RECENTLY ENACTED state and federal regulations helped produce this mountain of paperwork which engulfs Tenneco Oil Co. secretary Myra Burch. The paperwork, which was shipped off to the U.S. Geological Survey last week, is only part of a multitude of application documents required by agencies before Tenneco and other companies are allowed to begin exploratory drilling in the Baltimore Canyon off the Atlantic coast.

Carter, Sadat meet; Mondale summoned

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter met privately today with Egypt's Anwar Sadat and summoned Vice President Walter F. Mondale to the historic Mideast summit.

Mondale, who is conducting much of the federal government's non-summit business during Carter's absence from Washington, flew here in late morning, having been told he would join all three leaders at lunch.

However, word about the joint luncheon was erroneous, according to Jerrold Schecter, spokesman for the National Security Council. He said Carter had not yet arranged a joint session between Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin.

Carter and Begin conferred privately for 3½ hours Tuesday night, Israeli sources said, while lower-ranking officials from the United States, Egypt and Israel dined and talked together at an open mess.

The three leaders are in mountain-top isolation with the Egyptian president and the Israeli prime minister at odds over summit goals and the role to be played by Carter.

"This is no time for maneuvers and worn-out ideas," said Sadat. He repeated his objection to Begin's limited goal of concluding the summit with an agreement to continue negotiations at a lower level — negotiations which Begin said might continue for months.

For his part, Begin said at an official arrival ceremony that he will pursue "all endeavors possible to reach an agreement so that the peace process can continue and ultimately be crowned with peace treaties."

Besides advocating a go-slow approach to the search for a Mideast settlement, Begin foresees Carter playing a limited role as a summit mediator.

But on his arrival, Sadat emphasized anew that he sees the U.S. president as "a full partner in the peace process."

On that point, Carter has seemed inclined to accept Sadat's position.

Begin did acknowledge that "the unique political conclave here" — his fifth meeting with Carter and third with Sadat — "is the most important, the most momentous of them all."

Sadat termed it "the crucial crossroads" and said: "The challenge is

Perjury charges 'false, work of desperate men'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., under indictment on charges he lied in denying he had received payoffs, says the charges against him are false and are the work of "desperate men under pressure."

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Flood Tuesday on three counts of giving false testimony at the trial of a former aide and before a grand jury.

In a statement, Flood said "I completely deny all of these assertions and implications as well. For 30 years I have served the people who elected me in the best manner I knew how, and time after time they have demonstrated their confidence by returning me to office for 14 additional terms."

"I have never done anything to destroy that confidence, and, ever mindful of that fact, I am certain that these charges will be proven false, charges made by desperate men under pressure."

The Justice Department said no date had been set for Flood's arraignment.

Flood, 74, has been accused of lying when he testified on Oct. 11, 1977, at the trial of his former aide, Stephen B. Elko, that he did not know that William F. Peters, a former trade school operator, gave $5,000 to Elko.

Elko was convicted of taking $25,000 in bribes to influence Flood in connection with federal funds for a now-defunct chain of trade schools in California. Serving a three-year prison term, Elko is cooperating with federal authorities.

Flood's indictment said the congressman knew of the $5,000 payoff from Peters within a few days after Elko took the money in the spring of 1972.

Flood also was accused of lying when he denied to a federal grand jury on June 2, 1977, that he received $1,000 in the Congressional Hotel in Washington from former lobbyist Deryl Fleming.

The indictment also charged that Flood testified falsely when he told the grand jury he did not receive $5,000 from Peters at the congressman's command post for disaster relief in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., area.

If convicted, Flood faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

Blast jars building

A muffled blast jarred the 619 Building near downtown Midland about 11 a.m. today, when a three-inch copper line carrying Freon to an air-conditioning compressor ruptured.

Eight units and engines from the Midland Fire Department were dispatched to the four-story office building at 619 W. Texas Ave.

"It's no big deal at all," Deputy Fire Chief James Roberts told a crowd gathered in front of the building.

He said he did not know what caused the line to blow. The explosion opened an eight-inch gap in the line and dislodged it. The cooling unit is on the building's first floor.

Petroleum engineer Joe Barthel was in his office on the third floor when the line ruptured.

"It was so slight that I didn't pay any attention to it," he said. "I thought somebody dropped a typewriter. It was hardly noticeable."

Firemen said the unit apparently supplies cooling throughout the building.

Summer may be over

The summer may be over — or at least that's the indication given by the weather so far this week.

Autumn-like temperatures again prevailed throughout the region Tuesday while scattered afternoon thunder showers soaked parts of Midland.

The forecast for Midland and vicinity calls for partly cloudy weather through Thursday with a slight chance of thundershowers Thursday afternoon. There's a 30 percent chance of rain Thursday, according to the weatherman.

Winds are expected to blow from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph today, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight. The weather outlook in the Big Spring area is for fair weather through Thursday.

Rain pelted the western part of the Lack of space crimping Odessa Police style

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

ODESSA — "Our main problem is lack of space," claimed Odessa Police Department Captain Jack Eilyaw during a recent tour of the department's building.

That's why he, along with Police Chief Jack Tomlin and others, are supporting at least part of an $11.7 million bond issue which Odessa voters will consider on Saturday.

The upcoming municipal election will put to rest the question of whether this city wants a new $5.7 million combination police and municipal courts facility.

Voters also will be asked to either approve or disapprove paying $4 million for sewage treatment improvements and $2 million for water distribution improvements.

But opposition to all of those propositions has surfaced among some residents.

George Norwood, a retired builder, said Tuesday, "I'm opposed to anything which raises taxes. I'm against the way the Odessa City Council is wanting to do this."

"If they eliminate some 50 trees around the proposed (police) building, that would take away some of the extra frills. They can cut $2 million of the proposed $5.7 million cost and still have a good building."

Still, policemen see the need for such a building, citing overcrowding and lack of space for storage of recovered stolen property, as two major reasons.

During the informal tour of the present building, Eilyaw said:

"Three men work out of the Narcotics Division office, which offers about 12 by 14 feet of space. That's way too small."

Five people work out of a Juvenile Division office which features only two desks. This poses interviewing problems which sometimes result in the temporary displacement of staffers into the hall.

The storage of recovered stolen property in such areas as the floor of the Records and Identification Division poses serious security problems.

The vault for recovered stolen weapons and property is filled to capacity resulting in the use of a closet and emergency equipment room to adage painted on linen: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

In the front bedroom is a tidy bed covered with stuffed characters lifted from the pages of nursery rhymes and fairy tales.

"Here comes Peter Cottontail, hopping down the bunny trail," Mrs. Allen said in a tuneful way. You could visualize her in a rocking chair rhyming away to some tots.

"And his family's with him," she said of the cloth-covered bunny.

Joining Peter in the stuffed menagerie are the likes of Miss Muffet sitting on a tuffet, Goldilocks and the three bears, Little Bo-Peep who lost her sheep, the three blind mice, Little Boy Blue who fell fast asleep in the haystack, Little Red Riding Hood and the Big, Bad Wolf disguised as Grandma, the frog who went a-courting, the three little pigs, the calico cat, the gingham dog, mother hen and others in colorful array.

Mrs. Allen, who's 72 and far from being lonely and bored, did the cutting out and sewing for the wonderful creatures.

Sarah Cooper, who's 86, and Betty Cole, who's got a year on her, helped Mrs. Allen in stuffing the cute animals with plastic. They're doing that instead of sewing and quilting, because their eyesight is failing somewhat.

The older house is full of newly pieced-together articles such as aprons for dishwasher detergent and soap bottles, crocheted sewing kits, flowers made from various beans, seeds and grains, a set of three cornucops dangling from a bow and ready for the w.c., crocheted book-worm book markers, and other novelties.

Among the newly-made dolls is the old.

"This is the antique room," Mrs. Allen said. There is little of the contemporary — furniture and all — in the chamber. A ceramic "button bucket" is on an old antique phonograph record holder.

In the bed chamber also are a white ceramic night pot and a matching water pitcher, a kerosene lamp and other furnishings that would demand a good price at a flea market.

"Everything I've got is antiques," Mrs. Allen said, "because I don't have anything new."

And that's part of the charm of this place — especially on Tuesdays

Two women finish 1,151-mile rowing trip ahead of schedule

SKAGWAY, Alaska (AP) — Ginger Cox and Tish Davis first rowed together on the Dartmouth women's crew. Their teamwork should be perfect now, after a 1,151-mile row up the Canadian coast from Seattle, their hometown.

The women took Skagway by surprise last Friday when they arrived 10 days ahead of schedule. Today they are still taking the town by storm, being treated to free room and board at the Skagway Inn.

"They gave us a tremendous welcome," said Ms. Cox.

The women plan to take a three-day hike along the 33-mile Chilkoot Mountain Trail used by gold miners 80 years ago. They expect to return to Seattle, by way of Alaska ferry, on Sept. 14.

The pair spent 20 days resting along the way, visiting fishing towns or hiding out from bad weather. They usually rowed 10 to 14 hours a day, making 2 to 4 knots.

Contaminated milk kept secret; Probe under way

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — State officials were attempting to explain today why Arizonans bought and drank milk this summer without being told it was contaminated with a cancer-causing poison.

"We have only one question to resolve," said Sen. Manuel Pena, D-Phoenix, whose agriculture subcommittee conducts the afternoon hearing. "Why wasn't the public told that the milk contained that much aflatoxin?"

Aflatoxin, considered by some health authorities to be among strongest cancer-causing substances, has been traced to cottonseed on the Paloma Ranch near Theba. The probe began with a complaint from California authorities to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration about June 26, said Doug Payne, of the FDA's Phoenix office.

The FDA notified State Dairy Commissioner John Gaunt on July 26 that the feed was contaminated with up to 4,826 parts per billion of aflatoxin, compared with the federal standard of 20 parts per billion.

The state chemist, Gary Gilsdorf, also was notified. He stopped sale of the feed on July 28.

Gaunt went to the Arizona Department of Health Services laboratory, which found aflatoxin levels in milk as high as 7 parts per billion, far exceeding the federal standard of .5 parts per billion. State health officials revealed their findings to Gaunt on Aug. 3.

The dairy commissioner wrote Arizona milk producers Aug. 7, asking them to stop feeding cottonseed. The United Dairymen of Arizona, whose 160 members produce 90 percent of the state's milk, sent a similar letter to members on Aug. 11.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt's office also was informed of the problem on Aug. 11, in a letter from Gaunt.

The contamination was not made public until The Arizona Republic carried the story on Aug. 19. About $200,000 worth of milk was dumped before supplies on store shelves were declared back within federal standards at the end of August.

Cottonseed from Paloma ranch has been traced to several locations in Arizona, Utah, New Mexico and Texas, Payne said. Officials in those states were attempting to keep it out of cattle feed.

In addition, Gilsdorf has halted the sale of 11,000 tons of cottonseed meal, 1,500 tons of cottonseed and 900 tons of cottonseed hulls at the Anderson Clayton Co. mill in Gilbert. The products were not from Paloma Ranch, the chemist said.

Aflatoxin ranging from 30 to 70 parts per billion turned up at Anderson Clayton on Friday, the chemist said. The federal limit is 20 parts per billion, and more than 50 parts per billion in cattle feed is considered enough to cause a cow's milk to exceed the FDA standard, Gilsdorf said.

"We're going to work with the state chemist 100 percent," said Jim Wilkerson, spokesman for Anderson Clayton. "I can't say anymore about it."

Gilsdorf said Anderson Clayton may arrange to treat the estimated $1 million worth of contaminated cottonseed products with ammonia, which kills the aflatoxin without ruining the feed.

The chemist said he plans to check for aflatoxin contamination at all 200 cotton gins in Arizona by the end of the year. Sales will be stopped whenever the federal level is exceeded, he said.

Quadriplegic wants buses for handicapped

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's state capital abounds with lobbyists, but none so determined as Edward Davenport.

Able to move only a crippled and twisted left hand, Davenport steered his motorized wheelchair 100 miles from his home in Norristown to the Capitol steps here, almost one-third of the way across Pennsylvania.

The reason? To lobby for special buses in mass transit systems for handicapped people.

"I'm excited, I'm tired, I'm just glad to be here. It's been a long six days," Davenport said after his arrival Tuesday afternoon.

The tortuous trip, sometimes through heavy traffic without an escort, ended with people cheering, applauding and honking horns as Davenport's chair buzzed along Harrisburg's streets and up the Capitol's winding driveway. On the front of the chair was a sign, "Looking For A Bus I Can Ride."

He reached a speaking area in front of the Capitol by driving up a small ramp, hurriedly put in place just before his arrival. There is normally no way for wheelchairs to reach the spot.

A quadriplegic since he had polio at age 5, Davenport said he is lobbying government agencies to move ahead with plans for Transbus, a special vehicle built so handicapped people can get aboard without help.

Both the state and the federal government recently retreated from commitments to provide the specially equipped buses.

Transbuses, still on the drawing boards, have wider doors and are 10 inches closer to the ground than existing buses. They also have a "kneeling" feature that lets them drop the front end another four inches closer to the ground to accommodate wheelchairs.

Transbuses are expected to cost at least $150,000 each, compared to the $80,000-$90,000 cost of existing buses.

Congress and federal officials are reassessing earlier rules that require transit authorities to buy the specially equipped buses or retrofit older buses with special equipment.

The Urban Mass Transit Administration recently ordered Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Miami to delay purchases of Transbuses

Search for Texas couple centered at campground

DOLORES, Colo. (AP) — Twenty-five sheriff's deputies and volunteers searched the banks of the Dolores River in southwestern Colorado today for the bodies of a honeymooning

Texas couple believed killed by a gang of Arizona prison escapees. Clothing, camping gear and other items believed to have belonged to the couple were found Tuesday in a private campground about eight miles northeast of Dolores on the fringe of the San Juan National Forest.

Montezuma County Sheriff Bob Hampton said the items were found by the campground owners. They were piled between two cottonwood trees on the banks of river, Hampton said, adding that the area had been cordoned off.

Hampton said that telephone calls to relatives in Amarillo, Texas, led authorities to tentatively conclude the items belonged to newlyweds James and Margene Judge of Amarillo.

Among the items found were a personal budget sheet on which the couple had written estimates for payments of loans, a spokesman for the sheriff's department said. The Judges last were heard from Aug. 8 when they telephoned relatives from South Fork, where they had been camping. South Fork is about 110 miles east of Dolores across the San Juan Mountains.

Three days later, at Casa Grande, Ariz., the Judges' van was used by the so-called Tison gang when gang members tried to run a roadblock. Captured in a shootout at the roadblock were Arizona State Prison escapee Randy Greenawalt of Thornton, and two of escapee Gary Tison's sons. A third Tison boy was killed. Tison's body later was found in the Arizona desert near the shootout scene.

The survivors have been charged with murder and kidnap in the slaying of Nebraska family following the prison breakout July 31 at Florence, Ariz.

The sheriff's department here said Marjie and Joe Blackmer discovered the clothing and camping gear on their campground Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Blackmer said a payment receipt for the Judges' van was among the articles, as well as an Amarillo newspaper. She said they were found about 75 feet from the river.

Syrian president reacts to summit

By FAROUK NASSAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian President Hafez Assad says the Camp David summit meeting might produce an agreement to end the state of war between Egypt and Israel.

But Assad in a speech to Syrian troops on the Golan Heights warned that Syria, Israel's militant Arab neighbor, could "undermine any line of Middle Eastern policy it does not approve...although it might not be capable at this stage of imposing its own policy line."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko called President Carter's conference with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat a "collusion behind the backs of the Arab peoples to frustrate the attainment of a genuine Middle East settlement."

"Separate experiments at the expense of the lawful interests of Arabs, whatever labels are attached to these experiments, do not constitute the road to peace in the area," Gromyko said in a speech at a meeting in Moscow with Greek Foreign Minister George Rallis.

Yasser Arafat, the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said he hoped the summit meeting would convince Sadat that Begin "will never give him anything."

Arafat in a French television interview said Begin's plan of limited autonomy for Palestinians of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip was tantamount to "creating a new Bantustan," a reference to the states South Africa's white government is creating for the country's black majority on out of the way, less desirable tracts of land.

Arafat also rejected the idea of stationing U.S. troops in the West Bank and Gaza, saying it would mean "trading one occupation for another."

Arafat's "foreign minister," Farouk Kaddoumi, the chief of the PLO political department, said in a statement the Camp David meeting "represents the end of the road for Sadat's unilateral initiative."

Skyrocketing prices result of slow white shrimp catch

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The white shrimp catch is so far below average that prices are skyrocketing, an official of the Louisiana Fisheries Federation said today.

"We really expected a good season, but so far it hasn't turned out like that," said Harlon Pearce, one of the directors of the federation.

A five-pound box of jumbo shrimp now costs restaurants $5.65," Pearce said. "It's jumped about $1 a pound since about a month ago."

But officials of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Department said predictions are hard to make this early in the white shrimp season.

"It's too early now for some good, hard statistics to hang your hat on," said Max Summers, assistant chief of the department's seafood section. "The whites have high and low cycles. We just may be on a low cycle now."

"But in the center part of the state, our biologists weren't catching as many (whites) in their samples as in previous years, which could indicate a down cycle."

Orville Allen, supervisor of the statistics division of the National Marine and Fisheries Service, said the catch is always low at the beginning of the season, which started Aug. 21.

"There might be no small shrimp showing up in the catches now, and that may indicate to the shrimpers that no larger ones will show up in their catch when they mature towards October," Allen said.

Summers said the catch should pick up toward October.

Direct negotiations resumed in dispute on postal contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bargainers in the postal contract dispute are resuming direct negotiations after an initial effort to sidestep a threatened mail strike led nowhere.

"The status quo remains," one union source said Tuesday after officials from the Postal Service and three unions ended a two-hour meeting, their first together since July 21.

The two sides were returning to the bargaining table today as they moved toward a self-imposed Sept. 16 deadline for either forging a contract settlement or letting an arbitrator do it for them.

Sources close to the talks said the unions spent Tuesday's session laying down their demand for a bigger wage increase than the 19.5 percent boost — including cost-of-living allowances — contained in the proposed three-year contract rejected by postal workers last month.

The Postal Service, which had refused to renegotiate with the unions until the eve of a scheduled nationwide mail strike, reportedly made no response to the union demands, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified.

The tentative contract's wage package, which provided for raising a typical worker's annual salary from about $16,000 now to $19,100 by 1981, was branded unsatisfactory by local union leaders and was a key factor in the pact's rejection.

The unions, representing 516,000 workers, want to remove the ceiling on the cost-of-living formula contained in the rejected agreement. They also want to rearrange the annual wage boosts to place the largest increase in the first year of the contract rather than in the third, as in the rejected contract.

Some local union leaders have revived calls for illegal wildcat walkouts after the settlement was rejected by members of all three unions — the 299,000-member American Postal Workers Union, the 181,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers and the 36,000-member mail-handlers division of the Laborers International Union.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Bread very good food for reducing

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm making a big effort to watch what I eat this year. My one resolution was to get thin somehow. So should I give up bread? That is kind of a basic decision I'm trying to make. Is one kind worse than another?—Sheri A.

Dear Sheri: Bread is actually a very good food for reducing. It contains good nutrients. And it doesn't have too many calories—it's what you put on it that is liable to calorie up. Gluten bread is one good choice. Rye is another. So is whole wheat or whole grain. And by weight, one kind of bread is not very different from the next as far as calories are concerned.

Of course if you have a metabolism problem and can't handle bread that's a different story. Then only your doctor can help you with proper treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've noticed that there are more and more of those milk-type alcoholic drinks around. Do you think it would be a good idea to keep some on hand around the house so my children—I have two college-age girls—and their friends at least have something nourishing to drink when they are all at our house?—Mrs. G. L.

Dear Mrs. G.L.: No, I don't think it is a good idea. These drinks are aimed at women and young people, and there is already too much drinking in these groups. As a matter of fact, the American Medical Association has gone on record against the new beverages. A resolution adopted by the AMA House of Delegates points out that there are one million women alcoholics in the United States, at least, and that alcoholism seems to be rising faster among women than among men.

There is a sizeable increase in drinking among teen-agers also. A national survey shows that almost all boys and 87 percent of girls have experimented with alcohol by the time they have reached senior year in high school. The last thing we need is a new way to encourage drinking among young people.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I read your book, "Proven Master Plan for Total Body Fitness and Maintenance," and was stimulated and also enjoyed the text thoroughly. I found the book written in easy language and the exercises described are easy to follow and your comments are down to earth and enjoyable. I consider your book one of the treasures of my library. One little aside: Should a person with a history of two coronaries indulge in the described exercises, or should he consult first with his cardiologist? Again praising your work.—Charles Levy, Bronx, N.Y.

Dear Charles: Thank you for your kind words regarding my book. I'm glad you enjoyed it. You definitely should first consult your heart specialist before you go on any exercise program or diet. Good Luck.

Teacher walkouts extend vacations for thousands

By The Associated Press

Teachers provided an extended summer vacation for thousands of school children today as labor woes kept many classrooms empty.

Teachers are on strike or threatening to strike in some of the nation's largest districts — New Orleans, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Seattle and Pontiac, Mich.

Weekend negotiations failed to produce agreement in Pontiac, and the school board ordered teachers who have been on strike in advance of the school's opening to report to work

Tuesday or be fired. But talks continued and Superintendent Odell Nails delayed the start of classes for the 21,000 students until Thursday.

In Marion, Ind., half of the 331 striking teachers cited last week by a circuit judge on contempt charges for defying a back-to-work order were scheduled to appear in court Tuesday. The remaining teachers were ordered to appear today. The Marion strike began Aug. 28.

Talks were scheduled at Cleveland, where classes open Friday. Teachers say they do not want a third straight year without a pay raise, but school officials say they cannot afford a raise this year because the system has received an emergency $20.7 million loan that requires budget-cutting. New Orleans' school superintendent, Dr. Gene Geisert, offered amnesty Monday night to all striking teachers who return to work by today. Earlier Monday, about 2,000 New Orleans teachers and sympathizers marched through the downtown business district.

The New Orleans strike started last week. Classes for the district's 91,000 students have operated with a skeleton crew. On Friday, bus drivers and janitors joined the strike and only a third as many students as normal were in class.

Strikes are under way in five Pennsylvania districts including Philadelphia, the state's largest, and 92 other districts remain without contracts, but most are expected to settle without a strike.

In Philadelphia, 13,000 teachers have been on strike since Friday, although classes for the city's 250,000 pupils are not scheduled to begin until Friday. Negotiations were expected to resume today.

In the 55,000-student Seattle district, teachers accused school officials of possibly using a contract dispute to cover up unpreparedness for desegregation busing.

But school Superintendent David Moberly denied the accusation and accused the teachers of "reaching for straws."

Moberly said if teachers strike, the district will open schools with supervisory personnel today.

Atheist leader ousted by court

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair was asked to leave a state district courtroom Tuesday after she objected to taking a juror's oath that includes, "So help me, God."

Judge Hume Cofer told Mrs. O'Hair he would not allow her to disrupt jury selection. When she refused to sit down, he ordered a bailiff to escort her from the room.

Mrs. O'Hair quietly left in the company of the bailiff.

"I am objecting to the ritual of swearing in with the words, 'So help me, God,'" Mrs. O'Hair said after leaving the courtroom. "American atheists have just as many rights as any other American."

She said she intended to file a lawsuit alleging her civil rights were violated by being asked to swear in the name of a God in whom she does not believe.

Mrs. O'Hair made her objection known by handing Cofer a written statement outlining her opposition to the standard juror's oath.

Lake Placid finds modern Olympics not so placid

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — This mountain village with one traffic light started out to stage a "human-sized Olympics." Now, with the games just 8 months away, the town is finding the project many times more expensive and more complicated than it imagined.

Although one motto of the games is "Olympics in Perspective," and although Lake Placid has experience at these things — it was host to the 1932 Winter Olympics — the overall costs have zoomed from initial projections of $80 million to nearly $150 million.

They could go to $200 million before the games start Feb. 13, 1980.

When the village was awarded the games in 1974, organizers pledged a "no frills" Winter Olympics, in contrast to other recent extravaganzas.

Now the Rev. J. Bernard Fell, executive director of the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee, is seeking more federal money. "There should be no scrimping," he says.

But "scrimping" is just one issue. Virtually every project is over budget. Some are four months off schedule. And the problems are many:

—Some simple plans have grown elaborate. Minor changes in the 1932 Olympic Arena were sought at first; now organizers want a new roof.

—General building costs are up. The construction budget could double, from $70 million to $140 million.

—The bureaucracy of staging the games has grown. Administrative costs could be $60 million — five times what was predicted at first.

—Transportation is a problem. Lawsuits have delayed widening the two-lane main road into Lake Placid. And there is a general plan — but few details — for busing 55,000 spectators a day around town.

—It will be January before organizers finish a plan to get 440,000 tickets to the general public. Another 110,000 will go to donors.

—And things could get worse. An early winter could shorten the construction season and throw a key building project, the ski jumps, so far off schedule that the games themselves might be jeopardized.

It seems unlikely, of course, that Olympic organizers, or the state and federal governments, which have already committed more than $70 million, would let anything jettison the 1980 Winter Olympics.

The governments pay much of the cost — for building and renovating facilities. Private contributions pay administrative costs. So far, the organizers — primarily local business figures and sports enthusiasts — still predict that they will find the money they need.

But Vernon Lamb, one of the host of local figures who worked for years to bring the Olympics back to Lake Placid, is uncomfortable.

"There's just a lot of little problems creeping in," he said.

One obvious problem is that the first cost estimates were too optimistic. Organizers say the single biggest reason is the soaring cost of labor and materials for construction.

When construction began, as many as 20 companies would bid for a contract. Most were right on or slightly below budget. Now, partly because of an upswing in construction activity elsewhere, some projects attract no more than one bid. And most are well over budget.

Then there are special problems. Take the ski jumps. Two concrete towers jut out of an Adirondack hillside, but work has been virtually halted since the spring, when the steel-work contractor went bankrupt.

Dominion Bridge Co. of Montreal was brought in to start building "in-runs" — the sloping extensions down which skiers speed. But this work is done in the open, and a bad autumn or an early winter would hurt. And with the project so far off schedule, workers will be earning plenty of overtime in any event. So federal officials say the projected cost has risen from $2.8 million to $4.5 million.

Organizers find the jumps especially worrisome because the International Olympic Committee requires all facilities to be used in Olympic-level competition before the games. Such a competition is slated for the jumps late this December, and they must be done then.

The cost overruns were admitted publicly in August, when the organizing committee announced it would need $18 million to $20 million more from the federal government — above the $58 million appropriated.

New York state, which has committed $12 million to improving ski trails at Whiteface Mountain and refrigerating the bobsled run at Mount Van Hoevenberg, is likely to be asked for another $7 million to $8 million.

Olympic officials have yet to itemize which projects need extra money, but the federal Economic Development Administration, which funnels federal funds to the Olympics, has made its estimates public.

It says construction, once pegged at $70 million and now estimated at $110 million, could climb to $140 million. It adds that the administrative costs could be even more troublesome.

In 1976, organizers estimated administrative costs at $11 million, in 1977 at $20 million, and now at $50 million. Federal officials say they could reach $60 million.

So far, the committee says it has raised $23 million toward that, some in donations of goods and some through sales of such things as television rights. Ticket sales of $10 million or more are expected.

But that is well below the total. Jack Wilkins, a real estate agent who heads the marketing committee, says the committee will find the money it needs. But David Bochnowich, who supervises the federal effort, is not so sure. He says there may be a $12 million to $25 million deficit.

All of which recalls Lake Placid's first Olympics.

In 1932, 332 athletes participated — one-quarter of the 1,200 estimated for 1980. They did it at a total cost of $1 million — minuscule next to the $200 million that the 1980 games may cost.

That $1 million, small as it sounds today, was still three times the original estimate of $330,000.

Society man discovers job has knotty problems

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — When you call in a wedding announcement to the Council Bluffs Nonpareil, ask for "family life." Roger Catlin doesn't like to be called a "women's editor."

"The guys in the layout room call me up in gruff voices and ask for the 'wimmin's department.' Maybe I should be glad they don't call it the 'dames' department," said Catlin, 23, who came to the Nonpareil in January as a news and sports writer.

Since May, Catlin has been half of a one-man, one-woman department responsible for a daily page of society notes, recipes and features.

"There's usually a long pause at the other end when I answer the phone," he said. "At first, women who called wouldn't give me their social items and demanded to speak to a woman. But now, they seem to think it's kind of quaint to talk to me. It's probably like getting a male telephone operator."

100th birthday

MADRAS, India (AP) — The Hindu, one of Asia's most distinguished newspapers, has begun a month-long celebration of its 100th anniversary.

The English-language paper was started Sept. 20, 1878, by six young Indian teachers and lawyers dissatisfied because most periodicals were owned and edited by Englishmen. The Hindu became a tri-weekly in 1883 and a daily in 1889. Its circulation is 280,000.

Catlin transferred to "family life" because he wanted to write feature stories. The bachelor's homemaking skills amount to "cleaning the house now and then," but he says his lack of knowledge on the subject can be a plus, "because that way I ask more questions when I write a story."

Although it is "hard for me to battle it by myself," Catlin says he has tried to instill subtle changes in the "family life" section.

"When I write about back-to-school recipes, for instance, I say, 'here's a time-saver for busy parents,' rather than 'for busy moms.' I'm probably not changing anybody's life, but at least I'm not insulting anybody."

Catlin says he knows men read the "Dear Abby" advice column and guesses there are some who read the recipes and social items. Before graduating from the University of Nebraska-Omaha, Catlin says he read the Minneapolis Tribune's home section.

The term "family life" was used at the Nonpareil before Catlin arrived. "Women rightfully got upset at the term 'women's news' because it implied they didn't read anything else," he said.

In social situations, Catlin usually keeps a description of his job title vague. "I say I'm a feature writer. But if I'm in a self-effacing mood, I say I write the weddings. They say, 'Oh, that's nice' and wander away," he said.

"As men move into what traditionally have been women's jobs, we've got to expect that sort of thing."

Castro's fans fade

Copley News Service

Cuban President Fidel Castro stepped so far out of bounds when he sent his troops into action in Africa that a number of his former admirers are turning against him.

Not that anyone is going to do anything about it, except talk.

Really, they can't. Castro and the Cuban Communists have the full backing of the Soviet Union, economic as well as military. There is no Castro critic among the non-aligned countries who could back his words with vigorous action.

Not even Communist China has troop ships or air transports like those the Cubans used to move their soldiers and military equipment from the Caribbean to Africa.

So those nations which make more than a pretense of non-alignment, of steering a course equidistant between Soviet communism and U.S. capitalism, are whipping up a war of words against Communist Cuba.

In the long run, the non-aligned propaganda campaign may be more effective in the battle for men's minds, but in the meanwhile the Soviet-supported Cuban Communists are stabilizing the Marxist-led governments of Angola and Ethiopia.

Communist China, of course, is Castro's foremost critic among the truly non-aligned nations. But the Cuban Communists, who are experts in propaganda warfare, too, have sought to blunt the Chinese thrusts by pointing out that China is not a member of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and that China does not subscribe to the "precepts" of the movement, "in favor of disarmament, against military alliances and for national liberation."

It is harder for the Cubans to try to counter the comments of some of those nations that are members of the movement.

Yugoslavia and Somalia, for example, spoke out against Cuban military action in Africa at the recent conference of foreign ministers of the non-aligned countries. Morocco, Zaire, Egypt, Oman and Cambodia also raised their voices against Cuba at the meeting in Belgrade.

The Moroccan foreign minister, Mohammed Bucetta, went so far as to say that at least 30 non-aligned countries will boycott the full meeting scheduled to be held in Havana in 1979, unless Cuban troops are withdrawn from Africa before then.

The Cuban delegation, headed by Soviet-educated, Russian-speaking Foreign Minister Isidoro Malmierca, managed to defeat efforts to have the 1979 meeting site transferred away from Cuba to some other country, but it took considerable lobbying to achieve what the Cubans claimed was a victory. Carlos Rafael Rodriguez, vice-chairman of the Cuban council of state, the only man in Cuba who held cabinet posts in both the government of President Fulgencio Batista and in the Castro regime, a lifelong Communist, had to stop in Belgrade on a "private" visit to bolster Malmierca's efforts.

Clearly, though, the feeling that Communist Cuba is "too aligned" with the Soviet Union is widespread within the non-aligned movement. And it is not limited to just a few Africa mini-republics.

Revulsion at Communist Cuba's overt military intervention in Angola and Ethiopia extends from the very top down. No less an authority than Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito, founding father of the non-aligned movement, complained in his opening speech to the Belgrade meeting, about "efforts to establish new forms of colonial presence or of dependence on blocs of influence and foreign domination in vitally important regions of the Third World, particularly in Africa."

Interestingly, Marxist commentators in Latin America mostly seemed to overlook Tito's criticism of Communist Cuba.

Instead, they interpreted the Belgrade meeting as a defeat "on all levels" for the United States, as the Chilean Frida Modak wrote in the newspaper El Dia of Mexico City. They said, too, that China also was defeated. According to Modak, "After the conference was inaugurated, Morocco opened fire, followed by Somalia." stitute the real problem." As she reported, "the inaugural final declaration of the session, to which Tito spoke. Then, she wrote, "the Cuban foreign minister explained things from the point of view that really interests the countries of the Third World, that of their independence form imperialism and from neocolonialism, which con-

'Explorer' provides freedom

Copley News Service

GULF OF CALIFORNIA, MEXICO — Some ships move around the world from dock to dock and may not anchor once a year. The Lindblad Explorer sails in waters offering minimal berthing facilities and it moves at the whim of its expedition leader.

Here in the Gulf of California Capt. Haase Nilsson has anchored as often as three or four times a day and launched the eight Zodiacs (rubber boats each carrying 12 passengers) that give a ship and its passengers uncommon freedom.

That freedom is exploited to provide adventure, and, sometimes, high whimsy. Passengers participate as much or as little as their health and age and interest allow them.

On Isla Isabela, a bird refuge off San Blas, expedition leader Lyall Watson was appalled at the cries of a sea turtle, floundering on its back at a fishermen's camp. He bargained to buy the turtle's life for $10 and brought it back by Zodiac to the ship's swimming pool.

The turtle became the subject of a seminar at poolside. While everyone was at dinner that night, Capt. Nilsson, defending the pool's filter system, lowered the turtle in a Zodiac to the surface of the sea and allowed it to swim away. It was the only conflict of the cruise between ship and expedition leaders, who weren't yet ready to bid the turtle goodbye.

On another day, I carried the ship's spade as part of a crew to dig for Indian artifacts in a cave on Isla. Partida where a midden had been found.

On San Benito, an ornithologist bought a captured young osprey from fishermen for $2 (the price was lower than the turtle's because it wasn't good to eat), returned it to its nest, and stood watch until its mother returned.

At Cabo San Lucas, staffers watched as a dolphin was killed in a fishing net, and brought the dead creature aboard for an after-lunch dissection (with Swiss Army knife) and narration in the ship's theater. On Isla Santa Catalan, an enthusiastic passenger sought to bring back one of the rare rattlesnakes; that scheme brought unanimous disapproval.

But there is an uncommon sense aboard the Explorer of a complex and highly capable facility that can serve the scheme that seems most attractive at any moment.

The vessel moves within a loose itinerary, and the next day's movements are seldom known before a program is slipped under each cabin door in the early evening.

Even then they are subject to change. We abandoned an island stop one day when finback whales were spouting all around us. Another day we reversed our course when we ran in with 40-foot whale sharks, the world's largest fish. The Explorer is surprisingly maneuverable. It stops in three to four times its length and turns in twice its length. Among whales the ship wheeled and spun for hours as passengers and crew members gleefully clicked shutters at the rail.

There is a sense of homesickness about many small ships, but it is intensified aboard a ship to which passengers and crew alike are drawn by the kinship of their curiosity about the world. Along the way we learn a great deal about each other, as well. As I climbed alone one day through the towering cardon cactus forests of Isla San Pedro Martir, I heard a spirited conversation ahead in clipped British accents that, I knew, could belong only to an elderly couple from Sussex who were among the Explorer passengers. I found them kneeling beside a cardon and stopped with them to rest.

She was flicking up cactus seeds in an envelope.

"Going to just try these in the greenhouse at Horsegrove Farms," she explained.

He was aghast at her temerity, but slightly bored. "Fot chance, I tell her," he said. "Look there," he said, his attention quickly diverted to the sky by a shrill cry. "I think I've seen a 'awk."

I will be wondering in the months ahead if a cardon cactus grows in Sussex. And how the Buenos Aires couple manages on the raft trip down the Grand Canyon that they plan after our docking in Los Angeles. Or if the elegant Lausanne lady resumes her habit of lying abed until noon.

Then there's the shapely 22-year-old from Sao Paulo who came aboard with her family several cruises back; they are long gone, but her passion for the towering Australian naturalist (and the indulgence of her rich father) have allowed her to make the Explorer her home, and she shows no intention of disembarking unless the Australian does.

Their romance tends to make older passengers wistful, but at least everyone aboard ship is a member of the supporting cast.

"It's partly the staff. They are like family," says the woman from Michigan. "For nine years I've kept coming back. And I suppose I'll keep coming. It seems more real to me than home."

I begin to understand what she means when I clamber down among nesting pelicans from the crest of San Pedro Martir, sweating and weary, to await the last boat back to the little red ship that sits at anchor to collect us all. A quarrelsome flock of gulls hovers over me and splatters me with guano. I narrowly avoid a nesting blue-footed boobie, which pelts me with squawks of abuse as I retreat. Guano gnats discover my ears and nose as I sit on a rock of loathsome odor, watching the speak of the Zodiac approach.

But minutes later in my cabin I stand in a hot shower as the Singapore laundryman picks up my spattered clothes. The Schumann piano concerto tinkles softly from the cabin console and the air conditioning has blown away memories of the desert's heat and stench. The beauty of the morning's sunrise remains fresh.

As I dry myself with two double towels a soft Swedish voice announces lunch. I pause in the lounge for a tonic. Our anchor is up, and we are cruising in the lee of the towering island that was my morning challenge. It is going to be an easy afternoon; Capt. Nilsson is enjoying a jigger of aquavit with his beer.

To me it is not more real than home, but it is a heady thing to feel at home in such parts of the world as these.

Runoff likely in Alabama's Democratic primary

By REX THOMAS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The race for the Democratic nomination for governor has boiled down to a runoff between Attorney General Bill Baxley, endorsed by black political leaders and organized labor, and millionaire Fob James, who campaigned as a foe of politicians.

Incomplete returns from Tuesday's Democratic primary put James, a former Auburn football star, in the lead in a 10-man field, with Baxley close behind.

It was the first gubernatorial election in 20 years without Gov. George C. Wallace or a member of his family running for the state's highest office. The 59-year-old partially paralyzed Wallace was barred by law from seeking re-election but has hinted he may try again in 1982.

Former Gov. Albert Brewer, hoping for a comeback after an unsuccessful race eight years ago and running with the support of the usually influential Alabama Education Association, could do no better than third in the incomplete returns.

But he held on, saying he is "optimistic that when all the votes are counted, I will be in a runoff."

Two other candidates, Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley and state Sen. Sid McDonald, conceded defeat.

Returns from 2,919 boxes out of 4,025 gave James 177,404 votes, or 28 percent; Baxley 158,512 votes, or 25 percent; and Brewer 131,439, or 21 percent. McDonald got 97,617, or 16 percent, and Beasley 48,972, or 8 percent.

Defeated in the 1958 governor's race, Wallace came back and was elected in 1962, 1970 and 1974. His first wife, Lurleen, was elected in 1966. She died of cancer after serving 16 months of her four-year term.

The Democratic nominee faces opposition in the Nov. 7 general election from a Republican challenger, former Probate Judge Guy Hunt of Cullman.

Hunt, who was active in Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign two years ago, won the GOP gubernatorial nomination over two opponents, college professor Bert Hayes and cattleman Julian Elgin.

The primary gave Alabama voters the chance for the first time ever to express their preference for two new U.S. senators in the same election.

But both faced the prospect of a runoff, Mrs. Allen against state Sen. Donald Stewart and Heflin against Rep. Walter Flowers.

Former Republican Rep. James D. Martin was unopposed in the GOP primary for Sparkman's seat. George W. Nichols apparently defeated former state Sen. Elvin McCary in the GOP race for Allen's term.

In North Dakota, Republican Rep. Mark Andrews received a vote of confidence in a race that served as little more than a preview of the November contest.

Andrews, 52, seeking his eighth full term in the U.S. House of Representatives, received 40,255 votes compared to 22,073 for Democrat challenger Bruce Hagen with nearly 80 percent of the vote counted. Both were unopposed in their party races.

Newborn remains on critical list

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A newborn baby was in critical condition today after being removed by Caesarean section from its dead mother, who landed head first on a sidewalk after jumping from the second story of a burning building.

Three other young people also died and five were injured in the blaze Tuesday in a north Philadelphia home.

The mother, Earline Davis, 15, due to deliver her baby in two weeks, was dead on arrival at St. Joseph's Hospital with a fractured skull.

Doctors at the hospital immediately performed the Caesarean section and delivered a 7-pound, 4-ounce baby boy.

"When they brought the mother in there was no sign of life, no audible heart beat. But I listened to the baby's heart beat and was able to pick a slow beat. Right there and then I decided to perform an emergency Caesarean section," said Dr. Arturo Apolinario.

"The baby was flaccid. There was no crying or kicking. It was cyanotic (blueish coloration of the skin because of lack of oxygen). I knew the baby was in trouble," he said. "About 15 minutes later the baby started to make some crying sounds like he was trying to breathe on his own."

The physician said the baby was able to survive the jump probably because it was cushioned by the water in the mother's amniotic sac, which "served as a shock-absorber."

The baby later was transferred to nearby Hahnemann Hospital, which has an intensive care unit for newborns.

"I would say I was surprised in sort of a way that the baby survived because of the tremendous trauma the mother received in the fall," said Apolinario.

The other fire victims were Muhammed Everett Bey, 13, and twins Marvinna Everett Bey, 9, and Matheno Everett Bey, 9, according to the Medical Examiner's office. All the victims, including the pregnant mother, were brothers and sisters, a spokesman in the fire marshal's office said.

The victims' mother, who also jumped from a window, and four other children also were injured.

Garment district employment only 'common denominator'

NEW YORK (AP) — A health official says the only thing five suspected victims of Legionnaires Disease had in common was their employment in the city's garment district.

The disease has been confirmed in one death and suspected in four other cases, one of them also fatal.

The city Department of Health disclosed late Tuesday the possible outbreak of the disease that caused 29 deaths after a 1976 American Legion convention in Philadelphia.

Dr. John Marr, the department's director of epidemiology, said blood samples from the four suspected victims were being sent today to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. He said he hoped to have laboratory tests results by Thursday.

Marr said the five persons live in three different boroughs of the city, but all work on the same street in the garment district — West 34th Street between Sixth and Eighth Avenues.

He said the department will start analyzing today blood samples taken from 26 other persons who worked with the five men to see if any are harboring the bacterium which causes Legionnaires Disease.

The one case confirmed by laboratory tests so far is that of a 31-year-old man who died in Brooklyn's St. John's Hospital Aug. 25.

"Highly suspect" cases, Marr said, include the first man's two brothers, aged 26 and 29, who entered Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn the day before their brother's death, but are reported doing well.

Legionnaires disease also is suspected in the death of a 44-year-old man Monday at Bellevue Hospital Center and the illness of a 48-year-old patient who entered Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx Aug. 17 and still is in critical condition.

All the victims worked as "rack boys," working most of the time on the streets. They push racks of dresses and other garments from one firm's offices to another.

Casino 'win' noted

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Gamblers lost $23.56 million in August at its casino, Resorts International Inc. officials said.

The figure is up from the casino's "win" of $20.6 million in July.

Officials announced Tuesday the casino took in an average of $759,208 a day in August, 14 percent more than in July.

Resorts International chairman James Crosby said the daily average win from the casino's 97 table games amounted to $405,417 or 53.4 percent, and the average daily win from its 1,051 slot machines amounted to $353,791, or about 46.6 percent.

The company said its casino had taken in $62.81 million, or an average of about $650,000 a day, since it opened May 26.

Bentsen, Tower vote alike on three Senate issues

WASHINGTON—Here's how Texas senators were recorded on major roll call votes in the days immediately preceding the Senate recess that began Aug. 27. The house was in recess during the reporting period.

THREE R's Rejected, 30 for and 62 against, and amendment to kill a proposed program to upgrade the teaching of reading, writing and math in the nation's elementary and secondary schools. The new program would spend $754 million over five years, chiefly in grants to state and local education agencies for initiatives to improve curricula and teaching with respect to the basic skills. The amendment was proposed to HR 15, a bill extending the Elementary and Secondary Education Act for five years at a total cost of $51.5 billion. The bill goes to conference with the House.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., sponsor of the amendment, said: "If we cannot do something to make sure that youngsters can read, write and compute, we shall not be too effective in building a structure above that."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., an opponent of the amendment, said: "If we cannot do something to make sure that youngsters can read, write and compute, we shall not be too effective in building a structure above that."

Senators voting "nay" favored the new basic skills program.

Sen. Loyd Bentsen, D. voted "yea" and Sen. John Tower, R, voted "nay."

DOUBLE-DIPPING Failed, 32 for and 58 against, to table stricter limitations on "double-dipping"—the practice of military retirees taking civilian jobs in the federal government and thus getting dual U.S.

ROLL CALL REPORT

paychecks. Failure of the tabling motion left intact a $47,500 ceiling proposed on the combined income of most military retirees who take civilian jobs with Uncle Sam. The ceiling is part of S 2640, the Civil Service reform bill later passed (87-1) and sent to the House.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a supporter of tabling and thus killing the proposed ceiling, said: "I am getting a little sick and tired of hearing the man in uniform kicked around because he has the expertise, he has the know-how, that certain agencies of the government have to have..."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent of tabling, said: "I think the reason there is great concern about (double-dipping) is that if we permit this military pension business to linger and malinger, as it has for decades, then one of these days it will bankrupt even the incredibly wealthy Pentagon."

Senators voting "nay" favored the stricter limitations on double-dipping. Bentsen and Tower voted "nay."

NEW SENATE BUILDING Voted, 61 for and 11 against, to approve and send to the White House the conference report on a $6.8 billion supplemental appropriations bill (HR 13467). The bill originally contained $54 million to advance construction of the third Senate office building—an edifice labeled a "palace" by its critics but defended as necessary office space by its supporters. With this vote, the Senate reluctantly went along with a House decision to delay any more funding for the controversial structure until after the 1978 congressional elections.

Sen. Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., a supporter of both the bill and the new building, said: "If the House keeps delaying (construction), it might cause the present cost of $101 per square foot...to exceed the $186 per square foot cost of the Rayburn House Office Building."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., an opponent of the bill and the building, said House members voted to kill the $54 million outlay because of constituent pressure, and that "there are a number of our constituents who simply do not want...a substantial new edifice constructed."

Most senators voting "nay" had voted in early August against the $54 million outlay for the third Senate office building.

Bentsen and Tower voted "yea."

CETA Passed, 66 for and 10 against, a bill (S 2570) extending Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) for four years, at a first-year cost of $10.8 billion and potential total cost of more than $40 billion. A companion bill is pending in the House. The current CETA program expires Sept. 30.

CETA is the main government program for putting the unemployed—chiefly the poor—to work. A major thrust of S 2570 is to train the hardcore unemployed while curbing corruption and abuses in local CETA programs nationwide.

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., a supporter, said that while CETA is "not perfect" it "strives not to foster a dependence on government, but to train men and women to be independent and productive members of society."

Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., an opponent, said it would be "difficult to contrive a more inefficient and politically corrosive means of creating employment than by the public service employment programs of CETA."

Senators voting "yea" favored extending CETA.

Bentsen and Tower voted "yea."

Hold-up also works at suit contract

East plays the king of spades at the first trick, and South should play low. East continues spades, and this time South takes the ace. South hopes that East is now out of spades, and that West will be unable to take another spade trick.

South must next lead the ace of hearts since there is no convenient way to reach dummy for a heart finesse. When the king drops, South knows that East will eventually get a trump trick. Still, South should not hurry to play the queen of hearts.

CLUB FINESSE

Instead, South leads the queen of clubs for a finesse. East takes the king of clubs and returns a club to the ten. If South had won the first spade, East would lead a spade after taking the king of clubs, and West would get two spade tricks.

South cashes the queen of hearts and the diamonds before clearing the jack of clubs out of the way. Then he leads a heart, giving East his jack. East must now return a club or a diamond; and in either case South can discard his last spade to make the contract.

ANSWER: Bid 2 NT. Partner will accept this invitation to game unless he has a minimum holding of 16 points. Some experts would jump to 3 NT with this hand because of the two tens and other high spot-cards.

13-count indictment announced

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Frank M. Clark, who as a congressman chaired the House subcommittee that set the salaries of maritime union members, has been charged with mail fraud, perjury and income tax evasion.

U.S. Attorney Blair Griffith announced the 13-count federal grand jury indictment Tuesday and said it followed a three-year investigation by the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service.

Clark, 62, represented the 25th Congressional District for two decades. He made an unsuccessful bid to regain his seat last spring.

He is accused of arranging congressional paychecks for two people who maintained his home in the Lawrence County community of Bessemer.

He also is accused of arranging federal payments for 11 other people who staffed his campaign headquarters.

The grand jury accused Clark of conducting the illegal scheme from January 1971 through January 1975.

Old-fashioned family reunion held in style

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

Five brothers, their mother and a grandmother or two, who have not seen each other all at the same time in 17 years, got together over the Labor Day weekend in Midland.

From responses from participating relatives, the old-fashioned family reunion was a successful affair.

Mrs. Virgil Utley of 4629 Ric Drive invited all her sons to the get-together.

Participating, along with their wives and families, were sons Mark Gerard, 41, of Albuquerque, N.M., Jack Gerard, 39, of Knoxville, Tenn., Ken Farmer, 38, of Big Spring, Gene Gerard, 30, of El Paso, and Alan Utley, 17, of Midland.

Also, 10 grandchildren, minus three who could not make it, dropped by for the holiday reunion, said Mrs. Utley.

Jack Gerard is moving from Tennessee to Fort Worth. "I haven't been back since six years ago," he said. "We've just never been able to get together as a family until now."

"When Alan was born, Ken was over in Germany. Before Ken got home, Jack moved to Tennessee. That's been 17 years ago," said Mrs. Utley.

She went to El Paso to see Gene Gerard and then to Albuquerque, N.M., to see Mark Gerard.

"In organizing this thing, Ken and Jack did the calling on their end of the line," she explained.

Others who could not make it because of work or other commitments include these children: Carol Dowling with two daughters in Abilene and Dennis Utley with a daughter, also of Abilene, said Mrs. Utley.

A niece, Mrs. Lila Tucker of Midland, came, along with her sons, said Mrs. Utley.

Said Mrs. Utley, "It means an awful lot to me to have them all together. They all have families and jobs and it's hard for some of them to get away. I know it means a lot to these boys. They've played horse shoes, ate a barbecue feed and played some football."

Apparently a tree was removed from the Virgil Utley backyard during the course of the stay. The five brothers are supposed to have had something to do with the removal of the 20-foot tall tree, said Mrs. Utley.

Members of the family recalled memories and enjoyed each other's company, she added. What's the reunion mean to the five brothers involved?

Said Mark, "It means I can see all my family again, except a few people."

Jack said, "It means seeing all my brothers and sisters-in-law and nieces and aunts and uncles."

Ken replied, "I just think it's a great opportunity to get together. We had a great barbecue Saturday night. I beat a few brothers in horse-shoes!"

Alan said, "This visit has meant a good time to get together and do a little picking. In this case the picking is on me," he said jokingly.

Gene added, "It's a chance to let everyone know that I'm the best-looking brother here!"

However, Gene quickly said, "It's just great to get together and see everybody again. There's not many families that have as many people as we do who get along together as good. Usually they don't get along more than 10 months at a time."

Jack said the reunion is "a chance to enjoy each other's company after many years of being apart."

Virgil Utley is employed by a Midland area bread company. He was Also included were Mrs. Lila Arnold, 81, of Midland. She's the mother of Mrs. Virgil Utley. Another grandmother present was Mrs. Maudie Watkins, 76, of Midland. She is the mother of Mrs. Ken Farmer.

With 28 people, two dogs, seven cars and a few pickups included, the Utley residence in northwest Midland resembled a 24-hour flea market. But Mrs. Utley said neighbors did not complain.

Loved animals rest in style in pet cemetery

ROSEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — The stately granite monuments, surrounded by flowers in the well-kept cemetery, are etched with the names of loved ones: Buster, Queenie, Fluffy, Yo-Yo, Cuddles.

At Feist's Pet Cemetery, visitors come year-round to pay their respects to deceased dogs, cats, birds, hamsters, rabbits, skunks, monkeys and even a donkey.

"We serve all different kinds of people, young and old, well-to-do and very poor," said Ken Fabyanske, 67, the cemetery caretaker. "We had one case where an entire family, 16 people, attended a service for a miniature collie."

Fabyanske, whose duties include selling plots, digging graves and maintaining the grounds, says business has picked up in recent years. Plots start at $60 each, depending on the size of the pet.

Plain wood boxes are provided for burial, but some pet owners spend up to $1,000 for small coffins and expensive monuments.

"People feel that after all the happiness their pet has brought them, burying it here is one last thing they can do for their pet," Fabyanske said.

Ray Schoenrock, secretary of Schoenrock Monuments in St. Paul, said some pet owners come in with sketches of their animals to carve on markers. Other markers are inset with color photos of the deceased animal, under plexiglass.

"The emotion is there — particularly with dogs," he said. "We had one lady come in with a drawing of a purring cat to put on a $600 monument. She paid more for that than for her husband's marker."

There are now 560 pet cemeteries in the United States and the number is growing, says Pat Blosser, executive director of the National Association of Pet Cemeteries in Chicago.

Puppets deliver message: Handicapped valuable

By ROBERT F. LEVEY
WASHINGTON — Reynaldo Rodriguez cuts a stunning figure in his striped turtleneck, his blue hair — and his white cane. He is blind, yes, but he is quick to point out that he can read in Braille, feed himself, even play baseball with a special buzzer-equipped ball. "I can do lots of things," Reynaldo boasts.

So can Ellen Jane Pet. She is mentally retarded, and makes no bones about admitting it. Yet she holds down a full-time job in an animal hospital.

And what about freckle-faced Mark Riley? A cerebral palsy victim, he is confined to a wheel chair, can't move his arms or legs and sometimes has trouble eating and speaking. But Mark can play checkers like a champ.

The message, of course, is that the handicapped are valuable people. But when Reynaldo, Ellen, Mark and Company deliver that message, it tends to "take" more readily than it ordinarily might.

The reason is that they are puppets, part of a troupe of three-footers designed and operated by two Washington-area women — Barbara Aiello, a 31-year-old special educator, and Ingrid Crepeau, a 29-year-old professional puppeteer.

For the last four months, they and their troupe have been strutting and mugging before schools and day camps — sending forth word via a variety of skits that being handicapped is a lot less awful than it might seem to "normal" people.

At times, the results have been remarkable. One little boy in Northern Virginia, a cerebral palsy victim, had not spoken in six months. But after seeing the puppet show, he began talking animatedly to Mark Riley about their mutual disorder. Another boy, whose older brother is mentally retarded, was able to admit it in front of his friends for the first time after the friends saw Ellen Jane Pet in action.

National exposure may not be far off, either. The producers of Captain Kangaroo, a children's television program, has auditioned the puppet show.

One reason the show attracted television's attention is that the puppets are gutsy. The "normal" one do not shy from questions that many people would not have the nerve to ask a handicapped person. In addition, audiences are encouraged to ask the puppets questions after each skit.

For instance, Mark Riley has a discussion with a "normal" puppet in one of Aiello's and Crepeau's skits. One of the playmates' first questions is how Mark uses a toilet. As he replies — "I use special handrails my family has installed in the bathroom" — audiences nod in a way that suggests they were wondering exactly that.

Questions from audiences tend to be just as direct. At a performance before an Arlington, Va., "play camp" audience of 6-year-olds, one little girl asked Mark: "How do you play or go to school or have any fun?"

Mark, whose voice is supplied by Aiello, replied: "I can play lots of things — marbles, Monopoly, checkers." Later, the 6-year-old questioner told a friend:

"Those are the games I play most of the time, too. He isn't much different from me."

"Appreciation. That's the issue," said Aiello, who hopes to sell the puppet show to schools that want to show "normal" children what handicapped children are really like. "What we try to show is the skill a handicapped person has to have to survive in this society." But the message "normal" children draw from the show seems to be that they should be kind to the handicapped, in addition to counting their own blessings. Tara Laster, 6, told a fellow member of the Arlington audience that a blind man lives on her block. "I'm nice to him, but everyone else isn't always," she said. "I like the show because maybe people (who see it) will be nice to blind people, too." Such reactions are, at least in part, the result of the show's tone. While the puppets treat handicaps seriously (Reynaldo admits he is "very mad sometimes" about being blind), they are still capable of wit (Mark calls his wheelchair "my cruiser"). According to Aiello, the biggest boosters of the show are parents of the handicapped. "They're the ones who know that, in this society, there are people we're taught not to look at," she said. Other groups have been skeptical. Aiello acknowledged. "We've run into the feeling that there's no good way to handle (the portrayal of the handicapped)," she said. "People's reactions can be scary."

But they can also be revealing. Although Aiello and Crepeau stand in full view behind their puppets during the show, audiences almost always direct their questions to the puppets. "That has to mean we're doing something right," Crepeau said. Another indication that audiences accept the show's premise is the lack of self-conscious snickering. Although Ellen Jane Pet speaks in the slow, groping cadence of some retarded people, no one finds it funny. The same goes for Mark Riley and his lip. Aiello admits that no puppet show can overcome the "massive prejudice" society has against the handicapped. "But the kind of honesty we portray has had a very good effect," she said. Just then, a group of 6-year-olds was proving her right. One by one, they were shaking Mark Riley's limp right hand.

Alsace blends French, German cultures, cuisines

Copley News Service

ALSACE, France — Considered by many to be the "most foreign" of French provinces, and certainly the least-known to American tourists, Alsace deserves some explanation. The region, whose borders snuggle against those of Belgium, Germany and Switzerland, might be considered schizophrenic in attitudes, and that would not be surprising.

It has been French and it has been German and the tug of war has gone on for centuries. Town names and houses have a distinctly Germanic sound and look. Sauerkraut and spicy sausages are an Alsatian favorite and yet the people are fiercely Gallic and proud of it. With its fields of wheat, slopes of vineyards and orchards of peaches and pears, it is an area to be coveted and to fight for and both have happened.

Though a third of the land is agricultural, there are untamed forests of the Vosges Mountains, giving those who drive the winding roads panoramic views of what Goethe described as "a huge plain stretching out of sight, prepared as a second Paradise for man."

And within all this are the small villages, immaculate and almost too decorative to be real. Flowers spill from window boxes at every half-timbered house and narrow winding streets bring visual extravagances at every turn.

Rivers and streams flow from nearby mountainsides to water the lush valleys before joining the main waters.

And there are, in this paradise, remnants of the great fortified castles of the 11th century. They can be seen still standing boldly on cliffs overlooking the villages. Hewn of stone by hand, they once guarded village people from invaders.

That, then, is Alsace in general. Alsace in particular begins with Strasbourg, four hours by train from Paris, somewhat less by very good road. Now the intellectual and cultural center of the region, Strasbourg began as a Roman township, crossroads of both land and waterways since the first century. It is set on the banks of the River Ill (pronounced eel), and the left bank of the Rhine.

Surrounded by water, it is also intersected by canals. There, lovers stroll in the early morning hours and cafes remain open late, laughter and light sparkling across the gently lapping waters.

Beer is consumed in almost equal quantity with wine and the people are sturdy and lighthearted.

They welcome the newcomer and somehow don't seem to be "touristed out" as in better-known parts of France.

There is a relaxed ambience, personified by the attitude toward food, for which the entire region is justly famous.

There have been ominous rumblings in Paris of cutting the two-hour lunch by half but there are no such forebodings in Alsace. Everything except restaurants closes at noon, not to open again until 2:00.

On my first day in Strasbourg, after strolling the pedestrian streets, visiting Petite Ranc France, the older section of the city where 14th century fortifications offer a spectacular view of both water and city, I lunched with Georges Netter, Strasbourg's director of tourism. Asked about the shortening the two-hour lunch (and ours was last nearly three hours), he remarked in mock horror, "Simply impossible. Most business is conducted between the cheese course and coffee. With only an hour, one would barely have finished the fish course."

"You Americans I think eat all your meals at Johnson and Johnson (it might taste that way, but I think he meant Howard Johnson's), but Alsations begin the day by talking about where they've been for lunch the day before and where they will have dinner that night." That is not particularly astonishing since Alsace holds 40 of the coveted Michelin Guide restaurant stars within a 37-mile area.

Later, as the cheeses were brought out for display and serving — there were at least a dozen, modest by some standards in Alsace — Americans have 300 religions and one cheese."

"You know, of course, Alsace is pine-covered forests dappled with sunlight and sprinkled with patches of wild herbs, ruined castles which fortified the villages centuries ago. It is a place to be soothed by the countryside, stimulated by the culture and cuisine. Alsace is like no other.

Most couples stay wed

WASHINGTON (AP)—More Americans stay married rather than get divorced.

According to the American Council of Life Insurance, 62 couples out of each 100 marriages remain together. It says a government study of women who marry for the first time "shows that for every 100 who marry, 38 will get a divorce but 29 of the divorced women will remarry and 13 of these marriages will again end in divorce."

"Because of the remarriages and second divorces, the original group of 100 will experience 129 marriages and 51 divorces. However, in 62 of the 100 couples the partners will not change."

Consumers learning that it pays to organize groups

A growing number of consumers are learning that it pays to organize and the government is trying to help buyers band together for their rights.

No one knows how many consumer groups — public and private — have been formed in recent years. There are several hundred state and local consumer units alone. The 11-year-old Consumer Federation of America, one of the nation's largest consumer organizations, has 215 member groups.

According to the Office of Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, one of the first steps to take is incorporation. "The act of incorporation often gives a group an important psychological benefit, a sense of continuity."

Consumer organizations usually apply for incorporation under Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code; that's the section for non-profit groups. They generally apply for C-3 or C-4 status, depending on how much lobbying they want to do. Lobbying by C-3 groups is more restricted and contributions to these groups are tax deductible. C-4 groups, in contrast, are free to engage in more legislative advocacy, but contributions to these groups are not tax deductible.

An Internal Revenue Service booklet, "How to Apply for Recognition of Exemption for an Organization," Publication 557, explains the forms and procedures to follow to gain non-profit status. The booklet costs 40 cents and is available from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402.

Fund-raising is another necessary step on the road to organization. Grants awarded by public and private foundations are an important source of money, but they are often overlooked by people who lack experience in the field. To find out where the money is, HEW suggests subscribing to "The Grantsmanship Center News," published six times a year by Grantsmanship Center, 1015 Olympic Boulevard, Los Angeles, California, 90015. The annual fee is $15.

Consumer groups also are eligible for federal funds under the Consumers' Education Program, established in 1972. Congress provided $4 million for program grants in fiscal 1978. Further information is available from Director, Office of Consumers' Education, U.S. Office of Education, Washington, D.C., 20202.

Any new organization faces some pitfalls and you can avoid trouble by following a few basic rules. Leaders of well-established consumer groups, polled by HEW, offer these do's and don't's.

—DO build a dues-paying membership. The fees need not be large, but it is important to establish your group as being worth an investment.

—DO publish a newsletter. A simple mimeographed sheet is enough to keep members in touch with what's happening.

—DON'T speak out on issues without preparation. One slip can undo months of work by causing a loss of credibility.

—DO involve new members in projects right after they have joined. Don't let them lose their enthusiasm.

U.S., Japan ink energy pact

TOKYO (AP) — Japan and the United States have agreed to cooperate in the development of new energy sources, giving "top priority" to nuclear fusion studies.

The agreement was reached today at the end of the first working-level talks for Japan-U.S. governmental cooperation in development of new energy sources. A statement released at the close of the two-day meeting said cooperation will be extended to research in coal liquefaction and later in such fields as solar and geothermal energy, photosynthesis and high energy physics.

The U.S. delegation was headed by John Deutch, director of energy research, department of energy.

Finally, the secret recipe revealed

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP) — So many readers have written in, and I want to thank them both, asking for the recipe of Mulligan's Stew that the time may be ripe to reveal its secret ingredients.

Any day now, as the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled, the feds and even the local dicks can show up with an easily obtained search warrant to demand the highly coveted formula, so better to reveal all now and head off another atrocity against a free press.

The Oxford English Dictionary recognizes Mulligatwny soup, an East Indian concoction of pepper water and other Tamil spices, but entirely snubs Mulligan's Stew, which is not surprising given the envy and resentment in the Mother Country of advancements and discoveries in the former colonies. Also, the innate prejudice among Her Majesty's lexicographers against anything of Irish descent undoubtedly is a factor.

Webster defines Mulligan's Stew as: "n. U.S. Slang, a kind of soup containing meat, vegetables, etc. probably originating with Irish immigrants and favored by hoboes and other itinerants in the Depression years."

With the emphasis on the etc., there you have it: a feast of words, a ragout of rhetoric, a pot-au-feu of prose boiled up under pressure by some itinerant wordsmith wandering willy-nilly down the track bed of life, hoping that the light at the end of the tunnel isn't an on-coming train.

The ingredients are random and based on availability, rather like the recipe for authentic Hungarian goulash that begins "steal a pound of beef, four carrots and a can of paprika ..."

As the galloping gourmet of the dangling participle, the run-away sentence and the free-wheeling gerundive, I always begin my Mulligan's Stew by mincing a few words. Minced words are so hard to find these days. Most people, politicians in particular, are proud of never mincing their words.

This column is the last repository of minced words and also unadulterated rot, which is rot in its purest, organic form, with no harmful additives, color dyes or polyunsaturates. The rot you read here comes to you untouched by laboratory technicians, although as is the base with most journalistic mish-mashes these days a good deal of the fat has been left in.

For the most tasteful Mulligan Stew, choose a lean, half baked idea, preferably one that has been chewed over for several hours. Allow it to simmer on the back burner for most of the morning, while you go about gathering rosebuds as you may or cleaning out the garage or whatever passes for genteel procrastination in your life style.

When the plot begins to thicken, after sufficient thyme, toss in a few disjointed phrases and a soupcon of ennui. Slightly matured ennui is always best. A truffle or two of social significance will add body to the stock and emit an aroma of pretense, which these days is considered highly palatable. For local color and to appease the folk faddists, you can chuck in a few grains of common sense, skimming off some spicy quotes from Mark Twain or Billy Carter and ladling in the latest bon mots of Miz Lillian or Truman Capote, like where he urged gays to go back in the closet and women back in the kitchen, which should add a little hot pepper to the pot.

The tender shoots of an original idea, if any are available and not priced out of sight like lettuce, can be carefully lowered into the mixture about now, being sure not to bruise the tiny buds of imagination or squash the meaningful stamen and pistil. Or is it mortar and pestle? Sprinkle in a little sage to taste as the bubbles dissipate.

A few raw nerve ends will appear about now, probably grated. This indicated the pressure is really on, and the fat is in the fire, and also in the copy. You are really cooking with gas now as rumblings in the duodenal tract loudly proclaim.

To reach the desired volume at the desired serving time at the editor's table now is the last opportunity to enrich the gurgling gumbo with any available ablatives absolutes and elegant variations lying about. Split a few infinitives as desired, hack up a few phrases until thoroughly hackneyed, fold in an ounce or two of antithesis, oxymoron and symbiosis to give it that Bill Buckley zest and, for old times sake, beat up a few well beaten cliches, being careful not to let them stick in the craw.

Hours later, sometimes days, the stew and you are ready to do a slow burn over the way the editor is cutting away some of your most delicious morsels and watering down your best ideas. Savorin, Oscar of the Waldorf and Chef Boyardee all so suffered for their art. Most editors, alas, are dyspeptic pill poppers with the taste buds of a giant aardvark who wouldn't know a turnip from a turkey.

Nevertheless the joy of cooking is yours, the pot runneth over.

Voila, you have produced a Mulligan's Stew. Or viola, if you prefer, to quote the Frenchman looking in the music store window and tossing still another sentence into the pot.

Expenses sobering fact of life for most farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sobering fact of life for farmers, many of them enjoying substantially higher prices than a year ago, is their list of expenses for producing the nation's food and fiber.

Despite two successive months of decline in prices farmers get for commodities they produce, the Agriculture Department says those prices in August were still 20 percent above their year-ago mark.

Further, USDA said last week in a monthly price report, costs of items farmers buy to produce leveled off in August. Compared with Aug. 1977, however, production items were up about 9.7 percent.

A closer look at the report shows that only two farm production items cost less last month than they did a year ago — fertilizer and agricultural chemicals such as pesticides and weedkillers.

The costs of other items listed in the production category were up from a year ago. Those included feed, feeder livestock, seed, fuels and energy, farm and motor supplies, cars and trucks, tractors and self-propelled machinery, building and fencing materials and farm services and cash rent.

Examination of some of the less-obvious items farmers buy illustrates why many of them who patch up old tractors, make do with battered pickup trucks and grain harvesters still complain of rising production costs. Although steel fence posts still cost

$2.33 each, for example, a roll of barbed wire now costs an average of $28 a roll against $26.90 a year ago, the report said.

An aluminum scoop shovel that cost $14.50 a year ago now is $16.30.

One 10-inch adjustable end wrench is about $7.69 against $7.12 in August last year, and a heavy-duty soldering iron is $17.30, compared with $15.40.

Farmers who raise produce and other commodities that require bagging and packaging also have felt the pinch.

A dozen one-bushel stave baskets now cost $12.70 against $11.60 a year ago, and burlap bags are $33.70 per 100, up from $31 last year.

Feeder livestock represent a mixed sort of expense for farmers since those animals also are produced by those who sell to others. Thus, higher prices are welcomed by the cow-calf producer but not so eagerly by farmers and feedlot operators who buy the stock.

Feeder cattle and calves in August averaged $56 per 100 pounds against $37.50 a year earlier. Feeder pigs on the average brought about $109 per 100 pounds, compared with $85 a year ago.

If you're really serious about dieting and keeping track of weight loss or gain, maybe a new electronic boot being used on cows is just the thing.

The Agriculture Department says that the special boots are being worn by cows in experiments in Oklahoma where researchers are checking on their weights and their response to different diets.

Worn on all four feet, the boots contain a measuring device that can transmit at any moment the cow's weight with a margin of error of one pound in a thousand.

The boot experiments are described in the September issue of "Agricultural Research" published by the department's Science and Education Administration.

Dr. Floyd Horn of the Southwestern Livestock and Forage Research Station, El Reno, Okla., said the boots enable scientists "to study, at a distance, forage intake, small weight changes, and other aspects of the animal's metabolism."

How do the cows feel about the boots?

"Like most new shoes, they seem awkward and uncomfortable at first, but they break in nicely in a few hours," the report said. "After that, this intricate scientific system is just old shoe to the cattle."

Farmers on top

WASHINGTON (AP) — American farmers continue to maintain a lead in terms of grain produced per unit of land, according to recent figures by the Agriculture Department.

Lovers given 30 years, life for killing

NEW YORK (AP) — Two lesbian lovers have been sentenced to 30 years to life in separate prisons after being convicted of murdering the husband of one of the women.

Carol Taylor, 29, and Elizabeth Taylor, 40, who are not related, said they actually were being punished for their lesbian relationship.

Carol Taylor, whose husband Herbert, 30, was murdered, received 25 years to life for conspiracy to murder. On the same charge, Elizabeth Taylor was sentenced to a maximum of life in prison, with the parole board to fix a minimum.

She also got a seven-year maximum for the "criminal solicitation," or hiring the killer, with the minimum to be fixed by the board. On the same charge, Carol Taylor was sentenced to 28 months to seven years.

Under state law, the two are eligible for parole after 30 years, although it need not be granted.

After a mistrial last April, the two were convicted June 7 of arranging a $10,000 contract for the murder of Herbert Taylor.

Taylor, whose life was insured for $100,000, was shot to death March 14, 1976, in the house where he lived alone after his wife left. The hired killer has not been apprehended.

The two women lived together, and Carol Taylor was said to be unwilling to yield custody of her sons to her husband.

During her appearance Tuesday before Justice Harold Hyman of state Supreme Court, Elizabeth Taylor labeled the case "the most disgusting, unfair trial anyone could get in a court."

In a separate appearance before the judge, Carol Taylor said she "was tried for gayety, not for murder. I was tried as a lesbian."

Hyman called Carol Taylor, the mother of two small sons, "completely evil, a self-appointed executioner."

He said Elizabeth Taylor, mother of a teen-age son and daughter, took part in the murder to satisfy her sexual and financial desires.

The state said "intensity of the lesbian relationship, concern for the custody of the children, and the insurance money" of $100,000 were motives behind the murder.

Dawson County farm tour includes 5 farms

LAMESA — The annual cotton-oriented Dawson County farm tour Thursday afternoon will take in five farms for cotton growers and others in agriculture to examine new strains and varieties of cotton.

The tour, marked by a caravan of pickup trucks and cars, will begin at 1:30 p.m. at the Forrest Park Community Center, said Joe Ed Wise, county agricultural extension agent.

With militants marching to capital, picking in full swing, growers say

MARION, Ohio (AP) — Migrant workers marching to Columbus to protest low wages for tomato pickers in northwestern Ohio had completed less than half of their 100-mile trek to the capital city by early today.

In the absence of the militant migrants, who last week slowed the tomato harvest by coaxing other workers to leave the fields, growers said picking was back in full swing.

The column of 140 men, women and children had traveled to just north of Marion by Tuesday night.

They hope to reach Columbus by Friday for a Statehouse rally to bring their plight to the attention of the governor and other state officials, according to Baldemar Velasquez, president of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee.

The workers are demanding a dime increase to 35 cents for picking a 30-pound hamper of tomatoes, a 60-cent hike in the hourly minimum wage to $3.25 and representation in contract talks between growers and canneries.

Just how successful the strike effort depends on whether a striker or a farmer is asked.

Velasquez said the tomato harvest was stunted in one tenth of Ohio's 20,500 acres of tomatoes, primarily in Henry and Putnam counties.

Some farmers agree the harvesting was hurt, but say most tomatoes will be picked because the peak harvest period just began this week.

"Everybody is busy picking tomatoes," said Lewis Klass of Leipsic. "In fact, things are going so great that Libby is going to be on limitation, where each grower can bring in only so many tomatoes a day."

Klass referred to the Libby, McNeil & Libby Inc. cannery in Leipsic, which picketing strikers closed down on Aug. 26, the second day of their action. Forty persons were charged with criminal trespassing and disorderly conduct and are free on $100 bond each pending a Sept. 12 trial.

Farmers say canneries normally place them on "limitation" during the tomato picking season, although the migrant strike delayed the call for limits this year.

Klass said numerous high school students are earning extra money this year by picking tomatoes. They are replacing the hundreds of migrant workers who Sheriff Bob Beutler says either left the area because of the strike or are participating in it.

Putnam County alone had an estimated 8,000 migrants before the strike began, but more than 2,000 had left a week ago, Beutler said.

Farmers may meet Thursday night to determine "who got hurt the worst and who is in biggest trouble right now," Klass said.

Growers were gathering information concerning the alleged use of federal funds to directly support the strike effort, Klass said.

The farmers have called for a congressional probe into the way La Raza Unida, a social action agency that receives U.S. Labor Department grants, helped migrants in the two-county area hardest hit by the strike. They also asked for an audit of the agency.

Businessman, judge clash in trial

MOSCOW (AP) — American businessman Francis J. Crawford clashed briefly with the judge over a piece of evidence today on the second day of his trial on charges of buying rubles on the black market.

Crawford's Soviet attorney, Leonid M. Popov, told reporters he expected the trial to end today. Although the American could get eight years in prison, there was speculation he would get a light sentence and would be exchanged for two Soviet employees of the United Nations who are charged by the U.S. government with espionage.

Following completion of prosecution testimony which Crawford said was "like a fairy tale," Judge Lev Mironov cross-examined him for 45 minutes about how his employer transferred money in and out of the Soviet Union.

The cross-examination appeared to be an attempt to understand the financial procedures used by U.S. businessmen.

The judge produced a customs declaration he said showed Crawford once entered the country with $1,600 and left with $2,700, suggesting that he might have acquired the difference illegally.

"You've got it backwards," the American told the judge, insisting he entered with the larger sum and left with the smaller one.

As Mironov grew more and more testy, Crawford left his seat, went to the bench and pointed out the spaces on the form marked "entry" and "exit" in Russian.

"Enough, sit down," said the judge, annoyed, and he broke off the line of questioning.

After the cross-examination, a parade of minor witnesses began, including Izabella Nalchan, an administrative assistant in Crawford's Moscow office, who said he was "a kind man who treated me well."

Crawford, 37-year-old representative of International Harvester, is accused of buying 20,000 rubles from a black-market operator named Vladimir Kiselev for $8,320, about a fourth of their legal value, and with buying six antique samovars from Kiselev and his seamstress wife, Ludmila.

The Kiselevs and a cashier named Alla Solovoyov were put on trial with Crawford. All three pleaded guilty and testified against him. But he told Judge Mironov: "The testimony is complete fabrication. I have stated I have exchanged no dollars that were not officially through the Bank of Foreign Trade. I am innocent."

He refuted the prosecution's claim that he bought no rubles legally in 1978 with a bank document dated Feb. 6 showing he bought 4,000 rubles on that date.

Judge Mironov said he would need time to study the document.

Crawford told the court Mrs. Kiselev did some sewing for him, and he paid her with such inexpensive Western goods as toiletries, a Stetson cowboy hat and the black slacks her husband was wearing in the courtroom.

The American said those were the only business dealings he had with the couple.

Mrs. Kiselev looked at Crawford and asked him: "Why can't you admit your guilt? Why can't you plead guilty like the rest of us?"

Returning her stare, Crawford replied: "If you commit no crime, you certainly do not say you do."

U.S. Embassy representatives and several of the four Western reporters admitted to the trial cheered.

Crawford was arrested in June, apparently in retaliation for the U.S. arrest of the two Soviet U.N. employees, and was held in Lefortovo Prison for 15 days. He was released to the custody of U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon in exchange for the release of the two accused Russians to the custody of the Soviet ambassador to the United States.

open to them, and orders will soar.

But several Americans report that since the arrest of Francis J. Crawford in June on charges of selling dollars on the black market, their companies are having difficulty recruiting personnel for their Moscow offices.

Crawford's trial began Monday, and he vigorously charged that all the allegations against him were fabricated. But his conviction was expected. Some American businessmen said if he were sent to prison, their companies would consider quitting Russia or at least reducing their staffs here.

International Harvester, Crawford's employer, has indicated that it may pull out of Moscow and stop supplying spare parts for its tractors bought by the Soviets.

"We are all just pawns to the actions and reactions of two big governments," said the Moscow representative of one American firm.

In theory, capitalist American businessmen are the arch-enemies of the communist system, part of the U.S. military-industrial complex that Soviet propaganda says is working to thwart the Kremlin's drive for peace.

But the Soviet leaders recognize that they need the advanced technology, heavy machinery and quality goods that the West offers. They reluctantly seek out such American giants as IBM, Xerox, Caterpillar, International Harvester and General Electric to help them fulfill another five-year plan.

The migration of American businessmen to Moscow began in the heady days of 1972 and 1973, when detente was in flower and the Kremlin relaxed restrictions to allow big U.S. corporations to open offices. More than 25 U.S. firms are accredited to the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade Council. More than 40 businessmen are among the 800 Americans said to be here.

Interim DA only wants job in interim

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — The newly appointed interim district attorney here says he wants the job only until Oscar McInnis' legal problems are resolved.

Local lawyer Preston Henrichson, 34, was appointed Hidalgo County district attorney pro tem here Tuesday to fill in for McInnis, the indicted district attorney here.

McInnis has been named in federal indictments alleging he plotted to have a friend's ex-husband kidnapped and killed. The longtime prosecutor was also named in perjury indictments.

McInnis was disqualified from office here last week when the Texas Prosecutors Coordinating Council filed a removal suit against him.

Henrichson got the interim job after the seven state and county judges voted here Tuesday.

After taking the oath of office, Henrichson said he would not seek election nor accept permanent appointment to the post. The Edinburg native said he plans to serve until McInnis is either reinstated or removed from office. Henrichson said he anticipated that would happen before the end of the year.

McInnis still draws his $36,000 a year salary but has been stripped of power. State district Judge J.R. Alamia said Henrichson would draw a stipend approximately equal to the budgeted salary for the office.

McInnis will have an opportunity to defend against the prosecutors council's charges of misconduct. If the council can prove the charges, McInnis would be suspended from office without pay pending disposal of the federal indictments.

3,700 enroll at OC

ODESSA — A record 3,780 students have enrolled at Odessa College for the fall semester.

OC officials expect the enrollment to top 3,900 by the end of late registration this Friday.

The previous all-time fall enrollment was in 1976, when 3,711 students enrolled.

Dr. Philip Speegle, OC president, attributed the record enrollment to the college's expanded services and programs and to the increasing community awareness of educational opportunities at OC.

He said expanded facilities made possible by community support have allowed classes to be offered at additional times and for more classes to be taught.

Presidency didn't work without pomp

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — When Richard Nixon resigned the presidency four years ago, commentators and politicians expressed relief that the years of the imperial presidency, with its secretive, power-hungry palace guards, were over.

One columnist wrote that even before Watergate, "the presidency had taken on all of the regalia of monarchy except for ermine robes, a scepter and crown."

"Certainly Nixon's successor could assemble the same elements in the White House which produced Watergate — the fabric of secrecy, the anonymous advisers with so much power, the habit of closely held decision-making," said the Washington Post reporter.

"Still, the warning is clear enough if only future leaders will heed it: America did not want a king, not in the beginning and not in the summer of 1974."

So the next time the country went to the polls, it elected Jimmy Carter. Mr. Carter's first act as President of the United States was to climb out of the presidential limousine and walk down Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House.

Mr. Carter had read the mood of the country precisely. He did not want to be a king. He was one of us and proved it by wearing jeans and cardigan sweaters and by holding backyard barbecues for his campaign friends.

Now, 18 months later, he is being forced to hire an image director by those same commentators and politicians who decried Nixon's imperialism. Image man Gerald Rafshoon is trying to recapture some of the pomp and circumstance of the office that Mr. Carter discarded when he took over.

Recently, three planeloads of White House aides, New York congressmen and journalists followed the President to New York City for an elaborately staged ceremony surrounding Mr. Carter's signing the New York City aid bill.

New York television carried the event live. Thousands of people jammed the hall and streets outside and the evening news coverage looked like something scripted by Rafshoon.

The pomp and ceremony did much to restore — if only momentarily — Mr. Carter's tattered image.

Now, some of those same columnists are praising President Carter for his new take-charge posture. The regalia has been restored and it's beginning to work.

But not only are they welcoming the return of the pomp, now we even find some urging the President to be more secretive.

Case in point: the firing of Robert Griffin, a protégé of House Speaker Tip O'Neill and former assistant head of the General Services Administration.

Because the press was privy to the blow-by-blow on the shake-up, they criticized the White House for its clumsiness in handling the affair.

Mr. Carter should have privately informed O'Neill that Griffin had to go because he did not get along with the new director, one analyst wrote.

Civil service reform plan emphasizes performance

Editor's Note: Frank Zarb was head of the Federal Energy Administration during the Ford administration.

Copley News Service

Congress is considering a White House proposal to fix the Civil Service process.

The President says that his plan is intended to increase government efficiency by placing new emphasis on the quality of performance of federal workers. His "reform" program fundamentally calls for reorganization of the existing Civil Service Commission which would be replaced with an Office of Personnel Management and a Merit Protection Board.

It further provides for a new system of performance appraisal and methods for disciplining and rewarding federal employees based upon their performance. It shifts some personnel authorities of government within the bureaucracy and provides for a revised formula for staffing a government agency as well as modifying veterans' preferences.

In addition, it provides for a senior executive service which would give a new slant to the senior federal official and attempt to put him/her more on a performance basis.

These and several other changes proposed by the President appear to make some sense, and indeed may tend to streamline the government personnel system. However, all of the proposals taken together fall far short of their stated objectives.

A White House release earlier this year indicated that the Civil Service system has become "a bureaucratic maze which neglects merit, tolerates poor performance, permits abuse of legitimate employee rights, and mixes every personnel action in red tape, delay and confusion."

While the statement goes on to condemn widespread and unfair criticism of all federal employees, and recognizes that most are conscientious, the President does say "my proposals are intended to increase the government's efficiency by placing new emphasis on the quality performance of federal workers."

Ever since the beginning of the Republic, it has been easy political fun to criticize the federal bureaucracy. The vision of some faceless clerk who is consuming tax dollars, and whose basic incompetence is responsible for the delays and difficulties typical of "government bungling" has often been painted by the campaigning politician.

The implication is that if elected, he/she is going to reform the organization, make it more efficient, and more responsive by whipping the federal worker into shape.

Then, happily, the American people would be the recipients of better government. With years of this kind of rhetoric and an ample supply of evidence to prove that government as an institution is not very competent, the American people have wrongfully come to believe that the average bureaucrat is underworked, underpaid and overpaid.

While general beating on the bureaucracy is good sport, it's not only unfair, but unwarranted by the facts. During five years of working with federal employees at various levels I was in a position to compare them with a broad range of private sector employees. It is hard to avoid the conclusion that the federal worker as an individual is probably more productive, loyal and dedicated than almost any other group with which I have worked anywhere in the world.

How, then, can you argue that by making the bureaucrat more sensitive and responsive you are going to improve government?

The answer is that you cannot. The inefficiencies of government, the mistakes, the waste, delays, the expense, ridiculous red tape, and counterproductive regulations are for the most part caused by outdated or bad legislation. Too often Congress passes a law, mandates that the executive branch carry out a mission, then leaves it alone forever.

Plumber finds 'ultimate roots'

FALMOUTH, Maine (AP) — After 41 years in the plumbing business, Richard Waltz figures he's finally found the ultimate of roots.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," he comments about a 32-foot-long, 100-pound mass of tiny, almost hair-like interwoven root fibers pulled from a clogged drainage pipe.

Even after the roots were out, the drainage pipe remained clogged, and Waltz and his men kept probing. They found another 20-foot mass of fibers.

The roots apparently belong to a willow tree.

"Roots have almost an intelligence for locating pipes," Waltz explained. "They'll grow down to a pipe, then go longitudinally along the pipe until they finally locate a crack. Finally, a little spear the size of a hair on your head will work into the pipe," he said.

The root will then grow to an inch or more in diameter, he said, sending out "millions and millions and millions of what we call hair roots."

Professor sees an entirely unpredictable future

Copley News Service

There's a new world, indeed an entire new universe, waiting for mankind on the edges of time. Just what the new world will look like can't be determined now, but it very well could include new structures, new materials and new forms of life.

This new universe will be almost completely unpredictable, except for one fact ... it will be an exciting "creative universe," not the static, deterministic world predicated by modern physics.

These views of the future were outlined in an interview with Dr. Ilya Prigogine, the 1977 winner of the Nobel Prize in chemistry.

Prigogine is a short, dapper person, a refugee from Russia, and thoroughly outgoing. His theories are steeped in complex scientific and mathematical jargon ... dissipative structures, thermodynamics, statistical mechanics, entropy, the laws of probabilities.

Despite this linguistic lexicon, Prigogine won the Nobel Prize from what has been described as "bringing order out of chaos."

Stripped down, his views are exciting, promising and disturbing. They promise a different new world and the destruction of older, more comfortable ideas.

Prigogine is a professor of chemistry at the University of Brussels and director of the Center for Statistical Mechanics and Thermodynamics at the University of Texas at Austin.

Under older classical concepts, he explained, the universe is little more than an "automaton" that determines in a precise way what is going to happen.

Under Prigogine's new rules we are invited into a "universe which is creative, which leads to new situations, to a new naturalism."

In short, he indicated, mankind no longer has to be content with a static universe.

"The future of the world," he said, "is not just given to us at a given time. ... We have a view of an open universe in which new things can happen."

These "new things" could include the creation of entirely new forms of life and structures, he said.

Prigogine's speculations are based on deep mathematical and scientific principles.

Boiled down, these principles seem to say that the universe is winding down, dissipating its energy, toward a state called entropy, a measure of the degree of disorder in a closed system like the universe.

Prigogine's theory provides a plausible reason for the creation of order out of this disorder.

If the world were in a state of equilibrium, he said, it would probably create nothing more than things like crystals. However, he said, as the universe moves away from this state of order, as molecules are compacted in space and time, all sorts of new things can occur ... like the creation of life.

In such a dynamic, changing and evolving world, he said, the laws of nature may not be immutable. In fact, he noted, an ancient Chinese philosophy says the term the "laws of nature" is a contradiction in terms.

Under the present laws of physics, Prigogine said, a small change must result in a small effect. With his new theory, he said, a small change may produce a "violently different" effect.

Minicomputers latest in keeping up with Joneses

Copley News Service

Susan and Greg Rhodes of Spring Valley, Calif., have no microwave oven, no food processor and no trash compactor in their home.

Neither do Bill and Alice Englander. But, if the two couples lag in the popular possessions, they are ahead of their time with another appliance. Both have computers in their homes.

It became possible about 18 months ago to build a small, comparatively powerful computer that could be sold for as little as $600, less than half of what it previously cost.

Since then, industry promoters have been touting the microcomputer as the most important addition for the home since plumbing — the next major appliance every discriminating family needs to keep up with the neighbors.

It is said that the minicomputers can help Junior with his arithmetic or spelling, warn you when your mate is spending too much at the department store or reconcile your bank statement.

Even greater possibilities are envisioned just over the horizon.

One prospect is that the computers might be wired into a householdwide system of sensors and electronic switches to perform such varied functions as letting the dog out, alerting parents that the baby is awake in the crib, turning the lights on and off during vacations and providing a master control over appliances and heating and air-conditioning systems.

Skeptics say that such elaborate systems would be too costly, that the computers themselves presently are of little practical use to the average family and are little more than expensive toys for playing "dumb games."

This view is upheld more than the other extreme by the users themselves as well as by computer experts who have no economic axe to grind.

For example, the Rhodes' computer — a $599 Radio Shack model consisting of a keyboard, a TV-like screen and a cassette player — serves no important role in their day-to-day living.

"I had taken a couple of courses in programming and I bought it principally to take to school for teaching handicapped kids," said Greg.

"It is particularly useful for teaching youngsters with physical handicaps, such as cerebral palsy, but who have good minds.

The school wound up buying three of them, so now we have this one at home.

"I have started to write a program for computing our income tax. You can plug in your expected deductions at any time during the year and predict within about $100 what your tax is going to be. That's useful for jockeying tax-sheltered investments and so on."

Meanwhile, the Rhodes' 5-year-old daughter, Michele, has developed a penchant for playing a blackjacklike game called 21 with the machine.

Therein, some computer authorities say, is the chief value of having a home computer now: It provides a learning machine to prepare the whole family for the world of tomorrow.

"We are on the brink of the home computer age," said Dr. Theodore Nelson, a Swarthmore College mathematician. "By 1980, there will be personal computers in 10 million American homes."

Hong Kong plagued by drugs since the colony's founding

Copley News Service

HONG KONG — Like most large cities around the world, Hong Kong is faced with a serious drug abuse problem.

Here the problem has origins that go back to the colony's founding in 1841 when the opium trade was introduced by European merchants.

Of the 4.5 million population, there are an estimated 70,000 to 100,000 drug addicts in Hong Kong.

Most of the addicts are on hard drugs and there has been an increasing switch from opium to heroin in recent years. The main reason for the switch has been the closing of opium dens by law enforcement agencies and because heroin is easier for traffickers to conceal.

Hong Kong grows no opium poppies and nearly all of the heroin, morphine and opium used by addicts here comes through Thailand from the notorious Golden Triangle — the area where the borders of Laos, Thailand and Burma meet.

Through the 1960s and up until 1974, the method of smuggling drugs into Hong Kong was by Thai fishing trawlers.

Drug shipments were carried by these trawlers from Thailand to international waters south of Hong Kong. They were transhipped to Hong Kong fishing junks which would bring them to dealers in the colony.

Each consignment would consist of more than a ton of raw opium, with a retail value of several million dollars.

It is still unclear just how much of this drug haul stayed in Hong Kong and how much of it found its way to the sidewalks of New York and Los Angeles.

The bulk traffic was slowed in 1974 when the major local drug syndicates were crushed. The action fragmented the trade and small traffickers took over the business. With the bulk supplies cut off, the traffickers turned to individual travelers arriving by sea and aircraft to bring in drugs.

An attempt was made in 1976 to reopen the Thai trawler routes but law enforcement agencies made several arrests and seizures and the operation was apparently put out of action for good.

As a result of what local authorities call "law enforcement successes," there has been a shortage of drugs in the local market with an inevitable accompanying increase in street prices.

Some of the world's largest drug seizures have been made here.

In 1976 Hong Kong led the world in tonnage of illicit drugs seized. At that, the totals were estimated to represent only about 20 percent of the morphine and 60 percent of the opium smuggled into Hong Kong that year.

Hong Kong's law enforcement agencies have to deal with problems unique to the colony. Because of its location at the crossroads of Asia, the detection problem is difficult. In a single year there are 8,000 oceangoing vessel arrivals, 35,000 small craft arrivals by sea and 25,000 aircraft arrivals. A total of 4.3 million passengers pass through Hong Kong each year along with 17 million tons of cargo.

Finding illegal drugs can be a tough chore in the face of those statistics.

A government spokesman here summed up the situation: "Hong Kong can now legitimately claim to have contained the overall problem, while making inroads into preventing the spread of drug use to young people." He added, "The government recognizes that there is still much to be done before the back of the problem is broken — but it is determined to succeed."

Youth developing solar-powered car

Copley News Service

If Mark Twain were around today he probably would observe that everybody's talking about solar power but nobody is doing anything about it.

Well, he'd be wrong.

Sixteen-year-old Jeffrey Smith of Homerville, Ga., is trying to do something about the sun's energy. If his theory proves out, the car of the future might well be propelled by the sun's rays.

Young Smith, a member of his hometown's 4-H Club, began tinkering with a solar car five years ago. At 11 he already was aware of the developing U.S. energy crisis.

So Smith built a model that looks like any modern sports car, except for the small solar cells in the roof. When sunlight hits these cells, the car's wheels spin. After sundown the little auto runs on storage batteries. They were charged up during the day with — you guessed it — solar cells.

That was a toy-sized car. Now Jeffrey is building a 6.5-foot car based on the model.

Its chassis and mechanics are completed. The electronic system is wired in place. Still to come are the body, seats, batteries, bracing and three solar cells for power.

Local power company experts are interested in Smith's project. So are his parents and teachers. Everybody likes a bright, ambitious boy. But Smith gives most of the credit for his success so far to the Cooperative Extension Service specialists who boss the national 4-H Club automotive program.

"The 4-H has helped me and given me a chance to do things and show others what I've done," he says.

Most of the big U.S. automakers have spent or are shelling out millions in research to develop a practical electric car. The chief hangup always has been the excessive weight and size of batteries powerful enough to propel a conventional-sized auto.

North country offers different life

Copley News Service

Fishtail, Absarokee, Last Chance, Ennis, Red Lodge, Challis, Columbus.

Those were just some of the stops along a 4,100-mile vacation journey through Montana and Idaho. An expedition undertaken with some apprehension because it was a solo affair.

But everything worked out fine: I wound up talking to the trout and with the country folk who choose to live in an area where the air is invisible, the land inviting.

I fished with a couple of moose, a beaver, a skunk. And seldom with any other angler in sight. The trout — native trout, not those dummies that are spewed from a truck — outnumbered the people.

For nearly four weeks, no one told me to have a nice day or described anything as being super. No vans with heart-shaped windows and bumper stickers detailing how certain professions perform sex.

It's a different way of life in the north country. Here's a sample of what I found.

— A gal in Ennis, Mont., with a snuff can in her back pocket. The faded ring in her jeans indicated it had been there more than once.

— A gathering of the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers Association in Sumbeam, on the Salmon River. Warm July evening in a setting of mountains, river, lush lawn and down-home music. A very mellow scene.

— At a rodeo in Challis, Idaho, the Schlitz flag was at center arena and the two American flags were over in a corner for the opening ceremonies. No, capitalism ain't dead yet.

— Driving down a

Montana highway on which you could see 10 miles in both directions, a car pulled out directly in front of me. I swerved to miss it by less than two feet. A California car, of course.

— Montana is well-known as Big Sky Country. In regard to its women, a fair generalization is Big Thigh Country. Most of the ladies there seem to eat well. And often.

Pirates' Willie Stargell sees something of past

By The Associated Press

Looking into the future of the National League East race, Willie Stargell sees something of the past. "It reminds me," says the Pittsburgh Pirate slugger, "of the 1971 World Series."

It was then that the Pirates were beaten in the first two games by the Baltimore Orioles, but came back to win the Series.

Just as the Pirates rallied to take Baltimore seven years ago, Stargell figures they're going to catch the Philadelphia Phillies this season. They took another big step in that direction by beating the New York Mets 8-0 Tuesday night and climbing within a half-game of the NL East leaders.

"We've always had the talent," said Stargell. "I don't know why we weren't using it."

Once 11 1/2 games back, the Pirates have been the hottest team in baseball of late — winning 22 of their last 25 games.

"Early in the season, we couldn't score with men on base in the early innings and get a good jump," noted Pirate third baseman Phil Garner. "In the past few weeks, we've scored early and stayed ahead."

"I believe I have been playing more determined baseball the last few weeks, and I think everybody on the team has. That's what's accounted for our success."

The Pirates combined the four-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss with a five-run third inning to defeat the Mets. Reuss, beset with injury problems all season, won only his second game against as many losses this year. He didn't allow a runner past second base.

Jerry Koonsman started for the Mets and allowed one run in the first inning, then gave up five hits and five runs in the third. Duffy Dyer's two-run double highlighted the big Pittsburgh inning.

whose first-inning double was the only extra-base hit off Niekro: "We couldn't do anything tonight with that knuckleball. He was on tonight."

Expos 10, Cubs 8

Doubles by Warren Cromartie, Gary Carter and Dave Cash keyed a four-run eighth inning that helped Montreal beat Chicago. Wayne Twitchell, 4-12, was the winner in relief while Bruce Sutter, 7-7, was charged with the loss.

"Our staff is tired. We can't get a complete game out of anyone," said Cub Manager Herman Franks.

"Sutter's ball isn't doing this," gestured Franks as he slid his hand off the top of his desk and dropped it to the floor. "If I knew why, we'd tell him and he'd do it. We even brought up Fred Martin to help. Go ask him what's wrong."

Martin, who taught Sutter the pitch that until two weeks ago made him one of the most feared relief pitchers in baseball, shook his head and said, "He's tired. His arm is tired. His ball is still dropping but not as sharp as it used to. There's nothing wrong with him physically that a little rest wouldn't cure. We just need a few complete games from our starters."

Astros 3, Reds 2

A run-scoring double by Jose Cruz and a sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Bob Watson rallied Houston over Cincinnati. Houston went into the ninth trailing 2-1, but Terry Puhl led off with a single and scored the tying run on Cruz's double.

Losers Tom Seaver, 12-14, intentionally walked Dennis Walling and then issued another walk to Dave Bergman to load the bases before Watson pinch-hit for catcher Luis Pujols and smashed his sacrifice fly to center. Seaver, suffering through his worst season, was abrupt after his latest loss.

"I tried to keep the ball down on Watson to make him hit it on the ground," said Seaver. "There's not much to say, is there?"

Braves 8, Padres 1

A two-run homer by Jeff Burroughs, a solo blast by Dale Murphy and a grand slam by Rod Gilbreath backed the three-hit pitching of righthander Phil Niekro as Atlanta beat San Diego.

A walk by Gary Matthews and Burroughs' 21st home run of the season in the first inning sent Niekro, 17-15, on his way to becoming the first 17-game winner in the National League. Niekro struck out six and retired 12 in a row during one stretch.

"When you start every four days," said Niekro, "you're subject to lead the league in a few categories, good or bad."

Noted San Diego's Jerry Turner,

White Sox 4, Twins 3

A baserunning blunder by Dan Ford cost the Twins a run and, after a two-run rally in the ninth inning brought them within a run of Chicago, it may cost Ford even more.

"I've never had this feeling before," said Twins Manager Gene Mauch. "Ford will not get paid for today's game."

Steve Trout earned his pay in his first major league start, allowing five hits in the six innings he worked. In the seventh, with the bases loaded, Minnesota's Bombo Rivera singled home two runs.

But only one counted because Ford dawdled coming home from third and Jose Morales passed him when Ford failed to touch home plate.

Chicago Manager Larry Doby was asked if he'd ever seen that kind of silly miscue on the bases.

"There has probably been one somewhere but I don't recall it," Doby said.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 2

Andre Thornton's 29th homer of the season and Rick Waits' five-hitter carried Cleveland to victory.

Elsewhere in the AL, Kansas City blanked Oakland 3-0, Chicago nipped Minnesota 4-3 and Cleveland defeated Toronto 6-2. The Texas-California game was rained out.

Orioles 4, Red Sox 1

Jim Palmer won his 18th game, with Don Stanhouse relieving in the ninth to pick up his 21st save and eighth in relief of Palmer. Lee May homered, Carlos Lopez singled in the go-ahead run and Terry Crowley pinch-hit a two-run double to aid Palmer.

"We've not played well in the last 10 days," said Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "I hope it's been good pitching and we're not going into a hitting slump."

Royals 3, A's 0

Kansas City extended its Western Division lead to 1 1/2 games over California as Dennis Leonard pitched a three-hitter and Frank White had a three-run double.

Leonard, 16-16, fanned seven and retired the last 15 batters in hurling his 18th complete game.

White had three hits for the Royals.

we have no margin for error," noted New York pitcher Catfish Hunter, who will open a crucial four-game series in Boston Thursday. "We have the feeling we're playing our best and they're on the way down."

The Red Sox aren't conceding anything, however, even though they're 1-4 this month and New York is 4-2.

"They've still got to beat us," said Red Sox coach Johnny Pesky. "I'm sure they'd like to trade places with us."

The Orioles would like to trade places with either club since they are fourth in the division, eight games out. (Milwaukee is third, 6 1/2 back). But Manager Earl Weaver still thinks the Orioles can win it.

"We're not out of it yet," said the ever-optimistic Weaver. "We're still distant but a lot of strange things have happened."

Noting that New York and Boston have seven games left with each other, Weaver added:

"When they play each other, somebody has to win, and it looks like the Yankees aren't going to lose to anybody else."

September seems to favor Yanks

By The Associated Press

For the past few seasons, the New York Yankees have found September to their liking. The Boston Red Sox loathe the month. And if a feeling of "deja vu" is prevalent in the locker rooms of the two American League East contenders, it is understandable.

The Yankees defeated Detroit 4-2 Tuesday while Boston was losing to Baltimore 4-1. Relentlessly, the New Yorkers have been chasing the Red Sox all summer. Now, they are just four games behind, the closest the defending World Champions have been to first place since June 9.

"I have a feeling we've been through this before," said Yankees' reserve outfielder Paul Blair, "and that we can win. I wonder if Boston is thinking about that, wondering if they really can win."

Last season, the Yankees stormed through September to take charge of the division while Boston did not play nearly as well. The same thing seems to be happening again.

"We simply have to keep winning,

Rebels, Bulldogs earn victory nod

Well, it's that time of year again as the 1978 schoolboy football season opens with a bang this weekend.

Midland football fans will get to see the Robert E. Lee Rebels at home while the Midland Bulldogs travel to Amarillo for a date with Tascosa in the Panhandle City.

Looking back to last year, this corner hit for a percentage of 81.2 and has averaged better than 80 per cent the past four years in predicting Class AAAA football games. This is the 16th year to predict Texas schoolboy football games.

District 5-4A shapes up as an all-out battle this season with five exceptionally strong outfits in the Little South-west Conference. The league will feature big, mobile linemen along with fast backs. It really ought to be something before the smoke clears in November.

MIDLAND LEE opens before the home crowd Friday night as Gil Bartosh makes his Tall City debut against the Class AAA Snyder Tigers in Memorial Stadium. The Rebel Express should get off to a rousing start over their neighbors from the North. If Jeff McCowan stays healthy and the quarterback situation comes through, look out District 5-4A teams! Lee to post a 28-6 victory over the Tigers....

MIDLAND'S SUPER DOGS will also be making their debut under a new head coach in Dennis Hays up on the Panhandle. The past three or four years, the game has been close and Friday night's contest in Dick Bivins Stadium should be no exception. It's important to get off to a good start for Hays and his Purple Pack. The Rebels beat Midland, 14-7 in Midland last year, so why not reverse it....

ODESSA PERMIAN may not have the great defense it had last year in going 13-1 and all the way to the AAAA state semifinals before losing to Plano, 3-0. The Panthers do have an excellent backfield. It's one that should score lots of points. Going with Mojo to treat the Odessa fans to a big opening night victory in Barrett Stadium in besting the El Paso Coronado Thunderbirds, 35-6....

ABILENE COOPER, the choice in 5-4A this season, opens against always-tough Brownwood which is picked to go all the way to the finals in AAA. The Cougars play the Lions in Brownwood and are still smarting from last year's opening game defeat to Gordon Woods' crew. Cooper to start off well with a 20-12 victory Friday night....

SAN ANGELO CENTRAL squares off with Stephen F. Austin in Austin Friday and although the Bobcats are still searching for a starting quarterback, Smitty Hill's outfit will take a narrow 20-15 victory over the 28-4A favorites with junior Glen Payne paving the way.

ABILENE HIGH has its work cut out for itself Friday night in Abilene's P.E. Shotwell Stadium in facing the District 6-4A favorites -- Wichita Falls Riders. Playing at home will help, but not enough. Tallback Reggie Fields will have a good night for the Warbirds in a 20-14 loss to the Red River boys....

BIG SPRING, like Midland and Lee, has a new coach and it is Ron Logback, former Steer assistant under Don Robbins who stepped down this year. The Steers will have a 210-pound line on offense, but then so will the Class AAA Andrews Mustangs who hope to make Coach Bill Shipman's debut a happy one. They will, to the tune of 20-13....

ODESSA HIGH waits until Saturday night to get its season underway in squaring off with the Amarillo High Golden Sandies in Barrett Stadium. The Bronchos are going to cause some ripples in the 5-4A race this year, so this corner goes with Dick Winder's Wild Bunch to post a 20-8 victory over the Panhandle team....

OTHER AAAA PICKS: El Paso Eastwood over El Paso Austin, 20-14; El Paso Bowie 20, Ysleta Bel Air 16; Amarillo Caprock over Odessa Ector, 20-6 on Saturday night; Palo Duro 22, Dumas 20 in a real head-knocker; Wichita Falls 21, Lubbock Coronado 13; Lubbock 13, Borger 12; Lubbock Monterey 20, Canyon 16; Plainview 20, Lubbock Estacado 12; Denton 20, Haltom City 14; Trinity Euless 26, Fort Worth Paschal 14; Irving Nimitz 19, Southwest 14; Arlington Lamar 33, Wyatt 13; Duncanville 22, Lewisville 12; Garland to roll over Dallas Skyline, 33-12; Sherman 20, Irving 8; Plano to start off with a bang over South Garland, 27-7; Arlington Heights over Arlington, 20-9; W.T. Austin, Evert net gap narrows

NEW YORK (AP) — The gap between Tracy Austin and Chris Evert seems to be growing smaller as the 15-year-old high school student grows taller and stronger.

"I think I've improved a lot in the last year," said Austin after her 6-4, 6-3 victory Tuesday over Anne Smith of Dallas. "I feel stronger. I think my serve's improved and my groundstrokes are stronger."

Austin will meet the 23-year-old Evert later this week in a quarter-final match at the U.S. Open tennis championships. Evert also won her fourth-round match Tuesday, downing Czech Regina Marsikova 6-4, 6-1.

Evert has beaten Austin in straight sets in their two meetings, the third round of Wimbledon last year and the Family Circle Cup earlier this year. But Austin says she has grown two inches in the past year, added several pounds to her petite frame and feels less in awe of her older opponents.

"Everybody was so much stronger than me then ... The first time at Wimbledon I didn't know what to expect," said Austin, who reached the quarter-finals of the 1977 U.S. Open, her first major event. "Now we've been on the same court. A year ago I kept asking myself 'What am I doing here?'"

Evert says the pressure is still on her, even though the novelty of a teen-aged Austin beating tour veterans has worn off.

"She's still the underdog," said the second-seeded Evert of her fifth-seeded rival. "She's still the youngster." Evert, who hasn't lost on clay courts in over five years, has been taking ice treatments to prevent a recurrence of the shin splints that sidelined her for two weeks late last year.

"If I keep playing on these cement courts, they could hurt," Evert said. "So far they've felt fine. I haven't had any long three-set matches. After my first really difficult match, I'll be feeling it."

Once again, Evert was asked about her motivation. She has been fielding these type of questions ever since she took a four-month hiatus from tennis from mid-November of 1977 through Mid March.

"I'm just not as intense anymore. I used to live tennis 24 hours a day, but now I just concentrate the two or three hours a day I'm playing or practicing."

"Of course, I would like to win this tournament. A loss here or at Wimbledon stays with you all year. You can forget about a loss in Virginia Slims or World Team Tennis."

Midland Tennis Club sets entry deadline

The Midland Tennis Club will hold its Men's Singles Club Championship tennis tournament Saturday and Sunday at the Midland High tennis courts.

Entry deadline is Thursday. Entry can be made at the home of S. D. Armstrong. The tournament is for members only.

Cappelletti makes move to fullback for Rams

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams have injury problems in their backfield, but one thing is certain — John Cappelletti will be the starter at fullback.

Lawrence McCutcheon, with five seasons of having gained at least 1,000 yards, has been hampered with a thigh muscle injury and Rod Phillips also is ailing. So it appears that Wendell Tyler and Cullen Bryant will complement Cappelletti against Atlanta Sunday in the Rams' National Football League home opener.

"Cappelletti runs well and blocks well," said Coach Ray Malvasi. "He's not flashy, but he always gets the job done."

As a collegian at Penn State, Cappelletti won the Heisman Trophy in 1973 and was the Rams' No. 1 draft choice. Still, it wasn't until 1976 that he became a starter. Last season, his lead blocks helped McCutcheon set four team rushing records.

In this season's 16-14 opening triumph over Philadelphia last Sunday, Cappelletti gained 26 yards on nine carries and blocked for Tyler, who gained 36, and Bryant, who had 19.

"Penalties hurt our offense," Malvasi said Tuesday. "Little mistakes stopped us. We should have walked in on one play that was called back. The penalties hurt our overall offensive game plan."

Asked about Pat Haden's comment that, as quarterback, he hadn't called a good game, Malvasi said, "To me, nobody calls a bad game. Either you get execution or you don't get execution."

Malvasi was asked if he worried when Tyler carried the ball at arm's length and answered: "Yes, it is an adventure watching him run, very much so. We tell him to wrap the ball up, but it's a habit. He thinks he has to run with the ball out there."

Malvasi admitted he knows little about June Jones III, the quarterback from Portland State who led Atlanta to a 20-14 victory over Houston.

Bouton win stirs interest

ATLANTA (AP) — Former major league pitcher Jim Bouton's convincing victory Tuesday night in a minor league playoff game has heightened speculation that the former New York Yankee ace will be brought up by the Atlanta Braves before the end of the season.

Mad Dog Rugby Club to open up competition

There's a new game in town, well, at least in West Texas, with the Mad Dog Rugby Club comprised of Midland and Odessa players scheduled to open competition in the New Mexico-Texas League this month.

summer tournaments and helped our team tremendously. The big difference between the two countries is that we call on our physical ability, because we don't have the finesse of the English."

The Mad Dog Rugby Club apparently won't lack for opposition. There are teams in Dallas, Austin, Albuquerque, Houston and Arizona.

"The players come from all walks of life," explains Lassiter, who serves as coach of the Mad Dogs, "The average age is 26 and some are ex-football players while others never played football in their life. We have one 38-year-old man who is vice-president of an Odessa Drilling Company."

What they all have in common is that they are amateurs, which means all expenses come out of their own pockets. "And playing games 300 miles away can get expensive."

WHEREAS RUGBY failed in its WT debut a few years ago, Lassiter feels some changes have been made and the sport has a good chance of surviving this time.

The revival began with two young students on an exchange program from England. "They played in a few

Lucas said he planned to discuss Bouton's prospects with other team officials today. Bouton, who won 20 games for the Yankees in 1963, was exultant after his victory Tuesday night. "It was the best game of the year," the knuckleball hurler said. "I've had a super summer in Savannah."

Bouton reached the height of his major league career in 1964 when he won two games for the Yankees in the World Series against St. Louis. Unable to maintain his form in subsequent years, he left baseball to become a television sportscaster and write a best-selling book, "Ball Four," an irreverent look at the lives of major league ballplayers.

One of the instigators of the game's return to the Permian Basin is Morris Lassiter, a former Midland High football player, who was introduced to the game in El Paso and later played at UTPB.

"I found the game exciting and have played it ever since," says Lassiter. "It's still football, but it's a different type. You still have to get out and run, tackle and make touchdowns."

Lassiter, since his UTPB days, has played for teams in Austin and Houston and was good enough to be named to the Texas League team as well as the county, state and regional teams. "But this year my size went against me," he said in reference to his bid to back from last year's 5-7 team. The Lobos lack physical strength on defense, but fullback Mike Williams is a bruising runner, having topped 1,000 yards the past two seasons. The Lobos won't have last year's brutal schedule to contend with.

Utah Coach Wayne Howard predicts that "six teams will be in the race somewhere along the way," and says even Texas-El Paso "will beat somebody."

UTEP, winner of only one game in each of the last three seasons, continues to rebuild. The Miners has some quality players at the skill positions, including quarterback Oscar Ramirez and split end Bubba Garcia, but it's an inexperienced team and the defense was abominable last year.

Ron Meyer owns very young team

DALLAS (AP) — Coach Ron Meyer says his Southern Methodist football team is going to be a youthful one again this year with seven sophomores expected to start on offense Saturday against the season opener against Texas Christian.

One sophomore that Meyer is especially optimistic about is quarterback Mike Ford, who started for SMU in last year's game against Texas Christian.

Snelsons cross Iron Curtain

EDITOR'S NOTE: Sue Snelson has the best of many worlds: Involvement of her husband, State Senator Pete Snelson of Midland; mother to four lively youngsters, and guide for small personalized tours to unique places that are still just names on the globe to most Texans. This is the first of a 2-part series on her 1978 travels.

By SUE SNELSON

The exhilarating sense of discovery that I feel every time I cross the "Iron Curtain" to visit the Soviet union, Mongolia, Central Asia and Afghanistan was just as keen as I conducted my fourth tour. But each trip is more rewarding, because the people in that vast territory are becoming more aware of our needs. And the pride they feel in sharing their histories and cultures seems to be growing. The progressive changes are particularly evident in Mongolia, where even the food has improved 100 per cent since I first went in 1974.

Anyone who has not journeyed across Siberia finds it hard to grasp the immensity of the Soviet Union. Imagine a single geographic unit that encompasses 15 republics spanning 11 time zones, in which a multitude of languages are spoken!

Armed with what I thought might be effective communications and techniques—chewing gum and balloons, we decided to try our luck in bridging the language barriers when we reached the far Siberian outpost of Irkutsk, near the fur center at Lake Baikal.

We brought the chewing gum to barter for the little iron Soviet symbol pins which make ideal souvenirs of Siberia. A host of young boys were hanging out near our hotel, just waiting for a gum-chewing American.

I took bubble gum this shyly brought out a deck year, and it must have been a real novelty! We spent hours blowing bubbles before the boys would have anything to do with the idea of trading their treasures for bubble gum. But finally, they succumbed.

We decided to try our other conversation gambit the day we took a boat trip on the Angara River.

Our boat was filled with school girls about 10 years old. One member of our party pulled out some balloons from her pocket, and our "in residence" artist began drawing funny faces on the balloons as we inflated them.

And instantly, our outing was punctuated with giggling and chatter. Everyone was speaking the same language—the language of friendship. By the time we had to say goodbye, we Texans felt a warm bond with Siberian children we never would see again.

We took the celebrated Trans-Siberian railway when we headed westward for Novosibirsk, delighting in the sight of onion-shaped domes on the Russian Orthodox churches, and endless miles of birch forests that were just turning spring green.

Soviet trains travel on the widest-gauge tracks in the world, so the cars and their compartments are not only much larger than an American can imagine, but the style of train travel is surprising, too, I discovered. The passengers board burdened with food and other supplies, as well as luggage, and the conductor decides who to assign to the four-bed compartments.

As leader of our tour, I was the "odd number," and drew a compartment with a Russian lady and two Russian gentlemen. After I got used to the idea of living, eating, and sleeping for two days in this "unisex" arrangement, the language barrier was the next problem to conquer.

Early that afternoon, I took bubble gum this shyly brought out a deck year, and it must have been a real novelty! We time, I had found another common language.

In fact, my compartment mates beat me so often at gin rummy that I would have sworn that they had played all of their lives, and understood every word of Hoyle's game book!

Our next destination—East Mongolia—everybody's favorite, because they have so few tourists, they give you a chance to blend into their culture.

The recent college graduate who became our guide was so impeccably dressed in western fashion that he made us feel like American slob. Most Mongolians still wear the native dell (grab). The only people we saw in western dress were those assigned to work with tourists.

Although the capital, Ulan Bator, was established during the 1923 revolution which took Mongolia down the political path modeled after the communism practiced in the Soviet Union, the city looks new, beautiful, clean and modern.

A one-hour flight on Mongolian Airlines transported us from Ulan Bator to the Gobi desert, where we landed directly in front of a field of yurts (white-domed tents with painted wooden doors), which would serve as our homes during our stay.

The yurts are made just the same as those that Genghis Khan used in the 13th century when he and his armies conquered all of the land from the Black Sea to what is now Moscow. These snug tents can be assembled in less than a day. We were intrigued with the idea of starting a house in the morning, and having it completed in time for dinner.

Spirits ran high when we had the opportunity to drink koumiss (fermented mare's milk) in a yurt with a local family who travels with their camel herd. Genghis Khan allowed his soldiers to get drunk on

In rush to achieve friendship with China, Japan bows to Soviets

Copley News Service

TOKYO — Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, in his rush to gain a peace and friendship treaty with mainland China, has bowed to the Soviet Union on a territorial dispute that up to now has been almost sacred to his own people.

The land in dispute since the end of World War II in 1945 consists of four island groups just off the shore of Hokkaido, northernmost major Japanese island. They are the Habomai islands, Shikotan, Kunashiri and Etorofu. Russia seized these islands at the end of the war and while Japan for over 30 years has claimed Red occupation to be illegal it has been unable to dislodge the military occupiers.

The islands never have been part of any other nation's territories, Japan has pointed out; they have been intrinsically Japanese. Also, as the Japanese government has stressed up to now, the islands belong to Japan under international agreements made both before and after World War II.

Just recently, Prime Minister Fukuda was pictured in Tokyo's Japan Times while grinning and shaking hands with a delegation of Hokkaido teen-agers who had made an annual visit to Tokyo to remind him that the pressure on Moscow for the return of the so-called Northern Territories should be continued and intensified.

Fukuda told the youngsters, "The government is making efforts toward the early realization of your wishes." In any event, Fukuda's decision as it is linked to the China treaty proves again how "flexible" Japanese policy can be, even with the background of 30 years of continuous pressure on Russia to restore what the people of this country insist is rightfully theirs.

Tonga, Britain in world news

NUKUALOFA, Tonga (AP) — Supreme Court Judge H.H. Hill rejected an American's appeal of a six-month jail sentence for possessing marijuana, saying Tonga is "reasonably free from this curse ... and I am going to do my utmost to make sure that it does not spread here."

Merle Anders, 32, an American working on the island in the southwest Pacific, was given the jail sentence last month for possessing the drug and fined $150 for growing it.

LONDON (AP) — Support for Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party is falling, but the opposition's approval rating still is two percentage points ahead of the governing Laborites, an opinion poll indicated today. The Conservative edge was six points at the beginning of July and three points a month ago.

The Market and Opinion Research International poll, compiled for the Conservative Daily Express, said most of the 1,078 people it questioned Monday in 54 of 635 House of Commons districts were eager for an election. Prime Minister James Callaghan is expected to call one next month.

Texas plays pageant for keeps, partner

By PETER MATTIACE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — There's a lot riding on Sandi Miller to win the Miss America Pageant because, partner, Texas plays for keeps.

Like a Dallas Cowboy primed for the Super Bowl, the 5-foot-10, 130-pound Miss Miller has been molded into a pageant contender by six weeks of rigorous physical and mental training.

"It's a very professional program. It's a business," says Miss Miller, 20, from Mesquite. "If you're going to be Miss Texas, you've got to do it."

Miss Miller has a $13,000 wardrobe, funded by a high-powered state pageant organization which told her not to worry about price tags. It is so big that Miss Miller doesn't know how many evening gowns she brought.

Miss Miller has different advisors for her clothes, hair, make-up, interviews and piano. In the six weeks since she was crowned Miss Texas, a state pageant official has been at her every public appearance to critique her performance.

She even listens to motivational tapes while she sleeps. "You can't afford to think negative when you're up here," she said. "You can't worry." The brown-haired, brown-eyed Miss Miller is in prime condition following a six-week program of rigorous exercise and a special high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet built around steak and tuna fish and designed to build up her 36-25-36 figure.

She lifted weights and performed calisthenics for two hours a day, six days a week. "It was six weeks of pain and torture," she said. "They wanted to build up the muscle and take off the fat."

They did. She is happy that she had added two inches to the circumference of her long legs, which now "touch where a woman's legs are supposed to" — at the thighs, knees, calves and ankles.

The Texas method apparently pays off. The state has had three Miss Americas, two in the past eight years — Phyllis George in 1971 and Shirley Cothran in 1975. The state is fifth in all-time finishers. Miss Miller is easy-going and friendly. She is confident she can take home the prize — the $20,000 scholarship and more than $50,000 in personal appearances that go with the Miss America crown.

"I'm a better product because of (the program)," Miss Miller says. "Why should they send someone who isn't trained? It's a job like everything else."

Pageant endangered by TV ratings

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Miss America Pageant goes before the cameras Saturday for the 25th time but a pageant historian says it could die within the next 10 years because of sagging ratings.

"Miss America is slightly out of fashion now, but that's not to say she's in disrepute," said Frank Deford, a Sports Illustrated writer whose book "There She Is, The Life and Times of Miss America" is considered to be the authoritative work on the 57-year-old pageant. "Its extinction, say, within the next decade, is a possibility."

Deford maintains the pageant must adapt to increasingly liberal tastes in television if it expects to keep the networks' interest and thus command the advertising revenues that keeps its huge scholarship foundation rolling.

But Albert Marks Jr., a local investment banker who also is the pageant's chairman and television producer, disagrees.

"Mr. Deford is an excellent writer in the sports field — and he should stay there," Marks says.

The two-hour live show, however, has seen better days on television. Marks admits that if it loses more ground in the ratings battle this year, "I will be concerned."

Marks said NBC is spending 50 percent to 60 percent more to promote this year's pageant, which is back with NBC after a dismal one-year stint with CBS that saw its ratings dip dramatically.

The pageant, which first aired in 1954 and picked up emcee Bert Parks the next year, reached its television peak in 1961 when it had a 75 share of the audience, meaning three-quarters of all American television sets were tuned in. The ratings backed off slowly in the late 1960s and '70s, hitting a new low last year — a 43 share.

Deford said a return to the more wholesome attitudes of the 1950s may help the pageant without drastic changes.

"Maybe it was hard for people not to feel guilty about watching the Miss America Pageant when you had Vietnam and Watergate," Deford said. "Movies now have happy endings and happy endings. Maybe that bodes well for the pageant."

Spy ship in new search role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Looking more like a floating construction site than a spy vessel, the former CIA ship Glomar Explorer is being outfitted for a new job that lacks cloak-and-dagger intrigue.

The new Glomar will sweep the ocean floor in an experiment for an international consortium that wants to mine minerals from the sea. That is similar to the disguise of the old Glomar.

Howard Hughes built the ship in 1972 for the CIA's "Project Jennifer" — the code name of an operation that lifted a sunken Soviet submarine from the ocean floor. The Glomar conducted its secret 1974 operations while posing as a mining ship. Estimates of the total cost of the ship construction and CIA project run from $200 million to $550 million.

Ship superintendent James Culp, when quizzed about the Russian sub caper, simply says: "I'm afraid you'll have to ask someone else about that. I'm here to talk about mining."

The Glomar of 1978 is a maze of cables, cranes and winches. It is being rigged for a test run in the Pacific where an experimental system will sweep 18,000 feet below the surface to see if a mining operation is feasible.

Ocean Minerals Co. is using the Glomar for a 45-day test trip to start in November. The consortium is composed of Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., Amoco Ocean Minerals Co. and two Dutch enterprises.

If the voyage proves fruitful — and if international complications do not hinder matters — the consortium hopes to have its own ship mining the oceans by 1985, said program manager Conrad Welling.

It reportedly costs about $30,000 a day to lease the Glomar.

What the mining firm wants to dredge up are manganese nodules — clumps of mineral deposits that have the look and texture of shriveled, overripe avocados. The nodules contain manganese, copper, nickel and cobalt, the metals used in steel production.

Scientists estimate that 1.5 trillion tons of these nodules lie beneath the world's oceans. If they can be commercially mined, the United States would be self-sufficient in the four metals by the 1990s. The United States currently imports these metals at a cost of $1.5 billion a year, Welling said.

The Glomar, now owned by the Navy and subleased to the mining consortium, was chosen for the test mission because of its deep-sea capabilities.

Testimony points to Newton

OAKLAND (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton beat his tailor bloody after the man called him "baby," according to the police officer who interviewed the victim the night of the 1974 assault.

Oakland officer Lee Baca testified Tuesday that the badly beaten tailor had murmured that it was Newton who pistol-whipped and kicked him until he was almost unconscious.

Baca said he spoke to the tailor, Preston Callins, 55, shortly after he was found moaning on the floor of his garage a short distance from Newton's apartment on Aug. 16, 1974.

"He was bleeding from the head, there was a considerable amount of blood on him, he was making moaning sounds," Baca told a jury of seven men and five women.

His testimony was opposed heatedly by Newton's attorney, Michael Kennedy, who called the officer's recollections of the incident "hearsay."

But Judge Joseph Karesch, sitting on assignment in Alameda County Superior Court, ruled the officer's statement was admissible because the tailor's comments were spontaneous and could legally be considered by the jury.

Callins recently held a news conference to absolve Newton from any responsibility for the beating. With the Black Panther leader standing beside him, Callins vowed he would refuse to take the stand as a witness against Newton.

But Baca told the court he asked Callins who had beaten him, and had to move within a foot of the shaken tailor to hear his murmured reply.

"He told me he was a tailor, that he had gone to Huey Newton's apartment, that while he was there he talked with Newton and during the course of the conversation he referred to Mr. Newton as 'baby,'" the officer said.

At that point, Baca said, Callins told him that "Huey got very angry and beat him with a pistol repeatedly. He said Newton kicked him, also."

During cross-examination, Kennedy asked if it was possible that Callins had merely said he was beaten in Newton's apartment.

"No, I remember very distinctly what he told me," Baca responded. "I'll never forget it."

Kennedy has argued that Callins was drunk when the incident took place and that he was beaten by Newton's bodyguard, Robert Heard, who later was convicted of assault. Heard has since vanished. Newton fled the country but returned in 1977 to stand trial.

Newton also faces trial in November on charges of killing a 17-year-old Oakland prostitute, also in August 1974. He is free on $80,000 bail.

Burroughs family sues Tarzoon

NEW YORK (AP) — An animated pornographic take-off of Tarzan films, titled "Tarzoon, Shame of the Jungle," has led to a federal court suit by relatives of the late Edgar Rice Burroughs, Tarzan's creator.

The U.S. District Court suit says that to add insult to injury, the narration is done by Johnny Weismuller Jr., son of the Olympic champion swimmer who starred in many Tarzan films.

The suit, filed Tuesday, claims the Tarzan of Burroughs' books was "handsome, strong, intelligent, courageous and honest," while Tarzoon is not only "weak, stupid, physically unattractive, but also lewd and sexually unattractive."

Tarzan's faithful wife, Jane, was depicted in the porno film as "an aggressive, sexually demanding and strident woman," who is nude for most of the movie, the suit charges.

Relatives of the author, suing through Edgar Rice Burroughs Inc., which holds worldwide copyrights on Tarzan, asked for an injunction halting further showings of the film. The movie already has been shown in Kansas City, St. Louis and Washington, the suit said.

The suit also asks damages of $3 million from the distributor, International Harmony Productions of New York, and co-producers Societe Valisa Films of Brussels and Societe SFD of Saint Ouen, France.

Test results on guns due

By DAVID EGNER

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Tests to be completed today should determine if two handguns found by police were used to murder six restaurant workers and three members of a Texas family, authorities said.

Preliminary ballistics tests showed Tuesday that the .38 caliber and .357 caliber handguns appear to have been used in the murders in June and July, said Sgt. Tom Mundy, police spokesman.

He said when ballistics tests are completed by the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation today, police will know for certain whether the guns are the murder weapons.

Mundy said tests indicate the guns were used by robbers who shot and killed six employees of a Sirlin Stockade restaurant here on July 16, in the worst mass murder in Oklahoma City history.

He said tests also indicate the guns were used to murder three members of a San Antonio, Texas family near Purcell, about 50 mile south of here, in late June.

The finding of the guns is the first positive link police have found between the two multiple killings, Mundy said.

The guns that may have killed all nine victims were found Sunday in far northeast Oklahoma City, Mundy said, but were not tested until Tuesday. Mundy refused to specify the exact location where the guns were found, or detail how Oklahoma City police learned of the guns.

Police still have not arrested any suspects in the killings. Mundy refused to say if arrests are expected soon.

The discovery of the guns is "certainly the break

Gynecologist opens ordinance hearing

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A city ordinance requiring a detailed description of a fetus be given to a woman seeking an abortion is "inflammatory and terrifying," a Kansas gynecologist says.

And, says Dr. Robert Crist, the Akron ordinance appears to be intended to "discourage the woman from seeking abortion services."

Crist testified Tuesday during the opening day of a hearing before a federal judge in the American Civil Liberties Union's constitutional challenge of the Akron ordinance.

The gynecologist from the University of Kansas School of Medicine told U.S. District Judge Leroy Contie Jr. the ordinance emphasizes the negative aspects of abortion.

He cautioned that the ordinance's requirement that parents of a minor be notified 24 hours before she undergoes an abortion might lead to physical abuse of the young girl.

He said such notification would also be unwise in pregnancies stemming from incest. Crist told the judge he performs about 200 abortions each month, half for women who are age 19 or younger.

The Akron ordinance was adopted by a 7-6 vote of the City Council last February, and became law without the mayor's signature. Contie barred implementation of the ordinance pending a hearing on its constitutionality.

The challenge was filed by the ACLU in April in behalf of three Akron abortion clinics.

The ACLU argues the ordinance violates the constitutional provision of separation of church and state, and says the measure infringes on a woman's right to privacy.

GARAGE SALE

Patio Sale, Yard Sale whatever term you use, it's an enjoyable and profitable experience. It's your opportunity to "clean up" while you "clean out." You'll become re-acquainted with your neighbors and meet new friends, and the fresh air is good for your health.
Check your attic, basement, garage and closets for good, but no longer used items - furniture, tools, the list goes on and on. Every item should be priced, of course. You may want to combine your sale with a friend or neighbor. Choose your days, get your signs ready and place your ad in the Classified section. Your ad should list a few key items, give the date, time, and good directions.
A friendly Classified Ad-Visor will help you word your Garage Sale ad for maximum results.

Then dial 682-6222 and give your list to the experienced, friendly Ad-Visor who answers. That's all there is to it! Inexpensive, too. A 15 word ad is only $1.31 per day on the special 7 day plan. Don't wait ... let a Reader Reacher-Classified Ad start things poppin' for you!
