Psychics in Murphy case

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

Hindsight can be as misconstrued as foresight can be blinded.

Georgia Lee has a little of both, and that's quite normal.

The object of her fore and hind happens to be an obsession shared with many rock 'n' roll fans: Elvis Presley.

She likes his music and feels deeply about the man she imagines him to have been.

In her time-worn but modest mobile home are a few, very few, mementos of the late "King of Rock 'n' Roll."

"I'd kind of like to let people know what I've got," Mrs. Lee said recently, 23 years after the first and last time she saw Presley.

"Elvis the Pelvis" was but 20. The year was 1955. The place was a tin building, where wrestlers were the usual put on fare. And the crowd, though enthusiastic Elvis fans, consisted of just a few hundred persons.

"He made $300 out of that in Odessa, because I was there," she said. On the billing with the casually-dressed Presley were country and Western singers Hank Snow and his namesake, his son.

All Mrs. Lee got out of it, aside from memories of his singing and gyrating to "Heartbreak Hotel," "Don't Be Cruel" and "Hound Dog," were three black and white snapshots of the young, aspiring singer on and off stage.

Her mother, Mae Owens, was bold enough — and enough of a Presley fan — to get more.

"Oh, my mother shook hands and kissed him (and got his autograph). But I was too shy. I got close enough to take his picture."

In the offstage snapshot was Presley flanked by a young, perhaps mesmerized fan, a woman.

"She was standing there, wanting to get ahold of him, I imagine," Mrs. Lee speculated.

That was back when "Presley was really trying to get started" in rhythm and blues. His style lent itself to rock 'n' roll. And Presley's record sales shot upward and dominated the Top 40 charts for years.

Unlike more than two decades later in Odessa, the strutting prince in 1955 played to less than a packed house in the tin building.

In 1976 in Odessa's Ector County Coliseum, Presley performed before thousands in his showy, spiffy costume and to the background of a big band. He had changed, and his following had grown phenomenally.

In 1955, his back up was a guitarist and a bass player. His following was scant but was building up.

But, my, did he ever attract the gals and womenfolk!

"There was a lot of women that flat left their husbands and followed Elvis around" in the tin building.

Mrs. Lee, who was 31 then, married and a mother, didn't. She and her girl friend, Rosalee Johnson, brought their husbands and their seven younguns to see Presley perform. The Snow show was something ODESSA — The parents of 19-year-old Catherine Ann "Fifi" Murphy, whose strange disappearance nearly three months ago here has left police investigators baffled, are turning to psychically gifted persons in an effort to locate their daughter.

Thomas D. Murphy Jr., a co-founder of Murphy and Rochester Realty Co., said Tuesday that he's so desperate to find answers that he has begun consulting with mediums about the possible whereabouts of his daughter.

Miss Murphy was last seen leaving The Place, an Odessa discotheque, about 11:30 p.m. on July 19. Her boyfriend reportedly told police she dropped him off at his home around midnight, according to police reports. Police since have been unable to find any firm clues as to what happened to the pretty, petite woman.

Murphy said he has been conferring with several mediums for advice to see "if they can come up with anything because we are pursuing every lead we can. But nothing tangible has resulted from this."

He said he would not reveal the names of the mediums he and the family have consulted because the individuals aiding him fear adverse publicity about their efforts.

Murphy admitted leads gained through the mediums have so far not turned out to be of much value.

The father of the missing woman now is semi-retired from the insurance and real estate business here, spending much of his time these days trying to locate his daughter.

Murphy said it is increasingly difficult to believe his daughter is alive.

"It's been three months since she disappeared. The Odessa Police Department is working on it full-time and other law enforcement agencies have helped. But so far we haven't located her."

Murphy said consulting mediums "is one of the methods of locating her. Certainly some mediums have been successful in locating people."

He cited a female medium in the East Coast area of the nation who reportedly has succeeded in finding at least 20 bodies.

However, Murphy said Tuesday he does not believe that means he feels his daughter may be dead.

"She may walk through the door at any time," he said.

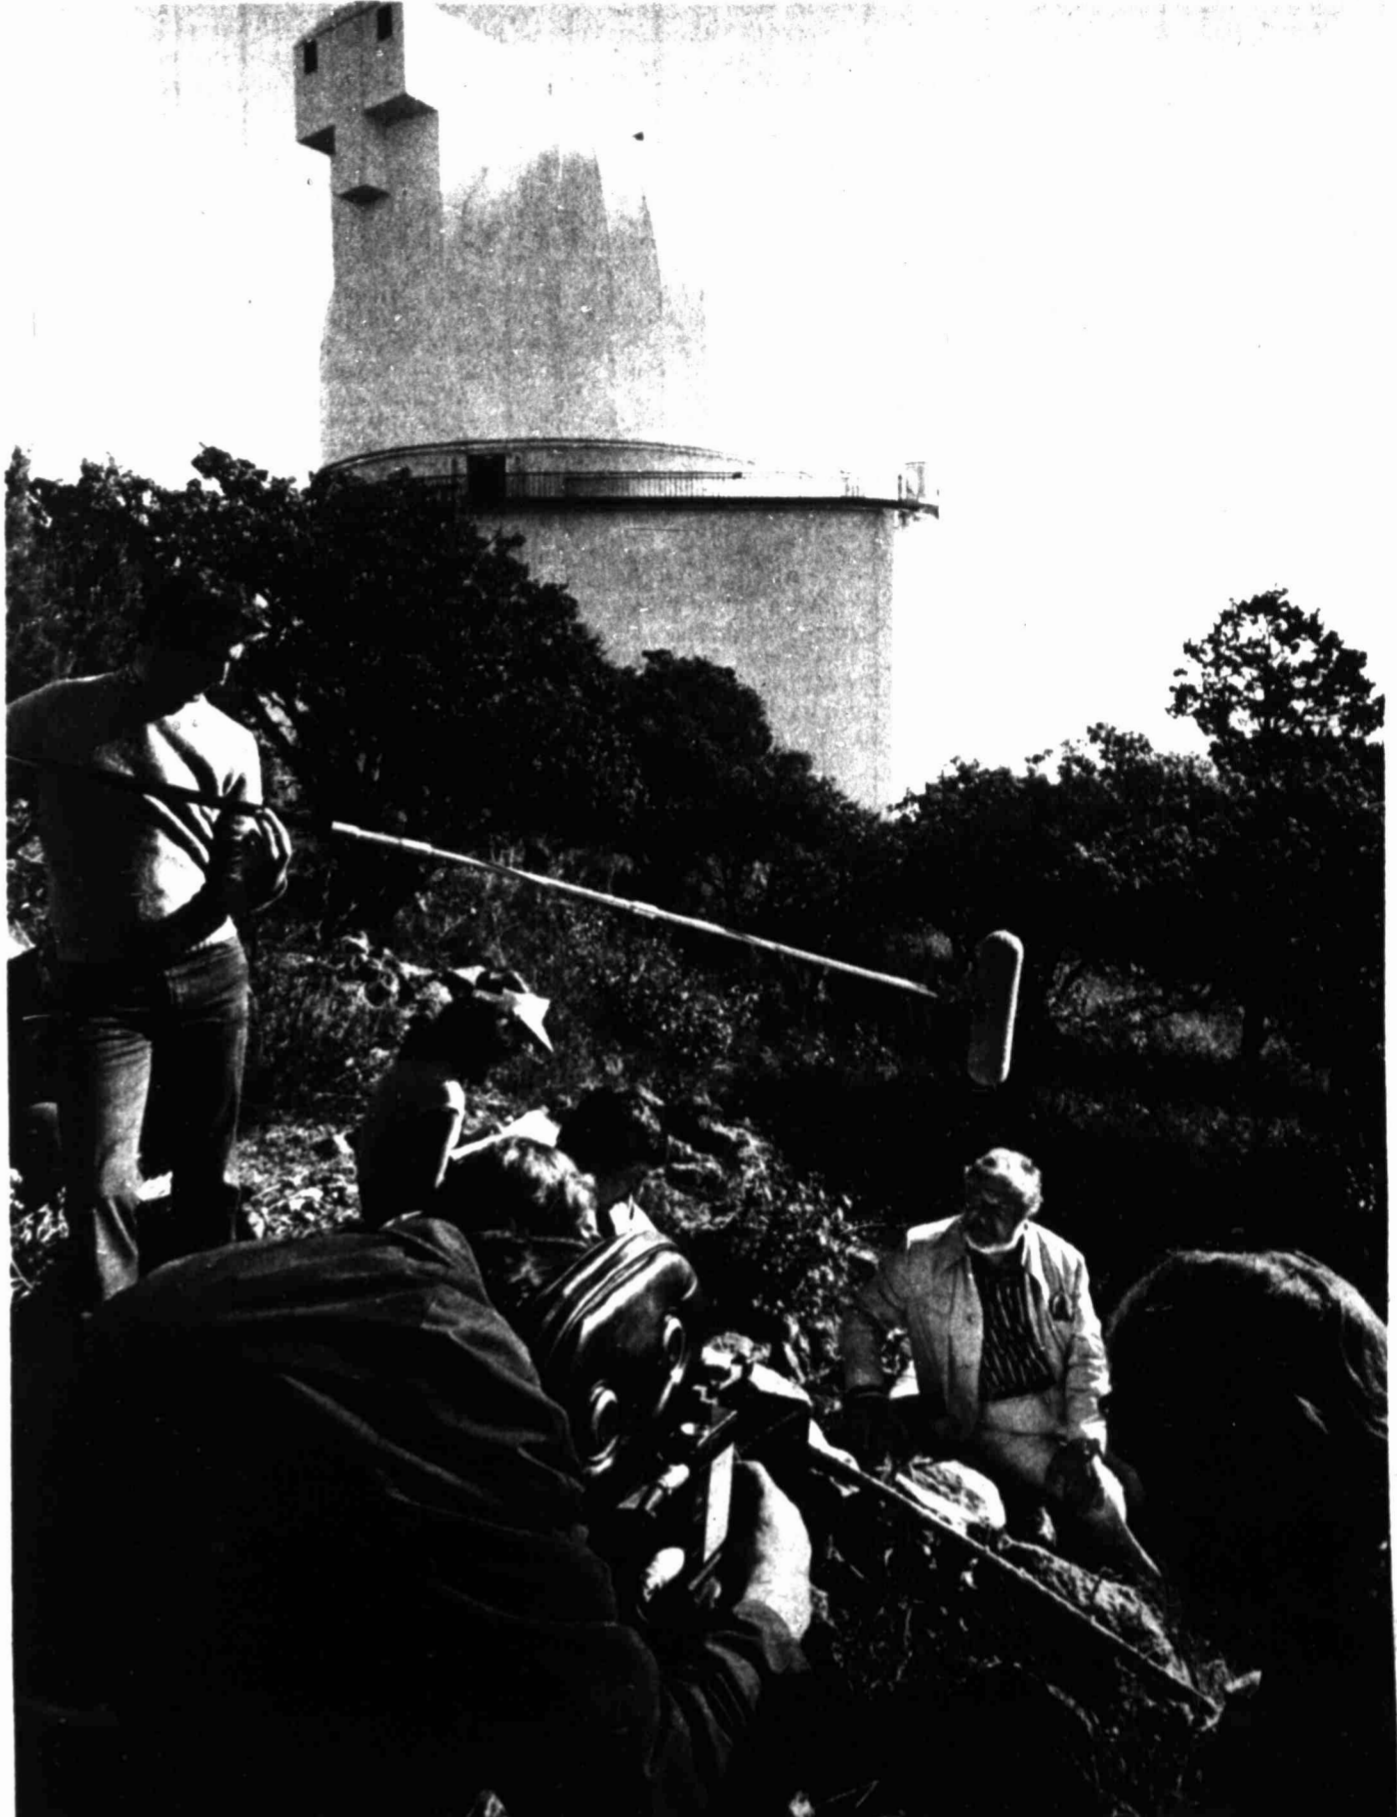

He said his family has been "taking this situation as well as could be expected. It's a very difficult thing I think uncertainty is more difficult than reality in most cases."

The Murphy family includes Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, Catherine Ann "Fifi" Murphy, Mrs. Robert W. Hines, Thomas D. Murphy III, Mrs. John Booth, L. Dane Murphy and Mrs. Clint Landry.

He ruled out kidnapping as a motive, saying that if that were the case, Miss Murphy's 1975 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme would not have been found out in the open.

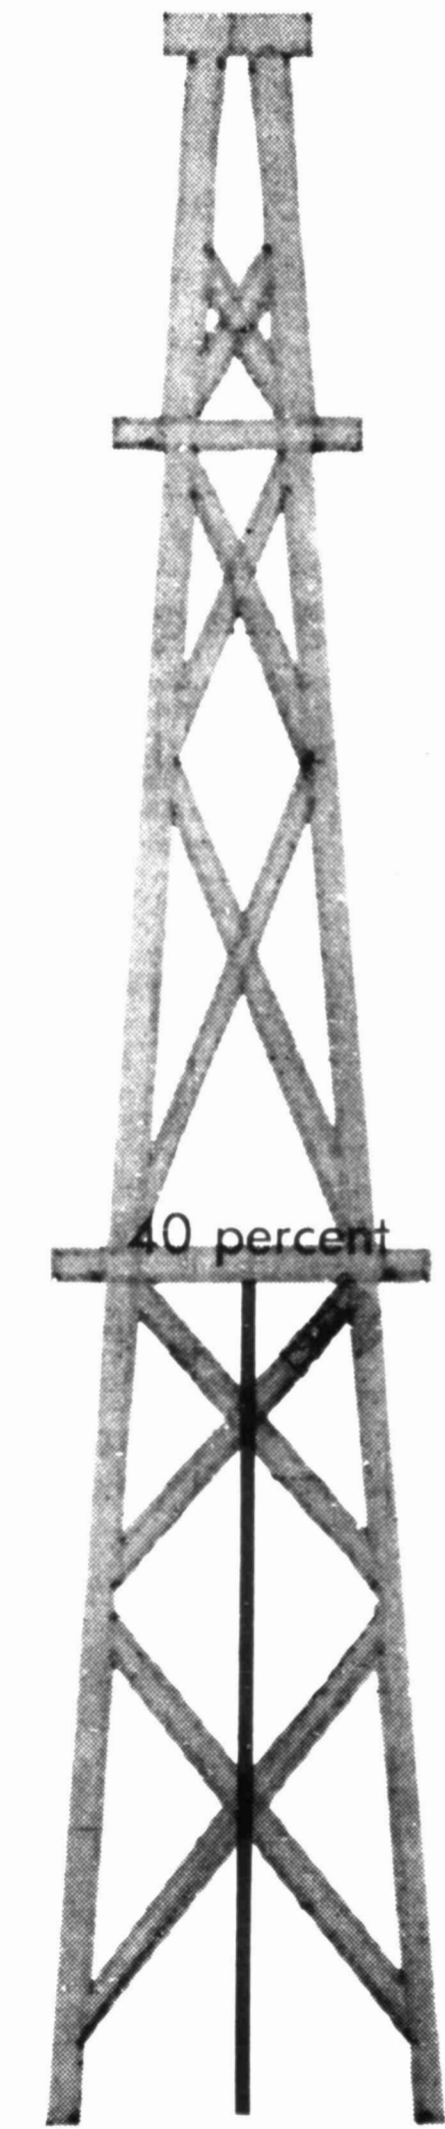

"There has been nothing to indi-

United Way fund drive at 40 percent of goal

United Way of Midland's 1979 Fund Campaign today reached 40 percent of its goal, with a total of $371,817 in pledges being reported by solicitors.

The year's goal is $928,686.

The figures were announced this morning during the weekly meeting of loaned executives and campaign leaders.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and Tom Brown, Inc. received this week's plaques for 100 percent employee participation in company campaigns.

The Bell pledge represents a 25 percent increase over the amount pledged by the company during the 1978 campaign.

In addition, Odis Haynes of Southwestern Bell was commended as this week's top loaned executive.

The loaned executive program involves Midland executives in helping specific companies plan and implement employee campaigns.

The next United Way of Midland report meeting will be at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Texas Electric Service Co. Reddy Room.

Bill Clements is a "non-politician, a businessman and a conservative."

The Republican from Dallas also is running for governor. With his $3.5-million budget, he is running one of the most expensive gubernatorial campaigns in the history of Texas.

John Hill, Clements' Democratic opponent, is "a liberal claims lawyer who's making a living out of politics," according to Clements, who held a news conference today at the Midland Hilton.

Clements pointed out what he termed differences between him and Hill, the state Attorney General, and outlined plans which he said will boost the agriculture and energy businesses in Texas.

"Hill," Clements said, "covets the office of governor. He has been running for it for 10 years."

Clements later described himself as having "a one-track mind. I am going to be elected governor of Texas."

Hill also was described by his opponent as being "a big government, big-spending politician. I'm going to pin that donkey's tail on him."

Later, defending his own campaign budget, Clements said 60 percent of the money is going for media exposure.

"I don't think there is anything unhealthy about spending the money for Texas politics," he said.

"The media exposure gives me voter identification and lets people know who I am.

"It would be delightful if the media would give us space and time free. I wouldn't have to spend so much money," he added.

Clements then explained that by free time and space he meant a public

"The debate on television would help us save some money."

Hill, Clements claimed, is getting scared about the gubernatorial race.

"He's squealing like a pig under a gate because he's got a competitor. We have all the counties in Texas organized."

He said Hill has yelled "foul" in regard to a campaign newspaper which Clements campaign workers have published. According to Clements, "We will show our documentation. Everything in there (in the Clements said there is only one solution to the farmers' plight economically and that is to open up markets around the world where farmers and ranchers can sell their produce.

"The Agriculture Department and the Commerce Department haven't been able to do it," Clements said. "The right answer should be for the State Department to assist in drawing up treaties with other countries in exporting our food."

He also touched on the subject of water, saying the state needs to bring

Midland City Council approves engineering plans for exhibit hall

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
R-T Staff Writer

The exhibit hall finally is seeing light, or rather the Midland City Council is beginning to see the exhibit hall.

Actually, the hall is only on paper, but that, in context, represents a giant step toward its construction.

The City Council approved plans and specifications on the hall Tuesday during a meeting in City Council Chambers.

The Council also authorized the advertisement of bids for construction, and set a special meeting for 10 a.m. Nov. 21 to open those bids and award a contract.

Voters approved a bond issue in December 1976 for construction of the exhibit hall. It will be in the block bordered by Wall, Loraine, Texas and Main streets.

Bruce Sasse with Ford, Powell and Carson Architects in San Antonio, and Rusty Arnold with Frank Welch and Associates in Midland explained the drawings to the council.

The building will have 38,000 square feet — 28,000 upstairs and 10,000 in the basement. There will be three entrances into the building from the east, south and west.

The main exhibition room will measure 93 by 140 feet and can seat 1,200 at a banquet; more for a meeting.

The basement will have five meeting rooms ranging in size from 325 to 1,300 square feet. It will include a storage area and room for expansion.

Council Member Carroll M. Thomas suggested they add a large screen for projections. "We need a large one to fit the size of the large meeting hall."

Arnold said the size of the building will dictate what type of exhibition shows can be presented there. Ruled out are shows with large equipment such as that used in the petroleum industry.

"This hall primarily is for people," the Midland architect added.

The feasibility of building a skateboard park in Midland will be pursued by the Parks and Recreation Department after it received authorization from the Council.

Wayne Kohout, director of the Parks and Recreation Department said the only place for children to use their skateboards is in Dennis the Menace Park. That park was designed with younger children in mind while the skateboarders are in their middle to late teens.

"I prefer if we look at a low-key facility, somewhere around $10,000 to $15,000," Kohout said.

Council Member Tom Sloan suggested the department also look into archery facilities since there are none in the city.

"It would also be cheaper (than a skateboard park)," Angelo quipped.

Kohout replied he has received plans for archery facilities from a national archery group, but has no idea as to its cost. The council decided to check only on the skateboard park at this time.

The council approved paying another $10,000 to Midland College to fund a tennis court building being constructed. The city has a cost-share agreement with the college, but its cost was first estimated to be only $25,000. This is half the projected cost of the building.

But when the college received the bids, the project was going to cost $100,000. The council was told the college has cut the total cost down to $70,000, and the city's share will be $35,000.

No one apparently won on the decision of the City Council to tell a developer he had to dedicate land for a right-of-way along Lamesa Road.

The preliminary plat for Del Norte Estates Addition, one mile south of the Midland city limits on Lamesa Road, needed to be approved, but the council required a 30-foot right-of-way dedication along Lamesa Road.

Keith Burger, one of the developers, said he has allowed wider than normal streets in the development and a park, but he would lose money if he

Airport parking to stay crowded

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
R-T Staff Writer

If anyone thinks the parking situation at Midland Regional Airport will get better once the parking area is completed, he's wrong.

A study made by Parkhill, Smith and Cooper and presented Tuesday to the Midland City Council showed the completed two-story parking area will have 728 parking spaces.

This is far short of the 1,000 spaces that will be needed by the time the new area is finished in February or March 1979, according to the Bill Waur with the firm.

The firm came up with a plan to expand the parking areas in four phases so that by the year 2000 there will be 3,297 spaces. The first phase would increase it to 1,391 parking spaces.

The firm recommended the area used for temporary parking now be used for additional parking once the new garage is completed. It will be this area that is planned for the first phase of expansion, also.

Second phase will go south of the current parking construction, third phase will extend into a southwest corner while the final phase will be west of that.

Also planned is a new road to connect with FM 1788 to give more access to the airport. One of the firm's employees explained this will be closer to the North Loop planned for Midland.

Cost estimate, and the one the council liked, was the cheapest of four plans, $13,036,200.

In approving the plan, the council noted two hangars will have to be torn down and the city will have to relocate them elsewhere.

Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, said the city eventually will have to relocate a total of four hangars, although all are of the World War II era.

New roads will be running through the middle of these hangars, he said. "We are hampered in by those (existing) roads. We need to start work on them as soon as possible."

A report by the same firm on Midland Air Park showed fuel sales since 1972 there have tripled, and there has been a sharp increase in the number of aircraft using the field.

Waur said, "Fifteen aircraft a day are flying in that are not based there and five extra stay overnight. Encroachment (by construction in the area) is a limiting factor."

The study showed there should be about 185 aircraft based at the Air Park each day. The firm drew plans for more hangar space, water lines and fire hydrants.

"I didn't know the Air Park didn't have fire hydrants," Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said.

He was told there are hydrants from the World War II years, but they are not hooked up to water lines.

The planning firm also recommended a wider access road be constructed to Air Park.

Chaparral Aviation received approval from the council to become the third fixed based operator at Midland Regional Airport.

When the firm first requested approval about a month ago, the council had questioned the need for another one.

The firm's attorney, Martin Allday, said Amarillo has four, and Midland has a potential three times that of Amarillo. He added that Midland is comparable to San Antonio in its needs, and that city has eight fixed based operators.

"Midland deserves the best we can get," Allday said. "They (Chaparral owners) estimate $10 million in service and sales in a year here."

City Attorney Joe Nuessle advised the council that Federal Aviation Administration regulations say if the firm is willing to pay the same as the others and there is available space, the firm should be allowed to come in.

"What you're saying is that the government is for free enterprise," Angelo said.

Council Member Tom Sloan added, "Does that mean that if we want to continue to receive federal funds we must let in another operator?"

Nuessle replied that was not the meaning of the regulation. Angelo added, "I don't think we have to go by that FAA regulation. We (the council) have the right to decide who's right to come on."

FAA officials discussed the problem of encroachment of the Air Park with the council.

Roy Viscount of the Albuquerque, N.M. office said the FAA was concerned about the problem.

"If you can control the development around the Air Park, the FAA would be opposed to moving or abandoning it. It is a valuable asset."

City-owned land to the south of Air Park was mentioned for use as a park to prohibit further encroachment. Viscount recommended the park be designed to avoid a large congregation of people that a ball park would have.

The council approved a compatible land use study be done on Air Park.

A request from the Midland Civil Air Patrol to set up a mobile home for headquarters at Air Park was referred to the Airport Board.

Girls' food poisoning tests negative

ANDREWS — Superintendent Virgil Kelley of the Denver City Independent School District said early today health officials have informed him that 14 female student-athletes who got sick after eating at an Andrews Dairy Queen failed to show signs of food poisoning in their stomachs in tests performed by staffers at hospitals in Seminole, Hobbs, N.M., and Brownfield.

He said 14 girls were most severely affected by symptoms while en route back to Denver City following a volleyball match with Andrews girls Sept. 28.

A total of 32 girls were examined for symptoms of food poisoning but state and Andrews County health officials said the raw food at the restaurant here did not contain any evidence of food poisoning.

Manager Dixie Foshee of the Andrews Dairy Queen reported that businesses was picking up following a slower than usual week last week at the restaurant.

Vomiting reportedly was the main symptom, said Kelley, who said girls affected were in grades 7-9. The sickness forced 12 girls to miss school the next day, he said.

The incident brought officials of the Dairy Queen chain from Fort Worth to Andrews. They enlisted the services of a laboratory in Arlington, which also returned negative results from tests on the food.

Officials said a possible malfunction of the school bus exhaust system may have caused the girls to become ill. Backed-up exhaust could have been the reason for the girls' sudden illness, according to an official connected with the investigation.

However, Kelley denied that possibility, declaring, "That's not true. We checked the bus out."

Teachers ignore injunction, return to picket lines

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Defying a court order to end their strike, teachers returned to picket lines today in an effort to shut the schools until they win higher salaries and other demands.

As during the first day of the strike Tuesday, school buses rolled past pickets out of fenced-in parking lots under police supervision. The bus drivers, members of the Teamsters Union, have refused to honor the walkout.

The walkout has been declared illegal by a Chancery Court judge.

"This injunction will not end the current strike by Memphis city teachers," Lorene Osborne, president of the Memphis Education Association, told about 650 applauding teachers Tuesday at MEA headquarters. "We disagree with this order and are already in the process of appealing it."

Chancellor D.J. "Tene" Alissandratos issued a temporary restraining order Tuesday against the strike by the 5,300-member MEA.

The order came as 57 percent of the city's 6,200 teachers and 58 percent of the system's 113,000 students stayed away from classes. Willie Herenton, deputy superintendent for instruction services, said 3,785 teachers and 67,000 students were absent from school.

"It is clearly illegal for public employees to strike," Alissandratos said. His order directed teachers to refrain from striking and picketing, but fell short of a back-to-work edict. He said the Memphis Board of Education will have to decide whether to fire teachers who refuse to resume teaching.

The teachers voted 2,659-973 Monday to strike the state's largest and the nation's 16th largest public school system because of stalled contract negotiations.

Among the unresolvable issues are salary, transfers and assignments, teacher evaluation procedures and the teachers' right to have a voice in school policy.

The walkout has prevented classes from being held this fall for Cleveland's 100,000 public school pupils, and Superintendent Peter P. Carlin said it is unlikely classes would resume this week.

Leaders of six unions agreed to resubmit an 8 percent salary increase offer to teachers and non-academic employees after the Ohio superintendent of public instruction pledged his support to efforts to guarantee the raise would be paid.

One week ago, school employees rejected the same pact by a 3-2 margin, although 4,000 union members never cast ballots.

The unions had asked for a 20 percent pay hike. The starting salary of a Cleveland teacher is $9,100. The average teacher's salary in Ohio's largest public school district is $14,873.

Legislative Conference to be held in Midland

Midland will be the site for this year's West Texas Chamber of Commerce-sponsored Pre-Legislative Conference, scheduled Dec. 5-6.

Douglas Boren of Lubbock, chairman of WTCC's State Affairs Committee, is in charge of general arrangements.

The conference is held prior to each regular session of the Texas Legislature, affording members of the regional chamber of commerce and the 56 members of the legislature representing the area served by WTCC an opportunity to come together on an informal basis to discuss legislative issues important to West Texas, Boren said.

The program is designed to allow as much direct communication as possible between the elected representatives and their constituents.

A reception and banquet on Oct. 5 will open the conference. Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown will be the banquet speaker.

A breakfast, discussion sessions and a luncheon will highlight the following day's activities.

Members of the legislature and their spouses will be the guests of the West Texas Chamber while in Midland.

C. Winston Barclay of Midland, district VI vice president of WTCC, is coordinating local arrangements. The Midland Chamber of Commerce is assisting in arranging and staging the event, which is due to attract several hundred persons.

Bandido shooting attacks may stem from vendetta

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth police say they may discover that a series of shooting attacks on Bandido motorcycle gangs stemmed from a vendetta by an applicant who was refused membership in the club.

handguns.

The sniper attacks began with the Aug. 27 shooting of Lightsey, then president of the Fort Worth chapter of the Bandidos. Lightsey was shot six times with a .38-caliber pistol as he waited for a signal light to change at an intersection just south of downtown Fort Worth.

Stephen Daniel Vance, 22, a former member of the Ghost Riders motorcycle club, was charged Tuesday in the August shooting death of Johnny Ray Lightsey, former president of the Bandidos motorcycle gang. Police did not say if other arrests are expected.

Last week, the Bandidos' new president, 27-year-old Ronald Kim Tobin and his 22-year-old nephew Lloyd Tobin were wounded by a hidden assailant as they walked out the rear door of a lounge.

Fort Worth detective C.R. Davis said charges of murder and felony theft were filed against the Richland Hills man. Bond was set at $40,000 on the murder charge and $3,500 on the felony theft charge.

The latest episode occurred about 4 a.m. Sunday, just prior to Vance's arrest.

Davis said Vance was arrested early Sunday, less than an hour after the third in a series of shooting attacks on area motorcycle gang members.

Police said several persons, including several members of the Bandidos club, had gathered at Bagente's house Saturday night and were still there early Sunday. Witnesses said Bagente walked to the back door where he was greeted by at least three shots. He later told police he saw only a flash and could not identify his assailant.

Davis said Richland Hills police arrested Vance as he was unloading a pair of motorcycles that police later discovered had been stolen in Euless Oct. 1.

30th chess match ends in a draw

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — The 30th game in the world chess championship match ended in a draw today as the experts predicted it would, leaving champion Anatoly Karpov in the lead 5-4 and still needing one more victory to retain the championship he got from Bobby Fischer by default.

In other business, the board also accepted a bid for replacement equipment in the Austin Freshman School language laboratory and reviewed the gate receipts for the Midland High School-Monterey football game.

Test results in the Midland schools show those students who are learning above their grade level are continuing to learn well while those working at below grade level are making smaller gains.

The results also will allow the district to determine which objectives are not being met and to revise them or provide extra teacher training in those areas.

Trustee James Ramsoure reported to the board on his trip to the Texas Association of School Boards state convention.

Indian summer settles in

The Permian Basin is experiencing one of the best times of the year weatherwise — Indian summer. Known for its cool evenings and warm afternoons with slight breezes, the fall may be the perfect time for getting outside and doing almost anything.

Eliot Janeway to discuss economics

Political economist Eliot Janeway of New York will discuss the nation's current economic and political situations at 7:30 p.m. today before a gathering of Midland businessmen, stock brokers, ranchers and oil operators in the Midland Hilton.

Janeway, who is president of Janeway Publishing and Research Corp., has been financial adviser to presidents, senators, congressmen and industrial leaders for more than 40 years.

He is author of best-selling books, including "What Shall I Do With My Money," "Struggle for Survival" and "The Economics of Crisis" and writes a syndicated column for the Washington Star. His latest book is "Musings on Money." Janeway is a private adviser to many corporations and investment institutions. His weekly newsletters reputedly enjoy "the most influential circulation in the world." Janeway, who prefers to call himself a "policy engineer," heads up a staff of 14 professionals in his organization.

He holds quarterly business and investment conferences in Washington, D.C. known as "The Janeway Seminars." He gives timely tips via television on investing in the stock market, and annually gives between 50 and 75 speeches in which he lays out practical solutions to economic and financial problems.

Janeway, 65, began his career in 1935 with the publication of articles prescribing Depression remedies. In 1938, he was appointed business editor of Time news magazine, and in World War II, he wrote for Fortune magazine columns which helped establish him as "the country's leading authority on economic warfare."

He has advised at least seven presidents on the role of the economy in people's political and financial lives.

Janeway's visit to Midland is being sponsored by HBF Corporation, Faudree Ranches and Shearson Hayden Stone, Inc.

Escapee releases two prisoners

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Police early today said an escaped Taylor County prisoner was being sought eight miles east of here near Coahoma.

Authorities said the man drove away from

Big Spring State Hospital late Tuesday afternoon during a competency hearing.

The escaped prisoner reportedly took two hostages, releasing them later, said officials. Authorities said David

Franklin Howze, 24, of Clyde threatened a young woman with a sharp pencil during his competency hearing at Big Spring State Hospital and told Taylor County Sheriff's deputies from Abilene he would kill the woman unless he was given the patrol car keys. He then left the state hospital grounds in the patrol car, traveling in the direction of Lamesa, according to Jim Blackley, chief deputy for the Taylor County Sheriff's Department.

To Midland's legal secretaries, "brown bagging it" for lunch Tuesday also meant a tour of the county clerk's office to become more familiar with its procedures and personnel. Midland County District Clerk Madge Wallis, far right, explains to the group where various information and materials are located. (Staff Photo)

Mansion theater to host students

The Mansion dinner theater between Midland and Odessa will be host to drama students from area high schools and colleges at a special drama seminar Thursday afternoon. Starting time is 1:30 p.m.

The free event will be open to all interested persons in this region — adults as well as students — said Enid Holm, director-producer at the dinner theater.

Conducting the lecture-demonstration will be television performer and comedian Al Lewis, who is starring in The Mansion's current production of the Neil Simon comedy, "Last of the Red Hot Lovers."

Lewis had the role of Grandpa on the long-running TV comedy series, "The Munsters," and has had many TV guest spots. He also has had roles in numerous motion pictures.

Although best-known for his comedic talents, Lewis holds masters and doctoral degrees from Columbia University and has taught drama and acting courses at St. Edwards University in Austin, Rockhurst College in Kansas City and the Yale Drama School at New Haven, Conn.

Lewis and his brother, Phillip Meister, have operated off-Broadway theaters in New York City.

They own and manage the well-known National Shakespeare Company, now in its 19th year, which performs at colleges and universities throughout the U.S. The ensemble has performed in this region in past seasons.

Lewis also owns a theater school in New York City which teaches acting, directing, body movement, diction and stagecraft.

Area speech and drama teachers planning to bring groups of students to the free seminar are asked to telephone The Mansion in advance to advise how many persons will be in the group. The theater telephone number is 563-1133.

Reign of terror

In this decade, Germany's murderous Baader-Meinhof gang and Italy's Red Brigades have demonstrated that chillingly effective terrorism does not require large numbers of conspirators.

If Mexico's small but determined 23rd of September Communist League has yet to achieve the fearful reputation of its European counterparts, it is not for lack of trying.

The League is believed responsible for at least 30 killings, almost two dozen kidnappings netting perhaps $2 million in ransom, and 10 bank robberies in just the past three years alone.

Flushed out of the mountains and rural areas by the Mexican army, the League has transformed itself into an urban terrorist force. Its most recent effort involved the Mexico City kidnapping and death in August of Hugo Margain Charles, son of Mexico's ambassador to the United States.

A recent revelation that members of the League have received guerrilla warfare training in North Korea lends a worrisome international flavor to Mexico's terrorist problem.

In a nation of 64 million persons, a hundred or so armed terrorists hardly constitute a credible threat to the government. Yet the diligence with which the government of Mexico pursued members of the 23rd of September Communist League even before the group resorted to urban terrorism indicates the potential menace is taken seriously. And well it might be.

Mexico rightly may be referred to as a pressure cooker. Despite truly impressive economic growth rates for most of the post-World War II years, a staggering 40 to 50 percent of the work force remains unemployed or underemployed.

The population, half of which is under 17 years of age, is expected to double by the year 2000. Simply to keep unemployment at its present level, Mexico will need 700,000 new jobs each year. Just think of this — 700,000 new jobs a year. Few economic planners believe such a goal can be achieved.

Migration of the rural poor to the cities has created vast, dismal slums — fertile ground for the revolutionary rhetoric of the terrorists.

In the countryside, Latin

America's most extensive land redistribution program has provided heretofore landless peasants with 160 million acres of agricultural land. But by effectively eliminating the efficiency of large-scale farming, redistribution has failed to lift most campesinos out of poverty.

Mexico's immense reserves of oil and natural gas provide hope for future economic development and, perhaps, maintenance of the political stability needed for progress.

It also provides a vastly greater incentive for Communist states which might consider aid to the 23rd of September group and as many as a dozen lesser Marxist organizations operating in Mexico.

Considering all this, it readily becomes apparent why Mexico is called a "pressure cooker." It seemingly is a hazardous situation, indeed, one which could erupt at any time.

Obviously, the United States has a real interest in Mexico's success in fighting both terrorism and poverty.

The fate of the 23rd of September Communist League will tell the U.S.A. a whole lot about how both of these battles are progressing.

To say the least, the eyes of the United States are on Mexico and its multiple problems. Good luck to the Mexican government as it strives to solve its troubles.

Mark Russell says

We can only guess as to what went wrong in the plot to steal a nuclear submarine. The crooks probably forgot to wear gloves.

You just can't deal in contraband that conspicuous without running it through the GSA budget.

One of the suspects was in life insurance, another a former carpet cleaner. You'd think work like that would give a man all the gusto he needs.

They were going to try to sell the sub — "This dandy number was only used by a little old lady on weekends to go under the polar icecaps."

How does a boy enter a life of crime? First he starts hijacking nuclear submarines and it's not long before he's stealing apples from pushcarts.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

It's hard to tell who's legal

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Organized crime could not function without the legion of high-priced lawyers, accountants and investment experts who teach the mobsters how to stay beyond the long arm of the law.

But the distinction between the professional advisers and the crooks they associate with often becomes blurred. Many of the legal and financial counselors succumb to the lure of easy money and become racketeers themselves.

A still-secret report, filed more than six years ago by a special task force of FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents, named Meyer Lansky and Morris Shenker as two of the most important financial figures in organized crime.

Lansky is an aged relic of a bygone criminal era. He started as a young street tough in New York City and rose to become the first and foremost of underworld money men. His Mafia associates considered him a genius in financial matters.

But Lansky's day is past. FBI wiretaps on his home recorded nothing but harmless conversation, according to our sources. Doctors who examined him, at the behest of the Justice Department found him to be in poor physical condition.

Shenker is a different kettle of fish. A brilliant criminal lawyer out of St. Louis, he now lives in Las Vegas, where he owns the Dunes hotel and casino. The confidential report recommended that Shenker be prosecuted, but he has never even been arrested for anything. One knowledgeable source told us that the substance of five years' wiretaps concerning Shenker's activities "could be put on the head of a pin."

The IRS-FBI team looked into allegations that Shenker was accepting kickbacks on union pension fund loans. But Justice Department officials reluctantly decided the evidence was too fuzzy to take into a courtroom.

A source close to the investigation told us that Shenker had taken huge tax write-offs from California real estate losses. He allegedly bought into partnerships that were guaranteed to lose money.

Intelligence reports allege that Shenker has numerous associations with organized crime. As a skilled criminal lawyer, he represented several known racketeers.

Perhaps his most influential contact was former Teamsters Union president Jimmy Hoffa, whose presumed death is believed to have been engineered by underworld hoods. The association with Hoffa gave Shenker a pipeline to the union's Central States Pension Fund in Chicago and apparently helped make him a multimillionaire.

Shenker supplanted the notorious racketeer Moe Dalitz as the largest borrower from the pension fund, according to a special report by the Professional Drivers Council, a dissident Teamsters group.

Through partnerships with the late businessman Irvin J. Kahn, Shenker got more than $164 million in loans from the Teamsters' pension fund. In addition, Shenker's companies

ART BUCHWALD More people diagnosing own--or friends'--ills

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Because medical costs are rising so fast, more and more people are diagnosing their own illnesses or, worse still, those of their friends. The government would do well to make a study of how these nonprofessional diagnoses are affecting the nation's health picture.

The other day I had a cold. It was just like the ones you see on television. I was sneezing, coughing and looking mournfully at my wife. I called my secretary at the office and said I wouldn't be in because I felt lousy.

"You must have one of those 'eight-hour things' that's going all around town," she said. "You'll feel perfectly well tomorrow."

Eight hours seemed to be a reasonable time to have a cold, and I was looking forward to staying in bed, particularly since the Yankees and Red Sox were playing a crucial game to get in the American League playoffs.

My sister called, and I told her I had one of those "eight-hour things" that's been going all around.

"Are you sure it's only an 'eight-hour thing'?" she asked. "It could be the '24-hour bug.' Harold had it last week. Do you have any fever?"

"A little — maybe 100."

"That's the '24-hour bug' for sure. Drink lots of fluids and take aspirin, and you'll be able to shake it off."

I really hadn't counted on staying in bed for 24 hours, but it's stupid to fight a bug.

My other sister called up 10 minutes later. "Edith says you've got a '24-hour bug.'"

"I don't know if it's a bug or just a cold."

"Is your nose red from blowing it?"

"Yeah, sure it is. Why do you ask?"

"Then you don't have a '24-hour bug.' You have a '48-hour virus.'"

"My secretary said all I had was an 'eight-hour thing.' How come you moved it up to 48 hours?"

"The 'eight-hour thing' is entirely different. You feel funny but your nose doesn't get red when you blow it. The '24-hour bug' has all the symptoms of the 'eight-hour one,' except that you cough a lot. The '48-hour virus' makes you sneeze, cough and perspire while you're sleeping. You have to stay in bed for two days."

"But I can't stay in bed for two days."

"Look," my sister said. "If you don't want medical advice, don't ask me."

I think I might have been all right except that my secretary told Healy I was home with the flu.

He called, of course. "I feel for you," he said. "You won't be able to shake it for two weeks. If it were a winter cold I'd say you'd be better in five, maybe six days. But you have an October cold. It's almost impossible to get rid of. You hear my voice? It's been like this since August."

"But suppose my cold goes away in 24 hours?"

"That's when it can become the most dangerous. You think it's gone away and then a week later you wake up and it's back with a vengeance. I'd rather have a two-week bout with a chest cold than a '24-hour bug' which sneaks up on you like a thief in the night."

Word travels fast in Washington, and Elfin of Newsweek was terse and to the point. "Healy tells me you have an incurable form of pneumonia."

"Either that," I said, "or an 'eight-hour thing' or a '24-hour bug' or a '48-hour virus' or a two-week bout with the flu or a simple cold. I'm waiting on another opinion right now."

"From whom?"

"My druggist. He says there's a lot of it going around."

"What's going around?"

"You name it, and he says he's never seen so much of it going around."

The life cycle of vegetables also is important

WASHINGTON — The other day, in a public forum, it was said that when President Lyndon Johnson went home to Texas in 1969, he became a lost soul because his life had totally been involved in wielding power and getting people to do his will.

At the LBJ ranch, there were cattle, hired help and Secret Service men, but there wasn't that much satisfaction in directing them. The theory went that Johnson's life no longer held the meaning it did when he was on a singularly fast-track.

If the explanation about Johnson is valid, he is not alone. This city contains many once powerful men who, unlike LBJ, remain here, and wonder what happened to their lives, mostly because they were once totally wrapped up in the consuming chores of government and/or politics.

People like this are walking arguments for the need for all of us to find other interests, and perhaps this is a roundabout way of thumping for the need of finding other things to do, such as the simple and joyous art of raising vegetables.

Wise is the man or woman who gazes over a carpeted lawn and suddenly decides a piece of it would make a fine vegetable garden. For my money, blooming peas, ripening tomatoes, a stand of carrot tops, a swollen zucchini — all are just as pleasing to the eye as the more bourgeois manicured lawn or a gathering of hum-drum zinnias.

A vegetable garden in bloom means something. It means food to eat, but only after some work, some apprehension, some caring, and a great deal of pleasure and pride. My son, Michael, 15, and I grunt in the spring when we spade and break up the sometimes gummy soil for our modest vegetable plot (about 650 square feet). It's against our work-ethic rules to use a gas-powered soil-buster to start the season.

In those first weeks of summer, there is almost parental concern whether the store-bought tomato, pepper and squash plants will survive, and that the buried seeds will germinate as promised. There is an absolute duty to give your plot a good weekly soaking, and to ruthlessly kill weeds. Life must begin.

After a couple of seasons in vegetable gardening, some tricks are learned. The dreary chore of weeding can be remedied by laying down, between the rows, rolls of black, plastic film which stops weeds, and holds warmth in the soil. Tomato plants bear better when certain branches are cut from the lower part of the stalk. It is good to follow the advice of Jim Crockett, the gardening mentor of public television, when he urges you to make your plantings closer together than the old rule books prescribe.

For my part, it is useless to fret about the plethora of diseases and insects which might, but only might, attack your vegetable garden. To become fussy and study the life cycle of nematodes is to take away from the genuine joy of gardening. Better to give the leafy plants a nominal spraying and trust in mother nature. Nor should you become so exacting about thinning that you are using tape-measures and a compass. Besides, Michael says, "It tears my heart out to pull up those underdeveloped morsels, except thinned-out leaf lettuce which can be eaten."

The rewards for us are harvesting a plenitude of tomatoes, beans, peppers, sweet corn, squash, cucumbers and other vegetables vastly superior to anything a supermarket offers. There is also the pleasure of showing off (the more low-key the better) by describing your bounty to non-gardeners, and making them gifts of utterly delightful tomatoes, beans and peppers.

This year, we plunged into freezing and canning our surplus. Michael looked like a Nobel Prize winning chemist as he worked in the kitchen with boiling water, deep pots, jars and lids. Another adventure.

We are not alone in our enthusiasm for vegetable gardening. The Department of Agriculture reports that the gardening boom, which began in 1975, now has up to 44 percent of all households raising fruit or vegetables in varying quantities. Some 11 percent of all processed fruits and vegetables consumed come from home gardens.

Moreover, the Department's urban gardening program has doubled in the past two years, and reached most major cities. There are community gardens in the most unlikely blocks in

New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Detroit — to name a few — and, according to agricultural advisers, there is minimal vandalism and pilferage in these gardens.

There is even the claim that the crime rate drops in so-called poor neighborhoods where gardens are planted, some of them even on tenement rooftops. There is something about working the soil that makes a person feel more sure, more rooted.

The life cycle of vegetables is equally important as the Rhodesian crisis, the Middle East, SALT negotiations, or inflation. It could be that barber-shop singing, Friday night poker, weekend fishing and hunting, or bird-watching, are just as important to a balanced life, as fretting over how to make a buck or guaranteeing equality or saving the world. Michael and I are picking the last of this summer's garden, and are already planning what we'll put in next spring when life renews itself.

If you don't like politicians, fire 'em

By TOM De COLA

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Well, big government has gone and done it now—bureaucrats and politicians have made Eddie Chiles mad.

Chiles is chairman of the Western Company of North America, and he's the guy who buys television time to tell you that if you don't have an oil well, you should get one because you'll love doing business with the Western Company, an oilfield supply business.

But these days, he's putting a new message on about 280 radio stations in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

The message is simple. He wants you to vote, and if you don't like the representation you've been getting, he wants you to fire your representatives, be they federal, state or local.

"It's just over-frustration," Chiles said from his high-rise office. "Big government is destroying everything we've always loved and appreciated."

Chiles delivers his 60-second radio spots himself, and no one will ever mistake him for a professional announcer. Asked if he'd had any prior radio training, Chiles said, "No. Hell no. It scared me to death the first time."

The 68-year-old head of the $225 million-per-year company looks like the universal grandfather—white-haired and with an overall kindly countenance. But some excerpts from his scripts leave no doubt as to his position:

"I'm mad. I'm really mad," one script says. "I'm mad enough to scream from the top of our building. You bureaucrats stop pushing us around. We've had enough of your irresponsible government. You're over-taxing us. Way over-taxing us. Your reckless spending is ruining the country."

From another script: "I think every politician ... who doesn't tell us exactly how he stands on the vital issues should be fired. FIRE 'EM—They're nothing but tax-suckers." "Something a little more folksy? "We must put a fence between the hog and the trough. Politicians have to learn that they work for us. We don't work for them."

While Chiles delivers his message, a life and drum theme plays in the background. It's a specially-commissioned piece of music, but it sounds quite a bit like the theme from the movie, "Patton."

The commercials are a production of Tyler, Texas, adman Bill Finn. "We started these with one station," Finn said, "but the reception was so good it grew. We'll continue 'em right up through Nov. 7 (election day)."

Chiles has received about 200 letters from individuals praising the spots. One announcement that promised written evaluations of Congressmen and Senators by five diverse organizations prompted 2,000 requests for the material.

So far, the spots have cost the Western Company about $100,000 and Chiles said his directors went along with them 100 percent.

Although Chiles' announcements are non-partisan, he's registered as a Republican and the wall of his office sports a plaque from the Republican Party of Texas naming him a "key contributor."

He hasn't received any offers of monetary aid from like-minded business colleagues. "I don't need any financial help," he said.

Chiles founded the Western Company in 1939 at Seagraves, in West Texas. "I had the opportunity to start my own business and become a millionaire," he said. "And I'm proud of it."

Chiles said he's longed the country "has gone a long way down the road toward socialism," but his politics are not extreme. The spots also inform listeners how to register and how to gain information about voting procedures. None of them recommends a candidate.

"I just hope we can do something about changing the direction we're traveling in," Chiles said.

He said he's been interested in politics since college days at the University of Oklahoma, but the commercials are his first mass-media venture. He said he has absolutely no political ambitions.

Employees at his company all say the same thing: he's sincere in what he's doing. He said concern for his employees was probably the spur for his campaign. "They work harder, work faster and take home less, (due to inflation) Chiles said.

The walls of his office are filled with memorabilia, from a picture of his first office to sports-oriented items—autographed footballs from Oklahoma, two framed pat gin rummy hands and a picture of Ben Hogan swinging a golf club and bearing a personalized autograph from the sports immortal.

So far, there aren't any scalps of politicians "fired" by people who went along with Chiles' message. But then, it's not November yet, either.

Midland Symphony and Chorus Association president John Ingram, left, and Houston Symphony Orchestra marketing manager Jefferson Lewis discuss Saturday's special concert featuring the Houston Symphony and popular composer-performer Burt Bacharach. The 7:30 p.m. concert, benefitting the Midland-Odesa Symphony and Chorale, will be in the new Chaparral Center of Midland College, under sponsorship of the Odessa Symphony Guild. Tickets, priced at $10 each, are on sale daily at Gibson's stores in both Midland and Odessa.

Committee to meet Thursday

Midland Memorial Hospital Citizens Advisory Committee members will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Medical Staff Conference Room in the hospital, according to a spokesman for the organization.

The executive board of the Midland Community Action Agency canceled its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night due to the lack of a quorum.

day and continues until sundown today.

The day is being marked with prayer and introspection, along with the traditional fasting.

Odessa's Temple Beth El, which serves Permian Basin Jewry, began the Yom Kippur observance Tuesday night with a Kol Nidrei service. A Yom Kippur Day service was held at the temple this morning.

A children's service was to be held there at 3 p.m. today.

The congregation of Temple Beth El will attend a break-the-fast meal following conclusion of Yom Kippur tonight. The meal will be served by the Temple Sisterhood of Temple Beth El.

Yom Kippur is the culminating event in the Jewish new year, Rosh Hashonah, which began at sundown on Oct. 1. The intervening period is known as the "Days of Awe." According to Hebrew tradition, man's fate is written down on Rosh Hashonah and sealed at last on the final, 10th day, Yom Kippur.

Although the Jewish High Holy Days are solemn, introspective ones, the period is characterized by an underlying joyousness in its traditional songs and the poetry which has been incorporated into services.

The new year services which have been under way at Temple Beth El have been conducted by Rabbi Emanuel Kumin. All arrangements for the holiday observances were made by Temple Beth El's Ritual and Service Committee, whose chairman is Noah Fishman of Midland.

According to the Jewish calendar, the year 1978-79 is the Hebrew year 5739.

Garner Ted loses church power struggle

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Television evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong says he's not surprised to hear that his elderly father's chief advisor has become the heir apparent to his father's wealthy Worldwide Church of God empire.

The younger Armstrong, reached at the headquarters of his Church of God International here, said the "entire basic grass roots expected this to occur and the majority of ministry expected this to occur so I'm not surprised."

"I think, frankly, Mr. Rader is very clearly the victor in what was a power struggle. He moved into my office, into my desk; his secretary sits where mine sat." Rader emerged the victor in a father-son conflict that ended with the younger Armstrong's ouster or "disfellowship" last June.

He said he wonders about the influence Rader holds over his father, 86-year-old Herbert Armstrong, who founded the church.

But, in the long run, Armstrong said he feels his father has done him "the greatest favor" by removing him. He says he no longer is bothered by "enormous politics, corporate inertia and a monumental debt retirement program struggling to make ends in a gigantic religious empire which has its financial resources committed to a fiscal plant and to such ventures as ... Quest magazine."

He confessed to talking to his father privately concerning Rader's personal income in connection with the work he was doing and the money spent by Rader and his wife.

The younger Armstrong said he still gets calls and letters from deacons, ministers and followers of the Worldwide Church of God complaining about the state of the church.

"I had hoped for people to think for themselves, to make their own decisions and not be blindfolded and hogtied by being told what to think and what to believe."

Armstrong said he cannot rule out that Rader will be appointed successor or "already has done so in a document filed in a safe somewhere."

Garner Ted now runs a similar organization but said, "There's one very important difference in our attitude toward the people in the world. We do not believe in exclusivism, and keeping the sheep securely huddled together in fear — and there is absolute fear, and I mean it is a fear-ridden organization."

He said Worldwide Church of God followers are prohibited from speaking his name because of fear of "quite literally, losing their eternal salvation if they dare go against any edict issued from Pasadena." "I'm sure thankful of all that we got at Tyler ... not a grinding fight ... and just to be out of it and what they've got, they've got. That's the end of the matter as far as I am concerned," he concluded.

Rader, 48, a convert who is general counsel and treasurer of the 75,000-member church, gave up a lucrative law practice and recently moved his family from Beverly Hills to the Pasadena church campus.

In return, Rader has gained more than a nice office.

His salary reportedly runs to six figures. He travels the world with Herbert Armstrong.

Ustinov, BBC crew now filming in West Texas

FORT DAVIS — English dramatic actor Peter Ustinov and television crew of the British Broadcasting Corp. currently are filming the BBC documentary "Einstein's Universe" in part atop Mount Locke, site of The University of Texas' McDonald Observatory.

Foreign accents are not unusual at the observatory, for astronomers from all over the world trek here to research into the universe. But lately, there has been a predominance of British accents.

Ustinov, 57, and Martin Freeth, a producer and director for the BBC, and an entourage of about 20 cameramen, sound and lighting technicians, set designers and photographers have converged on Mount Locke and the Fort Davis-Marfa area to film the 90-minute documentary on relativity.

Script for "Einstein's Universe" was written by award-winning British science writer Nigel Calder.

The film was conceived as a celebration for the 100th anniversary of Albert Einstein's birth on March 14, 1879, in Germany and seeks to explain in general terms some of the monumental scientific contributions made by Einstein, a Nobel laureate and one of the world's all-time outstanding scientists.

"Einstein's Universe" is a co-production of the BBC and WGBH-TV in Boston and is funded by a grant from the IBM Corp. The film will be shown in the United States in March 1979 by Public Broadcasting Service stations.

McDonald Observatory, atop the 6,791-foot elevation Mount Locke, was selected for the primary location for the filming for several reasons, according to Dr. Harlan Smith, the observatory's director.

McDonald is the site of the lunar-laser ranging program, which is a key test of Einstein's theory of general relativity.

The research involves bouncing pulses of laser light off retroreflectors placed on the moon by Apollo astronauts. The lunar-laser team at McDonald, headed by Dr. Eric Silverberg, measures the round-trip travel time of the light to calculate with an accuracy of three inches the continuously changing distance between the earth and the moon.

McDonald is also one of the principal observatories in the world and has the 107-inch and the 82-inch reflecting telescopes and powerful high-dispersion coude spectrographs, which serve as a "window" on Einstein's universe.

Freeth, the film's producer and director, said the semi-desert area of its location made McDonald a perfect site for the special visual effects to be incorporated into the film. Animation sequences are being produced concurrently in a BBC studio in London.

Ustinov plays the role of a interested layman to whom six eminent physicists and astronomers attempt to explain, in conversational style, Einstein's universe. The cast includes Professors John A. Wheeler of UT-Austin, Kenneth Brecher and Irwin Shapiro of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Roger Penrose of the University of Oxford, Wallace Sargent of the California Institute of Technology, and Sidney Drell of Stanford Linear Accelerator Center.

When BBC crew members complete filming at McDonald later this week, they will go to California for filming footage at the Stanford Linear Accelerator and then will go to the Arecibo Observatory in Puerto Rico.

Seminary student constructs calliope of soda pop bottles

RANDLEMAN, N.C. (AP) — When Steve Bowman was a boy, he noticed that blowing across the top of an almost full soft-drink bottle gave him one sound, and blowing across an empty one gave him another.

Bowman, now 24, has translated that principle and 33 soft drink bottles into a calliope, the kind of organ that old-fashioned circuses featured when they came to town.

But Bowman's is not the large, ornate calliope of the past, powered by steam pipes. His miniature instrument, encased in plywood, uses soft-drink bottles filled with different levels of water to make the music.

It took Bowman, a student at Southeastern Seminary who works at the Pilgrim Tract Co. in Randleman, a month and a half to make the calliope by trial and error — "mostly error," he said.

The calliope consists of five one-quart bottles, five 16-ounce bottles and 23 king-size bottles linked up to produce the sounds of the circus calliope. The larger bottles have a deeper diameter and produce the lower notes to A, two octaves below middle C. While the quart bottles are empty, the king-size bottles are almost filled with water to produce higher notes ranging to F, two octaves above middle C.

The less space between the top of the bottle and the water level, the higher the note.

Each bottle is placed, according to the size and amount of water it contains, in a tray. Between the tray and the 33-key, four-octave range keyboard is a panel. Enclosed in this panel is the mechanism connecting the bottles to the keys.

When Bowman presses a key to play his favorite gospel songs, the fishing line pulls back the valve, made of metal packing strips, from an opening in the back of the panel. The air in the panel, forced through by a vacuum cleaner, then escapes through a copper pipe across the top of the bottle.

That's when the music starts. Of course, the thin notes are rather shrill and the low ones almost too soft. Dampness often makes the keys stick. But that doesn't matter to Bowman, who built the calliope not because of his love for music, but because of his love for steam power.

"I have been fascinated with steam power since I was a little boy," Bowman said. "I used to see the old steam engines at home and I always thought that type of power was incredible."

But it took many changes and innovations before the instrument which now sits on kitchen chairs produced a musical note.

String used instead of fishing lines wore away before half a song was played. Bowman also tried using an electromagnet instead of fishing line to produce an electrical current for the notes.

Finally, a one-note model of what is now the calliope worked. The rest was simple, he said.

"The day I finished it, I played it," Bowman said.

Bullock's 'media boys' have turned against him

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — "Mr. Superstar, you're going to crawl one of these days," a Dallas woman once screamed at Comptroller Bob Bullock after he had closed her restaurant for not paying taxes.

Bullock's not crawling, but he's hurting.

His "media boys" have turned against him, and he says, "I'm sitting here trying to wiggle a dagger out of my back and figure out 'Who's Brutus?' ... I thought I deserved better than that."

It was disclosed in published reports Tuesday that two former aides had told Bullock Oct. 2 he should fire deputy comptroller Ralph Wayne and then resign himself.

Bill Collier, former director of tax information, and his assistant, George Kuempel, said in a joint letter of resignation that they informed Bullock and Wayne numerous times of unspecified "actions that could be considered wrong legally or morally."

They said Bullock should resign to avoid "the inevitable scandals that will one day envelop the comptroller's office and everyone who works here."

Jim McNabb, also from the tax information division, quit on Saturday. He accused another employee of covering up information on flight logs requested by two reporters in the aftermath of the Collier-Kuempel resignation.

"They gave them (the reporters) more than they asked for," Bullock said. "The suggestion of a cover-up is ridiculous."

Collier and Kuempel had quit the Houston Chronicle to work for Bullock, and McNabb had left radio broadcasting. All got much higher salaries on their state jobs, with Collier making $32,500, Kuempel $30,000 and McNabb $24,000.

Collier-Kuempel said Bullock's recent actions "show that your arrogance toward the law and disrespect for the public trust placed in you is worse than ever."

Bullock said Collier's wife also had worked for him until she got pregnant, and he added, "Mister, you talk about a puzzled fellow, you're talking to him."

He said he had never received any spoken or written complaints from Kuempel or McNabb, but that Collier had voiced several complaints.

One was that Bullock concentrated too much office time criticizing Attorney General John Hill during Hill's successful Democratic primary race against Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Bullock says being governor "is a lifelong dream." Hill's election could bump Bullock out of real contention for eight years, but Briscoe would have been expected to serve only four years.

Bullock said Collier also told him that Jay Brummett of the comptroller's office was spending "too much time on personal business for Ralph Wayne. ... He also said he didn't like the idea of Ralph's secretary, Sherry Revier, writing (business) checks for Ralph. He said she was always busy (for Wayne) on state time."

Bullock said Collier had suggested that Bullock should spend more time in the office.

Bullock said he had spent every day from May 23 through July with his teen-age son, Bob, who was injured in a motorcycle accident.

Also, Bullock said, Collier told him "he didn't like the way I had treated Bill English." Bullock's agents closed English's Austin restaurant at lunch-time one day for allegedly failing to pay sales taxes.

Wayne, a former state senator from Plainview, acknowledged his secretary occasionally signed checks but added that he had rented a separate office and hired two employees to handle his outside business interests. Wayne said he owns radio stations in Brownwood, Marshall, Odessa and Plainview and a savings and loan institution in Tulia.

The Kuempel-Collier letter also stated that Bullock should resign because of his health.

In July 1972, two large, benign tumors were discovered while Bullock was being treated for a kidney disorder, and he had the lower third and a wedge at the top of the same lung removed. He also has emphysema, a lung disease, but persists in smoking.

He said, however, he had a hospital checkup two weeks ago and was pronounced in good health.

A Chronicle story on the flight logs said during the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, the logs indicated Bullock was the lone passenger on 47 flights in a seven-passenger King Air 100. On 26 flights, Wayne was alone.

The reports also said the dates of the flights were not recorded for the past year, but Bullock said state law does not require such information.

Bullock, 49, became comptroller in January 1975.

He served in the Texas House of Representatives in 1957-61, practiced private law for several years and then was appointed in 1967 as an assistant attorney general. He was a member of Gov. Preston Smith's inner circle in 1969-71 as an administrative assistant. Smith appointed him secretary of state in 1971.

In 1972 the Senate rejected Smith's appointment of Bullock to the state insurance board, and he stayed on as secretary of state until Jan. 1, 1973.

Reagan to speak in Midland

Former California Governor Ronald Reagan will appear in Midland Tuesday at a $100-a-person reception at the Midland Hilton.

"The reception Oct. 17 is a special affair for West Texas residents in that it is one of the few opportunities we will have to informally meet and talk with Gov. Reagan," Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo said.

"We hope that many West Texans will avail themselves of this opportunity to meet with one of the leading Republicans in our nation," said Angelo, Republican national committeeman and host chairman of the reception.

Tickets for the event are available by calling 684-4449 or 683-2715.

While in Texas, Reagan also will appear at events promoting the candidacies of state attorney general Jim Baker, Rep. Joe Robbins, candidate for state Senate Dub Duff of Odessa and state House hopeful Jim Brandon of Amarillo.

January's Super Bowl. Local sponsors of the event are the Midland Optimist Club and Rogers Ford.

Age group winners are David Danley, 8; Richard Triplitt, 9; Steven Pruitt, 10; John Wurster, 11; Fred Mills, 12; and Steve Moseley, 13.

Billy Sol Estes denied pardon

DALLAS (AP) — Convicted swindler Billy Sol Estes has been denied a presidential pardon, according to Estes' lawyer.

Morris Lindsey III, Estes' lawyer and son-in-law, said he would have a statement on the decision today. Justice Department spokesman Bob Stevenson told The Dallas Morning News the Estes application for a pardon from President Carter was denied on Sept. 27.

Estes, 52, of Abilene, was convicted of fraud in 1963 for his part in a multi-million dollar scheme involving non-existent fertilizer tanks. He was sentenced to 15 years in prison, but was paroled in 1971 after serving only part of the term.

Estes' request for a presidential pardon was filed in March Lindsey, who included character depositions from Abilene Mayor Oliver Howard and Taylor County Sheriff Jack Landrum in his petition to federal authorities.

Council reports neglected women real problem

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An estimated 26 million American women — nearly one of every three — lack the basic educational and job skills needed to survive in today's society, a presidential advisory council reported Tuesday.

The report says the worst off are "displaced homemakers," women who have lost their spouses because of death, desertion or divorce and are forced into the job market.

They are so numerous and their problems so urgent that they constitute a "hidden subculture" in American society, the council said.

Many single mothers, women over 60 and displaced homemakers lack marketable job skills, concludes the report, entitled "Neglected Women."

Many of these women may be good mothers and housekeepers, but they are ignorant of such economic realities as money management, credit, insurance and banking, the report says.

"The common denominator for all 26 million of these women is that they are caught, because they are women, in stereotypes," the report says. "They are the products of past educational and social patterns which do not apply to today's reality."

The report, written by the National Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs, says these disadvantaged women need training for well-paying jobs that offer advancement opportunities.

"They also need access to financial aid for tuition, child care, transportation, clothing and, frequently, living expenses," the report concludes.

The council recommends legislation that would provide these women with financial assistance for education programs, tax incentives for career advancement education and anti-poverty programs aimed at counseling and training.

"Of the three groups, displaced homemakers have the most urgent educational needs," the report says. "They constitute almost a hidden subculture whose existence and problems are just becoming known. ... The homemaker who is forced back into the labor market faces an array of educational, economic, social and psychological problems."

The Census Bureau does not have a category for "displaced homemakers." But 1977 census figures show there were 10 million widows and 2.8 million divorced women in the 35-to-64 age group.

Census figures also show 4.7 million households with children under 18 headed by single women, and 19 million women aged 60 and over.

Joy Simonson, executive director of the council, said it's obvious that not all these women are neglected. "But as groups, they all have needs," she said. "We're not addressing all these women, such as those in nursing homes, but we want to reach women who could benefit from educational programs."

City Altrusans hear speakers

Members of the Altrusa Club of Midland, Inc., heard two speakers, Mrs. Theo Ferguson and Mrs. Ada Phillips, when the group met in Midland Hilton.

Mrs. Ferguson represented the Midland Volunteers to Big Spring State Hospital and Mrs. Phillips, longtime Altrusa member and Midlander, discussed Altrusa classification and membership.

Mrs. Ferguson has worked 19 years with the BSSH volunteers, the most hours of anyone at the hospital with 27,000 hours.

She reported that at Christmas, a party is held on each unit at Big Spring State Hospital, with a band and serving of sandwiches, drinks and cookies. She said Grace Lutheran Church in Midland sends cookies to the hospital each week during October. The church began this project when the hospital had a patient load of 400. This has dropped to only 400, said Mrs. Ferguson. She said the decrease was due to the outpatient clinics.

Mrs. Ferguson explained that "not too much has come in" in the way of gifts and money for the Christmas of patients at the state hospital. "The need is great for both," she added.

She also explained that the hospital's swimming pool fund is short $5,000. She said the hospital's chapel was completed through donations also, since the state does not furnish funds for either project.

A rummage sale was held recently to raise funds.

Mrs. Ferguson noted the Midland volunteers have won the plaque given for having the most volunteers at Big Spring State Hospital for three out of five years it has been presented.

It was announced that gifts and money for BSSH Christmas giving must be in the hands of Loleta Guffey by Oct. 26.

Mrs. Phillips said that "classification and membership, although rather dry subjects, are the very backbone of the organization. It is like bread at a meal. It is an essential committee, even though a program on the subject is not very entertaining."

"Our classification system has been simplified and modified as of Jan. 1 of this year. We now are using a single classification based on majors only. The major represents the activities of a company, an independent firm or professional endeavor—not the position as heretofore."

"While there are no minors as such, we still have to expand a major. For instance, we have an engineer, so we have to add petroleum, chemical or whatever. So the field of activity determines the classification. The position determines the eligibility for Altrusa membership."

"Let's consider membership. We have done very well, indeed, in adding new members, but we have not reached the goal set for us by International, which is '5 get one.' Since we have 70 or so members, under this formula we need to add 14 new members this year. Our district, (District Nine, which includes all of Texas) leads in membership with the exception of District Six, which includes Illinois and Indiana, clubs where the population is greatest."

It was announced that all members will be called for weekly games at Permian Care Center, Inc., and for hosting at Sarah Brown-Dorsey Home.

Elizabeth Grimm, chairman of Altrusa Information Committee, announced her committee will meet the third Thursday night of each month at her home, 201 N. B St.

Jan Reeder of the Midland Chamber of Commerce discussed a bid presentation planned for the District Nine Conference slated this month in Sherman. The Midland club is vying for the 1979 district meeting.

Batting around insulation tips

By AL CARRELL

If your home is under-insulated, you certainly ought to bring it up to recommended R-values. If you're a do-it-yourselfer, you may find material is a little more readily available this winter as opposed to last. For most homeowners, the attic is the easiest place to add, and for many, the only place that can be insulated without special equipment and expertise. While it's OK to put different insulating materials together, remember that if you're adding, don't get the type with a facing or you'll create a vapor barrier between the two layers. Another common mistake made by the novice is to allow the insulation to cover eave vents. (A few sloppy pros have even been guilty of this, so check after they've done a job too.) If joists are running into the eave area around a vent, it will be a good idea to nail scrap lumber between these joists so that there is a barrier to protect the vents from any insulation that might be pushed too far. If the vents are covered, the circulation that would help to remove attic moisture would be cut off and condensation would do damage to your insulation and your house.

Dear Super AI:

I think it's a good idea to check weatherstripping every year before winter winds get started. My way is to rub colored blackboard chalk over the weatherstripping where it should touch doors, windows or other surfaces to seal. With the door or window then closed and reopened, a transfer of chalk dust will be made if the seal is adequate. If there is a blank spot or one that has less chalk than others, you know that's where the weatherstripping needs help. Be sure to use a contrasting color of chalk that will show up. — T.S.P.

A SUPER HINT — I recently participated in the grand opening of a new home center where some of the sale prices were really unbelievably low. A man came by with a loaded shopping cart, and after visiting for a while, he told me about his "buy-as-you-can" plan for his retirement house. He has been doing this for several years. He goes to all such sales, to salvage yards, garage sales, and is gradually picking up the things he'll need for his proposed lake house. After he bought the land, he had his plans and specs drawn up. He has his materials check list and the price list. When he finds a bargain, he grabs it up. It's not a drain on his pocketbook coming a little at a time. And when the actual construction starts, it won't be a big out-of-pocket expense or anywhere near as big as a loan. Wish I could plan ahead like that.

Dear Super AI:

I got your free sheet on how to prepare an Underwriter's Knot when installing a plug on an electrical cord. I think I have an idea that improves on it. After properly attaching the wires to the plug, I squeeze out a small amount of silicone sealant to fill in around the wires and prongs. I take care not to put in enough sealant to stick up above the edge of the plug. Then I slip the insulator over the prongs, and when the sealant sets up, I have a plug that will withstand almost any abuse. — S.P.

If you missed the FREE sheet on how to install an Underwriter's Knot in an electric plug, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request here at the paper.

SHOP TALK — I ran into a new lubricant at the National Hardware Show in Chicago. It is called Tri-Flon, and as you might guess from the name, it has Teflon in it. It acts as a penetrating liquid for any mechanical part that has frozen, and then leaves Teflon particles so the part will be lubricated when it becomes unfrozen. Look for it to show up in hardware stores before too long.

Food stamp recipients to decrease early 1979

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 400,670 households will be scratched from the food-stamp rolls during the first four months of next year as new regulations take effect, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

But slightly higher benefits are in store for most of the 4.38 million families remaining and for the more than thousands of elderly poor couples and other families expected to be attracted to the streamlined program.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland revealed the new rules, which were ordered by Congress in a massive rewriting of the Food Stamp Act. Most of the changes take effect Jan. 1.

The major change in the new rules is an end to the requirement that poor families buy their food stamps. There also are tighter eligibility standards and a requirement that many adult recipients look for work.

The law also requires increases in the benefits twice a year to keep up with rising grocery prices. Preliminary calculations indicate a 5 percent hike is coming on Jan. 1.

Bergland told a news conference that the theme of the new law and the regulations "is to eliminate those who should not be receiving food stamps, while assuring that we do get food stamps to those who are truly in need."

Under the present rules, a four-person family with monthly income of $250 after a series of deductions must come up with $71 in cash to get an allotment of $182 in coupons that can be redeemed for groceries.

Under the new rules, the same family would get $111 in coupons but not have to pay anything, assuming its adjusted income were the same.

That adjusted income may change, though. The new rules give states and counties four months to go through their files and determine whether a household can continue receiving food stamp benefits, which now average $28.37 per person each month, and to recalculate the amount.

When that process is complete, an estimated 980,156 households will find their monthly benefits cut by at least $5, but 1.16 million families should have more to spend on food, officials said.

Most of those cut from the food stamp rolls under the new regulations will have incomes that are too high, Bergland said. Others will be barred because they have assets of more than $1,750 or an automobile worth more than $4,500, both disqualifying factors.

PB Graduate Center sets women's course

The Permian Basin Graduate Center announces a one-day seminar on "A Woman's Guide to Sales Career Opportunities" will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Friday in the PBGC building at 105 W. Illinois St.

This course is designed for women who are interested in a successful sales career and for supervisors who need to understand how to maximize the potential of women on their sales force.

The course is appropriate for women at any level of a sales career, whether in a large corporation or in a small shop. Topics to be discussed will include handling sales resistance, how to implement creative ideas, how to recognize and take advantage of opportunities and how to develop a winning attitude.

Patricia Wagner, account executive, Pillsbury Co., Washington, D.C., area, will instruct the course. She has direct responsibility for sales to two major food chains in the Baltimore-Washington area, with yearly sales of $3.2 million.

Ms. Wagner, formerly Patricia Elam, is a native Midlander and a graduate of Lee High School. She attended the University of Denver before moving to the Washington, D.C., area.

Her rapid rise in a sales career is a demonstration of her dynamic personality. She first started as a sales merchandiser in 1976. While working full time, she was able to manage her home, care for her husband and three small children and attend evening classes at the University of Maryland.

Fee for the course is $15, with additional registrations from the same organization, $10. For more information or registration contact the center, 563-2311.

DEAR ABBY

No buck passes wealthy widow

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: An old friend of the family, a widow with plenty of money, does not realize that she has practically no friends because she is so tight with a dollar.

My wife and "Mrs. Cheapskate" are about the same age (75), and when Mrs. Cheapskate was laid up recently with a broken ankle, my wife did all her shopping for her, and even drove her to a doctor in another city.

As a reward, Mrs. Cheapskate treated us to lunch at a fast-food restaurant.

My wife sets a beautiful table and prepares delicious meals when we have guests. We had Mrs. Cheapskate for dinner last evening, and when we took her home, she said, in parting, "We'll have to go out to lunch soon—Dutch treat, of course!"

This woman complains that she is lonely and doesn't know what to do with her time. I say someone should tell her in plain English why she is so lonely. My wife says it would destroy our friendship and hurt her. What do you say, Abby?—NO NAME IN GLENDALE

DEAR NO NAME: I suspect you're more irked with Mrs. Cheapskate's cheapness than concerned about her loneliness.

Her lack of friends is HER problem, and at 75 she's not likely to change. Your letter causes me to wonder why you and your wife would continue to cater to a person whose friendship is clearly all take and no give.

DEAR ABBY: While cleaning our desk drawer, I came across a 1935 $5 bill from China. That was before China went Communist and became the People's Republic of China.

Can you tell me what this $5 bill is worth and where I can cash it in?—CHINESE BILL-HOLDER

DEAR BILL-HOLDER: The bill is out of circulation and cannot be cashed. But one day it might be worth much more than $5 if kept as a collector's item.

DEAR ABBY: Please publish this "help-wanted ad" in your column. It might make teenagers think twice before risking pregnancy.

HELP WANTED—FULL TIME JOB

HOURS: 24 hours a day, 365 days a year for a minimum of 18 years. No time off for weekends or holidays. You cannot quit.

DUTIES: Assume all physical, moral and financial responsibilities of another human being.

QUALIFICATIONS: Patience, compassion, understanding and mature judgment.

SALARY: None. In fact, you must plan on spending at least $3,500 a year for the privilege of taking this job.

Abby, I am only 16, and I am not ready to take the job described above. Life is too short to be tied down with a baby when I could be out having fun. Sign me. —NOT READY TO BE A PARENT

Research dispels myth of proteins

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are protein supplements a good way to build up muscle strength?—Fred G.

Dear Fred: No, they're not. This is just an old myth that modern research has long dispelled. Athletes don't need protein supplements any more than nonathletes do—for building up their muscles or for anything else. The body requires just a moderate amount of protein a day—which any well-balanced diet supplies. Any surplus is used for energy or stored as fat. But protein is not an efficient source of energy.

What an athlete does need is more calories, and the best way to get them is the complex carbohydrates in vegetables, fruits and grains.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a new parent, I need to know if it's important to have my kid immunized? If so, against what?—Mrs. C.N.

Dear Mrs. C.N.: Of the 52 million children in the United States under the age of 15, more than 20 million have not been immunized against one or more of the childhood diseases. In other words, almost 40 percent of our children are in danger of catching seven serious diseases: measles, polio, rubella (German measles), mumps, diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus.

It is important that parents understand what can happen when their children are not fully immunized. The childhood diseases can, and do, cause crippling and, sometimes, death. No matter what you may have heard, these illnesses are serious. Their complications can be terrible.

With the exception of tetanus, these diseases are also very contagious. They spread, more rapidly than most people realize, from child to child and from community to community. As long as millions of children remain unprotected against them, serious outbreaks of disease—even epidemics—will continue to occur.

It is also important that parents understand what protection vaccines give and what risks, if any, vaccines pose to their children. Generally, vaccines are among our safest and most effective medicines. Each year, about 100 million doses are given in this country, most of them to infants and children as part of their routine immunizations. Like most medicines, however, vaccines can cause side effects. These are usually mild—a slight fever, a sore arm, a mild and brief rash.

But on rare occasion they are serious, which is why vaccines should be given only by physicians or other qualified health professionals. The Public Health Service and the overwhelming majority of medical experts in this country and abroad believe that the benefits of complete immunization far outweigh the risks.

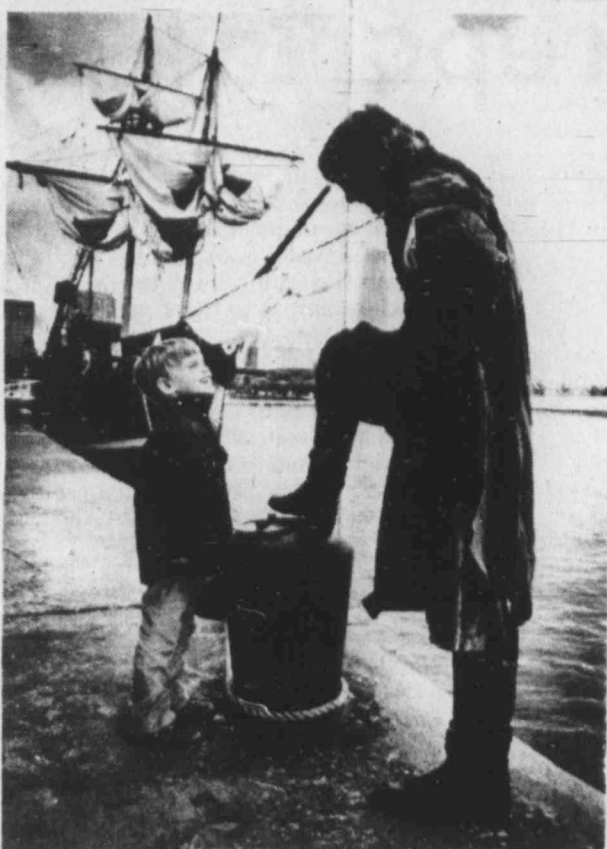

The service strongly recommends that all healthy children be immunized against all of the vaccine-preventable, childhood diseases.

Are your children fully protected? If not, what should you do about it? The decision to have your children vaccinated is yours, alone, to make. I've had my children immunized against the seven dangerous diseases.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is mumps ever fatal?—Mrs. O.P.

Dear Mrs. O.P.: Yes. Experts calculate that mumps is fatal in about 2 to 4 of every 10,000 cases. Ten to 30 deaths are reported to occur each year from the complications of mumps.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Government in action

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Lest anyone get the mistaken notion that the federal government is not keeping a sharp eye on consumer interests, take note: It has made three decisions involving celery, eggs and honorariums that can make all of us proud.

To make sure none of us gets any wrong ideas about the stalky stuff, the Food and Drug Administration has ordered that beginning next July 1, celery cannot be labeled "low-calorie" celery.

The reasoning is this: Everyone already knows celery is low in calories, and if it were labeled as such, "it would suggest that particular celery is lower in calories than other celery," the FDA said.

It may, however, be labeled, "celery, a low-calorie food."

Thank heavens they have cleared that up. All of this might not be such a problem, of course, if the FDA were not already throwing the book at the diet food industry.

It has issued new rules that specify which foods may promote themselves as "low calorie" and which are merely "reduced calorie."

Here are the guidelines so you will understand the product labels when they appear on your supermarket shelf next summer:

- Foods that promote themselves as "low calorie" must contain no more than 40 calories per serving.
- Foods that are billed as "reduced calories" can use that phrase only if they have at least one-third fewer calories than the food to which they are being compared.

But celery is not the only thing on FDA's list. Right now, it is out rounding up 6,500 cases of eggless "egg shampoo." An Illinois manufacturer made the mistake of labeling nine different brand names of shampoo as containing "two percent whole fresh egg."

The FDA said the manufacturer lied and did not put any egg in the shampoos, distributed nationally under Beagon Brands. It ordered them recalled. What WOULD we do without the FDA!

Bar fire fatal to 22

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A fire that officials said apparently was started by a gasoline-spraying drunken national guardsman swept through a downtown bar Tuesday, killing at least 22 people.

Ministry of Information officials said it was believed the guardsman doused the establishment with gasoline and set it ablaze.

The bar is located in a city center zone of small businesses and warehouses.

Emergency crews recovered the bodies of 22 people who had burned to death or were asphyxiated, and were looking for more. At least five people were injured. It was not known how many survived.

Officials said the guardsman presented himself at his barracks after the alarm was turned in.

A national guardsman is a policeman who works under a military cadre.

Cairo planners busy preparing to populate Sinai

By ELIAS ANTAR

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — For centuries, the Egyptians deliberately neglected their Sinai Peninsula, a barren, desert-like place. But now that they are getting it back after 11 years of Israeli occupation, they talk of spending billions of dollars on it. Scientists and planners in Cairo are putting together the requirements of a Sinai master plan to develop agriculture and fishing, tourism and mineral industries, including oil. As it is gradually implemented, thousands of Egyptian farmers will move out of the overcrowded Nile Valley to settle in the Sinai, tourists will come, and increased oil production will propel Egypt into Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, officials here say. One reason for the new interest in the Sinai is that President Anwar Sadat is personally encouraging a drive to move Egyptians out of the narrow crowded Nile Valley and into new desert settlements. Another is the hope that a populated and well-developed Sinai would inevitably have ties and mutual interests with border regions in Israel, acting as a bridge between the two countries and a deterrent to hostilities by either side. From the time of Moses and the Pharaohs, Sinai was a natural barrier against invasion of the Nile Valley by the peoples of Mesopotamia and Palestine. Its wastelands and narrow mountain passes would deter an enemy, or at least delay it long enough for Egypt to muster its defenses. It was left largely untouched for that reason. But this proved wrong several times in ancient history, and most recently in 1967 when Israeli forces capture it's peninsula in six days. Now, under the Camp David accords, Israel is to make a first withdrawal within six months, and a final pullout in two to three years. Situated strategically between Africa and Asia, the Sinai is a triangle 260 miles long and 150 miles wide at the top, with the tip pointing south into the Red Sea. Its northern coastline is on the Mediterranean, and its western limit runs along the Suez Canal. "Sinai is just right for development," said Dr. Gamal Abdel Samie, deputy head of the Egyptian Academy of Scientific Research, who has coordinated a report on the future of the peninsula. "It has a fair climate, its features provide good sites for agriculture, it has adequate groundwater and a long coastline." About 15,000 acres already are under cultivation in a part of Sinai recovered by Egypt under an interim agreement with Israel in 1975. Samie said half a million acres — about 8 percent of all of Egypt's present arable land — could be cultivated fairly soon. Water would be piped from the Nile, across the Suez Canal and into the desert. Already, a 1.7-mile road tunnel is being built under the Suez Canal, carrying two-lane traffic and large pipes for drinking and irrigation water. South of the Mediterranean coastal town of Arish, Samie said, there is enough rain and groundwater to help turn another half million acres of desert into arable land in a long-range period.

Conservative Crane continues campaign for GOP nomination

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The square-jawed Republican congressman from the Illinois prairie who wants to be president, Philip Crane, says American voters see their country's foreign policy like everything else — in terms of "me, here, now."

In other words, says Crane, the most important question for any individual is what impact an issue is likely to have on his or her personal life and, most especially, on the pocketbook.

Americans may praise President Carter for achieving a Middle East summit agreement, he adds, but it isn't the sort of thing that will win votes while inflation remains the nation's most important problem.

"The viability of our economy is the No. 1 issue, and it is intimately tied to national defense and our ability to play a strong leadership role in the world," Crane said in an interview.

"But even at the height of the Vietnam war, the war itself was never the main issue. Me, here, now — stick to that, and you will have the people's interest. Anything beyond our shores is an abstraction."

In a sense, it was an expression of the strategy Crane employs as he travels about the country, talking to businesspeople, labor, students, retired persons and ethnic groups in pursuit of the Republican Party's 1980 presidential nomination.

This week, the 47-year-old lawmaker is embarking on another such trip, an 8,000-mile flying tour of the U.S. heartland and some Southern states where political conservatives like himself are seeking office at the local, state and national levels in the November elections.

Crane is a conservative ideologue, a former university history teacher and a writer of books presenting conservative views of the United States and the world.

The most recent was a lengthy condemnation of the Panama Canal treaties, which Crane opposed on grounds the documents would risk giving the Soviet Union eventual control over the waterway.

While his unsuccessful campaign against the canal treaties gave Crane some valuable national exposure, he has yet to be taken seriously as a presidential contender by many people except his own most dedicated followers.

Even so, his candidacy could pose tactical problems for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"Crane will make Reagan look like a moderate," said one of the Californian's campaign strategists. "If Crane stays in, Reagan could be forced into a position somewhat closer to the center."

While the Reagan followers don't believe Crane could defeat their candidate in a head-to-head race, there is concern that his youthful image could cause problems for Reagan, whose age — he will be 69 in 1980 — is certain to be an issue.

Crane says he is not making age an issue because he doesn't think it is important. Besides, his aides figure it will come up anyhow.

Most Texans vote 'nay' on judge selection change

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 28 through Oct. 4.

HOUSE
FEDERAL JUDGES. Adopted, 206 for and 151 against, an amendment advancing the idea that federal judges be picked more on the basis of legal competence than political connections. It was attached to HR 12005, a Justice Department spending bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

The attorney general would be required to identify potentially outstanding federal judges and submit their names to the President and Senate as suggested nominees to fill district court vacancies. Presently, with senators having the major voice in nominating federal judges to serve in their respective states, judgeships frequently are handed out as political rewards.

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., a sponsor, said that by allowing public scrutiny and Justice Department participation to enter the selection process, the amendment "would advance merit selection of district judges."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., an opponent, said that under the Constitution the selection of federal judges "is the President's responsibility, not the attorney general's...."

Members voting "yea" favored establishing a formal procedure for merit-selection of federal judges.

Reps. James Collins, R-3, Bill Archer, R-7, Richard White, D-16, and Bob Gammage, D-22, voted "yea."

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5, Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake Pickle, D-10, Jack Hightower, D-13, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Barbara Jordan, D-18, George Mahon, D-19, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, and Abraham Kazen, D-23, voted "nay."

Reps. Olin Teague, D-6, W.R. Poage, D-11, James Wright, D-12, John Young, D-14, Omar Burleson, D-17, Robert Krueger, D-21, and Dale Milford, D-24, did not vote.

PAY RAISE? Adopted, 284 for and 111 against, an amendment limiting to 5.5 percent the pay raise to be received this fiscal year by non-military blue-collar employees of the executive branch. The cap was attached to the conference report on HR 12930, an appropriations bill later approved and sent to President Carter for his signature.

Federal blue-collar wages automatically are raised each year at a rate comparable to raises received by private-sector blue-collar workers. Without this amendment, this year's hike for the 130,000 non-defense blue-collar workers would have far exceeded 5.5 percent. The Defense Department's estimated 470,000 blue-collar workers were bound by the 5.5 percent cap this fiscal year by previous legislation.

Rep. George Mahon, D-Tex., a supporter, called the 5.5 percent hike "equitable" and said it "will reduce the federal budget in excess of $200 million this fiscal year."

Rep. Herbert Harris, D-Va., an opponent, said the pay cap treats federal blue-collar workers "with something less than justice in this period of real family budget crunch."

Members voting "yea" favored limiting federal blue-collar pay hikes to 5.5 percent in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

3 million

Texans to vote

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg predicted Tuesday at least 3 million Texans will vote Nov. 7 — about 50 percent of those registered.

"I hope it will be more than that, maybe 60 percent," Goldberg told a news conference preceding the first meeting of the new State Democratic Executive Committee, "but I think there will be a turnout of at least 50 percent and the best estimate I have seen on total voter registration is about 6 million."

Archer, Brooks, Poage, Wright, Burleson, Jordan, Mahon and Gammage voted "yea." Eckhardt, Pickle, de la Garza, White, Gonzalez and Kazen voted "nay."

Wilson, Teague, Hightower, Young, Krueger and Milford did not vote.

bill later passed and sent to the White House for enactment.

Members voting "yea" favored an exception in immigration policy to let 15,000 Cambodians enter the U.S.

Wilson, Pickle, Hightower, de la Garza, Jordan, Gonzalez and Kazen voted "yea." Hall, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Archer and White voted "nay." Teague, Eckhardt, Brooks, Poage, Wright, Young, Burleson, Mahon, Krueger, Gammage and Milford did not vote.

SENATE
ERA. Rejected, 44 for and 54 against, an amendment to allow state legislatures that have ratified the Equal Rights Amendment to rescind their approval. It was proposed to a bill extending for three years (until June 30, 1982) the deadline by which states must vote the proposed constitutional amendment up or down. The extension was headed for final passage and enactment. So far, 35 states have approved the ERA — three short of the three-fourths required for ratification — and supporters say that without the extension ERA is doomed.

This vote was, in effect on the merits of the ERA, for supporters said that to allow any of the 35 states to rescind their ratification would also doom the constitutional amendment. The ERA says: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be abridged or denied by the United States or any state on account of sex." Virtually all senators voting "nay" favor the ERA.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, and John Tower, R, voted "yea."

Health, Education and Welfare, at a projected cost of $15 million through fiscal 1981. Building upon the existing President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, the agency would, in part, award grants to encourage state physical fitness programs and fund research into sports medicine. The vote came during consideration of S 2474, a health bill later passed and sent to the House.

Senators voting "yea" favored the new agency. Bentsen voted "nay."

Tower did not vote. "BLACKLISTING." Killed, 45 for and 35 against, a plan to have Congress receive and debate an Administration "blacklist" of countries ineligible to receive Export-Import Bank loans. The list was to have singled out countries whose actions, such as repressing human rights or nurturing terrorism, are deemed particularly offensive to the U.S. national interest. Such a list still may be compiled, but as a result of this vote it will not be released publicly for debate in the Senate and House. Senators voting "yea" did not want Congress to debate a foreign-trade blacklist. Bentsen voted "yea." Tower did not vote.

U.S. must return tax to Puerto Ricans

By KENNETH BREDEMEIER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A U.S. District Court judge here Tuesday ordered the federal government to return more than $105 million in federal gasoline excise taxes to the Puerto Rican government.

The taxes have been collected over the last four years on gasoline refined on the Caribbean island and then shipped to the United States. But Judge Oliver Gasch ruled that Puerto Rico was entitled to the money under terms of the 1917 Jones Act, which said that taxes collected on goods

No growth charged

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John Connally says President Carter's emphasis on conservation in national water and energy policies is a "no-growth" attitude.

Connally, a former U.S. treasury secretary mentioned as a possible GOP presidential contender in 1980, made the statement in a speech Tuesday before receptive delegates to the 47th annual National Water Resources Association convention.

The blasts by Connally were greeted by thundering applause from about 500 delegates, who had earlier heard NWRA President Hubert G. White blast Carter for vetoing the Public Works Bill that included several reservoir projects.

The Carter administration has failed to establish a national goal of full development of water resources, Connally said, thus resulting in "pork-barrel" reservoir projects.

"I do not like pork-barrel projects, but neither do I accept the tenor of 'hit lists' (by the administration)," he added.

The Republican leader also said he was concerned with what he called growing governmental regulation designed to slow or stop water resource development.

One way that is being done, Connally charged, is by expanding the Endangered Species Act to include other species that could stop construction of many public works projects.

Gas raise gets okay

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lone Star Gas Co. received authority from the Texas Railroad Commission Tuesday to raise natural gas rates to customers in and around Irving for the second time since August.

The commission decided that a previous rate order did not give Lone Star sufficient revenues from the Irving area.

Lone Star raised rates under an Aug. 28 interim rate order to $2.51 for the first thousand cubic foot (mcf) of gas and $2.02 per mcft thereafter.

Under the new order, customers will pay $2.53 for the first mcft and $2.04 thereafter.

In another case, the commission agreed to reconsider its order classifying Gulf Oil Corp. as a gas utility subject to the state's gross receipts tax.

During a public hearing, the commission heard testimony that Gulf Oil Corp. has used portions of its West Texas pipeline to transport natural gas to paying customers. However, Gulf officials say the particular pipeline involved is under lease and no longer used by Gulf.

Virtues extolled

ATLANTA (AP) — Businessmen promoting a 3,000-pound breeding bull in the basement of an Atlanta hotel competed with American junk food franchisers, while a Canadian businessman extolled the virtues of a $100,000 drilling machine.

In each case, the sales pitch was directed at oil-rich Arab business and government officials in town Tuesday for the "Petromarkets '79" conference.

More than 300 exhibitors were on hand for the five-day trade show, which began Monday. They are seeking a share of the billions of dollars the Arab world spends in the United States each year.

Enticing Arab shoppers were displays ranging from mundane machine tools to more exotic whirlpool baths, swimming pools and travel homes. One could also shop for a country estate or a land development project.

Food and agribusiness are among the fastest growing areas in U.S. trade to the Arab world, said Frank Lennon, a trade show official. He noted increased demand for canned and frozen foods in supermarkets springing up throughout the Mideast.

"As these countries develop, they acquire a taste for such things as pizza," said Lennon. In recent weeks, he said, he has been approached by businessmen from three Arab nations seeking franchises for one U.S. hamburger chain.

Many exhibitors complained Tuesday was a "slow day," but they said they hoped business would pick up before the trade show, sponsored by the Joint Mideast American Business Conference Inc. of New York, ends Saturday.

In an address to the conference, Peter Hale of the U.S. Commerce Department said boosting U.S. sales to the Mideast is an "important key" to reducing the nation's multi-billion-dollar balance of payments deficit, which has been swollen by massive increases in Arab oil prices imposed in 1973 and 1974.

In 1977, the U.S. imported an estimated $19.9 billion worth of oil and other commodities from the Mideast and North Africa, while selling about $12.3 billion worth of goods to those nations, Hale said.

Although total U.S. sales to the Arab world are on the rise — totaling about $14 billion this year — Hale said the U.S. share of the import markets in some Arab nations, including Iran, is slipping.

Cotton well potentials

Cotton Petroleum Corp., operating from Midland, has completed its No. 1-38 University in the Wink, South area field of Winkler County, four miles south of Wink.

Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 11 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations opposite the Fusselman from 16,579 to 16,709 feet.

Location is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 38, block 21, University Lands survey. Total depth is 18,495 feet and 5-inch liner is set at 16,880 feet.

Land act described as two-faction contest

By CECIL D. ANDRUS.
Special to The Los Angeles Times

The debate over the Alaska National Interest Lands Act, now before the Senate, has been characterized as a contest between developers and conservationists. That description misses the point: There is no question that Alaska's resources will be developed. The question is what fraction of the federal land in Alaska will be protected.

The Carter administration has proposed establishment of 92.5 million acres of new or expanded conservation areas on federal lands in Alaska. This would leave more than 250 million acres of state, federal and private land still available for development.

The proposal stems from the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971, which authorized the secretary of the interior to make conservation recommendations for Alaska. Congress gave itself until this Dec. 18 to put the proposals into law.

Due to a carefully planned strategy of delay by Alaska's congressional delegation, the House did not vote on lands-protection bill until last May, and the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee did not send its version to the Senate until late last week. Now, with only three days left before adjournment, it is questionable whether this vital legislation will receive the attention it deserves, either in this session or in a possible year-end lame-duck session. If Congress does not act, President Carter and I will exercise executive authority to keep the lands in question secure until protective legislation is adopted.

The administration proposals for Alaska were based on two guiding principles: the protection of nationally important resources and — where possible — of entire watersheds. Using these principles, we pared our proposals down to 92.5 million acres, often totally ignoring areas that would be targeted for national-park status anywhere else in the country.

We consulted with virtually every group with an important interest in Alaska's future. The result is that the vast majority of Alaska's highest-quality hydrocarbon and hard-rock mineral resources line outside our proposal areas. And more than 90 percent of Alaska will remain open to hunting if the state and native landowners agree.

But, despite our best efforts, the proposals have come under some of the most vitriolic attacks that I have ever seen during my years of public life.

Crude spill reported

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Fire officials kept some families from their homes throughout the night while workers cleaned up about 40,000 gallons of spilled gasoline on the city's sparsely-populated east side.

Chief M.L. Coleman estimated about 200 persons were evacuated, but only the residents living nearest a million-gallon tank at a Texaco refinery were not allowed to return home. The spill from one tank into a ditch containing the large tank was reported about 8 p.m. Monday.

PB Center sets classes

"How to Manage People at Work" will be offered at the Permian Basin Graduate Center from 7 to 9 p. m. Thursday, starting this week.

The instructor will be Marion Kimberly.

The course is designed for new managers, men or women, moving into management positions, or those with unresolved "people problems" within their organization.

The course explores the skills needed in understanding and motivating others; in controlling and disciplining workers; in communicating effectively; and helps in dealing with conflict.

Ms. Kimberly received her B.A. degree from Mt. Holyoke College and her M. A. in Community Counseling from The University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

LEASE COURSE

A session on "Title Opinions, Curative Materials, and How to Acquire a Valid Oil and Gas Lease" will be offered Thursday from 7 to 10 p. m. by the Permian Basin Graduate Center.

Robert C. Bledsoe, attorney and partner in Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe, Morrow & Dawson, will be the instructor. He received his B.B.A. and L.L.B. degrees from The University of Texas at Austin and has practiced oil and gas law 23 years.

The fee for the session is $20, and the class will meet in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois St., Midland.

The fee for the Kimberly course is $60 for all sessions. It too will be held in the Graduate Center Building.

Former Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel waged an expensive — and apparently unsuccessful — primary campaign for governor of Alaska by running against our proposals. But it looks as though even a majority of Alaska's Republicans don't buy his argument that "American industry has learned more in the past 10 years than the environmentalists have learned — ever." (Ed. — Hickel lost by 101 votes to Gov. Jay S. Hammond, and is suing for a new election.)

The House's 277-31 vote last May for a lands bill even more ambitious than the administration proposal indicated that people in the "lower 48" may be tiring of the constant refrain of "more" from some quarters in Alaska, and from Alaska-oriented industry. Alaska has already received enormous wealth from the United States, but some want even more at the expense of our nation's last remaining wildlands — land belonging to all Americans — and at the expense of Alaskans who value what remains of their lifestyle.

The history of legislation for Alaska in modern times is the history of development legislation: —In 1959 a generous nation gave Alaska 103 million acres as its statehood grant. This is 27 percent of the land within the state, far more either in absolute or proportional terms than any other state ever received. —In 1971, Congress settled the aboriginal claims of Alaska's natives — Eskimos, Indians and Aleuts — with a just and generous grant of 44 million acres and nearly $1 billion in cash. —In 1974, Alaskans were back again, seeking an exemption from the National Environmental Policy Act in order to begin immediate construction on the trans-Alaska pipeline.

The Native Claims Act, which also contained the section authorizing federal establishment of conservation areas, was endorsed by every Alaska official elected statewide, including then-Gov. Hickel. One paragraph of conservation legislation in return for a whole development bill — including clear title for the pipeline route — must have seemed like a small price at the time.

Now that millions of dollars in Prudhoe Bay oil money are flowing into the state treasury every day, many of those same Alaskans want to rewrite history. To listen to them, you would think that language written seven years ago to insure Alaska's economic future was part of some wily conservationist conspiracy to throttle the state's economy. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Our proposals are fair. They protect Alaskan opportunities to use the land in traditional, nondestructive ways, including the use of planes and motorboats in wilderness areas.

We have no intention, as some have charged, of turning Alaska into some sort of wilderness playground for the rich. And equally we will not allow it to become a private preserve for a handful of rape-run-and-run developers. The crown jewels of Alaska's spectacular scenic and living resources will be protected for all Americans.

So if Congress is unable to act, President Carter and I will. Among the authorities available to the administration are: —The Antiquities Act of 1906, which allows the president to create National Monuments by proclamation. —Section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act (the Bureau of Land Management Organic Act), which directs the secretary of the interior to study for wilderness all roadless areas over 5,000 acres under the bureau's jurisdiction. Right now, I think most of Alaska would qualify, but I would have 13 years to complete such a study.

Whatever actions we take, though, we will make sure that Alaska's rural-subsistence way of life is protected. The price for inaction would be too high. So we will keep the door open for Congress to act in all Americans' interest in Alaska.

Gilliam's death inspires Dodgers

By THOMAS BOSWELL
 The Washington Post
 LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers knew they would play with one extra man in Tuesday night's opener of the diamond jubilee World Series. After all, they would be allowed to use a designated hitter.

What they did not know was that they would have an 11th man in their quest to beat the New York Yankees.

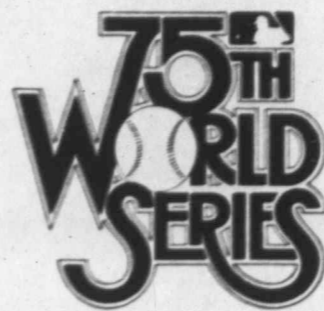

That man, unquestionably present in spirit, was former Coach Jim (Junior) Gilliam, who died on the eve of this Series.

TWO OF Gilliam's favorite pupils, Dave Lopes and Dusty Baker delivered their eulogy with their bats in the Dodgers' 11-5 testimonial triumph over last year's world Champions.

LOS ANGELES took a 7-0 lead after five innings, all runs courtesy of the grieving Lopes and Baker. Lopes followed a second-inning Baker homer with a two-run blast later in the inning, plus a three-run homer in the fourth. Baker then set up the seventh run with a hit-and-run single.

Tommy John won this opener of the 75th Series, and the 10th meeting between the Yanks and Dodgers. However, he will not forget that Series Superman, Reggie Jackson, who had two singles and a 450-foot homer off him.

There seems little possibility that this will not be remembered as the Wake Series. All Dodgers wear black No. 19 arm patches. Roy Campanella threw out the first ball, and the sixth game here next Tuesday would have been Gilliam's 50th birthday. That 11th man is not likely to disappear.

The Dodgers proved immediately that their dedication to this Series to their dead coach, Jim Gilliam, was in earnest. The two Dodgers most profoundly moved by Gilliam's death have been captain Dave Lopes and Dusty Baker. Lopes was Gilliam's protege at second base, while Baker was Gilliam's pet project as hitting coach.

BOTH PLAYERS were spectacular in the playoffs, talking daily about the tips Gilliam had given them, the way "The Devil" was helping them to do incredible things. Against Philadelphia, Lopes had a single, double, triple and two homers in the first two games. Baker merely hit .467, a league championship series record.

Tuesday night the inspired Lopes and Baker continued their testimonial to Gilliam.

They were aided, however, by New York starter Ed Figueroa, who continued his perfect record of being blasted from the mound in every postseason start of his career.

In three playoff and two Series starts, Figueroa has a 7.11 earned-run average. Those numbers are only lucky in Las Vegas.

Figueroa has always had a reputation for being too high strung, too serious in crucial situations. His vow to become the first Puerto Rican to win 20 games apparently contributed to a bad September in 1977 when he finished 19-10.

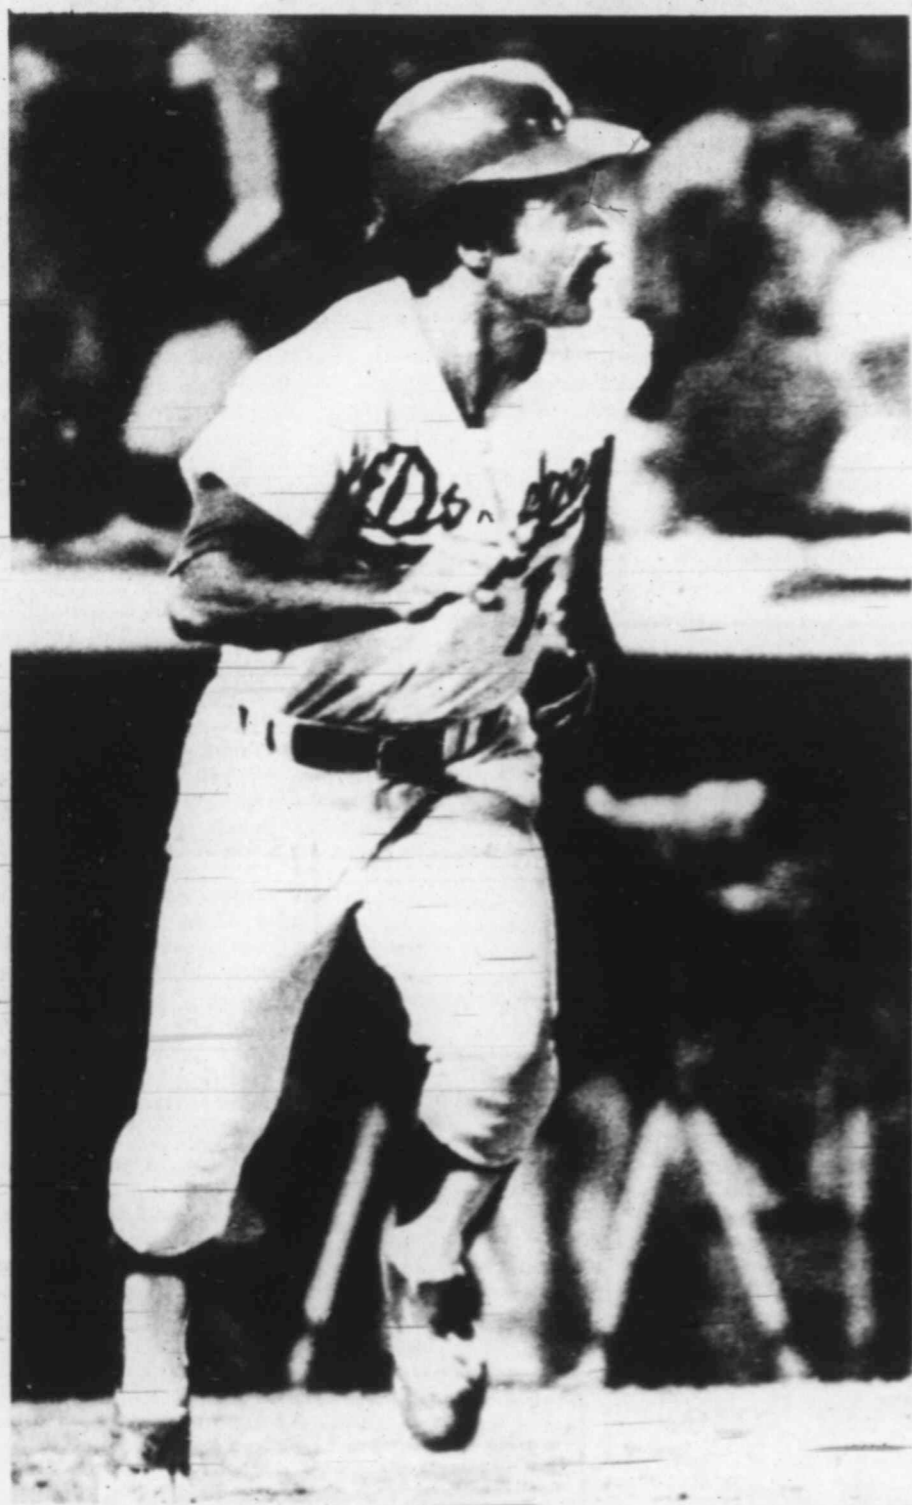

THIS YEAR Figueroa seemed to have mastered the pressure, finishing the season with eight straight wins and a 2.13 era in his last 18 starts under Manager Bob Lemon, to end the year with a 20-9 mark and 2.99 era.

"Lem has let me pitch every

Los Angeles opens Series with a bang

Lopes slams two home runs to topple Yankees by 11-5

Davey Lopes of the Dodgers watches second homer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Davey Lopes, the team captain, showed the way with a pair of home runs and some rousing exuberance around the bases as the Los Angeles Dodgers began their emotional campaign to capture the 1978 World Series title.

Supplying the power from his lead-off position, Lopes keyed a pair of three-run innings with a two-run homer and a three-run blast, leading the National League champs to an 11-5 opening-game victory over the defending world champion New York Yankees Tuesday night.

As he rounded first base in the second inning, Lopes raised his right fist toward the sky. When he passed the bag following homer No. 2 in the fourth inning, he thrust both arms in the air.

"Yeah I was thinking of Jim," said Lopes, the fiery Dodger second baseman, referring to longtime Dodger coach Jim Gilliam, who died Sunday night after three weeks in a coma following a stroke. "He meant so much to me."

"I know Gilliam is up there watching us. The Dodgers don't have to beat just 25 of us. With Gilliam, they have to beat 50 of us."

"I mean that Gilliam's spirit is in each one of us. We're trying to do our damndest to win this thing for him. If you look out there closely, you'll see Jim Gilliam in all of the holes in the field."

Gilliam was to be buried today and Lopes, one of his favorite pupils, was expected to be one of the pallbearers.

"I know Gilliam is up there watching us. The Dodgers don't have to beat just 25 of us. With Gilliam, they have to beat 50 of us."

It wasn't enough against left-hander Tommy John's baffling sinkerball. Jackson, who homered on his last three pitches in the Yanks' triumphant Game 6 last year, singled his first time up Tuesday night, then grounded out. In his third at-bat, he creamed John's fastball, giving him six homers in his last four Series games. Yankee immortal Lou Gehrig held the record of five in four games spanning the 1928 and 1932 Fall Classics.

"Lou Gehrig was one of the alltime greats," said Jackson. "I'm just one of the faces in the crowd. Maybe a little more recognizable."

John, who had his Dodger infielders eating ground balls until he tired late in the game, said Los Angeles' 7-0 lead entering the seventh caused him to change his pitching pattern.

"I can tell you this, Reggie wouldn't have gotten that pitch if the game were close," said John, who was victimized by some shoddy fielding that made three of the five Yankee runs unearned.

Lopes' two homers and a solo shot by Dusty Baker had provided Los Angeles with its early edge.

Yankees rely on Catfish to even up World Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The defending champion New York Yankees are leaving it up to Catfish Hunter to put them back in the World Series chase.

The Yankees, down 1-0 after losing the first game 11-5 Tuesday night, send the 32-year-old Hunter, a veteran of six previous World Series, against the Los Angeles Dodgers to-night in Game 2.

It's a different Hunter, however, than the flame thrower who once helped the Oakland A's win three straight Fall Classics. He has a chronic shoulder injury and he never really knows until he starts pitching how things will go.

Hunter has no illusions about his job.

"I'm a control pitcher now," said Hunter, who once signed the richest free agent contract in the history of baseball.

"I can't throw it by them," Hunter admitted. "I've got to try and hit the corners."

Hunter said Yankees' Manager Bob Lemon came to him Monday and asked if he felt ready to pitch Game 2.

"I told him I was ready and he said, 'Okay, you're my pitcher Wednesday.'"

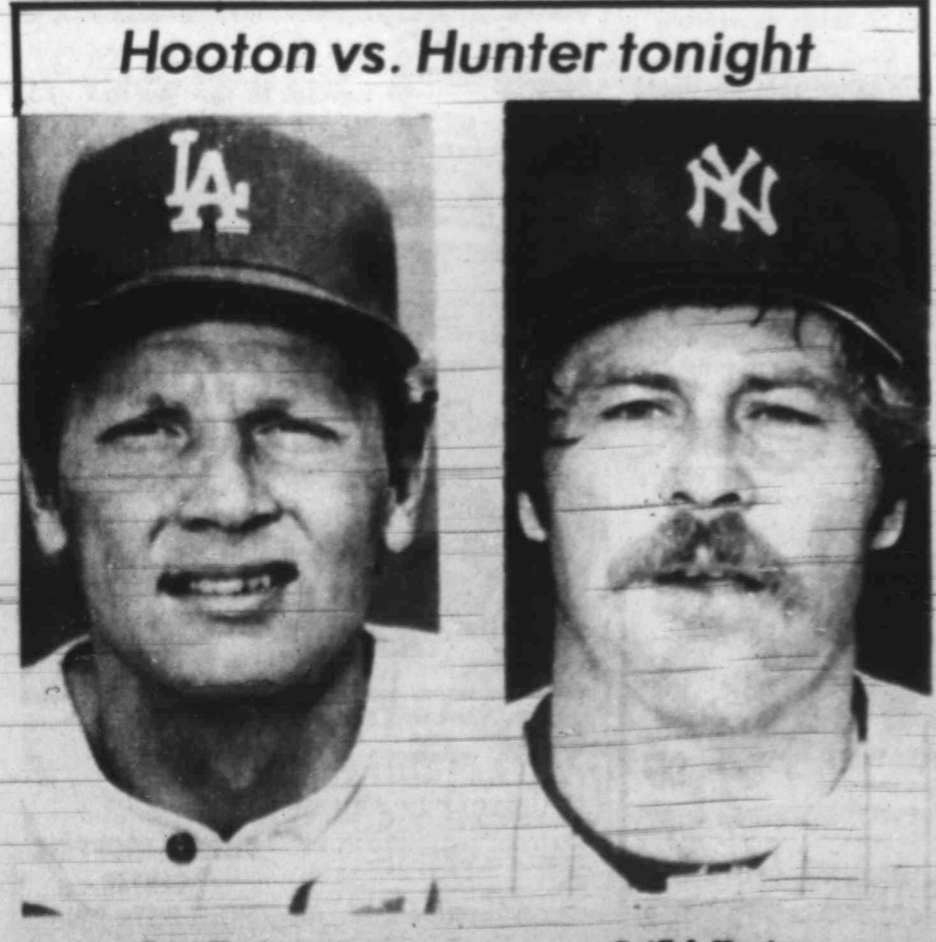

After all his World Series performances, including last year when he started and was knocked out and later worked in relief, is Hunter nervous?

"I still get a little nervous," Hunter confessed. "Especially in the first couple of innings. You have to find the corners or you won't be in there long. I don't care who you are."

Then he offered the usual World Series cliché.

"We'd like to leave here with a split. Any team is better in its own ball park. The Dodgers are better here and we're better in our park," Hunter said.

The middle three games of the Series are scheduled for Yankee Stadium in New York over the week-

LOU PINIELLA (6) of the Yankees, is forced into double play by teammate Thurman Munson in first inning of opening game of World Series in Dodger Stadium Tuesday night. L.A.'s Bill Russell fires to first for twin killing as Davey Lopes watches play. The Dodgers won, 11-5. (AP Laserphoto).

fourth day," said Figueroa. "Not every seventh or eighth day like Billy Martin did."

In the last Series, Martin skipped over Figueroa, never using him and choosing Mike Torrez to work the sixth game when Figueroa wanted to pitch. Figueroa caused a flap, threatening to jump the team and go home to Puerto Rico if he was not wanted or needed.

THE YANKS would have been better off had "DNP" (did not play) appeared next to Figueroa's name. In the first he escaped disaster, after Bill Russell and Steve Garvey singled, who Ron Cey's blast was caught a foot from the top of the right field wall by Lou Piniella, who crashed into the fence but held the ball.

That was just a reprieve. Baker opened the second inning by belting a 1-2 meatball over the 370 mark in left. The two-strike pitch was a classic mistake — a limp slider down the middle.

Mickey Rivers followed with a blunder just as bad. On Rick Monday's hard liner, Rivers' pursuit was nonchalant. When the ball hooked, Rivers could not recover, dropped the ball after a dive at it and handed Monday a two-base hit.

AFTER LEE Lacy fled out, Steve Yeager tried bunting twice, botched it, then grounded into a double play. But Figueroa looked that gift horse in the mouth.

One of Gilliam's hitting adages was that a batter should seldom swing at the first pitch except in certain emotional situations — after a homer, or after a double play. Gilliam felt that in those situations, the pitcher would feel unusually mad or unusually confident and would lay a fastball down the middle in either case.

Lopes followed that advice, jumping on Figueroa's first pitch and blasting it over the 3750 foot sign for a two-run homer to make the score 3-0. The Yanks then replaced their 20-game winner with reliever Ken Cey.

Lopes pumped his fist, making the No. 1 sign — and not for the last time. When the crowd of 55,997, largest in Dodger Stadium history (by two) called Lopes out for an ovation, the Dodger captain appeared to have tears in his eyes.

The Yanks' best chance to make this game came in the third when Fred Stanley doubled and reached third with one out. However, L.A. starter Tommy John got Rivers to ground out and Roy White to whiff to end the scoreless inning.

IN THE fourth, after Rick Monday walked and Yeager reached base when Bucky Dent made a spectacular stop but pegged the force throw past second, Lopes stepped in against Cey.

This time the 170-pounder, who has averaged just one homer every 33 at bats in the majors, picked on the second pitch and lined it over the 385-foot sign in left center. Lopes' three-run blast made the score 6-0 and gave him five RBI, the same Reggie Jackson had in the final '77 Series game.

Baker was back at work in the next inning. After Cey's infield hit, Baker smoked a hit-and-run liner to right, moving Cey to third. From there he scored on Clay's wild pitch to make the L.A. lead 7-0.

With his three hits Tuesday night, Baker is 22 for 57 in the last two postseasons.

One Yankee was not about to go home early. Jackson opened the seventh with a swing that made every other blow of the night seem puny. His home run on John's 3-1 pitch was a monstrous blast off the base of the back wall of the Yankee bullpen — about 450 feet.

Of Jackson's six homers in his last four Series games this might have been the longest, although his game five blow here last year and his finale of game six were both in the same tape-measure range.

The old record for homers in four consecutive Series games was five, set by Lou Gehrig in 1928.

Before the seventh inning was over, Dent had singled home two runs to cut the deficit to 7-3.

THE DODGERS were hardly finished. They added three runs of their own in the bottom of the seventh as an answer.

Phillies refund tickets

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Yankees battle in the World Series, Philadelphia Phillies' fans are doing what they have done for the past three years.

They are returning their World Series tickets for refunds.

For the last three years, the Phillies have lost in the National League playoffs, causing frustrated fans to trek to a Philadelphia bank to reclaim money spent on the Series tickets, which all playoff teams are allowed to print.

"I wish I could have used them," Ann Robinson said Tuesday as she returned tickets worth $396 to Girard Bank. "I never have been to a World Series before. I had tickets to the seventh game in 1950." (The Phillies were swept by the Yankees in four straight that year).

Robinson said some of the money belongs to her friends and relatives and the rest will be used to buy winter clothes.

Joe Gross of Quakertown, Pa., was disappointed, but not surprised to be in line for a refund. A long-suffering fan, he'd been there in 1976 and 1977. In 1976 the Phillies lost three straight games to Cincinnati Reds and in 1977 and again this year the Phillies lost three-of-four to the Dodgers.

"I kind of expected it. After two years, you get pessimistic," Gross said. Yet Gross said he'd buy tickets next year if the Phillies win their division again. "One of these years they'll have to make it."

Robert Somers of Radnor was one of the few who seemed disgusted with the team. "They have to change their lineup next year," he said.

Ticket-takers gave people their money, nodding at their quips of "wish I could have used these" or "see you next year," while handing them cash for the $12 and $17 seats.

The Phillies ticket office expects to return $3.4 million for the 240,000 tickets it sold to four Series games before the Nov. 13 deadline.

Typical of the loyal Phillies' fan was Ted Katz of Philadelphia. He turned in eight tickets, pocketed $136 and said, "I'll use it for my season tickets next year. I've returned tickets three years in a row now but I still have confidence in them. They're giving 100 percent. Can't ask for more than that."

Morris Packer of suburban Philadelphia was another fan not bothered by the playoff loss to the Dodgers Saturday.

"Next year, we'll get it, we'll get it. You wait and see."

Women may enter Yank lockerroom

NEW YORK (AP) — Women reporters will be admitted to locker rooms at Yankee Stadium during the World Series, but they can still be banned from the Dodgers' clubhouse in Los Angeles.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn lost his battle Tuesday in the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to secure an injunction barring women from the Yankee clubhouse. Two weeks ago, a federal judge ruled that women could not be excluded from the Yankees' dressing room or their visiting team locker room.

But that decision, which was upheld Tuesday, applies only to the Yankees clubhouse.

The Yankees played the first game of the series Tuesday in Los Angeles and will play there again tonight with the traditional ban against newswomen in the dressing area, according to Kuhn's attorney, Jess Climenko.

The issue arose when Time, Inc., brought suit against Kuhn on behalf of Melissa Ludtke Lincoln, a reporter for Sports Illustrated. U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley ruled in that case that the ban against women in the locker room was discriminatory. She proposed several plans for accommodating newswomen in the locker rooms.

Kuhn fought the order as "an improper intrusion into a proprietary business."

His attorney argued that Kuhn "feels baseball is a family game." The remark prompted Judge Walter Mansfield to reply at Tuesday's hearing: "The family includes women as well as men."

Hooton says five other Yankees hard to get out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burt Hooton was impressed with Reggie Jackson's tape-measure home run in the first game of the World Series, but the Los Angeles Dodger pitcher says the New York Yankees have harder men to get out.

The right-handed Hooton gets his chance against the Yanks tonight after the Dodgers downed the American League champions 11-5 in the Series opener Tuesday night.

Jackson, who homered three times in the final World Series game of 1977 when the Yankees downed the Dodgers in six games, tagged a fastball an estimated 430 feet in the seventh inning after the Dodgers had built a 7-0 lead.

"Reggie's a muscleman, their most impressive hitter," said the right-handed Hooton. "I was impressed when he hit that one into the back of the bullpen. But the Yankees have five guys who always are hard outs ... like Thurman Munson and Lou Piniella are harder outs than Jackson, I think."

Hooton didn't chart the game because, he says, "Tommy John and I pitch differently. It wouldn't do me any good to chart his pitches."

Catcher Steve Yeager explained, "TJ might throw 12 breaking balls where Hooton will throw 25 to 30. Tommy's best pitch is his sinker, while Burt's is the knuckle curve. They have two different philosophies. I think if the score had been close on the 3-1 pitch to Jackson, Tommy would have walked him."

Before tonight's game, the entire Los Angeles team was to attend today's funeral of former Dodger player and coach Jim Gilliam, who died Sunday.

Davey Lopes, the Dodgers' second baseman and captain who hit two homers in Game 1, said, "The Yankees aren't playing 25 men, they're playing 50. The spirit of Jim Gilliam is with each of us."

Yeager wasn't surprised that Lopes hit two homers in the National League Championship Series against Philadelphia and now two against the Yankees.

"Give him his pitch and he'll hit it a long way," the catcher asserted. "He has just as much power as Joe Morgan," a reference to the Cincinnati second baseman who twice has been the National League's Most Valuable Player.

Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda said the hitting of the Dodgers, who had 15 hits Tuesday night, was reminiscent of the powerhouse of last year when four players hit 30 or more home runs, a major league record.

"It's most encouraging to see them hit with that power," he said of his club, which tonight faces veteran right-hander Catfish Hunter after destroying Ed Figueroa.

Martin stays home

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Billy Martin, the former New York Yankee manager who quit in the midst of controversy this season, says he'll stay home during this year's World Series because he doesn't want to take up the spotlight.

"I'm not going to the Series and I'm not going to go back in New York," Martin told a reporter for the Harrisburg Patriot Monday. "I don't want to do anything to take anything away from the ballclub. I don't want to be there when the press interviews me or somebody says, 'Well, Billy's at the game now and they are talking about Billy.'"

Martin, who was replaced by Bob Lemon as skipper of the defending world champions in midseason, gave the interview during a promotional visit to nearby Penn National Race Track.

"I'm in love with the Yankees. I will be watching them," said the former major league infielder. "I don't want to interfere and that's why I'm not going to be around."

Martin started this season as Yankee manager, but he quit under pressure after a launching a verbal tirade against slugger Reggie Jackson and team owner George Steinbrenner. Lemon was named to replace him, but later the club announced that Martin would assume his old post in 1980 and act as a team consultant in the meantime.

The Yanks, who fell 14 games off the pace during the season, then came back to take the lead and win the American League East in a playoff with the Red Sox. They defeated the Kansas City Royals for the pennant and face the Los Angeles Dodgers in the Series.

More than basics help during Series opener

By HAL BOCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The game is simple, really. Bats, balls, gloves. Runs, hits, errors. This business of baseball is no complex, esoteric sport.

And yet, there is something more to it, something beyond the mathematical summary that reduces the players to cold, raw numbers. The important numbers in Tuesday night's opening game of the 1978 World Series between Los Angeles and the New York Yankees read 11-5 in favor of the Dodgers. Those are the basics. But the story of this game goes much deeper than that.

Baseball players are, you must remember, human beings with the same feelings and emotions as the rest of us. They know fear, they know courage. They know happiness, they know sadness. They are no different than any one of us.

You know the feeling of helplessness when a close friend dies suddenly. There is an emptiness and an anger that you cannot control fate. Why, you wonder, did this happen? The frustration of asking a question that simply cannot be answered just increases the sadness.

It was with that same sadness that the Dodgers approached this World Series. Today, they buried a friend, Coach Jim Gilliam, who died Sunday night after suffering a sudden, cruel stroke less than a month ago.

To a man, the Dodger family has asked that imponderable, unanswerable question. Why, at age 49, did their friend die? There is no logical answer, of course, and the team realizes that. In their helplessness, the Dodgers did the only thing they could. They dedicated this World Series to the memory of Jim Gilliam.

Davey Lopes, a pallbearer at Gilliam's funeral today, perhaps put it best after leading a 15-hit assault in the Series opener with two home runs that drove in five runs for Los Angeles.

"Jimmy's up there watching us now," said Lopes. "The Yankees have to beat 50 men, not 25. Gilliam's spirit is in each player out there. We're trying to win it for him. If you look out there closely, you'll see Jim Gilliam in all of the (defensive) holes."

Believe the man. There was a very special relationship between Lopes, the current Dodger second baseman, and Gilliam, the man who played the position so well for the team a quarter century ago.

"It's hard to express what he meant to us," Lopes said. "He was loved and respected by all of us. It's going to be very difficult not to keep thinking about him. They say time heals all wounds. But it's going to take a long, long time."

Tommy John, the winning pitcher in Game 1, nodded his agreement with Lopes' thoughts on Gilliam.

"He can't be with us physically, but he's with us spiritually, up in heaven," the veteran left-hander said.

The Dodgers, to a man, believe they have a spiritual ally in this World Series. They feel that their longtime coach is watching over them, making sure nothing bad will happen to them in their quest for this world championship. And if they can help him along with some timely hits and a couple of home runs here and there the way they did in the opener, so much the better.

The Dodgers have an edge on other mourners. They can go out on the field and work off their sadness and frustration with baseball's basics ... runs and hits, and yes, even an occasional error. If the bottom line when they are finished is a world championship, it could be the first time a dead man was the deciding factor.

MC women stand third

KILLEEN — The Midland College women's golf team, cutting 24 strokes off their first day team total, moved from fourth to third place after Tuesday's second round of the Temple Junior College Invitational golf tournament at Killen Country Club.

Wendy Goodwin led the MC charge, shooting a 75 to go with her first-day 80, to take a one-stroke lead over TCU's Tony Wiesner in the individual race.

Pete Rose will wait for reply

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose's negotiations with the Cincinnati Reds are off dead center following proposals by each side.

Rose's attorney Reuven Katz said Tuesday he has submitted a "counter proposal."

Rose's contract expired at the end of the regular baseball season, leaving him the opportunity to become a free agent. However, Rose has said he wants to remain in his hometown.

Reds President Dick Wagner said he would give us consideration," Katz said. "He said he would call us back in the next couple of days."

Katz declined to elaborate on his counter-proposal, which was made Monday, but he said it was different than the contract offered by the Reds earlier this month. At that time Wagner said that Rose was being offered "the largest salary in the Cincinnati Reds' history."

Landry not even sure whom he plays next

Talk about playing them one at a time, when someone asked Coach Tom Landry about next week's game, he had to ask, "Who do we play, Philadelphia or St. Louis?" Once informed, however, he came up with the appropriate quote...

"St. Louis played an excellent game the last time we played them and will be improved this time."

That doesn't necessarily mean that Landry is taking the Cardinals lightly. The way things have been going this year, they all look the same, big, mean, ugly and ready.

"Our vision is the Super Bowl," Landry said, noting that the Cowboys haven't reached the level of intensity that took them to the pinnacle last year. "We are hoping eventually, we will attain that level."

In analyzing this year's 4-2 start, Landry pointed out that everybody "has been coming at us tough. We're going to have to scratch and claw if we are to win games like those Monday (the Redskins), but maybe we'll start."

When someone suggested the four-game exhibition schedule was one of the reasons the Cowboys weren't as far along as Landry felt a Super Bowl contender should be, he shook his head. "No, we are no worse off than anyone else."

"It's a violent sport and everybody has been shooting for us. A lot of guys started saying after the Washington game that we've got to start disciplining ourselves...and that's just what it has got to be, we've got to start disciplining OURSELVES."

"Discipline isn't going to come from meetings or dressing room or from the coaches. We've got to do it on the field."

Martin feels when you lose a player like linebacker Leroy Jordan, you miss more than his ability. "It takes three or four guys to assume the leadership role of a Jordan and we haven't had it. Some of us are going to have to take it upon ourselves to supply that leadership."

MARTIN DISCOUNTED the charge of complacency following the Super Bowl title. "Last year we weren't Super Bowl champions and the pressure was not there in every game like it is this year. This year it's a case of realizing where you are and what you have to do."

And it's obvious that what it took last year to win will not do the job this year, which may be why so few teams repeat as Super Bowl champions.

Braxton to rejoin Dolphins in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — For the second time in his career, Jim Braxton will be teamed with one of the National Football League's top runners.

Braxton planned to arrive in Miami today to join the Dolphins — and the American Football Conference's leading rusher, Delvin Williams. Braxton and O.J. Simpson formed the NFL's most potent backfield with the Buffalo Bills in the early 1970s.

But the 29-year-old fullback didn't figure in the future of Chuck Knox's rebuilding Bills, and the Bills traded him to Washington for an undisclosed draft choice. The Redskins in turn shipped him and an undisclosed draft choice to Miami for running back Benny Malone.

Roland Hooks.

"I expected to get phased out. I guess I didn't fit in the plans at Buffalo," said Braxton, who didn't play in Sunday's game with the New York Jets.

"I've always felt he's one of the best ball-carriers in the league," Miami Coach Don Shula said. "We got banged up in the Cincinnati game and needed another running back."

Quarterback Roger Staubach lauds the defense for doing its job, but feels guilty that the Cowboys' offense failed to exploit the opportunities that were there in the Washington game.

Halfback Tony Dorsett isn't fully satisfied with his play yet, although he escaped the New York game without making any of the costly fumbles that have haunted him in recent games.

While the defense hasn't given up a touchdown in the last two games, All-Pro defensive back Cliff Harris complains, "We came around a little bit against the Giants, but we weren't playing like we did last year."

Redskins get Malone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins continue to make player moves even though they haven't been defeated in six games this season and lead the National Conference East by two games.

Acting just prior to the 4 p.m. National Football League trading deadline Tuesday, the Redskins acquired running back Benny Malone, also Miami's special teams captain, from the Dolphins and sent wide receiver Frank Grant to Tampa Bay.

"I'm looking forward to it. I don't know Delvin Williams, I've never met the man, but I'm happy to be back on a team that believes in running the ball," Braxton said in a telephone interview Tuesday night from his Buffalo home.

"I enjoy blocking as much as I do running with or catching the ball. I've been a blocker ever since high school, and I enjoy doing it. It's just something that's going to show up," he said.

Braxton missed all but the first play of the 1976 season because of a knee injury, and played most of last season with a pinched nerve in his neck.

"I feel very healthy. It's going to be good to be on a winning team. I've watched Don Shula coach for eight years, and I'm just hoping I can fit into his system," he said.

Braxton had just 30 carries for 73 yards for the Bills this season as Knox went with young runners Terry Miller, Curtis Brown, Dennis Johnson and

Malavasi hopes for triumph

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings have shown a knack for turning the Los Angeles Rams from worldbeaters to weatherbeaten.

The Vikings ousted the Rams from the National Football League playoffs by a 14-7 score in a mud-soaked game in Los Angeles last December. The Vikings also ended Los Angeles' title dreams in playoff games of 1969, 1974 and 1976 when the Rams left the warmth of Southern California to play in Minnesota's frigid weather.

Coach Ray Malavasi of the Rams said Tuesday: "Our players want to play a good game and have the extra incentive" when they meet the Vikings on Sunday at Bloomington, Minn. And this time they can expect mild autumn weather.

"It's always closer when we play up there," said Malavasi, a Ram assistant coach for five years before taking over at Los Angeles in August when George Allen was fired as coach. Since then the Rams have had a perfect record, two exhibition victories and a 6-0 regular-season mark under Malavasi.

Malavasi didn't say it, but a victory at Minnesota would also lessen the Vikings' chances of qualifying for a playoff opportunity against the Rams in 1978. Minnesota is 3-3 after a 29-28 loss to Seattle last Sunday and already has fallen two games behind National Conference Central Division leader Green Bay, which is 5-1.

DuBose likes NFL pressure with Bucaneers

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy DuBose has known extra pressure throughout his football career.

During high school, he had to follow in the footsteps of an older brother. At the University of Florida, he played for a team that fell disappointingly short of a Southeastern Conference title.

And as the second draft choice of the fledgling Tampa Bay Buccaneers in 1976, he felt pressure as a Florida native expected to make good right away.

Now, however, DuBose is serene. He says the most important goals in his life have nothing to do with football.

"The first thing in my life is how I can grow as a Christian. I want to show my faith and help other people find the Lord. That's one of the most important things the Scripture asks you to do — share your life."

"If I do that, the rest of things will just fall into place," he said.

"I feel real good now. I don't go out and turn flips, but I am pleased with my life. I found that the things that I thought would fill my life, didn't. I realize now that faith was what was missing in my life."

you from getting so wrapped up in your personal goals."

During the offseason, DuBose was dealt a personal blow when the Bucs acquired fullback Don Hardeman from Houston and drafted Johnny Davis from Alabama.

"They obviously were saying that if you considered fullback to be a weak spot. But if you want to play in this league, you have to expect to compete against the best to keep your job."

"The Bucs' fullback said he rediscovered the religion of his youth while working with teenagers at a Tampa park last year.

"I was trying to give the kids advice and teach them to make the most out of their lives, when all of the sudden it dawned on me that I was making some of the same mistakes they were. Then I looked to the Lord, and got into Bible study. I began to have this relaxed feeling and dedicated myself to leading a life that's pleasing to the Lord."

DuBose, who ran for two touchdowns in last week's 30-13 victory over Kansas City, has entrenched himself in the Bucs' lineup this season. Coach John McKay says, "Jimmy's playing very good ball for us."

DuBose also was married last summer and said, "Marriage helps keep end.

How about Davey Lopes, who socked two home runs and drove in five runs in the Dodgers' opening-game triumph?

"All I can say is that he said he (Lopes) was as high as the sky, and now I believe him."

Tuesday night loser Ed Figueroa, who pitched 1 1/3 innings, described the loss as the biggest disappointment of his life. Figueroa now is 0-4 in postseason competition, two playoff losses and two World Series defeats.

"I don't want to make excuses," said Figueroa. "They (the Dodgers) hit the ball pretty good. But to me the mound seemed flat. I couldn't bear down out there."

Figueroa also said he had trouble adjusting to National League umpire Ed Vargo behind the plate. The NL umpires give the pitcher the low strike, the American league umpires customarily allow the high strike.

Ironically, Figueroa is recognized as a low ball pitcher.

The only bright light for the Yankees Tuesday night was Reggie Jackson's 430-foot home run, which gave him six in his last four Series games. It broke a record of five held by the late Yankee great, Lou Gehrig, who hit three in the last three games of the 1928 Series and two in the first game of the 1932 Series.

Harvey Martin, last year's sack leader, who just hasn't been the same since his banishment in the first game with the Giants in New Jersey, showed signs of regaining his hunger with two sacks against the Giants Sunday.

"I needed to get some sacks today and get that feel back. But basically I just wanted to win the game. I am prouder of winning the game than I am of the sacks."

On the overall problem of the Cowboys' 4-2 start, in comparison to last year's 8-0 getaway, Martin observed,

Pack defense shines in defeat

When a team gets bombed 28-0, the natural reaction is to point the finger at the defensive culprits. Of course, that can be dangerous, and Midland High proved it Friday night.

The Bulldogs opened District 5-4A play with a 28-0 loss to defending district champion Odessa Permian, but to even consider that the defense contributed heavily in this loss is pure heresy. The MHS defense was even brutal at times, but when you are on the field for 80 plays, the other team is going to score some.

Permian rolled out 309 yards of total offense, but that was only a 3.8 yard per play average and any team should be able to live with that. The Bulldog defenders made only one big mistake during the game. They did allow a 56-yard TD pass on a third and 2 situation, and that's a mistake no matter how you look at it.

However, Permian's only other long drive on any note was 51 yards for a TD. Another score came on a 23-yard drive after a key interception while the final tally came on a mid-air fumble that covered four yards.

Consider also that Permian was stopped five times in the four down zone by the Midland head busters. Permian failed to score after moving to the 17, 25, 15 and 16 yard lines during five possessions. It's easy to see from this that the Bulldogs never gave up on defense.

Midland also forced Permian to punt four times in their own end of the field. Permian was stopped flat on nine possessions, and that should be enough for any winning effort.

This is certainly not to say that Permian did not play well enough to win the game. But it is to say that the MHS defense is playing well, and there are some individuals that should not go unnoticed despite the 28-0 loss.

Linebacker Rick Ankerholz, a 165-pound junior, played the entire game as if every play had the potential of being a game winner. He was outstanding, and his performance shouldn't go unnoticed. It's easy to give effort when a victory is on the line, but the true test of a great athlete is to give his all when the chips are down and Ankerholz did.

Defensive end Link Grimes, and middle guard Todd Liberty should also be praised for the way they stuck it out. Both played well. In fact, there were few sore spots to mention as far as the defense was concerned. And if good can be drawn from a bad situation, then these deserve some credit instead of criticism. The Midland offense, on the other hand, will have to take its lumps from the pointed finger. If they could have controlled the ball, they could have won the game in all probability. But they kept the defense on the field with their three downs and a punt attack.

It is true that the MHS offense is a young, inexperienced group. They have been able to score only five times in four games. But they are going to have to carry more of the load. The Bulldogs will see the victory column more times this year if the offense can generate some kind of attack.

Against Permian, the Bulldogs produced only 24 net yards in the first half against a good Panther defense, and had no first downs. They didn't make a first down until mid-way into the third period when they got two in a row with a 14-yard run by Jeff Robnett and a 19-yard run by Billy Applin.

The 19 yarder was the longest gainer of the night—for the Bulldogs, but Applin made only 27 yards rushing in nine carries. Robnett had 65 yards rushing to lead the attack, but when all the minuses were added four other runners, the Pack had only 50 yards rushing during the entire night. That kept the defense in trouble.

The Bulldogs ran only 24 plays in the first half. Five of them were punts and another was a fumble. That left only 18 plays in which to score, and they couldn't do it, even though the defense gave them the ball at the Permian 29-yard line to start their first series. The Bulldogs got nine yards before being shoved back for a three-yard loss to end the drive and then they missed a long field goal attempt.

The Bulldogs are not that bad of a team, and I believe they can win. There is no lack of effort from this group, but the offense should take a lesson from the defense and produce a good performance. And make Big Spring the first to pay the price from it.

Landry feels Eastern winner could lose four games yet

DALLAS (AP) — According to Tom Landry's personal computer, the eventual National Conference Eastern Division champion should lose at least four games.

Since prognostication is far from an exact science, the Dallas Cowboy football coach hastily adds: "My guess is about as good as yours."

Well, not exactly, because Landry comes close almost every year to picking the won-loss record of the division king.

"I'm still not sure what effect there will be from the 16-game season," says Landry. "The longer season will take its toll. A 10-4 season in the past would almost guarantee the championship and the playoffs. I believe a 12-4 season would put you at the top of our division."

Of course, Washington leads the Cowboys by two games with a perfect 6-0 ledger.

Landry says the Cowboys must pick up the pace immediately.

"We'll need an 8-2 record. That means we have to streak the last 10 games," Landry says.

Landry's teams usually start fast, slump, then come on strong the last half of the season.

"You could probably lose six games and still get a wild card but wild card teams usually come up short," says Landry.

"We are playing against the level of performance Washington has set for us. We have to win every week or we'll be watching them in the playoffs."

The Cowboys added fullback Larry Brinson to the squad Tuesday to make up for the loss of running back Doug Dennison. Preston Pearson will move from fullback to halfback to back up Tony Dorsett. Brinson will back up Robert Newhouse.

Brinson was a victim of the final cut and was at Florida helping Coach Doug Dickey's staff and resuming his studies.

"Larry is in good shape," says Landry. "We worked him out Monday and he looked good. He's quick and can carry the ball well. Larry suffered a groin injury in camp, and that's probably the main reason he had to release him. It went right down to the wire."

Dennison was injured on Dallas' specialty teams in a 24-3 victory over the New York Giants.

"We'll miss Doug because he was a great team man," says Landry.

Dennison suffered a torn knee capsule and will be lost at least a month.

Asked if he thinks the offensive line is the weakest part of his team, Landry says, "It's the least experienced part of our team. But it will pick up with Rayfield Wright performing."

Wright, who has been bothered with a leg injury, started at right tackle last week for the first time this year. He also will start against the Cardinals.

Martina Navratilova suffers finger injury

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Queen, the Kid and the Vet all won their matches Tuesday night at the $100,000 U.S. Women's Indoor Tennis Championships.

But the heaviest hitter of them all, Martina Navratilova, was forced to withdraw because of a finger injury, leaving the field for the 70th annual event wide open.

"There's 31 tough players in this tournament," said the Queen — Chris Evert, who downed Trish Bostrom 6-0, 6-1 in her first-round match. "I can't take anything for granted with players like Virginia (Wade) and Tracy (Austin) here."

Evert, seeded second behind Navratilova, became the favorite of the tournament that she has never won, but admitted that she'd prefer Navratilova be included in the 32-player field.

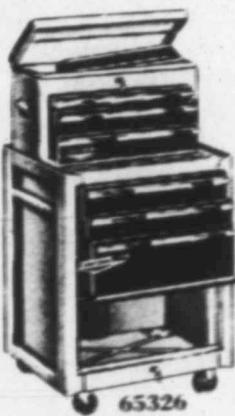

"I'm disappointed," Evert said.

"Martina and I are so close right now that the more I play her the better it is for me. If I ever want to regain the No. 1 ranking I need a couple more wins over her."

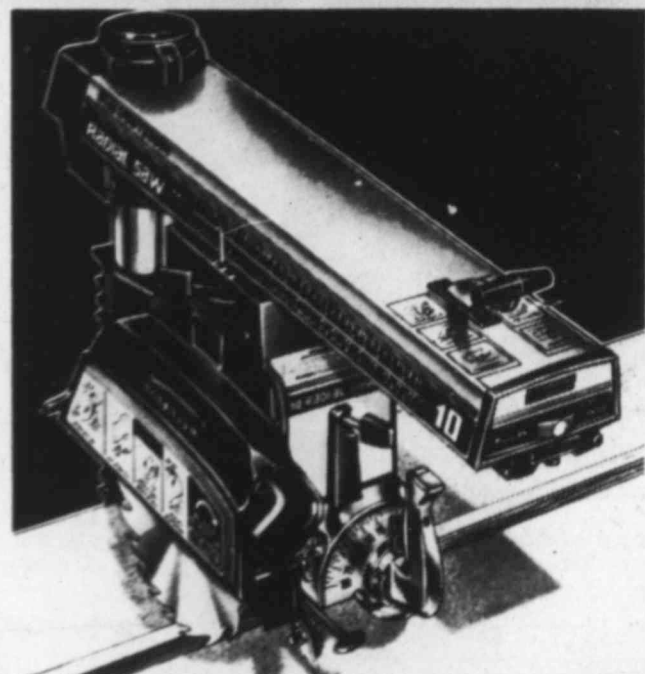

Navratilova, who suffered a badly bruised little finger on her left hand last Sunday at the Phoenix Open, is rated No. 1 by the Women's Tennis Association computer and has earned a whopping $330,900 so far this year.

Detective thriller makes author rich

By JOHN FARINA
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — William Diehl once toyed with the idea of writing The Great American Novel but gave it up. Instead, the Atlanta author has written "Sharkey's Machine," a blood-guts-and-sex detective thriller. And now, Diehl estimates, he's $1.8 million richer than he was a few months ago. His publisher, Delacorte Press, envisions immense commercial profitability in Diehl's rambunctious novel, which has already earned him $250,000 in movie rights. In fact, Delacorte editors liked what they read in "Sharkey's Machine" so much that they handed Diehl a contract for two more books in the same hurly-burly vein. "Sharkey's Machine" (374 pages; $8.95) was Diehl's first real attempt at a big novel, after stints as a newspaperman and magazine editor in Atlanta, and 15 years of freelance writing, which paid the bills, for a while. Diehl, his wife and their five children were in such straits that their home was about to be auctioned away to placate creditors. Then came the wind-fall. "And just in time," the 53-year-old Diehl said in an interview. "The first thing I did when Delacorte turned over the first check ($156,000) was pay off all my debts. The second was to soar to the clouds, and I'm still there." Diehl says his contract will earn him $965,000 against royalties, plus additional thousands of dollars from foreign countries for publishing privileges. British rights have already added $120,000 to his bank account. Why so much loot for a novel about a fictional cop on the Atlanta police force who wades through murder, destruction, mayhem, kinky sex, dope and Byzantine-like intrigue to solve a major international crime? Because of all that, of course, and because the publisher found Diehl's book an eminently readable and suspense-jammed feast. It's a potpourri of plotting people, festooned with a call girl whose clients are set up as extortion victims, an international entrepreneur, a senator and his secret backer, mobsters, cops and hired killers stepping out of the shadows. Through it all Sharkey has a nearly total disregard for the police establishment of which he is a part — an individualist who acts to mold his part of the world according to his own philosophical bent.

There are scenes in Italy during World War II, and brothel scenes in exotic Hong Kong later. The sex chapters are strategically placed, and the devotion to flying bullets and flowing blood is complete. In the style of Ernest Hemingway, Diehl's sentences are as punchy as the reverberating sounds of a jackhammer, which in no small measure sets up the novel's fast pace. The book ends in a chase of chases with Sharkey on top, though blood-smearing and suffering remorselessly inflicted pain.

Disaster may be perfectly normal

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Some think of tournament players as unsober, but they are actually full of compassion, as we can see from a hand played in the North American Team Championships in Toronto a few weeks ago.

Opening lead — ♦ K

Montreal expert Joe Silver bid two hearts, using the "weak two-bid" favored by many experts to show a good six-card suit with less than normal bidding strength. West took the top diamonds and the ace of clubs and then led a diamond for East to ruff. East cashed the ace of spades and the king of clubs and led a club for South to ruff. South could get only four trump tricks. 1100 points down the drain!

PIECE OF MIND
If your partner went down 1100 points at his opening bid in rubber bridge you'd give him a piece of your mind. But North in this case kept a compassionate, if unhappy, silence. The hand was due to be played at another table, and North hoped that the other South player would have the same trouble.

And so he did. Same opening bid, same double, same pass by East, and the same 1100 points. A disaster always seems to be your partner's fault at rubber bridge. It's easier to see that the disaster is normal in a tournament, when the same hand is played again with the same result.

DAILY QUESTION
Partner opens with 1 NT (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes. You hold: S K 7 H K Q J E 5 3 D J 6 5 C 10 2. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four hearts. You know that you want to be in this game contract and no other. Don't complicate the auction when you can make it simple.

Elizabeth Taylor Warner: 'It's nobody's concern'

By JURATE KAZICKAS

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Her famous violet eyes were hidden behind very dark glasses, but clearly Elizabeth Taylor Warner was annoyed.

Here she was, the wife of the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate from conservative Virginia, with the election little more than a month away, being asked whether the voters might be put off by her seven marriages. "It's nobody's concern. I think it's fairly obvious why I was married. As strange as it may sound, I am a very moral woman. I was taught by my parents that if you fall in love, if you want to have a love affair, you get married. I guess I'm very old-fashioned," said Elizabeth Taylor Hilton Wilding Todd Fisher Burton Warner.

Question like that aren't the only annoyance these days. So are questions like: Does Elizabeth Taylor mind trading Hollywood limousines for campaign buses? Does she miss her dressing room when she stops at filling stations for a quick change? Does she long for champagne and caviar instead of rubber chicken? "If you're doing something you believe in, you don't complain about it. I'm enjoying it," Mrs. Warner said with exasperation during an hour-long interview at John Warner campaign headquarters. Her eyes were shaded because they were irritated by a long, black errant eyelash. Besides, she told a photographer, she didn't have her eye makeup on. "Do I miss the glamorous life of a movie star? No way. Not remotely. Anyone who thinks making a movie is a picnic is out of their minds," she said. Pounding the political trail can't be much of a picnic either. Last year too many enthusiastic handshakers eventually popped a blood vessel in her hand.

But she insists: "Campaigning is fascinating. You meet so many people and can get to know them on a one-to-one basis. Of course there are similarities between show business and politics. In both you're exposed to the public and don't have much private life. But the major difference is that show biz is fiction, fantasy. You're speaking someone else's words. Politics is real. You are expressing your own ideas on real life issues."

Nonetheless, she tries to avoid issues while campaigning. "I am not John's surrogate. He can speak for himself," she said. "It's John's vote that is going to count in the Senate. My opinion of issues is of very little importance. That's why I stay out of them as much as I can."

Last year, when former Secretary of the Navy John Warner was "testing the waters" for a political career, Mrs. Warner, contrary to her husband, was a supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment. Now, she said, "I would never publicly go against him." "There are a lot of women that don't want equal rights. I didn't know that last year," said Mrs. Warner. "I don't think the amendment is specific enough. I think it should be rephrased."

"I feel that I am equal. But I have been much more fortunate than a lot of women. I have not had to fight for my status as a woman. I worked for it. Women that want equal rights should do the same thing." She twisted her fingers, bare except for the ruby-red, diamond-white and sapphire-blue wedding ring John Warner slipped on her finger when they were married two years ago at sunset on his farm, Atoka, Mrs. Warner calls it "the most beautiful place I've ever seen in my life." The gentleman farmer's wife was her latest role until Republican candidate Richard Obenshain's death in a plane crash last August. Warner was chosen to replace him. Elizabeth Taylor has been a millionaire's wife, a showman's wife, a singer's wife, an actor's wife. Now, some say, she longs for a new life role whose stage will be the White House.

"No way would I like to see John as president of the United States. No way. No way," Mrs. Warner insisted. "John, since he was a little boy, has wanted to be senator from Virginia, and that's it. I am not politically ambitious. We care about people and if there's anything we can do to help people, that's why we are in politics."

Producer seeking intimacy in theater

By JOHN J. MULLINS

BOSTON (AP) — If producer-playwright Frederic M. Zollo had his way, plays, including musicals, would be staged in theaters with 100 to 1,200 seats. He would stage musicals in theaters with up to 1,200 seats; plays with casts of 10 in theaters with 500 to 600 seats, and plays with one to three actors in theaters seating 100 to 300. "Then you'd have the intimacy," Zollo said in an interview. "I think the future is not in (large theaters) where you pay $25 a ticket." Zollo likes theaters such as the Wilbur and the 525-seat Charles Playhouse, where he coproduced the David Mamet plays, "Sexual Perversity in Chicago" and "The Duck Variations."

He produced "Vanities" and "Give 'Em Hell, Harry" at the Charles earlier. "I'm tired of waiting for New York to produce new theater," the Boston native and Boston University graduate said. "There should be a resident company in Boston, a resident company of playwrights, too." He suggested that the Charles Playhouse should be its home. "Boston needs a resident company that changes once a year — a resident director, who could choose the company. He and the artistic director would choose the plays," Zollo said.

"I would love to see an ever-changing resident company, with a resident playwright. You wouldn't believe how many major actors want to come to the Charles Playhouse," he said. "I know playwrights who would be interested in this."

At 28, Zollo has been a journalist and has written films and plays. He helped his late father, producer Carmen Zollo, in his film and play production work, got a master's degree from the London School of Economics and lectured in American History at Trinity College in Dublin. "I always have loved films more than theater, actually. It's a much more exciting art," Zollo said, but about the theater, he says, "The most exciting thing is to do new plays. There's nothing like it. "We need first-class new theater, and we don't get enough. Broadway producers are desperate for new works. When I tell them I have a new play, they want to see it."
