many times...we couldn't do a thing with it though."

Following Vasquez' field goal, which topped a 51 yard drive which put LHS on top 10-7, Monterey got the ball back for one last hurrah.

Taking over at the MHS 36, Potts guided his team down to the LHS 33. But defensive back Ricky Moreno stepped in front of a pass intended for Chuck Perry on a fourth-and-seven attempt and knocked the ball to the turf, thwarting the comeback attempt.

On the march, though, Monterey's passing attack came to life as Potts hit Perry three times for 40 yards. Potts ended the night by hitting 8 of 24 attempts for 92 yards.

"I was extremely pleased with the play of our defense," Talbot pointed out. "We (the offense) gave them the ball all night long. But the defense would not let them in. They just played great."

Talbot was also pleased with the passing of Walker. He hit 3-6 attempts for 76 yards. However, two were picked off.

But it was the Lubbock High defense that shined.

Monterey saw a great opportunity to score fall through when it was unable to push the ball in after Mac Tatum recovered a fumble in mid-air. But with 1:46 left in the third stanza, the Plainsmen could move nocloser than the 11, after taking over at the 14. The key defensive play came on a fourth-and-seven when Vasquez knocked down a Potts' pass intended for Perry in the end zone.

Odom said "inconsistency" by the Monterey offense hurt more than anything else.

Neither team had much to shout about in the first half as moving the football became next to impossible for both. When Lubbock had it, they fumbled. When it was Monterey's turn, nothing seemed to happen.

The top scoring opportunity for either team came early in the first quarter when Monterey moved to the LHS 18. But a 35-yard field goal attempt by Mike Carter was blocked.

Dolphin Defense Ailing

But Statistics Deceiving Says Den Herder

MIAMI (AP) — Vern Den Herder, a member of the "No-Name Defense" that helped the Miami Dolphins to three Super Bowls, feels embarassed by this year's Dolphin defensive record.

Although Miami is 5-3, the defense is 12th of 14 American Football Conference teams in total yardage allowed, and is 28th of 28 NFL teams in passing yardage allowed. The statistics are vexing for Den Herder, an 8-year defensive end.

"Statistics sometimes are deceiving, yet I don't like it (the low rank). It's the lowest we've ever had," he said.

"I don't like it. None of us do. We don't want to play poorly. But there are things we're not doing right.

"I can't really say what it's been. I think the attitudes are good. We've got players with talent and pride, and it's important to us. Everybody's thinking about this, everybody's concerned."

One obvious factor is a series of injuries. Fellow linemen A.J. Duhe and Bob Baumhower underwent knee surgery this summer, and by the time they returned to action, starting linebackers Steve Towle and Bob Matheson suffered injuries.

"It's pretty important with the three-man line to have people who are used to playing together. There's a lot of coordination needed between the linemen and the linebackers. The injuries have hurt some. It's hurt some in the talking and making sure of the continuity between the two," Den Herder said.

The situation could have been much worse had Den Herder's recovery from knee surgery been unsuccessful. Den Herder ripped ligaments in his right knee after hit by former St. Louis Cardinal Conrad Dobler in last year's 11th game.

The damage, the first injury of his career, was extensive and before the rehabiliation, his career seemed in jeopardy.

"I've been lucky. I've never had any trouble with my knee since the start of training camp. I didn't have any problem with running or endurance or mobility," he said.

The past two seasons, Den Herder has helped break in new linemen. Last year, rookies Duhe and Baumhower were pressed into the lineup after starters Randy Crowder and Don Reese were jailed on cocaine convictions. This year, rookie Doug Betters and little-used veteran Carl Barisich replaced Duhe and Baumhower at season's beginning.

"Since I've been here the longest of any of the linemen, I've got responsibility for making some of the calls at the line of scrimmage, help them make adjustments on the field.

"Off the field, I've more or less been a sounding board. The young players have a lot of questions, and I try to help them out that way," he said.

"We do a lot more studying now. There's more effort off the field," he said.

Hub City Tourney Set Today

The Lubbock Fall Invitational Tennis tournament, hosted by the Lubbock Public School System, will begin today at 8:30 a.m. with more than 500 netters from across the state set to compete.

In all, 28 schools are set to vie in the two-day event, according to tournament director Jim Carter.

Coronado, which won last week's eight-team invitational at Andrews, will be the favored team, and it has taken most of the top seeding spots in the upper Class A division.

Phillip Catuogno is the top seed in Class A boys singles which will be held at the Municipal Tennis Center. In boys double's play, Catuogno and Greg Wright draw the No. 1 seeding. The pair is from Coronado.

While Kathy Lawson of El Paso Eastwood is the top seed in the A girls' singles draw, Coronado's Susan Mangam and Beth Nichols are expected to come out on top in the doubles play.

Heading the B boys' singles division is Kevin Bryant of Dunbar. Sammy Lovato and Kenneth Taylor of Estacado are the top duo in the double's seeding. Missy Johnson of Coronado is the top player in the B girl's event.

Mike Baldwin of Wichita Falls Hirschi and the team of David Wright and Peter Brown of Mackenzie Junior High are listed as the top seeds in the C boys' draw.

Tori Fly and Louise McNamara of Mackenzie head the list in the C girls' double's portion of the tournament. Kristi Gruber is the No. 1 seed in the C single's draw. She is from Wilson Junior High.

Bartkowski Flying High

ATLANTA (AP) — There is renewed hope among Atlanta Falcon fans that the National Football League club finally can lift itself above the level of mediocrity.

It is hope based on an old source, but one that appears to be on the verge of living up to the promise that accompanied his signing of a fat bonus contract four years ago — quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

Hailed as the saviour of a franchise, the tall Californian showed signs of that during his initial season when he passed for 1,662 yards and 13 touchdowns and earned the offensive Rookie of the Year award.

The honeymoon hasn't last long.

An elbow injury sidelined Bartkowski for three games in 1975. A knee injury ended his sophomore season in the fifth game. A preseason knee injury sidelined him for the first half of the season last year.

He became the target of boos. Operating behind a young offensive line and lacking the mobility to avoid strong rushes, Bartkowski was sacked 29 times in only seven games.

He arrived at training camp this year full of hope, physically fit, but emotionally distraught. He was showered with boos in Atlanta's only preseason home game and Coach Leeman Bennett decided to open the season with unheralded June Jones III at quarterback.

The Falcons upset Houston in their opener, but produced only 71 yards the next week in a 10-0 loss to the Los Angeles Rams. Bartkowski merely watched from the sidelines.

Atlanta returned home for Game No. 3 against Cleveland, a day on which Bartkowski was to hear cheers again when he entered in the second half and injected some life into an inept offense.

Bartkowski has started every game since, losing the first week to Tampa Bay before guiding Atlanta to three victories in its last four starts, including two straight since a setback at Pittsburgh.

For the most part, Bartkowski has been giving steady performances. Last week he went to the long bomb to lift Atlanta from a 17-7 fourth quarter deficit to a 20-17 victory over the San Francisco 49ers, connecting on a 71-yard pass that set up a field goal before firing a 58-yard touchdown strike that tied the game.

"Bartkowski is more mature now than ever in his career," said Bennett. "That's the primary difference.

"He's playing well, but I think he can play better," Bennett added. "Obviously I would prefer if he didn't take as many sacks as he's taking (20 in 5 games). I feel he's playing well enough to win."

The 6-foot-4, 214-pounder is No. 6 in the current ratings of National Conference quarterbacks, with an efficiency mark of 71.8 percent. He has climbed in that category in the last two weeks by allowing no interceptions, a streak that has reached eight quarters since his last one against Pittsburgh three weeks ago.

For the first time in his career, he is completing more than half of his attempts, 76 of 135 for a 56.3 mark.

His most severe test is just around the corner, against one of the top defenses in the NFL — the Rams. It will be a test before a national television audience on ABC's Monday Night football.

"I think he'll play a good game against the Rams," Bennett said, citing Bartkowski's presence as the major difference between this meeting and the first one on the West Coast seven weeks ago.

"Bartkowski can be a tremendous quarterback," he added. "He has been the big plus as far as our football team is concerned."

Navy Meets Pittsburgh In College Grid Wars

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — "I think we're a pretty good team," says Navy Coach George Welsh, "but we haven't played anyone in Pitt's league."

Navy, meet Pitt.

And that's just what will happen Saturday when 18th-ranked Navy, boasting a 6-0 record for the first time since 1960, entertains No. 15 Pitt, with a 5-1 mark. Next week, Navy goes up against Notre Dame and by then the Midshipmen will have some idea just how good they are.

"I guess we deserve to be in the Top Twenty at this point in the season," says Welsh, "but it'll take three or four more games to find out how good we really are.

"One of the reasons we're 6-0 is the schedule. We haven't had to play Penn State and Michigan back-to-back like we did my first two years here. Our schedule has good balance right now. It gives us a chance to get started, to get some momentum. It's good for us to play our tougher games later in the season."

Navy's six victims — by a combined count of 158-24 — have been Virginia, Connecticut, Boston College, Air Force, Duke and William Mary. Welsh is right; none is the caliber of ... Pitt 24-14.

Last week's score was 50 right, 18 wrong and one tie for a .747 percentage. For the season, it's 281-120-10— 701.

Arkansas at Houston

The Razorbacks bowed to Texas last week and can't afford another loss if they hope to capture the Southwest Conference crown. Sooey, Cougar ... Houston 27-19.

Kansas State at Oklahoma

Penn State at West Virginia

The Mountaineers haven't beaten the Nittany Lions since 1955 and they've dropped 19 in a row since a 14-all tie in 1958. Twenty is a nice round number ... Penn State 45-0.

Virginia at Alabama

Oklahoma State at Nebraska

Maryland at Duke

The Terrapins will learn a little something about themselves next week against Penn State, but they'd better not be looking ahead ... Maryland 28-7.

California at Southern California

Fresh from an embarrassing 10-interception, 45-0 loss to UCLA, Cal must now face the Trojans, followed by Arizona State, conquistador of the Trojans ... Southern Cal 28-14.

Southern Methodist at Texas

SMU's classy Mike Ford-Emanuel Tolbert battery hooks up with Johnnie Johnson, Texas' standout safety, but the big hooking should be done by the 'Horns. Resisting the temptation to make this the Upset Special ... Texas 36-21.

Kilmer May Start In 49er Tilt

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are growing indications veteran Bill Kilmer will start at quarterback for Washington against San Francisco Sunday in an attempt to pull the Redskins out of a two-game losing streak.

Coach Jack Pardee is refusing to confirm that he plans to replace Joe Theismann with Kilmer, the 16-year veteran, but the two quarterbacks apparently learned of the change Tuesday, according to reports here.

Pardee and Kilmer met privately Wednesday to discuss the move that has been the subject of growing speculation in this football-crazed city.

Pardee was satisfied that Kilmer was familiar with the new offensive system that was instituted this season, in which the plays are sent in from the sidelines by offensive coordinator Joe Walton. The head coach was also assured that Kilmer felt comfortable with his new assignment and could operate effectively with Walton calling the plays for him, according to the Washington Star.

Theismann has started ever; game this season, leading the Redskins to six consecutive victories before the team lost their last two games against the Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants.

Kilmer was relegated to the bench all this time, making only a token appearance during the fourth quarter of a Redskin runaway victory over the St. Louis Cardinals five weeks ago.

With a 6-2 record and tied for first place in the NFC East, the Redskins are not in any panic situation but the team's current skid after a flashy start has the coaching staff and fans concerned.

"We have not been playing well since we beat Dallas (three games ago), so we had to do something," one player, who knew of the quarterback change, told the Star.

The Redskins defeated the defending Super Bowl-champion Cowboys 9-5 on Oct. 2 on the strength of three Mark Mosely field goals and an airtight defense.

The first tipoff that a change was in the works came Tuesday, when Kilmer, who normally splits practice with Theismann, got most of the attention. On Wednesday, Kilmer did most of the quarterbacking again in practice.

Quarterback controversy has been a way of life for Kilmer, who came to the Redskins from the New Orleans Saints in 1971 in the first trade engineered by former coach George Allen.

Kilmer and Sonny Jurgensen were the rivals during Kilmer's first three years here. Jurgensen was the fans' choice while Kilmer was No. 1 in Allen's eyes.

At training camp this summer, the quarterback rivalry flared once more, but with new leading men — Kilmer and Theismann — and a new head coach, Pardee. Pardee, who replaced Allen this year, has continued to say the Redskins have two No. 1 quarterbacks, although Theismann has done nearly all the playing.

Newlin Gives Houston Rockets Needed Edge

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Rockets, especially Calvin Murphy and Rudy Tomjanovich, realize just how much they had missed guard Mike Newlin.

Newlin missed the first five games of the season but returned Tuesday night and guided the rockets to a 106-101 victory over the New York Knicks by scoring 15 points and handing out nine assists — seven in the final quarter.

Newlin's playmaking ability — which the Rockets have .issed since guard BJhn Lucas was sent to Golden State — was complemented by the shooting of Murphy, who had 21 points before fouling out, and Tomjanovich, who had 23.

"Having Mike back in is a big plus for this team," Murphy said. "He doesn't get the attention and respect he deserves. He does the dirty work — taking their tough guards — and that makes it easier for me.

"With Mike back, he will also help Robert Reid (Houston's other starting guard). He has had to be our playmaking guard and now at least he will be able to go more for offense and now not have to worry about playmaking."

Newlin suffered the broken hand in pre-season and was returned to the roster on Tuesday.

"It felt routine out there," he said. "I wish I could say something more positive. I only hope I can play better in the future.

"Calvin and Rudy were hot out there and that's the time to pass to them."

New York was playing without center Bob McAdoo, who has a sprained back and also will miss tonight's game at New Orleans. Spencer Haywood was high point man for the Knicks with 24 points. Marvin Webster had 21 and Ray Williams 18.

The Rockets ran off eight straight points to take 10-2 only to see New York go on a 14-6 burst for a 20-16 lead. Murphy came up with nine points in the second quarter and Newlin added eight to give the Rockets a 52-48 lead at the half.

"We missed Bob McAdoo badly tonight," Knicks Coach Willis Reed said. "They guys scrapped but they didn't play well. You really miss a guy who averages 26 points a game."

The victory was the Rockets fifth in six games while New York had a three-game winning streak snapped and drops to 3-3.

NBC Theater Opens With Unusual Wartime Tale

"NBC THEATER" PREMIERES — Kristy McNichol and Bruce Davison run down a railroad track in a scene from NBC-TV's premiere presentation of "NBC Theater," to air Monday. McNichol stars as a member of the only Jewish family in a small southern town during World War II who finds friendship and understanding when she meets a German prisoner of war, played by Davison. (AP Laserphoto)

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The National Broadcasting Company inaugurates its "NBC Theater" with a stunning story about an encounter between a teen-age Jewish girl searching for friendship and an escaped German prisoner of war.

"Summer of My German Soldier," which airs Monday, is an auspicious start for this new series.

Kristy McNichol stars as Patty Bergen, whose rejection by her father leads her to hide the escaped soldier, Bruce Davison. She find in him a friendship and understanding that she did not have at home.

The story is is set in World War II in a small southern town, where the Bergens' tenuous existence as the only Jewish family is put in jeopardy by Patty's exposure.

The film is marked by strong performances throughout: Miss McNichol as the troubled girl, Davison as a soldier whose gentleness runs counter to the Nazi stereotype, Michael Constantine as the stern and unforgiving father, Esther Rolle as the black maid who stands by Patty, and Barbara Barrie as Patty's weak-willed mother.

"I've played a lot of Jewish roles, but this is the first unsympathetic Jew I've ever played," Constantine said. "I'm mean to her and she's such a charming child. I've already warned my own kids — everybody is going to hate my guts when they see this, so just remember I was only acting."

Constantine offered an incongruous sight as he talked about the role. At that moment, he was in clown makeup and costume for a two-hour episode of "Quincy."

"'Summer of My German Soldier' is the best thing I've done since 'Room 222.' I really wanted to do this. I read for the part. I haven't read for a part since 1904," he said.

"I thought I was in trouble. They read guys in Hollywood and New York and I was the first to read here. I thought they would forget all about me. So I was delighted when they said they wanted me."

Constantine, who is of Greek descent, played one of his first Jewish roles in "Hey Landlord." He was the pill-popping, complaining photographer with an ulcer.

"I was thinking 'Hey Landlord' trained so many many of the people in situation comedy today," he said. "Garry Marshall and Jerry Belson were the creators and Garry went on to do 'The Odd Couple' and now 'Happy Days,' 'Laverne and Shirley' and 'Mork and Mindy.' Jim Brooks, one of the writers, went on to do 'Room 222,' 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show,' 'Rhoda' and 'Taxi.' Dale McRaven went on to 'The Partridge Family' and 'Mork and Mindy.'"

Later, he was the principal in "Room 222," which skillfully blended comedy and drama for five years on ABC. His last series was "Sirota's Court" on NBC.

In "Summer of My German Soldier," he said, "There are places hopefully where I'm funny because of the kind of character I am, but I don't think I'm redeemed or become a better person.

"At one point, I whip Kristy with my belt for nothing more than she's playing with a kid I don't want her to play with. Early in the film, she gives me a birthday present. I have another daughter and I make a fuss over her present. When Kristy gives me her gift I hardly glance at it.

"When I was first sent the script for some strange reason I didn't understand it was a TV show. I thought it was an art film because the story is so beautiful. A week later someone said something about NBC and I said you mean this is for TV? It had such quality I didn't think it was for TV. Let's face it, most TV shows are dreadful, or at least pedestrian."

LIBEL DAMAGES AWARDED

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Dom Mintoff of Malta was awarded unspecified but "substantial" damages and costs in the High Court in London Thursday as settlement of his libel action over a newspaper article that suggested he abused his power. He had complained of an article in the Daily Mail in August 1977 and sued Associated Newspapers Group Ltd.

CIA Encourages Female Applicants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA would like to see more women spies working for the agency.

CIA director Stansfield Turner said Wednesday "the opportunities are there" for women who want to become spies and, he said, "we are stressing it in our recruiting."

Turner urged America's young women to send in their applications.

"There is a greater opportunity proportionately for them than there is for males," he said, answering a question at a National Press Club luncheon.

Although women would find difficulties in some countries, Turner continued, "in many other instances a lady might be even preferable to a man in doing the kind of clandestine work that we have to do."

Problems Surfacing Within Montreal Ranks

By The Associated Press

Not all is well with the Montreal Canadiens.

Signs of stress are starting to surface as they seek a fourth straight National Hockey League title.

The latest in a lengthening series of disquieting developments involved a published report that star forward Guy Lafleur would refuse to play future games if his contract was not renegotiated by Wednesday night.

Team officials refused comment on the matter until after Montreal's 4-4 tie with the Maple Leafs in Toronto. That's when Coach Scotty Bowman blasted reporters who had "hounded" Lafleur for reaction.

"We came up here on a charter and I walked in the lobby of the airport and the reporters have got my star player surrounded," said Bowman. "I don't think it's fair pool. They surely lowered their standards in my book. They just hounded him and hounded him and hounded him. I don't think that's fair."

Now, more than a few coaches have chastised newsmen, so this is nothing new. But it must be remembered the hockey beat in Montreal may be the most competitive in Canadian journalism and Lafleur is by far the most competitive newsmaker.

A major reason for that, of course, is that in addition to being one superlative hockey player, Guy Lafleur is a French-speaking Canadian. So the French dailies battle the English dailies for the best Canadien scoops. A French paper once assigned a staff writer to cover Lafleur's vacation on the Riviera, another sent a writer to join Philadelphia Flyers goalie Bernie Parent (also French) on his fishing boat during an off-season excursion.

This is one of the reasons Bowman is upset. Aside from having to face the media blitz every day, he has suffered a string of aggravations since training camp began.

First, there was the surprise resignation of General Manager Sam Pollock and Bowman's indignation over not being named his successor.

Bowman had turned down other coaching offers over the summer, including the one the New York Rangers ultimately filled with Fred Shero, because he felt he was in line for Pollock's job once the Grand Master of General Managers packed it in.

But Al MacNeil, who had been general manager of Montreal's Nova Scotia farm team in the American League, was named director of player personnel. And Pollock's place was filled with Irving Grundman, who was given the title of "managing director."

So Bowman was shut out and annoyed — to put it printably. And it quickly became obvious that Grundman is no Pollock.

One illustration is the embarrassing situation involving Pierre Bouchard. The defenseman was claimed by the Washington Capitals in the waiver draft, then sent back to Montreal in exchange for left wing Rod Schutt. NHL President John Ziegler nullified the deal, citing league rules which prohibit the trading of a player claimed in the waiver draft.

Bouchard refused to go to Washington, announced his retirement, and people started winking around the NHL. Pollock — the shrewdest team official in modern hockey history — would have found a way to get away with the deal. When Grundman didn't, and looked bad trying, there was joy in many Mudvilles; the mighty Canadiens had struck out.

Thus the climate of tension, which wasn't helped at all when Montreal lost two in a row recently. Yes, there were games being played on the ice while all this political potboiling was going on behind the scenes.

But remember that in Montreal the occasional downs of the Canadiens become as important as the government's position on French-English separatism. It may only involve men in short pants and skates chasing a small black disc around a rink, but it's serious stuff to the worshippers at the temple of Lord Stanley's Cup.

Chess Group Protests Match

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss Chess Federation announced Wednesday it is seeking a re-opening of the world chess championship between Soviet champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Victor Korchnoi, claiming the rules were violated in the deciding game.

Federation President Arnold von Kaenel said the demand was in a protest lodged with the world chess federation (FIDE) after a four-hour meeting between Swiss federation officials and Korchnoi, 47, a Swiss resident who returned here Wednesday.

The Baguio City, Philippines, match ended with a score of 6-5 earlier this month with Karpov, 27, taking the final game. Victory went to the first player to win six games. If the world federation sustains the protest, the meet would reopen at five games each.

Von Kaenel told a news conference there was "a clear violation of contract" when Karpov's delegation allowed parapsychologist Dr. Vladimir Zoukhar to sit nearer the stage than was officially specified. Korchnoi claims Zoukhar exercised mind control on him.

The 92-day championship match ended in the 32nd game. The tournament was often disrupted by squabbles between the two players, with Karpov claiming the challenger's mirrored sunglasses distracted him, and Korchnoi complaining about Zoukhar and saying the Soviets were signaling Karpov through flavored yogurt.

Korchnoi told reporters he would not cash the $263,000 check he won for his unsuccessful challenge because endorsing it would mean accepting defeat. "I will continue fighting," he said.

Walter Stilling, the Swiss representative on the world federation, indicated he was skeptical about the chances of the protest.

"FIDE is a political body in which Eastern and Third World nations have a majority," he said.

Bills Ink Becker As Spare Backer

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The Buffalo Bills have picked up rookie linebacker Doug Becker to increase their roster to the National Football League limit of 45.

Becker, a 6-foot, 220-pounder, replaces Tom Ehlers, who was placed on the injured reserve list for knee surgery.

The new acquisition, a three-year starter at Notre Dame, was a 10th-round draft pick this year of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Aldo Traversaro To Fight Rossman

GENCA, Italy (AP)-Italian fighter Aldo Traversaro started full-time training Thursday after receiving official word that his challenge for the World Boxing Association light heavyweight title, held by 22-year-old Mike Rossman of the United States, has been accepted.

The title fight will be held in Philadelphia in Dec. 5. Traversaro, 30, will be the seventh Italian to stage a world fight in the United States.

Traversaro, the defending European light heavyweight champion, turned pro in 1970 and has a record of 45 wins, five draws and two losses.

Thomas Ends Speed Record Attempts

PORTLAND HARBOR, England (AP) — Karl Thomas of Troy, Mich., who hoped to break the world speed sailing record here, has abandoned his attempt.

Thomas spent more than $150,000 on his craft, Slingshmt. He entered the World Speed Sailing Championships here earlier this month, and when these were ruined by a lack of wind he and current record holder, Englishman Tim Colman, elected to stay on.

Colman eventually tired of waiting for the wind to blow and went home. Thomas stayed longer, but he left Portland this week, organizers said Thursday.

Stock Slump Continues

NEW YORK (AP) — Rising interest rates and a falling dollar set the mood for more widespread losses in the stock market Thursday as the free-fall decline that began 10 days ago continued.

The broad range of secondary issues that had been market leaders until the end of the summer once again bore the brunt of the selling.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 9.09 to 821.12, extending its loss since the start of last week to 75.97 points.

But the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange showed an even weaker picture, with 1,459 issues declining and only 163 gaining ground for a ratio of almost 9-to-1 on the minus side.

The dollar's slump continued in foreign-exchange trading, pushing it to new lows against several European currencies and the Japanese yen. And analysts reported evidence that the Federal Reserve appeared to have raised its target again for the rate on federal funds, short-term loans between banks, which the Fed uses as a means of influencing interest rates generally.

Fed-watchers said it appeared the central bank now was aiming for a rate slightly above 9 percent.

New York (AP) — Thursday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.
